CHEMICAL FIRE - A warehouse containing stored chemicals burned in Charlotte Monday, forcing thousands of Charlotte residents to leave their homes and businesses because of toxic gasses. About 75 firefighters and 15 police officers were on the scene on North Tryon Street in downtown Charlotte. (AP Laserphoto)

Thousands Fled Homes In Charlotte Chemical Fire

By ELISSA McCRARY Associated Press Writer CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) - Thousands of people returned today to the homes they fled when a warehouse fire spread a haze of poisonous chemical fumes over 12 square miles of Charlotte.

Churches and schools were packed Monday night with people who had fled from the fumes of the chemicals, which police said included paraquat, the highly toxic herbicide used to kill marijuana plants, and the bleaching agent sodium hydrosulfide.

The fire at the downtown warehouse was controlled about 4 1/2 hours after it began.

Officials at three hospitals said 59 people were treated for smoke inhalation.

A dozen people were admitted, though none was seriously ill, hospital officials said. No serious injuries were reported.

The officials said there was little evidence of paraquat poisoning, which has symptoms that include nausea, diarrhea and abdominal pain.

A cloud of pungent, poisonous fumes rose hundreds of feet skyward late Monday afternoon, then blanketed a heavily-populated area estimated at between 8 and 12 square miles. People fled on foot, on bicycles and in cars, many pressing towels or handkerchiefs to their mouths.

"It smelled like sewer fumes coming through the door," said Pamela Cantu, 33, as she herded her five children, two dogs and a cat away from their apartment.

The cause of the fire was under investigation.

Fire Department spokesman David Bailey said those evacuated could not return home until later today. The exact number of evacuees had not been determined.

The warehouse is occupied by Baxter-Harriss Co. Inc., a storage firm. Company spokesman Herbert Harriss said the building contained 10,400 gallons of paraquat in one-gallon plastic jugs. Between 38,500 and 44,000 gallons of sodium hydrosulfide was stored in 55-gallon drums, he said.

It could not be determined how much of the chemicals had escaped, but police Capt. Roy Phillips said. "In the 35 years that I have been here, I don't recall an evacuation of this size."

Meanwhile, about 3,500 people were evacuated from a nine-block area in Reserve, La., Monday because of a green cloud of poisonous chlorine gas that spewed from an explosion at the Jones Chemical Co. No serious injuries were reported.

In Charlotte, as shifting winds drove the thick, bluish smoke toward the ground Monday evening, police and firefighters drove and ran through the area. Using loudspeakers and bullhorns, they urged people inside houses, factories and businesses to leave. Similar appeals were broadcast on radio and television.

At least three schools were converted into temporary shelters, but refugees at one school had to be moved again after fumes drifted close. School officials said they would decide by early morning whether to cancel classes in affected areas.

"The winds are shifting in all directions. Every time it shifts, we have to move the people out of a new area," Phillips said.

Authorities barricaded streets around the warehouse and warned that loiterers would be arrested. One person was arrested for refusing to leave a spot a half-block from the warehouse, police said.

Rehabilitation Fund Approved

By ANGELA LINGERFELT Reflector Staff Writer

The Ayden Board of Commissioners gave its approval Monday night for the use of some $42,000 to rehabilitate selected residences and to pay administrative costs of $3,100 under the Community Block Grant Program.

The board also approved the addition of $6,070 to the town's 1982 tax revenue. A total of $7,097 was released from the account in a budget adjustment.

The board authorized the disposal of two surplus 1978 Nova police vehicles by selling them through sealed bids to the highest bidder.

The Housing Authority budget was also approved. The board accepted the lowest bid, $14,900 excluding taxes, by Calvar of Goldsboro for a wood chipper and saw.

An estimated $1 million umbrella of insurance coverage, on the old Ayden courthouse, the town hall and the community building, was approved.

Commissioner Elliott Dixon recommended that the Ayden police, fire and rescue squads obtain liability insurance. Dixon suggested that the insurance would be helpful in the event of a civil suit.

Board members agreed that the Ayden Collard Festival, which was held over the past weekend, was a success. Members also agreed that it was one of the best organized collard festivals yet.

New Peace Envoy To Middle East Talks

By R. GREGORY NOKES Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Reagan's new peace envoy is heading for the Middle East to begin the second phase of the administration's diplomatic effort to achieve lasting peace in Lebanon.

Morris Draper, a deputy assistant secretary of state, planned to leave Monday night to follow up on the progress achieved by special presidential envoy Philip C. Habib, who negotiated withdrawal of Palestinian guerrillas from Beirut.

The second phase is aimed at obtaining a withdrawal of all foreign forces - Syrian, Israeli and Palestinian - from Lebanon. The task has been made more urgent because of the outbreak of new fighting in recent days.

State Department officials would not confirm Draper's departure until he had arrived at his first stop. He was expected to travel to Israel and Lebanon and might make other stops as well.

Draper, who has been given ambassadorial rank for his mission, was Habib's deputy during the complex and sensitive negotiations that led to the PLO evacuation of Beirut and prevented an all-out Israeli attack on the city.

Draper met with U.N. officials in New York on Monday. A State Department official who didn't want to be identified, said the administration believes an expanded U.N. peacekeeping force might be needed in southern Lebanon if and when Israeli forces withdraw.

There are an estimated 30,000 Syrian troops in Lebanon, 40,000 Israeli troops and thousands of guerrillas of the Palestine Liberation Organization. The PLO guerrillas are located both behind Syrian lines and in northern Lebanon around Tripoli.

Alan Romberg, the State Department's deputy spokesman, said Monday that Reagan will be "personally and fully engaged" in the diplomatic effort.

New Violent Unrest For Poland Aired By Govm't

By JERRY RAYNOR Reflector Staff Writer

WARSAW, Poland (AP) - Rioters hurled bricks and stones from apartment windows onto a police caravan in Wroclaw and authorities used tear gas and water cannon to break up a rock-throwing crowd in the southern steel center of Nowa Huta, the government announced today.

The official press spokesman, Jerzy Urban, said there also were protests in two other towns Monday - the end of the ninth month of martial law. But he gave no details on demonstrations in the central town of Lodz and in Szczecin, in northwest Poland near the East German border.

It was the first report of unrest since protests and riots swept 54 towns and cities on the second anniversary Aug. 31 of the founding of the Solidarity labor union, suspended when martial law was imposed last Dec. 13.

The official news agency PAP said that in the southwestern city of Wroclaw, 59 people were arrested for trying to start street riots.

Later, residents made a "bandit attack" on a police convoy, smashing windows with "stones, bricks and other heavy objects" hurled from apartment windows, PAP. One police officer lost control of his truck and was injured when it slammed into a light pole, PAP said.

Four other police officers were seriously injured and 15 people were arrested, it said.

According to Urban's account, 200 to 300 people gathered about 2 p.m. Monday outside the giant Huta Lenina steel-making complex in Nowa Huta, site of a fierce riot Aug. 31. He said the crowd marched toward nearby Krakow and grew en route, but most of the protesters dispersed in response to police orders.

Others began hurling stones and shouting obscenities and police moved in, forcefully breaking up the group, Urban said.

"In the evening, however, groups of youths began to gather again and some threw stones at the militia," he said. "The groups were dispersed and several dozen were detained."

Sources in all four cities either would not comment on the protests or could not be reached.

There has been speculation that authorities might outlaw Solidarity because of the Aug. 31 riots, but Urban told a news conference the government did not plan such an "extreme" move.

Urban also sought to play down speculation that recent government press attacks on Bishop Ignacy Tokarczuk of Przemysl signaled a tougher attitude toward the Roman Catholic Church.

The government daily Rzeczpospolita has taken the bishop to task twice in the past week for a sermon criticizing police action during last month's riots, but Urban said "no action will be taken against him" by authorities.

The press spokesman announced that officials were nearing agreement with 500 Western banks on repayment over the next eight years of $2.3 billion of Poland's estimated $26 billion foreign debt. About half of this amount is interest, he said.

Amendment To Schools Budget Voted By Board

By JERRY RAYNOR Reflector Staff Writer

A budget amendment adding $8,000 to the capital outlay fund of the Greenville city schools was approved by school board members Monday night. The amendment will be used to pay for changes to the recently completed auto mechanics-graphics building at Rose High.

Grounds and buildings Director Bob Stewart explained the changes were a combination of ones ordered by a state Department of Public Instruction inspection team and additional circuitry needs not written into the original specifications.

The state team called for installation of fire dampers in the duct work. Additionally, a decision was made to add one circuit for a computer and another circuit for a three-phase cutting machine. Those changes, plus the need for an air-conditioning unit to provide temperature control for sensitive graphic equipment, resulted in the need for additional funds.

The $8,000 for the amendment comes from the fund balance of the budget.

Reporting to the board on the distribution of pupil enrollment in the schools to date, Superintendent Deima Blinson explained that enrollment had been higher than anticipated at two schools. As a result, two additional teachers have been hired to take care of overload in classes, one each at Sadie Sautler and Elmhurst. At both schools, kindergarten classes had students in excess of allowable state levels. The addition of another kindergarten

July's Unemployed In County Again Goes Up

James E. Hannan, manager of the Greenville office of the Employment Security Commission, reports that for the month of July, the civilian labor force in the Greenville labor area (Pitt and Greene counties), was estimated at 58,470.

This figure represents a labor force increase of 1,010 over the mid-May total of 57,460.

Additionally, figures show that the total of persons unemployed - estimated at 5,290 for July - was up 440 from the May total of 4,840 unemployed. The figures equate to an unemployment rate of 9.0 percent for July, up .6 percent of one point over the 8.4 percent for May.

Total employment for the two-county area was estimated in July at 53,190, an increase of 507 over the two month period.

Agricultural employment reached its peak in July in the Greenville labor area, with a result that agricultural employment for July was 7,660, up 3,310 from the May figure of 4,350.

The agricultural employment gains more than offset losses in the non-agricultural wage and salary sector, which registered a loss of 2,320, and all other non-agricultural employment losses, which was 420," Hannan explained.

Figures compiled by the Greenville office of the Employment Security Commission are:

•Pitt County - Total labor force, 49,040; total employed, 44,600; total unemployed, 4,440; unemployment rate, 9.1 percent.

•Greene County - Total labor force, 9,430; total employed, 8,590; total unemployed, 840; unemployment rate, 8.9 percent.

POLICE-INITIATED TOWING FEES SET

I recently had my car towed in the City of Greenville and the police told me it would cost $25 to retrieve it. The company which towed it charged me $25, but when I went back and challenged them after learning that the City Council has set the rate at $25 during the day and $30 at night, they refunded my money. I think everyone should know what the Council-set rate is. E.M.

According to Nadine Bowen, administrative assistant to the city manager, what you say is correct. The City Council has enacted an ordinance which sets maximum prices for police-initiated towing. Current maximums are $25 for weekdays and $30 for nights, weekends, and holidays. Up to $10 can be added if the tow has to use a dolly and storage charges may, of course, be added. Extra fees can be charged for "extraordinary labor and expense during an emergency," too, but not for routine towing.

Two Gunshot Victims Were Respected And Liked

By CAROL TYER Reflector Staff Writer

Marjorie White Timberlake carried an 18-hour academic work load per semester at East Carolina University, kept an immaculate house and worked part-time at a local answering service.

Jackson R. Easley Jr. was a graduate-level certified vocations teacher who co-workers said quietly did a good job. Though he'd taught seventh and eighth graders at G.R. Whitfield School only eight days, he was respected and liked by his co-workers. He had taught in the Kinston schools through last year.

Co-workers of Mrs. Timberlake attended her funeral in Edenton today. Easley was buried in Goldsboro today.

Someone called the emergency room of Pitt County Memorial Hospital Saturday shortly before 10 p.m., identified himself as Jack Easley and asked if a person could commit suicide with Valium. The person to whom he spoke alerted police who went to the duplex at 902 Verdant St. and forced the front door open when they received no answer.

Police said Mrs. Timberlake was lying dead on the bed in an upstairs bedroom. She had been shot in the chest. Easley, lying on the same bed, was comatose, having sustained a gunshot wound to the temple. He died about 5 a.m. Sunday in Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

The couple had apparently lived together for about a month - Easley having moved here from the Grifton area at that time; she from Edenton about a year and a half ago. She was separated from her husband, who lives in Edenton. Easley was divorced.

Medical Examiner Alvin Volkman said it was his opinion that Mrs. Timberlake was shot from such a distance that she could not have shot the gun herself. He said she was shot several hours before her body was found.

The bullet exited the body, Volkman said, so the unmarried bathrobe she was wearing had to have been put on her after her death. It appeared, he said, that blood that almost surely would have been present had been washed away. The only blood found in the apartment was a smear in the bathtub and some from Easley's wound on a pillow.

Volkman said the deaths appeared to be murder-suicide with Easley as a perpetrator.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I don't know how many of you have ever had a wild animal trapped in your house, but let me tell you it's nothing to laugh about.

You don't even have to see them to know that they're there. You just sense you're not alone. Sometimes when you walk into a room you hear a scurrying or shallow breathing. The other night as I was finishing up dishes, I saw a darting shadow out of the corner of my eye. Instinctively, I knew what I had to do.

I became hysterical. Husbands are wonderful. Right away, mine ran through all the Disney characters. "What kind of an animal was it? Ricky Raccoon? Rocky, the Flying Squirrel? Smokey the Bear? How about Dumbo? Pogo? Charlie Tuna? Name names, woman!"

"It was a disgusting roach and stop talking like he was wearing a letter sweater!" "What did it look like?" he persisted.

"It was tall." "It was probably something you brought home in the grocery bag that will hitch a ride out of here tomorrow."

This bit of wisdom comes from a man who told me last year that a plague of crickets in my house was good luck and they ate two carpets.

Oh, I used to be naive about animals. I wanted to believe they wanted out as much as I wanted them out. I wanted to believe they were male, unmarried and traveling alone. That was before I lived on a farm. Every fall, like clockwork, I'd march into the town hardware store and place my order: "I want 15 traps, 35 boxes of painless death powder, 18 aerosol insecticide sprays, five bottles of fast-acting mists, five plastic swatters, and a mallet. What else do you have that's new and effective?"

The boy would say, "Ma'am, I've given you everything short of a nuclear stockpile."

"Do you think this will do it?"

"Have you seen the mouse again?"

"You got it."

Through conscientious and diligent weaponry, I was able to keep wildlife in our house to a minimum of one mouse, until we decided to redo the kitchen. One morning, I heard a strange gnawing sound in the ceiling. I judged the gnawing to be about six feet long and furry. I called the contractor who said, "Why, that ain't nothing to worry about. It's probably only a rat. That's the way they sharpen their teeth."

I was sorry to move. It was a nice house.

The Princess Is In The Kitchen

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

She is a member of a distinguished family — one that has given France numerous generals, three field marshals, one prime minister and a winner of a Nobel Prize in physics. A family in which royal titles abound. But her friendly informality makes her as enjoyable as that American institution — apple pie.

Although she is the Princess de Broglie, she encourages the people she meets to call her by her first name — Marie-Blanche — and they do. She holds a baccalaureate in philosophy, but chooses to run a cooking school in her Paris apartment and at her family's Normandy chateau.

As a result, she is in the kitchen a good deal. When I asked her how she happened to start giving cooking classes, she said with some humor, "The manors are no more, the staffs have vanished."

At the time of her marriage, she didn't know how to cook. Then her husband — a computer engineer — suggested she attend the Paris Cordon Bleu cooking school. After a year there, she won the Cordon Bleu's Grande Diplome.

At first she planned to use her culinary skill for entertaining at home. But before she knew it, she was giving cooking lessons to friends in France and to groups in the United States. In 1975 she opened her cooking school (Princess Ere 2001) that now specializes in both regional and haute cuisine and has an international clientele. She speaks fluent English and Spanish and courses are taught in these languages as well as in French.

Although running her cooking school is a full-time job, Marie-Blanche spends lots of time with her family. She and her husband have an 18-year-old daughter and a 15-year-old son. The family has dinner at home. "We often have the dishes we make at my school," she told me. "I should dislike to deprive my husband and children of such good things." One of those "good things" is Veal Scallops with Hazelnut Sauce, and Marie-Blanche's recipe for it follows.

VEAL SCALLOPS WITH HAZELNUT SAUCE
12 thin-sliced veal scallops (each 2 ounces)
Flour seasoned with salt and pepper
6 ounces butter
4 ounces hazelnuts
2 tablespoons heavy cream

Salt, pepper, cayenne and Worcestershire sauce
Dredge the veal scallops in the seasoned flour and tap off the excess. Over medium heat, melt 2 ounces of the butter in a large skillet. Sauté the scallops in the butter, about 2 to 3 minutes on each side. Remove to a heated platter and set aside in a warm place.

On a baking sheet, toast the hazelnuts in a 350-degree oven until golden and the outer skin flakes off. Remove the skin by rubbing the nuts vigorously together in a dry towel. Finely grind the nuts in a food processor; remove 2 tablespoons of them and reserve. To the remaining nuts in the processor, add the remaining 4 ounces butter. Process thoroughly but avoid overheating and melting the butter. Wrap the nut butter in wax paper and refrigerate until cold and hardened. Cut into medium chunks.

In a saucepan bring the cream, a tiny pinch of the salt, pepper and cayenne and a dash or two of the Worcestershire sauce to a boil; reduce by half. Whisk in the nut butter, piece by piece, until it is all incorporated. Remove immediately from the heat and keep in a warm place until serving time. Serve two veal scallops per person napped with the sauce and a sprinkle of the reserved ground hazelnuts. Makes 6 servings.

school. For information about courses there, write Marie-Blanche de Broglie, Ecole de Cuisine, 18, Av. de la Motte-Picquet, 75007 Paris, France.)

Chinamakers Struggle In Western Market

By PHIL BROWN
Associated Press Writer
JINGDEZHEN, China (AP) — The ancient Chinese city that gave the world chinaware and won renown for making the emperors' porcelains now finds itself struggling to compete for the Western market in fine dinnerware.

The imperial kilns are gone from Jingdezhen, 100 miles northeast of Nanchang in Southeast China's Jiangxi province. But the porcelain industry still employs about 50,000 of the city's 250,000 people. Smoke from coal-fired kilns often blackens the sky and handcars carrying clay and china fill the streets.

China traces its ceramics back to the Han Dynasty (206 B.C.-A.D. 221), but Jingdezhen began making what we know as porcelain in the Sung Dynasty (960-1280) and gained prominence as the main imperial kiln in the Ming Dynasty (1368-1644).

Jingdezhen produced great amounts of porcelain and was at its peak in the years when the West was making its first extensive contacts with China, so what the world knows as "china" came from Jingdezhen.

One still can buy good copies of the exquisite blue and white Chinghua glaze vases made for Ming emperors. One of the originals recently sold for nearly $1.5 million at auction in Britain, say researchers here, who point out that cost was no object to the emperors, either.

But the art market is limited, and Jingdezhen is pinning some of its development hopes on winning a bigger share of the dinnerware market dominated by English bone china and more recent products turned out by adaptable Japanese makers.

"We have confidence we can do what Japan did," said Meng Xianliang, an engineer with the Jiangxi Provincial Ceramic Industry Co.

China has cheap labor and abundant material and, after all, china "is our great invention," Meng said. He said Jingdezhen produces about 280 million pieces of porcelain worth about $105.3 million each year, and about half is exported.

In the Ming Dynasty, when exports were prohibited, foreign sales were lucrative enough to make the risks worthwhile, said Zhen Li, director of the Jingdezhen Ceramic Museum.

Chinaware was put in baskets and covered with beans which then were watered, and the resulting bean sprouts formed the cushiony packing material, she said. Now export hopes lie with companies like Universe Chinaware Co., a factory with nearly 2,700 workers that is like a small city with its own hospital, shops, theaters, library and some housing.

Fan Pu, the factory manager, said it recently began selling dinner sets in the United States.

Among its products is a 45-piece set for eight, with decoration made to order, selling at the factory for about $42.

Last year, the company made profits of $395,000 and, after turning over a large portion to the state, kept $63,150 under a new policy intended to provide Chinese factories with greater incentives, Fan said.

That translates into bonuses for the workers who, Fan said, make an average wage of about $30 a month.

The products move down assembly lines and, after shaping and glazing, are put in giant oil-fired brick kilns 280 feet long.

In contrast, there is the "old kiln," a 2-year-old factory dedicated to preserving methods passed down over the centuries in this city that grew up around large deposits of kaolin, a very pure white clay necessary for the creation of fine, hard porcelain.

It has a wood-burning kiln where the correct temperature, about 2,500 degrees Fahrenheit, is determined by a veteran kiln master who spits through a small window.

Its workshops are old Ching Dynasty (1644-1911) and Ming Dynasty-style buildings moved to the site from other Jingdezhen locations where they faced demolition.

The factory's 400 workers range from 78-year-old artisans with half-century's experience, to 14-year-old apprentices whose hands are suitably flexible to learn how to shape the clay, Xiong said.

All work is done by hand and the products copy old styles, right down to the name of the reigning emperor painted on the bottom.

They sell for as much as $15,790 for a 60-inch-tall vase, Xiong added.

For a city devoted to traditional art, the turbulent, radical Cultural Revolution of 1966-1976 hit hard with its attack on anything old and its suspicion of artists.

Factory directors said some artists left when it became dangerous even to paint something like tigers on vases.

At a time when Communist Party Chairman Mao Tse-tung was idolized as the sun in the east, they said, a tiger with an obvious eastward background would be denounced as symbolizing a "devouring of the sun." An equally dangerous westward background would be seen as depicting the sun in decline, they added.

One artist landed in trouble for painting a tiger between two trees, they said. Political zealots said the painting was in praise of Lin Biao, the former defense minister who allegedly died in a plane crash in 1971 after falling in an attempt to assassinate Mao.

They reasoned that the Chinese character for "lin," meaning forest, is an ideograph depicting two trees. "Piao" means young tiger.

Huang Linyuan, director of the Jingdezhen Art Porcelain factory, said many of the veterans have come back to work now that Mao and the Cultural Revolution have been replaced by Vice Chairman Deng Xiaoping and his modern, industrial goals. And the returning veterans are teaching apprentices, often their own sons and daughters, said Huang.

The Cultural Revolution also caused problems for the Sculpture Porcelain Factory, which turns out figures of characters in Chinese history, legend, religion and mythology.

Much of its business depends on export, said director Xiong Gangru, and foreigners were not interested in buying that period's mandatory depictions of revolutionary workers, peasants and soldiers.

Most of the factory's exports go to Hong Kong and Southeast Asia, where the figures of Chinese legend are familiar, Xiong said. He said his company is looking for ways to sell to Western markets.

Whatever the factory, all use the same phrase to describe the traditional features of Jingdezhen china — "white as jade, bright as a mirror, thin as paper and resonant as a chime."

Beers Bought At Wife's Expense

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Why does a man have to stop off in a tavern after work to have a few beers with the guys he works with all day? We've been married nearly three years and have a 6-month-old son. I know Joe loves us, but after an 8-hour day working at construction, he feels he has earned himself "a few beers." So how many is "a few," Abby? When he comes home two hours late he says, "One guy buys you a beer, then you buy him one and so on..."

I never know when to start cooking dinner because I never know how late he is going to be. Am I wrong to feel that he is being inconsiderate? I can understand stopping off for a beer or two once in a while, but he's made a habit of stopping every night now. Joe has plenty of freedom. He bowls two nights a week in the winter, and in the summer he plays softball.

I'm home with the baby all day, and if he came home at a decent hour after work he could take over for a while and give me a rest. I hate to nag him, but this is really getting to me. What should I do?

ANGRY

DEAR ANGRY: You have a right to be angry. You and Joe should set up some ground rules and decide which nights he will be late — and how late he will be. The uncertainty and endless waiting are unfair to you.

DEAR ABBY: Why don't you quit sending people to church to "meet" a nice man — or woman? I was always under the impression that people went to church to pray. If I am mistaken, please set me straight. Sign me... ALWAYS ON SUNDAY

DEAR ALWAYS: There are a variety of reasons why people go to church. Some go to pray, some go to pray that they meet someone. Other reasons:

1. Habit.
2. Training.
3. Fear of punishment from the Lord if they don't go.
4. To be seen.
5. To see who else is there.
6. To show off a new outfit.
7. To get spiritual inspiration.
8. To socialize.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have just had our first baby. We've been married only 14 months, and although this baby wasn't exactly planned, we are thrilled.

My mother-in-law said, "I hope you kids aren't going to send out any birth announcements to all our friends who sent you wedding presents, because it's the same as asking for a baby gift."

We had planned to send some, but now we don't know what to do. In your opinion, is sending birth announcements the same as asking for a present? BABY MAKES THREE

DEAR BABY: It's not "the same," but it could be interpreted to some as a hint. Send birth announcements only to those of your friends who are far away and may not have heard the good news. If there is a doubt as to whether you should send one — don't!

DRUGS, OR CHEMICALS USED AT DIET CENTER. What I found there was a well-balanced nutritionally sound diet and a behavior modification program to help me keep the weight off.

3. THERE WERE NO PRE-PACKAGED FOODS AT DIET CENTER. I lost my weight without having to buy expensive extra foods. I shopped at my regular food store, and my family was able to eat right along with me.

4. THERE WAS NO NEED FOR BODY WRAPS OR RIGID EXERCISE PROGRAMS. By following the well-balanced diet at DIET CENTER, I found my body tightened up naturally. While DIET CENTER does suggest that exercises such as walking be added to my daily routine, no rigid exercise program or body wraps are necessary for inch loss. As my weight came down, the inches seemed to melt away.

5. AT DIET CENTER I DID NOT FEEL DEPRIVED. I was not hungry, I did not experience nervousness or fatigue. I feel great, and my friends tell me that I look great.

SUMMARY: Diet Center offers a program of private, daily counseling by trained professionals - not only have the Diet Center counselors lost weight on the program - but they have the educational and professional backgrounds to qualify them to help others like me to reach their goals.

When I needed to lose 128 pounds, I compared the weight loss programs in the area and I decided to try DIET CENTER because:

1. THERE WERE NO CONTRACTS. I did not have to pay a large sum of money in advance and obligate myself for any specific period of time. I had tried so many plans, and nothing worked for me so naturally I was skeptical. At DIET CENTER seeing my weight come down daily made a believer out of me.

2. THERE WERE NO SHOTS.

There's Always A Way

It's still too early for a clear over-all picture of college enrollments, but the North Carolina outlook for 1982-83 is taking shape, and it looks good.

Earlier this year there was a lot of hand-wringing over announced cutbacks in the federal student loan program. Newspapers, radio and television news reports were full of moans about dashed hopes and dying dreams for a higher education.

As frequently happens, the fears were overstated. In North Carolina it does not appear to have turned out that way. Almost every college and university in the state is looking forward to the banner year. Community colleges and technical institutes are said filled to capacity.

A good example of the scene: Pitt Community College is chalking up its largest enrollment.

East Carolina University is similarly enjoying a big student-count, and preliminary guesses anticipate surpassing last year's record. Much the same is being heard from other N.C. campuses.

One would expect the small, private colleges, with inflation-swollen expenses and necessarily higher tuitions to reflect a trend toward lower enrollments. True, all the figures aren't in yet, but we have read a report to the effect that Lenoir-Rhyne's freshman class is larger than last year, and the total enrollment remains in the normal range. Guilford College is another campus with undimmed prospects.

We strongly suspect that when all is said and done, most of the high school grads of proven scholastic ability are going to be on a campus with, or without a federal student loan.

Prospects for the rest of the decade are not that good for college enrollment. The last of the so-called post-World War II baby boomers completed their high school careers in 1982, so next year the college surge can be expected to see the start of a tapering-off process, then a decline.

But on the whole, despite that promised cutback in the federal college student loan program, the bad news did not materialize; re-emphasizing the old saw that "where there's a will, there's a way."

THERE'S ALWAYS THAT MOMENT OF RECKONING!

Weinberger Stirred Ire

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
 WASHINGTON — Secretary of State George Shultz's anger over Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger's suddenly-announced trip to the Middle East Aug. 31 was more than matched in the White House, where Weinberger was severely criticized for announcing his trip without presidential clearance.

National security adviser William P. Clark was dead set against Weinberger's going to either Israel or Cairo. Growing hostility between Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Ronald Reagan made a visit by any U.S. official dubious. But in Clark's view, any such visit should be diplomatic, not military. Weinberger did not even know the date of Reagan's Middle East speech before he slipped the announcement of his trip to the press.

Shultz was furious that his old Nixon-Ford administration and Bechtel Corp. colleague insisted on making the trip — over the secretary of state's personal objections. Clark has issued strict new orders against any Cabinet-level trips abroad without prior White House approval.

Weicker's White House Friend
 A withering blast against maverick Republican Sen. Lowell Weicker of Connecticut for urging the ouster of President Reagan in 1984 was consigned to the trash bin on the orders of White House deputy chief of staff Michael K. Deaver.

Deaver's intervention reflected a basic split in the Reagan political high command over Weicker. The hard-liners would prefer that he lost his Senate seat to liberal Democratic Rep. Toby Moffett, so long as it did not jeopardize Republican control of the Senate. But the prevailing view, reflected by Deaver, is to turn the other cheek to Weicker's anti-Reagan rhetoric rather than risk his defeat.

Weicker's office helped Deaver by issuing a statement crawling back from the senator's previous stand that he might support a Democrat against Reagan. That leaves him merely trying for a different Republican candidate despite the White House staff courtship through invitations to bill-signing ceremonies and rides aboard Air Force One.

Mondale's Strategy
 Former Vice President Walter F. Mondale was so upset by our recent report that his 1984 presidential campaign strategy is writing off the Jewish vote to Sen. Edward M. Kennedy that operatives were dispatched to telephone denials to potential Jewish contributors across the country.

In truth, the Mondale strategy depends on substantial contribution of Jewish money. But his managers have made clear in private talks that they have no greater hope of getting Jewish votes away from Kennedy than they do black votes.

One Mondale caller specifically denied our report that David Aaron, no favorite of the Jewish community as President Carter's deputy national security director, is advising the former vice president on national security questions. In fact, at that very moment, Aaron was in Tel Aviv representing himself as Mondale's emissary.

A Trip By Bush
 Although the Republican nomination for governor of New York will not be determined until the Sept. 23 primary, plans have been made for Vice President George Bush to campaign for probable nominee Lewis Lehrman some time in October.

The trip is a secret, in keeping with White House neutrality in primary races, even though ex-U.S. Attorney Paul Curran's race against Lehrman seems hopeless. Plans for the Bush visit were laid in two conversations by Lehrman with White House chief of staff James Baker. Baker is aware that a Bush-

Tobacco Prices Improving

Tobacco producers are feeling a little better about the prices they receive as better grades move onto market floors.

Averages have moved up recently and John H. Cyrus, chief of tobacco affairs for the N.C. Department of Agriculture attributes the better prices to both higher quality and higher support prices.

The tobacco marketing situation, however, still is not healthy, considering the large amount that has gone to Stabilization Corp. this year.

Last Thursday Stabilization's take ran 25.4 percent of the total sales. Earlier in the year it was even higher. No one knows how this will affect the finances of Stabilization Corp., but it is obvious it is a large expense to be considered.

It will take some time to determine how the industry will absorb all the changes that have come this year. At least for now, though, things seems to be on an even keel.

By JAMES KILPATRICK A Marshmallow Grant

WASHINGTON — They were ordered to balance cups of water on their heads and then to hum "The Star-Spangled Banner." They were given marshmallows and ordered to hurl them at fellow participants they disagreed with. For hours on end they were bullied and browbeaten in the name of "sensitivity training." And all this was done in Miami this summer with your money.

From time to time in this space, I have reported on small examples that demonstrate how our tax dollars are squandered. Nothing much is gained, it seems to me, by grousing grandly about billions of dollars in waste. No one understands billions of dollars. But all of us can understand a relatively few thousand dollars.

Pray over this one, if you will:
 Back in 1964, Congress

created the Urban Mass Transportation Administration (UMTA). In Section 6 of the act, grants were authorized for vaguely defined "research." In the current fiscal year, $48.6 million was management and exercise, quality improvement, capacity training and sensitivity training. The idea of the fourth component was "to assist employees in developing their sensitivities in order to interact successfully with persons of opposite sexes, diverse opinions, cultures, ethnic backgrounds; and with visibly identifying handicaps for establishing a harmonious work environment."

JAMES J. KILPATRICK made available for such grants.

Toward that end, the transit authority retained Charles H. King as a consultant and instructor. He is a black man, 57, described by the Miami Herald as a "towering figure" who wheels around in size-14 boots, "insulting, badgering and bullying" the white employees who were directed to attend his two-day sessions. This is to establish that he is their master.

"You fool!" he bellows at a participant who gets out of line. "How dare any white person tell me I'm wrong!" he booms. In order to establish their submission to his will, the students must obey his orders for such exercises as the cups of water and the thrown marshmallows. He calls himself "Dr. King," though the honorific is entirely self-bestowed. In recent years he has been putting on these performances, he told the Herald, for several major corporations, the U.S. Navy, and for local governments in Atlanta and Boston. He has conducted nine seminars for the Central Intelligence

Easier Wiretap?

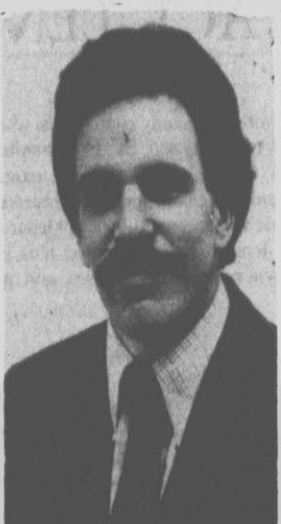

By PAUL T. O'CONNOR
 RALEIGH — The thought that "Big Brother" might be listening to our Sunday telephone chat with grandma revolts most Americans. So, back in the '70s, when the country learned that federal investigators and spies had been eavesdropping, strict laws were written to prohibit wiretapping and other forms of electronic surveillance.

Those laws have come under a great deal of fire from lawmen who say legitimate investigations of drug pushers and other unseemly sorts are being hurt. In North Carolina, federal investigators can eavesdrop when directing a federal investigation. But state law still forbids any kind of wiretapping or electronic bugging by state lawmen. State Bureau of Investigation chief Hayward Starling says North Carolina's lack of a bugging law encourages drug pushers to work in the state. It is one less police weapon that they have to worry about.

The Governor's Crime Commission and the state attorney general's office are formulating a piece of proposed legislation they say will provide state lawmen with the tool of electronic surveillance in drug trafficking cases while protecting the citizenry's right to privacy.

The proposed legislation, which is scheduled to be put in final form this month, sets

PAUL O'CONNOR up a detailed mechanism for obtaining permission to place a tap on a suspected drug dealer.

Crime Commission staffer Donald Jones explained the procedure that would be required to get a tap. First, a sheriff or police chief with evidence of drug trafficking would prepare a request for a tap. He would then have to show that request to his local district attorney who in turn would have to comment on it and send it along to the attorney general.

The attorney general would have the authority to kill the request immediately or ask a special three-judge panel in Raleigh to grant approval for the tap. If approved, the tap would be

Other Editors Say Pro Bono Work

(The Raleigh Times)

In line with conservative principles, much of the responsibility for what's usually called Legal Aid is currently being passed back to the community for voluntary action.

This begins to wind down a brief era when many of the often pressing and crucial legal needs of the poor were met through government-paid help. East Central Community Legal Services still exists, but federal budget cuts leave it with an overload approaching 1,000 cases in its four-county area.

The Wake Bar Association is asking the county's 1,000 lawyers to voluntarily fill that gap by taking just one or two no-fee cases a year. The Wake project, if successful, would become a model for the rest of the state.

This sort of work, done today by many but not all lawyers, was once such a routine part of almost every practice that it has its own latin tag, of the kind the profession loves so well — pro bono work.

The full phrase is pro bono publico — for the public good — and such work indeed benefits all concerned. The attorneys who do it broaden their own perspective on the society they live in and whose rules they help define.

They also make available to all who need it, instead of only to the well-to-do who can pay for it, a specialized service that in our litigious time and place has become not a frill but a necessity.

The county's legal leaders merit praise for the initiative they've taken in answering the pro bono challenge. That initiative is especially appropriate here, because of all the state's 100 counties Wake would rank tops on any attorney's list for relatively easy, remunerative legal pickings. The county attracts many lively, talented legal minds for this and other reasons.

We hope they will respond in droves to the Bar Association's plea on behalf of those who can't afford such talent on their own hook.

HIDDEN JUVENILE DELINQUENCY
 Everyone is alarmed about rising juvenile delinquency. But perhaps the most alarming aspect of this situation is that it indicates much more moral infirmity than is revealed by the few cases which reach the courts.

In other words, juvenile delinquency is only the evil which comes out into the open. For every youngster who gets into trouble with the police, there are many others whose moral standards have

Their Book: Designed To Sell

By JOHN CUNNIFF
 AP Business Analyst
 NEW YORK (AP) — With one of the biggest hypes of the fall season, "The One Minute Manager" has arrived at bookstores, a parable proclaimed in advance by its authors as a sure best seller and hailed on the jacket as "a gem."

What book reviewers and professional managers think of it might be less glittering, but the authors say they aren't very concerned about that. They have carefully managed production of the product. They've designed it to sell.

"Real well — 500,000 hardback copies at a minimum," said Kenneth Blanchard, Ph.D., one of the authors. "Bigger than that," his co-author, Dr. Spencer Johnson, corrected. "In the first calendar year."

Most best sellers run their course in a year's time. The authors of "The One Minute Manager" believe theirs is a classic that will sell for many years. "We think it is the Jonathan Livingston Seagull of management," said Johnson.

In subject matter it is unlike Richard Bach's gull. This book is about the three "secrets" of management: establish and communicate management goals, then keep on course toward them through one-minute reprimands and one-minute praises, whichever apply, of those you expect to carry out your orders.

Physically, it does resemble Bach's book. The allegorical form suggests that precious universal truths are conveyed. It is told simply, clearly. And briefly — in about 90 pages of text, some pages containing just a few words.

Management of this production is a story in itself. Copies of the original manuscript were given to 250 executives attending Blanchard's management seminars. Each was given the same assignment: What would make this the best management book ever? The responses were noted; improvements were made.

"That's what we call writing for the market place," said Johnson.

Though not directly involved in business, the authors, both 43, are men of business acumen. Blanchard is a professor and consultant, Johnson a physician who prefers, he says, to help people through the written word. He has written many other small volumes, most drawing morals from the lives of great people.

Dreams of a huge best seller were roused after thousands of copies — 20,000 in all — had been published and sold by the authors themselves, generally to seminar attendees who sought to share knowledge with employees.

In fact, incorporated into the book is the message that a manager who uses its techniques should be certain that underlings understand what he is about. And the best way to do that, of course, is with a copy of the book.

The authors convinced publishers that here was a book with a future. They obtained endorsements from executives to back up their claims, and they obtained permission to use those endorsements. (They're now part of the end papers.)

Publishers competed for the book. The authors signed with William Morrow and Co. after it agreed to an unusually large first printing of 100,000 hardback copies, and promised to spend at least $100,000 in promotion.

By this time the paperback houses were excited and bidding for reprint rights, even though Morrow had not sold a hardback copy. Seventeen in all showed interest, said Johnson. Soon the paperback rights will be auctioned.

Full-page advertisements have been scheduled in several newspapers, and interest by large book chains is said to be strong. And the authors hope to promote further interest among the media and the public through a 15-city tour.

"This is a good gift," said Johnson, explaining that managing isn't a skill restricted to business decision-makers but is involved in being a good worker, parent, or professional, or simply in being an effective person.

That's an enormous market, and Johnson and Blanchard intend to exploit it.

They explained how the jacket, containing a gold seal imprinted with the message, "A GEM — SMALL, EXPENSIVE AND INVALUABLE," catches the eye, while the plain, library-style inside cover suggests something of enduring value.

And the $15 price. Isn't that high for a volume of probably 15,000 words?

"I think it is well worth it," said Johnson.

Added Blanchard: "If you give something for nothing they don't think it's important."

Public Forum
 Letters submitted for Public Forum should be limited to 300 words. The editor reserves the right to edit longer letters.

To the editor:
 Congress, behaving in a responsible manner, has overridden a presidential veto. The House and Senate were reported to be justly angered at Mr. Reagan's characterization of the bill as a "budget buster" when it actually called for appropriating $2 billion LESS than the president had sought.

The president's words could not be attributed to anything less than a desire to deceive the American people, a tactic censured by another Republican president in history with a reputation for greater honesty when he warned: "You cannot fool all of the people all of the time."

North Carolina congressmen who voted to override the veto are to be commended.

DAVID NELSON ... with Buddy Bear

Non-Stop Skating Stint To Aid Pitt Hospital Dept.

By CAROL TYLER
Reflector Staff Writer

David Nelson moves fast on-skates or off and this energetic man is eager to share himself both to introduce people to the fun of skating and to raise money for the Therapeutic Recreation Department of Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

He has pledged to skate non-stop from 6 p.m. Friday to 7 a.m. Saturday and many have pledged donations to the Therapeutic Recreation Department based on his performance. Many other people from the hospital and from throughout the community will join him for part of the night, as will "Buddy Bear," a hand puppet who symbolizes and cheers up the pediatric department of the hospital. "We'll keep Buddy moving all night," he said, "by letting him hitch a ride with one person, then another."

Nelson, 41, says he has skated since he was a very young child and, unlike most of us, didn't quit when he got grown. He and his wife, Mary Boyd Nelson, and their daughters, Tasha, 12, and Kimberly, 8, all enjoy an evening of skating as often as they can and he sometimes takes hospital co-workers with him to the local skating rink to teach them how to skate safely and well.

The event is to be held at Sportsworld from 6 p.m. Friday until 7 a.m. Saturday.

Course To Help Investor Set

Fee for the course is $8. Registration will be held immediately before the first class in Room 42, White Building.

Pass Pass Pass
Opening lead: Six of ♣.

We have had some discussion in these columns lately about freak hands. This one was submitted to Bridge World Magazine.

An action-packed sequence resulted in North-South reaching an excellent grand slam at clubs. East doubled to suggest a lead other than the suit his side had agreed upon, i.e., diamonds. West had no difficulty in deciding that, in that case, he should lead a heart. East ruffed for down one. Most unlucky.

A discussion between the editors of the magazine led to some argument as to whether six no trump could be made by South after the lead of the six of hearts. Indeed the editors found the analysis so interesting that they decided to make a contest out of it, and it is open to readers of this column.

Playing along double dummy lines, can South make six no trump after a heart lead? If you think declarer can, send the winning line of play to: Bridge World Contest, 39 West 94th St., New York, N.Y. 10025. If you think the contract must fail, send the winning defense to the same address. Entries must reach the magazine by October 1. All who submit the correct solution will receive, free, the copy of the magazine in which the solution is presented.

You can receive the solution even if you do not have the winning answer. All you have to do is enclose a large, self-addressed envelope with your solution. Or save yourself 20 cents and watch for the solution in this column early in October.

How do you choose the best opening lead? Charles Goren has the answer. For a copy of "Winning Opening Leads," send $1.85 to "Goren-Leads," care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 259, Norwood, N.J. 07648. Make checks payable to Newspaperbooks.

made by a squad of SBI agents using equipment owned and entirely controlled by the state. They would work with local police.

Jones says the bill is loaded with safeguards to assure that the authority to wiretap won't be abused. With the approval of so many justice system officials required, it is unlikely that a conspiracy to abuse the law could be put together. And, with felony penalties involved for abusing the law, lawmen will be sure to obey themselves.

The safeguards are so restrictive, says one state senator, that nobody will be able to use the law. "If I were the D.A., it (the drug business) would be all over before I could get all these people to agree to it," Sen. Bob Swain of Asheville, a commission member, said of the procedure proposed for getting a tap.

Driver Charged

Cars driven by Michael Ray Brown of 98-K Brookwood Drive and Frederick Lowe Chance of Route 1, Bethel, collided about 11:11 p.m. Sunday on Greenville Boulevard, 46 feet south of the 10th Street intersection.

Police, who charged Brown with driving under the influence and hit and run driving, estimated damage from the mishap at $1,200 to the Brown car and $250 to the Chance vehicle.

Kilpatrick Col. . . .

Swain asks why the attorney general's approval is needed. "Why not just the district attorney?" And, why does the request have to go to a three-judge panel in Raleigh? "Why not to just the chief district court judge?" Swain argues that good opportunities to place taps will be lost by the delays needed to get all of this approval. "This is no more than a glorified search warrant," he says. "I don't think it needs to be nearly so complicated."

Jones says he can force requires for wiretaps moving through the system in a matter of hours in urgent cases. But, he concedes to Swain that the process will usually take much longer.

When the bill goes to the legislature next year, it no doubt will have a great deal of support. From Swain, it's likely to get support and a strong editing.

Agency

King charges $200 per student. In Miami he had about 250 students, which adds up to about $50,000. He also had an expense allowance of $6,225. He stayed in a $150-a-day suite in the Deauville Hotel on Miami Beach. Some of the white participants, interviewed by the Herald, thought they got something out of the experience. Others seemed doubtful.

Very well. Eighteen years ago, when the UMTA act was passed, I objected strenuously to the whole idea of federal subsidies for local transit systems. I argued in vain that nothing in the Constitution — not even the most tortured stretching of the Commerce Clause or the General Welfare Clause — could justify such outlays.

The whole program still strikes me as wrong — and such vacuous grants as the one in Miami strike me as especially wrong. After all, if the Metro-Dade administration feels it necessary to instruct transit employees in sound nutrition and healthy exercise, why not undertake these banalities with local money? In Miami's melting pot, racial and ethnic sensitivity is surely desirable, but how did the sensitivity of Dade County bus drivers get to be a national responsibility?

The answer can be found in a letter from transit officials to the Dade County Commissioners, urging approval of the application. The program, it was emphasized repeatedly, would require no local funding. It would be financed "entirely in federal dollars."

Two area women announced at a noon news conference today that they intend to run for local state legislative seats as write-in candidates in the Nov. 2 elections.

Mariem G. House of Gritton said she is a candidate for the 9th Senatorial District seat representing Pitt County, seven townships in Martin County and Chocowinity Township in Beaufort County.

Fredrica (Freddy) Jacobson of Greenville indicated she will seek a write-in election to the 9th House District seat representing all of Pitt and Greene counties except Bethel and Carolina townships.

Both women are sponsored by a local campaign organization formed after the failure of the N.C. General Assembly to ratify the Equal Rights Amendment to the U.S. Constitution this summer.

Ms. House said, "We feel the ERA would allow women to exercise basic privileges and responsibilities in a truly equal partnership with men."

She said, "While we don't yet have the equal rights guarantee in the Constitution, we feel it is time that women took on their share of the responsibility of serving the public."

Ms. Jacobson suggested that women are "seriously under-represented" in the state Legislature, where she said women make up only 12.9 percent of the membership.

"We want to increase the numbers of women in our Legislature, so that an effective female presence will ensure full and fair consideration of women's issues," she said.

Ms. House is a member of the Pitt County League of Women Voters, the Pitt County Council on the Status of Women and the Greenville chapter of the National Organization for Women. She has served as president of the Gritton Service League and as chairperson of the Gritton Board of Elections.

A Robersonville High School graduate, she attended the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill and Alfred University, N.Y. She and her husband, Joseph, have three daughters and are members of Gritton United Methodist Church.

Ms. Jacobson, who is vice president of WOOW Radio here, is a member of the Pitt County Democratic Party Executive Committee and a member of the board of the Pitt County Democratic Women. She is serving her third term as president of the Pitt County Women's Political Caucus and is a member of the local chapter of the National Organization for Women.

She is married to Daniel S. Jacobson and they have two children.

'Crime Package' Fated For Shelf

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's newly proposed crime package appears certain to be brushed aside as the 97th Congress rushes to adjourn.

With some fanfare, including a weekend presidential radio address, the White House sent the crime proposals to Congress on Monday. They include a provision reversing the insanity defense used by John W. Hinckley Jr.

But Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker of Tennessee said Monday the no one in the White House informed him that Reagan was sending the legislation to Capitol Hill.

Asked why Reagan would be proposing a major new piece of legislation so late, Baker said, "I have absolutely no idea."

Because Congress has an Oct. 7 target date for adjournment, Reagan's recommendations face certain burial this year.

Presidential counselor Edwin K. Meese III, interviewed today on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America," said administration officials felt "it would be a good idea to have this legislation up there in case they have time before the Senate adjourns to take it under consideration, or at least to have it in a position where they can hold hearings."

He added that, "if they can take it up this session, that would be all to the good. If they can't, it will certainly be ready for action next session."

The president said his goal was to "help restore the balance between the forces of law and the forces of lawlessness."

Baker and Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, have been attempting to get a crime measure through the Senate for several months.

Baker said it is possible that the Senate might debate a slimmed-down, compromise version in early October shortly before Congress quits for the year.

The compromise version, which has support from senators in both parties, would spell out tougher penalties for big-time illegal drug dealers; set up a commission to establish firm sentences for federal criminal offenses; make attacks on senior government officials a federal crime; and prohibit the release on bail of any person judged to be a danger to the community.

Even if — as seems highly unlikely — the Senate approves the compromise crime bill, it is almost certain to die in the Democratic-controlled House because time is running out.

Dr. Blinson also reported that all grade one through three classes at the two schools have 27, 28 and 29 pupils (the state allowable limit is 26 pupils). He suggested that parents be asked to agree to voluntary transfer to Third Street School in some instances to relieve the overload. Blinson emphasized that he is not in favor of going back to a multiage arrangement and that all efforts will be made to avoid that arrangement.

In another report, Blinson informed the board that the county has provided an additional bus on a loan basis for the current school year in order to provide transportation for some children in grades K-3 to Elmhurst School. These are the children who have in the past had to cross Greenville Boulevard at Elm Street in order to walk to school.

School and city officials and parents have been concerned about the safety factor involved in young students having to cross the busy thoroughfare.

County officials agreed that the situation constitutes a clear and present safety hazard, thus making it possible to authorize use of a bus to students who live less than a mile and one-half from school, Blinson said.

Blinson said Police Chief Glenn Cannon has agreed to transfer the guard previously stationed at the Greenville Boulevard crossing to another crossing point in the city.

In other actions, the board:

- Approved the addition of Fidelity Group to the list of firms authorized to offer tax annuity plans to city school employees; and

- Concurred that there are no funds available for a school board member or members to attend the National School Board Association Conference being held in San Francisco in November.

Three school personnel — Rebecca Oats, Charles Ross and Esther Warren — made status reports on the performance appraisal system being formulated for personnel in the city schools. They presented preliminary details on the functions, organization and administration of the program. School personnel are keeping board members informed on progress of the evaluation instrument, which was mandated by the General Assembly for use in all school systems in North Carolina.

Board members agreed to designate Monday night's meeting and a workshop held earlier in the month as the required two monthly meetings of the board. A meeting scheduled for Sept. 20 was canceled because of insufficient agenda items.

Anti-Abortion Forces Are Playing Hard Politics

By EVANS WITT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Politicians under attack for refusing to take a tough position against abortion are being issued a new handbook of suggested tactics they can use to salvage votes.

Anti-abortion groups, often using surprise maneuvers against candidates they oppose, have played a substantial role in defeating a number of politicians in the past four years.
Dick Clark lost his Iowa Senate seat in 1978 at least partly because of such tactics, and anti-abortion groups claimed partial credit for the demise of a number of Democratic senators in the 1980 election.

"We're onto their tricks," said Susan Dickler, executive director of Voters for Choice, the political action committee that put out the book.

"Winning with Choice: A Campaign Strategy Handbook" is a step-by-step guide to countering attacks by anti-abortion groups — from the basic decision on what position to take on abortion to how to counter last-minute leafletting at churches, a favorite tactic of anti-abortion groups.

Such services more traditionally are the province of the political parties.
The well-financed Republican National Committee already provides a massive amount of technical support to GOP candidates. The financially strapped Democratic Party provides some such services, but far less than the RNC.

The growing trend for private political organizations to provide support is not limited to liberal groups.
For example, the Life Amendment PAC, an anti-abortion group, has a packet of materials for organizing a grassroots anti-abortion campaign to support a like-minded candidate or oppose one who disagrees.

The handbook includes such samples from previous anti-abortion campaigns.
It says candidates should ask churches to discourage leafletting on the last Sunday before the election. But, if necessary, the handbook urges candidates to be ready to "counter-leaflet" in response.
"Do not debate your opponent on his terms," it says in another place. "Don't allow yourself to be drawn into discussion of 'when life begins' or 'murder.' Don't use their language: 'mother', 'baby', 'unborn child'. Keep the focus on legality, the role of government and individual freedoms."

The handbook provides answers to tough questions from abortion opponents. For example, to a question such as: "Aren't you really 'pro-abortion, not 'pro-choice'?", the suggested answer would be: "No, I don't think that anyone is pro-abortion. ... We think the decision to have an abortion is personal and private and not a matter for the government."

With The Armed Services

Seaman Recruit Michael E. Hackett, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Hackett of Greenville, completed recruit training at the Naval Training Center, Navy Recruit Training Command, Great Lakes, Ill. During the eight-week training cycle, Hackett studied general military subjects, which included seamanship, close order drill, naval history and first aid.

months overseas while conducting training exercises with the 7th Fleet and units of allied nations.

Second Lt. Frances A. Gray, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Walter C. Gray of Greenville, participated in an Air Force Strategic Air Command exercise called "Global Shield '82." She is currently serving as a deputy crew commander with the 381st Strategic Missile Wing at McConnell AFB, Kan.

The handbook, a loose-leaf binder that contains more than 100 pages, emphasizes that a candidate will benefit from supporting women's right to an abortion. "Being pro-choice will bring support, money and workers," Ms. Dickler said.
Gloria Steinem and former Sen. Edward Brooke of Massachusetts are on the Voters for Choice board. The group, set up in 1979, has given the book to about 30 candidates and plans to provide it to about 30 more congressional candidates this fall.

Cite Factors In Achievement

WASHINGTON (AP) — Family income and a child's sex have a bigger impact on school achievement than whether the student comes from a broken home, a principals' group has concluded.

The new report by the National Association of Elementary School Principals appeared to be backing off from an earlier study that implicated divorce as a major cause of low grades and disciplinary problems for children.

A 10-year army veteran, Ketrone has served at Fort Bragg, West Germany and Sanannah, Ga. His awards include the Parachutist Badge and Good Conduct Medal. Spec.4 Vicki V. Jones, daughter of Sudie G. Davis of Greenville, has arrived for duty at Fort Lewis, Wash. She is an equipment records and parts specialist with the 9th Infantry Div., and was previously assigned in Wiesbaden, West Germany.

It is aimed not at converting candidates strongly opposed to abortion, but at giving help to those who may be wavering on what stand to take and fear political repercussions from taking what might be cast as a pro-abortion position.
The handbook is part of a trend among political groups which give more than money to candidates: information, political expertise and training for campaign staff.

The report, released Monday, was based on "a deeper analysis" of the same data collected in 1980 on nearly 15,000 students in grades 7 to 12 in 14 states, the association said.

Generally, students from families with high incomes and girls tend to have better grades, according to the updated report in the September issue of the association's magazine, Principal.

To defuse attacks before they happen, the handbook advises such things as having candidates talk to church groups to explain their position and enlisting prominent church leaders as part of their campaign.
Faced with the possibility of surprise attacks, the handbook suggests a variety of tactics.
"Alert the press to the possibility of last minute 'dirty tricks'; show them samples of materials used in

Wealthy Retirees Seen Making Homes In N.C.

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Retirees are moving to North Carolina at a higher rate than they are settling in Florida, and officials say that is helping the economy of many counties in the Tar Heel state.
North Carolina ranks second only to Florida in the number of retirees living in a Southeastern state. The growth rate of retirees moving to Tar Heel state is 79 percent, compared to 63 percent in the Sunshine State, said Charles Dunlap a consultant for Medical Facilities Inc., which is planning on building a retirement center in Raleigh.

They are the people who aren't affected by changing economics," Cantrell said. "They've contributed to the community through their cultural interests, their education. Their wealth has contributed to our United Way, to our churches, in every way."
Seventy percent of the 65-plus population owns a home, many mortgage-free. People over 55 have twice the spendable income of those under 55 and account for more than one-third of the nation's total earnings, Sutton said.
In Moore County, for example, 30 percent of the county property taxes are paid by 3 percent of the homeowners, many of whom live in resort-area houses bordering one of 26 golf courses.

They don't send children to school," said Betsy Lindau of the Sandhills Area Chamber of Commerce. "They don't cost the county much. They don't go on welfare."
The reason for the retirees move to North Carolina is simple.
"They're tired of shoveling snow November through April," Cantrell said. "A lot of them go to Florida first, then come here."

Exact Crash Toll In Malaga Is Not Yet Determined

HECTIC HOMECOMING — Surviving passengers of a crashed Spantax Airlines DC-10 are mobbed by newsmen on their arrival at New York's Kennedy International Airport early this

COVERED WITH FOAM — Firemen covered the wreckage with foam after a Spanish charter jet crashed on takeoff at the Malaga, Spain airport Monday. Most of the passengers were Americans, a number of people were trapped in the burning plane. (AP Laserphoto)

Survivors Tell 'Horror Story'

By ULA ILNYTZKY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — More than 200 survivors from the crash of a Spanish jetliner arrived in the United States recalling the chaos and panic aboard the burning plane that "ran out of runway" in Malaga, Spain.

Many survivors of the Spantax DC-10 crash wept as they embraced relatives after arriving at Kennedy Airport on Monday night.

Some were too distraught to speak with reporters, and at least one woman had to be helped from the terminal because her knees had buckled beneath her.

Those who could talk recalled the horror and confusion of panicked passengers as the blazing Spantax airliner collapsed around them Monday.

Lisa Kanstroom, 19, of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., said passengers were "pushing and trampling" one another while "the roof was caving in and the floor was crumbling because of the fire."

She said one engine "started cutting on and off all the time" while the plane was flying from Madrid to Malaga, where it picked up passengers before crashing shortly after takeoff.

Jay Boyarsky, 29, of New York, who was on his honeymoon with his wife, Arlene, explained the passengers' confusion, saying that "the rear doors failed to open. Only the center emergency doors worked."

Alfred McKeon, 26, of New York, said, "The plane started to take off and it was a little bit up in the air... It seemed as if the back wheels never got off the ground." He said the pilot put on the brakes, "but it was too late, he'd run out of runway."

Elrey Vicente, 40, of Toronto said he and other passengers got out of the plane quickly because of "the fire and fear of explosion." He said that after sliding down the emergency chute he turned around to look at the plane.

"I saw flames shooting out from inside and dark fumes and people ducking to avoid the fumes," he said.

Carlton Maloney, 30, of New York, who got off the Iberia jet that carried survivors back to New York without cab fare home because his money burned in the fire, called the crash "an experience you never want to go through again."

In Davenport, Iowa, meanwhile, Vern and Phyllis Parry awaited word of their daughter, Jayne, who they believed was aboard the flight.

Miss Davenport, 25, had spent a month in Spain to join a reunion of Americans who had studied in Spain four years ago.

"We didn't want her to go," Mrs. Parry said, but emphasized their concerns at the time were for Miss Parry's finances, not any danger of flying.

"... She said, 'Mom, in two more years, the kids (the other students) will be gone.' She saved her money for this and she really wanted to go."

The Parrys said they had received no word on their daughter's fate. "We're kind of dangling in midair," Mrs. Parry said, but added: "We have hope."

MALAGA, Spain (AP) — Thirty-one passengers were still unaccounted for today following the fiery DC-10 crash that killed at least 46 tourists returning to New York from this Mediterranean resort, the civil governor's office here said.

Spantax Airlines, the Madrid-based air charter company that owned the jumbo jet, reportedly agreed with the figures, but noted the 31 missing people are not necessarily dead.

"They might be somewhere still trying to get recovered from the shock they must have suffered. Neither can we say for sure there are no more corpses in the wreckage," an airline spokesman said.

The Spantax office in New York on Monday said that 332 passengers had escaped the blazing wreckage and only two were missing. A spokesman today said he could not explain the discrepancies in the figures.

The chartered jetliner plunged to earth moments after the 12:30 p.m. (6:30 a.m. EDT) takeoff, careened across a highway and burst into flames. It was thought that bodies were still trapped in the tail of the plane, a rescue worker said.

Official figures released today said 316 people escaped death, including 49 who were hospitalized and 267 who were unharmed or discharged from the hospital. Nine people are listed in very serious condition.

The cause of the crash was under investigation, officials said. Military sources at the Malaga airport on Monday mentioned engine failure as a probable cause of the accident and many survivors said the plane apparently didn't have enough power to take off.

"We are about to crash. We cannot do anything, an engine is failing," a Madrid newspaper quoted pilot Juan Perez as saying just before the crash.

The pilot survived along with six other crew members. A Cuban passenger who refused to give her name said deaths could have been caused because "some of the passengers tried to save also personal items they were carrying in the cabin."

Medical personnel aided by airport officials and relatives of the victims are trying to identify the corpses, some of them said to be burned beyond recognition. The corpses have been taken to an airport hangar and those that are properly identified will be flown home for burial, officials said.

The National Transportation Safety Board in Washington dispatched three investigators to Malaga and McDonnell Douglas Corp., the California-based maker of the DC-10s, said it sent two investigators to help Spanish authorities.

One of the jet's engines was found in a field near the crash site.

Company sources quoted pilot Juan Perez as saying the plane was about 60 feet off the ground when it started vibrating and he tried to power down the engines to abort takeoff.

Lisa Kanstroom, 19, of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., was among the survivors who arrived at Kennedy Airport in New York early today. She said she had been sitting near one of the engines "and it started cutting on and off all the time. That's when we knew something was wrong."

After the crash, chaos broke out with "people pushing and trampling and wanting to get out, out, out," she said. "The roof was caving in and the floor was crumbling because of the fire."

The solar fraction for this area Monday, as computed by the East Carolina University Department of Physics, was 71. This means that a solar water heater could have provided 71 percent of your hot water needs.

Another survivor, Alfred McKeon, 26, of the Bronx, N.Y., said the pilot braked, "but it was too late, he'd run out of runway."

He said he thought the jet hit "about five cars, a wall, went across train tracks and came to rest in a gully."

Spanish authorities did not say how many vehicles the plane clipped or if there were any casualties on the ground.

Several survivors said the plane's rear exits failed to open. Many of the victims apparently burned to death in the tail section of the wide-bodied jet.

"The rear exits did not work," said survivor Hal Lavine of Tamarac, Fla. "People pushed forward. There was screaming and panic. A big cloud of black smoke poured into the cabin."

The U.S. Embassy in Madrid said 210 American citizens and 85 Spaniards living in the United States were aboard the flight originating in Madrid with a stopover in Malaga. The embassy had no names and didn't know how many Americans were killed or injured.

No definitive list of victims was available early this morning.

A Spantax spokesman advised people whose relatives did not return on today's flight to Kennedy to contact the airline's New York office later in the day (telephone: 212-582-8267).

Carefree David, a Miami tour broker, said it had booked 208 travelers for a two-week tour of Spain that left Aug. 30 from New York.

Agency President Leonard Lansburgh said most of the tourists were from the New York area, two to four from Florida, and some from Canada. A Toronto tour operator said he had booked 26 Canadians on the flight and that six were reported injured.

The crash was Spain's worst since 585 people perished in Tenerife on the Spanish Canary Islands when a Royal Dutch KLM Boeing 747 slammed into a Pan Am 747 taxiing on the runway. The March 27, 1977 crash was aviation's worst.

U.S. carriers temporarily grounded DC-10s for checks on Federal Aviation Administration orders after an American Airlines DC-10 crashed in Chicago on May 25, 1979 after one of its engines ripped away upon takeoff.

WORD OF MOUTH.

The word is out on Sharp's new SF-781 copier. Because, technically, it's one of the most advanced copiers ever developed. You see, the SF-781 has microcomputer-controlled, voice-synthesized, self-diagnostic circuitry.

In other words, it talks. And that's what really has people talking.

If the 781 encounters a copying problem, it tells you so—right out loud, in plain English. In fact, a voice will tell you where to look and what to do to correct the problem. That saves time and frustration. It saves paper wastage, troubleshooting and service calls, too.

Not only can the SF-781 talk, it also offers dual reduction capability. That means you can reduce two different kinds of oversized originals, either 11" x 17" or 8 1/2" x 14", down to standard-sized 8 1/2" x 11" copies. And that makes handling, filing and mailing your copies easier.

What's more, the 781 is available with an optional copy sorter and an automatic document feeder for even greater copying convenience.

If you'd like to see the copier that's becoming the talk of the town, talk to EOS today, and arrange to have a chat with an SF-781.

SHARP'S SF-781 MAY BE THE MOST TALKED ABOUT COPIER EVER.

Norfolk Southern Creating Corridor In Southeast

ROANOKE, Va. (AP) — Norfolk Southern Corp. is creating a railroad corridor from the industrial and agricultural Midwest through the coalfields and Roanoke to North Carolina and South Carolina. As part of its strategy to win business from the trucking industry and other railroads, the railroad is spending some $5.75 million to build a railroad interchange near Altavista, in southern Virginia between Roanoke and Lynchburg. The project will link an east-west line of the Norfolk & Western Railway and a north-south line of the Southern Railway.

Norfolk & Western and Southern merged June 1 to form the Norfolk Southern Corp. Dubbed the "Altavista Gateway," the new rail link is designed to help capture coal and merchandise business for Norfolk Southern on long hauls to and from the Carolinas.

It is one of five important new rail routes railroad officials say were made possible by the merger of the railroads.

Starting in Alabama and Georgia, the other four routes are designed to serve the North and West through Cincinnati, St. Louis and Washington. When N&W and Southern were separate companies, the railroads found it worthwhile to haul freight only if they got a large cut of the shipping revenues. Generally, they weren't interested in hauling freight a short distance on their own lines and then transferring it to another railroad. Competitors of the two lines who benefited from the old system included truck lines and CSX, the large rail network that serves the same regions of the country as Norfolk Southern.

The new routes are designed to attract the long-haul business that has become profitable because of the merger. Because of the merger, shippers can use more direct routes and avoid time-consuming interchanges between railroads.

See Bilking By Oil Companies

WASHINGTON (AP) — An organization of service station dealers is accusing some oil companies of bilking consumers by offering discounts for cash.

The Service Station Dealers of America charged in a filing with the Federal Trade Commission on Monday that the discount programs are really a smokescreen to hide increased gasoline prices.

The discount programs offer consumers lower prices for paying cash. But the complaint from the dealers group charged that gasoline base prices had actually been increased to offset the discount.

Town Clerk Elwood Nobles reported that a tax release for the Ola Gardner property for 1982 and a tax refund for 1981 in the amount of $156.56 had been handled.

The board approved an ad in the Winterville Ruritan birthday calendar for 1982 in the amount of $15.

Nobles also reported that the board approved a $10 returned check charge and also a $10 cut off fee if electricity is turned off due to the bad check.

In further business heard by the board, it was reported that the light poles at the A.G. Cox school baseball field had been removed, in preparation for reinstallation at a new site.

SOUTHERN PINES, N.C. (AP) — Park Newspapers Inc. has announced the purchase of two more newspapers in North Carolina, the News-Outlook and the Moore County News.

Company president Roy H. Park said Monday that the purchase of the Moore County weeklies from Media of Moore Inc. takes effect this Friday.

The News-Outlook circulates more than 18,000 a week to households and businesses in Moore County. The circulation of the Moore County News is nearly 20,000.

Falwell Defends Political Role
WAYNESVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The Rev. Jerry Falwell, founder and president of the Moral Majority, defended his involvement in politics Sunday, comparing himself to the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr.

Falwell said churches and their leaders have previously gotten into the political fray only on the liberal side.

"Did you say the same thing when Dr. Martin Luther King led the civil rights movement?" he asked.

Falwell, who favors voluntary prayer in public schools and opposes abortion, praised Republican Sens. Jesse Helms and John East in his sermon to the 12th Annual Old Time Gospel Singing atop Mount Lynn Lowery.

"I commend Sens. Jesse Helms and John East and others who are fighting the good fight in Congress" to ban abortions, he said.

Rep. Bill Hendon, R-N.C., said he approved of Falwell's use of religion to help shape American political thought.

"The more Christian people like these folks here on the mountain today that we can get involved in the affairs of our government, the better off America's going to be," he said.

Bradshaw Hasn't Lost His Magic Touch

IRVING, Texas (AP) - It was like a rerun of an old movie. Call it the Pittsburgh-Dallas story, starring Terry Bradshaw.

For want of a better title, call it "To Kill A Cowboy."

The Steeler quarterback had been the spoiler for the Cowboys in two Super Bowls during the 1970s plus two other regular-season games.

Bradshaw proved Monday night he hasn't lost his magic touch against the Cowboys by throwing three touchdown passes in a 36-28 victory that stopped Dallas' record of National Football League opening triumphs at 17.

The co-stars were wide receivers Jim Smith and John Stallworth, who terrorized the Dallas secondary, and cornerback Dennis Thurman in particular.

"We have two different styles of play," said Stallworth. "We are a physical team. The Cowboys are geared to finesse. They try to confuse you. We believe that when those two opposing forces clash, the physical team will win."

He also noted that the Cowboys' highly publicized victory streak helped arouse the Steelers.

"We were up for the game, of course. We knew they had that big winning streak ... we had been hearing about THAT all week."

Stallworth bedazzled Thurman, catching 7 passes for 137 yards and one touchdown, an 8-yarder.

Smith caught two scoring passes, including one over Thurman.

"They (the Cowboys) are a great team and we are not," said Bradshaw. "We needed this victory. It was more important to us than it was to them."

Dallas led Pittsburgh 14-13 at halftime but saw the game slip away after rookie Keith Willis blocked Dallas quarterback Danny White's punt in the third quarter.

He had four touchdown passes but the blocked punt and two interceptions killed the team that had never lost a regular season game in Texas Stadium (18 games) with White at quarterback.

Asked whether the Steeler game plan targeted Thurman, Stallworth said, "We don't ever have a game plan aimed at one special guy. We look at tendencies not individuals. It may have looked like we were picking on Thurman but we were not conscious of doing that."

Willis' punt block set up Frank Pollard's one-yard touchdown run and the Steelers jumped ahead 20-14.

"The blocked punt was bad judgment on my part," White said. "I started to run. It was a complete shock to me ... a terrible mistake on my part."

Interceptions by Rick Woods and Jack Ham gave the Steelers 10 more third-period points on a 15-yard touchdown pass to Smith and rookie Gary Anderson's 26-yard field goal.

The former Syracuse star also had field goals of 43 and 40 yards, making Coach Chuck Noll's decision to get rid of Dave Trout look good.

Pittsburgh got Anderson from Buffalo last week.

White completed touchdown passes of 4 yards to Drew Person and 12 yards to Doug Cosbie in the first half to offset Bradshaw's scoring passes of 8 yards to Stallworth and 7 to Smith.

White had scoring shots of 45 yards to Tony Hill and 5 yards to Billy Joe DuPree after the damage had been done in the second half.

Dallas Coach Tom Landry said "I think we beat ourselves ... we've been rated high all summer ... maybe too high."

Tony Drops It

Dallas Cowboys' running back Tony Dorsett (33) scrambles for the ball after fumbling while trying to skirt left end against the Pittsburgh Steelers Monday night in Texas Stadium. In on the play for Pittsburgh is Ron Johnson (29). The Steelers recovered the ball and went on to score the first touchdown of the game as they dropped the Cowboys in the season opener. (AP Laserphoto)

Washington Takes First In Poll; Tar Heels Drop To 11th Place

SEATTLE (AP) - Soft-spoken, gentlemanly Don James has guided the University of Washington to a No. 1 rating in The Associated Press college football poll for the first time in the school's history.

The Huskies replaced Pittsburgh Monday at the top of the poll.

Washington destroyed Texas-El Paso 55-0 in Seattle in its season opener after Pittsburgh launched its campaign by squeaking past North Carolina 7-6.

Pitt and Washington were 1-2 in the preseason and first regular-season polls.

James, 50, who is in his eighth season at the Washington helm, reacted as if he had won some kind of booby prize - in the form of extra pressure he doesn't need at this time.

"It really doesn't mean a lot to me right now," James claimed. The ratings are nice before the season starts but the season has started now. I think our concern should be our game each week. I know my concern is Arizona right now."

Washington will open defense of its Pacific-10 Conference championship against Arizona in Tucson Saturday night. The Wildcats opened the season by beating Oregon State 38-12.

Washington received 28 first-place votes and 1,132 of a possible 1,200 points from a nationwide panel of 60 sports writers and sportscasters. Pitt totaled 16 first-place ballots and 1,078 points.

Last season the Huskies captured their second straight Pac-10 title, beat Iowa in the Rose Bowl, but finished 10th in the final poll.

Pitt Coach Foge Fazio had a reaction similar to that of James.

"It doesn't make any difference," Fazio said. "I never said we were the No. 1 team in the nation. But when the No. 1 team plays No. 5 (North Carolina's ranking last week), it's not supposed to be a blowout by any means. Now that we're No. 2 we've just got to try harder."

Nebraska and Alabama held on to the third and fourth positions. Nebraska received eight first-place votes and 1,073 points for a 42-7 trouncing of Iowa, while Alabama, a 45-7 winner over Georgia Tech, received the remaining six first-place votes and 1,021 points.

North Carolina slipped to 11th, while Florida jumped from 11th to fifth with 886 points in the wake of a 17-9 victory over Southern California. The Trojans fell from 10th to 19th, while Oklahoma fell out of the poll from ninth following a 41-27 upset by West Virginia.

Southern Methodist climbed from eighth to sixth with 872 points by crushing Tulane 51-7 and Georgia slipped from sixth to seventh with 846 points despite a 17-14 triumph over Brigham Young. Penn State, which outlasted Maryland 39-31, fell from seventh to eighth with 769 points.

Arkansas, a 38-0 winner over Tulsa, rose from 13th to ninth with 693 points. Michigan jumped from 12th to 10th with 667 points by downing Wisconsin 20-9.

The second 10 consisted of North Carolina, Ohio State, Arizona State, UCLA, Miami, Clemson, West Virginia, Texas, Southern Cal and Notre Dame.

Last week, it was Florida, Michigan, Arkansas, Ohio State, Arizona State, Clemson, Texas, UCLA, Miami and Notre Dame.

Allison Pads NASCAR Lead

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) - Alabama's Bobby Allison used his weekend victory in the Wrangler 400 at the Richmond, Va., Fairgrounds Raceway to pad his lead in the NASCAR Winston Cup Grand National point standings.

With seven races remaining, Allison holds a 147-point lead over Darrell Waltrip, of Franklin, Tenn., who edged past Terry Labonte of Corpus Christi, Texas, this week for second place. Labonte is 150 points behind Allison.

Allison, whose Sunday victory was his seventh in Winston Cup racing this year, has 3,435 points. Waltrip is second with 3,288 and Labonte is third at 3,285. Seven-time NASCAR Winston Cup champion Richard Petty of Randleman, N.C., is fourth with 2,921 points.

Following him is Harry Gant, with 2,911; Buddy Arrington, 2,892; Dave Marcis, 2,878; Dale Earnhardt, 2,792; Ron Bouchard, 2,719, and Ricky Rudd, 2,664. It was Rudd's first appearance this season in the top 10.

Waltrip still leads the Winston Cup circuit in money-standings with $513,860. Allison is second with $476,080, followed by Petty's $310,750; Earnhardt at $304,605; Labonte with $278,230; Bouchard at $248,425; Jody Ridley at $229,145; Benny Parsons with $224,095; Cale Yarborough at $213,165, and Buddy Baker with $191,495.

Geoff Bodine of Pleasant Garden, N.C., held his lead in the Champion Spark Plug Rookie of the Year point standings with 208. Second is Mark Martin of North Liberty, Ind., with 204 points.

The NASCAR tour now heads for Dover Downs, Del., for Sunday's CRC Chemicals 500.

Overton In New Mark

Greenville's Kristi Overton added another laurel to his growing list this past weekend, breaking the slalom record of 55 1/4 buoys in a meet at Sparta, Va.

The 12-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Parker Overton of Greenville, Kristi skied 57 buoys during the meet to meet the qualifying standard of 56 to compete in the open division.

Kristi is also featured in the September/October edition of The Water Skier, the official publication of the American Water Ski Association. In addition to an article on the young skier, she is also featured in the cover photo.

Vida Blue Hurls One-Hit Win As Kansas City Holds Onto First

By The Associated Press
Vida Blue ignored his own superstitions and continued to write a September song which the Kansas City Royals just might be singing all the way to the playoffs.

The 33-year-old left-hander hurled a one-hitter Monday night to subdue the Seattle Mariners 8-0 and keep the Royals in first place in the American League West. The only hit off Blue was Bobby Brown's two-out single in the sixth.

"I've always had a good September throughout my career," Blue said after winning for the third straight time this month. "September has always been good to me, and hopefully this will be another one."

"I just felt good and I had my rhythm throughout the game. I am a very superstitious fellow and today was the 13th, but I went through my normal routine and felt good." He felt especially good after the Royals scored three times in the third inning, with Willie Aikens highlighting his 4-for-4 night with a home run. And he was thinking no-hitter for a while.

"I was aware of it. I was aware when I walked the first batter (Dave Edler in the third) that I had one. I was still thinking no-hitter but when he (Brown) got a hit, I was still thinking shutout."

He got the shutout and his third career one-hitter, impressing both managers.

"It is fun to watch a guy pitch that way," said Royals Manager Dick Howser. "He had it all. His control, his breaking stuff, it was all there tonight."

"He's pitched three games against us, and we haven't had too much of a smell off him," added Seattle's Rene Lachemann.

Angels 6, White Sox 4
Fred Lynn, reduced to pinch-hitting duty, because of a rib injury, came through for the second time in as many chances in that role. Lynn broke a 4-4 tie with a single that knocked in two runs in the seventh. "Freddie Lynn has taken two swings in two weeks, and won games each time," said Angels Manager Gene Mauch. "I'll tell you, there's not many Freddie Lynns."

"I'm not very good coming off the bench. And I get nervous when I'm pinch hitting, more nervous than usual when I'm at bat," said Lynn. "Pinch hitting is a one-shot deal. You're not up there to walk, you're up there to drive in a run."

Tigers 4, Brewers 3
After Milwaukee's Gorman Thomas hit his AL-leading 35th homer in the top of the 11th, Lance Parrish stole Thomas' thunder, following a walk to Larry Herndon with a two-run blast off Pete Ladd for his 28th home run to win the game for Detroit.

"I had never seen Ladd pitch before," Parrish said. "Sparky (Anderson, Detroit manager) sent Chet Lemon out to tell me that if I saw the steal sign to Larry, I was supposed to treat it like a hit-and-run. I was just trying to make contact. I was just trying to get the bat out and hit it through the hole. You'll notice that it wasn't a particularly hard swing."

Orioles 8, Yankees 7
Baltimore overcame a 6-3 deficit and Dave Winfield's grand slam homer to edge New York and move within two games of Milwaukee. A three-run seventh, capped by Rich Dauer's second sacrifice fly of the night, pushed the Orioles in front to stay.

Pinch-hitter Dan Ford tripled and scored on Cal Ripken Jr.'s single. Gary Roenicke doubled and Rick Dempsey walked to load the bases. Dauer lofted a fly to right, scoring Ripken, and pinch-hitter Benny Ayala singled to drive in Roenicke.

Roy Smalley homered twice for the Yankees. "It's a good feeling to be in a pennant race," Dempsey said. "Things are starting to feel pretty good around here."

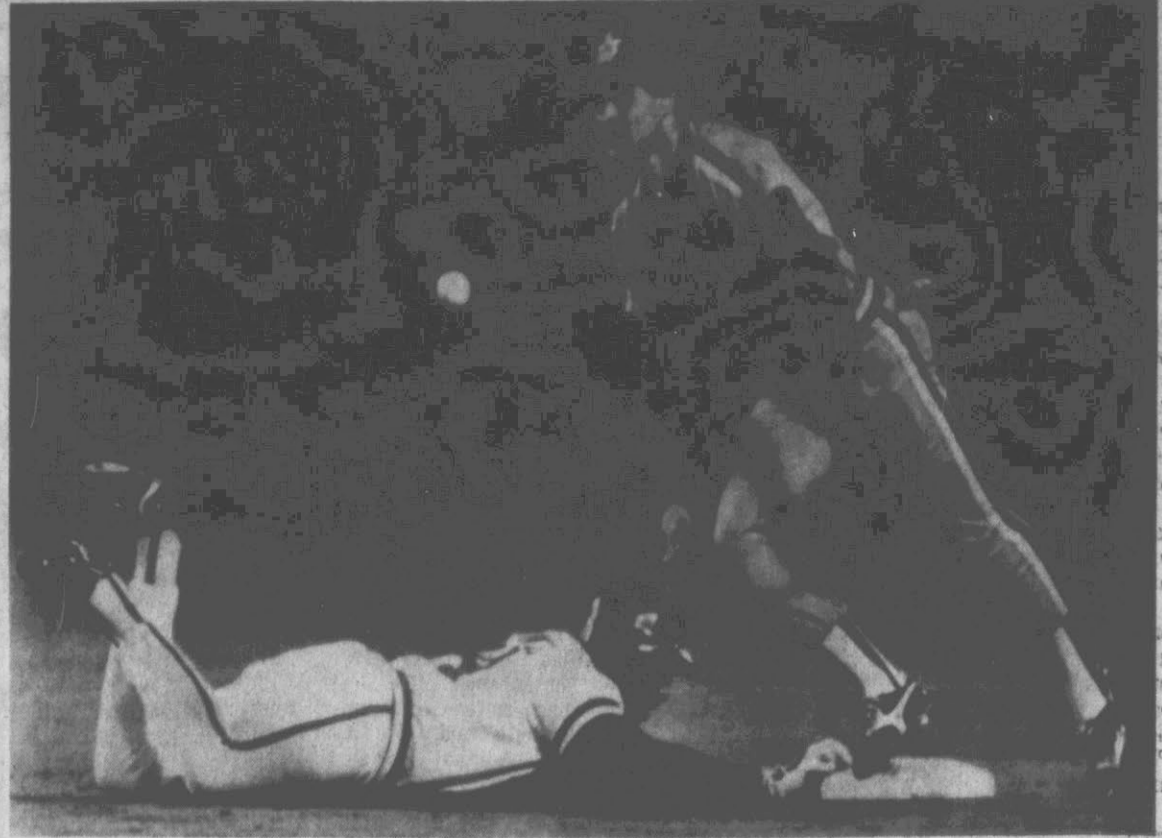

Indians 3-4, Red Sox 1-3
Non-contending Cleveland severely damaged Boston's pennant hopes with the sweep. Ed Whitson tamed the Red Sox for the second time in as many weeks in the opener. Ron Hassey's 11th-inning homer won the nightcap.

Boston blew a golden opportunity to at least tie the game in the bottom of the 11th. Carney Lansford led off with a double and Wade Boggs singled sharply to left, with Lansford holding at third.

Reid Nichols was ordered to attempt a safety squeeze bunt but third base coach Eddie Yost misread the sign from Manager Ralph Houk. Lansford came charging down the line as the bunt was popped to pitcher Tom Brennan, who threw to third, easily doubling Lansford.

"I gave the squeeze sign, but Lansford was supposed to play it safe," said Houk. "The idea was to get Boggs into scoring position so we could win the game. It was not supposed to be a suicide squeeze."

Twins 2, Rangers 0
Al Williams won his fifth game in a row — the longest victory streak for a Minnesota pitcher this season — and Tom Brunansky supplied the power with a two-run homer.

Mental Error
Kansas City Royal first baseman Willie Aikens (left) lies on the ground in disgust after being tagged out as he dived back to second base. Teammate Frank White hit an infield single and Aikens went from first to second, but was caught off the bag as he rounded second by Seattle Mariners' second baseman Julio Cruz (right). Cruz has just flipped the ball back to the mound as out ended the inning. (AP Laserphoto)

In the second game, Hemby and Phillippe each had three for North Lenoir, while Stelena Roundtree served up ten, including nine in a row for Ayden-Griffon.

In the third game, North Lenoir was led by Redmon with five, while Ayden-Griffon's Braxton had five and Rochelle Keys had four.

Now 1-0, the Chargers host D.H. Conley today.

Pack Prepares For Deacons

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Having survived a test of East Carolina's new I-formation, North Carolina State now has to prepare for Wake Forest's aerial circus featuring junior quarterback Gary Schofield.

In their first two victories, N.C. State's defense has yielded 288 passing yards. Schofield has passed for 426 yards in his two contests and Wolfpack Coach Monte Kiffin expects to see more of the same.

"They committed to the passing game when John Mackovic was there," said Kiffin. "The continuity of their offense is very good."

"It's going to be a big challenge for our defense, for both the line and the secondary," he added. "The preparation this week is entirely different."

Kiffin said the Wolfpack is working on improving its passing attack to the caliber of the Demon Deacon game, but added that he's got some work to do before N.C. State starts to fill the air with footballs.

Tol Avery has completed some of that work. Having won the battle of quarterbacks in pre-season, Avery has completed almost 54 percent of his passes for 356 yards and four touchdowns. Two of the scoring passes went to Ricky Wall in the victory over the Pirates.

Conley, Greene, Farmville All Expect To Be In Thick Of Battle

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

Coaches at D.H. Conley, Greene Central and Farmville Central are all looking for their volleyball teams to be among the challengers for their conference title this year.

The volleyball season got started a week ago for area high schools already the Valkyries are off and running, sweeping a pair of matches from the always tough SouthWest Edgecombe Lady Cougars.

Greene Central, meanwhile, split with Greenville Rose. Farmville Central opens the 1982 season today when it plays host to the Eastern North Carolina School for the Deaf.

D.H. Conley coach Martha McCaskill is pleased with the way her team looks. She should be. The Valkyries return four starters and a fifth who saw some starting duty off last year's 19-1 team.

"We've got the potential to be very, very good," McCaskill said. "It's just a matter of meshing together."

The Valkyries won the Coastal Conference title last season and were undefeated before losing to SouthWest Edgecombe in the second round of the state playoffs. Sherri Waters is the lone starter lost from that team.

Four starters full-time return: seniors Darlene Cannon, Jackie Daniels and Amy Gibbs and junior Karen Barrett. A fifth player — Lori Kandrotas — started some last season for McCaskill.

Filling out the starting lineup is sophomore Lisa Mills, who was on the team a year ago but did not start. Mary Mitchell, a senior, may also see some starting duty this year.

"I feel like this year we may be closer as a team," McCaskill said. "I have noticed they are talking more during a game to each other. We need a whole team effort, and we look like maybe we'll be a team."

Along with her seven top players, McCaskill also has six reserves on the team. They are: sophomores Vonda Stokes, Debbie Patrick, Terri Spencer and freshman Darby Fulford, Michelle Waters and Patti Keeter.

McCaskill was pleased with her team's effort against SouthWest. "For a first match we played real well. We were getting our serves in," she said. "It was a grudge match for us and (SouthWest) was up for it, too."

But, McCaskill added: "Our hitting was not like it should be and our blocker coverage needs work. We can work out the rough spots, but it'll take some game experience."

As for the conference, McCaskill feels it may be a two-team race. "I'm sure West Carteret is going to be tough and we have potential. Both of us have good solid programs."

"But," she added, "West Carteret may be the team to beat, so to speak."

If not the Lady Patriots, then the Valkyries. The two teams do not meet until the final match of the season.

Greene Central
Greene Central coach Tim Corbett spent part of the summer reading and studying volleyball. He hopes his off-season work will pay off.

The Lady Rams have three returning starters in their lineup — a lineup Corbett said could be the best team he's had in years.

"This is probably the strongest team I have had since we won the conference championship in 1977," Corbett said. "Our mental awareness is not up to par, but skill-wise we are."

Greene Central lost three starters two graduations: all-conference performers Letha Taylor and Amy Kearney along with Pam Shackelford.

Back this year to try to replace the lost trio are returning starters Cindi Hicks, Alison Battle and Lisa Radford. Two other starters — Anntionnette and Sharon Wilkes — were on the team a year ago but did not start.

The fifth starter is Melodie Bowen, a first-year player. It is a lineup that has only one senior: Radyford.

"This is the best spiking team I've ever had," Corbett said. "I feel more confident than I have in a long time. This year I have a team where in the past I've had a bunch of individuals."

Completing the Greene Central roster are Denise Warren, Stephanie Streeter, Terri Evans and Mary Hill.

Corbett said his off-season studying has already paid off. Said Corbett: "I learned a lot during the summer. I've been able to (teach the girls) how to move on the court better. We're covering the court real well."

A number of areas still need work, however. "Our underhand passing is weak and we still need some of the girls to master the overhead serve. And our blocking is not as far along as we'd like."

Still, the Lady Rams are far enough along that Corbett believes they can be considered a serious threat to win the ECC.

"I think we should be in the top three, if not the top two," Corbett said. "SouthWest is a powerhouse — as always — and Southern Nash should be good. Those two are the teams to beat."

Farmville Central
Three starters — two of whom were all-conference last year — return, but FC coach Mike Terrell said the play of his other three starters could determine how well the Lady Jaguars do this season.

"We've got three girls who played a lot last season and we're looking for them to be a lot of help to the team," Terrell said. "But we're starting two new people and if they can come around we may have a shot for the conference championship."

Back this year for Terrell are senior all-conference players Michell Medin and Lydia Worthington and sophomore Rhoda Harris. Cynthia Hart, a junior who was on the team last year but did not start, will also start.

Terrell's two new players are Wendy Crisp, a transfer, and Christy Cobb, a freshman.

Completing the Farmville roster are: sophomore Regina Mazingo and freshman Tonya Parker, Ronnie Sherkin, Sally Speight and Judy Jones. It is a reserve list that is inexperienced.

"Depth will be a problem," Terrell said.

But, Terrell added, his Lady Jaguars seem to be ready for the upcoming season.

"Our hustle is a strong point. And I'm impressed with our team play at this point," he said. "We have a good concept of what we want we're trying to attempt. It's just going to take some time to succeed."

Terrell said, however, that his team does have a number of areas it needs to work on. "Our serving is not as strong as we'd like," he said, "especially with the new kids."

Still, Terrell feels the Lady Jaguars should be in the chase for the ECC title throughout the season.

"We feel like we'll be in the race," he said, "but we definitely won't be picked to win it."

"SouthWest has the reputation and they're the team, I'd say, to beat. But, I think it will be wide open this year. It seems like all the teams are on the same plateau."

Philadelphia 76ers Find More Roadblocks To Signing Malone

NEW YORK (AP) — The Philadelphia 76ers have hit two more roadblocks in their efforts to add Houston Rocket free agent center Moses Malone to their already star-studded cast.

Special Master Kingman Brewster Monday invalidated one clause of an offer sheet that Malone signed with the 76ers, and also upheld the Rockets' right of first refusal to Malone, the National Basketball Association's Most Valuable player in 1978-79 and 1981-82.

Brewster, after a day-long hearing, took under advisement the contention by the NBA and the Rockets that four other clauses of the offer sheet were illegal because they were designed to prevent Houston from matching the 76ers' contract offer.

On Sept. 2, Malone signed an offer sheet with Philadelphia, calling for a reported $13.2 million over six years. The Rockets received a copy of the offer sheet Sept. 3, and under the Robertson Agreement, had 15 days to match the offer or lose Malone to the Sixers. But after the Rockets contended that five clauses were designed to prevent them from retaining Malone, the 15-day rule was waived and the NBA called for Philadelphia's offer to be examined.

Brewster said he hoped to issue a ruling on the four other clauses by Saturday, or, at the latest, next Monday. The Rockets will then have 24 hours from the time the ruling is issued to match the offer sheet.

Brewster ruled that the Rockets did not have to match an offer-sheet clause calling for Malone to be paid a certain bonus if he did not earn a fixed amount in outside endorsements. He also rejected the contention by Malone and the NBA Players Association that Malone's Houston contract contained a clause that prohibited the transfer of the right of first refusal from one Rocket ownership to another. The Rockets are in the process of being sold by Gavin Maloof to businessman Charles Thomas, a move that has already been approved by the NBA's Board of Governors.

Two other clauses that the league and Houston contended were illegal provided Malone with a bonus if his club did not finish among the top six teams in road attendance, and triggered another bonus if his club did not reach $3 million in gate receipts.

NBA Commissioner Larry O'Brien, who had cited those two clauses as illegal, noted that on past experience the 76ers — one of the league's best road draws — would not have to pay either of those non-attendance bonuses, while Houston would have to pay both. Thus, it would be more costly for the Rockets to sign Malone than it would for the 76ers.

"We are naturally happy my earlier determination that Houston has the right of first refusal was upheld," said O'Brien. "It would be inappropriate for me to comment on any of the additional matters the Special Master has under advisement."

Attending the hearing were 76ers owner Harold Katz, General Manager Pat Williams, assistant general manager John Nash and Coach Billy Cunningham. Maloof and Thomas represented the Rockets. Also present were attorneys representing Malone, the two clubs and the Players Association; Malone did not attend.

Brewster was appointed by the U.S. Federal Court to arbitrate disputes involving the Robertson Agreement; which deals with, among other things, free agents.

Only Seattle Fans Stay Away From The Game

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

If pro football's fans are unhappy with the way the owners and players are acting in what seems to be a headlong rush toward a strike, they haven't shown that displeasure at the turnstiles — with one possible exception.

There were 32,373 no-shows announced by the 14 home teams during the opening weekend of the National Football League season. Last year's total wasn't that much lower, 29,484.

But on Sunday in Seattle, when 55,907 people paid their way into the Kingdom to see the Seahawks, 8,915 paid and stayed away — more than one-quarter of the league-wide no-show total.

Late last week, as the regular season approached, Seattle became the fans' focal point, and very nearly the strike's flash point.

The Seahawks, angered by the waiving of their player representative, Sam McCullum, threatened to strike on their own, rather than wait for the union to send everyone out at once.

Jack Patera, the Seattle coach who insisted McCullum had simply become expendable, has, in the players' eyes, worn the black hat for his hard-line approach to union tactics. While the rest of the league was talking about instituting $100 token fines for solidarity handshakes, for example, Patera was talking about fines worth half a regular-season game check — average fine: $2,700.

It took a special plea by the union's executive board to keep the Seahawks from striking. Patera then laid part of the blame for Seattle's loss to Cleveland on the "distractions" leading up to the game.

It was a distracting pre-season for Patera, who doesn't quite come out of the John McKay-Lou Holtz snappy-patter school. He's as dour and unquotable as they come. Yet he appeared to be trying to get along with everyone in training camp, even putting drinking water on the practice field for the first time after six "dry" years.

Then came the blow-up over the fines. And on the heels of that came a National Labor Relations Board ruling that the fines were illegal — just as the Seahawks were handing out half-price paychecks with fines already deducted.

And finally, the McCullum affair, still unresolved. The union filed unfair labor practice charges over it, and Patera spent most of Monday — well into the night — giving the team's side of the story to an NLRB representative.

Distracting, indeed, perhaps for the fans, too, who had a love affair of sorts with the team for its first four years, but not the past two.

In last year's home opener, when there was no strike talk, Seattle still had 6,241 no-shows, so this year's 8,915 can't be blamed wholly on the labor situation.

And in the general scheme of things, there was no great boycott of games elsewhere this year.

No team came even remotely close to Seattle's number of no-shows. Minnesota's 2,915 in the Metrodome was second, followed by Philadelphia (2,719), Cincinnati (2,639), New York Giants (2,349), Green Bay (1,954), the New York Jets (1,612), Dallas (1,556), Denver (1,539), Baltimore (1,519), Detroit (1,401), San Francisco (1,397), New Orleans (1,221) and Buffalo (637).

The Rams, who had the greater Los Angeles area all to themselves last season, led the way in 1981 with 5,808 no-shows in Anaheim Stadium, followed by Tampa Bay (5,204), the Giants (4,810), Cincinnati (3,192), Atlanta (2,313), Chicago (1,999), Detroit (1,587), Pittsburgh (1,279), Cleveland (1,218), St. Louis (1,076), New England (405), Denver (327), Buffalo (266) and Washington (zero).

Five teams opened the season at home both last year and this. No-shows rose a lot in Denver, a little in Buffalo, stayed pretty much the same in Detroit, dropped a bit in Cincinnati and dropped dramatically at Giants Stadium.

Carlton Turls Shutout At St. Louis

By The Associated Press
The way Steve Carlton was pitching gave Philadelphia Manager Pat Corrales "goose bumps" — and the St. Louis Cardinals goose eggs.

"He just got stronger," Corrales said of Carlton after he pitched the Phillies to a 2-0 victory over the Cardinals with a three-hitter Monday night. "He's the best I've seen. It's amazing too, a man almost 38, pitching like he's 28."

"That's what desire and talent does for you. He prepares himself. He works hard."

With the victory, Carlton not only became the first 20-game winner in the majors this year, but also knocked the Cardinals out of first place in the National League East. The Phillies moved in front by a half-game.

The NL West race also saw a change of leaders, as Los Angeles beat San Diego 4-3 in 16 innings and moved into first place by a half-game over Atlanta, which lost 5-3 to Houston. In other action, Cincinnati edged San Francisco 5-4 in 11 innings and Chicago trimmed Pittsburgh 7-1.

Carlton retired the first 11 batters before giving up a double to Keith Hernandez. The left-hander, who has won the Cy Young Award three times, struck out 12 and walked none as he posted his fifth shutout of the season and 51st of his career.

The Phillies took a 1-0 lead in the first inning on a one-out walk to Gary Matthews followed by Mike Schmidt's run-scoring double. In the fifth, Carlton homered off Bob Forsch, 14-9, to make it 2-0, but it was his pitching — not his hitting — that had the Cardinals talking to themselves.

"It's the best I've seen him this year," said Tommy Herr. "It seemed like he added a foot to his fastball. And his slow curve was tough. He didn't throw the slider much, but he didn't need it."

Phillies catcher Bo Diaz said it was the best game that Carlton pitched this season. "He had everything working. He threw everything hard, curveball, fastball and slider. Everything was around the plate. We made them look for the slider and went fastball away," Diaz said.

Dodgers 4, Padres 3
Steve Garvey slammed a two-out homer in the bottom of the 16th inning to break a 3-3 tie and lift Los Angeles over San Diego.

Jerry Reuss, 16-10, the eighth Los Angeles pitcher, earned the win. Chris Welsh, 8-7, the seventh San Diego pitcher, took the loss.

The game consumed five hours and 20 minutes, the Dodgers using 28 players, the Padres 22.

Joe Lefebvre and Gene Richards accounted for 11 of the Padres' 15 hits with six and five, respectively.

Astros 5, Braves 3
Harry Spilman's two-run triple highlighted a three-run, eighth-inning rally as Houston came back to beat Atlanta and lifted Cincinnati over San Francisco.

Winner Joe Price, 3-3, worked out of two bases-loaded, no-out jams, in the ninth and 10th innings, before the Reds started the winning rally off loser Gary Lavelle, 9-7, with two outs in the 11th.

Paul Householder singled and went to third on a single by pinch-hitter Johnny Bench. Ron Oester was walked intentionally and Cedeño lined his game-winning hit to center. The Giants came back with a run in the bottom of the inning on Chil Davis' sacrifice fly.

Cubs 7, Pirates 3
Jody Davis and Jay Johnstone each hit two-run homers to back the combined six-hit pitching of Allen Ripley and Willie Hernandez as Chicago defeated Pittsburgh.

Ripley, 5-7, gave up five hits in the first seven innings, including a two-run homer to Dale Berra. Hernandez shut down the Pirates over the final two innings to record his 10th save.

Don Robinson, 15-10, was the loser.

"We might have had a little bit of a letdown tonight after beating the Phillies two games out of three," said Pirates Manager Chuck Tanner. "But they just had their hitting shoes on tonight."

Safe At Second

Atlanta Braves' catcher Bruce Benedict (20) slides safely into second base on a steal in the fifth inning of Monday night's game with the Houston Astros. Astro shortstop

Dickie Thon attempts to make the play on Benedict. The Astros won the game, knocking the Braves out of first place in the NL's West. (AP Laserphoto)

Blunk Hopes To Raise Stock Against 'Cocks

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

DURHAM (AP) — Duke tailback Joel Blunk has a much higher opinion of himself than others, but his stock is sure to rise if he has the same type of performance against South Carolina this week that he had in the Blue Devils victory over Tennessee.

Blunk is not listed as the starting tailback for this Saturday's game against undefeated South Carolina, but Coach Red Wilson and the Blue Devil coaching staff have been known to change their minds.

Against the Volunteers, Blunk rushed for 101 yards on 13 carries and a touchdown. All but two of his yards came in the fourth quarter, and in a crucial 95-yard drive which denied Tennessee a chance for victory, Blunk gained 62 yards.

"They all tell me I'm slow and I run into people," says Blunk. "But I'd rather not think that was my style."

Slowed by a groin injury in the spring, Blunk was listed No. 2 behind 178-pound Mike Grayson. Now, he stands a chance to start in just his third game as a collegian and he'd like to carry the momentum of the first victory into Columbia.

"All last week, we heard a lot about the game," he said of the victory in Knoxville. "Hopefully, the excitement will carry over into this week."

After that triumph, the Blue Devil football team toured the World's Fair. Each man wore his Blue Devil shirt to show pride in their achievement as well as confidence that the winning can continue.

"We know we can win," says Blunk. "We'll go down there with a lot of confidence and hopefully we'll have the same results."

There are some problems to be addressed, however. The extra time between games gave Coach Red Wilson and his team "a chance to do some things we needed to get better at doing."

Blunk said those problems are on both sides of the ball and must be corrected if the Blue Devils are to climb to 2-0 and beyond.

Martina Making Big Bucks

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

They handed Martina Navratilova a check for half a million dollars, and the tennis star said thanks, that's very nice.

Then a dignified man in a three-piece business suit opened a jewel box and showed her a gold necklace with three diamond pendants — one for each of the big championships she won on different surfaces during the year.

Fumbling, the benefactor had trouble draping it around her neck.

Martina looked at the pendant and wryly remarked, "You could have kept the check and made the diamonds a little larger."

It was as casual as if she had just opened up a pen and pencil set or a cosmetics kit from under a Christmas tree.

Big money comes easily these days to women adept at hitting tennis balls with board-taut tennis rackets. Women tennis players have become the aristocrats of sports — exceeding the men tennis players and most other professional athletes in yearly prize money.

Mothers, if you want your daughters to be filthy rich and popular, forget about sending them to finishing school. Throw away those brochures on Vassar and Radcliffe. Thumbs down on modeling and ballet. Give them a racket and tell them to go out and hit balls all day against the garage door.

Thanks to Billie Jean King and companies such as Virginia Slims, Avon, Toyota and Playtex, who seem intent on depleting their treasuries by sponsoring pretty girls in ballerina skirts, the women's tennis tour has become an easy access to the mother lode.

Martina's $500,000 check was a present from International Playtex, Inc., for winning just three tournaments — the U.S. Women's Indoors, the Family Circle Cup and Wimbledon. It might have been for a cool $1 million had not Martina been infected with a rare virus — "a cat's disease," she says — and lost a quarterfinal match in the U.S. Open to her doubles partner Pam Shriver.

That single defeat — her second in 71 matches this year — cost her the other half. It's a credit to the integrity of the game that Martina didn't offer Pam $250,000 to blow the match. It's happened in other sports with less a temptation.

With the check, which will be broken down into payments of $50,000 a year for 10 years, Martina becomes the all-time money winning leader in tennis, male or female.

"It's been a long, hard journey — you've come a long way, baby," said Dr. Julie Anthony, director of the $1 million Playtex Challenge, offering that staggering figure to any woman who can win four tournaments on four specified surfaces — hard court, clay, grass and cement in a single season. "At last, we've not only equalled the men but passed them in prize money potential."

Martina's 1982 take in prize money alone amounts to $1,107,005 and boosts her career earnings to $4.8 million. Both she and Chris Evert Lloyd, whose $90,000 first prize in the U.S. Open raises her career total $4 million, have surpassed the top male, Jimmy Connors, at $3.9 million; John McEnroe, Ivan Lendl and Guillermo Vilas.

Even with the strides that the women's golf tour has made, with the promotion of Jan Stephenson, Muffin Spencer-Devlin, Kathy Young and Cathy Reynolds as sex symbols, there is still a wide discrepancy in available prize money.

JoAnne Carner leads the LPGA money-winning list with $291,609, about one-fourth of Martina's 1982 cache, and she, along with Kathy Whitworth and Donna Capani are the sport's lone millionaires. Tennis produces millionaires in clusters, Tracy Austin reaching that plateau while still in her teens. All the tennis gals should put a percentage of their purses into a pot and turn it over to Billie Jean King, who for two decades battled and staged sitdown strikes for equal prize money.

Playtex, in presenting the check to Martina, announced that its $1 million Challenge Cup would become a yearly event, starting with the U.S. Indoor in Philadelphia two weeks hence, then continuing with the Family Circle on clay at Hilton Head, S.C., in April, Wimbledon on grass and the U.S. Open on rubberized asphalt.

"I feel I can play top competitive tennis until I am 40," said Martina. "This should make a nice annuity."

American Broadcasters Running Out Of Available TV Channels

By NORMAN BLACK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — American broadcasters are running out of television channels on which to build new commercial stations.

A report by the Federal Communications Commission shows that in the nation's 100 largest cities, there are now only 43 commercial UHF channels out of 349 allocated that remain vacant and unapplied for.

Since the 269 VHF channels allocated to those 100 cities are already in use or have applications pending, the statistics indicate that regular broadcasting in the country's most populous areas is approaching its limit.

BUNDY AT MEETING
State Rep. Sam D. Bundy of Farmville will attend a meeting of the State Board of Awards in Raleigh Friday.

In fact, the statistics show the broadcast industry has for the first time passed the 90 percent mark in terms of using available channels in the largest cities. With only 43 of the total 618 channels allocated to the 100 largest markets vacant, the industry

Burton Appears In 'The Fall Guy'

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Richard Burton is full of surprises, one of which is a guest star role in "The Fall Guy" TV series already completed for the fall season with long-time pal Lee Majors, star of the series.

Burton also will make an appearance on the first Bob Hope TV special of the year with his former wife and sometimes lover Elizabeth Taylor.

Taylor and Burton will do a comedy turn with "Old Ski Nose" on Hope's October special which will feature several other top movie stars.

is now using or has applied to use 93 percent of them.

Although it may be possible to allocate some additional channels to those 100 cities, the number is thought to be quite small for various technical reasons. The FCC's report shows room has been found for only eight new UHF channels over the past year.

The FCC's report, entitled "Television Channel Utilization," is produced semi-annually. The latest figures were released Monday and cover the six-month period ending June 30.

In the previous review for the period ending Dec. 31, 1981, the FCC counted 49 vacant UHF commercial channels out of the 344 that had been allocated up to that point.

VHF, or very high frequency, stations broadcast on channels 2 through 13. Such stations have always been more attractive than UHF, or ultra high frequency stations, which for the most part operate on channels 14-69. Reception of a VHF station is normally easier on most TV sets and VHF stations require much less power to transmit a strong signal.

But the latest FCC report shows that UHF channels are increasingly being viewed as an attractive means to enter broadcasting.

FCC officials have previously speculated the interest is being fueled by the fact that cable TV systems guarantee clear reception, and because UHF stations can be used to establish pay TV outlets.

FLOWERS FROM SINATRA — Frank Sinatra distributes flowers to the audience near the edge of the stage at New York's Carnegie Hall Monday night in New York City after giving a charity concert for the World Mercy Fund, which provides medical, educational and technical assistance to Third World nations in West Africa. Auditions Scheduled

ECU News Bureau
Auditions for children and adults to fill roles in "Step On A Crack" will take place Thursday and Friday at East Carolina University. The play will be produced under the auspices of the East Carolina Youth Playhouse, with Douglas Ray directing.

Auditions on both days will begin at 7:30 p.m. and will be held in Room 206 of the Messick Theater Arts Center.

A play about a modern child, her fantasies and new stepmother, "Step on a Crack" has six characters — two young girls about ten years old, a young man, a woman about 20, and a mother and father in their mid-thirties.

The play is scheduled for production in the Messick Center's Studio Theater at 9:30 a.m. on Nov. 11 and 12 and again at 2:15 p.m. on Nov. 13 and 14.

Copies of the script are on reserve at Joyner Library on the ECU campus. Interested persons in the campus and local communities are invited to audition for roles.

With the establishment of East Carolina Youth Playhouse, ECU's drama program resumes its production of children's plays, which were a popular attraction throughout eastern North Carolina several decades ago.

'Lou Grant' Ends Series With Typical Episode For A Finale

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The Los Angeles Tribune has folded, and this newspaper's demise is a national loss. The city editor was Lou Grant.

"Lou Grant" was put out of work earlier this year because of low ratings and, according to some, the political activism of star Ed Asner. It ended its five-year run on CBS Monday night. Although "Lou Grant" could get preachy, the topics it tackled both in the journalism world and outside were substantial: age discrimination, Vietnam stress syndrome, drunken driving, the right of privacy, to mention a few.

The final episode was typical. Managing editor Charlie Hume was faced with an alcoholic staffer, reporter Billie Newman's conflict between career and family, and assistant city editor Art Donovan's fears that his girlfriend was pregnant and keeping the news from him.

It was a day-in-the-life story that allowed actor Mason Adams to illustrate that a good man can have a wart or two. He lost his patience. He sent the alcoholic into early retirement, only to be overruled by the publisher.

Although it wasn't planned that way, the final episode was a testament to how this well-constructed program realistically examined people's feelings and lives.

It also showed that the star doesn't have to own the franchise on good lines and insights. The final episode of "Lou Grant" wasn't a showcase for Lou Grant, but for "Lou Grant."

Monday night's episode was not a rerun. It was produced before CBS shocked the television community by canceling the Emmy-winning program. The show's three top executives — Allan Burns, executive consultant; Gene Reynolds, executive producer, and Seth Freeman, producer — said in a letter:

"When this show was shot we had no idea it would be our final episode, so there are no bands playing at the end and our cast does not go marching off into the sunset hand-in-hand."

So now we are left with the image of Lou Grant sitting at his desk with his tie pulled down and the sleeves of his shirt rolled up.

We are also left with memories of the rivalry and interplay between the sensitive Billie Newman (Linda Kelsey) and the aggressive Joe Rossi (Robert Walden), of the courage of publisher Margaret Pynchon (Nancy Marchand).

Next Monday, CBS rushes onto the air its movie about the courtship and marriage of Prince Charles and Lady Diana Spencer.

The following week, Lou Grant's timeslot is turned over to "Cagney and Lacey," a cop show.

A colleague once remarked "Lou Grant" was not real because Rossi once brought a slew of dimes to a pay phone to call in his story. Reporters, he said, always call collect.

But that missed the point. "Lou Grant" was not only a show about a newspaper; it was a show about people, current events and universal concerns that just happened to take place in a newsroom.

It's a television hole that will be tough to fill.

Golden Leaf In A Documentary

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS News examines the "The Golden Leaf" in a documentary today exploring the tobacco lobby's influence in smoke-filled rooms.

Bill Kurtis is the correspondent for the CBS Report, a well-rounded examination of the political and economic aspects of tobacco.

The rationale for the report is a contradiction in government policy: The 1962 Surgeon General's report called cigarette smoking "the chief preventable cause of death in our society." Yet the government will spend $200 million this year to buy the tobacco cigarette companies don't.

"This report is not about whether smoking is dangerous to your health. Most people are aware there are hazards," says Kurtis. "But whether you smoke or not, the politics of smoking affects all of us."

At stake, says Kurtis, is a $60 billion industry. Economics, the viewer is told, underscores the tobacco debate.

"Tobacco is a striking example of what the free enterprise system is all about," says Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C. "It's the No. 1 cash crop in North Carolina and it goes 'whoosh.'"

Helms personifies the mix between economic interest and political pull inherent in the tobacco issue.

He's chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee and a confidant of President Reagan. He helped raise $4.5 million for Reagan's election.

When tougher cigarette label warnings were proposed in Congress this year, the Reagan administration first supported them, then backed off.

Kurtis asks Helms if he called the president to change his mind. No, the senator says, he didn't make a specific call.

But he adds: "It would be senseless for me to pretend to you that I don't discuss with him at every available opportunity the interest of my people in North Carolina."

Politicians understand the logrolling of smoke-filled rooms, but critics of the government's tobacco policy say the ordinary rules shouldn't apply here.

Sen. Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., compares tobacco subsidies to a theoretical program to underwrite opium production. "We're supporting good old mom and pop out there, in their opium patch," he says.

"Every administration has been torn politically," said Michael Pertschuk, commissioner of the Federal Trade Commission. "Each administration, in turn, has been paralyzed by the conflict coming from the health authorities on the one hand and politics and economics on the other."

Kurtis concludes his report by citing government figures showing that smoking-related health problems cost Americans $13 billion a year, and that smoking results in $25 billion in lost production and wages each year.

"If the politics of smoking comes down to a matter of dollars and cents, no one can deny that Americans are paying a heavy price," he says.

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 15, 1982

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
 from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day when you need to use tact and diplomacy in dealing with others since there is unusual sensitivity in the air. As the day progresses you'll find conditions improving.

- ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Attend to those duties ahead of you without delay and don't ask others for help. Not a good day to ask for advice.
- TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Don't take advantage of the rights of others today or you could meet with stiff opposition. Maintain your poise.
- GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Anything of a civic nature needs to be handled carefully at this time. Be sure you handle credit matters wisely.
- MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You may feel you want to delve into new projects that appear inviting, but it's better to wait for a better day.
- LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Don't overlook obligations you must meet today. Loved one may be moody, so keep your distance. Cooperate more with others.
- VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Pay close attention to the wishes of others today, particularly where your associates are concerned. Strive for success.
- LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Take more time to engage in duties that could add to your income. Rely more on yourself than others at this time.
- SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Be cheerful, even though those around you may be stern. Don't spend too lavishly on amusements now.
- SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) An outside affair should await a better time before you go ahead with it. Establish more harmony with family ties.
- CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Recheck a routine matter today and avoid a costly mistake. Being critical of an associate is unwise at this time.
- AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Not a good day for delving into money matters since your judgment is not up to par. Be more helpful to others.
- PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Be positive in any business dealings today for best results. Avoid a group affair. Follow your hunches which are accurate now.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will have a knack for getting in trouble, so teach ways to solve problems instead of creating them, and then this becomes a successful chart. There is musical talent here. Don't neglect ethical training.

FOCUS

Citizen Lawmakers

Today voters in 13 states will cast ballots for elected officials. But they will also express opinions on everything from a nuclear freeze to return deposits for soft drink containers. Thirty-five referenda and initiatives will be decided this election year. Many experts believe this is the greatest wave of direct voter participation in lawmaking since the 1930s. Voters have used referenda and initiatives to vote directly on laws since 1902. The results of local referenda or initiatives, used in 23 states, can have profound national effects. Passage of California's Proposition 13 prompted citizens in several other states to vote for tax reform.

DO YOU KNOW — What type of direct vote can remove an elected official from office?
MONDAY'S ANSWER — About 80 percent of all adolescents have acne.

Speaking of Your Health...
 Lester L. Coleman, M.D.
No Cause to Fear Anesthesia

Can a hernia be safely removed in an elderly man? My father is 70 years old and is in good health. He was told that the hernia he has been carrying around for many years should now be operated on.

A few months ago there was a television program about anesthesia. We recalled this terrifying program when my father was told about an operation. — Mr. R.D., N.J.
 Dear Mr. D.:
 I, too, was one of the people who saw that poorly conceived television program. Anyone who witnessed it has a right to be terrified and put into a panic by the poor judgment of those who created this so-called educational show. The function of all education in medicine should be the alleviation of fear and anxiety along with concrete evidence of the hope that lies within the framework of modern medicine.

Not so with this program that obviously exploited information and used it without regard to the sensitive psyches of those who were witnessing it. It is sad when a group of people without thorough medical direction use prime time to destroy the equanimity of viewers. It is accepted that all surgery and all anesthesia carry with it a risk. But then, sending a child to school every day is a risk. Riding a bus or an automobile to work is a risk. Playing tennis, golf or riding a bike carries with it some, though minimal, risk. Every daily activity must carry with it some potential possibility of accident.

As a matter of assurance, let it be said that today's anesthesia is far less risky than is crossing a street on a crowded thoroughfare. Patients with normal hearts, lungs and kidneys are given anesthesia with unbelievable degrees of safety. New techniques keep the patient under the direct control of the anesthesiologist and thus reduce possible dangers to a minimum. While an operation is in progress, the heart and lungs are constantly monitored. Blood gases are studied in patients who need special attention. Dozens of safety devices support the patient and minimize the risk of the operation. If your father was thought to be an unusual risk, undoubtedly the surgeon would have suggested that the operation be done under local anesthesia. I am certain that he must have considered this before suggesting a general anesthesia. Anesthesia at the age of 70 hardly presents much added risk. Certainly that risk is much less than the possibility that a complication will arise from a neglected hernia. New surgical techniques now markedly reduce the length of time of surgery. The speed of the operation coupled with the safety of anesthesia makes convalescence a short one. When the operation is over, the threat of any complication of the hernia is removed once and for all.

SPEAKING OF YOUR HEALTH... One of the greatest gifts that can be given to young children is to avoid overindulgence. Their greatest sense of security stems from the reasonable but firm limits that are established for them.

Twelve States And D.C. Holding Primaries Today

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

Threats to the political careers of the governor of Massachusetts and three senior members of Congress, along with a statewide nuclear freeze referendum, commanded attention today as 12 states and the District of Columbia held primary elections.

With endorsements from the state Democratic Party convention and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, former Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis hoped to turn the tables on Gov. Edward King, the conservative Democrat who upset Dukakis in a primary four years ago.

Dukakis led by more than 20 points in opinion polls early in the race, but by election day the contest was rated a tossup.

Other incumbents facing tough fights from within their own parties were Sens. Robert Stafford, R-Vt., and Howard Cannon, D-Nev., and Rep. Clem Zablocki, D-Wis.

Stewart Ledbetter, one of two conservatives challeng-

Raleigh Woman Slashed In Car

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A 21-year-old Raleigh woman was in critical condition Monday after she was slashed by a knife-wielding attacker near North Carolina State University, police said.

Police Capt. Robbie Carroll said Wendy Lee Kearney was attacked while sitting in a car.

State Rep. J. Allan Adams, who lives nearby, said he noticed a man staggering around the car and then entering it around 1 a.m. Adams said he thought about driving around the block and checking the car again, but decided the man was probably headed home from a neighborhood bar.

ing Stafford, has tried to make junkets an issue with radio commercials that say, "You are more likely to find our senator in Mexico, Switzerland, Tahiti or Singapore" than in Washington. Also challenging Stafford was John McClaughry, a former White House aide.

The threat to Cannon came from Rep. Jim Santini, 45, who has held the state's only congressional seat he was elected in 1974. Santini describes Cannon, a veteran of 24 years in the Senate, as part of the "good old boy" network in Congress that has pushed the nation to "the brink of a national economic disaster."

Cannon has countered by describing Santini as a pawn of "big oil" and as one of the conservative Democrats who have sided with President Reagan and the Republicans on most economic issues.

Zablocki's 42-year-old Democratic primary opponent, Lynn Adelman, was only 8 years old when the congressman was first elected in 1948. Zablocki, the 69-year-old chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, never before has had a strong challenge in his heavily Democratic District.

A liberal state senator, Adelman has questioned Zablocki's support of President Reagan's 1981 tax cut bill and his vote in favor of selling AWACS radar planes to Saudi Arabia.

The primary winner is assured of victory in November since no Republican has filed to run in the district.

Attracting attention far beyond the state's borders was the nuclear freeze referendum on the Wisconsin ballot.

Voters were asked to decide whether the state should "inform the president and Congress of the United States that it is the desire of the people of Wisconsin to have the government of the United States work vigorously to negotiate a mutual nuclear weapons moratorium and reduction, with appropriate verification, with the Soviet Union and other nations."

After some internal debate, the Reagan administration decided against taking a position on the Wisconsin referendum, claiming the ballot wording is unclear on whether the proposal is for a freeze or a weapons reduction.

The vote was the first statewide test of sentiment on the nuclear freeze. Eight other states — Arizona, California, Michigan, Montana, New Jersey, North Dakota, Oregon and Rhode Island — will have nuclear freeze resolutions on their ballots Nov. 2.

In addition to today's primaries in Massachusetts, Vermont, Nevada and Wisconsin, balloting was taking place in Colorado, Maryland, Minnesota, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Utah, Washington and Wyoming.

Of the 44 members of the House seeking renomination, only 14 had opponents. In seven other congressional districts, no incumbent was running.

Nominees for governor were being chosen in Colorado, Maryland, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Nevada, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Vermont, Wisconsin and Wyoming.

Senate candidates were being chosen in Maryland, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Nevada, Rhode Island, Utah, Vermont, Washington, Wisconsin and Wyoming.

In the District of Columbia, former Carter Cabinet member Patricia Roberts Harris was running for mayor of the nation's capital against the incumbent, Marion Barry. Barry was favored to turn back the challenge and go on to win a second four-year term.

In Minnesota, two men in the twilight of their political careers, were trying comebacks.

Former Sen. Eugene McCarthy, who attracted a legion of youthful followers in a futile run for the 1968 Democratic presidential nomination, was running against Mark Dayton for the Democratic nomination to challenge Republican Sen. David Durenberger. McCarthy was a Minnesota senator for 12 years before retiring in 1970.

Harold Stassen was 31 years old when he was elected governor of Minnesota in 1938 and promptly was dubbed the "boy wonder" of American politics. He's 75 now and back on the ballot — trying once again for the Republican nomination for governor. But he was not considered a factor in a close contest between Lt. Gov. Lou Wangberg and Wheelock Whitney.

Battling for the Democratic nomination for governor were former Attorney General Warren Spannaus, who was backed by the state party establishment including former Vice President Walter F. Mondale, and former Gov. Rudy Perpich, who was defeated in 1978 by Republican Albert Quie. Quie did not seek re-election.

Will Receive

Peace Prize

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three former U.S. officials who promoted the principle of "no-first-use" of nuclear weapons have been named winners of the Albert Einstein Foundation's annual international peace prize.

The award, announced Monday, will be presented Oct. 7 to Robert S. McNamara, McGeorge Bundy and Gerard C. Smith, who urged that the United States and its allies in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization pledge not to be the first to use nuclear weapons in a conventional war in Europe.

The recommendation came last spring in an article in Foreign Affairs magazine, co-authored by the three prize recipients and George F. Kennan, a retired U.S. diplomat. The Reagan administration rejects the concept as limiting U.S. strategic options.

The proposal is not new, but the support of McNamara, Bundy and Smith was seen to give it greater prestige.

McNamara was secretary of defense and Bundy was national security assistant under the late presidents John F. Kennedy and Lyndon B. Johnson. Smith was the chief negotiator of the 1972 strategic arms limitation treaty under then-President Richard M. Nixon.
