Reagan Angered By Harsh Israeli Steps

By TERENCE HUNT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — After muffled criticism of Israel for weeks, President Reagan publicly expressed outrage over its attacks on west Beirut because he felt "enough is enough," a senior White House official says.

A stern-faced Reagan talked with Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin by telephone for 10 minutes Thursday, saying the bombing and shelling of west Beirut imperiled the peace talks at a crucial stage and caused "needless destruction and bloodshed."

Reagan told the prime minister that Israel's latest attack — the fiercest yet in the nine-week war — was excessive and out of proportion, according to the White House official who requested anonymity. "Today was pretty direct," he said of Reagan's tone.

Today, a White House official who did not wish to be identified said Reagan followed up his telephone to Begin with a letter that was cabled later in the day.

The official would not divulge the contents, but he characterized the president's manner on the phone as "stern, tough, the toughest yet...He was angry. What he asked for happened, so he's satisfied that the matter seems to have been settled."

Until now, Reagan has been restrained in his public comments about Begin and Israel, fearing that criticism might make the volatile prime minister more defiant, and perhaps jeopardize the efforts of special envoy Philip Habib for the evacuation of Palestinian guerrillas from west Beirut.

The president's frustration apparently had been growing for weeks; on Aug. 1 he told reporters, "This must be resolved and the bloodshed must stop," and added: "I lost patience a long time ago."

After Thursday's attacks brought a halt to Habib's negotiations, Reagan placed the call to Begin, and later let aides make his criticism public.

"It had just gone on too long," the official said. "Enough is enough, it's just gone beyond reason."

As Reagan waited for his call to go through, he was called by King Fahd of Saudi Arabia, who expressed concern about developments in Beirut and asked the United States to do whatever it could.

White House deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said Reagan, in his conversation with Begin, "emphasized that Israel's action halted Ambassador Habib's negotiations for the peaceful resolution of the Beirut crisis when they were at the point of success. The result has been more needless destruction and bloodshed."

"The president made it clear," Speakes said, "that it is imperative that the cease-fire in place be observed absolutely in order for negotiations to proceed. We understand the Israeli Cabinet has approved a new cease-fire which is in effect."

"It must hold," Speakes said.

Cease-Fire Holds, Lebanon Talks Are Resumed

By The Associated Press
U.S. and Lebanese officials resumed talks today on getting the PLO out of west Beirut, and there was speculation that presidential envoy Philip C. Habib would travel to Israel soon to try to resolve differences.

A new cease-fire held, meanwhile, and motorcycle-borne guerrillas blared orders through loudspeakers for all fighters who left their positions to report to their superiors within 48 hours or face court martial.

Israeli Defense Minister Ariel Sharon, who ordered massive bombing raids on west Beirut Thursday apparently in defiance of his government, said he hoped the guerrilla evacuation could begin late next week.

Asked in an interview with CBS-TV's "Morning" show whether the withdrawal would begin early next week, Sharon replied: "I'm not sure early, but I hope maybe during the second part of next week."

On Thursday, Lebanon suspended the talks to protest Israel's fiercest air attacks, which police said left at least 156 dead and 417 wounded before a new cease-fire went into effect. President Reagan expressed outrage to Israel over the bombing after learning an order had been given from Jerusalem to halt the air strikes.

Habib refused to talk to reporters after meeting with Lebanese President Elias Sarkis and Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan.

Wazzan told reporters he had conveyed to Habib the response of Lebanon and the Palestine Liberation Organization to Israel's latest conditions.

Wazzan did not spell out the responses but said: "Mr. Habib now has the sufficient elements that enable him to conclude the negotiations and begin the implementation process."

"This is, of course, if Israel has the genuine intention to let the Palestinian fighters go within the framework of a political solution. The majority of the people rightfully doubt Israel's real intentions after the massive escalation of hostilities that we witnessed yesterday."

PLO spokesman Jamil Hilal said Israel now wants the Lebanese army to deploy in west Beirut at the early stage of the evacuation, rather than an advance contingent from the U.S., French and Italian force.

Hilal said another condition was the release of an Israeli pilot captured by the PLO when his plane was shot down in the early days of the invasion that began June 6, and the bodies of other Israeli soldiers.

Several days ago the PLO listed 7,100 guerrillas for evacuation, but Saeb Salam, a main go-between for Habib and PLO chief Yasser Arafat, said Israel now wants 13,000 guerrillas evacuated and demanded their names.

Salam said Israel also wanted evacuation day to be called E-Day, rather than D-Day for departure because this would suggest a victory for the PLO akin to the Allied disembarkation day in Normandy in World War II.

There was no immediate comment from Israel, where military sources have said as many as 9,000 guerrillas could be in west Beirut along with 3,500 to 4,000 Syrians. This could help account for the new 13,000 figure.

The Israelis also have objected to an advance contingent of French troops entering west Beirut on grounds the French government is hostile to Israel.

The new cease-fire held through the night, but the Tel Aviv command said PLO guerrillas fired light arms in the area of Aamig in eastern Lebanon. It said the Israelis returned the fire without taking any casualties.

PLO communiques said 44,000 bombs were dropped by the warplanes and at least 600 houses collapsed in the Chatilla and Bourj el-Barjaneh camps, rendering the camps uninhabitable. Beirut radio stations said more than 100 more buildings were destroyed in the city proper, already a scene of massive devastation.

Council Bars A Private Club Close To Residences

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

An application for a special use permit to operate a private club on Mumford Road was rejected Thursday night after the City Council heard opposition from a neighboring property owner.

In turning down the request of William Knight to operate the club on property next to Venter's Grill and Quail Hollow Trailer Park, the council found that Knight's building is in close proximity to mobile homes used as residences.

The vote to reject the application was 5 to 1, with Stuart Shinn opposing, and took place on a substitute motion offered by Janice Buck. Shinn initially offered a motion to approve the request but it failed to receive a second.

J.G. Whitehurst told the council that he had received five notices from tenants of his mobile home park indicating their intent to move if the club was permitted to operate. Citing noise and the fact that the club would be as close as 50 feet to some of the mobile homes, Whitehurst said he did not think Knight's facility was the proper place for a club.

Knight explained that the club would not be open to the general public but would be rented to social and civic organizations for their private use. He emphasized that he was aware of the close proximity of the club to the mobile units and he said he would not tolerate excessive noise at the facility.

The petitioner, saying no bands would be employed at the club, pointed out, "This is not a disco." He said O'Neal Dixon of Venter's Grill had given permission for the club to use his parking area when the grill was not in operation.

Mayor Percy Cox said the club "seems so close to the trailer court."

Shinn, in offering his motion to approve Knight's request to operate the Ebony Inn, said he believed the petitioner would restrict use of the club. He recommended that a one-year permit be approved.

Saying she believed "a man's home is his castle" and "should be protected," Mrs. Buck made the motion to deny the request.

In another matter regarding a special use permit, council members voted to continue until the September meeting a request by the owners of Papa Katz nightclub for revision of its permit to operate the facility.

The owners had requested that the conditions of their special use permit be revised to eliminate all restrictions except police officers having the authority to enter the premises.

The council, which tabled discussion at the July meeting regarding a lease agreement on the old West End Fire Station, voted to authorize the execution of a lease with American Legion Post 160. Representatives of Omega Psi Phi Fraternity had also sought to lease the facility.

Council members voted to grant a request, upon funds becoming available, for improvements at the Tom Foreman Park off West Fifth Street.

Clarence Baker, acting chairman of the Black Civic and Social Clubs, appeared before the council to request that additional recreation facilities and equipment costing an estimated $13,350 be provided at the park through Community Development funds.

City Manager Gail Meeks said that while CD funds are already committed, it is felt the request will be considered at a future date. She also noted that some of the items requested are not authorized for funding under the CD program. The council assured Baker that the project will be high on its list of priorities.

In other business, the council approved a petition by Donnie

Wholesale Price Index Is Up But Restrained By Food Cost

By SALLY JACOBSEN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices, fueled by the biggest gasoline price hikes in eight years but restrained by the sharpest food cost declines since 1976, rose at an annual rate of 7.1 percent in July, the government said today.

Gasoline costs, picking up momentum after falling earlier in the year, rose 7.9 percent last month, almost twice the increase posted in June and the largest jump since March 1974, the Labor Department said.

But food prices tumbled 1.5 percent, the biggest drop since February 1976. Falling prices for beef and veal accounted for much of the decline.

July's overall increase seemed moderate, however, in comparison with the 13.3 percent rise posted the month before.

Even with the sizable increases in June and July, inflation at the wholesale level was running at a modest annual rate of 3.1 percent for the first seven months of this year — well under the 7 percent of 1981 and 11.8 percent of 1980.

At the White House, deputy presidential press secretary Larry Speakes said the administration was pleased by the today's report.

"This seems to confirm that we are making progress against inflation," he told reporters. "This is an indicator that does show we are making progress in our economic program."

Meanwhile, the Federal Reserve Board reported the nation's industrial production declined in July for the 11th time in 12 months. The drop, though, was only 0.1 percent, the smallest of all the declines.

Economists are still predicting that wholesale price inflation for all of 1982 will be about 5 percent.

Buttressing that argument, the department's Bureau of Labor Statistics revised its estimate of April wholesale price activity to record a 0.1 percent drop. The revised April figure, following declines of 0.2 percent in February and 0.1 percent in March, means that wholesale prices fell for three straight months for the first time since early 1967.

Overall, the Producer Price Index for finished goods, the official name for the wholesale price measure, rose a seasonally adjusted 0.6 percent in July.

Begin Reorganization Of Carolina Sales Corp.

Carolina Sales Corp., a major wholesale distributor based in Greenville for 53 years, has begun reorganization under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy statutes, company president J.T. Little Jr. said today.

Reorganization under Chapter 11 frees a company from the threat of creditors' lawsuits until it can develop a plan to put its finances in order.

Little blamed the company's financial difficulties on recessionary trends that have slowed sales and caused changes in distribution practices.

"We feel very positive about it," he said. "It'll just take a little time, but we're confident we'll come out of it."

Little said the company operates primarily in North Carolina and South Carolina, but has a division in Virginia. Heavy appliances make up a large share of its sales.

In a notice to Carolina Sales dealers, Little wrote that the "distribution business is experiencing not only one of the steepest fundamental recessions of all times, but... fundamental alterations in the way the distribution process is conducted."

"No where has this shift in the basic structure of distribution been more pronounced than in the field of major appliances. And together with the high cost of carrying adequate inventories plus a 35 percent drop-off in national spending for white goods, Carolina Sales Corporation is experiencing a changing business climate that must now be squarely and positively addressed.

"In order to effect the changes that are so clearly necessary, in the most orderly and efficient manner possible, Carolina Sales Corporation has elected to implement its reorganization activities under Chapter 11 of the federal statutes; a program specifically established to allow the time to handle situations of this sort."

12-Inch Deluge In Kansas City

By The Associated Press
Thunderstorms during the night deluged the Kansas City area with more than a foot of rain, forcing dozens of people to evacuate their homes and drowning at least two people as water poured across streets up to 10 feet deep in places.

The Kansas City rains were part of a continuing pattern of showers and thunderstorms scattered throughout the nation.

Rain was falling at the rate of 2 to 3 inches an hour early today in parts of northwest Missouri and flash flood warnings were posted in seven counties in Nebraska.

In Independence, a community just east of Kansas City, at least two houses were swept off their foundations by flood waters from Rock Creek, and about 40 families were evacuated from a mobile home park when the Little Blue River left its banks, Maj. Shannon Craven said.

The weather service said 12.6 inches of rain was reported in Raytown, a suburb east of Kansas City.

Police said a woman was drowned when her car stalled as she tried to drive through water up to 6 1/2 feet deep under a bridge on the northeast side of Kansas City. Police said water was up to 10 feet deep on roads under some bridges.

Independence police found the body of a woman in her car, which had been swept into a gully. Craven said the water had been as deep as 8 feet.

Numerous motorists were stranded throughout the Kansas City area, and several minor injuries were reported.

"People are drowning their cars out," said Jan Morgan, assistant police communications supervisor in Kansas City. "They're trying to go through deep intersections and are not making it."

A Kansas City police officer was stranded for a time on the roof of his patrol car late Thursday. He was rescued by another officer who threw him a rope.

Suggestions To Procrastinator

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: If I don't accomplish anything else today, I will have scored a major victory if I get this letter off to you. I have a lot going for me. My health is excellent, I live in a beautiful home, I'm satisfied with my job, and I have a good social life.

My problem? I'm a hopeless procrastinator. I can't count the number of things I've been meaning to do, but I never seem to get around to doing them. I make lists of things to do, but days, weeks and months go by, and I never do any of them. I am beginning to feel overwhelmed by all my unfinished projects.

For months now I've been searching the bookstores, trying to find a book that deals with how to handle procrastination, but I haven't seen any that inspire me. Just writing this has helped. Any suggestions?

PROCRASTINATOR

DEAR PROCRASTINATOR: Searching in bookstores is just another device to put off dealing with the problem you say you want to solve.

There is only one way to overcome procrastination. Take one project at a time, begin it, and don't stop until it's completed!

Finger Counting Could Help

By PATRICIA WALSH
PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI) - Usually, as soon as a child discovers that fingers make good counting tools, there is someone around to say, "Don't do that."

So it is a little jarring to watch teacher Patricia Stone Johnson bending near her pupils, her fingers mirroring theirs as math answers are tapped out on a table top.

"It's been around as long as the Judeo-Christian era, when they were counting the loaves and fishes," said Mrs. Johnson of formal finger counting. "It's a fun thing to do on your fingers... We all like to touch things."

Mrs. Johnson teaches Chisanbop, a trademarked name from a Korean word meaning "finger calculation method." It was developed by Korean mathematician Sung Jin Pai in the late 1940s. His son, Hang Young Pai, refined the system and brought it to the United States in 1976.

Hang Young Pai trained teachers in the method, including Ms. Johnson who was particularly interested for children with learning disabilities.

Ms. Johnson now tutors the system through her firm, Children's Way Teaching Service. She is teaching the method to education majors at Grand Canyon College.

She stresses the system only supplements and enforces traditional math.

In Chisanbop, the fingers of the right hand count as one each and the right thumb as five. The fingers of the left hand count as 10 each and the left thumb counts as 50. It is possible to count up to 99, then calculations with larger numbers must be recorded on paper.

In calculating, a person does "finger presses," starting with the right index finger and tapping out the answer that will be displayed symbolically by the fingers left touching the surface.

For example, to "press" 27, the first two fingers of the left hand would be touching the table, as well as the thumb and first two fingers of the right hand.

Mrs. Johnson, a teacher for 13 years, said the system is a takeoff of the oriental abacus. She sees no conflict with the growing use of calculators by students or professionals.

She said students don't outgrow Chisanbop, they simply apply it to more sophisticated math classes like geometry or calculus.

"In my advanced class... we have kids who are sophomores in high school. They want to do their calculations faster. It's high caliber stuff," she said.

Eight or nine U.S. universities offer Chisanbop to education majors, Mrs. Johnson said, adding there are about 259 U.S. teachers qualified to teach the method. Texas schools have adopted the system and many other U.S. school districts use it, she said. It is optional for Arizona teachers.

She acknowledged news reports about districts where the system has been tried and dropped. Reportedly, officials said students could add large numbers but didn't know basic facts, like automatically knowing six plus three equals nine or five times four equals 20. Other educators said the system only helps students calculate faster and that it is too time consuming to teach the method itself.

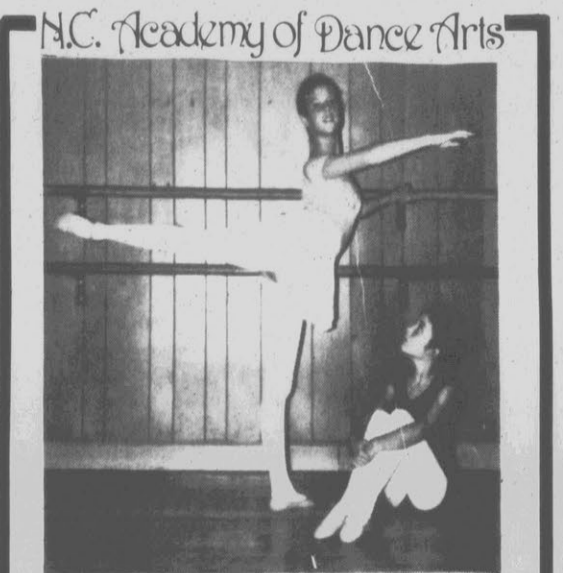

But Ms. Johnson called it "a supplemental technique to traditional math."

In schools where the program is successful, educators reportedly agree the system reinforces math skills and helps students understand the decimal system. They also claim it motivates the youngsters and takes the fear out of traditional math.

"Math normally is boring. It's not a fun thing to teach," Mrs. Johnson said of traditional math.

She said Chisanbop is easier because "It's the feedback you get. It's concrete, you touch a table. Later it's semi-abstract in the air, then in your head. High schoolers say 'It's helping me with trigonometry, it's helping me with calculus.' It cleans up your thinking."

"People are still concerned with that silly hanging up fingers," she said, countering "It's just so logical."

This spring our neighborhood has been inundated with mockingbirds that start screeching before dawn and continue non-stop until the sun sets.

Being awakened before 5 a.m. every morning is about to put me in a padded cell. (Come to think of it, a padded cell would be heaven compared to this place while these birds are carrying on!)

Earplugs are out, as they hurt my ears. This probably sounds like a minor annoyance to those who have never had to put up with it. "To Kill a Mockingbird" was just the name of a book - until now. Help!

DEAR ABBY: My lover and I decided to live together before marriage, both having been married before. Although we love each other and get along well, there is one area that I find destructive to our relationship.

My lover insists on talking about his many sexual experiences over the last 20 years. He always includes names, places and all the graphic details. I have pleaded with him to spare me these stories because they upset me, but he tells me anyway. He has even related some of these experiences to dinner guests, who are shocked at his lack of discretion.

Some of his past "ladies" still live in our community, and I have to face them. He still keeps their pictures, and I see him looking at them from time to time.

Since these affairs occurred while he was married, some involved abortions. There were also instances in which he was accused of fathering children. I want to believe him when he says he has changed, but I feel threatened.

Can Don Juans mature and become faithful? Or will I be sorry if I go through with plans to marry him?

ANGRY AND UPSET

DEAR ANGRY: Whether your lover will be faithful to you in the future is not the point. The fact is that he seems obsessed - indeed proud - of his numerous sleazy affairs of the past. Furthermore, knowing that it upsets you, he persists in talking about them. Will you be sorry if you marry him? Yes - unless he agrees never to mention his past again and keeps his promise, which seems highly unlikely.

Designer Rejects End Up In Hong Kong's Market

By NANCY CARSON
HONG KONG (UPI) - In the dingy back alleys of Hong Kong, Gloria Vanderbilt jeans sell for $10. A "Gucci" bag goes for $20.

The "Lacoste" polo shirt sells for only $1.70. Beware, the alligator may peel off.

In Hong Kong's "buyers paradise" of flea markets, the customer may never know whether he or she is getting the real McCoy or an imitation.

The bargain hunters task is complicated because manufacturers of the real designer products unload their rejects and overruns - which are withheld from the export market - to the flea markets where they are sold alongside a plentiful supply of counterfeiters.

The fakes are not always well made. So they sell very cheaply. Irregular designer garments sell for comparable prices. The big bargain - overruns - are perfect garments that can be found for a fraction of their price in the West.

Flea market stalls are well stocked with real Vanderbilt jeans. They would be impossible to find at a local department store because the manufacturer, Murjani, produces solely for export.

Also plentiful are "Gucci" bags - all fakes. The interlocking GC on the bag, instead of the real GG logo, tips off the buyer. But many a shopper would rather pay $25 for a fake than $290 for the original, which can be found in a well-appointed Hong Kong outlet.

Side street hawkers shout to draw in customers. An old woman whose stall boasts Jordache bags points to the label and says "good mark."

A designer second is sold almost immediately. The buyer remains unaware of the rip in the seam or tear in the hem, visible only to expert eyes.

Though distributors of designer garments insist that imitations are poorly made, Tony Gurka of Commercial Trademark, a protection agency that specializes in tracking down counterfeiters, said that "the majority of counterfeits are good quality," especially in Hong Kong.

The American tourist who bought a Lacoste polo shirt and arrived home only to have the alligator peel off was victim to a less classy counterfeit operation.

At Crocodile Ltd., the sole distributor of Lacoste in Hong Kong, Heidi Chun commented, "You can see by the quality, they are much inferior to us."

At Gucci Inc., Kerry Obonia termed imitation Gucci "a joke," explaining that the cheap price and poor quality speak for themselves.

Obonia said counterfeiters can be discovered at major retail outlets, but the hawkers are more difficult to pin down.

"Like a fly - one fly you catch, another one flies up," Obonia said.

David Yang at the French Trade Commission admitted that distributors of Yves Saint Laurent are currently taking action against local counterfeiters, adding, "It's just too much."

According to C.W. Ng at the investigation branch of the Trade Control Division, counterfeiting is "random" in Hong Kong. He said illegal manufacturers have been rampant in the last 10 years, but lately "it's not quite as serious."

Alex Blum of Blums International explained how local merchants are able to obtain designer seconds and overruns, many of which are produced in Hong Kong, which turned out 5 billion garments for export last year.

Blum said merchants visit garment factories regularly, picking up bits and pieces left over from export orders. He said many are able to set up their own retail outlet this way.

If the original order is 1,000 pieces, 20-25 are left because they are irregular, and either the original buyer accepts them at off-price or the manufacturers are asked to remove their labels before re-selling the garments, Blum said.

"Very few bother," he said, because material costs are more readily recovered when the labels are left intact.

Occasionally a larger quantity of designer garments is available for local retail when the original order is cancelled due to the factory's late delivery or mistakes in construction.

It is unlikely that legitimate manufacturers would deliberately produce more garments than are necessary, according to Blum, because the consequences are "very dangerous." The company could lose its export license or face a jail term.

Blum concluded that designer labels, real or otherwise, are "much more appreciated by Americans who think it's a good value." He said the Chinese are less impressed.

By The Associated Press
Cooler weather today should bring temporary relief from thunderstorms and hot, balmy weather in most of the state.

High pressure will remain the dominating feature across most of the region into the weekend. The light low level northeast wind flow will give most areas some morning cloudiness and fog, but as the day progresses sunshine will become more of a part of the weather. Temperatures will run a few degrees below normal with 70s and 80s the rule again today and on Saturday.

A few isolated showers may develop mainly along the south coast today and there will be a chance of some widely scattered afternoon thunderstorms over the southwest portion of the state on Saturday.

Otherwise, it looks very good for the next few days.

High pressure, centered over western Pennsylvania, continued to nudge its way into the state Thursday and overnight. This helped to force the stubborn cold front south of our area by late Thursday. This has resulted in a more stable air mass and a definite reduction of showers and thunderstorms of the past several days.

There were some showers and thunderstorms around Thursday. Although, most were confined to the southeastern part of the state, a few stray late afternoon and evening thunderstorms did pop up over the Piedmont.

Otherwise, Thursday was a much more pleasant day with temperatures in the 70s and 80s. The warmest reported value was the 85 at Cape Hatteras, Charlotte and Hickory.

There has been some cloudiness around the state during the night due to the light northeast wind flow bringing in moisture from the Atlantic. In spite of the clouds, temperatures did cool into the 60s over most of the state early this morning.

Trident Protests To Continue

SEATTLE (AP) — While 14 demonstrators face fines and jail terms for their futile attempts to block the Navy's first Trident nuclear submarine en route to its home base, protest leaders vowed to continue the fight against nuclear arms.

The USS Ohio arrived safely at its base in Bangor on Thursday.

"There will be continued vigils, and we will continue to present the problem to the public," said Paula Thurston of the Peace Blockade media center in Port Ludlow.

At arraignment Thursday night in U.S. District Court here, nine protesters were charged with failure to obey Coast Guard orders and five were charged with violating a Coast Guard security zone.

If convicted, they face up to five years in jail and a $50,000 fine.

Supporters of the protesters jammed the courtroom, singing, "All we are saying is give peace a chance."

The USS Ohio, the nation's deadliest nuclear missile-armed submarine, sailed into the base Thursday morning past a flotilla of protest boats that were swept aside by Coast Guard vessels using fire hoses several miles ahead of the submarine.

One small motorboat did slip through the Coast Guard security net to circle the 560-foot-long sub, however, and protest organizers said the three people aboard made it back to shore without being arrested.

Coast Guard officials were not sure what happened to the protest craft, Petty Officer Dale Miller said.

The arrested protesters, taken by bus to the courthouse in Seattle, were greeted by about 100 cheering supporters who demonstrated outside the downtown building for most of the afternoon.

The Coast Guard said that in addition to the arrests, 17 people were detained for a few hours at the Trident base in Bangor before being released outside the base gates.

No charges are planned against them, said Coast Guard Petty Officer Gene Hoff. They were detained because their boats were being towed out of the area just before the Ohio arrived, said Chief Warrant Officer Paul Scotti. The boats were in the Navy's custody.

"In this situation we were sorting out people who were violators and people who were not violators," Scotti said.

No injuries were reported, although some protesters were swept overboard when high-pressure water hoses blasted a protest boat that the Coast Guard said tried to ram a Coast Guard vessel.

About 50 protesters had set out in two large sailboats and 20 smaller craft shortly after dawn to await the Ohio in Admiralty Inlet, north of Hood Canal.

The Ohio never slowed or changed its course after starting its run to the base on Hood Canal, about 40 miles west of Seattle.

About five hours after it surfaced early Thursday in the Strait of Juan de Fuca, the Ohio was nudged into dock by waiting tugs as a Navy band played and a crowd of several hundred waved American flags.

Protesters who were not detained returned to their camp at Oak Bay.

"I'm disappointed we didn't get closer," said Jim Snyder, 30, of Seattle, shivering under a blanket. "We accomplished something larger. Maybe people will realize Trident is the most destabilizing weapon in the

A second Trident submarine, the USS Michigan, is due at the base next summer.

Insect-Scouting Workshop Set

A soybean insect-scouting workshop will be held Aug. 18 at 3:30 p.m. on the farm of Mike Hegans, according to Leroy James, Pitt County agricultural extension chairman.

Participants will meet at Staton House Fire Department on N.C. 11 north of Greenville.

According to James, the workshop will cover various insects found in beans and spraying techniques for these insects. He said persons planning to attend should call 752-2934, ext. 361. The workshop will provide pesticide recertification credit for license holders in agricultural pest and plant control including aerial, dealers, research and demonstration.

Vote Barred By Cigarette Tax

By The Associated Press
Most of North Carolina's congressional delegation would support President Reagan's $99 billion tax package if it included a provision to reduce the proposed increase in federal tax on cigarettes from 8-to 2-cents-a-pack.

Nine tobacco-state Democrats have sent a letter to the House leadership saying they would not support the tax package without a reduction in the cigarette tax.

North Carolina congressmen signing the letter were Walter Jones, L.H. Fountain, Charles O. Whitely, Ike F. Andrews, Charles G. Rose III, William G. Heffner and Stephen L. Neal.

"As long as the tobacco tax is 16 cents, there is no way, as a tobacco-state congressman, I can vote for that bill," Jones said in an interview Thursday.

Reagan has been meeting with Republican congressmen — including North Carolina Reps. James G. Martin, and James T. Broyhill — to try and convince them to support the tax package.

An aide to Broyhill has said Broyhill would support the bill. But the other 10 North Carolina congressmen and North Carolina Sens. Jesse Helms and John East have said they would support the bill only if the cigarette tax is lowered.

Helms and East voted for the 8-cents-a-pack increase on cigarettes when the Senate voted on it last month. Both have said since that they would not support the bill unless the cigarette tax is lowered.

The tax bill is now being debated by a House-Senate conference committee.

"The message I'm giving to the conferees, and I believe most of the North Carolina congressmen will follow, is that we must have the tax (increase) reduced to 2 cents or we will oppose the entire bill," Rose said.

Rose said he would vote for the bill with the tobacco tax increase pegged at 2 cents but would oppose any amount larger than that. He said lobbyists for R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. had embraced the compromise proposal.

Rose said the latest compromise under discussion would compensate for the reduced size of the tobacco tax increase with a 25 percent increase in the federal tax on liquor.

He said that proposal differed from one offered by Helms, which would have also have raised taxes on beer and wine.

A request by Tucker Farms Inc. to rezone, from highway commercial to R-6, 0.461 acres located south of Shenandoah Heights Subdivision and north of U. S. 264 Bypass, was approved following a public hearing.

Also approved by the council were requests by James M. Mills and Tammy Stallings for permits to place mobile homes at 136 W. Gum Road and at 113 Pollard Street, respectively, for use as personal residences.

A request by Greenville Cable TV Inc. for a revised bulk rate schedule and the establishment of a motel bulk rate was continued until the September meeting.

Other council action included:

- Scheduled public hearings for Sept. 9 on a request by Blount Fertilizer to rezone, from R-6 (residential) to unoffensive industry, .609 acres located north of Metalwood Co. on 13th Street, and on amendments to the Zoning Ordinance;
- Endorsed water extension by Greenville Utilities to a proposed development located a mile east of the Carolina Opry House outside the extraterritorial jurisdiction;
- Denied two requests for speed limit reductions on sections of Vance Street and Paris Avenue;
- Passed a resolution adopting a plan of dissolution for N. C. Municipal Power Agency No. 2 (North Carolina Eastern Municipal Power Agency is now discharging all functions for which Power Agency No. 2 was formed);
- Adopted an agreement between the city and Friend Design Associates Inc. relative to administration of the transit garage facility;
- Adopted an amendment to the city's noise ordinance making violations subject to civil rather than criminal penalties;
- Appointed Larry Whitlow as an alternate on the Board of Adjustments, replacing Billie Jean Trevathan who resigned her term which expires in June of 1984; and
- Reappointed Shirley Morrison, Robert R. Martin Jr. and Terry Cagle to three-year terms on the Greenville Citizens Bikeway Committee, appointed Tom Marsh and Karen Smith to three-year terms on the committee, and named Herb Carlton and Christa Dunn to one-year terms on the GCBC representing East Carolina University. Dr. Jim Hix and Maureen E. Fox completed two terms and were not eligible for reappointment.

Seemingly A Big Issue

The execution of Frank Coppola in Virginia's electric chair again raises a nagging question: Why is it that an individual's expressed desire to die seemingly is the most important question before a court when stays of execution are being considered?

Of the five men executed in the United States since the death penalty was reinstated in 1976, four of them have requested death. Coppola, via the Virginia attorney general's office, even sent a hand-written note to the U.S. Supreme Court requesting that a stay be lifted. That was from a man who had protested his innocence for four years, most of that time on death row.

What is the legal rationale involved in such cases? Does it make it right for an individual to be executed simply because that individual wants to die? Is he or she any more suitable for death than the other death row prisoners, fighting to stay alive?

Hospitals and nursing homes across the land have patients, many of them suffering hellishly, who want to die but aren't allowed to do so. Why should they suffer and the criminal get his wish?

The morality and legality of capital punishment takes a back seat in cases such as that of Coppola. It appears more to be a case of whether he wanted to die.

Another Giant Feels Pinch

Burlington Industries is the nation's largest publicly held textile manufacturer but it, too, is feeling the effect of a sluggish economy. Burlington, long a name of recognition in the textile industry, has been placed on the "credit watch" list issued by Standard & Poor's financial reporting service. That means the textile giant will be under close scrutiny for the next two months to determine if its credit rating should be lowered.

And this is on a company that reported earnings of $44.5 million for the first nine months of fiscal 1982 on sales of $2.2 billion. The problem is that those earnings are down 44 percent from the previous year. Standard & Poor's noted the decline came despite a long, expensive bid by Burlington to update its equipment and plants to make them more efficient.

The trend is ominous — first New York City, then Chrysler, then International Harvester, now Burlington Industries. Who's next?

Somebody Gets Bill

By PAUL T. O'CONNOR
RALEIGH — The 1980 census shows that more than five percent of North Carolina's 2.3 million housing units are substandard — that they're overcrowded, or they lack plumbing, heating or electricity. The state has the 10th highest rate of substandard housing in the country, a rate that is twice the national average.

The greatest percentage of these substandard housing units exist in the rural areas of the state where there are no municipal housing codes or federal housing programs. A study commission established by the 1981 General Assembly has been looking for ways the state can encourage the rehabilitation or replacement of these housing units. As they near the time to make recommendations to the 1983 session, the commission has narrowed its focus to three options. One is a stick, the other two are considered carrots.

The "stick" would have the legislature adopt a statewide housing code. Many local governmental units currently have such codes. The state code would set minimal requirements which would probably not be as strict as those in most local codes. Where local codes were tougher, local codes would prevail.

A state housing code would be phased in over a number of years. Once it was in place, the state would have the authority to close up any house that didn't meet the code. Any move to create such a state code would certainly be controversial and some commission members feel they'd do a better job at promoting better housing through an incentive program — with "carrots".

They're looking at two such incentive programs. Both offer tax breaks to landlords who upgrade housing units which don't currently meet basic standards.

The first idea is to offer a five or eight year moratorium on property tax criticized for in the past. But proponents say it would not be cutting any revenue the locals are getting now. It would simply delay an increase in their revenues.

Some commission members say the tax break wouldn't amount to enough to make a difference to landlords, however. Fiscal analyst David Crofts estimated that the break would mean $50 to $60 a year for landlords which would hardly be enough to get units rehabilitated.

A more lucrative approach for landlords would be to set basic state standards for heating, plumbing and sanitation — simple stan-increases for property which is rehabilitated. Proponents of this idea, including former Salisbury Mayor Jim Summers, say it isn't fair to ask a landlord to sink several thousand dollars into a unit for which he can get only minimal rent and then sock him with a tax increase because the property is worth more.

Such a program raises the question of the state taking tax revenue away from local governments — a habit the state has been soundly

To the Editor:

"My son, if thine heart be wise, my heart shall rejoice." Proverbs 23:15

Sometimes Christian parents are lenient with their children because they want to avoid an angry confrontation. Or they're afraid that firmness will drive their youngsters away from the church and from God. But in reality, young people are happier and more secure if dad and mom take a strong stand and hold them responsible for their behavior.

A New Zealand publication called "The Reaper" contained some interesting advice to moms and dads written by teenagers in jail. Here in essence is what they said: 1. Keep cool; don't lose your temper in a crunch. Kids need the reassurance that comes from controlled responses. 2. Don't get strung out on booze and pills, we lose respect for parents who tell us how to behave one way while they are behaving the other. 3. Bug us a little; be strict and consistent in giving out discipline. 4. Don't blow your class; keep the dignity of parenthood. 5. Light a candle; show us the way. 6. Be strong. Don't be afraid of us. If you catch us lying, stealing, or being cruel, get tough. When we need punishment, dish it out. But then let us know that you still love us. 7. Call our bluff; make it clear that you mean what you say. If you collapse, we will know we beat you down, and we will not be happy about the "victory." 8. Be honest with us. Tell the truth no matter what. Be straight about it.

Mom and Dad, your teenage son or daughter may not like to admit it, but they do want you to be firm, fair, strong, and exemplary. With God's help you can be the right kind of parent.

Thought: Parents who are afraid to put their foot down usually have children who step on their toes.

Strength For Today

ACCEPTING RESPONSIBILITY

The artist Leonardo da Vinci was said to have come to greatness through a very reluctant acceptance of responsibility. His teacher, Verrochio, was compelled to stop work on an epic picture he was painting because of the infirmities of old age. He therefore asked his young apprentice, da Vinci, to finish it for him. When the young man at first shrank from the responsibility of completing a major work commissioned by a prince which would be on public display, his teacher said to him in great earnestness, "Do your best, da Vinci, and do it for my sake."

When the picture was completed it turned out to be finer than anything Verrochio had ever done, and started the young artist da Vinci on the road to greatness.

Many of us shrink from some task we feel unequal to perform, but which may be a great opportunity if we would try it. Life is the great chance which we all get but once. With courage and responsibility we can make the most of it. — Elisha Douglass

Save As Your Own Contractor

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
PLEASANTVILLE, N.Y.
(AP) — Donald Mow, an architect, has a system he claims can cut 25 percent or more from the price of the house his client builds.

Even in this affluent community and others in Westchester County, roughly 15 to 45 miles north of midtown Manhattan, Mow says tremendous savings are possible.

For $75,000, that is, clients can own a house that might have cost their neighbor $100,000. To say it another way, for $75,000 client can build a house that might have a market value of $100,000 or so.

The house might also be better suited to their tastes and needs than any they might purchase. Better-fitted to the lot also. And, since they will have built it, they need never wonder what went into it.

The implications would seem to be huge. As now offered, the system generally requires Mow's periodic assistance, but he has written and is perfecting a manual that should permit usage in any other area.

You say you cannot build a house?

Mow doesn't believe it. Not when you use his plans, follow the tersely written manual of exacting details, allow him to qualify subcontractors, and have him inspect and offer management assistance along the way.

His records show he built his own house for $76,200 a year ago in nearby Briarcliff Manor, one of at least 80 he has put up and more than 100 he has designed. Though he paid retail prices for materials, the house and lot appear to have a market value of about $180,000.

Nothing unusual about that, says Mow, a graduate of Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute and, at age 48, the recent recipient of a masters degree in Business Administration from Pace University.

His technique would seem to be an important development in the battle against rising housing costs, which already have priced millions of couples out of the market. But it requires effort on the client's part.

Mow makes his clients the general contractor.

A High-Tech Policy Tried

BY MAXWELL GLEN AND CODY SHEARER

PARIS — For European politicians, micro-electronics is beginning to mean one thing: a solution to the industrial West's unemployment problem.

But the high-tech route to economic and political stability is fraught with bumps and risks and will demand something more than glib promises. How such an entourage government as France steers this course could prove instructive for those who wish to see a high-tech-inspired revival in the United States.

While the Reagan administration has drastically reduced funds for technological research and development, the French have made an international spectacle of their public commitment to micro-electronics. "It is our weapon for the future," French President Francois Mitterrand said. Added a top adviser to Jean-Pierre Chevènement, Mitterrand's minister for research and industry: "For us, it's the only way."

On July 28 Mitterrand's socialist government proposed a five-year, $20.7 billion commitment to become, in the words of presidential economic adviser Jacques Attali, a "great technology power." The government, which controls about half of France's electronics industry and 90 percent of all research activity, predicted that it would create about 80,000 jobs in the process.

Job creation, of course, is the price that Mitterrand must pay to the French who supported him so enthusiastically last year. After all, unemployment still hovers at more than 8 percent (and almost 40 percent of France's 1.87 million jobs are under 25).

Yet, even if France possessed the extraordinary inventiveness of American electronics firms or the Japanese knack for innovation and marketing, there are other obstacles to a micro-chipped vision of the future.

For one, in both assembly and application, micro-electronics is expected to have a negative effect on manufacturing employment over the next decade. Meanwhile, both electronics cheerleaders and their detractors agree that the largest overall effect on employment will come in the exploding service sector, where about 90 percent of all new jobs were created during the 1970s.

While the jury is still out, the Basel (Switzerland) based think-tank Prognos contends that electronic switches, word processors and the like could jeopardize as much as half of all occupations; the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD) reckons a no less astounding 32 percent. The first casualties in the coming productivity revolution may be the "cream of the working class" — skilled, if not highly-skilled workers — and many of those in the easily-automated financial and retail industries.

"There will be human costs," admitted Dominique Strauss-Kahn, who is considered the brains behind Mitterrand's ambitious minister of planning, Michel Rocard. "On the other hand, one could also do things that would increase the (human) costs." Adds the British Association of Scientific, Technical and Managerial Staffs in a study of Britain's job future (In the U.K., 3.5 million are out of work): "Remain as we are, reject the new technologies and we face unemployment of up to 5.5 million by the end of the century. Embrace the new technologies, accept the challenge, and we end up with unemployment of about 5 million."

Given both the desperation of France's aging industries and the absence of any other "revolutionary" alternatives, the band of futurists at Elysee Palace are trying to address the double-edged nature of their solution. At the grass-roots level, for example, they're already encouraging French citizens to associate high-tech with a new national renaissance. Through the schools and universities, they're incorporating the micro-chip into the experiences of a new generation of French men and women.

In spite of these efforts, there may be no escaping a backlash. "The speed of the baby boom generation's disruptive impact on Europe's labour markets, coupled with the fast-accelerating speed of the micro-chip's attack on traditional working practices, makes it unlikely that the European countries can absorb those twin shocks," argues Giles Merritt in his recent book, "World Out of Work."

Francois Mitterrand may never see his "weapon of the future" come off the assembly line.

Board Post To Spangler

C.D. SPANGLER

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — C.D. Spangler, Gov. Jim Hunt's choice for chairman of the state Board of Education, was unanimously elected to the position today and promised "financial integrity" in North Carolina's educational system.

Hunt appointed Spangler to the board and suggested him for the chairmanship Aug. 4 after the resignation of former chairman David Bruton.

Spangler told the board that he felt a special kinship with North Carolina's public schools, which he and his wife attended and which his children also attend.

The Charlotte native pledged to lead the board stressing honesty "as I do in my construction business." He said he would work with the Legislature to benefit the state's public schools.

"The General Assembly is like our bankers," Spangler said. "We'll have to work to develop their trust."

dards such as requiring a toilet and heater. Any landlord who was willing to put the money into a housing unit to bring it up to the basic standards would then get a tax credit. A 60 percent credit was discussed. If renovations cost $1,000, the state would give the landlord a $600 tax credit the next year. It would apply to both private persons and corporations.

The problem with the tax credit is that it would cost the state a lot of money and with the state revenue picture as bleak as it is such a proposal would have a great deal of trouble getting through the legislature.

But, as Rep. Ruth Cook of Raleigh, commission chairman, said, "Anything we do to help the housing situation is going to cost money." The question is, who gets the bill?

Life As It's Lived

Sometimes Reason Is Relegated To Backseat

By GAIL MICHAELS
Phillip and I have reached a point that most couples with two healthy, active children reach. We're trying to decide whether or not our family is complete.

We have a long list of reasons against any further procreative ventures. First, children are expensive. Second, my children don't sleep through the night until they reach kindergarten.

Third, of all the experiences that stretch the body beyond the limits of its endurance, pregnancy ranks third, right behind leprosy and the Inquisition and just in front of chronic lack of sleep.

Fourth, having always heard that two's company and three's a crowd, especially in the case of children, I seriously question the wisdom of adding another participant to the war games around here. I've already tried to resign from my job as mediator twice this year, but after I paid the shoe salesman and the pediatrician, there wasn't enough money left in the bank account for an airline ticket to Hawaii, and no one would sell me a bus ticket there.

Finally, in the words of a good friend upon hearing that we were considering excessive wear and tear on our nursery furniture, "Why? You already have a boy and a girl, and in case you haven't noticed, kids don't come in any other models."

In short, there is no good reason to risk a close encounter of the third kind. Unfortunately, however, reason doesn't always prevail in a decision of this nature. Both of us tend to become irrational in the presence of small bundles of insomnia. My arms naturally begin to assume a cradling position. I long to stroke the soft down on the head and to feel the warmth of that tiny body radiating to my heart.

And Phillip is even worse. He loses all control of his facial muscles. The mere sight of an infant causes a fatuous grin to spread across his face, and highly unusual noises emanate from the vicinity of his larynx.

The only way to avoid the spell is to stay away from the charmers altogether. And since Zachary graduated to toddlerhood, we have been amazingly successful. I've had to drag Phillip to the other end of a department store after a surprise encounter or two, but all in all we've managed to steer clear of the newborn diaper set.

Until last week, that is. The young couple across the street brought home their first child, and naturally they were anxious to put him on display. They invited us over for a viewing. We felt that we had to go, but we were terrified. Half an hour before our visit, Phillip was nervously pacing the living room floor, and I was performing deep-breathing exercises.

The baby was beautiful. He slept in his mother's lap while the adults talked and Zachary tried to ride the English sheepdog. We could understand why his parents were so proud.

But when we stepped out the front door, Phillip and I had to smile at each other. "I didn't even want to hold him," I said.

Phillip sighed with relief. "Neither did I. I think we're safe." As he looked back at the new family standing in their doorway, I had the distinct impression that he cooed.

History Event Kinston Plans

KINSTON — A living history demonstration comparing Revolutionary and Civil War tactics will be the highlight of the American Patriots Day Celebration at Caswell-Neuse State Historic Site Saturday and Sunday.

About 150 authentically costumed professional reenactment troops from the 8th N.C. Regiment, including soldiers from both North and South Carolina, will be on hand for the two-day event at the historic site near Kinston.

The program will feature vignettes of camp life and home front activity, and will portray the soldier and his family in realistic settings. Demonstrations will be given of blacksmithing, potting, rope making, cooking, music and other activities.

Presentations will run continuously from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on both Saturday and Sunday. Admission is free and the event is open to the public.

Caswell-Neuse State Historic Site is located west of Kinston's city limits on U.S. 70 Business.

Responded To 53 Calls In July

The rural fire departments of Pitt County answered 53 alarms during July.

Forty-two of these were fires — five were houses, 12 were buildings, nine in motor vehicles, one was grass or woods fires; 14 were "others" and 11 were mutual aids.

There was $174,900 involved in fires; $230,500 exposed; $91,000 lost and $314,000 saved by the rural fire departments. The Ayden Fire Department had the most fires — eight — according to a report from the office of Fire Marshal Bobby Joyner.

Teacher Evaluation Approved

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Reaction among educators is mixed over the passage of a statewide system of evaluating teachers performance.

The State Board of Education approved the controversial measure at its meeting Thursday.

The board also elected C.D. Spangler as its new chairman, succeeding David Bruton. Spangler, of Charlotte, was the unanimous selection for new board chairman. Hunt appointed him to the board Aug. 4.

Some teachers have criticized the idea of a statewide evaluation policy, arguing that hiring and firing are local matters that should be handled by local school boards.

The plan, which was tested in 24 states last year, requires that teachers be evaluated annually by their principals or a designated official. Personnel will be given job descriptions at the start of each academic year, along with criteria to be used in evaluating them.

Loretta Martin, president of the N.C. Association of Educators, said the plan is too vague, subjective and misleading to foster support and conformity among local school units.

But officials in the Shelby school system, one of the 24 pilot programs, say they like the state plan better than their old local evaluation plan.

Board members unanimously approved the plan, which was submitted by Juanita Floyd, director of the Department of Public Instruction's Division of Personnel.

Ms. Floyd said objections to the plan would diminish as "bugs are worked out." She said the program was set for this year, but that changes could be made in future years.

"I think it's going to be beneficial, though I don't suppose it will ever reach the point where it pleases everyone," Ms. Floyd said in an interview after her presentation. "It gives us a place to work from. I don't anticipate this being a finished product; we can change it if changes are needed."

Additional research will take place in the upcoming academic year and that the evaluation program might be altered based on the study's findings, she added.

Ms. Floyd said plans were underway to develop uniform evaluations for school personnel other than teachers and principals, such as counselors, "media specialists," and supervisors. Those evaluations will be ready next year, she said.

After the evaluations are completed, teachers and principals will be allowed to examine them and add comments.

According to the new plan, teachers will be rated on their ability to:

— Identify students' strengths and weaknesses and form teaching objectives and strategies.

— Keep abreast of current research and match instruction methods.

— Set up classroom efficiently and monitor individual achievement.

— Behave in a professional manner. Principals will be rated on skills including leadership, administration and professional ethics.

Lots Of Pot In Wilkes County

WILKESBORO, N.C. (AP) — Nearly 60 percent of North Carolina's marijuana plants were grown in Wilkes County this year, the State Bureau of Investigation says.

Statistics show that for the fourth consecutive year, Wilkes County leads the state in the amount of marijuana grown.

Webb Smalling of the county Chamber of Commerce says officials regret the notoriety the county is receiving for that product.

A LOT OF CROAKERS — Truck driver Jerry Etheridge is shown climbing into the cab of a refrigerated truck at Wanchese Fish Inc. in Wanchese on Roanoke Island. Etheridge said his load on this haul was mostly croakers with some trout. He was heading for Philadelphia, Baltimore and Rock Hill, Md., to make deliveries. Joey Daniels, one of the firm's owner-operators, said the truck, one of five operated by the company located in the old Wanchese harbor area, carries 30,000 pound of fish. The catch of fish and other seafood this year, according to Daniels, has been below the normal harvest levels. (Reflector Photo by Jerry Raynor)

Sales Holiday Seen Unlikely

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The board of directors of the Flue-Cured Tobacco Stabilization Committee is not expected to call for a holiday on the state's flue-cured tobacco markets when it meets today despite earlier reports that one may be necessary.

"Early this week reports got out that there might be a holiday," Fred Bond, director of the stabilization corporation. "Ever since then we've been trying to tell people that we don't expect one."

John Cyrus, tobacco specialist for the N.C. Department of Agriculture, told The Associated Press Monday that a holiday was likely unless the amount of leaf going under loan fell substantially this week.

Asked for comment Monday, Bond said Cyrus' statement was "not unfounded." But he said it was too early to make a prediction, and the next day he said a holiday was "not imminent."

The Flue-Cured Stabilization Corporation buys any tobacco that fails to bring a price of at least 1 cent over the federal support price.

Through last week, 30-40 percent of the leaf on North Carolina's flue-cured markets had gone under loan. Cyrus said the load was so heavy that the stabilization corporation might have to request that markets close for one or more days so it could catch up with processing the leaf.

But Bond said Thursday that the corporation had sufficient personnel and facilities to keep up with the tobacco it had purchased to date.

A holiday might be discussed when the corporation's board of directors meets Friday. But Bond said the meeting was the board's regular monthly meeting and wasn't called for the purpose of considering a holiday.

More Minorities Are In Community Colleges

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state's community college system is moving toward its goal of increased minority enrollment, but there is still a need to hire more minority faculty members, says an state community college official.

Mark Allred, the community college system's vice president for planning and research, told the state community college board Thursday that progress has been made in meeting its goals outlined in a six-year plan.

"Basically, I think we're meeting our goals, particularly in the areas of student enrollment and the hiring of professional and executive personnel," Allred said.

Allred presented to the board the system's annual report on the status of its six-year, three-part plan for eliminating racial imbalance. Reports detailing the system's desegregation efforts in the previous academic year are submitted to the Office of Civil Rights in Atlanta.

The report told of the system's actions in three areas: elimination of dual programming that might foster segregation, integration of student bodies, and desegregation of faculty, administrative staffs, non-academic personnel and governing boards.

The community college system is meeting its goals for hiring and appointing black administrators, staff members and board members, Allred said. But he said the system's performance in teacher hiring is harder to gauge because it's hard to determine the numbers of blacks in certain areas with expertise in all the subjects taught at the colleges.

The six-year plan says the number of black faculty members, administrators and members of governing boards should be proportionate to either the number of black students graduating with master's degrees from institutions within the state system or the portion of blacks with required credentials for such positions in the "relevant labor market area."

Concerning student enrollment, the report said full-time black student enrollment had increased in the general education, technical, and vocational programs. Black enrollment in the college transfer program didn't improve, and the report said a plan is being devised to change that.

Since last year, there has been no noticeable change in the number of whites attending predominantly black institutions and the number of blacks attending predominantly white schools.

"Students continue to transfer to four-year institutions based on program offerings and personal preferences," the report said.

AP Religion Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Most Episcopalians are relatively well-off, well-educated, go to church often and pray much, says a study which also finds that a lot of them are leaving the big cities.

The percentage attributed to the average American.
The 2.8-million-member denomination, considered a "bridge" church between Protestantism and Roman Catholicism, faces several major decisions at the coming meeting, including proposed closer ties with Lutherans.
Also up for adoption is a proposed new hymnbook, the first revision of the church's triennial general convention Sept. 5-15 in New Orleans, says 94 percent regard religion as important in their lives.

The 2.8-million-member denomination, considered a "bridge" church between Protestantism and Roman Catholicism, faces several major decisions at the coming meeting, including proposed closer ties with Lutherans.
Also up for adoption is a proposed new hymnbook, the first revision of the church's triennial general convention Sept. 5-15 in New Orleans, says 94 percent regard religion as important in their lives.
That is 8 points higher than cent black, 1 percent Oriental, compared with the general U.S. population, which is 83 percent white. But 68 percent of Episcopalians say they would welcome a non-white pastor.

A majority, 58 percent, competed college and 31 percent have post-graduate training, compared with 30 percent of the U.S. population who have finished college.
Nearly half the members are in the professions or business and 25 percent are retired. Only 3 percent are manual workers. Seven percent are in clerical or sales work.
Seventy-one percent of Episcopal households had income in 1981 of more than $20,000, compared with only 32 percent of U.S. households — a clue to the ecumenical criss-crossing common throughout American churches.

Bible literalists and those consider the Bible "a book of legends are in a distinct minority in our church," the report says.
It says participation in church activities is "very high," with the percentage involved in various kinds of church work up from 56 percent three years ago to 69 percent.
Forty-one percent want closer relations with the Roman Catholic Church and 61 percent want increased cooperation with Protestant churches. The desire for more evangelism has risen from 25 to 32 percent.
A problem area showed up in the way Episcopalians see communication between the national church offices and the people. It's "not seen as good," the report notes. Only 27 percent considered it good three years ago, and now only 19 percent do.
About 54 percent of the membership is female.
Apparently "a large number of our people have left the larger cities," the report says. The bulk, 51 percent, now live in towns of 2,500 to 50,000 people. Only 7 percent are in cities of 500,000 to 1 million.

Statement Delayed To Permit Review

WASHINGTON (AP) — Plans for the nation's Roman Catholic bishops to issue a major paper in November on war and the use of nuclear weapons have been put off to allow more time for consideration.
Chicago's Archbishop-designate Joseph Bernardin, chairman of a committee preparing the document, says the new timetable calls for developing a second draft before the bishops' November meeting, soliciting wide responses to it, discussing it in November and afterward developing a third draft based on reactions.
It then would be subject to a vote either at a special 1983 meeting or the regular November meeting in 1983.

The "magnitude of the response" already received, he says, made more extended discussion and consultation necessary.
The proposed pastoral letter's preliminary draft condemns any first use of nuclear arms or their deployment against civilian centers, and calls for steps toward disarmament.
Ninety-six percent of members are white, 3 per-

Fully Religious Said Inquisitive

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Psychiatrist M. Scott Peck says "a fully mature religious person is not a clinger to dogma, but is an explorer, a seeker, as much if not more, than a scientist."
He told a conference sponsored by Baptist Medical Center that "God is light, truth" and that truth "is not something compact to put in a case. We begin to find truth if we keep seeking, find pieces, get glimpses of the big picture."

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices staged a modest rally today, steadying after Thursday's late decline. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down more than 45 points in the last eight trading days, rose 4.57 to 781.49 by noon. Gainers held a 54 lead over losers in the broad tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues. The market made a bid to rally Thursday, but pulled back after a small government-securities firm, Lombard-Wall Inc., and an affiliated firm filed petitions under Chapter 11 of the bankruptcy code. The news, which marked the latest in a series of failures of small firms in the financial system over the past few months, appeared to prompt stepped-up buying of Treasury securities as a haven. But brokers noted that the reaction in the stock and bond markets otherwise was not severe. Chase Manhattan, listed as a creditor by Lombard-Wall, dropped 2 1/2 points Thursday. Today it recovered 3/4 to 33 1/2. Cities Service led the active list, up 2 1/2 to 33 1/2. The company is seeking a new buyer following Gulf Oil's withdrawal of a takeover bid a week ago. The NYSE's composite index rose 25 to 59.05. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down 12 at 237.17.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 18.52 million shares at noon, against 18.98 million at the same point Thursday.

Same Old Story: LA Wins, Braves Lose

Dolphins, 'Skins Plan Handshakes Despite NFL Officials Taboo Of It

MIAMI (AP) — It would be a sight not so uncommon in sports, but taboo, nonetheless, in the National Football League.

Members of the Miami Dolphins and Washington Redskins announced Thursday they plan to shake hands in a show of union solidarity before the start of their exhibition opener Saturday night.

But, NFL officials say, if the plan is carried out the team members will be fined for defying a league policy against fraternization.

"The fraternization is not written into the collective bargaining agreement. It's been a long-standing league policy that it's on a club-by-club basis," Jim Miller, a spokesman for the NFL Management Council said Thursday after player representatives for the two teams announced the planned solidarity gesture.

"As far as the suspected incident, we've informed the clubs that anything that disrupts the game — and the game to mean from the time you get to the park until the time they turn the lights off — is punishable under the maximum discipline schedule," Miller added.

Miller said league officials have told players they face a minimum $100 fine for participating in any formal union demonstration at exhibition games, but stressed that the league would not try to keep the players apart.

"There have been no orders to prevent the handshakes and no action is planned at this time," said Miller.

Meanwhile, Miami Coach Don Shula said he would take "whatever action I deem appropriate" if his players participate.

And Ed Garvey, NFL Players Association executive director, said Seattle Coach Jack Patera had threatened to withhold one-half of the first regular-season paycheck of any Seahawk who shakes hands with the St. Louis Cardinals prior to their pre-season game tonight.

Garvey went on to say that Patera has told his players they would probably get the money back when the union takes its case to the National Labor Relations Board but that it would "take a long time."

Dolphins player representative Jimmy Cefalo said Miami players met for 35 minutes Thursday afternoon and voted "unanimously" to join the Redskins in the handshaking plan.

The players union, involved in negotiations with club owners for a contract to replace the one which expired last month, has talked of "job action to show that the players are unified" behind the organization.

"We feel the players have a right to participate in a union activity before the game," said NFLPA spokesman Frank Woschitz. "Union activities are protected under the collective bargaining agreement. It is an action for which the players cannot be fined."

Mark Murphy, Redskins player representative, said his teammates decided on a show of solidarity after learning that the Minnesota Vikings and Baltimore Colts were kept in their locker rooms until after the playing of the national anthem to keep the teams from meeting at midfield last week before the annual Hall of Fame game in Canton, Ohio.

Shula expressed strong opposition to his players' decision to shake hands with the Redskins.

"I stressed right from the beginning that I certainly respect their rights as individuals to make whatever decision they want to make," Shula said.

"I mentioned to them that I was strongly opposed to any action of any type and that I'll take whatever action that I deem appropriate if and when."

He wouldn't speculate on what that might be.

"He (Shula) expressed his objections. He discussed how he disagrees with anything that might disrupt the intensity of preparation for a game," said Ed Newman, the Dolphins' alternate player representative.

"The important thing is that there has been open communication between us and Coach Shula."

Garvey said Patera's comments were symbolic of what is happening across the league as "coaches are becoming unraveled — instead of talking about flex defenses they are telling their players what can happen if they shake hands with their opponents."

Cefalo, who indicated the teams plan to show their solidarity before the coin toss in the Orange Bowl, and Murphy said the gesture will not disrupt the game.

"The handshake will not be disruptive, it will take less than a minute," said Murphy.

"It's done before basketball games, done before boxing matches," said Cefalo. "We're just going to go out and shake hands with the Washington Redskins and then go out and try to beat them."

Shula said, however, that what the players planned was "just a sign, which I don't think fits into what I'm trying to get done ... I would be opposed to anything different than what I've always done with my football team."

"When you're preparing a football team for a game, you don't want them doing things on their own," added Shula.

"When a person comes to a football game, they come to see football action on the field, not a demonstration of this type."

Bob Kuechenberg, a 13-year veteran who is the only non-union player on the Miami roster, wasn't present at the meeting. "I don't know anything about it (decision), nor do I care to comment on it," he said.

SMU Expected To Lead Strong Southwest Loop

DALLAS (AP) — In 1981, the Southwest Conference produced the nation's Nos. 2 and 5 teams, and sent four teams to bowl games.

In 1982, it could be even better and wilder.

Southern Methodist earned the title last year (the only loss was 9-7 to Texas) but couldn't reap the reward of a Cotton Bowl visit because of probation.

The Mustangs finished 10-1 and took the fifth slot in the final Associated Press poll.

Texas came on strong, once Robert Brewer was inserted into the lineup at quarterback, and defeated Alabama in the Cotton Bowl. The Longhorns were voted the No. 2 team in the final AP balloting.

Arkansas lost to North Carolina in the Gator Bowl, Texas A&M downed Oklahoma State in the Independence Bowl, and Houston lost to Oklahoma in the Sun Bowl.

SMU lost a coach — Ron Meyer went to the New England Patriots of the National Football League — and eight starters.

But the Mustangs gained Bobby Collins of Southern Mississippi as coach and retained 14 starters, including an All-SWC backfield that has two

By The Associated Press
The Atlanta Braves are starting to sound exactly like a team that has lost not only ten games in a row, but its hold on first place as well.

And, for a team that has made up 12 games in the standings in 15 days, the Los Angeles Dodgers are acting more than a little blasé about the whole thing.

"The guys are going to have to start showing pride. This is character time. We've got to play hard now. We ought to be out there busting it. It doesn't seem to me that we are. We come in here some days and our uniforms aren't even dirty," said third baseman Jerry Royster of the Braves, who lost their 10th straight and 14th in the last 15 games Thursday by an 8-2 margin to San Diego.

"It's nice to be in front by a game and a half, but it only matters if that's where we are the final day of the season," said Ron Cey, who homered and drove in three runs in Los Angeles' 6-2 victory over San Francisco. It was the surging Dodgers' 13th victory in their last 15 games, and improved their lead in the National League West to 1½ games over the staggering Braves.

In other National League action, St. Louis vaulted into first place in the NL East with a 3-2 triumph over Pittsburgh, Montreal swept a two-night doubleheader from Philadelphia 6-3 and 8-7, and Chicago pounded New York 13-6.

Terry Kennedy whacked a two-run homer while winning pitcher Chris Welsh belted a two-run double in a five-run sixth inning as the Padres beat the Braves.

"We're trying to survive (a pennant race). I was going for the homer," said Kennedy.

"Everything we do seems to backfire," said loser Bob Walk, 10-8. "Everything that can go wrong seems to go wrong. It's a six-week season, and a four-team race, and we'll see who gets there first."

Welsh, 6-5, earned the victory in relief of starter Andy Hawkins as the Braves fell to 0-8 on their current road trip.

The incredible collapse of the Braves, who led the NL West by nine games as recently as July 29, has thrown the division into a four-team race. San Diego trails Los Angeles by 3½ games, while the Giants are just five games behind the leaders.

Dodgers 6, Giants 2
The Dodgers broke open a 2-2 tie with four runs in the eighth. A bases-loaded walk to Pedro Guerrero brought in the tie-breaking run, and then Cey put the game out of reach with a two-run single.

"We're playing well, that much I know, and we had a tough game today. I'm certain all four games with the Giants will be tough games since they're every bit as much in the race as we are," said Cey.

Tom Niedenfuer, 2-2, who relieved starter Jerry Reuss when the Giants had the bases loaded in the sixth, earned the victory as the Dodgers snapped San Francisco's 10-game winning streak, the club's longest since 1966.

Cardinals 3, Pirates 2
The Cards went into first place in the NL East by a half-game over Philadelphia as Lonnie Smith had three singles and drove in two runs and Bruce Sutter quelled a Pittsburgh uprising for his 23rd save of the season.

"I just went up there swinging at anything near the plate and I was lucky enough to get some hits, that's all," said Smith.

"We've been sputtering for 2½ months now," Cardinal Manager Whitey Herzog said.

"We'll be that way until we get a few guys ripping the ball. We need to get Keith (Hernandez) and George (Hendrick) hot."

Joaquin Andujar, 9-10, picked up the victory for St. Louis.

Expos 6-8, Phillies 3-7
The Phillies yielded first place in the NL East to St. Louis after dropping a pair to the Expos.

In the opener, Bill Gullickson, 9-9, scattered nine hits before getting last-out relief from Jeff Reardon, who notched his 18th save. Gullickson also contributed an RBI single. Warren Cromartie singled home Gary Carter from second base with two out in the ninth inning to win the nightcap.

"Thanks for your interest, but no," Cromartie said while gesturing that he didn't want to talk about the game-winning blow. Cromartie, going through his most miserable season, announced last week he was no longer talking to the media.

But teammate Al Oliver wasn't speechless. "One of the things I enjoyed most about tonight was seeing the people at the end standing up and cheering for Cro," he said. "He deserves that."

"He's been a great ball player for the last five years."

Cubs 13, Mets 6
Steve Henderson, who lost his job as the Cubs' starting leftfielder earlier in the year, drove in four runs on four hits — including his first homer of the year — as Chicago scored their sixth victory in the last seven games.

Henderson credited Cubs' batting coach Billy Williams for his return to form.

"I feel good about the way I'm swinging the bat," said Henderson. "Billy's been pushing me. I deserved to be benched because I wasn't hitting. It was tough to take, but Billy helped me handle the situation. He's been through it himself, and I respect his advice. Tonight's the highlight of my season so far."

Mike Proly, 2-1, was the winner in relief as the Cubs moved to within one game of overtaking New York and escaping the NL East cellar.

EBA Football Meeting Set

E.B. Aycock will hold an organizational meeting for its football team Monday at 4 p.m. at the school gym.

Prospective players should bring their birth certificate.

Upper classmen will report on Saturday, with about 110 expected to show for the start of regular drills, which get underway on Tuesday morning.

Today's activities include more conditioning drills, and these continue on Saturday.

Tiant Boosts Angels Back Into First With Win Over Twins

By The Associated Press
Veteran pitcher Luis Tiant gave his wife, Maria, an anniversary present, and had a little something for the California Angels, too.
The 41-year-old Tiant, who was playing in Mexico just a couple of weeks ago, hurled the Angels to a 3-1 victory over the Minnesota Twins, boosting California back into the American League West lead over the idle Kansas City Royals.
"We've been married 21 years today," Tiant said Thursday night between puffs on a cigar. "I wanted to win as a present to her."
"I never lost the faith in myself or God that I could come back to the major leagues and win when I went to Mexico this spring."
"El Tiant" allowed six hits, struck out four and walked one in his seven-inning stint, his second start since the Angels purchased him from Tabasco of the Mexican League Aug. 2. And then he talked about the thing he knows best — pitching.

"You can't set up these young Twins the way you can an experienced hitter," said Tiant, now 1-1. "So I mixed a lot of slow stuff, then busted the fast ball once in a while when I really needed it."
In other American League games, Milwaukee swept a doubleheader from Toronto, 7-1 and 4-3, and the Chicago White Sox edged the New York Yankees 2-1.
"I feel good. My arm is good," said Tiant, who is in his 19th year in the major leagues. "I made some good pitches today. I want to go on as far as I can, but I don't know how many years."

Tiant's last big-league victory came on Sept. 15, 1981, when he beat the Chicago Cubs while pitching for the Pittsburgh Pirates.
Brewers 7-4, Blue Jays 1-3
Gorman Thomas smashed his 29th and 30th homers of the season — one in each game — to power Milwaukee to its doubleheader sweep of Toronto. The twin victories increased the Brewers' AL East lead to 5½ games over idle Boston.
Charlie Moore scored the go-ahead run in the second game on an error by Toronto left fielder Barry Bonnell.
In the first game, Thomas belted a two-run homer and Jim Gantner added a two-run double to back the five-hit pitching of Bob McClure as the Brewers won 7-1. Randy Lerch, 8-7, scattered seven hits through six innings to earn the victory in the second game.

Rollie Fingers, the third Brewer pitcher, went the final 12-3 innings in the nightcap for his 29th of his career, both marks major league highs.
White Sox 2, Yankees 1
Jerry Koonsman hurled a four-hitter and Tony Bernazard drove in the winning run with a sacrifice fly in the ninth inning as Chicago nipped New York. The victory was the 12th in the last 14 games for the White Sox, while the Yankees suffered their third straight loss.
It was Koonsman's first complete-game victory of the season.

Presidents May Seek Control

RALEIGH (AP) — University presidents may be making a move soon to get more control over their athletic programs, and that may include an attempt to do away with the freshman eligibility rule.
UNC president William C. Friday said he met last weekend with the 11 chief executives. He said they discussed the recruiting of athletes, academic eligibility requirements and standards for athletes' progress toward college degrees.
Organized by the American Council on Education, the group will meet again next month with other university presidents before suggesting policy changes at the National Collegiate Athletic Association's convention in January.

Friday wouldn't predict what specific reforms the group would advocate. But he said many UNC officials agreed that "recruiting practices have got to be looked at."
"Some of the people I've talked to favor the elimination of freshman eligibility (to play varsity sports), going back to where we were," Friday said.
The NCAA has permitted freshmen to play on varsity teams since 1972, and critics say student-athletes shouldn't be subjected to that kind of pressure in their first year of college.
Also discussed was the adequacy of NCAA enforcement sanctions, which are applied to institutions that break rules instead of the responsible individuals.
"The question is, what happens when willful and intentional violations occur?" Friday said. "What happens to the status of the student-athlete, the coach and the institution?"
Other officials who attended the meeting included the presidents of the University of Miami, the University of Washington, Michigan State University, Boston College, Pennsylvania State University, the University of Nebraska, the University of Indiana, Florida State University, Brown University, the University of California at Los Angeles and Harvard University.

Non-Winning Trio Is Close

JERICHO, N.Y. (AP) — Three women who don't have a single victory in a combined total of 14 years on the Ladies Professional Golfers Association tour are within two strokes of the lead after one round of the WUI Classic.
Dianne Dailey, Martha Hansen and Lynn Adams each shot 3-under-par 69s Thursday to stay close to Carole Jo Callison's who shot a 67 on the par-72, 6,347-yard Meadow Brook Country Club course.
Beth Daniel, winner of four LPGA events this year, was runner-up with a 68 going into today's second round.
What accounts for the strong first-day showing of the three unknown players?
"Improvement over the winter," said Dailey, a native of Frankfort, Ky., who left an administrative career in higher education to join the LPGA tour in 1979. "I almost quit the tour last year. However, I started to see some improvement and I worked very hard over the winter, especially on my short game."
After finishing in the second 100 on last year's money-winnings list, Dailey is currently 35th with $33,351 in 1982.
Adams, on tour since 1978, said her improved play Thursday occurred because "I borrowed my pro-am partner's putter. I have a lot of top-20 finishes without putting, so a change won't hurt. I am playing 100 percent of the golf course instead of 50."

Adams now ranks 24th on the 1982 money list with $44,373. She was 63rd last year, finishing with $19,154.
Hansen credited persistence for her round.
"I had reached a plateau in my game and couldn't break out of it," said Hansen, now 76th in earnings with $19,331. "I was hitting well, but wasn't scoring. However, I've stayed calm and worked at my game. I just take whatever happens."
Callison also isn't well known although she has four lifetime tour victories. She lost a playoff to Daniel in the Sun City Classic earlier this year.
Four consecutive birdies on the 14th through 17th holes enabled Callison to overtake Daniel, who set a one-year earnings record of $231,000 in 1980.
Behind Adams, Hansen and Dailey were Lynn Stroney, Joyce Kazmierski and Sandra Palmer, each with 2-under 70s. Defending champion Donna Caponi, was far behind at 78.

Featherweight Champ Killed

MEXICO CITY (AP) — World Boxing Council featherweight champion Salvador Sanchez had a fondness for cars. As he began to accumulate money through boxing, he bought nine of them. His favorite was a 1981 Porsche, and that was the car he was driving when he was killed in a three-car accident.
Police said the crash that killed Sanchez, 23, early Thursday occurred about eight miles north of Queretaro, a city 139 miles north of the capital.
When word spread that Sanchez, a national hero in his native Mexico, had been killed, police said "a great number" of people arrived outside the morgue in Queretaro to pay their respects.
Later Thursday, a police helicopter carried the body to his hometown of Santiago de Tlanquistenco, where the funeral was to be held today.
An official quoted the accident report as saying Sanchez's car crashed into the back of a truck loaded with two farm tractors. He said "excess speeding on the part of Sanchez" appeared to be the cause of the accident.
Sanchez, one of 11 children and the father of two sons, 16 months and four months, turned professional in 1975 after recording a 14-0 record as an amateur. He was managed by Cristobal Rosas and trained by his personal physician, Dr. Jose Valenquela.
In a recent poll of boxing writers by The Ring magazine, Sanchez was ranked No. 6 among the best fighters in the world. He was called one of the great featherweights of all time.

Sanchez won the title Feb. 2, 1980, in Phoenix, Ariz., knocking out Danny Lopez in the 13th round. He finished with a 43-1-1 record, with 31 victories coming by knockout.
His last bout was in New York July 21, when he knocked out Azumah Nelson of Ghana in the final round of his ninth title defense. His next title bout was to have come Sept. 15 against Juan LaPorte of Puerto Rico, also in New York.
"I'm just heartbroken," said Howard Albert, LaPorte's manager.
Rosas and the boxer's representative, Juan Jose Torres Landa, said Sanchez planned to meet one more challenger this year, probably during the first week in December, and then retire in 1983.
WBC President Jose Sulaiman said the vacant title can be filled either by a tournament involving the top contenders or by a direct meeting of the top two challengers. The top four contenders currently are Mario Miranda of Columbia; Ruben Castillo of Bakersfield, Calif.; LaPorte and Rocky Lockridge of Paterson, N.J.
Federal Highway Police spokesman Javier Melendez said Sanchez died almost instantly from multiple injuries.
Melendez said he knew no details as to the cause of the accident.
"All we know up to now was that Sanchez was driving alone, in his 1981 white Porsche, when the car became involved in a very bad crash with a half-ton Ford pickup and a heavy duty truck."
The district attorney at Queretaro, Humberto Santiago Camacho, said the report on the accident was made out by Ismael Sanchez, an officer of the Highway Police and a cousin of the dead boxer.

Mathias Back With Sports

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent
Seven years ago, Bob Mathias had a decision to make — whether to stay in politics and some day maybe run for President of the United States or return to his original love — sports — and battle the Soviets in another arena.
He chose the latter.
"I learned that in sports you don't make enemies," the two-time Olympic decathlon king said. "Usually 100 percent of the people like you. In politics, every vote you cast turns somebody off. If 51 percent of the people like you in politics, you're a winner."
So after four terms in Congress — starting in 1966 — and as a Republican becoming an innocent victim of the Watergate scandal, he turned his attentions to an endeavor with which he had an intimate familiarity — amateur athletics.
He worked with the Amateur Athletic Union. He made five trips abroad for the State Department, helping organize sports programs in Europe, Asia, Africa and Latin America. Then in 1977 he was named director of the U.S. Olympic Training Center in Colorado Springs, the project a fruition of his efforts during his eight years in Congress.
"We were falling behind other nations, especially the Communist countries, in the development of our Olympic talent," he said. "All the teams except the United States were subsidized by their governments."
While a member of Congress, from 1966 through 1974, he worked to have the inequities reduced through a logical program. The vast training center in Colorado Springs is the result.

Morris Is Putt Winner

Lanny Morris fired a five-under-par 67 to capture top honors in the weekly amateur tournament at the Greenville Putt-Putt Golf Course.
Morris battled it out all the way with Walt Garrett, who led by one stroke after the first of the tournament's two rounds. Garrett finished in the second slot, one stroke behind Morris with a four under 68.
The end of regulation play found a three-way tie at 73 for third place among Chuck Ball, Robbie Moye and Randy Swift. In sudden death, Moye aced the first hole to take third, while Ball had a par and Swift a bogey to take fourth and fifth respectively.
Wednesday night's pro-am was rained out and also held Thursday night. Bobby Ippock took first place with a 16-under-par 92, while Rodney Hooks was second with a 12-under 96.

Trio Of Youngsters Atop Hartford Field

WETHERSFIELD, Conn. (AP) — Three young golfers began the second round of the $300,000 Sammy Davis Jr.-Greater Hartford Open today in an unfamiliar position: atop a field of 155 pros.

Tim Norris recorded his lowest score as a member of the Professional Golfers' Association tour with an 8-under-par 63 Thursday to hold a one-stroke lead over Mark Calcavecchia and Bill Britton. Calcavecchia's 64 was also his lowest in his two years on the tour.

Four players were two strokes off the pace, including the PGA's second-leading money-winner this year, Ray Floyd.

Floyd, fresh from a victory at the PGA championship in Tulsa, Okla., shot a 31-34 on the par-71, 6,534-yard

Wethersfield Country Club course.

"My games as good as it's ever been," he said.

Also at 65 with Floyd were Mark Pfeil, Peter Jacobsen and Kermit Zarley.

Last year's GHO champ, Hubert Green, was among 13 players with first-round scores of 66.

"I'm happy today," Green said, but disappointed with a slump that has seen him fail to make the cut in nine tournaments this year. The popular pro said he will take two weeks off the tour after the GHO.

Norris, who missed 14 PGA events early in the season because of a sprained right hand and who has finished only four tournaments so far, recorded eight birdies en route to the 63.

"I've shot better rounds in practice, but never on the Tour," said the 24-year-old resident of El Paso, Texas.

"I think things are starting again for me. I've had a week off and I think I'm going to shoot some more 63s," said Norris, who is 216th on this year's PGA money list with $3,550.

Calcavecchia, 22, of North Palm Beach, Fla., was 8-under-par after 16 holes in the first round, but dropped a five-iron tee shot short of the green and two-putted for a bogey the par-317th.

"It was my only bad shot of the day," he said.

His best finish on the tour this year was a tie for seventh place in the Magnolia Classic, held in Hattiesburg, Miss., in April.

Britton, 26 and a resident of New York, birdied seven holes to post his 64. His best finish, after joining the tour in 1980, was a tie for sixth at Atlanta last year. So far in 1982, Britton's top performance has been a tie for 16th in the Inverrary Classic in March.

Calvin Peete, who has won two tournaments this year and ranks ninth on the PGA earnings list, withdrew Thursday because of an injured knee, which he twisted during last week's PGA.

Oilers Rally From Behind To Nip New Orleans In Opener, 22-20

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston quarterback Gifford Nielsen saved the day for himself and Oilers owner Bud Adams.

Just as the boo-birds were warming up in the second quarter, Nielsen rallied the Oilers from a 13-0 deficit to a 22-20 victory over the New Orleans Saints Thursday night in the National Football League exhibition opener for both teams.

For Adams, it means he has bragging rights in the exclusive River Oaks section of town where he is a neighbor of Saints owner John Mecom Jr.

"Obviously, Gifford had very good poise tonight," Oilers Coach Ed Biles said.

Nielsen, who netted the Oilers only 22 total yards in the first quarter, hit tight end Dave Casper with a 20-yard touchdown shot with 2:29 left in the game to secure Houston's first victory over the Saints in two years.

The Saints had taken a 13-0 lead on a 1-yard touchdown run by George Rogers and field goals of 44 and 39 yards by Benny Ricardo before Nielsen cranked up the Oilers early in the second quarter.

Nielsen hit tight end Tim Wilson with a 12-yard touchdown pass and free agent

Florian Kempf kicked a pair of 37-yard field goals to tie the score.

The Oilers took a temporary 15-13 lead when linebacker John Coker tackled Saints quarterback Bobby Scott in the end zone.

Saints running back Hokie Gajan scored his first pro touchdown in the fourth quarter to give New Orleans its final lead and set up the Oilers' last rally.

"We played in spurts," Saints Coach Bum Phillips said. "We also made to many errors."

New Orleans' biggest error came in the fourth quarter when the Saints had 12 players on the field for a Houston punt, giving the Oilers a first down.

This time Nielsen completed a 6-yard pass to Adger Armstrong for a first down and two plays later, Nielsen hit Casper with the winning points.

The Saint's biggest loss may have been in the first quarter when quarterback David Wilson, challenging Archie Manning for the starting position, left the game with a knee injury.

He watched the rest of the game on crutches.

Thirteen more exhibition games are scheduled in the next four days, including Cincinnati at Kansas City and St. Louis at Seattle tonight.

On Saturday night, it's Buffalo at Dallas, Cleveland at Detroit, Denver at Los Angeles Rams, Minnesota at Atlanta, and the New York Jets at Green Bay, the New York Giants at Baltimore, the Raiders at San Francisco, Philadelphia at Tampa Bay, Pittsburgh vs. New England at Knoxville, Tenn., and Washington at Miami. On Monday, Chicago is at San Diego.

Players in the Redskins-Dolphins game agreed Thursday to shake hands before the kickoff in a show of solidarity for the NFL Players Association. The players union is involved in negotiations with club owners for a contract to replace the one that expired last month.

Miami Coach Don Shula said he was strongly opposed to the decision, and added that "I'll take whatever action that I deem appropriate if and when."

Shula said that what the players planned was "just a sign, which I don't think fits into what I'm trying to get done. I would be opposed to anything different that what I've always done with my football team."

Veteran Actor Henry Fonda Died Peacefully

By YARDENA ARAR
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Henry Fonda, dead at the age of 77, was remembered from Hollywood to New England, the setting of his Oscar-winning role in "On Golden Pond," as the unpretentious hero he portrayed so well in more than 100 stage and screen performances.

With his wife, Shirlee, at his bedside, the veteran actor died peacefully Thursday at Cedars Sinai Medical Center of respiratory failure brought on by his long fight with heart disease.

Fonda, who appeared in more than 80 films and dozens of plays during a career that spanned a half-century, had worn a pace-maker since 1974 and had been in and out of the hospital since his most recent heart surgery in May 1981. He was hospitalized on Sunday for the last time.

"He was comfortable and was in no pain," Mrs. Fonda, flanked by the actor's children, Jane, Peter and adopted daughter Amy, told reporters gathered outside the family's Bel-Air home. "He had a good night. He talked with all of us and he was conscious at all times. He woke up this morning, he sat up and just stopped breathing."

Among those who paid their respects in person during the day were James Stewart, Eva Marie Saint, James Garner, Robert Wagner and Stefanie Powers.

In accordance with his wishes, Fonda's eyes were donated to the Manhattan Eye Institute and his body was cremated hours after he died, family spokeswoman Pat Kingsley said. She said there would be no funeral and the family had not decided what to do with the remains.

A tall, lean man with an honest face, Fonda played presidents and senators, lawyers and soldiers, farmers and indigents with equal skill. But despite his prominence, he kept his open manner and was remembered as much for his personal qualities as his professional achievements.

"I don't think you'll ever find anybody who'll have anything but good to say about Hank," said Glenn Ford, Fonda's co-star in "Midway" and "The Rounders."

"We've lost one of a kind... he was a real super, super, super actor," said Lucille Ball, who worked with Fonda in "The Big Street" and "Yours, Mine and Ours."

In the New Hampshire community of Holderness, whose Squam Lake was the setting for Fonda's Oscar-winning performance in "On Golden Pond," word of his death hit hard.

"We feel we've lost an old-timer from this area, even though I think it was his first time here," said Malcom Taylor, president of the Squam Lakes Association. "He much preferred to eat lunch with members of the crew — the roustabouts, cameramen, sound people. He just sat right down among them and was right at home."

In his hometown of Omaha, Neb., Fonda was the boy who made good but never forgot his roots. His family asked that instead of flowers, donations be made to the Omaha Community Playhouse's Henry Fonda Theater Center Memorial.

Born Henry Jaynes Fonda in Grand Island, Neb., on May 16, 1905, Fonda grew up in Omaha and got his start in acting at the Playhouse with a bit part in 1925.

The son of a printer, Fonda quit journalism studies at the University of Minnesota to study at the Playhouse under Marlon Brando's mother, then moved east to work at the University Players Guild on Cape Cod.

There he met Margaret Sullivan, first of his five wives, and Stewart, who later roomed with Fonda at New York's Madison Square

Hotel while both worked on Broadway.

After starring with Imogene Coca in "New Faces" in 1934, Fonda won a $1,000-a-week contract with movie producer Walter Wanger and began his film career with "The Farmer Takes A Wife" in 1935.

Five years and 20 films later, he got his first of three Academy Award nominations for his portrayal of Tom Joad in "The Grapes of Wrath." Another would follow in 1957 for "Twelve Angry Men," in which he played a juror who singlehandedly persuaded his 11 colleagues to acquit a young murder defendant.

In 1981 he was awarded a special lifetime achievement Oscar. But it was not until this year that he won an Oscar for his performance in "On Golden Pond" as Norman Thayer, a retired professor who masked his fear of death with grim humor. Too ill to attend the awards ceremonies, Fonda wept as he watched daughter Jane accept the Oscar on television.

After his brief, stormy marriage to Miss Sullivan, Fonda married Frances Seymour Brokaw, mother of Jane and Peter, who committed suicide in a mental asylum while they were estranged. Later marriages, to actress Susan Blanchard and Italian Countess Aldera Franchetti ended in divorce. In 1966 he married Shirlee Adams, an airline stewardess 28 years younger than he.

Despite his liberal views, he feuded for many years with his daughter Jane over her radical politics.

Faced Death In Two Final Films

By JERRY BUCK
Associated Press Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — It is the final scene in "On Golden Pond." The sun is setting and Ethel Thayer, played by Katharine Hepburn, turns to her husband, Norman, portrayed by Henry Fonda.

"Norman," she says, "this is the first time I've really felt we're going to die." Norman replies, "I've known it all along."

It was Fonda's last movie in a career that began in 1935.

Immediately after completing the movie in the summer of 1980 in New Hampshire, he went to Cape Cod to star with Myrna Loy in the television special "Summer Solstice." It was his last performance.

Fonda died Thursday at the age of 77. In some instances the performances were reflective of the actor because they came at the end of a long and distinguished career.

Both the movie and the special were about elderly couples putting their lives in order because they knew they would soon die. In both they return to a place that has been special in their lives, Golden Pond in the movie and Cape Cod in the special.

"I've outlasted all my friends, Maggie," Joshua Turner says to his wife in "Summer Solstice," broadcast by ABC in December 1981.

Joshua and Maggie, played by Fonda and Miss Loy, have returned to Cape Cod where they met, where they were wed on the beach, and where their son was lost in the surf. They reflect on their moments of happiness and sorrow.

At the end Maggie dies in his arms as they sit on the beach. Joshua tearfully tells a ranger, "Leave us alone. Let her die in peace. This is our beach. Has been for 50 years."

"On Golden Pond," adapted from the play by Ernest Thompson, brought Fonda his first Academy Award as best actor. Oscars also went to Miss Hepburn as best actress and to Thompson as best writer of adapted material.

Thayer, like the character Fonda played in "Summer Solstice," is preoccupied with death. Once he suggests that "when my number's up" he should be propped on the mantle so that he can do "a full gainer with a half twist" into the fire below. His wife says, "Norman Thayer, will you shut up? Your fascination with dying is beginning to frazzle my good humor."

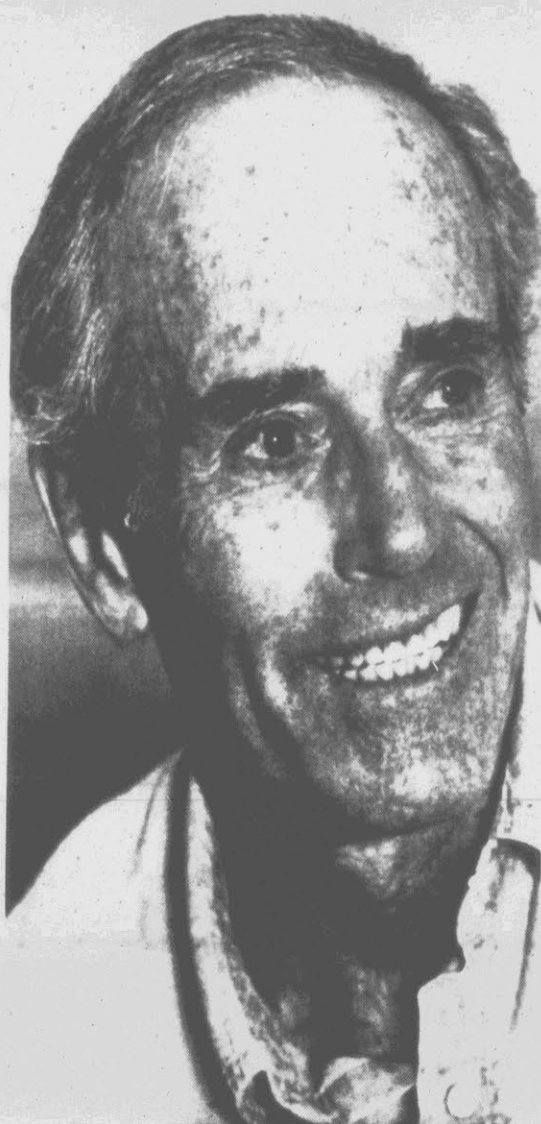

The movie also reflects the love between the elderly couple. Norman tells her, "You are a pretty old dame, aren't you?" They hug, and he adds, "What are you doing with a dotty old son of a bitch like me?" She tells him, "I haven't the vaguest idea."

At the end, as they watch the loons on the lake, Ethel says, "Hello, Golden Pond. We've come to say goodbye."

They are solitary figures on the shore. The script says, "Not sad, but peaceful and hopeful and proud."

ACTOR HENRY FONDA, shown in this 1978 photo, died Thursday after a long battle with heart disease. He was 77. (AP Laserphoto)

Sentenced In Extortion Bid

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A Chapel Hill man has been sentenced to six months in prison after pleading guilty to trying to extort $10,000 from University of North Carolina president William Friday.

Judge Giles Clark sentenced Floyd Goins to a six-month active prison term Tuesday and a two-and-a-half-year suspended term and fined him $500 and court costs in a plea-bargain agreement.

Friday said in an interview from his Chapel Hill office that he asked for a lenient sentence.

"I made clear from the beginning that I had no feelings of anger about it and wanted to see whatever effort could be made toward rehabilitation since the man is so young," he said.

He said Goins apologized for the incident in court and testified he did not mean to hurt Friday.

"It's a sad episode where this young man's life is going to be interrupted for a period of time," Friday said. "I hope the rehabilitation plan can be carried out."

Testimony indicated that Goins mailed a letter to Friday on July 14 demanding that Friday put $10,000 in small bills in a paper bag and place the bag in a mailbox across from the Chapel Hill Police Department by 10 p.m.

Assistant district attorney Carl Fox said in a telephone interview from Hillsborough that the letter warned Friday and his family would be killed if he did not obey the demand.

Curbing the Aggressive Impulse

Why is this period in our lives filled with such violence? Did it always exist or am I more aware of this terrible social misbehavior as I grow older? - Mr. S.S.D., N.Y.

Dear Mr. D.:
I once referred to the many brilliant articles and books that were written by a most famous scientist, Dr. Konrad Lorenz, on this very subject. Violence, anger, aggression, and hostility have dominated his interests.

For years he has pointed out the self-destructive forces of violence and how it can change a productive human being into one who is emotionally incapacitated.
Dr. Stephen Nordlicht, professor of psychiatry at the Cornell University Medical College in New York, has also made some revealing studies into the origin and elaboration of modern aggression.

Dr. Nordlicht said, "Man's history of violence is very old and the written record is replete with cruelty and savagery not readily admitted. At the same time we know that man has been capable of creating a material and spiritual world with structures which reflect man's (and women's) sensitivity and compassion."

These apparent contradictions are at first glance puzzling. But it is recognized that some forms of aggression early in man's history were responsible for survival and in fact may have spurred man to some of his great achievements.

Aggression may be considered an instinct that must be trained and social awareness become modified to make man most productive. Herein lies the key to man's compatibility to man.
Aware of these "instincts" or basic drives of aggression, it is the eventual hope that human beings will learn to subordinate and modify their anger and violent urges and live fruitful and happier lives without it.

Education and indoctrination of the very youngest children are the hopes for our future generations.

Peaceful living in social harmony can result when young people are taught to understand the joys and rewards of interdependence.

Within the framework of the family, unprovoked violence does occasionally occur. It must be recognized that there are definite physiological, psychological and neurological disorders responsible for some outbursts of extreme, unpredictable and unreasonable violence.

Such outbursts must not be casually overlooked. Rather must the family investigate the reasons for disproportionate outbursts of violence. When recognized early and when the forces of aggression are modified by psychological help and social support, young people can be retrained in directions that will make such aggression unnecessary. Education is the key to that modification of anger.

Dr. Nordlicht says, "As we reflect on man's monumental achievements... we have reason to be confident that the problems of violence will also be solved."

That hope can only be fulfilled by education and the elimination of social deprivation.

FOCUS

The Master of Suspense

Friday the 13th is a fitting birthday for a man who devoted his life to terrifying others. Alfred Hitchcock was born on August 13, 1899, and until his death in 1980, he thrilled audiences with movies that were unique blends of horror and humor. Hitchcock described his films as "life with the dull bits cut out," and certainly there is nothing dull about the suspense classics he directed. He is best known for later films like Psycho and The Birds, but he also created many early silent masterpieces, including The Lodger, Blackmail and his first, unfinished work entitled, appropriately enough, Number Thirteen.

DO YOU KNOW - Who played the role of Norman Bates in Psycho?

THURSDAY'S ANSWER - At present, a person can begin receiving early retirement benefits from Social Security at age 62.

Opening lead: King of ♠.

This hand is from the Italian Junior Championship. Would you rather play or defend a contract of five hearts?

Congratulations if you chose to declare, because the contract cannot be defeated. Note West's decision not to bid on despite his fine fit for his partner's suit. If you can force the opponents to compete to the five-level in a major suit, it is usually wise to let them play the hand.

Obviously, there is a danger that East can get a spade ruff. When he follows to the first spade, take the ace and lead the king of trumps—you must hope that East has either a singleton trump or the ace. You have crossed the first obstacle when East wins the ace and shifts to a club. What now?

Win the ace of clubs, cash the ace of diamonds and ruff a diamond. Enter dummy with the queen of trumps, drawing the outstanding trump in the process, cash the king of diamonds for a spade discard and ruff another diamond. Now ruff a club to reach this position:

You are ready for a beautiful ending. Lead the seven of diamonds from dummy and, when East plays the queen, discard a spade from your hand! East is forced to return a club. Sluff your last spade and ruff in dummy, and your two trumps take the last tricks. You have lost only the ace of hearts and a diamond trick!

University Has A 4-Year Course In Aviation Field

By PHYLLIS MENSING
Associated Press Writer
GRAND FORKS, N.D. (AP) — With a dozen students and a couple of donated airplanes, the University of North Dakota aviation department got off the ground 13 years ago by offering students the chance to combine love of flying with down-to-earth business savvy.

Today, the university's aviation students number 750 and its fleet includes 60 airplanes. And this fall, it will become the first school in the country to offer a four-year airway science program developed by the Federal Aviation Administration to upgrade the aviation industry.

"In the future, a pilot per se will be a dime a dozen. What you've got to do is fly an airplane and have other skills, too," says John Odegard, former crop duster, former certified public accountant and now chairman of the school's aviation department.

Odegard chaired a special FAA task force that developed the curriculum, a major goal of FAA Administrator J. Lynn Helms.

"General aviation aircraft and hours flown will nearly double in the next two decades," Helms said in a recent letter to the national Higher Education Commission. "There will be significant changes in the technology which will require a very sophisticated broad-based technical and managerial work force that can meet the new and changing demands of the system."

FAA officials say that except for some engineering schools, there are few places where a person can learn about aviation as a career. Flying was viewed by some educators as too glamorous and too expensive to be a part of a college atmosphere.

Odegard disagreed. Today, the department has a $6 million budget and some 200 employees, including 90 flight instructors. The bulk of that budget comes from student fees and research contracts, and students go on to everything from airport management, airline marketing and weather research.

When President Reagan fired striking air traffic controllers last year, the university was the only four-year school with a curriculum designed to train 30 to 50 new controllers each year. That curriculum helped it win a $4 million federal grant for a three-story aerospace and atmospheric studies center, to be finished late next year.

The university had been planning the aviation building for some time, but didn't have funding for it. "The strike gave us an opportunity to get it," Odegard said. "When opportunity knocks, you'd better open the door."

That philosophy has guided the 40-year-old Odegard throughout his career.

Born in Minot, Odegard came to the University of North Dakota after serving as a crop duster, a corporate pilot, a certified public accountant and a financial representative for Boeing. While working on his advanced degree, he helped rejuvenate the school's flying club and offered to teach a course in aviation.

Odegard had the support of Tom Clifford, former dean of the business college and now the school's president.

A department won state approval with the condition that it be self-supporting, and in 1969 UND became the first school in the country to offer a college business degree in aviation administration.

The following year, Odegard talked the city of Grand Forks into buying a portable air traffic control tower and won FAA approval to train students there. He also lured people from the airplane industry into the classroom.

"It sounds like a mutual admiration society, but the people we've attracted got caught up in his drive," said Don Smith, a former plant manager for Lockheed who is now director of academic programs for the department.

"Traditionally, an accountant is a person who sits in a corner with a calculator," Smith said. "John has that background, but he has the personality of an entrepreneur and a salesperson."

UND students are offered four-year majors in aviation administration, airport administration, aeronautical studies and meteorology. Students take basic business management or liberal arts courses along with aviation, and work toward double majors.

The 60 planes, most of which are leased, include a specially equipped Cessna Citation jet now being used in a cloud seeding study of the Colorado River Basin.

Smith says students will spend $25,000 to $30,000 on their aviation education at UND. "Many of our students have borrowed money," he said. "But I don't know any who have regretted it."

Eighty-five percent of the UND aviation majors end up in the aviation industry, Smith said.

Odegard says airway science majors will be eligible for a proposed federal register from which the FAA wants to choose 500 employees a year to follow such careers as air traffic controllers, airport managers and aviation safety experts.

Future projects for the department include research on pilots' reactions to adverse conditions and the possibility of designing cockpits to counter that stress. Odegard says UND also will train Army helicopter pilots, with the Army providing ROTC scholarships.

READY FOR TAKEOFF — These are among the 60 aircraft used by the Univ. of North Dakota for training, air service and research. The university will become the first school this fall to offer a four-year airway science program developed by the FAA. (AP Laserphoto)

SHORT LIVED BEAUTY — Tiny white flowers of cypress trees, here enlarged about four times, are short-lived miniature beauties, in bloom for about one week during mid-August. Cypress trees also put out even smaller button-like flat flowers of a straw color. The sprig shown here was photographed on a young cypress tree within the city limits of Greenville.
