

Israeli Cabinet Okays Evacuation Terms

By The Associated Press

The Israeli Cabinet approved the final draft of the Palestinian evacuation agreement today, Cabinet Secretary Dan Meridor announced, but the kidnapping of an Israeli soldier threatened to delay the start of the guerrillas' withdrawal from west Beirut.

The Israeli military command said in a communique that four guerrillas took the soldier from his observation post Wednesday evening and led him at gunpoint into the Bourj el-Barajneh refugee camp in southern Beirut.

The command said the government had begun efforts to secure the release of the soldier, and Meridor said the evacuation could not begin until both he and an Israeli pilot captured by the Palestine Liberation Organization were returned.

The PLO has agreed to hand over the pilot, Aharon Ahiaz, and the remains of five Israeli soldiers killed in the invasion to Lebanese Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan for delivery to U.S. presidential envoy Philip C. Habib. But there has been no word from Beirut on the kidnapped soldier.

An Israeli communique, read to reporters in Jerusalem by Meridor after the Cabinet meeting, said: "The government of Israel approved the draft arrangement concerning the evacuation from Beirut and Lebanon of all the terrorists including their organization, leadership, members, commands and officers."

Replying to questions, he added: "Israel has made clear its position that the evacuation will not begin until we receive the prisoners, including the soldier who was kidnapped ... No evacuation will begin before this demand of ours is accepted, before the evacuation."

The Israeli command also accused the Palestinians of artillery and sniper fire in southern Beirut in violation of the cease-fire; PLO guerrillas in west Beirut detonated a car packed with explosives as a precautionary measure but four people were injured slightly, and the Lebanese presidential election scheduled for today was postponed until Monday and shifted to a new site.

The final draft of the evacuation agreement was delivered Wednesday to Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin, and the Cabinet met today and approved it. Government sources said it supplied the clarifications demanded by the Cabinet when it approved an earlier draft in principle last week.

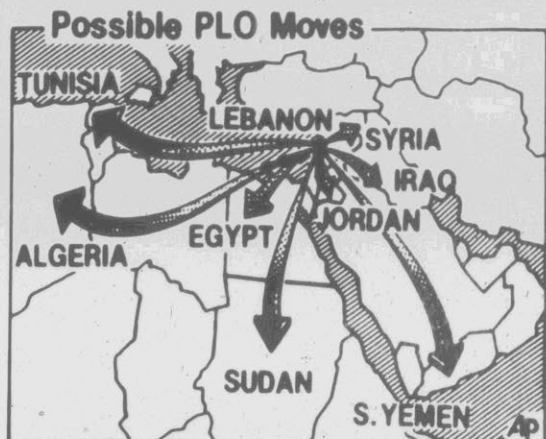

Israeli government sources had said earlier that the return of the captive pilot could take place on Friday, and the 350 French troops who will spearhead the U.S.-French-Italian peacekeeping force for west Beirut could land any time after that to start overseeing the evacuation. But apparently this timetable was now dependent on the return of the kidnapped soldier also.

The American contingent — 800 U.S. Marines with 1,000 more and five Navy ships to back them up — was due off Lebanon Friday but was not expected to land until four or five days after the start of the PLO pullout, Pentagon sources in Washington said.

Israel television said the Israeli government expects the evacuation to remove 15,600 people from west Beirut: 7,100 PLO guerrillas, 5,200 Syrian soldiers and pro-Syrian guerrillas, 1,000 non-Arab guerrillas, 1,300 PLO officials and 1,000 members of the Palestine Liberation Army connected with Syria and Jordan.

The TV report also said the Israeli government had information that several thousand Palestinian guerrillas had obtained Lebanese identity papers so they could evade evacuation and stay in Beirut.

The Israeli military command charged that guerrillas violated the cease-fire Wednesday.

$13.3 Billion In Spending Cuts Sent White House

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here are the major provisions of the three-year, $13.3 billion package of spending cuts approved by the House and Senate and sent to President Reagan:

—Pensions:

A $4.1 billion package of pension savings contains three major provisions.

The first would cut planned cost-of-living increases in half for federal retirees under age 62. Survivors and disabled retirees as well as all those 62 and over would receive full increases, estimated at 6.6 percent next year; 7.2 percent in 1984 and 6.6 percent in 1985.

All retirees would receive cost-of-living adjustments every 13 months, instead of the current 12.

"Double dippers," an estimated 140,000 retired military personnel now working for civilian agencies, would have their inflation-linked pay increases reduced each year by the same amount their retirement benefits are increased.

—Banking and Housing:

The Department of Housing and Urban Development may collect full mortgage insurance premium payments at the time an FHA loan is originated, at a 3-year savings estimated at $2 billion. Under current law, the premiums are collected throughout the life of the loan.

In a provision not related to spending cuts, $50.3 million is authorized for operations of the Bureau of the Mint for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1.

—Veterans:

A total of $552 million in reductions over three years includes a loan origination fee of one half of one percentage point on VA home loans. The fee would average an estimated $285 per loan. Veterans with service-connected disabilities would be exempt.

—Miscellaneous:

Membership of the Federal Communications Commission would be reduced from seven members to five. Membership of the Interstate Commerce Commission would be trimmed from 11 members to five.

—Agriculture Programs:

Food stamps would be cut an estimated $1.9 billion over three years at the same time the program was authorized to continue. The biggest savings comes from reducing administrative payments to states with high error rates in the program. The largest provision affecting beneficiaries directly would slow the inflation-linked increases in benefits. That provision is estimated to mean $2.50 a month in lower benefits for a family of four with no other income. Such a family now receives $230 a month in benefits.

A major change in the dairy program is estimated to save $4.5 billion. The price support level would be frozen for two years at the current $13.10 per hundredweight, and permitted to rise with inflation in 1985. But the administration would be permitted to reduce the rate by 50 cents per hundredweight on Oct. 1 if government surplus purchases exceed 5 billion pounds. A second 50-cent reduction is authorized beginning in April 1983 if annual surplus purchases exceed 7.5 billion pounds, but that money can be rebated to farmers who voluntarily reduce their own production.

Changes in wheat and feed grain, rice and cotton programs are estimated to save $361 million over three years.

Wheat farmers who take 20 percent of their acreage out of production would receive payment from the government for 5 percent of their acreage. The payment would amount to $3 for each bushel normally grown on the land. The wheat price support also would increase from $3.55 a bushel to $3.65.

A similar program is set up for corn and feed grain farmers, except they must set aside 15 percent of their acreage in order to receive payments of $1.50 a bushel on 5 percent. The loan rate goes from $2.55 a bushel to $2.65.

Rice farmers would be paid $3 per hundredweight on 5 percent of their land if 20 percent is withheld from production.

Veto Warnings Are Ignored As House Clears Money Bill

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ignoring veto warnings from the administration, Congress is moving toward adoption of a $14.2 billion supplemental money bill.

"If the bill is enrolled in its present form, it will be difficult for me to recommend that the president sign it," White House budget director David A. Stockman said in a letter to several Republican members of Congress.

Nevertheless, the House approved the compromise measure on a 348-67 vote Wednesday night and sent it to the Senate, where final congressional approval is expected Friday.

The bill provides additional money for various agencies for the current fiscal year, which ends Sept. 30, including $6.1 billion for federal civilian and military pay raises that took effect last October. Of that total, $5.2 billion is earmarked for the nation's approximately 3 million military personnel.

Congressional negotiators worked out the compromise bill from separate versions passed by the House and Senate.

Congress and the Reagan administration agree on the pay portion of the money bill, but other provisions are in dispute.

Failure to resolve the dispute soon could leave millions of the nation's military personnel without their paychecks at the end of the month.

Stockman said in his letter: "If there is no bill, the first, and probably most serious problem that will be encountered will be the impossibility of disbursing the military payroll on August 31 from existing appropriations."

Congressional aides have said funds to pay some National Guard and reserve personnel may run out sooner.

Congress plans to adjourn at the end of the week for a 2½-week Labor Day recess, meaning a veto could leave the issue unresolved until Congress returns in September.

President Reagan, in drumming up support for the tax increase measure he wants, has sent letters to wavering legislators telling them, "I will, of course, resist any budget-busting spending measures that may come to my desk."

To underscore the point, Reagan notes "as governor of California I exercised the veto power successfully 993 times."

Edwin L. Dale Jr., spokesman for the Office of Management and Budget, said the administration objects to the bill because it includes $918 million more in domestic spending than the president requested.

Among the items that were not requested by the administration are community service employment programs for senior citizens, several education programs for the handicapped and grants to needy college students.

Tax Victory Up To Demos

By JIM LUTHER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican leaders cautiously forecast another victory for President Reagan's economic program as the House approached a final vote today on a compromise bill raising taxes by $98.3 billion over the next three years.

But it appeared any such victory would have to be handed the president by mainstream Democrats — not by the Republicans and Southern conservatives who were Reagan's source of strength a year ago. Vote counters in both parties said more than half the Republicans might oppose the bill.

"We're going to win. I know we're going to win. I got that visceral feeling," House Republican Leader Robert Michel proclaimed Wednesday as Reagan lobbied nearly 100 House members in meetings throughout the day and evening.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill told reporters today: "I don't know what we'll do. We could win by a half dozen votes or lose it by a hundred.... I think we have a good chance of putting it over."

Reagan was meeting with about a half dozen Republican congressmen today, according to deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes.

"It's very tight. It's still an uphill battle for us and we will not know until we see the votes tallied," Speakes said.

He said a poll of 1,000 people conducted for the White House on Tuesday by Richard Wirthlin showed that Americans supported Reagan's economic program by a margin of 50 percent to 36 percent.

Speakes said the question asked in the poll was, "Do you agree or disagree that if Congress passed Ronald Reagan's tax and spending proposals, we would have a much better chance of getting out of the recession sooner?"

The press spokesman acknowledged it was never mentioned that the "tax proposal" was actually a tax increase.

A Washington Post-ABC News poll conducted Tuesday found that 54 percent of the 913 people interviewed nationwide opposed the tax bill, 35 percent approved and the rest had no opinion.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes summed it up this way: "Still behind, making progress, won't know until the last moment."

It was possible that the measure would win passage in both the House and Senate today, paving the way for the lawmakers to leave Washington for a 2½-week Labor Day recess.

In the Republican-controlled Senate, liberal Democrats rallied to Reagan's side, endorsing the bill as a first step away from what they called the overly generous tax cut enacted at the president's behest a year ago.

PCC Summer Graduating Exercises Set

Summer commencement exercises for Pitt Community College will be held Aug. 26 at 8 p.m. in Wright Auditorium at East Carolina University with Dr. Albert G. Edwards, pastor of First Presbyterian Church, Raleigh, as the speaker.

Dr. Edwards is a native of Inverberie, Scotland, and is a graduate of Mackie Academy in Stonehaven, Scotland.

After coming to America he received degrees from Georgia Tech and Presbyterian College in Clinton, S.C. He also received the B.D. degree from Union Theological Seminary in Richmond, Va. and the doctor of divinity degree from David-Elkins College in West Virginia.

The speaker is a trustee of Peace College and is presently serving as commissioner of the City of Raleigh Housing Authority and Redevelopment Commission.

Dr. Edwards served as chaplain at Woodberry Forest, Orange, Va., for two years and has been chaplain for the N.C. House of Representatives for several years.

He has served as guest speaker for numerous state and national conventions for various professional, agricultural and industrial organizations.

Dr. Edwards is married to the former Margaret Early of Warrenton and they have two daughters.

The commencement exercises are open to the public, according to Dr. William E. Fulford Jr., president of PCC.

Dear Abby

Seeks Cure For Freeloaders

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My husband is a pediatrician. Please, Abby, let me use your column to tell all the people who think they can bring their sick children to our house any time of the day or night that from now on they will be getting a bill just as though they had brought their child to my husband's office.

Yesterday, we were having a peaceful family breakfast when our next-door neighbor came knocking at our door with his sick son. (They have their own doctor, but could my husband just "take a peek" at the boy to see if he was sick?)

First of all, I resented having our breakfast interrupted. (I wasn't even dressed yet!) Second of all, why don't they call their own doctor at his office? It was not an emergency, but if it were, the child should be taken to the emergency room of a hospital — not to our house. My husband should not have to be responsible for a child's health unless it's in a medical setting.

My husband is a sweet, dedicated, competent professional who works like a horse holidays and weekends. Please give him a break.

Abby, in this day and age when most people are so down on doctors, I hope you'll think this is worth printing. Thanks.

DOCTOR'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: It is and I will. (P.S. Readers, if the shoe pinches, see a podiatrist — at his office, please.)

DEAR ABBY: I'm a happily married woman with a problem I've never seen in your column. My husband wants me to wear dresses that are so low-cut in front, half my breasts are exposed. (He buys all my clothes.)

I'm a little ashamed to reveal so much in public, but I want to please my husband.

Abby, why would a man want his wife to show the world what she has?

LOW-CUT LOIS

DEAR LOIS: Because he wants to show the world what he has!

DEAR ABBY: I've known people with some strange peculiarities, but this one has floored.

A very good friend of mine, a woman in her 70s, occasionally borrows money from me. She always repays me promptly, but get this:

We are sitting in my car and she asks for a loan. I take the money out of my wallet and try to hand it to her. Does she accept it? She does not! She says, "Put the money on the floor — I'll get it!"

Now get this, Abby. There's not a soul in sight.

What could be the reason for this strange behavior?

HARRY IN ROCHESTER

DEAR HARRY: The lady obviously wants to be absolutely certain nobody sees her taking money from a gentleman. (When she pays you back, does she go through the same maneuver? It could be even more incriminating to be seen giving money to a gentleman.)

DEAR ABBY: Last Tuesday I buried my husband of 33 years, and on Friday an invitation to a wedding came in the mail addressed to him alone — just like he never even had a wife. It was a nice one with fancy print, and I never heard John mention any of the names that appeared on this invitation. It had a "RSVP" card enclosed with a little envelope already stamped to say whether he's coming or not.

Here's where you come in, Abby. Should I write: (1) John is dead now, so please don't expect him, and please don't expect a present either, because widows don't send gifts to strangers. Or should I write: (2) Don't plan on John for the wedding. Or (3) should I just ignore the invitation since it wasn't sent to me?

WHAT TO DO

DEAR WHAT: I opt for No. 3.

Marriage Announced

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Gant Jr. of Burlington announce the marriage of her daughter, Helen Russell Moseley, to Roy Linwood Hammond III of Laurinburg at 3 p.m. Aug. 15 at the home of the bride's parents. Dr. Robert G. McKenzie performed the ceremony. The bride was given in marriage by her stepfather.

The bride, formerly of Greenville, is the daughter of the late Bancroft Ficklen Moseley. The bridegroom is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Roy Linwood Hammond Jr. Following the ceremony, a reception was given at home by the bride's parents.

The couple will live in Laurinburg where he is self-employed and is also an instructor at St. Andrews College. She has been employed as a social worker and is currently finishing her master's degree at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill in social studies. She graduated from St. Andrews College. Hammond graduated from N.C. State University with a bachelor of science degree in animal science.

OIL MACHINE

A "contrary" sewing machine may be just a machine that needs oiling. Using an oil made specifically for this purpose, oil the machine in areas specified by the sewing machine manual, suggests Dr. Harriet Tutterow, extension clothing specialist at North Carolina State University.

After oiling, clean up the excess oil by sewing through scrap pieces of fabric until there is no trace of oil on them.

Millions of Americans suffer from varying degrees of some kind of phobia.

The choices are extensive and run from claustrophobia (dread of small places) to agoraphobia (dread of large places) and every fear in between.

Some of these fears people can talk about. Some of them they can't. A professional dancer has just come out of the closet with his phobia and guess what he's suffering from? Claustrophobia? Wrong. He's plagued by "Bunophobia," the fear of finding yourself in possession of a fat and sagging derriere.

His name is Cal Del Pozo and he's just written a book called "Bunnetics." In it, he provides guidelines for evaluating derrieres and offers a series of exercises to firm up.

Is he serious? You're listening to a woman who has been attached to a wide load U-Haul for years. Women, in general, suffer from the granddaddy of all phobias: SAGPHOBIA, the fear of the entire body falling. To us, it isn't a question of what falls. Our big concern is when and how far.

Bunophobia has never been one of my priorities, nor is anything I don't have to look at. It's like fussing with the back of your hair. You never see it, so who cares.

Most of my friends dread "Elasticphobia," the fear of their stomach dropping and bruising their knees.

Poultryphobia will also cause rapid heart rate, shortness of breath, trembling, blurred vision and dizziness. This is a fear of getting compliments on your ribbed turtleneck sweater when you're not wearing one.

I've seen women tortured from Jellophobia who will not leave the house or expose themselves to light. They fear when they raise their arms, you won't be able to see light coming through.

At the moment, I'm plagued by Desertphobia. This is where the sand has shifted and the 15 or 20 extra pounds you've carried for years have settled just above each knee. You can't walk across the floor without sounding like someone is applauding.

Throughout the years, there have been exercises for treating these symptoms, but they seem so drastic. Since the beginning of time, there have been women who have fallen.

The ones with Sagphobia are the ones we can talk about in a family newspaper.

Marriage Announced

The marriage ceremony of Barbara Ann Hamilton and Thomas Wayne Greer took place July 31 in the Evangelistic Tabernacle here. The double ring ceremony was conducted by the Rev. Sammy Williams. Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Joseph O'Connor of Richmond, Va. and David Hamilton of Port Washington, N.Y. Mr. and Mrs. Mahlon Pearce of Greenville and the late Tommy Greer are parents of the bridegroom. The couple is living in Greenville.

Jenny Lou Buck, bride-elect of Alan Edwards, was honored at a pantry shower Tuesday night by Terri Edwards and Elizabeth Hines at the home of the latter in Winterville.

The honoree was presented a corsage. Mrs. Elbert Buck, mother of the bride-elect and Mrs. Helen Edwards, mother of the bridegroom-elect, were special guests.

Refreshments were served after a social hour and good-byes were said by Mrs. Terri Edwards.

Budget Control Needed

North Carolina's deputy budget officer, Marvin Dorman, warns that a balanced federal budget could force a tax increase to keep the Tar Heel state budget afloat. The problem, Dorman says, could arise because North Carolina now uses federal aid to states as the balancing factor in its own budget.

"The problem arises when people become used to a certain level of services and suddenly the funding for those services is cut," Dorman said. "Then it becomes a matter of deciding whether the services are worth a tax increase."

That really would not be a problem unique to a balanced federal budget. North Carolina has had a law or a constitutional provision requiring a balanced state budget since 1925, and that question of a tax raise to boost income has come up virtually every year the Legislature has met.

There would be nothing different in more consideration of a tax increase. But it would be to the good in that, at least, the lawmakers — whether they be federal or state — have to consider what they are doing before voting to spend. The onus is on them to provide the money for spending. With such a prospect before them, there just might be less money spent on such items as a tunnel for state legislators and smaller office expenses for members of Congress.

Even the lowliest among us has to exercise some degree of budget control to survive. There is no reason why the federal and state governments can't do the same — and do it wisely.

Desire For Exercise Wanes

Finally, the U.S. Senate has done something to applaud.

The Senate, seemingly desirous of perfect physical fitness for its members, voted last week — 50-48 — to spend $750,000 for a third gymnasium for use only by senators. The zest for exercise — which never really had been demonstrated all that much — dissipated as voter reaction poured in.

So, this week, the Senate reversed itself. But not only did the Senate vote 98-0 to drop plans for the new gym, it also agreed to close one of the two existing gyms.

Maybe, just maybe, some of the senators will get more exercise listening to the folks back home.

The Insanity Plea

By PAUL T. O'CONNOR
RALEIGH — John Hinckley Jr.'s acquittal on federal charges that he attempted to assassinate President Reagan has focused new attention on the defense of not guilty by reason of insanity. In North Carolina, two separate commissions have been looking at this state's law regarding the insanity defense and are preparing recommendations for the 1983 General Assembly.

Both the Mental Health Study Commission and the Criminal Code Commission began studying the question of not guilty by reason of insanity before Hinckley was tried. Both may propose a "guilty but mentally ill" mechanism.

If not found guilty due to insanity, the defendant goes free once it is found that he no longer suffers from mental illness. Under the guilty but mentally ill mechanism, he serves a sentence — but in a facility for the mentally ill.

The Criminal Code Commission favors adding a guilty but mentally ill verdict to state law and also keeping the traditional insanity defense. The guilty verdict would hold that the defendant knew what he was doing was wrong but that he could not control himself. The insanity verdict would say the defendant didn't even know he was doing wrong.

The other approach getting attention in the state was proposed by veteran Roanoke Rapids Sen. Julian Allsbrook last June. In legislating a guilty but mentally ill concept, he would have the insanity defense eliminated.

The Mental Health Study

Commission is looking at Allsbrook's proposal, at that of the code commission and at recent changes other states have pursued.

During the mental health group's discussion of the approaches, a central question emerged. Should the new legislation focus on protecting the public from these potentially dangerous people? Or should the focus be on providing the best medical treatment to these people? The code commission approach would appear to favor the treatment approach. Under their plan, those guilty but mentally ill would spend their terms under the treatment of the Department of Human Resources at a state mental hospital.

Several problems with this approach were discussed by the commission. First, DHR doesn't have the secure facilities needed for detaining those with violent criminal tendencies. Second, they don't have the record-keeping capability required of a prison unit. Third, the doctors at these hospitals aren't necessarily trained to deal with the type of patient who ends up in jail.

The Allsbrook approach would put the guilty but mentally ill inmate under the supervision of the Department of Corrections which would then be responsible for providing him with psychiatric treatment. The prison system is already treating a great many inmates for mental problems — including 144 beds for acute problems at Central Prison.

There were questions, however, about DOC's ability to do this job well. The state might have to out a lot of new money into the prison system to provide the kind of care needed.

One commission member asked later if Allsbrook's approach would actually change anything. When a mentally ill person is arrested in North Carolina, the member said, a plea bargain will most likely be worked out between the judge, the district attorney and the defense lawyer. It will have the defendant either sent to prison or put on probation with the stipulation that he receive treatment.

Hinckley's acquittal set off a wave of public criticism of the insanity defense.

Other Editors Say Wine In Cartons?

(The Raleigh Times)

In France, many gourmets are in despair at the mushroom-like sprouting of American fast food places — 180 so far — all over the land of La Belle Cuisine. Side effects are spreading too. Table wine is sold in cardboard cartons in one Paris supermarket chain.

C'est horrible, quite right. But why should one stand about the Champs Elysees wringing one's hands and wrinkling one's nose at the encroaching aroma of burger-with-onions? Why not fight back via some vigorous French entries into America's own fast-food fray?

Several "Franchises Francaise" possibilities could brighten those suburban strips where burger, pizza, burger, chicken, fried fish, roast beef, burger follow each other with grim greasy predictability.

How about a chain called To Each His Quiche? It could specialize in individual cheesy pies done up in cunning little plastic foam imitation quiche dishes — choice of Plain Lorraine (cheese-bacon-onion), Vive Veggie (spinich-zucchini) or Quiche a la Beach (seafood), with a Petite Difference salad bar where the basic greens were NOT iceberg lettuce but spinach or something else.

A chain called Petit Pate could sell assembly-line cocktail glamor to go. For unexpected guests or occasions, you could just whip by the drive-through at your handy Petit Pate and pick up a pate en croute or terrine of shrimp, along with a bunch of parsley or cress for garnish in its own little Ziploc bag.

You could add a prepackage called Brie de Vie complete with a wedge of insulation-wrapped temperature-controlled cheese, fruit and crackers.

The seeds of this counterattack are sprouting, though not yet in Raleigh. News stories mention that "France's own new fast food — croissant and brioche breakfast pastries 'modernized' with cheese, ham and other fillings" are already implanted in the U.S.

They are? Where, we wonder? But then Danish pastry didn't get to Raleigh until some years after it reached Bora Bora. A few years back, bagels and pita bread were unobtainable here, and now every local supermarket carries both. Maybe the fast-food croissant will be next. Or maybe even wine in cartons.

YOU CAN BET HE'LL BE AMONG THE SURVIVORS!

Sharp Edge In The News

By MAXWELL GLEN and CODY SHEARER
WASHINGTON — Until a summary of U.S. television and newspaper reports crossed his desk, the young Israeli press officer had seemed hospitable enough. But as he perused the summary, our host removed his glasses and quickly lost composure.

"Your television networks are killing us," he fumed. "How can they keep reporting just one side of the story?"

Our Jerusalem friend, of course, was referring to the unprecedented attention received by Palestinian guerrillas and refugees since Israel invaded Lebanon two months ago. After years of pro-Israel press — thanks, in part, to a superbly-run public relations operation that gave Western journalists "access" — the magic had apparently disappeared.

But the source of his disappointment may also have been representative of a healthy and possibly long-lasting change in the way the U.S. media look at Israel and the Palestinian problem.

Despite what Menachem Begin says, coverage of that problem in the past has had a pro-Israel bias. In a study of 38 evening news reports on the Israeli-Palestinian conflict that were broadcast over a 10-month period beginning in July 1980, TV Guide found that almost two-thirds of the dispatches centered on Israeli actions in south Lebanon. Noted author John Weissman, "Only three of these reports — for a total of one minute, 10 seconds — showed pictures of the effects of Israeli attacks. None showed any Palestinian victims."

"On the other hand," Weissman continued, "of the reports of Palestinian raids and attacks on Israel during the period, 11 included pictures of Israeli victims and the filmed reports totaled some 17 minutes."

TV Guide's findings, published last November, were in step with those of former Ohio State University Professor Robert Trice, who, after studying 2,924 editorials in 11 major U.S. newspapers, discovered a consistent pattern of endorsements of Israeli policy. The Journal of Palestinian Studies and the Middle East Journal have reached similar conclusions.

Of course, Yasir Arafat's seemingly newfound fondness for babies and affability toward questioners and cameramen reflects a different, if desperate, tact, with the savvy but nonetheless dastardly practice of positioning itself among the civilians of West Beirut, the PLO has finally been able to make the Israelis look bad on TV.

But even the symbol of Arab militancy would probably admit that his cause — and peace in the Middle East — will depend on continued media attention once the PLO's future is determined. Arafat knows that in the absence of death and destruction the world could easily ignore the refugee plight again, leaving a new generation of terrorists to reassert itself.

With more even-handed media coverage, at least, there's a chance that the Americans might be moved to pressure the Israelis to settle the "problem" once and for all.

Strength For Today

INNER RELIGION AND OUTER

From the time he was born until he died, St. Paul's life appeared always to have been characterized by intense confidence. When he became an apostle, he was confident of the power of his new faith. Before that he had been a confident Pharisee. But Paul's confidence in the days of his youth had been in outward things. He was filled with great pride regarding race, religion, birth, breeding, and religious belief.

His conversion on the road to Damascus resulted in temporary blindness, thus forcefully demonstrating to him that he had been spiritually blind until that moment. After Damascus, Paul's life was surrendered to a new kind of religion — the inward, spiritual religion of Christ.

Religion, let us never forget, is a matter of the inner heart and not of the outer form. Emphasis on the outer can very easily kill the inner — and often does. — Elisha Douglass

Lobbying Talents Honed

By TERENCE HUNT

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressmen weren't showing off any newly acquired presidential cufflinks this time, but that seemed to be the only ingredient missing from President Reagan's lobbying arsenal for a $98.3 billion tax increase bill.

In fact, the administration's campaign for passage of the election-year tax bill likely was its largest lobbying blitz to date.

After 20 months in office, Reagan has honed his lobbying tactics to a fine art that has paid off in virtually every major test of power with Congress — so far.

National advertising, a presidential speech in prime time, direct mail, favors for congressmen, telephone calls, one-on-one appeals by the president — they're all part of the mix.

This time television spots were purchased for the first time, a measure of the uphill battle the administration faced when it could not depend on even half of the 193 Republicans in the House to vote with their president.

Previous efforts produced come-from-behind victories on massive tax and budget cuts and the contested sale of AWACS surveillance planes to Saudi Arabia.

"This place, when it does focus on one big thing, that one big thing does get accomplished," boasted a high-level Republican strategist.

Reagan, elected on a platform of cutting taxes, said he had to swallow hard to back the tax hike, arguably the largest peacetime tax boost in history. But once convinced it was essential to controlling ballooning budget deficits, he threw himself into the battle.

Upwards of 100 Republican congressmen were invited to the White House to listen to Reagan's arguments. Dozens got telephone calls from the president, and 32 lawmakers were singled out for special red-carpet treatment: a flight to Camp David and lunch at the president's mountaintop retreat.

"I've been in Congress 18 years. I've never been to Camp David before, and I was impressed to be invited and grateful to be invited, may I say," said Rep. Barber Conable, senior Republican on the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee.

No matter, Conable already was backing the bill. By various accounts, Reagan used nothing more than gentle persuasion. "He's not a man who threatens or twists arms in a traditional sense," said Conable.

Enter Lyn Nofziger, Reagan's bare-knuckled political strategist who's never been accused of being overly sweet. Nofziger went into private business earlier this year and initially teamed up with others to oppose the tax hike.

Days later, he made a complete turnabout and signed on to lead the administration's battle — in no small measure because of his unwavering loyalty to Ronald Reagan.

Nofziger sat in on Reagan's meetings with congressmen, watching to see who was wavering and winnable.

"Nofziger's big plus is he knows all the Reagan people out in the states," said the GOP strategist, speaking anonymously. As the strategist explained it, Nofziger calls a congressman's 10 biggest financial backers. They, in turn, call the congressman and tell him they're counting on him to vote with the president.

And Nofziger, himself, called congressmen. "He's almost a bigger-than-life figure, a heavy," the strategist said. "He's firm and everybody knows it."

Reagan and Nofziger weren't alone in the fight. "We're going to do every single thing that comes to mind to support him," said Bill Greener, a spokesman for the Republican National Committee.

The GOP budgeted $400,000 for the fight, including $250,000 for television commercials in specially selected cities across the country, $100,000 for a blizzard of radio ads and $50,000 for a direct-mail campaign, targeted at GOP party officials and major financial backers.

In addition, radio and television outlets were sent spots featuring Nofziger, Vice President George Bush, White House counselor Edwin Meese III, chief of staff James A. Baker III and others.

The verdict on all these effort awaited final votes in the House and Senate. But the White House and GOP were convinced they had done their best.

Cutting Is Survival Technique

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — The primary survival technique today in the world of small business is cutting. Cut inventories, cut borrowing and spending, cut jobs, cut prices, cut capital spending plans.

"They're holding garage sales to keep from going out of business," said Prof. William Dunkelberg, a Purdue University economist who also advises the National Federation of Independent Business.

Things are tough, said the professor, who analyzes responses in the quarterly surveys of the federation, which claims more than 500,000 members and represents a cross section of small concerns, including all kinds of business people: pharmacists, contractors, manufacturers, farmers.

Some people might even consider conditions frightening Dunkelberg cites the response of a consulting firm to the April survey:

"We deal closely with many farmers and small business men, and they are both in desperate financial condition. Of the 1,700 we are in close contract with, at least 1,300 verge on bankruptcy."

Matters haven't changed much since then. Dunkelberg offered this summary of results after analyzing the July returns:

—While inventories are probably low after two quarters of heavy inventory liquidation — because of weak sales and high interest rates — "even small holdings are undesirable."

To correct this imbalance, "18 percent plan to liquidate inventories further in the third quarter, the highest figure since the 23 percent planning liquidation in October 1981."

—Small-business credit demands have declined over the past two years. Many businesses were unable to afford loans at the average, 17.6 percent short-term interest rate that prevailed in the second quarter.

"We have a financially crippled business sector, over-leveraged and with cash-flow problems." —Small businesses won't be hiring soon. Job openings were at a record low. Only 10 percent reported openings, almost all for skilled workers, the lowest since the NFIB survey was begun in 1973.

—Price cutting is widespread. It has "never been more pervasive in the history of the NFIB survey." Sixteen percent of small businesses reported lower selling prices in the second quarter of the year.

—Capital spending plans are shrinking. After remaining fairly stable for 1½ years, actual outlays and planned outlays "took a nosedive."

Based on such findings, Dunkelberg believes small businesses won't be contributing a great deal to an early recovery.

"They won't hire and they won't build inventories in anticipation of a recovery," he said. Many, he feels, simply cannot borrow because the flow of cash through their operations won't support more loans.

In the meantime, while sales and profits decline, hourly compensation for labor is rising at a 6 percent annual rate, says Dunkelberg. It is a situation he believes poses further problems.

"It isn't consistent with falling prices," he says of the continued rise in labor costs. If labor costs do not fall, he foresees a renewal of higher prices when demand returns to the marketplace.

One of the bright aspects of the generally bleak small-business scene, he says, is that many companies have lowered their break-even points. That is, they have learned to manage more efficiently.

In fact, he continues, companies that have survived these "most extreme economic conditions since the Great Depression," constitute a strong, lean force for promoting the eventual expansion.

From what he observes, however, they will not try to advance the time when expansion begins. They are in a mood to bide their time, to wait for somebody else to make the first move, to conserve rather than risk.

That's what the big recession and the fight for survival has taught them. And survival remains high among their priorities, perhaps even higher than opportunity, which small business traditionally seizes.

They'll be careful, says Dunkelberg.

DOMES GROWING AGAIN — A helicopter looks like a dragonfly as it hovers above Mount St. Helens' smoldering crater dome. The 70-story-high dome expanded up and out by between 10 and 20 feet Tuesday. It was continuing to expand at a slightly faster rate Wednesday, signalling that another dome-building eruption was taking place. Molten rock was oozing up the volcano's conduit, but at that hour had not yet broken the surface. Geologists were not certain whether the eruption would become destructive. (AP Laserphoto)

Policewoman Slain In Undercover Role

HOUSTON (AP) — In a drug raid that "went sour," a uniformed police officer apparently didn't recognize an undercover policewoman and shot her to death because he felt she was threatening his life, officials say.

"She had the gun in her hand and she didn't understand that he (the other officer) was telling her to hold it," homicide Capt. B.F. Adams said of the shooting, which occurred about 7:30 p.m. Wednesday.

A rescue crew was sent by helicopter to the convenience store parking lot where Kathleen Schaefer, 33, lay bleeding, but could not save her.

She was the first Houston policewoman to die in the line of duty, said Capt. J.R. Hamel.

A police officer who asked that his name not be used said Mrs. Schaefer was shot as she approached the other officer to help him with an arrest.

"She was wearing plainclothes and he (the male officer) was in uniform," Adams said. "Somewhere in this deal he felt he was put in a threatening situation."

The unidentified police officer said Mrs. Schaefer, working undercover, and another officer had participated in a narcotics buy earlier in the evening. Mrs. Schaefer joined the force on Nov. 19, 1979, and worked in the patrol and dispatcher divisions before joining the narcotics division on June 14, 1982, the police department said in a statement. She was married to police Lt. L.W. Schaefer of the traffic division. Mrs. Schaefer was shot

N.C. Jaycees See Finances Improving

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Falling membership in the wake of the Jamsam scandal has forced the North Carolina Jaycees to cut its travel budget and lay off a staff member, officials of the organization say.

But the group is slowly improving its financial condition, according to a 1982 audit of the North Carolina Jaycees Inc. and the North Carolina Jaycees Memorial Foundation Inc.

Last year, the Jaycees and their charitable foundation showed a loss of more than $80,000. This year, the combined statements of the two show an excess of about $40,000 on May 31, the end of the fiscal year, according to the audit by the national accounting firm Peat Marwick and Mitchell.

"We made some big improvements in our financial situation," said Jerry Wall of Asheboro, executive vice president of the North Carolina Jaycees.

Wall said the improvement was largely a result of the cutbacks and a $5 increase in members' dues.

But Wall said the organization's biggest achievement was paying off $47,415 of $153,000 owed to its foundation. The money is being paid back to replace funds diverted as part of the Jamsam scandal in 1980.

The debt resulted when money was diverted for the use of some Jaycee leaders who allegedly created phony chapters and members to enhance their reputations in the national organization. The scandal was called Jamsam because much of the misused money came from the sale of grape jelly.

"We want to get that monkey off our back, and I think we're going to do it," Wall said. He said Jaycee leaders hope this year to pay off the balance of the debt to the foundation, which funds projects like the N.C. Burn Center in Chapel Hill.

Four former Jaycee officials face criminal charges, including conspiracy and misapplication of funds. Their trial was set to begin this week, but has been postponed indefinitely at the request of attorneys on both sides.

United Way Mall Day Set

United Way Day will be held at Carolina East Mall on Aug. 21, featuring entertainment and information booths set up by each agency sponsored by the Pitt County United Way.

Representatives of organizations such as the American Red Cross, the Boys Club, Flynn Christian Home, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts and 4-H will man booths to explain their agencies' purposes and distribute literature.

Entertainment will be provided by Greenville's Clown Alley, WNCT radio, Billy and Sandra Stinson, Eastern North Carolina Bluegrass Association, Ayden-Grifton Curtain Players and other local artists.

The East Carolina University Pirate will be on hand to sign autographs.

According to Lou Folger, executive director of United Way in Pitt County, the Mall Day is an effort to "let the public see where their dollars are going."

"We want the public to know more about the organizations they fund and we feel this will give them a chance to explore for themselves the kind of services that their contributions, through United Way, make possible," she added.

The United Way Mall Day will begin at 10 a.m. and continue until 4 p.m.

Disney Characters Vote To Join Union

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — About 100 employees of Walt Disney World who portray such characters as Mickey Mouse and Snow White have agreed to unionize.

The employees have complained of being forced to wear "dirty, hot costumes" in Florida's heat and being abused by overzealous amusement park patrons.

They voted 45-41 Wednesday to be included as hosts and hostesses in the Service Trades contract, said Teamster Local 385 President Larry Parker.

Charlie Ridgway, a spokesman for the park, said Wednesday night the unionization vote was "an informal gathering" and was not binding. He said the National Labor Relations Board had not scheduled a hearing on the vote.

Disney officials and the union said they would make a joint announcement today to detail the vote and new contract, said union aide Carl Crosslan.

As of October 1981, when the first complaints were made by the costumed employees, they earned between $4.10 and $5.20 per hour.

Workers had said they were sometimes kicked and heaped with verbal abuse by some park patrons. Among those who complained of such abuse were workers dressed as Mickey and Goofy.

After those complaints, Disney officials said the costumed employees remained anonymous and did not mingle as readily with patrons in order to protect themselves.

Congress Authorizes Defense Outlay

By DON WATERS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is giving President Reagan the go-ahead to authorize nearly $178 billion for the armed forces in fiscal 1983, but some lawmakers say the measure must be trimmed when actual dollars are distributed.

The House gave final approval of the authorization bill Wednesday night with a 251-148 vote that showed some slippage in support among the president's fellow Republicans from the Northeast and Midwest.

The compromise bill, which emerged from a congressional conference on Monday, gained the support of 129 Republicans and 122 Democrats. But 48 GOP members sided with 100 Democrats in opposition.

When the House's original, $175.3 billion version passed the chamber, 290-73, on July 29, only 15 Republicans were recorded against it.

Senate approval came on a 77-21 vote Tuesday.

In brief debate at the end of a 12-hour work day, leaders of the House Armed Services Committee noted they had been able to sustain House positions in favor of the Lockheed C-5B cargo plane, for the start of production of MX nuclear missiles and against the manufacture of nerve gas weapons.

But two other members of the panel, Reps. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., and Les Aspin, D-Wis., complained that the measure exceeded both the House's original total and the Senate's initial $177.9 billion version.

"It's kind of that, rather than either-or, we did all of the above," Mrs. Schroeder said. "And I think that at a time we're having to vote on a tax increase, if we didn't have this phenomenal (defense) increase, we wouldn't have to be discussing that bill."

The measure being sent to Reagan's desk for his expected signature represents a boost of nearly $47 billion in multi-year spending authority over the comparable legislation enacted for the current fiscal year, which ends Sept. 30.

And it comes within $5.6 billion of the request that Reagan sent to the Capitol in February, giving him every major weapon system he wanted, although sometimes at a reduced level.

But to bring all of the programs to reality, the appropriations committees will have to allocate the money later this year. And those panels typically do not fund the projects to the fully authorized amounts.

Rep. Joseph P. Addabbo, D-N.Y., chairman of the House defense appropriations subcommittee, has said more than $10 billion will have to be pared from Pentagon requests to bring spending in line with the budget targets that Congress established in June.

Addabbo says the cuts will have to be made either by reducing the size of the armed forces or by dumping some major programs.

He has been a prominent critic of the MX, which still lacks a permanent basing system after several years of study, and of the B-1 bomber, which is intended to replace aging B-52s while a new fleet of planes based on radar-evading "Stealth" technology is produced.

Addabbo's Senate counterpart, Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, is considered friendlier to Pentagon concerns, but he also has warned that hard decisions will have to be made. While the authorization bill largely sets spending levels for weapons, research and procurement and day-to-day military operations and maintenance, it contains nearly three dozen policy statements.

These range from creation of an inspector general, or internal watchdog, in the Defense Department to a directive that military maps henceforth identify Latvia, Lithuania and Estonia as "Soviet occupied" territories instead of intrinsic parts of the Soviet Union.

New Judge Is Named

RALEIGH — Willie Lee Lumpkin III of Morehead City has been appointed by Gov. James B. Hunt Jr. as district court judge for the Third Judicial District, which comprises the counties of Pitt, Carteret, Craven, and Pamlico.

Lumpkin replaces Herbert O. Phillips, III, also of Morehead City. Phillips was recently named a superior court judge.

The 32-year old appointee was an assistant district attorney for the Third Judicial District and was one of three nominees submitted to the governor. Lumpkin will serve the remaining portion of Judge Phillips' term which expires Dec. 2, 1984.

Terrorists Raid Italian Barracks

ROME (AP) — Armed members of the Red Brigades attacked an air force barracks on the outskirts of Rome early today, bound and gagged the guards and made off with 17 guns, police said.

A caller to the Rome newspaper Vita said the leftist urban terrorist organization claimed responsibility for the attack.

The reports of the guards were conflicting, with some saying there were six or seven gunmen and others saying there were as many as 11. No one was injured in the attack, which took place about 2:30 a.m.

Police said the raiders seized 11 automatic rifles, three automatic pistols and three regular pistols.

It was the second assault on a military installation by the Red Brigades this year. On Feb. 9, guerrillas scaled a wall of an army barracks in Caserta, outside Naples, before dawn and made off with a carload of arms.

Lung Ass'n To Administer Burroughs Wellcome Fellowship

The American Lung Association of North Carolina will administer a Burroughs Wellcome Research Fellowship in Respiratory Diseases for three years beginning July 1, 1983.

The fellowship provides an annual stipend of $18,000 to be awarded on a competitive basis to one of the State's four medical schools annually. One candidate may be nominated by the dean of each medical school prior to February 1 each year. Applications will be reviewed by the Medical Education and Research Committee of the Association to determine the recipient of the fellowship.

The American Lung Association is presently conducting a major gifts campaign statewide to raise endowment funds to continue the fellowship program.

Time Running Out On House

WASHINGTON (AP) — The clock may have run out this year for legislation that would amend the Constitution to require a balanced federal budget.

After months of delay, a House Judiciary subcommittee began work on the measure Wednesday, but then recessed until next month after making few changes.

The new postponement came as charges of deliberate foot dragging were directed against the committee's chairman, Rep. Peter Rodino, D-N.J., an outspoken foe of the balanced-budget amendment.

Rodino did little to dispell the contention, telling the panel: "I make no secret of the fact that I consider this an undertaking of doubtful worth."

The proposed ban on deficit spending passed the Senate 69-31 earlier this month.

Since the measure still must go to the full House Judiciary Committee after the subcommittee has acted, the lower panel's decision to recess until next month without completing its work diminished further prospects of floor action this year.

And an effort by backers to pry the measure from the committee and bring it directly to the House floor appeared stalled.

Backers needed to collect 218 signatures by last Monday for the measure to be considered anytime before mid-October. They were 17 votes short when the deadline passed and, although the petition drive continued, they remained 17 votes short late Wednesday.

Congress is expected to adjourn for the year in early October. However, some balanced-budget backers have suggested President Reagan consider calling a special session in the fall to consider the proposed constitutional amendment.

On Wednesday, the Judiciary subcommittee on monopolies and commercial law made several major changes in the legislation before it quit until after Labor Day, including:

—Elimination, on a 6-4 vote, of a provision that would have banned tax increases to balance the budget at rates higher than the general rate of growth of the economy.

—Addition by voice vote of a requirement binding the president, as well as Congress, to submit a balanced budget.

—Modification, by voice vote, of the margin of votes needed to permit deficit spending, requiring a three-fifths majority of those present and voting instead of the three-fifths margin of the full House and Senate membership required under the Senate bill.

FOREST KING — This giant old oak near the shores of a pond in Greenville stands in dominating grandeur, having crowded out all other growth over the years. Weatherbeaten and bearing the wounds of broken limbs, it still remains a forest king, with several branches as large as trees that encircle it. (Reflector Photo by Jerry Raynor)

Hunt For Old Shipwrecks On West Coast To Begin Monday

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Four centuries ago, the Spanish galleon San Agustin sank in Drake's Bay in a driving storm, sending 12 sailors and a cargo of Chinese Ming Dynasty porcelain and silk to a watery grave.

On Monday, government and private divers and scientists, aided by the latest electronic gear, will begin a two-stage sea hunt for the San Agustin — the oldest recorded shipwreck on the West Coast — and dozens of other vessels lost through the centuries beneath the bay's chilly waves.

Dr. Harold C. Ross, 48, head of Project Tektite, a non-profit ocean research group, emphasized it's not a search for booty.

"It's not a treasure hunt, except that we are searching for national treasures," said Ross. "In this case everybody wins."

There will be no effort to bring artifacts to the surface, he said, although some small items may be salvaged.

Instead, the divers will spend the two weeks of the first phase cataloging any ships found and mapping their locations, said Roger Kelly, the National Park Service archaeologist coordinating the hunt.

"In a nutshell, it is one of the more complex expeditions in the West and also one of the most complex attempted by the National Park Service," he said.

In an area 10 miles long and up to a half-mile from shore, the group will examine "shipwrecks and other things that might lie on the bottom. We want to inventory that entire area."

"We know there were shipments of silk and Ming Dynasty porcelain," Kelly said. "In the event we find anything valuable, we then would know later where to put our efforts, what we need to do to preserve its value...They (the ships) are resources that we are by law obliged to manage."

The park service hopes the map of the sunken vessels later will be used by recreational divers to follow a sort of "trail," he said.

The San Agustin began its final journey from Manila, Philippines, on July 5, 1595. The captain halted for water and provisions in Drake's Bay, about 30 miles north of San Francisco, which was named for English explorer Sir Francis Drake, before continuing south to Mexico, Kelly said.

Disaster struck on Nov. 5, 1595, as the 80-foot, three-masted ship lay at anchor, when a storm drove it beneath the surface. Twelve seamen perished.

To find the wreckage of the San Agustin, and the 50 or 60 other wrecks believed to be sunk in the bay, Project Tektite is providing $2.3 million in sophisticated electronic equipment, "no two of which have ever been together in one place at the same time," said Ross.

The divers will work in about 30 feet of water. Much of what they seek probably is buried in sand and mud, and equipment will be available to suck or blast away the debris covering the wrecks. No estimate of the cost of the venture was available.

The second phase, to begin in October, will be much like the first, but the emphasis will be on the participation of private volunteer organizations, led by Tektite and CEDAM, a Dallas-based group Ross called the "largest Spanish-speaking diving club in the world."

"We'll usually have between eight and 16 people at the site, giving up their vacation time to do this," he said. "It's 99.9 percent blood, sweat and tears and one-tenth of a percent fun. There are jobs to do which are not glamorous, like handling Port-a-Potties and cooking, but they have to be done. It's a fact of life."

More Noise At Home Than Job

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Most people are subjected to more noise at home than at work.

The medical director for R.J. Reynolds Industries says hearing studies show that any noise over 85 decibels, if heard long enough, can cause damage.

A decibel refers to the intensity of sound. Normal conversation is at about 60 decibels.

Hearing damage can result if one is exposed to 90 decibels, the level of a screaming infant, for eight hours. Damage can result from listening to a jackhammer (100 decibels) for two hours; a motorcycle or power mower (105) for one hour; live rock music (110) for 30 minutes; an auto horn (120) for 7.5 minutes, or an air-raid siren (130) for 3.75 minutes.

Safety Record Of 35 Years

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Truck driver John Landreth has driven nearly 1.5 million miles since 1947 without a single accident. He has never taken a defensive driving course.

Driving 18-wheel rigs for R.J. Reynolds Tobacco before there were interstate highways, Landreth has defied National Safety Council statistics which show truck drivers average 6.5 accidents for every million miles driven. A million miles is the equivalent of 360 trips from New York to Los Angeles.

He attributes his excellent driving record to his "respect for safety."

Seeking More Income From Wildlife Areas

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's wildlife refuges should be opened for more trapping, more timber cutting and other money-making ventures, the Interior Department says.

But the department's effort to expand the number of revenue-raising activities at the nation's 410 preserves has conservationists upset.

The furor is over a July memo written by F. Eugene Hester, deputy director of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, in which he asks regional directors to survey each wildlife refuge and report back on which ones are candidates for expanded economic activities.

"We believe that there is potential to expand economic uses in such areas as grazing, haying, farming, timber harvest, trapping, oil and gas extraction, small hydroelectric generation, concessions, commercial hunting and fishing guides, guided interpretative tours and commercial fishing," Hester wrote in the memo.

In all, Hester said the agency had identified 14 different economic areas ranging from cutting Christmas trees to renting sites for retriever dog training which showed promise as money makers. He asked for a report on how much economic activity each refuge was supporting now and for suggestions on where this could be expanded.

Interior Department of ficials contend that Hester's memo is not a departure from current policy which allows a variety of activities to occur on the wildlife refuges as long as they are compatible with the refuge's basic function of providing a habitat for birds and animals.

The department said farming was already taking place at 118 of the refuges, oil wells were located on 11 refuges and trappers took 146,259 fur pelts from 86 refuges in the 1980 fiscal year.

"We aren't talking about turning the refuges into Coney Islands," said Alan Levitt, Interior Department spokesman. "We will look at each wildlife refuge individually to see if we can expand the uses without hurting the wildlife."

Conservation groups said, however, that they feared Interior Secretary James Watt's push for expanded use of public lands would only worsen current conditions.

Toby Cooper of the Defenders of the Wildlife said that the sale of grazing rights on 1.6 million acres of refuge lands has already seriously reduced food available for wildlife in some areas.

Michael Bean of the Environmental Defense Fund, said, "These memos indicate a dramatic shift to a rather permissive policy. They want to move the management of the wildlife system into a gray area where the compatibility of some of these things is very questionable."

Hester's July memo was a follow-up to a letter he wrote on the same subject last fall. He termed the response to his initial request unsatisfactory.

Bean said the lack of enthusiasm showed "the disparity in the perception of what is appropriate at the wildlife refuges between the career managers in the field and the folks in Washington who are making the political decisions."

Hester asked for responses to his second memo by Aug. 20.

Wildlife refuges, which cover 89 million acres and are located in every state except West Virginia, attracted 35 million visitors last year.

Actor Says He Has Lost Diary

By KATHLEEN CARROLL
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — An actor who says he befriended Marilyn Monroe nearly 40 years ago claims he has her private diary, which, according to another friend of the actress, contains government secrets that may have led to her death.

Ted Jordon told The Associated Press in a telephone interview Wednesday night he has the red-bound diary. But he would not say how or when he got it, saying he wanted to talk to his attorney first.

Although there has never been official confirmation of the diary's existence, an art dealer says he is willing to pay $150,000 for it, a private investigator has offered $10,000 and an assistant district attorney also wants to read it.

Miss Monroe's death on Aug. 5, 1962, was ruled by the county coroner to be suicide by drug overdose. A coroner's investigator has said he saw the diary shortly after her death, but then it disappeared.

Private investigator Milo Speriglio and his client Robert Slatzer, a long-time friend of Miss Monroe, claim she was murdered because she was about to reveal the contents of the journal. They say she kept a record of government secrets she learned during an alleged romance with then-U.S. Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy, including a CIA plot to kill Cuban leader

Fidel Castro.

The allegations began to surface earlier this month, shortly before the 20th anniversary of Miss Monroe's death. The man who represents Miss Monroe's estate has discounted them as publicity stunts.

Jordon, who acted on television's "Gunsmoke" for 11 years, says he met Miss Monroe in 1943 and was her friend until her death.

He said Miss Monroe visited him twice shortly before her death "and she felt she was being held a prisoner and all...she was out on Nembutals (tranquilizers)."

"I hesitated to say anything for many, many years because I was afraid," Jordon said, declining to explain why he was afraid. "There is a lot of untold activity in her life, but I've been instructed (by my attorney) not to say any more."

Last week, the county Board of Supervisors ordered the district attorney's office to re-examine the circumstances surrounding Miss Monroe's death.

Assistant District Attorney Mike Carroll, who has been assigned to the investigation, said Wednesday night he "would like to talk to this guy (Jordon) and read the diary, if he has it."

Douglas Villiers, owner of the Antiquarian antique market, said he would pay Jordon $150,000 for the diary. Earlier this month Villiers offered $100,000.

Villiers said he was contacted by Jordon after making the original offer, but the actor later failed to show up for an appointment.

Later, Villiers said, Jordon told him "I'm not going to do anything for a month or so."

"It was very mysterious. Whether he's trying to push up the ante, I don't know," said Villiers, adding he increased the price to get Jordon "out of the woodwork, if he's really got the diary."

"Nobody's seen anything so far," he said.

Speriglio said he was contacted by Jordon after he offered $10,000 for the diary.

"I told him I would get back to him, so I had a chance to run a background check on him," Speriglio said Wednesday night, adding that Jordon did not show up for a scheduled meeting a week ago.

"There's a possibility he may have the real diary," said Speriglio, who runs the Nick Harris Detective Agency here. "I hope he does."

The coroner's investigator who signed her death certificate, Lionel Grandison, has said he saw the diary along with her body at the coroner's office, but when he went back two days later the diary was gone.

Grandison, who left the coroner's office in 1962 after he pleaded guilty to forgery charges for using a dead person's gasoline credit card, also has said he was pressured into signing Miss Monroe's death certificate listing suicide as the cause of death.

Innocent Pleas Are Entered By Colcor Defendants

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — A federal magistrate has set Sept. 20 as a tentative trial date for nine Colcor defendants who have pleaded innocent to charges stemming from the FBI's undercover investigation of crime in eastern North Carolina.

Among those entering pleas of innocent Wednesday was state Rep. Ron Taylor, who also faces state charges in connection with the burning of warehouses owned by a business competitor and state senator.

Taylor, 29, is charged in the Colcor probe under federal racketeering laws with accepting a $1,500 bribe from federal undercover agents in return for agreeing to expedite a liquor-by-the-drink license.

The pleas were entered in an arraignment before U.S. Magistrate Franklin Block. Block set a proposed trial date of Sept. 20 in federal court in Raleigh for Taylor and each of the other defendants. But U.S. Attorney Sam Currin said the trials probably would be rescheduled later.

Currin said he expected the defendants to be tried separately and in small groups, according to the various indictments. He said prosecutors had not begun any plea-bargaining negotiations.

Two defendants, Lake Waccamaw Police Chief L. Harold Lowery and Roland Carroll, had their arraignments continued until next Thursday after Block agreed to their requests for court-appointed attorneys.

Also to be arraigned next Thursday are Kenneth Coleman and his wife Mary L. Coleman of the Cherry Grove community in Columbus County. They were arrested with the other suspects on July 29 and were indicted on drug charges Tuesday.

District Court Judge J. Wilton Hunt Sr. of Whiteville had his arraignment postponed under an agreement with prosecutors. He will also be arraigned next Thursday.

Colcor, an acronym for Columbus County Corruption, is the name for two-year

FBI probe into alleged corruption in that southeastern North Carolina county.

A total of 21 people were indicted, including several in Tennessee, on a variety of charges including bribery, trafficking in drugs and stolen property, and counterfeiting.

Entering pleas of innocent were: — Gary Simmons, 31, of Columbus County, charged with conspiracy to distribute controlled substances.

— J. Harold Cribb, 29, also of Columbus County, charged with conspiracy to distribute controlled substances. He is being held under $100,000 bond, and Block delayed a decision on a request by Cribb's attorneys to lower his bond $20,000.

— James E. Carroll, 43 of Whiteville, charged with conspiracy to distribute controlled substances, conspiracy to engage in racketeering, theft from interstate shipment, and conspiracy to possess stolen property. Block denied a motion by Carroll's attorney asking that his bond be reduced from $115,000 to $10,000.

— Edward Walton Williamson, 56, of Cerro Gordo, a Columbus County commissioner, charged with racketeering activity for allegedly accepting bribes.

— Danny S. Merritt, of Clarkton, charged with two counterfeiting charges.

— Howard F. Watts, 48 of Clarkton, charged with aiding and abetting interstate travel in aid of racketeering. According to the indictment, Watts aided and abetted Taylor.

— Roscoe F. Hall III, 39, of Whiteville, charged with theft from interstate shipments and conspiracy to possess stolen property. His attorney said Hall intended to post $100,000 bond. He was being held in the Brunswick County Jail.

— Julius R. Williamson, 43, of Whiteville, facing the same charges as Hall. He was being held under $100,000 bond and Block did not rule on a request to lower that to $30,000.

An additional defendant, William L. Little, of Summerville, S.C., charged with interstate transportation of a stolen motor vehicle, will have his case transferred to federal court in South Carolina, Currin said.

New Election For Haywood

WAYNESVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A new election has been ordered to choose the clerk of court and two board of commissioners seats in Haywood County after state elections officials said some voting irregularities occurred in the June 29th primary.

The board voided the clerk of court primary election in Haywood County pitting Katie Williamson against incumbent William Gil Henry. The board also ordered another runoff for two seats on the Haywood County Board of Commissioners.

The new elections will be held under state supervision. A date will be set within two weeks, the board said.

Mrs. Williamson appeared to defeat Henry after an initial vote count. But after a recount, Henry was declared the winner by a 23-vote margin.

Attorneys for Mrs. Williamson filed a protest, alleging that ballot boxes were tampered with between the first count and the recount three days later.

The order for a new county commissioner election came after incumbent Carl Greene protested his elimination from the runoff because of an error in vote counting.

Greene will be in a runoff along with Hessie Terrell, Troy Mann, Teddy Rogers and Roger Ammons, the elections board decided.

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet engineers are experimenting with 231-foot lighter-than-air craft to solve the nagging problem of getting vegetables to market, the government newspaper Izvestia says.

The ministries of energy and electrification have jointly developed and tested a prototype, the newspaper reported, saying the dirigible was more efficient than airplanes or helicopters in moving freight.

"Dirigibles can be used in farm work to spread fertilizers over a large area," the paper stated.

"It has no match as a means of quickly transporting fruit and vegetables," according to the report. "By changing altitude this 'flying refrigerator' can choose the right temperature for its cargo."

The Soviet agricultural system has traditionally been plagued with transportation problems. Crops frequently rot before getting to market because of transport bottlenecks.

LONDON (AP) — A survey in Sydney, Australia, found people working under fluorescent light may run a greater risk of contracting skin cancer than those who don't, according to the British Medical weekly The Lancet.

Poultry
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) - (NCDA) - The North Carolina f.o.b. dock broiler market was steady to firm. Supplies moderate. Demand moderate to good. Weights desirable. The dock weighted average price for this week is 39.65 for small purchases of plant grade broilers picked up at processing plants. Estimated slaughter today, 1,769,000.

NEW YORK (AP) - The stock market was mixed today as the frenzied activity of the last two days abated.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 3.81 to 833.24 by noon.

But declining issues slightly outnumbered gainers in the midday tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 32.51 million shares after the first two hours, down from 65.63 million at the same point Wednesday.

Tuesday produced the biggest one-day rise in market history - a 38.81-point jump in the Dow Jones industrial average. Wednesday's session eclipsed all previous volume records, with 132.69 million shares traded on the Big Board.

But the Dow Jones industrials, up 18 points at midsession Wednesday, retreated in late trading to finish with a 1.81-point loss.

Cities Service led the active list, up 4 1/2% at 42 1/2. Occidental Petroleum made a $50-a-share tender offer for about 49 percent of Cities Service's stock.

The NYSE's composite index edged up .01 to 62.33. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index slipped .07 to 247.87.

While on the witness stand Tuesday, the woman began crying and talking rapidly, describing her assault on a man who entered her apartment while she was watching television.

The attacker kept saying he wasn't going to hurt her and asking where her husband was, she testified. Then, she said, she was backed into a wall and the man started choking her.

The judge told the sobbing witness to slow down so the jury could understand what she was saying.

The woman said she knew "that he was going to kill me."

She tried to scream, she said, but couldn't.

"I guess I passed out. The next thing I remember was lying on the floor... He was still choking me..."

At that point in the testimony, the witness began screaming loudly, with a microphone on the witness stand amplifying the sound.

The jury was led out, and the judge called a recess.

Defense attorney Phyllis Riewe then asked for a mistrial.

"The outburst was so significant that I cannot possibly expect the jurors not to be affected by it," the lawyer said.

"It seems to me you're suggesting someone can cause trauma and never be tried for the charge," Goshorn replied.

However, the judge said case law supported the call for a mistrial.

Prosecutors will have 90 days to prepare for a third trial against Berry, who has already been sentenced to 159 years in prison for another Merritt Island rape.

Berry is also charged with escape for breaking out of the Brevard County Jail on Aug. 4.

Audrie Megregian, coordinator of the local Commission Against Sexual Assault, said rape victims relive the attack in testifying about it.

Trial Ended By Screams

TITUSVILLE, Fla. (AP) - A man charged with sexual assault was granted a new trial after his alleged victim began screaming on the witness stand.

Circuit Judge Gil Goshorn ruled the woman's outburst could prejudice the jury hearing the case against Frank Berry, 21, of Merritt Island.

The new trial will be the third effort by prosecutors to convict Berry. The first trial ended in a hung jury in July. A six-person panel failed to reach a verdict on charges of sexual battery, aggravated assault, burglary and robbery.

While on the witness stand Tuesday, the woman began crying and talking rapidly, describing her assault on a man who entered her apartment while she was watching television.

The attacker kept saying he wasn't going to hurt her and asking where her husband was, she testified. Then, she said, she was backed into a wall and the man started choking her.

The judge told the sobbing witness to slow down so the jury could understand what she was saying.

The woman said she knew "that he was going to kill me."

She tried to scream, she said, but couldn't.

"I guess I passed out. The next thing I remember was lying on the floor... He was still choking me..."

At that point in the testimony, the witness began screaming loudly, with a microphone on the witness stand amplifying the sound.

The jury was led out, and the judge called a recess.

Defense attorney Phyllis Riewe then asked for a mistrial.

"The outburst was so significant that I cannot possibly expect the jurors not to be affected by it," the lawyer said.

"It seems to me you're suggesting someone can cause trauma and never be tried for the charge," Goshorn replied.

However, the judge said case law supported the call for a mistrial.

Prosecutors will have 90 days to prepare for a third trial against Berry, who has already been sentenced to 159 years in prison for another Merritt Island rape.

Berry is also charged with escape for breaking out of the Brevard County Jail on Aug. 4.

Vote Delayed; Kuhn Says He Won't Resign

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn, his 14-year reign imperiled by growing opposition, says he refuses to walk away from a good fight.

"I have no intention of resigning," Kuhn said Wednesday after baseball's summer meetings were adjourned without settling the issue of his re-election.

A special meeting was scheduled Nov. 1 to settle the matter after the American League voted 11-3 for a postponement and the National League approved it by a 7-5 margin.

An attempt by at least three dissident National League clubs bogged down into a stalemate that failed to produce compromises necessary to assure Kuhn of a third consecutive term in office.

Appearing at a news conference, Kuhn, 57, said he was "somewhat disappointed it couldn't be resolved successfully" but added, "I could hardly call it a no-confidence vote."

"In terms of victory or defeat, I would have to put it down as neutral," said Kuhn, who took the office in 1969 as a replacement for the late Gen. William Eckert. Kuhn's second seven-year term ends Aug. 1, 1983.

Asked if he was considering resignation as a means of ending the impasse, Kuhn replied, "This looks like a good fight and not the kind of thing I would be considering walking away from."

Adjournment came after late-night lobbying that carried into Wednesday and a day of tense closed door sessions.

"We couldn't even make a decision on making a decision," said Eddie Einhorn, president of the Chicago White Sox and a member of the pro-Kuhn camp.

Said Kuhn, "Baseball is a complicated game full of complicated people."

When adjournment finally came, reaction from the owners was mixed.

"Bowie's got some real soul-searching to do. What's going on is tearing baseball apart," said George Steinbrenner, owner of the New York Yankees and a past critic of the commissioner.

"It (the deadlock) certainly didn't help him," said Roy Eisenhardt, the Oakland A's president and a Kuhn backer.

"I think he's going to weather it," predicted Ballard Smith, president of the San Diego Padres and another pro-Kuhn activist.

The regularly-scheduled joint meeting of all 26 major league clubs Wednesday morning was delayed by an hour when nine loosely-aligned Kuhn antagonists held a strategy session.

The original group of three National League dissidents from the New York Mets, Houston Astros and St. Louis were joined by the Atlanta Braves, Cincinnati Reds, Chicago Cubs, Seattle Mariners, Texas Rangers and New York Yankees.

At one point, Frank Cashen, the Mets' general manager, told a reporter, "Obviously, they don't have enough votes to re-elect him (Kuhn), so they're going for a compromise."

At issue in the compromise were the duties and powers of a super-administrator proposed under restructuring and charged essentially with handling the growing complexities of baseball's business.

"The main issue was the hiring of an additional person to handle business affairs in the commissioner's office," said AL President Lee MacPhail.

At the news conference, Kuhn said he has long endorsed the idea of a special business manager for baseball, but said he would have to be subordinate to the commissioner.

"The pyramid has got to stop with somebody," said Kuhn, adding that "baseball has never needed a strong commissioner more than we need it today."

While waiting for a verdict to return, Kuhn said he spent long hours in the suite of his seaside resort hotel "staying on the balcony looking at the sea."

While a 10-member committee, formed Wednesday afternoon to seek compromise on Kuhn's re-election, failed this time, National League President Chub Feeney said, "the committee could be resurrected in a half hour."

"We're going to have people working to resolve this issue. We're not going to sit on it until Nov. 1," Feeney said.

After the adjournment, Steinbrenner said Kuhn "has a big problem. I don't envy him at all. I'm not taking sides, but it's important that we get on with baseball. We can't do it until this is resolved."

Smith suggested the problem was "archaic voting rules" that permit four clubs to "hold the other 22 hostage." He was referring to the current structure which requires a three-quarters majority in each league to pass issues such as the commissioner's re-election.

Gimme Five! Fines Recinded Henderson's Speed Aids A's Win Over Brewers

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Football League Players' Association claims the clubowners' negotiators backed down. The Management Council says it took action to get the issues back in focus.

At any rate, the Council recommended Wednesday that the 28 NFL teams rescind the fines handed out to players who participated in pregame handshakes last weekend.

Following a meeting between Jack Donlan, executive director of the Management Council, and William Lubbers, general counsel to the National Labor Relations Board, in Washington, the Council made its announcement.

"We feel this entire matter had gotten out of focus," Donlan told Lubbers, who said he had not made a decision to seek an injunction against collecting the fines, as requested by the union. "We think we should get on with collective bargaining and leave behind incidents that delay, disrupt and demean the game. Collective bargaining belongs at the negotiating table, not on the field."

"We are willing to recommend the clubs rescind the fines and refrain from fining future undisturbed similar handshake incidents in the hope the union leadership will come to the bargaining table."

The players, some of whom — according to NFLPA executive director Ed Garvey — were "so incensed" that they were talking about striking pre-season games this weekend, felt they had won a victory. Dick Berthelsen, union staff counsel, said the threat of an NLRB injunction scared off the clubowners.

"This decision clearly was the result of their (Donlan and Lubbers) meeting," said Berthelsen. "We are gratified that the board would act so fast. Hopefully, the childish behavior by coaches like (Seattle's) Jack Patera will end and the players will get their full paychecks."

Players were fined anywhere from $100 to half a game's salary for their handshakes, a display of union solidarity. The Seahawks, who fined their players a half game's salary, said they would obey the directive from the Management Council and rescind the fines.

Donlan said the handshakes were never the issue and that the decision to levy fines was based on information the council had that the handshakes were the first in a series of intermittent disruptive actions which are not protected by the National Labor Relations Act.

"Let's stop the demonstrations and resume the negotiating," said Donlan, who added that the players haven't been making themselves available at the bargaining table.

Berthelsen countered by saying, "We've made it clear to Donlan that our executive committee is made up of seven players. Because they are in training camp, we have to meet near those camps. He has refused."

Meanwhile, the threat of selective strikes against pre-season games this weekend seems to have been removed by the rescinding of the fines. The union had been urging its members not to strike over the fines.

The NFLPA and Turner Broadcasting System, Inc., the Atlanta-based cable company, announced an agreement Wednesday to televise a package of up to 18 games in the event the NFL players and owners do not reach a new collective bargaining agreement and the regular season is disrupted.

Under the plan announced by Garvey and Robert Wussler, TBS executive vice president, and Sheldon Saltman of the Los Angeles-based media consultant firm of Kragen and Saltman, there would be two-games a week on a possible nine-week schedule. If an agreement between the NFL and NFLPA is reached, the contract would be void.

The games, to begin two weeks after a management lockout or what was described by Garvey as a "unfair labor practices strike," would be played by six All-Star teams, three consisting of the players from the American and three from the National Football Conference, chosen by their peers.

A championship game would be played in Aloha Stadium in Hawaii on Dec. 9.

Three-Way QB Battle Brewing

Transfer John Williams is rapidly becoming a factor in the battle for quarterback at East Carolina University.

While Greg Stewart seemed to have the upper hand following spring drills, it was expected that he and Kevin Ingram would be the two main protagonists for that spot come fall drills.

However, Williams, a transfer from North Greenville Junior College, appears to have stepped right into the battle, and could easily become a challenger for the starting job once he learns the system.

Williams, originally recruited by Georgia Tech, left there and did not play football as a freshman at North Greenville, concentrating instead on basketball. As a prepster in Greenville (S.C.), he was a 1979 Shrine Bowl pick, running and passing for over 2,000 yards as a senior.

The battle for that spot will begin to pick up tomorrow when the Pirates don heavy gear for the first time and begin contact work, ending their three days of light workouts and four-a-day drills.

Jeff Heath, a Tidewater area freshman, and Kurt Larkins, sophomore from Kinston, are battling it out for the kicking specialist spot, while a host of players are vying for the punting position, left vacant by the departure of Tommy Barnhardt.

Sunday the Pirates will hold their annual media day, but a public photo and autograph session will be held from 4 to 6 p.m. on the field.

The public is invited to attend this session for pictures and autographs.

Wussler said the games would be played on Sunday afternoon and Monday night and carried over the TBS 22-million cable household network, plus conventional stations, to reach 70 percent to 80 percent of the homes in the nation.

Retired players would be recruited as coaches. Stadium leases are being obtained, they said, by promoters who will stage the games in individual cities.

Both Wussler and Garvey agreed TBS was paying "in excess of $10 million" for rights to the games.

Garvey said the players selected for the game on an approximate 45-man squad would receive between $4,000 and $5,000 each "and there would be money left over to go to other players to help defray their expenses during the lockout or a strike caused by the owners' unfair labor practices."

Wussler said, "We in no way are encouraging the NFL players not to reach agreement with team owners."

Henderson's Speed Aids A's Win Over Brewers

By The Associated Press
Even when Rickey Henderson isn't stealing bases, he's a handful of trouble.

The pesky Oakland outfielder, known for his base-stealing proficiency, gave the Milwaukee Brewers some problems with his bat when he singled home the tying runs in the eighth inning Wednesday night.

Three innings later, he used his notorious speed to unlock the 2-2 tie he created and gave the A's a tense 3-2, 11-inning victory.

"I didn't get a good jump," said Henderson, who managed to score the winning run anyway on Joe Rudi's single.

Henderson reached base on third baseman Paul Molitor's error leading off the 11th and was sacrificed to second base to set up the winning run.

"If I got on base (Manager Billy) Martin told me I was going to be sacrificed," said Henderson, who had been picked off first base after his single in the eighth off Milwaukee left-hander Bob McClure.

"My first thought was that I hit the ball too hard," Rudi said. "Then I remembered who was on second base."

In other American League action, it was Minnesota 6, Baltimore 5; New York 9, Kansas City 2; Boston 4, California 1; Detroit 7, Seattle 2 and Texas 11, Chicago 1.

Twins 6, Orioles 5
Kent Hrbek tied the game with an RBI single and Mickey Hatcher singled home the game-winner as Minnesota rallied in the 10th inning to beat Baltimore. John Lowenstein had hit a solo homer in the top of the 10th to give the Twins a 5-4 lead.

Yankees 9, Royals 2
Oscar Gamble's two-run double highlighted a four-run third inning and Tommy John fired a seven-hitter to lead New York over Kansas City.

Red Sox 4, Angels 1
Jerry Remy's two-run single with the bases loaded in the sixth inning snapped a 1-1 tie and left-hander John Tudor pitched four-hit ball for six innings to lead Boston over California.

Tigers 7, Mariners 2
Lance Parrish smashed a two-run homer in the first inning and a solo shot in the eighth and Tom Brookens added a bases-empty blast in the seventh to lift Detroit over Seattle.

Rangers 11, White Sox 1
Buddy Bell's two-run triple and Jim Sundberg's two-run homer backed Frank Tanana's nine-hit pitching, leading Texas over Chicago.

For Atlanta's Braves Broken Record Spins On

By The Associated Press
The Atlanta Braves are mired in one of baseball's all-time slumps and Manager Joe Torre can't say it ain't so. In fact, there isn't much Torre can say.

So when someone asked Torre to say something Wednesday after the Braves were bombed 12-2 by the Montreal, Torre quipped:
"Just replay the notes from the past few weeks. We were very flat."

The last three weeks have produced 19 losses in 21 games, dropping the Braves from the top of the National League West, nine games in front of the San Diego Padres, to second place, four games behind the Los Angeles Dodgers and only a half-game ahead of the Padres and one in front of the San Francisco Giants.

Andre Dawson drove in five runs with two homers and a single to lead Montreal's 16-hit attack against Rick Camp and three relievers. It was the fourth consecutive defeat for Atlanta in its latest losing streak.

In other NL games, the Dodgers downed the Chicago Cubs 7-4 after taking the completion of Tuesday's suspended game 2-1 in 21 innings, the St. Louis Cardinals edged the Padres 2-1, the Philadelphia Phillies downed the Houston Astros 5-3 in 15 innings, the Giants walloped the Pittsburgh Pirates 16-9 and the Cincinnati Reds nipped the New York Mets 7-6 in 14 innings.

Despite their embarrassing skid, the Braves were still talking tough.

"We know we're still close," said first baseman Chris Chambliss.

The Expos, who are struggling to catch the Cardinals and Phillies in the NL East, weren't about to give the Braves any ammunition for their bulletin board.

Pollard In Putt Win

Danny Pollard led through all three rounds of the Pro-Am Tournament at the Greenville Putt-Putt course last night, capturing top honors.

Pollard had rounds of 25, 31 and 29 on the way to a 23-under-par 85.

The end of regulation play found Jake Loftin and Robbie Ehrmann tied for second place at 21-under 87. Loftin claimed second in sudden death leaving Ehrmann in the third spot.

Jeff Taft, with an 18-under-par 90 and Mike Shane, at 91, finished the tournament at fourth and fifth, respectively.

have to get things turned around. I believe they're going to do that. The Dodgers are a mature ballclub, but I don't think there's cause for them to start celebrating or breathing a little easier because that's a pretty competitive division."

Dodgers 2-7, Cubs 1-4
Pedro Guerrero hit a pair of two-run homers and doubled home a fifth run as the Dodgers completed a doubleheader sweep. In the opener, a game suspended Tuesday after 17 innings, Steve Sax scored on Dusty Baker's sacrifice fly in the 21st inning to decide a 6-hour, 10-minute contest, the longest game in the major leagues this season.

Jerry Reuss was the winning pitcher in both games. He threw four innings of one-hit relief as the Dodgers' eighth pitcher in the first game, then allowed four hits in five innings of the second game.

In the suspended game, both managers, two coaches and two players were ejected. Forty-five players saw action, with the Dodgers using all 25 on their roster, including pitchers Fernando Valenzuela and Bob Welch in the outfield.

Cardinals 2, Padres 1
Bob Forsch held San Diego scoreless for eight innings before needing help from Bruce Sutter and triggered a two-run third inning with a leadoff double, pacing the Cardinals to their fifth straight victory. Tommy Herr and Lonnie Smith doubled home the St. Louis runs off Andy Hawkins after Forsch's double got St. Louis started.

Charlotte Bout Back On Again

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Promoters of the bout for the World Boxing Association's featherweight crown between Eusebio Pedroza and Bernard Taylor say the fight will be held Oct. 16.

The 15-round title bout, originally set for Aug. 14 at the Charlotte Coliseum, was postponed July 19 when Pedroza received a cut right eyelid in an exhibition in his native Panama. The cut required six stitches and the Oct. 16 date was set to give the injury time to heal.

Pedroza, 34-3 with 23 knockouts, has successfully defended his title 14 times — more than any other featherweight in history. Taylor, of Charlotte, is 17-0

Phillies 5, Astros 3
Gary Matthews' double home the tie-breaking run in the 15th inning. Manny Trillo singled off Mike LaCoss with one out in the 15th and scored on Matthews' hit. LaCoss intentionally walked Mike Schmidt and Bo Diaz singled home an insurance run.

Philadelphia scored three times in the top of the ninth on RBI singles by Schmidt and Garry Maddox and George Vukovich's double to erase a 2-0 deficit, but the Astros tied it in the bottom of the inning when Sid Monge walked Denny Walling with the bases loaded.

Giants 16, Pirates 9
Jack Clark drove in six runs, five of them with a three-run homer and two-run single in a nine-run fifth inning that rallied the San Francisco Giants from a 6-4 deficit. A leadoff home run by Chili Davis and a three-run shot by Jeff Leonard, who drove in five runs, staked the Giants to a 4-0 advantage before Pittsburgh came to bat, but Renie Martin couldn't hold it. Johnny Ray, Bill Madlock and Dale Berra homered for Pittsburgh.

Reds 7, Mets 6
Cesar Cedeño's single with one out in the bottom of the 14th inning scored pinch runner Mario Soto with the winning run. Duane Walker led off the inning with a single off Mike Scott and Soto ran for him. Dave Concepcion sacrificed Soto to second and Larry Bittner was walked intentionally. Cedeño then ripped a single down the third base line to score Soto.

after turning professional in 1980.

Taylor, fighting out of Ace Miller's gym in Knoxville, Tenn., has been sparring with welterweights 20 pounds heavier than himself to prepare for the hard-hitting Pedroza, Miller said.

The fight will be televised live by ABC-TV with a 100-mile blackout in effect. The starting time will be either 2:30 p.m. or 5:30 p.m., depending on other national events to be televised by ABC that afternoon. Officials will announce the starting time at least one week prior to the match.

The fight is being promoted by Bob Arum's Top Rank Inc. of New York and Charlotte businessmen O. Bruton Smith and H.A. "Humpty" Wheeler.

Eastern Powers Are Still Penn State, Pittsburgh

By The Associated Press
It may not rival Italy's World Cup soccer triumph in worldwide acclaim, but the battle for Eastern college football supremacy between Joseph Vincent Paterno and Serafino Dante Fazio should be something to see.

However, before Paterno's Penn State Nittany Lions tangle with Fazio's Pitt Panthers on Nov. 26, each has 10 other hurdles to cross. Penn State must face the likes of Nebraska, Alabama and Notre Dame, while Pitt's opponents include North Carolina, Florida State, Illinois and Notre Dame.

Penn State and Pitt finished third and fourth in last year's national rankings and both have lofty designs this fall. Although there are signs of improvement elsewhere in the East, the powers-that-be are still Penn State and Pitt ... or Pitt and Penn State.

Three major changes in the East for 1982 are the new coaches at Pitt and Navy, plus the dropping of Colgate, Holy Cross and the eight Ivy League schools from the NCAA's Division I-A to I-AA. Besides the "Big Two," the only other Division I-A members are, alphabetically, Army, Boston College, Navy, Rutgers, Syracuse, Temple and West Virginia.

Penn State finished the 1981 campaign on a high note, walloping Pitt 48-14 in the regular-season finale and hammering Southern Cal 26-10 in the Fiesta Bowl to wind up 10-2. However, the Nittany Lions lost 11 starters, including most of the offensive line, and Paterno has had to change some of his thinking on offense.

"I don't think we can be nearly as consistent on offense," he says. "We can't be overpowering on offense without a big fullback and a powerful offensive line, so we will have to be big-play oriented."

"I'm comfortable with the style we've been playing in recent years, wearing down opponents in the second and third quarters and seeing teams get tired and knowing you could go at them in the fourth quarter to make that long drive to win the game. Now, we're going to have to score with big plays. We have those kind of athletes, but I'm not entirely comfortable with that kind of game."

But quarterback Todd Blackledge, running backs Curt Warner and Jon Williams, wide receivers Kenny Jackson, Kevin Baugh and Gregg Garrity and tight end Mike McCloskey will cause opposing defenses some sleepless nights. Defensively, the strength is in the secondary, where Roger Jackson — Kenny's brother — and Mark Robinson hold forth.

Like Johnny Majors five years earlier, Coach Jackie Sherrill left Pitt for warmer — and richer — climes. Sherrill flew off — literally, since he pilots his own plane — to Texas A&M after three consecutive 11-1 campaigns and quicker than you can say "Dan Marino," Pitt elevated Fazio from defensive coordinator to head coach.

Fazio has spent most of the spring and summer saying "Dan Marino" to anyone who'll listen. Marino is one of the top quarterbacks in the country, but just one of 18 returning starters. The others include wide receivers Julius Dawkins and Dwight Collins, running back Bryan Thomas and perhaps the best pair of offensive tackles around — Jimbo Covert and Bill Fralic.

"With the talent we have on offense, we expect our offense to control the football and score some points," says Fazio. "Add to that the experience returning on defense and we should be able to play against anybody in the country."

West Virginia, which figures to be the best of the rest in the wake of last year's 9-3 record and Peach Bowl rout of Florida, must find a quarterback to replace record-setting Oliver Luck. The leading candidate is redshirt Jeff Hostetler, and he'll have to be ready in a hurry since the Mountaineers open at Oklahoma. Nine starters return on defense, led by linebackers Darryl Talley and Dennis Fowlkes and tackle Todd Campbell.

Boston College has two rugged road games to start with — Texas A&M and defending national champion Clemson. But quarterback Doug Flutie rose to stardom last year as a freshman and tackle Junior Poles anchors a sound defense.

Coach Dick MacPherson's recruiting has Syracuse hoping for better days ahead despite the loss of record-breaking runner Joe Morris and All-America placekicker Gary Anderson.

Navy's new coach is Gary Tranquill. For openers, he must face Virginia ... and Navy's old coach, George Welsh. Seven starters are back from a rugged defense, including linebacker Andy Ponceigo and end Travis Wallington.

Army has its best talent in several years, led by halfback Gerald Walker, who could become the Cadets' all-time rushing leader. Too, a more realistic schedule has Lafayette, Harvard, Princeton and Columbia to go with the Missouri, North Carolinas and Pitts.

Only Columbia and Penn. as usual, seem to be out of Ivy consideration, with Yale favored to win still another crown despite heavy graduation losses.

Papa Katz Team Set For Tourney

The Papa Katz softball team will ready for Class B World Divisional Tournament this weekend when it travels to Snow Hill for a state softball tournament.

Papa Katz, made up of women who work Greenville, qualified for the state tournament by placing fourth in a "Class A" Invitational tournament in Washington recently.

Moreover, Papa Katz earned a bid to the World Tournament after a "Class A" tournament in Goldsboro in which it finished third. Papa Katz cemented the bid in a losing effort when it dropped a 1-0 decision to Wooden Nickel, ranked among the top four teams in the nation.

Wooden Nickel is made up mostly of players off of East Carolina's softball team.

The World Tournament, a

USSSA event, is being held Sept. 3-6 at Pearl, Miss. The team will leave Sept. 2.

Papa Katz returned the majority of its players from a year ago, when the team finished 12th in the state tournament. This year, the team got off to a slow start but managed to right itself.

Along with its tournament finishes in Washington and Goldsboro, Papa Katz also finished in second in an open tournament in Winterville and took first at the SouthWest Edgecombe Booster Invitational Tournament.

Frustration Is Coach's Dread

An AP Sports Analysis
By LEE CREEK
Associated Press Writer
East Carolina University's Ed Emory says it isn't pressure that gets to coaches, but rather it's frustration. In his case, the frustration is created by having to wait for a dream to come true.

"Frustration is what kills coaches," the Pirates' football coach said following one of four Wednesday practice sessions. "Here, it's knowing what the program can be, and will be, and having to wait for it to happen."

Emory's dream is to see East Carolina become one of the nation's top football schools.

"We've got a great product here, a great product," Emory said. "And, it's going to get even better. All I asked when I came here was for them to give me an equal chance."

Emory says he's gotten that chance, and leaves little doubt that he intends to capitalize on it. He says his club's talent level, coaching ability and competition are the best in the school's history.

"Without good competition you just don't breed success," Emory said. "You've got to have good competition."

In 1979, ECU played three Division I teams, Emory said. The following year, the Pirates faced six bowl-bound teams and played five bowl-bound outfits last year. This year, the schedule includes seven Division I teams, including North Carolina State, Missouri, Florida State, West Virginia and Temple.

"This is the third year of our program and we've jumped from a Southern Conference-type schedule to a national Division I schedule," he said. "Now, we have to keep working on improving our personnel."

"The hardest thing to build in a football program is personnel, and we're in the second year of building personnel," he said. "They can put up a building in 30 days, so facilities aren't that big a problem if the money is available. But to build a football program—complete with personnel—it takes five years."

Emory said it used to be that a program could be turned around much quicker, but that was before the National Collegiate Athletic Association adopted a limit of 30 recruits per year.

He said schools once could recruit as many players as they could afford, thereby improving chances of landing top quality talent. Under the recruiting limitations of today, the odds are greater.

"If you recruit 30 players, you're lucky if you get 15 who develop into good players, complete with good academics and all the rest," he said. "That means it takes four years just to get 60 good players. That's why it takes five years to build a program." Emory hopes that this, his third year, will begin paying dividends.

"Our kids have the greatest work habits in the world," he said. "They practice four times a day and never complain. I'll be very disappointed if we're not competitive in every game we play."

McEnroe Playing Well Again

Cooling It

Tennis pro Jimmy Connors pours a cup of water over his face in an effort to cool off during his second round match over Phil Dent of Australia in the $300,000 ATP Tennis Championships Wednesday near Mason, Ohio. Connors, seeded number two, beat Dent, 6-1, 6-4. (AP Laserphoto)

MASON, Ohio (AP) — When it comes to U.S. Open, John McEnroe is a realist.

"The bottom line is you have to play well to win the tournament and you have to beat the top guys," the three-time defending champion says of America's premiere tennis event, which begins in two weeks.

And McEnroe is playing well again.

He needed only 67 minutes Wednesday night to crush Russell Simpson of New Zealand 6-1, 6-3 and advance to the third round of the $300,000 ATP Championships.

"I hit the ball more solid today," McEnroe said after routing Simpson to just seven points in the first set. "All in all, it's an improvement over yesterday (Tuesday)."

Still, the world's No. 1 player wasn't satisfied.

"There's times my volley is not as firm as it should be. I have a tendency to get lazy on my volleys. But I feel like I'm moving well."

McEnroe's movement has been restricted since he suffered a badly sprained ankle in Belgium in March, forcing him to pull out of several tournaments.

The top seeds are keeping pace with McEnroe at the ATP, played at the Jack Nicklaus Sports Center on hard courts similar to those at the U.S. Open.

Second-seeded Jimmy Connors, stopped Phil Dent of Australia 6-1, 6-4; No. 3 Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia eliminated Ramesh Krishnan of India 6-4, 6-2; No. 4 Vitas Gerulaitis ousted former Wimbledon champion Stan Smith 7-5, 6-1, and No. 5 Gene Mayer defeated Hans Simonsson of Sweden 7-6, 5-7, 6-1.

In third-round matches today, the pairings were: McEnroe against No. 10 Raul Ramirez of Mexico, who advanced when Bernard Fritz of France retired with an injury; Connors against No. 9 Brian Teacher, a 6-1, 6-1 winner over Stanislav Birner of Czechoslovakia; Lendl against No. 15 Brian Gottfried, who stopped Pat DuPre 6-2, 6-3; Gerulaitis against No. 16 Hank Pfister, a 6-3, 6-2 victor over Christophe Roger-Vasselin of France; and Mayer against Tim Gullickson, who stopped Victor Amaya 6-1, 6-1.

Lendl wasn't as pleased as McEnroe after Wednesday's play.

"I wasn't pleased with my serve, I wasn't pleased with my footwork and I wasn't pleased with my passing shot," he said.

In the second set, Lendl was awesome, passing Krishnan everytime he dared venture close to the net. In the seventh game, Lendl held double match point at 15-40 when he was long with a backhand service return, then slammed a tremendous forehand down the line.

Lendl became upset when the forehand was called out, evening the score at deuce. On Krishnan's next two serves, Lendl just stood at his baseline and watched them sail past.

"I just guessed badly," he said later.

He then closed out the set on his own serve, losing just one point.

Kiffin Unsure What To Expect

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina State football coach Monte Kiffin isn't sure what to expect of his 1982 Wolfpack club.

"It's a real, real hard season to predict for us," Kiffin said. "Anytime you come off a 4-7 season, it's hard to predict."

Wolfpack forecasting has been made even more difficult with the loss of two defensive players who were being counted on heavily. That leaves only three defensive veterans.

The first loss came when linebacker Sam Key broke his ankle during a spring practice game in July. He's out for the season, Kiffin said.

Free safety Louie Meadows decided to play professional baseball, but had planned to return for his final season under an National Collegiate Athletic Association rule allowing a professional in one sport to compete as an amateur in another. However, Meadows was offered, and accepted, an invitation to play in a winter instructional baseball league, Kiffin said.

"Running backs and the secondary are our biggest assets right now," he said. "Our biggest problems are in the defensive and offensive lines."

The running game can't help but be a bright spot with the presence of sophomore tailback Joe McIntosh. Last year, he led the nation's freshmen, and finished 11th overall, with 1,190 yards rushing in 222 carries.

Other running backs include Larmount Lawson, who gained 406 yards, Vince Evans and several freshman recruits.

While candidates for line positions are small in number, Kiffin has more than enough people vying for the quarterback job.

Tol Ave y shared time last year with Ron Laraway. Avery completed 50 percent of his passes, but posted only three touchdown tosses while firing 10 passes into enemy hands.

Laraway completed only 35 percent of his pass attempts. Other strong candidates include redshirt Jeff Hoshier and junior college transfer Tim Esposito.

Kiffin thinks the Atlantic Coast Conference race will be a battle between Clemson and North Carolina, but rates Duke's Blue Devils as a darkhorse because of their offensive potential.

Meanwhile, Kiffin will be doing an unexpected amount of rebuilding, saying "I hope we rebuild quickly."

Kiffins says he's sure N.C. State has a bright future ahead. He just isn't sure when that future will begin.

Set Collard Net Event

The Ayden Collard Festival Tennis Tournament is scheduled for September 9-12, with play starting at 6 p.m. on either Thursday or Friday of that week.

Only doubles events will be held in the following classifications: men's, women's, mixed, men's 35 and older; women's 35 and older, and mixed 35 and older.

Trophies will be presented to winners and runners-up in each event and to the consolation flight winners. Each participant will also receive a t-shirt.

No add scoring will be used. An entry fee of $7 per person per event is charged and entries must be in by 9 p.m., Sept. 4.

Entry forms are available at the River Birch Tennis Center. More information may be obtained by calling Tom Sayetta, 756-7576.

Important Time For Rookies

CLEVELAND (AP) — Player handshakes and the final score are not important elements to Cleveland Browns Coach Sam Rutigliano and Los Angeles Rams Coach Ray Malavasi, whose NFL teams clash tonight at Municipal Stadium.

Because this is the second of four exhibition games for both teams the coaching staffs will be carefully watching performances by rookies and free agents.

"We have to eliminate guys who can't play," Malavasi said. "I imagine we'll take a look at almost everybody Thursday night."

Rutigliano, too, plans to scan the players whose membership status is questionable with the Browns.

He said running backs David Green, a former Canadian Football League star, and Gary Davis, a veteran who played for Miami and Tampa Bay, will get a close look tonight.

"I'm not really concerned about getting down to 70 players because we're almost there already. The cutdown date after that will be a little tougher," he said.

NFL rules say that team rosters must be at 70 players by Tuesday and at 60 players on Aug. 31. The Browns currently have 74 players in camp.

Meanwhile, the NFL Management Council took measures Wednesday to defuse the issue of players shaking hands before exhibition games when it ordered owners not to fine players for taking part in the gesture.

Browns owner Art Modell had threatened players with a $100 fine if they shook hands before the game with the Rams tonight. But the Browns voted Tuesday to go ahead with the handshake, as a show of support for the National Football League Players' Association.

Rams owner Georgia Frontiere had made no announcements of fines for her players if they shook hands with the Browns.

Malavasi, starting his fifth season with the Rams, said he will start quarterback Bert Jones against Cleveland.

"We'll play Brian Sipe in the first half, then Paul McDonald and, hopefully Rick Trocano in the second half, depending upon how the game is going," Rutigliano said of his quarterbacking plans.

"We'll do it pretty much the way we did against the (Detroit) Lions, meld our young people into the game depending upon how it is going."

The Rams plan to give a second half quarterbacking opportunity to Vince Ferragamo, who spent last season with the Montreal Alouettes of the Canadian Football League.

Kite Looks For Fast Start In Buick Open

GRAND BLANC, Mich. (AP) — Tom Kite has become golf's forgotten man since his last victory, back in March.

However, Kite always has played well at Warwick Hills Golf and Country Club and he feels a fast start in this year's $350,000 Buick Open, scheduled to begin today, would put him in good shape for a return to the winner's circle.

Four Poised At Money Record

CLEVELAND (AP) — Sally Little, Sandra Haynie, Beth Daniel or JoAnne Carner can break the LPGA's all-time single season money record if they win the $50,000 first prize in the Chevrolet World Championship of Women's Golf.

The $150,000 international invitational opened today at Shaker Heights Country Club with Daniel searching for her third straight world title. Her partner the LPGA's all-time money winner, worth $29,500, helped Daniel to the current LPGA record of $231,000 in one year.

However, to most of the players in this field, money earned is not uppermost in their minds.

"The money list has always been my lowest priority," said Daniel, the winner of $734,000 in less than four professional seasons. She was No. 1 on the money list the last two years.

"My biggest priority is Player of the Year points," she said. "Then probably the number of tournaments won. That's what it's all about. The Vare Trophy (for low stroke average) has got to be thought of highly, too."

Daniel, a 25-year-old South Carolinian, leads the current Player of the Year race with 60 points. She also has the most tournament victories in 1982

"The Buick Open frequently turns into a shootout in the last round, so it's important to be up around the leaders early — and stay there," Kite explained Wednesday. "This is a good course for me. I've played well here the last couple of years."

Kite, who was the leading tour money winner last year after finishing among the top 10 in 21 of the 26 tournaments he entered, is a proven tough finisher. The 5-foot-8½ Texan came from six strokes back in the Bay Hill Classic at Orlando, Fla., in March, then defeated Jack Nicklaus and Denis Watson in a playoff for his only victory this year.

"I played well at the first of the year, but not recently," Kite said. "I've got to get it going."

Warwick Hills, a 7,001-yard, par-72 layout, is perfectly suited to Kite's game. The University of Texas product is not a particularly long driver, but he is a deadly iron player.

"This is a deceptive golf course," Kite noted. "It looks like there are a lot of birdie holes, but the greens are tricky — they're subtle, hard to read."

There are 12 or 15 relatively easy holes, however, so with a little luck, you can put some red (below par) numbers on the board. The course will give up some good scores, but not to everybody.

"Wedge play is so important here. It's crucial, because you hit so many of them."

Last year, Kite finished in a three-way tie for eighth at 9-under 279.

Hale Irwin won the $63,000 first prize last year — the same amount that will be given this year — in a playoff with Peter Jacobsen, Gil Morgan and Bobby Clampett. All four finished the regulation 72 holes at 11-under 277 — just two strokes better than Kite.

Irwin, who ranks 20th on this year's money list with $133,298, will be challenged this year by such formidable stars as Craig Stadler — a three-time winner this year — Kite, Dan Pohl, Andy Bean, Bob Murphy and Fuzzy Zoeller.

Haynie, an LPGA Hall of Fame member, has won 40 titles and $810,000 in her 21 seasons. Money is not important to her either.

Egypt's Govm't Weighs Imposing Of Islamic Law

By STEVEN K. HINDY
Associated Press Writer
CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Parliamentary committees are weighing proposals to impose Islamic law in Egypt — a move that could dramatically transform the way of life in a nation that blends Eastern and Western cultures.

Plans to codify Islamic law — or the Sharia, the Prophet Mohammed's spoken and written word — were set in motion by the late President Anwar Sadat's support of constitutional amendments that made Islamic law "a" principal source of Egyptian law in 1972 and "the" principal source in 1980.

The movement has gained momentum since the Islamic revolution that overthrew the Shah of Iran, and from a universal upsurge of interest in Islamic teachings.

Islamic law already is the overwhelming component of the legal systems of Saudi Arabia and other Arabian Peninsula states, and it is being implemented in Iran and Pakistan.

Most of Egypt's modern law has been derived from European models. But Egypt's Moslem majority, about 90 percent of a population of 45 million, is deeply religious. The name of Allah (God) is emblazoned almost everywhere, and public prayer is commonplace.

"Law is a mirror of society," said Sufi Abu Taleb, speaker of the People's Assembly and manager of the proposals in the unicameral parliament. "Islamic law is an expression of certain special characteristics of the people of Islamic nations for two reasons:

"First, as Moslems we demand judgment according to what God sent down and, secondly, because this law agrees with our nature and circumstances better than any other code — because God knows our interests best."

Abu Taleb has promised public hearings this year on several draft bills, just completed after four years of committee work. The proposals have not yet been made public.

Newspaper reports, however, have said the criminal code will include the traditional Islamic punishments of death for those who forsake Islam, public whipping for drinking alcoholic beverages, public whipping or death by stoning for adulterers, and cutting off the hands of thieves.

It is still unclear how the proposals will handle the sticky problem of the ban imposed by the Koran, the Moslem holy book, on interest and insurance.

Another parliament member, Dr. Gamal Oteifi, a distinguished attorney and former Cabinet minister who heads a committee studying the bills, noted in an interview that the Sharia demanded strict rules of evidence to prove any of these crimes.

In the case of adultery, for example, four witnesses must swear they saw sexual penetration, he said. If the plaintiff fails to produce this, then he and the witnesses are liable to be whipped for defaming the defendant, he said.

"Practically speaking, the penalty for adultery can only be applied when there is a confession," he added. He said cases not resolved by Islamic law will be prosecuted under the prior law.

The draft bills guarantee the freedom of Egypt's Coptic Christian minority of about 6 million to practice their religion, and the testimony of Moslems and non-Moslems, and men and women, are given equal weight under the proposals, Oteifi said.

Still, the specter of Islamic law terrifies some Moslems and many Christians.

"Of course I am against this," said one Christian. "I don't believe in cutting off someone's hand if he is caught stealing, and there is no guarantee this will not be abused sometime in the future."

The moderate interpretation of the Koran put forward by Oteifi, however, is anathema to Islamic fundamentalists who want to see the law harshly enforced.

Some Western scholars fear an extremist backlash if the draft bills are not stringent enough. Saleh Ashmawi, who began writing in the newspaper El-Nur (The Light) last year after Sadat banned the Moslem Brotherhood magazine El-Daawa (The Call), has often and bitterly criticized Abu Taleb of procrastinating and trying to tranquilize the people. Sadat was assassinated last October by Moslem zealots who wanted an Islamic fundamentalist government.

Oteifi said most extremists know nothing about the law and are under the illusion that a new system could be built on slogans. He said what these people really want is visible reform of public morality in Egypt.

"The extremists in Egypt want all those belly dancing nightclubs on the Pyramids Road closed down," he said. "They don't want women appearing in public in what they consider to be improper dress."

Oteifi said he would favor closing the clubs if this were judged to be in the public interest, a criterion he holds as basic to Islamic teaching.

"A sort of pressure has built up after Iran, but we must take it in hand and contain this energy, which is good in itself but must be kept within the borders of public interest," he said.

He added that he expected a year more of committee work before the bills are put to a vote.

Some academics are skeptical that the People's Assembly will ever pass the legislation, because of the difficult questions of minorities and what they see as a potential danger to commerce and the important tourist industry.

They noted that court rulings based on the Islamic ban on alcohol and grassroots efforts to ban its sale have fundered on the danger they pose to the economy.

Indict 42 People In Baby-Selling

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — The Taipei prosecutor's office on Thursday indicted 42 people on charges of operating a baby-selling syndicate which sold 64 babies to foreign countries since 1979.

The largest baby-selling scandal in more than 30 years came to light after a growing number of babies and young children were reported missing around Taipei.

According to a police investigation, 64 babies, ranging from new-borns to five-year-olds, were sold for an average $4,000 in 10 foreign nations.

FOUND — Jessica Maldonado, now 18 months old, was found Wednesday living in the Bronx borough of New York City with a woman who said that she bought the child for $10,000. The baby girl disappeared with her mother in April 1981. Later the mother was found strangled, leading to the investigation of the child's whereabouts. (AP Laserphoto)

Grooming Pets

By WINKIE LEE
Pitt County Humane Society
Third in a series of four articles

Although our animals need to be groomed year round, we tend to pay more attention to these needs during the summer. Proper care during this season can help prevent hot spots (matted hair and skin sores), can lower the problem with parasites and can make your dog more comfortable.

Barbara Walker, licensed professional groomer of the Village Groomer in the Rivergate Shopping Center, has several useful suggestions for the public.

Grooming is a "two place process." Many breeds of dogs need to be professionally cared for off and on during the year. At home care is also quite important.

At home, the dog should be brushed with a wire brush and steel comb for no less than 15 minutes a week. This keeps the hair from matting. Fifteen minutes is the minimum, but a dog can be brushed everyday.

Cleaning your dog is important, but some caution needs to be used. If the animal is washed once a month, a flea shampoo is fine. However, more frequent bathing requires a more gentle cleanser, or the pet will lose the oil in its skin. If you bathe your dog every two weeks, you need to use a baby shampoo. Once a week cleaning requires medicated shampoo.

If your dog is getting dirty, but you wish to avoid the soap and water routine, cornmeal can help. When brushed into the fur and on the skin, cornmeal cleans and gets mats out. This is a good occasional substitute for bathing.

One part of the cleaning process that is frequently overlooked is cleansing of the ears. To do this, use alcohol on Q-tips and wipe it against the inner ear. Caution should be used to not harm the ear canal.

These steps assure a cleaner, healthier, happier dog, but many breeds need to go a step further and visit a professional groomer. Barbara Walker suggests that poodles, terriers, spaniels, sheepdogs, and "all American mutts" with some of the preceding breeds in their background visit a groomer four to six times a year. A good way to plan and remember these visits is by going during holiday seasons. Ms. Walker suggests Christmas, Easter, the Fourth of July and Halloween. These are busiest times of the year for a groomer, so making appointments is necessary.

During these professional visits, a dog will be treated according to its breed. For example, hair will be pulled from poodles' inner ears to promote cleanliness and prevent infection. Cocker spaniels' ears will be scrubbed to keep their hereditary ear cankers from smelling and becoming worse. An animal will be styled in a way that suits its breed. A wash and fluff dry occurs, and does the important process of clipping the animal's nails.

The process is not as expensive as you may imagine. The standard price for a typical visit costs in the area of $12 to $14.

Not caring for your animal's hair and skin is inhumane. When an animal is left ungroomed for a few months, its hair becomes matted and brushing out the mats is a painful and slow process. Also, lack of grooming encourages spreading of fleas, ticks, lice and even maggots.

Properly grooming a dog requires a minimum of effort and money and promotes a maximum of healthiness and happiness.

AUDI 5000 UNSTANDARD FEATURES

There's nothing standard about the standard features on an Audi 5000: the air conditioning, AM/FM stereo with cassette, cruise control, rear window defroster, digital clock, power brakes, power steering, power windows, and illuminated vanity mirror... to name a few. Others call these features extra cost "options"... Audi includes them as standard. But then that's what you would expect from Audi... the art of engineering. Aggression Acquired In Day Care Centers

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Day-care students who went on to kindergarten were up to 15 times more aggressive than their stay-at-home counterparts, according to a two-year study at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

However, researchers at the Frank Porter Graham Child Development Center say the extra aggressiveness appears to be only temporary, and can be countered by special training in "positive behavior."

The study, conducted in 1979 and 1980 but not previously released, involved about 50 children. Researchers compared residents and graduates of the center's own day-care center with other Chapel Hill children who entered kindergarten directly from home.

"The rate of aggression was still pretty low," said Dr. Craig T. Ramey, the center's director of research.

"We're talking about children we thought had too high a propensity to use a physical solution to a problem and not a verbal solution," he said.

Ramey said researchers eliminated the extra aggressiveness by giving children special instruction in positive behavior for 20 minutes three times a week.

"We have them develop positive social skills: how to engage someone in a negotiation; if they do get angry, how to handle that," Ramey said.

Even without the special training, additional unpublished data show the extra aggressiveness seems to disappear by the first or second grade.

Ramey noted that previous studies have shown that day-care centers have beneficial effects on children, adding that those studies concentrated more on intellectual than social development.

He said it was too early to say what caused the extra assertiveness, but investigator Dale C. Farran suggested a possibility in his article on the study written for the September issue of Parents magazine.

"Their behavior may be viewed as the outcome of time spent in group situations that do not fill their social needs the way the one-to-one, parent-child relationship does," he wrote.

"Along with greater aggression, children who have been in day care since infancy have also been rated as more active, more easily frustrated, less cooperative with adults, more oriented to children and adults, more distractible and less task-oriented," he continued.

'Oasis Of Peace' Is Threatened

By JOSEPH B. FRAZIER
Associated Press Writer
SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — Turmoil close to its borders and hard times at home threaten the peace of Costa Rica, an oasis in strife-torn Central America and long one of Latin America's few stable democracies.

Rightists or leftists from nearby countries want to use Costa Rica as a base for attacks on their foes at home. The government is resisting and trying to remain neutral in regional conflicts. But acts of terrorism are increasing, and so is arms trafficking.

It's a new problem for this West Virginia-size nation of 2.2 million people which has had no standing army since 1948. The government spends about 26 percent of its budget on education and less than 3 percent on local security.

There is concern also that the left will try to use the country's worst economic slump in 40 years to create unrest locally. Police claim to have found several major arms caches since last spring and say they have evidence that they were for use locally. President Luis Alberto Monge, who took office three months ago, says at least two armed communist groups are training in the rugged Atlantic coast region.

Local communists deny plotting to overthrow the government. And Arnaldo Ferreto, one of four communists in the 60-member national legislature, said: "We would take up arms to defend our sovereignty" against any foreign intervention.

The U.S. Embassy lists one major terrorist act here in 1980, six in 1981 and six in the first half of this year.

The most recent was the bombing July 3 of a Honduran airline office in San Jose. Relations between Nicaragua's leftist government and the right-wing regime in Honduras are very tense, and the Costa Ricans said they had evidence the Nicaraguan Embassy was involved in the bombing. Three Nicaraguan diplomats were expelled from the country.

The Nicaraguan government denied involvement, accused Monge of trying to use it as a scapegoat for his problems at home and expelled three Costa Rican diplomats in retaliation.

Costa Rica also has expelled Nicaraguans who wanted to use the country as a base for attacks on the leftist Sandinista government at home. Among them was former guerrilla leader Eden Pastora, known as Commander Zero in his fighting days, who vowed to overthrow the revolutionary government he helped install because, he charged, it had sold out to the Soviet Union and Cuba.

"Monge's primary job as he sees it is to fix the economy, but he is determined not to get Costa Rica into regional conflicts," said Information Minister Armando Vargas in an interview.

"He has said that if, sadly, war broke out in the region, he would ask international organizations to assure the neutrality of Costa Rica."

Vargas said the government is trying to upgrade and improve the equipment of its 4,200-man civil guard, a civilian police force charged with most security duties. Panama is helping to train a Costa Rican anti-terrorist unit.

"Security is tied to the economy as well," said Vargas. "If we don't get what we need, the social cost we pay could be high. Social instability can be capitalized on to create problems for Costa Rica."

Monge has lost ground in the public opinion polls, mostly, his opponents among those questioned say, because they feel he has not acted fast enough to improve the economy.

Minimum wages set by the government for most blue-collar jobs is less than $4 a day because of a 500 percent devaluation in the currency, the colon, in the past three years.

Inflation is in the 100 percent range, and the unemployment rate is double the usual 4 percent and rising. Food prices have increased 124 percent since the beginning of the year.

All this is traumatic for people used to a high standard of living who see the purchasing power of what were good wages, diminish daily.

The high price of imported oil and reduced prices for coffee and bananas, the chief exports, helped bring on the crisis. Credit bridged the gap. Now Monge's job is to impose austerity, an unpopular task that means deciding who makes what sacrifices.

The United States, which considers Costa Rica a close friend in Latin America, will supply about $200 million in aid for 1982-83, but officials say such aid alone is not a long-term solution.

Costa Rican economists see no significant change for the better before 1984.

'Marijuana' Was Okra

GRANITE CITY, Ill. (AP) — A police officer who thought he was cracking down on local marijuana growing confiscated 94 okra plants.

Police received a telephone call from an apartment dweller saying marijuana was growing in his back yard, Capt. Robert Astorian said.

An officer was sent to the scene, and in the dark, he thought the plants were marijuana and pulled them, Astorian said. Okra "resembles marijuana somewhat," he said.

The plants, some nearly 4 feet tall, were pulled from the back yard garden of Ida Murphy, an elderly woman, Astorian said.

The next day, however, a laboratory check confirmed Mrs. Murphy was missing a substantial portion of her vegetable garden.

"It's embarrassing," Astorian said. "Of course, the lady was upset. I called her up and apologized and told her to contact our city attorney about damages."

"I haven't heard a word since," he said.

The okra is still at the police station.

Leak Postpones Opening Night

LONDON (AP) — The opening night of comic playwright Alan Ayckbourn's new play at Britain's National Theater was postponed — scuppered by a leaky set.

The play, "Way Upstream," is set aboard a cabin cruiser on a river and requires complicated stage machinery inside a 6,000-gallon fiberglass tank.

During previews, the tank sprang a leak, and then it became difficult to get the boat to move along the simulated river.

As a result, the cast is short on seamanship practice, so Wednesday night's performance became an extra preview. Official opening night was postponed until Sept. 3.

"It is not surprising there have been some mechanical difficulties," said a spokesman for the government-subsidized theater. "You do not expect to walk into a theater and see a cabin cruiser moving around."

Senator Sam Continues To Fight Big Government

By BOB BOGGS
Hickory Daily Record
MORGANTON, N.C. (AP) — After 60 years in public life, former Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr. continues to battle big government.

The fight must be won to save America's economy and its people's freedom, says Ervin, who successfully opposed President Nixon during the Watergate investigation 10 years ago.

"Woodrow Wilson said to fight the concentration of government, which always precedes the squelching of constitutional liberties," Ervin said recently at his Morganton office.

"President Nixon didn't understand personal liberties. He thought he could suspend the Constitution when really it was his duty to bring the culprits to judgment."

He said people depend on government to handle problems they should solve themselves.

"Why people think government officials can solve problems they didn't know anything about before they went into office is beyond my comprehension," he said.

Competitive enterprise rather than government will bring the economy out of recession, he said.

"Free enterprise is the most viable economic system. It's based on incentive, the premise that a person retain a fair share of the fruits of his labor for himself, his family and his causes."

"If you tax those fruits away, or make them worthless through (inflation-causing) government deficits, you rob the future of hopes," Ervin said.

"Once you've destroyed incentives, you convert people to look to government for their material wants," he said. "You don't find much happiness when you take your hat in hand to get bread."

Eight years after retiring from the Senate, Ervin has yet to find time for fishing, a hobby he planned to return to. Instead, he has spoken at college campuses, legal conventions and Democratic rallies in 46 states.

Through a limited law practice, Ervin casts his line at some longtime opponents.

"I represented Idaho and Arizona against Congress in U.S. District Court," said the country lawyer. "We argued for the states' right to rescind their ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment."

"We won in District Court, but the government appealed to the Supreme Court. Now that the amendment is dead, I imagine the case won't be heard," he said.

A consistent foe of the ERA and civil rights legislation, Ervin says the constitution already provides the rights which women's and civil rights groups demand.

"The 13th, 14th and 15th amendments offer identical rights to the ones these groups seek. We need to enforce them rather than write new ones," Ervin said.

The 13th Amendment forbids slavery; the 14th guarantees equal protection under the law for life, liberty and property; and the 15th guarantees the right to vote, regardless of race.

"Civil rights legislation imposes special privileges on the basis of color, and that's unconstitutional," Ervin said.

"The prime function of government is to grant equal rights under the law. When government goes beyond that and attempts to secure economic or social equality, all it does is curtail liberty."

"I don't want to get in the history books anytime soon, but I hope to be remembered for my efforts to preserve a constitutional government and civil liberties," he said.

Ervin's most famous fight for constitutional government came during the Watergate investigation near the end of his public career.

That career began in the N.C. House while Ervin was practicing law with his father on a mountain circuit in 1923.

Governors appointed Ervin to finish unexpired terms as a Superior Court judge and N.C. Supreme Court associate justice. Gov. William B. Umstead appointed him to the U.S. Senate in 1954.

"Members of the Democratic caucus told me they wanted me as chairman because I had more judicial experience than anyone in the Senate. Also, no one could accuse me of harboring personal ambitions. My political future was all in the past," Ervin said.

Although mail to the Senate Watergate committee indicated the public at first thought it was a political witch hunt, televised hearings changed people's minds, he said.

"Time magazine said I tried to teach a civics lesson to America through the hearings. Archibald Cox (a special Watergate prosecutor) asked me to postpone the hearings until he had gotten convictions. But I told him I thought it was more important to have the American people learn the truth than send a few individuals to jail."

Executive privilege, the prerogative of a president not to testify about confidential conversations, dominated the committee's struggle for information. Through its arguments against executive privilege, the committee won a Supreme Court decision that Nixon must release subpoenaed tapes, which helped convict his top aides.

Ervin said he favors true executive privilege, which helps fulfill the executive's duties.

"If advisers thought their confidential recommendations might be made public, a lot of them would not have the courage to discuss their true views," he said. "But executive privilege doesn't cover crimes."

At age 85, Ervin continues to urge congressmen and newspapers to oppose a constitutional amendment to allow prayer in public schools, but favor an amendment to mandate balanced federal budgets.

"What prayers would you teach?" Ervin asked.

"America has 500 different sects. But we need a balanced budget amendment. For 40 years, we've had no fiscal responsibility. Too many groups want something and Congress wants to oblige them."

Family Plans Tour In A Concrete Boat

NEWINGTON, N.H. (AP) — The Coons have sold their house and their furniture, taken their kids out of school and packed their bags.

The whole family — 10 Coons in all — plans to set sail in a 51-foot concrete schooner that they've been building for the past 10 years in their backyard in Derry.

The Kunamaru was launched Tuesday to the cheers of David and Maureen Coon, their children and about 50 onlookers at the Great Bay Marina.

Eleven years ago, the family got the urge to see the world.

"When it first started, we were going to buy a bus and tour the United States," says Mrs. Coon. "Then, for a while, we were going to buy a plane. Then we decided on the boat because my husband's father was a sailor."

She said none of them has a great deal of sailing experience, so they will spend a few days testing the waters of Great Bay before hitting the open seas. And she said they've had plenty of time to study navigation during the past decade.

"If I had ever known it would take this long, I never would have wanted to start it," she said.

Her youngest child, 12-year-old Douglas, says he says can't remember a time when there wasn't a boat in his backyard. "I remember playing on it when everyone else was working," he says. Three of the Coon children — they span 12 to 24 years — are school-aged and will be tutored on board the 20-ton schooner by their parents.

The boat is a sturdy craft; it has a cement hull reinforced with steel rods and 12 miles of chicken wire, according to Coon, an electrical engineer.

Mrs. Coon said she wants to sail to Japan, Greece, Turkey and Peru. She lost a lung to cancer several years ago and says, "I'm just going to have fun now ... I'm bringing my suntan lotion, books and my chaise lounge."

The Kunamaru will sail for Somerville, Mass., Plymouth, Mass. and then to Baltimore, where the family will be presented with the keys to the city, said Coon.

"Why be normal? We decided we'd like to be a little different," he said, adding that they'll keep sailing "as long as the money lasts and as long as we're having fun."

Eggs Affected By Added Fiber

MISSISSIPPI STATE, Miss. (UPI) — Preliminary research by animal nutritionists indicates a high fiber diet for egg-laying hens decreases the cholesterol in their eggs.

Researchers at the USDA Poultry Department Research Laboratory at Mississippi State found the cholesterol level in eggs dropped as much as 13 percent in eggs from hens fed a high fiber diet.

The largest decrease — 13.3 percent — occurred in hens whose diets included 8.8 percent sunflower meal. Adding about 10 percent wood shavings led to about a 10 percent cholesterol reduction, the researchers say. Other sources of fiber used in the study were corn, soybeans, alfalfa and rice.

Scientists theorize the fiber causes a scraping action in the hens' intestines, possibly scraping off certain cells and reducing the birds' overall cholesterol output.

Four-Episode Drama To Begin Tonight

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The characters in "Born to the Wind" mouth a script written for today rather than the American Indian West of the mid-19th century, and that kind of silliness detracts from an otherwise worthy production.

Perhaps screenwriters — and, consequently, viewers — have been pre-conditioned for Lon Chaney Jr.'s monosyllabic Chingachgook and simply aren't ready for Indians who speak in present-day idiom. It is nonetheless distracting, especially when great care obviously has been taken to provide a realistic earth-color environment for the limited series.

NBC will broadcast the first of four episodes of "Born to the Wind" tonight, with subsequent hour-long installments Aug. 22 and 29 and Sept. 5.

"Born to the Wind" reunites A Martinez and Rose Portillo, lead players in an acclaimed public TV production called "Seguin," broadcast in January. A Martinez plays Lone Wolf in the short-run series, and Miss Portillo is Star Fire, his romantic interest.

"Night Eyes," Lone Wolf and a companion come across human handprints near a buffalo carcass. They return to the scene with warriors from their village and find a snarling boy, whom they surmise has been raised by wolves.

They bind the boy and carry him to their camp. But that night, their horses are attacked by wolves, and there is disagreement among the tribal elders on whether to release their captive or attempt to care for him themselves.

"Maybe it's time for us, the animals who walk upright, to take him into our arms," White Bull suggests. But there are those who think the wolves may actually be demons sent to harass the tribe, and they demand that the boy be sent away.

Lone Wolf asks for a little time. He wants to communicate with the wolves — his spiritual brothers. That night, clothed as a wolf, he walks into the hills and, when he returns, the howling animals have disappeared.

Painted Bear's dilemma over the wolf-boy is complicated by a run-in with Cold Maker, who sneaks buffalo meat for his family despite a tribal ban on the scarce food.

Succeeding episodes are self-contained stories, with several of the characters — Painted Bear, Lone Wolf, Star Fire, White Bull — appearing through the entire run.

Will Sampson, who had a part in ABC's "Vegas," plays Painted Bear with true nobility, and Emilio Delgado — Luis from "Sesame

Suggest Film-Goers Want Old Depression-Era Escapism

By MARY A. DEMPSEY
ANN ARBOR, Mich. (UPI) — The phenomenal success of movies such as "E.T." and "Poltergeist" are no surprise to an expert who sees those films, like those of the 1930s, as escape valves for people overwhelmed by economic hard times.

"The popularity of films is connected to a history of fads and cycles, particularly in American society," says Dr. Frank Beaver, a film researcher and professor at the University of Michigan.

"There are clues to suggest that in certain times, such as when society is in economic hard times or in times of war, we get particular types of films," said Beaver, 44.

"What intrigues me is how the '30s and the Great Depression ... and up to 1942 and the war is similar to now," Beaver said. "That 12-year period is very much like the 12-year period we're just out of."

Beaver said the film industry's entry into a record-setting era, with movies led by "E.T." luring an unprecedented 160 million people into theaters last month, is not surprising. Movies drew large audiences in the Depression '30s, too.

Beaver said movies going into the 1930s were about prostitutes, mobsters and looked negatively on the government's ability to handle what was going on. He compared them to the counter-culture movies of the late 1960s.

"You had movies like 'The Graduate,' where young people were unwilling to join the competitive mainstream of society," he said, "or 'Easy Rider,' which was a very negative film. And you had 'Bonnie and Clyde,' which said society was at fault, a movie with anti-heroes."

But, he said, movies in the early '70s began to shift, much like films in the '30s did.

"As in the 1930s, you now get the superheroes, the comic book heroes," he said. "'Raiders of the Lost Ark' is nothing more than a 1930s superhero serial except you've got all 12 installments pushed together into one film. And 'Star Wars' has every imaginable kind of hero.

"Just like the 1930 G-men films where there was clear cut good and bad, you've got law-and-order films in the early 1970s. You see the beginning of the Clint Eastwood films, Clint Eastwood who can get the job done," he said.

"And again, like in the 1930s, we've got screwball comedies. Look at 'Continental Divide.'"

Beaver said another type of escapist movie in the '30s was the biographical films, such as the life story of Louis Pasteur "that would give people models of how to live."

"And now look at 'Coal Miner's Daughter' — a biography film about an American success story," he said.

Other parallels he noted: the Jeannette McDonald-Nelson Eddy musicals, the horror films and serial movies of the '30s are matched by today's leading films like the musical "Annie," the horror movie "Poltergeist" and the third installment of the "Rocky" movies.

Beaver said there is a special reason why horror movies and disaster movies — such as "San Francisco" starring Clark Gable more than four decades ago and "Towering Inferno" a few years ago — pulled in large audiences.

"When people get in periods of intense national trauma, by watching disaster films and horror films they see situations far worse than the ones they are in and that is comforting," he said.

Beaver said one of his favorite categories is what he calls "the lovable ugly creature" movies. In the '30s and early '40s those included "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" and "Frankenstein," now it's "Elephant Man" and "E.T."

"The feeling that was generated by the audience for the Elephant Man was similar to the sympathetic feelings the 1930s audience had for the hunchback."

CULT CURES
 NEW YORK (AP) — A growing number of cancer victims are being lured from orthodox medical treatment towards so-called nature cures and others "reminiscent of religious purification rituals," according to a researcher at the University of Pennsylvania Cancer Center.

Dr. Barrie Cassileth, writing in the New England Journal of Medicine, says the unorthodox treatments often involve a variety of special diets, spiritual counseling and treatments administered by nonmedical practitioners. They are more widespread than medical practitioners believe, she said.

FOCUS

Your Friendly Neighborhood Superhero
 Spider-man, that perennial teenage superhero, is 20 years old at last. In the August 1982 issue of Marvel Comics' Amazing Fantasy, mild-mannered Peter Parker was bitten by a radioactive spider that gave him super powers. The rest is history. As Spider-man, he has saved the universe many times, yet he remains an ordinary guy who worries about money and never gets a date. Perhaps that's why a half-million people buy Amazing Spider-man comics each month, while others follow his exploits with comic heroes such as Daredevil and the X-men. With additional appearances in animated cartoons and on TV's Electric Blue, Spider-man has become the most popular superhero in the world of comics.

It does our hearts good when we hear of octogenarians performing feats at the bridge table. This hand, from a tournament in Cannes, was reported by Jose le Dentu and features Ado Eichel, still young in mind at age 82. He and his partner were using an artificial club system. In effect, South's jump to three clubs showed a strong two club bid and thereafter the auction was natural. North-South did well to stay clear of the more normal spade grand slam, which would have offered no practical chance at all.

West led the top of nothing in spades, and declarer won the jack. The contract looked simple until West showed out on the second round of trumps. To make his contract now, declarer needed a trump coup. For that to succeed, however, East had to follow to three rounds of spades. But what if East held only two spades?

Eichel devised as pretty a bit of deception as it has been our pleasure to witness. He entered dummy with the ten of spades and cashed the ace-king of spades from his hand! Now he led a third round of spades.

East was afraid that if he ruffed the third spade, declarer would overruff and his trump trick would vanish. He thought that he could simply discard on this trick and then sit back and wait for his trump trick. Declarer proved him wrong.

After the queen of spades held, declarer ruffed a heart, crossed to the ace of diamonds and ruffed another heart. Now his trumps were down to the same length as East's, and both of them still

THE 1982 SAAB TURBO. ALL THE POWER OF 8 CYLINDERS WITHOUT ALL THE GUILT.

They don't know that they only need that extra power 20% of the time. Saab's ingenious solution is the 900 Turbo. For most driving situations, its highly efficient 4-cylinder engine is more than adequate. But when the occasion calls—say you're about to merge into high-speed traffic—Saab's turbocharger kicks in with a boost of power, and you're home free.

So you have all the virtues of a big engine but none of the sins—extra weight, bad gas mileage, etc. Now, what could be more beautiful?
