Beirut Shaken By Fresh Salvos; Accord 'Stalled'

By The Associated Press
War-ravaged west Beirut shuddered under yet another heavy bombardment today as Israeli and Palestinian gunners traded punishing salvos of artillery, tank, rocket and mortar fire. Israeli warplanes also bombed Palestinian artillery positions 19 miles east of the Lebanese capital.

The latest shelling came amid reports that Israel has agreed to a phased withdrawal of PLO fighters from west Beirut. But completion of an agreement was stalled by Syria's continued refusal to accept any guerrillas until Israel agrees to withdraw its army from Lebanon, and by nettlesome details about the timing of the withdrawal and the arrival of an international peacekeeping force.

Sporadic shelling overnight picked up intensity after dawn, driving residents back into basements and shelters after a brief weekend respite, during which the Israelis turned on the taps allowing water into west Beirut for the first time in two weeks.

In today's exchanges, witnesses said Israeli tanks fired massive barrages at PLO positions near the National Museum checkpoint on the Green Line, dividing Christian east Beirut from the Moslem western district. The guerrillas battled back with mortars and bazookas.

Associated Press correspondents Tom Baldwin and Samuel Koo, watching from a rooftop vantage point close to the museum line in Christian east Beirut, said there was no sign of an Israeli armor advance despite the intensity of the tank fire.

Blaming PLO fighters for sparking the latest exchange, Israel said its gunners fired at the guerrillas who launched Katyusha rockets at Israeli forces near the city's race course. The Tel Aviv command also said its troops "consolidated" their positions around the PLO enclave at the Bourj al-Barajneh refugee camp on the southern edge of the city.

The military command also reported that Israeli jets bombed Palestinian artillery positions in Syrian-controlled territory 19 miles east of Beirut. The command charged that the guns had shelled Israeli positions east of Beirut. It was the first Israeli air raid in three days.

On the political front, Prime Minister Menachem Begin expressed optimism Sunday that the Palestine Liberation Organization's forces "will leave soon and we will not have to enter Beirut."

Begin in a speech in Jerusalem said that up to 2,500 guerrillas could remain in west Beirut to protect the Palestinian civilians there until a multinational Western peacekeeping force is deployed. Previously Israel demanded that all the estimated 6,000 to 9,000 guerrillas leave before the peacekeepers from the United States, France, Italy and Greece came in.

Six Dead, 15 Hurt In Terrorist Raid

PARIS SHOOTING — Firemen carry an injured victim from the Goldenberg restaurant today after gunmen with automatic weapons killed at least six people and wounded some 15 others in a Jewish neighborhood of central Paris. (AP Laserphoto)

PARIS (AP) — Gunmen sprayed automatic weapons fire into a lunchtime crowd at a popular Jewish restaurant today, killing at least six people and wounding 15 others before escaping, police said.

Between two and four attackers opened fire shortly after 1 p.m. (7 a.m. EDT) near Jo Goldenberg's Restaurant on the Rue des Rosiers in central Paris, then ran down the street shooting wildly at passers-by and fled on foot down a sidestreet, police and witnesses said. Earlier unconfirmed reports said the gunmen opened fire near a synagogue.

No group immediately claimed responsibility for the attack — which appeared to be the fourth incident of anti-Semitic violence in Paris in a week. A left-wing anarchist group claimed responsibility for the earlier attacks, saying they were retaliations for Israel's two-month-old invasion of Lebanon to rout the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Police said at least three attackers were involved, but it was unclear if the shooting started inside or near the restaurant. Witnesses said between two and four gunmen escaped.

Pools of blood soaked the floor of the popular restaurant, which has a yellow-and-black facade decorated with stars of David. An emergency medical teams erected a makeshift hospital across the bloodstained street to treat wounded. One of the dead was a plainclothes police officer, police said.

"Don't cry for me," wailed restaurant owner Jo Goldenberg, who was uninjured. "Cry for the others. It was horrible, horrible." A witness told The Associated Press she was walking her dog when she heard gunfire and saw "two small thin men running into the street. They kept shooting as they ran, shooting at everything and everybody. I thought for sure I'd be killed."

It was the bloodiest attack against a Jewish establishment in Paris since Oct. 3, 1980, when a bomb left on a parked motorbike blew up outside a synagogue on fashionable Rue Copernic. Four people were killed in the blast and nine were wounded, all passers-by. Police have made no arrests in the case.

The head of the PLO's Paris office denounced the restaurant shooting. Ibrahim Sous, whose aide was assassinated several weeks ago when bombers blew up his car, said his organization is against "all blind violence."

Taking Aim At Helms, East

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina's Democratic Party, taking aim at Republican Sens. Jesse Helms and John East for their support for a bill raising cigarette taxes, today said the higher tax was devastating to the state's economy.

Party officials held a news conference to present a solid front of opposition to the higher tobacco tax by North Carolina's seven Democratic congressmen and other party figures.

"Two Republican senators sold us down the river," said Maxton Bass, a Democratic farmer from Newton Grove. "I think all tobacco farmers should remember this when it comes time to vote in the fall."

"When you do something to harm tobacco in North Carolina," said Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, "it's almost like harming your own child."

Their attacks followed a full-page advertisement Sunday in the News and Observer of Raleigh that dubbed Helms and East the "Tobacco Tax Twins."

Helms and East cast crucial votes in support of a bill raising $99 billion in taxes over three years, including a doubling of the federal excise tax on cigarettes to 16 cents per pack.

Helms and East later said they cast their votes to help President Reagan's tax bill, and East has said he would oppose the bill if it comes back to the Senate. It is now in a House-Senate conference committee.

At the news conference, Democratic officials presented statements from each of the state's Democratic congressmen and congressional candidates voicing opposition to the tobacco tax.

The advertisement drew a sharp response from Helms, who accused Gov. Jim Hunt of being behind it. Hunt aides denied the charge.

"It may have had an effect on the senators' votes in the future," Wayne McDevitt, head of the party's unity campaign, said of the ads.

Watkins accused Helms and East of abandoning the best interests of North Carolina with the vote, and said they did so because their political organization, the National Congressional Club, receives a large majority of its money from out of state contributors.

To Be Opened

The new terminal building at the Pitt-Greenville Airport will be officially opened Tuesday at a 10:30 a.m. ribbon cutting ceremony.

Formal dedication of the 5,000 square-foot, $350,000 facility is tentatively scheduled for Oct. 15.

Construction of the new terminal began about Oct. 1, 1981, and the facility was occupied July 1.

Financing of the new building came from a $175,000 state grant and funds appropriated by the Pitt County Board of Commissioners and the Greenville City Council.

With the completion of the terminal, some $3 million has been spent on improvements to the airport since 1974.

The one remaining major improvement project, still in the planning stage, is the installation of a full instrument landing system, which is expected to cost a half-million dollars or more.

Airport manager Jim Turcotte said the new building at Pitt-Greenville Airport is the only terminal in the state "designed and built as a commuter terminal."

Governors Quietly Talk Amendment On Budget

By DON McLEOD
AP Political Writer

AFTON, Okla. (AP) — The nation's governors are quietly debating the balanced budget amendment President Reagan wants and openly considering bypassing him with an appeal to Congress for the kind of "new federalism" they want.

The proposed constitutional amendment that would require a balanced federal budget is an election year embarrassment for many of the governors attending their annual convention.

But it was scheduled for discussion today during the governors-only work session where it could be argued freely behind closed doors without putting the body on record one way or the other on the issue.

Meanwhile, the group's executive committee approved a preliminary proposal calling for the governors draft a "new federalism" program of their own after failing in six months of negotiations to reach agreement with the White House.

Despite the National Governors' Association's reluctance to take a formal position on the balanced budget measure, its chairman, Republican Gov. Richard Snelling of Vermont, was among those willing to express a personal opinion.

"I think it's nonsense," Snelling said in an opening news conference on Sunday. "My own view is that you ought to have balanced budgets almost all the time, but I personally do not think it is a worthy idea to try to enshrine the call for a balanced budget in the Constitution. I think rather we should elect congressmen and senators who have the political guts to make those decisions necessary to have a balanced budget."

On the other hand, host Gov. George P. Nigh of Oklahoma, a Democrat, said, "in Oklahoma it's required to have a balanced budget. I think it should be mandatory at the federal level."

Snelling said before today's the meeting there would be a discussion but no resolution.

Conference leaders otherwise agreed to keep the question off the public agenda and there were no signs of any maverick governor trying to force the issue onto the floor.

The balanced budget amendment, which won Senate approval last week, is a problem for governors because many of them fear the federal budget would be balanced largely at their expense.

They already complain that too much of Reagan's

Congress Tightening Up On Medical Deductions

WASHINGTON (AP) — As Congress struggles to raise taxes by $98.9 billion, some lawmakers are trying to tighten the medical deductions taken by millions of Americans — like the young man who wrote off the cost of a hair transplant.

Medical deductions are among dozens of tax questions and spending cuts under consideration by a House-Senate committee which hopes to finish work this week on a bill to increase taxes by $98.9 billion and cut spending by more than $16 billion.

Lyn Nofziger, President Reagan's former chief political aide, has been recruited to return to the White House as an unpaid consultant to help the administration win congressional approval of the package.

Only last week, Nofziger and a group of other conservative Reagan supporters issued a statement saying they opposed the increase. But White House spokesman Larry Speakes said today that Nofziger turned around on the issue after meeting with Reagan.

Still, the number of unresolved issues in the package far exceeds those that have been settled. One of those is the tax break for medical expenses.

Current law allows a person to deduct half — up to $150 — the cost of medical insurance, even if no other medical expenses are deducted. The other half of insurance costs and other medical expenses may be written off if they exceed 3 percent of adjusted gross income.

A 24-year-old man used that provision to write off his hair transplant. He won his case when the U.S. Tax Court ruled medical deductions are proper for any operation affecting any part of the body, including the scalp.

That case and others like it have been cited as examples of tax abuse by lawmakers searching for revenues to cut the federal deficit. In response, the Senate voted to allow the deduction only for expenses that exceed 7 percent of income, and reduced the off-the-top insurance deduction to $100.

Together, those two changes would bring the government about $4.5 billion over the next three years. But despite the need for revenue, the charges of abuse, and the pledge by Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., conference chairman, to drop the 7 percent threshold to 5 percent, the negotiators have not yet reached agreement on the issue.

We all know that forage crops are a major phase of the livestock industry. With feed comprising such a large portion of livestock expenses it is understandable that forage crops are of such importance. Careful planning and a reasonable understanding of livestock nutrient requirements can be the foundation to building a successful livestock operation based on the cheapest source of feed available.

In order to have a quality forage, fertilization and liming practices must be followed. It is necessary to maintain soil fertility if you expect results. The use of fertilizer, especially nitrogen, to stimulate early spring and late autumn-fall growth on pure grass (fescue, orchard grass, bluegrass) stands will change the monthly forage supply. Summer applications of nitrogen on bermuda grass and summer annuals will return more forage than similar amounts applied to fescue because of their genetic composition.

Excellent winter grazing can be achieved using winter cover crops. These cover crops improve soil quality and help prevent erosion. Rye, oats and barley provide winter grazing for cattle. It would be recommended to plant rye in eastern North Carolina. Ryegrass also provides some grazing during the winter but mostly growth occurs in April and May. Crimson clover is another cool season forage that may be grazed during winter months.

Beef producers need to plan now for winter grazing. Soil samples should be taken immediately in order to know fertilization rates necessary for a successful forage program. Planning is the key to rewarding production in forage crops.

$1 Million Fish Caught

SEATTLE (AP) - A 65-year-old man apparently has caught a million-dollar salmon, but he may wind up with nothing more than a fish dinner.

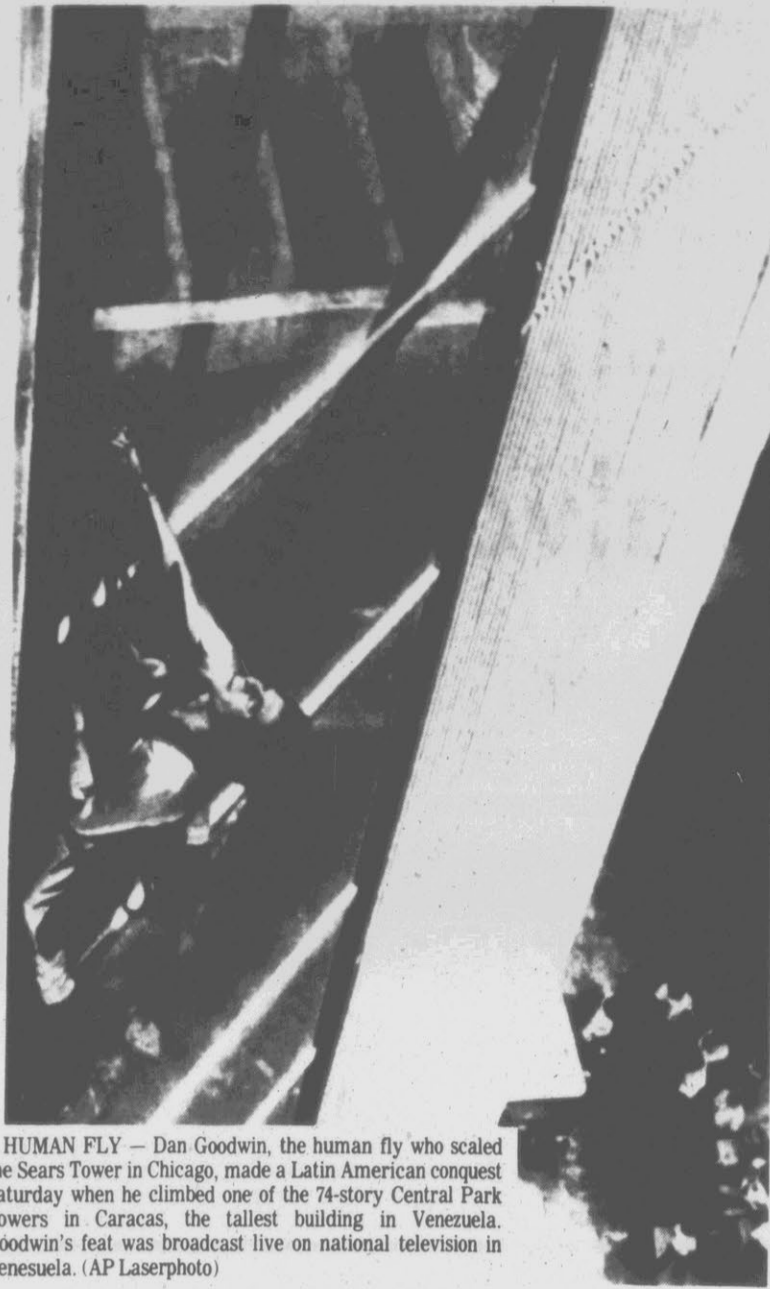

Joe Smith of Edmonds landed the salmon Saturday while fishing with his son, Ron, about a mile south of Whidbey Island. The fish had been tagged for the recent Schucks salmon derby in Puget Sound, and was worth $1 million if caught during the 12-hour derby.

No one caught the elusive fish in time, but derby sponsors promised $10,000 to any derby entrant who caught it before Oct. 31. If it was caught by a non-entrant, the prize would be $5,000, with another $5,000 given to the United Way.

But Smith may have unknowingly cleaned himself out of the money. He kept the tag, but cleaned the fish immediately and threw the head overboard - along with a second tiny identifying marker that officials implanted in the fish's head to avoid fraud.

"They'll look at the tag and make a decision next week, I guess," said Smith, who added that he won't be too upset if he doesn't get paid, "because it should make a pretty good meal."

Telethon Is Set Friday

Jeff Allen has announced that the Greenville Jaycees will be chairing a satellite telephone station for the fifth annual Cystic Fibrosis Telethon. The satellite station will be for the convenience of area citizens who would like to support the telethon effort without having to make a long distance call.

Co-sponsored by the New Bern Jaycees and Jayettes and television station WCTI-TV, Channel 12, the telethon will be aired for 19 hours beginning at 11 p.m. Friday continuing through 6 p.m. Saturday.

Two TV personalities, Philip MacHale and Richard Shoberg, will appear on the program. Shoberg is currently starring as Tom Cudahy in ABC TV's "All My Children." MacHale is best known for his role as the "Runner" in Hardee's commercials. Another personality on the telethon will be Donnie Weaver, who will perform his latest release, "I've Just Gotta Talk To You."

Approximately 50 area talent acts from eastern North Carolina are also scheduled to appear on this year's telethon.

More than $70,000 was raised in last year's telethon broadcast. Allen notes that the funds are used for research, care and education to help those who suffer with cystic fibrosis. The Foundation supports centers at Duke and N.C. Memorial Hospital and more than 125 other such centers in the U.S.

Dismay Over Sweet Roof

NEW MILFORD, Conn. (AP) - The Town Hall has the sweetest roof in New Milford, but officials aren't pleased.

The hazards of disturbing a swarm of honey-producing bees have delayed workers hoping to renovate the building in time for the town's 275th anniversary celebration this year. The bees have built a giant hive beneath the roof of the old building.

Officials called in a professional beekeeper, but even Austin Knox is having trouble routing the insects and getting to the 2 tons of honey he estimates are beneath the roof.

Knox, who has been working on the bee-removal project for six weeks, says that as quickly as he can plug entry holes in the roof with a caulking compound, worker bees rebore the passages.

To divert bees from their Town Hall hive, Knox set up a commercial-style hive on the lawn outside the building. He collected 40 pounds of honey and 4 pounds of bees in 10 days.

Most of the bees are staying put, but Knox hasn't given up. If he can't get the bees out, he plans to insert a message into a time capsule to be buried as part of the celebration. The message in the capsule, to be dug up in 100 years, will warn that Town Hall shouldn't be torn down until the honey is extracted.

"Honey is like wine," Knox says. "It gets better with age."

Fayetteville Hay Street Clean-Up Is Progressing

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) - Law enforcement officials say Fayetteville's reputation as a violent city should improve after the city finishes a $3 million project to clean up an area on Hay Street known as an adult mecca for military personnel.

"We have a commitment to make that part of town a nice place to go," said John M. Monaghan Jr., an assistant city manager. "It's something that a big sector of the community is interested in."

The city of Fayetteville, looking to bring some beauty to Hay Street, has announced it will spend about $3 million for property in the area.

Police Chief Danny Dixon thinks the change could pull Fayetteville out of FBI crime statistics as one of the nation's 10 most violent cities during the past decade.

"We will be able to control (adult establishments) better because those bars and night clubs will not be able to cluster anywhere in the city," Dixon said.

A hospital under construction on nearby Robeson Street should spawn construction of medical offices, drug stores and other retail businesses in the area, including the 500 block, Monaghan said.

The 150-bed hospital, owned by Hospital Corp. of America, is scheduled for completion in April.

"The new hospital has improved the market for that land (on Hay Street)," he said. "We will buy some area for future development and some for immediate redevelopment."

A 1979 ordinance prevented the concentration of adult establishments in any other part of the city, located near Fort Bragg Military Reservation and Pope Air Force Base.

"It's not the function of the city of Fayetteville to provide that sort of entertainment to the GIs," city attorney Robert C. Cogswell said.

The 1979 zoning ordinance dispersed similar adult establishments to designated areas of the city. Officials also began requiring licenses for owners of such businesses and their entertainers.

The Hay Street redevelopment is part of a downtown revitalization project that will involve more than 30 square blocks. Estimates of the total public expense and the private development it could attract have exceeded $100 million, Monaghan said.

The city will spend about $9 million for downtown parking, street and park improvements and a mall.

Some landowners have indicated a willingness to sell their Hay Street properties voluntarily, city officials said. If not, the city has condemnation powers.

Monaghan said the area could take five or six years to redevelop.

Fayetteville officials hope to complete the downtown revitalization project by the year 2000, Monaghan said. Development in western downtown and preservation of historic buildings and sites in the eastern section will be encouraged.

SWEET-TART CARROTS
It's a low-sodium recipe.
1 pound carrots, pared and cut in 1/4-inch thick crosswise slices
Boiling water
2 small scallions, thinly sliced
2 tablespoons light brown sugar
1 tablespoon unsalted butter
Grated rind and juice of 1/2 of a fresh medium-size lemon
1/4 teaspoon ground ginger
1/4 teaspoon garlic powder

chiles, undrained
Salt, pepper and sugar to taste
Boil potatoes in their skins; drain and cool; remove skins and cut in half lengthwise; slice crosswise; cut into 1/4-inch-wide strips. Shred cabbage — there should be 4 cups not packed down. Whisk together oil and vinegar; add potatoes, cabbage and chiles and toss with salt, pepper and sugar. Serve at once while cabbage is crisp; or chill if you want cabbage to wilt somewhat. Makes 6 servings.

In a covered saucepan, cook the carrots in about an inch of boiling water until tender — 10 to 12 minutes. Drain and reserve carrots. In the saucepan over low heat simmer together scallion, sugar, butter, grated lemon rind, lemon juice, ginger and garlic to blend flavors — 2 to 3 minutes. Add carrots and reheat. Makes four 1/2-cup servings.

Governing Seen Costly

The cost of supporting a member of the U.S. Senate and the House of Representatives comes high these days. At least, the cost comes high with some senators and congressmen.

Office spending records show that Sen. Jesse Helms' office expenses totaled $414,445 between Oct. 1, 1981, and March 31 - a six-month period. Still, that beat fellow Republican Sen. John East, a former East Carolina University political science professor serving his first term. East covered those six months in $385,285. Assuming those expenses hold up throughout the year, the two senators require nearly $1.6 million to operate their offices annually.

According to The Associated Press, those expenses are only expenses - they do not include salaries for staffers in Washington or in North Carolina. The AP reports Helms has 52 people on his staff; East has 51.

Congressmen, with smaller areas to represent and presumably with less expenses, don't cost quite so much. For the period Jan. 1 through March 31, the 11 Tar Heel congressmen reported expenses totaling just over $250,000 - ranging from lows of $11,430 for Rep. Charles Whitley of Goldsboro and $12,160 for Rep. Walter Jones of Farmville to a high of $39,685 for Rep. Charles Rose of Fayetteville.

Members of Congress have a great deal of leeway in what they can label expenses. East, for example, listed $133 for purchases at a Washington book store. One of the books was entitled, "Reaganomics."

Perhaps it will help the senator and his colleagues trim their budgets easier than the president has.

Clearly, It's No Easy Role

Dr. H. David Bruton of Southern Pines has resigned as the State Board of Education's chairman, and Gov. Hunt has recommended C. D. Spangler, Jr. of Charlotte as his successor.

Bruton has been chairman for five years, and the pediatrician said he felt it necessary to give more time to his practice.

Bruton years as chairman have been controversial ones as education always is but the governor said his resignation was not requested, rather he asked Bruton to stay on.

Spangler, a businessman, will soon be pondering such issues as fiscal control of State education funds, and the lack of funds to provide desirable increases to teachers.

It clearly is a great challenge to anyone to serve as Board of Education chairman. Spangler will face some difficult issues, and the solutions involve the education of our state's young people.

THIS AFTERNOON

Who's To Decide?

By PAUL T. O'CONNOR
RALEIGH - Who should decide when a case is going to court? Should it be the district attorney, as is the practice currently? Or, should the resident Superior Court judge set the calendar? It might sound like a minor matter. But those who think the law needs changing say there's plenty at stake.

With the authority to set trial dates, the district attorney can really flex his muscles and help his own cases. He can schedule an important trial for a judge he knows is easy on the prosecution. He can use the calendar to make life difficult on a defense lawyer he doesn't like. He can schedule a case, have the defense lawyer and witness sitting in court all week, and never bring the case to trial.

The Governor's Crime Commission has recommended that the 1983 General Assembly give the authority to set the calendar to the chief resident Superior Court judge. Each judicial district would probably need a courts' administrator who would help the judge with the calendar. That could cost in the neighborhood of $600,000 a year.

Those proposing the change said in their report to the commission that, "since the district attorney represents one of the parties in every criminal lawsuit, this creates the appearance of unfairness and can result in exploitation of control of case scheduling for the benefit of one side."

"This is an unfair tool that the district attorneys have and in some counties defense attorneys use it unfairly to call cases at their convenience," said Judge Robert Collier of Statesville, the commission's court committee chairman. "It will be fair if someone who could take both sides into account set the calendar."

Collier also noted that neither the federal government nor any other state court system gives the authority to calendar the prosecutor.

During the commission's discussion of their bill, two legislators who are also lawyers said they didn't like the idea. Sen. Robert Swain of Asheville said the "resident Superior Court judge is not supposed to be involved in the preparation of a case." Swain said the courts have bent over backwards lately to help the defendant and claud management is the one tool which the prosecutors retain.

Administratively, the change would be expensive. Swain said, and probably it won't improve the calendar system one bit. "The district attorneys know when their cases are ready, when the witnesses are available."

It would be unfair, he said, to put the onus of the state's speedy trial law on the prosecutors (current limit is 120

Don't Take A Vacation

As the earnings statements of large companies get gloomier there is more and more pressure on corporation executives to make economies in their firms. Most companies do this first by firing the office boy, then retrenching in the mail room department, and finally cutting the budget on the softball team.

But as time goes on and stockholders get unhappier, management may have to start making cuts in other levels of the company.

How does someone in a large company save his job when all around him or her are losing theirs? Perhaps I can be of help.

The first bit of advice is DO NOT TAKE A VACATION. No matter how badly you need one, hang in there, or else this is what could happen:

"Maxwell, what are you doing sitting at my desk?"

"Oh, Herndon, how was the Cape?"

"Fine. Now what are you doing in my office?"

"Well, finance decided to merge sales with packaging, and they asked me to take over. I naturally fought the move, but they were adamant. We tried to reach you on the Cape, but they said you were racing in the Hyannis-Nantucket sailboat trials. How did you do?"

"I came in third. Now where have I been moved to?"

"That's what they were trying to reach you about. They've had to cut across the board. I spoke up for you but..."

ART BUCHWALD

The second bit of advice is to institute an economy committee before one is constituted without you. Go into the boss and say, "B.J., I'd like to organize a cost-cutting program so we don't get caught like International Harvester with our pants down. What I suggest we do is form a team and look into every department to see how we can eliminate waste. I could report to you within a month, so you'll have something to show the board."

If your idea is accepted, you must use great tact in suggesting the elimination of somebody else's job, on the off-chance that he might survive and do you in.

You could say, "Gentlemen, I think we'd make a mistake if we let Fowler go. It's true his advertising campaign for Fluff was a complete disaster, but we must remember there has been great consumer resistance in toiletries for dogs this year. Fowler is a genius when it comes to advertising, even though he has a tendency to antagonize everyone he comes into contact with."

If Fowler loses his job, you have the minutes of the meeting to prove that you've defended him.

To show that you have the company's interest at heart before your own, announce some economies you're making in your own department.

"I'm happy to announce, gentlemen, that I've furloughed two telephone operators and laid off four watchmen in our Wichita warehouse, thus saving us $33,000. This cuts my department to the bone."

The biggest danger during an economy drive is that the company may hire an outside consulting firm to make a private report on which people should be let go.

If one comes in the plant, stop all work you are doing and spend every waking moment with him. Most consultants know little or nothing about the business they are investigating, and if you can make them look good, they may believe you are necessary to the firm.

"Tell me, Herndon, who sits at this desk?" the consultant asks.

"Maxwell. He's a great golfer. He always plays on Wednesday afternoon with his doctor."

To the editor:

Many of my friends, remembering the days when I was an editor and publisher, often discuss the many new technologies employed by newspapers in preparing news copy. With this as evidence of interest, the following is passed on to your readers.

As most everyone knows, the writers and reporters still sit at their typewriters, but instead of on a piece of paper, what they write now appears on an electronic screen and also it is simultaneously sent to a central control area where it is further processed for the next edition.

Now it seems there are standard phrases which appear in all news stories - international, national, state and local - so, in the interest of saving time for the writer, these phrases have been programmed into his machine and activated by special color-coded keys on the keyboard of his typewriter, as follows:

Pink key: "One source said..."
Red key: "Sources in Washington said..."
Light Blue: "Who asked not to be named..."
Dark Blue: "Who also asked not to be named..."
Orange: "Who did not wish to be identified said..."
Black: "Officials who asked not to be identified said..."
This system works pretty well and is not too hard to learn, observed a writer who asked not to be identified.

Strength For Today

IF USED, IT WORKS

There is a story attributed to Mark Twain that an acquaintance in Boston once told him that he planned to take a trip to the Holy Land. "I am going to Mt. Sinai," he said. "I want to go up on that noble mountain on which Moses received the Ten Commandments." And Twain is reputed to have answered, "Why take the long trip? Why not stay in Boston and keep the Ten Commandments?"

Some people have an intellectual interest in religion. Still others thrill over its marvelous symbolism and beautiful liturgy. All these things are good, but insufficient. Religion is something to be used, not admired or exclaimed over or set up in some holy place.

There is a rugged character about religion which transcends all of these other aspects. They have their place, but this is peripheral to the fact that religion is first and foremost practical. It cries out for people to take it and use it. And when they do, they find that it works. - Elisha Douglass

A Stumbling U.S. Policy

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

At the beginning of his presidency Ronald Reagan promised he would restore lagging U.S. military strength, resist Soviet expansionism and end deprivations in Latin America by Fidel Castro's Cuba. He described President Jimmy Carter's foreign policy as "weak, vacillating, amateurish, indecisive and confused." A revival of American activism abroad seemed certain.

But by early this summer it was painfully clear that Reagan's own foreign policy had stumbled badly, buffeted by one world crisis after another. The sudden resignation of Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. in late June represented a belated attempt by the president to regain control of his foreign policy. Haig's insistence that he alone was the "vicar" of American foreign policy had not only exhausted Reagan's patience but had led to a catalogue of confusions and reverses that the new secretary of state, George P. Shultz, must now address:

1) The Soviet Union - Backed by conservatives in both parties, Reagan had long argued that American dealings with the Soviet Union in such areas as grain eales, technology exchange and strategic arms control must be "linked" to Soviet good conduct in other areas. The logic of linkage: If the Russians betrayed our trust in one sphere, they should not be trusted in another. But when the Soviets continued their war against Afghanistan and engineered a martial law crackdown in Poland, tough talk from the president far outran the administration's performance in generating economic and financial reprisals.

Although Reagan could have declared these Soviet actions a roadblock to much-needed disarmament talks, he instead called for "early" arms negotiations without a quid pro quo from the Kremlin. The concept of linkage had disappeared without a trace.

2) Latin America - Haig's warlike rhetoric created expectations of tough U.S. actions to stop Cuba's export of revolution. But when conservative senators protested the basing of MiG fighter-bombers in Cuba, the White House, backed by the Pentagon, chose caution. In dealing with the increasingly repressive Marxist regime in Nicaragua, the administration did little to encourage Nicaraguan resistance groups. The White House's lack of strategy to meet the threat of Cuban-armed Nicaragua disillusioned many Latin Americans.

3) The Middle East - The Reagan administration made three major blunders in this strategically-crucial area. After first seeming to accommodate Israel, it then reversed itself so drastically that it alienated Prime Minister Menachem Begin's government. It then irritated our closest Arab friends by not pressing Israel to fulfill the commitments made at Camp David to negotiate self-government for Arabs in the lands captured west of the Jordan River in the 1967 war. And by failing to take a strong position on Iraq's war with Ayatollah Khomeini's Soviet-backed Iran, the administration exposed the oil-rich Persian Gulf states to the threat of religious wars and Soviet penetration.

When Israel's military invasion of Lebanon shattered Palestine Liberation Organization forces in June, the administration's hesitation, then acquiescence, made the United States appear impotent to the world - and especially to the Arab nations.

What happened? Almost certainly, there has been no change in Ronald Reagan's world view. But as a novice in international affairs, the new president delegated the substance of foreign policy to men who did not share his basic instincts enough to translate them into action.

Chief among these was the pragmatic Haig, who had the freest hand of any recent secretary of state. Without interference from the White House, he staffed his Department with Foreign Service officers, holdovers from previous administrations and outsiders without visible ideological connection to Ronald Reagan. Policy-making power remained in the hands of temporizing, business-as-usual State Department professionals.

National Security Council (NSC) meetings were the scene of slugfests between the deep-toned and aggressive Haig and the soft-voiced, lawfully Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger. The styles of the two men belied their substance. For all his stentorian passion, Haig came down on the side of a foreign policy that was almost indistinguishable from that of the previous administration except in the human rights area. Weinberger favors a tougher stance against the Soviets.

For example, when the NSC met last December after the martial-law clampdown in Poland, Haig, the Europeanist, counseled caution: Don't interrupt the U.S.-Soviet-European nuclear arms talks just begun in Geneva. Don't declare the Poles in default of their almost $30 billion debt to the west. Don't pressure our Western allies to get out of billion-dollar contracts to finance Moscow's trans-Siberian gas pipeline to seven European countries, including five NATO members.

Weinberger and CIA Director William Casey strongly opposed Haig, arguing that playing to the alliance would let the Soviets off the hook. Reagan's own instinct was to go all the way in punishing the Russians. But in the end, Haig played his ace, dealt, ironically, out of Reagan's own hand: In early 1981 the president had fulfilled a purely political campaign pledge to end the anti-Soviet grain embargo imposed by President Carter. That left the United States without the means to pressure the NATO allies into anti-Soviet sanctions that might hurt their own economies. The United States did nothing to punish the Soviets for their Polish putsch.

Many of Reagan's foreign-policy problems have stemmed from another ill-considered campaign pledge. He promised not to allow his

Additives Make One Wonder

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

You can't always tell a food by its label these days.

The additives that are listed often outnumber the basic ingredients and consumers may find it hard to figure out what they are actually getting.

The Food and Drug Administration, which regulates most food labeling, says that federal laws generally are not designed to restrict the use of additives, but are aimed simply at making sure that the additives which ARE used are safe.

The broadest definition of an additive, the FDA says, is a substance which becomes part of a food product when added either directly or indirectly. There are almost 3,000 substances which are intentionally added to foods today for one reason or another, the agency says. An additional 10,000 compounds or combinations of compounds find their way into various foods indirectly, during processing, packaging or storage.

The use of additives is not new. During what many people think of as "the good old days," additives were just as common and often more dangerous than they are today. In the years around the turn of the century, for example, the FDA says manufacturers commonly used pigments containing toxic metals like lead, copper and arsenic to color foods.

Today's additives are much more strictly regulated. A manufacturer who wants to introduce a new additive must first prove that it is safe.

Some consumer advocates argue, however, that many of the additives are unnecessary, even if they are not dangerous.

Deciding which additives - if any - you want to avoid can be easier if you understand the function of different ingredients. The FDA says additives have four basic purposes:

-To maintain or improve nutritional value. This group includes things like vitamins and minerals which are added to foods to fortify people's diets and replace nutrients which have been destroyed or lost in processing.

-To maintain freshness. Many additives are used to prevent foods from spoiling in the store or when you get them home. These products also preserve the natural color and flavor of foods and keep fats and oils from turning rancid.

-To help in processing or preparation. These compounds give body and texture to food, control things like acidity and prevent caking or lumping. Chemicals called emulsifiers, for example, give products like peanut butter and mayonnaise an even texture and prevent them from separating.

-To make food more appealing. This group is the most controversial. Additives in this category, including coloring agents and natural and synthetic flavors, generally are designed to make food look and taste better.

The government has a free pamphlet explaining food additives and listing 130 of the more common ones. It's called "Food Additives" and is available from Dept. 520K, the Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, Colo., 81009.

N.C. Demos Facing Challenges

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) —
State Democratic leaders, conceding they will not match the Republicans' warchest this year, are putting together a program aimed at helping protect their congressmen and assisting a challenge or two against GOP seats. Although the Democratic Party will be without an executive director after this week, party leaders insist that is not a sign their organization is in disarray or that they aren't seriously preparing for November.

"They've got an enormous amount of money," said Wayne McDevitt, director of the program, said of the GOP. "If we depended on battling them dollar for dollar, we'd lose."

McDevitt, a veteran party activist from Madison County, went on leave last week from his job in charge of Gov. Jim Hunt's western office to direct the Democrats' "unity campaign."

He says the project has a $100,000 budget and promises a variety of high-technology assistance to Democratic congressional candidates. The campaign is supposed to help legislative candidates too, but the real focus is on congressional races.

By national measurements, Democrats expect to gain congressional seats in 1982, particularly because of deep economic frustrations. Yet in North Carolina, Republicans say they find President Reagan remains popular and boast they expect to capture some Democratic congressmen.

Democrats have a seven-to-four grip on congressional seats in the state, but Republicans hope for gains here to offset expected losses in other states.

The GOP is mounting what at this stage are serious, well-financed campaigns challenging Democratic congressmen in several districts — against Ike Andrews in the 4th; Charles Whitley in the 3rd; Steve Neal in the 5th. Their challenges against Bill Hefner in the 8th and newly nominated Tim Valentine in the 2nd may also prove serious.

The Democrats' best chance at a gain is in the 11th, where James Clarke is challenging freshman Republican William Hendon, although party leaders claim they have a chance against Gene Johnston in the 6th too.

To fight the GOP, McDevitt says the party will pay for a staff worker in each of eight congressional campaigns. They will establish telephone bank operations and be part of what the Democrats hope will be a sophisticated targeting of voters in key precincts and even neighborhood blocks.

The party will also continue voter-registration drives, particularly aiming at blacks; conduct polling and provide advertising assistance.

The program contrasts with past Democratic "unity" campaigns, that pretty much consisted of scheduling political rallies. The Republicans' skillful use of computer and direct-mail techniques have forced the Democrats to pursue more sophisticated methods.

"It's very important that we offer an alternative," says McDevitt. "We've got to deliver a message on what our alternative is. We're going to enable the candidate to get out that alternative."

Just as the campaign is beginning, state party Executive Director Janice Faulkner is leaving the party to rejoin the faculty at East Carolina University. State Party Chairman Russell Walker and Ms. Faulkner say her leaving is voluntary, but other sources close to the party say there has been friction between her and Hunt administration officials on the party's budget and other matters.

Administration officials say McDevitt may wind up with the title, although he and Walker both say there are no plans for that now. But with the job empty and McDevitt directing the party's real campaign, he may be the de facto director.

Walker also plans to be daily in the party's headquarters, located in a white-columned antebellum house two blocks from the state Capitol, although he has his own state Senate re-election campaign to run in Randolph County, too.

Marijuana Big N.C. Cash Crop

By The Associated Press
State investigators say marijuana ranks second only to tobacco as the leading profit-making crop in North Carolina.

Marijuana may generate $640 million in illegal profits in North Carolina this year on an estimated 1 million illegal pot plants being grown in the state, says Charles J. Overton III, supervisor for the State Bureau of Investigation.

Overton said the SBI puts a value of $80 on a pound of confiscated marijuana although the dried pot will bring at least $40 an ounce on the street.

If half this year's marijuana crop is confiscated and destroyed, the street value of the remainder of the crop would be about $640 million — ranking behind only tobacco, which had cash receipts of $1.3 billion in 1981. North Carolina is one of the nation's top producers of tobacco.

The N.C. Crop Reporting Service in Raleigh lists the state's three other leading cash crops last year as soybeans, $296 million; corn, $260 million; and peanuts, $148 million.

The projections do not include the tons of marijuana smuggled in by airplane at secluded landing strips or by boats along the state's coast.

The U.S. Drug Enforcement Agency says the domestic marijuana harvest represents an $8.5 billion market, with more than 30 states each producing marijuana with a street value of at least $100 million.

In addition, federal agents and the U.S. Coast Guard confiscated more than 2 million pounds of pot smuggled into the United States last year, the DEA reports.

An estimated 30 to 40 million Americans use marijuana, according to the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws in Washington, D.C. An estimated 55 million Americans smoke tobacco, according to the Tobacco Institute in Washington, a trade organization.

In North Carolina, the state Department of Human Resources estimates that 1.67 million people smoke cigarettes and 515,700 smoke marijuana.

Major marijuana arrests from federal drug investigations were up 27 percent last year from 2,943 to 3,735.

In North Carolina, the Police Information Network reports that marijuana arrests were up 9.7 percent last year, to 4,253 from 3,854 in 1980. Figures show that almost half the offenders arrested last year were 18 years old or younger.

Overton says many of the marijuana plants in North Carolina are carefully placed in sparsely populated areas of the Blue Ridge Mountains. Law enforcement officers say they expect to seize less than half the crop before it is sold.

He said 107,528 plants have been pulled in SBI raids so far this year with the largest hauls in Stokes and Wilkes counties.

Eight acres with 35,000 marijuana plants were found July 14 in northwest Stokes County and a field of 26,500 plants were found July 27 in northeast Wilkes County.

Wilkes County has been the state's leading known producer of marijuana for at least three years and authorities are predicting a big harvest there again this year.

NSC staff director to gain the kind of power Henry Kissinger and Zbigniew Brzezinski had in the Nixon and Carter administrations. By enforcing that pledge, Reagan denied his NSC staff its most vital functions: harmonizing differences between the Departments of State and Defense, and acting as the president's eyes and ears in his final policy choices.

Reagan's pledge to downgrade his NSC staff deprived his first NSC director, hardliner Richard V. Allen, of prestige and influence. Haig moved at once to exploit Allen's weakness and to claim for himself the role of foreign-policy vicar.

Throughout 1981, policymaking bordered on the chaotic. Combat between Haig and James Baker, the White House chief of staff, cost Reagan what he most needed: credibility abroad as the leader of the West.

By no means has everything Reagan tried in his foreign policy failed or disappointed his ideological allies. He ended the Carter administration's debilitating "human rights" policy and encouraged relations with friendly — if flawed — regimes. He has followed a fairly consistent policy of rebuilding relationships with strategically-vital Turkey and Pakistan.

Until the Falkland Islands war, he had renewed important economic, diplomatic and military contacts with Argentina, Brazil, Chile and other non-democratic Latin American states essential to hemispheric security. He strengthened the resources behind the Rapid Deployment Force for the Persian Gulf. Most important, Reagan followed through on rebuilding America's defenses.

But these moves, as significant as they are, did not appear as part of a coherent foreign policy — one in which a strengthened America would successfully contend the Soviet attempt to dominate world affairs.

With George Shultz as his new secretary of state, Reagan now has the opportunity to re-establish a true American counterpoise to Soviet power. If he does, he will revive the hopes of those who believe that only America's strength and will can preserve freedom throughout the world.

days) and yet not have the prosecutor in control of the calendar. Collier said the new law would have no effect on the speedy trial law. If a judge couldn't schedule a case on time, he'd simply extend the trial period as is his authority now.

Rep. Joe Hackney of Chapel Hill, also a defense lawyer, said there are only a few prosecutors in the state who abuse the calendaring authority. "The DA can wreak havoc on the defense lawyer or the defendant by making him come to court at his discretion. But I haven't seen this abused. And anyway, the judge really is the final arbiter of the calendar. If a defense attorney has a problem with the calendar he can go before the judge and get it changed."

The commission has approved the general idea of giving the judge the power to calendar but has not yet come up with a specific piece of legislation to propose to the General Assembly.

Meese Disclaims Power Role

By JAMES GERSTENZANG
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — In 1981, presidential counselor Edwin Meese III was Washington's hottest political commodity. It was said the California attorney was America's unelected deputy president.

Not long ago, the Chicago Tribune put in print what has been whispered around Washington for months: Meese had been "squeezed out" in a struggle for power at the White House, according to "well-placed sources."

The problem, says Meese, is this: He was never first among equals, he never tried to be deputy president, and he never wanted to be.

"That was never an accurate concept. The news media exaggerated this. Having built up a false impression, some elements felt a need to tear it down," he says.

Meese realizes, though, that descriptions of his diminished influence are emanating from within the White House. Some staffers have the long knives out for Meese, ridiculing his absences from Washington and criticizing his management style.

"I hear that, but I can't understand it," Meese said in an interview. "I have responsibility for dozens of organizational things that make the government go and

(we) don't have problems." He added: "I think the president feels it has worked."

Sitting in an armchair in his corner office looking toward the front lawn of the White House, Meese said there was never a reason to rank him above the others in Ronald Reagan's White House inner circle.

"I've never regarded anyone of us as being preeminent."

Meese, along with chief of staff James A. Baker III, deputy staff chief Michael K. Deaver and national security adviser William Clark, make up Reagan's Big Four. There's no sign that the boss, Ronald Reagan, is dissatisfied with Meese.

But some White House staffers are willing to snipe at Meese — not for attribution:

"He is inclined to take too much on his plate."

"His strength is not really administration or management. I'm not being critical. Objectively, that's not his strong point."

"If you forced him to go to a library for six hours, he'd be happy, and what he'd come out with would be pretty good work."

Eighteen months into the administration, Meese's job has evolved largely into that of top domestic policy adviser. He is described by friends as the first person Reagan turns to in a crisis, but increasingly, those crises involve foreign policy — and Meese gave up his foreign policy portfolio last January during a reorganization that culminated with the appointment of Clark.

Clark's ascension affected Meese two ways: Meese lost control of the crucial foreign policy staff, and the Big Three became a Big Four.

Meese has maintained his position as coordinator of the Cabinet, but a source in the White House says the job just hasn't amounted to much.

Meese has been criticized for being out of town too much, returning too often to California for speaking engagements. But his office says that during the first six months of 1982, he was absent for 73 out of 960 working hours, not counting travel time with Reagan.

"Most of my time is spent with the president," Meese says. "I sit in on every meeting he holds," with the exception of some ceremonial sessions.

"People who say he does not engage in important activities are confusing news-worthy with important," says his top aide, deputy counselor James E. Jenkins. Asked to assess Meese's weaknesses, Jenkins declined, saying "there are enough people sniping at him who are anxious to do that."

The Tribune quoted sources as saying that Meese had been eclipsed by Deaver and Baker. An unidentified senior official was quoted as saying Meese's power was so diminished that, "We're just waiting for the opportunity to make a move. The problem is, there's no place for him to go."

Jenkins was incensed and wrote a seven-page rebuttal, questioning the veracity, motives and reliability of "the leaker."

Baker, in an interview, said of Meese: "There's no diminution of Ed's standing as the chief domestic policy adviser to the president. The president has confidence in his judgment."

He added, "Ed Meese has been advising Ronald Reagan for 15 or 16 years. Ronald Reagan has been relying on that advice for 15 or 16 years and he still values that advice as much today as he did in the past."

A typical Ed Meese day begins at the White House at about 7 a.m. when he meets with members of his staff. At 7:30 a.m., he has breakfast with Baker and Deaver. There are more meetings with other White House staff members and then at 9 a.m. he is in the Oval Office with Baker and Deaver to preview the day's work with Reagan.

His shift often ends with a one-hour policy meeting, beginning at about 5:30 p.m. One recent session dealt with job training, the Law of the Sea negotiations, uranium enrichment, and child labor laws.

"These are not big things, but if they are not being managed properly, they would put a bottleneck in the whole process of government," Meese says. "In the course of a day, I'll probably deal with a couple of dozen issues, ranging from the tax increase to a meeting with the administrator of the General Services Administration on conserving office space."

Even Meese's critics agree that he excels when it comes to putting problems in perspective, and that he understands the president's values.

After a one-hour Cabinet discussion, Reagan turns to Meese for a summary.

"He has the capacity to invent compromises, which is useful for a president who does not like to have to choose between two attractive, but competing, alternatives," said one observer.

Said one White House staff member, who also asked that he not be further identified, "I find his value to the president to be a great ability that no one else has: being able to go to the heart of a matter in some depth, and sum it up in lay language, the language the president likes."

"There's no guy in the building who can analyze a matter faster and present it cleaner than Ed," he said.

A year ago, Meese was riding high. Then, early on the morning of Aug. 19, 1981, Meese chose not to wake the president to tell him that U.S. jets had downed two Libyan fighters over the Mediterranean Sea. Meese and aides said that all necessary decisions had been made before Reagan could become involved and that there was no need to disturb the president, who was on a vacation at his California ranch.

On that same California trip, Meese took a visible

Seventeen People Died In Tar Heel Accidents

By The Associated Press
Seventeen people died in traffic accidents on the state's highways this weekend, including a Wilmington woman and two of her daughters who were killed when their car struck a stalled truck in the rear about a mile from the Wilmington city limits Saturday night.

The North Carolina Highway Patrol said the accident occurred about 10:20 p.m. on N.C. 132, about one-half mile from the victims' home.

The driver of the truck, Ronald Gooden, 26, of Wilmington, was charged with three counts of death by vehicle and one count of driving while his license was suspended, Dechent said. Gooden is being held in the New Hanover County Jail under $50,000 bond, he said.

Police identified the victims as Serena Bowden Merritt, 37; Martha Jayne Merritt, 13; and Sarah Emily Merritt, 9. Five people were also injured in the accident, including the woman's husband and three other children, police said.

The Merritts' station wagon was traveling approximately 55 mph when it ran underneath the rear end of the large flat bed truck, which had run out of gas and apparently had no taillights on, said investigating officer, state Police Trooper L.C. Dechent.

The deaths increased the year's traffic count to 694, down from 854 this time last year.

The latest fatality occurred at 9:40 p.m. Sunday. Police said Joseph Mark Baldwin, 17, of Bladenboro died after being involved in a three-car collision on N.C. 131, about six miles south of Bladenboro.

Marion Roy Howington, 60, of Royal Palm Beach, Fla., was killed Sunday night after a car struck the motorcycle he was riding. The accident happened on U.S. 64, about 27 miles south of Sylva.

The patrol said Ernest Speight, 66, of Hookerton died Saturday night after being struck by a car as he was walking on N.C. 123, about 1.5 miles north of Hookerton. The patrol said that was a hit-and-run accident.

Margie Thompson Lominack, 33, and Marc Elliot Pedneau, 13, both of Raleigh, died at 6:35 a.m. Saturday when the car Ms. Lominack was driving was struck head-on on N.C. 86, about a mile north of Hillsborough in Orange County.

Edward Carl Stike, 52, of Lansing died at 12:05 a.m. Saturday when the car he was driving was struck head-on by a car that crossed the center line of U.S. 221, about 7 miles south of West Jefferson in Ashe County.

Wanda Brittain Cook, 33, of Connelly Springs, died at 4 a.m. Saturday when the car she was driving was hit head-on by another car crossing the center line of N.C. 18, about 5 miles south of Morganton.

Late Friday night, on Sampson County's U.S. 701 south of Clinton, a head-on collision claimed the life of a Faison man. Police said Larry Hobbs, 22, died when the car he was driving crossed the centerline and struck another vehicle head-on.

In other weekend accidents, Dewey Ellis Byrd, 26, of Wilmington, died at 4:35 a.m. Saturday when he was struck by a vehicle while walking on N.C. 132 two miles north of Wilmington in New Hanover County.

Alvin D. Alston, 26, of Enfield, was struck by a car and killed while lying on a rural paved road almost 3 miles north of Enfield, the patrol said. The accident occurred at 3:30 a.m. Saturday.

Kermit Gaston Moxley, 19, of Weaverville, died when his car left a rural paved road near Mars Hill at a high rate of speed, overturned and threw him out, police said. That accident occurred at 9:05 p.m. Friday.

Charles Clifton Davis, 19, of Lumberton, was killed when his car ran off the roadway and overturned on a rural paved road 7.5 miles north of Lumberton, police said. That accident occurred about 10:30 p.m. Saturday.

An 18-year-old Kinley man was killed about 12:45 a.m. Sunday when his car failed to negotiate a sharp curve on a rural paved road; ran into a creek and overturned, police said. Police identified the victim as Benny Weber Kirby II and said the accident took place two miles north of Micro.

A Goldsboro resident was killed when the car in which he was a passenger ran off the road at a high rate of speed, came back onto the roadway and overturned several times, police said. According to police reports, Kenneth Mark Spencer died in that accident about 1:25 a.m. Sunday on U.S. 70, eight miles east of Goldsboro. No age was given for Spencer.

at the intersection of Fifth and Cotanche Streets involved cars operated by Tammy Denise Stancill of Ayden, and Michael Ray Ange of Highland Park Trailer Court.

Damage from the collision was estimated at $700 to the Stancill car and $100 to the Ange vehicle.

Investigators said Billy Ray Barrett of Route 8, Greenville, was injured when the vehicle he was driving collided with a car driven by Gene Proctor Baker of 101 Heritage St., about 1:29 p.m. on Greenville Boulevard, 192 feet east of the Arlington Boulevard intersection.

Officers, who charged Barrett with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety, set damage at $475 to the Barrett car and $50 to the Baker vehicle.

Cars driven by Lynora Tart Brown of 205 Westviana Road and Robert Bell Still of 124 Oxford Road collided about 3:05 p.m. at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Ione Street, causing an estimated $150 damage to the Bowen car and $300 damage to the Still auto.

Five Collisions In Greenville Friday

EARLY TOOTH OVERCROWDING

When should crooked teeth be straightened? As soon as they're detected! The old adage about an ounce of prevention is especially true in orthodontics, where crooked teeth can be prevented by early treatment.

Diagnosed at a sufficiently early age, an unusual trend can often be stopped in its tracks — and its effects completely erased. To ensure early detection, a child should have a checkup by the family dentist at intervals of about six months, beginning at 2½ to 3 years of age. Overcrowded and crooked teeth are most likely to make their entrance with the arrival of the four permanent incisors and the four permanent molars at around age six.

Prompt treatment is recommended when teeth are overcrowded. Some baby teeth may be removed ahead of their normal shedding time to allow nature to do a certain amount of tooth straightening. Known as interceptive orthodontics, it involves a one-by-one extraction in a well-planned sequence to make room for a better bite.

WEATHER FORECAST — The National Weather Service forecasts showers for Tuesday in the Plains and Southeast. Sunny

By The Associated Press
More showers and thunderstorms are scheduled today.

Variably cloudy again today along with a good chance of scattered showers and thunderstorms. These will linger on into tonight but taper off from the west during tonight then continue mainly over the east into Tuesday.

Slightly cooler and drier air will spread into the mountains Tuesday and some of this cooler and drier air will gradually work its way across much of the state this week.

Daytime temperatures will continue to run around the seasonal normals of mostly upper 80s east of the mountains and in the upper 70s and 80s across the mountains. The nights will be slightly cooler as we move toward mid-week.

High pressure off the southeast U.S. Coast continues to pump warm, moist air up over the region. Meanwhile, a fairly strong cold front is pushing southeast across the mid-west this morning. As this front draws nearer to the Appalachians tonight, it will help trigger more showers and thunderstorms for our region today and into tonight.

This front shows some promise of inching its way across the mid portion of the state on Tuesday, possibly reaching the coast by Tuesday night.

Drier air associated with high pressure now building out of the plains will gradually overspread the western two thirds of North Carolina during Tuesday.

This will help to bring about a reduction of showers and thunderstorms on Tuesday except for a lingering chance over the east. Humid will also come day a bit over the west on Tuesday.

weather is expected for most of the West. Cooler weather is forecast for the Great Lakes and New England. (AP Laserphoto Map) yesterday was rather tropical in nature. Partly cloudy but fairly numerous showers and thunderstorms began building up in the afternoon. Some of these carried on well into the night with a few continuing over the northeast and southwest parts of the state into the pre-dawn hours. Otherwise, it was mostly cloudy and rather muggy overnight with temperatures staying the 70s for the most part.

The high readings on Sunday ranged in the upper 80s and low 90s, east of the mountains. The hottest reported value was 97 at Fayetteville. Across the mountains, mostly low and mid 80s prevailed except for some 60s and low 70s in the higher elevations.

Rainfall, generally, was on the light side. As it is with thunderstorms, amounts varied considerably with some localized heavy rain-

Convicted Murderer Is Nearing Execution

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — As a scheduled Tuesday night execution for convicted murderer Frank Coppola approached, there were no signs the former policeman would reverse his stand and try to save his life.

Coppola, who would be the fifth person executed in the United States since 1976, was to meet again today with the Rev. Joe Ingle, a Nashville, Tenn., minister who opposes the death penalty.

"I'm simply there to help him and his family with whatever needs they have," Ingle said in a telephone interview Sunday. "I don't think there's any reason to think Frank will change his mind on this."

Coppola, in a death row cell at the Virginia State Penitentiary here, also spent time with the minister last week. Ingle planned to stay here through the execution, set for about 11 p.m. Tuesday.

Coppola would be the first person executed in Virginia since 1962.

The American Civil Liberties Union has been trying to persuade Coppola's relatives to intervene legally to halt the execution, at least temporarily. But Judy Goldberg, a spokeswoman for the Virginia ACLU chapter, said Sunday there was no sign that would happen.

Coppola, 38, is the oldest of the 18 men on Virginia's death row. A former Portsmouth policeman, he was sentenced to die for the 1978 fatal beating of Muriel Hatchell during a robbery in her Newport News home.

Coppola fired his attorneys last spring and said he wanted no further appeals. He asked for a summer execution so his two teen-age sons would not be in school and subject to taunts from classmates.

Henry Schwarzschild, head of the ACLU's capital-punishment project, said he was trying to persuade Coppola's first wife, Alice Bridges of Portsmouth, to file a "next-friend" lawsuit against the execution.

Mrs. Bridges "is still close to him, and he is very close to their sons. She is caught in the middle whether to go against Coppola's wishes and, if she does, he has threatened to cut off all contact with his children... While I'm not happy with her resolution not to intervene, I can't badger the woman," Schwarzschild said.

Schwarzschild said he has had little luck with other members of the family. "The mother simply will not deal with it."

NEW YORK (AP) - Stock prices tumbled today, extending a broad retreat, in the aftermath of Gulf Oil Corp.'s abrupt cancellation of its $4.8 billion bid to acquire Cities Service Co. and amid signs of continued economic decline.

The Dow Jones Average of 30 industrials, which fell 24.26 points last week in reaching its lowest level since April 21, 1980, skidded another 8.85 to 775.49 in the first two hours of trading today.

Nearly six stocks fell in price for every one that rose on the New York Stock Exchange.

As the NYSE closed Friday, Gulf said it was abandoning its offer of $63 a share for Cities Service stock, catching investors by surprise and raising fears of widespread losses.

In an attempt to shore up its stock and reassure investors, Cities Service said over the weekend it is seeking a new merger partner and said it is prepared to purchase up to 20 million of its own shares of stock in the open market.

in the morning session, but Gulf fell 1/4 to 25 1/4. The NYSE said it expected Cities Service would resume trading sometime today but added that it might be Friday before investors who had tendered their Cities Service shares to Gulf got their stock back and would be able to trade those shares.

On trade the economic front, the National Association of Purchasing Managers reported the economy weakened further in July with no evidence of any pickup in the industrial sector.

Big Board volume reached 24.51 million shares at noon, compared with 19.54 million in the comparable period Friday.

Exxon topped the NYSE active list at midday, down 1/4 at 25 1/4, in trading that included blocks of 121,500 shares and 102,000 shares, each changing hands at 25 a share.

Plant Cut-Back

Vermont American Corp. has cut its work force at the Greenville plant by 30 employees and reduced operations to two full shifts, working five days a week, according to George Chapman, general manager.

Chapman said that since April, the plant had been "in and out of a shortened work week" of 32 hours. At the end of July, in order to "take care of people with seniority," 30 workers were laid off and the shifts were reduced, he explained.

"The reason for this was that the cutting tool industry was hard hit by the downturn in housing and automobile manufacturing, particularly housing," Chapman said.

The general manager, noting that the plant now has a total local roster of some 155 employees, including about 25 administrative personnel, said the plant now is back to 40-hour weeks as a result of the recent layoffs involving hourly workers.

Looking at prospects for the cutting tool industry, Chapman said, "We expect to see some upturn now. We believe we will see some gradual improvement."

Strikes Disrupt Hospitals' Work

LONDON (AP) - About 600,000 nurses, ambulance drivers and other hospital workers today launched a five-day wave of selective strikes aimed at disrupting the country's state-run hospitals to press their demands for pay increases.

The government said most of the 2,500 hospitals in the state-funded National Health Service would be reduced to emergency and accident coverage.

The job actions will delay treatment for hundreds of thousands of patients, including many awaiting surgery, the government said.

Hospital workers have been staging sporadic strikes and slowdowns since May, but the new five-day wave of stoppages was aimed at considerably escalating their confrontation with the government.

Troops and police were ordered to stand by and help operate emergency health care services if the planned strikes shut down hospitals altogether.

Social Services Secretary Norman Fowler said slowdowns in the past three months have already forced the cancellation of 60,000 operations and 74,000 appointments for out-patients.

The delays have swollen the number of Britons awaiting treatment in NHS hospitals to an estimated 650,000, he said.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Conservative government has offered a 7 1/2 percent pay hike for nurses and 6 percent for other workers, such as cooks, porters and laundry staff. The workers are demanding a 12 percent pay increase.

Man Slain In Holdup By 3

HENDERSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) - Authorities continued to search Sunday night and early today for three men involved in a convenience store robbery in which one man was killed and another wounded.

Three men, wearing ski masks and carrying handguns and a shotgun, entered Norm's Minute Mart, near the I-26 exit ramp, about 3:30 a.m. Sunday, Henderson County Sheriff Albert Jackson said in a news release Sunday.

Gene King, 40, a store employee from East Flat Rock, was shot three times in the shoulder with a handgun, according to the release. Tony Corne, 20, of Hendersonville, was then shot once in the lower back with a shotgun in the store's parking lot, police said.

Both men were taken to Margaret R. Pardee Hospital in Hendersonville. Corne died during surgery about 7 a.m., police said, while King was listed in stable condition.

The suspects abandoned their getaway vehicle on I-26 near Columbus after the state Highway Patrol gave chase, police said.

A spokesman for the Henderson County sheriff's department said authorities continued their search Sunday night and early today.

Governors....

budget trimming has come from programs of aid to state and local governments.

But while some governors fear the movement, they also feel it is popular with the voting public in a year when 36 of the 50 states are electing governors. Some who might find it wise to speak for the amendment individually don't want their national association to fuel the fire with a formal endorsement.

Consequently, a balanced budget amendment is not among those scheduled to come up for a vote in the closing business session on Tuesday, and there is little chance that the three-fourths vote needed to suspend the rules and take up an un-scheduled resolution could be obtained.

Rep. James Jones, D-Okla., chairman of the House Budget Committee told the governors the amendment drive endorsed by Reagan could be "the economic Watergate of the 1980s because it is a cover-up, an economic and political cover-up." Jones said the balanced budget idea is being used to cover bad administration decisions that led to the country's current economic problems.

But Richard S. Williamson, Reagan's adviser on intergovernmental affairs, defended his boss, saying Reagan knows full well "that such an amendment is not a panacea."

"This amendment will make it less convenient to have deficit budgets," Williamson said. "For too long it's been politically convenient for Democrats and Republicans as well in Congress to vote for deficits."

The executive committee decided to start work on its own "new federalism" proposal after several governors expressed disapproval for the president's ideas on shifting federal programs to states.

"I am convinced that we must forge a plan that we can present to Congress, hopefully with the support of the president, which makes clear our fundamental view that the federal government has a basic responsibility to assure a reasonable standard of decency for every citizen of the United States," Snelling told the committee.

Reagan has offered to have the federal government absorb several of the programs the governors want shifted to Washington but he is insisting the states take the expensive basic welfare program, Aid to Families with Dependent Children, and pick up a sizeable share of the cost for Medicaid, the program of health care for the poor.

Snelling said unless agreement is reached this year, the governors would have friendly Congressmen submit a bill of their drafting by February, but Williamson said he expects an administration bill to be submitted before that.

Reagan Cuts Travel Plans

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Reagan has dropped a scheduled appearance in Los Angeles from his already curtailed travel plans this week, a White House spokesman said today.

Reagan was to have appeared Wednesday night at a GOP fundraiser in Los Angeles for George Deukmejian, the Republican candidate for governor. The stop was part of what was supposed to have been the start of a 14-day vacation for Reagan at his California ranch.

The president decided last week to postpone the vacation while Congress works on a tax-increase bill, but planned to go ahead with stop in Los Angeles, returning to Washington the next day.

White House deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said today Reagan will not travel to California this week, but will reschedule the fundraiser later, probably when Reagan goes on vacation.

Speakes indicated that it would be too costly for Deukmejian's campaign to underwrite the entire cost of a presidential trip to California.

Reagan still intends to attend a centennial celebration in Billings, Mont., on Wednesday, returning to Washington that night.

"It's very simple," says Floyd, who used 14 steel-shafted clubs as if they were surgeon's scalpels in winning the 64th PGA golf championship Sunday by three strokes at the Southern Hills Country Club.

"Get married and have kids. It did wonders for me."

The hefty, 200-pound six-footer, whose golfing life has received a rare stimulus at age 39, acknowledges that he was a swinging, carefree bachelor with no priorities for 10 years. Then he met a pretty Italian brunette named Maria Fraletta in 1973, married after a whirlwind courtship and they proceeded to produce three healthy offspring — two sons and a daughter, ages 7, 6 and 2½.

"My life turned around completely," he said, "and I wouldn't have had it different for the world."

Floyd thus gained honorary membership in Jimmy Connors' "Family Man Club for Untamed Single Athletes."

Connors, the world's best tennis player in the mid-1970s, was a court maverick who defied the establishment, wrangled with court officials and turned off fans with vulgarity and profane gestures while his skills deteriorated.

Then he married a beauty queen, had a young son and became one of the nicest men in the game. Did it help his tennis? Well, he just beat John McEnroe to win Wimbledon and recently has licked Bjorn Borg in two big-money, head-to-head matches. It was a stabilizing elixir.

"I can understand that," Floyd says. "Once you get

Headed For A Bogey

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — The potential humiliation of it all drove Ray Floyd to the 64th PGA Championship.

The man all the other players said couldn't lose was giving it away Sunday among the trees, rough and bunkers of Southern Hills Country Club.

"I don't know if I could have lived it down," said 20-year veteran Floyd. "All I would have read in the newspaper headlines would have been how Ray Floyd blew it ... I have a lot of pride."

The 39-year-old Floyd said he gave himself a talk on the 12th tee that was the kind of stuff that would get you committed.

"They'd put me in one of those places if I told you what I said," Floyd laughed.

At the time a fat five-shot lead had dwindled to two strokes as Fred Couples eagled the par-5 No. 16th hole.

Determined to be more aggressive, Floyd birdied the 12th, 15th and 16th holes to build the lead to five shots and coasted home despite an 18th-hole double bogey to earn his second PGA title and third major conquest.

Even though he had a three-shot victory at 8-under-par 272 over runnerup Lanny Wadkins, Floyd's final round 2-over-par 72 wouldn't let him enjoy it.

"I made a lot of bad mental errors," he said. "I was in the trees, the rough, the bunkers. But my play from the 12th on in was equal to any during the week."

Floyd's first major tournament triumph in six years, will be remembered for 54 holes of pure shotmaking precision including a record opening round of 7-under-par 63 and a record three-round score of 200, 10 under par.

But the pressure built as everyone assumed he was a sure winner.

"I took all the pressure away from the field," he said. "They know I usually play well from the front so they relaxed and free-wheeled it. 'Ole Ray Floyd won't blow it,' they said. It's not easy to win under a situation like that."

The struggle in the 94-degree heat, the pressure, the nerves, all hit home as Floyd stood over his second shot on the 434-yard par-4 closing hole.

"The awe of it all hit home," he said. "I was looking up the fairway at all the people and realized the tournament was mine ... it all happened too quick."

"I don't remember even standing over the ball. I just know the shot squirted right, low and bad."

From a horrendous lie in the steel wool-thick Bermuda rough, Floyd dumped his next shot into a bunker, exploded out and two-putted for a six.

"The victory means a helluva lot to me," said Floyd. "It was my first major since 1976 (the Masters) and it puts me winning a major in all three decades, the 60s, 70s, 80s."

Floyd earned $65,000 while former PGA champion Wadkins, who sizzled with a final round 7-under-par 67, bagged $45,000 for his 275.

Couples' 66 tied him for third place with steady Calvin Peete, who posted a 69, at 276. Each earned $27,500.

At 277 were Jim Simons, who shot 69, Greg Norman, a 72 final round shooter, and Jay Haas, who shot 72. Bob Gilder was alone at 278 with a final round 72.

At even par 280 were Tom Kite, 67, Tom Watson, 68, Jerry Pate, 69, and Lon Hinkle, 71.

Jack Nicklaus, seeking to become the first player to win six PGAs, fired a final round 67 and was at 3-over-par 283.

Floyd said "Some day I'll be able to look back at this tournament and I'll be proud to say I was able to gather it up."

It was Floyd's 18th tour victory, giving him $305,409 this year and $2,097,396 lifetime.

His goal is to win the British and U.S. Opens.

"I will not ever be happy with what I've done unless I win both the British and U.S. Opens," he said.

Custom Decides Golf's 'Big 4'

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — The PGA Championship is recognized and accepted as one of golf's "majors," one of the game's Big Four tournaments.

But it is only by custom, by acceptance, that there is such a thing as majors or the Big Four.

Nowhere is it written that golf's majors shall consist of the U.S. and British Opens, the Masters and the American PGA. There is no rule, no standard, no by-law that fixes those four events as golf's greatest tournaments. The organizers of those tournaments don't use the term themselves. But it is a highly coveted position, a distinction that provides instant, worldwide prestige.

More than prestige is in-olved. There's the matter of finances. A Big Four tournament, naturally, commands much, much greater bargaining power in the area of television rights than a tournament of lower status.

There is the matter of convenience. The Big Four set their dates, and the rest of the golf world fills in around them.

Those four events are the big boys on top. And, like all the big boys on top, they are under constant pressure from those who would like to succeed and replace them at the highest level.

There have been changes in the makeup of the majors in the past. At one time, the amateur championships of the U.S. and Great Britain were considered majors. That no longer holds true. The Western Open once was among the big ones. The Canadian Open may or may not have had that distinction, depending on the sources checked.

There have been changes in the past. There is no reason there cannot be changes in the future.

It is accepted, generally, that there can be no more than four of the big ones.

"Four is about the maximum," said Jack Nicklaus, whose career dominance of the majors has, to a large degree, established them in the minds of press and public and players as the Big Four. "If you have more than that, more than four, you begin to dilute the whole thing, the whole concept," Nicklaus said.

So the four current big ones are under pressure to maintain their positions. Among the more obvious challengers are the Tournament Players Championship — which has the strongest field of any event in the world — the prestigious World Series of Golf and Nicklaus' own Memorial tournament.

The U.S. Open is the American national championship. Around the world, the British Open is recognized as the most prestige-laden of them all. The Masters, which enjoys its spot on the short list of the great events only through public acceptance, and the PGA are the more vulnerable.

The PGA, the national championship of the Professional Golfers Association of America, is making every effort to upgrade its event.

In the last few years, it has engineered a dramatic upswing in the quality of the courses on which its tournament is played. The purse has gone up faster than others on the elite list. It has added an international flavor by the inclusion of leaders of various orders of merit around the world.

"I don't see us doing anything but getting better," said Joe Black, the PGA president. "In the last few years we've upgraded our courses, our galleries are better, our television ratings have been good right along."

One problem, however, is the traditional August date, which meant playing in 100 degree-

Wilder's HR Leads W'ville To Finals

AYDEN — Sherwood Wilder slammed a two-out home run in the bottom of the sixth inning to lift Winterville past West Wayne, 3-2, Sunday evening in the Eastern North Carolina State Tournament.

Winterville now advances to the championship game of the tournament, set for Tuesday at 6 p.m. Winterville's opponent will be determined tonight when the loser's bracket is completed.

West Wayne jumped out to a 2-0 lead in the top of the first inning when Marvin Ford doubled and Corey Dickerson homered. It stayed that way until the third inning.

In the third, Winterville's Brian Bullock doubled and Scott Bond followed with a double to score Bullock. Bond then stole third and home to tie the game at 2-2.

Neither team scored again until Wilder hit his home run in the sixth to keep the game from going into extra innings.

Wilder had two hits for Winterville — the only player for either team that had more than one hit.

Bronswell Patrick was the winning pitcher.

West Wayne 200 000-2
Winterville 002 001-3

Cherryville, Hamlet Set To Open Legion Finals

From Staff, Wire Reports

CHERRYVILLE — Cherryville will try to win its second straight North Carolina American Legion baseball championship this week when it tackles Hamlet in a best-of-seven series.

Action begins Wednesday night. Cherryville reached the finals by defeating Asheboro in the semifinals this past weekend while Hamlet knocked off Pitt County in five games.

Hamlet defeated Pitt County, 5-4, Saturday night in the deciding game. Pitt County won only one game in the series, the second. Hamlet took all three games at home to win the series, four games to one.

Winner of the series will advance to regional competition in Belton, S.C., later this month.

Connors Sweeps By Gottfried

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Practice didn't make perfect for Brian Gottfried, who took on Jimmy Connors in a practice round six days before the finals of the $100,000 National Revenue tennis tournament.

The practice didn't help Sunday, as the top-seeded Connors swept to a 7-5, 6-0 victory and the $20,000 first-place prize in his first tournament competition since winning Wimbledon.

The fourth-seeded Gottfried gave it a game try, but conceded Connors "had it all when he needed it. His return of serve was simply excellent. Everytime you got the ball in, you looked up, and right here it was right back. Connors never let up on the pressure, and that's what makes him such a good player."

Johnstone Helps Chicago Finish Up Sweep Of Phils

By The Associated Press
While helping the Chicago Cubs win and showing the Los Angeles Dodgers they were wrong, Jay Johnstone is thoroughly enjoying himself.

"It's fun to come back and prove some people were wrong," said Johnstone. "The Dodgers said I couldn't play the outfield anymore. That's what the Dodgers said."

Los Angeles released the 36-year-old veteran in May. He signed with the Cubs one week later.

"There were other clubs interested in me: Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, San Diego and Houston," Johnstone said. "But (Cub General Manager) Dallas Green told me I'd get the opportunity to play."

On Sunday, Johnstone slammed successive home runs and drove in four runs to lead the Cubs to an 8-5 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies and a sweep of their three-game series at Wrigley Field.

Johnstone blasted a three-run homer in the sixth inning, then knotted the score 5-5 with a solo shot in the eighth. His eighth homer of the season began the Cubs' winning four-run inning.

Pirates 4, Mets 1
Bill Madlock tripled home two runs and winning pitcher Don Robinson singled in another to give Pittsburgh its victory over New York.

Madlock's triple capped a three-run fifth-inning rally. Robinson, who drove in the Pirates' final run in the eighth, had three hits as he raised his record to 12-6.

Dodgers 2, Braves 0
Bob Welch stymied Atlanta on three hits in eight innings of work and Pedro Guerrero singled home a run in the first inning to boost Los Angeles over the Braves and complete a four-game sweep by the Dodgers.

Los Angeles, who also swept a four-game series from Atlanta last week, has moved from 10½ games behind the Braves on July 30 to just 1½ games behind the NL West leader.

Expos 2, Cards 1
Tim Raines and newly-acquired Joel Youngblood drove in runs as the Expos edged St. Louis.

Winner David Palmer, 6-4, needed help from Woodie Fryman, who got his eighth save. Bob Forsch, 11-6, took the loss for the Cardinals.

Padres 3, Reds 1
Tim Flannery drove in two runs to back rookie left-hander Dave Dravecky and lead San Diego past Cincinnati.

Dravecky, 2-1, making his first major league start, went six innings to earn the victory, handcuffing the Reds on just four hits. The only run he allowed was unearned.

Giants 3-8, Astros 2-3
Jack Clark knocked in the winning run in the ninth inning of the opener and added three RBI in the second game to lead San Francisco to a doubleheader sweep of Houston.

The sweep extended the Giants' winning streak to seven games and pulled them to within 6½ games of first-place Atlanta.

THE DAILY REFLECTOR has been advertising local businesses since January 26, 1882.

Joe Saad's shoe repair business has been located at 113 Grande Avenue for almost 36 years.

And for over 36 years, Joseph Saad has been advertising his family's local shoe repair business in THE DAILY REFLECTOR.

"My motto has always been 'Never lie to a customer'," said Joe. "If a shoe can't be repaired properly enough to fit correctly again I'll tell them so."

This way of doing business has apparently paid off for Joe. His shop now repairs shoes for third-generation customers.

Following his tour of duty in the Army during World War II, Joe opened the shop on July 3, 1946, in the same location that it is at today — 113 Grande Ave.

Although his wife Juanita, along with their youngest son Jimmy, now handle the routine shoe repairs, Joe does the specialty prescription footwear work that customers from as far away as Durham and the coast come to get done.

You can still get an old-fashioned shoe shine at Joe Saad's place, while passing the time of day with Leslie Peterson, a shoe repairman for 18 years at Saad's Shoe Repair.

"Shoes have changed a lot over the years," said Joe. "Probably the biggest change is that shoes no longer leave those black heel marks that were so hard to clean off the floors."

"But one thing that hasn't changed over the years is our thoroughly enjoyable relationship with THE DAILY REFLECTOR."

'Crowley Time' Produces Grand Slam For Orioles

By The Associated Press

The score was tied in the bottom of the ninth inning, and the Baltimore Orioles needed a big hit.

In other words, it was Terry Crowley time. "Crowley's not supposed to get a lot of at-bats," says Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver. "He's supposed to come off the bench as a pinch-hitter in the ninth inning and hit a home run."

Weaver may be half-kidding — but it's close enough to the truth.

The Orioles' Old Reliable came through again Sunday, delivering a pinch-hit grand slam homer with one out in the ninth to give Baltimore a 10-6 victory over the Kansas City Royals. It was the 101st career pinch-hit and fourth career slam for Crowley.

"It was a nice situation in which to hit," said Crowley. "I knew he (reliever Mike Armstrong) had to throw a strike. He was keeping almost everything away, and then he tried to come inside."

With Crowley's blow, incidentally, the Orioles tied the major league record of three grand slam pinch homers in one season. It was Baltimore's ninth pinch home run, one short of the AL record set by the New York Yankees in 1961.

With one out in the ninth, Eddie Murray reached base on a throwing error by shortstop U.L. Washington and John Lowenstein walked. After a balk by Armstrong, 3-4, Cal Ripken

Jr. was walked intentionally to load the bases. Crowley then hit a 2-2 pitch into the bleachers in right field at Baltimore's Memorial Stadium for his third homer of the year.

Altogether, there were six homers in the game. Washington and Jerry Martin hit one each for the Royals, while Lowenstein, Al Bumbry and Murray also hit homers for the Orioles.

Kansas City had tied the game 6-6 on a two-out, two-run double by Amos Otis in the ninth.

Brewers 7, Indians 6

Paul Molitor hit a two-out, two-run homer in the top of the ninth inning to lift Milwaukee over Cleveland. With two outs in the top of the ninth and the Brewers trailing 6-5, Jim Gantner singled off Len Barker, 11-7. Molitor then worked the count to 3-1 before hitting his 13th homer.

Cleveland had taken a 6-5 lead in the bottom of the eighth on Andre Thornton's RBI single against Dwight Bernard, 3-1.

Before his homer, Molitor had struck out three times in each of his last two games against Barker.

"I suppose if you keep facing a guy, some time you'll hit him," said Molitor. "Lenny's had my number most of my career. I'm certainly not going to get cocky against him now, because he's one of the best."

Red Sox 12, White Sox 6

Carney Lansford drove in four runs with three singles and a double and Gary Allenson and Dwight Evans hit solo homers to lead an 18-hit attack that led Boston over Chicago.

Jim Rice also pounded a single, a two-run double and a triple and Wade Boggs added a run-scoring double and two singles as Boston ended its losing streak and Chicago's winning streak at three games each.

"I'm lucky to be playing at all," said Lansford, the AL's defending batting champion who hurt his ankle earlier this year. "When I first hurt the ankle I thought I'd be out for the season. Now, all of a sudden, it isn't that bad and I'm back in the lineup and able to make a solid contribution."

A's 5, Twins 2

Jeff Burroughs hit a two-run double in the sixth, leading Oakland over Minnesota for a sweep of their three-game series. Tom Underwood, 8-4, gained the victory after relieving starter Jeff Jones in the fifth. Brad Havens, 8-8, suffered the loss for Minnesota.

"I was looking for a fastball and just tried to hit it," Burroughs said after tagging reliever Terry Felton's second pitch for his big double as the A's won their fourth straight.

"As far as I'm concerned we're still in it (the pennant race) even though we're a long ways off," A's Manager Billy Martin said. The A's are 15 games out in the AL West.

Blue Jays 7-7, Tigers 4-4

Lloyd Moseby's pinch-hit, two-run double keyed a four-run fifth inning as Toronto beat Detroit in the first game of their doubleheader. The Blue Jays won the second game as Ernie Whitt belted a two-run homer to back the pitching of rookie Dave Geisel, who posted his first American League win.

"This is a team that is growing full of confidence," said Toronto Manager Bobby Cox. "We've been getting excellent jobs from our starters — despite the fact that we're in last place in the American League East. We've lost a lot of one-run ballgames, and you can look it up."

Rangers 6-5, Yankees 4-8

Larry Parrish greeted reliever Rudy May with a tie-breaking, two-run homer in the eighth inning, lifting Texas over New York in the opener of their doubleheader.

Oscar Gamble, smarting from a pre-game $500 fine and a one-game benching, drove in three runs with a double and triple and John Mayberry slammed a three-run homer as the Yankees won the nightcap.

Angels 9, Mariners 5

Doug DeCinces slugged three homers in a game for the second time in a week, as California unleashed a 15-hit attack to win its third straight game. DeCinces hit three homers against Minnesota last Tuesday and now has 11 in his last 10 games and 23 for the season.

Steve Renko, 10-3, pitched 6-1/3 innings to pick up the victory despite giving up home runs to Richie Zisk, Todd Cruz and Julio Cruz.

Bobby Grich also homered for California, which now lead Kansas City by 1 1/2 games in the AL West.

New York Ships Dent To Texas For Mazzilli

NEW YORK (AP) — Where have all the heroes gone?

Reggie Jackson is alive and well in California after five turbulent years with the New York Yankees. Now, Bucky Dent, the popular shortstop whose dramatic three-run homer in Boston's Fenway Park in 1978 climaxed one of the greatest comebacks in baseball history, has been banished to Texas.

And if veteran pitcher Tommy John has his way, he, too, will have played his last game in the famed Yankee pinstripes.

The Yankees sent Dent to Texas following Sunday's doubleheader with the Rangers, barely six hours after owner George Steinbrenner called a news conference to announce, "At this point, there is no trade for Bucky Dent."

In return, they received outfielder Lee Mazzilli, a native New Yorker once the pride of the New York Mets, and there were immediate signs that the deal may lead to more discontent in the never-dull, seldom-serene Yankee clubhouse.

Mazzilli, a center fielder most of his career, lost that position twice, first to Mookie Wilson with the Mets and then, after he was traded to Texas last April, to rookie George Wright. It is unlikely that he can beat out Jerry Mumphrey of the Yankees in center, or Dave Collins at first base, who also has been an excellent leadoff man.

However, another rumored swap — the 39-year-old John to the California Angels for right-hander Bruce Kison — did not materialize. But John, the winning pitcher in Sunday's second game and the winningest pitcher in the American League from 1979-81, said he still wants out despite a standing ovation — plus a curtain call — when he was relieved in the eighth inning.

"That was very, very, very heart-warming, very gratifying," he said. "It solidified my feeling that Yankee fans are great. But I think they felt it was my last game here and, if I had to guess, I'd say so, too."

Nevertheless, Steinbrenner echoed his Dent comment. "There is no deal for Tommy John at this point," he said. "I'm not saying there will be or there won't be, but if I were a betting man, I wouldn't bet on it."

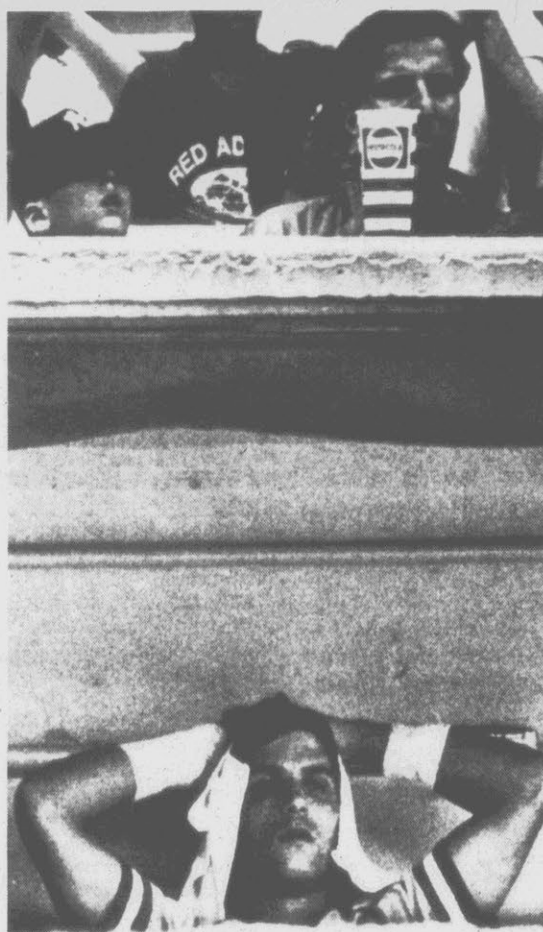

John's reply was that "Buzzie Bavasi (the California general manager) is a betting man, too," adding:

"I've done a lot of searching and thinking and I just don't see me fitting into the Yankees' plans in the future. I think for my benefit, because I still like to play baseball, it's imperative that I go somewhere where I fit into the plans for more than six more weeks."

Dent lost his job when the Yankees acquired Roy Smalley from Minnesota at the start of the season and is hitting only .169 in 160 at-bats. John has not pitched consistently for the last two months and seethed at a recent demotion to the bullpen.

Dent's downcast eyes rarely left the floor as he described his feelings. He spent a half-hour with Steinbrenner before the doubleheader and said the meeting, which he called "a real nice gentlemen's talk" at which both men expressed their feelings, helped clear the air.

"I feel kind of relieved that it's over with," said Dent, who became an instant hero in New York when his 1978 home run erased a 2-0 seventh-inning deficit against Boston in the one-game East Division playoff. He also was named the outstanding player in the World Series that year, hitting .417 against the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Dent, who said he told Steinbrenner he wanted to play regularly for some team, said he felt after the meeting that he was history. But he left with class, vowing to do his best for his new club.

"He (Steinbrenner) told me I'd probably be used as an alternate player if I stayed here," said the 30-year-old Dent. "I told him there would be a time in my career I could accept doing that, but that time is not now.

"I guess being traded is part of the game. I came here and did my job, and now I'm making a new start. I'm going to a club that wants me, and I'll do the best I can.

"I don't feel bitter and I have no hard feelings, although I'm a little disappointed. I've worked hard and did everything the organization asked. I never dreamed that anything like this would happen to me at this stage of my career. But I never felt I'd be traded from the White Sox, either (to the Yankees in 1977).

Palmer Posts 20th LPGA Victory

DANVERS, Mass. (AP) — Sandra Palmer, a native Texan, has come a long way since she became interested in golf as a $2 a round caddy when she was 13 and her family lived in Bangor, Maine.

Palmer, now 41, moved up another notch among all-time greats Sunday as she posted her 20th victory in 19 years on the LPGA tour, outduelling rookie Terri Moody down the stretch for a one-stroke triumph in the $175,000 Boston Five Classic.

"Experience certainly helps, but you never stop learning," Palmer said after firing a 3-under-par 69 for a 72-hole total of 281, seven under regulation on Radisson Ferncroft Country Club's short (6,008 yards) but exacting course.

"I don't care how many wins you have, you're always learning," she said. "I learned patience this week. I shot a 74 in my first round, but could very easily have had a 76. I had birdies on the last two holes and they got me going, at least psychologically."

"Then, after a 67 in the second round, I had a 71 Saturday. I could have shot much higher, but I hung in there although not hitting the ball well. So, tied for the lead going into the final round, I felt confident, knew I had a good chance to win. I was in control of myself all day, even though I got a little nervous when Terri just missed an eagle 3 on the last hole. I wasn't expecting Miss Moody to lip the cup."

Moody, a 21-year-old blonde who looks more like a high school cheerleader than the 1981 national intercollegiate golf champion from Georgia, fired a fourth consecutive sub par round, a 70, for 282, but just missed in a dramatic bid for her first LPGA victory.

"I'm just happy to be here and playing so well," said Moody, who recently returned to action after suffering a shattered cheekbone and 180 stitches in an automobile accident May 17 in Georgia. "On the last hole, though, I just wanted to clear the water with a wedge shot from about 91 yards. You just don't think of an eagle, but I almost got lucky and got one."

Palmer collected $26,250 for her first victory in 19 months, becoming the 15th player to go over the $800,000 mark in LPGA history. Moody who had won nearly $12,000 this year, more than doubled her earnings with a payoff of $17,150.

Muffin Spencer-Devlin, a former fashion model, also collected her biggest paycheck. After fighting an apparent flu bug Saturday night, and visiting a hospital emergency ward, she birdied four of the last five holes for a 69 and a 283. Her third place finish was worth $12,250.

Judy Clark, who shared the 54-hole lead with Palmer and Moody, slipped to a par 72 and 284, tying Vicki Tabor for fourth place. Tabor had a final round 69.

Vivian Brownlee and JoAnne Carner tied for sixth at 285. Donna Caponi, who won the 1981 Boston Five with a 12-under par total, tied for 18th at 290.

U.S. Loses Gamble In Swim Trials

GUAYAQUIL, Ecuador (AP) — U.S. swimming officials gambled and lost when they scheduled the trials for the World Swimming Championships just a week before the meet in Ecuador.

"We need to have the trials three weeks before a big meet so we can put in some work in between," U.S. coach Mark Schubert said after a disappointing performance by American swimmers here.

East Germany won 12 events to eight for the United States and four for the Soviet Union. In the last world championships at West Berlin in 1978, the United States won 20 of 29 gold medals, while no other country had more than four and the East Germans had one.

"I definitely think the trials were too close to the meet," said Mary T. Meagher of Louisville, Ky., a world-record-holder who on Saturday night lost her first butterfly race in four years in a 50-meter pool.

"Not only is it hard to get psyched for two meets in a row, it's hard to have your taper work well," Meagher added.

In swimmers' terms, they "taper" their grueling training before a meet in order to maximize their performance in big meets. If a swimmer is in top shape, the "taper" can last for weeks, but in this case, the "taper" didn't last for many Americans.

Schubert, who admitted to having a hand in the decision to hold the U.S. trials just before the world meet, said, "We were scared to have the trials earlier because we were afraid the swimmers wouldn't be in shape for long course (50-meter pools) so soon after the short-course season (25-yard pools that swimmers use in high school and college)."

The United States and East Germany both won 25 swimming medals, but the latter's gold-silver-bronze totals of 12-8-5 were far more impressive than the U.S. standings of 8-8-9.

The United States had medal

totals of 13-11-10 in the four-sport World Aquatic Games, which included competition in diving, water polo and synchronized swimming as well as swimming. The United States swept the four men's and women's diving events as Greg Louganis of El Cajon, Calif., won both the springboard and the platform titles.

The East Germans had only one silver medal outside of the swimming competition.

TIME WHAT?

WARRENSBURG, Mo. (AP) — Coach Lynn Nance of the Central Missouri State basketball team couldn't believe it when the opposition, Missouri-St. Louis, called tie out with only 11 seconds left in the game. Central Missouri was sitting on a 69-58 lead.

Nance turned to his assistant, Jerry Hughes, and said: "Listen in on their huddle. If they have an 11-point play, I want to know about it. We might use it some time."

The new PGA king — he won the title before in 1969 — admitted that while his bachelor life was free and exciting his public image was grossly exaggerated by the press.

Ray's wife, a retail designer, said she knew of Floyd's reputation when she met him.

"We were introduced at the Palm Bay Club in Miami in the winter of 1973," Maria said. "Believe me, he was a playboy. We hit it off very well. He didn't want to get married. Neither did I. That made marriage inevitable."

interest is beginning to wane. The baseball pennant races are heating up. The pro football camps are in operation. The press corps at Tulsa this year was much smaller than that at the other three big tournaments.

"We're satisfied with the dates," Black said. "We've had these dates for many years. There are going to be drawbacks to any dates, no matter when you set them, early, late, in the middle.

"Besides, there's nothing wrong with being the last of the majors."

But it provides the PGA with the responsibility of closing the majors, the heart of the golf season, with a bang — not with a whimper.

'Filthy Rich' Begins A 3-Week Run With Its Canned Laughter

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The cast includes Slim, Delta and Dixie, and the creative folks have loaded the show with canned laughter just to make sure the audience will see the humor in lines like, "Eat turnips, Carlotta."

It's called "Filthy Rich," and the tilt is more toward the former than the latter. There's nothing rich about the half-hour sitcom that CBS will broadcast in three weekly installments, starting tonight. But then it's not filthy either — naughty is a better word.

Delta Burke plays Kathleen, the dead man's second wife, and Dixie Carter is Carlotta, his daughter-in-law. Miss Burke played Bonnie Sue in "The Chisholms" on CBS two years ago, and Miss Carter was in a couple of forgettable

In fairness, the premise is amusing. "Big Guy" Beck is dead, and he's left his body in an icebox capsule and his will on videotape. No one will get a penny from the deceased Tennessee land baron without meeting the conditions "Big Guy" sets in his televised will.

Trouble is, the show — the first episode, at least — degenerates from there. Is there much humor in jokes about toilets and suppositories?

Slim Pickens plays "Big Guy" Beck, and that's good, though you don't see much of him. The rest of the cast is vaguely recognizable — they've all been in other, mostly short-run, series.

series in the late '70s, "On Our Own" and "Out of the Blue."

Others in the cast include Michael Lombard (Harry Sinclair in the short-lived "Mary Tyler Moore Hour") as "Big Guy" Beck's eldest son, Marshall; Charles Frank ("The Chisholms," "Young Maverick") as his younger son, Stanley, and Nedra Volz (Adelaide, the housekeeper, in "Diff'rent Strokes," "Hanging In") is Mother B, his first wife.

Needless to say, they're all after the dead man's $40 million, and that means insults for everyone. To illustrate:

"Carlotta, I happen to have asthma," Marshall protests when his wife orders him to stop wheezing. "Well have it somewhere else," she spits back. "I'm talking."

(Canned laughter.) Now this is supposed to be funny — some people might consider it cruel — but it's only borderline tasteless. For something along that line, how about the time Stanley is chastised for opening the Beck mansion for "Negro Night."

(More canned laughter.) A good deal of the hilarity of the first episode (canned laughter) comes from the first video tape, "Big Guy" instructs the status-conscious Marshall to welcome another son — illegitimate "Wild Bill" Westchester (Jerry Hardin) — and his dopy wife (Ann Wedgeworth) into their home, and maintain a loving relationship with them.

There may be some sex in the show, but that's not it. The scriptwriters have saved all their ammunition for

David Brinkley Brings Verbal Images To Audiences On ABC

By KENNETH R. CLARK
UPI TV Reporter
NEW YORK (UPI) — The enormous new tax package now making its way through Congress will pass in an aura of "cheap little political tricks," the nation's space program will "slip and slide," and American farmers would be better off in the Teamsters Union than they are on the south forty.

Such are the images in the crystal ball of David Brinkley who has covered the national scene most of his life and who, to NBC's deserved distress, now covers it for ABC.

Off-camera, as on-camera, he does so with clean, simple declarative sentences that hit their target like machine-gun bullets.

Brinkley, paired with the late Chet Huntley, once owned and operated television's evening news for NBC, but he quit the Peacock network last year in frustration over a general attitude of indifference and scheduling that was positively toxic.

For the past 10 months, he has been running a sparkling Sunday news and analysis showcase out of Washington called "This Week With David Brinkley," and though he still isn't entirely satisfied with it, the Nielsen ratings already proclaim it a winner.

"It's working some weeks better than others, obviously, but the idea is good and the reaction is good and I'm very happy with it," Brinkley said in the course of one of his increasingly rare visits to New York. "We're now beating 'Meet the Press' in the ratings most of the time."

Brinkley's effort has posted the only recent increase in audience share for the Sunday 11:30 a.m. through 12:30 p.m. time slot recorded by any of the three major networks.

Under his guidance, the ABC share has gone up 6 percent while NBC's "Meet the Press" has declined 3 percent and CBS' "Face the Nation" has gone down 9 percent.

Brinkley said finding candid, articulate guests in the evasive atmosphere of Washington has been one of his biggest headaches.

"We've had a few who weren't as good as we hoped they'd be," he said. "We had several that wouldn't answer any questions. (David) Stockman, for example — we had him on twice. The second time he was a little better. The first time, I think he felt the heat was on him, so he didn't really answer anything."

"Ed Meese from the White House we've had a time or two. He's very nice. I like him a lot, but he won't answer any questions."

"You can't do anything about that. Hell — you can't pull a gun on them ... But we've had others who really let it all drop."

The proposed $99 billion tax increase brings out a shade of the cynic in Brinkley.

"I think it will pass," he said. "They've got to do something. The deficit is enormous. The Democrats are going to let the Republicans do it so they won't get hung with it. This is a Republican bill out of the Senate."

"I think the Democrats may accept it so as not to have to take any blame for it. It's one of the many cheap little political tricks we live with all the time."

The space program, he said, is suffering not so much from Reaganomics as from public apathy.

"I'm afraid it's just going to slip and slide," he said. "It's very expensive and some of the excitement is gone. When they landed a man on the moon, it was great and everyone was excited. But the shuttle has been up and landed four times. The novelty is gone."

"I think it is unclear to a lot of people what the real virtue of the shuttle is. We re-use it, yes — but re-use it for what? It's not going to be abolished, but I don't think it's going to get any new money for a while."

American farmers, he said, soon will come under the scrutiny of "This Week" because for them, the economic climate is a depression, not a recession.

"It's a real depression," he said. "Agriculture is in about as bad a shape as Detroit. They're growing a hell of a lot of stuff, but they're not getting enough money for it. I don't know why because food prices are very high."

"When you go to a supermarket, you think the farmers must be rich, but they're not. The teamster who drives a load of produce to the city will make more money out of it than the farmer who grew it. That's idiotic."

Even if the Sunday brunch audience Brinkley now commands is not as large as the one that once followed him, it beats what he wound up with at NBC.

Before he left, Brinkley's "NBC Magazine" lay in humiliating bondage to the prime time soap opera, "Dallas," and NBC refused to reschedule it until a few weeks before Brinkley resigned.

Losing out to a soap opera in the Nielsen numbers game would be bitter for any newsman and Brinkley said getting out from under it gave him a new lease on life.

"It was like a safe being lifted off me," he chuckled. "Are people still watching that thing? Is J.R. Ewing still destroying everything in sight? I never could understand why people watched it."

"We supply them with all the nasty people they could ever want."

Connors Joins Commodores

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Wrapping up his first solo album, Lionel Richie of the Commodores decided he needed a real pro to back him up on the track titled, "Tell Me."

So he called on a string specialist — tennis player Jimmy Connors.

"McEnroe will eat his heart out," Connors said, according to the Aug. 16 issue of People magazine, referring to tennis star John McEnroe.

Connors also said he would return the favor someday to Richie, the Commodores' lead singer, composer and sometime saxophonist.

"Lionel, you can tour with me," said this year's Wimbledon champ, "as a warmup boy."

Shaves Head To Shock Audience

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Rock star Ozzy Osbourne, who has startled his audience by biting off the head of a bat, gave them another kind of shock at a performance at City Park.

He cut his hair. Shortly before taking the stage Sunday, Osbourne peered out of his dressing room door, displaying a freshly-shaved bald pate. And he held up his long blond locks in his fist.

"New Orleans," he said, "is a great place to let your hair down."

Today's Cryptokuip clue: P equals T.

The Cryptokuip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Keep active at something constructive for best results today. Good tidings could come from friends now. Think constructively.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) If you get the aid of a higher-up, you can be successful in a new plan you have in mind. Your judgment is not good today.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Take time for listening to ideas of new contacts. Use your intuitive faculties at this time. Avoid the frivolous tonight.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You have a worry that can be alleviated if you go to an expert for advice. Try to be more courteous to others.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) A close tie can be helpful in dealing with friends who are not acting as usual toward you now. Avoid lavish spending.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Any risks you take with your good name now could prove expensive in the future. Sidestep a fair-weather friend.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Discuss a new idea with associates before making any definite plans for the future. Look for bargains now and save money.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Come to better terms with your creditors and forget worry. Avoid any temptations that could be costly in the long run.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Use more progressive methods and advance in career activities. A business expert can help you solve a financial worry.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) If you adopt a more cheerful attitude, you can solve a difficult problem. Keep poised at all times today.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Your intuitive perceptions are not accurate now, so use only your best judgment to solve problems. Stick to facts.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she must be taught not worry in order to handle problems intelligently. Teach early in life to mingle more with others and not to hide any talents. Any profession connected with the humanities is fine here.

Urge Unilateral Arms Reduction

GLORIETA, N.M. (AP) — Most Christian denominations are following "an upward mobility pattern" of attracting middle-class members but neglecting the poor and blue-collar workers, a seminary professor says.

The Rev. Ebbe Smith of the Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in Fort Worth, told a home-missions conference that tremendous numbers of manual workers are ignored by the churches.

FOCUS

An American Hero

Forty-six years ago today, Jesse Owens became the first American to win four gold medals in the Olympic Games. In 1936, the Olympics were held in Nazi Germany, and Adolph Hitler hoped his well-trained team would prove that white Germans were the "master race." But the hero of the games was Jesse Owens, a black American, who won the 100 and 200-meter runs, the 400-meter relay, and the long jump. His brilliant performance exposed the Nazis' racist lies to the world, and, until his death in 1980, Jesse Owens remained an outspoken advocate of human rights and racial equality.

DO YOU KNOW — In 1972 who became the first person to win seven gold medals in the Olympics?

FRIDAY'S ANSWER — FALSE. More people died in the fire-bombings on Tokyo or Dresden than at Hiroshima.

Q.1 — Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠Q93 ♥109 ♦AQ842 ♣KJ3

The bidding has proceeded:

North East South West

1 ♥ Pass 2 ♦ Pass

2 ♥ Pass 2 NT Pass

3 ♣ Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A. — Partner has told you that he does not like no trump particularly, probably because he has 6-4 distribution in hearts and clubs. To persist with no trump on a shaky spade stopper in light of that information would be foolhardy. We suggest that you give partner a little breathing room by simply returning to three hearts. If he has a sound opening bid, he will go on.

Q.2 — As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠5 ♥AQ1095 ♦KQJ5 ♣AQ7

The bidding has proceeded:

South West North East

1 ♥ 1 ♠ 2 ♣ 2 ♣ ?

What do you bid now?

A. — Since it seems that few, if any, of partner's values are in spades, your hand looks very slamish. However, there is no need yet for drastic action. Be content with a bid of three diamonds to continue the description of your hand. Since partner made a free response at the two-level and you are now introducing a new suit at the three-level, this auction must be forcing. You can show your club support later.

Q.3 — Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠A10985 ♥A7642 ♦7 ♣83

The bidding has proceeded:

North East South West

1 ♦ Pass 1 ♠ Pass

3 ♣ Pass 3 ♥ Pass

4 ♣ Pass ?

What action do you take?

A. — Don't even think of passing — partner's jump shift was a game force. There is no point in rebidding your hearts — partner surely has ten, possibly eleven, cards in the minor suits and cannot have more than a doubleton in either major. We would opt for a quiet raise to five clubs, and play in what we know to be at least a 5-2 fit.

Q.4 — As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠KJ7 ♥J872 ♦KJ852 ♣6

The bidding has proceeded:

South West North East

Pass 1 ♠ Dble Pass

2 ♥ Pass 3 ♣ Pass ?

What action do you take?

A. — Since partner has shown a good hand by first doubling and then introducing his own suit at the three-level, you surely want to be in game, despite the fact that you have no fit for clubs. In view of your positional stoppers in spades, the obvious choice is three no trump.

Q.5 — As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠5 ♥A109752 ♦Q76 ♣954

The bidding has proceeded:

West North East South

1 ♠ Dble Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A. — Despite the fact that you have only six points in high cards, you have a very good hand after partner's takeout double. You have a good six-card suit, a singleton in the opener's suit and a working queen. We suggest that you jump to three hearts. That is not forcing, but it is highly invitational. A bid of two hearts simply doesn't do your hand justice.

Q.6 — East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠AKJ4 ♥AQ1063 ♦8 ♣752

The bidding has proceeded:

West North East South

1 ♦ 2 ♣ 2 ♦ ?

What do you bid now?

A. — You want to be in game — it's only a question of which suit. The first thing to do is to make partner aware of your intentions. Do this by cue-bidding three diamonds. That does not guarantee first-round control of the suit you cue-bid. It simply establishes a game-forcing auction and allows the partnership to explore all possibilities.

PROTEST RALLY - Protesters mill around an Indian teepee Sunday on the shores of Puget Sound to protest nuclear weapons some 10 miles from the

Bangor Trident Base where the USS Ohio is expected in the next several days. (AP Laserphoto)

Nuclear Weapons Denounced While Awaiting Trident Sub

By KATHY MCCARTHY
Associated Press Writer
PORT GAMBLE, Wash. (AP) - Religious leaders denounced nuclear weapons as thousands of protesters gathered on beaches and in boats awaiting the arrival of the first Trident nuclear submarine.

"We have intentionally chosen to challenge our government and its war policies because we believe the decision to deploy nuclear weapons is immoral, illegal and unjust," said United Methodist Bishop Melvin Talbert at the rally Sunday, which drew a crowd estimated at 3,000 to 7,500 people.

The first Trident, the USS Ohio, in the next few days is expected to enter Hood Canal en route to its new home base at Bangor. The protesters did not see the Ohio, although an older Polaris missile submarine did pass through the area.

The protesters rallied on a beach at Point Julia on the Port Gamble Reservation of the Klallam Indian tribe, about 10 miles north of the submarine base. The rally also was to mark the 37th anniversaries of the Aug. 6, 1945, bombing of Hiroshima and the Aug. 9, 1945, bombing of Nagasaki at the end of World War II.

Shelley Douglass of the Ground Zero Center for Non-Violent Action asked the crowd for a moment of silence to commemorate the atomic bomb victims in Japan.

Roman Catholic Archbishop Raymond Hunthausen of Seattle, an outspoken foe of nuclear arms, also addressed the crowd, seated on driftwood logs or standing on wet tides.

The Ohio, a $1.2 billion, 560-foot-long vessel built by the Electric Boat division of General Dynamics of Groton, Conn., is the first of 10 Trident submarines the Navy hopes to base in Bangor.

"The Trident is capable of sending 24 Trident I multiple-warhead nuclear missiles to targets as far as 4,000 miles away."

The Ohio has been undergoing sea trials in the Atlantic since it was launched last November.

A "Peace Blockade" composed of the Australian ketch Pacific Peacemaker, the Canadian ship Lizard of Woz and a dozen 12-foot orange rowboats planned to try to stop the Ohio by blocking its path.

The Navy has said it will close the 18-mile-long Hood Canal when the Ohio arrives and declare a 1,000-yard security zone around the submarine as it moves through Washington waters.

Violating the security zone would make blockaders liable for penalties of up to 10 years in jail and a $10,000 fine, authorities said.

The blockaders spent Sunday practicing for the submarine's arrival. They made no try at stopping the Polaris sub, organizers said.

In other protests against nuclear arms Sunday, about 3,500 people joined hands in a circle for peace around the banks of Lake Merritt in Oakland, Calif., and another 600 held a vigil in Berkeley, Calif.

Near the Independence, Mo., library of President Harry S. Truman, 150 people gathered to observe the Nagasaki bombing, which Truman ordered.

In Piketon, Ohio, about 60 protesters, some stripped to their underwear and sitting in a pile of ashes, participated in a four-day vigil ending today against nuclear weapons outside the Portsmouth Gaseous Diffusion Plant.

The government-owned plant enriches uranium. Protesters said that in a nuclear war, survivors would end naked in the ashes.

ABA Debates Insanity Alibi

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - Much of the talk centered on the case of presidential assailant John W. Hinckley Jr., but the topic for debate was a broader issue: should the insanity defense be abolished?

Lawyers, law professors and psychiatrists gathered at the American Bar Association convention Sunday to advance their views on an issue given new prominence when Hinckley was found innocent by reason of insanity in the March 1981 shooting of President Reagan.

"Society must make an effort to determine which of its folks are sick and which are mean," Steven Goldberg, a University of Minnesota law professor, said in urging that the defense be kept and improved.

But University of Santa Clara, Calif., law professor George Alexander advocated abolition. "Law doesn't make any sense at all unless it is based on an assumption of free will," he said.

As it usually exists, the insanity defense allows criminal defendants to escape legal liability if they did not know they were doing wrong or could not control themselves.

The defense, its recorded use dating back to ancient Rome, is employed today only in a tiny fraction of all criminal cases - perhaps less than 1 percent - and is rarely successful. But it long has been the source of heated disagreement within the legal and medical professions.

"It's easy to see the system doesn't work," said Idaho Attorney General David Leroy, whose state abolished the insanity defense last month.

"The jury confusion in the Hinckley case is very instructive," Leroy said, adding that the legal technicalities of the defense are "unworkably complex (and) unrelated to how jurors actually decide these cases."

Grant Morris, a professor of law and medicine at the University of San Diego, acknowledged that the public perception often can be "that someone is getting away with something," but said there should be a place for psychiatric testimony in criminal cases.

Bernard Diamond, a former law professor who now teaches clinical psychiatry at the University of California in San Francisco, said the defense should be saved from the "hysterical abolitionist approach."

Going even further, he advocated spending taxpayer money so penniless defendants can afford the kind of legal representation received by Hinckley.

Fair Planned
The Young Democrats of Greene County plan to hold a craft fair and bake sale Oct. 23-24. Anyone having crafts to sell on consignment may contact Dena Whitley, 747-2476, or Dianne Hardy, 747-3622.

CATCHES CRIMINAL - Susie Petrucci, a 71-year-old maid in a Kissimmee (Fla.) motel, slugged a burglar suspect in the jaw and helped subdue him until the motel manager arrived. The five-foot one inch, 120 lb. woman said she was so outraged at the man that she ripped his clothes and grabbed the money that was sticking out of his pocket. (AP Laserphoto)

FBI Is Making This A Bad Year For Mafia In U.S.

By RICHARD T. PIENCIAK
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The mob is under the gun. Mafia dons are being sent to jail in record numbers, while syndicate underlings are killing each other in unrelenting warfare over the criminal spoils of Atlantic City casinos.

Now, a trusted compadre of the Bonanno crime family has unmasked himself in court as an undercover FBI agent, recounting conversations about mob roublings, family rivalries and other goings-on during his five-year assignment.

Agent Joseph D. Pistone's disclosures last week came just days after two gunmen tried to kill the son of a slain crime boss in Philadelphia, where nearly 20 mob figures have been assassinated since 1980.

Prosecutors say Pistone's put-on was the FBI's deepest infiltration of La Cosa Nostra to date, and before a gag order was issued, FBI officials said it reflected the bureau's dedication to putting unrelentingly pressure on the kingpins of organized crime.

Internal FBI documents show 1982 will be a banner year in the agency's war against the nation's 25 traditional syndicate families and their estimated 2,000 "made members."

One hundred and sixty-five mob members or their close associates were convicted in the first six months of fiscal 1981 of crimes including labor racketeering, corruption, infiltration of legitimate businesses, loansharking, arson, narcotics and murder, according to the FBI documents. That compared with 82 convictions in all fiscal 1981.

An internal FBI report states that as a result of recent efforts, "the majority of the 'bosses' and hierarchy of the major organized crime families across the United States were indicted and/or convicted."

Among those convicted were the reputed crime bosses for Cleveland, Kansas City, Milwaukee, New Orleans, Florida, New England, northeastern Pennsylvania, and two of the five family leaders in New York City.

"We're continuing to direct our efforts on the people who are in control," FBI Deputy Assistant Director Floyd Clarke said in an interview. "We're very satisfied with the progress that we're making, but we still have an awful lot of work ahead of us."

As part of its expanded attack, Clarke said the bureau plans to make wider use of civil forfeiture provisions of the racketeering statutes, which permit the government to seize property gained as a result of illegal activity.

"We would not only be impacting the organized crime problem by prosecution but also by directing our efforts to identify the assets that are derived from that enterprise, and seizing them," said Clarke, who heads the FBI's organized crime program.

While not claiming the agency has crushed the mob, Clarke added wryly that the hoodlums "are aware of our investigative interests."

Clarke said bosses indicted or convicted since last year include:

— Carlos Marcello, of the New Orleans family, convicted in the Brilab scandal and of conspiracy to bribe a federal judge.

— Santo Trafficante Jr., Florida's "boss of bosses," indicted in a labor union kickback scheme.

— Raymond L.S. Patriarca, of the New England mob, still fighting on health reasons a labor racketeering charge in the Trafficante case and allegations in Rhode Island and Massachusetts that he ordered rivals killed.

— Russell Bufalino, of the northeastern Pennsylvania mob, convicted of civil rights violations and of influencing a federal witness.

— Nick Civella, of Kansas City, indicted separately on bribery charges, then with the entire local hierarchy following a five-year casino skimming probe in Las Vegas, Chicago and Kansas City.

— Alphonse Persico, of the New York Colombo family, convicted of extortion.

— Frank "Funzi" Tieri, of the New York Genovese crime family, convicted of racketeering before dying of natural causes.

— Frank P. Balistreri, of Milwaukee, his two sons, and local underboss Steve Di Salvo, indicted on racketeering, fraud and gambing in a plot to extort from a vending machine business.

— James "Jack White" Licavoli, of the Cleveland family, his capo, Anthony Liberatore, and four others convicted of racketeering for a series of crimes including the bombing death of a rival.

The latest prosecution involves five members of the Bonanno family, who are charged in a racketeering conspiracy that included the assassination of three mob rivals.

Courtroom replays of secret wiretaps and Pistone's chilling testimony have provided behind-the-scenes details of how the mob operates, including a Mafia family tree, plans to bug a fellow hood's phone as well as discussions about the slayings.

For example, Pistone recalled defendant Nicholas Santora's graphic description of the murder of Dominick "Big Trin" Trinchera, one of three Bonanno captains who disappeared in May 1981. "Nicky said, 'You should have seen when they shot him — 50 pounds of his stomach went flying.'"

A secret, internal FBI document says Pistone's ability to get as close as he did to "high ranking members of La Cosa Nostra" has "resulted in severe embarrassment to some, if not all 'bosses' and 'members' of the mob."

But recently the mob has had to endure other embarrassing troubles.

Nearly 20 organized crime figures have been killed in the Philadelphia mob's gang war over Atlantic City since boss Angelo Bruno was shotgunned outside his home March 21, 1980.

At least 20 other underworld figures have been murdered in New Jersey, New York and other surrounding states, according to the FBI.

Last week two reputed mobsters were accused of attempting to kill Salvatore Testa, the son of Bruno's since-slain successor. Young Testa was hit eight times with shotgun fire, while hanging out in South Philadelphia's Italian Market.

The two were released after posting 10 percent of their $50,000 bail, then failed to appear for a hearing on a request to raise their bail to $10 million each. They reappeared Friday, surrendering at a hotel.

Testa remains hospitalized but is expected to recover. His father, Philip "Chicken Man" Testa, died March 15, 1981, when a nail-filled bomb blasted a 30-inch hole in his home's concrete porch as he grabbed for the front door.

Meanwhile, a Senate subcommittee has been holding hearings in Washington on mob-influenced labor unions. It has turned up an allegation from Charles Allen, an admitted underworld enforcer, that organized crime, notably new Philadelphia chieftain Nicodemo "Little Nicky" Scarfo, controls the Hotel Employees and Restaurant Employees International Union in Atlantic City.

The New Jersey division of gaming enforcement has been trying to prevent the union from representing the 8,000 waiters, waitresses, maids, kitchen help and bartenders who work in the city's casino hotels because of Scarfo's purported control.

A federal grand jury in Camden, N.J., is probing the union's local too.

Scarfo — who rose from head of the mob's Atlantic City chapter to the job once held by Bruno, then Testa — took the Fifth Amendment against self-incrimination 26 times before the Senate's Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations.

Federal authorities claim to have deciphered a coded list in Scarfo's handwriting that details his connections to members of the Bruno, Genovese, Colombo and Gambino crime families in New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania. The FBI says it has photos of Scarfo meeting in Philadelphia with other major organized crime figures of the Northeast before and after both the Bruno and Testa slayings.

The subject of Bruno's death and Atlantic City was raised at the trial last week when Pistone recalled that defendant Benjamin "Lefty" Ruggiero had once told him

Bruno was killed because "he wanted to keep all of Atlantic City to himself and didn't want to share it with anyone."
