Protest Marchers Again On Road Despite Arrests

By AL BOYCE
Associated Press Writer
AFTON, N.C. (AP) — About 45 people began marching this morning from Coley Springs Baptist Church toward a possible repeat of Wednesday's confrontation with police over a toxic waste dump site.
Eight people raised their hands when asked if they were willing to be arrested and were placed at the front of the line.
A police blockade of nine state patrol cars was set up less than a mile away, but police did not interfere as the marchers passed through. Another police blockade awaited the marchers at the dump site about 2½ miles away.
Leading the march was former Wilmington 10 member Ben Chavis, who said he had just arrived from New York to take part in demonstrations against the dump.
"This is going to be a protracted struggle," he said, as the marchers prepared to depart for the dump site.
"The state is committing violence against the citizens of Warren County," said Chavis, who was the last member of the Wilmington 10 to be paroled for his conviction in the 1971 firebombing of a white-owned grocery store in Wilmington — arrests they say were racially motivated.
"We don't intend to let Gov. Jim Hunt commit another atrocity against the citizens, especially the poor and black citizens of this state."
Also taking part in the march was Frank W. Ballance Jr., a Democratic candidate for the state House in the newly created 7th District, which includes part of Warren County. He faces no Republican opposition in the November election.
Chavis met today with Floyd McKissick, a member of the Warren County Citizens Concerned About PCBs, to map a strategy for continuing their protests.

Joyce Lubbers, secretary for the citizens group, said turnout today was far less than the more estimated 150 people who turned out for Wednesday's protest which resulted in 55 arrests.
"It's a token protest. We have people who need to hold down jobs," she said.
Authorities had three prison buses again on hand today, but Mrs. Lubbers said only about a dozen people planned to march today and probably would not risk arrest.
McKissick said the group decided on protests because attempts to stop the landfill in the courts were stymied. He said once the chemicals are dumped, "You will not be able to change or alter the damage. The danger is upon the children."
Warren County residents and sympathizers have strongly opposed the state's decision to store there soil removed from 210 miles of North Carolina roadways, where oil laced with the polychlorinated biphenyls was dumped illegally in 1978. The critics claim Warren County was chosen because it is rural, poor and predominantly black.
State officials deny that, saying the site was selected after an exhaustive search. They insist the landfill is safe and will be closely monitored.
About 50 people were expected to rally at noon today in the Warren County Courthouse in support of the Rev. Leon White, who was among those arrested Wednesday. He refused to make bail, saying he would remain in jail until the dumping ceases.
In addition to Chavis, others expected to be on hand today included the Rev. James Orange of the Amalgamated Clothing and Textile Workers Union and either the Rev. Fred Taylor or the Rev. Dr. Joseph Lowery of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, Ms. Lubbers said.
Orange planned to contact Coretta Scott King, wife of the late Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., Atlanta Mayor Andrew Young, and Congressman Walter Fauntleroy of Washington to ask them to come, Ms. Lubbers said.
The 55 people arrested Wednesday were charged with impeding traffic or trespassing as more than 100 protesters sat in front of dump trucks on the road leading to the dumpsite.
State Highway Patrol troopers removed the demonstrators and the trucks unloaded their cargo. Russ Edmonston, spokesman for the North Carolina Department of Crime Control and Public Safety, said the dumping would continue as scheduled.

SUPPORT GROUP?
My husband died of cancer a short time ago and I'm left feeling very much alone. I have children who've done all they can to help me feel better, but I'd like to find some other women who know how I feel by having had the same experience.

There are two groups active in Greenville now that could well answer your needs. There is a Support Group for Widowed Persons that is attended by both women and men who've experienced the death of a spouse recently or long in the past. For more information about this group which meets on designated Sunday evenings call Sister Happy Shondell at the Catholic Newman Center, 752-4216. This organization was started within the Catholic Church, but is now participated in by people of many different faiths. Religious preference is no issue at all, Sister Happy said.

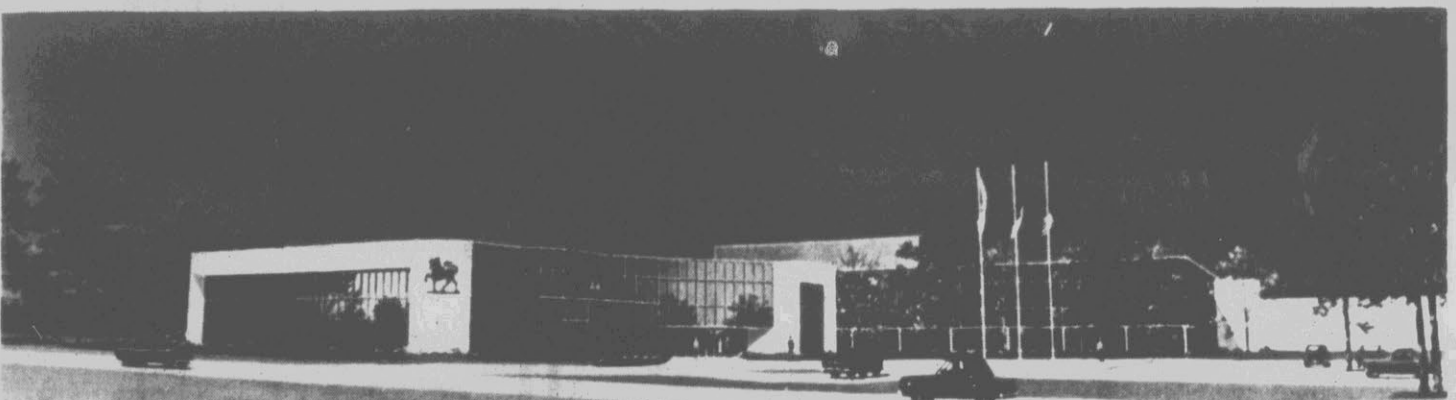

There is also a support group for persons who have lost relatives or close friends to cancer. This group is sponsored by Hospice of East Carolina and meet on designated weekdays. Call Beverly Burnette, Hospice director of volunteers, 758-4622.

Break Ground For New B-W Office Building

Groundbreaking ceremonies Wednesday launched the construction of a new 36,000-square-foot office building at Burroughs Wellcome Co. here.
The pharmaceutical firm said it is expanding the Greenville manufacturing facilities to relieve what it termed a severe shortage of office space and to provide for some expansion.
The new structure, which will be designed and built by Daniel Construction Co., is expected to be completed within a year, according to Burroughs Wellcome.
Local officials taking part in breaking ground for the new building were Mayor Percy Cox and Burney Tucker, chairman of the Pitt County Board of County Commissioners.
Dr. Gabriel Cipau, vice president for production and engineering, turned the first soil on the building project with the same shovel that was used to break ground for the Greenville plant in 1969 when the company moved to

North Carolina from Tuckahoe, N.Y.
Also representing Burroughs Wellcome were Greenville general manager John McConney, director of corporate engineering George Hill, and project architect Jerry Bienes.

On hand from Daniel Construction Co. were J.Z. Robinette Jr., director of industrial development; Sam C. Sarratt, vice president for engineer; Robert G. McCleskey, engineering design manager, and Charles P. Moran, project manager.

Israeli And Leftist Militiamen In Fight

By FAROUK NASSAR
Associated Press Writer
BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Under cover of mock jet raids, Israeli tanks and troops battled leftist militiamen for control of west Beirut today, and by mid-afternoon fighting died down to occasional cannon and rifle fire.
Christian radio stations said leftist militiamen had agreeing to stop fighting, but leftist radio stations said resistance would continue unabated against the Israelis.
Earlier reports incorrectly said the radio of the Mourabitoun, the largest militia of Lebanese Moslem leftists, announced the leftists had agreed not to confront the Israelis.
Israel announced it controlled "all key points" in west Beirut and Lebanese Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan called for urgent U.S. help to end what he called Israel's conquest of the war-shattered city.
The Israelis began their push into former PLO strongholds of west Beirut early Wednesday, hours after the assassination of President-elect Bashir Gemayel. They said they launched the drive to keep leftist militiamen from teaming up with Palestinian guerrillas still in the city and launching a new wave of bloodshed.

They met resistance from leftists firing automatic rifles and rocket-propelled grenades, but the Tel Aviv command said today that its forces had fought their way past the leftists and guerrillas, whom they termed "terrorists," and controlled "all key points."
The communique called on "citizens to return to normal activities and on all terrorists and other armed persons to lay down their arms. All refugee camps in which terrorists were concentrated remain surrounded and closed."
The radio station of Gemayel's rightist Phalange Party reported an agreement by the leftists not to fight.
The report said representatives of the Mourabitoun and the Communist and Socialist Parties walked out of a meeting at which Israeli officers had "demanded" an end to the resistance. But the report added that the leftists then met among themselves and agreed to stop fighting.
Lebanon state radio said Israeli forces had seized control of all strategic areas along the five-mile stretch of beaches surrounding west Beirut before closing in on the two shopping districts of Hamra and Corniche Mazraa.

Announce Semifinalists For Nat'l Merit Scholarships

Seven Pitt County seniors — three from the county schools, two from Rose High, and a Rose High student and a county student now attending the North Carolina School of Science and Math in Durham — have qualified as semifinalists in the 1983 Merit Scholarship competition.
Announcement of the selections was made today by the National Merit Scholarship Corp. in Evanston, Ill.
They are among about 15,000 high school seniors nationally who now become competitors for the 5,000 Merit Scholarships to be awarded in the spring of 1983. They represent the top half of 1 percent of each state's high school senior class.
Each year about 1,500 American seniors are offered one-time National Merit Scholarships of $1,000 and 3,500 are offered renewable Merit Scholarships worth between $1,000 and $8,000 each over a period of four years of undergraduate study.
The two selected as semifinalists from Rose High are William Earl Owens Jr. and Lisa Lynn Wang.

She is also a member of the East Carolina Chinese School. She attended Governors School and the Honors Science Seminars at East Carolina University. Her major interests are playing the piano, traveling and writing.
The Rose High student in attendance at the N.C. School of Science and Math is Hih Song Kim, daughter of Mrs. Jeng Ja Kim and the late Yoon Hough Kim. (Detailed information on school, club, and other activities are not available).
Students from Pitt County schools selected as semifinalists are:
• Judson Joyner of North Pitt High School, son of the Rev. and Mrs. Norman H. Joyner of Bethel. He is president of the Math Club, vice president of the Science

Belt, Scarves And Knickers Are Fashionable

A typical Indian summer day provided the proper setting for the annual fall fashion show and luncheon sponsored by the ladies of the Greenville Country Club Wednesday.

Special emphasis on the local fashion scene for the approaching fall and winter season are a variety of belts and scarves in plaids and solids. Some of the belts are accented with a knotted front while the scarves are big, with the fold worn over one shoulder. Suspenders and knickers were also of interest.

Some of the jackets and blazers modeled had special shoulder accents — most of them were worn shorter and some had no collars. Leg-of-mutton sleeves and "tuxedo look" blouses were also shown. The "basic black, go anywhere" dress is back on the fashion scene. Skirt interests is a softer and fuller look.

The length of fur jackets is 26 or 28 inches and with a drawstring waistline. Beaver, fox, mink and lamb jackets were modeled.

Fashion fabrics included ultra suede, challis, suede, corduroy, silk, wool, knit and polyester. Colors in addition to prints and plaids were plum, teal blue, heather gray, navy blue and green, raspberry, blueberry, lilac, chocolate brown, pastel rose, purple and white.

Models showed fashions from Brody's and Brody's For Men, Golden Gull, Susan's, Bond's, Country Club Golf Shop, J.D. Dawson's, Dottie Lou's, Smokey Fox, C.H. Forbes, Virginia Crabtree, Coffman's, Annie's Brides Beautiful, College Shop, Hertzberg Furs, Belk Tyler and Certain Things.

Gerta Nishan, Sherry Tripp, Sharon Parker, Marge Parrish, Susan Roberts and Lois Brown

The fashion show narrator was Francine Sawyer, anchor announcer for WCTI television. Background piano music was presented by Camille Hite. Co-chairpersons for the event were Mrs. Scoopmire and Mrs. Blanton. Shirley Holec, president of the ladies of the country club, gave the welcome.

Ratchet-Jaw CB'er Is Too Loud, Clear

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My problem is a neighbor with a home-based CB radio. He talks with people along the Gulf Coast and in Canada. He is on his CB some mornings, all afternoon and most nights. He loves the theme from "The Lone Ranger" and plays it often. How do I know? Because it comes over my television set!

I watch TV for my own entertainment, not to hear this man. Don't get me wrong, he's an upstanding citizen with a charming wife and family, but my set isn't the only one that his CB interferes with. Almost everyone in the neighborhood knows when he's on because we hear everything he says.

Many of my favorite TV shows have been interrupted, which frustrates me no end. What a man does in his own home is his own business, but when it comes into my home, it becomes my business.

What should I do?

TIRED OF "15-4" IN CHARLESTON, S.C.

DEAR TIRED: If you haven't already complained directly to your neighbor, you should. If you have, but to no avail, either call or write to your local Federal Communications Commission office and ask someone there to please send you the booklet, "How to Identify and Resolve Radio-TV Interference Problems." The booklet offers tips on how to correct this interference. (Perhaps your set is at fault.)

If the problem persists, write to: The F.C.C., 1919 M Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20554.

DEAR ABBY: This isn't exactly an earthshaking problem, but it's one I'm sure many people have had to wrestle with. Friends keep giving me gifts — little knickknacks that should be displayed. I love these people and don't want to offend them, but my house is beginning to look like an arts and crafts shop. There is also the problem of having to keep them dusted. Add that to the fact that I have a small apartment and dislike clutter.

Is it necessary for me to keep all these gifts on display indefinitely? My wee apartment already looks like I'm ready to hold an auction.

ENOUGH ALREADY IN PALM BEACH

DEAR ENOUGH: Accept each gift graciously, display it for a while, then put it away. Your surroundings should please you.

DEAR ABBY: I asked one of my closest friends to be my bridesmaid, and she immediately said, "No, I can't afford the dress." A week passed, and I called and told her I would pay for the dress. Then she hemmed and hawed and asked, "Are you really going to have a formal church wedding?" I said, "Yes, of course."

Then she asked, "Won't you feel hypocritical having a wedding like that after living with your fiance openly for two years?"

I told her, no, I would not feel hypocritical. Then she came right out and said she couldn't be my bridesmaid because she didn't think I deserved to have a church wedding with a gown and veil and bridesmaids.

I felt hurt, angry and shocked that she would sit in judgment of me. (She is not exactly a saint herself, if you know what I mean.)

Should I invite this girl to my wedding?

BRIDE

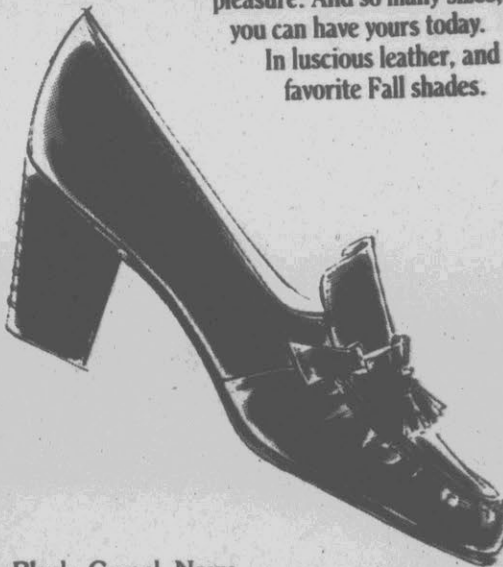

DEAR BRIDE: A bride usually invites friends and relatives to her wedding. This young woman doesn't seem to qualify in either category.

1½ cups whole wheat (graham) flour

1 teaspoon baking soda

1 teaspoon salt

¾ cup finely chopped pitted prunes

½ cup molasses

1 tablespoon butter, melted

1½ cups buttermilk

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I was watching a TV starlet (who shall remain nameless) on a talk show the other afternoon and when the host asked her how she had lost all her weight she said, "I ate less".

I dropped everything and ran for a pencil and paper to take down what she ate.

When I got back the host was saying, "How does it work?" She said, "I just eat less food than my body can burn up."

I could have screamed. What kind of advice is that? Does she think Americans are stupid? We've known that for years. What we really want to hear is how we can lose weight and still eat everything and as much of it as we always did. I want someone to tell me what I can have from list A and list B. I want to measure food that I hate on scales and suffer. I want to feel disgust and guilt when I put sugar on my grapefruit. I want a diet that is so dramatic and you lose weight so fast, you have to put a belt on your underwear.

Five out of five Americans go on a diet every Monday. You know why? Because everyone respects a dieter. Dieting books have outsold sex manuals for the last decade. And of 200 million Americans, there is not one who admits to being a perfect weight.

Dieters are the modern-day heroes and heroines. And why shouldn't they be? They staple their ears, wire their mouths shut, go to overweight camps, overpriced spas, take pills and candies to curb appetites, take tucks in their tummies and undergo hypnosis.

They hook their vacuum sweeper bags to silicone jump suits, knead their cellulite, wrap themselves in chamois soaked in herbs, drink water until their liver floats and change fruits every 15 minutes and dance.

To eat less? It's unnatural. Besides, eating sensibly would only tarnish the memory of those sainted people who starved courageously with Drs. Stillman, Pritkin and Atkins and stopped off at those calorie-starved cities of Scarsdale, Beverly Hills and New York.

I stared at the TV screen and said out loud, "You don't know nothin' 'bout dieters, Miss Starlet. They exist on technology. They want to believe the ads about a pill that turns fat into water and flushes it out of your body by the gallon. They want to believe the stories that say, 'Yes, Virginia, there is a starch burner that allows you to eat pasta until you faint.'"

"Eat less! Maybe if you could list something that we could mimeograph and pass around the office... it might fly."

Death Is Disastrous

Once again violence has changed the course of history in the Middle East.

A bomb was exploded at the headquarters of Lebanese President-elect Beshir Gemayel, demolishing the building and killing the young leader only days before he was to assume office.

While Gemayel was not well-known to Americans, it appears now that he was the best hope of establishing a strong Lebanese government, and one which would maintain friendly relations with the United States.

There was obvious dismay in Washington that the president-elect had been assassinated and the future of Lebanon once again thrown in doubt. Gemayel had campaigned on the platform of a "strong and united Lebanon." He expected to see all foreign armies removed from Lebanon and the nation in charge of its own affairs. With the PLO decimated, this appeared to be the best time in years for this to occur.

What will happen now is sheer guesswork. Syrian troops may well remain in Lebanon and Israel's forces are not likely to withdraw until there is assurance of a strong government. The PLO could regenerate in the north.

Perhaps a new leader will be chosen who will seize the initiative and unite the war-torn nation. What happens in Lebanon will greatly affect the Middle East and there is cause for concern about United States' interest there.

There can be no doubt that the death of Beshir Gemayel is a major setback in the efforts to develop a strong Lebanon, free of foreign troops. It also creates new dangers in the Middle East and thus for the entire world.

A Storybook Life Is Ended

There are few who have fulfilled the fantasies of an admiring public as Grace Kelly did.

The actress who became a princess died following an automobile accident in Monaco this week.

She was loved as an actress on the American screen. Then she met Prince Rainier and ended her acting career to become a princess.

It all ended for her at age 52 after the car she was driving crashed off a mountain road in France.

Even though she had not made a film in many years, Princess Grace was never out of the public eye, or the hearts of her fans. She will be remembered.

Connecticut Brazil Nuts

RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP) — According to a recent study by some clinical psychologists, the citizens of Rio de Janeiro, the Cariocas, are surely and not slowly going bonkers — off their collective rockers.

It should come as no surprise. We know from "Charley's Aunt," that durable farce, that Brazil is "where the nuts come from." Carmen Miranda may have set the psychic norm for the Cariocas by cha-cha-cha-ing about with an exposed navel and a fruit cocktail on her head, except that she was born Maria Da Cunha Miranda Da Cunha in Portugal, which is where a lot of the Brazilians originated before they went west and lost their grasp on reality.

A scholarly paper, "Who's Cracking Up in Rio de Janeiro," caused the politicians to go ape when presented at the annual meeting of the Brazilian Society for the Progress of Science. It was the work of a team of four researchers led by Dr. Paulo Sergio Silva Lima, professor of clinical psychology at the Catholic University in Rio.

The study concluded that people of Rio were rushing off to analysts' couches "in a psychoanalysis explosion" brought about by political repression, economic hardships and a disruption of traditional Rio lifestyles by moving the nation's capital to the inland city of Brasilia.

"Psychoanalysis has become a Rio fashion," Lima told an Associated Press reporter who came calling after the bombshell study exploded at the usually unexciting scientific convention. "The rich sought private analysts and then spread the phenomenon by sending their mentally distraught employees — and even their maids — to group therapy sessions at public psychiatric clinics."

The doctor's wife, Maria Anita Lima, also a professor of clinical psychology at Catholic University, reported that the Cariocas had "a unique Rio way of cracking up. Rio turned into a big beach resort. The only way people could satisfactorily express themselves without getting into political trouble or bringing on even more anxiety was to concentrate on the cult of their own bodies — diets, suntans and bikinis."

I wish this husband and wife team of clinical psychologists and their colleagues would pay a visit to our little town of Ridgefield, Conn. (Pop. 17,000) and the surrounding communities.

Many of the same symptoms are present here, although the causes may be different. Political apathy, rather than repression, is the abnormal norm around here. True, the economy has gone to pot, and the locals get a bit hysterical about plans to move the post office, which is not psychic trauma on a par with moving the capital, but it does put the folk in the white coats on a butterfly net alert.

Sanity is definitely on the wane hereabouts, and the cult of the body is on the upswing. Joggers through our highways and byways. The supermarket aisles are jammed with bronzed Amazons in tennis tutus. The bulletin board at my parish church lists aerobic dancing as well as Bible readings and the schedule of ushers and altarboys. Diet books fill the bookstore window. Bikinis regrettably are in short supply on our town beaches, but Main Street in the vicinity of the library is a voyeur's feast of short shorts, designer jeans, backless sundresses and skin tight riding jodhpurs. Go-go dancers have returned to the local entertainment scene, and girls softball is our leading spectator sport.

Other municipal aberrations are manifest and worthy of clinical study. It is difficult to strike up a conversation with anyone around here, because those who are not already talking to themselves are in a catatonic state in front of the television set. Cable TV has turned the craving into a compulsion.

Teen-agers take out their aggressions against parents and teachers by beating on neighbors' mailboxes with dream of yachts again, which brokers thought had sailed beyond the horizon of their hopes. And, as if anybody need be reminded, it takes time to spend that money.

It is understandable then, relatively speaking, why you can hear a penny drop on Wall Street of late. On the first day of trading this week volume totaled only 59.5 million shares, compared with the record of 137 million.

The International Monetary Fund meeting in Toronto made a bid to take up the slack, but monetary abstractions such as the decline in value of the Mexican peso lack the specific meaning of a $5 jump in the price of a stock.

Besides, the news from Toronto was very discouraging, and people have had their share of bad news — unemployment, high interest rates, inflation, the inability of people to buy a new home or even an automobile for that matter.

But the tough reality of the times is that the discussions

A Long Road To Normalcy

By KATE DORIAN
BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Supermarkets are replenishing their stocks, two beach clubs have reopened, diplomats are returning to their embassies, and former militiamen, stripped of their uniforms, roam the streets looking for jobs.

But Beirut remains violent, and its hopes of reconstruction precarious.

On Tuesday, a bomb exploded in an east Beirut office building used by President-elect Bashir Gemayel's Christian Phalange Party. Gemayel — at first reported to have walked away unscathed — died of his injuries. Eight of his supporters also died.

Gemayel had hoped to reassert the Lebanese government's authority in a nation torn by feuds among its own citizens and battered by the armies of Israel, Syria and the Palestine Liberation Organization.

West Beirut, the last redoubt of the PLO before Israel forced its dispersal around the Arab world, is heavily scarred.

Uncollected garbage burns in piles on many street corners, broken sewage lines make dark rivers flowing through shell-pocked roads. The rubble of bombed-out buildings is particularly visible in southern parts of the city where the Palestine Liberation Organization was concentrated.

The newly rebuilt Lebanese army is now in control of most of the city for the first time since the 1975 civil war that cut Beirut into Moslem and Christian sectors, destroying the heart of the capital in the process.

The deployment of Lebanese army regulars in west Beirut areas previously controlled by Palestinian guerrillas and their Lebanese leftist allies brought cheers from war weary citizens.

On Sunday the army put down the first serious resistance to its authority. Three people, including one soldier, were killed and 44 wounded in the battle with leftist militia.

Shops have reopened in west Beirut — the main target of Israel's summer blockades and bombs — and most have sale signs pasted on their windows as shopkeepers try to clear old stock to make way for new.

American and West German diplomats who fled to east Beirut during the fighting began returning Monday to their west Beirut embassies.

Mohammed Atallah, chairman of the presidential council of development and reconstruction, estimated that 25 percent of buildings in Beirut have been damaged as a result of Israel's concentrated air, sea and artillery bombardment. But municipal officials say they will not have an accurate assessment until they can move into areas still controlled by the Israelis.

Shafik Sardouk, a city official, estimated this week that it would take two or three months to clear the rubble, remove the garbage and restore public utilities.

Electricity is still rationed and power cuts have been scheduled for the next two weeks while broken lines are repaired.

Some restaurants have reopened, but the streets of the city are eerily empty by night. The water supply is still unpredictable.

Atallah has estimated that total reconstruction costs could cost as much as $12 billion.

"We are not talking about development now but simply reconstruction," he said in a local magazine interview earlier this week.

"If the Lebanese government meets 25 percent of total costs, as under the old understanding, we are therefore looking for $9 billion in Arab and international aid," he added. Of the $2 billion pledged to Lebanon by participants to the 1979 Arab summit, only $381 million had been paid.

The Beirut cleaning project has been delayed first because of a lack of money and second because munitions experts have yet to complete the mammoth task of clearing unexploded bombs and other ordnance from the city's streets and lots.

The economy has suffered extensively. The port of Beirut, a major source of revenue, was reopened to maritime traffic Monday after a three-month shutdown. The facility, once a haven for snipers, has been losing an average of $200,000 a day.

Officials estimated that 200,000 to 400,000 Lebanese workers fled the country in the past seven years to work abroad. Few have returned.

In one of its first acts, the government ordered the destruction of hundreds of corrugated iron shacks erected along the oceanfront and popular thoroughfares by shopkeepers who lost their downtown shops when the area became a battlefield in 1975.

The $1.5 billion national budget is suffering from a $334 million deficit. Inflation is estimated at 30 percent. In seven years the industrial sector has lost 25 percent of its productivity resulting in a loss of $15-$20 billion, according to Fuad Abi Saleh, president of the local industrialists association.

Many factories have been destroyed. Others have just closed.

Banks are slowly returning to business after a three-month paralysis. Khatir Chebli, who represented Lebanon at the International Monetary Fund meeting in Toronto, says bank deposits have risen to $9.5 billion, up from last year's figure of $8 billion.

One sector of the economy — hashish growing — is thriving. A record harvest was recorded this year in the fertile eastern Bekaa Valley, although it recently has been the target of repeated Israeli air strikes against Syrian anti-aircraft missile batteries stationed among the hashish fields.

School Solutions

By PAUL T. O'CONNOR
RALEIGH — For the past three years, education leaders in the state have been clamoring for money for school construction and renovation. Citing a 1979 study by the state Department of Public Instruction, they say as much as $600 million is needed to put North Carolina school children in proper classrooms.

The educators have some convincing arguments when they point to the facts about the state's schools. Thirty percent of the schools were built before 1949. Another 30 percent were built during the baby boom of the 1950s when the crush of new students forced the construction of cheap temporary facilities that have just about used up their life expectancies now. Many other schools must rely on trailers for some classes.

Few of the older schools are energy efficient and many lack adequate facilities for the handicapped. Maintenance, transportation and warehousing facilities are also inadequate.

Some educators advocate increasing the sales tax by a penny to raise school construction money. There's also been talk of a $600 million school bond issue. So far, Gov. Jim Hunt has not addressed the problem. But early in the summer he formed a special committee to look into financing for capital improvements. Buildings are the responsibility of school districts but the state has a history of helping through bonds. Hunt's committee held its first meeting in early September.

Hunt didn't say so during the meeting but, with the exception of more money for roads, he's dead set against any tax increase during his final two years. He told the committee he wants them to investigate all the possibilities for financing school construction but if they come back with the suggestion to raise taxes, it doesn't appear it will fly with Hunt. It would seem the political climate is wrong for bonds, also. Interest rates are too high and a 1983 water and sewer bond vote is already scheduled.

Board of Education Chairman Dick Spangler got right to the point — the committee should find alternatives to bonds and tax increases. "In the last 18 months, I have seen some

Other Editors Say Aging America

(Ahoskie News-Herald)

Dr. Robert N. Butler, who has recently left the post of director of the National Institute on Aging, warns that the nation is ill-prepared for the problems that loom when "the baby boom grows gray". That's the generation born between 1946 and 1964. It forms a huge blip on the population curve and by the year 2020 will comprise more than a fifth of all Americans.

Yet despite that coming demographic tilt, Butler sees no concerted national effort to assure that older citizens remain healthy and productive as long as possible. Medical education in this country all but ignores geriatrics. Butler, in fact, is leaving the institute he has headed since its inception in 1977 to head the first department of geriatrics at an American medical school — Mount Sinai School of Medicine in New York. He points out that medical research on the problems of aging has been virtually non-existent and that, until his agency intervened, various government-funded disease studies largely failed to include the over-65 population. This, despite the fact that this group suffers the most illness.

Butler also points to instances of conflicting and ill-conceived policies everywhere pertaining to the economics and sociology of aging. For example, the idea of raising the Social Security retirement age to 68 overlooks the fact that because of life-prolonging measures there are more disabled people in that and older age groups. Government proposals to raise the health insurance premiums of older workers conflict with other policies seeking to keep older people on the job longer — the higher premiums will cause companies to hire or retain fewer older workers.

Butler is a psychiatrist widely regarded as one of the nation's most distinguished experts on aging, in both psychological and physical disciplines. His departure from the National Institute on Aging is a distinct loss to the nation, but his advice will continue and is clearly worth heeding. The administration should give the matter of the appointment of a successor to this able man the most serious attention.

Strength For Today

CREATION IN SORROW

By strange paradox the famous Italian composer, Verdi, writer of the sprightly operas Il Travatore and Rigioletto, lived a very sorrow-filled life. He suffered from ill-health and within a period of three months lost his wife and both of his children. Yet in the midst of his sorrow, Verdi kept writing and some of his finest work was turned out in the years following this catastrophe.

In the latter years of his life he turned increasingly to religious music. His tragic life had not destroyed his faith but instead deepened it.

"Blessed are they that mourn", said Jesus, "for they shall be comforted" — that is, if the heart that mourns is a Christian heart, sustained and strengthened by eternal hope. And blessed are they who, under the shadow of grief and disappointment, compose songs of praise to the Most High. — Elisha Douglass

Wall St. Taking A 'Time Out'

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — Things are quiet again down on "the street," Wall Street and LaSalle and State and Montgomery and all those other streets where brokers buy and sell the shares of American industry for whatever price they can get.

It was probably time for a breather anyway, since the 16-day, 148-point gain in the Dow Jones industrial average into early September added more than $100 billion to the value of shares on the New York Stock Exchange.

To be specific, at the end of August the value of all Big Board shares was $1,106,000,000 — that's one trillion, 106 billion — or $113 billion more than the $993 billion value of shares at the end of July.

It takes time to count that kind of money, and time too to add up the many million dollars in commissions — a figure hard to estimate now that commissions are negotiated rather than fixed.

It also takes a while to dream of yachts again, which brokers thought had sailed beyond the horizon of their hopes. And, as if anybody need be reminded, it takes time to spend that money.

It is understandable then, relatively speaking, why you can hear a penny drop on Wall Street of late. On the first day of trading this week volume totaled only 59.5 million shares, compared with the record of 137 million.

The International Monetary Fund meeting in Toronto made a bid to take up the slack, but monetary abstractions such as the decline in value of the Mexican peso lack the specific meaning of a $5 jump in the price of a stock.

Besides, the news from Toronto was very discouraging, and people have had their share of bad news — unemployment, high interest rates, inflation, the inability of people to buy a new home or even an automobile for that matter.

But the tough reality of the times is that the discussions in Toronto probably has more to do with the plight of local economies than did the situation on Wall Street.

In Toronto they dealt with a world monetary situation that looks more and more like a nightmare, in that some of the borrowing nations simply cannot repay their loans and in some cases even the interest on them.

There are some bankers and others who seek to convince the world that the danger of this situation is exaggerated, and that the problems can be resolved simply by renegotiating loans as they become due or overdue.

The fallacy in this "financing is forever" argument is that good money can be sent after bad, with the borrowing nation becoming less able to repay because of its low credit rating and high interest rates.

Moreover, it is sometimes argued, domestic and foreign borrowers who could profitably develop their resources and add value to their economies are denied use of these funds. And what funds they can borrow, almost certainly come at higher interest rates, or else the law of supply and demand has been revoked.

On the other hand, very few of the billions of dollars in added values on Wall Street in the past month have directly benefited American industry, since a company raises money by selling new stock, not by the trading of it.

Indirectly, there is a benefit. When investors score in the stock market, it is said, they lose some of their insecurities. Their new sense of financial freedom, consumer psychologists claim, often results in a free-spending mood.

So far, Wall Street's enthusiasm and sense of well-being has not overflowed onto Main Street. Retail sales fell in August, after having risen in July. And now some forecasters are saying that a consumer-led recovery has been delayed.

Could it be, perhaps, that monetary worries have greater influence than Wall Street enthusiasm?

The San Francisco team of Ron von der Porten, Kyle Larsen, Peter Pender, Hugh Ross, Chip Martel and Lew Stansby won the Grand National Team Championship at the Summer North American Championships in Albuquerque, N.M., in July. In doing so, they became the first team to qualify for the trials to select the U.S. team for the 1984 World Team Olympiad.

Von der Porten, South, liked his hand's playing potential enough to overcall two diamonds even though the quality of the suit left something to be desired. East interjected a club bid as a lead director. Since South knew from his partner's cuebid that he would find good trumps in the North hand, he persevered with five diamonds.

The opening lead left the club situation unclear. East won the ace of clubs and shifted to the king of hearts. Declarer ruffed and, since East was a favorite to hold the king of diamonds, he continued with a trump to the ace. Next came three rounds of spades, and when everyone followed, the stage was set for an end play. Declarer simply exited with a trump, not really caring who won the king.

East was on lead with the king of diamonds, and he was about to solve declarer's problems in the club suit. If he returned a club, marking him with that suit, declarer would have finessed the jack and then shed his last club on the thirteenth spade. As it was, East was down to nothing but hearts. When he performed a heart, declarer discarded a club from hand while ruffing in dummy, then took a discard of the jack of clubs on the thirteenth spade.

In the other room, the Detroit team took a phantom sacrifice at six diamonds doubled. San Francisco gained 14 International Match Points on the hand and went on to win the final by a score of 160-94 IMPs.

companies come up with financing plans that I'd never, never seen before." The committee is made up of legislators, educators and some very important businessmen.

So up stood Bill Kennedy, chairman of the board of N.C. Mutual Life. His company had just bought an Ohio office building the previous day and he asked if the committee should investigate the leasing of schools from investment companies. By changing a few federal and state laws, private investors could build schools and then lease them under long-term arrangements to local school districts.

Kennedy said the investors would want to be able to get into the project with a minimal downpayment and they'd want the rental income to be tax free. But by leasing, the state would be relieved of the burden of large capital outlays. Kennedy conceded later that the legal changes needed for his idea would be very difficult to get passed because they would cost both the state and federal government lost tax revenues at a time when budgets are very tight.

Duke Power & Light President Bill Lee cautioned the committee that there are many ways to stretch out the payments on school buildings. Leasing, he said, is one. But we're always going to need schools and in 20 years we'll face another round of demands for school facilities. It would be foolish, he said, to face the new school demands of the 21st century while still carrying the debts of schools built for the 1980s.

19-year-old baby sitter already accused of killing two of five infants who died under her care has been charged with the murder of a third baby.

Christine Falling was indicted Wednesday by a Taylor County grand jury in the death of 8-month-old Jennifer Daniels, the fourth child to die in Miss Falling's care since February 1980.

The indictment was made public after an arrest warrant was served on the baby sitter. Miss Falling already was in custody in Blountstown, 100 miles to the northwest, in the deaths of two children there. Jennifer died in Miss Falling's arms in Perry in July 1981. Jennifer's mother, Geneva Burnette, is related by marriage to Miss Falling, a junior high school dropout.

Grand jury proceedings are secret under Florida law. But among witnesses listed on the minutes of the proceedings were Ms. Burnette, Calhoun County Sheriff W.G. "Buddy" Smith and Miss Falling's sister, Carol Phillips.

The first four deaths of Miss Falling's charges were attributed to natural causes. But after the fifth child died, authorities reopened investigations of the deaths. Miss Falling was arrested July 22 in Blountstown on warrants charging her with murdering 2-month-old Travis Coleman, who died July 3, and 2-year-old Cassidy "Muffin" Johnson, who died in February 1980. Suffocation was ruled the cause of death in both cases.

She has pleaded innocent and trial is scheduled for Nov. 8 in Blountstown. Jacksonville Medical Examiner Bonifacio Floro ruled Jennifer's death was caused by Sudden Infant Death Syndrome, but has refused to release the autopsy report.

Smoking Legislation Probably Dead For '82, Say Observers

By The Associated Press
Legislation that would intensify the government's effort to warn of the dangers of cigarette smoking probably won't pass this year, foes and proponents of the measures say.

They say this week's failure of two key congressional committees to assemble enough members to discuss the bills dims chance of final passage before Congress goes home in early October.

"I would say (the chances) are pretty remote that they could come up on the Senate floor at this late date," said Sen. John East, R-N.C., who like other tobacco-state members of Congress has vigorously opposed the measures.

"We're not too optimistic," said Scott Ballin, a legislative analyst for the American Heart Association who has been lobbying for the bills. "But we're still pushing for it."

The bills, one introduced by Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif., the other by Sens. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., and Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, both call for stepped up federal efforts to educate people on what the sponsors called the proven hazards of smoking.

Among their most controversial provisions is a requirement that cigarette companies print new, more specific warning labels for their products and that different labels be rotated on packages and in advertising to keep the warnings from growing stale.

Such legislation is a sensitive economic issue in North Carolina, where last year farmers harvested 753 million pounds of tobacco, worth $1.3 billion, making it the state's No. 1 cash crop.

The bills were initially viewed as a threat to the tobacco industry both because of their sponsors — Packwood and Hatch both chair powerful Senate committees, and Waxman chairs a key House health subcommittee — and because of the highly critical surgeon general's report on smoking issued last February.

That report, the first completely written by the Reagan administration, called cigarette smoking "the major single cause of cancer mortality in the United States."

The administration endorsed Waxman's bill March 11 in a highly publicized hearing, making prospects for passage appear bright.

But March 15, under intense pressure from tobacco-state members of Congress, the Reagan administration withdrew its hearty endorsement.

The Senate bill also came under attack in Packwood's Commerce Committee from tobacco supporters, who said the proposals were unnecessary, unfair and unproven.

By late summer, Hatch had removed the rotation label scheme from the Senate bill, leaving only requirements that the federal government step up educational programs about smoking, and that cigarette companies reveal what they add to their products.

But even this stripped down version has failed to pass Hatch's Labor and Human Resources Committee. At one meeting last month, East managed to forestall a final vote. A second August meeting was canceled for lack of members.

The rescheduled meeting was supposed to occur Wednesday, but again, too few members showed up.

"Trying to get a quorum is always difficult late in a session," said Ed Darrell, a Hatch spokesman. "If we can get a quorum there, we can get it out. But that's a very big if."

Waxman's House subcommittee has scheduled three meetings this week on his bill.

Two were canceled because members were still out of town campaigning, and Wednesday's meeting was scrubbed when the full Energy and Commerce Committee met to work on the Clean Air Act.

"This is just another delay in our favor," said Jack Mills, a lobbyist for the Tobacco Institute.

Bulldozer Cuts Phone Service

KERNERSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Telephone service between Winston-Salem and parts of Kernersville was interrupted Wednesday after a bulldozer damaged a cable that handles most of the calls between the two cities.

Robert W. Scoggin, a Southern Bell spokesman, said the accident occurred on Mountain Street in Kernersville and that he believed it occurred when a construction crew was grading land for a road.

Scoggin said that a repair crew expected to have the cable repaired and service restored by midnight.

Senate Blocks Anti-Abortion Effort

By MIKE SHANAHAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a setback for the New Right, the Senate has closed off efforts by conservative Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., to push anti-abortion legislation through the Congress this year.

After two weeks of tense debate and procedural struggle, the Senate voted 47-46 on Wednesday to set aside an anti-abortion package drafted by Helms and bitterly resisted by a small group of liberals.

"We just weren't going to get rolled on this issue which was supposedly so popular," said Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., a liberal Helms opponent. "We weren't going to get snowed under by a moral crusade."

The defeat of the abortion measure came despite a last-minute lobbying effort by President Reagan, and threats by anti-abortion groups to work for the defeat of those who voted against them.

Senate liberals won apparently by making clever use of rules on filibusters, thus blocking a direct yes or no vote on Helms anti-abortion measures.

On his third try on Wednesday, Helms was able to get only within 10 votes of the necessary 60 votes to limit the abortion debate. Helms has also introduced legislation designed to restore prayer in public schools, which was still before the Senate today. But in the wake of their victory, liberals said they would fight that measure as tenaciously as they did the abortion measure.

Both the prayer and abortion proposals were attached to a federal debt limit bill that must be approved by Oct. 1, or the government will be without authority to borrow enough money to pay its bills.

Despite Reagan's appeal for help, 16 Republican senators joined 31 Democrats in agreeing to table or set aside the Helms abortion proposal.

They included such conservative Republicans as John Tower of Texas, Ted Stevens of Alaska, Malcolm Wallop of Wyoming, and William Roth of Delaware.

Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., the leader of the liberal filibuster, said abortion is an issue on which most senators have already made up their minds so they were unlikely to change their minds even if the president of the United States asked them to.

For 1982, Packwood said, "The abortion debate is finished as far as the Constitution is concerned."

The Helms amendment included a congressional finding that the Supreme Court was mistaken in 1973 when it legalized most abortions. There was also a provision to facilitate a quick Supreme Court review of any anti-abortion legislation enacted by a state legislature.

It also would have permanently prohibited all direct and indirect funding of abortions, including research and the training of medical students in abortion procedure.

Senate leaders also agreed to shelve a second anti-abortion measure for the year, a constitutional amendment proposed by Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, which would have permitted Congress or the state legislatures to regulate or ban abortions.

Majority Leader Howard Baker of Tennessee agreed Wednesday to place a constitutional amendment on abortion before the Senate sometime next spring.

Hatch said one reason why any anti-abortion legislation failed to get through the Senate this year was deep divisions within the organizations urging an end to the 1.5 million abortions performed in the United States each year.

"I think there have been some divisive problems outside the Senate," Hatch said. "There has been some infighting that has really been unbecoming."

Some anti-abortion groups supported Helms' approach on anti-abortion legislation. Others, including the U.S. Catholic Conference, wanted to change the Constitution even though an amendment requires two-thirds votes in the House and Senate, plus ratification by three-fifths of the state legislatures.

Report Rudolf Hess Suffering Pleurisy

Lions Plan 'Candy Day'

BERLIN (AP) — Rudolf Hess, the 88-year-old former deputy of Adolf Hitler, is suffering from pleurisy, British military authorities said today.

A brief statement approved by all four World War II powers governing the former German capital said Hess was examined at a military hospital on Wednesday and then returned to Spandau prison, where he is the only prisoner. He was said to be "responding" to treatment.

On April 6, 1981, Hess was hospitalized for a check-up and doctors then diagnosed a slight attack of pneumonia. He later recovered and was returned to Spandau three weeks later.

In Munich, Hess' wife Ilse told reporters that military authorities had not yet informed her about the nature of her husband's illness. But her son Wolf-Ruediger had flown to Berlin because of the seriousness of the situation and sought permission to visit his father.

Sources in West Berlin said military authorities had turned down the visit.

A British spokesman, asked for more detail on Hess' illness, explained that the text of the statement was agreed upon by all four

World War II victor powers, the United States, the Soviet Union, Britain and France, who take monthly turns in guarding the prison in Spandau's Wilhelmstrasse.

Hess is the only inmate. A Nuremberg war crimes tribunal had sentenced him to life in prison on October 1, 1946. He entered Spandau in July 1947.

Human rights groups and allied leaders have frequently appealed for his release, but the Soviet Union has vetoed all efforts to free him.

Hess was Hitler's No. 2 man in Nazi Germany until 1941, when he flew to Britain carrying what he claimed was an offer of peace with the British. He was imprisoned after parachuting from his stolen Messerschmitt plane over Scotland.

The Greenville Host Lions Club, Greenville Martinborough Lions Club, and Greenville Breakfast Lions Club will conduct their annual "Candy Day" drive Friday and Saturday.

During the campaign, members from the two clubs will be stationed at various high-traffic areas throughout the city to accept contributions.

Funds raised support the programs relating to the blind and visually handicapped in Pitt County and in North Carolina. In addition to purchasing glasses, helping to pay for eye examinations and operations and assisting families of the blind and visually handicapped, local Lions Clubs and the North Carolina Lions Association support the North Carolina Eye and Human Tissue Bank in Winston-Salem. The center serves as a clearing house for all eye wills and requests for eyes and other human organs needed for transplant operations.

Each year donations help to send one or more Pitt County blind residents to Camp Dogwood, a camp and vacation resort for the blind and visually impaired citizens, at Lake Norman in Catawba County.

Funds from the candy drive and other club projects pay for glaucoma-diabetes detection clinics, research and scholarships, radios and white canes, training and transportation for the blind and visually handicapped. A scholarship program is also provided for sighted children of blind parents.

J.D. Wilson, candy day chairman, and Charles Waller, white cane project chairman for the state, suggested that anyone knowing of children of blind parents needing assistance with their education should notify one of them by calling either 758-4984 or 756-5666 or by writing the Host Lions Club, P.O. Box 841, Greenville.

HONORING JONES SNOW HILL — The Young Democrats of Greene County will host a Walter B. Jones Appreciation Day Dinner Oct. 29 at 7:30 p.m. at the Moose Lodge in Snow Hill. Tickets priced at $10 are on sale and may be purchased by contacting a county Democratic chairperson.

Avers Men Have 'Derring-Do'

NEW YORK (AP) — Men have "more derring-do" in the kitchen than women, says one of America's best-known female chefs, Julia Child.

"I've noticed it in my teaching," Mrs. Child said in an article for next Sunday's "Parade" magazine. "While many women seem to dread failure, men are more likely to jump in fearlessly."

Mrs. Child, the author of several cookbooks and the host of "Julia Child and Co." on PBS television, acknowledged that the most famous chefs are men. But, she said, "whether men actually are better cooks than women" probably won't be answered for "at least a generation or two."

"I don't care a fig, when I'm paying the restaurant bill whether it's a he-chef or a she-chef in the kitchen, as long as the food is tops," she said, admitting to a "sisterly satisfaction" if she knows a woman prepared a notable meal.

True Condition Of Princess Concealed

By CAROLYN LESH
Associated Press Writer
MONTE CARLO, Monaco (AP) — Princess Grace spent her last hours in a coma, kept alive by machines while the world was assured her injuries from a car crash were not critical, senior medical sources directly involved in her treatment said today.

ace officials knew from the start that the former American movie star was in extremely serious condition. "She had multiple injuries of the head, thorax and legs and no surgical operation was conceivable," one of the sources said. "The seriousness of her condition was confirmed by a scanner examination."

Initial but unofficial reports from palace sources said only that Grace had suffered a broken leg and her daughter Stephanie escaped major injury Monday when their car plunged 120 feet into a ravine in French territory just outside the Mediterranean principality.

Less than 40 hours later, Grace was dead.

The royal palace's press office had said Monday that Grace's only injury was a broken leg and that she was expected to remain hospitalized for 10 days. It also said Stephanie had been treated for minor bruises and released.

There were only two official palace communiques on the accident.

The first, about nine hours after the accident, said Grace was in "satisfactory" condition but was being watched closely because of a broken leg and other injuries.

Reports that could not be confirmed at the time described those injuries as two broken ribs, a fractured collarbone and a broken right leg. There were also reports that her thigh, not leg, was broken.

The palace statement said Grace had been driving the 10-year-old Rover and that its brakes had failed on a steep mountain road.

That contradicted other reports that 17-year-old Stephanie, ineligible for a driver's license until her 18th birthday, had been behind the wheel. A witness who claimed to have pulled Stephanie from the wreckage said she was on the driver's side.

Investigators said it was impossible to determine yet who was driving or what caused the accident.

The second palace communique just before midnight (6 p.m. EDT) said

Princess Grace had died from a brain hemorrhage about 90 minutes earlier.

It did not elaborate on her injuries but said her condition had steadily worsened through the night and that all avenues of treatment had been exhausted by Tuesday afternoon.

Rumors circulated in Monte Carlo that day that Grace had lapsed into a coma.

The medical sources confirmed this and said Grace was put on a life support system several hours after the accident.

Grace's husband Prince Rainier III and their two other children, Caroline, 25, and Albert, 24, were at her bedside when she died, the palace said.

On Wednesday afternoon, Rainier broke the news to Stephanie that her mother was dead, then returned to his ancient hilltop castle with Caroline and Albert.

Stephanie remained hospitalized today. A palace spokeswoman said none of the girl's injuries "threatened her life."

Nadia Lacoste, who had been Grace's spokeswoman since she married Rainier 26 years ago, said she spent some time with Rainier and his children Wednesday after rushing back from a West German vacation.

"They all looked so sad it hurt just to look at them," Mrs. Lacoste said, her face ashen. "The prince looked terrible. He looked beaten."

She said the princess "regained consciousness at some point before her death because she requested that if people were going to send flowers, they be small, simple flowers."

Outside the castle perched atop a rocky peak, residents began paying their last respects to Oscar-winning actress their handsome prince wooed away from Hollywood at the height of her brief but triumphant career.

Camera-toting tourists hovered outside, snapping pictures of the daily changing of the guard and chattering in a dozen different languages.

Palace guards, black armbands on their spotless white uniforms, allowed only Monaco's 30,000 residents into the palace chapel to view the open coffin.

The princess' body, gowned in white silk, will lay in state through Friday.

"She was as beautiful as ever. She looked like a bride," said resident Suzanne Bergonze.

Funeral services were set for Saturday. About 500 people, including celebrities from around the globe, are expected to attend. No official guest list has been released yet.

End Recruiting On Campus

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — The FBI has announced an end to recruiting at the University of Wisconsin Law School, five days after learning students had complained about FBI discrimination against homosexuals.

Assistant Dean Edward J. Reinsner informed the agency Sept. 3 that the Student Bar Association filed a complaint saying the FBI's refusal to hire homosexuals violated Wisconsin law.

On Sept. 8, H. Ernest Woody, FBI special agent in charge in Milwaukee, notified the law school that it would no longer recruit on campus, as it has for the past seven years.

Agricultural Teams Help Urban Poor And Farmers

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) —
Sixteen years ago, Makaza Kumanyika marched through Mississippi with the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. and dreamed of uniting the urban and rural poor in one self-help program.

Today, cold winds of federal budget cuts are blowing for Agricultural Teams Inc., which Kumanyika co-founded to help poor black farmers market their produce in the inner city.

The goal of Agricultural Teams is two-pronged: to show struggling farmers how to open alternative markets and to give poor consumers a chance to buy fresh food in areas supermarkets have abandoned.

By cutting out several layers of middlemen, farmers make more profit for their produce while consumers often pay up to 33 percent less.

"King didn't just say 'I have a dream,'" Kumanyika says, recalling the 1966 march. "He also spoke to the practical — about food. After all, Jesus said, 'Feed the hungry.'"

"We can't let the small farmer die on the vine, and urban people can't grow food on concrete," says Kumanyika, a huge, graying black man who was born in New York 49 years ago as Herbert Callender.

His present name means "Cold Winds Are Blowing Out Here for Black People Who Belong to the Land" and was given to him by the Shona tribe on a visit to Zimbabwe.

Kumanyika and 10 other Cornell University graduates founded Agricultural Teams Inc. in 1974.

Kumanyika said the students met while going to school, and wanted to contribute something to society in return for their education.

"Most of us were from poor communities. One of the things we felt was that agriculture in many depressed communities needed to have some people commit to the skills it takes to improve the quality and level of agricultural development.

"It was clear to us that agribusiness would swallow most of the (graduates) up, and they would never get a chance to reach back. We felt this was our chance to reach back."

For years, the group received funding from the federal government and from a variety of churches as it sponsored markets in Miami; Atlanta; Washington; Indianapolis; Youngstown, Ohio, and several North Carolina cities and sent teachers and researchers to Africa and the Caribbean.

Last year, the federal government provided $190,000 — about half the group's budget. This year, the budget-minded Reagan administration has cut all those funds and the recession has bit into other contributions.

Kumanyika hopes to operate this year on $70,000 by moving out of his office into his home, by cutting the number of market days and by working without a salary for the first time in 19 years.

"Ironically, I found myself in a position where I found it hard to eat," says Kumanyika, who has a bachelor's degree in animal science.

The group's board of directors laid off all staffers on July 9. Kumanyika is awaiting word on several funding prospects. Meanwhile, he's going ahead with plans for markets in Washington and in Raleigh in October.

The first Farm-to-Market project was in Miami in 1980, shortly after the Liberty City riots.

"It was very critical because at that point, many stores — mostly Mom and Pop stores — were destroyed," Kumanyika says. "The fresh food that was brought in was extremely needed. The social services were bringing in McDonald's hamburgers and Kentucky Fried Chicken."

Miami now has its own market sponsored by a community group, he said.

In Atlanta, volunteers sold 60,000 pounds of produce in six hours. And in Indianapolis, about 2,500 people were waiting for the food to arrive at 7 a.m.

"The response was tremendous," Kumanyika says.

Prices are about a third off what they are in the stores. In Washington, greens sold for 45 cents a pound cost 79 cents a pound in local stores. Corn, which the group sold for a dozen ears for a dollar, was going for twice as much at the supermarkets.

A core group of about 75 farmers in Piedmont North Carolina has provided most of the produce. Recently, a group of 50 farmers in western North Carolina has participated, and 10 farmers in Warren County are expected to join this fall.

Not all the farmers are black. Several are white and some are Lumbee Indians, Kumanyika says.

Singapore Prepares For Future Computer Age

By KENNETH L. WHITING
Associated Press Writer
SINGAPORE (AP) — If and when computers take over the world, Singapore intends to be ready.

"Not content to let the computer revolution develop on its own, the government is planning for the day when electronics become a way of life.

"The drive to computerize this island nation of 2.4 million people began in 1980 with the aim of creating a fully computerized society by 1990.

"We have to automate and computerize and later to use robots," says Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew. "We must break through to a higher level of technology and achieve the competence to work that technology. Then we shall ensure security in a competitive world."

The prime minister made his remarks in the annual National Day address in August — a message that sets the country's agenda.

In addition to taking advantage of the efficiency of the new technology for its own sake, the campaign aims to lay the foundation for an industry in "software" — the programming counterpart of electronics hardware manufacturing.

Economic planners hope software manufacturing will help the country move away from labor-intensive industries toward a high-technology future.

Singapore has become a happy hunting ground for computer equipment salesmen.

Trade and Industry Minister Tony Tan recently told Parliament that 110 new companies with some connection to computers have opened in the last two years, bringing the total to 195.

Nine of the new ones manufacture hardware — the electronics machinery — 29 are involved with software, and 72 are agents, retailers or distributors, Tan said.

Seven ministries and government departments and 14 statutory boards have their own computer systems, four of them added new equipment and six had new systems installed in the last 10 months.

A $7.4 million software technology center is on the drawing boards, planned to house the National Computer Board and selected software firms.

Plans have been announced to use computers to track down such uncooperative citizens as litterbugs and people who hop from job to job.

Lawmaker Chandra Das says the country should map its future around the concept of "microprocessors in a global garden city."

Infatuation with the magical machines is so great that the Straits Times recently splashed the seven-column front-page headline "Computer Board Will Go It Alone" to report that private firms will not be involved in a drive to computerize the civil service.

The government has earmarked the equivalent of $46.5 million to computerize its offices. About $135,535 is allocated to finance loans for civil servants to buy a personal computer for home practice.

Local community centers run 21 popular computer clubs.

Postgraduate scholarships in computer-related studies at leading foreign universities are offered by the National Computer Board.

Seminars on the latest technology are held regularly to help private businesses adapt to the wave of the future.

The campaign faces some obstacles.

There are 1,200 experts in the field here compared with a need for at least 1,500 in the public and private sectors, Tan told Parliament. By 1990, there will be a need for 6,000 to 8,000 trained personnel.

Government Minister Tay Eng Soon, invited to speak at the annual dinner of the Singapore Computer Society last month, opened with this comment:

"So much has been said about computerization in recent months that I wondered to myself as I thought about my speech if you would be prepared to hear yet another speech on the subject of computers."

They were.

House Demos Expect $1 Billion Jobs Bill Passage

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — House Democrats are looking toward victory on a $1 billion jobs bill they hope will call attention to the nation's soaring unemployment rate less than two months before the election.

A vote on the measure — which would provide 200,000 temporary public service jobs — was expected in the House this afternoon.

Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. said before the vote today that a head count by the Democratic leadership "looks as though it's overwhelming" in favor of the bill.

Earlier, at a breakfast meeting with reporters, House Republican Leader Robert H. Michel of Illinois call the jobs bill a "flimflam."

Republicans were offering a $1.5 billion substitute measure that would transfer the money from the government's synthetic fuels program and for use in providing public service jobs for persons who have been unemployed for at least six months.

Seeking to build on the momentum gained last week when Congress overrode President Reagan's veto of a $14.2 billion supplemental spending bill, Democratic leaders have mounted a nearly non-stop public relations campaign for the bill leading up to today's vote.

Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, said the bill is "the centerpiece of this week's effort."

House GOP Whip Trent Lott of Mississippi scoffed at the effort: "This is fun and games season ... and Jim Wright is leading the charge. ... This is blatantly political."

O'Neill dismissed such charges as "part of the American political scheme of things."

Democrats, hoping the measure will call attention to the nation's 9.8 percent unemployment rate as the November elections draw near, say the measure will send a signal to the nation.

At a Wednesday news conference called to plug the measure, Rep. Augustus F. Hawkins, D-Calif., said, "Consistently, this administration is opposed to putting people to work." Passage of the measure would be a "signal to the nation that this madness should end."

At the same news conference, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., said: "Americans do not need more pink slips, more unemployment slips, more welfare slips. They need to be on payrolls."

In any case, House action on the measure will be largely symbolic.

Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., indicated the bill faces a bleak future in his GOP-controlled chamber.

"I do not" intend to bring up the bill in the Senate, Baker said. But he acknowledged it could come up as an amendment to some other legislation.

Even if both houses pass the bill, a veto by the president would be virtually assured because of the administration's opposition to federal financing of local public works jobs programs.

The measure first surfaced earlier this year as an emergency summer jobs bill. After languishing beyond the time that it could be used for summer employment, the measure was changed to a more general public service jobs program.

Under the measure, estimated to cost about $1 billion, jobs would last no more than six months and would put about 140,000 unemployed adults to work repairing and maintaining public facilities such as bridges, roads and sewer systems.

Also included in the bill is $150 million for temporary or part-time jobs for about 63,000 unemployed, low-income youngsters aged 16-21.

A SIZEABLE FEAST — Most often, a small grasshopper, moth or some other little insect is the typical meal for the common writing (or garden) spider. The vivid black, yellow and orange spider shown here, however, has hit the gourmet jackpot — an oversize delicacy in the form of a captured dragonfly. The spider is busy wrapping a sticky web around his victim to insure his meal doesn't escape. (Reflector Photo by Jerry Raynor)

To Upgrade Green Beret Command

By ROBERT PARRY
Associated Press Writer
FORT BRAGG, N.C. (AP) — The Army is consolidating the Green Berets and other special operation forces into a "major command," a step intended to improve U.S. ability to combat leftist insurgencies around the world, sources say.

The Green Berets will act as the core of the new command that will also involve other Army units which have expertise in special operations, according to military sources, who asked not to be identified.

Special operations include counter-insurgency warfare, organizing guerrilla movements behind enemy lines, sabotage and psychological warfare.

The Pentagon refused comment, but sources said an official announcement was expected soon.

Sources said that as part of the rebuilding campaign, the Army will also devote more manpower to the Green Berets, formally known as the Army Special Forces.

The Green Berets, headquartered at Fort Bragg, reached a peak size of about 13,000 during the Vietnam War, but dropped to an authorized strength of 3,000 in 1980.

Sources added that the Pentagon was still considering plans to put special operation forces from other branches of the armed services into a single joint command.

The Army's decision followed a quiet but intensive lobbying campaign by conservative military strategists inside and outside the administration for a more effective U.S. response to so-called "low intensity" conflicts, like the current fighting in Central America.

Advocates of unconventional warfare say the creation of a central headquarters for special operations, with a tighter chain of command and control, would be an important step toward revitalizing those forces, which have been drawn down since the Vietnam War.

Now, special operation units are subordinate to regular military commands. Critics say that system downplays the importance of special operations and creates a cumbersome chain of command that prevents fast action and impairs secrecy.

Conservatives argue that better special operation forces are needed because conventional U.S. military forces, relying on large units and heavy firepower, are ineffective in combatting guerrilla warfare.

"We are under attack by the Soviets in this unconventional manner," said retired Maj. Gen. John K. Singlaub, an advocate for a stronger U.S. irregular warfare capacity.

Singlaub, who retired in 1978 after publicly criticizing then-President Carter's military strategy, said upgraded special operation forces would enable the president to meet this Soviet challenge without committing conventional U.S. forces.

But he added the administration must do more than just beef up special operations; it must be prepared to use them.

"It would be foolish for the secretary of the Army to build up a Super Bowl team and then have no Super Bowl to play in," Singlaub said in an interview.

Secretary of the Army John O. Marsh Jr. recently stressed the value of the Green Berets in confronting military situations where conventional forces would be "inappropriate or infeasible."

Marsh said the Green Berets were "ideally suited" for combating the most likely form of conflict to threaten U.S. interests in the next decade: "low-intensity" — or guerrilla — war.

"If the threat analysis is correct, requirements for Special Forces units and personnel will increase," Marsh said.

Efforts to strengthen the U.S. capability to wage irregular warfare also coincides with the Reagan administration's increased emphasis on covert operations by the Central Intelligence Agency, which in the past has relied on the Green Berets for clandestine military actions.

Primarily, the Green Berets teach armies of other nations counter-insurgency tactics, but they also are trained in sabotage and organizing guerrilla wars inside enemy territory. Recently, they have trained Salvadoran army units, both in El Salvador and at Green Beret headquarters at Fort Bragg.

The Rangers, who wear black berets, are the Army's other major unconventional force and are mainly responsible for conducting commando-type missions for regular Army units, such as raiding an enemy's headquarters in wartime.

The Army also has unconventional units devoted to "psychological operations" and civic action.

The Air Force has a Special Operation Wing that uses unmarked planes to supply special operation units on the ground as well as to drop secret agents and saboteurs by parachute. Members of the Seals, the Navy's special operation force, are trained to swim into a harbor to plant explosives under ships, to sabotage harbor operations and to move on land against enemy facilities.

Arrested On Fraud Count

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A 43-year-old Greensboro gold and jewelry merchant was arrested Wednesday on charges that he made false statements to a bank and transported stolen money across state lines, the FBI reported.

Nathan Shaffir, owner of Acrovelli Corp., was charged in eight complaints alleging he used false statements to obtain more than $3 million in loans, said Robert L. Pence, special agent in charge of the FBI in North Carolina. Five more complaints allege that Shaffir transported in excess of $3.9 million out of state, some of it to Israel and Italy, Pence added.

Pence said NCNB Corp. was instrumental in the investigation.

Between January 1981 and April 1982, Acrovelli allegedly reported 800,000 grams of gold in its inventories when in fact there was only 200,000 grams, Pence said.

Shaffir was arraigned before U.S. Magistrate Russell Eliason in Winston-Salem and was being held in Guilford County Jail in lieu of bond pending a bond hearing Friday, Pence added.

If convicted of all counts, Shaffir could face up to 16 years in prison and $40,000 in fines for the false statement counts and 50 years and $25,000 in fines for interstate transport of money, he said.

ANNIVERSARY
The Senior Ushers of St. Peter's Missionary Baptist Church will celebrate their 57th anniversary Sunday at 7:30 p.m. The Rev. Hugh Walton will be the speaker.

Waives Extradition

NEW YORK (AP) — A 43-year-old Manhattan woman accused of plotting the murder of her millionaire father in Utah has waived extradition and is to fly Friday to Salt Lake City.

The Court of Appeals, New York's highest court, refused Tuesday to hear the appeal of an extradition order for Frances Bernice Schreuder, and on Wednesday she waived extradition.

She is charged with first-degree murder in the July 23, 1978, shooting death of her father, Franklin Bradshaw. Her 21-year-old son, Marc, was convicted of second-degree murder in the slaying.

Correction

The headline appearing in Wednesday's "Daily Reflector" on page 14-A reading "Reception For Two Retirees" was incorrect. The reception was held by the Bethel Parent Teacher Organization to recognize Dr. Eddie West, Pitt County's new school superintendent, and Betty Speir, a current member of the North Carolina Board of Education. Neither Dr. West or Mrs. Speir is retired.

Space Crew Tests Begun

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A simulated countdown proceeded smoothly today toward a mock launch of the space shuttle in which the flight was to be aborted after one orbit.

The simulation is part of a week-long series of tests before the shuttle Columbia is rolled out next week to the launch pad where on Nov. 11 it will begin its fifth voyage.

Astronauts Vance Brand and Robert Overmyer flew to the cape this morning from Houston to take part in the afternoon mock launch.

The scenario called for a simulated blastoff followed 90 minutes later by a simulated return to Earth at Edwards Air Force Base in Southern California.

Technicians planned to abort the mock launch near the end of what would be the spaceship's first orbit.

The procedure, one of several abort options, could be used to return the orbiter to Earth in the event of a failure during the mission's booster phase.

The shuttle was rolled into the Vehicle Assembly Building last week so that the 15-story-tall fuel tanks could be attached.

The Nov. 11 launch will be the shuttle's first operational flight following four test missions.

Report Air Force Role For Seaways

NEW YORK (AP) — An agreement between the Air Force and the Navy, reached under a directive from Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger, provides a major new tactical role for the Air Force in guarding U.S. seaways, the New York Times said today.

The Times said under the agreement, the Air Force would mount long-range B-52 bomber strikes against enemy ships and naval bases, provide fighter plane coverage for warships in range of land bases and operate the AWACS warning and control aircraft in conjunction with Navy fighter operations.

In return, the Navy will assist the Air Force in attacks on land targets with bombers from aircraft carriers.

Both services would participate in joint training during peacetime and work together in support of ground troops during Rapid Deployment Force intervention in the Persian Gulf if an air base on land became available, the Times added.

Senior military officers quoted in the Times said that while a few formalities need straightening out, Chief of Naval Operations Adm. James D. Watkins and Chief of Staff of the Air Force Gen. Charles A. Gabriel have agreed to the plan.

It would be the first significant step in accordance with Weinberger's orders for more coordination among the Army, Navy, Marines and Air Force.

Prayerbook For Holy Days

NEW YORK (AP) — Conservative Judaism has issued a new 815-page prayerbook, a Mahzor, for the Jewish high holy days.

It provides a modern liturgical text that takes into account recent historical events but which retains traditional religious elements of the services.

Rabbi Jules Harlow, publications director of the Rabbinical Assembly and editor of the Mahzor, says it updates English style and abandons uses of "thee" and "thou." He says "the confrontation of God in Hebrew prayer is direct," and the use of "thee" and "thou" tends to "remove God and religious concern from the realm of everyday life."

The high holy days begin with Rosh Hashana at sundown this Friday and culminate with Yom Kippur, starting at sundown Sept. 26.

TV Decision Both Hailed, Condemned

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — A federal judge's ruling that frees every NCAA school to sell television rights to its football games without restriction was hailed as a smashing victory by some and a prelude to disaster by others.

In the meantime, NCAA attorneys sought to block immediate implementation of the ruling which, among other things, throws out NCAA contracts with ABC and CBS for college games this year. Even if the NCAA does not get a stay of the order, the networks said Wednesday they would go ahead with this weekend's telecast schedule.

But if the ruling stands pending an NCAA appeal, all television schedules this season could become meaningless, with schools marketing their games on a week-to-week basis either independently or through conference tie-ups.

The ruling by U.S. Judge Juan C. Burciaga also is timely in light of the threatened strike by National Football League players. Several schools have already expressed a willingness to switch their games to Sunday. With the networks suddenly in need of football programming, many of the major college powers might be in line for big paydays.

Shortly after the ruling was filed in federal court in Oklahoma City Wednesday, the NCAA said it would appeal to the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. If the NCAA ruling withstood an appeal, there is little doubt it would be the beginning of a new era in college athletics.

Ruling on a suit brought by Oklahoma and Georgia, Burciaga held that the NCAA had violated antitrust laws in selling game rights. Burciaga also held that "the right to telecast college football games is the property of the institutions participating in the games, and that right may be sold or assigned by those institutions to any entity at their discretion."

The decision was applauded by big-time football interests which have been fighting the NCAA for control of football television.

"To a large degree, the judge fully vindicated what the CFA attempted to do," said Charles M. Neinas, executive director of the College Football Association, through which most college football powers sought exclusion from the NCAA contracts.

"The selfish interests of a few could destroy college football as we know it," said Wayne Duke, commissioner of the Big Ten Conference, whose members are not part of the CFA.

Both sides were surprised Burciaga made his ruling effective immediately.

"That would be unreasonable, and the courts seldom do unreasonable things," Dan Gibbons, a law professor and Oklahoma's faculty representative, said in June during the trial. Gibbons was unavailable for comment Wednesday.

"We find it incredible that the judge waited until this far into the season to issue an order that purports to be effective immediately and can have the disastrous affect on college football that his decision could have," the NCAA said in a written release.

Burciaga noted that immediate enforcement of his order would work a hardship on the NCAA and the networks but added:

"It would be unseemly for the court, having found an overt violation of the antitrust laws, to allow the violation to continue for even a single day, let alone for the rest of the season."

If the ruling stands, it will be a major victory for Neinas, the former Big Eight commissioner who has been the chief organizer and spokesman for big-time football interests.

Neinas attempted to get a separate four-year television agreement with NBC for the 61-member CFA last summer.

"What the judge has said, we've said from the beginning," Neinas told The Associated Press on Wednesday.

"The university owns its property rights. No. 2, the university should be able to sell or assign those rights. No. 3, the NCAA should not be allowed to require an institution to give up those rights as an obligation to membership."

Neinas agreed the ruling also did away with NCAA appearance restrictions.

"Obviously, the NCAA position is going to be, 'Oh, my God, chaos,'" Neinas said. "But the fact of the matter is there is a certain order in life. And I'm sure this thing will shake down."

Nevertheless, at least one prominent athletic administrator at a CFA school viewed the decision with alarm.

Frank Broyles, Arkansas athletic director, said the decision could result in "an NFL of college football and no one else playing. I think it will destroy college football in favor of a very few teams."

A spokesman for the University of Tulsa, Emery Turner, said the ruling could create a financial hardship for some schools.

"I would say the total dollars earned by college football (through television) would actually be less. However, distribution to some select schools would be more," Turner said.

The ruling, even if it stands, will not cause a significant loss of income to the NCAA, which obtains most of its operating capital from its basketball tournament.

Karr: Decision Will Hurt

The action yesterday by a federal judge in voiding the current NCAA football television contracts in favor of the individual schools in the organization could spell chaos, East Carolina University athletic director Ken Karr said this morning.

"I don't think it bodes well for intercollegiate athletics or any institution when you look at the big picture," Karr said.

"If it holds up I think you can anticipate within each state there will be perhaps one dominant institution. The others will fall by the wayside."

In this state, that institution would apparently be the University of North Carolina. There have been reports for some time that the Chapel Hill school has quietly been putting together its own cable tv package should such a decision come about.

"I think it will make it difficult for conferences to sustain alignments," Karr continued. "It could very easily lead to 'The Super 60' and everyone else could conduct intramural programs."

"That's the extreme, of course, but I think this ruling opens the door for that sort of thing to happen."

Karr, a former member of the NCAA Basketball Committee, said that the NCAA's rationale has been that it is a voluntary organization of schools who are there by choice. "That's the rationale they have used to avoid being called a monopoly in the past," Karr said.

Another fear is that the NCAA could crumble if it loses its authority — at least in football. Schools currently on probation and barred from television would be able to put

Freshman Whiz Tony Baker Is Fine Artist Both On, Off Field

By RICK SCOPPE

Reflector Sports Writer East Carolina University freshman tailback Tony Baker is a practicing artist — both on the football field and off — and his works of art have been scrutinized in such dissimilar galleries as Carter-Finley Stadium in Raleigh and his study table in his dorm.

The initial collegiate examination of Baker's art work on the football field came last Saturday when the Pirates traveled to Raleigh to battle N.C. State. Baker passed his initial look-see in impressive fashion.

In his first college game, Baker gained 59 yards in 15 carries and scored one touchdown. He also returned two kickoffs for 46 yards, and he did not fumble a single time.

"I was kind of nervous," Baker said this week during a break. "I had a few butterflies."

Baker started fall drills on the freshman scout team. Three players were ahead of him and a fourth — Dwight Richardson — was with him on the scout team as the Pirates readied for N.C. State.

But, when first string tailback Jimmy Walden suffered a severely sprained knee and Mill Corsey and Marvin Cobb were also hurt, Baker became the Pirates' No. 1 tailback.

Though confident, Baker knew he had much to prove — to the fans and himself.

"I felt the fans thought we didn't have a chance with a freshman starting at tailback," Baker said. "I felt like I had to prove myself to the fans and to myself."

"I think I did that," Baker said. "I didn't put the ball on the ground and I didn't feel like I got hit real hard."

One of those impressed with Baker's work was ECU coach Ed Emory, who said his prize freshman will start again this week when the Pirates face East Tennessee State in their home opener.

"Tony Baker played extremely well," Emory said at his weekly press luncheon. "He's not your average freshman."

Indeed, Baker is different. On the field as well as off.

On the field — whether at practice or a game — Baker is all hustle. "He works hard at practice," Emory said. "He will run a play and (continue on) through for 30 yards at full speed."

Said Baker: "I just do it. I really don't know why. It helps me. A couple of times I did it and I think the guys thought I was weird. But I just walked back (to the huddle) and didn't say anything to anybody."

Baker is also different away from the field. Baker is an art major but he will not take his first art course until next semester. So, for now he draws for his own pleasure.

"I've been drawing since I was in elementary school," Baker said. "I did it on my own for the most part."

Not surprisingly, one of his prime subjects is football, specifically football players. On his study table in his dorm room is one such drawing — of a player wearing No. 43, Baker's number.

"My roommate is always telling me that is all he sees me doing: drawing," he said. "But it helps take your mind off football."

Most of the time, however,

Baker keeps his mind squarely on football. It is a game that Baker seems to take in stride — whether he running for touchdowns at High Point Andrews High School or ECU.

"To be honest, it's not that much different (here than in high school)," he said. "It seems like I've been through it before."

Baker rushed for 1,600 yards as a senior at High Point Andrews and was picked to both the AP All-State and Shrine Bowl teams. He was recruited by ECU, NCSU, North Carolina and Appalachian State, among others.

The Pirates won the recruiting battle for two reasons: the ECU art school and the presence of Nancy Emory, wife of ECU coach Ed Emory.

Baker said the former was the main reason he came to ECU. "I really came for the art school," he said.

However, Baker did know Mrs. Emory and her son, Tom Buie, when they lived in High Point. He was good friends with Buie (Mrs. Emory's son from a previous marriage) and his mother, and that did nothing but help ECU in its recruiting of Baker.

Regardless of the reasons why Baker came to ECU, he is here now — and Pirate coaches couldn't be happier.

"I think he's a real tough kid. He didn't make many mistakes (against NCSU). He's got a lot of character and he sure doesn't play like a freshman," Pirate running back coach Spencer Prescott said.

Baker has the most important asset of all for a running back: speed. He runs the 40-yard dash in 4.4 seconds. It is that speed that helps Baker compensate for what is perhaps his major liability: his size. Baker is just 5-10 and 165 pounds.

"The coaches act like

Rampants Host Hoggard; After 1st Win

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
"We made entirely too many mistakes," Coach Ronald Vincent said exactly one week ago when referring to the Rose High School loss to Jacksonville, 23-22, in the team's opening game.

Yesterday, he made the same remark in prefacing his comments on Rose's 21-14 loss to New Bern in the second contest of the year.

And both times, he summed it up quite well.

Penalties and turnovers led to the Rampant downfall against the Bears in the first road trip of the year last Friday night. For the second straight week, the Rampants kicked off and saw their opponent get outstanding field position from the kickoff. This time, however, it was a penalty after the run that moved the ball across the midfield stripe into Rose territory.

In both games, the opponent has scored on its first possession.

"I was upset with our (lack of) aggressiveness and concentration," Vincent said of the game. "I was disappointed with the way we went about trying to win the game."

The Rampants seemed to really catch fire only twice in the contest. One of those came after the opening score by New Bern as Rose quickly stormed back on its next possession to score and tie it up. The other came after New Bern had gained a 21-7 lead. Rose again drove 80 yards for the touchdown to pull back within striking distance.

Even in the final stages of the game, the defense held to give the ball back in good field position. The offense then moved to near the 25 of the Bears before missing a first down on a controversial placement of the ball after a Kenny Kirkland to Edward Frazier pass that appeared to go beyond the 25 when the 26 was what was needed to sustain the drive.

Greg Britt

"I hope that we've gotten some of the problems from last week straightened out this week," Vincent said. "I believe that we were overconfident even after losing to Jacksonville. We had played well in losing and New Bern hadn't played well in losing its first two games. Even though we knew that New Bern could be a good team, we didn't get it across to the players."

"As it turned out, we played like New Bern had been playing, and they got their act together," he added.

Vincent said he was well-pleased with the running of tailback Donnell Lee, who scored both of the Rose touchdowns, the last one a 13-yard effort that saw him break three individual tackles.

He rushed for a total of 95 yards in the game, leading both teams. "He showed a lot of desire," the coach said. "I was also pleased with Kirkland's play at quarterback."

Greg Britt drew praise from Vincent for his play in the offensive line, while Frankie Carr also caught Vincent's eye at his defensive end position. "He played hard and aggressive," he said of Carr. "Roswell Streeter had a good game at corner."

"Aside from those, we didn't have a lot to brag about." Vincent was impressed with the way the Rampants did come back in the final five minutes of play to launch one successful and one threatening drive before time ran out.

"That's what gives me a lot of encouragement," he said. "Because I know what we can do if we can get that sort of thing for 48 minutes."

"While we've lost two games, we really haven't lost anything yet because they were non-conference," Vincent said. "That still gives us another chance to get things together before we start conference play."

That last non-conference game comes up on Friday at 8 p.m. in Ficklen Stadium when the Rampants host Wilmington's Hoggard High School.

Hoggard has gotten off to a slow start, downing winless Durham, 28-0, during Week One of the season, then tying Durham Hillside, 6-6, last week following an open date. Hillside had lost its two previous contests.

"They are big and strong, just like they were last year," Vincent said of the team his Rampants beat Hoggard 14-12 as they swept through their non-conference foes without a loss.

Vincent said he understood that Hoggard's number one quarterback suffered a broken ankle in last week's game, but that was unconfirmed. "They use three different tailbacks, so no one has really been a standout on offense," he said. "They are mostly a ground-oriented team and they've got a couple of very good tackles that anchor their line."

On defense, Hoggard is also big and strong, the coach said. "They've only given up six points in two games, so I would say that their defense is better than their offense right now. They're well-disciplined."

"I think the key to the game will be who controls the line of scrimmage. We have to control it to have a chance to win."

"You know, last year, when there was a fumble, the ball bounced our way, or when there was a tipped ball, it fell into our hands. We just haven't had the breaks this year. I think once we do start making our breaks, then we'll become a good football team," Vincent said.

Lee is currently the offensive leader for the Rampants, having rushed for 147 yards in two games with a 4.2 average per carry. Close behind is slot back Edward Frazier with 106 yards. Lee leads in scoring with four touchdowns and a total of 26 points, having scored one two-point PAT.

Kirkland has hit on 14 of 33 passes for 112 yards with three interceptions, while backup Bobby Buie has hit three of ten for 54 yards and two interceptions.

"Those turnovers have really hurt us," Vincent pointed out. Rose has lost five through interceptions and three on fumbles for a total of eight while intercepting only one and recovering only two opponent fumbles, a total of three.

Frazier is the leading receiver with seven catches for 99 yards. Lee had caught five passes, but for only 18 yards.

In other Big East action last week, Northern Nash, suffered its first defeat of the year, 20-6, at the hands of Vance County, while Northeastern won its first in three starts, downing 2-A Camden, 14-0. Wilson Pike topped Southern Nash, 40-7, for its second win in three starts, while Beddingfield lost to SouthWest Edgecombe, 12-7, and Kinston fell to Goldsboro, 13-6, its first loss. Rocky Mount and Hunt were both idle.

Friday, Kinston hosts Jacksonville, Hunt is at home to SouthWest Edgecombe, Beddingfield entertains Southern Nash, and Rocky Mount travels to Goldsboro. Northeastern, Fike and Northern Nash are all idle.

Players Set Strike For Tuesday

WASHINGTON (AP) - The National Football League Players Association will go on strike Tuesday, just two weeks into the season, unless there is a breakthrough in contract negotiations resuming Friday, union leader Ed Garvey says.

Garvey confirmed Wednesday night what sources in the NFLPA and elsewhere in the labor movement told The Associated Press earlier: that Monday night's Green Bay Packers-New York Giants game will be the last one played until a new collective bargaining agreement is reached.

The formal decision will be made by the union's nine-member executive committee at a meeting Monday in New York, Garvey said.

The first game to be affected by pro football's first regular-season strike would be Atlanta at Kansas City on Thursday.

The owners have indicated they will try to put on games despite a strike, using free agents along with any regular players who defy the union. The NFLPA has signed a contract with Ted Turner's cable television superstation, WTBS, to stage a series of makeshift all-star games.

"This is totally consistent with what we have heard all along," Jack Donlan, chief negotiator for the owners' NFL Management Council, said of the Tuesday strike date. "The NFLPA has had a master plan to strike."

He vowed that a strike will not gain the players their main goal, a salary scale based on a fixed percentage of the 28 clubs' gross revenues.

Sources who asked not to be identified told the AP that the executive committee decided earlier this week to walk out Tuesday with virtually no advance notice for fear that the players would be locked out by the owners.

Garvey, the NFLPA executive director, at first called the report premature. However, he was quoted in today's editions of The New York Times as saying later: "Our choices were to announce a strike for Tuesday or to wait a week. In any event, we were going to announce it Monday. But the sentiment is to do something sooner, if we find Friday that the owners are still not serious about bargaining."

He could not be reached late Wednesday night for comment. The operator said Garvey's telephone was off the hook.

Negotiators for the two sides last met Sept. 8, when the players rejected the owners' plan to raise minimum player salaries, ease movement of free agents and pay seniority bonuses of $10,000 per player for each year of service in the NFL, up to $60,000.

Garvey said the union would respond to that proposal point by point Friday and discuss other ideas to meet the players' concerns.

The NFLPA announced last week that any strike would come between Sept. 19 and Oct. 3, the second and fourth weekends of the season. Garvey said Sunday that it probably would be Sept. 26 or Oct. 3.

One union source said the Tuesday deadline should come as no surprise because "striking with little or no notice will apply the maximum pressure needed to win our demands."

The owners have steadfastly refused to negotiate on the players' demand that the NFL divert 55 percent of its gross income to a trust fund that would pay player salaries on a seniority-based scale with performance incentive bonuses.

"When the strike is over there will be no percentage of gross. And the offer on the table will be substantially reduced by the amount of money the owners lose in a strike," Donlan said Wednesday night.

He said the owners' proposal last week was close to their final one.

Hooten Happy With Shutout

By The Associated Press
They call Burt Hooten "Happy," yet this has been anything but a happy year for the 32-year-old right-hander. Hooten underwent knee surgery on June 21, missed six weeks and only now is recapturing the form which has made him a mainstay of the Los Angeles Dodgers pitching staff. On Wednesday night, Hooten indicated that the remaining aches and pains are a minor annoyance as he blanked the San Diego Padres 5-0 on three hits. The Dodgers' sixth straight victory upped their National League West lead to 2½ games over Atlanta, which lost 5-4 to Houston. Elsewhere, it was Montreal 6, New York 5 in 11 innings; St. Louis 8, Philadelphia 0; Chicago 7, Pittsburgh 2, and San Francisco 5, Cincinnati 4. "It's been a long time for me," between complete games, Hooten noted. "And it's especially gratifying to come against a club like San Diego with such a tough lineup." It was Hooten's second shutout of the season, but his first since April 29. In his eight starts since his surgery, he has allowed 12 earned runs in 49 innings, a 2.20 earned run average. "I can't say I'm all the way back," said Hooten, whose record is now 3-5. "I can't say that until I've put a few of these (games) back-to-back." "Tonight I had better control with my fastball, I was getting it where I wanted, and I felt I had more consistency with all my pitches." And he wasn't bothered much by the nagging physical problems which have lingered with him this season. "My knee doesn't bother me any more. There's kind of a dull ache, but not like before. Before it would kick me pretty good. But I still have this bursitis in the shoulder, and it was starting to stiffen and I didn't know if it would loosen up, but it did." Pedro Guerrero slammed his 30th home run to help the Dodgers hand San Diego its fifth straight loss.

less innings. "Our pitching is very underrated," said the Cards' Keith Hernandez. "We've got good pitching. They keep saying 'our pitching, our pitching.' Good pitching is why we're here." Cubs 7, Pirates 2. The Cubs used the longball to subdue Pittsburgh as Jody Davis smashed a three-run homer and Keith Moreland and Leon Durham added solo shots. Ferguson Jenkins gave up 11 hits in posting his 275th career victory, good for 20th on the all-time list.

1st Anniversary Celebration

September 16th-25th

Wake-State Highlights ACC Slate

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer
All eight Atlantic Coast Conference teams take the field on the same day this weekend with the first intra-conference encounter scheduled between Wake Forest and North Carolina State.

In other games involving conference teams, 11th-ranked North Carolina seeks to rebound at home against Vanderbilt, while No. 16 Clemson faces Boston College in a regionally-televised contest at Death Valley. James Madison travels to Virginia and The Citadel meets Georgia Tech in Atlanta. Maryland goes to Morgantown to play an impressive West Virginia team and Duke tries for two victories in a row against South Carolina.

The Wolfpack is 2-0, but has been banged around in each of its victories. Most notable of the injured is tailback Joe McIntosh, suffering from a hip pointer for two weeks. Quarterback Tol Avery has been impressive, completing almost 54 percent of his passes for four touchdowns. Wake Forest junior quarterback Gary Schofield has passed for 426 yards and three touchdowns, although the Demon Deacons are 1-1. Nonetheless, there's every indication that the scoreboard at Carter-Finley Stadium will light up often.

"Wake Forest will get off the bus with their arms cocked," said N.C. State Coach Monte Kiffin. "They're so explosive." Al Groh says his Demon Deacons will be playing in more than just a rivalry. "I like to think that conference games mean a little more," he said. "If they didn't, there wouldn't be much point in being in a conference." As if Pittsburgh's Dan Marino wasn't enough, the Tar Heels will face another pass-oriented offense, directed by junior Whit Taylor, who's broken 17 school passing and offensive records. On the other hand, Vanderbilt will be facing a defense which limited Marino to his first sub-200-yard game in more than a year and which yielded one touchdown to one of the nation's most potent offenses. "The test for the defense is to do it again," says North Carolina Coach Dick Crum. Tailback Kelvin Bryant, suffering from a bruised foot and sprained ankle, should be ready to play, while left guard David Drechsler is questionable after reinjuring his ankle in the Pitt contest.

The Tigers have had almost two weeks to recover from their loss to Georgia as well as their demotion in the college football poll. Boston College has had two weeks to enjoy its opening night victory over Texas A&M, ruining Jackie Sherill's debut. Doug Flutie led the Eagle attack with three touchdown passes and an 8-yard run. The offense has the top three rushers from 1981's team, which struggled to a 5-6 record, while the defense has six starters returning. Homer Jordan couldn't get the Clemson offense moving against Georgia, but may find success against a BC defense which allowed 25 points a game last year. The Tiger defense allowed just one touchdown to Georgia and will have to repeat the effort to avoid becoming Boston College's second upset victim. The throttle on Virginia's offense was left open against Navy and the Cavaliers came within four points of giving new coach George Welsh a victory against Navy. Quarterback Mike Eck and Wayne Schuchts shared time and Welsh has chosen Eck to open against the Dukes. "I think our quarterback situation is good and both our quarterbacks threw the ball well," says Welsh. "Our running game got outside but we weren't able to run inside and this is a concern for us now."

Georgia Tech was humbled by Alabama in the season-opener and hopes to even its record against the Bulldogs. Coach Bill Curry isn't taking his next opponent lightly, however. "Playing against The Citadel is a potentially deceiving situation," says Curry. "Coach Art Baker has a quality program up there and he has a track record for being especially tough on the big schools that The Citadel plays." West Virginia shocked college football observers by whipping Oklahoma on its home field. Quarterback Jeff Hostetler was the star for the Mountaineers, completing 17 of 37 passes for 321 yards and four touchdowns. Maryland had Penn State on the ropes before dropping a 39-31 decision to the Nittany Lions. Boomer Esiason passed for 276 yards and a pair of touchdowns.

Swim Club Awards
The Greenville Swim Club recently presented its awards to various team members. Winning first in age groups were Jeff Carstarphan and Kara Boyik, 8 and under; Kathryn Barnhill and John Uhlman, 9-10; Robert Williams and Julie Song, 11-12; Kelly Barnhill and Delores Williams, 13-14; Shawn Wallace and Maria Kelly, 15-18; Becca Uhlman and Paul Mark Kelly, coach's award; Lisa Wallace and Edward Clark, team spirit award; and Mary Mellon and John Carstarphan, five year plaques.

Baker...

they're satisfied with my size, but I think they want me to gain some weight," Baker said.

Baker's size did not seem to hold him back last Saturday, however. "I bounced off a lot of hits," Baker said with a laugh. "Anyway I've never been scared of anything I can outrun."

Baker did, however, admit to being anxious about how he would play in front of the 55,000 fans at Carter-Finley Stadium. "I was kind of nervous," he said. "I had never played in front of so many people."

This week the crowd will be decidedly smaller when the Pirates entertain East Tennessee State Saturday evening. But for Baker, it will be his first game in Ficklen Stadium.

"I guess I'm a little anxious," Baker said. "It's like going through it (first-game jitters) all over again. But I feel confident."

Orioles Rally To Top Yankees, 8-5

By The Associated Press
Dave Winfield and Roy Smalley are on a home run binge for the New York Yankees — but the defending American League champions aren't getting much relief from their bullpen these days.

For the fourth straight game Wednesday night, the Yankee bullpen blew a lead and the result was an 8-5 loss to the charging Baltimore Orioles.

who won their 23rd game in the last 27.

The triumph kept the Orioles 1 1/2 games behind Milwaukee in the AL East race. The division-leading Brewers stopped Detroit 5-3.

In the AL West, the division-leading Kansas City Royals beat Seattle 5-4 in 11 innings and improved their lead to two games over the California Angels, 8-3 losers to Chicago. Elsewhere, Cleveland beat Boston 7-4, Toronto took a doubleheader from Oakland, 3-2 and 12-11 and Minnesota walloped Texas 10-2.

As they had in the three previous games with the Orioles, the Yankees took the early lead — this time 5-2 after 5 1/2 innings — on a pair of two-run homers by Smalley and a solo shot by Winfield, all off starter Mike Flanagan. Smalley has hit eight of his 20 homers in the last 12 games and Winfield eight of his 34 in the last 13 games.

But the Orioles came back to score six runs in the sixth inning. Cal Ripken Jr., tied the score with a two-run double and then scored the go-ahead run on Eddie Murray's double.

Don Welch allowed one hit in 12-3 innings of relief and was the winner in his major-league debut for Baltimore. Sammy Stewart hurled the final three innings to pick up his fifth save.

Brewers 5, Tigers 3
Roy Howell drove in three runs with a double and a single to lead Milwaukee over Detroit.

Howell's RBI double featured a two-run second inning and his two-run single in the fifth provided the Brewers with a 5-2 lead.

Milwaukee starter Pete Vuckovich, 17-4, went 7-3 in innings, allowing 11 hits before getting relief help. Dwight Bernard finished up for his fifth save.

Jack Morris, 16-15, went the distance for the Tigers, giving up nine hits while striking out five and walking two.

Royals 5, Mariners 4
Steve Hammond lined a one-out, bases-loaded single off first baseman Jim Maler's glove in the 11th inning to carry Kansas City over Seattle.

Willie Wilson opened the 11th by beating out an infield bouncer for a hit, then stole second. Walks to U.L. Washington and George Brett by Seattle reliever Bill Caudill, 11-8, loaded the bases and set the stage for Hammond.

Dan Quisenberry, 8-5, gained the victory in relief, pitching the final three innings. Quisenberry aided his cause by picking two Mariners runners off first base.

Hammond had struck out in the ninth with the winning run on second.

White Sox 8, Angels 3
Vance Law stroked a two-run triple to highlight a five-run fourth inning as Chicago defeated California and snapped the Angels' five-game winning streak. Law's triple in the fourth knocked out Geoff Zahn, 16-8, and gave the White Sox a 5-1 lead at the time.

Jerry Koonsman, 9-6, allowed two runs and seven hits over the six innings he worked before being relieved by Warren Brusstar.

Indians 7, Red Sox 4
Andre Thornton drove in three runs with a homer and a single and Larry Milbourne and Ron Hassey collected three hits apiece, leading Cleveland over Boston.

Len Barker and Dan Spillner combined to check the Red Sox on five hits and just one earned run. Barker, 13-11, went the first six innings before Spillner came on to earn his 19th save.

Blue Jays 3-12, A's 2-11
A pair of Oakland errors allowed Damaso Garcia and Al Woods to score in the seventh inning and Luis Leal scattered four hits in 7-3 innings as Toronto downed the A's in the first game of their doubleheader.

Dave Baker, atoning for three errors, drove home Garth Iorg from second with a one-out single in the ninth inning to give the Blue Jays the victory in the second game.

Twins 10, Rangers 2
Gary Gaetti belted four hits and Lenny Faedo drove in three runs to power Minnesota over Texas behind Bobby Castillo's six-hitter.

Castillo, 10-11, saw his streak of 202-3 scoreless innings snapped in the sixth inning on a two-run triple by Jim Sundberg. Loser Frank Tanana, 6-18, lasted until the fifth, when the Twins scored three runs for a 6-0 lead.

Enjoys Living In Inland Lighthouse

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Emmett Wiggins of Edenton has spent many of his 61 years in boats, pulling riches from the seas in his marine salvage business.

When a friend offered him a castoff government lighthouse, Wiggins jumped to tackle his biggest salvage operation ever. It involved moving the lighthouse by barge eight miles from the mouth of the Roanoke River to his home in Edenton. Then Wiggins renovated and restored the 1836 structure for his residence.

Since the salvage operation in July 1955, the lighthouse has been a novelty, the subject of numerous newspaper and magazine articles and the focus of many paintings.

Now the Coast Guard is reviving the idea of lighthouse keepers, who would lease the structures in an effort to preserve them.

"I've just liked water all my life," Wiggins, 61, explained in a telephone interview. He said he has been building boats since the fifth grade, when he assembled a kayak, and always has lived near the water.

The lighthouse, a two-story house with cupola and wide porch around it, held a special attraction. "All the romance hasn't gone out of them," the bachelor said.

Wiggins said a friend in the marine salvage business from Coinjock bought three lighthouses from the Coast Guard in 1955, when they were being replaced with electric beacons. One condition of the sale was that the lighthouses be moved.

The other two lighthouses — one from Wade Point at the mouth of the Pasquotank River and the Roanoke Marsh light from the lower end of Roanoke Island — fell into the ocean when Wiggins' friend tried to move them.

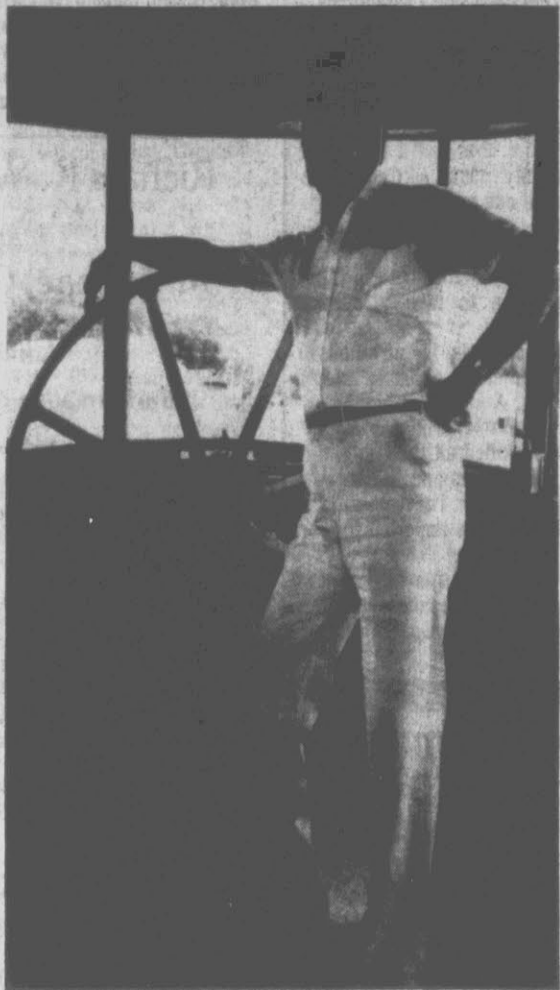

"He wanted to move them inland and at least get one of them up there at Coinjock where he lived," Wiggins said. "After he lost the first one ... I guess he was a little scared that he might lose the others."

Wiggins noted that his is the only lighthouse left in North Carolina. The others, such as the Cape Hatteras Lighthouse, are towering lights with separate houses.

Wiggins' house once held a light atop its roof, 35 feet off the ground.

The original light was a whale oil lamp whose flame was magnified by a large prism-type lens manufactured in Paris in 1888. Wiggins still has the lens but now uses a light bulb instead of the whale oil lamp.

Moving the lighthouse took 36 hours, a crew of men and a little money, Wiggins said. The men loaded the house on a barge and moved it up the river to the head of Edenton

Bay. "I did nothing to it but install electric current and put water in it to make it liveable," he said. "It's a very solid structure. Captains used to stay out here weeks at a time."

Wiggins said the light tenders kept logs like sea captains. From those logs, he said he has learned that previous residents once watched Civil War battles, including the sinking of the ram Albemarle, a Confederate ship known for its speed.

"There were times when the captains in the lighthouse couldn't get out to the lighthouse unless they would walk out on the ice," he said. "Other times they were iced in out there. It got a little hungry."

He said he agrees with the federal government's plan to begin leasing the lighthouses. "I hate to see them destroyed," he said. Lighthouses and shipping were "a phase in history. Trucks are taking over now. Water traffic is diminishing to a degree, inland especially."

Wiggins still does some marine salvage work. In 1960, he rescued 140 tons of marble from the Atlantic Ocean off False Cape, Va. The marble had been there since 1895, when a ship from Genoa, Italy, ran aground.

His latest project was to restart a tugboat, formerly known as the Maryland, that was built in 1938. The boat had been sitting in the Chowan River since 1972 until Wiggins bought it in May 1980.

Now, two years and two court battles later, he's about to put it back in service.

Wiggins' neighbors took him to court because they argued the tugboat was an eyesore.

"Anytime you challenge someone or something and come out a winner, you've achieved something," Wiggins said.

Navy Drug-Use Cases Declined

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Illegal drug use by junior Navy officers and low-ranking enlisted personnel is still not uncommon but has declined significantly since December 1980, the Navy says.

Surprise urine tests on about 2,000 personnel, some in San Diego and some in Norfolk, found that 20 percent to 25 percent had used marijuana in the last 30 days — down from about half in a similar test in December 1980, the Navy said Tuesday.

The most recent test was conducted Aug. 30, said Lt. Cmdr. Dale Smith, a spokesman for the Atlantic Fleet. "Obviously, the Navy is pleased," he said.

Canada Sees U.S. Dragging Feet Over 'Acid Rain'

By CHARLES CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer

TORONTO (AP) — Canada is considering breaking off negotiations with the United States on an acid rain treaty because it believes the Reagan administration is "foot-dragging," Environment Minister John Roberts says.

Roberts said Canadian frustration over lack of progress in the talks that began 14 months ago has built "to the extent that we have wondered whether it served any useful purpose to continue negotiations."

The minister said he would discuss the idea of suspending negotiations when he meets next week with environment ministers from Canada's 10 provinces.

"We are disappointed and discouraged by the lack of progress in the negotiations and we don't understand the foot-dragging of the administration," Roberts said. "On the other hand, I'm not sure about the advantages of stopping."

Acid rain "is the single most important irritant, or issue, in Canadian-American relations," he said.

Roberts spoke with a group of American reporters Tuesday in one of several sessions sponsored by the Canadian government this week as part of a campaign to present the Canadian viewpoint on the acid rain controversy to the American public.

A spokesman at the U.S. Embassy in Ottawa, asked to comment on Roberts' statement, said the United States remained committed to the acid rain treaty talks.

"We consider them still serious and important and we will not be backing away from continued negotiations," the spokesman said.

Canada and the United States formally agreed in August 1980 to work toward a treaty covering each side's obligations on limiting emissions — especially sulfur compounds — believed to cause acid rain.

But when the Reagan administration came to office five months later, it displayed less enthusiasm for tightening environmental controls than for easing regulations if it would help business.

Treaty negotiations began in July 1981. A Canadian proposal in February that each side cut emissions by half within 10 years was rejected.

"I'm not optimistic. I'm not in despair, but I'm not optimistic," Roberts said. "I have no reason to believe the United States administration is going to take a more forthcoming attitude."

Acid rain is a shorthand term for industrial air pollutants carried long distances before falling to earth, either in rain, snow or in fine particles.

Canadian officials say acid rain pollutants, primarily from coal-fired electric power plants, have killed all the fish and plants in some lakes, with many other lakes and forests in Canada and the northeastern states in danger. The Canadians estimate that 50 percent of their acid rain is imported from the United States.

The United States and some electric utilities contend that more research is needed to pinpoint the causes of acid rain and to identify the most effective solutions before committing billions of dollars to limit emissions.

It has been suggested that a high proportion of acid rain is made locally, not transported hundreds of miles from smokestacks in the Midwest. The Americans also point out that in many areas, current U.S. emission standards are stricter than limits in Canada.

Roberts said Canada believes acid rain poses "a clear and present danger" that should be dealt with immediately.

He expressed concern that Washington would shrug off the danger, saying: "Until we know which mosquito is carrying the malaria, we're not going to clean up the swamp."

Panel Reverses Union Sanction

WASHINGTON (AP) — A union cannot use the threat of fines to prohibit a member from resigning and returning to work during a strike, the National Labor Relations Board says.

In a 4-1 ruling termed pro-management by one union lawyer Wednesday, the agency struck down a union constitutional provision by which a local of the machinists' union fined workers who renounced their membership and returned to their jobs during an August 1977 strike at a West Coast electronics plant.

The board's majority did indicate in the 40-page decision, however, that it would likely uphold a reasonable penalty clause discouraging members from dropping out during strikes. Such a provision, the decision said, is one requiring that a union member give the union leadership 30 days' notice of resignation plans.

Representatives of the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers had no immediate comment.

The decision will make it more difficult for unions to exercise rank-and-file discipline in protracted strikes lasting more than 30 days, said Carole Wilson, associate general counsel of the International Union of Electrical Workers.

The board had arrived at that same conclusion in its original decision in the case involving employees of Dalmo Victor Co., a division of Textron Inc. which makes electronic products.

Textron is based in Providence, R.I. Dalmo is based in Belmont, Calif.

The board initially had concluded that a provision in the union's constitution authorizing the fines represented an unlawful attempt to restrict the "post-resignation conduct" of union members.

But that decision was subsequently repudiated by 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, which sent the case back to the NLRB. The court said the provision was a restriction on resignation, not an attempt to regulate what someone does after renouncing union membership.

In its decision Wednesday, the labor board rescinded the fines levied against the machinists union members in Belmont.

A provision in the machinists' constitution specified that resignation from the union would not relieve an employee from the obligation of members to refrain from working "during an authorized strike or lockout."

In effect, the decision said the IAM's flat prohibition against resignation during strikes was too sweeping, but a provision imposing a reasonable waiting period for a resignation to take effect might be enforceable.

Writing for the majority board members John H. Fanning and Don A. Zimmerman said the "union's rule prohibiting resignations during the entire course of a strike or within 14 days preceding its commencement does indeed constitute an intrusion into the employee's ... right to resign."

The majority opinion also noted that the National Labor Relations Act specifically grants employees the "right to refrain" from concerted activities — and that such rights encompass the right to resign from a union.

But the decision did acknowledge that under existing Supreme Court principles, a union has a right to impose certain limitations on a member's right to resign.

Writing for the majority board members John H. Fanning and Don A. Zimmerman said the "union's rule prohibiting resignations during the entire course of a strike or within 14 days preceding its commencement does indeed constitute an intrusion into the employee's ... right to resign."

The suit filed Wednesday in federal court says the INS selectively enforces immigration laws, often hitting fields a few days before union certification elections.

"Because of such raids, workers say they don't want union elections," said UFW President Cesar Chavez.

Regional INS director David Ilchert said he had not seen the suit and could not comment, but said the agency was following its guidelines.

Approve Earthquake Outlays

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House has approved spending of $63.4 million to continue the government's earthquake hazard reduction program in 1983.

The money, approved on a voice vote, will finance programs conducted by the U.S. Geological Survey, the Federal Emergency Management Agency, the National Sciences Foundation, and the National Bureau of Standards.

Gorilla Dies Of Heart Failure

DALLAS (AP) — A rare lowland gorilla died of acute heart failure shortly after giving birth to a seventh baby, a 5-pound, 10-ounce male, Dallas Zoo officials said.

Shamba died Monday night, but officials waited until autopsy results were available Wednesday before releasing the news, zoo spokesman Bill Stewart said.

"The death was definitely related to the childbirth," Stewart said. "She was 25 years old, the equivalent of a 50-year-old woman giving birth to a baby."

Okay Sale Of 6 Small Jets

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Commerce Department says it has issued an export license to allow the sale of six small jets to Iraq.

The State Department still must approve licensing of special mapping and target towing equipment for the jets, which are worth about $25 million, Commerce Department officials said.

The jets are executive transports, designed to carry eight to 10 people, other officials said. Iraq wants two of the jets installed with aerial mapping equipment and two with target towing gear, the officials said.

Union Sues For 'Disruptions'

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — In a class-action lawsuit, the United Farm Workers Union has accused the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service of disrupting union certification elections.

The suit filed Wednesday in federal court says the INS selectively enforces immigration laws, often hitting fields a few days before union certification elections.

Regional INS director David Ilchert said he had not seen the suit and could not comment, but said the agency was following its guidelines.

Banding Together To Promote Caribbean Tourism

By NAT CARNES
Associated Press Writer
SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — In an effort to combat a slump in tourism and increased competition from other countries, the islands of the Caribbean have, for the first time, joined forces to promote their sun and sand.

"Any country is now competing on a world-wide basis," says Paul Hall, a research analyst for the U.S. Tourism Administration in Washington. "If a country is not getting the business, something is causing it. Tourism business is very complicated now."

The complications of worldwide recession, currency fluctuations and persistent inflation have forged a growing sense of cooperation among members of the Caribbean Tourism Association, whose members come from 29 tourist destinations stretching 2,500 miles from Guyana in South America to Belize in Central America.

In June, the association set up a marketing and promotional committee which will promote the entire region.

Betty Sperber, operator of the 42-room King Christian hotel in the U.S. Virgin Islands, sums up the challenge this way: "We will not sell on the basis of weather anymore," facing competition from other well-promoted areas such as Miami and Venezuela.

The Caribbean outside Cuba is experiencing a drop in tourism after more than 20 years of growth that started with Fidel Castro's 1959 takeover in Havana and continued through the introduction of jumbo jets.

In the first six months of this year, Puerto Rico's

Tourism Co., a government-sponsored corporation, says 17 of the country's major hotels — those equipped with casinos and access to beaches — showed a 5 percent to 17 percent drop in occupancy rates compared to last year.

And the Caribbean Tourism and Research and Development Center in Barbados reports that 400,000 fewer tourists came to the Caribbean last year as compared with 1980, when the figure was 7.2 million.

The best year for Puerto Rico, the area's No. 1 tourist destination, was 1980, when the island entertained 1.7 million tourists, who brought in $615 million.

Those figures represent a dramatic contrast with the 1950s, when fewer than 200,000 tourists came to Puerto Rico each year.

Now, however, after two years of decline, some are already nostalgic for the late 1970s. Francisco Serrate Romero, a sun-bronzed vendor, wanders the beach in San Juan, recalling, "I remember when I used to pick coconuts in the morning and sell them for five dollars each in the afternoon. Those times are gone forever."

In 1957, before Castro, the entire Caribbean drew only about 500,000 tourists, and Cuba had more than half — 275,000.

In the 1960s and early 1970s, world-wide tourism was spurred by cheap, quick flights, and the non-communist Caribbean islands found themselves newly attractive for American tourists who no longer went to Havana.

But later, two U.S. recessions and the dollar crisis helped shift new attention to other areas — particularly newly-affluent European tourists carrying strong currencies like the German mark. Package tours helped introduce a new kind of traveler from those areas — less free with spending cash, but at least a guaranteed booking at a hotel.

One result is that Puerto Rico has shifted its promotion efforts from what used to be an almost exclusive reliance on the United States. Today it draws tourists as well from Canada, Great Britain, Spain, West Germany, and Venezuela.

Those five countries, according to the World Tourism Organization based in Madrid, today have record numbers of tourists traveling abroad. The largest group, 22.5 million West German tourists, spend $20 billion annually on travel.

In the last year, Lufthansa German Airlines and British Caledonian Airways have opened direct connections between Puerto Rico and Europe. Puerto Rico also wants to add Air Canada. Other flights have connected the island with Spain and South America for years.

"The United States is still number one for us," said Frances Rios de Moran, executive director of Puerto Rico's Tourism Co. But, she adds, "in the last 10 years, the percentage of U.S. visitors coming to the island has dropped from 80 percent to 65 percent."

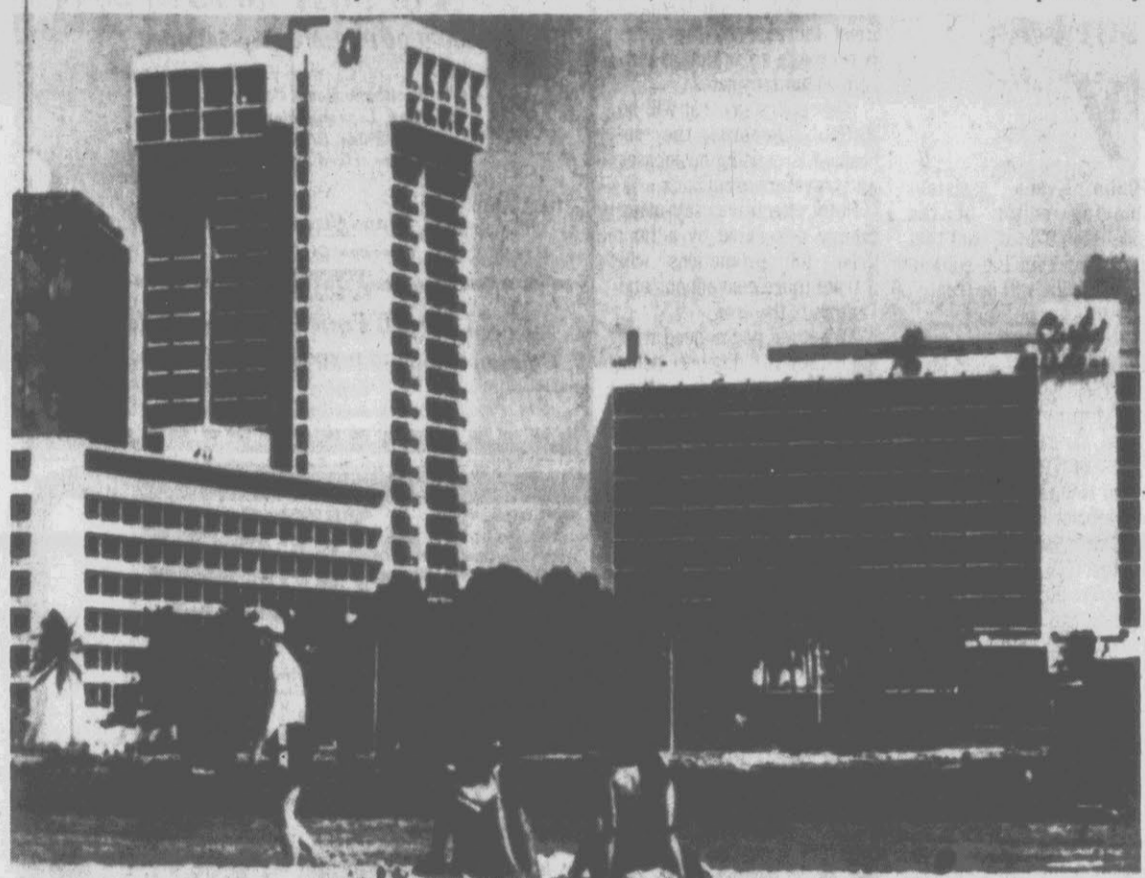

"I remain optimistic about the future" despite the recent figures, she said. "If we can hold on until the recession is over, I know we will improve."

Venezuela is now the No. 2 visitor in Puerto Rico behind the United States, averaging about 70,000 tourists annually compared to about 10,000 three years ago. "The growth rate is about 20 to 30 percent annually," said Carlos Diago, the deputy executive of the Puerto Rican tourism company.

"For the European, if he comes to Puerto Rico only, it's not so attractive," Mrs. Moran says. "But if you put in the Virgin Islands and other islands, it's better. We help ourselves and others at the same time."

Price Of Wine May See Drop

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The price of domestic wines could drop this year due to a record grape harvest, the strength of the U.S. dollar abroad and increased competition, winemakers say.

Americans continue to drink about 2 percent more wine each year, but the grape supply is growing 5 to 7 percent. At the same time, the dollar is rising against foreign currencies, making imported French and German wines a bargain. And the number of U.S. wineries has climbed from 240 in 1970 to 540 today, meaning more competition.

"Prices are coming down, based on a broad view," said Peter Mondavi, president of the Charles Krug Winery of St. Helena.

A Few Legal Handguns

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — Only police, antique firearms collectors and members of the city's lone gun club will be allowed to own handguns when a new law takes effect in this Chicago suburb.

The City Council voted 10-7 Monday to outlaw possession of most handguns, making it the second Illinois city to take such action. The community of Morton Grove passed a handgun ordinance last year.

Evanston's ordinance will become law 10 days after Mayor James C. Lytle signs it, probably Friday.

A Department of Transportation spokesman said the left turn lane at the Port Terminal Road, as well as turn lanes on N.C. 33 at the Mumford Road intersection and at the intersection of N.C. 11 and N.C. 11, will be completed when resurfacing work on the roadways is completed by Nov. 15. A left turn lane has also been provided for south-bound cars on Memorial Drive at the Chestnut Street intersection. That project should be completed in two weeks. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Hotels Fear Overbuilding

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — New hotel rooms in Charlotte are becoming available faster than customers are filling them, and innkeepers say they're worried.

Stalpers, general manager of the Radisson Plaza hotel in downtown Charlotte.

Marriott hotel downtown, a 300-room Marriott near Interstate 77 and a 291-room addition to the downtown Sheraton Center.

Members of the Metrolina Innkeepers Association will try to raise $25,000 to promote convention and visitor business to offset anticipated occupancy losses when the 1,011 new hotel rooms now under construction open.

"We need to do something very quickly," said Marie Earley, manager of the Charlotte Chamber of Commerce's convention bureau. "We can't assume these rooms will be absorbed in the marketplace."

Corporate and convention travelers now keep most of the local lodging industry's 7,321 rooms full during the week and nearly full on weekends, innkeepers say.

But a 13.8 percent increase in rooms in the next 18 months will mean business must increase by the same percentage to maintain current occupancy rates.

Innkeepers say that will be difficult because the recession is causing businesses and travelers to cut back.

Hotel executives say using money generated by a fund drive for promotions will attract more conventions and visitors to the area.

"Whether you noticed it or not, they're digging holes around this city, and we're going to have to start working for a living," said Frans

Gossip Lured By Better Pay

By ANN BLACKMAN WASHINGTON (AP) — Gossip columnist Diana McLellan, explaining why she and her sassy "Ear" feature are leaving the Washington Post, says the rival Washington Times has offered "enough to buy me."

"I'm going for money and for fun," said Mrs. McLellan. Her "Ear" items will run five days a week in the Washington Times, which is published by businesses associated with the Rev. Sun Myung Moon's Unification Church.

Mrs. McLellan refused to say how much the Times is paying her. "Let's just say they offered enough to buy me, enough for me to thoroughly enjoy myself," she said.

Mrs. McLellan quit the Post Wednesday to work for the Times, founded earlier this year.

Post executive editor Benjamin C. Bradlee left word at his office that he would have no comment on Mrs. McLellan's new job.

But Times executive editor Smith Hempstone said through a spokesman: "We have plucked the ripest peach in Ben Bradlee's orchard... Diana McLellan is the third Post staffer to join the Washington Times. We doubt she will be the last."

Jonathan Slevin, the spokesman, identified the other two as Mark Rouse, Times circulation manager, and Joe Scopin, a graphics editor.

For seven years, Mrs. McLellan has been writing a chatty, spicy column filled with details about the adventures and escapades of Washington's powerbrokers.

She also appeared for about six months within the last year as a commentator on the CBS Morning News. "I was canned with (anchor Charles) Kuralt," she said of her departure.

Mrs. McLellan's column is filled with chatter about who is married, divorced or pregnant. She drops hints about affairs and tells who is seen with whom at what parties or restaurants.

At the now defunct Washington Star where her column first appeared, Mrs. McLellan dubbed the Washington Post "the O.P." She infuriated Post editors and staffers by printing frequent items about their personal lives.

When the Star died last year, the Post picked up the syndicated column and all Post gossip became taboo.

The Post also insisted that each item be verified by two sources and the column be checked each day for possible libel problems by Post lawyers.

Mrs. McLellan said Wednesday she finally quit the Post "because the lawyers were so far apart on what the column should be."

Philip Evans, assistant managing editor of the Washington Times, said that as for checking the column for libel, "She will be treated as she was at The Star."

The column made headlines last fall when Mrs. McLellan falsely asserted that Jimmy Carter had bugged the Blair House residence of President-elect Ronald Reagan and his wife, Nancy, prior to the inauguration. Carter was furious and threatened to sue the Post if the paper did not retract the item and apologize. The Post eventually did both.

Mrs. McLellan, a grandmother at 43, is a short woman with curly blonde hair and a distinct British accent. She was born in Leicester, England, the daughter of British military officer and moved to Washington in 1957.

Her official resume says that she has worked as a poodle portraitist, a dress designer, a sales lady and a telephone operator.

Record Attendance At North Carolina's Zoo

ASHEBORO, N.C. (AP) — Record-smashing crowds are flowing into the North Carolina Zoo this summer, due in part to the opening of the $2 million Forest Aviary, officials say.

Zoo Director Robert Fry told a meeting of the N.C. Zoological Park Council on Wednesday that the zoo is surpassing yearly attendance marks. Paid attendance for July 1-Sept. 12 was 169,622, up more than 43,000 or 34.5 percent over the same period last year.

Total revenues for the same period are up 69.2 percent to $494,248, Fry said, crediting some of the revenue increase to the expansion of fast-food and refreshment services as well as an increase in admission prices.

Weekend and single-day attendance records were set at the zoo over the Labor Day holidays, Fry said. A total of 21,300 people visited the zoo Sept. 4-6 and set a new single-day attendance mark of nearly 10,000 on Sept. 5.

Fry said most were drawn by the new aviary which was opened to the public Sept. 3. Fry said the facility has received rave reviews and is getting national attention because of its unique design.

Built in part with a grant from R.J. Reynolds Industries of Winston-Salem, the six-sided structure contains 18,133 square feet of exhibit space. The aviary houses nearly 200 rare and exotic birds and 1,800 tropical plants under a bronzed-tinted glass dome roof.

As the zoo's first climate-controlled exhibit, the aviary should help draw more people during the fall and winter, said Fry, who added that attendance normally drops after schools open.

In other business, Fry told council members that the zoo will request some $300,000 from the next session of the state legislature to begin advance planning for the zoo's next geographic exhibit area, North America.

Reagan Defends Civil Rights Record At Meeting

By BETTY ANNE WILLIAMS

Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, making a big bet for black support in an election year, is defending his administration's civil rights record while promising the Republican Party will reach out for black votes.

Speaking before a group of black Republicans Wednesday night, Reagan said critics who claim his administration has backed off on civil rights enforcement are taking "just plain baloney."

There is no room in the Republican Party for bigots and the record shows that we have been firm in protecting civil liberties since entering office nearly 20 months ago," the president told a receptive audience of about 1,300 at a National Black Republican Council fund-raising dinner.

At the same time, Reagan stated his often-repeated contention that his administration has "laid the groundwork for better economic times ahead..." He pointed to the increases in the leading economic indicators and the surges in the stock market along with decreases in inflation and interest rates.

Reagan said the nation's economic health was damaged by Great Society social programs in the 1960s when the government "began eating away at the underpinnings of the private enterprise system."

Reagan said blacks "would be appreciably better off" if the programs, begun under President Lyndon Johnson, had never been implemented. They created "a new kind of bondage" for millions of American, Reagan said, threatening "the character of our people."

Turning to politics, Reagan said, "For too long now, black Americans seem to have been written off by one party and taken for granted by the other — and for the vast majority of black Americans, that's been a strictly no-win situation."

It is time for the GOP, the party frequently accused of ignoring blacks, to change, he said in a speech interrupted 27 times by applause.

"This conference is part of that outreach effort, as are the regional conferences, and our support for black congressional candidates. And this is only the beginning of our outreach efforts," he said.

In appealing for support for the GOP just six weeks before the November election, Reagan was talking to many who back his point of view. The council is an auxiliary to the Republican National Committee. Many council members are long-time Republicans who have been affiliated with the GOP for decades.

He and the first lady received warm, personal tributes from council members as well as endorsements of his program.

Legree Daniels, the council president who is from Harrisburg, Pa., credited Reagan with "taking America out of stormy waters."

"This administration is definitely committed to the goal of greater economic independence for the disadvantaged. No one will be left behind. Already, there are signs we're leaving those troubled waters. Now is not the time to change course," she said.

Vice President George Bush was scheduled to address the council this afternoon.

Reagan received less than 10 percent of the black vote in the last election. Polls have shown that he has failed to improve his standing among blacks even though he has said the GOP should expand its base among blacks.

Arthur Fletcher, who held several posts in the Nixon administration and now is a Washington-based consultant, said the Reagan decision to attend the dinner was a sign that the GOP is taking the right approach to blacks.

"I think we're on the threshold of significant growth in the Republican Party, particularly with this as a kickoff," Fletcher said. Henry Lucas, a San Diego dentist with close ties to Reagan's California associates, said blacks are to blame for their own low profile in both the GOP and the Democratic party.

"When we (blacks) begin to deliver the votes to elect some people to Congress, then we will begin to have clout," he said.

Cite ECU Role In Public Health

ECU News Bureau WINSTON-SALEM — The N.C. Public Health Association today cited the department of environmental health at East Carolina University with an award in recognition of outstanding cooperation and service to public health.

The department, in ECU's School of Allied Health and Social Professions, was presented the NCPHA's annual Nelson Group award at its statewide meeting here. The award commends the department for providing services and continuing education opportunities for public environmental health personnel.

The public service aspect of the program is such that if there is an environmental problem in which expert guidance and assistance is needed, the department is willing and ready to assist," the citation reads.

During the past year faculty and staff of the department developed and presented five workshops; analyzed 1,245 milk and water samples for local health departments; and consulted with public health sanitarians on matters relating to insect control, food sanitation, noise control, carbon monoxide monitoring and wastewater treatment. In addition the department's faculty served on a number of professional association committees and agency task forces.

The ECU Department of Environmental Health was authorized to offer a B.S. degree in 1971 and currently offers the only undergraduate program in the state accredited by the National Accreditation Council for Environmental Health Curricula.

The nomination of ECU for the award was made by the Environmental Health Section of the NCPHA. The final selection was made by a special committee representing the various sections of the association.

One Of 'Ten Most Wanted' Captured

NEW YORK (AP) — A 35-year-old fugitive, listed on the FBI's "10 most wanted list" for six years, was arrested as he stepped off an Amtrak train with suitcases full of weapons, authorities said.

Joseph McDonald, charged with stealing a $500,000 stamp collection more than a decade ago, was taken into custody Wednesday morning as he got off a train at Pennsylvania Station, authorities said.

After insisting for more than nine hours that he was John Kelly of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., McDonald finally admitted his true identity after police obtained a warrant to search his luggage, authorities said.

Police Inspector Dennis Ryan said McDonald then revealed his status on the most wanted list. A detective, who asked not to be identified, said McDonald was "tired of running."

When the suitcases were opened, police found two .38-caliber automatic guns, a .45-caliber automatic weapon similar to an Israeli Uzi submachine gun, three silencers and ammunition.

McDonald, who had boarded the train in Hollywood, Fla., was charged with illegal weapons possession.

Sgt. Ed Leschack said McDonald would be turned over to the FBI.

Ryan said police were waiting for McDonald after receiving a tip that he was carrying narcotics in the suitcases. There were no drugs.

When McDonald got off the train, dogs used by the U.S. Customs Service to sniff out narcotics and weapons picked up a scent in one of his suitcases, according to Leschack.

Stephen Mallek, one of the officers who approached McDonald at the train station, said the man offered no resistance.

McDonald, named on the most wanted list longer than any of the other nine, was wanted by the FBI on charges of interstate transportation of stolen property, criminal conspiracy and bond default, said an assistant FBI agent, Fred Verinder.

Execute Ghotbzadeh By Firing Squad

EARLY WINTER — Snow blankets Montana's capital city this week as the first wintry weather of the season invaded the Rocky Mountains. In the background is the Cathedral of St. Helena. Skies began clearing Wednesday. (AP Laserphoto)

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Sadegh Ghotbzadeh, the former Iranian foreign minister who fell from favor after opposing spy trials for the American hostages in Tehran, was executed by a firing squad for plotting to topple Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's government, the official Iranian news agency reported today.

The news agency IRNA said the execution was carried out in Tehran Wednesday night on the basis of a verdict issued by the Army Revolutionary Tribunal and approved by the High Judicial Court. IRNA gave no other details of the execution.

Three Plead 'No Contest'

ELIZABETH CITY, N.C. (AP) — Two contractors and one official pleaded no contest Wednesday to charges they conspired to restrain trade and were sentenced in connection with work done on the Pasquotank County water system.

T.A. Loving Co. of Goldsboro was fined $15,000. Bryant Utilities Construction Co. of High Point was fined $10,000 and Bryant President J. Lyndon Wall was given a six-month suspended sentence and a fine of $5,000 by Judge Donald Smith of Raleigh.

Bid-rigging charges were dismissed against Loving officials James Jerry Smith and Samuel P. Hunter as part of a plea-bargain agreement.

RGK Inc. of Burlington and RGK official Ronald G. Kirkpatrick are scheduled to be tried Oct. 11 on other bid-rigging charges in the case.

In addition, RWF Inc. of South Carolina and official Robert W. Finklea have been charged with conspiracy to commit false pretense and conspiracy to restrain trade on the water system. A third indictment against William Garrison, a consultant to several of the bidders, charges him with conspiracy to restrain trade.

Ghotbzadeh, 48, was arrested early in April and charged with masterminding a plot to overthrow the Islamic government and assassinate Khomeini, his one-time mentor and Iran's supreme revolutionary leader.

His close ties to Khomeini were evident in 1979 when Ghotbzadeh returned home after 20 years abroad on the same airplane as the exiled religious leader and promptly emerged as one of the most powerful men in Iran. He had been one of Khomeini's closest confidants ever since the ayatollah was exiled by the late Shah of Iran, Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, in 1963.

Ghotbzadeh was named foreign minister a few days after student radicals seized the U.S. Embassy, taking Americans hostage in November 1979. After 444 days in captivity, the 52 hostages were released Jan. 20, 1981 — the day President Reagan took office.

During the early months of the hostage crisis, Ghotbzadeh's face became a nightly feature on American television screens as he answered questions and gave his government's position on the hostages.

In June 1980, he openly opposed spy trials for the hostages that were being demanded by Iran's Moslem militants. At one point, Ghotbzadeh had supported such trials, but later moderated his stance to say only the United States — not the hostages themselves — should stand trial for alleged crimes against Iran.

Ghotbzadeh's opposition to the spy trials put him on a collision course with the militants holding the Americans and the Moslem extremists running the Parliament.

Later he was arrested by Islamic revolutionary guards and charged with criticizing government officials but was freed. He was stripped of his position in August 1980 and kept a low profile after leaving office.

He apparently made no attempt to leave Iran as did his fellow moderate, former President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr, who fled to France in 1981 after being ousted from power by Moslem fundamentalists in the regime.

Shortly after his April arrest, Ghotbzadeh appeared on Iran's state television and admitted he had conspired to blow up Khomeini's residence and to overthrow the government.

However, when his trial began last month, Ghotbzadeh pleaded innocent to the charge of plotting to assassinate Khomeini. He did admit to plotting against the government, IRNA reported at the time.

IRNA quoted Ghotbzadeh as saying during his trial, "We wanted to topple the government, but not Imam Khomeini. We wanted to preserve the Islamic republic plus the imam ... I believe in him but not in the others who are ruining the country and Islam."

Hojatoleslam Mohammed

Rey Shari, the prosecutor in the Moslem fundamentalist trial, said Ghotbzadeh headed a group of military and civilian conspirators who plotted to topple the government and blow up Khomeini's home with long-range artillery. He claimed Ghotbzadeh received funds from Saudi Arabia and other foreign sources to finance what was described as a revolutionary conspiracy of military men and civilians.

Costs Said To Exceed Benefit

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal regulation of auto emissions is reducing pollution, but the control devices are costing consumers more than they're worth, according to a report sponsored by a conservative think tank.

Lawrence J. White, an economics professor at New York University who conducted the study for the American Enterprise Institute, said it is costing billions of dollars each year to clean up the emissions.

Selection Of One Viewer For Emmy Award Honors

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The television industry gets to pat itself on the back Sunday night, when ABC presents coast-to-coast "thank you" on the Emmy Award show. Here are our choices. Thankfully, the acceptance speeches will be short.

Outstanding Drama Series: "Hill Street Blues" is writing the book on how a soap opera can be powerful, poignant, funny, sexy and dramatic. Nothing on TV comes close. All other cops on TV rinse out a pale blue. "Lou Grant, canceled by CBS, may get some sentimental votes. "Fame" is the year's best newcomer.

Outstanding Comedy Series: "M-A-S-H." The Korean War will end this season after 11 years.

Throughout, "M-A-S-H" has kept the patients and one-liners going. Despite its 1950s setting, "M-A-S-H" stays fresh with insights into human struggles, strengths and weaknesses. Won't ABC be embarrassed if "Taxi," canceled by ABC and picked up by NBC, wins? "Love, Sidney" is top new sitcom.

Outstanding Limited Series: "Town Like Alice" was THE dramatic love story of the year, the two movies about Prince Charles and Lady Di notwithstanding. Public TV dominates this category, with four of the contenders, including the funniest series, "Flickers." Only network nominee is "Marco Polo."

Outstanding Drama Special: "Skokie" made the events and divergent perspectives from the Nazis march come alive. Danny Kaye, in his first dramatic role for TV, truly is "multitalented."

Outstanding Variety, Music or Comedy Program: "SCTV Network" was a winner every time out, and it needed to be, arriving in the late, late-night. Slim pickings elsewhere, although "Night of 100 Stars" — with actually more than 200 stars — may have enough invitees to pad the voting box.

Outstanding Information Series: The networks also left this field to public television. Something about priorities. Tough choice between "Creativity With Bill Moyers" and "Middletown," which pointed its cameras at Muncie, Ind., and photographed a nation. Edge to "Middletown."

Outstanding Lead Actor in a Dramatic Series: Ed Asner ("Lou Grant") has alienated too many voters with his political stands, so that leaves it open for Daniel J. Travanti of "Hill Street Blues," whose Capt. Frank Furillo, the latest sex symbol, pulls off toughness and tenderness convincingly.

Outstanding Lead Actress in a Dramatic Series: The object of some of that tenderness is Veronica Hamel (Joyce Davenport). When she cried or went through a career crisis, we believed. And, when she cuddled up to Pizza Man in bed, it looked like they were playing for keeps.

Outstanding Lead Actor in a Comedy Series: Another difficult call. Alan Alda in "M-A-S-H" is the wisecracking medic who sometimes lets a feeling out. Judd Hirsch in "Taxi" expresses a few more emotions and is our pick, although Hal Linden may get the sentimental vote because "Barney Miller" ended its long run.

Outstanding Lead Actress in a Comedy Series: Carol Kane, who will be a regular this year on "Taxi," was better at her dialect than Andy Kaufman, and he invented the language. If she wins, let's hope she says "Thank you very much." Swoosie Kurtz held her own against Tony Randall in "Love, Sidney."

Outstanding Lead Actor in a Limited Series: Mickey

Rooney in "Bill" was so good as a retarded man that he made us forget how childish he can be in real life. And that takes some real acting. Anthony Andrews and Jeremy Irons will split the "Brideshead Revisited" faction.

Outstanding Lead Actress in a Limited Series: Wracked by the cancer that would kill her, Ingrid Bergman gave a courageous, beautifully acted performance. She was "Golda Meir."

Supporting Actress, Drama Series: Barbara Bosson, "Hill Street Blues"; Julie Harris, "Knots Landing"; Linda Kelsey, "Lou Grant"; Nancy Marchand, "Lou Grant"; Betty Thomas, "Hill Street Blues."

Supporting Actress, Limited Series or Special: Claire Bloom, "Brideshead Revisited"; Judy Davis, "Woman Called Golda"; Penny Fuller, "Elephant Man"; Vicki Lawrence, "Eunice"; Rita Moreno, "Portrait of a Showgirl."

Billy Graham In 'Considerable Pain'

MONTREAT, N.C. (AP) — Evangelist Billy Graham has canceled several appearances as he continues to recuperate from a back injury suffered in a fall in Spokane, Wash.

A spokesman said Graham was in "considerable pain" at his Montreat home and will be under a doctor's care for at least two weeks.

Graham canceled a visit to a U.S. Senate prayer breakfast Wednesday and a state dinner appearance at the White House Thursday night.

He also canceled appearances Friday at Wheaton College in Illinois and Monday at the Air Force Academy at Colorado Springs, Colo.

Donald L. Bailey, director of media relations for Graham's office in Minneapolis, said Graham hopes to appear at a religious lecture series in Chapel Hill, N.C., beginning Sept. 27.

"Right now, he is in a lot of pain and is confined to bed under doctor's orders," Bailey said Wednesday. "We are still planning to be in Chapel Hill as scheduled, but everything depends on how Mr. Graham recuperates in the next two weeks."

Bailey said Graham was injured when he, one of his sons and an associate were climbing a rock ledge to get a better view of the city of Spokane, where Graham was conducting a crusade.

Graham slipped on a rock and fell several feet, Bailey said. He said Graham broke no bones but severely bruised his coccyx and tore muscle and cartilage away from the bone.

"The only thing that can be done to heal the injury is rest, medication, hot compresses and soaking in hot water," Bailey said.

FOCUS

"Harmless Drudge"

Samuel Johnson, compiler of the first great dictionary of English, hoped his work would "secure our language from being over-run with [slang]". But he also included quotations from all of literature and science to create a "compendium of knowledge, pleasure, and moral instruction." The dictionary says nearly as much about its author as it does about our language. He defined himself, a lexicographer, as a "writer of dictionaries, a harmless drudge." Johnson's notorious dispute with his sponsor, Lord Chesterfield, found its way into the definition of a patron as: "a wretch who supports with insolence, and is paid with flattery." Samuel Johnson was born on this day in 1709.

Before the order Wednesday, U.S. District Judge James W. Kehoe had sentenced the men Tuesday to prison terms ranging from 12 to 20 years for their role in a $2 million kickback scheme involving union benefit funds.

The defendants were Alfred Pilotto, president of Chicago Local 5; James Caparale, secretary-treasurer of the Chicago District Council; Salvatore Tricario, recording secretary of Palm Beach Local 767, and John Guardiallo, president of Local 767.

Science, Math School Scores In Scholarships

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — The state's new science and math school should be expanded, officials said after learning the school ranked second in the nation in the number of semifinalists for a top scholarship.

Fifty-eight students at the North Carolina School of Science and Mathematics were named semifinalists for National Merit Scholarships on Wednesday, a total second only to a New York school.

Gov. Jim Hunt, who pushed for establishment of the school, hailed the news and said he hoped the school could accommodate more academically gifted students.

"This comes as good news to all of us who are concerned about public education in North Carolina," Hunt said. "These youngsters are being challenged, and they are responding."

The Durham school, now in its third year of operation, has 388 students — 235 juniors and 153 seniors. School officials hope to raise the enrollment to about 600 over the next few years, according to Phyllis S. Frothingham, assistant development officer.

"We turn away so many good kids because of limited space," Ms. Frothingham said. For example, more than 400 students were interviewed for this year's entering junior class and only 235 could be admitted, she said.

Students are selected on the basis of test scores, academic records and interest in science and mathematics. There is a heavy emphasis on personal interviews. This is the second consecutive year that the North Carolina school finished second in National Merit Scholarship competition to Stuyvesant High School in New York, which had 67 semifinalists. Stuyvesant is a larger school, with 2,600 students.

R. J. Reynolds in Winston-Salem had 24 semifinalists and Chapel Hill High School had 23.

The names of 15,000 semifinalists for 5,000 Merit Scholarships were announced late Wednesday by the National Merit Scholarship Corporation.

More than a million students entered the competition by taking the Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test-National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test in 1981.

A state committee will select finalists on the basis of their abilities, accomplishments and qualities important to success in later life. Winners will be announced in April and early May.

At least 1,500 of the scholarships will be one-time awards of $1,000. The remainder will be worth between $1,000 and $8,000 paid over four years of undergraduate study.

Adopt Compromise In Pesticide-Use

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Agriculture Committee approved a compromise bill Wednesday regulating pesticide use, including some changes sought by the chemical industry.

Committee Chairman Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., praised the compromise, saying, "The changes are necessary to maintain the welfare of the free enterprise system in the agriculture chemical industry."

Jay Feldman, national coordinator of the Washington-based National Coalition Against the Misuse of Pesticides, disagreed.

"There is nothing in it for the coalition of labor and environmentalists who have worked on this bill for so long," he said. "It is an industry-sided approach."

The House version allows individuals to sue federal pesticide law violators in federal court, not allowed in the Senate version.

The House and the Senate committee rejected language preventing states from passing pesticide laws more restrictive than federal law, but the committee's version makes it easier for companies to challenge state regulatory efforts in federal court.

Another key issue was a requirement that certain pesticide information be kept from public view for five years after its submission to the Environmental Protection Agency. The House dropped that, but imposed additional safeguards concerning the copying and publication of confidential information.

WEATHER FORECAST — The National Friday. Showers are due in the Southwest and Weather Service forecasts sunny skies and upper Great Lakes and Midwest. (AP warm weather for most of the nation on Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
Sunshine is expected for most of North Carolina over the next couple of days, the National Weather Service says.
A weak cold front moving through central Tennessee early this morning was expected to move slowly through the state tonight and Friday. High pressure over the upper Mississippi valley will move eastward behind the cold front and control North Carolina weather Friday.
The air will be fairly dry ahead of the cold front and the chances of precipitation are minimal, the weather service said. But another cold front will move rapidly across the midwest and will probably move into North Carolina early this weekend. That front will offer some chance of showers Saturday.

Temperatures will drop a bit on Friday after the first cold front moves through. But the second will make the mercury drop noticeably.
Skies were partly cloudy throughout the state Wednesday. A few showers and thunderstorms developed during the afternoon across the state. For the most part rainfall was light, but in the mountains Spruce Pine had nearly an inch and Boone had around a third of an inch.
High temperatures Wednesday ranged from the 70s and low 80s in the mountains to around 90 in some areas east of the mountains. Greensboro, Raleigh-Durham and Fayetteville all had highs of 90 degrees to tie for the highest in the state. The coolest was Spruce Pine in the northern mountains with a high of only 70 degrees.

During the night, skies were mostly clear. A couple of thunderstorms moved south out of southern Virginia into northeast Piedmont and the sandhills.

Hearing Is Set Monday

The Governor's Advocacy Council for Persons with Disabilities and Greenville parent's organizations will sponsor a public hearing here Monday to discuss proposed changes in Public Law 94-142, the federal regulation which guarantees appropriate public education for all handicapped children.

The hearing will be held at 7:30 p.m. at the Willis Building, corner of First and Reade streets.

Proposed federal changes would reduce the services now provided to physically and mentally handicapped students and reduce the role of parents in the evaluation, placement and review of individual educational plans for their children. These changes will be explained during the meeting and parents and other interested persons will be advised how to send comments to the Department of Education and their legislators.

Predicts Benefits From Tax Increase

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A University of North Carolina professor told a legislative panel Wednesday that higher alcohol taxes would reduce the number of cirrhosis victims and people killed by drinking drivers.
"Alcohol taxes prevent disease and premature death," said Dan Beauchamp, an associate professor in UNC's School of Public Health and author of a book on alcohol and public policy.
The comments came during a meeting of the Legislative Research Commission's Committee to Study Taxation of Alcoholic Beverages. The panel is to report to the General Assembly its findings on beverage taxes next year.
Beauchamp cited a study by a Duke University professor who is a member of the National Academy of Science panel on alcohol policy. The professor studied alcohol consumption before and after states raised taxes on alcohol between 1960 and 1975.
Of 39 price changes, the Duke professor found that 30 slowed the increase in alcohol consumption. The professor found similar slowing of increases in cirrhosis and auto fatalities.

Beauchamp said nearly half the adults in North Carolina don't drink at all, a percentage that has remained almost constant over the years. He said the trend may be changing.
In the 1970s, alcohol consumption in North Carolina grew 22 percent, twice the national rate. Almost all of the growth was in beer, he said.
"There's a fiscal crisis," Beauchamp said of the economy. "We're going to raise alcohol taxes. It's just a matter of time."
Representatives of restaurant owners and Alcoholic Beverage Control boards said they oppose a tax increase. They were scheduled to speak at length at next month's committee meeting.
