Bill Ending Railroad Paralysis Is Rushed

By DON WATERS Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) - A House committee today speedily approved legislation ordering locomotive engineers to end a strike that officials say is costing the already-battered U.S. economy up to $1 billion a day.

Final congressional passage of the joint resolution, which was approved by a voice vote of the Senate Tuesday night, was planned later in the day, followed by President Reagan's signature. It then would become law immediately.

The measure gained voice-vote approval from the House Energy and Commerce Committee, chaired by Rep. John D. Dingell, D-Mich., with only a scattering of voices in dissent.

One of the opponents, Rep. James Florio, D-N.J., said he would try on the House floor to substitute the back-to-work order with a new, 140-day cooling-off period that would permit negotiations to continue.

Florio called the imposed settlement "a bad precedent and a real departure from the way government has done business for years." But supporters cited the serious impact the walkout has had on the economy.

The strike by 26,000 members of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers was in its fourth day today.

The walkout has idled another 400,000 railroad workers and Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis told Congress Tuesday that unless it ends, up to 500,000 other people in rail-dependent industries could be laid off within two weeks.

The bill's approval by the Senate Tuesday night was urged by leaders of both parties, including Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, chairman of the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee and the panel's ranking Democrat, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts.

The only dissent in the less than half-hour of Senate debate was voiced by Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, who said he thought Congress should never impose a labor settlement.

But Lewis, the leadoff witness in separate congressional hearings, hit hard on the strike's impact on the economy.

"... The well-being of this country cannot afford a national rail strike," Lewis testified. "The continuation of rail freight movements is critical, and a protracted strike would imperil both the nation's economy and defense."

He cited estimates that the shutdown, affecting nearly all of the nation's freight railroads as well as some commuter and Amtrak service, is costing the economy as much as $1 billion a day.

The walkout, which began at 12:01 a.m. Sunday at the expiration of a 60-day cooling-off period, involves a union demand that the engineers be guaranteed higher wages than other members of a train crew.

The engineers earn an average of $36,000 a year, while brakemen and other crewmen average $27,000 to $32,000. But negotiated incentives for increased productivity could push the salaries of some of the latter group above that of the engineers.

The legislation would give the force of law to a recommendation by a special presidential commission, established during the cooling-off period. The panel said the wage-differential issue should be left to separate negotiations and no strike permitted on the issue while the master contract is in effect through June 30, 1984.

Some Democrats in the House and Senate said federal imposition of contract terms damaged the collective-bargaining system. Instead, they suggested, another cooling-off period should be enacted or the issue should be committed to binding arbitration.

But Lewis and his allies said the economic impact of the walkout warranted extraordinary measures. They noted that the government has intervened in rail disputes before, although not precisely in this way.

Lewis also said that a further cooling-off period could lead to an unraveling of other rail contracts negotiated along with the engineers' pact and lead to more labor problems. He got implied support from Fred Hardin.

Begin Government Sees Hot Battle For Survival

By The Associated Press

The Israeli government battled for survival today in a bitter Parliament debate over the Beirut refugee camp massacres, and Israel's defense minister said the army had allowed Christian Phalangist militiamen into the camps but had not expected a slaughter of civilians.

Defense Minister Ariel Sharon told angry legislators the Phalangists were to carry out an operation, with limited Israeli support, against PLO guerrillas believed hiding in the Sabra and Chatilla camps.

Shimon Peres, leader of the opposition Labor Party, demanded to know "whose stupid idea" it was to allow Christian gunmen into the camps, home to predominantly Moslem Palestinian and Lebanese refugees, and called for the resignations of Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Sharon.

Energy Minister Yitzhak Berman told reporters he had quit his post and would vote against the government today on a Labor Party resolution calling for an official probe of the killings.

The Red Cross and Lebanese civil defense workers recovered 15 more bodies from the camps this morning and the Red Cross said this increased the confirmed death toll to 220. Civil defense supervisor Souad Roustram said his workers had recovered another 64 bodies, but Red Cross spokesman Jean-Jacques Kurtz said some of those may be included in his group's count.

Estimates of the dead range from 300 by the U.S. government to 1,400 by the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Meanwhile, U.S. presidential envoy Philip C. Habib was headed to Beirut to supervise the redeployment of a multinational peacekeeping force, to which Israel agreed under heavy U.S. pressure. The United States also has demanded that Israeli forces withdraw from Beirut.

The Lebanese army, which entered west Beirut for the first time in seven years when thousands of PLO guerrillas were evacuated last month, expanded its deployment, taking over parts of the port and the bomb-ravaged commercial center from Israeli forces.

Water Service Extension Wins Agency's Approval

By TOM BAINES

Reflector Staff Writer

A proposal by Greenville Utilities Commission to extend its water service area limits into areas outside the city's extraterritorial boundaries gained the endorsement Tuesday night of the Greenville Planning & Zoning Commission.

Planning board members, after discussing the matter with GUC spokesman John Ferren, adopted a resolution stating that the commission "finds no objections" to the water service area extension.

The board, in its resolution, encouraged "such installation of potable water mains that would benefit the rural citizens of Pitt County." Placement of the water mains "would enhance the development and improve health conditions in the rural areas, at the same time providing greater utilization of Greenville's water supply facilities," it was resolved.

Ferren told the board that GUC had received "numerous requests" for water service north of the city. The proposed service area would provide water to residential or small commercial users located generally east of Belvoir, west of Pictolus and south of Grindle Creek.

The spokesman said that, in bringing the proposal to the planning board, GUC was touching base with the commission "and he also planned to present the matter to the county. Ferren said he met earlier with the City Council and county planning board.

He said there are over 800 potential customers in the proposed service area but even if the extension is approved, GUC would not be able to "rush out and serve" every outlying area with water. Ferren suggested that there appeared to be "no reasonable chance" for an independent water system to serve the area.

The installation of four-inch water mains to service the area is proposed, Ferren said, noting that the mains would be adequate for rural area development but not adequate for fire protection. A flat water main fee would be established in the rural area, he said.

According to Ferren, the "North of the Tar River Water Service Area" would be defined and approved by GUC, city and county planning boards, the city and Pitt County.

In another matter involving the utilities board, the planning commission voted to recommend that the council approve a request by GUC to annex the new water treatment plant site, located south of State Road 1401, just west of the airport. The site north of the river contains approximately 157 acres.

Since the plant site is not contiguous to the city limits, satellite annexation would be involved, it was pointed out. Board members recommended council approval of a request by Drs. Kelly Wallace, William Fore, and Allen Taylor to rezone 2.2 acres located west of Memorial Drive, north of O'Hagan Place, and south of Eastern Dermatology and Pitt County Anesthesia, from medical arts to office and institutional.

Collice Moore, appearing at the meeting on behalf of the petitioners, said the purpose of the request was not to change the devel-

Pitt Hospital Board To Seek Lease Of Land For Facility

By CAROL TYER

Reflector Staff Writer The Pitt County Memorial Hospital Board voted Tuesday night to recommend to the county commissioners that 1.1 acres of land owned by the county be leased to the state for $1 a year. This is a portion of the site needed for building a radiation therapy unit between the East Carolina Family Practice Center and the Brody Medical Science Building. The recommendation also calls for the selling of the land to the state for $1 in June 1997 when the bonded indebtedness on it is expected to be paid off.

A new organizational structure for the hospital administration was approved and will become effective Oct. 1. Under the new plan, Jack Richardson will be president; Rick Gilstrap will be senior vice president until his resignation is effective Nov. 17; Charles Fennessey will be vice president for human resources; Betty Trought, vice president for nursing services; Dave McRae, vice president for patient services; Buck Sitterson, vice president for support services; Ralph Hall, vice president for facilities management; John Ennis, director of computer services; Craig Quick, community affairs office director, and Warren McRoy, chief financial officer.

It was announced that Gilstrap has resigned as executive director to accept a position as chief administrator of Halifax County Hospital in Roanoke Rapids. He began limited duties there Sept. 6 but will remain on the administrative staff at Pitt Memorial until Nov. 17.

A contract with McLaurin Parking of Raleigh will be permitted to expire in January 1983, and the hospital will take over the management of its own parking facilities, it was decided.

Buck Sitterson reported on a new Utilization Review Plan that calls for every Medicaid patient to be reviewed on the third day of his or her stay and assigned a length of stay based on diagnosis. If the patient stays longer than the assigned time, measures are then taken to determine why and the patient is if the doctor cannot show good reason why the patient should stay. All this is done according to federal guidelines governing the Medicaid program.

Branch Bank and Trust Co. was chosen as an intermediary agency to manage the hospital's investment for unemployment compensation.

According to Dr. Jeffrey Senter, risk management committee chairman, the hospital's risk management program will increase its insurance payments from $231,000 to $254,300 this year with some additions in coverage, including a $10 million business interruption policy and increased building and liability coverage.

Audit Committee chairman Leroy James submitted a proposed contract with the Farley Prescott Mizell and Co. accounting firm for this year's audit, to be done for $20,325 a 15.5 percent increase over last year's charge. The contract was approved by the board.

Trustees were invited to a hospital trustee education program to be conducted by the N.C. Hospital Association Oct. 8 and to a planning retreat to be held Oct. 21 by the hospital.

Finance Officer Warren McRoy reported on a teleconference on cost-percentage management of Medicaid cases that he attended at Duke University Tuesday. Personnel Manager Charles Fennessey talked about the hospital's new wage and benefit program.

Promotions from provisional to full active medical staff privileges were granted to James L. Hughes, John E. Willimmer Jr. and Thomas C. Irons, all pediatricians.

The education program was presented by nurses from the critical care units of the hospital.

Teacher Strikes In Four States

By The Associated Press

Bargainers for the Detroit School Board and 11,000 striking teachers have begun the long process of fact-finding as they try to end a walkout that has closed classroom doors in the nation's sixth-largest public school system.

Nationwide, walkouts by more than 15,000 teachers in four states - Michigan, Illinois, New Jersey and Pennsylvania - have left more than 280,000 pupils out of class.

In Detroit, the fact-finding began Tuesday after David Tanzman, a state fact-finder, was unsuccessful in what he called "a last-ditch effort" to reach a settlement. Tanzman estimated it would take up to three weeks to hear arguments from both sides and produce a nonbinding recommendation.

In the meantime, "There will be no returning to work," Carol Thomas, executive vice president of the Detroit Federation of Teachers, said Tuesday. "The board hasn't indicated they're willing to send the teachers back to work under an extension while the fact-finding goes on. So we wait."

Members of the teachers' union walked off the job Sept. 13, and talks broke off three days later. About 200,000 students are affected.

The teachers have refused to take an 8 percent pay cut demanded by the school district, which says it is facing a $60 million deficit during the 1982-83 school year.

A new walkout began Tuesday in southern Illinois, as 100 teachers in Hamilton County's District 10 in the McLeansboro area stayed away from school. Classes were canceled for 1,440 students because of the wage dispute.

Four high schools in the south Chicago suburbs of Midlothian, Country Club Hills, Oak Forest and Tinley Park remained closed, affecting 5,800 students and about 260 teachers.

No new talks were scheduled in Bremen, also south of Chicago, where teachers were out for a second day Tuesday.

In New Jersey, 419 striking teachers in Teaneck were served a judge's temporary restraining order demanding their return to work. The teachers walked off the job Friday, affecting more than 5,000 students.

Teaneck teachers' union representatives were to appear in court today to explain their failure to obey the restraining order.

Dear Abby

P & G's Good Works Counter Rumors Of Evil

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: When I read in your column that someone who described herself as "a good Christian" had labeled Procter & Gamble "a tool of the devil," I was horrified. I know from personal experience that if ever a company had a heart, it is Procter & Gamble.

About two years ago, Today, the local Cocoa, Fla. newspaper, ran a story about Michael, a 9-year-old boy who from the time of his birth had been covered with blisters due to a rare, incurable skin disease known as "epidermolysis bullosa." Michael was sent to Sunland Medical Center in Gainesville, Fla., to die. To ease the pain, Michael was covered with Crisco daily and wrapped in gauze. He good-humoredly named himself "The Crisco Kid." Because of the newspaper publicity, well-wishers sent money to help pay the enormous hospital bills. My husband and I sent him a small check and received a beautiful thank-you letter in return.

Then it occurred to me that since Crisco was a Procter & Gamble product, the company might be willing to help the boy, and at the same time publicize the proven purity of its product, so I wrote to P & G suggesting it.

The company responded with a courteous letter saying it could not recommend the product for anything other than the purpose for which P & G's own laboratory had tested it. Then the company sent a handsome donation for an electric wheelchair and special equipment needed to make the boy more comfortable.

The Crisco Kid fought courageously for his life, but eventually his little heart gave out. I will never forget that a big company like Procter & Gamble cared enough to make the last days of an ailing child happier.

That this fine company should be the victim of an organized smear campaign to link it with Satan and the devil is an outrageous injustice.

I live in Cocoa Beach, and you may use my name.
BESSIE WATTS

DEAR ABBY: I read in your column that it was an insult to an Italian to be called a "wop."

Do you know how that word originated? When the Italian immigrants came off the boat, those without papers had signs around their necks with the letters "WOP," indicating they were "without papers." It was just a way of separating the Italians with papers from those without papers. So I wonder how it came to be so demeaning and degrading?

Twenty-six antique dealers will be participating in the show, the 16th sponsored annually by the Woman's Auxiliary of the Mint Museum of Art.

Rare maps and Audubon prints, 18th century silver, American decorative arts and antique jewelry are some of the items to be shown.

All proceeds from the show will be used for future art acquisitions by the museum. In 1980 the auxiliary completed its project to collect a representative piece from each of the most prominent members of the Ash Can School of Art.

The show will open from 11 a.m. to 8:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday and from 2-6 p.m. Sunday.

Mohair — The Light Way to Live

SOFT ELEGANCE — Mohair gives an intensity of tone, a sensuous touch and intrinsic value to these coat selections of the Mohair Council of America. Show-stopper, left, defined with taste and restraint, is gray-and-white striped kid mohair, the hair of baby Texas goats; for an added fashion touch, it ties at the neckline. It's soft shoulders ahead, and everything a fall fashion should be, right: adjustable-collared tunic coat is side-closed; in Texas mohair confetti tweed — black with multicolored boucle yarn. (Left, by Trigere; right, by Jhane Barnes.)

COOKING IS FUN!

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

There's one cold main dish I find deliciously useful to serve during all seasons of the year. I call it Pollo Tonnato, and it's my version of the famous Italian dish named Vitello Tonnato — veal with tuna sauce. I began using chicken in the recipe instead of veal when that meat became so expensive.

I sometimes serve Pollo Tonnato for a Saturday company lunch or a Sunday night company supper. And I always accompany it with crusty Italian bread — preferably the whole-wheat variety. In cool weather I'm likely to preface the chicken and veal sauce with hot cups of tomato bouillon and cheese puffs. Any fresh fruit compote makes an appropriately refreshing dessert.

POLLO TONNATO
3 pounds (18) chicken thighs
1 medium onion
1 medium carrot, pared
2 celery ribs with tops
Several sprigs parsley
2 bay leaves
7-ounce can tuna in olive oil, drained
1 cup mayonnaise
Juice of ½ medium lemon
(about 1½ tablespoons)
2-ounce can flat anchovy fillets, drained
4 tablespoons drained capers
Garnish or Accompaniment:
Shredded leaf lettuce or romaine; plum tomatoes (sliced); whole cherry tomatoes; pared and scored cucumber (sliced)

In the top insert (with a solid bottom) of a steamer, arrange the thighs; tuck onion, carrot, celery, parsley and bay leaves among them. Cook over boiling water until thighs are tender — about 60 minutes. Strain; remove thighs; chill. Chill broth separately — there will be about 2 cups.

Skin and bone thighs; slice each in half horizontally — don't worry if there are some small pieces. Remove hardened fat from broth; measure 1 cup of the broth and reserve. (Refrigerate or freeze remaining broth for use in some other dish.)

In an electric blender whirl together the reserved broth, the tuna, mayonnaise, lemon juice and half the anchovy fillets (reserving the rest) until anchovies are pureed. Stir in 2 tablespoons of the capers.

In a large shallow serving dish (one that holds 3 quarts is a good size) pour a thin layer of the tuna mixture. Add a layer of chicken; continue layering, ending with the tuna mixture so the chicken is covered with it. Cover bowl with saran and chill.

Someone's Dipping Into Girl Scout Cookie Jar

By SCOTT KRAFT
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — More and more people are dipping into the Girl Scouts' cookie jar, and local scout councils are losing patience — and taking legal action.

Several councils have gone to court recently to recover cookie sales proceeds from troop leaders and parents who failed to turn in cash collected by the girls.

A former scout leader in Montgomery, Ala., was sentenced to five days in jail earlier this month for stealing her troop's cookie money. Last week scout officials in Cleveland said they planned to go to small claims court to prosecute 25 people for losses of about $8,000 from this year's cookie sale.

In Detroit, one of the nation's more economically depressed areas, the problem is worse this year than ever, says Jean Wayman, executive director of the Michigan Metro Girl Scout Council.

"It is a growing problem, and the amount of money grows greater all the time," Miss Wayman said. The Detroit council has lost "many thousands of dollars just on this last cookie sale," she said.

Miss Wayman says the council "has a couple cases awaiting court dates," but she declined to discuss them. The combined sale of cookies and Girl Scout calendars brought the council $1.3 million in 1981, 56 percent of its annual budget.

"Times are harder, and I think the economy is behind this in large measure. But we feel the kids are owed their money. Our priority is for girl scouting and we'll prosecute when people are taking money from the Girl Scout program," Miss Wayman added.

The Girl Scouts of America, marking its 70th year, expects to collect more than $200 million this year from cookie sales by its 2.3 million scouts, said Richard Knox, spokesman for the national organization in New York City.

Court cases to recover cookie proceeds are "highly unusual," he said, but because all are handled by local councils, they might not be reported to the national office.

"We have more money, more boxes of cookies and more people involved in the cookie sales than ever before," Knox says. "When you consider the amount generated and turned over, it's a remarkably honest operation."

Chicago's Girl Scout council began getting tough five years ago. Although officials there decline to cite

Bride-Elect Entertained

Janipat Worthington, Oct. 2 bride-elect of Lawrence Whaley, was honored Friday at a cocktail party at the home of Mrs. Bobby Johnson in Ayden. Assisting Mrs. Johnson were Mr. and Mrs. Bill Howard and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Abbott of Greenville.

Guests were honored by the honoree, her mother, Mrs. Ralph Worthington, and the hosts and hostesses.

Special guests included the parents of the bridegroom and members of the wedding party.

specific figures, they say the loss amounts to less than 5 percent, or about $50,000, of total sales.

The problem has grown in the past two years "simply because it's tempting," said Shirley L. Miller, director of development for the Girl Scouts of Chicago.

But "we get tough about it," she added. "This is a million-dollar-a-year business. There's no fooling around."

Chicago's 30,000 Girl Scouts sold about 1 million boxes of cookies this spring and plan to hold another sale this fall.

Girl Scout cookies are sold for $1.50 to $2 a box, depending on the area, with about 65 cents going to the bakery and the rest going to support local troops and councils. Cookies are the largest source of income for Girl Scout councils, providing 40 percent of the operating budgets, the national office said. The United Way, in comparison, contributes 28 percent of the budgets.

The Lake Erie Council, in Cleveland, said the amounts owed by parents or troop cookie sale managers ranged from $50 to $1,000. Vern Woodlief, council development director, said efforts were still under way to arrange for payment to avoid going to court.

"We've never prosecuted these people before, but this year we were picking up the same people involved in this sort of thing last year," Ms. Woodlief said. The council thought it "would have no opportunity to clear this up unless we prosecuted."

In Alabama, Alicia Creek Alexander, 26, was sentenced to five days in jail after pleading guilty to second-degree theft of property in the disappearance of $720 from her troop's cookie sale proceeds. Before the sentencing, she paid back the money, authorities said.

A half-dozen Girl Scout officials interviewed Monday said they doubt that offenders set out to steal from the scout program.

"It's just that they say, 'I've got to run to the grocery store. I'll just take this $60 and pay it back next week,'" explained Vickie Bershaw, cookie sale director for the Girl Scouts Gateway Council in Jacksonville, Fla. Then, she says, they are unable to repay the loan.

In St. Louis, where the Girl

Scouts lost about $17,000 of its most recent $3 million sales effort, "there are as many excuses as there are incidents," said Gail Brase, assistant executive director of that area's council.

"I don't think it's premeditated. It can be the breakup of a family or other financial trouble at home," Ms. Brase said.

The St. Louis council's losses are only a small percentage of total sales.

"But it's painful because it's the kids' money really," Ms. Brase said.

Homemaker's Haven BY EVELYN SPANGLER

Tips On Line Drying

With the increased cost of energy, people with dryers are resorting to line drying or alternating its use on sunny days with automatic drying in inclement weather.

Evelyn Spangler, home economics extension agent, offers these tips for line drying. A clean clothesline is a necessity, so wipe with a damp cloth just before using. Shake wrinkles and folds from clothes and linens and secure to line with clothespins. A clothespin bag keeps them handy.

Hang clothes by the firmest part — socks by the toes, pants by the waist (zipper open so the inside can dry faster). Secure shirts by the tails with front overlapping back, undershirts by the bottom, flat pieces by the corners with extra clothespin support in the middle for sheets and other large pieces. Smooth fabric and straighten seams, collars and cuffs as articles are hung up. Things to be ironed should be removed while still slightly damp. Others may be put on hangers immediately and seams smoothed out to eliminate ironing completely.

Wallpaper

Wallpaper should be dusted periodically using a vacuum cleaner attachment, a long handled brush or a broom covered with a soft cloth.

For additional cleaning, wallpaper may be divided into three categories; water sensitive, vinyl coated and vinyl.

Few papers are as washable as they may seem so test a small inconspicuous area before attempting a whole wall. If the area does not blur or show water marks it is safe to continue. For thin water sensitive paper, dampen a sponge in lukewarm water, remove as much water as possible and rub paper using a very light touch. Clean a small area at a time beginning at the bottom of the wall and working toward the ceiling. Overlap strokes and pat dry immediately. Non washable papers may be cleaned with a commercial cleaner resembling a lump of dough, art gum, the inside portion of bread, pipe clay or a dry cloth dipped in dry borax. Washable paper, such as vinyls, may be cleaned using a sponge, lukewarm water and a mild detergent. Squeeze the sponge out thoroughly and use a soft cloth. Rinse and pat dry.

Stains such as grease and pencil marks should be treated immediately. Again test clean a hidden area. Grease spots may be removed by making a paste of fuller's earth or similar absorbent powder and cleaning fluid. Apply solution, permit it to dry thoroughly, then brush or vacuum. Repeat if needed.

Remove pencil marks with a commercial art gum or pencil eraser.

Truth Is Always Best

In this nation we like to think we get the truth about our leaders in the event of an injury or illness as rapidly as possible.

Two deaths of major figures last week, however, show us in the most graphic way that this is not always true in other nations.

The first word of the injury of Princess Grace did little to prepare her admirers for her impending death. Yet we learn later that she was in very critical condition during a time when the world was being assured that her injuries were not so critical.

In Lebanon the world was led to believe that Bashir Gemayel was not seriously injured in a bomb blast which destroyed his headquarters.

Later in the day we learned that the president-elect was dead.

No doubt authorities believed they had good reason to withhold the truth; nevertheless, it is still the best policy to level with the public. There is little that can be done for a critically injured leader and, terrible as the news is, it is best that the world knows.

Is Hydrogen The Answer?

A dream of mankind in the 20th century has been to discover an inexpensive source of energy.

We thought we had it with electricity and then with oil, but in recent years we have seen both soar in price.

Now scientists at the University of California believe they have discovered an inexpensive way to create hydrogen from water.

It may or may not be the answer to our long range energy needs, and a couple of years back our nation would have been excited about the discovery as a way of putting the oil-producing nations in their place.

The trouble is that the oil-producing nations have since been put into their place and all it has done is to create new economic problems for the industrial nations.

Regardless, a substitute for oil will have to be found before it runs out early in the next century — and there is plenty of hydrogen.

THIS AFTERNOON

Raleigh Booming

By PAUL T. O'CONNOR
RALEIGH — The national economy may be dead but here in the Capital City investors are practically fighting for the microphones to announce the latest development projects in downtown Raleigh.

Announcements of large office complexes, building renovations and city projects have come at a one-a-week pace for the past six months. York-Hannover, a New York firm, is about to begin construction of an 18-story office building next to the city's new civic center and across the Fayetteville Street Mall from the same firm's $20 million Raddisson Hotel which opened this spring. The firm also plans an 18-story hotel addition.

Up the mall, just a block or so from the capitol, Vantage Companies of Dallas, Texas, has announced plans for two office high-rises, 21 and 15 stories, that carry a projected cost of $50 million.

City Market, a run-down but still architecturally interesting building several blocks east of the mall, has attracted interest from eight developers who see it as a potential boutique mall in the order of Durham's Bright Leaf or Wilmington's Cotton Exchange. Between the market and the mall, the city plans to build a local bus route transfer station and a parking garage and to expand the mall with a one-block eastern branch.

Then there's all the renovation work. Near the proposed bus station, one developer is restoring three run-down buildings at a cost of $500,000. Four of the city's largest older office buildings have either been renovated recently or are in the process now.

A new $6 million city hall is being built. There are plans to redesign Hillsborough Street which leads into the capitol from the west and almost every major project also involves some kind of parking garage.

Why is Raleigh doing so well? One reliable observer of city politics gives a great deal of the credit to the city's developer-mayor, Smedes York. "He's set up the business climate for it," the observer says. But most people, including York (who isn't related to York-Hannover), give the credit to the city fathers who turned Fayetteville Street into a pedestrian mall during the 1970s.

"It goes back 10 years," York says, "to the public improvements which were put in place then." When York became mayor in 1979, the City Council came under the control of its pro-business downtown which had been relatively stagnant. While the rest of the city grew like mad during the past 30 years, downtown stayed about the size it was when this city of 160,000 people had only about a third of that population.

The growth doesn't go uncriticized. Former Mayor Isabella Cannon, leader of the preservation forces in the city, says the council is still permitting too much expansion for the city's periphery which drives up taxes and aggravates traffic problems.

Mrs. Cannon also fears that development downtown will be entirely commercial. "I'm very, very excited about it but if we're going to turn it into the coldness of Wall Street (in New York) then I'm a little apprehensive," Mrs. Cannon said. She said she'd like to see more housing downtown so there'd be people on the mall at night — not just empty high-rises.

PAUL T. O'CONNOR

bloc and "we began to organize the effort to promote downtown."

Raleigh is growing. It has a "recession-proof" economy of government and education and just down I-40 is the Research Triangle Park. The growth had come in the suburbs of the city's periphery, York said. The city leadership just began directing some toward

Kissinger Associates

Henry Kissinger has gone into the consulting business with a company called Kissinger Associates. One of his partners is Lord Carrington, the former foreign minister of Great Britain. The minimum charge for Kissinger's services is $250,000.

The question everyone is asking in Washington is, what can someone hope to get for his money?

"I would like to see Mr. Kissinger."

"Who shall I say is calling?"

"Edridge Dresser of Dresser Industries."

The secretary announces the caller. Then she says, "You can see Mr. Kissinger now, but if you speak to him it will cost you $250,000."

Dr. Dresser hands the secretary a certified check.

He goes into Kissinger's office, and finds Henry on the phone. "My advice is to tell the Italian government you'll move to Lourdes if they keep badgering you about your bad loans. Yes, Your Holiness, I'll talk to the finance minister today. Bless you." He hangs up.

"I'm sorry. The Pope has a banking problem I'm trying to straighten out. Please be seated."

"Mr. Kissinger, you are no doubt aware that Dresser Industries is having trouble. Our French company supplied pipeline equipment to the Soviet Union, and President Reagan will not allow us to do any business with France."

"I am aware of the embargo," Kissinger says. "I spoke to Mitterrand this morning."

"What do you advise us to do?"

"The first thing we have to do is set up a lunch with Mitterrand and Reagan."

"Can you do that?"

"Of course," Kissinger says. "But I don't think you should be there. During lunch I'll point out to Reagan that the Soviets are going to build their pipeline with or without American equipment, and an embargo will hurt the United States more than it will the Soviet Union. It could also destroy NATO. On second thought, I'll invite Margaret Thatcher to go to the lunch as well. Reagan is more frightened of Thatcher than he is of Mitterrand."

"Will Reagan listen to you?"

"He has to if he wants me to support his new Mideast policy. Kissinger Associates represent all the major parties who have to go along with it."

"I'm glad I came to you," Dresser says. "My company didn't know where to turn."

"That's what I'm here for, to help the people who have no place to turn."

Dresser leaves happily and Henry says to his secretary over the intercom, "Set up a lunch date for me with Reagan, Mitterrand and Margaret Thatcher for next Wednesday. Anyone call?"

"The President of Argentina just telephoned and wanted to know if you had any good news on the Falklands."

"That's Lord Carrington's account. Tell him to call London."

"Indira Gandhi wants to know when she's going to get her nuclear breeder reactor."

"Did I promise her a breeder reactor?"

"I think you did. You said you could either get her one reactor or the Vale of Kashmir."

"Okay, get me the Department of Defense."

"Taiwan called and wanted to know if you didn't think

Proof Begin Is In Charge

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — The impotence with which the Reagan administration reacted to Israel's military occupation of West Beirut proved that the Begin government is in control in the Mideast, consciously undermining the widely-acclaimed Reagan peace plan.

That goal, not merely mopping up the PLO remnant and leftist Moslem militiamen, was the real purpose of the Israeli thrust on the pretext of Lebanese President-elect Bashir Gemayel's assassination. Robert McFarlane, deputy national security adviser, sitting in for the absent William P. Clark, implicitly stated that conclusion at the senior White House staff meeting Friday. He said the occupation had undermined "the United States' credibility" not only among pro-U.S. Arab states but throughout the world.

But by the time McFarlane spoke those words, the Reagan administration was floundering in efforts to restore its credibility. What one aide to Secretary of State George Shultz called "a 36-hour deadline" to start withdrawal from West Beirut was rejected out of hand by Prime Minister Menachem Begin. Instead of Begin triggering an angry telephone call from President Reagan, there was a conciliatory television statement by Vice President Bush.

tie his future to the Reagan peace plan.

When Begin and Defense Minister Ariel Sharon suddenly moved their troops into West Beirut, there was genuine outrage in official Washington. Anger intensified when word arrived that an Israeli officer had fired at a U.S. Marine embassy guard — the subject of an entire staff meeting at the State Department.

That was the Foggy Bottom climate that produced Shultz's "36-hour deadline" for getting out of West Beirut. Shultz called in Israeli Ambassador Moshe Arens for a tough, private rebuke. But Begin quickly rejected the deadline, insisting that Israel would pull out in its own good time, and only then.

The response to Begin was little more than handwringing and despair among Reagan advisers. State Department aides said privately that the president would make another person-to-person telephone call to Begin before the weekend. No such call was made.

Instead, George Bush went on NBC's "Today" program Friday to repeat the soothing words that neither the president nor anyone else in the administration wants to apply economic or arms pressure on Israel. In conformation, one high-level adviser told us that although he would not describe Reagan's position as "helpless," the president's ability to influence Israel was "strictly limited."

Moreover, no matter how publicly Begin flouts U.S. interests, pro-Israeli feelings on Capitol Hill remain strong. A closed-door session of the House appropriations subcommittee on foreign aid last week agreed to include a $50 million increase in military grants for Israel in the new fiscal year that was not requested by the administration.

Such a U.S. response to the latest Israeli audacity underlines the core of Reagan's Mideast plan: to entice King Hussein of Jordan into negotiations over the future of the West Bank. That is possible only if pro-U.S. Arab states believe Washington will be the honest broker, not Israel's backstage partner.

Israel's move into West Beirut and Reagan's failure to end the occupation look to the Arabs suspiciously like one of two things: backstage partnership with Israel — or impotence. Arab diplomats are parading to the State Department, saying that if the U.S. cannot compel Israel to honor last month's commitment to stay out of West Beirut, neither Hussein nor any other pro-U.S. Arab will Sending such signals to King Hussein and his Arab brethren does not soften their vision of superpower America inextricably tied to Israel. To rebuild U.S. credibility under such circumstances and bring the Arabs into the president's peace plan may be beyond

Other Editors Say Waste Of Time

(Greensboro Daily News)

Warren County residents opposed to a hazardous waste landfill in their neighborhood have made their point. They've had demonstrations and sit-ins, they've been interviewed by reporters from state newspapers and the TV networks and they've been arrested and posted bond and gone back to demonstrating again. The world now has the message: They don't want 3,200 cubic yards of dirt contaminated with PCB waste stored in their backyard. And who would?

But now the cleanup has begun and it's not going to stop. After four years of agony over how to treat the cleanup of PCB oil, linked to cancer in laboratory animals, the state is proceeding with the most rational alternative.

The waste already has been treated with activated charcoal. It's going into a storage pit lined with a thick stratum of almost impermeable clay, itself faced with a heavy plastic liner. The same treatment will go on top when the last of the dirt is dumped.

Now it's time for residents to realize that the landfill exists. That's a bitter pill for anyone to swallow. But residents are so angry they resort to absurd charges, such as accusing the state of choosing Warren County because of its relatively high black population.

That conveniently ignores the truth, which is that the property for the site was available and that the county's soil was particularly suited to long-term, safe storage of the PCB dirt. And it ignores the fact that the Environmental Protection Agency has approved the storage site as the best means to deal with a bad situation.

No doubt there will be hard feelings on behalf of the area residents for years to come. That's understandable. And there may even be a political backlash in Warren County against Gov. Jim Hunt in his next election. That's politics.

Warren Countians don't have to like it. They don't even have to accept it. But they must realize that the job has to be done. The sooner and safer it's done, the better. Let's get on with it, shall we?

Strength For Today

SECURITY SEARCH

Today's economy reflects an increasingly intense search for security on the part of everyone involved in it. Life insurance companies offer a wide range of programs designed to reach this objective. Governments and nearly all corporations offer pension programs of various kinds, and all of us are covered by the blanket of social security.

Yet a cursory reading of the newspapers indicate that we live in a world of ever-increasing insecurity.

Nothing can be guaranteed to last. Nothing, that is, except God's love. It is the only permanent, stable bulwark in a shifting and chaotic world, stretching back into history and forward into eternity; "Our help in ages past, our hope in years to come."

Only by finding God can man find the security he seeks and needs; and the joy of finding that security is written on the faces of those who have found Him. — Elisha Douglass

Livestock Sold By Computers

By GEORGE TIBBITS
 Associated Press Writer
SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — In what some farm economists say is the most radical change in selling livestock since biblical times, stockmen are turning to computers to market their animals.

If set up correctly, they say, an electronic marketing system can mean better prices for sellers, more profit for buyers and animals that go to slaughter in better condition.

Most cattle and sheep in this country are sold in a manner almost unchanged in thousands of years. Though trucks and railcars have replaced drovers and shepherds, animals still are brought to a marketplace, auctioned off and reshipped to a buyer.

Today's methods are "a little more sophisticated haggling system, but still haggling," says Jim Bell, extension economist in agricultural marketing at Virginia Polytechnic Institute.

The advantage of computers, he says, is that animals stay on the ranch, buyers and sellers stay in their offices and the haggling is done in milliseconds.

Last month, Bell and other Virginia Tech officials held conferences in Atlanta, Chicago, Oklahoma City and Salt Lake City to explain how electronic gear can be used to sell livestock and even such farm products as grain and cotton.

"Here in the West, we have no choice but to look at it," says Earl Brown, manager of the Salt Lake City-based Producer's Livestock Association.

"I still have some reservations about some of the problems we're going to run into in the cattle industry," says Brown, who attended the final conference Aug. 25-27 in Salt Lake City. "But I think the electronic marketing process has fairly well proven itself where it can establish fairly large numbers with equitability of product."

Brown, whose association markets about 1 million head a year in six Western states, says he was so impressed by the meeting that "very likely within the next several months or year we'll be in the electronic marketing of sheep."

One system showcased at the conferences was Electronic Marketing Association Inc., which Virginia Tech and the Virginia Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services helped launch in 1978 under a U.S. Department of Agriculture grant.

EMA, the only livestock auction in America run entirely by computer, allows buyers from Canada to Texas to bid for slaughter lambs over computer terminals. The system presently serves the Eastern Lamb Producers Cooperative in Virginia and the Corn Belt Lamb Auction in Wisconsin.

Under the system, sellers list their animals with the cooperative or auction, which may combine smaller consignments into lots for sale. The morning of the auction, descriptions of lambs, pickup points and general market information is available for buyers to call up on computer screens.

At a preset time, buyers gather at terminals and the computer lists a lot for sale and an opening price. If no bid is received within a set time, the price drops $1 and continues to do so until a buyer hits a bid key on the terminal keyboard.

That bid registers on all terminals, along with a countdown of how much time others have to bid. If someone hits the bid key, the price goes up 25 cents and the countdown starts again. If no bid is received, the computer "gavels down" the sale.

The computer tells the successful bidder the lot number, size, average weight, location, seller, sale price and estimated cost. It also thanks him for his business.

EMA officials say the system encourages more potential buyers to bid, since they don't need to travel to remote auction yards to inspect and bid on sheep. Small lots, which might be sold among just two or three bidders at a local yard, can be offered to buyers in a dozen states. Animals also avoid the stress and subsequent weight loss of a trip to market.

Since buyers save travel and shipping costs and can expect a better animal backed by the cooperative's or auction's reputation, they tend to bid higher — in some cases, up to $10 more a hundredweight, EMA says.

N.C. Community Colleges Are Growing During The Recession

By The Associated Press
The recession has helped increase enrollment in North Carolina's community colleges at a time when the number of high school graduates and college enrollment nationally is shrinking, say education officials.

crunch high school grads were either going to a four-year institution or to work. Now the expense of the four-year institutions and the lack of jobs for the other group might be sending both groups to the technical college," said Paul Davis, administrative assistant to the president at the Technical College of Alamance.

In 1980-81, the state's community colleges and technical institutes enrolled the equivalent of 126,426 full-time students, or 45 percent of the state's almost 300,000 college students last fall.

No longer are most of these students opting for training in furniture and textile manufacturing and food processing as they did 13 years ago, he said.

Today, high-technology programs — data processing, electronic engineering technology, industrial maintenance technology and business-oriented courses attract at least 60 percent of the students who enroll in community colleges.

This fall's figures are not in yet, but community college system president Dr. Larry Blake estimates enrollment will rise 5 percent or more. He expects a 3 to 8 percent enrollment increase annually over the next 15 years.

Randolph Technical College, Davidson County Community College, Sandhills Community College and the Technical College of Alamance all have more students this fall.

Randolph has 5 percent, Davidson 7 percent, Alamance 9 percent and Sandhills 10 percent more fulland part-time students.

"We've never turned away more students than we have this year," said Alamance's Davis.

Community college officials say they expect more students when the economy sags.

"When times are tough people have more time on their hands. They know the competition's rough out there and they want to have the skills they need," said Brad Rochester, spokesman for Rockingham Community College.

With higher tuition costs at four-year schools and the uncertainty of financial aid, the $39 quarterly tuition at community colleges and technical institutes has become more tempting to some.

Hero Award To Forester

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A state forestry worker from Greensboro has been given the highest award offered by the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development for risking his life to save three men trapped by a forest fire.

The award was presented Tuesday by department secretary Joseph W. Grimsley to Michael Hendricks.

Hendricks was working as a forester near Lake Phelps in Washington County last April, helping volunteer firefighters put out a blaze. The fire intensified and firefighters evacuated, but Hendricks stayed behind and found three men trapped by the fire.

Hendricks took oxygen equipment to the group and later led the men to safety in the lake.

Two other awards also were presented Tuesday. Wilson L. Norris, supervisor of the Claridge Nursery, was given an award for developing a new technique for seedling production that has saved the state money, and Tommy C. Thompson was given an outstanding service award for developing guidelines to control the amount of smoke created by land clearing.

Final Arguments In Trial Of Deputies

GASTONIA, N.C. (AP) — Final arguments are scheduled today for four Gaston County Sheriff's deputies on trial on felony shooting charges stemming from a May 27 chase of a Gaston County woman.

Attorneys for the deputies rested their case Tuesday without presenting any evidence or testimony.

Deputies Paul Scaff, Jim Neff, Vernon Hill and retired deputy Ralph Miller are charged with firing or attempting to fire into an occupied vehicle as a result of the chase. The charges are felonies punishable by up to 10 years in prison.

The deputies have admitted they chased and fired at a vehicle driven by Suzanne Starnes, 24, a Gaston County Employment and Training Dept. employee. However, they have claimed they acted reasonably in the line of duty and that their actions were justified.

Tuesday's abrupt end of testimony caught a crowd of about 50 spectators by surprise. Many had attended trial sessions last week and listened closely to the testimony by Ms. Starnes and other state witnesses.

Statements the deputies made to Gastonia Police Det. Dan Overcash and SBI Agent Jim Woodard were submitted as evidence last week by Langson.

In the statements, the deputies said they chased the Starnes vehicle because they suspected that a parole violator might be in the car.

Starnes said that she refused to stop because she was terrified. She said that the Chevrolet Nova that chased her was black, unmarked, and occupied by scuffily dressed men she had seen congregating earlier in an apartment parking lot.

Reagan's reach.
Given the administration's decision that threats of cuts in military or economic aid would be counterproductive, the president is left with only one hope: that U.S. displeasure with Begin will miraculously inflate anti-Begin feelings among the Israelis themselves. But despite world condemnation of the Lebanon invasion, Begin's political strength at home has waxed, not waned.

The Arab view of America the Impotent began in June when the administration privately assured the Arabs that Israel's invasion of Lebanon would stop at the 40-kilometer mark. That view sharpened last week when rage over Begin's latest move resolved itself in helpless sputtering.

Two More Indicted In FBI's Colcor Investigation

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Two more people have been indicted by a federal grand jury on drug charges stemming from the FBI's Colcor probe, while additional charges were added against four others.

Meanwhile, a hearing is scheduled in Wilmington today to determine who has offered $650,000 to post bail bond for Colcor defendant Kenneth Coleman, according to a U.S. Magistrate.

The indictments against the six people were returned Tuesday, and bring to 23 the number of people charged in the investigation.

U.S. Attorney Sam Currin said Tuesday that the special grand jury will continue with new indictments into early next year. The case, code-named Colcor for "Columbus County Corruption," has already resulted in the indictment of a state legislator, a state judge and two local officials.

The legislator, former Rep. Ron Taylor, D-Bladen, pleaded guilty last week to accepted a $1,500 bribe from undercover FBI agents.

Named in two separate indictments Tuesday were: — Julius Robert Williamson Jr. and Julius Robert Williamson III, both of Whiteville, and Danny Cephus Merritt, of Clarkton. They were charged with conspiracy to distribute and distribution of marijuana.

— Roscoe Forest Hall, Jerry Hall and James Earl Carroll, all of Whiteville. They were charged with conspiracy to distribute, possession with intent to distribute and distribution of hashish.

Arraignments for those named in the latest indictments were set for Oct. 19 in Raleigh and New Bern and Oct. 20 in Fayetteville and Wilmington.

Coleman was not named in Tuesday's indictments, but was arrested nearly two months ago on marijuana and cocaine trafficking charges.

He was arrested at his Cherry Grove farm by FBI agents who contend that he expected to provide a burial place for a murdered federal informant, according to testimony at his bond hearings.

Federal prosecutors had originally asked for $1 million bail for Coleman, describing him as a threat to the lives of potential witnesses against him.

U.S. Magistrate Franklin Block will preside over today's "nebbia" hearing, intended "to determine the sufficiency of a bond," he said.

Block said he understands a group of Coleman's friends and neighbors are prepared to post property bonds — secured with their houses and farms — on his behalf.

U.S. Attorney Samuel T.

Currin says today's hearing "basically is oriented toward a determination where his bond is coming from. We want to make sure it's not coming from some illegal source or a source subject to forfeiture."

At Coleman's bond hearing, McCullough argued that Coleman has access to large amounts of drug money, and has contacts with a major drug smuggler in Colombia.

MacDonald 'Depressed' Over Transfer To Texas

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — An attorney for Jeffrey MacDonald, the former Green Beret doctor convicted in the 1970 murders of his pregnant wife and two daughters at Fort Bragg, says MacDonald is "profoundly depressed" over his pending transfer to a Texas prison.

Federal prison officials said Tuesday that MacDonald would be transferred from the Terminal Island Prison in California to a Texas prison.

MacDonald has been in the California prison since March 31, when his three life sentences were reinstated by the U.S. Supreme Court. His conviction was affirmed by a federal appeals court last month.

He has hired a former federal prosecutor, Brian

O'Neill of Santa Monica, Calif., to help represent him in addition to his chief counsel, Bernard L. Segal, also of California.

"Together, we will be asking the (U.S.) Supreme Court to review the decision of the 4th Circuit Court of Appeals," Segal said.

Segal said MacDonald was "profoundly depressed" when he visited him last week at Terminal Island.

"They are taking him away from his mother and brother," Segal said, "and putting him somewhere where people won't care about him. It works against any rational assignment of people in the (prison) system."

"He just sits in his cell for 23 hours a day and does nothing. We are discussing his transfer with prison officials," Segal said.

Mike Aun, a bureau of prisons spokesman in Washington, said in a telephone interview that MacDonald's transfer would take place soon.

"As a matter of policy, we do not announce transfers until after they have been completed," Aun said.

MacDonald was convicted in 1979 of stabbing and bludgeoning his 26-year-old wife and two daughters, ages 2½ and 6, at their Fort Bragg home Feb. 17, 1970.

His conviction in U.S. District Court in Raleigh was reversed in July 1980 by the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond, Va., which ruled that he had been denied a speedy trial. At the court's insistence, he was freed on $100,000 bail.

In March, a 6-3 decision by the U.S. Supreme Court reversed that decision, sending the case back to the 4th Circuit Court for review. In a 3-0 decision Aug. 17, that court upheld his conviction.

Agricultural Art Contest Announced

Each school may enter six pieces of art in the final competition. Entries from the schools are due no later than Nov. 5 and must be delivered or sent by United Parcel Service to the Southern Flue-Cured Tobacco Festival, Home Federal Savings and Loan Association Building, 543 Evans St., Greenville, N.C. 27834.

Winners will be notified by Nov. 10 and awards will be presented Nov. 17 at 3 p.m. at the Powell exhibit at the Tobacco Farmer Show.

The Southern Flue-Cured Tobacco Festival will be held in Greenville Nov. 12-18.

Parents Urged Immunize Tots

September is Preschool Immunization Month in North Carolina and one forgotten group is children in day care centers, according to County Health Director Dr. Robert Ehinger.

He said that the immunization record of every child enrolled in a licensed day care center in the county is checked each year. North Carolina has about 80,000 children enrolled in 2,150 licensed day care centers. Since the immunization law was revised in 1979, immunizations for children enrolled in day care are required, along with those for students in all grades of public, private and religious schools.

"We expect day care children to be protected against diphtheria, tetanus, pertussis, polio, measles, rubella and mumps," he said. "Parents must present to the day care operator an immunization record which has been signed or stamped by a physician or clinic."

He suggested that parents who are not certain about their child's immunizations check with their physician or clinic.

Droughts Are 'Expectable'

WORTHINGTON, Ohio (AP) — "The East has only itself to blame for running out of water every few years," says a water expert.

"Droughts will continue in both the Northeast and the North Central states as long as they continue to rely exclusively on surface water for their supplies."

Dr. Jay Lehr, executive director of the National Water Well Association, says all that is needed is a little foresight.

"Everyone should realize that every 10 years or so the reservoirs dry up," he said. "So these surface supplies need a ground water backup. Only by conjunctively using both wells and reservoirs, so that each complements the other, can we end the natural, but frequently dramatic, droughts provided by nature's weather cycles."

Hopes Capitalize On Protests

By STEVEN K. PAULSON, Associated Press Writer
The founder of an Anson County group opposed to the underground storage of hazardous wastes says he hopes to capitalize on recent demonstrations and arrests in

Warren County in getting a similar project stopped. Landon Scarborough is founder of a group calling itself CACTUS — Citizens Against Chemical Toxins in Underground Storage. The group has scheduled a rally

Thursday night at Anson Junior High School in Wadesboro. The group has invited Lois Gibbs, who organized her neighbors in an effort to get the federal government to recognize Love Canal in New York as a national disaster area.

Scarborough says the arrest of 233 people during seven days of demonstrations at the Warren County landfill has helped publicize his cause.

The demonstrators were arrested when trying to block trucks from entering the landfill with loads of soil containing PCB. The soil was scraped up from 210 miles of roadsides, where it was illegally dumped four years ago.

"Our group is sympathetic with their action up there because what it amounts to is police state action to prohibit people from stopping the dumping," he said in a telephone interview Tuesday.

"We are facing the same type of forced underground toxic waste landfill in Anson County. We don't think disposal of toxic wastes should come down to imposing what amounts to martial law."

Scarborough said other avenues of waste storage are available, including incineration, detoxification, biological and chemical treatment.

Scarborough said Mrs. Gibbs was invited to the rally to provide political advice on how to organize against the dump. He said the group is opposed to all underground dumping, whether it was done improperly as in the case of Love Canal, or with federal authorization as in Warren County.

"We think any toxic landfill throughout the United States that can leak and cause untold environmental and health problems, whether at Love Canal, Wilsonville, Ill., or wherever it might be — if there is underground leakage, that type of thing should be brought before the public."

Chem-Security Systems Inc. of Bellevue, Wash., is seeking to build North Carolina's first general-use hazardous waste facility in Anson County. The company's application for a combined state and federal license, filed with the state Department of Health and Human Resources in July, says the facility will not accept PCBs, radioactive materials or compressed gas cylinders.

But Scarborough said that leaves about 40 chemicals, "some known to stay toxic for hundreds of years," that the company would be able to dispose of at the site.

He said most of the waste chemicals will come from industrial areas around the state, including Mecklenburg, Gaston, Forsyth, Alamance and Durham counties. He said there is not a single industry in Anson County listed as being a producer of hazardous waste.

"Yet they want to build it in our county, where they know people won't kick this thing."

"Well, we won't lie down and play dead," Scarborough said.

"We'll take this all the way in the court system and go from there. We hope the governor and the hazardous waste board will come to grips with this and make North Carolina an example instead of a scapegoat."

Six Collisions Here Tuesday

An estimated $7,750 property damage resulted from six traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Tuesday.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from an incident reported at 7:30 a.m. on Country Club Drive, 1,000 feet west of the Dexter Street intersection.

Officers said a car owned by Charles Granville Rob of 230 Country Club Drive rolled down a hill and struck a tree, causing an estimated $2,000 damage to the car.

Cars driven by Brian Keith Jones of Winterville and Robert Shelton Myers of 305 S. Eastern St. and a truck operated by Richard Gordon West of Route 1, Plymouth, were involved in a 12:52 p.m. collision on Greenville Boulevard, 30 feet east of the Hooker Road intersection.

Police estimated damage from the mishap at $200 to the Jones car, $800 to the West truck, and $500 to the Myers auto.

A 3:51 p.m. collision on 14th Street, 60 feet west of the Forbes Street intersection involved cars driven by Dorothy Randsell Jensen of 106 Antler Drive and Maude McCulloch Taylor of 300 N. Oak St.

Damage was estimated at $1,000 to the Jensen car and $500 to the Taylor vehicle.

Gary Paul Camarro of Route 1, Greenville, was reported injured when the car he was driving collided with a vehicle driven by James Glasgow Smith III of 1712 S. Elm St. about 1:17 p.m. at the intersection of First and Reade streets.

Investigators set damage from the mishap at $300 to the Camarro car and $700 to the Smith auto.

Trucks driven by David Cross Evans of Route 3, Shallotte, and Beth Thornton Thomas of Route 4, Greenville, collided about 11 a.m. at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Fifth Stret, causing $700 damage to the Evans truck and $500 damage to the Thomas vehicle.

Joseph Earl Shearin of Tarboro was charged with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety after the truck he was driving collided with a car operated by Joseph William Styron of Ayden, about 4:03 p.m. at the intersection of 14th and Charles streets.

Police set damage from the collision at $500 to the Styron car and $50 to the Shearin truck.

Green Light On Breeder Reactor

ATLANTA (AP) — Preliminary work may begin on the controversial Clinch River Breeder Reactor in Tennessee, now that the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals has overturned a judge's ruling blocking it.

The three-judge panel ruled Tuesday that U.S. District Judge Marvin Shoob overstepped his authority by issuing an injunction Sept. 15 blocking preparatory work at the site in Oak Ridge, Tenn., because federal environmental impact statements had not been filed.

The appeals court said federal law doesn't require completion of such statements before preliminary work begins unless that work is likely to have an irreversible adverse effect on the environment.

MY STORE — Fred Cianciolo beams as he stands in front of his downtown Cincinnati store. Fred's store is one of the few where shoppers can get a sneak preview of new products from the Procter & Gamble manufacturing company. (AP Laserphoto)

Fred's Place: Where Procter And Gamble Tries New Items

By TERRY KINNEY
Associated Press Writer
CINCINNATI (AP) — It sits in the shadow of the Procter & Gamble building, a tiny, downtown grocery store that stocks every new product made by the giant manufacturing company that was built on a bar of soap.

Fred's Place is where consumers and P&G competitors alike go to sample the unfamiliar products that P&G hopes will take their place beside Ivory, Jif, Pampers and Charmin on the shelves of the nation's supermarkets.

The proprietor of the 20-by-60-foot store is Fred Cianciolo, who began selling fruit and vegetables at a sidewalk produce stand when he was 6 years old.

"When I first moved over here 14 years ago, they (P&G) approached me and wanted to know if I would handle their new items," said Cianciolo, 52, who followed his father and grandfather into the produce business.

"The same week I was moving into this bigger store, another one was going out of business. They were the originators, but they would only handle the (P&G) food items; I'll take anything that comes out — drugs, medicine ... soaps, shampoo."

A half dozen stores in the Cincinnati area test-market some P&G products, "primarily as a means for our employees to try them," said spokeswoman Kathy Gilbert.

"He (Cianciolo) is not at all a test market. There just wouldn't be enough sales, market or people for a test market," she said. "It's so our employees can try our new products. Our people don't get any free samples; with 40,000 (employees) in the U.S., our shareholders would go crazy."

Cincinnati is a Procter & Gamble town, where almost 13,000 people work for the $12 billion-a-year packager of a wide range of food, soap, soft drinks and personal care products.

"Every once in a while, I accidentally find out about something I'm really not supposed to know," says Cianciolo.

"I know the next thing they're going to come out with is toothpaste in a dispenser, which sounds like a pretty neat idea," he says, showing off some of the products.

"This stuff (Rejoice, a hand lotion), this is going out in about 10 months because it's not making enough money for them."

"But this one here is going to be a good one — butter (flavored) Crisco."

Cianciolo began working with his grandfather when he was 6, and ran a fruit stand by himself when he was 9. His father, who is 80, still has a produce stand in Cincinnati's historic Findlay Market, and a cousin runs a wholesale produce business.

Fred's Place does about one-third of its business around noon at its delicatessen counter, and Cianciolo says many customers are attracted to his store because it is a P&G outlet.

Two current big sellers — not yet generally available in other parts of the country — are a bathroom tissue called Certain, and Brigade, a toilet bowl cleanser that Cianciolo predicts "is going to be a tremendous item."

"I try most of the products myself," he said. "But there are very few free samples."

After P&G decides to mass market an item, Cianciolo has to buy it like anyone else — at a supermarket.

"I usually do all right until it goes on the open market," he said. "Then it changes; they (supermarkets) sell the stuff cheaper than I can buy it, because they buy truckloads."

One of the newest products at Fred's is Ariel, a laundry detergent. Another is a cake mix designed to be cooked in a microwave oven. It can produce a cake in 10 minutes, start to finish.

"I put in everything they (P&G) have got," said Cianciolo. "I usually can get all I want. The only thing they rationed me on was Pringle's," a reconstituted potato chip which sold well at Fred's Place but has not been successful nationally.

"I guess you could say that Pringle's was the baby that really started this thing. Everybody came over to get Pringle's, and then they stocked all these other items in."

Cianciolo recalls only one P&G bomb, a dessert — "Cold Snap, I think; that was the dog of dogs."

"It took so long to make it, something like over three hours; people were buying boxes just for souvenirs. But I wound up getting rid of all of it."

Cianciolo doesn't have any pretensions about his role in the success or failure of P&G products he previews. Company executives sometimes ask him how things are going, but his opinion won't kill or save a product.

"I doubt it; I'm just a little, small plug in their operation," Cianciolo said. "But on Cold Snap ... I might have been a little more important on that one; I never did reorder it. That one just didn't sell."

Ask Bigger Tax On Big Trucks

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — A federal official has told the state Motor Carriers Association that heavy trucks should carry a bigger tax load because they are the cause of much of the deterioration of America's highway system.

Darrell Trent, the No. 2 official in the federal Department of Transportation, said Monday that the current highway funding policy "goes against the grain of the whole concept of user fees" because heavy trucks pay less than they should.

Citing a government study done earlier this year, Trent said the heaviest trucks, weighing about 40 tons, will be paying about 60 percent of their "fair share of highway cost responsibility" by 1985 unless changes are made.

Several trucking officials surveyed later Monday disagreed with Trent's remarks.

"I don't buy that in a minute," said Ken Younger of Carolina Freight Carriers. "That's a ridiculous, very erroneous argument."

Studies indicate that up to half of the nation's interstate system will require major repairs during the next 15 years, at a cost of billions of dollars.

Truck-trailers currently pay an average of $1,746 in federal taxes, and more than $4,000 in total taxes, accord-

Reviewing Law On Occupancy

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A task force will review Los Angeles County occupancy laws to determine whether overcrowding contributed to 24 deaths in an arson fire at the Dorothy Mae apartment hotel.

As many as 200 people lived at the 43-unit building swept by fire Sept. 4. The law limits the number of residents to no more than 129. But Shirley Mattingly of the city administrator's office said the task force was "not ready to say the landlord did anything wrong."

Delays Over Waste Care

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) - Chemical Waste Management Inc. Monday filed an application with the state to build a hazardous waste-treatment plant in Greensboro, some 18 months after announcing plans for the plant.

It will be 4-to-6 months before the state decides on the application, said O.W. Strickland, head of the Solid and Hazardous Waste Management Branch of the North Carolina Department of Human Resources.

The company, headquartered in Oak Brook, Ill., also has applied for a permit from the city of Greensboro to discharge effluent from the plant into the city's sewer system.

The company must get both permits before it can rebuild a treatment plant once operated by Western Electric.

The plans have drawn opposition from neighborhood residents, but city and state officials said that if the company meets technical regulations, the permits can't legally be denied.

CWM calls the proposed plant a "waste recovery and volume reduction center" rather than a disposal plant, because no waste actually will be disposed of there.

In its application to the city, CWM said the plant would treat wastes containing cyanide, oil and grease, silver, arsenic, cadmium, chromium, copper, mercury, nickel, lead, zinc and phenol.

Fire Severely Damages Home

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Suggs north of Greenville on Rural Paved Road 1515 was severely damaged by fire during a storm Monday afternoon.

Firemen from the Stator House and Bethel fire departments said the fire apparently was started by lightning which struck in a utility room of the house and spread to the attic. Damage to the house, valued at $40,000, was estimated at $20,000. The call went in at 3:51 p.m. and Stator House responded with Bethel assisting.

A CLASSIC OCCASION — Britain's Princess Margaret shakes hands with former U.S. President Gerald Ford watched by comedian Bob Hope (center) prior to a gala dinner at London's Gosvenor House Hotel Tuesday. Princess Grace Finally Entombed In Cathedral

MONTE CARLO, Monaco (AP) — A week after her death, Princess Grace has been laid to rest in a marble vault in Monaco's cathedral, beside an empty tomb reserved for her husband, Prince Rainier III.

The prince, their children Princess Caroline and Prince Albert, and a small number of Monaco officials and close friends took part in the private interment ceremony at 5 p.m. Tuesday, the Monaco press service reported.

The princess's tomb has the simple inscription in Latin, "Grace, wife of Rainier III," and below that the date of her death — Sept. 14, 1982 — and the royal couple's personal seal, an intertwined R and G, church officials said.

The former Hollywood actress Grace Kelly died at age 52 a day after her automobile plunged 120 feet off a nearby mountain road. Doctors said she had suffered a stroke, which led to the crash, and later suffered a second stroke that proved fatal.

Her 17-year-old daughter, Stephanie, riding with Grace in the car, suffered what have been described as minor spinal injuries and has not attended the funeral ceremonies for her mother.

Grace was interred in the cathedral's ambulatory, the hallway surrounding the altar, where previous rulers of this Mediterranean principality are also buried.

The century-old, white marble Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception, rising from a cliff and overlooking the famous Monaco harbor, is the place where Rainier and Grace were married 26 years ago. The royal palace is nearby.

Two public funeral services were conducted last Saturday in the cathedral the first a requiem Mass televised worldwide and attended by U.S. first lady Nancy Reagan, Princess Diana of Britain and other representatives of royalty, government and Hollywood, and the second conducted for the ordinary people of Monaco.

The palace had first reported that the princess would be interred immediately after Saturday's services. But church officials later explained that, by Rainier's instruction, the entombment was being delayed while room was made in the ambulatory for his eventual burial next to Princess Grace.

To accomplish this, workmen moved the casket holding the remains of Rainier's grandfather, Prince Louis II, whom he succeeded in 1949. Grace's coffin had remained in a private chapel at the cathedral since Saturday.

The immediate royal family has begun a three-month period of mourning, wearing black and declining social invitations.

Planning-Zoning... Seniors' Club Marks Birthday

opment trend of the area but to make the property conform with present zoning standards. Moore said that one of the structures built when the property was formerly zoned for office and institutional use does not meet setback requirements under the present medical arts designation.

The board approved the acceptance of O'Hagan Place for permanent maintenance by the city. Moore said that at some time in the future, the doctors who have offices in the area served by the street hope to have O'Hagan Place extended through to the hospital.

The planning board endorsed a request by Matthew Lewis to rezone some 63 acres located west of N.C. 11, south of Old River road, east of North Memorial Drive, and north of White Concrete property (the West Meadowbrook area), from R6-MH (residential-mobile home) to R-6 (residential).

Lewis asked the board to accept under the "grandfather clause" the two mobile homes currently located in the area proposed for rezoning and to change the zoning to accommodate residential use. He said it has been rumored that a mobile home park is being considered for the area and residents are afraid such a development would hurt the value of their properties. Faryce Goode, staff planner, said the two mobile homes would become non-conforming uses if the property is rezoned. Part of the area is located in the flood plain and no construction would be permitted there, she said.

Other board action included:

— Adopted a recommendation that the Zoning Ordinance be amended relative to ground signs in office and institutional districts, permitting the placement of no sign higher than five feet in height and larger than 50 square feet;

— Adopted a recommendation that the ordinance be amended by deleting a section which allows mobile homes as special uses in R-6 districts, and amended to allow mobile home sales offices in mobile units as permitted uses in highway commercial zones; and — Adopted a recommendation that the ordinance be amended by setting 10 days rather than 15 days as the required advertising period for the Board of Adjustments.

Town and Country Senior Citizens Club held its birthday luncheon recently with 95 members and guests attending.

Chris Dean, new visiting artist at Pitt Community College, entertained the group by playing the xylophone, the vibraphone, the maramba and the hammered dulcimer. He then explained the instruments to the group.

Elizabeth Hadden and the Rev. Adrian Brown, both 90 years old, were honored as the oldest attending members. Grace Hill was recognized for her Sept. 16 birthday.

Plans are being made for the group to go to Morehead City and cruise on the Carolina Princess on Sept. 30. Members and guests planning to make the trip must make reservations by Friday by calling Sarah Ashton, 752-2912. The trip will cost $25. The bus will leave St. Paul's Episcopal Church parking lot at 3:30 p.m.

The itinerary for the World's Fair trip on Oct. 14 will be mailed this week.

PLATFORM FIRE MEXICO CITY (AP) — A leak in a gas pipeline and a resulting fire caused workers to be evacuated from a Bay of Campeche offshore oil platform, the state-run oil monopoly Pemex announced.

State Dept. Not Consulted

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department says if it had been asked, it would have recommended denial of a Commerce Department export license for 2,500 police "shock batons" for South Africa.

Department officials denied there is a policy dispute over the matter but said the sale "should not have been licensed" and that the circumstances are being investigated by the Commerce Department.

The Commerce Department on April 26 issued an export license for the devices, sometimes called cattle prods, which deliver a high voltage shock but are not lethal. The sale was valued at $100,000.

"Through administrative inadvertence the Department of State was not asked for a recommendation," a department spokesman said.

Rushing Stopgap Appropriation

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — With a new fiscal year just eight days away, the House is hurrying to pass a stopgap appropriations measure that would keep the government running until Congress returns for a post-election session.

The measure is necessary because few, if any, of the 13 appropriations bills necessary for operating the government are expected to be passed by Congress and signed into law by the start of the fiscal year, Oct. 1. Moreover, legislators, eager to get home and campaign for the November elections, have tentatively planned to adjourn Oct. 8.

President Reagan already has told congressional leaders he favors a post-election "lame-duck" session to enact the regular appropriations and the leaders have reluctantly agreed that such a session will be necessary. On Tuesday, the House Rules Committee cleared the way for today's consideration of the measure, passing ground rules prohibiting amendments to the measure, except to change its expiration date.

The bill went to the full House with an expiration date of Feb. 28, 1983, but Republicans wanted to change that to the end of the current Congress in order to force action on the appropriations bill.

After today's House vote, the Senate will pass its own version of the measure and negotiators from both houses will work out the differences.

Rep. Silvio O. Conte, R-Mass., the top GOP member of the Appropriations Committee, said budget director David A. Stockman told him Monday night he will not oppose the stopgap measure.

However, veto fights with the president on some of the regular appropriations bills appear inevitable.

The House ignored a veto threat Tuesday and passed, 268-119, an $11.2 billion fiscal 1983 spending bill for the Department of Transportation and related agencies.

The measure, which now goes to the Senate, would provide the department with $803 million more in budget authority than requested by the Reagan administration.

Administration officials and legislators said "a veto signal" on the measure had been sent.

Later Tuesday, the House approved, 264-105, a $25.3 billion spending bill for government food and farm programs for fiscal 1983, rejecting most of the president's spending reductions.

The bill, which now goes to the Senate, includes money for both the Agriculture Department and the Food and Drug Administration. It appropriates about $3.2 billion less than called for in the budget blueprint embraced by Reagan several months ago.

But it only partially funds some of the Agriculture Department's nutrition programs, which account for nearly three-fifths of the USDA budget.

Another $2.3 billion will be needed to fully fund those programs, primarily food stamps, child nutrition and special supplemental food benefits for pregnant women and infants. The administration is directed to seek that additional money later in the year.

In other action on spending bills Tuesday:

—The House Appropriations Committee approved a $13.6 billion public works appropriation bill, providing money for construction of some of the nation's biggest and most controversial energy and water development projects. The committee approved the bill on voice vote, sending it to the House floor.

—A Senate Appropriations subcommittee, by a vote of 11-5, rejected a Democratic move to delete funds for the B-1 bomber from a $200.1 billion military spending bill. Final subcommittee action on the bill, including a vote on the proposed MX missile system, was put off until today.

Tass Says Papal Plot 'Invented'

MOSCOW (AP) — The state-run Tass news agency today branded as "fantastic lies" an NBC program that claimed Pope John Paul II was targeted for assassination with the knowledge and perhaps assistance of Soviet and Bulgarian intelligence services.

"There were no and could not be any facts to prove this," wrote Yuri Kornilov, a top Tass commentator.

He said the program was "nothing except all kind of absurd inventions of which there was quite a lot — mythical 'Soviet agents' secretly operating in the Balkans, their 'Bulgarian assistants' penetrating into Turkey 'on Moscow's assignment,' caches and brownings and false passports — in short, all attributes of a cheap detective story."

The NBC program featuring what it called results of a nine-month investigation by reporters Marvin Kalb and Bill McLaughlin was aired in the United States on Tuesday.

It said the pope was the target of the assassination attempt by Turkish terrorist Mehmet Ali Agca because of the Pope's ties to Poland's independent Solidarity union. The Kremlin strongly backed Poland's crackdown on the union, which was suspended when martial law was declared last December.

Agca shot the pontiff in St. Peter's Square in May 1981. He is serving a life sentence in an Italian prison.

"As we see, the authors of this fabrication strained their imagination to the limit," the Tass commentary said. "But this time too, they failed to give any proof of the Soviet union's alleged involvement in terrorism, despite all their fantastic lies about the adventures of 'Moscow's agents,' lies which show through in every line of their scenario."

The NBC broadcast said there were strong suggestions of a Soviet connection in the assassination attempt "but it cannot be proved."

The Tass commentary said that "by launching a new dirty story from the NBC screens, they in Washington hoped to throw a stone at the Soviet Union. But they threw a boomerang."

Will Voters Blame Doctor, Or Take The Medicine?

By OWEN ULLMANN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Election Day seems certain to arrive before economic recovery. What's uncertain is whether most voters will blame Dr. Reagan for the illness or stick with him to see if he has the cure.

Conventional political wisdom suggests Democrats will benefit in the congressional elections from a sick economy beset by high unemployment, rampant business failures and still painful interest rates.

But economic analysts aren't sure conventional wisdom will apply this year.

"The economic issue should be all on the side of the Democrats," says Walter Heller, chief economic adviser to Presidents Kennedy and Johnson. "But if ever we have had a president who makes black look white, who blames his predecessors and gets away with it, Reagan is that man."

Reagan administration economists are finally abandoning year-long hopes that the economy would have bounced out of bed before November, but they are not giving up hopes that voters will remain believers in the slow Republican prescription.

"Certainly, we won't get any roaring upturn," acknowledged one administration official, who requested that his name not be used. "But there's also clear-cut evidence of patience with the president. If things don't get much worse, that feeling could continue."

Most analysts believe the economy is more or less standing still — neither into a strong upturn nor falling deeper into recession.

But even in a stagnant economy, there is one critical statistic that could get much worse between now and the election: unemployment. The September rate, which the government will issue in early October, is the last jobless report due out before the election and it has administration officials worried.

Unemployment stood at 9.8 percent in August. Most economists expect the rate for September will break the 10 percent barrier for the first time since the Great Depression. The idea of double-digit unemployment could have a chilling effect on voters.

Historically, the party occupying the White House loses seats in midterm congressional elections, so Democrats are starting out with expectations of picking up 15 or 20 seats in the House.

Yet, even with the prospect of rising unemployment, any larger gains could prove difficult for the Democrats because Reagan seems to remain personally popular with the public, which may be willing to give his economic program more time to prove itself.

"The president is getting remarkably little blame for the economy's problems, far less than would be expected," says Alan Greenspan, who was President Ford's chief economist and is now a part-time adviser to Reagan.

"I sense far less Democratic support than would have been the case in the past, when the electorate saw the government as having all the answers," Greenspan observed.

"The string of failures of Reaganomics will not benefit Democrats as much as one might otherwise think because of Reagan's disarming personality," Heller adds. "He's a nice guy and people may figure, 'Give him a chance.'"

However, a national New York Times-CBS News poll of registered voters, published today, showed 54 percent of those surveyed backed or leaned toward Democrats in the congressional elections, compared with 38 percent favoring the Republicans.

Although it is impossible to convert national percentages into specific races for the 435 House seats, such a margin would probably mean a Democratic gain of nearly 40 seats, party officials said.

The telephone poll of 1,305 registered voters, taken last week, also showed 61 percent of those responding had more confidence in Congress, instead of Reagan, on handling of the economy. Twenty-nine percent had more confidence in the president.

Heller threw a scare into Democrats a year ago when he predicted that the economic woes of 1981 would give way to a strong recovery well before the 1982 elections, thereby depriving Democrats of a campaign issue.

He now admits he was wrong. These days, Heller and most other economists believe that obvious evidence of a turnaround has yet to surface; if a recovery is already under way, it is too weak for the public to notice.

"The voter will perceive the economy as poor, with few clear signs of improvement," says Greenspan.

"The economy is down in the doldrums and staying there," adds private economist Allen Sinai of Data Resources Inc. in Cambridge, Mass.

Those views were reinforced Tuesday when the Commerce Department estimated that the economy grew at a feeble annual rate of 1.5 percent during the summer after expanding at a less than robust 2.1 percent annual pace in the spring.

Such statistics and other recent figures showing positive and negative developments paint so fuzzy a picture, that both parties can campaign on the state of the economy and its future course.

Republicans, declaring that the nation is entering the beginning stages of a lasting recovery, are emphasizing the sharp decline in inflation and the recent easing of interest rates.

Democrats, insisting that the nation is at the edge of a full-scale depression, are hitting away at the unemployment rate and mounting business failures.

Voters, unfortunately, won't have any road maps to determine if the country is headed for economic prosperity or disaster.

Report Profit By N.C. Ports

MOREHEAD CITY, N.C. (AP) — State port officials say the North Carolina State Ports Authority registered a $280,335 profit during July and August.

Revenues for the authority, which operates the deepwater terminals at Morehead City and Wilmington, totaled $2,225,225 for the first two months of the fiscal year, ports comptroller Ruff A. Devane told the authority's board of directors Tuesday.

Morehead City had a net loss of $37,902 on gross revenues of $252,498 for August, he said. The actual tonnage moving through the port was much lower than the tonnage budgeted for the month because exported tobacco had not yet begun to move at the facility.

For the first two months of the fiscal year, Morehead City had a net loss of $2,580 on gross revenues of $566,706, Devane said.

For August, the state port at Wilmington had a net profit of $229,579 on gross revenues of $943,063.

For the first two months of the fiscal year, the Wilmington port had a net profit of $284,633 on gross revenues of $1,686,019, he said.

Tonnage moving through the Wilmington facility in August was greater than the budgeted tonnage but for the July and August, actual tonnage was much less than budgeted.

The ports authority is in "a sound financial position" with current assets of $9,333,425 compared to current liabilities of $986,375, Devane said.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) - Stock prices surged upward today, continuing Tuesday's powerful advance.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks rose 8.18 to 942.97 in the first half hour of very heavy trading.

Rising issues outnumbered those falling in price by a margin of 7-to-2 and volume in the first 30 minutes of trading was about 11 million shares.

Analysts pointed to declines in rates on Treasury bills and to a drop in the Federal Funds rate, which is the rate on inter-bank loans, when asked to explain the market's rise.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average jumped 18.49 to 934.79, for its largest gain since it rose 21.88 on Aug. 23.

Advances outpaced declines by more than 3 to 1 on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 82.92 million shares, against 58.52 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index climbed 1.24 to 71.49.

Economists See Long Recovery

By ROBERT FURLOW Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) - The national economy is heading out of recession and into a recovery that will be long in duration but "very modest" in strength, according to a new poll of business economists.

"The poll indicates the economic revival will be led by a steady climb in consumer spending, accompanied by a rise in housing starts," said Edgar Fiedler, president-elect of the National Association of Business Economists.

But he also said, "The rate of recovery is forecast to be very modest."

Fiedler, who is also a vice president of the Conference Board, a New York business group, said about 550 members of the economists' association took part in the survey.

The results - giving consensus views - were prepared for delivery today at the opening of the group's annual convention in Seattle. Copies were made available to reporters in Washington.

"Not only did those polled predict a continuous recovery, but in fact a large majority of those polled also expect the cyclical upswing to continue into 1985 or beyond," Fiedler said in comments accompanying the survey results.

On the other hand, he said, the economists believe unemployment will average a still-high 8.8 percent next year.

And he added, "It seems

Survey Will Be Published

The Greenville Area Preservation Association has voted to prepare for publication the architectural survey of Greenville recently completed by Kate Ohno.

The report, funded by the city of Greenville, comprises an in-depth study of significant structures in the central business district and several of Greenville's historic neighborhoods.

GAPA's members agreed to edit and index Ms. Ohno's work and to investigate means of raising sufficient money to publish the book. A moderately priced paperback volume with numerous illustrations is envisioned.

The report reveals a number of noteworthy houses and institutional buildings. Mrs. Ohno says several of the structures merit inclusion in the National Register of Historic Places and groups of them should be designated as historic districts.

In another action Monday night, association members requested the president to use appropriate means to protest the planned construction of a large classroom building in the arboretum on the East Carolina University campus. It was noted the fine trees in the arboretum should be preserved and that an alternate site for the building should be considered.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger says there is evidence the Soviet Union may be using Vietnamese dissidents as forced labor to build the Siberian portion of its natural gas pipeline to Western Europe.

"The evidence is not conclusive, I hasten to say," Weinberger said Tuesday. "But the available evidence is profoundly troubling, and some have found it very persuasive."

Weinberger defended the Reagan administration's sanctions against companies supplying parts for the pipeline by telling a conference of American, European and Japanese government officials that alleged human rights violations by Moscow are "potentially horrendous."

The secretary said evidence from a number of sources, including a human rights organization in West Germany.

Jags Battle Rams; Conley Hosts A-G; N. Pitt At S. Nash

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

Farmville Central has been in this position already once this season and Coach Gilbert Carroll hopes the results will be different this time. But, it won't be easy.

Earlier this season the Jaguars played Clinton and Ayden-Grifton back-to-back, a nonconference opponent followed by a conference foe — one of the two best in the Eastern Carolina Conference.

Now, Farmville finds itself in a similar situation. The Jaguars go to Havelock (a nonconference foe) Friday evening and then entertain SouthWest Edgecombe (a conference opponent, the other of the two best teams in the ECC) at home the next week.

"Making matters just that much worse is the fact all four teams are considered by many among the best 3-A teams in the East, if not the state.

"We lost to Clinton and Ayden-Grifton and now we have Havelock and SouthWest. We can't stand losing both of those," Carroll said. "The next two weeks are big weeks.

"We're getting ready to play our (third) playoff caliber team," he said. "I think Havelock is probably the best team in the Coastal Conference."

Havelock is unbeaten after four games, having beat New Bern (22-6), Pamlico (30-12), Camp Lejeune (21-14) and East Carteret (26-13).

Despite a 1-3-0 record, the Jaguars, who upset the Rams, 34-29, a year ago, come into the game with at least two pluses.

First, Farmville is as healthy as it has been all year. Second, the Jaguars are coming off a 40-0 whipping of D.H. Conley. "I would have hated to go to Havelock 0-4," Carroll said.

In shutting out the Vikings, Farmville held DHC to just 68 yards. "I think our defense is jelling as a unit," Carroll said.

Havelock will test just how good the Jaguar defense is come Friday. The Rams, who run out of the wishbone, are led by fullback Tom Young, a 6-1, 200-pounder, who has run for about 350 yards, including two 100-yard games. At one halfback is Tom Mullins, who had gained around 300 yards.

"We've got to shut down their fullback," Carroll said. "Defensively, Havelock runs a stacked 4-4.

"They have tremendous size and if they are as aggressive as Ayden-Grifton it's going to be a tough battle," Carroll said. "I just hope the guys play up to their full potential and Havelock is a good place to start."

In other games this week, Ayden-Grifton (3-0-0, 1-0) travels to D.H. Conley (0-3-1, 0-0), North Pitt (1-1-2, 0-0) is at Southern Nash (0-4-0, 0-0) and Greene Central (0-2-2) journeys to SouthWest Edgecombe (3-1-0, 0-0).

In the Northeastern Conference, Roanoke (2-2-0, 1-1-0) is at Plymouth (1-2-1, 0-2-0) and Williamston (2-2-0, 1-1-0) travels to Bertie (3-0-0, 1-0-0).

Also this week, Jamesville (2-2-0, 2-1-0) travels to Bath (4-0-0, 2-0).

D.H. Conley

D.H. Conley, the embarrassment of a 40-0 loss to Farmville still fresh, will try to regroup this week against unbeaten Ayden-Grifton, a team that does not take to allowing such things.

"The key to the ballgame is not what they will run or what we will run. The key to the D.H. Conley Vikings is their mental outlook and attitude going into the game," D.H. Conley coach Gerald Garner said.

"If the kids really want it we could possibly make a game of it. If not, we could be in for a long night and a lot of Roloids."

The Vikings have held two team meetings since their loss to Farmville, one a short discussion Friday night immediately after the loss and a second of 45 minutes Monday.

"We had some soul searching (Monday)," Garner said. "We've redefined our goals and told the kids the year's still not a washout."

Playing Ayden-Grifton could be just what Conley needs. There are few teams Conley wants to beat more, so the Vikings should not have any trouble getting ready for the Chargers.

"It will be a good gauge — the game itself, Ayden-Grifton versus D.H. Conley — to tell me and our coaching staff what we're made of," Garner said. "They will test us."

"This is not a time when we need any false prophecy. Had we been playing a patsy this week — someone we could blow out — we might think we'd have turned it around.

"We don't need that," Garner said. "It's an excellent time to play a team such as Ayden-Grifton. We'll find out what we're made of."

Ayden-Grifton comes into the game unbeaten in three games, led by a defense that has surrendered only 271 yards in those games.

"Their defense doesn't try to contain an offense, it tries to destroy it," Garner said. "Their defense is the cornerstone of their team."

Offensively, the Chargers are led by three running backs: fullback Jarvis Koonce (265 yards and five touchdowns in three games) and tailback Malcolm Worthington (221 yards and two touchdowns).

Quarterback Joey Kennedy, who has hit 23 of 45 for 264 yards and three TDs with no interceptions, complements the Charger running game.

"They mix it up well," Garner said. "We're going to have to stop the run and the pass. We know we're going to have to play very well to stay on the field with them."

The Good, The Bad

Emory Saw Both In Pirate Victory Over ETSU

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Ed Emory, in looking back on the home season opener against East Tennessee State, felt that his Pirates did some good things — but they also did some bad things.

East Carolina whipped East Tennessee, 30-0, but held a 21-0 lead just minutes into the second period of the game and accounted for only a third period safety and a fourth period touchdown the rest of the way.

"I do appreciate a win more than I ever have in the past," Emory said. "I'm still painfully sore that we're not 2-0, but I guess 1-1 is better than 0-2."

Emory said that in the past he had punished a team much harder for winning but not playing well than he had for just losing. "But we've celebrated some and still tried to get our mistakes corrected," he said.

On the offensive side of the ball, there were a number of good things the coach saw after viewing films of the game. "I was very pleased with the play of (offensive guard) Terry Long. He probably had the best line play I've seen since I've been here. (Center John) Floyd played pretty good coming off an injury.

"Our receivers all played well — the best they've played. Some of our interceptions at N.C. State were because we weren't disciplined in running our routes. What we do is all based on where the ball is on the field, and if the receivers don't run their patterns right, it causes our quarterback problems."

Emory said that the receivers, in particular Carlton Nelson, Ricky Nichols, Larry O'Roark, and Carlton Frazier, all ran their routes well. "(Stuart) Ramirez has to learn not to free-lance out there on his routes. We didn't play (Norwood) Vann because of bruised ribs and some problems he had in practice. But (Lloyd) Black started for the first time ever at East Carolina and did a good job." A red-shirt junior, Black, Emory thinks, has a chance to be a big help the rest of the year and next year. "(Damon) Pope also played well," Emory said in rounding out the receivers.

The coach said that freshman tailback Tony Baker had another fine game, as did sophomore Stefan Adams. "Except for one play, maybe...he should have scored when he got knocked out of bounds on the one. He should have put his shoulder in there and gotten in the end zone," Emory noted.

Emory said that East Tennessee's game plan was to pinch off the fullback play and that cut down on the yardage of Earnest Byner. "But I've got to say that (freshman Reggie) Branch is the best player I've seen in a while faking without the ball. That's an important factor — what you do when you don't have the ball."

The offense overall has clicked well, passing for almost as many yards as gained rushing (423, 417) in the two games thus far. "We didn't plan it that way, but we're happy about it. It will make it tougher for Central Michigan to defend us, having to play for both phases of the game."

"We've averaged a good number of center snaps, too, over 80 a game, and that's good. It keeps the defense off the field, and that's what we want — a fresh defense." Emory noted possession time is 68:46 for ECU as compared to 51:14 for the opponents. "That's a very important statistic."

"I think we got better in the game, even though we did lose some intensity in the second period. Penalties stopped us several times, and we've got to cut down on the number of penalties. We were also concerned with the output in the second half. We have to get more production in the second half."

"We've got to get more physical up front and more aggressive. We've got to take what the opponent gives us."

Defensively, Emory praised the play of Steve Hamilton, and noted that Barry Smith has made a good transition to nose guard. "Having size in the line this year makes a big difference," he said.

"Our secondary played well, but I'm still concerned with our linebacker situation. (Kevin) Baker has improved, and Ron Reid is getting better and better. But he's bruised up and we hope that he'll be ready to play Saturday. If P.J. Jordan can go Saturday, that will be a big plus for us."

Emory said that he has preached getting better on defense since he's been at East Carolina. "We're better now, but we've still got to get better. We'll get another big test this weekend."

Emory said he compares Central Michigan, a team that suffers with an identity problem in this part of the country, favorably with N.C. State.

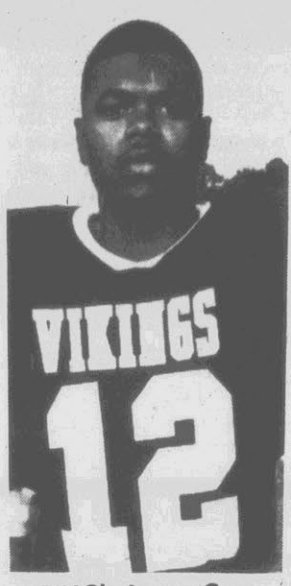

NOTES — East Carolina ranks in the top 20 both in offense and defense this week. After two games, the Pirates are averaging 420 yards a game, 19th best among the NCAA's Division I-A schools.

On defense, the Pirates are giving up 215 yards a game, 8th best. They are 16th in pass defense, allowing 130 yards a game, and tied for 16th in rushing defense, allowing 85 yards a game.

East Carolina has held its opponents to minus three yards in punt returns. "That may be because we're not kicking it very far," Emory said. "But I think our punting will improve as we go along."

Horton Filling Hole Left By Heels' Bryant

AP Sports Writer

CHAPEL HILL — North Carolina running back Kelvin Bryant began the 1982 season as a Heisman Trophy candidate, but he may be fighting for a starting job when he returns to the lineup after he recovers from injuries in the Tar Heels first two games.

Bryant's replacement, sophomore Ethan Horton, has rushed for 249 yards in 46 carries in the Tar Heels first two games, including 201 yards in last weekend's 34-10 victory over Vanderbilt.

The 6-foot-4, 220-pound Horton has rushed for one score and caught a Rod Elkins pass for another.

That leaves North Carolina football coach Dick Crum with a tough decision to make two weeks from now when Bryant is expected to be back at full strength.

Bryant has been plagued by a sprained ankle and a bruised foot. Against Pittsburgh and Vanderbilt, he has gained 88 yards in 21 carries and hasn't scored a touchdown.

"I'll cross that bridge when I come to it," Crum said. "Certainly, it's Kelvin's senior year, but if Ethan is playing well that's gonna have to be taken into consideration, too."

Crum said Bryant's injuries have been a mystery to team doctors, especially because

As Strike Enters Second Day

Donlan, Garvey Waiting

NEW YORK (AP) — Jack Donlan is waiting for a call from Ed Garvey, who is waiting for a call from Donlan, and the strike of National Football League players is into its second day with no resumption of negotiations scheduled.

Donlan, executive director of the NFL Management Council and the club owners' chief negotiator, was told at a news conference Tuesday that union president Gene Upshaw had said the players would return to work if "meaningful negotiations" got under way.

"If that's all it takes, that would be fine. Anybody on either side would be willing to do it," Donlan said. "But you've got to find out what their definition of meaningful bargaining is. If meaningful bargaining to them is, 'You, Management Council, put another proposal on the table,' well, I don't know what to tell them."

Garvey, executive director of the players union, said Tuesday night in Chicago that it was up to Donlan to call him.

"We made a significant counter-proposal last Friday and we expect a response to that," he said. The owners have offered a five-year, $1.6-billion package. The players have asked for the

Carlton Keeps Phils Breathing In East With Win

By The Associated Press
It's been 10 years since they sent Steve Carlton to the Philadelphia Phillies, but the St. Louis Cardinals are still paying for the deal.
Carlton personally pitches better against the Cardinals than any other team in the National League, holding a remarkable 35-10 career record against his former club.
That includes Tuesday night's must-win 5-2 triumph that kept the Phillies still breathing in the NL East race.
"He can pitch several more years if he wants to because of his strength," Philadelphia pitching coach Claude Osteen said in respect for the 38-year-old Carlton, who improved his record to 21-10 with a 14-strikeout performance. "He's also as mentally strong as anybody in the game."
The East-leading Cardinals currently lead the runner-up Phillies by 4½ games, but Philadelphia would be out of sight without Carlton. He has a 5-1 record this year against the Cardinals, who hold an 11-7 edge over the Phillies in the season series.
Errors by St. Louis in the third and fifth innings accounted for four Philadelphia runs off Cardinal starter Eric Rasmussen, 0-1, including all three in the decisive fifth.
Tied at 2-2, Philadelphia capitalized on third baseman Kelly

Paris' error on Ivan DeJesus' leadoff grounder. After Carlton sacrificed and Bob Dernier lined out, Pete Rose singled home DeJesus, and Garry Maddox singled home two more runs after Gary Matthews singled and Mike Schmidt walked to load the bases.
Overall, Carlton scattered nine hits and walked two.
"He wasn't as sharp as the last time he faced us," said the Cardinals' Keith Hernandez. "But it's the mark of a great pitcher that he gets stronger as the game goes on."
Carlton struck out the side in the eighth and another batter in the ninth.
Padres 3, Dodgers 0
John Montefusco and Luis DeLeon combined on a six-hitter and Montefusco drove in a run with a suicide squeeze bunt as San Diego shut out Los Angeles.
Montefusco, 10-10, allowed just three hits over seven innings to earn his first victory since Aug. 4. He struck out seven and did not walk a batter while DeLeon worked the final two innings to earn his 14th save.
The Padres scored all the runs they needed with two in the fifth off Burt Hooton, 3-6, on an RBI grounder by Luis Salazar and Montefusco's squeeze bunt.

Astros 5, Braves 3
Danny Heep hit a two-run double and Atlanta shortstop Rafael Ramirez committed a two-run error as Houston downed the fading Braves, who lost for the seventh time in 11 games.
The Astros broke a 1-1 tie in the third inning on Ramirez's error, then put the game away in the fifth on Heep's hit.
Rick Camp, 11-10, was tagged with the loss, lasting only four innings. Vern Ruhle, 8-13, got his first victory over the Braves since October, 1980.
Mets 2-1, Expos 1-5
Ron Gardenhire homered leading off the 10th to pace New York over Montreal in the first game of their doubleheader. Chris Speier homered to ignite Montreal's four-run third inning, and Scott Sanderson pitched a six-hitter to help the Expos win the second game.
The second-game victory snapped a five-game Montreal losing streak, but left the Expos with little hope of catching the Cardinals. The Expos are 6½ games behind the Cards.
"Now, we have to win a very large percentage of the rest of our games and hope somebody else beats the Cards," Sanderson said. "It's not a very good position to be in, but that's the position we got ourselves into."
Cubs 1, Pirates 0
Jody Davis hit an RBI single with two out in the seventh inning and Ferguson Jenkins and two relievers combined on a six-hitter to lead Chicago over Pittsburgh.

"I was lucky just to get it (the hit)," said Davis, who has been injured with a strained right shoulder. "He (loser Rod Scurry) has only got a fastball, a curve and a change. I was looking for the fastball, just trying to put the ball in play."
The run-scoring single broke up a pitchers' duel and gave Jenkins, 12-15, his 27th major league victory. Jenkins yielded four hits before giving way to reliever Willie Hernandez. Bill Campbell pitched out of an eighth-inning jam and went on to earn his seventh save.
"Fergie hit the glove all day long," said Davis, the Cubs' catcher, "and that's what it takes to be successful."
Reds 6, Giants 5
Gary Redus scored twice and drove in a pair of runs and left-hander Bob Shirley snapped a personal three-game losing streak as Cincinnati edged San Francisco.
Shirley, 7-12, struck out six in 6 2-3 innings to post his first victory since Aug. 25 before a crowd of 6,038, the smallest paid crowd ever to attend a Reds game in Riverfront Stadium since it in 1970. Rookie Ben Hayes notched his first major league save.
Fred Breining, 10-5, was the loser.

Difference Between This Year And Last

Ford: Tigers Lacking Enthusiasm

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — Clemson coach Danny Ford says the difference between his 1981 national champion football team and his winless one this year is enthusiasm.
"We don't lack effort," Ford said Tuesday, "but we have not had the enthusiasm we had last season."
"There is a difference between effort and enthusiasm," he said during his weekly news conference. "We have been working hard, but we lack the love for the game for some reason."
The Clemson mentor said the Tigers, 0-1-1, also will have to work on their "knockout punch" if they hope to chalk up their first win of the season Saturday afternoon against Western Carolina at Death Valley.
"When you are a kid in grammar school and get in your first fight you learn in a hurry that you need to keep the other guy down or he will get back up and hit you," Ford said. "That is what Boston College did last Saturday and it should not have happened."
Ford said a main factor in the 17-17 tie against Boston College was the Tigers' lack of a swarming defense.
"We were not physical enough and need to get more people around the ball," he said. "In 70 plays by Boston College we had only 19 assists on tackles. Last year, when a guy broke a tackle we had six others waiting to hit him. We did not do that Saturday. We did not do it at Georgia, but we regressed in that department last week."

The highlight of last weekend's tie was the performances of Frank Magwood and Jim Scott, Ford said. Magwood caught a career high six passes for 103 yards and Scott, making his first start at Clemson, had five tackles. Scott's tackles included three behind the line of scrimmage and two quarterback sacks.
The Western Carolina Catamounts will be ready for the Tigers this week, the Clemson coach predicted.
"Western Carolina will hit harder, execute better and run faster than they are capable of doing this weekend," Ford said. "They will play better than they can, and if our players don't realize it, the results will be better for them than it was two years ago."
Deputy Ralph Owens said Jordan didn't spend any time in jail following his arrest, but his license was taken until he pays his fine.
Jordan has until Oct. 15 to pay the $50 penalty, Owens said.
Earlier this month, it was disclosed that the National Collegiate Athletic Association has questioned several people in connection with Jordan's they've taken so long to heal.

"The doctors know there's something wrong with him. It's really tough to say exactly what," he said.
Bryant will not participate in practice this week and will not suit up for the Army game at Kenan Stadium on Saturday. Ironically, when the Tar Heels and the Cadets met in 1979, Bryant was forced out of the game with a shoulder separation, the first of his series of major injuries at North Carolina.

Angels Edge K.C., Now Up By 2

By The Associated Press
California Angels Manager Gene Mauch, in the midst of perhaps the most important game of the American League West pennant race this season, said he just had a feeling about rookie Daryl Sconiers.

"I had my mind made up before the game that if there was a pinch-hit situation against (Kansas City reliever Dan) Quisenberry, unless it was a bunt situation, it was going to be Daryl Sconiers."

Sconiers, 0-for-8 this year, drilled a one-out single in the bottom of the ninth inning to drive in the winning run as the Angels downed the Royals 2-1 Tuesday before 52,415 roaring fans in Anaheim Stadium.

The victory, California's fourth straight, increased its AL West lead to two games over Kansas City, which lost for the sixth straight time. The Angels beat the Royals 3-2 on Monday night.

"It was an indescribable feeling," said an elated Sconiers. "The only thing in my mind was getting a hit. I didn't care how I got it."

Mauch was somewhat at loss to explain why he picked the 23-year-old Sconiers to bat for rookie shortstop Rick Adams against the side-arming Quisenberry, now 8-6.

"The only thing I can tell you is that he was very comfortable in both of his at-bats in Toronto (last weekend) against Dale Murray," Mauch said.

Sconiers, who hit a 2-2 pitch, admitted he was a little nervous walking up to the plate.

"Before my first cut, yeah," he said. "I just wanted to stay within myself and hit the ball. I knew I had a job to do. I just wanted to hit the ball."

Ken Forsch, 13-10, held Kansas City to seven hits while pitching his 12th complete game of the season.

Red Sox 4, Brewers 3
Jim Rice singled in the winning run in the 10th inning to snap Milwaukee's six-game winning streak.

Despite the loss, the Brewers remained two games ahead of the Baltimore Orioles in the American League East. Baltimore and Milwaukee both have 11 games left, seven against each other.

Glenn Hoffman started Boston's 10th inning with a single off Milwaukee starter Doc Medich, 11-14. Reliever Dwight Bernard got the next two batters out before walking Dwight Evans. Rice then singled in the game-winner.

Paul Molitor's 18th homer of the season, a solo shot, tied the game at 3-3 in the eighth.

Mike Laga, who entered the game when Lou Whitaker was ejected, doubled and singled in the third inning as Detroit scored eight times against three Orioles pitchers.

Laga had three of Detroit's 16 hits. He came into the game after Whitaker was tossed out for disputing his unsuccessful steal of home in the first inning.

Lance Parrish cracked his 30th homer of the season, tying the AL record for home runs by a catcher currently held by Yogi Berra and Gus Triandos.

Chet Lemon also homered for Detroit.

Winner Milt Wilcox, 12-8, won for only the second time in 12 career decisions against Baltimore.

Indians 9-2, Yankees 8-6

A two-out, bases-loaded error in the ninth inning by New York second baseman Willie Randolph allowed the winning run to score in the opener, extending the Yankees' losing streak to nine games, equaling their second-longest winless string in history.

But Dave Righetti, 10-9, pitched a six-hitter in the nightcap as New York salvaged a split.

New York's Jerry Mumphrey knocked in five runs in the two games.

Blue Jays 5, Twins 1
Dave Stieb, 15-14, pitched his AL-leading 17th complete game in downing the Twins before 3,282 fans in Minnesota.

Stieb scattered seven hits and struck out nine while walking two.

Willie Upshaw homered and doubled to knock in two runs while Garth Iorg drove in two more with three hits.

A's 6, Rangers 1
Tim Conroy notched his first major-league victory with a five-hitter. Conroy, 1-2, was making his third start since being recalled from the Class A California League.

He had made two starts four years ago when he was just out of high school.

Wayne Gross drilled a two-run homer and Bob Kearney added a two-run double for Oakland.

Seattle 5, White Sox 4
Julio Cruz singled in pinch-runner Paul Serna with one in the bottom of the ninth. Serna was safe when his hard slide jarred the ball loose from Chicago catcher Carlton Fisk.

Reliever Bill Caudill, 12-8, got the win by striking out the side in the ninth. Seattle starter Floyd Bannister struck out 10 in eight innings, raising his AL-leading total to 195.

CHAPEL HILL — The University of North Carolina, ranked as one of the better teams in the area, gained a hard-fought, 3-2 volleyball victory over East Carolina yesterday.

East Carolina won the opening game of the best-of-five match, 16-14, but the Tar Heels came back with 15-8 and 15-10 wins in the next two games. East Carolina then tied the match with a 15-9 win before bowing the final game, 15-11.

"We played great, despite losing," Coach Lynn Davidson said of the Pirate game. "The Tar Heels are very lucky to have escaped. We took advantage of the fact that UNC is inexperienced as a team (playing its first match of the year). We were real psyched up and even though we lost the second and third games, we still hung in."

Davidson said the serving of Mitzi Davis in the fourth game sparked the Lady Pirates to the win, tying the match at two games each.

"In the fifth game, we were a little shakey, and after leading 10-8, the momentum of the game shifted to them. But we were real scrappy and I'm proud of them despite the loss."

Davidson also praised the play of freshman Johanna Fry in the match.

Now 4-3, the Lady Pirates travel to Raleigh on Friday to participate in the N.C. State Invitational, facing George Washington in their first match.

SNOW HILL — North Lenoir swept two games from Greene Central's volleyball team yesterday.

The Lady Hawks won the opening match, 15-10, 11-15, 15-12, then took the second in two games, 15-11, 15-12.

"They controlled the offense pretty well," Coach Tim Corbett said of the opposing North Lenoir team.

Corbett singled out the play of Allison Battle and Cindi Hicks in the match.

Greene Central is now 1-4 and plays host to North Pitt on Wednesday, Sept. 29.

Harris Sparks GCA By Falls Road, 6-1

ROCKY MOUNT — Chris Harris scored three goals as Greenville Christian Academy romped to a 6-1 victory over Falls Road Academy yesterday in a soccer match.

The Knights had little trouble with their hosts, scoring three goals in each half.

Harris got the scoring started only three minutes into the game, scoring off an assist by Troy Stox. Just two and a half minutes later, Stox scored his first goal of the game, on an assist by Darrin O'Brian.

Falls Road avoided a shut-out as Dan Griffin scored with 37:20 gone, and Greenville closed out the half on a second goal by Harris, with 38:00 elapsed. Mike Bragg assisted on the goal.

Stox got a second goal to open the second half scoring 15 minutes into play. Bragg followed at the 25:02 mark, with an assist by O'Brian, and Harris finished off the scoring with a goal at the 30-minute mark, assisted by Stox.

"Our guys had more experience," GCA coach Dale Thatcher said. "(Falls Road) is an rebuilding year. We're starting to come around now, but we'll find out how far we've come Friday when we play Ridgecroft. This game was a good booster for us though."

The Knights had 41 shots on goal as compared to just four for Falls Road. GCA's two goalies had only two saves, while Falls Road's goalie made 15.

GCA is now 2-3 on the season and hosts Ridgecroft on Friday.

Turner To Air NFL All-Star Contests

By The Associated Press

Ted Turner has established a new television network and he has a product to show on it — professional football.

The Turner Broadcasting System, whose flagship station is WTBS in Atlanta — a station which reaches all 50 states via satellite — announced Tuesday that it would televise games involving All-Star teams made up of striking National Football League players.

The first two games will be aired Oct. 10 and 11. The first game was expected to be played at RFK Stadium in Washington with Philadelphia and Dallas also probable sites for games.

Meanwhile, CBS, NBC and ABC were scrambling for alternate programming for as long as the strike lasts.

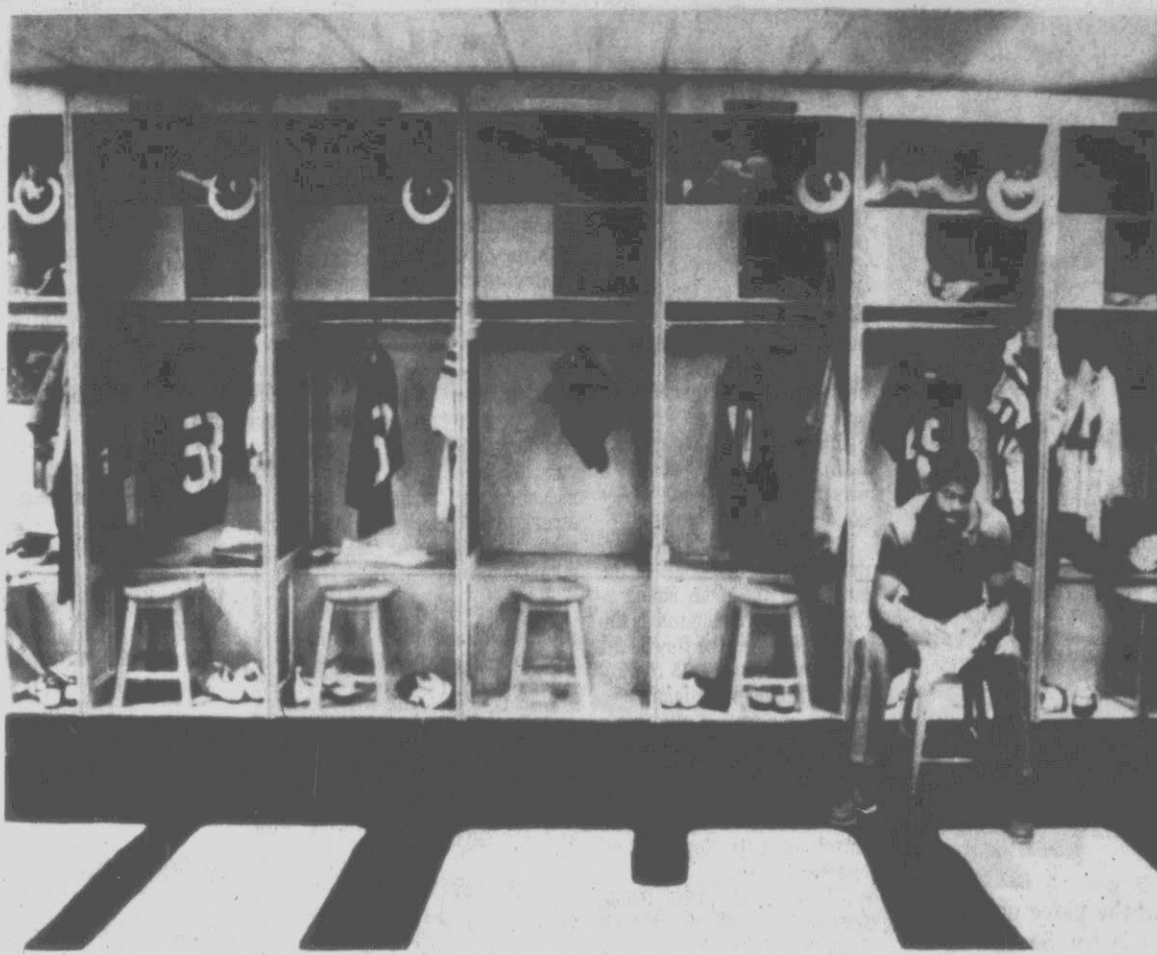

This Sunday, CBS will present an expanded version of the NFL Today, followed by a rebroadcast of last January's Super Bowl between the San Francisco 49ers and Cincinnati Bengals. And NBC has opted for a Canadian Football League doubleheader, with the British Columbia Lions at Toronto to play the Argonauts and the defending champion Edmonton Eskimos hosting the Calgary Stampeders.

ABC will replace its Monday Night Football with entertainment programming, beginning with a Clint Eastwood movie, "The Outlaw Josey Wales." That network also was to show Thursday night's Atlanta-Kansas City contest but, if it isn't played, will air "The Cheap Detective," a film starring Peter Falk, and its news magazine show, 20/20.

The NFL has promised legal action to stop the players from participating in the All-Star games — 18 of them involving six teams, one from each division.

"We will take legal action against all appropriate parties" to prevent the games from being staged, said Jack Donlan, executive director of the NFL Management Council, the owners' bargaining unit. "We will seek an injunction."

TNT has lined up 33 affiliates, including stations in most NFL cities. The two teams with the best records will play for the championship in Honolulu.

Players Voicing Different Views On NFL Strike

By The Associated Press

Now that the National Football League Players Association has called the first regular-season strike in the sport's history, its members are voicing different views on how long the walkout will last.

Perhaps the most pessimistic opinions come from the Philadelphia Eagles, some of whom have said they don't expect to be playing any more football this season.

"A lot of guys are leaving town," said quarterback Ron Jaworski. "It's not a good feeling. The feeling is that the season is over right now. I believe there won't be any more football (this season)."

Veteran linebacker Frank LeMaster concurred.

"The guys are assuming that there just won't be any more football," he said. "The guys are ready to stay out for the season, if necessary."

Oakland punter Ray Guy and Seattle's Jim Zorn and Steve Largent also have said they don't plan to strike.

"I've got bills to pay," said Guy. "Just because someone else's hand is in the fire doesn't mean I have to put mine in."

Fouts has been consistent in his rebellion against NFLPA Executive Director Ed Garvey and the union, often drawing criticism from union members. On Monday, Chargers linebacker Lynden King accused Fouts of "selling out" his teammates by not supporting the union.

But King toned down his remarks Tuesday, saying, "It took a lot of strength to say what he felt. It comes down to self-preservation. He's doing what he believes will help him most and we're doing what we believe is right."

But Cleveland Browns defensive back Clarence Scott and Minnesota Vikings quarterback Tommy Kramer had a brighter view.

"I would think it will be a short strike," said Scott, "because everybody on both sides needs the money."

"I don't expect it to last long," added Kramer.

One player, Kansas City quarterback Bill Kenney, thought the union would not buckle under but that there would, indeed, be NFL football quite soon.

"An average player in the NFL makes $6,000 a week, takes home maybe $4,000. The NFL owners are losing $1 million a week. I'm sure they won't stand for that," said Kenney. "That's why I'm sure they'll try to put on a scab game. Maybe scab is not the word but an amateur game."

If the owners do attempt to stage games during the strike, they will have a smattering of regulars available. In Pittsburgh, for instance, wide receivers John Stallworth and Lynn Swann and safety Donnie Shell reported to Three Rivers Stadium. San Diego quarterback Dan Fouts,

North Pitt

North Pitt coach B.T. Chappell did not waste any time — or words — informing his squad that its upcoming game with Southern Nash is just that — a game, no more, no less.

But, the fact remains that when the Panthers take the field against Southern Nash a familiar face will be on the other sideline in the person of Pat Smith, the ex-North Pitt coach.

Smith left North Pitt two years ago to become an assistant at Southern Nash. He became head coach this season.

"I told our players Friday night when we go down there it is North Pitt High School playing Southern Nash, not Pat Smith against B.T. Chappell," Chappell said.

"It doesn't have anything to do with the coaches," Chappell added. "and (I told them) I didn't want to hear anything about it."

The game is the conference opener for both teams. North Pitt, coming off its second 6-6 tie last week, is 1-1-2.

Despite their record, the Firebirds worry Chappell. "They've played four 4-A teams and they could be a team just looking to break loose," he said. "I just hope they don't break loose against us."

The Firebirds use a split backfield on offense and a 6-2 defense. It is a team that relies more on deception than power.

"They like a lot of trick plays — misdirection plays, crossbacks and options. They rely on finesse," Chappell said. "They're not just going to line up and try to run over you."

The Panther defense appears ready for the challenge. North Pitt stopped West Craven three times inside the Panther 20 last week to preserve a 6-6 tie. Had it not been for a lackluster running game, the Panthers might have come away with the win.

"I thought our defense played a heck of a ballgame," Chappell said. "But the thing that bothers us is we haven't done anything with our running game. We've got to get our offensive blocking down so we can control the football better."

Ayden-Grifton

Ayden-Grifton defeated Farmville Central, 24-6, and Farmville Central rolled by D.H. Conley, 40-0, which means...nothing — at least to Ayden-Grifton coach Dixon Sauls.

But, it may mean something to his Chargers, which is exactly what Sauls must guard against.

"We're not really concerned with their past games," Sauls said. "But, as coaches we must guard against (taking a team lightly). (Coaches) tend to be more pessimistic than our players."

"But, we feel Conley is a capable team. Conley is always motivated to play Ayden-Grifton," Sauls added. "Our players must be motivated to play. We'd like to be 4-0 after the game, not 3-1."

"But," Sauls said, "if we're not motivated to play it could be a long night."

Ayden-Grifton, unbeaten in three games, has yet to have a long night this season — and few expect the Chargers to suffer through on Friday night. But, Sauls remains wary.

"We respect every opponent," Sauls said. "We feel we can beat any opponent on our schedule and that any opponent on our schedule can beat us. We've always looked at it that way."

The Chargers go into the game coming off their first shutout of the year. "For the first time since I've been at Ayden-Grifton we achieved all the goals we set out to (do on defense)," Sauls said.

The Charger defense, which has given up just 13 points in three games, held North Lenoir to 69 yards total offense — the second straight week A-G has held an opponent to under 100 yards.

The Ayden-Grifton offense had its most productive night in yardage (374) but was hurt by penalties, a fumble and missed assignments. Still, it the Chargers did manage to score 20 points or more for the third straight week.

"We moved the ball extremely well up and down the field but we had too many penalties and too many breakdowns," Sauls said.

Donlan, Garvey Waiting...

same amount over four years and tied it to a wage scale.

"They don't even complain about the money. We're there in terms of the money," said Donlan. "Now, in terms of repackaging it, we've told them this across the table: 'We'll be happy to repackaging it. We're not married to this.'"

"They told us, 'You've got to put money in the players' pockets now.' Well, the career adjustment program did that. Then they said, 'You've got to deal with seniority, longevity.' We thought we did that by giving more money to the older players."

According to Garvey, the managers still "have to respond in a meaningful way to our counter-proposal."

Meanwhile, the management council told the 28 teams that players will not be paid, starting with the third week of the season. They also will not be allowed to use their team's facilities.

Violations, the council said, could cost teams fines, suspensions or future draft choices.

Donlan said it could not be characterized as a lockout because it came in response to the union's strike call. If enough striking players express an interest in returning, the facilities would be opened and the league would try to play its games with those players and squads filled out with rookies and free agents, he said.

"Obviously we're going to have to take a hard look at the people who will be available," he said. "... if the league feels it can put on NFL-caliber football, then at that point in time, we'll play football."

Fans' Ire At Players Over NFL Strike Not Surprising

By WILL GRIMSLEY AP Special Correspondent

Most baseball fans still look upon professional athletes as grown men playing kids' backyard games in short pants and popping bubble gum when they get bored.

Thus it's not hard to understand why they are turned off by the current players' strike in the National Football League.

"What do these dummies mean going on strike?" bellowed a jeweled middle-aged man on national TV, which was checking the public's pulse over the temporary shutdown of its Sunday afternoon and Monday night fall diversion.

"I'm retired. It costs me 40 bucks every time I take my family to a game. These jokers are getting paid outlandish salaries. Who do they think they are, anyhow?"

You could poll 1,000 of the cross-section population and chances are you would find less than 100 who think the NFL players have a case. Few are willing to examine the issues and circumstances. Rarely does the fan — whether the strike involves baseball as a year ago, teachers or railway engineers — place any of the blame in the lap of management.

It's human nature. Anything that inconveniences Mr. Average America triggers a loud and angry yelp, and who takes the heat? The guy out front, whether he be the player in a big arena or a laborer on the lathe. Nobody chooses to look behind the corporate doors to examine the ledgers from which such disputes might rise.

This is not to say that the strikers — whether they be football players or car makers — are always right. Actually, the original demand by Ed Garvey's NFL Football Players Association for 55 percent of the clubs' gross revenues was outright ludicrous and there can be little sympathy for the suggested fixed pay scale, currently a roadblock in negotiations.

This would obviate individual merit and put everybody into bland categories. Club owners are right in rejecting it out of hand. But it would be equally objectionable to the quality players.

The most sensible viewpoint emanating from the strike aftermath came from the Philadelphia Eagles' Coach Dick Vermeil, who insisted he would refuse to coach a scab team unless ordered to do so by Commissioner Pete Rozelle.

Asserting that the players' right to strike was "the American way," the normally conservative, militant disciplinarian added: "We have raised people — your sons, yourself, me — to think that when things aren't right they ought to strike. School teachers do it. Everybody does it. Now because a football player does it, it is thought degrading to the profession."

America is a combination of capital and labor. One man puts up his money, the other sells his skills. Each is of equal importance. Both must seek a level of compatibility to survive.

So fans, understandably disappointed, should moderate their judgment.

A-G Tied For 16th In First Prep Poll

By The Associated Press

Two defending state playoff champions are among the three leaders in the first Associated Press high school football poll of the season in North Carolina.

Burlington Williams, two-time defending state 3A champion, and Randleman, which won the 2A title a year ago, are leaders in their classes of the poll. Voting is conducted by a statewide panel of sportswriters.

The 4A leader is Asheville, which received only one of 16 first-place votes but totaled 88 points — three more than runner-up Fayetteville Pine Forest, which had four first-place votes.

The defending 4A playoff champion, South Mecklenburg, is ranked 15th this week. The Sabres lost their opening game to Kannapolis but have won two straight since.

The race in 4A is tight, with East Forsyth and Rocky Mount tied for third place, six points behind Asheville.

In 3A, Kannapolis trails Williams by four points, and Statesville is another six points behind. Those three teams are clear-cut leaders over others in the class.

Here is how a statewide panel of sportswriters voted this week in the Associated Press poll of N.C. high school football teams. First-place votes are in parentheses, followed by points — which are awarded on a basis of 10 for first place, 9 for second, then 8, 7, etc.

Reflector Rankings

Reflector rankings are based on points accumulated by wins. Team values are one point per "A" ranking (4-A, 3-A, etc.) plus one for each of its wins. For example: a 3-A team with a 7-3 record for the season is worth 10 points for each team which beats it. Earlier season rankings are more likely to change quickly.

Phillips Calls For Single School Administration

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Superintendent of Public Instruction Craig Phillips has urged legislators to consider reorganizing public education, including the consolidation of the state's splintered powers under one, strong administrator.

"It is 'broke' and it is past time in North Carolina that the governing structure for elementary-secondary education be 'fixed,'" Phillips said.

Phillips made his remarks at Tuesday's opening of hearings by the General

J.D. Mobley Is Recognized

J. David Mobley, an environmental engineer with EPA's Industrial Environmental Research Laboratory at the Research Triangle Park, received Pollution Engineering Magazine's 1982 Five-Star Award today for his work on a cost-saving pollution control process.

Mobley, of Raleigh, is the son of Mrs. J.H. Mobley of Winterville and is a graduate of Winterville High School. He is married to the former Peggy Smith of Greenville.

The Five-Star Awards were created six years ago to recognize outstanding scientific contributions in the design and development of products and systems used in the pollution control field. Fifty awards are given each year.

The process developed at EPA-Research Triangle involves the use of dibasic acids, waste by-products from adipic acid manufacturing to increase the effectiveness of "scrubbing," a pollution control technique.

Assembly's Select Committee on Education. The panel was named after Senate leaders this year pushed and then backed off a bill that would have put the education controller — and all education finance authority — directly under the governor's office.

Phillips, who is an elected official, has recommended three proposals for changing the structure, including one that would make his job appointed by the state Board of Education.

But Phillips said he preferred a less dramatic change that would keep his job as an elective office and consolidate authority — including budget powers now in the hands of an independent controller — under the superintendent.

Currently, the superintendent is a constitutional officer elected by the people who works with, but is independent of, the state Board of Education, which is appointed by the governor. Financial matters are handled by the controller, which reports to the board and is independent of the superintendent.

Phillips said his first recommendation, consolidating authority under his office, could be accomplished by legislative action. His second proposal would make the superintendent serve as chairman of the state board and could also be accomplished with legislation. His third plan, with the superintendent selected by the board, would require a state constitutional amendment.

In making his recommendations, Phillips cited the strong structures of the University of North Carolina system and the community colleges system. He said the public and interested groups "are all crying for clarification, strengthening and reorganizing the structure for educational leadership" comparable to those systems.

Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir, cochairman of the panel and powerful chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, said the select committee would make a recommendation to the General Assembly in January on reorganizing administration of the school system.

Hardison was a backer of the plan to move the controller's office, but he said he would consider the broader revisions offered by Phillips and others.

"We're looking at the whole thing — not just the controller," Hardison said. "We might even recommend some constitutional changes."

LONDON (AP) — The Philippines government has tortured and killed hundreds of political opponents of President Ferdinand Marcos in the last 18 months, Amnesty International said Tuesday.

The London-based human rights organization said it investigated the alleged abuses in the Philippines last November.

Marcos has said during a visit to the United States this month that if there were any human rights violations in his country, the guilty were punished. A government official with the president Tuesday in New York declined comment on the Amnesty International report.

Custody Given To Homosexual

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The state Supreme Court has ordered a judge to award custody of twin boys to their homosexual father, saying his sexual preference does not prevent him from being a good parent.

The ruling Tuesday said the father has been discreet about his lifestyle, and ordered a lower court to award him custody of the 11-year-old boys, who have been living with grandparents since 1977.

The ruling contrasted with a high court opinion earlier this year denying custody of a 2-year-old girl to a woman having an open lesbian relationship. That ruling cited the age of the girl and noted that she would share the bedroom of her mother and the lover.

Treasure Hunters Won't Find Gold On Awa Maru

By DANIEL F. GILMORE

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Shortly before midnight, April 1, 1945, the submarine USS Queenfish torpedoed and sank the Japanese freighter Awa Maru off China with the loss of 2,003 lives.

Although the Pacific war was still raging, the vessel had been guaranteed safe passage by the United States. Its sides and decks were clearly marked with floodlighted white crosses.

The sinking was a devastating blow to the Japanese because the ship was carrying vitally needed materials, VIP passengers and urgently needed technicians.

It was also a shock for the U.S. Navy, which had guaranteed safe passage, and which feared that vengeance would be taken out on American prisoners of war held by the Japanese.

Parts of the story of the Awa Maru have been told over the intervening years, with reports the freighter was carrying 40 tons of gold bullion, five cases of diamonds, 40 cases of mixed jewels, precious metals, priceless artifacts and even fossil remains of China's long-lost Peking man.

That excited post-war American treasure hunters, who by the 1970s estimated that with appreciation, there was booty down there worth up to $10 billion.

A definitive version of how it all began and what happened has now been published by Proceedings, a publication of the U.S. Naval Institute, an unofficial but authoritative society based in Annapolis, Md.

The author, David D. Lowman, is a consultant for the top secret National Security Agency from which he retired in 1977. The NSA, which deals in codes, recently declassified certain intercepted and decoded Japanese wartime messages, including 122 referring to the Awa Maru. These heretofore secret communications form the basis of Lowman's story about the ill-fated freighter and the unfortunate commander of the U.S. submarine that sank it. He also details post-war salvage operations which finally revealed the Awa Maru carried cargo of only pig iron and coal when sunk.

As the war in the Pacific drew to a close, the United States became increasingly worried about American POWs held by the Japanese.

"With its merchant fleet swept away, Japan was having great difficulty supporting its own troops, much less the thousands of allied POWs still held in captivity," Lowman wrote.

"Through neutral Switzerland, the United States proposed to supply 2,000 tons of relief supplies for these POWs with guaranteed safe passage to any Japanese ship that transported the goods."

The Japanese quickly accepted the proposal, Lowman said, "as a sure means of getting desperately needed supplies to hard-pressed troops in the south and to return key personnel to the homeland. It also presented a heaven-sent opportunity to transport any other cargo of particular concern — gold bullion, for example."

The United States delivered 2,000 tons of Red Cross packages to a Soviet Siberian port — the Russians were not yet at war with Japan — and two Japanese merchant ships were dispatched to pick up POW food.

The Japanese freighter Hoshu Maru safely transported 275 tons to Shanghai. The Awa Maru, carrying the rest, had a more complicated itinerary, taking it to Hong Kong, Taiwan, Saigon, Singapore, some Indonesian ports and then return to Japan.

The Awa Maru had a normal cargo capacity of 11,000 tons and could accommodate far more than the 1,725-ton Red Cross shipment it took on at the Siberian port.

Awa Maru's exact schedule was transmitted to the United States via the Swiss. The U.S. Navy dispatched a message to all submarines in the Pacific — in plain language instead of code — to allow the Japanese ship to pass unmolested.

Cmdr. Charles Elliott Loughlin was skipper of the Queenfish and en route from Hawaii to Saipan when the first messages on the Awa Maru were transmitted in plain language to all U.S. submarines in the Pacific.

"Atmospheric conditions during the three days the message was transmitted were so bad that the Queenfish never received a readable version," Lowman said. Those messages specified the exact route and schedule of the Awa Maru.

The communications officer was not concerned at not being able to read the traffic, he said, "because important messages were never sent without encipherment."

When the Queenfish arrived at Saipan, however, the same message was again repeated three times a day for three days. "For reasons never fully explained the message was filed and not shown to Loughlin," according to Lowman.

But when at sea again on a wolfpack patrol with the USS Sea Fox, this enciphered message was received:

LET PASS SAFELY THE AWA MARU CARRYING PRISONER OF WAR SUPPLIES X SHE WILL BE PASSING THROUGH YOUR AREAS BETWEEN MARCH 30 AND APRIL 4 X SHE IS LIGHTED AT NIGHT AND PLASTERED WITH WHITE CROSSES.

"The skipper did see this message but unfortunately it was addressed to all submarines in the Pacific from Australia to the Aleutian Islands and did not stipulate the course of the Awa Maru," Lowman wrote. "The message made sense only if one had seen the previous messages on the subject. Loughlin had not."

On April 1, the Queenfish was alerted by the Sea Fox that she had attacked a small Japanese convoy. Lowman's account continues:

"Hoping to get in on some of the action, Loughlin sped through the fog toward the enemy. Shortly before midnight, the Queenfish picked up a radar blip at 17,000 yards, the distance at which Japanese destroyers were normally detected.

"Moreover, the target was moving at 16 knots — not zig-zagging — and heading directly for the area in which the Sea Fox had made her attack.

"Loughlin approached to within 1,200 yards ... launched four torpedoes set at a depths of three feet with a 300-yard spread — the kind of attack one would employ against a destroyer. Four distinct thuds told the Queenfish's crew the results of her attack.

"The Queenfish picked up only one man, a steward named Kantora Shimoda who gasped out to Loughlin that the Awa Maru was the ship that the submarine had destroyed," Lowman said.

Loughlin, described by Lowman as "one of the finest submarine captains in the Navy," was ordered back to Hawaii for court-martial. He managed to convince the U.S. naval board that in view of the information he had, the attack was warranted. He was found guilty only of negligence and given a letter of admonition.

Adm. Chester W. Nimitz, U.S. Navy commander in the Pacific, was said to have been so enraged at the light sentence — he feared Japanese reprisals against American POWs — that he wrote the board members letters of reprimand which, author Lowman said, "were far more serious punishment than Loughlin had received."

In 1976, the San Diego Union reported that an American syndicate, including former astronaut Scott Carpenter and Charles A. Lindbergh's son, Jon, was attempting to obtain salvage rights to the Awa Maru from the People's Republic of China.

They believed persistent reports and rumors that the freighter was carrying a fortune in gold and other valuables plundered from areas the Japanese had conquered.

Instead of granting salvage rights, the Chinese secretly began efforts to salvage the Awa Maru's cargo.

In 1979, the Chinese Vice Minister for Communications told Japanese reporters the Awa Maru had been located in 1977 and salvage operations were continuing.

By January 1980, Peking was announcing that over a three-year period the Chinese had made 10,000 dives and cleared some 10,000 cubic meters of mud from around the Awa Maru, which was lying in 30 fathoms (180 feet) in the Taiwan Strait. Ten ships and more than 700 men, including 100 divers, were at the site.

But by September 1980, the Communications Ministry announced dejectedly that no treasure had been found. The Awa Maru was primarily carrying coal and pig iron.

"However," Lowman reported, "a special shipment ... was under the care of two policemen: six boxes of confiscated opium, 19 boxes of whiskey and 52 boxes of miscellaneous goods. The special handling accorded these goods, along with their police guard, undoubtedly added more grist for the rumor mills in later years."

Bowman said World War II diplomatic and military messages sent by the Japanese, intercepted and recently declassified, show that the Japanese in early 1945 "were indeed shipping gold bullion, but not to Japan. It was going from Japan to the conquered territories in a last-ditch attempt to shore up their rapidly disintegrating (economic) positions in these areas."

"Thus, the two relief ships with their guaranteed safe passage were seized on to ship bullion. Fifteen tons of gold were loaded on the Hoshi Maru and an unknown quantity on the Awa Maru. In addition $15 million in currency were brought on board each vessel."

The Hoshi Maru delivered her gold and the Red Cross parcels to Shanghai. The Awa Maru unloaded its parcels and gold at Singapore from where it was sent overland to Bangkok.

On March 18, 1945, U.S. intelligence intercepted a message from the Japanese ambassador in Bangkok to Tokyo: FORTY BOXES OF GOLD BULLION ARRIVED ON 16TH AND WERE HANDED OVER TO THE BANK OF SIAM.

When Japan surrendered Aug. 14, the Japanese Foreign Ministry sent a message to the United States through Switzerland demanding $52.5 million for the loss of lives and material aboard the Awa Maru. No gold was listed in the inventory. By 1949, the Japanese had dropped their demand.

"Commander Loughlin went on to a splendid naval career," Lowman said, retiring as a rear admiral in 1968.

Search For A Hero

Today is Raoul Wallenberg Day, set aside to honor the man who saved 100,000 people during World War II. Wallenberg, a native of neutral Sweden, used his diplomatic immunity to rescue Hungarian Jews from concentration camps. To do this he carried unarmored aboard Nazi trains to give Jews special Swedish passports. Then he insisted that Nazi guards let those people go. After the war Soviet soldiers arrested Wallenberg and he never returned. Soviet leaders say the arrest was a mistake and that he died in 1947. But some Soviet prison camp survivors say Wallenberg is still alive there. And so the search for the man Jews called "saviour-angel" continues today.

DO YOU KNOW — About how many Jews did the Nazis kill in World War Two?

TUESDAY'S ANSWER — An earthquake destroyed much of San Francisco in 1906.

 Pass Pass 1 NT Pass
 2 ♣ Pass 2 ♥ Pass

 Opening lead: King of ♣.

Since there is a little bit of larceny in all of us, a well-conceived swindle is often more appealing than a great technical exhibition. Our hero in today's hand is India's Mohan Arora.

North-South reached a normal four heart contract after a Stayman sequence. Note that North was too strong to bid two hearts. But if we were to change the ace of spades into a low spade, North would not have the values for a Stayman response. He would simply have to sign off in two hearts and risk losing a 4-4 spade fit.

Against Arora's four heart contract, West led the king of spades. Declarer realized that, if the diamond finesse failed, he would probably lose four tricks—a spade, a diamond and two clubs. Unless, that is, the defenders could be persuaded that there was no future for them in the club suit!

To help create that impression, declarer won the ace of spades at trick one and immediately led a club to his queen and West's king. As a result of this play, West, not unnaturally, placed declarer with the ace of clubs. Now it looked as if the only hope for defeating the contract lay in collecting two diamond tricks. In addition, those diamond tricks would have to be secured immediately, since one of dummy's diamonds would go away on declarer's "presumed" ace of clubs.

So West shifted to a diamond. However, to prevent his partner from going wrong, he led the king of the suit. A grateful declarer grabbed the ace, drew trumps and claimed the rest except for the unavoidable spade loser and so made an unexpected overtrick.

We tip our hats to the declarer, but we'll watch our wallets when he's around.

ONE SECOND FROM DEATH — Another is about to die as a rifle is put to its head in the drought-stricken Australian state of Victoria. Some 3,000 sheep were slaughtered because there is not enough grass to feed them, in one of the worst droughts in Australian history. (AP Laserphoto)

Birth Defects From Alcohol

WASHINGTON (AP) — Studies show that severe birth defects caused by alcohol consumed by mothers during pregnancy occur in as many as one in 600 babies, a government health official says.

Dr. Edward Brandt, assistant secretary for health, said women who want to have a baby should stop drinking. He said fetal alcohol syndrome can cause smaller-than-normal babies, very small head size and mental retardation.

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, SEPT. 23, 1982

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The early part of the day is filled with difficulties between persons in which greed may be the primary cause. The afternoon and evening gives you a chance to achieve success.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) A conversation with financial experts in the morning can prove helpful. Attend the social tonight and make new contacts.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) A credit matter does not work out right in the morning, but be patient and you'll get the backing you need later.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Handle private matters yourself and don't rely so much on others at this time. Remember, work comes before pleasure.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Keep out of any altercation between two associates and avoid trouble. Make serious plans for the future.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Obeying all rules and regulations that apply to you keeps you out of trouble now. Come to a better accord with associates.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Don't neglect your work to dash off to seek pleasure, but carry through in a steadfast and wise fashion. Express happiness.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Instead of worrying about some obligation, carry through with it in a conscientious manner and you'll get the right results.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You have to be careful in the handling of regular routines at this time. Take health treatments and improve your appearance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Show increased cooperation with co-workers and get much accomplished. Don't be too blunt with others now.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Make sure you can afford an expensive recreation you have in mind before you indulge in it. Sidestep an opponent.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Don't become involved in arguments with family members at this time. Strive for increased happiness.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Use good sense in the handling of money matters. Alter your budget so you can have more working capital in the future.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she must be taught to cooperate with others instead of fighting for everything that is desired, otherwise your progeny could have a difficult life. There's a marked ability to adapt to new conditions. A good education is a must.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Sees Decontrol As Price Help

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission says he favors total and immediate decontrol of natural gas prices as a way to drive down market prices. That view, aired Tuesday, contrasts with the position of consumer groups, some of which contend that immediate decontrol would cost consumers between $20 billion and $40 billion annually. Butler said he believes current distortions in the market have already driven gas prices above that of residual fuel oil, its chief competitor. He said under decontrol, prices would be forced downward because local utilities would fight to retain their industrial customers.

Two N. C. Plants Announce Closings: Idling 265

By The Associated Press
At least another 265 North Carolinians will be out of work in the next year as officials of two plants in the state have announced plans to shut down their operations. CF Industries announced

Monday that because of national economic losses, it is permanently shutting down its nitrogen products complex at Ahsokie. The plant employs 130 workers.

Meanwhile, the Homelite division of Textron Inc. will close a three-year-old manufacturing plant in Charlotte later this year, officials say. The plant employs about 200 people, and officials say about one-third of the plant's workers will be asked to transfer to plants in Gastonia and Greer, S.C. — leaving the remaining 135 will be without a job.

CF Industries dismantling of the Ahsokie plant will begin immediately, with the first 98 employees to be laid off Oct. 1. The other 30 or so employees will remain until March or April, when the plant will become a storage depot, he said.

The closing of the CF Industries plant in Hertford County will leave most of its 130 employees jobless and will also force the closing of the neighboring Carbonic Industries, which had used CF's waste gas, officials said.

By spring, CF's 42-acre manufacturing complex will be dismantled. In its place will be a storage terminal for nitrogen liquid fertilizer, requiring two to three employees.

Carbonic Industries, next door, has 10 employees who will be laid off.

CF spokesman Daniel Van Tassel blamed the company's economic difficulties on the price of natural gas and on foreign competition.

"You have ammonia imports (used for making competitor fertilizer) on the Gulf Coast from Russia at $75 per ton less than it costs us to produce it in North Carolina," he said.

The board of directors of the firm, which claims to manufacture one-fifth of the fertilizer used in North America, voted Friday to close the Ahsokie plant.

"We were enduring significant losses here and (we had) projected losses for 1983 of $11.4 million," Van Tassel said.

He said CF is considering closing more plants among its nine North American manufacturing plants. These include six nitrogen facilities — five in the United States and one in Canada.

The 200 employees at the Homelite plant in Arrowood-Southern Industrial Park learned of the closing Monday morning from Homelite president Franklin Maddux, who said later, "It was a business decision, a decision that had to be made."

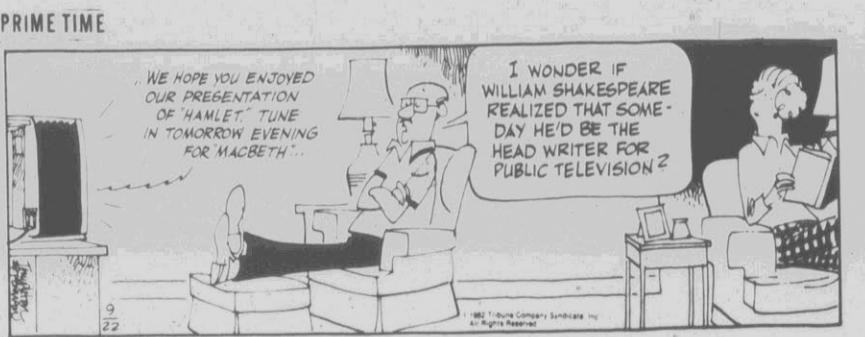

"As the economy has gone down, we've continued to scale back," said Maddux, whose Charlotte-based company is a world leader in the manufacture of chain saws, string trimmers and portable construction equipment.

Since late 1980, Homelite has undergone a series of layoffs, short schedules and job recalls to cope with poor sales.

The layoffs trim Homelite's payroll to about 3,400, down from 4,700 about 18 months ago.

Chapter Hears William Deans

The Down East Chapter of the Painting and Decorating Contractors of America held its monthly meeting at Western Sizzlin' No. 2 recently with William Deans of Nationwide Insurance as their guest speaker.

Deans discussed the basic types of insurance and their rates pertaining to the industry.

A report on the completion of the organization's first charity project was made and group members termed it a success. Contracting members of the PDCA painted the administration building hallway of the Eastern Carolina Vocational Center with paint provided by the associate members of the group (paint supply dealers).

The project totaled approximately $4,000 worth of material and labor.

According to PDCA members, the group wants to make this an annual project. Organizations needing this type of service are asked to call Jones Paints & Wallcovering at 756-7910 or the Paint Center at 756-7611.

The next meeting of the group will be Oct. 12.

Two 'Family' Shows To Debut

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Families remain creative fodder, but tonight, a series opener and a made-for-TV movie reaffirm that the Nelsons, Cleavers and Andersons are no longer the all-American tube families.

The series — "Family Ties" on NBC — clicks more often than not. The film — "Maid in America" on CBS — is too broad a farce and never amusing enough to connect for viewers.

The wrinkle in "Family Ties" is that the parents are hipper than their children. Elyse (Meredith Baxter Birney) and Steven Keaton (Michael Gross) are flower children from the '60s. They listen to Phil Ochs, enjoy backpacking, eat health food and wonder why nobody cares about issues anymore.

Their kids, two teen-agers and a 9-year-old, are stuck in a reverse generation gap. Alex, 17, (Michael J. Fox) carries a briefcase to school, hides the Wall Street Journal under his bed and plasters William F. Buckley on his wall.

The daughters (Justine Bateman and Tina Yothers) object to the parents' "pawing" (kissing) in the living room. They reject bean sprouts or anything alive on their dinner plates.

Liberal-conservative conflicts are inevitable here. In tonight's episode, Alex is smitten by a rich girl. He goes to her family's restrictive country club, despite his parents' objections. Alex just wants to go to a party; "I don't want to change the world," he says.

But Steven stretches the sitcom believability quotient by going to the club to retrieve his son. Later, he says the line between protection and interference can be blurry, and "I tripped over it tonight."

There is some clever writing in "Family Ties," but some problems come to mind about a series stressing a '60s-'80s time warp. Will the humor only appeal to the flower children and activists of the '60s? Will the show be able to progress from its one-joke theme?

If not, no matter how funny the material, it's bound to get tiring. The characters are going to have to make some concessions and reach some accommodations along the way.

Gross brings a relaxed naturalism to the father, but Ms. Baxter-Birney (who played Nancy in "Family") seems too young-looking to be the mother of two teen-agers.

"Maid in America" starts out as an annoying film, but is saved from disaster by a warm, genuine performance by Alex Karras. The former football star and "Monday Night Football" announcer plays Cal Bullington, a gentle man who answers an advertisement for a live-in maid.

The job comes open because the family's maid is depressed. Her antics may be some of the silliest, overdrawn TV moments this year, and the TV season doesn't officially begin until next week.

Buffington took care of his seven sisters and mother, but that doesn't impress Catherine Abel, a divorced lawyer living with her two children, grandmother, aunt and father. Mrs. Abel is played by Susan Clark, Mrs. Karras in real life.

Because of the rebuff, Cal files a reverse discrimination suit. The judge gives him the job, making for an unlikely family arrangement.

"Maid in America," a throwback to the romantic films of the 1930s-'40s, raises valid points about liberal hypocrisy and job discrimination. But it's too silly to be given serious consideration.

British TV Adding New Network In November

By ROBERT MUSEL
UPI Senior Editor
LONDON (UPI) — The farcical shadow boxing between Britain's new television network, Channel 4, and the long-established BBC would have been funny, old chap, had it not been so serious.

It finally ended with the announcement that the new channel will debut at 4:45 p.m. on Nov. 2. For weeks Channel 4 executives refused to name the day for fear the BBC would schedule a blockbuster against their opening programs.

That fear still persists but advertisers clamoring for space refused to accept "sometime in the first week of November" as a target.

"Remember 1955 when ITV (the first commercial network) started?" said Christopher Griffin Beale of Channel 4 daskly. "The BBC chose that very night to kill off Grace Archer (one of the key figures of the biggest audience soap opera in the country). We think they may try something like it again so we won't pinpoint the debut any closer than the first week in November."

The addition of Channel 4 will give Britain two TV channels financed by commercials, like the American networks, and two BBC channels financed by a $90 a year license fee paid by set owners. Most set owners, that is, because there are plenty of fee dodgers and BBC TV location trucks constantly patrol the streets of Britain peering electronically into homes which allege they do not own a screen.

There is unusual interest in Channel 4, here and abroad, since its chief executive, Jeremy Isaacs, was handed an assignment that must

He was given a brand new network and told that he had 60 hours a week to fill. How he filled the time was mostly his decision and now that most of the starting programs are known there is keen interest in whether mass audiences will accept what is innovative in his programming.

Isaacs' first big decision was to assign $6 million to a remarkable bi-weekly soap opera which, it is hoped, will run as long and be as successful as the ITV network's "Coronation Street", a ratings topper for most of its continuing 21-year run.

Isaacs' show is called "Brookside", the name of a huge new housing development in Liverpool, in which Channel 4 has purchased 13 new houses.

Six of these houses will constitute the "set" of the soap and the rooms have been adapted for TV cameras. The other seven houses will be the offices of the production company.

The cast will "move in" to their homes when the real tenants of Brookside move in and Isaacs envisions his actors working the gardens of their houses, going about their soapish triumphs and tragedies in the midst of the real life of Brookside swirling around them.

Isaacs sees Channel 4 as complementary to ITV, which contributed $185 million to start him off in return for the right to sell commercials on his network. He will, for example, schedule ethnic minority and special interest shows opposite the big ITV ratings hits. But many shows will be pure Channel 4, as Isaacs perceives it, and designed to persuade 80 percent of the viewing audience to look at least some time each week.

Isaacs and his advisers started by thinking of the different audiences for TV and especially of the 15-to-30 age group and its needs.

"Channel 4 is very much about talking to young people," said Griffin Beale.

Many of the programs are being made for young people by young people on such topics as rock music, drama, films, politics, sport and current affairs in line with the fashionable delusion that the word "young" is a synonym for the word "good."

Channel 4 will have Britain's first hourlong nightly TV newscast with "significantly greater" in-depth treatment of subjects such as industry, science and technology which rarely squeeze into the half-hour format. Some news stories will be broadcast from abroad "so we can see ourselves as others see us."

There are programs for and by blacks, by specialists in Asian, African and South American affairs, for gardeners, car owners, house buyers, current affairs and for women. Even sports coverage will include such items as how other people play games — American football, for example.

Jazz Bones In Free Concert

The first of four Great Sounds From Downtown concerts on the Evans Street Mall will feature the ECU Jazz 'Bones. The concert will begin at 12:15 p.m. Thursday and is to last for a little more than an hour.

Patrons attending the free concert can bring their own lunches or purchase one from a local merchant. Tables and beverages will be provided without charge to those attending the concert.

The Jazz 'Bones, an outgrowth of the larger ECU Jazz Ensemble, was organized in 1975 — five trombonists with a rhythm section. The group has performed for schools in the two Carolinas, for the Kinston and Pitt-Greenville Arts Councils, the N.C. Music Educators, the Eastern Trombone Workshop at Florida State University, at the Raleigh and UNC Jazz Festivals, and at numerous other musical gatherings.

Three other free lunch-time Great Sounds From Downtown concerts on the Evans Street Mall will be offered at early dates.

Fifth Birthday Of 'Jazz Alive'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — National Public Radio's acclaimed "Jazz Alive!" series will mark its fifth birthday Oct. 2 with four hours of highlights from past programs. Pro Football Scores In Last Week's Nielsens

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Pro football, its season interrupted for the first time by a players' strike, scored big in the television ratings race by winning three spots in the Top 10 in the week ending Sept. 19, according to figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co.

In the networks' prime-time competition, meanwhile, ABC finished in first place for the second time in three weeks, finishing ahead of CBS, which fell to a distant second place despite having the highest-rated show of the week, "60 Minutes."

ABC's opening Monday Night Football game, Pittsburgh vs. Dallas, grabbed the highest rating for a season opener since the series began in 1970. ABC said it also had the highest viewing record for the entire series with 20.7 million households per average viewing minute.

The Monday night game was second overall in the Nielsen ratings. CBS' regional games were third and CBS' postgame show was fourth. Another ABC game finished 13th.

ABC's rating for the week was 16.7 to 14.4 for CBS and 13.2 for NBC. The networks say that means in an average minute of prime time, 16.7 percent of the nation's homes with television were tuned to ABC.

ABC and CBS equally shared the Top 10 shows. The rating for CBS' "60 Minutes" was 25.3. Nielsen says that means in an average minute of the show, 25.3 percent of the TV-equipped homes in the country were tuned to CBS.

Sunday's Emmy Award program on ABC finished seventh. Its competition on CBS was "Seven Brides for Seven Brothers," a pilot movie for the new series of the same name, and the contemporary family drama finished in ninth place in the ratings.

Both CBS and NBC shared the five least-watched shows for the week: "Mr. Merlin," CBS; "Moonlight," CBS; "Father Murphy," NBC; "Steeler and the Pittsburgh Kid," NBC; and "CBS Reports," CBS.

Here are the 10 highest-rated shows:

"60 Minutes," a rating of 25.3 representing 21.1 million homes; CBS; ABC Monday Night Football, Pittsburgh vs. Dallas, 24.9 or 20.7 million; ABC; CBS NFL Regional Football Games, 23.5 or 19.6 million; CBS; CBS NFL Football Postgame 2, 23.2 or 19.4 million; CBS; "Too Close for Comfort," 23.0 or 19.2 million; ABC; "Three's Company," 22.8 or 19 million; ABC; "The 34th Television Academy Awards," 21.6 or 18 million; ABC; "Hart to Hart," 21.3 or 17.7 million; ABC; movie: "Seven Brides for Seven Brothers," 19.7 or 16.4

CHANGE IN LOCATION OF POLLING PLACE WITHIN PRECINCT BELVOIR

PITT COUNTY NORTH CAROLINA

Pursuant to G.S. 163-128, Notice is hereby given of change in location of polling place in Belvoir Precinct, Pitt County, North Carolina. The administrative decision pertaining to this change is recorded in Minutes of meeting of the Pitt County Board of Elections dated August 27, 1982. Following excerpt from said minutes:

One of the purposes of this meeting was to further investigate proposed changes in locations of polling places for Belvoir Precinct - (et al). Elections for this Precinct have been held in the Belvoir Primary School. Upon an on-site investigation, the Board feels that the new fire station which has been completed within the precinct will be a much more satisfactory location for the Belvoir polling place, and is available. Centrally located within the precinct, easily accessible with good parking and other facilities.

The Supervisor was instructed to make submission of proposed change of location of polling place for the Belvoir Precinct to the Justice Department pursuant to Civil Rights Act of 1965.

The Belvoir Fire Station is located on the Southwest side of Highway 33 approximately 500 yds North of Belvoir crossroads and approximately 4 (4) miles North of the present polling place and is centrally located in the Belvoir Precinct.

This the 20 day of Sept., 1982.

How Tar Heel Representatives And Senators Voted

WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes Sept. 9-15.

HOUSE

AUTO EXHAUST — By a vote of 200 for and 184 against, the House adopted an amendment to give states another year before they must require mandatory vehicle inspections in metropolitan areas having dirty air. The emission-control inspection program, a part of the 1970 Clean Air Act, now is scheduled to be in full force by 1983. It affects areas of 29 states, some of which already have begun mandatory inspection. However, most affected states have delayed their programs, and the Environmental Protection Agency recently threatened North Carolina, Ohio, Tennessee, Kentucky, Illinois, Texas, Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin, Pennsylvania, Missouri and Nevada with enforcement action if they do not soon begin inspecting vehicles.

The amendment, which prohibits the EPA from spending money for this purpose during fiscal 1983, was attached to an appropriations bill for the Department of Housing and Urban Development, the EPA and other agencies. The measure (HR 6956) was passed and sent to the Senate.

Sponsor Doug Walgren, D-Pa., said, "There is no question that automobile emission inspection, in the eyes of the public, is an extremely unpopular program," and he added the responsibility for emission control should lie with automakers, not drivers.

Opponent William Green, R-N.Y., said it was wrong to use an appropriations bill to make substantive changes in the Clean Air Act, and he called the inspection program "a very important part of the process of cleaning up our air."

Members voting "yea" wanted to further delay mandatory emission-inspection programs required by the EPA.

Reps. Walter Jones, D-1, Eugene Johnston, R-6, W.G. Hefner, D-8, James Martin, R-9, James Broyhill, R-10, and William Hendon, R-11, voted "yea."

Reps. Ike Andrews, D-4, Stephen Neal, D-5, and Charles Rose, D-7, voted "nay."

Reps. L.H. Fountain, D-2, and Charles Whitley, D-3, did not vote.

PRESCRIPTION DRUGS — By a vote of 250 for and 132 against, the House failed to achieve the two-thirds majority needed to pass a bill designed primarily to give drug manufacturers longer patents on drugs they discover. One effect of the bill would have been to delay competition from generic drug manufacturers, who after the expiration of a patent generally market popular drugs at lower costs. The bill (HR 6444) required a two-thirds majority for passage because it was considered under a short-cut procedure that prohibited floor amendments. It sought to give manufacturers of federally regulated products up to seven additional years on their patent. The current patent term is usually 17 years.

Sponsor Robert Kastemeier, D-Wisc., said the bill protected consumer interests while assuring "more rapid technological innovation in the pharmaceutical and chemical industries..."

Opponent Barney Frank, D-Mass., said the bill would put generic drugs "further out of the reach of consumers."

Members voting "yea" favored longer patent terms for pharmaceuticals and other federally regulated products.

Jones, Whitley, Andrews, Neal, Johnston, Rose, Hefner, Martin, Broyhill and Hendon voted "yea."

Fountain did not vote.

BOAT SAFETY — The House defeated a bill (HR 6813) to apply the user's fee mechanism to the funding of the federal-state safety program for recreational boaters. Revenue from the 4-cents-a-gallon motorboat fuel tax was to have been used to pay the program's $20 million annual pricetag. The vote was 250 for and 137 against — shy of the two-thirds majority required for passage under the short-cut parliamentary rules in effect during debate.

GRAIN IMPORTERS

TOKYO (AP) — The Soviet Union was the world's leading grain importer during 1981 and Japan was No. 2, a spokesman for the Japan External Trade Organization reports.

Sponsor Gerry Studds, D-Mass., said that the 10-year-old safety program has been a success, but that it has not been funded lately. This bill would insure annual funding, he said.

The administration opposed the bill because it removed the boat safety program from the normal appropriations process, thus denying it power to control its cost.

Members voting "yea" favored a user's fee method of funding the safety program for recreational boaters.

Jones, Whitley, Andrews, Neal, Rose and Hefner voted "yea."

Johnston, Martin, Broyhill and Hendon voted "nay."

Fountain did not vote.

SENATE

ABORTION — By a vote of 47 for and 46 against, the Senate tabled and thus killed an amendment banning the use of federal funds for abortions and setting the stage for challenges to the 1973 U.S. Supreme Court ruling that permits abortions during the first three-months of pregnancy. The amendment had been proposed to a bill increasing the national debt limit (HJ Res 520), and its defeat signaled an end this year to efforts by conservatives to enact tough anti-abortion legislation.

Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., who supported tabling the anti-abortion measure, said "the onslaught against the Constitution is one of the most, if not the most, dangerous threats to this nation."

Opponent of tabling Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, said "I am one of those who believes that abortion is a heinous procedure in which a mother allows her child's life to be terminated."

Birth Control For Fleas, Too

MONTVALE, N.J. (UPI) — An enterprising manufacturer of insecticides is introducing a birth control product for fleas.

In the past flea control could only begin after the insects had reached the adult biting stage. And they can produce an entire new generation in 2½ weeks.

The new insecticide kills adult fleas and also stimulates what entomologists call "methoprene — a youth hormone" in flea pupae.

It keeps the newborns from leaving their final larval stage and developing into full-grown, biting insects, the manufacturer says. The product is also designed to control ticks, roaches, flies, spiders and flying moths.

An area being treated must be vacated for two hours after fogging, then aired for 30 minutes before being occupied again. Lasting protection is supplied for up to 75 days, says the manufacturer of d-CON Flea Kill.

Cites Risks In Rigorous Diets

NEW YORK (UPI) — Teen-age girls who diet too rigorously may create health problems for themselves, says Elizabeth Rodgers, a magazine columnist.

In her monthly Sex and Your Body column in Seventeen magazine, Ms. Rodgers says they risk eliminating their menstrual period as well as womanly appearance.

The attitude that "boy-like" bodies are better than feminine curves "is both unhealthy and sad," the columnist adds. "The real message (here) is one women have been receiving for a long time, that the male biological model — which is never 'bothered' by menstruation or rounded thighs that bulge in jeans — is superior to the female model. It simply is not true."

In addition, elimination of the menstrual period may signal a severe nutritional imbalance, Ms. Rodgers says.

Small Device To Hunt Glaucoma

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — A small device with a long name may help determine if a person is subject to glaucoma.

Through the use of an oculocerebrovasculometer (OCVM), by Digilab, doctors can now measure and record eye pressure in a painless, quick and accurate manner. The accuracy comes from a small pressure transducer that converts the pressure signals into electrical signals for recording and analysis.

Pressure in the carotid arteries, the major blood paths to the brain, can tell the doctor a lot. Since a major branch of the carotid artery flows to the eye, sensing the pressure at the cornea is important. By comparing the blood pressure of the eye to the blood pressure traditionally taken at the arm, a physician can spot the presence or absence of carotid artery blockage. Remedial action against glaucoma or stroke may then be taken.

A Big Cache Of Stored Cognac

COGNAC, France (AP) — This town in the southwest of France currently holds the equivalent of 1 billion, 50 million bottles of French cognac aging in oak casks.

Many of these casks have been aging for over 400 years, when cognac production was discovered accidentally by alchemists trying to turn non-precious metals into gold.

The town's cache represents enough cognac to supply every country in the world for seven years except Albania, which imports no cognac at all.

Monopoly On Mail Delivery Is Protected By Law

By JEFFREY MILLS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — In 1976, Patricia Brennan

founded a company offering same-day delivery of letters within the Rochester, N.Y., business district for 10 cents

FORBIDDEN — Patricia Brennan of Rochester is on her way (in this file photo) to make same-day deliveries of letters within the Rochester, N.Y. business district. Her company and other private mail services competing with the U.S. Postal Service have since been closed. (AP Laserphoto) instead of 13 cents apiece — faster and cheaper than the Postal Service.

Within 2½ years, the P.H. Brennan Hand Delivery Co. was closed, after the Postal Service enforced laws giving it a monopoly on delivering mail.
"We did not even know we were in violation of the law," recalled Mrs. Brennan, who was then 21. She fought a legal battle all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court over the issue, but the court refused to hear her final appeal.
The Postal Service has forced many other letter

Urge Donating Outdated Food

BOSTON (AP) — The president of the Unitarian Universalist Association urges the nation's supermarket chains to donate outdated food to the nation's hungry in every state.
The Rev. O. Eugene Pickett, head of the liberal denomination, sent telegrams to officials of 15 leading food chains asking them to start distributing excess perishables such as dairy products, fruit and vegetables.
He commended Giant Food for agreeing to start such a pilot program at some of its stores in the Washington, D.C., area and Safeway for starting such a program in Seattle.

delivery companies out of business, usually by notifying them that their service violated the "private express statutes."
"In most cases, requesting discontinuation is enough," said Postal Service attorney Charles D. Hawley. "They say, 'We didn't know there was anything wrong with it, but now that we do know, we'll stop.'"
The Pony Express of the 19th century, one of the most colorful chapters in American history, was a private enterprise. Riders took messages from Missouri to California by horseback before the transcontinental railroad rendered the service obsolete.
The Pony Express had a cooperative relationship with the Post Office Department, but when the mail agency acts to eliminate any competition, it can cite two centuries of precedents for its exclusive legal right to carry the mail, dating back to the Continental Congress of 1782.
Supporters of a Postal Service monopoly say there should be one nationwide postal system that serves everyone for the same prices. Thus, a letter to a remote area or one crossing the nation requires the same 20-cent stamp as traveling across town, even though the long-distance letter takes far more work.
These supporters say that if the monopoly were broken, private companies would accept only the profitable, easy-to-deliver mail and leave the rest to the Postal Service.

"The only reason to retain the private express statutes should be that they are needed in the public interest," Postmaster General William F. Bolger told a Senate hearing earlier this year.
"Even though postal services are now largely paid for directly through postage, the American people still regard their mail system as more than simply a matter of dollars and cents. They see its services as part of their rights as citizens," he said.
If there were a number of competing local or regional services, "How would mail exchanges be assured? How would mail forwarding be provided for the millions who move every year? How would the sanctity and security of the mails be protected? Would the public still be protected against the mailing of obscenity and the like and against mail-order deceptions?" Bolger asked.
Sen. Steven D. Symms, R-Idaho, is sponsoring a bill that would repeal the statutes. He would like to see private companies competing against the Postal Service, even though he says the service is the best mail agency in the world and "has, for the most part, met our national needs quite adequately."
The Symms bill is given no chance of passage in the waning days of the 97th Congress. If the measure is given serious consideration next year, it likely will be opposed vigorously by representatives of rural areas, traditional supporters of the postal monopoly.

A Symms staff aide, who requested anonymity, said the bill was a vehicle for attracting ideas on possible ways to change the postal monopoly. The biggest boost for the Symms bill came from James C. Miller III, chairman of the Federal Trade Commission, who said he favors allowing private companies to deliver letters.
The Postal Service already has competitors, but not in delivery of letters. United Parcel Service is the most notable of these, having passed the Postal Service in volume of parcel deliveries.

When asked if the P.H. Brennan Hand Delivery Co. ever lost a letter, Mrs. Brennan replied, "Not one and never late." She said that when the Postal Service threatened her customers with legal action, "I got more business than ever because many of my customers were lawyers," she said.

Mrs. Brennan, who now teaches science in an elementary school, backs the Symms bill.
"When federal law attempts to regulate the affairs of business and restrict private competition in areas where it is unable to provide adequate public service, it becomes necessary to repeal or amend the laws which are contrary to the public good," she said.

Waikiki Is Battling To Regain Past

By GORDON SAKAMOTO HONOLULU (UPI)

First-time visitors to Hawaii generally head for Waikiki, envisioning an exotic centerpiece in the tropical paradise vacation they saved for and dreamed of.

But what do they find? Mazes of hotels and condos hogging the skyline, snarled, noisy traffic along Kalakaua Avenue, the supposedly picturesque boulevard parallel to the one-mile stretch of famed beach. The beach is back there somewhere behind the neon, concrete and human obstacle courses.

"A parking space is hard to find. People jostle for space on the sidewalks, in the arcades, and on the beaches. Hawkers peddle sex, tours, religious salvation, time-sharing vacation condos and souvenirs to those who pass by."

The speaker is Honolulu's mayor, who among others has determined to restore Waikiki to something resembling the vacationer's romantic dream.

It's going to take awhile, Mayor Eileen Andersen says, but she pledges that one day Waikiki will be cleaned up, cleared out and quieted down.

The maze of high-rise hotels that have haphazardly sprung up the last three decades will continue to dominate the skyline, but the city plans big changes where possible at the classic white-sand and swaying-palm stretch of blue Pacific beach.

The idea is to peel away much of the commercial clutter, tackiness and overcrowding and make the place more "people-oriented."

The biggest change envisioned is the transformation of Kalakaua Avenue into a strollers' mall, with most motor traffic barred and rerouted and controlled "people-movers" the only vehicles allowed.

"Planting and landscaping would be added throughout the area," the mayor said.

Trampled, ragged parks along the beach would be restored and their upkeep improved. New "mini-parks" would be added.

Mrs. Anderson first proposed "Waikiki 2000" — named for her turn-of-the-century targeted completion date — last year. The plans are a composite of designs for improvements never carried out. She says there must be no further delays.

"This neglect of Waikiki can and will have a devastating effect on our economy and our visitor industry unless we resolve to do something about it," she said.

One step toward a more wholesome Waikiki already is at hand.

A bill to limit sidewalk peddling, a constant source of irritation to residents as well as visitors, is before the City Council and a city-sponsored statute to discourage prostitution through stiffer penalties has been enacted by the state Legislature.

In addition, inspections and issuance of citations for building and zoning code violations in Waikiki have been increased.

As it is, Waikiki for many is endangered by becoming what vacationers seek to escape — from both shores of the Pacific.

A Japanese couple on their first visit to Hawaii found Waikiki, according to the husband, "very much like Tokyo, very crowded with cars and people."

A California couple said they found Waikiki overbuilt and crowded but decided to stay in the beach district because Waikiki was something they had dreamed of all their lives. "It's crowded, true, but it adds to the excitement," said the woman. But her husband said, "There are just too many people for me there now."

MASSACRE EVIDENCE BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Bones of more than 1,000 people massacred under the former Khmer Rouge regime in Cambodia have been found at a village 62 miles southwest of Phnom Penh, the Cambodian News Agency reports.

Manila Can't Keep Pace With Needs

By RON REDMOND
MANILA, Philippines (UPI) — If there's consolation in knowing others have it worse, city dwellers in the West's big towns can get some solace from the state of things in Manila, dubbed the City of Man.

Manila, population seven million, is virtually bursting at the seams. An estimated 200,000 new residents annually move into the city's squalid squatter communities in search of a better life.

Municipal services simply can't keep up with the demand.

Traffic is impossible, pollution insufferable, roads unuseable, telephones inoperable and electricity occasional.

Horrendous traffic jams clog city streets for most of the day, delaying deliveries of vital goods, wasting millions of gallons of fuel annually and fraying the nerves of even the most hardened commuters.

A six-mile drive to work can take up to an hour, with the driver spending much of the journey sitting still in the sweltering heat amid billowing clouds of black diesel exhaust.

Traffic officials estimate 753,551 man hours and nearly 80,000 gallons of fuel are wasted every two hours during peak traffic periods.

The omnipresent passenger jeepney, a noisy, multi-hued Wurlitzer on wheels, gets much of the blame. Jeepneys, which carry about 10 passengers each, stop anywhere, anytime to pick up fares and have a general disregard for common road courtesy.

City officials earlier this year ordered a crackdown on jeepney jockeys. They backed down, however when the drivers threatened a strike which would have stranded commuters.

A thick, gray cloud of pollution hangs constantly over the city. The once beautiful waters of Manila Bay are a murky brown and reek of sewage.

On hot days, which are often, hundreds of people swim in the bay despite warnings from health officials that they risk cholera and other diseases in the polluted waters.

Then there are the daily power brownouts lasting three hours or more, uncoordinated street excavations throughout the city, and a notoriously undependable communications network.

Two of the country's largest citizen groups, the Employers Federation of the Philippines and the Consumers Federated Groups of the Philippines, recently appealed directly to President Ferdinand Marcos, whose wife, Imelda, is Governor of Metro Manila.

The two groups urged Marcos to act immediately on the "wanton dissipation of manpower and material resources" caused by "the multiple burdens of destructive brownouts, monstrous traffic congestion and outrageously inefficient telephone and telegraph services."

"The brownouts and street excavations have caused enormous losses in terms of reduced production, immobilized and idled manpower, and wasted material resources," the groups complained. "They have also caused exasperating traffic jams and numerous other inconveniences to all the people."

Gaping holes and trenches stand unguarded and unfilled for weeks as contractors dig up a total of 940 miles of roadway for new sewer and water lines. Much of the work is uncoordinated, with one contractor completing the job only to have another come along and dig the street up again.

"A visitor to this country may think that city streets have been ravaged by war, but seasoned Metro Manilans recognize the symptoms all too well," complained a Manila newspaper, Business Day, recently.

"Gaping holes, unfilled ditches and piles of rubble strewn along Manila's streets are all indications that the utilities are at it again."

New Diamond Mine Now Active Despite Surplus

By ROBERT WELER
Associated Press Writer

JWANENG, Botswana (AP) — On the fringes of the Kalahari Desert, a major new diamond mine that its owners say will out-perform the Big Hole of Kimberley has begun production despite a world-wide overabundance of the precious stones.

Why, when mines elsewhere have been closed, and a good part of the mine's production will have to be stockpiled?

"It says that we will have confidence in the future of diamonds," says Harry Oppenheimer, chairman of the De Beers diamond empire which owns the mine jointly with the Botswana government.

The 74-year-old Oppenheimer said an investment of more than $240 million in Botswana shows private industry's faith in this landlocked desert democracy north of South Africa.

There were reports last year that De Beers wanted to postpone the opening of the Jwaneng mine, 75 miles west of the capital of Gaborone. But a delay would have seriously hurt the economy of Botswana, and ultimately could have undercut the De Beers' diamond monopoly.

A major strength of the De Beers empire, which controls the sale of 80 percent of the world's rough diamonds through its Central Selling Organization, has been its willingness to protect producing countries by buying their stock during bad times. In 1980 the selling organization sold $2.723 billion in diamonds.

Oppenheimer has said De Beers, which operates South Africa's enormously productive Kimberley mine, benefits producers, sellers and the consumers, by keeping prices within reason, protecting producers and guaranteeing the long-term value of diamonds.

Also in Jwaneng's favor was the high quality of its diamonds. By 1985, production is expected to rise to 4.5 million carats annually, nearly double the current output. In 1981, this country of 840,000 people earned $150 million from diamonds, 60 percent of its exports.

In an interview in Johannesburg, Julian Ogilvie Thompson, De Beers' deputy chairman, said, "The diamond market is going through a difficult time, indeed its most difficult time for many decades."

He said far too much attention has been paid to the collapsed market for so-called one-carat, d-flawless, stones, which are so rare he calls them "museum pieces." These gems are round, colorless stones held strictly as investments. Only 38 newly graded stones were given d-flawless ratings in 1981 by the Gemological Institute of America.

Speculators pushed the prices of these stones from $7,000 in 1976 to $62,000 in early 1980 before they plunged to about $20,000.

Thompson, 48, said when investors and cutting centers realized these diamonds would not appreciate as rapidly as interest rates there was "a tremendous movement by people who perhaps had been overspeculating and overstocking in these better quality goods to reduce their stocks..."

He said investors should have compared the soaring prices with the prices for the rough stones set by the selling organization, which would have shown that they were unreasonable. The selling organization does not disclose its prices, but an aide to Thompson said the organization does announce price increases, which would have been a good barometer.

There still has been no sign of an upturn in the market for these investment stones, and likely won't be before interest rates fall further, Thompson said.

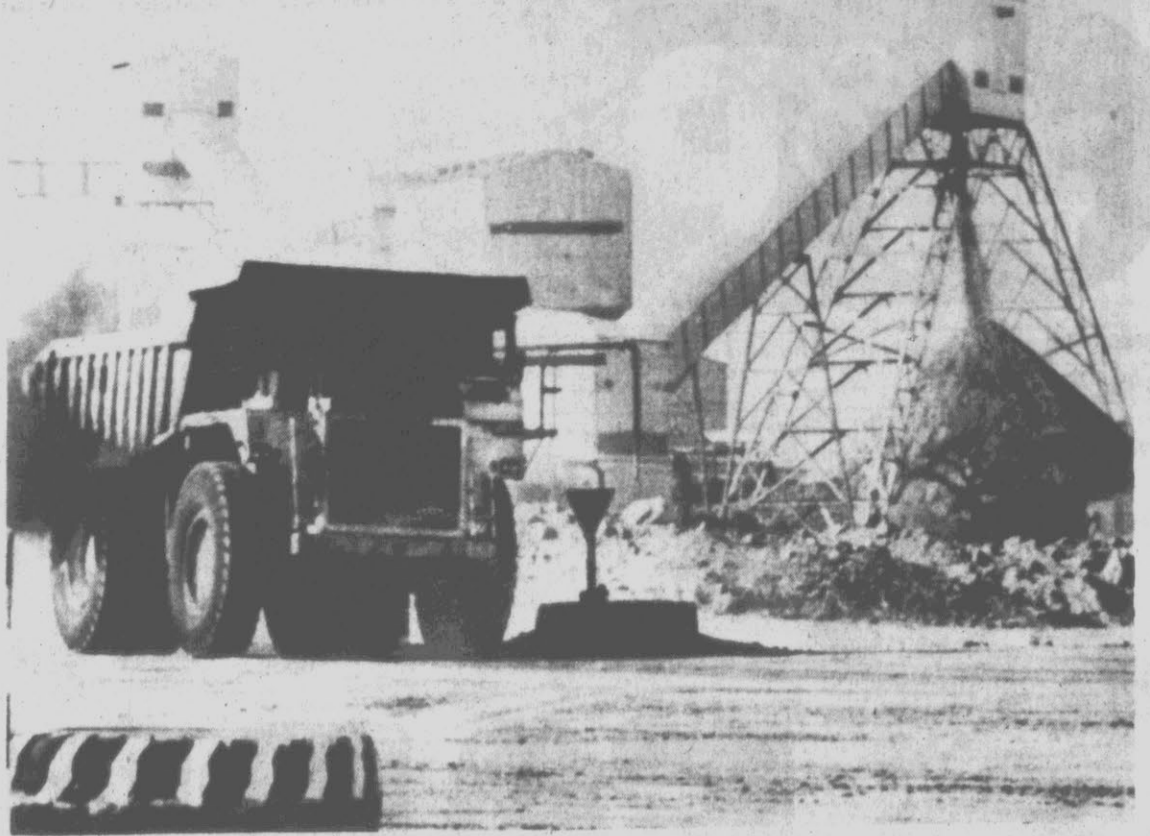

He added the selling organization, which reaped the bad publicity but not the benefits of those spectacular price increases, has held back other stones from the cutting centers and "stocks in the cutting centers had come down satisfactorily, come down very well... The industry is in an altogether much sounder position now."

De Beers has raised its prices by 2.5 percent for smaller, low quality rough stones because of a "very strong demand" in the main cutting centers, Thompson said.

De Beers also launched an aggressive advertising campaign in the United States, Europe and Japan which has paid off with increased sales in retail jewelry.

For Botswana, the Jwaneng mine, which opened Aug. 16, is the third diamond mine to be jointly operated by the government and De Beers. It created more than 4,000 jobs.

The Botswana government provided 20 percent of the financing for the mine, which is crucial to economic recovery here. In addition to being hit by the depressed diamond market, prices for its important copper and nickel exports have dropped and a drought has hurt the livestock industry.

Ear Infections Often Prove A Costly Condition

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Ear infections, known technically as "otitis media," are consuming $2 billion of the approximately $100 billion spent annually on healthcare in the United States, says a pediatric ear, nose and throat (ENT) specialist.

Reporting in The New England Journal of Medicine, Dr. Charles Bluestone, director of the department of otolaryngology at Children's Hospital here, says that ear infections add up to a much larger problem than many parents and pediatricians realize.

He cites physicians' costs, trips to the doctor's office, medication and surgical treatment of the condition in the tally.

tions can take a significant toll on a child's health, according to Bluestone.

Although many of the serious complications of otitis media have been virtually eliminated with the development of effective antibiotics, he says, today's children are plagued by e-fusion, or fluid, that builds up behind the eardrum during the course of the infection.

Some children experience this fluid for weeks or months, resulting in temporary hearing loss. For children with chronic ear infections marked by e-fusion, fluctuating hearing loss may threaten language development and eventually educational achievement, Bluestone warns.

100-Plus Cats To Need A Home

ST. ROMUALD, Quebec (AP) — An 84-year-old man has been given until Thursday to get himself, his two middle-aged children and 100-plus cats out of his house before a demolition crew arrives.

Officials of this town near Quebec City convinced Superior Court on Monday that many of the felines Andrea Gagnon has been sheltering pose a public health threat.

In an injunction, Justice Jacques Philippon also ordered the building's owner, Auguste Gagnon of Montreal, to tear it down.

See Pac-Man Hurting Sales

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Video games like Pac-Man may be taking a bite out of the toy industry, officials said Monday.

"Toy sales are a little sluggish" and off by about 5 to 10 percent from last year, said Tom Davis of the Southeast's largest toy wholesaler — Chapman-Harkey Co.

"We think electronic video games have soaked up some dollars that formerly went into toys and hobbies," he said. "When kids are putting quarters in those slots, it uses up discretionary income."

Employee Thefts Exceed Loss To Armed Robbery

By JAMES J. DOYLE
LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The robbers stealing $20 billion dollars a year from fast food outlets, convenience stores and service stations are neither masked nor carrying guns. They are the employees.

Such losses are usually called "shrinkage." Shrinkage runs about $2.2 million an hour, said Lee Neumann, president of Product Creation Associates, a security firm.

Neumann commissioned a study by Walker & Struman Research, Inc., of Los Angeles.

He said the survey was to determine attitudes of corporate operating and security management toward retail cash losses attributed to employees, thieves and robbers.

One of the facts the study uncovered is that employers estimated that 80 to 100 percent of their cash shrinkage was the fault of current employees.

"Based on a two percent employee theft rate per year," Neumann said, "convenience stores are losing $460 million on sales of $23 billion a year."

"Fast food chain operations are losing $700 million from their sales of $35 billion, and service stations are being taken for $2.4 billion of their $120 billion in sales each year."

A third of the convenience stores and service stations surveyed estimated their annual employee theft losses were $5,000 or more a year.

One half of the fast food outlets also estimated a yearly loss of $5,000 or more and 45 percent said they lost $10,000 or more at each restaurant.

All three groups said employee theft was the major cause of shrinkage with employee error a distant second.

Among the least important causes of shrinkage, they said, was the loss of merchandise from robberies.

Neumann said management often doesn't know the difference between a cash loss and an inventory loss.

"Just because the merchandise is missing when an inventory is taken doesn't mean it was stolen," he said.

"Certainly, hundreds of millions of hamburgers and chicken legs aren't walking out the door in someone's pocket. In most cases the food was sold but the clerk walks out the door with the money in his pocket."

A basic problem, he said, is the lack of sophisticated money-handling systems and hardware.

"Cash registers, point-of-sale terminals and electronic registers are not security devices. We need a revolution in money handling to eliminate both internal theft and armed robberies."

If money is loose or touchable, it's going to be stolen. The biggest reason for employee theft of cash, Neumann said, is simple temptation.

But there are other reasons. Workers in all-night stores have what he termed a "combat pay syndrome." They feel they've earned it because of the danger of armed robberies.

There are also the examples of supervisors who steal, lack of prosecution in most cases, and low wages — employees feeling they are not paid sufficiently.

In an attempt to deter thefts, retailers have turned to mirrors, limited access areas, television cameras, observation booths, armed guards, increased security staffs, bullet-proof cashier cages and undercover investigations.

Those measure have't helped a lot.

"More and more retailers are going to automated vending machines and improved inventory control, but this is a limited solution," he said.

"What is desperately needed is money-handling equipment that greatly reduces opportunities for stealing money — from the time the money is put in the register until it's logged at the bank."

"Under current conditions, the average clerk in the average store will steal $10 per shift," he said.

commissioned study surveyed only the three groups of businesses, Neumann had figures from previous studies:

—Shrinkage of all businesses amounts to $50 billion a year, or 2 percent of gross retail sales estimated at $2.5 trillion.

—Robberies account for only 10 percent, or $5 billion, of the losses. Every day, about 1,100 robberies occur nationwide, most in retail stores.

—Vendor theft — short deliveries, erroneous invoices — account for 15 percent or $7.5 billion.

—Shoplifting amounts to 5 percent or $2.5 billion.

—Employee errors, damaged inventory and other factors account for 30 percent or $15 billion.

—Employee theft of cash is 40 percent of the $50 billion total, or $20 billion per year.

New York Candidate's Spending Has No Limit

By MARC HUMBERT
Associated Press Writer
ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Millionaire businessman Lewis Lehman has said he will spend "as much as needed" to become governor of New York. So far he's at $7 million and counting. And that's just for this week's primary election.

If he wins the Republican nomination as expected, Lehman, 44, seems certain to become the biggest political spender in New York history before the general election is over.

The state record is held by outgoing Gov. Hugh Carey, a Democrat who spent about $8 million on his 1978 election campaign, according to Thomas Wilkey, a spokesman for the state Board of Elections.

Lehman has said he expects it will cost him "about $2.5 million" to run his campaign from the primary through the Nov. 2 general election. But he has put no limits on spending and if he goes much higher than what he is already talking about, Lehman could wind up running the most expensive gubernatorial campaign in history.

An Associated Press survey taken after the 1980 elections disclosed that the spending record for a gubernatorial race is the $11.6 million — most of it his own money — Jay Rockefeller, a Democrat, spent in getting elected governor of West Virginia that year.

About $3.8 million of what Lehman has spent so far has come out of his own pocket, prompting his primary opponent, former U.S. Attorney Paul Curran, to raise the massive spending as a campaign issue.

Curran, who has been able to raise less than $350,000 for his campaign, accuses Lehman of trying to buy the nomination in Thursday's primary.

Lehman, who bristles when questioned about his campaign spending, says the problem in modern politics "is not the buying, but the selling of high public office."

Speaking of Your Health...

Sickle-Cell Anemia: A Strange Blood Disorder

All my life I have known I have a tendency to sickle-cell anemia. I played football on my high school and college teams and then played professional football.

I know that sickle-cell anemia happens to black children. It would be wonderful if you could help in letting everyone know that children with this condition should not be considered invalids. — Mr. R.H.T., Ga.

Sickle-cell anemia is predominately a blood condition that affects black people. A vast amount of information is known about this strange hereditary blood disorder. The technical aspects of the problem are enormous. Suffice to say that the red blood cells which are normally round become sickle-shaped. Along with it comes some degree of anemia.

Both the disease and the complex blood trait that are responsible for this anemia are yielding their secrets to the pressure of scientific studies.

About 10 years ago, almost 600 black professional football players were studied by Dr. John R. Murphy at the Case Western Reserve University in Cleveland, Ohio. Thirty-nine of these powerful athletes were found to have the sickle-cell trait in their blood. This did not interfere with the enormous physical demands imposed by this sport.

The newer knowledge of genetics and genetic counseling are invaluable in the study of this problem. It is hoped that eventually the complications that sometimes occur will be markedly reduced.

Children who have sickle-cell anemia should not be treated as invalids. They should be encouraged to play active roles at school unless there is a specific medical reason for them to be limited.

I am 18 years old and have a problem. I am embarrassed because my left breast is smaller than my right. Only other girls who have this problem will understand how this bothers me and even affects my social life. For instance, I hate to go to a pool. I don't even like to wear tennis dresses. What can be done? — Miss K.B., Ohio.

One doesn't have to have the condition in order to empathize with you and you problem. I am certain that your parents can appreciate your thinking just as I do.

It is not uncommon to have some difference in the size of the breasts. When it is marked, it can be compensated by the use of a well-made bra.

The only other alternative, of course, is to consider breast augmentation. That is the technical term for enlarging the breast. It is a simple operation. It is safe and usually uncomplicated. New techniques now make it possible to enlarge the breast through an incision that is barely visible in the axilla, or armpit.

I am certain you have discussed this with your parents. It is a good time for you, with their cooperation, to get the opinion of a plastic surgeon. There are many excellent ones in the city you live in.

Finns Find Florida Life Attractive
By JOHN-THOR DAHLBURG

Associated Press Writer LAKE WORTH, Fla. (AP) — In a land of eternal sunburn, where the only chilly winds come from overworked air conditioners, and where cool Baltic waters and blocks of Juhla cheese are only memories, Florida's Finlandia thrives an entire hemisphere away from the midnight sun.

Fifteen thousand Finns, far from their Scandinavian homeland, have transplanted their own Finnish bakeries, restaurants, meeting halls, cultural societies and choirs, old-folks home, Finnish-speaking beauticians, doctors, dentists, radio announcers and some 40 sauna-equipped hotels to this resort just south of West Palm Beach.

In Lake Worth, being bilingual means "suomea puhutaan" — Finnish spoken. "Back there" means Finland, the old country for some, but just a name reverently mentioned by mothers and fathers for others.

Why did the Finns choose to settle in the Palm Beach County city of Lake Worth and neighboring Lantana, where the supermarket tabloid the National Enquirer is published?

"Why here? Couldn't say, really," puzzles Frank Lampe, 65, a retired accordion player who leads Florida Finns in foot-stomping weekend bashes at the American-Finnish Tourist Club.

Lampe moved to Lake Worth from Greenwich, Conn. "I'd been coming here often from the North to give concerts, and grew to feel at home."

To Americans, Lake Worth is only another Florida seaside spa. If they're film aficionados, they may know it as the sizzling backdrop for the recent 1950s-style movie, "Body Heat," starring William Hurt and Kathleen Turner.

But to native Finns or first-generation Finnish-Americans and Finnish-Canadians, Lake Worth is something unique — their own little slice of Florida's sun and fun that they started colonizing when it was pine-apple-producing country in the 1920s.

Marku Kontinen of the League of Finnish-American Societies estimates Lake Worth and Lantana lure 90 percent of his sun-starved compatriots who visit the United States — more than any other tourist area.

Many who live here are first- and second-generation American and Canadian citizens, but many others retain Finnish nationality, according to Lake Worth's Finnish consul, Edwin Lammi.

Florida's Finlandia keeps growing.

Flaming-haired Maria Multisilta is one newcomer, along with Nordic entrepreneurs contracting to build cottages in the Florida sand, merchants hawking homestyle foods or handicrafts, and retirees seeking year-round warmth.

The 18-year-old Helsinki student flew to Lake Worth at the beginning of the summer to improve her English. Her desire to leave melted away in the Florida sun.

"I don't think I really want to go back to Finland," she says. "It's too cold in the homeland. Here is better...warm."

Miss Multisilta hasn't obtained permanent resident status, but she says she has friends and family among Lake Worth's 29,000 inhabitants to house and feed her.

Many become residents of Florida's Finlandia after long layovers in Brooklyn's "Fintown" neighborhood in New York, or in the giant enclaves of northern Minnesota, Michigan's Upper Peninsula and the Boston suburbs.

The Greater Lake Worth Chamber of Commerce prints brochures extolling the area in Finnish, for distribution throughout Scandinavia. Blue-and-white crosses flap from restaurants and gift shops, and hotels bear familiar names, such as Midnight Sun Apartments & Hotel and the Altai.

The population of Florida's Finlandia explodes by another 6,000 to 10,000 tourists during a typical winter, says Onni Lanne, a retired radio broadcaster.
