

$77.5 Million Hospital Budget Is Voted

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

A budget of $77,509,780 for Pitt County Memorial Hospital was approved by the hospital's trustees Tuesday night as ready for submission to the Pitt County Board of Commissioners.

This budget reflects the expectation of a 16 percent increase in volume of hospital services and a rate change of 17 percent. Hospital room rates, which generate 42 percent of the total revenue, are being increased to $160 a day, effective Oct. 1, the beginning of the new fiscal year. The previous rate has been $125 a day.

The new charge for rehabilitation services per day will be $185; $425 for critical care services and $475 for neonatal intensive care.

Hospital Director Jack Richardson said, "The rate changes are necessary to cover additional expenses to support new levels of intensity in the transition to more secondary and tertiary care services. The rate adjustments were made to compensate for shortfalls identified under government programs."

"Newly enacted state regulations promise to create a possible shortfall in excess of $2,367,980. This is a result of a change in the Medicaid reimbursement level which allocates only 17,694 days of service between July 1, 1982, and June 30, 1983, at a per diem rate of 85 percent of actual per diem cost in the coming year. The hospital Medicaid census could reach 25,694 days, based on previous experience. A reduced rate of 73.3 percent of actual hospital cost will be paid for those patient days in excess of 17,694 days.

The board released a breakdown of hospital costs for one routine day of patient care for last year, then for this year:

Nursing — $65.21 last year, $76.52 this year; supplies — $3.48 last year, $3.59 this year; recreation therapy — 97 cents last year, 76 cents this year; physician direction — $11.71 last year, $13 this year; building depreciation — $4.62 last year, $4.82 this year; equipment depreciation — $2.75 last year, $3.32 this year; administration and general — $6.38 last year, $7.48 this year; maintenance and plant operation — $9.30 last year, $10.51 this year; linen — $2.72 this year, $3.07 this year; housekeeping — $4.71 last year, $5.40 this year; meals — $14.79 last year, $15.85 this year; medical records — $5.88 last year, $6.53 this year; social work — $2.13 last year, $1.88 this year.

Cost per patient day will increase 8.7 percent, while total costs will increase 26 percent to $62,982,254. Salaries on an annualized basis will move from $31,363,498 to $34,258,498, to include 72 new positions. A new wage administration program, emphasizing merit, will be established during the winter of 1983 with hospital salaries matched with those of corresponding positions in North Carolina, South Carolina and Virginia.

Capital budget expenditures are expected to be $3,238,848, including $1,050,485 for a new radiology technology area and $300,000 for improvements in the laboratories. An appropriation of $500,000 has been scheduled to complete the bed complement expansion to 569 beds.

Drugs and other patients supplies are expected to increase

$1,435,952; food $151,891; fuel, power and water $278,999; telephone service $35,883, continuing development of data processing, $368,434, laundry and linen service, $109,159; security, $52,911; operating supplies, $463,462; facilities insurance, $49,720; completion of long range facilities plan, $76,500; and hospital employee insurance, $211,705.

Services in respiratory therapy, pulmonary medicine, neurology, laboratory medicine and critical care are expected to expand. The administration-education building now being built will make it possible to consolidate business office and human resource activity now using rented office space offsite, Richardson said.

Senate Support For Tax Increase Seen 'Slipping'

By JIM LUTHER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) —

While President Reagan has been trying to quell a revolt by his conservative allies in the House, Senate support for his $98.3 billion tax increase has been slipping to the point that he may need a dozen Democrats to help pass it.

Not one of the 45 Democratic senators supported the original version when it was passed on a 50-47 vote last month. Only three Republicans voted no; Sen. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, was absent for the vote. But Senate vote-counters say nine or more Republicans will oppose the compromise bill when the final vote is taken later this week.

That means the president and his allies will have to turn to Democrats if the bill is to become law, and they got their first breakthrough Tuesday. Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., a persistent critic of Reagan's economic policies, announced he will support the compromise because "we face a deepening danger of economic collapse."

And today, another Northeastern liberal, Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., announced he will support the bill.

Kennedy said the Senate bill was improved somewhat by a Senate-House conference committee, which moderated Medicare cuts and added up to 10 weeks of extra compensation for unemployed workers.

"But we must recognize that the tax bill by itself is not the solution; its passage offers only the hope that a bad situation will not become even worse," Kennedy said in a Senate speech. "We dare not throw that hope away."

A vote on the compromise is expected in the Democratic-controlled House on Thursday. If it passes there, it would go to the Senate for final consideration.

Meanwhile, the International Brotherhood of Teamsters endorsed the bill Tuesday and urged Congress to pass it.

"This legislation will serve to reduce federal deficits, continue the reduction of interest rates and stimulate business activity which will provide more jobs for our members," union president Roy Lee Williams said in a letter to Reagan.

Williams was the first major union leader to come out in support of the tax hike.

The bill, which includes $15.2 billion in cuts in federal spending, mostly in health aid to the poor and elderly, is aimed at cutting the government's borrowing in an effort to reduce interest rates and ease the worst recession since World War II.

The package includes higher taxes on cigarettes, airline tickets and telephone service; reduced deductions for medical expenses; a 10 percent withholding on most interest and dividends; a stiffer minimum tax on upper-income individuals and corporations, and repeal of about one-third of the business tax cuts enacted last year.

Reagan and his backers have been trying to convince House Republicans that a tax increase does not represent abandonment of the president's economic philosophy and that the only alternative is higher interest rates and fewer jobs.

Following a meeting Tuesday with Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan, Rep. Bob Michel of Illinois, the House Republican leader, cautiously forecast victory.

Said Regan: "I think we're going to win...."

White House spokesman Larry Speakes was less optimistic. "We have a way to go," he said.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, a supporter of the bill, said Reagan's Monday night speech in support of the bill does not guarantee passage. "I really really wants a... and Republicans later come up with a fair share of them (votes) or they're going to have problems out there," O'Neill said.

By White House estimate, at least half the 192 House Republicans are lined up in opposition.

PLO Will Return Israeli Dead And Captured Pilot

By The Associated Press

The Palestine Liberation Organization bowed to Israel's demand for the unconditional return of a captive Israeli pilot and the remains of five Israeli soldiers killed in Lebanon, removing the last obstacle to the withdrawal of the Palestinian guerrillas from Beirut, a Lebanese government spokesman announced today.

The spokesman said his government was making the formal request today to the United States, France and Italy to provide the 2,000-man multinational peacekeeping force that will oversee the evacuation of the Palestine Liberation Organization's fighters and Syrian troops from the besieged Moslem sector of the Lebanese capital.

Israel Army Radio said Prime Minister Menachem Begin and his Cabinet were studying the final draft of the evacuation plan and were expected to approve it Thursday.

The Tel Aviv military command, meanwhile, said two Israeli soldiers were killed and four wounded Tuesday in a guerrilla ambush near Aabadiye, about 15 miles east of Beirut. It said two guerrillas were killed and three wounded today trying to penetrate Israeli lines near Aamiq in eastern Lebanon, and that another guerrilla was killed and three were captured northeast of Sidon, in southern Lebanon. The command also reported guerrillas fired light arms near the port of Beirut today, but that the Israelis did not return fire.

The Lebanese spokesman said the PLO agreed Tuesday night to hand over Israeli pilot Aharon Ahiaz, who was shot down on the first day of Israel's invasion June 6, to Lebanese Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan, and Wazzan would deliver him to U.S. presidential envoy Philip C. Habib.

The PLO also agreed to hand over to Lebanese authorities the remains of five Israeli soldiers killed during this invasion and provided information locating the graves of four Israelis killed during the 1978 invasion of southern Lebanon, the spokesman said.

Previously the PLO demanded that guerrillas captured during the invasion be exchanged for the pilot and the bodies. But Israeli officials said there would be no exchange, and PLO official Jamil Hilal said his organization agreed to turn over Ahiaz and the bodies in return for a verbal promise from Israel to release an unspecified number of PLO prisoners at an unspecified future date.

Israeli Defense Minister Ariel Sharon told Israeli Television Tuesday night: "Not one terrorist will leave and not one member of the multinational force will enter until we receive the pilot."

Israel contends the 7,000 Palestinians it has taken prisoner are terrorists, not prisoners of war, and therefore subject to criminal prosecution.

According to diplomatic sources, the advance guard of the peacekeeping force, 350 French troops, will arrive Friday in Jounieh, the Christian port 12 miles north of Beirut. The French will move into Beirut at dawn Saturday, the sources said, to begin overseeing the evacuation, which is to take about 15 days.

Report Gain For Personal Income

By SALLY JACOBSEN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans enjoyed a full 1 percent gain in personal income last month, the government said today.

It was the biggest jump since the 1 percent increase of last August and was largely the result of the cost-of-living adjustment Social Security recipients received last month, the government said.

The report also said after-tax income rose 2.1 percent to an annual rate of $2.2 trillion in July. The increase was well ahead of June's 0.2 percent gain and largely the product, officials said, of the

July 1 10 percent tax-rate cut, the second phase of President Reagan's three-year tax-cut package.

Consumer spending, which economists are counting on to build an economic recovery, jumped 1.1 percent in July, reversing the decline of the previous month and matching May's gain, the Commerce Department report said.

The department reported that July's total personal income rose $25.1 billion to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $2.6 trillion. The increase was well above the 0.4 percent of June and not far off the 0.9 percent of May, the report said.

I would like to file such a declaration while I am in good health mentally and physically.

Hotline checked with Pitt County Memorial Hospital attorney James T. ## Connector Is Endorsed By Planning-Zoning Body

By ANGELA LINGERFELT
Reflector Staff Writer

The Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission suggested in a meeting Tuesday night that a connector from First Street to Brownlea Drive be recommended to the City Council.

The recommendation was a result of a request made by Methodist Retirement Homes Inc. to amend a thoroughfare plan by deleting First Street extending east of Warren and by deleting the Brownlea Connector to Fifth Street. Attorney Sam Underwood and Lyman Ormond presented the case for Methodist Retirement Homes.

The board voted to recommend rezoning approximately .241 acres of property located west of Honeysuckle Street and Unity Free Will Baptist Church. The property is south of U.S. 264 Bypass and north of Edgewood Trailer Court and would go from RA-20 to R6-MH (residential-mobile home).

Board members had previously tabled action on this request made by J.T. Manning Jr. until Edgewood Trailer Court owner Nathan Smith entered into a petition with Manning to have his trailer court property rezoned also.

Planning board members gave their approval to two preliminary subdivision plats. Approved was Bruce Subdivision, located on the north side of Deck Street, and Twin Oaks Townhomes, Court "F", located on David Drive.

The commission approved two proposed ordinance changes: central business district sign control and an amendment regarding playground equipment.

Board members tabled an amendment regarding ground signs and voted not to amend section 32-79 of the zoning ordinance, which relates to issuance of mobile home permits by the City Council.

The board approved a resolution of appreciation for William D. Mitchum, who served for a number of years.

The board considered and recommended that the R-6(N) residential proposal as presented by the Tar River Neighborhood Association be adopted and included in the zoning ordinance.

Recover Body Of Man Missing Since January 9

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

FORT GORDON, Ga. — The body of Army Maj. Ronald W. Mobley, missing since Jan. 9 following a boating accident that also claimed the lives of his two young sons, was discovered on Monday and positively identified Tuesday afternoon, an Army spokesman said.

Mobley, a native of Williamston, and his sons — 13-year old Jeffery and 7-year old Clayton — were reported missing Saturday Jan. 9 after failing to rendezvous with others in their group at a winter outing on Clark Hill

Lake in a recreational area on the Georgia-South Carolina border operated by the Army.

The bodies of the two boys were recovered on Sunday morning. Efforts at the time to locate the father failed, and the search was called off after several days of intensive efforts, including massive patrols of the lake by civilian and military personnel and air sweeps by Navy rescue planes over the lake.

Maj. Joe Page of Fort Gordon's public relations office reported Tuesday that two water skiers on the late sighted the body at 2:45 p.m. Monday. The couple notified authorities at the recreation area, who in turn notified civilian authorities of Columbia County, Ga.

A craft manned by recreation personnel and Army military police members went to the site where the body was reported to have been sighted and recovered the remains. A preliminary examination was conducted by the coroner of Columbia County, and the body was then transferred to the Dwight D. Eisenhower Medical Center, Augusta, where positive identification was announced Tuesday. Identification was made by dental records, a physical examination of the remains and an ID card found on the body. Cause of death was presumed to be drowning.

Page said Mobley's widow, Brenda Mobley, now living in Martin County, has been notified of the recovery and identification of the body of her husband.

In addition to his wife, Mobley is survived by his mother, Mrs. Elsie Mobley Miller of Williamston, and a brother, Lane Mobley of New York City.

Arrangements are being made for a military funeral in Martin County.

Women In: Office: Ranks Have Tripled

By MIKE FEINSILBER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A fund-raising brochure of the Women's Campaign Fund claims that men run America. If that's true, it is less true than it once was and after November it is likely to be a little further from the truth.

After the elections, four women may sit in the U.S. Senate where there have never been more than two at any time. And women may govern two states previously run only by men.

"Eventually I think we're going to get a Congress that looks like the country," says Ann Lewis, political director of the Democratic National Committee, the first woman to hold so high a post in the inner workings of either political party.

Women's role in governing America is still minimal, but growing. In 1975, a total of 5,765 women held elective office; five years later, the number had almost tripled to 16,136.

Ten years ago, only 2 percent of the members of Congress, 5 percent of the state legislators and 1 percent of the mayors in America were women.

Those percentages have all doubled or more: Women now constitute 4 percent of Congress, 12 percent of the state legislatures, 8 percent of the mayors.

But the picture is uneven. More than a third of the women elected to state legislatures in 1980 were in seven states — New Hampshire, Maine, Washington, Oregon, Colorado, Connecticut and Vermont.

In the legislatures of Pennsylvania and five Southern states — Mississippi, Louisiana, Alabama, Arkansas and Tennessee — women hold less than 5 percent of the seats.

Nonetheless, women who earn their living in politics say they sense that women are going to play an ever-larger role in governing the country.

Ms. Lewis thinks an anti-government mood that first helped Jimmy Carter and then helped Ronald Reagan now is going to help women.

"If people think political institutions aren't working in their interests, they think, 'These men don't care about what I think or how I live,'" she says. "A woman candidate is a little more likely to know what real life is like. Just like you, she's a bit of an outsider. To a voter, that can be attractive."

There once was a prejudice against electing women candidates.

"We saw in 1980 the crumbling of that sort of attitude in a lot of places in the country and I can't think of any area where it's a big problem now," says Nancy Sinnott, executive director of the Republican Congressional Campaign Committee.

Ruth Mandel, director of the Center for the American Woman and Politics at Rutgers University, agrees.

"Women who get nominated have about the same chance of winning as men," she says.

For a long time, a woman could land a nomination only if the situation called for a sacrificial lamb, someone to run against an unbeatable male. That time, says Ms. Mandel, is in the past.

Women are voting in larger numbers than before — and in larger percentages than men — another factor combatting the bias against women candidates.

Women got the vote on Aug. 18, 1920, but many women who were adults then never got the voting habit. In 1980, however, the Census Bureau reports, a fractionally higher percentage of women than men voted.

But what's happening can hardly be called a women's revolution.

It will be a long time before women hold office in proportion to their numbers in society. Turnover is slow in politics; incumbents win most elections, and most incumbents are men.

And special obstacles still face women when they run for office. First is the problem of raising money.

"If you are a woman," says Ann Lewis, "you are not

Aging Woman Regrets Her Extended Youth

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: This problem will certainly be new to you. Twenty-five years ago, when I was 37, my family and I moved to the U.S. from a foreign country. When I made my application for a visa, I stated that I was 33 instead of 37 because I was told that it would be easier for me to get a good job if I were a few years younger.

What a big mistake! Now I am 62, not in the best of health and would like very much to have an early retirement, but I can't because I am officially 58 instead of 62. I am now an American citizen, and my naturalization papers are also made out with the wrong birth date.

Can I, without risking being expelled for fraud, use my real birth certificate to get retirement? I know I did wrong, but I didn't think much about it at the time. As a punishment for falsifying my age, must I work four more years unless I die first?

FOOLISH WOMAN

DEAR WOMAN: You're right. This problem is new to me, but it's not new to the Social Security office. Call one near you.

DEAR ABBY: My problem is the fact that my husband and my father hate each other. I realize that they both have good reasons for feeling the way they do, but I blame them for putting me in the middle.

This ridiculous, exhausting battle has been going on for 10 years. I am afraid to invite my father to my house or go to his house with my husband for fear one will say something to antagonize the other. I am tired of hearing complaints from one about the other.

This hopeless situation is ripping me apart, and one of these days I'll be forced to take sides. I'll probably have to side with my husband simply because I take my marriage vows seriously. Please help me. I don't want to lose either my husband or father.

AT A LOSS

DEAR AT: Just because you were placed in the middle doesn't mean you have to stay there.

Plan I: Tell both your father and your husband that their hostility toward each other is tearing you apart, and for your sake — as well as theirs — they should seek professional help from a competent, impartial third party who can help them get over their hatred.

Plan II: Lay down some ground rules. Tell your husband you do not want to hear any more complaints about your father. Then give your father the same message concerning your husband. If they "forget," walk away and leave them talking to themselves.

Choosing between your husband and your father should be absolutely the last resort!

DEAR ABBY: No names or cities, please, if you put this in the paper, which you will have to do because my husband sometimes gets the mail first and I wouldn't want him to see your answer.

A neighbor (married) comes over here nearly every day to use my phone. She has a phone of her own, but she uses mine to call her boyfriend. I am not a snoop, but I can tell from her end of the conversation that he is also married, and she meets him every chance she gets.

Her husband seems to be a decent guy, and I have no intention of telling him what I know, but I feel guilty letting this woman use my phone to set up these "round-day-vooz" (or however you spell it).

Should I pretend I don't know what's going on and continue to let her use my phone? Or should I tell her my phone is out of order?

FEELING GUILTY

DEAR FEELING: Don't lie. If you don't want her to use your telephone, tell her the truth.

To help lengthen the life of sheets and pillowcases, vary the way you fold them. Constant creases in the same places weaken the threads.

To operate range or oven economically, use only as much heat as necessary for cooking jobs. Turn range units off three minutes and oven units off 15 to 30 minutes before end of cooking time.

Homemaker's Haven By Evelyn L. Spangler Pitt Home Agent

Having two incomes is no guarantee against money problems. Studies indicate that two-paycheck families spend more on everyday items than do single-paycheck families. With two-paychecks comes the inducement to go into debt for extras such as TV's, cars, furniture, appliances, convenience foods, restaurant meals, expensive vacations and many other desires. Also the two-paycheck family usually finds itself in a higher income tax bracket. Too frequently, not enough income taxes are withheld, and the savings available are inadequate to cover the tax deficit. Having adequate savings for emergency needs and for retirement living are other problems which many two pay-check families experience.

Success in easing money problems for the two-paycheck family requires enough resourcefulness, cooperation and discipline to develop and use a system for managing that will eliminate wastes. The system should provide for everyday living needs and establish a regular savings and investment program to provide for potential emergencies (such as taxes, unemployment, property loss or illness not covered by insurance) and provide for future goals (such as education, vacations and retirement).

Guides for developing a money managing system — Decide on a pattern for managing money. As a couple, frankly discuss feelings about the money each earns, individual and common goals, and how and when the money should be used. Agree on: how much of the money is "ours" and its use, and how much of the money should be "yours" and "mine" and its general use. Each couple has to develop the pattern which best suits its situation. Most financial advisors recommend "pooling the earnings" with an amount of money designated for each spouse as "my" money, and making joint decisions on how the money is to be used. Such a pattern promotes efficiency, family teamwork and harmony. Other patterns include deciding who will take care of what expense and living on one spouse's income and saving the other's income for specific goals.

Develop partnership rules for managing your money. For example, neither spouse will make a major decision or purchase without prior consultation with the other spouse. Identify who will be responsible for which managerial activities such as the bookwork for the plan and records of money use, shopping, making business contacts relative to savings, investments, insurances and paying the bills.

Develop and follow a money management system that works for the couple. Such a system should: identify your new worth, project estimates of both income expected and needs over lifetime, identify and prioritize major goals, map out a money use plan to provide for everyday living needs and savings for emergencies and future goals, record spending and use this to evaluate progress, identify risks and problems and determine future managerial behavior, and provide for adjustments in earning, spending and saving when the need arises.

Study economic trends and fringe benefits offered by employment and take advantage of opportunities to enhance financial security through: deferring income taxes and providing funds for future goals (education or retirement). Investing for most effective gain and using group benefits.

Women In Office

(Continued from Page 2) likely to have a law school roommate who is now the partner in a downtown law firm. You probably haven't been golfing with your town's leading realtors. You aren't automatically linked in to the fund-raising network."

Meanwhile, says Miss Sinnott, the cost of running a winning campaign for Congress is climbing astronomically.

The price was $100,000 in the mid-1970s "and this year it looks like it will be $250,000 to $300,000 for the average winning race," she says.

A major source of campaign money, the 3,149 political action committees, gave congressional candidates $55 million last year. Most of it went to incumbents.

Women like to support women candidates, but they tend to be parsimonious when it comes time to help with cash.

Rep. Geraldine Ferraro, D-N.Y., tells a story about herself to illustrate that point.

Before she got into politics, Mrs. Ferraro spent a day campaigning with a woman candidate running for office in New York City. Impressed by her friend's effort, she whipped out her checkbook and wrote a $50 contribution.

A few weeks later, she and her husband were having lunch at the West Side Tennis Club. A friend joined them and told them of the financial difficulties of a male candidate he was supporting. Without further ado, Mrs. Ferraro's husband wrote out a check — for $1,000.

"Women have no idea what a campaign can cost," explains the congresswoman. "We generally earn less money, too. And women are always looking for bargains — it's a bit of a mindset."

To help women candidates over the money barrier, four groups raise money to contribute to women candidates they support on the issues.

The National Women's Political Caucus expects to give away $1 million from its national office and $2 million through state chapters; the National Organization for Women, stung by the defeat of the Equal Rights Amendment, hopes to raise at least $3 million for the 1982 election and to help defeat legislators who voted against ratifying the ERA.

"The GOP has a grand old problem — women," said NOW President Eleanor Smeal on the day the amendment's deadline passed. Republicans were more likely to oppose the amendment than Democrats.

The National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs hopes to raise $100,000 to help women candidates and the Women's Campaign Fund — the organization that advertises "Men Run America" — seeks to come up with $200,000 in cash support and another $200,000 in such services for women candidates as polling, consulting and helping set up phone banks. The fund raises most of its money through the mail.

Executive Director Ranny Cooper says the fund helps women candidates line up appointments with the political action committees on all-important fund-raising forays to Washington.

"Women found that not only weren't they getting much money from PACs, they weren't getting past the front door," Ms. Cooper says.

"What the campaign fund has been able to do is penetrate this male-dominated network," she says. "We work very closely with the 200 or 300 largest PACs. So when a candidate comes to Washington, we put together a schedule for her, receptions, luncheons, fund-raising events. We offer her a desk, an office, a phone, a place to kick off her shoes between appointments."

The fund is bipartisan, but it has a litmus test for candidates: It wouldn't support a woman running against a male congressman who has proven to be an effective friend of the women's movement and it won't support women who oppose the ERA and favor restricting access to abortions.

Likewise, the women's caucus screens potential recipients in what chairwoman Kathy Wilson calls a "grueling three-day meeting."

The 65,000-member caucus is bipartisan — Ms. Wilson calls herself a "Jerry Ford Republican" — but, "We only help feminists," she says.

The 1982 round of primaries is not over, so it is too early to know how many women are running for Congress or state or legislative seats.

However, Rep. Millicent Fenwick, a Republican, is favored to win her race for a Senate seat from New Jersey and in Missouri Harriet Woods, a state senator. She is the daughter of Sen. Howard H. Baker, the Senate majority leader.

Roxanne Conlin, a Democrat, is trying to become Iowa's first woman governor and Lt. Gov. Madeleine Kunin is making a run in Vermont, which also never elected a woman governor before.

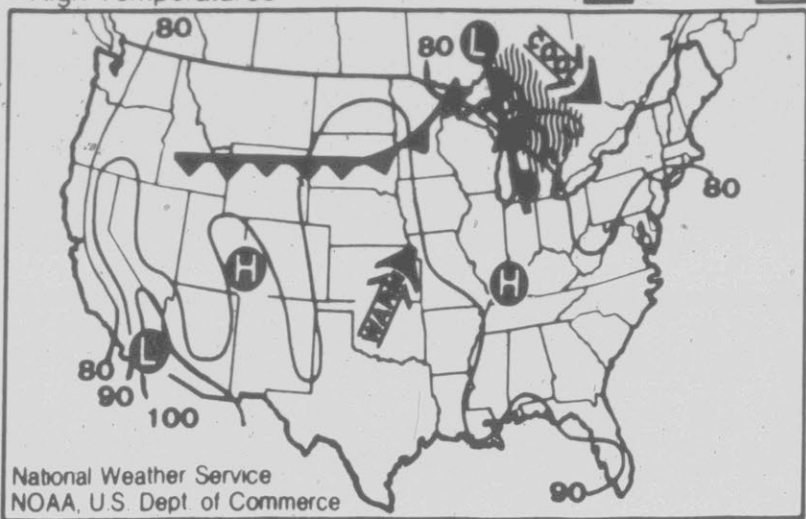

Finally, the question: Does it matter if women were to hold half the political offices?

"Yes, it would matter," says the Democrats' Ms. Lewis. "Women's lives are different, their experiences are different. In a country where half the policies were made by women, women would not make 59 cents to every dollar made by men. Old women would not live in poverty; young women would have the same opportunities as men for education. I tend to think that with more women making policy we would have fewer wars."

No Interest In Soul City

SOUL CITY, N.C. (AP) — The federal government appears to be having as much trouble selling land at Soul City as developers in the defunct "new town" project had in the past, as only one bid came in by Tuesday's deadline.

The identity of the lone bidder was not released by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, pending a decision by HUD's legal staff on whether to accept it, said Albert R. Diehl, director of operations at HUD's New Community Development Corp.

The bid of $35,650 exceeded the $34,000 minimum cost set by HUD for the parcel. HUD had hoped for bids totaling at least $815,000 on five parcels it owns in Soul City.

"I suspect that the state of the economy has made it difficult for people to be able to bid," Diehl said. "We think the prices were very reasonable."

Floyd B. McKissick, a former civil rights leader who directed Soul City before the government scrapped the project, had no comment on the bid. The federal government poured about $29 million in grants, contracts and loan guarantees into the project in the 1970s before HUD decided in 1979 that Soul City had failed. The development, which had a population of 124, had achieved less than 10 percent of its goals in population, housing and industrial jobs.

HUD later took possession of most of the land owned by the developer because the land had been used as collateral for a $10 million HUD-backed loan.

Deserves High Priority

It is entirely reasonable to believe some public works are showing wear and tear at a time when money is running out. Likewise, it is entirely reasonable that due to the budget crunch a number of projects have been delayed until state finances and the state's economy acquire a healthier hue.

As reported earlier, a $300 million water and sewer bond referendum has been postponed; and the proposed $600 million school bond issue has been put on "hold".

But state Treasurer Harlan Boyles says the worst problems lie in highways and public schools. "We have not practiced preventive maintenance because of the lack of sufficient resources", Boyles said. "When budgets are put together it's easy to postpone maintenance programs because we can 'get by'. We need to address the problem and address it in an aggressive way."

The hard times will pass. Eventually legislators will get around to adopting necessary revenue measures and state projects can get back into operation.

And when they do, maybe a lesson will have been learned: maintenance is as important as new projects.

It's a mistake to let the glitter of new buildings, roads and other such things blind our eyes to the very practical aspect of maintaining physical assets we already have in place. Their deterioration is unpardonably wasteful.

The upkeep and repair of public works deserves a very high priority among the things that must be done.

Air Terminal Will Serve Need

A new terminal building has been opened at Pitt-Greenville Airport with a ribbon-cutting ceremony.

The building is worth a visit, even if no air trip is planned.

The 5,000-foot $350,000 building hardly compares with the giant terminals of the nation's major airports, but for the service envisioned it will be entirely adequate.

The building is airy and well decorated with comfortable waiting areas for passengers.

Traffic flow is designed so that electronic checks can be made for weapons here rather than at a destination airport.

The building is designed as a commuter terminal, and that is the type service which is expected at Pitt-Greenville for the foreseeable future. It seems to be a well-planned terminal which should serve our needs for the rest of this century.

The Very Real 'Phobia

One of the things that an Air Force general said at a recent press conference was that Americans seem to have a phobia about nuclear weapons. This struck home because I have to admit I've had such a phobia for some time. But only after the general brought it up did I decide to do something about it. I went to see Dr. Adolph Strainedluff, a psychiatrist who specializes in nuclear weapon phobias.

"On the couch," he said. "Vat seems to be the trouble?"

"Doctor," I said, staring at the ceiling. "I've this fear of nuclear weapons. I know it's silly, but to me it's very real."

"Aha, very interesting. Ven did you first become aware of such a phobia?"

"I think it was around the time of Hiroshima or Nagasaki, I'm not sure which. I saw these photos of all these people killed and miles and miles of rubble, and suddenly I got this thing about atomic weapons."

Dr. Strainedluff tapped a pencil against his knee. "So tell me, how does this phobia manifest itself?"

"In peculiar ways, Doctor. I get the feeling if I ever see a mushroom cloud, I'm going to die."

"Very interesting, very interesting. You know it's all in the mind, don't you?"

"Of course. That's why I came to you. I don't want to do anything stupid."

Dr. Strainedluff said, "You are a very sick man. You think that just because an atomic bomb killed a few thousand people more than 20 years ago, you are threatened. You are manifesting infantile repressed hostility toward the weapons of war. In psychiatry we call this a military-industrial inferiority complex."

"I know I'm sick. You've got to help me," I begged.

"All right. First, you have to get over this absurd fear of nuclear bombs. You must think of them as just another weapon in our vast defensive arsenal. We have atomic bombs and H-bombs, and in a war, one is just as good as another.

Cracks In System

By PAUL T. O'CONNOR

RALEIGH - Prior to 1974, any mentally ill person in North Carolina could get locked up in a state mental hospital simply because of his or her psychiatric problems. Changes in state law that year remedied that injustice by dictating that only those who are imminently dangerous to themselves or to the general public can be committed against their will. Since that time, the Legislature has made several changes in state law aimed at making it easier for court officials to commit those who are considered dangerous. If the 1974 law swung the weight of the system behind the individual liberties of the mentally ill, the changes in recent years have tried to bring the system more into balance with the rights of society to be protected from some of these people.

A study conducted by Lynn Gunn, staff researcher for the Mental Health Study Commission, says state law still has three "cracks" through which mentally ill persons who pose a threat to the community are finding freedom. Her report, which was presented to the commission this month, says the system works "very well for the majority of mentally ill persons." But there are exceptions.

When a mentally ill person commits a crime, there are two steps involved in getting that person out of the criminal justice system and into the mental health hospitals. First, the Superior Court must rule that he is incapable of standing trial. Second, a District Court must commit him through a civil procedure.

Ms. Gunn said there may be as many as 75 cases annually in the state where the Superior Court judge says the defendant can't stand trial but a District Court judge comes back and says the defendant doesn't meet the commitment standards of a civil proceeding. The defendant then goes free and is not treated.

Far less frequent, maybe only 15 or 20 times in the past 10 years, are those defendants who are not found guilty by reason of insanity. Then, at their commitment hearings, they are found not to meet commitment criteria. This kind of situation received a lot of attention earlier this summer after John Hinckley was found not guilty by reason of insanity in the shooting of President Reagan. Although Hinckley was not freed, there was considerable concern that he could have been let loose.

The third crack in the system, Ms. Gunn reports, comes from those people who are committed to a state hospital. There they receive treatment and medication and after a time they're reviewed. If they're in better shape, if they no longer meet the strict guidelines mandated for committing someone, then they will be released. But, Ms. Gunn says, they can become dangerous

To the editor:

"Perhaps the most fundamental objection to draft registration is moral. Only in the most severe national emergency does the government have a claim to the mandatory service of its young people. In any other time, a draft or draft registration destroys the very values that our society is committed to defending."

These most profound and beautiful words of wisdom flowed from the lips of none other than our wonderful president - Ronald Reagan. Yet, Tuesday, Aug. 17, the U.S. Government tried Enten Eller for not registering for the draft.

Eller is a conscientious objector strictly for religious beliefs, which are supposed to be protected by the Constitution; however, one supposes that the government saw this issue as an opportunity to get into the prosecution business. I would be interested to know how much of this tax increase will go to making examples of these young men in order to get across the administration's pro-military madness.

The Rev. Barry Lynn, a minister in the United Church of Christ, sums it up best: "Any law which forces a man like Enten Eller to make a choice between violating his most cherished religious beliefs or risking five years in federal prison creates unnecessary personal tragedy. Punishment of Enten Eller would make both a mockery of justice and a travesty of America's historic commitment to the protection of religious freedom."

I don't understand why the American people just gobble up everything that comes out of Reagan's mouth. I have come to believe that the only reason he opens his mouth is to change feet.

Strength For Today

STOP EVIL AT ITS SOURCE

Jesus maintained that the place to stop evil is at its source. Killing, he says, has its source in anger which runs into name-calling and altercation. Adultery has its conception in evil thoughts. Untruthfulness stems from a tendency to exaggerate and at last to play fast and loose with facts.

Our Lord declared that the old doctrine of an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth, under the Kingdom regime, to be replaced by a policy of overcoming evil with good. The true Christian does not hate his enemy while he loves his neighbor, but loves them both so that he may be a son of the Father in heaven who "maketh the sun to rise on the evil and the good, and sendeth rain on the just and the unjust."

The time to stop evil is before it gets started. Stop evil while it is still in the mind, it may be too late when it becomes an overt act. - Elisha Douglass

Apply Lever On The Fed

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON - while Republicans disemboweled each other over raising taxes, Democrats loosened the political gridlock on the recession with a plan to force the Federal Reserve Board to lower interest rates.

Ironically, the bill pressed by Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd has curiously Republican antecedents. It closely resembles what prominent supply-siders have been advocating for months. But President Reagan has become so tightly wedded to Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker that the initiative would not come from Republican leaders; it had to be the work of the Democrats. "Maybe they (the Democrats) will save us," one supply-sider and former Reagan administration official told us.

Until now, the congressional Democratic leaders, not acting like Democrats, were attempting a pale imitation of Reagan administration budget-cutting and tax-increasing austerity. Like Republicans, in both Congress and the administration, they disdained considering monetary policy. "We don't wash windows," the politicians in effect declared, leaving that messy work to central bankers like Volcker.

Now the Democrats are washing windows with a vengeance. Bills backed by House and Senate party leaders would order the Fed to abandon its October 1979 rule that attempted to put Milton Friedman's monetarist doctrine into practice by controlling the nation's money supply. The new target would be lower interest rates, with the Fed using a variety of non-inflationary devices.

This is no deviation toward soft money by Democratic liberals. It resembles what two hard-money Republicans, Lewis Lehrman (now running for governor of New York) and Jeffrey Bell tried to sell to the White House last year. Bell campaigned on it in his losing New Jersey Senate primary, and Rep. Jack Kemp featured it in his basic speech on monetary policy.

The lineal ancestor of the Democratic scheme is Dr. Edward Yardeni, chief economist of E.F. Hutton. In his newsletter last Jan. 29, he predicted a 30 percent chance for a "depression" in 1982 unless the Fed abandons monetarism. "Does that mean that the monetary authorities will go back to their old inflationary ways?" he wrote. "There is another alternative. They could target real interest rates."

Noticing Yardeni's newsletter, Sen. Dan Quayle, a freshman conservative from Indiana, introduced a resolution on March 16 embodying its ideas (which attracted little attention among other Republicans). Soon thereafter, however, economist Rich Medley of the Senate Democratic Policy Committee visited Yardeni's office to discuss his views. That began their collaboration on Byrd's bill.

It was unveiled to the Senate Democratic Conference July 27 with speeches by Yardeni and the liberal economic guru, MIT's Lester Thurow. The senators were enthusiastic, with only one reservation: They did not want their move interpreted as favoring soft-money deflation. At this writing, 34 Democratic senators traversing the political spectrum have co-sponsored the bill.

A similar bill could well pass the Democratic-controlled House before the election. But the real meaning of the initiative is that Democrats have abandoned their strange dalliance with Herbert Hoover austerity and returned to low-interest economic growth in the tradition of Andrew Jackson.

In selling the new initiative, such key Democrats as Byrd and House Majority Leader Jim Wright have muted their nonsensical claim that the recession was caused by the Reagan tax cuts. They joined the Keynesians, the supply-siders and even Professor Friedman in blaming the Fed. Yardeni, a registered Democrat who voted for Reagan, believes the Byrd bill would make the Reagan tax cuts work as intended.

The Fed's own July bulletin discloses a dirty little secret. Reserve Board Gov. Lyle E. Gramley wrote that pegging interest rates "has some merit." But he objected on grounds that "monetary restraint is more readily achieved" that today's astronomical interest rates are intended by the Fed to foster austerity.

An elitist central bank dictating interest rates runs counter to the Democratic Party's Jacksonian populist tradition but also to the right-wing populist platform on which Reagan ran for president. Although the Democrats are seeking senatorial Republican co-sponsors among liberals, they may find some surprising help on the right.

The Reagan administration's economic policymakers are so committed to austerity that the Byrd bill likely will face a veto if it passed. That would leave the low-interest rate field to the Democrats, using ideas some of Ronald Reagan's more stalwart supporters have been unable to insert into the closed mind of the White House.

Make Your Complaints Count

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer
Got a gripe?

You can probably find someone willing to listen to your complaint - and able to take action - if you know where to go and what to do.

A growing number of individual companies and industry trade associations are establishing special departments and organizations to deal with complaints. Many of them feature mediation or arbitration by independent panels or individuals, usually at no cost to the consumer.

The U.S. Office of Consumer Affairs has compiled a list of third-party resolution programs. It's available, at no charge, from the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 639K, Pueblo, Colo., 81009.

One of the newest complaint-handling organizations is ThanaCAP, established by the National Funeral

Directors Association. (Most of the complaint groups have the letters "CAP" standing for "Consumer Action Panel" or "Consumer Advisory Panel" in their names.)

ThanaCAP - the "thana" comes from a Greek word meaning death - will make recommendations on complaints about price or service; any action taken by a ThanaCAP panel will be binding on the funeral home involved and on the person making the complaint.

For information about ThanaCAP, write: ThanaCAP, 135 Wells St., Milwaukee, Wis., 53203.

Other "CAP" panels include AUTOCAP, which handles complaints about new car dealers; FICAP, which deals with furniture problems involving manufacturing defects, quality or service; and MACAP, which investigates complaints about major appliances.

In all cases, you should first try to resolve your problem with the retailer or individual manufacturer involved. If that doesn't work, try the appropriate CAP organization.

AUTOCAP, which is sponsored by the National Automobile Dealers Association, 8400 Westpark Drive, McLean, Va., 22102, tries to solve customer complaints by having one of its staff members contact the dealer involved. If the dispute is not settled within 10 days, the issue is referred to an AUTOCAP panel for review. The panel's decision is binding on the dealer only; the customer is free to take further steps if he or she is dissatisfied. To find out if there is an AUTOCAP in your area, write the national association or check state or local dealers' groups.

FICAP, whose address is

Box 951, High Point, N.C., 27261, is similar to AUTOCAP, but there is one important difference; the recommendations of the group's advisory board are not binding on either customer or manufacturer. The program is sponsored by the Southern Furniture Manufacturers Association and the Southwest Furniture Manufacturers Association.

MACAP, sponsored by the Association of Home Appliance Manufacturers, the Gas Appliance Manufacturers Association and the National Retail Merchants Association, also provides only non-binding recommendations. Appliances covered included refrigerators, kitchen ranges, home laundry equipment, dehumidifiers, dishwashers, water heaters and room air conditioners. For information, write to the MACAP, 20 North Wacker Drive, Chicago, Ill., 60606.

Life's Just Dandy For Danes

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Life is dandy in Denmark and the pits in Ethiopia, with the U.S. ranked 41st among nations in quality of life partly because it has bad luck with earthquakes and volcanoes.

Richard Estes, research director at the University of Pennsylvania School of Social Work, ranked 107 nations in his quality of life index. Factors like health services, literacy, women's rights, political stability, inflation and economic growth were considered.

Denmark was in first place and Ethiopia was last. Estes says the United States' ranking has improved in the past decade but things are getting worse in the Soviet Union. Behind the U.S. improvement was the end of the Vietnam War and the social unrest of the 1960s.

"The major difference between my index and others is that the others emphasize economic development as an indication of social progress," Estes said.

"That's why the United States always comes out on top. America generally produces wealth in spectacular dimensions," Estes said. "But in my index, only four of 44 factors were economic."

He planned to present his findings Friday at the Inter-University Consortium for International Social Development in Brighton, England.

In Estes' analysis, the United States ranks 41st and the Soviet Union 43rd.

The study examined two periods, 1979-80 and 1969-70. It found that America's rank improved from 51st to 41st. The Soviet Union meanwhile dropped from 31st to 43rd.

Nine of the top countries in the index are European. After Denmark, they top 11 countries were: Norway, Austria, the Netherlands, Sweden, New Zealand, Australia, Ireland, Belgium, Finland and West Germany. Japan was ranked 20th.

The United States ranked 22nd among the 24 rich countries Estes compared.

U.S. health and education services are as good as those in European nations, but "the administration of these programs is poor." The disparity between racial minorities and whites, as evidenced by infant mortality rates among minorities, also "pulls the U.S. down," he said.

Another negative factor for the U.S. was the eruption of Mount St. Helens in 1980. Estes said that of the 937 major natural disasters in the world between 1947 and 1979, 326 were in the United States.

Estes created a second index eliminating geographic factors. In that index, the United States improved from 41st to 24th overall and from 22nd to 18th among the 24 rich nations studied.

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexico, announcing a $1 billion advance on oil payments from the United States, prepared new foreign exchange regulations today in a further attempt to shore up its sinking economy.

Treasury Secretary Jesus Silva Herzog said Tuesday night that Mexico will reopen dollar trading on Thursday but will maintain a freeze on most transfers abroad. Rules for the renewed trading will be issued today, he said.

Silva Herzog also said Mexico is negotiating to reschedule Mexico's $80 billion foreign debt, largest in the Third World, and expected to obtain a $1.5 billion line of credit this week from central banks in Germany, Italy, France, England, Canada, Switzerland, the United States, Japan and other industrialized nations.

Besides the U.S. advance on oil payments, the finance minister said Mexico had received a $1 billion credit line from an unidentified American bank to finance grain imports. He also confirmed that talks have begun toward possible financial aid from the International Monetary Fund.

Silva Herzog did not specify how much oil Mexico is shipping to the United States, but he said total average oil exports in June and July reached an unprecedented 1.7 million barrels a day. The United States is Mexico's major market.

The finance minister, in the fourth major government announcement on the economy in less than a month, also said loans would be granted to struggling businesses and said the government would cut individual income taxes as much as 35 percent over the next four months.

In a nationally televised speech, the treasury secretary appealed for tranquility as the government worked to solve what some have described as the most serious economic crisis in the last 60 years. He said he expected some companies to fail and unemployment to climb.

The government suspended foreign exchange trading last Friday, freezing an estimated $13 billion in Mexican bank accounts. It later allowed banks to buy dollars and partially resumed foreign payments, but converting pesos into dollars still is banned.

The central bank withdrew support for Mexico's peso currency on Aug. 5 and the peso sank as low as 90 to the dollar. It was the second devaluation of the year and was followed by calls for wage increases and price controls. The peso opened the year at 27 to the dollar and sank to 49 before the latest devaluation.

Mexico doubled prices for corn tortillas and bread, and increased gasoline and electricity costs by 60 percent on Aug. 1 in an attempt to cut costly government subsidies.

Silva Herzog said two government decrees will be issued today explaining the rules for the renewed currency trading.

One would establish a previously announced preferential exchange system that sets a special dollar rate for companies importing food and key industrial materials. The other will establish a method for purchasing dollars at a higher fixed rate.

For the time being, Mexico will observe an exchange rate of 69.5 pesos to the dollar for currency trading, the level at which trading closed last Thursday, Silva Herzog said. He said that the freeze on transfer of dollar accounts and other foreign currencies abroad will remain in effect in most cases.

Tremor Shakes Californians

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A moderate earthquake struck northern California early today, swaying skyscrapers in San Francisco and awakening residents but causing minor damage, authorities said. No injuries were reported.

The University of California's Seismographic Station in Berkeley said the quake registered 4.5 on the Richter scale. The station said the epicenter of the 1:45 a.m. PDT quake was 60 miles southeast of Berkeley and east of Santa Cruz.

It was felt from Santa Cruz County in the south to Marin County in the north, authorities said.

The tremor, which lasted about 15 seconds in some areas, gave the police station in Berkeley "a pretty good jolt," said dispatcher Karen Dewees.

Skyscrapers in San Francisco, including the building housing the offices of The Associated Press, swayed for five or six seconds.

Police in San Francisco, Oakland, Berkeley, San Jose and towns in between were delayed by telephone calls by residents.

Callers to all-night radio stations described the feeling variously as a jolt, a bang and a shake, but aside from broken dishes and windows, flickering lights and briefly interrupted telephone service, no serious damage was mentioned.

In San Jose, 45 miles south of the bay, the quake rattled windows and shook the walls of buildings, said Steve Walsh of KGO-TV.

More than 100 calls were received by police within minutes of the quake, said San Jose communications operator Rich McIntosh.

"One man said he woke up on the floor," McIntosh said. "A few other people said they were thrown out of bed, but we haven't heard of any injuries or real damage."

Callers to local radio stations reported some small damage — broken glass and dishes — but no injuries in Los Gatos, southwest of San Jose.

"I was sitting back eating my lunch in the middle of the night and I felt the floor move," said Santa Clara police clerk Peggy Clausen.

In Sunnyvale, about 30 miles north of the reported epicenter, only a few callers reported feeling the tremor to the Department of Safety.

"Our building shook a little, but it wasn't too bad," said Officer Bob Lopes.

In Monterey and Carmel, just west of the epicenter along the coast, police reported no calls and said they had not felt it.

N.C. Tourism Industry Faring Well Despite Broad Recession

By ROBIN TEATER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Tourism, North Carolina's third largest industry, is faring well this year despite the nation's recession and a mixed response to the World's Fair, say state officials.

Figures for May showed a 20 percent increase in tourism revenues over the same month in the previous year. Tourism brought $256 million to the state in May, compared with $200 million in May 1981.

Through July, attendance at the state's welcome centers was up 14 percent compared to the same period in 1981, with more than 2.2 million visitors compared to 1.9 million.

"Travel and tourism has been the highlight of the state's economy this year," said D.M. "Lauch" Faircloth, secretary of the N.C. Department of Commerce.

Charles Heatherly, director of the N.C. Division of Travel and Tourism, says the fair has pumped extra business into western North Carolina, although merchants in the area have had mixed reactions about the effect of the fair.

He says larger merchants and chains have been able to advertise and thus attract people traveling to and from the fair, while some smaller businesses couldn't afford to.

Dot Mason, executive director of the Cherokee

County Chamber of Commerce in Murphy, said that combined, the chamber and welcome center have had 66,777 visitors this year, compared with 34,599 last year through the same period.

Mrs. Mason said she thought rumors of expensive and crowded accommodations for fairgoers stopping in western North Carolina hurt merchants at the start of the Fair. But word has gotten around that room's available, she said.

Visits to the mountain-area center have increased 229 percent so far this month — 106 percent in June and July, which normally are the biggest months, Ms. Mason said.

"These people are traveling from across the state, asking for information on Asheville, the Smoky Mountains, Winston-Salem and attractions in the mountain region," Mrs. Mason said of the tourists. "And quite a few of them are going to the seashore. They're looking for quality things to see."

Because of the World's Fair, she said, the center has had more foreigners than in the past and more people from distant states, such as Texas and Montana. For the first time, the center has even had visitors from the Soviet Union.

Steve Miller at the Biltmore House in Asheville said attendance for the year through July is up 24 percent over 1981, which was a record year for the attraction.

"The World's Fair is having a very positive effect on us," Miller said. "Some research we have done shows that about a third of our visitors are including the World's Fair and Biltmore on the same trip."

Spokesmen for Carowinds amusement park and Pinehurst Country Club and Golf Club also reported an increase in business this year.

And some beach-area resorts have been packed, managers said.

"We're quite pleased with what we have seen this year," said John Daniels of the Carteret County

Chamber of Commerce in Morehead City. He said the area has been solidly booked on all weekends since spring and the weekdays have been busy, too.

Melanie Play of the Outer Banks Chamber of Commerce said traffic has been heavy. And in the South Brunswick Islands on the state's southeastern corner, Pat Dowling reported that inquiries are up this year despite the fact that less advertising was done in the area.

Heatherly said larger businesses "have been weathering the storm," while the smaller restaurants and motels, for example, "are feeling the pinch" of the economy.

Maintenance Of Facilities Will Be Engineers' District Priority

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The new district commander of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers says maintaining existing facilities will be at the top of the list of priorities for the Wilmington district.

That includes harbors, two state ports and an intricate network of channels called the Interoceanic Waterway, Brig. Gen. John F. Wall Jr. said in a telephone interview from his headquarters in Atlanta.

Wall assumed command of the corps' South Atlantic Division on Aug. 12. Included in the South Atlantic Division is the Wilmington District, which is comprised of North Carolina and south-central Virginia.

One change Wall plans to make is for the corps to have a hand in the Randleman Dam in Guilford County, a structure proposed for construction in 1983.

Wall said he hopes to establish some more hydroelectric dams in North Carolina. Replenishing beaches — something the corps has been involved in at Carolina Beach — also probably will remain a high priority, he said.

The corps also will make sure channels remain properly dredged at the state's two ports at Morehead City and Wilmington.

Wry Memory

HELENA, Mont. (AP) — Mayor Russ Ritter isn't too pleased with the way he greeted President Reagan in Billings recently and admits he's embarrassed.

Ritter greeted Reagan with the words, "Hello, Mr. Mayor..."

Reagan quickly corrected Ritter by saying, "No, I'm the president, you're the mayor."

Ritter had planned to greet the president Aug. 11 in Billings by saying, "Hello, Mr. President, I'm the mayor of Helena," but it didn't come out that way.

On Tuesday, when asked about the incident, Ritter replied in serious fashion: "I don't think I'd joke about something like that."

Token Sentence In First Trial For Non-Registering

By The Associated Press
An "honorable" young Virginian who said he was obeying God by not registering for the draft has been given three years' probation, and a Californian who once wrote the president to complain about registration is asking that similar charges against him be dropped.

Enten Eller, a 20-year-old Bridgewater (Va.) College student whose defense was his religious beliefs, was sentenced Tuesday by U.S. District Judge James Turk to three years' probation and ordered to register within 90 days or face a prison term. "There are many people in the room who think your actions heroic — that you are a hero," Turk told Eller in a Roanoke, Va., courtroom. "I'm not passing on that one way or the other. But the defense you raised or didn't raise here has made you an honorable person in the eyes of this court."

Turk ordered Eller to perform at least 250 hours of community service as part of his sentence.

But Eller declared that he won't register, citing his beliefs as a member of the pacifist Church of the Brethren.

To do so, he said, "would make a farce out of this. I think I made that clear to the judge in the courtroom. Right now, that's the way I feel. I'm always open to thinking about it."

Turk said Eller now may be considered already registered by the Selective Service System, because it now knows his name, age and address. Probation officials will make the final decision, he said.

The government has estimated that of the 8.5 million men eligible for draft registration since July 1980, when mandatory registration was reinstated, 700,000 have failed to sign up.

Student Benjamin H. Sasway, 21, of Vista, Calif., the first person to be indicted on draft-related charges since the Vietnam War, faces trial Aug. 24 on a charge of failing to register. Three men besides Eller and Sasway also have been indicted.

The names of 160 men who have not registered have been sent to local U.S. attorneys' offices across the country. Federal officials say they expect the compliance rate will increase as the cases go to court.

Sasway's lawyer sought to have charges against Sasway dropped at a pretrial hearing in San Diego on Tuesday, arguing his client was unfairly singled out for opposing mandatory registration.

Charles T. Bumer filed written arguments with U.S. District Judge Gordon Thompson, Jr., saying the registration law is unconstitutional and those indicted so far are victims of selective prosecution. Bumer questioned the Justice Department attorney in charge of compliance with the law, David Kline, who said he issued guidelines that "only those who were the most adamant in their refusal" were to be prosecuted. That policy will be re-evaluated, he said.

But Sasway's outspokenness had nothing to do with the case, Kline said. "We wouldn't consider prosecuting people for exercising their First Amendment rights," Selective Service attorney

Edward Frankle said at the hearing that Sasway came to his attention "when he wrote a letter to President Jimmy Carter."

Frankle said he remembered Sasway "because his letter was one of the longest and most detailed." But he said it was filed away with hundreds of others.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Little is a big name in Arkansas. Big is not so big. And West is more popular than East, North or South. In Yell County, you can visit Sunrise Point in the morning and Sunset Point in the evening. If you get hurt in the town of Accident School in Benton County or the fish aren't biting in Bad Luck Creek in White County, you can go to Okay in Howard County. That's a sample of the information in a computerized file of names and locations of almost 22,000 places and physical features in Arkansas. The file, including towns, school, reservoirs, parks, creeks, springs and canyons, was developed by the U.S. Geological Survey to keep federal maps uniform. According to the file, 329 names in the state begin with Little but only 204 with Big. There are 104 names starting with West, but only 82 with East, 77 with North and 72 with South. The file lists names from A Ditch in Mississippi County to Zont in Monroe County. Carroll County has a Democrat Hollow and Faulkner County has a Republican Cemetery. ### Seek Delay Lake Work

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) - The Conservation Council of North Carolina has asked for a delay in the proposed $136 million Randleman lake project - a project city officials call the best way to meet future water needs.

Dan Besse of Greensboro, CCNC vice president said further study is needed on the cost of the project and the possible alternatives.

The CCNC request was consistent with its stand against other water projects, said Lindsay Cox, director of the Piedmont Triad Council of Governments, which represents communities affected by the project.

The Reagan administration has asked Congress to include $8.2 million for the lake in its fiscal 1983 budget.

CCNC has about 500 members statewide and about 25 member groups, ranging from garden clubs to the League of Women Voters, Besse said. The group aided in a successful fight against a series of dams on the French Broad River proposed by the Tennessee Valley Authority but failed in its attempt to block the B.

Everett Jordan Lake, he said.

Meanwhile, a staff aide to the House subcommittee on water and energy development said Wednesday that the subcommittee will not consider Randleman and eight other Army projects until Congress returns from its August recess after Labor Day.

Preparing New Insurance Plan

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) - The state's Office of Management and Budget and a Texas-based firm are working on a booklet that will answer state employees' questions about North Carolina's new self-insured health benefits plan.

Electronic Data Systems Corp. of Texas is scheduled to take over administering the state health plan Oct. 1.

Blue Cross & Blue Shield of North Carolina has been providing and administering the state's health benefits, but the General Assembly voted earlier this year to let the state assume the role of insurer for the employees while Electronic Data Systems would administer the plan.

The company has been enrolling people who will qualify for the new plan, said Steve Whittan, director of the company's plan services. About 425,000 state employees, teachers, retirees and their dependents qualify for coverage.

Whittan said EDS is planning to have 350,000 copies printed and mailed between Sept. 1 and 15.

The brochure will give a summary of the eligible covered medical expenses. The plan calls for a $100 deductible for each person, with each family member meeting the $100 deductible, he said.

Whittan said other information outlined in the brochure includes:

- The co-payment clause. After the individual meets the deductible, the plan will pay 95 percent of the allowable charges for the covered expenses, while the state employee will pay 5 percent.

- Employee out-of-pocket expense of $100 per calendar year. When the employee's contribution exceeds $100, the plan will pay 100 percent of the allowable charges for the covered expenses, providing the employee also has met the deductible.

For certain medical expenses, the plan will pay

100 percent of the allowable fees without a copayment or payment of the deductible, Whittan said.

Those expenses include ones for accidental injury - up to $300 per covered individual per calendar year. After that, the plan will pay at the normal rate, he said.

Other areas paid by the plan without a deductible and copayment are ambulatory outpatient surgery, pre-admission testing and second surgical opinions for five specific procedures, which are discussed in the brochure.

The brochure also will outline optional new-born care benefits, Whittan said.

Jim Piner, assistant state budget officer, says the brochure is subject to the approval of a still to be appointed nine-member board of trustees that will govern the new plan and set the new rate schedule.

Right Test On The Wrong Car

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) - The test was a smashing success, but it was the wrong car.

That's what state Department of Transportation officials said Tuesday about a mix-up that had a 1-year-old car crash into a highway post to test the post's flexibility.

DOT spokesman Jack Devine said officials were looking for a "light car" for the test when they called the state's Waterford repair shop.

The car was light, but it also was a 1981 AMC Concord.

The "unfortunate misunderstanding" led to $500 worth of damage to the car, which was owned by the state and assigned to a Waterford employee, Devine said.

For certain medical expenses, the plan will pay

Renowned bridge clubs, such as New York's Cavenish Club, earn their reputation because of the famous players who are, or have been, members. But playing with the stars can have beneficial effects on the skill of the membership as well. Watch a former president of the club, Lee Koppel, at work during a rubber bridge game.

North-South were using a five-card major system, so North's bid of two hearts was not necessarily a true reverse. Koppel's bid of six trump is typical of the dash that earned him the rank of major in the Israeli army before he settled in New York.

Declarer won the diamond lead in dummy and led a heart to his queen and West's king. West continued with a diamond, won in the closed hand. If hearts broke evenly, declarer would have twelve tricks, so he cashed the jack-ace in the suit. When that suit followed the percent-tages, Koppel had to look elsewhere for the fulfilling trick.

He thought of the spade finesse, and led the queen from the table. When East followed perhaps a trifle too smoothly with a low spade, declarer decided that that finesse was not going to work. So he elected to fall back on a squeeze. He rose with the ace of spades and ran his diamonds.

On the long diamonds declarer discarded the ten and jack of spades. West, who had sluffed a spade on the third heart, had no trouble parting with a spade on the fourth diamond. But the last diamond was the final turn of the screw. Since West had to keep the king of spades to guard against the nine in dummy, he was forced to sluff a club. Now declarer was able to reel off four club tricks to score his slam.

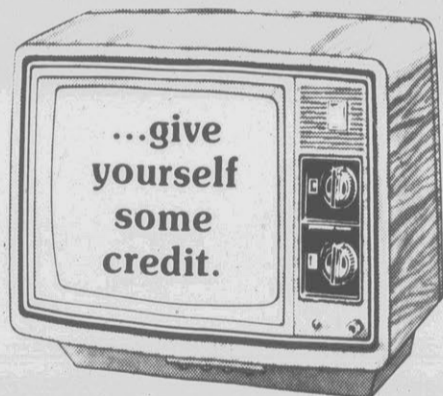

There are those who might think that the squeeze technique is the best part of this hand. But for our money we like the fact that declarer won the first diamond in dummy and immediately led a heart to his hand. If East had the king, or if the suit had divided 3-3, declarer would have had twelve tricks without having to resort to a finesse, much less a squeeze!

Police Charged With Drug-Use

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — The recent suspension of 11 police officers from the Greensboro police force for their alleged involvement with drugs is not the only such instance in the state — similar incidents have occurred in the past three years in Durham and Winston-Salem.

In August 1979, four Durham vice squad officers were indicted on drug conspiracy charges following a probe that also implicated two civilians.

In the spring of 1980, several members of the Winston-Salem police force, including a sergeant, resigned in the wake of an internal investigation into alleged marijuana use.

The suspension of 11 policemen in Greensboro was announced Monday following an eight-week probe conducted by the Greensboro department's internal affairs division, said Capt. David Williams, who heads the division. He said it was the largest group of officers accused of wrongdoing since he assumed his position in 1973.

Although police officials acknowledge that drug involvement by law enforcement officers is a continuing problem, they also say that law enforcement agencies are one of the few professions that does something about it.

Raleigh Police Chief Fredrick Heineman said he has not experienced the problem in his department. He said the "only thing unique is that we (police) do something about it" while other professions may not. He said he had heard of drug problems in some of the nation's biggest city police departments.

L.A. Powell, chief of police in Winston-Salem, says drugs usage by police is something police departments have had to deal with for some time, and he said it is becoming more of a problem for larger police departments.

Greensboro Police Chief W.E. Swing, who has headed the department since 1974, would not say whether the present case was the most serious internal problem he's encountered.

"Usually, at least with me, the most current problem is the most serious problem," he said.

Greensboro police officials say their department has been relatively scandal-free, especially in comparison to departments in other large, urban areas.

Williams would not discuss details of the investigation, declining to say how many people were interviewed. But he said he believes the department as a whole accepted and cooperated with the probe.

"I think the departmental attitude was, 'If there are officers in wrongdoing, it should be rooted out,'" he said.

Recall For Carrier Seat

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Consumer Product Safety Commission has announced the recall of an infant carrier seat that could malfunction and allow a child to fall out.

About 15,000 of the carriers were sold nationwide between 1975 and 1980 under the name "Tenderkare" model 412, and also by Sears, Roebuck under the name "Winnie-the-Pooh Rocker-Carrier" model 36511, the commission said. The carrier cost about $20.

The recall is being conducted voluntarily by the manufacturer, Pines of America of Ft. Wayne, Ind.

The combination infant seat and carrier has a removable leg rest and many adults carry the product by holding it under the leg rest. When this is done, the commission said, the leg rest could come off and the child could fall out.

The firm is asking owners of the carriers to stop using the detachable leg rests as a handle. The company is offering a $5 refund to people who remove the leg rest and return it, with their name and address, to Pines of America, P. O. Box 8801, Ft. Wayne, Ind., 46808. Postage costs also will be reimbursed.

Raised $90,538 With Telethon

The fifth annual Cystic Fibrosis Telethon cosponsored by the New Bern Jaycees and Jayceettes and WCTI-TV raised $90,538, a 25 percent increase over the 1981 total.

Approximately 50 talent acts from eastern North Carolina appeared during the event, which ran 19 hours from Friday night to 6:30 p.m. Saturday.

"We are very pleased with the results of the telethon," said W. Bruce Joyner, executive director of the North Carolina Cystic Fibrosis Chapter. "This telethon has really grown into a regional event that encompasses the entire viewing area of WCTI-TV and hundreds of people were actively involved," he added.

According to Joyner, over 30 Jaycee-Jaycee-ette chapters in the viewing area conducted special fund-raising events and worked at satellite telephone stations.

Funds raised in the telethon will help support the CF Foundation's programs of research, treatment and education in North Carolina and nationwide.

Tobacco Prices Top 1981, But So Do The Costs

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Tobacco farmers in North Carolina are getting higher prices per pound for their leaf than they did at this time last year, but agriculture officials say farmers probably won't make as much money as they did in 1981.

Tobacco prices have rebounded from that a disappointing start and now run from $5 to $12 per hundred pounds above what farmers received at the same point in the selling season last year.

Agriculture officials say, however, that the higher prices aren't compensating for the higher costs of production, and that farmers won't make as much money. "Across the board, just about every tobacco farmer will end up with less money this year than last year," said John H. Cyrus, chief of the state Department of Agriculture's tobacco affairs division.

"The high prices are really deceiving," he continued. "Anybody who sees the higher prices thinks the farmers are doing well. But really, they're not doing that well."

"This has been an expensive crop," said Charles B. King, who raises 94 acres of tobacco in Wake County. "And I think as a whole, farmers are going to come up short this year. Way short, I'm afraid." On Tuesday, sales on the Eastern Belt averaged $167.67 per hundred pounds, compared with $162.95 after the same number of sales days last year.

On the Old and Middle Belt, prices averaged $158.35 through Tuesday, compared with $148.43 through the same date in 1981.

Prices on the Border Belt stood at $165.28 through Tuesday, compared $160.35 on the same date a year ago. Officials are declining to predict how high the averages might climb as better quality, upstake leaf goes to market, but Cyrus pointed out that the average price in Georgia — which is four weeks ahead of North Carolina in its harvest — was $197.38.

"Even though it started out lower, the farmers' season average is going to be higher than last year," Cyrus said. "It'll probably be about $8 to $10 (per 100 pounds)."

In addition to an inflationary increase in production costs, farmers this year are having to take on other increases when they sell their crop: a $3 per 100 pound levy to make the tobacco stabilization program self sufficient; a 10 cents per 100 pound increase in the cost of grading; and a 3-cent increase in the cost of a Tobacco Association promotion program. "If he averages $8 more a hundred than last year, $3 is taken out," Cyrus said. "Then he's going to sell considerably fewer pounds so that extra $5 a pound doesn't go very far. That's going to be hitting him from two sides."

he's going to have less money at the end of this season than he had last year.

Less money by a long shot."

Mississippi Demos Pick Black For Congress Race

By JAMES SAGGUS
Associated Press Writer
JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — State Rep. Robert Clark, who was the first black since Reconstruction to become a state legislator, is one step closer to being Mississippi's first black congressman in a century.

The 52-year-old businessman from Ebenezer won 57 percent of the vote in Tuesday's Democratic primary to beat three white opponents in the 2nd Congressional District, which has a black majority.

Clark emphasized that he does not intend to make race an issue in his campaign for the general election on Nov. 2. "I got white votes in the primary election," he said, "and I will need white votes to win the general election."

Fifty-three percent of the district's population is black, although 52 percent of the voters eligible to cast ballots are white.

Clark will face Republican nominee Webb Franklin, 40, a Greenwood lawyer, in the Nov. 2 general election. He is trying to become Mississippi's first black congressman since Republican John R. Lynch, who served in the 1880-82 session.

Primary contests were held in three of the state's five districts.

In the 1st District, incumbent Rep. Jamie Whitten, 72, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee and dean of the state's congressional delegation, won the Democratic race, while former television reporter

Fran Fawcett, 32, of Oxford, won the GOP contest.

Incumbent G.V. Montgomery, 61, chairman of the House Veterans Affairs Committee, won the Democratic race in the 3rd.

There were no GOP candidates in the 3rd District and no primaries at all in the 4th and 5th.

Republican Rep. Trent Lott, House minority whip, was unopposed for re-nomination in the 5th, and Rep. Wayne Dowdy, a freshman Democrat, was unopposed for renomination in the 4th. Both have general election opposition.

The 2nd District attracted a big field after Democratic Rep. David Bowen announced he would not seek re-election.

In complete returns, Clark had 36,257 votes or 57 percent of the total; banker Pete Johnson, 34, of Clarksdale, a grandson of the late Gov. Paul B. Johnson Sr., drew 14,298 votes; state Sen. Ollie Mohamed, 57, of Belzoni, 8,802; and state Rep. Ed Jackson of Cleveland, 4,463.

Clark, a widower raising two young sons, was largely isolated when he broke the race barrier in the Legislature in 1968, but worked well with his colleagues in his first term. He advanced through the ranks to become chairman of the influential House Education Committee.

State party leaders have promised to back Clark's campaign. Gov. William Winter offered his "unqualified support," and state Democratic Party Chairman Danny Cupit noted that Clark "has a deep and broad base of support, making it easy for the party."

Franklin went into the general election by easily defeating civil rights figure Clennon King, who abandoned the race and left for Miami. With one precinct missing, Franklin led 7,124 to 90.

In the 1st District, Whitten beat Jim Richardson of Corinth by 21,000 to 3,933 in final returns. Ms. Fawcett beat Van East of Amory, 3,097 to 2,148, in the only real race outside the 2nd District.

In the 3rd District, Montgomery defeated James Ellison Parker of Laurel 26,851 to 2,271 in complete returns.

Tougher Rest Home Laws Urged By State Official

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Stronger laws are needed to prevent the neglect and abuse of rest-home residents that allegedly occurred recently in two North Carolina homes, a state official says. "I think we have a right good level of care in all the institutional setups in the state," said Ernest Messer, assistant director of the Division of Aging in the N.C. Department of Human Resources. "But... we've seen that there are exceptions to the rule." State officials in July tried to revoke the operating license of F.L. Beam Rest Home in Lawdale after an investigation resulted in allegations of mistreatment and sexual abuse of residents there. Later that month, officials made a similar move against Hemlocks Rest Home in McDowell County, saying residents there weren't being cared for properly.

Messer insists those are rare cases and that there is no statewide trend toward poor treatment of rest home residents. But he says what allegedly happened at the Beam and Hemlocks homes would be less likely to occur elsewhere if North Carolina's laws on rest homes were as strict as those on nursing homes.

The General Assembly in 1981 enacted a "bill of rights" for rest home residents similar to one created in 1977 for nursing-home patients. Both versions guarantee the residents and patients:

- Dignified and respectful treatment that meets medical needs as well as state and federal requirements.
- Written statements of what services the facilities provide and charges for services not covered under Medicare and Medicaid.
- Privacy and confidential treatment of medical records.

- Freedom to manage one's own financial affairs unless the authority has been legally designated to someone else.
- Avenues for formal presentation of grievances.

— Protection from unreasonable removal from the facility.

While the bill of rights goes a long way toward protecting rest home residents, it has a deficiency which the bill of rights for nursing home patients does not have, Messer said.

The nursing bill requires that counties establish "community advisory committees" to monitor the nursing homes. The rest home bill encourages counties to create similar committees to monitor rest homes — but does not require it.

The Division of Aging has recommended that the advisory committees for rest homes be made mandatory. A legislative study commission is considering it. But it will be hard to accomplish, because it was a point supporter of the rest home bill of rights conceded to get the bill passed in 1981, Messer said.

"There was so much opposition (from rest homes) that we had to compromise," he said.

Local monitoring of rest homes is important because there are about 950 in the state, compared to about 200 nursing homes, Messer said. "Departments of social services in the various counties are supposed to check (rest homes) at regular intervals, but it's a heavy load," he said.

Besides keeping an eye on area rest homes, local committees can deal with complaints, most of which can be settled locally without involving state officials, Messer said.

For example, prior to 1977 when the nursing home bill of rights established community advisory committees, some 400 complaints a year — including many frivolous ones — were pouring into the Human Resources Department's Division of Facilities Services, he said.

In the two-year period after the committees were put in place, some 300 complaints were made. All but 20 or so were settled locally.

"We think that's a pretty good record," Messer said. "Settling complaints on the local level is good for everybody. It saves time and money; it can weed out the minor problems and leave us in Raleigh more time to deal with serious problems."

Meanwhile, 168 complaints have come to the Division of Facilities Services since the rest home bill was enacted. Fifty have been investigated, while 118 were referred to county social services departments or rejected as without merit, said facilities services spokesman Dudley Stallings, who said residents' family members had registered most of the complaints.

The 1981 law on rest homes charges the Department of Human Resources with enforcing the bill of rights and allows department officials to revoke the licenses of homes that don't comply.

But when the department announced it was revoking the Hemlocks Rest Home license, the home obtained a restraining order blocking the move. It may take a lengthy court fight to resolve the matter.

"Dealing with the courts is another problem we're facing," Messer said. "It's like capital punishment: you have it on the books but it takes forever to execute somebody. Rest homes can go to court and throw all kinds of stumbling blocks in the way of enforcing the rules."

Draws 15 Years In Killing His Wife

WADESBORO, N.C. (AP)

— A former Wadesboro police dispatcher has received a 15-year sentence after pleading no contest to second-degree murder in the shotgun slaying of his wife.

Purvis Walters was sentenced in Anson County Superior Court for the Feb. 15 slaying of his wife, Linda, in the presence of the couple's 9-year-old son.

Prosecution witnesses testified that marital infidelity on both sides may have led to the rage that left Mrs. Walters dead.

Walters, a 19-year veteran of the police force, claimed Tuesday that he still does not remember firing four blasts at his wife from a distance of less than 6 feet. Walters also shot himself twice with the .410-gauge shotgun but survived the critical injuries.

A statement taken from the Walters' son Eric, now 10, takes up where Walters' memory fades. The statement, read in court, said Eric heard his parents arguing.

Walters then took a shotgun from a gun rack and got shells from the bedroom, according to the statement. When Eric heard a shot, he ran to the living room and saw his mother on the floor, wounded in the leg.

Eric's statement said his mother begged Walters not to shoot again, but he fired, hitting her in the arm.

The boy said he heard two more shots and asked his father to stop shooting his mother, to which Walters responded, "Your momma's already dead."

The boy's statement said he heard two more shots and found his parents both bloody on the floor.

BIGGER YET — Garden enthusiast Gene Daughtridge of Route 3, Rocky Mount, displays a 55-pound cantaloupe he recently picked. The weight of the large cantaloupe was verified by Nash County agricultural agent Frankie Howell at Nash Gas and Oil Co. in Nashville on state-verified scales. This specimen is three and one-half pounds heavier than the cantaloupe Daughtridge grew last year. The giant may merit an entry in a forthcoming issue of the Guinness Book of World Records. (Photograph courtesy Nancy Wilson, the Nashville Graphic newspaper)

Hospital Bd...

Richardson praised hospital employees who, he said, showed a willingness to participate extensively in a Red Cross blood drive held at the hospital Aug. 7. The drive resulted in 140 pints being donated.

It was announced that the N.C. Division of Facility Services has given provisional approval for Pitt Memorial to be a Level II trauma center.

Preliminary information on an administrative reorganization was given. Consideration is being given to changing designation of top administrators from titles like director and assistant director to titles like president, vice president, etc., the board was told. More discussion will be carried out next month, it was promised.

The trustees approved $5,900 for the furnishings for the rehabilitation director's office.

Provisional active medical staff privileges were approved for Dr. Judith Yongue and Dr. Jerry Gregory in psychiatry; Dr. Jose Risco in ophthalmology; Dr. Samuel Lentz in obstetrics and gynecology; Dr. Charles Means Jr. in dentistry (oral and maxillofacial surgery). Dr. Andrea Brand was given provisional consulting staff privileges in emergency and courtesy staff privileges in family practice. Approved for advancement from provisional to full active staff privileges were Dr. Sudhakar Madakisira and Dr. Everett Simmons, both in psychiatry; Dr. Samuel Spicer in emergency medicine; Dr. David Vaughn in family medicine and Dr. Steven Grossman in internal medicine.

Building committee chairman Charles Gaskins pointed out that the administration-education building construction is at the masonry stage and that work is under way, with in-house construction crews, for additions to the dining room, medical records and intensive surgery.

The education program on echocardiography was presented by Dr. Allen Bowyer with introductions by Dr. Eugene Furth.

Scorn Spoons In Eating Pasta

NEW YORK (AP) - The owners of three Manhattan's best known Italian restaurants recently convened to feast on pasta and to discuss how and with what it should be eaten.

The subject of using a fork with a spoon for eating pasta brought unanimous response from the diners. All were adamant that spoons are for children and amateurs. It is correct, though, to place a spoon at each place setting, they said.

Eruption Is 'Likely' At St. Helens

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) - Scientists spotted glowing cracks on the lava dome of Mount St. Helens today and a scientist said there was "a good possibility" a mild eruption was under way.

As earthquakes continued to rumble through the southwest Washington volcano, scientists flying over the peak observed "some glowing cracks" on the 700-foot high dome, Willie Kimoshita, a U.S. Geological Survey geophysicist, said shortly after 5 a.m.

"I think it's fairly certain material is being added inside the dome," he said. "Whether this glowing they see is new material being extruded or not, we don't know."

Scientists were unsure if an eruption was in progress, although Kimoshita said "it's a good possibility."

A tape-recorded message at the University of Washington geophysics center in Seattle said there had been "no significant changes" at the volcano in the 10 hours before 4 a.m.

Christina Boyko of the geophysics center said late Tuesday night that while it was uncertain if an eruption was under way, "it's possible that it may have started in the last couple of hours."

"If they see a lot of that (glowing material), it may mean there's a new lobe on the dome," a definite indication of an eruption, she said.

She said the southwest Washington volcano may have entered a "transition phase" that usually signals the start of an eruption. Both rockfalls and earthquakes were recorded on seismic instruments at the geophysics center, she said. Earthquakes tend to decrease and rockfalls increase at the onset of the type of non-violent, dome-building eruption scientists predicted was likely, she added.

AL Throws Filibuster At 'Dump Kuhn' Campaign

SAN DIEGO (AP) — It was a matter of politics, the stuff of which novels are made.

It was a power play, and it came straight out of a Capitol Hill melodrama.

In a surprise move, the American League successfully delayed the culmination Tuesday of a debate that will determine the fate of baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn, high lord of the game for the past 14 years.

"Mystery has been pretty good for baseball over the years," said John McHale, president of the Montreal Expos and one of the men working behind the scenes to thwart the latest "Dump Bowie" campaign.

American League owners threw a filibuster into baseball's summer meetings Tuesday by backing Kuhn and buying some valuable time. They were trying to head off a National League threat to Kuhn's bid for a third term as commissioner of the nation's pastime.

"There's still some opposition. There's still a lot of different ways things could go," said Bill Giles, president of the Philadelphia Phillies.

On Tuesday, the National League's 12 owners convened a special session at a seaside resort hotel in San Diego, called by three clubs in an effort drum up support for the ouster of Kuhn.

Their meeting came to a halt after almost two hours, however, some 15 minutes after the American League sent three representatives over to seek a recess.

The three AL representatives — league President Lee MacPhail, Oakland A's President Roy Eisenhardt and Baltimore Orioles chairman Edward Bennett Williams — requested a brief caucus with Los Angeles Dodgers' owner Peter O'Malley, a longtime Kuhn supporter.

After a two-minute discussion on a veranda overlooking a picturesque marina in San Diego Bay, O'Malley returned to the National League meeting room. Soon, the gathering ended, apparently without giving Kuhn antagonists time to gain necessary momentum.

"MacPhail came in and said the American League was going to support the commissioner," said McHale. He termed the development "a pretty dramatic result" but acknowledged that "the National League position is still open."

National League President Chub Feeney said debate on the issue would resume this morning in a joint session of all 26 major league clubs, giving AL proponents a chance to bring to bear the full weight of their pro-Kuhn influence.

As the meetings began, there were three NL owners seeking a fourth in their bid to dump Kuhn. All three — Nelson Doubleday of the New York Mets, August Busch of the St. Louis Cardinals and John McMullen of the Houston Astros — reaffirmed their opposition to Kuhn Tuesday, but were unable to come up with a fourth owner needed to assure that Kuhn would not receive the required three-quarters majority to survive.

They left the meeting hurriedly and without comment, as did Atlanta's Ted Turner, a man feared by pro-Kuhn activists as holding the critical vote.

"Turner never really said how he is going to vote," said Giles.

"No votes were taken, not even a straw vote," said Giles, whose club backs the re-election of Kuhn.

"I'm a betting man, but I wouldn't want to bet on this one," Giles told a small army of reporters. "It's not a very cut-and-dried thing. It could get complicated."

But, he said, "There weren't too many no votes that couldn't change."

Tied in with the question of the commissioner's status was the issue of restructuring bureaucracy.

A restructuring committee has suggested that baseball become more businesslike in its structure and add "a super administrator" to handle business and revenue affairs.

It was known that several owners were withholding a decision on Kuhn's re-election until they had determined what powers such a super administrator would have and how Kuhn's powers would be affected by a new corporate approach.

In addition, there were suggestions Kuhn's term be reduced from seven years.

"Some compromises were proposed and all of a sudden the American League comes in and wants a recess," said Giles.

"MacPhail came in to say the American League supports the commissioner," said McHale.

Kuhn came under severe criticism for his inability during last year's seven-week player strike. Over the years, he has also been criticized for his inability to deal with intricate money matters which now force the league to reassess the bureaucracy that kept Kuhn isolated from last year's labor negotiations.

"Say anything you want about the commissioner, but he's been tarred and feathered for issues not of his doing. One thing, you have to give him tremendously high marks in his defense of integrity, growth and popularity of the game," added McHale.

Players May Strike Exhibition Games

By The Associated Press

Ed Garvey said Tuesday that selected strikes at this weekend's exhibition games might be called unless the National Football League reverses its decision to fine players for pregame handshakes.

Garvey, executive director of the National Football League Players Association, went to the National Labor Relations Board Tuesday to press for an injunction against fines levied last weekend.

"We'll strike some games, not all of them, just selected ones," said Garvey when asked what the union would do if an injunction was not granted.

Garvey declined to specify which games would be targeted for a strike. There are 14 games scheduled this weekend, including an exhibition between the Washington Redskins and Tampa Bay in Tampa Bay Saturday night, and Los Angeles at Cleveland Thursday night.

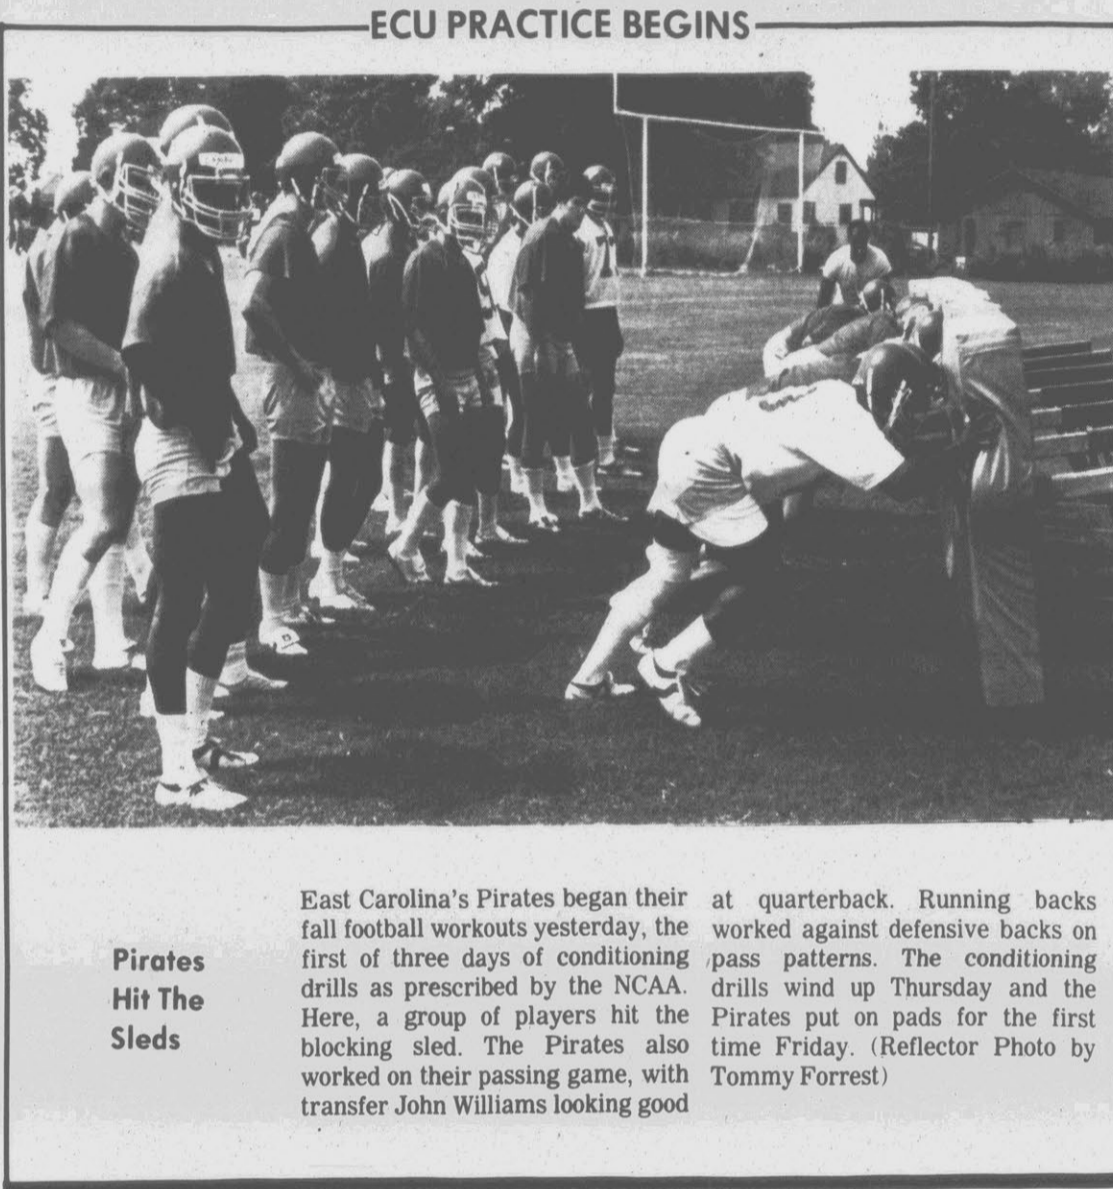

William Lubbers, general counsel for the NLRB, said Tuesday night that the union had filed an unfair labor practice on the fines in New York on Friday. He said his office was still investigating the matter before determining whether to seek an injunction against the NFL to stop the practice.

Most players in 12 of the 13 games last weekend shook hands just before kickoffs to show their support of the union's demand for a percentage of the NFL's gross revenue. Players did not exchange handshakes in the Los Angeles

Despite fine threats, Cleveland players voted Tuesday to shake hands with the Los Angeles Rams before the teams meet Thursday night. Ironically, the Rams players did not shake hands with their Denver Broncos opponents when the teams met last Saturday night.

The two sides have not held talks since July 23, 10 days after the NFL made its first contract offer. The talks have been stalled because the two sides have failed to agree upon a site to meet.

The Associated Press learned Monday that several owners are offering stiff resistance to the league's latest proposals. Jack Donlan, management's chief negotiator, confirmed that the Denver organization "was aghast" over the new plan, adding "some (others) are in favor and some are not."

Pirates Hit The Sleds

East Carolina's Pirates began their fall football workouts yesterday, the first of three days of conditioning drills as prescribed by the NCAA. Here, a group of players hit the blocking sled. The Pirates also worked on their passing game, with transfer John Williams looking good at quarterback. Running backs worked against defensive backs on pass patterns. The conditioning drills wind up Thursday and the Pirates put on pads for the first time Friday. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Hostetler Pounds Game-Winning HR

By The Associated Press
On a hot August night, Dave Hostetler became a hero ...

The Rangers' rookie slugger continued his heroics this month by belting a 400-foot home run in the 11th inning Tuesday night, lifting Texas over the Chicago White Sox 4-3.

It was the eighth homer in August and the 22nd of the season for Hostetler, who was promoted to the Rangers from the minors in June.

"That's the biggest thrill for me this season," said Hostetler, who sent a Dennis Lamp sinker "that didn't sink very far" over the centerfield wall. The loss was only the fourth in the last 19 games for Chicago.

"I was just trying to get the tying runs home," added the Texas first baseman. "But the ball jumped off my bat. All I wanted was a single."

There was only one way Hostetler could have been happier: if his hit had won the game for starter Dave Schmidt, who was married Monday and was within one pitch of his first major league shutout.

"It's too bad Dave didn't get the victory," said Hostetler. "He pitched a great game." But not quite great enough as Mike Squires doubled home pinch-runner Ron LeFlore to tie it in the ninth.

The White Sox took the lead 3-1 in the top of the 11th when LeFlore singled home a run and Squires made good on a suicide squeeze bunt.

But George Wright had led off the Texas 11th against Salome Barojas with a single. One out later, Buddy Bell doubled and Hostetler provided his dramatics.

Angels 10, Red Sox 2
Luis Tiant pitched eight strong innings against his former teammates and was supported by five home runs — by Fred Lynn, Brian Downing, Don Baylor, Bobb y Grich and Joe Ferguson.

Randle Filled With Optimism

Says Herd Best-Conditioned Team He's Ever Coached

HUNTINGTON, W.Va. (AP)

— Marshall University's athletic department served up brownies a la mode and a big helping of optimism at Tuesday's football media luncheon.

"This is the best-conditioned team I've ever been associated with," coach Sonny Randle told the gathering of reporters and sportscasters. "The players who are here at this point are the ones who want to play. And they're tired of losing. They want respect, from the community and from the country as well."

Randle, whose teams have gone 5-27-1 in three seasons at Marshall, promised that his Thundering Herd would be competitive this year.

"For the first time since I've been here I can say we'll be competitive in all 11 games on our schedule," he said. "Now, I'm not saying we'll win them all, but we'll be competitive and if you're competitive you're going to win your share."

Randle pointed to a big, strong offensive line, a talented experienced defensive secondary and to the team's overall attitude.

"I don't know how many we'll win," said the coach, whose team was 2-9 last season. "The upper echelons are saying we might win four but right now I'm just concerned about surviving our first four games."

"We open against Kent State, which is probably the most improved team in the Mid-American Conference, and then play perhaps the three toughest games on our schedule in Western Michigan, Toledo and U-T Chattanooga."

Randle said he would be delighted to win two of the first four games.

"If we come out of those four at 2-2 somebody had better be prepared to see the biggest party ever thrown in this part of the country because that would leave our kids thinking they're pretty good and then the sky's the limit," he said.

Randle said the Herd players are desperate for a little success so they can believe in themselves.

"We've gotten the gorilla off of our backs in finally winning a Southern Conference game," he said. "The kids now feel that they can line up with anybody in the conference and if they get a few breaks anything might happen. It's even possible that we could have a winning season."

Marshall hasn't had a winning football season since 1964.

"If everybody stays well and we get a few breaks we've got a chance," he said. "We should be outstanding on defense this season."

As for the offense, which was a consistent problem last season, Randle said was very happy with the linemen.

Connors Enjoys Himself At ATP Championships

Bad Day For Billie Jean

Billie Jean King attempts to regain her composure following a call with which she disagreed in the second round of the Players Challenge tournament. King walked out on the match claiming an injury, leaving the victory to Iva Budarova. (AP Laserphoto)

MASON, Ohio (AP) - For Jimmy Connors, there's nothing like playing tennis. "I enjoy playing," the world's second-ranked player said. "The next best thing to playing and winning is playing and losing. I just enjoy playing."

Connors certainly enjoyed himself Tuesday night, romping over Matt Doyle 6-7, 6-1, 6-0 in the opening round of the $300,000 ATP Championships being held at the Jack Nicklaus Sports Center.

"For a long time I've had a problem with my lower back," said Connors, who defaulted in the semifinals of a tournament in Toronto last Saturday because of an injury. He almost pulled out of this Volvo Grand Prix tournament before checking with his doctor in Miami on Monday.

"It probably came from 20 years of throwing the ball behind my head," he said, referring to a change he made this year in his serve, tossing the ball more in front of him.

"I decided around midnight last night (Monday)" to play this week, Connors said. "I came here to play and try to win the tournament. If I can't do that, I wouldn't be here."

Besides Connors, seeded second here, most of the other favorites also advanced, including John McEnroe, Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia and Vitas Gerulaitis.

McEnroe, the top seed, shrugged off a sluggish start to oust Jeff Borowiak, 4-6, 6-4, 6-0,

No. 3 Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia crushed Dick Stockton, 6-3, 6-4 and No. 4 Vitas Gerulaitis dominated Australia's John Fitzgerald, 6-4, 6-4.

Seeded players who were upset Monday were No. 7 Sandy Mayer, beaten by Henri LeConte of France, 6-3, 7-6; No. 8 Mark Edmondson of Australia, eliminated by Mike DePalmer, 6-3, 6-3; No. 13 Roscoe Tanner, ousted by Guy Forget of France, 7-6, 7-6, and No. 14 Chip Hooper, toppled by Victor Amaya, 7-6, 7-6.

Following form, 10th-seeded Raul Ramirez of Mexico toppled Mike Estep, 6-3, 6-0; No. 11 Steve Denton downed Jiri Granat of Czechoslovakia, 6-2, 2-6, 6-2; No. 15 Brian Gottfried stopped Rick Fagel, 6-1, 6-0 and No. 16 Hank Pfister beat Thierry Tulasne of France, 2-6, 6-1, 6-3.

Connors had a little trouble in the opening set, misfiring on five set points before losing. But he then dominated Doyle to advance to a second-round meeting with Phil Dent of Australia.

Lendl was awesome, his forehand rocketing shots to the far reaches of the court as he eliminated Stockton easily.

"I'm a little older. I'm in a little better shape than I was the year before and I'm a little more confident and have a little more experience plus hard work," Lendl said of his victory.

McEnroe seemed to struggle in the first set, losing his serve in the seventh game. But he only lost four more points on serve the remainder of the match and Borowiak could win just five points in the final set of a match that lasted one hour, 52 minutes.

"I was kind of sluggish in the first set," McEnroe admitted. Then he turned to his No. 1 ranking.

"The computer says I am" the world's top player, he said. "I don't think my results the past 11 months would make me No. 1. But it took me two years to get there."

Asked why he has been dominated by Lendl in the past year, McEnroe said it probably was because he wasn't being aggressive enough against the Czechoslovakian.

"The type of game I play against (Sweden's Bjorn) Borg and Connors doesn't work against Lendl."

Crum Hopes For Injury-Free Year

CHAPEL HILL (AP) - North Carolina football coach Dick Crum figures the Tar Heels had enough injuries last year that this year's team should go 100 percent injury free. And if that happens, the team may just win 100 percent of its games.

The Tar Heels were well on their way to an undefeated season last year when a knee injury to Kelvin Bryant knocked him out of several games and kept him from going full speed in others.

But Bryant wasn't the only Tar Heel to feel the injury pinch last year. Fullback Alan Burrus and quarterback Rod Elkins also had injury problems.

"I figure we had enough injuries last year that this year should be 100 percent injury free," said Crum, whose club survived those injuries to finish 10-2 and win the Gator Bowl.

When healthy, Bryant was awesome. In his first three games, he rushed for 520 yards and scored 15 touchdowns and finished the season with 1,015 yards and 18 touchdowns.

Burrus did not participate in spring practice but is currently battling to regain his previous form, Crum said.

Elkins is again healthy and the Tar Heels have lost only once in his 21 starts.

A sure sign that everyone is healthy is that Crum has very few decisions as he pencils in his starting lineup. The only questions are at right tackle and punter.

"When you can have spring practice you shouldn't have many questions," Crum said. "We've got an idea about the tackle, but I don't think we'll know about the punter until we have a game."

Jeff Hayes handled the punting duties the past four seasons and his graduation has left that position as high in the air as many of his punts.

The offensive line is led by guards David Dreschler and Ron Spruill, who last year made North Carolina the first Atlantic Coast Conference team to have both guards named to the all-conference unit.

Sparking the defense are tackle William Fuller, who many compare favorably with former Tar Heel star Lawrence Taylor, and ball-hawking cornerbacks Greg Poole and Walter Black.

North Carolina opens its season Sept. 9 at Pittsburgh's Three Rivers Stadium against the Pitt Panthers, led by quarterback Dan Marino. He and Bryant figure to be in the thick of the battle for the Heisman Trophy, given annually to the nation's top collegiate performer.

"It'll be interesting playing on a Thursday night," Crum said. "Pitt is a veteran football team and they've got about 20 players back. It's a ball club that is really complete."

In 1979, the last time the two clubs met, the home-standing Tar Heels posted a 17-7 victory.

Crum said at this point in practice, he isn't concentrating on that first game but on all 11 scheduled contests.

"We've got to keep in mind we've got a whole season to play," Crum said. "You prepare yourself, to play a whole season, not just one game."

"They feel like we can win and that makes a tremendous difference."

— Duke coach Red Wilson

Blue Devils Believe They Can Win

DURHAM (AP) - Opponents of Duke University's football squad this year will have to deal with something they're not used to — a Duke team that believes it can win.

The basis for the optimism is a combination of last year's 6-5 record, the presence of quarterbacks Ben Bennett and Ron Sally and the emergence of a running game to complement the air attack.

Duke closed in a rush last year by winning four of its last five games. The only loss in that stand was a 31-10 season-ending setback to North Carolina.

"I feel like our fellows are really looking forward to the season," said head coach Red Wilson. "They feel like we can win and that makes a tremendous difference. We had to start working on the attitude problem and it's been a continual process."

One of Wilson's most delightful problems in preparing for the Sept. 4 opener at Tennessee is deciding whether Bennett or Sally will be his starting quarterback. Bennett is considered the better passer while Sally proved last year he's the better runner.

"I can't tell you right now who the starter will be," Wilson said. "It looks like it's going to be a real battle."

Bennett rebounded from an injury in the season opener against Ohio State to complete 54 percent of his passes for 1,445 yards and seven touchdowns. He was intercepted only eight times in 202 attempts.

Sally proved capable of passing as well, hitting for 888 yards and six touchdowns.

"I think our running game will be even better because we do have experienced running backs all the way and our line should be the best it's been in a long time," Wilson said.

Duke's running backs are small, with tailback Mike Grayson toting 178 pounds on his 5-foot-6 frame and fullback Greg Boone standing 5-10 and weighing 190 pounds.

Last year Grayson finished fifth in the Atlantic Coast Conference with 744 rushing yards while Boone gained 502 and did the bulk of the blocking.

The biggest headache Wilson faces is getting his defense lined out. He lost six players from a unit which gave up 324 yards and 21 points per game.

"At this time I can't say what to expect from our defense," Wilson said. "We lost a lot of people but it could surprise a few people. But right now, on paper, we're not supposed to be as good as last year."

It is possible for the Blue Devils to improve and still not match last year's record because of their schedule. In addition to its ACC wars, the Blue Devils face Tennessee, South Carolina, Navy and Virginia Tech.

Western Carolina Loses Tackle

CULLOWHEE (AP) - Johnny Williams, an outstanding defensive tackle for Western Carolina University, will miss the 1982 season due to academic ineligibility, officials announced Tuesday.

young defensive line. This is one area we could not afford the loss of anyone, much less a key player."

The 6-foot-2, 230-pound senior was elected a team captain for the coming season and was named to several pre-season all-conference teams. He led the Catamounts in solo tackles last season.

Williams, a two-year starter from Aiken, S.C., failed to successfully complete enough hours of summer school to reach the minimum number of hours required by the Southern Conference to maintain eligibility, said coach Bob Waters.

"We are extremely disappointed with the loss of Johnny Williams," Waters said. "We were counting on him for a big season and to provide leadership on a very

Expos Sweep Atlanta

By The Associated Press
The management of the Atlanta Braves allowed Chief Noc-A-Homa to put his tepee up again at Atlanta Stadium in hopes of changing the team's bad luck of late. It didn't help.

The staggering Braves continued to fumble away games left and right, dropping a doubleheader to the Montreal Expos, 13-7 and 3-2 in 10 innings Tuesday night. That spelled their 18th loss in their last 20 games, and dropped them 2½ games behind the National League West-leading Los Angeles Dodgers.

"Sure, you get concerned," said Atlanta Manager Joe Torre. "It gets more frustrating. But I wasn't brought up quitting and I won't now."

It wasn't only that the Braves lost again, but the way that they lost their recent pair. In the first game, they made five errors, allowing the Expos eight unearned runs. In the nightcap, relief ace Gene Garber was unable to hold a 2-1 lead in the ninth.

"We've got a long way to go and we're still close in the race," said Atlanta first baseman Chris Chambliss.

The Braves' doubleheader loss continued a streak of recent bad play at home that eventually led to their displacement in first place by the Dodgers. The Braves had forced their mascot, Chief Noc-A-Homa, to give up his tepee when the team was hot so more seats could be added for the surging crowds, but decided to put it up again for the Braves' homecoming from their recent road trip.

The Dodgers played a 1-1 tie with the Chicago Cubs Tuesday in a 17-inning game at Wrigley Field that was called by darkness.

In other action, it was Houston 2, Philadelphia 0; St. Louis 3, San Diego 2; Pittsburgh 4, San Francisco 1 and Mike Scioscia. The game was to be resumed today before the regularly-scheduled contest.

Fans Not Ready To Bury Braves

ATLANTA (AP) — A dismal road trip may have interrupted the pennant fever that was rampant in Atlanta last month, but this victory-starved city isn't yet ready to bury the baseball Braves.

A crowd of 23,184 — just under the club's average attendance this year — tried unsuccessfully to pump some life into the faltering Braves Tuesday night, but only saw the team fall further behind in the National League West race after dropping a double-header to the Montreal Expos 13-7 and 3-2, with the nightcap going 10 innings.

The numbers spell out the futility.

In a matter of 19 days, the Braves have seen a 9-game lead vanish, falling into second place 2½ games behind Los Angeles by losing 18 of their last 20 contests.

The cheers started with the announcement of the starting lineup, and continued when the team took the field for the first game. There were boos during the game, but those came on merit — the Braves committed five errors that helped Montreal score eight unearned runs in the opener.

"The fans are pretty intelligent," said first baseman Chris Chambliss. "There's not much sense in booing us because we've given them a fine year. We're in the middle of a pennant race and I'm glad they are behind us."

They came with the usual signs to drape along the facades of the triple-deck stadium — "Super Murph," "Horner's Corner," "Scalp Em Braves, Win It All."

Dale Murphy had been super in the Braves' climb to the top, but he has been in a slump, going 1-for-7 and fanning three times in the twin-bill after collecting only 11 hits in 45 trips on the West Coast. Third baseman Bob Horner has only five hits in his last 38 at bats.

Bob Kelly, the restaurant owner who dons a monk's outfit and becomes a cheerleading Brother Francis during the late innings of home games, added a new twist Tuesday night.

He ambled through the stands during the fifth inning of the nightcap to his normal perch atop the Braves dugout shaking a huge sign that read:

"I Still Believe."

It brought a roar of approval from those fans who saw it. No one knows how much longer these fans will continue to believe, continue to cheer and continue to buy tickets.

Everyone loves a winner, but no one loves a loser forever.

Smoky Joe — Rugged Relic Of Baseball

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

NEW HAVEN, Conn. — Almost half as old as the country itself, the man sat sunning himself on the front porch of the modest little bungalow not far from the Yale Bowl. However, it was a Boston Red Sox baseball cap — not a helmet — that marked him as a man of the diamond.

"Sittin' here so you would be sure to see the place," said 92-year-old Smoky Joe Wood to visitors who had motored up from New York. He extended his left hand, showing his famous right sheathed in a protective bandage.

"Hurt my fingers last week when I fell off a ladder while looking for a hole in the roof," he explained. "You'll have to talk up. Don't hear too well now. And I'm going to have an operation soon to remove cataracts off my eyes."

Don't let Smoky Joe's complaints fool you. One of the oldest surviving major league baseball players, this rugged relic of the game's formative years is far from being an invalid case. His step is lively. His mind is alert and razor sharp. His memory is clear.

One of the greatest right-handed pitchers of all-time, Wood has just been rediscovered by a contest the Red Sox are running to determine the club's all-time "Dream Team." Smoky Joe is one of the three righthanders in the ballot. The others are the record-setting Cy Young and the amazing Luis Tiant.

The poll among fans is being conducted by Gillette, which for years has been the official balloteer for baseball's All-Star game.

With the death three years ago of his wife of 66 years, Wood is left with his children and children's children plus memories of the age that inspired Lawrence Ritter's "The Glory of Their Times."

Smoky Joe takes up a full chapter in the valued volume, which details his three World Series pitching triumphs in 1912 and his classic victory over Walter Johnson in the ballyhooed duel of the two greatest fireballing righthanders of the day.

"It was all Clark Griffith's doing," Wood said, referring to the late owner of the then Washington Senators for whom Johnson pitched. "Johnson had set a record of 16 straight victories and I was closing in on him with 13."

"We (the Red Sox) were playing the Senators in Fenway Park. At Griffith's suggestion, I was moved up out of turn to face the Senators. They made a big circus out of it."

Caps Move Step Closer To Survival

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — The Washington Capitals, in their continuing battle to survive, have met the second of four conditions required to satisfy prospective investors.

Lou Corletto, public relations director for the National Hockey League club, said Tuesday that an automobile dealer in nearby Laurel, Md., had guaranteed a Capital Centre sellout for the Nov. 16 game against the Calgary Flames.

Area businesses now have guaranteed sellouts for Washington's first 10 home games, and the Capital Centre has agreed to lower the rent of the Capitals from 15 to 10 percent of the net after taxes.

Two other conditions remain: The sale of 7,500 season tickets and a lowering of the Prince Georges County amusement tax from 10 percent to one-half of 1 percent for the next three years.

Corletto, who reported in excess of 5,100 season tickets have been sold, said Friday's original 30-day deadline for compliance probably would be extended because the county council would not meet until next Tuesday to consider the lowering of the amusement tax.

Abe Pollin, owner of the Caps and board chairman of the Capital Centre, said last month that he had lost more than $20 million in the operation of the NHL team which has yet to make the postseason playoffs in eight years of existence.

Pollin said if the conditions are not met on time, the Caps would be sold and moved elsewhere, merged and moved, or disbanded.

At Women's Championships

Daniel Solid Favorite

CLEVELAND (AP) — Beth Daniel, first or second in five of her past six tournaments, ranks as a solid favorite to win her third straight Chevrolet World Championship of Women's Golf, opening Thursday.

The 25-year-old South Carolinian has earned $96,500 with her two victories in this $150,000 annual invitational for only 12 of the women golfers.

Despite her success, Daniel believes the tournament's format should be altered.

"The money is real top heavy," she said Tuesday after a tune-up round over Shaker Heights Country Club's 6,225-yard layout. "The winner and second-place finisher take more than half of the purse. I've won two years in a row. I am delighted. But I don't think it's fair."

"Our money list will go into complete jumbles after this week," she said. "Last year, I went from seventh to third on the list by winning here. You just don't do that."

First prize is $50,000, a record for women's golf. The runner-up will earn $26,000 after the final round Sunday.

Naturally, Daniel likes the format because she's made the field all three years.

"But if I didn't qualify, I wouldn't like it," said the tour's only five-time winner in 1982. "Some really good, deserving girls are not in it. Kathy Whitworth was ousted at the last minute. She's having a good year. She's already won twice."

Even with a field that includes No. 1 money-winner Sally Little of South Africa, U.S. Open Champion Janet Alex, LPGA victor Jan Stephenson and JoAnne Carner, Daniel likes her chances of repeating.

She gets little argument from her competition. "Daniel's hot, and this course is suited to her game," said Carner, who needs one more victory to join the LPGA Hall of Fame.

In her six-week stretch, Daniel has earned more than $100,000. A week ago, at Jericho, N.Y., she won by eight shots. She missed only three of 72 greens in regulation for the four rounds. "I surprised even myself. That is no easy course," she said.

"Everybody tends to play in streaks," said Daniel, third on the current money list behind Little and Sandra Haynie, competing in this event for the first time. "The longest streak I ever had was in 1980. I finished in the top five in 17 of 18 tournaments, and I was 10th in my other one."

Daniel, the winner here last year with a 4-under-par total of 284, obviously realizes what it takes to master this tight layout with perhaps the tour's fastest greens. "You've got to putt well," she said. "And you've got to hit your irons well. If you miss the greens here, the penalty is severe. The traps are tough, and the grass is long around the greens."

Also in this year's field are Amy Alcott, Nancy Lopez, Patty Sheehan, Hollis Stacy, Ayako Okamoto of Japan and Spanish amateur Marta Figueras Dotti.

Cardinal Am Begins Friday

GREENSBORO (AP) — The son of South African golf great Gary Player will be among those testing defending champion Roy Hunter of Raleigh on Friday when play begins in the fifth Cardinal Amateur Golf Championship.

Wayne Player, Eastern Amateur champion John Inman and Lee Rinker, a Stuart, Fla., native whose brother challenged in the 1982 U.S. Open until the final round, will square off at the Cardinal Golf Club.

The tournament runs through Sunday.

Tough Race In D.C. For Mayor's Job

By STEVEN KOMAROW
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Patricia Roberts Harris has a history of beating the odds, but this year she picked perhaps the toughest fight of her public life.

The former Cabinet officer, a black woman with a string of firsts on her resume, is running for office, attempting to oust Marion Barry Jr., as mayor of the District of Columbia.

In D.C. politics, dominated by black liberals, there is not much disagreement on the issues. Barry and Mrs. Harris are in the mainstream and voters are being asked to decide between two styles of leadership.

The Harris forces have launched a new TV ad campaign, portraying the candidate as the model black woman, fighting for civil rights and the cities in her successful climb upward.

Barry, who traded in his dashiki for a three piece suit when he moved from street activist to city government a decade ago, says a mayor has to be flexible. "I'm comfortable in the streets and in the suites," he quips.

"There's no evidence Mrs. Harris can do as well as I've done or better than I've done," Barry says. "Cabinet secretaries don't necessarily make good mayors."

Mrs. Harris calls that reasoning senseless. "It's ridiculous to say that if you can cook the whole chicken you can't cook a chicken leg," she says, referring to her tenure as Secretary of Health and Human Services, the largest Cabinet department.

Barry has developed a strong, city-wide political organization and Mrs. Harris is behind, according to the polls. The four-way Democratic primary election is Sept. 14, with the winner sure of victory in the general election. Democrats outnumber Republicans nine to one in Washington.

Mrs. Harris is not accustomed to losing. In years past, she overcame race and sex discrimination to become an attorney for the Justice Department, then ambassador to Luxembourg, then head of two Cabinet departments — HHS and the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Barry, 46, calls himself "the consummate politician." He was an underdog who won office in a tight three-way race four years ago.

He carries some considerable political baggage into the campaign.

Auditors discovered a $388 million deficit — $105 million created in Barry's first full year managing the city budget — and the first massive layoffs in the city's history were carried out. Congress blocked Barry's attempt to cut the size of the police force even as the city's crime rate soared to near-record levels.

But Barry says he has learned enough on the job to deserve a second term and points to a $68-million fiscal 1981 surplus as evidence he can now handle the budget. He has also put tight reins on the city bureaucracy, launched the biggest street rebuilding program in Washington history and promoted a boom in downtown office construction.

Mrs. Harris, 58, was a high-income attorney in Washington before being tapped by Jimmy Carter for his Cabinet. In her confirmation hearings, she defended herself against suggestions that she is so well off that she was a poor choice to head social service bureaucracies. Barry still claims she has no feelings for the city's poor blacks.

The argument infuriates Mrs. Harris, who reminds listeners that her father was a dining-car waiter.

Barry has raked in campaign contributions from the city's business elite while attempting to appeal to the city's poor. His campaign raised $905,061 through Aug. 10 and aides are confident he will top $1 million in the final weeks.

After initially leading in the polls, Mrs. Harris' position has faded slightly behind the mayor. She has raised about $500,000 and hasn't been able to afford the sophisticated, computer-assisted voter targeting of Barry's campaign.

Class Crime Families Of Yesteryear Are No More

By ARTHUR EVERETT
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — In the old days, movieland mobsters like Edward G. Robinson and Humphrey Bogart had class, dressed in impeccably tailored three-piece suits and jaunty fedoras — only the best.

Today's so-called modern Mafia comes across as a shirt-sleeved organization, almost totally lacking in panache. Look at the five alleged members of the old Joseph Bonanno organized crime family currently on trial in Manhattan's federal court.

True, the defendants in the government's racketeering case are not alleged to be top dogs in their profession. Still, federal authorities say the men are members of the Cosa Nostra, which in Italian means "our thing."

Lawyers for the five defendants have said throughout the trial that if there is such a thing as the Cosa Nostra, their clients are not members of it.

The government says the highest in rank is Benjamin "Lefty" Ruggiero, pencil-thin and saw-toothed. It lists the 55-year-old Ruggiero as a capodecina, or crew chief, in the old Bonanno family now controlled by the imprisoned Philip "Rusty" Rastelli.

Ruggiero is the only one who wears a jacket in the downtown, third-floor courtroom where the trial began its fourth week Monday.

Rather than appearing as a free-spending big shot, Ruggiero milked an FBI undercover man for $42,000 with pleas for financial assistance, courtroom testimony has revealed.

The government says that in return for the money, it discovered a fountain of in-house information on organized crime.

Ruggiero was depicted as capable of drinking 10 to 15 spritzers — white wine and soda — at one sitting. He was described in trial testimony as being as much as eight months behind in his rent, delinquent in his telephone bills and reduced to begging for money to make a Florida business trip, after securing his wife's permission to go.

"Is there any other Mafioso you knew who ever had to check with his wife to go to Florida?" defense lawyer David Breitbart asked a government witness.

Stocky Nicholas Santora, at 39 the youngest of the defendants, arrives wearing a jacket, but quickly sheds it at the defense table.

None of the quintet has ever appeared wearing a necktie. Ruggiero and Santora may be excused, having become accustomed to life at the nearby Metropolitan Correctional Center, a federal institution where the wearing of a tie is forbidden because of its possible use in a suicide attempt.

Ruggiero and Santora failed to make bonds that ranged from $50,000 to $100,000 and have been in jail since their arrests nearly a year ago. Their three co-defendants are out on the street.

At the far right of the defense table sits Anthony "Mr. Fish" Rabito, 48, a 240-pound, cherub-faced defendant built like a pro football lineman. He also does not wear a jacket.

Trial testimony disclosed that "Mr. Fish" got his nickname because he once operated a restaurant that featured scungilli, the meat of the conch, a shellfish.

To the left of "Mr. Fish" sits 56-year-old Antonio "Boots" Tomasulo, wearing thick glasses and looking like a neighborhood shoe repair man.

John "Boobie" Cerasani, 43, is the end man at the far left of the table. Balding, trimly muscular, he dresses better than the others, mostly in polo shirts but still without a jacket.

The government, in its indictment, described the five men as "a group of individuals associated, in fact, to commit various criminal activities including acts involving murder...as well as acts...relating to dealing in narcotic drugs and...relating to an illegal gambling business."

Ruggiero, Rabito and Santora are said to have dispatched three anti-Rastelli members of the family to the hereafter on May 5, 1981.

The three were identified as Alphonse "Sonny Red" Indelicato, Philip "Philly Lucky" Giaccone and Dominick "Big Trin" Trinchera. Only Indelicato's body has been recovered. It was unearthed May 24, 1981, in a vacant lot in Queens.

Absent from the defense table are two ranking members of the Rastelli family — Dominick "Sonny Black" Napolitano and Joseph "Joey" Messina, described by the government as captains in the family. They were indicted as leading participants in the May 5 slayings and are listed on government documents as missing rather than dead.

WHERE'S THE CLASS? — America's gangster image was set by movieland mobsters like Edward G. Robinson, right, impeccably tailored in "Little Caesar" — only the best. Today's so-called modern Mafia comes across as a shirt-sleeve bunch almost totally lacking in panache, says AP veteran crime writer Arthur Everett. At right are Antonio "Boots" Tomasulo and Anthony "Mr. Fish" Rabito, right in photo, outside federal court in Manhattan where they are on trial on racketeering charges. (AP Laserphoto)

Illegal Border Crossings Rise As Impact Of Devalued Peso Is Felt

By STEVE BREWER
Associated Press Writer
EL PASO, Texas (AP) —

As the peso plunges on world money markets, increasing numbers of jobless Mexicans are being caught trying to slip across the border into Texas and New Mexico, U.S. Border Patrol officials say.

"Most of the time, we're catching people who can do better here than they can at home, money-wise," said Larry Richardson, chief patrol agent in McAllen. "It's a little bit worse at home now, and maybe that's causing more of them to jump to the other side."

Border Patrol officials are hesitant to blame the increase totally on the peso because it's harvest for many crops picked by aliens. But some believe the decline of the peso will worsen the problem.

"I wouldn't be surprised that if in September we had a record month, at least partially because of the devaluation," said John Green, deputy chief agent in Del Rio.

The Mexican government said Aug. 5 it no longer could support the peso in international trading, sending the currency plunging from a rate of 45 to the dollar to as low as 90 to the dollar.

A week later, the government announced a freeze on dollar trading at Mexican banks to prevent Mexicans from changing their pesos into more stable U.S. currency. The freeze was partially lifted Monday.

"These steps may be frightening some people enough that they feel they just have to get out and come over here in search of work," said Alan Eliason, chief agent in the El Paso sector.

In the sector, which includes western Texas and southern New Mexico, arrests of illegal aliens in August are up 28 percent over the same period last year.

More significant was a sudden upswing in arrests a few days after the devaluation. Sector officers apprehended 3,586 illegal aliens in the first eight days of the month. Four days later, the number of arrests had jumped to 6,092.

Richardson said arrests in McAllen jumped more than 30 percent since mid-July. "For a couple of months there, we were averaging between 90 and 100 (arrests) a day," Richardson said. "During the first 13 days of this month, we've been averaging 140 a day."

John Green, deputy chief agent in Del Rio, said arrests in the small Texas city have been "unusually high" since the devaluation. "Yesterday, we apprehended 201 aliens," he said. "It has been climbing like that since the devaluation."

Eliason said he was surprised by the surge because an anticipated increase after a February devaluation never materialized.

"Earlier this summer, I had believed that because of our own economic problems, some of the aliens were being deterred because they felt they couldn't find work over here," he said.

Eliason said he has increased dawn patrols along the Rio Grande to cope with the increased flow of aliens. He said it was possible the patrol will send extra officers to El Paso to help with the problem. Recently, 50 extra officers were sent to Laredo in an experimental crackdown there.

Saratoga's Season Opens Only When The Races Are Started

By SUSAN LISOVICZ
Associated Press Writer
SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y. (AP) —

Summer is summer. But summer doesn't really happen in Saratoga until the races do.

August has long been a special time in this carefully preserved community of Victorian homes, smart shops and rustic, though fashionable, restaurants 175 miles north of New York. But during the hottest month of the year, Saratoga's most alluring attraction is its horses.

Saratoga's four-week thoroughbred racing season opened Aug. 4 at the nation's oldest continuously operated track.

An equestrian parade, formal charity balls, arts and craft fairs, sports tournaments and concerts featuring everything from bluegrass to baroque to new wave celebrated the arrival of the sleek, fast creatures.

Horse fanciers have their pick among harness, thoroughbred and polo, but there are definite highlights to the season.

Wealthy horse owners from Europe and all parts of the United States descend on Saratoga to take part in the famous Fasig-Tipton yearling sales.

Then there is the Travers Stakes — considered by many to be the fourth leg of the Triple Crown. The 13th running of the race on Aug. 21 will feature Kentucky Derby winner Gato Del Sol, Preakness winner Aloma's Ruler and Conquistado Cielo, who New York Racing Association officials say is worth $40 million.

For some local residents, though, the fun is less in watching the prized animals and more in gazing at the well-heeled entourage that arrives with them.

Millionaires, society notables and prestigious horse owners and trainers have been part of Saratoga's summer scene since the mid-1800s, when their handsome coaches would transport them from the city to their country homes.

"There's always a lot of private parties to keep the racing world busy," says city historian Beatrice Sweeney.

Among the "horsy set," the "must" invitation to obtain is to Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney's annual August "theme" party. This year's affair? The "young at heart."

The racing people mingle among themselves, but there are "always a sprinkling of Saratoga residents" at their social affairs, Mrs. Sweeney said. "Some of the plebians are allowed in." Local merchants handle their summer customers with deference.

The Gideon Putnam, one of the leading hotels in town, hires doormen, valets and night maids to turn down the beds for the month of August.

Gideon guests pay for those extra touches. A room for two in August with three meals a day goes for $200 a day. In September the rate drops back down to $124 for the same accommodations, says Pat Scarano, administrative assistant at the Gideon.

"People that can afford to come to the Gideon expect to get a little bit better service. Money is no object," she says.

Indeed, many stay for the entire month. And reservations for the hotel's 130 rooms frequently come a year in advance for August, Ms. Scarano says.

Laraine Flannery, a sales agent with Saratoga County's Acorn Realty, says flatly, "No vacancies in the month of August. We have a large crowd that comes in. It triples the population."

Many of Saratoga's residents help absorb the crush of summer visitors and pocket some money at the same time by renting out their homes for the month of August.

But in Saratoga, it's not a lakefront view that commands top dollar. The homes will "get good money if they're around the track," Mrs. Flannery says. The average price for a nice, but "not elaborate" home for the month is $2,000. The better homes fetch $3,000 "and up," she says.

Post time is 1:30 p.m., and racing — held six days a week throughout the session — ends at sundown. So what happens after dark?

The nearby Saratoga Performing Arts Center is one of the most popular diversions, where this August performing artists include the Philadelphia Orchestra, Willie Nelson, the J. Geils Band, Andy Williams, Aretha Franklin, the Doobie Brothers and the Talking Heads.

To some locals, August can be exciting but hectic.

Says Jane Kreski, secretary to the executive vice president of the Saratoga Springs Chamber of Commerce, "I can hardly wait for it to start, but I'm glad when it ends."

New England Is Top Fuel-Saver

NEW YORK (AP) — New England has been leading the nation in energy conservation since the 1973 oil embargo.

Residents of New Hampshire achieved a 25 percent per capita decrease in home energy consumption — the best in the country, reports Honeywell's Energy Management Information Center.

Following close behind were Massachusetts and Vermont, each reporting a 21 percent reduction during that period.

The highest per-capita increase in home energy use, 24 percent since 1973, belonged to the residents of North Dakota, the study showed. Kentucky was second with an 18 percent increase, and New York third, with a 14 percent rise.

In four states, Arizona, Hawaii, Idaho and New Mexico, there was no change in the amount of residential energy used per person since 1973.

Still Pace TV Sales In U.S.

NEW YORK (AP) — Despite foreign competition, American manufacturers still lead in sales of TV sets in their own country.

In its 15th annual market survey, the trade publication TV Digest lists RCA as first in sales of both color and monochrome TV sets. Zenith ran second in both categories.

Among the "horsy set," the "must" invitation to obtain is to Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney's annual August "theme" party. This year's affair? The "young at heart."

The racing people mingle among themselves, but there are "always a sprinkling of Saratoga residents" at their social affairs, Mrs. Sweeney said. "Some of the plebians

'Vernon, Florida' Adds Eccentric PBS Touch

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — "Vernon, Florida," from the man who brought "Gates of Heaven" to the home screen, may be the most eccentric hour of prime-time TV this year, or any year.

Listen to Henry Shipes describe the joy of hunting turkey, to J.W. Martin and his wife consider a glass jar of "growing crawling" sand, and to another worthy — and unidentified — citizen discourse on "the four-track mind."

Or, as one bearded codger says, "Reality? You mean this is the real world? I never thought of that."

"Vernon, Florida" is the work of Errol Morris, who created a stir in 1980 with "Gates of Heaven," a bizarre documentary on pet cemeteries. His latest effort was shown for the first time at the 1981 New York Film Festival, and will be broadcast tonight as part of public TV's "Non Fiction Television" series.

The hour-long film may appear, at first blush, mocking, even cruel exploitation of a backwater town and a few of its idiosyncratic residents. But Morris is not poking fun, the camera moves from one curious character to another, and back, assume before long an unmistakable down-home nobility.

There's the elderly gent who collects wild animals. "I've been bitten by everything in this country, except a rattlesnake," he says, and it's no boast, just fact.

And there's the preacher who counts the words "therefore" 119 times in St. Paul's biblical writings, and suggests to parishioners a

"therefore experience" to restore peace in their lives.

The filmmaker's subjects lack even the hint of self-consciousness as they talk of their strange pursuits. They seem wholly trusting of Morris, and the result is an honesty unfettered by embarrassment.

"It grows. It grows. It crawls up the side of this jar," Mrs. Martin explains, holding up for the camera a vessel of sand collected while on a vacation to White Sands, N.M., where the atomic bomb was tested. "In two more years it will fill up the jar."

"It's just in me," Shipes says in another scene, trying to explain his obsession with wild turkey. The local traffic cop, behind the wheel of his parked cruiser, is no less candid:

"Since this car's settin' here so much," he says, "people don't know whether we've got a police officer on duty or not."

Conversation that would be mundane in another context is smalltown philosophical from the mouths of Morris' people. Indeed, there seems to be a universal truth — and no joke intended — in a sidewalk conversation overheard by the filmmaker:

"He said killing himself would be the last thing he'd ever do," one man tells his elderly companions. "And it was."

True Tale Of Escape From Laos Being Recorded By A Film Crew

By DENIS D. GRAY
Associated Press Writer
BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Four years ago, Australian journalist John Everingham strapped on his scuba diving gear and plunged into the murky, rain-swollen waters of the Mekong River.

Waiting on the opposite bank — in Communist Laos — was Everingham's Laotian girlfriend, whom he was determined to rescue despite the deadly currents and the soldiers who patrolled the river bank.

Today, Everingham and Keo, the woman he rescued who is now his wife, are again on the banks of the Mekong, which divides Thailand and Laos. This time they are accompanied by a Hollywood film crew headed by director Hall Bartlett, who says he was moved by media accounts of the 1978 swim-to-freedom and quickly contacted Everingham to discuss movie possibilities.

Bartlett, a zealously independent-minded director with films like "The Children of Sanchez" and "Jonathan Livingston Seagull" behind him, says "Comeback" will be a true-life, East-West love story set amidst the turbulence of Indochina.

Everingham is being played by Michael Landon, the American television star of "Bonanza" and "Little House on the Prairie." Bartlett says after a worldwide search, he picked Moira Chen, a young Indonesian actress brought up in Holland, for Keo.

Elvis Presley's widow, Priscilla, is making her film debut in the movie.

"Hollywood does not make documentaries. It's strictly entertainment and dollars," says Everingham. "But Bartlett has a history of movies with special integrity." The handsome, 32-year-old Australian says that despite "a couple of Hollywood additions" the movie should give a "reasonable picture of the atmosphere of Laos and our lives at that period."

Everingham, a native of Brisbane, lived in Laos for more than a decade, working as a freelance photographer and reporter.

Two years after the 1975 Communist victory, when he was the last Western journalist left in Laos, Everingham was arrested, interrogated at gunpoint and expelled after being accused of serving as an agent of the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency.

Everingham was put aboard a ferry across the Mekong, leaving behind Keo, a 26-year-old medical student whose father was a Communist Party official and who had herself at one time urged a "people's revolution" against the corrupt, U.S.-backed regime in her country.

From Thailand, Everingham sent secret messages to Keo through friends and established a rendezvous time and place near Vientiane, the Laotian capital.

A powerful swimmer and scuba diver, the Australian struggled underwater to reach the Laotian bank. With Laotian patrols within easy sight and rifle range, he strapped Keo, who could not swim, to his body, put a breathing device into her mouth and let the currents sweep them toward Thailand.

Whatever extra dramatics the script may call for, the creators of "Comeback" cannot be faulted for lack of realism in choice of shooting locations.

One sequence was filmed on the Mekong River a day after Communist guards on the other side shot at three Laotian refugees swimming to Thailand. Filming was also done at a Laotian refugee camp where crew members were so moved by the children that they donated $2,000 to the camp and threw a party for the toddlers.

The entire population of one frontier village — some 6,500 people — were recruited to stage a Laotian Communist demonstration against "CIA agent Everingham." Enthusiasm ran so high that Landon was pelted with vegetables and had to parry kicks.

Everingham, who helped Bartlett with the script, stands to make money if the film is successful but says that his life style is unlikely to change.

"We'll continue as now, following plans made long ago during our difficult times in Laos: living free lives in Asia, working in the media," he says.

Since the escape, Everingham's photography has appeared in top-flight magazines and he has opened a successful Indian restaurant in Bangkok in partnership with an Indian cook, another refugee from Laos.

Keo, now an Australian citizen, recently gave birth to a son. She was followed out of Laos by eight brothers, sisters or close relatives, all now resettled in Australia. Four others tried to escape but were shot and killed or drowned while trying to cross the Mekong by boat.

Students Live Medieval Era

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — The Middle Ages may have ended 500 years ago, but to a score of University of Rochester students they're not over yet.

The students live at the University's Medieval House, a coeducational study and residence center that treats the Middle Ages as if they were happening today.

Residents, whose majors range from English to engineering, develop programs on medieval literature, history, archeology, music and science, with distinguished medievalists as frequent guests.

Medieval House will, however, tolerate anachronisms, residents say: a tavern in the basement features rock music.

How Tar Heel Representatives And Senators Voted

WASHINGTON—Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes Aug. 7-13.

HOUSE

RADIO TO CUBA — The House passed, 250 for and 134 against, and sent to the Senate a bill (HR 5427) to set up a government radio station to broadcast anti-Cuba programming to Cuba. "Radio Marti," named after Cuban patriot Jose Marti, would broadcast on AM or FM frequencies from a site in the Florida Keys. It would cost $7.5 million in fiscal 1983, and it would be run by the same agency that oversees Radio Free Europe and Radio Liberty.

Supporter Toby Roth, R-Wisc., said Cuban leader Fidel Castro "will have to recognize that we are going to be calling him to account for his actions... All dictatorships fear uncensored information that is received by their people."

Opponent Ted Weiss, D-N.Y., said "the Cubans will recognize Radio Marti propaganda for what it will be, carefully packaged half-truths," and that the station will damage the U.S. standing in the Caribbean and Central America. Members voting "yea" wanted to establish Radio Marti.

Reps. L.H. Fountain, D-2, Charles Whitley, D-3, Ike Andrews, D-4, James Martin, R-9, and James Broyhill, R-10, voted "yea."

Reps. Eugene Johnston, R-6, and William Hendon, R-11, voted "nay."

Reps. Walter Jones, D-1, Stephen Neal, D-5, Charles Rose, D-7, and W.C. Hefner, D-8, did not vote.

States Rights — By a vote of 250 for and 154 against, the House adopted an amendment preserving the right of states to exceed federal standards in certain areas of pesticide control. Thus states continue to request whatever health and safety data they desire from pesticide manufacturers, without fear of being limited by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency. They also can take as long as they wish to register a pesticide for use within their boundaries. The vote occurred during debate on a bill (HR 5203) extending the Federal Insecticide, Fungicide and Rodenticide Act for two years. The bill was passed and sent to the Senate. Pesticide manufacturers, the agribusiness community and the administration were among those wanting to limit states' rights to regulate pesticides.

Rep. James Scheuer, D-N.Y., a supporter of the amendment, said the measure "would eliminate this erosion of states' rights and... permit a state to protect the health and environment of its citizens."

Opponent William Wampler, R-Va., said pesticide manufacturers need uniform nationwide laws to effectively market their products, and he said the lessening of states' rights only would have prevented "arbitrary or capricious" regulation by individual states.

Members voting "nay" wanted to make states subservient to the federal government in certain areas of pesticide regulation.

Fountain, Andrews, Neal and Rose voted "yea." Whitley, Johnston, Hefner, Martin, Broyhill and Hendon voted "nay." Jones did not vote.

NUCLEAR FREEZE — By a vote of 204 for and 202 against, the House adopted a "nuclear freeze" proposal that was backed by the administration. It calls for freezing U.S. and Soviet arsenals after the two nations have negotiated mutual arms reductions. The measure (HJ Res 521) is non-binding but has high symbolic importance. By adopting the pro-administration language, the House rebuffed liberal-sponsored efforts directing the United States and the Soviets to freeze their arsenals at current levels.

Supporter John Rouselot, R-Calif., said a freeze at current levels "would only legitimize Soviet superiority in numerous areas of nuclear and conventional force capabilities" and would undercut ongoing arms limitations talks with the Soviet Union.

Opponent Thomas O'Neill, D-Mass., said "freezing the strategic nuclear forces would not put the U.S. in an inferior position to the Soviet Union... I think it is simple logic. We do not reduce arms by accelerating the arms race. We first have to stop the race and then reduce arms."

Members voting "yea" favored the Administration's more lenient approach to the nuclear freeze issue.

Jones, Fountain, Whitley, Johnston, Hefner, Martin, Broyhill and Hendon voted "yea."

Neal and Rose voted "nay." Andrews did not vote.

SENATE

Senate Gym — By a vote of 50 for and 48 against, the Senate voted in favor of completing the gymnasium under construction as part of the new Hart Senate Office Building. As a result of the vote, an amendment to delete $736,400 for the gym was ruled out of order. The vote occurred during debate on a 1982 appropriations bill (HR 6863) that was later passed and sent to the House.

Sen. Harrison Schmitt, R-N.M., a supporter of completing the gym, said that despite misgivings he and other senators have about the new office building, the Senate should "utilize this building in the best possible way."

Opponent William Proxmire, D-Wisc., said that at a time of federal spending cuts senators should make do with the two gyms they already have. "You would think," he said, "that we 98 male senators who use these two gyms... would be physical paragons, lean, muscular Jack La Lannes. But look at us."

Senators voting "yea" endorsed spending $736,400 to complete the third gym for senators.

Sens. John East, R, and Jesse Helms, R, voted "yea."

WARNING CUBA — The Senate adopted, 68 for and 28 against, a resolution putting the Senate on record as favoring whatever action is necessary, "including the use of arms," to restrain Cuban "aggressive or subversive" activities in the Western Hemisphere and to keep Cuba from building up its anti-U.S. military capability with foreign-supplied arms. On a later vote, the "use of arms" language was watered down so that it would not be interpreted as a green light giving the administration authority to attack Cuba under the War Powers Act. The resolution was attached as a ride to an appropriations bill (HR 6863; see preceding vote).

Sponsor Steven Symms, R-Idaho, said, "I am not advocating the use of force in the Caribbean. Quite the contrary, I am merely trying to strengthen our first line of defense, which is diplomacy."

Opponents Charles Percy, R-Ill., called the resolution a "Gulf of Tonkin Resolution for Cuba."

Senators voting "yea" favored the tough anti-Cuba resolution. East and Helms voted "yea."

JOBLESS BENEFITS — By a vote of 84 for and 13 against, the Senate instructed its conferees on the major tax-increase bill (HR 4961) to approve additional spending to make unemployment compensation available for up to 52 weeks. The vote occurred during debate on a 1983 budget reconciliation bill (S 2774) that was later passed.

Sponsor Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, said he is concerned about lowering the federal deficit and interest rates, "but the unemployed of this country should not be bearing that burden."

Opponent Russell Long, D-La., said "the very idea of expanding welfare on a bill to cut spending, expanding various entitlement programs on a bill to cut spending, is contradictory..."

Senators voting "yea" favored up to 52 weeks' unemployment benefits for the jobless in states hardest hit by the recession. Helms and East voted "nay."

To Exhibit A Computerized Playground

RALEIGH — The North Carolina Museum of Life and Science has been chosen as a test site for an exhibit on Playground Physics. The exhibit and test is part of a National Science Foundation project and will be on display in the museum's Science Arcade from Sept. 1 through Oct. 12.

The exhibit was built in Lansing, Mich., by the IMPRESSION 5 Museum and will use a model see-saw, swing set slide and merry-go-round with three Apple computers.

Jorge Escobar, museum exhibit designer, says the N.C. Museum is now planning its own physics playground and is interested in testing the Michigan exhibit. After being in Raleigh, it will travel to Richmond and then to Detroit.

Heartworms

By WINKIE LEE
Pitt County Humane Society
Second in a series of four articles

The beautiful, warm weather and appealing bodies of water that the South and Southeast are blessed with carry certain disadvantages. Our climate and location make us vulnerable to mosquitos which make our dogs vulnerable to heartworm disease.

Heartworms are parasites which establish themselves in the right side of a dog's heart. When they reach adulthood, these worms range from six to 14 inches in length.

According to Dr. Michael House, DVM, of Animal Hospital on Greenville Boulevard, mosquitos are the necessary biological hosts for this parasite that harms only canines. A mosquito picks up microfilariae (immature worms) from an infected dog. The microfilariae's growth can continue only in this insect, and in time it becomes infective larvae. The cycle continues when the infected mosquito bites a dog and passes the larvae into its blood. For three months, the larvae lives under the dog's skin, growing to a length of three inches. It then travels to the dog's heart, settles in the right side and adjoining blood vessels, and reaches adulthood.

A large number of heartworms cause problems with blood circulation, thus resulting in probable grave damage to a dog's heart, liver, lungs and kidneys. In advanced stages, this disease can cause the pet to have trouble breathing, lose weight, tire easily, and experience other unfavorable symptoms. Heartworms can be fatal.

The best way to avoid the tragedy of this disease is to take preventative measures. Dr. House states that owners who want to give their pet a heartworm preventative of which should begin when the puppy is young. The chemical used is Diethylcarbamazine Citrate, which comes in tablet, pill or liquid form. It kills microfilariae, thus destroying the chance of a heartworm reaching adulthood. The preventative is given daily. There is no sign of it being dangerous for the dog; the only two problems with the preventative are that dogs don't tend to like its taste, and some owners get tired of administering it.

Both Dr. House and Dr. J.F. Barwick (also of Animal Hospital) stress that dogs should not be given the preventative until a veterinarian has given them a blood test. Preventative is given only to dogs who are not already infected.

If the blood test shows that heartworms are present, there may still be hope. Dogs who have not shown outward signs of this illness and who are diagnosed as facing a future problem with the parasites are usually candidates for Thiactarsamide Sodium treatments — a procedure of four injections given over a two-day span. Care has to be taken with animals receiving this treatment, due to the fact that the only place the dead worms can go is into the lungs. The dogs need complete rest for a period of time specified by the vet, and then a gradual return to their normal activity.

Some blood tests, accompanied by outward signs, show heartworms to be an immediate problem for a dog. In this case, the sick animal is treated as a cardiac patient. If the animal is picking up still more heartworms, it does not tend to live long.

Heartworm preventative is an inexpensive alternative to the tragedy this parasite can cause. Remember to have a blood test run on the dog before administering this chemical. Dr. House offers some advice: if an animal is going to be given a preventative, it should be given ones that have been scientifically tested and proved. Many home remedies and products with seemingly convincing claims don't work.

The Overseas Voter Hunted

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is launching a get-out-the-vote campaign among the estimated 3 million Americans overseas who have enough collective voting power to swing a close national election.

In a tiny office in the Pentagon, seven Defense Department employees are trying to get more absentee ballots distributed and used by potential voters abroad — from more than 300,000 Americans each in Canada and Mexico to the 41 in Djibouti.

The Pentagon's Non-partisan Federal Voting Assistance Program began during World War II to help GIs cast ballots in elections back home. Since the Eisenhower administration, the effort has been expanded to include civilians.

In the 1980 elections, 53.9 percent of eligible Americans cast ballots. Among the 2 million or so eligible U.S. voters abroad, about 34.2 percent took part in the elections.

That's a major lode of votes that politicians are eager to mine. Both the Democrats and Republicans are wooing the overseas vote this fall. Lois Shepard, director of Republicans Abroad, has even organized a half-dozen GOP faithful in the country of Brunel.

"The number of Americans living abroad is growing dramatically, partly because of recent changes in the tax laws," she said. "Those 3 million Americans overseas are equivalent to the 34th largest state."

The effectiveness of the Pentagon office is limited because absentee balloting is governed by the rules of various states where voters last resided.

Moreover, many Americans never bother to report their presence to U.S. diplomats, and the Pentagon doesn't count tourists or Americans who are visiting temporarily. Thus, estimates of potential voters abroad probably are low.

In the military, officers are assigned to encourage voting among the 800,000 service personnel stationed abroad, most of them in West Germany, South Korea and Japan.

Another 2 million to 2.5 million American civilians work or study overseas, are on vacation or business trips at election time, or are spending their retirement years in other countries, according to Henry Valentino, who directs the Pentagon project.

For the civilians, Valentino's office has distributed to U.S. embassies and consulates a thick manual summarizing different state requirements for absentee voting.

The Pentagon staff also has developed a federal postcard for voter registration that is accepted by many — but not all — of the states, and provides pamphlets and posters to embassies, the League of Women Voters, the Democratic and Republican parties and corporations interested in helping their employees vote.

A number of the U.S. citizens live in communist nations. In 1980, there were 468 American citizens in the Soviet Union, in addition to 444 diplomatic officials. There were more than 10,000 potential voters in Poland, 4,100 in Yugoslavia and 1,700 in Hungary.

Many voters abroad live on the North American continent, including about 300,000 in Canada and more than that in Mexico.

Valentino's office has found that most Americans overseas don't vote because they don't know how.

Eligible voters must get a ballot from authorities back home. The Pentagon office has tried to cut some of the red tape, but some local election boards are fussy about which absentee ballots they will accept or refuse.

Vinyl Discovery Is Century Old

NEW YORK (AP) — Vinyl is a term applied to polyvinyl chloride, commonly known as PVC. It was discovered more than 100 years ago but did not gain commercial acceptance until the 1930s.

Today it is used in such diverse applications as food wrapping, clothing, and even windows. For window frames, rigid PVC is used for resistance to rot and corrosion.

Desertions Amidst The Guerrillas

By EARLEEN F. TATRO
Associated Press Writer
BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Last Thursday, after fighting all day during the fierce Israeli attack on west Beirut, Ahmed put away his olive-drab uniform, laid down his arms and rejoined his wife and two small children. "To me, the war is finished," he told this reporter. "I do not want to fight any more."

No one knows how many Palestinian guerrillas like Ahmed have left their posts and melted into the mass of homeless Palestinians and Lebanese camping out in shopping centers, vacated offices and unfinished apartment buildings in the center of besieged west Beirut.

But over the weekend, the Palestine Liberation Organization sent motorcycle teams around the devastated Moslem half of the Lebanese capital, warning through bullhorns: "All those who left their positions for one personal reason or another should report to their superior officers within 48 hours or face court-martial."

The warning was signed by "the Commander-in-Chief of the Revolution, Abu Ammar." Abu Ammar is the code name for PLO chieftain Yasser Arafat.

However, a PLO official who did not want to be named contended the number of desertions was not significant.

"The rumors of desertions are exaggerated and are inspired by the Israelis to sap the morale of the fighters," he said.

Ahmed, a handsome curly-haired man in his mid-20s, and his 22-year-old wife, Ghada, are squatters in an abandoned office in the Strand, a high-rise commercial building, with their 2-month-old son, Mohammed, their 2-year-old daughter, Rania, and Ahmed's elderly mother. It has been nearly two months since the family fled from their home in the Bourj el-Barajneh refugee camp, on the south side of west Beirut.

Speaking in a combination of broken English and Arabic, and speaking softly so he could not be overheard, Ahmed said he was an automobile mechanic by trade but had been a fighter for Fatah, the biggest PLO faction, which Arafat heads, before Israel invaded Lebanon on June 6.

"It's finished for me now; I was at the Museum," he continued, referring to the heavy fighting last week in the National Museum area midway along the dividing line between west and east Beirut.

With agreement apparently near on plans to evacuate Palestinian guerrillas from Beirut, Ahmed said he did not want to uproot his family from Lebanon and seek an uncertain future in some other Arab country.

"All I want," he said, "is to go back to Beiddawi," a Palestinian refugee camp in northern Lebanon untouched by the war. He and Ghada were born there, and there he could work again as a mechanic, he said.

Ahmed said he didn't know how many other guerrillas had left their posts. But several longtime residents of Beirut report that they, too, have met such deserters.

A newspaper editor said he was startled last week when a guerrilla he had known for years and considered a dedicated revolutionary appeared in his office and announced he had abandoned his post.

"My leaders are all sitting around in Hamra, drinking beer and having a good time talking," the guerrilla said. "If they're going to do that, then I'm not going to fight."

PLO officials say there will be a sizable exodus of those who evade the official evacuation because, they predict, Lebanese government officials and the Christian-dominated Lebanese army will crack down on Palestinians who lack residency papers and work permits.
