Lebanese Militia Crushed In West Beirut By Israeli

By FAROUK NASSAR
Associated Press Writer
BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli tanks today crushed the last major Lebanese militia resistance to their occupation of west Beirut in defiance of U.S. demands to withdraw, and Russian diplomats said Israeli troops had occupied the Soviet Embassy in the Lebanese capital.

But the Israeli army command in Tel Aviv said,
"We deny officially that we took over the Soviet Embassy in Beirut."

In Washington, meanwhile, the State Department said the United States protested to Israel over a shooting incident Thursday in which an Israeli officer reportedly fired at and missed an unarmed U.S. Marine standing guard atop the U.S. Embassy in west Beirut. It said the bullet missed by two feet.

There was no immediate comment from Israel.

Three Israeli armored personnel carriers were posted outside the high-walled Soviet Embassy compound, but the soldiers would not talk to reporters.

A group of Soviet diplomats came to a back door at the embassy and one, speaking broken English,
told Western reporters:
"They (Israelis) occupied the buildings of our school, consulate and living quarters and they are taking everything in this buildings."

He claimed, the Israelis entered the grounds with a tank, damaging the gate and three cars. It was unclear when the incident occurred, and there was no apparent damage to two of the embassy's gates.

"Now they are sitting at the room of the consul with machine guns, and what can we do," he said, grinning.
"We objected, but they didn't do anything."

He said the ambassador was in the embassy building, and Moscow had been informed.

The Soviet government charged several times earlier that its embassy compound in Beirut had been hit by Israeli artillery.

A report by the Soviet news agency Tass on July 31 said two Israeli artillery shells exploded in the Soviet Embassy compound in Beirut on July 30, seriously damaging one building. Tass said then it was the sixth time that the Soviet Embassy grounds had been hit.

Among the key positions taken by Israeli forces Thursday was the area around the Soviet complex in the Corniche Mazraa shopping district and in the high-rise building of Moscow's Narodny Bank in Hamra street.

Earlier there was speculation that several leftist militia leaders had taken refuge in the Soviet compound before the Israelis firmed their grip on the central shopping thoroughfare.

Beirut newspapers said Israeli forces seized the Iranian Embassy building at the seaside Jnah neighborhood on Thursday, ripping down portraits of Iran's revolutionary patriarch Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

War correspondents reported today that Israeli tanks and troops flushed out diehard members of the Mourabitoun militia after a three-hour barrage, then searched house-to-house for weapons and blared warnings in Arabic to hiding gunmen to surrender their weapons.

The Mourabitoun,
Lebanon's most powerful armed leftist Moslem group, fought alongside Palestine Liberation Organization guerrillas during Israel's 14-week-old invasion of Lebanon.

State radio said shells aimed at the Mourabitoun headquarters ignited several fires nearby in the Abu Shaker neighborhood on the edge of Corniche Mazraa.
Correspondents reported the fall of Abu Shaker eliminated the last serious resistance to Israel's two-day-old sweep into west Beirut.

The Mourabitoun's Voice of Arab Lebanon radio station was off the air and telephone calls to the leftists' command post went unanswered.

The state radio said the Israelis moved an additional 150 tanks into west Beirut overnight as high-flying Israeli jets dropped flares that lit up the sky over the occupied Moslem half of the Lebanese capital.

By nightfall Thursday, the Israelis commanded most of west Beirut, but witnesses said fighting continued in the Moslem neighborhoods of Barbir and Tarik Jeddah.
The combatants clashed in darkness overnight because of an unexplained power failure.

Both neighborhoods are strongholds of the Mourabi-
ist militia which was allied with the Palestine Liberation

Organization in opposing the 14-week-old Israeli invasion of Lebanon.

Lebanese police said most other areas remained quiet after hours of fighting that
and 110 wounded.

Pilot Program In Pitt To Verify Free Lunch Needs

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer
Pitt County is part of a pilot study being conducted for the federal government by a private firm to determine the most cost-effective way to authenticate the income of candidates for free lunch, a measure mandated by Congress.

Five counties in North Carolina — Caswell, Wake, Buncombe Lee and Pitt — were randomly chosen along with 65 other school systems in the United States to be the guinea pigs for the verification process.

"We have not in the past been required to verify the income of applicants," according to Donna Ware, food services director for the Pitt County school system.

"Now, Congress has said the Food and Nutrition Service of the Department of Agriculture must assure collection of accurate information on free lunch applications and has hired Applied Science Management and Development Associates to find the least expensive way to get the right info."

The process, Mrs. Ware said, involves sending the revised applications for free lunch home from the schools to the parents, which was done this week. The parents then fill out the documents, which resemble an income tax form, and return them to the schools by Oct. 1.

By Nov. 1 Applied Science Management will notify the county whose applications must be verified and Mrs.
Ware will contact these people.

"We don't know how many or who will be checked," said

"Applied Science Management will determine that. We have been told, however, that 10 percent of the applications will be verified."

She emphasized that the schools will have different verification processes. "A parent may have a child at Conley and one at Cox and they may be doing extremely different verifications," she explained. "The firm also determines how the various schools will verify the information."

Mrs. Ware said she thinks verification is a step in the right direction, and agrees with the government's concern over methods and cost-cutting.

"I think it's a worthwhile project," she said. "They (the federal government) should find out if an approach works before they mandate it."

"This is unusual in that other with other mandates we (food services) have been told exactly how to do it and this time they're trying to find the most cost-effective means instead."

Although it places extra work on her, Mrs. Ware said she was pleased to be part of the study. "I think the majority of taxpayers will appreciate that the correct information is being placed on the forms and that only those that qualify will receive benefits," she said.

"It will be interesting to see how this study will affect the number of free lunches in the county," she added. "I'm sure there will be those who can't fill the document out, those that see the document and don't want to bother with it. And then there's some that may be falsifying on the application."

The principals in the various schools will be available to help parents fill out the form, said Mrs.
Ware. Children of parents who do not return their forms to the school by Oct. 1 will receive no free lunch, she emphasized.

Design Study Of Town Common Is Presented City

TOWN COMMON MODEL ... Ed
Martin, right, of Pitt Community College and Mayor Percy Cox look over a model of the Town Common area that was made by students in PCC's architectural drafting pro-

A design study and model of the Town Common area along First Street have been presented to the city by architectural drafting students at Pitt Community College, who suggested activities that could be staged along the Tar River that would attract all age groups.

Mayor Percy Cox accepted on behalf of the city the colorful three-foot by six-foot model and a series of perspective drawings that will be displayed at city hall.

Ed Martin, head of the architectural drafting department at PCC, said the purpose of the study for the Town Common area was to design area activities for all ages that would bring people to downtown Greenville.

The students constructed the model, conducted ecological and environmental studies, and drew perspective drawings showing possible activities. Martin said the design could be implemented in several stages.

The development of boat ramps, docks and parking for about 30 cars was suggested in the first stage, while the second stage of the project would involve moving "Sunday in the Park" to the common. The purchase of a stage and movable canopy was mentioned as a necessity.

The third phase, according to the students, would involve purchasing a movable canopy to house people for relaxing along the river and providing entertainment for Greenville and Pitt County citizens. Martin cited talent that is available in the Greenville and university area that could be utilized as a means of encouraging people to visit the river area.

Martin said the fourth phase would be to provide a quiet area for relaxing. He said several water falls could be built, utilizing reusable water, and an arts and crafts structure could be added near the Greene Street bridge area.

The spokesman suggested that vending push-carts might be operated to help generate funds. Industry, business and private individuals might be called upon to help finance the future planned development, he said, mentioning that the chamber of commerce and environmental groups are also involved in the project.

Martin said other towns are utilizing their water front properties and the local Town Common should be used by area citizens. He said he felt funds could be generated to undertake development of the common.

Cox, saying the proposals provide "food for thought," said that "one thing that makes Greenville the great city it is" is the ability of its people to look ahead. He said the Town Common can be a "great asset to the whole

HUNGER PROJECT FEEDBACK

Since Hotline appealed some months ago for participants in the Hunger Project, an active group of Greenville people working to end hunger in the world by the end of this century has developed. On Sept. 25, from 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m., an in-depth briefing will be held on hunger, the major assumptions and false beliefs about why hunger persists, and what each person can do to participate in ending hunger. The program is such, Jennifer Baughn, a local coordinator said, that persons wishing to take part need to let her know in advance so materials can be available for each. For more information call Mrs. Baughn

Another Confrontation Faces PCB Dump Site

AFTON, N.C. (AP) — The Rev. Leon White, jailed
Wednesday for demonstrating against a toxic waste landfill in Warren County, posted bond today to appear at a protest rally as the trucks carrying PCBs continued to roll.

White, who entered the Coley Springs Baptist Church to a standing ovation by about 100 demonstrators, called on black leaders to help stop the movement of PCBs into the landfill.

White had promised to stay in jail until the dumping stopped, but decided to get out and join today's demonstration.

"We need you right now.
Tomorrow might be too late.
Gov. Jim Hunt is practicing genocide against the black community and against poor whites," he said.

Outside the church about 15 state highway patrol cars lined the road leading to the dump site, prepared for another confrontation if the demonstrators try to block the trucks as they have for the past two days.

The Rev. Ben Chavis said he moved the rally indoors to keep police from determining how many demonstrators were on hand.

"Some of us will be going back to jail today for the second time," said White.

He said he fasted and prayed as a demonstration against the PCBs while he was in jail.

Fred Taylor of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference in Atlanta also was on hand for this morning's demonstration.

Chavis said rally leaders had tried to arrange a protest rally in Raleigh, but were denied a march permit because authorities needed 72 hours notice. Hunt was in Tennessee Friday attending a trade conference.

"I want to tell Jim Hunt there's nowhere to run and nowhere to hide," Chavis said.

"Jim Hunt can bring in the Army, Navy or the Marines, but we have only begun to fight," said Chavis at a rally Thursday night. "It is wrong to put poison in a community that needs to live."

Seven people were arrested earlier Thursday as they tried to keep trucks from dumping the soil in the landfill, bringing the two-day total of arrests in connection with the dumping to 62.

Oil laced with PCBs was dumped illegally along North Carolina roadsides four years ago. After a lengthy search, officials selected a site in Warren County for a landfill to store the dirt on which the oil was sprayed.

Warren County officials and residents hotly objected, and some accused the state of choosing the site because the county is rural and predominantly black.

An Overrun Playground For Europe's Masses

By MORT ROSENBLUM
AP Special Correspondent
NICE, France (AP) — The Riviera this season features a beach war starring Brigitte Bardot, a battle between writer Graham Greene and the local Mafia, Socialists soaking the rich, and hordes of nude extras.

No longer the preserve of crowned heads and literary luminaries, the Cote d'Azur — the French Riviera — is now an elegant, if overrun, summertime playground for Europe's masses.

The Riviera's flowered ports and medieval walls have resisted change for centuries, but democratization is encroaching.

France's Socialist government has ordered the demolition of private walls blocking access to beaches, including Miss Bardot's. New taxes have thrown real estate into chaos, and unsold million-dollar villas flood the market.

Petty crime — known as "petite violence" — is blamed locally on North Africans here under relaxed immigration policies and on penniless backpackers who sleep on benches where aristocrats once paused on their strolls.

Surface change is evident at a glance.

The rich and famous who still migrate here stay mostly within their landscaped precincts, leaving the masses in public view.

Enough gold-lame glitter and bare-breasted insouciance remains, in a setting of gardens and Napoleonic splendor, to give Nice the 24-hour feel of an Asbury Park run wild.

The lighted "C" is out at the Palais de la Mediterranee, so the looming word "ASINO" casts a seedy air over the tiled beachfront Promenade des Anglais. The promenade's six traffic lanes clog with greasy-haired kids in convertibles making kissing noises at passing blondes.

Outside, scruffy youths with backpacks look in horror at the posted menu prices and cross the boulevard to eat tomatoes and cheese on the sand. They sleep in the train station, on beaches and in parks where the city has not yet planted sticky bushes to discourage them.

Further west, beyond what purists call the Riviera, St. Tropez has its usual 1,000 percent summer population increase, but merchants grumble that most won't pay $2 for a cup of coffee.

In between, vegetables patches and empty lots overflow with campers, tents and trailers with license plates from halfway around the world.

Along the coast, newspapers are filled with signs of the times: gang fights between North African laborers and local toughs; deaths from drug overdose; people stabbed by muggers; wealthy Lebanese relieved of jewelry in spectacular heists.

This year, since Graham Greene jabbed his pen into the Riviera Mafia, attention has focused on casino take-overs, real estate scams and drug deals, all with the alleged protection of certain authorities and police officers.

Cannes, with thriving casinos, a wait-list at the yacht basins and patrols with German shepherds to keep the riffraff at bay, exudes its old ambience. But it, too, has changed.

Now at the Carlton Hotel, less than one car in 10 in the flowered driveway is a Rolls-Royce. Others include a jeep with Arizona plates owned by a Saudi. In posh places, Arabic is heard as much as English, along with a smattering of French.

But, old-timers assert, most of that is skin deep.

"The old crowd is here, and no one is going anywhere," said Jean-Claude Merle, a writer and boulevardier who helped pioneer St. Tropez's new age.

"We put up with 45 days of madness each summer, that's all."

The campaign to open beaches, led by Minister of the Sea Louis Le Pensec, has caused the most stir. It threatens opulent beachfront homes, such as West German heiress Christina von Opel's private port in St. Tropez and the exclusive preserve of Cap d'Antibes.

Under laws tracing back to 1681, all property owners must leave a strip of public access along the coast. If they have built to the water, they must knock down whatever is necessary for right-of-way.

But Le Pensec, in a dramatic opening gesture, sent bulldozers to level the St. Tropez wall of Lucette Thomazo, for years a leading Communist Party militant.

She filed a restraining order, and the resultant furor shifted the affair into politics. Few missed the irony of a Communist leader fighting what was seen as a symbol of leftist action against the overprivileged.

Miss Bardot also fought back, to considerable sympathy from St. Tropez townfolk who have seen the persistent gawkers struggling to sneak a look at France's reclusive former sex symbol.

If her 20-year-old permit for a private wall is not renewed, she told reporters, she will move to Mexico.

The basic structure along the Cote d'Azur is a string of towns and villages, with independent-minded people who hold fiercely to their own interest.

Traditional communities protect their ancient stones and old trees, keeping buses in special lots — and keeping people off the grass — with assiduous rigor.

Beach towns have been adapting slowly to summer visitors since Toby Smolett, an English doctor, decided here in 1763 that sea-bathing was good for the health.

There is always room for one not concerned with being seen in the right place. When the 2,000-car lot is jammed at

Abby Doesn't Agree With Cure

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I want to share this absolutely miraculous method for preventing motion sickness.

Take a small amount of Mentholatum and place it in the navel about half an hour before getting on a plane or train or into an automobile. You will not have any motion sickness whatsoever! I couldn't believe it, but I tried it and it worked for me!

As it was explained to me, the navel is the point of many nerve endings, and that's what does the trick.

Please let the astronauts know. I understand that some of them get very nauseated on flights.

INFO FROM GLADSTONE, ORE.

DEAR INFO: If this works, it must be psychological because I am advised that there is no scientific (or medical) reason why Mentholatum in the navel should prevent motion sickness.

This "miraculous preventative" can be compared to wearing a copper bracelet to alleviate arthritis. If one believes strongly enough that it will, in some cases it does.

DEAR ABBY: I know you get many problems concerning unmarried couples who are living together, and some of them are probably of the Jewish faith. I wonder if they are aware that sexual intercourse constitutes a valid form of marriage in the Jewish religion. Therefore, the good news is that their living together is not sinful!

Now for the bad news: After living together, in order to be validly married to someone else, they would have to obtain a "get" (a religious divorce) from a rabbi.

ARTHUR J. MORGAN, NEW YORK

DEAR ARTHUR: Wait, there's more bad news: My consultant on Orthodox Jewish law, Rabbi Samuel A. Friedman (formerly of Asheville, N.C.; now semi-retired in Silver Spring, Md.), offers: "A Jewish couple living together without canopy and sanctification (i.e. 'benefit of clergy') is definitely sinful in the laws and eyes of all conventional Jewish groups and the majority of society."

The Talmud, in Kiddushin, Chapter I, reads: "A woman is acquired (in marriage) in three ways... by money, by deed, or by intercourse." These methods require a formal sanctification by prescribed ritual with accredited witnesses.

"Even a betrothed woman cannot be freed without a divorce, though cohabitation is still forbidden. So severe is this, that if a couple lives together without a formal marriage, they are living in sin, and should they separate after some length of time, they must have a 'get' (Jewish divorce) in order to marry another person."

"The Best of Dear Abby," featuring Abby's best answers and favorite responses during the past 25 years, is now available. You can obtain a copy of this new best-selling book by sending $9.95 plus $1 for postage and handling to "The Best of Dear Abby," in care of this newspaper, 4400 Johnson Dr., Fairway, Kan. 66205. Make checks payable to Universal Press Syndicate.

The town of Ville Marie, now the city of Montreal, was founded by Sieur de Maisonneuve in 1642.

Pamplonne Beach, the sand is almost deserted in downtown St. Tropez, a few miles away.

The "back country" absorbs the overflow, offering spectacular mountain views and such specialties as the fabled dinner tables of Mougins and the perfume-producing flower fields of Grasse.

Crime, many say, is just a price to pay.

"It has always been that way," said Guy Riffet, editor of the daily Nice-Matin and a life-long resident. "You have people with a lot of money and people without any who want it. It's a terrible mixture."

SKILLMAN, N.J. (AP) — Children's toys should be designed to provide learning experiences for the child, according to a behavioral scientist.

Dr. Doris Welcher, a consultant for Johnson & Johnson Child Development Toys, says toys should attract attention, be easy to handle, and provide consequences or rewards that reinforce a child's exploratory and play behaviors.

She also says toys should encourage social, emotional, physical and intellectual development through play.

ATLANTA (AP) — The entire family may suffer physical stress when one of its members has a painful disease such as arthritis, says the Arthritis Foundation.

"Research shows that when husbands and wives observe expressions of pain by their spouse, they have a physical response in the nerve endings of their own

Homemaker's Haven

By Evelyn L. Spangler
Pitt Home Agent

Fiberglass: Fiberglass bathtubs and showers bring advantages and disadvantages to home care. On the plus side, fiberglass is practically unaffected by chemicals and it's resistant to mildew. However, fiberglass is softer and more porous than porcelain and therefore scratches easily.

The key to success in keeping these tubs and showers clean is frequent cleaning. Clean the tub with dishwashing liquid and water. If a stubborn ring appears, try using a paste made from automatic dishwashing detergent or liquid water softener as a cleaning agent. Not even soft scrub cleaners are recommended for fiberglass. Although they are not as harsh as regular cleaners, they do contain abrasives.

To make cleaning easier in the future, wax the sides of the bathtub or shower with a cream appliance wax or paste wax. Remember, wax only the sides of the tub or shower; waxing the bottom will create a safety hazard.

Porcelain Enamel: Porcelain enamel is one of the hardest and most durable finishes found in the home. Even so, it may become scratched or chipped. Clean porcelain enamel kitchen and bathroom fixtures after each use, using a mild soap or detergent. Rinse thoroughly. Remove stubborn stains with a non-abrasive cleanser; a harsh abrasive cleaner might scratch the surface, creating areas for dirt and soil to cling. Once the fixture is scratched, these marks cannot be removed. Eventually, porcelain enamel finishes may be damaged to the point that the base metal is exposed.

Dull or discolored areas that appear around drains may be caused by mineral oxides in the water. These stains may be removed by saturating with vinegar, slightly diluted lemon juice, or a commercial stain remover. NOTE: Paper towels saturated in these cleaning solutions may be placed over the stain to speed up the bleaching action.

Compliment Younger Set

When you compliment children, be sure you're telling them something, suggests Dr. Frances Wagner, extension human development specialist at North Carolina State University.

If children do something well, let them know it.

For example telling your son, "You're a good boy" doesn't give the child any indication of why he is good.

Instead, say something like "You did a good job making your bed today" or "Sometimes it's hard to be patient, but you sure tried."

These comments tell children what things they do well and help them see where they can improve.

AARP Has Musical Topic

Christopher Deane gave a musical program at the meeting of the Greenville Chapter of the American Association of Retired Persons Monday.

He gave the history of several percussion instruments, explained how they were used and performed on several. He is artist in residence at Pitt Community College.

Eva Cain, president, conducted the business session and welcomed Alma Paramore and Ludmila Sherwood as new members. Polly Dail announced that a series of workshops on "Health and the Older Adult" will begin in late October.

Bill Cobb reported on progress toward getting more train service in this area and told of a new organization, National Association of Railroad Passengers and explained its functions.

The next meeting will be held Oct. 11. The nominating committee will present a slate of officers.

COOKING IS FUN

COME FOR DESSERT
Cherry Cobbler
Hot or Iced Tea or Coffee
CHERRY COBBLER
Make the most of the season's last cherries.
1½ pounds sweet red cherries, stemmed and pitted (4 cups)
Sugar
1 cup fork-stirred all-purpose flour
½ teaspoon baking powder
Pinch of salt
¾ of a ¼-pound stick butter (¼ cup)
1 large egg
Grated rind of 1 medium orange (about 2 teaspoons)
¼ cup orange juice

In a 10 by 6 by 2-inch baking dish mix together cherries and ½ cup sugar. Stir together flour, baking powder and salt. Cream butter and 1-3rd cup sugar; beat in egg until blended; add flour mixture, orange rind and orange juice; stir only until flour mixture is moistened. Spread over cherries. Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in the center comes out clean of batter — 45 minutes. Good served warm with vanilla ice cream. Makes 6 servings.

COMPANY DINNER
Marinated Sardines Rolls
Roast Lamb Vegetables
French Chocolate Cake
MARINATED SARDINES
Easy, unusual and good.
Juice of ½ of a medium lemon (about 1½ tablespoons)
¼ cup dry white wine
¼ teaspoon crushed dried thyme
½ of a small onion, thinly sliced and separated into rings
¾-ounce can brisling sardines in olive oil Minced parsley

In a shallow rectangular serving dish (we used one with sloping sides and about 8 by 4 inches across the top), stir together the lemon juice, wine and thyme. Arrange the onion rings at each narrow end of the dish. With a small metal spatula, lift the sardines from the oil and arrange them between the onion rings. Cover tightly with saran and refrigerate for 3 to 12 hours, spooning the marinade over the onion and sardines several times. Before serving, sprinkle generously with the parsley. Makes 4 servings.

PCC Space Problems

Pitt Community College says it must abandon its open door policy because of lack of facilities.

President William Fulford announced Sunday that the "open door policy is no longer."

The open door policy was adopted for the state's community college system and it meant that no one who wished to attend classes would be denied admission.

PCC is one of a number of community colleges which is now turning students away.

Dean of Students Edgar Boyd cited nursing, allied health and data processing as areas where enrollment is being cut off.

Contributing to the lack of space has been a 35 percent growth rate since 1977, which Dr. Fulford says has been in the technical and vocational programs, rather than college parallel.

We have no doubt that the need for "bricks and mortar" is there and that deserving students cannot get into the courses they desire.

We hope, however, that Pitt Community College is carefully examining its offerings and giving priority to courses which best suit the students to earning a living. Every course takes up space and no doubt all course offerings are desirable. If we have a space crunch, though, let's see that the most practical courses from the student's standpoint are the first ones offered.

Finding more money at every level of government is going to be tough for some time into the future. We want Pitt Community College to have the space it needs. Providing it may be some time away, however. In the meantime let's make every effort to see that we use the space we have with utmost efficiency.

Not A Healthy Climate

There were people who wondered why the U.S. Marines were in a hurry to get out of Lebanon once the PLO guerrilla troops departed.

They should wonder no longer.

Italy also pulled its crack unit of peace-watchers out of West Beirut just a few days after the Marines left. The French troops stayed on.

Somebody shot at the French.

And, just to re-emphasize that Lebanon is not yet really ready for tourism, the Israeli have done some shooting of their own; and their air force attacked Syrian and Palestinian positions about 20 miles east of Beirut.

Developments since then have all been downhill.

The Marines did what they were assigned to do: help assure an orderly and peaceful evacuation, and then they got out of town.

It's just as well. The climate is not healthy.

A Very Human Comedy

The lady came in to see Senator Jesse Beenbag the other day. She was carrying a baby in her arms.

Beenbag immediately called in the Senate photographer to have his picture taken with it.

"It's mighty kind of you to stop by," the senator said, trying to usher her out of his office after the picture taking.

"I didn't come to have my picture taken," the woman said.

"Then why are you here?"

"You're leading the fight against abortion, and I thought you could help me with this unwanted baby."

"You mean you don't want this baby?"

"No, sir. I have five more at home and I can't afford to feed them. I figured since you are so interested in human life, you could tell me where I could get some help to raise government has to get out of the child-rearing business."

"Since you're so concerned about the value of human life, why don't you take the kid?"

"What would I do with a child?"

"That's the question I keep asking myself."

"Have you gone to the local child services office?"

"They closed it because the government cut off all their funds. The local charities have no money, and all the food programs are going out of business."

"Then get a job," Beenbag said impatiently.

"I'm trying to. But even if I found one I couldn't afford the day-care center. I decided to come to you as a last resort because of your interest in a baby's right to life."

"You came to the wrong person," Beenbag said angrily. "My bill makes it a federal crime NOT to have a baby. But it doesn't provide continuing services for people who have one. Why is your kid crying?"

"I guess he's hungry," the lady said. "Unwanted children cry a lot."

"You're not going to change my stand on abortions just because your baby is crying," Beenbag warned. "Were you sent by the Planned Parenthood people?"

"No, it was my idea. I saw you on television a while back saying it was a mortal sin for a pregnant woman to abort, so I had my baby. Since you were so adamant on the subject I thought you or President Reagan might have some ideas as to what I do now."

"Madame, I'm a very busy person. I'm trying to get prayers back in school, protect the tobacco industry, and fight the hand-gun control lobby. I don't have time to worry about your child's this one."

"My interest in human life starts at conception and ends with the fetus. Once the baby is born, you're on your own."

"That's what I was afraid of. How come if the Reagan government is so concerned about preventing people from having abortions, they keep cutting back on all the services for unwanted children?"

"The government cannot afford to take care of children after they're born. We can't fund every screwball social program for unwanted children, or we'll never have a balanced budget."

"So what do I do with the kid?"

"Madame, I have no idea what you should do with your child. But if you think the anti-abortion forces are going to support it from the cradle to the grave, you're sadly mistaken. The federal

THIS AFTERNOON

See Few Debates

By PAUL T. O'CONNOR

RALEIGH — There won't be many face-to-face debates in this year's 10 contested congressional races in North Carolina. So far, the Democratic and Republican candidates for Congress have debated in only one district and only in one other district does it appear that the candidates will get together before Election Day.

Eleventh District Rep. Billy Hendon debated his opponent Jamie Clarke early in September and the two plan at least one more meeting. Sixth District Rep. Gene Johnston will debate his Democratic opponent Robin Britt twice in October.

Republican candidates have challenged Democratic incumbents in at least two other districts and those congressmen — plus the Democratic candidate for the 2nd District's open seat — have refused. In several races, there have been no discussions yet of whether a debate will be held.

The challenger has everything to gain from a debate challenge. If it's accepted, the challenger gets good exposure, a chance to show he's competent and an equal billing with the incumbent.

As Britt's campaign manager said, "The debate offers the people a chance to readily compare the two men and its not simply a matter of trying to win the debate — Although you certainly want to do that." If the incumbent refuses, as most do, then the challenger has an issue. "Why won't Congressman Blowhard debate the issues?"

One incumbent who refused to debate is 3rd District Rep. Charlie Whitley who turned down GOP opponent Eugene "Red" McDaniel. Whitley explained: "I don't think I have any obligation to help provide him with a forum to disseminate his views." McDaniel has made an issue out of the refusal to debate.

Even if you're not an incumbent, it's not wise to debate if you are well ahead as Tim Valentine is thought to be in his 2nd District race with Jack Marin. State GOP Chairman Dave Flaherty agrees with that political strategy. He says Bill Cobey is ahead of 4th District Rep. Ike Andrews. If he was in Cobey's position, would he issue a debate challenge? "I don't think I would if I was Bill Cobey. Why get into something like that,"

PAUL T. O'CONNOR

Flaherty asked. "A candidate who is close and is moving up doesn't want to (debate) because he might mess up."

Other Editors Say A Way It Was

(The Greensboro Record)

It was John Milton who once wrote:

"I call therefore a complete and generous education that which fits a man to perform justly, skillfully and magnanimously all the offices both private and public of peace and war."

Once that was the way it was. A successful man was one with a "complete and generous education" equipped to perform in a variety of fields. Many of our founding fathers — James Madison, Thomas Jefferson, and not the least, George Washington — qualified as knowledgeable men in an assortment of disciplines. That was the mark of an educated man.

During the era of the renaissance man, versatility was the ideal — Leonardo Da Vinci, for example.

The trend of the last half of the 20th century, however, has been to specialization. The well-read, the well-educated person who is at home in all the offices of peace and war is seldom in demand.

Our colleges and universities, for the most part, have done little to discourage that trend. The vice president for academic affairs of the University of North Carolina system agrees that "it's understandable and predictable that students see a real advantage in pursuing a program that has a clear vocational link."

The last real bastions of liberal arts — aside from hallowed centers of learning like Harvard, Yale, Princeton and the University of Chicago — are the small, private, church-related colleges. Frequently this has been more a matter of economics than idealism. These schools simply are not financially able to provide the wide range of laboratories and equipment needed to teach technical skills.

In any event, shortcomings in the pursuit of purely technical knowledge are becoming evident. Such courses don't provide the background needed in areas such as communicating in the English language, the written and spoken word.

Ben H. Battle, director of special services and teacher placement at Western Carolina University, predicts a comeback for the liberal arts degree. John M. Belk, chairman of the board of Belk Services, Inc., thinks a liberal arts major gives a person an edge in "communicating skills" in today's business world.

Naturally, we can't all be Da Vincis. Yet there is something to be said for a world populated by people with a "complete and generous education."

Strength For Today

GOD AT WORK?

Anyone who reads history cannot fail to be impressed, and appalled, by the dismal record of atrocities it presents. And these make one wonder whether God is really "on the job." If he is indeed loving in nature, and not a mere impersonal force far removed from us in the universe, how could he allow such things to happen?

Yet when we think in terms of centuries, we see that the human race does progress, and conditions do improve — if only slightly and gradually. For example, although we have gone through two world wars in this century, social legislation (in western countries at least) indicates an increasing sense of responsibility for the underprivileged. Those who believe in eternity are convinced that the day will finally come when good will be rewarded and evil punished.

Queen Anne of Austria expressed it well when she said to the French Cardinal Richelieu, "God may not settle accounts every day, but he settles them all at last." — Elisha Douglass

Bare Bodkin Time Again

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN

AP Special Correspondent
STRATFORD, Conn. (AP)

Bless my soul, demothball my woolliest cardigan and break out the leaf-raking paraphernalia, autumn is already upon us.

The sear time of the year," the poets pretentiously call it, which has nothing to do with any merchandise establishment of a similar name advertising Back to School sales.

Alas and alack, to say nothing of yea verily, the dwindling days and cool nights inform us that the time has come to put away the frivolities of summer, along with the beach umbrella and the blue lamp bug zapper, and take up more scholarly pursuits, like handicapping the weekend football games and cutting the Christmas card list to the barest essentials of rich relatives reasonably certain of not dying intestate.

What better time than to stage our second annual Mulligan's Stew "Do It Yourself With a Bare Bodkin Contest?" This, you may or may not recall, is an erudite, exciting, demanding competition among readers to modernize the language of Shakespeare, to shake the dust from the Bard's buskin and have him get with it, lingo-wise.

Last year something over 700 keen competitors from as far away as Rome, Singapore and Anchorage, Alaska, and as close by as the Shakespeare festival theater right here in Stratford, Conn., did a number on Mark Antony's funeral oration for Julius Caesar, retooling the phrases and removing the rust from the famous soliloquy beginning, "Friends, Romans, countrymen, lend me your ears."

Among the winning entries was a rendering of the eulogy after the manner of John Wayne in a Hollywood oater: "Now listen up, and listen up good..." Others reworked the graveside oration as it might have been given by a backwoods preacher, a motorcycle gang leader, the chairman of the remembrance committee at an insurance actuaries convention, a CB radio addict and, quite memorably, a Mafia don, who insisted he had not "made the scene at this final planting to blow smoke up Big Julie's toga."

This time around, readers, Romans and friends are being asked to update the balcony scene in "Romeo and Juliet" and give the two lovers a break from all that gushy goo about "how silver-sweet sound lovers' tongues by night" so they can invade each other's space with more meaningful mod dialogue.

I mean nobody these days turns soulfully from the Pac-Man screen and looks longingly into the mascaraed eyes of his steady to whisper "O, speak again, bright angel: for thou art as glorious to this night being o'er my head, as is a winged messenger of heaven..." etc., etc.

His squeeze in the designer jeans is apt to answer, "hey, feller, get off my case, we just don't connect," instead of "O Romeo, Romeo: wherefore art thou Romeo?"

As for "what's in a name? That which we call a rose by any other word would smell as sweet" — well, that kind of dialogue is deader than game show reruns. When people today with ongoing relationships have different insecurities, the only names that matter outside an analyst's office are embroidered on the back pockets of their preshrunk brushed denims.

Readers will have no easy task in trying to update the 400-year-old language of what basically is a simple daytime soap about this really neat guy who wants to be splitsville with the Montague groupie scene because he'd like to make out with this Ms. Capulet. The drag is her overly supportive nurse or guardian, probably her father's live-in boyfriend, keeps her a virtual prisoner in their walk-up condo so that nobody can invade her space. Anyhow this Romeo dude gets high on something and risks a breaking and entering charge to rap with her on her own turf.

Actually, "Romeo and Juliet" has two balcony scenes for hip modernists to render in the vulgar: Act II, Scene 2, beginning, "He jests at scars that never felt a wound," and Act III, Scene 5, beginning, "Wilt thou be gone? It is not yet near the day: it was the nightingale not the lark..." Contestants can have a go at either or both or any combination of same.

The prize, like last year's, will be a cassette suitable for burning, of the Mulligan's Stew master reading from his own words, unless Sir John Gielgud, Rodney Dangerfield or Alexander Haig can be persuaded to read the five best entries on tape. Speaking of which, Haigesque versions of the lovers lines as whispered to Jeane Kirkpatrick or Caspar Weinberger are welcome and anticipated.

Contest closes Dec. 15. Mail your with-it balcony banter for ongoing relationships to MULLIGAN'S BARE BODKIN, Associated Press, 50 Rockefeller Plaza, NY 10020, NY.

Some pedants and purists may profess outrage at tampering with the rich iambics of the Bard. If they think sacrilege is being encouraged, we remind them that an eminent scholar named Alan Simpson, while president of Vassar College, once rendered the 23rd Psalm, "The Lord is My Shepherd" in the modern argot:

"The Lord is my external, internal, integrated mechanism. I shall not be deprived of gratifications for my visceral generic hungers or my need dispositions. He motivates me to orient myself toward a non-social object effectiveness significance. He positions me in a non-decisional situation. He maximizes my adjustment."

Parting, even from the original text, is such sweet sorrow.

Unwilling, Unable To Spend?

By JOHN CUNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — If

consumers are to lead the troubled economy out of the wilderness, they'd better get a move on. If they are able to.

The latest evidence of unwillingness or inability to spend comes in the 29 percent decline in new-car sales in the first 10 days of September, in spite of promotions, heavy advertising and cash incentives.

And in defiance, you might say, of continued industry forecasts of an almost inevitable upturn in sales. Inevitable, industry people reasoned, because the average car is now around 7 years old and running out of miles.

But apparently there are inevitables of another sort involved, the primary ones being that if you don't have a job you probably don't have money to spend, or if carrying costs are beyond your budget you may manage to do without.

While not as firm, there are other impediments to sales. If you feel prices may fall or at least not rise very much you might be inclined to delay buying. And if you feel uncertain about the future you avoid making big commitments.

Students of the marketplace long have been unaware that you cannot forecast consumer behavior simply by the amount of money or credit that is available to them, no matter what bankers say.

Before a decision to buy is made, it has been demonstrated, the consumer must have both the ability and the willingness to buy.

Statistics show that many families have put their financial houses in order during the past two years, paying their bills and adding to their savings. They are able to buy, which accounts for by purchasing non-essentials. And since some are heads of households, their financial problems are magnified by dependents.

The combination of unwillingness and inability have become so entwined that one feeds on the other.

Industry leaders, for example, repeatedly have declared their unwillingness to expand, making more jobs, until consumer spending picks up. But expansion in consumer spending obviously is held back because of high unemployment.

A typical comment: "The reason the labor market is so soft," says Robert Gough of Data Resources Inc., a research firm, "is that business has yet to see any convincing signs from the American people of a willingness to spend."

Maybe they can't. Maybe they just don't want to. Maybe they're waiting for business to show the way.

those optimistic forecasts.

But are they willing to buy? Or have they become so devoted to improving their liquidity that they will wait until the incentives to buy become more attractive? Or, perhaps, are they frightened off by economic uncertainty?

In spite of the general statistics, which tend to average the extremes out of sight, there is an obviously massive part of the consumer market that is unable to buy. They might love to buy. But they aren't able to buy.

In this category are the unemployed, the underemployed and those who have given up looking. While the number of unemployed is listed officially as 10.8 million workers, another 6 million or 7 million fall into the other categories.

Many if not most of these people, it would seem, have such pressing bills they cannot consider adding more.

Farmers' Almanac Has Its Same Old Formula

By JERRY HARKAVY
Associated Press Writer
LEWISTON, Maine (AP)

The 166th edition of the Farmers' Almanac has a spanking new weather forecast and even a new forecaster to go with its old-fashioned collection of one-line jokes, household hints and "flavorite recipes."

And if that's not enough, there's a continued crusade against a longer ZIP code.

The almanac claims its weather forecast is better than the government's, and predicts this coming winter will be a chilly one, with above-average snowfall virtually everywhere except the Pacific Northwest. The new forecaster, Caleb Weatherbee, also says next summer should be warmer and drier.

Weatherbee is a pseudonym for a weather buff in his 60s who lives in southern New Hampshire. He was tapped for the job by editor Ray Geiger after the death of Harry K. Buie, an astronomer from Inverness, Fla.

Geiger said Weatherbee, whose identity is being kept secret to shield him from publicity, has combined his own expertise with the almanac's secret formula based on sunspots, the position of the planets and the tidal action of the moon.

"We've always been told that our forecasts were 80 to 85 percent accurate," said Geiger, who turns 72 this month and is in his 49th year as editor. "The weather service claims about 70 percent. But we've been doing the weather 57 years longer than the weather bureau's been in existence, and so we've got a little bit of a lead on them."

Last year, however, the almanac predicted a normal weather pattern, and made no mention of bitter, snowy weather that hit much of the nation in December 1981 and January 1982.

Its major competitor, the Old Farmer's Almanac(k), published for the last 189 years in New Hampshire, did forecast a cold wave.

Geiger's almanac is known for a variety of crusades. It first called to "zap the ZIP" in its 1980 edition, and has fought in the past to restore place names to postmarks, introduce multi-colored U.S. currency and bring back chivalry. It has opposed two-letter state abbreviations and all-digit telephone numbers.

This year's 48-page publication also contains the usual collection of one-line jokes, puzzles, amazing facts, inspirational messages, household hints and "flavorite recipes."

The almanac is sold to banks, insurance companies and other businesses, which distribute copies free to their customers. Geiger also publishes the American Farm & Home Almanac, for sale on newsstands, which he characterizes as "a second helping of a good thing."

Geiger says the fight against the longer ZIP code, which the U.S. Postal Service wants to lengthen from five to nine digits in the interests of cost efficiency, "is the biggest issue we've ever been involved in." He has even appeared before Congress to testify against "this numerical nightmare."

Readers of the almanac, which claims a circulation of just under 6 million, are being exhorted to join in the campaign.

The new edition urges readers, "Write to your congressmen (ZIP code 20515) and your senators (ZIP code 20510), Washington, D.C., expressing your opposition to this whole fiasco. Say, if you will, 'Zap the nine-digit ZIP — Five is plenty; nine is too many!' And do it NOW, so your opinion will count. It is not un-American to oppose the nine-digit code!"

welfare."

The lady put the baby on Beenbag's desk.

"What are you doing?" Beenbag screamed.

"I'm changing his diapers. You don't have a large handkerchief to spare, do you?"

"Get out of my office and take that bawling kid with you," Beenbag said.

"If you support right to life," the lady said, "you have to support right-to-life functions."

"But he just did it all over the President's letter of support for my bill," Beenbag cried.

The lady smiled, and said, "Naughty boy."

COLLISION
Cars driven by James Daniel Brown of Route 13, Greenville, and Kay Sprinkle Merritt of Route 8, Greenville, collided about 8:10 a.m. Thursday at the intersection of Stantonsburg Road and Moye Boulevard.

Police estimated damage from the mishap at $300 to each of the two cars.

Republican distortion of their records. Valentine hit on this theme in rejecting the debate. Marin "has said he is going to run a positive campaign but I've heard nothing but distortions, innuendoes and half-truths. I see no need to provide a platform for him to crank up his distortion machine."

Former U.S. Sen. Bob Morgan turned down a chance to debate John East early in the 1980 campaign when East was still unknown. If East was in fact distorting his record, as Democrats charged, wouldn't Morgan have been better off debating East? No, says Morgan.

"An incumbent can seldom afford to debate the challenger because he may have 5,000 recorded votes," Morgan said. "There is no way an incumbent can stand before an audience and recall each one" that a challenger might raise in a distorted fashion.

Does the public lose out when there are no debates? Marion Nichols, former president of the N.C. League of Women Voters, says yes: "Debates accomplish a great deal."

Although they aren't perfect, they provide a better perspective on the candidates than the public gets through TV ads and the campaign literature, she says. And debates also allow the public to see the candidates in stressful situations. "They provide one of the few situations where you see them in a less controlled situation than they like to have," she said.

Hunt Owners Of Forgotten Sums

UNCLAIMED — A sampling of goods at the state controller's division of unclaimed property (in Sacramento, Calif.) received from safety deposit boxes throughout the state. (AP Laserphoto)

By JOHN HOWARD
Associated Press Writer
SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — In a tiny, box-like room ringed by closed-circuit television cameras and electrically locked doors, state workers sift a curious debris — part of a forgotten $25 million worth of cash, trinkets, bank accounts and jewelry.

The hunt, conducted by the state Division of Unclaimed Property, plumbs the past, the private lives of families from skid row to Beverly Hills.

Each year, thousands of safety deposit boxes, savings and checking accounts, credit certificates and other valuables are unintentionally abandoned in California. And people die without leaving a will or they name heirs that can't be found.

By law, the unclaimed property — mostly in the form of ignored bank accounts — goes to the state after seven years. Then, government investigators track down the rightful owners through a blizzard of telephone calls, Social Security numbers, old city directories, passbooks, frayed maps, newspapers and library research.

The chase often leads to transients and people on welfare or well-known Hollywood celebrities and powerful politicians.

"The banks are required to send us a list of the accounts that haven't been closed," said Lea Garcia, assistant chief of the unclaimed property division.

About one-fourth of the forgotten cash and valuables eventually is returned to the legal owners by Miss Garcia's office, following investigations that crisscross the state and often take months or years.

The rest, most of it converted to cash after being sold at state auction, remains indefinitely in the state's General Fund, drawing 5 percent interest while it awaits rightful claimants.

It's not quite like the old television program "The Millionaire" where each week a different person received a check for $1 million.

But in Sacramento, an elderly welfare recipient once discovered he had $80,000 coming to him, and in Los Angeles a woman who lived within a block of her bank recovered $100,000 from a forgotten account, Miss Garcia said.

"When he (the elderly man) first came in we couldn't understand him," she said. "He was kind of senile and he couldn't even spell his own name. He looked like he lived on skid row." Later, she added, a welfare worker arrived and helped him provide documentation that enabled him to collect the money.

Others who have recovered far smaller sums of money from the state agency include celebrities Art Linkletter, Liberace, Joe Frazier, Rita Moreno, Phyllis Diller, Bob Hope, Chuck Barris and Lucille Ball.

Liberace, who received several hundred dollars from a long-lost account, said later he was surprised when told he could expect some money. "That must have been deposited in the bank I cried all the way to in the '50s," he said.

Estates, handled separately from the unclaimed property, remain under state protection for 10 years, during which time the rightful heir can claim the valuables. After a decade, the estate goes to the State of California.

The 10-year deadline is observed rigidly — although an heir in the People's Republic of China once received an estate after the deadline because a policy blocking transmission of American funds to that country was eventually lifted.

Last year, estates totaling $2.5 million were handled by Miss Garcia's office — about $900,000 made its way to the rightful heirs.

In a carefully locked storage room, workers examine the contents of safety deposit boxes which have been abandoned. The boxes contain the gamut of human litter — old portraits, coins, bottles of liquor, nude photos, guns, century-old bank drafts, sexual devices, drugs, poems, marital agreements, paintings, precious jewels and false teeth.

Down the hall, the three-member "locator unit" tries to match the valuables and accounts with their rightful owners.

Using microfilmed index cards carrying thousands of names — last year alone they received 18,000 inquiries from hopeful claimants — the locators search out the owners of property, using Social Security numbers as a starting point.

"If you're going to get lost," said controller spokesman John Jervis, "make sure you leave your Social Security number somewhere."

The state used to advertise regularly in each of California's 58 counties, issuing long, closely typed lists of the names of sought-after owners.

But the $400,000 advertising budget was eliminated this year by a Legislature looking for ways to balance the state's $25.2 billion, 1982-83 budget, the tightest since World War II.

Jervis said the advertising accounted for about 40 percent of the property recoveries.

Most of the thousands of lost accounts represent only a few dollars, but for larger accounts — especially those over $1,000, state investigators make a determined effort to track down the owners. Other intensive investigations focus on unusual items, such as family heirlooms or "a family Bible 300 to 400 years old," said locator Pat Nolan. "There's a great satisfaction in finding the right owner."

An Assist For Decision-Maker

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Federal courts and non-partisan commissions faced with making hard decisions on plans for political redistricting now may get an assist from an evaluation method developed by a University of Rochester political scientist.

"Courts often lack clear guidelines for evaluating political fairness in districting plans," says Arthur Q. Frank. "The new method is based on all past election results over a 10-year period."

Frank's method, he says, shows decision-makers how to establish balance between the two major parties, make sure changes in public opinion are provided for, and assure fairness to minority parties.

The method works best for state and congressional districts, Frank says.

Life As It's Lived

Grandmothers Have All The Worry They Need

By GAIL MICHAELS

My mother is warm and generous, but she wears her responsibility as a parent and a grandparent like a lead life preserver. She is continually trying to impress upon me how dangerous this world is and how much protection my children need.

She has an ample store of examples to support her contention. Of all the children killed or injured in accidents in the Southeastern states during the last seven years, she knew at least half of them.

When Meg got her bicycle last Christmas, Mother promptly warned me that 6-year-olds were too young for such responsibility. She had known a 6-year-old who had lost control of her bike and hurtled out into Atlanta traffic. Never mind that three cars stopped behind the school bus constitutes a major traffic jam in our neighborhood.

Mother advised me not to let Meg ride beyond the patio on that instrument of death and destruction.

The last time she visited, she happened to see Zachary fling his foot over the side of the crib, and she went into a nervous decline. We had to do something about his antics, she insisted. She didn't know what, but if we didn't act fast, he might fall over the side and break his neck, as did the niece of a sister of an old college friend of hers.

She has known children who drowned and children who broke their backs in gymnastics. I'm sure when she hears that Meg has joined Brownies she will remember a child who choked on a Girl Scout Cookie.

She doesn't necessarily want to sequester the children in a padded room (although she would be amenable to the idea). She merely wants me to improve my ability to anticipate disaster.

In other words, she wants me to worry. Incessantly. What would that accomplish, I ask. I'd only get ulcers. Better ulcers than bereavement, she tells me. She dismisses all that medical mumbo-jumbo about the physical and emotional side-effects of excessive worry. Absolutely ridiculous, she asserts. Anxiety and guilt are creative responses. They keep a mother on her toes.

Naturally, my children's track record in the emergency room does nothing to ease my mother's mind. Each time one of them has an accident, she is more convinced than ever that my anxiety quotient is too low. So she tries to raise it. She made her latest attempt when Meg cut her foot on the metal weather-stripping on the bottom of the garage door.

"On the garage door!" Mother gasped over the phone. "What in the world was she doing closing the garage door?"

"She was coming out of it."

"You shouldn't let her get near those garage doors. They're dangerous. The son of a man I work with got caught under one."

"We're talking about the side door, not the remote control. She's not allowed to touch that."

"She shouldn't be in the garage period. And you say she needed 10 stitches."

"Five."

"Whatever. You have to keep an eye on those children."

"How was I to know that a first-grader didn't know enough to move her foot before she closed the door?"

"You can't blame it on her. She's still a baby. I just hope Zachary's all right."

I didn't tell her about the tooth he chipped. I'm going to get it capped before she visits next week.

Asking Help

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The presidents of Mexico and Venezuela have sent President Reagan a letter asking his help in avoiding a military conflict between Nicaragua and Honduras.

Copies of the letter from Jose Lopez Portillo of Mexico and Luis Herrera Campins of Venezuela also were sent to the presidents of Honduras and Nicaragua, a foreign ministry official said Thursday night.

Nicaragua and Honduras have built up military forces along their border because of ongoing clashes between the Nicaraguan army and rightist Nicaraguan exiles based in Honduras. Each government has accused the other of armed border violations.

6 Turbines Reach Port

MOSCOW (AP) — Six turbines built by a British engineering firm with U.S. technology for the Siberian natural gas pipeline arrived aboard a Soviet freighter in Leningrad today, the Soviet news agency Tass reported.

The sale of the turbines by John Brown Engineering prompted President Reagan last week to impose sanctions on the company. The sanctions barred U.S. exports of oil and gas equipment to the British firm.

The turbines contain rotors made by General Electric Co. in the United States. Reagan banned exports of American technology to the Soviets to protest the Kremlin's support of the Dec. 13 martial law crackdown in Poland.

In June, he extended the ban to include foreign companies using U.S.-licensed technology — an extension Western European firms say violates international law.

Tass said the turbines, each weighing 60 tons, were to be loaded on a train and sent to their destination within 24 hours. The turbines will be used for a 2,760-mile pipeline to pump gas from Siberia to Western Europe.

Blood Center Open House Is Scheduled Sunday

WHOLE BLOOD ... is placed in a centrifuge by lab technician Dee Hampton to separate heavier red cells from plasma. Centrifuging of the plasma can result in separation of platelets from the plasma.

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Open House will be held at the Tar River Red Cross Blood Center four miles east of Greenville on the Stanfordsburg Road Sunday from 2 to 4 p.m., with a ribbon-cutting at 3 p.m.

The center, which is a subcenter of the Tidewater Red Cross Blood Center in Norfolk, Va., has been moved into larger quarters because of the growth of its operations since it was opened here in 1976, particularly its laboratory operations. Included in the new facility are more blood storage space, a larger blood distribution department, expanded laboratory space for a larger component processing facility, a hepatitis testing area and a conference room for use for Red Cross and other community activities.

Cutting the ribbon will be Richard E. "Red" Baughman, a Roanoke Rapids fireman who is credited with being the largest blood donor ever in this area. He has donated 17 gallons of blood.

An equally honored guest will be Mrs. John Dow, widow of the man in whose honor the John Dow Memorial Building Fund for the center was established. Dow's family established the fund in his honor following his death from aplastic anemia, a condition that required many units of blood products from the center in the late 1970s. Much of the renovation of the new blood center was done with money from the Dow Fund.

According to its director, Dick Carney, the center supplied 43,000 units of blood last year and is responsible for collections in 28 eastern North Carolina counties and deliveries to 22 hospitals. Its largest user of blood is Pitt County Memorial Hospital, which uses 1,500 units a month.

Blood donation consultants work out of this center with community groups throughout the region to arrange for and promote the donation of blood. And it's from here that two bloodmobiles go out with the personnel and furnishings needed to collect blood donations and bring them back for laboratory work. Some special donations, including the drawing of platelets from about 150 regular pheresis donors, are done at the center.

Some of the blood is kept whole, some separated into plasma and red cells, and some separated into red cells, plasma and platelets (with a small amount of plasma to support the platelets). Some red cells are frozen for use much later. The shipping department of the center works 24 hours a day keeping in touch with the 22 hospitals in the area about their routine and emergency needs. Routine shipments of blood are sent out by a contracted delivery service, but emergency orders go out immediately after being collected, either by bus or, in extreme emergencies, by Highway Patrol relay.

"As often as five times a week, the center must call on the Highway Patrol to race blood to where it is needed somewhere in the region," Carney said. "We just pick up the phone and let the local Highway Patrol office know where we need to send blood. It's picked up immediately and the patrol radios ahead to set up relays at county lines or other designated points.

"Sometimes, if we need to get some special type out of Norfolk, we do the same thing in cooperation with the Virginia State Police. And sometimes in the dead of night, when some of the patrol has gone off duty, we call on the sheriff departments of this and other counties. We can't say enough about how well our law enforcers perform this service for the sick and injured of our region."

The center employs 39 persons and is a major contributor to the economy of Pitt County and the region. Its budget for this year is $2.8 million, Carney said.

Arrest 5 On Drug Counts

Five persons were arrested on drug law violations Thursday by Greenville police and agents of the State Bureau of Investigation, Chief Glenn Cannon said this morning.

Cannon said Jay Steven Kite, 23, of Route 3, Greenville, Mary Ellen Schlatter, 24, of Farmville and Donnie Dean Haddock, 23, of Route 1, Grifton, were arrested following a search of Kite's home. Cannon said officers found two pounds of marijuana and 5,000 methaqualone tablets.

Cannon said the marijuana and methaqualone were valued at $2,000.

Both Kite and Miss Schlatter were charged with possession of marijuana and possession with intent to sell methaqualone. Their bonds were set at $5,000 each.

Haddock, Cannon said, was charged with possession of marijuana.

Charles Arrington and Albert Earl Atkinson were arrested on charges of possession of heroin for the purpose of sale following a search of a 405B Paris Ave. home, Cannon reported.

The chief said officers recovered 13 bags of heroin, and a gram of heroin that had not been cut for distribution.

Bond for the two was set at $10,000 each.

Adler Guest On ECU Concepts

Solar energy will be discussed by Dr. Carl Adler, an East Carolina physicist, on "ECU Concepts" at 8 a.m. Sunday on radio station WOOW.

Adler will talk about uses of solar power. He will also describe the "solar fraction" measurement recorded at ECU and will discuss how volcanic dust clouds can affect weather.

Paris Car Bomb Exploded Today

PARIS (AP) — A bomb exploded in a car bearing Israeli diplomatic license plates today near the Arch of Triumph, injuring the car's two occupants and 16 other people, according to authorized French government sources.

Doctors said three people were seriously injured, including those in the car, and witnesses said it took firemen a half-hour to extricate the two from the booby-trapped vehicle.

Emergency vehicles rushed to the scene and medical personnel were treating passers-by — most of them high school students from the nearby Lycee Carnot — lying wounded on the sidewalk.

The explosion — on the eve of the Jewish New Year, Rosh Hashana — took place at the corner of the Boulevard Malesherbes and Rue Cardinet in the 17th district, not far from a military purchasing annex of the Israeli Embassy.

Police said it was not clear whether the blast occurred as the car, a white Peugeot 504, was on its way to or from the annex, or whether the bomb went off as the car was started.

The explosion took place at 60 Rue Cardinet, around the corner from the annex, which was the target of a terrorist machine gun attack March 31. Responsibility for this incident was claimed by the left-wing group Direct Action, which the government outlawed Aug. 18.

Because of the Jewish holiday, the Israeli Embassy was closed and no comment was immediately available.

The explosion was the latest in a wave of summer bombings and terrorist attacks in the French capital.

In the most serious incident, six people were killed and 21 wounded Aug. 9 when terrorists machine-gunned a crowd at the city's best-known Jewish restaurant, as well as passers-by in a Jewish neighborhood.

McKissick Will Speak

Floyd McKissick Jr. will be the keynote speaker at the annual banquet of the 1st Congressional District Black Leadership Caucus on Saturday.

The caucus banquet, which begins at 3 p.m. at American Legion Post No. 39 on St. Andrews Street, will honor E.W. Wilkins and Willie Riddick for their service to the caucus.

Wilkins is a retired public school principal and has served on the town council of Roper. He was elected mayor of Roper from 1975 to 1981. Wilkins has served as chairman of the district caucus and is now second vice chairman of the state Democratic Executive Committee.

Riddick, a native of Windsor, is district representative for Rep. Walter B. Jones, D-N.C., serving as liaison between the congressman and the constituents of the 1st Congressional District. He also is treasurer of the caucus, a trustee of Elizabeth City State University and a Vietnam veteran.

Special entertainment will be provided, including music by Johnny "C" and Company and poetry by W.C. Witherspoon.

For further information, contact D.D. Garrett, 752-4476, or Dr. Donald E. Ensley, 757-6961 or 756-3578.

Communist Espionage In N.C. Termed 'Serious'

By SKIP HIDLAY
The Fayetteville Times

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Spying by communist agents who want to steal military and technological secrets is an "extremely serious" problem in Fayetteville and throughout North Carolina, the state's top FBI agent says.

Because of Ft. Bragg and Pope Air Force Base, Soviet, Chinese and other communist spies have made Fayetteville one of their major targets in North Carolina, Robert Pence said in an interview Thursday.

And North Carolina, he said, is one of their major targets in the country.

"I think people should realize there are spies everywhere. This country is very open," Pence said.

Pence said communist agents have three major targets in North Carolina:

— The Research Triangle Park and firms that have classified contracts from the Department of Defense, NASA or other government agencies.

— Military installations such as Ft. Bragg and Camp LeJeune.

— Deep-water ports like Wilmington and Morehead City, where they often enter the country illegally and watch what is being shipped into and out of the state.

Stealing classified technological information, such as secrets about computers, microelectronics and lasers, is spies' "number one priority" in North Carolina and the nation, Pence said.

He acknowledged that the Research Triangle Park is a prime target. "But whether they're stealing secrets from company A, B or C, I can't comment on that," he said.

Ft. Bragg also is a major target of foreign spies because of its size and because it is home of Special Forces, otherwise known as the Green Berets, he said.

Spies have many ways of getting what they want, Pence said, but simply shelling out greenbacks can be the most successful.

"We're finding, sadly enough, that the people who are selling their country out aren't doing it for ideological reasons like in the old days. Now the problem is more severe because they seem to be selling their country out for money," he said.

In military towns, Soviet spies and those from other countries "place a high priority on hanging out in restaurants and bars," where they try to meet soldiers who work in strategic areas, he said.

Sometimes the agents employ lip readers to decipher what military personnel are saying three tables away over a few cocktails, he added.

But usually they try to meet and make friends with soldiers who have access to the information they want.

"Once they have struck up a friendship, the spies will try to snare that person in compromising situations luring married men with attractive and willing women, or entrapping them in some other type of embarrassing situation, such as homosexual relations," Pence said.

"Then, the agents blackmail the man into turning traitor and selling out his country to save his own hide," he said.

"They also try very hard to find people who have relatives overseas, especially in Iron Curtain countries, who they could use as hostages or in blackmail-type situations."

In other cases, the spies prey on people such as employees for firms with classified contracts who are buried under bills and trying to keep debt collectors from their doorstep, Pence said.

"They lure them with bundles of easy money and promises of more. The people will start doing strange things. Suddenly, they'll pay off all their bills and buy a new car and they have the same job they had," he said.

Though many people do not realize it, Pence said the FBI's principal role in the United States is to combat communist espionage.

"And it's really one of the most severe and serious responsibilities we've got. North Carolina is very important in the overall picture of espionage in the United States," said Pence, 43, who has been an FBI agent for just under 20 years.

Ironically, Pence said counter-espionage work is given only the fourth highest priority by the FBI in North Carolina, taking a backseat to white collar crime, organized crime such as drug syndicates, and personal crimes like bank robbery and kidnapping.

"While it isn't given our highest priority day-to-day, if something came up in that field we'd drop everything else and scramble on it," he said, because successful espionage could mean the end of our country, the devastation of our whole country."

Pence said the FBI's counter-espionage work rarely makes headlines because the department's goal is to identify foreign agents — not arrest them.

Once the FBI has identified a foreign agent, it will feed him useless information and try to recruit him to work as a double agent, he said.

Spies are rarely arrested, he said, because they will only be replaced by another spy, whom it might take months of hard work to identify.

He said there are three types of spies in the U.S.:

— "A certain percentage" of diplomats from communist countries are agents for the KGB, the Soviet Union's intelligence service (which Pence said is like a combination of the FBI and the Central Intelligence Agency), or the GRU, the Russian military intelligence agency.

— Illegal spies who slip across the border with forged identification or who jump ship at ports such as Wilmington.

— "Students, dancers, singers, journalists, visitors, technological consultants. They're not necessarily career spies, but people who have been tasked by the Soviets to gather whatever information they can."

EARLY WYOMING WINTER — Heavy, early snows in central Wyoming have caused widespread crop and tree damage as well as numerous power outages. The 10-inch snows that began Monday split this mature tree in front of the Tom

Hernandez home in Riverton (Wyo.). Power outages hindered voting in last Tuesday's primary elections in the community and surrounding Fremont County. (AP Laserphoto)

Drought Hurts Crops, Shrubs

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The rain-filled days of June have given way to a September dry spell that is endangering some crops and shrubs, agriculture officials say.

Most of the state has gone 20 days or longer without measurable rainfall, according to the National Weather Service. Rainfall has been sparse since mid-July.

The extended dry weather has been caused by high pressure that has remained stationary over the Southeast for the past several weeks, says Joe Pelissier, a weather service forecaster.

"Minor disturbances have moved along the front, but no major fronts (to produce rain) have gotten through," Pelissier said.

While the tobacco crop has escaped damage, soybeans have suffered from lack of rainfall along with strawberries and garden vegetables, said Agricultural Extension Service agent Ervin Evans.

"We're not at a point where everything is suffering, but some things are hurting pretty bad," said Evans, of Wake County.

This is a crucial time for the commercial strawberry grower, since buds are setting for next spring's crop. Growers are turning to steady irrigation to save their crop, Evans said.

Gardeners who have planted cool-season crops may have poor yields because the drought has delayed the growing season. Some crops may survive the first frost, usually around mid-October, but many won't, Evans said.

Commercial nursery operators are facing trouble because the ground is too hard to permit crucial transplanting that ordinarily takes place this time of year, he said.

Perhaps most endangered are ornamental trees, such as the dogwood, and shallow rooted plants — azaleas, camellias and boxwoods.

"We'll probably lose some dogwoods," Evans said. "And the spring may not be as colorful next year, depending on how long we go without rain."

Fall colors also may be affected by the dry weather. Without more rain, leaves that ordinarily attract heavy crowds to the mountains in mid-October will turn brown early. The most vivid autumn colors appear after a warm, dry summer followed by early autumn rains.

Sorority Meets, Hears Reports

Named N.C. Gov.-Elect

Max C. Stephenson of Greenville was elected governor-elect of the North Carolina District of Optimist International at the 41st annual district convention recently in Charlotte.

The district has some 6,000 members and over 160 Optimist Clubs.

Since joining the Greenville Optimist Club in 1966, Stephenson has had a perfect attendance record. He has served two tenures as club president and in 1970 he was voted "Optimist of the Year" by the organization. He served the North Carolina District as lieutenant governor in 1972-73 and 1981-82.

Stephenson will serve as governor-elect until next October when he will begin his one-year term as governor. As governor-elect, he will work with the governor and serve as training officer for the newly elected club and district officers.

A Smithfield native, Stephenson is a master adjuster for Nationwide Mutual Insurance Co.

He is married to the former Gail Stancill and they have a daughter, Dianne, of Houston and a son, Mike, of Raleigh. Stephenson is a member of Immanuel Baptist Church.

Report Cheap Hydrogen Production

By PETE JACOBS
Associated Press Writer
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Members of a University of California research team say they have found a cheap, plentiful way to create hydrogen — a long-sought dream of scientists seeking to solve the world's energy problems.

Chemistry professor Gabor A. Somorjai, who headed the three-member team at the university's Berkeley campus, said Thursday in Berkeley that use of the new method could revolutionize the manufacture of synthetic petroleum, fertilizers and plastics.

The team developed a technique to split water molecules to produce a steady flow of hydrogen gas by using some of the earth's most abundant resources — sunlight and iron oxide, or rust.

Somorjai said the university has applied for a patent.

"I think probably within the next six months companies all over will have engineers who can put dollar figures on how much money the new method could save," he said.

A tiny model developed in the laboratory can produce a steady flow of hydrogen for eight hours, and can continue indefinitely if fresh air is bubbled through it, Somorjai said.

The model, about half the size of a dime, produces billions of hydrogen molecules every minute, he said.

"We have proved the principle is correct and shown that it works in practice," Somorjai said.

The hydrogen could be used to create synthetic fuels to burn in existing facilities, which would avoid building expensive new plants and furnaces, he said.

"My feeling is the best way to use the hydrogen that is obtained by this method is to convert the hydrogen into organic fuels — gasoline, oil and natural gas ... which is a known technology," he said.

A report on the achievement was presented Thursday at a meeting of the American Chemical Society in Kansas City by a member of Somorjai's team, Cristofor Leygraf, a Swedish postdoctoral student at Berkeley.

Somorjai, 47, is a member of the National Academy of Sciences and is a senior scientist at the university's Lawrence Berkeley Laboratory.

The team's model functions by shining sunlight on two tiny disks of iron oxide submerged in water doctored with a salt-like solution of inexpensive sodium sulfate, he said.

One disk is treated with a small amount of silicon and the other is treated with magnesium. When the sun shines on them, it creates a steady flow of energy along a wire between the disks like a simple battery. The electrons cause the hydrogen gas to bubble out of the water at the disk containing magnesium. Oxygen forms at the disk containing silicon.

The cheaply produced oxygen is a bonus because it is widely in demand by industry, he said.

A 3-foot disk of iron oxide as thin as a human hair would produce about a gallon of hydrogen gas, Somorjai said.

"It is my hope that within a reasonably short time, we can increase this efficiency by 10 times," he said.

Somorjai declined to estimate the cost of large-scale hydrogen with the method because "that's not for me as a scientist to say."

"It appears that all the materials that go into it are abundant and inexpensive," he said.

Hydrogen can be burned as a substitute for many fuels, including petroleum-based gasoline, and can react with carbon dioxide or carbon monoxide to create many kinds of organic molecules, such as methanol and substances used in plastics made from petroleum.

A method of creating a cheap, plentiful source of hydrogen has long eluded the world's scientists. Experiments consumed more energy than they produced and used costly, exotic materials, such as platinum.

Somorjai and his colleagues began working on the idea of splitting water molecules six years ago, but at first experimented with other ingredients until they hit on the right combination. He said the team actually made the discovery March 17.

"And it took me a few months to believe in it by constantly reproducing it and understanding the important parameters," said Somorjai, who has worked at Berkeley for 18 years.

Palace Denies Knowing Grace Suffered Stroke

By ALISON SMALE
Associated Press Writer
MONTE CARLO, Monaco (AP) — Doctors who attended Princess Grace before she died neglected to inform palace officials she suffered a stroke while driving the car that vaulted into a Riviera ravine, a spokeswoman says.

"A stroke, it could happen to anybody," palace spokeswoman Nadia LaCoste told reporters Thursday. "Why didn't they tell us?"

The disclosure by doctors Jean Duplay and Charles Chatelin, who cared for the dying princess, threw a new twist into confused accounts surrounding Tuesday's death of the former American movie star Grace Kelly.

The doctors also disclosed the 52-year-old monarch had suffered head injuries and lay comatose on a life-support system in her final hours before succumbing to a brain hemorrhage.

A stroke, an obstruction of blood to the brain, could have caused the princess to feel faint or dizzy, making her lose control of the 10-year-old Rover 3500 sedan that tumbled 120 feet off a twisting mountain road near Monte Carlo on Monday. Earlier reports said the car's brakes might have failed. Duplay, chief neurologist at the central hospital in nearby Nice, France, told Radio Luxembourg that Grace's daughter, Princess Stephanie, tried to stop the car but was unable to yank the handbrake before it plunged off the road.

After interviewing Stephanie, who remains hospitalized, Duplay said he dismissed suggestions that she was driving. At 17, she is a year too young to hold a driver's licence.

But the man who pulled Stephanie from the wreckage said she came out the driver's door. Police said that because the car flipped several times, this did not prove the young princess had been at the wheel.

Duplay said an examination of Grace with a scanner Monday night showed the brain damage was such that no operation was possible. At that time, the palace was publicly reporting Grace was in satisfactory condition although she had a broken thigh, ribs and collarbone.

While Grace's silk-draped body lay in state in the palace chapel, her tiny Mediterranean principality began returning to normal Thursday. Gamblers jammed reopened casinos and radio stations switched from solemn classical music to loud rock.

But many people remained in a somber mood, still stunned by the death of their beloved princess. Old friends began arriving from Hollywood, European capitals and elsewhere to attend Saturday's funeral.

Among the guests will be one of her old co-stars Cary Grant, first lady Nancy Reagan and Princess Diana, wife of Britain's Prince Charles. About 500 are expected to attend the funeral at the Cathedral of Monaco, where Grace and her husband Prince Rainier III were married 26 years ago in a storybook wedding that enchanted the world.

"I can't believe we will never see her again," said Magdalena Philippe-Lebrun Fortemaison, a Monte Carlo society matron. "She was so admired for her beauty, her magnificent heart. We will never forget her."

Jewish New Year Brings Hope

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

It's the "day of blowing the horn" for Jews of the world, their spiritual new year, and some of their leaders see fresh hope for a new and brighter day for Israel and her neighbors.

"We have much to rejoice at on this Rosh Hashana," says Maynard I. Wishner, president of the American Jewish Committee, adding that events in Lebanon have heightened prospects for Middle East peace and progress.

For the first time in years, he says, the situation "allows us to feel that the proverbial light at the end of the tunnel is not just a mirage."

Rosh Hashana, beginning

SERVICES

Weekend services have been announced for St. Matthew Free Will Baptist Church. There will be a board meeting Friday at 7:30 p.m. Women's Day services will be observed Sunday at 11 a.m. with Pastor Hattie Cobb conducting the service. A concert by the Barnes Sisters scheduled for Saturday night has been canceled.

HOME COMING

AYDEN — Homecoming and quarterly meeting will be held at Zion Chapel Free Will Baptist Church. Services will include: communion Saturday at 7:30 p.m.; Sunday School at 9:30 a.m.; Bishop Stephen Jones will speak at the 11 a.m. service with Maury Chapel Free Will Baptist Church as guests; dinner at 2 p.m.

YEARLY PROGRAM

The young adult missionary group of Sycamore Hill Baptist Church will hold its first yearly program Sunday at 7 p.m. The program will feature Johnny Wooten of Greenville and other local artists.

REVIVAL SERVICES

Revival services will be held Monday through Friday at Pleasant Hill Free Will Baptist Church, on N.C. 43, beginning at 7:30 p.m. The Rev. Earl Glen, pastor of Daniels Chapter Church near Wilson, will be the speaker. Homecoming will be held at the church Sept. 26.

YOUTH RALLY

A Youth Rally will be held at Immanuel Free Will Baptist Church near Winterville Saturday at 7 p.m. Ron and His Friends will be featured.

Church Opening Another School

PORT WASHINGTON, N.Y. (AP) — First Baptist Church this fall is opening a new Christian school with classes available for students in all elementary grades. It's one of hundreds of such schools emerging around the country.

The Rev. John Mike Thomas, the church's pastor, says recent court and legislative decisions have "led a growing number of Christian families to believe that the public schools are too materialistic and secular in their teaching."

As a result, he said, new Christian schools now are being established at the rate of three a day.

Urge Ordaining Married Clergy

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A convention of Roman Catholic priests of the Portland Archdiocese has urged the nation's Catholic bishops to ordain married people to overcome a clergy shortage.

Reports at the convention showed the archdiocese lacks priests to fill many parish assignments. The Catholic population in western Oregon has grown by 100,000 to about 300,000 in the past 20 years while the number of diocesan priests has declined.

marks the Jewish New Year of 5743, traditionally regarded the anniversary of the creation of the world, the main significance is not the calendar but the conscience.

The observance opens the "10 days of awe," a period of self-examination, penitence and reconsecration, leading to Yom Kippur, the Day of Atonement, which starts Sunday evening, Sept. 26, concluding at nightfall the next day.

During the days of stock-taking, the deeds of humanity are regarded as passing in review before God who judges and sets the consequences for the ensuing year.

Kosher Food Not Healthy

MIAMI (AP) — Biochemist Emile Schandl says kosher food that observant Jews eat may cause cancer, heart disease and other diseases.

Citing potato pancakes, chicken schmaltz, matzoh ball and soup mix and beef knockwurst as among items on a list of agents shown to have caused such ailments in mice, he expressed hope rabbis would talk to Jews about it.

"Perhaps religion can provide the leadership that government has failed to provide," he says.

"Oh Father, our King," the congregations pray in the synagogues. "For the sin that we have sinned against thee... Oh God of forgiveness, bear with us, pardon us, forgive us... Cause us to return to thee."

It's considered a time when the actions, motives and directions of individuals and nations are weighed in the divine scales and either marked for destruction or sealed in the Book of Life.

"Help us, oh God," the people pray, "to understand that injustice and hate will not forever afflict the sons of men; that righteousness and mercy will triumph in the end."

A typical greeting expressed personally and in cards sent for the holiday, goes, "May you be inscribed and sealed for a good and sweet year."

On the climactic, holiest day, Yom Kippur, a distinctive feature in the synagogues is the playing of the beautiful and haunting "Kol Nidre," meaning "All Vows."

"For on this day shall atonement be made for you to cleanse you," says Leviticus 16:30. The prophet Isaiah expressed the rejuvenating theme of new beginnings:

"Then shall your light break forth like the dawn and your healing shall spring up speedily."

Marcos Facing Mixed Response

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON, (AP) — After receiving an effusive welcome from President Reagan, Philippines President Ferdinand Marcos is going to Capitol Hill where he faces both praise and criticism of his human rights record.

"I think they have made great progress," Reagan said Thursday when asked about the Philippines' human rights performance.

That sentiment is not universally shared in the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, which invited Marcos for a late morning meeting today after his appearance before the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

Marcos, who spent several hours with Reagan on Thursday, is here on a five-day state visit.

Three Democratic members of the Senate committee — Claiborne Pell of Rhode Island, Alan Cranston and California and Paul Tsongas of Massachusetts — sent Reagan a letter on Monday saying it was a mistake for the president to have invited Marcos.

The letter said Marcos' visit will be misinterpreted as a sign that the United States condones "continuing violations of basic human rights" in the Philippines.

However, most members of both committees appear to share the administration's position that human rights trends in the Philippines are favorable and that continued U.S.-Filipino friendship serves vital American interests.

One reflection of this sentiment is that U.S. military and economic aid to the Philippines, amounting to more than $100 million annually, has not come under serious congressional challenge on human rights grounds.

As examples of progress on human rights, the administration has cited the lifting of press censorship and an end to a ban on strikes. Human rights groups also say there has been a decline over the years in the number of political prisoners.

Schools Observing Constitution Week

Beginning today and continuing through Thursday, Americans across the land are observing the annual advent of Constitution Week. In Greenville, observances are being coordinated by members of the Suzanne Cotanche Evans Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

At Rose High School, students in the government classes have prepared bulletin board displays and reports to commemorate the celebration of Constitution Week. A Rose High teacher, Renetta Smith, chairman of the local area Constitution Week observances, notes the signing of the Constitution took place 195 years ago.

She calls attention to the fact that our founding fathers penned words to show their purpose in drafting the landmark document was ... "to secure the blessings of liberty to themselves and their posterity." Mrs. Smith feels teachers should instill in their students "a dedication to the preservation of our American heritage."

In other Constitution Week activities, Mayor Percy Cox has issued a proclamation urging citizens to observe the week. Also at Carolina Country Day School students will be carrying out activities similar to those at Rose High, and local television stations have agreed to include spot announcements emphasizing the week.

Mr. Wesley E. Clark White, formerly of the Vanceboro community, died Sept. 12 at his home, 409 King St., Ayden. Funeral services will be conducted Sunday at 12:30 p.m. at Queen's Chapel Free Will Baptist Church in Vanceboro by Elder James O. Dawson Sr. Burial will follow in the Ayden Cemetery.

Mr. White had made his home in Ayden for the past four years. He was a member of Queen's Chapel F.W.B. Church, Vanceboro, and was a retired Cherry Point civil service employee.

He is survived by four sisters: Mrs. LaRuth M. Devane of the home, Mrs. Inez C. Mills of Ayden, and Mrs. Rebekah C. Harris and Mrs. Martha C. Ingram, both of New York.

The body will be at the Norcott Memorial Chapel in Ayden from 6 p.m. Saturday until carried to the church one hour before the funeral. Family visitation will be from 8-9 p.m. Saturday.

ECU Opens Home Slate Against ETSU

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

It'll be the battle of the Mountain Pirates against the Seashore Pirates this Saturday night in Ficklen Stadium as East Carolina opens its 1982 home football schedule — the most abbreviated home slate in years.

East Carolina plays only four games at home — mainly thanks to Texas-Arlington refusing to drop its low-paying contract with the Pirates for a road-game this year. And East Tennessee could be a welcome respite from the likes of N.C. State, Missouri, West Virginia and the like that highlight the rest of the schedule.

East Tennessee, actually nicknamed the Buccaneers, brings in an 0-2 record, having lost to Tennessee Tech, 14-0, the first week of the season, then to VMI, 21-3, last weekend.

The Buccaneers are a team dominated by youth, but after last year's 66-23 rout by the Pirates, East Carolina coach Ed Emory expects his cross-field foe Jack Carlisle to bring his charges in at fever-pitch for the game.

"They're are young team, but they are expecting to be improved too," Emory said of the Buccaneers. "They played good defense in their first two games, but their offense has gotten them in trouble. We should be the better team, but when you go on the field, you never know. We're not overlooking them by any means.

"Their coach said that they were embarrassed last year, and I expect him to have them ready this year," Emory added.

"I think last year's score will have some effect on our kids and our fans. But, East Tennessee beat themselves taht badly last year. They've got some quality athletes. I know because we tried to recruit some of them to play for us. I don't expect anything like last year to happen."

The Pirates are scheduled to have several lineup changes this week, due to play in last week's 33-26 loss to N.C. State. Ricky Nichols, who alternated with Carlton Nelson at flanker last week, has been moved to split end, giving the Pirates a deadly-swift duo there. Nichols has a 4.35 time in the 40, while Nelson covers the distance in 4.5.

Lloyd Black, a 6-2, 224-pound junior, has moved up to the number one slot at tight end ahead of Norwood Vann, while Norman Quick, a 6-2, 244-pound sophomore, has moved into the left guard slot ahead of Terry Long. John Floyd, a 5-11, 248-pound junior, has resumed his center slot after coming off an injury.

Defensively, there will be a couple of changes. Kevin Banks, 5-11, 221, Jr., has moved into one of the linebacking spots as P.J. Jordan is sidelined with another of the injuries at that position. Barry Smith, 6-7, 260, Jr., is expected to start at nose guard, and Sam Norris could see starting action in the secondary.

East Carolina's defense, by the way, ranks 21st in the nation against the run after allowing only 90 yards against N.C. State, while the unit ranks 33rd in total defense, giving up 272 yards.

Linebacker Ronald Reid leads the team in tackles with 20, more than double that of any other player. Defensive end and all-America candidate Jody Schulz has two quarterback sacks for minus 13 yards while Steve Hamilton, defensive tackle, has one sack for minus ten yards.

On the other side of the ball, the Pirates picked up 366 yards in total offense in their first outing with the new I-formation. Fullbacks Earnest Byner and Reggie Branch (A.C. Collins' nephew) collected 99 yards in that position, 60 and 39, respectively, while tailback Tony Baker added 59 yards on the ground. Branch and Baker are both freshmen.

Through the air, Greg Stewart hit on six of 16 for 133 yards and one touchdown, but he had three picked off. Nelson and Stuart Ramirez each caught three, Nelson getting 73 yards on his.

In their two games so far, East Tennessee has only rushed for a total of 118 yards, led by Richard Dill, a fullback. He's picked up 98 of their yards on 22 carries, with a 4.5 yard average. The team average is 1.9 yards a trip.

The Buccaneers have hit on 30 of 66 passes for 292 yards. They have had seven passes intercepted so far. Starting quarterback Walt Bowlin has thrown all 30 completions for 61 attempts. Six of the interceptions are his.

The lone score of the season in the two games came off the toe of kicker Paul Goodwin, who booted a 31-yard field goal in the fourth quarter against VMI.

The East Tennessee defense has allowed an average of 241.5 yards a game, 102 on the ground and 139.5 through the air.

In addition to the seven interceptions, the Buccaneers have lost six of nine fumbles — a total of 13 turnovers in just two games.

Following the East Tennessee game, the Pirates play host to Central Michigan next week.

Like a good neighbor, State Farm is there.

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (AP) — Quarterback Joe Ferguson came up with one more big play than his counterpart Tommy Kramer, and the Buffalo Bills rode it to victory over the Minnesota Vikings.

Down 22-16 in the fourth quarter and deep in his own territory Thursday night, Ferguson threw for 39 yards to Frank Lewis on third down and one. The catch at midfield set up a Ferguson-to-Jerry Butler touchdown pass of 11 yards five plays later as Buffalo edged Minnesota 23-22 in a nationally televised National Football League game.

Ferguson said he had no qualms about the gamble, or sending Curtis Brown off tackle in the third quarter on fourth and one at the Bills' 30-yard-line.

"Against a team like Minnesota, you've got to gamble. You've got to take risks," Ferguson said.

Minnesota Coach Bud Grant wouldn't argue with that reasoning, but he said questionable penalties also were a factor in his team's loss.

"It used to be that games were played and won by players," Grant said. "Now it seems officials win games."

"They (officials) called Leo (wide receiver Leo Lewis) for pushing off. The other guy pushed him."

Grant was referring to Lewis' 44-yard catch in the fourth quarter that was nullified by officials who called a key offensive pass interference penalty.

"It's enough to make a grown man cry," said Grant.

The game could have been last for both teams with NFL Players Association members poised to strike as early as Tuesday.

Sunday's NFL games feature the New York Jets at New England, New Orleans at Chicago, Los Angeles Raiders at Atlanta, Philadelphia at Cleveland, San Diego at Kansas City, Cincinnati at Pittsburgh and Dallas at St. Louis, all at 1 p.m.

Also, Detroit at Los Angeles Rams, San Francisco at Denver, Seattle at Houston, Washington at Tampa Bay, and Baltimore at Miami, all at 4 p.m.

The New York Giants host the Green Bay Packers Monday at 9 p.m.

Kramer came out throwing and built a 19-7 halftime lead on touchdowns passes of 22 and 2 yards to backup tight end Bob Bruer. Kramer threw for 196 yards in the first half, mostly to wide receiver Sammy White, who finished with nine catches and 142 yards.

The Vikings' other points came on a safety in the first quarter and field goals of 43 and 42 yards by Rich Danmeier.

Early in the second quarter,

Minnesota led 19-0. But early on the Vikes committed penalties in bunches and by game's end they racked up 15, breaking the club record by one.

Penalties stalled drives that might have put more points on the board, and they figured in every Buffalo touchdown drive.

Pass interference calls against cornerback Willie Teal preceded Lewis' 6-yard score in the second quarter and Butler's 4-yard score in the third. The Vikes also were penalized for being offside in Buffalo's winning drive.

Nick Mike-Mayer, whose conversion following the late Butler score proved the winning margin, also had a 21-yard field goal two seconds into the fourth quarter.

Ferguson finished with 25 completions in 45 attempts for 330 yards. Between them, Ferguson and Kramer threw 91 times for 595 yards.

"They were two different ballgames," Ferguson said. "We turned the momentum around with the drive (Lewis' score) at the end of the first half. The defense played better and the offense played a lot better."

Buffalo, 2-0, established a running game at the outset with replacements for speedy Joe Cribbs who did little to distinguish themselves in last Sunday's 14-9 victory over Kansas City. Cribbs is the All-Pro halfback holding out for a new contract.

Fullback Roosevelt Leaks rambled for 76 yards on 13 carries and Curtis Brown added 54 more. Five Bills' backs rushed for 125 yards.

"Joe would average most of that (himself)," Bills' Coach Chuck Knox said of Cribbs, who rushed for 1,093 yards last year. "And when you add up the receiving yards he had (603), he was worth more than 100 yards a game on his own."

In between all the penalties — Buffalo had seven — Minnesota's Ted Brown rushed for a game-high 93 yards, Butler snared a 47-yard pass, and Kramer threw for the end zone seemingly every time he crossed midfield.

Minnesota, which beat Tampa Bay last Sunday 17-10, fell to 1-1.

Wow! Last week's games saw us have some problems, and as a result of it all, we find ourselves looking up at most of the rest of our panel of pickers.

A horrible 6-6 week left us tied with Vickie Spivey for fifth place with a 15-9 record.

Tom Baines has leaped into first place with an 18-6 mark, while the rest of the crew, Rick Scoppe, Joe Jenkins and our guests are tied at 16-8.

Dr. Delma Blinson, superintendent of Greenville City Schools, turned in a 7-5 mark on the week, but first week guest Mel Lang's 9-3 is still the best among the guests.

Our guest this week is Eddie West, the new superintendent of Pitt County Schools, giving both systems a shot at it. Admittedly, however, this week's games may not be as tough as last weeks.

Our high school picks resulted in another 4-1-1 week — but it wasn't Greene Central getting the tie this time. The mark brought our seasonal record to 13-3-3.

We have one cross-county game this week, and it brings together two teams still looking for a victory as D.H. Conley visits Farmville Central. The Vikings are 0-2-1 after tying North Pitt 6-6 last week, and Farmville is 0-3, having lost to strong Ayden-Grifton last time out.

This game could turn out to be a tough one, but

Players React To Strike Threat

By The Associated Press

While preparations continue for the second full weekend of National Football League action, most of the players are ready, reluctantly willing and quite able to make good on their threat to strike following completion of those contests.

"The way it stands right now," Pittsburgh Steelers quarterback and player representative Cliff Stoudt said Thursday, "Monday night's game (Green Bay at the New York Giants) will be the last. Everybody's got their fingers crossed that something can be worked out. But the way things are going, I doubt it."

Cubs Take 26-0 Win

WILMINGTON — The Greenville Rose Junior Varsity, led by Lorenzo Daniels and Tom Moore and a hard-hitting defense, defeated Wilmington Hoggard, 26-0, Thursday night.

Daniels and Moore each had two touchdown runs to lead the Rampants to their second win in three outings. Bryan Bridges kicked two PATs.

The Rampant defense was able to shut out Hoggard thanks in large part to the defensive front line, led by Amos Edwards, Bill Zadeits, Ronnie Moore, Mike Walsh and Bridges.

The Rampants return to action next Thursday when they play host to Northern Nash.

The NFL Management Council and the Players Association scheduled a bargaining session for today but Stoudt and many of his colleagues weren't optimistic that much progress would be made.

"I would say those two sides are so far apart it would be a miracle for anything to come out of that meeting. I hope it can be resolved but, unfortunately, this (a walkout) is the only card we have left to play."

Detroit Lions linebacker Stan White, a member of the union's executive committee, added, "We're tired of hearing about it ... We're tired of those management people ignoring the players and we're going to do something about it."

That something appears to be a walkout, something the players don't seem to fear doing.

"I just think our main bargaining tool is the threat of a strike," said Kansas City quarterback Steve Fuller. "And management has taken a stance to force our hand. It seems like they're almost provoking a strike."

Added Buffalo Bills quarterback: "The strike deadline is set for Tuesday. There's a solid hope the owners will get together. Somehow, maybe the owners will get off their high horse and the union will get off it's high horse."

Miami linebacker A.J. Duhe said, "I'd love to keep playing."

"I don't want to just sit at home and do nothing. But if a strike is called, I'm a union man. I'll do what the union wants."

Some players were holding to the hope that something positive would occur at the latest negotiating session.

"I have to hold out some optimism," said Miami guard Bob Kuechenberg, the only Dolphin who is not a member of the union. "It's unfathomable to me how this (strike) is going to occur."

"It still hasn't happened," said tackle Gordon King of the Giants. "I know it might not look that favorable that they'd get a solution by Tuesday, but sometimes in labor negotiations it seems to come down to a last minute agreement or arrangement. A lot can happen in three days if negotiations become serious."

Steve Largent and Jim Zorn of the Seattle Seahawks reiterated that they will not strike.

"I'm totally apathetic toward the whole situation," said Largent, a wide receiver for the Seahawks, a team which threatened a wildcat walkout prior to the season opener over the waiving of player rep Sam McCullum. "Like I said all along, I'm not against the union and that's not the reason I'm not going to strike. I just feel that I have signed a contract and I have obligated myself to that contract."

Zorn, a left-handed quarterback who lost his starting job to Dave Krieg last week, agreed with his batterymate but wasn't sure what he would do if the rest of his teammates walked out.

"I'm not really sure," said Zorn. "I'm going to go in (to the Seahawks' offices) and see what they want to do."

Atlanta quarterback Steve Bartkowski isn't thrilled about a strike, either, but can see why the players claim it may be necessary.

"My personal feeling is I don't want to strike," said Bartkowski. "I don't know of a guy (on the Falcons) that wants to strike. I'm personally satisfied with my contract."

"But I see a great deal of guys who are grossly underpaid and I don't see them getting a share of the profits, which are immense."

Kansas City's Clark Gaines wondered if the issues really were in focus when union executive director Ed Garvey and Management Council chief Jack Donlan get together to talk.

"I think we need to bring responsible people to the table to bargain, and to stop the bickering that has been going on between Jack Donlan and Ed Garvey," said Gaines. "I think a personality conflict has gotten in the way."

we're looking for Farmville to come away with the win, say 24-21.

Ayden-Grifton plays host to North Lenoir. The Chargers are rolling at 2-0 while North Lenoir comes in with a 1-1 record, having slipped past Greene Central by one point. The Chargers, unless something strange happens, should be the team to beat, and we'll give them the nod, 28-13.

Rounding out the Pitt games, we find North Pitt entertaining West Craven. The Panthers could pull this one out for a surprise after getting some encouragement in their last two games, a win and a tie. But — we're going with West Craven, about 12-7.

In other area games, we see Edenton over Roanoke, Williamston over Ahoskie, James Kenan over Greene Central and Belhaven over Jamesville.

Turning to the panel, and our two local games, we find East Carolina hosting East Tennessee and Rose at home to Hoggard.

Despite the fact that Rose hasn't won a game and Hoggard is 1-0-1, the panel likes the Rampants, going with them on a 6-0 margin. Our own personal observation is Rose, 14-6.

East Carolina plays host to East Tennessee, a team it beat 66-23 last year. This year, it might not be as bad, but we are looking for something in the neighborhood of 45-6. The panel also gives the Pirates the nod, 6-0.

Our consensus picks in the other games: Clemson over Boston College, Georgia Tech over The Citadel, North Carolina over Vanderbilt, Virginia over James Madison, Notre Dame over Michigan, South Carolina over Duke, West Virginia over Maryland, N.C. State over Wake Forest, Texas Tech over Air Force, and VMI over William & Mary.

The full poll:

Huskies Put New Ranking On Line

By The Associated Press

Two weeks into the college football season, Washington puts its new No.1 ranking on the line and Clemson's dreams for a second consecutive national championship face a serious challenge.

But Bill Yung's Texas-El Paso Miners have no dreams of a No.1 ranking or a national championship for the present. Respectability is more the order of the day, a very tough order when your opponent is sixth-ranked Southern Methodist.

Washington, ranked second in the preseason polls behind Pittsburgh, took over the No.1 position this week and carries the nation's bragging rights into Tucson Saturday for a game against the University of Arizona.

"The ratings are nice before the season starts," Washington Coach Don James said, "but the season has started. I think our concern should be our game each week. I know my concern is Arizona right now."

Last week, it was Texas-El Paso. And the Huskies 1-0, never let up, crushing the Miners 55-0 en route to taking over the nation's No.1 spot.

If Clemson, 0-1, is going to have any chance to repeat as national champion, it must beat Boston College at home on Saturday. And Coach Danny Ford knows the Tigers, edged by No.7 Georgia on Labor Day, face a stiff challenge from the Eagles, who spoiled Jackie Sherrill's debut at Texas A&M earlier this year.

"We could face no greater challenge to Clemson than Boston College," Ford said earlier this week. "They are going to be a serious threat, a real threat to us."

Boston College's biggest threat will be its air attack.

"Running the ball to set up the pass is awfully difficult for us at this caliber of competition," said Boston College Coach Jack Bicknell. "But we can throw and lessen things up enough to set up the run."

That's something No.16 Clemson has been anticipating.

"Against Georgia, our defense had to play run, run, run," said Ford. "This week, we'll have to play pass, pass, pass with a run or two thrown in."

Texas-El Paso may be facing the finest running tandem in the country in SMU's Eric Dickerson and Craig James, the so-called "Pony Express."

"Even if it's a checker game, I'm going to try to beat you," said Yung, who quipped that the Miners' offensive game plan against SMU called for the players to get up real slow after each play and to take a long time in the huddle.

Yung said both Washington and Southern Methodist are excellent teams.

"When you're playing teams like that, there's not much difference in them. They're all nines. Some of them are just 9.8s and some are 9.9s. I think that they way you learn though, by playing good people."

UTEP kicker Scott Wedell agreed.

"If that game (Washington) had been played a few years ago, it could have been 90-0. I mean, we really could have been routed bad."

In other Top 20 games Saturday, second-ranked Pitt is at Florida State, No.3 Nebraska hosts New Mexico State, No.4 Alabama visits Mississippi, No. 8 Penn State entertains Rutgers, Navy is at No.9 Arkansas and No.10 Michigan travels to South Bend, Ind., to play No.20 Notre Dame.

Also it's Vanderbilt at No.11 North Carolina, No.12 Ohio State at Michigan State, No.13 Arizona State at Houston, No.14 UCLA at Wisconsin, No.15 Miami, Fla., at Virginia Tech, Maryland at No.17 West Virginia, Utah at No.18 Texas and No.19 Southern Cal at Indiana.

Fifth-ranked Florida and Georgia are idle Saturday.

Other games of interest find Lafayette at Army, Illinois at Syracuse, Air Force at Texas Tech, Minnesota at Purdue, Oklahoma at Kentucky, Wake Forest at North Carolina State, Duke at South Carolina, Iowa State at Iowa.

NCAA To Ask Delay In Enforcement

By The Associated Press
The NCAA will ask a federal judge in New Mexico to put off enforcement of his ruling invalidating its football television contracts until the organization can appeal the case to the 10th Circuit Court of Appeals in Denver.
The NCAA said Thursday it was prepared to ask U.S. District Judge Juan Burciaga to stay his ruling which invalidated the NCAA's contracts with CBS, ABC and the Turner Broadcasting Co. The judge's decision, filed in Oklahoma City Wednesday, had ruled that the NCAA's contracts with the networks were in violation of federal antitrust laws. It held that only individual schools had the right to sell their games to television.

It is questionable whether the judge will stay his own ruling.
Burciaga, who is in Albuquerque, N.M., had said in his decision that "it would be unseemly for the court, having found an overt violation of the antitrust laws, to allow the violations to continue for even a single day, let alone the rest of the season."
The three television networks have said this weekend's schedule of games would be observed. Beyond that, there was little agreement on the ultimate consequences of the ruling. The original suit was filed by the football powers at the University of Oklahoma and the University of Georgia.
While the NCAA battled to have the ruling invalidated, college and conference administrators blasted the judge's decision.

"It's a dark day for college football," said George King, Purdue's athletic director and the president of the NCAA's Athletic Director's Association. "The decision of the court to eliminate TV control and eliminate the network contracts creates a chaotic state."
Miles Hallock, the chairman of the NCAA's television committee, said the decision was a victory for a few of the NCAA's superpowers.
"A very small minority of the latter have now succeeded in their efforts to override the wishes and needs of the vast majority," Missouri Athletic Director Dave Hart added that "Notre Dame will control the nation" and several other schools will dominate certain regions.

Many others predicted that if the ruling stands, only top 10 teams will be televised; some said things would remain the same no matter what; others said there would be a glut of televised games as colleges sold rights to individual stations around the country.
"If the situation holds up, the elite will get richer and Notre Dame will control the nation," said Hart. "Pittsburgh and Penn State will control the East. Alabama will control its area and Southern California its. The real losers will be the Division II and III schools. They won't stand a chance."

Hart's views seemed in line with those of most college administrators. But a few were in sharp disagreement.
"I think we will have to wait a couple of days, digest it, and see what happens," said DeLoss Dodds, athletic director at Texas. "But it doesn't surprise me. It's a part of a change, and some changes are for the better, and I think this is."
In effect, the ruling makes every NCAA school a free agent in selling its football games to television. It also does away with appearance limitations on the major powers and guaranteed appearances which the NCAA had insisted upon for smaller programs.
Rosa Gatti of ESPN, the cable sports network, said they had already received calls from colleges wanting to sell their games. She said ESPN would continue its policy of carrying several tape-delayed games each weekend, but suggested that local stations around the country might buy the rights to schools in their areas.

Fred Jacoby, outgoing commissioner of the Mid-America Conference, predicted the networks would seek to televise games in prime time on Friday nights.
"For television, the bottom line is ratings," Jacoby said. "If they have their way, they would show only top-ten ranked teams and, in this area, we have three of those, Ohio State, Notre Dame and Michigan. If this decision stands it will snuff out revenue, exposure and gate attractions at the smaller schools."

Birds Have Yanks In Hand Of Palmer

By The Associated Press
The Baltimore Orioles had the New York Yankees right in the hand of their Palmer.
"That was a 'Jim Palmer,'" said an enthused Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver after watching his ace right-hander hurl a six-hit, 3-1 victory over the Yankees Thursday night.

"We call him Superman. We expect a super effort from him everytime, and when he doesn't give it, we're disappointed. But the guy's human. What he did tonight was amazing."
Palmer, who turns 37 in October, made 142 pitches while starting for the fifth consecutive time with three days rest.

"He looked great in the first inning," said pitching coach Ray Miller. "From then on, it was kind of a struggle. But he battled his way through."

The victory was the Orioles' 24th in their last 28 games, moving them within one game of the first-place Milwaukee Brewers in the American League East race. The Brewers were idle Thursday night.
The only run off Palmer, 14-4, was a home run in the second inning by Dave Winfield, his 35th and ninth in the last 14 games. Palmer has won 12 of 13 decisions since May 30 and Thursday night's triumph was the 262nd of his career.

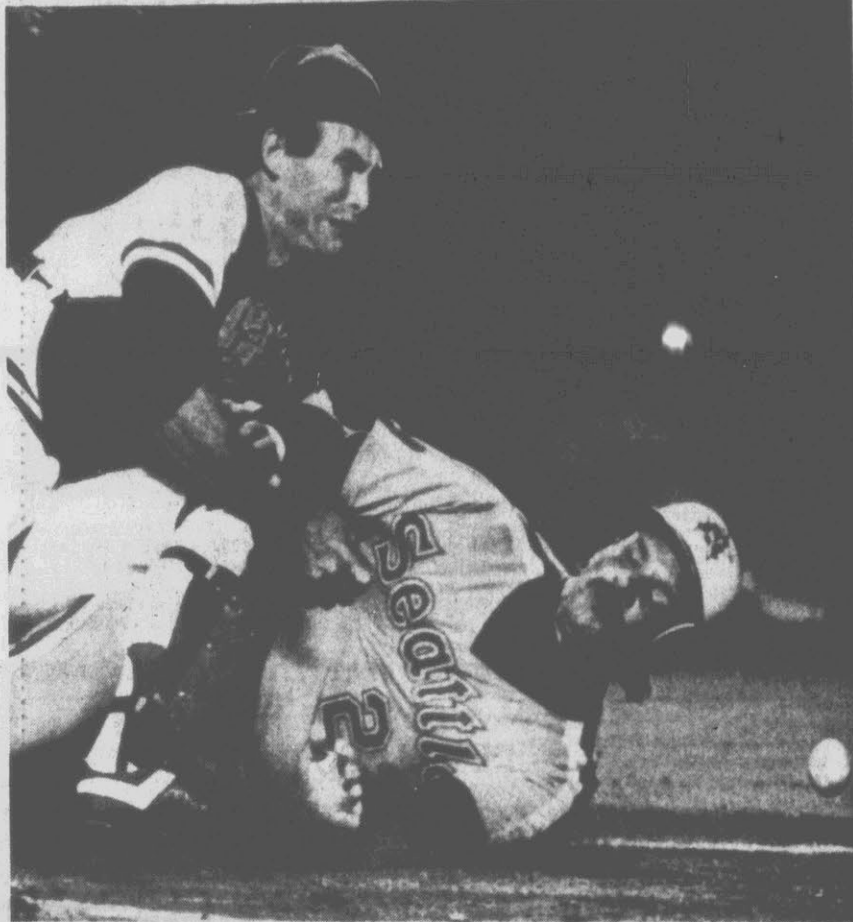

The Orioles, who scored come-from-behind victories in the first four games of the series with the Yankees, took a 2-0 lead in the first inning off Dave Righetti, 9-9, on RBI singles by Eddie Murray and Gary Roenicke.
Murray singled in the sixth and scored an unearned run on a two-out throwing error by shortstop Andre Robertson.
Mariners 4, Royals 2
Joe Simpson slugged a two-run triple in the ninth inning, leading Seattle over Kansas City. The victory was the Mariners' 68th of the season, setting a club single-season record.

Todd Cruz walked leading off the ninth and went to third when Julio Cruz singled on a hit-and-run play. Simpson then blasted a pitch from Dennis Leonard, 10-5, deep to left over the outstretched glove of George Brett, who was playing left field.
The victory went to Ed Vande Berg, 8-4, who relieved Floyd Bannister starting the eighth. Mike Stanton pitched the ninth to finish up a three-hitter and post his seventh save.
"Tonight's game was typical of all our wins this year," said Seattle Manager Rene Lachemann. "We got good pitching and we executed well. When we play defense and execute we have a good chance to beat anybody in the American League. When we don't play defense or execute, we don't have a good chance against anybody in the Midwest League."

walked and stole second, Larry Herndon singled for the fourth run.
Boston scored in the eighth on a sacrifice fly by Jerry Remy and added a run in the ninth on Wade Boggs' RBI single.
Wilcox, 11-8, struck out nine and walked two in his seventh complete game of the year.
White Sox 6, A's 3
Aurelio Rodriguez slugged four hits, including a game-winning single, to help Chicago defeat Oakland. Rodriguez's RBI single capped a two-run fourth and gave the White Sox a 3-2 lead at that point.

Giants Take 11th Win In Last 15 Outings

By The Associated Press
It was the Chili and Mookie Show in the National League, with a little Breining thrown in for added effect.
The Giants and Mets were winners Thursday night in the only National League action, thanks greatly to the efforts of Chili Davis and Fred Breining for San Francisco and Mookie Wilson for New York.

The Giants won for the 11th time in the last 13 games and moved within 5 1/2 games of first-place Los Angeles in the West with a 9-3 pasting of San Diego, which lost its sixth straight. Davis' two-run homer and six innings of strong pitching by Breining led the way, with Darrell Evans contributing a pair of two-run singles.
The Mets hurt the Expos' East Division chances — Montreal is 2 1/2 games behind first-place St. Louis — by winning 9-4 as Wilson had four hits and scored three runs.

Mets 9, Expos 4
Wilson plagued the Expos, who had a five-game winning streak snapped even though starter Scott Sanderson struck out 11 men in five innings. The Mets center fielder also led off the game with his fifth home run.
"A lot of people look at me and say 'Look at this guy, he can really run the bases,'" said Wilson. "But I want to be recognized as a complete player, whatever that definition is. I'm not there yet. I still strike out too often, for example. It has to be reduced, but that's one thing I'm going to do because I'm aggressive at the plate."

EC Golfers In Eleventh

CARY — East Carolina's Pirates, in their first golf outing of the fall season, finished play in the first round of the Wolfpack Invitational well back in the field, 11th out of 12 teams.
The Pirates, with a 314 team score, were well behind leading North and South Carolina, tied for third with 292 scores. Virginia was third with 298.
Don Sweeting led the Pirate scorers with a 75, while David Wagoner and Roger Newsom each had 79. John Riddle rounded out the scorers with an 81, while Chris Czaja had an 82.
The tournament continues today and Saturday at Cary's MacGregor Downs Country Club.

Players Ready, But Hope No Strike Call

NEW YORK (AP) — Ninety percent of the National Football League's players, while hoping that the first regular-season strike in league history could be averted when talks resumed, were prepared to walk out, according to union officials.

"The way it stands right now ... Monday night's game (the Green Bay Packers playing the New York Giants) will be the last," Pittsburgh Steelers player representative Cliff Stoudt said Thursday on the eve of today's negotiations.

"Everyone has his fingers crossed that something can be worked out. But the way things are going, I doubt it."

"I just think our main bargaining tool is the threat of a strike," said Kansas City

Chiefs quarterback Steve Fuller. "Management has taken a stance to force our hand. It seems like they are almost provoking a strike."

Negotiations for a contract to replace the agreement which expired July 15 resumed today for the first time since Sept. 8, when the NFL Management Council, the club owners' negotiators, made its latest offer.

The union promptly rejected that offer and union chief Ed Garvey said the possibility the NFL Players Association will call its members out on strike Tuesday is not an idle threat.

"If they (the owners) are serious this weekend, it's quite possible the decision will be to give them another week. If not, the players are prepared to go out on Tuesday," said Garvey, the NFLPA executive director, who conceded that the union's executive committee has informally set that deadline.

The executive committee will meet Monday in New York to formalize its strike deadline.

The union increased its preparations for a strike this week, notifying central labor organizations and unions that would be affected by a strike of the players' intentions.

Several newspapers, including the Los Angeles Herald Examiner, USA Today and the New York Times, reported that the league has acknowledged taking steps to try to field teams in the event a strike is called.

"There's no question the sentiment now on the part of the owners is to play through if we can," the Times quoted Jack Donlan, executive director of the Management Council, as saying Thursday.

"We are going to wait until the players have had their meeting Monday. Then we will evaluate our options. If our executive committee thinks the league can play NFL-caliber football, we'll play."

The Los Angeles Rams are holding secret tryouts for free agents this week, the Herald Examiner reported Thursday.

John Math, the Rams' director of player personnel, said the team itself was not staging the tryouts. "It was put on by one of the services that provide times and such on the athletes to NFL teams," Math said. "It's very common."

USA Today quoted Math as saying of the workout, "We have always had this in mind, sure. You have to be prepared. You can't let some imbecile dictate whether you're going to play or not to play."

On a second front, the NFLPA sent out ballots to union members Friday to choose All-Star divisional teams to play games at selected sites during a strike.

Three cities — Houston, Dallas and Shreveport, La. — have been mentioned as probable sites for the games. Officials in Memphis, Tenn., have refused to stage a union-backed game fearing it will hurt their chances of landing an NFL expansion team in the future.

Meanwhile, a spokesman for the owners says it is the union and not management that has pushed the league to the brink of its first midseason strike.

"The owners have been serious all along. It is the players who are wasting time keeping their demand for a percentage of the gross on the table," said Jim Miller, spokesman for the management council.

"Our idea of significant progress would be if the National Football League Players Association changed their thinking on a percentage of gross," Miller continued. "If they finally come to realize we are not going to accept that demand, we can have a settlement."

Garvey is expected to give the owners a counter proposal to their latest financial package.

The plan, which did not address the players' two main demands — a fixed percentage of gross revenues and creation of a central fund that would be used to pay players — was highlighted by cash bonuses based on longevity in the league. Under the proposal, a player would receive $10,000 for each year in the league retroactive to 1977 with the promise of an additional $10,000 for each year he played through the remainder of the collective bargaining agreement.

Union officials contend the package would cost the league's 28 clubs less than half of the $330 million the players would earn this year if they were to receive their goal of 55 percent of gross revenues.

"We will be changing some aspects of our position to try and narrow the monetary gap and see if that will convince them to start the bargaining process," Garvey said of his expected counter proposal.

But if the bargaining process is not resumed to their satisfaction, the players will strike.

"As a union, the only weapon we have is to withhold our services," noted Washington Redskins player representative Mark Murphy, a member of the union's bargaining team.

"The longer we go into the season, the harder it is to keep the players united," Murphy noted. "Each week that passes increases the pressure on the players."

straight match as the Lady Rams downed North Duplin, 7-2, Thursday in a nonconference tennis match.

Greene Central, now 2-3, captured the first four singles matches and led, 5-1, going into the doubles. The Lady Rams won the first doubles match to clinch the win.

Greene Central returns to action Thursday afternoon when the Lady Rams travel to Pikeville to play at C.B. Aycock, which has won 30 straight matches.

Rose High School's girls' tennis team captured a 6-3 victory over Rocky Mount yesterday in a hard-fought match.

After Pauline Bearden won the opening singles in easy fashion, Rose had to struggle the rest of the way, with three of the singles matches going three sets. Rose captured five of the six singles, however, to sew it up before the doubles got underway. Rocky Mount won two of the three doubles matches.

Now 4-0, Rose travels to Beddingfield on Tuesday.

Rose Runners Rip Gryphons

Rose High School's cross-country team romped to a 17-42 victory over Rocky Mount yesterday.

The Rampants came close to shutting out the Gryphons, taking the top four places before Rocky Mount managed fifth and sixth.

John Ormond finished first, crossing the line in 18:18, while teammate John Byrd was close behind at 18:28. Third was Paul Bolen in 19:06, followed by Jeremiah Brown in 19:18.

Rocky Mount's first finisher, in fourth, was Andy Brown in 19:42, followed by Wayne Battle in 19:44. Rose's Alan Dickens rounded out the scorers for Rose, finishing seventh in 19:54. Others in the top ten included Dennis Porter of Rocky Mount, 19:57; Frank Rabey of Rose in 20:09; and Todd Crouch of Rose in 20:18.

Other Rose finishers included Les Turner, 11th in 20:29; Will Hester, 13th in 21:34; Steve Worley, 16th in 23:05; and Joel Rayle, 17th in 23:10.

"Our top four people were within a minute of each other, and that was one of our goals," Coach Ron Hochmuth said. "But we've had nine different people finish in fifth position, and we need someone to be consistent there."

Rose, now 5-2, travels to Wilson Beddingfield on Tuesday.

Kickers Take Opening Game

Rose High School, playing its first even soccer match came away with a 2-0 victory over Rocky Mount yesterday.

The game was a scoreless tie during the first half, but Rose finally cracked the ice in the second.

The second tally came with about four minutes to play as Louis Robbins connected on a penalty kick.

Rampettes Win Fourth

Rose High School's girls' cross-country team captured its fourth straight win yesterday, downing Rocky Mount, 21-39.

Rose's Angie Michel was first across the line in the event, finishing in 24:21. She was followed by teammate Gloria Adams in 26:16. Sandy Ess of Rocky Mount took third in 27:36, with teammate Lois Baker fourth in the same time.

Bridgett Branch of Rose finished fifth in 28:07, followed by Rose's Amy Moore in 28:23 and another Rampette, Layne King, in 28:33. Eighth was Rose's Gina Branch in 29:16, followed by Rocky Mount's Paula Ess in 29:20.

Rose's Emily McDonald finished tenth in 30:19, rounding out the field for the Rampettes.

The unbeaten Rampettes travel to Beddingfield on Tuesday.

Adams Leads Fame Classic

PINEHURST (AP) — John Adams considered his lofty — and unaccommodated — position at the head of the field in the $250,000 Hall of Fame Golf Classic and found it less than overwhelming.

"It doesn't matter who's leading now, or Friday or Saturday," Adams said after his first-round 67. "The good players will be on top when Sunday comes around."

Some of the game's better players failed to support that contention, however.

PGA champion Ray Floyd, for example, struggled to a 3-over-par 74 in Thursday's opening round on the famed No. 2 course at the Pinehurst Country Club and must improve today if he is to qualify for the final two rounds.

PETE REMEMBERS PHILADELPHIA

Pete Rose, the ageless star at first base for the Philadelphia Phillies, doesn't consider himself unique because he can remember almost every hit he ever made.

"When you get paid for doing something that involves statistics," Rose said, "it's only natural to keep track of it. Hitting is my business and every big league park now has a message board which flashes your average when you come to bat. To me it's like somebody with bills to pay. He should know how much money he has in his checking account."

Complete Legal Library Leaves Little To Luck

By JOHN STRACHAN
Associated Press Writer
ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Abraham Lincoln would be hard-pressed to make it as a lawyer these days.

Ambitious boys from the backwoods toting home a handful of tattered legal books to read by the fire are about as common as lawyers who accept cows or chickens in fee.

The problem is that there is just so much to read.

If he were in practice today, Lincoln might well be thumbing his way through a six-volume set of "Condominium Law and Practice Forms," or "Capital Formation and Investment Incentives Around The World."

Those are but two of the 300 volumes available from Matthew Bender Co., one of the nation's largest publishers of books for the legal, accounting, banking, medical and insurance professions.

It's unlikely Lincoln ever perused anything like Bender's "The Prosecution and Defense of Sex Crimes," or a two-volume set entitled "Defense of Narcotics Cases."

For $135, an attorney can learn "case-winning trial strategies and techniques" covering "all defenses, including entrapment, agent of the buyer and unconscionable police conduct — as well as alternatives to trial."

Those who subscribe to the image of lawyers as unprincipled pettifoggers selling their souls and skills to the highest bidder might look askance at Bender's full "Courtroom Medicine" series.

A three-volume set entitled "Pain and Suffering" outlines "Everything you need to define pain and suffering for the jury ... show its physical impact and its accompanying mental anguish ... and ensure that your client's injuries are fully compensated."

The thumbnail sketch in the catalog also notes that the $200 set details "the effects of chronic pain on sexual activity."

For $160, the lawyer whose practice leans to malpractice also can pick up a copy of "Attorney's Dictionary of Medicine." This tool transforms "perplexing medical jargon into plain English."

It contains a pronunciation guide, a key to reading medical records and a kind of reverse dictionary that enables its user to transform laymen's terms into the proper medical terminology.

For specialists, there are multivolume editions of "The Low Back," "The Neck," "Hip and Thigh," and "Shoulder and Elbow."

But he who criticizes the legal profession might also be the same citizen arrested one night for drunken driving.

The naysayer facing his first taste of criminal justice might be happy knowing his counselor has read all three volumes of Bender's "Defense of Drunk Driving Cases."

"Count on this reliable work for up-to-the-minute coverage of the methods used to detect alcohol levels in the body," it proclaims.

The four-volume set entitled "Employment Discrimination" tackles areas Lincoln never addressed in his Emancipation Proclamation: "sex discrimination, race discrimination, discrimination on the basis of religion, age, national origin, handicaps, homosexuality, transsexuality and discrimination against veterans."

There are, too, the volumes that cover the less-sexy aspects of law — "Federal Taxes Affecting Real Estate," "Trust Administration and Taxation," and "Federal Income Taxation of Inventories" — the kind of reading one politely dismisses as "dry."

Still operating less than two miles north of the two-room office where it began in downtown Albany 95 years ago, Matthew Bender now employs more than 1,200 people at offices in New York, San Francisco and Washington D.C.

It was acquired in 1963 by the Times Mirror Co., and its volumes are now distributed worldwide.

Not all of Bender's legal knowledge is on paper. The firm has begun plugging into computer retrieval systems to give law offices immediate access to information they may need. And many publications are available on videotape for rental or purchase.

Armed with a few of those videocassettes and a Sony Betamax, "Honest Abe" could have had the law read to him.

Students' Technical Skills Are Proffered To Other Countries

By ELISSA MCCRARY
Associated Press Writer
SWANNANOVA, N.C. (AP) — Tim Rowland spent his summer laboring at a college course that requires as much brawn as brains. His classroom was a patch of red-clay ground and his assignment was to make 4,000 bricks out of the clay.

When Rowland turned out his last brick at the end of the course, his work was only half finished. He and nine classmates will now take their brickmaking skills to the Dominican Republic to rebuild houses destroyed by hurricanes.

The course is Warren Wilson College's appropriate technology program. Its aim is to help students learn skills appropriate for living in today's world.

"What we're trying to do is learn to use materials available to us, to avoid wasted time and energy by doing projects on the site," said Rowland, 21, of Boca Raton, Fla., a rising senior at Warren Wilson. "In this case, we're like guinea pigs. We're the first (college) with appropriate technology."

Warren Wilson, located in the Blue Ridge Mountains near Asheville, was founded in 1894 as a mission school for mountain boys. It became a private four-year, coeducational college in 1942.

Work mixed with academics has been a tradition at the school, and each of its 525 students is required to work on the school's 1,000-acre farm or on campus to pay for room and board.

Anthropology professor Glenn Mitchell says the appropriate technology course is a way for Warren Wilson to use its two main resources — land and student labor.

"The clay and sand come from the river that runs through the farm, and the students provide the labor to turn the clay into bricks," said Mitchell, who helped set up the program last year.

Mitchell's job, along with program director Chris Ahrens, is to get the students ready for eight weeks of work abroad. The program calls for a group of 10 students to go to a foreign country at the end of the summer and in January after a year's training and study on campus.

Ahrens said future groups would travel to South America, Central America, the Caribbean and Mexico to work.

Mitchell says the program will be a "mini Peace Corps," with students able to speak the language of the country where they will be working.

"This first group has spent hours learning to speak Spanish, studying the political structure of the country, weather conditions, everything they'll need to know in order to live and work there," Mitchell said. The 10 students will pay for their trip, which will amount to about $500 apiece.

Rowland said the brickmaking class had given the students a taste of the hard work they'll be doing in the Dominican Republic. Students dig the red dirt and sand mixed in troughs and sprayed with water to make it stick together. Then the mixture is shoveled into a box and poured into a manual press, which turns out a brick.

The 20-pound bricks, called Cinva-ram bricks, aren't fired in a kiln but dried for 10 days. The 4,000 bricks the students produced this summer will be used to build a 1,000-foot appropriate-technology workshop.

"What we want to do is to learn something here that will enable us to help people in other countries," Mitchell said. "We want to go to these countries not as tourists but as workers."

"What we're trying to say with our appropriate technology is that the steel mills and hydroelectric dams don't solve problems in the rural areas, where three-quarters of the world's population still lives," he said. "We want to learn skills that we can pass on to people in other countries that will teach them to help themselves."

Somehow, The Mail Was Lost

WADDY, Ky. (AP) — The mail — some 500 pieces of it — should have been delivered in 1920. But somehow two sacks full got mislaid until this year when the building that served as the post office here from 1869 to 1914 was remodeled.

Never ones to shirk a chore, postal authorities did make an effort to get that mail through. After eliminating the advertising circulars, the Dead Letter Office sent out 300 pieces of mail.

According to Lawrence Dassenbrock, manager of the Cincinnati Dead Letter Office, many of the letters did go through.

"Only a handful have come back," he said.

Comparing 2 Royal Romances

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — It's a double wedding. Two TV dramatizations of the romance and marriage of Prince Charles and Lady Diana. It's too bad the best elements of each couldn't have been fused into one terrific love story.

Still, the ABC production tonight is more romantic, more appealing than the CBS film on Monday. Tonight, when the prince gives his princess her first royal kiss, it's CBS that will turn into a frog.

Tonight's air date for ABC's "Charles & Diana: A Royal Love Story" was announced just three days ago — an outrageously short time for TV promotion. ABC boldly rushed to beat CBS to the church, and still wound up with a prettier picture than CBS' "The Royal Romance of Charles and Diana."

ABC's film is more escapist fairy tale. A handsome prince falls in love with a beautiful young girl amid royal settings. Very little falls on their parade. This is how Hollywood — and Buckingham Palace — meant it to be, and it leaves one with a warm feeling.

CBS takes a slight revisionist approach, fraying the couple a bit around the edges. It's probably the more realistic treatment, although only Charles and Diana really know the details of their courtship. Unfortunately, the film is heavyhanded and corny, lacking charm and real sparks between the couple.

For example, CBS has them meeting for the first time when, as a young girl, she asks for his autograph. Several years later, she literally bumps into him while he's dating her sister. Diana curtsies and falls down. Thud.

On ABC, Diana runs through a field to meet Charles, who's on a foxhunt with her sister. In this one, Diana seems to be pursuing Charles early on, and she's more assertive and marriage-minded in their relationship.

Charles also comes across tonight as a weebegone, self-deprecating sort of guy. He moans that his girlfriends marry other men, and he jokes about the energy of Henry VIII. He says he'll hold the record as "oldest unmarried Prince of Wales in history."

CBS, meanwhile, focuses on Charles' playboy reputation. He's more self-assured. "Who am I escorting this time?" he jokes. He pursues — and gets passionate — with one demanding beauty who later makes a scene when Charles spends too much time in a receiving line.

In contrast is the innocent Diana, whom both productions depict as shy in public but buoyant in private. Both pinpoint a fishing trip with Charles, when Diana delights in slipping away from the pursuing press, as significant. On ABC, we don't see them kiss until he returns from a long trip to India. CBS has them rolling in the grass well before India.

Their relationship on ABC develops relatively smoothly. His major concern is: "Marry me, and there'll be no more impulses. We live on a schedule (pronounced SHedule), by appointment." On CBS, there are more conflicts around friends, age and the sensation-hunting British media.

ABC's Charles is David Robb ("Flame Trees of Thika"), a storybook handsome and King Arthurish in his kindness. CBS'

Charles is British actor Christopher Baines, who gives the prince a gawky appearance, a goofy grin and a more forceful personality.

Attempting to humanize Charles, ABC stresses his relationship with favorite uncle Lord Louis Mountbatten, while CBS ignores the character entirely. (On the other hand, Diana's father is sickly on CBS but is healthy on ABC.) After Mountbatten is killed by Irish terrorists, the sensitive Charles is deeply hurt. The program offers his developing love for Diana as helping him cope.

Caroline Bliss (ABC) and acting newcomer Catherine Oxenberg (CBS) have Diana's look down, with the peekaboo glances, shy smile and famous hairdo.

Similar territory is covered: family pressure on Charles to marry, Diana's well-photographed low-cut gown and the full-court press by British journalists, who are the villains in both films. ABC has a better sense of humor about it, though.

ABC's film was shot entirely in England. CBS used England and Hollywood as backdrop. They both intercut historical footage of the procession and wedding ceremony with their own closeups. But ABC lingers longer here, letting the emotional moments build better to the finale.

At the end, ABC has them on the balcony, watched by thousands, says Diana. No, millions, corrects Charles. "Just two people," concludes Diana.

Thousands Gather For Big Tom Mix Festival

By BOB DVORCHAK
Associated Press Writer
DUBOIS, Pa. (AP) —

Thousands of hero worshippers from America and Europe, some strutting in spurs and 10-gallon hats, are paying homage this week to the late Tom Mix, original king of the matinee cowboys.

"He was 10 feet tall in the saddle to me," recalled Richard Seiverling, a longtime fan of the dashing silent film star.

By the time the six-day Tom Mix Festival ends Sunday, about 10,000 people are expected to have dropped by to take in 30 hours of cowboy movies, assorted Tom Mix memorabilia and a parade Saturday.

"When you saw Tom Mix on the screen, you knew good was going to triumph over evil. The bad guys didn't have a chance," said Robert Cotton, a historian from Bartlesville, Okla. "I like to call it Mix magic."

Tom Mix mania is flourishing 42 years after Mix died when his custom-made supercharged Cord car crashed on an Arizona highway.

Although Texas, Oklahoma and California have claimed Mix as a native son, the locals insist Mix was born in 1880 in Mix Run, Pa., about 40 miles northeast of here.

He made 370 films — most of them silent movies, although there were nine feature-length talkies and a 15-part serial, "The Miracle Rider."

At the height of his popularity in the 1920s, he earned $17,000 a week.

Long before Gene Autry, John Wayne and Clint Eastwood chased Indians and bad guys on the silver screen, Mix set the standard for movie cowboys. A dashing daredevil, he did all his own stunts with his wonder horse Tony. He didn't drink, smoke or swear on screen, and his fame spread across the sea.

"Tom Mix is the best-known American actor in Europe. For many people, he's the best-known American," said Peter Schauer of Vienna, Austria, attending his first Mix festival.

"I believe Tom Mix was the best ambassador the U.S. ever had," Schauer said.

"He was our idol. He was a hero of the German," said Kurt Klotzbach of Dortmund, West Germany. "He had 5 million fans in Germany and even Hitler could not ban his films."

As part of the festival, townspeople and visitors dress in authentic Western garb, right down to neckerchiefs, badges and real six-shooters. For breakfast, one can even order hot Ralston cereal, which sponsored the Tom Mix radio show from 1933 to 1950, and established the Tom Mix fan club called the Ralston Straight Shooters.

"In this day and age, everybody is running down heroes," said Serge Darrigrand, a Tom Mix look-alike and engineer for General Motors Corp. in Onsted, Mich.

"Kids have nobody to pattern their lives after, nobody to look up to the way we looked up to Tom Mix. We're trying to bring it back," said Darrigrand, 47, dressed in cowboy boots, spurs, jeans, red shirt and 10-gallon hat.

Today, items that cost a dime at the time can fetch $50 to $100 from Tom Mix collectors.

The festival is the brainchild of Seiverling, of Hershey, Pa., who has a doctorate in education and has been a Tom Mix fan since he can remember.

"Tom Mix was my role model. I was an orphan, and he filled a large void in my life after I lost my father," Seiverling said. "He was 10 feet tall in the saddle to me. He personified the struggle of the forces of good versus the forces of evil."

"And there's still magic in his name," he added.

Hospitality House

WASHINGTON — Detailed information on consumer research on cars is the lead off topic of Kay Currie's Hospitality House show, airing from 1 to 1:30 p.m. Saturday over WTTN-TV, Channel 7, Washington.

Marilyn King, consumer specialist from Dearborn, Mich., was interviewed on automobile consumer standards by Ms. Currie in San Francisco at the national conference of American Women in TV and Radio.

Two guests, Judy Smiley and S.E. Boykin, give details on the art competition now under way (through Oct. 15) on Portraits of Wilson. The competition is one dealing with pictorial art on the city of Wilson — paintings, prints, photographs, etc.

The final guest on Saturday's Hospitality House is Carl Toot of Kinston, who gives details on the 10th annual ceramics show to be held in New Bern Sept. 24-26.

'At All Times' Clause Dropped

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — The City Council has decided it would be unreasonable to require go-go dancers to carry an identification card "on their persons" at all times.

The council recently passed an ordinance requiring the dancers to be licensed, but decided to scrap a requirement that they carry identification at all times.

Councilman Pete Clifford said the requirement that dancers carry the cards "on their person" might pose a problem, considering the nature of the job and the normal attire.

The lone dissent against the loophole came from Russell Yarbrough, a veteran council member who has earned a reputation for his battle against pornography. "I still say if she has enough clothes on, she has a place to put a card," snapped Yarbrough.

Calling For Increased Gifts To Center

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

"The focus at this time is to get local contributors to re-evaluate their original gifts and if possible, to increase their pledges," said Morris Brody, chairman of the 20-month old campaign to raise $1,450,000 for the nongovernment-funded portion of a new 93,000-square-foot building at the Eastern Carolina Vocational Training Center.

Brody talked about the status of the campaign Thursday after making an additional contribution of $15,000 from Brody's of Greenville. This amount supplements the Brody firm's original campaign pledge of $10,000. The firm also earlier made a general contribution to the center in the amount of $10,000.

"A large number of firms have taken a second look at their pledges and have come up with a substantial increase over their original pledges," Brody commented. "This is the type of helpful action we need at this time in order to successfully raise the $120,000 still needed to complete the initial goal of $1,450,000."

Brody said he feels it's time "to close out the campaign. It's been going on since February of last year, so I've decided to set a target date of October 9 as the campaign close out date."

The construction, Brody said, "is due to be completed in early October."

The additional facility will bring the total area of the center, located just north of Greenville, to 200,000 square feet. The value of the facility, including the new addition, "is about $12,000,000" Brody remarked. "When the state authorized the addition, the cost was set at $5,100,000. The state provided $3,650,000 of that amount, with a stipulation that the remaining $1,450,000 was to be raised through a fund-raising campaign."

Although the primary focus is now on added contributions from businesses and firms who have already provided support, Brody added, "We'll be most happy to accept any size contribution from any source. There may be a willing donor out there who has not been contacted during the campaign. If so, I hope they'll step forth and make a donation."

According to Brody, the center has an enviable success record. "It's now 82 percent self supporting. That's a good record. This is possible primarily because of a federal contract for picture frames and battery lugs, as well as money earned from the recycling facility."

The new addition, Brody explained, will make it possible to encompass more than training, work and therapy for the handicapped. "We hope to integrate the program to provide needed services for senior citizens. We want to open up opportunities to older people with meager incomes so they will have a place where they can work at limited employment to supplement their income. Another thing is we hope to make the therapy room available to more people."

This Summer Really Cooler

By GEORGE THREEWITTS
ECU News Bureau

Those lazy, hazy days of summer were hazier this year and solar energy was reduced appreciably by cloud, rain and volcanic ash, according to observations by ECU researchers.

Average daily temperatures in Greenville were two degrees cooler this summer than in 1981. And readings by the ECU Physics Department showed an estimated 10 percent reduction in solar energy reaching the earth's surface.

These findings are based on daily readings and calculations of the daily solar fraction by ECU scientists using special solar measuring instruments.

"In the summer months, the solar fraction usually ranges from 90 to 100 percent, but this summer there were only a handful of days when it got above the 90 percent mark," said Alan Larkins, a technical and computer systems coordinator in the physics department.

A 90 percent solar fraction reading would indicate that 90 percent of a typical family's hot water needs could be provided by an average size solar hot water system.

ECU scientists say the decline in average daily temperature and reduced solar energy level "probably" resulted from increased cloudiness, rain and effects of volcanic ash in the atmosphere.

Huge clouds of volcanic ash and gases shot into the sky last March during the cataclysmic eruption of the volcano Chincón in southeastern Mexico. Its presence in the atmosphere may last for years, scientists say.

The ECU readings for June, July and August showed average temperatures of 77 degrees compared to 79 degrees for the same months in 1981. June was the coolest of the summer months, with a 75-degree average or six degrees below the daily average for June a year ago.

ECU scientists calculate the solar fraction daily and report these measurements to local radio stations and newspapers to aid homeowners in determining the efficiency of solar heating systems.

"You might say it's been disappointing (this summer) if you're in the solar energy business, or if you had a solar hot water heater," Larkins said.

He added that if the cooler weather trend continues farmers may get an early frost.

In addition to making temperature and solar fraction readings and calculations, the ECU physicists measure wind speed and collect solar radiation samples. Instrumentation is located atop the ECU science complex.

Data is processed through computers for analysis.

Auto Emissions Testing Up In Air

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A vote by the U.S. House of Representatives on auto-emissions control programs leaves prospects for emissions tests in North Carolina "up in the air," a state official says.

The House voted Wednesday to prohibit the federal Environmental Protection Agency for one year from penalizing states that fail to implement auto-emissions control programs.

A spokesman for the House Energy and Commerce Committee said the vote means EPA cannot withhold federal highway funds from states that have no auto-emissions programs.

The EPA had threatened North Carolina and 10 other states with the possibility of losing federal highway money unless they implemented emissions-test programs.

Mecklenburg is the only North Carolina county that does not meet federal standards for carbon monoxide levels and the only county where emissions tests were to become mandatory.

R.W. Wilkins Jr., commissioner of the state's Division of Motor Vehicles, said the House vote "puts it (the testing program) up in the air."

"We won't analyze what it means for us until it passes the Senate," he said. "I'm not going to speculate now about what we'll do."

A change in the law could mean that Mecklenburg County won't need the emissions tests to bring its carbon monoxide levels in compliance with federal standards, according to the House Energy and Commerce Committee.

However, Jay Langfelder, assistant secretary of the state Department of Natural Resources and Community Development, said the state will go ahead with inspections.

Langfelder said state officials at first thought the ban would conflict with the so-called Hardison Amendment, a state law barring North Carolina from having tougher pollution standards than those required by federal government.

"If the Hardison Amendment came into play, we would have to reevaluate our position," he said. But, Langfelder said, the department tentatively thinks the legislation that would prevent the EPA from cutting off some federal funds wouldn't lessen federal standards.

Arrested On Forgery Counts

Richard Andre Hagans, 33, of Wilson has been arrested by Greenville police on four counts of forgery and uttering following investigation of incidents reported Sept. 10, Chief Glenn Cannon said.

Hagans, the chief said, has been charged with giving forged checks for $185.54 each at the A&P Store, Big Star, Winn Dixie and Foodtown supermarkets. Cannon said the checks were forged on Southern Agricultural Products-Southern Industrial Sales Corp. in Wilson, and were made payable to Clarence A. Moore.

Pitt Firemen Had 51 Alarms

During August the rural fire departments of Pitt County answered 51 alarms and participated in fighting 43 fires.

There were seven house fires, one mobile home fire, 10 building fires, nine motor vehicle fires, one false alarm, 15 "others" and eight mutual aids.

There was $330,500 involved in fires; $343,500 exposed; $54,850 lost and $619,150 saved by the rural fire departments.

The Ayden, Falkland and Staton House fire departments had the most fires — five each.

Fried Chicken At Service Stations

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Before too long, it may be possible to munch on a fried chicken drumstick while getting your car's gasoline tank filled.

Owners of service stations and convenience stores say they may try to peddle the traditional Southern delicacy as they search for ways to turn a profit during tough economic times.

"When there isn't enough profit in gas, our members have to look to other options," said Don Williams, executive director of the North Carolina Association of Convenience Stores.

That's why the North Carolina Oil Jobbers Association sponsored the first Southeast Petro-Food Marketing Exposition, which ended Wednesday at the Charlotte Civic Center. Exhibitors at the show offered dozens of ways gas station and convenience store owners can boost profits.

"Fried chicken provides one of the highest gross profit percentages per square foot of anything you can sell," said Alvis Jordan, a salesman for Refrigeration of the Carolinas, a Greensboro company.

About 13,000 of the 35,000 convenience stores dotting the United States already sell

Scholarships Go To 2 Seniors

ECU NEWS BUREAU
Two senior students in the East Carolina University School of Business have accepted scholarship awards from the Purchasing Management Association of Carolinas-Virginia Inc.

They are Amy Elizabeth Williams Gurkin of Williamston, recipient of a $1,000 scholarship, and Linda Carol Barco of Shawboro, who received a $750 award. Both PMAC-V awards were made in honor of Harold A. Barry, who retired last year as the association's executive director.

The scholarships are awarded to students in four-year colleges or universities which offer programs in purchasing or materials management.

Both 1982 recipients are candidates for the bachelor of science in business administration degree and have maintained superior academic grade point averages.

The toughest opposition to San Francisco's march to the title in the Grand National Team Championships, held in Albuquerque, N.M., in July, was a Mexico-Texas team they encountered in the semifinals. The Southwestern team took the early lead on this hand.

Despite the fact that East opened the bidding and that North-South between them held only 20 high-card points, they bid freely to slam. North, Dr. George Rosenkranz of Mexico City, judged that his void in the opener's suit, first-round control of responder's suit and good six-card side suit would offer fair play for slam. His partner, Eddie Wold from the Lone Star State, justified his partner's confidence.

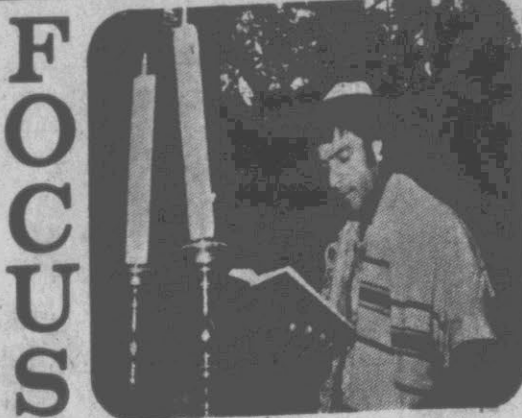

West led the top of his club suit and dummy was forced to ruff. It seemed that the contract was going to hinge on a diamond finesse, but after West showed when a trump was led to the king, declarer had to rethink the position.

Now, a diamond to the jack would no longer be good enough even if East had to win the trick with the ace. East could simply force declarer to ruff the ace of clubs, and dummy would not have enough trumps to serve as entries for both the trump finesse and to establish and cash the diamonds.

Wold uncovered a distribution that would still allow him to make his contract. He led a diamond and finessed dummy's six! East tried to steer declarer up the wrong path by allowing the six to win, but declarer would not be deterred. He led a low diamond from the table, and East was forced to win the ace.

East found the best defense—he forced dummy to ruff with the ace of clubs. But the hand was an open book. Declarer called for dummy's king of diamonds. East ruffed and declarer overruffed. A club was ruffed with dummy's last trump, and declarer's last club loser was sluffed on the ace of spades. Now all declarer had to do was get back to his hand to draw the last trump and claim. At the other table San Francisco thought they had a good score for making five hearts doubled. However, San Francisco recovered to win and match and, eventually, the title.

Not Just In Israel

Happy Rosh Hashanah! On Saturday, Jewish people all over the world will celebrate the Jewish new year. Although the nation of Israel was formed in 1948 for the Jewish people, only about one-sixth of the world's Jews live there. More than one-third of the world's 14.3 million Jews live here in the U.S. The Jewish population of New York City alone is equal to about two-thirds of Israel's 3.2 million people. The world's third largest Jewish population lives in the U.S.S.R. where the government has restricted emigration and historically persecuted Jews. The French Jewish population — the world's fourth largest — has been the victim of terrorist attacks recently.

IN THE GENERAL COURT OF JUSTICE SUPERIOR COURT DIVISION NORTH CAROLINA COUNTY OF PITT

IN THE MATTER OF THE ESTATE OF HAROLD BUCK, DECEASED

NOTICE OF SUBSTITUTION OF TRUSTEE'S SALE

Under and by virtue of the power and authority contained in that certain Deed of Trust executed and delivered by HAROLD BUCK and wife, ANN BUCK, dated July 11, 1979, and recorded in the Office of the Register of Deeds of Pitt County, North Carolina, in Book D-48 at Page 300 and because of default in the payment of the indebtedness there secured and failure to carry out or perform the stipulations and agreements therein contained and pursuant to the demand of the owner and holder of the indebtedness secured by said Deed of Trust, and pursuant to the Order of the Clerk of Superior Court for Pitt County, North Carolina, entered in this foreclosure proceeding, the undersigned, Randy D. Doub, Substitute Trustee, will expose for sale at public auction on the 27th day of September, 1982, at 10:00 P.M. on the steps of the Pitt County Courthouse, Greenville, North Carolina, the following described real property:

Lying and being situated in Winterville Township, Pitt County, North Carolina and being all of Lot No. 1, in Block C of the Rosewood Subdivision as shown on map thereof made by Dickerson Adams and Associates, P.A. dated March 1, 1977, and recorded in Map Book 25, at Page 191 on the steps of the Pitt County Registry, to which reference is made for a more complete and accurate description.

Property Address: Tucker Road, Rosewood Subdivision, corner Lot at northeast intersection of Tucker Road and Pine Drive, Winterville, North Carolina.

The sale will be made subject to all prior liens, unpaid taxes, restrictions and easements of record and assessments, if any.

The record owner of the above-described real property as reflected on the records of the Pitt County Register of Deeds not more than ten (10) days prior to the posting of this Notice is Harold Buck.

Pursuant to North Carolina General Statutes 45-21.10(b), and the terms of the Deed of Trust, any successful bidder may be required to deposit with the Substitute Trustee immediately upon conclusion of the sale a cash deposit of ten (10%) percent of the bid up to and including $1,000 plus the (5%) percent of any excess over $1,000. Any successful bidder shall be required to tender the full balance purchase price so bid in cash or certified check at the time the Substitute Trustee tenders to him a deed for the property or attempts to tender such deed, and should said successful bidder fail to pay the full balance purchase price so bid at that time, he shall remain liable on his bid as provided for in North Carolina General Statutes 45-21.30 (d) and (e).

This sale will be held open ten (10) days for upset bids as required by law.

The Greenville Home Builders Association presents: 1982 Parade Of Homes

Saturday And Sunday, Sept. 18 and 19

1 PINERIDGE ROAD

This solar house is a 1424 square foot house which utilizes several passive solar features to maintain a comfortable living space throughout the year. It has designed by Custom Residential Designs of Fayetteville and built by Bill Clark Construction Company of Greenville.

Some of the many features you will find in this energy efficient home are specially-designed quarry tile floor, insulated window quilts, heat pump and a woodstove. An active solar water heater will provide the majority of hot water free. This house is for sale for $61,000. The solar features cost $6,000 and $3,400 of these expenditures is eligible for State and Federal tax credit. The solar features are conservatively estimated to provide 67% of the home's heating needs.

2 SPEIGHT DRIVE

This charming house located on a wooded corner lot will bring a little bit of sunshine to your life. Decorated in blue and yellow with a contemporary flair. This 1080 square foot home has 3 bedrooms, 1 1/2 baths, great room with woodburning stove hook-up, and a lovely yellow and white kitchen. This brick home trimmed in yellow and brown also features a carport and outside storage. Built according to E-300 specifications, this home is also covered by Home Owners Warranty. Built by Stanley Peadar Builders, Inc.

3 409 SEDGEFIELD DRIVE

Bowser Construction Company has built this ranch-style house with today's buyer in mind. Upon entering, you are instantly aware of a spacious feeling which belies the 1250 square feet. There are three comfortable sized bedrooms, compartmentalized baths, large country kitchen-eating area, and spacious great room.

For the energy-minded consumer, this house is equipped with a Vermont Castings wood stove. Bowser has even gone a step further by adjusting the ventilation system in the house so that the heat from the wood stove should be circulated throughout the entire house. Other energy-saving features are: storm windows, insulated steel doors, and R-30 insulation in the ceiling to comply with E-300 standards. This rustic cedar ranch house sits on a nice roomy lot and should especially appeal to first-time buyers.

4 WILLIAMSBURG MANOR TOWNHOMES

Bowser Construction has captured a little "Old Country" appeal in its Williamsburg exteriors and combined it with "wide-open" interiors at Williamsburg Manor. Each unit has its own distinctive and different exterior while having large flow-together rooms inside. No more closed-in feeling in these two bedroom, 1 1/2 bath townhomes with custom-built kitchens.

5 540 CRESTLINE BLVD.

Traditional styling, a durable brick exterior and a proven two story design comprise this 1982 Parade of Homes entry from Blount & Ball.

Living and dining areas are generous, the traffic pattern is logical and uncluttered and the garage, which opens to the rear offers additional storage or work space.

6 1513 BIRCH PLACE

The first time you drive into Treetops, you may think you're entering a graceful country estate. Treetops' small groups of homes separated by carefully manicured and landscaped common areas and cul-de-sacs have an appeal not found in ordinary development areas.

The Berwick is a three bedroom and two full baths home offering a most useable living area. This unique plan includes hardwood floors in the formal areas, an efficient kitchen, old brick fireplace and a master bathroom with numerous extras. This 1836 square foot home has earned Greenville Utilities E-300 Rating. For further information about Treetops, please call Preferred Properties of Greenville, Inc. at 756-7799.

8 CYPRESS CREEK TOWNHOMES

Individually owned townhomes have gained significantly in popularity. Blount & Ball is currently developing custom designed two and three bedroom townhomes in a completely private, wooded setting just off East Arlington Boulevard.

The two bedroom, two bath home will be featured in the 1982 Parade of Homes. These townhomes offer superior utilization of space, surrounded by gently rolling terrain and mature trees.

9 1603 HOLLYBRIAR LANE

This is one you don't want to overlook! A terrific house to raise children in! Convenient to schools and shopping, yet located in a quiet subdivision. This 1480 square foot brick house has 3 bedrooms, 2 baths, entry foyer, a light and airy kitchen, formal dining room, separate utility and a large family room with fireplace. Its tan and rust interior accented in blue is a home to be admired. Built according to E-300 Specifications and covered by Home Owners Warranty.

10 BAYTREE DRIVE

Built by Ben Everett, one of the area's outstanding young builders, this home located on a corner lot is as attractive on the outside as the inside. The use of a central foyer, highlighted by hand stenciled pineapples above the entry door and rich parquet flooring create an atmosphere of old tradition in a new home. In the tradition of Williamsburg, the pineapple says "Welcome".

Home features three bedrooms, 2 baths and an area off one bedroom that may be used as a hobby, nursery or study. It also has a separate storage building designed in the same fashion as the house.

Ben is the president of William B. Everett Builders, with offices located in Robersonville, N.C.. He has been in the construction business for the past eight years. He is a member of the Greenville Home Builders and National Home Builders.
