Syrians And PLO Struck By Waves Of Israeli Jets

By FAROUK NASSAR
Associated Press Writer
BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Waves of Israeli jets attacked Syrian and Palestinian positions today in sustained air assaults on eastern Lebanon's Bekaa Valley, killing 30 troops and guerrillas and setting several military encampments ablaze, Lebanon's state and privately owned radio stations reported.

The leftist Voice of Arab Lebanon radio station described the assault as the "beginning of a new round of full-scale warfare in Lebanon."

It was the fourth time since Wednesday that Israeli planes have attacked Syrian anti-aircraft missiles at Dahar el-Baida, about 20 miles east of Beirut. The Israelis said the attacks were in retaliation for Syrian cease-fire violations in Lebanon.

The Israeli military command in Tel Aviv said its bombers hit Palestinian and Syrian positions in the areas of el-Matar, Chtaura and Dahar el-Baida.

The command said a Syrian SAM-9 missile launcher was destroyed and other Palestinian and Syrian positions were struck. Israel has said it destroyed six Soviet-made SAM-9 missile batteries in the same area over the past five days.

The attack came a day after Israel Prime Minister Menachem Begin's government warned Syria against allowing Palestinian guerrillas in Syrian-held territory to launch attacks on Israeli troops in Lebanon.

The Lebanon reports said Israeli warplanes also staged mock divebombing attacks on the Palestinian refugee camp of Baddawi near Lebanon's northern port of Tripoli, drawing heavy anti-aircraft barrages from guerrilla positions.

Baddawi houses more than 8,000 refugees registered with the United Nations.

The Voice of Lebanon station of the rightist Christian Phalange Party retracted an earlier report that Baddawi was bombed and strafed by jets at 8 a.m. (2 a.m. EDT), saying mock divebombings at the site were mistaken for live bombardment.

Israel said the raids were in reprisal for Syrian cease-fire violations and accused the Syrians of aiding guerrilla forces in eastern and central Lebanon. It said 12 Israeli soldiers have been killed and 20 wounded in 98 cease-fire violations in eastern Lebanon since July 23, when Israeli warplanes and artillery pounded the Syrians in east Lebanon to halt a string of 10 days of flareups there.

"The Syrians are enabling the terrorists to cross lines and are supplying them with information regarding our deployment ... Israel cannot agree to this," an Israeli military spokesman said.

The waves of jets thundered over the Lebanese capital as they headed for attacks in the Bekaa and the central Lebanese mountains in the areas of Chtaura, Dahar el-Baida and near Zahle, the Bekaa's provincial capital, according to all local radio stations.

The state radio and the Voice of Lebanon station said the Bekaa raids began at 7:30 a.m. (1:30 a.m. EDT) and were continuing four hours later, bringing traffic on the Beirut-Damascus international highway to a complete standstill.

Palestine Liberation Organization leaders have visited Baddawi camp several times since their evacuation from west Beirut two weeks ago under a U.S.-sponsored plan. The visiting leaders, who crossed the border from neighboring Syria into Baddawi, have vowed to wage a new war against Israel from northern and eastern Lebanon to avenge the June 6 Israeli invasion.

Laden Spanish Passenger Plane Crashes And Burns

MALAGA, Spain (AP) — A Spanish charter jet en route to New York with 393 people reported aboard crashed and burst into flames on takeoff from the Malaga airport today. Police confirmed at least one dead but airport officials said as many as 25 people were believed trapped inside the burning DC-10.

Police had said earlier that 12 people were believed to be inside the wreckage, but other sources at the airport said as many as 25 may have been trapped inside. Police said 100 people were injured, many of them burned. The charter company earlier said that 200 passengers and crewmembers escaped unhurt.

Witnesses at the airport said the plane crashed as it struggled to get airborne. When it crashed a fire started at the rear of the plane, they said, but most passengers were able to evacuate the plane.

The Spanish charter company Spantax said in a statement from its headquarters in Palma de Majorca that the plane carried 380 passengers and a crew of 13, but it did not immediately report their nationalities or names. It said the pilot and co-pilot escaped unharmed, but three stewardesses were unaccounted for.

Airport sources said the passengers were believed to include many Americans and Canadians returning home after holidays in Spain. They said arrangements were being made to have an Iberia Airlines Boeing 747 fly the survivors not needing medical treatment to New York.

There were conflicting reports about what happened.

Spantax said in a statement from its headquarters in Palma de Majorca that the plane crashed after having "technical difficulties." Pilot Juan Perez reported a vibration in the plane after starting down the runway and said he tried to abort the takeoff, a Spantax official said.

The Spanish news agency EFE, quoting military sources at the Malaga airport, said the right engine failed on the takeoff run.

Reports from the crash scene said one of the plane's engines was found in a field near the runway.

Angel Fernandez, one of the passengers who escaped, said the plane did not appear to have the power to take off, "either that or the plane was carrying excess weight." He said the plane crashed so quickly, "there wasn't time for anything."

Fernandez, a Spaniard from Madrid, told reporters the plane was full. "There had to be some deaths," he said as he climbed out of an ambulance in Malaga, his shirt stained with blood.

The nationalities of the passengers was not immediately known and a spokesman for Spantax said the company would not release the plane's manifest until all the victims' identities were confirmed "in order to avoid mistakes."

The plane crashed into a tree nursery shortly after taking off from this city on Spain's southern Mediterranean coast, police said.

An unidentified Italian couple screamed at firemen and crash crews to rescue their two children inside the plane, EFE reported.

The agency said the jet was burning near the airport and alongside the Cadiz-Barcelona highway, which police blocked off in case of an explosion.

No other details were immediately known.

On Dec. 3, 1972, a Spantax chartered by a group of West German tourists crashed at Tenerife in Spain's Canary Islands, killing 155 people. On March 27, 1977, two Boeing 747 jumbo jets, one operated by KLM Royal Dutch Airlines and the other by Pan American World Airways, collided at the Tenerife airport, killing 582 people.

The 1977 jumbo jet collision was history's worst aviation disaster. It occurred on the ground in heavy fog as the KLM airliner, roaring down the runway for takeoff, smashed into the Pan Am jumbo jet at more than 160 mph. Both planes flooded and burned.

Some Of Smaller Airport Towers Will Be Reopened

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —

Nearly half of the control towers closed at 80 small airports because of last year's air traffic controllers strike will be reopened by early January, according to government officials.

The Federal Aviation Administration has gradually opened 26 of the towers since the August, 1981, strike, in which 11,000 controllers were fired. Another 11 towers are scheduled to again have controllers assigned to them during the next four months, the agency said.

FAA spokesman Fred Farrar said the towers are being reopened as controllers become available. In some cases, the same controllers who had been shifted to other airports will return, while in other cases newly trained controllers will take over.

The 80 airports handle primarily non-commercial traffic, although some of the fields also are used by commuter airlines, Farrar said. At most of the sites, pilots take off and land under visual flight rules.

Controllers at those airports normally give approaching airplanes clearance and an order in which to land, but they do not maintain separation of aircraft, a job left to the pilots.

At about 10 percent of the airports where instrument landings are allowed, the controller also maintains aircraft separation. When those towers closed, pilots were told to follow prescribed traffic patterns for the airport. In some cases, they were able to get guidance from nearby FAA control centers or the tower at a nearby airport.

FAA officials said the tower closings did not affect air safety at the airports. And they said air traffic at most of the airports did not change significantly.

However, some advocates of stronger aviation safety rules wanted the towers reopened. Fired air traffic controllers called the shut-downs a safety hazard.

Farrar acknowledged some of the 43 towers that remain closed may not be reopened.

Hinckley Sees 'American Way'

NEW YORK (AP) — John Hinckley Jr., who was acquitted in the attempted assassination of President Reagan by reason of insanity, says being sent to a mental hospital instead of prison "is the American Way."

In an unsolicited letter to Newsweek magazine published in the Sept. 20 issue, Hinckley defends the insanity defense, and says abolishing it would be "a travesty of justice."

In the letter, written at St. Elizabeths Hospital in Washington, where Hinckley is incarcerated under court order, Hinckley says, "Let's leave the insanity defense alone and accept the fact that every once in a while, someone is going to use this 'defense of last resort' and win with it."

Marchers Protest PCB Dump Site

By MARK DAVIS
Associated Press Writer
AFTON, N.C. (AP) —

About 400 people opposed to filling a Warren County landfill with PCB-laced soil demonstrated here Sunday, vowing to go to jail or lie down in front of trucks to prevent Wednesday's scheduled dumping of the soil at the landfill.

Crowd members carried signs and chanted slogans critical of Gov. Jim Hunt and the state's decision to allow the soil laced with the toxic chemical to be stored at the landfill near Afton.

The marchers were a mixed group of black and white, young and old, men and women. Wearing shorts, sun dresses or starched white shirts, they sang and chanted, stopping traffic and bringing people out of their homes to watch as the procession moved along the rural road toward the dump site, where leaders of the group held a news conference.

The Rev. Leon White of the United Church of Christ's Commission for Racial Justice, who led Sunday's march, said the demonstrators would be back again on Wednesday to stop the first dumpings of PCB-laced soil.

"We do mean business — even if it means going to jail," he said, adding that PCB opponents also would lie in front of the trucks or do "whatever is necessary" to disrupt the dumping.

Among the signs were ones saying "Dump Hunt, Not Warren County" and chanting, "We don't need your PCBs, Governor Hunt, let us be."

Ken Ferruccio, president of Warren County Citizens Concerned About PCBs, said state officials had not studied all the ways to deal with the chemical before deciding on a landfill.

"We don't want landfill technology in North Carolina," he said. "We don't feel we're getting the full range of options that are available."

The landfill's effects will not be known until a decade or longer has passed, Ferruccio said.

"We would be reduced to laboratory animals," he said.

Henry Brooker of Afton, who lives near the site, is a cancer victim. He told the crowd they also would run the risk of contracting cancer if they allow the soil to be dumped in Warren County.

The demonstration remained peaceful, as deputies and state troopers chatted with marchers.

Underlying the friendliness was a conviction that the PCBs must not be dumped in Warren County, said Joyce Lubbers, a spokeswoman for the citizens group. She said Warren County residents realize they must stop the landfill — or watch as more counties become sites for PCB landfills.

PCBs are polychlorinated biphenyls, a chemical found in an oil used to insulate electrical transformers.

NOT ANSWERING INQUIRIES

We wrote to you in April and you ran a column on SMM Mail Order House in California. That company has sold out to another, you told us then, giving us the new address. Our inquiry was sent back refused. What is new address? E.P.

There isn't a new address. Robert M. Raymer, consumer protection analyst with the State of California Department of Justice, said. He said, as we'd reported earlier, that the company was bought some time ago by Gold Equities Inc., a company that has made statements indicating a desire to continue to operate SMM. However, the company is not currently doing business nor is it responding to consumer complaints and inquiries. Federal, state and local regulatory agencies report that they are monitoring SMM's problems, but have not yet determined a course of action which would directly benefit consumer. "It appears," he said, "that resolution of SMM customer complaints may have to await the outcome of the private litigation and the possible reorganization of the company under the new ownership."

He promised to keep our correspondence on file and notify us of any new developments concerning the company which would be of assistance to our readers.

Congressional Seniority Tested In Primaries

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

The value of congressional seniority gets severely tested Tuesday when two senior senators and the chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee face tough challenges in a coast-to-coast series of primary elections.

Under attack from within their own parties are Republican Sen. Robert Stafford of Vermont, Democratic Sen. Howard Cannon of Nevada and Rep. Clement Zablocki, Democratic chairman of the foreign affairs panel.

Another incumbent in trouble is Gov. Edward King of Massachusetts, who is being challenged by former Gov. Michael Dukakis, the man King defeated in the Democratic primary four years ago.

Stafford is being criticized for having become too much a part of the congressional establishment during his 10 years in the Senate.

"In all the years I've been in public office," said Stafford, "I've never seen so blatant an attempt to capitalize on general dissatisfaction with an institution or incumbency."

Stafford's opponents, Stewart Ledbetter and John McClaughey, have criticized the senator for his overseas travel and preoccupation with environmental issues. Stafford is chairman of the Senate Environment and Public Works committee.

Cannon, a veteran of 24 years in the Senate, faces a similar attack from Rep. Jim Santini, who opened his primary challenge by declaring that "incumbency is not an automatic divine right to office."

In Wisconsin, the 69-year-old Zablocki is battling a 42-year-old challenger in the Democratic primary. "Thirty-four years is a long time for anybody," argues Lynn

Adelman, referring to Zablocki's length of service in the House. "I think people realize it's time for a change."

Those congressional races are among the tighter contests in 12 states and the District of Columbia where voters will go to the polls on Tuesday. In 10 states voters will choose nominees for governor. Ten incumbent senators are seeking renomination, but only Cannon and Stafford have serious opposition.

In the 51 House districts, only 14 incumbents have opponents. There is no incumbent running in seven of the House districts.

Wisconsin will be the first state to hold a statewide vote on the nuclear freeze. The question on the ballot will be whether to inform the president and Congress "that it is the desire of the people of Wisconsin to have the government of the United States work vigorously to negotiate a mutual nuclear weapons moratorium and reduction, with appropriate verification, with the Soviet Union and other nations." At least that was the intent. Because of a clerical error, the word "weapons" was dropped from the ballot. However, since the vote is only advisory anyway and since people of the state are aware of the issue, state officials have said the omission won't really make any difference.

Two familiar names are on the ballot in Minnesota — Eugene McCarthy and Harold Stassen — but neither is given much chance for a successful comeback.

In Washington, D.C., former Carter Cabinet official, Patricia Roberts Harris, is challenging Mayor Marion Barry in the Democratic primary. Barry is seeking a second four-year term and has the endorsement of the Washington Post. The winner of the primary is the government of the United States work strongly Democratic city.

Dear Abby

Girl Of 11 Is 'Dumped'

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am 11 years old. My ex-boyfriend, who is 12, dumped me for an uglier girl. I am not beautiful, but I'm not exactly ugly either.

You may think I am too young to have a boyfriend, but I am very mature for my age. Why do I get dumped by every boyfriend I ever have? Is it me, or the boy?

DUMPED AT 11

DEAR DUMPED: Please don't worry about it at this stage in your life. Perhaps you're lucky. It would be a sorry state of affairs if every man chose his lifetime partner when she was 11. And vice versa.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I were planning a 40th anniversary celebration, but I called it off three months ago when I learned from someone that my husband had had an affair with a young woman while he was stationed in Alameda, Calif., during World War II.

The affair lasted about a year while he was waiting to be shipped out, but never was. When I confronted him with the facts, he admitted it, but said it was "nothing serious." We had been married three years and had one child when all this took place, and I thought we had a perfect marriage.

I am devastated. I feel betrayed, knowing I've spent the last 37 years living with a liar and a cheat. How can I ever trust him again? The bottom has fallen out of my world! Now he asks me to "forgive him," but it's 37 years too late. Our relationship is deteriorating and our marriage is hanging by a thread.

We raised five children, among them a lawyer, engineer, teacher and other professionals. I felt secure and fortunate to have such a solid marriage all these years.

I am miserable and sick inside. How can I overcome this terrible feeling of betrayal? I've been to my minister and two doctors — one a psychiatrist — but nothing makes me feel any better.

Should I hang on for the financial benefits, or go it alone? ABOUT TO CRACK UP

DEAR ABOUT: To dwell on something that took place 37 years ago is useless and self-destructive. You must let go of your obsession with the past and concentrate on the present and future. Your husband's affair was not an act of "betrayal" against you — it had nothing to do with you. He was lonely, she was there, the temptation was strong, and he was weak. Had it been "serious," he would have chosen her.

You need to work out your anger and outrage with a therapist. Find one who is right for you. Forgive, and your own pain will be healed. Who among us has not needed to be forgiven many times in our lives? God bless you. Please write again and tell me how you are. I care.

DEAR ABBY: I was amused at your column on the various methods used to get a letter out of someone who rarely wrote to concerned loved ones. It reminded me of what I did after a number of unsuccessful attempts to evoke a reply from a relative who, at the time, was a Roman Catholic priest in a small Midwestern town.

His unmarried sister, a social worker, resided in the rectory and did double duty as a secretary and housekeeper. In a sort of mischievous desperation I addressed a letter to The Rev. and Mrs. James F. O'Malley (made-up name) in care of the rectory.

Needless to say, I received not one, but two very prompt, though somewhat curt, replies.

There are several ways to finish the waist of a skirt and, with knitted and crocheted ensembles becoming ever more popular, you should examine a number of methods and choose the one best suited to your purposes.

A casing is added to a skirt band simply to hold elastic in place. Here's how you make one of the most commonly used casings.

With crochet hook and yarn, make a slip stitch in the top of your waist at one seam. Then (chain 2, skip 1/2 inch, make a slip stitch in the next stitch 1/2 inch below the waistline). Repeat the steps given within parentheses all around the waistband. Cut the elastic to fit your waist, insert it into the casing and fasten.

Another crocheted casing is made by first working a row of single crochet around the top of the skirt. When this is done, chain 4 and turn your work. (Skip 2 stitches, make a double crochet in the following stitch, chain 2.) Repeat the steps in parentheses until the casing is completed.

Perhaps one of the simplest casings is made by simply crocheting over a narrow piece of elastic. To do this, sew the elastic behind the skirt at the waistline at one side seam. Then, holding the elastic behind your work, with the right side of the skirt facing you, just work a row of single crochet around the top of the skirt, taking in the elastic as you do so.

If you don't know how to crochet — or simply prefer knitting — you can make a knitted facing, which is turned under and hemmed in place after the skirt is finished.

If you have started the skirt from the bottom and are knitting up to the top, work a row of reverse stockinette stitch when you reach the top of the waist. To work a row of reverse stockinette, simply purl a row on the knit side or knit a row on the purl side.

Then, with needles two or three sizes smaller than those with which you knitted the skirt, work a few rows of stockinette stitch until the facing is the desired measurement. Generally, a one-inch facing is desirable. When the facing is completed, hind off loosely and whip the facing to the inside of the skirt.

If you are starting your skirt from the top, work the facing first with the smaller needles, work a row of reverse stockinette when the facing is complete, change to the larger needles and proceed with your skirt.

Still another choice is to make a separate waistband as you would if you were constructing a skirt from fabric. This is most often done when there is a side or back opening with a zipper. In this case, you would make a knitted or crocheted strip about one inch longer than the finished waist measurement to allow for an overlapping tab.

In crochet, a single thickness might be enough, but in knitting, you will want the waistband double, so I would recommend that you knit until the band is the desired depth, work a row of reverse stockinette for a turning ridge and then knit until the second part of the band measures the same depth as the first.

Wallace Still Popular

A mellowed George Wallace has just run for the Alabama Democratic gubernatorial nomination, and he faces a runoff with Lt. Gov. George McMillan.

Wallace, who was running well in presidential primaries when he was shot down in 1972, also did well in this primary. He received 41.2 percent of the votes compared to 30.3 percent for McMillan. Nevertheless that was not quite enough to avoid a runoff and Wallace vowed to come out fighting, both for the Democratic nomination and the election as governor.

No longer is segregation the prime focus of the Wallace campaigning. As it is throughout the south these days that issue has been pushed aside in favor of more contemporary ones, and Wallace recognizes this. He realizes that he needs black votes to win and has pledged to serve "the average citizen of both races." The moderate Wallace did well with black voters in two heavily black counties.

Wallace, of course, is now confined to a wheel chair as a result of paralysis caused by the gunshot wound. Some observers say that he does not have the vigor for campaigning he once had.

Maybe not, but he has just proven he is still popular in Alabama and that he can adjust his campaigning and philosophy to fit the changing times. George Wallace is never a man to be counted out politically.

Eppes High Marker To Show Location Of A Good School

The Eppes High School class of 1958 last week asked the Greenville Recreation Commission to erect a marker at the Tom Foreman Park indicating that the C.M. Eppes High School once stood there.

The request was approved, assuming the sign meets certain standards.

It doesn't cost much to mark the site of a school that played such an important role in the lives of many who grew up here.

Like the old Greenville High School the Eppes building has long since been removed and many recent residents know nothing of its existence.

It was the high school for blacks and has a rich history. At one time it was noted for sending large percentages of its graduates on to higher education or further training.

Eppes High School long ago fulfilled its mission, but it shaped the lives of many who attended school there. A simple commemoration is in order.

THIS AFTERNOON

Visible Politician

By PAUL O'CONNOR
RALEIGH — You won't find the name of Dave Flaherty on any ballot this year. No, the Republican Party chairman is not a congressional candidate. But the average voter can be forgiven for making that assumption because Flaherty has been the most visible politician in the early days of the 1982 campaign.

Flaherty has been holding almost daily press conferences for the past four weeks. One day he's blasting a state employee for taking political phone calls on the job. Another day he's waving a campaign letter that a Democratic Party official distributed at state expense. It's one charge after another — mostly stuff you can't remember from one day to the next — everyday something new. And every week, the level of the bitterness in Flaherty's words grows stronger.

The Democrats, intent on fighting back this year, are calling Flaherty a "hatchet man." And they've sharpened their own hatchets for the fray.

Flaherty calls Attorney General Rufus Edmisten a "playboy," Democratic National Committeeman Wallace Hyde a "bagman" and just about everyone who works for Gov. Jim Hunt a "bureaucratic crony." Brent Hackney, Hunt's press deputy, privately calls Flaherty "Massachusetts Fats" and publicly describes him as the "biggest political windbag" in the state. Gary Pearce, Hunt's press sheriff, calls Flaherty "the Howdy Doody of the Republican Party."

When the Democrats blast

PAUL O'CONNOR

back, Flaherty seems surprised. The baby-faced 54-year-old who grew up in Boston and who came to North Carolina 28 years ago to work for Broyhill Furniture says with the innocence of a political novice, "They're not telling the truth." The Democrats have been accusing Flaherty of the same sin for a couple of years now.

The Democrats say personal bitterness is behind Flaherty's attacks — bitterness about the thrashing Hunt gave him in the 1976 gubernatorial vote and about the state's lawsuit against him in connection with a

Wilson nursing home. But, with the exception of Hunt, Flaherty has nice words, privately, for most Democrats. He even calls his favorite target, 4th District Rep. Ike Andrews, "a friend."

Democrats who know Flaherty and who remember his friendly personality say he's become the "shill" of

Other Editors Say State Standards

(Greensboro Record)
A recent ruling by Federal Judge Franklin Dupree charges the state with abdicating one of its most important responsibilities — its duty to guard and maintain public education standards.

The state abandoned that responsibility, Judge Dupree ruled, when the 1979 legislature enacted a law gutting state authority over private schools. Judge Dupree's ruling and comments clearly form a message to the legislature that it needs to take a closer look at the law pertaining to private schools.

Specifically, Dupree held the state's compulsory attendance law unconstitutional as it pertains to a Tyrrell County couple who objected to it on religious grounds. The intent of the law is to ensure every child at least a basic education.

Dupree said the state has left the compulsory attendance law — in this one instance — "hollow." Peter Duro and his wife Carol protested the law because the "secular humanism" taught in public schools is offensive to them.

They say the theology of the only church-related school near them also is in conflict with their religious belief. The attendance law, the Duros argued, infringed upon their right to exercise their beliefs and served no compelling state interest.

Judge Dupree agreed. A few years ago he likely would have ruled against the Duros. But he said the 1979 legislative act loosens regulations over private schools.

"The state has so drastically undercut its asserted interest in the universality of education that the court cannot conclude that what survives is compelling," the judge ruled.

As a practical matter, Judge Dupree's ruling doesn't mean the state will abandon its compulsory attendance policy, nor that private Christian schools will begin turning out illiterates.

The ruling is a clear signal to legislators that they should reconsider their educational responsibilities under the state constitution. If they don't move to clearly lay down the law on universal school standards, the law really will become unenforceable.

The Plea-Bargaining

There is a lot of plea bargaining going on in our courts these days. The prosecutors keep saying they have to deal with criminals to avoid expensive trials and also to get the little fish to testify against the big fish.

The only problem with the second argument is that so many little fish get off the hook to catch a big fish, that many times no one is caught. This is how it works.

"All right, Trout, we know you blew off Barracuda's head in New Jersey, because he wasn't kicking back on the guns he sold to Libya. If you testify against Mackerel to the Grand Jury we'll drop your murder charge down to driving without a license."

Trout goes for the offer, and the prosecutors soon get a visit from Mackerel's attorneys. "If you let Mackerel off," his attorneys say, "on a vagrancy charge, he'll be the star witness against Sharkey, who is the biggest dope dealer south of Miami."

The Justice Department

has been after Sharkey for years, so they say, "You've got a deal."

Sharkey is arrested on Mackerel's testimony and held on $10 million bail.

After a week in the slammer, Sharkey tells a government attorney, "I was just a courier in the dope business. If you really want some big fish, lower my bail to $5,000 and I'll deliver whoever you want."

"I'll hand you his head on a platter."

The Justice people go to the judge and tell him Sharkey is a key witness in a case they're building against Bass, and has to be bailed out.

Sure enough, two months later Justice has Bass nailed to the wall for running the largest white slavery business in America. But he's hiding in Brazil. He sends word that he's willing to come back and blow the whistle on Whale, the most notorious labor racketeer in the country, but only if they drop the felony charges, and prosecute him for spitting in the subway.

Justice says they can't make that kind of deal. But if Bass is willing to turn state's evidence they might reduce the 100 white slavery counts to one count of selling liquor to a minor.

Bass goes for it and lo and behold Whale has been arrested for the first time in his life.

Justice is preparing the prosecution when Whale drops a bomb on them. If they overlook the labor racket and extortion charges, Whale says he can implicate a United States congressman in a Brinks robbery.

The FBI checks out Whale's story and finds out it's true. They promise Whale if he testifies to everything he knows, they'll give him a new identity, a job and a condominium in Palm Beach, Florida.

Whale starts singing and the U.S. congressman is a dead duck. So the congressman offers to testify against one of the "highest" officials in America, who has been getting regular payoffs from Fidel Castro.

The Justice Department lets the congressman plea bargain his way down to "malicious parking," and start their case against the "high" government official.

But just before they're ready to go into court they get a visit from the CIA, who tells them the high government official really works for them. They warn the Justice people that if the official is tried, the entire U.S. espionage effort against Cuba will be destroyed.

Justice drops the case, and with no big fish to fry, they go back to finding out if they can get a better deal from the courts for breaking up the telephone company.

Warning In Gold Prices

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — When the price of gold momentarily surpassed $500 an ounce in London on Tuesday morning, Sept. 7, as Reagan administration policymakers drifted back to Washington following the long Labor Day vacation, thoughtful middle-level officials perceived a warning signal in the night.

They are dissenters from the official euphoria that enveloped Santa Barbara following President Reagan's spectacular tax increase victory and the coincidental stock market rally. To them, the sudden buying that sent gold prices soaring $100 over one week is a symptom that the worldwide financial structure is unsound.

Accordingly, that very Tuesday afternoon two separate meetings discussed the untouchable and consequently long-deferred subject of monetary policy. One of these meetings even broached the forbidden concept that international financial order cannot be achieved without a return to fixed currency exchange rates, dumped as one of the Nixon administration's enduring legacies.

Any such currency reform faces formidable barriers: dogmatic belief in floating exchange rates by the monetarists who dominate Treasury policy; White House determination not to admit any defect in Reaganomics two months before the election and — perhaps most important — an invincible ignorance in the upper reaches of the administration when it comes to monetary policy.

Nevertheless, the fact that some administration officials are tracking the movement of gold is in sharp contrast to the late 1970s, when the Carter administration was oblivious to gold skyrocketing over $800. This time, there are privately-voiced concerns that a new gold boom in the '80s could carry the same inflationary bacillus it did in the '70s.

Caught by surprise by gold's rise after dropping below $300 in July, administration economists now fear it will not stop at $500. Iconoclastic economist Eliot Janeway, who had forecast $500 gold, predicts it will climb irregularly to "new highs" — perhaps $1,000.

Janeway sees this flight to gold, led by U.S. speculators, as a sure indicator of a poisoned economy. Indeed, stock market-watchers in the administration believe the extravagant growth of gold stocks gives a sickly cast to the stock market rally. But the Federal Reserve Board may interpret soaring gold prices as a reaction to its recent loosening of the money screws and, therefore, tighten up. Any sign of an inflationary comeback also would encourage plans now on the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) drawing board for post-election tax increases in 1983.

The notion of the 12 governors of the Fed fine-tuning the economy is not attractive to significant figures in the administration. One such official believes the only viable alternative is basic reform: a new international conference to re-establish the fixed exchange-rate system built at Bretton Woods, N.H., in 1945 and finally demolished by the Smithsonian agreement in 1971. He believes that might be followed by a gold-backed dollar.

Fixed exchange rates and gold-convertible dollars are anathema to the Treasury's monetarists. When Rep. Jack Kemp at a White House meeting several months ago raised the need for fixed rates, Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan promptly shut him down by calling that a closed subject. But at a meeting of the president's outside economic advisers the day after gold pierced the $500 level, Kemp again pressed the need for monetary reform.

With nobody expecting a robust economic recovery in the foreseeable future amid the tottering international financial structure, the rise of gold has recruited potential allies for Kemp inside the administration. But they face a steep climb to convince a White House which, basing decisions on the president's high popularity ratings rather than the stricken economy, wants to stand pat.

'Paper Chain' Is Put To Test

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — The paper chain of credit agreements that links developed and underdeveloped economies is being put to a stress test these days, and neither borrower nor lender can say when one more tug might rip it all apart.

Already a few strands in the chain have nearly given way. Bolivia has defaulted on payments due to U.S. commercial banks, and Mexico remains solvent only through an aid package hastily contrived in Washington and Basel, Switzerland.

Argentina is over its head in debt, owing about $40 billion, some of which must be paid before the end of the year. And since some of that money is owed to British banks, which aren't in a mood to refinance, a crisis is at hand.

Not helping at all, of course, is the poor condition of lenders. They too are experiencing financial problems, along with inflation, a consequence of which is the feeling they must run their own economies at reduced levels.

This in turn makes the situation worse in the underdeveloped nations, some of which depend on sales of raw materials to the developed nations. Since their sales are down, some of these less developed nations are growing even poorer.

For them to borrow more would, as you might surmise, make their condition even worse, because loans today are at very high rates, so high that an industry must operate extremely efficiently simply to pay the interest due.

If the world economy doesn't get moving soon, a potentially long line of defaulters could develop, and there is really very little that any lending nation or group of them could do about it. That is, except to refinance.

Refinancing, as anyone who ever borrowed a dollar knows, usually adds to costs. Moreover, the repayment terms are made on the assumption that the borrower will be better able to manage his finances somewhere down the line. But when? There is very little prospect for quick turnarounds among borrowing nations. It takes time — and probably a few miracles as well.

Complicating matters is the underlying hostility of nations. Many borrowers blame the United States for their condition, insisting that high U.S. interest rates present impossible obstacles to development. And that hostility isn't limited to lender-borrower. Developed nations too are angry at each other.

You don't have to read or listen long to the news these days to realize the extent of this anger, even among traditional friends: Canada angry and fearful about American economic power in Canada; Americans angry over Canadian economic nationalism; Britain angry over U.S. sanctions against British subsidiaries of U.S. companies that shipped supplies for the Soviet gas pipeline.

What is proved, among other things, is that nations are dependent upon each other — that there is indeed a world economy that transcends geography, economics and politics, and that nobody really can pull out of it.

If you choose to be very cynical about it you might say it is somewhat similar to the dependency of the bank officer and his biggest overdue account. They need each other, much as they dislike admitting it.

Deaths Appear Murder-Suicide

Greenville police today are continuing their investigation of an apparent murder-suicide that occurred Saturday at 902B Verdant St.

Chief Glenn Cannon said officers, responding to a call, arrived at the Verdant Street apartment about 10 p.m., forced the front door of the dwelling open, and found Marjorie White, 41, dead in a second floor bedroom.

Cannon said Jackson R. Easley Jr., 37, was found in the same bedroom with a bullet wound in his head.

Easley was taken to Pitt County Memorial Hospital where he died about 5 a.m. Sunday.

The chief said Easley apparently shot Ms. White in the chest earlier in the day, dressed her, placed her body on a bed, and cleaned up the apartment.

Cannon said Easley, apparently shortly before officers arrived at the scene, shot himself in the temple with the same .32 caliber revolver thought used to shoot Ms. White.

Easley was a teacher at Pitt County's G.R. Whitfield School in Grimesland, while Ms. White was an East Carolina University student and worked for Anserphone.

Both Easley and Ms. White lived at the Verdant Street apartment.

Princess Grace Hurt In Wreck

MONTE CARLO, Monaco (AP) — Princess Grace suffered a broken leg today when the car her 17-year-old daughter Stephanie was driving left the road on a hairpin turn and rolled over several times, authorities said.

The 52-year-old princess is expected to remain hospitalized for 10 days. Stephanie had slight contusions and returned to the palace after being treated at the hospital. Prince Rainier III went to the hospital to be with his wife.

According to the Monaco press center, the princess and Stephanie were returning to their palace along a steep, winding road from the family's summer residence near La Turbie.

A palace spokeswoman, who declined to be named, said the accident occurred when the breaks on the vehicle failed as it rounded a curve. The fire department said the car left the road and turned over several times before coming to a halt in a field.

The royal family often travels on the steep, winding road from their mountain residence to the palace overlooking the Mediterranean Sea.

The princess, the former Grace Kelly of Philadelphia, became part of Monaco's royalty when she married Rainier in 1956. She visited Philadelphia in March.

the National Congressional Club and the "mouthpiece" of the club's combative and attacking chairman, Tom Ellis.

Democrats say Flaherty's "niggling" will backfire this fall — that he's shooting himself in the foot by puppeting Ellis' venom. For example, Flaherty blasted Hunt for allowing state employees to work on political campaigns while on leave of absence or after working hours. Veteran reporters were quick to remind him that Republica Gov. Jim Holshouser allowed the same practice in the mid-70s when Flaherty was secretary of human resources.

Flaherty isn't immune from criticism within his own party. Republicans upset over the club's takeover of the party say Flaherty is subservient to Ellis and that he'll say anything the club tells him to — even if it means contradicting his own record.

Flaherty denies he's Ellis' puppet but says it would be foolish not to work with the club. The club and the party share the same conservative goals, he says, and the club has the money to help reach those goals.

For all the heat the Democrats direct at Flaherty, some admit privately that he's doing the job that's been assigned to him. Republicans this year have to keep the voters from thinking about the economy and so long as Flaherty's on the attack everyday, he's accomplishing that goal. He's also keeping the Republican

Mrs. Taylor said that, while there is a need for all types of blood, there is a special need at this time for types O and B.

Hunt's Budget Advisors See No Pay Raise In 1983

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Lobbyists for teachers and state workers are already talking about a big pay raise next year, to make up for the salary freeze they were forced to swallow this time.

Gov. Jim Hunt is paying lip service to the issue, too, saying a pay raise is his top priority next year.

But Hunt's budget advisors, reading balance sheets that show the state's revenue collections are running far below estimates, say the real outlook is grim for any raises at all next year.

State Budget Officer John A. Williams, in a recent interview, described a pay raise as "doubtful" next year and dependent entirely upon a strong recovery in the economy.

Asked what size pay raise appeared possible at this early stage, Williams, who doubles as Hunt's senior policy advisor, held up his left hand and made a zero with his fingers.

"There's nothing there," said Williams. "It looks tough to do. It really looks difficult."

Groups representing teachers and state employees want a big raise next year to make up for the ground lost in the freeze this year. One group representing state workers last week suggested a 25 percent raise — which would cost a staggering $727 million in one year.

But the problem is that state tax revenues are down because of the recession. The current state budget — which eliminated scheduled merit pay raises for teachers and workers — assumes tax revenues will grow this year by 8.9 percent over last year.

But for the first month of this budget year, July, revenues came in at only 5.7 percent growth. Figures for August won't be released until later this month, but budget officials say it will be even less than the July rate.

Last year's revenues fell below estimates too, and the Hunt administration has been ensuring the state's budget is balanced by not filling many vacant positions and by giving state agencies less money to spend than the General Assembly provided on paper.

"We're going to do all we can, but it's hard to do," Williams said. "There are no indicators in the economy that show revenue is going to go up. To guess that there'd be a pay raise is to guess the economy will strengthen."

Moreover, Williams said that without some improvement there was even a chance that the salary freeze might be extended. That would mean not only would there be no cost-of-living increases, those automatic merit increases built into the pay scales would be withheld for another year.

Other Hunt administration aides speak with more optimism on the pay issue, noting the time for a decision is a long way off. Hunt sounded a more positive note, too, before the state employees and at a news conference last week.

One administration official — asking not to be named — questioned Williams' statements. "Just remember he's not the governor," the official said. "He is trying to make it sound bad."

But other budget officials back up Williams' assessment. "He wasn't crying wolf," said James Piner, assistant budget officer. "It's not a time for optimism."

Just to take the freeze off automatic increases, Piner notes, will cost an additional $94 million next year. Each percentage point of a pay raise above that costs the state about $30 million, so just to provide a modest 3 percent cost-of-living increase would take $184 million.

Add to that a certain expense the state faces in paying for its new medical insurance program. An outside consultant has advised the state will need another $60 million next year, if it is to continue hospitalization benefits at the same level as when the new plan becomes effective next month.

Hunt, however, says it's too early to predict what size pay raise is possible. "We don't know what that's going to be, and we'll do everything possible to come up with a raise," said Hunt spokesman Brent Hackney.

David Flaherty, state Republican Party chairman, and Wallace Hyde, Democratic National Committeeman from Asheville, have been in a name-calling battle lately.

Flaherty called Hyde a "limousine liberal" and accused him of raising money for Democrats from contractors involved in the bid-rigging scandal. Hyde called Flaherty a liar.

So how come Flaherty and Hyde are shown together, grinning, in the latest issue of "The North Carolina Republican Standard," the GOP party newspaper?

Well, when they aren't playing dueling press-conferences, the two are friends of sorts. Both Flaherty and Hyde were among a group of national Republican and Democratic leaders who took a tour of Yugoslavia in April in an exchange sponsored by the League of Communists of Yugoslavia.

The GOP publication includes a photo of their group on a communist farm.

"He's a heck of a pleasant guy, no question about it," Flaherty said of Hyde.

Said Hyde: "He's a pretty good fellow when you get him away from all this. The truth of it is he's more liberal than I am. He's just dancing to someone else's tune."

Extra Care Given Food Stamp Errors

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Mecklenburg County's Special Verifications Unit has been taking part in an experiment aimed at helping to lower the food stamp error rate.

Food stamp errors waste more than $1 billion a year nationwide. Researchers, trying to change that, have decided to look more carefully at where most errors occur: in large households that have some outside income.

Staffed with workers who volunteered for the assignment, the unit originally included a supervisor, five interviewers and a clerk, and operated with $92,000 in federal grants.

When it began work in March, it was dedicated to giving extra attention to the clients most likely to have errors: families of five or more who have some earned income.

As part of the program, the interviewers ask more questions in the higher risk cases than they might in others, says Linda Cook, caseworker for the Mecklenburg food stamp program.

She says they must probe more deeply for information about income, bills and family members. They check public records and ask questions that can help them verify information.

Some clients have noticed the extra attention, but "the majority have cooperated marvelously," Cook said.

Police noted that both drivers, as well as a passenger in the Herring car and two passengers in the Allen car, were injured in the collision.

Atrophic rhinitis is a highly transmissible upper respiratory disease affecting young pigs. Bacteria, viruses, dust and gases are involved with the disease in confinement units. Infection from irritants will result in deterioration of nasal turbinates, yet deviation of the nose does not always occur.

The sow serves as a source of infection for baby pigs. The introduction of infected animals into a herd will bring atrophic rhinitis into a non infected herd. There is no accurate test for detection of carrier animals so we must rely on visible signs. Identification of atrophic rhinitis can be done by nasal swabs.

"What do I look for when observing my pigs?" is a usual question, asked. Baby pigs sneeze and snuffle as early as one week of age. Low feed efficiency and rate of gain are also signs of infection. Tears may appear around the eyes and become matted.

Preventative programs are the best means of control. Isolation (45 - 60 days) of new stock may prevent herd exposure. Feeding antibiotics and the initiation of a vaccination program are essential during the quarantine period. Culling of known infected individuals and carriers is the best way to rid your herd of atrophic rhinitis.

Vaccination programs must be followed strictly according to company recommendations. The initial sow vaccination involved two injections, the first at four weeks prior to farrowing and the second two weeks later. Baby pigs should receive vaccinations at seven days of age and a second, or booster, injection between 17 and 28 days of age.

Nothing can replace good management practices including vaccination for atrophic rhinitis. There are many problems you can easily prevent and increase the profitability of your hog operation.

JAMES HONORED — The North Carolina Association of County Agricultural Agents recently presented Pitt County Extension Chairman Leroy James with a plaque in appreciation for his services as its president during the past year. James has been succeeded as president of the association by Talmadge Baker of Asheboro.

Death Of Youth Stumps Experts

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — It's been almost a year since 16-year-old Richard McCall died, but the disease that killed him still remains a mystery.

McCall, a popular soccer player at Page High School, died Oct. 28 after the disease devastated organ after organ in his wiry body and finally stopped his heart.

McCall was admitted to the hospital Oct. 13, when flu-like symptoms of headache, diarrhea and fever did not respond to four days of routine treatment by the family's physician.

After 48 hours in the hospital he worsened, with pneumonia in both lungs, a form of hepatitis and intense inflammation of the muscles. His blood would no longer clot.

By the 12th day, his white blood cell count fell sharply, indicating that his bone marrow was failing and sapping his ability to fight infection. He also developed an overwhelming bacterial pneumonia.

After his death, doctors pondered several possibilities for the cause, including Rocky Mountain spotted fever, Legionnaire's Disease, leptospirosis and mononucleosis. All were ruled out.

The investigation into his death involved experts as far away as Atlanta and Philadelphia. Doctors scanned slices of McCall's lungs with powerful electron microscopes and injected newborn mice with his blood. They tested his liver for signs for arsenic and lead poisoning and tried to identify viruses by combining his diseased cells with tissue from a monkey's kidney.

"There are probably 2 or 3 percent of cases where you never really come up with a satisfactory reason," said H. Wallace Baird, the 39-year-old Moses Cone Hospital pathologist who did the autopsy and coordinated the research.

Baird closed the case Sept. 1 with a 12-page final autopsy report.

"What initiated this patient's fatal course is not clear, even after extensive study," Baird's report concludes. "There appears to have been severe injury to the immune system, including lymph nodes, (bone) marrow and spleen."

Baird said several causes had been considered — infections, tumors and poisons — but no evidence was found to establish a cause.

Dr. Martin Hines, chief of the epidemiology section of the state Department of Human Resources, said the case "stumped one of the best hospitals in the country, Moses Cone."

Dear Utility Customer,

You do not have to be "shocked" this winter when you receive your utility bill! Call me about our Budget Billing Program.

Budget Billing is designed to spread out the cost of electricity or natural gas over a 12 month period. Those who use electricity or natural gas as their primary heating source, know that bills can be very high during the winter months. Budget billing eliminates these "Peak Bills" and spreads out the payments.

Budget Billing is also very beneficial for those on a fixed or limited income. Knowing what your utility bill is going to be each month does help in preparing that monthly household budget.

If you are interested, please write me, c/o The Greenville Utilities Commission, PO Box 1847, Greenville N.C. 27834, or give me a call at 752-7166 Ext. 219.

I will be very happy to discuss Budget Billing with you in more detail and help you to determine if the program will benefit you.

Jury Decides In Shooting Case

A Pitt County Superior Court jury late Saturday morning found Ruby Pearl Teel, 41, of 1224 Battle St. guilty of involuntary manslaughter in connection with the shooting death of her husband November 16, 1981, following a domestic argument.

The jury returned its verdict at 11:35 a.m., after deliberating 5½ hours Friday and Saturday.

Judge David Reid Jr. sentenced Mrs. Teel to six months and one day in jail on the manslaughter conviction. However, Mrs. Teel gave notice of appeal and bond for her was set at $10,000.

Mrs. Teel was charged with murder after her 72-year-old husband Jack Charles Teel was shot to death at the Route 6, Greenville home, of a stepdaughter of the Teels.

At the time of the shooting, Pitt County Sheriff Ralph Tyson said Mrs. Teel allegedly fired one shot from a pistol at Teel, which missed him.

Tyson said Teel then went to a car, got a crowbar and returned to the house where he broke a glass pane from a door. Mrs. Teel then fired another shot at Teel, which hit him in the abdomen.

Teel died of internal bleeding as a result of the wound.

N.C. To Get Latest Tank

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina Army National Guardsmen have been chosen as the first citizen soldiers to receive the Abrams M-1 tank, a $1.8 million weapon with a 275-mile range.

Tar Heel Guardsmen are scheduled to begin receiving the tanks next March and officials said 63 will be assigned to the 2nd Battalion 252nd Armor, headquartered in Raeford with subordinate units in Red Springs, Albemarle, Laurinburg, Sanford and Southern Pines.

The battalion is part of the 2nd Armored Division at Fort Hood, Texas, which is one reason it is receiving the tanks before many other regular Army units.

"The M-1 tank symbolizes the Department of Defense's commitment to the Reserve Components in general and to the North Carolina National Guard in particular," said Maj. Gen. William E. Ingram, the Adjutant General of North Carolina. "Getting the M-1 tank is a major statement about our ability to do the job we are supposed to be able to do."

The 60-ton tank can achieve a first-round hit at 3,000 yards while moving on rough terrain at 40 mph. It can cross trenches nine feet wide and is propelled by a 1,500 horsepower jet turbine engine.

No Trace Of Boating Victim

ATLANTIC BEACH, N.C. (AP) — The U.S. Coast Guard said Saturday it had suspended its search for the body of Carlos W. Howell of Raleigh, presumed to have drowned off Atlantic Beach Thursday, authorities said.

Howell, 60, was pulled overboard when his foot became entangled in the anchor line of his boat.

League Week Is Proclaimed

Gov. James B. Hunt has proclaimed Sept. 11-18 League of Women Voters Week in North Carolina.

He said the N.C. League is "recognized and valued for its efforts to encourage registering and voting. The League leads the way in providing solid non-partisan information on candidates and ballot issues at election time, including sponsorship of forums and debates. League members strive to improve the quality of life through study and legislative action in such areas as the environment, the criminal justice system, social services and education and seek to strengthen citizen participation in government and the political process."

The League's nationwide membership drive begins this week and runs through Oct. 9. The Greenville-Pitt County League invites any man or woman 18 or older to join, its membership chairman Olivia Kay Clyde said.

Those wishing to join are invited to attend the fall meeting to be held Monday, Sept. 27, at 8 p.m. in the fellowship hall of St. Paul Episcopal Church. The discussion topic is international relations.

A coffee for interested persons will be held on a Saturday morning in early October. For details, call Ms. Clyde, 758-4593.

Police Car Wreck Today

The North Carolina Highway Patrol said late this morning that an investigation of a collision involving a Greenville Police Department patrol car on N. Greene Street earlier today is continuing.

Trooper Wayne Taylor reported that the police car, driven by Willie Arthur Moore, was involved in a collision with a car driven by Mable Howard of Greenville, about 8:25 a.m. south of the Mumford Road intersection.

Damage from the wreck was estimated at $2,000 to the city vehicle and $1,800 to the Howard car.

Taylor said Mrs. Howard and a passenger in her car were taken to Pitt County Memorial Hospital for treatment of minor injuries, then released.

Miss America To 'Give' Self

By TOM ROSENTHAL
 Associated Press Writer
 ATLANTIC CITY, N.J.

(AP) — Miss America 1983, a blue-eyed blonde who left a job making doughnuts in a small Texas town to seek a singing career, says she will reign with "noblesse oblige."

"I will spend this whole year giving of Debbie," Debra Sue Maffett, of Anaheim, Calif., said Sunday, appearing fresh and vivacious after only one hour's sleep.

The newly crowned Miss America, formerly Miss California, said she wants to be active in community and charity work, especially on behalf of crippled children and cancer victims.

Miss Maffett wore her rhinestone-studded crown as she received reporters Sunday morning, after being crowned Saturday night.

The 5-foot-7, 115-pound woman, whose golden tan and smile captures the look of a "California girl," stands to make about $100,000 in appearances and endorsements this year.

She also receives a scholarship of $20,000.

She is embarking on a year of appearances around the country and before armed service groups.

The regimen began shortly after her crowning as she was asked to attend a ground-breaking for an Atlantic City condominium Sunday morning.

Today, Miss America was traveling to New York for a week of television appearances and fittings for her Miss America wardrobe.

Miss Maffett is booked through Christmas, working every other day, her business administrator Bob Bryan said. He said the schedule will give her little time to visit her parents at home in Cut and Shoot, Texas, population 568.

Miss Maffett, measuring 35-22-35 and at age 25 considered old for most beauty pageants, said her parents were excited and jubilant when she telephoned them after her victory. They could not attend the pageant because of the cost of the trip.

"My father, who is from the Midwest and not an emotional person, was bawling," said Miss Maffett, who was born in Pittsburg, Kan.

"Debbie is a self-made person," said the proud parent, Ron D. Maffett, in a telephone interview. "She did not learn her talent until she went to college. She hired a voice teacher then."

To put herself through school, Miss Maffett worked in the doughnut shop at

Connors Solidifies No. 1 Status With Open Victory

NEW YORK (AP) — For Jimmy Connors, king again of the U.S. Open and all of tennis, the trip back to the top is more satisfying. And now that may be enough.

Connors, as precise and emotional at 30 as he was at 26, used his entire repertoire of pinpoint shots, bouncing them off the boundaries time and again to wipe out stony-faced Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia 6-3, 6-2, 4-6, 6-4 in the U.S. Open final at the National Tennis Center Sunday.

The women's crown at the Open was won Saturday by Chris Evert Lloyd, who played textbook tennis beating Czechoslovakia's Hana Mandlikova, 6-3, 6-1.

It was the fourth Open crown for Connors, who is also the reigning Wimbledon champion, and solidified his status as No. 1 in the computer rankings of the world's players.

"When I won before, everybody thought I could," Connors said. "When I won now, everybody thought I couldn't. That's pretty satisfying."

Connors said he may cut back on his tennis now that he's No. 1 again.

"I'm at a crossroads," Connors said, who also won the Open in 1974, 1976 and 1978. "I have to think it out. My whole life has been dedicated to tennis. I've got a wife and family and a lot of businesses I'd like to get into. I may be cutting back my schedule."

The left-hander did a workmanlike job on Lendl, baffling and befuddling his younger opponent with an assortment of shots that time and again landed just inside the white lines.

Connors, who celebrated his 30th birthday during the Open, had dipped in the world rankings the last couple of years, passed by younger players like John McEnroe and Bjorn Borg. "I wanted to get back to No. 1," he said. "I liked the view from up there."

So he set out on that quest and took a giant step in that direction when he beat McEnroe at Wimbledon, winning that crown for the third time. "That was my goal," he said, "to win Wimbledon once more, and I did it."

Coming into the Open, McEnroe remained No. 1 in the world, followed by Connors and Lendl, who had won 44 consecutive matches after last year's Open but sat out Wimbledon. All three sailed into the semifinals of the tournament along with No. 4 Guillermo Vilas of Argentina. Connors eliminated Vilas and Lendl defeated McEnroe, setting up the final.

Both men lost their service in the first two games of the first set. Then in the sixth game, Connors broke Lendl again as the Czech double-faulted. Service held the rest of the way as Connors captured the set 6-3.

Connors broke Lendl in the first game of the second set and won eight straight points for a quick 2-0 lead. He went on to take the set 6-2 and seemed in position to win in straight sets.

"He was hitting the ball all over the place, just like always," said Lendl, frowning. "I played exactly the way I wanted to. I was a little slow with my footwork. It wasn't as good as it should have been. But he was playing well."

Lendl came back to win the third set, but Connors was not going to let this match get away. Jimmy broke the Czech's service in the first game of the fourth set and when Lendl broke back in the fourth game to even the set, Connors took his service away again in the fifth. By then, Jimmy was charging the net, playing aggressive, tough tennis.

"I made up my mind I was going to come in on everything," Connors said. "I didn't care. If he could pass me 20 times, he could win."

The strategy worked. Connors kept returning everything Lendl offered, often picking the lines like an artist meticulously working on a canvas.

"I didn't want to go five sets, that's for sure," Connors said. "He was doing as much running as I was. If it went to a fifth set, that would have been a test of character."

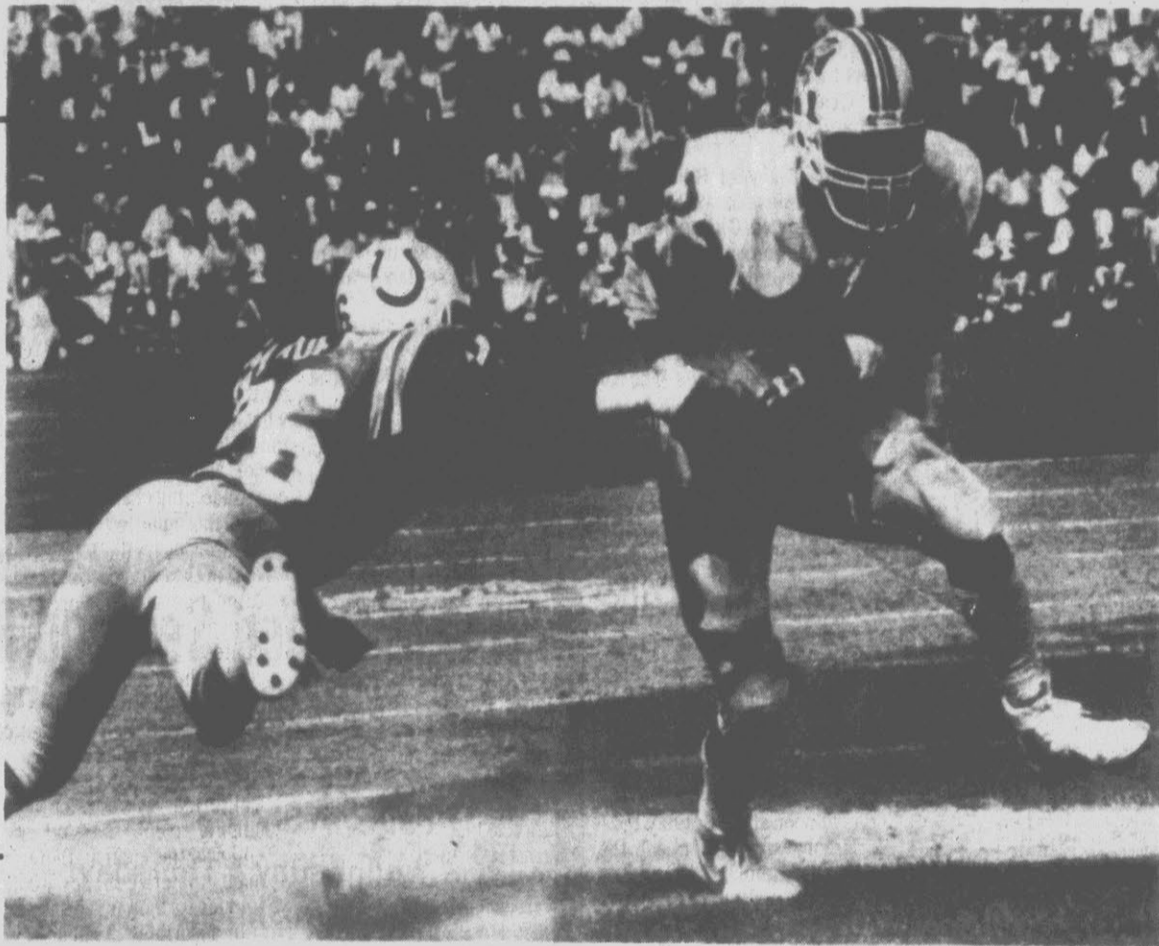

It also would have been Lendl's only chance and the Czech knew that.

"I had a feeling he was getting tired and my only chance was to hang out there and keep him out there as long as I could."

But Connors wasn't sticking around any longer than he had to.

"He as starting to play pretty well," he said. "I had a chance and I didn't want to let it slip by. I didn't know if I'd have adrenaline left for a fifth set."

He didn't need it. Lendl netted match point and Connors thrust his arms over his head in celebration. The old man had climbed back to the top of the tennis mountain and he was enjoying the view again.

San Fran, Eagles, Rams Defeated

By The Associated Press
Despite threats of a wildcat walkout and the lack of a new collective bargaining agreement, the National Football League opened its regular season on schedule. The Super Bowl champion San Francisco 49ers, the highly regarded Philadelphia Eagles and Bert Jones-led Los Angeles Rams were surprisingly left in the starting blocks though.

The 49ers, who knocked off the Cincinnati Bengals last January to win their first NFL championship ever, came out on the short end of a 23-17 score at home against the transplanted Los Angeles Raiders.

The only thing that really bothered the Raiders, who used to play across the Bay from San Francisco, was when referee Jerry Markbreit called them the Oakland Raiders as he announced a penalty to the crowd. Jim Plunkett, a former 49er quarterback, tossed the go-ahead touchdown pass in the fourth period and rookie Marcus Allen, the 1981 Heisman Trophy winner from Southern Cal, opened his pro career with 116 yards rushing.

Mark Moseley's right foot was the difference at Philadelphia, where the Redskins' veteran placekicker booted a 48-yard game-tying field goal at time ran out in regulation, then plunked a 26-yarder 4:47 into overtime to upend the Eagles 37-34.

At Milwaukee, the Packers' home away from home, the Los Angeles Rams and Jones soared to a 23-0 halftime lead in Southern California-like sunshine and temperatures. But Green Bay quarterback Lynn Dickey, who passed for 237 yards and three touchdowns, was the eye of a second-half Packer hurricane that brought Bart Starr's team to a 35-23 victory.

The Pittsburgh Steelers and Dallas Cowboys complete the first week of the season tonight in Texas.

Bengals 27, Oilers 7
Ken Anderson, the Cincinnati quarterback and last year's NFL Most Valuable Player, passed for two touchdowns and 354 yards and ran for another score for the defending American Football Conference champions. Houston fullback Earl Campbell was the workhorse for the Oilers, rushing 20 times for 82 yards and catching four passes for 23 more.

Falcons 16, Giants 14
Bob Glazebrook's 91-yard fumble return for a touchdown provided the spark and a 29-yard field goal by Mick Luckhurst with 58 seconds left in the game was the difference in Atlanta's victory over the error-prone Giants. Those individual efforts spoiled a career-high 310-yard passing performance by New York quarterback Scott Brunner, which included a pair of scoring passes to Earnest Gray.

Chargers 23, Broncos 3
Rolf Benirschke kicked three field goals and Dan Fouts threw an 18-yard touchdown pass to Scott Fitzkee in San Diego's victory. The Broncos committed six turnovers, four of them in San Diego territory.

Dolphins 45, Jets 28

Miami ended four years of frustration, getting its first victory over the Jets after losing seven and tying one in the eight previous meetings. Tommy Vigorito's 59-yard punt return for a touchdown sparked the Dolphins and interception returns for touchdowns by Don McNeal and Glenn Blackwood turned it into a rout in the third quarter.

Cardinals 21, Saints 7

Quarterback Neil Lomax led the Cardinals to an easy victory, setting up one touchdown with a 16-yard pass to the 1-yard line, then throwing a 12-yard scoring strike to Pat Tilley. Meanwhile, Ken Stabler started at quarterback for New Orleans in place of Archie Manning, who played only briefly in the third quarter. It was 12 years Manning has been benched by the Saints.

Defensive Question Marks Loom For Both Teams

Steelers, Cowboys Open Season Tonight

IRVING, Texas (AP) — The Pittsburgh "Steel Curtain" is gone and the Dallas "Doomsday Defense" may have a big hole in it tonight when the two teams clash in a National Football League season opener.

The Steelers no longer have the likes of Joe Greene, and Dwight White, and L.C. Greenwood and have dropped the 4-3 defense for the 3-4 which accentuates the play of the linebackers.

The Cowboys still run Coach Tom Landry's intricate "Flex" with the four-man line. However, you've got to have veteran players to man the positions and starting left defensive tackle John Dutton is ailing.

He missed practice last week until Saturday with a foot injured in the final pre-season game and whether he starts will be in doubt until the 8 p.m. kickoff.

Without Dutton against San Francisco in last year's National Conference title game, the Dallas pass rush suffered.

Should Dutton not play, defensive coach Ernie Stautner will choose Dan Smerek.

Smerek has fully recovered from being shot and wounded outside a Dallas nightclub last year and missing an entire season.

"Dutton may be able to play some but I doubt he can play the full game," said Landry. "If Dutton is able to play at all he probably will start."

The Steelers will be operating without defensive standout Jack Lambert. The middle linebacker has not recovered from a knee sprain he suffered in practice and did not make the trip to Dallas for the game.

Second year linebacker David Little, making the first start of his pro career, will replace Lambert.

Dallas was a five-point favorite over the Steelers in the nationally televised game.

The Cowboys have won 17 consecutive opening day games, but they've lost the last four times they've played Pittsburgh, including two close Super Bowl defeats.

Dallas hasn't lost at Texas Stadium in a regular season or playoff game since Roger Staubach retired as quarterback in 1979.

Over the past five years Dallas is 35-4 in Texas Stadium.

Not since 1964 when St. Louis beat them 16-6 have the Cowboys failed to win their first game of the year.

Pittsburgh has an 11-10 all-time edge on the Cowboys.

A sellout crowd of 65,000 was assured, the 45th in a row for the Cowboys in Texas Stadium.

East Carolina got goals from six different players as the Pirates opened their 1982 soccer season with a 6-3 victory over Christopher Newport Sunday in Greenville.

"We did well because we knew the team," Church said. "We had patience and there was a revenge motive."

The Pirates led, 2-1, at the end of the first half of play and then outscored Christopher Newport, 4-2, in the second to come away with the win.

"We had a few defensive lapses but we played a lot of freshman and I was very pleased with their performances," Church said.

ECU got goals from Bill Mervin, Mark Hardy, Brian Winchell, Mike Swan and David Skeffington.

All three of Christopher Newport's goals were by Vick Kwentreng.

Pirates To Open Volleyball Season Tuesday Vs. NCSU

BY WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

East Carolina University's Lady Pirates open the 1982 volleyball season Tuesday, looking for a good deal of improvement over last year's 11-23 mark.

Coach Lynn Davidson and her charges will entertain N.C. State at 7 p.m. in Minges Coliseum in the match. It is the first of only three home matches, plus the East Carolina Invitational Tournament, which include Duke, North Carolina A&T, UNC Charlotte and William & Mary.

"Our schedule is basically the same as it was last year," Davidson said, "as we play mostly Division I schools. It's extremely competitive. But I know that our record will improve because we've made a great deal of improvement since last season and during our USVBA season."

The USVBA (United States Volleyball Association) season is held in the spring and is a club-type event, similar, Davidson explains, to ECU's men's summer baseball league. "We also have some good freshmen coming in."

Last year, there were no seniors on the team, but the Lady Pirates have experienced a few losses. Of the nine players who finished the season last year, seven are returning. One was cut from the team and another transferred to another school, seeking a major not offered by East Carolina.

"I look for the quality of our play to improve, and I think a .500 or better season is attainable. We're very positive as far as the program goes. I think .500 is a good goal for us to shoot for."

Of the seven returning from last year, four were starters on the six-woman group that opens play. They include Stacey Weitzel, Lexanne Keeter, Lita Lamas and Revardale Lavant.

Three of those, all but Lamas, will probably start again this year.

The other three returning veterans include Diane Lloyd, who will probably be a starting setter this year, Sandy Gideons and Mitzi Davis.

Joining them are Johanna Fry, Ann Guida, Darlene Hedges and Lorna O'Fallon. All of them but Hedges are freshmen. Hedges, a junior, was a member of the ECU Lady Pirate basketball team the past two years.

Joining those listed as starters will be Fry and either Gideons or Davis. "I really expect everyone to get in a lot of playing time," Davidson said.

Since the Lady Pirates do not belong to a conference, they have no automatic chance to make it into the NCAA playoffs. "That's why we schedule bigger and stronger opponents. Otherwise we'd have no chance. We have to have a good record against them. And I totally expect to pull off some upsets."

Davidson wants the Pirates to win their own tournament this year after having finished second the last two years. "We need to win the matches we are supposed to win and then pull off some upsets."

Gilder Captures Boston Classic

SUTTON, Mass. (AP) — Bob Gilder says the key to winning on the PGA tour is not to get excited and worry about making mistakes.

Winning is also made a lot easier when nobody on the course comes up with the big final round.

"I try not to get too excited or upset about anything and it worked today," Gilder said Sunday after posting a 2-stroke victory over Fuzzy Zoeller in the $300,000 Bank of Boston Classic at steamy Pleasant Valley Country Club.

Trailing Mike McCullough by two strokes and Peter Jacobsen and George Archer by one after 54 holes, Gilder fired a 4-under par 67 for a 72-hole total of 271, 11 under regulation.

He picked up a birdie on the 56th hole, then moved in front to stay with birdies on the 60th and 61st holes. He matched par on the next nine holes before nailing down his third PGA victory of the year and fifth in seven years on the tour with a birdie on the 71st hole.

"I told myself to be steady, don't make a mistake," Gilder said. In a way, I was sitting there thinking they have to come at me. I just wanted to hold on to what I had. This is one I hung on to. I don't know what would have happened if someone mad made a big run at me.

"Starting out it looked like a horse race all the way," Gilder said. "My immediate plan was to get even and see what happened on the back nine. Fortunately, the guy who broke away was me and no one made a big charge."

Zoeller equalled Gilder's closing 67, but fell short. With a birdie on the final hole, he took second at 273, worth $32,400. Another stroke back at 274 were Gil Morgan, who had a final 68, and McCullough, who had a 72.

Gilder, 31, picked up $54,000, boosting his earnings for the year to $296,598 and his career prize money to $869,905.

"I really don't think of the money, although when I'm out on the course I know that every stroke decides how much I'm going to make in a tournament," Gilder said. "It's nice being here on a Sunday again."

"It's overwhelming to me that I could win three tournaments. It's something you think about, but it doesn't happen very often. It's an uplifting experience to know I'm capable of doing it."

With a flock of rivals close, Gilder was surprised that "no one made a big move down the stretch."

"I was looking for someone to make a move, but nobody did," he said. "I wasn't hitting the ball with as much control today, so, fortunately, I didn't have to go to the pin."

Local Runner Wins Race

AYDEN — Susan Gray of Greenville won the 10,000-meter Collard Festival Footrace yesterday with a clocking of 40:58 — over a minute and a half better than her closest foe.

Gray easily outdistanced Cheryl Payne of Kenansville for first. Payne came in at 42:31. Mitzi Moye of Maury was third at 42:53.

Mark Davis of Rocky Mount capture the men's 10,000 run with a time of 32:47. Chris Payne of Kenansville was second at 32:47 and Pete Gibson of Murfreesboro was third 33:17.

Todd Peterson of Camp Lejeune won the 3,000 run with a course record of 9:19. The old record was 9:20, set last year by Gibson.

Leigh Ann Harrison of Snow Hill won the women's 3,000 with course record time of 11:46. The old record was 14:06, set last year by Connie Hines. The 3,000 was run last year for the first time at the Festival.

Brian Banks of Bayboro won the 1,500 run for ages 12 and under with a time of 6:07. Susan Upchurch of Garner was the girls' winner at 6:33, breaking the old course record of 7:03 set last year by Diane Banks.

Views On Dental Health

IF YOU CHIP A TOOTH

Kenneth T. Perkins, D.D.S. P.A.

WHY DENTAL FLOSS?

Dental plaque is the primary cause of tooth decay and gum disease. A tooth brush can help remove plaque from visible surfaces but cannot remove it from between the teeth and beneath the gum line. Unwaxed floss is most often recommended to remove plaque from these hidden areas. Here's how to use it:

Cut off about 18 inches of floss and wrap the ends around the middle fingers, leaving about 2 inches between the hands. Guide it with thumbs for the top teeth and index fingers for lowers. Pass the floss gently between two teeth, sliding several times to the gum and back along the side of one tooth. Repeat the scraping on the side of the adjacent tooth and move on until all teeth are flossed.

A word of caution: Always control the floss. Try never to snap the floss suddenly between two teeth as the gums may be sensitive. Use a gentle, sawing motion. If gums bleed, you may be flossing too hard, or they may be in poor health. It makes sense to have your dentist or hygienist demonstrate the flossing method to you. It will help insure the future health of your teeth and gums.

Prepared as a public service to promote better dental health. From the office of: Kenneth T. Perkins, D.D.S. P.A. Evans St., Phone: 752-5126.

SHOPLIFTING makes you a criminal!

And criminals do get caught! Now the stores are wise to shoplifters, and have the manpower and sophisticated equipment to prove it. Closed circuit cameras, undercover people, specially treated tagging systems... are all used to successfully catch legal actions! Shoplifters face even stiffer fines... even jail when they're caught... plus the humiliation of getting arrested, and a criminal record that could effect future schooling, jobs, credit rating, and the respect and trust of family and friends. Shoplifting... like any other crime... just doesn't pay!

Yanks Playing Role Of Spoiler In AL East Race

By The Associated Press
The New York Yankees are making a race out of the American League East — they're just not in it.

Virtually out of contention — 10 games back in fourth place — the defending AL champions are playing the role of spoilers these days. Sunday, they continued to hurt the Milwaukee Brewers with a 9-8 victory over the East leaders.

It was the third time that the Yankees beat the Brewers in their four-game series at Yankee Stadium and prevented Harvey Kuenn's team from improving its three-game lead over the second-place Baltimore Orioles, who lost 3-0 to Cleveland. "We're very fortunate Cleveland took care of Baltimore," said Kuenn. "We could have left here two (games) up. Luckily, we're still three up. I'm happy about that. My thinking point is: 'We'll get 'em tomorrow.'"

The Kansas City Royals, meanwhile, beat the Minnesota Twins 18-7 and held onto first place in the AL West by one game over the California Angels, who defeated Toronto 3-2.

Roy Smalley's one-out, bases-loaded single in the ninth inning scored the winning run and Yankee rookie Curt Kaufman turned in a strong relief stint for his first major league victory. Kaufman went two innings, yielding only one hit. Jamie Easterly, 0-2, was the loser.

The Yankees, losing 8-2 after four innings, had tied the game 8-8 in the eighth on Graig Nettles' 18th homer, a solo blast, and a two-run shot by Bobby Ramos, his first homer of the season and first hit of the year.

"When I stepped up to the plate," said Smalley, "I was so keyed up. I can't remember being that nervous ever."

"It was one of the biggest thrills of my life," said the 26-year-old Ramos. "All I was trying to do was get a base hit up the middle. But it was a fastball away, and I just got lucky on it."

Indians 3, Orioles 0
Rick Sutcliffe fired a three-hitter and outlasted Jim Palmer and Mike Fischlin's run-scoring single in the eighth inning broke a scoreless tie. Sutcliffe, 12-6, struck out six in pitching the low-hit game of his career.

Palmer started for Baltimore and held Cleveland scoreless over seven innings. But the Indians greeted reliever Tippy Martinez, 8-7, with three straight singles starting the eighth, including Fischlin's RBI hit. Andre Thornton capped the rally with a two-run single.

Royals 18, Twins 7
Amos Otis drilled a two-run single and Hal McRae added a sacrifice fly during a three-run sixth and Kansas City went on to batter Minnesota behind a 20-hit attack. The Royals' barrage included four home runs, two by Willie Aikens, and seven doubles.

Luckless Terry Felton dropped to 0-13, continuing his record for the worst start at the beginning of a major league career. Dating back to last year, he is 0-16.

"We started to swing the bats better the last couple of games," said Kansas City Manager Dick Howser, whose team had been struggling at the plate while dropping seven of its previous 10 contests. "That is the way we are capable of hitting."

Angels 3, Blue Jays 2
Doug DeCinces' two RBI doubles and Tommy John earned his first winning start at Anaheim Stadium since 1971 as California beat Toronto.

John, 12-11, walked one and struck out one in his first winning start at Anaheim Stadium since August, 1971, when he was pitching for the Chicago White Sox. John is 2-1 since being acquired by the Angels from the New York Yankees Aug. 31.

"We have have about 13 players who've been in World Series and that experience really helps out now," said DeCinces. "In a pressure situation like the last two innings, experience helps you perform. There's no room for any mistakes."

A's 4, White Sox 2
Kelvin Moore, Mike Heath and Jimmy Sexton drove in runs in the second inning to pace Oakland.

Chicago starter LaMarr Hoyt, 15-14, allowed just six hits, but four of those came in Oakland's three-run second as the A's ended Chicago's winning streak at four games. Hoyt also gave up Dwayne Murphy's 24th homer in the eight.

Red Sox 10, Tigers 7
Dwight Evans and Gary Allenson drove in three runs each to lead a 15-hit attack that powered Boston over Detroit.

Trailing 3-2, Boston erupted for five runs in the second inning when they chased Detroit starter Dave Tobik, 3-8.

Mariners 1, Rangers 0
Bob Stoddard and Bill Caudill combined on a four-hitter and Dave Revering's first-inning double produced the only run as Seattle beat Texas.

Stoddard, 1-1, allowed a runner to third only once, in the fourth inning.

Woody Peele

In his first general press conference last Tuesday, East Carolina Coach Ed Emory asked the Pirate fans not to judge the team by its first game with N.C. State.

Perhaps those would be wise words to follow. East Carolina made some mistakes in that game — mistakes that proved fatal in the 33-26 loss to the Wolfpack.

But at the same time, the Pirates did show that they are a team that has vastly improved. Now, whether the record will be improved is yet to be seen. Ahead lie such teams as Florida State, Missouri, West Virginia (which astounded everyone with its romp over Oklahoma), and Temple, which beat Syracuse this past weekend.

Perhaps the biggest difference in the game was that State had a game behind it. The Wolfpack had the opportunity to play a weaker team, find its legs and work out some of the problems that cannot be solved in week after week of hitting your own people. East Carolina didn't have that opportunity, and it probably would have been an excellent idea had the Pirates pushed their game of this week, against East Tennessee State ahead two weeks, and had an open date this coming week.

Such things are hindsight of course, and cannot be changed. For the most part, the Pirates did an outstanding job, especially on defense. While Tol Avery did complete a number of passes, he was under pressure a lot, getting sacked four times. While he did get good protection at times, he found no receivers open and had to dump the ball.

Unfortunately, there were three or four times when the pass defense did break down and that was when the Wolfpack connected with damaging passes — two of them for touchdowns.

On the ground, the Pirates held State to only 90 yards rushing, although Joe McIntosh did have a net of 118 (losses by Avery accounted for the lower team figure). However, McIntosh rushed a total of 34 times, giving him only a 3.5 average. His longest rush on the night was nine yards.

East Carolina had some trouble getting its offense in gear, but two freshmen, Reggie Branch and Tony Baker, showed outstanding promise. And there were times when the Pirate offensive line simply blew away the State line.

But like any first game, it was inconsistent. Still, the promise is there. Whether the fans have given up already remains to be seen.

Expos Finally Flexing Their Muscles

By The Associated Press
For five months, they had been the wallflowers of the National League East, standing idly by while guys from St. Louis and Philadelphia took turns in first place. But now, three weeks from season's end, the Montreal Expos are finally flexing their muscles. Just at the right time.

"We haven't reached our potential," said Warren Cromartie. "Now's the time we're going to have to do it, in September. I love September, I've always done well in September."

The rest of the Expos are finding it most agreeable, too. After falling to seven games back as late as Aug. 20, the Expos moved to within 2½ games of first-place St. Louis with an 11-3 thrashing of the Chicago Cubs Sunday. The victory, which improved the Expos' September record to 7-3, completed a three-game sweep in which Montreal outscored the Cubs 28-11.

In other National League games, New York topped St. Louis 4-1, but the Cards remained one-half game ahead of second-place Philadelphia as the Phillies fell to Pittsburgh 4-2. Atlanta staged a gallant ninth-inning comeback to edge Cincinnati, 4-3, while Los Angeles downed Houston 7-3.

Chris Speier led the Expo assault with four runs batted in, three coming on a fifth-inning home run. Cromartie chipped in with four hits, including his 14th homer.

"The main thing I want is run production," said Speier. "I hope this series gets us going. We've had good pitching and good defense but our hitting has been inconsistent."

Mets 4, Cards 1
Pete Falcone, 8-9, fired a three-hitter at the Cardinals and was backed by Dave Kingman's two RBI and consecutive fourth-inning home runs by Brian Giles and Bruce Bochy.

"The heat was good today. I really got loose," said Falcone. "I didn't try to throw it too hard. I stayed within myself."

"It's a big difference playing contending ballclubs," said Mets Manager George Bamberger, whose last-place team beat Pittsburgh on Wednesday before taking two of three from the Cards this weekend. "It keeps everyone interested. It makes the guys want to play."

Pirates 4, Phillies 2
Dale Berra drove in three runs with a bases-loaded double in the sixth inning as the Pirates moved to within 3½ games of the pace-setting Cardinals.

Pirate rightfielder Dave Parker, on the disabled list since July 29 with an injured right thumb, returned to the starting lineup and contributed three hits and two runs.

"I wasn't scared about playing again but I was nervous," said Parker, who now has four consecutive hits — including a pinch-hit triple Saturday — since coming off the disabled list.

Rick Rhoden, 10-12, picked up the victory, with Kent Tekulve picking up his 19th save.

Braves 4, Reds 3
Claudell Washington lined a two-out, two-run single off reliever Ben Hayes to cap a ninth-inning Atlanta comeback, enabling the first-place Braves to remain one-half game ahead of Los Angeles in the NL West.

With the bases loaded, Washington lined a 1-1 pitch into right field, the ball landing in the feet of onrushing right fielder Eddie Milner as pinch-runner Albert Hall and Jerry Royster scored to end the game.

"I always like to be in a spot like that," said Washington. "I'm getting paid a lot of money for key hits like that."

"I'm one of the leaders of this club, and the younger guys look up to me. If I don't come through, it puts more pressure on them."

Reliever Steve Bedrosian, 8-6, picked up the victory. Atlanta's Bob Horner had a solo homer, his 31st of the year, while Johnny Bench belted his 12th homer of the year for the Reds.

Dodgers 7, Astros 3
Steve Garvey knocked in three runs with a pair of singles as the Dodgers stayed one-half game behind the Braves.

Dave Stewart, 9-7, pitched 3 2-3 innings in relief of starter Ricky Wright for the victory.

six-week holdout Friday, gained 33 yards and scored what turned out to be the winning touchdown on a 3-yard run in the fourth quarter despite playing sparingly in the defensive struggle. Players from both teams were booed by the Silverdome crowd for taking part in a pregame solidarity handshake at midfield.

Bills 14, Chiefs 9
Quarterback Joe Ferguson threw first-half touchdown passes to Frank Lewis and Jerry Butler for all the scoring that Buffalo needed. Three Nick Lowery field goals were all the scoring the Chiefs could muster.

Vikings 17, Buccaneers 10
Tommy Kramer passed for 131 yards and one touchdown and Rick Danmeier kick a field goal to lead Minnesota. Three interceptions and a fumble spoiled a 290-yard passing performance by Tampa Bay's Doug Williams.

Browns 21, Seahawks 7
Cleveland's defense sacked quarterback Dave Krieg eight times — a Seattle record — and Browns fullback Mike Pruitt led the offense with 30 carries for 136 yards and two touchdowns. The playing of the game was in doubt after all 54 Seattle players signed a petition Tuesday calling for the reinstatement of McCullum, who has been picked up on waivers by Minnesota.

Patriots 24, Colts 13
Former East Carolina running back Tony Collins ran for 137 yards and caught one of Matt Cavanaugh's two touchdown passes as the Patriots won their opener under new head coach Ron Meyer.

Colts rookie quarterback Mike Pagel scored on a 1-yard run for Baltimore.

For Efforts In 33-26 Loss To NCSU

Carnes, Hamilton Honored

East Carolina University offensive tackle Tom Carnes and defensive tackle Steve Hamilton were named offensive and defensive Players of the Week for their efforts in ECU's 33-26 loss to N.C. State Saturday.

The ECU coaching staff made the selections after reviewing films of Saturday's game Sunday night.

Carnes, a 6-5, 264-pound senior from Norfolk, Va., had the top grade off all offensive linemen and helped the Pirates run up 366 yards total offense on the Wolfpack. "It was his best game ever at East Carolina," ECU head coach Ed Emory said of Carnes' effort.

Hamilton, a 6-5, 252-pound junior from Williamsville, N.Y., had 10 hits — the total number of tackles — and four "big plays," plays which either ended up in a loss of yardage or a change of possession.

Hamilton also had one quarterback sack. ECU returns home this Saturday to face East Tennessee State.

Judge Wapner Is Entertaining

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Now that Superman has gone to the movies, Robert Young has been canned by Sanka and Lou Grant's subscription has run out, who's left on television to defend truth, justice and the American way?

A case can be made for the honorable Judge Joseph A. Wapner, who dispenses televised justice on "The People's Court," while eager adversaries tangle with truth and assert the American right to air one's dirty linen in public.

"My gut feeling is that everybody's ambition is to be seen, and this is an opportunity to be star for a day," says Wapner, 62, a retired California judge. "What we have is real people who prove that truth is stranger than fiction. We'll never run out of cases. People will always have problems."

"People's Court," beginning its second year, culls through the voluminous pending small claims files in California and offers litigants a chance to tell it to the judge... on TV.

The producers seek articulate, attractive adversaries. They can dress any way they want, but are told to avoid brown, which doesn't photograph well.

The litigants agree to accept Wapner's ruling, and the show pays the judicial award, plus appearance money. Essentially, there's no risk, only the possibility of national humiliation.

"At first the lack of liability and the chance of frivolous complaints concerned me," says Wapner. "But how many people get judgments in the courts and can't collect?"

The popularity of "People's Court" attests to America's affinity for eavesdropping on the bickering couple next door. When the case is good or the characters interesting, the result is lively, legitimate theater.

Like "The Case Of The Birthday Stripper," The defendant hired a stripper for her boyfriend's birthday. The stripper sued because she wasn't paid. Among other things, the defendant contended that the plaintiff wore a bikini bottom rather than a skimpier G-string. She offered photos of her boyfriend and the stripper. "He looks all smiles to me," said Wapner.

Judgment for the plaintiff. It's this common-sense justice that has made Wapner a national celebrity, with a Hollywood status symbol: his own fan club. The show is syndicated in 131 markets, and Wapner even gets to dispense dubbed justice in Thailand and Malaysia.

The silver-haired veteran of 20 years on the bench looks like the judge central casting would have sent over. He grew up in Hollywood and dated Lana Turner. His father was a practicing attorney on TV's "Divorce Court."

But Wapner doesn't primp or clown for the cameras. "I'm not an entertainer. I'm a judge, pure and simple," he says. "What you see is what you get. There's absolutely no rehearsal, no script. If the jokes are no good, it's my fault. If the decision is no good, it's my fault."

"What I like are good, meaty legal situations where I can explain points of law," he says. "When I was sitting in small claims court, I never could explain my decisions. We just sent postcards with the decision to eliminate the possibility of physical violence."

In one case last week, the defendant in a fender-bender brought Polaroid pictures that were too dark to be discernible. "If he wanted to prove his point, why didn't he take more pictures?" Another victory for the plaintiff.

Which goes a little way toward evening TV's legal scorecard after years of defendant inconvincibility on "Perry Mason."

"That show wasn't real," says Wapner. "As you can see, courts aren't run that way."

Tar Heel Filmmaker's Next Is All His Own

HICKORY, N.C. (AP) — Hickory's Bill Olsen is working on other people's film projects for a long time, but his next movie, "American Voyeur," is all his own.

Olsen has spent nine years working on projects of his own and has done 12 feature films of other people in the interim.

He has written and will direct the low-budget adolescent comedy, which will begin production Sept. 20.

"American Voyeur" is about a 15-year-old's anxieties as he first encounters dating and other aspects of the grown-up world.

Olsen said it will be a comedy similar to the successful "Porky's," aimed at the 17- to 25-year-old audience.

In 1978, Olsen wrote, directed and produced "The Haunted Palace," a $30,000 short on Edgar Allan Poe that was sold to some educational markets. Since he left UNC in 1973, he's worked extensively for others, including Shelby filmmaker Earl Owensby, with whom he made five films.

"American Voyeur" has a $1 million budget and is financed by unidentified Southern investors, he said.

He hopes the film will premiere in late March, in Greensboro and New York.

To discourage the curious, he won't reveal the location of the Hickory production company, Seventh Avenue

Films, at whose studio most of the five-week shooting schedule will take place.

The film carries a crew of 16 and a cast of 55, including eight principal parts already cast in New York. Olsen says there are no recognizable stars and he doesn't need more actors. Throughout his career, Olsen has insisted that quality film can be homegrown, although he admits to occasional difficulty in swaying others.

"I can understand their skepticism," he said. "They have this old notion that Hollywood is where films are made. Hollywood is where paper is shoved across desks."

Comedian Steve Martin's $180 silk shirts and snappy fedoras got People's raves, and actress Brooke Shields dresses like a luxury item, says one of People's clothes evaluator, author Alison Lurie.

Also on the best-dressed list: "Dallas" actress Victoria Principal, TV news hounds Peter Jennings and Diane Sawyer, shock rocker Nina Hagen, self-proclaimed "clothesaholic" Rick James, writers Judith Krantz and Tom Wolfe, child actors Griffin O'Neal and Drew Barrymore, ballet dancer Mikhail Baryshnikov and Manhattan art gallery owner Mary Boone.

Los Angeles Dodger Steve Garvey and golfer Jan Stephenson were picked to represent the athletic set by the panel of experts that included Ms. Lurie, writer Truman Capote, designer Geoffrey Beene and model agency head Eileen Ford. The panel commended Sophia Loren and Claus Von Steen.

White, a U.S. Postal Service employee, said he'll return for the pageant next year to defend his title.

See Personalities As Trend-Setters

NEW YORK (AP) — On the premise that famous figures of television, movies, politics and the arts are the real fashion trend-setters, People magazine has listed 30 celebrities with the classiest and tackiest duds.

The magazine's Sept. 20 issue lauds Prince Charles and Princess Diana — him for the "classic Savile Row wardrobe" and her for elegant evening cloaks and low-cut velvet gowns.

 The bidding has proceeded:

 1 ♥ Pass 2 ♥ Pass
 What action do you take?
A.—Since the enemy has ventured no further than the two-level, partner is marked with some high cards. Also, he probably does not have more than two hearts. It seems as if it should be safe to compete. Bid two spades.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South, you hold:
 ♠AK862 ♥1052 ♦874 ♣J5
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South
 1 ♥ Pass ?
 What do you respond?
A.—Because of the quality of your spade suit, it is tempting to respond one spade. But what would you do next should partner rebid in a minor or venture two hearts. You will feel that you owe him more than a mere token preference or a pass, but your hand is not quite good enough. You could save yourself all that trouble by raising to two hearts immediately.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠10962 ♥83 ♦KJ6 ♣AKJ9
 As dealer, what action do you take?
A.—This hand could, at best, be described as a minimum opening bid. However, we feel it would be poor tactics to pass, because you might find it difficult to enter the auction at a later stage. What sways us are the defensive capacities and the easy rebid over any response partner might make to your one club opening bid.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠KJ952 ♥83 ♦976 ♣865
 Partner opens the bidding with one no trump. What action do you take?
A.—Experience shows that it is a losing tactic to pass partner's no trump opening bid when you have a weak hand and a five-card suit. More often than not, the hand will play better in responder's long suit. Bid two spades — that is a weakness bid and opener is virtually required to pass.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable,

you hold:
 ♠874 ♥AJ654 ♦K94 ♣73
 Partner opens the bidding with one no trump. What do you respond?
A.—This hand is too strong for two hearts but not quite good enough for a jump to three hearts. The solution is to employ the Stayman Convention. Bid two clubs. If North rebids hearts, you can raise to three hearts; if he bids spades, you can show your 8 plus points by bidding two no trump; and if he denies a major by bidding two diamonds, you can bid two hearts to show a five-card suit and invitational values.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠K62 ♥AKQ74 ♦Q105 ♣86
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♥ Pass 2 ♣ 2 ♣ ?
 What action do you take?
A.—Don't bid two no trump just because you happen to have a stopper in the enemy suit — there is time for that later. By responding at the two-level, partner has promised another bid if you give him the opportunity. Let him make the next decision — after all, he might double, and that will certainly be to your liking.

Testing Testing
 Today 350,000 sufferers of severe acne have new hope. After 10 years of testing Accutane, a new acne medicine, is available for the first time today. Before any drug is approved for sale in the U.S. it must undergo strenuous testing. When the company is satisfied with the results, it submits a report of its findings — which may exceed 50,000 pages — to the Food and Drug Administration. Then the FDA requires independent investigators to verify all tests. Most drugs fail to win the necessary FDA stamp of approval the first time. To bring a new drug to market from its inception to FDA approval can take more than 10 years and cost as much as $70 billion.

DO YOU KNOW — About what percentage of adolescents have acne?
FRIDAY'S ANSWER — James Buchanan was the only U.S. President who was a bachelor.

Hang Glider Champions Begin Flying

By ELISSA McCRARY
Associated Press Writer

Top hang-glider pilots from all over the world begin sailing off Grandfather Mountain today in the week-long Masters of Hang Gliding championships.

The hang gliders will be flying in a new cross-country event and competing for $10,000 in prize money in the event, which is expected to attract 24 hang-glider pilots and hundreds of spectators, glider pilot Stew Smith says.

"Grandfather Mountain has the reputation as one of the most advanced sites for hang gliding, and naturally we get the best, most advanced pilots in here for the competition," said Smith, who flies professionally for Grandfather Mountain resort.

Entrants in this year's competition include defending champion Steve Moyes of Australia, who will be top-seeded, and the event's first woman, Debbie Renshaw of California. The current national champion, Rich Peiffer, also will compete.

Smith says the meet will consist of two categories - one-on-one racing between pilots and a cross-country flight to a site 17 miles away and back.

In the first event, two pilots will launch simultaneously off Grandfather Mountain, race over the highest peaks and descend in a meadow below the mountain. The pilots will be seeded and will be paired in competition according to their seeding.

Each entrant in the Grandfather Mountain contest must have a card issued by the U.S. Hang Gliders Association identifying him as an advanced glider pilot.

The cross-country category was added this year to "modernize" the competition, Smith said.

"Cross country" flying is popular in the California area, and we thought it would add to our meet," Smith said. "We haven't had cross country in past years. We added it to modernize our contest."

Smith said flying is scheduled to begin daily at 9 a.m. and last until about 6 p.m., weather permitting. Last year's master's meet was plagued by delays because of high winds gusting up to 90 miles an hour.

Glider pilots can't fly safely in winds of more than 25 mph, Smith said.

"This area is known as one of the most dangerous for hang-glider pilots because of potential high winds," Smith said.

Boaters 'Found' Their Searchers

OCRACOKE, N.C. (AP) - The U.S. Coast Guard went looking for three people Saturday night, but instead, the people found the searchers.

The trio was fishing in a small skiff when they noticed their 29-foot cabin cruiser on fire a mile away, about 150 yards off Portsmouth Island in Pamlico Sound.

Tommy R. Stryon, a diesel mechanic at Cherry Point Marine Air Station, his wife, Joyce, and David Hill were flounder fishing when they saw their boat burning about 7:30 p.m., said Coast Guard Petty Officer Mike Gildea.

They fired two flares from their skiff which Coast Guardsmen sighted on Ocracoke Island. When a Coast Guardsman spotted the burning cabin cruiser, they headed for the blaze, passing the three in the skiff who had signaled for help, Gildea said.

It was not until 9:30 p.m. when the three knocked on the door of the Coast Guard station and said they wanted to report an accident that the Coast Guard knew they were safe.

The $40,000 cabin cruiser was a complete loss, Gildea said.

church, said most of the graves were moved before when a nearby parking lot was paved.

Officials said relatives of the buried people have to be contacted before the graves can be relocated.

Lawyer Surplus Study Is Sought

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — There is a surplus of lawyers in North Carolina and throughout the country, and many recent law school graduates are having trouble finding jobs.

Allan B. Head, executive director of the North Carolina Bar Association, said unemployment is high among lawyers just out of school.

Every August, the bar association holds a practical skills course for attorneys who have just passed the state bar exam. During the course, the association conducts an informal survey to see how many already have jobs.

This year, 200 of the 373 lawyers who passed the bar exam enrolled in the course. About 40 percent said they were not working, Head said.

"This is the highest post-bar exam unemployment level I am aware of," he said. "In past years, the vast majority of those attending the skills course had jobs."

Raleigh attorney Samuel Johnson wants the Legislature and the University of North Carolina Board of Governors to study the problem and recommend a solution.

"The law schools do a disservice to graduate attorneys who have no place to work," says Samuel Johnson, a former state legislator who is a partner in the Raleigh firm of Johnson, Gamble and Shearon.

"There is a glut of attorneys in North Carolina and in the nation, based upon our mail and the visits to our office," Johnson said in a recent letter to UNC president William C. Friday.

Johnson said he has received an average of one call a day from a lawyer seeking employment.

"If we do have a surplus situation, then some long-range planning would be in order," he said. "We need to take a look at it and see if we're misleading people and if we're using our resources wisely."

Friday reported on Johnson's letter to the UNC board at its meeting Friday in Chapel Hill. The board took no action.

Johnson said he was not advocating closing any of the state's five law schools or limiting the size of classes at any of the institutions.

In an interview after the board meeting, Friday said the state's three private law schools — at Wake Forest University, Duke University and Campbell University — currently produce more law graduates than the two law schools within the UNC system — at UNC-Chapel Hill and N.C. Central University.

"It is my view that whatever is to be done must necessarily involve all five law schools," Friday said.
