Paratroopers Join Riot Police Defiant Poles Marching Again

By THOMAS W. NETTER
Associated Press Writer

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Thousands of defiant Poles demonstrated in Warsaw, Gdansk and Wroclaw today to mark the second anniversary of Solidarity and police fired tear gas, water cannon and what appeared to be concussion grenades at the protesters, witnesses said.

Police called through bullhorns demanding that a group marching on Warsaw University disperse, then fired tear gas when they refused. The size of the crowd was not immediately known.

Solidarity leaders who went underground with imposition of martial law Dec. 13 called for the demonstrations as a key test of whether the Communist martial law regime has managed to snuff out the union and prevent protests. The country's military leaders said demonstrations would not be tolerated.

Witnesses said police firing tear gas grenades dispersed about 5,000 people in Wroclaw but that the crowd regathered and began marching through the city 190 miles southwest of Warsaw. They said the crowd was swelled by the addition of onlookers.

Meanwhile, witnesses in Gdansk, the Baltic port where Solidarity was born, said police using what appear to be concussion grenades dispersed about 2,000 people who marched to the central railway station and chanted "Freedom!" and "Return Lech!" Lech Walesa is the interned leader of Solidarity.

The witnesses said the demonstrators raised a Solidarity banner and flashed victory signs at the station before they were routed. They chanted "Lift Martial Law!" "Free Internees," "Soldiers Go Back To Your Barracks," "Zomo (riot police) Go Back To Work," and "We Shall Win."

They also chanted, "We Want The Pope, We Want The Pope," referring to Polish-born Pope John Paul II, who has put off a visit originally scheduled for Aug. 26 to mark the 600th anniversary of Our Lady of Czestochowa, Poland's holiest icon.

The witnesses in Gdansk said about 4,000 to 5,000 people had marched from the Lenin Shipyards but the crowd diminished to about 2,000 by the time it got to the station. They said police did not use tear gas because of winds blowing in their direction, and that the crowd dispersed after police set off concussion devices which made a loud noise like firecrackers.

Syrian MIG Shot Down

By FAROUK NASSAR
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The last remnants of the PLO assembled today to leave west Beirut and Israeli jets shot down a Syrian MiG 25 near Lebanon's capital in the first clash of Israeli and Syrian aircraft since July.

About 600 guerrillas gathered for departure by ship for North Yemen after another 600 sailed from Beirut for the Syrian port of Tartus aboard the Greek ferry Paros. The departures would end the evacuations from Israeli-ringed Beirut. PLO chief Yasser Arafat sailed for Greece Monday.

Arafat's top security chief, Salah Khalaf, and chief of staff, Brig. Gen. Saad Sayel, were among those leaving by boat today.

Syrian troops also completed a two-day overland evacuation from west Beirut. This put the Syrian-PLO pullout three days ahead of the two-week schedule drawn up by the United States.

Despite the evacuation, thousands of Syrian and Israeli troops are still massed in eastern Lebanon's Bekaa Valley, considered a possible flashpoint of the war.

Associated Press correspondent Daniel Grebler reporting from the town of Rabieh, seven miles northeast of Beirut, said the falling MiG tore off the roof of a four-story apartment building and shattered a bedroom wall on the fourth floor. None of the tenants was hurt, he said.

Police told Grebler one of the two pilots bailed out and was captured near the Israeli-held mountain resort town of Aley, nine miles east of Beirut, and the other's body was trapped in the wreckage.

The Israeli military command in a communique issued in Tel Aviv, identified the plane as a Syrian MiG-25 "Foxbat" on a photographic mission in Lebanese airspace.

But the pro-Israeli Voice of Lebanon Radio said the downed plane was a MiG-23.

The radio station, run by the rightist Christian Phalange Party, said warships lying off the Beirut coast fired surface-to-air missiles at intruding Syrian planes over the capital before Israeli jets scrambled for the dogfight. It did not identify the warships.

Besides Israeli gunboats, the Beirut port is guarded by seven to nine warships of the American 6th Fleet and two French navy frigates that are part of the international peacekeeping force supervising the PLO evacuation.

It was the first Israeli-Syrian dogfight since June 9, when Israel claimed 83 Syrian jets were shot down over east Lebanon in assaults that wiped out Syrian SAM-6 anti-aircraft missile batteries stationed in the Bekka Valley. Israel said Syrian anti-aircraft missiles shot down a U.S.-made Israeli Phantom jetfighter in eastern Lebanon July 24.

Israel claims to have downed more than 80 Syrian warplanes and lost two of its own since the invasion began.

Before leaving west Beirut for Greece Monday, Arafat told reporters: "I am leaving to continue the struggle so that we can win the war."

North Korea Last Of PLO Prepare Depart Ducks Query

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — North Korea today repeated its claim that an American soldier defected last week and did not respond to a U.S. request for a chance to talk to the soldier face-to-face, the U.N. Command said.

"I once again make it clear that Pfc. (Joseph T.) White requested political asylum from our side," the senior North Korean representative to the Military Armistice Commission was quoted as saying.

Unsatisfied with the North Korean answer, U.S. military officials repeated their request for an interview with White.

"The other side's unwillingness to address the question is unacceptable," said U.S. Rear Adm. James G. Storms III, the senior U.N. Command delegate to the Military Armistice Commission. "We have asked for an interview because we are interested in having Pfc. White speak for himself."

The U.N. command had initially reported that White, 20, from St. Louis, Mo., was "apprehended" by the North Koreans in the demilitarized zone. Monday's announcement said the meeting was sought "to determine whether he is in North Korea of his own free will."

In St. Louis, White's parents said they believed their son had been taken prisoner and was not a defector.

"This is a patriotic boy," Kathleen White said. The Whites showed reporters a letter their son wrote 10 days ago to a long-time friend, Paul Plummer. It described his experiences around the demilitarized zone and gave no indication that he was unhappy or disillusioned.

The Army said White joined the service in October, 1981, was stationed in Korea in March, 1982, and had no record of medical or disciplinary problems.

British Ignore Ban On Export

GLASGOW, Scotland (AP) — A Soviet freighter began loading turbine parts today for a shipment that will make Britain the second Western European country to defy President Reagan's embargo on the use of American technology for the trans-Siberia natural gas pipeline.

my country and Britain and I think it's good and healthy," the freighter's Soviet captain, Vadim Sinitin, told reporters at Glasgow's King George V dock.

'Indicators' Up

WASHINGTON (AP) — In an encouraging new sign of economic recovery, the government reported today that its main gauge of future economic activity jumped 1.3 percent last month, the fourth monthly gain in a row.

Private economists had anticipated the latest increase in the Index of Leading Indicators, and said in advance that it would signal at least a modest recovery from the recession that has lasted for about a year.

Today's Commerce Department report said the July gain in the index followed increases of 1.4 percent in April, 0.7 percent in May and 0.3 percent in June. The index had fallen for 11 consecutive months before April.

The index, which includes statistics from 10 separate categories, is intended to forecast future economic trends. It often begins to rise several months before the economy pulls out of a recession.

Analysts inside and outside the government have said an end to the recession is at hand or very close, although they caution that the recovery is likely to be less robust than those following most economic downturns in the past.

In July, the report said, an increase in building permits for future construction and a rise in prices for raw materials were the biggest contributors to the gain in the index.

Although higher prices for raw materials — mainly petroleum — are not entirely good news, they are considered a positive economic indicator because they can signal rising demand.

Lighthouse 'Reshoaling' Itself, Declares Jones

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

"The only good news I can bring you ... is that in spite of Jim Hunt and Jesse Helms, the Cape Hatteras Lighthouse is reshoaling itself," 1st District Congressman Walter Jones told guests at a Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce-sponsored breakfast here this morning.

On a more serious note, Jones told the meeting, arranged by the chamber's political action committee, that the current congressional session is "one of the most unusual sessions I have had the pleasure of serving in."

While "most of the tax package was a pretty good package ... something we needed," Jones said all efforts by tobacco supporters to prevent the doubling of the tax on cigarettes failed.

"Tobacco has a small constituency ... four or five Southern states," with most of the nation's tobacco "being raised in one district," Jones said, adding that he was referring to his own district in North Carolina.

"We've been very fortunate to save the (tobacco) program as we know it," Jones emphasized, adding,

"It's safe for another two or three years."

Asking "What's going to happen to the economy?" Jones said, "I can't tell you." However, he pointed out that "interest rates are sliding down."

The congressman said, "I see little hope for economic recovery unless we reduce unemployment." He explained that every million people that are unemployed add "$1 billion to the deficit."

"Until such time as Congress can cope with necessary spending ... 'entitlement programs' such as Social Security and welfare programs, there is little hope for balancing the federal budget. 'Congress needs to bite the bullet and change entitlements,'" Jones said.

"I'm concerned about Social Security. I've been paying the stuff for a long time," Jones noted. He suggested, "Let's count everybody's income ... earned or unearned" in determining Social Security benefits and suggested the Social Security program was "not designed to guarantee an education to a deceased person's child."

'Smooth' On Opening

Pitt County schools had a smooth opening day Monday that went "right on schedule," according to school officials and principals.

"Everything went very smoothly," said Associate Superintendent Thomas Craft. "The students are settling down and everything has gone right on schedule."

"It was absolutely great," said J.R. Carraway, principal of D.H. Conley High School. "It was a pretty normal opening — one I'd say was the best we've had."

Carraway noted that 940 students attended Monday, 118 short of the number anticipated. "If we can pick up another 100, we'll be on target," he said.

At Ayden-Grifton, where 549 of the expected 600 students registered, principal Bill Wiggins said Monday's opening was "certainly a normal one."

"Things went just great," he noted. Wiggins expects his school's enrollment to reach 600 by Sept. 7.

Joshua Potter, principal of North Pitt High School, said first-day activities went "very well" at his school. "It's the best opening we've ever had." The principal noted that 627 out of an expected 800 students showed up Monday.

Farmville Central had a "very smooth first-day operation," according to principal Charles Long. "Several teachers commented that it was as smooth an opening as they'd ever seen."

Long said 599 students attended school Monday, although 750 were expected. "It has been my experience that we pick up many more after Labor Day," he noted.

Cuba Jamming 5 Frequencies

By The Associated Press
The Cuban government has begun jamming at least five AM radio frequencies in the United States, overriding U.S. stations with a mixture of music and propaganda, federal officials report.

The five frequencies and possibly a sixth were jammed Monday night by a Spanish-language broadcast from Cuba, said Majure Whitney, a Federal Communications Commission watch officer, stationed at the FCC's monitoring station in Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

Whitney would not say whether the interference appeared to be in retaliation for the Reagan administration's proposal to set up Radio Marti. The House-approved radio station would beam pro-Western news and information from Florida to Cuba.

However, the Des Moines (Iowa) Register said in a copyright story today that another FCC watch officer said "the Cubans specifically stated they were broadcasting to the U.S. They wanted to play tit-for-tat."

The Columbia, Md., officer, who declined to give his name, said "Fort Lauderdale has been bombarded with complaints. But we all have to give the same response; Congress made the decision."

DINING SOCIETY DECISION?

I would like to know if any decision has been made on Casablanca Dining Society cards. A Hotline item about the time the Casablanca Restaurant closed said that Leroy Cherry would let it be known soon how these cards will be honored. G.E.

Cherry says he apologizes "for the situation created by the Casablanca Dining Society promotion." He said that, at the time of the closing, funds were not available to reimburse card holders for their investment. Now, though, he said he and Joey Cherry have plans to manage a new restaurant to be named The Alamo. This restaurant, to be located at 1104 N. Memorial Drive across Highway 13-11 from the Pitt-Greenville Airport, will honor the Casablanca Dining Society cards and will open near the end of November.

Anyone wishing to contact Cherry about this matter may do so at 105 W. Greenville Boulevard or by telephoning 756-3838, he added.

First Energy Audit Lists Economy Measures

The Energy Services Department of the Greenville Utilities Commission has recently completed the first energy audit of a commercial customer under a pilot program now under consideration by the commission.

Overton's Supermarket of Greenville, concerned about high utility bills and the increasing cost of energy, has been considering ways to reduce energy consumption at its Jarvis Street store, according to Robbie Tugwell, GUC's energy services officer. Under the pilot program, GUC undertook a complete energy study to help identify the most cost-effective energy-saving measures.

According to Tugwell, the new service involves a complete inspection of the customer's facilities and a thorough analysis of previous energy use and existing rate schedules.

"Sometimes we find that the customer can reduce his annual electric bill substantially just by switching to another rate schedule," Tugwell said.

"The energy service for businesses and other commercial customers involves the gathering of detailed information," Tugwell said. "Such data as the type and number of lighting fixtures, size of refrigeration equipment, thermostat settings and hours of operation is taken and fed into a computer."

The report generated by the computer (GUC is using the services of Xenergy Inc. of Burlington, Mass.), "contains an executive summary, facility and energy profile, a full analysis of each energy saving opportunity (cost and projected savings), and financial information such as return on investment and tax credits," Tugwell explained.

Charles Overton, president of the Overton firm, described the energy report as "most informative and helpful to our firm." He added, "We are looking forward to a reduction in our energy costs as a result of this report."

Overton indicated that the report detailed 11 energy-saving measures his firm can take, with a potential first-year savings in energy costs of $7,210.

GUC officials said the commission hopes to complete at least three more full energy studies of business customers before deciding whether to offer the service on a permanent basis.

Customers interested in the service should contact Tugwell at 752-7166, extension 277.

Auxiliary Presents Group Gift

A gift of $100 was given to the Greenville Fire and Rescue Squad by the Ladies Auxiliary to the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Members expressed their appreciation to the squad for its services at its meeting Thursday evening. Financial contributions were made to VFW state programs at O'Berry Center in Goldsboro, Otis N. Brown Scholarship Fund and the Erlene Mayberry Scholarship Fund.

The VFW National Home at Eaton Rapids, Mich. also received contributions for the scholarship fund there and the Health and Happiness Fund for use by children of veterans who are living in the national home. A request from the national USO program was honored.

An engraved silver tray was presented to Margaret S. Brown for her service of 24 years as local treasurer of the group. Mattie Askew was elected trustee succeeding Dorothy Armistead, who is now serving as vice president.

Preliminary plans were discussed by Ms. Armistead to sponsor a lite-a-bike safety program for bicycle owners.

The meeting was conducted by Rosa Lee Boyd. Raye Brewer and Ms. Boyd will represent the auxiliary at the N.C. Council meeting in Winston-Salem.

Verna Mizelle, Addie Campbell, Margie Tyson and Doris Langley were meeting hostesses.

Dear Abby
Family Feeling Carried Too Far

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My husband is infatuated with our daughter-in-law. (I'll call her Louise.) This is extremely embarrassing to our son, and it bothers me a lot, too.

My husband is the type who isn't very good at disguising his emotions, and every time Louise is around you can just see the lust in his eyes. It makes me sick!

Our son is at the point now where he doesn't even want to bring Louise to our home. The poor girl does nothing to encourage the old goat, but he puts her on the spot by not letting her get away with a hello or goodbye kiss on the cheek. He demands that she kiss him full on the mouth. He also does a lot of hugging, patting and pawing. It's disgusting! I have tried to tell him to cut it out, but he denies that there is anything improper about his behavior, and insists that he thinks of her as a "daughter."

What should be done before our son punches his father out?

NO NAME, I'M ASHAMED

DEAR NO NAME: Your son should advise Louise that she does not have to tolerate her father-in-law's inappropriate behavior. Then your husband should be advised that unless he keeps his hands and mouth off his daughter-in-law, he won't be able to set eyes on her either. (If this lustful behavior is something new, perhaps his physician should be informed.)

DEAR ABBY: In the U.S., the American flag is honored and must be treated with respect. How can I explain this to my neighbors who apparently are new in this country?

They are using an extra-large American flag to cover their bird and pigeon cages! At first I thought I was seeing a flag-draped casket.

Should I just ignore it, or is there a way to tell them without causing hard feelings? We want to be good neighbors without being meddlesome.

PATRIOTIC IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR PATRIOTIC: Tell your neighbors, in a friendly and courteous way, that there is a code of etiquette for display and use of the U.S. flag. This code specifically states that the flag may not be used as a "covering." It also states that when the flag is worn, faded and in no condition to be displayed, it should be destroyed in a dignified manner—preferably burned in private. (The code can be found in the World Almanac and Book of Facts.)

DEAR ABBY: I am employed as a secretary at a fairly large company. For some time now, we have been receiving obscene telephone calls. These calls are frequent in number but have no established pattern. I am the one who answers

Votes Thrown Away

One of the saddest sights that we can image in a democracy is a stack of tens of thousands of unused ballots awaiting destruction.

For Pitt County alone there were some 180,000 paper ballots left from the two primaries earlier this summer. Several ballots were required for the first primary and approximately 155,000 were left from that. The second primary, which saw a light turnout, accounted for the remainder.

Why such a waste of ballots? The law requires that one of each ballot be available for each registered voter. Since seven ballots were required in the first primary there had to be adequate numbers of each ballot for all the registered voters.

The voter turnout tells us why there were so many left over. It was 36 percent of registered voters in June and only 8.5 percent for the second primary.

Every one of those left over ballots represented a vote that could be cast. All the races and issues were decided by less than a majority of citizens eligible to vote.

For every citizen registered to vote there is a ballot reserved for use in any given election. Every blank ballot which is thrown away represents a vote that is thrown away.

Resourcefulness Is Shown

The Town of Fountain put together a package of financing which resulted in the dedication of a $1 million waste water treatment plant last week.

The unique plant utilizes a lagoon system which will allow the water to be sprayed over an area to filter through the earth and recombine with ground water in a purer state than before it was used.

The plant involved an Environmental Protection Agency grant of $680,000, a $68,500 grant from State Clean Water Bonds and $156,500 in town funds. (Some $185,000 in town bonds were purchased by the FHA.)

Fountain now has a plant which will take care of its water treatment needs for a number of years. Town officials were resourceful in putting together the financing for the plant, particularly as we enter a time when state and federal grants for such projects are becoming more difficult to obtain.

Racial Busing's U-Turn

WASHINGTON — Mr. Emerson advised us, in a famous phrase, that a foolish consistency is the hobgoblin of little minds. In the matter of racial-balance busing, it is encouraging to note that the Department of Justice has exorcised a hobgoblin it nourished for many years. The department's new position, in brief, is that busing is a bummer.

That position was spelled out in early August during further proceedings in what must rank among the oldest and most protracted lawsuits in the history of American litigation. The case is Davis vs. East Baton Rouge Parish School Board. It has been in the federal courts for more than a quarter of a century, and it is not settled yet.

Back in September 1980, a U.S. District Court entered a summary judgment in favor of the black plaintiffs and ordered the school board to get hopping. The evidence of continued de jure segregation was fairly overwhelming. The parish was then running a system that embraced 68,000 students (60 percent white, 40 percent black) in 113 schools; but of the 113 schools, 35 were virtually all-black and 32 were virtually all-white. Twelve of the 22 schools that were all-black when the desegregation suit began in 1956 were still all-black in 1980. Of 76 new schools built since 1954, 73 were at least 90 percent all-black or all-white.

On that record, the Justice Department joined the plaintiffs in seeking summary judgment. At the time of trial, the department urged the court to order relief that remedy as the cure-all for segregation in the classroom badly miscalculated community response. In our view, that dimension of the school desegregation effort can no longer be so lightly dismissed if we are to be faithful — as we must — to the Supreme Court's command that we find 'effective' desegregation remedies, and find them 'now.'

The trouble with mandatory busing in Baton Rouge, the department contends, is that it promises neither long-range desegregation of the elementary schools nor quality education either. "A plan that erodes community support for public education is not a remedy that works, and works now." The prime interest is that of the children. "Forcing unwilling students to attend schools other than those nearest their homes imposes a heavy burden." To place such a burden on children "who are themselves innocent of any wrongdoing" is a violation of fundamental principles of equity.

In turning its back on busing, the department is by no means turning its back on the black plaintiffs in the Baton Rouge suit. On the contrary. The department's motion for a stay suggests a whole barrel of incentives and alternate remedies that would achieve a unitary system. The department holds no brief whatever for the defendant school board. Busing is the bad apple.

The temptation is strong — it is indeed irresistible — to cry, "I told you so." From the time these draconian orders began in 1971, it should have been apparent that the long-distance busing of children solely for purposes of racial balance simply would not

WASHINGTON — While Secretary of State George Shultz listened to Israeli Defense Minister Ariel Sharon on Aug. 27 extol the Lebanese invasion, in a folder on his desk were secret cables describing corrosion of the U.S. position in the Arab and Islamic worlds.

Those cables, addressed to the secretary of state from U.S. embassies, belie the rosy scenario painted by Sharon and Foreign Minister Itzhak Shamir. Shamir told the Washington Post Aug. 26 that Israel's "expulsion of the PLO from Lebanon will have a positive effect" on Arab-Israeli peace via Camp David.

A cable from U.S. ambassador Roy Atherton in Cairo written at the height of Israel's Beirut siege sharply disagreed. It quoted a key Egyptian official that the American "posture of apparent identification with Israel's objective in West Beirut is placing (President Hosni) Mubarak in an ever-tightening political corner domestically." That could doom President Reagan's move to revive the Camp David "peace process."

Atherton's soundings of high-level Egyptian opinion showed that the U.S. would "continue to suffer from the near-unanimous impression that U.S. and Israeli objectives vis-à-vis Lebanon and the PLO are virtually identical, rendering our own (U.S.) credibility as a peace partner increasingly suspect."

Secret and confidential cables that poured into Washington during the Lebanon crisis carried bad news for Ronald Reagan beyond Cairo's predictable reaction. Mubarak has been on the end of a shaky limb ever since it became clear that Egypt's peace treaty with Israel was not being followed by Israel's compliance with its Camp David pledge of "full autonomy" for West Bank Palestinians.

Other Arab states frightened by political fallout from the Lebanon affair, although less vulnerable to anti-U.S. popular feelings than Mubarak, have not been shy talking to U.S. diplomats. Tunisia's President Habib Bourguiba, one of Washington's closest Arab allies, was quoted by U.S. ambassador Walter L. Cutler on June 28 as charging that "everything points to the fact that the genocide which Israel is carrying out against the Palestinian people has the support of the U.S. government."

Cutler's warning to Washington: "The tone of this statement suggests that Bourguiba and his advisers have reached the point of considering concrete steps to demonstrate Tunisian unhappiness with U.S. policy." One possible step: withdrawal of the Tunisian ambassador from the U.S.

Tunis is the current headquarters of the Arab League, whose secretary general, a Tunisian, warned publicly Aug. 26 that the Reagan administration risks a break with the Arab world because of Israeli "aggression." Never before has Bourguiba permitted such blunt messages to be sent to Washington.

At the other end of the Arab world in the Persian Gulf emirate of Kuwait, the government was so frightened about anti-American passions that it staged anti-American rallies to let off steam. "There have been several staged events to portray Kuwait anger at the U.S. and show public distancing of Kuwait from any close association with the U.S.," ambassador Francois Dickman cabled to the secretary of state.

Dickman added a warning: Beightened tension in a Kuwaiti population including hundreds of thousands of Palestinians was putting a strain on Kuwait's "limited assets for internal security." In short, the U.S. embassy is endangered.

Dickman reported that the Kuwaiti government was so worried about PLO guerrillas wounding up in Kuwait that "strict new visa regulations" were ordered. During the height of Israeli bombing of Beirut, the government secretly "cut back on much of the gruesome footage on Lebanon for TV viewers to avoid stirring up emotions."

Warnings contained in scores of similar cables, not usually read by ordinary citizens, were unrelieved by a single note of optimism to match claims being made by Israeli leaders. One report in late June from the U.S. consulate in Jerusalem warned about escalation of Islamic radicalism — probably the Arab world's greatest and least controllable threat to the U.S.

Signed by consul general Brandon Grove, the cable expressed fear that "a major consequence of the Israeli invasion will be an increase in Islamic radicalism." Grove was talking specifically about Palestinian Arabs in East Jerusalem and on the West Bank. "The establishment of a broader, less conservative but much more active and politicized base" of Islamic radicalism on the West Bank, he said, may mark the end of "stead" fundamentalism.

Israel's current leaders scoff at alarms over anti-American emotions cooked in a radicalized Arab world. They tell Shultz that Lebanon will prove to be the greatest U.S. victory over Soviet interests since the Cuban missile crisis. It is now for Shultz to decide who is right: his own ambassadors or the government of Israel.

THIS AFTERNOON

The Fit Survive

By GILES LAMBERTSON
Greensboro Record

"The School of Hard Knocks" long has been the alma mater of the unlettered. Its alumni are numerous and proud. They frequently are as disdainful of high school and college graduates as the graduates are of them.

Into this sometimes tense social scene walk impressionable young people 18 years old who especially are transfixed by the possibilities for employment and scholastic success. They are at a crossroads. Shall I go to college? Should I go to work instead?

I'm not sure we help them make good choices. Twenty years ago, the best and brightest high school graduates were presumed to be college bound. That's where the future lay, or, rather, where the jobs of the future were expected to be won. Sputnik spawned that expectation. A college degree became, without much pretense of being anything else, an employment prerequisite.

As the decade continued, the Asian conflict led some high school seniors to talk of higher education in terms of a higher draft number. The upshot was that student bodies in those days were comprised of a curious mix of young people: Some scrambling for "a degree," which is to say for a job; some dodging military service; and, as always in any era, some resolutely pursuing an education.

Things have changed. We don't have a draft, let alone a war to dodge. And the Department of Labor tells us the next 10 years will see far more college graduates than jobs requiring such a degree. So why go to school? The answer, of course, is to be educated, to broaden one's knowledge through classroom and laboratory situations. Some young people still are prowling the halls looking for spouses, and many jobs still require a degree. But about the best reason to be in college these days is to learn for the sake of learning.

It therefore is ironic that just when higher education begins to exist again for the best and purest of reasons the means of pursuing it start to dry up. Student loan and federal subsidies that opened doors to college for as many young minds as possible are being reduced to affordable levels. Without that doorstop, some young people are afraid they will never make it into the halls of higher learning. They despair of succeeding in life.

I think their apprehension is acquired. Society as a whole seems unduly fearful of change, and of variety. Young people reflect this anxiety.

The ideal plan for life that America seems to have settled upon for all time and for every person goes something like this: 12 years in elementary and high school followed by four to eight years in college, 40 years of productive labor and, finally, 10 to 20 years of retirement. (Death is not planned and, indeed, always comes as kind of a surprise.)

To voluntarily or involuntarily detour much from that path is to invite dismay from peer and parent. It seems to me we both trivialize and complicate life by thus categorizing it so neatly.

"There is the greatest practical benefit in making a few failures early in life." Thomas Huxley, the English biologist of the 19th century, gave us that verity. He was not, however, a good example of it.

Mr. Huxley began to study medicine while a teenager and, armed with his medical degree went to sea with the Royal Navy where he found instant fame as a marine zoologist. He was famous, successful and productive all his life.

But he almost became a mechanical engineer until dissuaded from it by a relative. With his obvious intelligence, would he have been a failure as an engineer? Would the world have been poorer had Mr. Huxley decided at age 19 to join the navy as a deck hand? If he had failed in either of these vocations, would he eventually have succeeded anyway and even surpassed his actual accomplishments?

These imponderables mock the neat trajectories plotted by school counselors, parents and friends as young people consider their future. Failure and restarts never seem to be factored into the formula for successful living, and I think that's a mistake.

Mr. Huxley, who was a contemporary and disciple of Charles Darwin, would have understood what I'm saying. I think he would have couched it in terms of survival of the fittest. And fitness is more than a college education.

I saw where ole Jimmy Carter was in Fayetteville raising funds for Charlie Rose.

The group was dominated by "Ex's. There was an Ex-Senator, Ex-Gov, Ex-Congressman, and soon-to-be Ex-Gov (and probably just plain Ex).

That crowd won't ever learn. There they were crying about ole Jesse Helms again! Haven't they found out that making "Ex's" out of current office holders is Jesse's strong suit? Every time one of them has tangled with Jesse, they've run home with their tails between their legs.

Jesse is going to continue to see that North Carolina has more and more ex-liberal Democratic office holders because he knows the people of North Carolina support him!

Strength For Today

KEEP ON WEEPING
"Keep on smiling," has become the slogan of many extroverted people today. It comes to us, therefore, as a shock to read the Biblical statement, "Blessed are ye that weep now for ye shall laugh."

What good is there in weeping? Plenty. Jesus said, "Blessed are they that mourn; for they shall be comforted." What he meant was, blessed are the people who have the capacity to be sorry — sorry for their sins, sorry for the sins of the world, sorry for the misfortune in which life is constantly steeped. If you have any heart, you will weep over the sufferings of mankind. And if you do weep, the day is coming when you will laugh. You will laugh with gladness at the instances when good triumphs over evil in this world, and your joy will be fulfilled when the sin of this world is supplanted by the perfection of another world. — Elisha Douglass

Timidity In Business Sector

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — While the business sector seems to share President Reagan's approach to economics, it hasn't been doing it with investment dollars.

For most of 1982, which the administration once had hoped would be a recovery year, businesses have cut both expenditures and appropriations for future capital projects, such as new plant and equipment.

The latest evidence of timid behavior comes in the form of a Conference Board survey that found the nation's 1,000 largest manufacturers reduced appropriations for plant and equipment by 22 percent in the second quarter.

Such behavior is causing a lot of head scratching, and it has given rise to the criticism that business talks a better game than it plays. If business doesn't get on with its spending, it is said, things will be in a sorry mess. But it doesn't quite work that way. "Business today doesn't spend until it is certain the market is there. Call it timidity. Accuse it of lacking entrepreneurial zeal. The fact is, business today doesn't spend until it must. And then, sometimes, it can't afford to."

The reasons why are scattered all over the economic landscape.

To begin, less than 70 percent of manufacturing capacity is currently being utilized. In many areas, factories stand empty, in others, shifts have been discontinued. Meanwhile, the idle plant and equipment must be maintained.

Industrial production has declined in 10 of the past 11 months, reflecting a persistent and pervasive weakness in retailing. Orders are off. Profits too. Between the first quarters of 1980 and 1982 corporate profits fell 33 percent.

Perhaps worst of all, capital has been almost prohibitively expensive.

Companies that ordinarily might have offered stock to the public have had to postpone such plans because of disinterest on the part of the investing public. And some of the same companies have been blocked from borrowing by rates so high they left little opportunity for profits to be earned.

Many profitless businesses, in fact, report they have been borrowing simply to remain in existence, a practice that buys time but which could, unless the economy improves and rates fall, eventually lead to their doom.

With the recent decline in interest costs, some of these companies might have been saved. Still, they and others have clearly stated their priorities — to retire short-term debt first, and only then consider expansion.

It is for reasons such as these that most forecast economists don't see much improvement in capital spending until mid-1983 and 1984, even though it is clear that many plants have become inefficient and even obsolete.

But when the spending begins, they say, it might be very strong. Perhaps typical of forecasts now being issued is an 88-page "Business Outlook" by Merrill Lynch Economics, which includes the opinion that by 1984 capital spending "should accelerate dramatically."

The reasons for such views are many: the slow strengthening of business should have gained momentum, borrowing should be more affordable, profits and cash flow should be returning, people should be getting back to work and able to buy again, and tax incentives should be enlarging the supply of capital.

Is business timid? Perhaps. But don't you think it ought to be?

Gunman Terrorized IBM Plant Workers Before Police Arrive

RESEARCH TRIANGLE PARK, N.C. (AP) — Employees said they were forced to dodge, hide and run for their lives as a gunman opened fire and ignited smoke bombs inside the IBM Corp. complex.

One man was killed and another seriously wounded by the gunfire Monday, while three others received minor injuries as they dove helter-skelter for cover. "I turned my head and heard the shots," said Rosalyn C. Basden, 32, an administrative specialist. "He (the gunman) was coming down the aisle with the gun...He was heading right for me, and three shots zinged right by me. He was right on my back."

Mrs. Basden said she crouched behind boxes and tried to get away.

"He was going down one aisle, and I was going down another. I ran into an office, locked the door and hid behind the desk.

"I stayed on my knees, threw up and prayed to God he wouldn't come in," Mrs. Basden said. "I was hemmed in (the office) and couldn't get out any way."

Minutes later, she was able to leave after someone announced over the public address system that the gunman had left the building.

Mrs. Basden, visibly shaken, had to be taken away by wheelchair. Her husband drove her home.

Police later charged Leonard Avery, 39, a former IBM employee, with murder and seven counts of assault. Avery was arrested after authorities chased the gunman into Raleigh, about 10 miles from the IBM complex.

William H. Aycock of Durham, an IBM technician, was another employee who had a close call.

Aycock said he heard shouts and a gunshot, and the whine of a bullet could be heard as it ricocheted off a steel beam overhead. He said he dashed to a nearby office and crouched with a co-workers under a desk. Store clerk Charles Thompson of Garner was hit in the right calf and lower back by fragments or slugs that didn't penetrate. He was treated at Durham County General Hospital and released. Thompson said he heard shouts and gunfire and turned to see the gunman pointing his weapon directly at him.

"I ducked," Thompson said. After hearing about nine shots, he looked up and saw a man carrying a rifle and what appeared to be a pistol, running down a hallway. It was only then that Thompson realized he had been hit.

The only shooting victim who didn't survive was Ralph A. Glenn Jr., a 53-year-old grandfather and father of four. Witnesses said he was shot as he tried to stop the gunman from pistol-whipping a nurse.

Saddened friends said it was not surprising that Glenn, a senior line

Says Bankruptcy Step Can Delay Many Suits

A Greenville attorney whose firm is handling over 40 lawsuits against the Manville Corp., a world leader in the production of asbestos, said today that if the company's "attempt at bankruptcy is successful, it has the potential for delaying the progress" of the pending suits.

Tom Taft commented, "It is our strong feeling that the bankruptcy courts will not permit Johns Manville to remain in bankruptcy because they are not bankrupt."

Taft said that by the corporation's "own admission, they have assets after their obligations of $1,200,000,000 and that business is good and cash flow is good."

Taft said the bankruptcy proceedings initiated recently by the company are "an attempt to twist the bankruptcy laws beyond anything ever attempted in American history and I don't believe the courts will permit it."

He said his firm is representing claims in excess of $80 million against the Colorado-based corporation. Taft said that 10 of the over 40 pending lawsuits involve Pitt County clients and there are another 40 some cases being instituted by his lawfirm, mostly in eastern North Carolina, relative to product liability litigation.

Plan Taylor's Replacement

By WILLIAM M. WELCH Associated Press Writer WINDSOR, N.C. (AP) - State Rep. G. Ronald Taylor is legally required to relinquish his seat following his guilty plea to two felony counts of conspiracy and unlawful burning, the state attorney general's office says.

Meanwhile, State Rep. Edd Nye, D-Bladen, was mentioned along with Clinton businessman Murray Pool as the top contenders to replace Taylor as the Democratic Party's nominee for the 12th House District in the fall election. A party committee will select a successor to fill the remainder of Taylor's term.

Taylor pleaded guilty to soliciting and conspiring to burn down three warehouses owned by state Sen. J.J. "Monk" Harrington, a business competitor. He could receive as much as 40 years of imprisonment.

State Sen. Russell Walker, D-Randolph, the chairman of the state Democratic Party, who had asked that Taylor resign while charges were pending against him, said Monday that he does not know who will replace Taylor if he steps down.

"I haven't had any kind of communications with Rep. Taylor," he said. "Of course, he doesn't necessarily have to make a communication with me."

Andrew A. Vanore, senior deputy attorney general, said Monday that under the North Carolina Constitution a plea of guilty or a conviction on a felony charge means a legislator is no longer eligible to serve.

But Alex K. Brock, state elections director, said there was no mechanism for replacing Taylor unless he resigns.

Allen A. Bailey of Charlotte, Taylor's attorney, indicated Monday that the Bladen County Democrat plans to resign his seat and decline to run for re-election.

Taylor won renomination to the seat in the June Democratic primary, after he had been charged. Nye, who lost in a three-way primary, has been lobbying for the nomination to replace Taylor.

Edward C. Bowen of Harrells, who was nominated along with Taylor, said Nye would be the strongest candidate. But he said there was a movement by Sampson County Democrats to name Pool, who is Democratic chairman for the 3rd Congressional District.

The 12th House District includes Sampson and Bladen counties and most of Pender County.

Taylor's sentencing was delayed after special prosecutor Lester Chalmers requested that sentencing be continued until the next session of court. Chalmers said a Bertie County grand jury had returned another indictment in the case and he listed that new indictment as one reason for delaying sentencing. The next session of court is scheduled Oct. 25.

The new indictment listed Howard F. Watts Sr. He was indicted on three counts each of conspiracy to damage real property, conspiracy to burn buildings and burning buildings. The indictment charged that Watts conspired with Taylor and two others previously indicted in the case.

Chalmers said Taylor and two others indicted with him, Sandy White and Graham Franklin Bridges, agreed that Taylor would pay them $5,000 each to burn the buildings. The three buildings were destroyed April 23. Damage was estimated at $896,000.

Bridges pleaded guilty earlier to six counts of conspiracy and willful burning. His sentencing has been postponed. White has not yet been arraigned on the charges.

Chalmers also said that Taylor accepted a $1,500 bribe from federal agents at Myrtle Beach, S.C. and that three $100 bills given to Taylor in that exchange were later traced to the payment to Bridges.

Fountain said Taylor's $75,000 bond would remain intact. Taylor was instructed not to leave the state, except for business trips to South Carolina.

J. Doluglas McCullough, an assistant U.S. attorney prosecuting the federal cases, told reporters a plea bargain also is in the works concerning the federal color operation. He would not elaborate.

The six turbines are the first of 21 ordered from the company by Moscow. They include parts made by the U.S.-based General Electric Co.

Reagan is trying to halt the pipeline for several reasons. He says he wants to punish the Soviets for their support of martial law in Poland, to prevent Western Europe from becoming dependent on Soviet energy, and to deprive the Soviets of the $10 billion the pipeline is expected to earn annually.

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher has told British firms to ignore the American ban.

"I know about the row between Mrs. Thatcher and Mr. Reagan and my whole crew knows," Sinitis said. "But I also know that Mrs. Thatcher has told this company they can send the turbines...I'm just doing my job."

Sutton Traded To Milwaukee

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The Milwaukee Brewers, already owning baseball's best record, have added pitcher Don Sutton to their stable of high-priced superstars in a move designed to strengthen a team that now leads the American League East by 4½ games.

Sutton, who has a 254-192 record and 3.05 earned run average for 17 seasons, was acquired from the Houston Astros Monday night for three unidentified players. It was learned the three have spent most or all of this season in the minor leagues.

Sutton, 37, with a 13-8 record and 3.00 ERA this season, was scheduled to arrive today. Manager Harvey Kuenn said the right-hander will start one of the games in a two-night doubleheader against the Cleveland Indians here Thursday.

Because the deal was completed before Sept. 1, Sutton would be eligible for any postseason competition involving the Brewers.

"We're excited. Sutton was our prime objective all along. Not many pitchers of that caliber are available to us," said General Manager Harry Dalton, who transformed the Brewers into American League contenders when he acquired pitchers Pete Vuckovich and Rollie Fingers and catcher Ted Simmons from St. Louis before last season.

Sutton played 15 seasons for the Los Angeles Dodgers, representing them in four World Series and four All-Star games, before the Astros signed him in the 1980 free agent re-entry draft. He almost signed with the Brewers at that time before he chose the Astros.

"It was a shock. It wasn't even rumored," Sutton said in New York, where the Astros played the New York Mets Monday night. He had asked the Astros to trade him.

"But it gives me a chance to go to one of the most desirable teams possible," he said. "Of all the places I could have gone to, this is 9.99 on a scale of 10."

Dalton said negotiations started more than a month ago after the Astros placed Sutton's name on the waiver list to test the interest in him and his potential market value.

"After he cleared waivers, Houston could call anyone. I'm sure that's why they called us, and probably other contenders as well," Dalton said.

The Brewers are confident Sutton is worth the gamble despite his age and estimated $900,000-a-year salary. He has a multi-year contract that runs beyond the 1983 season, Dalton said.

"While we were negotiating, we were scouting him," Dalton said. "We got good reports."

"Normally, a team does not build around a 37-year-old pitcher," he said. "But he is an exception. He fills a particular need at this time in the Milwaukee Brewers' history."

"He's a gamer," Dalton said. "You don't win 254 games in the major leagues unless you have something beneath your shirt."

"And it's no secret he wants to win 300 games," he said. "He runs, he keeps his body in shape. He has the body of a 32-year-old. I'm sure he will do everything possible to insure that he will win 300 games. We hope he does it with the Brewers."

The Brewer players learned of the trade when the message was flashed on the scoreboard early in their game with the Seattle Mariners.

After NFL Players Meet For 10 Hours

No Strike Date Announced

CHICAGO (AP) — Union representatives from the 28 National Football League teams have given the authority to call a strike to their nine-member bargaining committee.

But after 10 hours of meetings Monday, the strike date that the National Football League Players Association had threatened was not produced. NFLPA President Gene Upshaw of the Los Angeles Raiders said that would be giving away the "game plan."

After the meeting, the union demanded that owners begin negotiating.

"There should be people at the bargaining table with authority and responsibility to bargain," Upshaw said. "We have not yet seen the owners or the commissioner. We concluded our meetings today and have 1,300 players who have signed a strike authorization."

"The player reps have given the executive committee the authority to call a strike at their discretion," Upshaw said.

Jack Donlan, who heads the NFL's Management Council, has been the owners' representative at negotiating sessions. The players have maintained he has no authority.

Ed Garvey, executive director of the NFLPA, said the meetings "demonstrate to the owners our seriousness. All 28 representatives who were here today will go back to their teams to report the actions taken. If the negotiating committee decides to call a strike, the players will walk."

"I know management will make an offer ... then will expect everyone to jump," Garvey said. "That won't happen. They (the owners) now know they face a strike."

The NFLPA has asked for 55 percent of the gross receipts brought in by the 28 teams, including television revenue anticipated from a lucrative contract recently signed with two of the three major networks. Garvey said he expects the owners to offer 20 percent; Upshaw, who announced in April that the percent of gross was "etched in stone," said the players have not altered their demand.

"We are still seeking that 55 percent of the gross; it has not been modified," Upshaw said. "I would say the preseason games will be played. As for a strike? That's up to the discretion of the executive committee. We're optimistic we can get a settlement, but realistically we will strike if the owners don't sit down with us."

Pressed as to when a strike could be called, Upshaw said, "That's our game plan. We will determine it when the time comes. We did not discuss when to strike. We don't want to put pressure on our people. We want the pressure on them."

Executive committee member Dan Jiggett of the Chicago Bears said the committee "had to hold the reins on some teams who want to go out now." Neither he, Garvey nor Upshaw would say which teams.

The players have been without a contract since July 15, when the previous agreement expired.

In a written statement, player representatives said they want to discuss five major points with the owners at the bargaining table.

The five points are:

- Immediate substantial wage hikes for virtually all

A-G Hoping To Build On Last Year's Success

One of a Series
By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

LITTLEFIELD — Ayden-Grifton touched the Promised Land of high school football last year, and the Chargers have not forgotten that feeling as they prepare to open the 1982 season.

Ayden-Grifton, which advanced to the state 3-A Eastern Finals last year, will get its season under way Friday night when it entertains Roanoke. The Redskins defeated North Pitt, 27-13, Friday night in the season opener.

"Last year we felt like we could do it, but we had to prove it," A-G coach Dixon Sauls said. "This year we've proved it and we feel more optimistic and confident."

"Having had success to build on," Sauls said, "gives you a better feeling going into the season."

The Chargers finished in a three-way tie for the Eastern Carolina Conference title last season and won a drawing to become the league's Division I playoff representative.

The Chargers defeated White Oak, 8-0, and Warren County, 14-6, before losing to eventual state champ Burlington Williams, 39-6, in the Eastern Finals. A-G ended up 10-3 last year.

Ayden-Grifton lost six starters — five of whom were all-conference selections — off last year's team. All but one — quarterback Bernard Ricciarelli — played both offense and defense.

Gone is the entire backfield: Ricciarelli, fullback Greg Jackson and halfback Cleveland Coley. Coley and Jackson, now at Garner-Webb, both rushed for over 1,000 yards.

Gone also are standout linemen Donovan Arnold and Matthew McCotter and split end-defensive back Chris Strickland. Arnold and Strickland, who led the ECC in receiving and interceptions, were both second-team All-East.

Thoughts of the past have been either been put aside or used to motivate the players for the upcoming campaign. "This is a different team," Sauls said, "with a different personality."

Still Sauls, while insisting he is not downplaying any team's changes of winning the conference title, picked two teams as the odds-on favorites. "I would look for SouthWest (Edgecombe) and Ayden-Grifton to be near the top," Sauls said. "I'd rate Farmville Central as a darkhorse right now."

Sauls has due cause for picking his club among the preseason favorites. The Chargers return seven players from last year's outstanding team. Most of those six went both ways last year. Three have changed positions for the upcoming season.

Leading the returnees are lineman Chuck Smithwick (6-0, 192 senior) and Kevin Craft (6-2, 216 senior). Smithwick is a four-year starter. Craft is in his third year as a starter.

Back for his second year as a starter are center Derrick Atkinson (5-10, 158 senior) and tight end Doug Coley (6-0, 160 junior). Atkinson is one of the team's fastest linemen, reportedly running the 40-yard dash in around 4.6.

The other side of the line will have Quentin Barrett (5-11, 170 junior) or Jeffery Hardy (5-11, 167 senior) at left guard, David Lister (6-0, 171 junior) or Morris Bell (6-4, 278 sophomore) at tackle and Quentin Warren (6-0, 166 junior) at tight end.

Tyrone Gay (6-0, 167 senior) will start at flanker, where he saw some duty a year ago. Gay will kick the PATs and he or Koonce will do the kickoffs.

Defensively, the Chargers return Craft at tackle, Coley at outside linebacker, Jarvis Koonce (6-0, 200 senior) at inside linebacker. Smithwick has moved from outside

Astros Recall J.R. Richard

HOUSTON (AP) — Pitcher J.R. Richard, continuing his comeback attempt from a near-fatal stroke in July 1980, has been recalled by the Houston Astros and the team's president says, "I would not rule out him pitching."

Richard will return to the Astros effective Sept. 1, when major league teams can increase their player limit to 40.

It marks the second straight year that Richard, once the most feared fastball pitcher in the major leagues, had been called up. But he has yet to pitch again in the major leagues.

"I feel he deserves a chance to come up in September," said Al Rosen, Astros president and general manager. "I never bothered to check on anybody because in my mind I was always going to call him up."

Richard pitched earlier this season with the Class A Daytona Beach team, where he posted a 3-0 record and had 19 strikeouts in 33 innings.

Richard most recently pitched for the Astros' Class AAA affiliate at Tucson, Ariz., where he has compiled an 0-2 record and 14.95 earned run average. He yielded 31 hits and 39 runs, walked 27 batters and struck out nine during his stint with Tucson.

"I would think that he would want to pitch to some live batters. There will be a lot of people around and guys will be looking for live batters. He has told me he wants to pitch," Rosen said Monday night in New York, where the Astros were playing the Mets.

But how much he gets to pitch will depend on pitching coach Les Moss, according to Rosen.

"It depends on how 'Flea' (Moss) wants to do it. J.R. has always expressed to me that he wanted to get into the flow as soon as possible. In my way of thinking, that means that he will probably do some batting practice pitching to get some experience against some live batters," Rosen said.

J.R. Richards

"He has the same determination he's always had. I don't care if he's wild or if he's going to embarrass himself. I know some guys who have been pitching all along and walk a lot of guys."

Austin Hurt Again As Tourney Play Begins

NEW YORK (AP) — Tracy Austin, so often plagued by injuries in her otherwise brilliant professional tennis career, entered the 1982 U.S. Open with yet another physical ailment.

The defending women's singles champion was scheduled to begin her run today for a third title in four years at the National Tennis Center in Flushing Meadow. But Austin's opening match with Catherine Tanvier was moved to Wednesday because the third-seeded Austin is suffering from tendinitis in her shoulder.

"At the moment, it doesn't seem too serious," said Dr. Irving Glick, the tournament physician. "She has a little tendinitis in her shoulder. If she didn't have to play this week or next, everything would be fine. But trying to play with something that bothers you can be unsettling."

In the last 18 months, Austin has suffered from various ailments, including a severe sciatic nerve condition which sidelined her for the entire 1981 winter tour.

Austin was not the choice to win the 101st edition of the Open by Rod Laver, who predicted that Wimbledon titlists Jimmy Connors and Martina Navratilova will capture the singles titles here.

Laver, the only two-time winner of the Grand Slam — Wimbledon and the French, U.S. and Australian Opens — believes Austin could provide the stiffest competition for Navratilova. A Navratilova-Austin matchup, if there is one, would occur in the semifinals.

Connors, who captured his second Wimbledon title earlier this year, is seeded second. But Laver, who won his first Grand Slam in 1962 as an amateur, then repeated in 1969 as a professional, believes Connors will grab his fourth U.S. Open crown.

"I feel that Connors is a good pick, and I feel that Martina is good in the ladies,"

Laver said Monday in a telephone interview from his home near Santa Barbara, Calif. "She's playing so well at the moment."

America's premier tennis event began with 11th-seeded Mats Wilander of Sweden, the surprise winner of the French Open, taking on Bill Scanlon at center court in Louis Armstrong Stadium and No. 14 Brian Teacher playing John Sadri on the grandstand court.

The tournament's No. 1 seeds, John McEnroe in the men's singles and Navratilova in the women's, play their opening-round matches Wednesday.

"I think John (McEnroe) is not playing as confidently as he has in the past. Connors, in my mind, plays his best tennis on a hard court," the surface at the National Tennis Center.

"That's going to make it difficult for McEnroe to win right there. Plus Connors is playing far more consistently than the others."

"I think Connors will be up

Raines Sparks Montreal Past Reds

By The Associated Press
The last time he faced the Cincinnati Reds, Montreal's Steve Rogers lost a tough 1-0 decision.

He was prepared for another heart-breaker Monday night when he walked off the mound after the seventh inning losing by another 1-0 score.

"I'd already given up one run, and I knew everything else was out of my control," said Rogers, who left for a pinch hitter.

But this time, Rogers' teammates not only got him off the hook — but won the game for him 3-1 with the help of a two-run rally in the seventh capped by Tim Lincecum's RBI single. Rogers, who did not walk a batter, lowered his National League-leading earned run average to 2.30, but was not especially impressed with his effort. "I didn't think I had real good pop on my fastball," said Rogers. "It took me some time to find my rhythm. I wasn't overpowering, and I had an ache in my elbow early in the game. But I'm not belittling what I was able to do. My control helped me out. Also, the defense was awesome behind me."

Cardinals 3, Dodgers 2
John Stuper and Bruce Sutter combined to scatter eight hits as St. Louis defeated Los Angeles and ace left-hander Fernando Valenzuela. Valenzuela, 17-10, who had allowed only one run in his previous 18 innings, took the loss despite yielding only six hits.

After the Dodgers took a 1-0 lead in the second, St. Louis scored twice in the fourth when Keith Hernandez doubled home Lonnie Smith, and then scored from third on George Hendrick's sacrifice fly. The Cards scored their eventual winning run in the eighth on Smith's RBI single.

Phillies 6-9, Braves 1-11
Dick Ruthven pitched a three-hitter while Mike Schmidt belted three hits, knocked in two runs and scored one as Philadelphia beat Atlanta in the first game of their doubleheader.

Ruthven struck out three and walked two as he evened his record at 10-10 in the Phillies' third straight victory. The loss snapped a three-game Braves' winning streak.

The Braves won the nightcap as pinch-hitter Bob Watson slammed a three-run homer in the 12th. Terry Harper triggered the Braves' rally with a one-out single and reached third on a single by Bruce Benedict.

After Matt Sinatro ran for Benedict, Phillies reliever Tug McGraw, 2-3, got two quick strikes on Watson, who batted for winning pitcher Steve Bedrosian, 7-6. Watson drove the next pitch out of the ballpark to spoil McGraw's 38th birthday.

Padres 2, Pirates 1
Joe Lefebvre socked a one-out solo home run in the bottom of the 13th inning to lead San Diego over Pittsburgh. Lefebvre belted a 2-1 offering from Kent Tekulve, 10-7, into the right field bleachers for his second homer of the year and first at Jack Murphy Stadium since joining the Padres last year.

Dave Dravecky, making only his fifth major league start, held the Pirates to just two hits before Brian Harper, pinch-hitting for Pittsburgh starter Larry McWilliams, slugged the first pitch of the ninth inning for his first major league home run to tie the score 1-1.

Astros 4, Mets 2
Ray Knight's tie-breaking, two-run single capped a three-run rally in the eighth inning as Houston beat New York for the Mets' 14th straight loss.

Art Howe singled with one out in the eighth for the third hit of the game off Craig Swan, 7-6. Pinch-hitter Harry Spillman then singled pinch-runner Craig Reynolds to second. One out later, Tony Scott's RBI single tied the score, with Spillman taking third and Scott reaching second on the play.

Knight then followed with a line drive to left for two more runs.

Reliever Frank LaCorte worked two innings for his first win of the season against four losses. Dave Smith pitched the final two innings for his 10th save.

Boston Comes From Behind (Again) To Edge A's

By The Associated Press

When Oakland took a 7-4 lead into the bottom of the eighth inning against Boston, the Red Sox had the A's right where they wanted them.

"When you're coming from behind like that time after time, it's contagious," said Tony Perez, who hit the second of a pair of two-run homers in Boston's five-run eighth inning, lifting the Red Sox to a 9-7 victory Monday night. "This team reminds me of when I was with the Reds. We keep coming back. We have this feeling in the dugout that we can always come back."

The Red Sox have now won 11 games in which they trailed in the seventh inning. They have done it twice in the last three days, including a 7-6 triumph over California Saturday that followed a 5-0 deficit.

On the other hand, the A's have lost 15 games after leading in the seventh inning, although Manager Billy Martin says it feels like more than that.

"We've lost 35 games in the eighth or ninth inning being four, five or six runs ahead," Martin said. "That's not a nice position."

Boston's victory cut Milwaukee's lead in the East Division to 4 1/2 games over the Red Sox, who pounded 14 hits, including nine extra-base hits and five homers.

An error by Boston shortstop Dave Stapleton allowed Oakland to score its first run in the first. Tony Armas followed with a two-run homer, and Dave McKay had an RBI single later in the inning for a 4-0 edge.

Boston cut the lead to 4-3 with three runs in the third on homers by Dwight Evans, his 24th, and Jim Rice, his 20th, and a run-scoring double by Wade Boggs.

McKay put Oakland ahead 5-3 with a homer in the fourth, and Evans responded with his second homer of the game in the seventh. Oakland made it 7-4 in the eighth when Mike Heath singled in a run and scored on a double by Rickey Henderson.

Then Boggs hit a two-run homer to make it 7-6 and Reid Nichols followed with a single, chasing A's starter Matt Keough. Reliever Tom Underwood, 9-5, was greeted by Perez's pinch-hit homer and the Red Sox got their final run on a double by Carl Yazstrzemi.

Mark Clear pitched the last two innings for Boston to improve his record to 12-7.

Royals 8, Rangers 3

Willie Wilson improved his AL-leading batting average to .348 with four hits as Kansas City extended its West Division lead to 2 1/2 games over idle California with its seventh consecutive victory.

Wilson also scored twice and knocked in two runs in support of Dennis Leonard, who won his seventh straight game and third in a row over Texas, which committed three errors.

George Brett hit his 19th homer for the Royals and Buddy Bell his 12th for the Rangers.

Mariners 3, Brewers

Bob Stoddard and Ed Vande Berg held Milwaukee to six hits for 10 innings and John Moses scored the winning run for Seattle on a throwing error by center fielder Gorman Thomas.

Loser Jim Slaton, 10-5, who relieved starter Pete Vuckovich to start the ninth, walked Dave Revere with two outs in the 10th and Moses was inserted as a pinch-runner. Rick Sweet followed with a single to center, and Thomas' throw to third sailed over the bag and bounced into the Mariners dugout as Moses raced home with the game-winner.

Vande Berg, 7-4, who allowed one hit over the last 2-3 innings, was the winner.

Orioles 6, Blue Jays 3

Rich Dauer hit a two-run double, John Lowenstein belted his 21st homer and rookie Storm Davis scattered seven hits in 7-2-3 innings to lead Baltimore past Toronto.

The Orioles, winners in 10 of their last 11 games, pounced on Toronto right-hander Mark Eichhorn, 0-1, for five runs on six hits over 4-2-3 innings.

Lloyd Moseby homered for the Blue Jays. White Sox 4, Indians 1

Greg Luzinski hit two doubles and knocked in two runs, Tony Bernazard homered and Rich Dotson continued his strong pitching for Chicago after a poor start.

Dotson, who was 3-11 on July 28 and is 9-11 now, pitched seven innings of shutout ball, but was replaced with one out in the eighth after Alan Bannister doubled home Cleveland's only run.

The victory snapped a three-game losing streak for Chicago and extended the Indians' losing streak to five.

Yankees 8, Twins 2

Dave Winfield hit a three-run homer in the first inning and Graig Nettles and Jerry Mumphrey completed New York's rout of Minnesota with a homer and a two-run single, respectively.

Shane Rawley, 9-8, gave up eight hits, struck out four and walked two en route to his second complete game of the year.

The Yankees victimized Twins rookie Frank Viola, who had shut them out last week in New York.

players. A guaranteed fair share of future NFL revenues for all players. Removal of wage inequities. Elimination in order to produce longer careers, of incentives to cut older players for financial reasons. Rewarding of performance through significant incentives.

The owners recently asked for a federal mediator, but Detroit linebacker Stan White, another member of the executive committee, said players will decline a mediator until owners join them in discussion of the five points.

Garvey had said before the meetings that the most probable time for any walkout would be between now and the fourth or fifth game of the regular season, which begins Sept. 12.

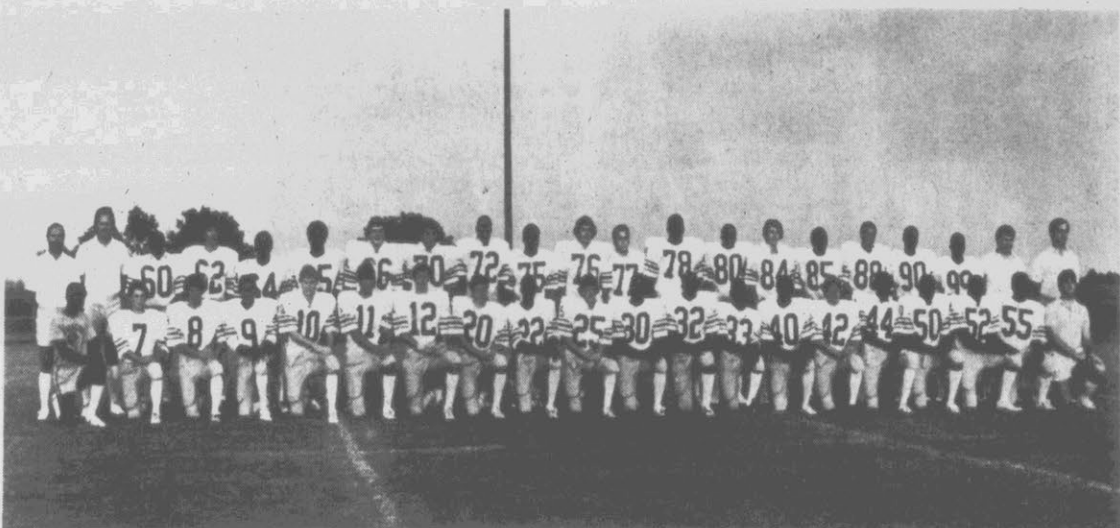

Garvey also has discounted rumors that the union may adopt strategy aimed at forcing the owners into locking out the players. "At this stage we're more interested in a conventional approach," he said. "If we go out, we'll shut it down."

He also dismissed talk of a more selective action, such as one or two teams going out or a half-dozen or so top players from each team refusing to suit up. "These alternative approaches put too much pressure on a small group of people," Garvey said. "We believe it's a responsibility everyone should bear."

If the owners locked the players out, Garvey said, it would give the players clear legal freedom to set up an alternate schedule of games outside the control of the owners.

But, he said, it's the association's position that the owners already have been guilty of unfair labor practices — refusing to bargain and other alleged infractions.

linebacker to inside linebacker.

The entire defensive secondary also returns. Malcolm Worthington (5-11, 171 sophomore) and Gay return at the corners and Joey Kennedy (6-1, 180 senior) will be at safety.

"We feel like we've had some carryover from last year's team and have been able to implement the things we had hoped we could," Sauls said. "Thus far the adjustments to new positions have seemed to benefit not only the team but the individual player."

"There are still some question marks about how we'll perform in a game," Sauls added, "particularly along the defensive line and quarterback. With the small number of players we've got we can't have as much contact as we'd like to have."

Kennedy will get the starting nod at quarterback. Kennedy, who has never played quarterback in high school, started at tight end a year ago.

Coley is also working out at QB.

"Kennedy is a dropback quarterback," Sauls said. "He seems to have matured with the new position."

Kennedy also returns at punter but is being challenged by three other players for the position: Coley, Warren and Gene Johnson (5-10, 168 senior).

Behind Kennedy at fullback is Koonce, who has moved from tight end. Kelvin Harris (6-0, 167 sophomore) and Worthington are the top two halfbacks. Both have been timed at around 4.6 in the 40, according to Sauls.

"They are all talented, capable backs," Sauls said. "We just need some game conditions for them."

The other main questionable area for Sauls is the defensive front, which lost three starters to graduation. Craft is the only

Ga. Tech Losing Its Hair Over 1982 Season

By TOM FOREMAN Jr. AP Sports Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — Georgia Tech's 1982 football team is losing its hair over the season and they're not worried one bit.

Frustrated with losing seasons and buoyed by a new $7.5 million athletic center, Yellow Jacket upperclassmen are shaving their heads in all sorts of unusual arrangements.

Senior right tackle David Lutz settled for the traditional Mohawk style, although some of his hair has started to grow back. He says the idea was meant to spur freshmen players to reach for excellence and has now become a source of inspiration for the offensive line.

"Most of the freshmen thought we were crazy as hell," Lutz told reporters on the Atlantic Coast Conference media tour. "A lot of the people in the Atlanta area think it's silly, but it motivates the team and that's what counts."

Indeed, Georgia Tech doesn't have to shave its heads to generate motivation. After upsetting Alabama in the 1981 season opener, the Yellow Jackets dropped 10 in a row and Lutz says looking at some of the games is all he needs.

"We want to turn things around very badly," he adds. "When you look back and see the games you could have won, it makes you want to work harder."

Shaving heads is only part of the sacrifice, however.

"You don't have time to go out. I've given up all of that. You have less time for your girlfriend. You sit in your room, study plays and watch film," says Lutz.

Defensive end Marvin Dyett didn't shave his head, although it is rather short. He admires Lutz for what he's done.

"It tells you he's putting his social life down," says Dyett. "He's dedicating himself to what he came here to do."

Georgia Tech's seniors have experienced just six victories. Dyett feels the team can reach that total this year alone, if for

Ingrid Bergman's Family Rallies For Funeral Of Swedish Actress

LONDON (AP) — The children of Ingrid Bergman and her third husband, Lars Schmidt, were gathered in London today for the funeral of the actress, who died on her 67th birthday only hours after a champagne birthday party.

The Swedish star died Sunday night in her London apartment after an eight-year struggle against cancer. A few close friends had attended the party at her home shortly before her death.

Her death came as Israel Television was screening the third episode of her most recent film, "A Woman Called Golda" in which she played the late Israeli premier Golda Meir.

When Miss Bergman failed to attend the New York premiere of the film, British newspapers speculated she was dying. The actress denied that, but said: "We all don't want to die, but I don't fear it."

She also said: "I am like one of those performing dogs who have to go on to the end, which is better than being bored and suffocating in a bag."

One of the guests at her birthday party, her British stage manager Griffith James, said: "She looked happy at the party. Ingrid was a brave woman at the end."

Also there were a woman cousin from Sweden, the star's nurse and Schmidt, from whom Miss Bergman was divorced in 1978 after a 20-year marriage. They spent her last day together and he was with her when she died.

"She was the most courageous woman I have ever met," Schmidt told a reporter.

Schmidt said they continued to meet after their divorce because the actress was "a marvelous person."

Miss Bergman's remains will be cremated and her ashes may be sent to Sweden, said Alfred Jackman, funeral director of Harrods department store. The funeral will be "a very quiet, family affair," he said.

The actress's three daughters, twins Isabella and Isotta, 27, and Pia, 42, flew by Concorde from New York to London Monday. Her son, Robertino, 32, was expected Tuesday.

Pia is the child of her first marriage to Swedish brain surgeon Dr. Peter Lindstrom, and the others were from her second marriage to the late Italian film producer Roberto Rossellini.

Peter Plouviez, secretary of the actors' union Equity, described Miss Bergman, who won three Oscars, as "one of the great actresses of the world. We greatly regret her death," he said.

In New York, actress Liv Ullmann said she met Miss Bergman for the first time when they starred in "Autumn Sonata."

"There's only one reaction — it's deep sorrow," she said. "I'm going to miss her tremendously — miss knowing that she's here, miss the work from her side, miss the tremendous friendship."

Last Friday, the actress and Schmidt returned to London from a holiday on the Swedish island of Danneholm, north of Goteborg.

Ernest Pettit, janitor of her London apartment block, said: "She told me she had a lovely time in Sweden. She looked really well and I had no idea how ill she really was. She was the best tenant I have ever had to look after."

Miss Bergman, 5-foot-8 with brown hair and blue eyes, was a teenage film actress in her own country where she was born in Stockholm on Aug. 29, 1915.

Friends Recall Courage And Talents Of Bergman

By JAY ARNOLD
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — When Academy Award-winning actress Ingrid Bergman portrayed an aging Golda Meir in her last project, she was waging her own battle with cancer, but refused to show it, said co-star Leonard Nimoy.

"She was very sick when we were working together, but there was absolutely no sign," Nimoy, who starred with Miss Bergman in the television series titled "A Woman Called Golda," said Monday.

"She wouldn't let it interfere in any way," he said. "There was never any sign that we had to pamper or cater to her in any way."

Nimoy said Miss Bergman, who lost her eight-year battle with cancer on Sunday at the age of 67, was a "special lady" and "a special actress."

"At night she was forced to sleep with her hand in traction above her head to keep the swelling from disfiguring her on camera," said Harve Bennett, executive producer of the 1981 TV mini-series, "but she never complained."

"There are some scenes in the picture which are chilling scenes for everyone who worked with her — scenes about Golda's own battle with cancer — when we knew that she was going through the same thing," he said.

Miss Bergman was described Monday by other colleagues as an extraordinary actress who, despite her fame, maintained a no-nonsense outlook on life, and whose courage never wavered in her fight against cancer.

The Swedish-born actress, best remembered for her role in the classic 1943 film "Casablanca" with Humphrey Bogart, won three Academy Awards.

Paul Henreid, who played her husband Victor Laszlo in "Casablanca," said in Los Angeles that she was "a lovely lady, a wonderful actress, a dear friend."

"I don't think she was taken by her beauty. She was taken only by the desire to do the best work possible in her profession. She passes away leaving a heritage of great performances," said Henreid, 74.

"She was one of those gifted people who come along only now and then," said Joseph Cotten, who starred opposite Miss Bergman when she won the first of three Academy Awards in "Gaslight" (1944).

"Certainly, she has a place in the history of motion pictures for all times and will remain for our lifetime in the hearts of those who knew her as a personal friend and as an actress," he said.

Miss Bergman's other Oscars were as best actress in "Anastasia" (1956) and supporting actress in "Murder on the Orient Express" (1974).

"She was the most extraordinary lady I ever met," said Bennett.

"Everything about her was unexpecting simple and honest after a life like that," he said, adding that like Mrs. Meir, Miss Bergman was "hamish — a Yiddish word meaning of the earth."

"She was one of the most wonderful women I ever knew," said Liza Minnelli, who appeared with her in "A Matter of Time" (1976).

"Working with her was an honor, being her friend was a privilege. I admired her with all my heart and soul," Miss Minnelli said through a spokesman in New York.

Anthony Quinn, who starred with her in "A Walk in the Spring Rain" (1970), said through his spokesman that Miss Bergman was "totally professional" as few other actors are.

"My personal life as well as my career was enriched by having the pleasure of working with Ingrid Bergman," he said.

'One More Try' Turns Out To Be Just An Ordinary Comedy

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Lucy Arnaz and Laurence Luckinbill are married in real life, so you ought to expect some electricity when they get together for a TV show.

Instead, "One More Try" is an ordinary half-hour of gentle comedy, interrupted in the middle by an excruciatingly long lover's quarrel which ends with Didi throwing dishes and Adam busting his favorite pipe.

The plot is a familiar one, and there's nothing really new about the way the story unravels.

Didi, Miss Arnaz's character, and Adam, Luckinbill's, have been married before, to other people, and they're about to tie the knot themselves. The problem is, Adam's kids, Paul and Daniel, don't like that plan. If Adam is going to re-marry, they reason, it ought to be with Mom.

The New York City backdrop is at least appealing, and the atmosphere in this instance transcends the urban scenery:

"Are you Mrs. Margolin," Mr. Liebowitz, the elevator operator, asks Didi as she enters Adam's apartment. "Not yet," she replies. "Who am I to judge," Liebowitz says in characteristic big-city style.

The program's producers have at least tried to flavor "One More Try" with entertaining characters, and in some instances their efforts are rewarded. Maurice Shrog is amusing as Liebowitz, and Antonia Rey is good for a laugh or two as a female cabbie.

Adam and Didi meet in a diner the morning after their spat and take separate tables. That leaves the cab driver in the middle.

"Idi Amin and Margaret Thatcher could get married," Adam reasons with the hack as intermediary. "All they'd have to do is change a little." "Crazy!" the woman scoffs. "They don't even know each other."

The climactic scene — Adam and Didi are married in his apartment — makes the half-hour worthwhile. First, little Daniel, played by Benjamin Bernoy, leads Didi down the aisle clad in dark suit and sneakers. He's tossing petals at her feet, one at a time, until she boots him in the behind. He dumps the lot a handful at a time.

Judge Olivetti is double-parked and in a hurry. "I understand you both have been married before," he says. "We all make mistakes. ... I join with your guests in wishing you all the best, and hope you don't mess up this time."

Olivetti hustles through the ceremony — there's no time for Adam and Didi to recite what they've prepared — and concludes, "I now pronounce you man and wife. Jeez," he adds, without a pause, "I hope I didn't get towed away."

"One More Try" undoubtedly was produced as a pilot for a series, and CBS apparently still is in the market for promising programs for the fall.

The network introduced a short-run series called "Filthy Rich" early in August, and the show did so well in the ratings that CBS bumped something called "Mama Malone" for the new sitcom.

"Filthy Rich" is about a family squabble for inheritance, literally over a dead man's body. That alone ought to improve the chances of "One More Try."

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — GRAY, ELDERLY PROSPECTOR CAN'T RELISH HIS GOLDEN YEARS.
 Today's Cryptoquip clue: R equals O.

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 1, 1982

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
 from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The early part of the day is not right for taking chances and the judgment of others could cause difficulties. Wait until the afternoon when conditions improve before making a decision.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You should take a different view and make new arrangements if a new plan is to work out right. Relax at home tonight.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) If you take more interest in helping others with their projects, you can add to your own progress. Don't follow any hunches now.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Not a good day to launch a new project. Make present plans more detailed and all goes well. Use more logic in your dealings.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You are most alert to new business systems now and can make big headway into the future. Use common sense.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Handle regular duties early in the day so that you'll have more time for recreation later. Take time to improve your talents.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Choose your words well at home or you could have trouble. Don't take any chances where your security is concerned.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) The afternoon is fine for carrying through with monetary matters of importance. A financial expert can give you valuable advice.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You can get the praise of a higher-up by showing increased skill in your work. Safeguard your good reputation.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Make sure you don't become involved in activities that give you nothing but trouble. Take needed health treatments.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Don't make decisions of importance early in the day. Improve your appearance and gain more confidence.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Do nothing that could alienate your good friends today because the planetary conditions are not favorable. Be calm.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Be sure you do nothing that could irk a higher-up today or you could regret it later. Take steps to improve your credit.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be a great problem solver if the home conditions are right. Teach that adversities are tests for the mind to challenge. Give the right religious training. A foreign language will be most helpful to career.

The bidding:
 South West North East
 1 NT Pass 3 NT Pass
 Pass Pass
 Opening lead: Two of ♣.

Bridge experts do not have to be masters of the occult to make their plays. There is usually a perfectly logical explanation for the things they do.

The auction needs little comment. South had a balanced 16 points and North a balanced 11, so both bids are textbook.

West led the two of spades. East won with the ace and returned the six. Declarer won and tried the diamond finesse. Showing exemplary technique, East allowed the jack of diamonds to win. Declarer returned to hand with the king of clubs and led another diamond. When West showed out, declarer took the ace of diamonds. He now needed four tricks from the club suit to fulfill his game.

After both players have followed to two rounds of a suit, there is a slight percentage edge to playing for a 3-3 break over a 4-2 distribution. Yet, declarer unhesitatingly returned to his hand with the queen of clubs, cashed his remaining high spade and led a club to the ten. When that held, he had his nine tricks.

Lucky guess? No, just a matter of clear reasoning. West had led from a weak four-card and had shown up with a singleton diamond. Had he held a five-card suit, it is reasonable to suppose that he would have led from that suit rather than attack with a spade. The logical inference was that West did not have a five-card suit, and that his distribution, therefore, had to be 4-4-1-4.

This is really a simple exercise in counting. So much in bridge depends on no more than the ability to count to 13: whether to open the bidding; counting the distribution of a hand; or counting the distribution of a suit. I know of no bridge expert who considers 13 to be an unlyucky number!

N.C. Business Leaders Claim Japan Curbs Access To Trade

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The United States needs to respond to Japan's strict import policies with some equally tough measures against Japanese goods, North Carolina business leaders say.

R.J. Reynolds Tobacco International, Philip Morris and Brown & Williamson Tobacco have banded together to plead for better access to Japan, where four in 10 people smoke.

And Gary Davidson, a 48-year-old lawyer from Newport Beach, Calif., is using Charlotte as a test market to convince Congress to fight back. He's hoping North Carolina will provide the impetus for a nationwide grassroots movement demanding retaliation against Japan.

Davidson sponsored a series of advertisements beginning in July in Charlotte newspapers. Readers are being urged to support a campaign "to see that emergency action is taken to correct the inequities in our foreign trade."

So far, 112 people in Charlotte have clipped the coupons accompanying the ads, demanding U.S. action, he said.

MEETING SET
 The Community Appearance Commission will meet Thursday at 7:30 p.m. at the public works facility, 1500 Beatty St.

American cigarette manufacturers say Japanese government restrictions have limited imported brands to slightly more than 1 percent of the $10-billion-a-year retail sales.

A 35 percent Japanese tariff plus other taxes mean local brands sell for 45 cents a pack less than the $1.25 price of American cigarettes. In addition, American companies are held back by sharp restrictions on U.S. advertising and promotion activities.

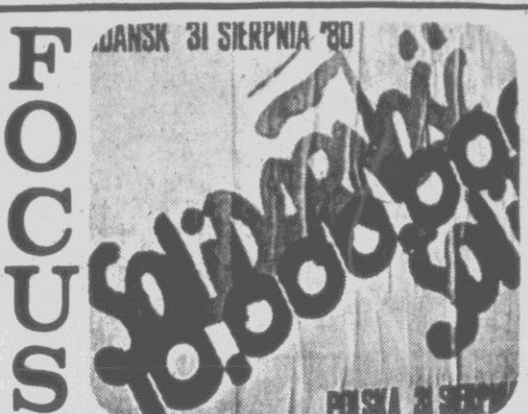

Textile and apparel industries haven't had much better luck, according to the U.S. Department of Commerce.

In 1981, American textile exports totaling $106.8 million accounted for 1.3 percent of Japan's market. American apparel exports to Japan totaling $62 million accounted for 2 percent. By contrast, Japan exported $698 million worth of textile and apparel products to the U.S. in 1981.

Ted Sumner, chairman of First Union National Bank, says the Japanese "have seldom focused on the fact that trade is a two-way street."

And Charles DuBose, president of a Roseboro-based trading company called DuBose International, says he still hasn't sold a single item in Japan despite going to the country and hiring a Japanese consultant. "I had clients who wanted to sell pork, poultry, furniture, all kinds of things," he said. "It's very easy to buy from the Japanese, but not to sell to them."

Two Years Later
 On August 31, 1980, the people of Poland made history when their government became the first within the Soviet-bloc to recognize an independent trade union. By August 31, 1981, Solidarity members could celebrate gains including the right to strike and relaxation of censorship. This first anniversary poster boasted of 10 million union members — about one-quarter of Poland's population and half of its work force. Solidarity's reform spirit even touched the nation's Communist Party Congress, which in 1981 became the first in Eastern Europe to elect its leaders by secret ballot. Today, two years after its birth, Solidarity is outlawed, and Poles are about to begin their tenth month under martial law.

DO YOU KNOW — Who is the premier of Poland who declared martial law in December, 1981?

MONDAY ANSWER — All The King's Men by Robert Penn Warren is based on Huey Long's career.
