

Embassy Terrorists Talk To Negotiators

BERN, Switzerland (AP) — Armed terrorists who are threatening to blow up the Polish Embassy released two women hostages today and met face-to-face for the first time with a government negotiator, a federal police spokesman said. The raiders, calling themselves "The Polish Revolutionary Home Army," still are holding nine hostages, according to federal officials. They are demanding the Polish government lift martial law and release all political prisoners, and have set a deadline of 10 a.m. Wednesday (4 a.m. EDT).

Ulrich Hubacher, spokesman for the federal Justice and Police Ministry, said a member of the special 24-man crisis team met for an hour with the gunmen in the embassy after nightlong telephone contacts with the terrorists.

He refused to discuss the meeting in detail, but said more face-to-face negotiations were likely.

Hubacher identified the two freed women as embassy employees, but Polish sources here said they were Irene Matusiak and Stanislaw Antoniewicz, both in their 50s and wives of embassy employees.

Late Monday night, the terrorists released a pregnant woman from the white stucco mansion in the middle of Bern's diplomatic sector. The woman, identified by the Polish sources as Malgorzata Luczak, a clerk-typist at the embassy, was hospitalized for treatment for shock.

Hubacher originally said police believed there were 14 hostages in the embassy, but later reported there were only 12. Swiss authorities said all of them are Poles.

The government-run Warsaw radio quoted the embassy's commercial counsellor as saying there were still 10 hostages, two of them women. It was not clear if the official, who was not named, was among them.

"The Swiss government is committed to ending this siege as soon as possible and saving the lives of the hostages," Hubacher said. The spokesman refused to say what tactics might be used.

Police have agreed to bring food and water to the door of the embassy building, he said. This morning, a doctor was permitted into the embassy to treat a hostage with hypertension, Hubacher said.

87 Job Slots In Agency Programs

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Ed Garrison, director of the Department of Social Services this morning told the Board of County Commissioners that 87 job slots have been established in 22 government or non-profit agencies for workers participating in the pilot Community Work Experience Program.

Under the Community Work Experience Program, persons receiving welfare payments are placed in public service jobs. If they refuse to work at the jobs, they are subject to lose their welfare benefits.

Garrison told the board that 28 persons were placed in jobs last month, and sanctions were taken against two individuals who refused job offers.

"It's too early to judge the success of the program," Garrison cautioned. However, he said the pilot project "looks promising."

Commissioners also voted to accept $56,295 in state funds to help with day care expenses for mothers participating in the Community Work Experience demonstration project.

Garrison noted that "day care and transportation ... are the pivot points" on which the program hinges.

County tax collector Bill Smith reported that sending out tax notices a month earlier this year than in the past has proved successful.

He told commissioners that collections totaled $536,960 during August, as compared to $70,826 in August of 1981.

Pitt County Memorial Hospital administrator Jack Richardson, in his report to the board, said a new intensive care unit was opened at the medical facility last week. He said an old intensive care unit will be remodeled, and when that work is complete, the hospital will have a total of 30 intensive care beds available.

Richardson also reported that assistant administrator Rick Gilstrap will be leaving Pitt Memorial in November to become administrator of the Roanoke Rapids hospital.

In other business this morning commissioners approved petitions for the addition of Country Road and Birdson Circle in Country Place Subdivision and Robin Road, Dogwood Court and Wisteria Lane in Briarwood Subdivision, to the state system.

The board will hold public hearings at 6 p.m. today on a proposed flood prevention ordinance and subdivision ordinance and will hold a joint meeting with the Greenville City Council at 7:30 p.m.

Secret Talks Begin At Arab Leaders' Meeting

FEZ, Morocco (AP) — Arab leaders began secret talks today on President Reagan's Middle East initiative and other possible peace plans after giving PLO chairman Yasser Arafat a hero's welcome that included a 21-gun salute.

Leaders from 15 of the 22 Arab League countries were discussing a joint peace strategy for the first time since the creation of the state of Israel in 1948.

The first item on their agenda was the June 6 Israeli invasion of Lebanon that forced the dispersal of Palestine Liberation Organization guerrillas from their Beirut stronghold.

The talks reportedly will continue with a discussion of separate peace plans by Saudi King Fahd and Tunisian President Habib Bourguiba. But Moroccan officials said those talks will be overshadowed by Reagan's peace proposal.

The Bahrain-based Gulf News Agency said most of the leaders at the three-day summit are tentatively backing Reagan's plan, which has been rejected by Israel.

Delegation sources said it was particularly significant that Fahd and Syrian President Hafez Assad arrived Monday at the conference site, an ornate 12th century palace, in the same automobile.

Assad led a boycott of a scheduled Arab League summit last November, forcing cancellation of the meeting. The Syrian leader was protesting Fahd's peace plan.

Assad has made no public comment on Fahd's plan, but Syrian sources said his presence here showed he now was prepared to discuss it.

Fahd's proposal implicitly calls for Arab recognition of Israel in return for total evacuation of Israeli-occupied territories. The Bourguiba plan — first proposed in 1965 — calls for Arab acceptance of a 35-year-old United Nations scheme to partition Palestine into Jewish and Arab enclaves.

Reagan's plan calls for election of an autonomous "domestic authority" to govern the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip in association with Jordan. Reagan also called on Israel to immediately cease the establishment of new Jewish settlements in Arab territory.

Israel has rejected all three plans. In apparent defiance of Reagan, the Israeli authorities last week announced plans for new Jewish settlements.

Fire Claims Four Lives At National Spinning Co.

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

WASHINGTON — Authorities were investigating the cause of an early morning fire today at National Spinning Co. here that resulted in the deaths of four employees and left a fifth worker hospitalized.

Washington Fire Chief Tony Abeyounis said the fire at National Spinning was reported at 12:08 a.m. and was confined to an area in the yarn crafts section of the facility.

Henry H. (Buster) Humphreys, vice president-manufacturing at the firm, identified the victims as Asa Squires, 39; James Harris, 26; Greg Lamm, 22; and Jesse Woolard Jr., 25. All four workers, he said, were from the Washington area.

Terry Woolard, it was reported, was injured and was taken to Beaufort County Hospital before being transferred to Pitt Memorial Hospital in Greenville for treatment. A spokesperson at Pitt Memorial said this morning that the injured man, who is not related to Jesse Woolard, is in the intensive care unit.

Humphreys said the fire was spotted by employees just as the work shift was beginning operations. He said most of the 150 employees in the section were evacuated but "but these four fellows plus some others" attempted to extinguish the fire. Humphreys said there was a "sudden burst" of smoke and the victims were overcome.

Dr. Frank Sheldon, Beaufort County medical examiner, said the four employees died of asphyxia secondary to smoke inhalation. Sheldon said there were no signs of burns on the victims.

Abeyounis said approximately 50 firemen from his department were joined by volunteers from the Bunyan and Old Ford departments in battling the fire and smoke. The chief said the plant's sprinkler system "held the fire in check until we got there." Firemen remained at the scene about four hours, according to Abeyounis.

Humphreys said the fire involved one area, approximately 40 feet by 40 feet, of a large room in the dyed craft yarn winding section. He said no equipment damage resulted and some departments were operating today as first shift employees labored to clean their own machinery. Humphreys said the clean-up operation will probably take about 24 hours.

Humphreys credited the fire units with doing "a magnificent job" at the scene and he said that "excellent rescue

Says Cure Can Be Painful, Too

TORONTO (AP) — Sir Geoffrey Howe, Britain's chancellor of the exchequer, warned the world's bankers and his fellow finance ministers today that the cure for global economic ills may be even more painful than the disease.

Speaking to the annual meeting of the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank, Howe also called for quick agreement on a "substantial" increase in IMF resources — a proposal only the United States is opposing.

The speech from Britain, the closest ally the Americans have in economic policy, further isolated the United States, which stands alone in predicting an early rebound for the global economy and rejecting the need to strengthen international financial institutions.

"The question is, are we in the grip of a worsening disease or has its progress been checked?" Howe asked before the delegates from 146 countries.

"We need to remember that treatment and cure can initially seem as painful — indeed more painful — than the disease, and that convalescence can be frustrating and testing," he said. "We need continually to check our diagnosis, and be sensitive in our prescription."

Howe said world recovery would require reduced government deficits — especially in the United States — and he urged private banks to "show a matching responsibility" in dealing with massive loans to developing countries whose ability to repay has been damaged by the recession.

Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan told the meeting Monday that President Reagan's economic policies are about to spark a worldwide recovery.

Center Gets Accreditation

The Eastern Carolina Vocational Center Inc. has received congratulations for its three-year accreditation by the Commission of Accreditation of Rehabilitation Facilities (CARF).

The center, which serves the mentally and physically handicapped of this area through programs for employment and job training, was visited in August by a CARF team which carefully studied its administration, finances, programs, safety measures, personnel procedures, client procedures — "everything about our function," center director Daneel LeRoux said. "Many, many of our people, including the clients for whom we exist, were interviewed," LeRoux said.

He said the accreditation is especially gratifying because it is maximum in length — no facility is accredited for more years at one time and fewer years could have been approved. "It's also gratifying," he said, "because the center underwent major administrative changes in January of this year, including my beginning work here."

The two major programs of the center, he said, are the vocational development program which trains people for jobs in the community and the work activity program which provides jobs for persons too handicapped to work elsewhere. A regular work program for persons who can do complicated jobs but only in a sheltered environment is in the beginning stages and doing well, he added.

The center has a $3.7 million budget (which may go over $4 million) and its income is 82 percent self-generated, LeRoux said. "It's my goal," he said, "to make us 100 percent self-financed. I think we can do this. We have some very good contracts now, including one that has people employed seven days a week, 24 hours a day."

This is a contract with the federal government for making picture frames, he said.

Fraternities And Sororities Still Big On Many Campuses

By D.J. ROSENBAUM
United Press International
The college fraternity system, an institution as old as the United States and as new as an incoming freshman, is no longer the sickly anachronism some said it was a few years ago. Neither is it as robust as it once was.

stand depends on where you sit." Those not a part of it generally take a dim view of it. Those involved in it like it fine. For example: —Meghan O'Brien, a 1982 graduate of Brown University and president of the Alpha Chi Omega sorority chapter there, said outsiders think the Greek system is "old-fashioned, reactionary. The people don't seem to realize that it's going to reflect

Brown and not a stereotype." —A sophomore at Muncie, Ind.'s Ball State University who asked not to be named: "When I think of fraternities, I think of soap operas. They're both a waste of time. There are much more important things to do at college."

A UPI survey of fraternities and sororities on the nation's college campuses shows that, a waste of time or not, the numbers are encouraging for the fraternity fans.

But problems of discrimination and hazing remain at some schools as well as rowdiness and vandalism. This appears attributable to an inherent lack of control by the national societies over their chapters.

However, there are strong arguments to indicate a majority of the Greek societies are relatively sedate and provide benefits to their members and schools. These include handling room and board for a portion of the student body, encouraging alumni support and charitable, philanthropic and community activities.

Growth figures
Figures supplied by the National Interfraternity Council show about 5,000 chapters of 59 national fraternities, with an average chapter size of 50 men. They say those numbers have increased gradually but steadily every year since 1942.

The National Panhellenic Conference, the governing body of the 26 national sororities, claims more than 2 million members — both current college students and alumni. Half of them, says chairman Mary Barbee, have joined in the last 20 years. The PHC claims nearly 2,500 active chapters of about 50 women apiece.

"We are seeing a measured growth, certainly not a resurgence," reported Ronald Bristow, assistant vice chancellor for student services at the State University of New York at Albany.

Mark Smith, dean of students at Eckert College in Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., notes that the growth might be attributed to a growing number of two-year colleges turning into four-year institutions, whose social organizations affiliate with national fraternities.

But Mike Wiener, a former executive director of Phi Sigma Kappa fraternity, notes that the number of students in all colleges is down, indicating growing, not diminishing Greek strength.

Unfettered franchises
Part of the reason a fix is so difficult to get on the subject is that there really is no such thing as a coherent fraternity "system." It is very much like a franchise, with independent chapters of a national organization which provides a standard product — in a fraternity's case, name, ritual, purpose, executive training.

But unlike franchise operations, there is no close watch over use of the product. A fraternity's character varies wildly from chapter to chapter and from year to year. What is at one school a studious, quiet house can be at another college a beery, rowdy bunch of near-dropouts.

Fraternities and sororities have gone through many changes in the last 20 years, just as the society they represent has evolved.

They are by their very nature selective organizations. With the advent of the civil rights movement, that selectivity was seen — often with very good reason — as discriminatory. Jews were not welcome in many, Catholics in others, and blacks were excluded from nearly all, if not by policy then by practice.

"The whole thing revolves around a mutual selection process," said Mrs. Barb Robel, the advisor for Greek affairs at Kansas State University. "It's just a matter of matching up people who feel comfortable with each other."

That is a fairly good description of any friendship, but the overtones can turn nasty when a few members of a group choose to blackball a prospective member.

While the NIC no longer allows its member fraternities to discriminate, such practices by chapters are hard to pinpoint, particularly since member selection is done in secret.

A similar problem exists with hazing. While no national fraternity or sorority tolerates the practice, the line between hazing and high-spirited good times can become unclear, occasionally with tragic results. Part of the problem might be traceable back to a lack of control by the national organization over the chapters.

Lack of control
It is that lack of control that seems to concern some college administrators. A college surrenders some of its control over a student in the Greek system, control it might occasionally like to retain — particularly on the morning after a big night before.

"A fraternity should always be robust in a way that helps a college's sense of community and identity," says Eckert College's Smith, building a case for tight disciplinary rein on the system. "If the institution were not there, the fraternity wouldn't be there. The opposite is not true. They have no specific right to exist."

The counterculture of the early 1970s did fraternities no immediate good, either. It was often hard to justify the relevance of an organization that, to outsiders, seemed devoted only to beer blasts and fancy-dress parties.

And the rise of co-education helped weaken the system. Many schools, particularly the prestigious colleges of the East, were all-male or all-female until the late 1960s or early 1970s. Greek societies, being organized groups, greatly enhanced their members' social lives by allowing them greater access to members of the opposite sex. With co-education, that powerful recruiting lure was not nearly as effective.

It does cut both ways, though. Union, a men-only college for its first 175 years, has been accepting women since 1970. In the last four years, four sororities have sprung up.

Princeton relents
For that matter, fraternities are showing strength in one surprising place: the ivy-encrusted campus of Princeton University.

Princeton has not had a pledge class since 1855. The closest institution to them have been the famed "eating clubs," seven of which are open to the campus and five of which are selective. But some students feel the need for a more intimate gathering place.

"When you come to Princeton as a freshman," said Robert Bradford, the eating clubs are really fun — for about two weeks... When the smallest club is 90 people, it's more than you can get to know.

As a result, two fraternities — Zeta Psi, Sigma Alpha Epsilon — have pledges at Princeton.

It is quite a change for a school as tradition-minded as Princeton where Bradford, a junior from Holland, Mich., said the administration's attitude has been, "We'd like to ignore you."

Bradford, a pledge of Zeta Psi, is not comfortable with starting a group that excludes women. "I had a bit of a time justifying it to myself. I would have preferred a co-ed group, (although) there's not that much in the life of a fraternity that has to be separated from women."

The de facto ban on fraternities does not carry over to other Ivy League schools. Cornell and the University of Pennsylvania have active programs, and although Harvard, Yale and Columbia do not, the former two have a tradition-bound system of clubs.

'Animal House' rebuttal
Another problem on campuses is vandalism, but the debate is strong about whether fraternities are as responsible for the problem as newspaper headlines might indicate. The Greek case was not helped any by the movie "Animal House," either by reputation or effect.

"We raised more hell in our (dorm) section than we ever did in the chapter," Wiener said. He said pride in a chapter house's appearance is often a deterrent to rowdiness but added, "If you're in a fraternity whose tradition is hell-raising, it escalates."

Said Diana Regan, a marketing student and member of Chi Omega at Ball State, "If one thing comes up about the frats or sororities, it gets blown out of proportion. We're slammed for it. When someone who's not Greek does it, it's not a big thing."

"The behavior has probably improved," said Mike

Dear Abby

A Note And Best Wishes Adequate

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Recently I attended a lovely wedding and reception. I was invited by Nancy, a cousin of the bride. I had never met the bride or groom, but I accompanied Nancy because she needed an escort.

I didn't know whether a gift was expected of me, or even appropriate. Under the circumstances, should Nancy have provided the gift from both of us? Should I have offered to share the cost of Nancy's gift? Or should I have sent my own gift? Please give your opinion for future reference.

EMPTY-HANDED ESCORT

DEAR ESCORT: A note of appreciation and good wishes would have been appropriate, mannerly and adequate.

DEAR ABBY: Now I've seen everything: a letter from a man who bathes too much! He claims his wife likes him better when he is not freshly bathed, so he bathes only two or three times a week and everybody's happy.

What do you want to bet that she hates to bathe, and if she can get her husband to bathe less, he won't notice how bad she smells.

SQUEAKY CLEAN IN KENT, OHIO

DEAR SQUEAKY: The response to that letter was nothing to sniff at. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I can understand the wife who didn't want her husband to bathe too much. My husband has a very special, subtle scent all his own, which I love. He works out with weights on alternate days, and bathes afterward. He rarely bathes in between unless he's gotten overly warm or dirty. Yet in the four years we've been married, I've never noticed an unpleasant body odor. When he's away on business, I sleep on his side of the bed in the comfort of his scent. Not only does his skin have a lovely fragrance, he has a very sweet breath, with kisses sweeter than strawberries and cream.

And lest you think I am somehow insensitive to unpleasant body odors, I work with a man who could wilt an artificial plant at 20 paces.

SCENT-SITIVE IN SEATTLE

DEAR ABBY: I am writing to thank you for an article that you ran recently that has given me more relief and comfort than I can describe.

I am 83, male and reasonably healthy, but in recent years I've been terribly troubled with a dry mouth — especially at night. I complained to my doctor. He just shrugged his shoulders. Then I read your column in the San Francisco Chronicle, and my prayers were answered! In response to a letter asking why a person would use a mouth spray in public, you quoted a dentist who said that as a result of disease, medication, radiation therapy or simply aging, a number of people suffer from "xerostomia" (dry mouth), causing acute discomfort, tooth decay, inability to eat, swallow or talk, as well as difficulty in wearing dentures. He suggested a "saliva substitute" — available at drugstores.

I immediately phoned my druggist, and he had never heard of a "saliva substitute," so I told him to call his supplier and order it. He did, and the next day I picked it up and used it. Abby, I will be eternally grateful to you and that dentist. No more dry mouth! God bless you. Sign me,

GRATEFUL IN PARADISE, CALIF.

DEAR GRATEFUL: I'll print your letter for the benefit of others who suffer from dry mouth and are not aware of "saliva substitutes."

Fraternities

Reinmund, the interfraternity Council rush chairman at the University of Missouri-Columbia. "We try not to be the animals we once were but rather an active part of the community."

How campuses benefit fraternities and sororities serve the community in more ways than providing social functions. They tend to keep students in school, said Judy Abrahamson, assistant director of student activities at Ball State, and fraternity alumni tend to come back to reunions and contribute money.

Also, Greek societies take pressure off schools' housing and food services and do carry much of the burden of students' social life.

At the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, for example, the 28 national fraternities and sororities, two local chapters and three "independent living groups" house and feed about 1,300 students out of almost 8,000 — better than 16 percent of the student body.

Fundraising is part of the action at many schools, and a social consciousness is no longer checked at the door of the chapter house.

"More and more, fraternities are getting involved in society," said Wiener of Phi Sigma Kappa. "They're starting to say, 'Wait a minute. We're not in this to drink beer.'"

Why join? The Greek and Independent worlds do mix and enrich each other. Fraternities point with pride to the fact that many campus leaders belong to the Greek system, and that fraternities must keep their doors open to the full campus in order to survive.

"I have lots of friends not in fraternities," said Reinmund. "They just never wanted to join... I wanted to establish close friendships — other than living in a residence hall or dormitory."

"We promote a sense of brotherhood — it might be 50 guys but we try to operate as one."

Whether that is good for its members and the colleges or not, there is one indication enunciated by an administrator at Brown: "Look to the way the people vote with their feet."

The people seem to be voting Fraternity Row.

Ice cream sales tend to go up, not down, in times of economic recession, according to Sealright Co. The maker of ice cream packaging says shoppers buy ice cream as a treat when they are unable to indulge in more expensive things.

Nutrition For The Elderly Is Another Misconception

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — Public misconceptions about senior citizens' needs, abilities and preferences extend even to the food they eat, says a Sacramento nutritionist.

These misconceptions can be a major obstacle to providing older people with food they enjoy that is also nutritious, says Gloria Johnson. She's a registered dietitian and nutritionist who consults with skilled nursing facilities and the California State Department of Social Services in Sacramento.

"Most of us don't eat just to nourish our bodies," Ms. Johnson says. "We eat for social and psychological reasons."

She says many older people lose their appetites when they "suddenly find they have no meaningful social reasons for having meals — because they no longer have to prepare meals for a family, or they don't have to get up to go to a job."

It then becomes important to discover cues that stimulate older people's appetites — cues that are highly individual, Ms. Johnson says.

Many of the public's expectations about what older persons like to eat or can eat are unfounded, she says.

For instance, the notion that the elderly prefer soft, bland foods.

"I've known an older man who, although he did not have teeth with which to chew, preferred a T-bone steak," she says.

It's also important to find out what foods are socially significant.

The foods people associate with a sense of well-being are based on their backgrounds, Ms. Johnson says.

Some people want meat and potatoes at every meal. For some, ethnic food is acceptable, for others, a turn-off. "Some people have a positive association for white bread, but not for whole wheat."

Older people often will accept whatever is served "because they want to be agreeable. But they may not eat it because it just isn't appetizing to them."

Asking questions about food preferences may not help, she adds, so you're better off including older family members in meal planning and preparation.

Besides, these activities provide some exercise and a social reason for interest in meals.

Because older people usually get limited exercise and, consequently, need fewer calories, smaller portions are appropriate. Still, daily meals should include a variety of foods from all four food groups — milk, meat, vegetables and fruits, and breads and cereals.

Ms. Johnson says some elderly people have little motivation to eat nourishing foods because they show little concern for their physical future.

"It's never too late to practice good nutrition," she adds.

"Proper nutrition can reverse, or at least control some of the chronic diseases common in the elderly."

Obesity, cardiovascular diseases, diabetes, kidney and musculo-skeletal diseases — including osteoporosis and gouty arthritis — are among those affected by nutritional well-being, the dietitian says.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

A couple of years ago, mothers everywhere isolated a chunk of frustration out of their time frame and called it the "Terrible Twos."

The label stuck and today it still conjures up a picture of a 35-inch child with a lighted fuse coming out of each ear, three sets of feet and eight arms whose main purpose in life is to measure the stress factor of a mother.

Little is said about the "Terrible Twos."

For that matter, no one is quite sure at what age the Terrible Twos strikes, but it zeroes in on children who sometimes suffer from it for the rest of their lives.

If you want to stay up late and watch TV, your mother tells you you're too young. On the other hand if you throw a temper tantrum, your father reminds you you're too old.

If you want to play basketball, the coach tells you you're too small. An hour or so later when you want to play on the swings, the playground supervisor tells you you're too big.

Your grandmother tells you you're too small for the training bra, yet when you go to the movies and want to pay a child's price, the manager tells you you're too big.

If you want to wear heels on a date, you're too tall.

If you want to ride a two-wheeled bicycle, you're too short to reach the pedals.

If you want to sit on your mother's lap, you're too old.

No one who has ever broached the subject of marriage with their parents has been anything but too young, yet if you cry over it, you're too old.

If you wash dishes, you're too slow.

When you eat your ice cream, you're stuffing it in too fast.

If you're ambitious, you want too much and are in too big a hurry.

If you're satisfied with what you're doing you're too lazy to succeed.

We have all suffered from the Terrible Twos. We're always too early or too late, too fat or too thin, too unhappy or too silly.

In 18 years of writing this column, it has either been too long, too short, too late, too serious, or too far out. Will I ever be older than too?

I LOVE THE NEW ME

Janet Gwaltney Greenville, N.C.

When I needed to lose 128 pounds, I compared the weight loss programs in the area and I decided to try DIET CENTER because:

1. THERE WERE NO CONTRACTS. I did not have to pay a large sum of money in advance and obligate myself for any specific period of time. I had tried so many plans, and nothing worked for me so naturally I was skeptical. At DIET CENTER seeing my weight come down daily made a believer out of me.
2. THERE WERE NO SHOTS.

DRUGS, OR CHEMICALS USED AT DIET CENTER. What I found there was a well-balanced nutritionally sound diet and a behavior modification program to help me keep the weight off.

3. THERE WERE NO PRE-PACKAGED FOODS AT DIET CENTER. I lost my weight without having to buy expensive extra foods. I shopped at my regular food store, and my family was able to eat right along with me.

4. THERE WAS NO NEED FOR BODY WRAPS OR RIGID EXERCISE PROGRAMS. By following the well-balanced diet at DIET CENTER, I found my body tightened up naturally. While DIET CENTER does suggest that exercises such as walking be added to my daily routine, no rigid exercise program or body wraps are necessary for inch loss. As my weight came down, the inches seemed to melt away.

5. AT DIET CENTER I DID NOT FEEL DEPRIVED. I was not hungry, I did not experience nervousness or fatigue. I feel great, and my friends tell me that I look great.

SUMMARY: Diet Center offers a program of private, daily counseling by trained professionals - not only have the Diet Center counselors lost weight on the program - but they have the educational and professional backgrounds to qualify them to help others like me to reach their goals.

Complex Means Payroll

There was a time when the announcement that the state planned to build a prison camp in an area was greeted with less than enthusiasm.

Presently, however, North Carolina has under construction a multimillion dollar correctional complex at Maury that bears little relation to the prison camps of old.

The construction stage has meant money in circulation which has had impact in a county the size of Greene. When the facility is operational it will mean a payroll of considerable importance to a rural county. When the facility opens in early 1983 it will require staffing 24 hours each day, seven days a week. And that will mean that 269 employees will be needed for the 480 inmates.

David Chester, superintendent for the Eastern Correctional Center, said that some employees of the minimum custody field unit at Maury will be transferred. Others will be promoted. The opening of the center will also mean that a number of new people will be employed. The largest need will be for correctional officers in a salary range of about $11,000 to $16,000.

There will also be a need for personnel in food service, administrative areas and maintenance.

Correctional facilities inevitably mean incarceration for some, but they also mean employment for others and the Maury facility will be a major source of employment in Greene County.

Too Old To Learn? Not At 94

The mother of former governor Terry Sanford is going back to college.

Well adult education is in these days.

True, but Mrs. Sanford is 94 years old. She says she is not interested in modern history, having lived through it, so she signed up for ancient history courses at St. Andrews Presbyterian College.

Of course, education is nothing new to Mrs. Sanford. She taught school for many years in between raising two sons and two daughters. And she is credited with inspiring the interest in public education that Terry Sanford, now president of Duke University, showed while governor.

Today she is providing inspiration to us all — and perhaps putting a few of us to shame — as she seeks to acquire new knowledge at an age many years past the time when some of us have already given up.

NEVER THOUGHT WE'D SEE THE DAY!

BY JAMES KILPATRICK

One Infallible Sniffer

WASHINGTON — Law enforcement officers here are pleasantly agog at an opinion that just floated into town from the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 2nd Circuit. The opinion came in the case of U.S. vs. Waltzer. The facts were as follows:

At the airport in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., an alert county sheriff noted suspicious behavior in a boarding passenger — extreme nervousness, fidgeting and shaking. First flight jitters? Not likely. The sheriff, suggesting some mischief was afoot, learned that the passenger, name of Waltzer, had a one-way ticket to Kennedy Airport in New York. He telephoned ahead to officials of the Drug Enforcement Administration.

At Kennedy, a reception committee from the DEA awaited the suspect. Among its members was a sniffing dog named Kane. According to the court, "Kane had a perfect record of past alerts." On each occasion his alerts had led to the discovery of narcotics. The DEA agents watched Waltzer retrieve his luggage. Then they put Kane to work. Aha! He alerted like a bird dog pointing quail.

One thing led to another. The agents arrested Waltzer, seized the concealed narcotics, and the case came on for trial. The defendant moved to suppress the evidence on the grounds that the agents had acted on little more than a flimsy suspicion generated by the observations of a Florida sheriff. Not so, said the court. The DEA agents had far better reason to find probable cause: They had the talented nose of Sniffer Kane.

"We regard the dog's designation of the luggage as itself establishing probable cause — enough for the arrest, more than enough for the stop... The testimony indicated that the dog Kane had a record of 100 percent accuracy. Given that record of accuracy and the designation of luggage connected to Waltzer by independent evidence, the DEA agents did not have to stand helplessly by while Waltzer claimed the luggage and left the airport."

Canine identification, is non-intrusive, discriminating and, given a dog such as Kane, reliable. The sniffing of suspicious baggage involves no intrusion upon protected privacy. After all, "odor is extrinsic to the luggage, which is not opened, and the sniffing discloses only contraband, not other items in the bags." Moreover, "the owner is not subjected to the inconvenience and possible humiliation entailed in other less discriminate and more intrusive methods."

Now, there is an opinion, as every canine lover will agree, that is chop-licking good. It opens all kinds of possibilities. Now that the faithful Kanes of this world have been certified as reliable informants, whose noses alone are sufficient to establish probable cause, perhaps the marijuana mob could be infiltrated by hairy agents from the DEA. What kindpin of cocaine could suspect a friendly dalmatian? Perhaps real pigeons, not stool pigeons, could be trained to flutter revealingly in the presence of hash. Even a policeman's horse could say neigh.

The prospects are not entirely juicy. The U.S. Court of Appeals for the 9th Circuit last year ruled the other way — that the alert of a sniffing dog is not enough. Out of personal experience, I may add that while Kane may be infallible, other sniffers are not. We once had a distinguished guest to luncheon, and a pretty young woman from the Secret Service — she was pretty even in a flak suit — brought in a sniffing Labrador to check for bombs.

The crew puffed up to the attic, and there this darling little beast stuck out her pretty pink tongue at a foot locker left behind by a son in the Army. Alert! The foot locker was locked, but the lock yielded to a paper clip and a bobby pin. Inside, the wary agents found an old sweatshirt from Auburn University, two pairs of sneakers and three

Strauss Will Help Reagan

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — After one hour alone with Robert Strauss, Secretary of State George Shultz won the backing of the influential Democratic power broker for President Reagan's Mideast peace plan — especially important because of Strauss's high visibility and prestige in the American Jewish community.

Strauss, who has a closer relationship with Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak than any other U.S. politician, has been asked to help President Reagan with both Israel and the Arab states. He was President Jimmy Carter's Mideast peace emissary after the 1978 Camp David accords.

A footnote: The White House ordered Shultz to arrange long briefings with former presidents and secretaries of state in an effort to show a united U.S. front to Israel and the Arabs. One message: Even if Israel rejected the Reagan plan, the president "is committed to carrying through."

Bob Michel Rises
Secret Democratic polls reveal a significant rise during August in the fortunes of beleaguered House Republican leader Robert Michel in his Peoria, Ill., district.

Michel has been targeted for defeat by the National Committee for an Effective Congress (NCEC) and other liberal political action groups. His district, no longer so Republican after reapportionment, is wracked with high unemployment. Nevertheless, the latest polls reflect admiration of his role as a congressional leader and give him a widening though not safe lead over G. Douglas Stephens, his 31-year-old neophyte Democratic challenger.

A footnote: The same secret Democratic poll shows an abrupt drop in Michel's district during August by former Democratic Sen. Adlai Stevenson, the Democratic nominee against Republican Gov. James Thompson.

Derwinski To ACDA?
Conservative senators and Reaganite bureaucrats in the national security bureaucracy are pushing hard for a top spot at the turbulent arms control agency for outgoing Rep. Ed Derwinski, the conservative Illinois Republican who lost his primary election as a result of redistricting.

ACDA Director Eugene Rostow has failed to win strong White House backing for the Senate confirmation of his two top aides, Robert Grey and Norman Terrell. They face a Senate filibuster by the conservatives because of their service in past Democratic administrations.

The conservatives, led by Sen. Jesse Helms, are eyeing this solution to end the long deadlock over Grey and Terrell: Derwinski to get Grey's job as deputy ACDA director. Grey will be demoted to a lesser job, Terrell to be dropped. White House personnel aides like the idea, but insiders say Rostow might resign.

Hatfield's Revenge
An angry Sen. Mark Hatfield, chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, warned President Reagan privately two weeks ago that a veto of the $14 billion supplemental bill would cost him his program of economic aid for the Caribbean Basin. But he was privately blamed by the White House for the veto.

Hatfield was described as "livid" at the mere thought the president might veto the over-priced money bill. The main reason for the veto is what one White House aide called "Mark Hatfield's pet rocks" — such as some $250 million for job training.

If the veto is sustained, Hatfield will be in excellent position to exercise his own veto of the Caribbean Basin Initiative by excluding it from all future money bills. Such revenge could hurt U.S. relations in the volatile Caribbean area much more than it hurts Ronald Reagan.

THIS AFTERNOON

Cooperation Rule

By PAUL T. O'CONNOR
RALEIGH — Last spring, police here apprehended a pair of shoplifters in a local store. One of the thieves was a woman in her mid-thirties who was later convicted in district court. Her partner was her 13-year-old daughter.

The daughter was first interviewed by Wake County juvenile court counselors and then brought into Juvenile Court. The counselors and the judge agreed — this was not a bad kid. A little mixed-up, for sure, but a kid who could really benefit from counseling at Raleigh's Haven House for teens. And the child was very interested in getting the help. So the judge's disposition assigned her to the halfway house.

The child never made it there. Her parents' permission was needed and mom just refused to sign over the child, says Steve Williams, Wake County's chief court counselor. Williams told this story last month after he persuaded the Governor's Crime Commission to support legislation that would require parents to participate in court-ordered treatment for their children.

According to Williams, cases like Mama Shoplifter's refusal to help her child are not rare in North Carolina. There are many different circumstances under which a parent's cooperation is needed in treating a troubled child and many of the parents are saying they can't be bothered.

In some instances, the child will simply need a ride to and from a counseling center. The parents will refuse — won't even give them bus fare. In some cases, a child's troubles will be traced back to her parents' drinking problems. Family counseling might be the prescribed treatment for the problem but the parents will refuse to participate. "I don't need no counselling. I don't have a drinking problem. That kid's just bad."

The crime commission recommendation would give judges the authority to include parents in their order. The judge could order that a child and his parents take part in family counseling. If the child showed up and the parents didn't, they'd be liable for a civil contempt of court citation.

The commission reasoned that the current law "places the entire burden of a child's behavioral problem and resulting treatment program on the child's shoulders when it is frequently the parents who are at least equally responsible."

Some judges currently exercise the authority proposed in this bill. They claim it's an inherent part of their franchise. But members of the commission said the judges may be taking upon themselves a power no law specifically gives them.

Williams thinks the law would be only fair. There are moves afoot to give juvenile court judges the authority to order reluctant status offenders to undergo treatment. They are children who have broken no law but who run away and skip school. If the state is going to force unwilling children to take treatment, the state should also create a mechanism so children who want treatment can get it even though their parents won't cooperate.

The law as proposed would not affect parents who had legitimate reasons for failing to help their children. In the case where the parents did not own a car, for example, they would not be found in contempt for failing to drive their children to a treatment center.

Back in 1979, the Juvenile Code Commission recommended legislation that would have made parents of undisciplined juveniles accountable for their children's actions and for court-ordered treatment. Some of the language of those recommendations became law in 1980.

Greenville Baha'is recently received word of another execution of one of their co-religionists by the Iranian government. According to the report from the Baha'i National Center in Wilmette, Illinois, Ali Naimiyah was executed August 11 in the northwest city of Urumiyah after one year's imprisonment. His execution brings to almost 130 the number of Baha'is known to have been executed or kidnapped by revolutionary authorities.

The execution followed by one day the United States Foreign Affairs Committee's unanimous resolution which condemned Iran's "conscious effort to destroy the Baha'i community." The U.S. Senate has passed, without dissent, on June 30 an identical resolution.

According to Karen Tarlo, local Baha'i spokesperson, Iran has intensified its violent harassment and pressure designed to force Baha'is to convert to Islam. Other actions against the Baha'is have included the widespread burning and looting of homes, destruction of Baha'i holy places and cemeteries, thousands of dismissals of Baha'is from their jobs and schools, and hundreds of summary arrests of Baha'i leaders.

Besides the U.S. Congress, other national and international governing bodies, including the United Nations Human Rights Commission, the European Parliament, and governments of Canada, West Germany, Australia, and Great Britain have spoken out against what U.S. Baha'i officials are calling "the intended genocide of the 300,000 Baha'is of Iran."

The Baha'i Faith, with its teachings of world unity and peace, the equality of men and women, and the elimination of all forms of prejudice, has aroused the antagonism and prejudice of the dominant Muslim clergy in Iran. Individuals and groups wanting additional information on the Faith and the persecutions in Iran are invited to attend Sunday evening discussion groups at 7 p.m. at the Tarlo home, 1728 W. Not A Certain Turning Point

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) —

Whatever it is that is going on out there in the marketplace, it is being interpreted by millions as a turning point, for better or worse, but don't be too certain of it.

Those who believe the turn is for the better are pawing and pushing their way through the crowds in order to turn their money into stocks, and they aren't all that particular either.

That much is indicated by the rise of all but one of 86 industries in the Standard & Poor's 500-stock index during August, when the big rally began and in 16 trading days advanced the Dow Jones industrial average 149 points.

Stocks rise, it is said, because people see a better economic future, but that isn't necessarily true about gold or silver, and they too are racing to the skies.

leaped 81 cents to $8.78 an ounce in just one day, Friday, Sept. 3.

Why are both stock prices and the prices of these metals rising? Aren't stock-price increases supposed to mean good news ahead? And aren't gains in gold and silver supposed to indicate insecurity?

Until lately, that has been the general notion about the relative merits of these investments, but apparently it holds no longer. Now, it is said, foreign investors are so shaken they'll take either rare metals or U.S. stocks.

The feeling among some foreigners, especially Latin Americans, it is said, is that either rare metals and U.S. stocks are preferable to investments in their own countries, where economies are in such deep trouble.

That they view the U.S. economy as a secure haven suggests the depth of their insecurities, because the U.S. economy, as nobody could be unaware, is beset by some of the worst times in many decades.

Strength For Today

WRESTLING WITH THE INEXPRESSIBLE

Many people demur over accepting the doctrine of the Trinity.

What is the doctrine? The word "Trinity" does not occur in the Bible. The doctrine of the Trinity is man's awkward attempt to relate certain apparently irreconcilable facts which the Bible presents.

We believe in the unity of God. "The Lord our God is one God." Yet at our Lord's baptism the Heavenly Father spoke, calling Jesus his Son, and the Holy Spirit descended in the form of a dove. The theological paradox which the human mind has never been able to satisfactorily understand — and which we try to explain in the doctrine of the Trinity — is that although God is one, He is set forth in the Bible as Father, Son, and Holy Spirit. These are three persons — that is, endowed with personality. Yet, although separate, they are united — the great Three in One.

In the doctrine of the Trinity, man tries to express infinite truth by the use of finite terms. — Elisha Douglass

Congress Returning To Face Varied Controversies

By DAVID ESPRO
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress returns this week for the final month of an election-year session, still struggling with controversies over federal spending and social issues such as abortion and school prayer.

The most pressing item on the agenda when both the House and Senate return from a summer break on Wednesday is a presidential veto of a $14.2 billion money bill.

President Reagan rejected the measure after Congress left town last month, saying it included nearly $1 billion more than is needed on domestic programs for the current fiscal year.

Although the measure was approved with ease by a Congress eager to begin a vacation in August, congressional leaders predict the veto will be sustained if it comes to a vote.

In California with the vacationing president Monday, deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said the administration is "cautiously optimistic" about the outcome.

An attempt to override the veto could take place in the House as early as Wednesday. If that fails and the veto is sustained, Congress will have to draft a second measure, since new legislation is needed to meet civilian and military payrolls.

In addition, about 19,000 employees of the Internal Revenue Service face a midweek layoff if the issue isn't resolved. Those layoffs also could be avoided by an internal agency money transfer, which requires authorization by the chairmen of congressional budget committees.

Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., one of the most economy-minded members of the Senate, announced today he would vote to override the veto. Proxmire, ranking Democrat on the Senate Appropriations Committee, denied that the emergency money bill "would bust the budget as claimed by President Reagan."

But however that issue is resolved, it is only prelude to debate over the 13 money bills needed to keep the entire federal government running for the 1983 fiscal year, beginning Oct. 1.

None of the measures — each of which traditionally consumes hours of debate in both the House and Senate — has been approved. Reagan has indicated he is prepared to veto any bill that spends more than is called for in the budget plan Congress approved last June.

Some congressional officials predict the House and Senate will agree on only one or two of the 13 bills by the end of the current fiscal year on Sept. 30. That, in turn, would require drafting an emergency catch-all bill to keep the entire government running on Oct. 1.

It is precisely that type of measure that Reagan vetoed a year ago, ordering parts of the government shut down for a day in a dramatic confrontation that kept Congress in session for most of a weekend.

Another pending proposal calls for a constitutional amendment to balance the federal budget.

The Republican-controlled Senate already has approved such a plan, but it is bottled up in the House Judiciary Committee.

Republicans, convinced they have a valuable campaign issue as well as an effective plan to hold down federal spending, are expected to mount a full-scale attempt to secure passage of the proposal in the House.

As for the social issues, time is running out on Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., and other conservatives struggling to overcome a liberal-led filibuster against efforts to sharply restrict abortions and permit prayer in public schools.

The abortion and school prayer amendments are attached to another measure that must pass by Sept. 30, this one raising the national debt limit.

Helms has introduced a separate anti-abortion bill that includes a congressional declaration that life begins at conception and a permanent prohibition on the use of federal funds for abortion.

There is also a chance for a Senate vote on a proposed constitutional amendment that would allow either Congress or state legislatures to regulate abortions. But even Helms concedes that plan is unlikely to attract the two-thirds vote needed for passage.

On school prayer, Helms is also pushing a proposal to prohibit the Supreme Court from acting on school prayer cases. Opponents say this proposal is unconstitutional.

There is little sentiment in Congress for voting on either the abortion or the prayer issue, particularly as elections draw near.

So even if Helms wins in the Senate, final action in the Democrat-controlled House seems unlikely this year.

Anglican Bishop Says Forces Of African Segregation Frightened

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — South African leaders who support racial segregation are "powerful but frightened," according to an Anglican bishop here to address a convention of Episcopalians.

"The people who are perpetrators of injury in our land aren't sprouting horns or tails," said Bishop Desmond Tutu, a black South African who has opposed his country's policy of apartheid, or racial segregation.

"They're just ordinary people like you and me. We are talking about ordinary human beings who are scared," he said. "Wouldn't you be if you were outnumbered 5-to-1?"

Tutu, 50, and Vice President George Bush were the scheduled guest speakers today at a joint session of the Episcopal Church's House of Bishops and lay-clergy House of Delegates. The church's six-day governing convention opened Sunday.

Tutu, the general secretary of the South Africa Council of Churches, lost his passport last year for his outspoken criticism of apartheid. U.S. churches used diplomatic channels to secure limited travel documents for Tutu's trip.

Until he arrived Sunday, it was uncertain whether he would be allowed to come, said Presiding Bishop John M. Allin of the U.S. Episcopal Church.

The 3 million-member church is part of the worldwide Anglican communion of 28 national churches totalling 70 million members, including the Anglican Church of South Africa.

Bush, Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Connor and Atlanta Mayor Andrew Young, a former U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, all intervened on Tutu's behalf, Allin said. Mrs. O'Connor is an Episcopalian. Young is a former minister in the United Church.

Tutu spoke at New Orleans's Grace Episcopal Church of how shocked he was to be allowed to leave his country.

"I'm surprised, but a Christian is one who keeps being an eternal optimist," he said.

Tutu was recently given an honorary doctorate of sacred theology by Columbia University in New York, which described him as a "fearless advocate of justice."

Columbia President Michael I. Sovern called Tutu a "a beacon" leading his people "to peaceful opposition to the injustices of apartheid and a symbol of hope for a unified South Africa."

Tutu was not allowed to attend the ceremony, and Sovern went to Johannesburg to present the degree.

In his talk, the bishop said South Africa's ruling whites "have tremendous privilege and they realize that if they share it, then there'd be much, much less to go around."

"But they're spending so much time trying to protect their privileges that they have very little time to enjoy them."

While his first commitment is to the underprivileged in South Africa, Tutu said, "the oppressors need to be liberated as much as the oppressed. Oppression dehumanizes the oppressor as much as the oppressed."

Foreigners Help College

CONCORD, N.C. (AP) — Foreign students are helping Barber-Scotia College keep its enrollment at 350 in spite of declining interest on the part of American students.

The four-year, predominantly black college now gets 41 percent of its students from other countries, mostly Africa and Central and South America.

"It has been a definite effort," said public relations director Melvin Walton of the school enrollment. "It's been necessary in terms of survival."

The college, which added staff to recruit foreign students, has developed an International Center, which offers counseling and aid. Studies and activities are planned with their interests and needs in mind.

Karen Duncan arrived at the school from Trinidad recently. She spent the time before classes getting acquainted.

"I learned the Barber-Scotia alma mater last night," she said, adding that she's anxious to begin studying early childhood education and wants to take part in a variety of school events.

"The people here are very genuine," said her father, Charles Duncan, 48, who flew to Concord with his wife and daughter. "They made us feel right at home."

The United Presbyterian Church USA founded Barber-Scotia in 1867 as a school for black women. Now it is being considered for the National Register of Historic Places.

It still is supported in part by the church and has expanded to a four-year, accredited college on a 40-acre campus with 25 buildings, athletic facilities and male and female students.

Actress Janet Gaynor Is Breathing Via Respirator

KEY TO THE PAST? — Dr. Hidemi Ichida of Japan's Osaka University, examines the fossilized left upper jawbone of a hominoid creature believed to have lived eight million years ago. A team headed by Ichida found the fossil last Friday in the remote Samburu Hills of north-central Kenya. The find may fill a big gap in the fossil record of man. (AP Laserphoto)

By FRANCES D'EMILIO
Associated Press Writer
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Actress Janet Gaynor was breathing through a respirator today to allow her broken ribs to heal and Broadway star Mary Martin was expected to walk only painfully after the auto accident that killed Miss Martin's longtime companion.

Meanwhile, the driver of the taxi that was carrying the two actresses said the van that rammed the cab broadside Sunday night came through the intersection "like a bat out of you-know-what."

Police said the van driver, Richard Cato, 36, of San Francisco, was booked for investigation of drunk and reckless driving, investigation of vehicular manslaughter, investigation of drunk driving, speeding and running a red light.

Miss Gaynor, the 75-year-old screen veteran whose work in three silent films earned her the first Oscar for best actress, underwent four hours of surgery Monday.

Afterward, her vital signs were stable, but "the outcome... will not be decided for many days," said Dr. Frank Lewis, assistant chief of surgery at San Francisco General Hospital.

"She had multiple trauma and has needed nine pints of blood and she's likely to need more. In a lady her age, the magnitude of the injuries is very critical."

She was listed in critical but stable condition today, said nursing supervisor Leonard Jones.

Miss Gaynor was fully conscious but unable to speak because of the respirator, said Lewis. Because of Miss Gaynor's age, he was reluctant to say when she might be out of danger.

Surgeons repaired Miss Gaynor's torn bladder. After the operation, she continued to bleed from pelvic injuries, Lewis said. She also had 11 broken ribs.

Miss Martin, 68, broke two ribs and her pelvis and had a bruised kidney. She will be in the hospital at least two weeks, Lewis said, and her injuries will "make it uncomfortable for her to bear weight for some time" when she walks.

Producer Paul Gregory, Miss Gaynor's 62-year-old husband, suffered broken legs in the crash, Lewis said. Both Miss Martin and Gregory were "stable, awake and doing well," he said.

Killed was Ben Washer, Miss Martin's longtime personal manager and companion.

Police said a van Sunday night drove down hilly Franklin Street, apparently through a red light, and barreled into the right side of a cab driven by Ronald Drury. Miss Gaynor, Miss Martin, Gregory and Washburn were passengers, going to dinner at a Chinatown restaurant.

"I only saw (the van) for a split second and it was coming like a bat out of you-know-what," said Drury, who received minor injuries.

After the cab was hit, it spun out of control across the intersection, coming to rest against a tree.

"It was very quiet and the people were all unconscious, still, and bleeding," he said. "It was a terrible sight."

Jules Power, a producer of the public TV show "Over Easy" that Miss Martin hosted, spoke to her after she was hospitalized.

"She was reasonably coherent," he said. "She knew who I was and she knew that Ben had been killed. She asked me about Paul and Janet."

Jones said the hospital was receiving so many calls about the actresses that it was almost impossible to do their work.

Cato posted $3,500 bail and was released pending an appearance Friday in Municipal Court, said Sheriff's Deputy Joseph Getz.

Miss Martin became an overnight sensation when she sang "My Heart Belongs to Daddy" in the 1938 musical "Leave It to Me," and stopped the show.

Other major roles included Nellie Forbush in the Broadway musical "South Pacific" the title role in "Peter Pan" both on Broadway and television, and with Robert Preston in the musical, "I Do! I Do!"

She won Emmy awards for "Peter Pan" and "Annie Get Your Gun," and garnered three Tony Awards, Broadway's highest honor.

At the dawn of the "talkies," Miss Gaynor won the Academy Award for her work in three silent films in 1927 and 1928: "Seventh Heaven," "Street Angel" and "Sunrise."

She retired after 35 films in 1939 and married Gilbert Adrian, a dress designer. He died in 1959, the year she returned to acting, in "The Midnight Sun," her first Broadway role. In 1980, she returned to the footlights for a Broadway version of "Harold and Maude."

Miss Gaynor and Gregory were married in 1964.

Miss Martin's husband of 33 years, Richard Halliday, died in 1973. Washer visited her afterward, and stayed on as her personal manager. In a 1976 interview, Washer said: "I just never moved out. Mary is not the kind of dame who can be alone."

Power said Washer lived in a separate wing of Miss Martin's home in the swank Pacific Heights section of San Francisco.

Link Hopes To Pipeline

ELIZABETHTOWN, N.C. (AP) — The economy of southeastern North Carolina should receive a boost with completion of a pipeline between Bladen and New Hanover counties, local officials say.

"We are actually going to build the darn thing," said Paul Butler, Bladen County's industrial developer. "There is no way this project is not going to bring a lot of new industry to the area."

"We already have the land, the available labor force and major electrical grids for power," he added. "All we've been without is plenty of water and now we are going to have that."

The idea of using the Cape Fear River for coastal industries was ridiculed throughout the 1970s by critics who said it would be impossible to forge an agreement between neighboring counties to finance the project.

But those predictions were proven wrong with last week's sale of low-interest utility bonds totaling $4.5 million on the New York Bond Market.

The sale of the bonds and matching state and federal water grants guarantees half the $28 million the project is expected to cost.

Some municipalities and industries have already contracted for the water, while additional bond sales will be offered as new industry contracts for part of the remaining 20 million gallons of water.

According to plans drawn by the Wilmington engineering firm of Willis, O'Brien and Gere, work on the pipeline will take about two years to complete.

Butler, who is also chairman of the Lower Cape Fear Water and Sewer Authority, said the untreated water will be used to supply participating municipalities and industries.

Butler said water from the project will go to Brunswick County and two New Hanover County plants.

Bladen and Columbus counties have the option of tapping into the system at existing water rates, but will not help fund the initial construction phase of the project.

Seeks Treasure

VICTORIA, Seychelles (AP) — The government is considering an offer by a West German restaurateur to search for pirate treasure said to be worth $200 million, the official news agency says.

Legend has it that a cache of diamonds, jewelry and other valuables was buried on the main island of Mahe in 1721 by a French pirate, Olivier La Vasseur, known as "La Buse," or "The Buzzard."

More than 200 treasure hunters have looked in vain for the riches, but Herbert Echler of Hochfelin, Bavaria, told the government he has extensive information about the precise location and wants permission to dig.

Taught Skills In Job-Hunting

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Thornwell Guthery says he was embarrassed to tell people he was unemployed after he left his post as vice president of Goodwill Industries of Southern Piedmont Inc. in June.

"I didn't want anyone to know," he said. "I thought it was kind of a disgrace."

But Guthery, 45, changed his mind after joining a local club whose members are taught job-hunting skills.

"I found out that some of the finest people I know are without jobs and searching every day," Guthery said. "I also found out that the more people who know you're job hunting, the better chance you'll have of finding one. Now I tell everyone I know."

An increasing number of white-collar workers are taking their place in the unemployment line, and some of them are seeking help through job clubs as Guthery did.

Keener Smathers, a 46-year-old former Appalachian State University professor, put together an 11-member Occupations Network job club in late July. Four people now have employment and several others think they're close.

His success has encouraged Smathers to form more clubs.

Members meet once a week to review job-search strategies suggested by Smathers, a midlife career counselor and founder of The Mid-Career Institute in Pinehurst.

Members also report on progress made during the previous week, pass on possible job leads and provide moral support.

"People give each other leads, and contacts are multiplied far beyond one person's capabilities," Smathers said.

Smathers has relocated his Mid-Career Institute from Pinehurst to Charlotte to help expand the job clubs. He plans to levy a $95 fee for participation in future eight-week sessions.

Smathers helps participants identify their marketable skills, reminds them that finding a job is a full-time job itself, tells them that 75 percent of jobs are never advertised and helps prepare them for the most common questions asked during job interviews.

"I got the idea from a similar group in Illinois designed for blue-collar workers, and I figured it would work with white-collar people too," Smathers said.

Bill Trigg, 35, who recently was hired as the night manager at a Holiday Inn in Charlotte, said the club was a big help.

"Most of all, I realized there was nothing wrong with me just because I didn't have a full-time job," he said. "There are a lot of people today in the same situation. It helped my self-esteem."

Firearms

Arrest Made

David Jon Lowe, 25 of 302 North Oak St., and Glenn Otto Dystra, 20 of 105 North Oak St., were arrested by Greenville police early Sunday on charges of discharging firearms in the city and possession of marijuana.

Chief Glenn Cannon said the two were taken into custody in a field near the intersection of Third and Hickory Streets about 12:05 a.m. where they had been firing a .22 caliber pistol.

The chief said investigators discovered a small quantity of marijuana in the car the two men were traveling in.

WEATHER FORECAST — The National Weather Service forecasts showers on Wednesday for most of Florida, the Midwest and the Southwest. Sunny to partly sunny skies with generally warm weather is expected for most of the nation. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
 Mother Nature continued to smile on North Carolina today and was expected to remain in a good mood through Wednesday, meaning more cool, dry weather and cloudless skies.

In fact, the National Weather Service says the state should remain dry throughout most of the week, continuing a trend of below-normal precipitation that began about a month ago.

Cool, dry air centered over the state is expected to be reinforced by a large area of high pressure in southern Ontario, Canada. The high was moving across the eastern U.S. this morning.

Leading the high pressure system was a weak, dry cold front that was over northern Virginia and Kentucky this morning and should be moving south across North Carolina tonight.

By early Wednesday, the front should be south and east of North Carolina, leaving a few clouds over interior sections and a brisk northeast breeze along the coast. But because the air is dry on both sides of the front, little or no rain is expected.

Later this week, a persistent northeasterly flow of air off the ocean may bring occasional cloudiness but the absence of any strong weather disturbances on the horizon should mean generally rain-free weather the next several days.

Monday saw a beautiful end to the Labor Day weekend. Under blue skies, temperatures reached the low 80s most places and held to the 70s on the Outer Banks and in most mountain areas.

Fair skies continued overnight with temperatures dropping into the 50s except remaining in the 60s near the coast.

Temperatures should reach the upper 70s to around 80 in the mountains with mid-80s most other places. A few clouds will appear Wednesday with a somewhat stronger and cooler northeasterly breeze, but recreational weather still looks good for Wednesday.

On the coast, boaters will have northeasterly winds at 10 to 15 mph today. The wind and waves are expected to increase during the next few days.

Armed Forces Suppliers Do Not Feel Recession

By The Associated Press
 While many industries in North Carolina and South Carolina face declining sales and low profits, manufacturers of food and clothing for the armed services say they've been insulated from the recession.

The military relies on North Carolina and South Carolina to house soldiers at 27 major installations but it also relies on manufacturers in the two states to outfit its foot soldiers.

McRae Industries in Mount Gilead supplies about one of every three combat boots worn by the nation's military recruits. In Mullins, S.C., Southern Packaging and Storage Co. prepares enough C-rations, packets of emergency chow, to feed more than half the nation's troops in the field. Workers at the three-year-old Carolina Parachute Co. in Roxboro also supply the Pentagon. They sew 24 different varieties of nylon cargo parachutes and harnesses. In 1981, military contracts for about 3,000 parachutes amounted to nearly $1.4 million, or 99 percent of the company's sales.

"Did you ever hear the old saying that an army travels on its stomach?" asks Paul Jones, vice president and general manager of Southern Packaging and Storage Co.

The company has been making C-rations since the early 1940s. The company received $79 million last year to assemble 28.8 million of the plastic pouches of beef stew, dried turkey, hot dogs and chicken loaf.

Another company that's enjoyed repeat business from the Pentagon is McRae Industries.

Founded in 1959 as a children's shoe company, McRae Industries began making waterproof leather boots exclusively at the height of the Vietnam War. Production has grown from 15,000 pairs a month to more than 45,000 pairs now.

Company president Branson McRae says the company had sales of $14 million in 1981 and he expects the market to remain steady.

"I haven't seen any substitute for shoes yet, have you?" he said.

North Carolina has 20 of the nation's 919 major military installations, including Fort Bragg with 40,000 soldiers, the largest active military population of any base in the nation.

South Carolina has seven major installations, including Fort Jackson near Columbia, which runs about 10,400 Army recruits through basic training each year. That's more than any of the six other Army boot camps.

Mike Shutak, public affairs officer at the Army's Fort Bragg, speculates that good weather, the lack of many labor unions and a concentration of major military bases have made the states a favorite location of defense contractors specializing in infantry support equipment.

Because most of the military's budget is geared toward sophisticated weapons, firms in the two states receive a relatively small share of total military spending — about $860 million, or 1 percent of the national total, in North Carolina in fiscal 1981 and $482 million, 0.6 percent of the national total, in South Carolina for the same year.

Begin Trial

In Bidrigging

ELIZABETH CITY, N.C. (AP) — The government was preparing today to resume prosecuting companies and executives charged with rigging bids on Pasquotank County's $8.3 million water system.

Five firms and six executives were to go on trial today in Pasquotank County Superior Court.

County commissioners called for a state investigation when a county engineering firm estimated the system's bids, opened in May 1979, were $2 million higher than expected.

Dewitt P. Hodges, vice president of Propst Construction Co., pleaded guilty last week to conspiracy to restrain trade and was fined $5,000, given a six-month suspended sentence and two years of probation. His firm was fined $70,000.

Also indicted on charges of submitting prearranged bids on the project are: Bryant Utilities Construction Co. Inc. of High Point and officer J. Lyndon Wall; Dickerson Inc. of Monroe and officer Frank W. Carpenter; R.G.K. Inc. of Burlington and officer Ronald G. Kirkpatrick; T.A. Loving Co. of Goldsboro and officers James Jerry Smith and Samuel P. Hunter and Hickory Sand Co. Inc. of Hickory and officer Wayne H. Propst.

Lebanese Army Is Taking Over West Beirut Lines

By FAROUK NASSAR
Associated Press Writer
BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The Lebanese army took over forward positions of leftist Moslem militiamen facing Israeli lines in west Beirut today, averting a possible Israeli attack on the Moslem-populated half of the Lebanese capital.

Regular Lebanese units in armored personnel carriers, trucks and jeeps moved into four beachside neighborhoods on Beirut's southern flank at mid-morning and the leftists pulled out peacefully from all four areas.

Women from balconies threw rice and rose water on army units as they deployed in the former stronghold of the Palestine Liberation Organization for the first time since the 1975-76 Lebanese civil war.

An Israeli army officer watched the progress of the deployment and shook hands with the Lebanese army commander after the Lebanese national flag was raised over the positions abandoned by the militiamen of the Shiite Moslem Amal organization.

The move followed an ultimatum from Israel warning that its army would march on west Beirut if the leftists, allies of the exiled Palestinian guerrillas, did not abandon their positions by 6 p.m. Monday, a Lebanese government spokesman said.

Just before the ultimatum was served through the U.S. Embassy in Lebanon, Israeli forces again advanced on a two mile arc across the cease-fire line along Beirut's southern flank, north of the city's international airport, the spokesman said.

The move brought the Israelis into the fringes of the former Palestine Liberation Organization stronghold abandoned by the guerrillas a week ago when they completed their evacuation of west Beirut.

Israeli forces set up machine gun positions in two United Nations centers in west Beirut's Bir Hassan neighborhood, U.N. sources said.

Correspondents saw Israeli Defense Minister Ariel Sharon inspecting the new positions on Monday.

A Lebanese government spokesman said Prime Minister Shafiq Wazzan got the leftist militia commanders agree to turn over their positions to the army at midnight and the army's deployment began at 8 a.m. (2 a.m. EDT) today.

The spokesman refused to comment on reports that PLO security chief Salah Khalaf crossed the Syrian border to inspect guerrilla positions in eastern Lebanon's Bekaa Valley on Sunday and visited Palestinian refugee camps in northern Lebanon on Monday.

Lebanon's state and privately owned radio stations said Khalaf was the first PLO leader to return to Lebanese soil after the evacuation. Beirut newspapers ran photographs of Khalaf addressing refugees by bullhorn in the camps of Baddawi and Nahr el-Bared.

It was not clear from media accounts whether Khalaf returned to Syria or was still in northern or eastern Lebanon — two sectors controlled by Syrian troops.

In related development, the Israeli army today denied earlier Lebanese news reports that its forces have taken over the embassies of Hungary and South Yemen in Beirut's oceanside Jnah neighborhood near Bir Hassan. The Israeli command in Tel Aviv said the army was "respecting the sovereignty of all foreign embassies in Beirut."

In related developments, Sharon demanded Lebanon sign a peace treaty with Israel amid threats of renewed violence over the abduction of eight Israeli soldiers in eastern Lebanon by leftist Lebanese militia and their Palestinian allies.

Sharon said Monday if the government of Lebanese President-elect Bashir Gemayel refuses to sign a treaty, southern Lebanon, which borders Israel, will have "a different status."

The architect of the June 6 Israeli invasion of Lebanon also said without a treaty, "we will secure a 40-50 kilometer (25-30 mile) wide security strip to keep it clear of artillery pieces and a threat of terrorist activity."

Sharon also told Israel Radio his government holds Syria responsible for the safe return of its soldiers abducted Saturday near the Israeli-held mountain village of Bhamdoun, 15 miles east of Beirut.

Israeli Deputy Prime Minister David Levy on Monday warned Israel had "20 ways to hit back at Syria" if the soldiers were not returned safely.

The leftist Lebanese al-Liwa newspaper carried a brief statement saying joint forces of leftist Lebanese and Palestinian guerrillas had "arrested" the soldiers. Sharon said they were abducted by guerrillas operating from behind Israeli lines in Syrian-held territory in Bekaa Valley.

Israel has repeatedly warned Syrian troops stationed in the Bekaa Valley to stop Palestinian guerrilla and leftist militiamen activities or face Israeli retaliation.

As Sharon demanded a peace treaty before a cheering crowd in the Israeli border town of Kiryat Shmonah, there were reports in Tel Aviv indicating disagreement among Israeli leaders over how hard to press Gemayel for a pact.

"We are not begging for a peace treaty, but it is our right and duty to make sure that there will be a peace treaty, because a peace treaty is a factor in our security," Sharon said. "We have made it clear to the Lebanese leaders that if their government signs peace, Lebanon will be united."

Gemayel reportedly wants Israel to settle for a de facto peace, including open borders and trade, but no formal document. Some top-level Israeli officials reportedly are counseling a low-key approach, contending Gemayel's grip on Lebanon is too weak to withstand the certain Arab outrage over such a treaty.

When Egypt signed the Camp David peace accords with Israel in 1979, it was cast out of the Arab League and still is recognized by only a handful of Arab nations. Lebanon also stands to lose extensive economic links with the Arab oil state and there is always threat of renewed civil war.

The Syrians have been in Lebanon since they went in as an Arab League peacekeeping force to end the 1975-76 civil war between the Christians and an alliance of Moslem leftist and Palestinian guerrillas.

Floor Discussions Over Lutheran Unity Slated

By LAURINDA KEYS
Associated Press Writer

SAN DIEGO (AP) — An American Lutheran Church member opposing a plan to merge three Lutheran bodies to form a unified 5.5 million-member church lamented a "mood of resignation" about the proposal.

Floor discussions on the issue of unity were scheduled today at the 11th general ALC convention. The two other Lutheran groups are convening simultaneously in Ohio and Kentucky.

If unification is approved by all three conventions, the churches will name a 70-member commission to iron out the details in time for the creation of a new Lutheran church body on Jan. 1, 1988.

The only sign of organized opposition to merger was in the ALC, where a theologically conservative group of 20 clergy known as the Committee for Church Cooperation has registered misgivings about organizational and theological differences.

The Rev. Duane Lindberg of Waterloo, Iowa, who heads the opposition group, said he sees a "danger of schism" if large segments of the church later become disappointed.

"Our primary concern is that the issue of the new Lutheran church be lifted up for open discussion and debate," he said before the convention began.

"I expect there will be some who do not want to proceed (with the merger) at this time. But I don't expect it to affect the vote," ALC president David Preuss said after opening the six-day convention Monday night with a sermon on reconciliation.

In a report prepared for release today, the ALC's Committee on Lutheran Unity said that when lay people and clergy in all three Lutheran groups were polled, the ALC had the lowest percentage of members supporting unification — 64 percent.

In the largest of the three groups, the 2.9 million-member Lutheran Church in America, 87 percent responded favorably to the merger plan. In the 100,000-member Association of Evangelical Lutheran Churches, 96 percent favored unification.

The 1,000 delegates meeting here represent 2.35 million ALC members, most of whom live in the states of Iowa, Minnesota, Wisconsin and the Dakotas.

The unification vote is planned Wednesday afternoon for all three conventions. The LCA is meeting in Louisville, Ky., and the AELC is meeting in Cleveland.

The ALC was formed in 1960 with the merger of four Lutheran denominations. Four other Lutheran bodies banded together in 1962 to form the LCA. The AELC was formed in 1976, mainly of congregations that left the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod because of its stiffened requirements of Bible interpretation.

Preuss said the most controversial issue before the convention is not unity but "the peacemaking resolution, because it calls for a nuclear freeze and for the United States to take the initiative with respect to that."

"There is no substantial movement in the ALC for unilateral disarmament, but there is a desire, I believe, for a posture of initiative from the U.S. toward nuclear disarmament," he said.

"God has called his people to be peacemakers," Preuss told the convention in its opening business meeting Monday night. "He has not given us detailed blueprints for peacemaking, but he does give us the charge and some directional signals."

TELETHON TOTAL — Jerry Lewis is shown at the end of his 17th annual Muscular Dystrophy Telethon along with a shot of the tote board showing $28,415,399 was raised this year. (AP Laserphoto)

Jerry's Telethon Take Down Due Hard Times

By ROBERT MACY
Associated Press Writer
LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Jerry Lewis says high unemployment and a sluggish economy are to blame for a 10 percent drop in pledges to his annual Muscular Dystrophy Telethon.

The 21½-hour telethon raised $28,415,399 over the holiday weekend — down $3,083 million from last year's record $31.5 million and the lowest amount pledged in five years. It was the first time in the telethon's 17-year history the pledges failed to exceed those of the previous year.

Lewis, who has often said his goal is one dollar more than the previous year's telethon, told a national audience that all winning streaks must come to an end.

"Given the current economic situation, it was bound to happen," Muscular Dystrophy Association spokesman Craig Wood said.

The total was the lowest since $26,841,490 was pledged in 1977. Pledges have exceeded $30 million each of the past three years.

Lewis' 17 telethons have raised more than $270 million.

The annual Labor Day weekend entertainment special started on an upbeat note Sunday with Lewis saying scientists were close to finding the cause of Duchenne muscular dystrophy, the most serious form of the crippling disease.

He said researchers were close to identifying which gene caused the hereditary disease and to identifying the protein that gene either fails to produce or produces improperly.

More than 50 celebrities participated in the show, broadcast live from Las Vegas to more than 200 local TV stations nationwide. It was co-hosted by Ed McMahon and Chad Everett.

Money raised by the show goes to MDA's research and medical services program covering 40 neuro-muscular diseases. The association has 10 research centers in the United States and England, and sponsors 600 research projects in the United States and 11 foreign countries.

Sheer Boredom Plagues U.S. Marines In Beirut

By G.G. LABELLE
Associated Press Writer
BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The U.S. Marines in Lebanon have met the enemy — and it is boredom.

"There's not much to do around here," Lance Cpl. Russ Starkey of Wheeling, W.Va. said Monday as he gazed around Beirut's hot, dusty port area. The air stank of smoke from burning piles of garbage. Asked where he spends his free time, Starkey said, "Asleep."

The North Carolina-based Marines, part of a three-nation peacekeeping force, arrived in Beirut Aug. 25. The Marines, based at Camp Lejeune, New River and Cherry Point facilities, have yet to put ammunition clips in their rifles.

For the first week or so, there was the excitement of watching the Palestinian guerrillas depart, to the tune of machine gun bursts fired into the air.

But the last guerrillas left Beirut harbor Wednesday, and since then Red Cross and diplomatic cars have comprised most of the traffic in the port area.

There is still occasional sniper fire in the area, and Lebanese leftist militiamen can be heard taking target practice not far away. But the Marines don't jump anymore when they hear gunfire.

"Sometimes it worries me that there is no reaction from our people," said Capt. Kenneth McCabe. He said he is trying to devise ways to keep the men alert. Boredom, he agreed, is the biggest problem the Marines face.

The 800 Americans are quartered in a high-rise bank building. Its windows were blown out by fighting, and its stairwells still smell of the animals that guerrillas once kept there.

Upstairs, the Marines have taken disinfectants and brooms to the rooms they call "Studio 54." The name of the New York discotheque was chosen because of the building's proximity to Checkpoint 54.

Inside, McCabe pointed to an ongoing poker game. "That has been the big pastime," he said. The Marines also play volleyball and read a mimeographed newspaper, "The Beirut Breeze."

The Marines are learning a little bit about Lebanon from their Lebanese army counterparts who speak English. Lt. Michael Leonard of Cincinnati got a cake from Lebanese soldiers to help him celebrate his first anniversary with Echo Company, the unit at the western entrance to the port.

But with departure scheduled by Sept. 10, it appears that these Marines will not have combat stories to tell when they return home.

About the closest they have come to seeing action was the departure of Palestine Liberation Organization chairman Yasser Arafat last week. Hundreds of Palestinians surged toward the Marines, shouting in Arabic. Following orders, the Marines held their ground and said nothing.

"It wasn't until the interpreters told us later that we found out that they were threatening us, saying they'd kill us if we didn't let them in," McCabe said.

No one was hurt.

Faulkner Takes Institute Post

Janice H. Faulkner, executive director of the North Carolina Democratic party, has accepted a position at East Carolina University's Regional Development Institute's, ECU officials have announced.

Faulkner, who served as an associate professor of English at ECU before her appointment to full-time party host, is RDI's new assistant to the director for projects.

Her responsibilities, said Faulkner, will include coordinating the institute's service projects, evaluating ongoing projects, reviewing projects and establishing priorities.

In addition, Faulkner added, she will be planning and coordinating meetings, seminars and in-service training programs for city managers and local government officials.

Faulkner will retain faculty rank, noted ECU officials.

PAC Groups Include A Publishing Giant, Too

By MIKE FEINSILBER
 Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - Among the interests that have dipped an oar in the political stream by creating political action committees - the stevedores, the peanut butter makers, the asbestos workers and the chiropractors - is one of the nation's news giants.

Through its political action committee, Time, Inc., has given $24,200 to 57 Democratic members of Congress and $12,850 to 30 Republicans since 1981.

They range from conservative Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, to liberal Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz., and include House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., House Republican Leader Robert Michel, Ill., the Democratic and Republican whips and key members of committees whose decisions could affect the fortunes of Time, Inc.

Political action committees, created by donations from business employees and members of unions or special interest groups, exist to funnel contributions to political candidates.

The top seven Democrats and the top four Republicans on the House Post Office and Civil Service Committee are recipients of Time, Inc., PAC money.

Runner Died In Footrace

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) - Rescue workers unsuccessfully tried to revive a 46-year-old man who collapsed as he crossed the finish line of an annual Labor Day 5,000-meter footrace in Matthews.

Roger Albert Gauthier of Matthews died at 10:12 a.m. at Charlotte's Presbyterian Hospital about 40 minutes after his collapse at the Stumptown Festival in the southeastern Mecklenburg County town.

Hospital spokesmen refused to comment on the cause of death, but rescue workers said Gauthier may have died of a heart attack.

Rescue workers said a Charlotte firefighter, also a runner in the race, was first to reach Gauthier.

"When he got to him, he (Gauthier) was breathing real rapidly, like he was hyperventilating," said Nancy Tadlock, a Union-Mecklenburg Rescue Squad attendant. She said Gauthier quickly stopped breathing and lost a pulse.

En route to the hospital, Tadlock and other medical attendants gave him cardio-pulmonary resuscitation for about 20 minutes, but he did not regain consciousness, she said.

Residential Fires Occur

Greenville firemen responded Sunday to two residential fires and a chlorine leak at the city waste treatment plant.

The home of Carlos and Ruby Dawson and Helen Robinson suffered heavy heat, smoke and water damage during a blaze which was reported at 4:36 p.m., firemen said. It is believed that the fire started when a dropped cigarette ignited a bed, fire officials said. The owner of the house is listed as James Holiday.

An 11:51 p.m. fire at a residence at 107 Beachwood Drive in Greenfield Terrace may have started because a nail was driven through electrical wiring, fire officials said. Damage was done to the kitchen of the house owned and occupied by Milton Taft.

At 3:18 p.m. the department assisted in controlling a chlorine leak at the waste water treatment plant. It was reported that the plant operator, John Cheeks, was transported to Pitt County Memorial Hospital because of inhalation of the gas from a leaking two-ton cylinder. He was treated and released and is back at work today, a spokesman at the waste water treatment plant said. Two firemen also inhaled the gas, but did not require hospitalization either, the fire department report showed.

"Remove the original." "Check the paper size." "Replenish toner." "Replenish paper." "Check the paper feed-in area."

The word is out on Sharp's new SF-781 copier. Because, technically, it's one of the most advanced copiers ever developed. You see, the SF-781 has microcomputer-controlled, voice-synthesized, self-diagnostic circuitry. In other words, it talks. And that's what really has people talking.

If the 781 encounters a copying problem, it tells you so - right out loud, in plain English. In fact, a voice will tell you where to look and what to do to correct the problem. That saves time and frustration. It saves paper wastage, troubleshooting and service calls, too.

Not only can the SF-781 talk, it also offers dual reduction capability. That means you can reduce two different kinds of oversized originals, either 11" x 17" or 8 1/2" x 14", down to standard-sized 8 1/2" x 11" copies. And that makes handling, filing and mailing your copies easier.

What's more, the 781 is available with an optional copy sorter and an automatic document feeder for even greater copying convenience.

If you'd like to see the copier that's becoming the talk of the town, talk to EOS today, and arrange to have a chat with an SF-781.

Georgia Snaps Clemson Win Streak

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — A shaky beginning turned into a winning night for John Lastinger, Georgia's untested junior quarterback who faced college football's defending national champion in his first starting assignment.

Facing Pirates Like New Start

By TOM FOREMAN Jr. AP Sports Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina State's season opener is history, but Coach Monte Kiffin says facing East Carolina next Saturday is almost like starting all over again.

"When you play 'em early, they'll be fired up," says Kiffin. "Whenever you play someone in the opening game, you know they're going to be playing extremely hard." The Pirates would likely give the Wolfpack a hard contest if for no other reason than it's an Atlantic Coast Conference opponent — the only ACC foe now on their schedule since North Carolina terminated the series last year.

Kiffin said Monday facing the Pirates in their season opener will cause some difficulties, especially because Coach Ed Emory has installed the I-formation to replace the wishbone.

"It's going to be the kind of game where we're going to have to really be able to adjust during the game," he said. "You can prepare for this and that, but there's no way you can prepare for everything. You've gotta go on what they did last year defensively, and offensively you don't have anything to go on."

East Carolina's coaching staff did some casual scouting last Saturday night, watching the Furman game from the end zone bleachers.

"It looked like they were having a staff meeting down in (Please Turn To Page 12)

"We reached down and found a way to win," Lastinger said Monday night after seventh-ranked Georgia ended No. 11 Clemson's 13-game winning streak 13-7 with two-time All-American Herschel Walker seeing action despite his broken thumb, but mostly as a decoy.

"It was not a picture perfect game by any means, but the main thing is we won the game," said Lastinger, who was erratic for most of the first half before connecting on passes of 27 and 9 yards to set up Kevin Butler's 39-yard field goal that gave Georgia a 10-7 lead nine seconds before intermission.

"That last drive just before the half helped me quite a bit," said Lastinger.

And the presence of Walker, who broke his right thumb on Aug. 21, also helped put some spark in the Bulldogs in the nationally televised encounter between the game's last two national champs.

Walker's best decoy effort came on his first play with 10:03 left in the first half. He lunged toward the left sideline, drawing a swarm of Tiger defenders, but the pitch went to Tron Jackson instead, and he raced toward the left side on a 41-yard scoring sprint that was nullified by a penalty.

Butler's late three-pointer in the second quarter provided the victory margin. He also kicked a 23-yarder just over five minutes into the third period.

Mistakes set up both touchdowns in the game.

William Perry fell on a Lastinger fumble at the Georgia 11 on the Bulldogs' second series in the game and three plays later Homer Jordan scored on a quarterback draw and the Tigers had a 7-0 lead after 7:51 had elapsed.

Defensive end Dale Carver's blocked punt gave Georgia a deadlock on the third play of the second quarter when teammate Stan Dooley caught the ball at the two and was hurled into the end zone by Clemson defenders.

"It was just a bust on their part," said Carver. "The guy on the outside didn't pick me up, and I ran in there free."

Most of the pregame hoopla had centered on Walker's playing status.

Dooley made the final decision at halftime," said Walker.

"I was surprised a great deal he used me to run the ball," Walker said. "My thumb got hit some, but right now it's feeling great."

"There were some holes there, but I just didn't hit them," he said. "I guess I was worried about fumbling."

"It was a defensive struggle in every sense of the word," said Dooley. "I didn't think we would ever get anything going offensively."

The defeat didn't stop Clemson Coach Danny Ford from clinging to hopes of repeating as national champions.

"We are not out yet," he said. "We just have to go back and work hard to improve each week."

Farewell To Fans

Willie Stargell Has His Day As Pittsburgh Rolls Past New York

By The Associated Press
What if they threw a party for Willie Stargell and 38,052 fans showed up at Three Rivers Stadium? Naturally, the Pirates would win and Stargell would get a base hit.

So, with the Pirates ahead of the New York Mets 6-1 in the eighth inning Monday, those 38,052 friends of Stargell stood as one and thanked him for 21 years of wonderful memories. And, following a two-minute standing ovation, Stargell got his 14th pinch hit of the season, a single to center field off Mets rookie Doug Sisk — who was pitching his first inning in the majors. That made Willie Stargell Day a total success.

Following his hit, Stargell was removed for a pinch-runner and left the field to a long ovation. He also stepped out of the dugout to tip his hat as the cheering continued.

Afterward, an emotionally spent Stargell, who will retire after the season, said to waiting reporters, "Please wait until tomorrow, I'm just..."

The festivities, which included an hour-long pregame ceremony during which Stargell received numerous gifts — and a telephone call from President Ronald Reagan — drew the largest crowd to Three Rivers since Opening Day 1981, when 40,332 people attended.

"He has never lost his compassion and humor," Reagan said. "He is one of the great ones."

"Thank you, thank you, good loving people," said the 41-year-old Stargell during the ceremonies as he dabbed his eyes with a towel hung from his neck. "This is without a doubt my finest hour."

After the ceremonies, Stargell, who led the Pirates to World Championships in 1971 and '79, shook the hands of both Pirates and Mets players, many of whom warmly embraced him.

Pirates reliever Kent Tekulve thanked Stargell for "teaching many of us what this game is all about. Pops, we love you."

Tony Pena's three-run homer in the sixth inning keyed the Pittsburgh triumph. Rick Rhoden went the distance with a seven-hitter and Lee Lacy also homered for the Pirates.

Elsewhere in the National League, San Francisco beat Atlanta 8-2; Los Angeles took Cincinnati 7-2; St. Louis edged Montreal 1-0; Chicago beat Philadelphia 4-3, and San Diego downed Houston 4-2.

Giants 8, Braves 2

San Francisco, held hitless by Tommy Boggs for six innings, scored all eight runs on nine hits in the final three innings after Boggs was removed for a pinch hitter. Boggs was making only his second appearance since being sidelined with a rotator cuff injury since April and was scheduled to throw only 80 pitches. So Braves Manager Joe Torre sent up Bob Porter to pinch-hit for Boggs in the sixth, despite the no-hitter.

After Boggs left, Jack Clark, the first batter to face reliever Steve Bedrosian in the seventh, bunted for a single to break up the no-hitter. Jeff Leonard's bloop double and an RBI single by pinch-hitter Champ Summers tied it 2-2.

Leonard and Milt May had RBI singles in the eighth and the Giants added four runs in the ninth.

Atlanta's defeat, coupled with the Dodgers' victory, cut the Braves' lead in the West to a half-game.

"It's no time to get romantic and ruin some kid's arm," Torre said.

"I knew the plan was to let me throw only about 80 pitches," Boggs said, "but it's the dream of every pitcher to throw a no-hitter. So I asked Joe to let me stay in. But I knew what he was going to say and he said it."

Dodgers 7, Reds 2

Five RBI by Steve Garvey and Jerry Reuss' seventh complete game, a five-hitter, carried the Dodgers, who reached Mario Soto for 15 hits, the most given up by the Reds' ace this season. Garvey slammed a three-run homer and Rick Monday and Ken Landreaux also homered for L.A. Cesar Cedeno homered for Cincinnati.

"Over the course of the season, the key is to not get down," said Reuss. "When you play with the teams you have to beat, you have to win."

Cubs 4, Phillies 3

Chicago won for the seventh straight time at home against the Phillies as Bill Buckner's double keyed a three-run fifth.

"I guess we get a little more excited against the Phillies because we have so many ex-Phillies on this team," said Buckner, who scored twice and drove in his 92nd run of the year.

Cardinals 1, Expos 0

Joaquin Andujar's five-hitter and pinch-hitter George Hendrick's ninth-inning single were enough for the Cardinals, who stretched their East Division lead to 1½ games.

Montreal starter Bill Gullickson, who held St. Louis to four hits through eight innings, got out Tommy Herr to start the ninth. Ken Oberkell singled but Lonnie Smith flied out. Keith Hernandez singled, with Oberkell stopping at second, setting up Hendrick's clean single up the middle off reliever Woodie Fryman.

"The guy hit the ground ball, but we couldn't catch it," said Expos Manager Jim Fanning. "I don't mind the challenge of facing a guy off the bench with a veteran reliever."

Padres 4, Astros 2

Chris Welsh threw a four-hitter and Broderick Perkins and Terry Kennedy had run-scoring doubles, offsetting Alan Ashby's two-run homer for Houston.

Terry Metcalf Is Among Those Given Walking Papers By NFL

By The Associated Press
Terry Metcalf bid farewell to the National Football League — again. This time, he wasn't the first one to wave goodbye.

The Washington Redskins waived him Monday, and Metcalf became one of the dozens of victims of the league's final cutdown day. Today, rosters stood at 49 players apiece, the opening-day limit.

The cutting of Metcalf may write the final chapter for the fleet wide receiver who already owns a niche in the record book. He's the first player to amass 2,000 combined yards (rushing, receiving and kick-returns) three times, and the single-season leader with 2,462 yards, achieved in 1975 with St. Louis.

He spent five years with the Cardinals but, disenchanted, played out his contract, waved goodbye and headed for the Canadian Football League in 1978 and three seasons with the Toronto Argonauts before returning to the NFL with Washington last year.

He caught 48 passes for Washington, good for 595 yards, and added 60 yards 15 yards on four punt returns and 283 yards on 14 kickoff returns, a total of 953 yards. And during the offseason, he suffered a concussion.

"I had a feeling this was going to happen," Metcalf said after Coach Joe Gibbs made the decision to waive him. "I just couldn't perform the way I wanted to, and I could see Joe was really concerned about it."

"I feel I'm in good shape and deep inside I think I could still play — but the athlete will always say he can play, no matter what," Metcalf added. "I guess Joe's a better judge of my talent right now than I am."

"I respect Terry so much," said Gibbs, Metcalf's close friend. "It was very hard. If he hadn't had that offseason injury, it would have been a different result for him here. The injury just slowed him up. He was disappointed, but I think he felt this would be our decision."

Tight end Rich Caster also was cut by the 'Skins. Center Ron Saul was placed on pre-season injured reserve. He will have to clear waivers before being activated. All-purpose back Joe Washington, recovering from knee surgery, was included on the roster but will be switched to injured reserve Tuesday, Gibbs said.

Veteran kickers were booted off a number of squads. Among them were Toni Fritsch of Houston (Florian Kempf got the job), Bob Thomas of Chicago (which kept John Rovento), John James of Atlanta (the Falcons acquired Dave Smigelsky from Baltimore last week), Fred Steinfort of Denver (losing out to Rich Karlis) and Frank Corral of the Los Angeles Rams (who went with free agent Mike Lansford).

Houston also waived running back Ronnie Coleman, a blocking back for Earl Campbell and third-down receiver, leaving the Oilers with no experienced runners besides Campbell.

Another name runner cut was Los Angeles' Mark van Eeghen, the Raiders' all-time leading rusher but seldom used last year because of injuries, and linebacker Randy McClanahan and wide receiver Morris Bradshaw. Gene Upshaw, the Raiders' veteran guard and president of the players' union, was placed on injured reserve with a torn rotator cuff.

Also cut were 10-year nose tackle Mike Kadish, Buffalo's player representative, and eight-time Pro Bowl cornerback Lemar Parrish of the Bills, wide receivers Wally Henry of Philadelphia, Brian DeRoos of Baltimore, Mike Friede of the New York Giants and Mike Shumann of San Francisco, Atlanta defensive tackle Wilson Faumuina and linebacker Terry Beeson, and Miami defensive backs Don Bessillieu and Ed Taylor. The Dolphins also said veteran defensive end Vern Den Herder is coming out of retirement.

Among those released by Baltimore was veteran defensive back Reggie Pinkney, former East Carolina University player.

Yarborough Outduels Petty At Finish

DARLINGTON, S.C. (AP) — In the end, it boiled down to savvy against savvy, experience against experience.

the last 12 laps to win the 33rd Southern 500 Grand National stock car race.

For about 480 miles on Darlington International Raceway's narrow and treacherous 1.366-mile oval it appeared the winner would be the driver who survived a race of attrition.

But, over the last 20 miles, it was Yarborough and Petty, two of the greatest drivers in the history of the stock car sport, matching wits and driving skill.

"I knew Richard was going to be strong and, after he got the lead from me (12 laps from the end of the 500-mile race), I knew I had to do something quick to get back in front of him," Yarborough explained.

"You almost never pass in the third or fourth turns on this track," he added. "But I decided I'd give it one try because he wouldn't be expecting it."

"I had to go for it because he was leading. He went into the third turn a little bit strong and I knew that's where I had to pass him. If I missed it, I'd never get it (the lead) back because he'd be blocking me all over the track."

"I knew if I could just get back ahead of him and stay there I'd win because he'd have to work his tires harder than I did. I got past him and, when I saw his tires smoking, I knew it was over."

The 45-year-old Petty, NASCAR's all-time victory leader with 195, slipped back the last two laps, finishing about two car lengths behind Yarborough's red, white and black Valvoline-sponsored Buick Regal.

"It came down to a heat race the last 10 laps," noted Petty, who made up a lap on the leaders late in the race. "He was running awful good there at the end. I think we blistered some tires two laps from the end and I had to back off."

Petty, winless in 32 straight races, fell a lap off the pace when he had a flat tire on the 238th of 367 laps. But the hard-charging "King" of stock car racing roared back, taking advantage of the last two of the 14 caution periods in the race to get back among the leaders.

He took the lead from Yarborough, 42 and a three-time national champion, in a side-by-side, door-banging duel through the first two turns on lap 356. But Yarborough made his move in turn three on lap 360 and Petty, the only seven-time Grand National champion, suddenly found himself right where Yarborough had feared he would be.

Three times he moved low on the two-lane track in the front straightaway, looking to make a move on Yarborough.

Flaming Racer

Race fans watch as flames come from the car of Mark Martin during Monday's running of the Southern 500 stock car race. Martin was not injured and was back in the race after his car was repaired. (AP Laserphoto)

But each time a slower car got in the way, and twice he bounced off the slower car into Yarborough, almost losing control.

"I didn't mean to be that aggressive," Petty said. "A couple of times I came up on Cale and the slow cars never gave me enough room to get through. I didn't mean to hit him... that's all racing."

Yarborough, who picked up his third victory of the season and an unprecedented fifth victory in the oldest Grand National event and the oldest of NASCAR's superspeedways, said, "He hit me a couple of times when he got picked off by slower cars. But it was no problem."

Yarborough averaged 115.24 mph in the caution-marred race, winning the winner's share of $34,300 from the total purse of $336,000.

Dale Earnhardt and Bill Elliott, both in Ford Thunderbirds, were the only other drivers on the same lap with the first two cars, finishing third and fourth, respectively. Buddy Baker was fifth, two laps down in a Pontiac LeMans.

It was not a particularly good day for any of the three drivers involved in the Winston Cup point chase, although Bobby Allison did add to his lead.

Allison, whose car suffered from suspension problems, finished 20th, but moved 115 points ahead of Terry Labonte and 132 ahead of defending season champion Darrell Waltrip.

Labonte's engine blew on lap 120, sending him careening into the first-turn wall and giving him a 35th place in the 40-car field. Waltrip's engine blew while he was leading the race on lap 240, leaving him in the 24th position.

Among other early retirees were pole-sitter David Pearson (broken axle); Morgan Shepherd (broken valve); defending race champion Neil Bonnett (broken valve); Ricky Rudd (blown engine); and Tim Richmond (engine failure).

Mark Martin's Buick burst into flame during one of the caution periods, but the oil fire was quickly extinguished and Martin later came back out in the repaired car.

For Yarborough, the victory was particularly satisfying because it was accomplished just up the road from his home in Timmonsville, S.C.

"I've won races all over the world, but to win at Darlington is the biggest thing to me," Yarborough said. "My home is just up the road and these are my people (in the stands). A lot of them only see me race twice a year (at Darlington) and I'm just tickled to death I've beat this place five times and nobody else has done it but three times."

"I don't like it (the track), but I fight it like hell."

Victory Over Wilander Was Sweet For Lendl

NEW YORK (AP) — There was a glint in Ivan Lendl's eye that told you in no uncertain terms that his 6-2, 6-2, 6-2, U.S. Open Tennis elimination of young Mats Wilander was more than just another victory to the third-seeded Czechoslovakian star.

It was Wilander, remember, who upset Lendl en route to a stunning victory on clay in the French Open four months ago, a triumph that thrust the 18-year-old Swede into the international spotlight.

But there was to be no upset on the National Tennis Center's artificial surface Monday night as Lendl made fast work of Wilander to advance to the quarterfinals of the Open.

Was it special, Lendl was asked, in view of what happened in Paris?

"Definitely," he said. "I had to take a lot of garbage from everybody for losing to someone one no one had heard of before our match."

Joining Lendl in the quarterfinals were the tournament's top seeds, defending champion John McEnroe and sizzling Martina Navratilova. McEnroe defeated Ireland's Matt Doyle 6-3, 6-4, 6-4 and Navratilova downed Andrea Leand 6-1, 6-2. Navratilova met her doubles partner, No. 7 Pam Shriver, in today's quarters after Shriver eliminated Ros Fairbank of South Africa 6-3, 6-1. McEnroe next goes against No. 6 Gene Mayer, a 6-4, 6-2, 6-1 winner over Bob Lutz.

Also advancing to the women's quarters were defending champion and No. 3 seed Tracy Austin, who eliminated Romania's Virginia Ruzici, the No. 14 seed, 6-1, 6-3. Today, Austin went against Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia, who defeated Vicki Nelson 6-4, 6-2.

Fourth-seeded Andrea Yaeger was a 6-1, 6-1 winner over Kathy Rinaldi and her quarterfinal match will be against amateur Gretchen Rush, who pulled her second upset of the tournament, eliminating No. 6 Wendy Turnbull 6-3, 4-6, 6-2.

On the men's side, Kim Warwick also advanced to the quarters, upsetting No. 9 Yannick Noah 5-7, 6-3, 7-5, 6-4. Next, he meets Lendl.

Warwick and Rush have been the surprises of the tournament. Warwick's victory over Noah was his second over a seeded player.

"I expected a first round loss," he said. "I had to play Clerc and I didn't think I was playing well enough to win. I was trying and I just caught him on an off day."

Noah, who upset Lendl in Palm Springs, ending the Czech's 45-match winning streak, was the victim of a similar kind of stunner by Warwick.

"It's very easy to play when you have no pressure," the French star said. "It's easier to be the one with nothing to lose."

Just ask Rush. She had stunned No. 11 Mima Jausovec of Yugoslavia in the second round before kayoing Turnbull.

"There's really not that much pressure," she said, "and you're playing for the fun of it. The pros are playing for money and their ranking. We're just playing to play. The pressure is all on them."

Lendl had felt some of that pressure because of Wilander's stunning victory in the French event.

But the Paris clay was far different from the Flushing

Meadow DecoTurf II.

"The court here is faster," said Lendl. "It is a faster, quicker surface. It is easier to serve here than it is on clay."

And right now, Lendl is serving very well.

"I'm hitting the ball pretty hard, pretty deep and I'm not missing much," he said.

So is McEnroe, who'll be Lendl's semifinal opponent if both win their next matches.

"I served and volleyed all right," McEnroe said of his victory over Doyle. "I can hit the ball better."

He seemed confident that he could handle Mayer, his quarterfinal opponent.

"I am worried more about myself and playing the best I can," he said. "I have beaten him most of the times we have played but I know he is capable of giving me some problems. I would like to think that if I played well, I could win."

Navratilova and McEnroe both continued their straight sets march through the tournament field.

Martina's easy victory over Leand set up today's quarterfinal match with Shriver.

"I saw Pam sitting there during my match," said Navratilova, "and I said to myself, 'Why is she scouting me? She knows exactly how I play.'"

But Martina said she looked forward to today's round against her friend. "I'll be enjoying the match," she said.

Against Leand, Navratilova was in total control, posting her 68th victory in the last 69 matches.

"You never exactly know how tough or easy a match will be," she said. "I've had three-set matches with Andrea. I've learned how to play her. Her mobility is not great. She can't run as well as usual and if you can't run, you can't make the shots."

Facing...

the end zone," he joked. "That's to their advantage because they got to see us play. We certainly couldn't hide anything. Believe me, when it's zero-zero at halftime, you're not hiding anything, saving it for the next week," he added.

N.C. State showed the Pirate coaches that the quarterback situation is apparently settled as senior Tol Avery, a starter until the eighth game of last season, completed 13 of 25 passes for 174 yards and two touchdowns.

"Looking at the films from Saturday night's game, it's clear that Tol had even a better game throwing the football that I thought," he said. "He's a much improved passer from last year."

If the two teams have any similarities, it's their respective situations at running back. Sophomore tailback Joe McIntosh played much of last Saturday's contest with a hip pointer and will miss two days of practice. Fullback Vince Evans strained some ligaments in his knee and will miss at least six to eight weeks.

"We have one I-back at practice today and that's Larmount Lawson," he noted. "Michael Miller's hurt. Chris Cook is hurt and with Evans hurt at fullback, all of a sudden our running back situation has gone from good to not many people there."

The Pirates are already down to their reserves at the tailback and fullback spot. Freshman Tony Baker, weighing 164 pounds according to the latest press guide, is listed as the starting tailback.

0-Hitters Face: One Good, One Bad

By The Associated Press

Toronto's Dave Stieb and Milwaukee's Doc Medich each took no-hitters into the seventh inning during different games.

Stieb, pitching against Oakland Monday, made one mistake in the seventh, recovered and went onto win a game that meant little in the American League standings.

Medich, meanwhile, made one seventh-inning mistake against Detroit, then another and another as the AL East-leading Brewers dropped a contest in 10 innings to the Tigers.

"I was thinking no-hitter, and that was kind of a dumb pitch," said Stieb, who gave up a one-out homer to Tony Armas in the seventh. Stieb settled for a two-hitter as Toronto downed Oakland 3-1.

"I tried to get a little sneaky by throwing a changeup to Armas. I was thinking that he'd be looking for something hard," Stieb said. "I've never thrown him many changeups."

Stieb upped his record to 14-13, the most wins ever by a Toronto pitcher in the team's six-year existence.

Medich lost his no-hitter when Glenn Wilson led off the Detroit seventh with a single. The Tigers went onto beat Milwaukee 6-5 on Tom Brookens' 10th-inning homer off Medich, 10-12.

The loss reduced Milwaukee's lead in the AL East to three games over Baltimore and 3½ over Boston, which both won Monday.

"Doc said he was still strong in the 10th," said Milwaukee Manager Harvey Kuenn. "He pitched well to everyone but Brookens. That is going to happen."

Brookens was matter-of-fact about his game-winning blow.

"I hit something off-speed," said Brookens, who entered the game in the eighth as a defensive replacement. "I don't know what it was — probably a slider. But it broke right over the plate and I hit it."

Detroit cut Milwaukee's lead to 3-2 in the seventh, and then took a 5-3 lead in the eighth, helped by double steal in which Lou Whitaker swiped home.

Ben Oglivie's two-run homer tied it in the eighth, and the Brewers came close to winning in the ninth before Detroit shortstop Alan Trammell threw out Ed Romero at the plate.

In other AL games Monday, Baltimore routed New York 8-2; California rallied past Chicago 8-6; Boston pounded Cleveland 10-3; Seattle topped Kansas City 6-2; and Texas swept a two-night doubleheader from Minnesota 4-3 and 11-7.

Orioles 8, Yankees 2

Scott McGregor and Sammy Stewart combined on a five-hitter as the Orioles won their ninth in a row and 16 of their last 17.

Lenn Sakata knocked in three runs for Baltimore as McGregor, who had struggled in his last two starts, went to 13-12.

The Orioles, who strongly rely on their bench, got a pinch-hit, two-run homer by Benny Ayala. It was Baltimore's 11th pinch-homer of the season, an AL record.

New York's Roy Smalley broke the shutout with a two-out, two-run homer in the ninth.

Angels 8, White Sox 6

Brian Downing hit his second grand slam of the week as California beat Chicago and pulled within one game of Kansas City in the AL West. Juan Beniquez had a two-run single and Bob Boone added a run-scoring hit as the Angels scored four runs in the eighth to erase a 6-4 White Sox lead.

Steve Renko, 11-6, picked up the victory in relief.

Tony Bernazard homered and had an RBI double for Chicago.

Red Sox 10, Indians 3

Jim Rice drove in five runs for Boston with a homer, double and two singles. His 21st homer of the season, a three-run shot, gave the Red Sox a 3-0 lead in the first inning.

Carl Yastrzemski had added two-run homer, his 14th of the season and 440th of his career, along with a run-scoring single.

Mike Torrez, 8-6, got the win and Bob Stanley picked up his 13th save with 3 1/3 innings of relief.

Mariners 6, Royals 2

Floyd Bannister upped his AL-leading strikeout total to 169 by fanning seven Royals, including Willie Wilson — the league's leading hitter — four times. Bannister, 12-10, pitched eight innings in sending Kansas City to its third straight loss.

He settled down after allowing George Brett's 20th homer, a two-run shot, in the first inning.

Todd Cruz homered for Seattle and Bruce Bochte knocked in two Mariners runs.

Rangers 4-11, Twins 3-7

Jim Sundberg's three-run homer highlighted a seven-run fourth inning that carried the Rangers to a second-game victory and sweep of the Twins.

Billy Sample's two-run blast in the seventh inning of the first game snapped a 2-2 tie and keyed Texas' victory.

Kent Hrbek homered in both games for Minnesota, which has lost five in a row.

Lee Mazzilli. The ball hit umpire Steve Palermo in the leg and bounced back in front of the bag. The play came in the fourth inning. (AP Laserphoto)

Rose, North Pitt, Ayden-Griffton Look For Improved Volleyball

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Volleyball is still a relatively new sport in the area, but three of the six area teams are looking for improvements this season. (The other three area teams will be covered in next week's article.)

Rose

Rose, in only its second year of volleyball, is looking for improvement under new coach Kelly Fleming. Rose will again be playing in a conference with the Wilmington schools since no other Big East teams play the sport.

"I'm really unsure who was on the team last year," Fleming said, "since this is my first year with the team. We have 16 on the roster, and so far things have gone well."

Rose opens the season on September 14 against North Pitt.

Expected to lead the Rampettes are Frances Barnhill, Linda Winstead, Becky Dunn and Margaret Barnes.

Several newcomers have performed well in practice so far also. They include Cindy Wallace, Suzanne Wille, Wendy Jones, Sonja Williams and Joyce Hoey.

Others on the squad include Kathy Bell, Karla Turner, Beth Kopelman, Jackie Green, Rebekah Reid, Lisa Trevathan and Alice Zincone.

North Pitt

Lynn Rogerson is looking for a big improvement from the North Pitt Pant-Hers, but isn't predicting an Eastern Carolina Conference championship.

Last year's girls went 3-11 overall and 2-8 in the conference, but "we lost a number of matches by close scores in three games," Rogerson pointed out.

Eight veterans are back, and a ninth is possible if she passes her physical. Returning are Kim Carraway, Linda Harrell, Olivia Whitfield, all seniors; Peggy Purvis, Veveca Pulliam, Sherri Bradley and Dwan Willis, all juniors, and Rhonda Wallace, a sophomore. Phyllis Daniels may also return after passing her physical.

The Pant-Hers have a total of 15 girls on the team. Melany Robinson, a junior, appears as most likely to see playing time. Other newcomers include junior Martha Rolins, sophomores Sudie Sharpe and Evette Bullock, and freshmen Sandra Purvis and Penny Coy.

"I really don't know what the rest of the league is going to have this fall," Rogerson said. "South West (Edgecombe) won't last year, but they lost their two big horses, (Bridgette) Jenkins and (Delphine) Mabry. I think it should be pretty close with a good balance in the league."

Rogerson said she had no specific starting lineup, but would be using a number of players, mostly veterans.

Ayden-Griffton

Coach Kathy Frazier's Lady Chargers won only three matches in 14 outings last year and were 3-7 in Eastern Carolina Conference play, but she's looking for improvement this year, despite having a team dominated by freshmen.

Of the 14 people on the team, six of them are ninth graders.

Returning are three starters, all seniors: Linda Brown, Angela Griffin and Sharon Edwards. Three others saw some action last year, and they include Joyce Artis, Josie Braxton and Tanya Malone — all sophomores.

Joining them this year are two more sophomores, Rochelle Keys and Cynthia Hicks, along with freshmen Stelena Roundtree, Stephanie Mort, Heather Craft, Tammy Satterfield, Belinda Eubanks and Delores Williams.

Frazier noted that she has been impressed with the play of Roundtree. "But that doesn't necessarily mean that she will be a starter," she said. More than likely, the starters will come from the returning veterans.

"It's hard to tell how we're going to do just from practice and not having played anyone. But I am looking for us to be .500 or better this season. I might change my mind after we play, however."

Frazier looks for defending champion SouthWest to again be strong, but she also feels that North Pitt and Farmville Central will show a great deal of improvement and could challenge for the title.

stopped Carner from tying the LPGA record of seven birdies in a row. "It just curved off at the cup. I almost had it."

Carner's victory followed triumphs in the World Championship of Women's Golf in Shaker Heights, Ohio and the Henredon Classic in High Point, N.C. She intends to take two weeks off to "go fishing" before playing in the Safeco Classic in Seattle later this month.

Nancy Lopez holds the LPGA record of five consecutive victories. Carner was the last women's golfer to win three in a row before Monday, also accomplishing the feat in 1980.

Remarked Morse, "Carner's almost impossible to beat right now. When she gets hot like that, you almost have to aim for send."

The victory was Carner's second straight on the Rail Classic course. "I just like playing here," she said. "It's kind of course where you can really get hot. It's fun."

Carner's $18,750 first-place check puts her within $9,000 of the $300,000 mark in season earnings, a milestone no woman golfer has ever reached. She broke the women's season earnings record earlier this year.

Carner Resting After 3rd In Row

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — JoAnne Carner is taking a well-deserved vacation after snaring her third straight LPGA tournament, but she says — perhaps all in jest — that the time off may be too strenuous for her to extend the streak.

"I don't seem to play too well after coming back from going fishing — I guess all that casting throws off my swing."

After a rocky start Monday, Carner's swing was right on as she birdied six of seven holes on the back nine at one point to zoom to a 14-under-par 202 and $18,750 in first-prize money in the $125,000 LPGA Rail Charity Classic.

Carner said she was inspired to victory after some sloppy play midway through the third and final round of the tourney on the 6,281-yard, par-72 Rail Charity course.

"I couldn't get fired up until I bogeyed the 10th hole and then I just got irritated with myself and said, 'Go out there and do it. You know you're playing well,'" said Carner, who birdied six of the next seven holes.

Her 14-under-par 202 topped runner-up Susie McAllister by six shots and third-place finishers Jo Ann Washam and Cathy Morse by eight.

DUNKEL COLLEGE FOOTBALL INDEX

EXPLANATION - The Dunkel system provides a continuous index to the relative strength of all teams. It reflects average scoring margin combined with average opposition rating, weighted in favor of recent performance. Example: a 50.0 team has been 10 scoring points stronger, per game, than a 40.0 team against opposition of identical strength. Originated in 1929 by Dick Dunkel.

Stock Car Racing Fans: Burt Reynolds Wants You In Movie

By ELISSA MCCRARY
Associated Press Writer
CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Attention beauty queens, part-time good ole boys and stock-car racing fans: Burt Reynolds wants you.

Actor Reynolds is looking for 125 extras for his movie "Stand On It," to be filmed in Charlotte later this month. He's also looking for stand-ins for actress Loni Anderson, star of television show "WKRP," and 6-foot-8-inch former football standout Bubba Smith.

Although Reynolds and his co-stars won't arrive in Charlotte for filming until Sept. 13, the movie already is stirring up excitement, according to representatives of Universal Studios.

"We're expecting anywhere from 500 to 2,000 people to show up for auditions for extras in the movie," said Mark Fincannon of Fincannon and Associates of Charlotte, who is representing Universal. "At least 300 people have already sent in cards asking to be in the movie. It's causing quite a stir."

"Stand On It," a racing term meaning to press the gas pedal to the floor, is a $20 million comedy about a struggling stock-car driver based on a book by the same name. Reynolds will portray Stoker Ace, the main character. Starring with Reynolds will be Ned Beatty, Jim Nabors and Ms. Anderson.

Most of the movie will be shot at the Charlotte Motor Speedway, and several professional race drivers will have speaking parts in the film. Parts of the movie will feature footage from the World 600, shot at the speedway in May.

Film publicist Stanley Brossette said the movie won't be another stunt-car chase film like other movies made by Reynolds and stuntman turned-director Hal Needham.

"This is a comedy about stock-car drivers," Brossette said. "There won't be a lot of crashes."

Casting director Stratton Leopold is scheduled to begin auditions for extras Friday and continue on Sept. 11. He also will be auditioning for stand-ins for Ms. Anderson and Smith, pit crew members and beauty queens.

Fincannon said more than 300 Charlotte-area people already have sent cards with their names and vital statistics to Leopold in Atlanta.

"For the most part, he (Leopold) will be casting actors over 16 and under 55," Fincannon said. "I don't think he will be looking for any children for this movie."

"He'll be looking for a cross-section of people, all races, ages," he said.

Pay for being in the movie is $30 a day in cash.

Meanwhile, officials at the speedway say they have been getting a lot of calls from area residents who want to be in the movie or who just want to come out and see the actors.

"We've just been referring the calls to the agency," a speedway spokesman said. "We expect this to be a very hectic place once filming gets under way."

Being A Master Of Ceremonies In Beauty Pageant A Tough Job

By ROBERT WADE
Associated Press Writer
ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Gary Collins says

being master of ceremonies for the Miss America Pageant may look easy, but it's tough work.

On Saturday, Collins will be emcee for the first time, although he and his wife, Miss America 1959, Mary Anne Mobley, appeared as color commentators for NBC's broadcast of the pageant in 1971.

Collins, the host of the syndicated television show "Hour Magazine," is only the third emcee for the contest's national finals since the pageant became a TV fixture in 1955.

Bert Parks, the perennial master of ceremonies, was replaced in a highly controversial move two years ago by actor Ron Ely, who played Tarzan on television and is now a game show host. Ely made it through just two pageants, before Albert A. Marks Jr., the contest's executive director, saw a need for a new face.

"I used to sit out there and watch Bert and think this would be a good job," Collins, who will be paid a substantial five-figure sum for his work, said during a break from rehearsals.

But since he arrived here Thursday with his wife and their 14-year-old daughter, Clancy, Collins has spent five to six hours a day rehearsing with a group of dancers, two former Miss Americas and singer Marilyn McCoo for the two-hour show.

"People forget this is a big show," he said. "People tend to forget that a lot of work goes into this."

Collins interrupted a recent interview to jump onto a dance floor to begin lip-synching the words to a song blaring from a tape recorder. Collins, Miss McCoo, a chorus and an orchestra spent part of last week in a New York recording studio putting the songs on tape. Terry Anne Meeuwse, Miss America 1972, and Susan Powell, Miss America 1980, also are featured in this year's production.

Collins, who with his wife has attended several pageants, said the faces of the people behind the scenes at the pageant remain the same from year to year, but they never lose focus of their jobs. And he is in agreement with their outlook.

"The one thing they manage to keep is the Miss America Pageant family feeling," he said. "The secret of this pageant — always has been and always will be — is the girls, and of course the Cinderella aspect, and that's never going to change."

Bo Derek In A 'Training Film'

By PAT REMICK
FORT WORTH, Texas (UPI) — Bo Derek, clad in a swimsuit and her famous beaded braids, lopes sensually up a beach toward the camera — only to fade into the image of a C-10 tanker.

A glitch in the film? Nope. Old time GIs probably wouldn't recognize it, but it's a military training film.

The Strategic Air Command is using the upbeat, razzle-dazzle video techniques to keep its 117,000 personnel in the world's largest global military force up-to-date, well-informed and safe.

Miss Derek and the distributors of "10" gave the Air Force permission to use a few seconds of the movie — interspersed with videotaped shots of a smiling airman in fatigues running toward her on the beach — to introduce the Air Force's newest refueling tanker.

"The SAC crew force is all college-educated so you can't just throw schlock at them," says Lt. Col. D.R. Letnes of the Air Force's Aerospace Audiovisual Service. "We try to make it interesting."

That includes using Hollywood techniques to enlarge models, adding simple cartoons, graphics, slides and film and music to enhance the videotaped product being made on a shoestring budget at AAVS headquarters at Carswell Air Force Base.

Dealing with such topics as "B-52D Upward Seat Ejection" and "KC-135 Overwater Navigation" or "KC-135 Quickstart" takes some imagination to keep the audience interested, but the AAVS has its own graphics department and a state-of-the-art electronic editing facility.

LIKE, TOTALLY — Rock singer Moon Zappa does a bit of "Valley" chiding with G. Gordon Liddy in between takes during filming of "Twilight Theatre II" in Los Angeles. The NBC show, produced by 40 Shares Production in coordination with the Steve Martin Production Co., is scheduled tentatively for October. (AP Laserphoto)

Tougher School Standards Mean More Repeaters

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

Rosetta Kinard's three sons have been forced to repeat grades in New York City's public schools so many times she's almost lost track.

This fall, Russell and Alvin Kinard are "left-backs" at P.S. 21 in Brooklyn's Bedford-Stuyvesant section. They are among tens of thousands of school children nationwide who are repeating classes this fall, in many cases because school districts have stiffened promotion and graduation standards.

Russell, 11, will repeat fifth grade and Alvin, 9, third grade. Stanley, 13, will advance to eighth grade in a special education class at a junior high.

Russell, a soft-spoken boy who aspires to be a lawyer, also repeated fourth grade. Initially upset, he has resigned himself to another year in fifth grade.

"It'll help me," he says. His mother is not so sure; she's afraid her boys are not getting the extra help they need to catch up.

In New York, about 9,500 fourth graders and 20,000 seventh graders may be held back for failing promotional tests in reading and math. More than 15,000 youngsters retook the tests this summer in hopes of being promoted.

The numbers are up markedly from 1978, when 7 percent of the fourth and seventh graders repeated. Last year, the first time the tests were used, 9.4 percent of the fourth graders and 14.7 percent of the seventh graders flunked.

In city after city, the story is similar:

- Benton Harbor, Mich., initially flunked 459, or 22 percent, of its kindergarten, first and second graders, but later promoted 154 who went to summer school.
- In Washington, D.C., 6,300 elementary students — one in six — may be held back for failing to master basic skills. A record number went to summer school to make up the work.
- In Atlanta, 5,375 elementary and high school students, or nearly 8 percent, will repeat this fall. Nearly 1,000 first graders, or 19 percent, were kept back, up from only 224, or 5 percent, two years ago.
- In Oklahoma City, 780 elementary students were kept back, up from 590 a year ago. The city allows parents to override the teachers' recommendation against promotion, but only 123 parents signed such waivers, compared with 232 last year.
- In Dallas, 11,200 children attended after-hours classes last spring to avoid being left back. In May, 7,396 children in grades one to six were flunked, but 2,262 were promoted after summer school.

Educators "have put some meaning and some bite into the word 'discipline,'" said William C. Robertson, principal of Peoria, Ill., High School. Social promotion — advancing a child regardless of performance — has come into disrepute as educators have re-evaluated what repeating can do to — or for — a student.

James T. Guines, associate superintendent of the Washington, D.C., schools, said the notion used to be that it seriously harmed children's self-image to be kept back while their peers moved ahead.

But it is even worse to put them in over their heads, said Guines, adding, "I hate to say it, but nobody likes a 'dummy.' So if you got in the eighth or ninth grade and you couldn't read or compute, your alienation from your peer group led to disciplinary problems."

Stiffer standards can be expensive and cause legal and other problems for schools. Parents who applaud the principle of making schools tougher may rebel when their child is left back.

"Everybody is for standards, but it's for somebody else's kid," said Guines.

New York City spent $31 million last year and has budgeted $49 million this year for its special "gates" classes for repeat fourth and seventh graders. It puts them in smaller classes with specially trained teachers.

June Vanbrackla, an activist with a group called Advocates for Children in New York, charged the city's promotion plan is "a program for failure. The child must fail in order to get help."

And it won't help Alvin and Russell Kinard now because they have not reached the fourth and seventh grades, she noted.

Mrs. Kinard, a bank clerk, said that if children fail to make the grade, "by all means leave them back — but give them a (catch-up) reading course."

Some experts share her concern. George B. Redfern, a consultant for the National Association of Elementary School Principals, said research indicates simply holding a child back does not generate improvement.

"If they don't do something differently the second time around, the chances are he won't learn much more," said Redfern.

New York's administrators are heartened by the fact that their pupils are scoring more highly on standardized reading and math tests. Many urban school systems have reported a similar turnaround.

Peoria, which was in the vanguard of the "back to the basics" movement, began giving students in grades 3, 7 and 11 proficiency tests in reading, math and language arts in 1978. They must pass them before graduating from eighth grade or high school.

More than 40 percent of the juniors failed at least one test in December 1978, but after refresher courses and retesting, only 5 percent were denied diplomas in 1980.

"I don't think it's fair to the public to send a child out with a diploma if he can't read. It's a waste of taxpayers' money," said Superintendent Harry Whitaker.

But the parents of 11 special education students who failed the tests sued after their children got certificates of attendance instead of diplomas in 1980. A federal judge upheld the Peoria schools, but the parents are appealing.

Greensville County, Va., drew national attention in 1974 when it began failing students in droves.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, upset because a disproportionate number of blacks were left back, reopened a civil rights case against the southern Virginia school district. Last year, it agreed to stop using a standardized exam to determine promotions.

"Nobody wanted their kids to get a diploma if the kid couldn't read and write and meet the Virginia minimum standards," said Norman Chachkin of the Lawyers Committee for Civil Rights. "They just felt that black people were getting messed over."

Since the test change, only 15 to 17 percent of the students are being left back, said Martin J. Loughlin, the county's new superintendent. That compares with 30 to 35 percent previously.

Twelve People Died In N.C. Labor Day Weekend Mishaps

By The Associated Press

Twelve people, including three pedestrians, died in traffic accidents on North Carolina roads during the long Labor Day weekend, the state Highway Patrol reported.

The fatalities boosted the highway toll for the year to 797, compared with 974 for the same period last year.

The latest death to be reported occurred Saturday night, when James W. Merritt, 35, walked into the path of a vehicle. The accident was on a rural road about 2 miles east of Wake Forest.

In other weekend accidents:

— Grady Wayne Marsh, 40, of Dobson, was killed Sunday about 6:30 p.m. on N.C. 268 south of Dobson. He died when his car rammed into the back of another vehicle and then was pushed into a head-on collision with a third car, the patrol said.

— Archie Ray Atkinson, 25, of Pittsboro, was killed when the car in which he was riding ran off U.S. 15 in Chatham County and struck an embankment at 1:10 a.m. Sunday. Officials said the impact of the wreck threw Atkinson from the car, which overturned on him.

— Kelly Joe Ross, 18, of Shelby, was killed about 9:50 p.m. Saturday while standing next to her car on N.C. 180 in Cleveland County after being involved in an earlier accident.

— A couple and an eight-month-old girl from Winston-Salem were killed at 4:10 p.m. Saturday when a car ran a red light at the intersection of U.S. 311 and N.C. 66 near Winston-Salem, the patrol said.

The victims were identified as Lorenza McKinley Shelton Jr., 52; Kazumi Mukaeda Shelton, 49; and young Crystal Lynn Brinkley.

Lance Albert Snyder, 23, of Gaston, S.C., was charged Sunday with three counts of manslaughter in connection with the accident. He also was charged with leaving the scene of an accident that resulted in personal injury. That charge was in connection with an accident involving a motorcycle just before the fatal wreck. No one was injured in that accident.

— Earskin Stanley Church, a 46-year-old Wilkesboro motorcycle rider, was killed Saturday when he failed to stop at a stop sign and ran into path of an oncoming vehicle in Wilkes County. The accident occurred at 9 p.m. on U.S. 421, 3.8 miles west of Wilkesboro.

— Allen Deland Wilson, 30, of High Point, died when the car in which he was a passenger ran off a rural paved road, crossed a creek, struck a bank and overturned near High Point. The accident occurred Friday night.

— Larry Donnell Ormond, 32, of Belhaven, was the victim of a hit-and-run driver Friday night on a rural paved road in Martin County, officials said.

— Clifton Lee Robertson, 19, of Greensboro, died in a head-on collision at 8:30 p.m. Friday after his car was struck by a car crossing the center line of a rural road about 14.5 miles north of Greensboro.

— James Eldridge Galloway, 38, of Smithfield, was killed at 9:15 p.m. Friday when the car he was driving ran off a rural road and overturned 6 miles north of Smithfield.

Taft Furniture Co.

An advertisement from the March 5, 1937 edition of
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Taft Furniture Company was established by Edmund Hoover Taft, Sr., in 1897 and first did business in the building on Evans Street Mall that now houses Coffman's Men's Wear, according to Bill Taft, Jr., and his cousin Joe Taft, Jr., present managers of the family business located at the corner of Dickinson Avenue and Evans Street in Greenville.

Bill and Joe took over the operation of the store, in 1958 and 1961 respectfully, when their fathers retired from the business after 30-plus years in the business each.

In 1917, the business moved to a storefront on Dickinson Avenue and went through two more expansions, in 1967 and the last one in 1979.

"The Downtown Urban Redevelopment Commission bought up the land next to us to buy the land from them and allowed for our own expansion."

During the early part of the century, like a lot of other businesses, Taft's used wagons drawn by work horses to make deliveries.

"The stable was located about where our warehouse is now", said Bill, "right between the store and Sheppard Library. As a matter-of-fact, when we were laying the foundation for the warehouse, the construction crews dug up several old horseshoes."

"Of course, horse-drawn wagons went out about the same time as customers making 50 cents payments a week on a three-piece bedroom suite that cost $39.95."

The senior Tafts, Joe and Bill, remember also shipping out-of-town deliveries via the Tar River.

"We would load the merchandise on a freight steamer," said Joe Taft, Sr. "This is how we were able to serve our customers in areas like Washington. Of course, if water travel was unavailable there was always the railroad."

Bill Taft, Sr., feels "Taft Furniture has grown with the times, just as THE DAILY REFLECTOR has. We are so happy that we have a local paper. The employees seem to really be interested in and care about their customers and clients more than if the paper was run by an outside interest."

The Fall of John L.

During the decade he was heavyweight champ, John L. Sullivan became boxing's first living legend. Then, ninety years ago today, he lost his title to "Gentleman" Jim Corbett in the first major bout fought under rules developed by the Marquis of Queensberry, a British nobleman. Early boxing matches were fought with bare knuckles and wrestling throws were allowed. As a brawler, Sullivan was highly successful. But the Queensberry rules called for padded gloves and no wrestling. This was to young Corbett's advantage, because Sullivan was not used to such restrictions. Corbett knocked out the aging champ in the 21st round. But, in a way, the Marquis of Queensberry defeated the great John L.

DO YOU KNOW — Who was the only heavyweight champion to retire undefeated?

MONDAY'S ANSWER — Georgia sent no delegates to the First Continental Congress.

The bidding:
South West North East
1 NT Pass 3 NT Pass
Pass Pass
Opening lead: Two of ♣.

Bridge experts do not have to be masters of the occult to make their plays. There is usually a perfectly logical explanation for the things they do.

The auction needs little comment. South had a balanced 16 points and North a balanced 11, so both bids are textbook.

West led the two of spades. East won with the ace and returned the six. Declarer won and tried the diamond finesse. Showing exemplary technique, East allowed the jack of diamonds to win. Declarer returned to hand with the king of clubs and led another diamond. When West showed out, declarer took the ace of diamonds. He now needed four tricks from the club suit to fulfill his game.

After both players have followed to two rounds of a suit, there is a slight percentage edge to playing for a 3-3 break over a 4-2 distribution. Yet, declarer unhesitatingly returned to his hand with the queen of clubs, cashed his remaining high spade, and led a club to the ten. When that held, he had his nine tricks.

Lucky guess? No, just a matter of clear reasoning. West had led from a weak four-card suit and had shown up with a singleton diamond. Had he held a five-card suit, it is reasonable to suppose that he would have led from that suit rather than attack with a spade. The logical inference was that West did not have a five-card suit, and that his distribution, therefore, had to be 4-4-1-4.

This is really a simple exercise in counting. So much in bridge depends on no more than the ability to count to 13; whether to open the bidding, count the distribution of the hand or count the distribution of a suit. I know of no bridge expert who considers 13 an unlucky number!

Poltergeists Are No Fantasy To Chapel Hill Man

By The Associated Press
The word "Poltergeist" has become synonymous with the Steven Spielberg thriller film about ghosts. But it's more than just fantasy to Chapel Hill parapsychologist William G. Roll.

Roll, author of a book entitled "The Poltergeist," recently delivered a dramatic report on reputed poltergeist sightings during a conference on psychic phenomena at Cambridge, England.

His report told of a family — whose identity and hometown he refused to divulge — that moved into a 55-year-old New England house in 1979 and almost immediately began hearing the eerie voice of a weeping child.

The voice seemed to cry, "Mama, Mama, this is Serena." But the family didn't know anyone by that name.

Almost two years later, the wife awoke to see what she thought was her son roaming a hallway in a white suit.

Investigating, she found that her son was in bed.

The white specter returned the next night while her husband was working. This time, it spoke in a "kind and sweet" boy's voice, the woman recalled.

"Where do all the lonely people go?" it asked. "Where do I belong?"

In a recent interview, Roll said the family's experiences were strikingly similar to some of those in the movie "Poltergeist," named for a German word meaning "noisy spirit."

But he said he was convinced at least some of the incidents were real.

"It's sufficiently likely for me to take the case seriously," he said. "I was personally convinced the family was sincere."

Roll visited the home after the hauntings had stopped. But in discussions with the family, he was told the woman's husband sometimes encountered the same white apparition she had seen. On one occasion, the man said he watched it try to pick up a hallway rug.

Afterward, he removed the rug and floor and found a small medallion of the Virgin Mary between the floorboards, where it apparently had been wedged since the house was built.

The wife also told of being hit by moving household objects and of dropping to the floor after being levitated from her bed.

Unseen hands, she said, had forced her arm behind her back and choked her. She also described being taunted by a gruff-voiced apparition that wore a black cape and had a humpback and very large feet.

The worst night was Aug. 5, 1981, when her husband was at work.

"At 3 a.m., the walls started to bang ... and the bed was raising off the floor," the woman told Roll, who tape recorded the family's experiences.

"I tried to scream, and the door slammed so I could not get out of the room," the woman said. "Then the dog was growling and the door opened ... When I ran to the kids' rooms screaming, their doors slammed and wouldn't open; they wouldn't wake up. "Then I was dragged back into my room, and it (the black-robed creature) started to choke me and scratch at me ... The dog jumped on the black spirit and it let go. The dog was howling, barking and crying."

The children and friends of the family also reported assorted sightings, such as moving and flying household objects, a toy dog arraying a crucifix in its mouth, and a retractable stairway slamming violently.

Some parapsychologists — scientists who study mental activities seemingly beyond obvious explanation — think incidents such as these are linked to the mental activities of someone in the house, Roll said.

But the New England family's case, with physical violence and talking apparitions, is unusual and may be unique, he said.

"I can't think of any ... contemporary case more dramatic and quite as varied," he said.

Neither could those attending the 100th anniversary conference of the Society for Physical Research and the 25th anniversary conference of the Parapsychological Association, he added.

In his paper, delivered to the two groups Aug. 19, Roll wrote that an explanation might be interactions among the woman, her family and her home, "including, it seems, two previous occupants or traces left by them."

The woman's husband, whose grandfather built the house about 1926, learned after the incidents began that his father's sister had a sister named Serena who died in the home as a child.

And the husband's father's brother died at age 8 in an accident and was buried in a white First Communion suit. The black apparition might have ties to the husband's grandmother, who wore large, men's shoes and had opposed the couple's marriage prior to her death, Roll said.

Roll said his view can be considered only speculative unless parapsychological research can affirm them.

In the meantime, the disturbances at the house ended — after Sept. 24, 1981, when a Catholic priest performed a rite of exorcism.

Primaries For Four States

By The Associated Press
Alabama voters were deciding today whether to give George C. Wallace the chance for an unprecedented fourth term as governor, with primary elections also being held in Arizona, Connecticut and Florida.

"I'm going to be governor again," predicted the 63-year-old Wallace as he spoke to a Labor Day rally in Tuscaloosa. But the one-time bantamweight boxer, paralyzed below the waist from an assassination attempt during a run for the presidency in 1972, would not say if he expected to gain a clear majority in the primary.

His two rivals for the Democratic nomination are Lt. Gov. George McMillan and House Speaker Joe McCrquodale. If no one wins a majority today, the top two finishers will be forced into a Sept. 28 runoff.

"It's hard to beat them all at one time," Wallace said. The Democratic incumbent, Fob James, is stepping down after a single term. Montgomery Mayor Emory Folmar is unopposed in the Republican primary.

In Arizona, Gov. Bruce Babbitt and Sen. Dennis DeConcini, both Democrats, seem assured of renomination. Babbitt's only challenger died last month, although his name remains on the ballot, and DeConcini has a nominal challenge from Caroline Killeen, an energy crusader from Tucson.

Battling for the Republican nomination for Senate were state Rep. Pete Dunn and Dean Sellers a Mesa real estate developer.

Babbitt's Republican rival in November will be either Senate President Leo Corbet or Glendale auto dealer Evan Mecham.

In Florida, Sen. Lawton Chiles has no Democratic primary opposition, but three Republicans are vying for the nomination to oppose him in November. They are George Snyder, a Sarasota businessman and former Maryland state senate president; state Sen. Van Poole of Fort Lauderdale; and Palm Beach County prosecutor David Bludworth.

Gov. Bob Graham, also a Democrat, is expected to win renomination over Bob Kunst, self-styled spokesman for Florida homosexuals and Fred Kuhn, a Homestead businessman.

In the GOP gubernatorial primary, Rep. L.A. "Skip" Bafalis is expected to have little trouble outpolling lawyer Vernon Davids.

In Connecticut, the November lineups for senator and governor were decided at party conventions. Democratic Gov. William O'Neill will be opposed by Lewis Rome, a former state senator, and Republican Sen. Lowell Weicker will meet Rep. Toby Moffett.

Small N.C. Apple Crop Is Facing Competition

WILKESBORO, N.C. (AP) — Apple picking will get into full swing this week in mountainous counties, but unlike past years much of the crop won't be shipped to distant markets.

North Carolina's growers say they'll put many apples into cold storage, imitating producers in Washington state who are flooding the market with inexpensive apples saved from 1981.

Already, this year's harvest has been delayed as long as possible, as growers hoped for an improved market. But over the next two weeks, picking of golden and red delicious apples will begin in earnest in the Brushy Mountains of Wilkes and Alexander counties, says Terry Garwood, horticultural extension agent for the two counties.

Traditionally, North Carolina growers could expect premium prices for the first two weeks of picking, with prices leveling off after apple crops farther north began pouring in.

"There's a difference in freshness," Garwood said. But, he added, "I'm afraid having the first apples on the market is no longer a big advantage."

Big apple states, like Washington and Michigan, have the capability of storing apples for 13 months in years of bumper crops.

He said year-old

Washington apples are being delivered in Charlotte at $8 for a top-grade, tray-packed bushel. Last year, Brushy Mountain growers got $9 for the same select-graded bushel as their top price.

Garwood said it cost local growers about $4.25 a bushel to produce the apple and $3 more a bushel to get it packed and shipped. That left a profit margin of $1.75 a bushel for top-grade apples.

Not all the apples in an orchard make the top grade, Garwood noted. Half a crop may go to the juice market, which brings an extremely low price.

Nationally, this apple crop is estimated to be about the same as last year's crop. The 1981 crop was second in size only to the crop of 1980.

Late freezes reduced the Brushy Mountain apple crop to between 650,000 and 700,000 bushels, about 70 percent of its potential, Garwood said. Losses varied according to orchard.

The losses suffered by growers in the Brushy Mountains were not as severe as those in other areas of North Carolina, according to roll estimates.

"The cold did a lot of thinning out of blooms, but the apples that formed are much bigger, nicer because of it," Garwood said.

Manslaughter Arrest Is Made

Steve Allen Brown, 31 of 306 Watauga Ave., has been arrested on manslaughter and hit and run charges following investigation of the death of a Bethel man on the Eastern by-pass 1.5 miles north of Greenville here August 29.

The Highway Patrol said Joseph Andrews, 38 of Bethel, was killed when struck from behind by a car about 11 p.m. as he walked along the south-bound lane of the highway.

The force of the impact, investigators said, knocked Andrews 80 feet down the highway.

Highway Patrol spokesmen said this police department investigation by the Patrol, the Greenville Police Department, the State Bureau of Investigation and the Pitt County Sheriff's Department led to the arrest in connection with the death Saturday.

RECALLED TOYS — The Consumer Product Safety Commission has recalled two brands of toy rattles which it says pose a choking hazard for babies. Rattles in top photo are made by Montgomery Schoolhouse Inc., of Montgomery, Vt., and rattles in bottom picture are imported by Schowank of America in New York. The rattles being recalled entered the market within the last year and do not meet commission safety standards, officials said. (AP Laserphoto)
