

Hearing

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners this morning set a public hearing for Sept. 7 at 6 p.m. to receive public input on a proposed flood plain management ordinance and a revised subdivision ordinance.

The proposed flood plain ordinance would regulate building in the 100-year flood plain in Pitt County and is required for loans and flood insurance, while the subdivision ordinance contains revisions of the county's present subdivision regulations.

In other action today, commissioners approved the final plat for an Edwards Acres Subdivision addition.

The board also decided to give further study before adopting a disaster relief and assistance plan. The plan for natural and man-made disasters includes such things as mutual agreements between the county and municipalities, the procedure for establishing shelters, and other steps needed in case of a disaster.

New Probe Of Donovan Is Revealed

By MERRILL HARTSON
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Labor Secretary Raymond J. Donovan, dogged for the past 18 months by allegations that he is linked to mobsters, is again under investigation by a special prosecutor, a Reagan administration source says.

Leon Silverman, a New York attorney who five weeks ago concluded an investigation of allegations against Donovan, is looking into new assertions that the labor secretary had been involved with organized crime figures, the source said Sunday night.

Donovan was not immediately available for comment, and a spokesman said the Cabinet officer would probably have nothing to say on the subject. Repeated attempts to contact Silverman by telephone were unsuccessful.

In Washington, Donovan spokesman Vernon R. Louviere was asked today why Silverman still is involved in the probe. He responded:

"He hasn't filed his final report with the court of appeals. To that extent it still is open. He's still the special prosecutor of record."

At the FBI, spokesman Lane Bonner said, "We are looking into additional allegations."

Bonner also noted that Silverman's job as special prosecutor "was never formally abolished."

The administration source, who spoke on conditions he not be identified, said Silverman was looking into fresh allegations that Donovan, as executive vice president of Schiavone Construction Co. of Secaucus, N.J., had ties to organized crime figures in the late 1960s and early 1970s.

There was no indication of who the source of the new accusations might be, but in the earlier investigation, FBI informants with criminal reords testified that the labor secretary had dealings with underworld crime figures, Donovan said the informants lied.

Silverman apparently never closed the books on the matter even though he concluded on June 28 that there was "insufficient credible evidence" to warrant prosecution on allegations the labor secretary had connections with mobsters, witnessed payoffs to union officials to buy labor peace, and participated in New Jersey highway construction bid-rigging schemes.

When Silverman released the 1,000-page report on the findings of his investigation and the deliberations of a 23-member federal grand jury in Brooklyn, N.Y., he said there were "a disturbing number of allegations from more than one source."

The special prosecutor refused to characterize the findings as an exoneration of Donovan. Instead, he said his investigation failed to provide sufficient evidence to warrant an indictment of the labor secretary.

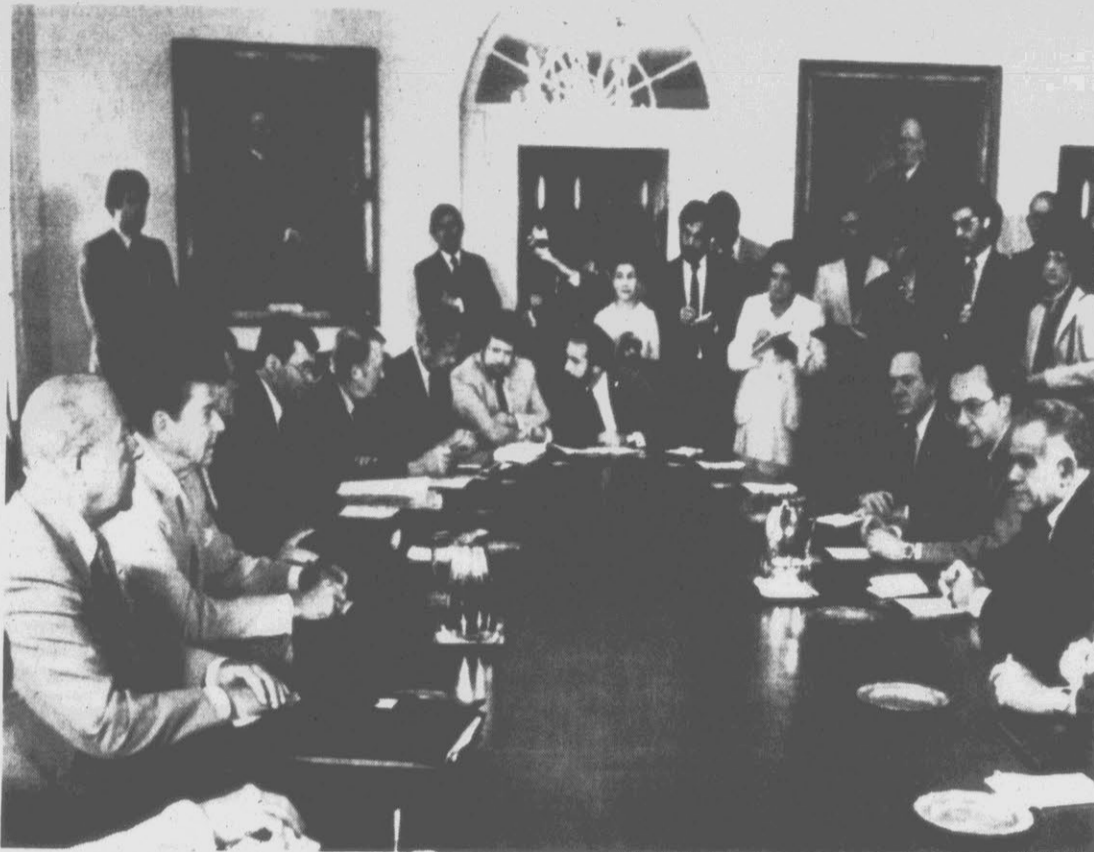

But four hours after the report was made public, Donovan told cheering Labor Department employees he had been cleared and said the special prosecutor's report proved his contention.

When asked about the allegations against Donovan at a June 30 news conference, President Reagan replied: "That case is closed."

Since then, the Senate Labor Committee has decided to conduct its own investigation into the FBI's handling of its checks into Donovan's background. Committee Chairman Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, said he hoped the panel's investigation would be completed by the end of August with a written report following soon afterward.

Donovan, 51, was confirmed on Feb. 3, 1981.

Small Arms, Mortar Fire Exchanged Shaky 'Cease-Fire' In Lebanon

Israeli forces and Palestinian guerrillas traded small arms and mortar fire in Beirut today, threatening to shatter the cease-fire that brought an end to Sunday's devastating Israeli assault on the Lebanese capital.

Israel's military command said the Palestine Liberation Organization was the first to violate the cease-fire, shooting at Israeli troops with small arms near Beirut's airport. A spokesman said that Israeli forces held their fire for several hours before responding with rifles and mortars.

The PLO charged that Israeli tanks and cannon fired shells into a battered refugee camp near the airport. Israel denied it was using artillery.

In Washington, President Reagan was to meet with Israeli foreign minister Yitzhak Shamir. Reagan said he intended to make clear his belief that it is "absolutely imperative that this cease-fire at this stage of the negotiations must not be violated by anyone."

Reagan's envoy in Lebanon, Philip C. Habib, persuaded the Israelis and the Palestinians to agree to a cease-fire at day's end Sunday. It was the ninth cease-fire since Israel invaded Lebanon on June 6.

But before the cease-fire was in place, Israeli tanks pushed into PLO territory in west Beirut for the first time since the siege of the city began. They moved north almost two miles, capturing the terminal area at the airport.

PLO spokesman Bassam Abu Sharif said the Israelis rained more than 150,000 shells on west Beirut; there was no way to confirm that figure, which would mean the Israelis fired 180 shells per minute. Israeli jets made 210 bomb runs on the city, according to Lebanese police.

Israeli officials said Sunday's attack was not the start of the long-threatened invasion to wipe out the PLO's guerrillas in their last Lebanese stronghold.

Israel said Palestinian violations of the earlier truce prompted the massive air, land and sea bombardment that began before dawn. It was the most devastating Israeli onslaught since the forces of the Jewish state rolled to the gates of the Lebanese capital in June.

Beirut's Moslem section was wreathed in smoke from raging fires kindled by the bombardment. There was little firemen could do to quench the flames since Israel cut off electricity to west Beirut a week ago, drastically reducing water pressure.

Lebanese police reported 200 dead and 400 wounded. "We expect the death toll to climb because rescue teams had to wait for first light to begin searching for victims we believe are still buried in the rubble," a police spokesman said.

The Voice of Lebanon, the Lebanese Christian radio station, said 14 civilians were killed and 40 wounded when PLO forces fired rockets, missiles, mortars and artillery into Christian-held east Beirut and the Christian port city of Jounieh, 12 1/2 miles north of the capital.

Syria said two of its soldiers in west Beirut were killed and 14 were wounded in the Israeli shelling. Israel reported three of its soldiers killed when their armored personnel carrier took a direct artillery hit in the Beirut area. The Israelis also reported nine soldiers wounded.

There was no word on guerrilla losses and no independent confirmation of any casualty claims.

Sunday's bombardment left vast areas of west Beirut in ruins. The once plush neighborhood of Bir Hassan had scarcely a building undamaged. The Iranian, Iraqi, Algerian and Kuwaiti embassies were badly damaged. An unconfirmed report by the official Soviet news agency Tass said the buildings of 23 foreign representatives were destroyed or seriously damaged, including the Soviet Embassy and its commercial and cultural centers.

Israeli Defense Minister Ariel Sharon said the operation was 80 percent successful.

Israel has grown increasingly impatient with the pace of U.S. negotiations to arrange a peaceful evacuation of the estimated 8,000 Palestinian guerrillas in Lebanon.

In Tel Aviv this morning, Israeli officials said they were not happy with Sunday's U.N. Security Council resolution authorizing Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar to send military observers to Beirut to monitor compliance with the cease-fire.

The officials, who asked not to be identified, said Prime Minister Menachem Begin had not decided whether to allow the U.N. representatives into Israeli-occupied areas.

They said Israel feared that negotiations over deployment of the observers would divert attention from "the focal question: is the PLO willing to leave Beirut and Lebanon?"

Begin met this morning with American diplomat Morris Draper, who has been working on the mediation effort with Habib. Israel radio reported that Draper had not been able to convey to Begin an unequivocal commitment from the PLO to leave Lebanon.

Habib, who met today with Lebanese President Elias Sarkis, has been working on a plan to evacuate the PLO forces to Syria, Iraq, Egypt and Jordan, thereby avoiding an ultimate Israeli assault on west Beirut to wipe out the guerrillas.

But the negotiations have become entangled in disputes over such issues as whether Israel would pull its forces back from Beirut before or after the PLO withdrawals.

In Beirut this morning, former Lebanese Prime Minister Saeb Salam, who serves as an intermediary between Habib and the PLO, said the PLO was willing to leave Beirut, but the Israelis "do not want the Palestinians out. They want to kill them here — and us with them."

Salam said the introduction of U.N. observers could help solve the problem of the timing of the disengagement and the insertion of an international force to keep order as the PLO evacuates the city.

Israeli Foreign Minister And President Reagan Meet Today

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —

President Reagan, who earlier said "the bloodshed must stop" in west Beirut, met today with Israeli Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir amid signs the United States is becoming impatient with Israeli military policies in Lebanon.

The president told reporters Sunday it was "absolutely imperative" that the new, U.S.-arranged cease-fire reached earlier in the day "not be violated by anyone."

The cease-fire was threatened today, however, as Israelis and Palestinians traded small arms and mortar fire.

Reagan spoke with reporters Sunday hours after Israel overran Palestinian positions at Beirut's airport in the most devastating attack since Israeli troops sealed off the city in June. That attack ended with the latest cease-fire.

Throughout the crisis, Reagan has not criticized Israel directly. But his overall tone when he spoke with reporters Sunday suggested uneasiness with Israeli policies.

Asked what he would tell Shamir at today's meeting, Reagan said, "I'll be firm ... this must be resolved and the bloodshed must stop."

He declined to say whether this represented a get-tough policy toward Israel but added, "You can say that we're going to have a serious discussion and I think they'll understand exactly how we feel about this."

Shortly before Reagan spoke, Shamir arrived at nearby Dulles Airport and told reporters that the United States and Israel are pursuing parallel objectives in Lebanon.

Both favor the emergence of a strong central government and the removal of all foreign forces from the country, he said.

But, in Jerusalem Sunday, a senior Israeli official, who asked not to be identified, said the United States and Israel have differing perceptions on prospects for an early end to the crisis.

He said the United States had told Israel the negotiations had reached a "decisive stage" with the Palestinian guerrillas showing signs of willingness to discuss a timetable for their departure.

However, Israel believes the Palestinians are "deceiving" the United States and are playing for time in hopes that Israel will ease its blockade of west Beirut, the official said.

In his remarks at the White House, Reagan said he did not believe Israeli forces would leave until Palestinian and Syrian units depart.

With the crisis almost two months old, Reagan made it clear he is unhappy with the continuing cycle of violence in which eight cease-fires have been agreed to only to be broken.

Asked whether he had lost his patience, the president said, "I lost patience a long time ago." At the same time, he said "there has been progress made" in ending the stalemate.

Shamir said the crisis was now at a "turning point," and he predicted that "some positive results" will be achieved in the near future. He did not elaborate.

After his meeting with Reagan, Shamir was to have lunch with Secretary of State George Shultz and a meeting with Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger.

Osama El Baz, counselor to Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak, also was in Washington Sunday, and warned that a forced surrender of PLO leaders in Beirut would "be the catalyst for radicalizing the Arab movement in other countries and the U.S. will be viewed as an accomplice."

"The question is not the persuade (the PLO) to leave, the question is to persuade them that a political solution is possible," El Baz said on CBS' "Face the Nation."

Although the United States and Israel agree on long-term objectives in Lebanon, there are disagreements over tactics and over a broad range of other issues.

These include Israel's use of cluster bombs in Lebanon and its policy of going ahead with the construction of new settlements in the West Bank.

In addition, once the west Beirut crisis is ended and PLO units are disbursed elsewhere, the United States will be looking to Israel for new signs of flexibility in its attitude toward the Palestinian autonomy talks.

Some American officials believe that with the easing of the perceived PLO threat, Israel can afford to be more generous in its terms for establishing a system of Palestinian self-rule in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip.

Brezhnev Sends Private Note

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev has sent a personal message to President Reagan urging him to use his influence to stop Israel's "annihilation of people in Beirut," the official news agency Tass reported today.

The message was sent "in connection with the drastic aggravation of the situation in Lebanon" — an apparent reference to stepped-up fighting Sunday.

The Soviet leader called on Reagan "to use most urgently the possibilities at his disposal to stop the continuing annihilation of people in Beirut," Tass said.

The situation was "so serious and critical" that the adoption of "prompt measures" were necessary.

August Started In Pitt With 4-Inch Rainfall

August got off to a sopping start as weekend storms dumped over four inches of rain on Pitt County, including a whopping 2.67 inches Sunday.

According to Greenville Utilities' Water Plant, 4.73 inches of precipitation has fallen on the area since Thursday — 1.25 inches on Friday, .81 inch Saturday and 2.67 inches on Aug. 1.

Sunday's rain came on the heels of a Friday storm unleashing vicious lightning that disrupted phone service in Greenville for two hours.

According to R.I. Flye, district manager of Carolina Telephone and Telegraph, lightning struck the computer in the C.T.&T. building on Fifth Street Friday, interrupting all toll service for the city and local service for the 752-757-758 exchanges from 7:20-9:15 p.m.

"We had no toll service for that period of time," he said, "and had local calling problems in the 752, 757 and 758 exchanges. 355 and 756 could call each other, but couldn't call other exchanges or long distance."

Flye noted that Sunday's large rain caused "normal wet weather type troubles" this morning but said the company hoped to have the difficulties cleared by this afternoon.

No major power outages were reported from the storms, but Assistant Director of Greenville Utilities Malcolm Green said the phone outage Friday concerned utility officials.

"We knew since our number is on the 752 exchange that persons whose lights were out couldn't call us," he said. "Finally, the phone company arranged for the TV station to run a banner at the bottom of the screen showing my home number as the one to call for emergencies, and I relayed problems to the workers by walkie-talkie."

Green said electrical troubles were minimal despite the communication outage.

The weekend rain will bog farmers down even further, say local agricultural officials.

"The wet weather is really keeping folks out of the field and hindering tobacco harvesting," said Sam Uzzell, Pitt extension agent. "It's also hurting some people taking tobacco to market who are having to transport their crop through these downpours we've been having."

"The quality of the tobacco after it gets to the warehouse is not as good as when it leaves the farm if it gets drenched on the way," noted the farm agent.

In addition, Uzzell noted that heavy rains have "set the stage for a whole lot of peanut disease in the county."

Dear Abby

Family's Cruelty Is Crime In Need of Punishment

By Abigail Van Buren

1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I've been reading your column for years, and never have I been so furious with you as I am now!

"His Uncle" wrote to say that at a family reunion his 6-year-old nephew was caught playing "doctor" with a 5-year-old girl cousin, so the boy's mother painted his genitals with Mercurchrome and made him sit naked in front of his relatives while they made fun of him!

Abby, if this is what that boy was made to suffer in public, God only knows what kind of abuse that helpless child is subjected to at home! The uncle felt "guilty" allowing the boy to be put on public display and ridiculed, and asked, "Is there anything I can do beyond some sincere praying?"

I fully expected you to chew that uncle out but good, telling him in no uncertain terms that those who participated in the jeering were guilty of child abuse! Instead, you nonchalantly said, "All kids play doctor." Just be sure your nephew knows he committed no serious crime, and should not repeat the deed." Then all you had to say about the boy's mother was that she was both "cruel and unfeeling."

I hope you get thousands of letters protesting your inadequate answer.

LONGTIME READER

DEAR READER: The number of letters I received from outraged readers set a new record. You are right; my answer was inadequate. Incorporating suggestions from readers, how is this for a second try:

DEAR UNCLE: The boy's mother should be reported to your local child-protective agency. She's obviously ignorant, sadistic and unfit to raise a child. Furthermore, if not one person present (including you) realized that a child should not be punished and ridiculed for doing what every child does naturally (exploring out of curiosity), you all need counseling in sex education and parenting.

But why was the boy alone "punished"? The girl was also a party to the incident. (She may have even instigated it.) By assuming that the boy took advantage of her, you perpetuate the "bad boy — good girl" stereotype.

Children depend on adults to protect them, and adults who would stand by and permit a child to be abused are as guilty as the abuser!

DEAR ABBY: I have been divorced for eight years. When I was married I lived in another state. After the divorce I moved back to New York, which is 3,000 miles away from my ex-husband.

In the eight years since my divorce, my ex-husband has never once visited our child. He doesn't even call to talk to the boy. My son has no idea what his father looks like!

In the beginning I asked him many times to come and see his son, but he refused with different excuses. He has visitation rights, but never uses them.

My question: Should I just take my son to see his father? What effect do you think it would have on the boy?

BETWIXT AND BETWEEN

DEAR B. AND B.: Do not just "take" your son to see his father, knowing that he has chosen to completely ignore the boy. To force a rejected child on his father could be a devastating experience for the boy, and ruin any chance for a future relationship.

For the sake of both your son and his father, suggest that your "ex" get professional help in order to at least face seeing the child he fathered. If he flatly refuses, write him off.

DEAR ABBY: If someone mispronounces a word, and in the course of the conversation the word must be used by both parties, is it rude to pronounce that word correctly?

GOOD MANNERS INTENDED

DEAR GOOD: Rude? Not in my book. To repeat the mispronunciation in an effort to be "polite" would be more phony than helpful.

Every teenager should know the truth about drugs, sex and how to be happy. For Abby's excellent booklet, send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents) envelope to: Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

Man Is Killed Under Tractor

GRIMESLAND — A 22-year-old Route 3, Greenville man, intending to pull a stranger's car out of a roadside ditch, was killed when the farm tractor he was driving overturned and crushed him beneath it early Sunday morning.

Highway Patrolman D.R. Taylor said Gregory Max Vainright died from a crushed chest.

The fatal mishap occurred about 3:30 a.m. on rural unpaved road 1768 south of Grimesland in the Ham's Cross Roads community.

Trooper Taylor, who said the fatal mishap occurred about two-tenths of a mile from Vainright's home, said the tractor overturned as Vainright attempted to turn around in the roadway.

Damage to the tractor was estimated at $100.

A.—There is nothing you can do with any degree of safety.

A bid of two spades would be a virtual game force and could easily get your side too high. You don't have enough to venture a penalty double, and you need more than A-x in hearts to support partner's suit. Pass and hope that partner can reopen the bidding.

What action do you take?

A.—We have great respect for partner's low-level penalty doubles, especially when the opponents won't make game even if they make their doubled contract. However, to every rule there are exceptions, and this is one of those. You almost surely have game, perhaps even slam, in one of the majors.

We would jump to three hearts. This should convey to partner that you don't think that any penalty you may extract from the opponents could be worth your prospective gain from ending the rubber.

Bid four spades. Partner won't expect more than a doubleton from you, but your three aces should be a welcome sight to him. What do you bid now?

A.—There is a popular belief that, as a passed hand, you have to jump at your first turn to show that you have near opening bid values. That is a fallacy — you should jump only when you know where your side is going. Here, despite a hand which you might have opened, you should do no more than respond one spade.

Partner might have a shaded opening bid with little support for spades, and you don't want to put him under pressure.

A.—Since partner might have been forced to rebid spades with only a five-card suit, you can't raise with your doubleton. You don't have a heart stopper, so no trump is out, and you surely don't want to rebid your ratty five-card diamond suit. The solution is to make a temporizing bid of three clubs. That will allow partner to place the contract in no trump if he has hearts stopped. If he rebids his spades again, you have enough to raise to game.

Teachers are saddled with low pay, overprotective parents, unruly students and after-hours extracurricular school activities.

Now they have to face a study which concludes that the profession attracts more than its share of the worst college students. The study also says the least-qualified teachers continue teaching the longest.

According to the study, the best leave the profession for the very things that teachers complain about: low pay, low prestige and oversupervision.

The study conducted for the National Institute of Education showed that teaching gets far more than its share of the lowest 40 percent of college graduates, about its share of the middle 20 percent and much less of its share of the upper group.

Much of the problem stems from the pay classroom teachers receive. They are even somewhat locked in insofar as moving into better paying administrative positions after a few years in the classroom.

If society wants better teachers it will have to afford them more status. That means better pay, more freedom in pursuing their profession. If we don't do these things, there isn't much hope for great improvement in education, and this is in an era when far better methods of teaching and learning are essential to the progress of our society.

New Industry Is A Boost

It is exciting when a new industry announces that it will locate in a community.

Good industries provide jobs for the area and when a new one comes it is an indication of growth and vitality.

The positive aspects are compounded when an industry locates during recession times. Thus it is particularly pleasing that Simpson Industries, Inc. of Litchfield, Mich will be locating a manufacturing plant here. The plant will be placed in the Hudson shell building north of the city. The plant will be manufacturing components for the Consolidated Diesel plant now being built in Edgecombe County.

The location of the plant here fits in well with planning for diversified industries. Simpson Industries is a welcome addition to our industrial community.

Don't Press Your Luck

The trouble with most people is that they never seem to leave well enough alone. The other day I said to H. Boyer Royal.

"Have a nice day."

"Are you asking me a question?" he wanted to know.

"No, I'm telling you."

"What business of yours is it what kind of day I have?"

"It really isn't of any of my business. As a matter of fact, I really don't care what your day is like. I was trying to say goodbye to you in friendly fashion."

"Then why didn't you just say, 'Time is like a fashionable host, that slightly shakes his parting guest by the hand, and with his arms outstretched as he would fly, grasps in the corner; welcome ever smiles, and parking place in town. When you tell someone to have a nice day, you're not responsible for how it turns out."

"Has it ever occurred to you," Royal said, "that when you tell someone to have a nice day you might be putting a curse on him?"

"I don't believe it has. Would you care to explain yourself?"

"Well, until you said it to me I wasn't giving any thought to what kind of day I was going to have. I was going to take it as it came. But now that you've planted the idea in my head, I'm going to keep thinking about it. When I return to my office I'll worry that Rosalie Caplan hasn't returned my call. I'll stew that Ann Bodner in personnel is working on a new 'reduction in force' for the company. I'll wonder how much traffic I'll have to fight to get home. And when I get to the front door I'll be nervous about what mood my wife is in. I know the odds of having a nice day are stacked against me, but until you wished me one, I was able to ignore it. People should not say to anyone 'Have a nice day,' when they don't know what that person is up against. It's like putting the evil eye on them."

"I believe you're reading too much into my goodbye," I told him. "When someone says, 'Have a nice day,' he is only wishing you good luck."

"Then why doesn't he say, 'May the road rise up to meet you and may the wind be

RALEIGH — What do you do with a 14-year-old kid who won't listen to his parents, go to school or stop running off whenever he pleases? If you're a judge in North Carolina juvenile court, there's not much you can do. And the kids know it.

Status offenders — youngsters who cause a lot of trouble but don't actually break any laws — are driving the state's juvenile court judges to distraction. Since 1979 juvenile court judges have been barred from putting status offenders in training schools. The General Assembly felt it did these children more harm than good to lock them away with young criminals. Now judges say they have no leverage in dealing with status offenders.

The Juvenile Law Study Commission has spent the past year looking for ways to help the state better deal with these youngsters. But sentiment on the commission is diffused and one month before chairman Rep. Jim Morgan of High Point would like to begin drafting recommendations, there is no consensus on the commission of approaches that should be taken.

A number of witnesses appearing before the commission have said the state should be given more authority over those status offenders who habitually misbehave and who refuse to participate in voluntary help programs.

One idea is to extend the amount of time which a judge can order a status offender held in custody. There is currently a 72-hour limit. But, if a youngster comes in drunk or hopped up on drugs, that doesn't leave much time to try to help him after they sober him up.

Another idea is to build lock-up facilities where status offenders would be treated by counselors. This would differ from a training school in that there wouldn't be any lawbreakers here.

Or, judges could be given authority to cite for contempt those youngsters who continually defy an order to behave. The Governor's Crime Commission is considering this idea.

Rankin Whittington, director of Anson County's can have a shocking, positive effect on the wrongdoer.

On the other side of the issue, several commission members argued that if the child refuses to adjust his ways, the state should get out of his life. They argued that the state shouldn't have the right to lock up a person who social services, suggested a number of diagnostic and therapeutic programs be developed for the most troubled of these youngsters. Children would be detained in a facility for as long as six months while they were treated. He suggested that a wide range of options be open to treat the many different problems these children have.

Judge Leonard Van Noppen of Danbury wants judges to have the power to hold these children. He said that even a short stay in jail

Other Editors Say A Timely Example

(Mt. Airy News)

Superior Court Judge Donald Smith of Raleigh wins our Salute of the Month for issuing orders for arrest of five lawyers who were not in his court last week when they were supposed to be. Smith took the action while holding court in Gastonia, after apparently throwing up his hands in disgust at what he said was "one of the messiest courts" he had ever seen.

Some of the attorneys were not present when the routine call of the calendar was made in the morning, others were not there when their cases were called. Being the gifted orators they are, all had elaborate excuses and/or alibis for not being in court.

Maybe if more judges followed Smith's get tough example, the state's courts would become more like the forums of justice they should be and less like the circuses some actually are. While Smith reacted to the problems of a particular court system in Gaston County, those kinds of situation are not so far removed from our own beloved court system in Dobson.

Anyone who has regularly attended court sessions in Surry County — especially in District Court — has witnessed the carefree attitude that seem to prevail among some local lawyers. It appears as if court is held for their benefit, at their convenience, secondary to the golf matches or other "important" business at hand.

Yet, private attorneys remain the chief financial beneficiaries of the court system.

We do not wish to lump all lawyers together in one neat package; as in any other profession, there are good lawyers and bad lawyers just as there are good and bad doctors or plumbers. But it only takes a few irresponsible lawyers to taint the sanctity of the overall court system.

In Surry County District Court, for example, the majority of local attorneys are always promptly in the courtroom at 9 a.m. for the call of the day's calendar.

Then there are the tardy few.

One attorney we know of makes a routine practice of strolling into court at 10:30 or so. He makes his grand entrance, methodically exchanging handshakes with other attorneys, law enforcement officers and court officials positioned along the "royal path".

Meanwhile, witnesses, officers and other innocent people are there at 9 a.m.

If we have heard one story about a witness having to sacrifice several days' work to sit through hours of court in Dobson — due to someone else's inefficiency — we have heard a hundred.

The really inexcusable part of some lawyers' conduct is that they are officers of the court — just like judges and prosecutors — and they should be setting an example for everyone else.

UNREQUITTED PRAYER

We encounter in the Psalms this astonishing declaration: "He (that is, God) gave them their request, but sent leanness into their souls."

It is the Bible's way of saying that we should be very careful what we pray for. The greatest calamity that could happen to some people would be to have their prayers granted. On some occasions God confers blessings on people when he denies them the things they ask for. As Shakespeare wrote:

"We, ignorant of ourselves
Beg often our own harms, which the wise powers
Deny us for our good; so find we profit
By losing of our prayer."

How then are we to pray? We should tell God what we want, but always we are to end our prayers with the declaration that we want these things only if they are consistent with God's will. — Elisha Douglass

Pressure In El Salvador

By ROBERT PARRY
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's policy in El Salvador, entering a new and difficult phase, calls for stepping up military pressure on leftist insurgents while keeping alive the beleaguered land and social reform programs, administration officials say.

The officials say their goal is still a political, not military solution to the conflict, but they concede that the Salvadoran army's success on the battlefield in the months ahead is crucial.

The strategy described in interviews with State Department and Pentagon officials calls for continued political and economic reforms to ease the country's social inequities and undercut the guerrillas' popular support.

But the officials also stressed the need for increased military pressure to give the reforms more time and ultimately to convince the insurgents to lay down their arms and run in government-sponsored elections.

"You try to defeat them militarily, but it's important that you leave an opening for them to come back into the system," summed up one senior State Department official, who spoke on condition that his name not be used.

However, critics such as Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., say the administration's policy is little more than wishful thinking and warn it could lead to an ever deepening U.S. military role in El Salvador and Central America.

"This has the real makings of getting out of control," said Dodd. "This is a plan without an automatic pilot or any kind of pilot."

Already, a leftist insurgency is under way against the military government in Guatemala, and Honduras and Costa Rica are experiencing increasing political unrest.

Leftist Nicaragua is fighting insurgents operating from Honduras and has accused the Reagan administration of backing its enemies in an effort to topple its three-year-old Sandinista government.

The Reagan administration, in turn, blames Nicaragua and Cuba for fomenting violence in El Salvador — and depicts the tiny country as the key domino in Central America.

"El Salvador is strategically important to the United States," Thomas O. Enders, assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs, said last week. "Should it fall to a Cuban- and Nicaraguan-backed armed minority, what country in Central America would be secure?"

Critics, however, contend negotiations with Salvadoran leftists and other steps to ease tensions in the region are the only realistic ways to end the war and prevent violent revolution from sweeping the region.

The administration and the Salvadoran government continue to rule out negotiations with the guerrillas that would lead to any sharing of power or the purging of rightists from the military, one of the leftists' key objectives.

Instead, El Salvador's new rightist-dominated government has suggested a dialogue with moderate leftists on how they might take part in future elections.

But with few signs that the leftists will accept that approach, U.S. officials seem increasingly prepared for more fighting.

In June, the United States sent the Salvadoran air force 12 planes, including six A37B light attack planes armed with cannons and rockets. Pentagon officials said the A37Bs were highly effective in recent fighting in Morazan province.

This past week, a Defense Department official announced U.S. plans to train a fourth Salvadoran "quick-strike" battalion, provide new aid for coastal defenses and send three more helicopters to bring the Salvadoran copter force to 20.

Pentagon sources say the Salvadorans hope ultimately to have six U.S.-trained battalions and 30 helicopters in an army expanded from 30,000 to 40,000 men. The administration gave El Salvador $81 million in military aid this year and is budgeting $60 million in 1983 and from $60 million to $80 million in 1984.

In congressional testimony, Nestor Sanchez, deputy assistant defense secretary for inter-American affairs, warned that the Cuban-Nicaraguan coalition "was poised to spread revolution throughout the region and that the United States must be prepared to provide 'timely security assistance' to friendly nations.

In a separate interview, Sanchez, a former CIA officer, said a successful U.S. policy in Central America will not be easy.

"We have to go into the situation to support our friends and be willing to stay for the long-haul." But he said he didn't believe the number of U.S. advisers needed to be increased from the 38 there now.

Sanchez also said Americans must not expect perfection from the Salvadoran army waging counterinsurgency warfare in a densely populated country. "You're going to have your My Lai's down there, just like we did" in Vietnam, he said.

The administration's certification last week of human rights and land reform progress in El Salvador cited continued human rights violations and said Salvadoran forces were responsible for some of them.

Cheap Vacation In Nat'l Parks

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

If your spirit says it's ready for a vacation, but your budget says it's not ready for the price, it may be time to look at the National Park System for a low-cost, close-to-home summer holiday.

Most Americans tend to think of national parks in terms of remote wilderness regions. But the park system actually includes 333 recreational areas, many of which you can reach without a lot of expensive driving or time away from home. There are 48 full-fledged national parks included in the system; other places maintained by the park system range from historic houses and monuments to small, natural areas suitable for a single day's outing.

Admission to most of the national park sites is free; only 62 areas have an entrance fee, ranging from 50 cents to $3. The entrance charge does not include user fees for things like campsites; nor does it include fees imposed by concessionaires for food, equipment rentals, etc.

Duncan Morrow, a park service spokesman, said there were almost 238.5 million visits to the national park system in 1981 and this year's total is running about 4 percent ahead of last year's. (Note: The park service counts "visits" rather than individuals because it has no way of keeping track of the actual number of people involved. It also counts visits in two ways: People who stop and use the facilities — camping, touring monuments or battlefield, etc. — and those who simply drive through; there were 329 million "drive-through" visits in 1981.)

The park service has been trying to promote some of the lesser-known areas in its system and Morrow says it has had some success, particularly with Cumberland Gap National Historic Park, which extends over parts of Kentucky, Virginia and Tennessee, is less than 100 miles from the better-known and more-crowded Great Smoky Mountains of North Carolina and Tennessee, and offers some equal attractions, including a wilderness trail cut by Daniel Boone.

At the same time, Morrow said, some of the famous attractions are unique — and nothing else will do. "Obviously, there's only one place in the world where you can see 'Old Faithful,'" he said.

(The geysers are in Yellowstone National Park which spreads over parts of Wyoming, Montana and Idaho.)

There are several ways to cut costs at national parks with special passes.

The Golden Eagle Passport costs $10 and is an annual entrance permit to all parks, monuments and recreation areas administered by the federal government. It is good only for the calendar year in which it is issued.

The passport admits the holder, plus anyone accompanying him or her in a single, private, non-commercial vehicle. In places where entry is not by car, the passport admits the holder and immediate family group — parents, children and spouse. It covers entrance fees only. You can get it through the mail or in person from the headquarters offices of either the National Park Service, Room 1013, U.S. Department of the Interior, 18th and C Sts. N.W., Washington, D.C., 20240, or the Forest Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D.C., 20250, or from regional offices of either agency.

The Golden Age Passport is free and is available to people 62 and over. It covers admission fees and entitles the holder to a 50 percent discount on user fees charged by the federal government. You do not have to renew it annually. You must get a Golden Age Passport in person and must show proof of age. The passports are available at most federally operated recreational areas, as well as at park and forest service offices.

The Golden Access Passport is similar to the Golden Age Passport, but is available to anyone who is eligible to receive disability assistance from any federal program. You do not actually have to be receiving benefits to qualify; you simply must be eligible for those benefits. Like the Golden Age Passport, the Golden Access Passport does not have to be renewed.

For more information about the park system, contact the nearest regional office of the park service or write to the national headquarters in Washington. A booklet describing "Lesser-Known Areas of the National Park System" is available for $4 from the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 192K, Pueblo, Colo., 81009.

'Geriatric Crime' Sharply Up

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A disturbing national trend toward more crime by the elderly is magnified in Dade County, where 20 percent of the residents are over

Little Saved In Dismantling

WASHINGTON (AP) — The General Accounting Office has found President Reagan's claims that dismantling the Department of Energy would save money are "unsound, undocumented and unbelievable," a House subcommittee chairman said today.

Rep. Phil Sharp, D-Ind., said the GAO found administration estimates of savings of up to $1.3 billion resulted largely from program cuts that were unrelated to reorganization.

Sharp said the administration was unable to document other claimed savings and that it counted savings from management changes that did not require reorganization. Offsetting expenses of reorganization also were not taken into account, the congressman said.

Sharp, chairman of the House Energy and Commerce subcommittee on fossil and synthetic fuels, called the study — which was to be released today — "a blistering indictment of the methodology and objectivity of most of the claims for savings thus far."

In its 1983 budget submission, the administration said program reductions and reorganization would save $1.3 billion in one year.

In May, President Reagan submitted legislation to abolish the department, a 1980 campaign pledge, but the claimed savings by then had dropped to $1 billion over three years. Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige lowered the estimate further in June, to $250 million over three years.

Sharp, in a speech prepared for delivery on the House floor, said he was not necessarily opposed to reorganization of the department.

"But to receive serious consideration, any proposal must be supported with proper analyses documenting all the advantages and disadvantages of that proposal...."

"If the proposal has no better basis... than the discredited numbers used to date, we should reject it without hesitation," he said.

always at your back, and may you get to heaven before the devil knows you're there?"

"Because most people are in a hurry, and that takes too long to say, unless you're leaving an Irish bar. Why are you making such an issue of a simple thing like this?"

"I guess it's a question of sincerity. Everyone tells you to have a nice day. But how many people do you know really care if you do or not?"

"Royal, you're a cynic." "I am not. I know a department store, and they train their employees to say 'Have a nice day' to everybody."

"Well, wouldn't you rather have them say that than to tell you what's really on their minds?"

"No, I think people should level with you. They should tell you what's on their minds. How can you know whom to trust when even the people who work in the post office tell you to have a nice day?"

"Well, Royal, I'm sure you realize that when I wished you a nice day, I meant it from the bottom of my heart."

"How can I be sure you weren't just trying to get rid of me?"

"Because I never say it to somebody unless I truly like and admire them. If you don't want to have a nice day that's all right with me, too."

"There you go," Royal cried. "You're putting the evil eye on me again."

65. One official calls it "geriatric delinquency." Police say crimes by the area's elderly population have more than doubled in 10 years. FBI statistics show that nationally, 198,000 people 60 or older were arrested in 1980 — twice the figure of 1970.

In Dade County, more than half of all 1980 larceny charges were filed against defendants 60 or older, the Miami Herald reported Sunday. The most common charge: shoplifting.

"They're caught stealing lipstick, perfume, night creams, even cigars," said County Judge David Gersten. "They're not stealing to eat. That's a popular misconception."

Arrests among the elderly in unincorporated Dade County jumped 29 percent from 1980 to 1981, according to FBI figures. Statewide, arrests of people at least 60 years old rose by nearly 100,000 over five years, from 364,328 in 1977 to 463,454 in 1981.

Gerontologist Alvin Malley calls the trend "staggering." His federally funded Advocate Program for Seniors counseled 500 clients last year, 75 percent for shoplifting.

In nine out of 10 cases, those arrested are first offenders. They may be affected by "geriatric delinquency" — closely resembling juvenile delinquency, Malley said.

"They act just like kids do when they're not getting the attention they need. These people are suffering escalating losses of loved ones, physical prowess and self-esteem," he said.

Also, the traumatic loss of a loved one can affect normal behavior and "short-circuit" usual aversions to stealing, Malley said.

In Miami Beach, for example, 76-year-old Pauline Driebein was recently arrested for the first time in her life, charged with stealing $2.29 worth of cough lozenges.

Mrs. Driebein, in a conversation witnessed by a Miami Herald reporter, told arresting officer Chuck Hayes that she was "confused."

"What were you confused about? We followed you around," Hayes said. "I was confused about what to do with my sore throat," Mrs. Driebein said. Later, Hayes told her, "This (summons) isn't meant to hurt you, you understand. Nothing is going to happen to you except you're going to have to go before the judge and you're going to tell him the circumstances. The most he is going to (do) is give you a fine. And he's going to put you in a program or something."

"Oh, don't do that, please," said Mrs. Driebein. "Nothing like this has ever happened to me. Please believe me. Oh God, please believe me."

Mrs. Driebein pleaded no contest and was ordered to attend a counseling program. Gersten, who heard the women's case, also assessed her $15 in court costs and assured her that if she completed the counseling, he would seal the court record of her arrest.

Gersten said 80 to 90 percent of the elderly who are arrested are charged with petty theft, disorderly intoxication and disorderly conduct — frequently involving family arguments or arguments with shopkeepers.

Some of those arrested come to court with newspaper clippings about their accomplishments in northern cities before they retired to Florida, Gersten said, "or they'll bring photos and tell you their whole life story in a few minutes."

"Who knows why they get in trouble? But I can tell you that for most of them, including the ones who survived the concentration camps, this is the worst time of their lives. It's the shame, I think."

"What do you do?" the judge asked. "For some of them, a short jail term could be a life sentence. It's a problem that the community should get involved in, but everyone's too busy."

Rebel Diehards Fight On But Kenya Coup A Failure

By BARRY SHLACHTER
Associated Press Writer
NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Rebel diehards held out against loyalist troops today at air force bases outside the capital, but President Daniel Arap Moi appeared to be in control of the country after crushing an attempt by junior air force officers to overthrow his civilian government.

Government sources said 71 air force personnel were killed and 300 were detained since the attempted coup was launched early Sunday. Most of the fighting occurred around the country's three main air bases at Eastleigh, Embakasi, and Nanyuki.

The Eastleigh area is "littered with bodies," including those of civilians caught in the cross-fire, a witness said. Resistance continued today at Eastleigh and Embakasi despite a military ultimatum ordering the rebels to surrender by noon, 5 a.m. EDT. Lt. Gen Abdul Mohammed, who led the loyalist forces, said in a broadcast those who didn't give up would be dealt with "ruthlessly."

Bodies of at least nine civilians were seen in the streets of Nairobi and hospital officials reported that more than 500 people — mainly civilians — were treated for gunshot wounds Sunday. About 200 of them suffered serious injuries, a doctor at Kenyatta Memorial Hospital said.

Other sources said three unidentified Americans were among the wounded.

The leader of the attempted coup, identified by military sources as a Col. Odipo of the 50th Air Cavalry Battalion based in Embakasi, eight miles south of Nairobi, was not among those captured, officials said.

Press reports in neighboring Tanzania said a military plane with four Kenyan air force officers aboard landed at Dar es Salaam's international airport. The officers were being questioned by the police, the reports said.

Military sources said fighting continued late Sunday near the Embakasi Air Base near the capital where the rebellion was launched at 3 a.m. A clash early today was also reported at Nanyuki Air Force Base, 100 miles north of Nairobi, but informed sources said the rebels there had been subdued.

It was Kenya's first coup attempt since the pro-Western, east African country got its independence from Britain 19 years ago.

A U.S. embassy spokesman said three Americans were wounded but only one required hospitalization. She was reported to be a woman living in an apartment house in an area where fighting was heavy, who was shot in the neck, the spokesman said. Her condition was reported not critical, he said.

Several downtown streets were devastated today following widespread looting Sunday. Electrical appliance and apparel shops were cleaned out and the sidewalks and streets littered with broken glass, carboard boxes, abandoned goods and mannequins from shop windows.

The West German Embassy said Dagmar Ahmed, the West German wife of a U.N. environmental agency official, was killed when a grenade exploded outside her home. The French Embassy said a French aid worker was shot in both arms Sunday when he failed to stop at an army roadblock. He was reported in satisfactory condition.

The Voice of Kenya radio said early today that there was an "urgent" need for blood donors and called on residents to go to special donor centers in various sites of the capital.

Troops manned roadblocks around the city today checking identification papers and searching vehicles for arms and merchandise stolen during Sunday's massive looting spree.

Occasional firing could be heard in downtown Nairobi, apparently from policemen and soldiers shooting in the air to frighten pedestrians away from looted merchandise dropped outside shattered storefronts. But rebel snipers who were firing Sunday night from high-rise buildings apparently had either been captured or had given up the fight.

Dozens of automobiles, abandoned at the height of the fighting, badly snarled the morning traffic. Many were riddled with bullets and their windshields were shot out. Public transport had not resumed, and hundreds of people waited at bus stops, hitchhiked or walked to work.

Nairobi's Jomo Kenyatta international airport, one of the first targets of the rebels, was recaptured by loyalist forces but remained closed early today.

Domestic and international communications also were disrupted.

The Kenyan leader said Sunday night in a broadcast that "the uprising by the air force has been crushed by our army and police."

Moi, 58, has been in power since 1978, when he succeeded the late Jomo Kenyatta, Kenya's revered first president and the architect of the country's independence. Moi was Kenyatta's vice president.

Last month, Moi pushed through a constitutional amendment making his Kenya African National Union (KANU) the only legal political party. Since then he has been rounding up leading KANU opponents.

One rebel broadcast said: "Rampant corruption and nepotism has made life almost intolerable in our society. The economy is in a shambles, and the people can't afford food, housing and transport."

The air force rebellion appeared ill-conceived and poorly coordinated. No vehicle heavier than a Land Rover was used, and although U.S.-made F-5 air force jets made passes over Nairobi, none took part in the action.

Kenya's air force in 1981 had 2,000 men and 20 combat aircraft, according to the International Institute for Strategic Studies in London. It was not immediately clear how many air force members were involved in the coup attempt.

Kenya's army has 12,000 men and its navy 650, the IISS says.

Indiscipline was apparent in both rebel and loyalist camps, Kenyan and foreign residents said. Motorists were stopped at roadblocks manned by one group or the other and robbed at gunpoint. Those who hesitated in obeying the soldiers' commands were fired at, witnesses said.

Loyalist troops took time off from putting down the rebellion and broke into the Nairobi International Casino and the landmark Norfolk Hotel. One soldier tried to shoot open the hotel safe and was hit by a ricocheting bullet, witnesses said.

Mexico Hikes Price Levels

By PETER EISNER
Associated Press Writer
MEXICO CITY (AP) — The government today imposed sweeping increases in the prices of bread, tortillas and gasoline, saying all Mexicans must accept sacrifices at a time of economic crisis.

The Ministry of Commerce, in a surprise announcement late Sunday night, said the increases, effective immediately, would double the cost of both corn tortillas and white bread rolls, and would increase gasoline, other fuel and electricity prices as much as 66 percent.

The government acknowledged the increases would hurt consumers, but said the measures were necessary to cut costly government subsidies.

The new prices set the cost of tortillas at 10 cents a pound and rolls at two cents each. Both are staple items in this nation of 70 million people, where the minimum legal wage is the equivalent of about 95 cents an hour.

An estimated 45 percent of the nation's labor force is either unemployed or underemployed.

Gasoline prices in this oil-exporting nation were hiked 66 percent from the equivalent of 46 cents to 77 cents for a gallon of regular gas and from 77 cents to $1.15 for a gallon of premium. Diesel fuel went up from 19 cents to 31 cents a gallon.

The nation is rich in crude oil reserves, but is suffering a deep monetary crisis because of sagging international crude oil prices and a foreign debt expected to close the year at $80 billion.

The ministry said price subsidies on all the products were depleting the nation's weakened coffers. Even with the increases, it said, subsidies to tortilla and bread producers would not be totally eliminated.

"During the last five years, production cost increases for bread were absorbed by growing subsidies," the ministry statement said.

It also said energy costs were growing with skyrocketing demand, forcing the new price structure.

"In contrast with the more developed countries, where a clear tendency toward decreased energy demands has been observed, in Mexico the disproportionate consumption of gasoline has continued," the ministry said.

"Following the present pace, the demand for refined fuel in Mexico would force

Innocent Man Endured 3 Years In Central Prison

ASHEBORO, N.C. (AP) — Thomas Brady spent three years as a convicted rapist in prison until his release recently after charges were dismissed when it was discovered that the woman he allegedly raped had a history of reporting rape to police.

The nightmare began Aug. 20, 1978, when Brady went by Kimbrell's Furniture Store in Asheboro to make a payment on a television his wife bought on credit. Three days later the store's 24-year-old clerk, Deborah Trogdon, told Randolph County deputies that Brady and two other men, who were never identified, had forced her car off a rural road and raped her. She declined a medical examination and deputies declined to file charges. Three months later, Ms.

Trogdon said Brady raped her a second time, breaking into her home to do so. She charged that he and an unidentified accomplice abducted her, stripped her, painted her body and face white, including the initials "T.B." on her chest, and abandoned her along a road. Brady denied guilt when city police Sgt. Charles Bulla questioned him Dec. 7, 1978. Bulla arrested him. The trial was brief, consisting mostly of Ms.

Trogdon's testimony. Brady again denied his guilt. But the jury, on May 17, 1979, found Brady guilty of kidnapping, two counts of first-degree rape and first-degree burglary. Brady wasn't there to hear the verdict. He had walked out during the noon recess. Randolph County sheriff's Lt. Don Andrews caught him two months later, working on a Virginia chicken farm. Brady still insisted he was innocent, which aroused Andrews' curiosity. "A lot of things didn't look right, didn't feel right," Andrews said. He began looking into the case before Superior Court Judge James Davis sentenced Brady to two consecutive life sentences on July 27, 1979. While Brady was in jail, Andrews gathered evidence. Asheboro Fire Marshal Jim Smith also got involved as did private detective Tom McDonald of Randleman. The men said they discovered that since June 9, 1978, Ms. Trogdon had reported being victimized 13 times, including the two alleged rapes by Brady.

Ms. Trogdon had emotional problems that, if known to the jury, might have resulted in Brady's acquittal. On July 21, Collier ordered a new trial. Two days later, District Attorney Garland Yates said he would dismiss all charges because Ms. Trogdon didn't want another trial. Brady returned home with $22.50 in prison pay in his pockets to try to mend his life with his wife, Joyce, and 12-year-old daughter, Irene. "I don't think it ever will be over," said Brady, 30, about the three-year nightmare of living in Raleigh's Central Prison, the state's only maximum-security prison. "It's always there. No way to get it out of your mind," he said.

The Forecast For Tuesday, August 3

Low Temperatures

Fronts: Cold Warm Occluded Stationary

WEATHER FORECAST — The National Weather Service forecasts showers for Tuesday for the Northwest, Southwest, northern Plains into the Great Lakes and for the Southeast. Most of the nation will be warm. (AP/Laserphoto)

By The Associated Press
Partly cloudy today and hazy with only isolated thunderstorms. Good weather for most outdoor activities is on tap for the next couple of days. Partly cloudy and hazy conditions will be the rule today although some isolated thunderstorms are possible especially in the southeast. Highs are going to be in the 80s to around 90 with some cooler 70s in the higher mountains. Fair weather is expected tonight and Tuesday. Lows statewide will be generally in the 60s. Highs tomorrow will climb into the 90s except for 80s in the mountains and along the Outer Banks. Along the coast, winds will be westerly at 10 to 15 knots today then become northerly at 10 to 15 knots tonight. Winds Tuesday will be westerly at 10 to 15 knots. Before sunrise this morning there was very little cloudiness across North Carolina except in the southeastern portion of the state. There was, however, some fog at most reporting stations. Temperatures were in the 60s in the west and north while 70s were the rule elsewhere. A nearly stationary front stretched from over the Atlantic southwest through the extreme southeastern portion of the Tar Heel state. A few showers were associated with the front, but they were over south carolina and out over the offshore waters. A weak area of high pressure covered the rest of the North Carolina. The high pressure system will continue to dominate the weather for most of the state today. There should be plenty of sunshine. Especially over inland sections. But some isolated showers or thunderstorms may be triggered as a weak upper level disturbance moves across the area during the day. The portion of the state most likely to experience shower activity is in the southeast near the weak front. Tonight the front will be drifting to the southeast as a rather dry high pressure system establishes a firm grip on our weather. As a result, generally fair skies should prevail from Tuesday into the middle portion of the week.

Texas Town To Greet Olav V

NORSE, Texas (AP) — The rugged farmers and ranchers who make up most of this central Texas town's 110 residents are preparing to hobnob with a king — Olav V of Norway. This Bosque County hamlet in the oak and cedar-covered hills northwest of Waco is the largest Scandinavian settlement in Texas.

King Olav is due here Oct. 10 to commemorate the 200th anniversary of the birth of Kleng Peerson, the "father" of Norwegian immigration to North America.

Peerson lived out his days here after fleeing religious persecution and poverty at home in the mid-1850s with about 100 Norwegians in tow, said Carl Sorenson of the Dallas-based Norwegian Society of Texas.

King Olav, who ascended to the Norwegian throne in 1957, will visit Peerson's grave during his six-hour visit. Local residents expect as many as 15,000 immigrants to show up. "There's quite a bit of excitement," said Gene Aars, director of the Bosque Memorial Museum in nearby Clifton. "Most small towns would give their right arm to get a king to visit."

Princess Joins Benefit Dance

VENICE, Italy (AP) — The setting was historical Venice and the benefit was for London's Royal Opera House, so Britain's Princess Margaret stayed on her toes — on the dance floor.

The divorced 51-year-old sister of Queen Elizabeth II joined 300 other guests Saturday night at the Pisani-Moretta Palace overlooking the Grand Canal. The banquet and ball, costing $500 a head, was to raise funds for the restoration of London's Royal Opera House at Covent Garden.

Dressed in an emerald green dress with gold trim and a diamond necklace, the princess danced until 3 a.m. to music by Peppino di Capri and his orchestra. The princess flew home Sunday morning.

Radio Guests Are Announced

City Manager Gail Meeks announced that the guests on the city's radio program, "City Hall Notes," this week will be Terry Oglethorpe, superintendent of the right-of-way/traffic control division, and Curtis Howell, business manager of Greenville Utilities.

Oglethorpe will discuss the responsibilities of his division and Howell will talk about GUC's "Beat the Peak" program.

"City Hall Notes" is aired each Tuesday and Thursday at 6:30 p.m. on WOOW Radio.

One good way to get improved weed control in soybeans at minimal expense is to use post-directed herbicides. These are the herbicides that are sprayed on small weeds after soybeans get several inches tall. Special application equipment and nozzles are needed so that spray can be directed towards the soil and the base of the soybean plant without killing or injuring soybeans.

Post-directed spray should generally be considered as the final step in a good weed control program. Generally, a pre-plant pre-emerge or early post-emergence herbicide will be needed to control initial emerging weeds and establish a height advantage for soybeans. Following these with directed sprays is a good way to get very effective and economical weed control. The herbicides used for direct spray application are relatively inexpensive. Application costs for the herbicides usually range from 75 cents to $5 per acre.

Successful use of directed sprays requires careful timing of application. The best time for application is more related to soybean size than weed size. Some directed sprays can be applied as soon as soybeans are six inches tall. These herbicides can be applied in directed bands alongside each row or they can cover the entire row middles.

Never spray on upper two thirds of soybean canopy. Post-directed herbicides will kill soybeans if any substantial amount of herbicides gets on upper soybean leaves. To avoid excessive soybean injury, the herbicides spray should be directed only at the bottom one-third of the soybean plant, or even better, preferably at height below two inches.

Two ways to further reduce soybean injury are to use (1) low spray pressure, 25 psi or less to reduce drift and (2) fenders on each side of the row to reduce skips or slow emerging soybeans can be killed.

Views On Dental Health

TOOTH FOOD

The first thing to teach your children about preventive tooth care is that good eating habits are important. Foods that keep the whole body healthy will also keep teeth, gums and jawbones in good condition. Milk, cheese, meat, eggs, vegetables, fruits, whole grain breads and cereals are excellent for healthy teeth and gums. If your child eats between meals, remember that snacks should be low in sugar. In-between-meal treats such as candy, cookies, ice cream, sugared chewing gum and sweet drinks may play havoc with a child's teeth. Bacteria which are normally present in the mouth combine with sugar to form acids-acids which attack tooth enamel. Eventually, it causes cavities. When sweets are eaten between meals there is more apt to be a chance for cavities to develop, since the child will probably not brush right after-before acids have a chance to form.

Some toothworthy snacks for children are: apples, oranges, bananas, plums, peaches, fruit juices, milk and cheese. The greater distance between sweet junk foods and teeth, the better.

Prepared as a public service to promote better dental health. From the office of: Kenneth T. Perkins, D.D.S., P.A. Evans St., Phone: 752-5126.

We've got nothing against raising tobacco. We just wanted to point out a few of the things our growers appreciate about the Perdue program. We might also mention that the need for expensive equipment is reduced and a chicken house can pay for itself while it provides a grower with income along the way. With Perdue, you can build the very best house on the market and you can build equity into your farm at the same time. In fact, one Perdue broiler house will give you the same net income as 5 to 6 acres of reaped tobacco. When your house is paid for, one house earns the same income as 18-20 acres of tobacco. The cost of farming is on the rise, but on the other side of the coin, it doesn't cost a penny to check out the crop with the guaranteed income of over $20,000 per year. There's never been a better time to talk chicken with PERDUE.

NEW YORK (AP) - The stock market gained ground today on the strength of some early buying inspired by declining interest rates. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up more than 6 points in early trading, showed a 2.95 gain at 811.55 by noon.

Gainers held a 2-1 lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

After Friday's close the Federal Reserve announced the second half-point cut in the discount rate in less than two weeks, to 11 percent.

The reduction in the Fed's charge on loans to commercial banks and other financial institutions was seen as confirmation of recent evidence that it was relaxing its credit policies.

In short order, several banks across the country lowered their prime lending rates from 15 1/2 to 15 percent.

Stock-market followers have been hoping for a drop in interest rates to alleviate strains on many depressed sectors of the economy, and to reduce the appeal of investments like Treasury bills that compete with stocks.

Gainers among "interest-rate-sensitive" stocks included Jim Walter, up 1 at 22 1/2; Great Western Financial up 1/2 at 12 1/2, and American Telephone & Telegraph, up 1/8 at 52 3/8.

The NYSE's composite index rose .38 to 61.89. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .62 at 249.61.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 20.93 million shares at noon, against 18.53 million at the same point Friday.

Big Savings Seen In Later Retiring

WASHINGTON (AP) - Increasing retirement age from 65 to 68 could save the federal government $17 billion in 1983, according to the Congressional Budget Office.

The budget office, in a report requested by the Senate Budget Committee, pointed to this step as one option for the continued employment of older workers.

"Because of the implications of demographic and labor market trends for the economy and federal budget, questions arise about whether there is too great an incentive to retire early, and whether there are too few policies to facilitate continued employment," the report said.

It pointed out that when a person stops working and begins collecting Social Security benefits, annual outlays for Social Security increase on average about $4,800 per person and Social Security and income tax revenues decrease by over $2,000 per person.

"Federal spending on retirement income for persons 65 and older already represents 19 percent of the budget - or over $130 billion in fiscal year 1982 - and spending for their health care amounts to over $48 billion, or 7 percent," it said.

At present, full retirement benefits are available at 65, benefits are reduced for retiring between 62 and 65 and increased for delaying retirement up to 72.

"If increases in the early and normal retirement ages to 65 and 68, respectively, were fully implemented in 1983, benefits to over 2 million retired-worker beneficiaries 62 to 64 and their dependents would be eliminated, for a savings of over $17 billion in federal outlays," the report said.

The number of people 65 and older is continuing to increase as a share of the total population, the study pointed out. In 1980, one in nine Americans was 65 or older, compared to one in 12 in 1950.

The report said that, even if the portion of elderly persons in the work force does not change from its 1980 level, by 2030 almost 16 percent of the population - or 49 million persons - will be over 64 and not employed.

Extremism Rising In West Germany

BONN, West Germany (AP) - Crimes against foreigners and membership in neo-Nazi organizations and other right-wing extremist groups are on the rise in West Germany, the Interior Ministry reports.

Attacks on foreigners by right-wing extremists are also increasing, figures from the ministry show.

Interior Minister Gerhart Baum warned several weeks ago of "clearly growing agitation against foreigners."

He said "growing support of the use of force" and the old Nazi principles of racism and nationalism are being used to agitate against the large foreign population who came to West Germany in the postwar years looking for jobs they could not find at home.

Among the extremists, racism "is being elevated, so to speak, to a national principle," Baum said.

Most of the foreign workers are Turks. During the boom years of West Germany's "economic miracle," most Germans were glad to have them to do the less skilled, poorer paid jobs the Germans didn't want.

Now that unemployment is climbing here as it is elsewhere in the West, out-of-work Germans want those jobs.

The government recorded 297 crimes against foreigners last year, a 150 percent increase over 119 such crimes recorded the year before.

Indications are that the trend is escalating this year, Interior Ministry spokesman Klaus Westkamp said in an interview with The Associated Press.

Howell Says Karr's Job As ECU AD Is Secure

(Editor's note: This is the second of two parts on how Dr. John Howell sees himself fitting in with the athletic program at East Carolina University.)

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Since shortly after he came to East Carolina as athletic director, there have been reports that Dr. Ken Karr would be leaving. There are some who say his contract will not be renewed come next summer. There are others who insist that he has been seeking another position elsewhere for some time.

Just last week, such a report was published in a Richmond, Va., newspaper. Karr has denied that he is seeking another job, and there are reports that he could be awarded a new contract before his present one runs out.

"As far as I'm concerned," Dr. John Howell, the new chancellor of East Carolina University said in an interview last week, "(Dr. Karr's) position is secure."

"I get along very well with him. We understand each other. I don't know very much about athletics, but I am convinced that he does. He has national contacts and is very well respected."

Howell said that the question of whether Karr is seeking another job has been discussed between the two and "I'm convinced that he's not looking (for another job) and sees his career here."

Karr has come under fire from some areas as being not open enough with both the fans and the media, but Howell said that on the occasions when he has attended functions with Karr, "he has handled himself quite well with both groups."

In the past, chancellors, Leo Jenkins in particular, had more or less run the athletic programs themselves, pulling all of the key strings. Howell says that he doesn't see himself in that role.

"Am I going to be a string puller? Absolutely not! Of the areas of the university that I supervise, this is the one I have no credentials to direct. I'm a scholar, not an athlete."

"Now, when it comes to the general supervision of any part of the university, then I'll be in charge. The athletic director reports to me and we discuss things and I tell him what I think we ought to do. And I expect the coaches to do the same with him. But he's in charge when it comes to the technical things where expertise is concerned."

East Carolina has dropped several sports in the past few years, and has also gone through the Title IX problems that many schools have. Howell, however, does not see any further drop in the number of sports.

"I don't anticipate dropping any because I think we're right at the level we have to be at due to NCAA regulations. But at the same time, I don't think we'll be adding any any time soon."

And Howell sees no cutting back in women's athletics. "We're not going to balance our athletic budget by cutting the women's program. It's here to stay."

Still, he admits, the program must be turned around financially. "There's no doubt about that, and it's going to be up to the Pirate Club to do it."

Howell, by the way, keeps a stack of Pirate Club membership blanks on his desk, ready to push toward non-members.

"When you look back over the last 50 years, as we've had reason to this year (the 50th anniversary of ECU athletics), you can see that we've come a long way with a little amount of money. We could do this because a great deal of money wasn't required; it's just beginning so. The whole university has had to function on a tight budget, but we've always had the strength and spirit here that has helped us, and this is true of the athletic program."

But while ECU has done all right with the tight budget in athletics in the past, he doesn't feel that this can continue. "We have to field teams that are well-equipped, and the like, as related to our opposition if we want to have a chance of winning. We have to do more than play Division I-A schools.

We have to win and motivate our fans."

Recently, there has been a trend away from East Carolina by in-state I-A schools — those of the ACC. North Carolina no longer will play ECU in football, and Duke and Wake Forest have also shown no interest in playing on the gridiron. While East Carolina's men's basketball program continues to be on the N.C. State and Duke schedules, the women's program — highly successful over the last few years — has suddenly run afoul of those winning ways.

Reportedly, both North Carolina and Duke have refused to schedule ECU's women in the future, and this, along with the other teams that turn a cold shoulder to the Pirates, bothers Howell.

"I've been here 25 years, and we've always been the upstart kid from down east," he said. "We'd like to play 'em; they're close by, it's a good show, and the fans like it. I'm sorry that they feel this way about us. I think they'd make more money playing us, but maybe they don't need (the money) as bad as we do."

And the image of being the "upstart kid" doesn't bother Howell. "I think the important thing is that the people of eastern North Carolina see us as 'their' university. That's the source of a lot of the strength of this university, and

Waltrip Holds Off Baker To Win 500

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — "I was going to be a hero or you-know-what," Darrell Waltrip said of the strategy that brought him his second straight victory at the Alabama International Motor Speedway.

Waltrip picked up a $58,770 paycheck by holding off a charging Buddy Baker at the finish Sunday of the 14th Talladega 500 NASCAR Grand National stock car race.

He had won the Winston 500 here May 2 and with his three-foot victory Sunday became the first driver to win two Talladega 500s. Waltrip also won in 1979. There have been 12 other one-time winners.

With Baker and Richard Petty dogging him, Waltrip said he decided that if he was leading at the third turn on the last lap, he could win.

With two such veterans on his trail, he said, "You have to cinch your belt up, put a smile on your face and go on."

Baker tried to slingshot on the final stretch but could not pull it off.

"I thought I could take Darrell," he said. "I moved to the outside and when I did, the car broke traction and slipped a bit. I couldn't gather it back up in time. It was a hard race, but a fun one."

Petty, after one of his strongest showings in weeks, said he was where he wanted to be but that Baker "never pulled out. The man rning in second place has to make the move first, but he just waited too late. For us to run this good at Talladega is like winning."

Baker got $34,350 and Petty $26,975 for his third-place finish.

Seven other drivers, Cale Yarborough, Terry Labonte, Bill Elliott, Tim Richmond, Morgan Shepherd, Ricky Rudd and Bobby Allison, were in the lead lap to give the 2.66-mile, high-banked oval one of its strongest finishing fields ever.

Although the lead changed 39 times among 11 drivers, Waltrip showed he was the one leading at the third turn on the 108 of the 188 laps.

With his Buick giving him no trouble, Waltrip averaged 168.157 mph.

"I never drove a car anywhere that ran the way that car ran, and I'm glad I was in it when it did," he said.

Allison was a hard luck-driver. Early on, he lost a windshield and then had to make an unscheduled stop to change a bad tire but still was in the lead lap with the final miles looming. However, with only five laps left, he had to coast in for gas and lost his chance.

The pole winner, Geoff Bodine, finished 15th, three laps back, after tire and windshield troubles.

Waltrip, winner of seven races this year, said, "Everything is working good. The team is functioning well. We've got our heads together."

Record Breaker Greenville's Overton Breaks Own Trick Skiing Mark

TAMPA — Greenville's Kristi Overton broke her own National Trick Skiing record at the 1982 Southern Regional Water Ski Championship here this past weekend.

Overton had a total of 6,060 points to break her old mark of 5,490. She set the old record in May.

Overton is only the second female from the United States to score over 6,000 points in tricks.

Overton, who is 12 years old, also took first place in Slalom and fourth in jumping. She was first overall as well.

Overton now holds the National record in two of the three events in water skiing.

A number of other Greenville skiers competed in the meet but only one other placed. Jackie Rollins of Greenville placed third in the Tricks event.

Robinson Ends Chase

Ex-Oriole Joins Aaron, 2 More, In Hall Of Fame

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. (AP) — On the day they both were inducted into baseball's Hall of Fame, Frank Robinson said he finally was through chasing Hank Aaron.

"It seems like I've been chasing him for a long time," Robinson said. "It seems like I've always been one step behind or one year behind him."

"When I broke in, all the talk was about Hank Aaron, and I must say we've had a long and friendly rivalry on the field," Robinson said.

Robinson, an MVP in both leagues and now manager of the San Francisco Giants, made his acceptance speech on the steps of the Hall of Fame library Sunday. His induction followed those of former New York Giants shortstop Travis Jackson and A.B. "Happy" Chandler, post-World War II commissioner of baseball, and preceded that of Aaron.

Jackson and Chandler were selected for induction by the Veterans Committee, while Robinson and Aaron were elected by members of the Baseball Writers Association of America in their first year of eligibility, having been retired as players for five years. They were the 12th and 13th players inducted in their first try.

"So many times I stood in the outfield and watched Hank Aaron hit balls over my head," Robinson said. "I think I felt that if I got up in the next inning, I had to prove myself as good as Hank. I think it made me a better ballplayer."

"It's been said that Hank Aaron didn't get his due as a ballplayer," Robinson said, "and I agree. He wasn't a flashy ballplayer. He just did the job.

"And now I thought I had finally caught up with him until I read in the paper that he's the 12th and I'm the 13th. One step behind again."

But I finally caught up with him. I'm hitting third," Robinson said, looking toward Aaron, still awaiting his turn to address the crowd gathered for the inductions. "And he's on deck. I'm going into the Hall of Fame before he does."

Aaron was named on 406 of the 415 ballots cast by 10-year members of the baseball writers group, while Robinson received 370 votes. Only Willie Mays, who was inducted in 1979, received more votes than Aaron with 409.

"It's been a long, winding road," said Aaron, who was the last man to make it to the major leagues from Negro League baseball. "I've been extremely blessed in my lifetime."

Aaron, whose 755 career home runs erased the revered record of 714 by Babe Ruth, said he wanted to pay particular respect to Jackie Robinson and Roy Campanella, two of the men most responsible for breaking baseball's color barrier in post-war America.

"A man's ability is limited only by his lack of opportunity."

Lietzke's Thinking Retirement

OAKVILLE, Ontario (AP) — While he was in the process of winning the Canadian Open, Bruce Lietzke was thinking of retiring from golf.

"I had many thoughts, and my thoughts were about retirement," Lietzke said after he'd nursed a diminishing lead into a two-stroke victory in this national championship.

"I don't enjoy playing under the pressure I was under," he said.

"I really doubt that I will play more than three or four more years on the PGA Tour," said Lietzke, one of the game's most successful players. He now has won nine tournaments, including two Canadian Opens, and has won at least once in each of the last six seasons.

The latest victory, secured on a final round of 73 Sunday and a 277 total, seven shots under par on the Glen Abbey Golf Club course, was worth $76,500 from the total purse of $425,000 and pushed Lietzke's season's earnings to $206,303.

But, at age 31, he's thinking of quitting the game.

"My enthusiasm for golf has dwindled," he said. "I have found something much better than golf — being married," said Lietzke, who wed last year.

"We want to have a family. And I want to be a better father than a golfer."

"So I don't think you'll see Bruce Lietzke out here after three or four more years."

"I admire people like John Havlicek, who retire when they're in or near their prime. And you see other people, Muhammad Ali, baseball, football players, who hang on too long. You can see they don't enjoy it just by looking at them."

"Once, I used to love being under intense pressure on the golf course. I don't know if I've grown tired of that pressure, but it doesn't thrill me as it once did. And if the thrill is gone, then it's time to look for greener pastures."

"I don't think I'll play really competitive golf much past

1986. "I know it may sound strange, and I may have to eat these words in the near future. I'm still very young. But my enthusiasm for golf has dwindled. It may be time to go on to something else."

At the moment, however, he has reclaimed a position among the game's top players and ranks eighth on the year's money-winning list. He now has won $1.3 million in eight years as a touring pro.

He had to work hard for his latest victory, despite holding a five-shot lead with seven holes to play.

"I wanted to make it a runaway, but I don't have the killer instinct," he said. "I don't quite have the mental toughness to break away."

Instead, he began to back off, with the lead dropping to two strokes with four holes to play.

He turned it around, however, with a brilliant approach shot that set up a tap-in birdie on the 16th which effectively sealed the victory.

"At that point," said Hal Sutton, who eventually claimed second place, "I discarded any thought of winning."

LeFlore Has Head & Hand In Chisox Win

By The Associated Press

Center fielder Ron LeFlore returned to action and had a hand in Chicago's 4-2 victory over the Boston Red Sox. Luckily for the White Sox, he had a hand in it, too.

After sitting out two weeks because of (1) a suspension for reporting late to the ballpark and (2) his wife's illness, LeFlore was back in the starting lineup Sunday and made his presence felt.

"I contributed," he said after driving in two runs with a double and a sacrifice fly in a 4-2 victory over the Red Sox.

But what had the crowd in Chicago's Comiskey Park buzzing was one ball Boston's Gary Allenson hit in the sixth inning which appeared to bounce off LeFlore's head and roll to the wall as Allenson circled the bases on the four-base error.

"See, you guys don't even know what happened," LeFlore explained. "It didn't bounce off my head, it bounced off the bill of my cap. I drifted back when I should have run. When I stuck my glove up, I lost it in the sun."

Besides LeFlore's two RBIs, Harold Baines accounted for Chicago's other runs with a two-run homer off Bruce Hurst in the fifth inning following a two-out error by Boston third baseman Wade Boggs on Tony Bernazard's bunt.

Royals 4, Orioles 2

Lee May's pinch single triggered a four-run eighth-inning rally that enabled Kansas City to sweep a four-game series. Baltimore's Jim Palmer took a 2-0 lead into the eighth but was relieved by Tippy Martinez after Amos Otis singled and Hal McRae doubled. May, a former Oriole, singled Otis home and Jerry Martin followed with a single that tied the game, with pinch runner Greg Pryor taking third.

Tim Stoddard relieved Martinez and Frank White greeted him with a sacrifice fly that put the Royals on top and Steve Hammond's pinch single scored another run as the Orioles, who had a seven-game winning streak when this series began, lost their fourth in a row and the ninth in their last 10 games in Royals Stadium, where they are 19-36 since it opened in 1973.

Indians 4-2, Brewers 1-7

Don Money drove in three runs with a double and single and Gorman Thomas added a two-run single as Milwaukee broke out of a hitting slump in the nightcap. The Brewers had dropped eight of their previous 13 games and had scored only 11 runs in the last five. The Indians won the first game as Ed Whitson and Dan Spillner combined on a four-hitter and Rick Manning rapped a two-run double. Jim Slaton came out of the bullpen to start the second game for Milwaukee and scatter seven hits over seven innings.

Angels 9, Mariners 4

Fred Lynn drove in four runs with a single and double, and Doug DeCinces slammed a three-run homer California maintained its one-game lead over Kansas City in the West Division. The Angels scored five runs in the first inning against Rich Bordi, making his first major league start, on consecutive singles by Rob Wilfong, Reggie Jackson, Don Baylor and Lynn and DeCinces' 15th homer. Lynn rapped a three-run double in the second.

Rangers 4, Yankees 2

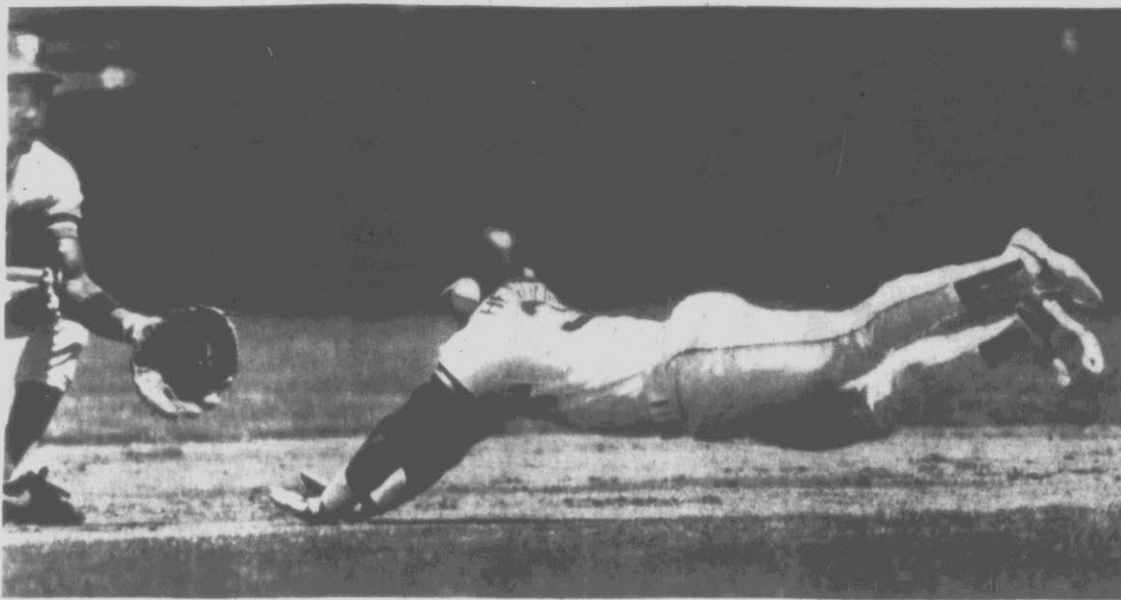

Rookie Dave Hosteller drove in all the Texas runs with a solo homer in the fourth inning and a tie-breaking three-run shot in the sixth while Rick Honeycutt and Jon Matlack held the Yankees to nine hits. Matlack, demoted to the bullpen just after the All-Star break, earned his first save in 10 relief appearances although he was nicked for a run in the ninth before retiring Willie Randolph on a fly ball with the bases loaded.

Tigers 8, Blue Jays 5

Lou Whitaker highlighted a 17-hit attack with a three-run homer and Lance Parrish hit a solo shot as Detroit snapped a four-game losing streak. Winning pitcher Jack Morris allowed 10 hits in 82-3 innings, including solo homers by Hosken Powell, Ernie Whitt and Willie Upshaw. Morris has yielded 25 home runs this season.

Twins 8, A's 7

Home runs by Tom Brunansky and Gary Ward in the seventh inning and Gary Gaetti in the ninth helped Minnesota end a five-game losing streak. Brunansky's two-run homer and Ward's solo shot came off Dave Beard after the A's scored four times in the sixth for a 4-3 lead.

Gymnast Wins 6 Medals, Leaves Two With Long-Unseen Kinfolk

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Gymnast Mario McCutcheon won six medals in the fourth National Sports Festival and left two of them with a brother and sister he had not seen in 14 years.

"Just seeing them was a special thing to me," said McCutcheon, who declined to discuss the circumstances that led to his living in New York and his brother (Sean, now 18) and sister (Vita, now 20) moving to Indianapolis.

McCutcheon, 25, finished third in Thursday's all-around competition and the assistant coach at Southern Connecticut State also received a medal for helping his team finish third.

"I gave one of the medals to my brother and another to my sister," said McCutcheon, explaining that the distance between New York and Indianapolis helped produce the lengthy separation.

"The crowd here has been wonderful. I'm happy with the enthusiasm it displayed. That and the reunion made this trip memorable."

For other reasons, it was special to many of the some 3,000 coaches, athletes and officials involved in the most successful festival in history.

Almost every sport was witnessed by near-capacity crowds. Local organizers announced Saturday the 11-day event would give them a small profit while the sponsoring U.S. Olympic Committee was projecting a deficit of between $100,000-$200,000.

"In my judgement it was a perfect National Sports Festival," said F. Don Miller, the USOC's executive director. "History will report that the National Sports Festival became the premier sports activity in our country here in Indianapolis."

Final financial figures for the 33-sport mini-Olympics, featuring both winter and summer Olympic events, were not immediately available. But, Ted Boehm, the head of the local organizing effort, announced ticket sales had topped the $1 million mark — more than double the record set last year when ticket sales of $450,000 were reported in Syracuse, N.Y.

"The feedback we've gotten from all corners of our community is that this event is a stupendous success," said Boehm. "It's difficult to know how to measure an event like the National Sports Festival. You can look at it from financial point of view, in those terms we're prepared to claim victory."

Boehm praised the USOC's idea of bringing Olympic prospects together for Festival-type competition in non-Olympic years.

"The purpose of this event was to make as large a splash as we could with national governing bodies, the Olympic committee, the sports press, to demonstrate that Indianapolis has first-class facilities and first-class systems for staging major national and international events," said Boehm. Comments by athletes and other officials indicate the city — and its new facilities costing some $30 million — achieved that goal.

Miller said he hoped the city would apply for the Pan American Games in 1991, and Ed Stietz, president of the Amateur Basketball Association of the USA, proposed that Indianapolis bid for the World Basketball Championships, which have never been held in this country.

Upcoming national swimming and diving competition is already scheduled in the new $21.5 million Indiana University Natatorium and The Athletics Congress has scheduled its 1983 national championships for the new $5.9 million Indiana University Track and Field Stadium.

In addition, officials of the U.S. Gymnastics Federation have said it will recommend bringing major events to this city of some 700,000 that is seeking to be a major center for amateur sports.

The Festival, which featured team and individual competition at 19 sites, produced major rewriting of meet records in many sports as the Olympic hopefuls continued preparation for 1984.

Among the memorable moments of the Festival was the performance of platform diver Bruce Kimball qualifying for the U.S. team in the world championships by placing second only months after narrowly escaping death in an automobile accident.

The medal presentation brought tears to the eyes of Greg Louganis, who swept the platform and springboard diving events.

"Bruce won today," said Louganis that day after calling Kimball to the winner's spot on the victory platform to share the cheers of the crowd.

In swimming, a conflict with the world championships in Ecuador prevented most of the nation's best performers from competing in the Festival. But, those that came broke 29 of 34 existing meet records despite being fatigued from a week of intense qualifying competition for the trip to Ecuador.

Track and field was another sport in this year's Festival in which current world-class athletes were on hand. Carl Lewis, ranked No.1 in the world in the long jump and the 100-meter dash, recorded the second-best long jump in history with a 28-foot, 9-inch effort.

Chargers Give Drug-Testing Program Tryout

By The Associated Press

San Diego Chargers' owner Gene Klein, saying he wants "get rid of this monkey," announced that a controversial drug-testing program has been initiated for his team.

Klein's decision runs contrary to the National Football League Players Association stand on the issue. The union has warned NFL team doctors that they face malpractice suits if testing is done without the players' written consent.

Before Sunday's announcement, Klein said he met with team-player representatives Billy Shields and Doug Wilkerson and received a "positive reaction."

Wilkerson said the screenings, which will be set by management, would be "beneficial, and I'm for anything that will help our ballclub. Some of the guys I've talked to have no qualms."

Ed Garvey, the executive director of the players union, told The Associated Press that the drug testing is "clearly illegal" and said the NFLPA would seek an injunction today to have it terminated as an unfair labor practice.

The Chargers' announcement came on the same day the Miami Herald reported that former NFL player Don Reese, who was sentenced to one year in jail and five years probation on a drug-trafficking charge in 1977, disclosed details of drug use to a New Orleans team official in November 1980.

The secret session took place with Saints' vice president Fred Williams, the newspaper said. Williams could not be reached for comment at the team's training camp in Vero Beach, Fla.

Elsewhere in training camps Sunday, New York Giants' defensive end Gary Jeter said he can't get his mind on the game.

The six-year veteran walked off the practice field near the team's Pace University training camp site Sunday, showered, dressed and turned in his playbook and dormitory key.

"I don't want to be a burden on the team," said Jeter, the Giants' No.1 draft pick in 1977. "When I work out those things that I have to work out, I'll make a decision."

He wouldn't say why he left camp.

"I don't have a contract problem. I don't have a drug problem," Jeter said. "The coaching staff and players have been great to me and as far as the owners, Wellington and Tim (Mara) — everything has been super."

"It's something I have to make a decision on. I'm just relaxing right now."

The Cleveland Browns announced that eight players have been placed on waivers, bringing their roster to 82, while the Philadelphia Eagles released two rookies to bring their roster to 106.

All-pro offensive guard John Hannah of the New England Patriots broke a small bone in his right hand during practice at Bryant College in Smithfield, R.I. Team physicians will examine the hand today at the Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston.

The Patriots announced that former Atlanta wide receiver Wallace Francis, a 10-year veteran, is at a religious retreat in South Carolina and has not been contacted by the league. As a vested veteran, he can report to the Patriots or become a free agent once he has been contacted by the NFL office.

The Chargers announced that former all-pro defensive tackle Louie Kelcher, a seven-year veteran, has retired.

Three veteran Atlanta Falcons didn't report to camp in Suwanee, Ga. Wide receiver Alfred Jenkins and running back William Andrews are unhappy with contracts offers while defensive end Don Smith sent word that he was en route from his Florida home.

An advertisement from the March 5, 1937 edition of THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Taft Furniture Company was established by Edmund Hoover Taft, Sr., in 1897 and first did business in the building on Evans Street Mall that now houses Coffman's Men's Wear, according to Bill Taft, Jr., and his cousin Joe Taft, Jr., present managers of the family business located at the corner of Dickinson Avenue and Evans Street in Greenville.

Bill and Joe took over the operation of the store, in 1958 and 1961 respectfully, when their fathers retired from the business after 30-plus years in the business each.

In 1917, the business moved to a storefront on Dickinson Avenue and went through two more expansions, in 1967 and the last one in 1979.

"The Downtown Urban Redevelopment Commission bought up the land next to us to buy the land from them and allowed for our own expansion."

During the early part of the century, like a lot of other businesses, Taft's used wagons drawn by work horses to make deliveries.

"The stable was located about where our warehouse is now," said Bill, "right between the store and Sheppard Library. As a matter-of-fact, when we were laying the foundation for the warehouse, the construction crews dug up several old horseshoes."

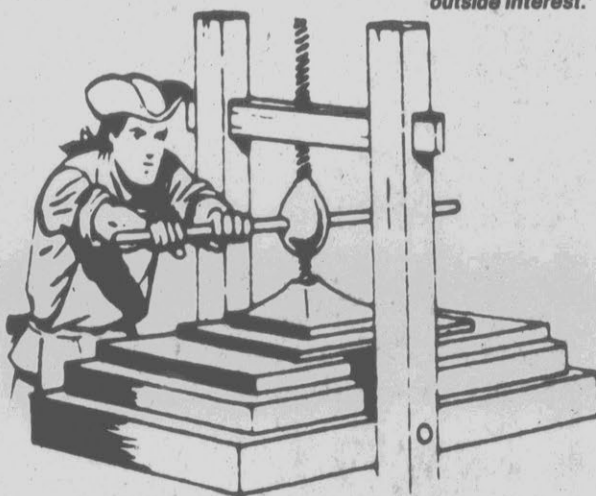

"Of course, horse-drawn wagons went out about the same time as customers making 50-cents payments a week on a three-piece bedroom suite that cost $39.95."

The senior Tafts, Joe and Bill, remember also shipping out-of-town deliveries via the Tar River.

"We would load the merchandise on a freight steamer," said Joe Taft, Sr. "This is how we were able to serve our customers in areas like Washington. Of course, if water travel was unavailable there was always the railroad."

Bill Taft, Sr., feels "Taft Furniture has grown with the times, just as THE DAILY REFLECTOR has. We are so happy that we have a local paper. The employees seem to really be interested in and care about their customers and clients more than if the paper was run by an outside interest."

Baker as HIS Day in Atlanta With 2 Home Runs

By The Associated Press

While Hank Aaron was having his day in Cooperstown, N.Y., Dusty Baker was having his in Atlanta.

"That's sort of my tribute to him on the day he was inducted into the Hall of Fame," Baker said after hitting two home runs in Los Angeles' old stomping ground at Atlanta Stadium to lead the Los Angeles Dodgers to a 9-4 victory over the Atlanta Braves Sunday.

Ironically, Baker's game-winning blast in the seventh inning almost landed on a sign commemorating the spot where Aaron hit his 715th homer in 1974 to break Babe Ruth's record.

"I wasn't trying to hit a home run, but it's funny I almost hit his sign," Baker said. "Hank's a close friend and he was like my father figure when I was with the Braves."

The Dodger victory, by the way, completed a four-game sweep of the Braves and put Los Angeles within shooting range of the National League West leader, 6½ games behind in third place. It left San Diego six games back in second after the Padres beat Cincinnati 8-6.

"I liked what I saw in the four games here, the hustle, the togetherness," said Dodger Manager Tom Lasorda.

Asked if he believed the Braves might now be hearing footsteps, Lasorda replied, "Let's hope so. I think they feel a little bit different now, but we have a slogan: 'What you did yesterday don't mean a thing today.'"

Baker's seventh-inning shot off Carlos Diaz, 2-1, gave the Dodgers a 5-4 lead and Pedro Guerrero immediately followed with another homer to provide Los Angeles with a two-run cushion.

Baker came back with his second homer of the game and his 20th of the season in the eighth, a two-run shot that followed Ken Landreux's RBI single. The victory went to Dave Stewart, 6-6, who worked the final four innings without yielding a run.

Padres 8, Reds 6

Terry Kennedy cracked three hits and Sixto Lezcano doubled home two runs, highlighting an early scoring spree that carried San Diego over Cincinnati. The Padres scored seven runs in the first three innings off Charlie Leibrandt, 3-7, and coasted to their third straight victory.

John Curtis, 7-6, pitched 51-3 innings for the victory and Luis DeLeon posted his 10th save for the Padres after coming into the game with a no-out, bases-loaded situation in the ninth and giving up three runs, two on an error by third baseman Luis Salazar.

"We're bouncing back," said San Diego Manager Dick Williams, whose team won its third straight game after losing four in a row at Atlanta. "We played all right — a little ragged at the end, but good enough."

Expos 5, Cardinals 4

Al Oliver capped a three-run rally in the seventh inning with a run-scoring single as Montreal came from behind to beat St. Louis.

The Expos trailed 4-2, but tied it on a two-run triple by Jerry White. One out later, Oliver delivered his big single off reliever Jeff Lahti, 2-2.

The Cardinals had gone ahead 4-2 in the sixth on Ozzie Smith's sacrifice fly.

Reliever Jeff Reardon, 4-1, earned the victory but needed help from Woodie Fryman, who pitched the final 12-3 innings for his seventh save before a crowd of 51,353. The four-game series in Montreal drew 190,472, a record for Olympic Stadium.

"No question, it was one of my bigger RBIs this season," said Oliver, who has knocked in 69 runs. "It feels great to take three of four from the Cardinals because obviously they're one of the teams we have to beat."

Cubs 7, Phillies 2

Leon Durham's two-run homer highlighted a three-run first and Chicago went on to beat Philadelphia and snap an eight-game losing streak before a crowd of 57,652 at Veterans Stadium.

Chicago starter Dickie Noles, 7-9, worked 72-3 innings and, with the help of reliever Lee Smith, ended Philadelphia's four-game winning streak. Smith relieved in the eighth after Philadelphia scored twice.

The victory was Noles' first over the Phillies in two starts since being traded by Philadelphia to Chicago last December.

Durham's homer off Dick Ruthven, 8-9, provided the Phillies with a 3-0 lead in the first and gave the Cubs all the runs they actually needed.

Pirates 4, Mets 3

Bill Madlock's tie-breaking home run with two out in the 10th inning lifted Pittsburgh over New York.

Madlock's 11th homer of the season came off reliever Terry Leach, 1-1, and made a winner of Kent Tekulve, 7-5, who pitched 11-3 innings. Rod Scurry got the last two outs for the Pirates, gaining his eighth save.

The Pirates had tied the score 3-3 with two runs in the seventh. One run scored on Dale Berra's second double of the game and another on an RBI single by pinch-hitter Willie Stargell.

Giants 4, Astros 2

Jack Clark hit his 20th home run of the season, a two-run shot in the 10th inning, to lift San Francisco over Houston.

Joe Morgan drew a walk from loser Frank LaCorte, 0-4, to lead off the 10th. Milt May sacrificed Morgan to third and Clark followed with his homer, making a winner of Greg Minton, 7-4.

Houston's Nolan Ryan allowed five hits, walked four and struck out six in nine innings to move within six strikeouts of second-place Gaylord Perry on the all-time list. Ryan has 3,407 strikeouts.

it helped get us the medical school. "The rest of the schools were here a long time before we were, and they've got a broader base than we have. But we don't need to think of ourselves as the poor little kid trying to get into their league. There's a whole world out there outside the ACC and we can be entertaining to the fans, too. We just have to cultivate this image."

Howell feels, too, that the ECU base is growing. "They have the alumni who give them a lot of support. We're getting there. We'll have this sort of support one of these days. We're graduating people who are becoming successful, and they'll be our base of support in the future."

He was named MVP of the National League in 1961 with 37 homers and 124 RBI for Cincinnati, then was named MVP in the American League in 1966 with 49 homers and 122 RBI for Baltimore, becoming the only man to earn the honor in both leagues.

Jackson, 78, was one of the best shortstops of his era, revered especially for his powerful throwing arm and vast range. Jackson also had a career batting average of .291, including a .339 average in 1930.

Chandler became the oldest man inducted into the Hall at age 83. He succeeded baseball's first commissioner, Kenesaw Mountain Landis, after Landis' death in 1944 and served six years. He fought for the desegregation of baseball and championed Brooklyn Dodgers General Manager Branch Rickey's signing of Jackie Robinson. Chandler also helped institute the players pension and was voted out of office in 1951 by owners who felt he sided too staunchly with the players.

"I saw Grover Cleveland Alexander and Dazzy Vance playing for the House of David to get enough money to live on," Chandler said in explaining his fight for a pension. "It just wasn't right."

Vin Scully, veteran Los Angeles Dodgers broadcaster, won the Ford C. Frick Award for baseball announcers. Bob Addie, Washington Times Herald and Post baseball writer for 30 years before his death last year, and Allen Lewis, veteran Philadelphia Inquirer sports writer, were named recipients of the J.G. Taylor Spink Award, named in honor of the late publisher of The Sporting News and given for baseball writing.

'Unconscious' Daniel Wins Classic

DENVER (AP) — Rifling her approach shots close to the pin and rapping home 10 birdie putts, Beth Daniel appeared "unconscious" — the term golfers apply to one who plays both effortlessly and flawlessly.

But after her 2-stroke victory Sunday in the $200,000 Columbia Savings LPGA Classic, Daniel made it clear it wasn't just a Sunday stroll for her.

She talked of a 3½-foot downhill putt for bogey on the 17th hole as the "biggest putt of the tournament."

Daniel, en route to a sizzling 8-under-par 64 in the final round and a $30,000 payoff, insisted the outcome might have hinged on 17.

Leading Patty Sheehan by 3 shots, Daniel knocked her drive into a fairway bunker on the par-4 17th. Blocked by a tree on her second shot, she attempted to hook the ball and wound up on a bare spot of the green. Her chip shot was only adequate, her first putt stopped 3½ feet away, and she was in jeopardy of a double bogey and a possible 2-shot swing because Sheehan managed a par.

"If I missed, there would have been only a 1-shot difference, and anything can happen on 18," said Daniel.

The New Kid On 'One Day At A Time' Knows The Adult World

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Growing up is never easy, and doing it in public, on television, makes it even harder. Glenn Scarpelli, the 16-year-old actor in CBS' "One Day at a Time," says not to worry about him.

"Since I was 8, I've been living in the adult world," he says. "I've grown up a little quicker. I've seen heartaches. I've seen people fired. I know I'll have to be strong. But my values on kid stuff haven't changed."

Scarpelli is Alex Handris, the recently adopted member of Ann Romano's family on the long-running CBS comedy on Sunday nights. "We're a lot alike, but I don't get into as much trouble as he does."

Scarpelli recognizes that the high-profile entertainment business has many pitfalls. Some have dogged the young actresses on "One Day at a Time." Mackenzie Phillips had a drug problem, and the tabloid press has been reporting that Valerie Bertinelli's marriage to rock star Ed Van Halen is rocky.

"I'm very much against drugs," says Scarpelli. "My life is in shape. It may sound corny, but I get my high from performing. Drugs aren't just in this business. I know kids from my grammar school who are into drugs. But we showbiz types have a responsibility. We have to be role models."

Scarpelli recognizes that even if he keeps his nose clean, the check-out counter publications still might keep him in headlines. "I figure it will happen, and I won't love it. It's not fair, but I'll cope with it."

Scarpelli sounds like a kid with his career in the clouds but with his feet on the ground. He grew up on New York's Staten Island, and now divides his time between his home here and the condominium he purchased for his mother and father in California.

Since March, when "One Day at a Time" finished last season's production, Scarpelli has played the part of an adolescent enjoying his hometown. He's been to movies, Yankee games and some shows, including "American Buffalo," starring an old colleague.

"Al Pacino and I keep in touch. He's always telling me to come back to the theater," says Scarpelli, who was the Duke of York when Pacino starred in "Richard III." "I don't think he watches much TV. I told him I want to go back to the theater, but I don't want to do just Broadway."

Scarpelli started doing commercials, at the age of 8, because he was a ham. A year later, director Arthur Penn cast him as Golda Meir's son in the Broadway production of "Golda," starring Anne Bancroft.

"I love what I'm doing," he says. "At least I know what I want to be when I grow up."

College is a possibility — if his career falters — and, like many child actors, he's going to school on the set. Child labor laws require him to take three hours of school, but no more than four hours a day of work.

"Valerie says I should appreciate being young. She says once you're 18, they'll work you forever."

Scarpelli joined the show in 1980 because it needed more adolescent appeal against NBC's competing "CHiPs." Like Scarpelli, the Alex character is growing up fast.

In one show, Schneider (Pat Harrington) was explaining, with major discomfort, a scientific process. "It sounds like artificial insemination," Alex said quite correctly.

In another episode dealing with gun control, Alex was supposed to be twirling a gun. "I know the character better than anybody, and I know Alex wouldn't think that was cool. I told the writers, and they took it out."

Singer Johnny Paycheck Is Arrested In Raleigh

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Johnny Paycheck, a country music singer known for his rendition of the song "Take This Job and Shove It," was arrested in Raleigh early Sunday for not paying a $26,000 judgment for failing to appear at a 1979 concert.

Paycheck, 42, was released after a bail bondsman agreed to guarantee payment of the civil judgment plus $6,219 in interest and court costs if the singer later is declared in default of the judgment.

Wake County Superior Court Judge Edwin Preston said he conducted a rare hearing at 3 a.m. Sunday after Paycheck had been picked up by the Wake County sheriff's deputies following a performance Saturday night at Music City.

Preston said the attorney seeking to collect the money, Mark C. Kirby of Raleigh, used an 1868 North Carolina law allowing the arrest of people who owe judgments if there is reason to believe they plan to leave the state without paying.

Paycheck's arrest was the result of a flurry of legal maneuvers aimed at collecting damages resulting from Paycheck's failure to appear at the 1979 concert in Greensboro.

John Stackhouse of Goldsboro had arranged the concert to benefit the North Carolina Burn Center. Kirby said Stackhouse lost $26,605 out-of-pocket expenses due to Paycheck's failure to show.

Kirby said Stackhouse filed suit against Paycheck in Wayne County Superior Court and obtained a default judgment last December.

Previous efforts to collect the money were unsuccessful, Kirby said, because Paycheck never responded to legal inquiries about property or money that could be applied to the judgment.

Kirby said he previously served those inquiries on Paycheck during another Paycheck appearance in North Carolina. No response was received in the 30-day limit, and Kirby then came up with his legal maneuver after learning that Paycheck was appearing in Raleigh.

During Sunday's hearing, Preston said Paycheck reported he was planning to travel to his home in Florida and was not planning to apply the payment from his Raleigh appearance toward the judgment.

Perkins Fears Extermination

NEW YORK (AP) — With 272 episodes of the TV series "Wild Kingdom" under his belt, Marlin Perkins still isn't worried about running out of animal subjects.

The narrator and star of the series says he and his producer drew up a list of 300 ideas for the show. "They stay on the list until they get filmed," said Perkins, 77, interviewed in the current edition of People magazine.

Perkins spends half the year away from his St. Louis home, on the road and filming shows.

He said he's appalled by negligent extermination of wildlife, although he has no objections to hunting in general.

"We don't have a moral right to eliminate any species, no matter what happens," he said, "because we don't know how they fit into that little bio-ecological area where they live. Some can be enormously beneficial to mankind."

David Brenner A 'Godfather'

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Comedian David Brenner is the proud godfather of a baby bird born to a pair of rare saffron toucans at the Philadelphia Zoo.

"David," the father, and "Brenner," the mother, were donated to the zoo by local entrepreneur Frank Palumbo in tribute to the Philadelphia comedian's prominent nose. The birds are noted for their canoe-shaped beaks.

The baby bird, hatched June 23 and first appearing outside its nest last week, is the second born in captivity anywhere in the world, according to zoo officials.

Brenner ordered the bird named "Kinky," his nickname as a youth in Philadelphia. "As soon as Kinky is 16 years old, I personally will foot the bill for a nose job," he joked.

OUT OF CONTROL NEW DELHI, India (AP) — An Indian offshore drilling rig in the Arabian sea was burning out of control 48 hours after a massive blowout of gas and oil touched off a fire.

Useful Drug To Treat Asthma

The United States has finally caught up with Europe in the treatment of bronchial asthma, an article in the Southern Medical Journal asserts.

In 1974 the Journal reported the new drug, salbutamol, was useful in the treatment of asthma. The drug had been investigated by a group of physicians in New Delhi, India, and they reported that a single oral dose produced more relaxation of the bronchial tubes than did a placebo given for comparison in a double-blind study.

In 1981 the United States Food and Drug Administration approved the same drug, called albuterol in this country, for use as an inhaler and now, in 1982, has approved it in tablet form. Both are prescription medications.

Salbutamol has been widely used throughout the world, in some countries for over a decade, for the treatment of bronchial asthma. It is the most widely prescribed bronchodilator in Europe.

Black Hawk's War

On this date 150 years ago the Mississippi flowed red with blood. The Battle of Bad Axe was the culmination of the "Black Hawk War" — which lasted only 15 months and was more like a hunt than a war. After escaping their reservation, Black Hawk's band of Sac Indians was pursued by white troops through much of Illinois and Wisconsin. Finally trapped at the Mississippi near LaCrosse, the Indians were not allowed to surrender. Hundreds of warriors, women and children were killed as they tried to escape across the river. Two of the minor figures in this tragic war were destined to play larger roles in a much greater tragedy years later — Lt. Jefferson Davis and Pvt. Abraham Lincoln.

DO YOU KNOW — What famous Indian fighter was President in 1832?
FRIDAY'S ANSWER — "Melanin" is a dark pigment in skin which blocks ultraviolet rays.

Coast Guard Saves Ketch

OREGON INLET, N.C. (AP) — A disabled sailboat with two men aboard was towed through 80 miles of stormy seas to Oregon Inlet Sunday after almost sinking, the Coast Guard reported.

The 30-foot Osprey reported about 6 p.m., where Richard Hendrickson, 39, of Charleston, S.C., and his father, Hardin Hendrickson, 71, were reported in good condition.

A handful of viewers have reported the kits led to their cancer being diagnosed in Los Angeles.

Jeff Erdel, a spokesman in New York for the CBS-owned stations division, said the tests saved "dozens of people" and were distributed in New York and Chicago with the help of local cancer-fighting organizations. The stations made no profit on the tests, he said.

"We note that the (newspaper) story does not question our basic journalistic accuracy, nor does it suggest that this medical test is worthless," Erdel said.

The tests require a person to dab small amounts of feces on a test slide and send the completed kit to a laboratory for analysis. The tests determine if there is hidden blood in the stool, which could indicate the presence of cancer.

But experts say the results can be misleading, because such factors as eating a rare steak or having a nosebleed can cause a positive result, while a negative result doesn't necessarily mean a person is free from rectal or colon cancer.

Dr. Robert V.P. Hutter, president of the American Cancer Society, said both his group and the federal National Cancer Institute have recommended against using hidden blood tests for mass cancer screening.

"It is especially dangerous for television to involve itself only superficially in heart disease and cancer-related programming," said Dr. Leonard Penninger, a vice president of the American Medical Association in Chicago.

However, Bob Reid, a KNXT news executive producer, said, "If this test saves just one life, it's worth the effort."

WCBS sold 60,000 kits, WBBM 160,000 in two separate cancer series, and KNXT 55,000. The Times said more than 200,000 of the kits have been distributed free by drugstore chains in Florida, as part of promotions by TV stations in Tampa and Miami.

The latest report from the Federal Home Loan Bank Board said the June excess in withdrawals over deposits compared with an excess of $302 million in May and $4.6 billion in April.

A year earlier, net withdrawals for June were a record $5.8 billion, the board said in the report issued over the weekend.

VEHICLES COLLIDE Cars driven by Catherine Rhea-Darby of 1806 East 6th St., and Todd Sheldon Levey of Shady Knoll Trailer Park, collided about 12:30 a.m. Saturday at the intersection of First and Elm Streets.

Police estimated damage from the collision at $2,000 to each of the two cars.

Probe Sales Of Kits For Cancer Test

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A spokesman for three CBS-owned television stations under scrutiny for selling "cancer tests" to 275,000 viewers says the kits saved the lives of "dozens of people."

The Los Angeles Times reported Sunday that the three stations that sold the kits are being investigated for a possible technical violation by the federal Food and Drug Administration.

The newspaper said the inquiry focuses on whether the tests were relabeled illegally as "cancer tests." It is unlawful to sell medical items and characterize them as suitable for a purpose not authorized by the FDA.

The FDA says it hasn't authorized the tests as cancer-screening agents, and therefore labeling them as such would be illegal, the newspaper said. If a violation is found, the likely penalty would be a written admonition, the Times reported.

KNXT-TV in Los Angeles, WBBM-TV in Chicago and WCBS-TV in New York sold Hemocult II test kits for a small fee as part of news reports on rectal and colon cancer, the newspaper said.

Results from WBBM, which promoted the tests in 1978, showed 54,000 viewers asked for the kits, 14,000 returned them for processing, and 617 turned up positive. Of the 617, there were 27 who actually had cancer, the newspaper said.

Coast Guard Turning Back To Lighthouse Keepers

By JANE ANDERSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —
The Coast Guard has re-discovered the old idea of lighthouse keepers as a last resort in its effort to preserve the nation's 450 unmanned lighthouses.

To prevent the nautical landmarks from deteriorating beyond repair, the Coast Guard is asking district commanders to consider leasing them to agencies and individuals.

"The romance of the lighthouse keeper has faded as the lights have become automated, but we really have to preserve the lighthouses for our kids and their kids," said Rear Admiral Richard A. Bauman.

Bauman, chief of the Office of Navigation, said the picturesque beacons are irreplaceable landmarks important to the country's maritime history and architectural heritage.

So far, the Coast Guard has leased nine lighthouses to historical societies and other agencies, five lighthouses to states and about 14 lighthouses, mostly in New England, to individuals.

"I don't want to give anybody a false sense of hope that they may wind up living in a lighthouse just by writing to the Coast Guard," said Lt. Walter Johnson, who oversees lighthouses.

Even so, Sterling Bemis successfully persuaded the Coast Guard to lease him the spectacular nine-story Chicago Light, which has a view of the Chicago skyline and is accessible only by boat. He was married in it.

People lease the quarters as museums, youth hostels, bed-and-breakfast inns and homes. They heat the buildings, take care of the grounds, and discourage vandalism just by their presence.

"We're not looking for people to occupy all the lighthouses, and we do not employ people other than Coast Guard personnel as lighthouse keepers, but we have been encouraging district commanders to look at the possibility of leasing them," Johnson said.

When possible, the Coast Guard uses its lighthouses as barracks for its personnel, but many lighthouses are in remote places or so far offshore that living in them is impractical.

From time to time, when a Coast Guard ship that tends buoys has a lull in its schedule, the crew is assigned to tie up to a lighthouse and do major repairs. They take "before" and "after" photographs.

Among the refurbished lighthouses are Peck's Ledge Lighthouse on Long Island, Culebrita Lighthouse on the island of Culebra off Puerto Rico and Ashtabula Harbor Lighthouse in Ashtabula, Ohio.

Group Chosen For Project

Twenty-two high school classroom teachers from Educational Regions I and II have been selected as Atlantic Christian College Writing Fellows to participate in a three-week writing project at ACC being held through July 30.

The workshop will deal with techniques of the teaching of writing in the classroom for teachers K-12. Dr. Thomas G. MacLennan and Agnes MacDonald are co-directors for the project.

Similar projects are underway across the state at Pembroke State University, Wake Forest University, Winston-Salem State, UNC-Charlotte, Western Carolina University and UNC-Asheville.

A grant to underwrite the project at the five sites has been provided by the N.C. Competency Testing Commission and the Annual Testing Commission.

From Martin County are instructors Emily McCleary, Velma Smith and Linda Perry of Williamston and writer, Kay Crandall of Robersonville.

IN SGA CABINET
Terence E. Rountree has been appointed to the Student Government Association Cabinet at Elizabeth City State University.
His appointed position is business manager. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James M. Rountree of Grimesland.

The Coast Guard has always had the authority to lease lighthouses, but it's an alternative Johnson said the service has been forced to resurrect because of the increasingly shabby appearance of many lighthouses.

"I wish they could ban the selling of black spray paint within 100 miles of a white lighthouse because kids use the paint to spray their initials on the outside," Bauman said.

The Coast Guard does not make much money by leasing the lighthouses, but in 1982 it has had no money at all to spend on maintaining them, much less restoring them.

Johnson said many people who love lighthouses complain to the Coast Guard when they see one falling into disrepair.

"In every lighthouse, the light and the fog signal are in tiptop shape, but in many of them, the buildings and the tower are falling down," Bauman said.

In the leased lighthouses, the Coast Guard maintains the light and fog signal at the top of the structure.

Bauman, who has a photograph in his office of Block Island Southeast Lighthouse on Block Island, R.I., admired lighthouses at the seashore when he was a youngster in Fitchburg, Mass.

The country's most photographed lighthouse is said to be Portland Head Lighthouse on Maine's rockbound coast. Bauman said the most romantic is Minot's Lighthouse in Boston with a sequence of one, four and three flashes, symbolizing "I Love You."

The worst-looking lighthouse Bauman ever saw was a red-painted, box-like building nicknamed "Big Red" in Holland, Mich.

"You can't believe the architecture. Nobody would want to keep it except a lighthouse lover. We were tickled when the city of Holland was willing to take it over. We put a roof on it, painted it bright red and I handed over the key to the light," Bauman said.
