Israelis Balking At PLO Pullout

By The Associated Press
Lebanese officials expressed cautious optimism Saturday that the PLO would begin evacuating west Beirut in a few days, but sources close to Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin dismissed the latest withdrawal proposals as "fraudulent."

The Israeli sources, who asked not to be identified, said the reports Israel has received about the negotiations in Beirut indicate that it will not be acceptable.

"Apparently, the plan (Lebanese Prime Minister Shafik) Wazzan is talking about is to get several hundred terrorists out of Beirut and then have a French force between them and us. Then the PLO would not have to leave, and this would prevent Israel from putting pressure on them. That would be a wonderful plan for allowing the PLO to remain, but this is the opposite of what we are trying to achieve," one source said. Jerusalem conveyed to both Washington and Paris its opposition to the deployment of foreign troops in Beirut before all the guerrillas pulled out, the Israeli state radio reported.

Locally, Saving Energy Is A Way Of Life

By STUART SAVAGE

To say simply that lights not needed are being turned off and that thermostats are being set lower in the winter and higher in the summer is not telling the whole story when you talk about what is being done to conserve energy and to cut costs in government-owned buildings in Greenville and Pitt County.

"The last few buildings we've built," County Manager Reginald Gray said, "Mental Health... Health... and when we renovated the county office building... have been 'energy efficient.'"

Gray said that, when the old hospital building on West Fifth Street was renovated to house county offices, "We installed energy efficient boilers and put in storm windows" to help cut future heating and cooling costs and reduce the consumption of energy.

He said, too, that the "boiler at the courthouse has been tuned up" to make it more efficient.

And aside from improvements to buildings, "We're going to a motor pool to cut down on the number of vehicles operated by the county... (to) provide better utilization," which will help reduce fuel and maintenance costs, he said.

"We've changed out every fluorescent light bulb in the place to watt saver bulbs which use less electricity, placed plastic sheets on windows to provide a thermopane effect, and worked on the heating and air-conditioning system to make it more efficient," John Ferren, a spokesman for the Greenville Utilities Commission said.

"N.C. State (University) did an energy audit for the building (at the intersection of Fifth and Washington streets) and we've followed most of their recommendations," which are designed to help conserve energy, he noted.

"We've also started installing compressed natural gas systems on vehicles," Ferrin said, a move which will allow the vehicles to operate on less expensive compressed natural gas rather than gasoline. "The system should be in operation in the next month or month and a half."

As for Greenville, City Manager Gail Meeks said "we've done a number of things... which are really small.

"We've put energy efficient improvements into City Hall. We started last year with storm windows and regulators on thermostats, and a new energy efficient roof." All these improvements, she noted, were suggested following a federally funded energy audit, which made a number of recommendations "with a pay-back period of 3 1/2 years," Mrs. Meeks noted.

"Last year," she added,

"we had as one of our objectives to reduce gasoline consumption. We cut consumption 16 percent and saved $22,000 over the previous year. And we've started procedural changes... run all our errands at one time," to reduce the number of car trips and the subsequent use of gasoline.

At East Carolina University, "we have been following the governor's guidelines as far as the setting of thermo-

Stabilization Receipts High

Tobacco: Continuing Aura Of Fear

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Tobacco growers and agriculture officials, two weeks into sales of flue-cured leaf in North Carolina, say they've seen nothing to calm their fears about low profits at market this year.

"The prices have been disappointing because they're ranging $7 to $20 per hundred pounds less on a grade basis than they were a year ago," said John Cyrus, chief of tobacco affairs for the N.C. Department of Agriculture. "But what's especially disturbing has been high stabilization receipts, which have been averaging from 30 to 40 percent. That's a very bad figure and it's not getting any better."

Last year, slightly more than 8 percent of the leaf was sent to the Flue-Cured Tobacco Co-Operative Stabilization Corp. because it failed to bring a bid of at least 1 cent over the support price. At this time last year, only 1 percent of the leaf sold was under loan.

If the amount of tobacco going under loan doesn't come down, it could make for a poor season even if sales top the $1 billion mark as expected, Cyrus said.

Sales on the South Carolina-Border North Carolina belt, which opened July 26, stood at 54,814,273 pounds through Thursday. The tobacco had brought $86,477,777 for an average of $157.77 per hundred pounds.

On the Eastern Belt, which opened July 27, a total of 58,325,657 pounds had been sold for $92,110,587 — an average of $157.92 per hundred pounds. Middle Belt sales since the Aug. 3 opening stood at 19,265,252 pounds for $30,778,112 and an average of $159.76.

Sales on the Old Belt and Virginia markets begin Tuesday.

"Farmers are very disappointed," said Clyde D. Gore of Tabor City, a grower and president of the Columbus County Farm Bureau. "It's practically impossible to produce this crop for what it costs."

Georgia sales through Thursday totaled 52,417,397 pounds for $89,181,754 and an average of $170.14, while Florida sales totaled 9,717,479 pounds for $16,498,296 and an average of $169.78.

Ed French, a spokesman for the U.S. Department of Agriculture's tobacco market news service in Valdosta, Ga., said there were huge increases in stabilization receipts over last year.

"I see a lot of rejections (of bids) on the floor, so that would tend to tell you that some of them (growers) are unhappy," French said.

Pleas Strickland of the Florida Department of Agriculture described sales as "moderate," adding, "It hasn't been as strong as we had hoped."

Cyrus attributed the generally depressing start to three factors:

— Leaf quality hasn't measured up to last year's standards.

— Foreign competitors, who already offer tobacco for lower prices, are beginning to close the quality gap between their leaf and the U.S. product.

— The proposed doubling of the federal cigarette tax has led buyers to be more cautious than usual.

"Last year the leaves had more body; there was more yield from the bottom of the stalk," Cyrus said. "This year we have a normal, average crop, not bad at all, but it looks worse when compared with last year's."

Cyrus said this year's increase in the price support and the improving quality of foreign tobacco make foreign leaf more attractive.

Further government controls on tobacco imports might help, but foreign governments could retaliate. A better strategy is for American growers improve their marketing practices, he said.

"You could buy better tobacco in Brazil or Zimbabwe than what we had on opening day, and for half of what it costs you here," he said. "They're doing everything they can overseas to catch up with us, and we're doing very little to keep ahead of them."

"We'll never be able to compete with the prices they offer overseas, so we're going to have to justify the prices we must charge in order for our farmers to make a profit. We've got to keep our tobacco the best."

Cigarette manufacturers complain of growing amounts of waste leaf in the piles they buy. That indicates farmers aren't sorting, or "picking," the tobacco carefully enough, Cyrus said.

Marshall Cox, tobacco sales supervisor of the Goldsboro Tobacco Market, said he agrees "100 percent with the need to clean up the leaf." But Gore said some farmers are withholding their best tobacco until prices improve. "They can't live with these prices," he said.

Gore said he and other farmers remain upset over the proposal to boost the federal excise tax on cigarettes from 8 cents to 16 cents per pack. The U.S. Senate has passed a bill including the tax, but tobacco-state legislators are trying to get a House-Senate conference committee to remove the cigarette levy from the package.

"There's no question but that the proposed tax increase has hurt sales," Cyrus said. "I have talked to the buyers, and they say it's making them very conservative. They're predicting that doubling the tax would cause about a 7 percent drop in retail sales, so they wouldn't need as much tobacco."

Tobacco Tax: East Switches, Helms Hedges

By The Associated Press

Sen. John East, R-N.C., says now that he's honored a request from President Reagan he is ready to vote against a $98.9-billion tax increase bill that would raise the cigarette tax.

And Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., said Saturday he "probably" would vote against the tax package unless the cigarette tax provision is altered in a House-Senate conference committee.

East and Helms have drawn criticism in North Carolina for voting for the measure which tobacco supporters say could harm sales of the leaf, the state's largest crop.

The measure, which passed the U.S. Senate 50-47, would raise the federal cigarette tax from 8 to 16 cents per pack. The proposal is being considered now by a House-Senate conference committee.

Meanwhile, Helms charged that Gov. Jim Hunt, who may challenge his re-election bid in 1984, is trying to fool tobacco farmers with a full-page newspaper advertisement in The News and Observer of Raleigh Sunday calling Helms and East the "Tobacco Tax Twins."

The ad is being paid for by the state Democratic Party but Helms suggested that the party means Hunt. Helms also charged that without his presence, the tobacco program would be in greater danger.

In a statement released Thursday, East said he voted in support of the tax "only at the personal appeal of President CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Kanawha County court officials have announced indictments charging four men with profane cursing and swearing, one man with taking the Lord's name in vain and four couples with living in a state of fornication.

No court proceedings are likely, since the indictments reported Friday by Circuit Judge Robert M. Harvey were returned by a jury on Aug. 1, 1976.

Harvey gleefully announced the indictments after they were found in an old record book containing court actions from 1788 to 1803.

GOP Is Optimistic It Can Keep Popularity Going In November

By MELVIN LANG
Reflector Staff Writer

North Carolina's Republican Party, straddling its highest crest of popularity this century, is optimistic that it will retain its momentum through the November general elections in a bid to strengthen its position in the U.S. House of Representatives and the General Assembly.

Republicans hit their modern zenith two years ago with the election of Greenville academician John East to the U.S. Senate, where he joined Jesse Helm — giving the party both seats from North Carolina in that body.

That, coupled with the capture of 20 percent of the legislative seats, gave the GOP its best showing in North Carolina since 1972 when Boone attorney Jim Holshouser surprised Democratic financier Hargrove "Skipper" Bowles to win the governorship and Helms upset Democratic foe Nick Galifianakis, a veteran congressman, to win the Senate seat.

The party direction has shifted in the last decade, moving more and more toward Helms' well-financed, Republican-oriented conservatism, growing in strength even more with President Reagan's election two years ago.

David Flaherty, a cabinet level officer in Holshouser's administration as governor and now the party's state chairman, says North Carolina Republicans in 1982 "are as strong if not stronger than they ever have been... We're better organized, have more money; we've got a very popular president and we've got the issues on our side."

Flaherty says the party is hoping to use that combination to keep its four incumbent congressmen for two more years and possibly add two new ones — in the 2nd and 8th Congressional districts.

The state is assured of at least one Republican congressman — Rep. James T. Broyhill of Lenoir had no opposition in the 10th District primary and is unopposed in the general election.

Flaherty said in a recent interview that, in addition to the incumbents, "we expect to win" in the 3rd, 4th and 5th districts and "possibly" capture the 2nd and 8th district races.

Rep. L.H. Fountain's retirement after his old 2nd District was realigned set the stage for the November campaign between I.T. "Tim" Valentine, a Nashville attorney who has been active as a Democrat for years, and former professional basketball player John "Jack" Marin, 37, who is now a Durham attorney.

The 8th District race matches four-term Democratic incumbent W.G. "Bill" Hefner of Kannapolis against Republican Harris D. Blake, 52, of Pinehurst.

Republicans are counting heavily, however, on the likes of William Cobey, former athletic director at UNC-Chapel Hill; Eugene "Red" McDaniel, a former prisoner of war, and former state Sen. Anne Bagnall to carry GOP flags to victory in the other three districts cited by Flaherty.

Terrorists Kill Seven In Turkey

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — An Armenian suicide squad opened fire with submachine guns at Ankara airport Saturday and officials said at least seven people, including an American, were killed and 69 wounded in a two-hour rampage and bombing the terrorists said was to avenge their people's massacre.

The U.S. State Department in Washington said two of the victims were Americans, and reported one of them died.

Identities were not immediately released.

Turkish state radio said three police officers, three Turkish passengers and a terrorist were killed in the siege and made no immediate mention of Americans among the casualties. Security forces seriously wounded the other two terrorists, state radio said.

The guerrillas said their first attack ever in Turkey was a protest against "the Turkish fascist occupation of our land," and warned of suicide attacks in the United States, Canada, France, England, Switzerland and Sweden unless 85 prisoners held in those countries were freed in seven days.

The terrorists in the Turkish attack first attacked the international flight terminal at Esenboga airport, where they exploded a bomb and then strafed passengers going through passport control for a Dutch airlines flight.

Turkey's state radio said one terrorist was wounded in the terminal and that two others ran into the cafeteria, taking 20 people hostage.

The terrorists say they are avenging the massacre of 1.5 million Armenians by Ottoman Turks in 1915-16.

This was the first time Armenian terrorists staged a major operation within borders of Turkey.

Democrats Pick Two Candidates

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The N.C. Democratic Party Executive Committee Saturday nominated two judges to run for unexpired terms, discussed party organization, but avoided the issue of a legislator facing state and federal indictments.

The committee nominated Harry C. Martin to run for the unexpired term of former Supreme Court Justice David Britt, who recently retired. Gov. Jim Hunt has appointed Martin from the state Court of Appeals to fill Britt's seat in the November election.

The committee also nominated Clifton E. Johnson of Charlotte to run for the balance of Martin's term. Hunt had also appointed Johnson to Martin's seat until the election.

Meanwhile, Jane Patterson, secretary of the state Democratic Party, said she was unaware of any effort by party officials to urge Rep. G. Ronald Taylor, D-Bladen, to resign.

expressed by Lebanese leaders that the negotiations to end the siege of Beirut by evacuating the Palestine Liberation Organization fighters were about to succeed.

It also contrasted with optimistic Israeli statements issued earlier Saturday. A Foreign Ministry spokesman, Yossi Amihud, had said that while Israel did not have "anything concrete or final," there had been "movement" by the PLO during the week, thanks to military pressure applied by Israel.

Israel launched a 15-minute artillery barrage on west Beirut as the sun set Saturday, but apart from that, there was little fighting reported. The Israelis reported one soldier wounded when his patrol vehicle hit a mine near Tyre, south of Beirut.

The Israelis also maintained their 2-week-old blockade on electricity, water and fuel supplies to west Beirut's estimated 400,000-500,000 inhabitants, but allowed a five-truck convoy carrying 6.5 tons of milk and seven tons of medical supplies, including plasma, into the guerrilla-held enclave.

Nonetheless, the International Red Cross spokesman in west Beirut, Jean-Jacques Kurtz, said if there is one more day of heavy shelling years when he resigned the UNC-CH post to enter political warfare full time, is trying to unseat five-term incumbent Democratic Rep. Ike Andrews in the 4th District.

McDaniel is opposing another Democratic incumbent, Charles O. Whitley, in the 3rd District and Ms. Bagnall is making a repeat challenge of incumbent Stephen L. Neal in the 5th.

In addition to Broyhill, Republicans have as incumbents — all considered at this point to be on fairly safe ground — Reps. James G. Martin in the 9th District, Eugene Johnston of Greensboro in the 6th and William Hendon in the 11th.

Martin, who has been in the House since 1973, faces Democrat Preston Cornelius. Johnston is being opposed by Democrat Robin Britt and Hendon is going against state Sen. James M. Clarke.

In the 1st District, Democratic incumbent Walter Jones of Farmville — second only to Broyhill in length of service by North Carolina incumbents — faces general election opposition from Greenville accountant James F. McIntyre.

Little Republican enthusiasm is seen in the 7th District where the incumbent Democrat, Rep. Charles Rose, appears to have the advantage over Republican Edward Johnson.

In local elections, Republicans have only two entries in the general elections in Pitt County — Sallie C. Keel of Greenville is opposing Democratic incumbent Vernon White for the state Senate and Ayden minister-businessman Walter Bruce Jones and farmer Charles McLawhorn, a Democrat, are seeking the Ayden-Grifton-Swift Creek seat on the Pitt Board of Commissioners.

Tobacco Tax ...

Reagan, who requested additional time to put together a comprehensive economic program.

"Having honored that presidential request, I am now in position to reaffirm my original position," East said.

Helms, appearing on the Cable News Network "Newsmaker Saturday" program, said he probably wouldn't vote for the tax bill again. Instead, he proposed scaling back the cigarette tax increase to 2 cents and raising the tax on alcohol, beer and wine to make up for the lost revenue.

President Reagan still is pushing for the bill and he postponed his vacation so he could remain in Washington to lobby. He has argued that the tax increase bill is needed to help reduce the gap between federal spending and income.

The Democratic ad about the roles of Helms and East in the tobacco tax vote sparked debate before it appeared. Helms charged that Hunt had something to do with the ad, which says that, "With friends like these, tobacco doesn't need any more enemies. Vote for Tobacco. Vote Democratic on Nov. 2."

"I'm sure his fine hand is in it," Helms said.

"I'll tell you right now, they're making a mistake on this one," Helms said. "Those tobacco farmers who might be misled now won't be misled when we go to bat.

"If I don't return to the Senate, you know who'll be chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee? Sen. Richard Lugar of Indiana. By golly, if that happens you can bet there won't be any more tobacco program."

Helms is chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee — the first chairman of the committee from North Carolina in 150 years, he said. Next in line for the job is Lugar, an outspoken foe of the tobacco price-support program.

The ranking Democrat on the committee is Sen. Walter Huddleston of Kentucky, who would be in line for the chairmanship if the Democrats regain control of the Senate in 1984. Huddleston supports the program.

Hunt was on his way to Oklahoma for a national governors' meeting and could not be reached for comment.

Man Charged In Hotel Fire

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A 40-year-old drifter wanted for setting fires at three small downtown hotels was arrested Saturday as he set a fire in a room at the 17-story Downtown Howard Johnson's Motor Lodge, police said.

Detective Sam Fradella said the motel's staff alerted police shortly after Martin Peters, formerly of Tulsa, Okla., checked into the motor lodge. Witnesses to two of the earlier fires had given police a description of a man seen near those hotels, and that description was circulated to all New Orleans hotels and motels.

Detectives arrested Peters as he was setting fire to some bedding in his eighth-floor room, Fradella said. He refused to say if there were any other combustibles in the room.

Peters was booked on four counts of aggravated arson, Fradella added.

In addition to the Howard Johnson's incident, Fradella said Peters is accused of setting fires Thursday at the John Mitchell and Metro hotels, and on Saturday at the Hummingbird Hotel.

Fradella said witnesses at the John Mitchell and Metro fires gave police a description of a man who acted suspiciously.

Thursday's fires broke out within hours of each other, burning out the roof of the John Mitchell hotel, and causing less serious damage at the Metro hotel.

The fire at the Hummingbird was confined to the top floor, causing minimal damage.

No one was injured in any of the fires.

Clark Defends U.S. Sanctions

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — President Reagan's national security adviser, William Clark, insisted Saturday that administration sanctions against Poland and the Soviet Union are "not a trade war, but done in the name of human rights."

Clark and another administration representative, Elliott Abrams, said the best road to human rights is to have a secure nation that can stand up to the Soviet Union.

The two appeared at a panel on human rights and terrorism at the American Bar Association's annual convention.

Abrams, assistant secretary of State for human rights, said "human rights is obviously in the national security interest of the United States," adding that the "ascent of the Soviet Union is the greatest threat to human rights."

"Some of the sanctions have been carried so far that they have been angrily denounced by Western European allies.

The president last year prohibited use of American equipment to construct the Siberian natural gas pipeline, later extending that prohibition to cover equipment produced overseas under U.S. license.

The pipeline is seen by the administration as making Western Europe overly dependent on the Soviet Union for a vital resource. But the allies see things differently, and several have defied the sanctions.

Clark said that although the Europeans were "not happy" with the sanctions they "did learn the incumbent president is going to act in areas he said he would act in."

But Clark made it clear the administration believes too great a concern with human rights could compromise national security.

"When this administration arrived in Washington, extreme views on human rights were prevalent," Clark said. "This is the shoal on which the previous administration's policy foundered."

"It's inconsistent to speak of an inordinate fear of totalitarianism while at the same time promoting the cause of human rights."

The Reagan administration's approach, he said, is that a "strong America... is good for personal liberties. If we're seen as weak, retreating and unsure we can't succeed."

Later, as Abrams rose to speak, two people in the front row leaped up and unfurled a banner opposing American involvement in El Salvador.

Reagan's Team Doesn't Always Travel In Style

By ANN BLACKMAN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — When the head of the International Communications Agency, Charles Z. Wick, travels on government business, he generally flies first class, stays in luxurious hotel suites and travels by limousine. But he picks up a large part of the tab himself.

When Farmers Home administrator Charles W. Shuman goes on the road, he flies coach, stays in moderately priced motels and sometimes eats in hamburger joints. In Washington, he sometimes goes to a meeting by subway.

An examination of thousands of travel vouchers of top Reagan administration officials at eight departments or agencies shows that some Reagan administration officials travel in style. Sometimes they mix working trips with personal vacations.

But the vouchers also showed that for most top-level bureaucrats, life in the fast lane is not all that glamorous: they fly coach class, stay in motel chains that give discounts to the government and eat inexpensively to stay within a government budget.

Shortly after assuming office, President Reagan said his budget-cutting program included cutting federal travel expenses by 10 percent.

As a result, civilian departments and agencies reduced their travel budgets in 1981 by an average of 16 percent, according to the Office of Management and Budget. However, the travel budget at the Pentagon increased by 9 percent, wiping out any overall cuts in the travel budget.

Among other things, the vouchers show:

— Budget Director David Stockman chartered a military jetliner to Baton Rouge, La., in April 1981, at a cost to American taxpayers of $3,945. His written request stated that "commercial air travel is neither available, readily convenient or satisfactorily capable of performing the requirements of this mission."

The $4,000 mission: Stockman spoke to the 6th Congressional District Business Advisory Committee.

(A year later, Stockman issued a bulletin directing all executive branch agencies to tighten controls over the authorization of government travel.)

— Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige flew first class last August to Denver and Kansas City on official business and then on to Albuquerque, N.M., where he spent nine days at his ranch in Mountainair, N.M. Taxpayers paid for his transportation to and from New Mexico, although the trip included only one day of official business.

Baldrige's itinerary shows he arrived at his ranch on a Friday night, spent the weekend and drove to Albuquerque the next Monday to testify at a Senate hearing and hold a press conference. Then he returned to his ranch for the rest of the week.

— Interior Secretary James G. Watt sometimes eats cheap meals. For example, on one three-day trip last January to Chicago, Boise and Denver, Watt billed the government a total of $5.75 for one day's meals.

— Federal Reserve Board Chairman Paul A. Volcker took 38 official trips in the 12 months surveyed. On more than half, he flew coach class to New York. On almost all other trips, he flew first class.

— Commerce Assistant Secretary Lawrence J. Brady made eight trips to Boston between July 1981 and March 1982 to attend meetings, make speeches or give interviews. His itinerary always included a sidetrip to his southern New Hampshire residence.

— Assistant Agriculture

Secretary C.W. McMillan made four trips to Mexico City in the 12 months surveyed, three times to attend meetings of the U.S.-Mexican Screwworm Commission.

The vouchers and receipts for hotels, meals and ground travel, obtained through the Freedom of Information Act, were checked for the period between April 1981 and April 1982 for officials at the departments of Agriculture, Commerce and Interior. They were also checked at the Office of Management and Budget, the Federal Reserve, the International Communications Agency and the Environmental Protection Agency.

Government per diem allowances range from $50 to $75 a day within the United States and to more than $100 a day in some foreign countries. And federal regulations state that bureaucrats must travel at less than first class rates. However, Cabinet officers and agency heads can exempt themselves from this ruling.

Although the survey showed that some Cabinet officers take advantage of this exception, government auditors say their first-class tickets did not have much effect on Reagan's $4 billion travel budget for fiscal year 1981.

"Less than one-half of one percent of the entire travel budget last year was spent on first class," said Ivan Michael Schaeffer, assistant commissioner at the General Services Administration. "For the most part, those who use first class are very high-ranking. If they say, 'I'm the head of an agency, and I'll go where I want to,' there's not much you can do."

The federal travel budget jumped from $4 billion for fiscal year 1981 to an estimated $4.8 billion in 1982 and is estimated at $5.1 billion in 1983.

The latest GSA report on government travel to Congress, dated June 1982, shows that the additional cost of first-class air travel was less than 1 percent of the total air travel costs for all government agencies, but the additional costs were not insignificant: $92,742 at the Treasury Department; $24,805 at the State Department; $22,219 at the Commerce Department; $20,618 at the International Communication Agency.

Reagan's close friend Charles Wick is one government official who almost always travels in style. Wick's travel records show he took four first-class flights between Washington and California in the 12 months surveyed.

Three of those times, he stayed in $300-a-day suites at the Beverly Wilshire Hotel — and paid part of the bill himself.

On one seven-day trip last March when Wick attended the World Affairs Council, he was reimbursed $75 a day by the government plus an additional $148 a day because he said he used his room for government business. He personally picked up at least $400 of the total tab for meals and such additional expenses as room service and phone calls, records show.

His receipts show also that he rented a Cadillac Seville for $458.26. The government reimbursed him $126.97.

Wick's vouchers show also that he flew first class to Los Angeles on Dec. 29, 1981, concluded his business the next day and stayed in California "for personal reasons" over New Year's Eve.

Wick also took four foreign trips between June 1981 and March 1982, always flying first class on the overseas portions, the documents show.

Twice, Wick cited tight scheduling problems as a reason to take the supersonic Concorde. Each time he re-officials, deducts losses from her income taxes.

Hatfields, McCoys Hold Reunion

By ALAN ROBINSON
Associated Press Writer
WILLIAMSON, W.Va. (AP) — If the Hatfields and the McCoys — those famous feudin' families of the 1800s — could have seen the doings here Saturday, they may not have believed it.

It was exactly 100 years to the day when the famous fight broke out after nearly two decades of simmering hostilities between the Hatfields of southern West Virginia and the McCoys of eastern Kentucky.

Back on Aug. 7, 1882, moonshine and a hotly contested election led to the slaying of Ellison Hatfield, the brother of the legendary and widely feared "Devil Anse" Hatfield.

The Hatfields took out their revenge by killing three McCoy brothers.

The bad blood continued into the 20th century, and the whole thing wasn't patched up until 1976, when the two families formally buried the hatchet and dedicated a monument to the 100 or so men, women and children who died or were wounded during the deadly spat.

On Saturday, to mark the 100th anniversary, Hatfield and McCoy kin held an informal get-together on Williamson's streets. But instead of swilling corn liquor, they drank lemonade; and gunshots were replaced by snapshots.

"I think it's OK to celebrate, but I don't think they would have liked this," said Dutch Hatfield, a resident of Red Jacket, W.Va., and the grandson of Ellison Hatfield.

"They (the 19th-century Hatfields) wouldn't have liked all of this attention," he added. "They were hard-working people and they wouldn't have understood why everybody was making a big fuss over them."

Hatfield said the fighting was genuine, but time had a way of exaggerating some of the feud's tales a bit.

"This fellow will tell a story, and that fellow will tell a story, and they don't always match," said Hatfield, who served as a police chief of Matewan, W.Va., at the same time a McCoy — Bob McCoy — served as mayor.

Hatfield said that not too many folks think about the feudin' and fussin' anymore.

"Oh, I've gotten a little bit interested in it now, since everybody's paying a lot of attention to it," he confessed. "But those days are gone. It's real peaceful now."

Back at the celebration, first the Hatfields and then the McCoys posed for group pictures. Each paid $10 apiece for prints.

As Dutch Hatfield watched members of the McCoy clan line up for their photo, he was asked if he would go pose with them.

Man Charged In Accident

A Route 13, Greenville, man — Jeffery Adams — was charged with driving under the influence and failing to yield the right of way in a Friday afternoon accident near Bell's Fork south of Greenville.

According to Trooper D. R. Taylor, a car driven by Adams was pulling from a driveway at his home on rural paved road 1725 when it collided with a car driven by Edward Daniels of Winterville.

Taylor said a passenger in the Adams car, identified as Curtis Ray Daniels, was reported injured. Taylor said Alfred Daniels of Winterville, a passenger in the Daniels vehicle, also was injured.

The accident occurred about 4:20 p.m.

Forgiving Store Owner Gets Gifts

DOVER, N.H. (AP) — A variety store owner who erased unpaid charge accounts from his books to stimulate business is getting gifts from people who read news reports about him.

Ernest T.J. Peters, owner of E.J.'s Variety store, said he received two letters containing $20 each in cash on Saturday.

"God bless you," one of the letter-writers said. "It was so good to see good news and love and forgiveness on the front-page amidst the reports of war, trouble and man's inhumanity to man."

Postmarked Scranton, Pa., and signed only, "A Scranonian," the letter continued: "I am sending you $20 to express in my own way the joy you gave me by your act of love. I owe you much more. May you prosper greatly."

"With respect and appreciation, A Scranonian."

Peters, who said he canceled customers' debts hoping to lure back customers who might be staying away from his struggling store because of unpaid bills, said he will give the money — and any more money he receives — to the Rochester Child Development Center in Rochester, N.H.

He said the center has "performed miracles" for his 19-year-old son, Scott, who he said was brain-damaged at birth.

"I accept it graciously from the people," he said of the gifts. "I feel that people gave this to me to do what I wanted."

"Monday, there'll be more," Peters predicted. "I really think that's what's going to happen."

Peters said the other $20 came from a New Yorker who said she grew up in Peabody, Mass., and once lived in Ashland, N.H.

"You make me proud to be a Yankee — not that I always wasn't," wrote the woman, who signed her name but said in a brief telephone interview Saturday that she did not want it published. "My husband has a small business, too, and it's not easy."

"Hope the enclosed will help a little."

Pitt Population Is Diversified And Youthful

Pitt County undoubtedly will soon become a county of more than 100,000 persons. The 1980 census shows the county with a population of 90,146. In the two intervening years there has been more growth.

There are more females than males in Pitt — 5,090 more. The county numbers 58,587 white residents and 30,966 blacks — about a 2 to 1 ratio.

These and other facts about the nature of the county's population are included in a U.S. Census breakdown recently released by the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce.

There are many nationalities represented in the county. Even though this was once American Indian country, there are more Asian Indians here than American — 94 to 86. There are 74 Chinese, 36 Japanese, 44 Korean and 33 Vietnamese in the Pitt County population. In 1980 there was one Eskimo, three Aleuts and four Guamanians.

It is a young society with the median age being 26.1 years.

But we have our share of older people with 534 being over 85 years old in 1980.

The 14 through 19 age group accounts for 11,947 persons or 13.25 percent of the population.

The figures show a changing Pitt County. There are more diversified backgrounds among our residents than ever before. They show us a growing county with a youthful tilt which, hopefully, will keep us vigorous.

'Guilty, But Insane' A Proper Plea In Some Crimes

The nation was shocked by the jury verdict which found John W. Hinckley, Jr. innocent by reason of insanity in the shooting of President Reagan and others.

To most of us this was clearly a case where the man should not be turned loose again on society.

Could it happen in North Carolina? The North Carolina Criminal Code Commission says it already has in the works a revision to the insanity defense laws which could allow a "guilty but mentally ill" plea. The proposal is expected to be ready for consideration by the General Assembly when it convenes in January.

Conviction under the plea would allow the court to sentence the defendant to a suitable term, but the defendant would initially be assigned to a state mental health facility.

This is good and logical law. No one would deny that the criminally insane need special treatment, but they should not have the right to escape incarceration entirely, or to be a continuing menace to society.

Sunday Morning Notes

Newspapers don't ask that their readers agree with them on editorial opinions, but it sure is pleasing when someone acknowledges that they are reading them.

This happens often enough, but usually it is in the form of a critical letter or an irate phone call. So be it.

One steady reader approached us recently.

"I wanted to tell you, that I thoroughly agreed with your editorial of last night." Then he frowned, "I don't recall what it was about, but I agreed with it." Well, we appreciate even that.

A teen-aged couple was standing in the ticket line at the Plaza Cinema the other night.

When it came their turn, the young man ordered his tickets, "Two to the Whore House."

There was a titter up and down the line and the ticket seller, with embarrassment, pushed over two tickets to "Best Little Whorehouse In Texas."

The next few patrons were careful to order their tickets to "Theater No. 3."

All that might set off a discussion as to how proper people might order their tickets to the movie with the lusty word:

"Best Little (beep) House in Texas."

"Best Little House in Texas."

"Best Little House (with that unspeakable word) In Texas."

"Best Little House of Ill-Repute In Texas."

"Best Little House That Harbors Fallen Women In Texas."

"Best Little Commercial Establishment in Texas."

Maybe it's best to order tickets to that movie with Dolly and Burt.

Nobody has trouble ordering tickets to "E.T.", that lovable space creature which has endeared itself to the hearts of Americans this summer.

Ever since the first movies flickered, space creatures have endured a bad rap. They've been bad guys chasing Flash Gordon or Buck Rogers, or even the earth heroes of "Star Wars." Or they've been monsters, brought to earth as eggs that hatch and set out to destroy the world. (Only Superman was the exception.)

Now, however, we have a space creature which looks like a space creature, but is almost, well, human. Everybody loves E.T., and space relations will be the better for it.

Tax Vote Caught Some People Asleep

RALEIGH — The U.S. Senate's final vote on an eight-cent cigarette tax increase took place in the wee hours of the morning and apparently caught some people sleeping, including the state Democratic Party.

In that vote, North Carolina's two senators, Jesse Helms and John East, took the remarkable course of supporting a doubling of the cigarette tax. That might prove to be the most hotly debated issue in North Carolina politics over the next few years but, when it came time for the Democrats to respond later that day, they couldn't get the their act together.

The politicians weren't the only ones sleeping. The wire service reporters in Washington sent the story out for afternoon papers — morning paper deadlines had passed — without any mention that Helms and East had provided the margin of victory by changing their votes at the last minute. So those afternoon papers with early deadlines went to press without the news. It was mid-morning before local wire service reporters could confirm that the Tar Heel senators had supported the hike, said state Associated Press news editor Steve Paulsen.

Brent Hackney, Gov. Jim Hunt's deputy press aide, tried to organize a Democratic response to Helms' vote but failed at several points. Elephant Watch chairman Rep. Al Adams of Raleigh was in a legislative meeting and then was scheduled to fly to Europe. Janice Faulkner, party executive director, was tied up in a senior Democrats' conference. Party chairman Russell Walker was in Asheboro and couldn't get to Raleigh. Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham was out of town.

Hackney ended up writing a statement that went out over Walker's signature. The Democrats therefore missed the chance to go on TV in eastern North Carolina with some bombast about the vote.

Hunt's press secretary, Gary Pearce, was in Canada on vacation at the time of the vote. He didn't learn of it until two days later when he was eating lunch in Virginia.

Jim Taylor, press secretary to 5th District Rep. Steve Neal, reports that a favorite word in Washington these days is "bluviate." The word means to orate pompously. An example of usage: "The Democrats missed their chance to bluviate on Helms' tax increase vote."

Eastern Peace Movement Could Be Slow

BERLIN — Last month's series of marches in the Soviet Union by 300 Scandinavian women could have been the Kremlin's idea of "Guess who's Coming to Dinner."

After all, the notion — much less reality — of Western-style peace protests transplanting themselves inside the Eastern bloc has never set well with Moscow. Despite the Soviets' official invitation to the Scandinavians, even-handed placards reading "No to Nuclear Weapons in East and West" have seemed risky.

Yet, the marches in Minsk, Moscow and Leningrad aren't the harbingers of an Eastern European peace movement for which many in the West have been waiting. Even in prosperous East Germany, where the government confesses to the existence of a growing unofficial peace movement, a popular crusade to disarm remains out of the question.

In the past, pacifism in East Germany has been the domain of provincial church leaders. Since 1964, the Protestant Evangelical Church, this country's only institution free of state control, has "suggested" that army conscripts have a right to conscientious objection. Since 1975 it has advocated the separation of physical from military education in East German schools. Though well-grounded in spirit, both proposals have fallen on deaf ears here.

But, in the last eight months, the church has been risking its apolitical status. In January, Berlin pastor Rainer Eppelman and 700 colleagues signed a petition known now as the "Berlin Appeal," which called for among other things, withdrawal of American and Soviet troops from East and West Germany and the creation of a nuclear-free zone in their place.

In February, 5,000 young East Germans gathered at Dresden's Cross Church in support of a civilian alternative to military service. When police responded later by removing the "Swords into Ploughshares" badges that many young Germans had sewn onto their clothes, some pastors questioned the authorities on Easter Sunday.

The scope of these "initiatives" may seem paltry by western standards, where a peace movement connotes thousands of face-painted people filling the streets. Yet, it was courageous to suggest, as East German Writers' Union leader Stephan Hermlin did last Christmas, that people here ought to "think about the possibilities of peace."

Now, though they admit the badge-ripping was a nervous overreaction, East German authorities fear western elements may be taking advantage of the church's status and facilities to destabilize society.

"The peace movement of the church is used in order to create a lever of political opposition," said Dr. Heinz Kosin, of the Institute for International Politics and Business, a Communist Party think-tank. Kosin told our reporter Michael Duffy that "the most dangerous thing would be if the church gets involved in the same discussion as the West. What we have trouble with are the demands for disarmament."

Put another way, Kosin is saying that the church in East Germany, like those in Hungary and Romania — where similar initiatives are brewing — must keep its flock under control. Otherwise, this "movement" could go the way of Poland's Solidarity.

It's worth noting that the East German government's response to its peace movement has at least rhetorical echoes in the West, when party leader Erich Honecker told a group of young people that "as nice as ploughshares are, we need our swords too," he sounded a lot like Ronald Reagan.

Irony aside, however, Americans best not expect too much too soon in the way of an Eastern counterweight to a Western peace movement. The Protestant Church will be under increasing pressure from the government to separate its true followers from those young people who've recently begun attending services for political or recreational reasons. Though September will bring a meeting between East German and Dutch church leaders, excess attention may only frighten authorities more.

And A Dry Bed Becomes A Waterway

WASHINGTON — Bill Lambert is a stubborn man. The U.S. Army's Corps of Engineers can be stubborn too. These adversaries have tangled in legal proceedings down in Florida that provide one more demonstration of what can happen when bureaucrats and judges run amok.

This is a complicated story, but it is worth your attention because there is a moral to it.

Back in 1972 Congress adopted certain amendments to the Federal Water Control Pollution Act. Among these amendments was a paragraph known as Section 404. The purpose of Section 404 was to renew the jurisdiction of the Corps of Engineers over navigable waters. Neither in Section 404 or in any provision of the act was there the slightest reference to "wetlands."

A few years passed. In 1979 Congress passed the Clean Water Act, giving the Environmental Protection Agency a piece of the action. The EPA was to look after "waters of the United States." The 1979 legislation did not amend Section 404 — the Corps of Engineers retained its authority — but then some curious things happened. Through a combination of court decrees and administrative interpretations the definition of "navigable waters" was extended to include all waters and the wetlands adjacent thereto. The moral here is that the judicial hand is quicker than the congressional eye, for Congress never had intended any such thing.

The result was that by a process of bureaucratic osmosis, every puddle, every pond, every lake — every rill, run, brook and tributary stream — every swamp and marsh and potentially every irrigation ditch became subject to Section 404. Any person wishing to affect such wetlands by dredge or fill operations must apply to the Corps of Engineers for a permit.

Very well. Enter Bill Lambert. He is a highly successful entrepreneur in Cape Canaveral. Eight years ago he invented a machine for separating scallops from their shells. His Southern Seafood company became the largest processor of scallops in the nation. Now, it is one of those inescapable facts of life that once scallops are separated from their shells, the shells must be disposed of. In 1977 Lambert acquired a 37-acre tract of land — a tract that certainly appears dry to the naked eye — and for the next three years he tidily buried four million pounds of shells a week on this property.

Enter the bureaucracy. In 1980 the Corps suddenly decided that Lambert's dry land was wetland; a small part of it was subject to inundation under extreme weather conditions; besides, the tract contained such common plants as sea daisy, leather fern and sea purslane. For more than two years, with the help of the Washington Legal Foundation, Lambert has been fighting bureaucratic demands that, in a word, are quite simply absurd.

Lambert is not alone. The town of Alma, Ga., had to struggle for four years through the swamps of Section 404 to create a 1,400-acre lake. In Cameron, La., a construction company fought for two years for a permit to fill 10 acres of marsh; the 10 acres represented 5 ten-thousandths of 1 percent of the wetlands in the area. Near Appleton, Wis., a fellow named Thomas sought to fill an eight-foot strip of wetland in his backyard adjacent to Lake Shawano. He wanted to build a garage and to plant a garden. After three years, he won a partial victory: garage, yes; garden, no.

William R. Gianelli, assistant secretary of the army for civil works, agrees that Section 404 has become a bureaucratic nightmare. Last year, with solid support from the White House, he set about instituting procedural reforms. Within the next few weeks he will publish new rules that will abolish the Mickey Mouse requirements of the past. Once in operation, the rules will provide final action on permits within 90 days from application.

Revolt

WASHINGTON — The Oval Office presumption that Ronald Reagan can quell the Republican tax revolt with telephone calls to Reaganite congressmen is belied by a closed-door strategy session July 30 between Rep. Jack Kemp and national New Right leaders.

Present in Kemp's office were the Rev. Jerry Falwell of the Moral Majority, Howard Phillips of the Conservative Caucus and right-wing fund-raiser Richard Viguerie. All agreed that the $99 billion tax increase, passed by the Senate at President Reagan's insistence, must die. Viguerie outlined plans for a national campaign to accomplish just that.

The meeting signified that for the first time as president, Reagan has lost the right-wing populists responsible for his nomination and probably his election. To save the tax bill that today would lose by 100 votes on the House floor, Reagan cannot hope for conservatives; he must now seek help from his mortal enemies in the Democratic establishment.

The Republican tax revolt, therefore, is not just a reaction to Reagan supporting McGovern-Carter tax reform under the banners of austerity. It is more a philosophical watershed separating the president from his hard-core constituency.

Seldom in history has a presidentially-supported bill generated such passionate opposition within the president's own administration. Rebellious officials in the White House and Treasurers are praying that the bill will be killed.

Their mood is intensified in the House. On July 28 Republicans voted 137 to 44 against the position of Minority Leader Bob Michel and Minority whip Trent Lott, who joined majority Democrats in sending the tax bill to the Senate-House conference. At the Republican caucus the next day rebellious rank-and-file members scolded Lott and Michel, saying they were supposed to be representing the GOP congressmen, not the White House.

Nevertheless, the president's advisers in the West Wing of the White House this week were saying "the conservatives" in Congress were shaky and likely to bail out. Their conventional wisdom: Ron Reagan's mellifluous baritone over the telephone would bring around the rebels in the House as it did in the Senate.

Signs are that it will not. The meeting in Kemp's office signaled that the right is mobilized against Reagan for the first time. Although Falwell is not much interested in economics' he is on board as Phillips and Viguerie stir opposition through phone banks and mailings. Kemp is seeking broader support, including Reagan's neo-conservative friends. The U.S. Chamber of Commerce is running its own opposition campaign.

To move the Senate-passed bill through the House, Reagan needs heavy Democratic support. That would put him in the highly-embarrassing position of pleading with liberal and moderate Democrats to vote for a bill that is more compatible with their philosophies than his.

Thus, the Republican tax revolt is no mid-summer escapade on Capitol Hill. It is a mid-term crisis for Reagan. Pummeled by Richard Wirthlin's polls showing he lacks fairness and David Stockman's balance sheets showing huge deficits, Reagan has alienated his right wing.

At one recent pep talk for business lobbyists in Dr. Wirthlin's office, Nancy Sinnott of the Republican Congressional Campaign Committee echoed the White House line: The "populist" tax bill would gain new ground for the GOP. Small business lobbyist Mike McKeivitt exploded, contending Main Street America hoped for something new when it exchanged Jimmy Carter for Ronald Reagan. If Reagan now courts Democrats in Congress, he would be doing the exchanging.

Times

NEW YORK (AP) — These are tough times economically, but nobody needs to be reminded of that. What they do need reminding of is that some things are improving. Incredible, to be sure, but true nonetheless.

To find the treasures, however, is akin to rummaging and picking your way through the town dump in search of an antique or an almost new tricycle or the very hubcap you've been seeking for several months.

That is, you must pick your way through the news about a shriveling economy, high interest rates, growing unemployment, budget imbalances, uncertainty about oil prices and the continued high cost of living.

Meanwhile, Americans can take considerable pride in having lowered energy demands below expectations, an effort involving myriad activities and habits of homeowners, manufacturers and suppliers.

It was one of the great discoveries of our time — how much waste could be eliminated by insulating, by changing habits, by building more fuel-efficient automobiles — and it involved almost all segments of society.

People have learned again to live within their incomes. True, the federal government still has to get the point, but households have, and many families have been saving again in spite of the tough times.

Greater productivity seems an almost inevitable consequence of the tough times. And that, as you know, means a lessening of inflationary pressures, since production efficiency means more goods for less cost.

Much of the productivity improvement isn't very visible yet, but someday it will be. To see an old-line business fail is to witness a tragedy, but often it means that a more efficient, productive business replaces it.

And throughout the recession another phenomenon has been at work — the founding of brand new businesses and even entire industries. Some will succeed. Some might radically change lifestyles.

You need not search long or hard, for example, to imagine the imprint on lives that small-computer technology will be having — and, in fact, is having, because of developments in the past five years or so, years that history may record as among the most confused of the century.

The impact of the new computers, and their tie-in with developments in electronic communications, conceivably might have more of an imprint on lives than the industrial revolution, when the invention of machines compounded the physical output of human workers.

WASHINGTON (AP) — When Ronald Reagan says farmers are very much on his mind, it could explain something about why he thinks it's all right for Americans to sell grain to the Soviets and all wrong for the Europeans to sell them pipeline parts.

American grain farmers will be voting in this fall's elections. French and Italian turbine mechanics won't, no matter what happens in Poland.

Farmers are critical to the Republican Party this year and the party is stumbling in the Midwest, even as it seems to be doing pretty well in the rest of the country. If farmers blame Republican candidates for the high interest rates and poor commodity prices that are squeezing profits, the GOP could be in deep trouble in the American heartland.

Huge grain sales to the Soviets would help ease some of the pressure on farmers. And that's just what Reagan paved the way for with his decision last week to negotiate a one-year extension of the grain sale agreement with the Soviets.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A stubborn man, whether motivated by passion or politics, can have a remarkable impact on Senate legislation.

In the process he will lose friends, incur enemies, risk reprisals and feel the wrath of the leaders.

But the history of the Senate is replete with men who went their own way and ignored the adage that in Congress "to get along, go along."

The most deft practitioners of the art in the Senate today probably are Howard Metzenbaum of Ohio, Lowell Weicker of Connecticut and Jesse Helms of North Carolina.

Although Metzenbaum and Weicker, both very liberal on social and consumer issues, are frequently allies, they seem to pick their own fights. Helms is invariably on the opposite side.

They have vividly demonstrated during the last year what one senator can accomplish.

Witness the major rewrite of a bill providing subsidized federal irrigation water for Western farmers — courtesy of Metzenbaum.

By stubbornly refusing to buckle before an overwhelming majority, he forced key changes on acreage limits and water-pricing formulas.

Several basic elements operated in Metzenbaum's favor. It was Friday and senators

Patience Can Be Measured At The Polls

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan is readjusting his timetable for economic recovery, and is asking Americans to adjust theirs.

On a visit this week, he told hard-pressed pressed farmers in Iowa prosperity "is not going to come tomorrow."

Experts seem to agree. "Slow" is the operative word these days in Reagan's economic statements.

He opened his news conference last week with a statement setting the stage for a much slower recovery than he had hoped.

"Nothing is more painful to me than the slowness of our progress," he said. "But, slowly and surely, we are working our way back to prosperity."

Most of all, he is asking for patience from Americans that his route to economic recovery will work. He seems to have forgotten his own campaign taunt in 1980 — "when your neighbor loses his job, it's a recession; when you lose your job it's a depression; when Jimmy Carter loses his job, it's recovery."

"I wish recovery could be easier and faster," Reagan says these days. "Unfortunately, it isn't. It's tough, slow work, and it's going to require enormous effort and patience from every one of us to correct the problems we inherited."

But if others have deserted the supply side ship, Reagan has not. He is keeping the faith, repeating the litany that because he inherited 40 years of "fiscal insanity," the current mess isn't his fault — and he is rowing as quickly as possible out of the economic bog.

While doing this he freely blames his predecessors — both Democrats and Republicans — for the nation's economic ills.

"The worst thing that we could do would be to turn back, to resort to the same political quick fixes that got us into this mess," he told his news conference.

"If we have the courage to believe in ourselves and stop wringing our hands, roll up our sleeves and get the job done — and, for once, get it done right — we can start repaying that mortgage on our future and create opportunity and hope again for every American."

Pep talks are fine. But for all the rallying words, Reagan has not been able to work his magic in any big way on the Federal Reserve Board, whose tight money policies he has basically applauded.

The housing and automobile industries have tightened their belts. Reagan has made it clear Washington will not bail them out.

Americans were told that when their taxes were cut on July 1, they would begin to see a prosperous new horizon. They still are waiting.

They first were told to save and invest their money. Later they were urged to spend and get it into circulation.

Reagan has not yet been asked at what point he would decide his policies are not working. But aides, who take a gloomier view, indicate he may have to re-evaluate after the elections.

They say he would appear "wishy-washy, like Carter" if he decides to switch tactics to get the country moving again.

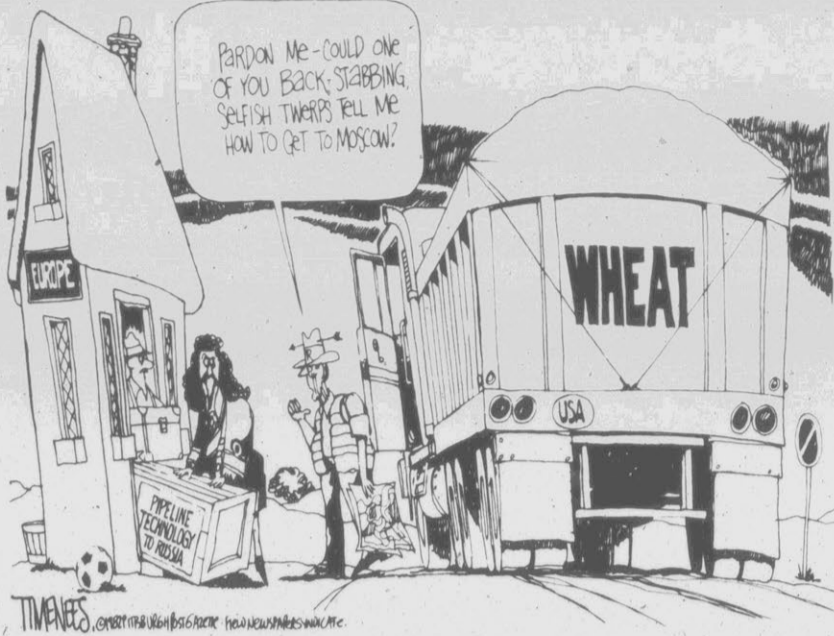

While Reagan will not be bound to a timetable on when the recession will disappear, he told his news conference. "I think that we're going to see an improvement in the second half of this year."

"We're trying to restore the economy, to get back to a growth economy that will be based on solid principles," he said.

He believes he has made strides in adding to peoples' income by reducing inflation. "We had no idea we could bring inflation down as quickly and as much as we did," he says.

But he is careful these days to emphasize that full recovery will be slow coming, and pleads for patience from the people.

How patient they are may well be measured at the voting booths Nov. 2.

Congressional Quarterly Tobacco

The following letter, dated June 29, from Robert Pierce of Pierce Farms, Farmville, to Sen. Thomas Eagleton of Missouri and a response by Sen. Warren Huddleston of Kentucky were published in the July 14 edition of The Congressional Quarterly:

Dear Senator Eagleton:

On July 14th final action will be taken on the proposed tobacco bill and such action will shape the future course of tobacco legislation for the next several years. This is why I'm writing you.

I am a large farmer growing several hundred acres of tobacco most of which I lease. I am 59, well fixed financially, do not have to farm, could retire now if I so desired but do not wish to. I have a son, age 24, who farms with me and loves it. I preface this letter with these facts to show (1) I am thoroughly familiar with tobacco, its problems, how to produce it, its production costs, how to market it — since I'm also a warehouseman. I am probably the largest producer in this country — 750 acres of tobacco and one of its largest warehousemen — nine million pounds sold in 1981. In short, I am considered by my peers to be a very successful businessman and farmer. (2) At my age, however, I have only a few more years at best to farm, but I would like for the next generation to have a future in tobacco production.

This is not the case with the proposed legislation. It does not go far enough. American tobacco quite simply has priced itself out of the market and the proposed legislation does nothing to remedy the situation.

The principle cost in farming tobacco today is lease cost. In my operation — 50 percent. I believe this to be true for the average producer in 1982. For the average producer owns very little of the allotment that he produces. We are the only group in the world that has this built-in cost.

We need production controls in order to keep supply in line with demand and we also need a price support program since two or three larger tobacco companies could and would set the market prices without it. But we do need to get the market price down. And we can do this by reducing the price supports — without, by the way, hurting the average producer.

Price supports set the market price. Market price determines the lease cost. Lower the price support and you lower the market price. Lower the market price and you lower the lease cost.

By lowering price supports you do two things. (1) You make America's tobacco more competitive in the world market and enhance the opportunity for the industry to grow rather than shrink as it has done for the past several years, and (2) you lower the lease cost by as much as you lower the price support since we are already paying the maximum we can pay.

The producer will still make as much since he will reduce his expenses in terms of lease cost by the amount of reduction in price supports. Lower price supports 20 cents. Reduce lease costs 20 cents. In fact he might make more. In America's tobacco is more competitive, we should be able to sell more overseas and curtail imports at home and thereby enable us to increase production, which should take some of the pressure off of demand for poundage and thus reduce still more lease cost.

The present program benefits the allotment holder and will continue to do so as long as prices are artificially kept above the world market.

Why do I turn to a senator from Missouri to help? Because you have no axe to grind and no pressure group to answer to.

I firmly believe in what I have written. If something is not done to the price support structure, we will surely see further reductions in quotas in the near future.

Yours Truly,
Robert Pierce

After a portion of Pierce's letter was read to the Senate by Sen. Eagleton, a response was made by Sen. Huddleston:

Let me say that I am not in the tobacco-raising business and have never myself raised an acre of tobacco. My grandparents on both sides were farmers and tobacco farmers. If I had the ability to raise 100 acres of tobacco, I would be fighting for the abolition of this program, too. That is precisely what this program is for, to keep a few people, as the gentleman who wrote the letter, who have the resources to retire at the age of 59, from raising all of the tobacco. This program has, over the 40 years it has been in existence, spread this program out; it is a democratic program, and made it available to the small farmers who can produce one acre, two acres or three acres. They are by far the vast majority of the producers. Certainly those who can raise 100 acres would like this program eliminated. Then they could grow all their tobacco under contract directly with the manufacturers. But, many of the little men would be totally out of farming because they would lose the income from tobacco that is their major cash income and the only reason that they are able to remain on the farm.

It is important that the Senate understand the nature of the tobacco program. It is a program that does not contribute to the actual smoking of tobacco. It has nothing to do with the health issue. It has a great deal to do with fairness and equity and permitting the farmers in the tobacco growing areas to participate in this program. It has worked. We have met our export requirements. We have met our domestic requirements. We produce the highest quality tobacco in the world, tobacco that is in demand all over the world. The American people have benefited from it. It should not be eliminated, permitting a few to benefit so much off this unique crop that was important in the very founding of these United States.

I yield the floor, Mr. Chairman.

Political Cash On The Barrelhead

To make certain farmers get the connection between grain sales and the elections, Reagan flew to Iowa to talk to farm groups.

"The granary door is open and the exchange will be cash on the barrelhead," Reagan told corn growers in Des Moines, adding that "the farmers of America are very much on my mind."

But martial law in Poland makes Reagan's courting of Farm Belt votes a dangerous game. Indeed, charges of hypocrisy are being hurled at Reagan from America's allies in Europe, for Reagan has strongly condemned the situation in Poland and the Soviet role in that repression.

To punish the Soviets for their support of repression in Poland, Reagan has pressured Europeans not to sell the Soviets the turbines and other equipment they need to complete a 3,500-mile natural gas pipeline. The pipeline, which could be operational in 1984, would allow the Soviets to sell huge quantities of fuel to the Europeans.

Reagan banned export of U.S. technology for the pipeline, even if manufactured in Europe, saying Europeans should not be dependent on the Soviets for gas, Europeans say they need the energy and jobs the pipeline would provide.

Companies in France, Italy, Germany and Great Britain — backed by their governments — have given every sign they will ignore Reagan's sanctions, pointing to the grain sales as they make their defiance clear.

The Reagan administration's gesture in the direction of punishing the Soviets on the grain matter has been to refuse to negotiate a long-term renewal of the U.S.-U.S.S.R. grain purchase agreement. Farmers would much prefer a long-term pact, for it would assure them a steady customer.

In any case, the differences between this one-year deal and any long-term pact that might someday be negotiated will not become clear until long after Election Day 1982.

And it is the election that is on the White House agenda these days.

With the voting about three months away, the political currents in the Midwest are troubling for the GOP.

For one thing, four GOP governors are not seeking re-election. Among those four are William Milliken of Michigan and Robert Ray of Iowa, two of the most durable popular and electable moderate Republican politicians in the country. And Wisconsin Gov. Lee Dreyfus stunned party pros by refusing to run again, even though he was considered a good bet for re-election.

Minnesota Gov. Albert Quie, who won in 1978 when the GOP swept the Statehouse and both U.S. Senate seats there, is also bowing out.

There is fear among the Republican partisans that the absence of these strong gubernatorial candidates at the top of the ticket could mean trouble for congressional candidates. While the Democrats retain control of the House nationally, in the Midwest the GOP holds a 64-58 edge.

To keep that margin, Reagan aides are hoping the half-loaf of the one-year grain agreement with the Soviets will satisfy farmers enough to keep many of them in the GOP column.

A Senator Can Stand Alone were chafing to leave the torrid capital for easier climes.

And the time agreement which had been agreed to — without Metzenbaum's consent — permitted one hour for each amendment but no limit on the number that could be offered.

Metzenbaum spelled out the rules. Either the floor managers of the bill would accept his changes or he was prepared to begin offering the first of the more than 80 amendments his staff had prepared. The Senate was paralyzed.

The abuse was quick in coming. Ted Stevens, the salsa-tempered assistant GOP leader, said Metzenbaum had "violated one of the basic rules of the Senate, which is to be a gentleman."

That really was mild. Metzenbaum, in an exchange earlier in the year, was addressed as the "senator from B'nai B'rith."

Finally, it was the majority that surrendered.

Metzenbaum and the floor managers of the bill left the chamber for a couple of hours. When they returned it was with an agreement incorporating the Ohio Democrats' changes.

Weicker, the towering Republican from Connecticut, single-handedly staved off passage of anti-busing legislation for over nine months — forcing the Senate to impose cloture on him four times.

The Senate finally crushed Lowell Weicker but the process took so long it is doubtful that anti-busing legislation will clear Congress this year.

Helms is of a slightly different genre.

Unlike Metzenbaum and Weicker, he is not a lone-wolf operator. Rather, he is more the point man for a group of senators consumed with the need to outlaw abortions, put prayer back in public schools, and balance the budget.

Republican leader Howard Baker, anxious to usher through President Reagan's economic program, managed to put off Helms' pet projects last year but with time running out, the genial North Carolinian began playing hardball.

After threatening to delay legislation that would extend the Voting Rights Act — a measure Reagan badly wanted to offset criticism of his stand on civil rights issues — Helms relented. But the price Baker had to pay was scheduling for action the constitutional amendment requiring a balanced budget.

A short time later, Helms agreed not to burden a brief extension of the national debt ceiling with any of the social amendments. This time the price extracted was that amendments dealing with abortion and prayer were welcome as riders to a long-term debt ceiling extension.

What's Ahead For Bill Friday?

For Friday — whom an associate calls "the most genuinely modest person I've ever known" — he takes it all in stride, and maybe with a tinge of embarrassment.

When Friday became UNC president in 1956 at the age of 36, he was the youngest university president in the United States. He is now the senior member of the American Association of University Presidents. As he looks back on the 26 years he has held the job, Friday could be forgiven if he felt his tenure was one crisis after another.

In 1961, after several basketball players at UNC and N.C. State became involved in point-shaving scandals, Friday ordered the closing of the Dixie Classic basketball tournament. The classic, played during the Christmas season in N.C. State's Reynolds Coliseum, was the state's most popular athletic event, and Friday's decree brought howls of protest from the fans. The Legislature passed a resolution urging Friday and N.C. State Chancellor John R. Caldwell to reconsider. They refused and Friday survived his first major crisis.

Friday got his first inkling of another major crisis while he was driving home from Raleigh to Chapel Hill one day in 1963 when his radio blared word that the state House of Representatives had passed a bill which would forbid Communists from speaking on state-supported campuses. Friday turned around and returned to Raleigh to launch a vain attempt to kill the bill in the Senate.

"North Carolina," said Friday at the time, "is the only state with such a law. The university opposed it because we feel the best way to expose totalitarianism is to let the students see its errors."

But the most vexing problem was a long struggle with the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare — later the Department of Education — over the university's desegregation plan. Despite HEW's threat to slash UNC's $90 million in federal aid funds, Friday and the UNC Board of Governors took the position that HEW was invading their responsibility to run the university. The row was settled finally with a compromise.

Throughout all the crises, Friday remained unflappable and — at least outwardly — unruffled. In fact, his equanimity is legendary. During the height of the HEW battle, his secretary, Zona Norwood, told a reporter that "Mr. Friday stays calmer than anybody else in the building. He never gets ruffled and he never loses his temper."

Born July 13, 1920, the oldest of five children, Friday grew up in Dallas, N.C., and apparently thrived on a diet of hard work during the lean years of the Great Depression. After studying at Wake Forest College for one year, Friday transferred to N.C. State to study textile engineering. He graduated with honors in 1941 and was president of his senior class.

The following year he married the former Ida Howell of Lumberton, a Meredith College student he had met on a blind date.

"The greatest thing that ever happened to me was marrying Ida," he said several years ago. "She's been a great influence on my life."

While he was serving during World War II as chief engineering officer of a Navy ammunition depot near Portsmouth, Va., Friday felt a need to broaden his educational background. So, after the war, he enrolled in the UNC law school at Chapel Hill. He graduated in 1948 and took a job as assistant dean of students at UNC. Eight years later, he became president of the consolidated university.

Noel
Yancey

Over the years, I have frequently told myself and anyone who would listen that Bill Friday would make a top-notch governor. Apparently the same thought has occurred to a lot of people, some of whom were so carried away by the idea that they suggested it to Friday, who is president of the University of North Carolina.

Taking the position that no one has the right to use the university as a stepping stone for political advancement, Friday has told these well-wishers that, "so long as I am associated with the university, I will not become involved (in politics) in any way."

That answer, of course, leaves the way open for Friday to plunge into politics once he steps down as president on the 16-campus UNC system. The idea of Friday making a run for governor is becoming more pertinent as the time for him to retire as president of the university approaches.

Friday, who was 62 on July 13, has stated that he will retire before he is 65. When that time comes, the pressure by friends urging him to get into the political fray will become even more intense. But whether these importunings will prevail over his desire to devote more time to his wife, to brush up on his golf game, or possibly to travel, cannot be answered now by his closest associates.

If he decides to take the plunge into politics he will need — and likely will have — a host of backers who share the sentiments of an eastern North Carolina farmer who telephoned a Raleigh call-in radio show. He lavished praise on Friday and insisted that everyone in the state was backing him.

Maybe not everybody, the radio announcer chided.

"Well, who ain't?" snorted the farmer.

Virginia Convict Faces Death Tuesday

By ED YOUNG
Associated Press Writer

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Early on, Frank Coppola wanted to be a priest, but changed his mind. Then he became a college basketball player, but flunked out. Then he became a policeman, then an auto mechanic. Then a burglar.

Finally, Coppola, a man of fateful contradictions, committed a murder so savage a jury sentenced him to death.

That was four years ago. Now, barring intervention by the courts or by the governor, Coppola, 38, will die this week in Virginia's electric chair — without, at his own request, an attendant clergyman.

Should he die as scheduled about 11 p.m. Tuesday, Coppola will become the first person executed in Virginia in 20 years, only the fifth in the nation since the Supreme Court revived the death penalty in 1976.

He says he doesn't want to live, but stoutly insists he is innocent of the April 1978 robbery and beating murder of Muriel Hatchell, 45, wife of Peyton Hatchell, a wealthy Newport News used-car dealer, in their home.

In June, when a judge set the Aug. 10 execution date, Coppola asked for a summer rendezvous with the electric chair so it wouldn't interfere with the schooling of his two teen-age sons.

The judge obliged. "Further incarceration for these charges that I have maintained my innocence of can only lead to my being stripped of all personal dignity and continue to induce tremendous hardship on my family," Coppola wrote his lawyer at the sentencing, Augustus Anninos.

With even the least encouragement from Coppola, lawyers stand ready to seek a stay of execution from the courts. Coppola already has had three stays, but Anninos — no longer Coppola's lawyer — says there are "viable and real" legal grounds on which another could be granted.

But there has been no such encouragement from Coppola, nor from his ex-wife, mother of his two sons, or his own mother, with whom the condemned killer conferred before deciding against another appeal.

Despite pleas by clergymen and others who oppose capital punishment — among them Roman Catholic Bishop Walter Sullivan, who calls himself Coppola's pastor, and former U. S. Attorney General Ramsey Clark — Gov. Charles S. Robb has not indicated he will intervene.

"I'm on record as supporting the death penalty," the governor said after meeting last week with six clergymen, representing Protestants, Catholics and Jews, who asked him to stay the execution.

Any decision he makes "will be based on the law and the expectation of the governor supporting the law," Robb said.

Still, an aide to the governor said Thursday that Robb has not "foreclosed on anything" — especially should Coppola decide he doesn't want to die and if valid legal points are presented.

With the days dwindling down to a precious few, it seems possible that, an hour before midnight next Tuesday, Coppola will walk the 30-odd steps from his cell on Death Row at the Virginia Penitentiary to the execution chamber and die in the old, oaken electric chair that has not been used since 1962.

Since it was installed in the penitentiary in 1908 when the state abandoned public hangings, 236 people — all but one a man, and 203 of them black — have died in the chair, which the state has refurbished because of its antiquity.

The last person executed in Virginia was Carroll Garland, 26, of Lynchburg, who was electrocuted March 2, 1962 — less than a year after he had robbed and slain a gas station attendant on May 28, 1961.

Coppola's desire to become a Roman Catholic priest led to his enrollment in a Baltimore seminary at age 14 in 1958. He studied there one year, before deciding the religious life wasn't for him.

After graduation from Portsmouth Catholic High School, he enrolled at Old Dominion University in nearby Norfolk, where he played basketball his freshman year in 1963 before academic problems forced his departure.

"Tough" became the word for Coppola.

"He never backed off from anybody," said A.B. "Bud" Metheny, who coached Coppola. "He was tough. He fought...."

"Frankie wasn't dumb. He just wasn't ready for school. He had other ideas for his life. I think he always wanted to be a lawman."

And a lawman Coppola became. In 1965, he joined the police force in Portsmouth. In 1966, he was suspended for allegedly making false statements to protect an officer accused of beating a prisoner.

He was reinstated in his job, but resigned in 1967.

A fellow officer, Detective Wilbur Gavin, remembers Coppola as having had "a lot of problems with authority. He was belligerent with superior officers."

After leaving the force, Coppola and another ex-policeman opened an automobile reconditioning shop in Portsmouth.

In 1971, he was charged with burglarizing a farm equipment company with two other Portsmouth men, and was sentenced to four years in prison. He served more than a year before he was released.

Out of prison, he worked off and on for a used-car dealer and tried his hand as a bouncer.

Then, in the early evening of April 22, 1978, two men and a woman pretending to be delivering roses robbed the Hatchell home in a quiet Newport News neighborhood.

One of the intruders, Donna Mills, testified later that she forced Mrs. Hatchell to kneel in her bedroom and held her down while Coppola and Joseph Miltier searched the house for money and Coppola's second wife, Karen, waited several blocks away in a rented getaway car.

Mrs. Mills testified that Coppola repeatedly returned to the bedroom and bashed Mrs. Hatchell's head against the bare floor, shouting at her to tell him where she kept her money.

An autopsy showed Mrs. Hatchell died of brain hemorrhaging and choking on vomit.

Hatchell arrived home from work during the attack and was clubbed on the head moments after he entered the house. The blow cracked his skull. He still wears a steel plate in his forehead.

The robbers escaped with some cash and jewelry, but overlooked $17,000 in cash stuffed in a small cosmetics pouch in Mrs. Hatchell's purse.

A Newport News jury convicted Coppola of capital murder. Miltier was sentenced to three life terms, Mrs. Mills to life plus 117 years, Karen Coppola to 55 years as an accessory.

Coppola, Mrs. Mills testified, had planned the robbery and had stalked Mrs. Hatchell for several weeks in preparation.

Pacifist Will Not Defend Himself

ROANOKE, Va. (AP) — A pacifist who expects to be the first person tried for failing to register under the new Selective Service law says he won't prepare a defense — he'll rest his case in the hands of God.

Enten Eller, a member of the pacifist Church of the Brethren, said he told his lawyers to drop plans to argue that he was protected by the freedom of religion guarantees of the First Amendment.

He also has waived his right to have a jury in his Aug. 17 federal court trial.

Eller, 20, a senior at the Brethren-affiliated Bridgewater College near Harrisonburg, pleaded innocent last month and admitted to U.S. District Judge James Turk that he hadn't registered.

Eller cited his religious beliefs, saying registering for the draft would run against his idea of a Christian's duty.

Eller said Friday he was sorry Turk is being forced to make a decision in a dispute between law and conscience.

"There's another judge up there and he's the one I've got to answer to," Eller said.

"I don't want to fight the government.... I don't want to turn this into a constitutional battle.... I don't want to be a celebrity.... I don't want to spend time in prison.... I'm trying to follow Christ" and do what "God wants me to do," he said.

Eller, if found guilty, could be sentenced to five years in prison and fined $10,000. But Turk could sentence Eller under the federal Youth Corrections Act, which allows young adults to receive indeterminate sentences of up to six years. If they successfully complete their sentences, their convictions can be stricken from the record.

Turk used the Youth Corrections Act several times in the early 1970s when he tried Vietnam War draft evaders, some of whom objected to service on religious grounds.

Turk placed some of them on probation and ordered alternative service.

Eller said he would consider some sort of alternative service, but would not obey any order requiring him to register.

Benjamin H. Sasway, 21, of Vista, Calif., will be tried seven days after Eller in U.S. District Court in San Diego.

Encephalitis Outbreak Spreads Into Southeast

By DAVID L. LANGFORD
Associated Press Writer

Swarms of mosquitoes hatched in rains that broke a long drought are spreading an outbreak of encephalitis that has killed at least two people, dozens of horses and thousands of birds in the Southeast.

While New England and the Midwest have been spared the heavy mosquito infestations predicted earlier — partly because it rained so hard in places — many areas along the Eastern Seaboard from New York to Florida are suffering the worst attacks in years.

In Georgia, where outbreaks of equine encephalitis have been reported in 14 counties, Dr. David Bedell, a veterinarian with the state Cooperative Extension Service, said the mosquito infestation was at its highest level since 1965.

On Fire Island near New York City, Dr. Samir Guirgis of the Suffolk County Health Department went out to check an insect trap one morning last week, expecting to find the usual 10 to 20 mosquitoes, the normal catch for a summer's night. He counted 85,000.

Guirgis said his telephone lines have been jammed all week with citizens seeking relief and officials can't keep up with the bugs. New Jersey officials already have sprayed three times as much territory as they did all of last year and they are worried that the money for aerial spraying is running out.

"The last few years have been so dry, it's hard to compare this year in a larger perspective," said Mike Loving, an entomologist who works for the state of South Carolina. "People may be perceiving it as terrible because they don't remember it being this bad."

George Alexander, supervisor of mosquito control in Orange County in Central Florida, said especially heavy rains on the heels of three dry summers made this season about three times worse than last year in a state where mosquitoes are always a problem.

While no cases of encephalitis have been reported in the Northeast, thousands of birds, at least 59 horses and two people have died in Georgia, South Carolina and Florida where Eastern equine encephalitis, one of the various strains of the disease, is reaching epidemic proportions, health officials say.

The disease, an inflammation of the brain which is rare in humans, originates in several species of birds known as reservoir birds. Mosquitoes spread the disease by biting infected birds and then biting other birds, or horses, or humans.

Symptoms in humans range from headache and fever, to loss of memory and sometimes seizures — although some infected people may show no symptoms.

After an elderly man died of encephalitis last month in central Florida, health officials warned citizens to stay away from swampy areas and limit their outside activities from dusk to dawn.

The victim, Glen Gredall, 75, probably was bitten while working in the yard at his rural home adjacent to a swamp in Union Park, the officials said.

Dr. Harvey Rubin of the Florida Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services, said 80 cases of the disease have been reported in horses. Of those, 27 died.

The worst year for equine encephalitis in Florida was 1962, when there were 222 confirmed cases and 17 deaths of humans.

In Georgia, a 42-year-old woman died from the disease this summer and a 2½-year-old child in Brantley County, afflicted the same week, apparently is recovering, health officials said. Their names were not available.

"You generally don't think of an epidemic of two cases, but by definition, you could call this an epidemic," said Dr. Keith Sikes, an epidemiologist with the Georgia Department of Human Resources. He explained that an epidemic is defined as a greater-than-expected increase in the incidence of a disease.

California equine encephalitis, a similar disease that is relatively new to Georgia, has struck four Georgians this year, but none died.

Bedell said 22 horses have died in the 14 Georgia counties where cases have been reported.

In South Carolina, 10 cases of the disease in horses have been reported and all of the animals died, according to Dr. Carl Boyd, state veterinarian.

Following a rainy spring, health officials in New England and elsewhere also feared a severe mosquito problem this summer. But Mark Buffone, entomologist with the Massachusetts Department of Food and Agriculture, expressed a view echoed by several other officials.

"With the heavy rains in June, we were anticipating pretty excessive populations, but we're not getting as many as we expected," he said. "We think it was due to the flushing action of the rain. It was so hard and continuous that it flushed away a lot of the larvae."

Library Plans To Show Films

Two films will be featured at the Afternoon Showtime Thursday in Sheppard Memorial Library's children's room. The 8mm films were produced by local children under the direction of Helen Weaver.

"The Elves and the Shoemaker," made during this summer's program, stars Gina Smith, Jeff Smith, D.K. Wooten, Vinny Mikkelsen, Carolyn Shanley, Jonathan Li, Jeffrey Li, Marjorie Jones and Myra Gillian. "Sylvester and the Magic Pebble" was produced by the 1981 Summer Fun Club. Additional commercially made films will also be shown during the program which begins at 3:30. There is no charge.

The library also has discount coupons available for Carowinds.

Oil-Rich Mexico Reels As Recession Deepens

By ISAAC A. LEVI
Associated Press Writer

MEXICO CITY (AP) - Stunned and angry, Mexicans are watching the bottom drop from their once-growing economy and bracing for more price increases this week after the second big peso devaluation in six months.

In less than a year, a country which estimates it has the world's fourth-largest proven oil reserves has plunged from the brink of prosperity into its worst recession since World War II, and there is no immediate improvement in sight.

An ambitious development program, financed by revenue from vast new oilfields to turn Mexico into a major industrial power, is stalled.

Jobs, which were getting plentiful after centuries of poverty, are scarce again and worker's wages buy one-third less than last year.

Within a year, inflation has doubled to an annual rate of 60 percent, the foreign debt has doubled to $80 billion and Mexico's economic growth has fallen to near zero from a previous annual rate of 8 percent. Bankers who once flocked to do business with Mexico are now reluctant to lend.

To force the country to stop spending more than it earns, Treasury Secretary Jesus Silva Herzog on Thursday imposed a new, two-tier exchange system, causing the peso to lose about half its value in one day - on top of a 46 percent devaluation in February.

A few days earlier, the government's withdrawal of consumer subsidies almost doubled prices for gasoline, electricity, gas, tortillas and other basic foods.

"Better not even think about it because one gets a complex. The price of tortillas went up, everything is going up," said a Mexico City worker spiking up strewn paper and dry summer leaves in a downtown park. "It is catastrophic and a very ugly thing."

The park cleaner, who refused to give his name, said he earns the minimum - 280 pesos a day or $5.71 before Thursday's devaluation and about half that now. He predicted crime will increase because "some people will be desperate."

Fidencio, a portly waiter at Cafe La Habana, complained that his salary is "a misery, will not buy me anything anymore." He too makes the minimum but sometimes triples it with tips.

Luis Santolito, a bricklayer, shrugged: "I don't understand much of what's happening." He said he was worried he would be laid off.

Mexico made a dent in its chronic 40 percent unemployment and underemployment rate when the oil boom created 4 million new jobs between 1978 and 1981. The recession may now leave 1 million people jobless, especially construction workers. The country needs 850,000 new jobs a year to match its population growth.

The new exchange system sets a preferential rate of around 49 pesos to $1, financed with oil revenues, to keep down import prices of basic food and key industrial products.

Importers of those products will be able to go to banks, show a certificate from the Commerce Department, and buy dollars at the 49-peso rate.

A general rate, applying to most transactions and set by market forces, fluctuated between 68 and 91 pesos to the dollar Friday, from 49 on Thursday.

The new devaluation will not affect the price major U.S. importers pay for Mexican oil and gas, since those prices are set in dollars. They will, however, make gasoline much cheaper for border-area residents who cross into Mexico to buy it with pesos from Mexican vendors.

The devaluation will boost export earnings, attract foreign tourists with peso-priced goods cheaper in dollars and reduce the $8 billion balance of payments deficit expected for 1982.

But it will make most imported goods at least twice as expensive, spurring inflation even more, while workers can expect only modest pay increases because most businesses are strapped for cash.

Government officials blame Mexico's crisis on world price drops for oil, silver, coffee and other major Mexican exports and on high interest rates.

"The problem is overall - everything and its relation with a world outside that is disorderly and on occasion aggressive," President Jose Lopez Portillo said Friday.

But people also blame mismanagement and widespread corruption in Mexico's one-party system.

Miguel de la Madrid, a Harvard-educated economist elected in July, is replacing Lopez Portillo on Dec. 1 for a six-year term. Both belong to the Institutional Revolutionary Party (PRI), in power for the past 52 years.

"All this was expected," said a man cashing a peso check at one of the banks. "But they had to delay till after the election, otherwise no one would have voted for the PRI." De la Madrid got 74 percent of the vote.

Miguel Angel Perez, 21, a psychology student at the National University, said the crisis is one of confidence. "If no one believed in the government (after the February devaluation), they believe in it even less now."

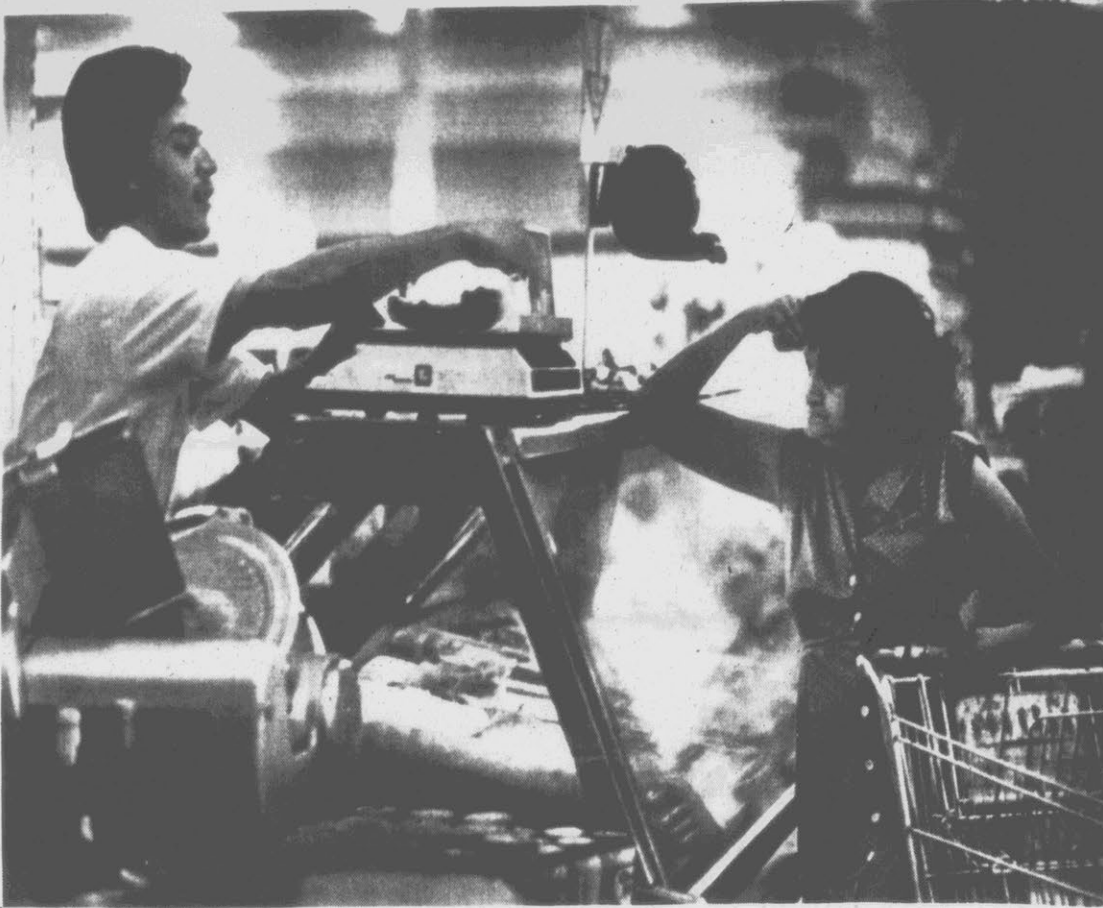

"If all this was for the good of all, fine. But only a few are benefited by it," said taxi driver Juan Rodriguez.

Juan Carvallo, a fellow cabbie, grumbled: "If (labor) leaders were not in cahoots with the government, we could organize ourselves and protest - go on strike. But no way, we have to bear it."

The city has refused to authorize new cab fares for four years. So drivers are ignoring meters and charging whatever people will pay.

Italy's Prime Minister Resigns

By CHARLES RIDLEY
ROME (UPI) - Italy's 41st government since World War II fell Saturday with the resignation of Prime Minister Giovanni Spadolini, victim of a power play by socialist leader Bettino Craxi.

Spadolini, a Republican, formally resigned to President Sandro Pertini, Italy's 85-year-old socialist head of state, in a one-hour meeting at the Quirinale palace.

"I have no magic wand," Pertini said Saturday as he left from a vacation in the northern Alps. "But what is certain is that I will do everything possible to avoid early elections. Elections ahead of schedule are always a shock to the nation."

The 13-month-old coalition government's sudden collapse came as Spadolini was in the process of introducing Italy's grimmest austerity program since World War II, aimed at chopping billions of dollars from a 1982 budget deficit estimated at about $47 billion.

A communique issued by the palace said Pertini would start consultations with party leaders in an attempt to form a new government Monday.

As is customary, Pertini also asked Spadolini's government to remain in power in a caretaker capacity until the crisis is solved.

The government's fall, became inevitable Friday when Socialist Party leader Bettino Craxi pulled out the seven socialist ministers from the cabinet.

The immediate pretext for Craxi's action was the defeat in parliament Wednesday of a Socialist-backed decree that would have curtailed taxation privileges enjoyed by the petroleum industry.

Craxi charged that Christian Democrats representing these interests voted against the coalition line in the secret ballot.

Although the Socialists have only 62 seats in the 630-seat parliament, they hold the balance of power and their withdrawal meant Spadolini's five-party coalition no longer controlled a majority in the Chamber of Deputies.

TMI Inspection Is Inconclusive

MIDDLETOWN, Pa. (AP) - A tiny television camera's second "quick look" at the damaged reactor at Three Mile Island still hasn't answered questions about whether any fuel melted during the March 1979 accident, plant officials said.

The company, in a statement released Friday, said a preliminary review of a videotape made by the camera at two points - on the edge of the reactor core and midway between the edge and the center - showed less serious damage than the first "quick look" July 21.

BPU Nuclear Corp. spokesman Doug Bedell said experts anticipate that the damage from the accident would be greater in the center, where the most heat is generated during a nuclear reaction.

School Owner Is Sentenced

LOS ANGELES (AP) - A former nursery school owner has been sentenced to 26 years and eight months in prison for child molestation after thousands of pictures of naked children were discovered in his home.

Edward James Meacham, 49, was sentenced Friday by Superior Court Judge Robert I. Weil. Meacham was convicted of 11 counts of child molestation.

Saving ...

stats is concerned," Vice Chancellor for Business Affairs C. G. Moore said. That results in lower heat temperatures and higher air-conditioning temperatures during the day, and even less heat and air conditioning at night when buildings are not being used.

"And we're getting ready to begin a $672,000 energy conservation measure program on five dorms — installing thermopane glass or storm windows ... changing heating system controls ... and installing water savers in shower heads so not as much water as normal will come out."

Moore added that, "Last year, we installed a computer at Wahl-Coates School preprogrammed for heating and air conditioning. It will cut back or increase the heating and cooling at specific times to conserve energy use."

Moore also noted that, "When we renovate buildings — the new roof and ceiling in Jarvis Dorm is an example — we insulate them."

At Pitt Community College, President William Fulford said, "The major thing is we've installed an adaptor to our boilers to use waste oil (used cylinder oil from cars and trucks). We consider this to be very successful. It costs us 20 cents a gallon" to burn used oil, "compared to $1 per gallon."

"It was just doing a fantastic job last year," Fulford emphasized, "and we're converting another boiler to waste oil this year."

He also said, "We had an energy audit run on all three buildings," and as a result, "will install new heat and air-conditioning controls in the White Building ... and will be using outside air in the early morning and at night to eliminate air conditioning. We've gotten federal money to correct those problems," he said, adding that the work should be completed in the next 60 days.

Bob Stewart, director of buildings and grounds for Greenville city schools, said, "In the first place, we've replaced the boilers at Rose High School with high efficiency steam boilers ... and are able to operate with one boiler a big part of the time. There's a considerable savings. We don't burn as much oil as when both are operating."

Stewart noted that "every school we've got, at the outset, was configured to heat domestic hot water on the heating system boilers. We've gone in and put in separate domestic hot water systems," so the large heating boilers don't have to be run to heat domestic water. "Seventy-five school days a year you don't need to have the heat boilers on, but we had to use them for hot water for kitchens, showers and the like.

"We're also monitoring our electric usage," Stewart said, "and have picked up a lot of errors in billings that saved us several thousand dollars."

"We've gone to the principals" and set up a program "to control (electric) demand ... to spread out the load and give maintenance direction in demand so, for example, all the air control units don't come on at one time. Demand (charge) is a big part of our electric costs."

According to Stewart, "There are a lot of things we'd like to do ... insulation and storm windows, for example. But we can't see that some are feasible — the payback doesn't make it feasible. There's too long a payback period."

For example, Stewart said, "We went into a study of energy control mechanisms ... energy management controls, but were told they were not feasible because of the things we'd already done. And storm windows are so costly that it's not cost effective to do it."

"Take Third Street School for example. It would cost $25,000 to install storm windows. How long will it take to save $25,000? The same with insulation."

"We've thought about solar, but that's not cost effective either. If we installed an active solar system, it would take 20 years plus to get our money back."

The Pitt County school system has an active energy conservation program, headed by George Laws.

"When I first started 4 1/2 years ago," Laws said, "there was no particular energy effort being made. The county office knew the problem, but no one was willing to formulate a policy until they had the facts.

"The schools, for the most part, were in a runaway condition as far as energy use went. They were heated 12 hours a day when they needed six. The teachers opened doors and windows during the winter" to cool their rooms down. "There was no control."

Following a tour of all the schools, Laws said, the conclusion was reached that the place to start was "the obvious areas for improvement — the sensible use of what we had. So we turned the thermostats down and closed the windows and doors. We just brought the temperature range of the classrooms down to a reasonable, rational level."

Laws noted that, "As a side effect, we found we did have some problems with areas not sufficiently heated — some areas we didn't know the heat wasn't working. We repaired the deficiencies."

"Once under control, we started the first year saving money. We saved 800,000 kilowatt hours (of electricity) the first year." And savings were realized for the next two years, Laws said, but because of rate increases, the "savings" have disappeared. The situation now, Laws noted, is "not how much you save, but how much you avoid losing."

In the 4 1/2 years of operation, the county school energy program, according to Laws, has "avoided a total of $206,000 in additional electric costs, plus $89,000 in oil (based on replacement costs). I think it's been a very effective program."

Most of the savings, Laws suggested, have come from "common sense management of the equipment we have. And maintenance shares a lot of the credit — adding insulation above drop ceilings when they get the time to do it, new valves and so forth to make the buildings more efficient, installing time clocks" to cycle equipment on and off.

"The first stage," Laws explained, has been "doing what we can with what we've got." The second stage will be "physical plant improvements. We have to get the basics first — insulation. Insulate first, then go to solar or something."

"The key to energy management is a rational, common sense approach."

Moral Majority Criticizes Reagan

ROANOKE, Va. (AP) — President Reagan cannot automatically count on Moral Majority support should he seek re-election, says Moral Majority Executive Vice President Ronald Godwin.

In an article headlined "Symbols Wear Thin" in the August issue of the Moral Majority Report, Godwin wrote that Reagan hasn't pushed hard enough for public school prayer and tax credits for private school tuition.

"If Reagan thought that his support for those issues would get him into office, why does he now think that only symbolic gesturing will keep him in office?" Godwin wrote.

Godwin said it "has become repetitively axiomatic at certain levels in the White House to ... actually infer that ... members of Moral Majority and other pro-life, pro-family groups may gripe and bellyache but they have no choice but to support the Reagan administration."

The Moral Majority official said the axiom is false and displays "an attitude that rankles already severely strained loyalties."

He said the next two years "may very well be the last two years of the Reagan administration."

Moral Majority, a conservative lobby founded by Lynchburg evangelist the Rev. Jerry Falwell, has about 250,000 contributors, but claims it registered 4 million new voters and helped get Reagan elected in 1980.

New Federalism Fails In Winning States' Support

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

AFTON, Okla. (AP) — The Republican chairman of the National Governors' Association declared Saturday that months of negotiations between state executives and the White House have failed to resolve disagreements over President Reagan's "new federalism" plan.

With the announcement by Gov. Richard Snelling of Vermont, the White House is left without the support of any

Long Is Appointed Farmville Principal

FARMVILLE — Charles E. Long of Lewiston has been chosen as principal of Farmville Central High School, county school officials have announced.

Long will begin his duties as chief administrator for the school tomorrow.

A native of Northhampton County, he received his B.S. and M.Ed. degrees from East Carolina University and a six-year advanced administration degree from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

"My family and I are delighted for the opportunity to live and work in Pitt County and especially the Farmville area," said Long. "I look forward to joining the Pitt County Schools team and assisting in meeting the educational needs of the Farmville Community."

organization of state and local officials for its plan to transfer $38.8 billion in federal programs to the states.

"New federalism," taxes, and their own political survival dominated the agenda as the governors gathered at a lakeside resort for an election-year meeting.

Overshadowing the substantive issues was the political reality of gubernatorial elections this year in 36 of the 50 states.

In those 36 states, 20 of the incumbent governors are Democrats and 16 are Republicans. Throughout the nation, the Democrats hold a 27 to 23 edge in governors.

In a statement issued on the eve of the governors' association annual meeting, Snelling quashed the White House's hopes that it could get the governors to back the Reagan federalism proposal.

"The governors cannot support a plan that fails to provide for the medically needy, discourages adequate state welfare assistance or ignored differences in state burdens," said Snelling.

"Our proposals to the White House addressed these concerns and we are disappointed that they appear unlikely to be included in the administration's revised plan," said Snelling.

While state and local officials generally welcomed the president's concept of shifting authority for many programs away from Washington, they have balked at some of the details. The Reagan plan has received a cool reception from organizations of city and county officials.

The annual three-day meeting of the governors' association formally opens Sunday with "new federalism" one of the first topics slated for discussion.

The president wants the states to pay the $8.1 billion that Washington now contributes for the Aid to Families with Dependent Children program as well as take over 30 other federal programs costing $30.7 billion.

In return, he offered to save the states $18.3 billion by taking over most of Medicaid. The president also would create a $20.4 billion trust fund to help states through an eight-year transition period.

Snelling said the governors "proposed an imaginative compromise that could have bridged the gap between the governors' strong belief in a larger federal role in income security programs and the president's deep conviction that welfare should be returned to the states."

"The administration apparently cannot support this compromise approach."

The governors also received a staff study warning that in its search for new federal revenues, Congress was considering taxes that could restrict state sources of income.

Another touchy issue confronting governors, though not on the official conference agenda, is the proposed balanced budget amendment to the U.S. Constitution. While few governors would oppose the idea of a balanced federal budget, they are concerned that it might end up balanced at the expense of states.

As for politics, seven governors have announced they will not run for re-election and four others are barred by state constitutions from running again.

The most startling pattern of retirements was among Midwest Republicans. The GOP governors of Iowa, Michigan, Minnesota and Wisconsin are retiring and Gov. James Rhodes of Ohio, a Republican who has held his state's top political job for 16 of the past 20 years, cannot seek re-election.

In addition, Republican Gov. James Thompson of Illinois faces a tough re-election challenge from former Sen. Adlai E. Stevenson III.

Illinois, Iowa, Michigan and Ohio are three of the states hit hardest by the recession. In Michigan, where the unemployment rate topped 16 percent earlier in the year, it was 14.4 in July.

The Labor Department announced Friday that the nationwide unemployment rate for July was 9.8 percent, the highest level since 1940.

Rising unemployment and cutbacks in federal aid are increasing the fiscal pressures on state governments.

While most governors have supported the Reagan administration's efforts to reduce federal spending, they have disagreed sharply with the president's plan to boost defense outlays.

Park Newspapers Buy Sampson County Paper

CLINTON, N.C. (AP) — Roy H. Park, a North Carolina native with extensive newspaper and broadcast holdings across the nation, Friday completed purchase of The Sampson Independent.

The 53-year-old afternoon newspaper has a circulation of 7,506 and is published Monday through Friday and on Sunday morning.

By purchasing the stock of Clinton Newspapers Inc., Park, owner and president of Park Newspapers, Inc. and Park Broadcasting, Inc., also acquired The Sampson County Shopping Guide, a free weekly publication.

The majority owner of Clinton Newspapers, Inc. had been Boone Newspapers Inc. of Natchez, Miss. Other stock was owned by Charles H. Land of Tuscaloosa, Ala.; Joel L. Starling, formerly of Clinton and now of Adulusia, Ala.; and James H. Parker, editor and publisher of The Independent since July 1976.

Parker, who came to Clinton in 1966 as part-owner of The Sampsonian, a weekly newspaper, will continue to operate The Independent.

The newspaper purchase brings to 21 the number of dailies owned by Park and gives Park ownership of 13 North Carolina publications — seven dailies, three weeklies and three shoppers.

He owns a total of 55 publications, including 21 daily newspapers, and his communications companies include seven television and 14 radio stations.

"We are delighted to have The Sampson Independent in our group of fine community newspapers in North Carolina," Park said. "I feel very much at home in Sampson County where I have owned almost 2,000 acres of farm and timberland for more than 25 years and almost 1,000 acres in adjoining Bladen County."

Parker and Starling sold The Sampsonian to Boone Newspapers, Inc. in 1976 and the paper was merged in November 1975 with The Independent, then a twice-weekly publication, to begin a five-day daily.

The paper was first published as a morning daily, but publication was switched to afternoon in October 1976, and a Sunday paper was added in August 1980.

The Independent was the successor to The Sampson Democrat. The name of the paper was changed in 1929 when it was purchased by the late Grover Britt, who served as editor and publisher until his death in 1975.

Over the years, the paper has won almost 100 press awards. Both Britt and Parker are former presidents of the North Carolina Press Association.

"Roy Park is the kind of man and the organization he heads is made up of people who will give Sampson County and Clinton an excellent newspaper," said James B. Boone, Jr.

Among the other North Carolina publications owned by Park are The Robesonian in Lumberton, The Bladen Journal in Elizabethtown, the Record and Landmark in Statesville, The News Herald in Morganton, the Valdese News, The Concord Tribune, the Mecklenburg Gazette in Davidson, The Observer-News-Enterprise in Newton, the Maiden Times, The Daily Independent in Kannapolis.

North Carolina broadcast outlets owned by Park are WNCT-TV in Greenville and WNCT-AM and FM radio stations.

ESC Finds 221 Cases Of Fraud

RALEIGH — The North Carolina Employment Security Commission recovered a total of $222,793 in unemployment insurance overpayments during July 1982, according to figures released by the commission.

The ESC investigated 774 persons who have claimed or currently are claiming unemployment insurance benefits. The investigations showed 458 (59 percent) were overpaid $147,372. The commission classified 221 cases as fraud and 237 as non-fraud.

Fraud cases are classified as such when a claimant is proved to have knowingly made a false statement on a claim which resulted in overpayments. Non-fraud overpayments result generally from unintentional filing errors with which fraudulent intent cannot be associated.

During July, 28 persons were tried in state courts on charges of unemployment insurance fraud. All 28 were convicted.

Officials Say Reports Insufficient To Search Columbus County Farm

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Officials in the state Justice Department and the Columbus County Sheriff's Department say they lack evidence to seek a warrant to dig for human remains on the farm of a man arrested in a federal undercover investigation.

Kenneth Coleman faces drug charges stemming from the two-year federal investigation into Columbus County corruption — "Colcor." Federal authorities say they want to search Coleman's 99-acre farm because of allegations that slaying victims were buried there.

But Mike Carmichael of the state Justice Department said officials do not have "sufficient evidence right now to proceed in obtaining a search warrant."

"All we've got now is that a man boasted to another man that there had been some killings at the hog lot," said Stewart Sasser, chief deputy for the Columbus County Sheriff's Department. "That's not enough evidence to go digging a farm over."

A warrant to search the farm would be the responsibility of the Columbus County Sheriff's Department and the SBI because any slayings at the farm would be a state crime.

In a related development, Assistant U.S. Attorney Doug McCullough said late Friday that the dig has been delayed because the owner of the farm, Coleman's mother, has "revoked her permission to allow authorities to dig."

"What the state has to do now is compile information and put it in an affidavit for a search warrant," he said. "I'm sure they will do that."

Coleman and his wife, Mary Lou, were among 21 people arrested July 29 in the FBI's investigation into drug trafficking, theft and political corruption in southeastern North Carolina. They were charged with possessing marijuana and cocaine with intent to distribute.

State authorities, including officers from the Columbus County Sheriff's Department, the State Bureau of Investigation, the state medical examiner's office and an anthropologist hired by the state, had been poised Friday to begin digging for the remains of possibly four people on Coleman's farm.

CAR IN HOUSE — The home of Mary Jean Baxter in Greensboro found a new doorway after a car driven by Mansel Phillip McCleave, 55, also of Greensboro, smashed into the brick house. Damage to the house was estimated at $25,000 by police. Officers said the driver apparently suffered a seizure and lost control of the vehicle. (AP Laserphoto)

Former Officer Sent To Prison

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A former police sergeant has been sentenced to three years in prison for the rape of a 26-year-old woman he had stopped in the San Fernando Valley for a traffic violation.

Leigh B. Schroyer was sentenced Friday by Superior Court Judge Ricardo Torres, who allowed him to remain free on $5,000 bail pending an appeal. Schroyer resigned from the police department.

Schroyer, 39, was patrolling the West San Fernando Valley early in the morning on Oct. 3, 1981, when he stopped a Northridge woman and gave her a sobriety test, which she failed. The woman testified Schroyer took her to his home where he raped her.

B-1 Flight Ruled Success

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — The first flight in 15 months for the B-1 bomber project, dropped by President Carter but reinstated by President Reagan last year, was a success, said an Air Force spokesman.

The three-hour test flight Friday of navigation and flight control systems was "virtually trouble-free," said Lt. Thomas Boneparte.

Navigation and flight control systems were tested on the three-hour flight, said Boneparte. Lt. Col. LeRoy Schroeder, head of the Air Force B-1 Test Unit at Edwards, said the crew also tested the craft's aerial refueling and high-speed capacities.

The B-1 is scheduled to go into service in 1986.

Utilities May Hold Rates

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Lower interest rates and slowing inflation should help North Carolina electric utilities hold down requests for rate increases in the future, says the head of the state Utilities Commission's Public Staff.

"Probably we'll begin to see the size of the increase diminish," said Robert Fischbach. "Inflation has a big impact (on electric rates) and that rate is down substantially. Interest rates have a big impact and that is down somewhat from a year ago."

Fischbach is head of the staff that represents consumers in rate hearings before the Utilities Commission.

Recently the panel has had its hands full with requests for increases — Virginia Electric and Power Co. for a $20.5 million, or 19.6 percent raise, Carolina Power & Light Co. for a $128.5 million, or 12.8 percent increase, and Duke Power Co. for a $165.3 million, or 11.85 percent raise.

The commission has not yet ruled on any of the three requests which were filed between January and March.

In other states across the Southeast, utilities are flocking to regulatory agencies in unprecedented numbers seeking rate increases to offset the continued financial drain of inflation.

But consumer advocates in some states charge that greed is the real reason for the spate of rate increases. They warn that quickly rising bills are no longer affecting only the poor. Now they say the increases are hurting the budgets of middle-income families and small businesses.

Fischbach acknowledged that North Carolina utilities are filing requests for rate increases "about as fast as they can." But he said he expects that to change when the state begins to come out of the economic recession and interest rates drop.

He said there already have been signs of moderating rate increases and pointed to CP&L's request for a $128.5 million increase this year compared to $151.4 million requested last year.

In an effort to discourage excessive utility rate increases, the General Assembly enacted a law in June to limit the number of times a year that utilities may seek rate increases based on fuel costs.

The legislature also gave the Utilities Commission authority to determine whether utilities may pass on to consumers the cost of financing construction of new power plants.

Fischbach said there's no way to determine how those laws will affect the utilities before the pending rate cases are settled.

Trooper Sues Over Pay

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A North Carolina Highway Patrol trooper is taking his fight against the state's new direct-deposit pay system to court with a suit against Gov. Jim Hunt and two other state officials, his attorney said.

Documents mailed Friday to U.S. District Court in Raleigh seek an injunction forcing the state to give Caldwell County Trooper Dennis C. Whitt back pay and to keep paying him until the suit is resolved, said Frank Goldsmith, a N.C. Civil Liberties Union lawyer representing Whitt.

The suit names Hunt, state Budget Officer John A. Williams and Secretary of Crime Control and Public Safety Heman Clark.

The state hasn't paid Whitt, 38, since Jan. 31 because he refuses to authorize the state to deposit his monthly paycheck directly into his bank account. The 12-year patrol veteran contends he is owed more than $5,000.

Whitt, a Baptist, said he believes the system signals a cashless society and the coming of the Antichrist as foretold in the Bible.

"As a Christian, I believe I have a duty to oppose the establishment of such a system, because it will lead to an age when the devil and his agents, rather than God, will take control of men's affairs," read an affidavit by Whitt included with the suit.

But state officials say it would be too expensive to exempt Whitt from the system implemented this year in an attempt to save the state as much as $1 million a year in check-writing expenses.

The suit charges that the state has violated Whitt's rights to religious freedom under the First and 14th Amendments and his freedom from involuntary servitude under the 13th Amendment. In addition to back pay, the suit seeks a ruling that it is unconstitutional to require Whitt and others who object on religious grounds to comply with the direct-deposit system.

The suit alleges that Whitt has been denied equal protection under the law because some state employees do not participate in the direct-deposit system and others, such as University of North Carolina workers, are given a choice.

Helms Says U.S. Should 'Shut Down' On Israelis

WASHINGTON (AP) — A leading Senate conservative said Saturday that the United States should "shut down relations" with Israel if Prime Minister Menachem Begin doesn't agree to a cease-fire in Beirut.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., appearing on the Cable News Network "Newsmaker Saturday" program, declared: "Now he (Begin) can make all the statements he wants to but sooner or later he's got to stop this business."

"Because the American people find repugnant the continuation of the destruction of the property of innocent people, not to mention the killing of innocent people."

Helms made his comments as the Israeli army continued its assault on the West Beirut stronghold of the Palestine Liberation Organization in defiance of American and United Nations demands for a cease-fire.

Israel's 2-month-old invasion of Lebanon has severely strained its relationship with the United States, but Helms went further than either the Reagan administration or any other member of Congress in suggesting a severing of diplomatic ties.

"I think ultimately we've just got to shut down relations," he said.

"Now I know that will send shudders through that lobby that's so powerful in this day. But just shut off relations. Say, 'You're going to stop it or we're not going to do anything.'"

Asked if he meant to suggest a complete withdrawal of diplomatic ties, he replied, "Yes... This foolishness has got to stop" on the part of Israel and "all other countries involved."

Helms said Israel should agree to a cease-fire while all sides seek a peaceful end to the violence in Lebanon.

"This thing can be worked out. And if Israel is unwilling to back up and cool off, and let's see if we can't work this thing out on a reasonable basis, then I think Israel ought to know that the consequences will be inevitable," he said.

Helms conceded there is little prospect of Congress voting to cut off aid to Israel, which depends heavily on the United States for military assistance.

State Workers Have Big Supply Of Credit Cards

By GENE WANG

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — A state survey shows 24 state agencies hold 52,251 credit cards issued by 34 sources.

The types and number range from a single American Express card held by the University of North Carolina at Charlotte athletic department to 20,500 cards for state-owned gasoline pumps operated by the Department of Transportation.

The survey was conducted by the state Budget Office at the request of the General Assembly's Government Operations Commission. The findings were presented earlier this year.

In addition to the DOT cards, there are 19,894 oil company credit cards held by the state or state employees. The number of gasoline credit cards is deceptive because more than 25,000 commercial and state cards are assigned to specific vehicles owned by the state motor pool or the DOT, not to individual employees.

The survey lists 11,393 telephone credit cards issued by utilities or the state. The state cards give holders access to the state telephone network from anywhere in North Carolina, allowing them to make long-distance calls at reduced cost.

The survey also listed 101 airline travel cards and 153 auto rental cards held by various officials or agencies.

In addition to the American Express card, the UNC-Charlotte athletic department also holds the only Belk's charge card reported, but officials there said those accounts are paid from athletic foundation funds, not state money.

The only Kerr Drugs credit card is used by the infirmary at the Governor Morehead School in Raleigh. It was obtained because one of the chain's stores will open after hours if medicine is needed by the school nurse.

Although the study indicated most agencies have adequate controls over credit card use, Deputy state Budget Director Marvin Dorman said it did "suggest some areas of improvement" and a number of proposals are now under study.

They include adoption of a universal gasoline credit card to replace most of the commercial gas cards and tighter controls on issuance and use of telephone cards because those cards can be used by anyone with the account number.

The budget office is also interested in "restricting the number of different kinds of cards" for air travel and related expenses such as car rentals, Dorman said.

The list of those holding air travel cards reflects wide differences in travel policy between state agencies.

For example, 27 officials of the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development hold cards issued under the agency's Eastern Airlines account, but neither Gov. James B. Hunt Jr. or any members of the Department of Administration hold similar cards in the state's name.

NRC's spokesman Mike Davis said the department has had the account for about 20 years. Officials using the cards must have prior approval before they can charge a plane ticket, he said.

Department of Administration officials who travel obtain their tickets through a Raleigh travel agency, which bills the department monthly. Hunt usually travels on state planes and helicopters. His office is billed for those flights by the Department of Commerce, which operates the state air fleet.

Dorman said he would prefer workers who travel either to obtain cash travel advances or to pay for tickets and car rental with personal charge cards for later reimbursement by the state.

"I would not say there is never a need for those cards, but there would probably be very few cases of an employee needing to take a state credit card with him or her," he said.

A universal gasoline card plan is being prepared by the Department of Administration, which operates the state motor pool, and officials hope to implement it early next year.

Officials say 23 oil companies operating in North Carolina have been contacted about the plan. Out of 21 replies received, about 15 have expressed an interest in working with the state on the program, but some may not qualify because their billing procedures will not meet state requirements.

The use of commercial gasoline cards began when oil companies offered discounts for their use by the state, but the practice was dropped following the Arab oil embargo in 1973-74.

Some agencies also discouraged use of state gas pumps because the DOT used to charge an additional 15 percent for administrative costs to outside agencies, making the cost of state gas higher than commercial stations in recent years. The DOT lowered the fee to 3 percent earlier this year, a move budget officials feel will encourage more use by outside agencies.

The commercial cards have also been used by state law enforcement officers and employees who travel to areas away from DOT pumps or at times when those facilities are closed.

Session Explores Faulkner's Work

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Author William Faulkner is unveiling his South to the world, even two decades after his death.

The 9th annual William Faulkner-Yoknapatawpha Conference, held at the University of Mississippi during the past week, explored the Nobel Prize-winner and his works to determine why he is so significant.

Bill Ferris, director of the university's Center for the Study of Southern Culture which co-sponsors the event, said, "Faulkner in his fiction did what we at the center are seeking to do — to develop a portrait of our total culture."

Ferris said the center sought to show "a total portrait — of white and black, old and young and past and present and future. Through his fiction, we have an eye on the South which informs about virtually every aspect of our lives. Our sense of humor, morality, immorality, violence and compassion are all clearly portrayed."

Faulkner scholars from the Soviet Union, South America, Europe and Japan joined those from this country in the conference, which was set up to recognize the international significance of his writing and its relationship to the community of Oxford and Lafayette County.

"We draw on the finest scholarship available and develop a combination of lectures, discussion groups and visits to regional locations where Faulkner set many of his novels," Ferris said.

He said the center was "about to begin a major study of the relationship between Faulkner's Yoknapatawpha and Lafayette County." Yoknapatawpha is the mythical county where Faulkner located many of his stories.

"This will involve extensive oral history, photography and film work in the community and provide a model for understanding the relationship between history and fiction," he said.

Ferris termed Faulkner "the writer who second only to Shakespeare has attracted enormous critical and popular recognition."

Floyd Pulls Out Into Five Shot PGA Lead

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Ray Floyd continued to grind along at a record pace and pulled away to a commanding five-stroke third-round lead Saturday while golf's two greatest names shot themselves out of the title chase in the 64th PGA national championship.

The veteran Floyd, who set first- and second-round scoring records, shot a third-round 2-under-par 68 on a cooler Southern Hills Country Club course to establish still another PGA tournament mark: a 200 total for 54 holes. That broke his own record of 202, set when he won the 1969 PGA title in Dayton, Ohio.

While Floyd, less than a month short of his 40th birthday, was taking his liberties with the fierce reputation of the tough course that stretches some 6,862 yards over rolling hills, Jack Nicklaus and Tom Watson found it more than they could handle.

Nicklaus, who counts five PGA championships among his record collection of 17 major professional titles, struggled to a 2-over-par 72 that left him at 216. That's six over par for three rounds over the course and left him out of the title chase in the last of the year's Big Four events, around which the 42-year-old Golden Bear has built his awesome reputation.

The hopes of Watson, currently the dominant player in the game, also came to an end. Watson, who beat Nicklaus in the dramatic climax to the U.S. Open and then went on to acquire his fourth British Open title, needed this title to become only the fifth man in history to score a career sweep of all the Big Four tournaments.

But Watson could do no better than a 71 that left him at 212 — 12 strokes back with only 18 holes to go.

Floyd, who counts a Masters and PGA title among his 17 career victories, has earned a reputation as one of the game's great front-runners.

He did that with an opening 63 on Thursday and hasn't been headed since. That 63 matched the best round in tournament history, broke Ray's own course record and represented the best first round in tournament history.

He added to the record collection Friday, shooting a 69 that set the tournament record for 36 holes at 132.

And now he's added one more, the best 54-hole total and tied still another, matching the largest three-round lead — five strokes, which he also set in 1969.

With his scoring heroics continuing in 90 degree temperatures — a considerable relief from the 100-plus marks that were recorded in the first two days — only Jay Haas and the Australian Greg Norman could keep Floyd in sight.

They shared second at 205.

"I've seen this before," said Haas, a three-time winner in six years of PGA Tour activity, after he had posted his 68. "He's the kind of guy who gets it going and keeps it going. He'll be hard to catch."

Norman, who has won some 20 world-wide tournaments but has yet to take a title in the United States, had a 70.

Norman took heart from Floyd's last-hole bogey that was recorded under threatening skies while distant thunder rolled in the background.

"Ray's miss of that last putt helped. Five back is better than six," he said.

"I have a realistic chance if Ray stumbles on the first few holes. And I have to get away to a fast start, at least three under after six holes."

But only that combination, his own fast start and a Floyd lapse, Norman said, could set up a battle.

And, he noted, "Ray is playing with so much composure..." He let the sentence trail off, unfinished.

Bob Gilder, in second through the first two rounds, dropped back with a 72 and was at 206.

He seemed to be the only other man with any hopes at all of overtaking Floyd.

Former Pirate, Now A Steeler

Valentine Aims For Starting Spot

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

These are not the best of times for the National Football League; they may in fact be the worst of times.

The threat of a strike plus the almost daily revelations of players admitting to drug use has made for an unsettled summer — to say the least — for the NFL and its fans.

But, for Pittsburgh Steeler linebacker Zack Valentine life goes on. Concerned Valentine is; obsessed he is not.

"The (threat of a) strike is no burden on me," said Valentine, a former East Carolina University standout. "What's going to happen is going to happen. All I'm concentrating on is my technique and fundamentals."

"I can't worry about it. It's not up to me if we strike or not. If we do then we'll see (what happens). We don't want a strike, but if it comes down to it we might have to."

"I think we need to reach an agreement," he added. "We're going through the drills like we would any time. But, the strike is over my head and right now I'm taking it one day at a time."

Training camp is only in its first week but already reports are circulating of growing tension between the NFL Players Association and NFL owners. Not helping the situation is the burgeoning problem of drug use in the NFL.

Valentine, however, insists he has neither seen nor felt the tension.

"I've been to training camp the past three years and this one is the same as always," Valentine said. "Everybody's just trying to make the team and make the team better."

"There's no tension," he added. "Not here anyway. I don't know about other places. They (management) have got a job to do and we've got a job to do. Our's is to win."

As for the use of drugs in the NFL, Valentine said the problem has been blown out of proportion — beginning in June when former defensive lineman Don Reese revealed in a story in Sports Illustrated that he was addicted to cocaine and that drug use was widespread in the NFL.

"It doesn't bother me because I don't use drugs," Valentine said. "I don't use any drugs."

Still, the stories of drug use in the NFL have not gone unnoticed — or unfelt — by Valentine.

"When you come up with a story like that it dampens the spirit of those who don't use drugs," he said. "I think it's been blown out of proportion but I know (management) is going to use it against us."

"I just think we need to go ahead and get the season going and put all this behind us."

It is a season that may be crucial not only for the NFL as a league but for Valentine as a player.

Valentine was drafted in the second round by Steelers four years ago. He has been the special teams leader in each of his first three seasons and has seen only limited duty at linebacker.

Valentine saw his most playing time as a rookie. Last year he injured a knee during preseason drills and was never able to break into the starting lineup. That may change this year.

In years past, the Steelers have primarily used a standard 4-3 defense.

This year, however, they are experimenting with a 3-4. Previously, the 3-4 has been used by the Steelers mostly as a blitzing defense and Valentine has been the fourth linebacker on many of those occasions.

Now, however, with the club thinking of relying on the 3-4 as major part of its defensive scheme, Valentine has an opportunity to become a starter as the fourth linebacker.

"I think they're pretty high on me for that linebacker spot, but I've got to go out and give it my best," Valentine said. "I feel pretty confident about my ability."

"It's one of those things that you're given an opportunity and you need to take advantage of it," said Valentine, who needs to play in four games this season to qualify for the NFL retirement pension. Valentine said there are few differences between the 4-3 (in which he plays outside linebacker) and the 3-4 (in which he may play either outside or inside).

"For the inside 'backer you've got to read your run keys and take on the guards," Valentine explained. "You've got to be more aware of the inside and you've got to move laterally more."

"We have used it in the past — mostly as a blitz coverage. My rookie year I was the fourth linebacker. Now, it's going to be part of our whole defensive package."

Which cannot but make Valentine smile, what with the opportunity it presents him — an opportunity that was not there four years ago when he was drafted by the Steelers.

When Valentine came to Pittsburgh he knew his initial opportunities would be few. What with all-pros Jack Ham and Jack Lambert at linebacker, there was little room for a rookie from East Carolina.

"I hadn't had the opportunity if you see what kind of linebackers we've had here," he said. "But they believe in me. They drafted me in the second round but they just bring them (the players) along very slow."

"You've just got to wait your turn. You know the guys before you have. That's one of the things about the game of football. It tests a man physically and mentally."

"Sure, you want to play more," he said. "I get a little discouraged but you just know you've got to wait your turn."

Hamlet Wins

ROCKINGHAM — Walter Gould hit a two-run homer in the first inning and Hamlet's Post 39 downed Pitt County, 5-4, last night to wrap up the Eastern North Carolina American Legion championship.

Hamlet led throughout the game, after taking a 3-0 lead in the first inning thanks to Gould's blast. Pitt rallied for one in the second, but Hamlet got one in the third for a 4-1 lead. A Pitt run in the fourth made it 4-2, and in the sixth, Hamlet upped it to 5-2. Pitt rallied for two in the eighth but left the tying run on second with none out in the eighth.

Pitt, which outhit Hamlet, 11-9, left 12 men on base.

Walter Gould hit a two-run homer in the first inning to spark the Hamlet attack.

Hamlet will now face the winner of the Cherryville-Asheboro series for the state title.

Speed Skater Angie Michel Sets Sights On Possible Olympic Bid

By ANGELA LINGERFELT
Reflector Staff Writer

To begin speed skating at Sportsworld and end up skating in the Olympics would be quite a feat. But for Greenville resident Angie Michel speed skating in the Olympics is very possible.

Presently, speed skating is not an Olympic sport, but there have been several attempts to make it one. If speed skating does become an Olympic sport, possibly by 1988, 16-year-old Angie Michel will have a good chance of competing.

Angie began skating at Sportsworld teammates to break the national time of 7:35 by skating the distance in 7:23.0.

Angie left on Friday to travel to Fort Worth, Tex., for the National Championships in Roller Speedskating, which will take place August 8-14. This will be the third year Angie has competed in the nationals. The second year she competed she won first place in the sophomore division. Angie will compete in the junior-senior division this year.

Angie, who was usually coached by the knows about sports and training," she said. Angie's father, Tom, is a former East Carolina and pro football player for the Redskins and the Vikings.

Angie said one reason there are not many people who participate in the sport is because of all the expenses involved. "Expenses are a serious drawback. I practice in Kinston, so I have to drive there three or four days a week. On the weekends, I practice in High Point and that takes a lot of gas, too," she said.

Angie added, "Everytime I skate on a different floor surface I have to use different wheels, which cost about $100 for each pair. The skates are also expensive."

Another expense is travel. "I go to meets during the year and they usually last three to four weeks. You have to pay for a motel room, rent a car, the flight, etc... I think expense is a big reason people don't skate that much," Angie said.

Although skating takes up much of her time (the skating season lasts from the end of September to the beginning of August), Angie still finds time to participate on the cross country and track teams at Rose High School, where she is a rising senior. Angie is also a member of Juniorettes, the French Club and the Anchor Club.

Angie said she doesn't have a lot of time for her friends, but they support her in any way they can. "My friends support me even though I don't have a lot of time to spend with them. Sometimes they ask me out even when they know I can't go — just to make me feel good. They're really behind me," she said.

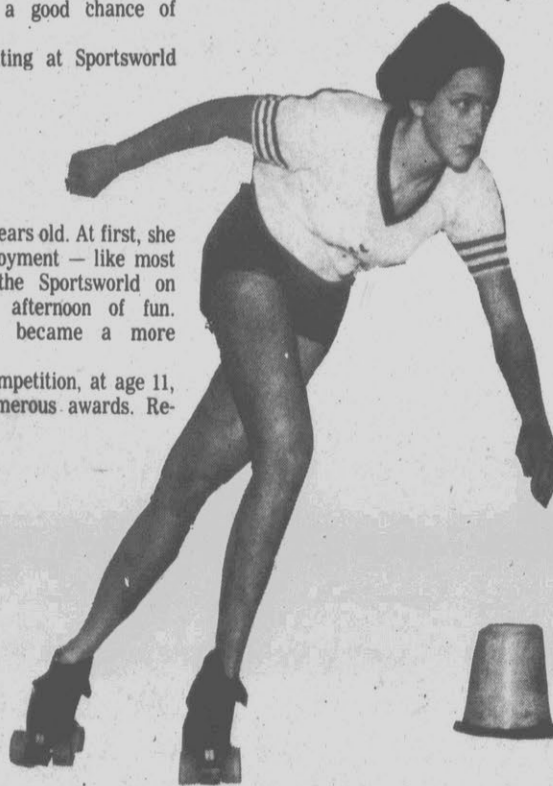

Angie said she also meets a lot of friends while traveling. Angie said, "My phone bill is high and I spend a lot of time writing letters to new friends."

Besides skating, meeting new people, writing letters and running, Angie said she also enjoys swimming and reading.

"One day," she said, "I hope to make the World Speed Skating Team and then go to the Olympics — if the sport makes it that far."

when she was five years old. At first, she only skated for enjoyment — like most children who go the Sportsworld on Saturdays for an afternoon of fun. Eventually, Angie became a more serious skater.

Since her first competition, at age 11, Angie has won numerous awards. Re-

Steve Dils' Record Shattering Performance Paces Viking Win

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — Steve Dils, Minnesota's second-string quarterback, shattered three Pro Football Hall of Fame exhibition passing records Saturday, leading the Vikings to a 30-14 victory over the Baltimore Colts in the season's first preseason game.

Dils, Tommy Kramer's backup, completed 27 of 45 passes for 313 yards, all Hall of Fame exhibition records.

His one touchdown toss, a 14-yarder to Tony Galbreath early in the fourth quarter, clinched the victory. It gave the Vikings a 23-14 lead after the Colts had rallied from a 16-0 deficit and closed with 16-14.

The old Hall of Fame passing records were 19 completions and 30 attempts by Minnesota's Bill Cappelman in 1970 and 240 yards by Baltimore's Johnny Unitas in 1964.

An overflow Fawcett Stadium crowd of 23,379, the second largest in this 20-year-old series, watched the Vikings spoil the professional coaching debut of the Colts' Frank Kush.

Prior to the game, Doug Atkins, Sam Huff, Merlin Olsen and George Musso were inducted into the Hall of Fame.

Kramer played only the first quarter as Minnesota's Bud Grant, who decided to coach after threatening a boycott earlier in the week, chose to go with Dils because of his brilliant performance. The Vikings built a 13-0 halftime lead on Sammy White's 15-yard end-around touchdown run and field goals of 29 yards Kush, the former Arizona State University coach, tried veteran David Humm of Nebraska and Ohio State rookie Art Schlichter at quarterback in the first half with little success. Mike Pagel, another rookie who played for Kush at Arizona State, started to move the Colts in the third quarter.

Pagel threw a 4-yard scoring pass to Ray Butler with 4:31 left in the period. Then, 61 seconds later, Randy McMillan ran 2 yards for a TD, reducing the Vikings' margin to 16-14. Pagel had set up McMillan's touchdown with a 35-yard pass to tight end Pat Beach.

Baltimore, losing its fifth straight exhibition in the past two seasons, did not reach Minnesota territory until midway in the third quarter. The Colts' defense stopped a Minnesota fourth-down gamble and took over at the Baltimore 42, setting up their first touchdown drive.

Rohn Stark of Florida State, the Colts' second-round draft choice, broke a Hall of Fame punting record with a 71-yarder in the first half. The old record of 63 yards was set by Donny Anderson of Green Bay in 1969.

The Vikings' No. 3 quarterback, Wade Wilson, hooked up with Jarvis Redwine on a 67-yard pass play for the Vikings' final touchdown with 17 seconds left.

Vincent Pleased With First Week's Practice

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Come Monday, it'll be time to put the pads on for the Rose High School Rampants as they enter the first week of intensive practice for the upcoming season.

The Rose gridders completed the first week of drills Saturday, that limited to non-contact work in light equipment.

"The first week went pretty good," Coach Ronald Vincent said. "We're a lot further along this year than we were last year at this time."

"We have gotten a lot more put in on offense, and the players are more familiar with our system," Vincent said. The Rampants switched from the wishbone to the I formation last fall.

"We also have our entire staff back this year, and that helps too," the coach added. "Our quarterbacks are throwing the ball much better than I anticipated them throwing. Of course, we'll have to wait until we start contact to see how the other players are coming."

Rose lost two outstanding receivers in all-state Chris McLawhorn and tight end Marty Barnes. "Edward Frazier started some last year and he's back and looking good so far. Bernie Carraway also saw some time last year and is doing okay. Tony Clemons has caught the ball well too," Vincent said.

The coach said that so far he had no disappointments with the team. "Until they start hitting, you really can't tell for sure. Everyone is even at this point."

Vincent said that the Rampants are still 3-looking for help in the defensive secondary, where all three players, Calvin Joyner, Sammy Hodges and Barnes along with backup Cornelius Moore are gone.

"We have several people back in the defensive line, such as Tommy Sparkman, Judas Best and William Rhodes, all three of whom started at time. Frankie Carr played extremely well on jayvee last year," Vincent pointed out.

The offensive line returns three starters, Greg Davis, Jay Mahoney and Bill Johnson. "We are still looking for a couple of guys to take the other two positions."

Of course, a lot will be learned this coming week when the hitting really starts. "We have a number of people that we think can play and help us," Vincent said.

The week wound up with around 90 players out for both the varsity and junior varsity programs.

The Rampants will begin two-a-day drills on Monday, going at 9 a.m. and 6 p.m. for the week. "Depending on the weather, and how much we accomplish will determine how long we continue with this," the coach said.

"Overall, we're quite a bit ahead of last year, mainly because the players know what they're doing this year. They don't have to learn as much."

The Rampants are scheduled to hold their scrimmage game on Thursday, August 19, against Washington, with the time and site still to be set.

They open the 1982 season hosting Jacksonville in Ficklen Stadium on September

Reese Says Reaching For Help

MIAMI (AP) - Don Reese says that probation "wasn't on my mind" when he talked about drug abuse in the National Football League for a first-person magazine article that was met with denials and accusations that his story was exaggerated.

Instead, the former defensive end who could face up to 29 years in prison for violating terms of a five-year probation from a 1977 drug trafficking conviction says he was reaching out for help during a desperate time in his life.

"I wanted some help for myself and for my friends. I just felt as though I was letting down a lot of people because of my situation," Reese told The Miami News in a question-and-answer interview published Saturday.

"I needed to straighten myself out. I was tired of giving the way I was living," Reese told News Assistant Sports Editor Charlie Nobles at his home in suburban Atlanta.

"And the John Belushi death from drugs had a big urge in it, too, because I related to that."

"I read in one article that he was doing what I was doing and he couldn't get the feeling he once had, so he went to 'shooting it.' I was afraid that I would get in that stage, too. Plus, he was one of my favorite comedians. It kind of touched me when he died."

Reese, 30, is scheduled to go before Circuit Court Judge Ellen Morphonios Gables Monday to face charges that he violated his probation. The charges stem from his admission in Sports Illustrated two months ago that he and other NFL players had used cocaine after he was released from jail in 1978.

"Daddy, you're not going to have to go to jail, are you?" blurted son Paul, 7.

"I hope not, son," Reese replied. "I've got a lot of people praying for me. And I'm praying myself."

The ex-player's probation would have ended Tuesday and Chief Assistant State Attorney

George Yoss has said no charges could have been filed against Reese if the story had been released after Aug. 10.

"A lot of people are calling me stupid for that. But you know, I was in violation of my life. My life was in jeopardy," said Reese. "Probation wasn't on my mind. I cared about it, but my main priority was to stop using the stuff. I wanted to be off cocaine."

Since Reese's story appeared in Sports Illustrated, several NFL players have revealed they were undergoing treatment for drug problems. The ex-player said he has encountered a minimal amount of hostility since the article was released.

"One person I talked to said I wasn't supposed to stick my nose in other people's business. But what I told is my business," said Reese. "Everybody else has been very nice about it. They agree with me 100 percent that it should have been said and something should be done about drugs in the NFL."

"I've gotten some beautiful letters from people and I haven't been able to answer them because of this thing in Miami. But I'm going to get around to answering them. In a couple of letters, the people even offered to send me money, they were so happy to see me take a stand against drugs. Some young people who are into drugs themselves also wrote to say it made them want to get out. That type of thing has been very gratifying."

Reese said he had just completed 4½ weeks of rehabilitation treatment at the Health Care Unit in Orange County, Calif., when the article was released. He said he and his wife drove to LAS Vegas on the way back to Atlanta and stopped there the day of the Larry Holmes-Gerry Cooney fight.

"We walked into this little store and we saw the magazine on the stand. When I saw it, I kinda got weez; a little, you know. My legs felt like rubber. I knew there would be an impact, but I just wanted to tell the truth about the thing. Still, it was like Holmes and Cooney were banging on my legs for awhile," said Reese.

Reese said he is now "clean as a whistle" as far as drugs are concerned. "The last time I could say that was about 10-11 years ago," he said, adding that he has withstood the temptation to try drugs again.

"I had temptations when I first got out of the hospital. All the pressure began to pile up, as far as the articles that was happening. The reaction of a lot of people was that I was dirt, so to speak. And I really felt bad about it, because I thought I was doing the right thing."

"Yeah, I could have easily went back in into it. But a lot of people around me urged me not to. They gave me a lot of help and support. This was during the time when I was traveling and in Chicago. But I wouldn't go back to it. I couldn't."

Reese was a member of the Miami Dolphins when he and former teammate Randy Crowder pleaded no contest to a drug trafficking charge and were sentenced to one year in jail and five years probation.

Reese later played for the New Orleans Saints and San Diego Chargers.

Clark's Birdie Parade Ties Her For The Lead

DANVERS, Mass. (AP) - Judy Clark birdied four of the last six holes and pulled into a tie with Terri Moody and veteran Sandra Palmer for the 54-hole lead Saturday in the $175,000 LPGA Boston Five Golf Classic.

Clark, winless in five years on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour, fired a 5-under-par 67 with her birdie spree for a 4-under 212 total in the 72-hole event at Radisson Fernald Country Club.

Moody, who put together a pair of 71's in the first two rounds, overcame nerves and added a 70, while Palmer, who shared a four-way tie at 141 for the 36-hole lead, added a 71 for 212.

Jane Blalock took a bogey-6 on the 54th hole and dropped out of a share of the lead, finishing with a par 72. She was tied at 213 one stroke off the pace by Patty Sheehan, who fired a second consecutive 70 after an opening round 73.

Muffin Spencer-Devlin, who had a piece of the halfway lead with Palmer, Blalock and Vivian Brownlee, scrambled for a 73 and a 214 score.

Jan Stephenson, this year's LPGA champion, fired a 72 for a 214, while Jan Lock had a 71 to move into a three-way tie two strokes back.

Only 17 players managed to break par on the exacting 6,008-yard course.

Vicki Tabor, Jo Ann Washam and Lynn Adams each had 70 for 215. They were joined there by Jeannette Kerr, who had a third-round 72.

Defending champion Donna Caponi, who had a first-round 77, followed a 68 with a 71 to enter the final round with a par 216.

Also at 216 were Pat Bradley, the 1981 U.S. Open champion who grew up only a few miles from here, JoAnne Carner, a former New England champion before she began winning 34 LPGA tournaments, and Janet Coles.

Brownlee ran into trouble, taking a 76 for 217. She was bracketed there with Kathy Whitworth, the LPGA's all-time top winner with 83 victories. Whitworth had a third-round 74.

Connors Gains Tourney Finals

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) - Top-seeded Jimmy Connors defeated hard-serving Chip Hooper 6-4, 6-4 Saturday to move into the finals of the $100,000 National Revenue Tennis Tournament.

Connors, who is playing in his first tournament since winning at Wimbledon, will meet Brian Gottfried in Sunday's final.

Gottfried needed only 48 minutes to overwhelm Bruce Manson of Fort Worth, Texas, 6-1, 6-0 in Saturday's other semifinal match at suburban Grove City.

Connors not only coped with Hooper's power, but also was able to score repeatedly with sharp passing shots.

Connors was pleased with his play against Hooper, a 6-foot-7 former All-American at the University of Arkansas.

"I hit the ball solid and was moving very well," said Connors, who is ranked No. 2 in the world. "He has a booming service and with the light balls they're using here, I felt I was doing very well on my service returns."

"I have to be satisfied with this win, as I did not let him use his strength against me. He never was able to get the ball past me and against a player like him, that's important."

Gottfried played with a devastating backhand and kept Manson off balance. He said, "Just about everything worked for me today. It had to be one of my best performances this year. I felt real good and was able to do just about all the things I wanted to do."

Gottfried broke Manson's service twice in the 25-minute first set and went through the second set yielding only 17 points.

In doubles play, Victor Amaya of Louisville, Ky., and Hank Pfister of Bakersfield, Calif., beat Rand Evelt of Colorado Springs, Colo., and Garth Haynes of Marin County, Calif., 7-6, 6-1.

They will play Tim Gullickson and Bernie Mitton in Sunday's finals.

Higuera Upsets Clerc In Clay Courts Battle

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) - Spain's Jose Higuera, returning to form after a two-year bout with hepatitis, upset two-time defending champion Jose Luis Clerc of Argentina 6-3, 6-3 Saturday in the semifinals of men's singles in the U.S. Clay Court tennis tournament.

Romania's Virginia Ruzici won the women's singles championship, rolling past 17-year-old Helena Sukova of Czechoslovakia 6-2, 6-0.

The second men's semifinal between unseeded Hans Simonsson of Sweden and 17-year-old Jimmy Arias was scheduled Saturday night at the Indianapolis Sports Center.

Higuera, 29, runnerup to Jimmy Connors in 1978, had no real trouble against Clerc, who was trying to become the first man to win the Clay Court championship three straight years since Bobby Riggs in 1936-38.

"It always feels good to beat a player like Clerc," said Higuera, who evened his career record against the 23-year-old Argentinian at four matches apiece. "It was a good win for me."

"I was sick for awhile after 1979, and the last two years I have been feeling very bad physically," said Higuera, who at one time was ranked as high as ninth in the world. "This year I'm starting to feel like before."

Higuera, seeded fifth, came into the tournament with a world ranking of 14th by the Association of Tennis Professionals.

Higuera took a 5-2 lead in the first set and a 4-3 edge in the second set, but said he was never really sure of the outcome until the very end.

"To me, when I play someone like Clerc, the match is not over until I win the last point. Until I got the final point, I wasn't sure I was going to win. There were a few very close games."

Clerc, seeded second and ranked sixth in the world, said he was "very tired" after a three-set victory over Mel Purcell in the quarterfinals late Friday night.

"I was really nervous today because I was so tired," said Clerc. "I didn't sleep well last night. Maybe he (Higuera) felt more strong, more relaxed."

"Everything was really bad today," he said. "I didn't have any concentration, I missed some easy balls. If I'm going to play like this, I'm not going to win any tournaments."

Kingman's Homer Sparks New York

PITTSBURGH (AP) - Dave Kingman hit his 28th home run of the season, a tie-breaking, two-run smash in the sixth inning, to give the New York Mets a 5-2 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates Saturday night.

Kingman's towering homer into the left field seats came off loser Rick Rhoden, 6-10, and capped a four-run Met rally in the sixth.

Winning pitcher Pat Zachry, 6-4, scattered 11 hits in his first start since June 25.

Zachry fell behind 2-0 in the first inning. Johnny Ray singled, took third on a single by Bill Madlock and scored on Jason Thompson's single off Zachry's glove. Mike Easler then doubled Madlock home.

Right fielder Ellis Valentine helped New York avert further trouble when he turned Lee Lacy's flyout into a double play by cutting down Thompson, who was trying to score, at the plate.

But Mookie Wilson led off the Mets' sixth with a single, stole second and scored on a triple by Bob Bailor. After Ellis Valentine singled Bailor home, Kingman clouted his second homer in as many nights.

The Mets added a run in the ninth on singles by Hubie Brooks and Ron Gardenhire and a throwing error by Madlock at third.

Cal Peete, winner of two recent tournaments, closed up with a 68 that left him at 207, seven strokes back. Peete, however, suffered a twisted knee while playing the 16th hole, declined an invitation to the press room for a mass interview and hurried back to his hotel for rest and treatment of his knee.

"I hope to be able to play tomorrow," he said.

Tied at 208 were Seve Ballesteros, the flamboyant young Spaniard who has won both the Masters and British Open, former PGA title-holder Lanny Wadkins and Jim Simons, winner of the Bing Crosby tournament earlier this year. Wadkins, winner of two tour events earlier this season, shot a 68. Ballesteros had a 69 and Simons slipped to a 73.

Floyd, winner of the Memorial tournament and Memphis Open earlier this year, opened the third round with a two-stroke lead and simply took it from there.

He bogeyed the third, but more than made up for it with a 40-foot birdie putt on the eighth and then went under par for the day with a deft, soft little pitch that set up a 4-foot birdie putt on the ninth.

He got it close to the hole again, perhaps 3-4 feet, and birdied the 12th, but missed another birdie opportunity from point-blank range on the 13th.

He saved par from four feet after missing the green on the 15th, then pulled still further away from the field with a great shot on the 16th. He pulled his second shot on the par-5 hole and found himself with an extremely difficult lie on the back lip of a bunker, needing to pitch over the trap and let the ball run to the hole. He executed it as well as it could be done and tapped in the 2-foot birdie, stalking away from the green with the ball still in the hole.

He missed the green and bogeyed the 18th. But, then, so did Norman.

So it only left his lead at five shots instead of a potential six. At that stage, it hardly seemed to matter.

Buckner's Hit Tops Phillies

CHICAGO (AP) — Bill Buckner stroked a tie-breaking, two-run single with two out in the eighth inning Saturday, lifting the Chicago Cubs to a 3-2 victory over the first-place Philadelphia Phillies.

The triumph was the fifth in the last six games for the Cubs, while the Phillies lost their third straight game. Junior Kennedy singled with one out in the eighth inning and pinch hitter Scot Thompson followed with a double, sending Kennedy to third. Loser Larry Christenson, 7-6, issued an intentional walk to hot-hitting Ryne Sandberg before striking out Larry Bowa.

Tug McGraw then relieved Christenson, and Buckner singled up the middle for the game-winning hit. Dickie Noles, 8-9, checked his former teammates on one run, four hits and struck out six in eight innings.

Gary Matthews hit his 17th homer with two out in the first inning to put the Phillies ahead 1-0.

The Cubs tied it 1-1 in the bottom of the inning. Sandberg, who went into the game with a string of four consecutive hits, singled to left, went to third on a single by Buckner and scored as Leon Durham grounded into a fielder's choice.

Sandberg made it six hits in a row with a single in the third, but lined out his next time at bat in the sixth.

Mike Schmidt hit his 22nd home run of the season, leading off the ninth against Lee Smith, who recorded his fifth save. Noles and Smith allowed a total of six hits.

San Francisco 9
Houston 2

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Renie Martin pitched seven-hit ball for 81-3 innings, scored two runs and drove in another and Joe Morgan rapped a three-run double during a six-run eighth inning as the San Francisco Giants unleashed a 15-hit attack and ripped the Houston Astros 9-2 Saturday.

Martin, 5-5, walked four and struck out three in 81-3 innings before Al Holland finished up. Martin lost what would have been his first major league shutout when Phil Garner slammed a two-run homer, his 12th, in the ninth inning.

Martin started the Giants' three-run seventh off knuckleballer Joe Niekro, 11-8, with a one-out single and went to second on a single by Chili Davis. The runners advanced on Niekro's wild pitch and Martin scored on catcher Luis Pujols' two-out passed ball.

After Jack Clark walked, Pujols let another pitch elude him, enabling Davis to score from third. Reggie Smith capped the inning with a run-scoring single.

The Giants broke open the game in the eighth when they sent 12 men to the plate. Consecutive singles by Tom O'Malley, Bob Brenly and Johnnie LeMaster loaded the bases. Martin followed with an RBI infield hit and, one out later, Morgan cleared the bases with a double off the right field fence. Dave Bergman later added an RBI single and another run scored on a wild pitch.

Young Driver Tops Trotting

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Speed Bowl won the Hambletonian Saturday, piloted by 25-year-old Tommy Haughton who became the youngest driver ever to capture the $875,000 trotting classic at the Meadowlands.

Jazz Cosmos finished second and Messerschmitt, a 40-1 shot, finished third.

Speed Bowl, a son of 1972 Hambletonian winner Super Bowl, scored by a neck over Jazz Cosmos, driven by Mickey McNichol. Another 3 1/4 lengths back was Messerschmitt, a 47-1 shot.

Conspicuous by their absence in the final were Mystic Park, winner of the Yonkers Trot, and Arndon. Each was eliminated in earlier heats.

The 57th Hambletonian winner is trained by Hall of Famer Billy Haughton, the father of the winning driver. The elder Haughton, who has won four Hambletonians, drove Speed Bowl in his first race this year, then turned the reins over to his son.

Speed Bowl, who captured the second division in impressive style, overtook the pacesetter Jazz Cosmos, winner of the first division, late in the stretch. Although Speed Bowl won only by a neck, he was in command with about 50 yards to go.

Speed Bowl was timed in 1:57 on the fast track and paid $4.60, $2.60 and $2.60 as the 6-5 favorite of the crowd of 23,153. His two victories Saturday were only his second and third of the year in nine starts.

Jazz Cosmos, the 8-5 second choice, held a two-length lead after a half-mile, while Rosalind's Guy was second and Speed Bowl third.

Jazz Cosmos paid $3 and $2.60, while Messerschmitt returned $5.

Speed Bowl had been locked in the middle of the stretch but pulled away to earn the winning purse of $437,500 for the Pony Stable of Oyster Bay, N.Y. of which Billy Haughton is a part-owner.

Finishing fourth in the final field of 10 — the top five finishers from the first and second divisions — was Roz T. Collins, a 24-1 shot, another three-quarters of a lengths back.

Then came Mr. Kingfish, Bone Meal, Incredible Nevele, Rosalind's Guy, Spirit's Supreme and Self Confident, 1981 2-year-old Trotter of the Year.

Incredible Nevele broke stride early in the backstretch, putting him out of contention. The victory boosted Speed Bowl's earnings to $710,473.

Billy Haughton said he was uncertain whether he would send Speed Bowl to the third leg of the trotting Triple Crown, the Kentucky Futurity, Oct. 8.

Heavy Toll This Year In Motorized Sports

HOCKENHEIM, West Germany (AP) — Motorized sports have taken a particularly heavy toll of racing drivers, motorcyclists and powerboat racers this year.

At least six racing drivers, two speedway motorcyclists, one road motorcycle racer and four powerboat racers have died, while six racers have been injured. The most recent to be injured was Grand Prix world championship leader Didier Pironi of France.

Doctors are fighting to avoid amputating his lower right leg after an accident Saturday morning in practice for the German Grand Prix.

The toll in Grand Prix racing: Gilles Villeneuve, the little Canadian who was the most exciting of the new generation of Grand Prix drivers, and Pironi's teammate and rival at Ferrari, died in the final qualifying race for the Belgian Grand Prix May 8.

Italian rookie Riccardo Paletti died June 13 at the Canadian race in Montreal. Starting from the back of the grid, he did not see Pironi's stalled Ferrari on the pole position spot and slammed into it at 100 miles an hour. Pironi was unhurt.

At the same race, Briton Nigel Mansell suffered torn ligaments in his hand that sidelined him for three races. Austrian Niki Lauda had a similar injury here Friday that put him out of the race.

Two weeks ago, German Jochem Mass escaped with injured vertebrae from a collision at the French Grand Prix at 180 mph.

His car hit a crowd protection fence and 12 spectators were injured, two seriously.

In U.S. auto racing: Veteran USAC racer Gordon Smiley died in a fiery smash in May during the qualifying period for the Indianapolis 500, and Jim Hickman, the 1982 Rookie of the Year at Indy, died Aug. 1 following an accident the previous day during the final practice for the Tony Bettenhausen 200 at Milwaukee, Wis.

Gene Richards, 28, an experienced stock car driver, died at Talladega, Ala., in the ARCA 200 race July 31.

In motorcycling: Australian Brett Anderton and American Denny Pyeatte were killed in speedway motorcycle races in Britain. Kenny Carter, Britain's leading contender for the speedway world title, was injured and is still in intensive care.

British road racer John Newbold was killed in a minor event at Portrush, Northern Ireland.

Former world champion Barry Sheene of Britain had massive injuries to both legs when he fell in private testing at Silverstone before the British Motorcycle Grand Prix Aug. 1.

As with Pironi, doctors still are not sure if they can avoid an amputation.

Yankee Bats Hot In Win Over Texas

NEW YORK (AP) — Rick Cerone's two-run single highlighted a four-run third inning and Mike Morgan scattered eight hits to gain his first victory since July 1 as the New York Yankees routed the Texas Rangers 9-1 Saturday.

The Yankees backed Morgan with a 16-hit attack, including at least one hit by every member of the starting lineup. The 22-year-old right-hander struck out one and walked none in hurling his second complete game of the season.

Dave Winfield singled home an unearned run in the first and Willie Randolph doubled in a run in the second before New York broke open the game in the third.

Winfield led off with a walk off Frank Tanana, 5-13, and raced to third on Lou Piniella's single to left, with Piniella taking second on the throw to third. One out later, Ken Griffey beat out an infield hit to drive in Winfield and send Piniella to third.

After Griffey stole second, Cerone followed with his two-run single to left. Bucky Dent struck out before Collins, who had scored the first two New York runs, drilled an RBI double to knock out Tanana. Collins finished with three hits, including two doubles.

Dave Hostetler's 18th home run, in the sixth inning, provided Texas' run and tied the Rangers' club record for home runs in a season by a rookie, set by Pat Putnam in 1979. Hostetler's last four homers have come against the Yankees.

New York added an unearned run in the sixth as shortstop Wayne Tolleson's error led to Roy Smallley's RBI single. Jerry Mumphrey tripled in two more runs in the seventh to close out the scoring.

DETROIT (AP) — Rance Mulliniks hit a two-run homer and Willie Upshaw and Glenn Adams added solo shots as the Toronto Blue Jays defeated the Detroit Tigers 7-4 Saturday, snapping a five-game losing streak.

Toronto's Jim Clancy and reliever Dale Murray gave up 10 hits in stopping Detroit's four-game winning streak.

Mulliniks' homer, his second of the season, came in the third inning with Alfredo Griffin aboard and gave Toronto a 2-0 lead.

Toronto added three unearned runs in the fourth inning against Detroit starter Larry Pashnick, 2-4. Upshaw was safe when Detroit second baseman Lou Whitaker bobbled his grounder for an error, went to third on Barry Bonnell's hit-and-run single and scored on a sacrifice fly by Adams.

Jesse Barfield hit a two-out single and went to second as left fielder Larry Herndon's throw home held Bonnell at third. Griffin then chased Pashnick with a two-run single, giving the Blue Jays a 5-1 lead.

Upshaw and Adams hit solo homers in the eighth off Detroit reliever Elias Sosa. Clancy, 9-10, allowed all eight hits, striking out three

In the fifth, Chet Lemon got a one-out single and Wilson slammed Clancy's first pitch into the upper deck in center field for his second homer of the season, narrowing the Blue Jays' lead to 5-3.

Detroit got one back in the seventh when Rich Leach led off with a double, moved to third on a wild pitch and scored on Trammell's single.

BOSTON (AP) — Tony Bernazard knocked in two runs with a double and a tie-breaking home run Saturday as the Chicago White Sox posted a 7-3 victory over the Boston Red Sox for their eighth triumph in the last nine games.

Bernazard's blast over the left field wall, his seventh homer of the season, came with two out in the fifth and broke a 2-2 tie. It came after John Tudor, 7-9, had retired nine men in a row.

His seventh-inning double down the first-base line drove in Rudy Law and made the score 5-2. Law had reached second on a two-base error by Boston shortstop Dave Stapleton.

Aurelio Rodriguez increased the lead to 7-2 with a two-out, two-run homer in the eighth that scored Mike Squires, who had singled.

Rich Dotson, 5-11, scattered eight hits before getting last-out relief from Kevin Hickey, who got his fifth save of the season.

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Matt Keough tossed a seven-hitter, Wayne Gross blasted a two-run homer and Tony Armas added a solo shot as the Oakland A's downed the Minnesota Twins 7-1 Saturday.

Keough, 9-15, struck out four and walked two in pitching his ninth complete game of the season. He lost his shutout bid when Ron Washington hit his fifth home of the season, leaving off the ninth for the Twins.

The A's took a 1-0 lead off Bobby Castillo, 5-9, in the third. Jeff Newman walked, went to second on a single by Jimmy Sexton, moved to third when speedy Rickey Henderson grounded into a double play and scored on Dwayne Murphy's ground-rule double.

Oakland added three more in the fourth. Armas singled to lead off and Gross followed with his fifth homer, a 418-foot shot into the upper deck in right field. Davey Lopes followed with a single, stole second, went to third on a grounder and scored on Newman's bunt single.

Twins' first baseman Kent Hrbek twisted his right ankle on the play and was forced to leave the game.

In the fifth, Armas singled for his second of four hits and later scored on a balk by Castillo.

Yankees Grant One Last Wish

NEW YORK (AP) — Eric Zimmerman didn't expect Ruthian heroics; he's a 5-year-old cancer victim whose time is running out, and he just wanted to see a game at Yankee Stadium before the boys of summer faded away.

Some of Eric's neighbors thought his was a dream that should come true. Thanks to them — and the New York Yankees — it did.

The little boy went to Yankee Stadium on Friday night. He toured the stadium, watched a game and shook hands with the pride of the Yankees.

"He knows he's very, very ill," said Eric's father, George, "but I could tell by his face that he was very happy last night."

Eric has suffered from bone marrow cancer since he was an infant. Doctors have tried many treatments. Now they say there is no cure.

Each day on his way to therapy at Manhattan's Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center, Eric passes by Yankee Stadium. Once, he asked his mother if he might someday see the inside of the historic Bronx ballpark.

"I watch baseball on TV and that's how he became a baseball fan, I guess," said Zimmerman, of Wappingers Falls.

The boy's request reached friends at the Yorktown Heights Chamber of Commerce. In turn, they called the Bronx Chamber of Commerce, and the Yankees were brought into the picture.

On Friday afternoon Eric and his family were driven to Yankee Stadium in a long silver limousine with a police escort. The boy was given an official Yankee jacket, cap, bat and an autographed Yankee yearbook.

Then he met newly appointed Yankee manager Clyde King and shook hands with some of his favorite players, including Dave Winfield, Lou Piniella, Dave Collins, Roy Smallley, Bucky Dent and Ron Guidry.

"He asked to see Reggie Jackson when he first found out he was going to Yankee Stadium," said Zimmerman, "but he wasn't too disappointed when we told him Reggie isn't a Yankee anymore. He likes Dave Winfield and Lou Piniella, too."

Finally, he sat next to the dugout to see the Yankees triumph, 6-0.

But doctors say Eric has been fighting a losing battle ever since he was 10 months old, when his parents noticed that he had suffered from a series of black eyes. The disease was diagnosed, and he has since been in and out of the hospital ever since.

Zimmerman spent 14 months in Vietnam; he attributes his son's disease to his own exposure to the defoliant Agent Orange in Vietnam. Agent Orange contains dioxin, a powerful carcinogen.

The cancer has twice been in remission, but last April it flared again, spreading throughout his body. His doctors tried a new treatment using Vitamin E — unsuccessfully. There are no cures left, they say.

Much of the time Eric is now confined to a wheelchair or bed, but when he entered the dugout at Yankee Stadium, he was walking tall.

Four Inducted In Pro Grid Hall

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — Doug Atkins, Merlin Olsen, Sam Huff and George Musso all found it difficult to convey their feelings into words Saturday upon their inductions into the Pro Football Hall of Fame.

"It's indescribable," said Huff, the former linebacking great of the New York Giants and Washington Redskins. "How do you describe in five minutes the accomplishments of a lifetime?"

Atkins, the Chicago Bears' huge defensive end, said, "It's unbelievable. It's hard to describe what this week has been like. Of all my years in football, this is my most memorable time."

Olsen, the former defensive tackle standout with the Los Angeles Rams and now the star of the television series, "Father Murphy," said, "It's improbable to plot the course that brought me here today. It's nice to share this with my friends, so many that cared I was here today."

Perhaps the 72-year old Musso was the most heartwarming story of the 1982 class that lifted the number of Hall of Fame members to 114.

Musso, who waited 37 years for his enshrinement, recalled an automobile accident 20 years ago that left him with 54 broken bones.

"They didn't expect me to live," said the former two-way lineman for the Bears. "That didn't stop me. This is wonderful. There's nothing any greater. This is as high as you can go."

A few thousand fans ringed the hillsides surrounding the shrine to watch the 20th enshrinement class in partly cloudy, muggy weather.

The crowd saved its greatest ovation for George Halas, one of the league's founders, and a charter Hall of Fame member who introduced Musso.

The 87-year old Halas, the founder of the Bears, told the four inductees, "Your enshrinement today enhances its halls."

Musso, in his acceptance speech, said of Halas, "He was fair, honest, a man of his word, a great coach and a great businessman. He said one day football would be bigger than baseball. We're about there now."

GCC Net Event Ends

Greenville Country Club's Junior Tennis Championships were completed Saturday.

Pauline Bearden took the girls' 18 and under championship, downing Susan Taylor, 6-3, 6-0. Catherine Land won both the girls' 14's and 16's, beating Taylor in both. In the 14's, she won 5-7, 6-4, 6-3, while taking a 6-3, 7-5 win in the 16's.

Hannah Hill doend Jenny Jones, 8-7, to win the girls' 12 and under, while Kathryn Taft took the girls' 10 and under round robin.

David Lee downed Scott Davis, 6-4, 7-6 (7-5) to take the boys' 14 and under, but then lost to Davis, 6-7 (3-7), 6-2, 6-2 in the boys' 16's.

Taylor Evans defeated Paige Powell 8-4 to win the girls' 12 and under consolation, while Louise Folger took the girls' 18 and under consolation, downing Caroline Powell, 6-2, 4-6, 6-4. Mike Herrin defeated Josh Hickman, 3-6, 6-3, 7-6 (7-5) for the boys' 16 and under consolation.

All of the enshrinees seemed overwhelmed by a morning parade through downtown Canton that police estimated attracted at least 250,000.

"I didn't realize what I was getting into here. I just thought it was another little, old affair," said Atkins, a 6-foot-8, 275-pound end who played 205 games in 17 seasons with the Cleveland Browns, Bears and New Orleans Saints.

Dallas Cowboys Coach Tom Landry, who introduced Huff, recalled his first impressions of the West Virginia University All-American when he reported to the Giants' training camp.

"He was a babyfaced athlete with a soft body," said Landry. "He was not too impressive. But as we went along, we learned Sam was something special. He still had that soft look, but he didn't play like it."

Huff, who led the Giants into the National Football League title game six times in eight seasons, said, "Today is the best day of my life. No one makes the Hall of Fame by himself. I wouldn't be here without my teammates from the Giants and the Redskins."

Olsen revealed that his ninth-grade coach suggested that he try something besides sports. Olsen quoted his old coach as saying, "Use your energy somewhere else, like the school newspaper."

Olsen added, "Thank goodness I always didn't listen to my coaches. If I had, I wouldn't be here today."

Olsen, a 6-5, 270-pound defensive tackle, was a Pro Bowl selection 14 straight years in his 15-year career with the Rams.

Musso, a 60-minute performer when the Bears were at their peak during the 1930s and 1940s, said he originally thought his selection was a hoax.

He admitted he did not believe that it was Pete Elliott, the Hall of Fame's director, who telephoned him of his selection in January.

"Something had been pulled on me several years ago and I didn't make it then," Musso said.

To Appeal Annulment

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Jan Stephenson's former husband says he will appeal a judge's ruling annulling his brief marriage to the professional golfer.

Judge Joe Eidson annulled Stephenson's marriage to Florida businessman Larry Kolb on July 20 and, on Friday, refused to grant Kolb a new trial. Kolb immediately said he would seek a hearing before a higher court.

Stephenson married Kolb in a March 5 civil ceremony. But in April, she filed for the annulment, citing her previous common-law marriage to Fort Worth oilman Eddie Vossler. She said she was not aware that her liaison with Vossler constituted a legal marriage.

Kolb fought the annulment, claiming Vossler was using brain-washing techniques to keep Stephenson under his control.

"She is under the undue influence of Mr. Vossler," Kolb said after Eidson's ruling Friday. "Once we get back in court, I will prove it."

Eidson granted Stephenson's request for the annulment after Kolb failed to appear for a July 6 deposition hearing.

Lions Roar Loudest In Controlled Scrimmage

BOWLING GREEN, Ohio (AP) — Touchdowns by David Hill, Ken Callicutt and Tracy Porter carried the Detroit Lions to a 24-10 victory over the Cleveland Browns in a controlled scrimmage before 23,000 fans Saturday afternoon.

The two National Football League teams ran five series of 12 plays each in the scrimmage. Cleveland and Detroit will meet again in the first exhibition game of the year for both teams next Saturday in the Pontiac Silverdome.

Detroit scored on its first possession on a 27-yard pass from Eric Hipple to Hill. On the final play of the second period, the Lions added their second touchdown on a 1-yard run by Callicutt.

Cleveland scored twice on its third possession on a 46-yard field goal by Matt Bahr and a 23-yard pass from Paul Matt Bahr booted a 46-McDonald to Charles White.

Detroit added its third touchdown on a 53-yard run by Porter on a reverse during the Lions' third possession. The Lions' final points came on a 31-yard field goal by Murray.

"The game was what I expected it to be," said Detroit Coach Monte Clark. "It was our first hitting during game conditions, and I was pleased with the way the game went."

Cleveland Coach Sam Rutigliano said he was pleased despite coming up short in the scoring column.

"Scrimmages like this are good," he said. "You have mixed emotions because you want to win the scrimmage. But the main reason for playing is to evaluate your talent, and we made a major step in evaluating our young talent today."

Hamlet Holds Off Pitt Co. Rally, 11-9

ROCKINGHAM — "Anything you can do, I can do better," goes the old song from "Annie Get Your Gun."

And it seems like anything Pitt County can do, Hamlet's American Legion baseball team is able to do one better also.

Friday night proved no exception in the fourth game of the best-of-seven series as Hamlet's Post 49 rallied from a 4-1 deficit and pulled out an 11-9 victory over Pitt County.

The win boosted the Hamlet lead in the series to three games to one. The fifth game was to be played last night in Rockingham, and a Hamlet win would end the series. A Pitt win would send the series back to Greenville for the conclusion of play with the next game tonight at 8 p.m. at Harrington Field.

Pitt County banged out a total of 16 hits in the contest, seven more than Hamlet managed, but it wasn't enough. It seemed no matter what Pitt did, Hamlet was able to do them one better. If Pitt scored once, Hamlet scored twice, and so on.

Pitt, however, contributed a bit of help to Hamlet, committing four errors that helped Post 49 pick up several of its runs.

All-in-all, it left the Post 39 players wondering if they are snake-bit in the series.

Pitt jumped on the scoreboard first, scoring a run in the top of the first inning. Tom Buie led off with a single and stole second — getting the first of three stolen bases on the evening. Emmett Walsh singled and Buie came around to score when Greg Briley reached on an error at first base.

In the bottom of the inning, however, Hamlet matched that run. Charles Ingram led off with a double and scored when Walter Gould reached on an error by Mont Carter.

Pitt regained the lead with a run in the top of the second, 2-1. Bill Kittrell walked and Mike Kinley reached on a fielder's choice that got no one. Both were sacrificed up by Buie, and Kittrell scored when Carter grounded out.

In the fourth inning, Pitt added two more runs. Kinley opened with a single and after one out, Carter got a hit. Roger Williams' grounder was errored, allowing Kinley to score and Carter to go to third. He scored from there when Walsh grounded out.

That gave Pitt a 4-1 lead, and things were looking bright at that point.

But in the bottom of the fifth, the bubble burst as Hamlet pushed over four runs, taking advantage of several Pitt mistakes.

With one away, Greg Cloninger singled. Then, after the second out, Gould got a hit. Mike Moore followed with a shot to third that Briley errored, leaving the bases loaded.

Alex Wallace followed with a single to left scoring Cloninger and when the ball got by Buie, both Gould and Moore scored with Wallace going all the way to third. He scored when Mike Byrd reached on a second error by Briley.

That powered Hamlet into a 5-4 lead.

Post 49 came right back with five more runs in the bottom of the sixth to put the game out of reach at 10-4. With one away, Ingram singled and Cloninger was hit by a pitch. Both moved up on an out and a wild pitch let Ingram score. Gould and Moore both walked, loading the bases for Wallace, who drilled the ball out of the park for a grand-slam and suddenly Hamlet was well in front.

Pitt closed it to 10-9, however, scoring five runs in the seventh. Walsh walked and Briley singled. Scott Galloway then singled in Walsh, and after an out, Briley scored on Kittrell's hit. Kinley singled in Galloway, and Buie singled to score both Kittrell and Kinley.

However, relief pitcher Bill Jarman, who first faced Buie, put out the fire after that, not allowing Pitt to catch up.

Hamlet did add one more run as insurance in the bottom of the inning. Eddy Hickman singled and stole second, sending Kinley to the showers. Williams, after striking out the next two batters before Cloninger singled to score Hickman.

Buie and Galloway each had three hits for Pitt, while Kittrell, Sammy Hodges and Kinley each had two. Cloninger led Hamlet with three, while Ingram and Wallace each had two.

The winner of the series will face the winner of the Cherryville-Asheboro series in the west for the state championship.

While Henderson Will Take Mark Brock Remains Dean Of Runners

OAKLAND (AP) — Lou Brock's single-season stolen base record will be erased any day now by Rickey Henderson, but the former St. Louis Cardinals star remains the dean of runners with an encyclopedic knowledge of the science and trickery of the trade.

Brock, 43, is watching Henderson's torrid pace with more than a passing interest. He's pulling for the kid all the way, but he doesn't think he'll go much beyond 140 stolen bases, despite Henderson's pace of nearly one steal per game.

"I chose that number because I know what happens to the body, the punishment it takes," Brock said. "He might be strong enough and have the willpower to blast past that. But 140 is so far past the record, it's out in no man's land. In no man's land, there's nobody but you, and you find out how lonely you can be."

Brock was in a similar position in 1974 when he wiped out Maury Wills' 1962 record of 104 stolen bases with a total of 118.

Brock also remembered how he struggled in 1977 when he entered the season needing only 27 bases to break Ty Cobb's career mark.

"I was so close I could almost touch it," he said. "Yet it seemed to get farther away until I caught up with it late in the season. I don't know at what point that'll affect him. I've got to believe he's young enough so that won't affect him."

Brock's career total of 938 stolen bases probably won't be challenged by Henderson for at least another five years. When Henderson reaches steal No. 119, he'll have 308.

One of the subjects Henderson and Brock talked about over a three-hour dinner in St. Louis last winter was the advantage both had being "left-footed."

"A person who is left-handed is also usually left-footed," Brock said. "That gives him a better thrust toward second because of the power drive or kick of his left foot."

They also discussed the importance of recognizing the "trigger points" of different pitchers, an area later stressed to Henderson by two-time National League stolen base champion Davey Lopes when he joined the A's this spring.

"There are only two kinds of pitchers," Brock said. "One has a three-movement motion to first base, the other has a two-movement motion. In every motion there is a trigger point and you have to determine where it is by studying the anatomy of the pitcher, how he moves his knee or shoulder."

"Once the pitcher crosses that trigger point, he has to throw home. There's nothing he can do about it. Knowing that simplifies the heck out of it. You're always stealing against the pitcher, never the catcher. We used to love when writers or fans blamed the poor catcher for stolen bases."

Brock picked up the runner's torch from Wills, who reached his peak when Brock was a skinny rookie with the Chicago Cubs. The torch was taken over by Henderson in 1980 when he stole 100 bases in his second season just after Brock retired.

They're all kindred spirits, members of an exclusive den of thieves haunted by the snarling ghost of Ty Cobb, whose record of 96 steals went unchallenged for 47 years.

"The home run eliminated the stolen base for the singles hitters," Brock said. "For 40 years after Ty Cobb, the stolen base was used primarily as something to demoralize the other team or to rub it in to make someone look bad before the crowd."

"The deterrent factor was every time you stole in certain situations, you paid for it. You got one in the ribs or in the head. It became the survival of the fittest. That started to change with Maury Wills."

It has come full cycle with Henderson, who dives head first into the bases.

"Years ago guys were always putting their foot or knee between you and the base," Brock said. "That's rare now."

Strike Talk Is Distraction

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Last year at this time, all the Dallas Cowboys could talk about was revenge on the Philadelphia Eagles.

This year, it's strike talk and salary talk. All-Pro defensive tackle Randy White wants to talk football for a change.

"It's a distraction and I don't like it," said White. "I'm having to answer questions about the strike and salaries and then we even talk about it in team meetings. I'm tired of it already."

Up front, White wants it known he doesn't back the National Football League Player's Association in its current stance.

"I wouldn't support a strike at this point," said White. "Not what the union is asking for now."

White's gut feeling is that there just may be a strike.

"You keep hearing all the talk. I foresee some kind of strike," he said.

White said he doesn't think the Cowboys would unanimously favor a walkout.

"I know some teams are unanimously in favor but I don't think ours would be," he said.

Asked what he would do if the rest of the team struck, White smiled and said, "Well, I don't have much of a choice, do I? What am I going to do, suit up on Sunday and go to the stadium? That would look a little silly. I've got to have somebody out there to tackle."

White said he yearned for the atmosphere of last summer's camp when the Cowboys plotted revenge against the Eagles, who had beaten them in the 1981 National Football Conference championship game.

The Cowboys got their revenge, winning the NFC East, but they lost to San Francisco in the title contest, denying them a sixth Super Bowl trip.

"We should be concentrating on getting back at San Francisco," White said. "We can be as good as we want to be. Right now, there are just too many distractions."

White is the second highest-paid Cowboys player, earning about $350,000 per year. Only running back Tony Dorsett is paid more.

Defensive end Ed "Too Tall" Jones recently signed a lucrative contract at $300,000 per year.

"Salaries, salaries, salaries, that's about all you hear," said White.

Student-Athlete Is Meaningful

By DAN LOHWASSER
UPI Sports Writer

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI) — Former Clemson basketball player Chris Dodds and North Carolina State football player Calvin Warren paid more than lip service to the idea of the "student athlete" during their playing days.

Both were graduated this year with nearly perfect grade-point averages and now they're ready to reap the benefits.

Dodds is enrolled in a Masters of Business Administration program at the University of Pittsburgh and Warren, who received nearly $6,000 in post graduate scholarship money, enters medical school at North Carolina this fall.

The two are among 387 athletes at the ACC's eight member schools who posted grade point averages of 3.0 (B) or better this past year. If that sounds like a lot, it isn't. Each of the eight schools has about 95 football players alone and the figure includes athletes in 10 other conference-sanctioned sports.

Dodds and Warren are aware that many regard college athletics as an academic joke, that the public perception is players are gladiators hired by coaches who cheat and alumni with fists full of cash. The University of San Francisco, for instance, last week abolished its prestigious basketball program saying uncontrollable cheating threatened the institution's academic integrity.

"For many college athletes, athletics have become their way of life," said Dodds, who lives in State College, Pa. "There's a lot of talk about the student athlete. Saying it's one thing and living it's another. It (college sports) becomes your job. With the meetings, practices, films, and games, school is forced to play a secondary role."

"To excel in anything, you have to channel all your energy into that one thing," he added. "That's the only way to excel and it doesn't leave a lot of time for school. I spent much more time with basketball (than school work). The only reason I did so well was I was blessed with virtually a photographic memory."

Dodds and Warren had perfect 4.0 averages their senior years along with Maryland lineman Mark Sobel and baseball outfielder Tony Larioni. North Carolina tennis player Robert Bach, Virginia swimmer Scott Williams, and Cavalier soccer player Kenneth Najder.

Sobel is hoping to get into medical school and Najder is going to law school while the others haven't been graduated yet.

Warren, who North Carolina State officials say is the top athlete academically ever to attend the school, said a lot of what is said about big-time college athletics is true.

"College football is a business and I don't think you can blame anybody for that," said Warren, who lives in Selma, N.C., and recently married a hometown girlfriend. "For a lot of people, like the coaches, it's their jobs. It's also a pressure business. I see 18-19 year old guys trying to go to school who are put under a lot of pressure (to perform on the football field)."

If academics is a joke, the player many times becomes the butt of that joke, Dodds said.

"It's really sad to see a kid come out of college 50 to 60 credits short of graduating," said Dodds. "They're left out in the cold, and the school has cheated them."

Dodds said the coaches he encountered at Clemson seemed genuinely interested in academics, but the job was just too much even with academic counselors.

"I think the Clemson coaches, probably more than a lot of others, are serious about academics, but they can't baby sit you. They just don't have the time. They recognize there are different degrees of trying in academics. It's making an effort that concerns them. At some schools all they care about is staying eligible and a lot of schools have found ways to keep students in school."

In addition to the pressure and the time demands for daily practice and physical conditioning, college athletics means a lot of missed class time.

Dodgers Think Positive; Win Again

By The Associated Press
The Los Angeles Dodgers have found another source of power in their drive to overcome Atlanta in the National League West race ... the power of positive thinking.

"We weren't coming back early in the season, but now we just get the feeling that something will happen," shortstop Bill Russell said after the Dodgers rallied for a 5-4 victory over the Braves in 10 innings Friday night. "We're confident that we can come back. We're confident we're on our way."

For the second evening in a row the Dodgers rallied from the brink of defeat to beat Atlanta.

Claudell Washington cracked a solo homer in the top of the 10th to give the Braves a 4-3 lead. But errors by Brave first baseman Chris Chambliss and shortstop Rafael Ramirez in the bottom of the 10th opened the door for the Dodgers.

Chambliss, second baseman Glenn Hubbard and Washington in right field collided while chasing Ron Cey's pop fly down the foul line, the ball bouncing off Chambliss' glove for a two-base error. Then with two outs, Bill Russell lined a single up the middle off reliever Steve Bedrosian to drive in Cey with the tying run.

After Ron Roenicke walked to load the bases, Steve Sax sent a chopper to Ramirez, who juggled the ball and threw late to first, enabling Russell to score the winning run.

Elsewhere in the National League, San Francisco tripped Houston 7-6, Chicago downed Philadelphia 4-2, San Diego stopped Cincinnati 2-0, Montreal edged St. Louis 5-3, Pittsburgh and New York split a doubleheader, both teams taking 7-3 victories.

The Dodgers moved to within 3½ games of the Braves in the NL West. The victory was the Dodgers' fourth straight, eighth in their last nine games, and seventh in a row over the Braves. They have shaved seven games in the last eight days from the Braves' once-hefty 10½-game margin.

Giants 7, Astros 6
Darrell Evans' pinch-hit, run-scoring single capped a three-run rally in the bottom of the ninth for the Giants, who had rallied from a 6-0 deficit.

Jack Clark and Reggie Smith sparked the rally with consecutive homers off reliever Dave Smith to open the inning. The homers were the second for each in the game.

Phil Garner and Jose Cruz each hit two-run homers for the Astros and Chili Davis added a solo shot for San Francisco. The seven home runs are a National League high for this season.

Gary Lavelle, 6-5, was the winner in relief, Randy Moffitt, 2-4, was the loser.

Cubs 4, Phillies 2
Bill Buckner's tie-breaking two-run homer in the sixth inning lifted Chicago to the victory. Ryne Sandberg, who had three hits, singled to open the sixth, stole second and went to third on a ground out before Buckner smashed his sixth homer off loser Dick Ruthven, 8-10.

The Phillies jumped to a two-run lead in the first inning on Mike Schmidt's 21st homer of the year.

Alan Ripley, 44, went seven innings to gain the victory, while Lee Smith picked up his fourth save.

Padres 2, Reds 0
Rookie Eric Show hurled his first major league shutout, limiting the Reds to seven singles, and Luis Salazar drove in both San Diego runs with a homer and a double.

Show, 9-3, struck out two and walked one in pitching his first major league complete game.

Salazar gave Show, who has spent most of the year in the bullpen, a 1-0 lead in the second inning when he doubled home Joe Lansford, who opened the inning with a bloop single to right off Bob Shirley, 3-9.

Salazar hit his eighth homer of the season with two outs in the sixth to close out the scoring.

Expos 5, Cardinals 3

Chris Speier's two-out single capped a two-run rally in the seventh inning to lift the Expos over the Cardinals.

It was the Expos' first victory ever in 10 decisions over Cardinal starter Joaquin Andujar, 8-10.

Steve Rogers, 14-4, gained credit for the victory with relief from Woodie Fryman and Jeff Reardon.

St. Louis missed an opportunity to close in on Philadelphia's two-game lead in the National League East.

Prates 7-3, Mets 3-7
Randy Jones earned his 100th career-pitching victory as the Mets beat the Pirates in the second game of the doubleheader.

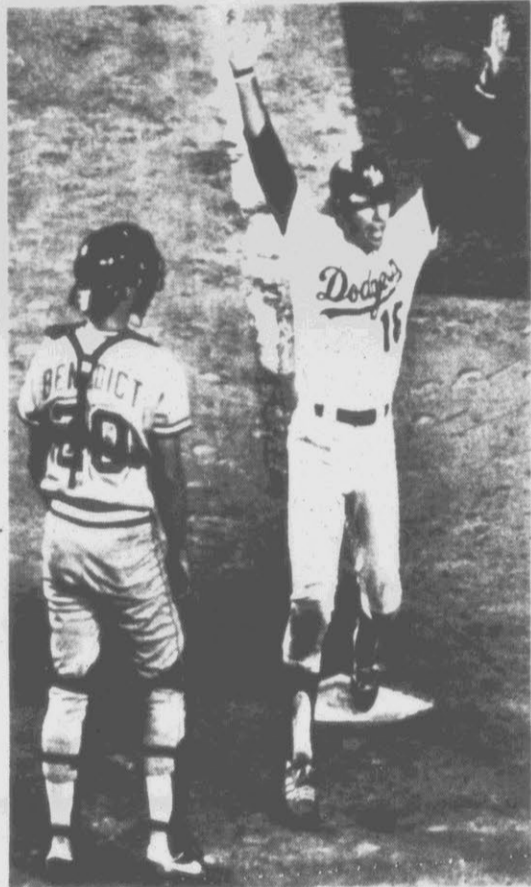

It was the first victory since May 23 for Jones, 7-8 this season and 100-121 lifetime. He pitched six innings, allowing seven hits. Neil Allen earned his 19th save.

Dave Kingman hit his 27th home run of the season, a solo shot in the sixth, and Ellis Valentine hit a two-out, two-run single in the seventh to lead the Mets, Ross Baumgarten, 0-3 was the loser.

In the opener, Jason Thompson, Mike Easler and Johnny Ray drove in two runs each and Manny Sarmiento, 5-1, tossed a six-hitter to lead Pittsburgh. Mike Scott, 7-9, was tagged with the loss.

LaBatte To End Career

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah (UPI) — Veteran Salt Lake defenseman Neil LaBatte has decided to retire from professional hockey rather than play for another team, according to Eagles' spokesman Chuck Schell.

Schell said Friday the 25-year-old LaBatte plans to remain in Salt Lake and finish his studies toward a bachelor's degree in business at the University of Utah.

LaBatte was a second-round draft pick by the St. Louis Blues in 1977. The Blues had indicated they planned to lend LaBatte to another team at least for the start of the 1982-83 season.

The Toronto native and former Brown University collegiate star played 308 games with Salt Lake of the Central Hockey League and 22 with the NHL Blues during his six professional seasons.

He scored nine goals and was credited with 29 assists for Salt Lake last season. He became the fifth member of the 1981-82 Eagles' roster to leave the team this summer.

"Coaches are pretty good about scheduling road trips," said Dadds. "But I remember the year we were in the NCAA playoffs, we missed an ungodly amount of time, about three weeks in a row."

Weaver, a punter, said football never kept him from studying and actually worked to his benefit.

"Participating in an intercollegiate sport forced me to discipline myself, to budget my time wisely," he said. "The time on the practice field allowed me to get away from the books for a while. I was able to clear my mind and come back with a fresh attitude toward my studies."

Cooper's Strokes Spark Brewer Victory

By The Associated Press
Different strokes for different folks left Cecil Cooper of the Milwaukee Brewers and Lamar Johnson of the Texas Rangers with different results ... but wearing late-inning smiles.

Cooper was happy after rapping a game-tying two-run homer in the eighth inning and singling home the tie-breaker in the 10th as the Brewers downed the Cleveland Indians 5-2.

After being held to one hit for seven innings by Cleveland's Ed Whitson, the Brewers erased a 2-0 deficit in the eighth on Paul Molitor's single and Cooper's 430-foot home run. Whitson threw Cooper one too many fast balls and paid the price.

"You can't keep doing that to a good hitter," said Cooper, one of the American League's top hitters, who had gone hitless in three at-bats against Whitson last Sunday and was hitless in three more trips Friday night before his dramatic home run. "Sooner or later, you'll get him. If he keeps pumping me fast balls, I'm going to look for one I can drive."

The Rangers, on the other hand, were in the process of losing 6-0 to the New York Yankees when Johnson stepped to the plate with one out remaining. The pitch he saw from Dave LaRoche was anything but a fast ball. Rather, it was the notorious blooper pitch known as "LaLob." Johnson wound up ... swung mightily ... missed for strike three and was next seen rolling in the dirt with laughter.

"Lamar was funny," said LaRoche, just back from his fourth trip of the season to the minors. "They said he started to laugh before the ball even got there, but I didn't see him because I was watching the ball. But when he started to roll on the ground and laugh, I started laughing, too."

Elsewhere Friday, the Kansas City Royals swept a doubleheader from the Baltimore Orioles 3-1 and 4-0, the California Angels topped Seattle 11-9, the Chicago White Sox downed the Boston Red Sox 6-3, the Detroit Tigers blanked the Toronto Blue Jays 6-0 and the Oakland A's beat the Minnesota Twins 4-1 as Rickey Henderson stole his 104th base and tied Maury Wills for second place on the all-time single-season list.

Molitor, who broke up Whitson's no-hit bid in the sixth inning and singled ahead of Cooper's homer in the eighth, singled again to start the Milwaukee 10th against Ed Glynn and continued to second on an error by left fielder Miguel Dilone. Molitor was retired in a rundown on Robin Yount's bunt, but Yount reached second on the play and scored on Cooper's single. Ted Simmons then hit his 18th homer. The victory gave the Brewers a 2½-game lead over Boston in the AL East.

Yankees 6, Rangers 0
Dave Winfield homered and he and Roy Smalley drove in three runs apiece to help Dave Righetti earn his first victory since June 16. Righetti worked 6 1-3 innings, yielding all four Texas hits. LaRoche retired all eight batters he faced. Winfield singled a run home in the fourth inning and Smalley added a two-run single. Winfield hit a two-run homer in the sixth and Smalley had a sacrifice fly in the eighth.

Royals 3-4, Orioles 1-0
U.L. Washington hit two solo home runs and Hal McRae added another as the Royals took the nightcap on a combined six-hitter by Don Hood and Dan Quisenberry. In the opener, George Brett had a solo homer and McRae, the major league leader with 96 runs batted in, contributed an RBI single.

Washington, who had five hits in the twin bill, homered in the first and fifth innings of the nightcap. McRae's homer in the sixth was the 22nd this season off loser Scott McGregor. Dave Frost and Mike Armstrong held Baltimore to five hits in the first game.

Angels 11, Mariners 9
Reggie Jackson's ninth career grand slam and Fred

Lynn's two-run shot highlighted California's eight-run sixth inning that erased a 4-3 deficit. Jackson clubbed his 26th home run of the season off Ed VandeBerg, Seattle's fourth pitcher of the inning, to give the Angels a 9-4 lead. Ron Jackson followed with a single and Lynn ripped his 15th homer for what proved to be the decisive runs. Seattle made it close with four runs in the ninth.

White Sox 6, Red Sox 3
Carlton Fisk belted a three-run homer and Jerry Koons pitched seven innings and picked up his second victory over Boston in six days. It was Chicago's seventh triumph in the last eight games and Boston's sixth loss in its last eight.

Greg Luzinski's RBI single gave the White Sox a 1-0 lead in the first inning. Fisk homered in the third following a walk to Tony Bernazard and a single by Harold Baines. In the fifth, Steve Kemp singled a run across and Chicago got its final run on Mike Squires' pinch double.

Tigers 6, Blue Jays 0
Lance Parrish hit a pair of two-run homers and Chet Lemon added a solo shot to back the four-hit pitching of Jack Morris, who did not allow a Toronto runner beyond first base.

Morris almost lost his shut-out in the fifth inning when umpire Greg Kosc called Jesse Barfield's drive down the left field line a home run. Home plate umpire Nick Bremigan overruled Kosc and called it a foul ball and Barfield then struck out.

A's 4, Twins 1
Minnesota took a 1-0 lead in the first inning on Tom Brunansky's homer off winner Mike Norris. The A's scored twice in the sixth after a fielding error by Twins shortstop Lenny Faedo allowed Henderson to reach first. He stole second, went to third on Dwayne Murphy's fly ball and scored the tying run on Davey Lopes' double. Lopes scored on a single by Jeff Burroughs and Joe Rudi homered in the seventh.

The stolen base by Henderson tied him with Wills, whose 104 steals with the Los Angeles Dodgers in 1962 established a major league record until Lou Brock of St. Louis stole 118 in 1974.

"I try not to think about it. It was just another step tonight. I guess I'm in the No.2 spot now," Henderson said. "It'll be a great joy to pass 118, though."

Agreement Is Reached

DENVER (AP) — All-Pro linebacker Tom Jackson says he has reached agreement in principal with the Denver Broncos but will not end his holdout and sign a new contract with the National Football League team until he talks with fellow linebacker Bob Swenson, who is also holding out.

"Yes, you can say we reached an agreement in principal," Jackson said Friday following talks with the club. "I think at this point it seems viable that I'll be in camp early next week."

Jackson said efforts to reach Swenson failed Friday. Swenson is on a trip in the Wyoming mountains.

"Bob and I have been through this thing (the holdout) together and still are. Before I make any moves I want to talk to Bob and find out his feelings and tell him my feelings as things change minute by minute. I promised Bob I would do that," the 10-year Bronco veteran said.

John Beake, Bronco director of player personnel, said Friday's talks were positive, "but there has been no signing."

Howard Glicksman, Swenson's agent, said there have been no new discussions with the Broncos.

West German Stunned By His Victory

GUAYAQUIL, Ecuador (AP) — Michael Gross of West Germany was stunned after beating a world record-holder from the United States for the second time at the World Swimming Championships.

"It can't possibly be," Gross said Friday night after defeating Craig Beardley of Harrington Park, N.J., in the men's 200-meter butterfly. "What happened to Beardley? I am more surprised now than I was during the 200 freestyle. It can't be true. This is fantastic."

Gross set a world championship meet record of 1 minute, 58.85 seconds, while silver medalist Sergei Fesenko of the Soviet Union was timed in 1:59.91. Beardley faded to third in 2:00.08, more than two seconds off his world-record clocking of 1:58.01.

"I didn't feel like I was moving forward at all," Beardley said. "I don't have any idea what's wrong."

On Sunday night, Gross had defeated Rowdy Gaines of Winter Haven, Fla., in the 200 freestyle, one of Gaines' two world-record specialties.

After Gross' victory and the continued dominance of the East Germans in women's events, U.S. coach Mark Schubert admitted: "We've had a bad meet."

"I guess we have to prove ourselves all over again at the 1984 Olympics," Schubert added.

Birgit Meineke and Kristin Otto won their third gold medals of the meet as East Germany set a world record in the 400 medley relay. In addition, Petra Schneider of East Germany joined Gross as the only athletes at the World Aquatic Games to win two individual golds.

Otto and Meineke swam the backstroke and freestyle legs, respectively, while Ute Geweniger was the breaststroker and Ines Geissler the butterfly on the East German team that broke the world record of its 1980 Olympic foursome by .79 seconds with a time of 4:05.88.

The U.S. team was second in 4:08.12 and the Soviet Union took the bronze medal in 4:12.36.

Schneider, who set a world record in the 400 individual medley Sunday night, barely missed another world mark in the 200 IM. Her time of 2:11.79 was just .06 off Geweniger's standard.

Geweniger won the silver medal and Tracy Caulkins of Nashville, Tenn., captured the bronze.

The only U.S. victory of the night came in the women's 800 freestyle as Kim Linehan of Sarasota, Fla., won the gold in 8:27.48, far ahead of silver medalist Jackie Willmott of Great Britain and Carmela Schmidt of East Germany.

Yet another East German success came in the men's 100 backstroke, where Dirk Richter became the second swimmer to break 56 seconds with his clocking of 55.95. He gold-silver-bronze standings are 10-8-4 for East Germany and 7-6-9 for the Americans.

Schubert said the United States' superior depth has produced an equal number of 1,500 freestyle and 200 individual medals and more finalists. "We have good depth, but we just haven't performed up to our great expectations," he said.

Finals scheduled for the last day of the meet were platform diving, water polo, the men's 1,500 freestyle and 200 individual medley, the men's medley relay and the women's 200 butterfly and 200 backstroke.

Fish The Thermocline — Just where do fish disappear during dog days when birds are panting and dogs' tongues are almost touching the ground? Well, at home you seek out cool spots, out of the sun, and try to get comfortable, right?

That's just what fish do, too. They find shady areas where it's cooler, like back under lily pads, weeds and brush. Or, the bank under overhangs such as undercut banks, deadfalls, logs and piers. Also, they seek deeper, mid-lake water close to the thermocline where it's cooler.

To find the thermocline where fish hang out, tie a thermometer to about a 50-foot string. Lower it a couple of feet at a time and take a reading. Normally the temperature drops about a degree for each foot of depth. But when you hit the thermocline it can drop from five to 10 degrees. When you encounter this, check the depth by your string length, and fish just above the thermocline because that's where the fish may be. If not there, then fish around those shady spots mentioned earlier.

Dove, Woodcock, Gallinules and Rail Seasons Set — The hunting season for doves opens on September 4 and runs through October 9, the opens again on December 13 and runs through January 15. Hunting will be allowed from 12 noon until sunset during the first half of the season, and from one-half hour before sunrise until sunset during the second half of the season. The bag limit is 12 doves daily with 24 in possession. The woodcock season will run from November 12 through January 15 with a daily bag limit of eight birds with 16 in possession. The season on rails and gallinules will run from September 1 through November 9. The daily bag limit for gallinules, clapper and king rails is 15 birds with 30 in possession. The daily bag limit for sora and Virginia rails is 25 birds daily with 25 in possession.

Guidelines Adopted — The Wildlife Commission has adopted guidelines for managing fox populations. Under the new system, petitions including the names of at least 15 percent of the licensed hunters and trappers in a county must be presented to the Wildlife Commission before a county hunting or trapping season for fox may be considered. Then, the Wildlife Commission will conduct a study of the fox populations and recommendations will be developed. These recommendations will be presented at a public hearing in that county. After considering public input, the Wildlife Commission will reach a decision.

Petitions and guidelines for fox seasons are only available through the office of the Director of Field Operations of the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission.

State's Charles Is Charged

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina State University basketball player Lorenzo Charles has been charged with stealing two pizzas from a pizza delivery man, officials said Friday.

Charles, 18, of Brooklyn, N.Y., was charged with larceny from a person, a felony, said Capt. J.J. McGinnis of the N.C. State public safety department.

The incident occurred May 30, but Charles was not charged until July 24, after the pizza delivery man identified the Wolfpack player as the suspect. His trial is scheduled for Monday in Wake District Court.

McGinnis said Charles is accused of stealing the pizzas as they were being delivered to an N.C. State dormitory.

He said the pizzas were forcibly jerked out of the delivery man's hands, although no weapon was involved in the theft and the delivery man was not injured.

The two pizzas and an asbestos bag were valued at $50, McGinnis said.

Charles, who could be sentenced to up to 10 years in prison if convicted, played forward in 24 of the Wolfpack's 32 games last season.

U.S. Romps To Cup Win

DENVER (AP) — They played 18 matches in two days and the United States won 14, resulting in the widest margin of victory in the 50-year history of Curtis Cup golf competition.

The Americans finished with 14½ points and the team from Britain and Ireland had just 3½, evoking apologetic remarks from U.S. team captain Betty Probasco.

"I hate to see the score so lopsided," she said Friday, "but our girls really wanted to win, and I don't think the British would appreciate us easing up."

"I know the British are better players than the score indicates. I think maybe the heat (90 degrees) had a lot to do with it."

The talent of the American squad also had a lot to do with it. Led by two-time U.S. women's amateur champion Juli Inkster, who won all four of her matches over the Denver Country Club layout, the U.S. team was never seriously threatened.

Inkster, 22, of Los Altos, Calif., and veteran Curtis Cup player Carol Semple of Sewickley, Pa., teamed for relatively easy victories in morning foursome matches on Thursday and Friday.

Inkster was plainly invincible in her two afternoon singles matches against Kitrina Douglas, the British women's amateur titleholder, winning both contests 7 and 6.

Kathy Baker, the reigning NCAA women's champion from Tulsa, Okla., recorded three victories after halving her opening match on Thursday. In her singles matches, she prevailed by scores of 7 and 6 the first day and 4 and 3 Friday.

Amy Benz and Cathy Hanlon, teammates at Southern Methodist University who finished 1-2 in the 1982 AIAW championship, teamed for one victory and each won a singles match. Mari McDougall of Midlothian, Ill., won the only two matches she played.

Lancy Smith of Snyder, N.Y., joined Baker to win one foursome match and halved another. And Judith Oliver of Sewickley, Pa., the lone American loser on Thursday, rebounded with a decisive 5-and-4 triumph over Vicki Thomas on Friday.

"This is an exceptionally strong team," said Probasco. "All eight are great players. I've said before that I don't think half of the lady pros on tour could make this team."

The triumph was the 18th for the United States, compared with just two victories for the British, and two ties, and was the Americans' 12th straight decision in this prestigious international competition.

The U.S. squad, which jumped out to a 7½-1½ lead on Thursday, clinched the Cup by winning two of the three foursome matches Friday morning.

Inkster and Semple defeated Jane Connachan and Wilma Aitken 3 and 2, and Baker and Smith shaded Douglas and Janet Soulsby 1-up, with Baker's 10-foot birdie putt on 18 proving to be the clincher. Mary McKenna and Belle Robertson gained one point for the British with a 1-up decision over Benz and Hanlon.

Although the outcome was no longer in doubt, six afternoon singles matches were held as scheduled, and the Americans won five of those.

Inkster carded birdies on the sixth and seventh holes to move to a 5-up advantage over Douglas. Then she won the first three holes on the back side to close out the match. And she did it despite a triple-bogey 7 on the second hole and a double-bogey 7 on the eighth hole.

She was the only golfer in the competition to win all of her matches, but she said that result didn't surprise her. "I came in here wanting to win every match," she said. "Carol and I played very well as a team each morning, and that helped build by confidence for the afternoon."

Baker trimmed Gillian Stewart 4 and 3 for the second U.S. victory of the afternoon. Robertson, of Dunaverty, Scotland, playing in her sixth Curtis Cup, beat Smith 5 and 3 in what was to be the lone British triumph of the afternoon.

With three singles matches remaining to be completed, play was suspended for 55 minutes by lightning and rain. When it resumed, the Americans captured three more matches.

Oliver beat Thomas; Semple edged McKenna 1-up, and McDougall defeated Soulsby 2 and 1.

Soybean Futures Prices

Fall To New Low

By KEITH E. LEIGHTY Associated Press Writer: Soybean futures prices fell to new lows as grain prices suffered a broad decline Friday while livestock and meat prices hit new highs.

Wheat was 2 1/4 cents for 4 cents lower with the contract for delivery in September at $3.43 1/2 a bushel; corn was 4 cents to 4 1/4 cents lower with September at $2.42 a bushel.

Live hog and frozen pork belly futures reached new highs and live and feeder cattle were approaching their highs on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

The strength in cattle was prompted by dwindling supplies of cattle that resulted from an exceptionally large movement of cattle from feedlots to market all week.

Wool prices were supported by strength at the wholesale level despite slaughter levels that were larger than expected, Levitt said.

Freeze pork bellies were frequently turn to precious metals during periods of international conflict.

Gold with the contract for delivery in August at 65.35 cents a pound; feeder cattle were .05 cent to 1.08 cents higher with August at 69.35 cents a pound.

Interest rate futures fell sharply Friday amid concern about the amount of securities auctioned this week by the U.S. Treasury.

Charlotte Firm Is Closing Plant

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Nash International Inc., a Charlotte subsidiary of Aluminum Corp. of America employing more than 100, said Friday the depressed economy is forcing it to close.

Nash, which moved its headquarters from East Palestine, Ohio, to Charlotte in September 1980, said it will begin a phased shutdown of the headquarters and its fabricating plant in Spindale — 60 miles to the west.

The closings are necessary because "of financial losses incurred due to the continuing depressed state of our business," said Nash President Paul Benner.

"We estimate that the shutdown will be complete in the early part of next year," he added.

Nash, which designs and manufactures production equipment for the metalworking industry, has 62 employees in engineering, sales and administration in Charlotte. Another 52 are employed at the Spindale plant in Rutherford County.

William Sidenbury, an analyst with the New York-based brokerage firm of Smith, Barney, Upham Inc., said the weak condition of the nation's metalworking industry probably pushed Nash out of business.

"It looks like a business decision that's predicated on ALCOA closing down a company that produces a product for which there is no market," Sidenbury said, adding that the Pittsburgh-based aluminum company has been selling and closing some of its less profitable operations.

More than 8,000 people have to live in a community before the U.S. government calls it a city.

COOKING IS FUN!

By Cecily Brownstone
AP Food Editor

According to cookbook author Edna Heller, in Pennsylvania Dutch kitchens everything under the sun is put into pies. "There are fruit pies, custard pies, milk pies, wet and dry molasses or brown sugar pies and funny cake pies.

Mrs. Heller gives a recipe for Chocolate Funny Cake Pie and explains its name. She says that to the Pennsylvania Dutch "funny" means out of the ordinary, and funny cake pie is certainly odd because the top layer goes to the bottom. To make it, a vanilla cake batter is added to a pie shell and then a mixture of cocoa, sugar, water and vanilla is poured over the batter.

Recently an inventive cook developed a recipe for Fresh Blueberry Funny Cake Pie to serve a la mode for a lunch or supper dessert. Old-time Pennsylvania Dutch folk would have enjoyed it for breakfast — served plain.

This funny cake pie has a blueberry sauce folded into the batter rather than poured over the top. It is a sturdy offering, not at all rich.

FRESH BLUEBERRY FUNNY CAKE PIE
2 cups fresh blueberries, washed and drained
3/4 cup sugar
2 tablespoons lemon juice

1 1/4 cups fork-stirred all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 cup butter
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 large egg
1/2 cup milk

Unbaked 9-inch pie shell
In a medium saucepan, over moderate heat, gently stir together the blueberries, 1/2 cup of the sugar and the lemon juice until the sugar dissolves and the mixture simmers. Let this sauce stand off heat to cool to lukewarm.

In a medium bowl cream the butter with the remaining 1/4 cup sugar and the vanilla; add the egg and beat until blended. Add the flour mixture in 2 additions, alternately with the milk, beating gently each time just until smooth. Fold in the lukewarm blueberry mixture just enough to marble. Pour into the unbaked pie shell.

Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in the center comes out clean — 30 to 35 minutes. Serve warm.

Makes 8 servings.

Wife Mistakes Lack Of Valor

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Yesterday my husband and I were at the beach with our two daughters. We were just sitting there, minding our own business, when two couples parked themselves near us, using the filthiest language imaginable. They seemed to be deliberately hanging around, trying to provoke some kind of reaction from us.

My husband did not utter one word of reprimand, or let them know he objected to their gutter talk in the presence of me and our daughters. I was so humiliated I wanted to burst out crying and hitchhike home.

I lost some of my respect for my husband. This is not the first time he sat there like a mouse instead of speaking up like a man. It's a good thing I didn't have a gun, or I'd be in jail right now.

Am I wrong to feel let down and disappointed?
DEPRESSED IN NEW ORLEANS

DEAR DEPRESSED: If these filthy-talking people were deliberately trying to provoke your husband into a fight, I think he was wise to have ignored them. Would you have "respected" your husband more if he had taken them on and been beaten (or worse) in the presence of your children? Furthermore, these days you never know who is "high" on what, or if a switchblade, gun or lead pipe will be used to help settle an argument. (P.S. You could have moved.)

DEAR ABBY: My husband is from a foreign country where it is acceptable to visit people in their homes uninvited and unannounced, even to stay overnight for an entire weekend. This is hard for me to deal with, as I am a private person and enjoy a calm, organized atmosphere in my home.

When one pair of my husband's relatives began coming frequently for weekends, I spoke with them frankly, telling them that they were welcome nearly any time but to please phone a couple of days ahead to make sure we had made no previous plans.

Well, all this did was to alienate them (temporarily) so that they did not visit for six months, after which they resumed their old pattern.

This is very irksome, not to mention inconvenient, when we've made other plans. My husband agrees that it's rather inconsiderate of them, but it doesn't seem to bother him as it does me. What should I do?

INVADED

DEAR INVADED: Speak "frankly" with the couple again and hope for another six months' respite. Do this twice a year and you'll have no problem.

I would like to know in which country (since the invention of the telephone) is it acceptable to drop in uninvited and unannounced for the weekend.

DEAR ABBY: "S.B. of Mountain View, Calif." writes that "If the good Lord had intended for us to go around naked, he would have created us that way."

Gee whiz! I thought he (she?) did. Course, that mean old serpent came along, so I suppose we will just have to leaf it that way.

L.E.B., MIDLAND, TEXAS

DEAR L.E.B.: I could quote from Genesis here, but perhaps I'd better leaf well enough alone.

Beacham-Branch Vows Solemnized

WINTERVILLE — The wedding of Patricia Elaine Branch and Ronnie Earl Beacham was solemnized in the Rose Hill Free Will Baptist Church near here Saturday at four o'clock in the afternoon.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Asa Glin Branch of Route 13, Greenville. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard A. Beacham of Route 11, Greenville.

A double-ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Leon Harris, pastor of the bride.

A program of nuptial music was presented by Mrs. Delano Wilson, pianist and Mrs. David Haddock, who sang "We've Only Just Begun," "Endless Love" and "The Wedding Prayer" as a benediction.

The altar of the church was decorated with green palms. Cathedral candles in seven-branched brass candelabra on the sides and a 15 brass candelabra in the background were used. The candelabra were decorated with lilies of the valley and greenery.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a chapel-length gown of sheer polyester chiffon knit lined in acetate taffeta. The neckline featured a Queen Anne design with lace applique and simulated pearl accents. The bishop sleeves were of sheer lace and the gown had an empire waistline. Her veil was also chapel-length to match the gown with a blusher of nylon netting with lace trim. She carried a silk cascade bouquet of nicotiana, dutch irises, lilies and lilies of the valley tied with streamers of white satin ribbons.

Elaine Harrington of Greenville was maid of honor. She wore a scooped ruffled light yellow chiffon floor length gown. Her bouquet consisted of silk yellow and white carnations with white net and satin ribbons.

Bridemaids were Tammy Beacham, sister of the bridegroom, and Judy Godwin of Greenville. They wore floor length gowns of pink crepe chiffon floral over taffeta lining which featured an empire waistline with sheer butterfly sleeves. Their bouquets were designed like that of the maid of honor.

Janice Beacham, cousin of the bridegroom, was the flower girl. She wore a floor length dress of white eyelet featuring an empire waistline tied with a pink ribbon and ruffled at the bottom. She carried a basket filled with flower petals.

Aron Adams, cousin of the bride, was the ring bearer and carried a white heart-shaped satin pillow.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man. Ushers included Asa Glenn Branch Jr., brother of the bride, and David James of Greenville.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Branch wore a violet polyester linen two-piece street length dress. Her corsage was a white silk orchid.

The mother of the bridegroom also wore a street length dress and a white silk orchid.

A reception was hosted by the parents of the bride, along with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Westbrook of Ayden, aunt and uncle of the bride, and Mr. and Mrs. Adrian Adams of Greenville, cousins of the bride, and was held in the fellowship building following the ceremony.

A rehearsal dinner was hosted by the parents of the bride and bridegroom, relatives, and friends after the wedding rehearsal on Friday evening for the wedding party and families.

The wedding was directed by Mrs. Adrian Adams Jr. of Greenville.

The bride is a graduate of D.H. Conley High School and Pitt Community College where she received a degree in cosmetology. She is employed at Branch's Beauty Salon. The bridegroom attended North Pitt High School and is employed with Pitt Electric.

After a wedding trip to unannounced points, the couple will reside at Route 13, Greenville.

Teacher with Masters Degree in special education and 13 years experience desires more remunerative 12 month employment. Ambitious, willing to work hard, single, child to support, future to look towards. Would love to work with the public.

Pitt School Children Honor Late Superintendent Ott Alford

A CUT-OUT FIGURE... by Lou Evans

PEN AND INK... drawing, Kevin Barrett

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer
Three young artists, students in Pitt County schools, have each contributed an example of their school year art as a visual memorial to the late Ott Alford, superintendent of the Pitt County school system until shortly before his death earlier this year.

The three works were given to the Greenville Museum of Art, 802 S. Evans St. They are being framed and will become part of the Children's Collection of the museum.

A number of students offered their work for consideration as choices for the memorial to Alford. Mary Anne Pennington, executive director of the museum, chose three pieces, one each to represent a typical work from children in the primary, elementary and junior high school levels. A work from the high school level will be chosen later.

The three students whose work has been selected for the Alford Memorial are:

•Lou Evans, a first grader at the Sam D. Bundy School in the past school year. The piece is a cut-out work of the figure of a person. Teacher, Beth Gomes.

•Denita Edwards, a mixed media work of paper and cloth. Denita was a fifth grade student last year at

H.B. Sugg School, and her teacher was Mary Helen Meyer.

•Kevin Barrett, a seventh grader last year at the Farmville Middle School. His work is a pen and pencil drawing of a plant. Cynthia Rowshan was Kevin's teacher.

"The children's art is a fitting memorial to Mr. Alford," Ms. Pennington said. "He was deeply concerned about children's education as well as art in the schools. These works are also a welcome and delightful addition to our collection of children's art," she added.

The three works will be on display at the museum after they have been framed.

Book News

BY HANSEY JONES

What better companion for a lazy summer afternoon than a good book — especially one by a favorite author. Young readers in the middle grades are sure to welcome with remembered pleasure several new novels recently published by popular and long-time favorites among writers of children's books.

"Journey to an 800 Number" by E. L. Konisburg (author of the Newbery Award winner "From the Mixed-Up Files of Mrs. Basil E. Frankweiler") is as intriguing as its title. When Maximilian Stubbs' mother marries again she sends him away to stay with his father while she is on her first-class honeymoon cruise.

Max's father is a camel keeper. Max does not like the camel, nor the fact that his father is a camel-keeper; and he definitely does not appreciate having to share a less than first-class way of life. In the course of the month he spends with his father, Max visits a variety of unusual places and meets a variety of unusual people. By the end of his visit he has discovered some new things about the meaning of first-class. Also, about kindness, love, loyalty, and the art of pretending. People and events, Max finds, are not always what they seem.

In a delightful combination of the ordinary and the fabulous, Ms. Konisburg provides an excellent backdrop for examining values and questioning actions that might generally go unexamined in the usual routine of life. The book is thoughtful, well-written and — best of all — fun to read.

Encyclopedia Brown fans will be standing in line for the latest adventures of "America's Sherlock Holmes in Sneakers." In "Encyclopedia Brown Sets the Pace," author Donald Sobol presents 10 new cases in which the boy detective finds the man who stole the valuable Ignazio Saracco painting; discovers who swiped the tape for Hilbert Capp's hit-song-to-be (called "I've Been Crying Over You Since you Fell Into the Well"); traps the runner who cheated Cicero Sturgess out of last place in Idaville's marathon, and routs Bugs Meany's effort to avenge himself on his arch foe.

In these and six additional escapades, Encyclopedia challenges readers to find the clues and solve the mysteries before turning to the solutions at the end of the book — a welcome challenge to loyal followers.

History Museum Closed Sundays

RALEIGH — The N.C. Museum of History is now closed on Sundays as well as on Mondays, according to a statement released by Sara W. Hodgkins, secretary of the Department of Cultural Resources.

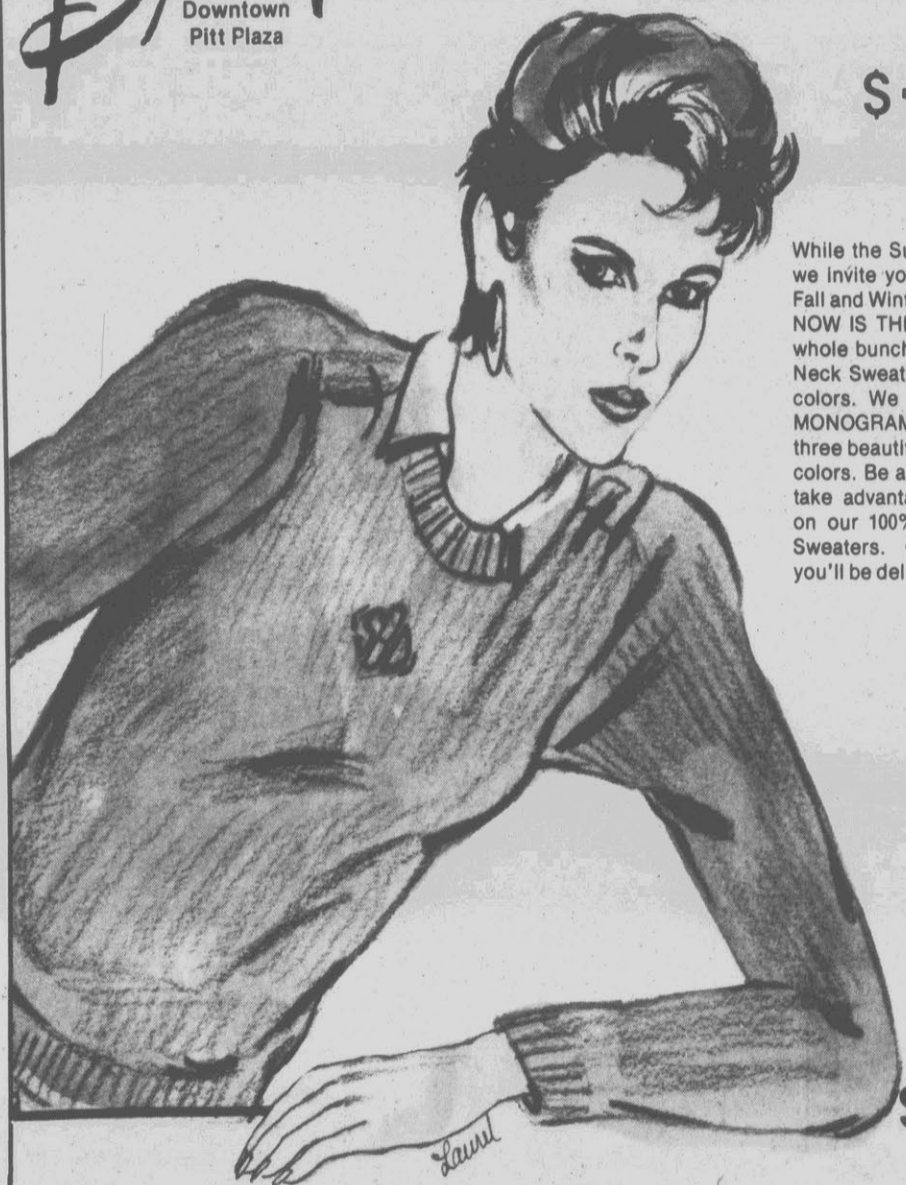

"Our security staff is simply not large enough to protect our rapidly growing museum collections and to secure a building of 121,980 square feet over a six-day week," she said. Saying it is with regret the step is taken, Mrs. Hodgkins added, "We hope that this is merely an interim measure until our staff can be expanded."

Two Hyde County Women Work A String Of 246 Crab Pots

By JIM TYLER
Division of Marine Fisheries
ROSE BAY—Hyde County's Belinda Pittman is a petite lady who works barefooted in a boat here doing a man's work.

Belinda and her sister-in-law, Vickie, have been fishing a string of 246 crab pots here just about every Monday through Friday mornings since May.

Belinda said they "have been doing just as good as this summer as the rest of the guys." Trevor Sears, Scranton, who was helping her the morning of July 28 because Vickie was sick, said the two ladies "have been beating most of the guys."

They averaged 900-1,000 pounds of blue crabs a day—some 4,000 crabs.

Belinda's husband bought the 19-foot Sea Ox with a 50 horsepower outboard engine in the spring. The pots were included in the purchase. Cost of fuel (seven to eight gallons a day) and bait is taken off the top, then the boat, Belinda and Vickie each get a share of the profits. Crabbers were getting 18¢ a pound for crabs in some areas last week.

It is work. Stoop work. Stretch work. Repetitious work. Although a two foot square chicken-wire mesh crab pot weighs only five to six pounds, it offers a lot of resistance when dragged through the water, especially with a load of five or more pounds of crabs.

Here is the routine the ladies perform 264 times each morning. One lady steers the boat alongside a buoy. At the same time the other lady grabs the 15-foot long buoy rope and pulls the pot to the surface. The boat, which never quits going forward, is placed in a circle pattern to reduce the effort of pulling the pot in. When a pot is aboard, a trap door is opened alongside a top edge of the trap, and the pot is shaken several times to get the crabs out of the two-level compartments and into a 100-pound capacity wood box. The pot is baited and thrown overboard just before the boat arrives at the next buoy some 100 feet distance. There is rhythm and set procedures to keep the action smooth and continuous.

Belinda pulls half the pots, Vickie the other. Figure seven heaves on the rope to pull 10 pounds of pot and crabs out of 10-foot deep water, shake the pot five times, and heave it back overboard. Each lady lifts at least 15,000 pounds a day. "It is a great way to lose weight," Belinda said. "It will drop off of you."

Belinda, 5-foot-3, 105 pounds, is a rookie this year. Vickie has been pulling pots for three years. Belinda said her body was so sore when she started that when she went home after the first day and her sister asked how her day was, she said, "I opened my mouth and couldn't say a word."

There is sun. Fresh air. And there can be stings from jellyfish that get caught in the pot or tangled on the buoy-rope. Belinda likes to wear shorts. She said the sting only burns her legs for a little while.

Belinda lives in Washington. She gets up at 4:30 a.m., makes the hour and a quarter drive to Germantown Bay and is out on the water by 6:15. Their pots are about five miles from the dock. Vickie lives in nearby Scranton. Both husbands are from Scranton, and both do some potting, too. It takes about five hours each day to fish the pots. When the boat is loaded it takes about an hour to get back to shore, opposed to fifteen minutes to get there in the early morning.

Belinda has been a secretary and a dental assistant.

She had never worked on a boat before so it has all been new. She cannot swim. She said there are times when she enjoys it and times when she would rather be at home.

Daughter Anna, 12, goes along occasionally, and helps when she can. Anna is very cautious of the crabs that accidentally spill on the deck and scurry about. Belinda said she herself was scared of them, and it took a good month before she would touch one. Surprisingly, not one pincer has found her bare feet.

The ladies have only missed one day since May because of bad weather. An orthodontist appointment for Anna was another. Missed days have been few.

Royal Characters Greet Visitors At New Bern's Tryon Palace

CAROLINIANS PERFORM IN NEW YORK — Jeff Hankinson of Aiken, S.C., and Paige Whitley of Charlotte perform in "Jazz Is," a production of the North Carolina School of the Arts. The performance at New York's Battery Park was one of the first in a nationwide tour by the troupe's 25 NCSA students and alumni. (AP Laserphoto)

By GLENN MAYS
N.C. Division of Travel and Tourism

NEW BERN—The colorful history of Tryon Palace has come to life again this summer through characters representing the period when North Carolina was still in its infancy.

Five characters, including the secretary to progressive royal governor William Tryon, greet visitors to this reconstructed royal household.

Tryon's secretary, Isaac

Edwards, greets guests at the palace entrance to share some of his political views of that troubled time when North Carolinians were growing more and more upset with the laws being imposed by England. Edwards is portrayed by Peter Norton of New Bern.

Samuel Cornell, a late 18th century merchant of New Bern, relates the story of the palace's construction and how the town grew only to be devastated in 1796 by a major storm. Cornell is played by New Bern resident Mark Bristol.

Welcoming visitors to the palace kitchen area is Molly Thatcher who voices concern over things happening in New Bern during the time of Governor Tryon and his successor Josiah Martin. Her comments are not without humor of the times either.

Nancy Blades of New Bern, who directs the five characters, plays the Molly Thatcher role.

Steve Oien of New Bern is a returnee from last year as sea captain Joseph Rilee, who recounts his memories of this burgeoning town in the late 18th century as well as what it was like sailing the high seas during that period.

Lynn Barnhardt of Hickory portrays Maggie Rilee, Joseph Rilee's daughter, who was a maid in a New Bern home at the time.

The five characters provide a progressive commentary of the times from the 1770s to about 1820 as they talk to visitors at points along the walking guided tour of the palace complex.

The performances will continue through Labor Day.

Dramatic Moment

Guest Playwright Coming August 18th

Susan Vick, a Tar Heel native playwright now living and working in Amherst, Mass., is to have one of her one-act plays performed at noon Wednesday, Aug. 18, as the monthly presentation by the Best Ever Lunch Theater at the Greenville Museum of Art, 802 S. Evans St.

Catherine Rhea-Darby of Greenville, who has directed an earlier production at the Best Ever Lunch Theater, will direct Ms. Vick's play. There is no admission charged, and the public is invited.

Christine Rusch, coordinator of programs for the Best Ever Theater, says this is the first out-of-area guest playwright to have a work presented here.

The play to be presented is entitled "Ord-Way Ames-Gay." This play, along with another play by Ms. Vick, "When I Was Your Age," have been given staged readings by the Ensemble Studio Theater of New York City. "Ord" was also produced in Ensemble's Marathon '82 production, which was videotaped for the Theater Collection Archives, New York Public Library, Performing Arts Research Center, Lincoln Center.

Other achievements by Ms. Vick include an original libretto for an opera, "Zachaeus," with music by David McKay. A Boston production is planned for 1983, and the opera was sung in Worcester this past May.

Currently, she is at work on a full length play based upon the life of Amanda McKittrick Ros; a short play for two women and five puppets, "Quandary;" and a full length play based on the lives of several women, "Investments."

Ms. Vick is on the faculty at Worcester Polytechnic Institute, and spends summers working at The Common School in Amherst where she directs the Theater Workshop, which presents Shakespeare productions using as cast members children of elementary school age.

Ms. Vick is also a member of the board of directors of The Women's Community Theater of Amherst Inc., which recently staged her adaptation, in collaboration with Sarah Dreher, of Eudora Welty's "Why I Live at the P.O."

A native of Raleigh, Ms. Vick attended Needham Broughton High School and holds an A.B. degree from Catawba College, Salisbury. She earned the M.F.A. degree from Southern Methodist University and the Ph.D

from the University of Illinois, Urbana. She has served on the faculty at the University of Illinois, the University of Tennessee, Bowdoin College and Appalachian State University.

The Best Ever Lunch Theater is made possible under the auspices of the East Carolina Art Society, governing body of the Greenville Museum of Art, with coordination by the museum's executive director, Mary Anne Pennington. The theater is partially funded by the Playwright Fund Inc. of North Carolina.

NEW DUKES — Bryon Cherry, 25, left, and Christopher Mayer, 28, stand on the set of CBS' "The Dukes of Hazzard" after they were introduced to the media at Burbank Studios in Los Angeles. The virtually unknown actors have signed to star in the top-rated series, replacing John Schneider and Tom Wopat who left the show after a contract dispute. (AP Laserphoto).

New Series Of Awards

By LEE COMEGYS
NEW YORK (UPI) — To provide recognition for American black women who achieve success, a new series of awards is being created.

The National Coalition of 100 Black Women, under the leadership of Jewell Jackson McCabe, has announced the Candace Awards — "the Academy Awards for black women."

"There are too few black women in the media and print journalism, reflecting where we are, where we come from and where we're going in this society as black women," Ms. McCabe says. "Even though history gets confused in this country, we do come from a history steeped in greatness."

"Candace" was the ancient Ethiopian title for empress or queen — a reminder of black female power and accomplishment dating back to 332 B.C. Linking the title with the award is an appropriate symbol, says Ms. McCabe, "to show there has been a continuity of excellence for black women."

WOOW Classics

A very varied musical gumbo is being served up on the melodic menu prepared by hostess Karen Hause for her WOOW Classics program airing from 8 p.m. to midnight tonight. The weekly program is aired over WOOW Radio, 1340 on the radio dial, and can also be heard over Channel 9, Cable TV network.

Selections for tonight are:

•8 to 9 p.m. — Bach's "Brandenburg Concerto No. 6," the Marlboro Festival Orchestra with Pablo Casals; "Concerto for Three Horns and Strings" by Telemann, Richard Dunn conducting the Sinfonietta featuring hornists James Stagliano, Arthur Berv and James Buffington; Mozart's "Mass in C Major, (The Coronation Mass)," the London Symphony conducted by Colin Davis with the John Allis Choir.

•9 to 10 p.m. — Handel's "Concerto in F Major for Organ and String Orchestra," the Schola Cantorum Basiliensis conducted by August Wenzinger; and Brahms' "Concerto in D Major for Violin and Orchestra," Nathan Milstein, violinist and the Vienna Philharmonic conducted by Eugen Jochum.

•10 to 11 p.m. — The "String Quartet, Opus 18, No. 6" by Bach, performed by the Vegh Quartet; the "Dance Suite for Terpsichore" by Praetorius, with Fritz Neumeier conducting the Collegium Terpsichore; Copland's "Four Dances" with the New York Philharmonic conducted by Leonard Bernstein.

•11 p.m. to midnight — Rossini's "La Gazza Ladra (The Thieving Magpies)," Carlo Maria Giulini and the Philharmonia Orchestra; and Tchaikovsky's "Symphony No. 6, (The Pathétique)," Herbert von Karajen conducting the Berlin Philharmonic.

HANOVER, N.H. (UPI) —

The Hopkins Center opened its July 20-Aug. 29 Dartmouth Players' Repertory Season with "A Midsummer Night's Dream," which will be joined by Ray Lawler's "Summer of the 17th Doll," O'Casey's "The Plough and the Stars" and a double bill of Cervantes' "The Cave of Salamanca" and Sophocles' satyr play "The Searching Satyrs."

COME UP AND SEE HER SOMETIME — A Robot designer Shuichi Mizuno says motors allow movement of the limbs and a range of facial expressions. Each costs about $60,000, and Mizuno says he is now working on a new model that can hold a conversation with passersby. (AP Laserphoto)

LAS VEGAS (UPI) —

The first production of the Broadway hit "42nd Street" to be seen west of Chicago will open at the 1,200-seat Circus Maximus theater of Caesar's Palace next May for a limited run. It took nearly a year of negotiations before Broadway producer David Merrick agreed to terms.

Arts Council Fellowship Winners Exhibition On View At GMA

"GULLY, 1979" ... by Maud F. Gatewood, is an acrylic on canvas painting. Gatewood and three other artists who were recipients of the 1980 N.C. Arts Council Fellowship awards have examples of their work included in a traveling show now at the Greenville Museum of Art.

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer
The traveling exhibition of art by the four recipients of the 1980-81 North Carolina Arts Council Artist Fellowship is currently on view at the Greenville Museum of Art, 802 S. Evans St. The show will be on view through August.

In 1978, the North Carolina Arts Council developed a long range plan which incorporated a Fellowship Program designed for artists living in North Carolina with at least five years professional experience in their field.

Council awards of $5,000 each are given annually — every other year (on even-numbered years) awards are given to persons in the visual arts — with awards going on odd-numbered years to writers, composers and choreographers.

The $5,000 awards are to be used by recipients to allow them time for work and money to buy material in order to pursue their work.

The show currently at the Greenville Museum of Art represents efforts by the four as a result of being 1980 winners. Two of the winners of that year are native born Tar Heel women. The two men who were chosen to receive the awards are natives of other states who now make North Carolina home. The four are:

• Victor Faccinto, born in California, now living in Winston-Salem where he is an instructor in the art department at Wake Forest University. Faccinto is showing several examples of masks and small colorful images. In the catalog accompanying the show, Faccinto notes about these pieces, "They sing back to me, with stories of past thoughts and feelings ... if a little piece, here and there, relates to your own life or fantasies. Wonderful! We share something, and that is enough."

• Maud Gatewood, now living in Yanceyville, is a professor and coordinator in the art department at Averett College in Danville, Va. Her paintings are realistic, yet composed stylistically in a manner that results in a more formal presentation than normally characterizes realism. Commenting on her attitude to her work, Ms. Gatewood says "High flown statements bore me. I feel better when I'm working. I feel best when I think I've produced an exceptional piece."

• Burnsville artist Robert Levin, born in Maryland, shows a delightful collection of small, exquisitely shaped and colored glass pieces. From 1976-1980 the resident glassblower at the Penland School of Crafts in Penland, Levin's work convey a 19th century whimsy combined with modern techniques of glassworks. In his catalog note, Levin remarks "My work is an attempt to fuse my own aesthetic with the older, more traditional approach to glass. I try to combine lightness with the elegance and sense of movement which I feel are inherent properties of hot glass."

• Chapel Hill photographer Elizabeth Matheson is the fourth of the 1980 quartet of Fellowship recipients. She is the editorial assistant in the publications office at Duke University and is a native North Carolinian. The photographs she has included in this show are marked by strong lines in the design elements, and a dramatic play of dark and light areas. "Most of my photographs are made near the sea and my work has become a very personal documentation of coastal places," she notes in the catalog. "I photograph what delights me and what seems to be asking for my attention ... looking for the place in which something seems about to happen, the space between events."

This show, in the museum's South Galleries, provides an intimate look at the work of four creative persons. It is revealing, both individually and collectively as directions in which Tar Heel art is taking today.

Summer Show Up At EEii's

BELHAVEN — Four artists have their work on view during the summer months at EEii's little KORNERS of the World art gallery in Belhaven.

The four are Annyce Alvarez, who shows paintings; Tonda and Joe Jeffcoat, pottery; and Ben Casey, photography.

• Ms. Alvarez, a Raleigh painter, explores the world of natural life in her paintings, often using a large canvas to project a single flower. She has exhibited at the N.C. Museum of Art and in an invitational show at SECCA among other places.

• Joe and Tonda Jeffcoat of Wilson work as a team to create three-dimensional ceramic works. They make earth tone pots that are suitable as works of art as well as having a functional value. Both are graduates of Atlantic Christian College.

• Nashville photographer Ben Casey, also a graduate of Atlantic Christian College in Wilson, is showing a series of photo silkscreens. His subjects are drawn basically from the land and landscape of eastern North Carolina, things like bare trees, abandoned barns, and gulls flying over waves.

The public is invited to view this exhibition at EEii's, and there is no admission charged.

More Foundation Sites Uncovered At Historic Somerset Place Plantation

Cypress Floaters

POINTS TO CYPRESS FLOATERS . . . Tom Funk, Chief Archaeologist for Historic Sites in North Carolina, points to cypress logs serving as floaters beneath a chimney foundation being excavated at Somerset Place. With Funk are (at center), Esther Read, an archaeology graduate of Southern Illinois University, and Ann Smart, a graduate of Duke who majored in history and archaeology.

Text And Photographs By Jerry Raynor

Eastern North Carolina rains are one of the drawbacks, the major natural one in fact, that archaeologists must deal with in excavation work.

Tom Funk, chief archaeologist for historic sites in North Carolina, is well aware of the frequency and the often suddenness of summer showers. He kept his eye on thick clouds overhead as he talked about the current summer excavation project he heads at Somerset Place on the shores of Lake Phelps south of Creswell in Washington County, 76 miles northeast of Greenville. Sheets of heavy duty plastic lay spread out near each excavated pit, ready to be spread over digs if raindrops started to fall.

"It's been a good summer, we've accomplished a lot," Funk said. "I've had as many as 20 assistants at a time helping out on the digs.

Next week (Aug. 2-7) I expect 23 or 24 students be on hand here. That will be our final week of work this summer."

Somerset Place, a spacious 14-room country house with three upper and three lower porches, was built by Josiah Collins in the 1830s on a plantation site inherited from his grandfather. For three decades, Somerset Place was the most fashionable gathering place on the southern shore of the Albemarle Sound for the area's plantation society.

To maintain the large agricultural enterprise — corn was the chief crop — and to staff the house, gardens and kitchen of Somerset Place, Collins had a labor force of more than 300 slaves. Somerset was one of only four plantations in eastern North Carolina staffed with a slave population of that size. The Civil War and the abolishment of slavery spelled an end to the lavish, aristocratic lifestyle at Somerset Place. Through the remainder of the 19th century and well into the 20th century, Somerset Place deteriorated. A few years ago steps were taken to restore the Early Greek Revival style house, the only building remaining of the original complex of buildings. Several buildings have been reconstructed on known plans.

Excavation work now being carried out each summer is an effort to uncover the foundations of a number of buildings known to exist earlier. These include slave quarters, a slave chapel, hospital, kitchen and several other buildings, all in the close vicinity of the plantation house.

"Last year," Funk said, "we uncovered the foundations of two buildings each measuring 18 by 21 feet, based on information contained in an old map.

"We are now in the process of uncovering five more buildings, parallel to and behind the sites of earlier uncovered buildings," Funk added. "The location of these buildings have been confirmed by aerial infra-red photography, so that we are able to use probes to determine the location of foundations."

In this summer's work, carried out with the help of college students who pay to be a part of the team and who get credit for the work, Funk said that "three building foundations have been uncovered.

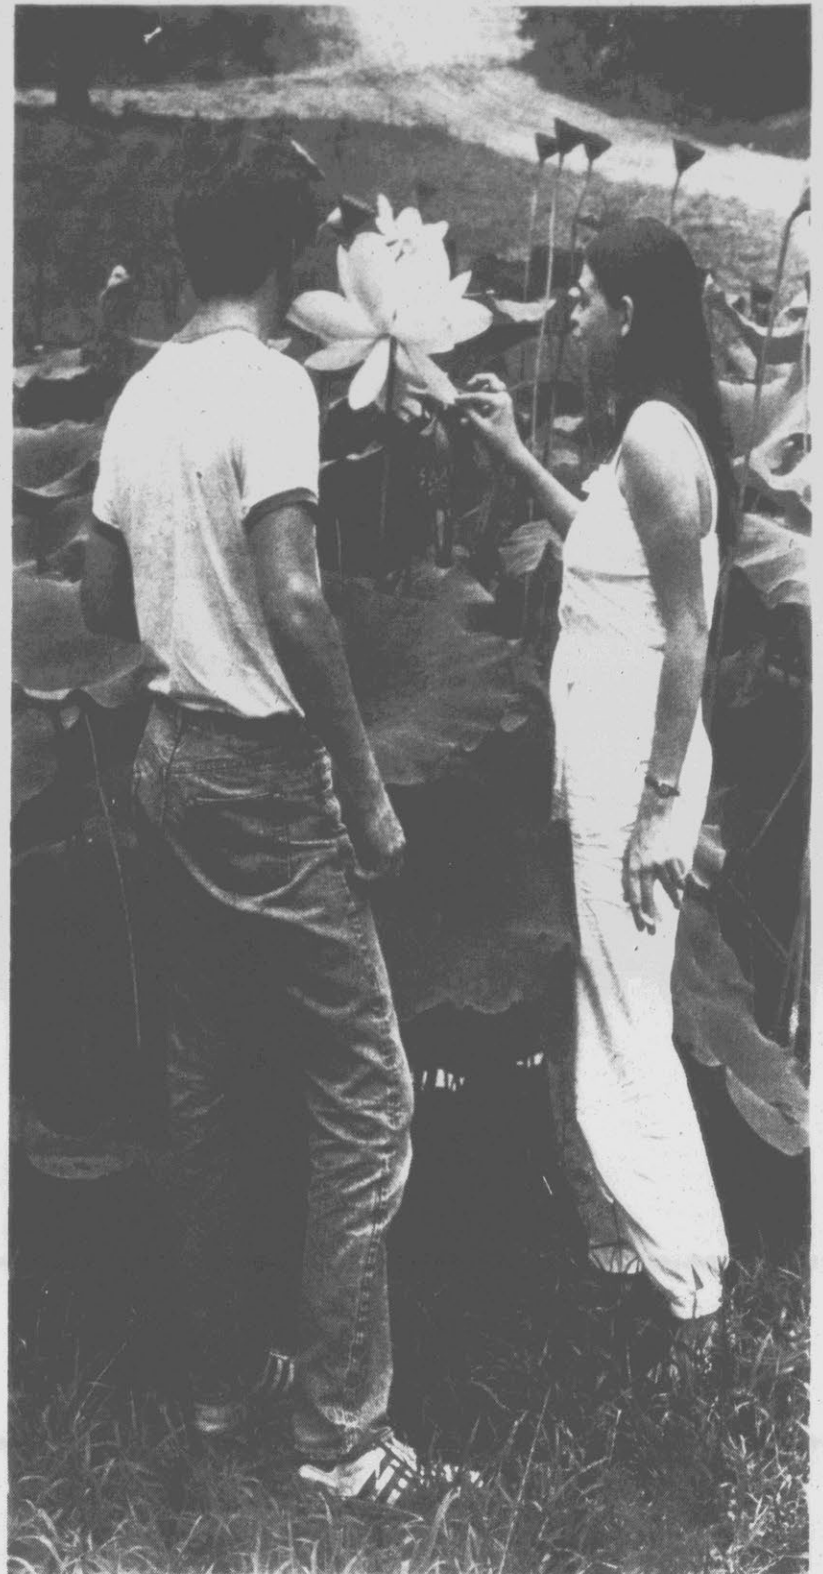

"This particular one," he pointed to a chimney structure uncovered in a pit, "is of unusual interest in that it's a good example of the use of cypress logs placed beneath the brick base. The logs serve as a floating device to keep the brick base level as settling takes place, an important factor because of the soft, unstable soil in this area." The cypress floaters are still unrotted, affirming the reputation of cypress as a durable wood.

Students on the project this year come from Duke, N.C. State University, Lenoir-Rhyne College, Duke Technical Institute and a few from other institutions, including one ECU graduate.

"We hope soon to have funds to go into a full time project on the Somerset excavation," Funk said. "We've got a fine start and it would be good to get on with it."

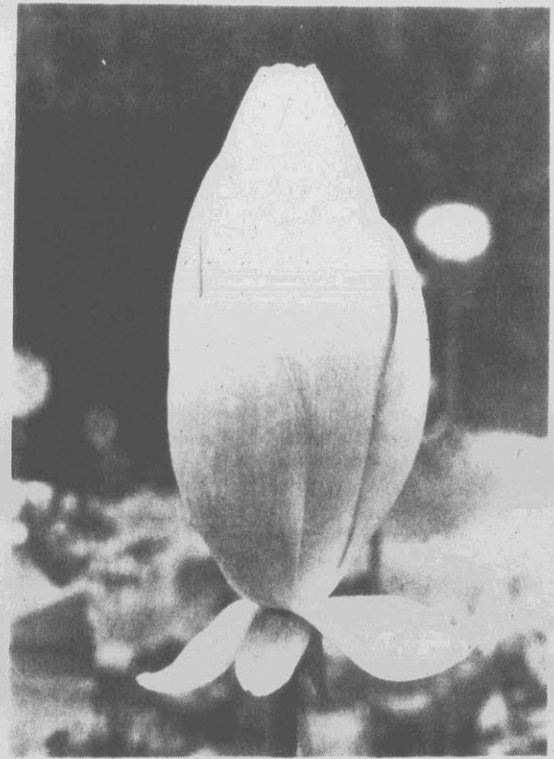

Funk's explanation was cut short. As the sky darkened and a few raindrops fell, all members of the archaeological team worked with military precision to pull heavy plastic over the open pits. And just in time. Minutes later the deluge came.

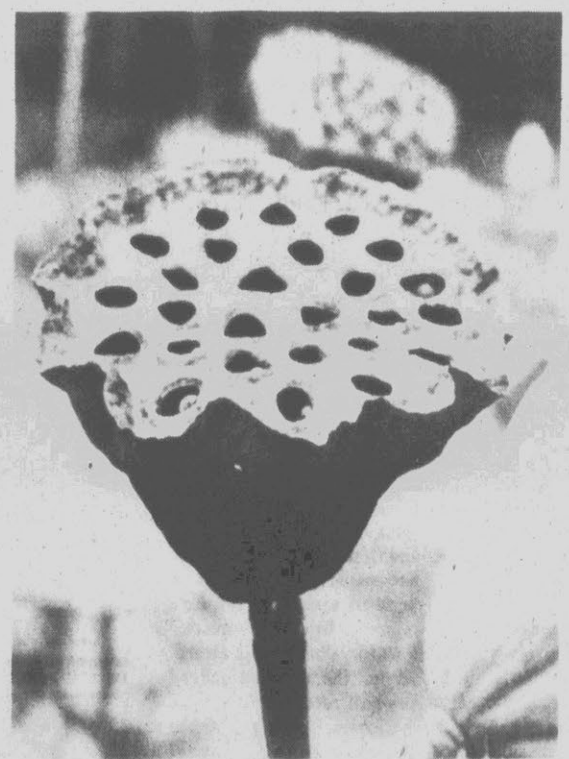

Giant Lotus In Kitty Hawk

. . . A lotus with colorful flowers 10 inches across on five-foot plus tall stalks are not the common water lilies usually encountered in eastern North Carolina. A home pond filled with attractive lotus plants shown here is located in the corner of a yard in Kitty Hawk on the North Carolina's Outer Banks. Doug

Stewart and Denise Raynor admire a lotus blossom with its delicate shades of white, cream and pink. The circular leaves of the plant grow to about 24 inches in diameter. The two photographs below are of a six-inch high bud ready to open and a seed pod with its interesting pattern of circular holes.

Photographs By Jerry Raynor

ECU GRADUATE . . . Bill Herring, who majored in history and archaeology, is part of this year's team from the state. Herring is lab supervisor in the Raleigh office dealing with archaeological sites in North Carolina.

Yesterday's Cryptiquip — WE TOOK A SPILL WHILE WATERSKIING IN THE SPARKLING LAKE.
Today's Cryptiquip clue: G equals T.

The Cryptiquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF

DEAR MR. GOREN

Q.—My partner claims that he isn't getting the right response from me. We had a disagreement the other evening over this hand:
♠xxx ♥xxx ♦Ax ♣Ax
After my partner opened the bidding with one heart, I responded one no trump. Partner criticized me for not bidding two hearts. Was he correct?—Robert L. Jaffe, Skokie, Ill.

(This question has been awarded the weekly prize.)
A.—Frankly, I don't think there's much to choose between the two bids. If you were to pin me down and force me to select one, I would go with two hearts. This is why:
First of all, your values are in ace. Hands with prime values tend to play better in a suit contract than in no trump. With "soft" values, I might have preferred one no trump. For example, I would respond one no trump with:
♠Jxx ♥xxx ♦QJxx ♣KJ
Next, I have a ruffing value in clubs. If I raised partner's hearts and partner then made a move, I would be happy to accept despite the fact that I have only three-card support. I am close to a maximum raise to two hearts. On the other hand, had I responded one no trump and partner then raised to two no trump, I am not sure I would go on to game with any degree of confidence.

Last, when you are near the top of your range for any particular bid, you should choose the bid that is most likely to encourage partner. Partner will surely find a raise of his major suit more encouraging than a one no trump response.

What if partner has opened a four-card major? That's his business. However, I would protect by bidding three no trump should he make any game try. That should get the message across that I have a maximum raise with only three trumps.

Q.—Can you use the "skip-bid" warning in rubber bridge as well as duplicate?—E. Turek, Downers Grove, Del.

A.—Since many readers are not familiar with this term, let me explain the purpose of a skip-bid warning.
Before making a jump bid, a player announces: "I am going to make a skip bid. Please wait." It is then incumbent on the next player to wait approximately ten seconds before taking any action, even if he has an absolute bust and would not have contemplated any action.
This device is designed to protect everyone's rights. No one need tip his hand by taking some time for thought when suddenly confronted with a preemptive bid.
I think this idea should be used in rubber bridge. At most of the world's fine rubber bridge clubs, particularly New York's Cavendish Club, it is standard procedure.

Send any questions for this column to: Charles Goren and Omar Sharif, care of this newspaper. Each week a prize of a copy of the new "Goren's Bridge Complete," a $9.95 value, will be awarded for the question judged the best received.

Riding Program Helps Handicapped

TRENTON, S.C. (AP) — A horse doesn't stare at you if you have to get around in a wheelchair. He doesn't laugh or whisper to his companions about you either.
To the Special Equestrians of the Central Savannah River Area, the horse is a friend. On his back, they're able to participate in a challenging activity, exercise and improve their self-esteem, among other things.
A riding program for mentally, physically and emotionally handicapped children and adults, Special Equestrians meets each Wednesday at Horse Creek Plantation near Trenton. The 10 riders, many of whom are from Aiken County, participate in the 45-minute lessons.
"In the future, some of these kids have the potential to develop their skills well enough to compete," said Claudia Morin, program coordinator and instructor.
But while it could be one of the program's benefits, Special Equestrians' purpose is not to turn out top-notch horse show competitors. Instead of blue ribbons, more subtle rewards are sought.

For example, an emotionally disturbed girl, who initially refuses to speak, begins to talk to her horse and the volunteers. Or a young woman, paralyzed from the waist down, conquers her fear and begins to ride with a minimum of assistance.
"We do not give pony rides," said Morin, emphasizing the serious nature of the program, which is co-sponsored by the South Augusta Ambucs and United Cerebral Palsy of the CSRA, Inc.
What Special Equestrians does do is offer instruction in everything from stable management to fundamental riding skills.
"It depends on the needs of the child," said Morin of the program's structure. "We set it up for each child based on the abilities he has."
"The kids are able to work on riding skills. They have to make a horse walk on and make a horse stop. We're also able to incorporate things like stable management — brushing a horse and putting on the bridle and saddle — and learning the parts of the horse."

The rewards of pursuing such knowledge are physical, psychological and social, Morin said.
Physical rewards include improved muscle relaxation, balance, coordination, strength and range of motion. Some of the psychological benefits are improved self-respect and self-awareness and a sense of achievement.
"When you're on a horse, you're looking down at people instead of them looking down on you. It's a real boost to self-esteem," said Morin, an assistant professor of Occupational Therapy at the Medical College of Georgia.
Socially, horseback riding helps the participants by increasing their contact with other children and adults.
"We encourage socialization during the lesson with each other as well as with volunteers and parents," Morin said. "One of the things we stress is to thank the horse and volunteers after each lesson."

Life As It's Lived

By GAIL MICHAELS
The housewife of today is a rebel. She has to be. She is certainly an anomaly. In a society that equates worth with productivity and productivity with salary, she continues to march to the beat of a different drummer. She refuses to measure up.

I must hasten to mention that I am not putting down working women for I include myself in their ranks, too, but I see an increasing need to defend the non-working woman, or rather the woman who receives no credit for working.

Even our husbands often fail to give us credit. They wonder how we can feel tired after a day of getting nothing accomplished. They don't understand that getting nothing accomplished is a major cause of exhaustion. We may be rebelling against society's pressures, but we aren't immune to them. We resent those times when we fold clothes only to have them unfolded by busy little hands, when we mop the kitchen 10 minutes before the juice flies, when we spend the afternoon running errands. Those are the days when the husband walks through the door, sticks to the floor, and triggers an explosion by asking, perhaps in all innocence, "What did you do today?"

Sometimes the only outlet for our frustrations is complaining to other housewives. I was still sifting through the plastic bottle tops at the last neighborhood Tupperware party and silently cursing Tupperware ladies in general for always starting the party favor box at the other side of the room when the conversation turned from the correct way to peel grapefruits to the tension between housewives and their husbands.

"My husband is always talking about how wonderfully his sister seems to manage home and career," the woman seated next to me said. "But then her husband shares the housework. Can you believe that he voluntarily sweeps the kitchen after each meal? My husband doesn't even know where our broom is."

My husband's rule-of-thumb is "Never Volunteer," another woman said. "I tell him he never helps, and he tells me that I never ask. Why should I have to ask?"

"The problem is that deep-down they think we ought to be able to accomplish everything we need to between the hours of 9 and 5 just as they do," a third guest said. "They ought to try taking the kids to the office."

The mere thought of what would result made everyone snicker malevolently. I gave up my search for an egg-separator and said, "I think you've really hit the nail on the head. Phillip keeps telling me that I ought to take advantage of the opportunity to manage my own time."

Everyone groaned. "My husband wants me to be more creative," said the hostess, the mother of 2-year-old twins. "He kept telling me that my approach to cooking lacked imagination. He was tired of BLT's for dinner."

"You need all your imagination just to stay sane," someone commented. "Yeah, well that's what I thought, but I decided to get more imaginative in spite of myself. I cooked a cabbage casserole and he hasn't mentioned imagination since."

We all clapped. We were delighted that, against all odds, a housewife could be that productive.

Clinic Treats Problem Sleepers

By WOODY BAIRD
Associated Press Writer

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Dr. Helio Lemmi's patients sleep too much or not enough. Sometimes they walk or talk or flop around while they sleep. Often, they stop breathing.

"If you stop breathing long enough, you wake up," Lemmi said in an interview at his sleep disorder clinic at Baptist Hospital.

Many of his patients suffer from an illness called sleep apnea, which means they stop breathing when they fall asleep.

Generally, they wake up in a few seconds and start breathing again, but the cycle continues throughout the night. "Their usual complaint is that they feel terrible in the daytime, and of course they're sleepy," Lemmi said.

A person who suffers from sleep apnea doesn't realize what his problem is, and he thinks he's getting a good night's rest. "If you don't wake up at least 30 seconds, you don't know that you woke up," Lemmi said. A person with sleep apnea generally wakes up for 10 seconds or less.

Often, Lemmi said, it's a patient's bed partner who notices that all is not well. People with sleep apnea usually snore, he said.

Lemmi's clinic is equipped with three small bedrooms that have the look of a standard motel. Where the motel TV would be, however, hangs a closed-circuit camera that films the sleeper throughout the night.

And the patient is attached by numerous wires and other gizmos to a stack of complex machines in an outer room. There, technicians monitor his breathing, heart rate, brain activity and muscle tension.

The clinic has a staff of five technicians and a battery of advisors, such as psychiatrists, internists and eye, ear nose and throat specialists. On the average, it costs $1,200 for the series of tests given at the clinic.

About one-fourth of the patients who complain of sleeping too much suffer from narcolepsy, a disease that can cause a person to fall asleep at any time without warning, Lemmi said.

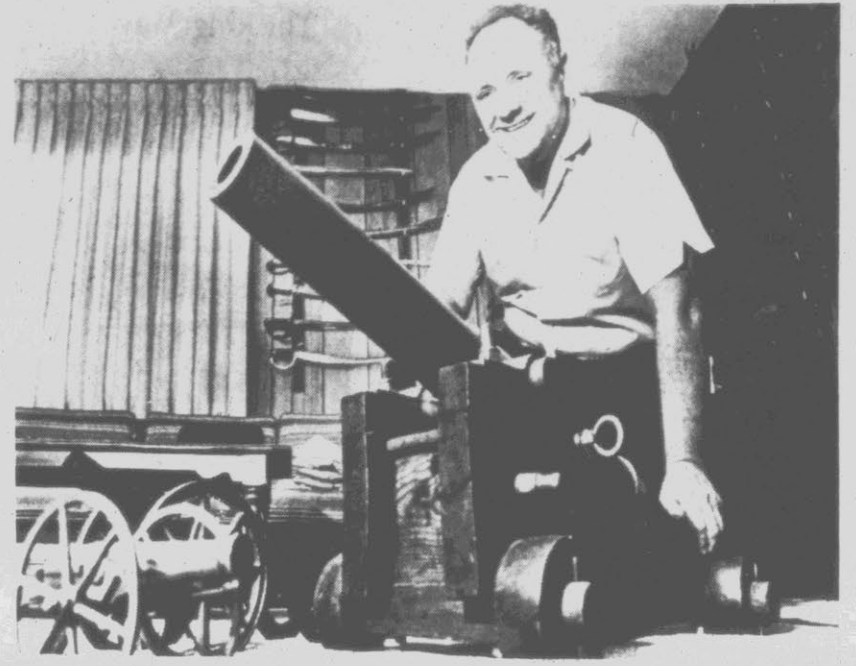

Narcolepsy can't be cured, and a sleep attack can be triggered by any sudden stimulation, such as a telephone ringing.

With sleep apnea, the tissue in a patient's throat become fleshy and closes off the passage of air. Lemmi said a tracheotomy is the standard procedure of treating such patients.

A hole is cut in the lower part of a patient's throat and is fitted with a plug that can be inserted during the day and removed at night.

"They become totally different people within 24 hours," Lemmi said.

Lemmi's clinic is also used for checking the cause of impotence in males, even though that malady isn't associated with sleep disorder. The clinic simply has the equipment for doing the job.

Baptist Temple Honors Moore

People's Baptist Temple designated its Sunday service this weekend as an appreciation observance for music director Gary Moore, who recently expressed his calling into the ministry.

Special recognition for Moore was scheduled for the 11 a.m. service.

Moore, who plans to enter the seminary division of Tennessee Temple University this fall, has attended the church for about 15 years. He attended D.H. Conley High School and received a degree in business from East Carolina University in 1980.

 THE PRODUCT — A portable kerosene heater with an electric circulation fan.
 Manufacturer's Claim — That this heater's fan system operates on standard household current and uses less electricity than a 50-watt light bulb...that it has a heater rating of 9,600 BTUs per hour and will heat a 19-by-24-foot room for up to 27 hours on less than 1 1/2 gallons of kerosene...that it operates without smoke or odor...that it has a removable 1.4-gallon fuel canister for easy refueling...that it has a hidden control panel and high-gloss enamel finish in off-white and brown so that it will fit in with any decor...and that it is safety-tested and carries the Underwriters Laboratories listing mark.

 Q. We have plaster ceilings in our home. The ceilings are structurally sound, but the chipped paint on them cannot be removed or repainted. I have been told this condition has come about because the ceiling originally was calcimine, then painted. Is this true and what can I do about it? I am willing to hire a professional painter if he can handle this kind of work.
 A. Yes, painting over calcimine can cause this kind of problem, but I cannot understand the advice you got about it being impossible to restore the ceiling. A good professional painter can remove the old paint, wash off the calcimine with warm water and detergent and then repaint the ceiling.

Q. I would appreciate it if you could tell me how to remove spots from marble. I have a white marble countertop in my bathroom that had white vinegar spilled on it. Also, it has some ring marks. I have bought two commercial cleaners and followed instructions for making a poultice, but neither worked. I really feel an answer to my problem would help many other persons.
 A. The vinegar may have eaten a little into the surface of the marble if it was not wiped up immediately. If so, it may be difficult to fix and may require the services of a professional. But try making a mixture of powdered whiting and hydrogen peroxide so that it forms a paste. After a few minutes, wipe it off, then repeat the procedure, rinsing with hot water each time and drying with a clean cloth. This will work on most stains and should remove the ring marks, although you did not say if they were also caused by vinegar left on the surface without being wiped up quickly.

Q. We bought an insulating window some time ago, but condensation is now forming between the two pieces of glass. What causes this and how can it be fixed?
 A. his means the seal between the two pieces of glass has been broken. You say you bought the window "some time ago." How long is that? Most manufacturers of insulating glass of that type include a warranty for a certain period of time. If you have one, it may still be in effect. Check carefully, because it is very difficult, sometimes impossible, to find a solution other than replacement of the product.

Q. We have an extremely bad rust stain on the concrete floor of our garage. It was caused by an overheated radiator which erupted. We would appreciate your advice on how to remove it. Our neighbor says it is impossible because the concrete is porous and has absorbed the rust.
 A. Your neighbor is correct about the porosity of concrete and the probability it will be difficult to remove, but don't give up hope. You can probably get it off with muriatic acid, but this is so dangerous to use it is rarely recommended in this space. Instead, try one of the heavy-duty detergents sold particularly for stubborn stains on surfaces such as concrete rather than those used strictly for clothes. Follow the directions and then go through the same steps a second time. Usually, that type of cleaner calls for dilution with water for most jobs, but for use as it comes out of the container for tough jobs. If there is still some rust on the concrete, consider one of the commercial driveway cleaners. A third possibility is to cover the stained area with dry portland cement, let it stay there for 24 hours, then sweep it up with a long-handled wire brush, rubbing vigorously as you sweep. You simply will have to experiment, since there is no magic solution for all concrete stains.

(Kinds of paint, surface preparation, brushes, rollers and special tips are contained in Andy Lang's booklet, "Paint Your House Inside and Out," which can be obtained by sending 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, NY 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column, but individual correspondence cannot be undertaken.)

Interest In Restoration Develops In U.S.

By BARBARA MAYER
 AP Newsfeatures
 In Western Europe, where historic preservation and restoration is thought worthy of serious study, there are centers of higher learning devoted exclusively to these subjects. Here in the United States, however, the emphasis has been on building the new — not in keeping the old up to par. But the evidence suggests such attitudes are changing here.

 One example of this new interest is the recent establishment of the Restoration College Association at Mount Carroll, Ill. Ultimately, the nonprofit group hopes to create a center of higher education in the U.S. devoted exclusively to restoration and historic preservation studies, similar to schools already existing in Europe.

Q. Can you tell me what is keeping my tomatoes, peppers and eggplants from setting fruit? (W.C., Fayetteville)
 A. Night temperatures below 60 degrees or day temperatures above 90 degrees will do it. (Larry Bass, extension horticulture specialist)
 Q. I had several azaleas to die suddenly. I saw no insects or signs of disease. (L.D., Mount Olive)
 A. Azaleas that experienced cold injury characteristically die suddenly in the summer when under heat or drought stress. Rapid fluctuations in temperature, such as the freeze that hit North Carolina last March, cause the most damage. Check the stems of your azaleas for splits in the bark and places where bark has slipped away from the wood. This is a definite sign of cold injury. Prune dead limbs below the injury. The longer you wait, the longer it takes for the azalea to recover. Young plants and the indica type azaleas are the most susceptible. Other symptoms of cold injury are dead edges on leaves and little new growth. (R.K. Jones, extension plant pathology specialist)

Q. A white mold is on the young leaves and flower stems of my crepe myrtle. What is wrong? (B.L., Monroe)
 A. Powdery mildew forms a white, fluffy mold on young leaves, flowers and flower stems of crepe myrtle. It ruins flowers by being unsightly and causing flowers to fade more rapidly. Crepe myrtle flower heads have a large number of buds which open over a long period of time. Powdery mildew will prevent the development and opening of these buds. To control powdery mildew spray with Benlate (benomyl) as soon as the fungus is seen; following label directions. (R.K. Jones, extension plant pathology specialist)
 Q. I've been told that my muscadine (scuppernon-type) grape vines probably have root borers. The foliage is discolored and often wilted. They are nine years old and seem to be losing vigor for no apparent reason. How can I tell if they have borers and, if they do, how can I control them? (C.B., Rocky Mount)
 A. One way to check for borers is to rake back the leaves and trash from around the base of the trunk and look for borer "skins". These are the outer bodies of the immature borers (larvae), which are left behind as the borers emerge from the soil. The time to look for this evidence is August and early September. The best control measure for homeowners is to mound soil two inches deep for two feet around the base of the trunk. Mound the soil in August and remove in the spring. This will put the borers in their grave. (Kenneth Sorensen, extension entomology specialist)

The credit for the idea of turning the bankrupt college into a center for preservation studies goes to Ralph Kennedy, a furniture restorer who lives and works in Mount Carroll. His enthusiasm and fund-raising efforts led to a generous donation from the late S.J. Campbell of Mount Carroll and others which enabled the group to acquire the campus for $170,000 at auction in 1979.
 Soon, both the campus and the central business district were placed on the National Register of Historic Places as part of the Mount Carroll Historic District. This generated interest in restoring some of the town's buildings.
 As a result, several buildings have been renovated for new businesses and "there is a more positive attitude toward solving the town's problems," Richardson said.
 There is still a long way to go toward establishing Campbell Center as a mecca for preservationists. But each year, classes have increased. Several hundred students now come from all over the U.S.

Psychologist Found Way Of Life Too Much At Height Of Career

By JOANNA MORGAN

TORONTO (UPI) — Psychologist Norman Endler was 45, at the height of his career, when the business of living became too much.

"I felt tense and queasy on the inside and jittery on the outside. I couldn't be still. I had difficulty eating, sleeping, reading and concentrating. My sex life was zilch. I never smiled and rarely spoke."

Endler, a psychology professor at Toronto's York University, knew even in the dark days of the spring of 1977 he was depressed. The achiever who had co-authored four books, headed his department, consulted at two psychiatric institutions and played aggressive tennis, suddenly found himself in "a sullen fog."

He sought professional help. He was diagnosed as suffering from manic depression, the syndrome characterized by acute mood swings between euphoria, achievement and energy and its grim reversal: depression, inertia and apathy.

Endler was treated for several months with drugs but had unpleasant side effects and his doctor counseled electroshock therapy (ECT).

It was treatment Endler feared, remembering the primitive application he had witnessed as a student in the 1950s when a patient at an Illinois state hospital emitted "a blood-curdling yell" and apparently suffered a broken back during convulsions induced by the shock.

Endler was reassured that ECT techniques had been refined, that general anesthetic and muscle relaxant would counter pain, and resulting memory loss was now rare. The only other recourse were hospitalization or continued depression.

Seven ECT sessions left him surprised, relieved, without pain — and his depression abated. "A miracle had happened in two weeks. I had gone from feeling like an emotional cripple to feeling well."

Although Endler functioned well for several months, by spring, 1978, the depression returned. More ECT eradicated it. In retrospect Endler says the interim between depressions was a time of "hypomania" — less acute euphoria and activity than the "manic" state — but nonetheless a dramatic prolonged mood swing. "I was talking incessantly and getting argumentative."

He now daily takes lithium, a drug that controls depression biochemically and guards against recurrence.

He does not fear its return. "If it happens, it happens. I'm on lithium now and that's controlling it — in the same way a diabetic has to be on insulin, or someone with a thyroid condition is on thyroxin."

He has chronicled his experiences in "Holiday of Darkness" (John Wiley & Sons), written after he was able to return to his academic career.

Although advised to write under a pseudonym so as not to endanger his professional reputation, Endler went "public" with his story. He felt it wrong to try to hide it. Earlier he rejected advice he find a psychiatrist outside Toronto lest his problem become known by his peers.

His book alternates the narrative of his own illness with historical and medical information about treatment of depression. Endler says the illness is more prevalent than recognized.

"Approximately 22 million Americans and 2.2 million Canadians, or 10 percent of the North American population, have experienced a depressed state, and many of them never knew what hit them or when or where to seek help," he writes.

He sought "to be helpful to other people and cut down on the stigma attached to mental illness — to give people a better understanding."

Experts believe depressed states, classified into several types, can spring from varying causes — one, a response to a trauma such as a loss through marital breakdown or death ("reactive"), another through neurotic depression or personality malfunctioning, or a physical biochemical imbalance.

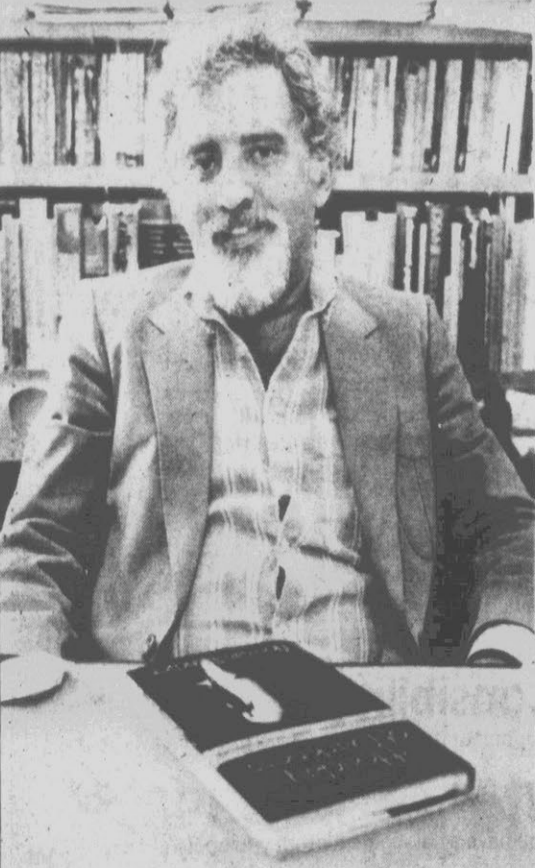

The type Endler experienced, which he believes originated with biochemical imbalance, most typically occurs when a person is around 30, but can show up a decade earlier or later. He himself was beyond the usual age.

Why such imbalance should suddenly crop up is still speculation, he says, although some think it may be triggered by stress.

"We are still measuring in yards and feet rather than inches — we're not that precise," says Endler.

Sees Neglect Of The Poor

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — The annual governing conference of the Church of the Brethren has called for a unilateral 10 percent reduction in U.S. defense spending and in nuclear weapons stockpiles. One of the nation's historic "peace" churches, the denomination endorsed a nuclear weapons "freeze" but said this is "only a first approach" to general disarmament, and urged the U.S. government to unilaterally cut its military spending and nuclear arms.

THERAPY ... Psychologist Norman Endler, who realized in 1977 that he was severely depressed and was subsequently diagnosed as a manic depressive, has written a book "Holiday of Darkness" chronicling his return to a normal life. Endler has received professional help that included the use of chemicals and electroshock therapy. (UPI Photo)

FORECAST FOR MONDAY, AUG. 9, 1982

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Start the week right by making plans to advance in career activities. Your judgment is below par right now so avoid making important commitments. Obtain the data you need.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Study your aims for the future carefully and discuss them with one who is interested in your welfare.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) A conversation with a higher-up now can help make the future brighter for you. Operating in a modern manner is wise.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Use your mind more if you want to be better understood by associates. You can turn an opponent into a friend if you try.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) A good time to get busy and take care of all that work that has been accumulating. Take needed health treatments.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) You can put creative talent to work now and get excellent results. Be sure to keep that Leo temper in control.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Do something constructive about a long-standing situation that has kept you emotionally upset. Cultivate a new friendship.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Look to your associates for assistance in making regular routines more productive. You can handle communications wisely now.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) This is the right day to garner that data you need for greater success in the future. Be more diplomatic with others.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Handle personal affairs well but give associates more attention than in the past and deal with them more openly.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Discuss property and monetary matters with a modern-thinking expert. Handle regular duties in a most efficient manner.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Contact a straight-thinking person and discuss ways to improve your social standing. Strive for increased happiness.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) A good talk with a respected person can show you the way to solve a difficult problem. Use care in travel.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she should be given the best education you can afford since the mind here is brilliant. Your progeny could become a power for good in the world, especially if connected in humanitarian fields. A natural for sports here.

Guess Who's Coming To Dinner?

If money is the root of all evil, "Filthy Rich," a limited run CBS comedy series, shows that it is also the chief reason for all the greed, power, passion and lust emanating from the wealthy Beck family and their newly acquired poor relations, the Weschesters.

In the Monday, Aug. 9 (9:30-10 p.m.) episode, the family of recently deceased Big Guy Beck, the wealthiest land baron in Tennessee, awaits the dividing of his estate. But Big Guy, who is cryogenically preserved (frozen in a cylinder at the moment of his passing) in a crypt on the estate, has one last surprise for his survivors.

Before passing into the great beyond, Big Guy left on video tape a last will and testament that clamped down on the purse strings so that he could continue to manipulate the Becks and the Weschesters for years to come.

Big Guy's will acknowledges his illegitimate son, Wild Bill Weschester, a Winnebago salesman who is definitely from the wrong side of the tracks. The socially prominent Becks are further upset by the stipulation that the Weschesters must move into Toad Hall with them before the estate can be divided.

This is an easy task for the Weschesters. Wild Bill is a good ole boy who is happy to be with his newly acquired "roots," and his vivacious wife, Bootsy, has a heart of gold. But some of the Beck clan face this challenge with gritted teeth.

Kathleen, a former beauty queen and the young wife of the recently frozen Big Guy, is anxious to get her hands on the money so she can claw her way to the top of Memphis society. Marshall, Big Guy's eldest son, is a snob who can't stand the thought of these "social vermin" as relatives, and his imperious wife, Carlotta, is outraged.

Only Stanley, Big Guy's youngest son, and the only member of the family with his own money, greets the Weschesters with open arms. Mother B, the deceased patriarch's first wife, also likes the new family additions when her senile old mind can remember who they are.

CHARLOTTA BECK (Dixie Carter, l) and Kathleen Beck (Delta Burke, r) plot joyously on how to keep their newly found poor relations, the Weschesters, from getting a part of the Beck fortune which they want to keep all for themselves, in "Filthy Rich," a CBS comedy series debuting on Monday, Aug. 9 (9:30-10 p.m.).

The Bears Get Tough

The meanest pint-sized baseball team in history is transformed from cellar-dwellers to pennant contenders, in "The Bad News Bears," to be rebroadcast as an ABC Movie Special on Sunday, Aug. 8 (7-9 p.m.).

In the comedy, Morris Buttermaker (Walter Matthau) is a former baseball professional whose tales of major league glory aren't exaggerations — they're lies; he never made it above the minors — but he is still capable of being a pretty good coach if he is given the right team.

He isn't given the right team. The junior-league Bears — ages 10-13 — are as clumsy, confused and untalented a collection of born losers as ever set foot (and knees and sometimes heads) on a playing field. However, coaching them to some semblance of competence means a few badly needed dollars to Morris, so he hypes up the team by bribing an 11-year-old whiz kid pitcher named Amanda Whurlitzer (Tatum O'Neal) to join the team.

The other players resent the presence of a girl on the team, but they don't resent the games she wins, and the Bears show signs of becoming the grizzliest team around.

"The Bad News Bears," which was originally released theatrically in 1976, also stars Vic Morrow as Roy Turner, Joyce Van Patten as Cleveland, and Jackie Earl Haley as Kelly Leak.

Michael Ritchie directed from a screenplay by Bill Lancaster.

Furnishing Home

Actress Nancy Stafford of "The Doctors" is hooked on antiques. She loves to scour country fairs and flea markets for silver, crystal and glassware. Nancy will use her treasures to furnish her new "modern" weekend home in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. The furnishings may be antique colonial, but Nancy says the best part

THERE ARE MILES of frayed nerves — and an almost overwhelming desire to kick a shin — hidden behind Walter Matthau's painted smile as he tries to be nice to Tatum O'Neal — the adolescent slugger who is turning his team of losers into champs, in "The Bad News Bears," to be rebroadcast Sunday, Aug. 8 (7-9 p.m.) on ABC.

ROBERT CULP stars as the prosecuting attorney in a case involving a young mechanic accused of two murders, in "Thou Shalt Not Kill," airing on NBC's Monday Night at the Movies, Aug. 9 (9-11 p.m.).

He Is A Victim Of Murder

Oscar, Tony and two-time Emmy winner Lee Grant stars as a determined defense attorney in "Thou Shalt Not Kill," a film about a young man's fight to prove his innocence in two murder cases despite overwhelming evidence against him. The drama will be rebroadcast on NBC's Monday Night at the Movies, Aug. 9 (9-11 p.m.).

In the story, Miss Grant portrays Maxine Lochman, whose client, Ray Masters (Gary Graham), is working as an auto mechanic for a construction company in hopes of earning enough money to buy his own garage. After a confrontation with Hugh Grover (Albert Salmi), an obstreperous fellow worker, Masters becomes the prime suspect when the man is found dead.

Responding to an appeal from Ray's wife, Susan (Diana Scarwid), Lochman takes on the difficult case. Her work is compounded when Ray refuses to take part in a con game while awaiting trial: during a struggle with a prison guard named Blake (Lane Smith) and a prisoner named Roebuck (Michael Gwynne) — operators of the con game — Ray slays Blake in a life-and-death situation.

Facing Steve Nevins (Robert Culp), a capable prosecutor, Lochman's only option is to locate a man named Jeff Tomkins (James Keach), whose testimony could be her only weapon in trying to clear her innocent client.

"Thou Shalt Not Kill" was directed by I.C. Rapaport from the script he wrote with Lonnie Elder III.

Teacher And Her Student In Love

A popular high school teacher falls in love with one of her students, and the community erupts in furor when their relationship is discovered. In "Thin Ice," to be rebroadcast on The CBS Wednesday Night Movies, Aug. 11 (9-11 p.m.).

In the story, Linda Rivers (Kate Jackson) is a 26-year-old high school history teacher in South Carolina whose husband died three years earlier. Rather than renew an active social life, Linda lives with her grandmother (Lillian Gish) and focuses her energies on teaching.

Quite by chance, during spring vacation, she happens to spend some time with 18-year-old Paul McCormick (Gerard Prendergast), one of her students. The couple spends a good deal of time together catamaran sailing. Almost against their will, they fall in love and enter into an involvement.

Fully aware of the implicit danger in their relationship, Linda and Paul go to great lengths to keep their involvement discreet. But, when news of the affair leaks, a community controversy erupts which dramatically alters both their lives and compels the couple to confront the seriousness of their actions.

"One of the lovely things about doing 'Thin Ice' was that we had the luxury of time to rehearse before we began," said Miss Gish, when shooting the movie in and around Charleston, S.C. "You know we rehearsed 'Birth of A Nation' (D.W. Griffith's 1915 monumental melodrama about the American Civil War and its aftermath) for months before we shot a frame. Consequently, the whole picture was filmed in nine weeks."

The director of "Thin Ice," Paul Aaron, made sure that adequate rehearsal time was provided for the actors. "During rehearsal," he explained, "we take apart every single line. By the time the actors walk onto the set they know exactly what they're going to say, precisely what the scene is about. Then we're free to create together."

Michele Will Tell

Q: I just watched "I Dream of Jeannie" with Barbara Eden. In the episode, Jeannie cut off her ponytail and no longer had her powers. Is it true that her ponytail is her source of power? Settle this argument between my sister and me. Also, where can I write to her? JACKIE HEDRICK, LEXINGTON, N.C.

A: If my memory serves me correctly, it was Jeannie's blinking baby blue eyes which were the source of her powers—not her ponytail. We suggest you write to Barbara Eden in c/o NBC-TV, 30 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, N.Y., 10020.

Q: My family enjoys "Gomer Pyle" on TV. Someone told us that Frank Sutton, who played Sgt. Carter, died several years ago. Is that true? If not, what is he doing now? KATHIE M., GOLDSBORO, N.C.

A: Frank Sutton was a native of Clarksville, Tenn. On June 28, 1971, at age 51, he died of a heart attack just before a stage performance in Shreveport, Louisiana. He is survived by his wife, Toby, and their children, Joey and Amanda Lee.

Q: I really enjoy reading your column each week. I would like to know the name of the blond-haired boy who played in the movie "On Golden Pond." He also starred, as Scott, in a television movie called "Desperate Lives." Please give me some information about him and an address where I might write him. B.S. WORRELL, CONNELLY SPRINGS, N.C.

A: Sixteen-year-old Doug McKeon was born on June 10 in Pompton Plains, New Jersey. He has four sisters and a brother. "I come from a very large family and we're all situated in the theatrical profession one way or another—at different stages right now," says McKeon. "I'd like to see all of us performing together sometime." Doug likes all sports, especially baseball, football, bowling, swimming, and running. With all the recent attention lavished upon him, he remains level-headed and has his feet firmly planted on the ground. "My personal goal is not only to continue acting, but also to write and direct someday. I hope to make some good out of what I'm doing," he says of his future. "It's a thrill to meet the people you do in this profession and to keep on learning. It never gets boring. Everywhere I turn, there's something new to learn, and I'm going to learn as much as I can." Write to him in c/o the producers of his current film "Night Crossing," Disney Productions, 500 S. Buena Vista St., Burbank, Calif., 91521.

Not All Glamour

Lori Singer, who is a regular on the series "Fame" (as Julie), is starring in a two-hour NBC-TV movie "Born Beautiful," and to Singer, it's a natural role.

"I play a young model in New York City," she said. "A few years ago, I did modeling for both Vogue and Mademoiselle, and a lot of what I learned on those assignments I've been using in my part. One thing is for sure; models, whether they're real or on screen, work hard. It's not all glamour."

Guests On 'Island'

Jennilee Harrison, Roddy McDowall, Carol Lynley, Doug McClure, Gary Collins, Adam Rich and Steve Shortridge are the most recent guests of series hosts Ricardo Montalban and Herve Villechaise on "Fantasy Island," which is now in production at the Burbank Studios for the 1982-83 season.

The Stormy Birth Of Rock 'n' Roll

The joyful and stormy birth of rock 'n' roll as the greatest musical revolution in the nation's history is recreated through the triumphs and heartbreaks of Alan Freed — the man who gave the music its name — in "American Hot Wax," to be broadcast as The ABC Friday Night Movie, Aug. 13 (8-10 p.m.).

In the story, Tim McIntire is starred as Freed, the disc jockey who gambled his career on his faith that "rock 'n' roll will never die," and Laraine Newman — in a performance that predated her "Saturday Night Live" fame — is featured as a singer with visions of solid gold records at the end of the rainbow.

The year is 1959, the city is New York, and the voice on the air that is inspiring fans and infuriating enemies is that of Alan Freed, who is planning a giant rock 'n' roll show at the Brooklyn Paramount theatre.

For Freed and his listeners, the anniversary show is proof that the music is a valuable and permanent contribution to American life: to an angry "establishment" group that shudders at the mention of the names Jerry Lee Lewis and Chuck Berry — both of whom are featured in the movie — it is proof that society is going to hell in a handbasket.

Freed, a superstar in his own right, still finds time to discover a new doo-wop group, give air time to the president of the Buddy Holly Fan Club and challenge an FBI demand that he sign a statement denying that he is a crook.

Freed knows the danger that lies in defying authority, but rock 'n' roll is the voice of defiance — and Freed is a rocker to his soul. "American Hot Wax," which was originally released theatrically in 1978, also stars Jay Leno as Mookie, Jeff Altman as Lennie, Fran Drescher as Sheryl and Moosie Drier as Artie.

CBS Series To Change In The Fall

CBS' top-rated show, "The Dukes of Hazzard" (Fridays, 8-9 p.m.), is in the midst of a controversy and shakeup that may dramatically alter the look of the show by the time its fifth season begins in late September.

The series' male stars, John Schneider and Tom Wopat, may not return because they feel that they have been cheated out of royalties from the marketing of "Dukes" items bearing their likeness. Whether Schneider and Wopat are pacified by air time is anybody's guess, but regardless of their decision, the producers have made plans to change the cast.

One of the original cast members, Sonny Shroyer, will be returning as Enos Strate, the bumbling deputy. Hazzard's "original dipstick," to quote Sheriff Rosco P. Coltrane. Enos had been serving with the Los Angeles Police Department. Although Enos hates to toot his own horn, he believes he has learned so much about modern police methods that no crook will be safe in Hazzard now that he is on the job.

It's Off The Wall

Betty Thomas, who co-stars as Officer Lucy Bates in "Hill Street Blues," is a former member of the Second City improvisational troupe who still keeps active in practicing the art of improvisation — her pride and joy.

"You can get a little rusty if you take too much time off," said Thomas. "But then, sometimes you can be better too. What I do is pretty off the wall."

She performs occasionally in her own act, "Funny You Should Ask," at the Improvisational Theater in Los Angeles.

Harrison To Star

"Fighting Chance," a two-hour movie for CBS starring Gregory Harrison, is a romantic drama with a background of amateur boxing. The film is being shot on location in the Los Angeles area.

DEFENDING CHAMPION Larry Nelson is expected to be among the field when ABC airs the final round of the 1982 PGA Championship, Sunday, Aug. 8 (3:30-7 p.m.).

Nelson Returns To PGA

The final round of the 64th PGA Championship will be broadcast on ABC, Sunday, Aug. 8 (3:30-7 p.m.), with Larry Nelson, the defending champion, expected to be among the golfers competing for the prestigious title and inflated total purse of $450,000.

The tournament will be played across the 6,862-yard Southern Hills Country Club in Tulsa, Okla., the site of the 1970 PGA, which was won by Dave Stockton. The course has also played host to two other major golf championships — the 1958 U.S. Open (won by Tommy Bolt) and the 1977 U.S. Open (won by Hubert Green).

In the past four years, the 34-year-old Nelson, a soft-spoken Georgian, has established himself as one of the finest players on the tour. The bigger the challenge, the better he seems to respond.

Besides capturing last year's PGA by a comfortable four strokes before his hometown fans at the Atlanta Athletic Club, Nelson pulled off one of the most spectacular finishes in recent golf history as he won the 1981 Greener Greensboro Open. In that tournament, he trailed Mark Hayes by two as they approached the 18th green. Nelson had a horrendous lie in the bunker and Hayes was safely on the back edge of the green.

The outcome seemed certain until Nelson, sizing up his nearly impossible shot, holed out for a birdie. Hayes took three to get down, setting up a sudden-death playoff. Riding the crest of his new-found confidence, Nelson won in short order.

Perfect House Is Found

Screenwriters sometimes feel that they have it easy. They can write stories, using the full extent of their imaginations, and then turn the script over to a producer who has to figure out how to bring it to the screen.

Once in a while, though, a writer is assigned to produce the film as well as write it, thus presenting him with problems of his own making. Such was the case when David Levinson was given the responsibility for producing as well as writing "This House Possessed," to be rebroadcast on Monday, Aug. 9 (midnight) on ABC.

"I had always wanted to write a haunted house story, but one that stayed away from the old, dark house that they always use in gothic stories," he said. "So I wrote a script about a beautiful contemporary home that contained an unseen evil that terrorizes a young woman. It was only after I had been given the producing chores that I realized that I'd written myself into a box. I now had to find a house that matched the concept I had written."

Levinson and location manager Michael Mann began a search of California to find the perfect home. It turned out to be a difficult task.

"We looked in northern California, in the middle of the state, Los Angeles and down to the Mexican border," Levinson said. "We had realtors everywhere scouring pictures in their files."

Finally, a realtor in Rancho Santa Fe near San Diego called Levinson about a home that he thought might fit the bill.

The mansion — which is valued at over $15 million — will be on view in "This House Possessed," starring Parker Stevenson and Lisa Eilbacher as a couple who seek solitude at a retreat and soon become convinced that the house is "alive."

TV Chatter

By Polly Vonetes

RICK SPRINGFIELD has embarked on his three-month, 49-city, U.S. tour — but soap fans don't despair — he will return to his "General Hospital" role sometime in October.

DIDI CONN, the squeaky-voiced secretary on "Benson," is getting her role beefed up for the new season. DIDI, delighted with all the wonderful fan mail she has been receiving, says she owes her success to her fans "and keep the letters coming."

When the credits roll on "The Fall Guy" series this fall DOUG BARR will no longer be starring with LEE MAJORS. Now it's DOUGLAS BARR. The name change becomes official with the start of the new season.

PAMELA BELLWOOD, on hiatus from "Dynasty," has spent her break photographing one of the hill tribes of Burma for a French syndicate. She writes: "They're more civilized than the characters on our show."

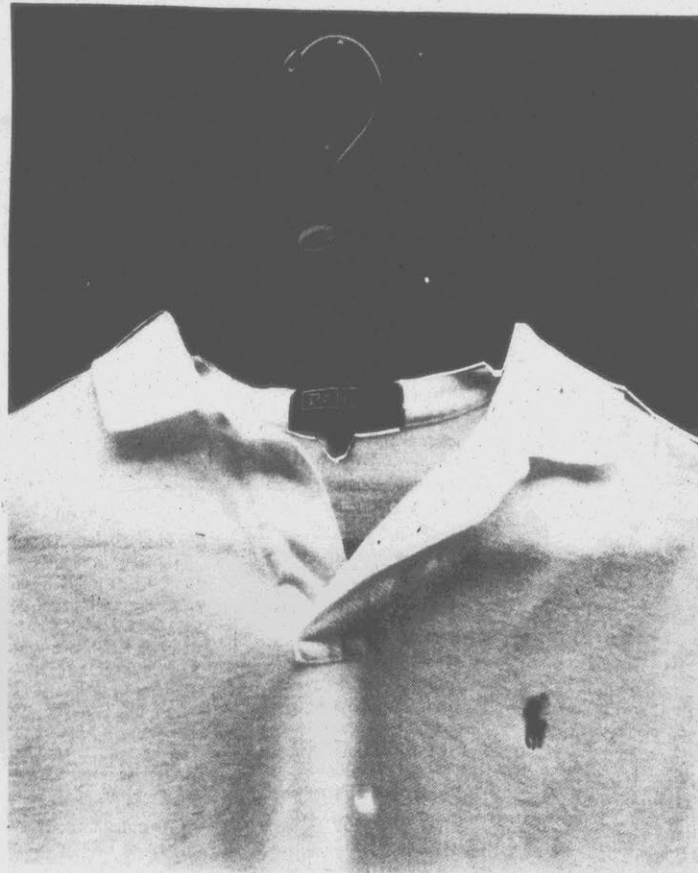

GEORGE BRETT, the Kansas City Royals third baseman, is slated to shoot a TV series pilot, "Royal Five," in Kansas City early in October — provided he is not involved in the World Series.

LUCILLE BALL is hunting for an apartment in New York City to rent during her starring role as a "grandmother." Daughter LUCIE and hubby LARRY LUCKINBILL are expecting their second child soon and 'big' LUCY intends to be close by.

In her recent autobiography JUNE ALLYSON reveals that husband RICHARD POWELL, who died from cancer, was one of 90 out of the 200 actors and crew who were exposed to atomic radiation during the filming of "The Conqueror" at Yucca Flat, Nevada, that have died of cancer — that includes JOHN WAYNE, SUSAN HAYWARD and AGNES MOOREHEAD.

FAMILY WEEKLY

Growing Up Afraid

The 37th Summer of The Bomb

By Dr. Helen Caldicott

ASK THEM YOURSELF

Send the question, on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

Notes Bulgarians mope on slope.

FOR FRANK GIFFORD, sports broadcaster

Of all the sporting events you've covered, which has been the most unusual? —B.A., Lake Charles, La.

● Last year I was at a ski event in Bulgaria, the first of its kind held in an Iron Curtain country. First thing that struck me about it was the complete contrast to its American counterpart. Here a ski event is fun; everyone laughs and has a good time. There it was the reverse. Everyone looked glum and serious.

Another odd thing: The crew and I had dinner at the hotel the first night, and, because it wasn't that good, we tried another place the next night. Would you believe the food was identical? Both were serviced by a communal kitchen situated underground between the two restaurants.

FOR PATRICIA McENTIRE, author of Mommy I'm Hungry (Cougar Books)

● In general, Europeans like Americans as individuals, but resent, as they perceive it, our provincial and self-centered attitudes when dealing with world issues. Interest rates affect everything we do and hope to do. Nothing is more basic to our nation's well-being than the allocation of credit resources and the setting of interest rates. The Federal Reserve has done what Jefferson, Lincoln and Wilson feared — turned these basic powers over to the board-member bankers, who hold themselves unaccountable to the people. My legislation would make such economic decisions more open to public scrutiny when managed by the executive branch.

That's not the way to cure a sick economy. Why put the Federal Reserve under the thumb of an administration that has produced record-breaking interest rates and left idle 10 percent of our work force and 30 percent of our industrial capacity? We need a Reserve free to manage technicalities in monetary policy, but ready to bring down interest rates by cooperating with both Congress and the President on a program of reduced spending and economic prosperity.

Growing Up Afraid

THE 37th SUMMER OF THE BOMB

In 1945, Hiroshima and Nagasaki were destroyed by the atomic bombs of August, bombs with nowhere near the power of today's nuclear weapons. Here Dr. Helen Caldicott, a leader in the anti-nuclear movement, discusses the nuclear legacy, and particularly its nightmarish effect on children.

By Dr. Helen Caldicott

People sometimes ask, "Should I tell my children about nuclear war?" The children already know. They know because they watch television, because they listen to the news. Kids know the truth. You can't fool them.

And they are very frightened. The American Psychiatric Association recently interviewed 1,000 adolescents in Boston and found that almost all of them believe they will never grow up, never get jobs, never get married or have children of their own. Because they believe they're going to be killed in a nuclear war.

The greatest single thing a parent can do for his or her children is to work for nuclear disarmament, work to make sure that children do have the opportunity to grow up. Because why make sure kids clean their teeth and eat healthy food if they're not going to survive? A year ago, I left my practice as a physician so I could devote myself to promoting nuclear disarmament for the children of the world. Every parent who gets involved in this movement will give his or her children an important sense of emotional security.

I first became concerned about the issue of nuclear war when I was about 15 and read On the Beach by Neville Shute. I lived in Melbourne, Australia, which is where that book is based. After that, I couldn't understand why the men kept building more nuclear weapons. I felt the perplexity that children have today, feeling unprotected by the adults in the world.

During the years I was in medical school, the British, Americans and Russians were testing nuclear weapons. There was a great deal of fallout in the atmosphere, and I began to speak out on the issue. When my husband was on sabbatical in the U.S. in '75, I got a little involved here by speaking at Ralph Nader's National Critical Mass

Conference in Washington. After my family emigrated to this country in 1977, I was invited everywhere to talk on nuclear energy. Always my basic concern was nuclear weapons, but at that time this country wasn't ready to hear anything negative about these weapons — it was considered unpatriotic to even talk about it.

In 1978, with a group of other doctors, I helped form an organization called Physicians for Social Responsibility, and it just happened that an ad we placed in The New England Journal of Medicine appeared the day after the Three Mile Island accident. We got 500 new members and eventually received a grant to offer symposia in major cities around the country on the medical consequences of nuclear war. We now have 14,000 members, most of them physicians and medical students, and about 7,000 additional supporters. Each week about 500 new doctors join.

Support is growing elsewhere, too. The American Medical Association passed a resolution last December condemning nuclear war and pledging to educate our colleagues, the President and Congress on the medical effects of nuclear war. The National Academy of Sciences passed a resolution condemning nuclear war. The American Physiological Society, a very prestigious biological society, unanimously passed a resolution calling for elimination of all nuclear weapons. What's the use of studying the very essence of life when we are about to destroy it?

We have heard people speak in recent months of the possibility of a limited nuclear war. There is no such thing. If a 20-megaton nuclear bomb were dropped on one of our cities, its impact would be equivalent to 20 million tons of TNT — five times the collective energy of all the bombs dropped during World War II. (The bomb dropped on Hiroshima produced 13,000 tons of energy.) If dropped at ground level on a clear day, the bomb would dig a hole three-quarters of a mile wide and 800 feet deep, converting all the buildings, the people in them and the earth below into radioactive fallout molecules — which would be injected into the stratosphere through the mushroom cloud.

Up to a radius of six miles, every building would be totally destroyed, every person killed. Many people would simply vaporize because our bodies are made up mostly of water, and when exposed to the heat of the sun, we just turn into gas. That's what happened to people in Hiroshima — they left their shadows behind on the pavement. And within a radius of 20 miles, every person would be killed instantly or lethally injured. The overpressures (tremendous increase in air pressure) would be so great that people would literally be sucked out of buildings and converted into Babes against arms: At a June rally in the Rose Bowl, 80,000 people, many of them children, said no to nuclear arms.

It is our belief that in an all-out nuclear war between the super powers, up to 90 percent of the American people will be dead within 30 days."

missiles traveling at 100 miles per hour until they struck something. Bricks and mortar would also be converted into missiles traveling at high speeds. The over-pressure would cause eardrums to rupture, resulting in deafness, or lungs to rupture, resulting in death. The over-pressure would pop windows like corn, fracturing them into thousands of shards of flying glass traveling at 100 m.p.h., and these shards would penetrate human flesh, causing lacerations, hemorrhage and, in some cases, decapitation. And then there would be terrible burns. Hundreds of thousands of people suffering from burns, because 35 percent of the bomb's energy is heat. Right now in the entire country we have only 1,000 acute-burn beds. In a nuclear war, the thousands of burn victims would die with no help, no medical care. Most of the city's hospitals — and the doctors and nurses in them — would be destroyed.

If you were standing outside anywhere up to 26 miles away from the bomb site, you'd become a flaming torch as your clothing instantaneously ignited from the heat. If you looked at the flash from 40 or 50 miles away, you'd become instantly blinded. There would probably be a fire storm created for about 1,500 to 3,000 square miles where everything would ignite spontaneously, and fires would coalesce as they did in Hiroshima. If anyone managed to get to a fallout shelter, all the oxygen would be sucked out by the fire, and the shelter would fill with carbon dioxide and carbon monoxide, and people would die of asphyxiation. Our fallout shelters would be converted into crematoria from the heat and blast.

There would be a huge area of lethal fallout which would extend for thousands of square miles beyond the area of the bomb. If people in rural areas escaped being directly hit, they would nonetheless have to remain in fallout shelters for approximately two months. Because if they came out before then, they'd die of what's called acute radiation illness — vomiting and diarrhea, ulcers appearing on the skin and death from massive hemorrhage or infection. Even after months, the earth would be so radioactive people would incur a lethal dose if they stayed out too long.

It is our belief that in an all-out nuclear war between the super powers — which would take about an hour to complete — up to 90 percent of the American people could be dead within 30 days.

And if there were a nuclear war between the super powers, it is not only the Americans and Russians who would die, but people in countries all over the world as well. The explosion of nuclear bombs could destroy much of the ozone layer, which protects us from the ultraviolet light of the sun. We believe that so much ultraviolet light could be let in that every human being on the planet could be blinded — and possibly all the animals. This ultraviolet radiation could also produce severe sunburn within 30 to 60 minutes, which could lead to death.

And, of course, there would be millions and millions of dead bodies on the face of the earth, and as they decayed, the bacteria would multiply and mutate in the radioactive environment, becoming more virulent. Insects transmit disease from the dead to the living. They are usually kept in check by the birds. But birds, which are very sensitive to radiation, would be killed and the insects would proliferate in the trillions and carry diseases like black plague, typhus, hepatitis, encephalitis and typhoid, not just in the targeted countries, but to the untargeted countries as well. There is only a 30-day supply of food in the entire world, and much of it is transported by boat from the United States to other countries. There would be great starvation in the third world.

And we think that massive quantities of debris would be injected into the stratosphere, cooling the earth's temperature by 1 or 2 degrees and possibly converting the world into another ice age by reflecting much of the sun's radiant energy into space.

In the early 60's we were all frightened because of the Cuban missile crisis and the possibility of a nuclear war, and we built fallout shelters. But then we got the Partial Test Ban Treaty — and the fear disappeared. Out of sight was out of mind. Contemplating the end of the earth is much worse than contemplating one's own death. For a parent it means that not only he would die, but his concept of immortality would also disappear, because his children would die as well.

All of this is very difficult for the human mind to comprehend. So we forget about it, we push our fear into our subconscious. That's called psychic numbing. But it takes more energy to repress the fear than it does to draw it out and confront it. If you do confront this fear, you enter the stages of grief. The first stage is shock and disbelief; the second is profound depression; the third is anger; and the fourth is acceptance. It is during the angry phase that people are motivated to do something. Some of us are beginning to reach this vital angry phase. According to a recent New York Times/CBS poll, 87 percent of American adults would favor a bilateral nuclear-arms freeze if parity were achieved with the Soviet Union.

The irony is that before the nuclear-arms race, America was totally invulnerable. No one could touch this country with huge oceans on either side and friendly countries to the north and south. Now it is totally vulnerable. Americans have set up their own suicide. The question is: How do we stop the Russians from destroying us?

Well, you don't stop them by making them more frightened, by arming China, putting Pershing II and small, unverifiable cruise missiles in Europe that could reach Moscow in six minutes. As a doctor, I've learned that you don't handle frightened, paranoid patients by threatening them — it only makes them more irrational. Instead, you try to understand their frame of reference and work with them to resolve conflicts. And that's what America should be doing.

I have a five-year plan for nuclear disarmament. The first step is a bilateral freeze — cessation of development, production, deployment and testing of all new nuclear weapons and delivery systems. The slogan of the people who advise the President is virtually "arm to disarm." What worries me is that people don't understand the pathology of the arms race. And they don't have enough information to critically analyze Reagan's new proposal — START (Strategic Arms Reduction Talks) — which, in my opinion, is not just vacuous but bad, overtly bad. The plan calls for building another 17,000 strategic weapons in the next 10 years, spending $2.2 trillion doing it, as well as building other systems.

People are concerned that the Soviet Union is militarily superior to the U.S. If you look at United Nations data, or the data of any independent organization, you'll find that the U.S. has 30,000 warheads and Russia has 20,000. America has nine to 10,000 stradelivery systems. And no haggling over figures, because haggling is procrastination.

The next step is a two-thirds reduction of the remainder of the weapons, bilaterally. If we can achieve that in five years, we're on our way. We haven't yet finished because the two sides can still annihilate each other with the few remaining weapons.

So that's my five-year plan. It's like an exam: If you have a date to get your studying done, you do it. And if we have a date to abolish nuclear weapons and the whole world demands it, we'll do it. We can't leave it to the politicians. Eisenhower once said, "People of the world want peace so much that one of these days governments had better get out of the way and let them have it."

People worry that the Soviet Union won't go along with a freeze. Why assume that before we try? Both America and Russia have signed 17 treaties on nuclear weapons and neither one has violated them. The Russians signed SALT II and ratified it. America didn't. The Russian Government is putting American and Soviet physicians on national television to talk about what's going to happen to them in the event of nuclear war.

What can parents do to guarantee that there will be a bilateral freeze? First and foremost, they can use their democracy — and that means voting. People have the power and they must make certain that their congressmen and senators are confronted on this issue. Many politicians have supported the bilateral freeze but they're still voting for funds for nuclear weapons. That's hypocritical. The Pentagon has 1,500 lobbyists on Capitol Hill, but who is representing the babies of the world? The elections coming up this year are extremely important.

Parents also can use the Physicians for Social Responsibility. There are 120 chapters now, and doctors will come out at any hour to speak at town meetings, at churches (write to: 639 Massachusetts Ave., Cambridge, Mass. 02139). And they'll play a film called The Last Epidemic, which graphically illustrates what nuclear war means.

Parents should also join a group I founded called Action for Nuclear Disarmament (691 Massachusetts Ave., Arlington, Mass. 02174). We'll supply information on where the local chapter is or how to establish one. The political action committee will send out a list of the members of Congress who sit on the appropriations committees.

October 17 will be a national day of prayer in Washington, D.C., organized by Physicians for Social Responsibility, with the major churches and many of the country's scientists. We hope to attract hundreds of thousands of people on the mall in front of the Capitol for prayer and music to celebrate life and to call for bilateral nuclear disarmament. Organize your friends, neighbors and congregation to attend. Prevention of nuclear war is the ultimate medical issue of our time, the ultimate religious issue and the ultimate parenting issue.

Don Hunstein

tegic or intercontinental warheads (that can reach the Soviet Union from the U.S. in 20 to 30 minutes). The rest are tactical. That's enough to overkill every Russian person 40 times. Russia has 7,000 to 7,500 strategic weapons, enough to overkill every American 20 times. It's warheads that are important. America is not only ahead in the number of warheads, but its technology is more advanced, more sophisticated. And what does ahead or behind mean when you can kill each person 40 times?

So the people want a freeze and the President has got to give it to them. He's supposed to represent the American people.

The next step is the proposal of George Kennan, former ambassador to the Soviet Union and professor with the Institute of Advanced Studies at Princeton University: 50 percent across-the-board bilateral reduction in strategic, tactical nuclear weapons and

The French-American Connection

By Marilyn Hansen

French-born chef Pierre Franey is now all American. He's even picked up on our passion for "time is of the essence" and applied it to his recipes in such best-selling books as The New York Times 60-Minute Gourmet and The New York Times More 60-Minute Gourmet (with Craig Claiborne).

"I love plain, fast cooking," Pierre says. For example, what could be better than this quick pasta dish using basil: "Cook a potful of spaghetti, linguine or whatever. Take beautifully ripe, fresh tomatoes, scald and skin them. Quarter the tomatoes, remove the seeds and chop fairly coarsely. In a skillet, combine a little olive oil, garlic and some chopped basil leaves, heat for just a minute or two, stirring; then add the tomatoes. Heat a little, just to warm up the tomatoes. Pour the sauce over the hot, cooked, drained pasta. Serve with freshly grated Parmesan and a little freshly ground black pepper if you wish."

Here are several other quick summer recipes from Pierre's collection.

- | | |
|----------------------------|----------------------------------|
| 1/4 cup olive oil | 1 lb. tomatoes |
| 1 lb. sliced onions | Salt to taste |
| 2 to 3 large cloves garlic | 1 tablespoon snipped fresh thyme |
| 1 lb. zucchini | 1 bay leaf |
| 1 lb. green peppers | Chopped parsley |
| 1 lb. eggplant | |
- In a heavy skillet, heat olive oil until hot but not smoking. Sauté onions and garlic first for several minutes. Add zucchini and green peppers; continue to cook, stirring.
 - Add eggplant and tomatoes; sauté, stirring for several minutes. Season with salt to individual taste; add thyme and bay leaf. Heat to the boiling point.
 - Place in preheated 350°F oven for about 45 minutes, stirring once in a while to prevent sticking. Do not add any additional liquid; do not cover. It is important to do the occasional stirring. When finished, mixture should be like "a stew."
 - Sprinkle top with a little chopped parsley before serving.
 - Ratatouille is also good served cold. Another suggestion: Spoon hot ratatouille into a small ramekin; make a small hollow and slip in an egg. Top with a little grated Parmesan or Gruyere cheese, place in preheated 350°F oven until egg white is set, but yolk is still soft. Makes an easy dish for a light supper, along with a mixed-greens salad and crusty loaf of French bread. Makes 6 servings

GRILLED MARINATED LEG OF LAMB

- | | |
|--|--------------------------------|
| 1 (6 lb.) leg of lamb, boned and butterflied | 1/4 cup vinegar or lemon juice |
| 1 cup olive oil | 2 cloves garlic, sliced |
| | 2 tablespoons fresh rosemary |
- Have butcher bone and butterfly lamb, or do it yourself. Place in a shallow glass or stainless-steel pan.
 - In a small bowl, combine olive oil, vinegar, garlic and rosemary. Pour mixture over lamb, spreading garlic slivers evenly. Marinate for 1 hour at room temperature. If preparing to cook later or the next day, lamb should be covered and refrigerated.

From the earliest days of the republic, the eagle has graced U.S. coins and currency, as the embodiment of American power and national pride.

Buckle Will Not Be Produced After December 31, 1982

Now, to honor the 200th anniversary of the eagle on the Great Seal, International Monetary Mint's master craftsmen have created a Commemorative Collector's Buckle, to be produced in a limited edition — plated with pure silver, with a layer of 24-karat gold hand-applied to the surface of the eagle and the rim. Each buckle must undergo three hand-finishing processes and pass four separate inspections before being individually hand-embossed with its own serial number and approved for shipment. And, to protect the integrity of this limited edition, the dies will be destroyed at the end of this 200th Anniversary year.

Each Buckle Permanently Registered

Each individually numbered buckle will be permanently registered with the name of its original owner in the Official Archives of the International Monetary Mint. It will be delivered to you in a Special Collector's Presentation Case.

Wear this authentic Commemorative Collector's Buckle as a striking fashion accessory and an unmistakable symbol of your love for your country. Then, hand it on to become a treasured family heirloom as well. Of course, your satisfaction is assured by our unusual Unlimited Money Back Guarantee.

The Sooner You Order — The Lower the Serial Number You Will Receive!

Since Registry Numbers are assigned to each order as it is received, we strongly urge that you order promptly, to receive the coveted lower numbers that are still available. (Limit: five (5) buckles per order.)

International Monetary Mint is an independent agency not affiliated with the U.S. Mint or any government agency.

3. Prepare charcoal and light. Grill lamb when coals are searing hot and gray in color. Grill, turning and basting with marinade, until as well done as you prefer. For maximum taste, a juicy medium-rare is the optimal choice. Makes 6 to 8 servings

TOMATO AND ZUCCHINI SALAD

1½ lbs. zucchini
1½ lbs. tomatoes
6 tablespoons olive oil
2 tablespoons vinegar
Pinch salt
2 tablespoons snipped fresh herbs: parsley, thyme, coriander
Garnish: anchovy strips, flaked tuna, quartered hard-boiled eggs
Freshly ground black pepper

1. Slice zucchini, place in saucepan with a little boiling water, return to boiling and cook just a minute or two, or until al dente, crisp-tender. Drain and plunge zucchini into ice water to chill quickly.

2. On a large platter or individual serving plates, alternate slices of zucchini and sliced, peeled tomatoes. Make a vinaigrette dressing: Combine olive oil, vinegar, salt and fresh herbs; beat with a fork to mix. Pour over the sliced-vegetable arrangement.

3. The salad may also be garnished with anchovy strips, flaked tuna and hard-boiled eggs. Pass a pepper mill for individual twists of freshly ground black pepper. Serve with a loaf of crusty homemade French bread. This can make an excellent luncheon dish. Makes 4 servings

CHICKEN BREASTS SAUTE

2 whole chicken breasts, split, skinned and boned
Dash salt
Several twists freshly ground black pepper
¼ cup butter
1 tablespoon red wine vinegar
¼ cup chopped shallots or green onion
2 teaspoons snipped fresh herbs
1 or 2 tablespoons cream, optional

1. Remove skin and bone from chicken. Add salt and pepper.
2. In skillet, melt butter and heat until hot. Add chicken breasts and cook very fast over moderately high heat; turn so as to lightly brown both sides. Remove to heated serving platter; keep warm.

3. Add wine vinegar and shallots to drippings in skillet. Heat to boiling, stirring. Add cream, if you wish, "to be fancy," as Pierre says. Pour sauce over chicken and serve. Makes 2 to 4 servings

CRUSTY FRENCH BREAD

1½ envelopes active dry yeast
2¼ cups warm (90°F) water
3 cups unsifted all-purpose flour
3 cups unsifted unbleached flour
Pinch salt

1. In bowl of large food processor, place yeast with ¼ cup water and process 2 seconds.

2. Add flour; process. Add salt while processing; add the 2 cups of water all at once. Process 16 to 20 seconds until a ball forms.

3. Turn dough out onto a floured surface and knead it briefly. Place in a large (3-qt.), greased bowl. Cover with a tea towel and place in a warm place without a draft to let rise until double in bulk.

4. Punch down dough to release air bubbles. Cover and let rise again until double in bulk.

5. Punch down again; shape any way you wish: baguettes, 2 or 3 round loaves, or make 3 or 4 coffee-can breads, filling greased 1-lb.-size cans half full.

6. If making baguettes, place dough in long, narrow bread pans. Allow to rise in warm place until almost double. (If you don't have the long, narrow baguette pans, simply sprinkle cornmeal or grits on greased cookie sheet and place dough lengths on it to rise.)

7. When dough has risen to almost double, slash top in several places with a razor blade. Place in preheated 425°F oven, throw 2 ice cubes onto the bottom of the oven and close the door. This will create steam. After 20 minutes, reduce heat to 375°F and bake 30 to 35 minutes longer. Says Pierre, "I like my loaves well cooked." Makes 4 to 6 baguettes

Note: For those readers who do not have a large-size food processor, you may make the bread in a regular-size processor, using the following ingredient measurements: 1½ cups unsifted all-purpose flour, 1½ cups unsifted unbleached flour, 1 envelope active dry yeast, 1 cup plus 2 tablespoons warm water and a dash salt. This will make 2 baguette loaves.

Why We Love Our Friends to Fail

All in all, you're a pretty nice person. But sometimes you find yourself green—and mean—with envy.

By Mary Long

You're relaxing over lunch with your good friend Carol when she blurts out the happy news: She's going to get that big promotion after all, and a big raise to go along with it! You'd like to feel delighted, but something about the announcement makes you choke on your cheeseburger. Carol, thank goodness, is too happy to notice the strain in your voice as you shower her with congratulations. She believes you're thrilled for her, and you wish you could be, but frankly, in your heart, you feel sick. All that money, you think miserably to yourself, and Carol isn't even very good at her job!

Few of us are able to suppress an occasional secret envy at a friend's good fortune. But when someone is truly suffering from envy, it is more than just a momentary discomfort: In severe cases, envy is able to restrict, distort and blacken all that a person does or feels.

It has been said that envy is the one Deadly Sin to which no one readily confesses. It seems to be the nastiest, the most servile and the most useless. The English essayist Angus Wilson pointed out that all of the other Seven Deadly Sins — pride, anger, lust, gluttony, avarice and sloth — provide at least some gratification in their early stages. But there is no gratification to be gained from envy, and nothing it can ever enjoy, though its appetite is ravenous.

Envy is not simply grieving over some talent, benefit or object that another person possesses. That's another vice, called covetousness. Nor should it be confused with jealousy, which is the fear of being replaced in someone's affections. Feeling envious is also not the same as becoming competitive and redoubling our own efforts because we are shamed or made insecure by a rival's achievement.

Rather, the envious individual feels his own self-esteem and status have been lowered by another person's achievement, and so he tries, inappropriately, to demean the other's success. Unlike competitiveness, envy is not at all therapeutic. It never spurs an individual to make his best efforts.

According to Dr. John Sabini, an assistant professor of psychology at the University of Pennsylvania and co-author of The Moralities of Everyday Life (Oxford University Press), criticism, undercutting or belittling is always a part of genuine envy. These insults — sometimes subtle, sometimes not so subtle — are the troops the envious use to protect their emotional stability, which is being badly shaken by the front-line assault of somebody else's good fortune. The power of independent choice, motion, thought and feeling can be all but lost when envy hits. The envious person loses his own identity, becoming absorbed with thoughts of his rival.

"I not only got the job, but a fabulous raise, too."

Often, this feeling stems from a sense of inadequacy. "At the root of envy, one finds that the person has an intense dissatisfaction with what he is," explains Dr. M. Barrie Richmond of the Institute for Psychoanalysis in Chicago. "Behind the envy there's usually rage, often originating in childhood.

"Children who are envious have the kind of anger that comes from a sense of being deprived, not adequately cared for, not having gotten what they should have," he explains. "As adults, this combines with anger at not being able to have or do the things they feel they ought to. We begrudge other people their good fortune because we feel that they have what we deserve — we have been cheated in some unknown way. The sight of the other person's triumph stirs up our own sense of insecurity and impoverishment, and we resent them for it."

Envy also means constant self-mortification for the envious. After all, viewing others as superior cannot help but produce feelings of humiliation and disgrace.

Many never have to face that shame, though, because they never perceive their own envy. They convince themselves that if they had only a little of the other person's money, glamour or recognition, everything would be wonderful. Or they dismiss their disparagement of others by priding themselves on their "realistic" attitude or their acute critical judgment.

One former amateur chess champion tells this story: "For years I was convinced that Bobby Fischer's chess games were very ordinary, and I went around telling everybody all about it.... Then one day it hit me — not only was Fischer the player of the century, but perhaps the greatest chess player in the history of the game. I began to realize how phenomenal the guy was, how much he knew. But for years I just didn't want to recognize that."

You can learn to recognize envy by paying attention to those situations in which you develop an excessively hostile and negative attitude, and to those times when you find yourself repeatedly putting down someone else. Try to think about what you're doing. Is that person really so bad in your view, or are you criticizing him because he makes you feel small or uncomfortable? Are you trying to get even?

It's important to remember that no one is completely free of envy, and you shouldn't worry about the occasional pang or two. "But when you reach the point where you can't bear other people's successes, especially the good fortune of the people you should be most pleased for, then you're in trouble," says Dr. Sabini.

And, unfortunately, we are most likely to envy our intimates — our family, friends and colleagues. One of envy's greatest ills, points out Sabini, "is that we become extremely watchful for other people's failings and become hypercritical and hateful toward the people closest to us."

But we needn't be that way. Overcoming envy is largely a matter of knowing yourself and your abilities, coming to terms with the world and your place in it. "I think the trick in life," says Sabini, "is to recognize that you're not going to be the most accomplished person at everything, indeed you may not be the most accomplished person at anything. Now that's a hard thing to learn, but surely one aspect of maturity is recognizing that. To the degree that you're not bothered by it so much, you're less inclined to envy others."

In the opinion of Dr. Willard Beecher, a former student of the esteemed psychoanalyst Alfred Adler, this self-reliance is the best antidote for envy. Beecher writes that, "The solution to an individual's envy problem is for him to increase his courage to face reality and to learn to be self-reliant in those areas where he formerly belittled, brooded over, leaned on and exploited others.

"Nothing can liberate the envious person until he sees that he is the source of his own painful situation," he says. "A person will grow according to his own inner nature — and innate genius — when his view is not distorted by envy."

It seems that, finally, perhaps the only thing truly worth envying is peace of mind — and freedom from envy itself.

Will Jokes Help You Humor a Date?

By John E. Gibson

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. You can have an excellent sense of humor and yet not be able to tell a funny story without falling on your face.
2. Jokes can help make you generous.
3. If a man meets a pretty woman and wants to ingratiate himself, it's best for him not to attempt to break the ice with a joke or a funny anecdote.
4. A person's capacity for learning is increased when his or her textbook is leavened with humor.
5. If you're trying to make a good impression with an address or an informal presentation to a group, it's a good idea to spice up your speech with self-deprecating humor.
6. The more shocking the joke, the funnier people find it.

ANSWERS

1. True. A sense of humor and the ability to tell a funny story do not necessarily go together. A Pepperdine University (Calif.) study found that it takes a lot more than a sense of humor to pull off a funny anecdote. This requires not only conversational poise but also the ability to control one's display of feelings, the investigators found. They also discovered that "There are some people who simply cannot relate a humorous incident humorously. These people usually leave their listeners wondering which parts of their joke sequences were supposed to be humorous, no matter how entertaining these stories might be if related by others."
2. True. At Texas A&M University, investigators recently reported the findings of an interesting study on the effects of humor in which undergraduates "were exposed to a humorous or nonhumorous tape recording and subsequently were given the opportunity to give money to a needy person." It was found that the students exposed to the humorous tape contributed significantly more than did those who were exposed to the nonhumorous tape.
3. False. The Texas A&M University study, which explored the effects of being exposed to humor, found that when humor is introduced in a social situation it can markedly increase attraction and make the other person more receptive. The investigation showed, incidentally, that women did not share men's appreciation of hostile humor, but responded positively to virtually all other types and varieties.

4. False. An investigation by behavior scientists from the University of Massachusetts, the University of Evansville and Indiana University, studied 90 textbooks. Some made use of humorous comments or amusing illustrations to make the text more appealing to undergraduate readers. Others did not. The subjects, 180 recruits from the student body, were assigned chapters to read. Each student then filled out a questionnaire designed to fully assess his or her responses to the material. The investigators found that while the use of humor is significantly related to the enjoyment of a text, it is not strongly related to interest, persuasiveness, nor capacity for learning.
5. True. But only if your audience happens to be of the same sex you are. In a study conducted by a team of Indiana University investigators, "humor use in an audio-taped lecture by a male or female professor was varied to produce versions with (a) no humor, (b) self-disparaging humor, (c) other humor and (d) sexual humor. After exposure to the lecture materials, male and female subjects' perception of the lecturer's intelligence and appeal was assessed." The investigators concluded that using self-disparaging humor is more appealing to members of the speaker's own sex than to members of the opposite sex; and that in sharp contrast to the findings on the use of self-disparaging humor, the findings on sexual humor demonstrate that a speaker using such humor is likely to be more appealing to members of the opposite sex than to members of the same sex.
6. True. Studies on the psychodynamics of humor conducted at North Adams State College (Mass.) and at the University of Illinois show that shock — at least mild shock — is one of the most important elements in humor. And it is noted that risqué jokes, which are shocking beyond the limits of other humor, produce greater laughter than other jokes. The researchers concluded that the funniest story for most individuals is the one which provides the greatest shock but also the most "mirthful shock," in other words, the type of shock that a person can respond to playfully. Obviously the degree of shock which is found acceptable — which the person feels comfortable with — varies with the individual. But the principle remains operative with everyone.

Helping Babies Before They're Born

By Mary Ellin Barrett

It was Patricia Glaser's first pregnancy and she wanted it to be perfect. After eight years of marriage, she and her husband finally felt settled and ready to raise children. "I became pregnant without any trouble," she remembers, "and I said, 'Gosh, this is going to be a breeze.'"

But trouble began about four months later, when doctors discovered a large doctors have given intrauterine transfusions to fetuses who have Rh-blood incompatibility with their mothers, and since 1974 physicians have administered drug treatments (either via the mother or by instilling the drug into the amniotic fluid) to fetuses with vitamin deficiency, heartbeat irregularity and thyroid malfunction. But in recent years, thanks to the refinement of prenatal diagnosis, the development of delicate new instruments and the introduction of drugs to cyst on her fetus's left kidney. And to make matters worse, Patricia started going into labor soon after this discovery was made.

For a while, it looked as if she might lose her baby, but doctors intervened just in time. Inserting a long, hollow needle through her abdomen and into the fetus, they drained fluid from the cyst and then gave her a drug to stop the contractions. Patricia's pregnancy continued as planned, and her baby was born only three weeks ahead of schedule. Aside from a nonfunctioning left kidney, he seemed perfectly normal.

The procedure performed on the Glaser fetus was indeed remarkable. Ten years ago an operation like this would not even have been attempted on a human fetus. But in the past several years, doctors have been performing a variety of new techniques on the unborn.

The concept of fetal intervention per se is not new. Since the 1960's, stop premature labor that might otherwise result from surgery in the womb, doctors have been able to dramatically broaden the scope of fetal treatment.

Because the techniques, known as "fetal therapy," are so new, only some two dozen fetuses have been treated with them so far. But continuing research offers the prospect that greater numbers of fetuses may be helped in the future.

The new fetal therapy is comprised of several procedures. Most of them, like the technique performed on the Glaser fetus, involve draining excess fluid that has accumulated in a fetal cavity or organ (if unchecked, such buildup can damage fetal tissues or impede development). "The defects we've treated primarily," says Dr. Fay Redwine, an obstetrician and geneticist at the Medical College of Virginia in Richmond (and one of Patricia Glaser's doctors), "are those where there's some sort of mechanical blockage that can be bypassed by draining off some fluid." To vent the fluid, physicians use needles and draining tubes called catheters or shunts. Doctors can see what they're doing by employing a device called ultrasound, which sends sound waves into the mother's body and then onto a small screen where they form an image of the fetus.

Last August, at the Medical College of Virginia, Dr. Redwine and her colleagues used a long needle equipped with a catheter to drain excess fluid from the chest of a fetus whose lungs had collapsed as a result of the buildup. After the fluid was drained, the catheter was removed — and today the child is a healthy 7-month-old with two functioning lungs.

In another type of procedure, the doctor inserts a minuscule catheter into the fluid-filled area of the fetus and leaves it there, draining fluid into the amniotic sac, until the baby is born. Last November, for example, doctors in Chicago inserted such a device into the brain cavity of a 32-week-old fetus suffering from hydrocephalus, a condition in which an excessive accumulation of cerebral spinal fluid compresses the brain tissues, possibly killing nerve cells. If untreated, severe cases of hydrocephalus can lead to mental retardation, blindness, spasticity or death.

An even more advanced technique was pioneered last year by a team of doctors at the University of California at San Francisco: They took a fetus out of the mother's uterus, operated on it for a kidney disorder and returned it safely to the womb. Although this ex-utero surgery was considered a success, the baby died a few hours after birth because of damage it had sustained prior to the operation.

Still other fetal therapeutic techniques are being researched at the National Institutes of Health in Bethesda, Md. Using monkeys as models, investigators are doing further research on hydrocephalus and examining limb deformities, particularly of the hands and feet, and spina bifida, an opening in the fetal spinal column that in severe cases can lead to paralysis and incontinence of (lack of control over) the bowels and bladder.

As encouraging as all these developments are, doctors stress that fetal therapy still has its uncertainties. Among the risks, says Dr. Redwine, are "introducing infection with the needle or inadvertently damaging some structure that you didn't want to." Another drawback is that diagnosis has its limits: "One of the really scary things about fetal treatment is the possibility of correcting one defect in a fetus who had another unrecognized defect," points out Dr. Michael Harrison, co-director of the fetal treatment program and associate professor of surgery at the University of California at San Francisco.

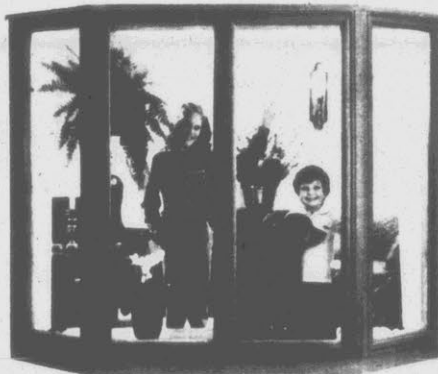

Finally there is the fact that in its present stage of development, fetal therapy can only be applied to a few types of abnormalities. "These problems are relatively rare and it's only a small group that we can intervene for," says Dr. Harrison.

These limitations, of course, may change with time. "What we're interested in," concludes Dr. Gary Hodgen, chief of the pregnancy research branch at the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development at the National Institutes of Health, "is determining what we can and cannot do. We do not want to dupe the public into thinking we can diagnose every defect and save every baby, but it is also unfair to think that no substantive progress could be made. It is surely the case that there will be certain abnormalities of fetal development where intervention will produce a better outcome, than waiting until the child is born. Fetal therapy has potential applications that reach across all the strata of birth defects and that's why we're putting forth the effort."

GOLDEN BLOKE

He has starred in two of the biggest-grossing movies of all time, but you'd never recognize him at the check-out counter. That's because you're used to seeing him completely encased in a golden mix of aluminum and fiberglass.

Anthony Daniels, a diminutive veteran of the British stage, has earned his pence playing C3PO, the gentlemanly robot of Star Wars and The Empire Strikes Back. In New York recently to tape National Public Radio's upcoming adaptation of Empire, Daniels, 36, told us, "The film makers were looking for somebody good at mime and small enough to fit into that ridiculous little hot suit. But at first, I was deeply embarrassed. I thought, what is this rubbish? And my family and friends agreed. Of course, after the movie was such a hit, they all changed their minds."

N.P.R.'s 10-part, five-hour radio broadcast of Empire will air next February and will also feature original cast members Mark Hamill and Billy Dee Williams. Last year's 13-part radio version of Star Wars was so successful it will be rebroadcast this November. For the N.P.R. station nearest you, call toll free (800) 424-2909.

THE LINE ON WAITING

Five years. We Americans spend five years of our lives waiting in line, if you include situations like getting stuck in traffic and being put on hold while telephoning, reports Thomas Saaty, a University of Pittsburgh mathematician. And all this waiting around is making us feel angry, aggressive and beaten down, he says.

It seems the British joyously rush to join any available line — or queue — but, says Saaty, "Americans value their freedom more than any other people; we think we're more in control of our lives. Maybe that's why waiting upsets us more."

He notes that you can fight the frustration by reading or — perish the

KIDS' STUFF

Far be it from us to suggest that those folks in Tinseltown need any more help in acting like children, but Hollywood comedy writers Cathy Cahn and McAdoo Greer obviously think so. They recently founded something called Kidnappers, a "regression service" that tries to unlock the little kid in us stuffy old adults.

Their motto is C.O.D. — Children on Delivery — and for a fee beginning at $25, the duo will show up and encourage you to make a fort out of your mashed potatoes (with a gravy moat, natch), wear your clothes backward or throw a tantrum. For a little more cash, they'll write a bedtime story starring you as the main character.

"Nobody really needs to be older than 8, except maybe to drive a car," Greer, 31, told us. "And it's very therapeutic to regress, you know." Kidnappers also has a serious side. Greer says 20 percent of its fees are donated to a local child-abuse hotline.

thought — talking to those around you. Businesses could do their share, too. Supermarkets, he says, could post their least crowded hours, and doctors' offices could initiate the system used in many bakeries — take a number and come back when it's your turn.

(MAL)PRACTICE YOU PREACH

Is nothing sacred anymore? Despite their divine connection, it seems not even the clergy can be spared the wrath of lawsuits. That's why men of the cloth everywhere are now finding solace in the growing availability of, believe it or not, clergyman's malpractice insurance.

It all began a few years ago when the parents of a teen-ager sued a Los Angeles pastor after the boy killed himself while undergoing clerical counseling. The case was later thrown out of court, but the ever-enterprising insurance industry soon moved in to soothe alarmed clergy. Patterned closely after plans available for psychologists, the clergy coverage is usually sold as a rider to a church's general liability plan. Premiums range from $12 to $250 and may provide up to $1 million in liability coverage.

SUICIDE AND THE BRAIN

An abnormality in a specific brain chemical may be the cause of many suicides and suicide attempts, according to two new studies.

After examining the brains of 19 suicide victims and those of 19 others who died in similarly violent ways, separate research at Wayne State University and the National Institute of Mental Health revealed that the suicide victims' brains reflected much lower levels of a neurotransmitter — chemical messenger — called serotonin.

As reported recently in Science News, this finding suggests that regardless of whether a person is suffering mainly from depression, schizophrenia, alcoholism or a personality disorder, the low serotonin level may be the critical factor in whether or not suicide is attempted. It is hoped that family members of suicide victims and of those who have attempted suicide could be screened at an early age and perhaps even treated with an antidepressant drug that enhances the serotonin level.

Our Story: GALAN AND YUAN CHEN ARE FOUND WITH THE GOLDEN CASKET IN THEIR HANDS. "WHAT LUCK," THE CAPTAIN THINKS, TASTING A REWARD. HIS SMILE FADES WHEN HE OPENS THE BOX: "THE SACRED RING! IT IS GONE!" ENRAGED, HE MARCHES HIS CAPTIVES TO THE PALACE AT UJJAIN.

"KNEEL BEFORE THE GREAT HARSHA," THE CAPTAIN BARKS. THE EMPEROR IS BENT LIKE AN OLD TREE, YET HE HAS BORNE SWEET FRUIT.

FOR ALL EYES ARE ON THE WOMAN BESIDE HIM, HIS DAUGHTER MAYANA, A MAID OF TWELVE SUMMERS IN THE FRESHNESS OF FIRST BLOOM. "IT WILL GO EASIER FOR YOU IF YOU RETURN THE RING," HARSHA DECLARES. GALAN JUMPS TO HIS FEET AND PROTESTS.

"WE STOLE NOTHING. THE CASKET WAS DROPPED BY THE THIEVES." THE CAPTAIN REBUTS THIS TESTIMONY WITH A BLOW TO GALAN'S HEAD. "IF YOU ADMIT NOTHING, YOU LOSE EVERYTHING," THE EMPEROR CONCLUDES. "BEHEAD THESE SHINE. NOW. IN MY SIGHT."

MAYANA WHISPERS TO HER FATHER. "BE NOT HASTY. I DON'T THINK THE OLDER MAN IS A THIEF, BUT YUAN CHEN, A WISE MAN I SUMMONED HERE."

HARSHA REGARDS HER SKEPTICALLY. "WAIT," HE CALLS OUT FINALLY. "THEY MAY YET BE CONVINCED. QUESTION THE RASCALS... THOROUGHLY." IS IT MERELY THE LIGHT OR DOES MAYANA'S GAZE LINGER ON GALAN AS HE IS LED FROM THE HALL? THE CHRONICLES REPORT ONLY THAT THE INTERROGATION BEGINS AT ONCE. HARSHA GETS NO CONFESSION.
