

Daily Investment Of Public Funds Is Paying Off

Local Agencies Boost Revenue By $4.3 Million

By MELVIN LANG
Reflector Staff Writer

Public funds are drawing careful scrutiny by Pitt County and Greenville officials in this day of high interest rates and short money. And, literally, it's paying off.

City-county governments, public school systems and Greenville Utilities Commission earned nearly $4.3 million in interest on funds invested in short- and long-range investments during fiscal 1981-82.

That's public money that didn't have to come from the public through taxes or higher utility rates.

Greenville, including GUC, earned nearly $3.2 million on its investments, according to city Finance Officer Al Averette. Of that total, GUC picked up more than $2.9 million in earnings on an investment package that was bolstered by money on hand for construction of a $12 million water plant.

"It was a higher interest rate than we have ever had or probably ever will have," GUC Executive Director Charles Horne said.

Unusually high interest rates ranging to 17 percent on some investments helped each of the agencies supplement their regular income.

Pitt County earned $601,247 on its investments, Pitt County schools boosted its income by more than $400,000 in earnings, the city of Greenville expanded its revenue by $235,619 in interest earnings and Greenville schools earned more than $100,000.

For comparison sake, the earnings amounted to the equivalent of three tax cents each for the city and county — money that did not have to be collected from taxpayers.

The agencies anticipate earnings annually and put specified amounts into their annual budgets. Last year, however, was better than anticipated for each agency.

Their methods vary but the governmental bodies and the GUC follow similar investment procedures.

Margaret Roberts, finance officer for the county, said her office deposits all incoming revenue daily into a regular bank savings account that pays 5 1/4 percent. Savings in increments of $10,000 are converted to demand repurchase agreements, which can be converted easily when needed, at interest rates that averaged 11 percent last fiscal year, she said.

Money on hand that will not be needed for longer periods of time is deposited in higher interest, longer duration investments such as certificates of deposit.

"We maintain a zero checking balance and we never have idle funds lying around without some sort of interest being earned," Mrs. Roberts said. "Every dollar is invested every day."

"I'm always after the highest yield," she added.

Pitt County has budgeted $445,000 for the current fiscal year. Mrs. Roberts, however, said her goal was $500,000 and, "I really expect to meet my goal."

American GI Reportedly Defects To North Korea

By EDWIN Q. WHITE
Associated Press Writer

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — North Korea said an American soldier crossed the demilitarized zone Saturday, denounced the United States for deploying forces in South Korea and asked the Communist government for political asylum.

The U.N. peacekeeping command in Seoul said the report may be correct. If so it would be the first defection by an American to North Korea in 17 years and the fifth since the Korean War ended in 1953.

The U.N. command earlier Saturday reported an American soldier was missing in the buffer zone dividing South Korea and North Korea, and said it sent a message to the north asking that he be returned if he had strayed across the demarcation line.

A few hours later a North Korean broadcast monitored in Tokyo said the soldier had crossed the line into the north and asked for political asylum. It identified him as Pvt. Joseph T. White.

The North Korean account said White sought refuge because he believed "it is a wrong policy for the U.S.

government to send American youths to the far-off Korean soil, an alien land, and force upon them an army life against the Korean people, and he had thought it shameful to take part in such aggressive act."

The broadcast said North Korean authorities gave the American "kind protection," but did not specify where he was staying.

Following the broadcast, a U.N. command spokesman here said North Korea had responded to the request for assistance in locating the soldier by claiming he was in North Korea and had sought "political refuge."

The command confirmed the identity of the soldier as Pvt. Joseph T. White of St. Louis, Mo., and said he was assigned to the 31st Infantry Battalion, U.S. 2nd Infantry Division. The command spokesman, who declined to be identified, said the soldier's age, length of service or time in Korea were not available immediately.

"Private White had been reported missing from his unit along the DMZ early on Aug. 28," the spokesman said in a statement. "Based on the information available to the U.N.

Reagan Halts Money Bill

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan vetoed a $14.2 billion catchall spending bill Saturday as a budget buster, and the government immediately began taking steps to avoid widespread furloughs of federal workers, agency shutdowns and program disruptions.

Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said 27 government offices were left hurting for funds because of the veto. He said there was a good possibility some government employees — he did not know how many — would be laid off temporarily.

With the salaries of 3 million military personnel at stake under the bill, Reagan took extraordinary steps to avoid a payless payday for those in the armed services next Tuesday.

It was Reagan's eighth veto since he took office.

Republican leaders in Congress had urged the president to sign the bill, warning that a veto might be overridden or that he might not get a second chance to win congressional approval of funds for his highly prized Caribbean Basin foreign aid program.

But Reagan, in a brief radio address broadcast live from his mountaintop ranch near here, said the bill exceeded his request for domestic programs by nearly $1 billion and contained funds for "several

Jet Hits Deer

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A jet carrying 95 people struck a deer on the runway during takeoff and was forced to turn back, its landing gear damaged and one engine sparking, officials and witnesses said Saturday.

The USAir DC9, bound for Burlington, Vt., made a safe return Friday night to a runway at Greater Pittsburgh International Airport, and there were no injuries.

"We were going down the runway and it seemed like a normal takeoff. And then there was a huge bump, and the plane just shuddered," said Nancy Graff of Montpelier, Vt., one of the 90 passengers.

Airport Manager Dave Tich said the jet had just begun to lift off when it struck and killed the eight-point buck which had run onto the runway. The jet landed on a nearby runway about 20 minutes later.

"It wasn't all that dramatic," Tich said. "It's not as serious as people made it out to be."

Ms. Graff said the engine started sparking and blowing out flames after the jet struck the deer.

"The plane just didn't seem to take off. It just kept going down the runway... Then it lifted off, but didn't get very high. No one knew what was going on," she said Saturday morning after arriving home.

The plane's captain informed the passengers that the plane had hit a deer, Ms. Graff said. The passengers gasped "and then it was pretty quiet," she said.

The jet's left main gear was damaged when it struck the animal, and USAir crews were checking the craft Saturday for other damage.

Arabs Meet In Pre-Summit Session

By MICHAEL GOLDSMITH
Associated Press Writer

CASABLANCA, Morocco (AP) — Arab foreign ministers met Saturday to prepare a summit meeting to review their Middle East policy in the wake of the Israeli-imposed dispersal of Palestinian guerrillas from Lebanon.

Morocco's King Hassan II told the ministers a lack of Arab unity was to blame for "the injustice and humiliation" of the Israeli invasion of Lebanon.

"We are paying the price of our disunity," Hassan said. "Let us leave aside our bilateral conflicts and devote ourselves to everything that can lead to the unity and cohesion of our cause."

Following the opening ceremony at the presidential palace, the ministers were to meet for two days in the neighboring industrial city of Mohamedia to draft the agenda for the summit scheduled to open Sept. 6 in the Moroccan religious capital of Fez.

Only two of the 21 active members of the Arab League — Libya and Mauritania — were absent from the opening ceremony.

Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy has denounced the Fez summit as an attempt by Morocco and other pro-Western Arab states "to liquidate the Palestinian revolution."

However, Palestine Liberation Organization leader Yasser Arafat plans to attend the summit, PLO foreign affairs director Farouk Kaddoumi said Saturday.

Kaddoumi, head of the PLO delegation at the meeting, told reporters that Arab nations "must take measures against Israel and all those who support Israel, and to support the struggling Lebanese people now living under the yoke of Israeli occupation."

The Arab League's policy toward Israel has been largely determined by the Beirut-based PLO for more than a decade, and its dispersal calls for a fundamental review of Arab policies, League members said.

A State Department official in Washington said Friday that President Reagan or Secretary of State George P. Shultz may outline changes in U.S. policy on the Middle East in a major speech next month.

The official, who asked to remain anonymous, said it depends partly on what emerges from the Fez summit.

King Hassan indefinitely suspended the Arab League's 12th summit meeting in Fez last November because, he said, too many important Arab leaders stayed away for the summit to take any meaningful decisions on the Arabs' overall Middle East policy.

The main absentee then was Syria's President Hafez Assad. The Syrian authorities said Assad would attend the resumed 12th summit on Sept. 6, provided the preparatory ministerial meeting met a number of undisclosed Syrian conditions.

Moroccan officials who declined to be identified said these conditions were linked with the Middle East peace plan put forward last year by Saudi Arabia's King Fahd, who was then crown prince.

Fahd's plan was the first to implicitly call for general Arab recognition of Israel. In return, it demanded Israel's evacuation of all Arab territory occupied in the 1967 Middle East war, including the West Bank, Gaza, the Golan Heights and the Arab sector of Jerusalem.

Israel, which has annexed both the Golan and the eastern, or Arab sector, of Jerusalem, rejected the plan almost as soon as it was published. So did Assad and other Arab hard liners. Arafat first praised the plan as constructive, but then rejected it under pressure from hard liners within the PLO.

The Moroccan sources said the Sept. 6 summit will consider a revised version of the Fahd plan, including a demand for an Israeli withdrawal from Lebanon as well as from the other occupied territories.

They said if Arafat and Assad both come to Fez and endorse the Fahd plan, it would constitute an important Arab peace initiative difficult for Israel and the United States to ignore.

King Hassan sent a message to his "great friend," President Reagan on Thursday asking for American security guarantees to enable Arafat to travel to the Fez summit without risk of attack.

The king's message implied that Reagan should exact a promise from Israeli Premier Menachem Begin not to authorize any attack on Arafat on his way to Fez.

All Pitt County schools will open their doors to students Monday, and according to Dr. Eddie West, superintendent, "the summer has been very productive" for the system.

"All planned maintenance has been completed as well as other preliminary items to start off a super school year," West said.

These programs, said Carl Heath, maintenance supervisor for the county schools, included the painting of more than 100 classrooms, one auditorium, two gyms and two cafeterias.

In addition, Heath noted that 15,000 square feet of tile have been laid in the schools and 9,000 square feet of suspended ceiling. Four gym floors have been refinished and over 500 gallons of wax used on floors in the schools.

"At this time we check all doors, windows, plumbing and the usual areas of maintenance required in the running of a school," added Heath. All heating and air conditioning units have been checked also, he said.

Schools will open and dismiss at varying times, according to West, who released the following schedule:

A.G. Cox, 8:10 a.m.-3:15 p.m.; Ayden Elementary, 8 a.m.-3 p.m.; Ayden Middle, 8:05 a.m.-3:05 p.m.; Belvoir, 8:10 a.m.-3 p.m.; Bethel, 8 a.m.-2:35 p.m.; Chicod, 8:20 a.m.-3:10 p.m.; D.H. Conley, 8:25 a.m.-3:05 p.m.; Falkland, 8:15 a.m.-2:45 p.m. (parents pickup) buses arrive 3 p.m.; Farmville Central, 8:25 a.m.-3 p.m.

Farmville Middle, 8:15 a.m.-3 p.m.; G.R. Whitfield, 8:10 a.m.-3:15 p.m.; Grifton, 8:15 a.m.-2:55 p.m.; H.B. Sugg, 8:15 a.m.-2:15 p.m. (kindergarten dismissal, remainder of students out at 3:05); North Pitt, 8:40 a.m.-3 p.m.; Pactolus, 8:15 a.m.-3:10 p.m.; Sam Bundy, 8:10 a.m.-2:15 p.m. for first grade, 2:50 p.m. for walkers, rest are out at 3:10 p.m.; Stokes, 8:15 a.m.-3 p.m.; W.H. Robinson, 8:10 a.m.-2:30 p.m. (parent pickup) buses leave at 3:05 p.m.; Wellcome Middle, 8 a.m.-3 p.m.; Ayden-Grifton, 8:30 a.m.-3 p.m.

The following fees will be applicable for the 1982-83 school year according to Thomas Craft, associate superintendent of Pitt County Schools:

- Elementary students (K-8) basic fee, $7. This will cover supplementary supplies and materials, library cost, physical education, music, art and workbooks.
- High school students basic fee is $6. This will cover library media audio visual materials and instructional supplies.
- Insurance coverage, $5.75 per will cover one student during the school day for the year. The cost for 24-hour coverage is $32.

MIAMI (AP) — The second tropical storm of this year's Atlantic hurricane season formed off the northwest coast of Africa Saturday, and forecasters said Beryl could strengthen overnight.

"It has all the potential to" strengthen further, said hurricane forecaster Bob Sheets of the National Weather Service in Miami. "But it's no threat at this point, only to marine interests in the area," he said.

Storm Beryl formed amid what forecasters consider the most dangerous part of the Atlantic hurricane season, which began June 1 and ends Nov. 30.

Early hurricanes and tropical storms usually develop in the Gulf of Mexico and the Caribbean and die before reaching shore. But major storms typically form late in the season near the African coast and bull across the Atlantic Ocean, sucking up warm air and water to pick up strength.

At 6 p.m. EDT Saturday, the storm was centered near latitude 14.0 north, longitude 23.3 west, about 50 miles south of the southernmost Cape Verdes Islands.

Rescue Unit Honors Former Greenville Man

BALTIMORE — Dawson Nethercutt of Chapel Hill, a former member of the Greenville Fire Department and former Greenville Rescue Squad, was honored at the 35th annual International Rescue and Emergency Care Association conference held here last week.

Nethercutt, who retired last year as director of training for the N.C. Department of Insurance's Fire and Rescue Services Division, was awarded the Max Spray Memorial Award for service to the association and the IRECA's president during the past year.

The award, the most prestigious given by IRECA, is named for the late Max Spray, one of the founders and former executive director of the association. It was presented to Nethercutt at a Friday night awards banquet.

Also presented at the banquet were trophies for winners of the association's annual heavy duty rescue contest which was held Friday.

A rescue team from Mount Olive took the seventh spot in the contest, considered one of the closest rescue competitions ever held by IRECA. Only 225 points separated the first and seventh place winners, with only 10 points separating the leading four teams (which included a tie for second place) in the competition in which more than 2,000 points were possible.

A rescue team from Lambertville, N.J., placed first in the competition with 1,945 points, while rescue teams from Exxon refineries in Benicia, Calif., and Baton Rouge, La., tied for second place with 1,940 points each, followed by a team from the Roche Chemical Co. in Nutley, N.J. with 1,935 points.

Rescue teams from Exxon's Bayway, N.J. refinery and West Virginia Pulp and Paper Co.'s (Westvaco), Roanoke Virginia plant tied for fourth place with 1865 points, followed by Mount Olive, with 1,720 points and a Cheraw, S.C., rescue team with 1,610 points.

Nethercutt and two other former members of the former Greenville Rescue Squad, Wilburn Small of Wilson, an instructor with the Insurance Department's Fire and Rescue Services Division, and Stuart Savage of Greenville, a staff writer for The Daily Reflector, were among judges for the rescue competition.

The site for Friday's competition was an abandoned building in downtown Baltimore which was used as the site for the international rescue competition in 1976 in which a team from Greenville placed second. Savage was co-captain of the Greenville Rescue Squad team that year, while Small was a team member.

In 1962, a team from Greenville became the first U.S. team ever to win an international heavy duty rescue championship. Greenville also won back-to-back international championships in 1977 and 1978. In all, Greenville competition teams won 13 international first aid and heavy duty rescue trophies and 28 trophies, including 15 first place awards, in state competition between 1961 and 1980.

The book "The International Manual of Basic Rescue Methods" written by Nethercutt and illustrated with photographs by Savage, is used as the basis for judging the IRECA-sponsored rescue competition, as well as rescue competition sponsored by the North Carolina Association of Rescue Squads.

Begin Says PLO Is 'Beaten Organization'

NEW YORK (AP) — The PLO is a "beaten organization" that is incapable of conducting anything but "individual terrorist acts," Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin told The New York Times in an interview published Sunday.

He also said Israel would help Lebanon if asked, and that he is hopeful that the two countries can agree to a peace treaty.

Israeli troops will leave Lebanon at the same time Syrian troops depart, he told the newspaper in an interview conducted Friday in Jerusalem. Each side is estimated to have about 30,000 troops in the country; no date has been set for a pullout.

Of the Palestine Liberation Organization Begin said: "They can't fight any more. They don't have the arms, they don't have the bases, they don't have their headquarters."

The Times described Begin as appearing tired but relaxed and called his answers to questions "devoid of the ultimatums and certainties that have often characterized his pronouncements in the past."

The prime minister said President Reagan "hurt me deeply and personally" when in a telephone call Aug. 12 he termed intense bombing of west Beirut a holocaust. The term is often used to describe the slaughter of 6 million Jews by the Nazis in World War II.

"I later wrote to the president that he hurt me deeply and personally by using that word," Begin told the Times.

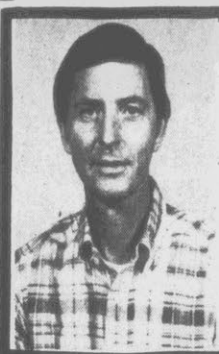

However, he called Reagan a "wonderful friend" of Israel. "I don't have any recriminations ... All in all we worked together."

Begin expressed bitterness that the PLO had not agreed earlier to leave Lebanon, saying that Israel had proposed essentially the same conditions in late June as were agreed to ultimately.

"How many casualties could we have saved, among our men, among the civilian population in Beirut or in Lebanon at large, among the terrorists themselves and the Syrian army, had that proposal been accepted ... ?" he asked.

Several Wrecks Reported Here

Several collisions were investigated by Greenville police Friday and Saturday.

In a collision Friday morning a car driven by Shepard Allen Hill Jr., of Route 2, Winterville, collided with a car driven by Jerry Brian Lee, of Route 1, Greenville, on Dickinson Avenue. Police said the Hill vehicle was apparently changing lanes when the collision occurred. Approximately $350 in damages resulted to each auto.

In another collision Friday cars driven by Kimberly Ann Bruce of Carriage House Apartments and Ruby Morgan Sheridan of Tanglewood Apartments collided at an unmarked intersection in the Kroger parking lot. Police estimated damages at $200 to the Bruce car and about $400 to the Sheridan auto. No charges were made.

Investigators said a car driven by Mark William Brown of 318 Slay Dorm collided with a car driven by Joel Lindsay Merritt of Route 11, Greenville, about 7 p.m. Friday evening. Brown was charged with a safe movement violation. About $175 damage was caused to the Merritt vehicle at $1200. There were no injuries reported.

About $1,500 in damages resulted when two cars collided on Memorial Drive Friday afternoon. Police reported a car driven by Charles Douglas Harrison of Snow Hill was traveling south when it collided with a vehicle driven by Marvin Earl Godley of Route 1, Greenville. No charges were made.

In a Saturday wreck, a car driven by Jean Brown Steps of Lot 15, Shady Knoll Trailer Park collided with a car driven by Carl Romaine Womman Jr. of 312 King George Road at Hardee's on 10th Street. Damages to the Womman car were estimated at $650.

command, it is possible that the North Korean report is correct."

In St. Louis, White's father, Norval White, said in a brief telephone interview: "It's a terrible tragedy and I don't understand it. It's like he was killed in action. I don't want to talk to you anymore." He hung up and further calls went unanswered.

When reporters knocked on the White's door in the quiet, middle-class neighborhood, the father opened it long enough to say: "I don't know how you expect me to feel about this."

Family spokesman Howard DeMere said Joseph White was 20 years old. Neighbors described him as a quiet young man who was fond of reading history books.

White attended the Kemper Military School and College in Boonville, Mo., where president Brig. Gen. Lloyd P. Riddlehoover said he had "a very conservative viewpoint" while a student. "I'm having a hard time reconciling all this knowing his leanings while he was here," Riddlehoover said.

Lois McDaniel, a close neighbor, said the news surprised her. She said her late husband had received a letter from Joseph White from Korea. "He said things were so different over there and it made him happy for the way we live here. Something must have just clicked. For some reason he just flipped."

Democrat Says Veto Destroys Cooperative Spirit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan's "theatrical" veto of a supplemental appropriations bill has destroyed the short-lived spirit of cooperation that won congressional approval of his tax bill, House Democratic leader Jim Wright said Saturday.

Wright called it "unfortunate" that Reagan ignored the advice of Republican congressional leaders and his secretaries of state and defense "in order to use this bill as an excuse to resume this war against Congress and against the students and handicapped and the elderly people of this country."

"The veto is especially unfortunate after the conciliatory spirit in which Congress exhibited on the tax bill last week, since it revives the spirit of confrontation and hostility which some of us had tried to put at rest," the Texas Democrat said.

Wright, who held a news conference to respond to the president's radio message announcing the veto of the $14.1 billion measure, offered no prediction on whether the Congress will override the veto.

"If legislators vote the way they talk, Congress will override," Wright said. "We'll just have to see."

"It will be difficult to get the two-thirds vote in both houses necessary to override the veto," Assistant Senate Democratic leader Alan Cranston of California said in a statement. "But I do not deem that to be 'mission impossible.'"

Assistant Senate Republican leader Ted Stevens of Alaska predicted several days ago the GOP-dominated Senate would vote to override. Senate Appropriations Committee Chairman Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., said Friday he "hoped" Congress would override because "essential programs have been cut to the marrow."

Congress will take the matter up after it returns from Labor Day recess Sept. 8. Two-thirds majorities are required in both houses to override the veto or Congress must produce another bill to send Reagan.

Wright said that contrary to Reagan's assessment, "this bill is not a budget buster" because it appropriates almost $2 billion less than the amount Reagan requested in his original budget message.

"It's a bipartisan bill supported by the legislative leaders of both political parties and both houses of Congress," Wright said. If the bill is killed, he said, "hundreds of thousands of students will find it infinitely more difficult, if not impossible, to go to college."

Wright said liberal Democrats helped approve Reagan's $98.3 billion tax increase bill, which was opposed by many of the president's conservative supporters, "in order to bail out the president's failing economic programs."

Noting the supplemental appropriation included $350 million for Reagan's Caribbean Basin economic aid program, Wright said: "I am particularly regretful of this theatrical veto because I think it puts that program in severe jeopardy."

Cranston was equally critical of the veto. "The veto is ... not in the best interest of the U.S. economy, which is suffering from the highest rate of unemployment in 40 years with 10.7 million people out of work," he said.

Wright also accused the president of usurping Congress' powers to control the budget. Reagan "wants to dictate on what it should be spent on," Wright said. "He wants to take over the responsibility that the Constitution gave to Congress, which is control of the purse strings."

Rep. Gillis Long, D-La., speaking from his hometown of Alexandria, La., in the official Democratic response to Reagan, said Republican economic policies have brought on high unemployment, "20,000 business bankruptcies ... a deficit of over $120 billion, intolerable mortgage rates and even further deterioration of an already bad farm situation."

things I've vetoed already as being unnecessary."

In a separate veto message to Congress, Reagan said, "I do not take this step lightly. ... But this bill would bust the budget by nearly a billion dollars."

Reagan said that last week's surge on Wall Street and other economic improvements were a positive reaction to congressional approval of a $98.3 billion tax-increase bill.

This reaction, he said, "is founded in large measure on a growing conviction that this government has finally developed the will to set its fiscal house in order. This legislation flies in the face of that conviction."

Democratic leaders in Congress quickly criticized the president's move.

House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, said the veto "revives the spirit of confrontation and hostility which some of us had tried to put at rest" with approval of the tax increase package a week ago.

Wright said Reagan's "theatrical veto" put his Caribbean Basin plan in "severe jeopardy." He hinted that Democrats would hold the Caribbean program hostage for increased funds for domestic social welfare programs.

"Many of my colleagues are saying that if the president is unwilling to give needed help to the old, the poor and the handicapped in our own country, he can scarcely expect Congress to appropriate more for such people in other countries," Wright said.

Senate Democratic Whip Alan Cranston of California said the veto "is not in the best interests of the U.S. economy" at a time when 10.7 million people are jobless. He said it would be difficult — but not impossible — to muster the required two-thirds majority of the House and Senate to override the veto.

The bill, a supplemental appropriations measure for the fiscal year ending Sept. 30, included $350 million for the Caribbean program, $6.1 billion for federal civilian and military pay raises that took effect last October, and $5 billion in expanded borrowing authority for the Commodity Credit Corp., which finances the government's farm price support and commodity purchase programs.

Beyond that, the bill included $50 million in emergency aid for war-torn Lebanon and money for firefighting activities, Coast Guard operations, federal grants for Medicaid and other programs.

House To Continue Sex Inquiry

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A former congressional page testified under oath Saturday he lied about homosexual activity between teen-age pages and congressmen, but the House Ethics Committee decided to continue its investigation into sex and drugs on Capitol Hill.

"The committee's investigation will continue both in the area of improper or illegal sexual conduct and the illicit use or distribution of drugs," chairman Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, said after ex-page Leroy Williams testified that his earlier statements to the FBI and committee investigators were false.

In a sworn statement taken by special counsel Joseph Califano, the 18-year-old Williams, of Little Rock, Ark., repeated his earlier admission to committee investigators and reporters that he had lied about having had homosexual relations with House members.

Williams made his statement at a four-hour closed meeting. Both Stokes and Williams' attorney, Robert Scott, said afterward that Williams testified that his earlier allegations were false.

Stokes said in a brief statement to reporters that Williams told the committee he "never had sexual relations with any member of Congress."

"He also testified under oath that he never procured any prostitute, male or female, or arranged any homosexual or heterosexual liaison for any member of Congress," Stokes said.

In announcing that the investigation would continue, Stokes said Williams' allegations "were only one part of our investigation."

The Justice Department and a federal grand jury are conducting a criminal investigation into reports that members of Congress and their aides have used or distributed such drugs as cocaine.

Both the congressman and Califano, who accompanied him in a brief appearance before television cameras, refused to answer any questions.

Williams was unavailable to reporters and quickly driven away from the House office building where the meeting was held.

Scott said Williams was not placed under oath during questioning earlier by committee investigators and the FBI. He had failed an FBI lie detector test but at that time stood by his charges.

Williams' attorney said he believed the young man was telling the truth when he retracted his earlier statements, and that he did not believe Williams had been coerced or promised any reward or immunity from prosecution in exchange for recanting.

Scott said Williams told the committee that his earlier statements "were all false."

The lawyer quoted Williams, who was arrested last Saturday in Little Rock on a charge of public intoxication, as saying he was worried that he would become an alcoholic because of heavy drinking by himself and other pages.

The former page, Scott said, expressed concern about "what was happening to young pages in Washington" and "the pressures under which they are required to live."

A "strong" reason for Williams' earlier allegations, Scott said, was his desire "to force change."

A special House commission has reported that charges of misconduct by pages appear to be unfounded but it recommended raising the minimum age for pages from 14 to 16, housing them in a dormitory and other steps to tighten supervision.

Scott said things could be "very tough" for Williams in the future but his sworn testimony took "a real load off his shoulders."

Branch Bank's Contribution Major For ECU

Branch Banking and Trust Co. of Wilson has exhibited outstanding support for East Carolina University in making one of the largest gifts ever to the ECU School of Business' Center for Management Development.

The presentation of $250,000 was made by L. Vincent Lowe Jr., president and chief executive officer of BB&T. The funds will be given over a period of five years, starting this year.

Lowe, in announcing the gift at the faculty convocation Monday, said it was intended "to aid and promote all types of education, service and research for business and management through such means as seminars, lectures, publications and programs of study and workshops."

BB&T is one of North Carolina's major banking systems. It is unique in that it developed from a base in the eastern part of the state.

The Center for Management Development was founded by the school of business under the direction of Dean James H. Bearden, who said the gift "signals our coming of age."

Chancellor John M. Howell said the gift would help the university achieve the goals he had been discussing. "We want to build vigorously a bridge between the university and the public."

The board of trustees has authorized naming the center the Branch Banking and Trust Company Center for Management Development.

The BB&T gift will be of tremendous importance in allowing the university to be of further direct service to the public.

The Time To Obtain Training For Jobs Is School Years

Greenville schools got into full swing of the 1982-83 school year last week and the Pitt County school system will see students reporting tomorrow.

Neither teachers nor students can be completely enthused about putting the vacation days of summer behind and getting back to education. We think, however, most young people today are recognizing that getting their education is the most important thing they are going to do in life.

They are aware that there is unemployment in our nation and many adults who want to work cannot find jobs. Frequently those who are unemployed lack the necessary skills for jobs which are open. The time to obtain the education and training for future employment is during the growing up years. It is a natural time for learning and developing.

We believe our young people understand this and they are ready to accept the challenges of a new school year.

Sunday Morning Notes

Many celebrities are involved in amateur radio and Daily Reflector photographer Tommy Forrest (N4GVK) thought he had found himself talking to country and western star Chet Atkins Monday night. Tommy was one of many who tuned in to a voice purporting to be Atkins as he traveled in a motor home through North Carolina to a concert date in Wilmington.

The voice was making contact with other hams in North Carolina, who were using "repeaters" to retransmit the signal over longer distances. He talked to area amateurs for a couple of hours on everything from music to the weather.

During the conversations with operators, the person explained how he got started in ham radio and talked of other stars who are licensed hams, including Tammy Wynette, Ronnie Milsap and Arthur Godfrey.

A United Press International article set the area amateurs to wondering, however. It reported, "Few can imitate Chet Atkins' guitar playing, but apparently someone can copy his voice. I've got an impersonator on Ham radio," says Atkins, a ham operator himself.

The guitar picker has received cards from people in Alabama, Tennessee, Florida and other states who heard his impersonator on the Ham radio. "I'm getting some nice letters, so he must be a nice guy," Atkins says. "But I wish he wouldn't do that."

Well, apparently North Carolina can be added to the list of states where the impersonator is operating. The amateurs checked and found no record of Atkins being in Wilmington last weekend.

Remember the days when making a phone call across town was a treat? Amateur radio operators can make a phone call by radio from some areas as far away as 80 miles by Touch-Tone keys on the amateur's microphone.

On the other hand, getting an amateur radio license isn't as easy as writing your name and sending it to the Federal Communications Commission. A prospective amateur must pass a morse code test and a critical written test in order to obtain the license. Sports Editor Woody Peele was walking through a local drugstore recently and found the two pharmacists huddled over one of the football preview magazines.

"Let's ask Woody," one told the other. "He'll know."

Seems the two were engrossed in the upcoming schedule for North Carolina, trying to figure out which games they might attend. But there was one problem they were having.

"Hey, Woody, look here at this schedule and tell us: what does 'S, O, and N.' on these schedules mean?"

Woody, a Wake Forest alumnus, glanced at the page, huffed, and replied, "September, October and November."

The two were left wondering how they had not managed to figure that out.

Well, Chapel Hill graduates contract some kind of fever this time of year as they dream of national championships. It might not clear up until even after basketball season.

Reagan Vacation Is One Of Isolation

There are no lobbyists seeking favor, no congressmen who need persuading, no ceremonial duties that need to be performed at his 688-acre spread high in the Santa Ynez Mountains overlooking the Pacific Ocean.

Shielded from the usual pressures of the White House, Reagan hopes to spend much of the time until his return to Washington on Sept. 7 riding horses and doing ranch chores.

Yet there are lingering problems and potential new ones that hang over this vacation and threaten to interrupt the regimen of log-splitting and fence-mending.

Foremost is the possibility of snags in the evacuation of Palestinian guerrillas from Beirut. White House officials fully expect there will be hitches but hope none are serious enough to derail the process.

In a larger context, the administration is working on a major new peace initiative for the Middle East and a solution to the vexing problem of the Palestinians, many of whom live under Israeli rule in occupied territories.

Reagan took part in several strategy meetings on the subject before leaving Washington and may have brought in on developments in the days ahead.

On a political front, Reagan is pondering how to reassemble the coalition of congressional Republicans and Southern Democrats that was split by his battle for a $98.3 billion tax increase.

With the divisive tax fight over, and Congress out of town, White House officials make no apology for Reagan's long vacation and do not try to paint it as something else.

At his ranch, Reagan does not even see members of the White House inner command who have taken up temporary residence in Southern California. They are on call at offices about 20 miles away.

His personal physician, and a military aide with the nuclear codes are always at the ranch, however, and the Reagan's longtime California cook, Ann Allman, came down from Los Angeles to prepare meals.

Over the next 12 days, the president's only scheduled activities are two live radio addresses to the nation on the next two Saturdays.

Atlanta Sees Type Of Segregation

ATLANTA — State Sen. Julian Bond, black civil rights hero of the '60s, probably will replace white liberal Rep. Wyche Fowler in Congress next year thanks to political resegregation of this city where color-blind politics once seemed an achievable dream.

The present 51 percent black population in Fowler's Atlanta-area district rises to 65 percent for the next Congress because of federal court intervention, Fowler's popularity and flawless civil rights record could gain him enough black votes to win in his new district against most black opponents, but not against the charismatic Bond. Has Bond really decided to run in the not-yet-rescheduled Democratic congressional primary?

"Almost" he told us. If that "almost" becomes actuality, more than an outstanding congressman will be lost. Biracial politics will seem unattainable anywhere if abandoned in Atlanta. This was a white majority congressional district when a black civil rights activist named Andrew Young won in 1972. It had become a black majority district by the time Young resigned from Congress in 1977 when appointed U.N. ambassador, but Fowler won over civil rights pioneer John Lewis. In 1978, he received a majority of black votes against a black opponent.

But it has now become an article of faith among black leaders that the 5th Congressional District "belongs" to them. Accordingly, Bond and other black legislators tried to pack blacks into the 5th District as part of congressional reapportionment. Collaborating with Bond were Republican legislators who sought to turn the neighboring 4th District lily-white and Republican.

But ingenious Georgia lawmakers finally managed to keep the 4th District Democratic even after federal judges knocked out the legislature's original reapportionment on grounds that the 57 percent black population in the 5th was insufficient to guarantee a black congressman.

Old-fashioned liberals of both parties are heartsick, comparing the new 5th District of a South African "homeland." "We call it the Johannesburg district," one prominent black confided to us, adding that Wyche Fowler was a better congressman than Andy Young before him predictably a better one than Julian Bond after him.

This black asked for anonymity, noting the experience of state Rep. Grace Hamilton, the grande dame of Georgia civil rights who opposed the racial reapportionment. The opinion by three federal judges in Washington, rejecting the Georgia Legislature's first reapportionment, dismissed her as an "Aunt Jane" (adopting language used in Justice Department briefs).

The federal judges (two of them black) blazed new trails, contending that discriminatory intent was enough to void the legislature's reapportionment and measuring the district not by how many blacks live there but how many are registered to vote. In doing so, the judges were echoing positions taken by the Justice Department's Civil Rights Division.

The Reagan administration in alliance with Julian Bond is viewed by Fowler as proof positive of the Justice Department's politicization in an unsuccessful attempt to elect another Republican congressman from Georgia. But Bond Georgians who are black "deserve a congressman of their own."

The harsh arithmetic of racial politics raises uncomfortable questions: By the same racial quota rule, do the 33 percent white citizens of the city of Atlanta deserve to keep Fowler in Congress now that the mayor and city council president will be black forever more? How can Bond ever achieve his dream of becoming U.S. senator from Georgia so long as voting is racially polarized?

As an army lieutenant on duty in Washington 19 years ago Wyche Fowler heard the answers from Martin Luther King in his famous Lincoln Memorial address. King hoped for the day when his children "will not be judged by the color of their skin but by the content of their character." In King's hometown, his successors are moving away from that goal and toward political resegregation.

WASHINGTON — In the melancholy matter of Taiwan, let us begin with two propositions. The first is that President Reagan is sincere in what he says. The second is that Mr. Reagan is capable of reading and understanding the English language. The trouble is, the two propositions cannot be reconciled.

The first proposition demands no exegesis. Unlike some presidents we have known, Mr. Reagan is quite incapable of telling a deliberate lie. When he told Dan Rather that the joint communique of Aug. 17 made "no change whatsoever" in the situation, he believed he was telling the truth.

Yet if we compare the plain language of the Taiwan Relations Act with the plain language of the communique — both of which Mr. Reagan must have read — it is apparent that a change of major significance has in fact taken place.

This is what the law says: "The United States will make available to Taiwan such defense articles and defense services in such quantity as may be necessary to enable Taiwan to maintain a sufficient self-defense capability. The President and the Congress shall determine the nature and quantity of such defense articles and services based solely upon their judgment of the needs of Taiwan, in accordance with procedures established by law."

Now, consider the language of the joint communique just announced between the United States and the People's Republic of China. This is what the communique says: "The United States Government states that it does not seek to carry out a long-term policy of arms sales to Taiwan, that its arms sales to Taiwan will not exceed, either in qualitative or in quantitative terms, the level of those supplied in recent years ..., and that it intends to reduce gradually its sales of arms to Taiwan, leading over a period of time to a final resolution."

This whole regrettable incident strikes me not as outrageous or duplicitous, but simply as inexplicable. Mr. Reagan sincerely believes that nothing has changed, but unless words have lost their meaning, things have indeed changed. The president has committed us eventually to stop aiding the defense of a small but loyal ally.

Need

LOS ANGELES — One can be assured that times are hard when many of the nation's well-healed professionals grow desperate for federal aid. Doctors, dentists and veterinarians seem the least likely to need it.

But they and other professionals are fighting for legislation that would exempt them from federal prohibitions against price-fixing, boycott and other anti-competitive practices.

The legislation, soon to be considered as part of the Federal Trade Commission re-authorization package, is just what the doctors ordered. If it passes, Americans will have Sens. John Melcher (D-Mont.), James McClure (R-Idaho) and more than 200 other congressional co-sponsors to blame.

Of course, many "pros" might say the 68-year-old FTC has no business policing either professionals or their quasiautonomous trade organizations. For years, states have allowed groups such as the American Medical Association (AMA) to set professions' standards and codes of ethics. Federal investigations, they add, are not only costly but redundant.

But perhaps we deserve, as doctors say, a second opinion. After all, Americans spent roughly $287 billion last year (about 9.8 percent of the gross national product) on health care — 15 percent more than in 1980.

Meanwhile, during the last five years, a number of governmental investigations have concluded that doctor and lawyer groups have conspired to discourage or prevent their members from advertising, and offering discount services. Only three months ago, the Supreme Court upheld an FTC determination that the AMA restricted doctors from self-promotion and discriminated against those who practice "preventative health" in health maintenance organizations.

As a result of that finding, numerous "second-tier" health professionals — nurse practitioners, physician's assistants and midwives, among others — could within a year be performing the physical examinations, blood tests and preand post-natal care traditionally handled by doctors and their staffs.

Unfortunately, the FTC amendments of 1981 would reverse that trend. Said Jay Angoff, an attorney with Ralph Nader's Congress Watch in Washington, "All these things that are just getting started — or haven't started yet — will never start if this bill is approved."

Indeed, growing public support for low-cost health care makes it now or never for the hard-pressed professionals. Since last year, the AMA has poured nearly a million dollars into the campaign chests of Melcher, McClure and other sponsors, prompting FTC Commissioner Michael Pertschuk to call the effort "a classic case" of buying special-interest legislation. "The doctors laid the groundwork with their money and now they've got their bill," he told us.

It also seems that the doctors' money machine has prompted Mr. Free Market, Ronald Reagan, to treat the "professional exemption" as if it were consistent with his beliefs. Despite FTC Chairman James Miller's official opposition to the bill, the administration has apparently avoided a conflict with a natural Republican constituency as well as the principle that professional regulation is a state's right.

The enormous sweep of this overdone, unnecessary legislation can only lead one to acknowledge the dimensions of the fever that has come over its backers. In times like these it's one thing to be scared of falling incomes; it's quite another to exclude one's competitors and have the action sanctioned legally as well.

Ironies aside, Sen. Melcher, a veterinarian himself, might do everyone some good to recall his introduction of the doctors' bill last summer. At the time he told Senate colleagues that he saw no reason to grant professionals complete exemption from anti-trust laws. Where blatant pricefixing and boycotting of discounters occurred, Melcher admitted, FTC investigations and litigation were warranted.

Perhaps to the doctors, dentists and other professionals now feeling the crunch, hard times, we'll admit, take their toll. But all we ask is, "Please don't make it harder on everyone else."

Ahead

NEW YORK (AP) — What do some Wall Street pundits see on the horizon?

John Wright of Wright Investors Service and Arnold Bernhard of Value Line, both noted for their research, are convinced the market will rise far beyond the range that has prevailed over the past 17 years.

But others differ. Merrill Lynch Economics, for example, believes that whatever recovery occurs during the rest of the year will peter out, and that a sustainable expansion of the economy can't be expected until mid-1983.

It cautions against being too optimistic over the short term. In the August issue of its "Business Outlook" ML offers an article called "A Fragile and Short-Lived Recovery."

It comments: "While our expectations for economic activity over the near term are quite modest, it should be stressed that the direction of risk relative to our forecast is entirely on the side of even weaker performance."

That isn't a ghost that is seen by Merrill Lynch, and many, many other forecasters who share the vision. But it isn't a rainbow. And many business people agree with them. They are digging in their heels, not running ahead.

That, of course, poses an obvious question: Isn't Wall Street supposed to foretell the economic future?

The answer from brokers is a chorus. Of course it does, they say. But what they decline to be pinned down about are time frames. How far in advance does the market see? Six months say some. Two years say others.

That leaves the market in an enviable position as a forecaster. The economy will improve, it says, but it won't say when. Promises can be made and never found wanting, even when the economy declines. It will rise, eventually.

Meanwhile, corporations are so illiquid they borrow to survive rather than expand. Bankruptcies remain at levels unseen since the 1930s. Banks hold paper of questionable value. The international monetary system is fragile.

But interest rates are coming down, Wall Street replies. And that, as much as any reason, may help to explain why the market in a magnificent spasm of energy and enthusiasm soared more than 100 Dow Jones points in nine sessions.

Various statistics over the past couple of years document the flight of investment money from equities into money market funds and debt securities, driven or attracted there by rising interest rates.

Those same interest rates made business almost impossible to conduct. When a company must pay 20 percent or so for money it can't very well make a profit.

Immunity Isn't A Presidential Prerogative

WASHINGTON (AP) — In those heady early days of 1981, Ronald Reagan seemed so popular with the public that Congress was hesitant to cross the man who had won a startlingly big election victory.

But those days are gone and, with them, a chunk of Reagan's popularity.

For Reagan is not, it seems, immune to one of the apparent rules of American politics. At midterm, a president's rating with the public goes just one way, down.

The Republican incumbent's slide has not been as long or as steep as Jimmy Carter's plunge in the polls. But his ratings with the public have been dropping nonetheless.

Americans' positive rating of his work overall stands at 37 percent in the latest Associated Press-NBC News poll, the lowest of his administration. That's far from the 66 percent rating he received in April 1981.

The public's views of Reagan's work on the economy and on foreign affairs are even more negative.

Similarly, the public's ratings of Reagan on more personal dimensions have slipped. They trust him less. They are less likely to say he cares about people like themselves. Nearly half say he doesn't understand the nation's problems.

For comparison, Carter's positive job rating in August 1978 stood at 26 percent, the low point for him at the time.

Lest one forget, presidential ratings can also go up. But such spurts are usually temporary ones based on an international crisis or particularly outstanding presidential victory.

Only a month after that low point in August 1978, Carter's rating leaped 16 percentage points after getting Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin to agree at Camp David to a peace settlement.

Unfortunately for Carter, that surge of approval had dribbled away by early the next year.

Of course, poll ratings are what government is all about. Congressional actions, bureaucratic decisions and presidential initiatives depend on many factors, not just poll results.

In significant ways, however, poll standings can be important to a president.

If the presidential ratings are high, they act like grease in the machinery of government.

During the honeymoon days of the Reagan administration, for example, many congressmen and congressional aides seemed convinced that Ronald Reagan was one of the most popular presidents in history. That perception was incorrect, since Reagan's standing with the public was not much different from Carter's at the same point in his administration.

One cannot point to key votes won or lost solely on that erroneous impression, but it was clearly a factor which shaped strategy and was weighed in each representative's political balance.

When the president's standing begins to drop, that grease in the government machinery seems to turn into sand. And it becomes a bit harder for the president to get his way.

For example, Reagan couldn't quite get the budget bill he wanted this year. To get what he could, Reagan had to swallow a tax increase of almost $100 billion, a bitter dose of political medicine for a politician who prides himself on being a tax-cutter.

What Reagan is learning is that there was a lot of truth in an observation by Lyndon Johnson.

"You've got to give it all you can that first year," Johnson said after he left office. "You've got just one year when they treat you right."

With the public, with the Congress, the second year in the Oval Office is proving to be a lot harder than the first.

George
Gallup

Poll

PRINCETON, N.J. — Sen. Edward Kennedy continues to enjoy a large lead over 14 other possible contenders to be the Democratic Party's presidential nominee in 1984.

The Massachusetts senator wins more than three times the vote as the runner-up, former Vice President Walter Mondale, 43 percent to 13 percent.

Other front-runners are former President Jimmy Carter (8 percent), Sen. John Glenn (7 percent) and California Gov. Jerry Brown (4 percent). The 10 others on the list each receives less than 2 percent of Democrats' votes. The findings reported today are not significantly different from those recorded in an April survey, when Kennedy led Mondale 45 percent to 12 percent among Democrats.

At this point in each of the last four presidential campaigns (two years prior to the election), Senator Kennedy either has led all other Democratic contenders or has been in a virtual tie for the lead.

Here are the questions asked:

"Which one of these persons (respondents were handed a card with the names and titles of 15 possible nominees) would you like to see nominated as the Democratic Party's candidate for President in 1984? And who would be your second choice? And who would be your third choice?"

Here are the first choices:

Possible Democratic Nominees

(First choice of Democrats)

Edward Kennedy	43%
Walter Mondale	13%
Jimmy Carter	8%
John Glenn	7%
Jerry Brown	4%

Each of the others on the list receives less than 2 percent of the vote of Democrats. They are (in alphabetical order): Reuben Askew, Bruce Babbitt, Bill Bradley, John Y. Brown, Alan Cranston, Gary Hart, Ernest Hollings, Pat Moynihan, Jay Rockefeller and Robert Strauss.

When first, second and third choices are combined, the results are as follows:

Possible Democratic Nominees

(1st, 2nd, 3rd choices of Democrats)

Kennedy	64%
Mondale	39%
Glenn	26%
Carter	25%
Brown	23%
Rockefeller	5%
Cranston	5%
Moynihan	5%

All others receive less than 5 percent of the votes each.

Name Recognition Is Key Factor

To a considerable extent, the current choices for the Democratic nomination are a function of name awareness. A majority of survey respondents have heard of only six of the 15 persons tested and claim to know something about only four of the 15.

The choices closely parallel awareness levels at this early stage and clearly show the importance of candidates becoming known to the public. An obvious exception is former President Carter who, though best known of the 15, is thought not to be a candidate for a second term and has publicly endorsed his former running mate, Walter Mondale, for the nomination.

Although the current figures show that many Democratic hopefuls have a long way to go before they are well known to the electorate, they can take encouragement from the dramatic example of Jimmy Carter, who was known to few people outside his native Georgia two years before the 1976 primaries.

The findings reported today are based on in-person interviews with 1,514 adults, 18 and over, of whom 687 are Democrats. The interviews were conducted in more than 300 scientifically selected localities across the nation during the period July 30-Aug. 2.

For results based on the sample of Democrats, one can say with 95 percent confidence that the error attributable to sampling and other random effects could be five percentage points in either direction.

Congress: It's A Prolific Bunch

WASHINGTON (UPI) — They may not achieve the stature and renown of Art Buchwald or George Will, but members of Congress are among the most prolific newspaper columnists around.

Every week dozens of congressional offices on Capitol Hill mail out columns to newspapers back in their home states or districts discussing events or issues in Washington.

The columns are presented as if written by the representative or senator, but in reality it is a rare congressman who sits down each week to compose a thoughtful reprise on the burning issues of government. Usually the press secretary does the writing and submits it for the boss' approval.

The review or editing work individual members do on their columns ranges from detailed to cursory.

A casual sampling of recent columns sent out by House members shows a variety of subjects covered and positions taken. Some columns simply discuss events and issues while others forcefully argue the member's point of view.

There is no rule that the columns have to be balanced or even objective, so the members are free to have their say.

It is not known how many hometown newspapers use these columns or how frequently, but the columns continue to roll off the mimeograph machines.

Most of the columns have titles, with "Washington Report" the most popular. Rep. Barber Conable, R-N.Y., calls his weekly offering "The View From Here," while Rep. Tom Coleman, R-Mo., calls his column "Coleman's Corner." "Skip Bafalis Reports from Washington" does it for the Florida Republican, and "The Week in D.C. With Henry B." is the choice of Rep. Henry B.

Gonzalez, D-Texas.

A recent column by Rep. Jack Edwards, R-Ala., discussed the need to reform the nation's bankruptcy laws, making the point that the last reform "has turned out not to be quite as fair as we thought."

Rep. Clarence Brown, R-Ohio, complained in his release that Congress spent the first half of the year trying to come up with a budget plan for 1983 and then "only took a few weeks to walk away" from the plan.

Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., in Vol. XVII, No. 33 of his "Washington Report" endeavored to explain the Social Security system.

Rep. Bill Dickinson, R-Ala., recently discussed the proliferation of political action committees and their effect on the electoral process. "I have been amused at late at the complaining and crying from liberal political organizations and parties" about the phenomenon, he said.

The "Column of the Week" from Rep. John Erlenborn, R-Ill., discussed the appointment of George Shultz as secretary of state.

The appointment "is particularly satisfying to me," Erlenborn declared. The column then reviewed Shultz' distinguished career in government, beginning with the Eisenhower administration.

"This week, I would like to discuss the critical situation which exists in the Middle East," said Rep. Norm Shumway, R-Calif., in launching column No. 24.

Rep. Virginia Smith, R-Neb., discussed the "tax bill dilemma," saying "In the past week I was invited to the White House twice" to discuss the pending vote.

"Of course, I reserved judgment on the tax increase, especially when I know how hard-pressed the economy is right in our own Third District," she said.

Consumer Rates: They're Hanging On

NEW YORK (AP) — The big news in financial circles is that interest rates have dropped dramatically. But for people without big stakes in the stock or bond markets, the excitement may mean little until rates on consumer loans go down.

The record-setting rally on Wall Street last week, fueled by falling interest rates, overshadowed the fact that the euphoria did not make home mortgages or car loans more affordable, and neither did it lower the cost of bank or gasoline credit.

Rates on home mortgages have come down slightly in many parts of the country, but any drop in consumer rates is minuscule compared with the plunge in business borrowing costs.

Here are some questions and answers to help explain why the decline in interest rates has not yet spread to consumers:

Q. What rates have dropped?

A. When people talk about interest rates going up or down from one day to the next, they are referring to open-market rates. One such rate is known as the federal funds rate, which simply is the rate that banks charge one another for overnight loans. That rate is considered important because it influences a banks' cost of acquiring funds that can be used for lending to businesses and consumers. Because that rate tends to go up when demand for funds rises or when the supply of bank reserves goes down, it is a kind of barometer of credit conditions.

Q. What else determines a bank's cost of funds?

A. A major source of funds for banks are "jumbo" certificates of deposits, which are deposits of $100,000 or more that individuals or businesses typically buy for one to three months. The rate on those certificates in the resale market last week fell more than one percentage point, to about 10.5 percent.

Q. Why have banks been quicker to lower business loan rates than consumer rates?

A. The answer, in a word, is competition. The big money to be made in banking lies in lending to corporations, so the competition for those customers is keener. Evidence of that is the multiple cuts in recent days in the prime rate.

The prime is the rate that banks use to figure interest charges on loans to corporations, although a bank's stated prime rate does not apply to all business loans. Smaller companies usually are charged more than the prime rate, while the bigger corporations that are considered better credit risks can get below-prime loans.

Q. When will consumer rates come down?

A. Economists say the recent drop in open-market interest rates, combined with a slackening of demand for credit as the recession lingers, has set the stage for somewhat lower consumer rates. That means rates on car loans, home-improvement loans and personal loans could fall in the months ahead. But the drop is not likely to be as quick or widespread as the decline in other kinds of rates.

Q. What is the risk of rates going back up?

A. There seems to be usually wide agreement in financial circles that rates for now will hold steady, or fall a bit more. But some economists think the chances are good that interest rates will start climbing again near year's end or in early 1983 if the economy stages more than a meager recovery and the Congress fails to find new ways of reducing the size of budget deficits.

Yankees' Mining Hopes Bring Fears

CHATHAM, Va. (UPI) — Folks in rural southern Virginia usually don't have much truck with Yankees.

So they might be expected to view with suspicion the northerners who propose to mine uranium for the first time anywhere east of the Mississippi River — right here in Pittsylvania County.

But the Marline Uranium Corp., a New York-based energy firm, has made some big promises.

Marline executives recently proposed a $200 million mining and milling operation that would provide 900 new jobs and pour $1.2 million in new tax revenue into the county coffers.

Some environmentalists — mostly outsiders — set up a howl.

But local farmers facing threats to the federal tobacco program and textile workers worrying about layoffs at nearby mills seemed preoccupied with more mundane problems, such as how to lay in groceries in these hard times.

Anyway, the fellows from Marline seemed right friendly.

When the Chatham Volunteer Fire Department needed cash for a new fire engine

Marline and its subcontractors kicked in $3,200.

Some folks said that proved Marline aimed to do right by the people of Pittsylvania County.

Most local residents, however, agree with the reams of printed material handed out by Marline that contends uranium can be mined safely in the community.

High on a hill overlooking town is Chatham Hall, the exclusive girls' preparatory school which has not taken an official position on the project. School officials are known to fear that wide news coverage of the issue could harm recruitment of students.

Charles Hawkins, a state legislator, said at his haberdashery on Main Street, "Our concern is whether the mining can be done safely. This is the only place we have to live."

Environmentalists elsewhere in the state fear this "foot in the door" could lead to uranium mining as far north as the fringes of the suburbs of Washington, D.C.

They are only faintly encouraged by the current depressed uranium prices, caused by a slump in demand for nuclear power.

But the word on Main Street — where a monument to the Confederate dead stands in front of the courthouse — is that if those prices don't rise the Yankees may be forced to pack up and go back.

Reagan Will Be On The Road

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan will be hitting the road early and often this fall to campaign for Republican candidates.

Deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said that Reagan will be spending "a good bit of time" on the stump in support of the GOP candidates running for Congress and the statehouses. However, he added, "We have not decided on the specifics of the schedule."

"We're looking at being out quite a bit in several congressional districts and Senate races," Speakes told reporters. "So there'll be a fair amount of time on the road."

If Reagan runs true to form he will strike at Democrats on domestic issues, calling them the "big spenders" while continuing to argue that it is unfair to say that his recovery program is now accountable for the economy.

Reagan is likely to blame all the nation's ills on the past, and to point out that his program is phased in over three years. But aides concede that at some point Reaganomics has to stand up and be counted.

If the past is prologue he will launch an aggressive star spangled banner campaign against the Democrats.

The president also will have weekly political exposure by resuming his Saturday five-minute radio broadcasts. Such broadcasts almost guarantee him front page stories in the Sunday papers.

The polls show Reagan's personal popularity has dropped in recent months but there is no doubt that GOP candidates across the country feel he is a drawing card. There also is a move afoot to let by-gones be by-gones with the conservatives who broke with Reagan on the $98.3 billion tax increase bill.

A slight manifestation of the peacemaking initiative was played when chief of staff James Baker played tennis in Santa Barbara with Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., leader of the Republican conservative revolt against Reagan. Reagan's political activities will be financed by the Republican National Committee, particularly hotel and transportation costs. But there is a White House support system that is there no matter what the reason for the trip.

Some economies are being instituted at the lower staff level as shown by Reagan's August vacation in California when many of the second echelon aides and secretaries had to double up in their hotel rooms.

The White House political office is made up of pros who have been mapping strategy during the dog days for the big push in the fall in close coordination with the GOP National Committee and the campaign committees on Capitol Hill.

Keeping the Senate in Republican hands is a top priority with the White House.

It is traditional for the party in power to lose some seats in the House in an off-year election. Reagan all but conceded that he is not counting on a majority in the House, saying at a fund-raising dinner for California senatorial candidate Pete Wilson, "I'd like to have a majority in the other House, but in off-year elections, history says that you don't usually gain in that off-year election. Anyway, we're going to try very hard to gain."

Vice President George Bush, the administration's No. 1 speechmaker, is expected to be tapped for heavy duty in the coming campaign, and members of the Cabinet will be beating the bushes for the party favorites.

Reagan is comfortable in the political environment. He enjoys playing to the crowds. It's what he knows best. Barring another major foreign policy crisis that could preoccupy him, the president's focus will be on politics.

Whether the conservatives come back to the fold remains to be seen, but some of them are pragmatists, too, and they may realize there is no other place to go.

WOMEN'S RIGHTS — Participants in a walkathon to raise money for the National Organization of Women step off in the nation's capital on Saturday. Similar walkathons were held in North Carolina and across the country. The funds will be used in local and state elections in November for candidates who support women's rights issues. (AP Laserphoto)

ERA Marches To Raise Funds

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — North Carolina supporters of the National Organization for Women held walkathons across the state Saturday to raise funds for a political action committee supporting women's rights candidates.

In Raleigh, about 50 people each walked three miles in relays as part of a statewide effort to cover the 350 miles between Boone and Beaufort.

Each of the marchers collected pledges in an effort to raise more than $1 million for the NOW-Equality PAC organized by the National Organization for Women, said Terry Schooley of Fayetteville, the state NOW president.

Mrs. Schooley said the pledges would be used to help the election campaigns of women candidates or male candidates who support women's rights.

SCHOLARSHIPS

Two East Carolina University students, Rufus Scott Jr. and Veronica Austin, are among 876 students in the United States, Canada and Puerto Rico to receive one-year scholarships from the Clara Abbott Foundation.

Herbert S. Wilkinson Sr., foundation president and retired vice president of Abbott Laboratories, said the awards are based on financial need, college expenses and scholastic achievement.

Michaux Gives Nod

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — H.M. "Mickey" Michaux says he will support the man who defeated him for the Democratic nomination in the 2nd Congressional District, but he will seek the post again in two years.

At a meeting with about 200 black officials from across North Carolina, Michaux said he will "support all the Democrats in the 2nd Congressional District" and backed away from a write-in campaign on his behalf.

But he had little praise for I.T. "Tim" Valentine, who defeated him in a July 27 runoff for the nomination.

"His only single qualification is that he's a Democrat," said Michaux, a former U.S. Attorney and black leader from Durham.

"We have to make a choice and my choice is very simply that I am going to support the Democratic candidates in the 2nd District."

Valentine is being challenged by Republican John W. "Jack" Marin of Durham for the seat being vacated by the retirement of Rep. L.H. Fountain, D-N.C.

Michaux said he plans to run again in two years.

He criticized Valentine for not taking a firm stand against the Reagan administration's economic programs and pointed out Valentine had said the president's program should be given more time.

Michaux told reporters he will meet with Valentine within a week but declined to give a specific date.

In his speech, he also criticized the news media for focusing on "personalities instead of the issues" during the primary campaign.

The press put too much emphasis on the fact Michaux was seeking to become the state's first black congressman in 80 years.

"That was not the issue. It was a happenstance that I am black," he said.

Michaux also criticized the Democratic Party for not providing enough support for black candidates and taking black support for granted.

He also said the runoff primary requirement is outdated and should be changed. The law now requires a candidate to get 50 percent of the total vote to win nomination.

Demand Growing For Big Used Cars

By ANN JOB WOOLLEY
Associated Press Writer
DETROIT (AP) — The growing demand for big automobiles is spilling from the new car showroom onto the used car lot.
Last summer, "you couldn't give away" a used Chrysler New Yorker, says Leo Mason, president of Auto Market, a used car dealership in Washington. Today, a 1- or 2-year-old New Yorker, with a mileage rating of 17 to 20 miles per gallon, sells for between $6,200 and $6,700, he says.

A 4-year-old New Yorker, the model most likely to be traded in this year, could fetch more than $3,000, according to the National Automobile Dealers Association Official Used Car Guide.

"The large cars are coming back," Mason says. "There's a big demand for good, used cars, especially the big ones."

The same is true in the new car market, where many big models are selling well this year.

For example, sales of new Lincolns are up 16.3 percent so far in 1982, with 22,135 sold through Aug. 20, compared with 19,026 at the same time last year, Ford Motor Co. says. General Motors Corp. says sales of its Cadillac Eldorado have risen 4.1 percent from 32,686 in 1981 to 34,038 this year.

In the used car market, prices for all sizes of autos are up an average of $300 to $500 from last year. And Mason and other dealers attribute part of the rise to the fact that big cars have regained popularity — at a time when they are in short supply.

For nearly three years, the market for new and used large cars was in the doldrums as gasoline prices skyrocketed.

This year, with gasoline prices stabilized, people who cannot or do not want to spend a lot of money for the newer, but smaller models, are seeking large autos, experts say.

But used big cars are "rare," says Clyde Hillwig, co-publisher of Auto Market Reports, which compiles wholesale used car prices — trade-in values.

Fewer large cars were produced in recent years because of the sales slump and because carmakers were turning to smaller cars, so there are fewer to buy used.

According to Ward's Automotive Reports, for example, 106,672 of the full-size Oldsmobile 98 Regency models were produced in the 1978 model year, down 23.5 percent from 139,423 in 1977. By 1980 the figure was down to 73,634, off 47.2 percent from the 1977 level, Ward's says.

Used 98 Regencies, Chevrolet Monte Carlos, Lincoln Continentals, Buick LeSabres and sporty performance cars are other good sellers this year, Hillwig and Mason say.

For example, the price for a year-old Oldsmobile 98 Regency has risen $1,279 this summer compared with the trade-in price for a year-old model last summer, according to Auto Market Reports.

A year-old Regency, getting about 18 mpg, wholesaled for $8,009 last summer. A year-old Regency today is priced at $9,288, Hillwig says.

Some of that may be due to the 1982 model's base price increase to $12,294 this year from $10,896, Hillwig concedes, but he says the market would not have been able to sustain the high price for the used models had there also not been demand.

A 4-year-old Regency 98 traded in today could get $4,550, the dealer association's Used Car Guide says.

Craftsman Makes Precision Surgical Instruments

DURHAM, N.C. AP — Elmer Conn took a rumpled baseball cap out of his back pocket and set it slightly askew atop a full head of tousled hair.

He doesn't look like the maker of precision surgical instruments, but that is what he is. He is a craftsman of the old school, a man of repute. He has worked with world-famous doctors, including heart surgeons Michael DeBakey and Denton Cooley, and has made gadgets for clamping, cutting, suturing and other jobs in repairing our insides.

Conn is winding out a career — maybe. Now that he's 65, he'll retire at the end of August from Edward Weck Co. Inc. in the Research Triangle Park where he's plied his skills for the last five years. Before that, he worked for a competitor and was in business for himself.

Still, at a slower pace, Conn figures he'll design or redesign a few more instruments, all with the intent of making surgery faster, easier and safer.

The folks at Weck say Conn is one of the few remaining people who can take a bar of steel and forge, cut, bend and polish it to the most exact specifications. They tout him in their sales brochures and doctors occasionally tout him in their medical journal articles about new surgical procedures.

"I've never been without a job," says Conn. "I've never asked for a raise."

Conn supervises the research and development shop at Weck. His cluttered work bench is in the back corner. Behind it is a pegboard filled with hundreds of surgical tools. They're just a fraction of what he's made.

In recent years, Conn has specialized in instruments for cardiovascular surgery, but his 45-year career has spanned the gamut. He has made some instruments for one-time use only.

A child swallowed a fragment that was like a spent shell, hollow on the inside. The fragment lodged in the child's windpipe and a growth began around it.

A surgeon wanted a tool that could be inserted through the windpipe into the hollow part of the fragment so that it could be extracted without radical surgery.

Conn made it and the operation was a success.

Another time a man swallowed a partial plate, and it lodged.

The plate was too wide to pull out through the trachea and the surgeon needed a long, narrow pair of scissors that could be inserted through the trachea. The scissors would snip the plate into two pieces, and then each could be pulled out.

Conn made that tool, and it worked. He has always wondered how the guy swallowed his plate.

"Was he drunk or did somebody hit him?" he said. "I'd sure like to know."

Conn followed in his father's footsteps as a surgical instrument maker. He learned the trade under a German master.

"That was back in 1938," he said. "You needed a job — whatever job you could get. My dad was a polisher and I became a polisher."

"Polisher" is a generic term. What happened was that Conn learned all aspects of making surgical instruments. Over the years, he built up a reputation and became one of the pioneers in surgical tools for heart operations.

Some of his early tools were in "closed heart" surgery — in the days before heart-lung machines that are used now to sustain life while "open heart" surgery is performed.

In those early days, "I tell you the truth, they were burying them like mad," he says. Conn marvels at the advances.

In the last 25 years, Conn has specialized in tools for open-heart surgery. He has observed DeBakey, Denton and other doctors operate to get a better idea of what they needed.

"At first, I was nervous," he says. "I watched them slice you apart, put a retractor on you, rip you open. I was standing on a ladder."

Through the observations and discussions with doctors, Conn learned what was needed — and made it. Weck's line of cardiovascular surgery instruments is essentially his, although the catalog names are often those of

Argentina Breaking Up Its 'War' Junta

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (UPI) — Ten weeks after Argentina's defeat on the Falkland Islands the remaining member of the three-man military junta that took the nation to war has decided to resign, navy sources said Saturday.

Navy commander Jorge Anaya, an admiral who was widely considered to be the most hard-line member of the war-time junta, will resign his post in mid-September, the sources said.

Anaya's retirement is set to come as soon as the navy high command completes an in-depth study of the performance of officers during the 74-day Falklands war that ended with Argentina's surrender to Britain June 14th.

During the war, Argentina's navy was virtually confined to port, due to a British blockade up to 12 miles from the Argentine coast.

Anaya is currently looking for an officer to replace him.

Anaya's resignation — along with the expected resignations of perhaps half a dozen other top officers involved in the Falklands war — will complete the top leadership shuffle in the army, navy and air force that began immediately after the defeat.

Army commander Gen. Leopoldo Galtieri, who had been the nation's president, resigned under fire in mid-June because he wanted to keep on fighting even after British forces captured more than 11,000 Argentine troops on the South Atlantic islands. Argentina occupied the British-owned islands April 2.

Air Force commander Gen. Basilio Lami Dozo was forced to resign in mid-August after he made the politically unpopular proposal of forming an official military political party.

The military junta, which was formed by the commanders of the three branches of the armed forces, was the supreme governing body of Argentina until the defeat.

The air force and navy pulled out of the junta, however, leaving the army in control of the nation.

On Sunday Anaya will travel to Brazil for a five-day visit in which he will meet with President Joao Figueiredo.

Some diplomatic sources have said Anaya will probably discuss the possibility of purchasing Brazilian-built planes and naval vessels to replace material damaged or destroyed in the war.

Egg-Throwing Youths Raise Chancellor's Ire

WIESBADEN, West Germany (AP) — Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, infuriated by young protestors who threw eggs and heckled him during a speech at a party rally Saturday, charged that they were behaving like Nazi stormtroopers.

"What kind of miserable wretches are you, you egg-throwers!" Schmidt screamed at the demonstrators during a rally that drew 50,000 people here. "You behave like the Reds and the S.A. (Nazi brownshirts) of 1932!"

Schmidt's outburst came at the Social Democratic Party kickoff rally for the state election campaign in Hesse, an election many political observers say may decide how much longer he remains Chancellor.

Schmidt did not get hit by any of the eggs, thanks to a bodyguard who popped up an umbrella in front of the chancellor to protect him. But they hit another bodyguard and Greek Minister of Culture Melina Mercouri, one of several foreign officials at the rally.

The egg-throwing began after the protestors had whistled, chanted and made obscene gestures throughout the speeches of Schmidt, former Chancellor Willy Brandt, Hesse Governor Holger Boerner and a host of foreign dignitaries who came to show their support for the Social Democratic Party.

Several of the foreign officials, including Finland's Premier Kalevi Sorsa and Denmark's Premier Anker Jorgensen, were forced at times to shout over the hecklers.

Schmidt, who spoke last, seized the opportunity to scold the protestors and the Greens, the radical and environmental party he assumed at least some of them represented.

"Social Democrats have a lot of patience and are tolerant. But somewhere the patience of a long-standing Social Democrat is at an end!" Schmidt shouted after the egg incident. Older members of the crowd cheered.

The protestors shook their fists and yelled more.

"People who scream are not good neighbors," Schmidt retorted. "One cannot trust them with peace," he said as the crowd cheered again.

Schmidt went on to say the Greens don't deserve votes because all they do is criticize without offering solutions. "They are against everything," he said.

The Free Democrats are the Social Democrat's coalition partners both in Bonn and in Hesse, the last West German state where such a coalition has survived.

Solidarity Issues Call To Police

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Polish and Soviet troops held maneuvers outside Warsaw on Saturday, and Roman Catholic bishops begged the nation to avoid bloodshed on Solidarity's second anniversary this week.

A clandestine "Radio Solidarity" broadcast Saturday asked police to defy orders to arrest or spy on people. It was the first broadcast by the union's underground radio station in more than two months.

The military regime has vowed to suppress any protests on Aug. 31, the date in 1980 when Solidarity was officially recognized as the only independent labor movement in the Soviet bloc.

Fugitive Solidarity leaders have called for massive demonstrations Tuesday to prove the continuing strength of the 9.5 million-member union suspended under martial law, and warned there might be casualties.

An anti-government group carrying 20,000 leaflets was arrested in Poznan, western Poland, the state-controlled television said Saturday. In what appears to be an all-out campaign against underground printers on the eve of Solidarity's anniversary, Polish media also reported raids on illegal printing shops in at least six cities this week.

The hardline army newspaper Zolnierz Wolnosci (Soldier of Freedom) reported Saturday that Polish and Soviet troops were "improving their skills" in joint military exercises around Warsaw. The newspaper reported that motorized units, paratroopers and tanks from the Soviet army participated in the exercises in the Warsaw military district. The exact location of the maneuvers was not reported.

A Western diplomat, noting that the Soviet-Polish military exercises around Warsaw had not been announced previously, said "they seem to be part of this campaign" by the regime to prevent demonstrations Tuesday.

"The wave of tension is growing again," the bishops said in a pastoral letter to be read from church pulpits Sunday. "So we appeal both to state and political authorities as well as social groups to seek a solution to these tensions, not by force and violence but by dialogue."

"Let those who seek solutions in violence or in limiting existing civil rights give up their activities."

"It would be a great mistake...if the anniversary of social agreement was used by anybody for violent clashes or caused fraternal bloodshed."

The letter, signed by Polish primate Archbishop Jozef Glemp, was drafted by the nine highest bishops of this overwhelmingly Catholic nation.

Joining the church in its appeal were 105 intellectuals, including writers, artists, actors and lawyers who announced they sent a similar letter to Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, the Communist Party leader, premier and defense minister who imposed martial law last Dec. 13.

Thousands of Solidarity activists were detained in the wake of the decree, including the union's leader, Lech Walesa, who is still under house arrest.

The crackdown ended 15 months of sweeping social reforms that Solidarity won by strikes, demonstrations and negotiations with the government.

Florida Uses Paraquat To Destroy Marijuana

By MATT BOKOR
Associated Press Writer

RED BAY, Fla. (AP) — A secluded 80-acre field of harvest-ready marijuana was doused with paraquat Saturday and put under 24-hour guard, marking the first official use of the controversial herbicide against the drug in the United States.

Bob Cummings of the Florida Department of Law Enforcement said the weeds, some reaching 14 feet high, would begin to wither and die later in the day under the hot sun.

By Monday the marijuana plants probably will be dead, and workers will gather them and burn the debris, Cummings said.

Armed guards were posted around the field, tucked away behind thick woods, to make sure none of the marijuana was taken away.

Opponents of the spraying said Saturday they planned to monitor the program, and threatened court action if "any contaminated marijuana gets on the market."

Smoking marijuana that has been treated with the herbicide may cause lung damage, though the severity of the effects are in dispute.

State workers donned white coveralls and masks and rolled in a truck carrying a tank of spray after state law enforcement agents pronounced the clear, hot weather perfect for the two-hour operation, which began at 11:08 a.m. EDT.

Cummings said the future use of paraquat on Florida marijuana is likely.

"Our position is 'yes' if we feel it is going to be a cost-saving method. We're going to use it again on appropriate spots.

"This is the first time. We're convinced it's a feasible method," said Cummings said.

Florida law enforcement officials had obtained a court order to destroy the field. Walton County Sheriff Quinn McMillian said officials learned about the illegal crop six weeks ago from a citizen tip in a Crimewatch program.

The field, down a winding path and 1½ miles off a county road, has been under surveillance since.

Cummings said marijuana-exporting countries such as Jamaica and Colombia, as well as other Southeastern states where marijuana is grown, would be interested in the Florida spraying.

"We feel like other states probably are looking at it. Other countries are looking at it also as a feasible method to eradicate marijuana," Cummings said.

Bob Edwards, a spokesman for the Law Enforcement Department, noted that Florida farmers routinely use up to 250,000 pounds of paraquat a year on their fields.

"We see it as just another application," Edwards said. "This isn't something new."

"This is really a guinea pig test show for Colombia," said Kevin Zeese, executive director of the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws. "The only reason they're not just uprooting the plants and burning them is they want to make a demonstration for Colombia."

NORML filed two lawsuits aimed at delaying the spraying, and Zeese said the group will file another if any of the paraquat-laced marijuana gets in the hands of pot smokers.

Cummings said late Friday that, "We're taking every precaution possible to ensure that nothing is tampered with."

The agriculture workers who sprayed the field were licensed applicators. Officials kept spectators far from the site, and an ambulance was stationed at the general store in Red Bay. Respirators were taken to the spray command post.

A federal judge in Washington rejected a NORML suit aimed preventing Florida from spraying the weed-killer on marijuana.

Paraquat was sprayed on marijuana in Mexico in the 1970s, and some critics said contaminated pot was smuggled into the United States, threatening users. A 1978 law barred the use of foreign-aid funds for paraquat spraying, but Congress has since repealed the ban.

Unofficially, marijuana is Florida's No. 2 cash crop.

Optimists Open Safety Program

"Wanted! Alive!" is the motto of a traffic safety campaign sponsored by the Optimist Club of Greenville.

Lewis Evans, a local attorney and club president, said "bulletin inserts, place mats and posters are being distributed throughout Greenville to remind all motorists of their responsibilities to the children of our community."

About 20,000 of the red, white and black designed items are being distributed by Optimist Club members and the Greenville City Schools' Safety Committee. They emphasize that with schools now open the issue of child safety is one of utmost concern to all citizens.

Publicity on the need for traffic safety is an annual activity carried out by the Optimist Club as a public community service.

Restoration Study Planned

NEW BERN — Specialists from the state Division of Archives and History will conduct a free workshop on restoration of historic buildings in New Bern Sept. 10-11.

The workshop is designed to provide practical "how to" information on rehabilitation of historic buildings, both for beginners and experienced professionals. Topics in the lectures will include pest control, carpentry and millwork, roofing, plaster and paint and masonry restoration.

For more information, write to: New Bern Preservation Foundation, Inc., P.O. Box 207, New Bern, N.C., 28560 or call 633-6448.

Jones To Speak

Bryant Kittrell, chairman of the Congressional Action Committee for the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce, announced that Rep. Walter B. Jones, D-N.C., will speak at an informal buffet breakfast for the chamber on Tuesday at 7:30 a.m. at the Holiday Inn.

Anyone with questions concerning the breakfast or regarding a reservation should contact the Chamber of Commerce at 752-4101.

Workshop Scheduled

How physicians and ministers can combine their skills to serve their patients and congregations more effectively is the focus of a program to be presented by the East Carolina University School of Medicine Oct. 1.

Guest speaker for the program will be Dr. Dan G. Blazer, associate professor of psychiatry and director of the division of social and community psychiatry at Duke University Medical Center. He is also an ordained deacon in the Church of Christ.

Blazer's topics will include healing and the spiritual nature of man, communicating with doctors and the church as a support network for healing.

The program will be held from 9:30 a.m.-3:45 p.m. in the Brody Medical Sciences Building auditorium. It is being produced in association with the Eastern Area Health Education Center.

For more information, contact Joan Logsdon at 758-5200.

Magazine Lists Those Who Are In The Money

By EDWARD MILLER
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — America's wealthiest person has a wallet so fat that he could lose a cool billion — with a "b" — on a single bad venture and still come out richer than Rockefeller.

Forbes magazine has come up with the Forbes 400 — a list of who's got it, and who's got more, when it comes to money.

The illustrated list takes up 86 pages of the magazine's Sept. 13 issue.

Who is the wealthiest American? Forbes says it's Daniel K. Ludwig, 85, a resident of New York City who made his money in shipping.

Of the top 12, five are sons and daughters of legendary Texas oil man H.L. Hunt.

The rest of the list is a mix of well-known names — it takes both hands to count the du Ponts — and those who somehow avoided the lime-light, despite their money.

It's no longer fashionable to flaunt wealth, the Great Depression having nixed that, and "a majority of the people on it would have preferred not to be listed," Forbes said. So Forbes relied on estimates and a score of business executives and journalists to come up with what it called a "tentative rather than authoritative" list.

The list shows that oil and blood mix well — nine of the top 12 richest people made their money in oil and six of the nine inherited their fortunes.

Ludwig, however, built his fortune in the 1930s by taking contracts he had arranged to ship oil for the seven biggest oil companies and using them as collateral for loans to build the ships. He built the first supertankers, at lower cost in Japan, and is now "buying savings and loans," the magazine said.

He "sank (a) probably unrecoverable $1 billion into (an) Amazon jungle pulp empire," Forbes said, but "his net worth is still above $2 billion."

Aside from Ludwig, those in the top 12 who did not make their money in oil are Forest Mars Sr., 78, ranked seventh-richest, and David Packard, 70, who ranked 11th.

Mars runs the world's largest confections company, M&M Mars Inc. His net worth was put at $1 billion. Packard, starting with $538 in capital and a small garage, built what became Hewlett-Packard Co., which makes electronic equipment and computers. The other half of that team — William R. Hewlett — ranked 18th on the list.

No. 2 to Ludwig is Gordon Peter Getty, 48, the fourth son of the late oil magnate John Paul Getty. Estimated oil wealth: $1.4 billion.

Third are the father-son team of Perry Richardson Bass and Sid Richardson Bass of Fort Worth, Texas, who made their money in inherited oil wealth and investments.

Margaret Hunt Hill is fourth richest and is the top-ranked woman. Caroline Hunt Schellkopf is fifth. Both women, from Dallas, inherited their fortunes from their father, H.L. Hunt.

Lamar Hunt and William Herbert Hunt, sons of H.L., ranked eighth and ninth. Nelson Bunker Hunt, another son, ranked 10th.

Among the country's better-known names: David Rockefeller, retired chairman of Chase Manhattan Bank, ranked 13th. His fortune "may approach $1 billion."

Behind him is TV Guide founder Walter Annenberg, a member of President Reagan's "kitchen cabinet," and Stephen D. Bechtel Sr. and Stephen D. Bechtel Jr., who run the giant engineering and construction company bearing their name. The Annenberg and Bechtel fortunes are quoted at more than $500 million.

Bob Hope is No. 66 with $280 million.

Also noted: No. 100 Ted Turner, the cable TV magnate, $220 million in stock; No. 143 Ernest and Julio Gallo, Modesto, Calif., winemakers, "upwards of $300 million"; and Armand Hammer, entrepreneur and oilman, net worth more than $150 million, putting him at No. 159.

The list also includes the names Mellon (banking); Cox (publishing and broadcasting); Heinz (food); and Hearst (publishing).

A minority in the top 400 made a lot from a little, such as Philip H. Knight of Beaverton, Ore., who once said "We're just a bunch of guys making sneakers." The product is the Nike brand running shoe. The company's 1981 revenue was put at $458 million.

A man who Forbes says has plenty of money — "well over $100 million" — left his signature on millions more.

Fieldcrest Changes Local Staff

Several organizational changes have been made in the Greenville Spinning Mills Division of Fieldcrest Mills Inc., according to W. Giles Hunnings, corporate vice president for rug and carpet manufacturing.

Hunnings said J. Melvin Moore was appointed division vice president-Greenville yarn sales; W. C. Flake Jr. was named division vice president and general manager-Greenville yarn manufacturing; Jack W. Belshaw was appointed sales manager-Greenville yarn sales; and Douglas L. Hankins was named manager-customer and sales service.

Moore, formerly division vice president and general manager-Greenville Spinning Mills, has been with Fieldcrest since 1934. He came to Greenville when Fieldcrest bought the spinning mill in 1960 as assistant to the superintendent and subsequently was named superintendent and plant manager before being named division vice president and general manager in 1970.

Moore and his wife, Callie, reside on Westchester Drive and are members of the First Pentecostal Holiness Church.

A graduate of Wingate Junior College and N.C. State University, Flake joined the company in 1974 as plant manager of the Laurel Hill Carpet Mill. Prior to that he was employed by Collins & Aikman in various management positions for 12 years. In 1977, he went to Fieldcrest's Whiteville plant as general manager, his position immediately prior to being named division vice president and general manager of Greenville yarn manufacturing.

Flake and his wife, Gail, were members of Trinity Baptist Church in Whiteville. They plan to move to Greenville during the next few months.

A Purdue University graduate, Belshaw joined Fieldcrest in 1980 as general manager of the company's Irish operations. Prior to that he was employed by Wellman Inc. where he was vice president for manufacturing with responsibility for plants in Germany, Ireland and the United States.

He and his wife, Nadean, reside in Glen Court.

Hankins joined the company in 1956 as a control tester at the Karastan Rug Mill in Eden. He served in various managerial positions including manager of production control and of production planning and control before moving to the Greenville spinning mill in 1975 as manager of yarn sales. He remained in that position until his new appointment.

An Eden native, he and his wife, Mary Edith, reside on Fern Drive and attend Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church.

P&G Answers Latest Rumor

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Procter & Gamble Co., busy beating down rumors of Satanism, is now answering a charge in a letter to the National Catholic Register that the company promotes abortion.

The accusation came last week in a letter to the editor of the Register, a weekly published in California. The writer, who identified himself as John Reising of New York, accused the company of playing a "central role in the international abortion and birth control movement."

The letter accused the company of "continuing contributions" to Planned Parenthood and the National Abortion Rights Action League.

P&G spokeswoman Linda Ulrey said the company had never contributed to the league and had ended a string of contributions to Planned Parenthood when the organization took what she termed a "lead role" among advocates of free choice on the abortion issue.

Ms. Ulrey said P&G contributed $70,000 to Planned Parenthood from 1972 to 1979 and restricted use of the contributions to a "health education program."

Ms. Ulrey said the abortion charges are not new and that the company has developed a "small file" over the years to answer the allegations.

She said a letter from the company to one customer pointed out that sales volume of Pampers disposable diapers is No. 1 in P&G's product line and that the Cincinnati-based company is not likely to promote anything that would reduce its markets.

"It's nothing like our Satanism rumor," she said. The Satanism issue was raised recently by individuals who contended the company's trademark, the man in the moon surrounded by 13 stars, was a satanic symbol.

Eventually, the rumor prompted tens of thousands of calls to the offices of the $12 billion-a-year giant of the soap, food and personal care products business.

In July, P&G filed five lawsuits against people it accused of spreading the Satanism rumors. Two of the suits were subsequently dropped after defendants issued public apologies to P&G.

The company also faces about 400 suits stemming from its manufacture of Rely tampons. The product was taken off the market after the Centers for Disease Control said the tampons were a possible common denominator in many cases of toxic shock syndrome.

The company has established a $75 million fund to cover Rely-related litigation.

Last week in Denver, P&G reached an out-of-court settlement for an undisclosed amount with an 18-year-old woman who sued for $25 million after she suffered toxic shock syndrome.

ANNOUNCE MEMORIAL FUND ... Jessie Carter of Fayetteville and sons J. Worth Carter Jr. of Goldsboro and Donald C. Carter of Greenville meet with ECU Chancellor John M. Howell (left) to establish a memorial scholarship fund in honor of the late J. Worth Carter. (ECU News Bureau Photo).

Carter Scholarship Established

ECU News Bureau
Because of a father's dedication to formal education and devotion to his alma mater, students at the East Carolina University School of Education will benefit in years to come from annual scholarships in his name. The family of the late J. Worth Carter of Fayetteville has given $10,000 to establish a memorial at ECU to be known as the J. Worth Carter Scholarship in Education Fund.

"It is something he would have wanted, something he talked about and intended to do," Jessie Carter said of her husband, who was a school principal in Cumberland County for 28 years.

Carter's two sons, J. Worth Carter Jr. of Goldsboro and Donald C. Carter of Greenville, are ECU graduates and hold master's degrees in business administration from ECU. A daughter, Charlotte Carter of Fayetteville, is a senior at ECU.

Carter died Nov. 3 at the age of 59. Born in Edgecombe County, near Rocky Mount, he received the master's degree in education administration at East Carolina in 1952. After four years in the Sampson County school system he became principal at Eastover Elementary School in Cumberland County in 1953 and from 1956 until his retirement in 1980 he was principal of William H. Owen Elementary near Fayetteville.

He had served as district president of the N.C. Association of Educators in the 1970s and as a delegate to the national convention.

The first recipient of the J. Worth Carter Scholarship in Education will be selected next spring with the award for the school year 1983-84. Each scholarship will be for one academic year and will be renewable.

Agency To Close Purchase

Commissioners of North Carolina Eastern Municipal Power Agency voted last week to close on an additional 16 percent of its ownership interests in seven generating units on the Carolina Power & Light Co. system.

The purchase will be made on Tuesday, using a portion of the proceeds from NCEMPA's July 16 sale of $450 million in electric revenue bonds.

It was pointed out that the additional ownership interest will provide NCEMPA with more of its own generating capacity, reducing the amount of capacity the agency must purchase from CP&L to provide service to its participating cities.

Initially, NCEMPA issued $400 million in bonds on April 1, then closed on 33 percent of its ultimate ownership in the units from CP&L. By April 1983, the agency plans to close on 100 percent of its ownership interests using proceeds from subsequent bond sales.

Over the next year, NCEMPA said it plans to issue an estimated $350 million in additional bonds and notes to complete its purchase with CP&L. To complete acquisition and construction of all units included in the joint project with CP&L, the agency will issue an estimated total of $2.7 billion in bonds through 1993.

Greenville, Robersonville, Ayden and Farmville are four of the agency's 32 participating municipalities in eastern North Carolina.

Pitt Veterans Seeking Work

Don Anders, veterans employment representative in the Greenville office of the Employment Security Commission, reports that a large number of veterans are seeking work.

From Oct. 1, 1981, through July 31, according to Anders, 1,400 veterans have registered for work through the agency.

"Many of these veterans have had some excellent training and work experience," Anders comments, "but we need more job opportunities with which to match up their skills and abilities."

For the past nine months, records show that 453 jobs for veterans were located by the Greenville office. Anders asks that employers in the area who have job vacancies to list them with the ESC Job Service, telephone 756-2686.

The giraffe has only seven neck bones while the swan has 23.

N.C. Foreign Language Center Fills Many Needs

By PEGGY HOWE
N.C. Department of Cultural Resources

enjoys books on magazines in her native language, while at the same time, a Vietnamese mother in Fayetteville seeks to retain vestiges of Vietnamese language and culture in her rapidly Americanizing teenagers.

Two graduate students preparing for a tour of the Soviet Union reinforce their undergraduate Russian while a military family checks out books on German customs before being transferred to Frankfurt. These are all part of the N.C. Foreign Language Center (FLC).

For six years, students and refugees, tourist and soldiers, and local residents, too, have all benefitted from the nationally-recognized foreign language center. Housed in Fayetteville's Cumberland County Library, the FLC's collection of library materials in languages other than English is designed to serve the multi-language needs of all North Carolina residents. Any library — public, school, college, military, private or special — can borrow from the collection free of charge through interlibrary loan or deposit collections.

This month the library receives an $83,000 grant for fiscal year 1982-83 to help continue a wide array of services to North Carolinians interested in other languages — either non-English speaking natives or others learning a second language. The funds are part of the federal LSCA (Library Services and Construction Act) administered by the State Library of North Carolina, a division of the Department of Cultural Resources.

Librarian Dr. Patrick Valentine explains that the FLC clientele most often includes those who are fluent in a foreign language, usually limited English speakers.

These people use FLC services primarily in two ways: to read/listen to materials in their native language and to learn English as a second language (ESL).

For instance, he said, a family of Polish refugees in Gastonia is learning English to get along in the United States, to prepare for jobs and learn our customs. Recently, several Japanese electronic firms have moved into North Carolina. Their executive families are scrambling to absorb American language and customs.

The same new North Carolinians may enjoy books, tapes and filmstrips. The FLC includes more than 40 major Asian and European languages plus minor holdings. Altogether the center stocks more than 20,000 catalogued books plus about 2,000 records and tapes along with the filmstrips, posters, games and even comic books.

A large assortment of bilingual information sources such as dictionaries and grammars in a variety of languages offers help to the language student. Foreign language magazines and pamphlets keep newcomers in touch with their homeland.

Valentine explained that the FLC answers requests from practically every county in North Carolina as well as every type of library.

For instance, he pointed out, during the seasons when North Carolina has many migrant workers, collections in their native language of from 40 to several hundred books — both adult and juvenile — may be put on deposit for several months at the local public library or at the school library offering summer programs for the children.

The need for FLC services exists in almost every library everywhere. Valentine noted that obviously it is not practical for every library to have a foreign language collection due to the extra cost of the materials and the difficulty of obtaining them, as well as the almost certain duplication.

Also, he said, because of the deliberate scattering of immigrants across the state, rather than concentrating them in a few locations, there is an ever-growing burden on localities for non-English services — which the FLC can supply.

During 1981-82, FLC has been particularly successful in expanding its services to school libraries and college foreign language departments. Academic libraries use the center's native language materials for recreational reading as well as study aids for their foreign students, while schools bring foreign language books into their classrooms.

The FLC acts as a backup resource for other libraries, too, relying upon its superb collection of bilingual information sources to give answers to a wide range of enquiries from such questions as, "How do you say 'red dog' in Chinese?" to creating a motto in Latin for a military unit.

FLC serves the community, too — all over North Carolina. Upon request, the center will supply a speaker on multi-lingual library concerns and services. The center has a selection of teacher aids — works on teaching English as a second language for educators on all levels.

There's more. The center's audiovisual department offers a panorama of the world's folk and popular culture — something representing every country or linguistic group. Teachers and clubs can make especially good use of their recreational and educational material. The bilingual cassettes and sound filmstrips can be used by clubs and social studies classes as well as language groups.

Valentine explained that some language-learning courses are designed for tourists and others for more in-depth students. The center will offer guidelines to help in the proper selection.

With this year's grant, Valentine hopes to extend and expand the collection's western European languages, especially German and Spanish, and the Slavic and Asian languages, such as Polish, Czech, Thai and Vietnamese. He is particularly proud of the progress in building a varied collection of books in the many languages of India-Pakistan-Bangladesh.

So from Albanian or Bengali to Turkish, Ukrainian and Urdu — and all in between — whatever foreign language you need or would like to learn is available from North Carolina's Foreign Language Center. It's as close as your local library — any North Carolinian need only request the materials from his own local library and interlibrary loan takes over from there.

Photographer Berenice Brown Still Active At 84

By DAVID M. MAXFIELD
Smithsonian News Service

Since she first clicked the shutter of a borrowed Brownie back in the 1920's, Berenice Abbott's cameras have penetrated the faces and personalities of the famous, recorded the rapid changes in American cities and rural life, traced U.S. Highway 1 along the Atlantic Seaboard and snapped the actions of such physical phenomena as magnetic fields and soap bubbles.

At age 84, Abbott, whose long, full life, like her photographs, is a mosaic of contrasts — she worked in Paris during the legendary 20's, documented New York during the New Deal years and now lives quietly "up in the woods" in northern Maine — has definite ideas about the art of photography today.

"A lot of pictures now are only an accident," she recently told a Smithsonian Resident Associate audience during a conversation with Barbara Shissler Nosenow, curator of an exhibition of her work at the National Museum of American Art in Washington, D.C. "Young photographers take a lot of shots and hope one will come out." Besides that, "There's a terrible tendency to conformity in photography that is not healthy."

"Commercial photography does not weaken the eye or the will of the serious photographer (as some contend)," she also said. "Any work you do is educational — you're using the camera."

And: "You have to know the best camera for your subject. Most people don't want to bother. It's a lot of drudgery."

On that subject, Abbott told another interviewer not long ago: "Cameras today are utterly stupid. They look like Model-T's sitting on tripods. We need more simplification to free us for seeing."

Like her words, Berenice Abbott's photographs are direct, to the point. "She's aware, receptive, sensitive and has common sense," an admirer says. "Berenice has no use for purple prose or precious prints." The "ideas and objects other people deem trivial" are those where Abbott "notices something of value," another fan points out.

Central to the good photograph, she has said, "is the objectivity, not of a machine, but of a sensible human being, with the mystery of personal selection at the heart of it."

Some years back

"everyone started saying they would photograph the emotions. I didn't know what they meant by that." Photography, she insists, "doesn't teach you how to express your emotions. It teaches you how to see."

And see Abbott has. She was famous in her time for photo portraits of personalities in Paris during the 1920's; there Abbott snapped New Yorker magazine writer Janet Flanner (Genet) wearing a top hat encircled by two masks, novelist James Joyce elegantly attired with cane, hat and two rings on his left hand and actress Eva Le Gallienne, a sensuous study in formal black-and-white contrast. A photograph of her friend the Princess Eugene Murat — "a great artist at life," Abbott recalled, "who did absolutely nothing" — has been summed up as a "face that looks as if it had seen through the day, lost human illusion and will never be surprised again."

In all her portraits, Abbott has concentrated on finding the best in people and trying to understand exactly who they are, and though the sitters often brought their own props along as disguises, Abbott's camera, observes art critic Avis Berman, "bares their souls."

"Always," Nosenow says, "Abbott is a master at catching the telling gesture or the details of a dress or the accessory that reveals character as strongly as the face or eyes."

Over eight decades, Abbott's eyes have seen great change in America. Born in Ohio, she grew up in the late Victorian age of horses and carriages, later witnessed the coming of the automobile and electricity to her hometown and years after that was the first to photograph the atom smasher. She also has been witness to changes in photography techniques and styles and has long identified with work of the school of realists reaching back to Mathew Brady's portraits and Civil War prints.

But the realists collide periodically with another group of photographers seeking to flatter their subject by "correcting" what the camera sees. The outcome of the usually sentimental method, Abbott has asserted, "denies the essential dignity of the human subject."

"Fortunately, though, men like Brady were making wonderful realistic pictures of their world and times," Abbott explained. Their work flourished in the early days of photography as in no other nation because, she believes, the Civil War created a demand for millions of "likenesses" of young men marching off to the front.

It was during another war, World War I, that Abbott left Ohio to study journalism at Columbia University. She soon dropped that idea, took up sculpture and sailed for Europe in 1921. While headed for Paris from Berlin, however, she literally abandoned a large stone work in progress — and a new career — when she discovered that she was waiting on the wrong track for her departing train.

As it happened, the French photographer Man Ray needed a new darkroom assistant but insisted on someone with no knowledge of photography whom he could train. "I think I qualify," Abbott remembered saying — convincingly. "I liked it immediately — almost immediately. I was a very good assistant."

It was Man Ray who lent Abbott the Brownie during a holiday in Belgium and Holland. "I made a few photos of Amsterdam," she recalled. "They were rather nice, matter of fact." Actually, both Man Ray and Abbott were surprised to discover how good she was, and in 1925 Abbott set up her own studio on the Left Bank, where she photographed the well-known writers, artists, aristocrats and boulevardiers of the day.

Just as her new career was beginning, Abbott saw some Carolina Today

The ECU artists series and fishing weather will be two of the topics to be discussed this coming week on "Carolina Today," the early morning talk show featuring host Slim Short and hostess Susan Roberts. The program airs weekdays from 6 to 8 a.m. over WNCT-TV, Channel 9. The week's calendar is:

- Monday — 6:40 a.m., to be announced; 7:15 a.m., a discussion of the upcoming Artists Series at ECU; 7:25 a.m., the Wilson County Shrine Club; 7:40 a.m., Eugene "Red" McDaniels is the guest.
- Tuesday — 6:40 a.m., Dr. John Hale speaks on the treatment of breast lumps, on Healthbreak; 7:15 a.m., Joe Albee and Daryl Daughtry discuss the ECU Calendar girls; 7:25 a.m., citizen of the week Dr. James Bearden will appear; 7:40 a.m., the guest is director of the N.C. Wildlife Commission David Allsbrook.
- Wednesday — 6:40 a.m., John Sanders discusses weather for fishing; 7:15 a.m., to be announced; 7:40 a.m., Christopher Dean, artist in residence at Pitt Community College, is the guest.
- Thursday — 6:40 a.m., a look at last year's Michelob Cup Regatta; 7:15 a.m., Janet Nickerson discusses child day care; 7:25 a.m., Willis Manning and Linda Tucker talk about the Collard Festival; 7:40 a.m., home economics agent Ila Parker is the guest.
- Friday — 6:40 a.m., to be announced; 7:15 a.m., Tonia Pittman, 1983 Mini Majorette Princess of America; 7:25 a.m., David Craft of the Nash County Volunteer Fire Dept.; 7:40 a.m., plant doctor Eddie Harrington is the guest.

WOOW Classics

Four hours laced with late summer madness in Russian music is the highlight motif hostess Karen Hause has chosen for tonight's end of August WOOW Classics broadcast. Mrs. Hause is including interludes of non-Russian music to vary the musical diet. The four-hour weekly program is aired from 8 p.m. to midnight each Sunday night. Her choices for tonight are:

- 8 to 9 p.m.
 - Boccherini's "Quintet in D Minor for Strings and Oboe," the Sequoia String Quintet, Alan Vogel, oboist; "Hungarian Dances" No. 1 through 8, by Brahms, Antolo Dorati and the Minneapolis Symphony; Beethoven's "Symphony No. 7," Herbert von Karajan and the Berlin Philharmonic.
- 9 to 10 p.m.
 - The prelude and Liebstod to Wagner's "Tristan and Isolde," the Munich Philharmonic, soloist Hans Knappertsbusch; the little-known "Symphony No. 7" by Tchaikovsky, Eugene Ormandy and the Philadelphia Orchestra.
- 10 to 11 p.m.
 - Rimsky-Korsakov's "Scherzade," Leonard Bernstein and the New York Philharmonic; Ravel's "Mother Goose Suite," Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony.
- 11 p.m. to midnight
 - The "Gayne Ballet," suites 1 and 2, Kachiaturian; "Sonata for Alto, Trumpets, Trombones and Continuo," by Hammerschmidt; Pachelbel's "Two Sonatas for String," (the G and B), the Paillard Chamber Orchestra, Jean Francois Paillard, conducting.

Auditions For Pitt Children

AYDEN — Auditions for children interested in roles in a theater production to be given in October are being held today and Monday at the auditorium in the Ayden-Grifton High School. Beginning at 3 p.m. today and again at 7:30 p.m. Monday, children in grades one through eight in Pitt County and area schools are to be auditioned by members of the Ayden Workshop Theater. Those selected will be taught basic theater techniques and will prepare for a production tentatively scheduled for Oct. 7, 9 and 10.

Auditions On Tuesday

The Best Lunch Theater Ever will hold auditions beginning at 7 p.m. Tuesday at the Greenville Museum of Art, 802 S. Evans St., for its next production entitled "Potato Girl." The one-act play by Greenville playwright Christine Rusch calls for two females and one male between the ages of 18 and 35. Interested actors do not need to bring prepared material. "Potato Girl" will be presented at noon on Sept. 29 at the museum. The Best Lunch Theater is produced by the Playwright's Fund of North Carolina Inc.

The independence of Panama was proclaimed Nov. 3, 1903, and two weeks later the first canal treaty was signed with the United States. In return for access to the canal, the U.S. promised aid to any Panamanian revolt and the U.S. Marines prevented Columbian troops from moving into the rebel zone. The canal took 10 years to build and was opened Aug. 15, 1914.

The U.S. Continental Army disbanded in 1783.

82-83 Choral Society Plans Announced

Plans for the 1982-83 season of the Greenville Choral Society have been announced by director Rhonda Fleming. The first event of the season will be a joint venture with the East Carolina University School of Music. In November, Beethoven's "Ninth Symphony" will be performed with guest soloists, the ECU Symphony Orchestra and the combined choirs of the School of Music and the Choral Society.

In December, the Choral Society will present a concert of Christmas music featuring well-known favorites as well as several masterpiece selections. In the spring, activities by the society will culminate in an April Spring Concert. Tentative plans at this time are to present two medium-length choral works, the Bernstein "Chichester Psalms" and a Haydn mass. An innovation this season will be the formation of a small ensemble as an extension of the Choral Society. This group will be directed by Carolyn Ippock. Membership in the small ensemble will be by audition, with performers chosen from the general membership.

Rehearsals will be scheduled on the same evening as those for the regular society. A variety of repertoire will be performed by the ensemble, which will be featured on concert programs of the society as well as at other community functions. Membership in the Greenville Choral Society is open to the general public without audition. Sight-reading ability is not a prerequisite for membership, although the ability to match pitch is necessary. Rehearsals are scheduled every Tuesday evening from 7:30 to 9:30 at Immanuel Baptist Church, 1101 South Elm Street. The first rehearsal for the new season is set for September 14. Membership dues are $10 per year. In addition, each member is responsible for the purchase of major choral works performed each year. Director Fleming wishes to meet with prospective members for voice placement prior to the first rehearsal. Interested singers should come to Immanuel either on Tuesday evening, September 7 between 7:30 and 9, or on Sunday afternoon, September 12 between 2 and 4 p.m.

ECU Artists Series Listed

Six critically acclaimed artists and ensembles have been scheduled for appearances during the 1982-83 Artists Series at East Carolina University. The series opens this year on Oct. 4 and ends March 24.

Season tickets for the six performances are priced at $20 — a 56 percent savings over the price of individual tickets. Tickets can now be ordered by writing to: Central Ticket Office, Mendenhall Student Center, East Carolina University, Greenville, N.C., 27834 or by calling 757-6611, extension 266. Those ordering tickets by mail should include a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

All performances will be at 8 p.m. in Hendrix Theater in Mendenhall Student Center.

Entertainments scheduled and dates of performances are:

- Oct. 4 — The Tokyo String Quartet. The musicians perform on four matched Atami violins created between 1656 and 1677 by the Italian master Nicolo Amati. The Tokyo String Quartet has toured extensively for the past 12 years.
- Oct. 21 — A husband and wife team, William Bolcom and Joan Morris will present songs of the parlor piano days of a century ago and pop songs of the early 1900s, as well as show tunes by Gershwin and Porter and Stroller's cabaret songs.
- Nov. 15 — Flutist Julius

Baker will be in concert. Baker has performed with many symphony orchestras, including the Cleveland, Pittsburgh and Chicago and also plays in music festival from Sweden to Japan.

- Jan. 17 — A mixed-voice chorale, the Gregg Smith Singers, opens the 1983 segment of the Artists Series season. Their performance format entails placement of smaller sections of the total group at different points around the concert site.
- Feb. 7 — The chamber orchestra Orpheus is unusual in that members play without a conductor. They have played in engagements with guests such as Peter Serkin, Jean-Pierre Rampal and Isaac Stern.
- March 24 — For the final of six entertainments, pianist Peter Serkin will perform. Son of famed pianist Rudolf Serkin, the younger Serkin has performed with most of the world's major orchestras in the U.S., Europe and Asia.

Six Series Announced For Stewart Theater

RALEIGH — Entertainments in five categories have been announced for the 1982-83 season of Stewart Theater, on the campus of N.C. State University. Additionally, a sixth series in the program is scheduled to be performed in Raleigh Memorial Auditorium.

A brochure on complete details of activities, ticket prices and other information are available by writing to: Stewart Theater Presentations, N.C. State University, P.O. Box 5217, Raleigh, N.C., 27650. Enclose a self-addressed envelope at least six and one-quarter by eight and one-quarter size and affix 37 cents in postage.

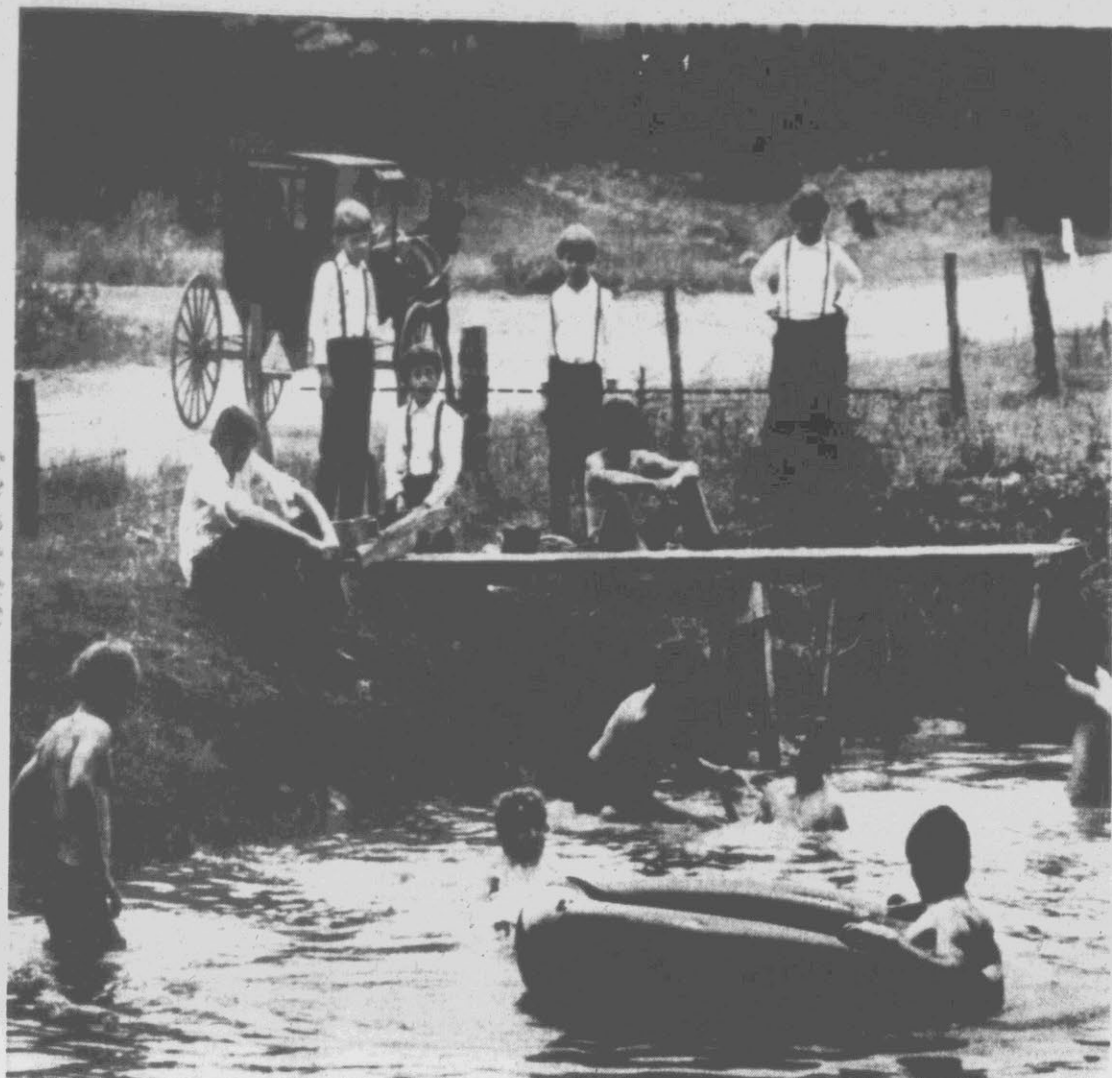

An abbreviated listing of entertainments for the coming season is:

- Dance Series
 - Oct. 27 — "The Bolshoi Ballet in Anna Karenina," a film. (Being shown for the first time in the U.S.)
 - Feb. 24 — Alvin Ailey Repertory Ensemble.
 - March 17 — Frank Holder Dance Company.
 - April 9 — The Ohio Ballet.
- Chamber Music Series
 - Oct. 3 — The Tokyo String Quartet.
 - Nov. 21 — The New York Chamber Soloists in "The Baroque Trumpet."
 - Jan. 23 — The Mendelssohn String Quartet.
 - Feb. 20 — Ko-Kela Piano Quartet.
 - March 20 — Gwendolyn Bradley, soprano. (Two additional chamber music concerts by North Carolina artists will be performed. Dates to be announced)
- Signature Series
 - Oct. 2, Two performances — Cab Calloway's Cotton Club Revisited.
 - Oct. 24, Two performances — "Give 'Em Hell Harry" with Kevin McCarthy.

Back Country Blues Revival

By FRANK THORSBERG — MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — The unorthodox guitar player with a Southern accent in his song and the bespectacled New Yorker with the clarinet at first seemed on opposite ends of the musical spectrum.

But, when CeDell Davis and Robert Palmer mixed in a trumpet player from Pocohontas, Ark., the result was a perfect blend of back-country blues.

Who would have thought Davis, the blues guitarist, and Palmer, the pop music critic for the New York Times, could pull it off?

"It's an exception to what a lot of other people do," Davis said, "but it works real good. We make it sound right."

What sounds right to Davis is the blues.

"I play blues and rhythm and blues and a little old-time rock," he said. "You know, stuff like Fats Domino used to do. I don't play hard rock. I just stick with the blues."

They don't play a lot of blues in New York, so

Palmer heads home to the South.

The journalist-clarinetist took a vacation recently to return to Arkansas, visit his family and play a few club dates with Davis, whom he met a few years back in a small club in Clarksdale, Miss. Trumpeter Gary Gazaway, from Pocohontas, rounds out the trio.

Davis' mini-tour included a stop at the Beale Street Music Festival in Memphis, the city where W.C. Handy, the father of Southern blues music, got the inspiration for his string of standards.

Although blues musicians like B.B. King, Albert King and John Lee Hooker have been commercially successful, the notion lingers that genuine blues has been lost.

"It had died down in the United States, but it was goin' good in Europe," Davis said. "Now it's picking up back here. I plan to work on it."

It's a wonder Davis can even play his guitar, the instrument he picked up as a youngster in Arkansas and Mississippi.

Davis contracted polio at age 10 and spent two years and seven months in a hospital. When he came out, his hands were gnarled and he didn't have full use of his arms.

"He had to learn to play all over again," Palmer said. "He came up with a unique solution — use a table knife, just like you'd spread butter with."

"I had to turn the guitar around with the strings upside down," Davis said. "I play over the top. That's how I do it."

NEW STAMPS — The U.S. Postal Service announced Thursday that two 20 cent stamps will be issued in September and October. The Wolf Trap Farm Park stamp, top, will be issued Sept. 1 at the park in Vienna, Va. It will be the first of a series drawing attention to cultural attractions of the national capital. The bottom stamp will honor Francis of Assisi and will be issued in San Francisco on Oct. 7. Francis will be honored for his great humanitarian efforts. The stamp will be issued in conjunction with San Francisco's celebration of the 800th birthday of the man for which the city was named. (AP Laserphoto)

Award Recipient

MANTEO — Sharon O'Neill, a member of "The Lost Colony" production for the past two seasons, is the 1982 recipient of the Evelyn Russell Layton Award.

Ms. O'Neill, a native of Schenectady, N.Y., received the award Aug. 21 in a special ceremony prior to the evening performance of the drama.

Joe Layton, director-choreographer of "The Lost Colony," made the presentation of the award, given in memory of Layton's late wife, actress Evelyn Russell.

The award goes to a member of the Professional Theater Workshop, a project of the Roanoke Island Historical Association. PTW is designed to assist members of the cast and technical staff to further their theatrical goals.

Ms. O'Neill was an actor-technician in "The Lost Colony" last season and was follow spot operator during the 1982 production. She was active in PTW productions during 1981-82, serving as master electrician for the children's show, "Beauty and the Beast," and this year was lighting designer for "The Great Red Controversy."

Beginning in September, Ms. O'Neill, a graduate of Lynchburg College, Va., will be working at the Virginia Museum Theater in Richmond as an apprentice in the lighting and sound department.

Videotape To Be Aired

A concert piece videotaped in Greenville on Aug. 17 is slated to be broadcast on television sometime in October.

States, a band from Norfolk that performs periodically at The Attie in Greenville, was taped on that day on Dickinson Avenue in front of The Carolina Cafe, performing the song "Bad Girls."

Preston Productions of Greenville did the video of the performance, which has been scheduled to be seen on MTV (Music Television) on cable TV and also on Home Box Office's Video Jukebox.

States has two LP albums already issued and another is due for release soon.

Preston Productions has recently videotaped several segments used on national television, including one on Helen Hayes in Mexico and one on History Land. The latter is being aired in Norfolk and six other area TV stations.

Book News

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By LOUISE WILKERSON PERRY

For light, fun-to-read fiction, mystery and suspense fans will enjoy some of the recently acquired novels at Sheppard Memorial Library.

"The Cooking School Murders" by Virginia Rich will appeal to Nero Wolfe fans and gourmands alike. The elite of Harrington, Iowa, have gathered for an advanced cooking class. But when one of the students is found with her throat slashed with a french boning knife, the other chefs are prime suspects. The heroine of the culinary crime, dignified Mrs. Potter, unwittingly discovers the culprit and serves to whet the reader's appetite for more of these delightful mysteries.

Alternately classified as novel, thriller, romance and fantasy, Kate Wilhelm's latest offering, "Oh Susannah!" is a rare combination of laugh-aloud humor and fresh observation of modern society. The novel has all the elements needed to make a romance with a difference: a heroine who loses her name, her past, and her husband; a hero with a sense of responsibility, particularly where a fair lady is involved, some helpful, plausible and hilarious villains, and the most remarkable cat in fiction. Ms. Wilhelm has invented some delightful characters and added a brilliant twist ending to make this, her 21st book, a gem.

"Love Masque" by Caroline Campbell is another "genre" novel; a Regency Romance, which is not quite what it seems. Like other Regency heroines, Caitlin Deverell comes to London but not for the season and not to find a husband. While in the city she will not dance at Almack's, she will not flirt at balls. Instead, she will visit her scholarly friends and do research for a family history she has undertaken.

But there are some aspects of the Regency Romance which simply cannot be ignored, and handsome, wealthy Lord Reignfort provides just the right touch of animosity and passion to thicken the plot and spark the romance. Followers of Jane Austen will take to their hearts this new kind of Regency Heroine and welcome eagerly the first novel of a major book club editor.

Conference Set

RALEIGH — Historic resources management will be the topic of a regional conference to be held at Bonclarken Assembly in Flat Rock N.C. Sept. 16-17.

The conference, which is sponsored by the Historic Preservation Society of North Carolina and the National Trust for Historic Preservation in cooperation with the office of the state attorney general, is designed for preservationists living in the western part of the state but is open to any interested parties.

Keynote speaker for the event will be Dwight Young, director of the Southern regional office of the National Trust for Historic Preservation in Charleston. For more information contact the Historic Preservation Society at 109 E. Jones St., Raleigh, 27611; or telephone 733-4763.

Fee for the conference, including all sessions, the Thursday social hour, dinner and Friday luncheon, is $42 for society members and $52 for non-members. The fee includes a year's membership in the Preservation Society. A special $15 student fee will cover conference sessions and lunch on Friday.

Exhibits At Weatherspoon

GREENSBORO — A photography show by Rod Farb of Durham, "Endangered Species: Cats," opened Aug. 24 in the outer gallery area of Weatherspoon. Art Gallery on the UNC-Greensboro campus.

In addition to this show, exhibitions from Weatherspoon's permanent collection will be shown during the first semester of school.

On Sept. 5 a series of photographs, "Eisenstaedt: Germany," by Alfred Eisenstaedt, will open and be on view through Sept. 26. The photographs focus on people and places in Germany.

Gallery hours are 10 to 5 Tuesdays through Fridays and 2 to 6 on weekends.

Injuries Aside, Emory Pleased With ECU Practice

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

While injuries continue to plague several positions of the East Carolina University football team, Coach Ed Emory is very pleased with the way things are going elsewhere.

He just wishes some of the injuries could be a little more spread out.

"It seems like everyone is getting hurt at just a few positions," he said. "We're almost about to run out of our red-cross shirts."

Those shirts, for players who can undergo some form of practice, are red and feature a big white cross across the chest. The meaning is clear — no hitting allowed on this person.

Most of the injuries have come at just a few positions, like tailback and linebacker, receiver and nose guard. For the most part, the rest of the team is relatively injury-free.

The tailback position is really getting thin. First starter Jimmy Walden went down, and he was followed by several others, including his replacement on first team, Milt Corsey, who has a groin pull. Then, Tony Baker, a freshman seeking to replace Corsey, came up lame, leaving only freshman Dwight Richardson whole.

Emory said that Vernard Wynn has been moved over from corner back to tailback because of the injury situation, but he wasn't sure yet whether it might be a permanent move.

But the offensive line is fairly well intact and the quarterback and fullback positions both look good at this time.

"One pleasant surprise has been the play of Norman Quick," Emory said. Quick is a sophomore offensive guard.

"Tom Carnes (tackle) is having the best practices he's had," the coach added.

"We're a little concerned with the injuries at center with John Floyd missing right much practice, but we've gotten good play from Jeff Autry (tackle), Mac Powers (guard) and Scott Totten (tackle)."

Emory noted that tight end Norwood Vann continued to be impressive and that Lloyd Black was beginning to push him.

At fullback, freshman Pat Bowens is starting to come around.

"Greg Stewart is throwing the ball exceptionally well, as are the other two quarterbacks (Kevin Ingram and John Williams)."

Defensively, the linebacking situation, with Mike Grant still sidelined, and John Columbia out for the year and Gerry Rogers down for several weeks, is thin.

"Ronald Reid and P.J. Jordan are looking pretty good right now and Dewayne Anderson and Amos Twitty are coming along there." Twitty is coming off an injury and hasn't regained his starting spot.

Larry Berry, a freshman, has also come on and entered the linebacking picture.

Mark Erwin and Marty Carlson are both hurt at nose guard, and the coaches have moved over Tony Smith from tackle to help out there. Hal Stephens and Steve Hamilton have played well in the line, and Barry Smith is showing consistent improvement.

"All five of our defensive ends are looking good, and we're healthy in the backfield," Emory added.

The kicking game is beginning to settle down, too. "Right now, if we were playing this week, I'd have to go with John Williams punting. The job of kickoff and placements is still a dogfight between Jeff Heath and Kurt Larkins."

With Walden sidelined, Emory is still looking for someone to take over on the kick returning duties.

"We've got lots of hard, hard work ahead of us in the next two weeks," the coach said. "We can't start preparations for N.C. State for another week. We may still have to shift some personnel before then."

Since State plays Furman on Saturday, the Pirates will also have a chance to do some scouting. "But what they do we can't control. We just have to be as fundamentally sound on both offense and defense as we can be," Emory said.

The Pirates face State in Raleigh on September 11.

Former ECU All-American Discovers Life Along The Sidelines As A Coach

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

HOPE MILLS — Former East Carolina University All-American guard Wayne Inman has discovered life along the sidelines. And, from all appearances, it suits him just fine.

An Associated Press third-team All-America choice in 1979, Inman is now an assistant coach at his alma mater, South View Senior High School. Life along the sidelines is different — just ask Inman.

"The biggest thing is that I see how many things I look for granted," he said, "things I learned in college."

Learned — and absorbed.

"In college, you're dealing mostly with skilled athletes," Inman said while sitting inside a classroom at South View. "In high school, that's not always the case."

"It's very frustrating at times," he added. "You explain to them and show them what you want and then you go out Friday nights and they don't give you exactly what you want."

"The thing about coaching, though, is you've got to be patient. I've always wanted to be a coach."

He got his chance two springs ago when he was student teaching at Farmville Middle School. While there he was approached by then-Farmville Central coach Gene Brewer, who had just taken the job at South View.

"He told me he had accepted the job but at that particular time they didn't have an opening," Inman said. "I told him I was interested. I wanted to get back home."

But, when there was still no opening later that spring, Inman took a job as head coach at Hope Mills Junior High.

Before long, however, a position came open at South View, located about six miles south of Fayetteville and one of nine 4-A schools in Cumberland County.

"Gene called me one night and asked if I'd be interested in coming to the high school."

Brewer did not have to ask twice. Soon, Inman was at South View coaching the offensive and defensive lines. But, as Inman is quick to acknowledge, manning the sidelines is far different from playing.

"Just being a great player doesn't exactly make you a great coach," Inman said. "I've had to establish coach-player relationships where I was always used to player-player relationships in college."

Inman almost didn't go college, much less ECU. Inman drew the attention of N.C. State, North Carolina and Virginia Tech going into his senior year but a 1-9-0 season scattered the recruiters elsewhere.

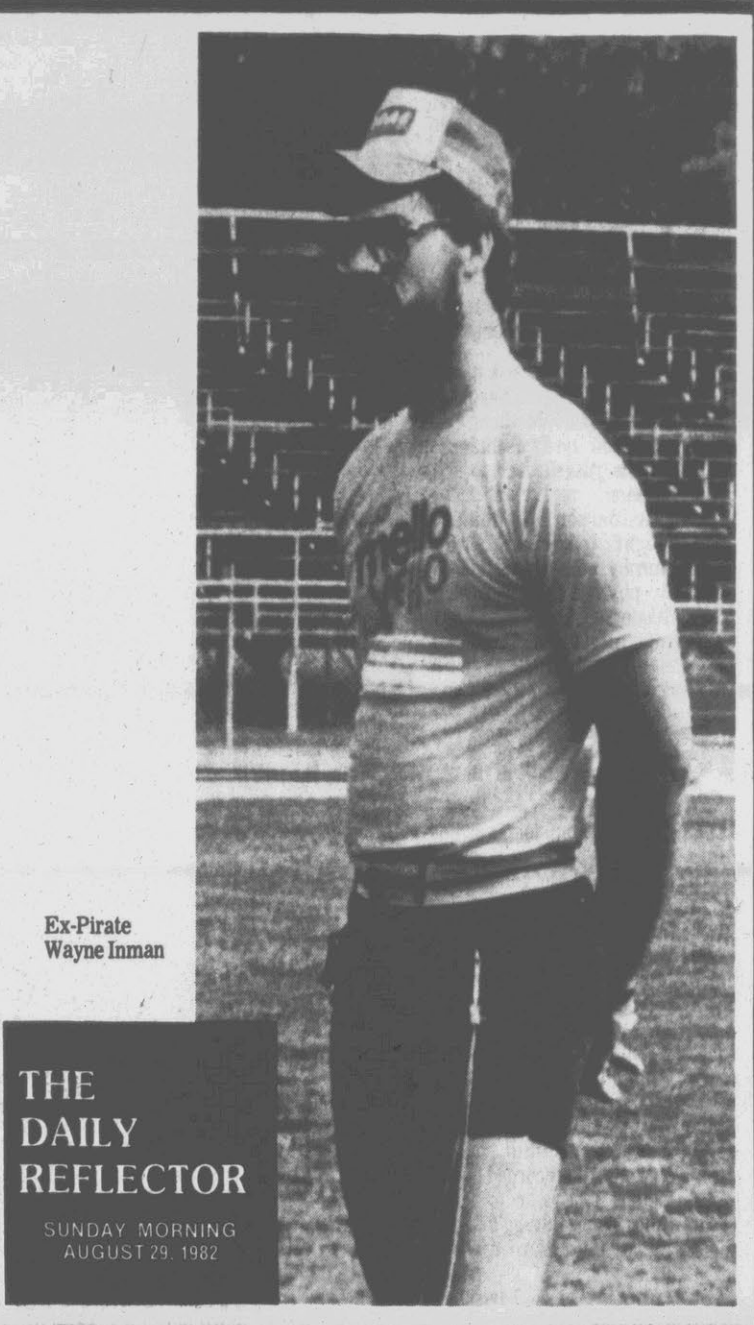

"After the season got under way everybody forgot me," Inman recalled.

The year ended and Inman was recommended by South View head coach Bob McQueen for the East-West All-Star game. Inman, who had signed a partial scholarship to Catawba College, was selected as an alternate.

Inman ended up putting on an impressive performance. One of those looking on was then-ECU head coach Pat Dye.

"I had talked to East Carolina during the season and they had asked me to come on as a walk-on," Inman said. "But I didn't want to walk on."

Floyd Up By 3 In WS Of Golf

Scores on page B-10

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Ray Floyd had some thoughts about the tough old Firestone Country Club course after he'd negotiated his way to a hard-won, 2-under-par 68 and a three-shot lead Saturday in the third round of the $400,000 World Series of Golf.

"I can never remember the pins set as difficult as they were today, and I've played here for 20 years."

"I think it's the thing to do. The golf course should play to its fullest and hardest with this elite field," Floyd said.

"I'm tickled to death to shoot the score I did under these conditions. I would have been very pleased with par."

So would almost anyone else in the international gathering of 25. Besides Floyd's effort, which was the best of the day, only two other subpar rounds were recorded. They were 69s by Tom Watson and Tom Weiskopf.

Only Floyd, grinding away on the best season of his two-decade career, was under par for 54 holes. Floyd, who holds the PGA championship and two other 1982 titles and currently is the game's top money-winner, had a three-round total of 2-under-par 208.

"The conditions were very difficult," Floyd said. "The pin placements were tough and the wind (which gusted to 20 mph), dried out the greens and made them very difficult to putt."

The rest of the field could only agree with him as the 7,173-yard Firestone layout regained its reputation as the toughest course on the tour.

Jack Nicklaus, for example, made six birdies but could do no better than a 72. He also had two bogeys and three double bogeys on the course that has provided him with seven career titles.

It was so tough that at one point, Floyd took the lead with a bogey.

Lanny Wadkins, Curtis Strange and Tom Kite, playing in the next-to-last threesome, all were in the hunt and all bogeyed the final hole.

Australian Bob Shearer played one stretch of 11 holes with one par.

Masters champion Craig Stadler, who was in and out of difficulties all day, let a constant, glowering scowl express his thoughts on the situation.

Shearer eventually finished his adventures with a hard-won 73 and a three-round total of 211 that left him alone in second place.

Stadler, who shared the second-round lead with Shearer, struggled to a 75 in the brisk weather that had more than a hint of fall. He was tied for third at 213 with Isao Aoki of Japan, who managed a round of par 70. Wadkins, Strange and Kite were next at 214. Wadkins and Strange had 72s and Kite a 73.

Nicklaus, who has made five double bogeys in three rounds, was tied with Tom Watson at 218. Watson, who defeated Nicklaus for the U.S. Open title and later added the British Open crown, shot a third-round 69 but was nine strokes back with 18 holes to go in the chase for a $100,000 first prize.

While everyone else was falling victim to varied disasters, Floyd had a remarkably steady effort that included only one bogey.

And strangely, the bogey gave him the lead alone.

He and Shearer, playing in the same group, shared the top spot going to the ninth hole. Floyd found a fairy bunker, couldn't reach the green in regulation and bogeyed.

AP Poll

Panthers Ranked No. 1, North Carolina At No. 5

By The Associated Press

The University of Pittsburgh, coming off three consecutive 11-1 seasons but sporting its third head coach in seven years, has been picked to win the 1982 national championship in The Associated Press preseason college football poll with defending champion Clemson in the No. 11 spot.

The Pitt Panthers received 36 first-place votes and 1,092 of a possible 1,200 points from a nationwide panel of 59 sports writers and broadcasters. The Washington Huskies were second with 15 first-place votes and 1,064 points, followed by Alabama, Nebraska and North Carolina.

The last team to win the AP national championship after being ranked No. 1 in the preseason poll was Alabama in 1978. Pitt won its last title in 1976 after starting out No. 9.

That was Johnny Majors' last year as Pitt's head coach. Jackie Sherrill coached the Panthers to four Top Ten (Please turn to page B-14)

College Coaches Select Pitt As Top-Ranked Team

NEW YORK (UPI) — The University of Pittsburgh, sporting a new coach and one of its most difficult schedules in years, has been named the No. 1 college football team in the nation Saturday in pre-season balloting by UPI's Board of Coaches.

The Panthers, who finished second in UPI's final ratings last year with an 11-1 record that included a 24-20 victory over Georgia in the Sugar Bowl, received 26 of 42 first-place votes for 568 points in ballots cast by UPI's nationwide panel of coaches.

First-year Coach Serafino "Fog" Fazio has 18 starters returning from the 1981 team coached by Jackie Sherrill and a schedule, that begins with games against North Carolina, Florida State, Illinois and West Virginia. The Panthers also meet Penn State and Notre Dame later in the year.

Washington, with 17 starters from last year's Rose Bowl champions returning. (Please turn to page B-14)

Vincent: Rose On Schedule

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

With just a week left to go before the season opens, Rose High School's Rampants are "on schedule," according to coach Ronald Vincent.

"We had some real bad practices this week until the latter part of the week. I'm certain that is was just because we are tired of practicing. Thursday and Friday things picked up real well," Vincent said.

The Rampants spent a good bit of the time on the kicking game and the passing game. "Our passing game has improved a great deal over the week," the coach pointed out. "The timing between the quarterbacks and receivers has really improved on our short passing game."

But, Vincent still isn't sure how the kicking game is coming along. "Willie Levett is booming the ball, but he's still somewhat inconsistent," Vincent said. Frank Norris and Bobby Buie are both handling the punting and the coach isn't sure which will get the call come Friday night.

"I anticipate that we're still going to have to do some more work on this phase of the game before we open," he added.

Handling the kickoffs is Horace Barrett, who has been slowed somewhat by a pulled muscle. Barrett kicked last year, but has more height this year on his kicks.

Defensively, Vincent feels the team had its best practice of the year on Thursday. "We feel like our linebackers have improved a great deal, and the defensive backfield is settling in." (Please turn to page B-15)

Haynie's 208 Leads Classic By 2 Strokes

Scores on page B-10

HIGH POINT (AP) — Sandra Haynie promised to do better following the third round of the $165,000 LPGA Henredon Classic Saturday, and she will if JoAnne Carner's assessment is correct.

Haynie, the defending champion, fired a 1-under-par 71 for a 54-hole total of 208 on the 6,191-yard, par-72 Willow Creek Golf Club, but second-round runners up Hollis Stacy and Dianne Dailey had been replaced by the veteran Carner.

Carner, who qualified for the LPGA Hall of Fame in Cleveland last weekend by winning her 35th tournament, shot a 69 to stand at 210 after 54 holes.

"It's a wonderful group of players (on the leader board)," said Carner. "The cream has risen to the top. There's no chokers among that bunch."

That bunch includes Carner, who has had a cold all week and said it "is wearing me down. I really fought it. I was scrambling a bit on the back side. My 69 felt like Haynie's 64 yesterday."

Haynie agreed that the competition would be tough on Sunday. "That's some group on the leader board," Haynie said. "It's anybody's tournament. I'm going to play considerably better tomorrow. I just was never in a strong birdie position all day. The difference was, I was hitting my irons fat today, not as pure as yesterday."

Haynie made birdie on No. 6 to move to 8-under and a three-stroke lead, but Carner made birdies of her own on Nos. 7, 10 and 11 to pull into a tie. However, that was short-lived as Carner promptly put her second shot on No. 12 into the trees, eventually settling for bogey.

Haynie's lead remained at one stroke until she reached the green in two and sunk a 10-footer to finish her round. Her only bogey came when she 3-putted on the 10th hole.

In addition to Carner, another player making a big move in the third round was Amy Alcott, who shot 69 to move to 5-under-par 211 and third place.

Alcott began the day by 3-putting for bogey on the first hole, but that was the last trouble she had on the greens. She made 25-footers for birdies on Nos. 4 and 5 and a 20-footer to save par on the 16th hole. Her only other bogey came on No. 13 when her drive landed among the pines.

"I've played some really great golf, but I haven't made my putts," Alcott said. "The putts started to fall today. I'm playing very well, hitting the ball better than I have in a long time. I am very pleased with my position and am looking forward to tomorrow."

Pat Bradley is at 4-under-par 212 after making bogey on No. 17 and is tied with Stacy for fourth place. Stacy bogeyed the 17th hole to finish at 1-over-par 73 for the day.

Local favorite Dianne Dailey of Greensboro began the day at 5-under-par and in a tie for second with Stacy. Her score ballooned to 75 when she hit the water on 17 and took a triple-bogey 7. She is at 2-under-par 214.

Nancy Lopez mounted a drive on the front nine but ran into trouble down the stretch. She stood 4-under-par after 10 holes, but bogeys on Nos. 11 and 14 offset a birdie on No. 15 and pushed her back to a 3-under-par 213. She is tied with Cathy Sherk who shot a second-straight 72 after an opening-day 69.

Henderson: 162 Steals Possible

Related story, page B-11
MILWAUKEE (AP) — Rickey Henderson, at 122 and counting, thinks he could add as many as 40 stolen bases to his major league record before the end of this season.
 But he said that if his Oakland A's teammates start winning, it won't be necessary. And he would prefer it that way.
 Henderson, the A's 23-year-old left fielder, broke Lou Brock's 1974 major league record of 118 stolen bases in a season when he swiped second base in the third inning against the Milwaukee Brewers Friday night.
 He stole three more later in the game — his third four-steal game of the season — but the Brewers won 5-4. The A's, picked by many to repeat as American League West champions, are going nowhere at 57-72, and Henderson said the team's disappointing showing has dimmed his satisfaction in the record.

"I can steal 162 bases if things go right," Henderson said after the game. "If I can help the team by keeping on running, there's no telling how many I can get."
 "But the main reason I have so many is the way the team started out," he said. "We weren't scoring a lot of runs and not winning. I was getting a lot of walks. If the team starts winning and I get more base runners in front of me, I don't think I'll steal as many."
 "When you set records and you don't win, you don't get great joy," he said. "I get more joy out of winning than setting records."

Henderson has had to shoulder a disproportionate share of the offense for the A's, whose .233 team batting average is the worst in the majors. Henderson's .271 average leads the team, and his three walks Friday raised his league leading total to 109.
 "Nobody can tarnish his record because we needed every one (stolen base) tonight, the same as all year," A's Manager Billy Martin said after Friday's game.

 "I think he can get 140, maybe more, this year," he said. "I want him to get as many as he can. He helps us win ball games."
 Martin said he expects Henderson to be even more effective now that the pressure of chasing Brock's record is off.
 "It got to him a little bit," Martin said. "It affected his hitting because he wanted to get on base so bad. He'll be more relaxed now."

Henderson set up his record-breaking 119th steal by drawing a four-pitch walk off the Brewers' Doc Medich in the third inning.
 After four pickoff attempts by Medich, Henderson broke for second on the first pitch — a pitch-out — to the next batter, Wayne Gross. Catcher Ted Simmons' throw was slightly to the right of second base, and Henderson's head-first slide dodged shortstop Robin Yount's attempted tag.
 The partisan Brewer crowd of 41,600 gave Henderson a standing ovation after the safe signal by second base umpire Mike Reilly.
 Henderson sprang to his feet, pulled the bag from its

Kirkland Shocks Taiwan To Win LL World Series

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. (AP) — Cody Webster pitched a two-hitter and belted a home run as Kirkland, Wash., stunned Taiwan 6-0 Saturday to win the 36th Little League World Series.
 Webster struck out 12 and allowed only one Taiwan runner to get to third as he earned his second victory of the tournament. The 5-foot-6, 174-pound right-hander walked only three.
 Webster struck out the side in the bottom of the sixth, and the Washington team leaped and threw their caps into the air on the final called strike.
 Pu-Tzu Town had been seeking Taiwan's sixth straight championship and their 11th since 1969. The loss was only the second for a Taiwan team in 36 series games.
 The only other Taiwan loss was in 1970 to Chinandega, Nicaragua, by a 3-2 score.
 Washington played errorless ball in becoming the first American team to win the series since Lakewood, N.J., in 1975, when foreign teams were temporarily prohibited.
 Washington squeezed across the game's first run in the third when Mark Swain led off with a walk, moved to third on a sacrifice and a wild pitch. Swain scored on Shawn Cochran's suicide squeeze bunt.

 In the fourth, Washington loaded the bases with no outs and scored all three men to take a 4-0 advantage. Mike Adams singled between first and second to drive in Mark Peterson, who had led off with a double. Swain singled to the same spot, driving in Bill Cook, who had bunt-singled.
 Swain stole second and Erik Jonson scored from third when Taiwan pitcher Chuo Kun-yuan's throw to second went into the outfield for Pu-Tzu Town's fourth error.
 Webster led off the fifth with a 290-foot blast well beyond the center-field fence, the longest home run ever hit in the series, according to Little League President Creighton Hale.

Henderson Scratched

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Rickey Henderson of the Oakland A's, who Friday night set a major league record by raising his stolen base total for the season to 122, was scratched from the lineup for Saturday night's game with the Milwaukee Brewers because of a sore shoulder.
 He was listed in the A's lineup for Saturday night's game, but was withdrawn a few minutes before the game.

College Football Season Set To Begin

By The Associated Press
 With 41 fewer "major" teams but two additional television networks, the 1982 college football season gets under way this week.
 The National Collegiate Athletic Association has had a busy off-season, trimming Division I-A from 137 to 96 teams and giving a piece of the live TV action, which had been ABC's exclusive property for 16 years, to CBS and the Turner Broadcasting System. The price was a whopping $281.1 million — $263.5 million from ABC and CBS for the next four years and $17.6 million from TBS for a two-year supplemental package of prime-time night games.
 The traditional powers, of course, are still in Division I-A, but leagues like the Mid-American, Missouri Valley, Southern and Southland Conferences and the Ivies have been bumped to Division I-AA.

 Most of them are happy about it because the Division I-AA playoffs have been expanded, giving them a chance at a national championship which they would not have in Division I-A, where the champion is determined by The Associated Press poll.
 ABC and CBS each will televise 14 "exposures," or live games — either national or regional — telecast into each market on the network. Within its 14 "exposures," however, each network must present a minimum of 35 games. In addition, TBS will show 19 night games — 14 Saturdays, four Thursdays and one Sunday.
 TBS actually will get a jump on the others and kick off college football's 114th season by airing the Brigham Young-Nevada-Las Vegas game Thursday night. ABC inaugurates its schedule Monday night, Sept. 6, with Clemson at Georgia — a matchup of the 1981 and 1980 national champions — while CBS kicks off its series Thursday night, Sept. 9, with North Carolina at Pitt.

 The schedule for Saturday, Sept. 4, includes such noteworthy games as Miami, Fla., at Florida, Arizona State at Oregon, Memphis State at Mississippi, Duke at Tennessee, Mississippi State at Tulane, Colorado State at Missouri, Boston College at Texas A&M, New Mexico at Wyoming and Northwestern at Illinois. In that one, Northwestern will attempt to end its record major college losing streak of 31 games. The Wildcats have not won since they defeated Wyoming 27-22 on Sept. 15, 1979.

Also on tap for Sept. 4 is a meeting between Grambling State and Morgan State at Yankee Stadium in New York. Grambling Coach Eddie Robinson needs three victories to become the fourth coach in college football history to win 300 games.
 Robinson, who has been Grambling's coach since 1941 except for two years during World War II, trails Alabama's Paul "Bear" Bryant, who recorded his 315th victory last year to surpass Amos Alonzo Stagg's 314, and Glenn "Pop" Warner, who had 313.
 The list of 96 Division I-A teams includes the top seven conferences — Atlantic Coast, Big Eight, Big Ten, Pacific 10, Southeastern, Southwest and Western Athletic — the seven-member Pacific Coast Athletic Association; Central Michigan and Toledo of the MAC; New Mexico State, Tulsa and Wichita State of the MVC and 20 independents.

 There are 17 new coaches at Division I-A schools, 10 with no previous head coaching experience at a four-year school. Those 10 are Joe Kapp at California, Bill McCartney at Colorado, Leon Fuller at Colorado State, Gary Tranquill at Navy, Harvey Hyde at Nevada-Las Vegas, Foge Fazio at Pitt, Leon Burnett at Purdue, Richard Bell at South Carolina, Jim Carmody at Southern Mississippi and Dan Simrell at Toledo.
 In addition, Jerry Claiborne moved from Maryland to Kentucky, Bobby Collins from Southern Mississippi to Southern Methodist, Jackie Sherrill from Pitt to Texas A&M, Bill Yung from West Texas State to Texas-El Paso, Chuck Stobart from Toledo to Utah and George Welsh from Navy to Virginia. Bobby Ross, Maryland's new man, was an assistant in the National Football League the last four years after serving as head coach at The Citadel.

 There will be 16 major college bowl games, the same number as last year. The Garden State Bowl dropped out, but a new kid on the block is the Aloha Bowl in Honolulu.
 Rule changes for 1982 are negligible, although the penalty was changed to five yards for incidental grasping of a face mask and 15 yards for twisting, turning or pulling on it.

Kotar In Guarded Condition

NEWARK N.J. (AP) — Doug Kotar, the former New York Giants running back, remained in guarded condition in a hospital intensive care unit, according to hospital spokesman Saturday.

Kotar, 31, has a malignant, inoperable brain tumor, his doctors said.

"He is still in guarded condition and that's about all I can tell you," George Gaymon, assistant administrator at the Hospital of the University of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey, said.

After performing eight hours of surgery on Kotar Tuesday, doctors suspected his tumor was malignant. Their preliminary findings were confirmed Friday when laboratory analyses were completed.

Kotar, of Canonsburg, Pa., retired from the Giants last month because the separated right shoulder he suffered last season had not healed completely.

Bradshaw Passes for 260 Yards, 2 TDs

Steelers Roll Past Colts

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Terry Bradshaw passed for 260 yards and two touchdowns to John Stallworth in the first half as the Pittsburgh Steelers crushed the Baltimore Colts 37-15 in a National Football League exhibition game Saturday night.

Bradshaw, ineffective last week in a 13-10 victory over the New York Giants, completed 15 of 28 passing attempts as the Steelers rolled to a 23-9 halftime lead.

Cliff Stoudt passed 26 yards to rookie tight end John Rodgers in the second half for another touchdown to help give the Steelers a 3-0 NFL preseason record.

Pittsburgh drove 98 yards on 11 plays, capped by Sidney Thornton's 1-yard touchdown run, on its first possession. Bradshaw completed four passes for 78 yards, including gains of 24 and 22 yards to Lynn Swann.

Bradshaw tossed scoring passes of 11 yards and 3 yards to Stallworth in less than four minutes early in the second quarter as Pittsburgh took a 20-0 lead. His 56-yard completion to Jim Smith to the Colts' 8-yard line set up Stallworth's second touchdown pass reception with 9:01 left before intermission.

The Colts, 2-2, coming off a 34-3 victory over Atlanta, had offensive problems even though Coach Frank Kush used three quarterbacks: Mike Pagen, David Humm and Art Schlichter.

St. Louis 10

Chicago 3

CHICAGO (AP) — John Gillen rambled 60 yards with an interception to set up a 20-yard touchdown pass from Jim Hart to Greg LaFleur Saturday night, giving the St. Louis Cardinals a 10-3 National Football League exhibition victory over the Chicago Bears.

Gillen stepped in front of Bears receiver Calvin Thomas and grabbing quarterback Bob Avellini's pass. He had the entire right sideline open and ran 60 yards before inadvertently stepping out of bounds at the Chicago 33-yard line.

Hart, finishing up for starter Neil Lomax, handed off twice to reach the Bear 27 and got a holding call to move it to the 22. From there, Stump Mitchell swept the left side for two yards and on the next play Hart hit LaFleur with a flare up the left sideline and the Louisiana State graduate rambled the final eight yards for the winning score.

The game was marred by errors and a number of penalties on both sides. It began with the handshake by opposing players, that has come to symbolize a show of solidarity among members of the NFL Players Association union. The action drew boos from a near capacity Soldier Field crowd.

Detroit 27

Cincinnati 23

CINCINNATI (AP) — Gary Danielson came off the bench to toss three touchdown passes as the Detroit Lions rallied from a 10-point halftime deficit to post a 27-23 victory over the Cincinnati Bengals in a National Football League preseason game Saturday night.

Danielson's 6-yard touchdown pass to Robbie Martin with 3:41 to play put the Lions ahead 27-23 and raised their exhibition record to 2-1. The Bengals suffered their third straight preseason loss.

The two teams met at mid-field and shook hands before the game in a show of union solidarity.

The Bengals had forged a 20-10 halftime advantage on a 29-yard touchdown pass play from quarterback Ken Anderson to Archie Griffin.

To Complement Passing Attack

Deacs Look For Running Game

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

WINSTON-SALEM — It's no mystery that Wake Forest will fill the air with footballs this fall, so coach Al Groh is searching for a running game to take some of the pressure off quarterback Gary Schofield.

While Schofield led the Atlantic Coast Conference in total offense and was fifth in passing efficiency, the Demon Deacons were last in team rushing, averaging a meager 81 yards a game.

The passing game will remain the primary weapon as the Demon Deacons try to improve on a 4-7 record last year which included a 1-5 conference mark. Groh told reporters on the ACC media tour that he spent the spring trying to add punch to his running game, too.

"We went recruiting with the intent of getting some backs who have the skill to break tackles, make people miss them," says Groh. "We felt like we did that."

Groh brought seven freshmen to Winston-Salem to replace Wayne McMillan. Sophomore Duane Owens, who rushed for 332 yards in 1981, is listed as the starter. Newcomers Michael Ramseur and Topper Clemmons are tied for the No. 2 spot.

"As we're able to bring them along, I feel our production offensively will increase," adds Groh. "We can't force-feed them into situations just because we have a need for them."

"If we push them in before they're ready, it could hurt their confidence, and in the long run, slow down their development," he says.

Nonetheless, Groh stakes the success of 1982 on Schofield's right arm. Touted by school officials for all-American status, the second-year coach says his quarterback has made some gains.

"He's refined and expanded, he's understanding of the concept of the offense," he says. "I think what has probably developed the most is his knowledge of defenses."

Schofield's face appears on a billboard near the campus, an indication that he is considered the prime force in the Wake Forest attack. He says soon he will be coaching one of the best.

"I think by the time he's finished," says Groh, "He'll be one of the top two or three quarterbacks in the country."

Just as the school has boosted Schofield for national recognition, Groh thinks he'll

Royals Win, Regain 1st Place In West

CHICAGO (AP) — Vida Blue allowed five hits in seven innings and Frank White's two-run double capped a seven-run second inning as the Kansas City Royals moved into first place in the American League West with a 10-1 victory over the Chicago White Sox Saturday night.

The Royals victory, their fifth in a row and eighth in their last 10 games, enabled them to pull a half-game ahead of the California Angels, who were defeated by the Boston Red Sox in an afternoon game.

Kansas City, which finished with 17 hits, shelled starter Britt Burns, 13-5, for seven runs in 11-3 innings, sending him to his earliest departure of the season.

Blue, 10-9, was relieved in the eighth by Bill Castro.

Kansas City took a 2-0 lead in the first on an RBI triple by George Brett, who scored on Amos Otis' groundout.

In the second, the Royals loaded the bases when Willie Aikens singled, John Wathan walked and Willie Wilson was hit by a pitch. Consecutive RBI singles by U.L. Washington and Brett made it 4-0 and ended Burns' night.

Chicago reliever Ernesto Escarrega then yielded a sacrifice fly to Otis and doubles to Hal McRae and White, putting the Royals up 8-0 and bringing on left-hander Kevin Hickey. Hickey gave up a single to Aikens for the Royals' seventh run of the inning.

Chicago's only run came in the bottom of the second on Carlton Fisk's 12th homer of the year.

stole second, and Wade Boggs was walked intentionally. Lansford and Boggs then executed a double steal. After a strikeout, Kison intentionally walked pinch-hitter Rick Miller.

Allenson then laid down his bunt down and easily beat third baseman Doug DeCinces' throw to first as Lansford scampered home with the game-winner.

Mark Clear, 11-7, picked up the victory with 11-3 innings of relief.

California tied it 6-6 in the ninth when Bobby Clark singled and was forced out by Bobby Grich. Rob Wilfong, pinch-running for Grich, took second on Ron Jackson's single that chased reliever Tom Burgmeier.

Clear, Boston's third pitcher, walked pinch-hitter Reggie Jackson and Brian Downing to force in the tying run. Clear then retired the next two hitters.

Boston had taken a 6-5 lead in the eighth when Lansford walked and Boggs and Reid Nichols followed with singles.

California broke a scoreless tie in the sixth with five runs against John Tudor as Grich doubled and scored on Bob Boone's one-out single. Downing then singled and Rod Carew followed with a three-run homer, his second of the season. One out later, Don Baylor slugged his 21st home run to make it 5-0.

BALTIMORE (AP) — Cal Ripken Jr. blasted a two-run homer in the bottom of the fifth inning to lift the Baltimore Orioles to a 8-3 victory over the Texas Rangers Saturday night.

Ripken's two-out blast off Texas starter Dave Schmidt, 4-5, with John Lowenstein on first enabled the Orioles to win their eighth game in nine outings. Texas lost for the eighth time in its last 10 games. Lowenstein, who had three hits in the game, singled with two outs before Ripken followed with his 21st homer over the left field fence.

TORONTO (AP) — Willie Upshaw's two-out single in the 11th inning drove in Rance Mulliniks to give the Toronto Blue Jays a 3-2 victory over the New York Yankees Saturday.

After New York reliever Dave LaRoche, 4-2, retired the first two Toronto batters in the 11th, Mulliniks doubled to left and moved to third when pinch-hitter Leon Roberts beat out an infield hit. Upshaw then lofted a single into shallow center field.

Reliever Dale Murray, who pitched two perfect innings, upped his record to 8-4. Toronto starter Dave Stieb had yielded only six hits over nine innings. He struck out five and walked four. The Yankees missed a chance to score in the ninth when Barry Evans singled with two outs and pinch-hitter

U.S. Open To Begin Tuesday

NEW YORK (AP) — Defending U.S. Open champions John McEnroe and Tracy Austin will play their first matches at the National Tennis Center Tuesday as the 1982 championships get under way.

Austin will play the first match on the stadium court at 7:30 p.m. against Catherine Tanvier of France, while McEnroe will follow against Tim Gullikson.

Mats Wilander of Sweden, the French Open champion, will begin the two-week tournament at 11 a.m., EDT, Tuesday when he takes on Bill Scanlon.

Also playing on Tuesday will be Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia, the No. 3 seed, and former champion Billie Jean King.

Two women players have withdrawn from the main draw singles, the U.S. Tennis Association announced. Sue Barker of Great Britain and Petra Delhees of Switzerland have been replaced by Amanda Tobin of Australia and Lillian Drescher of Switzerland. No reasons for the withdrawals were announced.

Becton Lifts Eagles By Jaguars, 12-6

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

FARMVILLE — West Craven running back Norman Becton spoiled Farmville Central's 1982 coming out party Friday — after having his first 24 minutes of football in 1982 turn up sour.

Held to 13 yards in the first half, Becton used touchdown jaunts of 33 and 46 yards to ring up 141 second-half yards to key the Eagles to a 12-6 win over the Jaguars in the season opener for both teams Friday night.

Becton, a 6-0, 210-pound senior, ended up with 154 yards in 19 carries — more yards than Farmville managed in total offense and well over half of his team's 218 yards in total offense.

"He's a hell of a back. The best I've ever coached," West Craven coach Clay Jordan said. "We just weren't getting the blocking for him in the first half. We're real, real inexperienced up front and we had some problems not in effort but in recognizing defenses."

The Jaguars took a 6-0 lead early in the second period when James Moore scored from two yards out to cap an 11-play drive. The Jaguars had their problems the remainder of the night.

The Eagles put together an eight-play, 72-yard march following the second-half kickoff. The drive ended with Becton sprinting 33 yards to bring West Craven even at 6-6.

Becton did that run 13 yards better in the fourth period to put the Eagles up, 12-6. Taking a handoff on a dive play over right tackle from the 46-yard line, Becton shot through the line and raced untouched into the end zone to give the Eagles the lead.

Becton's performance highlighted a second half that saw West Craven ground out 187 yards rushing to minus 2 for Farmville. Farmville ended up with 63 yards on the ground (a stat that included a minus 41 yards on three quarterback sacks in the final period) and 74 yards total offense.

"Two big plays beat us tonight," Farmville Central second-year coach Gilbert Carroll said. "We tackled poorly in the second half. We made contact at the line of scrimmage but didn't hold on."

"There were three things tonight (that hurt) us," Carroll added. "Number one, we couldn't throw the ball. We had no pass protection, and when we had it we couldn't hit our receiver."

"Number two, we didn't tackle well. And, number three, we did not get any pursuit out of the secondary."

Farmville, which defeated West Craven, 20-6, in its season-opener last year, nearly scored the first time a Jaguar touched the ball. Tony Hargrove took the opening kickoff of the 1982 season and raced 78 yards before being tackled. The play was called back, however, because of a clip at around midfield.

The Jaguars seemed undaunted by their early-game fortunes, putting together a 16-play drive that ended with quarterback Sam Sumrell throwing an incomplete pass on fourth and 14 from the 19.

After West Craven failed to move the ball, the Jaguars took over at the WC 39 and drove it in for the score. Halfback Wesley Carmon bolted 12 yards around left end to get the drive going. Moore ran four of the final five plays in the drive, which ended with him scoring over left tackle from two yards out with 8:53 left. The run for two failed.

West Craven managed a 17-play drive following the Jaguar score, moving to the Jaguar 32 before defensive back Jerry Foreman sacked quarterback Anthony Wesley for seven yards to end the threat.

The second half was all West Craven. On the Eagles' first play from scrimmage in the third period halfback Wayne Becton sliced over right tackle for nine yards.

Three plays later Norman Becton went for 13 yards to the FC 42. Then, with the ball on the 33, Becton took a handoff off left tackle, bounced off two would-be tacklers and cut across the field to outrun the Jaguars' secondary to tie the game with 7:40 left. The pass for two failed.

On the ensuing series Farmville used a 13-yard run by Carmon and a 18-yard run by Hargrove, who played both wingback and halfback when Farmville went to its broken-T formation, to get to the WC 30.

Carmon fumbled the ball on the next play but Norman Becton did likewise on the Eagles' first play. Farmville could not move the ball, however, and was forced to punt.

The Jaguars did not gain another first down and was unable to get inside the West Craven 30 the rest of the night.

Norman Becton ended any thoughts of the game ending in a tie with 8:24 left in the final period. West Craven moved from its 34 to the Jaguar 46 on four runs by Becton.

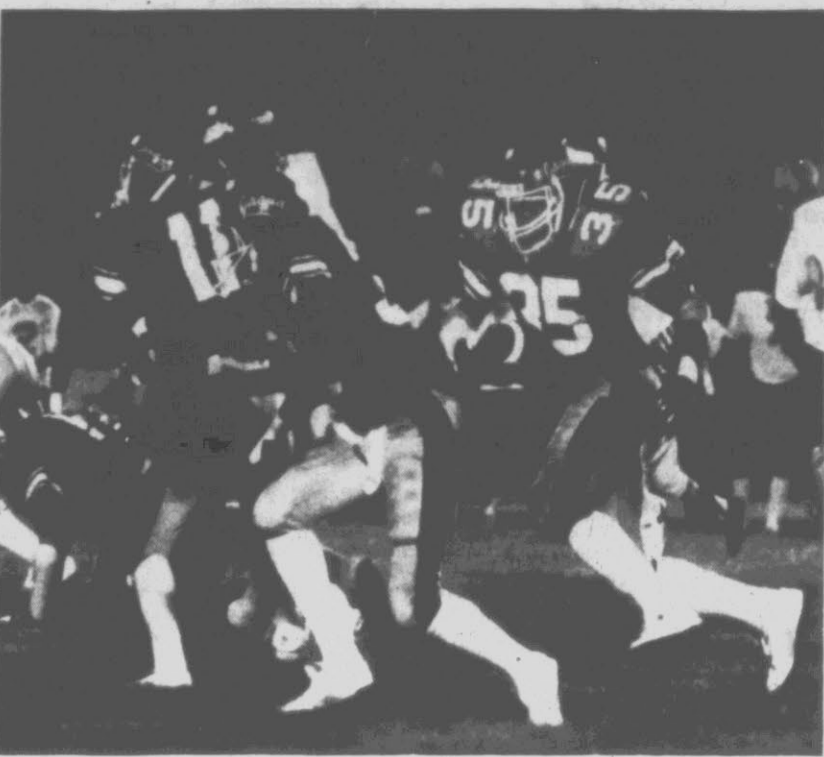

Becton then burst over right tackle and, with the Jaguar secondary elsewhere, raced 46 yards unmolested for the go-ahead score. The run for two failed, but West Craven led, 12-6.

Farmville had one last shot when the Eagles got a poor snap on a punt, giving the Jaguars the ball on the WC 37. But three plays netted only a yard before Sumrell was sacked for a 14-yard loss on fourth down.

Farmville Central travels to Clinton next Friday night.

Daniels Sparks Roanoke Past Panthers By 27-13

ROBERSONVILLE — Quarterback Glendale Daniels scored twice and sparked Roanoke High School to a 27-13 opening game victory over North Pitt's Panthers Friday night.

Daniels scored once in the first period and added a fourth period touchdown for the Redskins, who held North Pitt scoreless until the final quarter of the game.

Roanoke pushed the ball over on its first possession of the game, as Chris Roberson raced in from seven yards out. Roberson had taken a 15-yard pass from Daniels earlier in the drive to help things along. Bernie Williford added the PAT kick for a 7-0 lead.

Roanoke came right back on its next series, scoring again as Daniels pushed over from a yard out. Rick Hines ran for ten yards to spark that series along. The PAT attempt failed and there was no more scoring for the rest of the half, which ended with Roanoke up, 13-0.

Andrews pulled in a 13-yard pass from Hines for the touchdown, and Roanoke upped its lead to 19-0.

North Pitt finally got on the scoreboard early in the final quarter as Ken Whitehurst raced 17 yards for the score. A two-point try failed, leaving it at 19-6.

Roanoke came quickly back with Daniels scoring on a 28-yard ramble to close out the Redskin scoring. Darius Hudgins took a pass from Daniels for the PAT.

North Pitt's second touchdown came with just 27 seconds left in the contest. Whitehurst again was responsible for the score, passing 17 yards to Daniel Keel for the score. William Rollins added the PAT kick.

Yardage in the game was close as Roanoke rattled off only 162 yards, and North Pitt had 147.

The Panthers opens its home schedule against North Edgecombe on Friday, while Roanoke visits Ayden-Grifton.

Rams, S.Lenoir Tie, 0-0

DEEP RUN — Greene Central and South Lenoir battled back and forth throughout the evening but neither could push the ball over the goal line in a scoreless opening football game for both teams.

Greene Central got inside South Lenoir's 20 yard line twice, once moving to about the 15, but they were unable to do anything else.

In return, the Rams stopped South Lenoir twice on drives near their own goal line.

Late in the game, South Lenoir drove to the Ram six for a first down, but an illegal procedure penalty pushed them back to the 11 and three plays failed to get them much closer. A field goal attempt on fourth down was wide, and that clinched the donut score for the finale.

Curtis Shepard was a standout on offense for the Rams, carrying 21 times for 108 yards.

Defensively, standouts included linebacker Robert Anderson with nine tackles and three assists; tackle James Moore; freshman end Anthony Thompson, nose guard Bob Eason, linebacker

Richard Evans, and safety Jeff Moore.

Greene Central opens its home schedule on Friday, hosting 4-A Wilson Beddingfield.

Muncie To Undergo Treatment

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Running back Chuck Muncie will probably rejoin the San Diego Chargers within a week after undergoing drug treatment for 21 days, his business adviser was quoted Saturday.

Muncie reportedly has been at Camelback Hospital in Scottsdale, Ariz.

Muncie "never had a problem agreeing that he should receive treatment — he was just against three weeks of it," adviser Allen Weiner said.

"That hurt his pride because he didn't have any detoxing to go through. But he did need an education and an explaining."

"The treatment really has been very good for him," Weiner said in a telephone interview from New Orleans, adding "he's fine and I think he will be back with the Chargers next week."

Muncie returned to his home in Kenner, La., to be with his pregnant wife, Robyn, for two days this week after their home had been burglarized twice.

San Diego opens the regular season of the National Football League in a game Sept. 12 at Denver.

Pam Pack Defeats D.H. Conley—Again

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley coach Gerald Garner summed it up quickly after it was all over Friday night in the Vikings' opening football game against Washington.

"It was a case of too little, too late," he said.
Conley's Vikings, who have never beaten Washington in five tries — they have one tie to their credit — went down again, 27-13, falling behind 14-0 in the first half. Neither of the second half Pam Pack scores came through the offense; one was on an interception return and the other on a kickoff return.

It took a while for Conley's offense to get moving, and it still wasn't able to muster much against the Pam Pack. The Conley defense, however, rose up in the second half, and shut Washington down quite well.

Washington's Wayne Wooden got the action off to a quick start on a 54-yard romp just three plays into the game. Jeff Bandy, who kicked all four PAT's, got the second Pam Pack touchdown in the second period, climaxing a 42-yard drive with a three-yard plunge through the middle.

In the second half, Washington upped its lead to 21-0 on a 28-yard interception return by Brian Goodwin, before Conley finally got its only scoring drive of the night off. That was capped by a fourth-and-goal one yard plunge by Mitchell Cox, a transfer from North Pitt.

And two more touchdowns were quickly recorded as Washington's Goodwin took the kickoff back 91 yards for a score, and Cox turned right around with a 100-yarder on the next kickoff — finally ending the scoring.

Those last three scores all took place in a span of 28 seconds.

"I was fairly well pleased with our play in the second half," Garner said. Conley's defense held Washington to only 45 yards during the half on just 15 plays in comparison to 188 on 29 plays in the first half.

Conley, too, got its offense in second gear, anyway, picking up 91 yards on 26 plays. In the first half, Conley ran only 17 plays for 39 yards.

Garner felt that the interception return by Washington early in the third period told the tale for the Vikings.

"I think our conditioning work paid off, though. But Washington is a well-coached, well-disciplined team. If we'd had a week or so longer to prepare, I think we could have made a better game of it."

Garner was pleased with the play of Cox, who had attended A.G. Cox Junior High in Winterville — a Conley feeder school — before moving to North Pitt for his first three years of high school. Cox returned five kickoffs for 191 yards, and ran 15 plays for 61 yards.

Garner said that a missed assignment caused the long 54-yard scoring play early, and it also affected his decision on the next series for Conley to go for a first down on fourth and one at the Conley 47 — a play that failed.

"Although they didn't score on the next series, it did keep us in a hole, and I guess I probably made a bad decision there. But I knew we had to score early if we wanted to have a chance. Part of that was poor execution, too."

Washington's quick move to the scoreboard set the tone for the night. Only 1:14 had ticked off the clock before the Pam Pack had their first seven.

Taking the kickoff on their own 30, Washington used two plays for 16 yards — completing its only pass of the evening as Seth Edwards hit Vance Moore for a first down at the 46 after a first down pass was incomplete.

Then, Wooden took the handoff up the middle, cut to his right and raced all the way to the end zone — 54 yards away.

Although Washington failed to take advantage when Conley turned it over on downs at midfield, it did put Conley in a hole and Doug Herring got a bad snap from center on the punt and got off a hasty kick off the side of his foot. That gave the Pack the ball back on the Conley 42.

From there, Washington launched a 13 play drive that consumed seven minutes off the clock, with Bandy diving over from the three to finish it off. Steve Boyd got off two nine-yard runs on the drive.

Later in the half, Washington drove to the Conley 26 before losing a fumble.

Four plays into the second half, Washington was back on the scoreboard again. On third and five, Conley quarterback Todd Rouse faded back to pass, but his shot was picked off by Goodwin, who juggled the ball into the end zone on the 28-yard return, giving Washington a 21-0 lead with 9:53 left.

After an exchange of punts, Conley took over on its own 31 and began a 15 play, 69-yard drive. Rouse hit John Brown for 11 yards on second down, and then Cox broke away for nine more. Another Rouse to Brown pass netted 12 yards, and Cox later ran for 13 yards down to the nine. Finally, on fourth down, Cox plunged over from the one and Conley was on the scoreboard. Mike Long's kick cut it to 21-7 with 7:34 left.

But it was to quickly change — and just as quickly change again.

Goodwin gathered in the kickoff at his own nine and went straight up the middle, broke the wedge and raced down the right side for the 91-yard scoring run. That came with 7:20 showing and made it 28-7.

Then, Cox took the ball with his foot on the goal line and raced up field, cutting to the right and outracing the Washington defense on his 100-yard romp. With 7:06, it was suddenly 28-13.

A fumbled punt at the Conley 42 gave Washington one last threat in the game, but the Vike defense was in full control now and didn't allow a first down.

Belhaven Stops Bullets By 26-14

BELHAVEN — Belhaven limited Jamesville to only 22 yards on the ground and Harry Burrus scored two touchdowns to lead the Bulldogs to a 26-14 opening game victory over the Bullets Friday night.

Burrus opened and closed the scoring for Belhaven, scoring in the second quarter on a two-yard run for a 6-0 lead. In the final period, he returned an intercepted pass ten yards for the final Bulldog score.

Belhaven got two more scores in the second quarter to shoot out to a 20-0 lead before Jamesville finally got on the scoreboard. Jimmy Sadler scored on a 15-yard run and Jonathan O'Neal scored from a yard out. Kendall Hart carried over one two-point conversion.

Jamesville scored single touchdowns in the second and fourth period, both by Carlton Rodgers on passes from Richie Ange. The first was on a 41-yard pass with Matthew Moore running over the PAT to cut the Belhaven lead to 20-8 at the half.

Parkton Ends Skid At 53 With Lopsided Triumph

PARKTON, N.C. (AP) — The high school with the longest losing streak in the state ended that streak Friday night by routing Chatham Central, 40-0.

The Parkton Bruins relied on a stubborn defense and sparkling offensive play to end a five-year, 53-game losing streak.

"It's just wonderful," said Parkton coach James Bullard. "This is what these boys have been waiting for so long."

North Stokes, located north of Winston-Salem, inherits the mantle of the longest losing streak now. That school has lost 16 consecutive games and will open the 1982 season next Friday. Murphy, which also opens the year Friday, and Charlotte Garinger, which opened with a 10-7 loss to Gastonia Hunter-Huss this weekend, are riding 13-game streaks, while Gates County and West Lincoln have lost 12 straight and Eastern Wayne and Swansboro have bowed in 11 straight games.

The Parkton defensive line held Chatham to minus 30 yards rushing and allowed Chatham only 57 yards in the air.

Parkton quarterback Pat Glenn rushed for 84 yards on 12 carries, including a 27-yard run for Parkton's first score. Glenn also scored one more time and intercepted two passes while playing defense.

Bullard said the team should be proud of the broken string, "and I'm real proud of the boys and they should be proud of themselves."

Parkton is located between Lumberton and Fayetteville.

Everett Sparks Williamston By Currituck, 28-10

WILLIAMSTON — Williamston spotted Currituck a 10-point lead and then roared back behind the running of Roosevelt Everett to roll to a 28-10 win Friday night in its season opener.

Currituck jumped out to a 10-0 lead on a two-yard run by Ryan Patterson followed by a 34-yard field goal by Tim Hackett early in the second period after a Williamston fumble.

But, Williamston cut the deficit to 10-7 going into intermission on a two-yard run by Everett. The Tigers took the lead for good early in the third period on a 13-yard run by Tony Speller.

The game marked the return to the wishbone for the Tigers and coach Harold Robinson. The 'bone was used by Robinson for most of his career at Williamston until two years ago when he went to the "I". But this year, the Tigers went back with the wishbone.

Everett led Williamston in rushing with 84 yard in 12 carries. Speller, who kicked all four extra points, rushed for 63 yards in 12 carries.

Patterson led Currituck with 70 yard in 15 carries.

Currituck took the opening kickoff and drove 60 yards for its first touchdown of the 1982 season. Patterson had 49 of the yards in the drive, including runs of 37 and two (for the TD). Hackett kicked the PAT to give Currituck a 7-0 lead with 4:31 left.

Hackett's field goal with four seconds gone in the second period upped the lead to 10-0.

Williamston finally got on the board after Dwight Brooks recovered a fumble on the Currituck 12. Everett scored moments later from two yards out and Speller added the PAT.

Williamston's Kent Moore, who had three sacks and also helped force a pass interception, recovered a Currituck fumble on the opening play from scrimmage in the second half to set the Tigers up for the go-ahead score.

Taking the ball from the 42, Williamston was moved back to the 50 but Speller ran four straight times, the final one a 13-yard jaunt that gave Williamston the lead.

Williamston's Mervin Perkins recovered a fumble later in the period and ran 35 yards for the TD to give Williamston a 21-10 lead.

The Tigers' final score came after Donnell Griffin intercepted a pass on the Currituck 30. Everett rumbled in for the score on the first play to give the Tigers a 28-10 lead.

Williamston outgained Currituck in total offense, 158 to 86. The two teams combined for 11 fumbles (losing seven) and 105 yards in penalties.

Williamston travels to East Northampton next Friday.

Sports Club Kicks Off Year Tuesday

The Greenville Sports Club will begin its sixth season on Tuesday when Rose High School football and baseball coach Ronald Vincent will be the speaker.

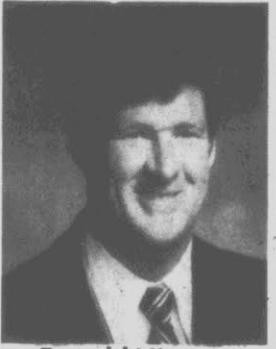

The club meets 14 times during football and basketball seasons to hear talks by various sports personalities.

This year's meetings will be held at the Holiday Inn. As usual, the activities will begin with a meal at 12 noon.

Vincent, who served as interim coach at Rose High School last year in football, has become the head coach in his own right this year. His team last season was a State 4-A playoff entrant, and this year's baseball team went to the State Semifinals.

Other upcoming speakers already confirmed by the club include:

- Sept. 14 — East Carolina football coach Ed Emory.
 - Sept. 28 — East Carolina's new basketball coach Charlie Harrison.
 - Oct. 12 — UNC assistant basketball coach Eddie Fogler, who will bring a 35-minute film on the past season.
 - Oct. 26 — St. Louis Cardinal baseball coach Red Schoendienst.
 - March 22 — New England Patriot assistant football coach Tom Brasher.
- The club is also seeking a number of other speakers, among whom are Danny Ford, Clemson head football coach; Dick Tarrant, Richmond head basketball coach; Lou Campanelli, James Madison head basketball coach; Jim Valvano, N.C. State head basketball coach; Bones

Ronald Vincent

McKinney, former ACC player and coach; Willis Casey, N.C. State athletic director; and George Welsh, Virginia head football coach.

The meetings are open to all interested people with a $5 charge for the luncheon.

Annual dues for the club are $50, but a special plan of $100 which includes all meal costs is also available, lowering the dues to $30.

Interested persons should contact Butch Talbot at 758-1189 in order to give the restaurant a head count.

Leslie Garner is the president of the club this year.

American Wildlife Knowledge Low — How much do most Americans know about wildlife? Very little, according to a recent study done by Dr. Stephen Kellert of Yale University. Kellert interviewed over 3,000 adults throughout the country, and found that most Americans experience wildlife through zoos and television — and not in the field or forest. Here are a few of his findings:

- American's most frequent animal-related activities are watching wildlife television shows, owning pets, and visiting zoos. During the two years preceding Kellert's interviews, 78 percent of those surveyed had watched a wildlife television show, 67 percent had owned a pet and 46 percent had visited a zoo.
- Education was the most sensitive indicator affecting knowledge of animals. People with college educations knew the most about wildlife, and were more concerned about the health of our environment. However, there were striking regional differences in knowledge and attitudes. Alaskans knew the most about wildlife, followed by residents of the Rocky Mountain states. Residents of the Northeast knew the least. Pacific coast residents tended to be more concerned than others about ethical treatment of animals and "animal rights," and were often opposed to hunting. Southerners were generally most interested in the practical and material values of wildlife.

- Conflicting attitudes between rural and urban residents may pose one of the biggest problems facing wildlife managers in the future. Rural residents usually know more about wildlife, participate more often in wildlife activities, and are less concerned with "animal rights" than urban dwellers. Those who live in cities with populations exceeding 1 million had extremely low scores on wildlife knowledge. They were also more often opposed to hunting and predator control, and were more concerned about humane treatment of animals.
- Twenty-five percent of those surveyed had hunted at some point in their lives, and 14 percent had hunted in the previous two years. Over half of those who no longer hunted had quit because of lack of opportunity.
- Forty-five percent of those surveyed had fished during the preceding two years. The most common reason for fishing (28 percent) was to eat fresh fish, while 20 percent fished primarily for sport.
- Twenty-five percent of those surveyed had bird-watched in the previous two years and three percent were serious birders who could identify over 40 species. Contrary to popular opinion, the average committed bird-watcher was a 42-year-old male — not a little old lady in tennis shoes.

- Fifty-eight percent of those surveyed cared more about the suffering of individual animals than maintaining healthy population levels of wildlife.
- Eleven percent of those surveyed belonged to a conservation organization.

Skeet Championship — The 43rd annual North Carolina state Skeet Championships will be held September 17-19 in Advance.

Sponsored by the Tar Heel Gun Club the shoot is open to all current members of the North Carolina Skeet Shooting Association.

For more information write or call the Tar Heel Gun Club, Rt. 4, Box 101, Advance N.C. 27006. Telephone (919) 998-8182.

Fishing Report — The only bright spot in the fishing report this week comes in the form of very large pompano.

From the Morehead City area to Nags Head reports of 1½ pound pompano have come in. This species generally runs under a pond.

Small croaker are being caught near Hoboken in the Pamlico Sound.

Offshore, billfish are still being caught. It is time for the big run of white marlin off Oregon Inlet.

Henderson Breaks Stolen Base Mark

By The Associated Press
Rickey Henderson has left Lou Brock's major league stolen base record in the dust. The Milwaukee Brewers are threatening to do the same thing to their rivals in the American League East.

Henderson of the Oakland A's stole four bases Friday night to break Brock's eight-year-old single season mark of 118 steals, but it wasn't enough as Jim Gantner delivered a two-run single in the eighth inning and Milwaukee edged Oakland 5-4 to move 6½ games in front of second-place Boston in the AL East.

The fleet-footed Henderson drew a walk and broke Brock's record in the third inning, swiping second after Brewer starter Doc Medich tried unsuccessfully to pick him off four times. He added three more thefts before the game was over, raising his total to 122 in just 127 games, 26 fewer than Brock played in 1974 when he set the old standard with the St. Louis Cardinals.

"I'm relieved and exhausted," Henderson said. "Now I can go out and relax a little more and hope the team can pull together and win more games."

That's something the Brewers have been doing lately, winning seven of their last eight.

"Why should I be upset because he stole his 119th base while I happened to be on the mound," said Medich, who combined with Rollie Fingers on a four-hitter with the relief ace earning his 29th save of the season.

"He stole 118 other bases this year," Medich added. "He got the record ... we won the game."

Angels 7, Red Sox 6
Don Baylor drove in three runs with a pair of singles and Bobby Grich belted a two-run homer as California edged Boston behind rookie Ricky Steiner, who was making his first first major league start on his 26th birthday.

Doug Corbett, just recalled from the minors, got the last out on a diving catch by right fielder Bobby Clark as Boston scored five runs the last two innings.

Steiner, 1-0, was a late replacement for Luis Tiant, who bowed out with back trouble.

Royals 7, White Sox 1
George Brett's three-run single highlighted a four-run fourth inning and Paul Splitteroff hurled eight innings of four-hit ball as Kansas City won its fourth straight.

The Royals, who collected 16 hits against four White Sox pitchers, loaded the bases in the fourth on singles by Lee May, Jerry Martin and Frank White. John Wathan hit into a force play as May scored to break a 1-1 tie. Willie Wilson beat out a bunt to reload the bases and, one out later, Brett singled on a 3-2 pitch. Willie Aikens added a two-run homer in the ninth.

Orioles 3-3, Rangers 1-4
Steve Comer, making his first start since May, 1981, pitched an eight-hitter as Texas won the second game of a two-night doubleheader, stopping the Orioles' seven-game winning streak.

Lamar Johnson's sixth homer of the season, a two-run shot, snapped a 2-2 tie in the third inning of the nightcap. Ken Singleton, who homered in both games, hit his 13th and Eddie Murray added his 24th off Comer in the first inning before the right-hander Comer settled down.

The Orioles won the opener 3-1 and dealt Texas its fifth straight defeat as Jim Palmer, 11-3, notched his ninth consecutive victory to tie his third longest career winning streak and post his 259th career triumph.

Blue Jays 10, Yankees 3
Toronto snapped a five-game losing streak as Willie Upshaw drilled a two-run single to snap a 3-3 fifth-inning tie and right-hander Luis Leal chalked up his first victory in a month by scattering 11 hits.

The Blue Jays added three runs in the sixth on Iorg's sacrifice fly and a two-run double by Glenn Adams. Buck Martinez hit his sixth homer of the season in the seventh inning.

Twins 5, Indians 3
Tim Laudner's first home run in the Metrodome — a two-run shot — capped Minnesota's five-run third inning as the Twins capitalized on some sloppy Cleveland fielding to beat the Indians.

Al Williams, 5-7, pitched 61-3 innings, while Ron Davis pitched the final 22-3 to record his 17th save. Lary Sorensen, 10-10, took the loss, allowing all five runs, although only one was earned.

Tigers 6, Mariners 1
Milt Wilcox and Dave Tobik combined on a five-hitter and Alan Trammell doubled home the winning run in the fifth inning and capped Detroit's four-run ninth inning with a run-scoring single as the Tigers defeated the Seattle Mariners 6-1.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Braves 9, Mets 8
The Atlanta Braves are living proof of the adage that you never can score too many runs in baseball.

The Braves led 8-0 in the third inning Friday night, but the New York Mets rallied to tie the score before Atlanta finally won 9-8 on a solo homer in the eighth by Rafael Ramirez. In their previous game on Wednesday night, the Braves trailed Philadelphia 6-0 and led 9-6 before finally losing 11-9 in 13 innings.

"I'm a little concerned about our starting pitching," Manager Joe Torre said. "I'd hate to say (the word) disappointed. We've got a lot of inexperience. You never have enough runs in baseball, and the Mets proved it."

Matt Sinatro, who hit his first major-league homer, a two-run blast, in the third inning, said, "We've got to go out and pretend it's 0-0, even with an eight-run lead."

New York's loss extended its losing streak to 11 games, while Atlanta now has won seven of its last eight after losing 19 of its previous 21 starts. The latest winning stretch has kept the Braves within one game of the first-place Dodgers in the NL West.

"When we were losing a lot of games, everyone was thinking too much about the losing streak," Ramirez said. "But now we've come back and we're playing hard."

Ramirez lined his fifth homer into the left field seats off Jesse Orosco, 2-10, and made a winner of right-handed reliever Donnie Moore, 2-0.

Bob Horner drove in two runs with a single and Glenn Hubbard had a two-run double in the first inning after a throwing error by Mets right-hander Charlie Puleo on an attempted sacrifice bunt opened the gates.

Dale Murphy singled home another Atlanta run in the second and one more run scored on an error by Puleo when he dropped a relay to first base.

Cardinals 2, Padres 1
Tom Herr and Gerge Hendrick drove in St. Louis' runs in the fifth inning while Joaquin Andujar evened his record at 10-10 with relief help from Jim Kaat and Bruce Sutter.

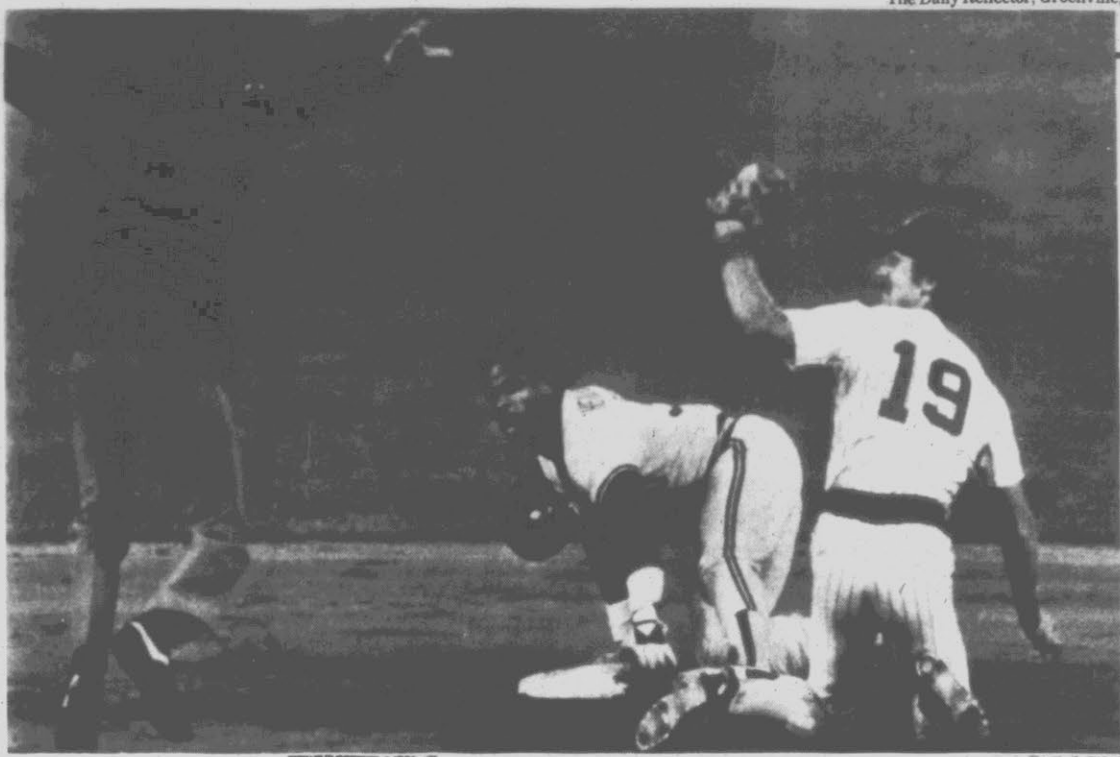

With the victory, the Cards jumped three games in front of Philadelphia in the East.

Trailing 1-0, St. Louis scored both of its runs in the fifth on Herr's RBI single and a sacrifice fly by Hendrick.

Dodgers 9, Cubs 4
Pedro Guerrero, Mike Marshall and Rick Monday slammed homers as Los Angeles came from behind to snap Chicago's four-game winning streak.

The Cubs took a 3-0 lead in the first as Bill Buckner hit a two-run double and Steve Henderson added an RBI single. They still led 4-3 after five innings, despite Marshall's pinch-hit solo homer, but Guerrero slammed his 27th homer, knocking in two runs for a 5-4 Dodgers lead in the sixth.

Reds 8, Phillies 1
Mario Soto scattered six singles and Ron Oester rapped three hits, including a two-run triple during Cincinnati's five-run first inning that

Chips and putts from area golf courses:
Brook Valley Country Club

The team of Billy Clark III and Jim Ward III took top honors in last weekend's Member-Member Tournament at Brook Valley Country Club. They shot a two-day total of 129 to win the championship flight of the low gross division.

Second place went to Chuck Edwards and Ben Harrison Jr., with a 133, while Bill Shulte and Kenny Powell finished third with a 137.

Charlie Berkey and Jerry Meyers won the second flight with a 137, followed by Willie Hathaway and Frank Hill at 138 and Jay Collie and Preston Fields at 140. In the third flight, Frank Lawrence and Alan Hahn took first with a 146, beating out Doug O'Briant and Russell Taylor in a playoff. Third went to Chip Pennington and Enoch Reid with a 149.

Sandy Griffin and Mike Kachmer had a 153 to win the fourth flight, while Horace Topping and Bob Pinkston took second at 154 and Andy Boles and Tommy Lane were third at 155.

In the handicap (net) division, first place went to Edwards and Harrison, with a 115, while Shulte and Powell were second with a 121, beating out Ben Harrison Sr. and Troy Riddle in a playoff.

In the second flight, Hathaway and Hill took first with 117, followed by Berkey and Meyers, who beat out Collie and Fields, both of whom had a 118 in regulation play.

O'Briant and Taylor took the third flight with a 116, followed by Pennington and Reid at 121 and Lawrence and Hahn at 122. The fourth flight went to Bill Fleming and Jeff IX at 117, while Al Haverly and Cletus Jackson were second at 118 and Boles and Lane were third at 122.

Tommy Boone aced the eighth hole, using a one-iron. He was playing with Rex Neely.

John Moye made an eagle three on the second hole, hitting a driver, six-iron and nine-iron.

Harold Thomas, playing with Jane Sauve, Glo Clark and Pat Joyner, finished in a tie for second place in the Pro-Lady Thursday at Fairfield Harbour.

The Couples-Member-Guest will be held next weekend, and entries are still open for the event. Entry fee is $35 per couple.

The next Jack and Jill, Sept. 15, will be the final one of the year.

Farmville Golf and Country Club

The Farmville Golf and Country Club will hold its annual Member-Member Tournament on Sept. 18-19 at the club.

Entries for the tournament will close on September 17.

Greenville Country Club

The W.S. Moye Memorial Tournament was held this past weekend at the Greenville Country Club with first low gross going to the team of Tom Boyd, John Hahn, Dallas Jackson and John Ham. Second went to Jim Hillard, Dexter Crawley, Sid Davis and Al Drake, while third was won by Jamie Jones, Bill Brantley, Willis Moye and Ron Carpenter.

In the net division, first was won by Donnie Taylor, Bobby Price, J.T. Price and George Adams. Second went to Connally Branch, Bill Tripp, Bill Clark and Earl Wilson, while third was won by Jim Moye, Cliff Everett Jr., Harvey Lewis and Bob Shaw.

Greenville hosted the Junior Inter-Club Championships this past week. First place in the 10-11 age group went to Derick Daniel with a nine-hole score of 40, while Rob Thomas was second at 45.

In the 12-13 group, Simon Moye took first with a 78, followed by David Lee at 81. Jim Blount won the 14-15 age group with a 78, followed by Jordy Smith at 82. Brian Hill captured the title at 16-17 with a 77, while Craig Davies was second with an 86.

Welsh Gives Cavs New Attitude

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer
CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va.

Virginia football coach George Welsh doesn't plan for his players to take a cavalier attitude about the 1982 season, either on or off the field.

From the practice sessions to the dormitory room, Welsh has instituted a change of policy which he hopes will lead Virginia from the pits of the Atlantic Coast Conference to respectable levels.

"I think coach Welsh has brought in a whole new attitude," says Gordie Whitehead, one of four candidates for quarterback. "I think when a new coaching staff comes in, you have to have a different outlook on the season."

Whitehead says no one ever became accustomed to losing at Virginia, but as the injuries piled up, victories were harder to come by.

"The fans took for granted that losing would become an every-week occurrence," he says. "As far as the players were concerned, we took every game one at a time. We thought we had a chance at winning and we just worked hard to do the best we could."

Tight end Kevin Riccio says the offense is a bit more diversified, although Welsh seeks to strike a running-passing balance. Defensive end Ed Reynolds says the team is better conditioned, although he declined to compare Welsh with former coach Dick Bestwick.

Welsh's lineup is undecided, but he is set in his philosophy. He'd like to see fewer mistakes.

"You don't throw a lot of interceptions, you don't have penalties in crucial situations, you don't fumble the ball a lot," he says. "I think that goes along with the way they live..."

He says the 1982 Cavaliers "have done pretty much what we've asked them to do," but he's still looking for the extra ingredients to change the school's fortunes.

"I have a curfew for them. They're going to have to be disciplined, they're going to have to be in bed at 11 o'clock so they can practice in the morning," he says.

Welsh also thinks a player's life off the field could have a bearing on the season. What he would like to see is a concentration which would lead to improvement on 1981's 1-10 season.

"This team has not been used to winning," says Welsh. "This football team has still not learned how to practice yet to be a winner."

Thus, just as Welsh helped rebuild Navy's football program, he has the task of selling Virginia on itself.

"We haven't convinced them yet. Too many ups and downs, too much inconsistency as a group," he says. "Some of our players are responding really well."

H & R BLOCK TO OFFER TAX SCHOOL IN GREENVILLE

Thousands of people are earning money in their spare time as income tax preparers.

H & R Block, the world's largest income tax preparation service, is offering a basic income tax course starting September 9 or 10 with morning and evening classes available.

During the 12 week course, students will study all phases of income tax preparation and receive actual experience in preparing individual returns. Experienced Block personnel will teach current laws, theory and application as practiced in Block offices nationwide. There is a classroom lecture on each subject and practice problems at every level. Courses are programmed to teach students increasingly complex tax problems as study progresses. Students will find the course both interesting and challenging.

Anyone may enroll. There are no restrictions or qualifications. Courses are ideally suited for housewives, retired persons, teachers or persons wanting to increase their tax knowledge.

Qualified course graduates may be offered job interviews for positions with Block. Many accept employment with Block because of the flexible hours available. However, Block is under no obligation to offer employment, nor are graduates under any obligation to accept employment with H & R Block.

The modest course fee includes all textbooks, supplies and tax forms necessary for completion of the school. Certificates will be awarded upon successful completion of the course.

Registration forms and brochures for the income tax course may be obtained by contacting the H & R Block Office at Greenville Square Shopping Center, Greenville, N.C. 27834, Telephone: 756-9365.

Buffalo Downs Washington, 20-14

By The Associated Press

Buffalo quarterback Joe Ferguson tossed two touchdown passes to lead the Bills to a 20-14 victory Friday night over the Washington Redskins, who got a pair of 1-yard scoring plunges from John Riggins.

In another Friday night game, Ray Strong scored on a 1-yard touchdown run with 38 seconds left to give the Atlanta Falcons a 24-21 win over the Philadelphia Eagles.

Another crowd of 70,000-plus is expected in Denver to see the Broncos face Minnesota. Last week, more than 73,000 fans watched the 2-0 Broncos down Miami with a three-pronged quarterback assault.

Steve DeBerg completed nine of 12 passes for 102 yards and one touchdown. Mark Herrmann completed eight of 17 for 120 yards, while past starter Craig Morton played briefly.

Denver Coach Dan Reeves, while mulling over his quarterback situation, says the speed of rookie running backs Gerald Willhite and Sammy Winder and rookie wide receiver Orlando McDaniel will be a big bonus.

"They'll give us quickness we haven't had," Reeves said. "That should really help us."

The Cincinnati Bengals and Houston Oilers, both with strong running attacks, say National Football League fans can expect to see more passing as the preseason progresses.

Both teams were in action last night as the Bengals play host to the Detroit Lions and the Oilers entertain the Tampa Bay Buccaneers.

Other games tonight are San Francisco at San Diego, Cleveland at New Orleans, Seattle at the Los Angeles Rams, the New York Giants against the New York Jets, New England at Dallas, Miami at Kansas City, St. Louis at Chicago, Minnesota at Denver, and Baltimore at Pittsburgh.

The Los Angeles Raiders will play host to the Green Bay Packers on Sunday night.

Nets Acquire Dawkins

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Coach Larry Brown says he was surprised the New Jersey Nets managed to acquire Philadelphia 76ers center Darryl Dawkins without giving up any players.

Dawkins came to the Nets Friday night in exchange for a first-round selection in the 1983 National Basketball Association college draft and a reported $700,000 cash payment.

Brown said he discussed the impending trade with club owner Joe Taub earlier this week.

"About four or five days ago, Joe asked me if I would like to have him, and I told him that was tough for me to say because I understood it would be a pretty stiff financial commitment," Brown said.

"He said, 'Well, don't worry about the money. Would you like to have him?'"

"So I said, yeah but I didn't want to change the chemistry of our team by giving up players and he said, 'Fine. We'll explore it.'"

"I was out today and he called my wife and got a hold of me and said we could make the trade. And I said again that I didn't want to give up any players. And he said, 'Well. We're not,'" Brown said.

Dawkins, who is 6-foot-11, 258 pounds, averaged 11 points and 6.4 rebounds last season.

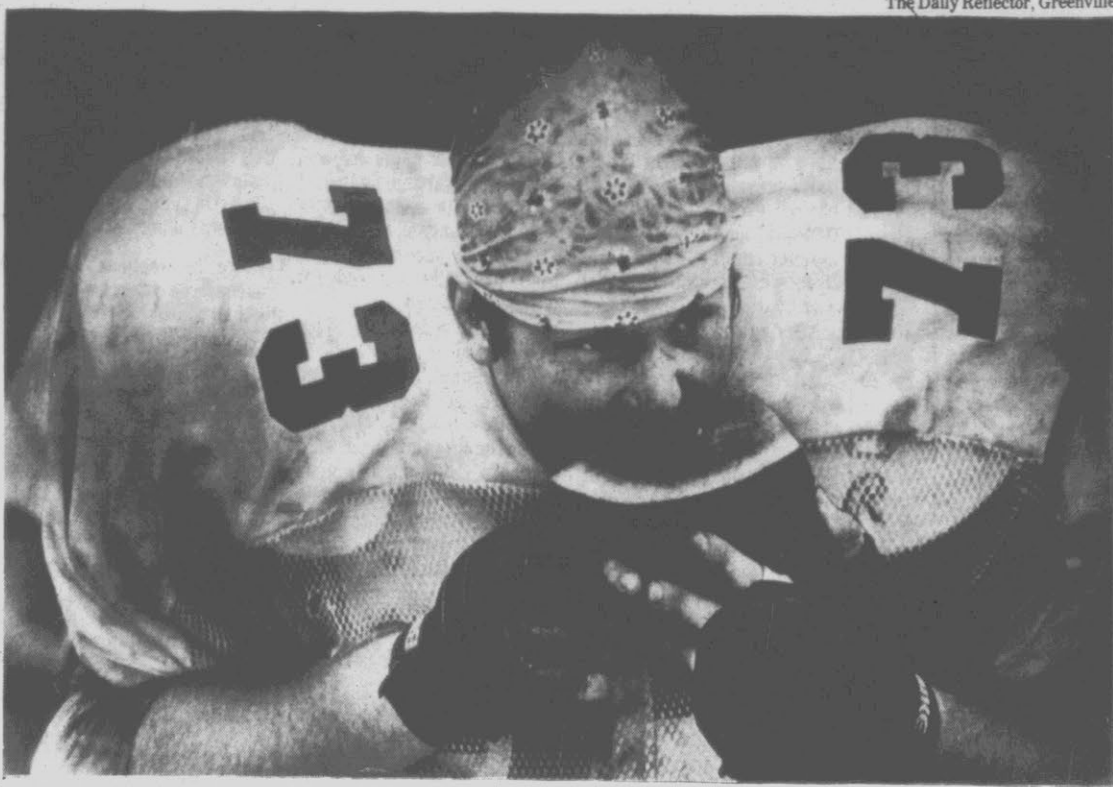

"We're all excited," Taub said. "Now we've got the man in the middle we wanted. We think Darryl has a great opportunity to come in and help our team in an area where we are lacking experience."

Taub said there have been "discussions on and off for a while," but when Nets General Manager Bob MacKinnon contacted Sixers Coach Billy Cunningham earlier this week "there seemed like there might be an opportunity for Darryl to come to New Jersey."

The 76ers had signed Dawkins to a multi-year contract before the 1982 NBA Championship Series, which they lost to the Los Angeles Lakers. Dawkins' escalating contract was reportedly in excess of $5 million.

By obtaining Dawkins, the Nets hope to solve their biggest weakness.

In 1980, the Nets drafted Duke University center Mike Gminski in the first round after trading George Johnson to the San Antonio Spurs the previous season.

Libel Suit Filed By Stabler

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oilers quarterback Ken Stabler has filed a libel suit against The New York Times and the National Broadcasting Co. in connection with news stories that claimed Stabler associated with professional gamblers.

Stabler, now in training camp with the New Orleans Saints of the National Football League, is seeking $20 million in actual and punitive damages in the suit filed Friday.

Attorneys for Stabler said they based their claim on the expected income from the balance of his professional football career. The suit stated that this amount "may exceed $10 million" and asked for exemplary damages of an equal amount.

The suit cites a story that appeared in The New York Times on Aug. 30, 1981, and reports broadcast shortly thereafter by NBC. It also names RCA Corp., the corporate parent of NBC, as a defendant.

The Times article, entered into court records as part of the action, "suggests a wrong and malevolent connection with a known gambler, a man convicted of crime, a man connected with the Mafia" and Stabler, then quarterback for the Oakland Raiders.

"Within the day and apparently picking up on the same beat, the National Broadcasting System prepared and caused to be distributed through its affiliated stations a videotape also insinuating and suggesting that the plaintiff threw or deliberately lost football games, or shaved points in football games, so that gamblers might prevail or win bets," the suit adds.

The Times' legal department issued a statement Friday saying it had not seen the suit and would have no comment until it had reviewed the complaint. Telephone calls to NBC's legal department Friday night were unanswered.

Stabler was investigated by the NFL and met with Commissioner Pete Rozelle this summer, but no action was taken. Rozelle this week cleared the way for Stabler to return to the NFL, but said he must remain clear of any "undesirable elements."

"What is or could be worse than suggesting that a highly trained athlete, who has spent his entire life in perfecting his skills and reaching the highest levels of his profession, has compromised his life for a few paltry dollars, or perhaps nothing, so that members of a dreaded Mafioso family (and perhaps himself) can benefit ill-gotten gambling gains. These charges will live with him for the rest of his life," said the suit, signed by Houston lawyers Jim Kronzer and Nick Nichols.

Stabler, who led the Oakland Raiders to victory in Super Bowl II in 1977, was traded to the Houston Oilers in 1980 and was released by the Oilers earlier this summer. He is now with the Saints where he is expected to back up quarterback Archie Manning.

Coaches Say Pitt No.1; UNC Ranked No.6 . . .

Nebraska, the defending Big Eight champion which lost to 1981 national champion Clemson in the Orange Bowl, holds down the No. 3 spot with three first-place votes and 463 points.

Alabama, 9-2-1 last season as Coach Bear Bryant became the winningest coach in college football history, is No. 4 with three first-place votes for 432 points. Penn State, which handed Pittsburgh its only loss of the 1981 season, is No. 5 with 373 points.

Rounding out the Top 10 are No. 6 North Carolina (one first-place vote), No. 7 Georgia, No. 8 Oklahoma (one first-place vote), No. 9 Clemson and No. 10 Michigan. Southern Methodist, the Southwest Conference champion which was on NCAA probation last year, is rated No. 11, followed by No. 12 Arkansas, No. 13 Texas, No. 14 Ohio State and No. 15 Miami (Fla.), also on probation last season.

Also, Florida is rated No. 16, followed by No. 17 UCLA, No. 18 Notre Dame, No. 19 Brigham Young and No. 20 Texas A&M.

Fazio, a former Pittsburgh player who served two terms (1969-72 and 1977-82) as an assistant coach with the Panthers, joked about his team's lofty status.

"I know the guys (coaches) don't like me, but they don't have to kill me right off the bat," he said. "Hopefully this can be used as a motivating factor. If our guys want to stay number one they have to win. If we win, we control our own destiny."

After going 11-1 his past three seasons at Pittsburgh, quarterback Dan Marino says the Panthers are ready to claim a second national title. Pittsburgh, led by Tony Dorsett, won its only championship in 1976.

"We've got a good chance of winning everything," says Marino, the nation's second-rated passer last year. "We've got good players on the offensive line and our defense doesn't give up many points."

Pittsburgh led the nation in total defense in 1981, allowing 224.8 yards per game and only 62.4 rushing yards per game.

If the Panthers should falter early, Washington, coached by Don James, appears ready to take over the top spot. A well-balanced offense, directed by quarterback Steve Pelluer, and the Pacific-10 Conference's second-rated defense is set for another run at the Rose Bowl.

For the first time since 1928, Southern California is not on the Huskies' schedule while non-conference opponents are Texas-El Paso, San Diego State and Texas Tech.

By agreement with the American Football Coaches Association, teams on NCAA probation are ineligible for the Top 20 and national championship consideration by the UPI Board of Coaches. The teams currently on probation are Arizona State, Oregon and Southern California.

Here by sections are the coaches who comprise the UPI football board:

EAST — Wayne Hardin, Temple; Frank Burns, Rutgers; Ed Cavanaugh, Army; Don Nehlen, West Virginia; Serafino "Fog" Fazio, Pittsburgh; Dick MacPherson, Syracuse.

MIDWEST — Earle Bruce, Ohio State; Frank "Muddy" Waters, Michigan State; Gerry Faust, Notre Dame; Mike White, Illinois; Hayden Fry, Iowa; Dan Simrell, Toledo.

SOUTH — Paul "Bear" Bryant, Alabama; Vince

Dooley, Georgia; Dick Crum, North Carolina; Charley Pell, Florida; Danny Ford, Clemson; Bobby Bowden, Florida State.

MIDLANDS — Tom Osborne, Nebraska; Barry Switzer, Oklahoma; Jim Dickey, Kansas State; Warren Powers, Missouri; John Cooper, Tulsa; Donnie

Duncan, Iowa State.

SOUTHWEST — Fred Akers, Texas; Lou Holtz, Arkansas; Jackie Sherrill, Texas A&M; Sam Robertson, Southwestern Louisiana; Grant Teaff, Baylor; Ray Alborn, Rice.

MOUNTAINS — LaVell Edwards, Brigham Young; Ken Hatfield, Air Force;

Larry Smith, Arizona; Joe Morrison, New Mexico; Chuck Stobart, Utah; Al Kincaid, Wyoming.

PACIFIC — John Robinson, Southern California; Rich Brooks, Oregon; Dave Currey, Long Beach State; Jack Elway, San Jose State; Don James, Washington; Terry Donahue, UCLA.

Inman Now H.S. Assistant. . .

Inman was recruited to play defensive tackle but was subsequently switched to offensive guard.

"Coach Dye is a very goal-oriented coach and he had the players write down their goals on a piece of paper," Inman said. "As a freshman I had three goals."

"First of all, I wanted to start at East Carolina," Inman said. "Second of all, I wanted to make all-conference and, third of all, I wanted to make All-American."

Inman attained the final of those three goals in 1979 — the height of his ECU career. Dye left at the end of the year, replaced by Ed Emory. The 1980 season started in promising fashion for Inman. He was on the cover of the ECU media guide along with Emory. Another All-America season was hoped for by ECU and Inman.

But, it was not to be. Two games into the season Inman suffered a knee injury that ended his college career. The injury came on point-after drill in which 16 players were rushing the kick.

"I put my back foot back and a guy came flying in between me and (snapper) Whitley (Wilkerson) and I heard something snap," Inman said. "I knew I had injured (the knee)."

"I hated that it happened and I know Coach Emory hated it happened, but I think it was uncalled for," Inman said. "You can put this in the paper and Ed Emory can read it. You have to eliminate the holder and the kicker, so it was actually nine on 16."

"It is something I didn't agree with," he added. "I feel like if you're going to play against 11 you should play against 11."

The injury not only ended Inman's college career but it also forced him to make a decision: quit school and try to rehabilitate his knee in hopes of a tryout with the pros or remain in school, get his degree and go to work. The decision was further complicated by the fact his wife was expecting a baby soon.

"It came down to this: whether I wanted to drop out of school and not do my student teaching and go work out and do what I could or stay in school and go to work."

Inman decided to forgo an admittedly tenuous shot at playing in the National Football League and, instead, do his student teaching and get his education degree.

"It's a decision I've stood by," Inman said. Thoughts of the pros having slowly receded, Inman has turned his attention from playing to coaching.

"I enjoy coaching football," he said. "I spent my last two years (at ECU) coaching and playing. There was an article written in Charlotte that said I was considered a player-coach. I took a lot of pride in that."

"Eventually," Inman added, "I want to work up to the college level. It's a different ballgame there. But, there's so much to learn about coaching that I couldn't get a head (high school) coaching job now anyway."

However, Sherrill left Pitt last January for Texas A&M. His successor, former defensive coordinator Serafino "Fog" Fazio, finds himself in the unique position of being ranked No.1 before his debut as a college head coach.

Rounding out the preseason Top Ten behind fifth-rated North Carolina — which, by the way, is Pitt's opening-game opponent on national television the night of Sept. 9 — are Southern Methodist, Georgia, Penn State, Oklahoma and Southern Cal.

Third-ranked Alabama received three first-place votes and 966 points, Nebraska had two firsts and 949 points and North Carolina also had two No.1 votes and 863 points. Then comes SMU with 743 points, Georgia 698, Penn State 682, Oklahoma 638 and Southern Cal 624.

The remaining first-place vote went to Clemson, but the 1981 kings, the only unbeaten team in the nation a year ago, totaled just 561 points for 11th place. Last year, the Tigers were not even in the preseason Top Twenty but stormed to their first national championship.

Besides Clemson, the preseason Second Ten consists of Michigan, Arkansas, Ohio State, Miami, Florida, Texas, Notre Dame, Arizona State and UCLA. Michigan was No.1 in the 1981 preseason poll.

The final 1981 Top Ten consisted of Clemson, Texas, Penn State, Pitt, SMU, Georgia, Alabama, Miami, North Carolina and Washington.

The Second Ten had Nebraska, Michigan, Brigham Young, Southern Cal, Ohio State, Arizona State, West Virginia, Iowa, Missouri and Oklahoma.

When other financial institutions offer you money market checking...

Ask if there are strings attached.

Lots of financial institutions are beginning to offer checking accounts with "money market" rates. But, none of these accounts pay rates as high as Funds CheckingSM.

And, with Funds CheckingSM there are no strings attached.

Don't tie up your money in an account that requires passbook savings.

With Funds CheckingSM there are no low-interest balances to maintain. In fact, no minimum balances at all. Simply open with $1,000 and earn money market interest.

We'll pay you the highest interest rates in the state on checking for a simple $2 a month service charge. And, if you're 55 or older, we offer Funds CheckingSM with no fees whatsoever. (If you don't need checking privileges our $1,000 minimum Funds Management account earns the same interest rates as Funds CheckingSM with no fees.)

Don't forget about insurance.

Your Funds CheckingSM balance is insured to $100,000. Some financials offering high interest checking may forget to tell you that their purchase agreement account isn't insured. So, ask about insurance before you tie the knot.

At North State, we'll be happy to explain all the particulars about our Funds CheckingSM account. And, we won't forget a thing. Because Funds CheckingSM simply pays higher interest on an insured deposit for a low monthly service fee.

No strings attached.

Study Could Bring Sweeping Changes To PGA Golf Tour

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — A feasibility study is being conducted which could result in sweeping changes to the shape and form of the American PGA Tour and lead to the establishment of numerous new tournaments, including a season-ending spectacular with a $2 million purse.

The study, requested by the Tour's Policy Board, involves the Split Tour concept, in which current tournaments, along with some eight or nine new ones, would be divided into two separate and equal leagues of about 20 tournaments each. The roster of players also would be split into two segments, with half the players competing in one league, the other half in the other league. In some cases, tournaments would be held simultaneously in each league.

A 12-page document outlining how such a system could operate, was mailed to tour players and tournament sponsors last week.

"Over the next few months this document will be discussed and debated. It may serve as a basis of a new system. This will be the case only if the game, the players and the sponsors have their interests enhanced. If there is not a clear consensus about benefits of the concept, it should not be approved," Commissioner Deane Beman said in a covering letter.

The concept is not new. A slightly different proposal was rejected by the players last year.

"That plan also involved the all-exempt tour, and the players were more interested in that aspect than the split tour," Beman said. "Now, we will have the all-exempt tour in 1983 and we can go on with a study of this other part of the concept," Beman said.

He said he has scheduled 24 meetings in the next six weeks to discuss the study with players and tournament sponsors.

Beman said the 1985 season is a possible target date for the Split Tour since current television contracts expire at the end of 1984.

Among the major features of the concept are:
- Splitting the current tour events into two tours or leagues, each with its own schedule of some 20 tournaments. In addition, seven existing major events — and one new one — would be available to players from each league.

- Dividing the pool of players into two groups, one for each league. An annual draft would be held to determine which players would compete in each league.

- Possible establishment of financial guarantees on a weekly basis for exempt players.

- Increased prize monies, possibly $500,000 minimum for regular league events, $600,000 for special events. With anticipated growth in the second and third years of operation, total purses could reach $29 million, the study said.

- The addition of several new tournaments in new cities. These are not specified in the study document, but Beman mentioned Seattle, Portland, Denver and Kansas City as possibilities.

- Reducing the tour's schedule to nine months, January through September.

- Establishment of a new, season-ending spectacular, "bringing together 15 leading players from each league in simultaneous team and individual stroke-play events. It may be possible to secure prime-time network television of all four rounds of such an event if it were played in Hawaii, with the likelihood of very substantial prize monies," the discussion document said. Beman said the purse well could be $2 million.

The tours would not be established along geographical lines but, rather, would attempt to provide an equal balance.

For example, the National League could include the Los Angeles Open, Bob Hope Desert Classic, Phoenix Open, Seattle Open, Doral Open (Miami), Houston Open, Pleasant Valley (Sutton, Mass.), Milwaukee Open and others to a total of 20. The American League might have the San Diego Open, Bing Crosby, Tucson Open, Portland Open, Inverrary (Fort Lauderdale), Byron Nelson Classic (Dallas), Hartford Open, Western Open and others to a total of 20.

In addition to the 20 league tournaments, all eligible players also would have access to the Tournament of Champions, World Series of Golf, Tournament Players Championship, Masters, PGA, U.S. and British Opens.

Provisions have been made for the possibility of cross-over competition, allowing a player from the National League, for example, to participate in American League tournaments if he so desires.

A key feature requires a player to compete in a specified number of events in his league, the number of tournaments set on a sliding scale determined by the player's years of service.

Reluctance of the players to give up their fiercely-guarded independence was a critical factor in rejection of the earlier Split Tour proposal.

"They would have to give up something to gain something of much greater value," Beman said.

The study document noted that "the concept's opportunities are large, but so are the problems attendant to its implementation. Major changes in golf's structure are normally of an evolutionary nature. For this plan to become reality, substantial changes affecting all three major interests in the PGA Tour would be required to occur simultaneously. The players, the tournament sponsors and the television networks would have to agree to, and support strongly, such changes. And it is readily apparent that an attitude of conciliation and compromise would be necessary on the part of all three."

Impressing the coach so far have been Craig Dupree and Reggie Clark at inside linebacker and Tim Shank at outside linebacker.

"The whole defensive line is doing a good job and showing a lot of enthusiasm," the coach added.

On the offensive side of the ball, Jay Mahoney and Greg Davis have shown up well in the line along with Bill Johnson. "Roderick Harrell is still hurt, and we won't know until the middle of the week about his status for the opener," Vincent said. Reggie Smith is most likely to start at fullback in his place. "He's

But Shearer double-bogeyed. He put his second in a trap, failed to reach the green in three and missed a 5-foot putt.

Floyd, two strokes back when the day's play started, moved quickly. He reached the par-5 second in two and two-putted for a birdie. He got a share of the lead with a 30-foot birdie putt on the third hole and stretched it out with a 12-to 15-foot putt on the final hole.

done well so far," Vincent said.

Friday night, Vincent got a chance to take a look at his opening foe, Jacksonville, a 23-0 victor over White Oak.

"We're going to have to be at our best to beat them. Defensively, they look like they did the second time we played 'em last year (a 20-0 loss in the playoffs). Tyrone Currence is their big offensive threat. He plays both fullback and tailback and runs the ball well. They are primarily a running team."

White Oak tried for a passing game against the Cardinals, but had trouble getting the ball off under a hard rush by the defense. "We'll spend a good deal of time on our pass protection and picking up blitzes," Vincent said.

The Rampants open the season Friday at 8 p.m. in Ficklen Stadium against the Cardinals.

Beach Music Appeals To All Ages

By Jane Welborn
Reflector Staff Writer

"I love beach music, I always have and I always will. There ain't no other kind of music in the world that gives me quite the thrill."

That song by The Embers says it all for some people in eastern North Carolina. Beach music is a big business in this part of the state. Most towns in eastern North Carolina have at least one nightclub that specializes in playing the music with a rhythm and blues beat that has come to be known as "beach music."

"Beach music is a multimillion-dollar business," according to disc jockey John Moore. "Beach music creates an atmosphere of good dress and clean-cut people — the conservative look. When they go out, people want to dress to impress. The traditional look — khaki pants and heavily starched monogram shirts and penny loafers — is synonymous with beach music."

The beach music look is found in almost every aspect of life from the restaurants you eat in to the type of car you drive, Moore says. Monograms, add-a-beads and hair cuts are all a part of the beach music scene. "It takes a lot of money to listen to beach music," according to Moore.

And lots of people on the East Coast listen to beach music. They go to nightclubs to shag to beach music. Radio stations have shows where only beach music is played. Beach music concerts are held all over the state.

According to Maurice Williams of the Zodiacs, a beach music group which began in 1960, the term "beach music" is used only in the Southeast. Because the old rhythm and blues songs were played mostly at the beaches of the East Coast, the name "beach music" stuck.

"In the early 1960s beach music became known as beach music," said John Moore. "Everything from the Motown Sound to Glenn Miller to Helen Reddy and all groups in between can fit into the category of beach music because the songs have the beach music beat."

"Beach music is a family thing," related "Rockin' Ray" Gooding of WBT radio in Charlotte. "Mom and Dad, and maybe even Grandma, listened to beach music and now the kids are listening to it. Beach music keeps cultivating an audience."

Most of the early beach music groups are still playing nightclubs and releasing records. They now have competition, though, from bands playing a new brand of beach music.

Maurice Williams and the Zodiacs, one of the first beach music groups, still play about four days a week year round. "Our first single, 'Stay,' came out in 1960," Maurice Williams said. "Our popularity was great early and then it dipped. Now our popularity has picked back up, especially in the Southeast." According to Williams, private parties, country clubs and fraternities have kept Maurice Williams and the Zodiacs going.

"Our popularity is the best it's ever been," said Gary Barker, a member of the Catalinas, a band that formed in 1957.

"Our biggest hit was 'Summertime's Calling Me,' which came out in 1975. We are still selling lots of copies of that single and our album sales have been good," he said.

The band plays four or five engagements a week, mostly in the clubs of the southeast. "We also play anything from proms to wedding receptions," Barker said. "Our audience ranges from 18 to 50."

The Embers, another of the early beach music bands, are also still playing the songs that they made popular 24 years ago when the group began. Bobby Tomlinson, drummer for the group and one of the original Embers, said that the band plays about six nights a week. "We only get about 50 nights off a year," he said.

"We have put out seven albums over the years," he said, "and we have played all over everywhere, but mostly in the Southeast. We still play the rhythm and blues that we started out playing."

Tomlinson said, "Beach music is easy going and laid back music. The lyrics are easy and there is nothing hard about the music. Our audience varies from the ages of 8 to 80."

"I think we are more popular now than we were when we began," he said. "By performing such classic beach songs as 'Faraway Places' and 'Cheaters Never Win,' the Embers remain a popular group. "We have acquired more fans over the years," Tomlinson said.

The Band of Oz is a newer beach music band that has found tremendous success recently. "We have only been playing together as a professional unit for five years," said David Hicks, drummer for the band. "Our first big hit, 'Shagging,' came out four years ago and has been included on the first Beach Beat Classics album." That song and two other tunes by the band will be included on a new collection of songs by Surfside Records.

The new release by The Band of Oz is "Ocean Boulevard" and has been an instant hit with the younger crowd at nightclubs. "The tune is about having fun in the summer and going to the beach," Hicks said.

"Beach music has a swing rhythm and is happy sounding music," said Hicks. "It Will Stand," as the song says, for the simple reason that we play old music to a young crowd and they will stick with it."

"In the past year our popularity has developed tremendously due to the popularity of beach music," he said. The band plays nightclubs in the Southeast five nights a week. "We also play almost every big beach music concert," Hicks said.

The popularity of the band is growing because the audience is getting larger, according to Hicks. "The song could be 30 years old and the younger set thinks that the song is new," he said. "And, of course, the older beach crowd is still hanging in there."

"Why is beach music so popular now?"

"It's the old songs brought back new again," Maurice Williams said. "The songs are new to the younger people in the audience. I never get tired of playing the old songs."

Beach music came from rhythm and blues, which in turn came from gospel music, according to disc jockey John Moore.

"Beach music actually began with the Big Band era," relates disc jockey Steve Hardy. "One of the first beach music songs was 'Drinking Wine Spo-Dee-O-Dee' by 'Sticks' McGhee, which was released in 1949 by Atlantic Records."

Another early beach song was a 1953 release by Billy Ward and the Dominoes entitled "60 Minute Man." This song was banned from the radio because of its suggestive lyrics.

Because rhythm and blues was not played on radio stations and most of those early recordings were banned, much of the first beach music records are rare collectors items.

Chris Beachley of the Wax Museum record store in Charlotte said, "Some beach music records are worth more than $100, for example 'Boogie Woogie King' by Jimmy Liggins. One of the most popular songs sold at the store, according to Beachley, is the 1953 recording of '60 Minute Man,' which now costs $1.75."

Instead of spending lots of money purchasing beach music records, people all over the state can tune into a radio station and pick up the sounds of the beach.

The first radio show to play "beach music" began in 1960 when "Rockin' Ray" Gooding began an oldies show on WBT in Charlotte on Sunday nights.

"I played beach music before the phrase was coined," Gooding said. "I was friends with Maurice Williams of the Zodiacs and Bill Pinkney of the Drifters. They needed some help in getting their songs aired, so playing their music was an effort to provide good entertainment and to let the public know that the guys had talent. Public demand and awareness then caused beach music to take off."

WBT now has a beach show on Saturday nights due to the demand for beach music in the Charlotte area.

Disc jockey Steve Hardy claims he began the first actual "beach music" program when he started "Steve Hardy's Original Beach Party" on Farmville radio station WRQR in 1977. "There was no other show like mine when I started, although WBT was doing a salute to rock and roll on Sunday nights and they played old rhythm and blues," he said. "For the four years that I had the show, I received approximately 250 requests from all over eastern North Carolina in the five hours that I played each Saturday afternoon."

John Moore is now in charge of the beach music show on WRQR. "In the five hours I am on the air with the beach show on Saturday afternoon, I get about 150 calls from Rocky Mount to Vanceboro and from Kinston to Wilson," he said.

"People like music that they can hear two or three times and know the words and know every beat of the song," Moore said. "The words and music relate to having good times and good friends."

"I had never heard of 'beach music' until I came to this area," said Scott Kerr, program director at WSFL radio in Bridgeton. "When people would call and request beach music, I would play Jan and Dean and the Beach Boys. I soon found out that was not what they were talking about."

According to Kerr, the target audience for WSFL is the 25 and over age group. "Beach music pulls in that audience," he said.

Instead of having a weekly beach music show, WSFL incorporates beach music into their daily programming schedule by playing three or four songs in a "beach music sweep" every other hour from 6 a.m. to 7 p.m. "I think that we pull in more listeners by playing beach music," Kerr said.

"Beach music has a 35-year tradition and the public is picking up that tradition by keeping beach music popular," he said. "The beach music festival at Emerald Isle this spring really opened my eyes to the popularity of beach music," Kerr said.

The public demand led to beach music festivals. The shows usually showcase five or more beach music bands during the course of an afternoon.

"People requested that I have a beach music festival at Holiday Travel Park," said Ronnie Watson, owner of the park and coordinator of the semi-annual beach music festival at Emerald Isle. "Beach music was becoming very popular in this area, and in 1978, we decided to have a fall beach music festival."

Not only do such bands as the Embers, the Drifters and the Tams play at the Emerald Isle Beach Music Festival, there is also a big shag contest, a pig picking, a sky-diving exhibition and a Miss Emerald Isle Beach Music Queen. A 30-minute special program on the festival was aired on the eastern North Carolina affiliates of NBC-TV. A parade has been planned for the next festival, which will take place Oct. 3.

"Reservations for the next festival have been coming in every day," Watson said. "We have already gotten calls about the festival from people in Atlanta, New York, South Carolina, Virginia and Maryland," he said.

"We approached the festival as a business venture," Watson said. "It has been so successful that we now have two festivals a year, one in the spring and one in the fall." Tickets sell for $10 in advance and $12 at the door and attendance at this spring's concert was over 10,000.

Beach music nightclubs in North Carolina are a booming business, also. Throughout the state, clubs book beach music bands and hire disc jockeys to play the old-time beach music that shaggers love to bob to.

The average attendance at the Sunday afternoon Shag Day at Johnny Dollars in Charlotte is 100 to 300. When a beach music band, such as Clifford Curry and Hot Smoking Brass or the Spontaines, is there, attendance can vary from 200 to 500 people, according to owner Jimmy Shaw.

Art Hatfield, owner of Charlotte's Groucho's Beach Club, said, "After four and one-half years the nightclub is still thriving on beach music alone. The competition is picking up in the area because the old songs have been rejuvenated and are popular again."

Hatfield said that on a Saturday night his club, which caters to the shaggers who like the old style of beach music, will average 100 to 175 dancers. Groucho's also has beach music contests and hopes to promote beach music bands in the future.

Mint Juleps in Wilmington is a private membership club. Owner Joey Maggard claims that his club is "The Shag Capital of the World." The average crowd for the club, which boasts a big selection of beach music records, is 350.

Shag lessons are taught at the club and shag contests are held there, the owner said.

According to manager Todd Baker, Crazy Zack's in Raleigh moved from a smaller location on Hillsborough Street to a larger club because of the popularity of beach music. "After three years, the first club was too small. We have been in our present larger location for three years," Baker said.

The club draws about 1,000 college students per night during the school year. Although a disc jockey usually plays records, the club does book beach music bands such as The Chairmen of the Board and North Tower for special occasions.

Although the club has a beach music section and a "disco and funk" music section, Baker said that the club is mainly for the beach crowd. "That's what we started with and that's what we'll stick with," he said.

There are other locations of Crazy Zack's in North Myrtle Beach, S.C.; Columbia, S.C.; Wilmington and Fayetteville.

Greenville's Louie's Beach Club caters to "hard core shaggers," according to manager Bobby Adams. "The older crowd who is serious about dancing comes in here to shag," he said. The club holds 175 people and the best nights are Thursdays and Saturdays for Steve Hardy's Beach Party.

Papa Katz in Greenville attracts the younger college crowd, as well as some old-time shaggers for John Moore's Beach Show on Saturday nights. Manager Don McPherson said that about 400 people come to Papa Katz on Saturdays.

Beach music is a Southeastern phenomenon that does not seem to have any limits. From "preppy" clothes to nightclubs and from beer to bobbing, "The Sound of the South" has an impact.

Beach music and the dance called the shag have withstood the test of time. In fact, beach music seems to be growing. That's good news to all those people who love beach music, always have and always will.

"THE SOUND OF THE SOUTH"...is played by disc jockey John Moore at a local nightclub on Saturday nights. He also has a beach music show on WRQR radio on Saturday afternoons. A night club can be found in almost every town in the south where beach music is played he said. (Photo by Jane Welborn)

Dispelling Sugar Myths

By JAN ZIEGLER

BOSTON (UPI) — A lot of people think Winnie the Pooh was onto something, sticking to honey and avoiding white table sugar. They think if they do the same thing, they'll somehow be healthier for it.

University and hospital nutritionists say they're wrong. To the human digestive system, honey and most other natural sugars are the same.

In separate telephone interviews, three nutritionists also disagreed with people who say white sugar is a killer — although it can be harmful if misused. Many people eat too much sugar of all types and not enough of other foods to get the nutrients necessary for health, said Dr. Simone Adams, chief of the nutrition section at the University of Connecticut's John Dempsey Medical Center.

"People are not interested when you say eat something in moderation, because it's not glamorous enough," Dr. Adams said. "As far as I'm concerned, sugar has a role to play. I just think it's been abused."

More than 100 chemicals are defined as sugar but only glucose is useful to the body, she said.

All other kinds of sugar, all carbohydrates, and sometimes other nutrients, are broken down into glucose, she added.

People store about a half-day's worth of energy in their livers in the form of glycogen, a glucose product. After that's used up, they start on stored fat, she said.

Sugar in any form burns off quickly. If you've eaten nothing slower-burning, such as protein, a feeling of tiredness or low energy can follow while the body begins converting its own energy stores.

"Anybody who doesn't eat for four or five hours is probably going to feel tired, sluggish, whatever. It's because they haven't eaten" at all — not because of sugar consumption, said nutritionist Nancy Teiger of Boston's Beth Israel Hospital.

She said the exceptions are diabetics and reactive hypoglycemics. Diabetics produce too little insulin. Reactive hypoglycemia, an extremely rare disorder, is over-production of insulin, Ms. Teiger said.

According to Dr. Robert Olson, chairman of the biochemistry department and professor of medicine at St. Louis University Medical School, sugar does not cause diabetes.

"The American Society for Clinical Nutrition had a task force examining relationships between diet and various diseases. There was a consensus on sugar not being related to diabetes," Olson said. "It's my view that's a sound opinion."

There are many theories about how it starts but none point to sugar consumption, he added.

Many nutritionists say hypoglycemia has been overused as an explanation for all sorts of symptoms. The word is used to describe the lows following sugar consumption without other nutrients to fill in.

Nutritionist Teiger said people should not diagnose themselves as hypoglycemic to explain tiredness or irritability. They may have other physical disorders, or they may simply be tired or depressed.

Nor should people think sugar causes other debilitating diseases.

"It's a pure chemical, so you don't take it as 100 percent of your diet," Olson said. "Sugar has only calories in it. It does not have vitamins, it doesn't have minerals."

What sugar can cause is tooth decay and excess poundage in such classic areas as the hips, if eaten to excess by someone with a tendency to put on weight, the nutritionists said.

People who attend Beth Israel's nutrition clinic are advised to "eat a balanced diet including good sources of protein, vitamins and minerals before supplementing your diet with 'empty calories,' or foods high in calories and low in nutritional value."

But if an active teenage boy gets his daily requirements of nutrients, it's no sin to allow him an extra dessert, Dr. Adams said.

Older people, whose calorie needs are lower, should be sure what they cut down on is empty calories, she added.

As for honey, it is a combination of sugars, including sucrose — table sugar — glucose and sometimes fructose, or fruit sugar. Because honey sticks to teeth it can promote decay.

Honey contains a minuscule amount of nutrients that are refined out of white sugar, but not nearly enough to make a difference, Dr. Adams said.

THE BAND OF OZ...is one of the new groups to ride the wave of beach music. Their hit songs include "Shagging" and "Ocean Boulevard." They play at night clubs throughout the South.

Dear Abby

Adoption Plans Upsetting To Grandparents

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Our only son, Jimmy, died four years ago at 29, leaving a beautiful wife (I'll call her Ellen) and a 2-year-old son, Jimmy Jr. Ellen remarried two years ago and recently had another son. Ellen is a fine person, and we are grateful that she married a good man who has been a wonderful father to our grandson.

Now the problem: Ellen's husband wants to adopt Jimmy Jr., which means our grandson will no longer carry our family name. Ellen is in favor of the adoption, saying she wants both her sons to have the same name she carries. Abby, since Jimmy was an only child, if his son doesn't carry on the family name, it will end.

We offered to support Jimmy Jr. until he is 21, and send him through college if no adoption takes place. Ellen and her husband say they appreciate our feelings, but they still want the adoption. We are heartbroken.

Are we wrong to feel as we do? And what can be done about it?

THE GRANDPARENTS

DEAR GRANDPARENTS: You aren't "wrong" to feel as you do, but since Ellen and her husband want to go through with the legal adoption and name change, please accept their decision with grace. And be grateful that Jimmy Jr. is being raised by a good man who will be a wonderful father to your grandson.

DEAR ABBY: Will you please settle something for us? Is there a "left" sock and a "right" sock in a pair of socks? Or doesn't it make any difference?

My husband and I have been arguing about this for years. SOCK FIGHT IN WINONA, MINN.

DEAR FIGHT: There's no "left" or "right" — and if I'm wrong, a sock designer will surely sock it to me!

DEAR ABBY: I buried my beloved wife about a month ago. After her funeral I ran into a curious situation I was never able to get a straight answer for. Perhaps you can help.

We all know we're supposed to tip the pastor, rabbi or priest for officiating at a wedding. But what about funerals? I asked the pastor who officiated at my wife's funeral how much I owed him, and he said it already had been taken care of. I've since asked various friends, and nobody seems to know who took care of it.

This is a problem we will all have to face at one time or another, and I hope Dear Abby can set the world straight. PUZZLED IN OREGON

DEAR PUZZLED: Ask the funeral director. You will probably be informed that the pastor's "honorarium" (please, not "tip") was included in the cost of the funeral. So whoever paid for the funeral took care of the pastor.

DEAR ABBY: Today I called our local newspaper to place a classified ad, and I accidentally dialed a wrong number.

The woman who answered the phone told me that she was a "cripple," living alone, and I had made her get up to answer the phone needlessly. While I was apologizing, she slammed down the phone. This has probably happened to her several times before because she was obviously very much annoyed. If so, she should consider changing her number and/or have her phone located in a place where she could easily reach it.

I would mainly like to caution this woman (and all other disabled people out there) to please never identify herself as a "cripple" — living alone! The person on the other end could be trying to find out if there is anyone at home, or if this woman is alone.

I hope this letter will be of help to people who are disabled and/or living alone.

A STRANGER WHO CARED

DEAR STRANGER: Your message cannot be repeated too frequently. And on the same theme, children should be told repeatedly that they should never tell a stranger who telephones that they are home alone!

If you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say, send for Abby's complete booklet on letter-writing. Send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

Rub a lemon or a lime over a cutting board to kill garlic and onion odors.

Vows Solemnized In Ceremony Saturday

Laura Cherry White and Joseph Warren Tart were married Saturday in a high noon ceremony performed in St. Paul's Episcopal Church. The Rev. Lawrence Patrick Houston Jr. was the officiating minister.

A program of organ music was presented by Sharon Irwin. Mrs. James Searl played the flute.

Daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Steven Merle White of Greenville, the bride was given in marriage by her father. The bridegroom's parents are Dr. and Mrs. James Milton Tart of Charlotte.

Elizabeth Alliaude White of Chapel Hill, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Bridesmaids included Jane Bethea Rogers of Chapel Hill, Mrs. Timothy Coleman Barber of Durham, Kathleen Alliaude and Margaret Campbell McGee of Spartanburg, S.C., cousins of the bride.

Edward Whichard Scales Farley was acolyte for the double ring ceremony.

The father of the bridegroom was best man while ushers were John Michael and Roger Pope Tart, brothers of the bridegroom, and Orland Wilson Gabriel III, all of Charlotte, Steven Worley and David Grier White of Greenville, brothers of the bride.

The bride wore a traditional formal gown of white organza. It was designed with a rounded neckline edged in hand-embroidered flower appliques and a fitted waistline. Matching lace flowers enhanced the bishop sleeves and the full A-line skirt which ended in a scalloped hem and a chapel length train. Her full length veil of silk illusion was attached to a bandeau of embroidered flowers. She wore the bridegroom's gift of pearls which had belonged to his paternal grandmother and carried a bouquet of white roses, stephanotis and freesia.

The maid of honor wore a gown of voile styled with a white bodice of rounded neckline and short puffed sleeves edged in cluny lace. The floor length skirt was fashioned in lime green and was sashed at the waistline in canary yellow. She carried a nosegay of daisies and gerbera daisies in shades of coral tied with matching ribbon.

The bridesmaids' dresses and flowers were identical to that of the maid of honor.

The couple will be living in Charlotte after a wedding trip to Myrtle Beach, S.C.

The bride graduated from high school at St. Mary's in Raleigh and is a graduate of Furman University in Greenville, S.C. She is employed by First Citizens Bank and Trust Co. in Charlotte. The bridegroom is also a graduate of Furman University and is employed by Mecklenburg County.

A wedding breakfast was held at the Greenville Country Club.

Following the rehearsal Mr. and Mrs. Harry Vernon Hamilton and Mr. and Mrs. William Mattocks Sanders gave a cocktail party at the home of Gloria Sanders. The wedding party and out-of-town guests attended a rehearsal dinner given by parents of the bridegroom at the Greenville Country Club.

On Friday the wedding party and out-of-town guests were entertained at a brunch given by Mr. and Mrs. James Fred Webb and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Loyd Horton.

Ann Marie Suggs Is Saturday Bride

GRIFTON — Ann Marie Suggs of Ayden and Airman Wallace Spikes Jr. of Grifton were united in marriage Saturday at 2 p.m. at the Bethel Christian Church here. The Rev. Howard James officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her stepfather, Bobby Humphrey. She is the daughter of Mrs. Joyce Suggs Humphrey and the late Mr. Billy R. Suggs. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Spikes Sr. of Grifton.

A program of wedding music was presented by vocalist, Joe Langston, and his accompanist, Judy Jones.

The bride wore a formal gown of white organza over peau de soie with a colonial neckline encircled with a band of Venise lace and a stand-up collar of chantilly lace. The A-line skirt and chapel train were accented with a flounce bordered with lace, forming an apron effect on the back of the train. Her fingertip veil of silk illusion, bordered with lace, was attached to a Juliet cap of schiffli lace and pearls. She carried a bouquet of silk mums, daisies, stephanotis and lily of the valley complemented with ivy.

Tammy Bowen of Ayden was maid of honor and Debbie Cahoon of Swan Quarter was bridesmaid. They wore identical dresses of blue polyester styled with a pleated skirt. They carried long-stemmed carnations with streamers.

Donna Spikes, cousin of the bridegroom, was flower girl. She wore a blue gown and carried a basket of flowers.

Mothers of the bridal couple were given corsages of white carnations which complemented their street length dresses.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers were Jeff Garris, cousin of the bridegroom of Ayden, and Ronald Edwards of Grifton.

Dolly Hart directed the wedding and Elaine Pierce of Ahoskie, sister of the bridegroom, presided at the guest register. Becky Spikes, sister of the bridegroom, passed out rice bags after the ceremony.

The bride is a graduate of Ayden-Grifton High School and Pitt Community College. She is a licensed practical nurse.

The bridegroom graduated from Ayden-Grifton High School and is serving in the U. A. Air Force in the security policeman field. He is stationed in Rapid City, S.D. where the couple will live after a wedding trip to the coast.

A cake cutting was given by the parents of the bride at the church. Mary Gaskins, cousin of the bride, served cake and Jackie Spikes, sister of the bridegroom, poured punch.

Rainbow Wedding Is Performed On Friday

Zina Annette Mayo and John Wayne Henderson Jr., both of Greenville, were married on Friday at 8 p.m. at Calvary Pentecostal Church in a rainbow ceremony.

The Rev. C.T. Wells performed the double ring, candlelight ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Ray Hodges and George Mayo of Greenville and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Linwood Wells of Greenville and John Wayne Henderson Sr. of Delaware.

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her stepfather, the bride wore a gown of white silked organza over peau de soie fashioned with a high neck and empire waist and was bordered with a lavender ribbon. The long, full sleeves were finished at the wrists with fluted ruffles and alencon lace. The empire waist and skirt were trimmed with sprays of lace appliques and seed pearls. A fluted ruffle attached with alencon lace finished the skirt. A detachable chapel train fell from the waist. She wore a veil of chapel length illusion with alencon lace.

The mother of the bride chose a street-length pastel green dress.

The maid of honor was Tammy Bullock, sister of the bride of Tarboro. She wore a chiffon lavender dress of voile lined in acetate taffeta and carried a bouquet of silk flowers. Bridesmaids were Mary Moore, cousin of the bride of Greenville, Diane Pollard of Greenville and Sharon Boleman of Farmville. Both are cousins of the bride. Miss Moore wore a chiffon pink dress with a scoop neckline. Miss Pollard wore a powder blue dress of voile lined in acetate taffeta with a ruffled front and back scoop neckline. Miss Boleman wore a yellow lace scooped neckline dress with a lacy jacket. They all carried bouquets of silk flowers. The flower girl was Cindy Hodges, sister of the bride of Greenville. She wore a white dress with lace trim and a lace panel on the front bodice with ruffle trim sheer sleeves and a ribbon bow at the neck. She carried a basket of assorted flowers.

The best man was Douglas Bullock, brother-in-law of the bride of Tarboro. The ring bearer was Ollie Mayo, brother of the bride of Greenville. Ushers were Danny Pollard and Stephen Moore, both of Greenville and David Boleman of Farmville.

Paul Tucker was the soloist and organist for the wedding.

After the wedding, a reception was given by the bride's family and ladies of the church. Mildred Chauncey served cake and punch was poured by Gladys Sawyer, both aunts of the bride. Assisting in serving were Mary Moore, Ola Bradshaw, and Marie Bradshaw.

After a wedding trip to unannounced points, the couple will reside in Greenville.

The bride attends North Pitt High School.

Engagement Announced

ANGELIA FAYE PETERSON...is the daughter of Mr. Ernest Peterson and Mrs. Icelene Peterson of Greenville, who announce her engagement to Joe Louis Smith Jr., son of Mr. Joe Louis Smith of New York and Mrs. Carrie Smith of Greenville. The wedding is planned for Sept. 25.

COOKING IS FUN

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

We've just tried one of the best of the new frozen desserts and are eager to pass along the recipe to you.

Its virtues? This Nectarine Cream is simple and quick to make. And it has the true flavor of the fresh fruit — just intense enough to be delightful. It's so convenient to serve because it becomes firm enough, after a couple of hours in the freezer, to scoop or cut in squares or pretty shapes. Best of all, it does not get icy even after an overnight stay in the freezer. That's a big plus.

NECTARINE CREAM
1 pound fresh nectarines (about 4 medium)
¾ cup confectioners' sugar
¼ cup domestic 80-proof brandy

1 teaspoon vanilla
¾ cup heavy cream
8-ounce package cream cheese, cut into chunks and softened
Quarter 2 of the nectarines — there should be about 1½ cups. In an electric blender whirl together quartered nectarines, sugar, brandy and vanilla, turning on and off until almost smooth. Add cream; whirl until blended. Add cheese, scraping sides once or twice, until smooth. There will be about 3 cups — mixture will be flecked. Pour into an 8 by 8 by 2-inch pan. Freeze until firm — a few hours. Cover tightly. To serve, slice remaining 2 nectarines; layer Nectarine Cream and nectarine slices in 6 stemmed glasses or dessert dishes. Serve at once. Makes 6 servings.

CWI Has Guest Speaker

A slate of officers for 1982-83 was presented at the meeting of Greenville Credit Women International held last week at Abram's Family Restaurant.

Arnold B. Parris, president of Pitt-Greene Production Credit Association, was guest speaker. He talked on agribusiness and presented a film entitled "Farm Life."

Lillie Darden conducted an installation ceremony for new members, Sharon Potter, Betty Womack and Louise Wilson.

It was announced Bosses Night will be held Oct. 19 at the Ramada Inn and the group's next meeting will be Sept. 28. Les Avery of the Greenville Credit Bureau will give the program.

Jane Walker, president, conducted the meeting.

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a five by seven picture. During the second week with a wallet size picture and write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement. Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to "The Daily Reflector" one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

Short Cheers Are The Fashion This Year For Cheerleaders

By ROBERT PAGE
DALLAS (UPI) — This fall cheerleaders at 40,000 high schools, junior highs and colleges will ignite crowds at sports stadiums with the training they received from one of Lawrence "Herkie" Herkimer's week-long camps.

Herkimer, whose Dallas-based National Cheerleader Association sponsors 320 week-long camps across the nation each summer to teach 150,000 of America's perky, clean-cut teenagers how to jump and chant in unison.

"Cheerleading is one of the things that is synonymous with America," Herkimer says. "I don't care what your socio-economic group is, if your daughter makes cheerleader, you'll sell the boat or whatever to make sure she's not prevented from doing her thing."

"Cheerleading is one of the things that is synonymous with America," Herkimer says. "I don't care what your socio-economic group is, if your daughter makes cheerleader, you'll sell the boat or whatever to make sure she's not prevented from doing her thing."

Southern Laboratory High School's Kitten cheerleading squad returned to Baton Rouge, La., with a spirit award won at one of his clinics at Northwestern State University of Louisiana. Sky-View Academy's junior high school cheerleaders of Memphis, Tenn., are especially precocious. The squad defeated the older Massac County High School Patriots of Metropolis, Ill., for the top award at a clinic Southeast Missouri State University in Cape Girardeau, Mo. Herkimer led cheers at Southern Methodist University in Dallas in the late 1940s, when football stars Doak Walker and Kyle Rote put SMU in the national spotlight. He received attention for his vigorous tumbling and jumps — among them his "Herkie jump" — and was named an all-America cheerleader by a national magazine.

The "Herkie jump" is so widely-known that when Herkimer tried to explain to a group of cheerleaders how to do the jump for a UPI picture, one immediately responded, "Oh, you mean a 'Herkie'?" — although she didn't recognize the man who invented it.

Herkimer's flagship camp remains at SMU, where from 800 to 1,200 cheerleaders participate in camps each week through the summer.

"I had a real turning point in my life when I got out of school and was offered the opportunity to direct a boy's ranch," Herkimer says. "But I didn't want to raise my family in that kind of atmosphere, and cheerleaders were so much more fun. I decided to work with them."

Herkimer grosses $20 million a year by dealing in volume. A four-to-five day camp, usually held at a college or university with an eye on recruiting the cheerleaders as students, costs the participants from $69 to $100 each. The price includes room, board, instruction and facilities. About 150,000 teenagers go through the camps each year.

The camps emphasize all aspects of cheerleading. This includes tumbling and choreographed maneuvers along with postermaking and leadership.

Herkimer says short cheers are the fashion these days. New yells in the 1982 fall lineup include: "Stop 'em, hold 'em, push 'em back. Come on Ninety-Nine's, (clap clap) attack!" For basketball, it's: "Take it down, put it through. Take it down, shoot for two!"

A camp instructor says the clinics also teach such things as how much makeup to wear (as little as possible) and how to behave on the field (no hair combing). "If they need to fix their hair, we tell them to go to the restroom," says Lance Wagers, a yell leader who has taught in the clinics 12 years. "When the cheerleaders are on the field, they should be leading the crowd."

A significant portion of Herkimer's revenues comes from the Cheerleader Supply Co., a manufacturer and marketer of skirts and pom poms, bumper stickers and spirit buttons.

He invented the brightly-beribboned pom pon after seeing color television at the World's Fair in New York City in the early 1950s. The reason "pom pon" is spelled with an "n", Herkimer says, is the result of a clinic in Hawaii.

"I was in Hawaii to teach the kids about cheerleading, and I was up in front of this group and said something about 'pom pom' girls and there was a sudden hush over the audience. I asked, 'Come on, don't you have pom pom girls?' and the principal came running up and explained that 'pom pom' is a four-letter word in Oriental cultures." So he changed it to pom pon.

Honeymoons in this country just aren't the same as they used to be.

Some couples take their honeymoon weeks, months and even years after being married.

A lot of couples take their honeymoon weeks, months and even years BEFORE being married.

Or as one "bride" put it, "When Zack said we were going to take a honeymoon, I got so excited I nearly fell out of bed."

The U.S. Department of Commerce's Census Bureau counted 1,560,000 unmarried couples living together in 1980, so we're not just talking about young people.

Not only have honeymoons changed, so have their reasons for taking a honeymoon. Newlyweds in the '30s, '40s, and '50s used a honeymoon as a ritual apart from family and friends to get to know one another. Traditionally, they did this at Niagara Falls on a Monday morning watching water drop 182 feet. On Tuesday, they went to the Canadian side and watched water drop 173 feet. On Wednesday, they would board a small boat and cruise within a couple of miles of the water dropping 182 feet. On Thursday, they would soar over the falls in a small plane. The ultimate test, as it appeared to me, was to see if the bride was still attractive to her husband who was seeing her for the first time with stringy hair from all that lousy mist.

Today's honeymooners are seeking adventure. They've had the silence and the time together. They go on a honeymoon to see people, sights and things.

No matter what you call it or how it's changed in concept, the honeymoon endures... especially with women. Don't try to cheat her out of it. If she's had one, she never forgets it. If she's never had one, she expects it.

The mosquitoes and the sunburn are forgotten. So is the rental car that overheated, and the mattress that smelled like a baby's wet diaper.

The run-down cabin becomes Xanadu, the rowboat an Onassis yacht, and the arguments over "If you're going to sit in a bathroom this entire trip, do it, but I'm going to the beach!" never happened.

No matter how long the relationship or how informal the wedding, a honeymoon promises romance... and it gets better every time you tell about it.

Kathy Sue Oakley Weds K. R. Beacham

St. Paul Pentecostal Church here was the scene of the wedding ceremony of Kathy Sue Oakley and Kenneth Ray Beacham Jr. Saturday afternoon at two o'clock. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John P. Oakley of Greenville. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Ray Beacham Sr. of Route 5, Greenville.

A program of organ music was presented by Eloise Jackson. Terry Williams was the soloist.

The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Ed Walker.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her sister, Tammy Oakley of Greenville, was maid of honor. Bridesmaids included Connie Umphlett, Kim Beacham, sister of the bridegroom, Carla Jones, and cousins of the bride, Jennifer Moore and Lisa Harris, all of Greenville.

Tonya Moore of Greenville, cousin of the bride, was flower girl and the ring bearer was the bridegroom's cousin, Larry Bland Jr. of Washington.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and ushers included John Oakley, brother of the bride, Carl Oakley, Garland Johnson, John Brewer and Greg McGlohon, all of Greenville.

The bride wore a floor length gown of white satin covered with chantilly lace. The fitted bodice had a Queen Anne neckline trimmed with scalloped chantilly lace and the long puffed sleeves were of lace with matching cuffs. The skirt and attached chapel train featured ruffled lace. Her veil was designed of chantilly lace and ruffled lace. She carried a cascade bouquet of summer flowers.

Each of the attendants wore a floor length gown of yellow satin with a fitted bodice and spaghetti straps. A yellow chantilly lace cape accented each. They carried a bouquet of yellow daisies. The flower girl carried a wicker basket with silk mum petals.

The mother of the bride wore a peach colored floor gown and the mother of the bridegroom selected a floor length gown in beige.

The ceremony was directed by Christine Rodgers, aunt of the bride. Rice bags were passed out by Jody Galloway, cousin of the bride, Brandon Moore and Michele Howard, cousins of the bride.

A reception followed in the church fellowship hall. Margie Oakley poured punch and cake was cut by Candy Moore. Both are aunts of the bride.

The bride graduated from Pitt Community College. The bridegroom graduated from North Pitt High School.

The couple will live near Greenville.

Cases Can Be Rough And Touching In PI's Life

By MARTIN HEERWALD SEATTLE (UPI) — Janet Christensen, 29, is one of the few women who runs her own detective agency.

"If someone else already has worked on a problem and failed, I love to take over," she said in an interview. "I have an excellent track record. There's only two cases out of 312 that I haven't solved."

Her specialty is missing persons. Her rates are $30 an hour or $200 a day plus expenses.

"There's a lot of satisfaction out of bringing a family together," she said. In one of her "favorite cases," she united a 7-year-old girl with her mother in time for Christmas two years ago.

The divorced father had abducted his daughter.

"Her father told her she would never see her mother again. She was very sad."

Ms. Christensen tracked down the father and daughter and called police to arrest the man and hold the daughter for her mother.

"In the police car, the girl drew a little heart and said,

"Give this to my Mom.' It was very touching and it was really something to see the girl and her mother together again. They're forever grateful, I still hear from them."

Ms. Christensen said the detective business for a woman is not living life like someone from "Charlie's Angels" but she said she has experienced danger.

"I've jumped from a burning car. I've had to scale a high fence. I've been wrestled and thrown to the floor."

But she said she is not afraid. "You can't afford to be afraid and do your work. If you're afraid, you should go into other work."

She said there was strong evidence an incendiary device had been placed in her car the day the engine burst into flames as she was driving.

"I had a lot of documented evidence. They were trying to warn me. I had too much evidence. I found witnesses no one else could find. They were worried, and they should have been. They all got 35 to 45 years in prison."

Ms. Christensen had a simpler explanation for jumping over a high fence: "Two Dobermans."

She said she and the women she hires keep themselves fit in the self-defense art of judo, but she doesn't carry a gun because "you set yourself up when you have a gun."

Born in Santa Cruz, Calif., Ms. Christensen lived for seven years in Eugene, Ore., where she attended the University of Oregon before moving to Seattle to complete her degree in criminal law at the University of Washington.

She started her Seattle Detective Bureau about three and one-half years ago after working two years as a criminal counselor and two years as a para-legal. Now she wants to go to law school, but not to quit work as a detective.

"I started this (detective) business from scratch," she said. "I intend to keep this business and to be running it for years to come."

"After I get my law degree, I'll either be a practicing attorney, maintaining my detective business, or a detective using my knowledge of law to expand in my work."

Janet Lynn Dunn Is Bride Of Mr. Spencer

Janet Lynn Dunn and Robert Lee Spencer were united in marriage Saturday at 4 p.m. in the First Presbyterian Church. The Rev. Richard Rhea Gammon performed the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Linwood Dunn of Greenville and the late Adelaide Skeen Dunn. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lee Spencer of Laurinburg.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of satapeau over peau de soie. The high neckline was encircled with imported re-embroidered lace beaded in pearls. Matching lace appliques beaded in pearls and iridescent sequins trimmed both the sheer yoke of English net and empire bodice. Bishop sleeves of satapeau featured oval panels of English net applied in beaded lace with fitted cuffs trimmed in lace. Beaded lace also bordered the hemline. She carried a nosegay of white roses and mums, interspersed with baby's breath and English ivy, tied with ivory satin ribbon. Her veil was a full length mantilla of English illusion applique and bordered with matching lace attached to a Juliet caplet.

The stepmother of the bride wore a full length gown of dusty rose lace and a corsage of white roses. The mother of the bridegroom wore a full length gown of ivory chiffon with hand-painted floral designs and a corsage of pink roses.

The maids of honor were Sally Dana Dunn of Atlanta and Christia Anne Dunn, of Greenville, sisters of the bride. Their gowns were styled with a bodice of ivory chiffon with a coral matte jersey floor length skirt. The bodice featured a high lace collar and the long chiffon sleeves were elasticized at the wrist. The circular skirt, shirred at the waist, had a satin ribbon tie. They each carried three roses with cascading English ivy and tied with ivory ribbons.

The grandmother of the bridegroom, Mrs. James Spencer of Laurinburg, wore a street length pastel pink linen ensemble and a corsage of white carnations.

The bridesmaids were Mrs. Mark Sessler of Matthews and Eleanor Vick Spencer of Laurinburg, sisters of the bridegroom, Mary Ann Baddour of Goldsboro, MRS. ROBERT LEE SPENCER JR.

Mrs. Walter White Hannah of Concord and Mrs. Randall Alan Laymon of Raleigh. The attendants were attired and carried flowers identical to the maids of honor.

The father of the bridegroom was the best man. Ushers included James W. Spencer, brother of the bridegroom of Laurinburg, Edmond F. Baddour of Columbia, S.C., Dan Olive Campbell Jr. of Greensboro, Joseph T. Odom III of Greenville, Joseph D. Shealy of Durham and Dr. Stephen Ross Smith of Raleigh.

Dr. E. Robert Irwin was the organist and Bill Frazier played the trumpet.

A reception was held at the Rotary Building and was given by the parents of the bride and friends.

Mary Wesley Harvey registered guests. Mrs. Hunter Skeen, aunt of the bride of Burlington, served wedding cake and Mrs. James Drew McLeod and Mrs. Thomas Earl Skeen poured punch. Mrs. Joseph David Montzno Jr. was the pianist for the reception.

A bridesmaids luncheon was held at the Ramada Inn and was given by Mrs.

Walter Frank Phillips, Mrs. Thurman Vincent and Mrs. Alva Worthington, all of Greenville and Mrs. Hebert Saperstien of Wheaton, Md., all are aunts of the bride.

A pre-rehearsal party was given by Mrs. Charles Wesley Harvey Jr. at her home in Greenville. An after-rehearsal dinner was given by the parents of the bridegroom at the Three Steers. A rehearsal party was given after the dinner at the Cherry Oaks club house by Sally Dana Dunn, Christia Anne Dunn, James Spencer Walker, Mr. and Mrs. Mark Sessler, Dr. and Mrs. Richard Gavigan and John Trafficanti.

A wedding breakfast was given at the Ramada Inn by Mr. and Mrs. Hunter Skeen, Dr. and Mrs. James McGuire, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Camp and Mr. and Mrs. Derek Dunn.

The wedding coordinator was Mrs. Richard Rhea Gammon.

After a Caribbean cruise in Kinston.

The bride is a sales representative with Xerox Corp. and the bridegroom is the branch manager with Wachovia Bank and Trust Co. in Kinston. The bride graduated from Rose High School and East Carolina University and the bridegroom graduated from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

A Brush With Sudden Death

By MICHAEL RÓDDY
Associated Press Writer
PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Mildred Shalit's heart began speeding up as she had lunch in a New Jersey restaurant last spring. She passed out.

"When I came to, they were putting me on a stretcher," the 59-year-old Mrs. Shalit said. "They got me to the hospital fast and by the time I got to the emergency room I was fully conscious. I called my husband and let him know I was OK."

But Mrs. Shalit, a corporate art consultant, was not all right.

She had had a brush with what doctors have dubbed "sudden death," a heart condition that occurs when heartbeats speed up and the heart's rhythm is out of kilter, according to researchers at the Hospital of the University of Pennsylvania.

Dr. Mark Josephson, who treated Mrs. Shalit at the hospital, says that the problem, known medically as tachycardia or arrhythmia, can crop up without warning. It often affects those who have had heart attacks, but it also can strike people who have no history of heart problems.

"Occasionally people with no known heart problem can drop dead suddenly," he said. "That's what it is."

The condition is not the same as a heart attack, which occurs when the heart is deprived of blood and stops, according to Dr. Frank Marchlinski, a research associate with Josephson.

Instead, those stricken by "sudden death" experience a quickening of the heartbeat, but the heart's operations are ineffective. Insufficient blood is pumped to the brain, the person passes out and, if no assistance is provided, the person may die, he said.

"There's no organized pumping activity," he said. "If you imagine the heart looking like a balloon, it would be like a bunch of worms moving around inside the balloon."

Mrs. Shalit, of Bala Cynwyd, Pa., suffered a heart attack in 1976 and that made her bout with "sudden death" more likely, the doctors said.

The scar tissue left inside the heart after a heart attack can, in effect, "short circuit" the electric impulses that regulate the heart and cause it to pump erratically, Marchlinski said.

Normally, the electricity passing through the heart causes a "smooth excitation" of the muscle, Josephson said. But when the pulses go through a damaged area, the electrical "wave front gets broken up."

"That sets up the possibility to have it circle around and it causes a tachycardia," he said.

Drug therapy is effective in about 30 percent of the cases treated at the university hospital, Josephson said, and surgery is recommended in most other instances.

When surgery is required, the object is to cut out the remaining living strands in a damaged area of the heart, he said. What remains after surgery is a scar that is impervious to the electrical pulses.

"Electricity won't flow through a solid scar," he said. "There have to be parts of the tissue that are alive."

In Mrs. Shalit's case, Josephson advised her that he thought surgery would be necessary, but he tried tests first to see if any medication would prevent the strange rhythms from recurring.

The tests are conducted by inserting electric catheters about the size of spaghetti noodles into veins near the heart and using electric current to purposely speed the heart rhythm, Marchlinski said.

"We try to initiate the same rhythm problem that caused the patient to pass out outside the hospital so that we can show what we're dealing with and then we select a drug that we can demonstrate prevents the disorder," Marchlinski said.

One drug helped Mrs. Shalit's heart problem, but did not bring it totally under control, she said.

"In my case there was a drug they found that slowed it down, and Josephson said it would keep me going until I could get to a hospital for help," Mrs. Shalit said. "I couldn't make up my mind to do the surgery, but then when I went home and realized I didn't have the hospital to protect me like a cocoon, I realized I couldn't live like that." Mrs. Shalit had surgery last July 14 to remove the scar tissue on her heart.

Hymnal Along, Students Learn To Fly

By TOM EBLEN
Associated Press Writer

ELIZABETHTON, Tenn. (AP) — Flight charts and airplane diagrams cover the classroom walls at Moody Aviation School, but there's also a hymn book on each desk. Students here have loftier goals than just learning how to fly.

Nestled in the mountains of northeast Tennessee, the school that calls itself "the West Point of Christian services" is the world's largest trainer of missionary pilots and airplane mechanics.

The school was started in 1946 by Moody Bible Institute, a fundamentalist, non-denominational college in Chicago. And about 80 percent of its graduates are still working for mission agencies — helping doctors make their rounds in Latin America, ferrying preachers in Africa and delivering medicine in Indonesia.

"There are many places that a young person can learn to fly," said Dirk Van Dam, who came to the school as a student in 1951 and has been its director since 1969. "Our mission is to attract and develop people with special technical skills who feel a desire to serve God."

Van Dam said as many as 100 applicants attend the school's annual flight camp in August hoping to join each semester's 25-member class. Students must first complete two years of study at Moody Institute or another recognized Bible college.

The three-year flight program costs each student about $15,000, not including room and board. And Moody contributes another $18,000 toward each person's education.

"That's one of the reasons we try to screen people very carefully," flight instructor Bruce Hendrich said. "We feel like it's the Lord's money and we have to be good stewards."

Many students are the children of missionaries and flight school graduates. Van Dam said one applicant attending this year's flight camp is the son of a graduate who died 12 years ago in the Philippines when his plane crashed after making a medicine drop.

"Unless you've got the religious commitment, you're not going to keep going," Hendrich said. "There are not a lot of bucks in it."

Despite the hardships of missionary life, Van Dam said few graduates are lured away to the lucrative world of commercial aviation.

A woman has never graduated from the school, but Van Dam said discrimination isn't intended.

"We have asked for a mission agency to assure us that, once trained, a woman could get a position," he said. "In many cultures, a woman wouldn't be accepted as a pilot as she would be in the states."

During the first year of training, students learn aircraft construction and mechanics by servicing the school's 23 planes and helping rebuild wrecked planes the school buys for its fleet. The work leads to students earning the Federal Aviation Administration's air frame and power plant mechanic's license.

Second-year students learn to fly single-engine planes and earn their private pilot's license.

During the final year of training, which leads to a commercial pilot's license, students learn many of the tricks of a missionary pilot's trade — short-runway takeoffs, mountain landings, heavy-load flying, search-and-rescue techniques and parachute use.

"Most of our guys end up flying out of very marginal air strips in very marginal conditions," Hendrich said. "A lot of times in a foreign country you have to make do with what you've got and still be safe."

In 1967, Moody Aviation moved its school from Chicago's O'Hare Airport to Elizabethton's municipal landing strip because the mountainous terrain and wind patterns were similar to those near many foreign missions.

"We have had a few graduates to die in crashes," Van Dam said. "But considering the adverse conditions that most of them work under, it's surprising it doesn't happen more often."

After flight training, most students must attend a foreign-language school. In all, it can take 10 years of study before a pilot or mechanic reaches a foreign mission.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — When thousands of gallons of oil leaked from a tanker two months ago in the Cape Fear River at Wilmington, Lt. Bob Strong and other oil-spill specialists were summoned — just in case local recovery operations were inadequate.

Strong and 24 others are stationed at the U.S. Coast Guard station in Elizabeth City and are members of the Atlantic Strike Team, a little-known group of environmentalists whose jobs are to be ready and on call if a major oil spill or chemical spill occurs.

The call to Wilmington was a more-or-less routine assignment that was settled with few problems, Strong recalled. Other assignments are not as routine — or safe.

For example, there was a recent incident in Cleveland, Ohio. An aging ferry sunk and divers assigned to the strike team were sent to investigate the wreck, drill holes in its hull and employ some "creative plumbing" to get fuel oil out of its hold, Strong said.

And last year those same divers were sent in to assist in a body search in the icy Potomac River after an Air Florida jet crashed in the river. The search yielded bodies and some harrowing moments for the divers.

But other assignments pass unnoticed for the 10-year-old team that was formed to help keep America's waters clean, Strong said in a recent telephone conversation from his Elizabeth City headquarters. Strong is executive officer of the team, which is composed of 25 members and 13 divers. The team is responsible for a huge geographic area that stretches from South Carolina northwards to Maine, plus stretches westward to include the Great Lake states. Two other teams are responsible for the Gulf and Pacific regions.

With such a large area to cover, the team is almost always responding to something, Strong said.

The team was formed a decade ago when federal officials noted that many local agencies had no facilities or experience in containing oil and chemical spills in coastal and inland waters. As oil spills became more commonplace, the National Strike Force was formed. From the strike force came three strike teams in charge of policing waters across the United States. With little or no fanfare, one of those teams was based in Elizabeth City.

Strong said the strike team usually serves now as a backup to other water-cleaning agencies. Since the teams were formed other agencies have become more adept at cleaning up oil spills, he said.

Southern Colleges Report Students Are Older

By ADRIENNE Y. WELCH

ATLANTA (UPI) — Southern colleges and universities are benefitting from a continuing trend among older people returning to school to earn degrees they may not have had the time or money to pursue when they were younger.

Census Bureau figures indicate one-third of all students taking college courses for credit today are 25 or older. Many colleges and universities now have established degree programs especially for non-traditional students — adults who don't fit the conventional image of the college student.

Agnes Scott College in Decatur, Ga., has a Return to College Program. Mary K. Jarboe, administrative assistant in the college's admissions office, says RTC students represent about 10 percent of the total student enrollment of 575 women.

"We realized that more and more adults, especially women, were going back to school, and we felt that as a women's college we should be at the forefront," Ms. Jarboe said. "When we started the RTC program in 1974, we had maybe 10 enrolled. Now, usually there are 50 to 60 per quarter." The age range is about 25 to 65 and most of the women are in their 30s and 40s.

Sharon Covert of Stone Mountain, Ga., who hopes to earn a B.A. degree from Agnes Scott by 1986, says when she enrolled in the Return to College program two years ago, she was frightened. She felt "intimidated by my professors" because she felt she could not keep up academically. "But, she found the younger students accepting her and the teachers encouraging.

The Center for Alternative Programs of Education at Shaw University in Raleigh, N.C., has an external degree program (EDP) that gives adults an opportunity to earn a college degree through off-campus study. Either two years of college or three years of work experience are required for admission.

St. Leo College in St. Leo, Fla., has a similar external degree program. Jean Ronan, assistant dean in the Office of Educational Services, says at least a high school diploma or G.E.D. certificate is required for admission to the program.

The external degree program at Florida International University in Miami, established in 1972, is being restructured, according to Maryellen Canfora, executive coordinator of the State University System EDP. She said problems over the years may have been caused by too many majors and not enough staff. Median age is 40 for the external program at FIU.

Adults have several reasons for returning to school. Dr. Harriet Cabell, director of the external degree program at the University of Alabama, says many people return to school because they are facing turning points in their lives, and they're looking to education to assist them.

"Usually something happens to make them seek a degree," she said. "Maybe they want to get ahead in the job, or they're getting a divorce or finally getting their finances together."

Begun in 1975, Alabama's external degree program is part of New College, a separate division established at the university in 1968. Unlike many colleges and universities with such programs, Alabama has more men enrolled than women. More than 200 students have graduated from the program since its inception.

Mercer University in Atlanta has an experimental learning program through which college credit can be obtained for life experience. According to Laurie Taylor, adult admissions counselor, Mercer defines a "non-traditional student" as anyone who has been out of school five years or longer. The average age of a Mercer student is 27, she said, and about half are considered non-traditional.

In addition to the usual services such as career planning, colleges often provide special counseling for non-traditional students. Agnes Scott has a support group for Return to College students that meets once a week. Kennesaw College in Marietta, Ga., is providing help to students through a newly organized group called SOTA, Students Over the Traditional Age.

SOTA's organizer, Kathleen Gilbea, said she borrowed the name of the organization from "a small university in Florida." Because she "liked the terminology and the idea," Ms. Gilbea started a group at Kennesaw. SOTA consists of about 16 women who regularly get together and plan projects, she said.

"The faculty and administration are involved in SOTA," said Ms. Gilbea, "and they're excited about drawing in more non-traditional students."

Ms. Gilbea, who along with Dr. Grace Galliano, a psychologist, conducted a study on non-traditional students at Kennesaw, said they found the overall grade point average of the older student "far exceeds the norm."

Fifty-four percent of the survey respondents said they were going back to school so they could seek paid employment. A large percentage of the respondents reported "a tremendous increase in self-satisfaction, better self-image and an increase in self-confidence," Ms. Gilbea said.

Elizabeth Moye, assistant dean of Agnes Scott and the Return to College program advisor, says a typical characteristic found among older students is their determination.

"They are very persistent and determined to get an education, they generally tend to be strong students and many go on to graduate school," she said. "The faculty is proud to have them here on campus because they bring an extra dimension to the college."

Bible Translators Say Time Is Short, Job Difficult

By CANDEE WILDE

WAXHAW, N.C. (UPI) — They call themselves "servants of the hidden people" and their goal is to translate the New Testament into all 5,000 languages spoken around the world before the turn of the century.

Time is short and the task is gargantuan.

"Of the 5,103 known living languages in the world we estimate 2,654 have a positive need of Bible translation," said Bill Lambright, who recently returned to North Carolina from a missionary post.

The 4,500 members of Wycliffe Bible Translators, Inc. — named after John Wycliffe who first translated the Bible into English in the fourteenth century — insist they are not typical missionaries.

Stationed in 32 countries around the world, the translators often have to formulate the first written version of a primitive tongue and teach it to the tribespeople before a Bible can be printed.

"We're servants of the hidden people. People whose language has never been written down, who have largely been ignored because they have not kept pace, because they are isolated," Lambright said.

Translators currently are working on 830 languages around the world. Most of them — about 730 teams — are from Wycliffe, Lambright said.

Although the translators work in remote and primitive parts of the world their task is made simpler with use of 20th century technology — including airplanes, computers and a sophisticated communications network.

For example, a recent linguistic breakthrough, called "computer assisted dialect adaptation" is reducing man hours by using a completed translation to facilitate work in another, similar language.

Translators reach their remote destinations — including regions of Sudan, Ethiopia, Columbia, Panama and Brazil — by airplane, which are often forced to land on tiny, makeshift airstrips. Radio communication often provides their only link with civilization, Lambright explained.

Jungle Aviation and Radio Service, the technical branch of Wycliffe and the portion based in North Carolina, provides both transportation and communication facilities.

Between 80 and 100 pilots comprise what could be the most unusual "Air Force" in the world. JAARS pilots are a highly-skilled breed of missionary-aviators who regularly fly over unforgiving terrain as they locate isolated tribes, ferry translators to and from their assignments and maintain supply and communication lines.

A third portion of the Wycliffe translating endeavor, the Summer Institute of Linguistics in Dallas, Texas, conducts research and trains translators in cooperation with other Bible agencies, mission boards and government departments.

All three phases of Wycliffe were founded by W. Cameron Townsend, who began his work in 1933 in Mexico — translating the Bible for Aztec Indians who had no written language.

Townsend, who preferred to be called "Uncle Cam," died in April at the age of 85. Lambright said although their founder is sorely missed, the organization still is determined to complete its work.

"We have intensified our effort," he said. "He was a true pioneer and "alphabet museum" to its Waxhaw facility this fall. Called "Apostle of the Alphabet," it will feature samples of the alphabet from all of the world's written languages.

Money In Hides

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The top-secret skinning instructions will be revealed this week and Louisiana's alligator hunters head out into the swamps Friday to string up their stinking bait.

At dawn Saturday, Sept. 4, the month-long alligator season opens and the methodical harvest of a once-endangered species begins.

It's an efficient, sweaty, mosquito-plagued slaughter of an unlovable reptile which has the misfortune of having a hide that works up into good-looking shoes, belts or luggage.

Last season the market price topped $18 per linear foot. That meant that a six-footer brought in around $100. The price isn't likely to be as high this year, but that's guesswork.

"Nobody has any idea what the price will be," said Jimmy Good, at the George Yarborough Fur Co. in Sicily Island, La. "Any figure that is quoted would be sheerest speculation."

Alligators also have the misfortune of being fast breeders. That got them off the federal endangered list in Louisiana in 1975. Now the once-protected brutes of the bayous are fair game in Louisiana for one month of the year — just before they hole up in the mud for the winter.

Mass Murder May Produce Cooling Off Law

By ANNE S. CROWLEY
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI (AP) — If Dade County made buyers of all guns "cool off" before taking possession, as handgun purchasers must, would Carl Brown have been able to bicycle from a gun store to a machine shop and kill eight people?

Officials here, shocked by the worst mass murder in Dade history, expect to debate the question in coming weeks: should they extend the county's 72-hour waiting period for handguns to include long guns, too?

"That would be a significant step towards sanity," Miami Police Chief Kenneth Harms said Tuesday. "What happened the other day was a senseless tragedy."

The massacre spotlighted a loophole in the Dade County handgun law. Brown, a former teacher with a history of psychiatric problems, was able to carry out his weapons

Friday morning because he bought shotguns and a rifle, not handguns.

Before the morning was out, he had shot 11 people at Bob Moore's Welding & Machine Service. Police said Brown may have been headed for a junior high school to gun down others when a witness killed him.

Brown had been angry for at least a day over a $20 welding bill at Moore's shop, so he might still have committed the murders if he'd had to wait, some officials said.

"(Brown) had a continuing psychosis. I'm not sure whether, with a postponement, he would've done anything differently," said Dade County Commissioner James Redford.

"I guess if a person is deranged, they can find something to go out and kill somebody with," said Bobby Jones, director of the Metro-Dade police. "On the other hand, he should try to make it as difficult for them as possible. Why make it easy?"

Several officials noted that action on the local level might not solve anything as long as neighboring counties or even states have no such restrictions.

"He could've hooked a ride up 441 to Broward and bought a gun without a 72-hour wait even for handguns," Redford said, noting that Monroe County to the south and Collier to the west have no ordinances like that in Dade.

"All you're doing is putting local gun merchants out of business, which is not necessarily bad," he added. "But you're just increasing the business over the line."

Two Dade state representatives, Mike Friedman and Ron Silver, have announced they will ask the Legislature to impose a statewide cooling-off period during its 1983 session. Handgun control legislation was killed in committee this year.

"Maybe last Friday's carnage brought people to a new level of enlightenment," Friedman said.

Commissioner Beverly Phillips said she was sure the county commission, too, would consider some sort of proposal in coming weeks, but Harvey Ruvlin urged the panel to move carefully.

"I would rather see us approach it on a more deliberate basis rather than simply react to a horrible incident," Ruvlin said.

Harms, noting that gun control is an emotional issue, said he favors such "gun management" limits as registration and a cooling-off period. He also called for enforceable means of keeping guns out of the hands of convicted criminals and people who have unstable mental backgrounds.

Phyllis Moore, wife of the machine-shop owner, was indignant that Brown could get a weapon as easily and quickly as he did.

"He had been there many times," she said. "They must have known he was strange. It is amazing that they let him buy those guns."

The pro-gun lobby objects to any regulation as an infringement of their constitutional right to bear arms.

"It's totally ineffective and it just interferes with individual rights to own property," said gun collector Steve Massey of St. Petersburg.

"We have to be concerned about the misery inflicted in our society - the unnecessary death and maiming that occur as a result of unlimited gun ownership," countered Harms.

One county commissioner estimated that residents of crime-plagued Dade County own 750,000 handguns.

But attorney Charles Intriago, head of the Miami-based Florida Coalition to Halt Handgun Crime, said it was rare for someone to use long guns in such a crime.

"The Carl Brown situation is an aberration, statistically," Intriago said. "The FBI says 50 percent of all murders are committed with handguns, which make up only 15 to 20 percent of the overall firearm population."

Jones, Mrs. Phillips and Commissioner Barry Schreiber all agreed that a 72-hour wait shouldn't inconvenience hunters, trap shooters and other legitimate sportsmen.

"For sporting purposes, I can't think of any valid reason why you shouldn't be able to predict at least 72 hours in advance of going hunting that you're going to need a firearm," Jones said.

A cooling-off period, Schreiber said, "is not going to stop the next crime ... but not being able to get your hands on that kind of weapon at the moment could very well mitigate against crimes of passion."

"Everyone needs to rethink their position on this thing," Jones said, summing up the emotionalism of the question. "To make a safer community, sooner or later the opposing forces are going to have to meet in the middle."

In 1966, a giant coal-slag avalanche buried a school and homes in Aberfan, Wales, killing 144, including 116 children.

Florida Firm Backs Up Its 'Energy Efficient' Claim For Buildings

By TOM HILLSTROM - TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (UPI) — With virtually every new building now billed as "energy efficient," the Mad Dog Design & Construction Co. has decided to put its money where its mouth is — paying its customers' utility bills if they exceed certain levels.

Mad Dog officials believe theirs is the first such "energy guarantee" in the nation.

"It kind of makes us a joint venture partner with the homeowner," said Tom Barr, one of the firm's seven worker-owners. "We like that idea."

Mad Dog began as a collection of young carpenters and other craftsmen, many of them with post-graduate degrees, who were at first largely dismissed as a carefree group of social drop-outs.

But their patient attention to detail and the high quality of their work soon won them jobs renovating and expanding North Florida plantation mansions. Word spread and they eventually found themselves courted by bankers and others to apply their skills into building homes.

The 8-year-old firm is now developing one complex of townhouses and another featuring closely spaced houses in a village-like setting.

"We've been monitoring the energy consumption in our buildings for about three years," Barr said. The company also monitored the energy usage in comparable housing built by others. What they found were significantly lower bills in the Mad Dog houses.

From that came the confidence to offer a formal guarantee on their customers' electric and gas bills.

"We guarantee an average monthly bill no greater than $50 for two people. If it's above that, we'll pay the difference," Barr said.

Mad Dog research found that the typical two-person household in comparable Tallahassee structures has an average energy bill of about $80 a month. The $30 monthly savings, if invested at 12 percent over the 30 years of the typical mortgage would amount to about $105,000, the firm points out.

The guarantee ceiling climbs $10 for each additional person in the household. If the new owners manage to average $10 below the monthly ceiling for the year, Mad Dog will hand them a $250 bonus.

"We'd like to pay a lot of bonuses out," Barr said.

The townhouses and village houses range in size from 950 to 1,400 square feet and in price from $46,500 to about $70,000. They use gas for heat and hot water and electricity for air conditioning.

Barr said the research of energy use in Mad Dog's older houses disclosed that size differences were much less a factor than lifestyles. In developing their criteria for determining at what level to set their guarantee, the Mad Dog builders asked their old customers such questions as whether they ate out a lot or used electric clothes dryers instead of gas. Rather than turning to the high technology of the save-energy moving by installing expensive solar heating systems and the like, Mad Dog has turned to the past, resurrecting some of the architectural devices that enabled Floridians of past generations to deal with the heat and the cold.

Mainly this involves careful placement of the house to capitalize on the sun in the winter and shade and breeze in the summer. Mad Dog houses also are tightly sealed.

"It's really nothing very sleek at all. There's no magic box," said Barr, a 34-year-old Louisville, Ky., native with a degree in oceanography. "It's mainly good insulation and careful siting."

Mad Dog was among three construction companies in the Southeast cited by the federal government last year for their energy-efficient designs.

"You can't have quality without energy efficiency," Barr said. "You just can't say you have a quality building if it uses a lot of energy."

'Eye In The Sky' Gives Feelings Of Space

By JOHN DINGMAN Associated Press Writer JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — An "eye in the sky" sealed in a "gas can" will give earth-bound space fans an idea of what it is like to soar in the space shuttle.

The eye is a specially modified movie camera and the gas can is the "Getaway Special" canister that will house the camera when it orbits the earth next spring on a space shuttle flight.

The resulting film will enable planetarium visitors to lean back in their seats and get the impression they are looking out of the equipment bay, gazing at the earth below.

The project is the brainchild of the Jackson-Davis Planetarium, which will produce a 30-minute motion picture to be shown in the planetarium, and in planetariums in Tucson, Ariz., Chicago, and Reno, Nev.

They and the Jackson Planetarium have the specialized lenses which will enable them to project the 360-degree pictures on their domed screens which usually display the star shows.

Staff cinematographer Don

Warren of Jackson says the idea was born out of a previous show the planetarium did on the launch of the first space shuttle.

He says the show got rave reviews from patrons of the planetarium, who enjoyed the panoramic views of the takeoff and landing of the shuttle but asked "What's it like to be up there in space?"

Getting permission to send a camera up on the shuttle was the first problem, but he said NASA cooperation went smoothly.

The greatest obstacle was to find a way to modify a camera that would withstand the wide temperature changes in space, and the stress of gravity in takeoff and landing.

To give the feeling of being in space, Warren said, a movie camera was a necessity, and they finally hit on a new model Arriflex 35 mm. camera, similar to the ones used in professional films.

The company helped with a discount price on the camera, but many modifications will have to be made.

Every screw in the camera will have to be secured so they will not vibrate loose during takeoff of the shuttle, and snarl the camera mechanism. Then, too, the latches that hold the film magazine in place, need modification. The standard latch is fine on earth, but the stress of gravity as the huge booster lifts off might well pop off the magazine.

The lens was less of a problem, with Nikon donating an 8 mm. fisheye lens, which photographs 360 degrees horizontally, and 180 degrees vertically—a lens that almost looks behind itself.

However, it will have to be modified to fit the movie camera, since it was designed for regular 35 mm. single lens reflex photography. And the earth's atmosphere has to be removed from inside the lens.

Put it all together and then slip it into the canister, with special connections and a special top to allow the lens to peek out, and it's all set for the shuttle.

Warren said the camera will be mounted in the equipment bay of the shuttle.

Its wide angle lens will show the equipment bay, a glimpse of the control cabin where the astronauts work, and most important, out of the open doors for a view of earth.

The camera will contain color film good for about 50 minutes of filming at slow speed, six-frames per second. When it is shown in the planetarium, it will be speeded up to 24 frames per second, providing ten minutes of film.

Warren says it will be coupled with shots of the launch, astronaut training and other background material to make a 30-minute presentation.

It will take about seven months after the flight to prepare the film, which also will be distributed by NASA in 16mm and video tape.

Warren sees only one real drawback to the plan—he can't go to operate the camera himself.

Maybe someday he will go, he said. "In fact, I'd go if they told me it would be only a one way trip."

U.N. Secretary-General Trygve Lie laid the cornerstone of the permanent U.N. headquarters building in New York City on Oct. 24, 1949.

A Surface Of Many Colors

LIKE A MULTICOLORED LAWN ... The growth of algae and small water weeds on the surface of still swamp water gives the appearance of a liquid lawn with colors ranging from the black of water to green, tan, and occasionally, patches of red.

A DRAMATIC NOTE ... Tall, Spanish moss-festooned cypresses create a striking effect silhouetted against a towering summer afternoon thunderhead.

... trumpet flower (cow itch vine)

Eastern North Carolina swamps, a fragile and important link in the total complex coastal environment, are at their lushest in late summer. Several eastern North Carolina swamp areas are extensive. Many others, like the area shown in photographs on this page, are small, much reduced from their original spread, increasingly being wedged in between built up areas.

When the warm months of summer bring growing things to fruition, swamp lands literally teem with life. Motionless water supports algae and small water plants that transforms the surface into a seeming carpet of liquid lawn.

From week to week, often from day to day, coloration of surfaces change — emerald to darker green, straw to brown, and in rarer instances, pockets of red show up. Heavy headed grasses are plentiful.

Moisture loving wildflowers — button bushes, pink or white swamp mallows, arrowheads (also called swamp potatoes), cardinal flowers, and many others flourish along muddy edges of swamp water, putting forth gorgeous blooms in late July and August.

Butterflies and dragonflies abound in large numbers, displaying their exotic colors as they fly and flit across the landscape, then settle on flowers and tips of branches.

Cypress and black gum tend to predominate in swamp areas, but myrtle, maple and sweet gum also find this type of environment compatible.

Swamp areas are rewarding places to visit any time of year. But it's in the late weeks of summer that these areas offer visitors an astonishment of visual riches.

Condominiums Survive Despite Housing Setbacks

By DAVID DUGAS
NEW YORK (UPI) — The trend toward condominium or co-operative apartments goes on, feeding on the inflation and recession that clobbered the rest of the nation's housing market.

"Condominiums are doing better than the rest of the housing market," says Douglas Kleine, director of technical services and research for the Washington-based Community Association Institute. He says the main reason is that "they offer a product in a lower price range."

"Even with today's high interest rates they're still more affordable than today's family home," Kleine says.

You don't have to be in the real estate business to know all is not bright on the condo front.

The largest purveyor of condominium apartments in the United States, the Invesco company founded by Chicago's Gouletas family which includes New York Gov. Hugh Carey's wife, Evangeline, currently is awash in red ink. A Fortune magazine story on the Gouletas empire earlier this year said the company was "$20 million in arrears on mortgage payments."

Florida real estate analyst Charles Kimball recently estimated there were more than 18,000 unsold condominiums valued in excess of $1.8 billion on the market in Dade and Broward counties.

Elsewhere, however, the condo and co-op have wrought a permanent change in American home ownership.

Exorbitant prices and interest rates have made the comparatively affordable condominium a lure to newlyweds and others who a few years ago would have shopped for a house.

For those who find even economy condos more than they can afford, there are mini-condos, such as those recently built in Hayward, Calif., across the bay from San Francisco. With only 450 square feet — equivalent to one room about 21 by 21 feet — they sell for $50,000.

Elsewhere, shared ownership is helping some buyers into the condo market.

"That's certainly cropping up," says KFeine.

"Townhouses as well as condominium units are being built deliberately with two master suites for two people to buy." He cites Los Angeles, Washington and Chicago as cities where such so-called "singles units" have gained popularity.

A real estate company in the New York suburb of White Plains recently increased its sales by promoting joint-ownership of another kind — where only one of the buyers is to live in the apartment. The other chips in half the cost only as an investment, taking advantage of income tax deductions for mortgage interest and property taxes.

Under the plan, as devised by the Soling-Patent Company, the partners get together after five years and decide whether to continue the arrangement or to sell the apartment to one of the two owners or somebody else.

Similar plans have been tried in Texas, Arizona, and in the Washington D.C. area, says Kleine.

"It's not limited by most state laws and, once brokers pick up the idea, it tends to spread very quickly."

While Florida's condo coast goes begging, more modest condo and co-op units are spreading to previously unexploited parts of the nation.

"At first they tended to be along the water," says Kleine. "Florida, California, What's happened now is that they've come inland. So condominiums are quite strong in Denver, in Dallas. They're beginning to pick up in the Midwest — places like Cincinnati, Columbus, Indianapolis, St. Louis."

Metropolitan areas with the most condominium activity are Chicago, the Denver-Boulder, Colo., area; Houston and Dallas-Fort Worth in Texas; Los Angeles and San Francisco in California; the Seattle-Everett area of Washington state; Miami, Minneapolis, Cleveland, Philadelphia, Washington D.C., and New York, according to a Department of Housing and Urban Development study.

A paradox of the housing market this year is that one aspect of it — resort time-sharing — is booming in the midst of the general slump.

What makes the situation even more curious is that time-sharing in vacation condominiums is enjoying this popularity at the very time when the concept has been under a dark cloud. Put more simply, it has a poor reputation because, as occurs in a boom period in any industry, some fast-talking operators have moved into it.

While legitimate developers are satisfying the desires of thousands of Americans to live in a resort area a couple of weeks during the year, a few have gone broke and brought all sorts of headaches to purchasers. The mismanagement of facilities and some questionable promotional tactics are among other problems that have plagued reputable sellers and eager buyers alike.

Dun's Business Month says that buying an interest in a vacation condominium, usually for one or two weeks a year, is expected to swell sales to $1.5 billion this year, up 15 percent from 1981 and almost double the 1980 sales level. Some outfits entering the business in one form or another are Merrill Lynch, stock broker Thompson McKinnon, and Sears and Roebuck's Coldwell Banker, the largest real estate broker in the country.

The president of the New York State Timesharers Association, Charles Kirkwood of Shawnee Development Inc., is so concerned about some of the things that have happened in the industry that he has come up with some advice for prospective time-sharing buyers. These, he says, are the questions that should be asked:

Has the developer properly filed and registered the resort with appropriate state and local authorities?

Are the facilities complete? Promises are not enough. The recreation and other facilities should be completed before you buy.

Are your occupancy rights protected? The property should be mortgage-free or, if mortgaged, the developer should have a release provision with a "non-disturbance" clause which prevents a lender from taking away your right to use the unit.

What is the quality of the units and facilities? They may be spacious and completely furnished, but they also might be little more than converted hotel rooms without the things you need.

Do you understand about deed and non-deeded plans? With a non-deed purchase, the buyer just gets the "right to use" the property for a specified number of years, with any appreciation in value retained by the developer.

What are the maintenance arrangements? Purchasing an interval unit involves a purchase price plus a weekly maintenance charge for the weeks you occupy the dwelling during the year. The developer handles maintenance on most non-deed projects, while in deed projects, owners often get together and form their own associations to oversee maintenance and other activities.

Do you understand what time-share "exchanges" are? While you can exchange privileges with owners in different developments in other areas, it is not wise to make this a major consideration. It is best to choose a resort that will best fit your own needs over most years.

Will the developer finance your time-share purchase? Some resorts furnish financing at competitive rates and these should be compared with other means of paying for the property.

Is there a "cooling off" period in case you change your mind after you sign a contract — without penalty? Seven days are suggested.

And, finally, a very important question: Have you inspected the resort in person? Despite the millions of words that have been written and spoken on that subject, hundreds of thousands buy property of various sorts every year without ever having seen it. Don't ever, ever make that mistake.

AGRICULTURAL EXTENSION SERVICE garden clinic

Q Can I harvest and eat the peas and beans that dried on the vines? (B.N., Chocowinity)

A Yes. Many gardens have considerable quantities of dry peas and beans that are never harvested. Usually, high humidity makes it difficult to dry these on the vine, but if yours dried, it will be good to save them.

Q What can I plant for some flowers in the fall? (B.G., Sanford)

A Plant some garden chrysanthemums. You can go ahead and plant them this fall in an area that has good drainage and receives full sun. You can put them in a landscape and leave them, since many of them are perennial. Place plants 24 inches apart depending on variety. They will do their best the first year but will do well for two or three years without moving.

Q What is a "green manure" or cover crop? (W.C., Carrboro)

A Cover crops, also called green manure, are herbaceous crops plowed under while green for the purpose of enriching and adding organic matter to the soil. A cover crop can be planted in the fall between rows of fall vegetables or sown over the entire garden site where no vegetables are growing. Annual rye or ryegrass are the two cover crops most commonly used. Seed three to four pounds of annual rye or one to two pound of annual ryegrass per 1,000 square feet.

These cover crops should be planted at least one month before the first killing frost if they are to be of value in improving the soil. In addition to the benefits derived from cover crops by their using nutrients in the soil which might be leached by fall and winter rains, they also prevent erosion on sloping sites and in windy, sandy areas.

Q How deep should I plant bulbs? I've been confused by the variations and specifications of different sources. I don't want to take a garden library out with me when I plant. (L.C., Lexington)

A A good rule of thumb when planting bulbs is to plant the large ones — those one to two inches in height such as daffodils and tulips — eight to 10 inches deep. Small bulbs — those less than an inch in height such as hyacinths, crocuses, and snowdrops — should be planted four to eight inches deep. Keep your bulbs in a cool place until you plant. The vegetable crisper is ideal.

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG

Q — I recently painted a shed outside with white oil-based paint. While doing it, I rested the paint can on a brick wall that runs along our driveway. I did not notice it at the time, but a couple of days later I discovered that some of the paint from the opened can had dripped down the brick in several places. Had I found this out instantly, I would have put turpentine on the damaged area and rubbed it vigorously until the stain was removed. Now, however, considerable time has passed and I do not know whether the same treatment will work or perhaps make it worse. What do you think?

A — You should have given the stains this treatment as soon as you discovered the spilled paint. You would have had to apply more turpentine and rubbed harder than if you had been able to do this the moment the spillage occurred, but it would have been a lot easier than it is going to be now. The chances are you will have to go through this procedure five or six times before you will see results. If this still doesn't do any good, you have no choice but to use a paint remover, after which you may have to touch up the damaged areas to match the surrounding surfaces.

Q — I applied some brown oil stain to a piece of unfinished furniture a few days ago. It appeared a bit too dark, but I thought it would lighten up when it dried. It didn't. Is there any way to lighten this stain without ruining the whole job?

A — Instant action would have had quick, good results, but it now will be necessary to rub the furniture with turpentine and repeat the treatment several times. After each treatment, inspect the wood carefully and see how much it has lightened. Once you have attained the shade you want, wipe off all residue and apply a coat of sealer, which can be shellac diluted about 25 percent with denatured alcohol. The shellac can be the final finish or can serve as an undercoat for most varnish finishes. Do not buy the varnish, however, until you read the label carefully to determine whether there is any warning about not using it over shellac.

Q — I have always been told not to apply shellac or varnish in humid weather. Recently, a friend of mine told me it is all right to put on polyurethane varnish no matter what the weather. Is he right?

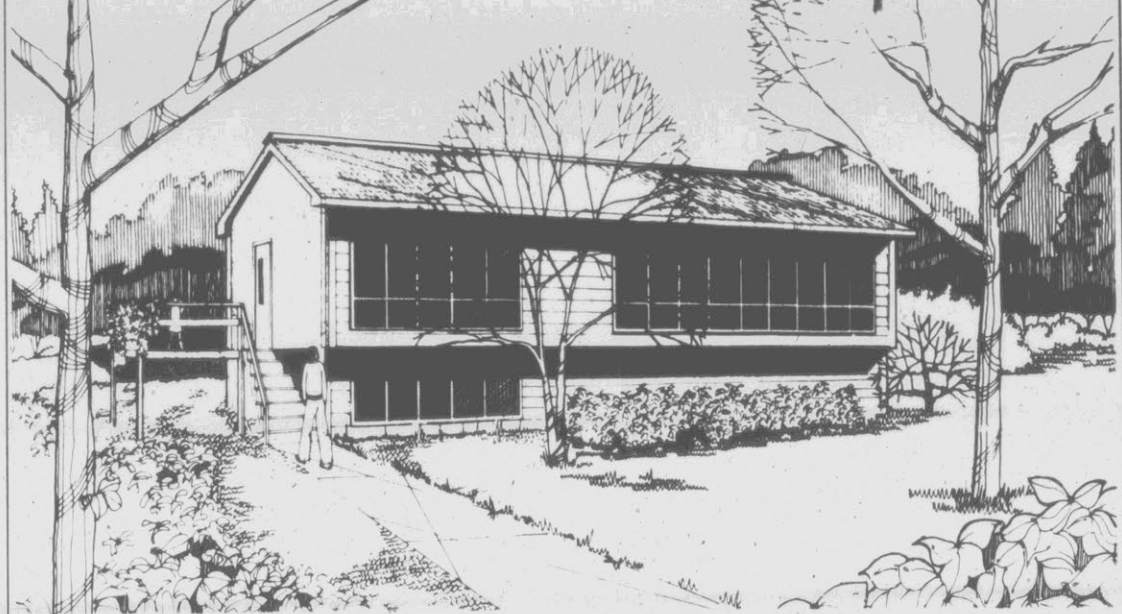

A — Most polyurethane varnishes (read the label) work well when the weather is humid. You are right about the regular shellacs and varnishes.

Q — We have an old piece of furniture we would like to refinish, but we aren't sure what the finish is and this is hampering our plans to remove it. It does not appear to be varnish, but most certainly is either lacquer or shellac. The trouble is we disagree on which it is. Is there any sure way of finding out?

A — Shellac will dissolve a bit when rubbed with denatured alcohol. Denatured alcohol will not affect the lacquer. On the off chance it might be varnish, put a couple of drops of lacquer thinner on it. If it's varnish, the thinner will make it blister or curl up or become otherwise damaged.

(The techniques of using varnish, lacquer, shellac, stain, bleach, remover, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," which can be obtained by sending 50 cents and a long, stamped self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P. O. Box 477, Huntington, NY 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column, but individual correspondence cannot be undertaken.)

PLAN YOUR HOME The SunCrest

Modular With Conventional Possibilities.

By Jerry Bishop

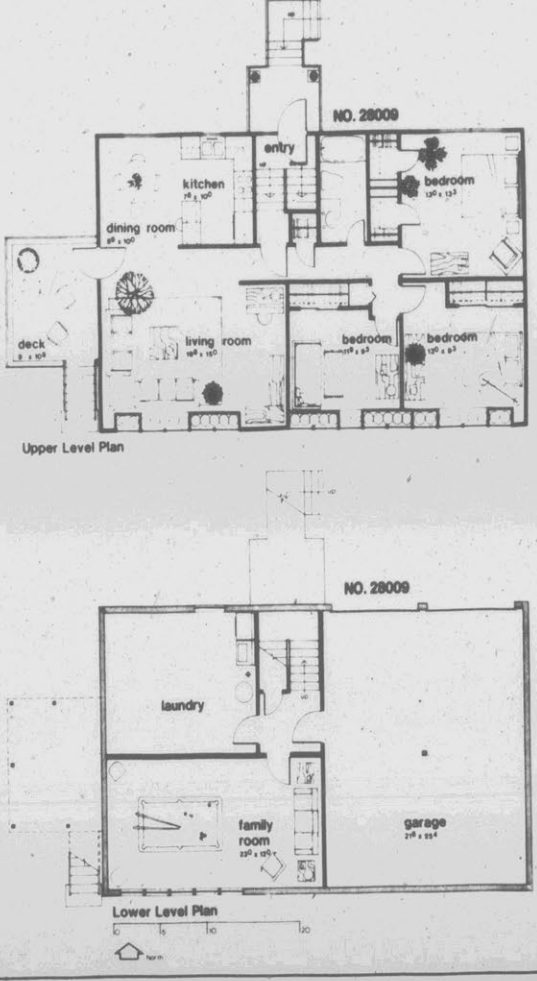

Here is a modular (factory built) home design of 1,450 square feet that is easily adapted to conventional construction. Included in The SunCrest plan are 3 large bedrooms. The master bedroom shows his and her walk-in closets. Also shown are a single bath, a combination kitchen and dining area featuring a breakfast bar, a lower level family room and a split entry. It is designed for a flat or gently sloping site with north access to a 2-car garage. An exterior deck adjoins the living and dining areas inviting outdoor living and informal entertaining. Energy conserving features include 2 x 6 lower level exterior walls and 2 x 4 upper level walls.

R-38 ceiling insulation and an air-lock entry. A south facing water wall with night-time insulation provides passive solar heating for an estimated 42% of the home's requirements in the Vandalia, Ohio climate.

In the Vandalia area, The SunCrest, in modular design would cost about $55,000 without lot. Conventionally built, it would cost an additional $10,000 based on Spring, 1980 construction costs.

Blinds Can Separate Areas

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Sometimes it takes an entirely new material or product to solve a modern interior design problem.

Some examples of this type of solution include vinyl upholstery, which introduced an era of family room rough and tumble; portable fold-out foam seating, which makes light work of providing for occasional overnight guests, and plastic laminate countertops which helped usher the kitchen into the age of easy care.

Occasionally, though, a new way of applying an old product leads to the solution. Venetian blinds present an example of this.

Once, blinds were found at the windows in many a home where they lent a crisp modern touch to a room, relieved the occupants of investing time and money in costly drapery treatments, and permitted the easy entry of light and air while guarding privacy.

Nowadays, however, blinds are showing up not only at windows but in other parts of some rooms as well — along walls in front of lighted murals to create the illusion of a view; as "doors" in front of closets or storage areas, and even in the center of a room on ceiling-hung tracks to demarcate and separate space in open-plan arrangements.

Designers have found that both horizontal and the newer vertical blinds are excellent for separating areas in places where walls would be impossible, impractical or too expensive.

The versatility of blinds was illustrated recently in a contest sponsored by a blinds manufacturer and open to regular and student members of the American Society of Interior Designers.

Altogether about 50 design ideas were submitted for judging by an independent panel in the Hunter Douglas Window Products contest.

Two of the three award winners were design students. All three winners proposed uses of blinds in

Q.—We play bridge with someone who, when it's her turn to make an opening bid, takes a long time studying her cards, then passes. It seems to us this is unfair or unethical. May we have your opinion?—Cecilia Cohen, Southfield, Mich.

(This question has been awarded the weekly prize.)
A.—There is much confusion about hesitations at bridge, and I am delighted to have the opportunity to express my views.

The Proprieties of contract bridge require that all bids and plays be made in an even tempo. Thus, if the player takes a while before passing, whether she holds one point or eleven, then she is not doing anything wrong. However, if she passes quickly with a very weak hand, but thinks for a while when she has a near opening bid and then passes, she is in contravention of the Proprieties.

Not only is she transmitting unauthorized information to partner, she is also putting her partner under a tremendous amount of pressure. Partner must bend over backward not to be influenced by the hesitation. For instance, suppose that, in third seat, you hold:

♠AJ10xx ♥K109xx ♦xx ♣x

After two passes, you might consider this hand worth an opening bid of one spade. That is a matter of bridge judgment and style. But suppose that partner, in first seat, has taken a while before passing, informing both you and the world that he or she has a near opening bid. If you now open the bidding, you have a margin of safety—you know that partner has a reasonable hand and that no harm can befall you; you might even be able to make a game. In view of the illegal information that has been conveyed to you, ethically you are required to pass.

There are many similar circumstances. Suppose that, in a competitive auction, partner takes a while before passing. When it comes round to you, you are not barred because partner hesitated. However, it would be unethical of you to make a borderline call. Any clearcut action, however, can be taken without any suggestion of impropriety.

Q.—In a recent quiz, you held:

♠83 ♥AJ9 ♦AKQJ10762

You opened one club and partner responded one diamond. You suggested a rebid of three clubs, saying that the bidding was unlikely to die there. But why take the chance? Even though Blackwood is undesirable with the minors, why not bid four no trump? If partner bids five clubs or five diamonds, pass. If he bids five hearts, you can bid either six clubs or seven clubs.—S. Bauer, Franklin Park, Ill.

A.—You answer this question yourself. After you bid Blackwood and partner shows two aces, you still don't know what to do. And look what might happen if partner shows one ace and you elect to pass five diamonds. Partner might have:

♠AKXX ♥XXX ♦KQXX ♣XX

Against five diamonds, the opponents lead a heart and, if the distribution is not favorable, you will go down. Not a very good result when seven clubs is ice cold!

Here is a sound principle to follow: Never bid Blackwood when you are void in a suit!

Life As It's Lived

Whenever I blow up a balloon, I feel a little like Dr. Frankenstein, creating a life form over which I have no control.

I know that sounds peculiar, but the more contact I have with balloons, the stronger my superstitions become. I can't help it. They don't entertain our children; they frustrate them. They either pop upon contact or wither wantonly in the entrance hall over a period of several days in full view of their grieving owners.

What's more, they menace the sanity of every parent. I have to wonder how many automobile accidents are caused by a balloon straying from the backseat and coming to rest at eye level on the steering wheel. I remember that one of Meg's closer brushes with death resulted from a balloon. We were driving down the interstate at 60 miles per hour, the grill and lights of a tractor-trailer looming in the rear window of our Toyota, when a paralyzing shriek issued from the backseat. I turned around to see Meg, aged 3, fighting against the restraints of her carseat and pointing toward the open window. "My balloon!" she wailed. "Go back and get it!"

I almost strangled her.

What's really frightening is that as worthless as balloons are, they have managed to insinuate themselves into the very fabric of our culture. Not only are they the staple of every birthday party, but doctors now give them after every visit. Banks give them. My pharmacist gives them. Personally, I wish they still gave lollipops. I'd rather take my chances with tooth decay.

But my objections hold no sway. The other day we walked into a shoestore in search of the red tennis shoes Zachary desired, and there on the floor was a green balloon, already blown up, with the shoe store's name emblazoned across it. Meg spotted it immediately.

"What's that for?" she asked the saleslady.
"The little boy who was just in here must have left it. Do you want it?"

Naturally Meg did, and naturally, Zachary did, too. He howled with fury, "Zacky need a b'oon! Gimme dat!"

The saleslady, who had the sense to realize that an ugly scene was a distinct possibility, offered Zachary a red balloon.

Meg sidled over to the saleslady. "I usually prefer red to green."

"Sit down," I told her.

She did, at least as much as she was able. Everyone knows that a balloon is no fun if it's stationary; therefore, she was forced to retrieve it several times before she knocked over the sock display. The balloon descended upon one of the hooks and popped. Meg began to sob.

"I still got mine," Zachary crowed.

And indeed he did. Now I don't know if you've ever tried to get shoes on a toddler who is chasing a balloon across the floor, but if you haven't, believe me—it's the pits. Every time we tried to hold him still, the balloon flew out of his hands, and he threw a tantrum. We finally got the shoes on when he crawled under a chair after the balloon and got stuck. He tried on three pairs in this position.

He was still furious over the indignity and Meg was still crying when the saleslady handed me the pair of shoes we had chosen. "I put some extra balloons in the sack," she said. "I thought you might need them."

No, what I really need is either an Excedrin or an exorcist.

Turbo-Charged Car Isn't Easy On Fuel

By MICHELINE MAYNARD

UPI Auto Writer

DETROIT (UPI) — Tired of autos that chug, sputter and crawl up to 60 mph? A turbo-charged car may be the answer to those performance blues.

But don't be misled by dealers who claim improved fuel economy is a benefit of the engines being produced by a growing number of foreign and domestic companies.

The main feature of a turbo car is improved horsepower and acceleration. Exhaust fumes that normally would be released into the atmosphere are instead channelled back into the engine, resulting in a big boost of power.

Many companies are installing turbo engines in cars that use diesel fuel. This makes up for the lack of power that accompany the high fuel economy of a non-gasoline engine.

Turbos were born about 30 years ago but have seen a resurgence in popularity in the 1980s as drivers search for performance cars.

The turbo market is still a small one — less than 3 percent of the market. The autos carry a relatively high price tag and float somewhere in the strata of the sporty, luxury or diesel markets.

Foreign automakers still dominate the field. Saab, one of the leaders, reported July sales up 54 percent and year to date sales up 24 percent due to the popularity of its new turbo models.

One of the most luxurious models is the Audi 5000, a mid-sized sedan that is as powerful as any sleek sports car. But Volkswagen this fall also plans to offer a turbo Rabbit, and other smaller turbos likely will be available.

On the domestic side, only General Motors Corp. currently offers turbo-charged gasoline engines on the Buick Regal and Chevrolet Monte Carlo respectively.

Chrysler Corp. will enter the field in the mid-1980s with a diesel model as will Ford, but GM is staying away from combining diesel engines with turbo charging.

Misconceptions abound concerning turbos. A recent survey found that while buyers of import cars know they are getting a car with improved performance, domestic sedan purchasers mistakenly think they will get more miles per gallon with a turbo.

The J.D. Power & Associates survey said turbo sales could be in for a big slump when drivers find out the cars' main feature is not improved fuel economy.

"In large measure, it is the matter of misguided perception that may deliver a debilitating blow to turbo-engineering as it applies to the small car market," said the J.D. Power study.

The study blames dealers "in their zeal to move turbos" for convincing drivers that turbos will improve fuel economy.

Understandably, dashed dreams of improved miles per gallon have resulted in complaints about the cars.

Celebrate With Us... And Save!

At Bob Barbour Honda, we have a lot to celebrate... and we're doing it from now through the end of August with a special sale. Come take advantage of the great deals we're offering!

We're # 1 in Pitt County.

One reason for our celebration is that we're the number one import dealer in Pitt County... with more Hondas registered this year than any other import car.

National Award: Quality Dealer.

Something else we're celebrating: Bob Barbour Honda has just been selected as one of the Nation's top 40 Honda dealers. This Quality Dealer Award is something we're particularly proud of because we've built our business on a dedication to quality since we began.

An Award Winning Facility, Too.

Our beautiful new facility (it's a year old this month) has recently won a national award for design. So we have a third reason to celebrate.

The fireworks were last week, but the celebration—and the savings continue at Bob Barbour Honda.

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY, AUG. 29, 1962

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day to show that you are thoughtful and considerate of others by truly living the Golden Rule. Also, a day to study and put into effect a course of action that will provide more abundance.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Close ties understand your aims better now and will do their utmost to help you gain them. Strive to gain personal goals.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Visit persons and make a great impression because of your special charm which is dynamic now. Show more devotion to loved one.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Get in touch with persons who can give you the data you need now. Show that you are a go-getter. Be alert to change.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Your intuition is working well now, so plan a campaign that will bring you the results you desire.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Discussing the future with a close tie will bring the results you want. Be more thoughtful of family members.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) A good day to do something nice for those who have supported you in the past. Express creative ideas.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Make plans to engage in activities you like and to be in the company of persons you respect. Take health treatments.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Engage in activities that will improve conditions around you. Show others that you have your feet squarely on the ground.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Attend the services of your choice, or engage in philosophical studies that will make your life more ideal.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Plan how to have increased abundance in the days ahead. You can easily impress others at this time.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) The social side of life can be very enjoyable today. Improve your appearance. Take time for meditation.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Inspired ideas come to you early in the day. Plan the future wisely. Don't let anyone take advantage of your good nature.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be one of those clever young people who understands what it takes to get ahead. Give the best education you can afford so the fine energy and intellect here are expended in the right direction.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

FORECAST FOR MONDAY, AUG. 30, 1962

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A time to consider just what your true talents are and the best way you can bring them to the attention of the public. Make plans to gain your most cherished aims.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Get busy at handling duties early in the day and talk over business matters with associates. Make new plans tonight.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Engage in creative work you have been concentrating upon and get good results. Sidestep a troublemaker.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You are thinking clearly now and can easily advance in career activities. Make plans for the days ahead.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Good day to obtain the information that means much to you. Avoid one who likes to waste your time.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Gain the confidence of a successful money expert and follow his instructions. Be more economical in the days ahead.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Engage in activities that please you and feel happier. You are able to communicate very well with others today.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Make plans far into the future that could bring you added success. You have creative ideas that need expression now.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Do favors for associates and gain their goodwill. Follow your intuition when dealing with others and get good results.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Attend to important duties early in the day so you'll have more time to engage in social activities.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Plan how to make valuable new contacts and then talk ideas over with experts. Be more thoughtful of others.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Make sure to keep any promises pertaining to business matters. Show more interest in outside activities.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Make sure your ideas are practical before putting them in operation. Try to cooperate more with associates.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will want to study for the future and follow through so that there can be much success in life. Give an education along artistic lines for best results. Don't force sports on your serious-minded progeny.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Clothes Suit The Harts To A Tee

The fourth season of ABC's "Hart to Hart," which will begin this fall, finds Robert Wagner and Stefanie Powers continuing their roles as Jonathan and Jennifer Hart, a jet-setting, adventure-seeking husband and wife.

The Harts have achieved success in their professional as well as in their personal relationship. He is the self-made head of a multi-billion-dollar conglomerate and she is a well-known freelance journalist.

This season, the Harts will continue to dabble in high-style danger in London, Paris, and other capitals of the world. In their roles as unofficial private detectives, they will aid a middle-Eastern prince in saving his kingdom, thwart an international art smuggling ring and solve the mysterious poisoning of Jennifer's aunt's new groom.

Like their characters, Wagner and Miss Powers have definite tastes in their private lives, which influence the clothes that they wear on the series. Both actors prefer classically tailored clothing in natural fabrics that never go out of fashion, said Cliff Challey and Diana Reynolds, the show's wardrobe supervisors.

"Stefanie prefers casual clothes that she can be comfortable in," said Miss Reynolds. "We choose things that a successful career woman would wear — tailored jackets, silk blouses and unfussy dresses. She can wear any color but her favorite is red and we buy only American designers."

Wagner's clothing is made for him. His suits are designed and fitted by an Italian tailor in Beverly Hills. The shirts are made in England and his shoes are Swiss.

"We want his clothing to reflect the fact that Jonathan is a successful, international businessman," said Challey. "Before the shooting started for this season, Wagner personally chose the fabrics and selected the designs."

One costume for Wagner, though, required very special shopping. In an upcoming episode for the new season, he impersonates a woman, Countess Von Hardigan.

"The whole idea behind the disguise was to make him look believable and not a joke," Challey said. "He was to appear as a respectable, well-to-do matron and so we treated the character as if a guest star were playing it and not Wagner."

ROBERT WAGNER and Stefanie Powers star as Jonathan and Jennifer Hart, a couple equally at home with private jets, furs, jewels and danger, in "Hart to Hart," an ABC action-adventure series to begin its fourth season this fall on Tuesdays (10-11 p.m.).

Curse Follows Filming

The events leading up to the discovery of the tomb of King Tutankhamen in 1923 are dramatized in "The Curse of King Tut's Tomb," to be rebroadcast as NBC's Sunday Night at the Movies. Aug. 29 (9-11 p.m.).

Legend says that the inscription — "Death shall come on swift wings to him that toucheth the tomb of the pharaoh" — was found on a tablet in the tomb of Tutankhamen when Howard Carter discovered the last resting place of the boy king, still undisturbed after 3,500 years.

Within a dozen years, 21 people more or less associated with the opening of the tomb, died under unusual circumstances.

So it is not surprising that the production company making "The Curse of King Tut's Tomb" was more than a little concerned when a series of unexplained near-tragic accidents and foul-ups occurred during filming.

The first manifestation of the curse came when the camera generators were impounded by Egyptian customs.

But the real tragedy occurred on the first day of shooting when Ian McShane, originally cast as Carter, almost drove his car off a 40-foot ravine. His passenger, Eva Marie Saint, jumped clear. But McShane, in attempting to leave the vehicle, caught his foot in the door and broke it in 10 places. As a result, he was replaced in the film.

"It felt as if the car was being pulled towards the edge of the ravine," McShane said. "I am sure it was the mummy's curse."

Ex-slave Fights For Freedom

Former world heavyweight boxing champion Muhammad Ali and singer-actor Kris Kristofferson made their television dramatic debuts in "Freedom Road," a four-hour miniseries that first aired in 1979. The drama will be rebroadcast in two parts on Aug. 30 and Aug. 31 (9-11 p.m. both nights) on NBC.

Based on Howard Fast's best-selling novel, "Freedom Road" begins in 1865 in South Carolina as the Civil War ends. Gideon Jackson (Ali), a former slave and Union Army soldier, returns home to the Carwell Plantation, where he is greeted by his wife, Rachel, and two sons. The mansion's owners had fled during the war, but recently liberated slaves still live in the same pre-war shacks.

Gideon's neighbors elect him as a delegate to the state Constitutional Convention, though he barely understands the significance of the position. He meets Francis Cardozo, an educated and wealthy black free man, who teaches him to read and write. Before the convention ends, Gideon addresses the body to urge freedom through education and ownership of land.

Back at Carwell, he asks sharecropper Abner Lait (Kristofferson), who has rebuffed him for years, to join in an effort to buy the land they have tended for so long. Abner eventually joins Gideon and becomes his closest ally, thereby uniting the white tenants and the former slaves.

Gideon is soon elected a state legislator, then state senator, and is ultimately appointed to serve out the remaining term of a deceased United States Senator. All the while, he and Abner struggle to buy their land, encountering trouble from white landowners, local lawmen and the Ku Klux Klan.

When they are finally successful in bidding for the purchase of the land, they celebrate with a rousing party. But the festivities are interrupted when they discover a cross burning on the lawn of the mansion. "Freedom Road" was filmed entirely in Mississippi, mostly in and around Natchez. The city is the site of many pre-Civil War mansions, existing in their original settings, maintained or restored by their owners.

MUHAMMAD ALI (right) and Kris Kristofferson star as two independent-minded men who team to keep land they have been granted at the end of the Civil War, in "Freedom Road," a four-hour miniseries to be rebroadcast on NBC Monday Night at the Movies, Aug. 30 and NBC Movie of the Week, Tuesday, Aug. 31 (9-11 p.m. both nights).

The Belmont Plantation, principal site of the film, boasts an antebellum manor surrounded by 13 acres. Partially restored now, it made a perfect Carwell, the plantation to which Gideon returned after fleeing slavery to fight with the Union Army.

Since the slave shanties of Belmont had been destroyed years ago, new ones were constructed to approximate as closely as possible the shacks of pre-Civil War years.

Rare Appearance

Academy Award winning actress Greer Garson will make a rare television appearance as guest star on an upcoming episode of "The Love Boat."

A six-time Oscar nominee and Best Actress winner for her performance as "Mrs. Miniver" in the 1942 film, Miss Garson will portray a woman who has the ability to see the future in the "Tomorrow Lady" segment.

The legendary film star garnered her Academy nominations for "Goodbye, Mr. Chips," which launched her career at MGM, "Blossoms in the Dust," "Madame Curie," "Mrs. Parkington," "The Valley of Decision," and "Sunrise at Campobello."

Ballet On Base

When Pittsburgh Pirate Johnny Ray was training to play second base, Pirate coach Al Monchak asked him, "Can you dance?" This puzzled Ray at first. "I thought Al was crazy when he asked me that," said Ray, "but playing second base is really a little like ballet."

Playing Doubles

In addition to playing his daytime role as Danny Martin on "The Doctors," actor John Pan-kow is appearing as Betty-Gerry in the off-Broadway hit "Cloud 9" at New York City's Lucille Lortel Theater.

Lawyer Defends An Accused Murderer

Telly Savalas stars as Nick Hellinger, a renowned criminal lawyer whose flamboyant life style and courtroom theatricality mask his profound integrity. In "Hellinger's Law," to be re-broadcast on The CBS Wednesday Night Movies, Sept. 1 (9-11 p.m.).

Although Hellinger's bailiwick is Philadelphia, his legal services are in demand throughout the country. When Lon Braden (James Sutorius), who works for a large syndicate-controlled conglomerate in Houston, is accused of murdering a local television newscaster, Braden's wife, Cara, immediately seeks out Hellinger.

Clint Tolliver (Rod Taylor) is also interested in having Nick defend the accused, and offers to double the lawyer's last fee, $500,000. In addition, the Justice Department wants Hellinger to defend Braden, one of their men, who has been infiltrating the syndicate since his graduation from college.

"Hellinger's Law" also stars Melinda Dillon as the prosecuting attorney, to whom Hellinger is attracted both physically and intellectually; Roy Poole as Hellinger's law partner, Judge Carroll; Janet DuBois as Dottie, their girl Friday; and Morgan Stevens as a young lawyer with whom Hellinger develops a working relationship in Houston.

The making of "Hellinger's Law" was a reunion of sorts for Stevens and Savalas. The young Tennessee actor said Savalas was the first celebrity he saw when he arrived in Hollywood.

"I was driving in the far left lane of the freeway, trying to see as much as possible," Stevens said. "The next thing I knew, a large white Rolls Royce pulled alongside, and the driver, shaved head gleaming, looked over.

"I almost wrecked the car. There was, at comparatively

ROD TAYLOR (right) portrays a front for a crime syndicate eager to engage attorney Nick Hellinger, played by Telly Savalas, in the defense of a business executive charged with murder, in "Hellinger's Law," to be re-broadcast on The CBS Wednesday Night Movies, Sept. 1 (9-11 p.m.).

close range, my first in-the-flesh movie star. Telly Savalas.

Michele Will Tell

DEAR MICHELE: I would like to know if Kelly Nelson and Hillary Bauer (both on the "Guiding Light") are going to get married in real life. PATTI GRIMES, STOKES, N.C.

TO PATTI: John Wesley Shipp and Marsha Clark are a steady duo — there have been no marriage announcements yet!

DEAR MICHELE: I would like to know if Johnny Wright is Kitty Wells' husband. Is he part of the "Johnny and Jack" that is shown on "Country Classics"? LISA STARNES, HENDERSON, N.C.

TO LISA: Kitty Wells married Johnny Wright on October 30, 1937. They have three children: Ruby (1939), Bobby (1942), and Carol Sue (1945). Johnny was on half of the popular 50's act, "Johnnie and Jack" with Jack Anglin. Jack died in an auto mishap in 1963.

DEAR MICHELE: Please tell me the age of Henry Winkler (Fonzie). THETUS SETZER, HICKORY, N.C.

TO THETUS: Believe it not, 'Fonz' will turn thirty-six on October 30th.

DEAR MICHELE: Could you tell me if Anthony Quinn is Greek or Mexican, and also is Anthony Quinn his real name? DEBORAH GONZALEZ, PEMBROKE, N.C.

TO DEBORAH: Anthony Quinn's performances in "Zorba the Greek" and "The Greek Tycoon" have led many to believe he is of Greek ancestry. However, he is the son of an Irishman named Frank Quinn, who served with Pancho Villa and Mexican Manella Daxaca. He was born Anthony Radolph Oaxaca Quinn on April 21, 1915 at Chehuahua, Mexico.

DEAR MICHELE: Can you please advise me the theme music for "Hill Street Blues"? Also, if it is available in sheet music. VIRGINIA GURLEY, ROANOKE RAPIDS, N.C.

TO VIRGINIA: The theme from "Hill Street Blues" was written by two-time Grammy Award winner Mike Post. Released as a single it shot up the charts as did his production of the Joey Scarbury single, "Believe It Or Not" (from "The Greatest American Hero"). Check local music stores for sheet music or write Mike Post in c/o "Hill Street Blues," 30 Rockefeller Plaza, N.Y., N.Y., 10020.

First Full Season

Production has begun in Hollywood on the "Joanie Loves Chachi" comedy series, premiering for its first full season in September.

Starring in the program that evolved from the "Happy Days" hit series are Erin Moran, Scott Baio, Al Molinaro, Ellen Travolta, and Art Metrano.

In the "Fonzie's Visit" episode, Henry Winkler of "Happy Days" is the special guest star as Fonzie, who unexpectedly arrives in Chicago as Joanie and Chachi are rushing off with their band for an important TV show audition. Susan Cotton also guests.

Water Wings

Fernando Lamas, who plays the debonair Caesar De Tortuga in the action-adventure series "Gavilan" says that he keeps in shape mostly because of his temperament.

"I'm Latin, and inside I just cook, my juices just go," said Lamas. "But I guess it doesn't hurt that I also exercise and swim 40 laps in my pool each day."

Regular Playmate

Shannon Tweed, Playboy magazine's current Playmate of the Year, has been signed to appear as a regular on the "Falcon Crest" series.

Nunzio: A Different Kind Of Superman

An adult with the mental capacity of a child dons a Superman costume and devotes himself to community service in "Nunzio," to be rebroadcast as The CBS Late Movie, Friday, Sept. 3 (midnight).

David Proval stars as Nunzio, who can't quite make sense out of the turbulent Brooklyn street life around him. In his working class neighborhood, he is an odd figure, a grown man in tights and a cape, who prowls rooftops on the lookout for wrongdoing.

For a job, Nunzio delivers groceries to local customers. However, he refuses tips because he feels it is inappropriate for Superman to accept gifts.

Nunzio is considered a truly heroic figure by the kids with whom he plays stickball. The hoodlums in the neighborhood consider him an easy target for gibes and physical abuse.

While roaming the streets on his one-man crusade for justice, Nunzio falls in love with dreams of marrying a beautiful girl,

Filming In Paris

On location filming the NBC World Premiere movie "The Facts of Life Goes to Paris," Lisa Whelchel, who plays Blair, has a special way of preparing for her lines.

"I like to ride the Paris Metro (the subway) and read my part," said Whelchel. "Sometimes I might stop for a French coffee and sit for hours in a small cafe near Notre Dame. It's amazing how easy it is to concentrate, even with all the distractions this beautiful city offers."

Michelle (Tovah Feldsuh), who works in a bakery.

His dreams of marital bliss are later thrown into disarray, and his mother (Morgana King) and brother (James Andronica), disturbed by the torment Nunzio regularly suffers at the hands of the street toughs, consider putting him under a doctor's care.

Mercer Career Guided

Marian Mercer realized, even at those times in her career when she felt she was being type cast, that actors have more control over their lives than they think.

In New York, she was labeled a musical comedy actress from her performances in "Little Mary Sunshine," "Greenwillow" and "Promises, Promises," for which she won a Tony.

After appearing at regional theatres in St. Louis, Seattle and San Diego, she was called a repertory actress.

Then she was a review performer, a variety show performer and a sitcom performer.

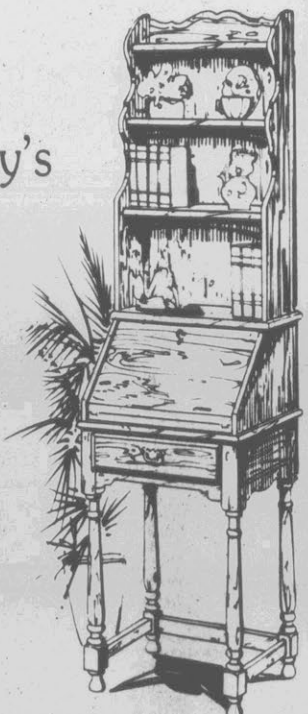

All the while, she appeared in drama, comedy, musicals, stage, theatre, television and films.

Born in Akron, Ohio, Miss Mercer attended the University of Michigan and majored in voice. After graduating, she and several college friends went to New York. She got the role in "Little Mary Sunshine" soon after her arrival.

Chairman Cole
Dennis Cole named honorary chairman for the California American Cancer Society's Great American Smokeout for 1982.

Two friendly alien children from another planet are stranded when their space ship crash-lands on Earth, in "Beyond Witch Mountain," to be rebroadcast on "Walt Disney" Saturday, Sept. 4 (8-9 p.m.) on CBS.

This sequel to "Escape to Witch Mountain" stars Eddie Albert, who was in the original film, as Jason O'Day, the "Earthing" who befriends the children. Efrem Zimbalist Jr. also stars in an uncharacteristic role for him, appearing as the story's arch villain, Aristotle Bolt.

"I've been a 'good guy' most of my acting life," said the affable former Inspector Erskine of "The F.B.I.," "so this has been a wonderful departure for me. I'm the despicable person who wants to imprison the children in order to use their considerable psychic gifts for my own selfish purposes. However, no Disney 'bad guy' is ever painted all black. How seriously can you take this Bolt fellow when the kids levitate a suit of armor to wrestle with him.

It's a wild scene that clearly shows there's more fun than fear in this character."

As you might imagine, Albert was right at home with his role. "Sure it's a fun part," the 73-year-old actor chuckled, "and I'm just picking up where I left off. In the feature we did in 1975, I was kind of tough on the youngsters to begin with, but then I softened up. Now, I start out soft."

"You know, it's times like these that I can tell my age," smiled Albert. "They tell me that football players remember old game injuries later on in years, and I know just what that means. I recall my old injuries sustained in making pictures. For instance, this landing on my shoulder and knees brings back the beating I took when I portrayed the cowardly Captain Cooney in the wonderful war picture 'Attack.' I picked up a shoulder and knee during a roughhouse scene that still comes back to haunt me when it rains or when I get pushed around like this."

Horses Vie For Riches

An outstanding international field of 14 of the finest turf racers in the world — including Perrault, the leading grass horse in North America this year, and the surprising Duplex, who holds a surprising distinction in South America — will be running in the world's richest thoroughbred horse race, the Budweiser Arlington Million, on Sunday, Aug. 29. NBC Sports will broadcast the event from 4:30-5:30 p.m., from Arlington Park in Arlington Heights, Ill. A first prize of $600,000 awaits the winner of the mile-and-a-quarter grass test.

The five-year-old English-reared thoroughbred Perrault, currently the second leading money winner (behind It's the One) in the United States, has been tabbed as the early favorite to win the race.

Having enjoyed consistent success while racing for three years in France, Perrault was shipped to the United States in the fall of 1981, and began his American turf career on an inauspicious note. In his first start at Santa Anita in November, he finished dead last in the Oak Tree Invitational, which was won by the 1981 Horse of the Year and Arlington Million victor, John Henry.

The 1982 campaign, however, has seen Perrault — who is owned by a French baron and a Swiss gem dealer — return to the gallant form he displayed on the tracks of France, where he won 5 of 16 starts and placed in the money seven additional times. He has been victorious in the Arcadia Handicap, the San Luis Rey Stakes and most recently, the Hollywood Gold Cup. The latter two races were run in 1:59.2 — just one second off the track record.

Perrault's Arlington challengers include Duplex, from Brazil, who earned his reputation as South America's leading race horse by winning eight of his 10 career starts; Al Nasr of France, who registered three first-place and two second-place finishes in Europe this year; and The Bart, who lost at the wire to John Henry in the inaugural Arlington Million, and already in '82 has recorded a track-record-breaking win in the Hialeah Turf Cup.

Other leading contenders include Lehmi Gold, who won this year's San Juan Capistrano; and the local favorite, Rossi Gold, "Chicago's Horse of the Year" for the past two years.

In last year's Arlington Million, Rossi Gold placed a disappointing eighth in a field of 12. It marked the first time that he failed to pick up a check in Arlington Park. There was, however, a good reason for his unexpectedly poor performance: internal bleeding prior to the race. It was just one of the many physical maladies he has endured. But like his previous ailments, chronic shin problems and bone chips (requiring three knee operations), the bleeding does not seem to have slowed him down.

This season, Rossi Gold is undefeated in three starts, including a startling come-from-behind victory in the Stars and Stripes Handicap at Arlington Park. "He looked beaten at the half-mile pole," his jockey, Pat Day, recalled, "but he came on really strong in the end to win it."

Strong finishes are a trademark for "King Chicago." "He's a big, strong horse," Day said. "At the start, he usually breaks with the field because it takes him quite a while to get his feet under him. But in the last three-eighths of a mile, he builds up momentum and blows the rest of the field away."

TV Chatter

By Polly Vonetes

Happy days are here again! "Empty Nest," an upcoming episode of "HAPPY DAYS" will feature three of TV's famous mothers. HARRIET NELSON of "Ozzie and Harriet" and JANE WYATT of "Father Knows Best" will join MARION ROSS, who plays Mrs. Cunningham, for the 10th season of the hit comedy series. The show is scheduled to be aired in early October.

VICTORIA PRINCIPAL'S health and exercise book, "The Body Principal," will be published by Simon and Schuster. Included will be photographs by the actress.

KENNY ROGERS swears by his watermelon diet, but now PAUL WILLIAMS informed me that he lost 40 pounds by not eating after dark. A combination of those two diets should have you super slim in no time.

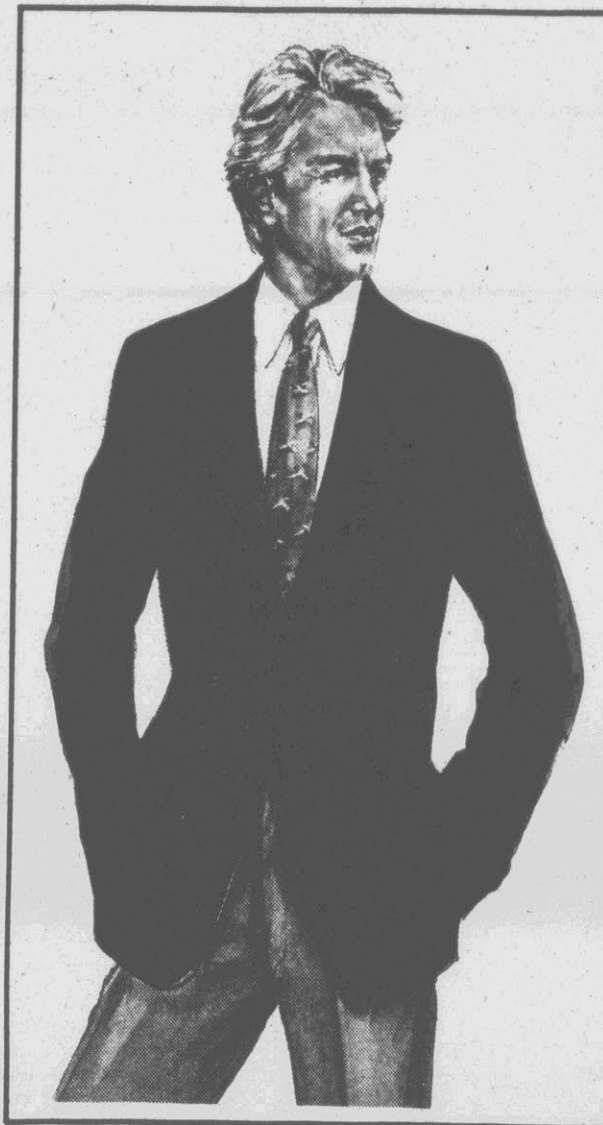

Chances are good that fans of "LAVERNE & SHIRLEY" will not be seeing too much of star CINDY WILLIAMS this season. CINDY, who recently wed BILL HUDSON, is pregnant, and reportedly does not want a busy work schedule prior to the child's birth in November.

BOBBY VINTON received a fan letter from a girl in mainland China written in Chinese — but that didn't phase BOBBY — he took his wife, DOLLY, to dinner at Ah Fong's and had Mr. Fong translate it for him.

LINDA PURL has been signed by Paramount TV to portray a divorced mother and love interest for "The Fonz" on "HAPPY DAYS."

Skilled pilot can abort takeoff.

FOR KENNETH S. HUNT, director, Office of Flight Operations, Federal Aviation Administration

How does a pilot know whether his or her aircraft has enough speed on the runway to take off safely? —C.L., Kokomo, Ind.

● Engineers compute a decision speed for each takeoff of a large aircraft. This helps the pilot determine if the aircraft can be safely stopped once it has started down the runway. In some cases, the pilot can abort a takeoff if he or she encounters a problem. After reaching the decision speed or higher, the pilot is taught to continue the takeoff, which can be done even if a critical engine fails. Knowing the decision speed and the specific problem encountered during the trip down the runway helps an experienced pilot decide if it is necessary to abort a takeoff.

FOR KIM FIELDS, Tootie on TV's The Facts of Life
What was the most embarrassing thing that ever happened to you on the show? —A.R., Tyler, Tex.

● During one scene I got the hiccups. I tried holding my breath, along with all the other remedies, but nothing worked. We redid the scene umpteen times, and I ruined it every time with my silly noises. To top it all, I gave one final, tremendous hiccup, tripped on my nightgown and fell flat on my face.

FOR DONALD T. REGAN, Secretary of the Treasury
The U.S. is said to be almost a trillion dollars in debt. To whom do we owe money? —P.M., Pittsburgh, Pa.

● Among those who hold the public debt are individuals, banks, companies and state and local governments. This debt is incurred to pay for governmental services, such as defense, education, highways and agricultural programs. The interest on it will total $115.8 billion in fiscal year 1982.

FOR ERMA BOMBECK, humor columnist/author
You must be in great demand as a party guest. How many functions do you attend a year? —G.J., Bremerton, Wash.

● Actually, I'm never the life and soul of a party because I'm not a funny lady in the flesh. I find it very hard to be amusing in person. It comes easier in print. I can't ever seem to ad lib. Instead, I spend a while thinking about what I'm going to say.

PRO Brian C. Massolo, trial lawyer, member, Criminal Trial Lawyers Association of Northern California

The unanimous-verdict rule has proven to be workable and just. Where guilt or innocence is to be determined, a method which utilizes the collective opinion of 12 individuals selected from a cross-section of the community will most effectively promote justice. To allow less than a unanimous verdict will attach the stigma of guilt to an individual, with the effect of diminishing the extra degree of scrutiny that results when unanimity is required.

PRO AND CON

Should Jurors in a Criminal Trial Continue to Render A Unanimous Verdict?

(Question submitted by Bob Soltz, Santa Maria, Calif.)

Send questions of national significance, on a postcard, to "Pro & Con," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $10 for those published.

Too many actors: A lotta bunk.

FROM THE "ASK" EDITOR
PERSONNEL PROBLEMS: Carroll O'Connor, star of Archie Bunker's Place, was at the opening of Broadway Scandals of 1928 in Times Square and compared show business of that era to what it is today: "They had fewer producers and more performers. The problem with the entertainment industry today is that we have a surplus of producers while performers go begging." . . . When actress Colleen Camp, now serving as associate producer of Anne & Joey, an upcoming movie, was told that a pretty blonde extra had not shown up for a scene about to go before the cameras, she did not panic. She was all smiles. "The best part of being a producer," she explained, "is that you can hire anyone you want. So I hired myself. I knew the part and I saved money and time." . . . PERSONAL TOUCH: A question readers frequently ask is whether celebrities answer their own phones. We can't speak for all, of course, but during the last few days, among those who lifted their own receivers were Katharine Hepburn, Issac Asimov, Doris Day, Burt Bacharach, Lynn Redgrave and James Coco . . . Which brings us to this story: When Horseless Carriage Carriers (transporters of antique and classic cars) were shipping Liz Taylor's auto, the driver of the truck called the actress's home to confirm pick-up details. He expected to talk to a secretary but, instead, got the superstar herself. He was so dizzy from the thrill, he almost fainted and hasn't been the same since. . . . PITTER PATTER: Friends of the late Mae West, who died two years ago, swear she made contact with them in a seance and gave a rundown of her activities in the hereafter. She is, they say, involved with a half-way house, and teaches new arrivals to adjust to life after death. . . . Comedian Frank Gorshin brags about his ability to master tongue twisters but admits he's thrown by the title of his latest film now playing in Europe — Den Tüchtigen Gehört Die Welt. When it's released here, later this year, it'll be called The Upper Crust . . . Stella Parton, one of 13 (four siblings, including Dolly, are entertainers), says the brood steers clear of each other's affairs: "When we get together, we never talk about our work, only family matters. It's the only way a big family can survive."

West

Parton

CON L. Brooks Patterson, Oakland County prosecutor, Pontiac, Mich.

A two-thirds majority should be sufficient. To expect the prosecution to obtain a unanimous verdict places too heavy a burden on it. And a verdict based merely on a 50-percent vote conflicts with the American tradition of justice. A two-thirds majority might have overcome the injustice of the Hinckley verdict. It also would lessen the possibility of a "hung jury." The requirement of a two-thirds majority verdict is fair and satisfies the ends of justice.

COVER

Henry Kissinger had great power. So did Nelson Rockefeller and J. Edgar Hoover. But, alas, where have all the powers gone?

The Gradual Decline And Total Collapse of Nearly Everyone

R

BY MICHAEL KORDA

Michael Korda is the editor in chief of Simon & Schuster, and the author of POWER! and Charmed Lives. His new novel, Worldly Goods, was published by Random House in June.

The power of current A.F.L. C.I.O. President Lane Kirkland (right) looks small when compared to that of former teamsters' union leader Jimmy Hoffa.

Recently, FAMILY WEEKLY asked me to draw up a list of the most powerful people in America. Alas, a sad fact quickly became apparent to me: The list of movers and shakers is not at all easy to draw up. In fact, there are very few powerful figures left in American life.

Oh, to be sure, President Reagan is powerful, in the sense that the Presidency is a powerful office. But when you look around America for powerful personalities, there's a strange vacuum. Nothing better exemplifies this than the recent resignation of Alexander Haig. When he became Secretary of State he promised to take charge, but he always lacked Reagan's wholehearted backing — and was forced to share power with all the President's men.

Only a few years ago, you could point to certain key figures who had immense personal power, and didn't hesitate to use it — for better or for worse. Henry Kissinger had great power. So did, to name a few examples, J. Edgar Hoover of the F.B.I., David Rockefeller of the Chase Manhattan Bank, Averell Harriman as éminence grise of the Democratic Establishment, Nelson Rockefeller as Governor of New York. . . .

And only a few years ago, some Southern governors ran their states like feudal estates. Senior Senate committee heads struck terror in the hearts of Presidents. Union leaders such as George Meany and Walter Reuther — national power figures — were courted by Presidents. For that matter, when he was alive, Jimmy Hoffa not only ran the teamsters, he was the teamsters.

In the 50's and 60's the media world was also full of powerful men: Henry Luce, of the Time/Life empire, the heads of the major motion picture studios (not for nothing were they referred to as "Csars") and, in television, men like William S. Paley, General David Sarnoff and Frank Stanton. . . . The list then would have been long. Everybody knew that Cardinal Spellman wielded absolute power in the Archdiocese of New York (and over much of American Catholicism). If you wanted to build anything in New York State, you had to have master builder Robert Moses on your side. If you wanted to run for office in New York, you went to pay homage to the Democratic county leaders. If you wanted to run for the Presidency of the United States, you journeyed to Chicago to seek the blessing of Mayor Richard Daley.

In business, the same was true. Henry Ford II ruled the Ford Motor Company like an autocrat. Harold Geneen's control over the I.T.T. empire was legendary. Juan Trippe ran Pan Am with an iron hand, just the way Charles Revson governed Revlon. Men like H.L. Hunt or Paul Getty personally controlled billion-dollar oil empires, and even the heads of the Mafia families were well-known figures, wielding absolute powers of life and death in their circles.

And not so long ago, teachers ran their classes; generals (or sergeants) ran the army; policemen were feared and obeyed; college presidents were respected figures, remote and awesome — and so on down the line. America was ruled, in effect, by authority figures. . . .

All that, in case you hadn't noticed, has gone. The shortage of powerful figures on the American scene is no accident. It is the result of a long process, the consequence of our fear of power and authority, the seeds of which can be found in Lyndon Johnson's decision to fight a war in Vietnam without admitting that he was doing so and in Richard Nixon's abuse of the White House. A whole generation — two generations, in fact — turned against the very idea of power.

That there were injustices and aberrations goes without saying. There is no doubt, for example, that it was wrong that women were ruled by men (and largely excluded from being authority figures themselves), that blacks had little or no power over their own lives, or that the police all too frequently abused their powers.

There is also nothing admirable in the corruption of power that led Johnson to drag the country into a war or Nixon to use the powers of the Presidency for petty, personal revenge, or the C.I.A. to act as if it were beyond the laws of the land, or major corporations to engage in price fixing, political bribery and the cover-up of product defects and safety problems. There is no such thing as a golden age when we look to the past.

However, the consequences of our flight from power are just beginning to be evident — and perhaps calamitous. The huge social and political revolution that took place in the 60's and 70's, in the name of democracy and equality, by and large succeeded in dismantling the more obvious power structures of the land. In the wake of Nixon's misuse of the Presidency, the powers of the President were severely limited. At the same time, corporations were subjected to a barrage of laws and regulations, the two great political parties were radically transformed and the powers of teachers, policemen, judges and almost all the conventional authority figures were greatly diminished.

Power, it was felt, had led to abuse. Therefore, we could do without it — not only could, but must. Everything must be subject to the will of the people, expressed in open debate. Corporations found themselves besieged by consumer activists, stockholder suits, regulatory agencies, investigative reporters, minority activists, women's liberationists. Policemen were stymied by new interpretations of the laws of evidence and the rights of criminals. Even prison administrators had to deal with a convict population that demanded its "rights," as if a prison sentence had never been intended to punish in the first place.

As a country, we went from the "Imperial" Presidencies of John F. Kennedy and Lyndon B. Johnson to the Presidency of Jimmy Carter, who seemed to feel he had no power, except that of acting as the National Sunday School Teacher. It was symptomatic of our national flight from power that, when President Carter wanted advice and counsel, he did not seek out the nation's authority figures, but went "into the heartland" to take counsel from factory workers, working mothers and college students, asking them to tell him what he should be doing.

The notion that it is precisely a leader's job to lead and a commander's job to command fell victim to our passion for suppressing authority, with the predictable result that we were unable to exercise power at all and found ourselves ignominiously bargaining for the return of our own people held hostage in Iran. Our European allies naturally concluded that since America no longer cared to exercise its power, they had better hurry to make friends with the Soviet Union. Our dependents, such as the Israelis, appalled by what they interpreted as American weakness, adopted hardline policies of their own. We abandoned "friendly" governments in Central America without a struggle, applauding the new leaders of Panama and Nicaragua despite their open anti-American policies.

Even President Reagan, who came to the office in large part because of Jimmy Carter's weakness, seems uncomfortable with the role of power figure. It is not difficult to imagine that Johnson, for all his faults and ego problems, would have known how to bribe, bully, coerce and flatter the Congress into passing the budget. He knew that the Presidency involves, among other things, arm twisting, flattery and logrolling — it is not a purely ceremonial role, or a four-year appointment to lecture the citizenry of the United States on economics or morality.

Somewhere along the line, we ceased to believe in power, and as the 1970's became the 1980's, a strange phenomenon was noticeable. As the power figures died or retired, they were not replaced.

This dearth of power figures costs us dearly. It is one of the major reasons for the decline in American industry. The modern chairman of the board no longer leads, he follows. He doesn't identify with his company's product, he apologizes for it. Again and again, committee-ruled companies make wrong decisions that are catastrophic for themselves and for the rest of the economy — the perfect example being the automobile industry, which was so busy asking people what they wanted that it failed to notice they were buying it — in the form of Hondas, Toyotas and Datsuns.

The airline industry collapsed for much the same reason — through the sheer inability to understand what the public wanted. A leader would have guessed instinctively and backed his hunch, as Henry Ford did when he introduced the Mustang, as Juan Trippe did when he committed Pan Am to buying billions of dollars worth of Boeing 747's while the plane was still on the designers' boards, as Edwin Land, founder of Polaroid, did when he decided that people would buy an instant camera, despite the fact that it had never been made and the film didn't even exist . . .

Because so many businesses have been decimated by Japanese competition (where are the American optical industry, the American steel industry and the American automobile industry, for God's sake?), American corporations looked to Japan for management role models and came away with the notion of increased worker responsibility and participation.

This is, in itself, not such a bad idea, but it is no

While former Secretary of State Kissinger stayed close to Nixon and held onto the seat of power, Haig couldn't bridge the gap between himself and President Reagan — and so resigned.

Five-year study shows:

HIGH BLOOD PRESSURE MAY BE REVERSED WITHOUT DRUGS!

Read about startling research conducted at a world-famous clinic—
Now detailed in a free special report available with your trial subscription.

If you have high blood pressure, you may know all too well "the misery of potent drugs."

That's how one distinguished international medical journal refers to some of the drugs used to control high blood pressure—and no wonder!

Side effects of such drugs include arthritis, liver disease, diabetes, heart failure, senility, mental depression, disturbed heart rhythms, angina, glaucoma. And a recent U.S. Government report on another drug, used by one million Americans, indicates that the drug has caused cancer in laboratory animals.

But now there's good news—exciting news—from one of the world's leading medical institutions.

Researchers there, treating 4,000 hypertensive men and women, succeeded in reversing 85% of the mild cases and 51% of the severe cases—all without using any drugs!

How was it done? Where did this crucial experiment take place? Why did the doctor who conducted the study hail it as "the first scientific proof of what many of us have been seeing in our offices for years?"

It's all explained in a fascinating, 40-page booklet called "The Natural Way to Control High Blood Pressure"—together with a host of other valuable insights to help you cope with blood-pressure problems:

- Noise, Sleep, and Your Blood Pressure
- Lower Your Blood Pressure with Better Diet
- Do You Have a Minute to Lower Your Blood Pressure?

substitute for leadership and the use of power. For, in fact, when we examined Japanese industry, we saw what we wanted to see, not what was there. Japanese corporations certainly draw their workers into the management process, but not into the leadership process. Most Japanese companies are run by a single, powerful, authoritarian figure—a leader, in short. He sets the goals and the policy, makes the major decisions, decides on the big risks and opportunities. The workers are then drawn into the process of implementing those decisions. Their advice is welcome on matters of cost saving, efficiency, productivity and product quality. It is not sought, however, on the corporation's decision to design or market a certain product, or to compete in a new area of the world, or to invest capital in a given way.

American corporations came away from the study of Japan with the notion that workers should help make decisions, thus further diluting the power of management, and without understanding that the Japanese system is still authoritarian at heart and paternalistic—far more so than ours ever was, even in the bad old days. Japan's success has come in large part simply because Japanese business leaders have made courageous, farsighted and daring decisions—and because they have had the courage to put long-term gains before short-term profits.

There is no magic to it. If the Detroit auto makers had decided a decade ago to take a few years of lean profits and risk everything on building smaller, more fuel-efficient and higher quality cars, they might not be where they are today. It was not that things were happening so fast that they couldn't see what was going on. The Volkswagens, Toyotas and Hondas had been around for a long time, and people didn't start buying them in large numbers all at once. It was a gradual process, which auto industry leaders ought to have observed and reacted to.

That's what power is about, after all. It isn't a process that necessarily has to hurt anybody, and it doesn't necessarily have to be hostile. Power is merely the ability to make decisions, to take risks, to lead, to get things done. Without it, nothing happens: There is stagnation.

We no longer want to be led, inspired, asked to make sacrifices or told what to do. We have given up the draft, thus severing any connection to the military for most of our young people, except the very poor who can find no other job and join the regular army. Of course, militarism and war are bad things, but Americans have always felt prepared to fight when it was necessary. Increasingly, some of us no longer feel that anything is worth fighting for, including national survival. Obedience and duty have become dirty words. If the world were a safe place, there might be some justification for this attitude. But it isn't, and probably never will be.

It is sensible to fear power, and question it. It is not sensible to abjure power. The Germans—always a bellwether in history—overthrew the Kaiser in 1918 and turned against every symbol of the power that had lost the war (or begun it, in the Allied view). Fourteen years later, terrified by the spectacle of a nation overwhelmed by inflation, unemployment and political impotence, they put Hitler in power.

There is a lesson to be learned from that. If we refuse to deal with the realities of power, sooner or later somebody will come along to impose power on us. Our own nation, while less unhappy in its history than Germany, has many examples of this. In the South, after the Civil War, "respectable people" turned away from politics, not only because of their hatred for the Reconstruction, but more importantly because the political leaders of the Old South had led the region into a war, then lost it, with catastrophic results for most Southerners. Power, therefore, passed into the hands of a new breed of politicians who founded the long, baroque tradition of Southern political corruption and bigotry.

We cannot hope to have effective leaders if we turn away from power, or refuse to let them exercise it. I am not sure we can hope to produce educated children, for that matter, without restoring at least some of the dignity, authority and power of our teachers, or that we can curb crime so long as judges refuse to exercise their power and the police are reduced to impotence by laws that carry the rights of the accused to absurd lengths. Certainly, we cannot hope to defend the country so long as we won't allow anybody to lead us, and we are unlikely to rectify the obvious and critical decline in American prosperity by trying to hobble just those entrepreneurs and business leaders who might have the vision and the courage to take the big risks that are needed to reinvigorate the American economy.

Oil shale, for example, may not be the answer to the energy shortage, but it's an essential breakthrough, and only a visionary entrepreneur is likely to attack the problem of producing it cost effectively—it will not be done by committees, or by the big oil companies, whose major objective is to raise their shareholders' dividends.

It may be that the problems of the nuclear-power industry will eventually doom it as a major energy source (though many believe it is our last, best hope), but so far the industry has not produced a single persuasive, crusading, determined leader as its spokesman. And without such a spokesman, the nuclear-power industry hasn't a hope of solving its problems — or taking the offensive against its critics.

Without the leadership of men such as Robert Oppenheimer, Edward Teller and Vannevar Bush, the atomic age would never have dawned (forget for a moment the question of whether it should have been allowed to). They led, inspired and, above all, preached, persuaded, fought.

Without the leadership of Admiral Hyman Rickover, we would have no nuclear-powered submarines — he used his power unashamedly. The space age, by contrast, produced no such leader, no single powerful advocate. The result? A space program that has been whittled down to the bare bones. To succeed, every enterprise needs a leader — one who knows the uses of power.

Those who are not willing to delegate at least some power, will eventually lose their own — and their freedom. People who cannot take orders, are in no position to give orders when they themselves are placed in positions of authority. We have gradually transformed our system of government into a town meeting of 250 million people, in which everyone has an equal right to prevent things from being done, but in which no one person can effectively control or begin anything.

It is for this reason that our problems seem so insoluble — the problem of crime, the problem of the economy, the problem of energy, all these problems are by definition insoluble so long as we shy away from giving anybody the power to solve them.

What is wrong with children being taught to respect teachers? What is wrong with people being taught to respect laws? Is there anything wrong with a President "descending into the arena" (to quote Theodore Roosevelt) to fight for his programs in Congress, instead of trying to rise above the fray as if he were afraid to lose his dignity and stature?

The great American virtue used to be getting things done. The rest of the world found us, by and large, uncouth, money minded, undisciplined, deficient in cultural tradition and given to violence and boasting, but it was generally assumed that when it came to doing things — building the Panama Canal, making steel, automobiles or airplanes, growing food or going to the moon — we were uniquely gifted. We had the resources, the money, the energy, the know-how and, above all, the powerful, ambitious, hard-minded leaders to pull all these things together and tackle great enterprises successfully.

Today it is the Japanese who know how to get things done. Our specialty has become consuming, not producing.

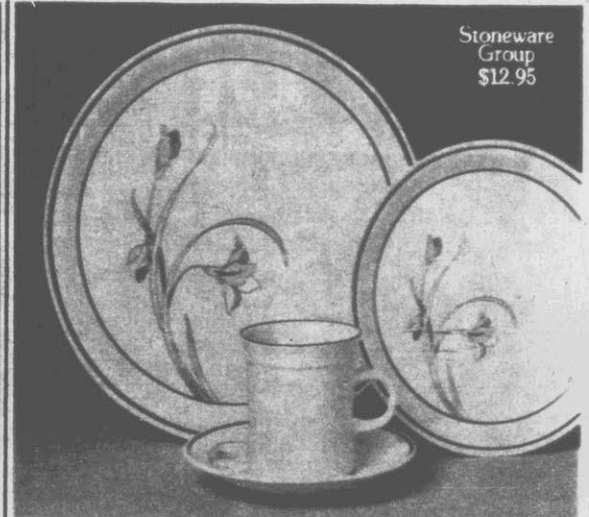

Maybe it's time to rethink power. It may not be such a bad thing after all! FW

Should You Buy Traveler's Checks?

American Express Company

Do you know him? Malden warning customers.

By Rosalyn Abrevaya

The commercial is enough to instill fear in the heart of any traveler. A couple on vacation discover that all their money and traveler's checks are missing. And because they didn't have the advertiser's brand of traveler's checks, their trip has been ruined.

Just how convenient are traveler's checks when you're on a trip — and how easy is it to replace them when they've been lost or stolen? Generally it's agreed that traveler's checks are safer than carrying a large amount of money and, if you're traveling in the U.S., a lot easier to cash than personal checks.

"As people recognize the dangers of carrying cash, it makes sense to protect yourself with traveler's checks," says Robert Gibson, president of the National Foundation for Consumer Credit. Yet, Myra Waldo, world traveler and author of Myra Waldo's Travel Guides, says she "doesn't bother much with using traveler's checks" because her credit cards and cash seem to work for her. "But if you plan to be on a long trip," she says, "or will need more than $500, then it's a good idea to get them."

The standard charge at banks and traveler's check offices is 1 percent of the total value of the checks purchased, although it can be as high as 2 percent. But at some banks there is no traveler's check charge for customers who have a certain balance, and some branches of banks offer them free to all. To find out where you can get the best rate, check with your travel agent.

Two questions travelers often raise are whether or not a given traveler's check issuer has a refund office near where they'll be traveling, and how quickly their checks will be replaced in the event of loss or theft. Most large traveler's check issuers have offices in major cities in the U.S. and abroad (ask for a list when you buy your checks) and usually they issue replacement checks within 24 hours after the loss is reported.

When you purchase your checks, you'll get a receipt or "sales advice" which indicates the amount purchased and the serial numbers on the checks. This form is a proof of purchase which you can use to replace lost or stolen checks. You're advised to keep it separate from your checks. If you don't and it's taken, you can still get a refund, says Joseph LaPeruta of Thomas Cook, but it will probably take longer than usual. Be prepared to supply the date and place of purchase.

What happens if you lose your traveler's checks on a holiday or weekend? Most issuers have toll-free, 24-hour, seven-day-a-week phone numbers for reporting loss or theft.

LaPeruta also offers an interesting tip for those traveling to foreign locales: "You will save on exchange rates and service fees if you purchase traveler's checks in foreign currency." He notes that this is most convenient for people traveling to only one country.

Before you buy your checks, try figuring out how much money you'll need for your trip. While you don't want to run short of funds in a strange place, you do want to avoid paying for unnecessary checks.

If your plans include traveling to rural areas where traveler's checks may not be readily cashable, cash some ahead of time when you're in a city, Gibson cautions. And once you've returned from a trip, he adds, it's smarter to deposit leftover traveler's checks in an interest-bearing savings or checking account than to save them for your next trip.

Waldo suggests that you purchase traveler's checks in denominations of $20 and $50. "In larger denominations, you may be left with a lot of extra foreign currency that you don't want," she says.

HEERE'S JOHNNY ANALYZED

I wanna tell ya, Johnny Carson's jokes are so political. . . . How political are they?

Well, according to the University of Florida's Herb Press, who analyzed three months of Carson's monologues for his master's thesis in communications, roughly one-third of the 515 jokes were about politics, particularly the Presidency.

Carson's second favorite target was the weather, followed by celebrities. Here, Dolly Parton was tops with nine jokes.

Press thinks Carson's political barbs serve a purpose in American society. "He acts as a catalyst in the public opinion process," Press told us. "A topic remains in the public eye as long as he jokes about it." He notes that California Senator S.I. Hayakawa recently blamed his decision not to seek reelection partly on Carson's persistent jokes about him.

And by the way, perhaps already worried about 1984, the White House, says Press, has requested a copy of his thesis.

FOR TOURISTS ON THE RUN

It's been a running gag for years (even Jimmy Carter joked about it while visiting the President of Mexico), but traveler's diarrhea, a.k.a. the Aztec two-step, Montezuma's revenge and turista, is no laughing matter. Almost half of all U.S. travelers abroad come

HMMMM . . .

A dog's life indeed. Almost half (44 percent) of the people in a recent survey said that of all family members, their pet gets the most recognition, in the form of a touch, look, word, smile, gesture or any act that says, "I know you're there." Only 18 percent answered, "the children."

Additionally, the study by the University of Maryland's Ann Cain found that 8 percent of those surveyed feel closer to their pet than to any other family member.

In a similar study at the University of Pennsylvania, down with the condition which, besides being uncomfortable, can be dangerous.

But now the good news: Plans are underway to begin testing a new vaccine against the ailment. A doctor at Washington D.C.'s Walter Reed Army Institute of Research reports initial progress toward a vaccine that would attack the offending bacteria and keep them from adhering to cells lining the intestine. They would then pass harmlessly from the body.

Ken Lubin

80 percent of respondents said they talk to their pets as people, with 28 percent confiding in them about the events of the day.

A STAR IS BRED

It almost seems as if they're rolling kid stars off an assembly line these days. Ricky (The Champ) Schroder begot Justin (Kramer vs. Kramer) Henry who begot Aileen (Annie) Quinn. Who'll be next?

"If you want your child to be a millionaire, you're better off buying a lottery ticket, but he or she can make it," says Lea Bayers Rapp, author of Put Your Kid in Show Biz. Her daughter, Ilana, 13, has already appeared in the films Ragtime and Going in Style.

Rapp began by just taking 6-month-old Ilana to a modeling agency, and she's convinced you don't need connections to land a job. "You can be a Barrymore [like darling Drew of E.T.] and still not get a part if you're not right for it." Living near New York or Los Angeles does help, but

Den Nevins

Rapp says people can travel all the way from Maine to New York for a one-day audition.

She also told us that those pushy stage mothers are disappearing and that a few have recently cost their kids parts. The new phenomenon — stage fathers. "They can be even more obnoxious than the women," notes Rapp.

READ IT AND WEEP

What does it mean when a person wants to — indeed, needs to — cry but simply can't?

Several emotional factors may be involved, Dr. Stephen Schwartz, medical director of Philadelphia's Northwestern Institute of Psychiatry, told us. He or she may have been taught to keep a stiff upper lip, to hide emotion. Or he may be so upset that he fears losing control if he begins to cry. Or he may be in such a state of shock or depression that he doesn't have the energy to cry. He could also be suffering from something psychiatrists call "isolation of affect," in which an individual pushes either the feeling of sadness or the cause of it into the subconscious and fails to link the two.

"One man came in to see me and said he felt sad, but we couldn't figure out why," notes Schwartz. "Later I asked him to come back for another session on Thursday. The man then said, 'Oh, I can't. Thursday is my mother's funeral.'"

People who can't cry may develop such symptoms as headaches, asthma, heart palpitations and stomach problems. "Emotions have to go somewhere," says Schwartz. "The human being is like a pressure cooker. He must let out steam a little at a time, or else the whole thing blows up."

An Ocean of Living Color

CUSHION MUMS - 10 for $1.98

Giant balls of flaming color to set your landscape ablaze! These hardy Michigan nursery grown root division perennials come to you in an assortment of vivid gorgeous colors . . . reds, yellows, pinks, purples, bronze, etc., as available. Provide handsome foliage spring and summer. Late summer, each plant drenches itself with masses of 1-2" blooms. A magnificent spectacle when in bloom along walks or drives, for lining borders, or accent rows.

Normally Develop To Bushel Basket Size!

REMBRANDT TULIPS

5 for $1.98

The only tulip named after the Dutch Master! Features large, single cup globe-shaped blooms. Holland imported, 10-11 cm. bulbs. Striped, streaked blooms in sparkling assortment of mixed colors as available.

FOOTBALL MUMS

3 for $3.98 One each: Red, Yellow, White

Big, brilliantly colored blooms of smashing color! These highly decorative Football Mums are easily grown in almost any soil, produce an abundance of spectacular, showy flowers. Bloom year after year without replanting. We ship potted, hardy rooted cuttings, one each red, yellow, white. Make gorgeous cut flowers, each single bloom a gigantic star-fire of vivid intense color!

CREeping SEDUM

(Dragon's Blood)

4 for $1.50

Rugged and carefree, spreads rapidly in sun or shade. The lush, semi-evergreen foliage erupts in massive clusters of star-shaped, fiery red blooms. Easy-growing, sensational in rock gardens, "trouble spots", slopes, shady areas where grass won't grow. Hardy Michigan nursery grown, plant 6-12" apart. Bloom year after year without replanting.

CREeping PHLOX-6 for $1.50

Michigan nursery grown perennial, (Phlox subulata), features dense evergreen foliage drenched with masses of gay, sparkling blooms in mixed colors. Transforms drab, troublesome areas or rock gardens into a rolling sea of color that enhances your entire landscape. Hardy 1-year plants, each plant spreads to 12 inches at maturity.

PARROT TULIPS

6 for $1.98 "Parrot's Head" on 16-20" Stalk!

These are the flamboyant gaily colored tulips with the large feathered blooms that so closely resembles a parrot's head. The colors are blends of vibrant reds, yellows and bi-colors with green shading, flaunting themselves atop an upright 16-20" stalk!

SWEET WILLIAM

5 for $1.98

Imagine an early summer flowerbed ablaze with fancy, tufted, saw-toothed blooms of brilliant, striking color . . . red, white, lavender, pink, and all the colors in between. They will spread and bloom year after year without replanting. We ship #2 Divisions (Dianthus barbatus) for planting this fall, will bloom early next summer.

QUEEN OF THE NIGHT TULIPS-6 for $1.98

Until you have seen Queen of the Night in full bloom, you have not seen tulips in their ultimate splendor! The most regal, elegant and mystical of all tulips because of its extremely deep purple color, so intensely purple it is almost black! Large, blooming size bulbs, 10-11 cm. Mail coupon today.

BRANCHING TULIPS

10 for $1.98

This is the tulip variety you see in many gardens in Holland, where lots are small because land is so valuable. From the stem of each bulb, you get 3, 4, even 5 off-shoot blooms . . . a mass of vivid, vibrant red color in a small space! Holland imported, (Praestans fuselii, 8 cm.). Bloom year after year without replanting.

CREeping MYRTLE

20 for $1.98

The pretty blue periwinkle flowers seem to float on a dense carpet of shiny evergreen foliage! Rugged and carefree, Creeping Myrtle (Vinca minor-Periwinkle), thrives even in dense shade where grass or flowers won't grow. We ship matured plant divisions, 20 plants cover 40 square feet. Blooms and spreads year after year without replanting. Excellent for exasperating scrubby spots, banks, edgings, etc. Send today.

MINIATURE ROSE PLANTS $2.98

Choice of Red or Yellow!

Yes, Miniature Roses can be made to quickly leaf out and burst into bloom indoors with many doll size roses as colorful, soft and delicate as large outdoor varieties. Seldom grow over 8-12 inches. Can be transplanted outdoors. 2 1/2" pot size plants, will grow wherever garden roses flourish. Indicate color preference on order blank.

TRAILING GARDENIA

$2.98 COMPLETE WITH HANGING BASKET

Breathtakingly beautiful, (Gardenia radicans), its large creamy white blossoms gracefully adorn the evergreen foliage that cascades down and around the hanging basket. Highly recommended for indoor culture, its perfumed fragrance fills the room as the lovely white flowers continue to bloom for as long as nine months.

if you prefer, you may take a special trial membership and receive plus shipping and handling

If you are just an occasional record or tape buyer...if you prefer not to obligate yourself to purchase eight more selections...or if you cannot find 11 selections you want right now—here's a perfect opportunity to "try out" the Club on a special trial-membership basis! Just fill in the special "Trial-Membership Application" at the right—and we'll send you ANY 6 records or tapes—ALL for only 1¢, plus shipping and handling. In exchange, you simply agree to buy as few as four selections (at regular Club prices) during the coming three years. Think of it—only four selections and you have three whole years in which to buy them. And that's all there is to it!

As a trial member, you'll enjoy all of the benefits of regular membership as described on the preceding page—but without any lengthy commitment...you may cancel at any time after buying just four more selections. So if you'd prefer to enroll now under this special "get acquainted" offer—mail the special application today, together with only $1.00 (that's 1¢ for your 6 introductory selections, plus 99¢ for shipping and handling). Read the advertisement for details on how the Club works.

Special Start-Your-Membership-Now Offer: you may also choose your first selection right now—and we'll give it to you for at least 60% off regular Club prices (only $2.99). Enclose payment now and you'll receive it with your 6 introductory selections. This discount purchase reduces your membership obligation immediately—you'll then be required to buy just 3 more selections (instead of 4) in the next three years. Just check box in application and fill in the number you want.

Here's the "Gold Box" you've seen on TV
—use it to get an extra selection

This spectacular 1¢ Sale buys hours of great music from the Columbia Record & Tape Club. To get any 11 of these records or tapes right away, simply fill in and mail the application together with your check or money order for $1.86 as payment (that's 1¢ for your first 11 selections, plus $1.85 to cover shipping and handling). In exchange, you agree to buy 8 more tapes or records (at regular Club prices) in the next three years—and you may cancel your membership at any time after doing so.

How the Club operates: every four weeks (13 times a year) you'll receive the Club's music magazine, which describes the Selection of the Month for each musical interest... plus hundreds of alternates from every field of music. In addition, up to six times a year you may receive offers of Special Selections, usually at a discount off regular Club prices, for a total of up to 19 buying opportunities.

If you wish to receive the Selection of the Month or the Special Selection, you need do nothing—it will be shipped automatically. If you prefer an alternate selection, or none at all, fill in the response card always provided and mail it by the date specified. You will always have at least 10 days to make your decision. If you ever receive any Selection without having had at least 10 days to decide, you may return it at our expense.

The tapes and records you order during your membership will be billed at regular Club prices, which currently are $7.98 to $9.98—plus shipping and handling. (Multiple-unit sets and Double Selections may be somewhat higher.) And if you decide to continue as a member after completing your enrollment agreement, you'll be eligible for our money-saving bonus plan.

10-Day Free Trial: We'll send details of the Club's operation with your introductory shipment. If you are not satisfied for any reason whatsoever, just return everything within 10 days for a full refund and you will have no further obligation. So act now!

NOTE: all applications are subject to review and Columbia House reserves the right to reject any application.

Special Start-Your-Membership-Now Offer: you may also choose your first selection right now—and we'll give it to you for at least 60% off regular Club prices (only $2.99). Enclose payment now and you'll receive it with your 11 introductory selections. This discount purchase reduces your membership obligation immediately—you'll then be required to buy just 7 more selections (instead of 8) in the next three years. Just check box in application and fill in number you want.

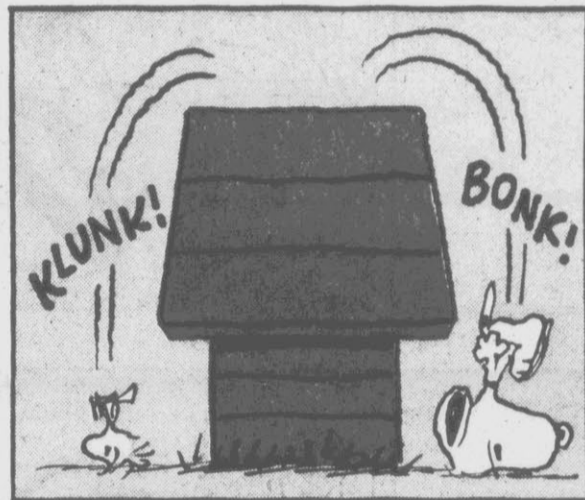

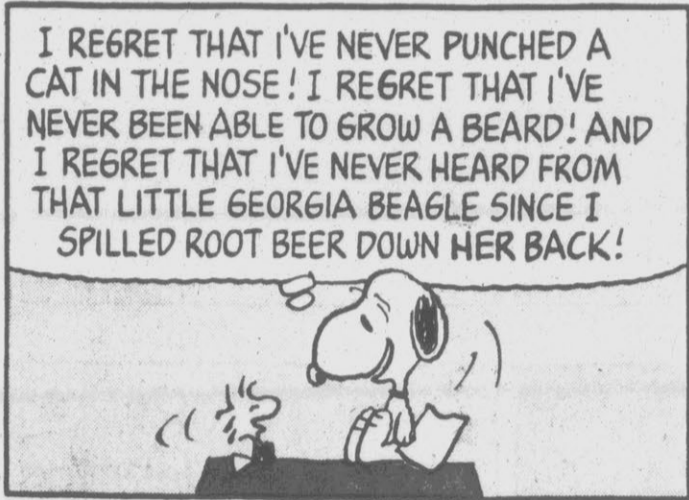

Here's the "Gold Box" you've seen on TV—fill it in and get an extra selection.

CAN YOU TRUST YOUR EYES? There are at least six differences in drawing details between top and bottom panels. How quickly can you find them? Check answers with these below.

Junior Whirl

by Hal Kaufman

● COUNTER POINT! Deli patron: "Why is your helper wearing earmuffs and a heavy overcoat?" Manager: "HE'S IN CHARGE OF COLLECTING." Rearrange cap-letter spacing for sense. Don't take this too seriously, folks.

● Murky Stats! Late in the season a baseball team has played 140 games and has won 28 more games than it lost. How many has it won?

● Name Game! Add letters to complete the names of six countries: 1. _____ way. 2. _____ key. 3. _____ den. 4. _____ ark. 5. _____ ark. 6. _____ ark.

● Riddle-Me-This! Which animal is a secret agent? The plotter-pus. Which shows do cobras attend? Snake previews. Where do jellyfish get their jelly? From ocean currants.

SQUARING ACCOUNTS

A person has $30 in the bank. He withdraws it as follows:

Wdr.	Bal.
$20 leaving	$30
15 leaving	15
9 leaving	6
6 leaving	0

Where does the extra dollar come from? Give up?

Who says the withdrawal total must equal the balance total? If he first withdrew $40, the balance would be $10, and if he withdrew that $10, the balance would be 0, for a full balance total of just $10 — not $50.

AIR BREAK! Something is troubling our life-flying friend above. Add missing lines to complete scene.

SPELLBINDER

SCORE 10 points for using all the letters in the word below to form two complete words:

Our Story: ALETA HAS BROUGHT THE RUNAWAY CART TO A HALT AND NOW SHE TURNS ON PRINCE VALIANT. HER RAGE SPILLS OUT AFTER MONTHS OF TROUBLED SILENCE AND VACANT STARES. AND WHEN SHE PAUSES, SPENT, FOR A GULP OF AIR, VAL CLUTCHES HER AND CARRIES OFF HIS QUEEN. "ALETA, ALETA, ALETA," HE WHISPERS....

"... IT HAS BEEN SO HARD." THE TWINS LINGER BEHIND. IN THE SCRIPT OF EVERY FAMILY, ONE MUST SOMETIMES PLAY ONE'S ROLE OFFSTAGE.

IN UJJAIN, GALAN AND YUAN CHEN APPEAR BEFORE THE EMPEROR. "SINCE YOU WILL NOT ADMIT YOUR CRIME," HARSHA DECLARES, "YOU WILL LOSE YOUR HEADS AT DAWN. DOES THAT LOOSEN YOUR TONGUES?" THE OLD SCHOLAR CLEARS HIS THROAT. "I AM REMINDED, EXCELLENCY, OF A WISE KING," HE SAYS.

"ONCE, WHEN TWO BROTHERS WERE ACCUSED OF THEFT, HE ARRANGED A TEST. TO ONE OF THEM HE SAID, 'IF YOU ARE INNOCENT, FIND ME THE REAL THIEF.' TO THE OTHER HE SAID, 'IF HE FAILS TO RETURN, YOU WILL FORFEIT YOUR LIFE.' THE FIRST BROTHER HAD NO LUCK BUT HE RETURNED OUT OF LOYALTY AND THE KING PARDONED THEM BOTH."

"SENTIMENTAL DRIVEL," HARSHA SNORTS. BUT PRINCESS MAYANA LEANS CLOSER. "FOR THE SACRED RING ALL STRAWS ARE WORTH GRASPING...."

"... FREE THE YOUNG ONE AND KEEP THE SCHOLAR HOSTAGE." THE EMPEROR CONSIDERS THIS SILENTLY. "VERY WELL," HE SAYS AT LAST.

by Lee Falk

WHY AREN'T YOU COMING WITH US, UNCLE WALKER? NO ROOM FOR HERO, YOU'VE GOT A FULL LOAD. GOODBYE, DIANA... OH, DARLING... ALL THESE KILLERS... YOU MADE IT LOOK SO EASY... SEE YOU AT THE TREE HOUSE? BYE BYE. SURE... YOU'RE EXCHANGING THESE KILLERS FOR THE HOSTAGES? NO COMMENT. B06Z SORRY, PRESIDENT LUAGA, NEWS LEAKED OUT. SIR, THESE KILLERS SLAUGHTERED THE IVORY-LANA AMBASSADOR... OUR CLOSEST ALLIES, RELEASING THEM FOR A PERSONAL FRIEND, DIANA PALMER... COULD DAMAGE YOU POLITICALLY, SIR. IT COULD RUIN ME. I MUST DO IT... FOR THE LIVING.

HEY, PREXY... HOW ABOUT TAKING OFF THESE CUFFS... HAVE RESPECT, YOU VERMIN! THIS IS OUR PRESIDENT! THE CHOPPER WITH THE HOSTAGES! THOSE ARE THE OTHER TERRORISTS... THE LEADER... PABLO... AS THE CAMERAS TURN... THE FLASHBULBS FLASH... HERE WE ARE.

Stooge

I LOVE LOOKING AT THE FACES IN THE CLOUDS... DID YOU EVER NOTICE THAT BIRDS LOOK LIKE DIFFERENT AIRPLANES? REALLY? YEAH, THERE GOES ONE THAT'S A DEAD RINGER FOR A PHANTOM JET.

AND THERE'S THE CONCORDE... THE OLD BEE GEE RACER! AND LOOK OVER THERE! THE B-1 BOMBER... THE GOODYEAR BLIMP!

FLASH GORDON

by Dan Barry

THROUGH A HEAVY MISSILE BARRAGE, THE EBBIE MECHANICAL ARMY KEEPS PRESSING FORWARD... FORWARD...

RAPID FIRE... ALL MISSILES! BY THE BEARD OF TAO... THEY'RE ON TOP OF US! THEY MARCH LIKE ZOMBIES! WON'T STOP! DALE!! BACK...!!

FLASH DIVES ON THE BEAST...

GOOD SHOOTING, FLASH! YOU STOPPED HIM! WHEN... IT'S OVER! THEY NEVER RETREATED... OR BROKE RANKS! NO SIGN OF CREWMEN! THEY WERE UNMANNED! SELF-MOTIVATED, PROGRAMMED ROBOTS! WITH BUT ONE PURPOSE... WAR ROBOTS, DALE! LIKE THOSE THAT ALMOST CONQUERED MONGO ONCE BEFORE! THE SAME ARMY, I'LL BET... ONLY A NEW MODEL!!
