Israeli Again Pound PLO; Talks Halted

By The Associated Press

Israeli jets today launched their heaviest strikes on west Beirut in the 9-week-old war. Lebanese leaders suspended talks with the United States on evacuating the PLO and appealed to President Reagan and King Fahd of Saudi Arabia to intervene to stop the bloodshed.

Lebanon's state and private radio stations said a cease-fire was negotiated to go into effect at 5 p.m. (11 a.m. EDT), but there was no official confirmation. The air strikes continued after more than 10 hours, and the radios claimed more than 300 people killed or wounded.

They said the operating room in the Berbir Hospital in west Beirut took a direct hit and that patients were evacuated. The stations also reported more than 100 buildings destroyed in at least 92 divebombing raids by the howling jets.

"These wholesale massacres and mass obliterations of innocent lives and civilian casualties by Israeli warplanes must be stopped," Lebanon's Christian president, Elias Sarkis, said in telegrams he dispatched to Reagan and Fahd, the state radio and television reported.

Lebanon's Moslem prime minister, Shafik Wazzan, and Sarkis met for one hour with U.S. presidential envoy Philip C. Habib in suburban Baabda, then suspended the talks. Wazzan said the "unwarranted and unprovoked" air attacks were a "clear proof that Israel was determined to destroy the Lebanese capital anyway."

"I have told Philip Habib that I cannot carry on in these talks while these thousands of tons of explosives are wreaking mass destruction in my city, my capital. I did not break up the talks. But I have told him I cannot carry on and hold him as well as the United States responsible for the consequences."

Prime Minister Menachem Begin told his Parliament in Jerusalem although "a great deal of progress" had been made in talks to get the Palestine Liberation Organization out of Lebanon that U.N. and French participation in a proposed peacekeeping force remained the main obstacles to a final settlement.

Gunships, tanks and artillery joined in the jet strikes, and the chief spokesman for the invasion command said all preparations have been completed for a final assault into the PLO enclave if one is ordered.

There were also mounting fears that Israeli and Syrian forces would clash anew to the north and east of the Lebanese capital.

The PLO said the warplanes dropped 2,000-pound bombs on Palestinian camps and divebombed the densely populated Verdun and Aish Bakkar districts, where it said no Palestinians live. PLO spokesman Bassam Abu Sharif said at least 250 people were killed or wounded in Verdun and Aish Bakkar alone.

Lebanese police said Israeli jets divebombed areas surrounding the Soviet Embassy compound in Corniche Mazraa and the oceanside residential neighborhoods of Rouche and Ramlet al-Baida.

Deluge Of Rain, And Lightning

An ill-tempered, slow-moving storm that ambled across, Pitt County late Wednesday left fires, downed power lines and nearly three inches of rain behind before it moved out of the area early today.

The six-hour storm poured 2.53 inches of rain on the area overnight, according to records kept by Greenville Utilities' Water Plant. Power outages were reported throughout Pitt County and lightning-related fires damaged houses in Greenville and Bethel.

"We got our first call at about 7:50 p.m. and we had all customers we knew were out (of power) back on by 2 p.m.," GUC's assistant director, Malcolm Green, said today. "We had lightning strikes all over our system — up to Stokes, west to Ballard's Crossroads, down toward Grimesland — it really hit us all around."

Despite numerous hits, Green reported no major damage or outages from the storm. "No circuits went out," he said. "Lights blinked on and off but they stayed on most everywhere."

"Our big problem was with blown fuses and this caused some blackouts around town in the Hillsdale section off Hooker Road, in Forest Hills on Evans Street between 11th and 14th Streets and near Hudson's Crossroads," Green added.

Most of these outages lasted less than two hours, he noted.

In addition, Green said Burroughs Wellcome Corp. was without power early this morning, but that the outage was not storm-related.

"The real story was the guys that were out there in the rain, soaking wet, working up in the air with all that sharp lightning," Green said. "They're protected but still it's not the safest place in the world to be."

Lightning reportedly struck a home garage and carport at 104 N. Library St. belonging to Mrs. E.G. McMullan, but damage was confined to the air conditioning system, she noted, and no one was injured.

Charles Snell, division engineer with the N.C. Department of Transportation's highway division here, reported a "lot of roads with water on them." He said the heavy rains washed away soil at numerous locations.

Highway crews stayed out until about 1 a.m. and were back at work early today at trouble spots, he said, "working to try to fill up the washouts."

Snell said that while a lot of things took place during the storm that will require some repair work, "I don't think we had any real serious problems."

Mayo Allen, Greenville public works director, said his crews tackled the routine jobs in the city that always follow heavy rains but no major problems were reported to his office as a result of the storm.

Allen said the rains delayed today's work at the First Street drainage system repair site, necessitating having to pump out water in order to proceed with in-wall installations. He said the

Midnight Deadline For Negotiations On Tax Bill

By JIM LUTHER

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) —

Despite new appeals from President Reagan and concessions from some of his top aides, congressional negotiators writing a $98.9-billion tax increase are still struggling for agreement as their self-imposed deadline nears.

"We're pretty close," Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., chairman of the House-Senate conference committee that is writing the bill, said today.

He indicated that the conference would reconvene later in the day but said it won't even consider tax issues until members agree on the $17 billion in spending cuts that are attached to the measure.

A Senate aide who is working closely with the conferees said only one spending issue remains in dispute in the conference — a House provision that would increase spending for aid to the needy by about $325 million over the next three years.

Meanwhile, Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill told reporters that informal discussions by the conferees "have pretty well settled" most of the tax issues.

The Senate aide said O'Neill's assessment was something of an overstatement. Nevertheless, he said, it has been expected all along that most of the tax provisions in the Senate-written bill would be accepted by Democrats, who dominate the House delegation to the conference.

The House and Senate delegations met separately most of Wednesday in an effort to wrap up the bill before their self-imposed deadline of midnight

Thursday. The stalemate developed Tuesday night over the $325 million spending provision.

Aides said the only major sticking point was the Senate's refusal to raise spending in a bill dedicated to raising taxes and reducing spending.

Congressional leaders want the conference to wrap up its work tonight so the House and Senate can complete action on the bill next week and then leave for a 2½-week recess.

Reagan, who used a speech in Billings, Mont., Wednesday to whip up public support for the tax increase, sent top aides to Capitol Hill in an unsuccessful attempt to break the stalemate.

Despite the president's pleas, some of his most ardent supporters are parting company with him on the tax increase.

Hotline gets things done for you. Call 752-1336 and tell your problem or your sound-off or mail it to Hotline, The Daily Reflector, Box 1967, Greenville, N.C. 27834.

Because of the large numbers received, Hotline can answer and publish only those items considered most pertinent to our readers. Names must be given, but only initials will be used.

APPLY FOR REFUND

Anyone who sent the $14.80 requested in a huge mailing into this state by the United States Testing Authority of North Bay Village, Fla., may "get in line" for a refund by calling the North Carolina Office of the Attorney General, 733-7741, or by writing Consumer Protection, Box 629, Raleigh, N.C. 27602.

The promotion in this state was illegal on two counts. It is illegal to represent to a state resident that he has won a prize if more than 10 percent of those being considered will win. Also, a state resident receiving a promotional offer may not be required to pay anything to claim his prize. This state has notified the company that their mailings into North Carolina must cease at once and that anyone who sent money from North Carolina must be reimbursed.

Hotline published July 28 quotes from the Better Business Bureau of Miami and the U.S. Postal Inspector for South Florida advising those who had not already sent money to U.S. Testing not to do so. A check back with the postal inspector's office today reveals that investigation is still under way with no report ready. The BBB of Miami reports that U.S. Testing was incorporated only on June 4, 1982, is "not a government agency," and that its operators have no previous experience in consumer testing. The company's mailings, it says, state that each person participating by sending in the $14.80 and answers to questions about television viewing will receive a prize. In actuality, the only "prizes" the BBB has reason to believe have been given are certificates for discounts for vacations at various points throughout the United States.

Bethel Fires

BETHEL — Wednesday night's fierce electric storm resulted in two home fires caused by lightning strikes, one of them with considerable damage, Bethel firemen reported today.

Fire Chief Sam Keel said that, at 8:24 p.m., the department received a call after lightning struck the home of Edward Shelton one mile east of Bethel. Lightning struck a CB antenna on the house, destroying the CB set and creating smoke within the house.

At 10:58 p.m., Bethel firemen responded to a house fire at the Walter Latham home within the city limits when the house was hit by lightning. The fire caused extensive damage, primarily to the third floor of the three-story brick home before it was brought under control. Damage to the home was estimated at $50,000.

Fire personnel and equipment from the Stokes Fire Department arrived on the scene and stood by to give assistance.

Keel said the storm caused a number of brief power outages, but in all instances power came back on after a short time. He said there were no major problems with water in the streets or in Bethel homes, and no vehicular accidents were reported attributable to the storm.

Coast Guard Boats Clear Way For The USS Ohio

By PATRICK CONNOLLY
Associated Press Writer

PORT LUDLOW, Wash. (AP) — The nation's first Trident submarine sailed into Washington waters today with Coast Guard boats spraying high-pressure hoses to open a path through a rag-tag flotilla of protest boats.

Six people aboard the 38-foot trimaran Lizard of Woz, one of the two flagships for a flotilla of rowboats carrying 47 anti-nuclear protesters, were washed overboard by the blasts of water, but there were no injuries.

The six were arrested along with six others aboard the trimaran for violating the Ports and Waterways Safety Act, said Coast Guard spokesman Doug Bandos.

"We're using whatever means necessary to stop them," Bandos said. "They probably were directed to stop and would not."

The Coast Guard then surrounded the second large ship in the protest flotilla, the 54-foot sailboat Pacific Peacemaker, as the USS Ohio slipped quietly through the water several miles away, surrounded by an escort of eight to 10 Coast Guard cutters.

The Peacemaker released a pod of 10 rowboats filled with protesters moments before it was intercepted by Coast Guard boats. The Coast Guard chased some of the smaller boats but at least one broke through and headed for the submarine.

There were also reports the Coast Guard was detaining other vessels in the area, including vessels carrying news reporters.

Bandos said anyone who tried to impede the Ohio or was considered a hazard under the waterways safety act would be arrested. Violation of that act is a felony, he said, punishable by a $50,000 fine and five years in prison.

He said those arrested would be brought to Seattle.

The protesters had been prepared to risk arrest to dramatize their non-violent opposition to the Ohio, which they view as a prime symbol of the nuclear arms race.

The 560-foot Ohio, which is designed to carry nuclear warheads, surfaced early this morning in the Strait of Juan de Fuca, which separates Washington state from British Columbia. It stayed submerged until it was past the Soviet intelligence ship Gavril Sarychev, which has been off the coast since last month.

The Ohio was headed for its homeport in Bangor, about 40 miles west of Seattle on Hood Canal. It was expected to make port at about 11 a.m.

The Navy and Coast guard closed the 18-mile length of Hood Canal and established a 1,000-yard floating restricted zone around the Ohio. Violation of the zone by protesters could be punished by as much as 10 years in jail in a $10,000 fine.

Light drizzle fell in the area early today.

Blockaders exchanged hugs with support crew on the beach as they headed for their vessels, while a Buddhist monk beat a drum and offered a chant for peace.

Several "witness boats" planned to watch the submarine's progress and the efforts of the blockaders from non-restricted waters along the submarine's route.

One witness boat in the area Wednesday was the Heather Queen, which carried Seattle's Roman Catholic Archbishop Raymond Hunthausen and eight other religious leaders, including representatives of the Lutheran, Jewish and Baptist faiths, on a visit to the peace blockade's encampment near here.

CLOSE ENCOUNTER — The U.S. Navy destroyer Olendorf parallels the course of the Soviet ship Gavril Sarychev Wednesday afternoon in the waters off the northern-most point of Washington and south of the Strait of Juan de Fuca. Since late July the Russian intelligence-gathering vessel has been hovering near the Strait, where the first Trident nuclear submarine USS Ohio will turn in heading toward its home base at Bangor (AP Laserphoto)

Children's Car Seats Save Lives

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: "Learned Too Late" lost Tina, her precious 6-month-old daughter in a car accident because the child was not secured in a car seat. She wrote, "If writing this saves only one child, Tina's death will not have been in vain."

I want Tina's mother to know what she has done for me. We have a 7-month-old son, Steven, who has always had the safest surroundings we could provide — except in the car. There, I lovingly placed him in a carrier beside me. Tina's mother made me see that all the love in the world could not keep our precious child safe in a car without a car seat and seat belt.

The awful truth is that I have a car seat, but have never used it. I found all sorts of excuses — too much trouble, Steven fussed and fought it, takes too long, etc. What a selfish, careless mother I've been. But no more! A trip may take a few extra minutes, but Steven's life is worth it!

Thanks to Tina's mom for being brave and selfless enough to tell her story. This mom ...
LEARNED IN TIME IN CLOVIS, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: Bravo for your letter concerning safety car seats for children.

It takes about 20 seconds to put my 11-month-old daughter into her seat, stick her arms through the straps and buckle up. Some people say, "Kids refuse to ride in those things." Hogwash! Who's in charge anyway? If children were placed in car seats from the time they were infants, as mine were, they would be trained to climb into the seats themselves to be buckled in.

Our neighbor was in a car accident with her two young children. The little ones were thrown around so violently that even their father was not allowed to see their bodies before the funeral!

Safety tests were made using 10-pound dummies instead of live infants. The adults were instructed to hold onto the dummies as they would a live baby while riding in a car at 30 miles per hour. The car stopped suddenly, as though in a collision, and even though they knew it was coming, not one of the adults could hold on to the dummy! All lost their grip, and the dummies flew forward! Please print this and sign me ...

CONCERNED MOM IN INDIANA

DEAR ABBY: After reading the letter from "Learned Too Late," I started shaking in my shoes. I had just dropped off my daughter (I'll call her Amy) at the babysitter's. Amy was not in a car seat, nor was she belted in by a seat belt. Why? Because she cried and screamed, "I want to stand up, Daddy!" After reading your column, I made a decision. I would rather listen to Amy scream than never hear her voice again.

First I am going home to pick up our unused car seat, then I will go get Amy at the sitter's. And from now on, she will never again ride without being protected!

Thank you, Abby, for printing that letter. And thank Tina's mother for having the courage to write so that other parents could learn from her tragic loss.

SMARTER NOW IN ILLINOIS

DEAR SMARTER: What a pity Tina's mother will never know how many children her letter will save. My mail showed a tremendous outpouring of love, sympathy and appreciation.

COOKING IS FUN!

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

A friend recently asked me for a recipe for a pie made with fresh tart red cherries. She grew up in the Midwest and wanted to recapture the delicious remembrance of things past: the pies her grandmother used to make from the sour red cherries picked from a backyard tree. For her and for other cooks, we recommend the following tried-and-true recipe.

FRESH TART RED CHERRY PIE

1 1/2 pounds fresh tart red cherries
1 cup sugar
2 tablespoons cornstarch
1/8 teaspoon salt
Pastry for a 2-crust 9-inch pie
2 tablespoons butter

Stem, rinse and drain the cherries; pit — there should be about 3 1/2 cups.

In a large bowl stir together the sugar, cornstarch and salt. Add the cherries; toss to coat well.

Roll out half the pastry and line a 9-inch pie plate with it, allowing 1 inch to overhang. Fill with cherry mixture and dot with butter. Roll the remaining pastry into a 12-inch circle. Cut into 1/2-inch-wide strips with a pastry wheel or a knife. Place 5 of the strips across the filling. Weave a lattice crust with 5 additional strips by folding back alternate strips as each cross-strip is added. Fold the trimmed edge of the lower crust over the ends of the strips; seal and flute. Cover fluted edge with strips of foil; remove during the last 15 minutes of baking if more browning is desired. Bake in a preheated 400-degree oven for 45 minutes or until the cherries are tender.

Note: Cut extra pastry strips into 2-inch-long pieces; sprinkle with sugar and cinnamon; bake in a preheated 400-degree oven for 5 to 7 minutes or until golden.

WINE JELLY

It's a pretty golden color and on the tangy side.

1 envelope unflavored gelatin
1/2 cup orange juice
1 1/2 cups dry white wine
1/4 cup sugar

Sprinkle gelatin over orange juice to soften — about 5 minutes. Heat wine until it boils — the alcohol will evaporate. Pour wine over gelatin and stir until gelatin dissolves; add sugar and stir until it dissolves. Pour into 4 to 6 individual molds (depending on whether you want 1/2 cup or 1-3rd cup servings) and chill to set; cover. Unmold at serving time. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Couple Marries On Saturday

Susan Marie King, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Robert King, and Danny Hoge Yost, son of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Yost of Greenville, were married Saturday afternoon.

The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Adrian H. Brown at 4 p.m. at the home of Ruby S. Whichard. A program of music was presented by Ms. Whichard and Lisa Caraway sang "O Promise Me."

Given in marriage and escorted by her brother-in-law, Tony Rossi, the bride wore a street length dress of antique white fashioned with a V-neckline with lace. She carried a bouquet of white pom poms, pink roses and ribbon streamers.

The matron of honor was Lou Rossi, sister of the bride.

The father of the bridegroom was best man.

The bride is a graduate of Ayden High School and attended Pitt Community College. She is employed by East Carolina Vocational Center. The bridegroom is a graduate of Rose High School and is employed at Pitt Memorial Hospital.

A reception followed the ceremony. Mrs. Joe Sutton assisted in serving the cake and the bride's sister, Joanne King, poured punch.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Nursing homes and Las Vegas casinos always seemed to have a lot in common. You never saw children, birds, trees, or daylight in either of them. But Vegas had the edge. They had music to listen to and games to play and people who were too excited to go to bed.

Until recently. A nursing home in North Carolina was given a couple of video games and a jukebox with Willie Nelson and Bette Midler records and life hasn't been the same since.

Arthritis has been conquered by the Space Invaders and "The Boogie Woogie Bugle Boy of Company B" has done a lot for poor circulation.

I think the nursing home in North Carolina is onto something. The elderly don't necessarily need twilight zones of mindless days where the peak of the week is the sneak in their wheelchair. They need the same things they needed to keep going when they were younger: challenges, activities and relationships.

I nearly cried recently when I saw where a group of animal lovers took pets to a nursing home to visit. The residents came alive as they caressed and petted animals that stirred memories and emotions within them that had long since been put to rest.

The same thing happens to them in Vegas. I've seen elderly women perched on a stool, clutching a paper cup full of nickels, playing four slot machines at one time. The appearance of a cherry which returns two coins will give her the strength to jump over a five-piece band, force open an elevator door and run a four-minute mile to her room to tell someone.

I remember a few years ago when my son was in high school, the teacher asked for a show of hands as to who wanted to live beyond 60 years. He was the only one who raised his hand. The rest said it didn't look all that great.

I like to think my son was remembering his grandmother and grandfather who live in a retirement community and haven't had their feet off the ground in seven years. They invited a group of neighbors over to see a movie one night called "10."

When I asked my mother what they thought of it, she hesitated a bit and said, "You know, it was the longest any of us had ever sat without going to the bathroom."

Driving Force Required

The Tennessee Valley region was so impoverished in the 1930s that President Roosevelt and Congress took steps to boost its development, primarily through the Tennessee Valley Authority and the funding that went with the giant electric-generating complex. With the birth of free power came the development of industry and an upward spurt in employment.

Now, TVA economist Allan Pulsipher says the valley is again endangered. Unemployment in the seven-state TVA region stands at more than 10 percent, the highest since 1939. Alabama's TVA area has a 17 percent unemployment rate. And Pulsipher says the outlook for the next six to eight years is not all that encouraging.

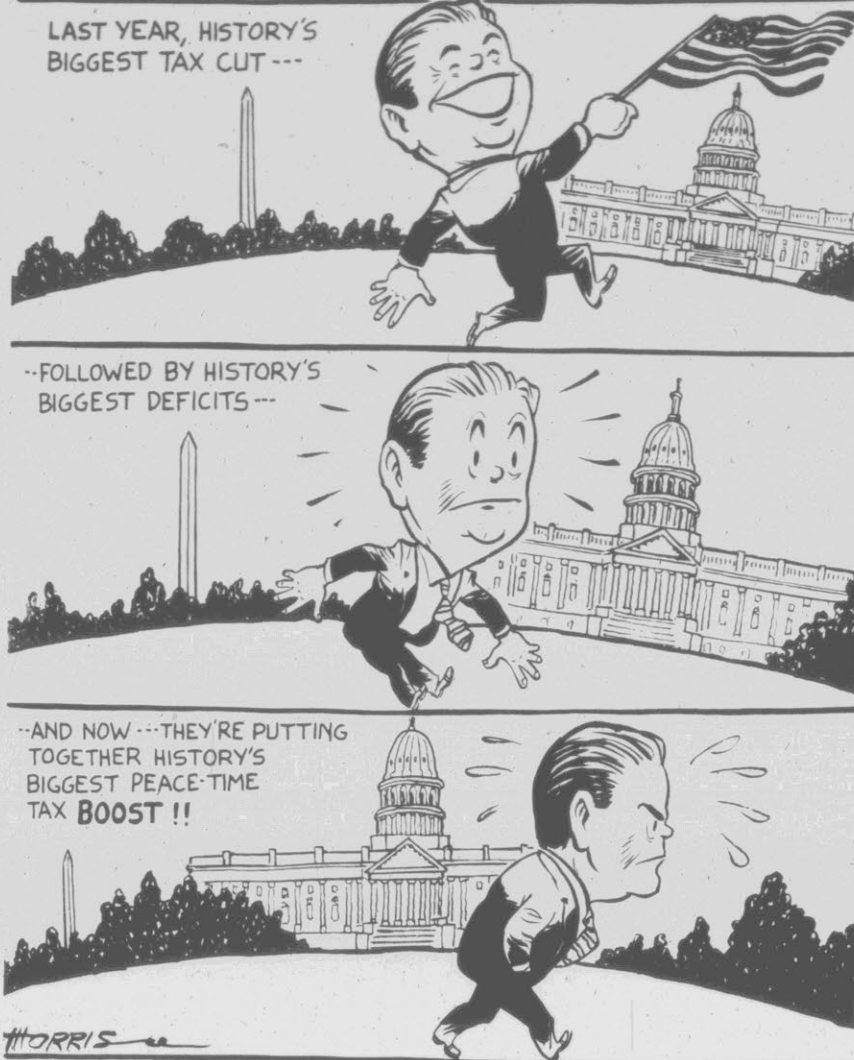

"We're still going to have an economy that putters along with a lot of people out of work until the middle of the decade," he said. "We won't return to something like normal levels of utilization of our ability to produce until the middle of the decade, even if the recovery that people are talking about takes place as predicted." As in other sections of the United States, Pulsipher blames the job situation on industrial losses resulting from high interest rates and their effect on the national economy, especially manufacturing.

The TVA economist says recovery in the national market for autos, housing and consumer durables will have to occur before any stimulus has passed on to the chemicals, aluminum and heavy machinery industries — long the mainstays of the TVA region.

The same is true everywhere, and not just for chemicals, aluminum and heavy machinery. Interest rates must be brought into line to stir renewed interest in industry of all types. We in eastern North Carolina have been less dependent on industry — although certainly to a higher degree than in the '30s — than some other sections of the United States, but even we need that stimulus, the driving force to once again move forward.

British Face Angry Times

BY MAXWELL GLEN AND CODY SHEARER
LONDON — Minor rioting in Liverpool's Toxteth section on July 28 and 29 should have been a reminder that nothing has been — or perhaps can be — done with the industrial world's expanding population of hard-core unemployed.

More than a year after unprecedented riots swept Britain, the recent night of stone-throwing and car-torching hasn't seemed to phase the government of Margaret Thatcher. Though the prime minister will eventually have to account for her lack of action, she seems, at the moment, to have more important fish to fry.

In the meantime, however, this neglect — benign or otherwise — begets grim manifestations. Three miles from the marble-floored retreats of whitehall, idle youths in London's Brixton section still loiter by the buildings that they set aflame in 1981. Their primary grievances of last year — severe joblessness, poor police-community relations and inadequate recreational facilities — continue to make the community a tinderbox. "Nothing has changed," observed a 25-year-old West Indian who passes his days playing pool at Brixton's St. Matthews Community Center. "The police may not be coming in here the way they were, but I still can't find work when I tell the bosses I'm from Brixton. We're a marked community now."

In similarly-scarred Toxteth (a largely black district of 30,000), residents have had to endure additional frustration. When the government began to ransack charred property off Upper Parliament Street, it did so with tree planters hired outside the immediate area.

"The people in Toxteth are as cheesed-off as ever," warned Rashid Mufti, a sociology professor at the Liverpool Institute of Higher Education. "I think many of the rioters thought there might be some meaningful changes coming after last year. But now they're realizing that nothing is going to change."

Perhaps this resignation is the natural by-product of Margaret Thatcher's response to Britain's urban unemployment crisis. While the government has hand-picked members for badly-needed police-community relations boards, it has with a predictable array of remedies: enterprise zones, publicity visits by government big shots, and promises of job training. Plans in Liverpool, for example, to renovate 850 acres of dock space for an international garden festival represent Thatcher's hope that a little window dressing will cause private businesses to flock to the area, spilling prosperity into Toxteth.

Yet, there also seems, among Brixton's unemployed, a recognition that they are only cellar-dwellers in Britain's House of Economic Horrors. Indeed, few can doubt that the jobless minority problem is but part of a 13.5 percent iceberg that promises to swell before it shrinks.

Margaret Thatcher must deal with severe job losses in heavy industrial regions, such as the west Midlands, which have traditionally avoided high unemployment. She also faces growing disenchantment among young high school and college graduates who, like so many of their European and American counterparts, are finding part-time work to be their only option. With the leaders of the other eight European Community members, Thatcher could, by 1986, face a situation where almost two-thirds of Europe's official unemployed are under 28.

Given the political volatility of Britain's expanding unemployed population, the government might have more to gain from overlooking the Brixtons and addressing the decay of the country's industrial base; new jobs for the majority of unemployed Britons would assure Thatcher's party support at the polls.

Like its European brethren, in fact, Britain is looking to micro-electronics to help make its industrial base more competitive and thereby stem, if not reverse, the country's joblessness.

Unfortunately, it's unclear whether such modern-day productivity advances can sustain the number of jobs, let alone create new types of work for either the middle-class college graduate or semi-literate ghetto dweller.

In this environment, the skeptical residents of Brixton and Toxteth can have the limited consolation of knowing that they're part of an angry and youthful tide, the likes of which could well change Western politics completely. Copyright Field Enterprises, INC.

Beware Of Wedding Thieves

Guilford County authorities are investigating six robberies since March 20 that occurred in churches where weddings were taking place. In one robbery, the wedding couple's honeymoon money was taken.

Thievery is bad anytime, anywhere and under any circumstances. But wedding robberies are especially disconcerting.

There comes to mind only one robbery that could be more disturbing — that of a home while the family is attending the burial of a loved one.

There is no honor involved in either robbery — not even the so-called "honor" among thieves.

The Blame For Lebanon

WASHINGTON — For the past two months, night after night on the evening TV news, all of us have gazed in dismay upon the suffering in Lebanon — the dead, the wounded, the homeless — and night after night the same implicit message has flashed subliminally across the screen: The Israelis are responsible for this.

It is high time, it seems to me, to put the lie to this insidious nonsense. Let us place the blame for the destruction and bloodshed squarely where it belongs, upon the shoulders of that smirking monster with the manic grin on his face, Yasser Arafat, leader of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

From the moment of its creation as a modern state in 1948, Israel has asked but one thing of her Arab neighbors — to live in peace. It is irrelevant to the current situation that in times past Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Defense Minister Ariel Sharon engaged in their own terrorism; we might with equal acuity review the history of Babylonians, Greeks, Persians, Romans, Mamelukes and Ottomans. The issue at hand has to do with Lebanon today. Why are the Israelis there? And who is responsible for the suffering inflicted upon innocent civilians?

The Israelis attacked the PLO for one reason only — tions to address the nations of the world; the PLO maintains an army supplied and equipped by the Soviet Union; here in the United States we talk constantly of "recognizing" the PLO.

What a fiction! The PLO is not a state. It is a cancer. Like other cancerous lesions, it must be cut out, roots and all, before the malignancy spreads. Left alone, whether through fear of surgery or hope of remission, cancer only gets worse. The PLO's fellow Arabs know this. Who wants the PLO? Not Syria. Not Jordan. Not Egypt. Not the Saudis. No one.

Who is to blame for the suffering in Beirut? Who prolongs the agony? The PLO moved into this beautiful and inoffensive city like a gangster mob, terrorizing the inhabitants. Aided and abetted by the Soviet Union, the PLO made Beirut a headquarters for international terrorism. With its stunning defeat at the hands of Israeli troops, the PLO reacted in the most cowardly and contemptible fashion: The PLO took the civilians of Lebanon as hostages, and hid behind them while it stalled for time.

It is objected that Israel had promised to use its U.S. arms for defensive purposes only. One response is that, given the relentless nature of the PLO's threat, the best defense is a good offense. In these past eight weeks, the Israelis have done us a tremendous favor: They have demonstrated, in ways that war "games" could never demonstrate, the superiority of American planes, tanks and other weapons. It is not only the PLO that has been humiliated; it is the Soviet Union also.

It would take a heart of stone not to be moved by the pictures we have seen from Lebanon — the old women weeping, the infant whose arms were blown off. Every humanitarian instinct cries out for cessation. But the smoke from the burning buildings of Beirut should not blind us to this fact — that the PLO could have ended the carnage at any time.

because the provocations of the PLO at last had become unbearable. In this regard, we may recall the story of the Comanche chief who marked each grievance against the white man by putting a pebble in his pouch. When the pouch was full he went to war. We may also recall the story of another long-suffering people who resorted to arms when their repeated petitions were answered only by repeated injury. Is that line familiar? It should be familiar. This was the justification advanced by our own forefathers for the American Revolution. There comes a point in the affairs of men and of nations when forbearance is exhausted.

Israel has no quarrel with the Palestinian Arabs as a people. Israel's rage is directed at that formless, shapeless nonentity of an entity, the Palestine Liberation Organization. The PLO has none of the trappings of sovereignty or statehood, but it is treated as a sovereign state. The PLO's chieftain swaggers to the United Na-

THIS AFTERNOON

Elections Carnage

By PAUL O'CONNOR
RALEIGH — The smoke may be clearing but the carnage is so bad you can still smell the political fish burning in the state's 100 courthouses. More than 110 county commissioners serving now will become civilians next December.

In all, 267 commissioners were up for reelection this year. According to a count by the N.C. Association of County Commissioners (NCACC), 52 incumbents decided not to run for reelection and another 58 were told their services were no longer required. In a couple of districts where the vote is still not certified, there may be additional casualties.

The turnover amounts to 41 percent of the vacancies which is well above the usual turnover rate of 30 percent.

Included in the dismissals were several well-known commissioners. Voters in Craven County fired Grover Lancaster, president of NCACC. Voters in Wake decided they could do without J.T. Knott, former NCACC president and a current member of the group's board of directors. Gilbert Whitley, another board member got a pink slip from the voters in Hertford.

A number of commissioners tried to get new jobs. Five sought state House nominations and only two won. One lost a bid for clerk of court while another was nominated for sheriff. In early June, several NCACC staff members predicted a big turnover. They noted that incumbents were catching it from both sides on the fiscal front. On one hand, many voters are still carrying strong anti-tax sentiments. On the other, voters faced with cuts in their social programs were blaming commissioners.

Looking over the results, it is hard to find anything other than an anti-incumbent trend, said NCACC fiscal analyst Ed Regan. Some liberals were put out for big spending while some conservatives lost because they were too tight-fisted. In Wake County, for example conservative Knott's stinginess with teacher salary supplement increases was generally listed as the biggest reason for his demise.

Lancaster agrees that there's an anti-incumbent trend. People are looking for politicians to blame for the bad economy and for high taxes, he said. In addition, local issues can fire up the electorate much more easily than either state or federal issues. When there's a hot local issue, such as a hospital controversy in Craven County, the voters will identify an incumbent with a particular stand and vote him out of office. In Craven, four of the five commissioners were sent home.

The election results led

To the Editor:

Why did Israel go into Lebanon?

Israel went into Lebanon in accordance with international law and the United Charter. The United Nations stated in a 1970 declaration of principle that "No state shall organize, assist, foment, finance, incite or tolerate subversive, terrorist or armed activities directed toward the violent overthrow of the regime of another state."

Since 1969 the PLO has made different agreements with the Lebanese government regarding their stay in this country. Not one has ever been honored by the PLO, because there was no force available to ensure that the agreements would be kept. Israel was confronted with an intolerable situation. In recent years, PLO attacks on northern Israel have been so severe that the Israeli government has become concerned about the viability of this part of the country.

Israel's original objective was to put northern Israel out of range of PLO guns. However, once moved into Lebanon, it found that its intelligence reports had dramatically underestimated the enemy's strength. The Israeli defense force found huge stores of communist and Arab-supplied weapons, including tanks, missiles, artillery and munitions. Indeed, the deeper the Israeli Defense Force penetrated into Lebanon, the more arms and equipment it found.

For this reason, and because the Israeli Defense Force was taking heavy casualties, a sacrifice it did not want to have to repeat in the future, Israel had to push for total elimination of the PLO presence in Lebanon.

To the editor:

What happened to The Daily Reflector's coverage of an important event that happened in Pitt County recently? Trooper D.W. Taylor apprehended a man wanted for murder and kidnapping in the Washington, D.C., area by the FBI who was apparently hiding with a relative in Pitt County. This arrest was important enough and newsworthy as to be carried on a TV station but not a word in your paper.

The law enforcement officers and particularly the Highway Patrol have one of the most dangerous occupations in the United States and when they perform a deed which is above and beyond what I consider their normal employment, they deserve credit.

I feel that those who missed it on TV should have an opportunity to read about it, even though it is not fresh news.

Editor's note: Trooper D.W. Taylor arrested Kenneth Gray Bass, 33, on Rural Paved Road 1206 near Bell Arthur July 22. Bass was taken into custody by the FBI and returned to the District of Columbia after a hearing in federal court in New Bern. The charges of murder and kidnapping against Bass were confirmed by Andrea Harnett of the U.S. attorney's office in Washington, D.C.

'Experts' Unsure Over Blame

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — "Are high rates attributable to Fed policy?" asks an economist in Citibank's "Economic Week," a publication that analyzes domestic and international events.

The question, posed in a magazine of the country's second largest commercial bank, suggests how uncertain about interest rates are the so-called experts, the people who are paid to know.

It is almost awesome that a good many of these same people say without hesitation that monetary policy — including interest rates — is now the major factor in the economy's direction. No wonder, then, that various consumer polls show individual Americans' undecided on spending plans. Or that corporate plans for big ticket spending have shrunk over recent months. Or that stock prices are down.

Uncertainty is the enemy of them all. It is also the factor that makes guessing the direction of interest rates one of the biggest games in town. Since nobody has a corner on knowhow, any reasonable thesis has a chance of being listened to.

And believed, too. Side by side today are forecasts of the impending collapse of the economy and assurances that it is on a fast track to recovery. To prove the case is not necessary. Who's to disprove it?

Retreating from the extremes, the biggest question for most interest rates forecasters seems to be the impact of the Treasury borrowing. At the moment, estimates range around $100 billion in the second half of the year, nearly twice the amount financed in the previous six months.

Will that drive rates up? Or, will cutbacks in planned business borrowings leave the market free for the Treasury?

Will the Fed ease the flow of money? Or tighten it?

With those uncertain ingredients it isn't likely that any forecast can be presented or received with confidence, but there is nothing unusual about that, uncertainty being the new way of life.

Whatever, the consensus — if any can be spotted — seems to be that interest rates might rise a bit as the year wears on.

As Citibank puts it: "The near-term implication is that rates probably will edge downward for another month or two."

"But as money growth picks up — and perhaps overshoots in an upward direction — rates will temporarily zig up again, probably by several percentage points, later this year or in early 1983."

If that forecast seems speckled with uncertainties, well, you must remember that this is a very uncertain economy.

FACING THE STORM

The great British painter Joseph William Turner once told the writer Charles Kingsley, that in order to paint a storm at sea he engaged a Dutch fisherman to bind him to the mast of his boat and then take the boat out to sea in the face of a storm. As Turner said later of the experience, "That storm blew itself into me until I became a part of it. Only then could I paint it as it deserved to be painted."

An English bishop, commenting later on this incident, wrote, "Life is a great mingling of happiness and tragic storm. He who comes out of it rich in living is he who dares to accept it all, to let it blow its power and its mystery and its tragedy into the innermost recesses of his soul."

All men cannot paint like Turner, but they can live gloriously if they are willing to be tied to the mast and face the storms of life through to the end. — Elisha Douglass

Nabbed For Shoplifting

Two Kinston women were arrested by Greenville police Tuesday night and charged with the larceny of $1,592.73 in merchandise from eight local stores.

Chief Glenn Cannon said officers, investigating a reported shoplifting incident at J.C. Penney's at the Pitt Plaza Shopping Center about 5:50 p.m., charged Dorothy Dail Fields, 38, and Linda Skinner Price, 39, with eight counts of larceny each following investigation of the alleged incidents. Bond for the women was set at $5,000 on each of the charges.

According to the chief, the two allegedly took and are charged with taking $99.98 worth of merchandise from Penney's (jeans and towels), $784.24 worth of goods from Sunshine Gardens (wall hangers and a wooden rocking horse), $223.64 worth of merchandise from Belk-Tyler's (jeans and shirts), and $152.95 in goods from Sears (shirts).

Other charges include the theft of $103.98 in merchandise from Sunshine Toy Station (a doll and racing cars), $66.51 in merchandise from Hungate's (paint brushes and crayons), $21.86 in merchandise from Rose's (socks and cigarettes), and $140.99 worth of goods from Gandalf's.

All of the merchandise was recovered from a truck the two women were traveling in, the chief said.

Regan to question if incumbents are losing their traditional advantage in campaigns. "It used to be that being an incumbent was an advantage. You had name recognition and a record to run on. Now, even if you have a good record, there's just this trend to want to throw the incumbents out."

Lancaster said that so long as the public stays in a bad mood, incumbents will be at a disadvantage - especially in local races. It's hard to blame your legislator for high state taxes or a bad economy. He's only one of 170. Your commissioner is one of five or seven, however. You look at high level taxes, or bad local high schools, and you know he's the reason, he said.

Will the anti-incumbent trend continue? Regan said it began last year with the wholesale removal of municipal office holders. It

FOCUS

Social Insecurity

On Saturday, Social Security will be 47 years old, but people now wonder how long the program can survive. Under Social Security, workers and their employers contribute to help the elderly, the disabled, and others who cannot work. In 1950, 16 workers paid into the system for every person who received benefits. But, by 1981, there were only three workers supporting each recipient, and, experts say that by 2035, there could be only two. With fewer people paying while more collect, the fund could soon be exhausted. Later this year, a special bipartisan commission will suggest ways to save the program. Meanwhile, people are worried, because the failure of Social Security would affect every American.

Agree To Disagree

NEW DELHI, India (AP) - India has the right to reprocess used nuclear fuel from its nuclear power plant at Tarapur and will do so "when necessary", Prime Minister Indira Gandhi said Wednesday.

"We have made it clear that we have the right to reprocess the spent fuel. The Americans have a different view on it, but it makes no difference to us", she said to the Indian Parliament.

The United States, which built the reactor and supplied its fuel until now, refuses to permit India to reprocess the used fuel into plutonium because India has not complied with American policies designed to prevent reprocessed fuel from being used for nuclear weapons.

The reactor has been reduced to running at half capacity, because the United States has delayed fuel shipments in an effort to force India to comply.

The two countries recently agreed to end the dispute, allowing India to buy fuel from France.

Warrant Issued In July Slaying

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) - The Federal Bureau of Investigation issued a federal warrant for the arrest of Tony Mitchell Sidden, wanted in connection with the July 21 shooting death of his cousin, Garry Sidden.

The 35-year-old Hays man is charged in the warrant with unlawful flight to avoid prosecution.

Tony Sidden is also wanted for questioning in the disappearance of Garry Sidden's two sons, Garry Sidden Jr., 16, and Galvin Sidden, 10.

The boys have been missing since their father was killed during what officers have called a "long running family feud."

THE WALL'S VICTIMS BERLIN (AP) - A total of 180 people have been killed trying to escape to the West in the 21 years since the Berlin Wall was erected, a West German group says.

will continue, he said, so long as the political situation is so volatile. When times get better, incumbents will begin to regain their advantage over those challenging them.

Phone Company Cracks Down On Caller Cheats

By TOM CRANE
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The phone company, in a bid to cut down on what it calls telephone shoplifting that cost more than $44 million last year, is ordering its operators to reject some long-distance calls from pay phones billed to someone else's number.

In several states, operators are being told not to complete such calls unless someone at the phone to be billed is reached and accepts the charge.

third-party-charge call, or if the person calling is unknown at that phone, the call is rejected.

The companies hope the requirement will cut down on what Davis described as the telephonic equivalent of shoplifting.

"Fraud, like shoplifting, impacts on the bottom line cost to consumers, so everybody suffers," Davis said.

Such a policy would mean people living alone — a growing proportion of the population — would be unable to make such calls and bill them to the home number unless using a phone credit card.

Davis said AT&T is reluctant to cut back on the third-party-billing convenience, which is the fastest-growing operator-assisted phone service. Phone companies are installing new "coinless" phones in public places to handle the increasing number of credit-card calls and third-party calls.

But the convenience "has obviously raised the potential for fraud," Davis said. He said the total involved is impossible to calculate.

because many customers don't detect calls that have been wrongly billed to them by a third party, even though such long-distance calls are listed on their bill.

When businesses or home subscribers find they've been billed for such calls, the telephone company absorbs the loss — $44 million for interstate calls last year, officials said. Interstate fraud involving charges to other parties' phone credit cards raised the losses for 1981 to $73 million.

The companies' losses are taken into account when the telephone company seeks to raise its rates.

Two Attended D.C. Conference

Eric Henderson and Bob Mills, president and vice president of the East Carolina University Student Government Association, attended a national convention of student government representatives held recently in Washington, D.C.

The national association represents 450 member schools. Henderson is from Trenton while Mills is from Belgrade.

Admits Roommate's Killing And Four Others

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A man charged with murdering his roommate at a secluded cottage here admits to the crime and says he also killed four people in the house next door, including an 11-year-old boy, authorities said.

The roommate was decapitated and the throats of the other four victims were slashed, police said.

Larry Keith Robison told detectives Wednesday "that he committed the murders," but he has not given a signed statement to police, Deputy Police Chief Jack Bicknell said.

Robison, 25, was charged Wednesday in the death of 31-year-old Ricky Lee Bryant, whose nude body was found Tuesday in a bedroom of Bryant's secluded cottage near Lake Worth. His head lay in the crook of his arm and his body had been sexually mutilated.

The other four victims were discovered next door when police went there to question neighbors about Bryant's death, police said.

Bryant's parents said Robison was living at the cottage while looking for a job.

Bicknell said Robison knew all of the victims but gave no motive for the slayings. Robison gave his oral statement to detectives while being flown here after waiving extradition from Wichita, Kan., Bicknell said.

About 12 hours after the five bodies were found here,

Robison was arrested in Wichita when a gun was spotted on the floor of the station wagon in which he was sleeping behind a Wichita church.

Wichita police found in the car billfolds belonging to two of the victims, officers said.

The other four victims were identified as Georgia Reed, 34, a masseuse; her son, Scott, who would have turned 12 today; her mother, Earline H. Barker, 55, and Bruce M. Gardner, 33.

An autopsy on Bryant began Wednesday but Tarrant County medical examiner's office officials said results would not be released until the other four autopsies were finished.

Medical Examiner Nizam Peerwani has said the four next-door victims may have been shot or strangled as well as stabbed repeatedly.

Spent .22-caliber cartridges were found in both of the cottages, police said. The gun found with Robison was a .22-caliber pistol, Bicknell said.

Robison told Fort Worth detectives he had been heading for Kansas City, Mo., where he has a girlfriend, Bicknell said. But Wichita police Capt. Mike Hill said Robison earlier had told Wichita police "he was going to Chicago and needed a place to rest."

The car in which Robison was found belonged to Gardner.

Court records show Robison was convicted in Fort Worth in 1977 on a theft charge after three snakes, an aquarium and a pet supplies were stolen from a pet store. He also was arrested on a burglary complaint but the charge was dismissed last spring.

Robison, who had worked as a carpenter, had lived in

Haltom City, a Fort Worth suburb, with his common-law wife, Tina Blosser, and their young daughter, Melissa Dawn Robison, last year and part of this year. Ms. Blosser now lives in Kansas City with the child.

Bryant's father, Donald Bryant, said his son had known Robison for about eight months. The Bryants live about two miles from the cottage where Junett Bryant found her son's body.

SUSPECT — Larry Keith Robison, 24, shakes his handcuffed fist at the photographer following his extradition from Wichita, Kan. Robison was arrested in connection with the deaths of five people found dead in Fort Worth, Tex. (Copyright Larry C. Price, Ft. Worth Star-Telegram, via AP)

The Citadel Has Offer To Prince

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — If Prince Charles and Princess Diana have trouble deciding where to send their son to college, a tradition-steeped Southern military school here is willing to help.

Maj. Gen. James A. Grimsley Jr., president of The Citadel, has issued Prince William of Wales a provisional appointment to enter the college as a cadet in the fall of 2000, when he will be 18 years old.

In granting the provisional appointment, The Citadel is committed to reserve a place for Prince William — that is, if His Royal Highness meets its academic and physical requirements.

Prince Charles, heir to the British throne, visited The Citadel's campus in October 1977 to deliver an address and accept an honorary degree. He also was honored at a review of the Corps of Cadets.

Wage Inflation Unlikely To Catch On, Says Study

By MERRILL HARTSON
AP Labor Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Highly publicized wage concessions in some unionized industries are unlikely to have "spillover effects" across the economy or reshape how most wages are set, according to an independent study.

"By themselves, the concessions will have only a small effect on movements in aggregate wages in 1982 since a relatively small fraction of the work force is directly involved," said Daniel J.B. Mitchell, an industrial relations expert at the University of California at Los Angeles.

Mitchell's analysis of the collective bargaining atmosphere — and its implications for future labor-management relations — was released Wednesday by the Brookings Institution, a liberal-oriented think tank headquartered here.

Mitchell, a member of the wage-price board during the Nixon administration, concluded that dramatic wage concessions made by workers in auto and trucking represented a union response to severely depressed conditions in those two industries.

The wave of concession bargaining in many industries, including meat-packing, newspaper publishing, rubber and machinery, has led some economists to predict an imminent change in the way wages are set.

But Mitchell noted that while much media attention focused on wage concessions by such powerful unions as the Teamsters and United Auto Workers, "... similar episodes have occurred in the past, and these experiences suggest that permanent and fundamental changes in wage determination processes are unlikely to occur in the absence of external intervention."

He said the political prospects for direct government intervention in the form of wage and price controls "are nil," and said there is no evidence that such guidelines would be desirable.

Nor is there any evidence, Mitchell said, that unions are prepared to relinquish long-term contracts with cost-of-living escalators, which legally bind a company to paying certain wages.

Mitchell said that despite the concession bargaining in many industries, he saw no indication of any long-term wage-setting changes that would make wages more responsive to overall economic conditions.

He suggested the economic givebacks contained in the auto and trucking industry settlements of 1982 were more a reaction to business conditions in those industries than to the recession generally.

There have been recent indications that unions are resisting pressure by management for wage concessions.

The United Steelworkers union, for instance, rejected last week demands by the steel industry for a renegotiated contract agreement that would have saved beleaguered producers millions of dollars.

And the International Association of Machinists threatened a strike before accepting wage concessions sought by USAir, which netted $20 million in the second quarter.

Mitchell said he found no evidence that wage concessions affecting union workers were spreading to the three-fourths of the American labor force which is unorganized.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics had reported recently that in the first six months of this year, some 1.9 million workers covered by major collective bargaining settlements got first-year raises averaging only 3 percent, compared to 7.7 percent first-year increases negotiated during the same period in 1981.

But the agency also noted that nearly three-fifths of the union members surveyed work in such industries as auto manufacturing and trucking.

Drawing a parallel with the bargaining climate that existed in the mid-1950s, just after the Korean War, Mitchell said many workers accepted pay cuts and strikes occurred infrequently.

He said previous incidences of "concessionary bargaining" have usually occurred during a period of economic slack and a threat to job security.

But he also said that the main lesson from the past episodes of union concessions is "that the dramatic changes are largely transitory."

Injured By Nail Through A Wall

MASSAPEQUA, N.Y. (AP) — A teen-age girl was in critical condition today after a nail shot from a workman's tool passed through a wall and pierced her head while she was working in fast-food restaurant.

Linda Archipolo, 18, of Massapequa Park, appeared to have suffered serious brain damage and partial paralysis because the nail "bounced around and ricocheted" inside her skull, damaging both sides of the brain, said Ed Smith, a spokesman for the Nassau County Medical Center.

Doctors removed the 3-inch-long flat-head nail during a 2½-hour operation Wednesday, Smith said.

He described her condition as "very, very critical." She was paralyzed in the legs, but that could change, he said.

Miss Archipolo was cleaning off a table at the Burger King restaurant at the Sunrise Mall here Wednesday afternoon when the accident occurred.

Police said Neil Warriner, 19, an employee of the Home Decor Store, next door to the restaurant, was trying to anchor a poster to a wall when he fired a nail from his 22-caliber nail gun. The nail passed through a ½-inch-thick wood panel, a Sheetrock wall and a mirror before it struck Miss Archipolo.

Nearly an inch of the nail protruded from the back of her head as she was taken to the hospital in a police helicopter.

No charges were filed against Warriner.

Jack Baitinger, district manager of the Btrger King, said two shots had come through the wall, but the first didn't hit anyone.

Baitinger said Miss Archipolo had been working part time at the Burger King since March. One of 12 children, she was graduated from high school in June.

Eldress Hattie Cobb will preach Sunday at 11 a.m. with music by the senior choir. The pastor and congregation of Shiloh Disciples of Christ Church will hold services at St. Matthew at 7:30 p.m.

Services will be held at Bethel Chapel of Washington at 3 p.m. by Eldress Cobb and the St. Matthew congregation.

Ribbon-Cutting

A ribbon-cutting ceremony was held today at the Chiropractic Clinic of Greenville at 3212 Memorial Drive.

Participating in the ceremony formally opening the clinic were Mayor Percy Cox and Larry Mallard, vice chairman of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce's organization and membership council.

Dr. Juane Surprise, owner of the clinic, said the facility is opened from 8 a.m. until 7 p.m. Monday through Friday, and from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Saturday.

Low Road Bid Held Ineligible

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A firm suspended by North Carolina for bid rigging was denied a state contract Wednesday by the Capitol Building Authority even though the company submitted the low bid for road work at a state park.

Dickerson Inc. of Monroe and Edenton was ruled ineligible to receive the contract after Frank Carpenter, a former Dickerson president, pleaded guilty Monday to bid-rigging charges.

The contract for work at Merchants Millpond State Park was awarded to Rightmyer Machine Rentals Inc. of Roanoke Rapids, whose bid was $17,596 higher than Dickerson's.

May Not Meet Deadline For Kids In Adult Jails

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — It's doubtful that North Carolina can remove all its youthful offenders from adult jails before the legal deadline in July 1983, officials who work with juveniles say.

"We can't get everything in place and do it right by 1983," said Bryant Haskins, a spokesman for the state Department of Human Resources.

He said there is no money to provide alternatives for the approximately 1,500 youths under age 18 who were held in North Carolina adult jails last year pending the outcome of their trials. Another 2,360 youths were held in juvenile detention centers.

A study committee reported in May to Human Resources Secretary Dr. Sarah Morrow that the cost of such alternatives could easily reach $1 million next year. It recommended seeking a one-year delay in the deadline because regardless of the price, the General Assembly won't meet to consider funding requests until January 1983 and money probably wouldn't be distributed until July.

There are other problems in meeting the 1983 deadline.

The Governor's Advocacy Council on Children and Youth estimates that 60 percent of the imprisoned youngsters would not have been there if more objective criteria were written into state law.

The only existing guidelines call for placing youth in jails or detention centers when they are charged with one or more felonies, have failed to appear in court in the past, have threatened to flee or should be detained for their own safety.

In September, the council will consider recommendations to change state law to limit the number of youths who may be placed in adult jails.

Congress decided that too many children are locked in jail cells and in 1980 it amended a law to cut off federal funding to states with young people in adult jails after December 1985. The North Carolina Legislature pushed the state deadline ahead to July 1983.

Currently, chief district court judges or their designated agents may send juveniles charged with crimes to one of 87 approved city or county jails or one of eight detention centers serving 55 counties or release them in their parents' custody.

The centers are in Buncombe, Cumberland, Durham, Forsyth, Guilford, Mecklenburg, New Hanover and Wake counties. They provide educational, psychological and recreational programs for youths.

Federal law requires only that young people be separated by sight and sound from adult inmates in city and county jails.

Marian Durham of the governor's council said that unfortunately the law often means youngsters are put in solitary confinement cells reserved for the worst adult prisoners.

The unhealthy jail environment appears to have very damaging effects on youths, researchers say. University of Illinois researchers found that the suicide rate for youths in adult jails was nearly five times greater than for their peers in the general population.

About a fourth of the youths held in adult jails or juvenile detention centers are runaways, indicate preliminary results of a survey by the youth council.

The other half are charged with mostly property crimes — breaking and entering, larceny, burglary and robbery. Only about 9 percent are charged with more violent crimes, such as assault, the March survey of court counselors indicated.

Of those detained, about 7 percent are kept because of the lack of transportation to another facility, 12 percent because they're thought to be destructive and 23 percent because they refused to go home.

In addition, 33 percent had never been in court before and 20 percent had threatened to escape.

The youths spent an average of almost three days in jail or four days in detention centers. After they left, 21 percent of them went to training schools, detention centers or jails.

"If a kid can go back out on the street in three or four days, maybe they shouldn't be there in the first place," said Michael Watson, assistant director for administration in the Division of Youth Services.

"We need to be getting kids out of secure detention and into less restrictive alternatives," Ms. Durham agreed. "If a child needs a place to sleep that's no reason to put him in a jail or detention center."

The philosophy appears to be "when in doubt, detain," Ms. Durham said. "With adults, it's more like when in doubt don't detain."

"The problem is getting kids out of jails and yet detaining them in places close to home, their family, their lawyers and their counselors," Watson said.

"There is a large group of people out in the community who feel the disadvantages of having kids in jail are outweighed by the advantages," he said, noting that some parents consider it a good experience for their child to spend some time in jail.

Ms. Durham said she believes the first step is to make sure only those who need detention receive it.

The next step may be to provide the alternatives to jails. State officials say the greatest needs are in the northeast, northwest and near Cherokee County.

There are a number of alternatives:

— Home detention, which allows juveniles to stay at home while they observe court rules.

— Specialized foster care, in which trained adults provide 24-hour care and supervision.

— Attention homes, which are houses for five to 12

NO RESCINDING
TOKYO (AP) — Japan is not considering rescinding recent revisions of history textbooks which have been criticized by China and both Korea, Education Minister Heiji Ogawa says.

"A lot of people don't realize kids are even kept in jails," Ms. Durham said. "They've never been in a jail and they don't have any idea of the psychological effects."

The Charles Gray Morgan Post of the Veterans of Foreign Wars has given $1,500 to the Eastern Carolina Vocational Center to dedicate a room in the center's new building to honor Margaret Brown, a charter member of the VFW post's ladies auxiliary. Before her retirement, Mrs. Brown served as treasurer of the auxiliary group for 17 years.

Howard Dawkins, former director of the ECVC who now heads the building fund campaign for the center, said "we are grateful for the interest the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the VFW Auxiliary has given..."

Dawkins noted that the gift honoring Mrs. Brown is the second $1,500 gift the VFW has made to the ECVC's building program.

He added that "Mr. (Ken) Brown and his mother, Mrs. Lawrence A. Stroud have recently contributed $5,000 to the center to dedicate memorial rooms to Mr. Lawrence A. Stroud and Miss Vicki Brown."

Poultry
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) - The North Carolina f.o.b. dock broiler market was weak. Supplies moderate. Demand moderate. Weights desirable. The dock weighted average price for this week is 41.56 for small purchases of plant grade broilers picked up at processing plants. Estimated slaughter today, 1,781,000.

NEW YORK (AP) - The stock market edged upward today, making another effort to rally from its lowest levels in more than two years.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial, off 44.90 points in the last seven trading days, rose 3.80 to 781.01 by noontime. Gainers held a slight lead over losers in the broad rally

Office Work Earns Bonus

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) - Doctors who perform certain operations in their offices instead of hospitals are getting bonuses from Blue Cross and Blue Shield of North Carolina as part of a plan to hold down increasing insurance premiums.

The company has identified 88 surgical procedures that may be done safely in doctors' offices and is paying participating physicians up to 25 percent of their normal reimbursement for the procedures.

A company official said that an increase of 6 percent or more in the number of operations performed outside the hospital would result in savings that could ease insurance premium increases.

Even hospital administrators, who stand to lose business, applauded the program.

"I think it's a very wise move," said William F. Andrews, president of the Wake County Hospital System. "The hospital had become the most costly place to provide these procedures and we've got to cut costs in this business."

Jack R. Willis, administrator at Rex Hospital, said: "If the procedure can be performed safely in an office environment, it's kind of hard to argue with it."

Volume on the Big Board totaled 18.98 million shares at noontime, against 20.17 million at the same point Wednesday.

Dick Flye, district commercial manager for Carolina Telephone, reported that the storm caused no serious telephone outages. He added, however, "We certainly missed a good chance to have big problems. We expected something."

Police Chief Glenn Cannon said that while telephone service was interrupted for a few minutes, his department "had no real problems."

In Ayden, downed lines caused some residents to be without power for a few hours, said a spokesman for the town. All current was restored by this morning.

Several Farmville streets were flooded during the deluge and about six inches of water covered N.C. 121 entering Farmville from the north this morning in the vicinity of Contentnea Creek.

Bill Oakley, an operator of Contentnea Barbecue near the creek, said the store would not be open today because it was flooded. A radio station in that area also was surrounded by water.

There were some power outages on both the Farmville-Fountain and Pitt & Greene systems.

A spokesman at Greenville Cable TV reported several instances of equipment damage during the storm, including cable trouble in the Brook Green subdivision where crews were busy today trying to restore service.

Information for this story was compiled by Reflector staff writers Tom Baines, Carol Tyer, Mary Schulken and Jerry Raynor.

Hot Giants Aim To Test Dodger's Lead

Too Late

By The Associated Press
It's getting even time for Reggie Smith.

"The Giants will not be intimidated by anyone," said the San Francisco outfielder on the eve of an important four-game series with the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Smith, of course, was a member of the Dodgers for many years and remembers that the Giants used to be virtual pushovers for them.

"When I first came here, it was a matter of the Dodgers knowing they could beat the Giants," Smith said. "But there's been an attitude change."

A big part of that has been helped by the Giants' recent play, which is the hottest in baseball. The Giants have posted the major league's best record since June 27, 28-13.

Counting Wednesday's 8-6, 12-inning victory over Atlanta, the Giants have won 10 straight and moved right into the thick of the National League West battle.

The surge has left the fourth-place Giants four games behind division-leading Los Angeles and they hope to make up more ground as they started their big series today with the Dodgers, who lost 2-1 to Cincinnati Wednesday night. The Braves, meanwhile, remained a half-game behind the Dodgers in second place.

The Giants' victory, by the way, gave them their longest winning streak since they reeled off 12 in a row April 30-May 13, 1966.

Smith, one of the hottest hitters in the Giants' hot streak, came through with a two-run homer in the 12th inning to win Wednesday's game. Smith's game-winning blast was his 12th homer of the year, and his eighth game-winning RBI. He has hit safely in 13 of his last 14 games with five homers and 11 RBI over that span.

"In the situation today, I was looking for a ball to drive out of the park," Smith said. "Everything is just falling into place now. If we can keep playing well, anything can happen."

The loss was the ninth straight for the Braves, who had dropped out of first place Tuesday night after spending virtually all season on top.

In other NL action, it was Philadelphia 4, Pittsburgh 1; Montreal 3, Chicago 0 and Houston 3, San Diego 0. Rain washed out the St. Louis-New York game.

Reds 2, Dodgers 1

Cesar Cedeno doubled home two runs in the first inning and Bob Shirley and Brad Lesley made them stand up with a combined seven-hitter as Cincinnati edged Los Angeles to snap the Dodgers' eight-game winning streak.

Shirley, 4-9, worked into the eighth inning, scattering six hits, one of which was Ron Cey's 16th home run with one out in the second, while walking three and striking out two.

Shirley also benefited from the Reds' defense that cut down two Dodgers at the plate.

Lesley pitched the final 11-3 innings for his second save.

Phillies 4, Pirates 1

Garry Maddox drove in three runs with a pair of singles to lead Philadelphia over Pittsburgh for the Phillies' third victory in their four-game series with the Pirates.

The Phillies scored the winning runs in a three-run eighth inning. Bo Diaz's groundout got one run home before Maddox capped the rally with a two-run single off Kent Tekulve, who relieved Pirate starter Rick Rhoden.

Sid Monge pitched the eighth inning and picked up his fifth victory without a loss. Ron Reed finished up for the Phillies, gaining his seventh save.

"I'd hate to make my living hitting off him," said Maddox of Tekulve. "I've gotten some hits off him in the past, but this was the first this year."

Expos 3, Cubs 0

Gary Carter hit a solo home run and Charlie Lea and two relievers combined on a four-hitter as Montreal stopped Chicago's six-game winning streak.

Lea, 9-6, allowed only three hits before getting relief help one out in the eighth from Woodie Fryman. Jeff Reardon bailed Fryman out of a jam in the ninth, posting his 17th save. Lea walked three and struck out six while improving his lifetime record against Chicago to 4-0.

The Expos scored their first run in the second off Chicago starter Alan Ripley, 4-5, on Carter's 22nd homer of the season and first since July 27.

Montreal made it 2-0 in the fourth on Doug Flynn's RBI single and added another run in the eighth on a run-scoring base hit by Al Oliver.

"Charlie was picture-perfect," said Carter. "He tired a little, but I'd say overall, it's the best game he's thrown."

Astros 3, Padres 0

Nolan Ryan fired the eighth.

one-hitter of his career and singled in a run, and Dickie Thon extended his hitting streak to 20 games as Houston blanked San Diego to complete a three-game sweep.

Ryan retired the first 13 Padres before Terry Kennedy grounded a clean single to center with one out in the fifth inning. The Padres managed only five other baserunners, three of them on walks.

Ryan, 12-9, struck out six in boosting his season total to 172. The victory total is his highest in three seasons as an Astro and the shutout was the 49th of his career.

Eric Show, 9-4, allowed all three Astro runs on eight hits over six innings, including Thon's leadoff double that led to the Astros' first run in the opening inning. Ryan aided his own cause with an RBI single in the second.

Corbett Is Eliminated

GREELEY, Colo. — Greenville's Susan Corbett failed to make the cut yesterday and was eliminated from the 34th annual U.S. Girls Junior Golf Championships now underway at the Greeley Country Club.

Corbett shot an 89-90-179 to miss the cut by 12 shots.

Only one other North Carolina golfer was in the tournament, Lenoir's Tammy Sides. Sides had an 88-78-166 to make the cut, but lost in the first round to Nancy Bowen of Tifton, Ga., 6 and 5.

Charlotte Dream Falls; Still Hope For Future

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — H.A. "Humpty" Wheeler says Saturday night could have been one of the biggest nights for boxing fans in Charlotte's history.

World featherweight champion Eusebio Pedroza was scheduled to meet Charlotte's own Bernard Taylor in a $250,000-plus match at the Charlotte coliseum. ABC-TV, assured of a top-notch match, was set to televise the bout around the world.

Charlotte was on the verge of becoming a major boxing city in the Southeast.

Instead of enjoying the glitter and glamor that would have gone along with the fight, promoter Wheeler is left dreaming of what might have been and hoping he can put all the pieces back together.

Wheeler's dream was shattered last month when Pedroza's eye was cut during a non-championship fight in Panama. It took six stitches to close the split in Pedroza's eyelid, and his managers said he couldn't risk fighting Taylor on Aug. 14. The Charlotte match was postponed indefinitely.

"It hurts to have it delayed like this, after all the work that went into getting here in the first place," said Wheeler, a former Golden Gloves boxer, now president of the Charlotte Motor Speedway. "We're still planning on having it here, it's just a matter of time. Right now, we're aiming at sometime in late October or early November."

For now, Wheeler, along with Taylor, is playing a waiting game. He's waiting to hear from Pedroza's managers in Panama, who will decide when the champion can fight again. He's waiting to hear from ABC-TV, to find out if they're still interested in televising the fight — which would have to compete with football for air time.

Wheeler says delays in sporting events tend to dampen initial enthusiasm. And reassembling all the pieces, from media coverage to availability of an arena, is a monumental task requiring good luck and excellent timing.

The delay may even cost Charlotte the fight. "Right now, it looks good for Charlotte to get the fight," Wheeler said. "We're certainly not giving up. But when you postpone something like this, other places start to figure in. Other cities would like to get a match of this type. Nothing's certain yet."

What Wheeler is certain of is that the fight would have been a windfall for Charlotte. It would have meant national television exposure for the city, as well as a financial boost for the city from the fans and boxing representatives who would have shown up for the event.

Officials of Top Rank Boxing Inc., a New York promotional company that specializes in professional boxing, were pleased with Charlotte's interest and promotional planning for the match. And if the fight had come off successfully, Top Rank president Bob Arum said the firm would have been receptive to other bouts in Charlotte.

Wheeler believes the fight could have assured Charlotte of a new sports "industry."

"I have no doubts that Charlotte can support big-time boxing," he said. "I think it could have meant, can still mean, a new industry for Charlotte. It can mean big matches, big money for the area."

For the time being, the fight and everything that would have come along with it are in limbo.

Medalist Advances In Junior Tourney

BUIES CREEK, N.C. (AP) — Medalist Danny Hockaday of Sanford eliminated Tommy Johnson of Advance and Raleigh's David Grosvenor Wednesday to lead 16 players into the third round of the 15th Annual North Carolina Junior Championship.

Hockaday, 16, was 1 over par on the Keith Hills Country Club course after Wednesday's double round. He faces John Chapman of Raleigh in Thursday's action.

Thursday's feature matchup pits North Carolina's two hottest junior players this summer as Gastonia's Mike Taylor takes on Charlotte's George Welsh in the Carolinas Golf Association-sponsored event. Taylor recently won the North-South championship while Welsh captured the Frank Edwards. Both qualified for the United States Golf Association junior nationals.

In other third round action, David Hull of Jacksonville faces Jim Black of Charlotte. Chip Watson of Cary takes on Matt Hoyt of Burlington. Jay Helms of Fayetteville goes against Bryan Wood of Burlington. Art Roberson of Zebulon tees off opposite Brian Driggers of Mocksville. Marvin Mangum of Jacksonville joins Uly Griset of Advance and Hunt Dunlap of Siler City faces Bruce Cagre of Asheboro.

The championship continues through Friday.

Tar Heels Might Keep Crown In ACC

ATLANTA (AP) — Coach Danny Ford of Clemson knows it's difficult to successfully defend college football's national championship.

"It took us from the time this program was born until 1981 to win it, but I can't say it is impossible," said Ford. "Everyone thought it was impossible for us to win it a first time, but we did."

Repeating as national champs has been done only eight times in 46 years, and few expect the Tigers to turn the trick. But the Atlantic Coast Conference will offer a legitimate contender — Coach Dick Crum's North Carolina Tar Heels, featuring one of the nation's top running backs, Kelvin Bryant.

North Carolina and Clemson are solidly entrenched as the top two teams in the ACC, and loom as the league's only threats to crack the Top 20 rankings.

The Southeastern Conference, which claimed three national titles in succession before Clemson rose to the top, may be geared for another Alabama-Georgia title fight, but several others loom as challengers — primarily Florida, and possibly Auburn and Mississippi State.

The battle for supremacy among the South's 10 Division I-A independents should feature Miami of Florida, which faces a tough schedule, and Southern Mississippi, led by Reggie Collier, the only quarterback in NCAA history to gain 1,000 yards both rushing and passing in the same season.

The most decorated individuals in southern football return to build on impressive records — two-time All-America running back Herschel Walker of Georgia and Alabama's Paul "Bear" Bryant, who completed the 1981 season at the top of the all-time list of coaching victories, 315, one more than Amos Alonzo Stagg.

Walker, the 222-pound junior, already holds the NCAA rushing records for a freshman and a sophomore, having amassed 3,507 yards in two seasons. He holds 15 school, eight SEC and six NCAA records. Walker finished third in the Heisman Trophy voting after his freshman season and second last year.

Since going to the wishbone offense, Bryant has steered Alabama to eight SEC titles in the last 11 years, tying Georgia for the title last year. The Crimson Tide will add a new wrinkle to the offense this year, going to the I and double wing to take advantage of quarterback Walter Lewis' passing to wide receivers Jesse Bendross and Joey Jones. The move also is expected to help running back Linnie Patrick.

"I know that it sounds a little crazy to abandon something that has been as good to us as the wishbone has, but that's not really the case," Bryant said. "What we're doing is adding the 1, not abandoning the wishbone."

At Georgia, Walker will be operating behind a veteran line, but the question for the Bulldogs is how gifted but inexperienced quarterback John Lastinger performs.

Florida, which has never won the SEC title, returns 20 starters from last year's team, including quarterback Wayne Peace working behind an intact starting line.

Mississippi State, an awesome defensive machine last year, will have to rely more on its offense after losing All-America linebacker Johnie Cooks and All-SEC tackle Glen Collins. Junior John Bond will start at quarterback for the third year, and split end Glen Young and tailback Michael Haddix give the Bulldogs two solid threats.

Coach Pat Dye begins his second season at Auburn, expecting another strong defensive team and facing a schedule in which the Tigers leave the state only twice.

Most of the other teams in the SEC expect to show some improvement, especially Louisiana State, but don't figure to challenge for an upper first-division berth. Jerry Claiborne is the only new coach in the SEC, taking over at Kentucky.

Despite a knee injury that forced him to miss four games, North Carolina's Bryant scored 18 touchdowns and rushed for 1,015 yards. The Tar Heels also have an excellent quarterback in Rod Elkins, who passed for 994 yards last year, most of that before being slowed by a mid-season ankle injury.

Ford must make wholesale changes in a depleted offensive line, but the Clemson defense should be strong again and Homer Jordan gives stability at quarterback, returning for his third season as a starter.

Bobby Ross replaced Claiborne as the coach at Maryland, which is expected to battle North Carolina State for third in the ACC. Another new coach in the ACC is George Welsh, who left Navy for the struggling program at Virginia.

Miami must replace 13 starters, but Jim Kelly is back to direct the offense after passing for 2,403 yards and 14 touchdowns. Collier triggers 994 yards last year, most of and nose guard Jerald Baylis and linebacker Greg Kelley head the defense under new Coach Jim Carmody, who assumed command in January when Bobby Collins move to Southern Methodist.

Bobby Bowden must find a new quarterback as Florida State rebuilds, South Carolina expects some improvement under new Coach Richard Bell and Virginia Tech, led by tailback Cyrus Lawrence, could fashion an impressive record.

After winning six of its last seven games last year, Tulane looks for carryover momentum. Southwestern Louisiana dropped out of the Division I-AA Southland Conference to remain in the top category as an independent.

Baylor's Blast Leads Angels

Winterville Champs

By The Associated Press

When a key hit is needed, the California Angels almost fall over themselves to get into the batter's box.

It was two outs, bases loaded in the bottom of the seventh when Don Baylor got his turn. "If you take that situation," said Baylor, "Reggie Jackson would love to be up there. Everyone in our lineup who can drive the ball would love to be up there."

"I love to be up there, too. You do it or you don't. Plus, Davis doesn't trick you," Baylor said of the predominantly fastball-pitching Ron Davis, the Minnesota Twins' right-handed reliever.

Mariners 7, A's 4
Left-hander Floyd Bannister scattered five hits to lead Seattle past Oakland. Bannister, 11-7, raised his American League-leading strikeout total to 141 by fanning six and walking four before Bill Caudill came on in the ninth to get his 20th save.

Oakland's Rickey Henderson, who walked in the fifth inning, swiped second and third to bring his stolen base total to 107, 11 shy of Lou Brock's record of 118.

Blue Jays 4, Red Sox 3
Reliever Mark Clear walked pinch-hitter Hosken Powell with the bases loaded in the bottom of the seventh inning to force in the winning run as Toronto edged Boston. The Red Sox had taken a 3-2 lead in the top of the seventh the same way — on a bases-loaded walk.

It was the Blue Jays' sixth straight victory, tying a club record.

Rangers 6, Brewers 3
Buddy Bell singled home what proved to be the winning run in Texas' victory over Milwaukee as the Rangers erupted for four runs in the seventh inning.

The loss was only the third by the Brewers in their last 10 games.

Tigers 3, Yankees 2
Jerry Turner's sacrifice fly to left field scored Lou Whitaker from third base in the 12th inning and gave Detroit its victory over New York.

Whitaker got a second chance when Yankee shortstop Roy Smalley dropped his foul pop for an error. He then singled to center off reliever George Frazier, 4-3, the fourth Yankee pitcher, and, after the bases were loaded, Turner lofted a fly to left field and Dave Winfield's throw to the plate was too late to nail the sliding Whitaker.

White Sox 4, Orioles 1
A 14-hit attack, paced by Steve Kemp's two singles and two runs batted in, gave Chicago its victory over Baltimore and a sweep of their three-game series. It was the White Sox' 11th victory in their last 13 games.

White Sox starter Rich Dotson, 6-11, worked seven innings to get his first victory at Comiskey Park since Sept. 20, 1981. He was 0-7 at home this season.

Royals 8, Indians 0

Don Hood hurled five innings of one-hit relief and Amos Otis collected three hits and two runs batted in to lead Kansas City over Cleveland, capping the Royals' three-game sweep of the Indians.

Pirate Aerial Attack!

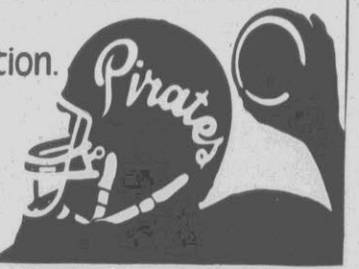

ECU's Pirates are calling in the aerial attack this fall. The pass is back. Both quarterbacks, Kevin Ingram and Greg Stewart, will be passing out of the new "I" formation. And, that spells wide-open football.

With a front line measuring 6'3" and 254 pounds, Ingram and Stewart will have time for some downrange bombing. And, plenty of help from big fast running backs Earnest Byner and Jimmy Walden will keep opponents guessing.

Watch when the aerial attack connects with blistering Ricky Nichols (4.35 sec. — 40 yds.) and Carlton Nelson (4.5 sec. — 40 yds.). They're the fastest split ends ever to wear purple and gold.

So, get ready for the Pirate's aerial attack this fall. Reserve season tickets now to all the Pirates' home games. Simply call the Athletic Ticket Office at 919-757-6500, or drop by your local Wachovia Bank and pick up an order form.

When the Pirates attack by air, catch the action.

Saints, Oilers Clash To Open Weekend

By The Associated Press
The National Football League's first full weekend of exhibition play kicks starts tonight with the New Orleans Saints meeting the Oilers in Houston and with the Raiders looking to finally settle down in Los Angeles.

Second-year Saints coach Bum Phillips — who became a folk hero in Houston during his years as the Oilers' head man — will try to continue the youth movement he started last year, when 15 rookies made the Saints' final 45-man roster.

"We'll look at a lot of people," Phillips said. "We've got good battles going on at several positions and it's important to give these kids an opportunity to show what they can do in game conditions."

Oiler coach Ed Biles, whose club finished at 7-9 last season, will start Gifford Nielsen at quarterback, but also will want to look at second-round draft choice Oliver Luck of West Virginia.

"We need to find out how far along we are with our offense and defense, too," said Biles. "I think you'll see a change in our offense this year."

There will be two games Friday night — Cincinnati will be at Kansas City, while

St. Louis visits Seattle. There are 10 more games on Saturday, and a Chicago-at-San Diego matchup Monday night rounds out the schedule.

On Saturday, the Super Bowl champion San Francisco 49ers will host the Raiders, who finally seem able to replace "Oakland" with "Los Angeles" in front of their nickname.

"The game contract we signed is with the Los Angeles Raiders. The tickets just say 'Raiders,' but the media credentials say Oakland Raiders. The flip cards (rosters) in the press box will say Los Angeles Raiders," said

49ers spokesman George Heddlston. Heddlston's lament came one day after the Raiders got an apparent green light to move to Los Angeles, as the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals Tuesday rejected the league's request to delay the club's move from Oakland to Los Angeles.

It was a decision that didn't sit too well with the NFL. "As of now, we're referring to them as the Raiders," said NFL Public Relations Director

Jim Heffernan, who stressed that the league still plans to pursue the matter in the courts.

But the Raiders' cause got another lift Wednesday when legislation that would prevent the city of Oakland from using the power of eminent domain to take over the team was approved by a Senate committee.

The bill, sponsored by Sen. William Campbell, R-Hacienda Heights, would reverse a recent state Supreme Court ruling and forbid the use of eminent domain to acquire a sports franchise.

Meanwhile, the NFL Management Council increased the cut-down limits during the preseason because of the uncertain labor situation between players and management.

The player limit at the first mandatory cut, Aug. 24, was increased from 60 to 70. The second cutdown date is Aug. 31, when teams must be down to 60 instead of 50 players.

The Council also reinstated an inactive list to take effect at the final cut to 45 players Sept. 6. The clubs will be allowed to designate four additional players for the inactive list, from which individual players can be moved on a weekly basis throughout the season. This, in effect, creates a taxi squad for each team.

In another union development, Ed Garvey, head of the NFL Players Association, said that if the league took action against player representatives, the union would consider striking during the exhibition season to protect its members.

"If they take some disciplinary action for union activities, we must remain flexible," said Garvey, who added that at this point there is no evidence of any such action being taken against player representatives.

With starter Uwe von Schamann recovering from a bout with colitis, the Miami Dolphins signed placekicker Rex Robinson, a free agent waived by the Denver Broncos. With von Schamann listed as "physically unable to perform," Robinson will compete with free agents Jorge Portilla and Hans Nielsen for a spot on the Dolphins' roster.

The Seattle Seahawks announced that they had waived offensive guards Edd Gall and offensive guard Bill Ridge, and had acquired offensive tackle Charles Dunn on waivers from Dallas.

Green Bay Packer reserve offensive tackle Buddy Aydelette announced his retirement. Aydelette, 26, spent the entire 1981 season on the injured reserve list with a knee injury.

The Packers gave no reason for Aydelette's decision.

ABC Says Will Lose Big Bucks

ATLANTA (AP) — An official of ABC Sports told a state judge here Wednesday that he could not estimate the financial loss ABC might incur if WTBS-TV is permitted to televise college football games in the Atlanta area this fall.

Jim Spence, a senior vice president at ABC Sports, was the opening witness in a lawsuit filed against the Turner Broadcasting Co. and the National Collegiate Athletic Association by ABC and Cox Broadcasting Co.

The trial, which resumes Thursday in Superior Court in Fulton County, is expected to last three days.

The suit was filed after Turner Broadcasting Co., owned by cable television and sports magnate Ted Turner, signed a contract with the NCAA to broadcast 19 college football games this fall over WTBS-TV, which is beamed by satellite to cable television systems across the country.

Turner agreed to pay the NCAA $7.4 million in 1982 and $10.3 million in 1983 for the right to televise 19 games each season. The games would be broadcast over WTBS-TV, which also would provide the games live over the free airwaves to some 1 million Atlanta-area homes.

ABC and Cox, which owns the Atlanta ABC affiliate, contend in the suit that an agreement signed by the NCAA and ABC in July 1981 prohibits the NCAA from granting to others the right to televise live, free, on-the-air broadcasts of college football games.

To allow WTBS-TV to broadcast the 19 games this fall, the suit contends, would result in irreparable damage to WSB-TV, the Cox-owned ABC affiliate here.

NBC Putting Money On Track And Field Events

By LARRY SIDDONIS
AP Sports Writer

In the 1960s, it was golf. Tennis took over in the 1970s. And now, NBC appears to be putting its money on track and field as the television sport of the 1980s.

On Wednesday, the network announced a multimillion-dollar deal to telecast next summer's First World Championships of Track and Field from Helsinki, Finland.

Now, sprinters, hurdlers, shot putters and the like regularly appear on the home screen. Track and field, perhaps the oldest sport of them all, long has been a staple of the network anthology shows.

But the production NBC plans for Helsinki '83 is something else.

According to Arthur A. Watson, president of NBC Sports, coverage will include at least 12 hours of live and taped programming from the championships, scheduled for next Aug. 7-14. Aside from the Olympics, that would be the biggest commitment ever by a U.S. network to a single track meet.

"We'll probably have two hours the opening day, one hour each day during the week and about six hours the final weekend," Watson said.

The midweek shows will likely be at night, after local newscasts, at 11:30 p.m. on the East Coast. The weekend shows could start in late morning Eastern Time and run until midafternoon, when baseball would pick up on the network.

If that sounds suspiciously like a certain network's coverage of the Wimbledon tennis tournament, there's a good reason.

"We have been noted for building new blocks," said Watson. "We did it with 'Breakfast at Wimbledon,' and the public interest in the American Conference (of the National Football League).

"Track at the exceptional level at which it will be competed in Helsinki presents a giant opportunity for American television. Look at the interest the World Cup (of soccer) generated. This event is along the same lines. And it should be bigger than the World Cup in the United States, since track is more established here than soccer."

The championships, sponsored by the International Amateur Athletic Federation, will feature an estimated 1,300 athletes from 124 nations.

Pittsburgh's New Coach Is On The Hot Seat

One of a Series
PITTSBURGH (AP) — Big things are expected this year from the University of Pittsburgh, which has quarterback Danny Marino and 17 other starters returning from an 11-1 team.

The Panthers finished No. 4 in the nation after beating Georgia in the Sugar Bowl, and new Coach Serafino "Fog" Fazio knows that preseason pollsters rate them among the nation's elite.

"I think our kids will be motivated by the fact that so much is expected from them," said Fazio, who took over when Jackie Sherrill went to Texas A&M for an estimated six-year, $1.6 million contract.

Pitt, 33-3 over the past three years with eight or more victories in each of the last seven seasons, has 48 let-terms coming back, including nine starters each on offense and defense.

The defense was tops in the country a year ago, giving up 62.4 yards rushing per game and 224.8 total yards per game. Georgia running back Herschel Walker gained only 84 yards rushing against the Panthers.

The offense averaged 32 points a game. And the 6-foot-4, 217-pound Marino, a second team All-American, is back after leading the nation with 37 touchdown passes — including a fourth-down scoring strike in the final minute to beat Georgia.

"I don't think there's a college quarterback that I have seen in my time who can do the things, who has done the things, that Dan Marino has. He's a true, true winner, a competitor and an outstanding leader," said Fazio.

"He's a pro quarterback in college, really," said Coach Bobby Bowden of Florida State.

Marino, with a dozen Pitt passing records, is the school's all-time leading passer with 6,165 yards. He needs only 594 yards to match Tony Dorsett's total yardage mark.

"We're going to be an exciting, wide-open football team. With the talent we have on offense, we expect our offense to control the football and score some points," said Fazio, a 1960 graduate of Pitt and a former defensive coordinator.

What's worrisome is a schedule that Fazio rates as Pitt's toughest in years. The Panthers open at home against North Carolina Sept. 9, then play at Florida State and Illinois before returning home against West Virginia.

"The first part of our schedule is amazingly tough. All the answers come in the first four weeks of the season," said Fazio.

For Deaf Youth, A Job Others Only Dream Of

LA JOLLA, Calif. (AP) — Matt Weaver, stary-eyed, silent and deaf, has a summer job that most 16-year-old boys only dream about.

He shags footballs for Dan Fouts, jokes with Goliath-sized National Football League linemen and applies lightning bolt decals on the San Diego Chargers' helmets.

One of 10 camp boys hired for the Chargers' six-week training camp, his hours are long, the work steady and the pay unimportant.

For Matt, a 5-foot-5, 160-pound junior-to-be at the California School for Deaf at Riverside, this is heaven on turf.

"I'm glad when I come here," he wrote in a handwritten question-and-answer interview conducted Wednesday.

He landed the job after visiting the San Diego camp a year ago and demonstrated a willingness to work.

"He saw the other kids working and started helping them with their chores," said Sid Brooks, longtime equipment manager for the Chargers.

"I told him to write us in January and we'd put his application on file," said Brooks.

Come spring, Weaver landed his first big job, immediately becoming a celebrity at his school.

Deaf since birth, football became his passion at an early age.

A starting running back for the deaf school's varsity football team, one of his favorite athletes is Detroit running back Billy Sims.

His favorites on the Chargers are Fouts, the NFL's record-breaking passing king, and All-Pro tight end Kellen Winslow, one of the most popular players in camp.

Unable to speak, Matt gets his work instructions by sign language from Brooks, who learned to sign after hiring the stocky blond teen-ager.

"Most of the guys talk to him by writing. He and (linebacker) Ray Preston had a good conversation going the other day," said Brooks.

"He was in a shell when he first got here. But his uncle, Larry Weaver (the Chargers' offensive coordinator) says he's really opened up a lot," added Brooks.

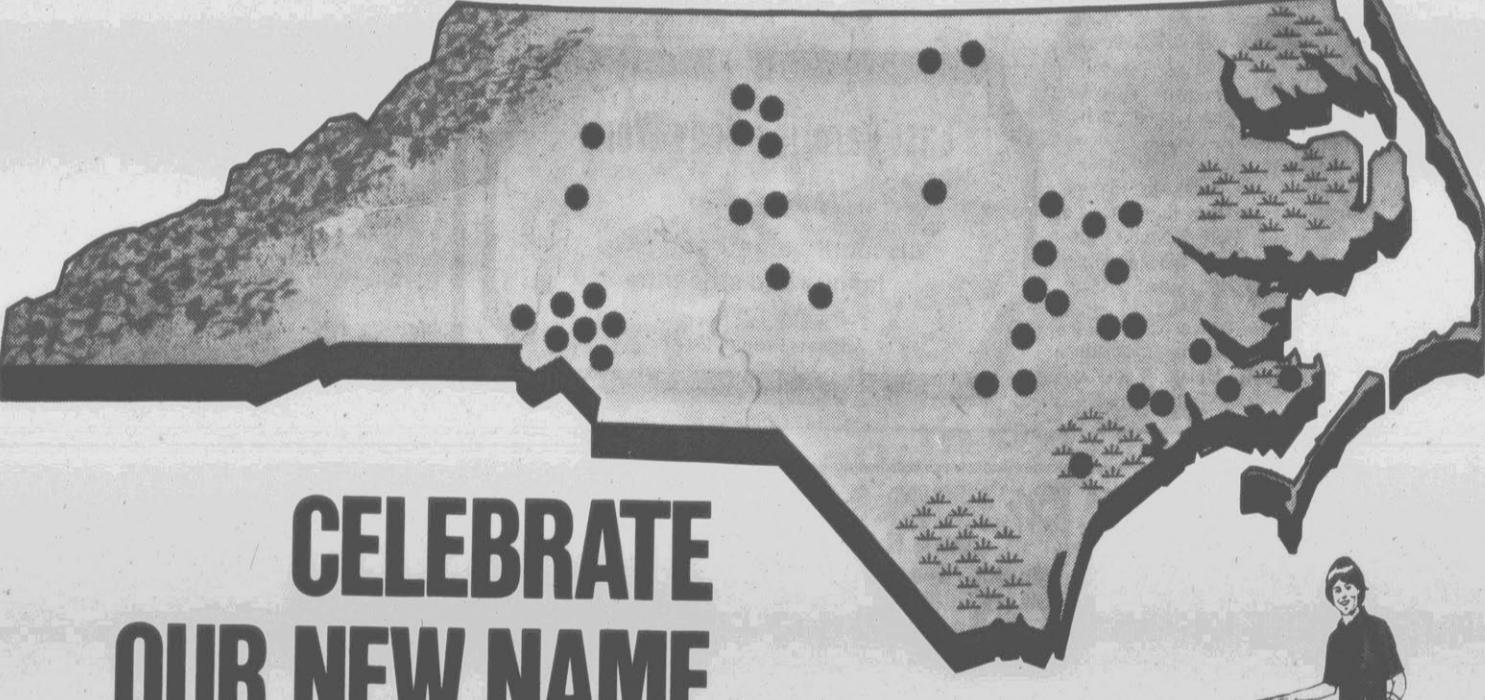

During the interview, Matt was asked to identify his proudest achievement in life.

Without any hesitation, he furiously scribbled an unexpected answer.

"I know the news in the world and all the country," he wrote, then leaned back in his chair and flashed a proud smile.

And with a similar commitment to growth, the board of directors of East Federal, Kinston has joined with First American to make First American one of the largest savings institutions in North Carolina.

For new and present First American customers alike, this means added convenience. Now with the addition of 12 East Federal offices, First American offers 38 fully staffed locations across the state to transact your financial business.

A customer of one office is welcome to all. The merger also brings added strength and safety—surrounding each account with the security that comes from over 600 million dollars in assets. Plus your savings are insured up to $100,000 by an agency of the Federal Government.

New checking, saving and retirement plans, the warm familiar smile of your regular teller, the same neighborhood office, and a pride in the growth of North Carolina. They're all good reasons to go with First American.

Free Gifts and Door Prizes
Every new beginning—every step forward—is worth a moment of celebration with the people who make progress possible. For First American that means we want to say "Thank You" to our friends and customers alike. So everyone's invited to our open house. Come celebrate our new name.

The party includes loads of gifts and special "I Love America" pennants for the children; each of the 12 offices will give away a 10 speed boy's or girl's bike and an outdoor gas grill, 48 other gifts will also be presented in a giant drawing. Of course you need not be present to win nor do you have to make a purchase. But do come in for the fun and register for these gifts. They're our way of simply saying "You're First In What We Do."

We're Looking Forward Together

Coped With Weighty Issue

SHOULDER POWER TO THE RESCUE — The problem was how to get two 515 Massey-Ferguson grain combines in Williamston unloaded from a railroad flatcar onto a platform three feet away without lifting equipment. The trio concerned with finding a solution, shown studying the situation at left are: Wyatt Coltrain, standing, James Swain, climbing into cab, and Clyde Pridgen, standing in the open gap. The three concluded that steel plates would serve to bridge the gap and support the weight of the combine. At center, Pridgen, huskiest of the three, uses shoulders and back power to position a steel plate across the gap with Coltrain guiding the plate's placement. The makeshift arrangement held up and Swain was able to maneuver the combine onto the loading platform and back it down an incline at one end of the platform. The two large pieces of farming equipment, destined for C&R Implement Co., arrived in Williamston by Seaboard Coastline from a factory in Canada. (Reflector Photo by Jerry Raynor)

Scientist Says 'Lucy' Fossils Closest To A Missing Link

By PAUL RAEËBURN
AP Science Writer
ATLANTA (AP) — A leading anthropologist says fossils found in east Africa during the last decade are the closest thing to the missing link — a creature that was part ape, part human. The term "missing link" might make most scientists cringe, but Donald Johanson said Wednesday that it aptly describes the creature's role in evolution.

Johanson is the discoverer of "Lucy," the partial skeleton of a 3½-foot-tall creature that has a head similar to a chimpanzee's and a body similar to a human's. It has been of great interest to scientists for what it reveals of "the mysterious and murky beginnings" of the human race, Johanson said in a lecture before the International Primatological Society.

Since the discovery of Lucy and the remains of other creatures who lived at about the same time — between 3 million and 4 million years ago — scientists have argued bitterly over whether these animals were more like human beings or more like apes.

Adopting the title of a recent magazine article about the controversy, Johanson, the founder and director of the Institute for the Study of Human Origins in Berkeley, Calif., called it the "battle of the bones." A bit of anger erupted after Johanson's lecture when he briefly described his examination of a recently discovered skull that he said had been beaten and cut.

"It looks like it was scalped," Johanson said, neglecting to mention that others had previously examined the skull.

"How...dare he say that nobody's examined that specimen before?" one scientist said angrily to his friends.

Johanson later said he had simply forgotten to mention the other work. But the episode was typical of the emotions provoked by talk of human ancestors.

The fight over Lucy began in the 1970s, as soon as the bones were found. The remains of other large and small creatures were found by Johanson in Ethiopia and by Mary Leakey in Tanzania.

Mrs. Leakey concluded the fossils belonged to the genus homo, the category of animals which includes human beings — homo sapiens.

Johanson decided they were from the genus Australopithecus, and that the large bones were from males and the smaller ones from females.

He named the creature Australopithecus afarensis. He thinks it was an ancestor of both human beings and other types of Australopithecus.

"What we have is a creature that from the neck up looks very primitive but from the neck down is very different from an ape," Johanson said.

Plight Of Movie Children Is As Old As Hollywood

By ROGER GILLOTT
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — As long as there have been movies, there have been child stars, and problems protecting them.

But after the death of two children in a movie accident last month, some officials say efforts to enforce the strict child-labor laws are hampered by mild penalties and, in some cases, parents who are too happy their kids are in the movies to be vigilant.

The two children who were killed along with actor Vic Morrow when a helicopter went out of control on a fiery movie set were working too late at night and had no work permits, state officials said.

CHILD ACTORS — Labor laws to protect children in the movie industry are hampered by mild penalties and sometimes overeager parents. Among those refused permits in California were actresses Jodie Foster (center) and Linda Blair (right). The movies

"Taxi Driver" and "Exorcist" were then filmed outside of California. My-ca Dihn Lee, left, was one of two children killed in a movie mishap in California — working under conditions which officials said were in violation of child labor laws. (AP/Laserphoto)

"I don't think it (the accident that killed Morrow and the two children) was because of a lack of regulations. It was just something that slipped through the holes," says Kim Felner, spokeswoman for the Screen Actors Guild.

California's first law protecting child actors was passed in 1929.

"I remember seeing old Mack Sennett silent movies with kids chasing around in cars and such things," he said.

A child now must have a job promise, a health certificate and at least a "C" average to get a theatrical work permit. A child can spend no more than eight hours a day on the set, and three of them must be allotted for education by a teacher who also looks out for the child's well-being. Another of those eight hours must be set aside for relaxation. Children under 8 are forbidden to work after 6:30 p.m., and are barred from hazardous working conditions. Mrs. Logan decided the sex scenes in "Taxi Driver" were too explicit for teen-age actress Jodie Foster, and she refused to permit actress Linda Blair to undergo grueling five-hour make-up sessions for "The Exorcist." Both movies were shot outside California.

Museum's One Message: Peace

By LINDA WOLOHAN
CHICAGO (UPI) — If visitors to the Peace Museum come expecting a 1960s clinic, they leave with a greater appreciation of art and the peace movement of the 1980s.

which opened in downtown Chicago last November.

The museum attempts to pass on to patrons a message of peace through the visual, literary and performing arts.

Ms. Philbin said people patronize the museum "expecting it to be a '60s drop-in clinic and associate it with the grass-roots peace movement. Instead they find quality artwork."

"This is a new approach to peace education," said Marianne Philbin, one of the gallery's few fulltime staffers. She says the arts can communicate the issues involved in the peace movement.

The non-profit gallery, funded in part by the National Endowment for the Humanities, opened at a time when Rogovin said the peace movement is "exploding — people are scared like never before."

Lining the whitewashed brick walls of the former warehouse is a collection of cartoons from Daumier to Doonesbury that trace peace advocacy the last two centuries.

"The movement has expanded on a different level," he said. "During the Vietnam War, people were saying 'let's get out.' Now, people are tying peace to the budget. It's either the military budget or butter."

Plucked stage front in the middle of the gallery is an oversized caricature of former President Richard M. Nixon poised on a bomb. The image served as the inspiration for the museum, curator Mark Rogovin said.

The time has come for conveying the message of peace and the anti-nuclear sentiment through art, he said, because it is a medium that can reach a wide section of the populace.

The Nixon caricature was created for a display in 1972 by Rogovin, a muralist, and three other artists. It collected dust for four years until someone threatened to toss it into a dumpster.

He said professionals of all persuasions, perhaps for the first time, are working together to erase war and violence.

Rogovin stopped that. He said the former chief executive was an element that contributed to the end of the Vietnam War. The idea for the museum was born.

"It (the quest for peace) is on an international basis that is not tied to a specific war," he said.

He contacted Marjorie Benton, the U.S. representative to UNICEF, and the pair sought funding and support for the museum.

Rogovin said the philosophy of the museum is changing to fit the growing needs of the peace movement. In the works, he said, is a resource center where people can go for information.

"Initially we only thought this would be a center for people to explore," he said. "Now we're trying to get people moving, involved."

Some hope the accident will help efforts to stiffen penalties for violators of child-labor law.

"If you've got a $100,000 day and you might get fined $500 for working a child overtime, it's no big deal," said Colleen Logan, regional director of the state Division of Labor Standards Enforcement. "Even if the violation is criminal, they will only get a fine. They never get jail."

Within 60 days, her office will begin a series of hearings on revisions to close gaps in the law, not only for Hollywood but for other dangerous jobs, such as replacing targets at shooting range and selling flowers at freeway ramps where children are in danger of being hit by cars or robbed.

"Basically, we have a good law — if it is obeyed," Mrs. Logan said.

Morrow, My-ca Dihn Lee, 7, of Cerritos and Renee Shinn Chen, 7, of Pasadena were killed at 2:30 a.m. July 23 during a Vietnam War scene. Explosions being detonated in a river about 50 miles north of Los Angeles caused a low-flying helicopter to go out of control.

"It was absolutely illegal," Mrs. Logan said. "The children shouldn't have been there at that hour. They (the producers) didn't have work permits for the children. They were using explosives, in which case the children wouldn't have been permitted to work at all. There was no teacher to look out for their welfare."

The accident happened on a set for a movie being produced by Steven Spielberg for Warner Bros.

Moore Signs To Play 007 Again

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Roger Moore will play secret agent James Bond for the sixth time in "Octopussy," the latest movie about Ian Fleming's Agent 007.

Moore's signing ends months of negotiations with producer Albert R. "Cubby" Broccoli.

"The poker game is over," Moore said. "We both got tired of dealing, so we decided to cut for it. I think we are both happy with the outcome."

"Octopussy," the 13th of the very successful Bond series of films, will be directed by John Glen from a story and screenplay by Bond veteran Richard Maibaum. The 1983 summer release for MGM-UA begins filming this month in India, Germany and the United Kingdom.

Inc. Three individuals have been slapped with $5,000 civil fines each for violating child labor laws, and state officials are investigating possible criminal violations.

"I was shocked that the children were working at 2:30 in the morning and that there was no welfare worker," said Gene Reynolds, a child star in the 1930s and most recently executive producer of the "Lou Grant" TV series.

"Part of the problem is that we always seem to need something more spectacular to top each other, and everybody wants to rush because time is money," Reynolds said.

Parents can be another part of the problem. "Some parents are so pleased to have their children in movies that they aren't as vigilant as they would be," Mrs. Logan said. "For some, the money is a factor."

Last year, the state issued 20,000 six-month theatrical work permits to minors. The Screen Actors Guild, which two years ago got special language in its contract to safeguard children, lists only 3 percent of its 50,000 members as children, and even fewer belong to the Screen Extras Guild.

Scholarships To 2 PCC Students

The Mental Health Association in Pitt County recently awarded two students at Pitt Community College $150 scholarships.

Nancy Bannon and Bettie Crandol, both of Greenville, were the recipients of the David W. Hardee Scholarship. The scholarship is awarded on the basis of scholastic achievement and need.

Ms. Crandol is a recent graduate of PCC's human service technology program. She will enter the University of North Carolina at Greensboro in the fall to pursue a degree in social work. Ms. Bannon will graduate from PCC this fall and enter Western Carolina University in the spring to pursue a degree in psychology.

Both have been active volunteers in the work of the Mental Health Association in Pitt County.

Dr. McClaskey Receives Award

PHILADELPHIA — Dr. Bettie Wilson McClaskey, an assistant professor at East Carolina University, has been presented the 1982 Faculty Intern Program Award Certificate by ASTM, formerly the American Society for Testing and Materials.

Dr. McClaskey was cited for success completion of the program. She teaches courses in graduate and undergraduate levels at ECU and is a student adviser.

Tells Murder Involvement By Colcor Defendant

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — An FBI agent outlined details of Colcor defendant Kenneth E. Coleman's alleged involvement in as many as five murders during testimony at a probable cause and bond hearing here Wednesday night.

The hearing was held after federal prosecutors asked that Coleman's bond be increased from $200,000 to $1 million. Coleman was arrested July 29 on drug charges in the FBI's undercover probe of crime in southeastern North Carolina known as Operation Colcor.

During the hearing for Coleman Wednesday night, U.S. Attorney Doug McCullough said the $1 million bond is needed to protect the prosecution's witnesses.

"Without their testimony," McCullough said of the two Colcor agents, "Coleman will walk out a free man."

McCullough said the testimony about Coleman's alleged involvement in the murders is necessary to show Coleman's "willingness to kill."

McCullough said Coleman told agents at the time of his arrest, "If you had not taken me in the open, you would have had to kill me and I might have killed some of you."

FBI Special Agent Terry Peters, who directed the 21-month investigation, testified that Coleman talked about being present when federal inmate James "Whitey" Durham killed three Cubans on Coleman's farm in 1980 and being involved in the alleged murders of two other men.

Peters also testified that Coleman told undercover FBI agents on June 9 that he planned to kill a farm employee who found a $100 counterfeit bill on Coleman's Cherry Grove farm in Columbus County.

Coleman and his wife, Mary Lee Coleman, were bound over Wednesday for trial on drug conspiracy charges following the probable cause hearing before a federal magistrate.

U.S. Magistrate Franklin Block, who issued the trial order, postponed until this morning completion of the hearing on the U.S. Justice Department's request that Coleman's bond be increased from $200,000 to $1 million.

Mrs. Coleman's bond of $150,000 was set in a bond hearing last week.

Block said also he will rule by Friday on a motion by the attorneys of Colcor defendant James E. Carroll that Carroll's bond be reduced to $10,000 from $175,000.

TO BOND HEARING — Kenneth Coleman, left, is escorted by a U.S. marshal to Federal District Court in Wilmington where authorities hoped to raise Coleman's bond to $1 million. Coleman was charged in the Colcor investigation. (AP Laserphoto)

According to Wednesday's testimony, Carroll introduced undercover Colcor agents to the Colemans in February 1981.

Federal prosecutors also have asked that Carroll's bond remain at $175,000 because Carroll told agents when Carroll was arrested that the agent was as "good as dead" because he had caused the Colcor arrests.

Carroll is included in several of the Colcor indictments, including those of Columbus County District Court Judge J. Wilton Hunt on bribery charges, Harold Cribb, Roland Junior Carroll and Gary Simmons on marijuana distribution charges, and Roscoe Forest Hall and Julius Williamson on possession and sale of stolen property charges.

Carroll has been indicted with Donald Ray Strickland of Green Sea, S.C., on marijuana possession and sale charges.

Peters said Coleman told the undercover agents he could not get insurance on the life of the employee he wanted to kill in June because he had collected some insurance money following the death of another employee in 1976.

According to a N.C. Central Prison inmate, Coleman was beneficiary of a $50,000 insurance policy on the life of Billy Thompson, who allegedly was drowned on Coleman's orders, Peters said.

According to the inmate, David Carl Odom, he helped kill Glenn Currie Gibson of Hoke County on orders from Coleman. Gibson, who was under indictment for allegedly stealing a shipment of tobacco, helped kill Thompson, according to Odom as quoted by Peters.

Coleman's attorney, James Larrick of Wilmington, told Block he will probably file a motion to move Coleman's trial from Wilmington because of media reports about the alleged murders.

Larrick accused the U.S. Attorney's office of making damaging statements about Coleman's alleged involvement in the murders and asked Block to direct the federal prosecutors to stop talking to the press.

When McCullough questioned Peters about Coleman's alleged statements about killing another Sandy White Jr. of Elizabethtown, another Colcor defendant, Larrick objected. Block upheld the objection.

Larrick then requested a private conference with Block and McCullough and the hearing was postponed until this morning.

Peters' testimony included an account of Coleman's arrest. Peters said Coleman told undercover agents they could "bury an informant" in his hog pit and offered to kill the informant, who was actually another undercover agent.

Peters said Coleman came out of his house carrying a .357 Magnum revolver when the agents arrived with the bound and gagged "informant" in the back of a truck.

He said Coleman took one of the agents back to the hog pit and it was there that Coleman was arrested.

British Using Base In Brazil

LONDON (AP) — In a move certain to worsen relations between Brazil and Argentina, Britain has started using a Brazilian base to refuel transport planes flying supplies to its Falkland Islands garrison. The Times of London reported today.

The newspaper said the arrangement was reached after weeks of talks between the Brazilian and British governments.

Britain could save millions if Brazil continues to allow the Royal Air Force Hercules transports to refuel en route to the Falklands from Ascension Island, Britain's mid-Atlantic supply base for the garrison.

"With a base in Brazil, Hercules will no longer need in-flight refueling and the scale of the Ascension operation can be greatly reduced," the Times said.

At least three tanker aircraft are required to refuel each Hercules on its 4,000-mile flight, from Ascension to the Falklands. Each round-trip flight reportedly cost the equivalent of $1.26 million.

Since the end of the fighting on the Falklands, there have been an average of two supply flights a day to the Falklands.

The Times said in a report from Port Stanley, the Falklands capital, it became clear last Monday that Britain had made a deal with Brazil when an RAF Hercules landed at Port Stanley without the rear cone essential for midair refueling on direct flights from Ascension Island.

"Officers are understood to have declared the test run a complete success," the Times reported.

In a related development, the Argentine navy said British helicopters and warships intercepted three Argentine fishing boats that came within 150 miles of the Falklands in the past week.

The navy said one of the boats ignored British orders to leave the area, another was escorted to Argentine territorial waters by a British warship and the third was allowed to continue on its course.

Britain lifted its blockade of the islands July 22 but warned Argentina to keep its military vessels and warships at least 150 miles from the islands. It also said commercial vessels and aircraft would require advance British permission to enter the zone.

Learn Baby Is Not A Son

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — Clayton James Schimmer isn't exactly what he was wrapped up to be.

Mainly, he's a girl.

That's not what the midwife told mother Donna Schimmer when she gave birth to the infant at 4:30 a.m. Wednesday at Sacred Heart General Hospital.

"When the midwife delivered the baby, she said it was a boy and wrapped it all up and put it on my stomach, and he just rested there," Mrs. Schimmer said.

"About two hours later when they took the baby into the nursery to clean it up, they unwrapped it and looked at it and said it was a girl," she said. "There was no doubt about it. Clayton wasn't a boy."

Clayton James has been renamed Katherine Jane, but Donna and husband Jeff had some explaining to do.

The couple had called family and friends in Los Angeles with news of their son's arrival. They spent the rest of the morning setting the record straight.

"I certainly wish I'd unwrapped it," Mrs. Schimmer said. "I will next time."

FOUR STARS — Lt. Gen. Roscoe Robinson Jr., a decorated veteran of the Korean and Vietnam wars, will become the Army's first black four-star general. The Pentagon has announced that President Reagan has nominated Robinson, a West Point graduate of St. Louis, to become the U.S. representative to the NATO Military Committee. (AP Laserphoto)

Club For Women Professionals Failed

By LINDA DEUTSCH
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — In the beginning, two women had a dream — a stylish idea suited, they thought, to the feminist climate of the 1980s.

They would open a snazzy private club for professional women — a combination health spa-restaurant-boutique, a plush spot for the camaraderie and contacts that private men's clubs had prized for decades.

But in 90 days, their sweet dream, the Wilshire Club, went financially sour. The demise of the Wilshire and the problems suffered by two others that have opened in the last two years are now leading some women to wonder if they want or need such a club.

The Blaisdell Place Club in Minneapolis has filed for reorganization under bankruptcy laws. The Women's Commerce Club in Atlanta has attracted only 250 members, few of whom attend club events.

"I don't need to have a place to go," said Janice Weiner, a Minneapolis psychotherapist who resigned from Blaisdell Place after disputes about its operation. "I like to go to different places to eat. I like a coed atmosphere. I don't need to be around all women."

Joanne Ohanesian, who has an executive search business and served on the Wilshire Club's advisory board, had seen the Wilshire Club as "a place I could be supportive of other women, help them gain access and make money."

"I probably would have used it for meetings," said Los Angeles Deputy Mayor Grace Davis, who served on the Wilshire Club's advisory board. "Men always invite me to places like the Athletic Club for lunch. When they called, I could have said,

"How about the Wilshire Club?" and I know they would have said yes."

"We felt if we could just get the club open, people would start using it, women would join and the cash flow would increase," Jennifer Armstrong said of the Wilshire Club.

"We didn't find that to be true. We weren't getting a lot of support from women," Ms. Armstrong and her mother, Joan McCarthy, lost their savings, apartments, cars and the good will of investors who lost thousands.

"These two women have walked away with barely the clothes on their backs," said their attorney, Beth Hansen. "It was a wonderful idea. But there was a lot of bad timing involved."

The club opened while the Equal Rights Amendment and the economy were floundering, she said, and had too little capital.

"In the economic climate of the last few years, you have to have tremendous business skills to open a business and stay in business," Ms. Ohanesian said. "These women were not $100,000-a-year executives with those skills."

The president of Blaisdell Place, Sandra Daddio, said running the Minneapolis club has "been a lot harder than anybody envisioned ..."

"We all started with the assumption that given a club, women would flock to it," Ms. Daddio said. "Women have not done that."

In Atlanta, bookkeeper-administrator Claude Nolen said the 1-year-old Women's Commerce Club has had trouble establishing an image.

"Members do not understand fully what it is," Miss Nolen said of the club. "They're willing to support us with their dues, but they're not coming to events we schedule. Very few are really involved."

Blaisdell Place filed for reorganization under Chapter 11 bankruptcy laws March 15, and supporters hope for new financial backing.

business experience that was needed ... I hate to see women fail, but these women brought it on themselves."

Corn Contest Is Pitt County

The Pitt County Agricultural Extension Service will conduct a corn contest again this year, according to extension agent Roger Cobb.

Farmers cultivating an acre or more of corn in Pitt County are eligible, he said, and contestants will not be restricted in any cultural practices. Hybrids used, however, must be available to the public, he said.

A plaque and cash award will be given to the top three yielders in Pitt County. All county entries will then be submitted to the state contest.

The harvested area must be contiguous, Cobb said, with four straight sides and a minimum size of one acre. Measurements must be made by a county agent and harvest, weighing and moisture determination must be completed in one day.

Appointments for harvesting are mandatory so the agents may handle all requests, added Cobb, and they may be made by calling 752-2934, ext. 372.

Yesterday's Cryptiquip — THEIR FIRST CODFISH EX-PEDITION IS MORE DISAPPOINTMENT THAN EXCITE-MENT.

Today's Cryptiquip clue: J equals S.

The Cryptiquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

PCC Courses Will Be On Public TV

Pitt Community College will offer college credit courses on public television beginning Aug. 28 at 10 a.m. on WUNK-TV, channel 25, Greenville.

The telecourse entitled "Making It Count" (EDP 114) is an introduction to computer concepts and their applications to business. It is designed to provide students with a thorough understanding of the principles of computers, and to provide business managers and professionals with knowledge of data processing vocabulary, systems and applications.

Students enrolled in the course will be required to watch the telecast in their homes each Saturday morning until Nov. 13. Repeat viewings will be shown on Greenville Cable TV on the following Mondays and Thursdays from 7-8 p.m.

In addition, videotapes of each lesson will be available at the Library Resources Center at PCC Monday-Thursday from 9-9:30 p.m. and Fridays from 3-5 p.m.

To enroll in the telecourse, students must attend one of three orientation-registration sessions which will be held on the PCC campus Aug. 25 from 3-4:30 p.m. and 7-8:30 p.m. The last orientation will be Sept. 2 from 5:30-7 p.m.

Students will also have the opportunity to attend any of the three workshops where they may ask questions or review the more difficult telecourse units.

For further information contact program coordinator John Hutchens or telecourse instructor Helen Parks, PCC, 752-3130.

Bad bidding can sometimes lead to brilliant play. Consider this hand from the Hoechst International team tournament, held in Scheveningen, Holland. It seems reasonable to end in either three no trump or four spades with the North-mond. But he saw no reason for that and simply continued with a club. Declarer won, cashed the ace of clubs and the two high hearts for three diamond discards, and then took four spade tricks to bring the hand to this position:

Declarer led his last spade, and West was helpless. He had to keep his heart to guard against dummy's jack, so he was forced to part with the queen of diamonds. Now declarer no longer needed dummy's heart, and the ace and jack of diamonds scored the last two tricks to wrap up the slam.

South cards. However, two members of Holland's women's team managed to climb to six no trump. We were not told how they managed to get to his inelegant contract.

West led his top club, and declarer won the queen in dummy. There seemed to be no way to twelve tricks. Declarer led a low heart and, when West played low, finessed dummy's eight! All was well when East won this trick with the ace.

Hollywood Wives 'A Breed Apart' Declares Writer

By VERNON SCOTT
UPI Hollywood Reporter
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Are Hollywood wives, the women married to stars, directors and producers, a breed apart?
"Absolutely!" is the resounding reply from Jackie Collins, who recently completed a roman a clef novel titled "Hollywood Wives" in which many of her friends and acquaintances should recognize themselves.
But, no, says Jackie, these composites of Beverly Hills dowagers, bed-hoppers and housefraus are not all that flattering and most of the women on whom they are based would deny they were the models.
Jackie, whose best-seller, "Chances," was published in paperback last month, is the provocative sister of actress Joan Collins. The English beauty's perception of Hollywood's most often begins and ends in the bedroom.

She is the reverse side of such macho male novelists as Harold Robbins. Her females are strong, deadly and intimidating. Her men are often weak-willed and manipulated.
Feminist Collins is strong on orgasms and vulgar language, both of which she defends with the observation that people everywhere are involved with both.
A resident of Hollywood for only a year, Jackie has been in and out of the film capital for some 15 years. She forewarned female friends and hostesses that they were fair game.
"At the moment my friends are terribly amused about the whole thing," Jackie said with obvious good humor, "but they haven't read the book yet."
"Very few of them will recognize themselves because they refuse to believe the truth about themselves. They'll guess that it is one of their close friends."
"Hollywood Wives" does, in fact, present some clear portraits of many distaff members of movie-TV households.
One in particular stands out, the wife of a fading macho movie star who nags and manipulates him to resurrect his career. She shops at the right places on Rodeo Drive, patronizes the "in" hairdressers and eats only at chic restaurants.

Beverly Hills is awash with such wives who don't bat an eyelash at paying $1,000 for a party frock.
As one Hollywood wife told Jackie, "When I'm driving my Rolls Royce and we come to the edge of Beverly Hills, it automatically turns around and goes right back in."
Another typical character is the foreign-born wife of a movie star who becomes the social maven of the upper crust. An invitation to her parties are social benedictions. To be overlooked is a catastrophe.
"Beverly Hills is a small town," said Jackie, who lives at a posh address in that enclave of wealth and privilege. "I know wives who turn out all the lights at home when they're not invited to an important party so people driving by will think they're out."

Yet another Hollywood wife is the wretch who finds her prominent husband in bed with her mother. Author Collins was astonished to discover this actually happened. The star later divorced his young wife to marry his mother-in-law.
"That's the crazy thing about this community," Jackie said. "No matter how wild you let your imagination get, you find out that in reality there are even wilder things going on in this town."

"The wives of powerful men aren't like any others. They use the influence and power of their husbands for their own purposes. They compete with each other to give the best parties, wear the best clothes, go to the most exclusive clubs and resorts."

Jackie herself is not in the running. She's a working girl, after all.
She's the wife of Oscar Lernman who operates Tramps, a successful London nightclub, and will soon open a Beverly Hills branch.
In addition to taking notes at parties and exchanging gossip items among friends, Jackie lurked around the Beverly Hills hotel — where she lived for a time — eavesdropping on conversations.
"That's where I got some of the dialogue for the book," she said. "A writer couldn't invent some of the outrageous things people in this town really say."
"Even so, I've understated situations and conversations, not exaggerated them. Sex, drugs and infidelity are rampant in this town. All I've done is set down on paper the way things really are."

Report Fonda's Condition Stable

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Veteran actor Henry Fonda was listed in stable condition today at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center, where he was resting comfortably for treatment of a heart ailment, officials said.
Spokeswoman Tess Griffin would not give any further comment about the 77-year-old Academy Award winning actor other than to say that his wife, Shirlee, and daughter, actress Jane Fonda, were with him Wednesday. She said she had "no idea" whether his son, actor Peter Fonda, also visited him.

Ray Stricklyn, a member of Henry Fonda's public relations firm and a family spokesman, said Wednesday he was told the actor might be improving.
"I understand that as of this morning he was amazingly responding again," he said.
"I would say it looks very good when someone is stable," he said when pressed. However, he added, "I can't interpret it."
Jane Fonda's public relations spokeswoman, Pat Kingsley, said Miss Fonda had telephoned her from the hospital just before going in to visit her father. But, Ms. Kingsley said, "She sounded as though there hadn't been any marked change."
He entered the hospital Sunday to have his heart medication adjusted. He had been listed in serious condition Tuesday, suffering from a chronic heart condition.
Fonda had been discharged July 22 after two weeks at Cedars-Sinai for treatment of urinary tract and root canal infections and for an adjustment of the heart medication.

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The "Texaco Star Theater" returns Sept. 11 on NBC-TV after a 25-year absence, featuring a program of songs from 49 different Broadway musicals.
Scheduled to appear are such performers as Debbie Allen, the cast of the musical "Annie," Ken Berry, Carol Burnett, Sammy Davis Jr., Pam Dawber, Zsa Zsa Gabor, Donald O'Connor, Bernadette Peters, Charles Nelson Reilly, John Schneider and Loretta Swit.
"Texaco Star Theater" premiered in 1948 and was hosted for five seasons by Milton Berle, who became known as "Mr. Television." Jimmy Durante and Donald O'Connor later hosted the show, which went off the air in 1956.

Two Collisions Wednesday

An estimated $2,475 property damage resulted from two traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Wednesday.

Officers said trucks driven by Clem Phillip Walker of Raleigh and James Kelly Alderholt of 111 South Baywood Lane and a car operated by John Brian Hoover of 113 Westhaven Road collided about 8:19 p.m. at the intersection of Greenville Boulevard and Evans Street.

Damage from the mishap was estimated at $800 to the Walker truck, $600 to the Alderholt vehicle, and $75 to the Hoover car.

A 10:25 p.m. collision at the intersection of 10th Street and Riverbluff Drive involved cars operated by Kemeth Elton Morris III of 303 Tobacco Road and Terry Lane Shelton of Quail Ridge, investigators reported.

Damage from the collision was set at $1,000 to the Morris car. No damage resulted to the Shelton vehicle, officers said.

More Talks Required In AT&T Case

By NORMAN BLACK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The American Telephone & Telegraph Co. and the Justice Department say they will hold talks to adjust the proposed break-up of the Bell System to meet the demands of a federal judge.

If the two sides can modify their agreement, U.S. District Judge Harold H. Greene said he will proceed with the antitrust settlement. The proposed corporate reorganization is the largest in history.

But Greene, who described the overall AT&T divestiture plan as "plainly in the public interest," said he would resume the company's antitrust trial promptly if the two parties don't make the changes he wants within 15 days.

The trial in the 1974 antitrust suit was suspended in January when AT&T and federal prosecutors announced they had reached a settlement in which AT&T would give up ownership of its 22 wholly owned Bell System companies.

In exchange the telecommunications giant would be given the right to enter new, unregulated businesses like data processing and the government would drop its suit against the company.

While the Bell companies represent about two-thirds of AT&T's assets — or more than $80 billion — the settlement would leave the company its lucrative long-distance, equipment, manufacturing and research operations.

Greene said he approved of the settlement, but would insist on major changes to bolster the Bell System companies to help them avoid major rate increases.

"This opinion reflects clear concern for consumers; for the health of the local operating companies, and for the First Amendment," said Rep. Timothy E. Wirth, D-Colo., who tried unsuccessfully to get Congress to enact some of the same restrictions set out by Greene.

AT&T Chairman Charles L. Brown said Wednesday, "We're pleased that the court has acted expeditiously in finding the basic framework to be 'plainly in the public interest,' and we'll immediately undertake consideration of the modifications in consultation with the Department of Justice."

In a statement, the Justice Department said, "The modifications are now under consideration and we'll be discussing them with AT&T in the near future."

The modifications requested by Greene fall into three categories. They include changes designed to guarantee the financial health of the Bell System companies after they lose Ma Bell's umbrella.

For example, the judge said he could not accept the idea of transferring the printed Yellow Pages operation to AT&T. Those advertising directories, with their roughly $2 billion in annual revenues, should remain with the local companies to help hold down local rates, Greene wrote.

The judge also said he saw no reason to prohibit the Bell companies from marketing telephone equipment to consumers.

The second category of conditions includes provisions designed to guarantee protection of the public's interest after the break-up.

AT&T must also accept specific limits on the amount of debt that it can transfer to the Bell companies, he said.

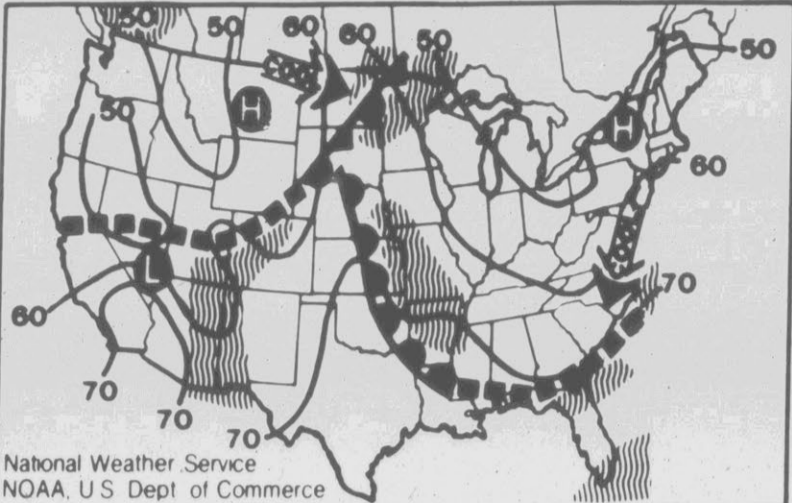

The final category includes a single provision aimed at preventing AT&T from entering a new business that it has been eyeing — electronic publishing.

The judge accepted the arguments of newspaper publishers and cable TV operators that AT&T should not be allowed to develop its own electronic information service, since it also controls transmission facilities that may be needed by competitors.

The Forecast For Friday, August 13

• Low Temperatures

Fronts: Cold — Warm — Occluded — Stationary

WEATHER FORECAST — Showers are due Friday, according to the National Weather Service. (AP Laserphoto)

Mississippi Valley and portions of Florida for

By The Associated Press
A drier weather pattern will slowly spread across North Carolina today and for the balance of the week.

A cold front, that stretches from southeast Virginia southwest across western North Carolina, will continue to settle down across the state today.

In its wake, will be high pressure which will build east and push southward across the region over the next couple of days. This will usher in drier and more stable air.

This will also reduce the threat of showers and thunderstorms over the region for the balance of this week. However, some showers and thunderstorms will again be over the east and southeast today while the west will be mostly free of any precipitation.

Outside of more showers and a few thunderstorms over the east today, a gradual improving trend will be established as the cold front pushes south across the state today and tonight. High pressure will take command of our weather by Friday.

It will be mostly cloudy east of the mountains today, however, as light northeast winds develop behind the frontal passage. As drier air overspreads the region tonight and Friday, fair skies will return.

Temperatures will be lower for the next couple of days. Readings today with only reach the 70s and low 80s with some mid 80s in the southeast. Cooler 50s and 60s will be with us tonight and high readings on Friday will range in the low and mid 80s with 70s in the mountains. As the front pressed southward toward our region Wednesday, rather numerous and rather heavy thunderstorms developed across much of the state.

Only the extreme southeast portion of the state escaped having some thunderstorms Wednesday. A few finally reached that portion of the state during the night.

Some locally heavy rainfall was produced by these storms. Goldsboro, for example, had had over three inches of rain through 2 a.m. this morning. A few other places had from between one and two inches while amounts under one half inch was the more general rule from the regular reporting points.

Sunshine was fairly common Wednesday before the thunderstorms cranked up. High readings averaged mostly in the mid 80s across the Piedmont to the upper 80s and low 90s over the east.

Fayetteville was the hot spot at 95. Temperatures ranged from the low 70s in the northern mountains to some mid 80s over the southern sections of the mountains.

Temperatures Wednesday night cooled into the 50s and 60s across the mountains while east of the mountains early morning values were in the upper 60s to low 70s.

NO PAROLE — Patricia Krenwinkel, seen here in a 1970 file photo, who was convicted in the Sharon Tate-LaBianca murders, was denied parole Wednesday after a California parole board in Frontera, Calif., ruled she was still dangerous and would pose "an unreasonable risk to society". (AP Laserphoto)
