

Israeli Hammer PLO Enclave

By The Associated Press

Israeli tanks and armored troops steamrolled into west Beirut today, other units battled toward the PLO stronghold from the north and south, and artillery and gunboats hammered Yasser Arafat's guerrilla enclave from all sides in furious barrages that continued after 15 hours.

At least 50 people were killed and 730 wounded in the attack and the toll was expected to rise sharply, initial police reports cited by Lebanon's state radio said. The broadcast said most of the victims were civilians.

Israel said its forces suffered 20 soldiers wounded, two seriously, before the attack, and that as a result of the assault its armor captured a strip 60 yards deep and 600 yards long on a north-south axis along the Green Line dividing guerrilla-held west Beirut from Christian-controlled east Beirut.

Arafat called on every able Palestinian to take up arms and defend west Beirut, and President Elias Sarkis appealed to President Reagan to stop the fighting and protested "what is happening in Beirut where innocent civilians are being subjected to mass killing and destruction."

Reagan's top advisers met in Washington to discuss the assault, which Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said "makes virtually impossible the conduct of diplomatic efforts. We have expressed our profound concern to the government of Israel..."

The Israeli military command said it had not launched "an all-out attempt at conquering the city" and the attacks were to show Israel "will not play the game by PLO-set rules."

It appeared the Israeli thrust was concentrated on the no man's land between the city's Moslem and Christian sectors, the seaport on the northern edge of the Palestine Liberation Organization redoubt in west Beirut, and PLO entrenchments southwest of the city.

The Israeli attack, which began about midnight (6 p.m. EDT) and shattered the ninth cease-fire in two months of fighting, was covered by intense shelling.

"Hundreds of shells burst within yards of each other and within seconds, the entire southern belt of west Beirut was shrouded in smoke and flames," Associated Press correspondent Terry Anderson said of one 10-second Israeli barrage.

Israeli guns were firing heavily into the crowded civilian district around Hamra Street, the commercial heart of the Moslem sector, for the first time since the siege began, correspondents reported.

PLO gunners and rocket teams fired back into Christian neighborhoods in east Beirut and into the hillside suburbs where Israeli forces are concentrated, witnesses said.

An Israeli officer, who was authorized to speak to reporters in east Beirut, said at midday that no air strikes had been called in for fear of hitting Israeli soldiers.

ASSAULT — Israeli tanks punched into the Palestinian enclave of west Beirut early today at the Museum crossing, one of three major crossing points of the Green Line. Israelis also moved toward west Beirut from the south and the international airport. (AP Laserphoto Map)

Pitt School Board Says Cotten Transfer Is Firm

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

Russ Cotten will remain as principal of Wellcome Middle School, members of the Pitt County Board of Education say, despite a plea by Farmville residents that he be returned as head administrator of Farmville Central High School.

Cotton was transferred to Wellcome Middle recently after a year's leave of absence from his duties as principal of Farmville Central. Citing privileged, non-public information in Cotton's personnel file, the board refused to divulge a motive for the principal's transfer.

Representatives of the Farmville school district confronted board members during a meeting Tuesday with a protest of Cotton's removal and a petition with 350 signatures requesting they reconsider the transfer.

"He (Cotton) is the best educator in the Farmville school system and he is misplaced academically in a middle school," said Lurline Wheelless, spokesperson for the group and a retired teacher who taught under Cotton. "We haven't been given a reason for his removal and we think that unless we are, he should be reinstated."

"Not one teacher who worked with him (Cotton) objected to having him return," said JoeAnne Jones, a teacher at the high school who said she had contacted "each teacher there who taught under Cotton's administration."

After an executive session, the board announced that Cotton would stay at Wellcome. "His skills and abilities may be best utilized at Wellcome Middle," said Dr. Eddie West, superintendent of Pitt County schools.

In a status report on the Ayden Middle School project, Associate Superintendent Tom Craft noted that the application for the $370,000 loan from the North Carolina Literary Fund has been submitted and that an answer is anticipated by Aug. 12.

The loan, applied for jointly by the county and the county school system, must be paid back by the county over a 10-year period at 4 percent interest.

If the application is approved, Craft said, bids for the project could be out within 10 days after notification.

"We hope to be in a position to rebid the project shortly after Aug. 12," said Dr. West.

In other business: •Jim Black was voted vice chairman of the board, replacing Bill McLawhorn who left the board last month.

•Col. Carl Grantham, director of D.H. Conley's ROTC program, received the Bonnie K. Langston Cultural Arts Award, given annually to the non-cultural arts faculty member that makes the largest contribution to the cultural arts.

Revelations In Pitt Census

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County has a surplus of 5,090 more females than males, more Asian Indians than American Indians are county residents, and whites outnumber blacks almost two to one — 58,587 whites and 30,966 blacks.

These are among the revelations contained in the Pitt County 1980 census — Characteristics of Population by Age and Sex, a fact sheet recently released by the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce.

The census report shows Pitt gradually inching up to the 100,000 population mark, with a county population total of 90,146 — 47,618 females and 42,528 males.

The median age for all county residents in 1980 was 26.1 years, with 15,130 county residents, or 16.78 percent, being 55 years old and older. More than half a thousand, (534) have passed the 85 years longevity mark.

Teen-agers in Pitt from ages 14 through 19 account for a substantial segment of the population — numbering 11,947 or 13.25 percent of the total. (13 year olds could not be included in the tabulation as they are listed in the 10 to 13 years figure grouping.)

On the young side, children in 1980 from infants through age 13 accounted for nearly one-fifth of the total population, 17,698 people, 19.63 percent of the total head count.

In other age group blocks, the statistics show: •Young adults... 20 through 29 years of age, 22,024, and •Adults between the ages of 30 and 54, 23,447.

Of Pitt County's population falling into small nationality groups, 94 are of Asian Indian origin, 86 are American Indian and 74 are Chinese.

Other nationality groups represented are: Korean, 44; Japanese, 36; Vietnamese, 33; Filipino, 18; Hawaiian, 11; Guamanian, 4; Aleut, 3; and Eskimo, 1.

A miscellaneous category of other races and nationalities, not more specifically defined, includes a total of 189 Pitt County residents.

Farmville Board Adopts Change

By CAROL TYER

FARMVILLE — Approval was given Tuesday night by Farmville Commissioners for enrollment of town employees other than law enforcement personnel in an income-tax sheltering plan within the local government employees' retirement system that would result in a 2 percent to 4 percent increase in take-home pay for each participant.

Several town employees voiced favor of this plan. Enabling legislation for the use of the plan was recently enacted by the General Assembly. Commissioners expressed the hope that the Legislature will extend the program to law enforcement officers.

The commissioners heard a request from the Southside Senior Citizens Club to take over the management and day-to-day expense of the Hospitality Hut owned by the town for use as its place of gathering. Another group has previously requested that the town allow it the use of the hut as a day care center. There was no mention of whether the two uses could

Senate Near Showdown On Budget Amendment

WASHINGTON (AP) — The fate of a proposed constitutional amendment requiring a balanced federal budget, endangered by a major Senate modification, narrowed to a few wavering votes today as the Senate neared a final showdown on the issue.

Neither supporters nor opponents of the proposal, which is actively sought by President Reagan, were able to claim victory in advance as nearly a month of debate wound to a close.

Senate leaders said the proposal requiring the government to live within its means is being jeopardized by the Senate's decision to try to impose on new restrictions on raising the ceiling on the national debt.

A split among conservative supporters of the balanced-budget amendment led to the unexpected 51-45 approval Tuesday of the proposal by Sen. William L. Armstrong, R-Colo., to require a three-fifths vote by Congress to raise the debt ceiling. A majority vote is now required.

The Armstrong proposal was a potentially fatal modification to the amendment, many balanced-budget supporters claimed.

"There's no doubt we lost some votes (for the balanced budget) because of the Armstrong amendment. There are some soft votes. There'll be some arm-twisting today," said one Republican leadership source.

Baker said the balanced-budget amendment, which requires a two-thirds vote for approval, could go either way "by just a few votes."

Democratic opponents of the overall measure said today they could count only 64 votes for or leaning in favor of the amendment — three short of the 67 needed if all 100 senators vote.

Armstrong's debt provision prevailed after Democratic opponents joined forces with Senate conservatives who are philosophically opposed to any further increases in the $1-trillion-plus national debt.

Even if the measure passes the Senate today, the modification could assure a House defeat by scaring off uncommitted members whose support for the constitutional amendment is needed, sponsors said.

"It will substantially detract (from) prospects that this will become the law of the land," Baker told the Senate on Tuesday.

Baker had fended off other efforts to modify the proposal, warning senators that any changes could be fatal to the proposed amendment.

The vote caught both backers and opponents of the amendment by surprise. Baker immediately sought a second vote to try to overturn the action, but his effort failed, 56-40.

"It's a major setback, there's no question," said Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, a balanced budget advocate.

Conservatives who have been fighting for a balanced budget amendment for 25 years "did themselves in" and played into the hands of Senate liberals by agreeing to the debt-ceiling addition, Hatch claimed. "It was just too delectable for conservatives to resist."

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., the chief opponent of the measure, said the debt-limit vote "makes it much less likely (it) will pass."

To Cranston, Armstrong's proposal was a golden opportunity to weigh down the balanced budget proposal to where it might fall of its own weight. "It wasn't planned. The situation suddenly developed..." Cranston said.

Dollar Day

The semi-annual "Dollar Day" sale sponsored by the Downtown Greenville Association will be held Thursday.

According to David Mosier, executive director of the merchants group, who said this is the 39th year the "Dollar Day" sales have been held, 60 stores in downtown Greenville will be participating.

"It's the best participation we've had in the past seven or eight years," Mosier emphasized.

"Dollar Day" is highlighted by special prices and special offering by merchants in the downtown area.

Mosier said the sale will begin at 8:30 a.m., and said "there's plenty of free parking space" in "lots convenient to the stores."

Normally, the "Dollar Day" sales are held the first Thursday in August and October of each year.

MORE HOSTS NEEDED

The Eastern North Carolina Friendship Force needs an additional 30 host families to accommodate guests from Holland Sept. 27-Oct. 10.

Exchange Director Cheryl Taft said the program is looking for families willing to share their homes for one week with one or two of the Dutch visitors. Forty-five host families in Pitt and Beaufort counties have already been assigned ambassadors, but additional host homes are needed because of the number of the Dutch visitors. Most of the 56 ambassadors are from Arnhem, Holland, our area's sister city, are single and their ages range from 19 to 77. Families may register either as residential hosts or as day hosts who accompany the visitors to planned activities during the day.

For more information, call the Friendship Force office, Greenville, 752-1784, between 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. Washington area residents may contact the Beaufort County Chamber of Commerce.

Gas Leak Gets Prompt Action

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Quite a few residents of Greenville wondered what was going on last Friday when a contingent of men, some with hard hats, converged at a point in the intersection of Reade and Cotanche streets and blocked off a small area.

"Our being there was to investigate a leakage detected in the gas main at that point," said William F. (Bill) Weston, superintendent of the gas department of the Greenville Utilities.

"There was no real danger involved, but it was a situation that called for immediate corrective action."

Each year during the warmer months, Weston explained, "our crews make annual surveys of the 43 miles of gas mains in the city. We also survey about 800 residential users in Greenville. Residential users are surveyed individually once every four years."

"In our surveys being undertaken at this time,"

Weston commented, "we found some trace of leakage in the electric manhole at the Cotanche-Reade intersection. Although it did not indicate a danger level by any means, we immediately put our own crew to work there and called in a private company who works with us on finding and correcting leakage points."

The problem, according to Weston, turned out to be "a four-inch gas main that had rusted on the bottom. It's an old main, one installed in the early 1900s."

The instrument used to detect possible leakage in gas mains and homes during the annual survey is, Weston remarked, "a very sensitive piece of equipment. If we find a reading of 70 percent or higher mixture of gas to air at any point, we immediately go into action to discover the cause of the leak and make necessary repairs. Any percentage of less than 70 percent is recorded for correction at a later date."

ON THE SCENE ... Workmen from the gas department of Greenville Utilities and others from a private firm converged at the intersection of Cotanche and Reade streets last Friday. A gas leakage had been detected at the site during an annual survey of the city's 43 miles of gas mains. Work has now been completed in locating and repairing a rusted main. Gas was leaking from the main, one installed at the site in the early 1900s. (Reflector Photo by Jerry Raynor)

Axing for Trouble

Ninety years ago today one of the most infamous and bloody murders in American legend occurred. On a sweltering summer morning in Fall River, Massachusetts, Andrew and Abby Borden were killed with 29 chops of a hatchet. Even before the trial, the public sang its verdict: Lizzie Borden took an axe and gave her mother forty whacks; when she saw what she had done, she gave her father forty-one." But the jury disagreed. They believed that young Lizzie was not the homicidal sort and deemed the evidence circumstantial and inconclusive. After her acquittal Lizzie lived 35 more years in Fall River. She never married and spent much of her inherited wealth on charitable causes.

DO YOU KNOW — What 19th century prohibitionist was famous for wielding an axe?

Melody Green To Continue Ministry

LINDALE, Texas (AP) — The widow of singer-evangelist Keith Green says she will publish some of her husband's recent songs and write his biography so people can grasp the "vision" of his work.

Green and 11 other people died last week in a fiery plane crash near this East Texas town, about 90 miles east of Dallas.

Melody Green, speaking with reporters Tuesday for the first time since Green and two of their children were killed, said she and other followers at the Last Days Ministries plan to carry on with her husband's work.

"I feel that through this many others will catch the vision and burden of Keith's work," Mrs. Green said. "People can't look to Keith now because he's gone. So if they ask who's going to do the work, they'll see that they will."

Mrs. Green said the non-denominational church's plans include expanding its "videotape ministries" program and building a home for unwed mothers.

The Cessna 414 carrying Green and 11 others crashed shortly after takeoff July 28 in the woods surrounding the Last Days Ministries. There were no survivors.

In 1979, Green moved the ministry from California to a 500-acre site in the rolling eastern Texas hills. The ministry concentrated on distributing Christian literature, working with drug addicts and marketing Green's records.

Since the crash, Mrs. Green said she has learned that "you can't really count on anything if your foundation is not on God."

Three Dead As Planes Collide

OSHKOSH, Wis. (AP) — Two light planes collided over Witman Field during the Experimental Aircraft Association's annual convention, killing three people, officials say.

A replica of an antique Corbin Baby Ace, carrying only the pilot, and a two-seat biplane, carrying two people, crashed Tuesday during a "fly-by," similar to a holding pattern at a crowded airport. Federal Aviation Administration spokesman Henry Ogradzinski said.

Ogradzinski said the two planes interlocked and fell from an altitude of 400 feet.

Arrest Man At Marijuana Field

CALICO — Law enforcement officers arrested a 33-year-old Greenville man Tuesday and charged him with manufacturing marijuana and felonious possession of marijuana, according to Sheriff Ralph Tyson.

He said that James Donald Pounds Jr. of 1508 Allen St., was arrested around 2:25 p.m. at a field located south on N.C. 43 near Calico where authorities confiscated 76 marijuana plants averaging about five feet tall.

Tyson, who said the seized marijuana had a street value of approximately $10,000, added that officers also confiscated a motorcycle.

Bond for Pounds was set at $10,000. Pitt County deputies, agents of the State Bureau of Investigation and Ayden police officers took part in the investigation and arrest, Tyson said.

Pilot Program Test For Tobacco Barns

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The first test of the Greenville Utilities Commission's pilot program for reducing peak electric demand for tobacco bulk barns was to be held this afternoon, according to electric department superintendent Malcolm Green.

Since the use of bulk barns occurs during the high peak months of the year, Green and members of his staff have developed a plan for testing methods of peak reduction that would lower the system's peak demand. The experimental program is being funded in part by a $40,805 grant from the N.C. Alternative Energy Corp., a $10,500 in-kind match from the GUC, and a $2,000 in-kind grant from N.C. State University.

In addition, Carolina Power & Light Co. will perform computer analysis on the magnetic tape metering system installed on the 100 bulk barns being used in the pilot program.

"The meters are in place and this will be the first shot ... the first run to get the people acclimated to it," Green said this morning.

"Probably 50 barns may come off ... and remain off for two hours," in today's test, Green said, "so we're not expecting to see a great difference in the demand." But analysis of the magnetic tape metering will tell officials exactly what impact the test has had.

The bulk barn program is similar to the GUC's "Beat the Peak" program for residential customers who have radio-controlled switches on water heaters and central air conditioning units. When demand for electricity is high, water heaters and air conditioning units can be cut off by radio signal.

The prime difference in the bulk barn program is that rather than GUC having control over the barns by radio, the 15 farmers participating in the test will be notified and they in turn will select the barns on which the electric air circulation fans are cut off.

All electric customers, Green explained, pay an "energy" charge based on the amount of electricity they actually use. Customers also pay a "demand" charge, based on the peak demand made on the system.

The "demand" charge, based on the peak system load which usually occurs during the summer months, is paid all year long, whether that amount of electricity is used again during the year or not.

By reducing the peak demand, the GUC and ultimately the rate payers save by not having to pay for electricity that is not used.

Green noted that there are some 2,500 bulk barns on the Greenville system. Statewide, there are about 41,000 bulk barns which consume about $18 million worth of power each year.

Saying each of these fans "represents around six kilowatts of demand," and suggesting that about half of them could be available for load reduction at any one time, Green noted that statewide, 123,000 kilowatts — or $6 million, based on the average wholesale cost per kilowatt — could be saved each year by cutting the barns off during times of peak demand.

"Our goal is to determine the feasibility ... to see if it will work," Green said. If the project is successful, such a program could be implemented statewide.

Panel Approves False ID Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House subcommittee, concerned about a proliferation of fake identification papers, has approved a bill that would impose criminal penalties on those who make phony birth certificates and drivers' licenses.

The crime subcommittee chaired by Rep. William Hughes, D-N.J., approved the measure unanimously on Tuesday, sending it to the full committee.

Hughes said forged identification may be responsible for as much as $10 billion in losses annually.

"We have a number of mail order houses which are promoting false identification documents. They actually blatantly advertise that if you want to start over again all you have to do is write in and we'll send you a birth certificate in whatever name you want to use," he said.

"This (bill) is an effort to stem what is a growing practice to balk the governments and consumers of billions of dollars every year," he said.

The legislation would make it a felony to produce without lawful authority any identification documents issued by the federal government as well as drivers' licenses, birth certificates and state-issued personal identification cards.

It would also be a felony to be found in possession of equipment used to make false identification cards with intent to use the equipment for that purpose.

The maximum penalty would be five years in prison and a $25,000 fine.

Hughes estimated that there are "tens of thousands" of false IDs in circulation. He said they are frequently used to enable persons apply for government benefits such as welfare checks as well as playing a role in check forgery, drug smuggling and laundering cash.

Hughes said there is no identical bill before the Senate but that he had talked recently with Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., about the possibility of introducing one. Specter and Hughes are both former prosecutors.

Stall Plan To Buy Steel Corp.

DETROIT (AP) — United Steelworkers union officials have stalled a plan to have employees buy the financially ailing McLouth Steel Corp. while an industrialist considers taking over the nation's 11th-largest steelmaker.

McLouth Chairman Milton Deaner met Tuesday with industrialist Cyrus Tang of Tang Industries. Harry Lester, director of Steelworkers District 29 said, "I think he really wants to buy the company, but I don't think he can come up with the money ... I hope he can." He said a union study on a proposed employee stock ownership plan won't be submitted unless the Tang proposal dies.

MAKE-AHEAD LASAGNE

We used an excellent new tomato sauce in one of our favorite recipes.

- 1/2 pound each sweet and hot Italian sausage
- 8-ounce package lasagne
- 3 cups plain spaghetti sauce (from a 32-ounce jar)
- 15 to 16 ounces ricotta cheese
- 1 cup grated Parmesan cheese
- 1/2 pound mozzarella cheese, sliced

Remove the casings from the sausage and cut it crosswise into thick slices. In a large hot skillet, crumble the sausage with a fork until it loses its red color and is cooked through; drain. Cook the lasagne according to package directions. Cover the bottom of a 13 1/2 by 8 3/4 by 1 3/4-inch baking dish with a little of the spaghetti sauce; layer with half the lasagne, sausage, ricotta, Parmesan and half the remaining spaghetti sauce; repeat layers; top with mozzarella. Chill overnight. Remove from refrigerator and bake at once in a preheated 375-degree oven until hot through — 40 to 50 minutes. Makes 6 servings.

CHILE EGGS

This great combination of flavors may be new to you.

- 4 large eggs
- 2 tablespoons water
- Salt to taste
- 1 tablespoon (or more) butter
- 1 tablespoon (or more) finely chopped canned green chile
- 1/4 cup grated (medium-fine) cheddar cheese

Beat the eggs with the water and salt just until foamy. In a 10-inch skillet (preferably nonstick), heat the butter and add the eggs. With a wide spatula (use plastic for a nonstick skillet), scrape the bottom of the skillet as the eggs set to allow the liquid portion to run down. When partly set, add the chile and cheese and cook as before until set as desired. Serve at once. Makes 2 servings.

Dear Abby

May-September Romance Loses Its Bloom

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I'm 26, but when I was 16, I fell in love with a married man twice my age. (I'll call him Norman.) For nine years there was never anybody else in my life but Norman.

Last year his wife divorced him so he moved in with me. The problem is I don't love him anymore. He is old and boring, and I am more mature now and want to go with men my own age.

Norman still loves me, and says he gave up his family for me and now I have to marry him. I know it was wrong for me to get involved with him in the first place, but must I pay for that mistake the rest of my life? He has done a lot for me, but I could support myself if I had to.

Oh, yes, I have a 6-year-old daughter by him, which could complicate things.

What can I do? My life is miserable. I hate to see nighttime come because I have to sleep with him, and I can't stand for him to touch me.

I don't want a lecture, I just want to know what to do.

DEAD END

DEAR DEAD: You're lucky you are able to support yourself, because that is exactly what you should do. Talk to a lawyer about your rights and Norman's. But don't continue to live with a man whose touch you can't stand.

DEAR ABBY: I don't have a problem, but Hollywood does. I want to complain about the trash they call movies today.

I am 50 years old and can still remember the wonderful movies I used to see. I am a housewife, nurse and Christian woman, and I enjoy a good movie, but I refuse to pay $4 to see a movie with four-letter words in it.

I hear the movie industry is going broke. Good! It deserves to go broke. Don't tell me the public likes to pay to get insulted.

Also, please tell your readers where to write to let the movie big shots know that filthy language is keeping a lot of decent people away from the box office.

DEAR ONE: Write to: The Motion Picture Association of America, Inc., 1600 I Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20006

DEAR ABBY: Every year, many children under age 3 are victims of "whiplash shake syndrome." It is caused by adults who shake youngsters violently, often causing permanent brain or eye damage — and even death. (A Dallas, Texas, father presently is being tried in the shaking death of his daughter. Although he didn't mean to kill her, he shook her until she actually died!)

Many people who feel it is brutal to strike a child will shake a child instead. Most doctors do not even recognize the "whiplash shake syndrome," but it has recently been identified as an insidious form of child abuse.

The bottom line, according to two neurological surgeons who have studied this new problem, is, "Don't shake your children!"

If you think there is an important message for parents here, please help spread the word.

FRANK D. IN KEENE, N.H.

DEAR FRANK: Yours is an important message, not only for parents but also for those who teach (or care for) children.

Thanks for shaking them up!

Benefits In Civic Center

The Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce unveiled plans for a $16 million 12,000-seat regional center last week.

The planning was done by J.N. Pease Associates who concluded the project is feasible.

Reid Hooper, chairman of a task force which studied the project, called it "a long-range project which will be of tremendous social and economic impact to all of eastern North Carolina."

The first question on everyone's minds, however, was where is the money to build it to come from? Of course, the money is not in sight yet. The important thing, however, is that we have begun. An indoor arena-civic center has been a dream for eastern North Carolina for many years. Now the dream has practical basis.

Construction of the civic center will be a mammoth undertaking. Yet, it is clear the benefits it can bring to eastern North Carolina. It can assure the status of the basketball program at East Carolina University. It can mean major entertainment that is not now available in this area. It can be a convention center and a site for trade shows.

The cost of the center is awesome, but there is no question that if eastern North Carolinians want it, it can be done. We should proceed with consideration of financing this exciting project.

Proving Allegations Difficult

If there's anybody out their holding their breath — awaiting sordid details on allegations of drug-use and sex scandals among members of Congress, they should relax before turning blue.

"Allegations" heard thus far are neither proof nor evidence. Further, in-house investigators haven't had time to even prepare their work. You can count on it that if there's anything to cover up, it has been done; and if the investigators do find anything more than unsubstantiated tales, it would be a surprise.

Despite private and public belittling of representatives and senators, generally speaking they are smart people — or they wouldn't be in Washington. Their aides are cut from the same cloth: sensitive to the fact that, with any indiscretion in a city where gossip spreads like wildfire, their careers are on the line.

Bad apples do get on the scene, we all know; but it is rare.

Much of what we hear is going to be told by malcontents or people thirsting for a bit of limelight. There's a lot of them in the world.

THIS AFTERNOON

A Deterioration

BY PAUL T. O'CONNOR

There's a new word popping up on the editorial pages and in political speeches these days. We're hearing a lot about this nation's rotting "infrastructure."

Infrastructure is what we used to call the public works — roads, bridges, water plants, government buildings and schools. Government planners have used the word for years but it has only recently been thrust upon the public, as the Interstate highway system has turned to potholes, as thousands of bridges have failed to meet federal safety tests and as many school buildings have deteriorated.

North Carolina isn't immune from the national infrastructure problem. As Gov. Jim Hunt said at a recent press conference, "The infrastructure is giving out." The Legislature addressed what is probably the state's largest such problem, it's 78,000 miles of state maintained roads, during the 1981 session when a 3-cent gas tax increase was approved and earmarked for the resurfacing of 2,900 miles of roads a year. Although that represents a substantial increase in maintenance, it was 700 miles shy of a goal former Gov. Dan Moore's highway study commission suggested. There are 3,000 bridges in the state that will not carry the weight of a school bus and thousands of others in need of repair — a project that is costing the state $41 million a year to correct.

School officials want a $600 million bond issue — or a penalty increase in the sales tax — to fund the construction of new schools to replace inadequate and dilapidated buildings. State government buildings have a tremendous roofing problem. The state aid for fiscal matters, says the whole infrastructure problem comes down to one question. Has the state shown too much interest in building new facilities while neglecting upkeep on older buildings? One top Department of Administration official said privately, "Maintenance, that's the first thing they cut out of the budget."

Already there is concern that the Legislature will turn away from the road maintenance program and shift more money into the construction of new roads for the 1983 fiscal year. Even in this year of high maintenance, the state is spending $40 million to pave gravel roads and thus adding more mileage to the highway department's load.

It's possible that as horror stories begin to appear in the press that the legislature will address the problem of maintaining the state's multibillion investment in the infrastructure. But politicians can't run on a platform that they fixed the roof of the Archdale Building. They want to show the folks back home that they went to Raleigh and got a new four-lane road or armory. The Legislature showed understandable indignation last year of the deteriorating condition of the state's roads.

The state property office is putting together a preventive maintenance program for the state's hospitals, prisons and office buildings. Currently, one quarter of the maintenance budget goes into preventing decay — the rest to repairing it. The property office thinks three-quarters of the budget should be spent on preventive maintenance.

Jim Newlin, a legislative

construction office wants to implement a new maintenance program to double the life expectancy of the 19 million square feet of built-up roofs on state buildings but the initial cost would run into the hundreds of millions.

While Congress is prepared to change the rules concerning supervision of the pages, no one has gotten to the real root of the problem — and that is who will supervise the legislators? It's quite clear that if you transplant 535 middle-aged congressmen and women to a big city like Washington, and give them $60,000 a year to spend, and don't oversee their leisure time, some of them are bound to get into trouble.

There are several solutions to the problem that will guarantee that these people will not be left to their own devices after work hours.

One suggestion is that Congress build male and female dormitories on the mall where they would have to live while they are in session. The dormitories would provide television, game rooms, lectures and other recreational activities to keep the congressmen's and women's minds busy during their off hours. Housemothers would be hired to run the dorms and make sure they made their beds and did their homework.

Dating would be permitted,

The latest publicity concerning rumors of congressional shenanigans with Capitol Hill pages and drugs has caused some serious soul searching in Washington. There has been an outcry for greater supervision of young pages in their off hours. Right now these 15- and 16-year-olds are more or less on their own, when they are not working, and nobody seems responsible for them. They live where they want to and do what they want, which can get them in all kinds of trouble.

While Congress is prepared to change the rules concerning supervision of the pages, no one has gotten to the real root of the problem — and that is who will supervise the legislators? It's quite clear that if you transplant 535 middle-aged congressmen and women to a big city like Washington, and give them $60,000 a year to spend, and don't oversee their leisure time, some of them are bound to get into trouble.

On weekdays all legislators would have to be in bed by 10 o'clock with lights out by 10:30, except during filibusters and special occasions such as the State of the Union Address by the President.

Those missing a bed check would have to appear in front of the House Ethics Committee, who would have the authority to hand out punishment which could be anything from forbidding them to go on "Meet the Press" for a month, to not allowing them to fly home on weekends to campaign for re-election.

Anyone caught having alcohol or pot in the dorms could lose his free mail privileges for a month. If the offense is repeated he would be suspended from Congress, until he brought a note from his constituents saying he would never do it again.

So life will not get boring in Washington, chaperoned dances in the House dining room will be held on Saturday evenings with dates from the National Organization of Women's Rights based in from the Maryland and Virginia chapters.

If we are to have congressmen and congresswomen (and there is some question whether they provide services that others couldn't do much more cheaply), we have to see that while away from home, they live in a healthy, supervised environment.

They may squawk at the restrictions in the beginning. But in the long run they'll be grateful that we kept them from all the temptations Washington dangles in front of those who make the laws of the land.

Today In History

By The Associated Press Today is Wednesday, August 4, the 216th day of 1982. There are 149 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On August 4, 1914, Britain declared war on Germany — and the United States declared its neutrality — at the outset of World War I.

On this date: In 1892, Lizzie Borden was arrested in Fall River, Mass., and charged with the hatchet murders of her father and stepmother.

In 1916, the United States bought the Danish Virgin Islands for $25 million.

In 1944, the Nazis captured 14-year-old Anne Frank and seven other Jews in hiding places in Amsterdam during World War II.

In 1971, the U.S. Apollo XV spacecraft headed back to Earth after a six-day exploratory mission to the moon.

Message From Egypt

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK WASHINGTON — The real message from Cairo, shrouded by polite terms and not put to paper, warns President Reagan that a U.S. failure to stand up to Israel will thrust the Middle East into a malignant era with the influence of Washington and its moderate Arab allies reduced to near zero.

Reagan administration officials easily recognized that warning between the lines of Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak's letter to Reagan. Delivered July 31 by Egyptian Foreign Minister Kamal Hassan Ali, the letter's precise and pointed message was that the Camp David "peace" process will end beyond hope for revival if the U.S. does not get Israel out of Lebanon. That will be no easy task, considering the mounting evidence that the Israeli government plans a long stay there.

The president and George Shultz, his so-far silent secretary of state, face these alternatives: take on the pro-Israeli political lobby in the middle of the congressional election campaign; or give Israel its head to nullify remaining U.S. influence and prestige throughout the Mideast.

Israel's freedom from U.S. restraint in its Lebanon operation has saddened Cairo and the moderate Arab world. Reagan seemed to flash another green light to Israel when he failed to react to a report from CIA Director William J. Casey last week. Casey gave the president new intelligence that Israeli civilians were taking over occupation duties from the military in Lebanon.

Other indications of Israeli intentions to stay in Lebanon considerably longer than the White House wants are piling onto the president's desk. All shipping into and out of the ports of Tyre and Sidon, Lebanese cities devastated in the Israeli invasion, is being shifted to the Israeli port of Haifa. A new macadamized highway between Israel and Lebanon is used by Israeli trucks to transport cargoes. Israel seems to be pointing toward controlling all commerce between southern Lebanon and the outside world.

A new office for El Al, Israel's state-owned airline, has just opened in Sidon. El Al is using an old PLO airfield with a new runway for monopoly service in densely populated southern Lebanon. The standard currency there has become the Israeli shekel.

These are signs of Israeli intentions to solidify economic and military control over the border regions and to prove to Arabs it can defy the U.S. without fear of punishment.

But the Egyptians see another motive: narrowing the Camp David autonomy talks to the U.S. and Israel alone. Mubarak has told the Reagan administration it is inconceivable for Egypt to negotiate with Israel on West Bank autonomy while Israeli troops remain in occupation of one square foot of Lebanon.

That makes a prolonged Israeli visit in Lebanon all the more attractive to the designers of what Prime Minister Menachem Begin calls "eretz (greater) Israel." Begin has warned Reagan face-to-face that Israel never will negotiate West Bank autonomy except under the Camp David umbrella. If Egypt refuses to join those talks in the future, Begin will charge Mubarak with sabotaging Camp David. Any Arab voice in the West Bank talks would be eliminated.

This chain of events distresses Mubarak and other pro-Arab American Arab leaders. For Mubarak, the distress goes beyond Lebanon and the Palestine problem. Without spelling it out in morbid detail, Mubarak wants Reagan to remember that Anwar Sadat was killed by Moslem fanatics who believed he had sold his Arab birthright. That was long before Lebanon. Today, U.S. refusal to expel Israel from Lebanon could give Moslem fanaticism irresistible force.

Yet, the Reagan administration has opposed Egypt's appeal to use the Beirut crisis as a lever to encourage concessions from both Israel and the PLO in hopes of forcing a Palestine evolution. As the Arab moderates see it, there can only be one reason: The U.S. cannot bring itself to confront Israel head-on, even though failure to do so threatens future domination of the region by anti-Western fanaticism.

Strength For Today

FILLED WITH POWER One often sees a heavy electromagnet possessing such tenacity that it will lift an immense weight. A wire charged with electric current provides the magnetism, and as soon as the current is turned off, the magnetism disappears.

This illustrates the significance of power and the necessity of filling our lives with that power. We should always be aware that there is an unseen world around us, and that this world is the real world of power. But there are conditions attached. Just as the electromagnet is created by the current and ceases to have its power when the current is turned off, so our lives will be filled with power when we have contact with God; when that contact is broken by us — and we are the only ones who will do so — then the power ceases.

What constricted, petty lives most of us live. Around us is a universe teeming with life, yet we walk aimlessly along, interested only in material things. — Elisha Douglass

Separating The Myths, Facts

By JOHN CUNIFF AP Business Analyst NEW YORK (AP) — Should interest rates continue to fall, we may see before this year is out whether some long-held assumptions are myth or fact.

That sales of houses, automobiles, and big-ticket appliances will rise quickly, for example, and that corporations will begin to add rather than subtract from capital spending plans.

That the dollar will hold its value relative to other currencies without the added attraction of high interest rates. And that inflation will continue to cool for a while rather than heat up again.

And more: That stock and bond prices will rise, that consumer and business confidence will improve, and that unemployment will begin a slow descent from the highest levels in four decades.

Such assumptions are the base on which economic forecasts have been built, and now, if interest rates fall for several months in a row, these forecasts may be revealed for what they are.

And with them, it would seem, the forecasting reputation of prominent individuals, such as Ronald Reagan, U.S. president; Lee Iacocca, Chrysler chairman, and Jack Carlson, executive vice president of the National Association of Realtors, the nation's biggest business group.

A weak recovery won't count, simply because the economy has almost nowhere to go but up, as any of these three gentlemen might agree. A significant gain, it seems safe to say, would be a moderate economic expansion of about 4.5 percent in the second half of the year.

The assumptions won't be tested either if the interest rate decline is only short-lived, as it very well could be. The market is nervous, even as the Fed lowered the discount rate to 11.5 percent on July 30 some financial critics warned of a potential tightening in October.

One of the biggest tests could be of the widespread assertion that interest rates cannot fall and the economy cannot recover moderately unless federal budget deficits are sharply reduced.

Increasingly, that belief is being challenged. A $130 billion deficit — higher than administration estimates, lower than the Congressional budget office figure — amounts to 4 percent of gross national product.

That percentage is nearly the same as in 1976, when the economy was still emerging from the deep 1974-1975 recession. It is a warning allowing for the stage of the cycle," says Citibank, "the prospective deficit is not nearly so alarming."

As most people are aware, the economy did rebound from that deep mid-decade recession, deficits or not. But there are critics who also point out that the uneven recovery set the stage for future declines.

The recovery sought by President Reagan, most people are aware, is one that will last. His program is nothing less than a recharting of the economy's course for the rest of the century, not for just five years.

If interest rates continue to fall — and some market analysts are on record as saying the prime might even dip to 10 percent this year — the country will have a fair idea of whether Reaganomics can succeed. And it will be able to answer as myth or fact some of the most basic economic assumptions which are built.

Lizzie Borden Considered As Tourist Draw

By JEFF BARNARD

Associated Press Writer
FALL RIVER, Mass. (AP)

— Since the hottest day of the summer of 1892, this mill city never has forgotten Lizzie Borden, immortalized in a ditty as the Victorian spinster who took an ax and gave her parents 40 whacks.

"When I was growing up, if we asked about it, our parents always gave the same answer: She was tried and acquitted and you don't talk about it," said Florence Brigham, curator of the Fall River Historical Society, which houses a small display of grisly artifacts from the stayings.

But city tourism director Kenneth Raymond is itching to capitalize on the mystery that began with the murders 90 years ago today.

"I see her as the best marketing tool we have," Raymond said. "We want to make sure everybody associates Lizzie Borden with Fall River."

He is conducting a survey to see how residents feel about shouting the name that locally has been whispered, or chanted by children skipping rope. Early returns favor shouting, he said.

But against the idea is John R. McGinn, who lives in the three-story gray clapboard house where Yankee businessman Andrew J. Borden and his second wife, the former Abby D. Gray, were bludgeoned to death on the hottest day of 1892.

The 80-year-old McGinn doesn't welcome suggestions that the city buy the Greek revival house for a museum. He has fun with the home he bought in 1948 with adjoining buildings to house his printing business, Leary Press.

He recalled how he spoofed one woman — drawn by the mystery played out in a dozen books, a movie and a ballet — by telling her he was the illegitimate son of Miss Borden.

"She was really shocked," he said.

Towers of aging textile mills and the spires of old churches dominate the city skyline.

No plaques mark the murder house or the home in the affluent Highlands section where Miss Borden later lived with her older sister, Emma.

"What I think has kept it alive is that little ditty," said Mrs. Brigham.

LIZZIE BORDEN

"Lizzie Borden took an ax,
And gave her mother 40 whacks.

"When she saw what she had done,
She gave her father 41."

"People are always telling me they used to skip rope to it," she said.

The Historical Society has the city's only public display on its most famous resident.

A sign warns against photographing the iron hatchet head with a broken handle, introduced at the trial but never proven to be the murder weapon, or the blood-spattered bedspread from the second-floor guest room where Mrs. Borden was found dead.

Two photos show the skulls of the victims, each with gaping holes from what are estimated to be a dozen blows each.

'Inconsistency' Convicted

By SHARON HERBAUGH
Associated Press Writer
HOUSTON (AP) — With his "unbelievable and inconsistent" testimony, prominent Houston attorney

William A. Chanslor Jr. helped convict himself of plotting to murder his wife with an undetectable poison, a prosecutor says.

Chanslor contended during his trial that his wife, Sue, who has been partially paralyzed from a stroke three years ago, had "begged and pleaded" with him to help her commit suicide. Mrs. Chanslor also testified that she had asked for death.

But a state District Court jury apparently agreed with Assistant District Attorney Jim Lavine, who argued that Mrs. Chanslor "had become a yoke and a burden on him. It was a mission of mercy — not for his wife but for himself."

The panel of seven men and five women deliberated for 2½ hours Tuesday and found Chanslor guilty of conspiracy to murder and solicitation to murder.

State District Judge Michael T. McSpadden scheduled the sentencing phase of the trial to begin today, before the same jury. Chanslor could receive up to 20 years in jail and up to $10,000 in fines.

Before delivering their verdict, the jurors listened twice again to tapes in which Chanslor was heard to tell a self-proclaimed "Dr. Death," from whom he obtained what he thought was a deadly poison, that his wife would never commit suicide.

Chanslor, 50, showed no emotion when the verdict was announced. Mrs. Chanslor, 42, sitting in a wheelchair, wept. Chanslor was allowed to enter the spectators' section and embrace her, then wheeled her from the courtroom.

He had contended it was at his wife's request that he tried to obtain ricin, a lethal, almost untraceable poison derived from the seed of the castor oil plant.

Chanslor, a former president of the Houston Trial Lawyers Association and founder and deacon of the Westbury Christian Church, refused to comment on the verdict as he and his wife left.

"Mrs. Chanslor is very upset and since the trial is still in progress, I have advised them not to make any 4! said defense lawyer Robert C. Bennett.

"We are very upset and we don't agree with it, but that is something you learn to live with," Bennett added.

The defense admitted Chanslor solicited and bought two capsules he believed contained the deadly poison, but said he did so only because his wife wanted to commit suicide.

"Bill Chanslor never intended to murder his wife," Bennett said in summation.

In her testimony, Mrs. Chanslor acknowledged she said shortly after her husband's arrest that she had not asked him to help her kill herself. But she said she had made the statement because she did not believe authorities when they told her Chanslor was in jail.

Lavine, the prosecutor, said the "turning point" of the trial was Chanslor's own "unbelievable and inconsistent" testimony.

"I don't think his story was believable," Lavine said. "He admitted to giving false statements to police and then was actually caught in a false statement to the jury.

Once that was brought home to them in final arguments, I think that may have turned the tide."

The prosecution said Chanslor, using the alias John G. Thompson, met with John Minnery to obtain the poison. Minnery is the author of a series of five books titled "How To Kill."

Minnery, who Chanslor said referred to himself as "Dr. Death," reported the request to police, who assigned an undercover detective to the case.

Chanslor was arrested April 21 outside a Houston hotel carrying two marked capsules of what he believed to be ricin three times stronger than needed to kill a 200-pound cow. The pills were Vitamin C.

Before returning the verdict, jurors twice listened to secretly taped conversations involving Chanslor, Minnery and undercover agent Keith Symons at a Toronto restaurant.

On the tape, Chanslor told the two men his wife would never commit suicide, adding, "The bitch is really getting to me."

Chanslor testified he had talked that way because he thought the people he was meeting were hardened killers and he wanted them to think he was like them.

CONVICTED — William Chanslor, Jr., a Houston attorney, wheels his invalid wife Sue from the courtroom Tuesday after being convicted of plotting to kill her with poison. The defense claimed Mrs. Chanslor had asked her husband to kill her. (AP Laserphoto)

Women More Likely To Vote

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The average North Carolinian who votes in November will be slightly younger than his counterpart of two years ago, but that shouldn't affect the outcome of the elections, says a state official.

The U.S. Census Bureau released data Tuesday showing that the state's and nation's voting age populations were increasing and that the age of the typical voter was declining.

But Alex Brock, state elections director, said the change was too slight to affect voting patterns.

"Unless there's a very dramatic shift in voting age, like 30 percent, it shouldn't have any effect at all," Brock said. "And I wouldn't believe a shift like that had occurred if I saw it certified."

Sex is a far more important trait than age where voting is concerned, especially since women are more inclined to vote than men, Brock said.

"They seem to take a greater interest in voting than men," he said. "If they begin to vote together they could have a real effect."

The nation's voting-age population — the number of people 18 and over — in November will be almost 170 million, the census bureau predicted, an increase of 5 million since the 1980 election.

In North Carolina, the voting-age population should be 4,417,000 in November, the bureau said. It was 4,224,031 in 1980.

The report also said that the median age of U.S. voters had dropped from 42 in 1970 to 40 in 1980. By November, two out of five voting-age people will be between 25 and 44 years old and about one in five will be under 25, it said.

In North Carolina, the report said, the number of voters aged 18-24 may actually decrease slightly. But the number of voters aged 25-44 should increase.

There were 424,809 males and 397,282 females aged 18-24 in 1980, for a total of 822,091. There were 808,800 males and 837,582 females aged 25-44 that year, for a total of 1,646,382. By November, there are expected to be 820,000 North Carolinians aged 18-24 and 1,774,000 North Carolinians aged 25-44.

Brock said in a telephone interview that slight increases or decreases in the numbers of very young or very old voters matter little. The most politically potent age group, he said, is that including people aged 35-50.

"They vote most consistently, they're the most dependable," he said.

Seek Return Of Defector

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — China's ambassador to the United States says this country has a duty to return a Chinese tennis star who disappeared in California during a tennis tournament last month.

Hu Na, 19, failed to appear at a match July 21 during the Federation Cup tennis tournament in Santa Clara and has since sought political asylum, according to the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service.

The ambassador, Chai Zemin, who was here for China national day ceremonies at the 1982 World's Fair, said Tuesday through an interpreter, "We think the United States should try its best to find her and then return her to us... The U.S. government is obligated to protect the safety of the Chinese team."

In Washington, the State Department said it can do nothing about the request for Miss Hu's immediate return. Spokesman Alan Romberg said, "Under U.S. law, once the person has applied for political asylum we are obligated to apply due process of law."

He said Miss Hu's request for asylum must be reviewed on its merits by the INS with the State Department providing an advisory opinion.

Romberg said it also was hoped that such incidents would not prompt the Peking government to cut off U.S.-Chinese cultural exchanges.

Ask Big Bail In Colcor Charges

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A federal prosecutor has asked a U.S. magistrate to increase to $1 million the bond of a man arrested on drug charges in the Colcor operation in order to "protect the lives of witnesses" connected with the probe.

In a separate matter dealing with the FBI's undercover probe of crime in Columbus County, the state Justice Department announced it would decide later, possibly this week, whether to conduct its own investigation into evidence raised by "Operation Colcor" which resulted in bribery charges against four public officials.

Prosecutors have asked that Kenneth Coleman, 42, of the Cherry Grove community in Columbus County, bond be increased from $200,000 to $1 million. Coleman was one of 21 people indicted after the 21-month federal corruption probe.

Coleman and his wife, Mary, were charged with unlawfully possessing marijuana and cocaine in connection with the Colcor probe.

U.S. Magistrate Franklin L. Block said he would rule

Aug. 11 on the motion to increase bond and a companion motion to determine the source of any bonds funds that might be used by Coleman.

The motions were filed by J. Douglas McCullough of Raleigh, an assistant U.S. Attorney for the Eastern District of North Carolina. McCullough said the motion to increase Coleman's bond was based on additional evidence not presented during Coleman's initial court appearance Thursday.

Tuesday's motions said Coleman told agents after he was arrested that he was "guilty and should be sentenced now."

It also said Coleman told the agents he "should have lived in another time, namely World War II, so that he could have been a hit man for Hitler's Gestapo."

The motion to increase Coleman's bond also said that Coleman has confessed to other crimes of a serious nature and could be a threat to some of the witnesses in the probe.

Meanwhile, Senior Deputy Attorney General Andy Vanore said Tuesday allegations raised about state Sen. R.C. Soles, D-Columbus, were among those being considered by state officials in determining whether to conduct its own investigation, but Vanore declined to name anyone that may be the subject of a state investigation.

Vanore said the state Justice Department is talking to federal authorities, examining evidence they have made available and examining applicable state laws. He said they were trying "to decide whether there should be an investigation and who should be investigated."

"Right now we're not investigating any person or persons," Vanore said. "We're just looking at the overall picture."

Soles was not indicted. But his name was included in the indictment of Columbus County Commissioner Edward Walton Williamson. According to the indictment, Williamson arranged a meeting between Soles and two FBI undercover agents in which Soles accepted a gold bracelet valued at $500 as payment for help in changing a bill on precious metals.

Williamson was indicted for aiding and abetting in the alleged act of bribery with Soles, as well as other charges.

Vanore said a terse, one paragraph statement issued by the State Bureau of Investigation Monday ended the state Justice Department's examination of published reports concerning Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green and his SBI security agent.

Green said on Friday that an undercover federal agent tried to entrap him through an undercover agent. Green said he was mailed a $2,000 cashier's check, and that he returned the check to the man he now recognizes as an undercover agent involved in the FBI's Colcor operation.

SBI Director Haywood Starling's statement Monday said he was satisfied the SBI agent, Joe Hines, fulfilled his responsibility during that period.

Green said he couldn't remember whether he had told the SBI agent about receiving and returning the check.

Vanore acknowledged that Justice officials asked Hines whether Green had told him he suspected a bribery attempt had been made or had told him about the check. But Vanore said he would not reveal those answers.

"That is of great interest to the media and we have asked those questions and gotten the answers," Vanore said. "But those answers are not for public consumption."

Vanore said Green was not under investigation by the SBI.

"There's no need to investigate the lieutenant governor," Vanore said. "We've never had the lieutenant governor under investigation," Vanore said.

No Action Yet On Youth Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration has delayed action on its proposal to expand the kinds of jobs and number of hours that 14- and 15-year-old youths can work.

Under pressure from Congress, the Labor Department said Tuesday it would extend from 30 to 180 days the period for comment on the proposed changes in regulations, made public July 16.

New proposals will be published after the comment period, the department said.

The regulations published last month would permit 14- and 15-year-olds to work as late as 9 p.m. on school nights and 10 p.m. on other days. The mandated quitting times are now 7 p.m. and 10 p.m., respectively.

The regulations also reclassify a number of occupations now considered too hazardous for young teenagers.

Harriman Is Not Talking

SUN VALLEY, Idaho (AP) — Averell Harriman propped a foot on a long coffee table at the ski resort he founded and declared: "I won't comment about him."

"Him" is Ronald Reagan, and Harriman, a lifelong Democrat who served as governor of New York during the 1950s, explained recently, "He is a Republican and I hope he'll be beaten by a good Democrat. ... Whoever wins in the Democratic primaries, I'm going to support him and hope he can beat Reagan."

And that was all about the current political scene from a man who loves to talk politics.

Instead "The Governor," as he is called, restricted himself to the past, including his days as ambassador to Britain under President Franklin D. Roosevelt and general presidential troubleshooter.

Harriman, who will turn 90 on Nov. 15, also recalled how he founded the first ski resort in the country, Sawtooth Mountain.

He said he had done some skiing in his youth in Europe and decided to found a resort in the United States. He urged a friend, Count Felix Schaffgotsch of Austria, to find the ideal place for such a resort in this country, and 50 years ago the count "discovered" Sun Valley, then noted for its mining and railroad.

Now, surveying the resort, Harriman said, "It's nice up here. This is lovely. I guess you can say this: This resort, this beautiful place, is what I've come to love."

Watts Told To Pay For Parties

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's chief auditor, rejecting an appeal by Interior Secretary James Watt, says the Cabinet officer must pay $4,300 for two Christmas parties on federal property last year.

The ruling by Comptroller General Charles A. Bowsher upheld a February report by auditors from Bowsher's agency, the General Accounting Office, that Watt had used government funds without authorization.

The two events "were essentially personal and social in nature," Bowsher said in a report to Rep. Edward J. Markey, D-Mass., who announced the finding Tuesday.

On Dec. 17, Watt held a reception for 220 people, most of them high officials of the Reagan administration, at the Custis-Lee Mansion in Arlington National Cemetery. The reception cost $6,921, according to the earlier GAO report. His wife, Leilani, held a breakfast at the mansion three days earlier at a cost of $1,921.

"Cash, check or Master Charge" will be acceptable from Watt, said Markey, who is chairman of the oversight subcommittee of the House Interior Committee.

Camera 'Passes' Test In Court

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) —
Chief Justice Joseph Branch says an experiment with cameras in the state Supreme Court chamber worked well during a ceremonial swearing in Tuesday of Justice Harry C. Martin.

But Branch says he isn't so sure the same would be true in an actual trial.

"I didn't even know they were in there," Branch said after the ceremony in which a television camera and a single newspaper photographer were allowed inside the chambers.

"I was paying attention to my business," he added. "I thought it was handled very well. It doesn't bother me...I don't know the effect on other people."

Martin, 62, was sworn in to a seat being vacated by the retirement of Justice David

M. Britt. Martin, who served 16 years as a Superior Court judge in Asheville, was appointed to the bench by Hunt, who had also appointed Martin to the Court of Appeals in 1978.

The ceremony marked only the second time in the court's history that pictures were allowed inside the courtroom. The first was in February when Justice Burley Mitchell was sworn in.

The photographers, used in a pool arrangement among news organizations, stood to one side of the dark, paneled chamber, and used no extra lighting.

The Supreme Court is expected to rule soon on a pair of petitions filed by several press groups seeking the court to allow cameras to cover regular proceedings of the Supreme Court and other state courts.

The court's Code of Judicial Ethics now prohibits the use of cameras in trials and court proceedings other than ceremonies.

Martin, commenting earlier, said he thought it "just great to have television coverage" of the event. But as for allowing them in other court proceedings, he said, "I won't answer you in general."

Some other observers were less impressed, however.

"I don't think too much of it," said Dan K. Moore, former justice and former governor, who stepped into an adjacent room where television monitors were showing a replay of the event.

"Oh, it's all right in there, but I don't think I like it in other courts," Moore added. "I'm opposed to it in a trial."

Attorney General Rufus Edmisten also watched the replay. "Look at that handsome guy right there," he said as his own picture appeared on the screen. "I've been waiting to see that all day."

Edmisten later said he didn't find the cameras intrusive but remained unconvinced about their use in an actual trial.

"I think it might create more dramatics than we have now," he said. "I might be convinced if I knew more about the experience in other states."

Supporters of the move to allow cameras in courts say about 35 other states now allow them under various limitations.

In a separate ceremony, Clifton E. Johnson, a Superior Court judge from Charlotte, took his seat on the state Court of Appeals, succeeding Martin. He also was appointed by Hunt.

Cameras were allowed to record the event, only the second time ever that cameras have been allowed inside the state's highest court. (AP Laserphoto)

U.S. Says Israeli Attacks 'Unhelpful' To Efforts

By GENE GRABOWSKI
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department says the latest Israeli attacks on Palestine guerrillas in west Beirut were "unhelpful" to its efforts to achieve a peace in Lebanon.

State Department spokeswoman Anita Stockman said early today that the reported troop movements in west Beirut "are not consistent" with the principle of a current cease-fire.

"Any military movements such as the IDF (Israeli Defense Force) movements which hinder Ambassador (Philip) Habib's efforts to bring about a solution to the Beirut crisis are unhelpful," she said in a brief statement.

Habib, the U.S. Mideast negotiator, has attempted — so far without success — to arrange the withdrawal of the guerrillas

Meanwhile, the Israeli military command said its attack on the Palestine Liberation Organization's enclaves in west Beirut early today was not "an all-out attempt at conquering the city."

Rather, the Israelis "tightened the siege of Beirut," the command said in Tel Aviv.

Used Hacksaw On Ballot Box

TRIBUNE, Kan. (AP) — Democracy in action can be a bit bumpy when things don't work.

It was time to open a ballot box at the Greeley County Courthouse after Tuesday's primary election, but the key to the padlock didn't fit.

Attention was turned to the other five boxes while someone got a hacksaw. Local officials claimed the problem caused only a minor delay, but state officials noted the county was among the last to report.

"We don't think this is too bad," said Emogene Wineinger, clerk for the west-central Kansas county. "It was just a little thing."

Another State Department spokesman, Alan Romberg, said the "United States does not want an attack against Beirut."

"At the same time, regardless of what we want, while we can influence events, we cannot, ultimately, control them," Romberg said. "We are doing everything we can do" to stop the violence in Lebanon, he added.

President Reagan has rejected as a "propagandistic exercise" the release in Moscow of a letter to him from Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev which charged that the United States had failed to restrain Israel in Lebanon.

In response to questions, Romberg said Israeli officials are ignoring Reagan's pleas for a cease-fire and the restoration of electricity and water supplies in west Beirut.

Israeli Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir said Tuesday he is unaware of any American move to punish his nation despite the U.S. view that Israeli assaults upon west Beirut are impeding negotiations for the evacuation of PLO fighters.

"I don't know of any crackdown," Shamir said. But he added that his talks in Washington did not specifically touch on whether there might be new restrictions leveled against Israeli use of American weapons. Shamir spoke to reporters at a luncheon of the Overseas Writers Club after meeting with the foreign affairs committees of the House and Senate.

In recent weeks, a number of senators and House members have expressed concern about Israel's military assaults on west Beirut.

But an Israeli official, who asked to remain unidentified, said his country believes maintenance of military pressure on the PLO will speed the departure of PLO fighters from Lebanon.

In a related development, the Pentagon said the U.S. Marine-Navy force most likely to be committed to any international peace-keeping mission in Beirut has been sent to Naples, Italy, for a port visit.

Defense Department spokesman Benjamin Welles told reporters that the force could return to waters off the Lebanese coast within about 72 hours, if necessary.

The temporary withdrawal of a 1,800-man Marine battalion, five amphibious ships carrying them and the aircraft carrier Independence underscored uncertainty within the Pentagon as to whether and American force might land in Beirut to help safeguard the departure of the PLO.

Bar Funds For Private Groups

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nicaraguan government is forbidding private organizations there to receive $5.1 million in U.S. aid because the money was intended to undermine the stability of the country.

The Nicaraguan Embassy said Tuesday that it had told Bernard E. Dupuis, acting director for Nicaragua at the Agency for International Development, that it was rejecting the money.

A Nicaraguan government agency, the International Fund for the Edmundo Jarquin, executive director of the International Fund for the Reconstruction of Nicaragua, said that "United States congressional hearings revealed that the agreements have political motivations, designed to promote resistance and destabilize the Revolutionary Government."

President Reagan ordered an end to aid to the Nicaraguan government on April 1, 1981.

Cites Services Of Crittenton

Ken Sipes, the director of Florence Crittenton Services, Charlotte, visited in Greenville recently to create awareness of the availability of the program to women with problems associated with pregnancies.

Crittenton operates in North and South Carolina.

Its main function is the operation of a 64-place maternity home in Charlotte, plus an aftercare residence for women who have recently released their children for adoption and need a place to stay while they rearrange their lives and another aftercare residence for women who have decided to keep their babies and also need to rearrange their lives. Most referrals from this area are made through the Children's Home Society and the Pitt County Department of Social Services.

Sipes said, "Most of our residents come to us because, for whatever reason, they plan to have the babies they've conceived and they don't feel that their present situation is supportive of their staying at home and delivering their babies. While they're here, they have medical counseling and supervision 24 hours a day and visit a weekly clinic conducted by doctors from Memorial Hospital, Charlotte. They attend prenatal and childbirth preparation classes, have vocational testing and education and have the availability of a chapel and of a chaplain for spiritual counseling."

Residential stays in the program may be as long as one year, though most do not stay this long. Ages have ranged from 11 to the late 30s. Most are 16 and 17 years of age.

In 1983 the Florence Crittenton Services will be 100 years old. It was founded by Charles Crittenton as a service to women in honor of his daughter, Florence, who died as a young child.

Funds from the Crittenton Foundation are now supplemented by United Way funds and other sources. Cost of maintaining a resident runs about $25 a day, with hospital care extra.

The agency takes the position that it cannot make a decision for anybody, Sipes said. Therefore, there is counseling for the girls concerning their need to take responsibility for the decisions to keep their babies or give them up for adoption. No one is advised in either direction, he said, but they are given the facts and experiences of former clients concerning each option, he said.

A SECOND APPEAL
MOSCOW (AP) — Hinger striker Yuri Balovlev has turned down a second appeal by Donna Hartman, wife of the U.S. ambassador, to end a 30-day effort to force authorities to allow him to emigrate and join his American wife.

Candidate Idled A Polling Place

HILLSBORO, Mo. (AP) — State Rep. Winnie Weber awoke early to go to the polls and cast her vote in her bid for a sixth term. But instead, she wound up closing the place down.

"I got up at five o'clock to get ready to vote, and when I got to St. Martin's Church where I vote, my name wasn't there," Mrs. Weber said.

"I was very upset ...," she added. "I said, 'Close that poll down' — and they did." Jefferson County Clerk Eleanor Rehm said Democrats were barred from voting for about an hour Tuesday while the error was corrected.

She said ballots at the polling place were for the 105th District instead of the 104th District, which she represents.

An election official at the clerk's office said 15 people used the wrong ballots. They were to be called and given the opportunity to vote again. Despite the confusion, Mrs. Weber won her race.

Most Aware Of Safety Efforts

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Nearly all American workers — 92 percent — believe their employers care about their safety, and four out of five are aware of what their companies are doing to prevent accidents, a recent study shows.

An independent survey conducted for Fireman's Fund Insurance Companies here, a major provider of worker's compensation, showed that while only half of those queried said they had been given training on accident prevention, two-thirds knew that there was someone responsible for accident prevention or safety where they worked.

Nearly 90 percent of those polled in the companies' annual "attitude and awareness" study claimed they knew how to find medical attention at work in a hurry, and some 60 percent said they had been instructed how to evacuate their building in an emergency.

Congress Tells Reagan: Must Fight For Tax Hike

By JIM LUTHER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican and Democratic leaders are cautioning President Reagan that Congress will not raise taxes in this election year unless he leads the fight.

And members of North Carolina's congressional delegation are continuing to work to ensure that the proposed 8-cents-a-pack federal tax on cigarettes is defeated.

Fifth District Rep. Stephen Neal says he will file suit in district court in Washington today to prevent the doubling of the tax.

Neal says his suit will contend that the tax bill, which includes the cigarette tax proposal, is unconstitutional because the measure was written in the Senate, and the Constitution requires that revenue raising measures must originate in the House.

The cigarette tax is my prime target in the suit," Neal said. "It might still be possible to stop in Congress, but we shouldn't leave any other alternatives."

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., also said he is pushing a proposal that would reduce or eliminate the cigarette tax. Helms said he could not divulge the plan, saying public disclosure would jeopardize its chances.

Meanwhile, Senate and House leaders have told Reagan that he must lead the way if taxes are to be raised this year.

"It's got to be abundantly clear that it's his (Reagan's) bill," Rep. Richard Cheney, R-Wyo., chairman of the House Republican Policy Committee, said after he and his colleagues met Tuesday with Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan.

The theme was repeated as a House-Senate conference committee began writing a compromise version of the tax increase, which it hopes will lead to lower interest rates by reducing federal borrowing.

The panel took no votes Tuesday. But Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., head of the House delegation, told reporters the committee hoped to reach agreement today on some of the less-disputed tax provisions in the bill.

That could include provisions limiting the tax deduction for medical expenses and raising federal taxes on cigarettes and telephone service.

"It will be at least the end of next week before we finish the bill," Rostenkowski said.

As the conference began, Rostenkowski and Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., who heads the panel, found agreement on one point: Reagan must give his full support to the bill.

"He's committed to this tax bill," Dole assured the committee, "but it's going to take a great deal more effort on behalf of the president."

There is no chance of passing the bill without Reagan's complete support, Rostenkowski added. "The margin of victory will be determined by the amount of participation from the executive branch."

Democrats, who control the House, were so concerned about election-year backlash against a tax increase that they bucked tradition and didn't even try to write their own version. Thus, the conference is relying mainly on the Senate bill, which was written by Republicans.

GOP opposition to raising taxes is mounting daily; more than 80 House Republicans have signed a letter to Reagan protesting a tax increase, especially before Congress redeems its pledge to cut spending.

But Reagan's powers of persuasion have been effective before, and leaders are now saying he'll have to pull out all the stops to win passage of the tax increase.

After meeting with the treasury secretary, one GOP leader explained to a reporter: "We have to be able to go home and tell our people that we voted for the president's bill."

The conference committee spent three hours Tuesday discussing provisions in the tax legislation. Although no agreements were sought, Dole said he would be willing to delete proposed tax increases on cigarettes and telephone services if colleagues could find other taxes to produce the needed revenue.

Dole and some other members said they favor moderating a provision that would allow a deduction for medical expenses only after they exceed 7 percent of adjusted gross income. Present law allows a deduction for expenses above 3 percent; Dole wants to settle on 5 percent.

Congressional aides now estimate the Senate bill would raise taxes by $98.9 billion over the next three years. The target budget adopted by Congress requires at least $98 billion worth of new revenues during that period.

In addition, the measure would reduce federal spending for Medicaid, Medicare and aid to the needy by about $16.7 billion over the three years.

Health and Human Services Secretary Richard

S. Schweiker wrote the conferees Tuesday to say the administration is backing a Medicare voucher plan that would save some money by allowing beneficiaries to leave the program and buy into private health plans instead. Schweiker said this would "encourage efficiency in the delivery of health care and increase individual freedom of choice."

Other parts of the tax bill would impose a 10-percent tax withholding on interest and dividends; toughen the "minimum tax" on mainly high-income investors; reduce special tax breaks for insurance and contracting firms; limit the deduction allowed for business meals and drinks, and take back a big chunk of the business tax reduction enacted last year.

CELEBRATION — Double celebrations are observed by early arrivals at Buckingham Palace today where the baby Prince William is to be christened, coinciding with the 82nd birthday of Queen Elizabeth, the Queen

Mother. The Dancing Royalists made their trip from Manchester to arrive early at the Palace to stake their place at the railings. (AP Laserphoto)

Four Injured In Accidents

Four people were reported injured and an estimated $8,500 property damage caused in two traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Tuesday.

Officers said an estimated $2,500 damage resulted to each of two cars involved in an 11:27 a.m. collision at the intersection of Fifth Street and Memorial Drive.

Drivers of the cars, both of whom were injured, were identified as Elizabeth Holland Eagles of 1102 E. 14th St. and Clarence Sidney Davis of Farmville.

Police charged Ms. Eagles with failing to stop for a stop light following investigation of the mishap.

Investigators reported the drivers of both cars involved in a 5:15 p.m. collision at the intersection of the Stantonburg Road and Sennie Drive were injured. They were identified as Chantal Loraine Taylor of Faamville and Kathryn Ann Merritt of 1803 E. Sixth St.

Police, who charged Ms. Merritt with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety, estimated damage at $1,500 to the Taylor car and $2,000 to the Merritt auto.

Solar Fraction

The solar fraction for this area Tuesday, as computed by the East Carolina University Department of Physics, was 70. This means that a solar water heater could have provided 70 percent of your hot water needs.

Say Many In Bid-Rigging

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A state Justice Department official says nearly all contractors regularly involved in bidding on state highway projects in the past were involved to some degree in the rigging of bids on those contracts.

Senior Deputy Attorney General Eugene A. Smith told a meeting Tuesday of legislators that the extent of bid rigging went beyond the number indicted so far on state and federal charges.

He said involvement ranged from some of the largest companies, that rigged bids in up to 65 percent of the projects they bid on, to smaller companies whose only involvement was submitting complementary bids.

"In the atmosphere going on it was pretty hard for a contractor not to know the system was there and it was going on," Smith said later in an interview. "Most of them were involved to some degree, submitting complementary bids or rigged bids, or laying off (not bidding on projects), or was aware."

"They saw the involvement," Smith said. "The way it was going on was fairly open among the contractors."

Smith said he was referring to the 50 or so contractors who do most of the state contract highway work, not including numerous other companies that are qualified to bid on highway projects but do little or no state business.

"I would say that would be true of people who haven't been indicted," he said. "There was some degree of involvement of those who haven't been indicted and probably won't be indicted."

A total of 29 contracting companies have been convicted of state or federal charges stemming from the highway bid-rigging investigations in North Carolina. Cash settlements have been announced by the state involving 25 of the companies.

Smith said the bid-rigging investigation is continuing, although much of the focus has shifted to bidding on construction of public utility projects. Similar investigations are going on in 20 states, he said.

Smith made the comments when questioned by legislators at a meeting of the joint House and Senate Special Committee to Review the Department of Transportation.

Department of Transportation officials told the legislative panel they have taken a number of steps aimed at preventing a recurrence of the scandal, which was first disclosed in 1980.

George Wells, highway design branch manager for DOT, said the department has made the list of potential bidders — those who have expressed an interest in a particular project — a confidential document.

He said the department also has taken steps to tighten the confidentiality of the department's internal estimate of a project's cost before the bidding, and has established a top-management committee to check periodically on those estimates.

Lesson Due Experience

By The Associated Press
TULSA, Okla. (AP) — When police here advise motorists to "lock your car and take the keys," they may be speaking from painful personal experience.

Tulsa Officer Eddie Campos found himself locked out of his police car Tuesday as a man he had stopped for questioning sat inside, fiddled with the siren and refused to open up.

Campos said the incident began when he ordered the man to sit in the car to answer questions after a disturbance call at about 7:15 a.m. Campos finished his report, then asked the man to leave.

"I asked him if he would get out, and he wouldn't. So I went over to let him out," Campos said. But when Campos did, the man inside locked the doors and took the keys from the ignition.

Campos had to use a hand radio to call for help as the man inside chatted with dispatchers on the police radio. He also dangled the cruiser's keys and laughed at Campos, other police said.

Reinforcements arrived and while the man was distracted, police opened the back door with a coat hanger.

Police said Lewis J. Justice of Tulsa was arrested on trespassing and public drunkenness complaints. "I guess he never thought about driving away," said Patrol Officer Rick Dunham. "It was just one of those things that was funny and, luckily, no one was hurt."

Seeks To Repair Rift In Alliance

WASHINGTON (AP) — Canada's foreign secretary is calling for an early foreign ministers meeting to repair a split caused by U.S. efforts to keep its allies from using American technology to help build the Soviet gas pipeline.

Saying he has "never seen a greater gap" in the NATO alliance, Mark MacGuigan, Canada's secretary of state for external affairs, said Tuesday he made the suggestion during a meeting with Secretary of State George P. Shultz.

He said Shultz treated it as "an idea worth considering." MacGuigan told reporters at a news conference that a meeting of the foreign ministers of the nations represented at the recent Versailles economic summit might help "to reorient the relationship and to try to heal some of the wounds that have arisen."

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market declined broadly today in a carryover of the selling that set in Tuesday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 7.71 to 808.69 in the first half hour.

Losers held a 3-1 lead over gainers in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Stock prices began to decline Tuesday as interest rates turned upward in the credit markets.

But even when rates were dropping last month, analysts noted, the stock market didn't respond with the kind of enthusiasm many people had expected.

They said traders apparently were troubled by signals pointing toward a weak recovery at best for the economy in the immediate future.

Today's early prices included Exxon, down 1/4 at 26 1/4; United Technologies, off 1/2 at 41 1/4; and American Telephone & Telegraph, down 3/4 at 51.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average fell 5.71 to 816.40.

Declines slightly outnumbered advances on the NYSE.

Big Board volume swelled to 60.48 million shares from 53.46 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index fell 0.58 to 61.91.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 0.91 at 251.12.

Grain: No. 2 yellow shelled corn lower at 2.42-2.78, mostly 2.52-2.78 in the East and 2.34-2.90, mostly 2.79-2.92 in the Piedmont; No. 1 yellow soybeans lower at 6.05-6.40, mostly 6.05-6.35 in the East and 5.60-6.24, mostly 6.13-6.24 in the Piedmont. Wheat 2.60-3.25, mostly 2.96-3.12; oats 1.16-1.45. (New crop — corn 2.16-2.48; soybeans 5.60-5.91.) Soybean meal FOB N.C. processing plants per ton 44 percent 205.70-207.50. Tax Bills Mailed

City tax bills for the July 1, 1982, through June 30, 1983, period were mailed Tuesday, according to Floyd Little, revenue collector.

Little said 18,600 bills were sent out with total values billed, excluding corporation excess, amounting to $748,042,987. Total tax levy was $3,691,901, he said. Last year's billing was $717,582,802 and total levy was $3,533,426. Little said, adding that the new levy represents an increase of some 3.4 percent but is down about 6 percent from the normal average annual increase.

The city spokesman said a 2 percent discount is being offered for payment of taxes during August but no discount will be allowed after Aug. 31.

He urged property owners to "please pay early" and he noted that if a mortgage company is expected to pay a bill, the firm should be notified as soon as possible in order for the payment to be made in time to receive the August discount.

Little said the city tax collection system is now fully automated and he said "we hope to offer faster, more efficient service" as a result of the computerization. Local taxes should be paid at city hall and Little reminded residents to have their billing notices with them for faster service.

Anyone with questions or problems concerning their billings should contact the tax collection department at 752-4137, he said.

Studio Boycott Is Posed By NAACP

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The NAACP, frustrated by fruitless meetings with film executives over minority hiring practices, says it is about to select a major film studio as a possible boycott target and also is preparing to take on the television networks.

"During the past eight months we have been meeting and negotiating with the movie industry with varying results," Benjamin L. Hooks, executive director of the 500,000-member National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said Tuesday in a prepared statement at a Los Angeles Press Club news conference.

"We found that the problems are serious and deeply entrenched. Now that we have the structure set up for dealing with racial problems within the movie industry, and among TV networks, we will act," Hooks said.

The target studio will be selected within the next week and presented with a list of demands. If the studio fails to meet the demands within a specified time period, a boycott or other actions, such as informational picketing at theaters and production facilities, could begin, Hooks said.

He said NAACP chapters could be called on "to use whatever non-violent means" necessary to achieve the NAACP's goals of increased hiring of blacks.

"We don't have any idea at this point of engaging in civil disobedience," Hooks said, but he did not rule out the possibility.

He said any boycott probably would be limited to the film divisions of the studios, many of which are owned by large conglomerates. But he did not rule out boycotts of be cooperatively carried out in the same quarters.

A feasibility study conducted for the town has shown, the commissioners said, that remodeling and heating and air conditioning of the old school gymnasium on the Town Commons (former site of Farmville High School) would cost as much as $650,000; the old school agriculture building as much as $91,000. It looks now, they said, as if it would be best to demolish the ag building and perhaps tear off all but the gym proper of the gym building. Action was tabled.

The go-ahead was given for the town administration to investigate the advantages of purchasing a microcomputer for use by the planning and community development staff. The commissioners said they would offer no encouragement as to whether the microcomputer will be bought, but agreed to the staff study.

The town board transferred $24,000 from the 1980 Community Development Budget's relocation fund to the streets and drainage fund. These funds are for a share of the cost of the box culvert repairs adjacent to the public library.

Also transferred was $7,000 within the 1980 Community Development Budget from contingency to administrative activity. These transfers have already been approved by HUD.

Values were established for two pieces of property deemed unsuitable for rehabilitation in the town's community development rehabilitation area: $12,000 was the value set on property at 803 S. Walnut St.; $13,500 on property at 200 Walnut St. The values are based on independent appraisals obtained by the town. The administration was authorized to make offers to purchase both lots.

The town administrator was authorized to review the office space needs of the town and establish some direction in meeting those needs.

Approval was given for an amendment to the auditor's contract for additional services to be provided because of documentation of expenditures inadvertently destroyed.

The town's sewer use ordinance was amended, effective Sept. 1.

Authorization was given for the utilities department to purchase a sidemower attachment from the low bidder, Hendrix-Barnhill Co., Greenville, for $2,808, including tax. Also approved was the purchase of four 75 KVA transformers for Bundy School at a cost of $920 each from Westinghouse Electric Supply, the low bidder.

The public works department's request to purchase curb and gutter and sidewalk forms costing $2,586.70 was approved. E.F. Craven's offer was accepted, although it was $79 more than that of A.E. Finley Co., because the E.F. Craven forms better fit with what the department is already using. A request for

Rampant AD Receives A 2nd Award

Richard "Bud" Phillips, Rose High School's athletic director, has been named the winner of the Distinguished Service Award by the National Interscholastic Athletic Administrators Association.

The award is the equivalent of being named Athletic Director of the Year. Phillips shares the award with four other AD's from across the country.

Earlier named North Carolina's Athletic Director of the Year by the North Carolina Association of Athletic Directors, Phillips will receive the national award at the NIAAA's convention in Indianapolis, Ind., on December 13. The other four AD's who will join him in the select group are from Colorado, Wisconsin, Illinois and North Dakota.

Phillips is the immediate past president of the state's athletic director's association.

A native of Burlington, Phillips received his undergraduate training at Wake Forest and received his master's from George Peabody.

He began his coaching career in Alamance County at Haw River, and later coached at E.M. Holt in the same county before moving to Burlington's Williams High School. After eight years in Alamance, he moved to Greenville, where he was named head football coach at Rose High School.

He has also served coaching responsibilities in baseball, wrestling and basketball, and currently coaches the Rose High School boys' track team. His teams have won championships in each of those sports, most recently the Big East and the Northeastern sectional track meets.

Phillips took over the athletic directorship at Rose in 1970, and coordinates the programs of both Rose and E.B. Aycock Junior High School.

For six of the past eight years, including this just past season, Rose has won the All-Sports Trophy of the Big East Conference, emblematic of supremacy in the league. Rose also finished in the top ten in the Wachovia Cup standings — a similar trophy given on a statewide basis — for two of the past three years.

Hamlet Beats Pitt Co., 5-3

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Both coaches seemed to agree — the opportunity was there for victory for both teams. But it was Hamlet's Post 49 American Legion baseball team that pulled out a 5-3 win over Pitt County last night as the two opened play for the Eastern North Carolina title.

Hamlet, which has thrice won the state championship under coach George Whitfield, leads the best-of-seven series, 1-0.

"It was the type of game that anyone could win," Whitfield said afterwards.

"They got the big hits when they needed them," Pitt County coach Bill Davis said. And that pretty well summed it up.

Throughout the game, Hamlet put six runners as far as third base. Five of those runners scored. Pitt County put seven men on third, but only three of them crossed the plate. That was the story of the game.

Pitt actually outhit Hamlet, 11-10, but it wasn't so much as who got the most hits as when they got them. Hamlet was able to bunch its hits better and also got more extra base hits, a double and two triples as compared to just one double for Pitt.

"It's always nice to win the first game," Whitfield said. "They (Pitt County) kept battling back. They had a lot of character. I thought (Roger) Williams pitched a fine game. He threw the ball hard, as hard as we've seen. He has a good slider and that makes his fast ball even better. Plus he's a great competitor."

Whitfield said he was surprised that his team hit the ball as well as it did. "I saw him (Williams) pitch outstanding ball in high school, and we were fortunate to get the good hits at the right time."

Davis felt his club just got outplayed. "When they got their men into scoring position, they got 'em across and we didn't. We just got outthudded."

Davis too felt Williams, who was losing his first game in seven American Legion decisions this year, did a good job, despite giving up 10 hits. Williams walked just two and struck out 12. Although he didn't seem to have his usual rhythm, Davis felt that it was because of the humidity. "He was probably trying to pace himself. But he threw the ball fairly well. But they got some big hits at the right time to get their people in."

"We just have to bounce back and start over," he added.

Hamlet grabbed the initial lead in the first inning with an unearned run. With one down, Eddy Hickman grounded to short, but the ball was bobbled and the runner reached. Jerome Goodwin was hit by a pitch, but Walter Gould hit what looked to be a perfect double play ball. Goodwin was thrown out at second, but the relay to first was way wide of the target, and Hickman, who had moved to third, easily scampered home.

Pitt came back with its first threat — but like so many times — left the runner stranded. Randy Warren opened the Pitt half of the game with a double up the alley in left center, moving to third on a ground out. But the next two batters grounded back to the mound, ending that threat. Warren was to be the first of 12 Pitt runners left standing.

Pitt finally connected in the fourth inning, scoring twice to take a 2-1 lead. Emmett Walsh singled to center and Williams got a hit to left. Both were sacrificed up, and Tom Buie reached on a fielder's choice. On that play, Walsh was caught off third, but managed to scramble back in time, leaving the bases loaded. Sammy Hodges then got an infield hit, scoring Walsh, and Bill Kittrell reached on a fielder's choice, scoring Williams.

In the fifth inning, both teams left runners at third — the only time Hamlet left one there during the evening.

In the sixth, however, Hamlet pushed over two to take the lead, thanks to some big hits. With one away, Gould walked and stole second. He easily scored when Alex Wallace tripled to deep center. Mike Moore followed with a double to right, scoring Wallace to put Hamlet back up, 3-2.

Managerial Merry-Go-Round

Steinbrenner Fires Michael, Hires King In Yankee Circus

NEW YORK (AP) — The managerial merry-go-round in the three-ring circus which passes for the New York Yankees shows no sign of slowing down.

George Steinbrenner, the impatient owner who discards managers the way Elizabeth Taylor goes through husbands, struck again following Tuesday night's embarrassing 1-0, 14-2 doubleheader loss to the Chicago White Sox which dropped the Yankees into a fifth-place tie with Detroit in the American League East, eight games from the top with a 50-50 record.

Gene Michael's second term as manager came to a sudden end, the ninth managerial change — involving six people, three of them two-time losers — since Steinbrenner purchased the club in 1973.

The new man on the hot seat — the Yankees' third manager this season — is Clyde King, former pilot of the San Francisco Giants and Atlanta Braves and one of five pitching coaches Steinbrenner has gone through this year in his madcap efforts to right what appears to be a sinking ship.

According to Steinbrenner, the 57-year-old King is taking over "reluctantly, but willingly" on an interim basis as a favor to the owner.

King will be at the helm for tonight's two-nighter against the White Sox. If it follows the same script as Tuesday night's debacle, he may not last long, even though Steinbrenner said King would be the "interim manager for the balance of the season."

At the end of the season, he said, "we will talk further about what we plan to do."

Since he put together the group which purchased the Yankees from CBS in 1973 — and inherited Ralph Houk as manager — Steinbrenner has gone through Bill Virdon, Billy Martin (twice), Bob Lemon (twice), Dick Howser, Michael (twice) and now King. Houk was the only one who left more or less voluntarily.

North State Beaten, 6-0, In Semifinals

BOONE — Tri-Community's Billy Haynes tossed a two-hit shutout and banded out two home runs in pacing his team to a 6-0 victory over the Greenville North State Little Leaguers in the semifinals of the state tournament yesterday.

Tri-Community will meet King, a 7-5 winner over Myers Park, in today's championship game. The winner moves on to the South Regionals at St. Petersburg, Fla., next week.

Haynes struck out eight and walked just one along the way to the victory. Robbie McDonald, who took the loss for Greenville, allowed seven hits — three of them homers — while walking one and striking out seven.

Carter Signs With Chowan

Greenville Rose and Pitt County second baseman Mont Carter has signed a two-year scholarship to play baseball with Chowan College, it was announced last night.

"We're real happy to get him," Chowan coach Jerry Hawkins said. "We think there's a good chance he can start for us next year."

Carter, who helped lead the Rose to an unbeaten regular season and a berth in the Eastern finals of the state playoffs, is the fifth Rose player to sign a college scholarship.

Carter joins pitchers Roger Williams and Gordon Douglas, both of whom will play for North Carolina, and outfielder Tom Buie and shortstop Sammy Hodges, both of whom will play for Ferrum Junior College.

Carter is a member of the Pitt County American Legion team which is playing Hamlet for the Eastern Championship.

Carter, a left-handed hitter, is hitting .364 with 19 RBI. He has nine doubles and one home run and has stolen six bases in six attempts. Carter is fielding at a .905 clip, having made eight errors in 84 chances so far this season.

"I was really impressed with his fielding but I was more impressed with his hitting," Hawkins said. "He's got a super attitude about the ballgame and he's an aggressive type of player."

Hamlet Wins...

scoring Ingram. That made it

5-2. Pitt tried to rally, but got only one run in the bottom of the inning. After two were out, Terry Locust reached on an error and Walsh singled. Williams got a hit, scoring Locust, and putting the tying run on base. But a line drive to short by Gordon Douglas ended the threat and Hamlet had drawn first blood.

Goodwin had two hits to pace Hamlet, while Walsh had three and Locust and Williams each had two for Pitt.

The loss dropped Pitt's overall record to 24-7. Hamlet climbs to 23-11.

Gordon Douglas, 5-2, will get the call for Pitt County as the series resumes at Harrington Field at 8 p.m.

Michael replaced Lemon. Now it's King's turn.

How long he will last is anybody's guess. After all, Steinbrenner promised Lemon a full season following last year's World Series loss to the Los Angeles Dodgers, only to fire him April 25, just 14 games into the 1982 campaign. He brought back Michael, who had been announced as the manager for 1983.

The 44-year-old Michael lasted 86 games, leaving with a 44-42 record after Lemon's 6-8 mark.

Besides the managerial change, Steinbrenner also unleashed another blast at some of his high-priced players. Without naming names, he hinted that some of them had better produce...or else.

The owner's surprise sacking of Michael came on the heels of an announcement over the public address system during Tuesday night's second game that fans could exchange their tickets for any of six selected games later in the season.

"During the game," Steinbrenner explained, "the fans sitting under me were chanting, 'Refund! Refund!' and it occurred to me it might be a good idea from a public relations standpoint. It wasn't meant to embarrass the team. That had already been done. But the scoreboard wasn't working, and with thousands of people leaving (the Yankees were losing 9-1 at the time), we had to announce it."

And relief ace Rich Gossage added: "You're asking me what goes on in that man's head? I can't tell you that. But that's not the embarrassing part; what's embarrassing is the way we played. Maybe it doesn't show, but we've got a lot of proud guys on this club."

"Sometimes you wish you could let go a lot of your players, but that's not the way this game is structured and instead you have to let go your manager," Steinbrenner said. "Some players on this team think they're a lot better than they are, and it's hurt us."

"Not everybody. We've got some guys who are as good as they think they are. But a number of them think they're

Cardinals, Herzog 'Squeeze' Past Pittsburgh

By The Associated Press

St. Louis Cardinal Manager Whitey Herzog admits that when the suicide-squeeze backfires, "it looks like the dumbest play in the world."

But Tuesday night, it made him look like a genius. Herzog ordered Ozzie Smith to lay down a bunt with the bases loaded in the fifth inning and the play worked perfectly to help the Cardinals beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 4-2.

"I'd rather have had that one last night," Herzog said, referring to the previous night's 4-2 loss in 17 innings in which the Cardinals left 24 runners stranded.

Smith's key play scored Dane Iorg from third base and capped a three-run rally.

"I just wanted to get another run at the time," said Herzog with respect to Smith's bunt. "If Ozzie hit into a double play, we don't get anything."

The successful bunt represented the 10th time this year that the Cardinals have squeezed a runner home from third base.

"If we were hitting the cover off the ball, we wouldn't do that," said Herzog. "We should have done it last night in the seventh inning when we were leading 1-0."

Pittsburgh Manager Chuck Tanner could only throw his hands up.

"If you get it down as it's supposed to be put down, it's very difficult to stop," said Tanner of the squeeze play. "You can't pitch out four times with the bases loaded."

The victory was only the second in six games for the Cardinals, who remained two games back in the National League East.

"Any time we win now is a big game," said Smith. "Things are winding down. The last four or five games have been frustrating, to say the least. You find out the character of your ballclub by what happens. You just have to keep your head up."

Keith Hernandez's sacrifice fly, Willie McGee's RBI double and Smith's suicide squeeze in the fifth were the Cardinals' key blows off Don Robinson, 11-6.

Phillies 3, Expos 2

An error by newly acquired second baseman Doug Flynn and Bo Diaz's two-RBI high bounce to third triggered a three-run sixth inning that carried Philadelphia over Montreal. The three unearned runs against the frustrated David Palmer, 3-4, dropped the defending NL East champion Expos six games behind the first-place Phillies.

Mike Krukow, with relief help from Sid Monge and Ron Reed, earned his 11th victory in 17 decisions, a career high for the right-hander obtained last winter from the Chicago Cubs. It was Reed's sixth save.

Cubs 5, Mets 0

Leon Durham's two-run homer and the three-hit pitching of Doug Bird carried Chicago over New York. Durham's 15th homer came in the first inning after Ryne Sandberg had singled. The Cubs added two more runs in the fourth on a squeeze bunt by Larry Bowa and a run-scoring single by Bird.

Bird, 7-10, hurled his second complete game of the season and his first shutout despite near 90-degree weather and a 14-mph wind blowing out at Wrigley Field. He walked two and struck out five.

"The slider was my best pitch," said Bird. "I've been working on it with (coach) Billy Connors and it keeps getting better with every game. Basically, I'm a six or seven-inning pitcher, but I'll complete a few games if I get any defense."

Astros 7, Padres 6

Tony Scott's two-out, bases-loaded single in the 11th inning lifted Houston over San Diego.

Terry Puhl led off the 11th with a double off reliever Luis DeLeon, 4-4. Art Howe was walked intentionally and Luis Pujols bunted the runners along before DeLeon gave an intentional pass to pinch-hitter Alan Ashby. One out later, Scott ended the game with a line drive single, his third of the game.

Randy Moffitt, 2-3, pitched 22-3 innings of tough relief for the win.

The Padres had tied the score at 6-6 on Joe Lefebvre's home run leading off the ninth, his first of the year.

Dodgers 4, Reds 0

Bob Welch and Steve Howe stopped Cincinnati on six hits and Ken Landreaux belted a two-run homer, leading Los Angeles over the Reds.

Welch, 12-7, gave up all five Reds' hits over seven innings, striking out seven to earn his third straight victory. Howe came in after Larry Bittner led off the Reds' eighth with a double and finished up to earn his 12th save.

Ron Cey had a pair of hits for Los Angeles, including an RBI single in the fifth for the Dodgers' first run off Frank Pastore, 5-8.

"Tonight, I would have been in big trouble without the breaking ball," said Welch. "Instead of trying to throw the ball by somebody, I'm learning how to pitch with the breaking ball. I've gotten to the point where I'll throw it anytime, with a 3-and-2 count or 2-and-1."

Giants 6, Braves 3

Tom O'Malley's two-run homer in the ninth inning ignited a four-run rally to carry San Francisco over Atlanta. Milt May opened the inning off reliever Gene Garber, 6-5, with a single and was lifted for pinch runner Max Venable. O'Malley then drilled a 2-2 pitch off Terry Harper's glove and over the right-field fence at Atlanta Stadium for his second homer of the season.

Dave Bergman, Darrell Evans and Chili Davis hit consecutive singles for another San Francisco run and later in the inning, pitcher Greg Minton, 8-4, had a sacrifice fly.

White Hits For The Cycle In Royal Victory

By The Associated Press

Frank White celebrated one of baseball's rarities, hitting for the cycle. Gene Michael on the other completed another of baseball's cycles that is neither rare nor something to celebrate — the end of a ride on the New York Yankees managerial merry-go-round.

White tripled home the winning run in the ninth inning Tuesday night, giving Kansas City a 6-5 victory over the Detroit Tigers and becoming the first Royal player to perform the feat more than once.

"I didn't think about it (hitting for the cycle) at all," said White after hitting for a single, double, triple and home run and knocking in four runs as the Royals won their sixth straight game. He last accomplished the feat on Sept. 26, 1979.

White's two-out triple scored Onix Concepcion from first base and finished off a 4-for-5 night that saw his batting average jump from .318 to .325, fourth highest in the league.

Michael joined Billy Martin and Bob Lemon as two-time losers on owner George Steinbrenner's list of former managers when he was fired after the Yankees dropped a doubleheader to Chicago 1-0 and 14-2.

Royals 6, Tigers 5

White hit a two-run homer in the first inning and singled home a run in the seventh. Hal McRae also homered for Kansas City, his 19th.

White Sox 1-14, Yankees 0-2

Home runs by Harold Baines, Tony Bernazard and Jerry Hairston paced Chicago's 19-hit attack in the second game, while the White Sox took the opener 1-0 behind the seven-hit pitching of Steve Trout and three relievers and an RBI single by Aurelio Rodriguez.

Every Chicago starter collected at least one hit and one RBI in the nightcap as the White Sox batted around while scoring five runs in both the fifth and sixth innings.

Brewers 7, Blue Jays 4

Cecil Cooper slammed a two-run homer and Ted Simmons and Paul Molitor added solo shots as Milwaukee moved back into first place in the AL East by a half game over Boston.

Pete Vuckovich, 12-4, pitched six innings, before Rollie Fingers recorded his 24th save with three innings of one-hit relief.

Orioles 7-6, Red Sox 2-7

Carney Lansford blasted a solo homer and Dave Stapleton added a two-run blast during a three-run, eighth-inning uprising as Boston rallied to gain a split of its twi-night doubleheader with Baltimore.

The Orioles scored six runs in the fourth inning of the nightcap as Eddie Murray hit a solo homer, Lenn Sakata added two-run shot and Jim Dwyer hit a three-run blast, giving Baltimore a 6-4 lead.

Twins 5, Angels 4

Gary Ward blasted his third homer in as many games, a game-winning two-run shot in the eighth inning, as Minnesota posted its third straight victory despite a three homers on consecutive pitches by California's Doug DeCinces.

DeCinces barrage came against Brad Havens, 8-7, and gave the third baseman seven homers in his last six games and 19 for the season. His first homer came on a 1-0 pitch in the first. He hit Havens' first pitch after Brian Downing's walk in the third and picked on the first serve with two outs and nobody on in the fifth.

Mariners 3, A's 2

Richie Zisk stretched his hitting streak to 21 games with a solo homer and Bruce Bochte added a two-run shot as Mike Moore and two relievers combined on a five-hitter to defeat Oakland.

Rickey Henderson, who is just a stolen base away from breaking his AL single-season mark of 100, reached base once but was picked off.

Indians 2-4, Rangers 0-5

Larry Parrish cracked a three-run homer in the 10th inning to give Texas a split of their twi-night doubleheader.

John Grubb and Lee Mazzilli hit two-out singles off Dan Spillner, 8-6, and Parrish followed with his seventh homer of the year. Cleveland tied the game on Larry Milbourne's two-out, ninth-inning single.

Len Barker and Dan Spillner combined on a four-hitter and Ron Hassey homered as Cleveland won the opener.

N. State Falls...

Tri-Community, from the Piedmont Triad area, grabbed the lead in the second inning on a solo homer. Haynes hit his first shot, with no one on, in the third for a 2-0 lead, and Tri-Community added two more runs in the fourth. Haynes finished off the scoring in the fifth inning with another homer, this one with one man on base.

Brian Wille claimed both of the North State hits, both of them singles.

The loss wound up the season for the Greenville players as they finish tied for third in the state.

Nelson Out To Defend PGA Title Against Watson

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Larry Nelson, the quiet little man who will defend his title this week, is confident and, quite possibly, nearing a peak of his very considerable talents going into the 64th PGA national championship.

But then, so is Tom Watson. "I'm relaxed and happy with the way I'm playing," said Watson, whose latest victory made him only the fifth man in history to win both the U.S. and British Opens in the same year.

"I like it a lot better coming in like this rather than coming in fighting the golf swing and figuring you're going to have to make a lot of putts or do a lot of scrambling to be able to win."

"I feel like I can go ahead and shoot some good scores and win the golf tournament," Watson said after a practice round Tuesday in sweltering heat at the 6,862-yard Southern Hills Country Club course.

Hagen Golf Tourney Set Here

The American Cancer Society's Walter Hagen Invitational Golf Tournament will be held Friday, August 13, at Brook Valley Country Club.

There will be four divisions in this 18-hole best-ball tournament: men's handicap, men's scratch, women's handicap and women's scratch.

The division winners will qualify for the state tournament to be held at Bay Tree Plantation, S.C., and winners there will qualify for the national tournament to be held at Disney World in Orlando, Fla.

The entry fee for play is $120 per team. Entry forms may be obtained from the following country clubs: Ayden, Farmville, Brook Valley and Greenville. The deadline for entries is Wednesday, August 11. Team starting times will be available by noon, August 12, at Brook Valley.

Additional information may be obtained by contacting the American Cancer Society in Greenville, 752-2574.

Proceeds from this tournament will go toward the fight against cancer.

Three NFL Vets Retire

By The Associated Press

On a hot August day, three National Football League veterans found they no longer wanted to play the game.

Wide receiver Wallace Francis, guard Henry Sheppard and linebacker Mike Hunt retired Tuesday as NFL teams continued preparations for the exhibition season, which begins Saturday.

Those retirements followed by one day the announcement that All-Pro defensive tackle Louie Kelcher of the San Diego Chargers had called it quits. Kelcher said he'd lost his desire to play football.

Francis, a nine-year veteran acquired last week on waivers by the New England Patriots, has decided to enter the ministry. Patriots Coach Ron Meyer said.

"He just felt that he has more important things" than football, Meyer said. "He felt that he was touched religiously."

Francis was a star with Atlanta and is the third leading receiver in Falcons history. He had hoped moving to New England would rekindle his desire to play football.

Sweds In Spotlight On Clay

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Sweden's most famous tennis player may be taking time off from the tour but Bjorn Borg's countrymen are keeping their nation's program in the spotlight.

Hans Simonsson, buried in the depths of the pro tennis computer ratings, played himself right into that spotlight Tuesday with a major upset of top-seeded Guillermo Vilas in the second round of the 73rd U.S. Open Clay Court Championships.

Simonsson, 20, kept Vilas from playing his usual overpowering game en route to a 6-4, 6-1 victory.

"I think he was very confused. He didn't know what to do," said Simonsson of Vilas, No.3 in the latest Association of Tennis Professionals computer ratings — about 240 positions ahead of his conqueror. Simonsson confessed surprise over defeating Vilas, who has won seven Grand Prix events this year and finished second twice while earning more than $345,000 on the tour.

Mats Wilander, Simonsson's 17-year-old Davis Cup teammate, had plenty of company in his thoughts at the outcome. "It surprised me very much. Hans hasn't been playing very well," said Wilander after losing his serve only once against Jose-Luis Damiani of Uruguay en route to a 6-1, 6-4 victory. "I watched the second set. And in the second set, Vilas didn't have a chance."

Both Simonsson and Wilander have a long way to go to reach Sunday's finals. Among those still in the field is second-seeded Jose Luis Clerc of Argentina.

"You have to go with the men who are playing well now," he said, and ticked off some names: "Cal Peete, Bruce Lietzke, Tom Kite, Craig Stadler."

He paused for a moment, let a mischievous smile play across his face, and added: "And Jack Nicklaus — even though he missed the cut in his last start."

It was a playful dig at a close friend and the man Watson has called "the greatest player in the history of the game."

Nicklaus, the victim of Watson's spectacular, winning chip-in at the U.S. Open, includes a record-matching five PGA titles in his unequalled collection of 17 major professional titles.

Nicklaus missed the cut in his last start, in the Canadian Open, but has a history that insists he'll be a factor in the title race. He has, after all, finished first or second eight times and has a record of 35 first-or-second-place finishes in the majors.

It is not surprising Watson overlooked Nelson.

"It's been my poorest season in several years," Nelson said after a strong finish in the Canadian Open put him among the top 10. "But I'm only about one good tournament away from matching last year."

"I feel I'm playing very, very well coming in here. I'm playing better than at any time since I won last year."

"And I'm playing better than I was at this time last year. I'm pretty excited about making my defense."

The others, mentioned by Watson, have their credentials in order. Peete, one of golf's most accurate players, has won two of his last three starts — the Milwaukee Open and the Anheuser-Busch Classic.

Lietzke broke a 15-month victory drought last weekend with his triumph in Canada and has won more than $108,000 in his last two starts.

Stadler owns the Masters crown and two other U.S. titles, but hasn't played particularly well in recent starts.

Kite, usually one of the game's steadiest performers, also missed the cut in Canada, breaking a string that had stretched back to the 1980 U.S.

Open.

Some other major standouts in the 150-man field include Andy Bean, Jerry Pate, Ray Floyd, Hale Irwin, Ben Crenshaw and Tom Weiskopf. Among the foreign stars are Greg Norman and David Graham of Australia, Nick Faldo and Peter Oosterhuis of England, Gary Player of South Africa and Isao Aoki of Japan.

Lee Trevino, who won the 1974 PGA title, is recovering from recent back surgery and was forced to withdraw.

Portions of the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday will be televised by ABC. ESPN, the all-sports cable network, will provide live coverage of portions of the first two rounds Thursday and Friday.

THE DAILY REFLECTOR has been advertising local businesses since January 26, 1882.

And for over 30 years, Joseph Saad has been advertising his family's local shoe repair business in THE DAILY REFLECTOR.

"My motto has always been 'Never lie to a customer,'" said Joe. "If a shoe can't be repaired properly enough to fit correctly again I'll tell them so."

This way of doing business has apparently paid off for Joe. His shop now repairs shoes for third-generation customers.

Following his tour of duty in the Army during World War II, Joe opened the shop on July 3, 1946, in the same location that it is at today — 113 Grande Ave.

Although his wife Juanita, along with their youngest son Jimmy, now handle the routine shoe repairs, Joe does the specialty prescription footwear work that customers from as far away as Durham and the coast come to get done.

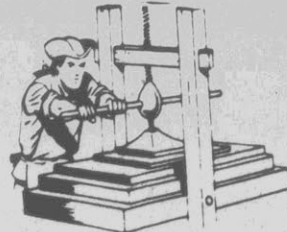

You can still get an old-fashioned shoe shine at Joe Saad's place, while passing the time of day with Leslie Peterson, a shoe repairman for 18 years at Saad's Shoe Repair.

"Shoes have changed a lot over the years," said Joe. "Probably the biggest change is that shoes no longer leave those black heel marks that were so hard to clean off the floors."

"But one thing that hasn't changed over the years is our thoroughly enjoyable relationship with THE DAILY REFLECTOR."

Joe Saad's shoe repair business has been located at 113 Grande Avenue for almost 36 years.

Announcement

I wish to announce to the public that I have leased the Shoe Repair Shop formerly operated by the College View Cleaners and Laundry at their plant, 105 Grande Avenue.

Having years of experience behind me, I will appreciate the return of all my old patronage while at the Norfolk Shoe Shop before my entry into service in 1942 and will welcome all who wish to have any shoe repair work done.

I will strive to give only first class work. With our new machinery this will be easier to do.

Exploring Undersea Volcano For Source Of Life

By LINDY WASHBURN
Associated Press Writer
HONOLULU (AP) — The blue depths of the Pacific Ocean may yield clues to sources of life on Earth, say oceanographers who embark next month on a series of voyages to explore the undersea reaches of Hawaii's most active volcano.

Looking for underwater hotspots and biological oases of bacteria and exotic animals through the portholes of a 5-foot submersible sphere, three scientists from the University of Hawaii will be mapping the undersea flank of Kilauea Volcano.

"It's like discovering a new continent," said microbiologist David Karl. "Imagine discovering Australia and finding koala bears, kangaroos — that's how it is to discover these new life forms."

He likens the perspective from the submersible, called Makalii, to sitting inside your car and "trying to map an area at night, using only your car headlights."

"At 700 feet, the ocean is a real deep blue, similar to being outside at night with a full moon," said David Epp, a geophysicist. "You can see things, but they're shadowy."

"Sometimes you look up and you see rocks hanging there very precariously — bigger than the submarine," added Gary McMurtry, the group's geochemist. "You wonder — just one little jiggle..."

On dry land, the Hawaii island volcano is one of the most active and thoroughly studied volcanoes on earth.

But does that volcanic activity continue underwater? And if it does, is it accompanied by the unique life forms found near other hydrothermal vents?

The research along an area of the volcano called the Puna rift zone may bring new insight into whether heat — instead of light — can serve as the source of life.

And discoveries of bacteria and highly evolved species of fish, crabs and worms hovering around hot underwater vents could extend the known limits of conditions in which life exists, the scientists say.

The two-person sub is equipped with a supersensitive thermometer to indicate changes in the water outside to the men inside.

Wearing cut-offs and T-shirts, each will take a turn gliding along the ocean floor on a four-to-six hour voyage with the Makalii's pilot, Boh Bartko.

A series of dives is planned for September, with the scientists planning to go down when weather and sea conditions are right, said Epp. After heavy rains, visibility is limited because of sedimentation in the water, and when the sea is choppy, it is difficult to navigate the sub and its auxiliary launch vessel.

Through the whine of the sub's battery-operated life-support system, they'll record detailed descriptions of the changing scene through the portholes: the coils of lava "like toothpaste squeezed out of a tube," or sliced up "like a bread crust"; the "bioluminescent blobs of marine snow"; the "pale pink coral" etched against black basalt, even the color and size of a surprised octopus.

They will be looking for areas of hot water and any changes in the content or structure of the rock or types of life nearby.

Karl, Epp and McMurtry are building on research done in other areas where geologic activity releases heat into ocean water.

Along the Pacific Rim, where the gradual separation of the earth's crust has created thermal vents spewing super-heated water into the ocean depths, scientists have studied unusual communities of animals that apparently thrive in total darkness.

Karl, who participated in one of those expeditions near the Galapagos Islands, says the animals — including 10-foot long white tube worms totally devoid of digestive tracts, giant crabs, and white, eel-like fish — rely on bacteria as food.

But do these thermal vents and rifts exist in places besides the Pacific Rim? And if they do, are the vents surrounded by similar life forms?

The answers are of more than purely scientific interest.

McMurtry estimates that more than half of the energy potential of Kilauea Volcano lies underwater. Commercial developers are only beginning to devise the technology to tap that geothermal potential on land; eventually, they may turn their attention to the ocean.

Studying the way water moves around and through the geothermal heat source may also yield interesting information on the effects of that power generation, according to Epp.

And the chemical reactions near the undersea thermal vents often produce valuable ore deposits, including copper and iron and manganese-rich sulfides.

But the most interesting implications come from the discovery of those strange creatures adapted to live at tremendous pressure in the darkness of the ocean depths, the scientists said.

If they can survive without light, said Karl, perhaps there is life on other planets, in places the sun cannot reach.

The research is being funded by the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

Institute Set At Mt. Olive

MOUNT OLIVE — The 1982 Ministers' Institute at Mount Olive College will be held in Henderson Building on two dates, Monday and Tuesday, August 9 and 10. Registration is at 9 a.m. on Monday and at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday.

Topics will be "The Minister and Crisis Ministry" and "The Minister and His Financial Planning." Speakers and panel members include Calvin Mercer, professor of religion at Mount Olive; Dr. Eugene Sumner, chairman of the sociology department at Meredith College; Walter Reynolds of Winterville, and several others.

Two Grants For Bennett College

GREENSBORO — Bennett College is the recipient of two recent grants totaling $115,716.

One grant, for $65,000, comes from the Ford Foundation and is to support non-traditional study opportunities for independent scholars at the women's college. Dr. Isaac H. Miller, president of the college, said the grant is going through the United Negro College Fund from the Foundation's Capital Resources Development Program.

The second grant, for $50,716, is from the U.S. Department of Education to support the college's special services program for assistance to students whose academic deficiencies limit their preparation for college level work.

New Deliveries For Medication

(AP) — Medicines to be worn like a bandage, or like a contact lens to replace eyedrops, slow-release medicines that last for days or years, and medicines that target just the part of the body that needs them, are part of a fast-growing revolution in pharmacy.

"These new systems make use of the skin or other parts of entry into the body," Dr. Yie W. Chien, a research professor at the Rutgers University College of Pharmacy said of the new drug delivery system. "But their essence is that they deliver medication far more efficiently than conventional drugs administered orally or by injection."

VOA Director Departed On Day Of Turnover Criticism

By MIKE FEINSILBER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - The White House, in a coincidence, announced the departure of the Voice of America's director on the same day the government released a report criticizing the VOA for its frequent turnover at the top.

The report, issued Tuesday by the General Accounting Office, found management problems at the Voice to be so severe that they hinder the agency in its attempts to tell America's story to the world. The Voice broadcasts in shortwave in English and 38 foreign languages.

It was coincidental that the report, decrying frequent turnover in top management of the Voice of America, appeared at the same time the White House made known John Hughes' appointment to another post.

Hughes, a former editor of the Christian Science Monitor, was named assistant secretary of state for public affairs. He had been the fourth VOA director since 1980. The VOA made no announcement about who would succeed Hughes.

In his new post, Hughes will serve at the State Department's chief spokesman. He succeeds Dean Fischer, who resigned to return to the private sector.

Hughes, 52, was a correspondent for the Christian Science Monitor when he won the Pulitzer Prize in 1967 for his coverage of the overthrow of President Sukarno of Indonesia.

"I would not ask for Mr. Hughes were it not for his unique qualifications," Secretary of State George Shultz wrote Charles Z. Wick, director of the International Communications Agency, the VOA's parent organization.

The General Accounting Office, meanwhile, said the problems at VOA consisted of "continuing changes in leadership, vacancies in key positions, poor facilities and outmoded equipment."

"For varying reasons, including budgetary constraints, management style and political philosophy, the problems continue to the point where the effectiveness of VOA is being compromised," said the report issued by the congressional watchdog agency.

It quoted a former director, without identifying him, as having said that the Voice "lacks much of what is considered essential in normal broadcasting terms... and much of its production equipment belongs in a museum."

Wick told the GAO that its criticisms of VOA management practices were on target.

"We totally support the purposes of the study and we are in general accord with its conclusions," he wrote.

Two internal reviews of mismanagement in the technical division led to the resignation of officials in key positions and as a result the division "has operated in a crisis environment," the report said.

In the technical area, the Voice could make better use of its facilities "by limiting redundant operations, employing idle transmitters and revising construction practices," the report said.

It recommended closing relay stations in Bethany, Ohio, and in Dixon, Calif. The Dixon station has been on a standby basis since 1979.

The Voice should eliminate backup shortwave relay transmissions which duplicate satellite service, the report said, adding that satellites are more reliable than traditional transmission systems and operating both is wasteful.

Great Complexities In Separating Siamese Twins

By SHARON COHEN
Associated Press Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — He was a doctor and she was a nurse but no medical training prepared them for the birth of their two sons — Siamese twins, severely deformed, joined at the waist and sharing three legs.

A medical chart read, "Do not feed infants, in accordance with parents' wishes." Soon after, Dr. Robert Mueller and his wife, Pamela Schopp, were accused of trying to kill their children, but a judge dismissed the charges because of insufficient evidence.

Doctors initially gave the boys little hope for survival. But 14 months later, Jeff and Scott were separated in a nine-hour operation at Children's Memorial Hospital here. The surgery was July 15, and Jeff went home last week. Scott, who has a heart ailment and is the weaker twin, remains hospitalized.

Their surgery was the latest example of the risky, complex and emotionally wrenching operation that separates Siamese twins.

"Of all the operations, this probably has the most psychological effect on all concerned... just because of the uniqueness of it," said Dr. Ted Votteler, director of pediatric surgery at Children's Medical Center in Dallas.

The birth of Siamese twins is rare, and so is their successful separation. Doctors estimate Siamese twins are born once in every 45,000 to 60,000 births — one in every 600 set of twins is joined. Most Siamese twins die during birth or immediately after.

For those who live, modern technology is significantly improving chances of survival — and for successful separation.

"The bottom line is we are better able to evaluate the children with various new techniques," said Dr. J. Alex Haller, chief of children's surgery at Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore. Doctors say there are more sophisticated surgical tools, much safer anesthesia for children, and improved equipment; such as the sonogram — ultrasound — which provides a picture of the fetus.

Haller said the pictures can show whether a woman is carrying twins and if they are joined. "Twins who are not hooked together float around," he said. "The ones who are hooked can't."

The advantage of pictures and diagnostic tests is that problems can be identified before surgery, said Dr. Dennis Shermeta, chief of pediatric surgery at the University of Chicago Children's Hospital.

"Success," he said, "depends on how much knowledge you have before going into the operating room."

Shermeta said it's difficult to estimate how many Siamese twins have been successfully separated, because uncomplicated cases aren't publicized. But he estimated about a dozen operations have been attempted in the past five years, with both twins surviving in five or six cases.

Success depends, doctors say, largely on where the babies are joined. If there's a shortage of vital organs — one heart, one lung or a fused brain — one baby, at least, will certainly die.

But many other separations can be performed. "In a case where there's two kidneys, both in one twin, you could transplant one kidney to the other twin," said Dr. Clifford Snyder, chairman of the plastic surgeon division at the University of Utah. "You can take a liver and even divide it."

Snyder was among doctors attending Elisa and Lisa Hansen, the Utah girls joined at the head who were successfully separated in May 1979.

The surgery is a painstaking, laborious process. Even preparing the babies can take four hours.

The operating room must be kept warm. There are monitors for the babies' vital signs. And there can be as many as 26 nurses, surgeons, anesthesiologists, and pediatricians working as a team for as long as 10 hours in the operating room.

"It's very exciting surgery," Haller says. "You start out with one patient. You end up with two."

In some cases, a shortage of vital organs forces a decision — which baby to save. Doctors say the decision is made before surgery and after talks among parents, clergy and doctors.

"Obviously you try and have two normal babies," Shermeta said. "If you don't have the necessary equipment, that's not possible."

Some surgeons say getting the babies sutured poses as much a problem as separation, because of a lack of skin.

And in many cases, one twin is weaker. "Mostly in conjoined twins, one is the runt and one is the powerhouse," Snyder said. "One governs the other."

If the weaker child has serious medical problems, doctors recommend saving the child who has the better chance of surviving.

Votteler said in one of his cases, one baby had severe brain damage and could not have survived. A decision was made to save the other.

When the surgery is to be performed is also a factor. In March, Haller separated 2-day-old twins because of an intestinal problem. Surgery can be necessary if one child's life is endangered because one joined twin cannot survive if the other dies.

He said few attempts are made in newborns because the risk of separation declines as the child grows. But Votteler said if twins are older than a year, "the situation gets more confused psychologically for the parents (and) the kids..." There are a few cases of Siamese twins living out their lives joined.

At least one doctor, Kenneth Vaux, professor of ethics at the University of Illinois Medical Center, predicts that with improved medical technology, there will be better detection of birth defects and women can choose to abort. As a result, he said, "you'll have fewer and fewer cases of this kind."

Caiman Is Recaptured

LAUREL, Del. (AP) — It might have looked like a scene from a grade B horror movie, "The Creature from The Black Lagoon," but the participants were all business when they embarked in search of an alligator-like creature that had eluded the authorities.

In the end, it was a part-time watermelon farmer who succeeded at corralling the critter — a five-foot, 70-pound caiman that had been thrashing around Trussman Pond for more than a week.

Officials said the caiman was dumped by an unidentified man who said it had grown too big to be a pet, and the wily lizard foiled all attempts to recapture it until 20-year-old Wayne Hudson came along.

Hudson and nine others — eight relatives and a family friend — launched a tiny armada late Saturday, determined not to come back without the caiman.

The group piled into three rowboats — each was equipped with a high-powered searchlight — to spot their prey, which moved about the pond only at night.

"We just kept closing in on him," Hudson said. "With three lights, we could see him everywhere he went."

Shortly after midnight, Hudson managed to get a noose around the caiman's broad back, eventually getting it into a large cage and back to shore.

Javits Leaves Hospital Care

STONY BROOK, N.Y. (AP) — Former U.S. Sen. Jacob Javits has been released from Stony Brook University Hospital, where he was admitted for observation July 20.

Hospital spokesman Jim Rhatigan said Javits, 78, who suffers from a degenerative nerve ailment, was released Monday evening.

The spokesman said the former senator will continue to receive physical therapy for the nerve disease.

Indians Fight Opening Sacred Place To Industry

By THOMAS MURPHY
Associated Press Writer
EUREKA, Calif. (AP) — Virgin timber towers above the headwaters of Blue Creek, providing refuge for the golden eagle, the spotted owl and the wolverine. Pepperwood and incense cedars rise beside Oregon myrtle, madrone, vine maple and Pacific dogwood. Salmon and brook trout thrive in the pristine water.

It is not surprising that four Indian tribes — the Hurok, Hupa, Tolowa and Karok — have prized the high country northeast of here for centuries, reserving it as a sacred place for training medicine men.

Nor is it surprising that lumber companies have long sought a way into this rugged area of northern California so they could haul its rare timbers to mills along the coast.

The Forest Service says the area could be used for both purposes. Later this summer, it will construct the final six-mile leg of the 55-mile Gasquet-Orleans Road, a project it claims will achieve that end.

But Indian leaders decry the project, known as the GO Road, as "cultural genocide."

"Instead of killing us off, they're destroying our cultural functions," says

Walt Lara, a Hurok Indian and logger whose family members worship in the high country.

Jack Norton, a Hupa who teaches ethnic studies at nearby Humboldt State University, agrees.

"You can destroy a people just as effectively by mentally committing genocide as you can physically," Norton said. "If you destroy a people's religious dignity, worth and purpose, you destroy them."

The medicine men, called shamans, have been the traditional leaders of the tribes, which do not have chiefs.

The strongest incentive for building the road through Humboldt and Del Norte counties is the jobs it will provide. The unemployment rate hit 18 percent in Humboldt County this spring. It passed 28 percent in Del Norte County.

The Forest Service predicts the road will create 203 jobs. When Del Norte County residents voted in a June 1980 referendum, the vote went 4-to-1 in favor of completing the road.

Right now, Forest Service officials say the Indians are the only ones benefiting from the Blue Creek region.

"We're directed by Congress to manage this thing for multiple use and benefits for all people," said Richard Ferneau, environmental coordinator for the Six Rivers National Forest.

To establish "multiple use," the Forest Service has approved a master plan for "the Blue Creek unit." The road will open up the country. The plan will tell which areas can be clear cut and which must be preserved.

Ferneau notes the Indian "power sites" — sacred areas with names like Doctor Rock and Medicine Mountain — will be protected by half-mile buffer zones.

The Indians say buffer zones won't do the job. To them "the whole country is sacred," says Norton. For centuries, Indians seeking spiritual enlightenment have hiked through the wilderness as part of their rite.

"That's why all the other country is just as important as when you get there," said Lara. "That's what the Forest Service and everybody else doesn't understand. They want to set aside a specific spot, but that's no good."

However, some of the government's own experts are against the road. In separate reports, both written under government contract, anthropologists Dorothy Theodoratus and William Bright have each noted the highway could interfere with Indian practices.

"I believe that the in-violate character of the Chimney Rock area is of great religious significance to a growing number of Indians and that road building and logging in that area would violate, without any compelling reason, the religious rights of those Indians," wrote Bright.

Alexander Aldrich, chairman of the federal Advisory Council on Historic Preservation, has called the road "a case study of inept agency planning and decision making that has created an unnecessary conflict between economic development and preservation."

Forest Service officials shrug off such comment, saying the government is required to consult groups like the council. "We don't have to follow their recommendations," said recreation staff officer John Holt.

Even if the road is built, even if the trees are cut and hauled to the mill, the mills may have no desire to save them. The construction industry is in so severe a recession in California that there is little demand for the lumber the Forest Service wants to sell.

The Sierra Club Legal Defense Fund has already filed suit to stop the Blue Creek management plan from taking effect. It hopes to expand that suit to include the GO Road with help from the Northcoast Environmental Center.

"After working all those years with Smokey the Bear, the Forest Service has a high degree of credibility," said center spokesman Tim McKay. "But they've pretty much reversed that in this situation."

McKay said that besides affecting the Indian sites, the plans for Blue Creek will ruin fisheries, pollute the creek with runoff, cause landslides on the steep hillsides and drive wildlife out of the area — all contentions that the Forest Service denies emphatically.

The only people who would use the road for recreational purposes, says McKay, are people "who think its aesthetically pleasing to look at clear cuts."

Miss Universe Pageant Helped Win In Ratings

LOS ANGELES (AP) - The Miss Universe Pageant, which was broadcast live from Peru, helped CBS win the television ratings race for the week ending Aug. 1, according to figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co.

Karen Dianne Baldwin, Miss Canada 1982, was crowned Miss Universe at the annual event on July 26.

The Miss Universe win, plus four other shows in the Top 10, gave CBS another first place in the ratings for the week. CBS had a rating of 14.1. ABC had 12.4 and NBC was in distant third place with 10.3.

The networks say this means in an average prime-time minute 14.1 percent of the nation's homes with TV were tuned to CBS.

In second place was "Too Close for Comfort," ABC's popular new comedy, followed by "Three's Company," another ABC series that is a veteran of the ratings wars.

Here are the Top 10 shows: "Miss Universe Pageant," a rating of 24.7 or 19.7 million households, CBS; "Too Close for Comfort," 19.7 or 15.7 million, ABC; "Three's Company," 19.5 or 15.6 million, ABC; "60 Minutes," 18.0 or 14.4 million, CBS; "WKRP in Cincinnati," 18.0 or 14.4 million, CBS; "Trapper John, M.D.," 18.0 or 14.4 million, CBS; "The Jeffersons," 17.5 or 14.0 million, CBS; "Hart to Hart," 16.5 or 13.2 million, ABC; "Laverne & Shirley," 16.1 or 12.9 million, ABC; "Gimme a Break," 16.0 or 12.8 million, NBC.

Here are the next 10: "Alice," CBS; "Hill Street

Documentary On Malls Tonight

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) - Charles Kuralt is on the road again. This road leads everywhere - and nowhere. This road ends in a shopping mall.

Tonight's "After the Dream Comes True," anchored by Kuralt, is CBS News' left-handed tribute to shopping malls. Are they a collection of convenience stores coming to the rescue of busy-beaver Americans? Or are they coffins of our culture, burying what was real and genuine about this country?

With a wistful glance backwards and a hard look sideways, this wonderfully subtle and sentimental documentary reports that, in the name of progress, future generations will never know the Ma and Pa Marketplace. They'll never know the art of friendly conversation. They'll never know diversity. They'll never know America.

Twenty-five years ago shopping malls didn't exist. But 20th-century pioneers, the developers and real estate salesmen, rediscovered America. To see how far they traveled, CBS went to Overland Park, Kan., where the Oak Park Mall does nearly twice the retail business of downtown Kansas City.

Oak Park doesn't proudly call itself the "Very Best of the Heart of America" for nothing. Its 134 stores, attracting 80,000 customers on a typical Saturday, have all the best: year-round comfortable temperatures, door-to-door Muzak and safe shopping.

"There are some things about shopping centers that may be a little too controlled," says Dave Sprinkle, manager of Oak Park. "Some of the critics say that some of the basic verve and life is missing in a shopping center, which is possibly so."

"But it's nice to know that your wife and kids can come out to Oak Park Mall and not worry about running across a wino out back here by the compactor."

But are shopping malls solutions to the problems or refuges from them? Are America's cities decaying and being neglected while attention and investment money move to the suburbs? Says one security officer in Oak Park: "A lot of people go to the malls to keep away from certain racial backgrounds and that sort of thing. Here, I think that they come to basically keep away from the problems of an urban mall."

There seem to be two types of mall walkers: adults, who shop, and teen-agers, who hang out. For today's kids - the "Me Generation" - malls are declarations of independence.

"It's a place to get away from everything. And to shop and do some things for yourself. See your friends," says Pam, who calls herself a "Mall Rat" and works and plays at Oak Park. "I spend more time at the mall than I do at my house."

Pam and her best friend, Melissa, do most of their socializing in the mall. But hanging out is not conversing, and playing video games is not reading books. Malls, with their sounds and carnival pitchmen, are circuses. They've become symbols of America's insatiable appetite for entertainment.

"It gets old being entertained by the same thing over and over again," says Melissa. "So it gets to be pretty boring up here sometimes. It hasn't been here that long, but things get old faster than they used to now."

How sad.

And that's the way Kuralt and his co-writer, producer Craig Leake, seem to feel about it. After all, Kuralt has spent part of his journalistic lifetime doing his "On the Road" segments, tracking down America's rich tradition and diversity.

Normally, correspondents appear at the end of documentaries for verbal epilogues. Wisely, Kuralt and Leake let Willie Nelson tug the hearstrings, fading out with "Somewhere Over the Rainbow," about a different young girl in a different Kansas singing about a different pot of gold.

1 ♠ Pass 2 ♣ Pass

2 NT Pass 3 NT Pass

Pass Pass

Opening lead: Three of ♣.

To say that every finesse has a 50 percent chance of success is not the same as saying all finesesses are equal. Consider this hand.

The auction was routine.

South had nearly enough to open one trump, so his decision

approval. North's raise to game was one of those easy decisions we all love to make.

West led a heart and declarer won the king. Only

up the diamond suit.

Declarer must give up the lead twice to accomplish that,

and by then the defenders will have collected at least three heart tricks and two diamonds.

With six tricks in high cards, declarer has to develop the club suit to produce the three extra tricks he needs. The percentage play is to take two fineses. If clubs are 3-2 and

honors, that will guarantee four tricks in the suit - and it

queen or the ten.

But what if the suit splits 4-1, as will happen almost 30 percent of the time? If East has four cards in the suit with both honors, nothing matters. Similarly, if West has both honors fourth, declarer can always

tricks. The only problem occurrs when East has a singleton honor.

If East's singleton is the

can do about it - except

finesse the ten or the queen on the first round, the defenders will always have two stoppers in the suit because of the spot cards. But what if East's singleton is the jack?

If declarer finesse the ten,

East wins and West still has

he catches the singleton jack.

Now he can return to hand to finesse the ten, and will collect

his contract.

Investigator Says MM 'Diary' Has Disappeared

LOS ANGELES (AP) - A former coroner's investigator says he was coerced into signing a certificate indicating Marilyn Monroe's death 20 years ago was a suicide, but the chief coroner at the time disputes any coercion.

Meanwhile, a fine arts dealer has upped the ante on the search for a diary purportedly kept by Miss Monroe, offering $100,000 for its recovery. A detective agency has already posted a $10,000 reward for the journal.

Miss Monroe died 20 years ago this week.

John Bowen made the $100,000 offer for the diary Tuesday, saying it was for an unidentified industrialist who wants the book for a private collection.

Previously, Robert Slatzer, a long-time friend of Miss Monroe's, and Milo Speriglio, the head of Nick Harris Detectives Inc., said they believe Miss Monroe was murdered, with the private investigation team offering a $10,000 reward for the diary.

Speriglio cheered the larger offer, saying it increased the chances the diary will be found. Under the terms of the offer, Speriglio would be allowed to inspect the journal.

Former coroner's investigator Lionel Grandison said Tuesday he believed "there were circumstances surrounding (Miss Monroe's) death that should have been investigated," but at the time he "got the impression there's where my future lies, in following orders."

Grandison, then 22, said he didn't want to sign the certificate because the investigation wasn't complete.

"The normal procedure was that when all the information was gathered, it was brought to the administrative office," said Grandison, who left the coroner's office about a year later and eventually went into the advertising business.

"But this time the medical folder was incomplete," he said. "The suicide team evaluation wasn't included. I went to Dr. (Theodore) Curphey, but he said that the determination had been made by the medical investigators that she had committed suicide."

Curphey, who was chief medical examiner and coroner at the time, said Tuesday that it is "absolutely not true" that he coerced Grandison into signing the certificate for the 36-year-old star.

"These are all stories that have gone around for years," said Curphey. "There's no point to them. The best evidence available (about Miss Monroe's death) is already on file in the records."

Roger Richman, who represents Miss Monroe's estate, criticized those making statements about the possibility that she was murdered. He said Tuesday that he accepts the coroner's report that she committed suicide.

Miss Universe Is Nonpolitical

NEW YORK (AP) - Canada's Karen Baldwin, the current Miss Universe, is keeping her ideas about the world to herself because "I don't believe beauty and politics mix."

The 18-year-old beauty queen from London, Ontario, made it clear Tuesday that she was happy to be treated just as a beauty queen.

"I've chosen to do this because it's what I want to do," she said when asked about being viewed as an object of beauty. "It's a dream come true. I'm enjoying myself and that's the most important thing."

"Although I am interested in the current affairs of the world, I don't believe beauty and politics mix," she said.

She won the Miss Universe contest in Lima, Peru, on July 26 and was making her first trip to New York, which she said was "just a smidgen bigger" than her hometown, a city of 270,000.

Shaken Up In Auto Mishap

LOS ANGELES (AP) - "Dynasty" star John Forsythe and another actor in the series were shaken up in a traffic accident that occurred as they returned from location work, a publicist says.

Forsythe, actor John James and five production crew members were in a small van that was struck from the rear by another van on Santa Monica Boulevard on Tuesday afternoon, said Rachel McAllister, a spokeswoman for Aaron-Spelling Productions.

Forsythe and James were treated at a medical clinic for minor injuries, she said.

Forsythe, 64, who portrays Blake Carrington in the popular show, slammed his head against the ceiling of the van and complained of a stiff neck, Ms. McAllister said. He later returned to work.

Jessen Attends Epilepsy Meet

Cathy Jessen, president of the Coastal Plains chapter of the Epilepsy Association of North Carolina, attended a board of directors training workshop recently. Scott Luce, a past president of the chapter is president of EANC.

The next board meeting will be held in Asheville Aug. 21. The chapter will be represented by its officers.

Divers Planning To Raise Henry VIII's Warship

SUNKEN TUDOR SHIP — This 16th century drawing depicts the Mary Rose, flagship of King Henry VIII, which was sunk in 1545. Since the wreck was discovered 17 years ago more than 25,000 dives have brought up the contents of the hull, and this fall archaeologists hope to raise the hull itself. (AP Laserphoto)

By ANDREW WARSHAW
Associated Press Writer

PORTSMOUTH, England (AP) — Henry VIII's 16th-century flagship, the Mary Rose, a time capsule of Tudor life lying under 40 feet of murky water off Portsmouth Harbor, comes home from battle this fall — 437 years late.

Seventeen years after the wreck of the Mary Rose was located, Prince Charles last month launched the final stage of what is one of the most ambitious underwater archaeological projects ever undertaken.

After more than 25,000 dives that have produced 14,000 artifacts — including such items as a rare 16th-century musical instrument called a shawm — preliminary work has begun on raising the hull of the 130-foot warship.

"This is a moment of history," Margaret Rule, archaeological director of the Mary Rose Trust, said at a recent briefing. "We have taken out all the contents and what we shall be bringing ashore is the empty hull."

Financial problems remain, but Mrs. Rule said if all goes according to plan the wreck will be towed into Portsmouth Harbor this fall, possibly as early as mid-October.

In the most surgical aspect of the mission, divers are attaching a giant heavy-lifting frame to the delicate, waterlogged wood.

Taking care not to cause unnecessary damage, the divers are drilling holes in the hull for the 80 cables, which will lift the ship underwater onto a steel cradle. It will be transferred to shore by tug.

"She will be thoroughly corseted internally and externally," said Mrs. Rule.

Once raised, the hull will lie in a specially constructed drydock alongside another great warship, Lord Nelson's HMS Victory, for conservation and reconstruction.

The Mary Rose, 91-gun pride of King Henry's fleet, sank in 1545 during a battle with the French off Portsmouth Harbor. Historians still don't know whether the ship was hit by enemy cannon-fire or sank because of overcrowding.

Fewer than 40 of the 700 crewmen are believed to have survived, and Henry is said to have heard the cries of his drowning men as he watched the disaster from behind the harbor walls.

After decades of futile attempts to find the wreckage, it was finally located in 1965 by Alexander McKee, a Portsmouth author and amateur diver.

The same year, the Mary Rose Trust was set up with Prince Charles as its president. The prince has himself made nine dives to the wreckage.

Twelve professional divers, assisted over the years by some 500 volunteers, lifted artifacts from the Mary Rose, sometimes working in poor visibility of no more than two yards on the silt-filled seabed. One diver has been killed during the 12-year operation.

Some of the artifacts have been put on exhibit, but most are kept in an old warehouse in suburban Portsmouth. Each item is washed, waxed or freeze-dried, numbered, labeled and placed in a clear, waterproof plastic bag.

Among the 16th-century artifacts are bows and arrows, guns, pocket sundials, spoons, razor handles, game boards, cooking pots, books, clothing and an ominous-looking 15-inch syringe used in the treatment of venereal disease.

Perhaps the most valuable item — although no price has been placed on it — is the shawm, a double-reed wind instrument resembling an oboe. Experts believe only two other examples of the wooden instrument exist in Europe.

One of the last items recovered was a bronze bell, dated 1510, the year Mary Rose is believed to have been commissioned.

"The Mary Rose represents a day in the life of Tudor England," said site founder Alexander McKee. "You cannot get that sort of information from libraries."

Although confident the technical difficulties of raising the hull can be overcome — the ship is lying on its side at an angle of 60 degrees — the trust says it is still $1.75 million short of the $7 million needed to complete the project.

The project's development director, Ian Dahl, said the coming months would be crucial.

"We are coming to the most expensive part of the operation," he said.

The ship will form the centerpiece of a new, 12-acre maritime museum scheduled to open next spring, "but conservation work on the timbers will go into the 21st century," Mrs. Rule said.

Fire Safety Training For The Youngsters Said A Life-Saver

By MARCIA DUNN
Associated Press Writer

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Dr. Russell T. Jones, fighting fire with know-how, wants to stop children fleeing house fires from seeking deadly refuge in their closets or under their beds.

Jones, 31, a clinical psychologist at the University of Pittsburgh, says most of the more than 3,500 American children who may die from house fires this year do not know what to do.

"I think it's because of a lack of training, a lack of awareness, not knowing what to do in case of a fire, not having practiced," Jones said. "Parents should be doing this, or educators. But whoever does it, it should be done systematically."

Jones teaches the very young, the very old and the handicapped what to do when fire strikes. For the past five years, he has concentrated on saving children as young as 3 years old.

"With respect to fire safety, they've had very little training. It could be something they see on TV or something their parent does or maybe a firefighter," he said.

In 1980, the latest year for which figures are available, 6,505 people died in fires across the country and 30,200 were injured, according to the National Fire Protection Association. Seventy-five percent of the fatal fires occurred in homes, and in many cases, children were the cause, officials say.

About 29 percent of those killed were under age 5, the NFPA says. Twenty-five percent were between 5 and 13. Another 7 percent involved those 65 and up.

Most of the young victims were found in closets or under beds. Frustrated firemen and anguished parents cry, why didn't they try to escape?

Jones began studying the problem of fire safety in 1976 while a medical intern at Brown University. He conducted his initial research there, teaching preschoolers how and when to make emergency telephone calls to the operator and checking their memory several months later.

After joining Pitt in 1977, Jones started working with elementary school children.

In school classrooms remodeled to resemble bedrooms, the youngsters learn evacuation procedures. They are taught to crawl to the door and open it if it's cool, or to keep it closed if it's hot and then crawl to a window and climb out or wave for help.

To simulate a real fire, doors are heated with hairdryers and tape recorders are used in place of alarms. Stars and other tokens are distributed as positive reinforcement for the children.

Jones has extended his interest to blind and mentally retarded adolescents and most recently to the elderly, who often live in buildings without sprinkler systems and other safety features.

For the blind, Jones reproduces the crackle of flames and the intensity of heat they might encounter in their bedrooms at the school. Otherwise, his techniques remain much the same for each study group.

So far, Jones has completed nearly 10 studies involving up to 250 people with the help of graduate assistants and a few, small grants. He has also traveled across the nation to speak at fire safety sessions.

What differentiates his efforts is research, he said. "There are firefighters who go to schools and they talk to kids and say 'Don't do this and don't do that.' That's good, but it's not research," he said.

Jones has found that people generally don't panic when confronted with emergencies, such as fires.

"(But) with children, the probability of engaging in non-adaptive behavior may be somewhat higher than with adults," he said.

Jones encourages his students to transfer their behavior from school to home.

"We tell them, 'You don't just do this when we're here,'" he said.

Jones has found that most youngsters forget much of what they've been taught after several months without practice.

"We tell the parents to practice it. And we also have the children teach their brothers and sisters, a kind of buddy system," he said.

Save-A-Babe

The newborn nursery staff of Pitt County Memorial Hospital has provided substantial help in promoting the Save-a-Babe infant safety seat loaner program, according to Pat Byrd, health educator with the Pitt County Health Department.

The program is jointly sponsored by the Tar River Civitans and the Pitt County Health Department. The hospital nursery staff encourages parents of newborns to take their babies home in approved infant safety seats.

Mrs. Byrd said expectant parents should arrange to rent the seats before their babies are born. Those who do not may have to wait 10 to 14 days before they can rent a Save-a-Babe seat, she said.

Civitan volunteers operate the rental program the second and fourth Friday and Saturday of each month. Guidelines for the rental program allow seats to be rented up to one month prior to anticipated delivery date and require that one or both parents be present with an N.C. driver's license and the family car (so seat belts can be checked) and that one or both parents receive detailed instructions about the use of the seat and placement in the vehicle.

Appointments for rentals may be made in advance by calling 752-4141.

EXPANDED RESOURCES

Half a ship, forward section of Mormacaltair, is towed out to sea. Aft section remains in dock at Galveston, Tex.

Visible result of ship slicing: forward section, right, begins to float clear of aft.

Here's an example of how to stretch resources. It's a neat bit of economizing by means of ship surgery—a new midbody fitted into a vessel to boost its length and thus its capacity.

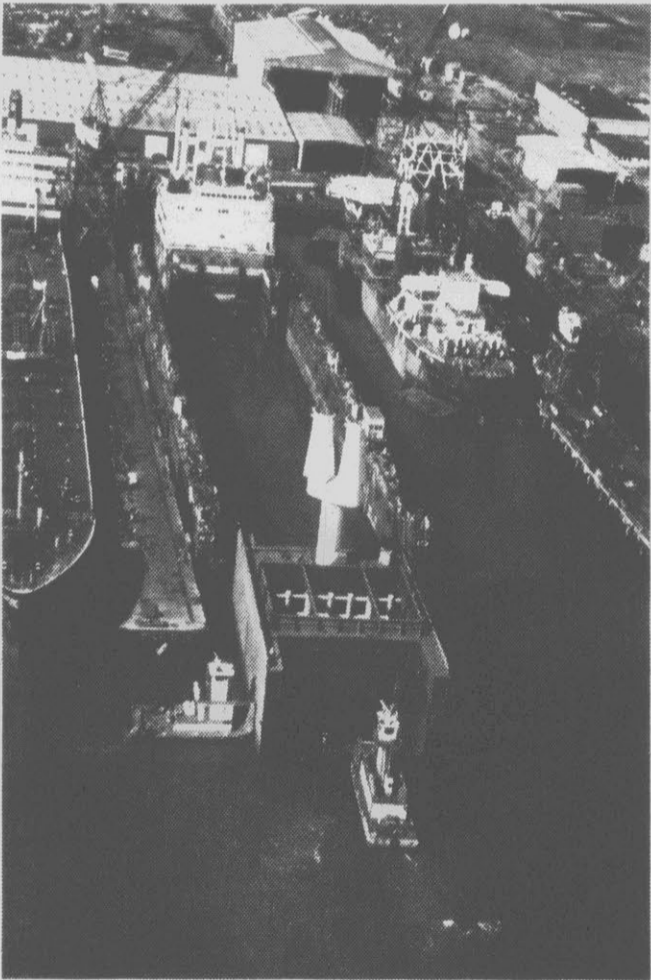

The photographs show the four-month operation in progress on the Mormacaltair, a cargo liner of Moore-McCormack Lines, Inc., in a floating dry dock at Galveston, Tex. First, a 155-foot midbody section is built. Next, the vessel to be stretched is drydocked and cut in half just forward of the bridge. Then the forward section is floated out of the dry dock, and the midbody is floated in and joined to the aft section. Finally, the forward section is floated back and joined to the midbody.

Now 665 feet long, the new vessel has "grown" 115 feet. It will use the same engines, carry the same crew, travel at the same speed—but use virtually no extra fuel to carry its larger loads. So far, two ships, the Mormacaltair and the Mormacdraco, have been stretched in this way by Moore-McCormack.

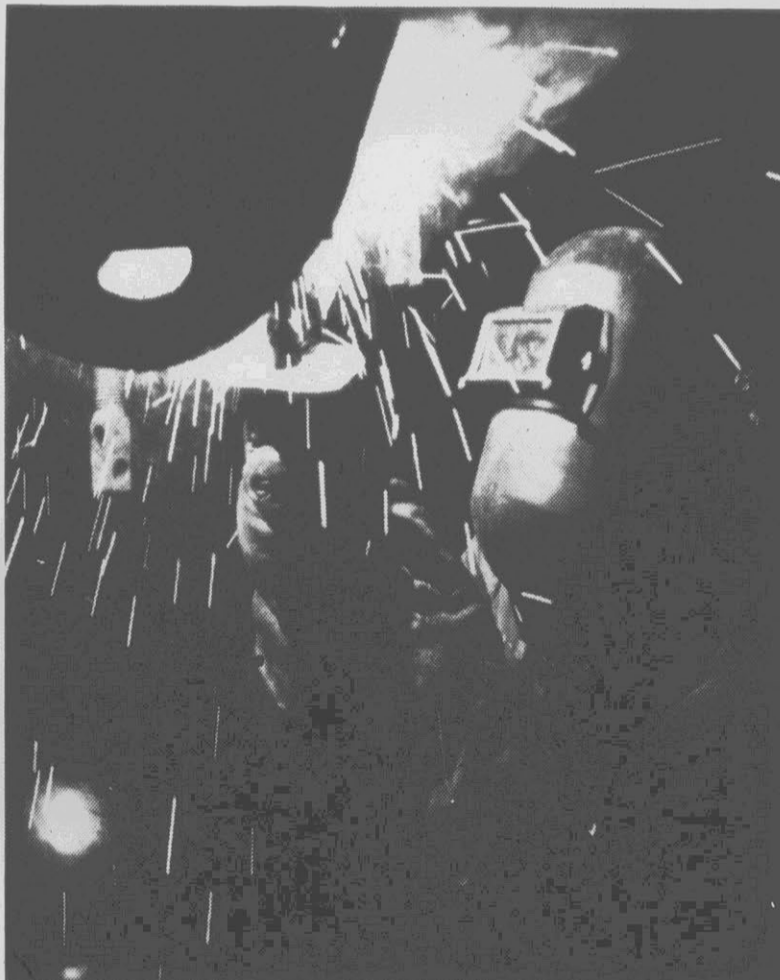

AP Newsfeatures.

New midbody, foreground, is nudged into dock toward aft section, rear, in process of ship stretching.

Welders at work—they're at the center of two important phases of the ship stretching: the joining of midbody to forward and aft sections.

Forward section, right, is floated back into dry dock to be carefully joined up to the new midbody.

"New" ship incorporating 115-foot midbody is now 665 feet long and carries more cargo—engines, crew, speed and fuel consumption are virtually as before.

Historic Plymouth A Busy Naval City

PILGRIMS' PORT — The Plymouth, England, waterfront, seen from near the spot where the Pilgrims embarked on the Mayflower. On the heights are the Citadel and the Hoe, where Sir Francis Drake liked to play bowls, and where people still bowl on the green today.

By PRUDENCE HELLER
Associated Press Writer
PLYMOUTH, England (AP) — Plymouth was Sir Francis Drake's port. It's the port the Pilgrim Fathers sailed from. But the average American tourist who visits Plymouth won't arrive or leave by sea.

It can be done: on the ferries that make the runs between Plymouth and Roscoff, in Brittany, and Santander, in Spain.

But Plymouth is in Devon, and most American travelers will be stopping off in Plymouth on itineraries that include little coastal villages like Babbacombe; the fashionable seaside resort of Torquay, with its semitropical vegetation; Exeter, with its famous cathedral, and Dartmoor, the wild setting of Conan Doyle's "Hound of the Baskervilles."

So they'll arrive in Plymouth, the bustling naval

Half Century Of U.S. Gas

NEW YORK (AP) — There were 44 years of oil and 51 years of natural gas left in United States onshore and offshore fields by the end of 1980, says an energy-oriented journal.

According to Energy User News, the figures were based on a U.S. Geological Survey of domestic production and resource figures for that year.

The journal says, however, that additional quantities of oil and gas may be expected from sources outside the scope of "conventional resources," such as heavy-oil deposits, tar, oil shale and low-permeability gas reservoirs.

city, by car, train or tour bus. If you look around, you'll find a number of Plymouths.

There's the Elizabethan and Pilgrim Plymouth, down by the waterfront, in the district known as the Barbican. You can wander through the Elizabethan House and the Merchant's House, and take a harbor launch to Drake's Island, an old fortress with tunnels and guns.

You can stand at the Mayflower Steps, where the Pilgrims embarked. The Pilgrims, it will be recalled, originally set out from Southampton, in the Mayflower and the Speedwell. But they had to turn back, first to Dartmouth and then to Plymouth, because of fears the Speedwell was unseaworthy. Finally, the Mayflower set out alone.

Opposite the fish market in Plymouth is the place where the Pilgrims spent the night before they sailed. Their names are listed on an outside wall.

Not so widely known, perhaps, is that some of the American prisoners captured in the War of 1812 were held in the Plymouth area. Two officers killed in a naval engagement in that war are buried in St. Andrew's churchyard in Plymouth. There's a memorial service each year for these Americans of the War of 1812.

Uphill from where the Pilgrims set out are the Citadel and the Hoe, or hill. Sir Francis Drake is said to have completed his game of bowls on the Hoe before he set out to take care of the Spanish Armada in 1588. People still bowl on the green of the Hoe. Often, they're dressed in traditional white.

While you're on the Hoe, you'll also want to climb

Smeaton's Tower, formerly the Eddystone Light which stood on treacherous Eddystone Rock southwest of Plymouth. Eddystone Rock still has a light, but what you might call THE light was moved to the Hoe in the late 19th century.

Walking away from the water after crossing the Hoe, you come to other Plymouths: posh hotels, and then the big, modern City Center with its countless shops that tug at your pocketbook. This is almost all new — Plymouth was heavily bombed in World War II. (The naval base is just outside Plymouth, at Devonport, and can be visited by launch.)

If you're a budget traveler, and have chosen to stay in a little hotel or bed-and-breakfast establishment, you may see still another Plymouth — on a trafficky road just beyond the City Center, perhaps, in one of a string of old row houses. There'll be linoleum and scatter rugs on the floor, and a hissing gas hot water heater for you to light in the bathroom. But the smile of your landlord will be as warm as the "telly lounge" may be damp.

And finally, you may just happen to see — and feel — still another Plymouth. The late British poet Alfred Noyes, in "The Admiral's Ghost," said Lord Nelson, with his "soul of a North Sea storm," was just the ghost of Francis Drake, the Devonshire man, returned to help Britain in time of need. If you happen to get caught in wind, rain and fog at dusk on the Hoe, with no one about, you'll get an inkling of what the "soul of a North Sea storm" is like.

How Tar Heel Senators, Representatives Voted

Roll Call Report Service
WASHINGTON - Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes July 22-28.

HOUSE
NERVE GAS - The house adopted, 232 for and 181 against, an amendment to prevent the U.S. from manufacturing nerve gas for chemical warfare. The vote deleted $54 million from the fiscal 1983 defense authorization bill that was earmarked for resuming nerve gas production, which was suspended by President Nixon in 1969. The $177.1 billion military spending bill (HR 6030) was headed for final passage and conference with the Senate.

Supporter Ed Bethune, D-Ark., said "peace-loving people all over the world agree with the American stand against biological and chemical weapons. They know that poison gasses kill and maim more civilians than soldiers."

Opponent Richard White, D-Tex., said the U.S. needs a chemical warfare capability to deter the Soviet Union from using its chemical weapons against western forces. "This is the real world, not the world we would like it to be," he said.

Members voting "yea" opposed U.S. development of nerve gas for chemical warfare.

Reps. Ike Andrews, D-4, Charles Rose, D-7, James Martin, R-9, and James Broyhill, R-10, voted "yea."

Reps. Walter Jones, D-1, L.H. Fountain, D-2, Charles Whitley, D-3, Stephen Neal, D-5, Eugene Johnston, R-6, W.C. Hefner, D-8, and William Hendon, R-11, voted "nay."

DRAFT EVADERS - The House adopted, 303 for and 95 against, an amendment to deny federal student loans to young men who fail to register for the draft. An estimated 500,000 to 700,000 youths have failed to sign up, many of whom now get or plan to apply for government education loans. The amendment was attached to HR 6030 (see preceding vote).

Supporter Thomas Harnett, R-S.C., said "the Chinese laundry operator had an old saying, 'No tickle, no laundry.' I think the American people expect their young men, if they are going to receive financial assistance from this government, to at least abide by the laws of this land."

Opponents said the amendment discriminated against poor and middle class youth who depend on student loans, and that the law already contains penalties for draft evaders. Rep. Ronald Dellums, D-Calif., said one reason for the high non-registration rate is that millions of Americans "feel that this (draft) law is absurd and useless."

Members voting "yea" favored cutting off federal school loans to draft evaders.

Jones, Fountain, Whitley, Andrews, Neal, Johnston, rose, Hefner, Martin, Broyhill and Hendon voted "yea."

HIGHER TAXES - By a vote of 208 for and 197 against, the House accepted without change the Senate-passed bill (HR 4691) generating $99 billion in new tax revenue between fiscal 1983-85 while cutting domestic spending by $17 billion over the three years. This was largely a political maneuver by the Democratic-controlled House to saddle Republicans, who control the Senate, with the stigma of having raised taxes in election year. GOP critics said the House's failure to pass its own tax bill violated the constitutional requirement that all revenue-raising measures originate in the House. The bill is now in House-Senate conference.

Supporter Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the tax-writing Ways and Means Committee, said that while he had "deep personal misgivings" about the unorthodox legislative procedure, "the severe economic distress and volatile political environment dictate that we travel this route."

Opponent John Rousselot, R-Calif., said supporters were "totally abandoning the Constitution" while approving a foot-and-a-half thick bill that few if any House members had read.

Members voting "yea" supported the Senate-authored revenue bill.

Jones, Whitley, Rose, Hefner and Broyhill voted "yea."

Fountain, Andrews, Neal, Johnston, Martin and Hendon voted "nay."

Senate
WITHHOLDING - By a vote of 47 for and 50 against, the Senate rejected an amendment to block a new procedure for collecting taxes on interest and dividend income. The vote left intact a requirement that financial institutions withhold ten percent of such income they pay to virtually all individuals except the poor and the elderly. This would not increase anybody's tax liability, but it would increase federal revenues by about $12 billion over the next three years by insuring collections from tax cheaters who fail to report dividend and interest income under the present system. Presently, taxpayers are expected to pay dividend and interest taxes annually when they file their returns with the IRS. Under the new provision, taxes they owe in addition to the 10 percent already withheld.

The vote occurred during debate on a bill (HR 4961) to raise $99 billion in new taxes between fiscal 1983-85 while cutting $17 billion in domestic spending. The bill was later passed and sent to the house.

Sen. Robert Kasten, R-Wisc., who wanted to block the withholding provision, said the new collection procedure is "a disincentive toward savings and investment" that would place a heavy paperwork burden on the IRS and financial institutions.

Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., who opposed the amendment, said "the case for withholding is based on the premise that no one has the right to cheat on taxes."

Senators voting "nay" wanted taxes to be withheld from interest and dividend income.

Sens. John East, R, and Jesse Helms, R, voted "yea."

3 MARTINI LUNCH - The senate adopted, 57 for and 40 against, an amendment reducing by half the tax deduction for business meals. Presently, the full cost may be deducted. Under the amendment, only half the cost of meals eaten in the taxpayer's home area is deductible. The deduction while travelling remains at 100 percent. The amendment, attached to HR 4961 (see preceding vote), is designed to raise $2.8 billion annually.

Sponsor Bob Dole, R-Kan., said that under present law "unfairness and abuse result because meal and entertainment deductions are allowed for expenses that are essentially for the personal benefit and enjoyment" of businessmen and businesswomen.

Opponent George Mitchell, D-Maine, said he would prefer raising about $3 billion by deferring the third year of the personal income tax cut for persons earning at least $150,000 annually.

Senators voting "yea" wanted to halve the tax deduction for business meals.

East and Helms voted "yea."

TAX HIKES - The Senate passed, 50 for and 47 against, a bill (HR 4961; see preceding votes) that is the largest peacetime tax increase in U.S. history. Weighted against corporations and wealthy individuals, and concentrating on more efficient collection of existing taxes, the bill would raise $20.9 billion in fiscal 1983 and $99 billion between 1983-85. The bill also cuts spending for Medicare, Medicaid and welfare by $17 billion over the three years. It was written by the GOP-controlled Finance Committee and virtually all of the votes against it were cast by Democrats.

Supporter Steven Symms, R-Idaho, said that while this marked his first vote ever in favor of a tax bill, he viewed the measure as necessary to reduce the national deficit and as legislation that stresses "the basic objective of fairness to the American people."

Opponent Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., said it would have been preferable to repeal some of the massive tax cuts enacted last year "rather than adding 700 pages of new tax law to our already complex and convoluted tax code."

Senators voting "yea" supported the tax-hike legislation. East and Helms voted "yea."

Challenging Retardation

BALTIMORE, Md. (UPI) - Cornell University scientists are challenging the view that mental retardation induced by hunger in children is permanent.

Studies led by David Levitsky, an associate professor of nutritional sciences and psychology, indicate the damage can be reversed by an adequate diet.

Levitsky reported on his findings at a recent meeting in Baltimore of the Eastern Psychological Association. They contradict the long-held belief that mental retardation is caused by permanent brain changes resulting from long periods of poor or inadequate nutrition.

"These changes do not seem critical for intellectual development," Levitsky says. He says the main cause of poor intellectual growth in malnourished children is inhibition of their curiosity to learn - combined with lack of a stimulating environment to foster learning.

He bases his view on 14 years of research, most of it at Cornell. He says he and his co-researcher, Barbara J. Strupp, found "retarded" animals were fully capable of learning even very difficult tasks when such learning was essential for their safety and survival.

Team's Health Care Is By Van

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - A Philadelphia doctor and a medical college have joined in a plan to provide home visits to selected Medicare and Medicaid patients, says Family Practice News.

Five days a week a van leaves the Thomas Jefferson University hospital with a family physician, a nurse, one or two medical students and/or residents, and a box of medical supplies.

The teams' house calls are federally funded.

Say Surplus Of Peanuts Cuts Prices

By FRANK BLANCHARD
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — There is more peanut butter on supermarket shelves now, but farmers who struggled through last year's shortage say they're having no easier time making a profit from this year's surplus.

Peanuts became expensive last year as a shortage from the drought-stricken 1980 crop drove 1981 prices sky high. The United States imported 150,000 tons to satisfy domestic demand.

But the 1981 crop, being marketed this year, was so plentiful that prices are falling and industry spokesmen say 432,000 tons of peanuts probably will be left in storage when farmers begin the fall harvest.

"The sad part about it is that if we make a good peanut crop this time, it's going to hurt us for two or three years," said Bruce Daniels of Ocilla, Ga., a peanut farmer for about 18 years.

In May, the average 18-ounce jar of peanut butter sold in supermarkets in 10 major cities was $1.49, down from $1.89 in March 1981, according to the Peanut Advisory Board, which represents farmers from Georgia, Alabama and Florida, who grow about 60 percent of U.S. peanuts.

Prices have not reached predrought levels, when an 18-ounce jar of peanut butter sold for $1.29, but the downward trend should continue this year, said board spokesman Mitch Head.

While consumers reap the benefits of declining prices, farmers are faring no better than last year when a shortage in the market inflated prices and domestic consumption fell to 1.647 billion pounds from 2.028 billion pounds in 1980, said Emory Murphy, assistant coordinator of the Georgia Peanut Commission.

"They're not making a lot of money," Murphy said. "They've got to be in a situation where they don't have more supply than demand, and it will take care of itself."

This year, peanut farmers were offered $300 to $350 per ton on contracts by peanut shellers, but the cost of production, excluding cost of farmland, averaged $500 to $550 nationwide, Murphy said. Last year, farmers were offered an average of $500 to $700 per ton, he said.

Federal price supports rose about 15 percent from 1981 to 1982, but that was not enough, Murphy said. The federal loan program offers farmers $550 a ton, which is designed to cover the cost of production but not costs tied directly to farmland, such as rent.

"For some people, land will be a definite cost," Murphy said. "If the farm is paid for, they can break even at $550 a ton."

In addition, last year's peanut shortage in the United States allowed other countries, such as China, India, Sudan and Argentina, to gain a foothold in the world market with their exports, Murphy said.

"Before the drought year, we exported over 500,000 tons of peanuts," he said. "This year we're not sure we'll reach 300,000 tons because of competition."

"When you're looking at Third World countries with cheaper labor... it's hard to compete in price. But we do have better quality," he said.

To compensate for this year's glut, farmers voluntarily are planting 13 percent less in the nine peanut-producing states: Georgia, Alabama, Florida, New Mexico, North Carolina, South Carolina, Texas, Virginia and Oklahoma.

Total acreage will be about 1.32 million, the lowest since 1915, Murphy said.

Georgia, the nation's top peanut producer, has cut back about 16 percent from 560,000 acres planted last year to about 470,000 acres this year, Murphy said. Alabama has cut 19 percent to 175,770 acres from last year's 217,000 acres. Florida has dropped 13 percent from 69,000 acres to 60,030 acres.

Powers Of Suggestion Sell Goods

By RICK HAMPSON
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Top salespeople don't make customers stare at a swinging watch or intone, "Your eyelids are getting heavy." But they use indirect hypnotic suggestion to sell everything from cars to oil and gas leases, a psychologist says.

Successful sellers "instinctively use weapons from the arsenal of the skilled clinical hypnotist" to get customers' attention, confidence and interest, Dr. Donald Moine said Monday.

Interviewed by telephone at his Redondo Beach, Calif., home, Moine said the best salespeople use indirect hypnosis on their customers without even knowing it.

Moine, 28, published the findings of his two-year study of 70 salespeople, comparing superstars and average achievers, in the August issue of Psychology Today.

He told of sales wizards who intuitively lure customers into a state of mild hypnotic suggestion — not with what they say, but how they say it.

He described salesmen who breathe in and out at the same time as their customers, who act depressed if the customer is depressed, who are so determined to gain sway over others that they practice their techniques on wives and waitresses.

"By changing their speech rate, volume and tone, they can give certain phrases the effect of commands," Moine said.

First, the salesman relaxes and wins over the customer by "hypnotic pacing" — matching the customer's physical movements, posture, mood, voice tone and speech rate.

Moine recalled a Cessna jet salesman who dressed, spoke and acted like a banker but "changed just like a chameleon" to match his customer: "If he was selling a farmer, he was a farmer. If it was a doctor, he was a doctor."

Having won a customer's confidence, the salesman then proceeds with the pitch, linking fact with suggestion, just like a hypnotist. "You're listening to my voice, and your eyelids are getting heavy," becomes "you're 27 years old, and we figure you need $50,000 life insurance," he explained.

Other techniques of indirect hypnosis can be used to sell real estate, stocks or computers. "Some of the top salesmen do almost nothing but tell stories or parables," Moine said. "They talk about their grandmother or about walking their dog. They break all the rules and make hundreds of thousands of dollars a year."

The reason: When a story begins, critical judgment ends. "The customer goes into an entertainment mode and relaxes. When he came in, he was on the alert for a sales pitch," he said.

These links between sales and hypnosis have gone virtually unnoticed, Moine said.

"They teach salespeople things like time management, but when the best salesmen try to pass it on to others, it usually doesn't work. They can't teach the magic they do."

Other Sources Of Vitamin D3

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Vitamin D3, which is essential to bone growth, is generally believed to be made only by the kidney.

However, Dr. J. Edward Puzas of the University of Rochester Medical Center has found vitamin D3 is also produced in animal-tissue cultures of intestine, bone, placenta, and other cells. He says he will next examine whether this is true in the human body as well.

"We are finding the body has many systems that can produce vitamin D3," says Puzas. "This means that in patients who have lost both kidneys, high doses of vitamin D3 may not be needed because it can be produced elsewhere in the body."

• RED WINE VINEGAR DRESSING •

¼ cup red wine vinegar
¼ teaspoon garlic powder
¼ teaspoon dry mustard
½ teaspoon sugar

¼ cup water
¼ teaspoon black pepper
2 tablespoons fresh lemon juice
½ cup vegetable oil

Combine all ingredients and place into jar or bottle with tight fitting lid. Shake vigorously until well blended. Store covered in refrigerator. This can be used over favorite tossed salad or as a marinade for vegetables, meat or poultry.

His Shelter Near 'Ground Zero'

By JOHN-THOR DAHLBURG
Associated Press Writer
HOMESTEAD, Fla. (AP) — After the Big One blows away his neighbors, Wally Keirstead plans to rekindle Western civilization with the Bible, the "Rubaiyat" of Omar Khayyam and a 12-gauge shotgun.

For 20 years, the 74-year-old building contractor has lived on Ground Zero—close enough to Homestead Air Force Base to fear being incinerated by an atomic blast.

"It's been enough to give you white knuckles at times," he booms in a Connecticut Yankee voice.

Although fear of nuclear holocaust has recently re-emerged as a national issue, it has never been far from those residents of South Florida who lived through the 1962 Cuban missile crisis.

For Keirstead and 25,000 others in this city chopped out of the sawgrass and avocado fields of south Dade County, life in the shadow of a possible mushroom cloud is nothing new.

Federal disaster officials say the air base would be a top Soviet priority in a war between the superpowers.

A hit or near-miss on the base would ignite a fireball that would blitz Keirstead's one-story, cement-block home and quiet middle-class neighborhood.

Homestead's first spasm of nuclear missile madness came in the early 1960s. About 120 miles to the south, Cuban President Fidel Castro allowed the Soviet Union to install medium-range ICBMs on the island, 90 miles from Florida.

For months, Homestead lived in anticipation and fear. A war room was set up at Homestead, and an estimated 25,000 military personnel were billeted throughout the southern part of the state.

Mayor Irving Peskoe was there—not in a suit and tie, but wearing khakis as a counsel in the Air Force's Judge Advocate-General's division.

"The fields around Homestead were bristling with anti-missile missiles," says the 62-year-old Peskoe. "At night, you could hear the military convoys rolling down the road to Key West."

Improvised military bases sprouted in the fields. The Krome Avenue camp, now used to house Haitians and other illegal aliens, was then a Nike missile base.

In the midst of the crisis, Keirstead vowed to build a bomb shelter. As a contractor, he had access to materials, manpower, and know-how.

For $8,000, Keirstead built the Versailles of bomb shelters. It still stands, an eerie monument to the Cold War.

The shelter, measuring 12 feet by 18 feet and standing above ground behind his home, has walnut paneling, birch cabinets laden with food and china, a soundproofed ceiling, three beds that double as storage trunks, electric lighting and a collection of his favorite books including the Bible and the "Rubaiyat" of Persian poet Omar Khayyam.

A 2-foot-thick roof and 3-foot walls were built to block radiation—"and whatever else they were thinking about throwing at us," he says.

A well with a hand pump and a toilet tap into the aquifer that runs under Homestead, while a complicated system of ducts and blowers ensures that the air in the shelter is fresh.

Under threat of atomic destruction, Keirstead soon found out who his real friends were, he remembers.

"One of my neighbors told me he hoped there'd be room in there for him and his family. When I told him there was only room for three, he said: 'Wally, I think you'd rather be in there with me than on the outside looking in.'"

Keirstead immediately bought a .22-caliber rifle and a shotgun, which still lean against the wall of the shelter ready for use.

After the missile crisis dissipated, Homestead moved out from under the shadow of nuclear war. Of the 23 companies that were started to build bomb shelters in the Miami area in 1962, none survived, according to Dade County's Deputy Civil Defense Director Albert Fischer.

Bit by bit, Keirstead turned his bomb shelter into a warehouse for racks of old clothes, moldy books, television rabbit ears and other odds and ends.

Weeds as high as prairie wheat sprouted from the roof. Keirstead finally ventured up onto the shelter's dirt roof to clear them off "when my neighbors talked about me growing marijuana."

But with the Mideast in turmoil and U.S.-Soviet relations chilled, Keirstead thinks he will soon be putting his bomb shelter to better use.

"If I read my Bible correctly, there will be a world war or global conflict within the next five years," he said, perched on a stool at the Homestead Elks Club bar. "There's too many moving parts, too much going on, to be able to clamp a lid on it. It'll soon explode. Has to."

He paused. A friend ambled by to ask him to place a bet at Gulf Stream Park. He agreed and pocketed the money.

"We're in the final days, like it says in The Old Book," he concluded soberly. "I'm going to need my shelter yet."

Volunteers Israel-Bound

NEW YORK (AP) — More than 200 American volunteers plan to leave New York Wednesday night to work in farming and industry in Israel while Israeli civilians are drafted to fight in Lebanon.

The contingent is the first wave of about 750 volunteers who are to go to Israel in mid-August and early September. They will take up the slack created by the loss of civilians drafted into the Israeli military, said a group spokesman, Eli Meleh.

The 230 people plan to farm, guard settlements and help with industrial work in the Golan Heights area for 30 to 60 days.

Their trip is part of a privately organized plan approved by the Israeli government.

Meir Indor, 33, a captain in the Israeli military who served in Lebanon, came here to coordinate the effort, which has the Jewish Agency as a sponsor and uses office space donated by The Jewish Press.

About 500 of the volunteers gathered at the Fifth Avenue Synagogue on Sunday for briefings, interviews and medical checkups.

"The period you are about to take in Israel will not be a holiday," Indor said. "You are coming to serve your people and to help them in Israel."

"It just finally got to me," said Beverly Taylor, 57, of Queens. "I read an article about this woman who had her whole family murdered at Auschwitz. Her son had just been burned in a tank, and she said, 'At least I have a body this time.'"

Preaching At 8 Years Old

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Eight-year-old Tracy Watson — better known as "Little Evangelist Tracy Watson" — says she got the calling to become a minister when she was 6.

"One time when I was praying, God spoke to me. He said, 'Tracy, I'm going to use you for my glory. Many people won't believe it, and it won't be easy. Many people won't like it because you're a child.'"

"I told him, I said, 'Lord, I'm willing to go through with it. I know there's a place in heaven waiting for me.'"

The third-grader at Rosewood Elementary School in Goldsboro has been preaching for two years, primarily in Eastern North Carolina, but she once ventured to New York City to evangelize before a crowd of 5,000.

Her pastor, the Rev. Lawrence Bogier of the Tabernacle of Prayer for All People, estimates that through her ministry, 1,500 people have professed their belief in Christ.

Tracy's parents, Joseph and Rita Watson, brought her up in the church.

"She was praying all the time," her mother said. "We noticed she learned to quote scriptures real well."

"When she was 6, she came to me and said, 'Mama, God wants me to do his will and preach to him.' So, we came to the pastor."

Bogier, who came to Goldsboro six years ago to found the church, says he saw Tracy in a vision years before.

"I was in a prayer meeting and saw a bright light outside the window, and then the light changed to a beautiful angel. I began to see this very often, and then the Lord spoke to me and said, 'I'm going to raise a little child in your ministry.'"

"When sister Watson introduced Tracy to me, I saw that angel. That was two or three years before I told them what the Lord said to me."

Since then, Tracy has been preaching at revivals about once a month. Her parents won't let her do more because of the strain. But on stage, there doesn't appear to be any strain.

Dressed in a white, satiny robe, she walked down the center aisle at the Tabernacle and sat at center stage in a special red-cushioned

"Hallelujah!" the crowd responded.

"Somebody say amen!" she shouted.

"Amen!" the crowd roared.

"Please turn to Philippians 4:13," she said.

Afghan Army's Regulars Reportedly Defecting

By RICHARD BILL
Associated Press Writer
PESHAWAR, Pakistan (AP) — Afghan army regulars are defecting in growing numbers now that a Soviet-led offensive against anti-government Moslem guerrillas has stalled in Afghanistan's strategic Panjsher Valley, according to a guerrilla spokesman here. Mohammed es-Haq, spokesman for the Jamiat Islami Afghan guerrilla group in Peshawar, says about 300 Afghan army regulars have defected in the past two weeks. His claim could not be independently verified. The Soviet-Afghan government offensive began in mid-May in an effort to wrest away guerrilla control of the valley, 70 miles north of Kabul, the Afghan capital. But the guerrillas held out, reportedly inflicting heavy losses on their enemy, and the fighting since has subsided. Two men identified as Afghan army defectors turned up here recently, saying they had fled with 19 other privates of the 81st Division. One of the two, identifying himself as Abdul Rahman, told in an interview of spending two weeks in the Panjsher Valley during the offensive. "The food was poor but we had plenty of ammunition," he said. "We had so much ammo we were burying crates of it..."

"The food was so bad that we subsisted on just a small piece of bread each day." His comments were translated from Dari, an Afghan dialect, by an interpreter of the Jamiat Islami group, which said it is giving him shelter. "We couldn't even brew tea because smoke from the fires would have given our positions away," Rahman continued. He added that he was under attack from the Mujahideen (Islamic holy warriors), as the Moslem rebels call themselves, for the entire two weeks he was in the valley. Rahman said his unit decided it was better to risk being executed by the guerrillas than to stay where they were. "We were told we would be mutilated and then killed if we were caught," he said. Rahman, who gave his age as 39, said he was drafted into the regular army in mid-June, rounded up at dawn with 43 others from his village, at Adraskan in northwestern Afghanistan and flown to Jalalabad, in Nangarhar Province near Pakistan. He added that about 1,000 Soviet troops were garrisoned there.

He said he received rudimentary military training which included instruction in firing a rifle and throwing hand grenades. "We were not badly treated. It was just military life," he added. After a 12-day course they donned gray uniforms and were flown by helicopter to Bagram, the biggest Soviet military installation in Afghanistan just north of Kabul and then onto Bazarak, one of four positions occupied by Soviet troops in the Panjsher Valley, he said. "For five days there was no fighting. But on the sixth, the Mujahideen attacked and we retreated to Rokha," near the entrance of the valley. Disenchantment set in, and finally the officer in charge, a captain, asked the unit if any soldiers wanted to flee, Rahman said. Twenty-two men stepped forward, he said, explaining that one was killed by crossfire as they made their escape. Rahman said he estimates that 10 or 15 Afghan soldiers a day slipped away during the month-long offensive at Panjsher, which began May 15. According to the International Institute for Strategic Studies in London, desertions and defections since the 1979 Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan have reduced the Afghan army's strength from 90,000 to about 35,000. Rahman said many militiamen ordered to the battle front by the Soviet-installed communist regime would inflict wounds upon themselves in hopes of being taken to hospitals in Kabul, the only area where medical treatment was available. "They were very scared of the Mujahideen," he added. "They would shoot themselves in the leg after emptying some of the gunpowder from a cartridge and say they were wounded in the fighting. That was the only way out."

Big Production Of Margarine

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — One million pounds of margarine are enough to spread 22 pieces of toast for every man, woman and child in the U.S., according to R.J. Archer, a package supplier. Archer laminates and prints more than 140 million one-pound margarine boxes each year.

HYDROFOIL FOR ISRAEL — The Shimrit, or Guardian, an 84-foot all-aluminum hydrofoil, displacing 100 tons, is shown undergoing sea trials. Built at the Lantana, Florida boatyard by Grumman Aerospace Corp., the craft can reach speeds up to 30 knots. Accepted as a patrolboat by Israel, the craft is to enter service with the Israeli Navy at Haifa, Israel, soon. (AP Laserphoto)

Roller Skis Picking Up Popularity Momentum

By JACKIE HYMAN
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Little old ladies on roller skates and kids on skateboards who schuss down Southern California's sidewalks are getting some new competition: skiers on wheels. But the people introducing the European pastime called Scandinavian Skiing say theirs is a serious sport, or at least serious exercise. "Originally this was a pure summer substitute for competition cross-country ski races," said Thomas Axell, president of Scandinavian Incentive Inc. of Beverly Hills. "But when we experienced the big market here, we felt that it would be a very good substitute to jogging and tennis playing." Axell, whose firm holds exclusive rights to Scandinavian Skis for the Sunbelt region, said roller skis originated in Europe about five years ago and were introduced in this country last year. They went on sale in California several weeks ago.

The aluminum skis — which he said weigh about the same as snow skis — cost about $170. A package including the skis, poles, ski shoes and bindings costs about $280. The skis are three to four feet long and are raised a few inches above the ground by wheels on both ends. Skiers propel themselves with carbide-tipped poles. The U.S. cross-country ski team is using roller skis for off-season training, Axell said. The former running enthusiast, who began having trouble with his knees, said he discovered roller skis on a buying trip to Europe and took up the sport eagerly. "It is exactly the same thing as going cross-country in wintertime, but instead of the snow you have wheels of hard rubber," said Axell, who skis among the palm trees of Beverly Hills. "You exercise the entire body," he said. "If you compare that to jogging, you also use the upper body; you do not have the same problems with knee and ankle injuries as you have with jogging because the way of skiing is really stretching." He also contended that roller skiing burns "100 percent more calories than tennis playing or jogging." The skis on wheels, unfortunately, don't eliminate all the hazards of the snowy version. "It's like any other sport. You can't stay away from the possibility of an injury," Axell said. "We recommend people to wear knee pads and gloves and also if they have a helmet it can be smart to use that." A brochure advises roller skiers not to try long downhill rides, but to stick to uphill and level terrain. Axell said skiers must remember to lean forward, as in snow skiing. The response to the new-fangled skis "has been just great," he said. Purchasers are primarily "extremely health-oriented people" rather than teen-agers. Also buying the new skis, Axell said, are "people who have been jogging for a number of years and who are beginning to experience problems with their knees." Plans are under way for West Coast competitions in roller skiing, Axell said, with a 10- to 15-mile race set for Sept. 19 in Los Angeles' Griffith Park and a 60-mile marathon under consideration for 1983.

Hobbyist Is Kept Busy By Pigeons

By JANET SIMPSON
Eden Daily News
EDEN, N.C. (AP) — A flock of Claude Turner's homing pigeons sailed above the back yard, sometimes sweeping way out so that they skimmed the treetops and then, swooping in close, barely missing the tops of the low sheds.

Sometimes they fly like that for hours, Turner says, nodding his head in the direction of the birds.

And it's that type of flying that keeps the birds in shape for Turner's unusual hobby — pigeon racing.

Turner, 50, has been raising homing pigeons for about five years in the back yard of his home in Eden's Draper section. He has been racing the birds for the past three years.

He says he has about 200 Racing Homers — the only kind of pigeon he raises.

Turner, who works in the Morehead Memorial Hospital's maintenance department, and three other members of the Martinsville and Henry County (Va.) Pigeon Club, race their birds against each other, those in other pigeon racing clubs, and the clock.

There are two pigeon racing seasons: one for young birds — birds under 1 year old — and one for older birds. Old bird season starts in March and usually ends in June. Young bird season starts in September and runs into November.

Members send their birds on eight to 10 races per season, Turner notes. Each owner will send about 15 birds each time. Most races take place on Sunday but longer races will extend from Saturday to Sunday.

Pigeon racing is no easy hobby. A member must measure the exact distance from his pigeon loft to the center of the road in front of his house. Then, using airline survey charts, the distance, down to the exact yard, is determined from his house to each point the pigeons will be flying from in the season's races.

Before races begin, club members hire a driver who loads their birds, sometimes along with several other clubs' birds, into an open-sided trailer and takes the pigeons to the point from where they are to race, Turner says.

After the birds have been turned loose at the specified point, bird owners wait at their homes for their first bird to arrive.

As soon as the first bird arrives, the owner removes a rubber band from the bird's leg that was attached prior to the race and puts it into a special timer that stamps the arrival time on the band. The timer then is sealed and cannot be opened without risk of disqualification before all members gather to determine the winner.

Club members meet after the race at the president's house, where all the clocks are opened. The winning pigeon is the bird with the best average speed, which is determined by dividing the number of miles by the number of hours it took the bird to make the trip.

During racing season, owners race their birds every week in races under 300 miles. Anytime a race is more than 300 miles, owners let birds rest up for two weeks before sending them out again.

"Sending one over 300 miles is right hard on a bird," Turner points out. Birds often fly eight to 10 hours without stopping and average speeds of 40 to 50 miles per hour, he says.

The secret of homing pigeons' knack for always returning to their owner is simple.

"Wherever a homing pigeon is raised is where he will stay," Turner says.

A Racing Homer's training starts early. When a bird is six to seven days old, his leg is banded with a metal ring that tells the date of his birth, his number and the name of the owner's pigeon club.

When birds are two to three months old, owners start training them for short distances by taking them three to four miles away and having them fly back home. This distance is steadily increased until the bird can make it home from 50 to 75 miles away. Then he is ready to race, Turner says.
