Congress Passes Bill Nobody Wanted

By JIM LUTHER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The bill nobody wanted — a measure raising taxes by $98.3 billion over the next three years — is on its way to President Reagan after winning the support of a Congress that overcame election-year jitters.

The bill, which also includes $15.2 billion worth of social-spending cuts and up to 10 weeks' extra federal benefits for unemployed workers in every state, likely will be signed into law by Reagan during his two-week California vacation.

The Republican-controlled Senate approved the bill 52-47 Thursday night on a touch-and-go roll call whose outcome was in doubt until the last minute. Vice President George Bush was on hand in case his vote was needed to break a tie.

Nine Democrats, most of them lured by the extra unemployment benefits, joined 43 Republicans in backing the bill. Eleven Republicans and 36 Democrats opposed it.

In the House, where Democrats are in charge, the final margin was 226-207 — wider than had been expected. The measure drew support from 123 Democrats and 103 Republicans, but many of the conservative GOP members who are among the president's most consistent backers, deserted him on the vote.

The bill will double the federal cigarette tax to 16 cents a pack; triple the 1 percent tax on telephone service; require that 10 percent of most dividends and interest be withheld for taxes; reduce deductions for medical expenses and casualty losses; raise the 5 percent tax on air fares to 8 percent starting Sept. 1; toughen the "minimum tax" on high-income investors and, in an effort to catch some of the $98 billion in taxes that are evaded each year, require better reporting of income from tips, state tax refunds and investment income.

Although the measure leaves intact the across-the-board cut in personal tax rates that was enacted at Reagan's insistence last year, it would wipe out about one-third of the 1981 business tax reductions. The sale of corporate tax benefits through "leasing" arrangements would be repealed at the end of 1983.

Most of the tax increases will take effect next Jan. 1.

After the House vote, Reagan praised those who voted for the bill. "This was a hard choice for many of them, especially in an election year," he said, adding that the vote "is an important milestone" in putting the economy back on course.

Bygones should be bygones, he said of those who voted against the bill. "Let's get on with the nation's business: an economic recovery that will mean more jobs and more opportunity for all our people."

Many Democrats viewed the tax increase as the first step away from Reagan's economic program, which they say has failed. "This bill will not save the nation, but it is a cold splash of economic reality," said Rep. Wyche Fowler, D-Ga.

"Let's do what's right for the country and put aside our election-year cowardice in the process," pleaded Sen. Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo.

The bill was written chiefly by Senate Republicans and endorsed by Reagan as a weapon for forcing down interest rates by cutting government borrowing.

As the compromise measure made its way through the House and Senate, one lawmaker after another who supported it proclaimed that nobody wants higher taxes but something must be done for the economy.

"No one will love us but the entire country will benefit from this bill," said Rep. Fortney Stark, D-Calif.

"This is the most painful decision of my career," said Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., "but another $150 billion deficit is staring at us with bloodshot eyes."

Conservatives who took the lead in battling the tax increase said this is no time to abandon the philosophy on which Reagan was elected — lower taxes and less government.

Several quoted Reagan's words earlier this year in which he said "raising taxes won't balance the budget."

Although it is important to support the president when possible, Rep. Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., cautioned colleagues, "What really matters to you: the Washington political establishment or the long-anguished voice of the American people" crying out against higher taxes.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, leader of the liberal Democrats who often have been the subject of Reagan's ire, went all-out to rally his own troops and the president's as well.

Looking to the GOP side of the chamber, O'Neill said about 30 of the young Republicans were swept into office on Reagan's coattails. "He's looking for a change of policy. Are you going to follow the leader who brought you here or are you going to run?"

Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., who was bloodied in losing a tax battle to Reagan last year, said that in return for helping the president on this fight, "If people can go out and buy homes again, that's reward enough for Democrats."

"There's no mileage out there in raising taxes," said House Republican Leader Robert Michel, noting that even with the tax increase, over the next three years individuals and businesses will still have $375 billion worth of tax cuts enacted in 1981.

The legislation would produce the largest peacetime tax increase in the nation's history, one year after Congress and Reagan agreed on a measure cutting taxes by $750 billion over five years — the biggest tax reduction ever.

Reagan staked the prestige of his office on winning the bill, although declaring he had to "swallow hard" himself to accept the tax increase. Only last January, Reagan rejected the advice of his top economic advisers and promised no tax increases this year.

Without the tax boost, according to most estimates, federal deficits could hit $170 billion or more in the coming fiscal year and a cumulative $600 billion over the next three.

Beirut Role Is Assigned To Marines

By TERENCE HUNT

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan said today he will send American troops to help evacuate PLO guerrillas from west Beirut.

About 800 Marines are expected to begin playing what the president called a "carefully limited noncombatant role" by the middle of next week.

Reagan said the Americans would be removed immediately if shot at and told reporters that "in no case will our troops stay longer than 30 days."

The president, in a brief statement to reporters in the White House Rose Garden, said the withdrawal "will set the stage for the urgent international action required to restore Lebanon's full sovereignty, unity and territorial integrity, obtain the rapid withdrawal of all foreign forces from that country and help ensure the security of northern Israel."

He also called for swift action based on the Camp David peace accords "to resolve the Palestinian issue in all its aspects."

Sen. Charles R. Percy, R-Ill., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations

Committee, told reporters after a briefing from the president that there already "is an agreement for all the Israelis and all the Syrians to withdraw from Lebanon."

Percy did not elaborate and presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said the senator was referring to the upcoming second phase of the U.S.-led talks on Lebanon, which Speakes called "our next objective."

The Pentagon has disclosed that a five-ship Navy amphibious group, with 1,800 Marines on board, is assembling off the Lebanese coast.

Some 650 French and 500 Italian troops are also scheduled to participate in the evacuation, due to begin Saturday.

The first American troops are not expected to land until four or five days after the first PLO elements leave and most likely will be assigned to the beach area of Beirut.

The president praised the role of U.S. special Ambassador Philip C. Habib in negotiating the withdrawal agreement with the PLO, Israel, Lebanon and Syria.

"Phil never lost hope and, in the end, his spirit and determination carried the day," the president said.

Return Captives And Dead Terms Are Met By PLO

By The Associated Press

The PLO turned over a captured Israeli pilot, a kidnapped soldier and the bodies of other troops requested by Israel to the International Red Cross today, clearing the way for a guerrilla evacuation from west Beirut beginning Saturday, Lebanese Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan announced.

U.S. presidential envoy Philip C. Habib "told me that the Red Cross has informed him that the captured pilot, the kidnapped soldier and the requested bodies have been handed over to the Red Cross," Wazzan said in a nationally televised statement.

Lebanon's state radio said the delivery was made at the Beirut port crossing point between the city's Moslem and Christian sectors.

Wazzan also said Habib handed him a written guarantee that the Reagan administration would seek the release of Lebanese and Palestinian prisoners held by Israel. No figures were given and there was no immediate comment from U.S. officials, but in the past Israel has refused to discuss freeing PLO fighters it holds on grounds they are terrorists held on criminal charges rather than prisoners of war.

In Washington, President Reagan told reporters if any of the 800 U.S. Marines in the multinational peacekeeping force are shot at in Beirut, the Marines will be removed immediately. He said the Marines would play a "carefully limited noncombatant role. In no case will our troops stay longer than 30 days."

In west Beirut, guerrillas packing or carrying suitcases were a common scene in several neighborhoods while PLO experts detonated land mines in the streets and on the beachfront to clear the roads for traffic in preparation for the pullout.

Palestine Liberation Organization spokesman Suhail Natour said earlier that the PLO was working on turning over the bodies of nine Israelis, five killed during the current invasion of Lebanon and four during Israel's 1978 offensive.

The Israeli Cabinet approved the PLO withdrawal plan Thursday on condition that the two prisoners — a pilot shot down June 6 and a soldier "kidnapped" by the PLO Wednesday night — be released first.

The vanguard of the multinational peacekeeping force that will oversee the Palestinian withdrawal, 150 French paratroopers, were due in Beirut Saturday morning, and "the Palestinian fighters will begin leaving Beirut Saturday," Lebanese Foreign Minister Fuad Butros said in a TV appearance.

Informed sources said about 3,000 guerrillas leaving on the first three days of the 14-day evacuation would go by ship to Cyprus for transfer to various Arab countries. Beginning next Wednesday, there will be a three-day deployment of the rest of the 2,100-man peace force — including 650 more French, 800 U.S. Marines and 500 Italians. And on Friday the rest of the guerrillas, estimated to number between 3,000 and 4,000; 1,500 Syrian troops and 2,500 to 3,000 Syrian-commanded troops of the Palestine Liberation Army will begin leaving by bus for Syria.

Last to go will be PLO chief Yasser Arafat and other officials of the PLO and its various factions.

Arafat is expected to go to Tunis, where the Arab League headquarters is now located, PLO and Lebanese sources said.

For the first time in a week, the Israeli forces encircling west Beirut on Thursday allowed a Red Cross food convoy to cross the so-called Green Line dividing the city's Christian and Moslem sectors. They also permitted 20 tons of fuel to reach the generator that provides electricity to the American University Hospital in west Beirut. Normal electric power was still not available.

But Israeli officials in Jerusalem said there were no plans for their forces to leave Beirut or Lebanon until all Syrian troops and Palestinian guerrillas were out of the country.

Hijacker Shot In Jet's Rescue

NEW DELHI, India (AP)

— Commandos stormed a hijacked Indian jetliner at the airport in northern Amritsar today and shot and killed at "point-blank range" the Sikh militant who commandeered the plane, an airline spokesman said.

The spokesman, Raman Khanna, said all passengers and crew were safe.

He said the "commando-type operation" began when the hijacker decided to release some of his remaining 67 hostages some seven hours after the Boeing 737 was seized and landed in Amritsar, 250 miles north of New Delhi.

Once the door of the plane was opened and passengers began filing down the steps, the "commandos" rushed in, Khanna said.

An ailing woman passenger identified as Parveen Sathe and her infant daughter Madhri were allowed to leave the plane about four hours earlier.

Meanwhile, the freed passengers and crew were being returned to New Delhi on a relief plane that had been flown to Amritsar earlier in the day, Khanna said.

The hijacker, who was demanding freedom for jailed comrades and ransom, claimed to have been armed with a pistol and a hand grenade.

The airline released a flight manifest which listed 10 people with non-Indian sounding names, but their nationalities could not be determined immediately since the hijacked plane was on a domestic flight.

State Senator Arrested On 3 Felony Charges

H.A. BAKER

WILKESBORO, N.C. (AP) — State Sen. Harold A. Baker, R-Wilkes, arrested Thursday on three felony charges, says he is innocent of any wrongdoing.

"It was as big a shock to me as I've ever heard," Baker said of his arrest in a telephone interview Thursday with The Associated Press.

Baker was charged with possession of stolen property, making a false affidavit, and altering the identity of a pickup truck, said Inspector Jerry Arrowood of the License and Theft Division of the state Department of store owner about 3½ years ago while on an antique-buying expedition.

"We dickered on it awhile and we finally agreed on a price," he said. He said the seller offered to throw in a burned-up truck free if he completed the purchase.

Baker recalled that both trucks were 1978 Fords, but said he could not remember in which town he made the deal.

He said he had no idea the truck had been stolen from Tennessee and denied switching serial numbers.

Baker, who represents the 24th senatorial district, comprised of Avery, Burke, Caldwell, Mitchell, Watauga, and Wilkes counties, said he had spoken with State Senate Minority Leader Donald Kincaid, R-Lenoir, and state GOP chairman David Flaherty about the charges.

"I fully believe it's all political," he explained, adding that it would probably hurt his re-election chances.

Kincaid, who also represents the 24th district, earlier expressed shock at Baker's arrest.

"My heavens, I'm sorry to hear that," Kincaid said. "I'd hate to comment on that until I know all the details."

Flaherty also was reluctant to comment.

"You're not guilty of something until you're proven guilty," he said. "It's hard to comment on something until you know what the particulars are. If he's guilty I hope he'd recognize the need to step aside and let us replace him with someone."

District Attorney Michael Ashburn, also a Republican, said he was asking the state attorney general's office to prosecute the case "to avoid any appearance of political bias."

Baker turned himself in Thursday and was released under $5,000 bond, Arrowood said. If convicted of the three felony charges, he could receive a maximum sentence of five years for each count, Arrowood added.

Motor Vehicles. The charges came after a two-month investigation.

Arrowood said warrants charged Baker with transferring a serial number plate from a burned pickup truck he owned to a truck allegedly stolen in Knoxville, Tenn. nearly three years ago.

Baker said he bought a pickup truck from a Virginia

PRIVILEGED PARKING?

On numerous occasions during my visits to the Federal Building in Greenville, I have noticed that the office employees of Sen. John East park in the two spaces reserved for handicapped parking. I would like it explained to me why they are granted this unusual privilege. W.M.

Calvin Kirven, director of Sen. East's Greenville office, said it is his understanding that the office's use of one of the two handicapped parking spaces adjacent to the federal building is based on an informal agreement with the General Services Administration which manages the federal building and the grounds around it. He said the office staff was told that, since Sen. East is wheelchair-bound and would need use of a handicapped space, that one of the handicapped parking spaces could be considered for his use. When Sen. East is not in Greenville, the office staff has used this space, rather than take up another regular space when he is out of town, Kirven said.

The space has never been specially marked for Sen. East because, Kirven says, he presumes it was deemed better to leave it open for any handicapped person to use if it is vacant. He said this is the first time he's had the practice questioned and that your inquiry may call for clearly marking one of the handicapped spaces especially for Sen. East or creating a third space large enough for use by a handicapped person and marking it.

Dear Abby

Folks Next Door Flunk Good Neighbor Test

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: This is a letter I would like my neighbors to see. Perhaps your column will reach them:

"Dear Neighbors,

"I am reminiscing today over the 25 years that we have been your neighbors. When we moved here from out of state, we waited for you to welcome us. You never did.

"We are a decent, respectable family. Maybe our children were a little noisy at times, and our grass was uncut once in a while, and our religion was different from yours — so you ignored us.

"Events in our lives — births, graduations, weddings, deaths — came and went with no acknowledgments from you.

"Now that we are all old and the children are gone from the street, shall we be hypocritical and mourn your deaths, or regret your moving away?

"I think not. We are all poorer for having ignored one another, but we survived. May our children extend the hand of friendship to their neighbors."

AGNES IN CULVER CITY, CALIF.

DEAR AGNES: What's done is done, but times have changed. Neighbors need each other today for security as well as for the sake of old-fashioned friendship.

This is a plea for people to reach out and offer their friendship to the newcomers in the neighborhood. And if the welcome is slow in coming, the newcomers should initiate the dialogue.

Nothing separates like silence.

DEAR ABBY: One of my relatives intimidates me every time I use the word "supper" — as though it is a long-outdated word used only by uneducated peasants.

Abby, if you had invited guests to a large, heavy meal on Sunday around noon, how would you feel if they said, "Thanks for the 'lunch'?" And if you served soup and crackers for an evening meal, should you be thanked for "dinner?"

Just what is the correct name for the heaviest meal of the day if it is served at noon? And what would you call the lightest meal of the day if it is served at night? Thank you.

CONFUSED IN PASADENA

DEAR CONFUSED: "Dinner" is the principal meal of the day. "Lunch" is a light meal — usually eaten at noon. And "supper" is the evening meal when dinner is taken at noon.

If I'm in error, I'll eat my Webster's dictionary for "supper" because I've already had "dinner." You're welcome.

DEAR ABBY: I am a man with a problem I've never seen in your column: the terrible curse of being a redhead! I'm 32 years old, and I can't get a girl because of my red hair. All my relatives tell me I'm good-looking, but they probably feel sorry for me.

I hate feeling like a freak. Is there a club for redheaded men I could join? When people with the same problem get together, they tend to help each other, and I sure do need help. Thanks.

BETTER DEAD THAN RED

DEAR RED: I know of no club for redheads, but I know a lot of men who would be happy to have a head full of hair — regardless of the color.

There are many good-looking, successful red-headed men: Red Buttons, Red Skelton, and that heart-breaker of all times, Van Johnson! Cheer up, Red! You don't have a problem. It's all in your head.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 16-year-old male and my problem is my voice. It is still very high-pitched, and I sound like a girl. When I answer the telephone, I have been asked, "Is your husband home?"

When I call a girl, and her mother answers, I have heard in the background, "Who is it?" Then the mother says, "It's some girl!"

I am developing a complex over this. If my voice doesn't change pretty soon, should I see some kind of doctor? Maybe I am missing some hormones. Please help me.

SOUNDS LIKE A GIRL

DEAR SOUNDS: You're on the right track. An endocrinologist can determine whether you have a hormone deficiency — and if so, the deficiency can be corrected.

Gideon Putnam Is Still The Place To Stay

By SUSAN LISOVICZ
Associated Press Writer
SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y. (AP) — The rules have slackened — women now may bare their shoulders while dining. And the clientele no longer merits a daily announcement in the Saratogian's society column.

Conventioners may have replaced the once exclusive horse set and the aristocrats of society, but the Gideon Putnam Hotel remains the correct address when staying in town.

The rich and famous have flocked to this resort 30 miles north of Albany since the mid-1800s, lured by the excitement of the race track's fast horses and the therapeutic effects of the natural springs.

In former days, guests at this exclusive hostelry might spot the chief justice of the United States in the lobby, Cary Grant in the dining room and the Vanderbilt Whitneys in the elevator.

The hotel continues to draw heavyweights in the entertainment field — Bob Hope and Fred Astaire sometimes stop in — mainly because of the Saratoga Performing Arts Center situated across the park lawn.

Still, during most of the year, one is more likely to rub shoulders with members of the New York State Dairy Association or other convention groups, now the bread and butter of this establishment's business.

The Gideon Putnam, named after the settler who opened the community's first hotel in 1802, is part of the $4.8 million Saratoga Spa complex and is owned by the state. The hotel is leased out.

Celebrities, aristocracy, sports figures and tycoons were not far behind after "America's First European Spa," opened July 26, 1935. It was in this placid setting, amid the tall oaks and an expanse of 1,500 acres, that those taking "the cure" from the springs' revitalizing waters would stay.

Inside, guests relaxed with James Reynolds murals, plush red carpets and high ceilings. Detailed wall moldings and twin fireplaces marked the lobby. In a guest suite, fresh flowers and screened-in verandas overlooking the forest emphasized the restful nature of the hotel.

The Sweeney brothers, Edward C. and Martin, and Myron Woolley operated the hotel for the first half of its existence.

Tom Sullivan, 72, regards that era as the "25 golden years." The night watchman since the hotel opened, Sullivan became acquainted with many of the prominent guests who were regulars at the Gideon.

"Every year we used to have Charles Evans Hughes, chief justice of the U.S. Supreme Court," he said. "He used to come every spring and every fall."

Along with the impressive promenade was a strict dress code and a fussy, refined atmosphere.

"If a lady came for dinner with a sleeveless dress, they (hotel management) would hand her a large dinner napkin to place around her shoulders," recalled Gladys Delmore, who has operated the hotel's antique shop for 20 years.

The Gideon, however, had its sensational moments too, as the New York Daily News recorded on Nov. 18, 1949.

"Mayor (William) O'Dwyer, a fugitive from the press ... strode angrily into the lobby of the swank Gideon Putnam Hotel today, told a battery of clean-shaven newspapermen that he and ex-model Sloan Simpson were neither married nor engaged, and then issued this ultimatum: 'Either you get out of here this afternoon or I will.'"

But as the use of mineral baths declined with its shift from medicinal to recreational purposes, fewer and fewer of the longtime Gideon guests returned for the spa.

In the years following Sweeney and Woolley's era, successive managements replaced the traditional Gideon-type with a new type of customer: the convention people.

The hotel mirrors the metamorphosis.

The fifth floor, formerly the living quarters for hotel staff, has been converted to guest rooms. A 9,000-square-foot convention center was added on to the hotel in 1979. Most of the original furnishings, like the bronze and brass Belgian water cooler selected by New York City designer Dorothy Draper, are gone.

Sullivan, a fixture at the hotel since its infancy, has noticed the change. "I've seen the golden years," he says. "My day is gone."

Spinning New Girl Network

By MARLENE AIG
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Men have been doing it for years: trading stock tips on the golf course, discussing promotions on the tennis court, sharing insider views of corporate life over drinks at the club.

It's the "old boy network," a web of social tips and advice that passes from generation to generation, company to company, and is as venerable an institution as the boys' night out.

"Men have always been taught to be part of the team and help each other," says Deane Laycock, founder of the Boston Luncheon Club and the National Alliance of Professional and Executive Women's Networks.

"Women were taught to be nice and have friends, and went their separate ways, especially after getting married."

But now more women are playing the corporate game — and forming their own teams. "Old" and "new girl networks" are cropping up as women begin to look at each other as a resource they never thought they had.

Connie Greaser is a founder of Women in Business in Los Angeles, an early network that grew out of a university seminar in 1974. "The initial purpose was socialization and finding one another and realizing we weren't the only ones having trouble," she says.

"The first legs of the old girls' networks had to be formalized," says Ms. Greaser, head of publications for the Rand Corp. in Santa Monica, Calif. "We didn't know who one another were. We had no place to run, like a local pub, to meet other people with the same problems."

"So many of us were isolated," says Mrs. Laycock, who works as a trust officer at Fiduciary Trust Co., and founded the Boston Luncheon Club to find other women in banking.

In the last three years, two books on networking, one by Mary Scott Welch and the other by Carol Kleiman, have hit the market.

The National Association of Female Executives was founded 10 years ago by Wendy Rue as a "positive support system." In each issue of its publication, The Female Executive, it lists the names and phone numbers of women throughout the country who want to start a network.

One of its promotional leaflets declares: "Networking is Getting Ahead."

Elaine Moore, a sales director for Mary Kay Cosmetics, became president of the associations' Career Exchange in Cincinnati.

"The looser the network, the more it works," she says. "It's sharing experiences and getting support. It's knowing someone else is there. It's getting contacts and sharing them and knowing what's out there."

Ms. Moore notes that the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics says 48 percent of all jobs come through personal contact, and "the higher you go in the executive tower, the more jobs are filled by word of mouth."

Women find beauticians and baby sitters by word of mouth, women active in networking say, so there's no reason why finding a new and better job can't happen the same way.

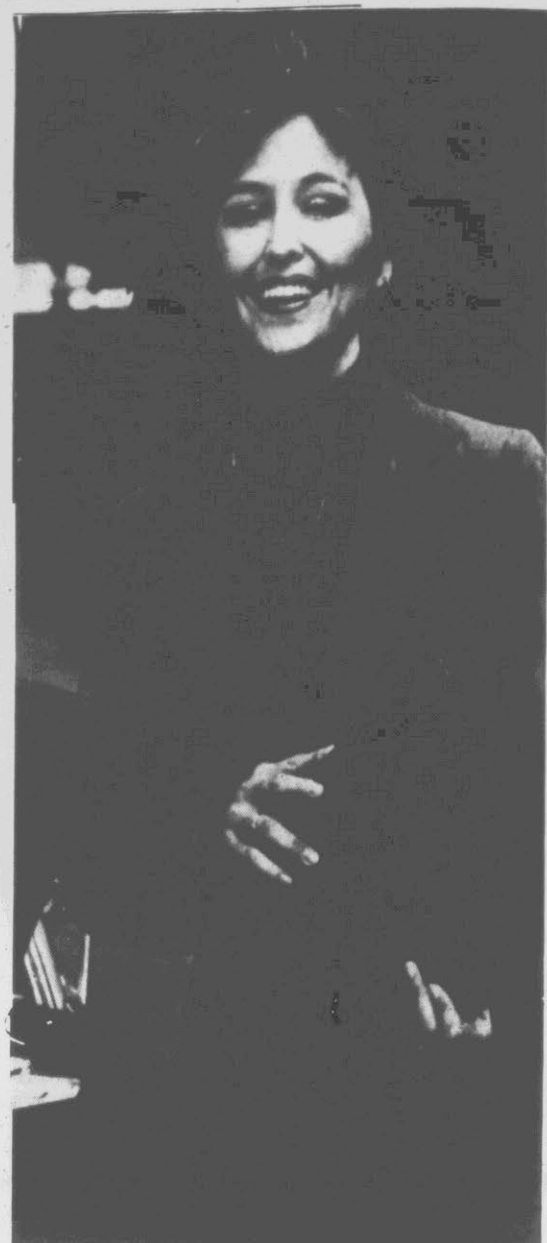

Many organizations, like the Financial Women's Association in New York and Women in Business in Los Angeles, make sure employers have the name of at least one woman on every list of people for every job opening and recommend women for corporate boards.

Catalyst, a multifaceted woman's organization, has been working to get women on corporate boards through its Corporate Board Resource.

Founder Felice Schwartz says, "It used to be corporations just wanted a woman who wouldn't make waves. Now, they want a woman who will make a contribution, not just be tokens."

In 1969, Catalyst says, 46 women served on major corporate boards. Now, there are 336 women occupying 490 board positions.

Gulf Oil Corp. recently compiled a list of 1,500 business owned by women, and it became a corporate bestseller. Women in Business in Los Angeles put together a similar list.

Ms. Greaser worries that while older women are eager to help younger women, younger women "have had it easy. They don't see the need to help other women. They have everything going for them and they don't support other women."

"We may be going backwards," she warns,

"unless women realize they have to support each other for a long time. We're still not considered equal out there."

Reynolds Cuts Leaf Purchases

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Tobacco industry officials say they are anticipating a decline in demand for cigarettes following Congressional approval Thursday of the $98.3 billion tax package that includes an 8 cents a pack tax increase on cigarettes.

David Fishel, a spokesman for R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., said prior to Thursday's approval of the tax package that the tobacco giant has already cut back on purchases of flue-cured tobacco because of lower quality leaf and uncertainty over the cigarette tax increase.

"We are buying less," Fishel said, adding that leaf sold early this season "was just simply not very good quality. It was pale and thin."

The House and Senate approved President Reagan's proposed $98.3 billion increase in taxes late Thursday.

Prior to the vote, Fishel said if the cigarette tax were approved, "there's a feeling that it will cause some decline in demand, but how much we don't know."

Reynolds, the nation's largest cigarette maker with sales of 207.2 billion cigarettes last year, is taking what Fishel called "a conservative approach."

Two other large tobacco companies — American Tobacco Co. and Philip Morris Co. — said they are buying normally.

But four weeks into the 1982 marketing season, a higher-than-normal percentage of the crop has gone to the Flue-Cured Tobacco Stabilization Corporation, an industry cooperative which buys leaf at government-set minimum prices if private companies don't bid more.

Robert Rukeyser, public affairs director for American Brands Inc., parent of American Tobacco Co., said passage of the bill could stimulate heavy consumer buying before the tax goes into effect — with a fall in demand afterward.

"The effect of the tax is very hard to anticipate," Rukeyser said. "We've had no experience with an increase like that."

Rukeyser characterized this year's buying by American as "generally consistent with last year."

A Philip Morris spokesman said, without elaborating, that his company "is purchasing its normal leaf requirements" this year.

John Cyrus, chief of tobacco affairs for the N.C. Agriculture Department, said Reynolds was the biggest buyer of U.S. tobacco last year, taking about one-third of the market. Philip Morris, whose domestic cigarette production is nearly as large as Reynolds's, followed closely.

3 Collisions On Thursday

An estimated $7,300 property damage resulted from three traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Thursday.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from a 12:37 p.m. incident at the intersection of Evans and 14th streets involving cars driven by Mildred Sue Edwards of Route 2, Greenville, and Evelyn Russell Little of 1007 E. Wright Road.

Damage from the mishap was estimated at $1,000 to the Edwards car and $3,500 to the Little vehicle.

A car driven by Dorothy Dell Clemmons of Route 4, Greenville, and a truck operated by Garry Wayne Berry of Route 1, Plymouth, collided about 8 a.m. at the intersection of Memorial Drive and the Belvoir Highway, causing an estimated $1,800 damage to the Clemmons car and $50 damage to the truck.

Police charged Berry with failing to stop for a stop light following investigation of the incident.

A 1:35 p.m. collision on Arlington Boulevard, 100 feet from the Greenville Boulevard intersection, involved a car driven by Vickie Allen Shivers of Route 1, Grimesland, and a truck operated by Raymond McFayden of Fayetteville.

Investigators estimated damage from the collision at $450 to the Shivers car and $500 to the truck.

From 1957 until early in the 1970s, the Italian Blue Team reigned supreme as world champions. Then they retired from the scene, and as a result of a scandal involving some taped telephone conversations, some of their players retired from top level play. But the Blue Team is back, and to judge from the drubbing they inflicted on World Olympiad champions, France, Messrs. Belladonna, Forquet, Garozzo and Pabis-Ticci might once again become a dominant force in world bridge.

In this hand from the Italy-France encounter, both teams reached a contract of four spades, and both declarers were faced with the lead of the king of diamonds. The French declarer won in hand and took the heart finesse, which lost to Belladonna's king. He returned the queen of diamonds. Pabis-Ticci carefully ruffed his partner's trick and returned a heart, which Belladonna ruffed. The king of spades subsequently took the setting trick.

At the other table Garozzo was the declarer. He won the king of diamonds and immediately returned a diamond. This thoughtful play shattered the defenders' communications. West, in the actual play, ruffed the second diamond and shifted to a heart. Declarer finessed. East won the king but he had no good return. He tried a trump, but declarer rose with the ace and led another trump, and he could later claim his contract with the help of a club finesse.

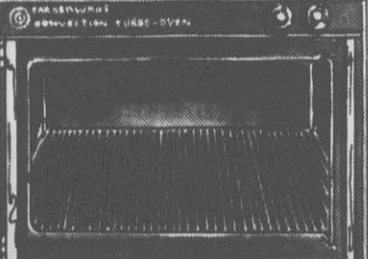

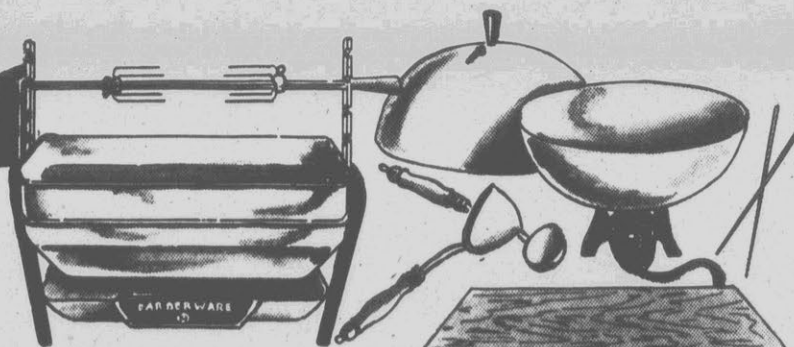

Actually, East's best return was a third diamond. But declarer could handle that by sluffing a heart from his hand and taking the ruff in dummy.

The Italians won 13 International Match Points on this hand. They won the 100-board match by 225 IMPS-164.

A Reason To Find Fault

All of this debate in Washington and elsewhere across the country on the new tax bill served one purpose: it pinpoints the exigencies of government.

American democracy is still the best type of government known to man but, of necessity, it depends too much on political manipulations. This business over the Reagan-backed tax package was a perfect example. Outwardly, it was a Republican bill — one fostered and backed by President Reagan. But just look on the inside — House Speaker Tip O'Neill, a dyed-in-the-wool Democrat, was one of the chief spokesmen urging congressmen to approve the package; North Carolina's two Republican senators voted for it when it first came up in the Senate but then voted against it the second time, saying they really didn't mean those first votes; "liberal" Democrats such as Sen. Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts were lined up behind the bill, supposedly part of a conservative Republican program, while "conservative" Republicans such as Barry Goldwater were staunchly against it.

As the saying goes, you really need a scorecard to know who's on first.

Add to that the bipartisan objection to the maneuvering that went into the bill — which was written by the Senate and tagged on to a minor House tax bill. Nine Republicans and nine Democrats — including Rep. Jim Martin, R-N.C., and Rep. Stephen Neal, D-N.C. — have joined in filing a suit in federal court challenging the legality of the tax package itself. They rightfully point out that the Constitution requires the House to initiate tax proposals.

This tax bill has gone beyond party lines; so much so that Goldwater even complained publicly that the GOP was threatening its congressmen to line up in approval of the bill. Passage of the bill truly will be a panacea for those who want to find fault. The only problem will be in identifying those to blame.

Revise Old Law?

By PUAL T. O'CONNOR
RALEIGH — You can punch a policeman while he's trying to arrest you in North Carolina and you can get away with it. Common law guarantees you that right in cases involving an unlawful arrest.

But the Governor's Crime Commission thinks that common law right to physically resist an unlawful arrest "is no longer acceptable as a means of settling disputes" and is asking the 1983 General Assembly to change the law.

A 1954 Supreme Court ruling re-affirmed the common law. The court at that time said that a person who is being arrested illegally has the right to "use such force as reasonably appeared to him to be necessary to prevent the unlawful restraint of his liberty." The ruling basically said that if you knew you weren't the person the police wanted, you could settle the matter with the law on the street.

There are many different circumstances under which an arrest can be made unlawfully. It can be a case of mistaken identity where a policeman arrests Joe thinking it's John. Or, a case where the policeman arrives at the scene of a brawl and arrests the conscientious citizen who was trying to break up the fight.

Across the country during the past 30 years, legislatures and courts have been changing this law, saying that the person shouldn't slug it out with the police officer. He should come into court and get the confusion straightened out in a civilized fashion. In North Carolina, the Court of Appeals ruled in 1968 that a person presented with an invalid arrest warrant should submit to the arresting officer and settle matters when he gets to the magistrate. But that ruling did not apply to any other kinds of unlawful arrest.

"In a society where force is no longer acceptable as a means of settling disputes, it is archaic to continue a theory which allows a citizen to decide at his and an officer's peril whether an arrest is legal or illegal and to proceed to inflict injury upon the officer who is attempting to carry out the duties of his office," the commission's legislative proposal says.

The measure is also designed to protect the civilian who usually ends up on the short end of any fisticuffs with the police.

The new law which the commission is proposing would not apply in cases where the arresting officer fails to properly identify himself. If he's dressed in a pair of jeans and a T-shirt and tries to haul you into his unmarked car, you wouldn't face a charge for trying to fight him off. Nor would the law take away a defendant's right to fight back when the police officer uses excessive force to take you in. "In those cases, one's instinct for self protection is given legal sanction."

The commission's recommendation is also designed to make it easier for a jury to decide if a defendant should be convicted of simple assault or of resisting arrest. Under the present law, the judge has an arduous task of explaining the laws of arrest and assault and lesser included offenses. The new law would simplify all of that by.

Sex And College Men

There has been a lot of open discussion lately about the college girl and her attitude toward sex. University officials, sociologists, ministers and parents have expressed alarm over the modern young girl's attitude toward premarital sex relations, and the subject has been discussed frankly in every woman's magazine in the nation.

But while a great deal of attention has been given to what a college girl thinks about sex, nobody seems to have bothered to ask college men how they feel about the problem. To right this wrong, I have spent the last three days interviewing college men about their opinions on the subject of free love, chastity and sexual emancipation.

I asked a Yale senior, home on vacation, if he believed that a man should submit to relations before he is married. "Absolutely not," he told me. "College girls may call me old-fashioned, but I think a nice boy should remain pure. I'm not against necking if it doesn't go too my and daddy I would never do anything in school to make them ashamed of me."

Two Princeton men I met were first very wary about discussing the problem, but finally one of them said: "I think it's all right for college girls to be emancipated — after all, they have nothing to lose — but as a man, I'm very idealistic about such things. Besides, I feel girls think much less of you when you give in."

A Harvard man said: "When I first came to Harvard, several of the students asked me if I would 'go all the way with a girl.' I didn't even know what it meant, but when I found out, I reported them to the dean."

I discovered that the Midwestern college male student also feels strongly on the subject. A University of Michigan halfback said: "I was going steady with a girl from Ohio State. One night she asked me the question and I made her get out of my car. I guess I cried all night long. But the next day my fraternity brothers told me I had done the right thing."

A shiny-faced University of Texas engineering major said: "Fortunately, the subject has never come up in Texas. Our students have read what is going on in the rest of the country with dismay, and we've decided the only way to handle the problem is to hold weekly dances in the gym under strict supervision. If a girl misbehaves in any way, she's never asked back again. This way the fellows have a good time in a healthy atmosphere and have nothing to be ashamed of later in life."

A Georgetown sophomore told me: "When I go on a date with a girl, I always take someone along with me — either a professor or an older person. A lot of girls get mad at me, but I promised mum-far, but I feel as do most of the men at Yale, that a boy should be able to say 'no' to a girl without hurting her feelings."

A University of Southern California football player said: "I think there has been an overemphasis on promiscuity on college campuses. It's true there are a few weak men who may succumb to a persistent coed, but the majority of college men believe in chastity and wouldn't think of having an affair during the happiest years of their lives."

A Georgetown sophomore told me: "When I go on a date with a girl, I always take someone along with me — either a professor or an older person. A lot of girls get mad at me, but I promised mum-

The Bleak Forecasts Remain

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — That wasn't all good news that sent the stock market into an eruption Tuesday, as startling as a performance by Mount St. Helens, and when the dust settles some of the cheering might stop.

Quite likely, a lot of people also will be inclined to question the popular assumption that the stock market foretells economic conditions.

Throughout the Wall Street community they explained the 38.81-point jump in the Dow Jones industrial average as a reaction to the likelihood of lower interest rates. High rates, remember, are considered bad for stock prices.

The White House might dispute this interpretation, and to some extent they could be right. The president's address must have had some impact; the chance of a smaller budget deficit too. So too the bits of optimistic economic news.

But on The Street, as they say, it was the word from the interest-rate gurus, particularly Henry Kaufman and Albert Wajnlower, that stirred up most of the activity.

And what they said about short-term economic activity was very, very bleak.

"A smart recovery in economic activity in the second half of this year is not likely to materialize," said Kaufman, managing director of Salomon Brothers. "The business outlook has deteriorated," said Wajnlower, chief economist of First Boston Corp. Both companies deal in securities.

With forecasts such as that, why should stock prices rise? Good question. The answer seems to be that both analysts, and others at some of the big investment houses, think that interest rates will continue to fall.

Earlier this year, Wall Street went into a depression of spirits and prices because of gloom over expectations of continued high, and maybe even higher, interest rates. Kaufman, especially, had warned of the interest rate threat.

High rates are indeed a threat to stock prices. In fact, some securities analysts will argue, there is nothing more

Disaster In Debt Burden

By PETER EISNER
Associated Press Writer
MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexico's $80 billion foreign debt, largest in the Third World and still growing, was nurtured by international banks willing to finance overambitious development plans, financial analysts say.

The debt is the main reason behind recently announced measures that have doubled tortilla prices, put people out of work and frozen dollar bank accounts as the government struggles to restore international confidence and cut the flight of dollars from its coffers. The austerity steps have adversely affected living conditions for millions of Mexicans, many already poor and jobless.

The government must raise between $25 billion and $28 billion this year to meet debt payments and pay for current projects, financial analysts say.

International bankers say the debt will top $85 billion by the end of this year. More than $20 billion of that will be owed by private businesses; the rest by government-owned interests.

Mexico owes about 60 percent of the debt to U.S. banks and the balance to Western European banks. No specific breakdown has been made public.

With the discovery of the world's fourth-largest estimated oil reserves, Mexico was considered a good risk in the late 1970s. Banks were encouraged by the nation's financial prospects and invested in government development programs aimed at turning the nation into a major industrial power.

But partly because of the worldwide petroleum oversupply that has caused oil prices to drop sharply, Mexico has borrowed large amounts of money overseas, doubling the foreign debt in less than two years.

"The banks share some of the blame in this," said a foreign financial analyst who wished to remain anonymous. "They invested when they saw a good thing, and there were no limits set on how high the lending could go."

Mexico's public and private debt ranks highest among the tremendous amounts of money owed by every Latin American nation.

Recent statistics show Brazil will owe $70 billion by the end of this year and Argentina more than $36.6 billion. Tiny Costa Rica owes about $2.5 billion, the highest per capita debt of any country in the world.

No nation has ever completely reneged on its debt, and financial analysts have long wondered how failure to make payments would affect the world economy.

But most discount the possibility of default, saying major banks are forced to keep lending more money once they enter the lending circuit to help nations re-finance debts.

Treasury Secretary Jesus Silva Herzog announced Tuesday night that negotiations are under way to re-structure the debt, which would allow Mexico to repay it under a more favorable schedule.

He also said Mexico hopes to arrange a $1.5 billion credit from major international banks, and confirmed that talks have begun with the International Monetary Fund.

Analysts say Mexico's best immediate solution is to get emergency credits from the IMF, but politicians worry that the austerity programs the U.N. agency would require could provoke serious unrest.

Mexico's economic crunch came suddenly. In a year, the industrial growth rate shrank from 8 percent to zero.

The Pemex state oil monopoly — one of the principal contributors to the debt through massive investment programs — has been laying off workers and halting construction. Another major borrower is the Federal Power Commission, which developed a now-paralyzed nuclear power program.

Once-thriving private firms such as the multibillion-dollar Alfa conglomerate, the largest in Latin America, and Mexicana Airlines are in deep financial trouble.

Officials here are blaming high interest rates and the change in the world oil market for the nation's financial woes. But they acknowledge that the series of hard-line economic measures so far has failed to restore confidence.

President Jose Lopez Portillo said the central bank's dollar supply would have been exhausted in a month without emergency measures decreed Aug. 2.

The most drastic step came last Thursday when the government for the first time instituted foreign exchange controls to prohibit private citizens from unlimited access to dollars.

"We will see the closing of some business and we will have increases in the level of unemployment," Silva Herzog said, conceding what he called the severe implications of the move.

The first stage in this month's flurry of economic measures cut costly government subsidies for tortillas and bread, doubling prices for these basic items. Gasoline prices and electric rates were raised as much as 60 percent.

In the last three weeks the government also has devalued the peso, frozen an estimated $13 billion in dollar accounts in Mexican banks and issued rules for determining exactly how many dollars can be traded inside the country and at what price.

Strength For Today

ABSENT ONE FROM THE OTHER

"Parting is such sweet sorrow," Shakespeare tells us. And everyone knows that absence makes the heart grow fonder. Yet despite these familiar statements, people who must endure long separation from what they hold dear know that there is nothing harder to bear.

But in human life, separations are inevitable. Servicemen are sent overseas for months and years — away from sweethearts, families, homes. Sickness and death cause even keener suffering.

And yet there are many who go through life suffering from the worst separation of all — separation from God. Of all separations this is the most desperate, and the most completely self-imposed. What a monument to human folly, blindness, and sin it is that man should of his own choice cut himself off from the source of his greatest strength and comfort!

Tougher Tax Enforcement In New Law By Congress

By JIM LUTHER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress and the Reagan administration are counting on tougher enforcement of the tax laws to produce a big chunk of the $98.3 billion that would be raised over the next three years, under a bill awaiting the president's signature.

The most disputed portion of the bill is a compliance measure requiring that 10 percent of most interest and dividends be withheld for tax purposes, just as a part of wages are now withheld.

Withholding would bring in an estimated $10.6 billion over the next three years. During the first year, Treasury officials estimate, two-thirds of the increased collections would represent advance payment of taxes on such income, because the government would have gotten the money anyway at tax time. But in future years, almost all the money would come from people who now are avoiding taxes, because they wouldn't ever had paid without the withholding system.

Withholding would begin July 1, 1983. Accounts earning less than $150 a year would be exempt. No withholding would be required from individuals who paid less than $600 in total tax the previous year or from elderly persons who paid $1,500 or less.

The compliance provisions include tougher penalties and stiffer reporting requirements on such income as state and local tax refunds, capital gains and government securities. Most pensions would be subject to withholding unless the recipient signs a paper opposing it.

Restaurants with more than 10 employees would have to provide the Internal Revenue Service sales figures to help improve tax collections from tips.

Withholding and other compliance measures in the bill would bring in about $21 billion. Another $6.9 billion increase in collections is expected from hiring additional IRS agents.

Other key provisions: —INDIVIDUAL DEDUCTIONS: Only medical expenses that exceed 5 percent (rather than 3 percent) of gross income could be deducted. The up-to-$150 deduction for half the cost of health insurance, even if no other medical deductions are claimed, would be eliminated. Starting in 1984, all prescription drugs and insulin could be lumped with other expenses in reaching that 5 percent threshold. Over-the-counter drugs could not be deducted.

Present law allows a deduction for all but $100 of uninsured casualty losses, such as from fire. The bill allows a deduction for losses that exceed 10 percent of gross income and after the first $100 is paid.

—CIGARETTES: The federal tax on cigarettes would be doubled to 16 cents a pack; on Oct. 1, 1985, the tax would drop back to eight cents.

—TELEPHONES: The 1-percent tax on phone service would rise to 3 percent in 1983 through 1985 and expire in 1986.

—AIR TAXES: Effective Sept. 1, the 5-percent tax on passenger tickets would rise to 8 percent; passengers leaving on international flights would have to pay an extra $3; a 5-percent tax would be imposed on air freight; the tax of 4 cents per gallon on gasoline for non-commercial aviation would rise to 12 cents; a 14-cent tax would be imposed on non-commercial jet fuel.

—UNEMPLOYMENT TAX: The employer-paid tax that finances unemployment compensation would be raised by about $1.20 a month per worker.

—UNEMPLOYMENT BENEFITS: Additional federal benefits of up to 10 weeks would be available to jobless workers in every state from Sept. 12 through next March 31. The change would be financed by raising the percentage of unemployment compensation that is subject to federal income tax, retroactive to Jan. 1, 1982.

—SAVINGS BONDS: The Treasury Department would be allowed to adjust interest on Series EE and HH bonds to reflect market conditions, but a minimum rate would be guaranteed.

—FEDERAL WORKERS: Would have to pay 1.3 percent of a base wage (a top tax of about $452 next year) into the Social Security system to finance their Medicare benefits.

—MINIMUM TAX: This special 20-percent levy on upper-income investors would be toughened to ensure some taxes are paid no matter how many big deductions are claimed. This would cost about 280,000 people an average of $4,700 apiece over the next three years.

—PENSIONS: High-earning professionals would lose some of the tax advantage of corporate retirement plans. On the other hand, the $15,000 a year that self-employed persons may set aside tax-free until retirement would rise to $30,000 in 1984.

—LEASING: Benefits made available to businesses under the "safe-harbor leasing" provision enacted last year would be repealed at the end of 1983. The law encourages unprofitable companies to sell their tax benefits to other firms.

—OIL TAXES: U.S. oil companies would no longer be allowed to use foreign tax credits from extraction income to avoid U.S. tax on other income.

—CORPORATE TAXES: The value of some special deductions, such as the oil depletion allowance, used by businesses to cut their taxes would be reduced by 15 percent. Corporations would have to pay 90 percent of their estimated taxes — up from 80 percent — in quarterly installments. Tax treatment of life insurance companies and long-term contractors would be toughened. Major expansions of depreciation deductions scheduled in 1985 and 1986 would be repealed.

FOCUS

Amazing Facts

Across the nation farmers are harvesting corn — sometimes called the grain that built the hemisphere. Members of Christopher Columbus's crew were the first white men to discover "a sort of grain called maize." The early colonists depended on this tall, annual plant which kept well in all weather. Sometimes they even used it as money for paying rent or taxes. In 1980 U.S. farmers produced about 7 billion bushels of corn, nearly 50 percent of the world's harvest. About four-fifths of the corn grown is used to feed livestock. But each year Americans eat about 45 pounds of corn per person, either directly or in meat from animals raised on it.

DO YOU KNOW — Which state produces the most corn?

Woman Dies Of Injuries

A Pitt County Memorial Hospital employee, Martha Jones Cone of 1100 St. David St., Tarboro, died Thursday in the hospital following a 6:45 a.m. head-on collision accident on N.C. 33 about 12 miles west of Greenville.

Highway Patrol Trooper Spencer Padgett said it appeared that the car driven by Mrs. Cone crossed the center line of N.C. 33 and collided head-on with an A.B. Whitley Inc. van driven by Robert Kents Harris of Route 4, Greenville.

Harris and four passengers in the Ford van were injured and taken to Pitt Memorial. Harris and three of the passengers were treated and released. Another passenger, Robert Ham of Route 4, Greenville, was admitted to the hospital.

Trooper Padgett's report indicated that the Cone car was headed east on N.C. 33 and that the van was headed west. Investigation of the accident was continuing.

Mrs. Cone, a recent graduate of Western Carolina University, had been employed as a medical technologist at the hospital since May 17. She and her husband, Tommy, were married several weeks ago, hospital officials reported.

City School Lunch Policy Set

The policy applicable to free and reduced-price meals in the Greenville City Schools has been announced. The policy is based on the criteria of family size and income as determined by federal officials.

Children from families whose income is at or below the levels shown in the table below are eligible for free or reduced meals. Application forms are being sent to all homes in a letter to parents. Information on the forms is confidential and will be used only for the purpose of determining eligibility. An application that does not contain the requested information cannot be approved. Parents may request assistance from a school official in filling out the form.

A statement of family income size including household member names, social security number of all adults or an indication that a household member does not have a social security number is required, plus a signed certification by the parent, guardian, or other adult household member that the information provided is correct.

Families are also required during the year to report income increases of more than $50 per month or $600 per year, or when a household size decreases.

Application for free or reduced-price meals can be made at any time during the year in the event a family's income falls at or below the table of eligibility.

Each application is reviewed by school principals who determines eligibility. If a parent is dissatisfied with the decision of the reviewing principal, he or she may discuss it with the principal on an informal basis. If a parent wants to make a formal appeal to a decision, this may be done orally or in writing to: Robert E. Stewart, 431 West Fifth Street, Greenville, N.C., 27834, phone 752-4192.

Eye Vote On Writing Test

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The chairman of the state Competency Test Commission says a formal vote will probably be taken during the board's September meeting concerning recommendations on a controversial writing competency test.

Jim Hemby said a formal vote was not taken at the board's Aug. 13 meeting because the board received material at its June and July meetings and he felt the commission needed time to absorb the data in the reports and to discuss the issues and concerns they had.

Commission member Lenwood Padgett of Jacksonville said the commission has no authority to require the test, but can only make recommendations to the state Board of Education.

Padgett said the state board "has approved every recommendation the test commission has made in its five-year history."

Padgett said even if the testing commission decides to recommend adopting the writing competency test, the earliest it could be administered is the 1983-84 school year.

"The General Assembly won't meet until January, and the budget probably won't be passed until mid to late June, so the earliest the test could be administered is the 1983-84 school year," he said.

Cars Collided At Intersection

Cars driven by Johnny Moye of 327 Clairmont Circle and Patricia Ann Brannigan of C9 Glendale Court collided about 12:20 p.m. Wednesday at the intersection of Fifth and Washington streets, causing an estimated $800 damage to the Moye car and $500 damage to the Brannigan car, police reported.

Police charged Ms. Brannigan with failing to stop for a red light following investigation of the mishap.

NATO Exercise Is Scheduled

CASTEAU, Belgium (AP) — Troops from the United States and five other NATO allies will take part in "Cold Fire 82," a joint land and air exercise in southern West Germany Sept. 9-24, the alliance announced Friday.

Supreme Headquarters Allied Powers Europe (SHAPE) said forces from Belgium, Canada, the Netherlands, West Germany, Great Britain and the United States will participate in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization maneuvers.

"Cold Fire 82" will involve "extensive flying operations" at various altitudes by day and, at times, by night, SHAPE said in a statement.

The maneuver "will exercise the Central European Command tactical air forces and army formations in joint land-air and autonomous operations," SHAPE said.

International Harvester Reports $129.8 Million Loss For Quarter

CHICAGO (AP) — International Harvester Co. announced a third-quarter net loss of $129.8 million, but says its operating losses for the period ending July 31 were the lowest for the past five quarters.

The company said Thursday that its net loss was in line with forecasts. The year-end deficit will probably exceed $900 million, a spokesman said.

Harvester also said it sees no improvement in the agricultural equipment business until 1984.

The losses for the farm implement manufacturer came on sales of $1.3 billion and compared with net income a year ago of $101.4 million, on sales of $1.6 billion. Net income for the year-ago period included a $275.3 million gain on the sale of its Solar Turbines Division.

Operating losses for the quarter were $125.9 million, compared with $166.3 million a year ago.

The company said its major markets continued to be soft. It said it expects only modest hikes in truck sales in the second half of 1983, increasing to a "significant upturn" in 1984.

For the first nine months, Harvester's sales were $3.8 billion with operating losses of $572 million, compared with sales of $5.3 billion and a loss of $348.1 million. The net loss in the nine months was $627.6 million, compared with a net loss of $74.2 million in 1981.

The company, whose debt has risen to $4.2 billion, announced last month that it must close more plants than previously announced, consolidate more operations and negotiate better terms from its lenders if it is to reverse its losses.

Louis W. Menk, chairman and chief executive officer, and Donald D. Lennox, president and chief operating officer, said the third-quarter figures reveal the company's cost-cutting efforts are working.

"Despite an 18 percent sales decrease, the loss from continuing operations, before the gain from translation of foreign currencies, was $58 million less than the year ago quarter," they said in a statement. This "confirms that aggressive cost reduction programs are lowering IH's breakeven level."

Harvester spokesman Bill Colwell said the concern still expects the year's losses to total $925 million if the latest restructuring being negotiated with bankers fails to go through.

If it does go through, Harvester said it believes losses could be even higher — from $900 million to $1 billion — but the restructuring is nonetheless needed to put the company on stronger ground.

Ingram Releases A Licensing Manual

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — In a move that some say was long overdue, Insurance Commissioner John Ingram released Thursday the first copies of a comprehensive new licensing manual for agents.

The Insurance Examination Study Manual for life, accident and health policies was unveiled by Ingram at a news conference. He said the department plans to have new tests for prospective insurance agents using the material in the book by this fall.

A second book for property and casualty insurance will be issued later, Ingram said.

"The quality of agents, in my opinion, will be tremendously upgraded," Ingram said. "I think they will be better prepared after studying this manual...I think the competence level will increase."

Several of Ingram's outspoken legislative critics, including Senate Insurance Chairman Carolyn Mathis, D-Mecklenburg, and House Insurance Chairman Mary Seymour, D-Guilford, have complained about the need for the department to prepare a manual and to update the licensing examination to conform to new state laws.

"With all the concern that Ingram professes to have for the consumers of North Carolina, this step is long overdue," said Gary W. Fisher, a Raleigh agent and immediate past president of the Carolinas Association of Professional Insurance Agents.

"It has taken the department 10 years to provide the new manual," he said.

The General Assembly passed a law in 1980 that required the licensing tests to be revised to meet current law and required the commissioner to publish preparatory materials for those planning to take the test.

"I'm very glad he has at last accomplished this," said Mrs. Seymour. "Certainly he's had two years to accomplish this, and it was brought to his attention long before it was mandated by law."

The legislature's Study Committee on Insurance named a subcommittee to look into licensing problems, and that panel was scheduled to meet with department officials next week.

Urge Patients For Smaller Hospitals

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — In a move that could have a dramatic impact on hospital referrals served by Medicaid, the North Carolina Hospital Association is urging hospitals to steer Medicaid patients away from expensive hospitals to smaller hospitals.

The association made the move in response to a new state policy to cut Medicaid costs. The policy will limit payments to the 28 highest-cost hospitals.

Patients on Medicaid are usually referred to a hospital near their home or the home used by the patient's doctor. Medicaid is the nation's largest program of health care for poor people.

William Oviatt, finance director of the hospital association, said that in order to avoid big financial losses on Medicaid patients, the high-cost hospitals should work with physicians in relocating patients who can't pay.

The state program is a response to declining federal funds for Medicaid. The state had $12 million cut from its share last year and the hospitals, still operating under the old reimbursement formula, had to absorb millions of dollars of losses on the program.

The state has $154 million for the Medicaid program this year, an increase from the $131.8 million last year, but still not enough to provide full reimbursement for all hospitals, officials say.

Under the new program, the state divided the 131 hospitals in North Carolina into high-cost and lower-cost categories, placing the dividing line at the average cost of a day's stay for a Medicaid patient for all hospitals at $262.

Hospitals below the line will be reimbursed the full cost for an unlimited number of Medicaid patient days. But the 28 higher hospitals will get reimbursement only for 85 percent of their projected patient days.

The state plan went into effect July 1. Officials of several hospitals said in interviews they would wait until later in the year, when they can see more clearly how much Medicaid patients are costing them, to decide whether to push doctors to transfer patients.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

LEGEND OF THE DOGWOOD

WHEN JESUS WAS CRUCIFIED HE FORGAVE ALL THOSE WHO TOOK PART IN THIS HORRIBLE EXECUTION (LUKE 23:34). AT SOMETIME IN THE EARLY YEARS OF CHRISTIANITY A LEGEND STARTED THAT, SO COMPLETE WAS HIS FORGIVENESS, EVEN THE WOODEN CROSS WAS INCLUDED! IT WAS SUPPOSED THAT THE TREE FROM WHICH THE WOOD CAME WAS THE DOGWOOD AND BECAUSE OF THIS FORGIVENESS THE TREE NEVER AGAIN GREW LARGE ENOUGH TO SUPPLY WOOD FOR SUCH A TERRIBLE PURPOSE—AND, AS COMMEMORATION, ITS FLOWERS WOULD FORM A CROSS WITH A NAILPRINT AT EACH PETAL'S EDGE, WITH THE CENTER RESEMBLING A CROWN OF THORNS STAINED WITH BLOOD.

TODAY'S BEAUTIFUL DOGWOOD TREES GROW TO A HEIGHT OF EIGHT TO FIFTEEN FEET—NOWHERE NEAR THE SIXTY OR SEVENTY FEET THAT THEIR ANCESTORS ARE SAID TO HAVE ATTAINED, AND ALSO....

...THE PETALS OF ITS LOVELY FLOWER DOES HAVE WHAT APPEARS TO BE A NAILPRINT ON THE EDGE OF EACH PETAL, WHILE THE FLOWER'S CENTER IS A BLOOD-RED COLOR—NEXT TIME THEY'RE IN BLOOM, TAKE A LOOK FOR YOURSELF!

Cultists Launch Oregon Center

By STEVE GRAHAM
Associated Press Writer
RAJNEESH PURAM, Ore. (AP) — His followers each wear a "mala," a 108-bead necklace from which dangles a portrait of their spiritual mentor and focus of their devotions, Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh.

He is the votive hub of a big, multi-million-dollar center being developed in central Oregon as headquarters for a movement that claims 250,000 followers worldwide, thousands of them in the United States. Rajneesh, 50, who gained his first disciple about a decade ago in Bombay, India, moved his headquarters last year from Poona, India, to a 100-square-mile communal ranch purchased in Oregon for $6 million.

About 2,000 acres are being incorporated as a new city called "Rajneeshpuram."

It was the site on the Fourth of July weekend for an international festival of about 7,000 people. Nearly 1,000 new followers took "sannyas," vows for becoming disciples of Rajneesh, who didn't speak a word publicly.

"Sannyasins" — the disciples — promise to love "Bhagwan," as he is called, wear red or orange clothing along with the "malas" and take new names, often Hindu in origin.

Besides about 100 meditation centers that have sprung up in major cities of the United States and Canada, the movement also reports extensive followings and meditation centers in West Germany, Britain, Australia, New Zealand, Switzerland, France and Japan.

Followers say Rajneesh used to deliver daily discourses at the Poona center he led from 1974 to 1981, when it closed for the move to America, but he ceased speaking publicly in March that year.

However, his previous discourses have been transcribed into more than 300 books, mostly in English, followers say. They accept his claim to be "enlightened" — a term even his disciples find difficult to define.

Some describe it as being able to separate body, mind and soul. Whatever it is, followers say Rajneesh was enlightened at the age of 21.

"If you have never been out of the cave, how do you describe it?" asks Swami Krishna Deva, who as David Knapp was a California psychologist before he became a sannyasin four years ago.

"I have a feeling for it, but I don't know," he says.

Krishna Deva has been a leader in the planning effort to establish this new city and is part of the five-member Rajneeshpuram City Council.

Earlier this year, commune members had a lengthy legal battle with the community of Antelope, 18 miles away, which tried to vote itself out of existence rather than face takeover by newly arrived voters from the ranch.

That effort was beaten back by some of the disciples, who lived and voted in Antelope. The Antelope City Council agreed in July to stop fighting the Rajneesh after the Rajneesh convinced them that their members would not drive out the old-time residents and waived a $19,000 judgment against the village.

The key to the movement is surrendering to the love of Rajneesh.

"Some people view surrender as being synonymous with slavery — but it's not," Krishna Deva says.

Rajneesh teaches that Jesus, Buddha, Lao-Tse, the founder of Taoism, and other religious leaders, were enlightened men, such as himself, who taught valuable lessons.

"They were all at the same peak, although they may have come up a different trail," says Krishna Deva.

Rajneesh teaches that God, Nirvana, or whatever one wishes to call it, is attainable within the perfected individual through loss of ego or psychological blocks.

"Go with emptiness in your hand, because that is all. That is all I can offer you and nothing is greater than that," Rajneesh says in a discourse entitled "No Water, No Moon," a discussion on Zen.

The loss of ego is said to be accomplished through meditations and a series of highly developed therapy sessions, such as encounter groups, where the emphasis is on working the individual to a state of catharsis "to let all the garbage out."

Rajneesh, who rejects anti-sexual taboos, was controversial in puritanical India.

"Freedom is the highest value," says Krishna Deva. "It may mean you want to spend 30 years with the same person — it may not."

"We have to let it (anything) happen and be finished with it."

His movement promotes celebration, music, dancing and mutual support through touching and hugging.

Disciples agree that Rajneesh's messages often appear to be contradictory.

"Life is multi-directional," Krishna Deva says. "One day he can talk on one end of something, the other day the opposite."

The movement seems well-endowed, since it has provided Rajneesh with a fleet of Rolls Royce automobiles and is buying a new twin-turboprop airplane as well as spending millions of dollars for facilities on the former worn-out Oregon sheep ranch.

Money is raised through donations, which disciples vow are strictly voluntary, and the sales of Rajneesh's works in the form of videotapes, audiotapes and books.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market kept its recent rally going today in the closing session of a wild week on Wall Street.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 61.65 points in the past five trading days, climbed 8.46 to 847.03 by noon today.

Gainers outnumbered losers by almost 3 to 1 in the broad tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said the market seemed to get a new boost from Congress's passage late Thursday of the tax bill being pushed by President Reagan. There had been considerable suspense over the outcome of the vote.

Traders appeared to regard the measure as at least one step in the direction of narrowing the federal budget deficit.

With all the market's gains over the past week, brokers said concern persisted over Mexico's financial problems. Mexican officials met with bankers in New York today to discuss the situation.

Bank stocks, which fell sharply Thursday as rumors circulated about Mexico's debts, were mixed today. Citicorp rose 1/4 to 24 1/4, but Chase Manhattan fell 3/4 to 32 3/4, and BankAmerica was down 1/2 at 16 1/4.

The NYSE's composite index gained .61 to 63.18. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .93 at 250.87.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 35.93 million shares at noon today, against 32.51 million at the same point Thursday.

Old Wood Lot Has New Title

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — In the old days, folks who wanted a steady supply of wood for the stove planted some trees and called it a wood lot. No more.

The wood lot now is a "biomass energy plantation," according to the state's Energy Research and Development Authority.

The authority announced Thursday that "New York's first biomass energy plantation" will be dedicated at the Reynolds Metals plant in Massena on Aug. 26.

The Reynolds Metals Company, which has a big aluminum plant at Massena, planted about 600 acres worth of fast-growing, hybrid poplars. The trees will be used to produce wood chips, which will be used to fuel heaters for the plant.

No Evidence Of 'Beating'

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP)

— Mecklenburg County Sheriff John Wall says he has found "no factual evidence" to support a man's claim that he was beaten and kicked by deputies in the county jail.

Wall concluded the incident "never occurred" but said he had not interviewed the complainant, Howard Stafford, 35, of Hickory Grove, in connection with his internal probe.

After Wall closed the investigation, Mecklenburg County District Attorney Peter Gilchrist reopened it, saying he would "look into the matter."

Stafford, who said he suffered black eyes and a bruised side when six deputies assaulted him in the shower, declined to comment Wednesday until talking with his lawyer. Stafford was arrested on Aug. 7 on DUI charges.

In a statement Wednesday, Wall described Stafford as an

Serving Animals And The Public

By WINKIE LEE
Pitt County Humane Society
Fourth in a series of four articles

For the past 57 years, Pitt County has been served in various ways by the Humane Society. This group was founded in 1925 and known as the Pitt County SPCA (Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals). In 1972, the group became known as the Humane Society, was incorporated, and received a state charter.

The purpose of the society is to help both animals and the public. It protects animals from cruelty and abuse, keeps the public advised of laws for protection of animals and themselves, works to eliminate overbreeding of dogs and cats and aids in the adoption of pets.

According to Barbara Haddock, vice president-treasurer of the Humane Society, the biggest problem being faced is overpopulation of animals. The society helps combat this problem by conducting a spay-neuter program. Presently, however, limited funds cause the program to be offered only to elderly people who are in great need of financial aid and who wish to own a pet. A more comprehensive spay-neuter effort is one of the two major goals of the society.

The second goal is to have its own animal shelter. The society is conducting a membership drive and working on special projects to earn enough money to make this dream become a reality. Until this happens, the society helps animals get adopted through other methods.

Volunteers provide foster homes for strays who are waiting to be adopted. Normally, an animal remains in a foster home for two weeks before being moved to a permanent residence. With the help of "The Daily Reflector," an Adopt-A-Pet column is printed every Sunday. This area service alerts the public of animals needing homes. Normally, a photograph of one of the potential adoptees heads the column. Most animals advertised in this manner receive good homes. Each week a society volunteer goes to the county pound to choose a few dogs for inclusion in the Adopt-A-Pet column. The dogs which are chosen receive a "stay of execution" for one week, with the hope that they will receive a home.

Volunteers are always needed, and there are many jobs they can do. Most needed are people to provide foster homes. All these people need to give is tender loving care. Necessary food and medicine is paid for by the Humane Society.

Investigators are also needed. These people are responsible for checking into complaints about animal abuse. To be an investigator, certain qualifications must be met. The person needs to be diplomatic and good at working with the public. Investigation is sometimes done in person and sometimes conducted via the telephone. One thing that an investigator needs to remember is that only one out of 10 reported cases involves deliberate abuse. Ninety percent of the time the abuse is done in ignorance or the report proves to be false.

For volunteers who cannot provide foster homes or who would feel uncomfortable being an investigator, there are other options. Help with conducting dog shows, fund raisers and membership drives is always welcomed.

Anyone who wishes to serve as a volunteer or to become a member of the society may contact Barbara Haddock, 752-9922.

Watch That Child Week Is Proclaimed

Greenville Mayor Percy Cox has proclaimed the week of Monday through Saturday, August 22-28 as "Watch That Child Week" in Greenville.

Observation of the child safety campaign is an undertaking of the Travelers Protective Association (TPA), a fraternal, civic benefit society whose purpose is to improve community life by participation in civic affairs.

The Greenville Post of TPA works closely with the Greenville Police Department in the child safety program. One of their projects is providing safety jackets to school patrols in Pitt County. TPA also works with the Police Department by sponsoring bike rodeos to improve bike riding habits.

Mayor Cox's proclamation calls on the public to be more aware of the need to watch out for children as school opens in the city during the coming week.

Mount St. Helens' Eruption Slowing

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP)

— Although glowing rocks were still crashing into the crater of Mount St. Helens today, the most recent eruption of the volcano was slowing, officials said.

Earthquakes and other activity, described as high when the eruption began Wednesday, dropped to a moderate level by Thursday night, and remained moderate early today, said a spokesman at the U.S. Forest Service Volcano Information Center who asked not to be identified.

On Thursday, U.S. Geological Survey crews went into the crater to observe the growth of the lava dome as molten rock pushed inside and oozed out the top.

The activity and pressure broke off chunks of cooled lava the size of houses that fell in steaming avalanches down the dome to the crater floor, said Thom Corcoran, a spokesman at the volcano center.

The cascading boulders sent up showers of sparks, according to observers who flew over the volcano in darkness. Corcoran called it "quite a light show."

A violent, ash-spewing eruption was unlikely because the new lobe was growing freely, he said.

The dome, larger than a sports stadium, last measured 700 feet high, 2,000 feet long and 1,800 feet wide.

The restricted red zone around the mountain was reopened Thursday to loggers and other people with permits. The crater itself remained closed to all but a handful of scientists, Corcoran said.

A violent eruption at Mount St. Helens on May 18, 1980, left 59 people dead or missing, leveled 150 square miles of forest and shot a cloud of ash into the atmosphere that circled the globe.

Since then, there have been seven non-explosive eruptions, five explosive ones and one that was a combination of both.

President Going To Funeral In Phoenix

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP)

— The nation's first family gathered in Phoenix today for a private memorial service for Dr. Loyal Davis, the adoptive father of Nancy Reagan.

Davis, a prominent surgeon who adopted Mrs. Reagan when she was 14, died Thursday of congestive heart failure. He was 86.

Nancy Reagan was at Davis' bedside when he died at Scottsdale Memorial Hospital at 8:40 a.m., said Sheila Tate, the first lady's press secretary.

"She is grieving, but she is holding up well," Ms. Tate told reporters.

Mrs. Reagan's son, Ron, and his wife, Doria, arrived at the hospital a short time after Davis died. Mrs. Reagan's daughter, Patti, had visited Davis on Wednesday night but returned to Los Angeles early Thursday.

Mrs. Reagan telephoned the president in Washington and then went to the Phoenix home of her seriously ill 86-year-old mother, Edith Davis.

Mrs. Reagan had been shuttling between California and Arizona following her father's hospitalization on Aug. 9. It was the third time he had been hospitalized for heart problems since suffering a heart attack in 1978.

President Reagan planned to stay overnight in Phoenix following the memorial service and then leave for California on Saturday to begin a two-week vacation.

Only family members and close friends were invited to the service.

Davis and his wife moved to Phoenix in 1963 after he retired as head of surgery at the medical school of Northwestern University in Chicago.

Davis also was an author whose books included "A Surgeon's Odyssey," "The Fellowship of Surgeons" and "Go in Peace."

In July 1981, he was named an honorary fellow of the Royal College of Surgeons in Ireland. He earlier had been made a fellow of the Royal College of Surgeons in England and Scotland.

Davis married Mrs. Reagan's mother in 1929.

A 'Message' To Spy Ship

SEATTLE (AP) — Having unsuccessfully confronted the U.S. Navy over the Trident submarine, seaborne peace blockaders planned to turn their attention to a Soviet spy ship sitting off the Washington state coast.

Protest spokesman Steve Hirsh said they hope to take motorboats out to the ship to relay a peace message, and they called a meeting tonight to iron out details.

"Everyone wants the same thing — freedom from the threat of being blown up all the time," Hirsh said Thursday.

The spy ship, Gavril Sarychev, has been anchored west of Cape Flattery, near the opening of the Strait of Juan de Fuca, since mid-July.

Authorities believe it is trying to eavesdrop on the electronic "signature" of the Trident submarine USS Ohio in an effort to determine the sub's location while it is on patrol in the Pacific.

Peace blockaders failed Aug. 12 in their attempt to deter the submarine as it cruised to its new home port of Bangor on Hood Canal. The U.S. Coast Guard arrested 14 of the blockaders.

Referring to the Soviet ship, Hirsh said, "We'd like to go out there and make a gesture of peace and communicate to them the fact that we're all human beings and we all have everything to lose in an arms race and nuclear war. We want them to go home and tell their people we all want to live and settle our differences non-violently."

Newly appointed head coach Charlie Harrison will find his club on the road for seven of the first nine games, including the November 27 opener at Duke University.

McEnroe Is Not A Happy Man

MASON, Ohio (AP) — Despite sitting on top of the tennis world, John McEnroe is not a happy man.

"I don't think I've gotten the enjoyment out of the last three years that I think I should have with the results I've had," the 23-year-old New Yorker says.

Ranked No. 1 in the world, the left-hander is going for his fourth consecutive U.S. Open singles crown, beginning Aug. 31. He is the defending champion in the $300,000 ATP Championships here.

His problem, as he sees it, is he is a perfectionist.

"I don't think I have reached my potential," McEnroe said Thursday after defeating Raul Ramirez of Mexico, the tournament's No. 10 seed.

"I want to try to enjoy the game a little more. Every mistake that's made I'm critical of. What people overlook is that I'm as critical of myself as I am of the officials. I'm a perfectionist."

Dixon Page of D.H. Conley High School and Terry Locust of Ayden-Grifton High School will join about 20 sophomores on next season's team.

Page was a Coastal Conference All-Conference selection at first base, hitting for a .330 average. He was named the Best Team Defensive Player and was the winner of the Vernon Cox Memorial Award as the Outstanding Senior Athlete.

Locust was an outstanding outfielder for Ayden-Grifton, champions of the Eastern Carolina Conference. He led the team in hitting with a .456 average and was named to the All-Conference team.

Last year's Lancer team posted a 19-13 record and was third in the Eastern Tarheel Conference under coach Pete Barnes.

McDonald Sparks Browns

CLEVELAND (AP) — When asked about his battle for the Cleveland Browns' quarterbacking job, Paul McDonald acts unconcerned.

But the blood dripping down his face after the Browns' 26-23 victory over the Los Angeles Rams Thursday night told a different story.

McDonald completed 16 of 25 passes for 245 yards, all in the second half, rallying the Browns from a 13-6 halftime deficit.

"This was a patented Browns' finish," said McDonald, a third-year pro hoping to unseat Brian Sipe as Cleveland's starter. "I'm playing well, and I saw coverages and defenses more clearly than I did against Detroit last week."

McDonald threw a 25-yard scoring pass to Dan Fouts with 1:54 left in the game to tie it 23-23, then hit Dino Hall with a 31-yarder to set up Matt Bahr's game-winning 34-yard field goal with three seconds remaining.

Sipe completed seven of 15 passes for 69 yards with two interceptions in the first half.

"Having two like that (Sipe and McDonald) just makes us a better team," said Browns' Coach Sam Rutigliano.

McDonald needed two stitches in his face after the game, the result of a hit by Rams' lineman Jack Youngblood.

"He apologized. He asked if I was all right," McDonald said.

Bahr's winning field goal was his fourth of the night and capped a 51-yard drive that started when Rams' running back Robert Alexander fumbled at Cleveland's 32-yard line.

"I was coming out of a spin when I was hit, and that's when I lost the ball," said Alexander, who returned seven kickoffs for 148 yards.

"We didn't win and I had the fumble, so all I did in the previous times didn't matter."

Bahr connected on field goals of 44 and 47 yards in the first half, but the Rams held a 13-6 halftime edge thanks to 1-yard touchdown runs by Wendell Tyler and Mike Guman.

A 27-yarder by Bahr pulled Cleveland within 13-9 early in the third quarter. Los Angeles' Mike Lansford responded with a 34-yard kick to make it 16-9.

David Green scooted 9 yards on a draw play late in the period as the Browns tied it 16-16, but Green's fumble at his own 1-yard line midway through the final quarter set up the Rams' final touchdown, a 1-yard run by Jewel Thomas.

"Overall, we played some pretty good football," said Rams' Coach Ray Malavasi. "Our first defensive unit made some big plays — like the two interceptions — and we moved the ball well offensively."

The Rams' starting quarterback, Bert Jones, completed six of eight first-half passes for 73 yards. Vince Ferragamo, returning to Los Angeles from the Canadian Football League, played the second half and hit on eight of 17 passes for 87 yards.

The Browns' victory kicked off the second full week of NFL exhibition play.

Tonight, New England will be at Philadelphia, while Cincinnati travels to Milwaukee to take on the Green Bay Packers.

Saturday's games have Chicago at Buffalo, Dallas at San Francisco, Kansas City at New Orleans, Miami at Detroit, Pittsburgh at the New York Giants, St. Louis at San Francisco, Seattle at Minnesota, Washington at Tampa Bay and Atlanta vs. Baltimore at Tempe, Ariz.

The New York Jets and the Houston Oilers round out the schedule with a game Sunday afternoon at the Houston Astrodome.

In off-the-field action Thursday, the Minnesota Vikings completed a trade for Philadelphia Eagles defensive tackle Charlie Johnson.

Vikings Coach Bud Grant had announced that the Vikings had traded a high 1983 draft choice for Johnson. But General Manager Mike Lynn said later that the deal had not been consummated.

Lynn said the deal was contingent on Johnson agreeing to report to the Vikings and he had not been notified of the proposed trade when Grant made the announcement. But Johnson was contacted later and he agreed to the trade.

Johnson had not been in the Eagles' training camp because of a disagreement with Philadelphia Coach Dick Vermeil over the intensity of practice sessions. Johnson maintained the rugged workout wears out players before the games and could shorten his playing career.

The Detroit Lions said that they had replied to a request by holdout running back Billy Sims to renegotiate his contract despite a July 15 deadline.

Sims' lawyer, Gerald Tockman, said he had not received the response.

The Lions have said they cannot talk with Sims about changes in his contract because July 15 was the expiration of the general operating agreement between the players association and league owners. Sims claims the club broke a verbal commitment by General Manager Russ Thomas to renegotiate Sims' contract for 1983, the option year of the pact.

Safety Ken Greene ended a holdout when he signed a one-year contract with the St. Louis Cardinals. Greene was the Cards' top tackler and interceptor in 1981.

Miami cut one placekicker, Jorge Portela, and signed another, Jim Asmus. Starter Uwe von Schamann is recuperating from colitis, and may not be ready for the Dolphins' regular-season opener next month.

Pittsburgh released veteran place-kicker Tom Birney and rookie defensive end Al Hughes.

Overton In Another Win

Greenville's Kristi Overton added another trophy to her growing list yesterday, winning the U.S. National Water Skiing Championship Tournament's junior division. The competition was held at DuQuoin, Ill.

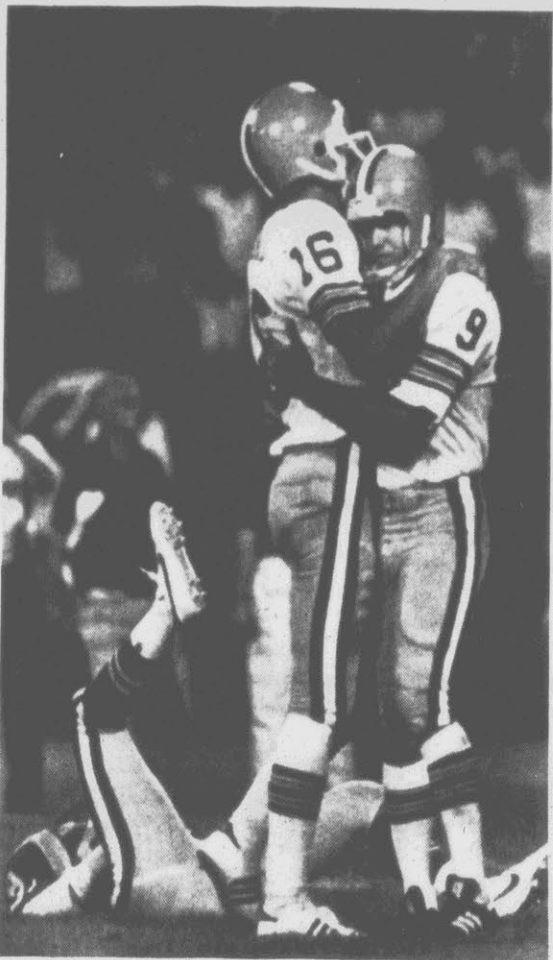

The 12-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Parker Overton of Greenville.

Kristi took first place in the overall competition, first in the slalom with two buoys and 28 feet off line, and first in trick skiing with a 5,670 point run. She also had a jump of 82 feet, placing her sixth in jump skiing.

Her finish in the tournament left her with top ranking in the junior division nationally. She had been awarded a $500 scholarship for the wins.

Kristi is featured in an article to appear in the Accent on Living section of Sunday's "Daily Reflector."

Pirates Put On The Pads Today

East Carolina University's Pirates began heavy this morning, with a three-day practice schedule now underway.

The Pirates worked at 10 a.m., and were to return to the field at 4 p.m. and again at 8 p.m. This scheduled will be repeated on Saturday and Monday. Registration for the fall session is Tuesday and Wednesday and classes begin on Thursday for ECU students.

Coach Ed Emory is still hunting for someone to break out of the pack as a punter, while things are looking good at quarterback and receiver. Now that pads have gone on, the coach feels that things will begin to sort themselves out. He also anticipates a lot of competition for starting spots on the team.

Sunday will be observed as picture day for the Pirates. From 4 to 6 p.m., the Pirates will be in Ficklen Stadium, and the public is invited to bring cameras for pictures as the players will be available for these and autographs.

Colleges Set To Begin New Race

By The Associated Press
Will there be another surprise national champion this fall, like Clemson a year ago, or will one of the traditional powers reclaim the college football throne?

"There have been only eight repeat national champions in the AP poll since they have been doing it (1936), so it is obviously difficult to win it a second time in a row," says Clemson Coach Danny Ford. "Everyone thought it was impossible for us to win it a first time, but we did."

It's not impossible for Clemson to repeat, but the Tigers must first beat out North Carolina, the preseason favorite in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

North Carolina has tailback Kelvin Bryant and quarterback Rod Elkins operating behind a stout offensive led by guards David Drechsler and Ron Spruill. Tackle William Fuller heads the defense. Clemson returns 13 starters, including quarterback Homer Jordan and All-American free safety Terry Kinard.

However, both teams will be tested right off the bat in rugged road openers. Clemson visits Georgia, the 1980 national champion, while North Carolina is at Pitt, one of the 1982 favorites.

Elsewhere, much of the headlines are centered on Pitt and Penn State in the East; Alabama, Florida, Georgia and Mississippi State in the Southeastern Conference; Miami of Florida among the Southern independents; Ohio State, Michigan and Illinois in the Big Ten; Notre Dame among the Midwest independents; Nebraska and Oklahoma in the Big Eight;

Southern Methodist, Arkansas and Texas in the Southwest Conference; Washington and Southern California in the Pacific-10 and Brigham Young, Wyoming and Hawaii in the Western Athletic Conference.

Without a bruiser at fullback and an offensive line that must be restructured, Joe Paterno is changing Penn State's image from a grind-it-out to a big-play team. The skill people include quarterback Todd Blackledge, running back Curt Warner and wide receiver Kenny Jackson.

Pitt also has plenty of firepower in quarterback Dan Marino, wideouts Julius Dawkins and Dwight Collins and running back Bryan Thomas behind a superb pair of offensive tackles in Jimbo Covert and Bill Fralic.

Once again, the top names in the SEC are Alabama Coach Paul "Bear" Bryant and Georgia tailback Herschel Walker. Last year, Bryant became college football's winningest coach with 315 victories and he is expected to add a lot more this season.

Alabama and Georgia don't meet during the regular season. Florida has never won the SEC title, but the Gators are getting a lot of support and their Nov. 6 meeting with Georgia will be crucial.

Walker makes Georgia a power and he will be joined by a super freshmen class. Miami lost heavily to graduation, but quarterback Jim Kelly makes the Hurricanes a threat.

In the Big Ten, Iowa ended the Michigan-Ohio State domination by going to the Rose Bowl. The Hawkeyes must

Larry Gura Captures His 15th Victory

By The Associated Press
Larry Gura didn't take the easy road to become the first 15-game winner in the American League this season.

The box score of the White Sox-Royals game looks routine enough, with Gura allowing five hits in seven shutout innings. But what the record books won't show is that the Kansas City left-hander pitched almost the entire game with a groin muscle pull.

Royals Manager Dick Howser nervously watched the veteran left-hander work in pain for seven innings before calling on Dan Quisenberry to get the last two outs of Kansas City's 3-0 victory Thursday night.

"I could see him grimace on some pitches," Howser said. "He wanted to stay in the game, but we can't afford to lose him. You don't want to take a chance injuring his arm because he was changing his style."

Gura, 15-8, who hasn't allowed a run in his last 17 innings of pitching, outdueled LaMarr Hoyt, who also had 14 victories going into the game.

"I really should have come out in the second, but I wanted to pitch," Gura said. "I couldn't push off and it was affecting me."

Hoyt, 14-11, was nicked for single runs in the second, fourth and seventh as the White Sox, who have rallied in the past month to get in the AL West race, lost their third straight game.

Doubles got the Royals started in each of those innings.

Willie Aikens led off the second with a double and came around on groundouts by Jerry Martin and Frank White. Martin doubled in the fourth and scored on a single by White, who led off the seventh with another two-base hit and went to third when John Wathan singled to chase Hoyt.

Salome Barojas almost got out of the jam, coaxing a double play grounder from Greg Pryor, while White held at third. Second baseman Tony Bernazard then made a good play on Willie Wilson's sharp grounder, but threw wildly to first, allowing White to score on what was ruled an infield hit.

"He pitched good enough to give us a chance to win it," White Sox Manager Tony LaRussa said of Hoyt. "The other guy just pitched better. We had our chances throughout the game. We had guys on second base with less than two outs a couple of times and couldn't score."

Brewers 10, A's 6

Fred Stanley hit his first homer in three years for Oakland, but Milwaukee bats were hot again as the Brewers snapped a four-game losing streak to increase their East Division lead to four games.

Ben Oglivie's three-run homer gave Milwaukee a 7-2 lead as it scored four unearned runs in the fifth inning. Paul Molitor contributed four hits, scored three runs and knocked in two.

Pete Vuckovich, 14-4, got the victory despite allowing nine hits, including six for extra bases, in six innings. Matt Keough, 10-16, took the loss but only three of the eight runs he allowed were earned.

Rickey Henderson of the A's stole his 111th base of the season, pulling to within seven of Lou Brock's major league record. Tony Armas hit his 20th homer for Oakland.

Twins 9, Orioles 3
Tom Brunansky, Gary Ward and Gary Gaetti slugged homers as Minnesota started the game with six straight hits to blister Baltimore.

The Twins took a 6-0 first-inning lead with the homers, all of which carried over 400 feet in the Minneapolis Metrodome.

Bobby Castillo, 7-9, had a four-hitter going into the ninth inning, but he gave up a two-run homer to Eddie Murray and a solo shot to John Lowenstein to ruin the shutout bid. He also struck out a career-high 10 batters.

Loser Scott McGregor, 12-12, failed to retire a batter in the first, giving up the first five runs.

Angels 8, Red Sox 5

California scored five runs after two were out in the seventh inning to beat Boston and stay in sole possession of first place in the West, one game ahead of the Royals.

Don Baylor singled in the go-ahead run in the seventh, which started with the Red Sox ahead 5-3.

The Angels loaded the bases with two out off loser Mark Clear, 9-6, before Fred Lynn greeted reliever Tom Burgmeier with a two-run single to tie the score.

Baylor followed with his RBI single and the Angels added two more runs when third baseman Carney Lansford misplayed Ron Jackson's grounder, enabling Lynn to score, and Tim Lincecum singled to drive in Baylor.

Bruce Kison, 7-4, blanked Boston on three hits after relieving Angels starter Steve Renko with none out in the fourth inning.

Kuhn Unhappy No Resolution

SAN DIEGO (AP) — He stood on the terrace of his hotel suite, gazing across San Diego Bay and watching the boats pass. And the hours passed slowly for Bowie Kuhn as baseball's owners labored 12 stories below on a compromise to save his job as commissioner of America's game.

"I wasn't thinking of jumping, I assure you," Kuhn said. "I had sort of a sense of amused wonderment at what was going on below," he said. "I was sad because nothing was resolved. It was not a very splendid day for baseball."

Two days of frustrating, confusing meetings on Tuesday and Wednesday failed to produce the compromise between Kuhn's supporters and antagonists. A vote on Kuhn's re-election was put off until Nov. 1.

"There was a lot of laughter up here, too," said Kuhn, who has ruled over major league baseball for the past 14 years. "I wasn't alone too much. People drifted in and out."

"My wife (Luisa) was here, too. She doesn't always travel with me but this was a critical time. It's times like these that you need your wife with you."

As those agonizing hours dragged on, Kuhn received supportive calls from his mother and his children.

"There was a distinctively family side to this," Kuhn said. "The children called to say hello and my 84-year-old mother called. Once a woman turns 80, it's all right to mention her age."

Kuhn's contract expires Aug. 1, 1983 but owners must vote on re-election at least six months before that time.

Under the age-old rules of baseball, Kuhn needs a three-quarters majority in each league to keep his job. Four votes in the National League or five in the American could block re-election.

National League opponents appear to have the four votes they seek, but backers — who comprise the great majority of owners — have maneuvered to block a vote in an effort to reach a compromise that would save Kuhn's job.

That's where it becomes complicated. At the center of the impasse seems to be the powers of a proposed super administrator to handle baseball's business. The administrator has been assigned the acronym cooba (Chief Operating Officer of Business Affairs). Chief opponents want cooba on a ground equal to or higher than the commissioner. Kuhn and his supporters refuse to accept such a situation.

"I think I'm equipped to handle to business problems of baseball. However, if we can enhance our ability by bringing in new personnel, I'm for that," Kuhn said.

"I think we can find a fellow to help maximize our business operation, and I'm sure I can work with such a person," Kuhn said.

While refusing to be specific about the type of compromise he could accept, Kuhn says the primary concern of baseball and its commissioner must be to preserve the game's integrity.

"I want to be remembered for two things," Kuhn said. "I want it to be remembered that I was commissioner during a time of tremendous growth in the popularity of baseball, and that it was a time in which no one could question the integrity of the game."

"We may bewilder the public by the way we behave sometimes, but there never has been a doubt of the game's integrity," Kuhn said.

When Kuhn replaced Gen. William Eckert as commissioner on Feb. 4, 1969, the game was mired in an attempt to restructure. There was a grand plan to combine league offices, streamline the game's bureaucracy and bring baseball into the second half of the 20th century.

Restructuring failed then, but every indication is that it will succeed this time.

"Not enough people perceived baseball to have the problems warranting that kind of a change then," Kuhn said. "Now everyone can perceive them. That's the big difference."

Another big change in the office has come in the man himself.

"You can't be commissioner for 14 years and not change, for better or for worse," Kuhn said. "I hope I've changed for the better. I've become more philosophical."

"You've got to develop a sense of humor. You have to be able to stand back and laugh. That's invaluable, or you're apt to go slightly barmy."

This has not been Kuhn's first battle for office. In 1975, then-Oakland A's owner Charlie O. Finley led a "dump Bowie" campaign that nearly succeeded. This time, the campaign has been led by owners Nelson Doubleday, of the New York Mets, John McMullen of the Houston Astros and August Busch of the St. Louis Cardinals. Atlanta Braves owner Ted Turner joined the triumvirate during the past week's meetings.

"There was a day when Charlie Finley would say those nasty things about me, and I'd get upset," Kuhn said of the man who once called him "the village idiot."

"Now, I feel more of a sense of pity and sorrow for him. Finley was mean and vicious. These men (Doubleday and company) are not. This is a matter of honest disagreement."

"I've spent a lot of time with Nelson. I think I can call John McMullen my friend. Ted Turner and I have gotten along fine, even though I suspended him once. I can pick up a phone and call Turner. I didn't pick up the phone and call Charlie Finley very often. It would have been a waste of time."

In 2½ months, baseball's owners will try once again to resolve Kuhn's fate. If no compromise can be reached, Kuhn says he will force a vote rather than resign.

"I can't see Bowie Kuhn going out without a vote," the commissioner said. "Yes, I think there will have to be a vote."

Kuhn sat on the terrace of his hotel suite, looking at an old newspaper clipping that had been handed to him. It was dated Feb. 4, 1969, and it chronicled his succession to baseball's throneroom.

More Players, Less Experience Leave Bullet Coach Uncertain

(Editor's note: This is the first in a series of stories about prospects of high school football teams in the Tri-County area.)

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
JAMESVILLE — "We're very inexperienced," Coach Jerry Godley of Jamesville High School says. "We've got only four seniors on the team."

However, Jamesville's prospects are brightened by the fact that it has more numbers than it's had in some time, despite inexperience.

"I think we can be up there around third place," Godley said of his feeling about the Tobacco Belt 1-A Conference race. And he's hopeful that with a few surprises, the Bullets might even be able to try and claim one of the league's two playoff spots.

The Bullets have 29 players out right now. "That don't sound like many, but for a 1-A school, it's a large number," Godley said.

Jamesville's offensive backfield, which runs mostly from the I formation, has some experience — but right now part of it is missing. Quarterback Richie Ange, who handled the duties there last year, is sidelined with a strained neck muscle. "He'll miss our scrimmage (tonight) with Plymouth, but we expect to have him back next week," Godley said.

That would have him ready for next Friday night's opener at Belhaven, in a non-conference meeting of the two Tobacco Belt teams.

"He's a good athlete who started six games for us last year," the coach pointed out. In the meantime, Greg Hardison, Ange's backup, is holding down the spot although he will probably move out to the split end position when Ange returns.

Matthew Moore looks like a pretty sure bet for tailback. In the team's Red and White game, played last week, Moore ran for 177 yards. "He didn't carry the ball that much really," Godley said. "He's probably going to be the starter at tailback."

At the fullback slot is Carlton Moore, who played there last year. The 190-pounder is a good runner and a good blocker, according to Godley.

"Our main problem will be in the line," Godley said. "That's where we're going to find out what kind of season we're going to have. We probably will be starting some freshmen here — on both sides of the ball actually in the line."

Returning however, are two stalwarts in the line, Stanley Roberts and Kenny Moore.

"Roberts is a good athlete who's played a lot of positions. We moved him into the backfield during the season last year and he did a great job for us, but we've put him back at tackle this year. He's small, but quick and a good blocker."

Moore, 6-3, 221, is the biggest of the Bullets, but Godley notes he needs to improve. "He's a slow starter. He always seems to be that way, starting slow and just getting better and better."

One of the newcomers who has made an impression on the coaching staff already is Tracy Peele. A sophomore out for the first time, the 6-1, 165-pounder is a likely starter at the flanker spot. Freshman David Biggs looks like he might have nailed down the starting berth at tight end, while the split end position could go to one of several players.

"We're really still up in the air here," Godley said of split end. A newcomer, Neil Lilley, could start here, or Hardison could return to this spot he played last year.

In the interior line, Kiki Ellin and Thyron Williams appear to be the best bets at the guards with freshman Pee Wee Groover at center.

"We have some big freshmen who could help us later in the season once they learn what they're supposed to do," Godley said. One of those likely to play a role in the line is 190-pounder Mitchell Reason.

On defense Jamesville will probably use several different lineups. "We're going to use the 5-2 most of the time, with some 5-3. We'll probably try some 4-4 too, since a lot of the other teams have been successful with it."

Roberts and Moore will probably do double duty at the tackles with Williams at nose guard. Ellin or Whit Brown will be at one end, with freshman Chris Jones likely at the other end.

All-Conference Carlton Rodgers returns at one of the lineback spots. "He's a hitter," Godley says. Biggs could end up at another spot behind the line, but Lilley and Jeff Armstrong are also candidates there.

The secondary returns several veterans, including Ange, Matthew Moore and Hardison. Terry Perry and Kevin Perry could also see duty here.

Godley said that while the Bullets have not worked on their kicking game as yet, he expects Ange to continue to do the punting. Last year, he received honorable mention on the all-conference team as a punter. While Kenny Moore did the kickoffs last year, Ange is likely to do it this year. "I'd rather have Moore going down the field to make tackles," Godley said.

Godley looks at the Tobacco Belt race as one between Belhaven and Bath. "Belhaven should be tough again, and Bath has Bubba (Waters). Bath lost some of its line, however, and it's going to be interesting to see how Bubba runs this year."

"I think we can come in somewhere around third," he said. "Then, if we can pull off a few surprises, we could do better. I really don't see anyone else as a challenger for the top unless it might be Chocowinity."

Jamesville will find out early what its chances might be with its scrimmage against 3-A Plymouth tonight and its non-conference opener with Belhaven next week.

Jamesville will open its home season on September 3 against Columbia.

Guess What? Braves Finally Win One

By The Associated Press

Pascual Perez got lost trying to drive his way to the ballpark, but Phil Niekro was able to put the Atlanta Braves back on the right track.

"I never expected to pitch tonight," said Niekro after filling in for the AWOL Perez and pitching the Braves to a 5-4 victory over the Montreal Expos Thursday night. "I felt a little more tired than I usually do — but sometimes when they catch you off-guard, it's good."

Niekro was thrown into the breach when Perez, a relative newcomer to Atlanta, got lost when he rented a car and drove himself to Atlanta Stadium for the first time. He finally arrived in the first inning, and got slapped with a $100 fine for his tardiness.

"Sometimes you've got to get lost to find yourself," said Atlanta first baseman Bob Watson, obviously alluding to the Braves' recent losing streak more than Perez's logistical problems.

Before Thursday night, the Braves had lost 19 of their last 21 games, and dropped into second place in the NL West after losing a seemingly insurmountable 9-game lead in less than three weeks.

Claudell Washington was the hitting hero for Atlanta, smashing a two-run homer and then a run-scoring single in the seventh for the winning run.

The Braves were losing 4-3 when they rallied to win with two runs in the seventh off reliever Woodie Fryman, 7-3, on a sacrifice fly by Jerry Royster and Washington's RBI single. Niekro, 11-3, allowed only three hits while pitching seven innings and Gene Garber worked the final two innings to gain his 21st save.

Cubs 8, Dodgers 2
Bill Buckner whacked four hits, including a double and a homer, and Jay Johnstone also homered, leading a 17-hit Chicago attack as the Cubs pounded Los Angeles.

Ferguson Jenkins, 8-13, checked the NL West-leading Dodgers on four hits, walked three and struck out four in eight innings in gaining the 272nd victory of his major league career. Dick Tidrow pitched the ninth inning for the Cubs, allowing two hits.

Bob Welch, 14-8, who had won his previous five games, was the loser.

"I'm always motivated when it comes to hitting," said Buckner, brushing off questions about trying harder against his former teammates.

Pirates 6, Giants 1
Jason Thompson slammed two singles and drove in two runs and John Candelaria scattered seven hits in seven innings as Pittsburgh defeated San Francisco. Tony Pena also hit a solo homer for the Pirates, his seventh, in the sixth inning.

Candelaria, 10-5, struck out five and walked two in seven innings before he was removed because of a blister on his left foot. Loser Rich Gale, 6-12, lasted only four innings, giving up four of the Pirates' five runs and seven hits.

Astros 7, Phillies 6

Denny Walling's RBI single with one out in the 11th inning paced Houston to a comeback victory over Philadelphia. Danny Heep drew a walk from loser Sid Monge, 5-1, to lead off the 11th. Heep was sacrificed to second by Dickie Thon, setting the stage for Walling's game-winner.

Dave Smith, 2-4, pitched one-hit relief over the final three innings for the win.

The Astros had rallied from a 6-2 deficit to tie the score with three runs in the fifth and one in the eighth off Steve Carlton, who pitched 10 innings for the Phillies.

Padres 4, Cardinals 3

St. Louis right fielder George Hendrick's two-base error opened the gates for a three-run third inning and rookie left-hander Dave Dravecky scattered seven hits in 8 1-3 innings as San Diego beat the Cardinals.

Dravecky, 4-1, gave up three runs, including Gene Tenace's two-run homer in the ninth, before getting relief from Luis DeLeon, who gained his 11th save.

Loser John Stuper, 5-3, hurt his own cause by walking Tim Flannery and Tony Gwynn around a sacrifice bunt by Dravecky in the third.

Garry Templeton then hit a low liner to right for a single which eluded Hendrick, who tried for a shoe-string catch. Gwynn scored and Templeton, who reached third, then scored on Gene Tenace's passed ball to make it 3-0.

Reds 3, Mets 1

Ron Oester's two-run homer in the 10th inning lifted Cincinnati over New York and extended the Reds' winning streak to four games, their longest of the season.

The Reds had rallied with two out in the ninth to tie the score 1-1 on Larry Biittner's RBI single. Mike Vail led off the 10th with a double off reliever Tom Hausman, 1-1, who came on for starter Craig Swan. Oester then followed with his fourth homer, into the right-field stands at Riverfront Stadium.

In the ninth, the Reds had tied the game on Larry Biittner's RBI single.

Jim Kern, 3-5, pitched the 10th inning in relief of Bruce Berenyi for the victory.

Braxton In Putt Win

Ken Braxton shot a nine under par 63 to win his first amateur tournament of the season Thursday night at the Greenville Putt-Putt.

Braxton shot a one-round, seven under 29 in the second half of the tourney to move from third to the top spot. After regulation play had ended Braxton was tied with Jimmy Silverthorne. The win was then decided in a sudden death playoff.

Third place went to Robbie Moye, who finished the tournament with a 67. Lanny Morris and Randy Edwards tied for fourth with 68, with Morris taking fourth when Edwards did not show for the playoff.

The Thursday night tournaments are open for all amateurs, regardless of ability.

By MIKE SILVERMAN
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — William Inge's modest little comedy "Bus Stop" opened on Broadway in 1955 and a year later its film version provided a vehicle for the rising star of Marilyn Monroe.

There its history might have ended, were it not for the voracious appetite of cable television. Old movies fill up just so much air time, and cable is increasingly on the lookout for entertainment properties to recycle.

So it is that a new production of "Bus Stop," starring Margot Kidder, comes to Home Box Office this Sunday night, from 9-11 p.m. EDT. It will be repeated four times in the following 10 days.

The Canadian actress, known to moviegoers mainly as Lois Lane in "Superman" and "Superman II," is clearly delighted at finding a more challenging role than the Man from Krypton's love interest.

Miss Kidder shines as Cherie, the girl from the Ozarks who calls herself a "chanteuse" but who entertains at the Blue Dragon, a disreputable nightclub near the Kansas City Stockyards.

She is one of eight characters whose lives change for better or worse during a night when they are stranded by a snowstorm at a lunchroom on the bus route between Kansas City and Topeka.

Cherie is trying, not very hard, to run away from Bo Decker, a virginal Montana cowboy who came to Kansas City for the rodeo, wandered into the Blue Dragon, and was instantly smitten. After one night of love, he wants to get hitched for life, but she regards him as one more casual affair and is skeptical when he literally carries her onto the bus bound for home.

Bo, portrayed by Tim Matheson of "Animal House" fame, hides his tender feelings under a he-man bravado. Cherie lacks the self-respect to believe anyone could really love her. How the two work out their relationship provides the dominant strand of Inge's plot.

Two other couples form different sorts of romantic entanglements during the long night. Grace, the 40-ish manager of the restaurant, dallies in her upstairs apartment with Carl, the bus driver whose previous visits have been limited to 20-minute stops. Grace's assistant, an impressionable high school girl named Elma, comes close to being seduced by a middle-aged bus passenger who quotes Shakespeare and purports to be a professor, but who turns out to be a drunk with a penchant for young girls.

Rounding out the cast are a kind-hearted sheriff who literally beats some sense into Bo, and Bo's ranch foreman and surrogate father, Virgil.

Several faces in the excellent cast will be familiar to TV viewers, especially Pat Hingle as the professor, Joyce van Patten as Grace, and Claude Akins, once the title character in "The Misadventures of Sheriff Lobo," and still playing a lawman here.

Matheson is a bit strident and shouts too much in his early scenes when Bo is trying to muscle his way into Cherie's affections, but he and Miss Kidder are extremely effective in the moving closing moments when the two finally discover each other.

The production is billed as Margot Kidder's stage debut, but it's a questionable claim. It was performed before an audience at the Garrison Theater in Claremont, Calif. — using the original set designs by the late Boris Aronson — but only so it could be videotaped for HBO.

In sum, "Bus Stop," while hardly a classic of the American theater, has its moments of genuine feeling, and HBO has done it justice.

Life As It's Lived

The Giveaway Can Dupe Most Cautious Women

By GAIL MICHAELS
The two kinds of pests that have been bugging me the most this month are the flies that congregate in my garage seeking entrance to my kitchen and the door-to-door salesman. Of the two, the salesman bothers me more. At least I can tell myself that the flies form a vital link in the food chain. I'm not sure what positive function the average door-to-door salesman performs.

They certainly aren't marketing products that most people need. If they were, they could stand outside the door, state their purpose, and leave immediately if the homeowners expressed no interest. The few salesmen who do that have my blessing. It's the ones who resort to devious means to hawk their wares that make me wish I had swatters more suited to their size.

The newest means of duping the poor housewife is the giveaway. I had not succumbed to the chicanery of a door-to-door salesman since a teen-aged Bible salesman had managed to play upon my sympathies, stealing an hour of my time to show me the full-color illustrations of Noah and Jezebel that supposedly made reading "come alive." I didn't buy anything. I have never bought anything door-to-door with the exception of light bulbs, brooms, Girl Scout cookies, jamboree tickets and doughnuts to finance the prom.

But when a young man approached me as I was getting ready to pull out of my driveway, I temporarily misplaced my defenses. Perhaps it was the unfamiliarity of the setting. Anyway, he offered to let me sign up for a chance at $100 of free groceries as part of a promotion for a new company in the area, and after examining his card which described a German conglomerate marketing a number of technologically advanced products, like computers, I succumbed. I asked only that my name not appear on a mailing list, and he assured me that it wouldn't.

Several days later I got a call from a company representative. "You have been chosen as a finalist for the grocery drawing you signed up for," she said. "And that qualifies you for a free gift worth up to $30. All we ask is that when we deliver the gift, you let our salesman demonstrate our unique carpet dry-cleaning system so that you can keep us in mind at some later date if you should decide you need our services."

I didn't want their free gift. By this time I didn't even want the groceries. But for some obscure reason known only to the people who designed this particular marketing technique, I felt committed by my earlier signature. I reluctantly agreed to a demonstration of what I assumed to be some kind of rental system.

The product, however, was a vacuum cleaner. The same young man who had signed me up for the groceries appeared the next day in a nylon net shirt and plaid pants. He handed me the gift, 1,000 green stamps, and began what turned out to be a three-hour demonstration.

First, he showed me the unique edge-cleaning feature by vacuuming alongside my hearth. "Look at all this grit!" he exclaimed as he showed me the sand from the bricks. "Grit will ruin your carpet in no time."

Unable to visualize a heavy traffic pattern beside the hearth, I remained unimpressed. So he ran my old Hoover and vacuumed after it with his machine, picking up a total of three pieces of grit. Anxious to besmirch the reputation of my cleaning aids in some other fashion, he then insisted upon cleaning my freshly mopped kitchen floor with the electric broom attachment. He managed to remove two germy cat hairs from which, if I could believe him, my family could easily contract something like the plague.

He had better luck on my upholstery. It was just full of unhealthy grime. From there he went to my mattress. "Just look at that," he groaned. "Do you know what that is? That's dead skin. You can get a staph infection from stuff like that."

Ridding my family of this ghastly detritus would cost me only $669. But I firmly refused the 12- and 18-month-financing plans on the grounds that I simply could not afford another monthly payment.

He then called his boss to let him know where he was. "It's company procedure," he told me. "Mrs. Michaels," he said excitedly a few minutes into the phone call, "my boss just told me that you would qualify for a new financing plan that I didn't even know about! Isn't that wonderful? Only $70 and $31 a month for 24 months. Now that wouldn't take the food out of your family's mouth, would it?"

"I couldn't believe he thought I'd swallow that," I told Phillip that evening. "What did he take me for? A complete fool?"

"Probably," Phillip said. "After all, you let him in."

Camp Day— Fun For Chronically Ill Children

Eddie rode a horse. Leonard made a puppet. Wendy and Angel clogged together. Latonia petted a rabbit. Lucille Harrell assisted. And Pat Jordan learned more about a subject with which she's all too familiar — cancer and how it affects her daughter Wendy's life and that of their family.

Each gained from the Camp Day for Children with Cancer and Blood

Disorders held at Elm Street Park here Wednesday by the department of pediatrics, hematology/oncology section, of the East Carolina University School of Medicine and the recreation therapy and patient and family services departments of Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

"Leonard's been talking about this day for weeks. I couldn't let him miss it," Blanche Gordon said in explaining why she drove her son from their home in Ahoskie to be here. "It's been worth it, too. We've both had a lot of fun."

Camp Day began Wednesday morning with rides for all who would on Double Scooper, a buckskin quarter horse owned by pediatric nurse Karen Parker and her husband Bob Parker. Then there was puppet-making and other art for the children while pediatric oncologist Dr. Tate Holbrook and physician's assistant Linda Willis led a parents' workshop about protocols and chemotherapy for the cancer patient. Pediatric psychologist Dr. Jarrett Barnhill also shared with the parents and older siblings of the children about emotional impact of chronic illness on a child.

Volunteer Grian Solomon's pet rabbit, Grace, was a welcomed visitor at the end of the children's art session.

Then just before a lunchtime pizza feast, there was clogging led by Grian Solomon, then library time, games, nature crafts, and swimming for the children, while the parents were led by pediatric social workers Sheila Bunch and Rhonda Stanley in looking at ways to handle the stress that chronic illness of a family member places on the family.

The day was ended with a sharing time — "campfire time without the campfire," recreational therapist Nancy Nobles termed it.

"When we first started looking at holding a camp for our oncology-hematology patients," Dr. Holbrook said, "we were thinking in terms of several days duration. Then we decided to start with just one day and do it well, with the full intention of expanding to more days, more activities next year. We may even extend it to children with other diagnoses and the chronic illness and divide up into several age groups. Our patients have ranged from three weeks to 20 years, so varied activities would be a good idea."

This year's camp drew from throughout eastern North Carolina, the area that the pediatric oncology/hematology section of the pediatric department of the ECU Medical School serves. Participants were from Williamston, Washington, Tarboro, Windsor and New Bern, as well as the Greenville area.

Among the special guests were families of pediatric oncology-hematology patients who have died. Lucille Harrell and Teresa Harrell, mother and sister of the late Kevin Harrell of the Mount Pleasant community of Pitt County, were there. "I love these people," Mrs. Harrell said. "If they wouldn't let me be a part of them, I'd have lost another part of my family. I go to the clinic on Mondays when I can and see the other children and their parents. I do what I can to assure them. I got through Kevin's illness and they can get through their children's, too. It isn't easy, but we all can do what we have to do."

"Mrs. Harrell contributes to everyone here," Dr. Holbrook said. "And she helps herself with her own grief by reaching out to others as she does."

"Mutual support for the families by other families is what we hope to foster with activities like this camp day. We have people come to Greenville from some distances and the parents of patients here take them in for meals and overnight visits."

When one child goes away for special treatment or when one dies, the others provide marvelous support. The serious illnesses of their own children have provided them experiences that make them able to understand and relate to each other as no one else can relate to them."

"The community is generous and supportive, too," Mrs. Nobles said. "Lunch, refreshments, supplies — everything we used for Camp Day was given to us, except the liability insurance coverage. And even part of that was donated."

Eddie Andrews of Greenville said his Wednesday morning horseback ride was his first ever. Assisting him is P.D. Ennis, a volunteer.

Puppets and a puppet theater were made by the campers and they also printed their t-shirt logos themselves.

Grace the Rabbit enjoyed the attention of the Camp Day participants.

Collegians Face Higher Tuition

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — College students are returning to campuses in North Carolina to find increased tuition and housing charges, and students with college loans are still uncertain how much aid, if any, they will get this year.

Students may be forced to find part-time jobs to help pay their way through as well as resorting to other cost-cutting measures such as eating more of their meals on campus in an effort to make ends meet.

"It's the worst I've seen in five years," says George Harpster, acting housing director at the University of North Carolina.

At the same time that college costs are rising, many students dependent on financial aid are encountering delays in getting their benefits. Others are still not sure how much money they will receive because changing federal regulations slowed the processing of their applications, officials say.

There have been cutbacks in at least two Social Security aid-to-student programs and in government and private loan programs, officials say.

"What it's doing is confusing us," says UNC-Charlotte information director Ken Sanford. "Many of our students will enroll without knowing if they have a loan, or how much, or without a check."

Cost increases at most of the state's colleges and universities will keep pace with the nation's 11 percent inflation rate. Duke University's tuition is going up 15 percent, its largest boost ever, to $6,210 a year.

The 16 University of North Carolina campuses continued to offer the lowest tuition bills.

Undergraduate tuition at N.C. State University and the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill is $436 a year for in-state residents.

Estimates of tuition, room and board range from $9,140 a year at Duke to $2,672 a year for in-state residents at N.C. State.

Inquiries from students to colleges show these trends:

Inexpensive dorm rooms are in demand.

At Appalachian State University in Boone, 1,500 students are on a waiting list for 4,335 spaces already promised. Officials will assign three students to rooms designed for two; lobbies, study areas and conference rooms will be converted to bar-rack-type housing.

At UNC, where the average dorm cost is $377 a semester, including utilities, there are 8,200 requests for 6,800 spaces.

Students will temporarily live three to a room, or in converted study areas. Harpster says those doing so will get a 20 discount.

Harpster said demand for meal tickets is up because it's cheaper to eat on campus than in restaurants.

Aid programs have been cut.

A Tree Framed Water View

STURDY HORIZONTAL BRANCHES . . . of wind-twisted live oak trees in the sand dune high point of Elizabethan Gardens at the Overlook Terrace frame the waters of Roanoke Sound, with the Outer Banks in the distance. This is believed to be the spot where Sir Richard Grenville first set foot on Roanoke Island.

Roanoke Island's Elizabethan Gardens, Where Beauty And Tranquility Reign

Roanoke Island, historic land of the beginning of English settlements in America, is an Eden of green between the mainland of North Carolina and the sandy stretches of the Outer Banks. An island of lush pine, myrtle and evergreen oak, Roanoke is surrounded on the west by the Croatan Sound and on the east by Roanoke Sound, at a point where the larger waters of Albemarle and Pamlico merge.

Three decades ago, in 1951, members of the Garden Club of North Carolina, Inc. created the Elizabethan Gardens "as a living memorial to the valiant men and women who, as English colonists, came to America in 1585 and walked away through the dark forest into history." Appropriately, the gardens are located adjacent to "The Lost Colony" site, where each summer the unresolved fate of these early travelers is dramatized in Paul Green's outdoor symphonic drama.

The Elizabethan Gardens is a fitting memorial to the memory and spirit of these people seeking a new life in a new world. Here, the natural beauty of the forested island has been enhanced by an added cornucopia of flowers, shrubs and outdoor statuary, arranged in a pleasing combination of formal and informal garden planning.

The ten and one-half acre garden was designed and executed by landscape architects M. Umberto Innocenti and Richard Webel. The two respected the natural growth of the site so that ancient live oaks, other hardwood, stands of dogwood and pine, have been incorporated into the garden. One huge live oak is believed to have been living when the first colonists landed in 1585.

Today, 31 years after its opening, the Elizabethan Gardens is a compound of varied beauty and tranquility. Visitors are provided a numbered brochure and are invited to leisurely explore the garden on their own. Winding paths pass under heavily shaded areas, through sun and shade-dappled areas, and on into open stretches of lawns.

A formal sunken garden features a central fountain surrounded by four quadrants, each with its own antique figure of a mythological character. Circles of crape myrtle tie the quadrants together, and tall, beautifully clipped hedges of yaupon enclose the sunken area.

A shining white marble statue of Virginia Dare as a mature woman graces a secluded spot beneath a large live oak. At the Overlook Terrace, a 16th century style gazebo of massive hewn beams topped by a thatched roof of native broomstraw affords a rest stop and a grand view of the waters of Roanoke Sound

STATUARY . . . is one of the major attractions in the Elizabethan Gardens. At left is a lichen-encrusted antique statue of Jupiter, one of several gifts by Mr. and Mrs. John Hay Whitney. The lady at right is of a much more recent vintage, a statue of Virginia Dare created in Italy in 1859 by American sculptress Louise Lander. Miss Dare has recently been cleaned, revealing the white smoothness of the marble. Other statuary items in the garden include figures of Venus, Diana, Mercury, bird baths, including one of a lion couchant, and a large carved well head. The roses superimposed on the anatomy of the two are from the Queen's Rose Garden.

with the Outer Banks in the distance.

At all seasons of the year beds and rows of flowering plants provide a visual delight, from dogwood and azalea in spring to magnolia and hydrangea in the early summer. In August, beds of vivid impatiens, pots of brilliant geraniums, white, pink, red and yellow roses still flowering in the Queen's Rose Garden, elegant lilies and gold marigolds create vibrant splashes of color beneath the dense green of trees.

The Elizabethan Gardens are not to be rushed through.

They are to be relished at leisure, with time to linger over tiny delicate wildflowers, to listen to the tinkle of small streams and to savor the call of bird song.

Whatever the season, the Elizabethan Gardens invites lovers of beauty, art and history to spend a time of retreat amid natural and man-made beauty.

ENTRYWAY TO PEACE AND BEAUTY . . . The prevailing atmosphere of peace and beauty is established in the curved brick entry path flanked by young flowering crape myrtle trees, tall pines and heavy leafed magnolia. Elizabethan Gardens is open year round from 9 to 5 p.m. daily except during "The Lost Colony" performance period when the gardens remain open until 8 p.m. Admission is $1.50 per person, free to children under 12 accompanied by an adult.

MAGNIFICANT HEDGES . . . A pleached allee of clipped yaupon surrounds the centerpiece of the Elizabethan Gardens, the Sunken Gardens. Yaupon, a native shrub, was used widely by Indians and early settlers for tea and for medicinal purposes. Bricks used in the garden are ones handmade by Silas Lucas between 1870 and 1900.
