Compromise Tax Hike Faces Congress

By JIM LUTHER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The fate of a compromise bill boosting taxes by $98.3 billion over the next three years is uncertain as the House and Senate prepare to vote on the measure under intense pressure from the White House.

For now, President Reagan's congressional backers concede they are short of votes for the tax bill, mainly because conservative House Republicans — usually the backbone of Reagan's support — are fighting the increase.

But top administration officials say they intend to be celebrating victory by the end of the week.

"We hope and believe that when the vote comes later this week — Thursday or Friday — that we'll have a majority in both houses," White House chief of staff James Baker said Sunday.

The tax increase would be split about evenly between business and individuals. It includes higher taxes on cigarettes, telephone service and families with large medical bills and several new measures — including tax withholding on interest and dividends — to reduce tax cheating.

Reagan planned a nationally broadcast speech at 8 p.m. EDT tonight to outline the bill as an essential element of his campaign to revitalize the economy. Reagan says the tax increase and $15.2 billion worth of spending cuts attached to the measure will reduce the federal deficit and the government's borrowing and help bring down interest rates.

The bill, the largest revenue-raising measure in peacetime history, was approved early Sunday by a panel of negotiations from the Senate and House.

Congress hopes to vote on the bill by Thursday or Friday. But first, it must be written and assembled into an actual document expected to fill about 1,000 pages covering more than 100 separate tax provisions.

The $15.2 billion spending cuts in the bill would reduce government aid for health care for the poor and elderly. Hospitals and physicians would receive smaller federal reimbursements for treating Medicare patients. Subscribers to supplementary Medicare insurance for doctors' fees would have to pay $13.70 a month for coverage starting next July 1 and $15.30 monthly starting a year later. The current premium is $12.20.

Key tax provisions would double for three years the eight-cent-a-pack cigarette tax paid by 55 million smokers; triple the 1-percent tax on telephone service for three years and then let it die; allow deduction of only those medical expenses that exceed 5 percent of adjusted gross income, instead of the current 3 percent.

Also, it would end the special medical-insurance deduction of up to $150 a year, now claimed by 16 million couples and individuals, and permit deduction of uninsured fire and other casualty losses only after they exceed 10 percent of income.

Airline passengers would face an 8-percent tax on tickets, up from three percent, and those going abroad would pay a special $3 tax.

In an effort to collect a share of the estimated $100 billion in tax losses caused each year by cheating, the bill would impose a 10-percent withholding tax on most interest and dividends starting July 1, 1983. Restaurants with 10 or more employees would have to furnish information to help the Internal Revenue Service collect taxes on the 84 percent of tips that are never reported as income.

Individuals who use big deductions to shield large amounts of investment income would have to pay a toughened "minimum tax." And high-earning professionals would lose part of the tax break now available by setting aside up to $15,000 a year in tax-deferred pension plans.

Gap 'Nearly Vanished' Final Touches On PLO Pullout

By The Associated Press

U.S. presidential envoy Philip C. Habib returned to Beirut today with major concessions from the Israeli government and Lebanese Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan predicted the withdrawal of the Palestinian guerrillas would begin at the end of the week "at the latest."

"We're in the process of putting final touches on the agreement. I can assure everyone that the gap has nearly vanished," Wazzan said on national television after a one-hour meeting with Habib.

Wazzan, a key intermediary in Habib's mediation effort, said the Cabinet had been asked to convene its regular weekly meeting on Wednesday and he hoped the announcement of a final agreement would be made at that time. Foreign Ministry source said a tentative deadline of Saturday had been set to start the evacuation.

"We are very close to implementation ... at the end of the week at the latest," Wazzan said.

There were some disputes remaining between the Israelis and the Palestine Liberation Organization, notably over the Syrian presence in Beirut and an Israeli pilot captured by the Palestine Liberation Organization. But U.S. and Israeli officials echoed Wazzan's optimism.

"I don't think there are many problems left," said Saeb Salam, the 77-year-old Lebanese elder statesman. He added that the evacuation would involve more than 7,000 PLO guerrillas and about 5,000 Syrian troops and Syrian-backed Palestine Liberation Army units.

Even the normally pessimistic Foreign Minister Fuad Butros, who sat in on the meeting with Habib, was hopeful. "I believe we are nearing a solution within this week," he told The Associated Press.

In Washington, White House spokesman Larry Speakes said, "We remain reasonably optimistic. There are still some unresolved issues." He did not elaborate.

After consultations in Jerusalem Sunday between Habib and Prime Minister Menachem Begin, the Israeli Cabinet withdrew its objections to French troops spearheading the entry of the multi-national peacekeeping force into west Beirut and the timing of that deployment.

A Cabinet communique also appeared to soften Israel's insistence on checking each outgoing guerrilla against Israeli intelligence lists. It said some sort of verification must be made but left open the mechanics.

But at least one major stumbling block remained: Israel's insistence that the PLO return Israeli pilot Aharon Ahiar, who was shot down and captured in southern Lebanon on the first day of the invasion June 6, and the bodies of nine soldiers missing since Israel's 90-day invasion of southern Lebanon in 1978.

Lebanese sources said the PLO proposed a swap for guerrillas captured by Israel. But the Cabinet communique insisted the "pilot and the missing persons will be handed over to the International Red Cross before the beginning of the terrorist departure."

Salam was quoted by Beirut newspapers as saying the demand already was "under discussion between the PLO and the International Red Cross."

Another possible problem was Israel's demand that Syrian troops in Beirut leave Lebanon entirely. Salam said Syria had agreed to move the 1,500-2,000 Syrian troops in Beirut and the 3,500 PLA units to the Bekaa Valley, where the bulk of its estimated 30,000 troops in the country are concentrated.

Israel is expected to turn its gunsights on the Syrians in the valley once the PLO leaves west Beirut. Jerusalem has insisted since the outset of the invasion that it will not leave Lebanon until all foreign forces depart.

A senior Israeli official who declined to be identified said Israel wants to verify that all PLO forces leave Beirut because it suspects the organization is planning to leave several thousand fighters behind, perhaps by putting teen-agers on the evacuation vehicles in their place.

But the official said despite the remaining "technicalities," he saw no new obstacles to the pullout, and Cabinet Secretary Dan Meridor said a final evacuation agreement might be reached this week.

Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir, however, warned, "Despite the optimistic news coming from Jerusalem, they (the Palestinian guerrillas) should know that the military option still exists."

Jaruzelski Goes To Russia As Solidarity Sets Demonstration

WARSAW, Poland (AP) —

Premier Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski went to the Soviet Union today for talks with Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev as Solidarity supporters planned demonstrations to commemorate the founding of their union, suspended by the martial law regime.

A brief report by the Polish news agency, PAP, said Jaruzelski "flew to the Soviet Union for a meeting in the Crimea" with Brezhnev.

The official Soviet news agency Tass noted the Polish leader's arrival and said he had come to the Soviet Union for "a short working visit." When Czechoslovakian leader Gustav Husak and East German government head Erich Honecker visited recently for talks with Brezhnev, Tass said they were "on holiday."

Jaruzelski's trip was not announced in advance. It comes on the second anniversary of the formation of a Gdansk strike committee that led to the creation of Solidarity in the Baltic port city 15 days later. Solidarity was the Soviet bloc's first labor union independent of Communist Party control.

In Gdansk, squads of riot police barred access to the towering, 130-foot monument to Polish workers slain by government forces during food riots in December 1970. The memorial has become a focus of dissent and protest in the port where, on Friday, police fired tear gas and water cannon to disperse about 10,000 demonstrators.

Gdansk was rainy and calm this morning.

There was speculation that Jaruzelski's visit to Crimea suggested Soviet leaders are anxious about the most recent civil disturbances. Police also took action Friday against protesters in Warsaw, Wroclaw and Krakow.

One knowledgeable, veteran source, however, characterized the meeting as "ritual consultations."

"They always run around like this when Brezhnev's vacationing in the Crimea," the source also said. "It's not that unusual."

The PAP dispatch did not say how long the two leaders will confer in what will be their second meeting since the Jaruzelski regime imposed martial law last Dec. 13, suspended the union and arrested thousands of its leaders.

Jaruzelski secured pledges of further Soviet economic assistance during two days of talks with Brezhnev and other Soviet leaders in Moscow, in early March.

Solidarity leaders still at large are urging peaceful protests against martial law for the next two weeks, culminating in nationwide demonstrations Aug. 31 on the anniversary of the birth of the labor federation.

President Taking Tax Case To People Tonight

WASHINGTON (AP) —

President Reagan takes his case for a tax increase before the American people tonight after lobbying members of Congress to vote for the legislation he says is vital to the nation's economic well-being.

Reagan, scheduled to make a broadcast address from the Oval Office at 8 p.m. EDT, said Sunday, "I have a feeling that the economic recovery will be very much delayed and we could even see interest rates start up again if we don't get this package."

Administration officials said they do not have enough votes to pass the $98.3 billion bill yet, but are confident they will get them before the final tally late this week.

For consumers, the bill would double the eight-cent a pack tax on cigarettes, increase taxes on telephone services and on families with large medical bills, and institute tax withholding on interest and dividends.

Reagan scheduled more meetings today with Republican lawmakers and put the finishing touches on his speech. It will be carried live on television and radio by ABC, CBS, NBC, as well as by Cable News Network and The Associated Press Radio network.

Deputy presidential press secretary Larry Speakes said today's meetings were one-on-one sessions with about six congressmen.

He also said Republicans should not underestimate the importance of the vote to Reagan.

"I do think it is an important leadership question and all Republican members of Congress should realize that it is important to the president's program, important to the party and important to success in the fall elections," Speakes said. "Because that is the only way we're going to get recovery."

Reagan lobbied during lunch Sunday with a group of 35 Republican congressmen who were invited to Camp David for hotdogs, hamburgers, baked beans and a presidential appeal.

Air-conditioned Army vans ferried the lawmakers from the White House to a nearby landing strip downtown, where three Marine helicopters picked them up and whisked them to the mountaintop retreat.

As they returned, there was no sign Reagan had won any converts. Some said they were keeping an open mind or were inclined to support the administration, and others said they already had been planning to vote for the bill.

There seemed to be general agreement, though, that it was an honor to visit Camp David.

The president said, "I don't bear grudges or anything," against opposition leader, Rep. Jack Kemp.

Cheryl Taft, exchange director of The Friendship Force project for Greenville-Washington area people to exchange visits with residents of Arnhem, Holland, writes that the Hotline appeal published recently reduced the number of host families needed from 30 to six. "All the callers remarked that they saw our plea in Hotline," she said.

The six host families now needed are for the second week, Oct. 3-9. Also needed are a few standby families who could, if need be, accommodate guests the first night they arrive (Sept. 27-28). Also, it would be helpful to have a few more volunteers to accompany guests on day activities, Mrs. Taft said. Abby's Recipes Are Winners

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Last year at a county fair I won first place in the pie category with "Dear Abby's Pecan Pie." This year I won first place with your "Dear Abby's Cheesecake." I really am thrilled and want to thank you for sharing your terrific recipes. Love,

MRS. DIXIE CORDLE, BLAINE, KY.

DEAR DIXIE: My pleasure. And if anyone else out there wants the above-mentioned recipes, they're yours for the asking. Write to: Dear Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

DEAR ABBY: I recently met a man I'll call Rick, and we hit it off from the minute we met. He's a nice-looking guy who works at a health club during the day and tends bar at a classy club three nights a week.

One thing led to another, and he told me if we were going to have any kind of intimate relationship, he wanted to be perfectly honest with me. Then he said he was a "masochist." He said he likes to be "spanked" — hard! I told him I didn't care for violence. He said if he enjoys it, it's not violence. He asked me to go ahead and hit him, and I said no. Then he asked me to think about it. It sounds weird to me.

I don't know what to think of him now. I like him a lot, but I'm afraid if I go along with his wishes, he may try to hurt me. I was married to a wife-beater for a year and have had enough broken bones for one lifetime.

I'm 22, and Rick is 29. Is it dangerous to get mixed up with a masochist? And can you tell me more about masochism? I'm not sure I understand what it is.

WONDERING ABOUT RICK

DEAR WONDERING: You are wise to wonder. "Masochism" is a sexual perversion characterized by a desire to be physically abused in order to achieve sexual gratification. It can be dangerous, so do not agree to engage in any practice that you consider frightening, abnormal or weird.

DEAR ABBY: A couple we have known for many years visited us recently. We truly love them as friends, but the lady is a cleaning nut! Believe me, I am a very good housekeeper and I am not lazy, but just watching her digging in the corners were me out.

I don't mind if a houseguest helps with the dishes or keeps the guest room picked up, but this friend was vacuuming gown and a white carnation corsage.

The bride is a graduate of Farmville Central High School and works at Parker's Restaurant. The bridegroom is a graduate of Greenville High School in Greenville, Miss.

The couple will live in Jacksonville after a wedding trip to unannounced points.

and dusting the whole time she was here. She made me feel "dirty" and hurt my feelings.

Why would a guest come into someone's home and work like a house? I wouldn't do this to my own family. Abby, please tell folks that when they're guests they should relax and not work so hard.

FEELING DIRTY IN KENTUCKY

DEAR FEELING: I'll tell them, but I doubt if it will help compulsive cleaners. Such people work like a horse, digging and cleaning, not because they think the place is "dirty," but because it provides an outlet for their nervous energy.

DEAR ABBY: I'm another one who never thought I'd be writing to Dear Abby, but I'm too embarrassed about my problem to ask anyone else.

I'll start from the beginning: Dick and I got married when we were both 17, mainly because I was pregnant, but we also loved each other deeply. We've had our problems like most young marrieds, especially getting ourselves into deep financial trouble.

This weekend Dick gave me a real shocker. Because of his job as a construction worker, he works 200 miles away and can come home only on weekends. Anyway, he came home with hiccups all over his neck and admitted he had committed adultery on several occasions because of his strong sexual desires, which I can attest to. He says these girls mean nothing to him and he loves me, but he gets so lonely and there is nothing to do but go to bars. That's where he meets these easy girls. He says if I want to divorce him he will understand and won't fight it.

The fact is, I still love Dick. Besides, I have two preschool children and I'm four months' pregnant.

What should I do? I am a good Christian, but sometimes I feel like killing myself.

UPSET AND DEPRESSED

DEAR DEPRESSED: Both you and Dick were married before you were mature enough to handle that kind of commitment. If your marriage is to survive — and you owe it to your children to give it your best effort — you will need family counseling. If your church doesn't provide it, try your local mental health association. Don't back off because of the money. You will be charged only what you can afford. And please remind Dick that bed-hopping with girls he picks up in bars is the way men get VD — and bring it home to their wives.

A female salmon will lay from 700 to 800 eggs per pound of body weight at spawning time. She scoops out an indentation in the gravel bed and deposits the eggs there. When she is finished, she covers the eggs with gravel and has nothing more to do with them.

The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♠ 2 ♦ 2 ♠ 3 ♦
3 ♠ 4 ♦ ?

What action do you take?
A.—Double, but don't expect to need an armored car to bank your winnings. Here your double is a warning to partner not to compete to four spades. With so much strength in the opponents' suit opposite known shortness in partner's hand, that's the last thing you want to hear. If you don't double, partner may infer that your values are outside the diamond suit and bid on. You should be able to beat four diamonds, and even if it's only one trick, be content.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♠ Pass 1 ♠ 2 ♦
Dble Pass 2 ♠ Pass
Pass 3 ♦ Pass Pass
Dble Pass ?

What action do you take?
A.—When you removed partner's double of two diamonds, you informed him that you had a weak hand, unsuitable for defense, with a long spade suit. Despite that warning, partner has elected to again wield the axe against an opposing diamond contract, and this time he has doubled them into game! You must respect his decision.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠AQ9 ♥AJ3 ♦J762 ♣Q93

The bidding has proceeded:
East South West North
1 ♠ Pass Pass 2 ♠ Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A.—If you could be sure that partner was full value for his overall, you would jump to three no trump. But partner's reopening bid in the balancing position could be made with quite a weak hand, even vulnerable, so a bid of two no trump is sufficient. If partner has a sound overall, he will go on to game.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠J83 ♥85 ♦A954 ♣10852

The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♠ 1 ♠ Pass ?

What action do you take?
A.—If you raise spades, there is no guarantee that partner can make eight tricks. Also, he might play you for a better hand. Nevertheless, you should raise to two spades. A preemptive raise on this type of holding is a recognized tactical move. If you pass, opener will have an easy opportunity to contest the issue, and the opponents could even get together for a game in hearts!

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠1054 ♥AKJ98 ♦84 ♣AK7

The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 2 ♠ Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A.—Clearly, your heart suit is good enough to rebid. Nevertheless, we would bypass that action in favor of a raise to three clubs. First, it is important to establish a fit when you have one, and that is especially true when you have such a good fit for partner's suit. Second, a raise to three clubs tends to suggest that you have a better than minimum opening bid.

Q.6—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠6 ♠AQ5 ♦AKQJ1062 ♣K5

The bidding has proceeded:
North East South
3 ♠ Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A.—We think that four diamonds is conservative, but your chances of making five diamonds are not all that bright. Four spades might have some play. For our money, however, the winning bid is three no trump. If the opponents lead either a heart or a club, you will have nine fast tricks. And even with a spade or diamond lead, you will still be a favorite—ace of spades and nothing else in partner's hand assures your contract.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Several events have occurred since I did the column on how "territorial" women are in aerobics classes.

First, I arrived at my class one morning to find my "spot" in the back row had been set apart by white tape. I felt like Les Nessman on "WKRP" with his imaginary door around his desk.

Then I received several letters of disbelief. One of these letters (unsigned) came from Sunnymead, Calif. She wrote, "I was glad to see in the end of your column you said you were just kidding about losing your spot in aerobics. After all, it is so silly."

"I was new at Jazzercise and unknowingly I made the mistake of standing in someone's spot... someone's territory I intruded on."

"The woman proceeded to tell the others around her what a dingaling I was. After class she chewed me out. Here was a woman in her 50s acting so much like a child, I just stood there with my mouth open."

"I do not like to argue and the reason I go (to Jazzercise) is to have fun, relieve tension and have one hour away from the kids. I was tempted to come back with a piece of chalk and mark her spot so no other poor soul could suffer from her childish behavior."

"Needless to say I stay clear of her and exercise on the opposite side of the room. But guess who always is the first one at the door? That's right, 'Miss Seal in Mating Season!'"

"If only more would follow this counsel from Luke: 6:38: 'Practice giving and people will give to you for the measure you are measuring out they will give or measure out to you.' Or Matthew 7:12: 'All things you want men to do to you, you also must do to them.'"

Well, of course I was kidding. Women aren't all THAT protective. I used to exercise in a class with Sandra O'Connor and when she went to Washington to join the Supreme Court, they tell me they retired her mat.

All I'm asking is that they retire my "space."

Or in the counsel of Matthew 5:5: "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth."

And that includes whatever space is not spoken for.

Determination Required

North Carolina's Department of Human Resources has noted it may not be able to meet a 1983 deadline for removing youthful offenders from adult jails. The alternative detention techniques, a study committee reported, could cost as much as $1 million. And the department says that it just can't provide that kind of money without special funding from the General Assembly.

It's interesting to note that this is the same department that, just a few years ago, managed to find a million in extra money to keep the state-funded abortion program going after that program exhausted its allocated funding. But the department apparently is now saying that it can't manage transfers to help youthful offenders.

Latest statistics available indicate there are approximately 1,500 youths under age 18 in adult jails in this state. More than 2,300 other youths are in juvenile detention centers.

Federal law, which has mandated separation of youthful offenders from adult prisoners, requires only that they be separated by sight and sound in city and county jails. Even that apparently is causing problems for many jails to comply. In some cases the youthful offenders are being placed in solitary confinement cells normally reserved for the worst adult prisoners.

Some psychological studies indicate that youths in jail have the highest suicide rate of their generation. And this is for a group that includes many who are jailed for only three or four days. Why should they be jailed in the first place?

If alternatives to adult prisons can be made available for $1 million, then it should be done. And we believe it can be done if the same dedicated effort is applied to the program that was displayed in the abortion program.

Sensitive Over Big Outlay

Congress may be debating the validity of allowing tax deductions for three-martini luncheons but North Carolina's county commissioners don't seem to mind a little entertainment for themselves at taxpayers' expense.

United Press International reports that comedian Jerry Clower was hired for $5,000 to give a private performance at the annual conference of the North Carolina Association of County Commissioners.

Clower's fee was paid from the $60 registration fees charged commissioners in attendance.

Customarily, that fee is paid by the county involved — from taxpayer funds.

The only good thing coming out of it all is the frankness with which association director C. Ronald Aycock discussed Clower's appearance and fee. According to Aycock, "It's a normal expenditure for an annual conference. We have nothing to hide."

Perhaps, just perhaps, the association should do away with anything that would make it jump to protest that it has "nothing to hide."

RODNEY DANGERFIELD KNOWS THE FEELING!

Focus On Meter-Reader

In all the fuss about the energy shortage no one has mentioned the meter reader. When I say the meter reader, I mean the person who comes to your house to read your electric meter.

For Years no one had paid any attention to him. He would ring your doorbell and yell, "Meter reader here to read your meter!", and you'd let him in and he would disappear, and when he returned, you'd shout at him rudely, "Shut the door when you leave!"

But now he has become the most important person in the lives of many of us.

Just the other day we were all eating dinner when the doorbell rang. My son answered the ring, and came into the dining room, his face white. "It's the meter reader. He wants to read our meter." My wife said, "How did he ever find us?" "Be calm, everybody," I warned. "Pretend nothing has happened. Ask him to come into the dining room."

The guy came into the dining room carrying his route book. "Where's the meter?," he asked.

"Would you like to have dinner?," I asked. "Nope. I've been offered dinner in every house I've

"I have to read it." "I'll send my son to read it," I said. "He's great at reading meters. Here, have a glass of wine."

"I'm sorry, but I have to read it myself. It will only take a minute."

"Do you have a search warrant?," my wife asked. He looked surprised, "I don't need a search warrant to read your meter."

"I think you had better check the Constitution. You can't just barge into somebody's house and look at his electric meter," she said.

"Well, if you feel that way, we'll just shut off your electricity," he replied.

"It's all right, Mother. The man has not come to do us harm," I said. "I'm sure he won't take advantage of a family that is probably eating its last meal unless our food stamps come through."

"Could you please direct me to your meter?"

I took him to the cellar stairs. Then I said, "Be gentle with us. Be good to us."

"Where have I heard that before?" the man asked. "Barbara Walters said it to President Carter on her show," I said.

"Oh, yeah," he chuckled, and he went downstairs. The family all waited in the kitchen.

"Why is he taking so long?" my wife asked nervously, as she twisted the dish towel.

ART BUCHWALD been to today. I'm stuffed. Just tell me where your meter is and I'll be out of here.

"You don't want to go into our basement," my wife said. "It's so messy. We'll tell you anything you want to know."

"I have to check your meter," he said. "I checked it yesterday, I assured him. 'It's working fine.'"

Minnesota's Plan

By PAUL O'CONNOR RALEIGH — Trying to buy your first house? Good luck! High interest rates and high housing prices are combining to make home ownership a pipe dream for about 95 percent of the country's young couples, housing industry spokesmen say. If you want to buy a house, you need two things — a big downpayment and a big salary to take care of the big monthly payments.

The legislature's independent study commission on housing earlier this month entertained a short discussion on the approach to the problem of building up a big downpayment. Fiscal analyst David Crofts reported on Minnesota's "Young Families Housing Act."

In 1980, the Minnesota General Assembly passed legislation that allows people to squirrel away up to $1500 a year for 10 years in a tax-free savings account. The program works just like the Individual Retirement Accounts that banks have been telling us about. The money that goes into the account is tax deductible. The interest earned doesn't have to be reported as income. When you take the money out of the account, it must be applied towards the purchase of your family's first ever house. If it isn't, there are big tax penalties. Unlike the IRAs, PAUL O'CONNOR however, the housing money is not taxed when it is withdrawn.

So why haven't Minnesotans joined the program in droves? Because the IHA is free of state taxes only. In Raleigh, a spokesman for the state's savings and loan associations said the IHA program won't be a success until the federal government offers the same tax breaks.

Rep. Rooth Cook of Raleigh, commission chairman, said legislators shouldn't drop the idea just because the federal government hasn't acted yet. The states, by passing IHAs, can create momentum for the idea.

Let's look at the least expensive starter house a young family is likely to find

Other Editors Say Enlisting Public

(Greensboro Record)

Drunken drivers may have a tough time avoiding arrest now that every citizen has been called to help. We hope people do their part. Whether or not the authorities do their jobs remains to be seen.

The North Carolina Highway Patrol wants each resident of the state to pick up a phone whenever he sees someone he believes is driving drunkenly. If the number is one of those offered by the patrol, a law enforcement officer presumably will be dispatched immediately to look for the suspect.

The system has all kinds of possibilities for success. Yet it depends upon two things if it really is to work. First, law enforcement agencies must be prepared to give the drunk-driving calls a high priority. Nothing will doom the program any more quickly than to dismiss the callers lightly. Not only will drunken drivers continue to get away with murder, before long the people will stop calling as well.

Second, drunken drivers snatched from the roads by law enforcement officers must be dealt with quickly and effectively in court. Public participation in the program cannot be expected if (1) court appearances are long delayed and suspects are allowed to drive on public roads in the interim, or (2) court compassion continues to put convicted drunk drivers back in the driver's seat.

A recent newspaper story recounted patrol efforts to interdict the flow of drunk drivers through "wolfpac" assaults. In those cases, a half dozen or so troopers are stationed near a problem stretch of roadway to systematically pluck from the traffic inebriated drivers.

The patrol also is driving back roads of the state in an effort to run into drivers who are fearlessly traveling those roads while drinking. Furthermore, the department is using federal funds to pay troopers to work days they normally would be off duty, just to keep the pressure on suspected DUI drivers.

It seems to us if the program works at all, it will work well; for drinking drivers soon will become too scared to chance fooling every person they weave past. Sober citizens can help themselves with this program. We hope they will.

Strength For Today

ASUPREME LOVE We read in the Bible that Jesus Christ left heavenly glory to assume human flesh and live the humble life of man. He was born into the home of poor parents, lived as a common workman, went forth to preach. When his message cut athwart the desires of the multitude and entrenched powers, he was persecuted, unjustly tried, and at last brought to death.

Son of man's salvation; it also gives us a more reverent sense of the value of human life. Sometimes we look upon sinning humanity and wonder why God keeps his patience with his human problem children. There must be an even greater reason than his infinite patience. These problem children must have a value in his sight so great that he was willing to surrender and sacrifice his only begotten Son that humanity might be redeemed. — Elisha Douglass

Nixon Style Game Urged

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK WASHINGTON — The attempted Nixonization of Ronald Reagan peaked when chief of staff James Baker's agent at the Republican National Committee telephoned a freshman conservative congressman with friendly advice about his coming vote on the tax-increase bill.

Deputy National Chairman Rich Bond told Republican Rep. Raymond J. McGrath of New York, his boyhood friend on Long Island, that he might well have a better chance for national campaign funds if he did not follow his inclination to vote against the tax bill. That was part of what White House aides, using one of Richard Nixon's favorite sports terms, called a "full-court press."

"Politics is politics," one Republican National Committee aide told us, explaining that nay-voting congressmen would go to the bottom of the list for favors. Snugly-fitting that Nixonian rule were personal attacks on Rep. Jack Kemp, demands for personal loyalty to the president regardless of the issues, and even White House suggestions that U.S. Chamber of Commerce staffers be fired.

The strange events of early August confirmed the judgment of early 1981 by worried conservatives inside the administration that Jim Baker is uninterested in ideology and determined to remove Kemp from presidential succession. For months, Kemp has been barred from private sessions with Reagan and ridiculed in background conversation by Baker.

Although presidential aides long have insisted that Reagan was vexed by old protege Kemp, the first solid evidence that the president might be swallowing Baker's line came at the Aug. 5 Cabinet meeting. The president twice criticized Kemp by name, once for his attacks on the Federal Reserve Board and once for his adamancy against tax increases ("Jack Kemp just doesn't want to compromise," he said, according to one official).

That statement from a president who is himself accused by liberals of inability to compromise suggested how far he has moved toward Baker's accommodationist style. It also flashed the green light for personal assaults on Kemp by the White House staff. "Kemp is showboating," one official told us. "He didn't even think of opposing this bill until he saw a chance to promote himself." In truth, back on June 20 over Cable News Network, Kemp promised "to take a very visible role and oppose" any tax increase.

Other White House aides say Baker was responsible for published reports stigmatizing Kemp for using the tax fight to enhance his 1984 presidential prospects (although Baker denied responsibility for leaks when accused by angry House members over dinner at the Capitol Hill Club Tuesday night). Baker was also fingered by businessmen as saying President Richard Leshner and chief economist Richard Rahn at the U.S. Chamber be bounced because they oppose the president.

That is the copyrighted style of Dick Nixon, not Ron Reagan. In supposed "arm-twisting" meetings with House members, he is his usual good-natured self. At one White House session, it was Rep. Phil Crane of Illinois, unalterably opposed to the tax bill, who took the president to task at length for deserting his philosophy — not Reagan hectoring the rebellious congressman.

The full-court press has induced few turnovers. Rather, congressmen who until now were no great admirers of Jack Kemp have protested his treatment to Baker. A majority of Republican House members is not now in sight for the bill. Thus, for the first time as president, Reagan must rely on mainstream Democratic votes.

Rep. Newt Gingrich, the second-term from Georgia leading the charge against the tax increase, believes this poses far-reaching problems. "If we allow them (the white House) to succeed," Gingrich told us, "they will begin to turn away from their natural allies and turn toward their natural opponents." Such a deviation seems foreign to Ronald Reagan's political compass, just as does the implicit threat to Ray McGrath. Copyright 1982 Field Enterprises, Inc.

A Quiet Publishing Landmark

By JOHN CUNIFF AP Business Analyst ELMFSFORD, N.Y. (AP) — It is a publishing landmark, a hard-cover book that has sold in the high six figures every year since 1974. In all, probably 5 million copies, and still moving well.

Still, you have never seen it on the best-seller lists. That's because the lists generally measure bookstore sales only, and this volume, in one of 32 editions, is delivered in new Sears, Roebuck microwave ovens.

It is a sponsored book, produced for Sears by The Benjamin Company.

There is nothing pretentious about the title, "Kenmore Microwave Cooking," or the publisher, who has also brought out "Cooking With Aluminum Foil" for Reynolds, "Outdoor Tips" for Remington Arms, and "The Sun-Maid Cookbook," for the Sun-Maid Growers of California.

Titles by the score. For Procter & Gamble, General Electric, American Can and scores of other Fortune 500 companies, and for scores aspiring to the list. For the U.S. government and the National Football League too, and for scores of other organizations on scores of subjects.

Benjamin, based in this Westchester County community, is the leading publisher or sponsored titles, original and sometimes existing books that can be tied to the marketing efforts of organizations.

Since companies place vast advance orders, many times greater than orders for conventional titles, sales seldom slip below 25,000 copies, a level that some people might say constitutes a best seller.

Roy and Ted Benjamin, who founded, own and run the company, pioneered the use of sponsored books — almost all nonfiction, self-help, how-to volumes — which they produce in their modern 18-employee offices here.

"We don't publish a book until it is sold," said Roy, the president, who, aside from being a passionate golfer, has spent 29 years "of total and single-minded absorption in publishing and supplying books."

A sponsored book, he maintains, "has much better value." Into the microwave book, said Roy, went about $100,000 worth of preparation, including text and photographs, and recipes that had to be created, refined, tested and retested by chefs in nearby commercial kitchens.

"We can put more into a book than the trade publisher," said brother Ted. Big volume and assured sales are one reason, a lean organization another. Trade publishers require nine to 12 months to produce a book. The Benjamins claim a December order can mean a book in April.

Books are a wondrous vehicle for a message, said Roy, in his 60s and the older of the two. A medium so effective, as he views it, that almost any sensible company in America or abroad should consider it.

The well-produced sponsored book, he says, "is editorially valid, graphically attractive, and supplies practical and needed information for readers and users."

He warms to the subject. "It is presented in an age-old format that will be retained in the home, constantly referred to and almost never discarded."

In 1953, when Roy and Ted, now executive vice president, founded their company, books sometimes were used as premiums. Rand McNally & Co. and Hammond, for example, supplied atlases for use as company gifts.

The Benjamins went further. To corporate clients they sold in bulk the special-interest titles of other publishers, usually with a special corporate identification. Curiously, sales in bookstores weren't hurt. An early production was a special, deluxe edition of Dr.

Spock's "Baby & Child Care," packed in a box of baby products. Another, a paperback edition of "The Merriam-Webster Dictionary," packed in boxes of sneakers as part of a back-to-school promotion.

Those were existing books, "adapted" books, often featuring the sponsor's name, logo or message on the cover. For added impact, advertising inserts sometimes were bound into the volumes.

Now, however, most of the titles originate with the Benjamins. General Foods was the first to seek an original; out of it came the "Maxwell House Coffee Cookbook."

Then the street became two-way. Realizing that two different book markets existed, the Benjamins sometimes offered their productions to trade publishers for sale in bookstores at regular bookstore prices.

"Less than 10 percent of our adult population regularly visits bookstores," said Roy. "And the vast majority of small cities and towns don't even have bookstores."

The distribution of books by corporations apparently doesn't cut into store sales. Store sales seem not to diminish, and might enhance, the value of books to corporate clients.

Find Abandoned Horses Starving, Dehydrated

CLOVER, S.C. (AP) — Thirteen Arabian horses left behind when their owners moved to Florida were found starved to about half their weight, with no hope of ever becoming completely healthy, the owner of a stable says.

They were "the skinniest bunch of horses I've ever seen," said Michelle Miller, owner of a horse boarding business, who is now caring for the animals.

When the horses were discovered, their bones nearly poked through the skin, their eyes had a blank, listless glaze and they were hardly recognizable as the well-bred Arabians they apparently are, Ms. Miller said Sunday.

"They were all so dull, just ruined for life," she added. The Humane Society of York County obtained an arrest warrant from Clover Magistrate Gene Farris last week alleging cruelty to animals against the horses' owners, Daniel and Marilyn Beran, formerly of York.

The horses represent "the worst case of animal malnutrition I've ever seen," said the attending veterinarian, Dr. Charles Shackleton of Fort Mill. The yearlings were as small as normal 2-month-olds and some of the older animals were 400 pounds below their normal average weight, which is about 850 pounds.

The Berans, who lived in the area for four years, moved to Loxahatchee, Fla., about a month ago. They had planned to move the horses later, Mrs. Beran said Sunday.

The horses were "just fine" when her family left South Carolina, Mrs. Beran said. "We are being unjustly accused. We hired two fellows to take care of the horses until we could move them — they're poor people and I don't want to get them into any trouble by naming them — but they evidently did not do their job," she said.

I put my arm around her. "It's all right, dear. The man is only doing his job."

"What kind of person would sneak into somebody's home and inform on them as to how much electricity they had used?" she said.

"Hush, he'll hear you and add a couple of hundred kilowatts just for spite."

"I can take him, Dad," my son said. "Let me use karate on him."

"Will you all shut up! He's got us over a barrel. Electric meters never lie."

The man came up whistling. "Give it to us straight," I said. "We can take it."

"You used 1,500 kilowatts of electricity this month," he replied.

My wife almost collapsed. I blanched. "Does the electric company have to know?"

"Yup," he replied, writing on his route book. "I'll see you next month," he said cheerfully.

My wife gazed at him. "I just pray your mother never finds out what you do for a living."

But Humane Society President Janet Sands, Shackleton and Ms. Miller said the damage could not have happened in the week between the Berans' departure and the horses' discovery.

"It would have taken a year to get that skinny," said Ms. Miller, who said the animals have improved at her stables, but will never completely recover in size, strength and spirit, she said.

The horses were discovered in a tin-roofed barn three weeks ago by some prospective buyers of the Berans' 72-acre farm near York.

Mrs. Beran said she and her husband are animal lovers who would never allow their horses to get in the bad condition they were reportedly found in.

"I've spent nights in that barn with those horses with blankets and heaters," she said. "Dehydration can do horrible things to animals in a week. It just tore my heart out to think about them. They need to build up their strength now. That'll take a couple of months and then we'll get them."

Say Sharon 'Rebuffed'

NEW YORK (AP) — Israeli Defense Minister Ariel Sharon recently "demanded" a meeting with President Ronald Reagan and other top U.S. officials to discuss the Lebanon crisis, but his request was rejected, Newsweek magazine says.

The weekly magazine said it learned that Sharon recently wanted to go to Washington for a personal meeting with Reagan, Secretary of State George Shultz and Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger.

The magazine, in its current edition, said Shultz "frostily" vetoed the visit.

Newsweek quoted an unidentified U.S. official as saying Sharon "is just unwelcome here. Not other Israelis, just him. He's done a lot to damage Israel's reputation with this administration."

Last week, Sharon directed an 11-hour bombing attack against west Beirut, enraging President Reagan and some members of the Israeli Cabinet, who said the attacks were dangerous and unnecessary. Those bombings provoked Reagan into personally calling Prime Minister Menachem Begin to demand a halt.

Two Arrests In Winterville

WINTERVILLE — Winterville Police Chief Ed Cox reported that two persons were arrested on different charges early this morning.

Cox said Ptl. H. N. Hickman arrested Sherman Phil Baker of Route 3, Windsor, on charges of possession of marijuana about 2:45 a.m. Bond for Baker was set at $400.

In another arrest, Cox reported, Ozzie Garris of 809 S. Pitt Street, Ayden was charged with possession of lottery tickets and bond was set at $100. The arrest occurred at 1:05 a.m.

Daring Venture

FALMOUTH, England (AP) — The British coast guard says an American has a chance of beating the world record for crossing the Atlantic Ocean, west to east, in the smallest boat — if he reaches England.

Billy Dunlop, 41, of Mechanics Falls, Maine, was spotted Saturday by a Liberian vessel in his 9-foot-1.5-inch boat 570 miles off the coast of Land's End, England, the coast guard reported Sunday.

Tom McClean, a Briton, claimed the record Thursday in his 9-foot-9-inch boat after sailing into Land's End after 51 days at sea. He was the first person to cross the ocean in a boat under 10 feet long. Dunlop left Maine June 13, but had been missing until Saturday.

Fire Claims Burn Victim

LENOIR, N.C. (AP) — A man severely burned in a fire at a county prison farm six years ago died Sunday in a blaze at his house trailer.

A man tentatively identified as Bobby Lee Baker, 45, was killed after apparently dropping a lit cigarette from his hand, which was scarred from the first fire, officials said.

Baker's mother, Zella, 66, escaped Sunday's fire with a burned hand.

Caldwell County Fire Marshal Dell Coffey said Baker may have dropped a burning cigarette near a living room chair shortly before the 1:29 a.m. blaze.

Relatives said a June 30, 1976, fire that killed five McDowell County Prison inmates had burned Baker's hands to the point that he probably couldn't tell if he had a cigarette in his hand or not.

Baker's brother, Roger Baker, said Bobby Lee Baker couldn't not grip anything, a result of his injury from the first fire.

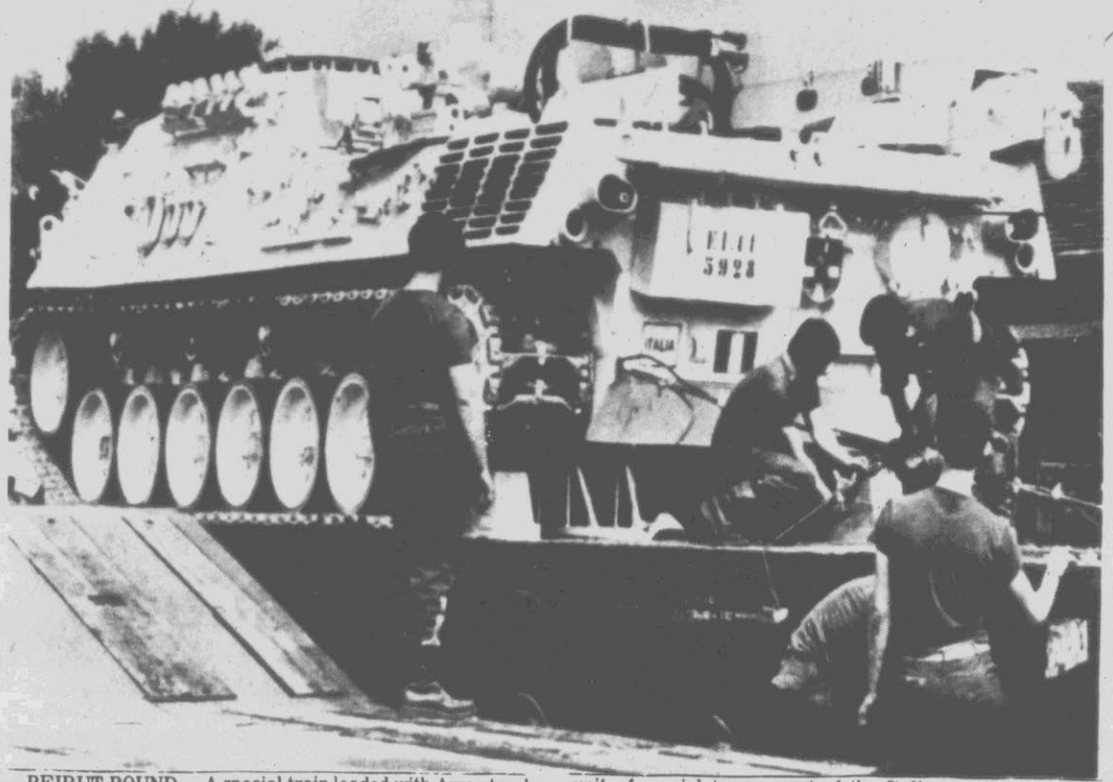

Roger Baker said his brother had been depressed ever since the 1976 fire.

After five months in hospitals and more than 80 operations, the most recent only three weeks ago, Bobby Lee Baker was disfigured, he said.

"He was sort of ashamed to be out in public," Roger Baker said. "He was sort of ashamed of his looks. They say he had been burned worse than some (prisoners) that died."

Roger Baker said his brother was in the Marion prison because he had been arrested for driving under the influence of alcohol.

"But he was a good fella," Roger Baker said. "There was a lot more good in him than was bad."

Soviets Ready Cruise Missile

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union appears ready to start flight testing an advanced naval cruise missile for deployment on a new class of heavy cruiser, on the Kiev-class aircraft carrier and aboard Soviet nuclear-powered Echo II submarines.

The Soviet navy already is ahead of the U.S. Navy in cruise missiles capable of hitting enemy warships hundreds of miles away. The U.S. Navy has yet to deploy missiles with that kind of range on its fighting vessels.

The intelligence sources, who declined to be identified, said in recent interviews there are indications the Soviets are getting ready for a new flight series, probably starting this fall at a naval missile test center.

This center was used for land-based flight tests of the 300-mile range SSN-12 cruise missile, now rated one of the most important weapons in the Soviet fleet.

American analysts said they believe the new missile will be a replacement for the SSN-12, which has been operational for about seven years. After the tests are under way, the experts say they expect to be able to learn the characteristics of the new missile. According to naval specialists, the advanced cruise missile may be intended for deployment on a new class of heavy cruiser, on the Kiev-class aircraft carrier and aboard Soviet nuclear-powered Echo II submarines.

The 5,000-ton Echo sub has been described in a U.S. naval intelligence document as "one of the primary anti-carrier threats."

In a report on Soviet naval power, the U.S. Navy's naval intelligence office said that "cruise missile submarines and missile-armed bombers form the greatest threat to allied naval forces" on the high seas.

A project aimed at placing 300 mile range Tomahawk anti-ship cruise missiles on surface warships and in nuclear powered attack submarines is still in the planning stage.

American analysts said they believe the new missile will be a replacement for the SSN-12, which has been operational for about seven years. After the tests are under way, the experts say they expect to be able to learn the characteristics of

IMPROVING YOUR SMILE

When you're speaking, short, they may give you a face a frowning look.

Which are more visible, your upper or your lower teeth? If you look into a mirror, you'll discover that it's your lower teeth that are more noticeable. Now smile. Surprised? Your upper teeth are more noticeable now.

There's a good chance your dentist can improve upon your smile. He can check to see if your six upper teeth follow the upward curvature of the LOWER lip. This means that the two upper front teeth should be slightly longer than the teeth next to them. If they're too short, they may give you a face a frowning look. If this is the case, an adjustment can be made to improve your appearance. If any of your front teeth are of uneven length, he can contour their shape to make them even and to give the proper accent to your two front teeth, which should be longer. Chipped or broken teeth can be repaired. Any tooth badly damaged by decay can be crowned to protect it and given a natural look.

Why not let your dentist check YOUR smile? You've got everything to gain.

3. THERE WERE NO PRE-PACKAGED FOODS AT DIET CENTER. I lost my weight without having to buy expensive extra foods. I shopped at my regular food store, and my family was able to eat right along with me.

4. THERE WAS NO NEED FOR BODY WRAPS OR RIGID EXERCISE PROGRAMS. By following the well-balanced diet at DIET CENTER, I found my body tightened up naturally. While DIET CENTER does suggest that exercises such as walking be added to my daily routine, no rigid exercise program or body wraps are necessary for inch loss. As my weight came down, the inches seemed to melt away.

5. AT DIET CENTER I DID NOT FEEL DEPRIVED. I was not hungry, I did not experience nervousness or fatigue. I feel great, and my friends tell me that I look great.

SUMMARY: Diet Center offers a program of private, daily counseling by trained professionals - not only have the Diet Center counselors lost weight on the program - but they have the educational and professional backgrounds to qualify them to help others like me to reach their goals.

When I needed to lose 54 pounds, I compared the weight loss programs in the area and I decided to try DIET CENTER because:

1. THERE WERE NO CONTRACTS. I did not have to pay a large sum of money in advance and obligate myself for any specific period of time. I had tried so many plans, and nothing worked for me so naturally I was skeptical. At DIET CENTER seeing my weight come down daily made a believer out of me.

Electronic Spying Gets New Attention

By BARTON REPPERT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The David vs. Goliath confrontation, pitting a Long Island suburban town against the Kremlin over spy activities at a Soviet-owned estate, is focusing renewed attention on the shadowy world of electronic espionage.

Waged by both superpowers on a massive scale, the high-technology struggle to gather "signal intelligence" ranges from tiny bugging devices to sprawling antenna farms, specially outfitted Soviet "trawlers" lurking off U.S. shores and so-called ferret satellites orbiting hundreds of miles in space.

This largely hush-hush war of electronic monitors, code-cracking computers and anonymous technicians provoked a rare outburst of community anger in Glen Cove, N.Y., where the Soviets' 37-acre estate also has generated long-standing complaints over its exemption from local tax rolls.

Alan M. Parente, Glen Cove's feisty 36-year-old mayor, is set to meet this week with State Department officials in an effort to resolve the dispute, which led to banning of Soviet personnel from municipal beaches, tennis courts and a golf course. The Soviets then retaliated by barring U.S. diplomats from a muddy yet popular swimming hole along the Moscow River.

Contending that the beach ban "interferes with the conduct of foreign affairs," the State Department has warned Glen Cove of possible legal action.

Whatever the outcome, there appears to be little likelihood that the episode will put a crimp in Moscow's electronic snooping operations in this country.

Soviet defector Arkady Shevchenko has described upper floors of the 49-room mansion on the Long Island estate — ostensibly a recreational facility for Soviet personnel assigned to the United Nations — as "full of sophisticated equipment... to intercept all conversations, telephone conversations on anything which is going on."

Shevchenko, who was the highest-ranking Soviet official at the United Nations when he defected in 1978, revealed in a recent television documentary on the KGB that at least 15 to 17 technicians were running the Glen Cove operation. Its prime targets were said to include communications of the Grumman Aerospace Corp., and other major defense contractors.

Elsewhere, the Soviets are believed to have advanced electronic surveillance equipment at their U.N. mission and a high-rise residence in New York City, at another vacation retreat located on Maryland's Eastern Shore, their consulate in San Francisco and at the Soviet Embassy just four blocks from the White House.

Soviet "trawlers" have appeared for years off Cape Canaveral, Fla., and Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif., when the United States scheduled rocket tests.

Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., has spoken out on the threat to security as well as the civil liberties of individual Americans posed by the Soviets' capability to intercept long-distance telephone calls transmitted over microwave links.

In an interview late last week, Moynihan said:

"If the Soviets were doing this, and we didn't know it, that would just be an intelligence coup which they were bringing off... But if they do this, and they know that you know it, and they know you won't say anything about it, that invites contempt. And you should never invite the contempt of totalitarians."

Moynihan is pushing legislation that would empower the president to retaliate against electronic snooping activities. He said past steps taken to protect sensitive government communications "left the rest of us open to the airwaves."

A U.S. communications industry official noted that the Soviet consulate in San Francisco "sits right on the access of the important microwave trunks between the East and West coasts. So they can zero in on anything they want coming over those systems."

"There's a lot of commercial intelligence they can glean from those conversations, which they use against us — the wheat markets, the money markets, the gold markets, petroleum and do forth," said the official who asked not to be identified.

In Washington, the roof of the Soviet Embassy bristles with high-frequency antennas, aimed toward the State Department, the Pentagon and CIA communications facilities in Virginia.

The Soviets' new embassy, under construction, is strategically located near the path of a main telephone trunk route for the Eastern Seaboard.

Despite the extent of Soviet eavesdropping, U.S. officials have avoided endorsing the kind of hard-line approach advocated by Moynihan.

Parente, who meets with administration officials Wednesday, said that when he requested information from the FBI, CIA and the State Department about the Glen Cove operation, vaguely worded letters came back "indicating that nothing could be done."

Such a live-and-let-live attitude is hardly surprising in view of America's own commitment to electronic intelligence-gathering.

The supersecret National Security Agency — with an estimated 20,000 employees at its headquarters at Fort Meade, Md. — runs a worldwide network of listening posts using satellites, supersonic SR-71 spy planes, ships and ground stations.

At the embassy in Moscow, more than 20 military personnel are believed to operate electronic gear installed on the top floor and roof.

Press accounts in the early 1970s reported that the Moscow operation had succeeded in picking up radiotelephone conversations between Kremlin offices and top Soviet leaders riding in their limousines.

Tree-Cloning Proves A Boon

By CARL HARTMAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The World Bank, in its annual report on global development, sees a major boom for the tropics in what is called tissue culture. It's a system for producing test-tube clones — identical twins — of trees like oil and coconut palms, and for coffee and rubber as well.

"Tissue cultures could... provide a basis for yield improvements in tropical perennial crops comparable with the impact of the Green Revolution on the cultivation of cereals," said the report, which was released Sunday.

It tells how scientists can start with a bit of leaf or root and produce new plants in the laboratory exactly like the parent plant. The number of plants can be multiplied much more quickly than by older methods, with uniform yields and qualities. Tissue culture can also be used to build in resistance to plant diseases and to adapt plants to specific areas.

One company in Malaysia, it says, plans to market several million oil palms a year by the end of the 1980s, with productivity 30 percent better than the best kinds now available.

But though the so-called "Green Revolution" has benefited millions of farmers it has not yet occurred for a much larger number, the bank's report points out.

Most of the world's farmers still lack the proper climate, soil, rainfall, irrigation, flood control, transport, marketing, research, and price systems, it says.

In the poor countries of Africa — especially those south of the Sahara — the amount of food produced per person actually went down in the 1970s, after a small rise in the 1960s.

The World Bank has invested over $15 billion in farm development during the past five years, giving loans at low rates of interest and some entirely interest-free.

Henry Craven Bridger, 20, of Bladenboro, was killed when the car he was driving left a highway in Bladen County and struck a tree early Saturday morning, the patrol said.

A one-car accident Friday night in Buncombe County claimed the life of a 19-year-old Candler man. The patrol said Henry Allen Elliott was a passenger in a car traveling at a high speed on a rural road west of Asheville. Elliott died when the vehicle ran off a rural road, overturned and struck a tree about 11:40 p.m.

Oren K. Padgett, 51, of Cliffs, died in a three-vehicle accident at 11:35 p.m. Friday in Cleveland County on U.S. 74, just west of Shelby.

The patrol said Padgett was killed when he drove his moped from a private drive into the path of a car traveling west on U.S. 74. Padgett was thrown from his moped and then struck by another vehicle.

Also late Friday, Richard Glenn Hummer, 20, of Lexington, died when his car left a Davidson County road and struck some trees.

Some Food; No Water Or Electricity For Beirut

By JEFFREY ULBRICH
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Three days had gone by without serious shooting, and some fresh fruit and vegetables went on sale for the first time. That was the good news in besieged, devastated west Beirut on Sunday.

But despite major repairs to the badly damaged water system in the Moslem sector of the Lebanese capital, the Israelis apparently still refused to turn on the valve. They also still refused to turn the electricity back on.

Fruit and vegetable vendors on the street were evasive when asked how their stocks got through the Israeli blockade.

"From the east, I don't know exactly where," said one. "They came in trucks and we bought them from them."

Others said the produce was being smuggled from the south - Sidon and Tyre - and the smugglers had to pay as much as $3,000 per truck to the Israelis and their Lebanese Christian allies who control all traffic to and from west Beirut.

One vendor said the food he was selling "probably would be thrown out" in east Beirut, but men and women scrambled to buy up what was available at prices double, triple and quadruple what they were before the Israeli invasion.

Green tomatoes that used to cost 20 to 30 cents a pound were $1. Watermelons were 75 cents a pound, slightly more than double. A dozen eggs was $2, again double the pre-invasion price.

Those with money weren't worried about prices. Those without — and there were many — just shrugged and watched enviously.

Water was another matter.

The Israelis turned it on for two days in the past three weeks, according to Raymond Naimy, a water engineer with UNICEF. Even with the damage to the system due to Israeli shelling, some got through on those days.

Naimy said his crews, in spite of a lack of fittings and other spare parts, had been able to patch together three 12-inch mains and repaired eight serious breaks.

But the main reservoir in west Beirut remains dry and no water was coming into it. Naimy said he telephoned the main pumping station in Israeli-occupied east Beirut and was assured the water was on.

"If it's on, it ought to be getting here," he said.

No progress was being made in persuading the Israelis to turn the electricity back on, according to former Prime Minister Saeb Salam, the Lebanese Moslem leader acting as the go-between in U.S. presidential envoy Philip C. Habib's negotiations with the Palestine Liberation Organization.

John de Salis, head of the International Red Cross mission, said the only real change in west Beirut's situation was the lack of shooting, which allowed his people to move around in relative safety.

He said he still had a constant struggle with the Israelis to get Red Cross convoys of medical supplies and food into Beirut.

Two convoys made it through last week, but only after days of running from one Israeli headquarters to another trying to get permission, often being told to come back the next day or that the person to see was out to lunch.

"We never know from one day to the next whether we will get anything," said de Salis wearily. "How can you plan anything under such conditions? We have trucks (in east Beirut) ready to roll at any time."

Hard Times Blamed In Surge Of Arson Fires; Boston Epidemic

By SUSAN ESSOYAN
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Boston's skyrocketing arson rate, highlighted by a series of Friday morning fires that are gutting Boston's poorer neighborhoods and sapping the fire department's resources, is caused primarily by tough economic times, a crime researcher says.

"There's an arson epidemic," said City Councilman Bruce C. Bollings after seven fires broke out Friday in a three-hour period, pushing the number of blazes in the past two months to more than 40. "It has not gone away, it's gotten worse."

The series of suspicious fires began June 11, when 101 were reported in a 12-hour period. Since then the city has experienced a spate of fires on five other Fridays, the most recent Aug. 13. The fires have caused thousands of dollars damage and overtaxed a fire department already weakened by personnel cutbacks.

"If someone wants to burn a building down in Boston, they can get away with it," said Harvey Schwartz, a lawyer who prosecuted cases for the attorney general's office before entering private practice last winter. "Unless there's some obvious reason to believe the fire is set by or for a landlord, the fire department is so overworked, there's no follow-up."

The fires are started by idle youths, whose numbers probably haven't changed, and by real-estate racketeers and landlords pushed by the economy, authorities say.

"High interest rates are making it harder for landlords to unload condominiums," said University of Massachusetts criminologist Jim Brady. "So now arson is (occurring) in communities that are collapsing."

"Small-property owners facing bankruptcy, unpaid property taxes and falling market values arrange 'friendly' fires to escape bad investments," Brady said. "Or they may simply abandon their buildings, and these ultimately become the prey of vandals."

Banks and insurance companies fuel the arson trend by financing real-estate speculation by racketeers and paying for damage caused by unscrupulous landlords, Brady said.

But insurance company officials say they aren't equipped to discourage arson, and end up hiking premiums to pay for it.

"Arson fits in very largely in the overall picture of why premiums are going up," says Michael Smith, a claims supervisor in the Boston office of the New York-based Continental Insurance Co. "Companies don't want to get involved in investigations because they cost money," said Smith. "If we pay for the investigation and come up empty-handed, that's money down the drain and we still have to come up with the claim."

The number of fires caused by arson or suspected arson has climbed steadily, from 390 in 1978, to 437 in 1979, 530 in 1980 and 597 last year, fire department spokesman Ken Bruynell said. In the first seven months of 1982, 369 arson fires were reported, indicating an annual rate of 633.

Series of fires occurred on June 11, June 25, July 2, July 16, August 6 and August 13, all Fridays.

Meanwhile the total number of building fires has declined from 4,478 in 1979 to 3,062 last year.

The figures underestimate the true number of arson fires because many are classified "undetermined," fire officials say.

Fire department arson squad chief Paul McCarthy says he doesn't know what has caused the concentration of fires on Fridays.

Department spokesman Ken Bruynell said publicity given the fires may have prompted more arsonists to strike on Fridays in hopes they wouldn't be caught.

"...It's more than just coincidence," said Bruynell.

If the arson trend isn't reversed, Brady said, "the logical end can be seen in the gutted ruins of New York's South Bronx."

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) (NCDA) - The North Carolina f.o.b. dock broiler market was steady. Supplies moderate. Demand moderate. Weights desirable. The dock weighted average price for this week is 39.65 for small purchases of plant grade broilers picked up at processing plants. Estimated slaughter today, 1,802,000.

NEW YORK (AP) - Stock prices posted a strong gain today, responding to falling interest rates and the hope of a new merger agreement for Cities Service Co.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed 9.61 to 797.66 by noon.

Gainers led a 6-1 lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

At Friday's close the Federal Reserve cut its discount rate to 10 1/2 percent, marking the third reduction in that influential rate in less than a month.

Many banks quickly responded by lowering their prime lending rates from 15 to 14 1/2 percent, and in a few cases, to 14 percent.

Brokers said Occidental Petroleum's offer to acquire Cities Service late Friday also was an important plus. Many professional stock traders have been facing large losses as a result of Gulf Oil's withdrawal a week earlier of a bid for Cities.

Cities Service shares were delayed in opening. Directors of the company were scheduled to meet today to consider the Occidental offer.

The NYSE's composite index rose .80 to 60.34. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 1.61 at 239.15.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 24.71 million shares at noon, against 18.52 million at the same point Friday.

Tax Hike...

Business would lose one-third of the tax cut that Congress passed last year for corporations. Special tax benefits for insurance and construction companies and for U.S. firms operating in Puerto Rico would be trimmed. Corporations would have to accelerate payment of their taxes and several major deductions would be reduced by 15 percent.

But a cherished benefit - the business-meals deduction that is often derided as the "three-martini lunch" - would be preserved. The conferees rejected a Senate plan limiting the deduction.

The negotiators voted to repeal "safe-harbor leasing" at the end of 1983. This provision encourages unprofitable companies to sell their unusable tax breaks to moneymaking firms.

The conference committee tried to make the election-year tax increase more palatable by attaching $1.9 billion worth of extra federal benefits for the nation's unemployed. Additional benefits lasting from six to 10 weeks would be available from Sept. 12 through next March 31 for workers whose regular 26 weeks of basic benefits and 13 weeks of extended compensation have been exhausted.

Condemnation Often Costly

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) - Property owners in North Carolina who do not want to accept condemnation of their land by city governments may find it expensive to fight city hall, say attorneys who deal with the state's law of eminent domain.

Attorneys say the law gives cities great leeway in choosing the right place for a public facility, and it is a property owner's burden to prove in court that a city abused its power.

City officials contend they must have the power to take private property for public use, but they do feel obligated to provide reasonable compensation for taking the land.

The heirs of W.B. Elliott and the city of Winston-Salem are involved in such a dispute. The city plans to build police and fire department headquarters on the site of Elliott's 54-year-old locksmith shop.

The Elliotts have rejected the city's offer of $53,100 for land. Unless the Elliotts and the city agree on a price and settle their dispute, city officials say they'll ask the Board of Aldermen to condemn the land.

Local attorneys say the Elliotts may have no choice in the matter.

"Anytime you're dealing with a discretionary power of a public entity you're going to have a hard time showing abuse," said one attorney who asked not to be identified. "You get into the standard question of 'this is my place and the city ought not to be able to do this.'"

Cities have discretion in choosing sites to condemn but state law sets out technical requirements that must be followed. A Superior Court judge would decide the issues of whether the proceeding is proper and what property would be affected by the condemnation.

To file for condemnation, a city deposits with the clerk of Superior Court a check for the amount that the city's appraiser has decided the land is worth. Then there could be a hearing by court-appointed commissioners who listen to evidence and decide what the land is worth; then, if either side appeals, a trial in Superior Court to let a jury decide how much the land is worth.

Appraisers agree they will often disagree about the value of the same property. Lawyers and some city officials privately say property owners often fare better by a jury trial. But they note that even if a jury sets a better price for the land, the owner still has the cost of his attorney.

William S. Mitchell, a Winston-Salem attorney, said the law does not protect a landowner from all the losses he may incur if his property is condemned. Mitchell said the law can be especially harsh if condemnation leads to the disruption of business.

"It's a cost to the man that has to bear it, but there is nothing in the law that permits recovery of it ... in special instances, a property owner can suffer substantial damages for which there is no recovery," he said.

The corn earworm is a yearly pest of field and sweet corn, peanuts, soybeans, vegetable crops and ornamentals in eastern North Carolina. There are normally three generations and a partial fourth but only the second and third ones cause enough damage to be considered an economic pest.

It pays to know certain things about the corn earworm. It can feed and survive successfully on many different crops. It can literally lay hundreds of eggs and it is a strong flier that can cover considerable distances. Hot weather enables the insect to complete its life cycle and develop from an egg to a moth in about one week on soybeans. The fact that it feeds heavily on soybean pods and foliage of soybeans and peanuts means that it is essential for farmers to monitor populations of the corn earworm during August in North Carolina.

The corn earworm overwinters usually as a pupa (a resting stage between the worm stage and the moth stage.) These first generation worms attack corn shortly after it emerges and feed in the whorl of the corn. The ragged leaves unfold and the worm is called the "shatterworm" at this time because of the appearance of feeding damage.

The second generation of the year is found primarily in the tips of field corn and sweet corn ears and this feeding site gives the insect its common name, the corn earworm. Usually there is only one worm found per ear. This is because the worms are cannibalistic and only the strongest survive.

Corn provides an excellent breeding site and with almost two million acres of corn in North Carolina, obviously many corn earworms are produced. In late July, the second generation is finished feeding in corn, and the adult stage, the moth, leaves corn to seek out green foliage to lay eggs.

The third generation of corn earworms is the most damaging one and the one that requires close attention. Corn earworms feed on the green tissues of soybean and peanut plants. Because they consume soybean pods, they can drastically reduce soybean yields. Peanuts and soybeans can tolerate a surprising amount of defoliation before a yield loss occurs.

The fourth generation of corn earworm is not a pest because of heavy egg losses and larval mortality due to poor egg-laying sites and adverse weather in late September and early October.

It is possible that August of this year may not have as heavy a corn earworm problem as in some years. Soybeans have a thick canopy of leaves which discourages moth flight and egg-laying. Also, a thick canopy encourages diseases of the corn earworm and abundant heavy rains may actually wash eggs and larvae off the soybeans.

Persons wishing to learn how to sample a soybean field to determine whether or not to spray for corn earworm control can attend a soybean insect workshop at 3:30 p.m. Aug. 18 at Station House Fire Department.

Participants will travel to the farm of Mike Hegans where insect scouting techniques will be demonstrated. Continuing certification credit will be offered to pesticide license holders in the category of ground applicator, dealer, aerial applicator and research demonstration.

ECU's Long Sets Weight Lifting Marks

East Carolina University offensive guard Terry Long set strength records for the Pirates in both the bench press and the hang clean as the ECU veterans went through strength tests yesterday.

The upperclassmen were to have gone through strength tests today.

Long, who weighed only a 160 pounds as a senior in high school before joining the U.S. Army and started lifting weights, bench pressed 500 pounds and hang cleaned 441, both of which are Pirate strength records.

Long, a 6-0, 279-pound junior from Columbia, S.C., was one of 99 veterans to report back to ECU as the Pirates prepare for preseason practice, which begins Tuesday morning when the team will go through four-a-day practices.

The 99 veterans combined with 47 newcomers who reported earlier last week to give the Pirates 146 players on their roster as they try to record their first winning season under third-year coach Ed Emory.

"I'm really pleased with the condition of the returning upperclassman," said Emory.

Emory said he did have one concern: the condition of starting linebacker Mike Grant. Grant, a 6-1, 226-pound senior from Charleston, S.C., had knee surgery in early summer to correct a continuing problem with his knee.

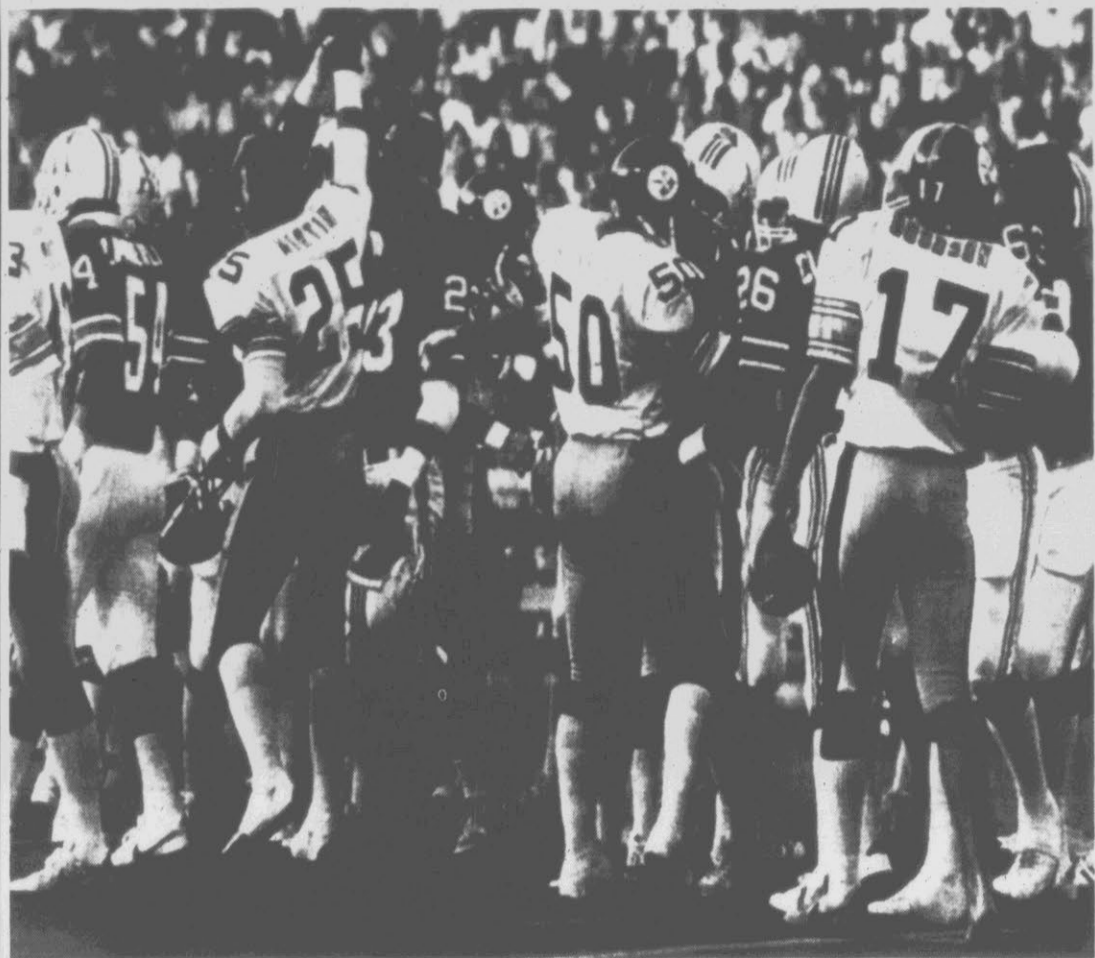

Grant is working out but there remains the question of whether his recovery is far enough along so he can play football at this point or if he needs more time before returning to full contact.

Grant led ECU in tackles last year with 132. He is a transfer from Chowan Junior College.

The Pirates, who were 5-6 last season, open their 1982 season Sept. 11 when they travel to North Carolina State.

ECU's first home game is Sept. 18 when the Pirates play host to East Tennessee State.

SHOW OF SOLIDARITY

Broncos Only Holdout In Unity Display

NFL Puts Its Solidarity On Line

By The Associated Press

When National Football League players put their solidarity on the line with a show of hands, only the Denver Broncos kept it from being unanimous.

Despite warnings of fines, the first 12 preseason games from Thursday night to Saturday night saw the opposing teams meet at midfield for symbolic handshakes.

"It is simply an act to signify solidarity," said New York Jets running back Bruce Harper.

But in the 13th game, between the Los Angeles Rams and Denver, the only handshaking was during the traditional captains' meeting before the kickoff.

The Rams said they intended to go through with the gesture backing the players association in its bargaining with the league's Management Council, but the Broncos, whose player representative retired last week, did not.

Denver's Barney Chavous, temporarily filling in as the team's representative since Billy Thompson retired, said, "A few players got together and basically it was 'no.' We will vote for a representative next week and then things will be cleared up a little bit more."

"We voted yes," said Los Angeles player representative Carl Ekern.

Los Angeles veteran Jack Youngblood added, "We just couldn't make connections with the Broncos on it."

The Broncos have had several outspoken anti-union players, including veteran quarterback Craig Morton, who was not in Los Angeles for the preseason game, won by Denver 33-20.

Gene Upshaw, president of the players' association, criticized Morton in a June 11 letter and hinted that the quarterback might be punished in a game because of his anti-union sentiment.

But today, Upshaw planned to meet with the Broncos at their training camp at Greeley, Colo., in an effort to quash anti-union talk among the players.

Denver center Keith Bishop was the only player at the NFLPA convention in Albuquerque, N.M., to vote against striking.

There were also individual players who stayed on the sidelines while their teammates and opposing players met at midfield.

Curtis Dickey and Barry Krauss of Baltimore did not shake hands with the New York Giants and Tampa Bay's Matt Petzelka did not meet the Philadelphia Eagles. Eight Miami rookies and veteran Bob Kuechenberg — the only non-union player on the Dolphins — also didn't participate.

Fan reaction was mixed in the 12 games that saw the players take part in handshaking demonstrations.

On the field Saturday, it was the Raiders 17, San Francisco 14; Cleveland 17 Detroit 16; Pittsburgh 24, New England 20; Atlanta 20, Minnesota 17; Baltimore 19, New York Giants 14; Tampa Bay 35, Philadelphia 7; Green Bay 21, New York Jets 19; Miami 24, Washington 7; Buffalo 14, Dallas 10. Chicago is at San Diego in the only game tonight.

Record-Breaking Norris Wins Open

WETHERSFIELD, Conn. (AP) — Tim Norris' first victory on the PGA Tour will be remembered for more than being the ice-breaker for the 24-year-old who has been touring for less than two years.

His 259 total was a record for the Sammy Davis Jr.-Greater Hartford Open, and only two strokes shy of an all-time PGA tournament record set by Mike Souchak in the 1955 Texas Open.

"I would have liked to have broken that record," he said Sunday after his six-stroke victory. "Maybe next year, maybe next week. They say you're first win's the hardest."

Norris set two-, three- and four-round records on the par-71 Wethersfield Country Club course en route to collecting the $54,000 first prize — more money than he has won since joining the tour in early 1981.

Tied for second were newly crowned PGA champion Ray Floyd and Hubert Green.

Green, who had been the defending champion, said the 19-under par 265 he and Floyd shot "wasn't bad."

But it wasn't low enough to catch Norris. "I kept waiting for him to fall down and break his leg," said Green. "Maybe he's got four or five legs, I don't know. He sure showed us. I want to shake his hand and get his autograph."

Norris' two-total of 127, three-round 193 and final 259 — 25 under par — were all the lowest scores shot in the 31-year history of the GHO, played on the shortest course on the tour, 6,534 yards.

The final day of the tournament, Sunday, the Fresno, Calif. native shot a 5-under-par 66 on eight birdies, including four in a row, and three bogeys. Norris was 27 under after 14 holes, but shot bogeys on two of the final four holes.

"He faltered a bit toward the end," said Floyd, who won last week's PGA championship in Tulsa, Okla. "But, he really played a solid round of golf. He certainly is to be congratulated."

Floyd, who was as close as one stroke off the lead after the first round, had trouble putting and dropped 10 shots behind Norris midway through the final round.

"I think it was a respectable showing for me after coming off a major championship win and I'm pleased with my finish," said Floyd.

Leonard Hurls Royals Into 1st

By The Associated Press
Dennis Leonard is back in business ... and the Kansas City Royals are back in first place.

Leonard's business is winning baseball games — 120 in his first seven seasons. But he hasn't had much of a chance since May 21 when he suffered two fractured fingers on his pitching hand thanks to a line drive off the bat of Texas' Buddy Bell.

After some rehabilitation in the minors, Leonard returned to action with the Royals last Monday in a no-decision outing. He got back in the winner's circle Sunday, allowing four hits in eight innings as Kansas City trimmed the Detroit Tigers 6-1. KC's 16th triumph in its last 22 games, coupled with California's 3-2 loss to Oakland, put the Royals one-half game ahead of the Angels in the American League West.

"The slider broke better today than it has since I got hurt," Leonard said. "Then the curve started coming around, too. It's a good feeling. I feel I have to help if we're going to win the championship."

"I feel strong, almost too strong. I've just got to work a lot on the sidelines now to get the energy out. From not throwing, a lot of times I find I go in and overthrow."

Leonard, 6-3, pitched no-hit ball for 5-3 innings before Detroit's Lou Whitaker singled sharply. The only run Leonard yielded was on Glenn Wilson's seventh-inning homer. Meanwhile, the Royals scored four times against Jerry Ujdur in the third, with two runs crossing on Willie Wilson's double. Jerry Martin, who opened the third inning with a double, hit a two-run homer in the ninth.

A's 3, Angels 2
Mitchell Page, leading off the bottom of the ninth inning against Dave Goltz, broke a tie with his second home run of the season and second in two days.

"I was told that if the third baseman was playing back, I should try to bunt my way on," Page said. "But I got a high fast ball, not a good pitch to bunt. When I hit it, I had a good feeling it would be gone."

Rickey Henderson's 109th stolen base — it came on a pitchout — keyed a two-run third inning and left him nine away from Lou Brock's single-season record of 118. California scored in the first inning on Brian Downing's leadoff homer and tied the score 2-2 in the ninth when Reggie Jackson doubled and came around on two fly balls.

The Oakland Coliseum crowd of 40,634 enabled the A's to set a single-season club attendance record with 1,319,884 fans in 57 home dates. They broke the mark of 1,311,761 set in last year's strike-shortened season.

White Sox 6, Yankees 4
Steve Kemp's two-run double drove in the tying and lead runs as the White Sox jumped on New York relief ace Rich Gossage for four runs in the eighth inning. Gossage walked pinch-hitter Jerry Hairston and Tony Bernazard to open the eighth and they advanced on a passed ball.

Tom Paciorek struck out, but Greg Luzinski beat out a topped roller to third, scoring Hairston. Kemp then delivered his double off the left-center field wall to score Bernazard and pinch-runner Rudy Law. Kemp scored on a single by Carlton Fisk.

Blue Jays 3, Brewers 2
Ernie Whitl singled home the winning run with two outs in the ninth inning and Jim Clancy scattered six hits over eight innings. Alfredo Griffin led off the Toronto ninth with a walk off Jim Slaton and was sacrificed to second. One out later, Whitl lined his game-winning single between short and third. Milwaukee scored on Gorman Thomas' 32nd homer in the second inning and Robin Yount's 20th in the sixth.

Red Sox 8, Orioles 0
Held to an infield hit for six innings by Scott McGregor, Boston paraded 14 batters to the plate in the seventh and scored all eight runs. Mike Torrez, who was hit in the head by a line drive in the fourth inning, and Bob Stanley combined on a six-hitter as the Red Sox pulled within 4½ games of Milwaukee in the AL East. McGregor handcuffed the Red Sox until Tony Perez and Carney Lansford started the seventh with singles. One out later, Reid Nichols doubled home the first run. After Gary Allenson was walked intentionally to load the bases, Glenn Hoffman rapped a two-run single. Hoffman took second on the throw to the plate and Tim Stoddard reloaded the bases with an intentional walk to Jerry Remy, but Dwight Evans' two-run double made it 5-0.

Jim Rice also was purposely passed, tying the major league record for most intentional walks in an inning with three, but Wade Boggs, Lansford and Dave Stapleton all delivered RBI singles. Mariners 10, Twins 2
Todd Cruz hit a grand slam home run off Pete Redfern to highlight a seven-run sixth inning as Seattle sent winless Terry Felton to the 15th loss of his major league career.

Felton, 0-12 this season, extended his major league record to 15 consecutive losses at the start of a career despite allowing only two hits in 51-3 innings. Winner Jim Beattie pitched a five-hitter.

Indians 6, Rangers 4
Rick Manning's two-run single started a five-run outburst in the sixth inning as Cleveland snapped a six-game losing streak. Manning's single tied the score 3-3 and Larry Milbourne's single put the Indians ahead 4-3. The other two runs of the inning came on Miguel Dilone's single and Toby Harrah's sacrifice fly.

Unlike WFL, This New League Looks Like A Sure Winner

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

Take a look at your television screen and imagine it as the mouth of some multi-tentacled monster — the mouth always open, ravenously hungry with an insatiable appetite.

Then you can understand why Chester R. "Chet" Simmons and his gang of established business tycoons are willing to bet that people will watch football from March through June.

Simmons, a longtime TV sports impresario, is commissioner of the new U.S. Football League, which is joining America's glut of games next spring — not going head-to-head with the rich and powerful National Football League but providing fans a rich appetizer.

Unlike the late World Football League, this one looks like a sure winner.

It has locked in 12 of the nation's top commercial centers, from New York to Los Angeles, Chicago to Birmingham. The franchises have been dealt to businessmen with sound Wall Street credentials. It has begun to assemble such top coaches as George Allen, John Ralston and Chuck Fairbanks.

It has set up a slick, classy operation, already making accommodations with colleges, assuring them there will be no tampering with undergraduates and even providing shots at a degree for those leaving school early.

But these aren't the basic reasons the enterprise appears certain not only to exist but also prosper.

It will help feed the big-eyed monster and, as everyone knows, the monster shows his gratitude with cascades of big bucks.

Why was Chet Simmons named the new league's commissioner instead of some prominent football alumnus such as, let's say, Bud Wilkinson?

Easy, Simmons is a talking buddy of that big box in the living room.

He was former president of NBC Sports from which he went on to become president and chief executive officer of ESPN, the cable entertainment and sports network.

At NBC, he was instrumental in developing the TV package for the American Football League which forced a merger with the NFL.

"Let's face it, we're in the entertainment business," Simmons said, taking a break from a pile of business papers on his office desk over the week-end.

"Cable TV is burgeoning. Its future scope is almost beyond comprehension. The NFL is locked into five years with the networks. Ours is a chance to capitalize on the cable network boom."

Showing on weekends and in prime time, the new pro league will be bucking the basketball and hockey windups plus the start of big league baseball, but Simmons sees no problem.

"Market surveys show that fans don't feel that the current 16-game pro football season is satisfying," he said. "Seventy-six per cent of the households questioned said they would watch a televised football game during that period."

The around-the-clock cable networks are panting for interesting live events. Some have had to resort to tractor races and 1975 Notre Dame football games to keep action on the screen.

Besides, a live football game would be a welcome relief to giddy sit-coms with canned laughter, re-runs and old Westerns.

The USFL has signed a contract with ESPN to show prime time games on Saturdays and Mondays, a deal with ABC (reportedly $20 to $24 million) for Sunday afternoon games plus the playoffs and still another arrangement with Canadian TV, dove-tailing with the Canadian League.

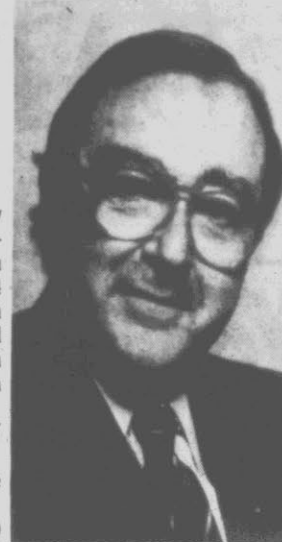

This excludes local TV commitments.

Where will the talent come from?

"Colleges graduate 45,000 football players every year," Simmons said. "Only 240 are drafted by the NFL. We feel, with our earlier (January) draft, we can get our share of the cream, but top class material won't be scarce."

"Every team will have 600 names from which to choose — eligible college draftees, disenchanted NFL players and others who may have retired prematurely."

To provide a home rooting interest, a territorial draft system has been devised which will give each team the pick of the talent from three colleges in its area.

Chet Simmons

Birmingham, for instance, could poke around a pool of graduates from Alabama, Auburn and Mississippi; Los Angeles from Southern Cal and Long Beach, Chicago from Notre Dame and Northwest-

Chris Bahr broke a 7-7 tie with a 24-yard field goal in the third period and Marc Wilson set up a fourth-quarter touchdown by Greg Pruitt with a 76-yard pass play to Cleo Montgomery in the Raiders' defeat of San Francisco.

Cleo Miller scampered 8 yards for a touchdown in the fourth quarter and Matt Bahr added the conversion as the Browns edged the Lions.

Frank Collins scored on a 1-yard run with 2:58 remaining as the Steelers rallied to beat the Patriots before a capacity crowd of 93,251 in Knoxville, Tenn.

Rookie running back Michael Morton scored a pair of fourth-quarter touchdowns on runs of 9 and 80 yards to lead the Buccaneers past the Eagles.

Rich Campbell threw a 4-yard touchdown pass to Paul Coffman, while Eddie Lee Ivery and rookie Willard Reeves both scored on a 3-yard plunge, leading the Packers past the Jets.

Howard Jackson scored on a 1-yard touchdown run with 13 seconds remaining following a 45-yard interception return by linebacker Ricky Jones, giving the Colts their victory over the Giants.

Mike Moroski's 19-yard touchdown pass to Reggie Brown with 4:38 remaining gave the Falcons their triumph over the Vikings.

Jim Jensen tossed a 14-yard scoring pass and Andra Franklin scored the go-ahead touchdown on a 2-yard run as the Dolphins rolled past the Redskins.

Matt Robinson's 2-yard touchdown pass to halfback Arthur Whittington with 39 seconds to play carried the Bills past the Cowboys.

Quarterback Mark Herrmann hooked up with Steve Watson on an 81-yard touchdown play to ignite a 17-point third-quarter rally that boosted the Broncos over the Rams.

Importance Of ADs Increases As Programs Grow

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Athletic directors in the Atlantic Coast Conference say they need the business acumen of a J. Paul Getty as well as the athletic knowhow of a Tom Landry.

"Six or seven years ago, athletic coffers were filled with milk and honey," said Virginia athletic director Dick Shultz. "You could have some slippage and still come out smelling like a rose. Now athletic directors have to be good managers to make ends meet."

That's because ACC sports have developed such big budgets and big staffs, says Shultz, 52, who used to operate a home-building business and was involved in an aircraft-leasing firm.

Athletic directorships used to be a reward "for the good old coach who was sort of put out to pasture," he said.

"Then everything started tightening and schools realized that offices were not being managed efficiently," he said. "That's when we got people with business backgrounds."

Athletic directors today must manage budgets as high as $8 million a year. Athletic department staffs have swelled to as many as 100 members. The demand for new and improved facilities has forced officials to expand fund-raising. And rising costs have forced departments to become as cost-effective as corporations.

The ACC still has not had an athletic director without experience in competitive athletics, either as player or coach. Shultz is a former player and manager for St. Louis Cardinals' minor league baseball teams.

North Carolina athletic director John Swofford, 33, was a quarterback and defensive back on the Tar Heels' football roster from 1969 to 1971. But he also is a member of the board of directors of North Carolina National Bank in Chapel Hill.

Swofford says the Tar Heel athletic department budget for the 1982-83 fiscal year is $8,077,611 — up more than $400,000 from last year. The final budget represents the sum of 40 individual budgets, one for each of the school's 26 sports and 14 other departments.

"The first step is to project our revenue for the year, from TV, ticket sales, student fees," he said. "Then we get input from each of the individual budgets. Next we consolidate and compare those totals against our projected revenues. We must present a balanced budget."

"We've been able to operate generally in the black," Swofford said. "We have about $600,000 in reserves to protect against a bad year. Fortunately, we haven't had a bad year lately."

Maryland's Dick Dull, a former attorney and a javelin thrower, says athletic directors must have been involved in athletics as well as business.

"A person in this job has to understand athletics," said Dull, 37. "He can't be just a dollars-and-cents type. We have that competitiveness in us. Our job is to help athletes and coaches compete. And we've stood in their shoes, so we know what they're going through."

Nevertheless, Duke's Tom Butters says he spends about half his time on fund-raising activities — and must travel to contact Duke's prominent and wealthy alumni scattered across the country.

"We can't continue to live hand-to-mouth," said Butters, who expects his budget to be $5.7 million this year. "You have to base your well-being on fund-raising."

Palmer Wins Seniors Tourney

DENVER (AP) — Arnold Palmer took the lead with three straight birdies on the back nine for a 1-stroke victory in the $150,000 Denver Post Champions of Golf seniors tournament.

Meanwhile, in Portmarnock, Ireland, Irishman John O'Leary shot a 1-over-par 73 to win the $150,000 Irish Open golf championship.

O'Leary finished at 1-under-par 287, one stroke ahead of Englishman Maurice Bembridge.

Daniel Takes Win No. 5 Of Year

JERICHO, N.Y. (AP) — Success will never go to the head of Beth Daniel, who is the first player to win five titles on the LPGA tour this year.

She captured the $125,000 WUI Classic Sunday by eight strokes with a tourney record 12-under-par 276, despite shooting a final round 73.

Daniel, who had 68, 68, and 67 for her previous rounds, earned $18,750 to boost her total to $199,298 for the year. She owns the one year record, $231,000, earned in 1980 when she was player of the year. Last year, the 25-year-old Charlotte, S.C. native collected $206,977.

Ayako Okamoto, 31, a leading performer on the Japanese LPGA tour registered a 68 to gain a share of second place at 284 with little-known Martha Hansen, who had a 69. Lynn Adams, another non-winner on the tour was one over at 73 for a fourth place total of 286. Pam Geitzen (71) and Barbara Barrow (73) tied for fifth at 287.

"I'll never let my success interfere with my goals on the tour," explained Daniel, who broke the tournament record of 279, established by Debbie Austin in 1977 and equalled two years later by Judy Rankin when Beth was runnerup.

"I haven't won the U.S. Open, I haven't won the LPGA Championship and I haven't won the Dinah Shore. Don't worry, I'll never have an incentive problem out there."

Not even after earning over $200,000 for a third straight

Smith Leads Giants To Within 4 Games Of L.A.

By The Associated Press

Last winter, Reggie Smith had decided to quit baseball. He didn't and, thanks in great part to the 15-year veteran, the San Francisco Giants haven't quit either.

The surprising Giants climbed back within four games of the first-place Los Angeles Dodgers in the National League West Sunday with an 8-6 victory as Smith collected three hits against his former teammates. He had help from Darrell Evans and Jeff Leonard, who both belted two-run homers as the Giants won the final two games of the four-game series after being punted on Thursday and Friday.

"We're a good ballclub and we can play well against anybody," said Smith, who had announced his retirement following last season, when he sat on the bench as the Dodgers won the World Series. "The split, especially after we lost the first two games, could serve to be a morale booster."

Which is precisely what Smith has been for the Giants, whose lineup is heavily laced with inexperienced players.

"I was going to retire after last year," said Smith, who has 21 hits in his last 41 at-bats and is hitting .315. "(Manager) Frank Robinson and (coach) Don Buford talked me out of it. I thought just my presence alone would help and could provide a little more depth and strength."

Evans thinks Smith has made a tremendous difference. "Reggie's been unconscious," said Evans, who homered in the third. "And we've all played well for two months. We felt we could play with these guys, and we weren't down after the first two losses."

The Giants got the split by beating Dodgers ace Fernando Valenzuela for the fourth straight time. They built an 8-1 lead, then held on as the Dodgers scored twice in the eighth and three times in the ninth before Steve Garvey fanned with the tying run on base to end it.

"We've been very fortunate against Fernando," said Robinson. "He's tough. He might beat us the next four times in a row."

"But we no longer worry about what the Dodgers or other contenders will be doing. We have to be concerned about what we're doing."

The Giants have won 12 of their last 14, while Los Angeles, which had played 18 consecutive days before being off today, has taken 14 of 18.

Padres 6, Braves 5

After Chris Chambliss' solo homer in the ninth tied the game, the Braves once again fell victim to mistakes and ill fortune. Terry Kennedy bed off the 10th with a single and center fielder Dale Murphy lost Sixto Lezcano's routine fly ball in the sun. The ball fell for a double and Luis Salazar followed with a game-winning single.

"A ball like that usually goes into the sun and comes out," said Murphy, "but this one didn't. I waited it out and said that maybe this one will hit me in the glove."

Astros 3, Reds 1

An expected battle of veteran pitching stars fizzled when Cincinnati's Tom Seaver hurt his shoulder and left the game after facing only three batters. Seaver gave up doubles to Dickie Thon and Terry Puhl, then walked Ray Knight on four pitches.

Phil Garner rapped an RBI single off reliever Charlie Leibbrandt and Houston was on its way behind Don Sutton, who struck out 10 and gave up five hits in eight innings.

Thon, whose 21-game hitting streak ended Saturday, went 4-for-5 with three doubles and three runs-scored to pace a 15-hit attack.

"He's a guy who's a real legend and has taught us all some lessons about pitching," Sutton said of Seaver. "It's sad to get the win at the expense of somebody who's hurt, especially somebody I respect."

Seaver, 5-13, said it was the same problem that briefly knocked him out of the rotation earlier this season.

"I don't know where I am right now. I just have to go back and start over as far as this rehabilitation (is concerned)," said Seaver, who admitted he might not be able to pitch again this season.

Cardinals 12-5, Pirates 5-2

Keith Hernandez paced St. Louis' sweep, driving in three runs in the first game, then managing three hits and two RBI in the nightcap.

Southpaw Dave LaPoint held Pittsburgh to five hits for eight innings of the second contest after Steve Mura had hurled a complete game in the opener. John Milner belted the 10th grand slam homer of his career in the first game.

The Cardinals won four of five in Pittsburgh and increased their lead over second-place Philadelphia to a full game in the East.

Phillies 3, Expos 1

Mike Schmidt, who makes a habit of beating the Expos — his home run in the next-to-last game of 1980 clinched the division for the Phillies over Montreal — kept it up. Expos Manager Jim Fanning chose to pitch to Schmidt with two outs in the ninth and Pete Rose on second, and Schmidt crashed his 28th career homer against Montreal and sixth against Steve Rogers.

"I don't have a great average against the Expos this year or in my career," said Schmidt. "I pick my spots against them, I guess."

The teams' four-date series drew 211,600, the third most in regular-season play in major-league history. Sunday's crowd of 57,694 was the largest for a single game since Olympic Stadium opened in 1977.

Mets 5-5, Cubs 4-6

George Foster knocked in a run and made a game-saving catch with the bases loaded in the ninth inning of the opener, then Leon Durham led Chicago to the second-game triumph with two homers. Durham's line drive to left field in the eighth inning of a tie game got by Foster's backhanded attempt to catch it and Durham circled the bases with the winning run.

"I saw the ball get by him," said Durham, who also hit a two-run shot in the second game. "It was a home run all the way. The coach just kept me going."

Gerulaitis Opens Lendl To Win Open

TORONTO (AP) — Vitas Gerulaitis loves the nightlife, but this year he wants to win even more.

The fun-loving 28-year-old New Yorker did just that Sunday, capturing the Player's International tennis singles championship with a surprising 4-6, 6-1, 6-3 victory over two-time defending champion Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia.

After the match, Gerulaitis admitted he wasted last year, enjoying himself instead of concentrating on tennis, but he has made amends in 1982 as his Association of Tennis Professionals ranking has risen back to fifth after slipping as low as 19th.

"I started to feel bad losing to guys I use to beat 6-0, 6-0," said Gerulaitis. "I didn't have anything to complain about, though, because I had a blast last year."

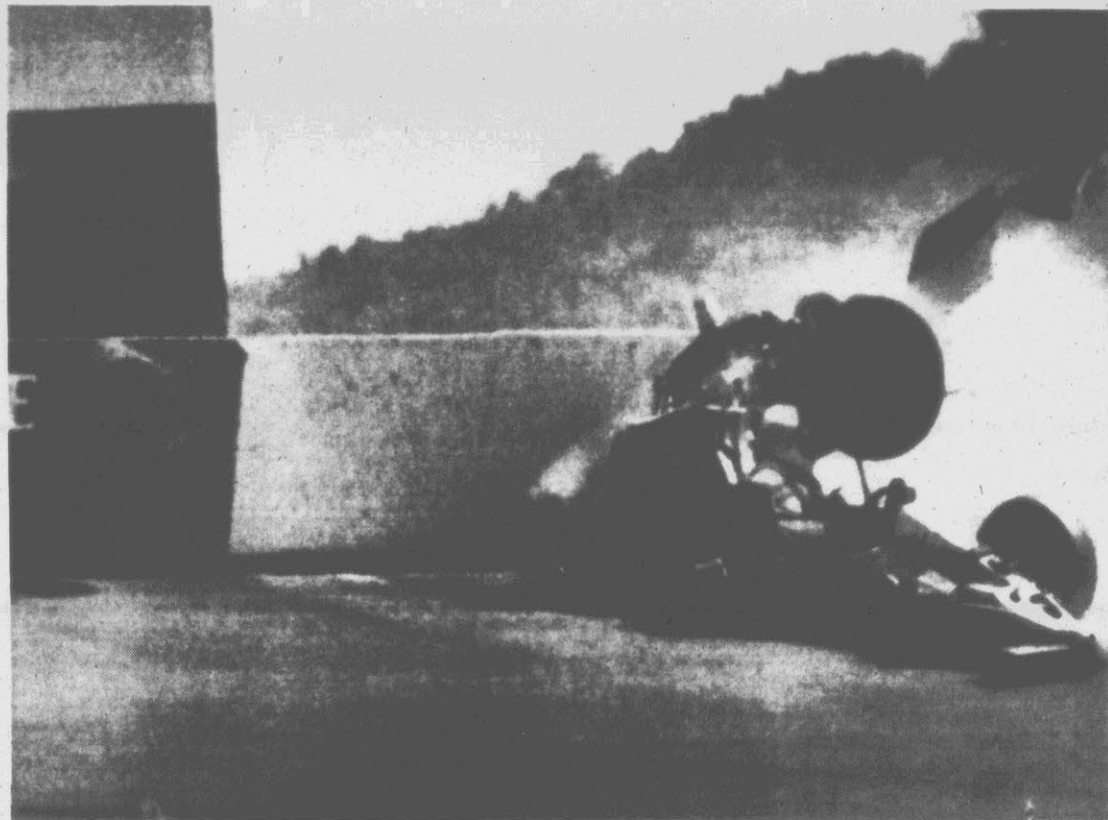

"I just decided I enjoyed it more to be playing well. The time will come in two or three years when I won't be able to do things as well, so I might as well take advantage of it now."

The fourth-seeded Gerulaitis saw Jimmy Connors, who at 30 won his first Wimbledon in eight years, as an inspiration. Coincidentally, it was Connors that Gerulaitis bypassed when the Wimbledon champion defaulted their semifinal match Saturday because of a sore back.

Lendl had advanced to the final with a 6-4, 6-4 victory over top-seeded John McEnroe.

It was Gerulaitis' third career victory over Lendl — who had beaten him in the Volvo Grand Prix Masters final and in a World Championship of Tennis event in Genoa, Italy this year — in five meetings.

The loss was disappointing for Lendl after he swept through to the final without losing a set and dropping only 24 games overall. It was also only his 16th loss in 121 matches this year.

Rutherford Crashes

Pocono Mears' 3rd Victory Of Season

LONG POND, Pa. (AP) — Gordon Johncock walked disconsolately along the third-turn guard rail, holding his driving helmet at his side, as Rick Mears charged by in his roaring Ford-powered Penske PC-10 racer.

Mears was on his way to the finish line on the last lap of a victory in Sunday's Domino's Pizza Pocono 500, a race which began with Johncock on the verge of what could have been the greatest achievement of his long Indy-car career.

But, while the 46-year-old Johncock, the winner of this year's Indianapolis 500 and Michigan 500, watched the 30-year-old Mears take the checkered flag at Pocono International Raceway, his hopes of winning the Triple Crown of Indy-car racing became just a memory.

Mears, the defending CART-PPG Indy-Car World Series champion, led 141 of the 200 laps around the tough 2.5-mile Pocono tri-oval, but it was Johncock for whom most of the estimated 50,000 spectators appeared to be rooting throughout the race.

And, despite an early problem with brakes and the obvious dominance of Mears, the tenacious Johncock still was running in second place, just 3.1 seconds behind when his car's gearbox broke six laps from the end.

That brought out the ninth and last caution flag of the day and, after the green flag came back out with two laps to go, Mears easily beat Penske teammate Kevin Cogan to the finish — a victory nowhere near as dramatic as Johncock's .16-second triumph over Mears at Indy.

It was the third victory of the season for Mears, matching Johncock's season total and vaulting the younger driver past Johncock into the season point by six points, 191-185, with five races remaining.

Washington—Not USC—Picked To Come Away With Pac-10 Title

By The Associated Press

The University of Southern California always seems to be the team to beat in the Pacific-10 Conference football race. That's not the Trojans' role this year, however, for a couple of reasons.

The first is probation. Southern Cal was cited last spring by the NCAA for rule violations, and thus is ineligible for either the conference title or postseason play.

The second — and more important — is the University of Washington.

Coach Don James has guided the Huskies to two straight Rose Bowl appearances, and they are in a good position to make it three consecutive trips to Pasadena with 17 starters back from the club that overwhelmed Iowa 28-0 last New Year's Day.

"We're not talking about a national championship or conference championship, but of course every red-blooded American would like to be No. 1," said James.

The Huskies, 10-2 a year ago, don't appear to have a particularly difficult schedule, but they must face UCLA and Arizona State, the teams that beat them last season.

Among the Washington returnees are running back Jacques Robinson, who rushed for 142 yards and two touchdowns against Iowa to become the first freshman most valuable player in a Rose Bowl game. Also back is starting quarterback Steve Pelluer, top rusher Ron Jackson and several standouts from a superb defensive unit.

The top challengers to Washington for the league title figure to be UCLA, Arizona State, Washington State and Stanford.

In the Pacific Coast Athletic Association, defending champion San Jose State is clearly the team to beat. The University of Pacific and Utah State appear to be the only other championship contenders in a league that has a new member, Nevada-Las Vegas.

For the first time in years, Southern Cal doesn't appear to have a tailback of All-America caliber. Heisman Trophy winner Marcus Allen graduated, leaving the position to what Coach John Robinson calls a committee — Michael Harper, Zep Lee and Fred Crutcher.

Outstanding players back from last year's 9-3 Trojan team include offensive lineman Don Mosebar and Bruce Matthews, nose guard George Achica and linebacker August Curley. Sophomore Sean Salisbury will open the season at quarterback, having beaten out 1981 starter John Mazur for the job last spring.

UCLA, which missed a Rose Bowl bid last year because it lost to Southern Cal 22-21, should be at least as strong as the 7-4-1 team of 1981. Returning Bruins include starting quarterback Tom Ramsey, top rusher Kevin Nelson, wide receiver Cormac Carney and defensive linemen Irv Eatman and Karl Morgan.

Arizona State, an offensive powerhouse last year, was hit hard by graduation and will have to emphasize defense in 1982. Among the returnees on defense are safety Mike Richardson, linebacker Vernon Maxwell and linemen Jim Jeffcoat, Bryan Caldwell and Mike Langston.

Washington State is coming off its best season in 50 years and most of the offense returns, but the Cougars could be hard-pressed to match last year's 8-3-1 record because they lost most of their starting defense to graduation. Clete Casper and Ricky Turner, who shared the quarterbacking duties in 1981, are both back.

Stanford lost Darrin Nelson, the school's all-time leading ground gainer, but All-America quarterback John Elway returns. Coach Paul Wiggin believes significant improvement in the team's defense will guarantee a better record than last year's 4-7.

Oregon was expected to be a solid contender last year, but struggled to a 2-9 record. The Ducks figure to be improved just by avoiding the injury bug that hit them in 1981. Quarterback Kevin Lusk is a fine passer and freshman tailback Kevin Willhite is a potential superstar.

Arizona has 14 starters back from a 6-5 team, but the Wildcats face a back-breaking schedule that includes Iowa and Notre Dame as well as Washington, UCLA, Southern Cal and Arizona State. Among the returnees are quarterback Tom Tunnicliffe, linebacker Ricky Hunley and offensive guard Jeff Kiewel.

Cal, 2-9 a year ago, will be playing its first season under Coach Joe Kapp, the quarterback of the Bears' last Rose Bowl team.

Oregon State again figures to be the conference doormat. The Beavers have won just one game since Joe Avezzano became coach two years ago. The defense allowed 466 yards a game last year.

In the PCAA, San Jose State, 5-0 in league action and 9-3 overall last year, returns 12 starters, including Steve Clarkson, who ranked fifth nationally among quarterbacks in total offense in 1981.

The Jack Elway-coached Spartans, who last year beat Pac-10 schools Stanford and Cal and lost a 31-24 decision to Arizona State, play four Pac-10 teams to open the season — Oregon, Stanford, Oregon State and Cal — all on the road, before beginning PCAA play.

Pacific, where Coach Bob Toledo began a rebuilding program three years ago, has moved from sixth to fourth to third in the PCAA standings since 1979 and appears ready to contend for the title.

Utah State again looms as a possible league champion. The Aggies, with 16 starters back lost only to San Jose in PCAA play last fall.

Long Beach State, Fullerton State, Fresno State and newcomer Las Vegas all would have to show vast improvement to make a serious challenge for the PCAA title.

Two Area Golfers Low Net At Match

ROCKY MOUNT — Two Brook Valley golfers finished with low net scores at the Eastern Carolina Golf League meet here at the Benvenue Country Club this past weekend.

In the championship flight, Maxine Hawley was first low net. In the second flight, Jan Kanetzke was first low net.

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Richard Bell is aiming high as he begins his first year as head coach of the South Carolina Gamecocks. He'd like an undefeated football season.

"I start every year with the idea of being 11-0 and hope I don't have to adjust my thinking too much," Bell said during media day activities Saturday.

But to make his wish come true, some of the questions remaining from a team that went 6-6 last season remain to be answered.

Bell said the defense is solid. "It has the chance to be the best since I've been at Carolina," said Bell, the Gamecocks' defensive coordinator for seven years before replacing head coach Jim Carlen who was fired in January.

A Review Applause From Audience, Too

It is not often in movies that the audience breaks into applause. This happened twice in the screening I saw of "An Officer And A Gentleman," now showing at Buccaneer movies.

It's that kind of movie, where you feel like cheering for the young candidates struggling to make it through the grueling paces of boot training to earn their wings as naval aviators.

Few films make such intelligent capital use of the background element bracketing a story. In this respect, basic training sequences in "An Officer And A Gentleman," like the factory scenes in "Norma Rae," are central to the film's story. Several interesting characters, fully realized, parallel and flesh out the dramatic story of young people, who for different reasons, are determined to be victorious in the struggle to last out 13 weeks of intensive hardship.

Louis Gossett, Jr. as Sgt. Foley, gives a memorable performance as the black training sergeant. His is the task of transforming the raw material of civilian men and women into professionals. Gossett is unwavering in his demand for perfection, a man who through long experience can spot the strong and weak points of his charges. He is the personification of strict discipline, but never cruel or unfair. Chances should be good for Gossett to be nominated for best supporting actor for this performance.

Richard Gere in the role of candidate Zack Mayo, and Debra Winger as Paula Pokrifki, the factory working girl he falls in love with, have finely drawn roles as the principals of the film. Each provides splendid performances. Both are individuals who have been buffeted by harsh childhoods. Their love becomes the source of finding the strength to care for others, to begin shedding their protective cynicism.

Other cast members are equally good in lesser roles — David Keith as the Oklahoma youth Sid Worley, RICHARD GERE AND DEBRA WINGER... are the two principals in "An Officer And A Gentleman," a Paramount film now playing at the Buccaneer. The movie deals with human relations between people in a setting of a grueling 13 weeks basic training for aviation officer candidates.

protected by doting parents and trained to be a gentleman, but incapable of coping with life; Lisa Blunt as the callous tease who feels no dismay that she leads Worley to suicide; and Lisa Eilbacher as the physically small candidate Casey Seeger who shows true grit in taking whatever is dished out — all are unforgettable people we care about.

"An Officer And A Gentleman" does have some tough language. In this film, it has meaning, not something thrown in for shock value. Director Taylor Hackford has kept the pace taut and fast moving, and photographer Donald Thorin's alternating use of close-ups and big scenes show close rapport to the story.

This is a film for adults who enjoy intelligent movies, realism American style.

Daughter Wins Soap Box Derby

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Carol Ann Sullivan sped to victory in the junior division of the All-American Soap Box Derby, and her overjoyed father wasn't far behind.

Bob Sullivan hurdled a rope and two railings to get to his 10-year-old daughter and squeeze her in a jubilant bear hug after her 28.64-second finish Saturday in the 954-foot downhill race.

"Ain't nobody going to stop me from coming down here," said Sullivan, of Rochester, N.H.

Carol Ann won a trophy and a set of power tools. Matt Wolfgang, 12, of Pennsburg, Pa., finished in 28:29 seconds to win the senior division of the 45th annual derby, gaining a trophy and a $5,000 college scholarship.

In the international division, Michael Larocque, 12, of Canada, won the junior division title, and Geoffrey Logan of New Zealand, also 12, won the senior division. Under derby rules, 12-year-olds may enter either division.

Tom Snyder Gets ABC Position, But Not The One He Angled For

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Tom Snyder will anchor the 11 o'clock news for Channel 7, ABC's flagship station in New York, starting next month. And that means the one-time host of NBC's "Tomorrow" show won't get the anchorman's job for ABC's midnight news program, scheduled to premiere Oct. 26.

That may sound a bit like man-doesn't-bite-dog, but there is an entertaining off-camera story to be told.

NBC let Snyder's contract lapse earlier this year, and the controversial newsman's name was linked almost at once to the ABC network assignment.

Sources at NBC said the stories originated with Snyder's agent. ABC confirmed negotiations with Snyder, but said he was just one of several candidates for the new midnight shift.

It's common practice in television for agents to suggest names to the media to create interest in their clients. In this case, however, the Snyder-ABC connection made some sense.

Snyder is a nationally known TV personality. He had a following on "Tomorrow," and no one denied that he would create instant recognition for the as-yet unnamed 12-1 a.m. ABC program.

Further, Roone Arledge, president of ABC News, has been courting high-recognition correspondents from other networks for some time. He wooed Dan Rather and Tom Brokaw, but those negotiations only served to make Rather and Brokaw more attractive to their employers, and ultimately wealthier men. Rather stayed at CBS, Brokaw remained with NBC.

David Brinkley did jump to ABC from NBC, and was given his own Sunday show. But Brinkley had soured on the latter network, and had decided in any case to leave NBC after 38 years.

When ABC hired Brinkley, he still was a respected news broadcaster. Snyder's news credentials, however, had been tarnished by celebrated ego battles with colleague Rona Barrett on "Tomorrow," and a spicy interview

he gave to "Playboy."

In addition, Snyder's brash and jocular style made him objectionable to some viewers and news executives. According to the source at ABC News, Arledge felt Snyder needed to distance himself from the turmoil on "Tomorrow."

Snyder, meantime, will have other news responsibilities at Channel 7, and reportedly will work at times for the network's other owned stations.

The apparent choice for the network news job is Gregory Jackson, although ABC has not made an official announcement yet. Jackson was an ABC correspondent from 1968-75 before becoming an independent producer. He was the host of "Healthline" on public TV, and, recently, was the off-camera interviewer on CBS Cable's "Signature."

The source said the network wanted somebody who would complement Phil Donahue, who, last spring, was given a slot on the midnight show. Donahue's segment, which will be taped in front of a studio audience, probably will be a one-guest interview pegged more closely to the day's news than the social issues discussed on Donahue's syndicated morning show.

Plans for the rest of the program have not been formulated, but ABC is said to be leaning toward a live broadcast.

Library Plans Summer Picnic

The annual Summer Reading Club picnic sponsored by Sheppard Memorial Library will be held Tuesday at 5:30 p.m. at Elm Street Park. All children who participated in the Just Open A Book reading program and their families may attend.

Activities will include a puppet show, games, stories and the awarding of prizes and certificates.

Participants should bring their own food and drinks as well as a blanket or something else to sit on. In case of rain the picnic will be held Aug. 19 at the same time and place.

FOCUS

A Man For Next Season?

This week during the annual summer baseball conference, major league owners are likely to determine the future of Bowie Kuhn, the game's controversial Commissioner. Kuhn's seven-year contract expires in 1983. A descendant of James Bowie, inventor of the Bowie knife, Kuhn began his baseball career as a teenager working the scoreboard at Griffith Stadium in Washington, D.C. But instead of becoming a player, Kuhn studied law and served as counsel for the National League before becoming Commissioner in 1969. Soon sports fans should know whether the man who once said "there's nothing so fine as a hot dog in the ball park" will continue to watch the game from the Commissioner's chair.

DO YOU KNOW — What federal judge became the first Commissioner of Baseball?

FRIDAY'S ANSWER — Anthony Perkins played the title role of Norman Bates in Psycho.

N.C. Demos Claim 2 Congressional Club Rivals

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — After offering no effective counter for years, North Carolina Democrats suddenly have not one but two groups claiming to rival Republican Sen. Jesse Helms' National Congressional Club.

The two political action committees, unveiled separately in recent weeks, are keeping a wary eye on each other, though they insist publicly that a little intramural competition may be healthy.

Although their organizations are separate, the similarities may prove confusing for potential contributors, since:

— Both groups plan to invoke the same direct-mail technology that Helms has used nationwide to raise millions of dollars for conservative candidates.

— Both have hired national direct-mail firms to handle it for them.

— Both groups want to raise money for Democratic candidates and may look for givers nationally.

— And both have ties with established Democrat figures who lost in 1980 to conservative Republicans.

"I think the real concern is not so much whether one draws money from the other," said Gary Pearce, Hunt's press secretary. "The question is, is there some confusion in the public's mind, or in the mind of contributors."

The first to start was North Carolinians for Responsible Representation, which has raised about $22,000 with a direct-mail letter signed by former Democratic Sen. Robert Morgan. In 1980, Morgan lost his seat in a bitter race to Helms' ally, Sen. John East.

The latest entry is the North Carolina Campaign Fund, a group started by Gov. Jim Hunt's political aides and with former Rep. L. Richardson Preyer serving as chairman. Preyer lost his seat to Rep. Gene Johnston, a conservative Republican supported by the club.

"I'm sure they're going to overlap," said Morgan. "But so long as the money is used to disclose the truth about the right wing, who cares? I begged the state Democratic Party for two years to do this."

The latest group, the North Carolina Campaign Fund, is closely tied to Hunt and is expected to become the base of his 1984 Senate challenge of Helms, if he runs.

Preyer says it hopes to go beyond a Hunt organization, helping Democrats in other races too. But some in the other group are doubtful.

"Let's be realistic — it's the Hunt campaign," said John Merritt, an aide to Rep. Charles Rose, D-N.C., who helped organize the other group, North Carolinians for Responsible Representation.

That group claims to be independent, and Morgan said in an interview he would disassociate himself from the organization if it backs any candidate in a Democratic primary. But some in the Hunt camp privately dismiss it as a vehicle for Rose's 1984 gubernatorial ambitions.

"It might end up there," acknowledged Herb McKim, a Wilmington architect who is close to Rose and on the group's board of directors. "We haven't decided. We have all different ways we can go."

Both sides say there is plenty of room for both groups, pointing out an array of organizations are raising money for New Right Republicans. But there are suggestions of some disagreement between the two groups.

Hunt political strategists say they don't want to be in the position of discouraging contributions to the other group, but one Hunt advisor said they might have to.

"If it comes to that, we will," he said, asking not to be named. "We've got the candidate, they don't."

On the other side, strategists privately say they talked with Hunt aides more than a year ago about forming such a group, but that Hunt's allies backed out to start their own.

McKim, however, suggests an accommodation may be in the works. The Morgan-Rose group is re-examining its plans while it prepares another round of direct-mail appeals for money.

"It doesn't make sense for two North Carolina groups to go after the same national market," McKim said. "When we heard they were about ready to come out, we just decided to sit tight and see what they do. We just flat are on hold until we decide something."

One possible outcome, he said, is that the Morgan-Rose group might back off from national plans, confining itself to in-state activity and leaving any national solicitations to Hunt's group.

Gathering Of Hell's Angels Is Basis For Some Apprehension

By TIMOTHY HARPER

OFFICER'S GULCH, Colo. (AP) — The two big men got off their even bigger motorcycles and lumbered toward each other, arms outstretched and roaring like two happy grizzly bears.

They embraced until their bellies and sun-bleached beards touched. Then they kissed.

It was a typical greeting among the more than 200 Hell's Angels from a dozen states who gathered over the weekend at this U.S. Forest Service campground in the Rocky Mountains for their 10th annual "run."

Their arrival prompted apprehension and anticipation among the 1,200 residents of the nearby ski resort community of Frisco.

The apprehension was eased when Summit County Sheriff Bob Farris brought in dozens of officers from nearby towns to bolster his own 22-deputy force, but he and the biker leaders said they expected no trouble.

"We have enough problems of our own at home. Why would we want to come out here to Colorado on our vacation and start problems?" said Al Abono of Richmond, Calif., one of the run's organizers and one of the few Hell's Angels who would speak with reporters or let his photo be taken.

The anticipation was mostly from bar, restaurant, motel, liquor and grocery store owners looking for a share of the tens of thousands of off-season dollars the bikers will spend during the 10-day run, which formally opened Saturday.

"They're real polite, a lot better than the skiers who come in during the winter," said Mary Winnale, kitchen manager at Smokin' Willie's, a saloon that was paid $10,000 in advance to feed 100 Angels two meals a day during their stay.

Bob Cook, the bar manager at Smokin' Willie's, said he ordered 60 cases of Budweiser this week instead of the usual 16. "I heard they like to drink Budweiser," he said.

For the most part, the Angels kept to themselves, talking motorcycles and shooting pool in town or gathering around their campfires at Officer's Gulch.

Several, wearing their black leather jackets and sleeveless denims with their winged-skull emblem, were on constant guard at the barricaded entrance to the campground. The only outsiders allowed in were park rangers and the man driving the beer truck.

The Hell's Angels gathering differed from annual conventions by other business or fraternal groups in that the Angels had no formal meetings. They also brought their wives and children.

And, the Angels buy strictly American. Instead of designer jeans, imported beer and Japanese transportation, it's strictly Levis Strauss, Budweiser and Harley-Davidson.

They roar through the mountains on their cycles like cowboys, astride enough horsepower to have pulled a whole Conestoga wagon train across the nearby Continental Divide a century ago.

The FBI says the Angels are organized crime on two wheels, involved in murder for hire, drug dealing, extortion, robbery and pornography in many states.

Angelo Alioto, an Angel spokesman, said the group's image is an outdated hold-over from the 1960s, when they terrorized small towns, beat up antiwar protesters and killed a fan at a Rolling Stones concert in Altamont, Calif.

In a bar in town, a little blonde girl walked up to an Angel, eyeing him warily until he finally looked down at her.

"Daddy," she said. "May I please have another quarter?"

Beauty Pageant Contestant Shot

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A 20-year-old beauty queen was shot in the leg with a BB gun as she and more than 100 other entrants in the Miss Texas USA pageant stood outside a restaurant, police said.

Melonie Donald, representing Aldine, was shot Sunday night with a BB gun fired from a passing car, pageant spokeswoman Carolyn Mitchell said.

"At first, she thought she had been popped by a rubber band," Ms. Mitchell said. "I was standing close by and she called me to come over. That's when we saw the blood and everything."

Ms. Donald was taken to Metropolitan General Hospital here, but was not seriously injured and was expected to remain in the pageant, Ms. Mitchell said.

The contest ends Aug. 22 after a week of preliminary competition.
