

Syrian-Commanded Units Departing Lebanon Today

By FAROUK NASSAR

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Syrian-commanded units of the Palestine Liberation Army began the first overland evacuation from Beirut today, travelling to Syria in 207 cars, trucks, jeeps and mini-buses crammed with furniture and festooned with photographs of their leaders.

While the convoy carried the PLA forces to a joyous welcome from Syrian troops stationed in the mountains of eastern Lebanon, 19 more truckloads of Palestine Liberation Organization guerrillas arrived at the U.S.-controlled Beirut port to board the Cypriot passenger ship Sol Georgios for Syria.

As usual, there were conflicting estimates of the number of guerrillas leaving on the seventh day of the PLO dispersal to new homes in the Arab world.

A PLO commander said 750 members of Yasser Arafat's mainstream Al Fatah group and other PLO factions were leaving on the Sol Georgios. But Lebanon's state radio said 700 were leaving and an Israeli army spokesman in east Beirut put the figure at 600.

The overland convoy, which rolled out of Israeli-encircled west Beirut through the Galerie Semaan intersection about 6 a.m., carried about 1,500 troops and officers of the 3,500-man PLA Hittin Brigade, according to a count by Lebanese army troops at a west Beirut checkpoint.

Maj. Gen. Amir Drori, commander of Israel's invasion forces in Lebanon, zigzagged in a Land-Rover across the convoy's route as it wound through the hills to Bhandoun, the last Israeli-held town on the Beirut-Damascus highway 12 miles from the capital. Later he told reporters there were 1,300 Palestinians in the convoy.

There was no way to reconcile the different counts.

Five jeeploads of Italian troops escorted the Palestinians down the highway to the Syrian border, 31 miles east of Beirut, to protect them from attack by Christian militiamen.

As the convoy left west Beirut, Lebanese Moslem militiamen fired farewell machine-gun barrages at the western end of the intersection and Christian militiamen boomed on the eastern end.

When the trucks, most of them bearing large photos of Arafat and Syrian President Hafez Assad, crossed out of Israeli-held territory in eastern Lebanon, Syrian road guards jumped into the vehicles and began embracing and shaking hands with the Palestinians.

Timber-r-r-r!

Workmen labor Thursday to take down the lights on the Little League ballfield adjacent to A.G. Cox School in Winterville. The poles, which towered 80 feet in the air, were condemned last week because of woodpecker holes and rot. Replacement of both poles and fixtures, which belong to the town's Recreation Commission, could cost $28,000, say town officials. The lights and poles were erected in 1956. Dedicate Fountain Plant

FOUNTAIN — The town of Fountain dedicated its new million-dollar waste water treatment plant Thursday at the plant site on State Road 1236.

Guests were welcomed by Mayor W.W. Walker and a history of the plant was given by Commissioner Bruce Beasley. Harry Skahn, an engineer on the project, told about the plant's capabilities.

The plant is the only one of its kind built in eastern North Carolina. It employs land application of waste water which has been treated for 45 or more days in lagoons and with chlorine. The treated water is sprayed over woodland adjacent to the plant and allowed to filter through the earth until it rejoins ground water in a purer state than before it was taken from the earth, Fountain Town Adviser Carl Dean said.

The plant was financed with a grant from the Environmental Protection Agency of $680,000, a $68,500 grant from State Clean Water Bonds and $156,500 from town funds. The town issued $185,000 in bonds, purchased by the FHA, to provide the town's share of the funds and to make other improvements to the municipal water and waste water systems.

Dean and Boyd Lucas are the designated operators of the system.

Sharon And U.S. Officials Confer

By R. GREGORY NOKES

WASHINGTON (AP) —

Israel's tough-talking defense minister, Ariel Sharon, is meeting with senior Reagan administration officials as new U.S.-Israeli tensions surface over the Palestinian issue.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz had rejected a request from Sharon to confer with senior officials in Washington two weeks ago because he felt Sharon was trying to bypass the peace efforts of U.S. Mideast envoy Philip C. Habib.

Sharon met separately with Shultz and Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger today.

The meeting with Weinberger, the first on Sharon's agenda, ran an hour — twice as long as had been expected.

As he left, Sharon told reporters, "We believe that we are facing a new era where the peace process can move forward." Weinberger did not speak with reporters.

Later, the Pentagon said that during the meeting, Sharon talked about the location of the various forces in Lebanon and Weinberger told Sharon that the first overland evacuation of PLO fighters had been accomplished.

Officially, the Pentagon said the tone of the meeting "was cordial."

Both Shultz and Weinberger have been openly critical of Israel's war in Lebanon, with Shultz saying it led to some "great strains" in U.S.-Israeli relations even though the overall relationship remains strong.

Sharon asserted in a speech in New York Thursday that U.S. pressures on Israel for restraint kept Israel from expelling the Palestinian guerrillas from west Beirut weeks ago.

"I'm not blaming anyone," Sharon told the Conference of Presidents of Major Jewish Organizations. But if Israel hadn't listened to Washington, "we would have arrived at this stage of expulsion much earlier," he said.

While he said Habib "made a tremendous and a very important" contribution to the agreement for evacuation of Palestinian guerrillas from west Beirut, "I would not underestimate and I would not hide the contribution of the Israeli government and Prime Minister (Menachem) Begin."

Sharon, who was the architect of the invasion of Lebanon, praised the Israeli armed forces and government for what he called "a mortal blow" against international terrorism.

N.C. Expects A Decline In School Enrollment

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer
CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) —

A recently completed study of trends in public school enrollment shows it will decrease in almost all grades in the next decade, with the biggest drop coming in high school rolls.

The study, released Thursday by the Institute of Government at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, predicted that 90 percent of the state's public schools will see a decline in enrollment in the next 10 years.

Charles D. Liner, author of the study, said the biggest factor influencing the fall will be sharp declines in the birth rate in North Carolina and across the nation that occurred in the late 1950s and from 1969-1975.

"The women's revolution," the pill, delayed marriages and the greater interest women have shown in having careers of their own are just a few of the reasons why the birth rate has fallen," Liner said. "Each year since 1973, there have been fewer babies born in North Carolina than there were in 1930."

Because of funding for education is closely tied by complicated formulas to school enrollment, it's important for school administrators and legislators to heed projected enrollment figures, Liner said.

"Substantial changes in school populations will have a marked effect on how state and county governments allocate money for teachers, school building construction and other expenses," he said.

PCC SUMMER GRADUATION ... Pitt Community College held its summer graduation exercises Thursday. At the ceremonies were (left to right) Sen. Vernon White;

Dr. Albert G. Edwards, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church in Raleigh and the featured speaker, and Dr. William E. Fulford, PCC president.

Exercises Held For PCC Grads

Summer graduation exercises for Pitt Community College were held Thursday in Wright Auditorium at East Carolina University with degrees in associate arts, applied science, college transfer and diplomas for vocations programs awarded.

The commencement speaker was Dr. Albert G. Edwards, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church in Raleigh, who told the graduates that it is up to them to "make the most out of life, however difficult it may be at times."

"We are living in a day of highly perilous times which may tend to make us try to escape the tasks which confront us," he said.

Edwards told students that "wishing does not always make it so, and throughout life, every dream may not necessarily come true."

"We must rise up with our successes and take our setbacks as a good citizen," he said.

Mitzi S. Hall, an accounting graduate, gave the graduates' response to the college.

Edwards was introduced by Max R. Joyner, member of the PCC Board of Trustees. Dean of Students Edgar L. Boyd introduced the candidates and state Sen. Vernon White, also a trustee, conferred the degrees and diplomas, assisted by Dr. Edward Bright, PCC dean of instruction.

Dr. William E. Folford Jr., president of Pitt Community College, made the opening remarks and welcomed the convocation.

The Rev. William J. Hadden Jr., Episcopal chaplain of East Carolina University, pronounced the invocation and benediction.

INFANT CARRIER REFUND

Any owner of a Tenderkare Model 412 or Winnie-the-Pooh (Sears) Model 36511 infant carrier seat may remove the detachable leg rest of the carrier, return it to the company and receive a $5 refund plus postage reimbursement. Pines of America Company of Fort Wayne, Ind., has made this offer in response to a report by the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission that use of the leg rest as a handle by a person carrying a baby in one of these seats may cause it to pull loose and allow the child to fall out.

About 15,000 of the carriers were sold nationwide between 1975 and 1980.

The company's address is Pines of America, P.O. Box 8601, Fort Wayne, Ind. 46808.

U.S. Cautions Against Defying Of Embargo

By SALLY JACOBSEN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —

The Reagan administration, blacklisting two French companies, is warning other firms against defying the U.S. embargo on pipeline shipments to the Soviet Union.

The administration quickly issued a temporary order Thursday forbidding the export of all U.S. goods and services to the French companies after three compressors for the controversial Siberian natural gas pipeline were loaded on a freighter bound for the Soviet Union.

It was the first shipment of goods to Moscow in apparent defiance of the president's embargo. The British engineering firm John Brown Ltd. is scheduled to make a second shipment of embargoed goods early next week.

Reagan imposed the embargo in June to protest the military crackdown in Poland.

In blacklisting the French firms, Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige said the action represented "a measured response that we hope will dissuade other firms from violating U.S. regulations."

Action will be taken against other companies if suspected violations occur, he said in a statement.

Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes, with the vacationing president in California, said the action would "set the tone of the way we would deal with any problems of this type that we see in the future."

Lionel Olmer, the Commerce undersecretary for international trade, told a news conference temporary restrictions were placed against Dresser France, a wholly owned subsidiary of Dresser Industries Inc. in Dallas, and Creusot-Loire, a private French firm that is a prime contractor on the pipeline. The administration opposes construction of the pipeline.

The denial orders mean, he said, the companies "as of this date lose their privilege of receiving exports from the United States of all manner of equipment, services and technology."

"We feel confident that Dresser France, like Dresser Industries, has done nothing in violation of that order," said Dresser vice president Edward Luter in Dallas. "What it did was under compulsion."

Luter said the parent company would be hurt by continued blacklisting of its subsidiary. "It will affect Dresser France's ability to fulfill other orders, orders in allied nations," he said.

The blacklist order will remain in force until a fuller investigation of the allegations is completed, Commerce Department officials said. Still to be investigated is the extent to which the French government participated in the shipments, Olmer said.

State Department spokesman Joseph Reap said the move was limited to the two firms because "we have no wish to widen this unfortunate dispute with France and will do everything we can to ensure that it does not affect the many other areas of cooperative U.S.-French relations."

The temporary orders are apparently a first step in a judicial process that could lead to stiff penalties set out by the Export Administration Act, under which the embargo was imposed.

Olmer and Sherman Ungar, the Commerce Department's general counsel, refused to speculate on what actions might be taken against any other companies.

John Brown, the Glasgow, Scotland, engineering firm, is scheduled to ship turbines with General Electric components to the Soviet Union on Sunday or Monday.

"If John Brown continued with the contract it is doing exactly what the government told it to do," a British trade department spokeswoman said.

Dresser France had said it would honor its contract with Moscow after receiving a requisition order from the French government. Under French law, the government can requisition the services of private companies if those services are judged to be in the national interest.

"Dresser saw fit to challenge the U.S. law. I haven't noticed they've seen fit to challenge the French law," Ungar said. Dresser France is under contract to Creusot-Loire to provide the pipeline equipment.

The three compressors aboard the French freighter Boradine — expected to take 10 days to get to the Soviet port of Rija — are among 21 compressors Dresser France contracted to provide for the pipeline.

A WILD ALLIGATOR leaps out of the water to grab a piece of raw chicken from Bayou Annie during a tour boat ride in Houma, La. (AP Laserphoto)

Gators, Ibis And Snakes Are Included In Annie's Tour

By JANET McCON NAUGHEY
Associated Press Writer
HOUMA, La. (AP) — The alligator leaps from the water, its teeth snapping on the boat's railing.
"That's why I don't want you teasing the 'gators,'" says Bayou Annie. "I don't want them coming into the boat. That's why I keep telling you to keep your hands inside."
She spears a smelly piece of chicken on a thin stick and lowers it in front of the reptile's snout.
The alligator grabs it, gulps it down and swims away, its pebbled body swaying from side to side in the dark water.

Soon, only its eye ridges are seen, and a small wake rippling the bayou.
It was about the eighth alligator Annie Miller had fed along a bayou tour also highlighted by a look at a loving pair of snakes, a close visit to an island full of baby birds and a stop next to a tree full of mosquito hawks — or dragonflies, as they're called outside of south Louisiana.
It was by no means the last alligator to answer Mrs. Miller's calls of "baby, bay-bee, bayyy-beeee!"
Some she even calls by name — Nicky, Boomer, Tiny, Tim, Percy — telling them apart by size and territory.

birds it takes her passengers five minutes to find.
Each passenger gets a small pair of binoculars, the better to see feeding nutria, ibis flying in high, uneven Vs or a kingbird 15 feet up in a nest that could be cupped in one hand.
The boat pulls up next to an island where hundreds of birds have nests. Hoarse frog-like cries echo across the island — nestlings demanding food.
Most were snowy egrets. But there also were great egrets, cattle egrets, blue herons, Louisiana herons, white-faced ibis and one roseate spoonbill.
As the boat passes a tree that Mrs. Miller describes as a large snake den, someone spots a waving tail and calls out that a snake is crawling into a hole.
Two snakes are looted and intertwined around the end of a foot-thick branch 20 feet overhead.

"That's something you don't often see," Mrs. Miller says.
The trip continues. Mrs. Miller points out the large, untidy platform of a bald eagle's nest. The eagles hatched a nestling in February and flew north in early May, she said.
Different kinds of frogs call through the evening, chiming, chirping and croaking different notes.
"Is this some kind of natural park?" a passenger asks.
"No. Just Louisiana."

Historian Says Religious Liberty Meant Different Things In U.S.

By STEELE HOLMAN
Associated Press Writer
ATLANTA (AP) — Controversy over the proposed "prayer amendment" pales alongside earlier religious conflicts, according to an Emory University church historian who said American cities were burning over religion 130 years ago.
Today, people discuss religious freedom and Bible-reading in public schools, but in the 1850s anti-Catholic Protestants rioted and put neighborhoods to the torch over such issues, said Brooks Holifield, professor of American church history at Emory's Candler School of Theology.

asked to rule on the religion clause only seven times between 1791, when the Bill of Rights was ratified, until 1940, Holifield said.
Despite the lack of court battles, however, the United States was anything but religiously peaceful once immigrants — mostly Catholic — began streaming into the predominantly Protestant country around 1848, he said.
Secret societies of Protestants, who became known as Know-Nothings, sprang up to oppose immigration and anything having to do with Catholicism.
"One can almost say that America in the early 1850s was almost as torn by religious antagonism as Northern Ireland is today," Holifield said.

Kensington, a predominantly Catholic neighborhood in Philadelphia, was burned during rioting, as were several sections of Louisville, Ky.

In New York City, a huge anti-Catholic march was staged, and Archbishop Hughes told the city's mayor that unless police protection were provided, he would surround his churches with armed men. He vowed that if one Catholic church burned, "New York will burn like Moscow." He got police protection.

The bitter feelings between Catholics and Protestants inevitably spilled over into the classroom.

"Textbooks and classroom instruction in the early 19th Century were unblushingly Protestant and candidly anti-Catholic," he said. "There were even textbooks that had caricatures and cartoons of the Pope."

Prayer and Bible reading were taken for granted as normal aspects of the school day at that time, but the antagonism worked its way into what material would be used in those devotions.

"The controversy was not over prayer, because there were no objections to prayer. The controversy was over the reading of the Bible," he said, adding that schools typically used Protestant versions of the Bible, which differed from the Douay Bible recognized by Catholics.

In 1869, the Roman Catholic church launched an intense campaign to in-teach students of their own faith "with a clear idea that some sort of religious commitment was being sought," he said.

"At that time, however, the Constitution was interpreted by both sides as permitting both prayer and Bible reading in the public schools," he said.

That changed with the 1962 decision and a similar one in 1963, which prohibited the prescribed use of the Bible and Lord's Prayer for worship in public schools.

Those decisions, Holifield said, recognized that non-Christian groups and people claiming no religion ought to be free from state-imposed religion and that Protestant religion no longer dominated the country's culture.

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.
Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a five by seven picture. During the second week with a wallet size picture and write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement. Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to "The Daily Reflector" one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

Consider Giving Heirlooms

If you're stuck for a good, unusual gift for someone special, take a good look around your own home.

Gifts of family heirlooms such as old books, cookbooks, sheet music, quilts or other handiwork, or even furniture, will be greatly appreciated by those close to you, says Dr. Thelma Hinson, extension family resource management specialist at NCSU.

This is a particularly good gift giving idea for older persons, perhaps on fixed incomes, who can distribute some of the things they've collected through the years.

Inheritance taxes can be avoided and the valuable or sentimental object will go to someone you know will appreciate and care for it.

Garlic skins will come off more easily if the cloves are held under hot water for a few minutes.

Dear Abby

Don't Lie, State Opinion

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I just told my best friend a white lie, and I feel miserable about it. But if I had told her the real reason I didn't want to go to the social affair she wanted me to go to, she would have tried her usual tactics of coaxing me over to her side, so I made up a lie and she believed it.

I hate lying, but what should I have done? Please don't use my real name. Sign me...

"FIBBER MCGEE"

DEAR FIBBER: You should have told your friend that you didn't want to go to that affair without offering any excuses, and let it go at that. And if she started her usual tactics of coaxing and demanded to know why, instead of lying, you should have said, "Because I really don't want to go." Once that is said, there is no room for argument.

DEAR ABBY: Responding to "Bed Wetter": As a boy living on a farm, my older brother and I shared a double bed on the second floor. We had a problem. I took it up with Mama. I told her that it annoyed me no end to have Earl sleeping in his raincoat every night.

She took the matter up with Earl, and he told her that he would quit sleeping in his raincoat when I quit wetting the bed.

This put the ball squarely in my court, so I set the alarm for 2:30 a.m. When the alarm went off, I simply got out of bed and relieved myself out the second-story window. That did it. I didn't wet the bed anymore.

But to this day, I still get up at 2:30 every morning. I'm afraid to quit.

C.T.G. IN TUSTIN, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: Some women who have been raped complain bitterly when the police suggest that perhaps they "asked for it" by wearing provocative clothing.

I take my religion seriously, but this morning at Mass a young woman who was the lay distributor for the Eucharist marched up to the altar wearing a red dress with slits on both sides, revealing her legs up to her thighs! The altar is on a dais 18 inches higher than the surrounding floor. I found it disgusting and offensive to say the least.

The priest would not have been out of order had he sent her back to her pew. Perhaps he didn't notice, but we in the pews certainly could see too much.

I do not endorse a return to mid-Victorian standards, but neither can I condone such exhibitionism.

What are such people thinking of if not displaying their wares? And why are we so surprised when somebody takes the bait?

SIGN ME GRANDMA

DEAR GRANDMA: The woman you found offensive was inappropriately dressed for Mass. But you are dead wrong to assume that men rape women because they are turned on by provocative clothing.

Rape is a crime of violence, designed to humiliate and degrade. It is rarely motivated by sexual desire.

The way a woman is dressed is irrelevant. Little old ladies in their 80s, dressed in flannel nightgowns, have been raped!

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are both pushing 50 and have been happily married for nearly 30 years. We have had separate bedrooms for the last 10 years because we finally admitted that we cannot sleep together. (He has always thrashed around, kicking and moving in his sleep, and his snoring has gotten worse in recent years.) When we travel now, we always ask for a room with two beds.

In no way has our sleeping apart diminished our sexual activity, which never was restricted to nighttime. In fact, it has improved it. (A tired partner makes a lousy lover.)

When friends learn that we have separate bedrooms, they look askance, and I'm sure they assume that our sex life is over.

How odd are we?

CURIOS

DEAR CURIOUS: I've never seen any statistics on the subject. But what do you care how your friends "look," or what they assume? Your sex life is none of their business.

Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple, "do-your-own-thing" ceremony, get Abby's new booklet. Send $1 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped (37 cents) envelope to: Abby's Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

STORING PICKLES

For best results, canned pickles should be stored in a dark, dry, cool place where there will be no danger of freezing, says Dr. Nadine Tope, extension food specialist, NCSU.

Freezing may crack the jars or break the seals and let in bacteria that cause spoilage. Protecting the jars from light will prevent bleaching and possible deterioration of flavor, the specialist points out.

Waxy Coatings Aid Preservation

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI) — The use of waxy coatings on fresh products goes back to the 12th century in China, but is only about 50 years old in the United States, says a food science professor.

The Chinese began dipping oranges and lemons in melted waxes to make the fruit ferment, says Asst. Prof. Carol Long, of the University of Nebraska, Lincoln.

Using Salt Substitutes

Salt substitutes are not an automatic answer to reducing the amount of sodium in the diet, says Marjorie Donnelly, extension food specialist at NCSU.

"Most of the substitutes replace some of the sodium with potassium so that they have about half as much sodium as table salt," the specialist adds. "However, the balance of sodium and potassium in the body is important. It may be possible to overuse salty substitutes, just as many people overuse table salt."

Most salt substitutes carry a warning label suggesting that individuals check with a doctor before using the product. Mrs. Donnelly says it's equally important for people to consult a physician if they plan to use the salt substitutes exclusively.

"The important thing is to become less dependent on that taste of salt," says the specialist. "Foods that are often salted can be enjoyed without salt, or with other seasonings, such as onion, lemon garlic or herbs such as oregan."

COOKING IS FUN!

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

Nowadays a good many cooks have adopted (and adapted) the Chinese technique of stir-frying to make fast and flavorful dishes.

These cooks, and others, might also find it pleasurable to use a Chinese barbecuing technique.

One Oriental cookbook, long out of print, gives three kinds of barbecue sauces for this skewered pork. All use soy sauce and a sweetener, then add a goodly number of seasonings. These range from ginger root to tomato ketchup.

An inventive American cook recently developed a delicious version of such a sauce. It calls for only five ingredients — the chief one is fresh red plums. The sauce does beautifully both for basting the pork, and after the meat is cooked, as a dip.

SKEWERED PORK WITH PLUM SAUCE

- 1 1/2 pounds lean boneless pork
- 1/4 pound (2 large) red plums
- 1/4 cup sugar
- 1/4 cup ketchup
- 2 tablespoons hoisin sauce. Note follows
- 1 tablespoon soy sauce
- Slice pork 1/4-inch thick; cut into 4-inch-long and 2-inch-wide strips.
- Pit plums and slice. In an electric blender, whirl together until smooth the plums, sugar, ketchup, hoisin sauce and soy sauce. Reserve 1/2 cup of this sauce.

Thread pork strips on skewers, using loose accordion-style folds. Arrange skewers on a rack over a broiling pan. Brush with sauce.

Broil in a range, 6 to 8 inches from high heat, turning once and brushing with sauce, until pork is cooked through and slightly charred — 6 to 8 minutes on each side. Or, cook over charcoal. Serve with reserved sauce as a dip.

Note: Hoisin sauce is available in markets that sell Chinese food products. The brand we used (manufactured in Hong Kong) contains sugar, vinegar, soybean, water, salt, flour, garlic, sesame seed, chile, spices and approved food colors.

New Products Needed

Some of our news personnel became intrigued with the garlic market. Most of it is grown in California and it wholesales for 85 cents to $1.15 per pound and retails in California now for $1.59 per pound.

Why couldn't the stuff be grown here, they wondered, and save all those shipping charges? Sniffing, so to speak, the beginnings of a profitable business they checked on the amount of land which might be needed to grow the garlic needs of Pitt County. Unfortunately a half acre of garlic would take care of demand in Pitt County in any given year — plus a couple more years.

Insignificant as the garlic market is, however, the story illustrates what is going to have to be done in area farming if farming is to survive.

Growers are going to have to continually search for new markets and be prepared to produce the crops which will fill the needs.

Virtually unlimited supplies of produce flow through area super markets and corner grocery stores. During much of the year the supplies come from California, Mexico, Florida and other areas. A good deal of these supplies could come from area farms with careful planting. Through promotional organizations the local farm products could be shipped and marketed in the big northeastern markets.

All this has been talked for years, and farmers rightfully point out the huge investment it takes to get into a new crop ... and that facing the possibility that overproduction will send the price plummeting.

The risks are certainly there but, if we are going to continue tilling the soil, turning to new crops and aggressive selling are going to be necessary.

Richmond Is The Exception

On the heels of Abscam, New York Democratic Congressman Fred Richmond has pled guilty to income tax evasion and possession of marijuana. He has resigned from Congress and has agreed he will not seek to be re-elected.

The sentencing will be done on Nov. 12.

Richmond has been in other troubles over the past several years and we believe Congress is better off to be rid of him.

The weaknesses of Richmond and other congressmen which have come to light in recent months should not shake the public's confidence in the people who serve in Washington. For every congressman who runs afoul of the law there are a hundred who maintain the high standards we expect of them. For every congressman who takes lightly the great honor of serving there are a hundred who stand in awe of the powers they have. When we think of Congress we prefer to think of those who are hard working and honest.

Fair Punishment?

By BILL TRAYNOR
Forest City Daily Courier

How much will it cost you to crush a man's skull? To shatter it until the brain, like an egg sealed in a tight plastic wrap and then popped with a ball peen hammer, stays inside the scalp to rot and shrink?

How about six years? That doesn't sound too bad. Especially when you figure that if you behave in prison, your stay may last only two years and nine months.

This past Tuesday afternoon, Jerry Lee Gaston, 37, of Forest City stood for judgment before Superior Court Judge William Freeman. Reading from state form AOC-CR-300, a Transcript of Plea, Freeman began by asking Gaston, "Are you able to hear and understand me?"

"Yes," Gaston replied. "Do you understand that you are pleading guilty to the felony of voluntary manslaughter?" Freeman asked.

"Yes," again. "Do you understand that upon your plea, you could be imprisoned for a possible maximum of 20 years?" the judge asks.

"Yes." "Do you now personally plead guilty?"

"Yes." "Are you in fact guilty?"

"Yes." Fifteen questions in all Freeman asks Gaston. Any Superior Court Judge anywhere in North Carolina, reading from AOC-CR-300, would repeat the same.

Gaston pleaded guilty to smashing the skull of a 60-year-old man, Herbert "June" Camp of Lowery Lane, Forest City, the night of Feb. 4, 1982. Camp was taken to Rutherford Hospital the next day, then Spartanburg General, where he died two months later of "a severe blunt force trauma to the head," according to North Carolina Chief Medical Examiner Paige Hudson.

Camp was kept alive on life-sustaining equipment while his brain died. Gaston pleaded guilty to forcing about a one-inch chunk of Camp's skull a centimeter deep into his brain.

Because of the circumstances, and the 1981 Fair Sentencing Act endorsed by Gov. Jim Hunt and passed by the North Carolina General Assembly, Freeman sentenced Gaston to six years, the presumptive sentence for voluntary manslaughter.

To some, that may not seem like punishment enough for killing a man. But for a first offender, two years and nine months must be time enough to feel guilty, reform and pay one's debt to society, or our legislators would have seen fit to prescribe a harsher presumptive sentence.

Ostensibly, we lock people up to serve justice, to give law breakers what they deserve. Punishment.

Many people feel we do not lock up enough people away, or for enough time. Some talk of public executions as a crime deterrent.

Conversely, many other North Carolinians are ashamed of their state's high incarceration rate. Like many people across the country, they feel that we should now be civilized enough to remove the lement of vengeance from our criminal justice system, that we should incarcerate fewer people for less time, and put more money and effort into rehabilitation, so that convicts may work towards reforming themselves during their brief stays behind bars.

It has gotten to the point that some claim life in prison without television and air conditioning is "cruel and unusual" in today's America.

But assigning someone to six years in prison (possibly just two years and nine months) for killing a man in such a cruel and unusual way as Camp died is absurd.

It is equally absurd to think that justice can be administered without punishment, or that punishment can be administered without a sense of vengeance.

"Retribution," as columnist George Will says, "distinguishes punishment from therapy."

It is a basic precept of our criminal justice system that citizens receive equal

The Leg-Pulling Hobby

"We're trying to get more tourists to come to Ireland," the man from the tourist office said.

"We'd like to get Americans and we'd be much obliged if they would spend some dollars with us."

"What does Ireland have to offer?"

"That's a good question and I thank you for asking it. Ireland has closer ties with America than probably any nation in Europe. There are about 20,000,000 people of Irish descent in the United States, and I think there's a bond between us that no other country can claim.

"We don't even think of Americans as tourists. To most Irishmen, they're 'visitors,' and since the average Irishman thinks the only one who makes any money on tourists are the hotel-keepers, they don't regard Americans as commercial targets. Therefore, as a visitor, they must give him courtesy. Since the American isn't treated like a tourist, he enjoys being one."

"Aren't the Irish great ones for pulling an American's leg?"

"That's a good question and I thank you for asking it. You see, there is a certain type of American who wants to know about leprechauns, fairies and the like, and who treats the Irish like the Little People.

"Now when that type arrives, the Irish feel it is only fair to pull the fellow's leg in all directions."

We received a small sample of the great Irish art of leg-pulling when a friend took us to a pub. We no sooner had our drinks when a man who introduced himself as Liam Boyd said, "You're Americans, aren't you?"

We said we were.

"Then you'd be interested in knowing that only a few yards from here lived the great Tammany Hall American politician, Boss Richard Croker."

"Did he?"

"Aye, he won the Derby with a horse named Orby. He was a multi-millionaire. They say he was married to a half-Indian woman named front door and he was buried standing up. When the O'Neils moved in, Mrs. O'Neil couldn't stand the thought of Boss Croker standing in the door every time she went by. Finally they took the whole door off and buried it in the family cemetery."

"I've lived here 40 years," another man said, "and I know for a fact Boss Croker was buried down in the cellar, and he was buried horizontal."

The question of which direction Boss Croker was buried was kicked back and forth for an hour.

"You sure it wasn't Orby the horse that was buried in the front door?" the bartender asked. "Seems to me it was a pretty big door and Croker said he always wanted to have Orby buried standing up."

"No, Orby was buried in the cemetery lying down. There's a marker stating the fact."

"But the way I heard it, the O'Neils were very disturbed. Someone must have been buried in the door. There's no way of a man being buried in such a door horizontally. But he could have been buried diagonally."

The lads in the pub thought we were getting a little bored with Boss Croker, and they said, "would you like to hear about leprechauns?"

We said no, we didn't plan on leaving the pub until we got to the bottom of Boss Croker's burial.

"I've got it on final authority," said the postman, "that

Buy A Title With Manor

By GRAHAM HEATHCOTE
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — It won't make you a duke, marquis, earl or baron, but now you no longer have to be to the manor born — you can buy the title.

There are 60,000 manors in England and Wales and 400 in Scotland, where they are known as feudal baronies, and London real estate agents Strutt and Parker have put titles to eight of them on the market. For $6,800 to $11,475, you can become lord of the manor.

They say there was "tremendous interest" when they auctioned 14 others in 1981 and sold another seven last March.

"Buying a manorial lordship basically means becoming the owner of a lot of old documents on parchment and vellum," said Robert Smith, chairman of the Manorial Society of Great Britain.

"But it does have an association with the crown, which originally granted certain rights and privileges in return for loyal service. You can put the title on your notepaper and even on your checks, which some owners do," he said.

"A lot of owners have coats of arms made to go with the title."

Smith, a 35-year-old company director, and the 900 members of his society, founded in 1906, meet regularly.

Most lords of the manor are British. There are some Americans and a few Germans and Swiss, Smith said.

The eight lordships for sale are in the counties of Essex, Suffolk, Norfolk and Cambridgeshire, and their value largely depends on the number and age of the documents included in the sale. The oldest of the eight is Crepping Hall, Essex, which has documents dating to 1327, but Smith said the oldest manors go back before the Norman invasion of 1066.

Purchasers become owners of court records, indentures of servants, court rolls showing who was liable for jury service, land and rent records, maps, surveys and letters between the lords and their agents.

The records are considered historical documents and may not be removed from county or national archives.

In days long gone, a lord of the manor was often a very powerful person indeed, who had to be paid something like three to five guineas ($15 to $25), when any building or land in his manor was inherited or sold.

"In a big village that could mean a substantial amount of money and the lord of the manor ... employed local solicitors as stewards, who made sure the people who were inheriting or buying paid up," Smith said.

The society fought hard in 1922 against the Liberal Party government of Prime Minister David Lloyd George, who wanted to abolish the day-to-day income of manorial lords because it was considered a leftover from the Middle Ages.

The government won and introduced the Law of Property Act, which made the tenancies granted by lords of the manor into freeholds in the hands of the tenants.

After the 1922 act, all that remained of the lordships was the title and some less exciting rights, such as rent for land occupied by telephone, telephone and electricity poles, sporting rights over common land, rights to cut turf and timber, extract minerals and ownership of beaches, tolls, markets and other franchises.

"Unfortunately, none of the lordships we are selling now include any of these rights," said Jill Brain, spokeswoman for Strutt and Parker.

Some lordships are very unlikely to be sold, like the Duchy of Cornwall which belongs to Prince Charles and includes a tin mine.

Smith said that if the lordship of Scryvelsby in Lincolnshire went on the

THINGS UNSEEN

Practical, hard-headed men often declare that they will believe only those things which they can see. "Show me" is the rejoinder with which they meet the fundamental religious contention that the things which are unseen are vastly more important than the things which are seen.

Yet actually the greatest powers of the physical universe are all unseen. For example, every particle of matter in the universe responds to the power of gravity; yet gravity is of course unseen.

We cannot live without air, but no one has ever seen air. Electricity is an unseen force, and of course the basic elements of matter — atoms, neutrons, and protons — carry on their functions in a world invisible to us.

In view of the great powers of the unseen world, religion should certainly not be dismissed as unimportant. It postulates the reality of another kind of unseen world. Actually, religion is the best interpretation of the unseen which man has yet discovered. — Elisha Douglass

Victory Is An Elusive Claim

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Small business recently won a big victory in Congress, but Milton Stewart, who had something to do with it, remains restless, wary, ready to fight.

Winning isn't enough. You must preserve the win too, he says.

The win followed a battle with public-sector bureaucracies, big business, universities, the defense establishment and others for a share of the billions of federal government dollars spent each year on research and development.

Small business wanted a share of those dollars. At the same time, customary recipients of R&D grants sought to preserve their stake, which was threatened by cutbacks in government spending.

The fight was bitter. According to Stewart, editor of Inc. magazine, Congress passed the Small Business Development Act only after the defeat of "iron triangles" of career bureaucrats in federal agencies, lobbyists, and congressional committee members and staffs assigned to the agencies.

Now that the law has been passed, he and many others in the small-business community are concerned the same triangle will thwart the will of Congress.

Stewart contends his own personal suspicions are based in experience. For years he headed a small-business investment company, and served a term as president of the National Association of Small Business Investment Companies. Later he headed the private-sector National Small Business Association, and until joining Inc. was chief advocate of the Small Business Administration.

Throughout his many years in small business Stewart has loudly proclaimed it's merits, and often heard in response only the echo of his words. Other small-business advocates found the same thing: A massive lack of enthusiasm.

It was found in the federal government, in the big-business community, in labor circles. It persisted even as researchers were discovering that small business was vastly more innovative than big business, and that it was small business that had created most of the jobs in recent years.

Nevertheless, obstacles of one sort or another, some intentional and some inadvertent, were placed before small business. Some government contracts, for instance, were written in such a way that no small business could qualify.

Small-business people often found themselves in Washington, fighting for recognition, rather than in their plants and offices.

Even at a time when growth in U.S. productivity had almost vanished and unemployment had swelled to some of the highest levels in decades, opposition to and ignorance of small-business achievements continued.

In 1980, for example, the federal government spent nearly $32 billion on research and development, about 70 percent of that in private industry. The remainder went to government labs and universities. Of that $32 billion, only 4 percent went to companies employing fewer than 500 workers.

After nearly seven years of coordinated effort by various small-business groups — a major accomplishment for the once fragmented small-business community — the Small Business Innovation Development Act was passed.

The biggest advance, from the small-business viewpoint, is that the law commands each federal agency that spends more than $100 million annually on R&D to devise a competitive grant program for small business.

The bill marked the first time government opened the R&D system fully to small businesses in order to achieve national technological goals, said Stewart. But, he added, "government already had a credibility problem."

How, the small-business community wondered, could members be certain the will of Congress would be carried out? Wasn't the iron triangle still in place?

Because of this, the small-business community vows it will monitor the 28 government agencies involved, with the various trade associations contributing help to a Small Business High Technology Institute based in Washington.

The job will be viewed as a patriotic contribution, says Stewart, who promises to publicize the results.

As he sees it, "The United States cannot meet world competition, military or civilian, with 1½ hands tied behind its back."

Other Editors Say Oil And Piranhas

(The Raleigh Times)

At a time when the opening of our national parks and our own North Carolina coast to oil exploration is being discussed, let us consider the case of Kennedy Lake in Tucson, Ariz.

Piranhas, small fish with interlocking teeth normally found in South American rivers, now swim in Lake Kennedy, a 112-acre man-made lake.

Authorities believe an aquarium with at least five adult piranhas was dumped into the lake. The Arizona Game and Fish Department believe the fish will survive, reproduce and possibly force the closing of the lake since the fish are carnivorous and will attack people.

The piranhas present hard, costly decisions to Arizona officials. They can apply $15,000 worth of the poison Rotenone and then drain the lake into the city's sewer system. They can use electro-shock treatments to stun the fish and make them float to the surface, another expensive solution. They can attempt to net all the piranhas. They can drain the lake into a dry well. Or they can do nothing and leave the lake to the fish.

Tucson's plight is an example of how easily man can poison his environment and how difficult it is — often impossible — to restore it.

Gov. Hunt says he may return to court to fight U.S. Interior Secretary James Watt's plans to open 45 million acres between three and 100 miles off the North Carolina coast to oil exploration.

Petroleum companies have acquired the rights to 43 three-mile-square tracks on the outer continental shelf off our coast. The closest track is 33 miles offshore.

Obviously, Americans want and need a ready supply of gasoline for their cars and fuel oil for their burners. But an oil spill-free coast, a national park unspoiled by the sounds of drilling and blasting, and even a lake without man-eating fish are among life's most-desirables.

Arraign Colcor Defendants On Variety Of Charges

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — State District Court Judge J. Wilton Hunt Jr., Lake Waccamaw Police Chief Harold E. Lowery and four others have pleaded innocent to charges in connection with the FBI's probe of crime in eastern North Carolina.

Hunt of Whiteville and Lowery and the four others were arraigned Thursday before U.S. Magistrate Franklin Block.

It was the second mass arraignment in two weeks of defendants arrested July 29 and charged in connection with the two-year undercover investigation called Colcor, which stands for Columbus County corruption.

A total of 15 of the 21 Colcor defendants have now pleaded innocent to the charges, which range from drug sales to bribery. Last week, nine defendants entered pleas of innocent before Block.

Hunt was represented at Thursday's proceedings by Kenneth Robinson, a Washington attorney who represented former Rep. John W. Jenrette Jr., D-S.C., during Jenrette's Abscam trial.

Robinson asked Block for 35 days to file pretrial motions instead of the usual 20. Robinson said part of Hunt's defense might be that the FBI had insufficient evidence to charge Hunt with racketeering. Robinson also indicated he might argue that Hunt was a victim of entrapment.

Block tentatively granted the request pending a review of North Carolina's speedy trial provisions.

Hunt has also asked that he be tried in Wilmington, although the U.S. Attorney's office has said the trial will be in U.S. District Court in Raleigh.

One of the defendants, Mary Lee Coleman, was freed on $150,000 bond. She had been in jail since her arrest.

Entering innocent pleas during arraignment Thursday were:

— Hunt, 50, charged with bribery and violating interstate commerce laws to carry on gambling. A federal grand jury indictment issued July 29 said Hunt accepted bribes totaling $7,000. Hunt faces maximum penalties of $35,000 in fines and 25 years in prison if convicted. He is free on $25,000 bond.

— Lowery, 40, charged with accepting bribes totaling $1,650 to protect an illegal gambling operation, possessing a sawed-off shotgun, and transferring the shotgun to an undercover FBI agent.

Lowery could be fined up to $45,000 and sentenced to 40 years in prison if convicted. He is free on $25,000 bond.

Lowery's attorney is Frank Gibson of Wilmington.

Gibson of Wilmington.

— Kenneth T. Coleman, 42, and Mary Coleman, 40, of Cherry Grove, who were charged in an indictment issued Aug. 17 with conspiracy to possess cocaine with intent to distribute, possession with intent to distribute, and distribution of cocaine. Each charge brings a maximum penalty of a $25,000 fine and 15 years in prison.

Coleman is represented by James Larrick of Wilmington and is being held in lieu of $650,000 bond. Mrs. Coleman's attorney is Michael Mitwol of Wilmington.

James Ludlow of Durham, an attorney hired by Kenneth Coleman's mother, Pinkie Wilson, posted a $150,000 bond to release Mrs. Coleman Thursday afternoon. Security for the bond was the Cherry Grove farm Mrs. Wilson owns.

— James E. Carroll, 43, of Whiteville, arrested with the Colemans July 29 on the same drug conspiracy charges. He is being held under $100,000 bond, reduced by U.S. District Court Judge Franklin Dupree from the $115,000 set by Block.

Carroll has also been indicted on other Colcor charges including bribery, interstate theft, and sale of marijuana. He is represented by James A. MacDonald of Wilmington.

— Roland Junior Carroll, 37, indicted for conspiracy to distribute marijuana. He faces potential penalties of $15,000 in fines and five years in prison if convicted. He is free on $15,000 bond.

Carroll's attorney is Kenneth B. Hatcher of Wilmington.

Apparently Killed 2, Then Himself

KERNERSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A 46-year-old man apparently killed his estranged wife and seriously injured his daughter last night before killing himself, according to Forsyth County sheriff's deputies.

James W. Ziglar and Thelma Lou Ziglar of Kernersville were found dead at their home at about 8:30 p.m. Thursday. Their 18-year-old daughter, Sandra Ziglar, was in stable condition at area hospital Thursday night with a chest wound.

Neighbors said the couple was estranged and Mrs. Ziglar and her daughter had moved away several weeks ago. They said the shootings occurred about 8 p.m. when Mrs. Ziglar and her daughter visited their former home.

One neighbor, Shelby J. Swisher, said Miss Ziglar ran to her house after the shooting. "She was screaming, 'Somebody help me, I've been shot ... My dad shot me, and my mom's on the floor,'" Mrs. Swisher said.

Medical officials said the Ziglars had been shot once in the face with a .22-caliber weapon.

Authorities said they had not made a ruling in the deaths, though they think the deaths will be termed a murder-suicide.

Won Point: An Error In Census

MAGNOLIA, Del. (AP) — This little crossroads town has been complaining for two years about how it was sized up by Washington. Now it has won its battle.

The 1980 census said Magnolia had 197 residents, but everybody in town knew that wasn't right. Mayor Shirley Jarrell wrote letters and personally counted heads and houses to prove her point.

The census takers took another look and said Magnolia has 283 people and 113 housing units.

That's still 44 people and 14 houses too low, according to the town, but the mayor says that "after two years, we're not going to squabble about that small number."

The important thing, she said, is that the town can now retain its $2,408 annual federal revenue-sharing grant, an amount that would have been cut 53 percent if the other figures had been used.

treatment under the law. The Fair Sentencing Act is, to an extent, an attempt to ensure that people committing the same crime receive roughly the same sentence.

But as we strive to inject fairness and uniformity into our less-than-grand rule of law, we should not lose sight of the central concepts of protection and punishment in the administration of justice.

A punishment should fit the crime. And six years for killing somebody does not seem to fit too closely.

To say the Fair Sentencing Act is not the panacea it was proclaimed to be is an understatement.

Perhaps Gov. Hunt should name one of his infamous study panels to evaluate how the act has performed in its first year of service.

Lordships come up for sale because owners would rather have the cash, inheritors are not very interested or executors have to dispose of them.

Who buys them? "Well, there is an element of eccentricity in that," said Smith.

"But then, I have a theory that most English people are eccentric to outsiders. England is such an odd sort of place and manors are part of it. If they abolish the manors they may as well abolish the monarchy."

Surgical Technology Grads At PCC Pinned

Pinning ceremonies for the surgical technology graduating class at Pitt Community College were held Wednesday evening.

Pauline Teel, chief technologist in thoracic and vascular surgery at Pitt County Memorial Hospital, told the students that one of the most important traits for a surgical technologist is honesty.

She admonished the class to strive to do its best.

"There is no room for mistakes in the operating room; therefore, it is necessary for all of us to try for perfection in all of our tasks," Mrs. Teel said.

Mrs. Teel was introduced by Karen Flowers, president of the class. Student Sonny Louya gave the welcome.

The presentation of pins was made by Gayle Cobb, PCC chairman of the department of surgical technology, and by Nancy Phelps, PCC clinical instructor.

The class vice president, Lynne Harris, gave the student's response and Dr. William E. Fulford, Jr., president of PCC, gave closing remarks.

Members of the graduating class receiving pins included:

Greenville — Patricia Ange, Elizabeth Deanes, Glenda Green, Cynthia Harris, Homer Louya, Jr., Brenda Rodgers, Martha Taylor and Patricia Ward.

Snow Hill — Ginger Radford.

Winterville — Lora Setliff, Fairfield — Cindy Ballance.

La Grange — Karen Flowers.

Burlington — Sheri Reams.

Coup Leader

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania (AP) — A private was the leader of a Kenyan air force attempt earlier this month to overthrow President Daniel Arap Moi, according to court testimony Thursday.

Another airman, Senior Sgt. Pancras Oteyo Okumu, said Pvt. Hezekiah Ochuka was chairman of the Peoples Redemption Council that led the attempted coup on August 1. The army remained loyal to Moi and the rebellion was crushed within 24 hours.

Okumu and Ochuka fled to Tanzania. The Kenyan government is trying to extradite them.

Confused In Name-Game

HAGERSTOWN, Md. (AP) — The Sager-Sagi surname saga started slowly and simmered some, but now the situation is startling.

Steven Sager and Stephen Sagi both live in Hagerstown. Sager was getting Sagi's phone calls and Sagi Sager's gas bills.

That wasn't so bad. But now Sagi says people are stopping him on the street to sympathize with him about losing his city housing department job in a budget crunch.

But it's Sager who was fired. He's in the local news now that he has threatened to sue the city, and the publicity has made the name problem worse.

Sager, in the meantime, gets phone calls from tenants trying to reach their landlord — Sagi is a real estate developer. Sager said several people, including a city councilman, have inquired about a renovation project he's not involved in.

"We are substantially confused — by others, not ourselves," said Sager.

Sagi termed the name game "crazy."

Chances of the identity crisis sagging soon appear slim.

While Sager considers the suit, Sagi is talking about sinking money into two schools he wants to convert into residential complexes.

The problem is not alleviated by the phone book — just three names separate theirs — one Sager and two Sagis.

"A whole series of people think I'm him and he's me," said Sager.

Call Meeting

The City Council has scheduled a special call meeting for Monday at 5:30 p.m. in the first floor conference room at city hall.

Agenda items for the call session include consideration of bids for the elevator at the Community Building and for police fall and winter uniforms.

A workshop will be conducted following the meeting.

Complete Their CPA Exams

The North Carolina State Board of Certified Public Accountant Examiners announced that Ernest R. Carraway Jr. of Greenville and Janet Eatmon Wilson of Route 2, Snow Hill, successfully completed all parts of the uniform CPA examination conducted in May.

The board reported that there were 1,278 people sitting for one or more parts of the four-part examination in Fayetteville. Of those 288 passed the required four parts.

Mexico Sets New Exchange Rates, Food Subsidies

By ISAAC A. LEVI
Associated Press Writer
MEXICO CITY (AP) —
The federal government announced Thursday that it will impose controls to prevent Americans from crossing the border and buying food and other Mexican consumer items at bargain prices resulting from the devaluation of the peso.

The announcement did not go into details, saying only that "export controls" will be enforced.
After the peso was de-valued Aug. 5, doubling the value of the dollar, so many Americans from Texas, New Mexico, Arizona and California crossed over to shop that Mexican storekeepers complained their stocks were depleted.

The government also announced new preferential peso-dollar exchange rates and subsidies for basic foods to ease the plight of Mexicans living along the border.

The moves may also help American border towns hit by sales slumps resulting from two devaluations in six months that reduced the value of the Mexican peso by 65 percent.

The estimated 7-8 million Mexicans living along the border have been particularly hard hit by the crisis since virtually all of them dealt in dollars and many had dollar debts with either American or Mexican banks.

They did a large part of their shopping on the U.S. side because, among other reasons, lack of transportation reduced the supply of Mexican goods arriving in the area and because American goods were of better quality.

But the majority of them earned pesos, and the devaluations in effect doubled their dollar debts and made shopping on the American side prohibitive.

Thousands of businesses whose owners complained that they were on the brink of ruin stopped working for 24 hours to demand tax breaks and other relief.

Calexico, Calif., and a number of other communities on the American side complained about a sharp drop in sales, and local officials talked about asking the U.S. government for help.

Meanwhile, banks complained that monetary controls and a three-tier exchange rate introduced Aug. 12 was causing people even more hardship and confusion. All dollar accounts were frozen on that date but withdrawals were allowed in pesos at an exchange rate of 69.50 to the dollar.

In addition, the government announced a rate of 49.50 to the dollar for the import of basic foods and essentials for industry and a free-market rate that fluctuates with supply and demand. The value of the peso dropped from 49 to the dollar before devaluation to around 120.

Thursday's announcement by the Budget and Planning Department said:

—The federal government will subsidize imports from the United States of basic foods in short supply in the area, reimbursing merchants for the difference between the free-market and the 49.50 rates.

Government inspectors will make constant spot checks to prevent merchants from profiteering.

—All contracts drawn up in dollars within Mexico, including rents and services, will be paid in pesos at the 69.50 rate. The Federal Consumer Protection Agency will enforce the new regulation.

—Mexican border residents with debts in the United States will be able to buy dollars from banks at the 49.50 rate to pay the interest but will have to pay the principal with dollars bought on the free market. Dollar debts to Mexican banks in the area will be paid in pesos at the 69.50 rate.

—Border merchants giving preference to Mexican goods over American-made items will get a 10 percent tax rebate. A number of government agencies will also coordinate efforts to keep them abundantly supplied. It will also partially subsidize transportation of the more essential items to keep prices down.

Scarecrows In Demand

GREENWICH, Conn. (AP) — Two entrepreneurs are charging a lot of hay for an idea that has won approval by straw vote — preppie scarecrows.

Veva Crozer and Robin Thew, who both make their living as interior designers, have sold about two dozen preppie scarecrows at $185 apiece.

It stated as a joke between them as a way to use cast-off clothing to satirize "certain types of people that we all know" in this wealthy town, Mrs. Crozer said.

But the project became something more when Mrs.
Crozer hammered a few scarecrows into her lawn.

Guests at a cocktail party arrived and "they went wild," she said, at the likes of "The Spoiled Greenwich Boy," "The Old Biddy," "Old Aunt Agatha," "The Maid" and "The Butterfly Catcher."

Mrs. Crozer uses chicken wire and polyester fill to fashion scarecrow bodies on wood frames. Ms. Thew adds the head, fashioned at her studio out of varnished, molded papier-mache.

The creations are clad in preppie garb — penny loafers, a tuxedo, sweatshirts, strung pearls, a Lacoste shirt, button-down collars — then set out in the lawn for the world to gawk at.

"Robin has a way of making a universal expression on the face," Mrs. Crozer, 37, said.

One Injured In Car Accident

Cars belonging to Odessa Kirkman Keel of Robersonville and Herbert Natham Gaskins of New Bern collided on Greenville

Thursday, causing an estimated $1,000 damage to the Keel vehicle.

A passenger in the Keel car, Jay Eddie Keel, was injured in the 12:15 p.m. accident and was taken to Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

According to Greenville police, the Keel vehicle was in the turn lane on Greenville Boulevard and merged into the travel lane when it collided with the Gaskins' car.
The Gaskins vehicle was not damaged.

Report Thefts And Break-Ins

FARMVILLE — Police reported today there were two break-ins and the theft of a number of batteries during the night.

A break-in at Farmville Bakery was discovered at 5:10 a.m. but it appeared that nothing was missing, proprietor Dorothy Wrought told police. A window was broken on the roof of the Lancaster Realty Co. building, but no entry was made.
Batteries were taken from several vehicles at Ellis Garage on West Wilson Street.

Investigation of all three incidents was under way.
Farmville Police Chief Ron Cooper said.

Has Faced 'Grim Reaper' 360 Times

BRADENTON, Fla. (AP) — Serena Lages says she's saved the lives of her 18-month-old twins hundreds of times — she refuses to let them succumb to Sudden Infant Death Syndrome, which stops their hearts and breathing with no warning.

The ordeal began when Adam and Sommer, born a month premature, were 3 weeks old.

"That day I noticed with (Sommer) that she had had a strange cry all day — plaintive sounding," her mother said.

At midnight, Mrs. Lages bathed Adam, then tried to awaken Sommer.

"She didn't want to wake up — that was abnormal. She made no sound in the bath... I dried her, and was putting her diaper on when she opened her eyes. They rolled back into her head and she quit everything. Her heart stopped and her breathing stopped."

Mrs. Lages said she revived Sommer with cardiopulmonary resuscitation, which she said she learned when her late husband was stricken with severe heart trouble. Sommer took a few breaths — and stopped again.

"I called the rescue squad. She was literally dying in my hands," said Mrs. Lages.

When the rescue squad arrived, Sommer was again alert. Nothing could be found wrong with her, but both she and Adam were taken to the hospital. Tests found nothing, so Mrs. Lages went to a pediatrician.

Sudden Infant Death Syndrome, also known as crib death, kills two of every 1,000 infants nationwide. Little is known about the syndrome, but many researchers theorize the disease is actually a variety of disorders triggered by different factors.

"They don't know why a normal, healthy baby goes to bed and slips off," Mrs. Lages said. "They suspect that (such) babies succumb because the stem of the brain, the part of the brain that controls involuntary body functions, is not fully matured and the brain forgets to tell the baby to breathe."

Through the pediatrician, the twins received machines that monitor their breathing and heartbeat while they are asleep. When the child's heart beats too slowly or breathing stops, an alarm sounds.

"I sat down thinking I hope those alarms never sound. In 10 seconds, Sommer's went off," Mrs. Lages said.

Mrs. Lages also learned infant CPR, which differs from the procedure used on an adult.

"You can explode an infant's lungs with too much air pressure, and break the sternum (breastbone) with too much pressure," Mrs.

Lages said.

At home, when the twins nap, the monitors are in place.

After the alarm, touching, rubbing or pounding the baby's back usually makes breathing resume. If not, CPR must be administered.

Sommer has had 248 episodes and Adam 112, Mrs. Lages says. One night, she said she was alerted by the monitors 21 times.

Mrs. Lages, whose first husband died, divorced her second husband, the twins' father. She keeps the babies with her constantly while caring for her children from her first marriage, Aaron, 12, and Noelle, 9.

Both have been taught how to stimulate the babies and use CPR. A code list is set by the phone so they can call the rescue squad to explain the baby's condition while their mother continues CPR.

The episodes seem to be decreasing, as they often do in SIDS children as they pass the age of one year. Adam hasn't had one in five months, and Sommer has had only five mild ones in the same period.

On Monday, the twins were given cardiac tests. Adam was pronounced fit, but Sommer was diagnosed as having an abnormally shaped heart — a hole in the upper left chamber and a murmur, her mother said.

The hole could require surgery, "but they assured me — one way or another, she will be OK," Mrs. Lages said.

Chosen To Attend Program At Duke

Rose High senior Suzanne Wille was one of 84 gifted and talented high school students from across the nation who attended the Duke University Precollege program this summer.

Daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Carl R. Wille, Suzanne was chosen for the prestigious program during her junior year at Rose. Selection is based on academic ability, motivation and likelihood of contribution to the program.

Established in 1978 by Dr. Robert N. Sawyer, associate professor and director of the Talent Identification Program under the guidance of Dr. William Bevan, William Preston Few Professor of Psychology and provost, the program has grown from 24 students to 84 in five years. It is designed with an academic focus to provide the scholastic challenge of college level courses to highly qualified college-bound students.

High school students in the Duke summer program take introductory level courses in the humanities, social sciences, natural sciences and engineering along with the regular undergraduates on campus for the summer session.

Suzanne took courses in economics and mathematics during her stay at Duke.

At Rose, Suzanne is vice president of the National Honor Society, secretary of the Student Government Association, and president of the Anchor Club. She was a member of Rose High's 1982 Quiz Bowl teams and has earned varsity letters in swimming and volleyball. She is a member of St. Paul's Episcopal Church.

Arrested In Pot Traffic

STATESVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Federal authorities have arrested five North Carolina men, a Florida man and a man from Jamaica on marijuana trafficking charges after recovering more than one (M) million dollars worth of marijuana late Thursday night.

Robert Pence, special agent in charge of the FBI in North Carolina says the arrests were made after more than 37 bales of marijuana were unloaded from a plane that landed at the Statesville airport early Thursday night.

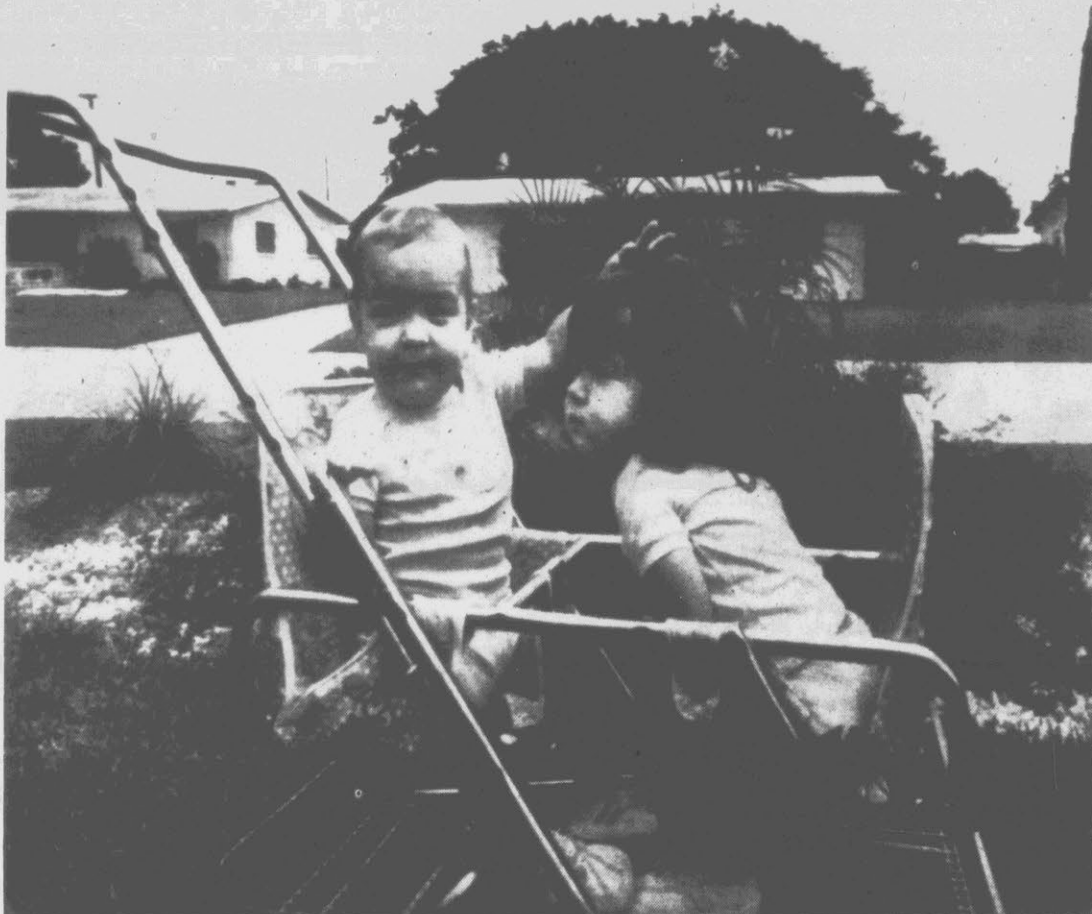

Pence says authorities decided to wait until the marijuana had been distributed before making the arrests. He said authorities followed the off-loaders to a remote area near Troutman, and began arresting people when they left the scene after picking up the marijuana.

Those arrested were Charles David Cauble, 25, of Pineville; Danny Stutts, 31, of Mooresville; Carleton L. Swaney, 37, of Newton;

David H. Swaney, 33, of Charlotte; Rodney L. Guion, 42, of Lake Norman; Dwight Williams, 30, of Miami, Fla. and Simon Cain, Kinston, 29, of Jamaica.

The seven are being held in the Iredell County jail.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

SPREADING THE BIBLE'S GOOD NEWS

IN LUKE, CHAPTER 10, WE LEARN THAT JESUS SENT FORTH SEVENTY DISCIPLES TO GO TO THE CITIES AND TOWNS THROUGHOUT THE LAND, PREACHING AND HEALING THE SICK IN HIS NAME. THAT THIS VENTURE WAS SUCCESSFUL IS QUITE EVIDENT, FOR THE SEVENTY RETURNED FROM THEIR MISSION WITH GREAT JOY, SAYING, "EVEN THE DEVILS ARE SUBJECT UNTO US THROUGH THY NAME."

IN MUCH THE SAME SPIRIT AS THOSE EARLY MISSIONARIES, ONE OF THE FIRST BIBLE SCHOOLS FOR SPECIFIC TRAINING OF MISSIONARIES OPENED ITS DOORS OCTOBER 1883, IN NEW YORK CITY—ITS TOTAL ENROLLMENT OF STUDENTS THAT FIRST YEAR WAS FOUR!

IN 1894, ITS RATHER LENGTHY NAME WAS SHORTENED TO "MISSIONARY TRAINING INSTITUTE" AND IT STILL EXISTS TODAY IN NYACK, N.Y. WITH AN ENROLLMENT OF 700 STUDENTS AND A NEW NAME OF NYACK COLLEGE—STILL DEDICATED TO BRINGING THE BIBLE'S WORD TO THOSE WHO HAVEN'T HEARD IT!

NEXT WEEK: THE WOMAN WHO ARGUED WITH JESUS—AND WON THE ARGUMENT!

If You Have a Habit Of Following The Crowd, We Suggest, The Best Crowd to Follow is the Crowd Going To Church

Number 118 Wasn't Planned That Way

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Rickey Henderson's 118th stolen base of the season was unique — and not just because it tied the Oakland A's outfielder with Lou Brock for the major league single-season base-stealing record.

For the first time all season, Henderson stole a base after he had been picked off first base.

Puzzled by what he said was a different motion and delivery by Milwaukee pitcher Mike Caldwell, Henderson was trapped about 10 feet off first by the left-hander's snap throw in the first inning of the Brewers' 10-3 victory Thursday night.

But instead of retreating to first, into what surely would have been a tag by first baseman Cecil Cooper, Henderson broke for second. He made it safely, sliding head-first under the tag of shortstop Robin Yount, who took the throw from Cooper.

"I was surprised I got picked off and surprised I got to second base," said Henderson, adding his other reaction was "joy at being in the same category with Lou Brock."

Henderson, 23, stole his 118th base in his 126th game of the season. He has been caught stealing a major league record 39 times, but his success ratio is 75 percent.

Brock, the long-time St. Louis Cardinals' star who was here to witness Henderson's historic theft, had only 88 stolen bases by his 127th game when he set the record in 1974.

"Too many countdowns, too many countdowns," a weary Henderson muttered as he threw hadn't gone over my head," he said. "I thought I had a good chance to make it because the first baseman had to make sure he threw the ball over my head instead of hitting me in the back or in the head."

Henderson, who singled to center leading off the game, said Caldwell used a different motion and delivery than he had shown in previous games.

"I was trying to pick up his motion from his feet, but he was locking his knee and I was freezing all the time," Henderson said.

"But I wasn't surprised he (second base umpire Durwood Merrill) called me safe because when I got down in the base path at second, the

"He (Caldwell) was around the plate a lot and didn't get behind," Henderson said. "He made me hit the ball. The main thing he did was throw strikes and make me earn my way on."

After his steal of second, Henderson's first reaction was to go for the record by trying to steal third.

"I thought I had an opportunity to tie and break the record tonight, but when I got to second a left-handed hitter (Dwayne Murphy) was up," he said. "The manager and coaches said let's let the left-hander get you over to third by hitting to the right side and give us a chance to get ahead before I think about the record."

Henderson advanced to third when Murphy grounded out to second, then scored when Davey Lopes grounded to short.

The crowd of 30,896 gave Henderson a standing ovation as he trotted to the A's dugout. He paused to kiss his mother, who was in a box seat next to the dugout.

"She was more excited than I was," he said. "She chose the game of baseball for me."

That Henderson will break the record is considered inevitable, and he will try against Brewers' pitcher Doc Medich tonight. Before the season is through, Henderson may set a record that may never be challenged.

"I always say it's possible to steal 162 bases if you have a good year, if you get on base and if you don't have base runners in front of you," he said.

Mission Accomplished

Henderson's Record Tying Theft Lone Bright Spot For Oakland

By The Associated Press Rickey Henderson likes being in the same category as Lou Brock. Gorman Thomas and the Milwaukee Brewers are a little different. They like being in a category all their own — atop the American League East.

Henderson continued his assault on the record books Thursday night, stealing his 118th base of the season in the first inning to equal Brock's eight-year-old major league single-season record for stolen bases.

It was the A's lone bright spot as Thomas knocked in six runs with a pair of home runs and an RBI single and Mike Caldwell handcuffed Oakland on seven hits as the Brewers whipped the A's 10-3. Coupled with Boston's doubleheader split with the California Angels, the Brewers now lead the AL East by 5½ games.

Henderson singled to lead off the game against the left-handed Caldwell. Three pitches later, Caldwell caught Henderson leaning off first base.

"He (Caldwell) was doing something different from what I had seen of him as far as going to the plate and to first," said Henderson.

Momentarily frozen, Henderson dashed toward second base, beating first baseman Cecil Cooper's throw. It was his long-awaited 118th theft of the season.

"It's great tying and being in the same category with Lou Brock," said Henderson, who will try to break the record of the former St. Louis Cardinals' great Friday night.

The Brewers were just as happy for the speedy left fielder. Well almost.

"Everybody got what he wanted tonight," said Thomas. "Henderson got his steal, Mike Caldwell got his win, and we won the game. What more could you ask for?"

Thomas' homers were his 33rd and 34th of the season, tops in the major leagues.

Angels 10-3, Red Sox 1-4
Dwight Evans' capped a four-run third inning with a two-run homer and Bob Stanley pitched 61-3 innings of four-hit shutout relief as Boston won the second game. In the afternoon game, Brian Downing and Doug DeCinces homered to lead a 16-hit attack as Ken Forsch notched the 100th victory of his career by scattering seven hits.

The split dropped the Angels into a first-place tie in the AL West with Kansas City.

Downing hit his 20th homer, a two-run shot in the fifth inning of the opener, while DeCinces added a solo shot in the eighth, his 25th.

Royals 5, Rangers 3
John Wathan's two-run single highlighted a three-run eighth inning as Kansas City moved into a first-place tie in the AL West with California. Bud Black, 4-4, got the victory, while Dan Quisenberry worked the ninth inning to record his 30th save as the Royals won their fourth straight over the Rangers.

The Royals snapped a 2-2 tie against Charlie Hough, 11-11, in the eighth. Willie Wilson singled and was sacrificed to second. George Brett was intentionally walked and Amos Otis delivered a single, scoring Wilson. Hal McRae was intentionally walked to set the stage for Wathan's hit.

Orioles 12, Blue Jays 5
Eddie Murray blasted a pair of home runs, including a grand slam in Baltimore's eight-run third inning, and Rich Dauer and Cal Ripken Jr. added three-run homers as the Orioles romped to their sixth straight victory and sent Toronto to its eighth loss in nine games.

Murray hit his sixth career grand slam, batting left-handed, and added a solo shot in the eighth inning, batting right-handed. It was the second time this season he has homered from both sides of the plate and the fifth time in his career. Dauer's seventh homer also came in the third inning, while Ripken's 20th home run came in the fourth.

Yankees 7, Twins 2
Lee Mazzilli cracked a three-run homer and Rick Cerone delivered a two-run double during New York's five-run fifth inning as the Yankees posted their fourth victory in five games. Ron Guidry, 12-5, scattered nine hits in eight innings, while Rudy May pitched the ninth.

Ken Griffey added a solo homer, his ninth of the season and fourth in last eight games, while Lou Piniella contributed an RBI double.

Minnesota built a 2-0 lead, scoring in the second on an RBI double by Bobby Mitchell and adding a run in the third on a run-scoring single by Gary Ward.

Mariners 5, Tigers 4
Manny Castillo's first major league home run snapped an eighth-inning tie as Seattle snapped a seven-game losing streak. Dave Revering and Joe Simpson also homered off Detroit starter Jack Morris, 14-13.

Morris has given up a league-leading 32 home runs this season, 11 short of the AL single-season record set by Pedro Ramos of Washington Senators in 1957. Robin Roberts of the Philadelphia Phillies holds the major league record of 46 established in 1956.

Larry Herndon hit his 20th homer and Glenn Wilson added his ninth roundtripper of the season for Detroit, both with the bases empty.

Bill Caudill, 11-6, worked the final 12-3 innings to earn the victory.

Area Football Coaches Add To Their Staffs

A Staff Report

The 1982 high school football season gets started tonight and a number of area schools have made changes in their assistant coaching staffs.

Ayden-Grifton, one of two area schools which does not open its season tonight, has two new coaches. Alan Wilson, A-G's baseball coach, is back on the gridiron after a three-year absence and Clark Harrell joins the A-G staff for the first time.

Wilson will coach the offensive backs and secondary. Harrell, a Tarboro native who is in graduate school at East Carolina, will coach the offensive line and defensive line.

A-G head coach Dixon Sauls, dean of the area head coaches, and assistant Alvin Frazier return. Frazier coaches the receivers and kickers.

North Pitt second-year coach B.T. Chappell has brought in two new assistants, replacing Jeffrey Warren, Lee Everett and Doug Warren. Warren will coach the junior varsity this year.

Joining Chappell will be Richard Stevens and Mike Edmondson. Stevens, coach at the old Ayden High School, will coach the offensive and defensive line while Edmondson will coach the defensive secondary and receivers.

D.H. Conley has also lost two of its assistant coaches. Defensive coordinator Ritchie Wynns and assistant Chuck Dunn have left. Dunn will remain as track coach but Wynns will not coach either football or baseball. Wynns was the DHC baseball coach the past two seasons.

Back for DHC will be Richard Bunch, who takes over as defensive coordinator, and Joey Baggett.

New this season at DHC is Steven Vanoer, a former Roanoke Rapids assistant who will be the weight lifting coach for DHC second-year coach Gerald Garner.

Farmville Central second-year coach Gilbert Carroll has had two assistant coaching changes. Gone are Danny Wait and Stuart Miller.

Replacing them will be Billy Davis, who is also the Farmville baseball coach. Davis will work with the junior varsity and the varsity. Car-

Rogers On Hurt List

Linebacker Gerry Rogers suffered a broken bone in his hand as injury problems continued to mount at that position.

It is already certain that starter Mike Grant will miss the opener with N.C. State and may not be available for the entire season. Amos Twitty, the other starter, has been sidelined with a shoulder separation.

As Coach Ed Emory and his staff look for replacements, injuries have also occurred to John Columbia (knee injury), Chuck Northcutt (knee injury — out for the season), and Mo Bennett (muscle pull).

The injury to Rogers has moved Ronald Reid into that slot, while P.J. Jordan is handling the other inside linebacker position.

Peele

You know, it only seems like yesterday that the 1981 football season drew to a close.

And now, here it is the opening night of the 1982 season. Wow. They tell me that's a sign of getting older.

At any rate, the start of the season is here, and tonight seven of our nine area teams are in action, starting the high school season.

Our panel of experts will return to action next weekend, as many of the collegiate teams — and the rest of the high school teams kick off the season.

Some of you may remember that Vickie Spivey and Tom Baines tied for first place last year, followed by this writer and the guests in a tie for third. Rick Scoppe finished fifth and Joe Jenkins — as usual — finished last.

Joe vowed at the time to win in 1982, and starting next week, it's time for him to try and make that promise a reality. Joe, better luck next year.

Baines, who tied with Scoppe two seasons back, says he's going for the whole apple this year. "No more Mr. Nice Guy," he says. Jenkins' comments are unprintable.

Now, a look at the high school games of the week.

Rose and Ayden-Grifton, two of the five Pitt County Schools are idle this week, and will get into the action next Friday night.

Farmville Central opens the 1982 season by playing host to West Craven. The Eagles have one of the better backs in the East in Norman Becton, and the Jaguar defense must stop him to pull out the victory. Opening game problems might make this hard to do, but the Jags could also counter with speedy Wesley Carmon. We'll give Farmville the nod in this one, 22-20.

North Pitt visits Roanoke in the only opener involving two area teams. The Panthers are looking to get away to a good start, while Roanoke, despite some offensive problems, appears to have a solid defense led by all-everything Donnie Wallace. That should be enough, and the Redskins should win, 26-6.

D.H. Conley plays host to Washington in another opener. The Vikings are hoping to be improved this year, but the Pam Pack is expecting to have its best team in years. They have several outstanding backs, and the Vike defense will have its hands full stopping them. We look for a Washington win, 28-7.

Outside the county, we look for Greene Central to top South Lenoir, Williamston to stop Currituck and Belhaven to best Jamesville.

Maryland Ready For Comeback

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Starting with the uniforms and ending with the offices and weight rooms, Maryland football is ready to stage a comeback.

The Terrapins, under former head coach Jerry Claiborne, established themselves as the dominant force in the Atlantic Coast Conference in the 1970s. In 1979 and 1980, however, the team dropped to 7-4 and 8-4, respectively.

Last season marked the end of Claiborne's tenure and he went out with a 4-6-1 mark, his worst ever. After he was lured to Kentucky, the transformation was begun.

Athletic director Dick Dull sought a coach who would bring in an exciting offense, yet maintain a stingy defense. He found that coach in Bobby Ross.

So far, Ross is pleased with what he's seen in the two-a-day practices, especially since he's installed a new offense.

"Our progress has been good," Ross told reporters during the Atlantic Coast Conference media tour. "Most significant is that our retention to our offensive and defensive schemes has been very, very good. That's been the real surprise. They're picking things up real well."

Much of last year's offense returns, especially at the skill positions. Quarterback Boomer Esiason passed for more than 1,600 yards in 1981 and could improve on that figure under the new offense.

Esiason's three favorite receivers, tight end John Tice, and ends Russell Davis and Mike Lewis, are also back. Lewis not only sees the new offense as an opportunity to improve Maryland's record, but as a chance to showcase his talents.

"I'm looking for better things," he says. "The first day (when Ross arrived) I realized things could be different. This is my last go around. This is my last chance to show people what Mike Lewis is about."

Ross came to Maryland from the Kansas City Chiefs, where he had a chance to coach running back Joe Delaney. He says the Terrapins could use Delaney's breakaway speed.

"We have some good players, but I don't think we have enough at any position to say that we're ready to compete on a national scale," he says. "We've got some strengths, but we're a little slow, and we don't have a lot of depth at some positions."

The defense, led by guard Mike Corvino and tackle Gurnest Brown, can provide the offense with the chances to score. Without all-time rushing leader Charlie Wysocki for long yardage plays, Ross isn't sure where the impetus for that high-powered attack will come from.

"It's very hard to take a ball and drive it down somebody's throat," he says. "We're faster than we were in the spring, but I don't know if we have the game-breaker."

Caponi, Stacy Fire 68 Rounds

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — Donna Caponi hasn't won on the LPGA tour this year, but she says she hasn't lost the ability or desire to add to her 24 career victories.

Caponi and Hollis Stacy each shot opening round 4-under-par 68s Thursday and led the way into today's second round of the $165,000 Henredon Classic.

The Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament is being played at the 6,191-yard, par-72 Willow Creek Golf Club.

After making birdies on three of the final four holes, Caponi bristled at the suggestion that she might not be able to reach the 30-victory mark to qualify for the Women's Golf Hall of Fame.

"I need six more wins for the Hall of Fame," Caponi said. "I'll play till I make it. Even if I'm 80."

While Caponi left no doubt that she still can, and wants to win, she also said it wasn't necessary.

"I don't feel like I have to win," said Caponi, 37, who turned professional in 1965.

"I don't have to prove anything. I've got 24 wins, four majors ... If I never win another tournament, I've had an excellent career."

Caponi rallied from three strokes down to catch Stacy by one-putting on holes 15 through 17 with all three putts in the 15-18-foot range.

Stacy had been among the leaders all day, combining booming drives with long-range accuracy around the greens. She birdied two of the final four holes by knocking in a chip shot from 50 feet off the green on No. 15 and sinking a 35-foot-putt on No. 17.

"Overall, it was a very solid, good hitting round," Stacy said.

Another who found success around the greens Thursday was Cathy Sherk, who needed just 27 putts en route to a three-way tie at 69 with Kathy Hite and Amy Alcott.

"I was really close with the putts," Sherk said. "I was stroking it real well, burning the lip all day. I usually average 31-32 putts per round."

LPGA season earnings leader Carner and Beth Daniel, seeking her sixth victory this season, joined Jerilyn Britz, Alexandra Reinhardt and Patti Rizzo at 2-under-par 70.

Four players were bunched at 71, while 12 stood at even par 72, including Nancy Lopez.

Lopez stood at 3-under par when she hit her second putt on No. 17 into the bunker and two-putted from 25 feet for bogey. On No. 18, she tried to cut the corner on the 377-yard par 4 hole and landed in the water. She followed that by missing two putts from five feet for a double bogey.

Defending champion Sandra Haynie finished at 1-over-par 73, while Sally Little, runner-up on the earnings list, shot 75.

Ex-Pirates Doing Well

Several former East Carolina baseball players are doing well in their first year of professional baseball.

Pitcher Bob Patterson has been moved to Class A Reno, Nev. team of the Padres. So far this year, he's had a couple of high strikeout games, including one of 16.

Pitcher Bill Wilder led his team in ERA at Butte, Mont. this summer with a 1.69 mark in 11 games. He had a 2-1 record as a relief pitcher.

Catcher Fran Fitzgerald is reportedly hitting over .300 with the Orioles club in Bluefield, Va.

Floyd, Duo Share Series Lead

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Ray Floyd shared the first-round lead with Australian Bob Shearer and Mashario Kuramoto of Japan. And they were the only players under par in the World Series of Golf.

Neither fact surprised Floyd.

"I've been on a roll for 2½ to three years. I'm playing as comfortably as I ever have. I have everything under control," said Floyd Thursday after his opening 1-under-par 69.

Kuramoto, despite missing 11 greens, and Shearer, just recovering from a shoulder injury, matched Floyd's start as Firestone South played like its old, venerable self.

"This is the way it used to play years ago. It was unforgiving if you missed a fairway. It was the hardest course we played," said Floyd, who needs the $100,000 first prize to all but wrap up his first money title with more than $431,000.

Masters champion Craig Stadler, less than $4,000 behind Floyd, and Lanny Wadkins, last week's Buick Open winner, were one stroke behind with 70s.

Then came Jack Nicklaus, Tom Weiskopf and Curtis Strange at 71.

Tom Watson, the U.S. and British Open champion, went for a 75 after hitting his approach shot in the water for a double bogey on the third hole.

Bill Rogers, the defending champion still looking for his first victory of 1982, settled for 76. He had three straight bogeys in one stretch and double bogeyed "The Monster," the 625-yard, par-5, 16th hole.

Nicklaus, with five Series titles, 14 firsts or seconds and $522,000 in Firestone earnings alone, agreed with Floyd.

"It's the first time I've seen Firestone play like the old Firestone in 10-12 years," said Nicklaus. "The greens were firm and fast. They were difficult to get chip shots up and down."

Kuramoto, 26, the master of the short game, had no such difficulty.

He holed a 20-foot birdie chip shot on 18 after 1-putting 11 times over this 7,173-yard layout. He saved par nine times, four of them coming on the last four holes.

"Everything today went right," said the 26-year-old leader through an interpreter. "No, that's not the normal way I play." Shearer, who putts cross-handed, knocked in a 40-foot for a birdie on the 17th hole to gain a share of the lead. He was stunned.

"I'm delighted. It's such an awesome course," said Shearer, 34, the winner of the Tallahassee Open this spring.

Vermeil Worries About Chemistry In The Line

By The Associated Press
The Philadelphia Eagles, who have had one of the toughest defensive lines in the National Football League in recent years, have some new faces to greet opposing offenses this year.

New, but not necessarily better, and that has Coach Dick Vermeil worried.

"I've been a little concerned about what you would call the 'chemistry' of the defensive line," says Vermeil, whose team travels to Atlanta tonight for a preseason exhibition game. "The offensive line has been starting to assume a much greater share of the responsibility for setting the tempo in practice. That's always been dominated by the defensive line."

A persistent knee problem forced the retirement of defensive end Claude Humphrey and Pro Bowl nose tackle Charlie Johnson was traded to Minnesota after he disagreed with Vermeil's practice philosophy.

Nose man Ken Clarke and end Leonard Mitchell have been getting most of the playing time with the departure of Johnson and Humphrey. Carl Hairston and Dennis Harrison are the holdover starters at end.

"I miss them, but you have to learn to play without them," Clarke said of Humphrey and Johnson. "It's the nature of the game that people come and people go. We're working on it, and Carl, Dennis and myself are starting to jell. They have to get used to me being in the middle now. That's what training camp and the preseason are all about."

In tonight's other preseason game, Buffalo is at Washington.

Saturday night, Detroit is at Cincinnati, San Francisco travels to San Diego, Cleveland is at New Orleans, Seattle is, at the Los Angeles Rams, the New York Jets battle the New York Giants, New England is at Dallas, Miami is at Kansas City, St. Louis is at Chicago, Minnesota is at Denver, Tampa Bay is at Houston and Baltimore travels to Pittsburgh.

Sunday's lone game finds the Green Bay Packers at the Los Angeles Raiders.

Atlanta goes into its game against the Eagles with Steve Bartkowski and Mike Moroski entrenched as the top two quarterbacks, but with a spirited competition for the No. 3 spot between Georgia Tech's Mike Kelley and Brian Broomell of Temple.

Hubert Oliver, a second-year man from Arizona who was a 10th-round draft pick by the Eagles in 1981, is making a strong bid to become Philadelphia's running back starter alongside Wilbert Montgomery.

"He doesn't do anything half-speed," Vermeil says. "His work habits and intensity are something you've got to reward."

Buffalo is still playing without running back Joe Cribbs and wide receiver Jerry Butler, who have been holdouts during training camp.

Both Cribbs and Butler have valid contracts, but both want to renegotiate.

Grimes, Last Of Legal Wetball Hurlers, Say They Can't Prove It

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent
"It's absurd, absolutely absurd," sputtered old Burleigh Grimes, his voice coming in loud and clear over the phone from Holcombe Lake, Wis. "So they suspend Gaylord Perry for throwing a spitter."
"How do they know? How do they prove it? They say the spitter is illegal because it's unsanitary. Tommytry. What are they going to do — outlaw spitting?"
"You might as well outlaw baseball. You can't spit on your glove. People in the stands won't even be able to spit. I know some managers who would choke to death if they couldn't spit out that tobacco juice."
Eighty-nine years old last week, a Hall of Famer, winner of 270 big league games, former coach, scout and manager, Grimes was the last of baseball's legal spitballers, so he has more than a casual interest in the latest furor involving one of his ilk.
Although long suspended of applying wet or greasy substances to the ball and making it do funny tricks at the plate, the 43-year-old Gaylord Perry of the Seattle Mariners got nailed for the first time for the offense last Monday night in a game against the Boston Red Sox.

Plate Umpire Dave Phillips, who had warned the veteran right-hander earlier, gave Perry the thumb. American League President Lee MacPhail added insult to injury by fining Perry $250 and suspending him for 10 days.
An outraged Perry threatened "so many appeals to MacPhail will have to hire 10 assistants."
He has an equally outraged supporter in his corner.

"I think they just wanted to lean on him because of all the years he's supposed to have been throwing it," said Grimes. "They were trying to make up for what they hadn't been able to do in the past."
"There's no way to prove it. It's no more of an illegal pitch than the knuckleball, the screwball or forkball, no more dangerous. This "unsanitary" thing they bring up, as I said, is pretty stupid."
"I've always contended that the spitball was the same as any other pitch — even the fast ball and the breaking ball — and like all these other pitches ought to have a name and be allowed."
Grimes was one of the game's all-time greats whose career spanned two decades with the Pirates, Dodgers, Giants, Cubs, Cardinals and finally the Yankees. A rugged son of a Wisconsin lumberman, he often refused to shave, earning the nickname, "Old Stubblebeard."
It was a ploy to intimidate pitchers. But nothing intimidated them more than Burleigh's wicked spitball.
When the pitch was outlawed in 1920, Grimes was one of some 20 pitchers utilizing the tricky delivery. Baseball permitted them to continue, thus applying the rule only to newcomers. Burleigh was the only known spitballer still throwing when he retired after the 1934 season.
The only two men to win more than 40 games a season — Jack Chesbro of the Yankees and Ed Walsh of the White Sox — were spitball specialists. The Yankees' Whitey Ford was frequently accused of dampening the ball a bit but was never caught and convicted.
Jim Bunning, who pitched for the Tigers, Phils and Pirates in the 1960s, was thrown out of a game when the umpire said he rubbed up the ball with his belt buckle. Rick Honeycutt of the Texas Rangers nabbed for allegedly using a thumb tack to scuff a ball when he was with the Seattle Mariners.
The charge has been hurled at a number of recent and still active pitchers, including Don Drysdale, Don Sutton and Tommy John.

MONTREAL (AP) — Moments after hitting his second two-run homer, Montreal Expos catcher Gary Carter was talking about the one that got away.
"In my first at-bat, I got a slider that I popped to the catcher," Carter said Thursday night. "I should have hit that one out, too. I was upset."
It was one of Carter's few mistakes against Houston Astros starter Vern Ruhle, 7-10, the man he victimized for his 26th and 27th homers — the second coming with one out in the eighth inning — in leading the Expos to a 5-3 triumph, completing a sweep of their National League baseball doubleheader.
The Expos won the first game 3-2 when Andre Dawson singled home rookie Bryan Little from second base with two out in the eighth inning. There was no other National League action.
"We definitely needed this," said Carter. "We battled back, and that's what we need to do."

Carter's Two-Run Homer Helps Expos Sweep Pair From Astros

An inning earlier, Dawson made a perfect throw from center field to nab Ray Knight at the plate and preserve the tie.
The doubleheader sweep left Carter tied with teammate Al Oliver for second place among NL leaders in runs-batted-in. Both have 88.
"It's a friendly rivalry," said Carter. "We're both out to try and help this club win."
In the opener, Little, who entered the game as a defensive replacement, beat out a bunt single to open the eighth against reliever Bert Roberge, 1-2.
Tim Raines got him to second with an infield out, and one out later, Dawson lined a single off the glove of shortstop Dickie Thon to bring in the winning run.
The blow made Jeff Reardon, 7-3, a winner for the second time in three hours. He worked two innings of two-hit relief in the opener before coming back in the nightcap.
After the first two Houston batters reached base in the ninth, Woodie Fryman relieved Reardon and retired three straight for his 10th save.
"On the second home run, he must have thought I'd be guessing fastball because he threw me a slider again, and I was waiting for it."

league baseball players.
Despite the mediation service's record in settling disputes, Ed Garvey, the union's chief negotiator, remained doubtful of a quick settlement.
"I don't think this is the answer. I think it is premature to get a mediator into the dispute when management doesn't have a serious offer on the table," Garvey said.
Despite his skepticism, Garvey said he would agree to meet with a mediator if McMurray called both sides together.
Meanwhile, Garvey has called for a meeting of the union's executive committee to map out new strategy in light of the breakdown in negotiations. The committee is expected to announce its plans for a strike at the meeting, scheduled for Monday morning in Chicago.
On Thursday, Garvey shared the dais at a Washington Redskins luncheon with Skins' owner Jack Kent Cooke.
Cooke used the occasion to take issue with the players' demand for a 55-percent share of gross revenues. The revenue-sharing concept is the major stumbling block to reaching an agreement.

Owners Call For Fed. Mediator
WASHINGTON (AP) — With the threat of a players' strike hanging over their heads, National Football League owners have called on a federal mediator to help settle the contractual dispute between the league and the players' union.
Less than 24 hours after negotiations between the NFL and the National Football League Players Association were indefinitely suspended, the NFL Management Council sought the intervention of a third party to bring both sides together.
In a letter sent Thursday to Kay McMurray, Director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, the owners formally requested the mediation service's assistance in reaching a new collective bargaining agreement with the NFLPA.
Officials at the mediation service refused immediate comment on the request, according to spokeswoman D.J. Yount.
In an interview earlier this month, however, McMurray said he looked forward to becoming actively involved in the negotiations.
The mediation service played a key role in ending last year's strike by major owners earlier, Dawson made a perfect throw from center field to nab Ray Knight at the plate and preserve the tie.

The doubleheader sweep left Carter tied with teammate Al Oliver for second place among NL leaders in runs-batted-in. Both have 88.

Job Market, Services Tight For Older People

By LEE CREEK
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) - Federal cutbacks, inflation and a diminishing job market threaten the financial security of many North Carolinians aged 45 and older, state employment experts say.

Hugh Ebert, an employee with the state Employment Security Commission who works with older people, says that in the past six months, 39,000 people aged 45 and older have entered the ESC system, compared to 65,521 in the previous fiscal year.

"The people in their 50s aren't looking to Social Security - they can't even get that now," he said. "They're competing for jobs with the total population and they're finding the competition tougher."

Ebert said most people who have retired are in a "no win battle right now. They're trying to live on what they have. They try to live on more limited income. They find they're having to go to their families looking for some type of support."

The result is a two-sided problem: many people old enough to retire must remain in the work force, while many choosing to remain in the work force can't find work, he said.

Changes in the Social Security system imposed as a result of federal budget cutbacks have not been as severe as many people think, according to Rose Marie Downey of the Social Security Administration.

One change is that payments previously begun in the month that a person reached 62 now start the following month.

In addition, people with limited income and resources receiving the minimum benefit are eligible for supplemental income at age 60 instead of age 65. Blind or disabled people are also eligible.

Under another new law, people age 72 and over will continue to receive full benefits regardless of their earnings until 1983. The law delays a scheduled reduction in the age requirement from 72 to 70.

Alterations in Medicaid were most significant, according to Aileen Matthews, North Carolina's Medicaid director.

Transferring personal property to meet eligibility standards has been limited but a clause has been added to allow more property to be attached to the home site when figuring eligibility.

To bring North Carolina law in line with federal regulations, the state has begun considering Medicare and insurance payments in figuring the amount Medicaid will pay, Ms. Matthews said.

"They had to actually pay out-of-pocket what Medicaid had illegally been paying for them previously," Ms. Matthews said. She said she had no idea how much it had cost state, county and local governments.

Federal cutbacks have decreased prescriptions, mental health benefits and the number of paid visits to physicians. However, state legislative funding raised their number of physician visits covered from 18 to 24 per year, while increasing eligible prescriptions from four to six per month and granting unlimited mental health visits.

The General Assembly also lifted restrictions on prescriptions for some life-threatening illnesses.

While changes in Medicaid and Social Security have forced many retirees back to work, many are having trouble finding jobs.

"If you're in demand occupations, the problem isn't as severe," Ebert said. "If you're in education, social services or government, you've got real problems."

Of those 45 and older who entered the ESC system in fiscal 1981, 19 percent were placed in jobs. Only 12 percent have found work so far this fiscal year.

Ebert said a Division of Aging program that provides part-time jobs is among those being threatened by federal cuts.

"There seems to be a decline in terms of provision of service (for the aged)," said Paul Sebo, liaison to the Governor's Advisory Council on Aging. "The last 3-4 years the cuts have been courtesy of the federal government."

Sebo said the state and private sector would have to pick up the slack to avoid further reductions in services.

"It would put a real burden on the state, county and local governments because they aren't taking in the revenue they should because times are bad," he said. "They don't have the money, but there's a greater need."

Ebert said 10 or 15 years from now there might be a demand for older workers as the percentage of young people declines.

"But now, if you're in the labor market and 55 years old, you're probably the most trusted employee a company can have," he said. "If you're out of the labor market, you've got problems finding a job."

Declining Oil Production Can Slow China's Modernization

By BARTON REPERT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP)

CIA analysts forecast that declining oil production will seriously limit China's industrial growth, at least until prospects for coal and offshore oil improve during the late 1980s.

Energy constraints alone will slow the industrial growth rate to between 3 and 5 percent annually through 1985, compared with 9.6 percent in 1975-1980, concluded a study by the intelligence agency's Office of East Asian Analysis.

The report was part of a summary of papers released Wednesday by the congressional Joint Economic Committee, assessing China's "Four Modernizations" drive to upgrade industry, agriculture, military forces, and science and technology.

Another study prepared by CIA analysts found that China's military modernization program is making "limited progress" but still has far to go before Peking attains an up-to-date fighting machine.

Rep. Henry S. Reuss, D-Wis., chairman of the committee, said that despite advances since the death of Mao Tse-tung in 1976, "China faces serious economic problems. Agricultural production is barely keeping up with the population. Oil production peaked in 1979 and has been declining, and energy can be expected to be a constraint on growth for the next few years."

"The defense burden has been rather moderate, outlays having been reduced or kept level in the past several years. But there are pressures to increase defense allocations. Such a change in policy could have serious consequences for the economy," Reuss said in releasing the studies.

CIA analysts Robert Michael Field and Judith A. Flynn noted that both Chinese and Western perceptions of China's industrial prospects have "changed drastically" since then Premier Hua Guofeng announced an ambitious 10-year plan of economic modernization in March 1978.

Planners in Peking, "who were counting on continued high growth in oil output to fuel and finance the modernization program - found that oil prospects had been seriously overstated," they wrote.

Rather than increasing by 10 percent annually as had been projected, Chinese oil production actually peaked at 148 million tons of coal equivalent in 1979 and is now expected to drop to 126 million tons by 1985, Field and Flynn said.

The analysts forecast that this would bring a continuing "downward drift" in China's heavy industry through the mid-1980s, while light industry grows at a rate of about 8 percent annually over the same period. They added that the tight energy supply will probably force Peking "to intervene repeatedly in the allocation of fuel."

"This general pattern will persist until the energy shortage is relieved," Field and Flynn wrote. "The prospects for coal and offshore oil make the second half of the 1980s brighter." Also, they said, China's massive and conveniently located coal reserves indicate that Peking "can count on ample longer-term energy availability."

The question of Chinese military modernization has emerged as a particularly sensitive issue over the past several years, since the United States moved to establish full diplomatic relations with Peking and restrict official ties with Taiwan.

In the Joint Economic Committee publication, CIA analysts Sydney H. Jammes and G. Lawrence Lamborn wrote that "although China's defense modernization is still in an early stage and undoubtedly faces severe tests, the program is making limited progress."

Peking's drive to upgrade its military forces has been spurred by strong apprehension over Soviet military intentions in Asia.

However, Jammes and Lamborn noted that "China evidently views the Soviet Union as a long-term rather than as an immediate danger, and defense modernization probably will continue to hold the lowest priority among the Four Modernizations."

Job-Creating Tax Plan 'On Line' In Louisiana

By GUY COATES
Associated Press Writer
BATON ROUGE, La. (AP)

Touted as a first in the nation, Louisiana's new business tax break plan to create jobs for the disadvantaged will begin in October and applications already are on file.

Although 10 states, including Florida, have laws similar to the state Enterprise Zone Act, none has actually started in both urban and rural areas that are economically depressed, said Nadia Goodman, director of state business development.

Louisiana has led the nation in expansions of manufacturing facilities since 1977 and was No. 2 last year in new and expanded manufacturing plants, Ms. Goodman said.

"Hopefully," she said, "this law will help keep us there."

The program, approved by the Legislature a year ago, comes at a bad time with the administration of Gov. Dave Treen still unsure if this year's $5.3 billion operating budget is in the black.

"No one knows how much the tax break program is going to hurt the fisc because it's new," said Ms. Goodman.

Among applications that will be ready for the Board of Commerce to deal with in October is one from a company building a pressed wood operation to employ 150. "According to preliminary figures, they would get a $734,000 break on the state sales tax," she said. "We're not sure at this time how much they would get on the corporation franchise tax or the corporate income tax."

There is no ceiling on tax breaks, which are good for a five-year period and can be renewed if the board goes along.

In an urban area, companies will get credits on the corporate franchise tax, the corporate income tax and the sales tax.

In rural areas, they'll get sales tax exemptions and a $2,500 tax credit for each new employee hired.

To be eligible, a company must be willing to locate in a depressed area and would be required to hire at least 35 percent of its work force from the ranks of the disadvantaged - the unemployed or those who are on welfare.

"This program also is for ailing companies in depressed areas," said Jim Harris, assistant secretary of the Department of Commerce. "We can try to stabilize them so they won't move. And, we're going after the small businesses, too. The tax breaks would help offset the problems that businesses have in such areas as security and job training."

Harris' department has already designated 307 enterprise zones with over 23 in New Orleans alone. He said New Orleans is second only to rural Rapides Parish in central Louisiana needing such zones.

So far, 23 municipalities and 12 parishes have asked to join the program. "Most other cities and parishes are still working on their applications to join. This is a local option law," he said.

Some areas might not want to participate because the companies involved in a depressed zone also would get a break from parish sales taxes. Local governments, too, are feeling the pinch in trying to find enough money to provide services.

The program is similar to a law just passed by the Legislature which gives the governor sweeping new power to grant tax breaks to industries that are having trouble keeping their doors open.

"It took us a year to get the enterprise zone program going. We're hopeful it won't take that long to get the new one on board as part of our industrial inducement package," said Harris.

Louisiana already has a 10-year tax exemption from parish property taxes for new and expanding industry.

That program and passage of a right-to-work law in the mid 1970s played key roles in helping the state with its high rankings in luring new industry, the Louisiana Association of Business and Industry has said.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: E equals S.

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Opening lead: Nine of ♣.

The winning play is simple and logical. The top-of-nothing heart lead marks East with the ace-jack in the suit and probably length as well. So all declarer need do is play the queen of hearts from dummy at trick one. If East holds up, declarer has a second stopper in the suit. But if he wins the ace he cannot safely continue the suit, for declarer's king and dummy's ten constitute a tenace position. Either way, declarer will have plenty of time to drive out the ace of diamonds and coast home with at least nine tricks.

If you're not using your exercise equipment, sell it this winter in these columns. Call 752-6166.

Some card combinations crop up frequently and are misplayed almost as often. The heart suit in today's hand is a typical example.

North-South reached three no trump in quick time. North first checked to find out whether his partner had four spades by employing the Stayman Convention, then went on to the no trump game when South denied holding a four-card major.

From his own hand and the auction, it was obvious to West that his partner had to have at least four hearts, perhaps more. He therefore made the somewhat unusual lead of the top of his doubleton.

More often than not, declarer will play low from dummy and win the king in hand. When West gets in with the ace of diamonds, he reverts to a heart and East can take four heart tricks for a one-trick set.

The optimists might play the ten of hearts from dummy, but they are in the same position after East simply covers with the jack. They, too, will probably go down one. Some might try refusing the first heart trick, which works as the cards lie, but is doomed to defeat if East has the ace of diamonds and the long hearts.

Black Gold

On August 27, 1859, after a summer of drilling, Edwin L. Drake struck oil, not in Texas or Alaska but in Titusville, PA. This first American well yielded 10 to 35 barrels a day. At that time, petroleum was used primarily in oil lamps. Today, of course, it is our major source of energy. Each American — on the average — uses about 3½ gallons of oil per day for heating fuel or in products such as plastics or tires. Oil from the first well sold for $20 a barrel. Soon, however, everyone was using Drake's drilling technique, and, by 1862, so much oil flooded the market that the price had dropped to 10 cents a barrel. Drake had created the first oil glut.

DO YOU KNOW — Which state produces more oil than any other?

Conclude Crows 'Smart Birds'

NEW YORK (UPI) — Crows have "an extra helping" of bird brains, according to an article in the August issue of Sports Afield magazine.

As evidence that crows are smarter than most bird, even if they are not liked by farmers, the article notes:

The crow in Charlottesville, Va., who reportedly followed a milkman on his rounds, pried the cap off bottles he left, and drank the milk as far down as its bill would reach, then went on to the milkman's next stop; the Scandinavian crow who watched ice fishermen until they went for coffee, then pulled up their lines when the red flag popped up, and ate the fish; and the winter crow roost in Fort Cobb, Okla., where crows migrating south for the winter stop after going just far enough to assure a winter food supply.

BEASTMASTER STARS — Marc Singer stars with Tanya Roberts in Don Coscarelli's film, "The Beastmaster," a late entry in the summer movie sweepstakes. The story takes place in the Bronze Age and deals with a hero who has a rare ability to communicate with animals. (AP Laserphoto)

A Review

'Beastmaster' Movie Incongruities Abound

Connoisseurs of incongruities will have a field day with "The Beastmaster," the PG-rated MGM/UA Entertainment Co. film now playing at The Buccaneer. The film is set in an indeterminate period of antiquity that implies the Bronze Age. Nonetheless, the hero, (Marc Singer) brandishes a huge broadsword with a blade having all the earmarks of a fine Toledo sword. The lovely heroine, Tanya Roberts (formerly a star of "Charlie's Angels"), ambles about clothed in little more than a tremendously broad patent leather belt holding tattered linen in place.

Villages, just a short walking distance apart, range in architectural influences as diverse as Mayan temple pyramids, Philippine platform houses and arched alleyways suggestive of Moroccan marketplaces. If the panther buddy of the hero looks strange, it's with good reason. He's a tiger dyed black.

"The Beastmaster" is in the same genre as "Clash of the Titans" and "Conan the Barbarian." Like its predecessors, its hero is a scantily clad, muscular man with shaggy locks whose role mainly requires the ability to be agile. And no matter how grueling the battles, Mr. Body Beautiful emerges from ground rolling scenes immaculately clean.

The heroine, ditto scantily clad, smiles prettily, sports carefully tangled tresses, and is assigned dialogue a shade less intelligent than that of the hero. Regardless of her ethnic background, she has lovely blue eyes. Invariably, too, she's a slave to the ranking mad priest.

Other similarities include the hero as the sole youthful survivor of a massacre by a marauding evil tribe. These villains, whose time and energy is dedicated to serving a satanic cult, are addicted to dressing up in outlandish garb.

Another important ingredient is plenty of outdoor space, preferably rugged mountain terrain to accommodate the walkathons of the revenge-seeking hero and the vagabond tribes. "The Beastmaster" was filmed primarily in the Simi Valley near Los Angeles and in the canyon wasteland of the Valley of Fire State Park northeast of Las Vegas.

"The Beastmaster" is an incredible blend of imagined paganism, travelogue and a substantial Disney touch — hero Singer is called Beastmaster because he understands the language of beasts and birds. His traveling companions are two lovable ferrets who delight in stealing — a characteristic that comes in pretty handy for the beleaguered hero on several occasions, the aforementioned tiger parading as a panther and a wedgetail eagle who can chirp in complete sentences.

Rip Torn, as the scowling evil priest in long pigtailed decorated with miniature skulls, gives the impression he finds it difficult to suppress laughter; John Amos is given several opportunities to display his hefty torso, and child actor Josh Milrad is starry-eyed as the young lad destined to be a future king.

Special effects are excellent — an alert human eye encased in a huge ornate ring, grotesque masks more expressive than unmasked faces; a moat of quicksand that explodes into a wall of fire, an all-out clash which features horse mounted warriors versus karate experts; and the hero's quick-span vision. This magic he possesses thanks to the circumstances of his birth, perhaps the most bizarre ever depicted on film.

It's all absolutely corny, but it's also great fun in an oddball way.

Helen Hayes In 'Love, Sydney'

By MIKE SILVERMAN
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The white-haired old lady walks briskly onto the soundstage, takes her bows with the rest of the cast, then waits for her entrance cue as the final taping begins.

Just another episode of NBC's comedy series "Love, Sydney" about to go in the can for broadcast sometime during the upcoming season. Except for one difference — the guest star is an 81-year-old theatrical legend named Helen Hayes, winner of two Oscars, an Emmy and just about every other award in sight.

"Love, Sydney," was one of NBC's few hits last year.

Miss Hayes wanders into the show as a sprightly con artist who pretends to be Sidney's much-loved-but-

"When I first asked her to do the show she said, 'No, she didn't want to work anymore.'" Tony Randall, the series' star, tells the studio audience before the taping.

"She said, 'Wait until you've been on the stage for 70 years.' She was lying. She's been on the stage for 75 years, since she was Kaleena's age."

Kaleena is 7-year-old Kaleena Kiff, who plays Patti, one of three main characters on the show. Swoosie Kurtz is her mother, and Randall is Sidney Shorr, a crotchety bachelor who has taken them both into his Manhattan apartment.

"Love, Sydney," was one of NBC's few hits last year.

Miss Hayes wanders into the show as a sprightly con artist who pretends to be Sidney's much-loved-but-

It's been more than four years since Miss Hayes last appeared in a major TV

Pet Monkey A 'Runaway'

HARTSDALE, N.Y. (AP) — New York City may be a jungle but Alfie the monkey waited until his owner made a trip to the suburbs before he made a break for freedom.

Alfie, who is 17 years old, escaped through an open window at a house here Tuesday.

The pet was found by two young brothers Wednesday huddled in a backyard hole to escape the rain. He was feisty.

"He's a snippy little thing. He likes to bite," police dispatcher George Flynn said as officers surrounded the hole on Jane Street.

"Jane Street. Like in 'Tarzan,'" Flynn said. "It was in an underground hole with some planking on it, to get out of the rain."

Police were afraid to use the tranquilizer gun they brought with them, Flynn said, because the monkey was so small. They feared a drug dart would go right through his body.

The problem was solved when the owner, Erica Zern, arrived and offered her pet a banana topped with a Twinkie.

"He came right out. They put a chain on him and took him home," Flynn said. No summons was issued to Ms. Zern, who was visiting friends in Hartsdale.

"We have a leash law for dogs, but we don't have one for monkeys," he said. "Anyway, he's never done this before. It was his first offense."

"I shave my head every morning. And I never wear a hat, even in the winter," said R. Culver Zebien, a 49-year-old truck driver and Daddy Warbucks lookalike who was the defending champion in the Golden Dome division.

Top Tanners In Contest

OCEAN CITY, N.J. (AP) — The sky was blue, the surf was white and the bodies golden brown as more than 100 sol-searchers took a deep breath of salt air and strutted for the crowd at the third annual Miscellaneous Tanning Tournament.

"I laid out in the sun a long time for this," Sandy Jeffers, a skinny 9-year-old, said as he displayed his prize-winning tan Thursday in the Back of the Neck category.

The contest was so informal that it required no entry fee and, although people came to the Jersey Shore from several states to take part, there apparently was some recruiting on the beach just before the festivities began.

More than 100 tanners participated, displaying their bronze mettle on a reviewing stand made of tables placed end to end at Ocean City's Music Pier auditorium on the beach.

"I shave my head every morning. And I never wear a hat, even in the winter," said R. Culver Zebien, a 49-year-old truck driver and Daddy Warbucks lookalike who was the defending champion in the Golden Dome division.

production, an NBC special with Fred Astaire called "A Family Upside Down." Her only continuing role in a TV series was in "The Snoop Sisters," a short-lived NBC show in the 1973-74 season in which she and Mildred Natwick played Miss Marple-type detectives.

But Miss Hayes is a pro, and remains unruffled throughout the commotion of the taping in Studio 8H, the historic spot where Toscanini performed for years with the NBC Symphony, and where a young Tony Randall appeared live on the early NBC series, "Mr. Peepers" with Wally Cox.

She seems for the most part oblivious to the platoon of producers, directors and cameramen who hover on the fringes of the set throughout the taping, maneuvering cameras and microphones and moving furniture into place. After one exit, she hesitates about which way to leave the stage, and a technician quietly takes her arm and escorts her through a maze of wires and equipment.

It's not a new or challenging role for Miss Hayes — she has specialized in playing kooky old ladies for decades. But she carries it off with a casual grace, moving and delivering her lines with an air of authority that seems to say, "This may be just a silly show, but we're professionals here and we take our work seriously."

She's an institution playing an imposter. She's also a survivor playing a survivor.

Business Failure Rate Soars To A 50-Year High

By STEVEN P. ROSENFELD
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — At a time when stock prices are soaring, interest rates are plunging and hopes have been raised for a recovery from recession, business failures are at a 50-year high.

"Even as you climb up the ladder from the bottom of the pit, you still haven't gotten high enough to make all the companies in trouble well," said Frederick Deming, chief economist at Chemical Bank in New York. "Another month of being under water is enough to make them drown."
Dun & Bradstreet Corp., a private credit-information service, said Thursday the 572 business failures it recorded last week surpassed the previous 1982 peak of 548 in the week ended June 17 and put the corporate casualty count "at the highest level since the early 1930s."

That raised to 459 the weekly average of business failures for this year through Aug. 19 compared with 318 in the same period a year ago. The last time there was a higher business failure rate was 1932, when the weekly average was 612, according to Dun & Bradstreet.
Business failures usually continue to rise in the early stages of a recovery.

1979, 11,742 in 1980 and 17,040 in 1981.
Through mid-August, 15,133 businesses have been forced to close or reorganize, up 44 percent from the 10,492 failures in the same period a year ago. At this rate, the post World War II peak of 17,075 failures, recorded in 1961, will be surpassed by the end of September.

But economist Allen Sinai at Data Resources Inc., a private consulting firm in Lexington, Mass., warned, "This time around it is a serious enough problem to prolong the recession ... It is much more intense and much more threatening this time than any time since the 1930s."

Two recessions since 1980 have weakened the nation's businesses, with prolonged periods of high interest rates and declining profits leaving corporate finances in the worst shape since the Depression.

Interest rates have been falling since late June as the Federal Reserve Board has been aggressively pouring money into the economy. Many economists said they believe the Fed was motivated in part by concern over the fragile condition of corporate finances.

"We got the worst possible path to lower interest rates, a weak economy and record bankruptcies," said David Jones, an economist at the New York investment firm of Aubrey G. Lanston & Co.

Since July 19, the prime rate, the base upon which banks compute interest charges on short-term business loans to their best-risk corporate customers, has fallen from 16.5 percent to 13.5 percent.

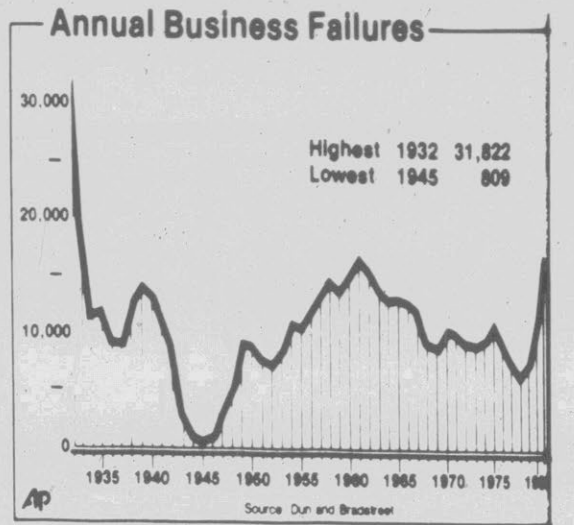

That's the lowest level for the prime since October 1980. But two years ago it was on its way up toward a record 21.5 percent.

"One can be very encouraged by developments with interest rates in the past eight weeks and yet realize it may be coming too late for a number of firms," said Thomas Thomson, chief economist at Crocker National Bank in San Francisco.

"We will have major, dramatic bankruptcies at a rate of one a week through the end of the year," Jones said, adding that he was including international financial shocks as well as U.S. corporate failures in his gloomy outlook.

The strain caused by three years of economic decline is reflected in the growth of the number of businesses to fail because of financial difficulties.

By Dun & Bradstreet's count, there were 7,564 failures in Hospital Radiologic Technology Dept. Has Awards Ceremony

The radiologic technology department at Pitt Community College held its awards ceremony Tuesday evening in the auditorium at the Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

M. E. Gilstrap, executive director of Pitt County Memorial Hospital, told the students there are five attributes which cover the life of every person; professionalism, appearance,

"Under the label of professionalism we must include our source of technical and ethical standards and the quality of our conduct," said Gilstrap.

Special awards were presented by Dr. Michael Weaver, medical director of the PCMH Radiologic Technology Program. The Mallinckrodt Award for the highest academic average was presented to Emily Katherine Perry of Ahoskie and the Squibb Award for the most outstanding student went to Karen Lynn Martin of Winterville.

The presentation of class pins was made by Louise Cox, PCC radiologic instructor, and Teresa Davenport, PCC staff technologist, assisted by Robert McMillan, PCC clinical instructor, presented the class pins. The welcome was given by Garrie Moore, department chairman at PCC.

Joseph E. Downing, PCC assistant dean of instruction for curricular programs,

Teacher Exam Review Likely

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — A nine-year-old lawsuit, which says North Carolina's use of the National Teacher Examination to certify teachers discriminates against blacks, will probably be heard in court this fall.

In lawsuits filed against the test in North Carolina and South Carolina, plaintiffs have argued that the test requirement came into being at about the same time schools were being desegregated.

A federal court ruled in 1975 that North Carolina's use of the test was unconstitutional, and the state ceased to require that teachers pass it with a score of at least 950 to be certified.

But in 1977 the court reversed itself, and the test was reinstated.

Critics say the certification examination discriminates against minorities because a higher percentage of blacks than whites have failed it. They say the test's intent is to discriminate against blacks.

Edwin Speas, a special state deputy attorney general, said the state maintains it uses the test to make sure its teachers have a certain level of competence.

Speas said a three-judge federal appeals court would hear the case in two to three months.
The suit originally challenging the test was filed by the U.S. Justice Department in October 1973. It alleged the state and the education board were violating the equal employment opportunity section of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 by using a racially discriminatory test score established by state law (earlier in 1973) for certification of teachers.

The N.C. Association of Educators and the National Education Association later joined the suit.

A three-judge panel made a preliminary ruling in 1975 that the use of the test was discriminatory and unconstitutional, but withdrew that opinion two years later. Then, in 1978, a similar case in South Carolina was appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court, which ruled that South Carolina's use of the test for certification of teachers was constitutional.

After that ruling, the state of North Carolina filed a motion for summary judgment of its case, arguing that its situation was similar to that of South Carolina and that the Supreme Court ruling should apply to both states.

In June of this year, the three-judge appeals court panel denied that motion.

Held For Murder Of A Bridegroom

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — A 31-year-old woman has been charged with second-degree murder in the shooting of an Army private who had married her daughter just six hours before his death.

An El Paso County grand jury on Thursday handed up the indictment against Shirley Mae Harris of Colorado Springs.

Deputy District Attorney Bill Aspinwall, who presented the case to the grand jury, said jurors apparently believed Mrs. Harris "intended" to shoot Pvt. Marvin Simmons, but did it "without premeditation."

She was also indicted on charges of attempted murder of her husband and committing a crime of violence and on a charge related to reckless use of a weapon.

Simmons, 24, was killed Aug. 15 during a wedding reception at the Harris home. He had married 17-year-old Sherry Harris at the house earlier in the day.

Authorities alleged Simmons was killed by one of two shots Mrs. Harris fired from a .22-caliber semi-automatic rifle after an argument with her husband, Wonnie Harris, 48, during the reception.

According to Aspinwall, the first shot was apparently aimed at her husband and went into a wall, while the second struck Simmons in the left temple as he stood in the kitchen.

Simmons, who lived five houses away from the Harises, was a childhood sweetheart of the bride.

Mrs. Harris is free after posting a $5,000 bond last week and is scheduled to appear before District Judge Donald E. Campbell on Sept. 24.

Cyclists Hurt In Accident

FARMVILLE — Two Farmville residents were injured Monday at 8:53 p.m. when the motorcycle on which they were riding was struck by a car.

Farmville police said James Robert Daniels, 31, of 103 Hagan St. sustained a broken leg and chest and head injuries, while Sandra Langley, 16, of 116 Taylor's Turn sustained leg injuries in the accident.

Daniels was the operator of the motorcycle and the driver of the car was identified as Christine Walker of 309 S. Walnut St.

Officer James Tripp said Ms. Walker, who was headed north on South Main Street, stopped at the intersection of Main and Cotton in preparation for a left turn. As an oncoming car passed, she made the turn, colliding with the motorcycle. She was charged with failure to see safe movement.

Daniels remains a patient in Pitt County Memorial Hospital. Ms. Langley was treated at the hospital and released.

Life As It's Lived

Not Everything Wears The Label Of Vanity

By GAIL MICHAELS

My next-door neighbor is going to have her colors done. This has nothing to do with race relations. It's evidently a scientific process whereby a trained color consultant determines the make-up and fabric hues that will best match a woman's skin tone. The normal charge for this service ranges from $35 to $50, but my neighbor is convinced that she has found a true bargain at $25.

I have to confess that I had never heard of this idea until she brought up the subject. Then again, I had never heard of being "wrapped" either until another neighbor had it done. Wrapping, it turns out, is a scientific variation on the Egyptian embalming process. As far as I can determine, the wrappee is swathed in chemically treated material that eats away fat to the tune of $10 an inch.

Naturally, I'm intrigued by these narcissistic indulgences. When one is a dishwasher blond blessed with semi-baroque body, one cannot afford to overlook any possibility. I read eagerly about a new machine that supposedly tones the muscles through electric shocks as the non-athlete lies on a table. Even starch-stopper commercials tempt me, and an ad for a cellulite remover rivets my attention. I am rippling in cellulite.

But the skeptic in me always prevails. I haven't been able to bring myself to make a major investment in physical alteration since I saved my babysitting money for six months when I was 16 and bought a Mark Eden Bust Developer. For weeks I waited eagerly for this revolutionary mail order Pygmalion to arrive only to find that it resembled the set of plastic choppers I'd seen in my dentist's office, with steel springs instead of teeth. Those aspiring to Dolly Pardon's dimensions were supposed to push the pink jaws together the prescribed number of times and be ready to fill the tops of their bathing suits within days.

Unfortunately, I could never muster the strength to master this implement. And if I had mustered it, I could just as easily have resembled Charles Atlas as Raquel Welch. As it was, my little sister spent many happy hours in the basement using the metamorphosizer as a catapult.

In spite of this experience, the idea of having my colors done seemed to make sense, much more than some of the other avenues to transfiguration. But when I told Phillip about it, he was derisive. His reaction was hardly surprising. He still operates under the outmoded theory that natural is better. He equates make-up and permanents with KISS and Phyllis Schlafly.

"Vanity, thy name is woman," he hooted. "That's not fair. This could save me money in the long run. My clothes purchases would be better informed."

"I have a better idea. Use your common sense."

"You obviously don't understand," I sniffed.

"No, I don't. Men don't waste their money on trivia like that."

"That's what you think. I just read that one of the hottest selling men's products is a moisturizer called NIGHT OF THE KNIGHT."

"I tell you what then," he said, striking a pose and shaking his balding head seductively. "You get your colors done, and I'll get mine done, too."

NO LONGER CONFINED — Jeremy Styron, 5, poses with his mother Wanda in their home in Greenwood, S.C. Jeremy can now enjoy most things that other boys do, thanks to a rare bone marrow transplant from his mother. He had spent 3½ years in a laminar flow isolator room in Sloan-Kettering hospital because he had no immunity to infection. (AP Laserphoto)
