PCC Open Door To Stay Closed Due To Space

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

In a move that violates the traditional philosophy of the community college, Pitt Community College has closed its open door and will keep it shut, says PCC President Dr. William Fulford, until the college receives more "brick and mortar."

"The open door policy is no longer, at least not at Pitt Community College," said Dr. Fulford.

"You may ask if denying admission is compatible with the community college system," he said. "It is, because we lack space and turn folks down because we couldn't provide the level of training required if we accepted them."

Open door was a doctrine adopted early by the North Carolina Community College system that meant no person wanting to attend classes was refused. Now, PCC, as well as other community colleges, is turning potential students away or putting them on waiting lists.

Five hundred students were turned away by the institution this year, estimate Dr. Fulford and PCC Dean of Students Edgar Boyd.

"The demand for training in allied health areas, particularly nursing, has always been strong," said Boyd. "But it has gone beyond nursing. We stopped taking applications for the electronic data processing 30 days ago and turned at least 100 students away from ADAP.

In addition, said Boyd, demand is high for business course offerings, math, English, typing and psychology classes. "We turned 50-100 away in these areas and still had an unknown number that could not get their first choice of program and took another choice."

Boyd said that left "a lot of people unaccounted for."

Allied health, he said, had 940 applications for admission in 1981-82. Of those, 660 took the admission tests and 400 were eligible. But only 200 spaces could be filled.

"We figure 10-15 percent of those who expressed interest are not initially qualified," said the dean of students. "But even after the test is taken there's still a good 200 persons we just lose."

Boyd said the college had been asked by the medical professionals in the county to offer a respiratory therapy program, a move approved last year by the PCC Board of Trustees, but had no space to implement the program.

"We had 30-40 potential students express interest, the board approved it, but we couldn't follow through due to lack of space," he said. "Another program we cannot offer that we have constant requests for is medical technology."

"We obviously have the need in the county for these programs, and we have the interest," he added. "We just don't have the room."

PCC is feeling the space crunch, says Dr. Fulford, because of what he calls its "phenomenomal rate of growth" the past five years.

"In terms of enrollment, we've grown 35 percent since 1977, based on an unduplicated head count, that is, each person served one time," said Dr. Fulford. "And this growth has been in technical and vocational programs, not college parallel."

Enrollment in technical programs increased 40 percent in five years, said the president, while enrollment in vocational programs escalated 35 percent.

Up to now the college has coped with the crowding by adding mobile units and leasing classroom space around town. But these, say Dr. Fulford, are temporary solutions.

"We need space in terms of brick and mortar," he said. "We're going to have to build more buildings and build them soon. And, of course, we need the personnel to teach in the buildings.

"Of the available funds, we want our share," he added. "We want those whose voices count to be on our side."

"If the people want it (services from the commuity college)," said Dr. Fulford, "there's a price that has to be paid."

Congress To Get Anti-Crime Bill

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan said Saturday he will send a new anti-crime bill to Congress on Monday proposing "common sense revisions of the insanity defense."

National attention was focused on the issue after John W. Hinckley Jr., who shot and wounded Reagan and three other men on March 30, 1981, used the insanity plea and was acquitted in federal court here in June. The federal jury found Hinckley had no criminal responsibility for the shooting.

The president did not spell out exactly how he would rewrite the federal law dealing with insanity cases. But he has indicated in the past the administration was considering doing away with the insanity plea as a defense.

"We will press for common sense revisions of the insanity defense, a defense that has been much misinterpreted and abused," Reagan said.

The president raised the issue during his weekly radio address, delivered from Camp David, the mountaintop retreat in Maryland.

In an interview last July in St. Louis, Reagan disclosed that the Justice Department was studying a proposal to eliminate insanity as a defense but permit evidence of a defendant's mental state to be "introduced at the time of sentencing as a mitigating factor."

The president has repeatedly refused to comment on the Hinckley verdict and did not mention his assailant in his radio talk Saturday. But when asked in an interview a month after the trial about the effect of the verdict, he replied, "justice is not done under the present system."

Reagan also said his new anti-crime bill would include revision of the so-called exclusionary rule. He described that rule as one "that can force a judge to throw out of court on the basis of a small technicality an entire case, no matter how guilty the defendant or how heinous the crime."

"Our bill would stop this grievous miscarriage of justice by allowing evidence to be introduced where the police officer was acting in good faith," Reagan said.

"This position has already been taken by some enlightened federal judges and I am asking the Congress to make it the law of the land."

Legal experts have noted that few criminal cases turn on the exclusion of evidence, but the Supreme Court has consistently rejected all arguments that evidence gathered by police officers who make important errors while acting in good faith should be admitted.

The president has long criticized the current rule.

The president urged Congress to act "promptly and favorably" on the omnibus crime bill he proposed last year calling for stiffer federal sentences for drug traffickers, denial of bail to habitual offenders and more certain jail sentences with fewer opportunities for parole.

The president said he was addressing the subject of crime in society because it was "a subject that has been very much on my mind, even as we have been very busy with budgets, interest rates and legislation."

But the president did not mention the setback he received last week when the House and Senate voted to enact a $14.2 billion spending bill over his veto protest that it was a "budget-buster."

Giving the Democratic response to Reagan's radio talk, Rep. Dennis M. Hertel of Michigan said, members of both parties have supported strong action against crime.

But, he said, "the real debate today is how to deal with the worst economic crisis since the Great Depression."

Hertel said this week's votes to override Reagan's veto occurred because Republicans as well as Democrats wanted more funds for the handicapped, the unemployed and older Americans.

In dealing with the economy, Hertel charged, "President Reagan's theories have failed miserably and conclusively. ... We must put Americans back to work because it is our moral responsibility."

Elsewhere on Capitol Hill, Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, said he plans to work for the formation of a National Crime Commission of federal and state law enforcement officials to help map out strategies for fighting organized crime.

"We must break the back of organized crime," Thurmond told reporters. "But we are only now beginning to know the full extent of its involvement in legitimate businesses and other facets of society."

Thurmond said senior staff members of his committee would begin consultations next week with officials at the Justice Department and other federal law enforcement agencies on details of the commission's organization and operation.

The commission would be formally established under legislation which Thurmond plans to introduce next year, the senator said.

U.S. Avoids Stand On Nuclear Referendum

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — After a lengthy internal debate, the Reagan administration is refusing to take a stand on a controversial nuclear freeze referendum facing Wisconsin voters Tuesday, on the ground that its wording is ambiguous.

A revised State Department position, set forth late last week, said the question on the Wisconsin ballot alludes to the desirability of both a "nuclear weapons moratorium and reduction" — without specifying which should come first.

The statement said the United States could agree to a nuclear weapons freeze but only after negotiations with the Soviet Union produce a "substantial reduction to equal and verifiable levels."

The administration's refusal to take a stand on the Wisconsin referendum would seem to leave in doubt the significance of Tuesday's vote, regardless of the outcome.

Moreover, by declining to oppose the resolution, the administration would spare itself political embarrassment if Wisconsin voters, as expected, endorse a nuclear freeze.

Numerous town, city and county governments around the country have supported the concept of a freeze on nuclear weapons, but never has the issue been the subject of a statewide referendum until Tuesday. However, in addition to Wisconsin next week, eight more states will vote on nuclear freeze resolutions in the November elections — California, Arizona, Oregon, North Dakota, Montana, Michigan, Rhode Island and New Jersey.

The Wisconsin resolution says, "The Secretary of State of Wisconsin shall inform the President and the Congress of the United States that it is the desire of the people of Wisconsin to have the government of the United States work vigorously to negotiate a mutual nuclear weapons moratorium and reduction, with appropriate verification, with the Soviet Union and other nations."

On Wednesday, deputy State Department spokesman Alan Romberg issued a statement widely interpreted as expressing opposition to the Wisconsin proposal because the department stressed the U.S. stand against a nuclear moratorium.

The following day, the department issued a revised statement which, without disavowing the earlier position, emphasized the ambiguous nature of the Wisconsin proposal.

"We share the objective of the Wisconsin nuclear referendum insofar as it calls for mutual weapons reductions," the revised statement said.

"In fact, the Reagan administration is now engaged in negotiations with the Soviet Union on nuclear arms reduction. The language of the Wisconsin referendum, however, is ambiguous and has been interpreted in a variety of ways. The referendum is unclear as to whether a moratorium should precede or follow actual arms reductions."

Italians Leave

By JACK REDDEN

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Black-plumed Italian troops who helped safeguard the peace during the evacuation of Palestinian guerrillas from Beirut sailed for home Saturday, one day after the departure of the 800-man U.S. Marine contingent.

The withdrawal of the elite Bersaglieri brigade came as violence flared in the Palestinian-controlled northern port city of Tripoli where a car bomb made with 154 pounds of explosives was touched off, killing two people and injuring 18.

The state-run Beirut radio reported clashes Thursday between Palestinian guerrillas and armed residents of Tripoli, 50 miles north of Beirut and the site of a major Palestinian refugee camp.

On the diplomatic front, a Vatican spokesman confirmed Pope John Paul II would meet Yasser Arafat during the Palestine Liberation Organization leader's two-day visit to Rome starting Wednesday.

Father Romeo Panciroli, chief of the Vatican press office, said the pope was meeting Arafat out of "regard for the Palestinian people of whose sufferings and rights the pope has spoken recently."

The pope has spoken out in support of the Palestinian right to a homeland several times in recent speeches.

In France, visiting Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak Saturday said he was ready to support the U.S. initiative on the Middle East.

The plan "contains some positive points, but we have some observations to make that we will bring up with the Americans," Mubarak said after a 90-minute meeting with President Francois Mitterrand at the Elysee palace.

He said the Arab summit meeting in Fez, Morocco, had been "very good for the Middle East cause" but the means of putting the summit's resolutions into practice were lacking.

The withdrawal of the 533 Bersaglieris, left only about 850 French troops still in Beirut. They were scheduled to leave Tuesday.

Landfill Is Expensive

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County's solid waste disposal program, which began about 10 years ago with a small sanitary landfill at Littlefield, is progressing nicely, but is an expensive business.

County Manager Reginald Gray said the solid waste program budget for the current fiscal year which began July 1 — including operation of the landfill, purchase of equipment, construction and paving of transfer sites, and hauling bulk containers — amounts to $857,133.

Gray explained that operations began at the Littlefield site as a pilot project. In 1974, the Littlefield site was closed and a 120 acre sanitary landfill site on the Allen Road just West of Greenville was opened.

Then in 1978, the county established a county-wide solid waste program and began building transfer stations where 40-cubic-yard containers provided a place for people living outside the towns in the county a place to dispose of their garbage.

County Commissioners at that time, deciding that one landfill serving the entire county could be operated more efficiently and at no additional cost, temporarily closed the Allen Road site, and took over operation of the old Greenville landfill. The Allen Road site was reopened in September 1980 after the Greenville site was completely filled.

Since the county-wide solid waste program began, 13 transfer sites — at Bethel, Stokes, Pactolus, Wellcome, Falkland, Farmville, Winterville, Ayden-Grifton, the county home, Grimesland, the Port Terminal, Stantonsburg Road, and Shelmerdine — have been built. The latest site to open — the one at the Port Terminal, cost about $30,000 including paving.

And county officials are actively seeking a site for a 14th transfer station in the Black Jack-Ham's Cross Roads-Galloway's Cross Roads section. Two other sites are possible, Gray noted — one in the Bell Arthur area and one near Belvoir — although "they're not on the drawing board."

Aside from the operation of the landfill itself, "it costs about $300,000 a year to haul the garbage," from the container sites, Gray explained — at the current price of $46.89 per haul.

The largest container site Gray said, is the Ayden-Grifton site which holds eight containers. The average site, he said "averages three containers."

The county owns 60 of the 40-cubic yard containers, which according to state law, have to be emptied at least twice each week. "Most are pulled more than that," the county manager explained.

One of the biggest problems with the containers, Gray said, are "people putting limbs in the boxes," which he said take up a lot of room. "They just occupy space and are expensive to haul to the landfill. I wish citizens would look for other ways to dispose of them, or haul them to the landfill themselves. It would be cheaper."

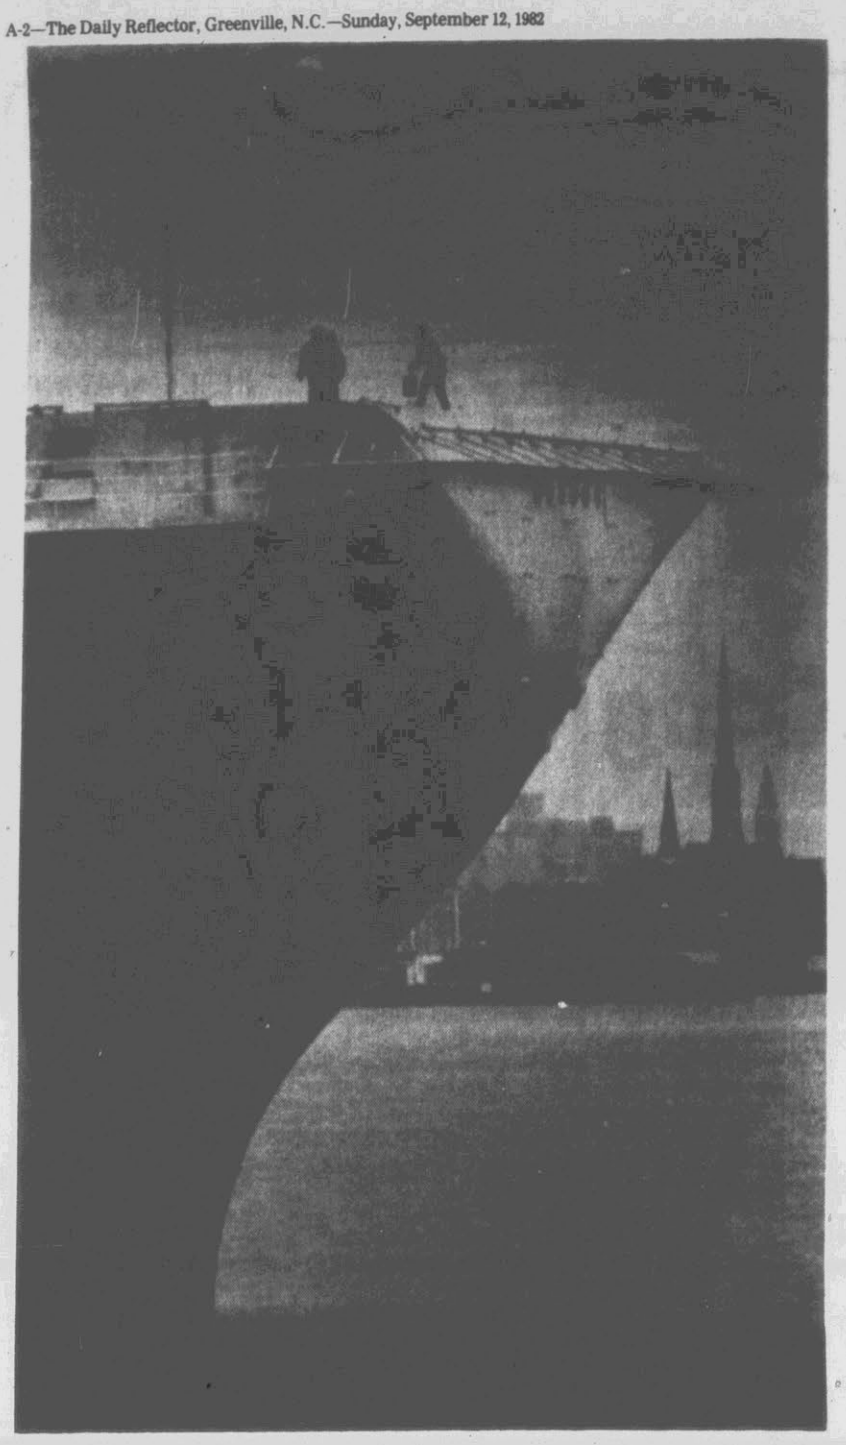

Another costly problem is people not taking care to put their trash in the containers, rather letting it fall on the ground outside the boxes. "That causes it to cost more to keep the sites clean."

Other problems include scavengers going into the boxes to see what they can salvage, "which presents a health hazard to them," and persons setting fire to the $2,700 containers. "It costs a lot of money when they do that," Gray said.

Vandalism at the sites, such as shooting out lights, taking or defaceing signs, and "people with four-wheel drive vehicles and motor bikes riding around the sites, cutting up the drives and landscaping," create additional problems — and costs — assistant county manager Don Davenport said.

Nixon Supports Limits And Sino-Soviet Thaw

PEKING (AP) — Declaring that the United States must "deal with the world as it is," former President Richard M. Nixon says he welcomes China's efforts to improve ties with the Soviet Union and supports limiting U.S. arms sales to Taiwan.

"We in the United States should welcome any initiative by China to reduce tensions with Moscow and I would not question that China is seeking to do so," Nixon said. "There can be no conflict between major powers without escalating to involve other countries."

In a wide-ranging interview, Nixon said the Taiwan issue has been pushed to the "back burner," but still clouds U.S.-China relations. He said the Chinese also worry about American foreign policy problems elsewhere, including the dispute over European involvement in the Soviet Union's gas pipeline project.

The former president, who oversaw the revival of U.S. relations with China a decade ago, was in Peking on a private visit and was interviewed late last week at a guest house following two days of talks with senior Chinese leaders.

Nixon praised the latest Chinese-American policy statement, which was issued Aug. 17 and calls for limiting and eventually ending American arms sales to the Nationalist regime on Taiwan.

He called it "an outstanding document that did not resolve the problem, but found common ground on a very contentious issue."

The communique also lays groundwork for greater strategic cooperation between the United States and China, and for the sale of defensive weapons to China.

Referring to criticism of the document by some Taiwanese officials and supporters in the United States, Nixon said, "We are not abandoning our old friends on Taiwan, but we have to deal with the world as it is."

China, he explained, "will not walk in lockstep with the United States."

He added that "there is no more important guarantee of Taiwan's security than a strong China-U.S. Relationship."

Nixon said the the Taiwan issue, "which really has poisoned our relations over the last couple of years, now has been pushed ... from the front burner to the back burner."

But he said every top Chinese leader he met said a shadow still darkens Sino-American relations, and are still "quite concerned" that the United States is clinging to a "two-Chinas" policy, despite official disclaimers.

He said he reassured the leaders that President Reagan rejects that concept and the Chinese in turn "expressed great respect for Reagan."

The Nationalist government of Taiwan was established by Chiang Kai-shek and his followers after they fled from the victorious communists in 1949. The Peking regime regards Taiwan as a renegade province.

Despite a possible thaw in Soviet-Chinese relations, Nixon said, "There will be no Sino-Soviet rapprochement in the near future" because of fundamental differences over Vietnam, Cambodia, Afghanistan, Soviet troops in Mongolia, and China's northern border.

Moreover, he said, China has bad memories of past association with the Soviets and can benefit more economically from the West.

"The Soviet threat in 1972 brought us together," said Nixon. "But today, the threat is even greater ... They (the Chinese) know the Soviet Union poses a significant threat to them and the U.S. has no designs on them."

Nixon said China places a higher priority on economic ties with the United States than on military issues, and he expects more technical cooperation between the two countries.

However, he noted that China has stepped up its criticism of U.S. foreign policy and condemns American policy toward the Middle East and Third World as "inept and without vision."

Nixon said Peking also worries about the dispute between the United States and its European allies over the Soviet natural gas pipeline. The major Western European nations have defied U.S. efforts to prevent them from using American technology for the project.

The Chinese do not want to see the pipeline contribute to Soviet strength, Nixon said, but are concerned that internal friction from the dispute makes the NATO alliance less effective against a Soviet threat.

"They cannot rationalize why the United States says 'No' on the pipeline but continues to sell grain to the Soviet Union," he said. Reagan has answered that argument, also raised by the Europeans, as saying grain purchases cost the Soviets cash while the pipeline will bring them revenue. He ordered the embargo to punish the Soviets for what the administration says is Soviet complicity in the Polish crackdown on Solidarity.

Babies Winning

WASHINGTON (AP) — They're miracle babies, children born prematurely who 10 years ago probably would have died. Last week 150 of them returned to the Children's Hospital here for an ice cream-filled reunion, heartwarming proof of the latest advances in medical technology.

"Ten years ago most babies that weighed less than 2 pounds, 6 ounces would have died," said Dr. Cheryl Naulty, director of the hospital's newborn clinic. "When they lived, the majority were handicapped. The ultimate problem was something happened to the brain."

Impressive advances in diagnostic equipment, surgical techniques and nutritional knowledge are giving new hope for the quarter of a million premature babies now born in America each year.

A baby is called premature when it is born before 8½ months after conception and weighs less than 5 pounds.

"We've pushed back the frontier," said Ms. Naulty, who has worked at Children's Hospital for 10 years. "We've not only increased the survival rate for babies ... but we've increased the quality of survival. In that range, most who survive are normal or have only minor handicaps."

Ms. Naulty said that 10 years ago, only 20 percent of the babies survived in the most critical weight range, between 2.2 and 3 pounds. Now, nearly 80 percent live, she said.

The heavier premature babies had a greater survival rate than the smaller babies in the past, but usually suffered many complications. Now, she said, 90 percent survive and their health problems are more easily solved.

Throughout Friday afternoon, children ranging in age from two months to seven years paraded through the hospital playground, each wearing a yellow T-shirt that read: "I am a nursery graduate." They played on swings and slides, had pictures taken of themselves with a clown, popped balloons and licked ice cream cones.

HELICOPTER CRASH ... Wreckage covers the scene where a U.S. Army helicopter crashed on a highway section near Mannheim, West Germany, Sunday, killing the 5-man crew and 39 parachutists. (AP Laserphoto)

At Mannheim, West Germany

44 Die In Copter Crash

MANNHEIM, West Germany (AP) — A U.S. Army helicopter crashed onto a West German highway and exploded Saturday during an international air show, killing all 44 people aboard as thousands of horrified spectators watched, officials said.

The victims were said to include five American crew members and skydivers from at least three other countries.

The crash was one of the worst helicopter accidents on record.

Two cars were hit by flying debris but the startled motorists escaped uninjured, police said, adding that traffic was unusually light at the time.

"All we heard was a bang and we looked up and pieces of the (rotor) blades started flying through the air and the helicopter just went into a nosedive immediately and crashed into the ground," said Derk Steenblitz who was among about 10,000 people attending the air show in this southwestern industrial city.

"As soon as it hit the ground, there was just this huge explosion with smoke and flames," said Steenblitz, a Canadian teacher.

He said the families of some parachutists apparently had been waiting in the field and "were carried away ... in shock ... by ambulance."

After taking off from the nearby Neuostheim airfield, "the pilot radioed the control tower to say he wished to come in and land," Mayor Wilhelm Varnholt told reporters.

The pilot did not say he was in trouble, Varnholt said.

"He didn't have a chance to put down that chopper safely," a spokesman at the Neuostheim control tower said in a telephone interview. He reported seeing the Chinook lose one blade from the rear rotor, then others.

"The pilot did not have a chance," he repeated.

A photographer returning from the scene said the chopper hit a divider, scattering debris across all four lanes of the autobahn.

"All that is left of it now is twisted metal, black from the flames, topped with white foam from fire extinguishers," she said.

There was no official report on the cause of the crash, but Varnholt said a bolt underneath the rotor blade apparently came loose. "The transmission was ripped apart," he said.

A spokesman at Mannheim police headquarters said the helicopter carried five American crew members and 39 skydivers from Britain, France and West Germany — believed to be mostly civilians participating in the Mannheim Air Show.

Varnholt said the skydivers belonged to clubs in West Germany, and Mannheim's sister cities of Toulon, France and Swansea, Wales. Some American guests were also aboard, he added.

A local radio station reporting from the crash scene said the victims included two American soldiers and five American crew members, 23 Frenchmen, seven Britons, six West Germans and a Canadian woman.

But a preliminary report from Mannheim police headquarters did not list a Canadian. It said that in addition to the army crewmen, there were 23 French victims, eight from Britain, six from West Germany and two Americans.

Officials said the Chinook was assigned to the 295th Aviation Company at Coleman Barracks in Mannheim.

"All we have is that a CH47 helicopter — Chinook — crashed about 1 p.m. (8 a.m. EDT) at or near an autobahn intersection east of Mannheim and we have conflicting reports about the number of casualties and their nationalities," said Rex Gribble, spokesman for the U.S. Army's European headquarters in nearby Heidelberg. He said the manifest listed 44 people on the helicopter but he believed about 35 were actually aboard.

The highway was immediately closed in both directions between the Mannheim Central and Mannheim Crossroads sections, police said.

Doris Scott, a U.S. Army spokeswoman at the scene, said experts from Fort Rucker in Alabama would fly to Mannheim and investigate the crash. West German officials said the Federal Aviation Office in Brunswick also was investigating.

The mayor canceled the rest of the air show organized for Mannheim's 375th anniversary.

A spokesman for the show's organizers said about 10,000 people were on the airfield when the accident happened. "They wanted to see the 120 hot air and gas-filled balloons fly, the veteran airplane display and the blimps and zeppelins," he said.

A Chinook also was involved in a crash that killed 37 American soldiers on Aug. 18, 1971 during maneuvers near the communist East German border in Northern Bavaria.

Reports the U.S. Army declined to confirm at the time said the crash was caused by a crack in one of the blades. The unit's other craft were grounded and another 36 cracked blades were found, the reports said. They said the cracks were caused by rust.

History's worst helicopter accident claimed 54 lives when an Israeli military Sea Stallion crashed on the West Bank of the Jordan River on May 10, 1977, according to the 1982 edition of the Guinness Book of World Records.

Lebanon Is Still Powderkeg

AP News Analysis
By LARRY THORSON
Associated Press Writer

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — After ousting the main Palestinian guerrilla force from Beirut, Israeli troops in eastern Lebanon still face the Syrian army across a battlefield prone to cease-fire breaches.

But some senior Israeli officials say they don't think the Syrians are capable of a major military action in Lebanon, and they expect their old enemy to withdraw from the country without a fight.

During the past week, Israeli warplanes twice attacked Syrian anti-aircraft missiles in eastern Lebanon's Bekaa Valley and destroyed five batteries by Israeli count.

Israel also is warning it is watching the Syrians closely and will blame them for any attacks by Palestine Liberation Organization guerrillas in the area.

However, the Israelis also have said repeatedly that they do not want any new battles with the Syrians.

"Personally, I don't think a conflagration is likely, but it is certainly a nervous situation," said Chaim Herzog, a former head of military intelligence and one of Israel's most respected military commentators.

Israel radio, quoting Defense Minister Ariel Sharon at a closed-door meeting of Parliament's foreign affairs and security committee, said Israel does not think it will have to use the "military option" to get the Syrians out of Lebanon.

The military chief of staff, Lt. Gen. Raphael Eytan, said on Armed Forces Radio last Friday that Syrian troops were well entrenched in eastern Lebanon. But he said Syria had not made any buildups lately and he did not think it could make an offensive against Israel.

Herzog said he believed the Damascus government feared an Israeli attack in eastern Lebanon, and its batteries of heat-seeking SAM-9 missiles were deployed as a defensive measure.

But that doesn't make them any more acceptable to Israel, and along with its demands that "the PLO must go" and "Lebanon should sign a peace treaty with Israel," the Israelis are saying there must be no Syrian missiles in eastern Lebanon.

After the two air raids, Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin declared:

"I hope this warning will be heard in Damascus. We want no fighting with the Syrian army."

The attacks brought a worried reaction from the White House, where spokesman Larry Speakes said "provocation on both sides should be halted" and added that "there is always the potential of escalation between the Israelis and the Syrians."

When Israel launched its June 6 invasion, Syria had roughly 30,000 troops in Lebanon under a 1976 Arab League mandate to separate warring Moslem and Christian factions.

Israel said the Syrians had turned into an occupying army, and although the stated goal of the invasion was to crush the PLO, it seemed obvious that driving out the Syrians also was an Israeli aim.

Syria lost ground in heavy fighting against Israel in the first days of the invasion. But intelligence sources in Beirut say Syria still is believed to have 30,000 men in Lebanon, against an Israeli force that has numbered as high as 95,000 soldiers.

Syrian President Hafez Assad asked the Arab League summit to revoke the 1976 mandate and some observers predicted this could lead to a face-saving withdrawal from Lebanon. Before the summit ended last week, however, sources said a sharp disagreement arose and Assad withdrew the request.

Both Israel and Syria say they are willing to withdraw their troops from Lebanon. But neither wants to go before the other, and arranging a simultaneous withdrawal will be a monumental task.

It will be tackled by the American diplomats who arranged the withdrawal of almost 15,000 PLO, Syrian and Palestine Liberation Army fighters from Beirut earlier this month.

After the negotiations start, Chief of Staff Eytan predicted Syria will permit Palestinian guerrillas to attack Israeli troops "and create pressure while pretending to stand aside with clean hands."

School Lines Are A Problem To Be Solved

The Greenville City Council and the Pitt County Commissioners tackled a knotty problem once again last week.

Council members were requesting that the commissioners adopt the concept of coterminous boundaries for the city school district. That policy, if adopted, would mean the boundaries of the city school district would move whenever the city limits moved. Presently the school district lines are fixed and, even though the city expands, the school district doesn't. Thus part of Greenville proper is in the county school district.

Again it was indicated that virtually nothing can be done about the school district lines until the county school board agrees that changes can be made.

What finally resulted was the City Council agreeing with the County Commissioners position that the two districts should be merged, although Mayor Percy Cox later said the city still holds to its position on coterminous boundaries.

Whether this will create any movement in the direction of solving this vexing problem remains to be seen. The County Board of Education clearly is happy with the situation. It is picking up students from the areas which are developing around Greenville. The city district, on the other hand, can't gain because of its locked-in situation. Annually it becomes more and more of a problem to the County Commissioners to provide equitable funding for the two districts and still consider critically needed capital improvements in the city districts.

It all has the makings of a powder keg situation, and if we are to look at it realistically we must recognize that it is not a question of if there will be a solution, but when.

Attitudes must change in this matter and they must change quickly. Both the taxpayers and students have the right to expect that all government bodies concerned give this issue top priority.

Energy Auditing May Be A Way To Reduce Costs

Energy auditing is a term we might hear a good deal about in the future.

Its first energy audit was recently done in a local business by Greenville Utilities.

Under the program the utility studies a facility and analyses past energy use. Recommendations are made for energy-saving changes, including the possibility of switching to another rate schedule.

The pilot program is experimental at present, but it offers great possibilities for being something that can be helpful to businesses and industries.

Energy is a major cost for any business. Most observers believe that the long term trend for energy costs is upward. It makes sense to do all possible to make the most efficient use of energy, and it appears that energy auditing is a good way to proceed.

Helen Thomas — Peace

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Much as he tried to avoid the quagmire of unending Middle East conflicts, President Reagan has finally taken the plunge and proposed his own peace formula.

Furthermore, he has taken in stride Israel's outright rejection for some of his proposals, particularly in respect to self government for the Palestinians on the West Bank and Gaza Strip and a link to Jordan.

And he sought to reassure Israel by rejecting any establishment of a Palestinian state and by promising ironclad security guarantees.

Reagan has called his blueprint, which bears the marks of peace plans of the past that never got off the ground, a "fresh start."

He also has described as a "vital" first step in the quest for peace the ceasefire in Lebanon, accompanied by the evaucation of the Palestine Liberation Organization force from West Beirut. But the president knows he has miles to go before a true peace momentum can be established and maintained.

His top aides insist that he will pursue the course, undaunted by the suspicion and hostility of some of the parties involved. State Department spokesman John Hughes said "proper pressure" will be exerted on Israel to come around. He said it would involve "diplomatic persuasion and the prospect of peace."

Under the circumstances, Reagan's full powers of persuasion will be put to the test. But the United States has nothing to lose in pursuing a just and comprehensive peace in the Middle East tinderbox, and perhaps a lot to gain.

The Russians have aced themselves out of the picture by failing to offer any visible support to the Palestinians during the Lebanon crisis.

In fact, the Arabs and the Palestinians are looking to the United States for a way out of the dilemma that has plagued the region for some 40 years.

When he first moved into the White House, it was Reagan's policy to ignore the Camp David peace process. Later, attempts were made to determine whether serious negotiations on Palestinian autonomy could take place between Israel and Egypt. They got nowhere and the administration was happy to keep the ever present problem on the back burner.

The Israeli invasion of Lebanon caused new soul searching and Reagan, in a pre-emptive strike, decided to take the bull by the horn. By doing so, he put the United States back into the No. 1 superpower position in the Middle East and cast himself in a new role as a peacemaker.

Neither Reagan nor others around him have any illusions that peace is just around the corner. First, all sides must agree to negotiate. Then they must decide what to negotiate and who will be involved.

Alvin Taylor — Sunday Morning Notes

The guys in The Daily Reflector circulation department called the news department Thursday afternoon.

"If you are going to use big words like the one on the front, how about coming back and explaining what they mean," Bonnie Hardee, the circulation manager, said.

He was referring to "coterminous" in a headline on the front page.

The term was used in connection with a City Council request of the County Commissioners that the city school district line be moved as the city limits moves.

Well, for the circulation department, Webster's Collegiate Dictionary says coterminous means, "having the same or coincident boundaries."

In the future, circulation department, just deliver the papers.

A request for a marker to show where Eppes High School was once located drew different reactions. Those who have been around Greenville for many years wondered why anyone would have to be shown the site of the proud old school. Those who have been here ten years or less wonder what in the world Eppes High School was.

That's the reaction in a growing city that includes many new people.

A reference to Greenville High School causes relative newcomers to wonder if that isn't a reference to Rose. Old timers know that GHS was located at Fifth and Reide, now a university owned vacant lot.

Everybody once knew where Five Points was. It was the center of town, and perhaps the universe. The restaurants and theaters were there and the finest stores were nearby. It was at Fifth and Evans, but now it is Three Points and hardly the center of anything.

There are many who remember where the Pitt Theater was, but few who know where the Colony Theater was located (on what is now the mall between Fifth and Fourth.

Perhaps some plaques should be erected at these and other sites, so that those who return to their roots here could at least see where their favorite landmarks once were.

Paul T. O'Connor — Cost Of Politicking Has Gone Haywire

RALEIGH — When the candidates and columnists talk about the high costs of campaigning these days, they're usually referring to the money it takes to advertise in the mass media. As television has replaced the village green as the primary place for hearing the candidate's message, the cost of seeking to serve the public has gone haywire.

A 30-second prime time ad on the larger market television stations in North Carolina is running in the range of $1,600 today. That is one shot for 30 seconds. Late at night, or early in the morning, that ad might run for as little as $25. On radio, a 30-second spot may only cost $3 in the smaller markets but as much as $75 in the bigger cities. A full page ad in one of the state's larger Sunday papers will cost $4,000 or more. When you start running these ads in great quantities, it isn't hard to figure out why it costs a quarter million dollars to run for Congress nowadays.

Such extravagant expenditures aren't usually found in local races. More likely, candidates for Congress or governor will be dishing out that kind of money. But even school board candidates better be able to raise some cash to pay for buttons, bumper stickers and the like.

An Asheville firm that produces political paraphernalia is widely distributing its price list. Buying in moderate quantities, the cost of those buttons that candidates hand out like rock candy at the county fair is about 12 cents each — if you buy the cheapest button, a small one that stabs the voter in the heart. If you want a nice big six-inch button with a safety pin, the cost is 85 cents. There are 10 different sizes and prices. A second color will add two or three extra pennies to the cost of each.

Cheap bumper stickers sell for 15 cents each — again adding 3 or 4 cents per extra color and hardly anyone buys one color bumper stickers. A nice big sticker will cost a quarter. It's almost as expensive to try to decorate your sport coat with a lapel sticker. They cost 13 cents each.

Posters are big in local political races. A rain-proof poster, using stock lettering and design, will cost 24 cents for one color, 28 cents for two. That's a small sign. The bigger posters — 22 inches by 28 — cost 79 cents for one color, 90 cents for two. Many candidates use posters as yard signs which means stapling two posters back to back and to a stick they had to buy at the lumber yard. So double the poster costs for yard signs. A two-color barn poster will cost about $5.50. If the candidate wants to be creative and design his own signs, the cost can be as much as 30 percent higher.

Most candidates like to have their own stationery which costs $600 for 10,000 letterhead sheets and envelopes.

For those candidates who like to leave the voters with something they can use, there are ball-point pens at 17 cents each, emery boards at 7 cents each, matchbooks at 2½ cents each, T-shirts and baseball caps at about $4 each. Political sponges sold through another outlet cost about 15 cents each.

There are less traditional ways to spend campaign money. Take John Parker who ran for the Senate this year in Raleigh. He contacted a New York-based skywriter. Parker was ready to sign the contract to have "Parker for Senate" written above the 14th District at a cost of $250 a day and $20 a letter. The message would have to have been written a number of different times in the three-county district. He backed down when he learned the Raleigh area was too windy for skywriting.

Rowland Evans and Robert Novak — Stand On Pipeline Confirms European View

WASHINGTON — The administration's weak-kneed retreat from full punitive measures against European companies violating anti-Soviet pipeline sanctions by the U.S. confirms Europe's view that Washington can always be forced into retreat by its allies.

The retreat was maneuvered while Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, President Reagan's staunchest supporter in the battle over the Soviet gas pipline, wae winging toward Beirut — out of the action. Nor did the retreat ever get full clearance within the bureaucracy.

Treasury Secretary Donald Regan and Secretary of State George Shultz, who was preoccupied with the Middle East, presented Reagan with a virtual fait accompli. That overrode mid-level officials in the Commerce Department, the agency charged with handling the pipeline account.

The result has badly weakened the chance for Ronald Reagan to achieve his major objective: agreement between the U.S. and Europe on long-term economic and financial measures to pressure the Soviet Union into concessions on Poland.

The Reagan administration for months drifted between the hard/soft line position on the Yamal pipeline. That gave France, Britain, West Germany and Italy an opportunity to pin down their agreement to give Moscow money and equipment to build the pipeline. Thus the issue last week was no longer trying to stop the pipeline; that U.S. goal had been foreclosed.

Instead, the president by last week was trying to put enough economic pressure on the Europeans to persuade them to adopt two across-the-board measures against the Soviets that he long has sought: first, to end interest rate subsidies on loans to cash-hungry Russians; second, to tighten up the sale of high-technology equipment that the Russians claim is for non-military purposes but that winds up feeding the Soviet arms buildup.

However, Reagan was stripped of his weapons by retreat on U.S. penalties for Dresser-France, Creusot-Loire, Britain's John Brown and other shippers of U.S.-licensed compressore to the Soviet Union. Consequently, he will have far more trouble persuading the Europeans to accept his financial and technology sanctions.

The Europeans are puzzled. "We don't know what the real long-range plan of your president is," one highly-placed European diplomat told us. "You go hot and cold."

The original full-scale "denial" orders imposing a total trade cut-off with the offending companies would have imposed heavy pressure on the Europeans. With that leverage gone, Reagan is desperately casting about for some other way to pressure the Europeans to end scandalous Soviet conversion of non-military technology to military uses.

One blatant example was the sale, supposedly for commercial operations only, of a giant drydock to the Soviets by a Japanese producer several years ago. The deal met all Western conditions and was specifically approved by the Carter administration. Yet, that drydock is now known to serve the Soviet Pacific fleet in Vladivostok. The record is strewn with similar transfers of "dual-use" technology such as computers, bought for "commercial" use, then slipped to the military.

Reagan will soon send his agents into the hostile environs of Europe to begin negotiations to tighten up these transfers, to add more technology to the forbidden list and to reduce financial and other Western subsidies to the Soviet bloc. The task has been made immeasurably more difficult by his retreat on punitive measures for pipeline sales, the latest notice to the Europeans that Uncle Sam's bark is much worse than his bite.

James J. Kilpatrick — Population Study Shows Ethnic Changes

WASHINGTON — In the beginning, when such enterprising fellows as Fernando de Soto and Captain Jonn Smith were hiking around the country, no one was home but the Indians. Then the unborn United States began to be populated chiefly by white Anglo-Saxon Protestants. They brought in the first blacks. By 1800 the infant Republic was 80 percent white (or red), 20 percent black.

Today our country is about 79 percent white, 11 percent black, 6 percent Hispanic and 4 percent Asian and others. What will we look like a century hence, in the census of 2080?

The Population Reference Bureau, a leading think tank for such speculations, last month released a report on our ethnic future. The authors emphasize the distinction (though they often seem to forget it themselves) between projections and predictions. They're not predicting anything. They are engaged in simple mathematical projections. Given certain assumptions, having to do with birth rates, death rates, immigration and emigration, they construct demographic models of where we are heading.

Population projections are governed by two factors — by growth or decline from the resident population, and by growth or decline from net immigration. At the moment, the country's resident white component is languishing. With a fertility rate of 1.76, whites are not even reproducing their own numbers. The resideut black fertility rate is 2.33, the resident Hispanic rate 2.6.

If there were no net immigration whatever over the next 40 years, our population would increase by about 40 million. Despite the low fertility rates, the sheer number of women of child-bearing age would result in a higher level of total births.

Obviously it is unrealistic to project a future with zero immigration. The authors of this study use annual averages of 500,000, 1 million, 1.5 million and 2 million. They make other assumptions having to do with the ethnic background of future immigrants. After running the data through their computers, they venture their projections.

The authors believe an average growth by immigration of 1 million is likely. On this assumption, the white component will drop to 71.7 percent in 2000, to 59 percent in 2040 and to 49.8 percent in 2080. A century hence, under these projections, the United States will be about 14.7 percent black, 23.4 percent Hispanic and 12 percent Asian and other.

Does it matter? The authors raise the question without answering it. They assume that year by year, generation by generation, the arriving immigrants will be so assimilated into the American family that resident rates of death and fertility will tend to even out.

Very few of us now living will be around in 2080 to observe what political cnanges will result from these projected ethnic changes. Such projections are beyond a computer's power. If blacks, Hispanics and Asians should form conesive political blocs, presumably we would see more blacks, Hispanics and Asians elected to political office in the next century. But, again, so what?

My own guess, for whatever it may be worth, is that the next 20 or 30 years are more likely to see political divisions along the lines of age and sex than along the lines of race and color. The Social Security system is in deep trouble; it requires small imagination to conceive a political rebellion among young workers against the idle old folks. Already there is much talk of welding the majority of our people who are female against the minority of males. Phyllis Schlafly, where will you be when we need you?

The authors' methodology appears to me beyond reproach. Absent an atomic war that wipes all of us out, there appears no reason to doubt their projections of tne face of America in the 21st century. But predicting the social and political consequences is a different matter. As Niels Bohr said, prediction is a very difficult art — especially when it involves the future.

Social Security's Solve-All Solution Proves To Be Elusive

WASHINGTON (AP) — There's a lot riding on the judgments of President Reagan's bipartisan commission on Social Security reform.

Maybe too much.

The 15-member panel is supposed to chart a way out of the financial crisis facing the system, and deliver it before the end of the year. Its eight Republicans and seven Democrats were commissioned to find, in Reagan's words, "a truly bipartisan solution to this great national problem."

That is a goal that has eluded administrations and Congresses for years. The panel has little more than three months left to do it. That deadline is on paper, but a real one looms next year, when Social Security is going to need money to pay benefits.

The commission will be deliberating through the campaign, with recommendations due after the Nov. 2 elections. That has the effect of putting on hold the politically sensitive problem of changing a system that pays benefits to 36 million Americans, and taxes 115 million.

Reagan has had problems with the Social Security issue since his earliest days in national politics, since he began as a critic of the system itself. He disowned that position long ago, and said during his two presidential campaigns that he would safeguard the benefits of people dependent on Social Security.

He never said exactly how that would be done, but did say that as president he would put the problem in the hands of a panel of experts to find the right solution. Hence the reform commission.

While it is at work, the Republican National Committee has been advertising Reagan's dedication to Social Security, and repeating his assurances:

"The official word from the White House: there will be no cuts in ... retirement benefits for the 36 million retirees who are currently receiving them. That has been President Reagan's policy from the beginning."

That assurance doesn't include future benefit increases, or future beneficiaries.

In a campaign message to senior citizens, the Republicans said that Democrats have been trying to distort administration policy, and complained that the GOP had to spend about $1 million on advertising "to set the record straight."

Those advertisements credited Reagan with delivering a cost-of-living increase. The Democrats called it false advertising, since the increase was automatic under a law enacted before Reagan was president — and because he once had proposed that it be delayed for three months.

He dropped that proposal, and others to curb disability and early retirement benefits, at the time he called for creation of the reform commission.

Disputes like that have been reflected within the commission itself, understandbly since it is composed of largely people who long ago took rival sides in the Social Security debate. Seven of them are members of the Congress that will have to pass judgment on whatever the commission recommends.

Nevertheless, the Republican National Committee envisions a settlement of the whole issue after the commission makes its proposals. "We can be sure that once President Reagan receives the report, he and Congress will reach a bipartisan solution ... that will secure the system and end the debate on Social Security," the GOP statement said.

Indeed, the Republican message suggested that could happen as early as December, if Congress meets in special session on Social Security.

There is no dispute about the need to take action, and quickly, to keep the system solvent. But there is no sign of agreement on what it should be. The kind of action that would be necessary tends to make some voters nervous, which makes politicians nervous, which keeps them from talking about specifics during a campaign.

Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., chairman of the Finance Committee, proposed a special session after the elections to deal with Social Security while "political pressures are at a minimum," and while there's no other business to tie up Congress.

Republican congressional leaders are not enthusiastic about the idea. The White House hasn't taken a position. The reform commission has said it would deliver recommendations in time for such a session if one were to be held.

Its proposals will of necessity involve raising taxes and curtailing future benefits, since the president — and the political concensus — put current benefits off limits.

The commission has received a series of staff papers on options for change, among them a proposal to gradually increase the retirement age at which full benefits would be paid, from the current 65 years to 66 or 67. Others include stepping up the timetable for Social Security tax increases that are due under current law over the next eight years; reducing early retirement benefits; and changing the cost-of-living formula so as to reduce future benefit increases.

After six commission meetings, with a seventh scheduled on Sept. 20, that elusive formula that is supposed to secure the system and settle the issue appears as elusive as ever.

Mind

WASHINGTON (AP) — Snapshots from Ronald Reagan's vacation album:

The president interrupted his recent 17-day stay at his ranch to make two live radio broadcasts to the nation, reviving a series of Saturday addresses that was inaugurated last fall.

In the talk, the president showed that, at 71, he's not afraid to kid about his age.

"By the way," Reagan said, "this year marks the 100th anniversary of the first Labor Day parade. It isn't true that I was in that first parade. I just read about it."

In that same address, Reagan took note of the fact that employment figures are adjusted to compensate for seasonal factors.

"Today there are nearly 100 million (people) at work — more than 100 million, according to the unadjusted figures, and 99.8 million in the seasonally adjusted figures," Reagan said.

"Now if that confuses you," Reagan told Americans, "well, I'm confused too."

And that's where he let the matter rest, with no further explanation.

Reagan made a side trip to Los Angeles during his vacation for two nights of politicking.

At a reception for George Deukmejian, Republican candidate for governor of California, Reagan was asked to reveal the most difficult and surprising aspects of his job. His answer:

"You know, it's kind of hard to answer because I have to tell you, I'm enjoying myself ... You know, you go to work in an elevator and you go home in an elevator, and sometimes you get a little claustrophobia.

"The corridors are beautiful and it's a very fine living and all that. But every once in a while you do look out the window and you see people walking by and you say, 'You know something that they can do and I can't — I can't just walk down to the corner drugstore and pick out a birthday card or a magazine or something.' And so then you go to Camp David and get it out of your system."

A night earlier, at a fund-raiser for Senate candidate Pete Wilson, the president gave a speech that longtime Reagan watchers and White House staffers rated one of his worst ever.

Reagan wandered from topic to topic, from the economy to the all-volunteer Army, from fraud and waste in government to oil wells off the California coast, and rambled on far longer than scheduled.

With unemployment at a 41-year high and bankruptcies at a 50-year peak, Reagan — for unknown reasons — called attention to the jobless problem by repeating an old campaign line.

He recalled that during the campaign he used to chide then-President Carter by saying, "A recession was when your neighbor lost his job; a depression was when you lost yours, and relief would be when he lost his."

Among the least memorable — and least understandable — lines of the speech were:

"This — I can't tell you — and, you know, I'm a little — here. This is the first time I've ever been a before-dinner speaker."

And, "Let me just say — let me — deep, if you will, in your hearts — I said, I think, the last time I was out here and, maybe, to many of you, I do not know all the national anthems in the world."

It was an unusual performance for a man sometimes called "the Great Communicator."

A senior White House staffer said privately that Reagan had discarded the prepared speech and chose to speak largely off the cuff from scribbled notes.

"It was terrible," the official said, asking not to be quoted by name. "I think his mind was still at the ranch."

"SOMEDAY, SON, ALL THIS WILL BE YOURS..."

Jerry Brown Arrives

LOS ANGELES — A funny thing has happened to Jerry Brown since his trouncing in 1980's presidential sweepstakes: America has unwittingly tuned into his wavelength.

But this fact may eventually have nothing to do with whether California's eccentric two-term governor ever brings his brave new world of politics to Washington. The mistakes of his opponent for the U.S. Senate, San Diego Mayor Pete Wilson, and Brown's personality seem more destined to determine the governor's fate than does any realization that America, let alone California, might be ready for his ideas.

In various ways, Brown still resembles the insurgent who raised more questions than supporters two years ago on the hustings in Iowa, New Hampshire and Wisconsin. He's again stressing the theme — "people, technology, environment" — that led many Americans to write him off as a modern-day Jules Verne in pinstripes and Guccis.

But the Reagan era has lent Brown's message more respectability. Precipitous industrial decline and the nation's increasingly desperate hope in high technology — particularly computers and telecommunications — have given Brown a credence that he deserved but, at least at the national level, never had. Severe worker displacement and cutbacks in federal education and job training support have made Brown's brand of intensive public-private cooperation a matter of political practicality.

Meanwhile, Interior Secretary James Watt has probably done more for Brown's environmentalist image than have many of the governor's legislative victories.

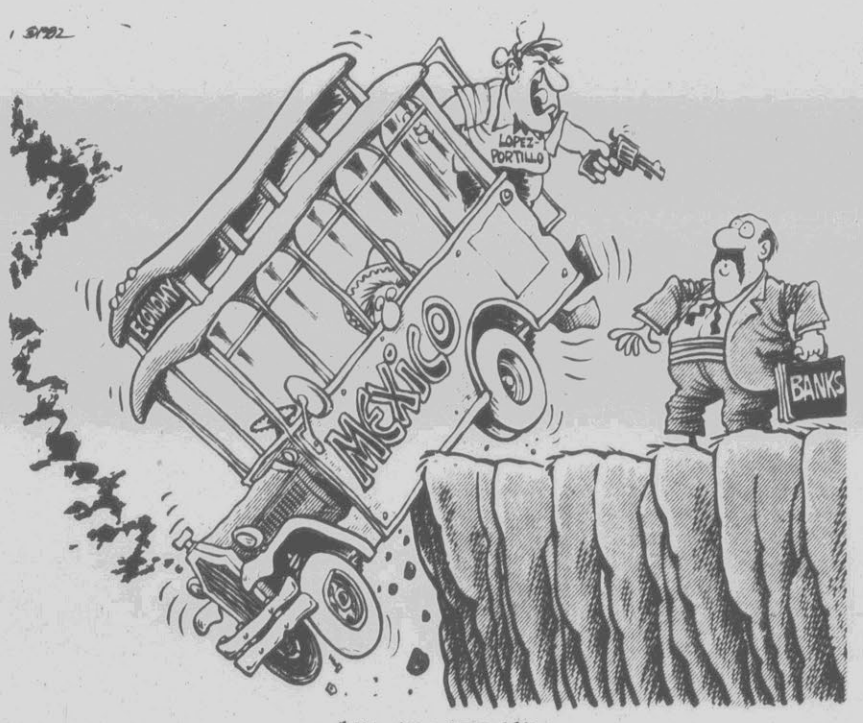

"We're seeing the ravages of obsolescence and fierce imports," Brown said in a recent interview with us here, "and we need a strategy ... pointing in the direction of business-government-labor cooperation, research and development ... manpower training and increased levels of human skills. That, to me, is a coherent set of ideas that can be reduced to campaign policy."

And an effective one at that. Brown has allied the moderate-conservative Wilson with Reagan on most issues and has often made the mayor seem out of his element. The strategy has, in many ways, provided voters, as Brown often asserts, with a choice between the future and the past.

Indeed, in an interview, Pete Wilson seemed beleaguered' a politician trapped by others' agendas — notably Brown's and Reagan's. Once set to run for governor, he's had to switch gears and tackle national issues on which Brown sounds better versed. Wilson has also been compelled to oppose a statewide nuclear-freeze initiative, as well as the Reagan-led tax increase, enabling a far shrewder Brown, who has supported both, to paint him as pro-Reagan and unpatriotic at the same time. Under Brown's rules, Wilson seems hard-pressed for comebacks.

Yet in a summer period that has seen Wilson's postprimary lead of 22 percentage points shrink — by the mayor's own count — to 7, a number of Wilson miscues have begun to overshadow Brown's better ideas. Wilson's advocacy of alternative Social Security contribution plans for those 45 and under is one politically-inopportune suggestion on which Brown has already capitalized.

Others, which may be more a measure of Wilson's advisers, have included revelations that the Republican had received free housing and airplane trips. In 1978 Brown turned a similar mistake by gubernatorial opponent Evelle J. Younger into a devastating media attack.

Women

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ronald Reagan often jokes that he never "got the girl" at the end of all those Westerns that used to be his specialty.

Now that his specialty is the Oval Office and national politics, women are a big problem for him and the Republican Party.

Women don't think much of Reagan or his policies, a negative attitude that started almost with his nomination in July 1980. They consistently give Reagan lower ratings on his work than men, with a "gender gap" that averages seven to 10 points.

Interestingly, this gender gap is also afflicting GOP politicians at the state level, a problem that could be critical in this fall's voting.

While the degree of Reagan's woman problem is well-defined by numerous polls, the reasons for it are rather ill-defined.

Some say his stands against the Equal Rights Amendment and abortion turn women off. Others say, no, it is his defense policies that are an affront to women's leanings toward more pacifist views, triggering fears that he will get this country into a war.

And some groups say women are suffering more from Reagan's economic policies than men, and that's what lies behind the problem.

A bit of history provides at least a little understanding of this situation.

Women's negative reaction to Reagan popped up in the polls just after the Republican National Convention had met in July 1980 to give Reagan the nomination.

It wasn't so much what Reagan did at the convention as the party platform that angered women. In a series of well-publicized decisions, the convention backed off from the party's longtime support for the ERA and strongly condemned abortion. The Associated Press-NBC polls and other surveys found women knew of these party positions and that many of those women were unhappy with them.

Reagan's pollster, Richard Wirthlin, picked up this shift against Reagan as well. By early September, Reagan tried to remedy the problem by promising to nominate the first woman to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Then, on the 1980 campaign trail, Jimmy Carter raised the issue of Reagan and war. Would Reagan get this country involved in a war? Would he be a president in the image of a trigger-happy cowboy?

By Election Day, the war issue and the women's issues were mixed together. Both were critical to women's voting for Reagan at a rate 10 percentage points less than that of men in the general election, the AP-NBC News poll said.

After taking office, Reagan fulfilled his pledge to women and appointed Sandra Day O'Connor as the first woman on the Supreme Court.

That appointment didn't seem to do Reagan any good with women, particularly as the economy slipped into recession, failing to respond to his economic policies as quickly as predicted.

Reagan's economic policies have helped make housewives just about as negative about Reagan as women who work outside the home — the group that was the most opposed to him on Election Day 1980. The hopes housewives had for Reagan's economic policies have turned to disenchantment.

Although the economy is still the nation's No. 1 problem, the war and women's issues have not gone away for women. Polls still say more women than men worry that Reagan will get the country in war.

Women's views on Reagan have spilled over into this fall's elections at the states and local level, making the women's votes the big question mark for the GOP in the fall elections. A lot of Republican incumbent Senators and a governor or two are not doing well among women, various polls say.

That's a weakness that could spell defeat.

Voice Of Reason

During the turmoil of the 1950s and 1960s over segregation in the South, one of the clarion voices for reason was raised by Harry Golden, a rotund New York Jew who settled in Charlotte.

Through his humorous and literate tabloid, the Carolina Israelite, Golden poked fun at some of the foibles of segregation. His subscribers included scores of congressmen, half a dozen Supreme Court justices and editors of many of the nation's leading newspapers.

"I think the paper did some good," Golden said in an interview a few years before his death last year. "I think it helped change the mind of the South. I did it with humor. You can tell anybody anything if you make them smile. I found that out half a century ago from reading."

Golden had noted that, by a quirk of Southern mores, whites and blacks could mingle freely as long as everyone was standing but that segregation was required when they sat down. So, at the height of the agitation and turmoil that swept the South after a group of black college students sat down one afternoon in a Greensboro variety store and asked to be served, Golden came up with his Golden Vertical Plan.

At a time when Southern leaders like I. Beverely Lake were predicting that integration of restaurants and other public facilities would result in chaos, Golden made his tongue-in-cheek proposal. He suggested that lunch counter operators remove all the seats in their establishments. Then there would be no disputes over who could sit down and everyone would enjoy his coffee standing up.

For establishments that had separate water fourntains for whites and blacks, Golden proposed his Golden Out-Of-Order Plan. He suggested that operators place "out of order" signs on the fountains for whites. "You should have seen the whites (who) ... didn't want to drink the black water," he said.

And then there was the Golden Turban Plan which he came up with "when the Japanese were giving trouble by making a lot of textiles, so I wrote Governor (Luther) Hodges and told him, 'Start giving every Negro a turban. It takes four or five yards of material to make a turban, so the textile mills will be running day and night, and in this country a Negro in a turban can go anywhere.'"

During the early 1960s, civil rights activists — students, ministers and teachers — on their way to struggles in Selma, Ala., and elsewhere would put up overnight in Golden's home in Charlotte. Golden would give each of them $5 and an apple and let them sleep on the floor.

But "the humor has gone out of the civil rights movement," Golden said in a 1971 interview. "Now it's black power and Black Panthers. They (blacks) booed me and called me a reactionary at UCLA. Me, an oldtime socialist. I had told them that protest is one thing, but taking over administrators' offices by force is another, against the law, a crime ..."

Golden, who measured 5-feet-4 inches tall and weighed over 200 pounds, usually appeared in public with an infectious grin and a ready wit. But he had moments of discouragement.

Once he confided to listeners that "the racist mind will never change. Never. They never give up ... The courts don't change the hearts and minds of men, only their practices. Not once has there been a voluntary act of desegregatiosn. Not a governor or a mayor or a city councilman has gotten up in the morning and said, 'OK, we'll desegregate the swimming pool.' Not one voluntary act. The courts do it ..."

In 1968, Golden folded the Carolina Israelite. He noted that its circulation, which had reached 50,000 around 1960, had dropped to 14,000. He noted, too, that he and his initial readers had grown older and that, to the generation that followed, his "stories about the lower East Side are like stories about the moon."

Negativism For The Fun Of It

WASHINGTON (UPI) — There is a story, unsupported by anything but its persistence as political folklore, that Lyndon Johnson, then a senator, once instructed an aide to issue a press release accusing Johnson's opponent of a perverted sex practice.

According to the story, the horrified aide said, "But Senator, we haven't got any evidence that he does those kinds of things."

And, according to the story, LBJ grinned as wide as Texas and replied, "I know it. I just want to hear him deny it."

That story stays alive in part because it illustrates an extreme of "attack" or "negative" campaigning. The tactic is familiar and simple — attack your opponent and his record early and often. Keep him on the defensive throughout the campaign.

Those who use negative campaigning, and at some time nearly every politician has, always say it is necessary to inform the voters how bad a person or public official their opponent is. Those who are at the receiving end call it mudslinging, character assassination and distortion.

Negative campaigning certainly is not new to American politics. It probably began during the second term of George Washington, when the once-revered father of his country was suddenly being called by his critics a "tyrant and dictator" and accused of having "debauched" the nation.

Historian Stefan Lorant suggests it might have been that kind of rhetoric, rather than loftier motives of desiring to limit presidential tenure, that persuaded Washington to return to Mount Vernon after eight years.

In any case, negative campaigning almost always has been with us. In 1980, with the so-called "independent" political action committees in full flower, it was credited with replacing a number of liberal Democratic senators, including George McGovern, Birch Bayh, Frank Church and John Culver, by New Right conservatives.

Now comes V. Lance Tarrance, a political consultant and pollster of good reputation, with the word that negative campaigning is "most likely on the upswing in the United States" and offering some suggestions to candidates who intend to employ it.

"It can be rational and information-oriented," Tarrance said. "Voters today tend to be repulsed by anti-intellectual negatives, but attracted toward information-gathering types of television advertisements or those which tend to point out sharp differences between the candidates."

Tarrance provides a clear blueprint for any candidate who wants to go out and beat the stuffing out of an opponent with negative campaigning. What may be interesting to watch is whether some of the people who lost in 1980 to candidates using the Tarrance formula will in turn adopt the same tactics in 1982.

Record Soybean Crop

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina farmers will harvest a record crop of soybeans this year, the state Crop and Livestock Reporting Service predicts.

But flue-cured tobacco production is forecast at 651 million pounds, 14 percent less than last year. The lower production results from a 12 percent drop in acreage for harvest and and expected 3 percent crop in yield per acre, the crop reporting service said.

Burley tobacco is forecast at 27.5 million pounds, down 1 percent. Corn is forecast at 145 million bushels, 3 percent above last year. Peanuts are forecast at 412 million pounds, down 27 percent from last year's record 562 million pounds.

Based on conditions around Sept. 1, the soybean harvest in North Carolina should be about 54.6 million bushels, up 16 percent from 1981, the crop reporting service said. The average yield per acre is expected to tie the record 26 bushels set in 1969.

The bumper soybean crop is forcing prices down by at least $1 per bushel compared to earlier expectations, experts say.

"It may seem strange, but in the aggregate, you fare much better in a bad crop year than you do in a bumper crop year," said Clemson University agriculture economist Hal Harris. "The ideal situation is for everybody in the country to have a crop failure but you."

Soybeans are North Carolina's second-largest cash crop behind tobacco. Nationwide, the soybean crop is expected to be more than 2.3 billion bushels, up 14 percent.

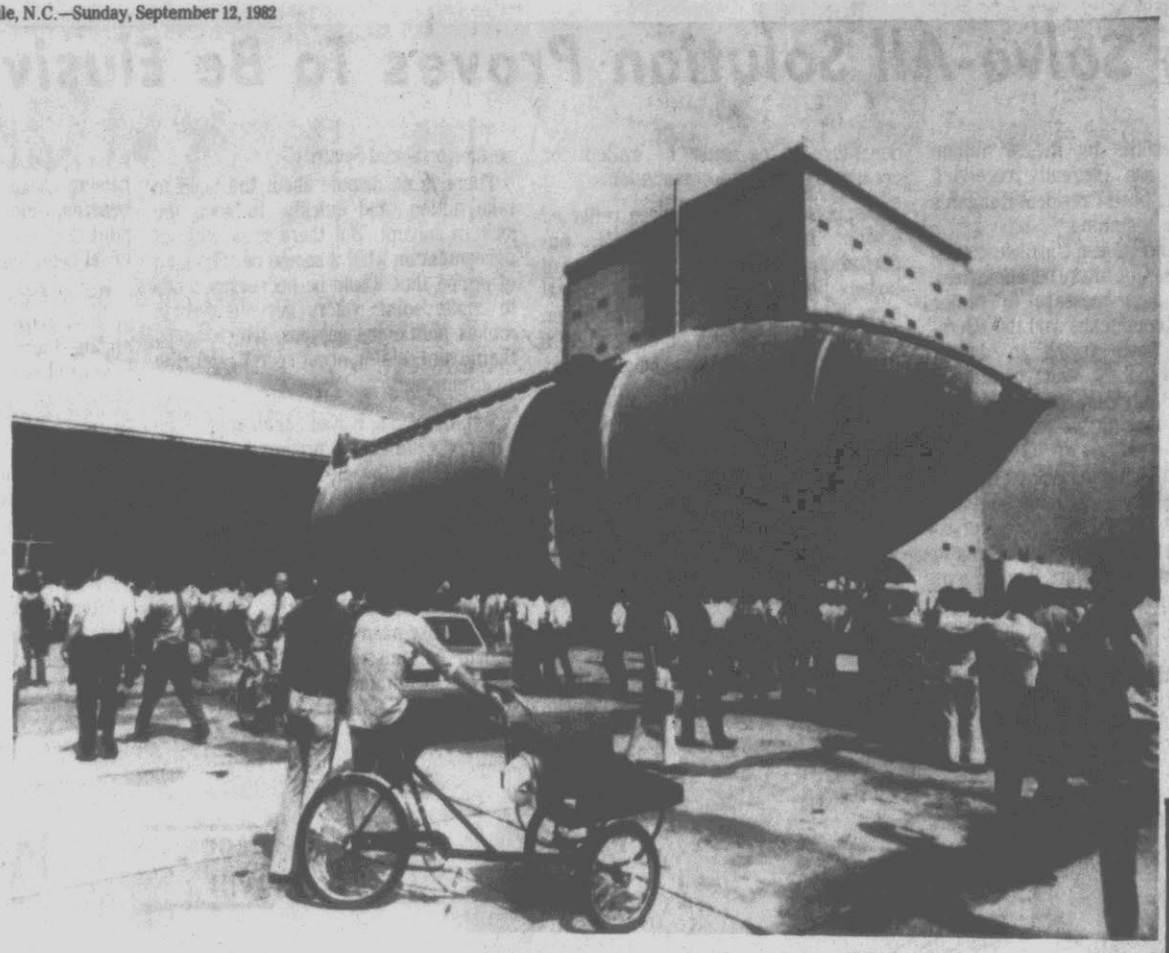

In the two previous years, droughts in North Carolina dried up production while prices were low.

"The problem here in the past has been that prices were low and we had nothing to sell," said Harris. "Now, all across the country, crop prospects are excellent, which in turn has lowered prices, because your demand is going to remain about the same."

The only wild card remaining for soybeans is the prospect for rain in the weeks remaining before the October harvest. The recent lack of rain could reduce yield by several bushels per acre.

"In the entire Southeast, there hasn't been a more favorable year weatherwise in history as we had this year," said Jim Wilder, executive vice president of the North Carolina Soybean Producers Association.

"But right now, we need rain rather badly — we're not desperate yet, because there's still some time to go before a general crisis situation sets in."

ROLLOUT — The first light weight version of the Space Shuttle external tank was rolled out Friday by its builder Martin Merietta Aerospace in New Orleans. The giant 66,824 pound tank is 10,000 pounds lighter than the one used on the first Shttle flight. For every pound the tank's weight is reduced, the Shuttle can cary nearly one additional pound of cargo into orbit. (AP Laserphoto)

Games Assuage Anger Of Pending Weddings

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Destroying video blips on the screens of "Pac Man," "Space Invaders" and other games may help some men deal with anger over their impending weddings, three Durham-area psychiatrists say.

The psychiatrists have coined a new medical term for the phenomenon — "Space Invader Obsession."

Drs. Douglas H. Finestone, Gordon K. Lavin and Donald R. Ross found the association while comparing notes on three men they had interviewed during their past several years as Duke Medical Center psychiatric residents.

All three patients, who were in psychotherapy for other reasons, began playing Space Invaders as often as 15 times a week during the weeks before their weddings, the doctors reported in a letter published in the current Journal of the American Medical Association.

One man actually delayed his honeymoon an hour to "get in a few more games," their letter said. Another began taking his fiancee on Space Invaders playing dates.

The third spent the hour before his psychotherapy sessions in zapping wave after wave of video-blip aliens — or, as the letter put it "blasting the little devils out of the sky."

"We believe that each man's obsession with playing Space Invaders was a means of handling his anger over a recent commitment to marriage," the doctors wrote. "In addition, because the player is ultimately defeated, the guilt over expressing his anger is relieved.

"We report our findings to alert others to the possibility of the expression of interpsychic and interpersonal conflicts through the obsessional playing of video games."

On Lookout For Checks

Greenville Police Chief Glenn Cannon warned local area merchants Saturday to be on the lookout for forged checks drawn on the accounty of Frank G. Vaughn Contractor.

Cannon said the checks, for Vaughn's accounty at First State Bank, were stolen from the contractor's 1801 Charles St. office September 6, and are imprinted with the numbers 4820 to 4840.

The chief noted that four of the checks, ranging in amounts from $200 to $300, have been passed to local merchants. Thoes check, he said, were made payable to "Herbert Becton" and bear Faughn's forged signature.

The person who cashed the checks at the A&P and Harris's Supermarkets, at Sears Roebuck & Co., and at White's Stores, also used Becton's drivers license as identification. However, Cannon said, the license was stolen in Wilson several weeks ago.

The four checks that have been recovered all were dated September 4, 1982.

Cannon said anyone receiving one of the checks should contact the police department.

Employee Hurt In Flash Fire

An employee of North American Fiberglass in the industrial park north of Greenville, received minor burns early Friday afternoon company officials said.

Don Fidler, a spokesman for the company, makers of Sea Ox boats, said Dorris Mullins of Greenville received minor burns to her hands and face when a spark ignited acetone vapors and a flash fire resulted.

The fire caused no damage and work in the plant resumed shortly after the explosion, Fiddler said.

REQUESTS APPROVED

Police Chief Glenn Cannon announced the approval of two requests for solicitation permits in Greenville.

The requests were submitted by: Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority Inc. to conduct a sidewalk and merchant solicitation from September through November; and by the John Ivey Smith Council No. 6600, Knights of Columbus, to conduct a merchant solicitation Oct. 8-16 to raise money for the mentally retarded and handicapped citizens.

More than 5,000 people were killed and 100,000 left homeless in 1943 by a World War II Allied raid on Kassel, Germany. German defense units had been lured away by a dummy raid by Allied planes on Frankfurt. More than 400 Allied planes dropped 2,000 tons of bombs, which destroyed over 65 percent of the city. All public utilities were knocked out and 155 factories were destroyed in the raid.

Debutantes Take Bows In Raleigh

RALEIGH — Accented with red roses, the stage in the Civic Center here was set — awaiting the start of the annual North Carolina Debutante Ball held Friday evening. The ball is sponsored by the Terpsichorean Club.

Mary Duke Sanders, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Marsh Sanders III of Raleigh, led the debutantes in forming the traditional cartwheel figure. She was escorted by Sydnor M. White Jr., chairman of the ball. Music for the presentation was presented by Wally Kinkamp and his orchestra.

Carolina Pringle Clement, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. James Edwin Clement of Greenville, and Sydney Eldridge Peel, daughter of Judge and Mrs. Elbert Sidney Peel Jr., were two of the assistant ball leaders this year. The assistant leaders and their escorts were introduced following Miss Sanders.

Other debutantes from Pitt and Martin counties included: Mary Tadlock Carson, daughter of Mrs. Barbara Davis Carson and Thomas Clayton Carson Jr. of Bethel; Mary Louise Nowell Crisp, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Sellers Luther Crisp of Greenville;

Anne Robbins Hardy, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Ira May Hardy II; and LuAnne O'Bannon, daughter of Mrs. James Turcotte and John N. O'Bannon Jr., all of Greenville; and Robin Rhea Rogers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Morris Rogers of Williamston.

After the formal presentation, a dance was held at the Carolina Country Club where music was presented by the Catalinas.

It was a busy weekend for the debutantes, their families and marshals. Registration Thursday was followed by a rehearsal at the Civic Center and a cocktail party honoring the debutantes and their parents at the Carolina Country Club that evening.

Mothers of the girls were honored at a brunch given by the Honorary Chairmam, Dr. Annie Louise Wilkerson at the Carolina Country Club. The debutantes and their fathers attended a champagne brunch at the Angus Barn.

Three groups — North Tower, the Castaways and Jerry Butler — provided music for dancing Saturday morning at the Carolina Country Club. The Dynamic Upsetters and Shortwave teamed up for entertainment Saturday evening at the Radisson Plaza Hotel.

For her presentation, Miss Clement chose a silk faced satin gown designed by Ron Lo Vece. The off-the-shoulder natural bodice gown was appliqued with budded Venise lace extending onto the full sweep train. A box pleat at the front and back waistline accented the gown.

Miss Peel selected a formal gown of ivory peau de soie fashioned with a V-neckline and sleeveless bodice with a straight skirt. The gown was completed with an all lace tunic which was designed with split sleeves accented with self-fabric buttons on the shoulder.

Miss Carson wore a white gown of schiffli lace, pearls and sequins designed by Bianchi. The camisole neckline, edged with lace, created a light scalloped edging to accent the sleeveless bodice. The two-tiered skirt, gathered at the natural waistline, was designed in a bouffant silhouette. The hemline, edged with lace, created a scalloped effect.

The debutante gown of Miss Crisp was styled with a scooped neckline and slight off-the-shoulder with a bodice of hand-run alencon lace on English net enhanced by clusters of seed pearls and iridescent sequins. The skirt was of peau de soie with an appliqued border which matched the bodice.

Miss Hardy wore her mother's wedding dress which was made of white silk organdy fashioned with a scooped neckline outlined with appliqued re-embroidered alencon lace which formed the short sleeves. The flared skirt featured matching lace motifs appliqued on the skirt and embroidered with seed pearls.

A gown fashioned by Bianchi of peau de soie was selected by Miss O'Bannon. The gown was styled with an empire bodice of pearl embroidered alencon lace. It had an off-shoulder neckline and puff sleeves.

Miss Rogers wore a designed gown styled with a high scooped neckline enhanced by seed pearls. The bodice was of hand-run alencon lace and the flowing A-line skirt was of silk crepe.

Violent Crime Up 7 Percent

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Violent crime rose 7 percent during the first six months of 1982 compared with the same period in 1981, state officials say.

Statistics compiled by the North Carolina Police Information Network show that reports of violent crimes of murder, rape, robbery and aggravated assault rose 8 percent in urban areas and 5 percent in rural areas.

Total reported crime in the state rose 2 percent from 1981 to 1982, according to the figures released by network director Willian C. Corley and state Attorney General Rufus Edmisten.

Robbery rose 13 percent and aggravated assault rose 7 percent while murder dropped 4 percent and rape dropped 5 percent, the report says.

However, murder increased 13 percent in major cities and 43 percent in rural towns. Arrests for murder — as opposed to reports of murder — rose 15 percent statewide.

Property crimes — burglary, larceny and motor vehicle theft — were up 1 percent statewide. Arson dropped 14 percent from the first six months of 1981 to 1982.

The report says highway robbery increased 34 percent while pickpocketing droped 30 percent during the period.

Charlotte had the largest increase in reported crimes during the period with 17 percent. The city had 1,972 violent crimes during the first six months of 1982, compared with 1,441 during the same period in 1981.

High Point had a 15 percent increase in reported crimes, followed by Rocky Mount with 12 percent, Greenville with 11 percent, Burlington with 10 percent, Durham with 7 percent, Fayetteville with 7 percent, Raleigh with 5 percent and Goldsboro with 2 percent.

Votes To Study Merger

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Delegates to the 36th annual North Carolina State Employees Association convention Saturday voted overwhelmingly to reopen a study of a merger with the N.C. State Government Employees Association.

If the NCSEA, with 25,000 members, joined the NCSGEA, with 13,000 members, the result would be the second largest state employees association in the nation behind California.

The NCSGEA rejected such a merger several years ago, but the organization plans to reconsider a possible merger at its own convention in two weeks, officials said.

Also on Saturday, the NCSEA defeated a proposal to form a political action committee with powers to support candidates for state office. The association has a political action committee, but its powers are limited to educating its members about political issues.

The group approved a resolution calling for the 10th step in the merit pay plan, for two additional days of sick leave and for a better-defined policy on employee layoffs.

On Friday, Gov. Jim Hunt said he moved too quickly when he advised a trustee board to reduce medical insurance benefits for state employees.

"Next year is a year when a fair raise is absolutely essential," Hunt told 500 delegates in a speech.

Also Friday, delegates passed a resolution calling for a minimum across-the-board pay increase of 25 percent in the 1983-85 biennium.

Emmett Burden, the association's executive director, told the convention its resolution could cost the state $750 million.

"I don't know what the Legislature's attitude would be on this," he said.

Hunt recommended last month to trustees of the Teachers' and State Employees' Comprehensive Major Medical Plan that out-of-pocket liability for state employees be increased from $200 to $650 because of an estimated $11 million shortfall in legislative funding.

But two days after the trustees accepted the recommendation, Hunt halted the change and said he would wait for the involvement of the General Assembly in 1983.

"We moved too quickly on the health insurance matter without adequately consulting you and your leadership. I admit that, and I regret that," he said.

Hunt also warned that the new plan, which replaced a service provided by Blue Cross-Blue Shield of North Carolina, faced hard decisions because of an estimated $60 million shortfall by next year.

Town Honors Civil War Hero

By TRUDY TYNAN
Associated Press Writer

CHESTERFIELD, Mass. (AP) — North met South again Saturday in this tiny New England town to honor a Civil War hero who was mailed the nation's highest military honor in a brown paper bag.

Pentagon brass bounced through country lanes in jeeps. More than 50 Medal of Honor winners invited by the town — the largest gathering of them since the Kennedy administration — sampled home-cooked chicken dinners. Hundreds of schoolchildren and Civil War buffs swelled the community of 100 people, so small it doesn't even have a Main Street.

All were determined to right the century-old slight to the town's only Medal of Honor winner, blacksmith Samuel Eddy.

Saturday's agenda included a re-enactment of the battle of Sayler's Creek, Va., where Eddy showed his valor.

In a cow pasture beneath the Berkshire Hills, bloodied by the leaves of early-turning maples, several hundred "Confederates" from such diverse spots as Oklahoma, Georgia and New Hampshire donned gray uniforms, ready to lose.

There were even Rebs from Canada — Britain had supported the South during the war. They had spent the night with their feet sticking out of Civil War-style pup tents as their compatriots from below the Mason-Dixon line sought warmer quarters.

As history foretold, the Confederates in the mock battle were routed Saturday by the Army of the Potomac while several thousands spectators, mostly Yankees, cheered. Antique artillery thundered over a band of "war correspondents" hunkered down in a cornfield.

Sunday's highlight is a military parade of 3,500 marchers down a narrow country lane. The Medal of Honor will then be presented to Eddy's 82-year-old granddaughter, Eurma Towei, in more fitting ceremonies, including an 18-gun salute by antique cannon, in front of the combination funeral home-post office.

And the Savannah Volunteers' battle flag, captured by Massachusetts troops at Sayler's Creek and discovered several years ago in a Pittsfield attic, will be formally returned to the state of Georgia. Officials say it is one of the few times, if not the first, that the government has returned a Secessionist flag.

"This is something special," said Lynn Bull, commander of the Union camp, who comes from the unlikely spot of Richmond, Va. "We have put on a lot of skirmishes, but this is one of the few to actually honor a Civil War veteran. This town will never see anything like it again."

"I feel it is an honor to come up here," said Desmond Doss, 63, of Lookout Mountain, Tenn., one of the Medal of Honor recipients taking took part in the festivities. "I hestitated to come up because of my hearing, but I wanted to show respect for the deceased."

Doss, 63, a conscientious objector who entered World War II as a medic, won the medal for rescuing wounded comrades on Okinawa.

At a prayer service before the battle, Ronald Ray, president of the Congressional Medal of Honor Society, asked for a moment of silence for "those who are not here."

"My sons will know there is no glory in war, but the grave," said Ray, 41, of Auburndale, Fla., who won the Medal of Honor in the Vietnam war.

School Teaches Crafts

By ELISSA McCRARY
Associated Press Writer

PENLAND, N.C. (AP) — Rebka Kauffman sits in the afternoon sun pressing wet-clay handles onto a row of cups she has shaped by hand.

With her smock daubed with streaks of gray clay, Ms. Kauffman concentrates on melding the sculpted handles to the cups before the clay dries out.

Ms. Kauffman, 24, an architect by profession, has spent four weeks this summer and two months last year at an isolated school in the Blue Ridge Mountains learning to "hand-build" clay. She calls her ceramics study "an invaluable learning experience."

"This is the kind of course you can't get in the city," said Ms. Kauffman of Madison, Wis. "The atmosphere of being isolated in the mountains with nothing to do but concentrate on art is overwhelming. Everywhere you look here there is some kind of art going on."

Ms. Kauffman is one of about 100 students who enroll at Penland School of Crafts every summer. Since its founding in 1929, the school has become a mecca for artists from all over the country. Penland offers courses in every field of crafts, including ceramics, weaving, glassblowing, metalworking and photography.

It is the oldest and largest school of its kind in the United States.

Penland School got its start as the project of a Penland woman, Lucy Morgan, who wanted to preserve the mountain tradition of handweaving and, in the process, provide poor area women with additional income. Miss Morgan's program grew until 60 Penland weavers were marketing their products in nearby resort hotels. Their weavings were displayed at the 1933 World's Fair in Chicago.

The school began accepting students in 1929, with students paying $1 a day for tuition, room and board.

Today Penland School consists of 45 rustic buildings located on 400 acres of undeveloped mountain land about 55 miles from Asheville. The school, a non-profit educational institution, attracts students from every state and 60 foreign countries. Its faculty is made up top craftsmen, who are paid $60 a week.

Bob Brown, who replaced "Miss Lucy" as director of the school 20 years ago, says the school's reputation keeps faculty members and alumni coming back year after year.

"Faculty members work for practically nothing to come here," said Brown, who left his job at Maine's Haystack School of Crafts to take over Penland's operation. "The energy around here is incredible. The faculty works with the students on almost a one-to one basis. That's what is such a joy about teaching here."

Brown, an energetic gray-haired man in tennis shoes, blue work shirt and khaki pants, is the school's only administrator. His rambling house, located just down the road from the school, is filled with art work made by craftsman at the school.

During his stay at Penland, Brown, a former design professor, has been responsible for persuading dozens of his former colleagues to teach at the school.

Brown says faculty members give about $80,000 of their time a year teaching at Penland, where the average class size is 10 students.

Penland prides itself on being an "adventure in learning," Brown says. The nearest town, the hamlet of Spruce Pine, is located six miles away by way of narrow, curving roads, so Penland students tend to spend most of their time on campus. Studios are kept open round the clock and students are allowed to work all night.

"People never sleep around here," Brown said. "They're hammering away on their metal sculptures or cutting glass or clicking away on the looms. Once they get here, there just aren't enough hours in the day for what they want to do."

Meals are served in the school's dining hall and students are housed on campus. Entertainment is provided by visiting bluegrass bands, nightly crafts films and work.

"When I first got here, I looked around for the swimming pool and the golf course," Ms. Kauffman said. "I wasn't at all sure I was going to like it, isolated with a bunch of people I didn't know with nothing else to do and nowhere to go. But the isolation works. You become one big family with the same goals.

"The wonderful thing is that we're all here because we want to be, we're all here for the same purpose — to learn," she added.

Penland accepts students from 18 to 80 on a first-come, first-served basis. A serious desire to learn a craft skill is the only requirement. The school offers two- and three-week summer sessions and an eight-week "concentration" course each spring and fall.

The school shuts down from the end of November until mid-March.

Brown spends most of his year trying to figure out how to keep the school running on a small budget made tighter by the sagging economy. The school is one of the state's art resource centers, which means it receives some state funds, but Penland depends on donations to keep its doors open.

"I don't believe in five-year plans," Brown said. "I just take Miss Lucy's advice and try to keep it open just one more day."

Money brought in by crafts donated to the school's gift shop by students and faculty goes to Penland's scholarship fund.

Meanwhile, artists like Cynthia Bringle seem to find the lure of Penland irresistable. Ms. Bringle, a ceramics instructor, started teaching at Penland in 1964 at Brown's urging. In 1970, she moved from Memphis and set up her ceramics studio about half a mile from the campus.

"I got tired of leaving," she said. "I decided if I loved the place so much, I should just move here.

Holding Three Youths In Torture-Slaying

By WALTER PUTNAM
Associated Press Writer

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Nutrition professor Howard Appledorf became a frightened man after befriending three young drifters, a friend says.

Appledorf, 41, who made a name for himself by defending junk food, was found murdered a week ago in his condominium near the University of Florida campus.

Charged in the torture-slaying are the three youths, who authorities allege repaid Appledorf's hospitality with thievery, threats and death.

Police in Gainesville gave the names of two of the youths as Gary McNichol, 21, and Paul Everson, 18. The third, age 15, is from Woodbury, Conn. Police said the three were using aliases, and they were still uncertain of McNichol's proper name.

According to State Attorney Eugene Whitworth, the three were charged last month with uttering a forgery after they tried to cash a $900 check in Appledorf's name. But they were released Sept. 2 after Appledorf agreed to defer prosecution, the prosecutor said.

The three had threatened to tell reporters that the bachelor professor was a homosexual, Whitworth said. Appledorf denied this, but said he would drop the charges if the three would not make any statements about him to the media and would leave Florida.

Instead of leaving the state, however, they returned and broke into Appledorf's apartment, police say.

The break-in was noticed Sept. 4 by a neighbor, who called police. They found Appledorf's body face up on a couch with his head covered by a canvas bag, pillows and sheets. The bag had been filled with ice, police said.

There were four places set, with submarine sandwiches on paper plates. At one was a sign that said: "Howard, wish you were here."

Among the messages written in peanut butter and barbecue sauce on the walls were: "Red-rum," or "murder" spelled backwards, and "Howard, we love you sincerely. The Sleaze Sisters."

An alert was put out for the three youths, and the trail picked up in New York City. Two homosexual men in an East Side bar overheard the three "discussing incidents that led them to believe they were involved in the murder," said New York police investigator Steve Kelly.

They were subsequently arrested, McNichol after a 100-mph chase through Manhattan in Appledorf's stolen car, police said. They were returned to Gainesville on Thursday and held without bond awaiting grand jury action this week.

Everson had been arrested in April in New York City on charges of loitering for prostitution, and had been wanted on a warrant for failing to appear to pay a fine, New York City police said. They had no record for the other two men.

Friends said Appledorf had met one of the three in California, and that the youth appeared in Gainesville in late August with his two friends. They stayed at Appledorf's apartment that night, but were gone the next morning.

Then came the check forgery.

One friend, retired school teacher Peter Fresneda, said one of the young men called Appledorf from jail and asked him to post bail on the check forgery charges. Appledorf refused. He then received another call, threatening him unless he put up the money, Fresneda said.

"He was a frightened man," Fresneda said. Appledorf intended to change locks on his house, but he was too late, Fresneda said.

The food science professor had taught one of the most popular courses at the University of Florida. In the 1970s, he took on the burgeoning health food industry, making appearances on radio and television talk shows with his contention that even junk food could be nutritious.

Appledorf had scores of friends in this college town who knew him affectionately as Doc.

"All of the kids liked him," said Tom Donnelly, a former student who works at the Red Lion, the professor's favorite bar. "His was the type of class you took because of the teacher."

Appledorf's mother, Mae Malin of Gulfport, Fla., held a private service at her home Wednesday. The body was cremated with the ashes to be scattered over a lake.

Session Fulfilled Promises

By PHIL BROWN
Associated Press Writer

PEKING (AP) — The Communist Party closed its 12th National Congress Saturday, saying it had fulfilled its promise to give China a stronger leadership that combined "long-tested comrades" with competent younger people.

Delegates representing the 39-million-member party made provisions to assure a smooth transition to the younger generation and expressed revulsion with one-man rule like that of the late Chairman Mao Tse-tung.

But it also retained many elderly leaders in top posts in "the great interest of our party and country" — including 78-year-old master politician Deng Xiaoping, who has been China's most powerful leader since Mao's death in 1976.

Deng and other members of the new party Central Committee are expected to meet Sunday to select the committee's general secretary. Observers say the certain choice is 67-year-old Hu Yoabang, personally picked by Deng last year to take over the now-abolished post of party chairman.

Reworking of the party leadership was demanded by Deng and others who said Mao's one-man rule had left China without a guarantee that its aging leaders will be able to transfer power to qualified successors.

One sign of revulsion with Mao's rule was the abolition of the chairmanship.

Culture Minister Zhu Muzhi, spokesman for the National Congress, said more than two-thirds of the 210 Central Committee members now are under 60, while only 16 are over 70.

He said the proportion of professional specialists on the committee increased from 2.7 percent to 17 percent, while 31 members and alternates, or 8.9 percent, are from minority nationalities and 24, or 6.9 percent, are women. There are 138 committee alternates.

Zhu confirmed that Deng will head the newly created, 172-member Central Advisory Commission. It is a body of elders that party leaders said was set up to "guide younger comrades and pass on experience to them."

This means Deng was assured of re-election by the Central Committee to the party's inner circle, the Standing Committee of the Politburo, because only a Standing Committee member can be the chairman of the advisory commission.

The policy-making Central Committee handles party affairs when the congress is not in session and the Politburo handles day-to-day affairs.

The last National Congress, held one year after Mao's death and with his chosen successor Hua Guofeng in charge, praised Mao's radical class-struggle policies and called for more "cultural revolutions."

Few Issues Resolved

By ANN JOB WOOLLEY
Associated Press Writer

HIGHLAND PARK, Mich. (AP) — Chrysler Corp. has not responded to the United Auto Workers union's economic proposals, forcing union bargainers to operate in the dark, UAW President Douglas A. Fraser said Saturday.

"The problem is we don't know what the company is thinking," Fraser said during a break in the bargaining. "In the absence of any proposal whatsoever from the company, we're operating in the dark."

Fraser said the company has not responded to the union's demand for a wage increase, reinstatement of cost-of-living allowance payments and a one-year contract for wages and fringe benefits. He added that work was continuing on health care issues.

Company officials were not available for comment during the break Saturday.

In a statement released earlier Saturday, Fraser called the progress slow.

"The parties are still apart on an approach to dealing with health care costs and on basic economics," the statement said.

Fraser had told reporters late Friday that "We have only 10 percent of the non-economics done and none of the economics (done). We want to get down to just 15 issues ... as late as Monday."

The current contract, covering 43,200 U.S. autoworkers plus another 40,000 on indefinite layoff, expires midnight Tuesday.

The talks, under way since July 20, have been held up by company demands that autoworkers share medical costs through co-payments and deductibles, union officials say.

Fraser repeated the UAW's rejection of co-payments and deductibles but said a new idea — giving workers several alternative health care plans — is being discussed.

"It would pay doctors so much for the care of each patient," Fraser said. "The theory is he won't unnecessarily send you to the hospital" because it would come out of the doctor's fee.

He said he could not estimate the savings, but added that Chrysler could save $68 per month per employee if the workers all joined the less-costly health maintenance organizations. However, the union wants its members to be able to choose the organization they join, Fraser said.

The company's chief negotiator, Thomas Miner, would say only that Chrysler has consulted with its current health insurer, Blue Cross Blue Shield. He added that the automaker continues to press for health care changes because this year's cost of $337 million is too high.

Fraser also said the union submitted a pension proposal and a formula for reinstatement of cost-of-living allowance payments but he did not elaborate.

Autoworkers at Chrysler average $9.07 per hour in wages — about $2.60 an hour less than their counterparts at General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co. Chrysler workers lost cost of living protection and 3 percent annual wage boost in 1981 because of concessions demanded by the federal Loan Guarantee Board. The board guaranteed $1.5 billion in loans so the automaker could stave off bankruptcy.

Greensboro Police Fired

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A civil rights group wants to question Greensboro Police Chief W.E. Swing after the chief fired five police officers for alleged drug use.

The North Carolina Advisory Committee to the U.S. Civil Rights Commission announced Friday it would try to question Swing on the way the investigation into the allegations was conducted.

Committee officials said that if they were not satisfied with Swing's responses, they will ask the U.S. Department of Justice to investigate.

Swing fired the five on Friday and suspended another officer pending a hearing. The actions bring to 13 the number of police officers who have been suspended or fired since Aug. 16 for allegedly using illegal drugs both on and off duty. Ten of those officers are black.

The number of black officers in the department has been reduced from 47 to 37, prompting some people to say that the drug investigation was racially motivated.

Michael Lee, a black Greensboro attorney and a member of the committee, asked for the intervention by the state civil rights panel.

"This so-called investigation has taken an unusually long time to complete and has taken place under some rather suspicious circumstances," he said. "It appears that some of the officers, who have now been suspended or dismissed, are also plaintiffs in an action against the city of Greensboro and the Greensboro Police Department alleging discrimination," he said.

Five of the 13 officers are among 26 past and present black police officers who filed a federal desegregation case against the department in 1978. The case is pending in U.S. Middle District Court.

Higher Black Death Rate

By ROBERT LOCKE
AP Science Writer

SEATTLE (AP) — American blacks are less likely than whites to survive a bout with cancer and a surgeon who works in Harlem said Saturday the difference seems rooted in poverty.

"The bottom line of this problem seems to be socio-economic rather than race," said Dr. Harold Freeman, chief of surgery at Harlem Hospital Center in New York.

"It becomes racial because there are more poor people among some ethnic groups," he said, adding that more than a third of blacks are below poverty level compared to 11 percent of whites.

Freeman said he spent the past 15 years in Harlem and worked before that in middle-class Manhattan, "so I have had a chance to compare the two and there was a striking difference."

He said only one in five cancer patients survived at the turn of the century. In 1982, "nearly half of patients with cancer survive five years. This is a tremendous achievement, but there are segments of the population that still live as though they are back in 1900. Where I work is one of those areas."

Freeman told a session of the 13th International Cancer Congress that once cancer is diagnosed, most people of all incomes receive good treatment. But, he said, "socio-economic differences ...lead to later diagnosis of the disase" and therefore limit success of treatment.

He specifically cited three cancers — of the breast, cervix, and colon — for which diagnostic tests are effective and routinely used by middle-class patients.

"But when survival priorities include whether you are going to even eat on a given day, those priorities take precedence," he said. Many impoverished people, therefore, see doctors only with serious emergencies and rarely receive diagnostic tests.

Freeman also noted that Medicaid, which finances medical care for the poor, does not pay for routine screening.

Freeman said the cancer survival rate of blacks is 11 percent less than the national figure.

While 60 percent of all Americans survive five years after breast cancer, the rate among his "nearly all black and poor" patients in Harlem is about 30 percent, he said.

"For colon cancer, 19 percent of Harlem patients live five years, compared to about 50 percent throughout the country."

He said the cure rate for cervical cancer is about 57 percent for all Americans, but for 48 percent for all American blacks.

"That's nearly a 10 percent difference in a disease for which we do have an answer" — the Pap smear gynecologists routinely do on their frequent patients.

Because the biggest problem is getting the poor of any race to seek diagnostic tests that could save their lives, the Harlem hospital is trying "outreach from the inside." Freeman said patients who show up at the emergency room with non-cancer problems are automatically tested for certain cancers if at higher risk because of sex or age.

After two years "with some success," the concept should be tried on a broader scale, Freeman said.

He also stressed the need for education among impoverished groups, but warned it must take account of ethnic and cultural differences.

Cargill Urges Keep Contracts

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The United States should honor contracts to sell grain to the Soviet Union, the chief executive of a major grain exporter said Saturday.

Whitney MacMillan, chairman of the board of Cargill Inc. of Minneapolis, said contract sanctity, better export promotion and free world trade are the keys to restoring export growth and strengthening farm prices and incomes.

The American share of the world feed grains market has fallen about 10 percent in the last decade, MacMillan said in remarks prepared for delivery to the annual membership meeting of the North Carolina Agribusiness Council

"At the time of the Carter embargo, the Soviet Union was looking to U.S. sources for 75 percent of its grain imports," he said. "A year later, the Soviet Union had expanded its total food imports by one-third, while reducing its dependence on the United States to about 30 percent.

"To help restore our reputation for reliability, the government should agree to exempt existing grain export sales contracts from future export controls," he said.

"There may be circumstances in which the president must act to protect vital national interests. But unless we face a declared national emergency, export commitments for a given period into the future should go forward."

MacMillan said the United States could promote general trade interests and agricultural exports through a larger commitment to technology transfer.

"We must teach industrializing nations how to use feed grains and protein meal to improve diets by producing low-cost meat, milk and eggs," he said.

In an era of budget-cutting, these programs will depend increasingly on funding from farmers and industry, rather that from taxpayers, MacMillan said.

He also said many of the nation's trading partners are moving toward greater use of direct and indirect trade barriers in an attempt to protect domestic agricultural interests.

"We must be careful in responding to these kinds of trade problems," he said. "Proposals to fight protectionism with our own protectionism can only work against everyone's best interests. Calls for trade reciprocity or subsidy wars could undermine hard-won commitments to free trade already in existence."

Commission Urges Mowing

The Environmental Advisory Commission, meeting Thursday, discussed the proposed use of a chemical agent for weed control on city-owned vacant lots.

The EAC recommended that mowing of the lots be continued until more information on the chemical proposal is available. The board suggested that Terry Oglethorpe, city arborist, attend the next EAC meeting to elaborate on existing needs related to weed control.

The commission also reviewed potential environmental impacts associated with the four-laning of Highway 264 east of Greenville.

In other business, the commission received copies of the historic preservation report prepared by Kate Ohno. Staff liaison Skip Browder was asked to contact the N.C. Division of Archives and History for an update on progress regarding the agency's eventual occupation of the Robert Lee Humber house here.

The EAC meets on the second Thursday of each month at 5:30 p.m. in the first floor conference room at city hall.

Record Enrollment

East Carolina University officials announced a record enrollment of 13,300 students on campus for the fall semester.

The officials said the previous high enrollment for a semester was 13,264 for the fall of 1981.

The REACH support group for family members of the mentally ill and emotionally disturbed will be held Monday at 8 p.m. in the First Presbyterian Church here.

First All-Hispanic Unit Is Hit

SAN DIEGO (AP) — They call themselves "Los Marineros," Spanish for sailors.

They're the men of Company 116, the Navy's first all-Hispanic recruit company. And they wound up eight weeks of boot camp here Saturday with higher grades than the seven other companies at the Naval Training Center.

The flag they carried was the flag of their native Los Angeles. Instead of drills to the cadence of "one, two and three," they chanted "uno, dos, tres."

The 63-man company was formed in hope that more Spanish-speaking Americans will join the Navy. Three percent of the Navy's enlisted personnel are Spanish-speaking, compared with a national population of 8 percent.

Wholly voluntary, it was the first Navy recruit company comprised of a single ethnic group, spokesmen say.

The Marine Corps formed an all-Navajo boot company at the San Diego recruit depot last year. There have been all-Hawaii, all-New Mexico and all-Texas companies at the Navy's training center in recent months.

"In Los Angeles over the past number of years, about 8 percent of our recruits have been of Hispanic descent," said a recruiter, Cmdr. Wally Logan. "That area has a large Hispanic population so we must have been doing something wrong.

"We thought an all-Hispanic company out of Los Angeles would interest others in joining the Navy."

Apparently it has. Among 320 young men and women who enlisted from greater Los Angeles last month, 73, or 23 percent, were of Hispanic descent.

Seaman Recruit Sam Martinez, 24, worked in a liquor store before signing up and didn't like the idea of being in Company 116 at first.

After living in Los Angeles since birth, he "wanted to meet people from around the world," Martinez said before Saturday's graduation ceremony. But now, he says, "I haven't regretted the decision at all."

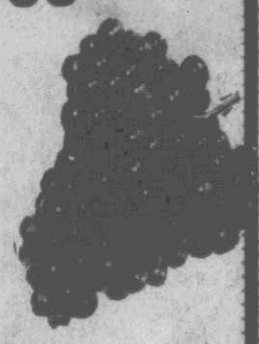

A majority of the men speak Spanish. Their company commanders were bilingual, barking out commands in two languages. Close friendships were formed from the start.

The experiment in Company 116 has been so successful, according to Lt. Cmdr.

N.C. State Slips By East Carolina

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

RALEIGH — First game mistakes, breakdowns in the pass defense, and a few wrong decisions cost East Carolina's Pirates a chance at an upset victory over N.C. State Saturday night.

Riding Tol Avery's two touchdown passes and his run for another, the Wolfpack gained a hard-fought 33-26 victory that wasn't insured until the final two and a half minutes.

East Carolina, trailing 33-18, rallied to pull within seven, and recovered an on-side kick before Perry Williams intercepted a Greg Stewart pass with 2:31 left to seal the win.

Avery passed to Ricky Wall for two scores, of 18 and 56 yards — both beating corner back Clint Harris, and ran for a one-yarder. Joe McIntosh, last year's ACC Rookie of the Year, ran for 11 yards for another TD, and kicker Mike Cofer hit field goals of 41 and 35 yards and made three extra points to account for the State scoring.

Freshman Jeff Heath kicked field goals of 37 and 22 yards to get the Pirate offense started, while Stewart hit a 3 yarder to Ricky Nichols. Kevin Ingram ran 11 yards for another touchdown, while freshman Tony Baker got the other from two yards out.

Before 55,200 — the second largest crowd in NCS history — the Wolfpack was outdistanced in total offense by the Pirates, 366 to 272. Earnest Byner led the Pirate rushing with 60 yards while Baker added 59. Stewart hit six of 16 passes for 133 yards, but had three picked off. Ingram was three of six for 42 yards.

Most of State's offense came on Avery's eight of 14 for 182 yards. McIntosh rushed for 118 yards on 34 carries.

"They outplayed us and they deserved to win," ECU coach Ed Emory said in the dressing rooms. "We hurt ourselves some: with the kicking game and some poor play in the secondary.

"I'm just very disappointed. I really thought that we could beat them by two touchdowns. There was nothing in my mind that said that State could beat us and I still think we have a chance to be a good football team."

Emory said that mistakes in the secondary gave State two of its touchdowns, and set up a field goal with another.

"State's a better team than it was last year, but I'm hurt by not winning. I bleed for East Carolina, for Ed Emory and for these players. There's never been a team that has worked as hard to get the job done as they guys have.

"We were confident. The players were confident. I never thought that they'd score 33 points against us. But we helped them with the kicking game (one blocked punt and one off the side of rookie John Williams' foot). I've got to be happy with Jeff Heath though for his play as a freshman, and Tony Baker did a good job for a freshman."

Emory said that he thought it was difficult to open against a team like State, after the Wolfpack had already played a game. "But that's the way the schedule is and we can't change it."

Across the field, State Coach Monte Kiffin praised the Pirates. "I think they did a great job on offense. They kept us off balance with the option and passing. But that was a long way from a shutout this week. I'll tell you something: they've got a great defensive football team. They hit you and when they hit you, they have ten guys there.

"We could not run on them," he added. "That's sure a lot better football team than has played here the last two years."

State jumped on the scoreboard first, helped along by two big penalties against the Pirates after some confusion on a fumble just seconds earlier.

After ECU had held State on its opening possession, the Pirates got the ball in good field position at the ECU 46, but on second down, Stewart fumbled, and although Baker fell on the ball, the officials at first awarded it to State. After some confusion, they finally straightened it out, giving it back to the Pirates, but two plays later, Eric Williams blocked Williams' first collegiate punt and State had it at the Pirate 49.

It took only three plays to get the ball in the end zone. Avery hit McIntosh for 12 yards on second down, and the Pirates were penalized for roughing Avery, then had a half-the-distance penalty for a dead ball defensive clip. That put it on the 11, and from there McIntosh cut over right tackle for the score and Cofer's kick made it 7-0 with 11:08 showing.

Later in the period, the Pirates drove for their first field goal, a 37-yarder by the freshman Heath with 3:24 left. On

Evert Lloyd Captures 6th U.S. Open Championship

NEW YORK (AP) — While Chris Evert Lloyd is thinking about history, she's busy rewriting it on the tennis courts. John McEnroe lost his chance at joining her in the record books.

Lloyd, the winningest woman in U.S. Open history, captured her sixth singles title Saturday, disposing of Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia 6-3, 6-1 in just 64 minutes.

"The first time you win Wimbledon or the U.S. Open is really a thrill," she said, "but I appreciate and maybe have a place in history by winning a sixth, so I can understand that a little bit better."

McEnroe saw his bid for a fourth straight men's crown disappear when he was stopped by his nemesis, Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia, 6-4, 6-4, 7-6. McEnroe's three consecutive championships were the most since Bill Tilden captured six straight U.S. national titles from 1920-25.

Lendl's sixth straight victory over McEnroe, dating to the quarterfinals of the French Open in May 1981, sends him against Jimmy Connors, who is seeking his fourth U.S. Open title in Sunday's nationally televised final (CBS). Connors eliminated Guillermo Vilas of Argentina 6-1, 3-6, 6-2, 6-3.

Lloyd now has won 66 matches in America's premiere tennis event, the most ever for a woman. She has won the singles title in six of the last eight years and has reached at least the semifinals in each of the 12 years she has competed here.

Only two women have won more U.S. Open titles — Molla Mallory with eight from 1915 to 1926 and Helen Wills Moody with seven from 1923 to 1931.

"I'm not driven by it," Lloyd insisted when asked if being in tennis history compelled her to victory. "When I was younger, I never thought about it. I was just playing for that year.

"I know my time is limited. It gets tougher mentally every year. I think about history more and more.

"I was in kind of a trance out there because I wanted it so badly," she added.

The 20-year-old Mandlikova, losing to Lloyd in the final for the second time in three years, said she's looking forward to when the 27-year-old Lloyd retires.

"She said that (she was thinking of retiring) after the 1981 finals, and I said, 'Oh, God, I am so happy.' But she's

Blackledge Throws 4 TDs In 39-31 Win

Penn State Outscores Maryland

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — Quarterback Todd Blackledge threw four touchdown passes for the second straight week as he rallied seventh-ranked Penn State to a 39-31 victory over Maryland Saturday in a college football game.

After Penn State fell behind 24-23 late in the third quarter, Blackledge led a drive of 78 yards that was capped with a 23-yard touchdown pass to Greg Garrity. The Nittany Lions tried a pass for a two-point conversion that was complete, but fell short of the goal.

Blackledge then directed the Nittany Lions 60 yards in five plays, throwing 10 yards to Kenny Jackson in the end zone for a 36-24 lead in the final period.

Maryland had come from behind on 50-and 60-yard touchdown passes from quarterback Boomer Esiason to Russell Davis for its 24-23 lead.

Maryland scored again in the fourth quarter on a 10-yard run by Willie Joiner that finished a 14-play, 80-yard drive and left the Terrapins trailing 36-31.

Midshipmen Spoil Welsh's Debut, 20-16

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (UPI) — George Welsh, who won more games as Navy's football coach than anyone before him, lost an opener in Annapolis Saturday, but this time he was coaching another team.

"It was a little bit strange," Welsh said of being back in Navy-Marine Corps Memorial Stadium after his stubborn Virginia team put on a 269-yard passing attack, but still lost to favored Navy 20-16.

"I spent a lot of time with those guys," said Welsh, who took the Virginia job last winter after nine seasons at Navy. "What the hell — I lived with those guys."

Welsh said he was generally pleased with his new team's performance, saying he hoped they will improve with experience. "We hung in there very well," he said.

Gary Tranquill, the former Welsh assistant who replaced him at Navy, may have been the winner, but he didn't sound like it.

"I wasn't pleased with the offense," he said. "We didn't move the ball like I hoped we would."

Tranquill complained that his receivers dropped easy passes, saying, "We didn't make enough big plays on offense and we lacked consistency. We have to get a lot better."

Navy's two biggest plays came on touchdown passes from junior quarterback Marco Pagnanelli to sophomore tailback Rich Clouse, one for 18 yards in the first half and the other for 18 yards in the second. Kicker Steve Young rounded out the Navy scoring with field goals of 44 and 28 yards.

Virginia missed several late scoring opportunities and managed only a 54-yard touchdown bomb from Wayne Schuchts to Nick Merrick to go with Wayne Morrison's field goals from 23, 22 and 23 yards.

Navy clinched the regionally-televised game with a fourth-quarter stand at its 3 that forced Virginia to settle for its final field goal.

The Cavaliers opened the third period with a drive from their 20 to the Navy 9. But Navy's Eric Wallace snuffed it out with an end-zone interception.

On Virginia's next possession, tailback Quentin Walker fumbled and Navy's Brian Cianella picked it up on the first hop at the Cavalier 23. Three plays later Pagnanelli hit Clouse for a 19-yard touchdown to put Navy in the lead for good, 20-13.

Auburn Whips Deacons, 28-10

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — Auburn's Lionel James sped 67 yards for an early touchdown and freshman sensation Vincent "Bo" Jackson sprinted 44 yards for a critical fourth quarter score Saturday night as Auburn defeated Wake Forest 28-10.

Wake Forest quarterback Gary Schofield, hitting a variety of receivers almost at will, kept the Demon Deacons close for a while as he hit nine of 12 passes for 89 yards in the third quarter alone.

But James' 67-yard touchdown scamper ignited Auburn to a 14-0 first quarter lead, and Jackson's fourth quarter run for a touchdown, his second of the night, made it 28-10 and out of reach for Wake Forest.

The Deacons of the Atlantic Coast Conference, now 1-1, had beaten the Tigers of the Southeastern Conference their last two meetings.

But Auburn, opening its season on a muggy night before 59,350 fans, didn't let Wake Forest come back as it has the two previous contests.

Schofield, who didn't seem hampered when a light rain began falling in the second half, was good on 21 of 34 passes for 201 yards and one touchdown. His scoring 32-yard strike to Tim Ryan cut Auburn's lead to 21-10.

But Auburn shut down the Wake Forest running game, for the most part, and Tiger quarterback Randy Campbell, an untested junior, moved Auburn skillfully with wishbone halfback James and Jackson popping loose for big yardage.

Auburn led 21-3 at the half as 1-yard plunges by Ron O'Neal and Jackson followed James' touchdown.

Wake Forest's first half score came on Phil Denfeld's 32-yard field goal.

The game was barely a minute old when James, a 5-foot-7 and 170-pound junior, turned right end and sped 67 yards for the touchdown. Al Del Greco's extra point made it 7-0.

When Wake Forest failed to move the ball, Auburn took over at its own 29 and marched 71 yards on 12 plays, with O'Neal, a 250-pound fullback, bulling over from a yard out.

ECU Hall Of Fame To Add Four

Four new members will be inducted into the East Carolina University Sports Hall of Fame at halftime of the first home football game, Sept. 18 at 7 p.m.

Those to be inducted include the school's first All-America in football Lou Hallow; the Southern Conference basketball co-Player of the Year in 1970-71 Jim Gregory; the Southern Conference Athlete of the Year in 1973 Carl Summerell; and East Carolina's most successful wrestling coach, John Welborn.

Louis John Hallow was named a Little All-America by the Associated Press at the conclusion of his senior year in 1955. It marked a first for then East Carolina College, having had only honorable mention all-Americas before.

The Goldsboro native came to East Carolina in 1953 as a sophomore, having transfered from Wake Forest. Playing both ways, center and linebacker, Hallow was named all-North State Conference each of his three seasons with the Pirates. He was also tabbed all-state by the Greensboro Daily News in 1954 and 1955.

The Pirates captured two North State titles, 1953 and 1954, during Hallow's era. His played earned him the Lanche Blocking Trophy in 1954 and 1955; the Defensive Award in 1953, 1954 and 1955, and the team's Most Valuable Player award in 1955.

Tabbed by the ECC media guide of 1955 as the "reputed best linebacker in the state," Hallow was drafted by the Los Angeles Rams. He played the exhibition season with that team before being drafted by another team — the U.S. Marine Corps.

Returning to the Rams in 1958, he played seven games before being traded to the Washington Redskins. He never completed contract negotions with that team, however, and retired from pro football.

He played service ball with the Marines, being named to the all-service team and as the outstanding lineman in the Corps in 1956.

Hallow is known today for his outstanding support of the Pirate athletic program, having contributed a major weight room facility three years ago. His son John, is a member of the ECU baseball team.

Gators Down Southern Cal; 'Dogs Nip BYU

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Spencer Jackson made a sensational fourth-down catch of Wayne Peace's 1-yard touchdown pass and James Jones' 22-yard run with 37 seconds left in the first half capped a 97-yard drive Saturday as 11th-ranked Florida defeated No. 10 Southern California 17-9.

It was the opening game for Southern Cal and the second consecutive victory over a Top Twenty team for Florida, which beat Miami 17-14 a week earlier. It also ranks among the biggest victories in Florida's 75-year college football history.

Jackson's diving grab came with 4:52 left in the second period. Peace lobbed the ball over the head of cornerback Darrel Hopper and Jackson came down just inside the left boundary of the end zone before he slid out of bounds. The touchdown spoiled a goal-line stand by Southern Cal after Florida failed on three previous cracks following a first down at the 2.

The Gators then stunned the Trojans with a 97-yard strike in six plays after David Pryor's 49-yard punt was downed at the Florida 3. The drive included a 48-yard gain on a look-in pass from Peace to Dwayne Dixon.

Peace, who completed his last eight passes in the first half and was 11-of-14 for 142 yards in the first two periods, also hit Tyrone Young for 14 yards and flipped a 7-yarder to Jones, who made a one-handed catch at the USC 22. Peace then gave the ball to Jones on a draw play. The 235-pound fullback broke a tackle at the line of scrimmage and rumbled untouched the rest of the way.

Florida then turned things over to its rugged defense, led by lightning-quick outside linebacker Wilber Marshall. The Gators withstood third-period interceptions of Peace passes by Troy West at the Florida 14 and August Curley at the 33, yielding only a 39-yard field goal by Steve Jordan with 1:49 left in the period.

But Florida's Jim Gainey matched that with a 23-yarder at 2:23 of the final period after second-string quarterback Bob Hewko marched the Gators from their 25 to the USC 7 in 12 plays. Southern Cal's only touchdown came on a 19-yard pass from sophomore quarterback Sean Salisbury to tight end Pat McCool with 6:25 left in the game.

A two-point conversion pass attempt from Salisbury to tailback Michael Harper failed, and Southern Cal blew three shots at a possible tie in the final five minutes.

Salisbury was intercepted by cornerback Ivory Curry at the Florida 2 with 3:23 remaining and strong safety Randy Clark returned an interception 21 yards to the Florida 48 with 1:33 to go. The game ended with the Trojans on the Florida 22.

Florida, one of two teams that have never won the Southeastern Conference championship, begins league play in two weeks against Mississippi State. In the meantime, the Gators can treasure Saturday's triumph, which must rank alongside their Orange Bowl victory over Georgia Tech on Jan. 2, 1967, and a 1963 triumph over Alabama, Bear Bryant's only loss in Tuscaloosa.

In an emotional display after the final gun, Coach Charley Pell led his entire squad on a victory lap around the field to the roars of its victory-starved fans.

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — Sophomore Kevin Butler booted a 44-yard field goal with 1:11 remaining to cap a fourth quarter rally and lift the sixth-ranked Georgia Bulldogs to a 17-14 college football victory over Brigham Young Saturday.

The winning kick was set up when the Bulldogs, 2-0, marched 40 yards in the last three minutes, keyed by a 23-yard burst by Herschel Walker to the Cougars' 33-yard line.

Walker, who rushed for 124 yards on 31 carries, had gotten Georgia even at 14-14 with only 5:36 left when he dove over for a 1-yard touchdown.

Ronnie Harris preserved Georgia's victory over the Cougars, 1-1, when he intercepted a StTeve Young pass on his 25 with 43 seconds remaining in the contest, which was played in a steady rain the entire second half.

Young, who was intercepted five times in the first half, connected on a 21-yard TD strike to Scott Collie late in the third quarter to put Brigham Young ahead 14-7.

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Diminitive Derek Holloway caught a 67-yard touchdown pass and made big plays to set up two other scores as 13th-ranked Arkansas trounced Tulsa 38-0 in a college football game Saturday.

Holloway's TD catch came on a long pass from Brad Taylor and made the score 14-0 midway in the second quarter. Minutes later, the 5-foot-8, 169-pound senior returned a punt 29 yards to midfield and Arkansas made it 21-0 six plays later.

Then, late in the third quarter, Holloway made a spectacular falling catch at the 6-yard line to set up a 23-yard field goal by Ernie Villarreal — his third of the game.

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Michigan tailback Lawrence Ricks gained 153 yards on 24 carries, including a 4-yard touchdown run, and led the error-prone Wolverines to a 20-9 Big Ten college football victory over Wisconsin in the season opener for both teams Saturday.

With Ricks, a 5-foot-10, 195-pound senior from Barberton, Ohio, carrying the ball on six of the 10 plays in the drive, Michigan marched 60 yards the first time it had the ball and scored on Ricks' spinning run over right tackle to take a 7-0 lead.

However, the Badgers took the following kickoff and drove 65 yards in 13 plays before Mark Doran booted a 32-yard field goal.

Moments later Wisconsin's Jody O'Donnell picked off a Steve Smith pass at the Michigan 29 and four plays later Badgers quarterback Randy Wright scored on a 1-yard sneak to give Wisconsin a 9-7 lead over the 12th-ranked Wolverines.

After an exchange of punts, Michigan marched 59 yards in nine plays with tailback Rick Rogers scoring the go-ahead touchdown from 2 yards out.

Smith, whose passing was far from sharp, capped a 67-yard, five-play drive with a 6-yard TD on a quarterback draw play with 8:28 remaining in the fourth quarter.

Long Beach St. 10

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Quarterback Tom Ramsey fired four touchdown passes to flanker Jojo Townsell in the first half and ran for another score in the third quarter Saturday as 18th-ranked UCLA rolled to a 41-10 victory over Long Beach State in the college football season-opener for both teams.

The non-conference contest, first-ever between the schools, was played before a crowd of 45,396 at the Rose Bowl, the new home field of the Bruins. UCLA decided this summer to move to nearby Pasadena from the Los Angeles Coliseum, where the university played its home games for the past 52 years.

Ramsey and Townsell, a pair of seniors, teamed up on touchdown pass plays of 23 yards in the first quarter and 48, 32 and 18 yards in the second period as the Bruins built up a 31-10 halftime advantage.

Ramsey, who completed 12 of 20 passes for 213 yards in the first half, raised his career touchdown pass total to 33, a school record. Ramsey, who wound up hitting 18 of 31 throws for 286 yards, entered the game tied with Dennis Dummit for the UCLA career TD pass standard.

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Turner Gill threw two touchdown passes and directed two other scoring marches, sparking No. 3 Nebraska to a 42-7 victory over Iowa Saturday in a college football season opener.

The crowd of 76,013, Nebraska's 119th straight sellout, saw the Cornhuskers score on three of their first four possessions and bolt to a 28-0 halftime lead in avenging a 10-7 loss to Iowa in last year's opener.

Gill, coming off a leg injury that sidelined him in the Orange Bowl, fired a 41-yard touchdown pass to Irving Fryar in the first quarter and hit Todd Brown on a 7-yard scoring pass in the fourth period. The junior quarterback also directed the Cornhuskers on first-half scoring marches of 80 and 84 yards.

Referee Collapses, Dies

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — Referee Richard McVay died of an apparent massive heart attack Saturday after collapsing during the Michigan State-Illinois Big Ten football contest, hospital officials said.

McVay, 55, of Westerville, Ohio, fell suddenly to the turf at the MSU 48-yard-line, just seconds after a play with about 10 minutes remaining in the first half.

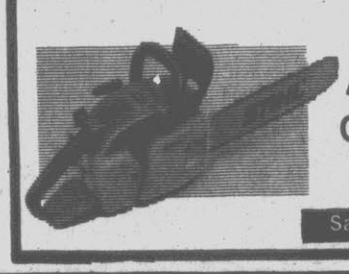

Several doctors and trainers from both squads worked on McVay for about 10 minutes before he was rushed to Burnham City Hospital in Champaign at 4:12 p.m. CDT.

Despite efforts at cardio-pulmonary resuscitation, he was pronounced dead at 4:35 p.m., said Charlotte Golden, Burnham nursing supervisor.

Dodgers Cut Braves' Lead To Half-Game With Win

HOUSTON (AP) — Dusty Baker drilled a two-run homer and winning pitcher Jerry Reuss contributed a run-scoring double as the Los Angeles Dodgers topped the Houston Astros 5-3 Saturday.

The win moved the Dodgers within a half game of Atlanta, which lost to Cincinnati.

Reuss, 15-10, allowed seven hits in 7 2-3 innings. Steve Howe pitched the final 1 1-3 innings for his 13th save.

Baker teed off on loser Vern Ruhle, 7-13, in the first inning with his 23rd homer, giving Los Angeles a 2-0 lead.

Houston tied the score on Terry Puhl's RBI single in the third on Bill Doran's run-scoring single in the fourth, but the Dodgers went ahead to stay in the fifth.

Bill Russell was hit by a pitch to open the inning and scored on Steve Yeager's triple. Reuss doubled to make it 4-2, and, one out later, he scored when Ken Landreaux greeted reliever Bob Knepper with a bloop double.

Atlanta 4

ATLANTA (AP) — Dave Concepcion drilled a three-run first-inning home run and Mario Soto survived nine hits as Cincinnati edged the Atlanta Braves 4-3 Saturday, snapping a seven-game Reds' losing streak.

Atlanta's loss reduced its lead in the National League West to just one-half game over Los Angeles, which beat Houston.

Soto, 12-11, struck out five to run his major league leading total to 241. He walked three.

Atlanta starter Tommy Boggs, 2-1, had trouble from the start. He walked Gary Redus to start the game and then hit Eddie Milner with a pitch. Concepcion then slugged a 400-foot drive over the center field fence for his fourth homer of the season.

Reliever Bob Walk gave up an unearned in the third. Duane Walker, who replaced Cesar Cedeno after Cedeno was hit by a pitch in the first inning, walked and raced to third on Walk's wild pickoff attempt. Johnny Bench then singled in Walker.

The Braves made it 4-1 when Chris Chambliss lofted his 17th homer of the season in the fourth inning.

Bruce Benedict singled and pinch-hitter Larry Whisenton walked to lead off the Braves' fifth. Two outs later, Dale Murphy's RBI single drove in Benedict with Atlanta's second run. It was Murphy's 106th run batted in, which leads the National League.

BOSTON (AP) — Gary Allenson managed only a looping single but had five runs batted in as the Boston Red Sox took advantage of 11 walks and seven Detroit errors to crush the Tigers 13-3 Saturday.

Allenson's looping single to center scored three runs in a five-run sixth. He also got an RBI with a bases-loaded walk in the four-run first and drove in his fifth run with a groundout in the fifth.

Hough, 14-11, pitched his 10th complete game of the year. Seattle starter Floyd Bannister, 12-11, walked two and struck out nine, raising his league-leading strikeout total to 178.

NEW YORK (AP) — Dave Winfield drove in four runs, with a three-run homer and a single, and Dave Righetti fired a five-hitter as the New York Yankees trounced the Milwaukee Brewers 14-2 Saturday night.

Righetti, 9-8, was backed by a season-high 18-hit attack as he recorded his second complete game this season and stopped a personal three-game losing streak. He struck out six and walked two.

The loss cut the Brewers' lead in the American League East to three games over Baltimore.

Winfield, who earlier in the week became the ninth player in baseball history to hit 30 home runs in a season in both the American and National Leagues, slammed his 32nd homer and sixth in eight games, capping a four-run second inning.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Bill Madlock's home run on the first pitch of the bottom of the ninth inning gave the Pittsburgh Pirates a 10-9 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies in a wild contest Saturday night.

Madlock slugged his 17th homer off Ron Reed, 4-5, the sixth Philadelphia pitcher. Kent Tekulve, 11-8, got the victory despite surrendering a game-tying single in the Philadelphia ninth which spoiled a dramatic two-run pinch-hit double by Willie Stargell in the seventh inning.

The game featured 33 hits, 17 by Philadelphia, and 11 pitchers.

ST.LOUIS (AP) — George Hendrick slugged a three-run homer — his first since July 31 — boosting the St. Louis Cardinals back into first place in the National League East with a 6-3 victory over the New York Mets on Saturday night.

The St. Louis triumph, coupled with Philadelphia's 10-9 loss to Pittsburgh, put the Cardinals one-half game ahead of the Phillies.

Hendrick's 17th homer came off Ed Lynch, 3-7, who also yielded an RBI single to Dane Iorg in the first inning.

W. Virginia Stuns Oklahoma, 40-27

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Jeff Hostetler picked apart Oklahoma's defense with a brilliant aerial display Saturday, firing four touchdown passes, leading unranked West Virginia to a stunning 40-27 football victory over the No. 9 Sooners.

Hostetler, a junior from Hollopple, Pa., threw for 321 yards, with his final touchdown pass being a game-winner to Wayne Brown midway in the final period.

The final points came on a 43-yard touchdown run on a draw play by Curlin Beck with 2:14 remaining.

Oklahoma, which beat West Virginia 52-10 in their last meeting in the Sooners' 1978 opener, appeared to be breezing to an easy victory after scoring on its first two possessions and building a 14-0 lead.

However, the Mountaineers' defense stiffened in the second quarter and Hostetler's passing helped give West Virginia a 20-14 halftime edge.

The Sooners regained the lead on their first third-quarter possession when quarterback Kelley Phelps scored his second touchdown of the game. Phelps' touchdown and the extra point by Michael Keeling gave Oklahoma a 21-20 edge.

Hostetler, however, directed the Mountaineers to another touchdown on their next drive, building West Virginia's lead to 27-21.

The Sooners tied the score with 3½ minutes left in the third period when Darrell Songy blocked a West Virginia punt and Keith Stanberry scooped up the ball and raced into the end zone. Keeling missed the extra point.

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio State, ranked No. 14, blew a 14-point lead Saturday, then rallied to beat Baylor 21-14 on sophomore quarterback Mike Tomczak's 1-yard scoring run in the fourth quarter.

The Buckeyes, opening their football season before 88,622, the second-largest crowd in Ohio Stadium history and their 84th consecutive sellout, handed Baylor its first loss of the season. The Bears had opened with a 21-17 victory over North Texas State.

Tomczak, making his first college start, led Ohio State on a 37-yard, nine-play drive that was set up by Garcia Lane's 18-yard punt return.

The Buckeyes, relying on their renowned ground game, used all rushing plays to score the winning touchdown. Tomczak carried the final yard with 9:52 left.

Kelly, a senor from East Brady, Pa. who is being touted as a Heisman Trophy candidate, hit 16 of 27 passes to run his career yardage total to 5,021 as the Hurricanes, 17-14 losers to 11th ranked Florida a week ago, evened their record at 1-1.

Rush caught a 16-yard touchdown pass from Kelly early in the first quarter and scored twice on 2-yard runs on which he dived over the Houston defensive front.

Crimson Tide Bombs Ga. Tech, 45-7

ATLANTA (AP) — Jesse Bendross dashed 58 yards on an end around and Walter Lewis raced 41 yards for second-quarter touchdowns as fourth-ranked Alabama crushed Georgia Tech 45-7 in college football Saturday.

Alabama scored on its first five possessions as the Crimson Tide launched the season in impressive fashion in a light drizzle, avenging a 24-21 upset loss to Tech a year ago.

It gave Paul "Bear" Bryant, the all-time leader in coaching victories, his 316th career triumph on his 69th birthday at the start of his 38th season.

The Tide cashed in two pass interceptions and a fumble recovery for first-half touchdowns and amassed 317 yards in offense by intermission.

'Bama's other first-half scoring came on a 40-yard field goal by Peter Kim, a 9-yard run by Paul Carruth and a 6-yard run by Ricky Moore that stretched the lead to 31-0 with 7:01 left in the second quarter.

Missouri 23

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Marlon Adler threw two touchdown passes to Curtland Thomas and scrambled 24 yards for another touchdown, leading Missouri to a 23-10 victory over Army in college football Saturday.

The Cadets scored a touchdown in the third period, their first in 13 quarters dating back to last season, and were tied 10-10 with the heavily favored Tigers heading into the fourth period.

But Missouri, 2-0, scored twice in a three-minute span of the fourth period with Adler, a sophomore walk-on, providing the impetus.

Four To Be Inducted Into ECU Hall. . .

small Elbert, W. Va., only to become one of the top Pirates cagers in history.

After his senior year, he was named co-Player of the Year in the Southern Conference, the only time an ECU basketball player won that honor. He was also first team all-Southern Conference and the team's Most Valuable Player in 1970-71.

The current Charlotte resident is still tied for the school record for the highest career rebounding average with 11.1 per game. Scoring may have been his forte, as he currently is fifth on the all-time scoring list with 1,193 career points.

Honors came Gregory's way each of his four years with the Pirates. He was the MVP for the freshmen in 1967-68 with 25.2 points and 15.3 rebounds, and varsity MVP as a sophomore. He was honorable mention all-Southern in 1969-70 as a junior.

Just as Gregory was winding up his career, Virginia Beach native Carl Leigh Summerell was starting his in baseball and football for the Pirates.

Twice named honorable mention all-America in football, Summerell quarterbacked two Southern Conference championship teams, 1972 and 1973, with overall 9-2 records both years. For his play, Summerell was named Southern Conference Player of the Year in football as a senior.

Later his senior year, he was named Athlete of the Year in the conference, the only time that honor came to an East Carolina athlete.

In December 1973, he was named the starting quarterback for the Gray team in the annual Blue-Gray Classic. This marked the first time an ECU player had been selected for this game.

Summerell was also honored by his home state of Virginia with the MacArthur Award, given to the Virginia athlete who excels at an out-of-state university. He was also named all-state twice by the Greensboro Daily News.

Most valuable awards were given to him as a freshman in 1970, and again in 1972 and 1973 on the varsity squad. The record books reflect the reasons why.

He still holds the school mark for most career completions with 198; most career yards passing, 2,859; longest scoring pass play, 83 yards to Tim Dameron vs. VMI in 1972; second in career net yards, 3,644; second in season net yards, 1,700 in 1972; and second and third in season passing yards, 1,275 in 1972 and 1,222 in 1973.

He was also named to the all-Southern Conference baseball team as a junior with a .336 average.

Drafted by the New York Giants, Summerell has a successful tenure before retiring at the peak of his career.

While statistics told the story for Summerell, the statistics that John Welborn piled up as wrestling coach are astounding.

For ten years, from 1967-77, the Boone native coached ECU wrestlers to a combined 94-14-3 records, an 87 percent winning mark.

Welborn took over a struggling program at ECU after a brief stay at his alma mater, Appalachian State, where he had been an assistant coach.

Within four years, his teams had become the dominate power in the Southern Conference and of all colleges in North Carolina.

With Southern Conference titles in 1971-76, East Carolina was, and still is, the only school to capture five consecutive titles. In the other five years, Welborn coached his club to four second-place finishes and one third-place finish. The league gave out Coach of the Year honors only from 1973-76 and Welborn captured all three.

During his ten-year tenure, the Pirates lost but one match to in-state competition and never lost to rival North Carolina.

Now an assistant athletic director at East Carolina, Welborn coached 44 individual champions nd the only all-America ever for East Carolina, as Bill Hill placed fifth in the 1974 NCAA tournament.

He also headed the golf program at ECU from 1968-73, coaching two conference championship teams, three second-place teams and one third-place entry.

The four 1982 inductees join 34 previous members of the Sports Hall of Fame inducted since its inception in 1974.

Dr. John M. Howell, chancellor of the university, will honor the new inductees with a dinner at his home Friday night with all former members of the Hall of Fame invited to attend.

Induction ceremonies will be held during the halftime of the ECU-East Tennessee State game on Saturday night.

Tournament Is Set At Chicod

A softball tournament for Class C and D teams will be held Sept. 18-19 at the Chicod fields.

Entry fee for the tournament is $60. Trophies will be given to the top four finishers.

Wolfpack Fells Pirates. . .

that drive of 54 yards, the Pirates were helped by a 12-yard pass from Stewart to Stuart Ramirez, plus a 15-yarder for roughing the passer against State.

McIntosh fumbled on the first play after the kickoff as Steve Hamilton hit him and Smokey Norris covered the ball at the State 24. But the Pirates came up short and on fourth and three from the five, Heath was good on a 22-yarder cutting it to 7-6 with 1:17 left in the quarter.

Early in the second period, State drove 80 yards in 12 plays, twice getting major penalties and first downs on penalties against the Pirates. Avery also hit Wall for 15 yards and Tim Foster for 17 along the way, as he took the ball in himself on a rollout on fourth and goal from the one. That ran the State lead out to 14-6 with 4:58 left in the half.

The Pirates attempted a comeback, driving from the 20 to the 23 before a Heath field goal of 41 yards was just wide of the mark.

But after holding the Pack and getting the ball back at the 33, Stewart hit Norwood Vann, who broke two tackles with a great individual effort all the way to the State 15. A penalty moved it to the ten, and on third down, Stewart hit Nichols over the middle for the final three yards with 21 seconds left.

On a two-point try to tie it up, Stewart tripped coming out from center and dropped the ball, killing the Pirate chances and leaving it at 14-12 at intermission.

State got a quick break on the second play of the second half when Dee Dee Hoggard intercepted Stewart and returned the ball 31 yards to the ECU 2. Twice during the run, Hoggard had to reverse his field before breaking away.

But — the Pirate defense held and a 24-yard field goal attempt by Cofer was wide of the mark.

But — the Pirates failed to move it and Williams' punt went off the side of his foot to only the 42, again giving State great field position and it took advantage of it.

Avery hit Ken Jenkins for 19 yards, then from the 18 on the fourth play of the series, he hit Wall in the corner of the(end zone after the Pirate defender stumbled. Cofer's kick made it 21-12 with 10:02 left in the quarter.

After two exchanges, the Pirates, behind Ingram, raced downfield on 12 plays, marching 86 yards. Ingram and Earnest Byner sparked the drive, with Ingram rolling out, then dashing the final 13 yards.

The Pirates elected to go for two, however, and again failed, leaving it at 21-18 with 2:44 left in the third period.

Emory later explained that the Pirates intended to kick the ball, but miscommunication led to the two-point try.

Sparked by a 42-yard pass from Avery to Jenkins, State came back with a 35-yard field goal by Cofer just 10 seconds into the final period. That made it 24-18. Avery, facing a third and 12, hit Jenkins on the fly at the Pirate 24 to keep the drive alive and set up the score.

With 11:06 left, the Pirates took a chance on fourth and one at the 43 and came up just an inch short, giving the ball back in favorable field position.

While State didn't take advantage of that, they struck for the killing blow just minutes later. Taking over on their own 41 after a punt, State got three yards, then Avery tossed the bomb to Wall, who was wide open down field, easily scoring on the 56-yard play. A two-point try failed, leaving State up 30-18 with 6:59 left.

An interception seconds later by Nat Brown led to a 41-yard field goal by Cofer with 4:43 left, running the State margin to 33-18.

The Pirates didn't quit, however, coming back as Stewart hit Carlton Nelson for 48 yards to the two, and Baker plunged over from there. Stewart then hit Nelson for a two-pointer to pull it within 33-26.

But after Nelson recovered an on-sides kick, Stewart was intercepted by Perry Williams on first down, and State ran out the clock.

"I don't think we were trying for too much too soon," Emory said later. "We just didn't read the defense well.

East Carolina will return to action on Saturday, playing host to East Tennessee State in its first home game of the season.

McCullough Atop Classic

SUTTON, Mass. (AP) — Mike McCullough, a former Ohio amateur champion and barely a survivor in 10 years on the PGA golf tour, fired a 5-under-par 66 Saturday for a one-stroke lead after 54 holes in the $300,000 Bank of Boston Classic.

McCullough, 37, who shot a 64 in the second round, had a three-round score of 202, 11 under par.

Veteran George Archer bogeyed his final two holes for a 69 and a 203 total.

Peter Jacobsen, who started the day three strokes behind Archer and Bob Gilder, moved up with a 66, tying Archer at 203.

Archer, bidding for his first victory since 1976, played steady golf, collecting four birdies without a bogey, before wilting in the heat.

Archer, winner of nearly $1.25 million in nearly 20 years on the tour, saved par with a 15-foot putt on the 16th green. But he slipped into a tie with McCullough, his playing partner, as he drove into the trees and took a bogey on the 17th hole. He completed the round with another bogey as he hit into the back bunker.

McCullough, who has won more than $300,000 on the tour while managing only two minor victories on the "second tour," started with a bogey on his second hole. He settled down quickly and birdied the fourth, fifth and sixth holes. Then he went 11-under for the tournament with birdies on the 11th, 12th and 13th greens.

He got down in par the rest of the way to assume the lead as Archer faded.

Gilder, playing with Archer and McCullough, had trouble but struggled to a 70 for 204. He was tied by Brad Bryant, who had a 64, one off the course record set by Rik Massengale in 1977.

Bill Buttner, a former North Carolina star from nearby Plymouth, moved into contention wtih a 66 for 205. John Cook also fired a 66 for 206.

Also at 206, each after third-round 68s, were Gil Morgan, Ed Sneed, Wayne Levi and David Graham.

The final round at Pleasant Valley Country Club's 7,119-yard course will be played Sunday. The winner will collect $54,000.

Lloyd Wins Open. . .

But she's playing better and better, so I think I better not believe her anymore."

Lloyd's mastery of Mandlikova pales next to what Lendl has done to McEnroe, the world's No. 1 ranked player.

"He's got confidence against me," McEnroe said. "I just don't play aggressively enough against him. He's improved his serve and it's hard for me to attack the way I did before.

"I get a little disorganized against him. He makes me do different things."

Lendl, known for the hardest forehand in tennis today, said his serve was the difference.

"I didn't give any chance on any serve in the first two sets," Lendl said. "The difference is in the rhythm of my serve. I'm returning better and I'm serving better."

McEnroe agreed.

"He goes for the big serve, for a winner on the first shot," the deposed champion said. "I played better at the end, but not well enough to win. I only felt comfortable in the third set. I felt like I started doing something, at last attacking."

Lendl, who beat Connors in the semifinals of the ATP Championships three weeks ago, said his final opponent "always plays well against me. His confidence is good against me. The last time I was playing well and didn't miss too many shots."

McEnroe was as much to blame for his defeat as Lendl. McEnroe's volleys were often long, and his serve, the key to his whole game, was off, despite 16 aces.

Lendl, meanwhile, was in peak form, finding the corners and the lines with his ferocious forehand and making infrequent but successful forays to the net.

The Czech right-hander rallied from a 2-5 deficit in the decisive third-set tiebreaker and won it 8-6 when McEnroe's cross-court backhand sailed wide.

Lendl, who has never won a Grand Slam event and who had reached the final of one only once before, broke McEnroe in the fifth game of the opening set at 15, then held service the rest of the way.

McEnroe tried to break back in the eighth game, fighting his way to deuce. But Lendl then whacked a forehand volley into the corner for the advantage and followed it with a service winner. He then served out the 10th game at love to close out the first set.

Lendl broke McEnroe again to open the second set, again at 15. Then the two held serve, sometimes barely, for the remainder of the set.

McEnroe reached deuce on Lendl's serve in the 10th game when the Czech double-faulted. But Lendl took the next two points, the final one with an assertive forehand volley, to move to within one set of victory.

So completely did Lendl dominate McEnroe that the New Yorker had only two break points in the match on the Czech's serve, in the second and fourth games of the third set. Both times McEnroe had the advantage, and both times Lendl won the next three points to hold serve.

Scrapping for every point, fighting to get back into the match, McEnroe tried everything, sometimes playing a baseline game, sometimes taking the net at every chance, anything to upset Lendl's rhythm and dominating strokes.

Nothing worked.

In the third set, the two held serve, forcing a tiebreaker.

McEnroe got the first break of the match in the tiebreaker, winning the third point when he rifled a service return cross-court. It prompted the crowd of 20,797 — a crowd that in the past had booed his victories — to urge him on.

Rose Errors Key New Bern Win, 21-14

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

NEW BERN — Squandered chances against an improved New Bern football team led Rose High School to its second straight defeat of the young season Friday night, as the Bears kayoed the Rampants, 21-14.

Rose, which for the second straight week, outoffensed its opponent, only to come up on the short end of the score, had a number of opportunities to get the job done, but missed assignments and penalties halted them time after time.

"We were extremely flat tonight. We've been flat all week," Rose Coach Ronald Vincent said afterwards.

"I was very disappointed with our effort."

New Bern scored quickly — just as Jacksonville had done a week earlier. Just over two minutes into the game, the Bears were on the scoreboard as fullback Hosea Davis quickly dashed 16 yards for the score and Andy Huryn added the PAT kick.

Rose came right back on its first possession to tie it up, with Donnell Lee hitting over from four yards out and Willie Levitt tieing it up.

It was to stay that way for the rest of the half. But early in the second, Rose fumbled it away, setting up a short 37-yard drive capped by quarterback Carnell Lofton's one-yard plunge, and New Bern was ahead to stay.

They finished it off with a two-yard plunge by halfback Eric Lewis in the late stages of the game, then held off a Rose rally.

The Rampants drove 80 yards in just 2:09 with Lee traveling the final 13 yards, but even after getting it back, the Rampants were unable to pull off the miracle.

"It seemed like a different person would mess up in every series," Vincent reflected. "We'd get a drive going and have a breakdown and stop ourselves.

"We weren't very disciplined out there either. We were just extremely flat. It was as if the guy said we played well against Jacksonville and that would carry us against New Bern. But we made just about every mistake that you could make our there."

Vincent was also worried about the fact that New Bern seemed to know almost in advance what plays were going to be run. A number of times they called "sweep" or "pass" before the ball was even snapped, and that was what was run.

"I don't know if we were keying them somehow, but we're going to have to check on it," he said.

"There were just too many little things, though...dropped passes when we were wide open...fumbles.... We just can't win playing like that."

Vincent admitted that New Bern was much improved over the past two weeks when they lost their first two games — both on the road. "I kind of expected them to be improved, and I really think we underestimated our opponent. We just didn't seem to be well prepared at all."

Just as Jacksonville had done a week earlier, New Bern got quickly onto the scoreboard, taking only 2:11 to score. A good kickoff return by Lewis got the ball to the Bear 38, and Rose was tagged with a 15-yarder for a late hit, starting the drive from the Rose 47.

A third down off-sides penalty gave the Bears a first down at the 34, and Lofton kept around the right side for six yards, and optioned to Lewis for 12 more on second down. From the 16, Davis went over left tackle and burst by the secondary for the score and Huryn's kick made it 7-0.

Rose bounced back quickly, driving 64 yards on just nine plays. After losing five yards on a proceedure penalty, Kenny Kirkland hit Edward Frazier for 19 yards and a first down at the Bear 47. Seven yard rushes by Lee and Roderick Harrell moved it to the 33, and Lee swept the left side for 19 more to the 12. Three plays later, he took another quick pitch around the right side for the score and Levitt's kick tied it up, 7-7 with 6:00 left in the period.

Early in the second period, Frazier carried back a Bear punt 46 yards to the New Bern 37. But the Rampants failed to take advantage and punted it away.

They got it back after four plays at their own 43 and quickly moved to a first down at the New Bern 47. There, on first down, the Rampants fumbled it away, ending their last chance for a score in the half.

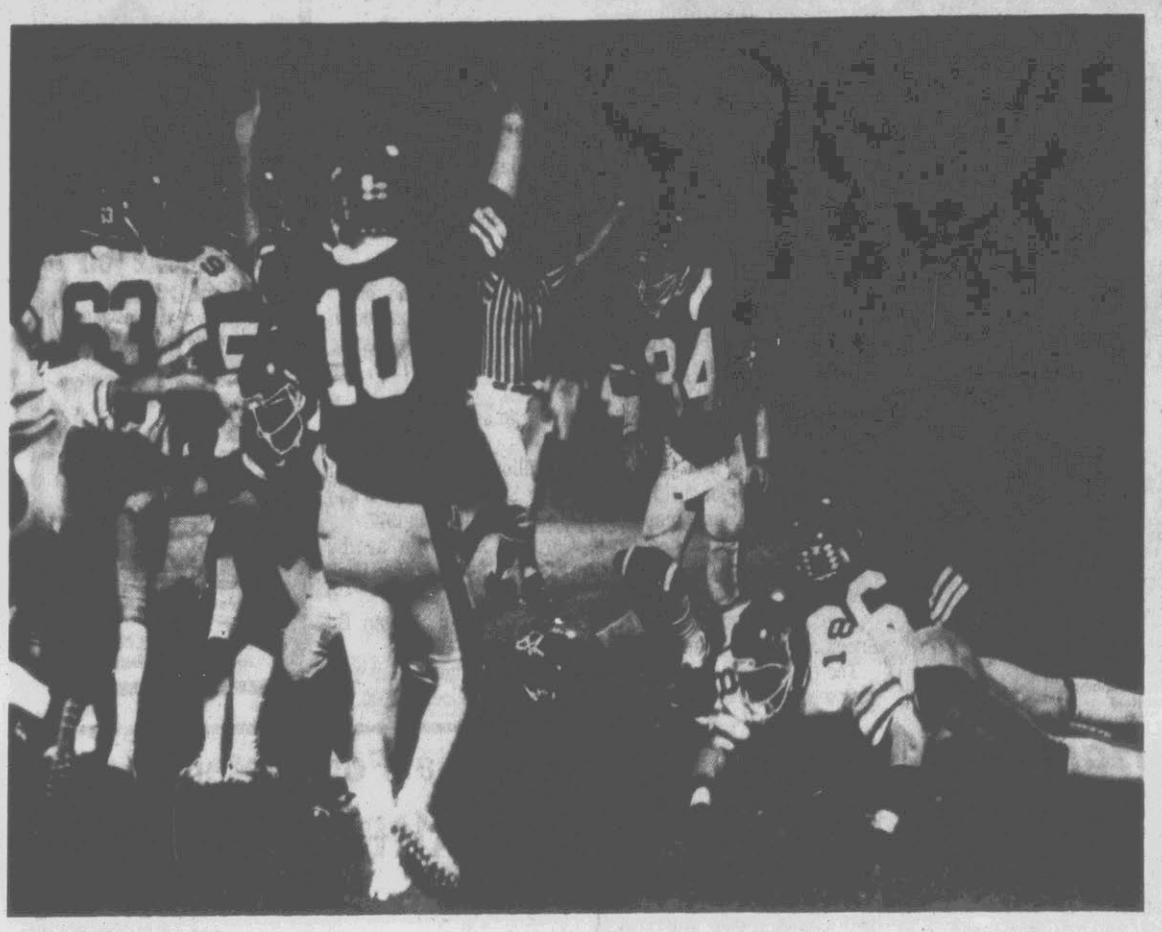

Lee's 31-yard kickoff return opened the second half, giving Rose a first down at its own 48. But after a three-yard play, a missed block allowed New Bern to turn back a Lee sweep and he was finally dragged down for a 19-yard loss back o the Rose 32. On the next play, Rose again fumbled it away, setting up the second Bear touchdown.

From the 37 it took only four plays. Lewis broke away for 16 on first down, and Darryl Marshall picked up 13 on the second play, down to the eight. Lewis picked up seven more to the one, and Lofton bulled over from there for a 14-7 lead with 8:45 left in the third period.

Rose again started a drive, helped by Frazier's 29 yard kickoff return to midfield. Rose drove down to the 26 before a 15-yard penalty pushed them back to the 37 and a fourth and five play saw another fumble turned over to New Bern.

After forcing another Bear punt, Rose again turned it

Touchdown!
Ayden-Grifton quarterback Joey Kennedy (10) signals TD after fullback Jarvis Koonce scores from four yards out to help the Chargers to a 24-6 win over Farmville Central Friday night in the opening ECC game for both teams. (Reflector photo by Katie Zernhelt)

Ayden-Grifton Defense Sparks Chargers Past Farmville, 24-6

LITTLEFIELD — Ayden-Grifton used its dominating defense and two touchdown passes by quarterback Joey Kennedy to roll past Farmville Central, 24-6, Friday night in the opening Eastern Carolina Conference game for both teams.

Ayden-Grifton, now 2-0-0 overall, held the Jaguars to 69 yards total offense — 31 rushing and 38 passing. Farmville, now 0-3-0, did not score until there were less than three minutes left.

It was the third straight game in which the Jaguars have managed to score just six points.

"It was a very physical game. It was a very important win," A-G coach Dixon Sauls said. "It was a conference game and there's such a rivalry between the two schools. It was just a hard-fought game."

Ayden-Grifton, which finished in a three-way tie for the ECC title a year ago, took the lead in the first quarter on a 29-yard pass from Kennedy to Tyrone Gay with 4:58 left. The kick for the PAT failed.

The touchdown was followed a fumble by Farmville. Two plays later Kennedy, who was playing only his second game at quarterback, connected with Gay on a deep sideline route for the TD.

Neither team scored in the second quarter, and A-G led, 6-0, going into the half.

The Chargers upped their lead to 12-0 midway through the third period. Taking the second-half kickoff, A-G drove from its 31 to the Farmville 30. On third and four from there, tailback Malcolm Worthington burst off right tackle for the touchdown with 6:20 left. The run for two points failed.

The Chargers made it 18-0 early in the when Kennedy connected with Worthington on a 51-yard scoring play.

The Jaguars finally got on the board late in the game when quarterback Sam Sumrell hit Andrew Edwards with a 38-yard scoring toss with 2:22 left. The pass for two failed.

The score was set up when A-G sophomore tailback Kelvin Harris fumbled at the A-G 38. Harris, who gained 132 yards last week in his first varsity start, was injured and that — and the Jaguars — held him in check.

Ayden-Grifton scored its final TD with 21 seconds left when fullback Jarvis Koonce capped a 60-yard drive with a four-yard run to give the Chargers the 24-6 victory.

Worthington, held to 30 yards last week in A-G's 27-7 win over Roanoke, rushed for a game-high 91 yards in 16 carries against Farmville. Koonce had 77 yards in 14 carries.

Ayden-Grifton managed 247 yards total offense — 166 rushing and 81 passing. Kennedy was just three of 12 for the night with no interceptions for 81 total yards.

But, it was the defense that sparked the triumph. Said Sauls: "I told you all along we had the making of a good, solid defense."

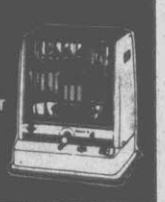

Ayden-Grifton plays host to North Lenoir Friday night in the first of two straight nonconference games. Farmville will play host to winless, but once-tied Conley.

Vikes, Panthers Deadlock, 6-6

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

HOLLYWOOD — It was a first for D.H. Conley coach Gerald Garner. In 16 years in high school athletics — 12 as a coach and four as a player — Garner always left the field either a winner or a loser.

Until Friday night.

In a game mared by 11 fumbles and one interception, D.H. Conley and North Pitt battled to a 6-6 tie in a nonconference matchup between the two Pitt County foes.

"This is the first time I have ever been involved in a tie," Garner said in his office afterwards. "It's a weird feeling.

"I'm going to borrow a phrase from an old high school coach of mine," Garner said with a wry smile. "'It feels like kissing your sister. It's O.K. but it's not all that thrilling.'

"We were so evenly matched, though," he added, "maybe it might have been an injustice for either team to lose."

The game was even — on the stat sheet as well as the scoreboard. The Vikes had 182 yards total offense, the Panthers had 178 yards. Both squads ended up with 12 first downs.

The two teams were even in another stat also: turnovers. Both had six miscues. North Pitt had six fumbles (losing five). Conley had five fumbles (losing four) and one interception.

"There was some hard hitting out there," North Pitt coach B.T. Chappell said when asked about the turnovers. "It weren't nothing but hard hitting. All our fumbles came from hard licks."

The game figured to be a hard-hitting affair. It was the first of three games for both clubs for the so-called 'Pitt County Championship.' Also, Garner had four first-time starters on defense itching to play.

And, if that was not enough, the game also featured a running back who had played for both teams.

Tailback Mitchell Cox started for North Pitt last year but transferred to D.H. Conley this year. The transfer gave the game an added flavor, which nearly all felt.

Cox was held to 39 yards in 11 carries by North Pitt. Cox, however, did score the tying touchdown on a five-yard run late in the third period.

"I feel relieved it's over with," Chappell said. "The rivalry and the thing with Mitchell...I'm just glad it's over."

Added Garner: "I think the kids are disappointed most in not winning the game for Mitchell. They wanted the game especially for Mitchell."

While Cox was held in check, DHC running back Steven King led all rushers with 102 yards in 14 carries. Of those 102 yards, 79 came in the third period — 38 yards on one run.

North Pitt, which ran much of the game out of the T-formation instead of its usual 'I', was led in rushing by Dennis Bradley, who gained 91 yards in 18 carries.

"We went to the 'T' to get a more balanced attack," Chappell said. "We wanted to try to take some of the pressure off Bradley."

The game opened with each team putting together long but unsuccessful drives in the first period.

North Pitt took the opening kickoff and marched from its 47 to the DHC 27. The drive ended when QB Ken Whitehurst three incomplete on fourth and 11.

Conley came back with a 15-play drive that ended when King fumbled a pitch out at the Panther eight and Ricky Hines recovered for North Pitt as the quarter came to an end.

The drive was highlighted by a 21-yard pass from DHC QB Todd Rouse to John Brown on fourth and seven at the NP 34. Rouse slipped one arm tackle while in the pocket and then found Brown over the middle for the gain.

Neither team was able to mount a drive in the second quarter until the final two minutes. The period included three punts, two fumbles (by North Pitt) and an interception.

DHC defensive guard Willie Green, a 5-4 176-pound senior who also wrestles, recovered both fumbles by the Panthers. Green recovered a third fumble in the fourth period.

North Pitt's scoring drive was set up by a Daniel Keel interception at the DHC 47. He returned the ball to the 42 and a late hit moved the ball to the DHC 27 with 1:22 left.

After two incompletions, Whitehurst hit Bradley for five yards but a penalty for an ineligible receiver downfield moved the ball back to the 42. The drive appeared over, but William Rollins, a reserve QB, took the pitch on a halfback pass and hit Bradley across the middle for a 29-yard gain and a first down.

Two plays later Bradley, a star forward on the Panther basketball team, burst around right end for 12 yards to the one.

With less then 40 seconds left and North Pitt out of time outs, Bradley was stopped about a foot short of the goal on the next play. But, with nine seconds left, Bradley muscled over for the TD on the next play.

The kick was no good, but the Panthers led, 6-0, going into the half.

The Vikings took the second-half kickoff and drove from their 37 to the North Pitt 18. King did much of the damage on counters, gaining 41 yards on the drive before fumbling at the 18 to give the ball to the Panthers.

North Pitt was unable to move and DHC got the ball on the Panther 43. One play later the ball was on the North Pitt five as King, a 5-8, 165 pounder, sprinted around left end for 38 yards. King was nearly tackled at the 35 but managed to regain his balance before being run down by Hines.

Cox burst up the middle for the score on the next play to tie the game with 3:49 left in the period. The extra point was blocked, leaving the game knotted at 6-6.

Neither team scored in the final 15:49, thanks in part to two fumbles each. Conley used a 19-yard run by King on fourth and four at its 39 for a first down, but Cox fumbled later in the drive and Malcolm Latham recovered for North Pitt at the 41.

After North Pitt, which gained only one first down in the final period, failed to move the ball, the Vikings drove from their 19 to the North Pitt 37 before a wingback reverse pass was fumbled away by Brown and Ricky Wooten recovered for North Pitt with 25 seconds left.

"I thought we played hard tonight," Chappell said. "I wish we could play that hard every game."

D.H. Conley travels to Farmville Friday night. North Pitt plays host to West Craven.

Missed Chances Allow Hawks To Nip Rams

SNOW HILL — Hosting Greene Central muffed several scoring opportunities, and visiting North Lenoir took the ball in for a score in the late stages of the third period, scoring a two-point conversion for a 14-13 win over the Rams Friday night.

The Hawks had scored first in the game, only to see Greene Central come back with two scores for a 13-6 lead. But North Lenoir backed the Rams in a hole and took advantage of good field position to set up their final drive.

Derrick Waters ended a 66-yard drive in the second period with 4:40 left, scoring from a yard away. A 45-yard pass from Joe Hobbs to William Sutton had helped set up the score.

Greene Central, after forcing a punt by the Hawks, took over on its own 27 and drove for the tying score with just 29 seconds left. The TD came on a 42-yard pass from Elmer Dixon to Anthony Thompson, and Bob Eason booted the extra point to give the Rams a 7-6 lead at intermission.

The Rams came back with another score after the opening kickoff of the second half, driving 40 yards after a 33-yard kickoff return by Walter Dawson gave them outstanding field position. Curtis Sheppard went in from a yard out for the score and the Rams led, 13-6.

But late in the period, the Hawks got it back inside Ram territory after a punt that set things up for the final score. Paul Dixon got that on a 23-yard run, and William Sutton ran over the PAT, giving the Hawks the lead, and eventually the win.

"We missed out on several scoring opportunities," Coach Spence Grantham said. "Our third drive ended with a fumble at their 16, and we later got to the eight and lost the ball on downs. Then, we missed a field goal after driving to the 15, and we had gotten to the 16 just before the game ended."

Thompson, just a freshman, caught four passes for 102 yards and his score on offense and made nine unassisted tackles at defensive end. Sheppard rushed 22 times for 130 yards and a score. James Moore was cited by Grantham for his blocking at offensive tackle and his defensive play, which saw him made ten unassisted tackles.

Now 0-1-2, the Rams travel to face James Kenan at Warsaw Friday. They will be without another regular as fullback and linebacker Terrance Edwards was lost for the season with a dislocated ankle.

Moore Sparkles In Bullet Romp

CHOCOWINITY — It was some evening out for Jamesville running back Matthew Moore.

Moore left his cleat marks all over the field here Friday night as rushed for an incredible 276 yards and scored four touchdowns and set up a fifth score to lead the Bullets to a 32-14 win over Chocowinity in a Tobacco Belt Conference game.

"It was just a super game," Jamesville coach Jerry Godley said. "He did a lot of it on his own."

Moore scored on runs of 12, 52, 60 and 60 and then blocked a punt that was recovered in the end zone for another score.

Chocowinity did not score until the final quarter, by which time the Bullets led, 32-0.

Jamesville, now 2-1-0 overall and 2-0 in the league, took the opening kickoff of the game and drove 65 yards for its first TD. With Moore doing much of the work, the Bullets picked up four first downs in the march. Moore capped the drive with a 12-yard run.

Moore pushed the lead to 12-0 at the half when he scored on a 52-yard burst early in the second period.

The Bullets upped their lead to 18-0 after three periods on a 60-yard TD by Moore.

Moore then let someone else do the scoring in the fourth period when he blocked a punt and teammate Keith Biggs recovered in the end zone to make it 24-0.

Moore scored Jamesville's final TD on a 60 yard run midway through the final period. Moore ran for the two points as well.

Chocowinity scored two TDs late in the game, one coming on a 70-yard kickoff return an the other on a four-yard run, both by Douglas Landley.

Jamesville had 461 yards total offense — 332 rushing and 129 passing — and 21 first downs, compared to six for Chocowinity. The Indians had 159 yards total offense.

Jamesville plays host to Belhaven Friday night.

Chiefs Look To Open Offense

By The Associated Press

The Kansas City Chiefs have decided to return to those thrilling days of yesteryear when a balanced passing and rushing attack carried the team to its greatest victories.

Although the Chiefs aren't talking Super Bowl, they do plan to open up an offense that has been run-oriented the past several seasons. They'll try out the passing game today when they go to Buffalo in the National Football League opener for both teams.

Elsewhere during the first weekend of the season, it's Houston at Cincinnati, Tampa Bay at Minnesota, Chicago at Detroit, St.Louis at New Orleans, Cleveland at Seattle, Washington at Philadelphia, the Los Angeles Rams vs. Green Bay at Milwaukee, Atlanta at the New York Giants, Miami at the New York Jets, New England at Baltimore, San Diego at Denver and the Los Angeles Raiders at San Francisco.

On Monday night, it's Pittsburgh at Dallas.

A players' strike, threatened during the week, is not likely since Seattle players decided Friday night against a walkout over the team's release of Seahawks player representative Sam McCullum earlier this week.

Whether the Chiefs can develop a Lenny Dawson-to-Otis Taylor combination that carried them to the 1970 Super Bowl title remains to be seen. But the emergence of wide receivers Carlos Carson and Anthony Hancock in preseason is a step in the right direction.

"In the past, we'd throw seven or eight times in the first half and 20 times in the second half when we had to," said quarterback Bill Kinney. "That's our stereotype. This year we're going to be much more effective throwing the ball."

Carson, a third-year player from Louisiana State, caught 19 passes for 358 yards and three touchdowns and Hancock, the Chief's top draft choice this year, had 10 receptions for 154 yards.

The que!ti/fb!cing New Orleans Coach Bum Phillips is not whether the Saints will throw the ball, but rather, who will throw it. The choice facing the Saints coach is Archie Manning and Kenny Stabler, and he's not saying who will start.

Phillips does know that a defense would have to react differently to the right-handed Manning than it would to the left-handed Stabler.

"Not that that's necessarily an advantage," he said, "but why tell them?"

Regardless of who starts for the Saints, St. Louis Coach Jim Hanifan believes both teams will rely on their running backs — Ottis Anderson of the Cardinals and George Rogers of New Orleans.

"Just like us, they're going to give the ball to George Rogers a heck of a lot because of the greatness of that man," he said.

Tigers Dump Plymouth, 20-0

PLYMOUTH — Williamston High School finally over came its frustrations of the first half and rolled to a 20-0 victory over Northeastern Conference foe Plymouth Friday night.

The Tigers, who came into the game with a 1-1 record, stayed on the Plymouth side of the field most of the first half, but were unable to score until the final minute of play.

Following a late first half punt, Williamston moved for the score on just two plays, covering 49 total yards. Gray Thomas hit Roosevelt Everett for 29 yards on first down, then connected with Al Willingham for the final 20 for the touchdown, giving the Tigers a 6-0 lead at halftime. The score came with just 44 seconds left in the second period.

Plymouth took the opening kickoff of the second half and got off its only drive of the night, moving to the Williamston 11 where it turned the ball over on fourth and five when Gray Thomas intercepted and returned the ball from the six to the 21.

The Tigers then launched a 13-play, 79-yard drive that was sparked by a 21-yard run by Everett along the way. Finally, Everett went over from a yard out for the score and Rodney Connors added the PAT kick for a 13-0 lead.

Late in the final period, Williamston again drove, only to turn the ball over on downs at the four when a fourth and goal play failed. But Williamston held and got the ball back after a punt at the Viking 43. Tony Speller scored with 1:12 left, going the final 25 yards, with Connors again adding the PAT kick.

Connors punted four times for Williamston for only a 29.8 average, but three of those kicks were angled out of bounds inside the Plymouth 12, helping to keep the Vikings in a hole.

Speller led the offensive thrust of the Tigers, running 15 times for 91 yards.

Williamston, 1-0 in the conference, plays host to Ahoskie on Friday in another Northeastern contest.

over, this time on an interception by John King, who return the ball 17 yards to the Rose 33. This time, however, the Rampants held, helped along by an 11-yard sack on second and 11 by Tommy Sparkman. Then, a bad snap on a field goal attempt from the 17 ended the drive.

Rose was unable to move, however, and punted to their own 49, setting up the final drive by the Bears. On first down, Davis went for 14 yards then added seven on the next play. Rose was hit for 12 yards on a personal foul down to the 12, and after Lewis got a first down at the two on fourth and four, he kicked over on the next play with 4:52 left, making it 21-7.

Amazingly, Rose came quickly back to still make a game of it. The Rampants used only 12 plays and 2:09 to go 80 yards, Kirkland hitting Burney Carraway for 17 yards to the Bear 33 on one key play. He hit Fraazier for 10 yards, and then went to Lee down to the 13.

From there, Lee turned in a great personal run, taking a pitchout around the right side and breaking three tackles along the way to force himself into the end zone with 2:43 left.

That left Rose trailing 21-14.

The Rampants were able to get it back with 1:12 left, and moved from the Bear 48 — after another 18-yard punt return by Frazier. Finally, with 11 seconds left, Kirkland hit Frazier for what appeared to be a first down at the Bear 24, but officials spotted the ball back several yards, and the fourth down play failed to pick up a first down, turning the ball over and New Bern just let the clock run down.

The Rampants finished the game with 235 yards in total offense to just 172 for New Bern, but four turnovers as compared to none for the Bears helped spell the difference.

Rose returns home this Friday night to play host to Wilmington Hoggard in its final non-conference game of the season.

Redskin Turnovers Lead To 17-0 Washington Win

WASHINGTON — Washington High School took advantage of five Roanoke turnovers and added that to a fine offensive performance to romp to a 17-0 victory over the Redskins Friday night in a Northeastern Conference football game.

Slippery-fingered Roanoke fumbled the ball seven times, losing four of them, and also had one interception. Washington's offense ground out 298 yards in total offense, 203 of them on the ground. Roanoke was held to only 102 yards.

Washington got on the scoreboard quickly in the first period, scoring on just three plays after the opening kickoff. Taking over on their own 38, the Pam Pack ripped off 42 yards on the first two plays, with Wayne Wooten going the final 20 yards for the score. Seth Edwards added the PAT for a 6-0 lead.

Washington added a field goal in the second period. That was set up by a Roanoke fumble at the Redskin 24. The Roanoke defense held however, and Jeff Brady booted a 23-yard field goal, making it 10-0 at halftime.

The final Washington score came on a 77-yard drive in the final quarter after Roanoke had failed on a first down attempt at the Pam Pack 23. Brian Goodwin went the final yard for the score, climaxing the drive. Brady added the PAT.

Roanoke offered one other drive in the game moving to the ten before fumbling it away. Another fumble late in the contest saw Washington nearly score again, as the game ended with the Pack on the Roanoke one.

Now 1-2 overall and 0-1 in Northeastern play, Roanoke hosts conference rival Edenton on Friday. Washington, 2-0 overall and 1-0 in the conference, entertains non-conference foe West Carteret.

Bobby Allison Sits On Pole

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Thanks to new tires, Winston Cup point leader Bobby Allison will be on the pole for today's Wrangler Sanforset 400 Grand National stock car race — his first No. 1 start this season.

His pit crew "changed just about everything we could and worked on the motor all day," Allison said Friday after turning in a fast lap of 93.435 mph in a Chevrolet over the .542-mile Fairgrounds Raceway track that just did beat out Joe Ruttman and Darrell Waltrip.

"They're (the pit crew) the best I've ever seen, and that's why we won," Allison said.

Ruttman had a fast lap of 93.417 mph in a Buick and Waltrip, who had started on the pole in five previous races, was caught at 93.412 mph, also in a Buick.

"I really thought we had it won," said Waltrip, who has won eight races this season and who has started in the No. 2 spot on seven occasions. "Everything went perfect. The car ran good, felt good and handled good."

Going into today's race at 1 p.m., EDT, Allison holds a 115-point lead over Buick driver Terry Labonte and a 132-point lead over Waltrip, who captured the championship last year. Labonte will start seventh.

Unlike Allison, Ruttman made the run with used tires, but the only possible fault he could find was too much tightness in his car.

"We might have picked up one-tenth of a second," Ruttman said. "As it was, we lost time at both ends and on the straights."

Rounding out the top five behind Allison, Ruttman and Waltrip were Morgan Shepherd at 93.283 mph in a Buick and Ricky Rudd at 93.078 mph in a Pontiac.

The first 20 spots were decided Friday with the last 10 up for grabs in further qualifying Saturday. Also on Saturday's schedule was the Harvest 150, a Late Model Sportsman event.

Tommy Ellis, who qualified 14th for the Wrangler 400, hit a top speed of 97.046 mph to lead the qualifiers for the Harvest 150.

Also qualifying at better than 96 mph for the LMS race were Shepherd, Tommy Houston, Sam Ard and Phil Parsons.

The qualifiers Friday for Sunday's Wrangler Sanforset 400 Grand National stock car race at Fairgrounds Raceway with driver, make of car and qualifying speed in mph:

1. Bobby Allison, Chevrolet, 93.435.
2. Joe Ruttman, Buick, 93.417.

SPORTSMEN PAY THEIR WAY — How much do sportsmen pay for wildlife conservation? About $500 million per year, according to the National Shooting Foundation. That works out to about $1,370,000 per day. In the past 50 years, sportsmen have contributed over $5 billion to wildlife conservation.

Have their efforts paid off? Consider the following examples:

•There are now 15 million deer in the United States compared to a low of about a half-million at the turn of the century. In North Carolina along, biologists estimate the current deer population at 300,000 animals, and deer are now found in every country in the state.

•Wild turkeys numbered less than 100,000 birds only 30 years ago, and today the are some 1,250,000. In North Carolina, wild turkeys had almost disappeared by the turn of the century. An aggressive restoration program conducted by the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission has established flocks in suitable locations throughout the state, and biologists currently estimate the population in North Carolina at about 10,000 birds.

•There are 796 species of birds in America and only 74 are hunted. Also, there are 914 speciies of mammels in North America and only 35 are hunted. None of these animals are on the endangered species list, and many nongame and endangered species benefit from the protection and management that is directed at game species.

•The sports of hunting and fishing contribute about $25 billion to the nation's economy annually.

GOVERNOR HUNT PROCLAIMS NATIONAL HUNTING/FISHING DAY — Hunting and fishing are two of the nation's most popular pastimes and more than one million Tar Heels participate in these sports.

North Carolina Governor James Hunt recently recognized the sportsman's contribution to wildlife conservation by proclaiming Sept. 25 as National Hunting and Fishing Day in the state.

"Hunters and fisherman have traditionally constituted one of the largest groups of citizens who are concerned about our wildlife resources and environment," Hunt said. "Virtually all of the financial support for sound management and conservation of our natural resources is paid for by hunters and fisherman.

"Sportsman have also consistently led the way in our quest for clean air and water and a future for wildlife. It is with great pleasure that I recognize their tremendous contribution to wildlife conservation by proclaiming September 25 as National Hunting and Fishing Day in North Carolina."

The event will be widely observed throughout the state. Check local newspapers and contact sportsman's clubs for information on National Hunting and Fishing Day activities in your area.

Charlie Hustle Helps Phils Take Lead

By The Associated Press

After all these years, "Charlie Hustle" is still hustling.

"I'm just happy to be on a team that's a half-game in front," 41-year-old Pete Rose said Friday night after helping the Philadelphia Phillies beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 7-5 and move into first place in the National League East race.

Rose scored two runs while playing in his record 3,077th NL game. Hank Aaron, the previous NL leader, still holds the major league record of 3,298 games.

"It's hard to say what this (the record) means to me," Rose said. "If you stay healthy, you're going to play in the games and get the at-bats. Hits and runs are different. But the thing I'm proud of is that since I became a Phillie (in 1979), I haven't missed a game."

Rose, the oldest player in the Phillies' lineup, and Bill Robinson, at 39 the second oldest, were the ones who hurt the Pirates the most.

Rose scored in each of the first two innings as the Phils took a 4-0 lead. Robinson drove in three runs, including two with a fourth-inning double that gave the Phils the lead for good at 6-4.

Robinson was traded by the Pirates to the Phils in a June deal that saw Pittsburgh obtain reserve outfielder Dick Davis. Robinson entered the game with only a .239 average, but had two hits in three at-bats before being removed in the fifth inning.

"The biggest thrill is being in a pennant race again," said Robinson, claiming he doesn't get any extra special thrill from beating his old teammates.

"Those guys never cease to amaze me sometimes," Robinson said of the Pirates, who are five games out of the lead. "We're ahead 4-0 and we're burying them. Then it's 4-4. That just makes me respect them that much more."

Mets 2, Cardinals 1

Craig Swan stifled St. Louis on two hits for 6 2-3 innings and singled home a run to lead New York over the Cardinals. Dave Kingman provided the Mets with their eventual winning run with an inside-the-park solo homer in the eighth, his 35th.

Swan struck out five and walked four before running into a jam in the seventh and giving way to Jesse Orosco. Orosco extinguished the Cardinals' seventh-inning threat and went on to register his third save after giving up a ninth-inning homer to Keith Hernandez.

Expos 7, Cubs 2

Al Oliver collected four hits, including two doubles, Warren Cromartie and Tim Wallach added home runs and Steve Rogers tied a career high with his 17th victory as Montreal moved to within four games of the first-place Phillies.

Rogers, 17-7, allowed eight hits in 71-3 innings, while striking out six and walking two. Rogers, who also won 17 games in 1977, left the game in the eighth after breaking a blister on his pitching hand and was replaced by Jeff Reardon, who registered his 24th save.

As Oliver's league-leading average soared to .336, it also gave Montreal's pennant hopes a lift. The Expos had 11 hits after being shut out in two of their last three games.

Braves 8, Reds 2

Pasqual Perez got his first win of the season and Dale Murphy and Rafael Ramirez homered to lead Atlanta over Cincinnati. Perez, 1-4, scattered eight hits over 71-3 innings before getting relief from Gene Garber.

The Braves got to Reds starter Bob Shirley, 6-12, for two runs in the first on Murphy's 35th homer, and three more in the second on Ramirez's homer, his ninth.

Dodgers 3, Astros 2

Pitcher Burt Hooton hit a solo homer and Los Angeles scratched out two more runs off struggling Nolan Ryan to remain 1½ games behind Atlanta in the National League West.

The Dodgers got one run in the first inning on Steve Garvey's RBI grounder. Hooton homered in the second and a wild pitch by Ryan permitted the third Los Angeles run in the fourth inning.

Ryan, 14-11, gave up only six hits, struck out nine and walked eight in pitching his 10th complete game of the season. Steve Howe, 7-4, the fourth of five Dodger pitchers, was the winner.

Giants 5, Padres 1

Joe Morgan homered and converted starter Fred Breining scattered six hits for his second complete game to lead San Francisco over San Diego. The win moved the Giants within a half-game of the third place Padres in the National League West race and kept them six games off the pace of the Atlanta Braves.

Breining, 9-4, making his fifth start to go with 45 relief appearances this year, allowed two walks while striking out two.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

California 6, Tornoto 2

Veteran Fred Lynn came up with just the kind of hit that wins pennants.

Rookie Steve Hammond made just the kind of fielding play that loses them.

Lynn, making his first appearance since breaking a rib Sept. 1, drilled a pinch-hit three-run double in the eighth inning Friday night that rallied the California Angels past the Toronto Blue Jays 6-2.

Hammond, the Kansas City right fielder, apparently lost track of a ball that rolled past him for an inside-the-park three-run homer as the Minnesota Twins blanked the Royals 5-0.

The loss reduced Kansas City's lead in the American League West to one game over California and just 3½ games over Chicago, which beat Oakland 9-3.

"We've been looking for a little spark and maybe this will give it to us," said Lynn after California came up with five runs in the bottom of eighth, erasing Toronto's 2-1 lead.

"I haven't been able to contribute in quite some time and to come through in a situation like that makes me feel good," Lynn said. "No matter how old you are, it's the hope of anyone to be able to come up in a key spot and win a game. You couldn't do it any better than that."

Hammond wasn't in a celebrating mood after his bizarre play broke a scoreless tie in the top of the seventh inning.

With nobody out, Ron Washington reached on third baseman George Brett's throwing error and Tom Brunansky walked. The runners were moving on the pitch when Gary Ward hit a grounder in the hole between first and second.

Hammond was slowly jogging toward the infield as if to back up a play when the ball rolled past him and went to the wall. Ward easily circled the bases for his 25th homer of the season.

"I didn't see it til it was right past me," Hammond said. "It was a pretty weak feeling."

Twins hurler Bob Castillo tossed a four-hitter in shutting out the Royals.

White Sox 9, A's 3

Steve Kemp drove in four runs with a pair of homers to spark the Chicago victory. He belted a three-run blast in the first inning and added a solo shot in the third.

Carlton Fisk added a two-run homer and a run-scoring double and Harold Baines had a two-run homer.

Dennis Lamp, 9-7, pitched three-hit ball for the first seven innings and relievers Jim Kern and Sparky Lyle finished up.

Brewers 5, Yankees 3

Mike Caldwell became the most consistent Yankee-killer of all-time with a complete-game victory. He is now 11-3 lifetime against New York for a winning percentage of .786. He passed Dickie Kerr, who went 14-4 versus New York in the 1920s.

Orioles 3, Indians 2

Eddie Murray drilled his 28th homer of the season with two outs in the top of the 13th inning.

Sammy Stewart got the win with three innings of hitless relief.

Tigers 6, Red Sox 4

Detroit launched an extra-base assault against the Red Sox as Lou Whitaker led off the game with a homer, John Wockenfuss and Chet Lemon added solo homers and Alan Trammell had three doubles.

Carl Yastrzemski drove in all four Boston runs, three on an eighth-inning homer, his 15th of the season.

Mariners 5, Rangers 2

Gaylord Perry moved into 12th place on the all-time winning list with his 306th career triumph. Perry, who pitched 72-3 innings, moved past Eddie Plank on the winning list.

Dave Henderson knocked in four runs, three with a fourth-inning homer.

IS IT COMING...Anxious youngsters wait for the 1982 Collard Festival Parade to come their way. The parade, over 30 minutes long this year, featured bands from throughout eastern North Carolina and floats from across Pitt County.

'82 Collard Celebration Draws Crowds

Collard Lovers Go For The Greens In Ayden

NEW CHAMP...Robert Bonner, the new collard champ, accepts his trophy from Willis Manning, executive director of the 1982 festival. The week-long celebration of the collard began in Ayden Sept. 6 and will climax today.

Going For The Greens

Robert Bonner (extreme left) puts down his second pound of greens in Saturday's Collard Eating Contest. Bonner, of Grifton, beat out long-time champion D.A. Rodgers and set a new record for collard-eating by downing six and one-half pounds in 30 minutes.

Tall Guys And Tough Guys

Making Music For The Crowd

The D.H. Conley Marching Band won first place in the band competition of the parade. Above, they pause briefly and perform in front of the the V.I.P. stand.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Any new baby worth its salt these days has two fully-equipped nurseries: one with Mom and Dad and one at Grandma and Grandpa's.

Each one has a bed, a playpen, a potty seat, blankets, assorted clothes and toys. The toys tell a story.

Soon after the birth of a baby, a mother must make a decision. She knows that throughout a child's lifetime he will receive many toys, some more devastating to the human body than others. She must weigh the options. Who will house these toys? The new parents whose job it is to discipline firmly and give their full attention to this child? Or those two, sweet, vulnerable people in their twilight years who are so awed by this precious life that they blindly accept whatever you give them?

The decision is usually quick and decisive. Stick it to the grandparents.

From all appearances, the toys are divided evenly between the two houses. It is only after you watch a mother designate a toy's future that a pattern begins to develop.

Any game that has 187 pieces, cannot be seen by the human eye, and screws up the vacuum sweeper goes to Grandma and Grandpa's house.

Any doll that has a wardrobe trunk filled with 1-inch bras and bikinis that get lodged under your fingernail when you try to pick them up, is left at Grandma and Grandpa's.

Anything that has a wheel off or needs painting goes to you-know-who.

Anything you have to add water to is definitely a grandparents' toy, as is anything that takes the top of your head off like whirring tops, computer bleeps, drums, horns and sirens.

Size is a big factor in determining at whose house a toy will come to rest. Grandparents automatically get any toy that dominates a living room (trampoline, tent, horse, indoor gym, full-size fuel rocket).

Why do grandparents put up with it? I visited a friend of mine recently who had just become a new grandmother. She was perched on the edge of the sink, held captive by a battery-driven robot that stood three feet tall, had two bug eyes, and kept mumbling, "Phone Home."

"Every time I think of telling my daughter to take all these toys off my hands, I feel sorry for her. She's stuck with the kid!"

On The Young Side

By Lisa Wang

With renewed energy, excitement, aspiration and a fresh set of resolutions, which often accompany the beginning of a new school term, students at Rose High gear up for a year of activities and achievements.

Newcomers to the school were welcomed in a student reception held Thursday and sponsored by the SGA and guidance office. They were welcomed by SGA President Tim Shank and encouraged to get involved in school activities.

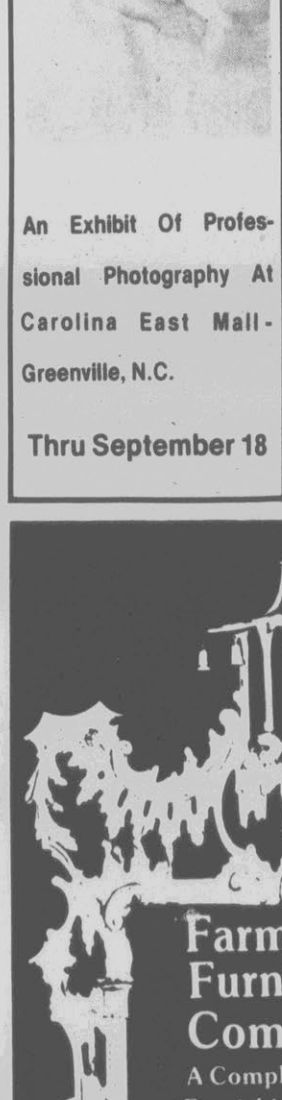

The 50 students were also greeted by Roger Warner, Mike Kinley and Curt Hendrix, senior, junior and sophomore class presidents, respectively, as well as representatives from various clubs. The reception offered the new students the opportunity to mingle and become familiar with their student leaders and guidance counselors.

Greenville Museum of Art will be funding a workshop for the Art Club on enameling, a process of firing colors onto copper pieces to make jewelry and small art objects. Professional enamelist, Linda Darty, and Rose art teacher, Billy Stinson, will be conducting the weekly, two-hour workshop which will last for 10 weeks. Members plan to make art club pins and jewelry to put on display and enter in competitions.

Future Leaders of America have elected leaders for the new school year. Officers are Catharine White, president, Jackie Carter, vice president, Lynn Sutton, secretary, Charlene Elks, treasurer, Debra Dixon and Lisa Hardee, reporters.

Competing this summer in the 28th annual Lenox Creative Table Setting Contest, Cynthia Barnes received a rank of honorable mention. The contest was designed to encourage home economic students to develop and display their talents in tabletop display.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George M. Fesperman Sr. of Rocky Mount, the bride was escorted by her father and given in marriage by her parents. Mr. and Mrs. Albert G. Giordano of Wayne, N.J. are parents of the bridegroom. His father served as best man.

The bridal attendants were Sandra Bobbitt of Charlotte, maid of honor, Brenda Cox of Kinston, Adelaide Giordano of San Diego, Calif., sister of the bridegroom, and Karen Ann Taylor of Brightwaters, N.Y., cousin of the bridegroom.

Milton and Roy Fesperman of Rocky Mount, brothers of the bride, David Giordano of Wayne, N.J., brother of the bridegroom, James Taylor of Brightwaters, N.Y. and Keith Wolling of Westfield, N.J., were ushers.

Gene Featherstone of Rocky Mount, organist, and Jeff Krantz of Winterville, vocalist, presented a program of nuptial music.

The bride was wearing an ivory formal gown of silk organza over peau de soie. The molded bodice with back yoke closed with self-buttons and was embellished with designs of Venise lace fleurettes re-embroidered in pearls and crystals. A Queen Anne neck was bordered with scallops of lace and the puffed sleeves adorned with cut-out wreath designs of lace, ended in split cuffs appliqued and eged in lace. An overlay of scallop lace encircled the lifted waist and the flaring skirt extended into a built-in train which flowed chapel length. Her walking length veil of English silk illusion with inner frame of scallop lace was attached to a profile cap enhanced with motifs of lace centered with pearls and edged with pearl stems. She carried a bouquet of cascading ivy.

Each attendant wore an ivory linen floor length gown styled with a fitted T-strap bodice accented with a natural waistline with a white linen rope belt. A sleeveless tuxedo styled bolero topped the bodice. They each carried a single peach colored flower with ribbon streamers.

The reception was held at the Benvenue Country Club in Rocky Mount. Frances Harris and Lillian Aycock, aunt of the bride, assisted. Ms. Harris directed the wedding. Greeting guests were Mr. and Mrs. William Eskridge of Rocky Mount.

The couple will live in Greenville after a wedding trip to Bermuda.

The bride is employed as a registered nurse at Pitt Memorial Hospital. She graduated from the University of North Carolina at Greensboro. The bridegroom is employed as eastern North Carolina area manager for Crothall American, Inc. and graduated from Texas Christian University.

A buffet dinner was given by Mr. and Mrs. Pat Raiford of Rocky Mount in honor of the bride's parents. It was held Saturday evening for the bridal party and out-of-guests. The parents of the bridegroom entertained at a rehearsal dinner Friday evening at the Benvenue Country Club.

A bridesmaids luncheon was held Friday at the Benvenue Country Club and was given by Mr. and Mrs. Doug Wade for members of the bridal party, relatives and out-of-town guests.

Everybody loves peanut butter, the king of the lunch box. Recent data indicates that four out of five American cupboards holds a jar of peanut butter and we consume more than 250,000 tons of the spread each year.

Wedding Vows Said Saturday In Charlotte

MRS. MARK STEVEN EPSTEIN

CHARLOTTE — Dorothy Kelly Reeves of Forest City and Mark Steven Epstein of Charlotte were united in marriage Saturday at 6:30 p.m. in the garden of the bridegroom's home. Dr. Sidney Freeman of Charlotte performed the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Wallace Reeves Jr. of Grifton and the bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Robert McVay of Providence, R.I. and Selwyn Epstein of Fall River, Mass.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of white organza embroidered in sprays of blossoms. The portrait neckline was scalloped in Renaissance lace which also sculptured the cap sleeves and trimmed the hem and court train in scallops. White satin binding dipped to a peak over the hips where hand-knotted satin bands flowed onto the train. Satin covered buttons accented the V-neckline in back. A wreath of silk flowers and pearls held her illusion veil. Embroidered scallops over the illusion flowed onto the train. Alencon lace and satin streamers trimmed the veil. The bride carried a cascade bouquet of phalaenopsis orchids and white butterfly roses interspersed with stephanotis and ivy.

The bride's only attendant was her sister, Olivia Reeves of Manteo. She wore a two-piece designed dress which featured a beige lace bodice and plaid taffeta tea length skirt. The allover design lace top featured short puffed sleeves and a peplum. An aqua grosgrain sash was tied at the waist in a bow. She carried a similar cascade of beige cymbidium orchids.

The bridegroom's brother, Wayne Epstein of Galletin, Tenn. was best man.

Pianist was Mrs. Joe Woody of Rutherfordton. Christie Stieger of Charlotte directed the wedding.

The bride is a member of the faculty of Isothermal Community College in Spindale and the bridegroom is president of Pacer Manufacturing Co. and Manufacturers Outlet Stores in Concord. She graduated from the University of North Carolina in Wilmington and holds a master's degree from East Carolina University. He graduated from Bryant College in Providence, R.I. and is currently attending Queen's College.

After a wedding trip to France, Switzerland, Germany and Italy, the couple will live in Charlotte.

Immediately following the ceremony, the bride's parents gave a buffet reception in the garden. Margaret Sugg of Bethesda, Md., aunt of the bride, greeted guests and good-byes were said by Mr. and Mrs. Gerorge Gardner Sugg, aunt and uncle of the bride of Grifton. Mrs. Glendel Tucker of Grifton cut and served the wedding cake.

On the eve of the wedding Mr. and Mrs. Selwyn Epstein entertained at a dinner at the Radisson Hotel in Charlotte for family members and out-of-town guests.

Mrs. Sumrell Gives Talk

The Welcome Wagon Club of Greenville held its luncheon meeting Wednesday at Western Sizzlin' Restaurant.

Lucille Sumrell, crafts supervisor with the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department, gave a program on seasonal arts and crafts.

Patrice Alexander from the ECU drama department will present the program at the Oct. 13 meeting. The place will be announced.

Barbara Hall, president, gave the welcome. Clemencia Molano introduced prospective members including:

Linda Davies; Mary Ernst; Susan Ratcliff; Robin Kelly; Marie Hills; Mitzi Spitzer; Vicki Rapson; Becky Mulvaney; Nadian Belshaw; Emily Lewis; Rita Sumsky; and Charlie Colson.

Here's a tasty twist on the traditional club sandwich from home economists. Spread four slices of bread with thousand island dressing. Layer two slices cooked bacon, a slice of Swiss cheese, two slices of turkey meat and thin slices from half an orange with lettuce on each piece of bread. Top with another slice of bread, cut sandwiches in quarters, secure with wooden picks. Makes four sandwiches.

Engagement Announced

EMILY ALLEN BEDSOLE...is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Bedsole of Route 1, Tar Heel, who announce her engagement to Tommy Wade Gardner Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Tommy Wade Gardner Sr. of Williamston. The wedding is planned for Oct. 31.

Her Way Of Life Is Red, White And Blue

By MARK D. FRANK

KINGS ISLAND, OHIO (UPI) — Garnette Boothby, 62, is known as the "Red, White and Blue Lady."

One evening recently, she wore a red blouse, blue blazer and white pants; the face on her red, white and blue wristwatch was that of an American flag; her eyeglasses frames, a ring and earrings were red, white and blue.

Her small frame house is painted red with white trim and blue doors.

Visitors don't know whether to say hello or salute when they walk through the front door.

"I started buying just red, white and blue and everything that wasn't I just put in the attic," she said.

She started with red, white and blue sheets and pillowcases; then came the drapes and bedspread and a throw rug with blue and red stars.

"From there I thought this was a pretty good gimmick and at the time the country was gearing up for the Bicentennial so I bought sugar and flour cannisters, curtains and I cut out red and blue stars and put them on everything in the house," she added. Even the garden rake is red, white and blue.

Her husband has a watch that even plays John Philip Sousa's "Stars and Stripes."

"I just try to go along with her," he said.

She and her husband fly two American flags at their house. One of the flags has a spotlight focused on it. She sings The Star Spangled Banner every morning. At Kings Island amusement park north of her native Cincinnati, where she has worked as supervisor of housekeeping since the park's opening a decade ago, her office is filled with red, white and blue memorabilia. Her staff wear red, white and blue uniforms and are given flag pins on holidays. Why the patriotic fervor?

"My sister became upset in 1968 when her son went to Vietnam," Mrs. Boothby said. "She was very upset, but I figured that if I only wore red, white and blue and nothing else it would cheer her up.

"I just got hooked on it, I guess."

"I didn't realize I was particularly patriotic," she said. "It's just a way of life.

"Sure there are problems here and you pay a lot of income tax but isn't it worth it to live here and be able to do what you want to do?"

Dear Abby

Be A Pal And Pick Up A Pen

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR READERS: A few years ago a soldier stationed in Korea wrote to tell me what a heartbreaking sight it was to see so many servicemen hurry to mail call day after day and walk away empty-handed with tears in their eyes.

I urged readers who wanted pen pals to write to: Operation Dear Abby, c/o Commander: U.S. Forces, Korea, APO San Francisco 96301.

It was a huge success. I learned that within two months, 20,000 letters had arrived, and the morale of the men had never been higher!

Well, friends, the offer still goes. I've cleared it with Public Affairs Officer Col. Richard G. Hyde, who assures me that the servicemembers in Korea would welcome pen pals. So, make someone happy, and write a letter to a lonely soldier today. And remember, there are lonely women in our armed forces, too. Use the above address, and let me know if anything rewarding develops.

ABBY

DEAR ABBY: I am a woman in my early 30s with two children, ages 4 and 8. I am recently divorced and am now living with my ex-husband's father. (I'll call him Ralph.) When I say I am "living with him," I don't mean just sharing expenses either. To put it bluntly, we are sleeping together.

My question: Should my children call him Grandpa, Dad or Ralph? And how much should I explain to them about this situation?

Ralph thinks we should be open and honest with them, but I feel we should shelter them since they just went through the trauma of divorce.

IN DISTRESS IN INDIANA

DEAR IN: If your children have always called Ralph "Grandpa," they would probably be more comfortable calling him Grandpa for now.

Your children are undoubtedly much more aware of the situation than you think, so any attempts to "shelter" them would be useless. I vote with Ralph.

DEAR ABBY: Our 29-year-old son (I'll call him Johnny) recently called and asked us for $2,000 for a new pickup truck. He said he was borrowing $5,000 elsewhere to make a total of $7,000. He told us that he and his wife (they both work full time) are buying a home and have no money in the bank.

When my husband began to question the advisability of taking on such a large debt, Johnny said he "didn't need a lecture, and to take the money and shove it." Then he hung up.

The next day, Johnny's wife called and said most of their friends are being subsidized by their parents, and they think we should do more to help them.

Today we received a letter from Johnny saying that because of our negative attitude he is cutting us out of his life. We are in shock and heartbroken. What should we do?

THE PARSON'S DAUGHTER

DEAR DAUGHTER: What should you do? Nothing. What should you not do? Give him the $2,000 to get back into "his life."

* * *

CONFIDENTIAL TO T.M.: You know you're getting old when a lady you've never met before is seated next to you at a dinner party and she asks which is your good ear.

Removing Wrinkles

A cure for no-iron garments that are winkled because they weren't removed promptly after tumble drying is to put them back in the dryer.

Turn the dryer on and set for about 15-20 minutes using the permanent press or timed cycle at a high temperature setting advises Dr. Judieth Mock, extension clothing specialist at North Carolina State University.

The heat and then cool-down period at the end of the cycle should remove the wrinkles.

Proper Display Of Food

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Each month they arrive — those shiny magazines that celebrate the pleasures of home and table.

On their covers and color pages are beautiful dishes garnished in spectacular fashion.

Those superb supper trays, dessert tables and meals are enough to make a good cook envious. But the difference between your food and that in the magazine is probably nothing more than presentation, according to Molly Siple and Irene Sax. And presentation can be learned, say the two women.

To prove their point, they've written "Foodstyle," a book that takes the mystery out of food arrangement and shares with the reader the trade secrets food stylists have been amassing over the years.

"Think of proper presentation as interior decoration for the table. It's the final accessory," said Ms. Siple. Her message is that anyone who has ever put a sprig of parsley on top of a sandwich or topped a mound of whipped cream with a maraschino cherry has engaged in this subtle art.

"People really know a lot more than they think they know about how to present food in the best light," said the former entertaining and tableware editor for House Beautiful magazine.

Principles true for any type of design apply as well to the display and arrangement of food on plates on a table. She described these principles as proper composition and color blending, scale and stylistic harmony.

In fact, added Ms. Siple, honing design skills at the tabletop is an excellent — and less expensive — way to practice lessons that can be applied to other areas of design.

When you take a toothpick and put an olive and a cherry tomato on it and then stick it in a club sandwich, that's scale. When you garnish a filet of sole with parsley and lemon, that's contrasting color. When you combine a steak with watercress and shoestring potatoes on a platter, that's composition, and when you select a red and white checked tablecloth to go with straw baskets for an informal meal, that's stylistic harmony.

The art of attractive food presentation only involves actually seeing what is there and taking a few minutes to improve on it, she said.

A trick which food stylists use to enhance a dish is to vary the background color of the plate depending on what food is set on it.

"A dark plate makes almost any food look more vivid and inviting and more intense in color. On a clear glass plate, however, the food seems to float over the table. And if you opt for plates with a border design, you provide a frame to contain the food, which works in much the same way that a picture frame enhances and contains a work of art," says Ms. Siple.

As a rule, interesting platters and table settings employ an element of surprise to create their special effects. One simple method of doing this is to select unusual garnishes.

"A bit of kiwi fruit is better than a sprig of parsley, even though both are green, simply because you aren't used to seeing the kiwi. The eye doesn't notice what it is accustomed to, but something unexpected has more impact," she said.

Among hints she offered to those who wish to add more drama to their tables are:

"Take a tip from nouvelle cuisine and put the sauce under, not over, the food it is garnishing.

"If you are preparing a plate of raw vegetables and a dip as an appetizer or party dish, select the vegetables all in one color for a change — for example green broccoli, zucchini, asparagus, lettuce, beans and celery. Contrast with a creamy white dip."

You can enhance a fruit arrangement with the addition of leaves. She suggests a palm frond, grape ivy, or even one large and showy flower. The best arrangements usually consist of a greater variety of shapes and sizes. If you always have pears, oranges and bananas, next time add cherries, grapes and a pineapple and see if it isn't easier to make something attractive.

A Review

Something For Everyone

St. Andrews (Presbyterian College) Review. Spring-Summer 1982. Laurinburg. Bill Evans Co. 1982. Softcover, 109 pages, $6.00

This issue of the twice-yearly magazine literally has something for everyone. It is divided into four sections — poetry, essays, short stories and book reviews. The cover, designed by James Lineham, is intriguing. It bears the inscription, which is red-pencilled and replaced with the actual title and date of the magazine.

TOBACCO CURING BARNS
INSTRUCTIONS AND RATES

The poetry section contains 48 marvelous poems by 24 authors. Among them is "Perfect Place," a tribute to his mother by Terri Davis, former Greenville resident and author of the novel, "Vision Quest."

Of Kate Blackburn's three offerings, by far the best is the tongue-in-cheek, "Courtesan in Collision."

Two poems examine the power of words: Lois Baskett's "The Voice of Words,"

What can we tell each other that makes a difference?
So if anyone remembers in a prayer of light caught between the spring of toe and heel hitting let him come out with it: the words that count.

"Words" by Deborah Love Hobbs, is short but full of really good images:

Sliding across smoking limbs
Sizzling.

There are nature poems, religious poems, and poems of tribute to fathers, mothers and grandparents — by Louis Daniel Brodsky, John Russ, and a dozen others. Three poems by Dean M. Hale, so aptly depicting prison life, are the best of the entire collection.

Your body isn't there;
they pull it through the hard steel door . . .
to twenty years
and
Willie went over the fence last night.
Parole came through this morning.

In the four essays, all written by Joel Williamson, the author explores the life and careers of Thomas Dixon, author of "Birth of a Nation," and examines Dixon's radical racism. Williamson explains Dixon's reasons for writing "The Leopard Spots" and "The Clansman."

In one of his careers, that of a Baptist minister, Dixon attended a lecture in Boston on "the southern problem." Later, he saw a stage production of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." He became so incensed at the libel against the South in the lecture and the play that he wrote a reply in the form of a novel, "The Leopard's Spots," which he wrote in sixty days. It sold nearly a million copies.

Thomas Dixon, native of Shelby, N.C., and a graduate of Wake Forest College, sets his book, "The Leopard Spots" in the foothills of North Carolina in the period following Reconstruction.

"A new kind of racism, property called Radical, intended to remove the Negro from the region, intended to make the South not so much a land of white supremacy as a land of white only. The phenomenon remains a big part of the recent past, a past which could be replayed." Williamson writes.

Dixon followed his best-seller with "The Clansman," from which "The Birth of a Nation" evolved. This motion picture was exceeded in popularity ony by "Gone With the Wind." "Unwittingly, Dixon revealed a deeper truth than he ever imagined."

The author of the essays, Joel Williamson, presents his readers with a fascinating view into the life, character, and writings of Thomas Dixon.

Three short stories are presented in the "St. Andrews Review" — "Son Nemo," by Alan Hines; "Man vs. Wood" and "The Antelope," by Micheal Ervin. The best of the three is "Son Nemo," a story of frsutration and jealousy of an abandoned husband. The unusual twist at the end startles the reader when he learns who Son Nemo really is.

Arts Programs Mushrooming

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — "Arts programs on cable TV are mushrooming," says pianist Israela Margalit. "Cable seems to care about finding new ways of presenting culture. I think it's the most important thing to happen in this country culturally in a long time."

When Miss Margalit had an idea about presenting chamber music on TV, therefore, she took it to the head of ABC Cable Television. He bought it.

The Israel-born pianist, fluent in four languages, wrote the script. She also plays piano on the show, with seven other musicians, narrates in her charming, easy-to-understand accent. She learned about creating mood with lighting and camera angles and continued to work on the project until the last day of editing.

"Beethoven," two half-hours which can be shown separately or together, will be shown first on Oct. 10. It is planned to be repeated six times after that. Miss Margalit has in mind 20 more composers, if "Beethoven" becomes the first of a series.

"Opera has become so much more popular in America because of successful TV presentation," Miss Margalit says. "I've been bothered for a long time about chamber music. It's the most difficult aspect of music to visualize. It doesn't have the natural drama of opera or the personality of a conductor and orchestra.

"I don't believe that you can simply make music on TV and everybody will enjoy it. That will appeal only to people who like music. I wanted a show where a person who doesn't know classical music will say, 'This guy Beethoven is interesting. This music is beautiful.' And I wanted a level also satisfactory to a music lover.

"I worked on the script for nine months. Lots of vignettes from Beethoven's life are presented, mainly by me and an actor, to humanize his character. It's not a lecture and it's not a slide show. It's a dramatization of the material in which text and music are interwoven.

"Nobody talks during the music. When I speak, you see me. That gives an intensity you don't get with voiceovers.

"I spent a long time researching, to get a fresh point of view. Beethoven has been done so much. I read lots of books unrelated to Beethoven, about the Age of Englightenment, etc."

Last summer, on vacation with her family in Switzerland, Miss Margalit listened to Beethoven's chamber music, to decide what to use and where.

The comment from a musician who has seen "Beethoven" — "This popularizes music without vulgarizing it" — is Miss Margalit's favorite.

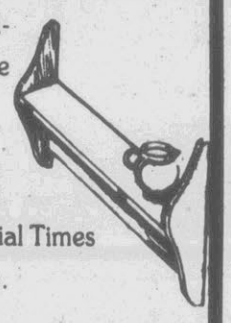

The pianist, who is the wife of conductor Lorin Maazel, was born in Haifa, Israel. She graduated from the Academy of Music in Tel Aviv at 18 and went to London and Munich for further study.

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By WILLIE NELMS

It has often been said that the American people have a love affair with the automobile. The independence offered by the mtor car has blended well with the free spirit and motion of American life. Several new books at Sheppard Memorial Library will please auto enthusiasts who like to read about the history of the automobile industry.

"Chevy Super Sports, 1961-1976" by Terry V. Boyce traces the history of the popular Super Sport options offered by Chevrolet. Beginning with the Impala models in 1961 and going through the Chevelles and Novas of the next fifteen years, Boyce describes the attractions of this line. The book is heavily illustrated with photographs of models of the 60's amd 70's. The author notes the engineering and marketing trends which went into making the Super Sport option such a popular version of the Chevrolet. A real dose of nostalgia, "Chevy Super Sports" will appeal to anyone who remembers when automobile driving included power at the foot pedal for 27 cents per gallon of gas.

Thomas A. McPherson's "The Dodge Story" is a pictorial account of the automobile which had its origins in 1915 and continues today. Encyclopedic in nature "The Dodge Story" describes almost every type of motor vehicle from trucks and taxi cabs to 426 semi Chargers. This book will be a vital resource for car spotters or anyone else interested in the line. McPherson describes engine offerings, original prices and curb weights. Although Chrysler Corporation has experienced difficult times in recent years, the author emphasizes the durability of the Dodge line.

Jan P. Norbye and Jim Dunne have written a very good narrative of another automotive line in "Oldsmobile: the Postwar Years." The authors analyze the inner workings of GM's Oldsmobile division, showing how styling and engineering decisions were made to meet changing public demands.

Exclusive

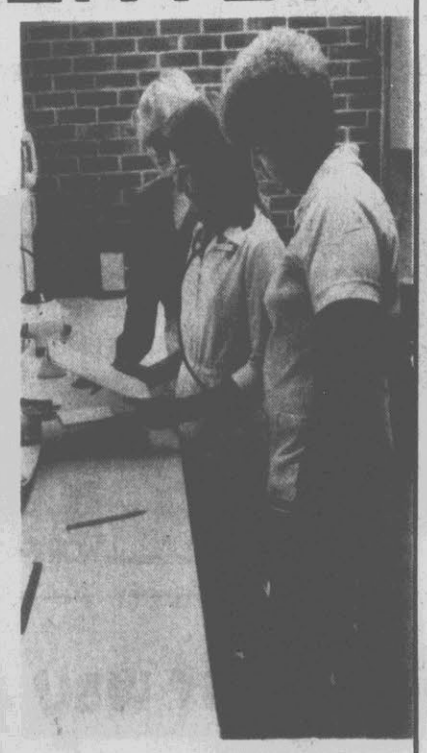

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — "E.T.— The Extra-Terrestrial" this summer joined the exclusive society of movies that have earned $100 million or more at the box office, but so has a grungy kid movie titled "Porky's."

The ranks of $100 million movies is led by "Star Wars" with $400-plus million and such other recent hits as "The Empire Strikes Back," "Raiders of the Lost Ark," "Jaws," "Superman II," "Smokey and The Bandit," "Rocky," "Grease," "On Golden Pond" and "Close Encounters of the Third Kind."

Because theaters charged what is now considered a pittance 20 or 30 years ago, few classic films of the past have joined the $100 million ranks.

Relative oldtimers in that golden circle are "Gone With the Wind," "The Sound of Music," "American Graffiti," "The Exorcist," "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest" and "The Sting."

A Literary Treat

Crucible. Volume 18, 1982. Wilson. Atlantic Christian College. Arts and English Departments. Large format. Paper.

One of the literary pleasures in eastern North Carolina each year is the annual appearance of "Crucible," the distinguished magazine published each year as a joint effort of the Arts and English departments of Atlantic Christian College in Wilson.

"Crucible" is a juried outlet (with substantial prose and poetry awards) open to writers in North Carolina — aspiring young writers as well as established ones. A mark of its prestige is the fact that many well-known Tar Heel writers submit manuscripts each year.

The current issue has so much fine material that it's difficult to see how the judges were able to decide on award winners. It's equally difficult to decide which of the poems and stories to cite in a review. Nearly every piece is worthy of the considerable space it would take to detail the reading pleasures afforded. Since that cannot be, here's a brief look at a few of several favorites:

• Randy Clayton's poem, "The Garden," is an image-filled poem that can easily hook the reader with a bent for nostalgia.

I listen on my back in the cool of the corn
To the chuk-chuk of my father's hoe scraping the rows While cloud-goats dance down the afternoon sky between
The torn wisps of cumulus curtains.

(Randy Clayton's short story, "Habebunt Lumen Vitae," an eerie tale of experiments in a laboratory, is this year's first prize in fiction.)

• The most chilling (and the most tightly written) story in this issue is Taylor Koonce's "Free Ride to Georgia." . . ."Willy Ray was frightened. Elevators reminded him of the closet New Mama used to put them in and now he was sitting in here alone, and it hadn't moved yet." Willy Ray, unwanted, abused, shunted about all his life until he began striking back, had the gift of making time stop by rubbing the snake on his arm. Strapped in the gas chamber he thought was an elevator, he nevertheless managed with a powerful dying effort to break a strap and rub the snake as the lethal gas begun to snuff out his life.

• Duncan Smith's top award poem, "Certain Inferences from Natural Phenomena" is a fine tribute to nature poem ending in these lines:

This spring when my father
On his way out to plough
Stopped and said:
"It's the unseen wings of the hummingbirds
That make them beautiful."

• Ruth Hubbard Young has created a strong portrait in poetry ("November: Old Testament") of an old man fondly remembering his wife. After musing about her Bible, how she got her children in his bed, and recalling the rosemary and rue she planted by the kitchen, his thoughts turn to

Beyond our garden in the family plot,
I finger my name in sandstone, marking the empty spot beside her.

• The poignancy of a boy's discovering some measure of worth in a father he found it difficult to be proud of is beautifully told in Michale C. White's story, "Kindling."

This year's "Crucible" is rich in poetry and prose evoking time and places of the rural South. They're welcome additions to Southern literature.

Tom Braswell provides a portfolio of eight outstanding black and white photographs, details of landscapes in moods of poetic darks and lights.

Art Calendar Kick-Off

The sales kick-off luncheon for the 1982-83 Greenville Museum of Art calendar was held August 31 at the Museum, 802 South Evans Street.

The black and white calendar, measuring 11 by 17 inches (unfolded), contains date notations of a number of community events in music, art, theater, social and sports areas. The cover page is a reproduction of a pen and ink sketch of the Museum donated by Carolyn Ross Hubbard.

There are 12 photographs of art work, drawn both from the Museum's permanent collection and from exhibits during the past year. Each page also contains a space for notes and a quotation from a prominent artist.

Another feature is a two page listing of book, garden, civic and other clubs with the time and dates of their meetings.

The calendars, which run from September 1982 through August 1983, are on sale and are priced at $5 each. They may be purchased from any of the persons listed below or from the Museum.

Susan Lewis was chairman for compiling the calendar. She was assisted by Betsy Dunn, Chris Edwards, Teresa Morris, Betty Tanzer, Joan van Scoy, Enid White and Mary Anne Pennington.

History Of A Native North Carolina Grape

Scuppernong — North Carolina's Grape and Its Wines. By Clarence Gohdes. Durham. Duke University Press. Hardback, 115 pages, $14.95.

Clarence Gohdes is to the Scuppernong grape as Alex Haley is to Chicken George.

Gohdes' roots of the Scuppernong family begins with the first known Scuppernong, "discovered" in North Carolina in 1755, and ends with a pedigree chart of Mother Scuppernong's sixth generation descendent, Dixie. Between the two is a unique historical viewpoint — U.S. history as seen through the eyes of a grape.

This perspective, while bizarre enough to be interesting, creates some organizatinal problems for the author.

Excluding the era of prohibition, the Scuppernong family as a whole experienced little conflict. Without conflict, the first and last third of Godhes' history, while well-researched, are unstructured and unfocused.

To Gohdes' credit, however, the central third of the book — the third that deals with prohibition in its state and national guises — is interesting, well-organized, and coherent. Gohdes builds his story around both the conflict of the prohibition years and a biography of Paul Garrett, North Carolina vintner and champion of the Scuppernong.

And somehow, Gohdes manages to create emotional rapport between reader and grape as he paints his picture of prohibition and its effect on the Scuppernong family.

During the dark times of prohibition, which began in North Carolina in 1903, the Scuppernong family was yanked from a position of social prominence (scuppernong champagnes were at that time ranked the best in the world) and dragged to social disgrace.

As time passed and persecution grew, the noble Scuppernong were forced to disguise themselves as tonics and elixers in order to survive. They were pressed into becoming brick concentrates and forced to bear warnings that read: "The beverage /made from these grapes/ should be consumed within five days, otherwise, and in summer termperatures, it might ferment and become wine."

Other Scuppernongs were drafted for use in sacrimental wines. Religious organizations, especially synogogues, experienced tremendous congregational swellings as potential converts realized sacrimental wines in general were exempt from federal regulation . . . and that the Jewish religion allowed the use of sacrimental wine in the home.

Less dignified Scuppernongs appeared on "blind-tiger drugstore" shelves. One Raleigh druggist, in three months, filled 50 prescriptions for wine, along with 3,990 for whiskey, 555 for beer, 26 for gin, and 14 for brandy.

Others had to move to California or worse.

Eventually, of course, things became better for the Scuppenongs.

Their situation was helped by the insanity of the American public which, after making it illegal to produce alcoholic beverages, began producing more illegal alcohol than it had ever produced legally. This public eventually tired of locking itself up for producing illegal alcohol and in 1933 repealed the offending Constitutional amendment.

But it was too late for the Scuppernongs. Today, the Scuppernongs, once nationally famous and adored, are generally processed in small wineries (mostly in North Carolina) or in national wineries that produce wines with names like "Richard's Wild Irish Rose."

Not a pretty picture, but Gohdes paints it with enthusiasm and humor. It's a shame the rest of the book doesn't have similar structure and focus.

RALEIGH — A forum on the preservation and availability of historical records in North Carolina will be held Friday at the Convention Center on the campus of Appalachian State University in Boone.

The session begins at 9:30 a.m. and is open to the public. It is the third in a series of working sessions provided by a $17,500 grant from the National Historical Publications Records Commission (NHPRC). Previous sessions were held in New Bern and Greensboro. Public hearings are scheduled for Charlotte in October and Raleigh in November.

Under the grant, the N.C. Historical Records Advisory Committee has been studying the status of state and local government archives and records programs and the needs of historical records repositories.

Those interested in material to be considered at the Charlotte and Raleigh hearings may receive a copy from David J. Olson, secretary, Historical Records Advisory Committee, 109 E. Jones St., Raleigh, 27611, after October 1. A self-addressed, stamped envelope is requested.

Percussionist Deane New Visiting Artist

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

This year's Visiting Artist at Pitt Community College is a percussionist, born in Winston-Salem and a 1980 graduate of the North Carolina School of the Arts located in his home town.

Christopher Deane, 24, is a percussionist whose range of instruments include the xylophone, vibraphone, marimba and the hammered dulcimer. "There's a wide range of percussion instruments in use today," Dean commented, "and those four I mentioned are the primary ones I play."

In the two years since he graduated from the School of the Arts, Dean said he has "worked with the Charlotte and the Winston-Salem Symphonies. In addition to those positions, I was an in-residence performer with the Aeolian Chamber Players at the Bowdoin Summer Music Festival in Maine."

Music written for symphonic scores "is perhaps my favorite type of music," Deane remarked. "I'm particularly interested in the role of the xylophone in concert music and I also have a special interest in 20th century music."

Deane points out that music written for percussion instrumuments is more and more coming into its own. "There was practically nothing written for percussion until about 40 years ago. Now it's different.

"A number of well known contemporary composers have written music for percussion, people like Carlos Chavez, George Crumb, Edgar Verese, Lou Harrison and Barbara Kalb.

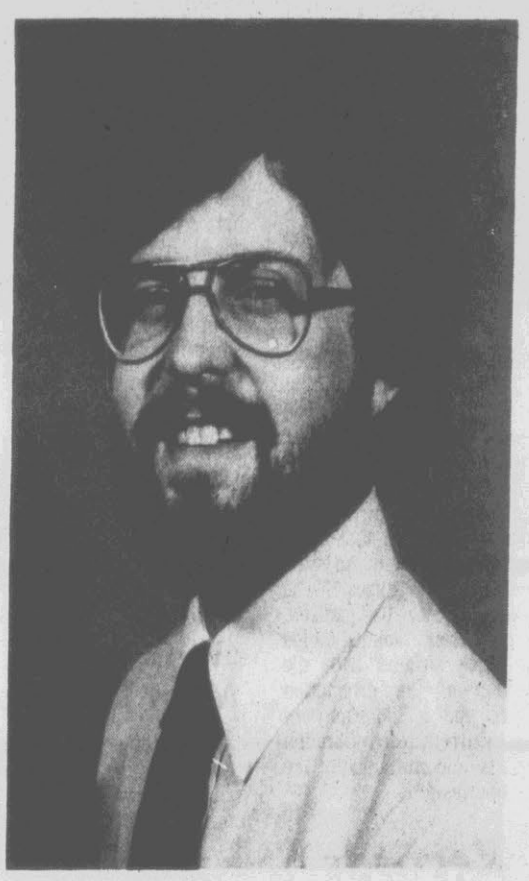

"Another composer who has written extensively for percussion is Sherwood Shaffer, head of the composition department at the North Carolina School of the Arts."

Commenting on his first appointment as one of North Carolina's Visiting Artists, Deane said "This is exciting. It's really a good chance to be involved in the solo aspects of being a performer. Always before I've been an ensemble player. Here, I'm going to be on my own. There's a lot of percussion literature I've been wanting to play."

As Pitt Community College's Visiting Artist, Christoper Deane will be available to give performances to school, church, civic and other groups who wish to have him perform. Deane said he can also include on his programs selections of traditional folk music performed on the dulcimer, and some jazz.

His first public appearance since his September 1 appointment will be a lunch hour concert Wednesday at the Greenville Museum of Art.

Groups wanting to make arrangements for an appearance by Deane are to call Debbie Beddard, 756-3130, extension 238.

CHRISTOPHER DEANE . . . native of Winston-Salem and a graduate of the N.C. School of the Arts, is the 1982-83 season Visiting Artist at Pitt Community College. A percussionist, Deane will make his first public appearance in Pitt County at a lunch concert Wednesday at the Greenville Musuem of Art.

ROCKING AND ROLLING — Guitarist Carlos Santana says he sometimes feels like a tight rope artist, balancing the demands of his younger fans for pop tunes and his older fans' desire for the Latin-rock rhythm that first brought him fame. The combination of music has made Santana's first album, "Zebop," one of the band's most successful in years. (AP Laserphoto)

From Young Boxer To Cowboy To Ballet Dancer

Dancer Recalls A Fantastic Career

By JOHN DeMERS

JACKSON, Miss. (UPI) — When Arthur Mahoney talks of his 78 years as boxer, ballplayer, choirboy, pianist, cowboy, railroadman, ballet dancer, it's tempting, amid his Irish exuberance, to forget the tales are true.

But true they are, from the brawling streets of South Boston to the ranches of the almost-Old West, from the rehearsal halls of Broadway to the glittering stages of Paris and Vienna. He has a mountain of newspaper clippings, programs and photographs to prove it.

"You know, sometimes it all seems like a dream," said Mahoney, relaxing for the first time in his life in the aftermath of a heart attack. "Like a dream. And I just don't know where all the time has gone."

Until he was 18, the idea of dancing as a profession never occurred to him. He had not, however, been an idle lad — what with studying piano and violin, going to school, boxing to build up his frail body, making two public appearances every week: Saturdays on the baseball team and Sundays in the choir.

One day, after his piano lesson, he noticed a picture of the great Nijinsky in a magazine on a newsstand.

"That finished me," he recalled. "I didn't know who he was or what, but I knew that the dance photograph was beautiful and that I wanted to be that kind of dancer."

He had decided what he wanted to do. His father was against it.

"Ballet was a foreign word thereabouts," Mahoney said. "They called it fancy dancing. When I thought I had him in a receptive mood, I told him I wanted to be a ballet dancer. 'What's that?' says he. 'You mean that fancy stuff on your tippy toes?'"

Mahoney ran away from home. He worked a year as a cowboy in Oklahoma, Texas and Kansas. He saw a lot of the country, but little food, so he hopped the freight trains back to Boston.

Oiling and cleaning railway signal poles, Mahoney made enough money to go to New York, where he studied ballet six hours a day to make up for lost time. When he was 19 he had his first professional engagement — at the Metropolitan Opera.

Mahoney stayed with the Met three seasons before joining a Paramount Publix tour of the West Coast. That job, dancing vaudeville parodies of ballet, made him feel like a traitor to his art, but it paid his way to Paris.

There he signed with the Rubenstein Ballet under the legendary Leonide Massine and toured Europe for nearly a year. He studied with Nijinska (his idol's sister) and had the added thrill of dancing in the world premiere of Ravel's "Bolero," with the composer himself conducting the Paris Opera orchestra.

In Paris, Mahoney met Thalia Mara, the 16-year-old daughter of a Chicago real estate man, who had gone to France to study with the famed Olga Preobrajanskaya.

Both young people were engaged to dance with the Russian Opera Company on a South American tour, and both were stranded in Buenos Aires when the company went broke. After a month they worked their way back to the United States, where Mahoney taught a little in Boston before going to New York.

Jerking sodas kept him alive until he joined the Jazz Trio and danced in "Sweet and Low," Billy Rose's first Broadway show. The next engagements were at the Roxy and Radio City Music Hall with time off to study flamenco and to dance in a jazz-surrealist opera called "Helen Retires."

By the time Mahoney was asked to join the faculty of the Julliard School as dance director in 1935, his father was quite reconciled to his choice of career — and to his choice of Miss Mara as his wife.

After 10 years at Julliard, Mahoney joined his wife in directing Jacob's Pillow, a sanctuary devoted to dance in the mountains of western Massachusetts. With this success, the pair opened a school which became the National Academy of Ballet in New York City.

A money crunch caused the academy to close about 10 years later. But the couple carried their ideas south when Miss Mara was hired to lift the Jackson Ballet from a "talent-night" operation to a company of regional prominence.

She did this by the late 1970s, in the process, lured stars like Mikhail Baryshnikov and Peter Martins to the Jackson stage, and helped launch the first U.S. International Ballet Competition in 1979. Miss Mara resigned her post last year in a battle over policy.

Since his heart attack, which came while he was teaching a men's ballet class, Mahoney spends much of his time tending the roses at their Jackson home.

Chowan Slates Musical

MURFREESBORO — A musical of the roaring 20s, "Little Chicago," is being presented at the McDowell Columns stage at Chowan College at 8:15 p.m. Wednesday, Sept. 22. Admission is $3 for adults and $1 for students.

A company of eight professional performers from East Tennessee, The Road Company, is presenting the play, a combination of music and whodunit set in their hometown of Johnson City in 1927, during the decade of flappers.

The musical score mixes old songs with new ones written by Richard Blaustein, folklorist and professor at East Tennessee State University.

"Little Chicago" opened last November in Johnson City as the first offering of the Road Company's 1981-82 resident season. It's first regional tour last spring spanned 16 cities from Charleston to Memphis. The company's current 20-city tour will take them through seven Southeastern states, and is the company's 17th regional tour since it was created in 1974.

In addition to the performance, The Road Comp;any will conduct a drama workshop at 3 p.m. on Sept. 22. Persons interested in registering for the workshop are to call Chowan College at 398-4101. Registration will be limited to 30 persons.

GMA To Begin Music Events

Chris Deane, newly appointed Artist-in-Residence at Pitt Community College, is to be the first guest in a new series of musical events to be presented at the Greenville Museum of Art, 802 South Evans Street, each month.

Deane's concert will take place at noon on Wednesday. Those attending may bring a sack lunch, and beverages will be furnished by the Museum.

Admission is free and seating is on a first-come, first-seated basis.

Craftsman Creates Mountain Dulcimers

DULCIMER BUILDER . . . Tom Fellenbaum puts the finishing touches on a mountain dulcimer he made in his Black Mountain workshop in western North Carolina. Fellenbaum, a Pennsylvania native, decided to settle in North Carolna after graduating from Warren Wilson College in Swannanoa. (AP Laserphoto)

By ELISSA McCRARY
Associated Press Writer

BLACK MOUNTAIN, N.C. (AP) — While many recession-plagued businesses are closing, Tom Fellenbaum is getting so many orders he's having trouble filling them.

His product? Handmade musical instruments, mostly the mountain dulcimer.

Fellenbaum custom-builds instruments and cases to carry them in for people all over the country. He says it takes about a month to build a dulcimer.

"It's amazing how few people make mountain dulcimers, so I get calls from all over asking about them," he said.

Last year by mid-September, he had to stop taking orders for Christmas. He attended several craft shows as a performer only because he hadn't had time to make any dulcimers to sell at the shows.

Fellenbaum, 29, became interested in the dulcimer several years ago when he took a college course on the instrument. At that time, the mountain dulcimer was so rare the class had to order dulcimer kits from Colorado.

"Making musical instruments that look good and sound good is something I take great pride in," he said. "It's a real pleasure when you choose the wood, put everything together and the instrument sounds good."

The mountain dulcimer is a violin-shaped instrument that is believed to have originated in the Appalachian Mountains 300 years ago. Experts say immigrants settling in the mountains had left their musical instruments in their native countries and could no find no craftsmen to make replacements. So they fashioned what came to be known as mountain dulcimers out of whatever wood was available.

The mountain dulcimer doesn't resemble the hammered dulcimer, an instrument first played in Persia 2,000 years ago. The hammered dulcimer looks like a small piano and is played by striking its strings with small wooden hammers.

Most mountain dulcimers have four strings, although Fellenbaum said some have as many as 12. They are played by plucking the strings with the fingers or strumming with a wooden pick.

"It is a true American instrument," Fellenbaum said. "It is also one of the easiest stringed instruments to learn to play."

Fellenbaum, a native of Lancaster, Pa., opened his shop on Black Mountain's Main Street about three years ago. He decided to stay in the North Carolina mountains after graduating from Warren Wilson College in nearby Swannanoa.

The shelves of Fellenbaum's work shop are lined with thin planks of cherry wood, walnut, German spruce and rare Indian rosewood, all of which he will smooth and shape into the instruments he builds. Samples of his work — gleaming guitars, long-necked mandolins or bouzoukis and triangle-shaped psalteries — hang on the walls.

"I'm at the point now that I sell everything I can make," he said. "I only have one assistant, but I really don't want to hire more because then I'll get into being a supervisor and not really a instrument builder. I don't want that."

Part of Fellenbaum's new-found popularity stems from a dulcimer album he and a friend, Jerry Read Smith, recorded last year. The album, which contains mostly Irish folk songs, features Smith playing the hammered dulcimer and Fellenbaum playing the guitar and mountain dulcimer. So far, the album has sold 14,000 copies — a lot, Fellenbaum says, for a folk album.

The two plan to work on another record next year.

Meanwhile, Fellenbaum wants to make more bouzoukis, since handcrafted ones are hard to find. He says he can make bouzoukis for less than companies can mass-produce them.

"What I really want to do is show people that handmade instruments aren't more expensive than buying one off the shelf," he said. "And an instrument made by hand is something of quality that will last a long time, maybe a lifetime."

Plays Frank Buck

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "The other day I was on the jungle set in a dugout wrestling bad guys and fake crocodiles," says Bruce Boxleitner.

"I love it. I get to play Clark Gable, Spencer Tracy, Gary Cooper, John Wayne, and Humphrey Bogart all at once."

Boxleitner, moustachioed, his hair parted in the middle, wearing a pith helmet, jodphurs and knee-high leather boots, stars as the adventurer and wild animal collector Frank Buck in CBS's "Bring 'Em Back Alive."

It's set in 1939 Singapore, where the real-life Buck had his headquarters, hung out at the famous Raffles Hotel, and caroused with his closest friend, "H.H." (for His Highness), the sultan of Jahore.

Buck captured wild tigers, wrestled a king cobra, and once knocked out a giant orangutan with a single punch. In the 1920s and '30s he was a leading supplier of wild animals to zoos and circuses. Like Buffalo Bill, he had a wonderful sense of self-promotion and a flair for the romantic. He created the legend of Frank "Bring 'Em Back Alive" Buck through a series of books and movies, as well as by numerous newspaper and magazine articles.

As exciting as his real life was, this series puts him at the center of action as the British colony of Singapore becomes a hot bed of intrigue, German and Japanese spies, war jitters, and criminal masterminds just prior to World War II.

"When times are hard, heroes are back in fashion," says Boxleitner. "And I'm in the business of selling heroes this year.

O.J. AND CANDY — O.J. Simpson and Candy Clark rehearse a scene from an upcoming NBC made-for-television movie, which Simpson produced, during taping in Los Angeles. The two-hour movie, "Cocaine and Blue Eyes," centers around a private detective who breaks up a multimillion-dollar drug ring. (AP Laserphoto)

Local Boards Delaying Action On School Prayers

Court Rulings Have Chilling Effect

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Newsfeatures Writer

As the battle over prayers in public schools shifts to Congress, which is considering a constitutional amendment to permit them, actions on state and local levels have largely subsided.

This doesn't suggest any lessening of enthusiasm on the part of prayer advocates. It's just that efforts on those levels to institute prayer have consistently run into unfavorable court decision, and the disposition lately has been to await the outcome of congressional debates.

In the meantime, school boards generally have been backing off further litigation, a spot check around the country indicates.

Polls have consistently shown that between two-thirds and three-quarters of the American public disagrees with the Supreme Court decision of two decades ago that outlawed school prayer. President Reagan, prodded by New Right activists and some religious leaders, sent to Congress in May a proposed constitutional amendment that would allow non-sectarian prayer in schools.

"I think you'll agree with me. We need a prayer amendment, we need it badly," the president told the Knights of Columbus in Hartford recently. "We are to have freedom of religion, not freedom from religion."

Yet courts almost always rule that any sort of public, spoken prayer violates the constitutional separation of church and state and infringes the rights of students who don't wish to take part. Even "voluntary" prayer, in which students are given the choice of praying or leaving the room, has been ruled out; so have student prayer meetings that take place on school property during off hours.

Those decisions have had what lawyers like to call a chilling effect on school prayer legislation. While numerous prayer bills have been filed in state legislatures, few get anywhere. When the matter is brought before a local school board it's usually tabled lest the board become involved in a costly suit. Some communities compromise by authorizing a moment of silence before classes begin, and the courts usually have sanctioned it.

Thus, the Rapides Parish, La., school board, under pressure from the American Civil Liberties Union, replaced a prayer referring to "a supreme being" with a policy to permit 30 seconds of silent meditation at the start of the day. Board member Louis Crenshaw said the concession would save the board $15,000 in legal fees.

Similarly, the board in Lee County, Va., substituted a moment of silence for its program of broadcasting morning prayers on school public address systems. The action came after a parent threatened suit.

In Sheboygan, Wis., the school board approved a request by a group of students to use a classroom at North High School for prayer sessions, but withdrew permission when advised of a Supreme Court decision in a New York case overturning a similar program.

And in Macon, Ga., the school board dropped a resolution calling for prayer in Bibb County public schools after board member Edd Wheeler called it "an invitation to litigation." The board settled for a resolution supporting the president's proposed constitutional amendment, which includes a 37-word non-denominational prayer.

The only current holdout is Alabama, where on July 8, Gov. Fob James signed into law a bill allowing teachers to lead "willing students" in prayer. It suggested using a prayer written by James' son:

"Almighty God, you alone are our God. We acknowledge you as the creator and supreme judge of the world. May your justice, your truth and your peace abound this day in the hearts of our countrymen, in the counsels of our government, in the sanctity of our homes, in the classrooms of our schools in the name of our Lord. Amen."

A month after James signed the bill, U.S. District Court Judge W.B. Hand blocked the prayer pending a trial.

"This court," Hand wrote, "makes it absolutely clear that by this injunction it holds that the state of Alabama must remain neutral in respect to establishing a religion."

Said Ishmael Jaffree, an agnostic who brought suit, claiming his three children were ostracized by their teachers for refusing to pray: "I would hope that the defendants realize the law is against them and that they would not try to pursue it any further."

Washington is now the focus of the prayer controversy. Although legislation permitting school prayer has been introduced in Congress, the main effort of prayer advocates is the Reagan-backed constitutional amendment. It reads:

"Nothing in this constitution shall be construed to prohibit individual or group prayer in public schools or any other public institutions. No person shall be required by the United States or any state to participate in prayer."

Some legislatures and school boards are using the proposal to fend off public pressure — wait for the amendment. Court fights have always been futile. Lower courts have consistently upheld, in some cases even broadened, the two U.S. Supreme Court decisions that barred school prayer.

The first in recent times, Engel v. Vitale in 1962, struck down a New York requirement that each class begin the school day with a 22-word prayer prescribed by the state. The second, Abington School District v. Schempp in 1963, overturned a Pennsylvania law requiring the reading of at least 10 verses of the Bible and the Lord's Prayer at the beginning of each day.

Recent rulings have interpreted that ban to mean that students required to attend school — essentially those in elementary and secondary school — should not be exposed to prayer with apparent official sanction. Nor should public school buildings be used for student-run prayer meetings.

The rules for college students, who are under no state compulsion to attend, are different.

Hence two rulings by the Supreme Court within a week last January: one held that barring religious groups from holding meetings on the grounds of the University of Missouri violated their free speech; the other said an appeals court was correct when it upheld the Guilderland, N.Y., school board's denial of a request by students who wanted to hold prayer meetings on school property.

Other recent decisions: a school prayer law in Louisiana was struck down; so was a prayer law in Lubbock, Texas, and a school song with religious overtones in a suburb of Houston. The Massachusetts Supreme Court in 1980 overturned a law allowing teachers to open classes by announcing that a school volunteer may lead a period of prayer. The U.S. Supreme Court in 1980 struck down a Kentucky law requiring the Ten Commandments to be posted in public school classrooms.

Here is a situation report on some states with recent school prayer developments.

LOUISIANA: The Supreme Court upheld a federal appeals court ruling overturning a 1980 state law. It authorized the setting aside of up to five minutes for special purposes including "voluntary school prayer and meditation." That led to the dispute in Rapides Parish, where the board had been openly defying the ruling until the settlement on Aug. 10 with the ACLU.

MICHIGAN: A bill requiring school districts to set aside time for voluntary prayer has passed the Assembly but is bottled up in the Senate after active lobbying by civil liberties groups and mainstream religious leaders. "Frankly, I think it's a dead issue and I wish the Legislature would realize that," says Howard Simon, executive director of the American Civil Liberties Union's Michigan chapter.

ARIZONA: A law requiring a one-minute period of silence at the start of each class has been in effect for two years. But the courts have struck down a voluntary school prayer law in Chandler, a Phoenix suburb; and a proposed amendment that includes a required recitation of the Lord's Prayer in schools failed to make the November ballot.

TEXAS: Last May, a federal judge banned officials at Aldine High School, in a Houston suburb, from leading the singing of a school song because its lyrics are religious. The song, written in 1951, asks God to bless the school and "give us courage and faith to help make our school the victor." Earlier, a federal appeals court had overturned a lower court ruling allowing Lubbock to hold student-initiated prayer sessions before and after classes.

FLORIDA: In 1980, the Legislature passed a law approving up to two minutes of silent prayer or meditation in school. It was a watered-down version of a bill that would have required all teachers to seek volunteers to lead daily prayer. Those who didn't want to participate would have been allowed to leave the room.

MASSACHUSETTS: The state has a silent prayer or meditation law.

Big Difference Due Chemicals

NEW YORK (AP) — The use of chemicals in agriculture could mean the difference between mass starvation and survival for millions of people, according to the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations.

Scientific food production methods must be expanded, says the FAO, along with increasing use of chemical fertiizers, herbicides, insectides and fungicides.

World population growth at a rate of approximately 200,000 per day, poses a "potentially devastating problem," in the opinion of Monte G. Edlund, director of agronomy, fertilizer division, for Phillips Chemical.

"High yielding food and grain crops don't just happen," says Edlund. "They require fertilizers, and they also need protection from plant and insect pests provided by chemicals."

A Stray Camel Snarls Traffic

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — A wandering camel is causing dozens of pedestrian complaints and snarled traffic in Doha, the capital of the Gulf Arab State of Qatar.

"The camel in question has also become an attraction for tourists and fans of bizarre photographs," the Qatar newspaper Ar-Raya said Tuesday. "It has had its photographs published in local newspapers and is becoming the focus of contacts between police and municipal authorities and the cause of frequent phone complaints from citizens."

The newspaper appealed to "the owners of this infamous camel, in collaboration with concerned authorities, to find it a hangout other than busy streets."

Louisiana's Guidebook Is So Heavy It Can't Be Sent Via Mail

By JANET McCONNAUGHEY
Associated Press Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — To let tourists know there's more to Louisiana than the French Quarter and the 1984 World's Fair, the state has put out a slick new guidebook — but you have to come and get it.

"They're free — you just have to come by and pick them up," said an Office of Tourism employee. "We can't mail them because they're so heavy."

"River Trails, Bayous and Back Roads" weighs in at 7½ ounces — 63 cents postage even at book rate. That means it would cost more to mail than it did to print, since state officials say the 530,000 copies cost about 48 cents each.

Its 128 pages lace descriptions of 216 cities, towns and other places with folksy legends and tidbits of information.

The Lacassine Wildlife Refuge, for instance, takes its name from an unidentified Indian chief's version of Kickapoo joy juice. And Natchitoches, the state's oldest city, means "chinquapin eaters," though anyone who doesn't know a chinquapin from a chapeau must turn to a dictionary.

The guidebook also lets you know where you can hunt deer, watch birds, tour historic houses, frolic on a par-64 Frisbee course, attend the blessing of a shrimp fleet or see Miss Slush Pit crowned during Gusher Days.

"You'd be amazed at the interesting things we had to cut out. Little tidbits of history, of trails, things that used to be there and aren't any more," said Cornelia Carrier, assistant secretary of the Department of Culture, Recreation and Tourism.

"We just couldn't print a 200-page book. And we had enough for more than 200 pages," she said.

What it does include is a dozen tours organized more or less along the state's multitudinous waterways, linking the book's theme to that of New Orleans' 1984 World's Fair: "The World of Rivers ... Fresh Water as a Source of Life."

The Mermentau River tour, for instance, lists 19 places. It starts with Lake Cocodrie, where the Indians never took advantage of the wonderful fishing because they believed the lake was formed when a Choctaw village sank and drowned while the braves were out hunting.

It ends with word of El Nuevo Constante — a Spanish merchant vessel which sank off the coast in 1766 and was discovered in 1979. There's no word about how to see the ship, or even if it's possible.

The Lower Mississippi tour, on the other hand, takes a dozen pages to describe 32 cities. Eight of those pages describe New Orleans, which is itself divided into four areas.

The book is indexed by cities and towns, forts, historic houses, racetracks, recreation and camping areas, state commemorative areas, state parks, and tourist information centers.

Ms. Carrier said she is investigating the legal wrinkles of accepting self-addressed, stamped envelopes for copies of the 5½-by-8½-inch book. And she's trying to get the state to change the law that makes it illegal for state agencies to sell such items at cost.

"Tour operators have been dying for something like this that really shows what's along every route if they're bringing a busload of people through," she said.

DEAR MR. GOREN

Q.—What are the differences between "cue-bids" and "splinter bids"? During the auction when we are probing for slam I sometimes get confused about which is which. Please explain the two terms with some example hands.—D.R. Kale, Katy, Texas

(This question has been awarded the weekly prize.)

A.—You are confusing chickens and eggs, and not necessarily chicken eggs. They are two completely different things.

Let's start with splinter bids. They are the easiest to explain. A splinter bid is an unusual jump in a suit. It agrees the previous bid by your partner as the trump suit, shows the equivalent of a forcing raise in his suit and a singleton in the suit bid. Suppose that partner opens the bidding with one heart. You would make a splinter bid of four diamonds (three diamonds would be a natural, strong jump shift) with:

♠Axxx ♡KJxx ◇x ♣AJxx

Or suppose you opened the bidding with one diamond and partner responded one heart. Make a splinter bid of three spades with:

♠x ♡AQxx ◇AKJxx ♣KJx

Note that, in each case, the splinter bid guarantees at least good four-card support for partner's suit.

Cue-bids are a different matter. The first type is where you have a very strong hand and want to make a takeout bid that is absolutely forcing to game. For instance, suppose your right-hand opponent opens one diamond and you hold:

♠AKJxx ♡AKQxx ◇x ♣Kx

If partner holds as little as three or more cards in either major, you can almost surely make game, but you want the opportunity to show both of your suits without fear that partner will drop the auction. Start with a cue-bid of two diamonds. Note that you must have first- or second-round control of the enemy suit for this action.

A similar case occurs where partner has made a takeout double and you want to get to game in one of two or more suits, but you don't know which. For example, suppose that your left-hand opponent opens one diamond, partner doubles and the next hand passes. You hold:

♠KJxx ♡AQxx ◇xx ♣Kxx

You want to play either four hearts or four spades, but partner's takeout double doesn't necessarily guarantee four cards in both majors. So you start with a two diamond cue-bid, and partner will bid his major suit. This bid is simply forcing to game, and promises nothing in the enemy suit.

Last, and probably most important, are cue-bids to check on controls for slam purposes. These are usually easy to distinguish, because control cue-bids start after a trump suit has been established. Each partner cue-bids his controls — showing first-round controls initially and, thereafter, second-round controls, starting with the cheapest control. To illustrate:

North	South
1 ♠	3 ♠

Since a trump suit has been established, the bids for four clubs and four hearts are cue-bids, showing first-round control (ace or void) in those suits. North's five club cue-bid shows second-round control and denies the ace of diamonds — you don't cue-bid second-round controls until you have shown all your first-round controls.

Study Pinpoints Reason Buttermilk Can Go Bad

By CAROLYN S. CARLSON
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — Ice cold buttermilk poured over big chunks of cornbread is a delicacy enjoyed by many Southerners on a summer afternoon — unless, of course, the buttermilk has gone bad.

The inconsistent quality of store-bought buttermilk has become such a problem that American consumption of the dairy product has dropped by 24 percent, from 2.6 quarts per person in 1970 to 2 quarts per person in 1979, according to statistics gathered by the Milk Industry Foundation.

But it's a problem that researchers at the Georgia Agriculture Experiment Station in Athens may have solved.

Joe Frank, an assistant professor of dairy science at the University of Georgia, has determined that the bacterial cultures used to turn skim milk into buttermilk also produce enzymes that, after a period of time, attack the compounds which give buttermilk its buttery flavor.

"What is happening is the organisms are producing good flavored buttermilk for the first several days, but after a certain amount of time, the organisms start to destroy the same compound that they made," Frank said in a recent telephone interview.

So the key to making buttermilk that retains its buttery flavor and pungent sourness is to use starter cultures that have been purged of the killer-enzyme-producing bacteria, according to Frank.

Because buttermilk aids digestion, makes pancakes and biscuits fluffy and is rich in protein, calcium and vitamins, Frank and two graduate students from the University of Georgia's dairy manufacturing program launched a two-year study "to find out why the flavor of buttermilk was not being maintained through its shelf-life," he said.

Buttermilk produced from pasteurized skim milk and starter bacterial cultures "should be able to stay in the store for at least two weeks and then be fresh for at least a few more days so you can consume it," he said.

"The problem is not so much that the buttermilk is spoiling. The flavor is just not as good after seven to 10 days. We were looking to find out why there was this decrease in flavor."

So the three researchers — Frank, a 32-year-old son of a Wisconsin cheese maker, and graduate students Steven Hogarty of Ithaca, N.Y., and James Wang of Taiwan — began buying up cartons of buttermilk from local grocery stores.

Back at the Georgia Agriculture Experiment Station laboratories, the three analyzed the bacteria content of the commercial buttermilk and found that the loss of flavor was sometimes, but not always, caused by improper refrigeration.

But careful separation of the more than 100 different bacterial colonies found in buttermilk also showed that "the starter cultures of bacteria, which are used to sour the milk, produced an enzyme that was able to destroy this particular (buttery) flavor compound by converting it to another compound that doesn't have any taste," Frank explained.

"It had been known that some cultures had the potential to do this," he said. "What we did was isolate these cultures from commercial products."

The next step in the research, Frank said, would be to make buttermilk from cultures containing different combinations of bacteria and then test the shelf life of the product "to demonstrate that cultures that are properly selected actually do produce buttermilk that has a good flavor longer."

PLAN YOUR HOME — The SolarWay

A Passive Solar Masterpiece

By Jerry Bishop

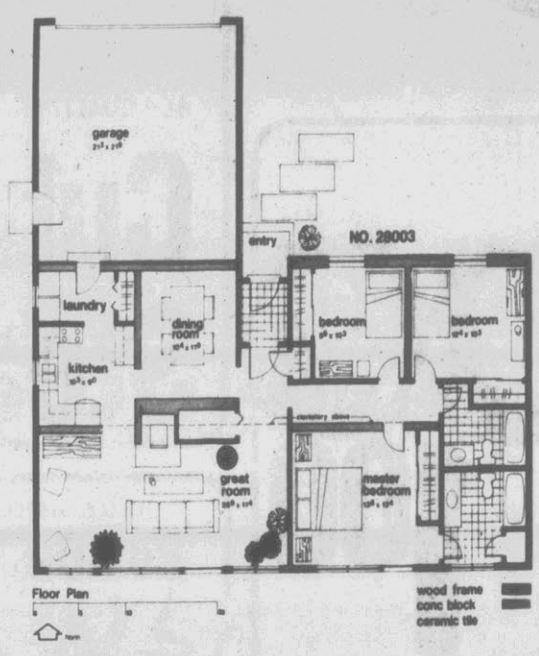

This passive solar home is a modified ranch design with over 1,500 square feet of living area highlighted by a Great Room with a brick-accented wood burning stove. The SolarWay has 3 bedrooms, all featuring large closets, 2 baths, a private bath for the master bedroom, and a formal dining room strategically placed with easy access from the kitchen, also adjacent to the kitchen is a convenient laundry room.

The SolarWay is designed for a flat site with a north driveway access to the 2-car garage.

Among the energy conserving features are 2 x 6 exterior walls with R-19 insulation, an air-lock entry and earth berming. In Indianapolis, about 62% of space heating needs will be provided by passive solar gain through south facing windows and a large bank of clerestory windows.

In the Indianapolis area, The SolarWay, would cost approximately $64,000 without lot and basement based on Spring, 1980 construction costs.

Declines In Real Estate Boost Do-It-Yourself Home Projects

By LINDA WOLOHAN
United Press International

Kevin McKinney of Lansing, Mich., says he decided to remodel his 55-year-old home by himself because it presented a challenge, a thrill and, best of all, it was cheaper than hiring a professional to do the work.

"I loved fixing it up," said McKinney, 25, who bought the rundown two-story frame house on a quiet tree-lined street about two years ago. "I learned about myself, learned about my limits."

McKinney is one of a large number of do-it-yourselfers who are choosing to tackle their own home improvement projects. DIYers spent more than $38 billion on their projects in 1981. By 1985, they are expected to be spending at least $61 billion.

Housing authorities agree the economy has played the biggest part in the DIY trend. In January, the National Association of Realtors reports, high mortgage interest rates were partly responsible for the lowest level of existing home sales in a decade.

It was that same diseased housing market during the 1974 recession that gave birth to the DIY movement, which boomed once again during the current recession. Signs indicate the trend is here to stay.

The need to pinch the penny means many homeowners have chosen to stay put in their homes and repair, redecorate or remodel. Current figures put housing turnovers at every 11 years. Half of the 78 million homes and apartments in this country are in need of remodeling.

Homeowners are deciding to take on their own painting, wallpapering and a host of other projects for several reasons, said Brad Farnsworth, director of the DIY Research Institute.

He said the DIY movement is blossoming because "the cost of professional remodeling is viewed as being very high and the availability of quality professional people is worse than ever before."

Plus, donning overalls and a painter's cap to paint the living room is "much more socially acceptable than it was before," Farnsworth said. "There is a trend toward personal involvement."

Retailers can be encouraged by the 51 percent of the homeowners surveyed in a Home Center Magazine study who said they would spend a larger share of income on home repairs and improvements even if the economy improves.

Greg Hauca, director of the Home Center Institute, said the highest growth sector in the building supply business is the lumber and building supply outlets that have stopped catering exclusively to contractors.

That group now deals half and half with consumers and contractors, he said.

"Retailers are showing a definite commitment to consumers," he said. "They are looking to the downturn in the housing market, which has put great pressure on performance. Those retailers who will succeed will emphasize goods and services and concentrate on DIY products.

"The DIY trend has become a way of life among consumers today," Hauca said.

Retailers have put forth a great deal of effort to determine just who the typical DIYer is — and they've found that person belongs to a rather young age bracket, can't afford a great deal of professional help and has the time and energy to tackle most home improvement jobs.

Ray Harrell, vice president of the National Lumber and Building Materials Dealers Associations, said the typical DIYer is a "young married individual who is moving through the population as part of the post-war baby boom.

"All of a sudden, with inflation and everything connected with housing going up, we find they'll tackle anything," he said.

They have fun doing it.

"DIY projects are great therapy," said Neil Kelly, president of the National Home Improvement Council. "I like to mess around the house. The trend will continue because people like to get their hands in."

In fact, 49 percent of the DIYers responding to a 1980 Home Center Magazine study of 1,005 households across the country said they tackle their own home improvement projects because they enjoy it.

Over half said they do their own work because they could do the job better and 22 percent said they do it to put the money saved by not hiring professionals into better quality materials.

Surprisingly — despite the economy and the home mortgage rate — only 6 per cent of the homeowners surveyed said they fixed up their home due to a delayed buying decision. But one expert said that figure could be higher now.

The study also said DIYers living in the newest and oldest homes are the heaviest home improvement spenders, dishing out over $1,000 per year on the average.

Even though all of the DIYers responding to the study said the biggest motivation for doing their own project was to avoid paying a contractor, other studies show professionals still are called to deal with the most formidable projects.

Here's the Answer

Q. — I have a project coming up in which it will be necessary for me to use a large number of 2 by 4 studs. Years ago, when I did a similar job, I used studs that seemed to be made of hardwood. I have recently shopped at a couple of lumber yards and found their studs are made of Southern Pine. I understand this is a softwood. Will they hold up well as studs, which must support a considerable amount of stress?

A. — Those studs you used years ago were not made of hardwood. And it is true Southern Pine is a softwood, a term that refers to wood from trees that retain their leaves all year round rather than shedding them during cold weather, but it is one of the strongest softwoods known. The stud-grade of Southern Pine meets or exceeds minimum Federal Housing Administration and local building codes for load-bearing partitions and wall framing. Have no fear about their strength.

Q. — I want to install a ceramic tile floor, something I have never done before. I expect to get an instruction booklet where I buy the tile, but I know from past experience such a booklet often doesn't mention where the possible trouble is in doing the installation. Is there anything I should know?

A. — The ceramic tile installation instructions I have seen are excellent. Why not let your dealer lay out the job for you? These days there are quick-set adhesives and special trim pieces to make the task a bit easier and a bit neater. Bring all measurements to the dealer and be prepared to answer queries about the surface on which the tile will be installed. When it comes to the actual installation, set each tile in place with a slight twisting motion and press into place. Don't make the mistake of sliding the tiles against each other. Also, the dealer will probably recommend you use a tile cutter, since it would be very unusual if you wind up with full tiles at the edges. He will rent you a cutter or, if you are a good bargainer, may lend you one as part of the deal.

Q. — I soon will be painting the outside of my wooden house. I notice that every morning the wood appears to be wet from dew, which evaporates after an hour or two. Presumably I will have to wait until the wood is dry before starting to paint each day. Is that correct and is there any special kind of paint I should use?

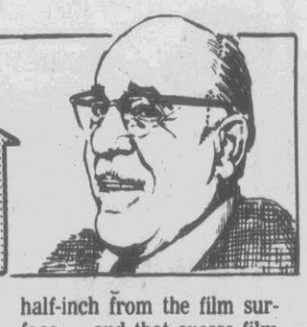

A. — Yes, it is better to wait. However, there are some kinds of latex paint which manufacturers say not only will not be affected by the moisture but may even "take" better when the wood is a little damp. Despite that claim, the advice from this department is to wait until the sun has dried an area before applying paint, then follow the sun around the house as the day proceeds.

Q. — Settle an argument for me. A friend says he read about a house being built in seven hours. I say this is impossible. Ever hear of anything like that?

A. — Yes. The quick construction was sponsored by the North Idaho Building Contractors, the Idaho State Home Builders, and the National Association of Home Builders. It took six hours and 55 minutes to build a three-bedroom house, with the owners signing for protection by the Home Owners Warranty Corporation. All this took place in Post Falls, Idaho. How is it possible to build a house in that short period of time? By having a crew of 242 workers under the direction of Al Bowen, who used his patented system of a pressured wood foundation with floor joists attached to exterior walls.

What's new on the market?

THE PRODUCT — A window insulating kit with an unusual method of removing wrinkles from the plastic film sheeting.

Manufacturer's claims — That the kit contains a transparent, double-coated tape and a tough, plastic film sheeting with the optical properties of glass ... that the product can be applied to aluminum, painted or varnished wood and vinyl-clad window trim ... that it is installed inside and therefore can be placed around drafty windows no matter how cold it is outside ... that, once in place, the insulating material's unsightly wrinkles, if any, can be removed quickly by waving a hair dryer a half-inch from the film surface ... and that excess film at the taped sides is trimmed with a razor blade or scissors.

THE PRODUCT — A spackling compound specially formulated to produce a finished, ready-to-paint surface with a single application.

Manufacturer's claim — That this compound requires no surface sanding prior to painting ... that it will not sag, crack or shrink ... that it will cover nailheads and fill cracks, crevices and even larger holes with one treatment ... and that its excellent qualities were determined in tests by Nationwide Consumer Testing Institute.

THE PRODUCT — A handy clamp for the repair and assembly of difficult items such as chairs and drawers.

Manufacturer's claim — That this clamp tightens a rope around objects up to 9 feet in perimeter and holds them together for gluing, riveting, soldering and woodworking ... that the vital working parts of the clamp are a threaded insert made of tough acetal resin and a tightening wheel with mating threads of nylon resin ... that the average force generated by hand tightening the clamp is about 250 pounds, but this unit has been designed to withstand tested loads of 400 pounds ... and that other components of the device include a plastic housing and a rubber cap to protect the work surface.

THE PRODUCT — A caulk dispensed from an aerosol can without the need for a caulking gun.

Manufacturer's claim — That this siliconized, acrylic caulk is in a white, non-yellowing form ... that it is water resistant and mildew resistant ... that it "skins" over in 10 minutes and becomes firm and resilient within 24 hours ... and that it will not shrink, crack or peel.

THE PRODUCT — A weather seal for the bottom of exterior residential doors.

Manufacturer's claim — That the seal has a 36-inch-long mounting strip with a flexible pile sealing edge that fits closely to the surface of the door ... that it protects against draft, cold, heat and dust infiltration under the door ... that it is available in white and brown to blend with light and dark-finished doors ... and that installation is fast and easy.

(Home handypersons will find much helpful information on a variety of subjects in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," which can be obtained by sending $1.50 to this paper at Box 5, Teaneck, NJ 07666.

(Ther window insulating kit is manufactured by 3M Products, 3M Center, St. Paul, MN 55144; the spackling compound by Red Devil, 2400 Vauxhall Rd., Union, NJ 07083; the handy clamp by Black & Decker, 515 Glebe Road, Easton, MD 21601; the caulk by Insta-Foam, 1500 Cedarwood Drive, Joliet, IL 60435; and the door seal by Stanley Works, 195 Lake St., New Britain, CT 06050.)

Garden Clinic

Q. Is there anything I can do now to reduce the number of insect pests in my garden next spring? (P.D., Fayetteville)

A. Reduce vegetgable pests now by destroying your vegetable garden on completion of last harvest. This is important in reducing the successful overwintering of several hundred species of insects. Some insects that can be reduced to low population levels through crop destruction are the European corn borer, corn earworm, garden flea hopper, asparagus beetles, cowpea curulio, cucumber beetles, squash bugs and vine borers, soil insects and aphids. A little action now can bring dividends next spring.

Q. What do you think of black plastic as a mulch around shrubs? (R,W., Roseboro)

A. I would not use it. Black plastic under these circumstances interferes with normal oxygen and water exchange around plant roots. The results are extremely fibrous, shallow roots, leaving the plant in poor condition to cope with drought.

Q. When is the best time to take a soil sample? (H.S., Moncure)

A. Soil samples can be taken at any time, but there are advantages to fall sampling. By sampling from September through December for crops to be planted in the spring, you avoid delays that the spring rush of soil samples can cause. Also, fall is an excellent time to apply lime if your report says your soil needs it. Conditions for applying lime are usually better than in the spring. Many times spring field conditions are too wet for lime and fertilizer application. Liming in the spring also can interfere with other spring planting operations.

I recently moved into a new house. Do I have to wait until spring to plant trees? (N.F., Charlotte)

A. Trees, shrubs, bulbs and lawns can be planted anytime in the fall until the ground freezes in winter. In fact, there are advantages to planting in the fall rather than the spring. Trees planted in the fall are in their dormant condition and therefore less disturbed by the move. Winter rains and snows help settle soil around the roots before growth begins in the spring so that trees planted in the fall do not require as vigilant a watering program during the critical first summer as their spring-planted counterparts. Spring-planted trees are under the stress from moving and having to bloom and put out leaves. One reason gardeners plant trees and shrubs in the spring is because it is often the time the plant is in bloom and he can see exactly what color he is buying. Go ahead and plant in the fall when the soil is workable (not too wet or hard and dry from lack of water) and mulch your newly-planted trees with three to four inches of bark mulch.

Wrong Tack In Money-Saving

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio (AP) — Some money-saving moves are not worth the sacrifice, Youngstown City Hall workers say.

Peter Vukovich, the building commissioner, had replaced soft rolls of toilet tissue in City Hall with less expensive coarser paper.

Some workers drafted a letter to Vukovich, asking, "Would you please reconsider the type of toilet tissue you have chosen to use in the ladies' restrooms?

"We can't write on the old tissue, but we actually typed on the tissue they put in our restroom."

Vukovich said the old paper would return.

The Poor Bear Burden Of Failing Mexico Economy

TIJUANA GHETTO — Structures which house part of Tijuana's growing masses of poor people sit atop each other on a hillside in the border city, considered the second largest on the west coast, next to Los Angeles. (AP Laserphoto)

By NORM CLARKE
Associated Press Writer

TIJUANA, Mexico (AP) — The elderly widow, shriveled and weary, can't remember her last meal with meat. A mother of three college-age sons works for a few sacks of groceries. A man carrying an old food sack worries that Mexico's crumbling economy will break the poor.

They are among the scores who line the courtyard at the Casa de los Pobres — Tijuana's "House of the Poor" — for their only food.

Reeling from Mexico's 100 percent inflation and three peso devaluations in five months, Tijuana's impoverished masses have reached a breaking point.

"People can take just so much," said 60-year-old Gordden Cordoba, his thread-bare food sack slung over his shoulder. "We are resilient, but there is a limit."

Tijuana, a magnet to poor Mexicans because it borders California, has a population of 1 million, many poor and living in shacks. The population is double what it was five years ago.

Hard times have become a way of life, and as Mexico struggles with its worst recession in 70 years, the effects here are devastating.

Located on a trash-strewn street close to downtown Tijuana, the tiny mission sustains 150 families a week and supplies 1,000 meals a day to the down and out.

"I can't tell you how much it hurt to see this," Sister Armida, administrator of Casa de las Pobres, said Thursday.

The charity institution has been hard pressed to meet the growing numbers of hungry.

"If we opened the doors, we wouldn't have enough to feed all those who want in," the nun said, in tones of resignation.

Donations are few and the budget is strained by the eroding peso, she said as the aroma of bean soup, rice and stew drifted from the mission kitchen.

"Food costs are up 50 percent. We try to serve balanced meals, but it is difficult. There is no milk to buy and meat prices are terribly high," she said.

The Mexican economy is bottoming out after a period of unparalleled prosperity. The oil boom has stopped; industry development projects have stalled. The government owes foreign banks billions of dollars and has issued currency control regulations in an attempt to control the flow of dollars in and out of the country.

To cut expenses the government withdrew subsidies, doubling the prices of gasoline, electricity and basic foods such as tortillas.

Thousands of workers have been laid off. Unemployment affects 40 percent of the working-age population.

Tijuana is marked by stark contrasts between rich and poor. Million-dollar homes overlook miles of multi-tiered shanties that line dusty roads. Many of the shanties lack insulation or running water.

"The injustices won't end," Manuel Medina, 72, leaning on his cane, said. "The rich will only get richer and the poor will get poorer."

Maria Nicanor, 63, trudges a mile each day through gullies and rocky, unpaved streets to work at the mission. For payment, the mother of three sons receives three sacks of groceries.

"She says it has helped her save pennies for her sons' education," Sister Armida said.

Others simply survive a day at a time.

"Some days we eat, some days we don't," said Trinidad Angeles, a widow who picked up her weekly ration Thursday. It included 1½ pounds of beans, some bread, fruit and vegetables.

"Everything is so high I can't afford anything any more. Even the price of water has almost doubled," she said.

Asked if she had received any meat, she wearily shook her head. "Beans and chilies, that's a luxury," she said.

"We are all worried. But we accept whatever God brings. As long as he doesn't forget us," she added softly.

Sister Armida confessed she fears the future.

"The problem is not right now — the problem is coming," she said. "But the power of the people is faith."

Plan Sale Of Weird Items

NEW YORK (AP) — Reptile attache cases, elephant hide boots and a purse made from an armadillo — head, feet and all — are nearer than a wild game safari.

At a government warehouse in Brooklyn, shoppers can browse over a pair of bright yellow, high-heeled men's shoes made of python skin, six elephant hide-and-foot ice buckets and a ukelele made of hairy armadillo skin.

Such items are the more unusual of 32,000 wildlife products the government has confiscated over the past 10 years and now wants to get rid of.

"Some of these products are just so grotesque. But people will buy them," said Megan Durham, a spokeswoman for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

Many of the items were confiscated from smugglers, businesses and unsuspecting tourists who brought them into the country without the required permit.

Mailed bids for the exotic wildlife paraphernalia will be accepted until Sept. 29.

U.S. Owns A Strange Parcel

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The federal government owns lots of land, but perhaps none as strange as a parcel in western Oklahoma.

The parcel, discovered by the Department of Interior's Bureau of Land Management in a survey of excess property, rests along the Oklahoma-Texas border in the panhandle, said Mark Butler, acting area bureau director in Oklahoma City.

The parcel measures .32 of an acre.

Its dimensions? One mile long and 2½ feet wide.

"We know it's there because we found the original survey stakes," Butler said.

Elderly Need Alternative To A 'Home'

By PAT LEISNER
Associated Press Writer

NEW PORT RICHEY, Fla. (AP) — Florence Schlinz was playing bingo in a nursing home when two state workers arrived. It was a lucky day for the 75-year-old widow.

Not only did she win three games but she was chosen to participate in a new two-year pilot project by the state Department of Health and Services to remove taxpayer-supported patients from nursing homes.

Under the program, elderly people are being sent to live in adult foster homes and boarding house-type facilities. For some, the alternative simply might be to provide meals or someone to bathe them or run errands to keep them at home with family or in their own apartment.

"I'm glad. I don't like to be alone," said Mrs. Schlinz, who felt isolated in the nursing home where some of the 120 residents sat stone-like, with blank, forlorn stares.

Each year, thousands of senior citizens arrive in the Sunshine State with their savings and dreams of a tranquil retirement. During the past three years, 12,000 to 15,000 elderly have moved to the state each month, and people ovver 60 make up one-fourth of the state's population of 10 million.

Their dreams don't always come true. A lengthy sickness suddenly eats up cash nest eggs, or degenerative disease strikes. Inflation gobbles up fixed incomes.

So many are consigned to a nursing home, living a regimented life alongside dozens of others who wait for death.

With 20,000 people in nursing homes statewide and its 75-and-older population rising — to 6.5 percent today and a projected 9 percent by 1990 — Florida is looking for alternatives.

The state is not only concerned about costs, but about abuses that can stem from "warehousing" the elderly.

"I've seen so many unhappy people in nursing homes," says Lois Mays, a nurse and former nursing home administrator. "Eventually, they give up."

Fran Sutcliffe of St. Petersburg, a member of the state ombudsman committee on long-term care for the aging, estimates that half of all patients suffer from inadequate food and care or, simply, depression.

Grand juries in Duval and Dade counties have returned reports critical of conditions at nursing homes there in recent years.

Social Security payments to Florida residents total $9 billion a year, but the national program's future is in doubt, as is Medicare, the health-care payments program that sends $2.4 million into the state. Medicaid, the federal-state program that provides for the elderly poor, faces federal cuts.

Florida's annual Medicaid budget is already $490 million, including more than $156 million paid to nursing homes. Medical care costs increased 15 percent last year, outpacing inflation.

Florida's nursing homes are also running out of room, and some experts predict that Medicaid patients will be turned away by the private homes in favor of private-pay patients. Dr. Fred E. West, who studied the impending nursing-home shortage for the University of Florida, says the state then could be forced to put the elderly poor into more expensive hospital beds.

State officials worried about all these trends set up the pilot program, called "CARES," in three areas with the highest number of Medicaid applications for nursing homes: Miami, Jacksonville, and the Gulf Coast counties of Pinellas and Pasco, which include St. Petersburg, Largo, Clearwater, New Port Richey and Dade City.

Since April, roughly 15 percent of the elderly evaluated have been recommended for alternative living situations, says Mary Maulden, program supervisor in Pinellas-Pasco.

Officials review medical records and interviews with the patient and family members in the placement process.

A nursing home can cost as much as $1,400 a month for a patient on Medicaid.

TOUR AFFORDABLE AND ATTRACTIVE SOLAR HOMES AND ADDITIONS

Sunday, September 19•1:00-6:00 p.m.

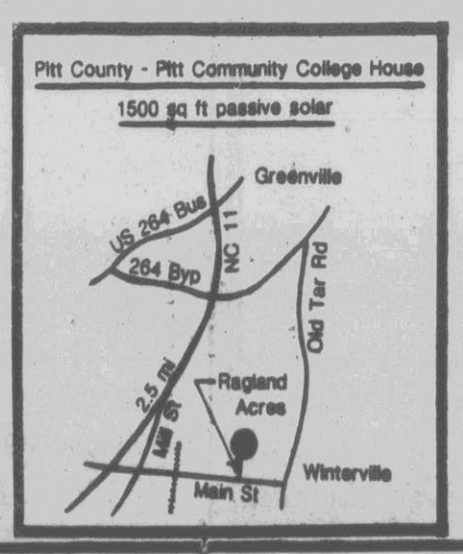

BILL CLARK CONSTRUCTION CO.

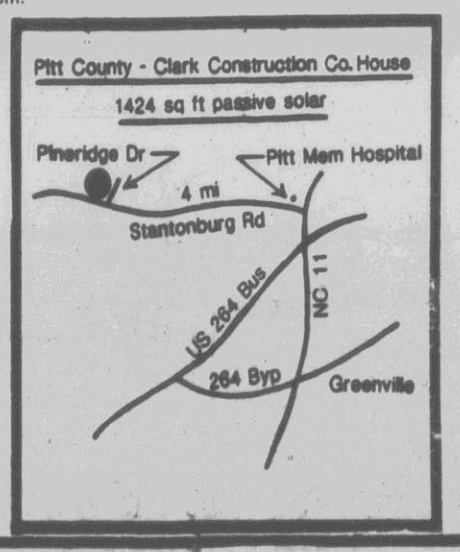

This contemporary design model solar home is owned by Bill Clark Construction Company. Solar heat enters the house through large south-facing windows and through skylights in the cathedral ceiling. This heat is stored in the tile floor and concrete slab. Wall and ceiling insulation are better than required by state building codes and air infiltration has been reduced by installation of a continuous plastic vapor barrier. The home also features an active solar system to heat household water.

PITT COMMUNITY COLLEGE

This uniquely designed passive solar house was constructed by building trades students at Pitt Community College, and will be sold at public auction following the Governor's Showcase open house. Solar heat is collected through a large expanse of south-facing glass. In the bedrooms, trombe walls store this heat. In the central living area, solar radiation enters the space directly and is absorbed by the brick floors and walls. Insulating shades can be lowered over the glass in front of the trombe walls. In summer, the wide roof overhang, whole-house fan, and pre-conditioning earth tubes help prevent overheating. Household water is heated with an active solar system.

Life As It's Lived

By GAIL MICHAELS

I don't know why God has blessed me with two evolutionary throwbacks, but I am simply not up the task of raising them. It's not fair that other people have two or even three children who never offer to climb cribs, highchiars, trees, toilets, walls, or anything else unless under the supervision of a gymnastics instructor.

I knew I was the victim of an injustice when I began the task of raising my first aspiring circus performer, who walked early and climbed before that. But there was nothing I could do to escape my fate. Before she was a year old, she had scaled six-foot bookcases, refrigerators and 20-foot sliding boards with a virtuosity that left me with a case of the chronic shakes.

When she was two she announced that her major goal in life was to perform on the flying trapeze. When she was barely four, she fell from the top of two chairs she had balanced on her bed and knocked out both front teeth. They are still missing.

Then when she five, she fell out of the maple tree in our backyard and required seven stitches in her chin and a root canal on the molar that she fractured. The day after the fall I found her suspended in the air again.

The fact that she could just as easily have broken her neck as her tooth did nothing to contribute to my emotional stability. I tried to hide my feelings from Meg and Phillip, but I actually rejoiced over the contractor's indiscriminate bulldozing of every tree and bush in the vivinity of our new home. My mother-in-law and my mother shared my sentiments.

Of course, my mother-in-law has always been gracious enough to avoid placing blame for Meg's mishaps, at least publicly. My mother, however, knows exactly who is at fault. "You have got to do a better job of supervising that child," she tells me as I, masochist that I am, report each incident. The rest of the phone conversation in punctuated with remarks like "Where is she now? What is she doing? I heard a noise — was it her?"

At least I used to be able to tell myself that Zachary was not following in Meg's footsteps. Of the two, he appeared to have a far better chance of growing up in one piece. If he wanted out of his crib, he called for me. He didn't swing down from it like a chimpanzee. And unlike Meg, he waited for me to lift him over physical barriers like baby goats, highchiars, and closed car doors.

But alas, he too found that climbing could be exhilerating. Last week while I was fixing supper, he let himself into the bathroom, climber on top of the vanity, and fell off backwards, leaving the imprint to his front teeth in the formica top. He swallowed those pieces of teeth that couldn't withstand the impact.

"One thing I know," I told Phillip after I had recovered from the shock. "I am not going to tell mother. She will either insist that I strap him to my back or that I padlock every door in the house and wear a key ring on my belt. Then she'll get angry because she doesn;t have a recent picture of him, and then she'll suggest that I have his teeth capped for cosmetic purposes."

"Well, I don't think you can keep it from her for long. She's bound to notice the minute she sees him.

I'm not sure how, but I may have to hide him for the next four or five years.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — The Eastman Theater will celebrate its 60th birthday this September.

Built by the late George Eastman "for the enrichment of community life," the 3,100-seat theater advertised at its opening in 1922 the presentation of silent movies with live musical accompaniment six days a week, as well as orchestra concerts, ballets, and recitals.

Although its use as a movie palace ended years ago, it continues as Rochester's principal concert hall. Part of the adjoining Eastman School of Music of the University of Rochester, the theater now is at the heart of Rochester's downtown renewal area. "Metro Center."

Mrs. R.H. Evans Sr. will read the resolution and also present the framed copy to Miss Higgs. The resolution was copied on parchment in Old English script by Mrs. C.E. Ridenhour.

Desks Say Much

HOLYOKE, Mass. (UPI) — Most of the nation's secretaries think work items on their desks say something about their ability and their personalities, a recent survey shows.

The study by a major manufacturer of office supplies found more than 65 percent of the people polled felt supplies mirrored their on-the-job performances, reflecting quality, professionalism and neatness.

The secretary respondents said they look for pads and notebooks with better bindings, superior quality paper, better pencils, inks, correction fluid and typewriter ribbons.

The survey also showed more than 75 percent of the respondents thought office supplies can contribute to the efficiency, appearance and neatness of their offices — but only out 22 percent said they were given the responsibility for buying supplies and equipment.

Paraplegic Soars Over Handicap

A paraplegic girl dreams of escaping the confines of her wheelchair by learning to pilot an airplane, in "Skyward," to be rebroadcast Sunday, Sept. 12 (9-11 p.m.) on NBC.

In the story, plucky Julie Ward (real-life paraplegic Suzy Gilstrap) is upset by her family's sudden move to an unfamiliar small town. She rejects the romantic attentions of her new classmate, Scott Billings (Ben Marley), and is sinking into depression until she meets Koup (Howard Hesseman) at the dusty airport and begins helping him rebuild an antique airplane.

Soon, they set out to convince Billy (Bette Davis), a gruff former movie stunt pilot who now operates a run-down cafe, to share her knowledge of flying.

"Skyward" was directed by Ron Howard from a screenplay by Nancy Sackett. The film was a reunion of sorts for three members of the "Happy Days" cast — Howard, who was co-executive producer with Anson Williams (Potsie Webber on "Happy Days"), and Marion Ross, who plays Julie's mother in "Skyward" and Mrs. Cunningham in "Happy Days."

Miss Gilstrap, who had never acted until this film, was acclaimed for her performance and reprised her role in the sequel, "Skyward Christmas."

"I had a great time," she said. "It required a lot of physical and mental output and it was the hardest thing I ever had to do, but it was a fun experience."

Now, two years later, the real-life Cinderella of this fictional story has expanded her horizons as much as her character, Julie. She's been "doing a lot of sailing around Newport Harbor," sometimes on a 21-foot sailboat operated by her school's sailing club, "sometimes in a very small sailboat that holds only one person."

Miss Gilstrap is still playing wheelchair tennis, writing a movie script — "it's about war, and what it entails and does to people" — and spending a lot of time at the beach, at the movies and at parties.

"'Skyward' definitely made a difference in my life," said Miss Gilstrap. "There's been a big change in my attitude. I am more self-confident. Basically, I was very shy. So it helped me, in that way, to deal with people. I'm more active too. I was active before, but not as active as I am now."

BETTE DAVIS STARS as a former stunt pilot who teaches real-life paraplegic Suzy Gilstrap to fly in "Skyward," airing Sunday, Sept. 12 (9-11 p.m.) on NBC.

Better Halves?

Talent runs in the family for many of CBS' daytime actors, but two in particular have especially talented wives — who are writers, in fact, for other serials. Actor Peter Simon, who is seen as Dr. Ed Bauer on "Guiding Light," is married to former serial actress Courtney Sherman, currently a writer for "Search for Tomorrow." And actor Tom Ligon, who portrays Lucas Prentiss on "The Young and the Restless," is married to writer Katharine Clarke, who writes for the new daytime drama "Capitol."

Daytime Actor

Popular daytime actor Henderson Forsythe, who appears as Dr. David Stewart on the long-running serial "As the World Turns," is almost always involved with outside acting projects, in addition to his role on the series. Right now, Forsythe is preparing for a role in the new film "Silkwood," based on the life of Karen Silkwood, the anti-nuclear activist. Meryl Streep will play the title role in the film, which will be directed by Mike Nichols.

Ghosts Return To Village

Horrifying legend becomes reality when sailors rise from watery graves to wreak vengeance on the descendants of their killers, in "The Fog," to be broadcast as The ABC Sunday Night Movie, on Sept. 12 (9-11 p.m). The film was originally released theatrically in 1979.

In the drama, a ghost story becomes a screaming reality when shipwrecked sailors rise from their ocean graves to exact a terrible vengeance on descendants of their murderers. Before the ghastly tale can become prophecy, the scene is set by Mr. Machen (John Houseman), an old seaman who delights the local children with the legend of a group of dead sailors who will return to the village one day with the fog.

Machen's story recounts the fate of a ship lured to its grim destruction in the fog by scavengers, greedy of its cargo of gold. For 100 years, the story has been told ending with the promise that when the great fog returns so will the drowned men demanding vengeance.

On the eve of the centennial festivities of Antonio Bay in northern California, a pea-soup fog, defying nature by moving against the wind, mysteriously engulfs the village, and ghostly mariners rise from the ocean's waves.

Soon, objects assume impossible life, glass shatters by itself, a gas pump gushes at an unseen touch, the church that secretly houses the stolen gold begins to crumble, and no amount of scientific logic can protect the helpless villagers.

IN HER FILM DEBUT, Adrienne Barbeau plays disk jockey Stevie Wayne in "The Fog," a horror story airing as The ABC Sunday Night Movie, Sept. 12 (9-11 p.m.).

Tattletale Guest

Actor Peter Brown and Tracey Vaccaro will be one of the celebrity couples featured on "Tattletales" during Sept 15-21. They replace Shelby Grant and Chad Everett.

Murder Is A Family Affair

The sensational late 1960s murder case in which a Houston plastic surgeon was accused of causing the death of his socially prominent first wife is dramatized in "Murder in Texas," to be rebroadcast in two parts Monday, Sept. 13 and Tuesday, Sept. 14 (9-11 p.m. both nights).

In Part One, as the marriage of Dr. John Hill (Sam Elliott) and his wife, Joan (Farrah Fawcett), deteriorates, his romance with the divorced Ann Kurth (Katharine Ross) blossoms. When Hill asks Joan for a divorce, Ash Robinson (Andy Griffith), her father, issues his ultimatum — no divorce unless Joan gets the house with its lavish music room, one of Dr. Hill's most cherished possessions.

Hill gives the appearance of resuming his marital responsibilities. One evening after dinner at their home, he treats Joan and two friends to a special dessert. Joan becomes violently ill.

Hill's medical treatment of her is unusual. He takes her to a small, inadequate hospital where she dies. Before an autopsy can be performed he has the body embalmed. Two months later, he marries Ann Kurth.

"One of the most satisfying things about the film is the fact that they stuck so closely to my story — something I am told that usually doesn't happen when a book is made into a movie," said Miss Kurth of "Murder in Texas," which is based on her book, "Prescription: Murder."

Miss Kurth said she was "madly in love" with Dr. Hill when they married, but "little did I dream what a nightmare was ahead."

Ash Robinson was bent on revenge for his daughter's death and Dr. Hill had to defend himself against his ex-father-in-law. Miss Kurth admitted that she thought Robinson was obsessed until a fateful ride in a car with her husband, "in which he crashed into a bridge on my side and then tried to inject a syringe into me which I found later would have caused me to die. And the death would have appeared to have been from shock!"

Of the casting for the film, Miss Kurth said: "I was very impressed with Sam Elliott's portrayal of John. He did not read the book and did his interpretation from the script and a few words from me.

"And Katharine (Ross) can portray me anytime," she added. "She is marvelous and seemed to capture my fears, anxieties and puzzlements."

Charity Softball

On Saturday, Sept. 25, teams from two of daytime television's most popular series, "As the World Turns" and "Guiding Light," will be on Staten Island taking part in a charity softball match. The game is being held to benefit the Academy of St. Dorothy, a Staten Island elementary school which has just completed a new gymnasium, and hopes to raise money to furnish it.

Fulton Is Involved

Popular daytime actress Eileen Fulton has always involved herself in charity work when she has had free time from her series. This coming year will be no exception, as Miss Fulton has just been named 1983 National Volunteer Education Chairman for the March of Dimes.

Deep Emotions

Charlotte Rae, has a theory about dealing with rejection.

"Most actors have a difficult time with being turned down for a role," said Rae. "However, the more sensitive ones can often call on these deep emotions and turn in better performances when they get a role."

Murder Witness Seeks Revenge

A widow prompts an attempt to illegally snatch a multi-millionaire from his Caribbean hideout and take him to the United States to face criminal charges, in "Firepower," airing as The CBS Wednesday Night Movies, Sept. 15 (9-11 p.m.). The film was originally released theatrically in 1979.

In the story, Adele Tasca (Sophia Loren), the beautiful wife of a research chemist, witnesses the violent murder of her husband. She knows that Carl Stegner (George Touliatos), the third richest man in the world, was involved in a scheme to distribute contaminated, cancer-causing drugs, and that her husband was just about to prove Stegner's involvement with the scheme.

Armed with the knowledge that it was Stegner who ordered her husband's murder, Mrs. Tasca visits the United States Department of Justice, recommending that efforts be made to get Stegner, a recluse, back to America so that criminal charges can be filed against him. She also recommends that her ex-lover, bounty hunter Jérry Fanon (James Coburn) be hired to find and seize Stegner.

Fanon is aided by Catlett (O.J. Simpson), a professional thief. Their task is made even more difficult by the facts that Stegner has not had his photograph taken in more than 30 years and the people Fanon and Catlett deal with are not always what they seem to be.

"Firepower," which was produced and directed by Michael ("Deathwish") Winner, also stars Eli Wallach as Sal Hyman, Anthony Franciosa as Dr. Felix, Vincent Gardenia as Frank Hull, and George Grizzard as Gelhorn, Stegner's right hand man. Gerald Wilson wrote the screenplay from a story by Winner and Bill Kerby.

ADELE TASCA (Sophia Loren) wants to take revenge on the man who murdered her husband, a chemist, in "Firepower," to be rebroadcast on The CBS Wednesday Night Movies, Sept. 15 (9-11 p.m.).

Michele Will Tell

DEAR MICHELE: I would like for you to give us some information on Perry King. THE GIRLS OF A FAYETTEVILLE PLANT.

TO GIRLS IN FAYETTEVILLE: Perry King is from a well-to-do family, with a long list of celebrated ancestors. His family tree includes Roger Sherman, a signer of the Declaration of Independence, and General William T. Sherman of Civil War fame. His maternal grandfather was Maxwell Perkins, considered the best literary editor of all time, whose clients included Ernest Hemingway, F. Scott Fitzgerald, Thomas Wolfe and James Jones. A graduate of St. Paul's Preparatory School, Perry chose to attend Yale because of the renowned drama department, then went on to Juilliard. One of his off-screen hobbies is collecting antique motorcycles with sidecars.

DEAR MICHELE: I would like to know whatever happened to "Amos and Andy"? Why won't they put it back on television. SANDRA BELL, GARYSBURG, N.C.

TO SANDRA: It's doubtful you'll ever see this show in syndication. The NAACP (National Association for the Advancement of Colored People) feels it is too "demeaning."

DEAR MICHELE: Please answer a question for me. Are the actresses who play Emma Channing on "Falcon Crest" (Margaret Ladd), Chris on "Charlie's Angels" (Cheryl Ladd), and Belle on "Alice" (Diane Ladd), related? If so, please tell me how. PATTIE HOLLINGSWORTH, RAEFORD, N.C.

TO PATTIE: No they are not related! The only one associated with the famous "Ladd" name of yesteryear is Cheryl, whose ex-hubby is Alan's son.

DEAR MICHELE: Could you tell me if the Original Sound Sales Corp. in L.A., which produces the Oldie but Goodie Albums Vol. 1-14, still is in existence? PEGGY WILLIAMS, LEXINGTON, N.C.

TO PEGGY: Our records list a record company entitled Original Sound Studios located at 7120 Sunset Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif., 90046. You may wish to contact them for information concerning the albums mentioned.

Attitude Change

Actress Elaine Princi on the serial "As The World Turns" is pleased about a recent story development which allowed her character to be released from prison after six months. "My whole attitude has changed," says the actress, who notes that playing unhappy prison scenes can get to be depressing. "Now I'm happy to come to work — it feels good just to have different clothes to wear again."

Marathon Ma'am

Meredith Baxter Birney has set her sights on running the New York marathon. As a stepping stone, the actress is currently training for the Santa Monica half-marathon. She sets aside one hour every morning from 7-8 a.m. to run six miles.

Son's Pretty Good

Does acting run in the family? That question was put to Jack Klugman after he revealed that 19-year-old son, Adam, is studying in New York.

"I don't know, but Adam did a lead role in 'Fiddler on the Roof' at his high school a year ago," said Klugman, "and though I may have been watching with a rose-colored eye, I thought he was pretty good."

Philip Anglim, primarily known for his award-winning performance in "The Elephant Man," has moved into the area of feature film and TV production.

answer → There is no difference. If you looked at the name for as long a time as you do the face, you would remember it just as well. This is confirmed by the Department of Psychology of New York University.

Gossett May Score Oscar

Lou Gossett Jr., who stars in NBC's "The Powers of Matthew Star" (premiering Friday, Sept. 17, 8-9 p.m.), is a sure shot for an Oscar nomination as Best Supporting Actor for his performance in "An Officer and a Gentleman," according to motion picture critics.

In his new series, Gossett — an Emmy winner for his performance as Fiddler in "Roots" — stars as Walt Shepherd, foster father and mentor to teenager Matthew Star (Peter Barton). They have escaped the tyranny on their home planet of Quadris, and have taken temporary refuge on Earth while Matthew grows to manhood and learns how to implement his powers of telekinesis and telepathy.

Of Gossett's performance as the disciplinarian drill instructor in "An Officer and a Gentleman," Judy Klemesrud of The New York Times wrote: "It is a complex, showy role...Gossett's name will no doubt be mentioned when it comes time to consider nominees for the 1982 Oscar for Best Supporting Actor."

Sheila Benson, in her review for The Los Angeles Times, said: "Gossett gives an energized, exhausting performance."

"He is one of those major actors...who, consigned to supporting roles, are usually more invigorating than the lead actors," wrote Peter Rainer, film critic for The Los Angeles Herald-Examiner. "Gossett creates such a multi-layered character...that he almost turns 'An Officer and a Gentleman' into his story."

LOUIS GOSSETT JR.

Both Hollywood trade papers made special mention of Gossett's work in the film. Daily Variety said: "...'Officer' belongs to Louis Gossett Jr., who just might find himself with an Oscar nomination... (he) takes a near-cliche role...and makes him a sympathetic hero without ever softening a whit. Gossett does more with his eyes and a facial reaction than others can accomplish with pages of dialog."

Robert Osborne in The Hollywood Reporter wrote: "One of the best aspects of the film beyond its handsome setting...is the performance of Louis Gossett Jr., giving memorable support as a brittle drill instructor with considerable humanity underneath his sergeant's stripes. It's an interpretation that could be fondly recalled at Academy Award time."

Beauty Softens Some Hard-headed Ideas

Garson Kanin and Ruth Gordon's first collaborative effort as writers in 28 years, "Hardhat and Legs," will be rebroadcast as The CBS Late Movie, Friday, Sept. 17 (11:30 p.m.).

In the story, Sal Pacheco (Kevin Dobson) is a New York City construction worker with a double passion: beautiful legs and gambling. From his construction perch, Sal has been ogling for days the legs of Dr. Patricia Botsford (Sharon Gless), a young woman who works in the neighborhood. She couldn't care less about Sal's boisterous attention.

One day, she confronts the hardhat, but the encounter backfires. Intrigued by Patricia's spunk and beauty, Sal decides he wants to know more about the lady with the lovely legs.

Following Patricia, Sal learns that she is a Ph.D. teaching a course in modern sexuality in an institute. Although Sal needs sex education the way New York needs more traffic, he enrolls in the course. In a couple of weeks, Patricia, a divorcee, is won over by her persistently adoring student.

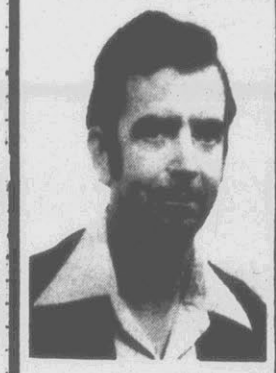

But next, Sal must win over Patricia's delightful, if somewhat precocious, children (Charlie Aiken, Elva Josephson). Sal throws a picnic on the 22nd floor of a partially constructed building and the kids are in his pocket.

Sal readily admits to his gambling habit. But, because of his gambling debts, he can't ask Patricia to marry him. His debts, in fact, are getting steeper and steeper.

Then, when Sal loses his job, his loan shark turns nasty.

The 86-year-old Miss Gordon and her husband, Garson Kanin, wrote "Hardhat and Legs" in 1979. It was the first time that they had collaborated on a writing project since the film "Pat and Mike," which starred their close friends Spencer Tracy and Katharine Hepburn.

'The Captain' Moves

CBS' "Captain Kangaroo," which has been a staple of early-morning programming for over 25 years, will advance its time periods beginning this week. The show will now be broadcast on Saturdays (7-8 a.m.) and Sundays (8-9 a.m.). In addition, Bob Keeshan, "The Captain," has been hired to produce at least three after-school specials for CBS.

Noting that the audience for the "Captain Kangaroo" series in its weekday morning time periods had declined, James Rosenfield, a network executive, said: "The nature of early morning television has changed radically over the years. It has become a news-oriented, adult-dominated daypart. Not wanting to abandon our 27-year commitment to the program, we concluded that if we couldn't bring the children to the Captain, we could bring the Captain to the children. Hence, our new weekend morning time periods, when the children's audience is large."

Keeshan was equally enthusiastic about the time change and expressed his excitement about expanding into after-school production. "I welcome these opportunities," he said.

"Captain Kangaroo" premiered on CBS in 1955, and remains the longest running regularly scheduled children's program on television. Both the program and Keeshan have won numerous awards, including four Emmys, two Peabodys and the Ohio State and Gabriel Awards.

The program also stars Hugh Brannum as Mr. Green Jeans, Cosmo Allegretti (with Mr. Moose, Bunny Rabbit and Dennis), Carolyn Mignini and puppeteer Kevin Clash.

The revised weekend schedule also features the addition of "Speed Buggy" on Saturday mornings. This animated adventure series features a flying car built by a group of youthful automobile enthusiasts called the Speed Buggs.

Behaving like a motorized version of an overgrown St. Bernard, the unusual vehicle responds to and thrives on the attention of its companions — teenagers Mark, Debbie and Tinker — and is activated by a walkie-talkie. Mel Blanc provides the voice of "Speed Buggy."

Jim Bounces Back

After missing a month of play due to a bad shoulder, Milwaukee second baseman Jim Ganter bounced back into the game as if he'd never missed a beat. His first week back he hit .733 and drove in four runs.

Versatile Runner

The New York Jets will be looking for more long yardage from running back Freeman McNeil this season. "Some runners are elusive and some are slashers," says Pittsburgh coach Chuck Noll. "McNeil is an elusive slasher."

Bills Host Vikings On ABC

The Buffalo Bills of the AFC East and the Minnesota Vikings of the NFC Central will go head-to-head in a game to be broadcast on ABC, Thursday, Sept. 16 (8:30-11:30 p.m.), from Orchard Park, N.Y.

The Bills finished 10-6 last year before being eliminated 21-28 in post-season play by the Super Bowl-bound Cincinnati Bengals. The Vikings are coming off a 7-9 season of disappointments in defense (the secondary gave up better than 200 yards per game) and offense (quarterback Tommy Kramer was intercepted 24 times as the running game sagged).

Buffalo quarterback Joe Ferguson will have a wide choice of receivers to catch his spiraling passes, including wide receivers Jerry Butler and Frank Lewis (backed up by No. 1 draft choice Perry Tuttle of the Clemson Tigers), and tight ends Mark Brammer, Buster Barnett and Steve Alvers.

"You have to marvel at the season Frank Lewis had in 1981," said head coach Chuck Knox. "Not merely for his record number of catches and yards but also for his continuing enthusiasm and his capacity to come up with the big play. Frank and Jerry Butler give us an outstanding starting tandem."

Sharing the credit for his fine performance, Lewis complimented Ferguson's passing arm. "Joe can pass the football with equal efficiency on all the routes," he said. "Since I've been here, I've never had to think about the ball being there or how it will be thrown. Joe's passes are always on target and that allows a receiver to concentrate only on the person covering him."

Ferguson had an outstanding year at quarterback as he established new single season club marks for attempts, completions and passing yards in 1981. He also threw 24 touchdowns, one short of his personal single season high.

"Joe looks excellent," said Knox after the Bills' mini-camp. "In the five years I've been here, I haven't seen him throw the ball any better. He is a very hard-working, disciplined quarterback who is like a fine wine — he only gets better."

With a lifetime completion record of over 51 percent, the 32-year-old Ferguson holds virtually every Buffalo passing mark, including racking up over 20,000 total yards, putting him in the exclusive company of only 30 other pro quarterbacks who have reached that mark in their NFL career. The only time he has missed a start with the Bills was in 1976, when he sat out the final seven games with four fractured bones in his lower back.

According to the man who puts the ball in the quarterback's record-breaking hands, center Will Grant, Ferguson is a fierce competitor. "I give him credit when he yells at someone for making a mistake because that just shows his competitiveness," he said.

Israeli Performers

Two Israeli performers — Chana Eden and Yoram Gall — have joined the cast of "Remembrance of Love," the NBC romantic melodrama currently filming on location in Israel.

TV Chatter

By Polly Vonetes

There may be oil wells on the "Dallas" set but there are diamonds on "Dynasty." Tiffany jewels worth $1,600,000 were on the "Dynasty" set during the filming of a new episode. A sapphire and diamond necklace worth $500,000 is a gift JOHN FORSYTHE gives LINDA EVANS — so the script says — while JOAN COLLINS looks on enviously.

Meanwhile, off the set, PAMELA SUE MARTIN (Fallon) is honeymooning with her new millionaire husband, MANUEL ROJAS.

Teenage TV stars — headed by MATT and PAT LABORTEAUX — recently launched their Youth Rescue Fund (for runaways) at Magic Mountain. The council includes: KIM FIELDS, DANIELLE BRISEBOIS, MEENO PELUCE, TODD BRIDGES, GLENN SCARPELLO and TINA PAYNE.

In spite of their ups and downs in the past JAMES GARNER and wife LOIS happily celebrated their 26th wedding anniversary with close friends.

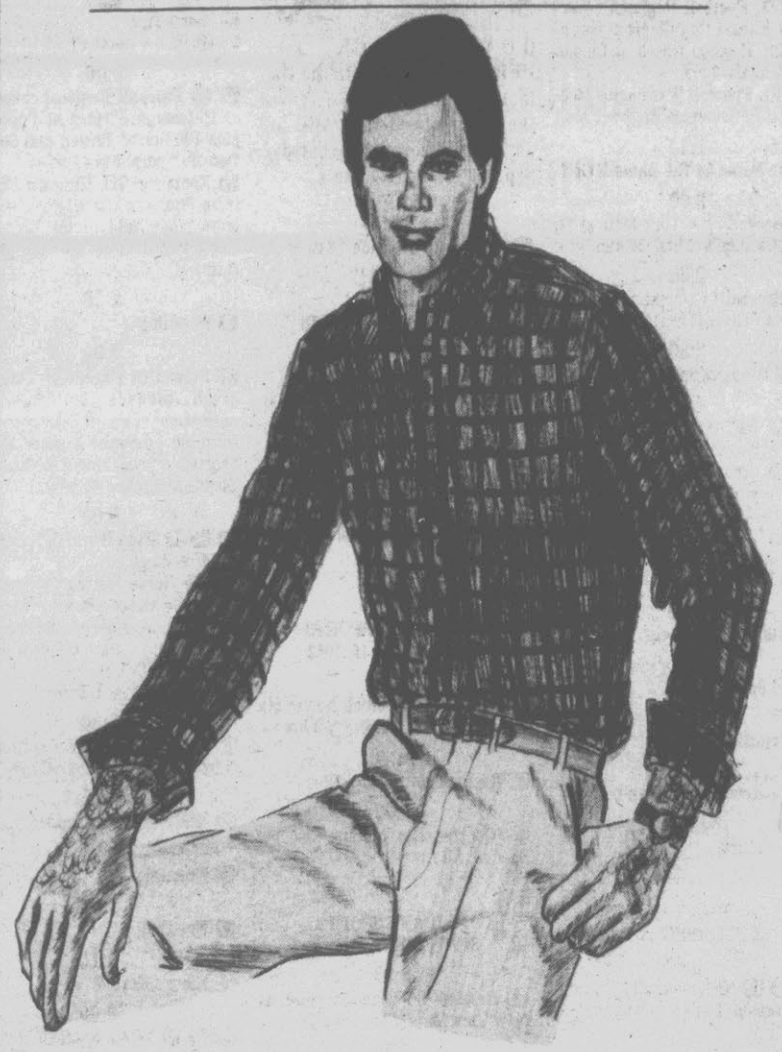

You just never know when producer EARL OWENSBY in Shelby, N.C., will discover a new star. Signed to star in his latest film, "Hot Heir," now rolling in Shelby, is DIANNE BEATTY. Lucky Dianne was a secretary in Owensby's P.R. Agency when he discovered her.

"Love Boat's" LAUREN TEWES and musician boyfriend, HARLOW PALOL NORRIS will be heading for the altar anytime now — they just purchased their $1.2 million "honeymoon cottage" in Hancock Park.

When something is "good" it's good! Twenty-three years after MARIO LANZA'S death, his recordings are still popular-selling items. Royalties to Lanza's estate from record sales for the first six months of '82 are reportedly over $80,000.

Making a pitch for baseball.

FOR RICK CERONE, N.Y. Yankees catcher

When you play is it serious business — all game and little fun? —S.P., Hollywood, Fla.

● Baseball is my job and my teammates and I always go out on the field with the intention of winning. But our gut reaction is to enjoy the game. I doubt if you will find anyone on the field just for the money. Most of us loved baseball as kids. We picked up bats and balls at the age of 3, and here we are doing the same thing decades later — playing the same kids' game — and getting paid for it. I think it's much more fun and less monotonous than working 9 to 5 at the same old desk under a roof with four walls. But it is still a business, to be taken seriously the same as any other.

FOR SHERRY MATHIS, Liza on TV's Search for Tomorrow

Is it true that you shun fashionable clothes because they go out of date too soon? —N.T., Camden, N.J.

● I prefer something that has been around for a while to an outfit right from Paris. I believe in getting good wear out of everything I have. For instance, I got my money's worth out of my wedding dress. It's a hand-crocheted outfit, pretty but practical.

FOR JOHN CASSAVETES, star of Tempest

So many high cost movies bomb at the box office — do you think the motion picture business is going down the drain? —A.K., Norwich, Conn.

● No. I love the film industry so much that I cannot find a single bad word to say about it. The business has its ups and downs — lots of heartbreak, but also lots of pleasure. The more I'm in it as an actor or director, the more devoted to it I become.

UPI

FOR MARTHA SHULMAN, author of Fast Vegetarian Feasts (The Dial Press)

Who were the first vegetarians? And what part of the world has the most vegetarians? —T.G., Pontiac, Mich.

● Vegetarianism dates back to the earliest Hindu religions and has included such well-known followers as Pythagoras, Rousseau and George Bernard Shaw. India probably has the most vegetarians, while northern countries, such as Iceland, have the least.

FROM THE "ASK" EDITOR

BULLETINS: Barbra Streisand, finishing up her next film, Yentl, in England, told an interviewer that reporters often misrepresent her by saying that she considers herself a superstar, always No. 1. "Actually," the funny lady said, "a large part of me is ordinary and uninteresting."... From Monte Carlo comes word that Princess Grace is not at all pleased with what's going on between Princess Caroline and her latest beau, Argentine tennis star Guillermo Vilas. Nor does she approve of the photos showing her daughter in nightclubs, decked out in revealing clothing.... Japan's image as a nation of superworkers is totally unfounded, according to an international productivity report recently released. It states that Americans, Belgians, the French and West Germans work harder. The only ones that the Japanese beat are the British.... To honor His Holiness, Pimen, Patriarch of Moscow and All Russia, on the occasion of his first visit to the United States, Rabbi Arthur Schneier, president of the Appeal of Conscience Foundation, said: "Welcome to the Red Apple — uh, I mean — the Big Apple."... OUTA THIS WORLD: Drew Barrymore, 7-year-old star of E.T., cracked up the crowd at a restaurant when, in answer to what she was up to, the little toot solemnly announced, "I'm in town for other business propositions."... More extraterrestrial tidbits: Robert Macnaughton, 15, the older brother in E.T., has co-authored a book with his dad, Act Now: An Actor's Guide to Breaking-In (Global Publishing).... AUTHORS: Country-western star Mel Tillis appears to be heeding hints of family and fans and will write his life story.... Steve Krantz, movie producer and husband of novelist Judith Krantz, feels a book (including his novel, Skycastle) has a better chance for success if the main character is a female: "Readers are interested in women in business, entertainment, or any profession. But a woman is still seen as a sex object. Take Justice Sandra Day O'Connor. When she was sworn in, Chief Justice Burger gave her a kiss, as did President Reagan. I'd like to see either of them do that to a male appointee."... Actress-singer Eartha Kitt is working on three novels simultaneously — A Tart Isn't a Sweet, 13 Can Be Dangerous and The Art of Being Ordinary.

Should the Federal Government Subsidize Potential U.S. Olympic Athletes?

(Question submitted by Bob Younts, Corpus Christi, Tex.)

Send questions of national significance, on a postcard, to "Pro & Con," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022
We'll pay $10 for those published.

PRO Bill Rodgers, 1976 Olympic marathon runner

It should be the U.S. Government's responsibility to subsidize its Olympic hopefuls because these athletes are virtually ambassadors representing our country. A coordinated, professional approach toward aiding our athletes' development can only be achieved when our athletic system has the support of its major source of strength — the Government. As a step in the right direction, I also endorse the idea of a voluntary contribution to the U.S. Olympic Committee, to be noted on our tax returns.

CON William E. Simon, president, U.S. Olympic Committee

The U.S. Olympic Committee is proud that its mission on behalf of the Olympic movement is financed by the private sector, demonstrating the desire of all Americans to keep politics out of the Olympics. The U.S.O.C. remains committed to raising the necessary funds to find, train, select and enter the finest amateur athletes in all domestic and international competition leading to the Olympic Games. We are the only nation that has successfully financed its own Olympic efforts without Governmental help.

COVER STORY

Madame Ram Runs the Show

Whether firing her stepson or acquiring a new quarterback, glamorous, controversial Georgia Frontiere has made the Rams her own.

The whole town's talkin' about that Jones boy:

BY TED GREEN

Georgia Frontiere's private office at Ram Park in Anaheim, Calif., has a mirrored wet bar, soft, blue carpeting, a salmon-and-coral antique couch and an enclosed outdoor patio with vines and Ficus trees lending a California touch. She is justifiably proud of the place, which is more like a small, swank Manhattan apartment than most small, swank Manhattan apartments. But what she's really proud of there is a blown-up copy of a Berry's World comic strip.

The strip pictures a little boy and girl talking. He is dressed like a football player. She speculates that maybe he'll be a rich, famous football star someday, with girls chasing him. He says, "Yeah, and maybe you'll be a cheerleader." To which she replies:

"Are you kidding? Maybe I'll OWN the football team and maybe I'll let YOU play out your option."

Well, Georgia Frontiere does own a football team and has let stars play out their options, and maybe the strip is her way of pointing out that — no matter what her critics say — she's in charge, that she owns and runs the Los Angeles Rams, that she's in command, doing it Sinatra-style.

Her way.

Frontiere's leadership, qualifications and colorful past, along with her high style of living and somewhat unconventional personality, have all come under intense scrutiny ever since the platinum blonde with a show-business background inherited the glamorous National Football League franchise, valued at $50 million, and a lot more from her late (sixth) husband, Carroll Rosenbloom. Rosenbloom drowned in riptides off the Florida coast while swimming in April 1979.

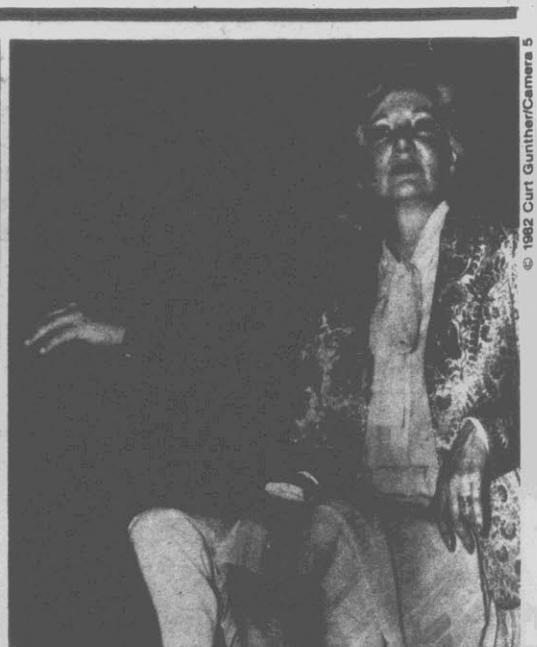

His death at age 72 made his widow the first female owner in N.F.L. history. And it thrust her, headfirst, into the macho and previously all-male world of pro football, where the best-known women before Frontiere were the Dallas Cowboy cheerleaders. When Lorinda de Roulet stepped down as president of baseball's New York Mets in the winter of 1980, it left Georgia as the only female chief executive of a major sports franchise in the United States.

Whether she was even close to ready for such a heady role is certainly open to question; in fairness, how could she have been ready when her football experience prior to Rosenbloom's death consisted of attending games and maybe discussing the operation with him, every now and then, when he felt like it? She undoubtedly knows more football than one writer implied when he said she wouldn't know a face mask from a face lift, but running the L.A. Rams, well, that's another story.

But what Georgia really wasn't ready for was the criticism. The persistent reminders of her past, particularly the six — now seven — marriages (she married composer-lyricist Dominic Frontiere, an old family friend, 14 months after Rosenbloom's death). Then there are those stories that portray her as a chorus girl who lucked into owning a football team. It didn't help her image when her first major move, four months after inheriting the Rams, was to fire her popular stepson, Steve

Frontiere thought enough of Bert to lure him from the Colts for $2 million over five years.

Rosenbloom, who had been running the club day to day under the title of vice president. That climaxed a family feud rooted deeply in both their pasts, a potboiler with all the elements of a TV soap.

"I fear people will think the worst — that I'm just the ugly stepmother," she said then. She was right. Many people do think the worst, including the press, which has often vilified her.

"People don't realize she's a very sensitive person," says her newest press aide and troubleshooter, Les Marshall. "Essentially, you're talking about somebody who was a housewife. Suddenly, that housewife is running a team that's a local institution and in the national limelight. You don't build thick skin overnight."

"Changes happen no matter what," says Georgia. "Life is full of change. It's just more apparent because I'm a woman. If a man had come in and fired everybody, nobody would have said a thing."

Then again, Georgia brings some of the problems on herself. She was more than an hour late to Carroll Rosenbloom's funeral and 55 minutes late to the wake back in Los Angeles, which she hosted. She showed up at training camp that first summer and tried to ingratiate herself by tossing a football around and kicking field goals with players. And later, she dispensed some rather off-the-wall advice. Try star safety Nolan Cromwell at quarterback, she said, and run a wishbone offense, popular in college but unheard of in the N.F.L. Tell the players I'll pay for singing and dancing lessons to enhance their careers. She even told former Ram quarterback Pat Haden, who had been having finger and hand problems, to take karate so he could give onrushing defensive linemen a little chop in the chest to keep them away.

The first year she owned the team, she also had her personal publicist write a flowery, press guide biography, crediting her with fame in musicals, musical comedy and light opera, expertise in skiing and skating, being a poet of note and having a six-stroke golf handicap — from the men's tees. It also fibbed about her age (now 53) by nine years. She has changed publicists several times since and the bios have been toned down.

Frontiere's image — and the Rams themselves — appeared to hit rock bottom last season. The club failed to re-sign three key stars, letting Jack Reynolds, Bob Brudzinski and Vince Ferragamo leave for greener ($) pastures. Then it signed, cut and signed again a week later defensive end Fred Dryer, a popular, 13-year veteran and team leader who wound up his career, ignominiously, on the bench. Dryer then sued the Rams for back pay, breach of contract and damaged reputation. And finally, a team that had made the playoffs eight straight years, qualifying for the Super Bowl during Georgia's first year at the helm, fell apart on the field, finishing with its worst record (6-10) in 17 years. When the season ended, dissension hung over the entire organization like a cloud of California smog.

> "Changes happen," says Georgia. "Life is full of change. If a man had come in and fired everybody, nobody would have said a thing."

The problem, Frontiere says in retrospect, was that she delegated too much responsibility to everybody else. So since last January, when she ordered regular staff meetings that she now chairs herself, aides say she has taken a truly active role for the first time.

"Owning the Rams is a 24-hour-a-day job," she says. "I can't go anywhere without thinking about the team. It's my life."

It was her decision, sources say, to retain head coach Ray Malavasi, whose job is perenially rumored to be in jeopardy. Her decision to strip longtime personnel man Don Klosterman of his title of general manager, dropping him to a paid consultant who is rarely consulted. Her decisions to hire former Ram receiver Jack Snow as an assistant coach, to upgrade the Ram pension plan, to organize a tribute to Merlin Olsen, the Rams' former all-Pro defensive tackle. And her decision to set up aerobic dance classes for players and other team personnel.

Georgia even handled the negotiations that brought quarterback Bert Jones in the much-talked-about trade from Baltimore last April, dealings that Frontiere calls "the first negotiating I've done from start to finish without anybody's help." Indeed, the Rams eventually signed Jones for $2 million over 5 years — less than the Colts offered him.

Signing glamorous quarterbacks to multiyear contracts, and then posing with them for national-magazine covers, is a long, long way from Frontiere's humble beginnings.

Born Georgia Irwin and raised in St. Louis, she was in show biz by the time she was old enough to carry a tune. She and her mother, who billed themselves as the Pamela Sisters, relocated in Fresno, Calif., and sang anywhere they could get a gig — steakhouses, beer joints, bowling alleys, car-lot openings, farm-machinery shows, even drive-in movies. The act held together until the 1950's.

Georgia's first marriage, at 15, was quickly annulled, and her second husband was killed by a bus in San Francisco. She married her third husband in 1949 at age 21, but left him for the bright lights. At the time, the bright lights meant a job in Sacramento, Calif., as a $40-a-week chorus girl. Two more marriages followed. After working as a TV weather girl and lounge singer in Miami, her career peaked in the late 50's in New York with a two-week job as the Today girl on Dave Garroway's Today Show. She also played the lead in Oklahoma on the Northeast theater circuit and sang in hotels and lounges in Canada and Europe.

Georgia, who is used to fielding passes, tries one of her own.

Along the way she met Carroll Rosenbloom, a strong-willed, patriarchal multimillionaire (oil, real estate) who then owned the Baltimore Colts. (He swapped the Colts for the Rams in 1972 in a shrewd tax-saving deal). Rosenbloom adored Georgia, and their affair — he was married and the father of three children with his first wife — was an open secret. Eventually, he married Georgia in 1966. During the course of their relationship, they had two children, Lucia, now 21, and Chip, 18.

To give you an idea of how powerful Rosenbloom was, he was on the phone for 45 minutes with his old friend, Joseph Kennedy, the night J.F.K. was elected. The next day, C.R., as he was called, was photographed tossing a football on the Kennedy's Hyannis Port, Mass. lawn. Georgia was constantly at C.R.'s side until his death, throwing elaborate dinner parties, playing the effervescent hostess, but staying very much in the background as far as the Ram operation went.

That all changed, of course, the day Rosenbloom drowned. His will left Georgia 70 percent of the team, with 6 percent going to each of the five surviving children. Georgia subsequently bought up the other 30 percent and is now 100 percent owner and club president.

Georgia insists that Carroll had groomed her well for the job. "I always knew I'd own this team someday," she said shortly after C.R. died. She was in the tennis cabin, behind the tennis court on the grounds of their palatial, heavily wooded home on five and a half acres in exclusive Bel-Air, where she and Dominic now live. "Carroll would always encourage me to go to the office and to find out everything, even what paper clips cost. He drummed football into me to such an extent, gave me so many instructions, that I was completely prepared to become an owner."

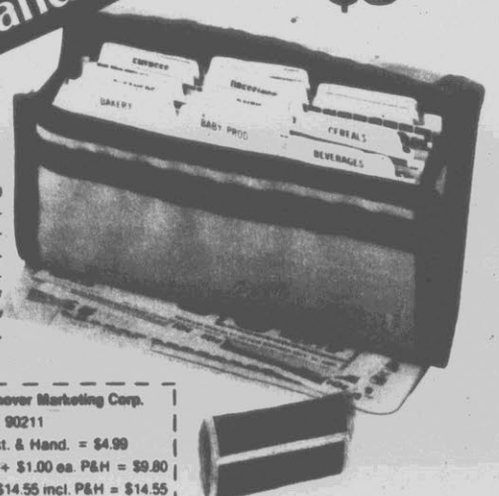

Some, though, believe Frontiere is still not up to the job, arguing that she is a mere figurehead and others really make the key decisions. Steve Rosenbloom, for one, says now, "I believe in active ownership, but I also think it should be proportionate with an owner's knowledge and capabilities. Sure, they took my name out of the program, tarred and feathered me and sent me on my way, but they can never take away the most important part — that the people who count know exactly what's going on with the Rams.

"It's funny how the press makes images. There are hollow people with big images, while the others do the work."

For these critics, just who is actually quarterbacking the Rams off the field is as much a guessing game as who is quarterbacking them on it perennially is.

Some say it is husband Dominic, 51, a funny, fast-talking, convivial Italian whose credits include the score to the film The Stunt Man and the TV show Vega$. He is also believed to be taking a very active interest in the football business.

Others say the man running the Rams from afar is Hugh Culverhouse, owner of the Tampa Bay Buccaneers and a co-executor of the Rosenbloom estate. The Rams' newly streamlined, budget-minded operation is extraordinarily similar to that of the Buccaneers, sources say. Someone even coined a phrase — the Culverhouse Connection.

Georgia, who dabbles in the occult, mysteriously waves her hand over Haden's injured leg. "I thought she was nuts," says Haden. "But then the X-rays came back negative."

Both Dominic Frontiere and Culverhouse steadfastly deny their roles are anything other than advisory, and Georgia insists, "I ask Dominic's advice, but not to where he'd ever upstage me."

Georgia and Dominic, meanwhile, spent six weeks this summer in London, where they maintain a townhouse and mix with royalty. Georgia's new love is a 4-year-old thoroughbred mare named Ardross; the horse won a handful of races in Europe before finishing second to a horse owned by Queen Elizabeth II. Second to the Queen's horse and third in the N.F.C. West may not be exactly what Georgia had in mind, but that's show biz.

The bottom line on one of the nation's more powerful women is not easy to find. She picks up the tab for costly dialysis treatments for a Rams public relations man with kidney problems, lavishes gifts on star defensive end Jack Youngblood when he's hospitalized after surgery, sends a private Lear jet back to West Virginia to fly halfback Wendell Tyler home after an auto accident and spares no expense building the Rams' new training headquarters, a converted elementary school in Anaheim.

But then she turns around and refuses to shell out what amounts to a drop in the bucket to keep three stars . . . and her team disintegrates on the field. Georgia gives Nolan Cromwell an unasked for raise . . . and Georgia, who dabbles in the occult (she says she's talked to Carroll's spirit), mysteriously waves a hand at halftime over Haden's injured leg, which is believed to be broken.

"I thought for sure she was nuts," Haden says. "Then, incredibly, after the doctors told me they were sure it was broken, the X-rays were negative."

One minute, she is a shrewd, calculating businesswoman, the next she orders the team picture taken three or four different times until her hair and makeup look just right.

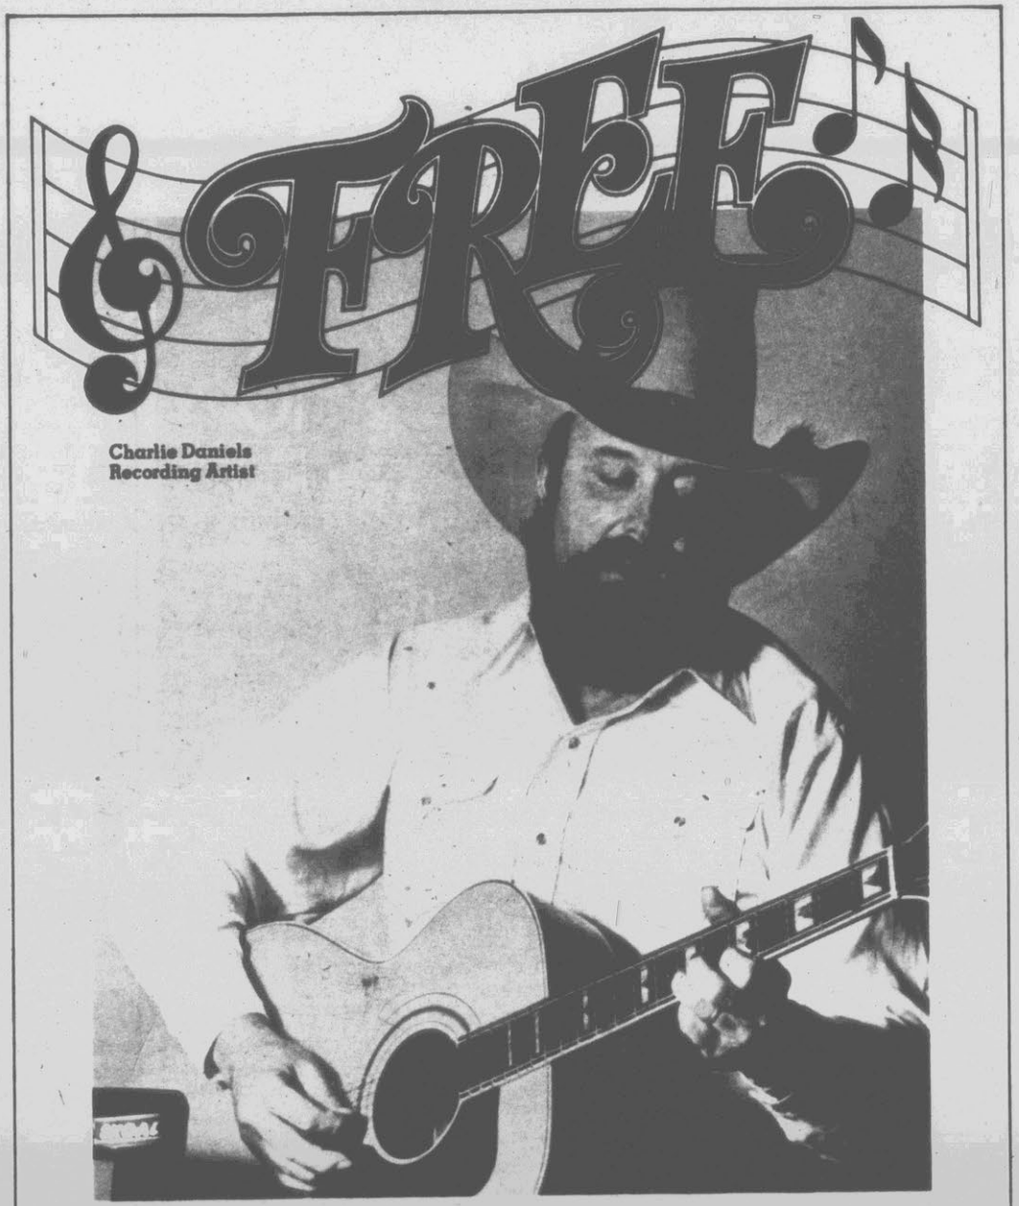

"I feel very comfortable now," Georgia says as the new season approaches. "Yes, the transition has been made. After the last few years, I feel I can cope with anything, on any level. I have full charge and understand the entire operation.

"I don't look to the outside for approval. I look to myself. And a woman in football isn't all bad unless you think it is."

"It's ironic that my wife is in a field they call sports," Dominic has said, " and here we are being subjected to the most double-dealing, unsportsmanlike conduct. Georgia has suffered from a big case of prejudice — this is a totally male-oriented world and these guys are tough. She gets more criticism than her fair share because she doesn't do it by the book. She conducts her own orchestra with her own baton."

Dominic says the criticism pains him because it pains Georgia. "I ask her, 'Do you need this? Why take all this abuse? I make a good living; sell the team, give the money to the kids, be a composer's wife.' But she says no, she'll never sell. That it's her team. She really believes that. So what can I do?" FW

FOOD

End-of-Summer Bounty

By Marilyn Hansen

Those luscious, fresh vegetables won't be around much longer, so take advantage of them during these last days of summer and make one of the delicious recipes that follow.

CUCUMBERS WITH DILL

6 cucumbers
¼ cup butter or margarine
1 tablespoon snipped fresh dill leaves
¼ teaspoon salt
Few twists freshly ground black pepper

1. Peel cucumbers, cut in half lengthwise and remove seeds with a spoon. If large, cut in half again crosswise.

2. Place cucumbers in steamer basket in medium saucepan with ½ inch of water. Heat to boiling, cover, reduce heat a little and steam about 5 minutes or until just tender.

3. In skillet, melt butter; stir in dill, salt and pepper. Add cucumbers and turn them in the sauce until well coated; turn into serving dish. These cucumbers are delicious served with chicken or fish dishes.

Makes 4 servings

CAPONATA

2 lbs. eggplant, peeled and cut into ½-inch cubes
Salt
½ cup olive oil
2 cups finely chopped celery
¾ cup finely chopped onion
⅓ cup red wine vinegar
1 tablespoon sugar
2½-3 cups canned or home-cooked Italian plum tomatoes, drained
2 tablespoons tomato paste
6 large green olives, pitted and slivered
2 tablespoons capers
4 anchovy fillets, mashed with side of a knife
1 teaspoon salt
Few twists freshly ground black pepper
2 tablespoons pine nuts

1. Sprinkle eggplant cubes lightly with salt and place in a large colander or sieve to drain. After 30 to 45 minutes, pat the cubes dry with paper towels and set aside.

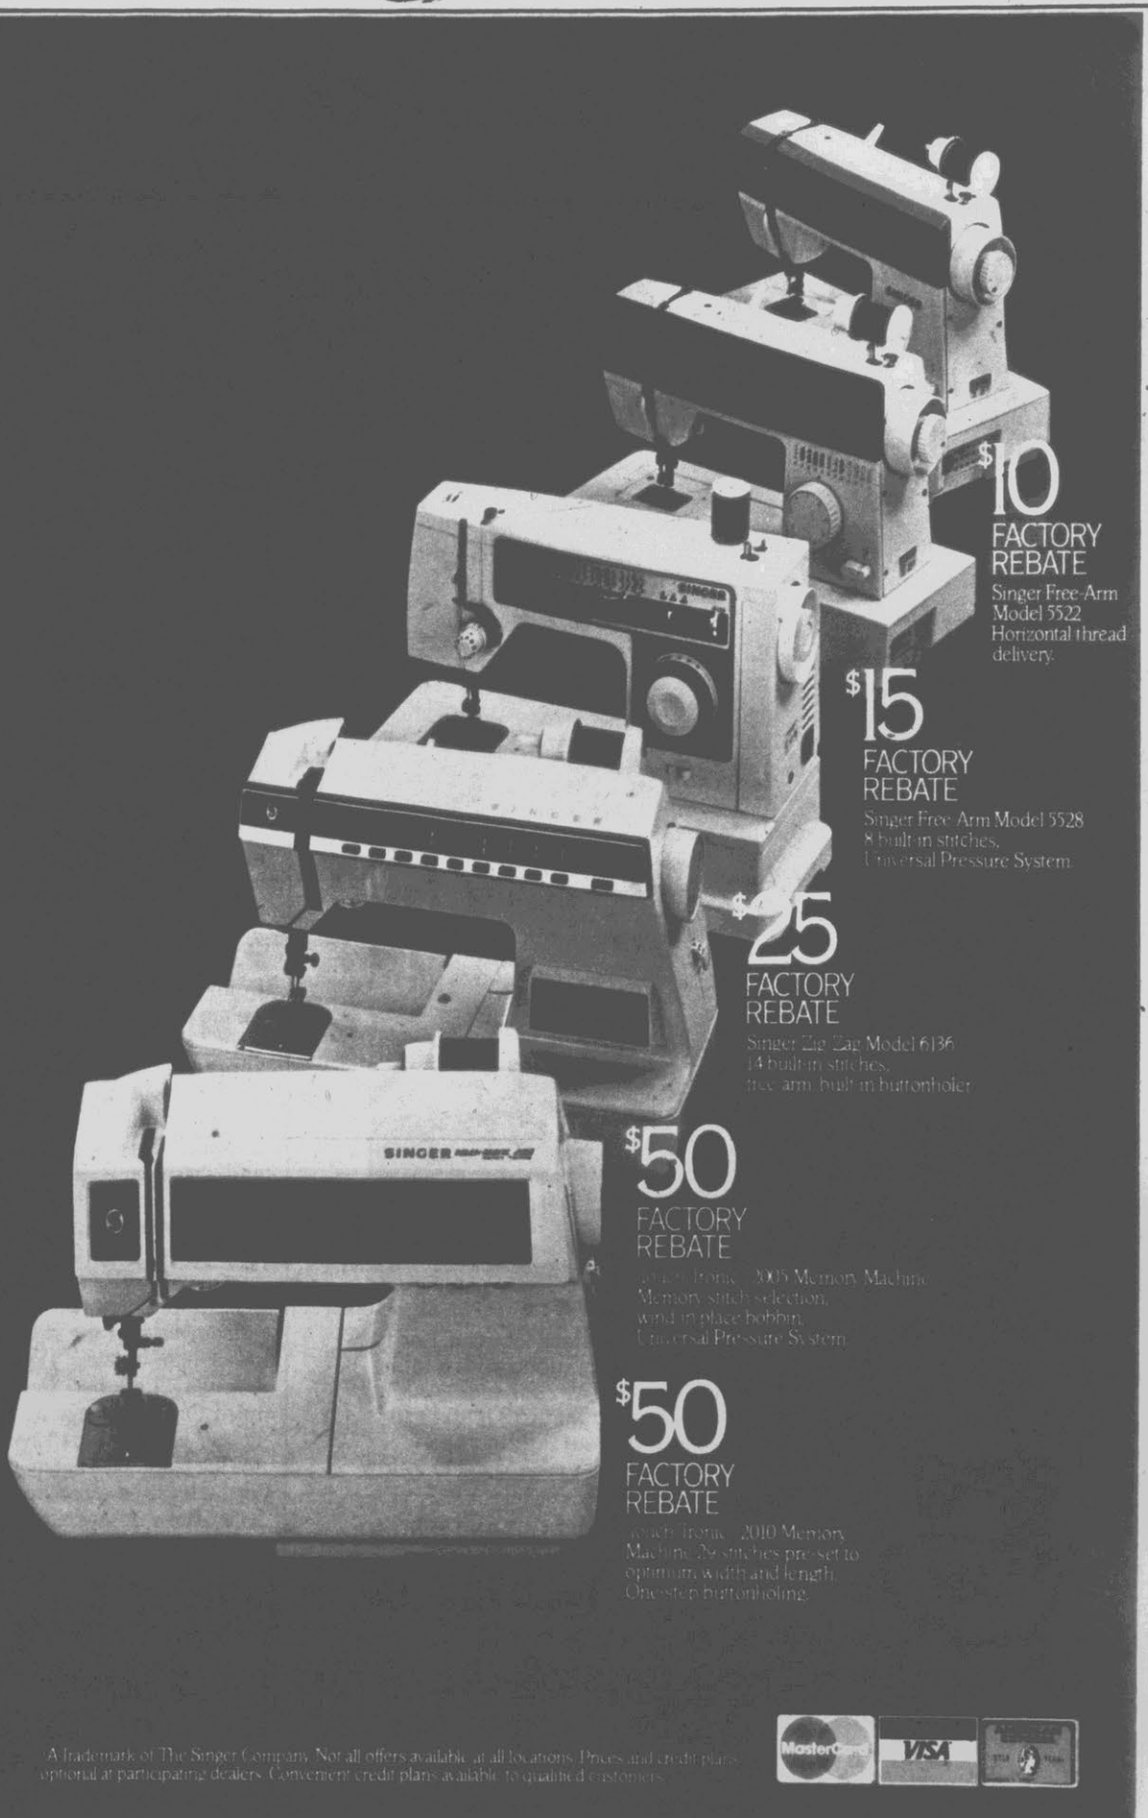

2. In a large, heavy skillet, heat ¼ cup olive oil and add celery and onion. Cook for 15 minutes, stirring, until soft. Lift into bowl with a slotted spoon.

3. Pour remaining ¼ cup olive oil into same skillet and, over high heat, sauté the eggplant cubes in it, stirring vigorously until they just start to brown.

4. Add celery-onion mixture to eggplant along with vinegar, sugar, tomatoes, tomato paste, olives, capers, anchovies, 1 teaspoon salt and several good twists of fresh pepper. Mix well. Heat to boiling and simmer, stirring for 5 minutes. Stir in pine nuts.

5. Cover and refrigerate until ready to serve. Caponata is an appetizing addition to an antipasto platter. You can also serve caponata on a lettuce leaf bed, garnished with a lemon wedge and some black olives, or simply in an earthenware bowl with a crusty loaf of Italian bread alongside.

THE SEXES

By Norman Lobsenz

New Double Standards For Singles

"Do what I say but not what I do" may be the new form of the sexual double standard, according to a study by sociology professors Dr. Ira Robinson of the University of Georgia, and Dr. Davor Jedlicka of the University of Texas at Tyler. The old double standard, which allowed men greater sexual freedom than women, has virtually disappeared, the researchers say. Since 1965, premarital sexual activity among men increased 12 percent, but the increase among women was 35 percent.

Yet, at the same time, a growing number of young men and women agree that premarital intercourse for both sexes is "immoral" and "sinful." Says Dr. Jedlicka: "This sexual contradiction — more young people engaging in sexual intercourse with increasing numbers of partners while they are more likely to say that it is immoral to do so — indicates a new kind of double standard. Men seem to expect stricter morality from women, and women expect stricter morality of men."

In a recent, still-unpublished study, the sociologists similarly found that while members of conservative religious groups had stricter views on sex than members of liberal religious groups, there was little difference between groups when it came to actual sexual behavior. "What it comes down to," says Dr. Jedlicka, "is a growing tendency of people to expect higher standards from others than from themselves. The question is whether this shows just inconsistency, or a good deal of hypocrisy."

Working Against Harassment

Although there are strong local and national laws against sexual harassment on the job, going to court can be costly and time consuming. Women and men who feel they are being harassed might be better off using tactics designed to change the behavior of the person annoying them. Judith Davenport, a therapist at the Santa Monica, Calif., Center for Counseling, offers these strategies for dealing with sexual harassment:

- Keep a record (including time, date, place and action) of any instances of harassment. Note any physical or emotional problem that occurs as a result.
- Complain to a supervisor. Courts often require a plaintiff to show that he or she tried to resolve the situation within the company first.
- Organize or join an office "support group" that fights sexual harassment, or get help from an outside organization, such as a women's group.
- Don't be afraid to be firm when complaining about or rejecting sexual advances. U.S. Congresswoman Patricia Schroeder, who chaired Federal hearings on sexual harassment, says the biggest problem is fear that "if you fight back, you might get fired or get a bad reference." Says Davenport: "There are many ways to say 'no' without alienating the person involved. For instance: 'The way you act toward me makes me very uncomfortable.'" This type of response works well in cases of mild or inadvertent harassment. But repeated or deliberate incidents may need to be dealt with more severely.

Love Objects

Knowing which things matter most to people can help us understand them better, say two social scientists who have studied people and possessions. In their book, The Meaning of Things, (Cambridge University Press) psychologist Mihaly Csikszentmihalyi and sociologist Eugene Rochberg-Halton, both of the University of Chicago, report that the type of possession people seem most attached to is furniture, followed by art, photographs, books, stereos and musical instruments. In most instances the reason given is that the object is linked to a person, a place, or a fondly remembered experience.

Men, the researchers say, mention most often objects associated with physical action such as sports equipment or cars. Women mostly mention objects "that allow for contemplation": photographs, artwork, plants. Are people who are attached to things uninterested in other people? Not at all, say the researchers. Attachments to things and people seem to go together. Indeed, "people who denied meanings to objects also lacked close networks of human relationships." FW

MONEY

Should Your Teen Get a Job?

By Merrie Spaeth

Just when inflation is stretching family budgets to the breaking point, teen-agers seem to need more spending money. For guidelines on today's teens and money, FAMILY WEEKLY talked to Tom Taylor, co-author of Kids and Cash: Solving a Parent's Dilemma.

Q: How old should a teen be before a parent encourages him to seek work?

A: Actually, you should encourage paid work (small tasks such as watering a neighbor's plants or pulling weeds) by age 7 or 8, which is supplemented with an allowance. By mid-teen-age years, your child should be almost weaned from the allowance and earning money regularly.

Q: But there are laws restricting kids from working until age 16.

A: Laws govern the hiring of youth in business (although the Labor Department is currently proposing to expand the hours and types of jobs that 14- and 15-year-olds are allowed to work). Still, teens should be able to find something that needs doing. Encourage your teen to look for the unkempt yard or the gathering of people at a garage sale, so that he can propose to cut the grass or serve coffee to the group.

Q: How does a teen-ager know what to charge for his services?

A: The parent can tell the teen that the current minimum wage (which begins at age 16) is $3.35 an hour, or suggest that the teen-ager call around to see what the going rate for odd jobs is. A parent should also caution the child to agree on a price with his employer before doing the work.

Q: Should a teen be responsible for his day-to-day expenses?

A: Parents should be responsible for food, clothing, shelter, health care, school supplies and other essentials. Certainly the teen should pay for entertainment, extra clothes and snacks. Some purchases can be split between parent and teen. When my daughter wanted a horse, she had to earn $250, or half of the cost, first. Then I contributed the rest. This system works well with major nonessential purchases such as a bicycle or stereo.

Q: You mentioned an allowance for young teens.

A: A young teen-ager should receive a monthly allotment in order to learn how to budget and plan ahead. But generally, by 16 he should be off his allowance and earning his own spending money.

Q: Should parents pay their children as a reward for achievement?

A: Never. Teen-agers need to know that money is directly related to the amount of work they do. You can loan your teen money but make him pay it back within a certain time period.

Q: How much money should a teen save?

A: I recommend that a teen save between 15 and 20 percent of his earnings. This money could be put toward higher education or a special trip. FW

IF YOU'RE PLANNING TO BUILD, TALK TO A WINNER ... TALK TO JIM WALTER HOMES!

Paul "Bear" Bryant
Winningest Collegiate Football Coach

Coach Paul "Bear" Bryant can tell you . . . building a winning football team is sometimes a tough job. Building a new home on your property, however, may be easier, and cost less than you think . . . if you choose Jim Walter as your builder. Jim Walter offers 10% annual percentage rate financing for his customers. This, alone, will save you thousands and thousands of dollars compared to today's much-higher interest rates. For example, financing a $35,000 home with a 14% mortgage for 20-years, would cost you almost $23,500 MORE than you would pay for a home, with this same cash price, built and financed by Jim Walter at only 10% annual percentage rate. That's an amazing $97.53 MORE you'll pay each month. Think what you could do with almost $100 extra in your family budget every month. (Check the chart in this ad for more comparisons.)

Then, to save you even more money, Jim Walter allows you to do some or all of the inside finishing work in your home. Here's how it works: We'll build to almost any stage, from the "shell" (unfinished inside) up to 90% complete. At this "most complete" stage, all you do is paint or paper walls, finish the trim, install floor covering of your choice, hook-up to outside utilities — electric, water, sewer — and move in. If you want to save hundreds, perhaps even thousands of extra dollars, do more of the inside finishing work, such as wiring, wallboard or paneling, inside doors and trim. The more you do for yourself, the more money you'll save!

Saving money is a good reason for choosing Jim Walter as your builder, but there are more, many more excellent reasons. We want you to know all of them. We want to tell you about our custom-construction methods. We want you to know about the quality of materials that we'll use. We want you to see the more than twenty models from which you may choose. We want you to have all the facts and figures before you decide. When you have these facts, we believe you'll choose Jim Walter. Call, stop by a display park or send the coupon to the office nearest you.

INSTANT RELIEF FOR YOUR PAINFUL TIRED ACHING FEET!

I'm a salesman, and I'm on my feet most of the day. For years, I suffered from the terrible discomfort of callouses, burning feet and aching arches. At the end of every day, my feet, legs and back were killing me. I felt like I couldn't take another step.

I tried everything — specially made shoes, lotions, salts, and many other expensive devices.

Nothing worked for me.

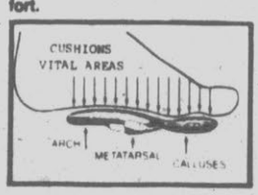

Recently, thanks to a friend, I started using Ortho-Ped Arch Supports, and finally received the RELIEF that I had been waiting and praying for.

ORTHO-PED ARCH SUPPORTS!

These light-weight comfort supports really helped me. They are a scientifically designed shoe insert that lifts the Metatarsal ever so slightly, while at the same time cushions the ball of the foot allowing your toes a better grip. Ortho-Ped Arch Supports are shaped to match the contour of your heel. They fit any type of footwear — and are interchangeable from shoe to shoe. They're washable, hygienic and hypo-allergenic.

After wearing Ortho-Peds for two days, I realized that the aches and pains in my feet and legs were easing up. My shoes felt custom fit to my feet. Now, I laugh at Foot Troubles — the aches and pains that bothered me for years have completely dissappeared.

It's WONDERFUL to walk in comfort.

THE IMPOSSIBLE DREAM NO — NOT AT ALL!

Does all this sound to good to be true? Does it seem like the Impossible Dream? Well, it's NOT! Not when you use ORTHO-PED Arch Supports. They are scientifically shaped and designed to:

• • • Gently cushions the ball of the foot, allowing your toes a better, more flexible grip.

• • • The special soft Metatarsal insert pads, lift the Metatarsal bones giving comfort and relief. This area, the Metatarsal, is the most common cause of foot troubles and problems.

BEHAVIOR

How to Break The White Rabbit Habit

By Jane Marks

If you have a tendency to run a little late, you know that most people will generally let you off the hook after you charmingly plead for forgiveness. What you may not realize is that chronic lateness quietly breeds frustration and anger in others — and your tardiness may therefore be interfering with your job, your marriage and your friendships.

The Bettmann Archive

The good news is that chronic lateness is relatively easy to correct. All it takes is willingness to change — and an understanding of what's behind your particular lateness pattern.

Psychologists point out that there are several types of tardiness, each with its own underlying cause. One of the most common categories, notes New York City psychotherapist Dr. Selma Miller, comprises people who are frequently "a little late" to dentist appointments, dinners with in-laws or other occasions they'd prefer to skip altogether. If this description fits your type of delay, you're probably rebelling against what you have to do but don't want to do. But if the unpleasant appointment is inevitable, procrastinating will ultimately only make you feel worse. One technique for overcoming this form of tardiness is to offer yourself a promptness incentive (some small indulgence, perhaps a little time to read or windowshop). You'll end up feeling more in control, less put upon.

If, on the other hand, you're often late for special dates or important business meetings, Dr. Miller adds, you may be stuck in the overpreparation syndrome: changing and rechanging your clothes, reviewing your notes one more time, etc. The next time you're running in circles this way, try giving yourself a pep talk. Another helpful strategy is to do a lot of the getting ready the day before the appointment. That way, even if you're nervous right before your date, you'll know (intellectually, at least) that the outfit works and that you have a good grasp of what you're talking about.

Or maybe no matter how well prepared you are, you always find yourself just a little late. In this case, you may simply be a chronic underestimator of the time you need to take a shower, get the car out and all the other little steps involved in getting from here-and-now to there-and-then. As a solution to this type of problem, time-management experts suggest that you make a list and schedule each time-consuming task you'll have to perform. Then, if you can see (in your own handwriting) that it will take a total of 20 minutes to get across town in your car (at least — don't forget to allow a few extra for traffic jams and the unexpected), you aren't likely to make unrealistically early commitments.

What if you constantly find yourself late because you couldn't resist trying to accomplish one more errand first? "Some people," says Stephanie Winston, author of Getting Organized (Warner), "like to schedule their days very closely from hour to hour." This is fine, she says, as long as you don't let the illusion of super-efficiency keep you constantly behind. She suggests that you "try to drop the low priority, unimportant projects altogether, or postpone them into the indefinite future." Then you can go to your appointment punctually and with a clear conscience.

Or do you tend to be late when you're feeling angry at or doubtful about the person you're meeting? Sometimes, Dr. Miller says, we keep someone waiting to "show" them how upset we are or to pretend we don't care in order to cover up feelings of vulnerability and attachment when we're unsure of the other person. But making someone wait will generate anger in that person — and invite retaliation. If you're mad or uncertain, it's better to express those feelings. Clear the air and give your friend a chance to respond.

But whatever the cause of your delay, the most important point to realize is that chronic tardiness is a trait you can change and that change is a choice you can make — starting right now. FW

NOW AT LAST, YOU CAN GET IT TOO!

The Amazing "Face-Lift-In-A-Jar" Used by Hollywood Stars Who Lose Their Jobs If They Don't Look Their Best!

Have you seen Tova Borgnine lately? She really looks great! In fact, according to her husband Ernest, Tova now has the skin of a teenager!

And what about Ernie himself? His friends are all saying he looks younger now than he did 10 years ago. Actually, he looks so good many of his co-stars have accused him of having a face-lift.

But Ernie hasn't had a face-lift and neither has his wife Tova. Both of them, however, do have a certain little secret.

Fortunately, for the rest of us, this "little Hollywood secret" isn't so secret anymore. Soon it will be in stores all over the country and even now you can get it by mail! Officially, it's called TOVA 9® but everyone in Hollywood simply refers to it as "Tova's Face-Lift-In-A-Jar."

It is certainly not cheap but the stars who use it say it works like magic. The whole process takes only half an hour and insiders say there is nothing like it for anybody who wants to look years younger than their actual calendar age.

It is easy to use. All you do is apply the cream to your face and wait. "The cream is pink when you apply it, and gradually turns white," says Tova. "After it turns white it should be removed. One of the great things about it is that there is no guess work. It 'knows' what to do by itself!"

Mrs. Borgnine says the secret of this remarkable look-young treatment was first discovered by the Aztec Indians centuries ago. She says it comes from the roots of a very rare cactus plant and that it is 100% natural pure and, until Tova came into the picture, it was only available in certain very remote sections in Mexico.

But what about the results? Does it really work? Here is what others say:

"... The results are obvious!"
— Brenda Vaccara

"... My skin loves them!"
— Jessica Walters

"TOVA 9® has a fresh just showered feeling!"
— Connie Stevens

"I couldn't be more pleased with the results ... "!
— Maureen Dean

"I am amazed with the texture of my face ..."
— Jed Allen

"... Tova certainly has something for everyone!"
— Debbie Reynolds

"... A total beauty treatment as well as an indulging, pampering treat!"
— Tommy & Jo Lasorda

"I have not had a facelift. The only reason I look younger today than I did 10 years ago is because of what my wife has discovered."
— Ernest Borgnine
November 3, 1981

"My complexion is not only very important to my career, but it is considered my best feature. Consequently, I guard it with my life — no sun, watch my diet, proper rest and the use of marvelous products such as TOVA 9®." — Jayne Meadows

It goes on and on. A complete list of everybody who uses TOVA 9® would fill up this entire page and it would read like a virtual "Who's Who in Hollywood." Actually, many of your favorite movie and TV stars absolutely swear by it.

Would you like to try this remarkable discovery? Would you like to have the beauty of youth without the expense and hassle of other methods? If so, here's how you can try TOVA 9® without any risk at all: Simply go ahead and order "Tova's Secret Weapon" by mail or telephone. Then, try it out in the privacy of your home, and take a close look at the amazing change you will see in your mirror! After that, if you are not 100% satisfied, simply send back the empty container and Mrs. Borgnine will personally see to it that you get a complete refund with no questions asked.

Remember! You can't lose money but you can lose years off your appearance!

It is easy to order. Just fill out the coupon below and send it to Mrs. Borgnine with your payment. Or, if you wish to order by Visa or MasterCard, you can dail (800) 824-7888 [in California dail 1 (800)' 852-7777] and ask for Operator 471, Dept. 368. Announcing a remarkable series of twelve collector's plates by the Orient's outstanding artist in the classic Rimpa style . . . her first works of art in porcelain

Birds and Flowers of the Orient

BY NAOKA NOBATA

Each plate bears an original work of art created by Naoka Nobata exclusively for this collection.

Available by subscription only.
Please enter your subscription by September 30, 1982.

THE ARTIST. Naoka Nobata is one of the most brilliant and imaginative of today's painters in the traditional Oriental style. She is celebrated throughout her native land both for her exceptional talent and the sensitivity of her technique. Indeed, Mme. Nobata is today's foremost exponent of the classic "Rimpa" tradition of Oriental art—which marvelously intertwines the real and the imaginary.

The works of Naoka Nobata have been shown at important art exhibitions throughout Japan, including the first Sogakai Exhibition, and she has been honored with a one-woman show at the distinguished Shirota Gallery. In addition, her paintings have been exhibited in the Tokyo Central Art Gallery and the Miyuki Gallery, and her work has been acquired by many prominent collectors including the leading art critic Tetsuji Takechi for his own private collection.

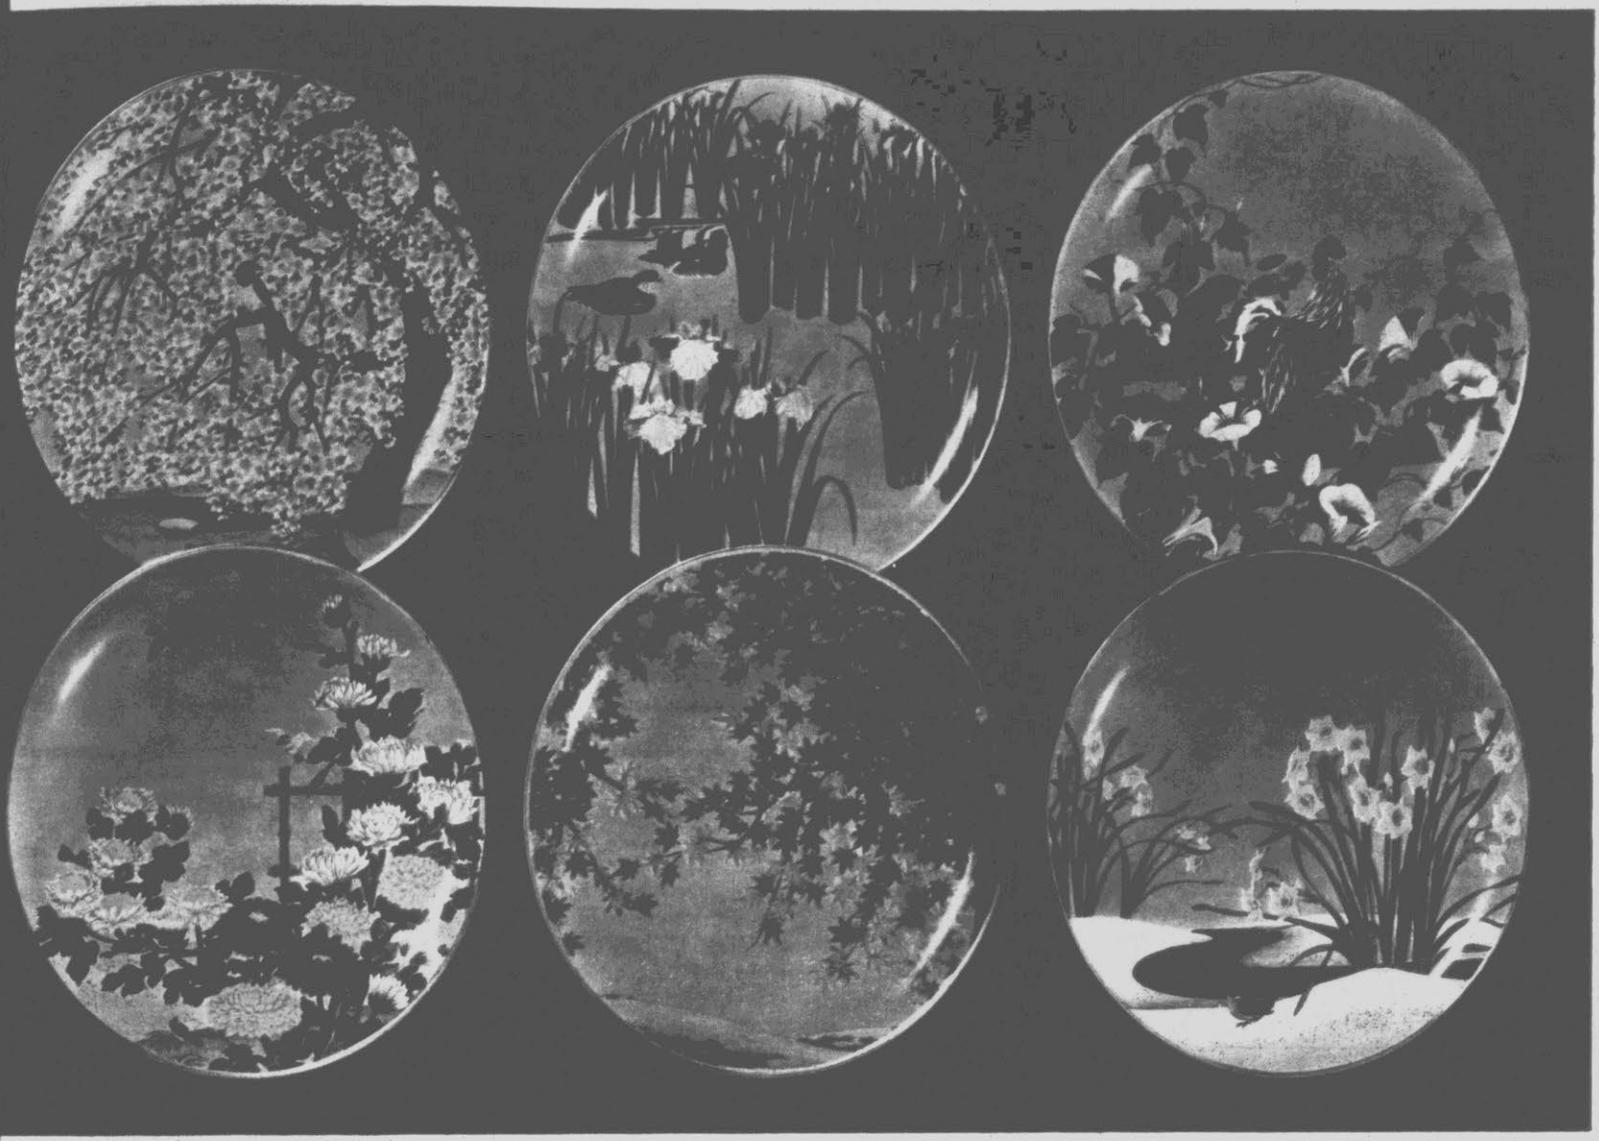

At the pinnacle of her career, Naoka Nobata has created her very first works of art in porcelain: Birds and Flowers of the Orient. A series of twelve collector's plates portraying exquisite flowers of Oriental lore and legend—and the exotic birds associated with them.

Each of the plates is a distinctive work of art in itself. Together, they form a breathtaking collection that will enhance the beauty of any home. Rich in the symbolism of the Orient... imbued with its meaning... touched with its mystery... this is a collection that will provide endless hours of joy and inspiration.

BIRDS AND FLOWERS OF THE ORIENT PLATES. Each plate represents a different month of the Oriental year, and combines the flower and bird symbolizing that month. Deep green pine branches and the stately white crane for January... the Japanese iris and the Mandarin duck for May... the languid water lily and the exotic egret for August... the brilliantly colored chrysanthemum and the tree sparrow for October... Twelve flowers and birds of the Orient brought together in works of extraordinary beauty.

These collector plates will be exceptionally large—10-1/4 inches in diameter—to provide full scope for the artist's imaginative portrayals. And, as a finishing touch for her designs, each plate will be hand-decorated with a border of pure 24 karat gold.

Moreover, each plate will be produced in the finest Japanese porcelain—highly prized for its translucence and strength. And the delicate, sensitive quality of the artist's work will be meticulously captured in every detail, every nuance, every line.

A wide variety of colors will be used in the creation of these designs. Brilliant reds and oranges contrasting with pale yellows, soft greens and cool aquas. Rich browns and ambers mingled with bright blues, subtle violets and magentas. All the lovely shades one might see in an Oriental garden. And to add to the uniqueness of the plates, elements of the design will form a charming floral border on the reverse.

AVAILABLE BY SUBSCRIPTION ONLY. The plates in this collection will be crafted in Japan exclusively for individual subscribers to the series, and a limit of one collection per person will be strictly enforced.

Furthermore, the collection is available only by subscription and only from Franklin Porcelain, which is issuing the plates.

CHILDREN

Latchkey Blues: When Kids Come Home

By Susan Lapinski

Wearing the front-door key on a chain around his neck, 11-year-old Jeremy Cavin comes home from school each day to an empty house.

"Lonely is the word for it," says Jeremy, an only child who is not allowed to have friends over while his parents are at work.

Says Jeremy's father, Bob: "I don't like the situation. I don't think any parent does." But with no suitable after-school programs in their area of North Carolina, the Cavins feel they have no choice. For as long as both of his parents work, Jeremy will be a so-called "latchkey child."

The label has been around since the 19th century, but the number of latchkey kids between the ages of 7 and 13 has burgeoned in recent years. Due to the dramatic increases in one-parent and two-paycheck families, there are now more than two million children who fend for themselves for part of every workday. And with two out of every three mothers expected to work outside the home by the end of this decade, the latchkey legion can only grow larger still.

Until recently, little was known about this phenomenon. Now research is under way, "survival" courses geared to latchkey kids are being offered and some communities are beginning to come up with attractive alternatives.

One of the new studies reveals that some latchkey children face very real emotional problems. Dr. Thomas Long, professor of education at The Catholic University of America, and his wife, Dr. Lynette Long, assistant professor of education at Loyola University, interviewed more than 50 latchkey kids in Washington, D.C. One child who lost her key recalled crying on the front porch for hours until her mother returned from work. Another told of climbing into a chair and clutching her shoe as a possible weapon when she heard suspicious noises outside.

Latchkey children can also suffer from being bored, isolated and confined, the Longs believe. "Where is play for these kids?" asks Thomas Long. "For years these children are denied a social life at a critical time in their development." Kids left alone at home watched up to seven hours of television a day, according to the Longs' study.

But beyond marathon TV-watching, the Longs worry about the possible long-term effects of "latchkeyism": feelings of alienation leading to academic failure, violence, vandalism and experimentation with drugs and alcohol. Thomas Long says police in his area are seeing more and more latchkey kids in trouble. But he and other experts concede that any conclusive link between latchkey children and delinquency remains hypothetical.

Experts worry about the possible long-term effects of "latchkeyism": academic failure, violence, vandalism.

What can worried latchkey parents do to minimize the risks? Long suggests that parents help structure empty hours by assigning chores and suggesting a schedule to follow, and by trying to arrange for some after-school activities — scouting, dance lessons, recreation programs — to vary their kids' solo routines. From the comments of children in his study, he also believes that pets can help by providing comfort and companionship in an empty house.

Above all, Long suggests that once parents return home, they should put off household duties and "make an extended effort to get into their child's world."

Another study now in progress by Dr. Hyman Rodman, director of the Family Research Center at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro, reveals how nearly 1,200 latchkey mothers are trying to make the arrangement as safe as possible. The women said they worry about fires, forgotten keys and other frightening possibilities. But most stay in close touch with their children by phone, have a neighbor to turn to in emergencies and have rules for the kids to follow. Among the most com-

Freelance writer Susan Lapinski and her husband are authors of In a Family Way (Little, Brown and Co.).

to an Empty House

mon rules:

- No one is allowed in the house, even friends, without prior special permission.
- The door is not to be opened when someone knocks unless the child is told beforehand that certain persons can be let in or unless it is someone well known to the family.
- Children are given specific tasks which they are expected to do while they care for themselves.
- No use of the stove or other electrical appliances, except for the TV, radio or record player, is allowed.
- No one who calls on the telephone is to be told by the children that they are alone.

Most latchkey mothers who have these rules told Dr. Rodman they were satisfied, if not happy, with the arrangement. Many believed that their children were learning responsibility and self-reliance.

In some communities, parents have avoided the pitfalls of latchkeyism altogether by organizing school-based, after-class programs staffed by teacher aides, C.E.T.A. workers (Government-paid employees in service positions) and other parents. Typically, kids in these programs learn crafts, compete in sports, eat healthful snacks — and stay out of trouble better than unsupervised kids, program organizers claim.

There was no such program in Elaine Chaback's New York City neighborhood, so she put together a survival manual for her latchkey daughter, then 11 years old. The book, co-authored with Pat Fortunato, which offers advice on everything from boredom to bee stings to bicycle breakdowns, was recently published as The Official Kids' Survival Kit: How to Do Things on Your Own (Little, Brown).

Just as the book has helped to fill the gap for her daughter, Leah, now 14, Chaback hopes that it will ease the problems of other latchkey kids. FW

Many latchkey children feel locked into loneliness and boredom.

WHAT IN THE WORLD

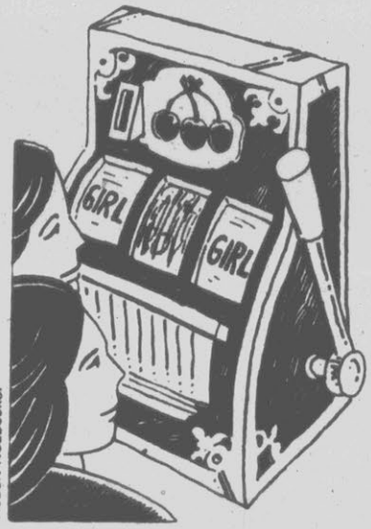

By Eliot Kaplan

BOY OR GIRL? YOU DECIDE

A few years ago, FAMILY WEEKLY reported on a new procedure invented by Dr. Ronald Ericsson that increases the odds of giving birth to a male baby. Since then, Ericsson says, his method has resulted in 66 male babies at 10 sperm centers around the U.S., with a success rate of 75 to 80 percent.

Now Ericsson has obtained a patent for a new method to increase the chances of giving birth to a female. Inducing ovulation with the drug Clomid and using a sperm separation technique in 18 women has resulted in 14 female babies, he says.

Ericsson told us that in cultures where male children are preferred, his original sex-selection method is a valid means of family planning. He also says both techniques are of great interest to cattle ranchers, since heifers are needed in the dairy business, while bull calves are preferred in the beef business.

Robert Neubecker

For information on U.S. facilities offering the Ericsson techniques, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Gametrics Ltd., P.O. Box 1507, Dept. FW, Sausalito, Calif. 94966.

WOMEN WHO DRINK

It's estimated that roughly one in every 10 Americans who drink has a drinking problem. That's 10 million people. And the day is now upon us when half of those problem drinkers are women, according to Penn State's William Eck, an advisory board member of the National Council on Alcoholism.

Eck told us that there are some key differences in the ways and reasons men and women drink. "Women drink more covertly, not on binges. They drink because they're lonely and more in connection with emotional upsets like divorce or a death in the family. Men drink to become assertive, for courage."

Alcoholism education for both sexes, though, is starting far too late, Eck adds, pointing out that over 85 percent of incoming college freshmen have been actively drinking alcohol since high school.

READ THIS NOW

You know you're really important when an electronic paging beeper just isn't quick enough to notify you that a message is waiting. After all, then you have to get to a phone. So for you impatient V.I.P.'s, help is finally here. It's a new, lightweight pocket-size receiver that flashes the actual message for you to read.

The Metagram receiver can flash up, line by line, some 90 words. Messages can be sent via an 800 phone number or over a computer terminal connected to a phone.

The 10-ounce, battery-operated device is currently available in the Los Angeles and San Francisco areas, and Charles Priddy, president of Meta Systems, says he hopes to go nationwide in major cities within 18 months.

The receivers rent for $40 to $70 a month, and current users include busy folks like Rams coach Ray Malavasi and movie mogul Dino De Laurentiis.

WEATHERING THE VOLCANO

The eruption of a volcano in Mexico last spring could have a major effect on the world's climate this winter.

When El Chichon exploded, it sent sulfur dioxide into the air — maybe 10 times as much as Mt. St. Helens did. These particles reflect sunlight away from the earth, perhaps lowering average global temperatures by 1 or 2 degrees Celsius and affecting the distribution of rainfall, explains Dr. James Friend, an atmospheric chemist at Drexel University.

UPI

Agung: 1963 weather disrupter.

This doesn't mean you should run out and buy an extra pair of mittens, but such a change can affect crops, which are very sensitive to even slight variations in rainfall and length of growing season.

Friend told us that the last volcano to have a significant effect on the weather was Bali's Mt. Agung, which erupted in 1963. The big daddy of recorded volcanoes was Indonesia's Mt. Tambora, whose eruption in 1815 caused what's been called "The year without a summer."

PROPHET OF THE GRIDIRON?

Searching for a surefire way to correctly predict the outcome of the pro football season, we placed a call to one Psychic George, a Long Island, N.Y. fellow who claims 80 to 90 percent accuracy in forecasting certain world events. "I'm pretty sharp with earthquakes and assassination attempts," he told us.

Well, it seems old George doesn't know too much about football, but he forged ahead anyway, and here are his playoff picks. In the A.F.C. he likes the Oilers, Steelers, Chiefs, Seahawks and Jets ("I saw a jet plane even before you asked me the question"). In the N.F.C. he takes the Cowboys, Saints, Cardinals, Giants and Packers ("I'm seeing a lot of green").

Undeterred when informed that New Orleans has never made the playoffs in its 15-year history, Psychic George is picking the Saints over the Jets in the 1983 Super Bowl.

"This kind of stuff really isn't my strength," George, a 30-year-old phone-company employee, warns. "But my accuracy is very good in communicating with the hereafter."

Paul Burrell

Psychic George sees the Saints marching in.

● WELL KNIT! "A family is a unit composed not only of children, but of men, women, an occasional animal, and the common _____," wrote the late Ogden Nash. Fill blank with the missing word. P.S.: If rhymes with gold.

The missing word is 'cold.'

● Speak Out! Drop two letters; find a common means of vocal expression in each word: 1. Single. 2. Humid. 3. Crypt. 4. Enchant. 5. Clutter.

1. Sing. 2. Hum. 3. Cry. 4. Chant. 5. Utter.

● Number Please! When a certain number is increased by four and diminished by four the product of its sum and difference is 48. What number?

The number is eight.

● Riddle-Me-This! What has eight legs and tests eyes? An optic-pus. What did Mama Bear bake for Baby Bear's party? Cub-cakes. When do crows stand around and talk? On their caw-fee breaks.

SUM NUMBERS TO PONDER

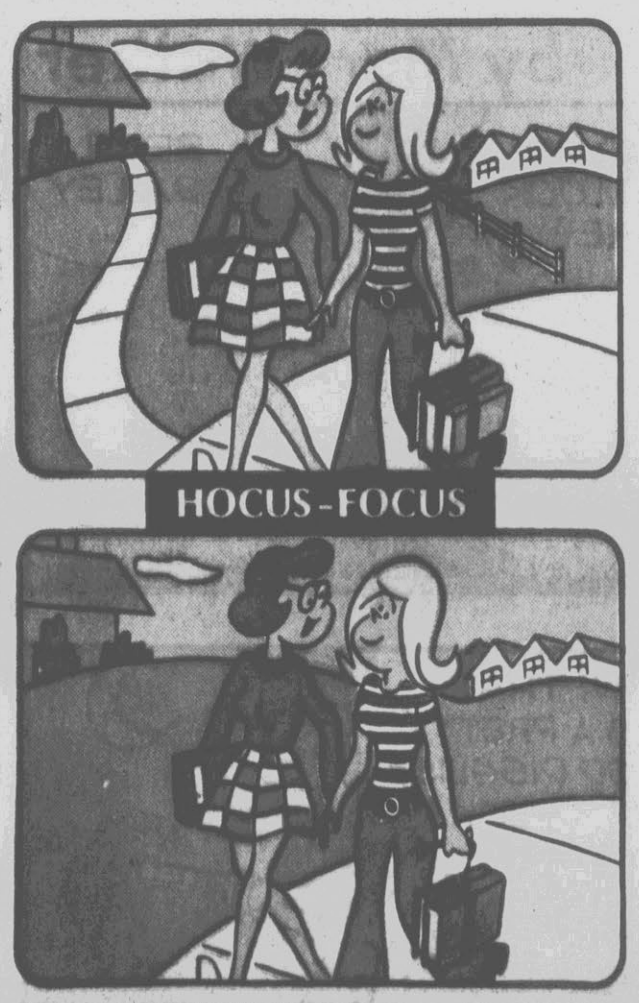

Ask a friend to select a number from one to 10. Ask him or her to add eight, double the sum, divide by four, and then subtract half the original number. (If an odd number is selected, compute the fractions.) The resulting total will always be four — regardless of the chosen number.

If you had suggested adding six to begin, the answer would be three. If you had begun with four, the answer would be two — always half the number first imposed.

ON THE BUTTON! What has the button at lower right to do with the scene above? To find out, connect dots.

IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR

created by HAL FOSTER

Our Story: IN TIMUR'S DESOLATE KINGDOM YOUNG PRINCE GALAN HUNTS THE SACRED RING. SEEKING INFORMATION IN A RANCID INN HE IS SHOWN THE DOOR -- BOTTOM FIRST. "USE YOUR HEAD," YUAN CHEN HAD ADVISED. RESOLUTELY HE MARCHES BACK, TRYING TO BE CLEVER. A SIXTH SENSE CAUTIONS: TIMUR'S THUGS APPROACH.

THE KING'S MEN DISMOUNT AS GALAN TURNS A CORNER, CLIMBS A VINE, AND CREEPS AMONG THE RAFTERS. THE FOE STORMS IN BELOW.

"TIMUR NEEDS LABORERS," THEIR LEADER DECLARES. "SCUM LIKE YOU WILL NOT BE MISSED." AS THE HELPLESS PATRONS RECOIL, GALAN RECALLS ONE OF YUAN CHEN'S DEMONSTRATIONS. FROM HIS PURSE HE TAKES A LODESTONE AND DANGLES IT ON A THREAD.

"SNAP," OUT OF NOWHERE IT MARRIES THE VILLAIN'S BLADE. STARTLED, HE LOSES HIS GRIP AN INSTANT, AND GALAN HOISTS THE WEAPON ALOFT. TIMUR'S MEN LOOK TO THE RAFTERS IN DUMB SURPRISE -- AND GET A BARREL OF FLOUR SPILLED INTO THEIR EYES.

WHEN THE DUST CLEARS GALAN IS A HERO AND THE RABBLE HAVE SCORED A BLOODY VICTORY OVER THE KING'S MINIONS. "I FEAR THE NEXT LIFE WILL NOT BE KIND TO BLACKGUARDS LIKE THESE," SAYS THE MAN WHO GAVE GALAN THE BOOT. "NO DOUBT THEY WILL RETURN AS INSECTS, RATS IF THEY ARE LUCKY." SUDDENLY HE SLAPS HIS PALM UPON THE TABLE.

"SEE! ALREADY THEY ARE BACK." HE LAUGHS A THROATY LAUGH AND INTRODUCES HIMSELF AS JAGAT, "TRAGEDIAN AND COMEDIAN TO THE GREAT."
