

Coterminous Boundaries Remains Choice Of City

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer
Mayor Percy Cox said today the City Council has not given up on its effort to have coterminous boundaries established for the city of Greenville and the city school district.

Cox, who said he wanted to "clear up" any misunderstanding of the council's action reported in Wednesday's Daily Reflector, said the city is seeking legal opinions from the attorney general's office on whether the coterminous boundaries can be established by the Legislature.

County Attorney Bill Watson told council members and the county board of commissioners Tuesday night that only the county board of education, with the approval of the State Board of Education, could change school boundaries.

Cox, however, said the council has obtained opinions from its own attorney and from the Institute of Government and the N.C. League of Municipalities indicating that the Legislature does have power to change the boundaries.

As reported in the Reflector, the council presented the county board a list of reasons supporting its contention that coterminous boundaries should be established. After discussion, the council members agreed to support a resolution calling for unification of the city and county school systems.

Cox said today that the council "agreed to adopt a resolution supporting unification," but emphasized that the city government will "continue to push for coterminous boundaries."

"We will still push for coterminous boundary lines unless we do get consolidation."

The mayor added that "we think that is legal" for the General Assembly to change school district boundaries and "that it can be done." He said, "We didn't have our attorney with us Tuesday night, so we didn't argue the point."

The "list of reasons" given to commissioners said coterminous boundary lines would: "allow for the equal distribution of student growth/decline in the two school systems ... clean up ambiguous lines ... clear up any confusion on voting districts ... save money ... help maintain the racial balance in the two school systems ... (and) represent a step toward solving the problems of declining enrollment and cash flow in the city schools."

The list said if coterminous boundaries are not approved and if the city school population continues to decline, "program reductions which would reduce the overall quality of the city school system" will be required.

Such action, the list continued, would result in "more and more citizens ... sending their children to private schools and moving outside the city limits," which "could ultimately result in a segregated school system which would be a detriment to industrial growth in the county and growth within the city limits of Greenville."

Arabs Adopt Peace Plan As Israel Raids Missiles

By The Associated Press

A summit meeting of Arab leaders adopted a Mideast peace plan today, but Israel dismissed the proposal as meaningless. At the same time, the Israeli air force launched another raid to destroy four more Syrian missile batteries in Lebanon.

The Arab leaders, meeting in Fez, Morocco, adopted their first joint peace plan since Israel's founding in 1948 but avoided any explicit reference to possible recognition of the Jewish state, delegation sources reported.

In Tel Aviv, Prime Minister Menachem Begin's spokesman Uri Porat dismissed the plan as meaningless because it failed to spell out recognition of Israel's right to exist.

He said the Fez summit was no different from previous such meetings "and there is no reason to pay attention to it." He told a reporter: "They don't recognize Israel and they speak of the PLO as the sole representative of the Palestinian people."

Israel refuses to have any dealings with the Palestine Liberation Organization and invaded Lebanon June 6 to oust the guerrillas from west Beirut. The last fighters left a week ago, but Israeli and Syrian forces are still confronting each other in eastern Lebanon's Bekaa Valley.

Israel's chief of staff, Lt. Gen. Raphael Eytan, asked by Israeli army radio about Syria's purported readiness to leave the Bekaa Valley, as expressed at the Fez summit, replied, "I think this readiness is lip service and there is no reality in it. It is a political tactic. In my opinion, the Syrians have made every effort to stay in Lebanon for a long time."

The Tel Aviv command said Israeli jets knocked out four more mobile batteries of Syrian SA-9 missiles in the Bekaa Valley, the second such attack on the sites in two days.

"The state of Israel is firm in its decision not to permit the Syrians to move ground-to-air missile batteries into the Lebanon area," the command said.

It also reported that two Israeli soldiers were wounded when their vehicle ran over a land mine near the village of Ain Aaata, southeast of the southern Lebanese port of Sidon.

Begin vowed Wednesday that Israel would never agree to President Reagan's plan for peace in the Middle East.

In a fiery speech to Parliament, Begin challenged the opposition Labor Party to an early election next year as a referendum on his government's claim to the occupied Arab territories. Labor has backed the Reagan plan, noting that it does not call for a total Israeli withdrawal from the lands won in the 1967 war.

The Arab leaders in Fez say Israel must recognize the PLO and accept the creation of a Palestinian state incorporating predominantly Arab East Jerusalem.

But Begin said that the occupied areas "will be for the Jewish people" for generations upon generations, reaffirming his government's biblical claim to the territory.

Begin was unrelenting in his opposition to the Reagan plan for Palestinian autonomy in the West Bank and Gaza in association with Jordan. He said such a deal would deprive Israel of parts of the West Bank, put hostile Palestinians in control and jeopardize Jewish lives.

He called Reagan's plan "stillborn. Already today it no longer exists." He claimed Reagan's proposals deviate from the Camp David accords, the only overall peacekeeping framework Israel recognizes.

In Washington, it was learned by The Associated Press that Reagan said in an Aug. 31 private letter to Begin that he intends to stick with his peace plan, even if it is rejected in Jerusalem.

Begin also accused U.S. officials of waging a campaign to oust him from office. "This is intervention in the innermost affairs of Israel," he stormed. "Officials leak (information) and journalists write: 'the beginning of the end of Begin's rule.'"

The 120-member Parliament endorsed his position by a 50-36 vote. An earlier resolution on the conduct of the war in Lebanon passed 50-40, reflecting the divisions in Israel over the invasion.

In challenging the Labor Party, Begin said he was ready to go to the polls in May or June.

Rescue Five Held In Polish Embassy

By CAROLYN LESH
Associated Press Writer

BERN, Switzerland (AP) — Swiss police stormed the Polish Embassy today and rescued five hostages in a bloodless operation that took just 12 minutes. They tricked the four gunmen holding the hostages by hiding a remote-controlled bomb in a food container and blowing down the front door.

Swiss authorities said the police moved in at 10:42 a.m. (4:42 a.m. EDT) and had the hostages out safely and the gunmen under arrest at 10:54 a.m.

The gunmen had held the captives under threat of death since Monday, demanding that Communist Poland lift martial law, free internees and end repression.

Earlier official reports said five gunmen were inside the embassy.

Swiss Justice Minister Kurt Furgler said the gunmen, who claimed they would blow up the embassy Friday unless their conditions were met, also had demanded $1.45 million and free passage to China or Albania.

"Switzerland will never accept blackmail," he said after the rescue operation. "The decision to storm the embassy was taken during the night after it was determined there was no room for further negotiation."

Furgler said the gunmen were dressed in camouflage suits. He identified the leader as Florian Kruszyk, a 42-year-old former convict from Poland. He said Kruszyk claimed he had worked for the Polish secret service.

Kruszyk was sentenced to nine years in prison in 1969 for a Vienna, Austria, jewelry store robbery in which hostages were taken. He served four years of his term before being released.

In the initial stages of the embassy takeover the leader of the group identified himself as "Colonel Wysocki" and said he and his men belonged to a newly formed group opposed to repression in Poland.

The dramatic rescue operation was described by bystanders.

Witnesses said a white van pulled up in front of the embassy and a man dressed in a delivery suit took a small white object up to the front door of the embassy.

The man returned to the van and made a second trip to the front door with an aluminum case that usually contained food for the gunmen and hostages. This time it was packed with explosives.

When the man got back to the van, the driver jumped out and both men ducked and ran off, witnesses said. They said the container then exploded, blowing in the door.

About 20 riot police wearing helmets, bullet-proof vests and gas masks then charged into the two-story building. Witnesses said they heard about 10 additional explosions.

There were reports of brief fighting between the terrorists and riot police when they spread throughout the embassy to search all of its rooms.

"I am satisfied there were no injuries," said Antoni Dobrowolski, the charge d'affaires at the Polish Embassy who returned to Bern Tuesday night from leave in Poland. He complimented the Swiss police for their disciplined action.

The Swiss government on Wednesday rejected Poland's offer to send a parliamentary unit to Bern to help rescue the hostages.

The embassy siege began Monday when the gunmen burst into the diplomatic mission, took 13 people hostage, and demanded Poland lift its martial law decree and free political detainees.

On Wednesday the gunmen also demanded that they be given safe passage out of the country. Swiss officials refused, insisting on unconditional surrender and the safe return of the hostages.

The raiders had threatened to blow up the embassy on Friday with 55 pounds of dynamite if their demands were not met.

During the standoff, the gunmen, self-avowed members of a little-known Polish group "Insurgent Home Army," freed eight of 13 hostages, while another diplomat, who hid in the embassy, escaped with police help Wednesday night.

Curtailing Playground Activity Is Denied By Recreation Agency

Park and Recreation Commission members Wednesday night denied a request from W.J. Simmons to curtail night-hour activities at Jaycee Park and to move playground equipment and the picnic shelter from the area.

Simmons' residence at 1407 E. Wright Road is adjacent to Jaycee Park. Simmons, in the years since the park opened, has presented several requests to the City Council and the Recreation Commission for action to lessen what he terms a disturbance of his privacy. As a result of his previous requests, the Recreation and Parks Department has spent approximately $6,000 to plant a hedge, erect a fence and install windscreens on field lights.

In the current request, presented to the City Council and passed by the council to the Recreation Commission for action, Simmons outlined four points of action. They were:

1. Remove or relocate playground equipment and the picnic shelter to another area.
2. Discontinue use of the ball field when other fields in the city are available for use.
3. Impose a more reasonable curfew hour (the curfew is now 11 p.m.).
4. Discontinue use of tennis court lights when the leaves fall off the trees.

In discussions which followed Executive Director Boyd Lee's presentation of Simmons' request, City Council member Janice Buck suggested the idea of appointing a committee from the general public to look into the matter. Commission member Dan Earnhardt said that if such a committee was appointed, it should include other people from the neighborhood adjacent to Jaycee Park.

Commissioner Al King, a new member of the board, asked if similar complaints from neighborhoods adjacent to other parks had come before the board, and if so, how they had been handled. Lee replied that complaints of a minor nature had been received and settled without further problems.

Commissioner Julia Davis voiced the opinion that if the commission approved Simmons' demands it could lead to other requests that could adversely affect operations of facilities in Greenville.

At a later point in discussions, Mrs. Buck suggested that the Recreation and Parks Commission make the decision to settle the issue.

Dr. Bob Deyton made the motion, approved by the board, to deny Simmons' request, to leave operations at Jaycee Park as they are, and to write a letter to Simmons informing him of the commission's decision.

In other actions at the commission's September meeting, commissioners:

- Approved a request by members of Eppes High School class of 1958 to erect a marker on the Tom Foreman Park property indicating it was the former site of the C.M. Eppes High School. Approval carries a stipulation that the sign meets accepted standards of the department.

- Heard comments by Dr. Herbert Hadley and Ricky Cox, executive director of the Greenville Foundation, on ways in which the Recreation and Parks Department and the foundation could work together in furthering recreational and parks facilities in Greenville. One question raised by a commissioner was whether it would be acceptable for the Recreation and Parks Department to charge additional fees for certain programs with funds realized to be earmarked for needed projects. Cox told commissioners such an arrangement would be acceptable to the foundation. Other commissioners pointed out that any action of that nature would have to meet City Council approval as well as meet legal requirements of city and state laws. The question of how fee increases would affect current programs was also raised.

No decisions were made on any of the suggestions raised during discussions with Hadley and Cox. The commission, however, agreed it will take the subject under advisement and will consider the possibilities and options available.

- In a report on fees collected from timers placed in the tennis courts, Lee reported that for the 40 nights of play during July and August since the installation of the meters, a total of $307 has been collected. Of this total, $65 came from Jaycee Park, $74.50 from Evans Park, and $167.50 from Elm Street Park. Lee said the department is pleased with this collection, which represents collecting in less than two months nearly half of the $667 cost of installing the meters, plus savings realized on the department's utility bill.

REIMBURSEMENTS HELD

Insurance Commissioner John Ingram says his staff is searching for policyholders who are due reimbursements from insurance policies. Reimbursement moneys turned over to the state by insurance companies that cannot locate policyholders due reimbursements are held in the State Escheats Fund of the state treasurer's office. Interest from the Escheats Fund is used for scholarships for needy students attending state-supported institutions of higher education.

There are between 500 and 600 on this year's list and the amounts range from about $50 to more than $1,000. Persons who think they may be due such funds from insurance policies should contact the Insurance Commissioner's Office, Raleigh, 733-5631.

Complaints Lodged Against 2 Juveniles In Ayden Vandalism

AYDEN — Complaints have been lodged in Juvenile Court against two youths in connection with the $10,394 in damage done by vandals to the Ayden Cemetery on Blount Street last week.

Police Chief Tommy Burney said juvenile petitions were filed earlier this week with the family court counselor in Greenville charging an 8-year-old and a 9-year-old, whose names have not been released, with malicious damage to gravesites.

The two admitted vandalizing the cemetery, reported Burney, shortly after being apprehended. Footprints led police to the Turnage Street residence of one of the juveniles and the second was located on East Avenue.

According to Burney, the vandals entered the cemetery last Wednesday by climbing over the fence in the southwest corner.

Damaged, said Burney, were 111 overturned headstones, 38 shattered vases, 70 defaced vases, eight broken headstones and one chipped headstone. Most of the overturned headstones were in the cemetery's older section.

Joyner Memorial Service of Wilson estimated the repair cost at $10,394.

The stones are not covered by the town's insurance policy, said the police chief, but he urged residents to check with their homeowners' insurance. "There is a possibility that individuals' homeowners insurance policies will cover the damage to stones," he noted.

"Persons having stones repaired should give a copy of the bill to the police department for presentation in court," he added.

Some stones had been righted by the town's public works department and all unbroken vases have been placed in front of headstones.

School Phobia Can Develop

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Health Editor

It's normal for little kids and big ones, too, to drag their feet when back-to-school time strikes.

But when the hesitation walk continues beyond the first few weeks, there's a good chance a case of school phobia is developing, experts say. The symptoms can include depression, vague tummy aches, headaches and other "ailments" that can't be seen.

Sometimes, more seriously, there is vomiting, dizziness.

So how's a parent to tell who's faking and who's really sick — and what's a Mom or Pop to do, in any case — but especially in those instances in which a boy or girl will accept any reprimand or punishment rather than attending class?

If the trouble continues, seek help from the family doctor or a psychologist, authorities say.

Dr. Rachel Gittleman at New York State Psychiatric Institute, one expert on school phobia, says:

"The term school phobia is misleading. We have found through clinical study that these kids are not afraid of teachers, blackboards or the school building itself.

"They suffer from extreme separation anxiety. They're terribly frightened to leave home."

The separation anxiety in some cases is severe enough to cause the physical symptoms — throwing up, migraine headaches, dizziness.

"Parents must listen and watch children closely," she said.

"Kids are not always able to express emotions directly. If children become physically ill at the thought of attending school, they obviously are suffering."

Children with school phobia have been treated at the Psychiatric Institute's Child and Adolescent Depression Clinic. Sometimes, Dr. Gittleman said, psychotherapy helped.

But in cases where that failed, researchers found 60 percent of the kids were able to resume normal school attendance after "separation anxiety" was treated with medicine.

"Separation anxiety can be a biochemical reaction," Dr. Gittleman said. "Overprotective or fearful parents may cause a child's separation anxiety. But in many instances, the parents are not to blame."

"Moving to a new neighborhood, death or a relative, or divorce also can stimulate separation anxiety."

Teenagers who go away to school for the first time also can suffer from separation trauma, says a Michigan

State University authority in family and child relationships.

A little anxiety and a little homesickness are perfectly normal reactions from the big kids away from the home turf, says Prof. Lawrence B. Schiamberg.

"Good parents have actually been preparing their children for that separation throughout the developmental process," he said.

"The success of the departure depends on the emotional health of the entire family."

"A child may be physically independent by living away from home but still cling to the childhood values fostered there. Or a child may live at home but still be psychologically, emotionally independent."

Schiamberg said emotional separation from the family is essential if a child is to acquire an adult identity.

Parents, he claims, can sometimes be caught off guard when it comes time to pack offspring off to college or even that first job away from home.

The reason?

"There are no social guidelines for this rite of passage," he said. "Some parents may feel they are clinging to their children while others may feel they're pushing the child out of the nest too soon."

Some adolescents and young adults are actually opting to remain in the nest into their early 20s and beyond, which is a recent phenomenon prompted, in part, by the nation's current financial pinch, Schiamberg says.

"Young people also are waiting to marry later, which may delay their break from home and family."

In families which have not prepared a child for leaving home, the young adult may exhibit all sorts of problems.

"Children who fail to make an independent successful break from home may skip classes or drop out of college entirely, stage a bizarre, delinquent act, join a cult or take a menial job," Schiamberg said.

"These all indicate a lack of a healthy maturing process."

For most children, however, he said leaving home for the first time is a rite of passage that is accomplished with a minimum of trauma.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Every three years, for the last decade, everything stops in this country while we dissect Woody Allen.

Critiquing Woody hasn't replaced baseball yet as a national pastime, but it's getting there. Is Woody's current humor as funny as his earlier humor? Has he out-Fellini'd Fellini? Has he passed too far over the comedic line and is he stuck at tragedy? Is he rewriting himself?

I actually heard a child the other day on the street ask a playmate, "Do you remember where you were and what you were doing when you first heard Woody Allen was making a serious movie?"

I honestly don't know what this country would do if Woody Allen didn't surface every three years with a new venture. It has almost become a ritual. First, the critics get out reviews of all his past movies and compare them with the present one. Is it funnier than "Take the Money and Run"? As classy as "Annie Hall"? As serious as "Interiors"? As solid as "Manhattan"? The debates begin.

I personally refuse to hold a scalpel over Woody Allen. He is funny! I don't care what makes him that way. And I don't need to look back. I either laugh at the current movie or I don't. It stands alone.

In fact, I know of no other profession where your present is judged by your past. When was the last time you said to your plumber, "I personally liked the way you in-

Susan McQuillan calls this delicious invention a hot relish.

1 pound (3 large) onions
2 tablespoons butter
1/4 cup honey

Thinly slice onions; separate into rings — there should be about 6 cups not packed down. In a 10-inch skillet melt butter; add onion; cover and cook over low heat, stirring occasionally, until softened and translucent — about 15 minutes. Stir in honey; over fairly brisk heat, stir constantly, until liquid is reduced as much as you like. Serve at once or reheat, covered, before serving. Makes 1 generous cupful — 4 to 6 servings.

THREE BEAN SALAD

An old favorite made with a minimum of sugar.

1/2 cup salad oil
1-3rd cup red wine vinegar
1 tablespoon sugar
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
1/4 teaspoon dried tarragon
1-pound can kidney beans, drained
1-pound can green beans, drained
1-pound can navy beans, drained (see Note)
1-3rd cup chopped (medium-fine) green pepper
1-3rd cup chopped (medium-fine) onion

In a large bowl whisk together oil, vinegar, sugar, salt, pepper and tarragon. Add kidney beans, green beans, navy beans, green pepper and onion; toss well. Chill for several hours before serving to allow flavors to blend.

Housekeeper Should Make Arrangements

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My husband has this infatuation (maybe love) for a good friend of ours. She is a very dear, sweet person. When she comes around, old Herb lights up like a Christmas tree when only minutes before he was an old grouch. The minute she leaves, Herb goes back to being an old grouch again.

This has been going on for a long time, but lately it's been getting worse. I have a hard time handling my feelings around this woman. Poor dear, I'm sure she's not aware of my feelings, and I can't blame her for the way my husband acts. She does nothing to encourage him.

Incidentally, Herb and I have a very platonic sex life. What is your advice?

JEALOUS AND HURT

DEAR JEALOUS: Your central problem seems to be lack of communication between you and "old Herb." Instead of silently resenting his brightening up when your friend comes around, find out why he's grouchy in your presence. Get a dialogue going without becoming angry or judgmental. His grouchiness may be related to your "platonic" sex life. It's easier to effect a cure when you know the cause.

DEAR ABBY: I have a mother (divorced and living alone) who wants me to call her each time before I drop in. Sometimes I just happen to be in the neighborhood and feel like stopping by to say hello.

Yesterday she became very angry when I popped in on her. She said, "Why didn't you call me? I was planning on going out for the day!"

Do you think a daughter (I am 25) should have to call her own mother and make an appointment to see her? Thank you kindly.

UPSET

DEAR UPSET: In most cases, no. But since your mother asked specifically that you call her, you should respect her wishes.

DEAR ABBY: I feel like a heel writing this, but I must. A woman comes to my home three days a week to do the laundry and housekeeping. She is an excellent worker and I pay her top salary. The problem? She has started to bring her 4-year-old child to work with her every day. At first the little girl sat quietly alone in the kitchen, but lately she feels more at home, so she's been following me around asking questions. When her mother sees her doing this, she reprimands her, the child cries, and it upsets me.

Please don't think I'm criticizing the child. She's behaving like a normal child. When she gets bored she looks for company. (I've bought her coloring books and she watches television, but she can't do that six hours a day.)

I don't have the heart to tell the woman not to bring her daughter here anymore, but I dislike feeling uncomfortable in my own home. I am not a mean person and I like children, but I feel sorry for the child. What should I do?

NO CITY, PLEASE

DEAR NO CITY: Ask your housekeeper to please make arrangements for the care of the child (away from your home) while she works for you. Tell her you feel sorry for the child. It's true.

***

DEAR ABBY: The reader with the problem of shoeing out late-staying guests should use my grandmother's method. She would look at her husband and say, "Willie, let's go to bed so these nice people can go home."

J.R.C., NEWPORT BEACH, CALIF.

DEAR J.R.C.: "Grandpa" suggested this one: "When folks stay too long, I say, 'I wish I were someplace else so I could go home.'"

Officers for 1983 were named at the meeting of the American Legion Auxiliary Until No. 39.

Named were: Sarah Ashton, president; Frances Strawn, vice president; Faye Adams, secretary; Lois Dail, treasurer; Lou Wilson, historian; Mayo Rogers, chaplain; and Mamie Roper, sergeant-at-arms.

It was announced that Girl State representatives will be reporting at the Oct. 7 meeting. The District One meeting will be held in Franklinton Sept. 26 at 2 p.m. Dr. Betty Levey, Mrs. Ashton and Mrs. Dail are planning to attend.

BRUNSWICK STEW
My easy city version of an old-time Southern country dish.

4-pound roasting chicken, steamed or simmered
¼ cup butter
1 large onion, cut in thin strips
1½ to 2 cups clear, fat-free chicken broth
1-pound can stewed tomatoes
10-ounce package frozen baby lima beans

10-ounce package frozen whole baby okra
10-ounce package frozen whole-kernel corn
Salt and dried red-pepper flakes to taste
Bone chicken; remove skin if you like; cut in spoon-size pieces; reserve. In a large wide range-top-to-table utensil, over moderate heat, melt butter; add onion and cook, stirring often, until golden. Add broth, tomatoes and lima beans; bring to a boil; simmer, covered, until beans are half-cooked — about 10 minutes; add okra and simmer, covered, until half-cooked — about 5 minutes longer; add corn and simmer, covered, until cooked — about 5 minutes longer. Stir in reserved chicken, salt and pepper; reheat. Serve in wide soup bowls. Makes 6 servings.

They Died Heroically

Every industrial worker knows the fearful possibility of a sudden fire such as the one which took four lives and injured another at National Spinning Co. in Washington Monday night.

Most large industries constantly emphasize safety and provide sprinkler systems or other fire prevention to guard against such occurrences. Yet most plants involve large open expanses and, even with the best of planning, that can make getting fires under control and evacuation of the building difficult.

Apparently the workers at National Spinning attempted to bring this fire under control but were overcome when there was a sudden burst of smoke. A sprinkler system helped control the fire and area firemen poured in to extinguish the blaze, but it was too late to help the workers.

Industries and their employees work very hard at maintaining safety standards. Perhaps because of this emphasis, few of us really believe that a tragedy such as this can occur. The reality of this one tells us that it can, however, and it should encourage all of us to review safety measures in industries, businesses and homes.

Doing all we can to prevent future tragedies might well be the greatest memorial we can make to those who heroically lost their lives fighting the fire at National Spinning.

Habib Deserves Accolades

Special Envoy Philip C. Habib has received the U.S. Medal of Freedom from President Reagan who called him a "truly great American."

Habib negotiated the agreement to end the Beirut siege, which saw the PLO pull out of the city which was surrounded by Israeli troops.

Our nation cannot heap too much praise on Habib, who carried on the negotiations when, at times, there seemed to be no diplomatic solution to the problem.

Habib never faltered, however, and finally a unique diplomatic success was attained. Our nation and the entire world owe Philip Habib a debt of gratitude.

Aim At Oil Ties

By PAUL O'CONNOR
RALEIGH — The state Democratic Party plans to get into a little bit of negative politicking in the next few weeks. They'll be trying to paint the state's 11 Republican congressional candidates as tools of "Big Oil". They've already begun calling them "the big oil babies".

Wayne McDevitt, Democratic Unity Campaign director, said Democrats are readying a plan of attack that will exploit the connection between the state's ultra-conservative Republicans and the oil and energy political action committees (PACs) which support candidates of such philosophy.

"We're going to make an issue of all the oil money that's flowing into Republican campaigns. It is a question of special interests versus North Carolina interests", McDevitt said. Already state Democrats have held one press conference on the oil connection. McDevitt said the party will hold many more and will buy newspaper and, maybe broadcast, advertising to get their message out.

McDevitt doesn't have many figures to back up his claim. He can't say Candidate X has collected any certain amount of money from oil and energy PACs. He cites instead a trip taken early in August by five Republican congressional candidates to Texas. The trip was arranged by the National Congressional Club and was designed to put the candidates in touch with "business and ideological PACs" — including oil companies. He also says that 11th District Rep. Billy Hendon has received money from 28 oil PACs.

cerned, the trip to Texas states their intentions. Whether they get a dime or not from the oil PACs, they went to Texas and said give us your money," he said.

The Democrats want to tie the oil issue to the cigarette tax increase. "Isn't it interesting that while the Republican tax package totally left out the big oil companies, continuing to allow them big tax breaks, they immediately head to Texas to sup from the oil pipeline?" he said.

PAUL O'CONNOR

Connecting the tax increase with the oil money is essential to the Democratic effort. It's clearly Democratic strategy to paint GOP party head Sen. Jesse Helms as a politician who'll sell out North Carolina interests to those of oil-rich ultra-conservative PACs. The Democrats are saying Helms voted for the cigarette tax increase to protect his oil friends and that if more Republican congressmen are sent to Washington, they'll follow Helms' lead and represent Texas instead of North Carolina.

Government's Landlord

WASHINGTON — Fifteen months ago Gerald Carmen was running an auto service company in Manchester, N.H. In its field, the company was a substantial operation, but it was no General Motors. Today Carmen is running an outfit that spends $650,000 an hour, around the clock, 365 days a year. He heads the General Services Administration, and he is my kind of Yankee.

The GSA is one of the largest and most forgotten agencies of the federal government. In these dog days in Washington, while the currents of news are running slowly, you might want to take a moment to meet the man who is spending gobs of your money.

Carmen is a slender fellow, 52, salt-and-pepper hair, who works in his shirt sleeves and keeps a tidy desk. These past 15 months have been an education for him. His brow has the furrows of a country road just traversed by a tank battalion, and he peers over his half-glasses with the suspicious eyes of a man who suspects some agency out there is trying to put a fast one by him. That's often the case.

The trouble with government, says Carmen, is that the one dollar has ceased to have value. In a world of millions and billions of dollars, where unimaginable sums get condensed into fiscal hiccups — ninety-eight-point-three, or seven-hundred-and-fifteen-point-six — who can be bothered about turning out the unneeded lights?

JAMES J. KILPATRICK

This kind of thing bothers Carmen. He occupies one of the smallest executive offices in town, but when he moved in he discovered that he had two telephones — one on his desk and another by a sofa 15 feet away. He kept the sofa and pulled out the extra phone. Then he had a quick survey made of everybody else's phones, and pulled out a lot of those. He ordered some of his assistants to double up in offices. He inherited about 36,000 employees, and by simply refusing to fill slots that were made vacant by attrition, he has cut the staff back to 30,000.

The gentlemen is obsessed — that may be too strong a word, but not much too strong — with guarding the taxpayer's dollar. His theory is that a sense of frugality begins with the first fraction of a penny on a government contract. "If we learn to take care of the pennies, the dollars will take care of themselves." Under his administration, the GSA asked for and got a 16 percent budget cut. He likes it that way.

Carmen's domain is huge. The GSA is the government's landlord. His first responsibility is to look after 8,600 federal buildings from here to Hawaii — to keep them supplied, cleaned, painted and furnished. He recently opened a furniture-restoring operation in a low-rent Washington suburb. From now on, when a desk or chair gets shabby, the item won't be junked or sold to a second-hand dealer. The piece of furniture will be refurbished and put back in a GSA warehouse. Carmen expects to save $400,000 a year that

Undermined By Company

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
BOSTON — Gov. Edward King's ability to close a still formidable gap before the Sept. 14 Democratic primary for governor will measure the economic soft spot in the right-wing populist movement.

Polls and politicians agree that King's advocacy of capital punishment, jail sentences and other law-and-order measures reflects the mood of Massachusetts. His opponent, former Gov. Michael Dukakis, is still perceived in this class-conscious state as one of "them" — Beacon Hill, Harvard, Boston Globe, yet, enough of Dukakis' once-immense lead persists to make him the clear favorite.

That is partly due to the aura of incompetency enveloping King and periodic exposures of corruption in his administration. But key supporters of Dukakis admit Massachusetts voters never have put a high premium on efficiency or honesty. What really ails King is his economic posture amidst hard times.

King's soft underbelly is the perception that he favors the rich, reflected by his push for supply-side marginal tax cuts mainly benefitting upper-income taxpayers. That raises the question whether the supply-side can coexist with conservative social philosophy within the right-wing populist movement. The answer affects Ronald Reagan nearly as much as Ed King.

Consequently, the final two weeks television barrage by Dukakis seeks to intertwine King with Reagan and Reaganomics. A voter is depicted calling King "Reagan's favorite Democratic governor." A five-minute television address by Dukakis labels King a defender of Reaganomics. Over Labor Day, a new Dukakis commercial was aired calling the election a choice between President Reagan and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, who backs Dukakis.

The strategy is rooted in pollster Pat Caddell's surveys for Dukakis showing Reagan's Massachusetts ratings as negative as Kennedy's are positive, while unemployment rises toward the national average. The Dukakis campaign, therefore, has seized on the recession as the antidote to the appeal of right-wing populism.

Yet the ideological fissure among Democrats here is so pronounced that the Kennedy endorsement of Dukakis was greeted by King statehouse allies as an air-clearing plus. "This really shows that Dukakis is the candidate of Harvard," one state senator told us.

No other state retains such political class-consciousness. At a Dukakis fund-raiser attended by meticulously-groomed women at the tony Hampshire House on Beacon Hill, the conversation over cheese and wine was how the people of this state could even consider giving Ed King another four years. The answer in one matron's upper-class accent: "The Irish have been here for four generations but they still feel put upon."

The next night at an Italian-American fund-raiser for King at Caruso's in Saugus' outside Boston, speaker after speaker talked about shared cultural values, leading up to King's peroration to a cheering audience: "The Commonwealth of Massachusetts has returned to basic values. We believe in the United States of America. We believe in the pledge of allegiance to the flag, we believe in prayer in the school. We believe in rights for the unborn."

King parts company with

Strength For Today

PRaise, FLATTERY
Everybody likes praise. Whenever we encounter a person who disclaims any interest whatsoever in praise, we can be sure that he is untruthful. But while we appreciate praise, we know our limitations. We are not deceived into believing that we are geniuses.

On the other hand, the person living on flattery is pathetic. Flattery is a narcotic; the more one partakes of it, the more one needs. Many a household is broken up simply because somebody does not constantly feed the ego of someone else. Nevertheless, husbands and wives should realize that the constant interplay of earnest appreciation and trust should be the very warp and woof of daily home life. And children should be assured that they have moral qualities and the capacity to make good.

A famous public figure in this country expressed the difference between praise and flattery when he said, "Flattery never hurts you if you don't inhale." — Elisha Douglass

Other Editors Say Clearly A Blow

(Washington Daily News)

Governor Jim Hunt says that doubling the federal taxes on cigarettes from eight to 16 cents per pack will cost North Carolina an estimated 1,800 jobs and some $10 million in taxes.

We must believe that this new federal doubling of cigarette taxes will hit North Carolina harder than it will hurt any other state. We grow tobacco here; we process tobacco here; we manufacture cigarettes here.

If Governor Hunt is correct, the economic impact upon our state will be far greater than we had imagined before. This is a staggering blow to our state economy.

If we stop just a moment to think and reflect upon the impact of losing 1,800 jobs and $10 million in state taxes, the jobs suddenly become more important than the loss of taxes. And we'll lose state taxes because fewer cigarettes will be sold.

But the impact and the hurt belong to human beings. Those 1,800 workers losing their jobs mean that 1,800 families are faced, or will be faced, with finding other means of support. So it is not merely 1,800 men or women who are losing jobs, but there are probably as many as 3,600 children who are out there to be fed, clothed, educated and cared for.

Maybe some people can look upon this lightly. Maybe when Senators Jesse Helms and John East had opportunity to kill the tax-doubling bill and refused to do so, surely they could not realize that so many people in their own state would be hurt.

It is our opinion that Governor Hunt may well be very low in his estimate. We feel he is talking only of tobacco workers, and those part-time helpers on the farms somewhere along the line will be hit also.

The loss of wages by 1,800 workers however means that money is lost to buy groceries, clothes and other needs, thereby hitting merchants a hard blow, too, and thus we have a picture of reduced economy all along the line. And it becomes all the harder for us to take when we realize it did not have to be this way. It could have been avoided.

The state of North Carolina levies only two cents per pack of cigarettes, and when that two cents was levied, it caused a big struggle in our legislature.

From the general standpoint, we are very doubtful that doubling the tax on a pack will close to doubling the total federal tobacco tax take.

Are we standing by as witnesses to the death blow to tobacco given by our federal government?

We wonder.

Thwarting 'Corrective Forces'

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — The housing crisis, about which so many elected officials and government figures wring their hands, is a consequence of those same hands writing regulations that thwart corrective market forces.

Freed of government interference, the marketplace itself would have done a better job of providing affordable housing, and the country wouldn't have been split into "haves" who enjoy inflated prices for their homes, and the younger "have nots" who are unable to participate in the American dream.

That conclusion is the major one synthesized from papers of 15 authorities, university economists mainly, assembled by the Pacific Institute for Public Policy Research in a volume called "Resolving The Housing Crisis."

Legislative hoppers overflowing with new regulations, taxes and subsidies produced the crisis, says a synopsis accompanying the book, published by Ballinger Publishing, a division of Harper & Row, based in Cambridge, Mass.

"It is not news that (the) American dream has been rapidly fading of late," says M. Bruce Johnson, the institute's research director and a professor of economics at the University of California at Santa Barbara. "What may prove more interesting is the way in which political forces of remarkable proficiency have shattered the dream for many," he contends.

The results, he says, are high home prices (30 percent higher, it is claimed), high taxes, high apartment rents, high costs for public services and, in the end, impoverished builders and local government treasuries.

An awful mess, he says in effect, one perpetrated under the guise of being helpful, and generally blamed on the alleged greediness of developers, landlords, avaricious mortgage bankers and whatever scapegoats can be found.

Could such an incredible bill of goods really have been sold to the American people?

The institute, whose aim of piercing customs and prejudices in pursuit of truth often brings it to the conclusion that the private sector must be freed from the burlings of the great government bureaucracy, obviously thinks so.

Government controls over land development and homebuilding are one of the faults, says the institute in its synopsis of the volume. For example:

"In California, the average time required for governmental approval of new housing development plans in 1970 was less than a year. By 1975 the delay had grown to two years for average size developments and five years for large developments." The consequence: a shortage of housing, a rise in prices.

Growth-control strategies added to costs.

"Such as the preservation of inefficiently large amounts of agricultural land, the specification of large minimum lot sizes, the declaration and maintenance of moratoria on new connections to public utility systems, the establishment of explicit quotas for the number of new building permits to be issued each year, the imposition of requirements for environmental impact reviews, and the filing of environmental lawsuits..."

Building standards and codes are culprits too, having done "more mischief than good." How have they accomplished this? In this way, says the institute:

"Innovation is stymied while codes are made increasingly rigorous and costly. Codes have been subverted by special interest groups to increase the demand for their products and services and defeat the competition they must face. In fact, there is no body of evidence available that demonstrates building codes add to health and safety in any way."

Federal deficits and monetary policies have done great damage because, the institute says, they have:

"... lead to high rates of interest, and high rates of interest lead to low — even negative — rates of real economic growth. Burdensome taxes that penalize savings and capital formation do the same."

As a consequence of the various misguided government policies, including local rent control, builders have been unable to build, buyers have been unable to buy, and rental units have been turned into condominiums and cooperatives.

That, at least, is the conclusion.

The solution, according to what appears to be a consensus of the authors' views, seems to be moderate monetary policy, substantial reductions of federal expenditures and the elimination of taxes on interest from savings.

That, and the discontinuance of misdirected government policies and their replacement with policies that promote rather than retard the development of affordable housing.

The thesis isn't altogether new. This time, however, it is offered by supposedly objective scholars rather than by builders, lenders and others directly involved in housing.

But in spite of all the scholarship, you still tend to wonder about those "haves." You can bet they'll resist any change until they're outnumbered.

Reagan a bit, adhering to populist sentiment, in rejecting traditional Republican austerity. He has actually been more open-handed in many categories of state spending than Dukakis was and attacks his opponent for being "so austere with the elderly" as governor.

But King's populist credo is undermined by his obvious fondness for the company of the rich (much in Reagan's style), which is admitted by some staunch supporters. The governor's attempt to repeal the Dukakis income surtax is sound supply-side doctrine, but is open to attack from Dukakis as "a tax cut for the wealthy."

Nevertheless, a loss by King on Sept. 14 would not be a plebescite mandating the return of the elitist establishment. State Senate President William Bulger, who has had his difficulties with King but strongly supports him for reelection, is perhaps the more authentic voice of right-wing populism in Massachusetts. He is even more anti-establishment than King and could never be accused of catering to the rich.

Politicians agree that Bulger would have wiped out Dukakis for governor. If so, the economic vulnerability of Ronald Reagan's favorite Democrat does not really signal the end of populist harassment for the establishment.

way. He handles the purchase of 10,000 to 15,000 automobiles a year. He oversees the largest telephone system in the world. A month ago, as a consequence of his unhappiness with telephone costs for 15,000 federal workers in Alaska, he awarded a $40 million contract for a new satellite voice communications system. The new system will save $20 million over the next 10 years.

Carmen also is unhappy about the government's immense inventory of unused property. A vacant airfield in Kansas, a valuable but idle tract of land in downtown San Francisco, an abandoned building somewhere else — "Sell 'em," he urges. He thinks there may be half a billion in such real estate. He thinks federal agencies spend too much on travel; he's whacked the GSA's travel expenses by 45 percent. They spend too much on contracts for repair of calculating machines. They give away too many "free" booklets and publications. Their bills for energy are much too high. They pay too much rent for privately leased office space.

Carmen has his sleeves rolled up. More than a thousand GSA employees, fired up by the boss's zeal, have qualified for nearly $300,000 in incentive awards; their ideas have meant millions of dollars in cost reductions. The boss wants more. Every evening at quitting time, he asks a question of his closest aides: "Did we save any money today?" Then he turns out the lights and goes home.

UNIFICATION VOTE — The Rev. Dr. David Preus, Presiding Bishop at the Eleventh General Convention of the American Lutheran Church, smiles as voting for a new Lutheran Church were announced. (AP Laserphoto)

Three Lutheran Churches Vote Merger

By LAURINDA KEYS
Associated Press Writer
After voting overwhelmingly to merge into a new 5.5 million-member church that would be the largest Lutheran body in the country, delegates to three conventions in three states joined by telephone in a prayer that reflected their disparate pasts.

The church conventions, meeting simultaneously in Kentucky, Ohio and California, made a commitment Wednesday to create a new, as yet unnamed, church by Jan. 1, 1988.

The delegates also voted to appoint a 70-member commission to iron out differences in the doctrines and structures of the three groups — the Lutheran Church in America, the American Lutheran Church and the Association of Evangelical Lutheran Churches.

Cheers went up in turn as each convention president announced the nearly unanimous vote. Then the delegates said a prayer asking that "the Holy Spirit ... gather us, as long dispersed Lutherans, to a richer commission."

The prayer was printed simultaneously on video screens at all three conventions. In unison, the groups sang the hymn "The Church's Sure Foundation."

The conventions also agreed to exchange representatives with the Lutheran Merger Commission in Canada, and all three U.S. conventions were studying a plan to allow joint communion with Episcopalians.

If the new church is formed, it would become the third largest Protestant denomination in the United States, behind the Southern Baptists and Methodists, and would have over 11,000 congregations.

The merger would also mean that 98.8 percent of all Lutherans in the country would belong to three large churches — the new church, the 2.6 million member Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod and the 400,000 member Wisconsin Evangelical Church.

The Missouri Synod wasn't part of the new unification movement, but it wasn't forgotten. Presiding Bishop David Preus of the 2.35 million member American Lutheran Church, whose representatives met in San Diego, said his denomination had "wooded the Missouri Synod for decades as ardently as anyone could be wooded." He predicted it would take another generation before unification with the church that is the second largest Lutheran body in the country.

The Missouri Synod contends the other major Lutheran churches aren't strict enough in interpretation of the Bible, and the synod has withdrawn from mutual worship activities.

The 107,000-member Association of Evangelical Lutheran Churches, which met in Cleveland, broke away from the Missouri Synod in 1976 over the Scripture interpretation issue.

Referring to the split, association President William Coleman said after the unity vote, "The time of our exile is coming to a close and we have come closer together with two great church bodies who assisted us in our dark days and gave us hope."

In Louisville, where the Lutheran Church in America met, some delegates had tears in their eyes when the vote was announced. The church has 2.92 million baptized members in the United States and another 121,000 members in Canada.

"We have known for a long time that unity is ours," said James R. Crumley Jr., bishop of the Lutheran Church in America.

Asked if it would be difficult to negotiate the differences that kept the three churches separate in the past, Crumley said, "There are some differences, but we don't see the task ahead as negotiating. We are creating a new Lutheran church."

"All Lutheran churches trace their traditions to Martin Luther, the 16th-century German founder of the Protestant Reformation. But different churches developed in northern European countries, and immigrants to American remained separate."

Wedding Still 'On' Despite Leukemia

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A Greensboro couple is proceeding with wedding plans although the bride discovered last month she had leukemia and ensuing treatment has caused her to lose her hair.

Meanwhile, a local civic club is sponsoring a softball tournament to raise money for the couple, which faces staggering hospital costs because Rita Gasque canceled her health insurance to save money before learning of her illness.

Ms. Gasque, 22, was scheduled to marry Joey Mitchell, 26, on Aug. 14. However, a week before the planned wedding Rita went to a doctor because she had been feeling lethargic and weak. Tests showed she had leukemia.

The illness is now in remission, but Ms. Gasque is bald because of treatments for the illness. She says her fiancé has been so worried he's started to lose his hair.

"The treatment's made her lose her hair, and Joey says he's losing his, too," said Ms. Gasque's sister, Robin Gasque. "Rita said, 'Well, we'll go down the aisle with both of our heads bald. We'll write "Just" on one, and "Married" on the other.'"

Ms. Gasque, who owes over $50,000 in hospital bills, said she figured she'd be covered by Mitchell's insurance when they married. Beside, she'd always been in good health previously.

Reading Clinic Begins Sept. 16

ECU News Bureau
An afternoon reading clinic for children in grades 1-10 will be offered by the East Carolina University School of Education beginning Sept. 16.

The clinic will be held in the Speight Building on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons from 3:30 p.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Designed for children who have reading problems or who need enrichment in reading, the clinic features individualized instruction based on a battery of tests administered at the beginning.

Teachers are education majors working toward reading certification who will be directed by Drs. Dorothy Muller, Roger Eldrige and Barr Taylor of the department of elementary education.

There is no charge for participation in the clinic. Since enrollment is limited to approximately 70 students, early application is advised.

Further information about the clinic and application forms are available from the ECU Department of Elementary Education, 757-6833 or 757-6191.

Miss America Contest Preliminaries Staged

By TOM ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer
ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Miss California wore her "good luck" white swimsuit and Miss Kentucky sang a song that fits her personality as both won preliminary events in the 1983 Miss America Pageant.

California's Debra Sue Maffett, a blue-eyed blonde from Anaheim, buoyantly strolled down the runway in Convention Hall after winning the swimsuit competition Wednesday night.

"It's my good luck suit," Miss Maffett, 25, said. "This is an old suit. I bought it in 1978."

The contest was one of four events the seven-judge panel will use to select the pageant's 10 finalists. One of the contestants will be crowned Miss America 1983 in the nationally televised program Saturday night. Entertainer Gary Collins is emcee.

Miss Kentucky, Gwendolyn Suzann Witten, won the talent preliminary competition for her rendition of "And This Is My Beloved" from the musical "Kismet" before the 8,700-member audience.

Miss Witten, 23, is a dark-haired, green-eyed, 1982 honors graduate of the University of Louisville with two degrees in music. She chose the "Kismet" song because "I think it fits me."

Bursting into tears after winning, she said, "I always cry. I'm always sentimental. I love the song."

Miss Witten, a Vine Grove resident whose interest is opera, competed against other vocalists, pianists, a violinist, jazz dancers, a baton twirler and a gymnast in Wednesday night's talent section.

The evening gown competition was held among a third of the 50 contestants but the judges' choice was kept a secret to heighten suspense in the selection of the finalists.

Miss California, who stands 5-foot-7 and weighs 115 pounds, is a 1980 graduate of Lamar University in Beaumont, Texas. She founded a small modeling agency.

A member of the National Man-Watchers Association, Miss Maffett said she went on a regimen of bicycling, brisk walks and an exercise routine to drop four dress sizes and get in shape for the pageant.

Miss California, born in Pittsburg, Kan., said it took her "a couple of seconds" to realize she had won the swimsuit event over 16 other participants.

Collins announced the preliminary winners as a 33-piece orchestra played "Miss America, You're Beautiful," the show's new theme song.

Interviews, which are the fourth category used in the judging, have been completed offstage but the results are kept secret.

The judges will base the selection of the finalists on three nights of preliminary competition. Scoring will begin anew after the finalists are chosen.

Defend State Employees' Role

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Members of Gov. Jim Hunt's administration defended state employees who campaign for Democratic political candidates after Republicans said they would ask the courts to ban the practice.

Claims Too Many Rules

CLINTON, N.C. (AP) — State legislators said they were upset by conditions at migrant labor camps they toured in Sampson County, but farmers said things would be better if regulations were clearer.

"I've been turning this around and around in my head," Rep. Vernon G. James, D-Pasquotank and himself a farmer, said Wednesday after seeing one of the camps. "What do you do? What do you do? I'm at a loss for words. It's bad conditions."

Rep. G. Malcolm Fulcher Jr., D-Carteret, said "I don't want to live here," as he toured a camp near Salem. Fulcher is chairman of the state Study Commission on Migrant Farm Workers.

Members of the commission were led on the tour by a group of farm worker advocates. One migrant workers' organization, Farm Workers Legal Services, has advocated legislation that would place farm workers under the state's minimum wage and workmen's compensation laws.

"I spend thousands of dollars every year trying to get this camp cleaned up," said farmer Rice Matthis, who owns one of the camps on the tour. He houses 67 migrants in renovated tobacco barns on his 500-acre farm.

"People ought to have a nice place to live, but there are too many rules and regulations," he said. "We've got to look to OSHA (the Occupational Safety and Health Administration), and we've got to look to the Wage and Hour people. ... If we just had one department, we'd be OK."

cal candidates after Republicans said they would ask the courts to ban the practice.

Republicans Robert A. Hassell and Richard C. Titus, candidates for the state senate from the 14th District, said Wednesday they were suing Hunt and Attorney General Rufus Edmisten, whom the GOP hopefuls said had the authority to halt the alleged abuses.

R. Brent Hackney, Hunt's deputy press secretary, acknowledged that some administration members were campaigning while not at work. "It's perfectly appropriate," he said.

But the Republicans said state workers were campaigning on state time and using state-owned equipment, many fearing they would lose their jobs if they didn't help Democratic candidates.

In a news conference, Titus showed copies of two letters he said showed evidence of improper practices.

A letter written by Jane Donleycott, who works in the Drivers License Section of the state Division of Motor Vehicles, was an invitation to a birthday party for 4th District Democratic Rep. Ike Andrews.

On the letter under Ms. Donleycott's signature, her employment in the division was noted and a state telephone number was given for calls.

The second letter, written on state stationery from the western office of the governor, was signed by R. Wayne McDevitt, director of the western office and director of "Unity Campaign '82," which will promote Democratic candidates for office on the national, state and local levels.

In the letter, McDevitt said he would be taking a partial leave of absence to lead the Unity Campaign.

"This is just the tip of the iceberg," Titus said. He said he had received several other reports of similar activities by state workers, but didn't elaborate.

McDevitt said the letter was designed to tell legislators what they could expect from his office during his absence. He said he had made a "conscious effort to avoid use of the office to gain political influence" and said he would not "wallow in the mud" with Republicans.

Hassell and Titus called on their Democratic opponents, Wilma C. Woodard and incumbent Sen. Joseph E. Johnson, to join in the suit to make it a bipartisan effort.

How-To-Commit-Suicide Book Stirring Protest

By CAROLYN LESH
Associated Press Writer

PARIS (AP) — On a midsummer's night in the Loire Valley town of Tours, 27-year-old Patrick Bondy killed himself by swallowing barbiturates. Near his body lay a how-to-commit-suicide manual that has become the most controversial book in France this year.

Bondy, a former department store worker, had been depressed and out of work for nine months. "The authors are criminals," Marcel Bondy said after his son's death. "This horror must be withdrawn from publication."

He has joined psychiatrists, politicians, religious leaders, suicide prevention centers and others who want the best seller withdrawn.

Based on the belief that suicide should be painless, the 276-page book entitled "Suicide Mode D'Emploi" (Suicide Operating Instructions) contains 50 recipes for lethal "cocktails" that guarantee a "gentle" death.

"This book is bad for depressed people with suicidal fantasies who are seeking help," said psychiatrist Jean Pierre Soubrier, whose 60 publications on suicide have earned him the name "Monsieur Suicide" in France. "Nine out of 10 people who try to kill themselves don't want to succeed."

CONTROVERSIAL — A Parisian scans the best-selling French how-to-do-it book on suicide which has raised a storm of protest after being associated with several suicides. (AP Laserphoto)

French Minister of Health Jack Ralite has urged the book be banned. So have the nation's largest medical, pharmaceutical and consumer groups.

The Roman Catholic Church has condemned the book as have suicide prevention centers and a French organization of people who have survived attempts to kill themselves.

"Suicide" was published in April, has sold 50,000 copies in five months and has been on the French non-fiction best seller lists for the past two months. It is scheduled to be published in West Germany and Spain this fall. Publishing houses in the United States, Japan, Italy, Brazil and Denmark are negotiating for the rights.

Its 10 chapters take up such topics as suicide and insurance, the right to choose death, the history of suicide, the alternatives to suicides, and where and how to commit suicide.

Claude Guillon and Yves Le Bonniec, the Paris-based journalists who wrote the book, refuse all requests for interviews. They say that everything they have to say about suicide is in the book.

"I expect this book to make about $210,000 this year and about $360,000 in the next five years," says its publisher, Alain Moreau.

He says about 10 suicides have been linked to the book. "I feel no remorse," Moreau said during an interview. "This is a book that pleads for life. But it also recognizes that the right of suicide is an inalienable right, like the right to work, the right to like certain things, the right to publish. What use is a right without the means to execute it?"

Moreau said he has received about 500 letters about the book.

"In all my 20 years in publishing, I've never had such a response from the public," said the 45-year-old Moreau. "The bulk of the letters are from elderly people who want to know where they can buy the book."

Most book stores in Paris stock "Suicide." But a number of stores, especially in smaller towns, have refused to sell it. Several French newspapers, magazines and radio stations have refused to carry advertisements for the book.

The Ministry of Health says about 75,000 people try to commit suicide in France each year. About 10,000 succeed. No statistics yet indicate if that number has increased since the publication of "Suicide."

Exit, a British euthanasia society, began distributing copies of its pamphlet "Guide to Self-Deliverance" a year ago, but that how-to-kill-yourself manual is available only on request from Exit members of three months' standing and over the age of 25.

The Exit pamphlet lists four bloodless methods of committing suicide by using non-prescription drugs. It was held up for more than a year because Exit feared prosecution under a 1961 British law that carries a maximum 14-year jail sentence for those convicted of aiding a suicide. In the United States, most states have similar laws.

British Attorney General Sir Michael Havers has sought a high court ruling to declare Exit's sales of the pamphlet illegal. A hearing is due in the fall.

In France, efforts to ban "Suicide" are, for the moment, stymied. The Justice Ministry, replying to a Health Ministry suggestion that the book's "recipe" chapter be outlawed, has said "Suicide" violates no French law.

"There is nothing now in the penal code that justifies that this text be forbidden or seized," said a Justice Ministry information official, who by French tradition cannot be named. "A reform of the penal code is under way and legislation is expected that would make aiding a suicide a crime."

People Flocking To 'The Jesus Tree'

HOLDEN, W.Va. (AP) — Groups of people have been gathering around a vine-entangled tree every night for the past few weeks, saying the foliage resembles the profile of Jesus Christ.

"People have been coming from everywhere to see the tree," said Curtis Bryant, an out-of-work coal miner who paid a visit to the poplar on a hill towering over this coal-mining community.

"The reason they come at night is that you can see it best after dark, when the moon is shining behind it."

Bryant said his parents, who live near Hart's Creek, 25 miles away, had driven to see the tree.

"It's bumper around here after dark," Bryant added. "I've even seen out-of-state license plates."

The residents of Holden, in southern West Virginia, were told of the tree's appearance by three youths.

"It's up on the site where the old Holden Grade School used to be," said Jean Bell, who lives near the tree. "They say three boys were sitting under the tree, drinking beer, one evening when one of them looked up and saw Jesus. They say it shook him up so bad that he quit drinking and joined the church."

Word quickly spread that when viewed from a certain angle, the tree bore Jesus' likeness.

"I've been up to see it a few times, myself," said Ruth McNeil, who lives down the street from the tree. "The resemblance is amazing."

Mrs. McNeil said the traffic in front of her house begins to get heavy just before dusk.

"It's been that way for a couple of weeks," she said. "People come to see the tree. Some of them pray; some shout, and some do a little preaching."

Glen Bryant, no relation to Curtis, lives across the street from the hill and has made a pilgrimage to see the tree.

"It does look like Jesus," he said. "It's a little spooky."

Asked whether he thought the resemblance was coincidental, he said: "I don't know. It could have been put there for a reason; that used to be a place where people partied a lot."

Registered?

The League of Women Voters of Greenville-Pitt County will operate voter registration sites here on two occasions this month for the convenience of residents who wish to get their names on the books for the Nov. 2 elections.

Registration booths will be set up at Pitt Plaza on Sept. 17-18 and at Carolina East Mall on Sept. 24-25. Hours will be from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m. at both sites.

In addition to accepting voter registrations, people who have moved to other precincts or changed party affiliations will be able to bring their records up to date in order to vote in the general elections.

The deadline for registration or making changes is Oct. 4 at 5 p.m.

Residents may also register any time until the deadline at the Pitt County Board of Elections office on East Second Street.

Says Robbery By Three Men

Greenville police were investigating a strong arm robbery that took place about 1:45 a.m. today on Albemarle Avenue near the Carolina Avenue intersection.

Chief Glenn Cannon said Shannon Phillip Williams of 1503 Chestnut St. reported that three men jumped from behind a bush, hit him and knocked him to the ground and then took his wallet.

The wallet, the chief noted, contained $9 in cash.

Pennsylvania Town Living With Nuclear Wastes

By MARCIA DUNN
Associated Press Writer
CANONSBURG, Pa. (AP) — Long before the atomic bomb, long before nuclear power plants, residents of this western Pennsylvania community lived with wastes buried by nuclear pioneers.

Uranium processing plants, which once supplied scientist Marie Curie with radium and later helped toward building the Hiroshima and Nagasaki bombs, produced more than 200,000 tons of radioactive waste since 1911. The wastes now lie beneath an industrial park near this quiet, residential suburb, about 20 miles southwest of Pittsburgh.

Saying they fear for their health, residents of Canonsburg and nearby Strabane long have urged the federal government to speed up plans for cleaning up the site.

But necessary government standards, which were to be in place by 1979, are almost three years late.

"When you didn't know, you weren't afraid. Now when you know, you're afraid. It's better not knowing," said Sophie Winseck, who unwittingly used an old vat from the processing plant to catch rainwater in her backyard.

Scientists, however, report finding only slightly higher rates of illness among those living near the radioactive site.

Standard Chemical Co. extracted radium from ore at the site in 1911. Later, the site was taken over by Vitro Corp. of America, which processed uranium and radium, burying its waste there. The Atomic Energy Commission later used the property for storage.

The industrial park is among 24 sites identified under the Uranium Mill Tailings Radiation Control Act of 1978 as requiring prompt cleanup.

The U.S. Department of Energy found "higher-than-acceptable" radioactive emissions from radon gas and radium at the site in 1977. Up to a third of a mile from the site, the emissions range from two to three times the normal background levels. Within that area, the risk of lung cancer would be about 25 percent higher, according to Department of Energy consultants.

The Canonsburg site is the only one east of the Mississippi River and the only one surrounded by residents — about 8,000 of Canonsburg's 11,000 residents live within one mile of the facility.

Decontamination of the industrial park and nearly 100 adjacent private properties has been stalled while government agencies finish reviewing Environmental Protection Agency standards for the cleanup.

Angered by the delay, about 100 residents have filed class-action lawsuits against the state and federal governments, six government agencies and seven corporations.

The residents claim their health has been endangered and their property values lowered because of radioactive contamination.

"My husband has leukemia, and then they tell me not to worry. I worry every day," said Isabella Spinosa, who lives about 500 feet from the industrial park.

University of Pittsburgh researchers assured residents at a town meeting last month that radiation levels are not alarming.

"The radioactive effects — if they are there — are very, very slight... I assure you this is not a serious problem that is out of control," Dr. Edward Radford said following a two-year study funded by the EPA.

"Frankly, I would live there," said Dr. Evelyn Talbott, a native of Strabane.

Both researchers said they found slightly higher rates of illness among adults living within 600 yards of the industrial park as compared to those living in Muse, a community four miles away.

The study found slightly higher rates of thyroid abnormalities. In addition, the incidence of ulcers in men and self-reported nervous and emotional disorders in women also were slightly higher, according to the study. But because only 60 percent of Canonsburg residents eligible for the study participated, the researchers said they could not conclude that the illnesses were caused by exposure to low-level radiation.

Both scientists said their assurances do not apply to the 18-acre site where processing occurred. Five businesses remain at the site.

A study released earlier in the summer by Pitt doctoral student Stephan Lanes, meanwhile, concluded that people living near the industrial park were not significantly harmed by exposure to the radioactive element radon.

Lanes' study indicated that lung cancer rates were not higher than elsewhere in Washington County and that lung cancer cases were not clustered around the industrial park.

Despite such positive reports, city officials in Canonsburg say the publicity has hurt business and town pride. Family reunions have been held elsewhere and real estate sales are down, says

Mayor Jack Passante.

"It's put a stigma on the area that I think is going to last for quite some time," Passante said.

Some residents, like Agnes Engel of Strabane, want more than just studies.

"I don't want to discredit what the researchers have done," she said. "But I would like to have some action. I'm tired of pussyfooting around."

Public Policy Group Urges State Role In Housing

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — High interest rates and federal budget cuts require the state to assume a greater role in helping all North Carolinians find housing, concludes a non-profit group that studies state government policy.

The Raleigh-based North Carolina Center for Public Policy Research Inc., in its latest quarterly magazine, recommends the state think about consolidating the 11 departments and 19 agencies now dealing with housing.

Ran Coble, executive director of the center, noted that North Carolina ranks seventh in the nation in the percentage of homes without complete plumbing. One of every 12 North Carolinians lives in such substandard housing.

The magazine article said that the number of substandard housing units, overcrowded homes or those without plumbing, dropped from 44 percent in 1960 to 8.7 percent in 1980.

Most of those houses were concentrated in the coastal area. In 1980, 21 percent of all non-white households were considered substandard.

In an interview, Coble said unusual conditions this year — high interest rates, extensive federal budget cuts and a continuing high rate of substandard housing — may hit the state especially hard.

"That will mean we'll have a lot of problems go unmet," Coble said. "Heretofore, if market rates got really high or the amount of substandard housing ... got really high, then the Congress would respond. But with the budget-cutting mood that means state and local governments will be the ones who people look to."

Joseph Grimsley, secretary of the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development, acknowledged in an interview with the magazine that housing has not been a top priority in the past.

Grimsley was out of town and could not be reached for additional comment Wednesday.

Home Administration housing budget, especially important to North Carolina with the nation's largest rural housing program, may be slashed by more than 76 percent nationally.

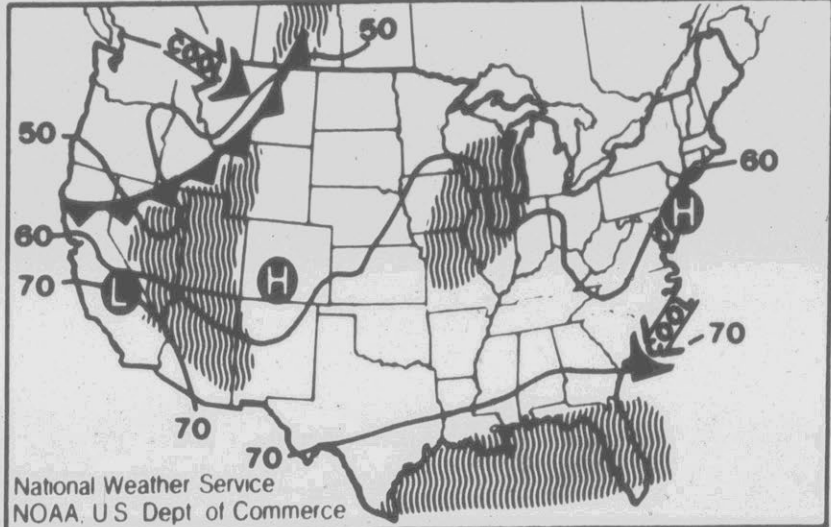

Such factors make development of a state housing strategy important, the group said. It recommended combining agencies dealing with housing into a Department of Housing or splitting the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development into a Department of Housing and Community Development and a Department of Natural Resources.

The center also recommended the state attempt to serve as many low-income people as possible through its community development block grant program and Housing Finance Agency and focus its resources on counties with the greatest amount of substandard housing.

WEATHER FORECAST — The National Weather Service forecasts sunny, warm weather for most of the nation Friday. Showers are due in the southern and central

By The Associated Press
North Carolina's weather isn't expected to change much for the next few days, as a prolonged northeasterly wind flow continues to dominate things, the National Weather Service says.

High pressure centered on the Virginia-Maryland coast covers a large area from the Carolinas to Nova Scotia. The air circulating around the high is blowing in from off the western Atlantic. It is likely to continue as the high pressure system remains anchored near the mid-Atlantic coast.

This means northeast or easterly winds for North Carolina and the possibility of occasional low clouds or morning fog each day. The air further up in the atmosphere is dry, so chances of precipitation the next few days are slim. But showers over the warm gulf stream waters may on occasion drift close to the southern coastal area with the on-shore breeze.

Highs were expected to be in the low to mid-80s today. Off the coast, brisk winds were expected to continue whipping the surf.

High-level clouds from a storm system developing over the northern Gulf of Mexico could cross North Carolina in the next couple of days.

Wednesday, except for lingering cloudiness in the northeast part of the state, skies were mostly sunny during the afternoon. Temperatures rose into the low to mid-80s most places, though they held to the 70s in the central and northern mountains and under the clouds in the northeast.

Early today, temperatures ranged from the mid-50s over in the mountains to the upper 60s on the coast. Fog and low clouds formed in many areas, especially in central and western sections.

Grimsley and Brent Hackney, a spokesman for Gov. Jim Hunt, agreed that the state has approached the housing problem from an economic development standpoint.

"The state can't do a whole lot about bringing down interest rates, rejuvenating industry and making people better able to afford a house," Hackney said in a telephone interview. "About all you can do at the state level is to develop your economy to the maximum extent possible. That is the central priority from which all good things come economically."

But Coble said federal budget cuts this year will leave a void that the state could fill.

He said nearly all of the Department of Housing and Urban Development's low-income new construction programs will be eliminated Oct. 1 and the Farmers

Beaches Closed At Nags Head

NAGS HEAD, N.C. (AP) — Beaches at Nags Head have been closed because of the rough surf, the National Weather Service reported Wednesday.

The beaches had opened Tuesday after being closed much of the Labor Day weekend.

Brisk northeast winds along the middle Atlantic Coast has caused the rough surf, with the weather service saying strong rip currents may develop swells that break diagonally on the beaches.

Indictments By The Grand Jury

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — A federal grand jury has indicted a Pink Hill man on a charge of threatening the life of President Reagan.

A U.S. Eastern District Court jury indicted Ralph DeWayne Kennell Wednesday, charging him with threatening Reagan in an Aug. 19 telephone call to the White House. If convicted, Kennell faces a maximum sentence of five years in prison, a $10,000 fine, or both, authorities said.

In another case, Danny Oxendine, of Rowland, was charged in a one-count indictment with concealing a person from arrest.

The indictment charges that Oxendine hid and helped Huel Locklear in a wooded area near his home, knowing that a warrant had been issued for Locklear's arrest.

Locklear is awaiting trial on bank robbery charges in South Carolina, and charges of assault on federal officers are still pending against him in North Carolina, authorities said.

Shelvon Donnie Lee Melton, 28, of Ahoskie, was charged with embezzling approximately $46,297 from the U.S. Dept. of Housing and Urban Development while employed by the Choanoke Area Development Association. If convicted he could face a maximum sentence of 10 years imprisonment, a $10,000 fine, or both.

Other people indicted by the grand jury included: — Edward Lee Spry and Harold Lloyd Spry Jr., charged with the Aug. 26 armed robbery of The Bank of Currituck in Moyock.

— Kim Adrienne Pevia, 24, of Lumberton, charged with embezzling $4,036.97 from the Lumbee Bank in Pembroke.

Shultz Takes Mideast Peace Plan To Capitol Hill

By BARTON REPPER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz was going before the House Foreign Affairs Committee today to bolster support for President Reagan's Middle East peace plan, which so far has drawn largely favorable reaction on Capitol Hill.

since Senate confirmation hearings in mid-July to question Shultz publicly about the Mideast and other major foreign policy issues, such as El Salvador and U.S. attempts to block a Soviet-Western Europe gas pipeline.

Rep. Clement J. Zablocki, D-Wis., chairman of the House panel, had expressed strong concern last month over Reagan's decision to send U.S. Marines into Beirut to assist in evacuating Palestinian fighters from the Israeli-besieged Lebanese capital.

However, the president's announcement on Wednesday that American troops would start withdrawing shortly was expected to allay qualms among Zablocki and others in Congress that the Beirut operation might lead to an open-ended U.S. military involvement.

Reagan said the three-nation force would begin pulling out of Lebanon on Friday and "the United States Marine contingent should be among the first to leave." Also, he disclosed that a deputy assistant secretary of state, Morris Draper, was being dispatched to the Middle East to push the quest for an overall peace in the region.

When the 800 Marines went into Beirut on Aug. 24 — the second time in 24 years that American troops had landed in Lebanon on a peacekeeping mission — Reagan promised they would be withdrawn within 30 days. Friday would mark the 16th day of their deployment.

Since his confirmation July

15 by a 97-0 Senate vote, Shultz has given closed-door briefings on the Lebanon situation for Zablocki's panel and the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

These private sessions, according to congressional sources, have strengthened the 61-year-old secretary's reputation on Capitol Hill as a low-key team player — contrasting sharply with the tough-talking, high-profile style of his predecessor, Alexander M. Haig Jr.

One House aide, who declined to be identified, predicted that Shultz could face "polite but chilly" questioning at today's open hearing by strongly pro-Israel lawmakers concerned over the administration's "implied support for some kind of Palestinian entity."

Reagan's peace initiative urges "self-government by the Palestinians of the West Bank and Gaza in association with Jordan," while ruling out U.S. support for either an independent Palestinian state or permanent Israeli control over the disputed territories.

Other elements of the Reagan plan, unveiled in a nationally broadcast speech last week, include an immediate freeze on further Israeli settlements in the West Bank, resolving the "final status" of Jerusalem through negotiations and an "ironclad" U.S. commitment to Israel's security.

The Israeli government led by Prime Minister Menachem Begin promptly rejected the U.S. plan as potentially dangerous and a "serious deviation" from the Camp David peace accords.

Reacting to Reagan's initiative, Zablocki last week commended the president for his "forthright statement on a highly sensitive and complex set of problems" and pledged "my full, bipartisan support."

Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., declared, "By seizing the opportunity now and providing a clearer sense of the American position on the key issues to be negotiated, the president has instilled renewed momentum to the historic achievement of Camp David."

Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., ranking minority member on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said Reagan's plan "was a generally supportable one with noble goals with which most Americans agree."

Hail Trend Away From Treatment At Hospital

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Health care in North Carolina and South Carolina is among the lowest priced in the nation, and a trend away from hospital treatment should result in further savings, hospital officials and doctors say.

Only two states, Mississippi and Arkansas, ranked lower than the Carolinas in the average charge for a semi-private room in July 1981 — $101.15 in North Carolina and $99.87 in South Carolina. The national average was $151.78.

Doctors now can do everything from chemotherapy to stress tests to minor surgery in their offices. The less time spent in the hospital, the better for the pocketbook.

"We're doing everything we can — that's safe — to compress the length of time the patient has to stay in the hospital," said Paul Betzold, senior vice president of Presbyterian Hospital in Charlotte.

Trends toward using doctors' offices and minor-emergency centers are "really good," according to Charlotte Memorial Hospital president Harry Nurkin. "It allows each segment to do what they do best," while the patient gets appropriate care.

Dr. James Alexander, who practices internal medicine with the 12-member Mecklenburg Medical Group, estimates his group each year saves $3.2 million in hospital bed charges alone because the doctors avoid hospitalizing patients.

At the Durwood Clinic, where one of Charlotte's largest groups of internal-medicine specialists practice, up to six patients simultaneously get intravenous drugs for cancer. Until recently, such treatment always require hospitalization.

Doctors' offices are broadening the variety of their diagnostic equipment, reducing reliance on hospitals for diagnosing illnesses. Up to 95 percent of all lab tests are done at Durwood Clinic.

Two minor-emergency centers are open in Charlotte, an urgent-care center in Pineville will open next month and the Huntersville Hospital emergency room recently began around-the-clock operation last year, primarily serving minor emergencies.

As a result of the trend, the hospital industry is changing. Hospitalization for diagnostic workups, once commonplace, have virtually disappeared, hospital officials say. Ambulant care is vanishing.

And the emergency-room volume is down at most hospitals. Presbyterian's emergency-room volume is down 6 percent. At Charlotte Memorial, emergency room visits for the first nine months of this year were off about 3 percent.

Hospitals also are planning to increase the number of patients who have surgery on an outpatient basis.

"The patients in the hospital are going to be the very, very sick ones," said Dr. James Black of the Durwood Clinic.

Insurance companies no longer require hospitalization for a client to get full coverage, paying almost as well for care given as an outpatient or at the doctor's office.

To Describe 'Ham Watch'

A program of crime prevention and public safety utilizing amateur radio will be the topic of the monthly meeting of the Brightleaf Amateur Radio Club Tuesday at 7:30 p.m.

The program called "Ham Watch" was created by Greenville amateur Bob Sickles, and is sponsored by the division of crime prevention of the state Department of Crime Control and Public Safety.

Amateur radio operators, many of whom have mobile stations, will report to authorities emergencies that require prompt attention and potential problems that are not emergencies. Amateurs will utilize a statewide network of repeaters that operate in the 144 megahertz band with ranges up to 100 miles.

Sickles said the program will eventually cover the entire state and will involve as many as 9,000 licensed amateur radio operators. In addition to local club officials attending the meeting, L. D. Hyde, director of the division of crime prevention, will also be on hand.

The Greenville organization has about 80 members.

Cars Collided Wednesday

Cars driven by Mary Swindell Harris of Route 1, Fairfield, and Robin Gay Price of Edgewood Trailer Park collided about 4:55 p.m. Wednesday on Greenville Boulevard, 210 feet west of the Charles Street intersection.

Greenville police estimated damage at $600 to the Harris car and $300 to the Price vehicle.

Cyclist Injured In Accident

Gary Winton Cain of Burlington was injured early this morning when the motorcycle he was riding collided with a car driven by Bryan Scott Smith of Woodleaf at the intersection of Fifth and Reade Streets.

Investigators, who charged Smith with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of the 12:35 a.m. mishap, estimated damage from the collision at $600 to the Smith car and $700 to the motorcycle.

Residential Break-Ins
 The Pitt County Sheriff's Department today was investigating a rash of rural residential break-in and larceny incidents that took place sometime during the afternoon Wednesday.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said the incidents were reported at the homes of Mike Cox, Route 2, Greenville, where a shotgun and bow valued at $580 were taken; Jesse C. McLamb, 109 Emma Place, Colonial Trailer Park, where $150 was stolen; C.D. Landreth, Route 2, Greenville, where .357 and .22 caliber pistols valued at $300 were taken; Worth Forbes, Route 3, Greenville, where two speakers, a silver ring and other property valued at $772 was stolen; Theodore Jenkins, Route 2, Ayden, where a 12-gauge shotgun and a cowboy hat, valued together at $35, was taken; and Glenn Taylor, P.O. Box 187, Stokes, where a .22 caliber revolver and holster, camera and passbook savings book, all valued at $215, were taken.

Tyson said the daylight break-ins took place while the residents were away from their homes.

Rep. Pepper Marks 82nd
WASHINGTON (AP) - Rep. Claude Pepper, the oldest member of Congress, celebrated his 82nd birthday with a cake and a hearing.

The Florida Democrat marked his birthday by having his House Select Committee on Aging hear testimony Wednesday on the relationship between the young and old in the United States.

Among those present were 29 5-year-olds, Bob Keeshan, who plays Captain Kangaroo, and a teen-age actor who appeared in "On Golden Pond," Henry Fonda's last movie, in which the late actor portrayed an elderly man facing death.

The young actor, Doug McKeon, 16, testified, "It's very sad when you realize that often parents are so involved in producing material benefits for their children that their children are deprived of the joys of their (parents') presence.

"And later those same parents become grandparents and retire to some old-age oasis and their grandchildren are deprived of their presence; and they themselves lose the joy of sharing with the young. They become the 'forgotten generation' twice removed."

The 29 children from Dard's-Parkland Day Care Center in Washington sat quietly through the testimony, though some appeared to drowse under the hot television lights. But they all came to life when Pepper's aides wheeled out a white birthday cake with 82 candles.

Report Arrests In Drag-Racing
CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) - At least a dozen people have been arrested following a crackdown by the state Highway Patrol on drag racing on Richmond County highways.

Undercover troopers dressed in blue jeans and T-shirts mingled with the racing crowd before making the arrests Sunday, according to Capt. W.B. Richardson.

By Tuesday, a dozen people had been charged with "prearranged racing," a misdemeanor traffic violation that can lead to a 60-day prison term, $500 fine and three-year revocation of a driver's license and confiscation of the racing vehicle.

Six cars and eight motorcycles were confiscated.

State troopers also arrested 26 persons for driving under the influence as they left the racing area Sunday night, Richardson said.

Investigating Tobacco Theft
 The theft of approximately 8,000 pounds of cured tobacco from a packhouse on a Route 3, Greenville, farm is under investigation by Pitt County deputies, Sheriff Ralph Tyson said today.

He said the tobacco, valued at some $16,000, was taken from the Hugh Winslow farm off Rural Paved Road 1550. Tyson said the theft was reported Tuesday by Carroll Hamm, operator of the farm.

The sheriff said that 41 sheets of tobacco that was ready for market was reported stolen.

The farm is located in Pacolus township.

Reagan Concession For Sake Of Vote On Veto

By DAVID ESPO
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - The Reagan administration, attempting to make the president's veto stick on a $14.2 billion money bill, agreed to a concession today that will keep alive a community service jobs program for the elderly, sources said.

With a vote on the veto only a few hours away in the House, officials said Budget Director David Stockman was sending a letter to Congress dropping opposition to $210 million that would keep the program alive after Oct.

Report Arrests In Drag-Racing
CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) - At least a dozen people have been arrested following a crackdown by the state Highway Patrol on drag racing on Richmond County highways.

Undercover troopers dressed in blue jeans and T-shirts mingled with the racing crowd before making the arrests Sunday, according to Capt. W.B. Richardson.

By Tuesday, a dozen people had been charged with "prearranged racing," a misdemeanor traffic violation that can lead to a 60-day prison term, $500 fine and three-year revocation of a driver's license and confiscation of the racing vehicle.

Six cars and eight motorcycles were confiscated.

State troopers also arrested 26 persons for driving under the influence as they left the racing area Sunday night, Richardson said.

Investigating Tobacco Theft
 The theft of approximately 8,000 pounds of cured tobacco from a packhouse on a Route 3, Greenville, farm is under investigation by Pitt County deputies, Sheriff Ralph Tyson said today.

He said the tobacco, valued at some $16,000, was taken from the Hugh Winslow farm off Rural Paved Road 1550. Tyson said the theft was reported Tuesday by Carroll Hamm, operator of the farm.

The sheriff said that 41 sheets of tobacco that was ready for market was reported stolen.

The farm is located in Pacolus township.

1. That was the largest single item Reagan objected to in vetoing the bill.

The assurance that Reagan would accept money in a later bill to keep alive 54,200 jobs in the politically popular program was designed to boost chances for sustaining the veto.

Before the letter was delivered, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., said the vote would be "very close."

O'Neill kept up his rhetorical assault on Reagan, declaring the veto was a "very dastardly political move by a man with a stone heart."

Stockman's concession also came despite an outward display of confidence by House GOP Leader Robert H. Michel of Illinois that the veto would be sustained in any event. Discussions have already begun with White House aides on a backup bill, as some measure is needed by next week for the government to meet its military and civilian payroll.

With the House scheduled to vote on the president's veto late this afternoon, Michel declared Wednesday, "I think we can sustain it."

But if not, Republican Leader Howard Baker of Tennessee is said to be confident the GOP-controlled Senate can hand Reagan a victory. It takes a two-thirds vote in both houses to override a veto.

Baker and Michel met during the day with White House Chief of Staff James A. Baker III and other administration aides to discuss a possible fallback measure, since some type of legislation is needed by next week for the government to meet its military and civilian payrolls.

Sources said the White House was offering a "compromise" under which Reagan would accept $300 million of $900 million in domestic spending that he opposes in the vetoed bill. In exchange, Congress would restore $2.1 billion it cut from defense programs, and would re-approve the $350 million it included for a Caribbean Basin program of foreign assistance.

However those discussions turn out, Michel said Reagan is eventually going to have to accept more money for domestic spending than he would like.

Residential Break-Ins
 The Pitt County Sheriff's Department today was investigating a rash of rural residential break-in and larceny incidents that took place sometime during the afternoon Wednesday.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said the incidents were reported at the homes of Mike Cox, Route 2, Greenville, where a shotgun and bow valued at $580 were taken; Jesse C. McLamb, 109 Emma Place, Colonial Trailer Park, where $150 was stolen; C.D. Landreth, Route 2, Greenville, where .357 and .22 caliber pistols valued at $300 were taken; Worth Forbes, Route 3, Greenville, where two speakers, a silver ring and other property valued at $772 was stolen; Theodore Jenkins, Route 2, Ayden, where a 12-gauge shotgun and a cowboy hat, valued together at $35, was taken; and Glenn Taylor, P.O. Box 187, Stokes, where a .22 caliber revolver and holster, camera and passbook savings book, all valued at $215, were taken.

Tyson said the daylight break-ins took place while the residents were away from their homes.

Rep. Pepper Marks 82nd
WASHINGTON (AP) - Rep. Claude Pepper, the oldest member of Congress, celebrated his 82nd birthday with a cake and a hearing.

The Florida Democrat marked his birthday by having his House Select Committee on Aging hear testimony Wednesday on the relationship between the young and old in the United States.

Among those present were 29 5-year-olds, Bob Keeshan, who plays Captain Kangaroo, and a teen-age actor who appeared in "On Golden Pond," Henry Fonda's last movie, in which the late actor portrayed an elderly man facing death.

The young actor, Doug McKeon, 16, testified, "It's very sad when you realize that often parents are so involved in producing material benefits for their children that their children are deprived of the joys of their (parents') presence.

"And later those same parents become grandparents and retire to some old-age oasis and their grandchildren are deprived of their presence; and they themselves lose the joy of sharing with the young. They become the 'forgotten generation' twice removed."

The 29 children from Dard's-Parkland Day Care Center in Washington sat quietly through the testimony, though some appeared to drowse under the hot television lights. But they all came to life when Pepper's aides wheeled out a white birthday cake with 82 candles.

Rose Seeks First Win At New Bern

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
Rose High School's Rampants attempt to get on the winning side of the ledger this Friday night as they travel for the first time this season.

Rose will go to New Bern to face the winless Bears in a 7:30 p.m. game — the only 7:30 game of the season.

The Rampants got their season off to a disappointing start last Friday night bowing to Jacksonville, 23-22, after recovering from a 16-0 deficit to gain a 22-16 lead late in the contest.

In that game, Rose gave up 16 easy first period points, allowing a long runback of the opening kickoff, a cheap touchdown pass, a safety on a bad snap on a punt, and a touchdown following an interception deep in Rose territory.

After that, the Rampants drove back, closing to 16-14 in the second period, then taking the lead early in the final period.

But Jacksonville drove for the final score over a five-minute period, helped along by two face-masking calls against the Rampants. Several other penalties had helped the

Enoch Reid

Cardinals earlier in the game, and it left Coach Ronald Vincent unhappy.

"We got too many penalties," he said in retrospect. "And even after looking at the films, I'd have to say that they were questionable calls.

"But we didn't help ourselves by having some breakdowns and giving them 16 easy points."

Vincent said he was most unhappy with the kicking game. "The long kickoff return, the safety on the punt, and then their punter kept us backed up all night long. But I was most disappointed in the kickoff coverage. We've made some personnel changes this week to try and stop that."

Vincent said he felt the defense played an excellent game for the most part. "To hold a team like Jacksonville to under 100 yards is something. You're supposed to win when you do that. But the team that plays the best doesn't always win."

Vincent singled out linemen Judas Best and William Rhodes and Frankie Carr and linebackers Reggie Clark and Craig Dupree for their play in the game.

"I thought we played much better this year (against Jacksonville) than we did last year, and we won last year and lost this year. Jacksonville is better than they were last year, but we still should have won. All the breaks went our way last year and their way this year."

Offensively, Vincent was disappointed in the rushing game. "I really thought that we would move the ball better than we did. Most of the problem was missed assignments — not mental misses, but physical misses, and I guess that says something for Jacksonville.

"But I thought our two untested quarterbacks (Kenny Kirkland and Bobby Buie) did an excellent job, and I was quite pleased with the play of Reggie Smith (fullback).

"Then, what can you say about the play of Edward Frazier. He showed a lot of determination." Frazier, on four carries picked up 100 yards and scored one touchdown. He also caught three passes for 51 yards.

The Rampants should have fullback Roderick Harrell, who started practice at number one, back this week, following a pre-season injury, and lineman Horace Barrett may also return following an injury. Two others, Bobby Casey and William Waugh are still not back, however.

"We didn't have anyone hurt in the game, but we've had a lot of illness this week," Vincent said.

team than an option team. On defense, they use a four-four alignment.

"They've played well at times but have given up the big play too," he said of the New Bern defense.

Rose returns home next Friday to host Wilmington Hoggard as it closes out its non-conference slate of games.

New Bern comes into Friday night's game looking for its first win also, having lost its first two contests. The Bears were downed by Havelock, 22-6, and then bowled to Kinston last week, 14-11.

"They were picked to be one of the best teams in the league," Vincent said of the Bears. "They have a real good running back in Carl Lewis, who got a lot of yards off us last year." Lewis picked up 148 yards against Kinston.

"They've also got a number of linemen and the quarterback who played against us back," he added. "They didn't play well against Havelock, but they were improved against Kinston. They've had two games to get their problems ironed out, and I look for them to be much improved this Friday night."

New Bern operates its offense out of the wishbone formation, but Vincent notes that they are more of a power

QB Greg Stewart Excited About Pirates' I-Formation Offense

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

When East Carolina travels to North Carolina State Saturday night for its 1982 opener, the spotlight will descend, in general, on the Pirates' new I-formation and, in particular, on ECU quarterback Greg Stewart.

"People expect a whole lot," Stewart said during a break one evening earlier this week. "I'm anticipating the offense doing real well.

"It will probably be a little rough early," Stewart said. "We've got to get our timing down in actual game conditions. You're not going against your own teammates.

"The guys seem fired up," Stewart said. "And, for the first time since I've been here, I'm confident."

Stewart is not alone in his confidence — or his acceptance of the I-formation. The two seem to go hand-in-hand, cemented together with the generous portion of optimism that each new season brings.

"The guys accepted it quick," he said. "The change of offense has everybody thinking we can do it. I think they were tired of the wishbone."

Not least of those tired of the wishbone was Pirate third-year coach Ed Emory, who inherited the 'bone from former ECU coach Pat Dye and decided to stay with it his first two years.

"I think the decision has been good for us," Emory said at his Tuesday press conference. "We probably should have gone to it quicker. I feel like that the I-formation we've installed gives us more flexibility and variety."

Stewart heartily agreed. "It's hard to defend if we run it right," Stewart said. "I want to see what the offense will do myself."

Stewart, a 5-10, 172-pound junior from Middlebrook, Va., replaced starting QB Carlton Nelson (since moved to split end) after seven games last year and then won the starting slot in spring drills.

During the fall, Stewart held off the challenge of Kevin Ingram, a 5-11, 181-pound junior, for the starting quarterback job. Ingram, who transferred to ECU last year, is also expected to see duty Saturday.

"The deciding factor to start Greg," ECU first-year offensive coordinator Larry Beckish said, "is based on the fact that I feel he has a slightly better understanding of what we're trying to do with our offense against various defenses.

"He is throwing the ball to the right receivers and he is pitching the ball when it should be pitched."

As for when Ingram might enter the game, Emory said: "Sometime in the second quarter. We're going to give Greg Stewart time to be successful. Greg Stewart is our number one quarterback and Kevin Ingram gives us something of a change of pace."

For his part, Stewart knows if he is unable to move the team he will not last long. "If I didn't start I'm sure Kevin would do as well as I hope to do. But I realize if we're not moving the ball my butt's coming out of there."

Stewart spent his first two years at ECU running the wishbone — an offense he admittedly did not like. His statistics from those two seasons are mediocre at best: 119 yards rushing in 72 carries and 50 of 109 passing for 525 yards. The 'I' may change all that.

"I had problems in the wishbone," he said. "I couldn't run. I'm not one known for my speed."

The I-formation ECU will use is Beckish's brainchild. In Beckish's scheme the offense puts a premium on getting to the outside.

"In high school we basically ran the same stuff," Stewart said. "To me it is easy. It came natural.

"We aim to get to the corners," he explained. "We don't have to read anybody until we get there."

A typical play in the 'I' will have Stewart faking to fullback Earnest Byner inside and then optioning off either the defensive end or linebacker — the No. 3 man in ECU's designating scheme.

Thus, the first option — to Quarterback Greg Stewart

Yankees Stop Two Streaks With Win

By The Associated Press
You have to hand it to the New York Yankees — by beating the Baltimore Orioles, they killed two birds with one stone.

Orioles' 10-game winning streak and Jim Palmer's personal 11-game streak. "They throttled us the first two games," said Dave Winfield, who hit one of the Yankee homers. "You don't want to be swept and embarrassed."

The Yankees apparently caught Palmer on his worst night of the season. "It was totally different from the games he's been throwing all year," said Baltimore catcher Joe Nolan. "But eventually you have a game like that. He's proven to be a good pitcher all year, but it's tough to go out there time after time and slam the door. The hitters are going to get you once in a while. It was just a bad night all around."

In other American League action, it was Kansas City 6, Seattle 2; Chicago 5, California 3; Toronto 6, Oakland 5; Texas 2, Minnesota 0; Cleveland 2, Boston 0 and Milwaukee 9, Detroit 7.

Palmer, 34, had not only won 11 straight games before Wednesday night, he had not lost in his 18 previous starts, dating back to May 30. Said Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver of the struggling Yankees: "There's too much talent there. They've got to do this once in a while. The day before we came in, they scored 18 runs."

The streak which propelled the Orioles into second place in the AL East softened the loss for Weaver: "It ain't too bad to win 17 of 18 and 10 in a row."

Along with Winfield's homer, a solo shot, Ken Griffey hit a three-run homer and Jerry Mumphrey and Roy Smalley walloped bases-empty homers for the Yankees. With his homer, Winfield became only the ninth player to hit 30 or more homers in each league and only the fifth right-handed-hitting Yankee to get 30 in a season. Jay Howell, 1-1, who allowed four hits in eight innings, was the winner.

Getting Hot

Toronto Blue Jays. Martin was ejected during the eighth inning argument. Martin was ejected and the Blue Jays went on to win, 6-5. (AP Laserphoto)

Royals 6, Mariners 2
Vida Blue scattered five hits and Hal McRae drove in two runs with a triple and a single, boosting his major league leading total to 118, as Kansas City beat Seattle. Blue, 12-9, struck out six and walked one in his fifth complete game of the season.

The Royals got all the runs they needed in the first inning when they scored three off Jim Beattie, 8-11, with the help of a throwing error by Julio Cruz, one of two errors by the Mariner second baseman that helped the Royals to runs.

White Sox 5, Angels 3
Mike Squires' eighth-inning infield single, his third hit of the game, drove in the winning run as Chicago beat California, dropping the Angels two games behind the front-running Royals in the AL West.

Greg Luzinski doubled with one out off reliever John Curtis, 0-1, and Carlton Fisk drew an intentional walk with two outs before Squires bounced a single behind first base to score pinch-runner Jay Loviglio from second.

Vance Law then greeted Ricky Steier with a single to score Fisk for a 5-3 lead.

Rich Dotson, 11-11, allowed seven hits in 7-3 innings as he posted his eighth consecutive win. He walked two and struck out seven before getting help from Salome Barojas, who gained his 17th save.

Blue Jays 6, A's 5
Barry Bonnell and Jesse Barfield drove in two runs each as Toronto beat Oakland and completed a three-game sweep of the A's. Bonnell tripled and singled twice, and Barfield doubled and hit his 13th homer in the seventh as Toronto won in Oakland for the sixth straight time.

Roy Lee Jackson, 5-8, pitched 32-3 innings of two-hit relief.

Rangers 2, Twins 0
Left-hander Jon Matlack fired a one-hitter for seven innings and George Wright hit a two-run homer in the third to lead Texas over Minnesota.

Matlack, 7-6, making his first start since a demotion to the bullpen July 10, pitched his best game of the season, as he walked two, struck out four and gave only a bad-hop single to Lenny Faedo in the fifth before giving way to reliever Danny Darwin to start the eighth inning. Paul Mirabella

Brewers 8, Tigers 7
Cecil Cooper hit a three-run homer and Charlie Moore drove in three runs with a double and a bunt single, leading Milwaukee over Detroit.

Moose Haas, 11-8, relieved Milwaukee starter Bob McClure in the fifth inning and earned the victory as the Brewers increased their AL East lead to four games over runnerup Baltimore and 5½ over third-place Boston.

Moore's two-run double in a three-run third finished Jerry Ujdur, 9-8.

McKnight, Calhoun Are Cut By NFL Grid Teams

By The Associated Press
For the Kansas City Chiefs and the New England Patriots, the future is now.

For Ted McKnight and Don Calhoun, however, the future is no.

McKnight, the sixth all-time runner with the Chiefs, and Calhoun, the Patriots' third-leading career rusher, were cut Wednesday.

McKnight, a starter since 1978, gained 2,344 yards in five seasons. He played in Kansas City's first five games last season before suffering ligament damage in his right knee that sidelined him for the rest of the season.

McKnight, 28, reported early to the Chiefs' training camp this year but played in only two preseason games, gaining 26 yards on five carries.

Kansas City replaced his spot on the roster by re-signing rookie safety Durwood Roquemore, who had been put on waivers Monday.

Calhoun lost his place on New England's roster when the Patriots signed fullback Mark van Eeghen, the Oakland Raiders' all-time rusher, on Wednesday.

Van Eeghen gained 5,907 yards and scored 35 touchdowns in eight seasons with the Raiders, who waived the 30-year-old player Monday.

Calhoun, 30, ran for 3,391 yards after the Patriots signed him as a free agent during the 1975 season.

New England Coach Ron Meyer said van Eeghen is a "bigger back, better block... better pass receiver" than Calhoun.

The Patriots also signed free agent place-kicker Rex Robinson and cut former New York Jets place-kicker Dave Jacobs on Wednesday.

Jacobs joined the Patriots on Aug. 31 and made both field goal attempts and all five extra point chances in New England's 41-27 preseason victory over Green Bay last week.

He seemingly had won the kicking job with New England after veteran place-kicker

John Smith was put on the injured reserve list Monday.

Robinson, cut by Cincinnati last year, had been released by Denver and Miami during the current preseason.

In another roster move, the Pittsburgh Steelers put running back Walter Abercrombie — their No. 1 draft choice — and defensive end John Meyer — their second draft choice — on the four-week injured reserve list with knee injuries.

Collard Race Set For Sunday
AYDEN — The Ayden Collard Festival Footrace will be held this Sunday at 4 p.m.

An article on the entire festival last Sunday erroneously stated that the race would be held on Saturday at 5 p.m.

East Carolina has changed from the wishbone to the "I," but the change has been costly. The Pirates are down to their reserve running backs because of injuries, including 164-pound tailback Tony Baker. Third-year coach Ed Emory will start Greg Stewart at quarterback, while last year's quarterback, Carlton Nelson, is a wide receiver.

Revenge is on the mind of another ACC opponent this weekend. Auburn fell to the Demon Deacons by 24-21 last season and gets a second crack at Coach Al Groh's squad.

Groh has discovered a running attack with Michael Ramseur and Topper Clemons, however. Gary Schofield leads the Wake Forest air attack, having passed for 243 yards in last weekend's victory over Western Carolina.

Good Rivalries Give ACC Teams Chance To Cash In With Wins

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

Now that somebody went and splashed a little mud on the good name of the Atlantic Coast Conference, it's time for the rest of the league start a massive cleanup campaign.

Georgia knocked off defending national champion Clemson Monday night, but there are plenty of opportunities to regain some honor starting tonight.

Fifth-ranked North Carolina takes on top-ranked Pittsburgh in the headline attraction. On Saturday, while the Tigers are taking the weekend off, Maryland travels to No. 7 Penn State and Georgia Tech meets No. 4 Alabama in Atlanta.

Elsewhere, Virginia is at Navy and Wake Forest is at Auburn and North Carolina State tries for two in a row against East Carolina.

Duke also has the weekend off.

The Tar Heels and the Panthers mark the first CBS-TV college football telecast in 19 years, and it serves as a showcase for two players seeking to capture the Heisman Trophy.

Panther quarterback Dan Marino and Tar Heel tailback Kelvin Bryant are the candidates, but both teams boast outstanding supporting casts.

The difference is Marino's passing, which is expected to give the edge to Pittsburgh and new head coach Foge Fazio.

Alabama has plenty of incentive to whip the Yellow Jackets, specifically last season's 24-21 loss in Birmingham.

The Crimson Tide returns 17 starters from last year's 9-2-1 team, including quarterback Walter Lewis and strong safety Tommy Wilcox. Georgia Tech has 18 starters returning from the 1-10 team of a year ago, but has already lost fullback Ronny Cone due to a fractured kneecap, while receiver Antonio McKay is out for the year with cartilage damage.

"It is an awesome task for Georgia Tech to take on Alabama year after year in the season opener, but we are working hard on measuring up to that task," says Georgia Tech Coach Bill Curry.

Penn State achieved its lowest rushing output in recent years last weekend, but managed to whip Temple 31-14 behind the passing of Todd Blackledge, who tied a school record with four touchdowns passes.

Maryland starts a new era under Coach Bobby Ross. The Terrapins have a veteran defense and a potentially powerful offense guided by quarterback Boomer Esiason and tight end John Tice. History is not on Maryland's side, however; Penn State has won 25 of the 26 previous meetings.

Virginia's new head coach will prove Thomas Wolfe wrong when the Cavaliers meet the Midshipmen at Annapolis. George Welsh was at Navy last season and led the team to a 7-4-1 record and the Liberty Bowl. As he returns to the scene of his last job, his current task is to guide Virginia from the pits of the conference into respectability.

"A long time ago it would have meant a lot," Welsh says. "It's just another game right now. Maybe for the Navy players it might mean something because they don't want to lose to me."

Senior quarterback Tol Avery may have restored the faith of N.C. State fans with his performance against Furman. Avery was 13 of 25 for 174 yards and two touchdowns, while sophomore tailback Joe McIntosh rushed for 130 yards and two more scores as the Wolfpack recorded a 26-0 whitewash of Furman.

The Pirates are down to their reserve running backs because of injuries, including 164-pound tailback Tony Baker. so much better than us," he says. "They may have a little more size than we do, but I think we're a good football team, and we have to have confidence."

"They're ranked number one in the nation, that's true," he says. "We can't rest our season on that. If we don't beat Pittsburgh, there's still an ACC championship that we can grab."

But if the Tar Heels win... well.

"If we beat Pittsburgh, we're one step closer to the national championship."

not anticipating him to throw deep any more often than he has in the past," says Black. "He will try to get rich quick."

Pressure is the key word. Black has found some flaws he hopes his teammates can exploit.

"He doesn't miss too often when there's no pressure on him. When he is pressured, he's human. He'll make a mistake just like we all will," Black adds.

Long before Crum or Black arrived on the scene, North Carolina's defensive secondary was considered a little too human. Some still aren't sure that Black, Greg Poole, Willie Harris and Sammy Johnson can do the job tonight, especially against a quarterback of Marino's caliber. Black says it's not the toughest assignment he's ever faced; it's just another game against another quarterback.

"I have to look at every game as a new beginning. Last year, I was a sophomore and I had never seen any of those teams before," he says. "Here we are playing Pittsburgh and I've never seen (Marino) before."

The oddsmakers say it's Pittsburgh and Crum acknowledges his Tar Heels are an underdog. But Black isn't convinced that the Panthers, or anyone else, could be that powerful.

"We're a major college program. I can't see what type of athlete another team could recruit that would make them

Pirate Attack Fleet!

When it comes to speed, no one is faster than the Pirates' fleet. And, with the shift to the "I" formation this year, the Pirates will attack at scalding speeds.

Earnest Byner and Jimmy Walden are an all-the-way threat every time they handle the football behind an offensive line that averages 6'3" and 254 pounds. Plus, when the Pirates attack by air, they'll have scorching fast Ricky Nichols and Carlton Nelson as moving targets.

So take a look at the Pirates attack fleet this fall. Reserve your seats now with season tickets to all the Pirates' home games. Simply call the Athletic Ticket Office at 919-757-6500, or drop by your local Wachovia Bank and pick up a ticket order form.

Austin Latest Upset Victim At U.S. Open

NEW YORK (AP) — Upset fever at the U.S. Open Tennis Championships has claimed the tournament's defending women's champion, Tracy Austin, and nearly netted three other big names — John McEnroe, Chris Evert Lloyd and Andrea Jaeger — who barely escaped quarterfinal scares.

All three favorites reached into their reserves after dropping the opening sets of their matches Wednesday and recovered to pull out victories and advance to the tournament's semifinal round after Austin was eliminated.

McEnroe, the defending champion and No. 1 seed among the men, survived a grueling five-set marathon against sixth-seeded Gene Mayer, winning 4-6, 7-6, 6-3, 4-6, 6-1. Evert Lloyd and Jaeger roared back for victories which thrust them into the tournament's semifinal round against each other.

Evert Lloyd, seeded second, defeated Bonnie Gadusek 4-6, 6-1, 6-0, winning the last 12 games, after No. 4 Jaeger had eliminated the tournament's Cinderella, amateur Gretchen Rush, 3-6, 6-1, 6-0.

The other women's semifinal will match a couple of giant killers with Czechoslovakia's Hana Mandlikova, the No. 5 seed who eliminated the third-seeded Austin 4-6, 6-4, 6-4 Wednesday going against No. 7 Pam Shriver, who had conquered the tournament's top seed, Martina Navratilova a day earlier.

On the men's side, third-seeded Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia advanced to the semis with a 6-4, 6-3, 6-1 victory over Kim Warwick. Lendl will meet McEnroe, who had his hands full with Mayer.

"I expected a tough match and it was a tough match," said McEnroe. "I was in trouble. I started slowly, got back into it but let it slip away. When I won the tiebreaker in the second set, I felt back in it and I thought I was in control when I won the third set."

But Mayer came back to take the next set, forcing a decisive fifth. In that one, McEnroe dominated.

"I concentrated well and that helped in the fifth set," McEnroe said. "He makes you work hard for the points."

Mayer was disturbed by a number of interruptions when McEnroe argued with the umpire and linesmen.

"It's tough," he said. "Keeping your concentration is difficult. Unfortunately we don't have umpires able to handle the situation. When you're wishy washy, things get out of hand. He was not in control of the situation at all."

The Mandlikova-Austin match, suspended by rain Tuesday, was resumed with Tracy holding a 5-4 lead in the first set. She won that set but then faltered in the second after taking a 3-1 lead.

"The turning point was when I broke her at 3-3 in the second set and then I won my serve for 4-3," Mandlikova said. "I just played every point and hoped that I could break her and win my serve. And I finally broke her."

Austin gave Hana credit.

"She won it," Tracy said. "I was disappointed on the way I played the big points because that's where I think I am the toughest. If they are going to win a big point, they are going to have to work for it. I just didn't feel strong up here," she said, pointing to her head.

Meanwhile, Jaeger was having her troubles with Rush.

"I didn't feel well in the first set," she said. "I was up 2-0 and then all of a sudden, it was weird, I was missing shots I shouldn't have. I was really letting her into the match and not concentrating at all."

Rush won the set but Jaeger came back and won 12 of 13 games.

"I think she showed how really good she is by bringing her game up to the level she is used to playing," said Rush.

Ironically, Evert Lloyd had a similar experience with Gadusek.

Chris opened the match by losing her first set of the tournament and seemed in more trouble when she dropped the first game of the second set.

Then, suddenly, the momentum reversed. "She started playing like Chris Evert," said Gadusek. "She's tough mentally. She knows how to win."

"Desire hit me," said Evert Lloyd. "I really wanted to win. I didn't want to be another casualty, another upset."

Chris started running Gadusek, sweeping the next 12 games for the match.

Lendl, who avoided an upset earlier in the tournament with a grueling five-set victory over Tim Mayotte, was concerned with Warwick, who had beaten two seeded players, Yannick Noah of France and Jose-Luis Clerc of Argentina, en route to the quarterfinals.

"I know how he can play," Lendl said. "I had to be careful. I didn't want to go more than three sets."

Warwick said he thought he had a chance against Lendl.

"I needed to get a good start," he said. "If he gets down, he starts thinking about it and losing and he wants to win very badly."

Badly enough for Lendl to remind the media that he beat McEnroe on this surface, in fact in this stadium, in last year's Davis Cup play.

"The key against him is if I return well," he said. "Then I can break him. I'm playing pretty well. I beat McEnroe before on the same surface. If I'm playing well, I don't see any reason why I can't do it again."

QB Greg Stewart...

the fullback — so vital to a wishbone is not part of the 'I' — at least at present. "We don't have a read on the fullback right now," Stewart said. "We might add that as the season goes along."

For now, however, Stewart will either pitch to the trailing tailback freshman Tony Baker or keep the ball, depending on how the defense reacts. Because he's not the fastest, Stewart believes NCSU will force him to run.

Said Stewart: "I told the coach I know they're going to make me run and he said, 'That's all right. You'll just make first downs.'"

"They've got a speedy (defensive secondary) and that kind of scares me," he added. "I want to make them take me. I'd rather not handle the ball that much."

While Stewart would rather give up the ball when the Pirates go to the run, he wants it when they go to the air. And, unlike past years, the Pirates will pass the ball this year, Emory said.

"We will do what our opponent allows us to do," Emory said. "If that means 70 percent run and 30 percent pass, we'll do that. If that means 30 percent run and 70 percent pass, we'll do that."

Added Stewart: "It (passing) is gonna depend on how our running games goes. We're gonna do a lot of sprint out and roll out passing."

"One thing, though, the offensive line knows if we aren't going to run on third and long. They know we're going to pass some."

Beckish will be the man deciding when the Pirates will pass and when they will run come Saturday night. Both he and defensive coordinator Norm Parker will be in the press box at Carter-Finley Stadium overseeing the Pirates. Beckish will call "90 percent of the plays," according to Emory.

"What they'll do is give us two plays," Stewart said. "One to the right side and one to the left and we decide which way to go depending on where the weakness in their defense is."

But, as Stewart knows, how well the offense runs will depend in large part on his performance.

"I think my teammates have confidence in me and I have confidence," Stewart said. "The guys are looking toward me and if I play well I guess we'll all play well."

Braves Back On Top After Beating L.A.

By The Associated Press
There may be only a little more than three weeks left in the baseball season, but as far as Joe Torre is concerned, the fun is just beginning.
"It's a 24-game season now, and we're 1-0," said the Atlanta manager after his Braves had regained first place in the National League West by a half-game over Los Angeles with a wild, 12-11 10-inning victory over the Dodgers Wednesday.
"It was one of those wild, kind of nerve-wracking games," said Atlanta's Dale Murphy, whose one-out single in the tenth chased home

Claudell Washington with the winning run. "It was a little more nerve-wracking than I like."
In other National League action, St. Louis edged Montreal, 1-0 to remain on top in the NL East, Philadelphia shaded Chicago 4-3, New York blasted Pittsburgh 9-1, San Diego topped Cincinnati 9-4 and Houston beat San Francisco 8-1.
Murphy's game-winning hit off Steve Howe, 6-4, came after singles by Washington and Rafael Ramirez. Murphy also smacked his 34th homer and had three RBI to lift his season total to 103.

The game, the first of a two-game showdown at Atlanta Stadium between the division's two top teams, was a 35-hit slugfest in which the Dodgers had four homers — by Steve Sax, Pedro Guerrero, Dusty Baker and Steve Garvey — and the Braves three, by Bob Horner and Washington in addition to Murphy.
"It was like a war," said Horner. "Both sides were slugging away. You just had to suck it up and get some more."
"It was one we had to take," said Washington, who had five hits. "We had to let the Dodgers know we haven't died. One like that gets our confidence back."

"It was just a lot of hitting, a lot of running, a lot of great plays in the field," said Torre. "It wasn't great for me. I got me in the stomach."
Garvey said it was the kind of game that could give the winner momentum.
"Obviously it can, but hopefully it won't," the Dodger first baseman said.
Cardinals 1, Expos 0
Bob Forsch, 14-8, scattered eight hits, while Keith Hernandez' third-inning RBI triple off Charlie Lea brought home the game's only run as the Cards maintained their hold on first place in NL East.

"I'm just trying to contribute," said Hernandez, after raising his batting average to .302 with his 19th game-winning RBI. "I'm just glad that I'm hot."
The Cards stayed a half-game ahead of second-place Philadelphia, and moved 4½ lengths up on both Montreal and Pittsburgh.
Phillies 4, Cubs 3
The Phillies stayed on the Cardinals' heels as Bill Robinson's pinch-hit RBI single in the eighth enabled Steve Carlton to become the major leagues' first 19-game winner this year.

Carlton, 19-9, gave up seven hits in seven innings of work. Ron Reed picked up his 11th save.
"I got a pitch up and in," said the 39-year old Robinson of Willie Hernandez' game-deciding pitch. "I don't know if it was a fastball or a slider, maybe it was a waste pitch. I know it wasn't a real good pitch, but the way it ended up, it was perfect."
Mets 9, Pirates 1
Dave Kingman drove in four runs — three with a fifth-inning home run, his 34th of the year — while Ron Hodges belted his first career grand-slam as the Mets topped the Pirates.

Rookie Rick Ownbey, 1-2, scattered eight hits in posting his first major league victory. He lost his shutout when Dale Berra homered with one out in the ninth.
"I wasn't happy (about losing the shutout)...but I got my first win," Ownbey said. "If that home run had been in the second inning, I wouldn't be as down. I'm a rookie. I learned."
Padres 9, Reds 4
Joe Lefebvre had a two-run single, while Garry Templeton, Terry Kennedy and Sixto Lezcano had RBI hits to key a five-run ninth-inning rally as the Padres broke a 4-4 tie and sent the Reds to their fifth consecutive loss. The victory enabled the third-place Padres to climb to within 4½ games of the NL West lead.
The Padres' rally came against the Reds' aggressive rookie righthander, Brad Lesley, 0-1, whom Cincinnati players call "The Animal."
"I felt like I was getting my bell rung. That will happen. I won't lay down to anyone. I want that ball again," said Lesley.
Astros 8, Giants 1
Winning pitcher Joe Niekro, 14-10, scattered eight hits and drove in three runs — two with a single during a six-run sixth inning — to lift the Astros over the Giants.

Niekro struck out seven while posting his 12th complete game of the season.
"I didn't feel I had much rhythm in the early innings," Niekro said. "But about the sixth or seventh I started getting the knuckleball over a little better."
The Astros chased Giants starter Atlee Hammaker, 9-8, in the big sixth inning.
San Francisco now trails Atlanta by six games in the NL West.

Strike Appears Near After Latest Rejection

WASHINGTON (AP) — With the National Football League regular season scheduled to open in just three days, the prospect of player strike appeared more likely following the union's rejection of management's latest offer.
Without setting a specific strike deadline, the executive committee of the NFL Players Association voted Wednesday night to move up the range of a possible league-wide walkout to occur between the second and fourth weeks of the season. Previously, the committee had said the strike would come between the second and fifth weeks of the season.
"We will have to demonstrate to them (the owners) that the players have the ability to shut them down," said Ed Garvey, the union's executive director said before the executive committee vote. "...we will have to set a strike deadline. The time is getting short."
The executive committee refused to endorse any plans for selective strikes during the first weekend of the season.
"Our plans are to give the owners and the public advance notice of a strike. We feel we owe them that," said Garvey.
The committee's vote followed reports that the Seattle Seahawks were prepared to boycott Sunday's game against Cleveland as a result of the waiving of player representative Sam McCullum on Tuesday.
The executive committee, which called Wednesday night for management to return immediately to the table with a new offer, also urged the reinstatement of the other three player representatives cut during the negotiations.
Union officials have lodged charges with National Labor Relations Board charging McCullum's waiver was the result of his union activities and not related to his playing capabilities. The Seahawks have denied the charge.
McCullum was claimed on waivers by Minnesota Wednesday, although the wide receiver said he is not sure he will report to the Vikings.
The nine-member executive committee, meeting via a telephone hookup, voted to reject the owners' newest contract offer. Garvey had rejected it earlier in the day.
The owners' plan called for cash bonuses for all players based on their length of service in the league and a relaxation of the compensation rules covering free agents.
Jack Donlan, the owners' chief negotiator, said the new proposal was close to management's final offer.

"If it is not the final offer it is very, very close to where we are going to go," Donlan said. "This is a colossal amount of money...it is a very good, very expensive offer."
Union officials disputed Donlan's claim, saying the estimated cost of the offer was $140 million over the life of the contract (through 1986) or about $1 million each year for each team.
In contrast, the league's 28 team's will divide $2.13 billion over the same period as a result of its national television contracts.
The owners' proposal would give each player $10,000 in bonus money for each year of service in the NFL retroactive to 1977 and continuing through 1986. The total possible bonus, which would be paid in addition to a player's individually negotiated contract, would be $100,000 over a 10-year period.
In response to the proposal, union attorneys filed an unfair labor practice charge with the NLRB Wednesday, charging the management council with attempting to bribe players not to strike.
"Contained in the proposal is an illegal clause penalizing each player 25 percent of the bonus for each game he engages in a strike. Thus, a four-game strike would wipe out any bonus."
Garvey said the owners' new proposal, which failed to address the players' demand for a fixed 55 percent share of each team's gross revenues, coupled with the waiver of a number of player representatives in recent weeks, has increased the chances of a strike.
"The players are angry over the dismissal of McCullum, a quality player fired for his union activities," Garvey said. "There is considerable sentiment in Seattle and around the league to do something."
Seahawk players held a meeting in Seattle Wednesday night to discuss possible action following McCullum's release.
The players refused to disclose the results of the meeting, maintaining they would make a statement today.
"We have some things to take care of before we make a statement," said Dave Brown, the Seahawks' new union representative.
"There is a very strong potential of a strike in the league," said NFLPA spokesman Dave Meggysy.

Natural Killer Cells - Potential Cancer Fighters

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

ROUEMONT, N.C. (AP) — Natural killer cells, the body's first line of defense against invading organisms, are receiving increasing attention as potential cancer fighters, researchers at an international conference reported.

Natural killers comprise only 5 percent of the blood cells in human blood, said Dr. Hillel S. Koren, an immunologist at Duke University Medical Center and organizer of a two-and-a-half-day conference at Quail Roost Conference Center. But their ability to quickly find and destroy tumor cells makes them potentially important in fighting cancer.

Unlike the cells reacting in the body's general immune response, natural killers do not require prior exposure to a foreign body, Koren added.

"These are the cell types, maybe in some ways the less sophisticated arm of the immune response, which are ready to go and do not depend on prior immunization or on prior exposure to an antigen which conventionally stimulates the immune system," he said.

While the general response to the flu or an infection might take up to 10 days, natural killers begin working in hours, Koren said.

"Natural killer cells have the capacity not only to recognize some tumor cells but to kill them. They are readily available, they can be stimulated, they can be turned on very rapidly."

About 40 scientists from the United States, Israel, Finland, Holland, Italy and Sweden exchanged ideas about natural killers at the conference in early September. Although natural killers were isolated 10 years ago, Koren said it was the first conference of its kind.

Perhaps the greatest promise for natural killers lies in evidence that the cells can combat cancer that is spreading, or metastasizing, said Dr. Ronald B. Herberman, chief of biological therapeutics at the National Cancer Institute in Washington, who co-chaired the conference.

"This is actually a very practically important piece of information because this is the area — metastasis or lack of metastasis — that is the biggest clinical problem in cancer treatment," he said. "The surgeons or radiotherapists can do very well to deal with the local tumor by cutting it out or irradiating it, but the difficulty is that, with most forms of cancer, by the time people come to the doctor and get treated for the local tumor, it's already spread."

All of the natural killer research is not as promising, however.

Scientists have found that an increase in natural killer activity accompanies the progression of breast cancer, but they are not sure how to interpret the finding, Herberman said.

Women with certain non-cancerous breast diseases are at an increased risk of developing breast cancer and also tend to have elevated NK levels, he said.

"On the one hand you could say, 'Well, if NK is high and they're still at risk of developing breast cancer ... it's not helping,'" he said. However, the natural killers could be protecting the large proportion of high-risk women who do not develop cancer, Herberman added.

"Substantially less than one in 100 of these women, even though they are at increased risk, will actually come down with cancer."

Another problem with natural killers is that they attack some normal cells, Koren said.

"There are a variety of examples where natural killer cells have been shown to have a reactivity or toxic activity against normal cells," he said. "For example, fibroblasts, thymocytes, a proportion of cells in the bone marrow."

Also clouding the data is the relationship between natural killers and interferon, a chemical currently being tested on cancer patients across the country.

Interferon is one of the factors produced by natural killers, and its presence enhances each cell's ability to destroy cancer cells, Koren said.

However, recent data suggests that interferon applied directly to tumors may protect the cancer cells from natural killers, Herberman said.

"If you expose natural killer cells to interferon, they kill better and more actively and that's quite clear," he said.

But, "if you expose tumor cells or some other cells that might be targets for natural killer cells to interferon, in a large majority of cases, that treatment actually makes the cells resistant to being killed by the natural killer cells."

That could pose problems for researchers giving interferon to patients, because "when you have both natural killer cells in the one hand but also have tumor cells in the other hand, it's not really clear which side is going to be more important," he said.

Despite the growing interest in natural killers and expanding research budgets in the field, many important questions remain unanswered.

"We're getting more information about what's involved, but the precise way in which they kill is still not clear," said Herberman. "It seems to be required to have direct contact between these natural killer cells and the tumor cells. They bind directly to them and transfer some kind of killing signal, but the details of those killing signals are still being worked out."

The discovery and description of the killer cells has already saved considerable trouble for patients once diagnosed as leukemia, the researchers said.

Koren said cells diagnosed as lymphocytes — often found in high numbers in leukemia patients — sometimes turn out to be natural killer cells.

"Until we began to appreciate this, and this is within the last year, these individuals were thought to have a form of leukemia," said Herberman. "If you leave these people alone and don't give them anti-leukemia treatment they do very well and they tend to not get into trouble. But because it has been thought to be a leukemia they are frequently treated with anti-leukemia drugs and then they get into all sorts of trouble."

Once natural killers are understood, scientists hope to improve the body's defenses against cancer either by enhancing each patient's natural killers or by injecting more of the cells, Herberman said.

"We now can purify these cells. We know how to grow them up, expand them," he said. "There's very serious thought being given to the strategy ... to see if these will have an anti-tumor effect."

Dangers of Mixing Drugs

Is there any way of knowing in advance if a new drug that is given to you by a doctor can be dangerous if mixed with the other drugs I am taking? I worry a great deal about this. —Mr. N.D., Kan.

Dear Mr. D.:

When doctors prescribe a drug for a patient, they always ask if medicines have brought on any allergic reactions or have had any adverse effects.

Doctors always ask patients what medicines they are taking, who prescribed them, and how long they have been taking them.

Patients often fail to tell their doctors about non-prescription medicines and home remedies they may be taking. This is important if drug interactions are to be avoided.

The New York State Medical Society in Albany, N.Y., publishes a pamphlet on the misuse of drugs. In it they state that drug interaction must always be considered by doctors and patients. The doctors who wrote this pamphlet suggest:

1. Do not exceed the dosage prescribed, since medicines can be habit forming if taken in excess.
2. If your medications cause nausea, take them with a full glass of water or a small amount of food.
3. If dizziness occurs when taking the medication, lie down. When you arise, get up slowly.
4. Avoid alcohol and overthe-counter drugs unless you consult your physician or pharmacist first.

5. Advise your physician or pharmacist of any other prescription drug you are taking. Since many drugs interact with one another, check with your doctor or pharmacist before taking any other medication.

6. Many prescription medicines contain aspirin. If you cannot take aspirin, let your physician or pharmacist know about this drug.

7. Some medications cause drowsiness or impaired coordination and judgment. Use caution when driving a car or when operating machinery and do not perform any hazardous task unless you first know how you respond to your prescription medication.

8. All women should let their doctors know if they are pregnant or nursing.

Drugs that have fulfilled their purpose should be discarded if only small amounts still remain.

It is often difficult to tell in advance how a patient will react to a single drug or to a combination of drugs. For this reason if any unusual symptoms occur when a drug is first taken it should be stopped. Only after consultation with the doctor should it be started again.

Cube Puzzle For Computers

FT. WORTH, Texas (UPI) — Now there's a cube puzzle game for home computers.

The video representation of a scrambled three-dimensional cube is made of 27 smaller cubes in six different colors. The goal of the game involves unscrambling by rotating any slice or layer of cubes vertically or horizontally with a series of twists and turns.

The game is for Radio Shack's TRS-80 Color Computer, which records a player's last 255 moves and allows the player to undo or redo them — retracing and analyzing moves or backtracking and making a fresh start from any point.

The Color Cubes Program Pak sells for about $30.

Recruiting Ag School Students Is More Difficult

By LEE MITGANG
AP Education Writer
WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — A year ago, Brent Lewallen left his father's small farm in Goshen, Ind., and came here, to Purdue University's school of agriculture, to learn how to carry on the family business.

Indiana farm kids have been taking the path Lewallen followed for more than a century. But as classes were about to start this fall, Brent Lewallen sat in front of the 74-year-old Agriculture Administration Building, and talked about leaving his first love, farming, to study something more practical.

"I'm planning to switch from agriculture to the school of science, to study biology," said the 19-year-old sophomore. "I enjoy farming. But it's like a pink cow. You just keep putting money into it, and nothing comes out."

Like Lewallen, students nationwide are taking note of the precarious state of farming these days — the record farm foreclosures and low crop prices. Some students are heading for studies offering more lucrative prospects.

"Engineering and computer sciences are attracting students away from us," says David R. Ford, assistant dean of Virginia Polytechnic Institute, where applications for the ag school have fallen for the fourth straight year.

The trend aids to the departure of those whom Purdue forestry Professor Fred Montague calls the "pseudo-get-on-the-bandwagon" students who in the early '70s got turned on to the soil in the midst of the environmental movement.

"Like all other agricultural schools hit with the environmental craze in the '70s," our enrollments have tailed off," says Cornell's agriculture dean, David L. Call. Applications for fall fell 2 percent from the previous year.

Ag school officials at Iowa State University and University of Nebraska also say enrollments have dipped slightly from a year ago.

Nationwide, ag school undergraduate enrollment is about 90,000, down from a peak five years ago of 98,500.

And Rudy Hilst, director of resident instruction at Purdue's school of agriculture, says he's concerned students may start dropping out before graduation because of federal tuition aid cutbacks.

But students who are sticking it out this year seem anything but gloomy. It almost seems as if agricultural schools have put a new admission requirement in their catalogs: optimism.

"Agriculture is risky. It makes Las Vegas seem like a guaranteed income," says Jane Abbott, a 21-year-old Purdue senior who was raised on a small farm in Baldwinsville, N.Y., and grades potatoes and drives tractors during the summer to pay her way through college.

"It takes an optimist to be a farmer," she says. "We have this underlying faith."

The 4,350 full- and part-time students enrolled at Purdue's agriculture college are the true believers — those who feel that whatever the hard times facing farmers and the agricultural industry, they want to learn their craft, and stay it through.

"I'd still like to go into farming," says Mark

Peterson, a 22-year-old senior from a 30-acre farm in Lowell, Ind. "Interest rates do worry me, but I think it can be done."

For its part, Purdue, like other ag schools, has been buying computers, broadening its curriculum into business and science fields, and stepping up high school recruiting to stay in the race with other popular college majors.

Purdue this fall will for the first time offer bright high school students $1,000 Merit Scholarships to lure them to the agricultural school. It also will begin requiring ag students to take computer science. Eighty new terminals are sitting in a basement due to be installed at the school by November.

The job outlook for ag students is not uniformly gloomy. While high interest rates and low crop prices have hurt farmers, there are many jobs available for graduates trained in specialties valued by agribusiness enterprises.

A recent U.S. Department of Agriculture study predicts growing shortages of agriculture teachers, agronomists, food graders and a number of other allied fields through the mid-1990s.

"Industry is literally crawling to our door trying to get our students interested in internships," says Lee Schweitzer, a Purdue agronomy professor. Food retailers like The Kroger Co., for example, want food business managers, while farm machinery companies like Deere & Co. want agricultural engineers.

A belief that science, technology and business savvy are the key to farm survival is what keeps bringing students back to ag schools like Purdue, despite escalating college costs.

"The big challenge for us," says Kevin Eikenberry, a 20-year-old junior who farms with his father in Scottville, Mich., "is we need to better our public image. People have to be made to respect farmers as educated businessmen."

But there is more than farming and farmers at these schools. At Cornell University in Ithaca, N.Y., for instance, two-thirds of the ag school student body are not from farm backgrounds. Ten years ago, two-thirds came from farms.

Likewise at Purdue, about 60 percent of ag school students this fall are from non-farm backgrounds.

"The students we're after have taken high school biology. We're trying to sell them the idea that agriculture is nothing more than applied biology," says Clare Kenaga, head of student counseling at Purdue.

Wooded Vote Of Rival Candidate

MIDWAY, Utah (AP) — Ted Wilson of Salt Lake City says it was nice receiving the personal call from Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, but it won't be enough to change his vote this November.

He said he'll still vote for Hatch's opponent: Ted Wilson of Salt Lake City.

Wilson, Salt Lake City's Democratic mayor, was at his cabin in this mountain community last weekend when he received a telephone call from a Hatch aide. The aide was canvassing voters and had picked Wilson's number from the telephone book.

The aide "said the senator was telephoning in the area and would I like to talk to him," Wilson said. "I said sure."

Moments later Hatch came on the line. "He started giving his spiel, telling me how much he'd done for me in Washington, D.C. I let him go on for a second before telling him who I was and that he didn't have my vote," Wilson said.

The mayor said he and Hatch had a good chuckle, and the call wasn't a total loss. They made plans for a debate later this month.

Say Self-Help Being Undercut

WASHINGTON (AP) — A survey of self-help projects for the poor funded by an annual Roman Catholic collection finds that 80 percent of them have been crippled by cutbacks in federally financed social programs.

It was found that half of the projects have had to reduce staff and a third have had to drop such programs as low-income housing rehabilitation and job training for the unemployed.

DISTURBED PARENTS — Parents angered over Tuesday's decision to fire 38 non-tenured striking teachers, rally outside the office of the Palatine-Rolling Meadows Elementary School District 15 in Palatine, Ill. The District in the northwest Chicago suburbs has been idled since August 30 when teachers

Avers American Greed Robs Mexicans Of Their Foodstuff

By DENNIS GEORGATOS
Associated Press Writer
TIJUANA, Mexico (AP) — A Mexican tourism official is accusing some Americans of "greed buying," depriving Mexicans of their own groceries at a time of economic crisis in Mexico.

Vi Murphy, spokeswoman for the Baja California Tourism Information Bureau, said U.S. citizens have been taking carloads of inexpensive Mexican groceries across the border and hoarding or reselling them at great profit.

"It's greed buying," she said Wednesday. "There isn't any other word for it. They are buying more than any family could ever use."

Although the Mexican federal government has ordered confiscation of many basic foods heading out of the country, customs officers say they may not be able to act before next week.

The confiscation order followed devaluation of the peso, an inflation-fighting move that has greatly increased the dollar's buying power here. But Francisco de la Madrid, customs chief here, said it would be next week before customs officials in Baja California, a Mexican province, enforce the border restrictions.

Baja California Gov. Roberto de la Madrid, no relation, said he would fly to Mexico City today to work out details.

Meanwhile, in Lubbock, Texas, an official of the U.S. Small Business Administration said American merchants on the U.S.-Mexican border have begun limiting purchases of certain products. In some markets, customers were being held to one or two jars of instant coffee and one bag of sugar.

"The peso is what is going to lead to regulations at the border unless it stops," she said. Several Tijuana merchants have begun limiting purchases of certain products. In some markets, customers were being held to one or two jars of instant coffee and one bag of sugar. The peso was pegged at 49 to the dollar before being allowed to float, sinking as low as 135 to the dollar. Last week President Jose Lopez Portillo nationalized privately owned banks and set a two-tiered currency exchange system, with 50 pesos to the dollar for importers of essential goods and 70 for everyone else.

If possible, Baja California officials will maintain exemptions granted to the border areas because they "are distinctive states," Ms. Murphy said.

"Mexico does not want to lose its good friends and Baja does not want to lose its good customers," she said.

"The greed is what is going to lead to regulations at the border unless it stops," she said.

America's Unruly Schools Get Stricter, And Safer

By LEE MITGANG
AP Education Writer

After a decade-long epidemic of violence, America's schools are getting stricter — and safer. Better teaching and students' return to traditional values share the credit, school officials say.

While there are some who fear tensions induced by the recession and jobless teenagers may trigger renewed problems this school year, officials generally remain optimistic that the worst is over in the nation's classrooms.

In New York City, for example, classroom violence dropped 22 percent last year. "We think we are in the first part of a healthy trend," said Angelo Aponte, head of the school safety unit.

Other systems reported fewer attacks, robberies and other crimes in the 1981-82 school year. Assaults in Milwaukee's 86,000-pupil district dipped to 633 from 685 a year earlier. Acts of vandalism in San Francisco — with a pupil population of 59,000 — declined to 2,875 from 2,373 in the previous year.

School officials also report less violence in Chicago, Dallas, Baltimore, St. Louis, Kansas City, Denver, Evansville, Ind., Seattle, Madison, Wis., and Omaha, Neb. In Los Angeles, arson was down 20 percent, burglary and theft was 15 percent lower.

In Louisville, Ky., officials blame a 1974 court-ordered desegregation plan for a subsequent wave of school violence. Incidents began to taper off last year, however, and officials say they're confident about the year ahead.

"We had a good year last year and we don't see anything on the horizon," says Stewart Sampson, director of pupil personnel.

"A few years ago we would have been thinking, 'Oh, why is the summer ending?' But the kids are ready to come back now. They don't have to dread it any more. I hope the violence is ending," Sampson says.

An exception is Boston, where there were new flare-ups last year after a two-year decline in violence. Disciplinary suspensions among the district's approximately 60,000 students rose to 5,483 from 4,495 a year earlier. Robberies increased to 331 from 259.

An added concern this year is the statewide tax-limiting Proposition 2½ which has cut deeply into school security spending. John A. Chistolipi, director of the Department of Safety Services, says Boston spends less than 1 percent of its school budget on security, sharply under the 3 percent to 5 percent national average.

In some cities, local officials say reduced violence resulted from hiring more school guards and cracking down harder on student offenders.

Weldon Davis, president of the Oklahoma Education Association said the drop in attacks on teachers is due in part to a new state law calling for a fine and imprisonment of anyone attacking a school employee.

Violence declined in Philadelphia's 210,000-pupil system last year, due in part to a 50-day teacher strike. Teacher assaults dropped to 316 last year from 373 a year earlier. This fall security will be tighter: new alarm systems in all schools, required ID cards for high school students to guard against intruders, and 25 percent more security guards.

Philadelphia is also giving school administrators the power to expel disruptive children — a penalty no student has suffered in 20 years.

But stricter discipline is only a part of the change. Some officials say that improving the quality of education as evidenced by New York's improved reading scores, for example, has helped.

"If a teacher is teaching in an interesting way, the chances of classroom violence are almost non-existent," says New York's Aponte.

Through a "Safe School Management" program in its second year, New York teachers are being taught how to cool down potentially violent situations.

New York will hire 1,000 new school guards this year to replace personnel lost due to elimination of federal jobs programs. They will get power to arrest offenders on the spot. And for the first time, students carrying weapons in the nation's largest district — where 904,000 students are expected to enroll this year — can be suspended immediately.

Milwaukee students themselves are the key crime preventers under a plan begun last year. Middle-school students work with elementary school children, "explaining the need to keep schools attractive and discouraging vandalism," says Jenelle Elder-Green, a Milwaukee school spokeswoman.

Such programs reflect what some educators see as a new type of student.

Patrick Henry, an official of the Evansville-Vanderburgh School district in Indiana, thinks pupils have mellowed since the late '60s and mid-'70s when violence peaked.

"Kids thought they had more to rebel against then," Henry says.

Providence, R.I. school Superintendent Robert Ricci agrees that emergence from "the Me Generation," and a growing return to traditional values among students is bringing schools out of a violent era.

Others, like Seattle schools security director Chuck O'Toole, attribute less violence to declining school populations and fewer schools. Despite the improvements, there is an uneasiness in some districts in these economic hard times.

"The unrest is there. Schools just mirror what's happening in society at large," says Pat Schafer, assistant executive director of the Omaha Education Association. "As pressures in society grow, the more likely you are to see violence in the schools."

In Detroit, where officials this year plan to isolate and counsel chronic truants in hopes of reducing student unrest. Assistant School Superintendent Benjamin Bernoudy says the severe recession afflicting his city is a concern.

"We certainly anticipate an increase in child abuse, domestic tensions and the like. There's certain to be a spillover in student behavior," he says.

The chief of school security in Las Vegas, Ernest Diggs, is writing letters to parents, urging them to become more involved in school affairs this year.

Hazelnut Is A Filbert

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — Few people outside Oregon know what filberts are, so state officials have grudgingly decided to increase use in marketing campaigns of the nuts' more popular name — hazelnuts.

Bob Gilhar, executive secretary of the Oregon Filbert Commission, said 98 percent of the commercial hazelnuts grown in the United States come from Oregon.

"The most frequently asked question our salesmen get is, 'What's the difference between a filbert and a hazelnut?' There isn't any. It's just that here in Oregon, we grow our hazelnuts on filbert trees," said Harry Lagerstedt, a horticulturist at Oregon State University.

"They can sell more hazelnuts than filberts because nobody ever heard of filberts," he added.

The hazelnut is a small, round, reddish-brown nut popular in many European countries.

"In Germany, they use them like we use peanuts," Gilhar said.

Horticulturally, the filbert is the nut of the cultivated European hazel tree, a member of the birch family, Lagerstedt said. Hazelnut once referred to the wild variety, he said. The distinction is lost on most nut-eaters, but Lagerstedt said true connoisseurs should be familiar with both words.

The commission doesn't plan to drop the name filbert from its title, Gilhar said. But the nut's more popular name appears on the commission's banners and booths at trade fairs. Samples are clearly labeled hazelnuts. "I'm making a conscious effort to use the term more in my own correspondence," said Gilhar.

Even so, "Oregonians still think of them as filberts," he said.

Cooperating At Research Level

NEW YORK (AP) — Scientists from Egypt and Israel are finishing a year-long project in biomedical research in a cooperative program between the two countries.

The four scientists are the first participants in the Camp David Institute for International Health at the Albert Einstein College of Medicine at Yeshiva University here.

"The institute was started against the best advice of everybody in the State Department and everywhere else," said its director, Dr. Barry R. Bloom. It was financed by a $1 million anonymous gift.

Though it took over a year and a half to cut through the red tape to get the project going, Bloom expressed satisfaction at the results. "They said we couldn't do it and it happened," he said.

Perfect Driver Said Unrealistic

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (UPI) — It is unrealistic to expect high school driver education courses to turn out perfect drivers, says a safety education professor.

The best it can do is teach the basics of safe driving, says Maurice Dennis, director of the safety education program in the Texas A and M Department of Industrial Education.

The program is taught by students and supervised by university faculty. It uses simulators, on-street driving and emergency training on a multiple car range at the university's Research and Extension Center in Bryan.

"We have them (students) a total of 54 hours... Once they leave us there's no guarantee. We have no control over what they will do. We only know what they can do," Dennis says.

He says preliminary figures in a study to assess the value of driver education show a modest trend in favor of driver education.

'Falcon Crest' Success Said Due To 'Dallas', 'The Waltons' Blend

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — If a television show blends the wickedness of "Dallas" and the wholesomeness of "The Waltons," it's bound to interest viewers on both sides of television's picket fence. Indeed, CBS' "Falcon Crest" is the most popular survivor from the 1981-82 season. But it had a lot more going than a mixed marriage from two disparate families. It also had "Dallas" as a lead-in program on Friday nights, the best life insurance policy in the business.

And from an artistic standpoint, its executive producer is Earl Hamner Jr., a soft-spoken Southern storyteller who contributed scripts to "The Twilight Zone" before gaining widespread fame as creator of "The Waltons."

"Every TV script should begin with 'Once upon a time,'" says Hamner. "It should have a beginning, middle and an end. 'Falcon Crest' is like a book with different chapters, with satisfying experiences within each chapter."

Hamner resists suggestions that "Falcon Crest," with Jane Wyman playing Angela Channing, the scheming matriarch of a sprawling California vineyard, is just a more refined vintage of "Dallas" and its villainous J.R. Ewing. "Some people say that Earl Hamner has betrayed his commitment, as if 'Falcon Crest' is something shabby," Hamner says. "I think it's a valid exploration of human characters and family situations. The public gets vicarious thrills from watching the rich take pratfalls and suffer. Richness seems to magnify drama."

Despite the similar tax brackets of the Ewings and Channings, Hamner says "Falcon Crest" is actually more country cousin to the Waltons, a close-knit family from Virginia during the Depression. Hamner was also the narrator of that long-running hit, which drew on recollections from his childhood.

"I never intended 'Falcon Crest' to be seamy, nor has it been. We do human drama that seems to please big audiences because of legitimate conflicts: traditional family vs. fractured family, power vs. weak, wealth vs. poor. A lot of 'Dallas' comes right from the groin. I've always written from the heart."

Hamner says his intention was to bridge Tennessee Williams and Lillian Hellman. "Angela (Miss Wyman) is like Big Daddy from 'Cat on a Hot Tin Roof.' Her passion for land and that way of life is akin to plantation owners before the Civil War."

Angela was not created as a female J.R., says Hamner. "My thinking was that there haven't been many good roles for women on television. Traditionally, this Machiavellian role would have been filled by a man, Angelo, and it would have been rather ordinary."

Hamner's interest in wine has strong family roots. His ancestors were Italian vintners who were brought to the United States by Thomas Jefferson. But the Virginia soil wasn't kind to the grapes, and three of his relatives returned to Italy. "One stayed and married into a restrained Baptist family," he says.

Hamner began peddling a TV series about wine in 1976 after taking a trip to the champagne district in France. His concept was to have families from California and French vineyards swap homes. CBS rejected the idea because the idea had already been done — without much success — in "Fair Exchange."

"But they thought a series with the wine industry as a background would work," he says.

Hamner himself owns vineyards near Sacramento, although he's never seen the property. "It's a good investment," he says. But not as good as having a second-year series that combines elements of two successful CBS shows and is positioned strategically to follow television's biggest series ever.

DRAMATIC RETURN — World renowned pianist Lew Fleisher will make a dramatic return to the concert stage in Baltimore September 16 at the opening of the new Joseph Meyerhoff Symphony Hall. ## Belushi Case Not Closed

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A grand jury will investigate the drug death of comedian John Belushi, it was reported today.

The Los Angeles Times, quoting sources close to the inquiry, said the two-day hearing by the Los Angeles County grand jury would be held later this month or early in October, and that actor Robin Williams will be called to testify.

Deputy District Attorney Michael Montagna, asked to comment on the story, said his office "does not comment on grand jury matters while they are in progress."

The newspaper said the district attorney would issue subpoenas to get the testimony of people who may have knowledge of the final hours of Belushi, 33, who appeared in NBC-TV's "Saturday Night Live," and in the films "Animal House," "1941," "Neighbors" and "Continental Divide."

His body was found in a bungalow behind a luxury Hollywood hotel on March 5. Former Los Angeles County Coroner Thomas Noguchi ruled at the time Belushi died of an overdose of heroin and cocaine.

Cathy Evelyn Smith, 35, believed to have been the last person to see Belushi alive, was questioned by police and released. In an interview published later by the National Enquirer, she was quoted as saying she injected Belushi with the fatal drugs.

In addition to relating how she gave the overdose to Belushi, Ms. Smith stated in the article that Williams and actor Robert DeNiro were with Belushi several hours before he died.

Ms. Smith's lawyer has since said the story misrepresented what she had told the Enquirer.

The Times article also said a Los Angeles writer for the Enquirer may be subpoenaed by the grand jury. However, Ms. Smith apparently will not be summoned, indicating she is a potential target of the inquiry.

Movies Enjoy Record Summer: Skein Of Hits

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — In a record-breaking summer at the box office, the biggest winner was the little guy — "E.T., The Extra-Terrestrial."

Directed by Steven Spielberg, the heartwarming tale of a friendship between a boy and a small, marooned creature from outer space brought in $240 million between Memorial Day and Labor Day.

"Poltergeist," produced by Spielberg, and a reissue of his 1981 hit, "Raiders of the Lost Ark," also had a big part in making the summer of 1982 the most lucrative ever in movie history.

The $1.4 billion in ticket sales was a 15 percent jump over last year, A.D. Murphy of Daily Variety said this week.

The leaders in theater grosses for the 15-week period after Memorial Day, with totals rounded off, were:

- "E.T." — $240 million.
- "Rocky III" — $111 million.
- "Star Trek II: The Wrath of Khan" — $75 million.
- "Poltergeist" — $68 million.
- "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas" — $60 million.
- "Annie" — $53 million.
- "Firefox" — $45 million.
- "An Officer and a Gentleman" — $45 million.
- "Friday the 13th, Part 3" — $29 million.
- "Young Doctors in Love" — $27 million.
- "An Officer and a Gentleman" was expected to improve its position because it was the top draw over the Labor Day weekend, bringing in a huge $7.7 million in four days, a 37 percent climb over the previous weekend.

Lloyd Leipzig, advertising-publicity vice president of Orion Pictures, said the totals "show that kids still want to see movies and they want excitement. The most encouraging sign was the late-summer hit of 'An Officer and a Gentleman,' which is not one of the junk-food movies."

Universal Studios showed the best results, with "E.T.," "Whorehouse," "Dead Men Don't Wear Plaid," which brought in $24 million, and the late-spring "Conan the Barbarian," which took in $40 million.

But Columbia bombed on "Hanky Panky" and was disappointed in the reception to "Annie," although the musical placed No. 6. Paramount scored high with its "Star Trek" sequel but found little business for "Grease 2."

Disney was hoping "TRON" would help break into the teen-age market. But the special effects-laden, science-fiction film, which has hit $26 million, did not perform up to expectations.

Twentieth Century-Fox had a string of failures in "Author, Author," "Megaforce," "Six Pack" and "The Pirate Movie." It logged one success, "Young Doctors in Love."

Swedes See Violence On Racial Issue

By PER ISAKSSON Associated Press Writer STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) - Burning crosses, firebombs and other anti-immigrant activity have shattered Sweden's usual summer tranquility, jolting a nation that prides itself on good relations between natives and immigrants.

Worried authorities have ordered special police patrols onto streets in downtown Stockholm and have set up special programs to educate Swedes and non-Swedes about immigration.

Incidents that began in late July have carried the mark of the Ku Klux Klan and the Skinheads, groups of head-shaven young toughs who participated in race riots in Great Britain during the summer of 1981.

-In Segeltorp, a Stockholm suburb, a Chilean family who fled their country after the 1973 military takeover found a burning cross, symbol of the white supremacist Klan, on their front yard.

Since that incident, three more Klan-inspired crosses have been discovered in or near residential areas where many immigrants live.

While authorities say there is a KKK presence in Sweden, there is no evidence that it is linked with any U.S. Klan group. Its membership is believed to be tiny.

-In early August in Trollbacken, a group of men yelling racial slurs attacked a kiosk owned by Turkish immigrants, who hid inside as the youths smashed windows and doors with steel bars.

"We were terrified. We feared for our lives," owner Ozcan Sen told reporters.

-Later in the month in Kumla, 100 miles west of Stockholm, an immigrant fired a gun after repeated harassment, seriously wounding a 14-year-old boy.

-Other attacks have included stabbings, property damage and firebombs thrown into bars frequented by young immigrants. Police say many of the assaults were carried out by Swedish Skinheads, youngsters who shave their heads, wear heavy boots and say they "simply don't like immigrants."

Immigrants and their children, many of them Swedish citizens, make up about 1.1 million of Sweden's 8.3 million inhabitants. Most come from Finland, Yugoslavia, Greece and Turkey, but a large number of Latin Americans arrived in the 1970s.

In a newspaper article, former Immigration Board Director Kjell Oberg accused the authorities of not taking seriously immigrant complaints of harassment.

Sen, the Turkish kiosk owner, complained that it took police two hours to arrive, but police denied it. They said two officers were dispatched to the scene within 30 minutes.

"Obviously, racist violence is overshadowed in the election campaign by other issues," said Immigration Ministry spokesman Tommy Westerteg, referring to the Sept. 19 parliamentary elections, which have centered on economic issues.

Prompted by the violence, Immigration Minister Karin Andersson has met with representatives of the immigrant community to discuss how to stop it.

"We will cooperate closely with school boards and youth organizations to inform youngsters about immigration," Westerteg said in an interview.

Persuasion is not all that's being tried, however. On recent weekends, more police officers than usual patrolled downtown Stockholm to prevent fights between Skinheads and youth gangs of foreign descent.

Some people, like Polish immigrant Jerzy Szarecki, an official of the Crime Prevention Council, maintain the racist attacks are temporary, isolated incidents. Szarecki said he has seen no evidence of increasing anti-immigrant sentiment in Sweden.

Social workers have blamed the problems on lack of jobs for large numbers of youth and few leisure activities during the summer.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — THE WINDOW WASHER'S SOLE WISH: WINDLESS WEATHER.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: V equals C.

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Opening lead: Jack of ♠.
 Some people are just born losers. No matter what they do or how well they prepare, catastrophe always seems to be lurking around the corner.

North's reasons for jumping to seven spades are beyond the ken of mortal men. The correct move would have been to make the grand slam try of five no trump, asking partner to bid a grand slam with two of the top three trump honors. The final contract would then have been six spades — by no means a laydown, but certainly a slam you would want to be in.

Not that seven spades had no chance. The only hope was to find East with a blank king of spades. That would drop under the ace and declarer could then finesse for West's jack of spades. As you can see, that was indeed the situation, and normally the contract would roll home, even though it was considerably against the odds.

When this hand was played, however, declarer was one of those unfortunate souls for whom nothing ever goes right. West decided to lead a trump — a very risky business with his holding. But even that would usually not make much difference.

because from three to an honor most players almost invariably lead the low card. Not on this occasion, however. West got off to the devilish lead of the jack of spades, for no good reason that he could later explain. Declarer was delighted at this turn of events. He covered with the queen in dummy and captured East's king with the ace. He returned a trump and, when West now produced the two, it never even crossed declarer's mind that the winning play was to finesse dummy's eight. Instead, he went up with the ten and West's nine of spades became the setting trick.

In a way, justice was done. You deserve to go down if you bid that sort of grand slam!

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Today's new aspects will bring all sorts of opportunities for you to show loved ones the extent of your devotion. You can now work steadily toward gaining your objectives.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Organizing both your assets and liabilities will give you a better understanding of your financial situation.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Study contracts made with associates and know how best to carry through with them for greater mutual success.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Plan a better way to do your work more efficiently and gain benefits in the future. Don't neglect personal responsibilities.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Fine day for making progress but make sure you don't step on the toes of others in doing so. Be alert.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) You can easily make this a most productive day. Plan the changes you want to make at home. Listen to what others say.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Confer with an associate and solve a vital matter, but be tactful. Obtain the information needed for a new project.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Study your true financial situation and plan how to improve it. Don't spend money lavishly or you could regret it later.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Know what it is you want in life and direct your energies along such lines. Strive for increased happiness.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Sit in the privacy of your study and plan the future intelligently. Show increased devotion to loved one.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) State your aims to good friends and gain their support. Make plans to have more abundance in the days ahead.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Put your Aquarian dynamism to work with a vigor today and accomplish a great deal. Control your temper.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Get those ideas operating well while the time is ripe and you can advance quickly in your career. Take health treatments.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be one eager to get along well with others, so teach to be diplomatic early in life. One who loves to investigate and get the true facts and figures in any enterprise. Spiritual training is important here.

Raps Abuses In Protection Plan

By The Associated Press
 The father of a victim of "mad-dog killer" Marion Albert Pruet planned to call today for changes in the federal witness protection program in testimony before a congressional subcommittee.

Frank Balderson, of Alliance, Neb., said Tuesday he would recommend that the program be changed to halt what he said was widespread abuse.

Also expected to testify in Washington, D.C. before the House Judiciary Committee's subcommittee on courts were people with plights similar to Patsy Thomas of Greensboro, N.C.

Mrs. Thomas says her husband, William, left her nearly destitute and avoided child support by disappearing in 1975, a year after the couple separated and he had agreed to pay $150 a month in support for their son.

Hearings beginning today could lead to new restrictions on the controversial program, which gives witnesses new identities, jobs and allowances in exchange for their testimony against criminals.

Gastonia, N.C., native Pruet killed Balderson's son, James Balderson, during a convenience store robbery in Fort Collins, Colo., on Oct. 16, 1981. Pruet, who was under federal protection at the time, was sentenced to life imprisonment on a murder conviction.

Pruet was given a second life sentence for murdering another man along with Balderson. He faces the death penalty for a murder in Mississippi and is presently on trial in Arkansas on yet another murder charge. He is charged with the murder of his wife in New Mexico.

Balderson said Tuesday that Pruet, a 1967 West Mecklenburg High School graduate, would not have been admitted to the witness protection program under criteria he's proposing. He said he would recommend that:

— Drug or alcohol abusers and people with a history of violent crimes be ineligible.

— Before admission, a candidate be subjected to rigorous psychological testing to ensure he's not dangerous.

— The U.S. marshal's office tell local authorities when a protected witness is moved to their area.

Government studies show many relocated witnesses are skipping out on debts, alimony and child support payments.

Ms. Thomas learned last year, while trying to have her husband declared legally dead, that he had joined the witness protection program in 1975 in return for his testimony in a federal gambling case.

Ms. Thomas says she faces eviction for not paying the rent and expects notices of power and telephone cutoffs any day.

She has sued the federal government for $52,800 plus interest for child support.

A proposal already before Congress would require that relocated witnesses pay debts through an intermediary, the U.S. attorney general's office, which would distribute the money to creditors.

A Universal Language

Would it be a better world if we all spoke the same language? L.L. Zamenhof, a Polish physician, thought so, and, in 1887, he invented Esperanto, a language with simple rules that borrowed words like "luno" from other tongues. The doctor hoped that Esperanto would provide a common bond for people who speak about 3,000 different languages worldwide. His idea soon spread to North America where the Esperanto Association had its first conference 74 years ago this week. Today millions of people in more than 80 countries still share Zamenhof's dream. They speak his language, read the 100 magazines published in Esperanto, and listen to Esperanto radio broadcasts from Peking to the Vatican.
