Hundreds Of Mourners March In Refugee Camp

By The Associated Press
Hundreds of weeping women marched through Beirut's Chatilla Palestinian refugee camp today to pray at a mass grave for victims of the Sept. 16-18 massacre that has raised an international furor and shaken Israel to its core.

The Tel Aviv military command announced Sunday that its forces would pull out of the capital's Moslem western sector by Wednesday, but gave no indication of when the whole city would be cleared.

Relatives of the victims gathered at the mass grave in Chatilla at a ceremony marking the Moslem Feast of Sacrifice. A few hundred women sobbing and carrying wreaths of flowers and photos of the dead marched down the main street and men chanted prayers from the Koran, Islam's holy book.

Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin scheduled an emergency Cabinet meeting for Tuesday, and Israel radio predicted he would have to concede to growing pressure from his Cabinet and dissident Israelis for a full-scale investigation of the country's role in the massacre.

The Israeli army's announcement of the pullout date for west Beirut was made a few hours before Israel radio and television went off the air and public and private businesses shut down for Yom Kippur or the Day of Atonement, holiest day on the Hebrew calendar. It began at sunset Sunday.

The killings caused a protest demonstration in Tel Aviv by 400,000 Israelis on Saturday and demands for the resignations of Begin and Defense Minister Ariel Sharon.

Israel radio said five of the 20 members of Begin's Cabinet have decided that the government's proposal of a limited inquiry into the massacre was not good enough because it would not let investigators subpoena witnesses and force them to testify under oath.

Israeli Justice Minister Moshe Nissim was quoted in the daily newspaper Maariv as saying a formal judicial inquiry "now seems inevitable."

The Israeli army, which entered Beirut's Moslem sector Sept. 15 after a successful three-month drive against Palestinian guerrillas in Lebanon, announced Sunday that the pullback from the former guerrilla stronghold was being coordinated with the Lebanese army.

After the massacre of men, women and children at the Chatilla and Sabra camps, Lebanon asked the United States, Italy and France to redeploy the multinational peacekeeping force that oversaw the Palestine Liberation Organization guerrilla evacuation last month.

About 800 U.S. Marines had been scheduled to land in Beirut Sunday to join an estimated 1,100 French soldiers and about 670 Italian troops in an effort to help the Lebanese government reassert its authority.

Beirut Deployment Delayed By Israeli

By The Associated Press

U.S. Marines based in North Carolina will stay out of Beirut until Israeli troops withdraw entirely from all sections of the Lebanese capital, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger says.

But despite Weinberger's hope that the pullout would be complete by Wednesday, the Israeli military command refused to say when it would comply with the U.S. demand.

Meanwhile, U.S. officials said the Marines' landing would not be affected by the deaths of four officers, including a North Carolinian, serving with the United Nations observer teams in Beirut.

The Pentagon said Air Force Maj. Harley S. Warren, 34, of Valdese, N.C., and Army Maj. Randall A. Carlson, 35, of Derwood, Md., were among those killed Saturday when their jeep hit a land mine.

The incident occurred near the Beirut-Damascus highway about nine miles east of Beirut.

Warren's family refused to comment on his death Sunday. Lebanese President Amin Gemayal said Sunday he wants to see all foreign troops out of Lebanon within two weeks.

"The first thing we have to obtain is the withdrawal (of troops) from Beirut to recover our capital... the capital is actually an occupied land. We should obtain only one Beirut," said Gemayal, who was elected after his brother, President-elect Bashir Gemayal, was assassinated on Sept. 14.

Gemayal, appearing with Weinberger on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley," said the regular Lebanese army was not involved in the massacre of hundreds of Palestinians in two refugee camps in Beirut last week.

After the slaughter, the Lebanese government asked foreign troops to re-enter Beirut long enough to protect the Palestinians and oversee the Israeli pullout.

Although French and Italian forces have landed for that purpose, they have yet to be deployed in Beirut. The 800 U.S. Marines assigned to assist in the peacekeeping assignment, whose U.S. bases are Camp Lejeune, Cherry Point and New River, N.C., are waiting offshore.

"They're not going in because the conditions necessary for the success of the multinational force have not yet been fully established," Weinberger said on the television program.

"We hope to have that completed — we have agreement in principle on many things — we hope to have that completed as soon as possible so that they can go in, probably with some luck Tuesday or Wednesday."

Those conditions, Weinberger said, include demands that Israeli troops leave both east and west Beirut and turn over the airport to the multinational peacekeeping force.

Weinberger said there is "no major distinction" between east and west Beirut and that the Israelis must leave "the entire city." West Beirut is the Moslem quarter, while Christians dominate east Beirut.

In Tel Aviv, the military command said Israeli troops will withdraw from west Beirut and the airport on Wednesday, but that the pullback from east Beirut would take a bit longer.

Israel radio predicted Sunday that Prime Minister Menachem Begin would have to concede to intensifying pressure within his Cabinet for a full-scale investigation of the massacre of hundreds of Palestinian and Lebanese civilians in two Beirut refugee camps earlier this month.

The killings by Israeli-backed Lebanese Christian militiamen, in camps under Israeli military control, have drawn massive protest demonstrations in Tel Aviv and demands for the resignations of Begin and Defense Minister

Budget Body Visits

Members of the Advisory Budget Commission will be in Greenville Tuesday for visits to the Walter B. Jones Alcoholic Rehabilitation Center, Pitt Community College and East Carolina University.

The ABC members are scheduled to arrive at the Pitt-Greenville Airport at 10:50 a.m. after a visit to Elizabeth City State University. Their first stop will be from 11 a.m. until 12 noon at the Alcoholic Rehabilitation Center, then from 12 noon until 2 p.m. they are scheduled to have lunch and tour Pitt Community College.

Commission members are scheduled to tour the ECU campus and medical school from 2:15 p.m. until 3:45, and are scheduled to have dinner at Chancellor John Howell's home at 6:30 p.m.

Wednesday the ABC is scheduled to visit Rocky Mount, Wilson, Goldsboro, Snow Hill and Kinston.

Sen. Kenneth Royal of Durham is chairman of the ABC, which is composed of 10 members of the General Assembly and two at-large members.

Ariel Sharon.

After the massacre of at least 320 men, women and children at the Chatilla and Sabra camps Sept. 16-18, Lebanon asked the United States, Italy and France to redeploy the multinational peacekeeping force that oversaw the Palestine Liberation Organization guerrilla evacuation last month. The North Carolina-based Marines were part of that force.

After the PLO was evacuated from Beirut, the multinational force left and Israeli troops took responsibility for maintaining peace. Christian militia forces massacred the Palestinians when the city was under Israeli military control.

The 3,000-man multinational force is designed to "help the Lebanese government get on its feet, strengthen itself and be able to assert its sovereignty," Weinberger said, noting that Lebanese are in a transition from a "very black period in their history."

Weinberger said the Marines sent to Lebanon will be able to fight in self-defense, noting they have the "capability of defending themselves and of course the authority of defending themselves."

But he said they are not on a "combat mission," and will serve as a "deterrent to prevent the security from being threatened."

Two Robberies Are Followed By 12 Arrests

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Greenville police this morning arrested 12 persons following investigation of two armed robberies — one at the Short Stop Food Mart on East Greenville Boulevard and the second at the Fast Fare in the 200 block of Cotanche Street.

Officers, while still investigating the 1 a.m. robbery at the Short Stop, interrupted an armed robbery in progress at the Fast Fare about 4:30 a.m. and arrested two men, Chief Glenn Cannon said.

Cannon, who said investigation of the incidents is continuing, said Earl Starkie, 25 of 1108 Myrtle Ave., and Jimmy Reginald Johnson, 18 of 1903 Norcott Circle were each charged with armed robbery in connection with the Short Stop and Fast Fare incidents.

The chief said officers drove up to the front of the Fast Fare and saw Starkie and Johnson behind the counter. The clerk, Cannon said, was lying on the floor.

After calling for assistance, officers took Starkie and Johnson into custody. They were armed with a sawed-off .12 gauge shotgun, Cannon noted.

Shortly thereafter, officers stopped a van on Third Street near the New Street intersection and arrested 10 others in connection with the Short Stop robbery.

Those included: Robert Lee Reddick Jr., 25 of 405 Deck St., John Lewis Fornville, 36 of 1015 Chestnut St., Elroy Jenkins, 27 of 509A Sheppard St., James Everett Edwards, 26 of Route 4, Greenville, Ruthie Lynn Watson, 21 of 506B Darden Drive, Windy Sue Irvin, 20 of 312 Sheppard St., Ann Paige Midgett, 17 of 415 West Third St., Arvetta Maxine Williams, 24 of Winterville, Linda Faye Marvin, 24 of 104 West 12th St., and Oliver Leon Atkinson, 26 of 1920A Norcott Circle.

Cannon said that while no cash was taken from the Short Stop, the robbers took 50 T-shirts, two cases of beer, and a number of cigarette lighters. They also took $40 in cash from the clerk, who received minor injuries when struck in the head.

At the Fast Fare, Cannon said, robbers took a quantity of money, cigarettes and watches.

Broken Dam's Water Recedes

By DOLORES WOOD
Associated Press Writer

BISHOP, Calif. (AP) — Muddy waters that pushed through an earthen dam and forced at least 800 people to flee their homes began receding today, but authorities warned that the danger had not passed.

"The water is just a little lower, but it's nasty," said John Ferguson, head of the California Department of Forestry in the Inyo-Mono County area. "It's still moving fast."

"There's danger to homes everywhere because of the constant erosion and the debris," he said.

At least 800 people were evacuated in Bishop and nearby Big Pine Sunday when the powerful surges of water in overflowing North Lake burst through an earthen dam built during the early 1900s.

Eight homes sustained heavy damage when the dam burst, sending Bishop Creek racing out its banks and into streets, gulleys and smaller creeks, Ferguson said.

No injuries were reported, and there were no official damage estimates.

A highway was closed at Big Pine today after water swirled over a makeshift mud-and-rock dam, said Inyo County Sheriff's dispatcher Florence Nielsen.

She said the water level had not receded much, but was "sort of holding it's own."

"We don't need anymore rain," she said, but the National Weather Service forecast called for "a chance of showers over the mountains" of the Owens Valley.

Residents of the mountainous area 225 miles north of Los Angeles and 15 miles from the Nevada border — including people on two nearby Indian reservations — spent Sunday sandbagging their homes. There was substantial water damage to some homes on the reservations, said Ferguson.

Bishop Mayor Ron Kiston said the flood was the worst to hit Bishop, but added "It's not that devastating."

John Corwin said he was awakened about 6 a.m. Sunday to the sound of water outside his house. By nightfall, the water was receding.

The 15-foot-deep lake, located 25 miles west of Bishop, was already filled from the melt-off of snow in the Sierra Nevada, when a steady warm rain began to fall.

Madonna with Folded Hands as she stood in the yard of St. Peter's School prior to being stolen in mid-August

REWARD FOR STATUE'S RETURN

There has been no response to a Hotline appeal for the return of a statue which disappeared from its pedestal in the school yard of St. Peter's Catholic School in mid-August. This statue, which is officially described as "Madonna with Folded Hands" stood four feet, six inches tall, but from its pedestal towered over the children who played in its shadow. Since the appeal was first published, the Parish Council has offered a $100 reward for the safe return, no questions asked. Call Father William Frost, 758-1582.

Rainfall Heavy

Two inches of rainfall soaked Pitt County this weekend, bringing the total precipitation for September — until last week a dry month — to 5.43 inches.

Greenville Utilities Water Plant measured .69 inch of rain on Saturday, followed by a whopping 1.31 inches Sunday. The weekend rain came on the heels of a 2.46 inches that fell Sept. 19-22.

Temperatures remained mild through the weekend, with the high for Saturday reaching 76 degrees Fahrenheit and the low touching 61 degrees. A high of 77 degrees was reported Sunday, with a low of 52 degrees. At 8 a.m. today the temperature was 59 degrees.

Two Drivers Injured

ACCIDENT ON N.C. 43 — The drivers of these two vehicles were injured, one of them seriously, in a 7:45 a.m. collision today 2.3 miles west of Falkland. Investigating Highway Patrolman Wayne Taylor said two vehicles had slowed down because of chickens in the road and a small car operated by Katherine Williams Jones of Greenville pulled to the left hand lane to avoid the slowing vehicles. Taylor said the Jones car and a van driven by James William Rostar, also of Greenville, collided. A spokesman at Pitt Memorial Hospital said Mrs. Jones was listed in guarded condition today, while Rostar was treated and released. Taylor said investigation is continuing. (Reflector Staff Photo) ago when my children were small, so it seemed a natural choice for me.

Because of my limited sitting tolerance, I encountered several problems and found some solutions that suited my needs and might be helpful to others.

Straight knitting needles more than 10 inches long are unsuitable as they catch in the arms of a chair or wheelchair. The longer needles also force you to elevate your arms, which causes fatigue when in a prone position.

I learned to use circular needles and switched to what you call Continental style knitting, holding the yarn in the left hand and "picking" the stitches through. Getting an even tension was a problem at first, but that was overcome with practice.

A large, sturdy knitting bag is a must to keep yarn, instructions, needles, markers, tape measure and other necessities together. For a bedrest or wheelchair-bound patient, having things close at hand and at a reachable height is very important.

Handling patterns and pattern books also presented something of a problem. Hard cover books are fine for reading but awkward to use for following a pattern. I solved this by making copies of the pages on a copy machine and then putting these copies in a three-ring plastic page holder that shows the directions clearly without the weight of a book. A paper clip and a small piece of paper attached to the plastic holder are handy for marking down the rows as they are completed or to make notes.

I like the challenge of using up odds and ends of leftover yarn to make small items, so I am always looking for patterns of this type. Large projects made in one piece, such as afghans, are difficult to handle because of the weight. I try to knit individual squares or panels and then join them for greater ease.

Obtaining patterns is also difficult when you are unable to go to a store yourself, so I rely on friends who also knit and will share patterns with me or on newspaper columns such as yours describing the patterns and materials. Hope some of these ideas will be helpful. — Carolee W., Clarence, N.Y.

Terfinadine Being Tested

A new antihistamine that does not cause drowsiness is being studied at Duke University Medical Center.

In a study of 50 people with seasonal hay fever, terfinadine was found to be as effective as antihistamines already on the market, while not producing the drowsiness side effect, Dr. C. Edward Buckley, professor of medicine in the division of allergy and respiratory diseases.

"Food and Drug Administration approval will be sought this fall to use terfinadine in treating acute (seasonal) hay fever," Dr. Buckley said. "We hope it will be available for patients within the next year."

This fall he will study people with year-round allergies to substances like pollen, dust, mold and animal danders to see if the drug is as effective for them as for people with short-term allergies. He said it would not be useful for people with asthma because it could make the airways too dry and aggravate their condition.

Terfinadine is already in use in Europe, he said.

I met a woman last week who had a sit-down dinner with her family on a weekday night. Is that crazy?

Have you any idea what the odds are of that happening in this country? Eighty thousand to one and climbing.

She has five children: one in swimming competition, one on the football team, one in junior varsity basketball, one in band, and one on the pompon squad. They had not sat around a table together on a school night in three years.

My first reaction was, "Why the reunion?"

She said she just got tired of tossing up food and having kids catch it in mid-air. She was sick of having kids lean over her shoulder and eat out of the skillet. She wanted to see a bowl of potato salad without a hole in the middle one last time before she went.

Besides, she had never seen her son who was on the swimming team without pink eyes and wet hair.

Her family is not unique. Most women don't work in kitchens these days. They work in drive-ins. They're shrines to quick foods where candles are lit to microwaves, the chant is "just add water" and the blessing is "Have a Twinkie. Go in peace."

I used to have a set of recipes from September through June that I served my peripatetic family.

My son came in late one night after ball practice and said, "What'd you have for dinner?"

I said, "Chicken Supreme." He slammed the refrigerator door and said, "Didn't you save me any?"

"I couldn't," I said. "Your father ate the chicken before he went bowling, your sister had the mushroom and black olive on a salad before she went to Scout meeting, and your brother had the cream of mushroom soup after he got home from play practice. It never got to the casserole."

We ate everything that way in bits and pieces; sukiyaki, chili, beef stroganoff and stews. I had a son who graduated from high school without ever knowing that spaghetti and meatballs were not finger food served cold.

I asked my friend if the family that meets and eats together is such a treat together.

She reported that as soon as they were seated around the table, the father seized the opportunity to deliver his lecture on lights and how no one turned them off and how their electricity bill was second only to the Las Vegas strip and everyone left early and ate in their rooms.

Eating together. It's probably overrated.

Blood Pressure Machine Gives Tip To Visit Doctor

By JAMES V. HEALION
MIDDLETOWN, Conn. (UPI) — The woman sat before the computerized blood pressure testing unit in Pelton's pharmacy and slipped her left arm into a blue cuff on the unit's side.

She pushed a green start button. The cuff gave her upper arm a squeeze. A message flashed on and off in a red heart on a screen similar to that of a television set.

"Testing," it said. "Remain still." In 50 to 70 seconds, her blood pressure appeared in a digital read-out. It was normal. She was pleased.

"Right now," says Barry Kaye of Pembroke, Mass., whose company distributes the unit in New England, "one out of four Americans have high blood pressure and half don't know it. The whole concept is to alert people," Kaye said.

High blood pressure is nature's mugger. It sneaks up on its victims without warning.

"We're probably referring more people to physicians than they ever would have found on their own," said Katherine Ervin of Vita-Stat Inc., the Indiana-based company that sells the units. Vita-Stat is a subsidiary of E.R. Squibb & Co.

Usually, the testing is free to the public. Pharmacies and banks are the biggest accounts, Ms. Ervin said. They use the units as marketing tools or do the testing as a community service. They pay a monthly fee, usually around $150. In places like airports and shopping malls, the machines are coin-operated.

Kaye says people should take several readings before jumping to conclusions. It's also a recognized fact that blood pressure can rise 10 to 15 points in a matter of minutes.

"If your average reading is high you should see a physician. The computer does not take the place of the physician. It gives an accurate reading. The physician interprets it," he said. The machines are calibrated monthly, Kaye said.

Industry is another big user of the units, Ms. Ervin said from her office in Indianapolis. "General Motors, Ford — they use it because it helps them to contain hypertension costs at the worksite. If it can prevent one stroke or heart attack, they've paid for that computer more than one time over," she said.

There are more than 3,000 units in the United States at last count, she said. They're called "blood pressure tellers" at some banks.

High blood pressure has almost always been detected by physicians and one of the key reasons more of it hasn't been the light of day is that people can still feel good and have it. The computer and its electronic toy-like appeal is evidently more inviting than a visit to a doctor's office for a checkup.

"People sit down at our computer just out of curiosity," Ms. Ervin of Vita-Stat said. "My gosh," they say, "I haven't had my blood pressure checked in 20 years."

But there is another reason:

"As soon as prevention became kind of the word" in health, these kind of self-monitoring computers have come into their own and will continue to gain acceptance and credibility. They're really taken off," Ms. Ervin said. She predicted their eventual use by the public to check eyesight and hearing.

She said many people need to know more about high blood pressure.

Blood pressure itself is the force of the blood against the walls of the arteries. If the arteries constrict, the heart has to work harder to pump the blood through. That's when the pressure becomes high.

Over the long haul, the extra load boosts the risk of stroke, heart and kidney damage. High blood pressure

Dear Pat: As a nurse disabled with a back injury for the last few years, I was so glad to see someone take an interest in problems of the handicapped. Since my injury, I have become an avid knitter to keep myself busy and create new challenges.

What I needed was a craft that I could perform while lying on my back. Knitting had been a hobby of nine years can usually be managed on doctor's orders though proper diet, medication, exercise, less stress, and no smoking.

Jerry Weitzman of Pelton's pharmacy — the original of which dates back to the last century — not only has the unit but each Thursday a nurse takes people's blood pressures between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. He likes the nurse's personal touch.

A questionnaire gave the Pelton customers a chance to anonymously express their opinions about the machine's appeal or lack of it.

Not everybody was pleased with the blood pressure readings and these people appended little notes to the form. "The machine is way off what the nurse gets," somebody wrote.

A visitor from Columbus, Ohio, said a Columbus supermarket "has the same (free) unit and most doctors refer their patients to stop by and have their blood pressure checked weekly or monthly. If borderline, just saves an office call."

One enthused user wrote: "It turns me on when the machine squeezes my arm so tight."

Couple Marries In Grifton On Saturday

GRIFTON — Stella Britt Mitchell of Grifton and James Ralph Attaway Jr. of Orlando, Fla. were united in marriage at 6:30 p.m. Saturday in St. John's Episcopal Church here. The Rev. Kenneth Townsend, rector, officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents and was escorted to the altar by her father. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Wood Mitchell Jr. of Grifton. The bridegroom is the son of James Ralph Attaway Sr. of Raeford and the late Mrs. Verna Posey Attaway.

The bride wore a formal gown of candlelight satin over peau de soie designed with a Queen Anne neckline and outlined in Brussels lace beaded with pearls. The fitted bodice was enhanced with beaded re-embroidered alencon lace. Brussels lace inserts were used in the satin bishop sleeves which were finished in alencon lace cuffs. The attached scalloped cathedral length train was fashioned with a double panel of alencon lace that extended to the waistline. Matching overlace bordered the skirt and train which were accented with appliques of Brussels lace. The bride wore a chapel length veil of illusion edged in re-embroidered alencon lace attached to a Camelot cap overlaid in matching lace. She carried an old-fashioned bouquet of silk burgundy, white roses and baby's breath with off-white satin and lace streamers.

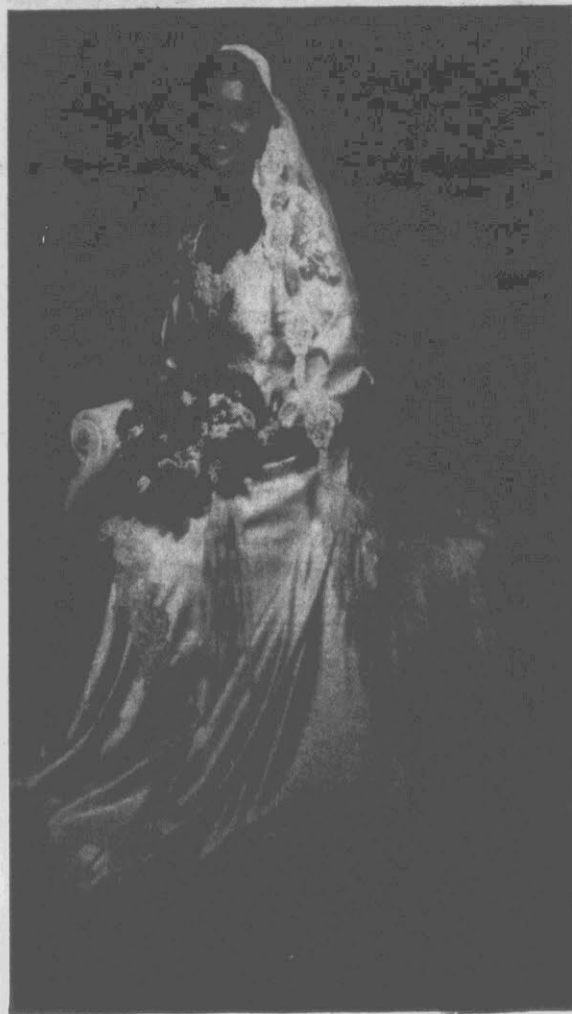

Deborah H. Well of Goldsboro served as matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Karen Foss of Jacksonville, Fla., Rhonda Hill of Grifton, Carla Young of Badin, Raylene Jessup of Raleigh, Marie Walter of Orlando, Fla. and Kathy Silliman of Thomasville. They wore formal gowns of burgundy custom designed in Italian taffeta and featured a sweetheart neckline, puff sleeves and a gathered skirt. Each carried a nosegay of assorted silk flowers of tiger lilies, forget-me-nots and delphiniums in pink and burgundy tones.

The brother of the bridegroom, Robert Attaway of Cary, was best man. Ushers were Howard Perry of Spartanburg, S.C., Tim Tabak of Raleigh, Charles Young of Badin, Bruce Clements, cousin of the bride of Rocky Mount, Craven Mitchell, brother of the bride of Grifton, and Frank Teague III, cousin of the bridegroom of Kinston, miniature usher, Matthew Lewis of Washington, ring bearer, Jason Lewis of Washington, Dwain Teague, acolyte.

Wedding music was presented by Tony Carraway, organist, of Chapel Hill, indy Valdez, soloist of Atlanta Ga. and Walter Lyerly, violinist of Kinston.

Mrs. E. F. Albritton directed the wedding and Janet Green presided at the register.

The bride is a graduate of

MRS. JAMES RALPH ATTAWAY JR.

North Carolina State University. The bridegroom graduated from North Carolina State University and holds a juris doctorate from the university of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. He is employed by Paul N. Howard Construction Co. of Greensboro.

After a wedding trip to Puerto Rico, the Dominican Republic and the Virgin Islands, the couple will live in Orlando, Fla. Following the ceremony, the bride's parents and Mr. and Mrs. Alton Clements, aunt and uncle of the bride, entertained at a reception at the Clements' home. The cake and punch were served by Jan Tabak of Raleigh. Judy Yondle of Raleigh, Donna Casey of Grifton and Karen Talton of Selma. Also assisting in serving were Stella Hurst, Diantha Muzikar, Betty White, Tim and Daniel Albritton and David Houston, all of Grifton.

Following the wedding rehearsal Friday evening, the wedding party, out-of-town guests and friends of the bridal couple were entertained by the bridegroom's father at a pig-picking held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Don Casey.

A bridesmaids luncheon was held Saturday given by Eunice Casey and Karen Foss at the home of Mrs. Casey.

HUNGRY CRICKETS

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — The common house cricket can ruin a man's suit in one day, says Bernard P. Bross, product manager of Spectrum Home & Garden Products.

The inch-long, brown-black insects hide during the day and feed at night on plants, insects, furs, cloth and other materials with food or perspiration on them.

Some of the favorite hiding places of the cricket are beneath cabinets, refrigerators, sinks and stoves plus localized infested areas.

DEAR ABBY: The reader signed "Better Dead Than Red," who complained that because he was a redhead he "can't get a girl and felt like a freak," might be pleased to know that he was not the first young man to write to someone such as yourself with this problem.

Seventy years ago, Jewish immigrants often wrote to the Yiddish daily The Forward for help with their problems. Their letters were printed in a column called "Bintel Brief" (a bundle of letters). One letter, written in 1909, read as follows:

"I am a young man of 22 and have every reason to be happy, but I am unhappy because nature saw fit to give me red hair. Because of the color of my hair, I endure many insults in the shop and on the street. When I hear someone say to me, 'Hello, Red!' I am hurt and offended. I am unhappy and lonely and I've even consulted doctors about it. One of them advised me to dye my hair. Another told me not to do it because first of all it has a bad effect on the scalp and, second, the color would not be natural. 'I would be very happy if you could advise me. Respectfully, Unhappy'"

The editor answered Unhappy: "A person is not valued by the hair on his head, but by what is in his head."

Abby, you might be pleased to know that today when teachers of history, such as myself, want to describe "Bintel Brief" to someone who has never heard of it, we say, "It was sort of the original 'Dear Abby.'"

PROF. DEBORAH E. LIPSTADT, UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA, LOS ANGELES

DEAR ABBY: Since the letter signed "Better Dead Than Red" appeared in your column, my phone has not stopped ringing.

"Better Dead" claimed he couldn't get a girl because of his red hair, and asked if there was a club or support group for redheads.

Too bad you didn't know about Redheads International, whose purpose is to unite and promote a more positive image of redheaded people. We are 5,000 strong and growing.

In your reply to "Better Dead," you listed some famous redheads, with Red Buttons heading the list. Well, he happens to be a member! So does Lucille Ball, Aileen Quinn (the young star of "Annie"), Jamie Rose of "Falcon Crest" and Linda Kelsey of "Lou Grant."

Those interested in joining may write to: Redheads International, 23101 Moulton Park, Suite 110, Laguna Hills, Calif. 92653.

STEPHEN DOUGLAS (PRESIDENT)

DEAR MR. DOUGLAS: I have heard from numerous readers asking me to add Christopher Columbus, Mark Twain, George Bernard Shaw, Thomas Jefferson and Van Gogh to the list of famous redheads.

Now a few questions: In order to join Redheads International, must one be a genuine redhead with no help from the dye-pot? And what happens when the red has turned to silver? And how about baldies who were former redheads? Do toupees count? (If so, add Charles Nelson Reilly.)

And I apologize for omitting David Hartman of "Good Morning, America," Woody Allen, Red Motley, Redd Foxx, and Rhonda Fleming, who is still the world's most beautiful redhead!

DRAWING ON ENERGY

ATLANTA (AP) — The American Society of Heating, Refrigerating and Air-Conditioning Engineers, Inc., says it is achieving energy conservation through the design and construction of energy-efficient buildings.

As an incentive, the organization has established an annual Energy Awards Program to recognize engineers who have achieved substantial energy cost savings while maintaining occupant comfort through building design and the application of new technologies.

Iran Needs New Rule

There were those who attempted to sell us the idea that the transition to Ayatollah Khomeini from the rule of the shah in Iran was perfectly natural, after Khomeini took over the country by force.

We were told how much better off the Iranian people would be with a leader like Khomeini rather than the repressive shah.

We hope those people were reading last week when it was reported that former foreign minister and close friend of the Ayatollah, Sadegh Ghotbzadeh, had been shot down by a firing squad.

The murder of Ghotbzadeh is but a surface indication of the reign of terror which has been going on under Khomeini since his takeover. In this country we are well aware of the inhumane capturing of the United States embassy personnel and their long term imprisonment.

Of course, virtually everything western nations view as favorable to individual rights has been eliminated under this cruel reign.

The Shah of Iran did not have an ideal civil rights record during his rule. However, there have been few more repressive governments in all history than that imposed on the Iranian people by Ayatollah Khomeini. In the interest of individual rights, may his power end soon.

Dutch Visitors Welcomed

A unique exchange of citizens of Arnhem, Holland and representatives of Pitt, Beaufort and other areas is taking place this week.

Through the North Carolina Friendship Force Exchange, a group from Eastern North Carolina is leaving for Holland and the travelers from Arnhem arrive here.

A variety of activities is planned for the 54 Dutch ambassadors during their two-week stay here. Included are tours of various sites and industries, trips to Raleigh, Tryon Palace, Colonial Williamsburg and Bath, along with many other activities.

It is an exciting time for the participants and it is also an honor for our community to be hosts to our friends from Holland. The exchange gives everyone involved the opportunity to make new friends, see new parts of the world and bring about better understanding between nations.

Violated Code?

By PAUL T. O'CONNOR

RALEIGH — A North Carolina congressional candidate was laying the foundation of his campaign while still on active duty in the U.S. Navy, an activity which apparently conflicts with the Military Standards of Conduct.

Eugene "Red" McDaniel, a Republican, retired from the Navy in January and announced plans to run against 3rd District Rep. Charlie Whitley. But according to federal finance reports, McDaniel raised money, attended candidate's school and distributed campaign literature before retiring.

Political Action Committee. His report for this period also shows him spending money for literature, photos, postage, office supplies, telephone service and travel.

McDaniel says he did nothing improper. In an interview, he said he conducted all of his political work while on leave or after working hours and that his activity did not amount to building his campaign organization.

But that may not have been the way the Navy would have seen it. McDaniel conceded that an officer on leave is still considered to be on "active duty." A Washington spokesman for the Navy said the U.S. military personnel code says someone on active duty "may not campaign as a partisan candidate for nomination to...any civil office."

The code further specifies that military personnel may not "solicit votes" or political contributions, participate in the management of a partisan campaign, conduct a political opinion survey or distribute political literature.

Navy spokesman Lt. Bob Schermund in Washington refused to say whether or not McDaniel violated Navy rules. But he did say his activities appear to be outside the range of approved political activities. Military personnel may vote, sign petitions, work as non-partisan election officials, join civil clubs and write letters to the editor, he said.

When interviewed, Whitley was aware that McDaniel had attended the candidate's school while still on active duty. "I guess it's a legal question (whether McDaniel broke any rules)," Whitley said. "But, I would think that a lot of people would certainly feel that it is a violation of the spirit of the Hatch Act (which forbids political activity by federal civilian employees) ... or of military law."

Petty Officer John Story, Raleigh spokesman for the Navy, gave his interpretation of the rules: "You can't do anything political. They don't want the Navy associated with anyone's campaign. They don't want the military identified with politicians."

Other Editors Say N.C. and SAT

(The Raleigh Times)

North Carolina's average SAT score this year was 827, the national average was 893, and Iowa's highest among the states was 1,055. But believe it or not, that is not terrible news for North Carolina.

The state-by-state 1982 Scholastic Aptitude Test scores released by the College Board make a classic example of how bare, unclad statistics can deceive.

Imagine the statewide teeth-gnashing, the editorial alarms, the sackcloth and ashes and curses called down on the heads of politicians and educators — if the only explanation for North Carolina's average score being 48th of 50 was poor schools, poor teaching, poor students or all these.

But it isn't. In North Carolina 34,507 youngsters, 47 percent of all high school seniors, took the SAT test — more youngsters than in any other state and far more, proportionally, than the 33 percent of all U.S. high school graduates who took the test.

In Iowa, only 900, a mere 3 percent of the graduates, took the exam. There and in other high scoring Plains states, state universities either don't use test scores for admissions or use the American College Testing program (ACT). The few who take the SAT usually are seeking admission to relatively selective — the word used to be "exclusive" — East or West Coast schools.

By contrast, in North Carolina every single youngster who thinks of attending any of the 16 state university campuses must take the SAT even to be considered.

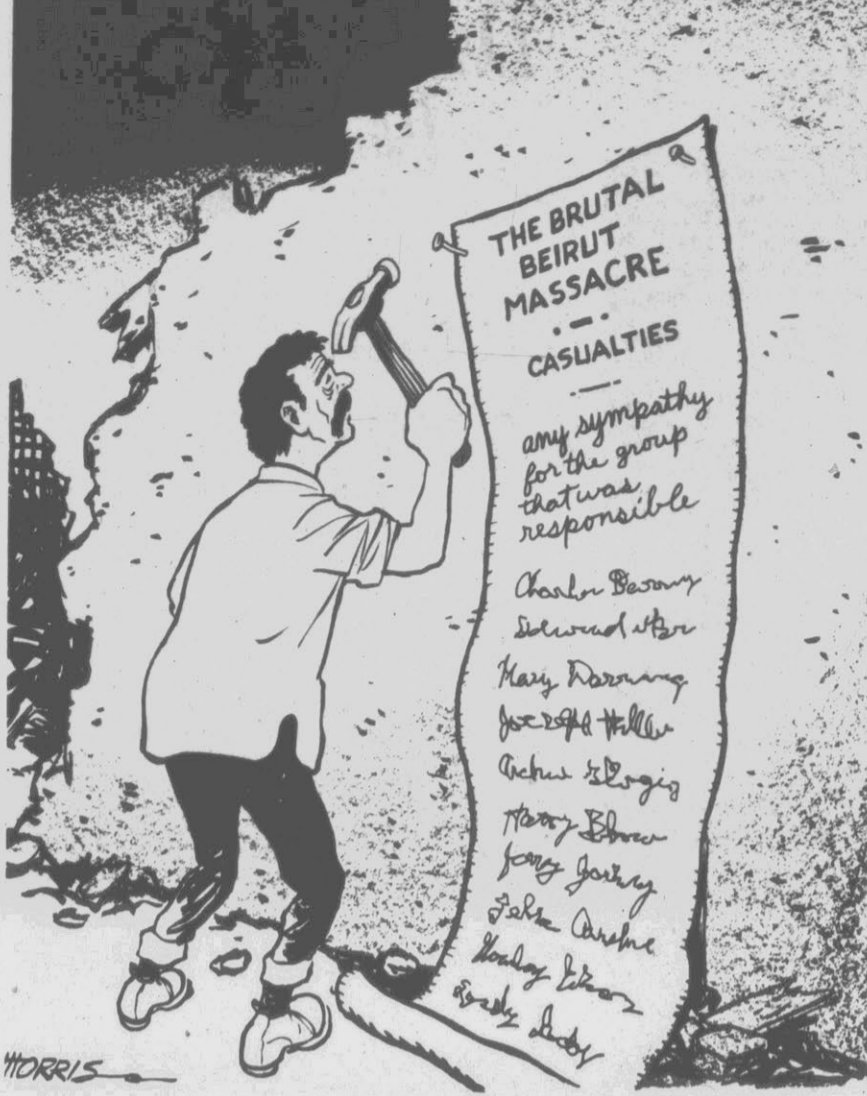

So Plains-state "average" SAT scores tend to represent only the top skim of academic cream, a few percent of all graduates. Even the national average score represents only one-third of the youngsters finishing high school. But North Carolina's average represents almost half the state's graduating population.

The College Board people took care to point out the need for this context. They noted that higher statewide participation in the test usually means lower average scores for that state. These complexities are one reason they've never released a state scores list before.

For North Carolina, this year's real SAT news is elsewhere, and more good than bad. State youngsters scored 5 points better on the verbal part of the SAT and 4 points better on the math than their counterparts did in 1981.

Though this improvement is small and slight, a nationwide upturn still smaller and slighter — two points on verbal, one on math — is greeted as a possible clue that the long SAT score slide has finally ended.

HEADING THE LIST!

Golf: A Contact Sport

I hadn't been on a golf course since I was a kid. The reason was that in my youth I was a caddy, and after carrying around heavy bags filled with irons and woods every weekend, I vowed when I grew up I would never step on a fairway again.

But the other day a friend named Riley, who plays every week, persuaded me to go out with him. "You'll love it," he said. "It's the great exercise and the most relaxing sport in the world."

"I'll go along with you," I said, "but I won't play."

So the next morning we showed up at the golf course.

"The first thing we have to do," Riley said, "is rent an electric golf cart."

"Why do you need a golf cart?"

"Because they won't let you play here on the weekend unless you drive around the course. If people walk they slow up the game."

"But if you drive around the 18 holes, how do you get any exercise?"

"Looking for your ball. They permit you to get out of the cart to look for it. But they don't want you to look too long because the people playing behind you will get sore."

"How long do they let you look for your ball?"

"Three minutes."

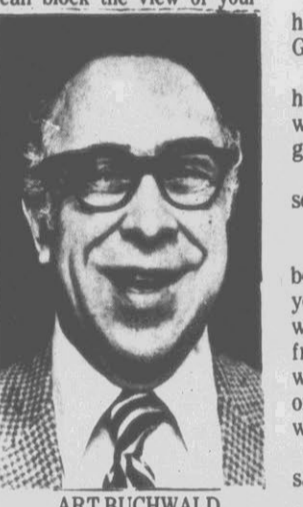

"That long?"

"It gives you just enough time to stretch your legs, but at the same time it doesn't tire you out. Here come the other three guys we're playing with." I was introduced to Hal, Chris and George. They each had their own golf cart.

"Why do you each need a golf cart?" I asked.

"We like to race each other up and down the hills," Hal said. "And besides, if you have your own golf cart you can block the view of your ball and kick it to a better lie."

Chris said, "Sometimes if one of the other players gets a real good shot and you can get to his ball first, you can run over it, so he can't find it."

"Frankly," said George, "I find golf cart racing is far more fun than playing the game. It gives the average guy a chance to drive like Evel Knievel."

The foursome teed off and then we all got into our carts and raced to our respective balls. Since I wasn't playing, Riley let me drive his vehicle. "Park as close to the ball as possible," he told me, "so I don't have to walk."

Riley hit his second shot into a sand trap and started cursing. "I knew I should have used a seven iron instead of a five."

"Relax, Riley," I told him. "It's only a game."

It took him three shots to get out of the sand trap, two to get on the green, and three to putt into the hole.

He slammed the bag with his putter, as Hal, Chris and George laughed at him.

"I don't care which one you hit," Riley muttered, "but I want you to ram one of their golf carts."

"But we could hurt somebody seriously."

"So?"

"Look, Riley, I haven't been on a course in many years and I just remembered why. Golf is the most frustrating game in the world. I've never seen anyone on a course who had any fun while he was playing."

"Shut up and drive," he said.

The next 17 holes went about the same way with each player cursing and gritting his teeth after he hit the ball. But for the most part we just kept driving from one shot to another. I figured that if you counted how many steps they took to measure their ball to the flag, each player had actually walked the equivalent of two city blocks for the entire 18 holes. The rest of their exercise came from carrying their golf bags from their cars to the locker room.

I'm not trying to put down golf because I know millions

Oval Office 'Panic Time'

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Autumn's first breezes have carried to the White House cold fear of severe Republican losses nationwide on Nov. 2, a prospect made more likely by no comprehensive campaign plan for the president — as witness bumbling in the Oval Office Sept. 16.

On that day, Sen. John C. Stennis, 81-year-old conservative Democratic patriarch from Mississippi, coaxed from President Reagan a commitment that he would not campaign for the 35-year-old Republican Senate challenger, Haley Barbour. Unintentionally delivering a solar plexus punch to Barbour, the president demonstrated the state of White House political disorganization six weeks before Election Day.

It is barely possible that an upset of Stennis in Mississippi might be needed to maintain Republican control of the Senate. But it is the House where disaster beckons. Presidential aides were nonplussed to read their own polls showing a 58-42 percent Democratic edge for Congress: Worse than public polls, that signals a loss of around 35 House seats — in short a bloodbath.

Long faces at the White House quickly follow the latest summer euphoria. Republican wishful-thinkers, while acknowledging no chance of economic recovery before the election, had counted on two bulwarks to avoid the Republican recession disasters of 1958 and 1974: a much fatter campaign purse and the popularity of Ronald Reagan.

But big money's leverage diminishes as Election Day nears. As for the undeniable asset of the president's personal appeal, there is still no tactical plan to use it. He spent the past week in Washington, postponing a one-day trip to Ohio for reasons that remain murky. And he now appears to have ruled out any visit to Mississippi, where Democratic strategists see an excellent chance for a Republican upset. The Mississippi affair reflects the nonchalance that has characterized the White House senior staff's approach to the mid-term election.

Stennis was outraged when his wife, a resident of a nursing home, received a fundraising appeal signed by Reagan in Barbour's behalf. He immediately requested and was granted the Sept. 16 Oval Office meeting.

Not one word in advance about the Stennis meeting was passed to the political office at the White House. As a result, Reagan was not briefed. "The president was blindsided," one presidential aide confided. Reagan mumbled his apologies about the letter (contending he was unaware of it, according to one account) and granted the senator's request not to campaign against a conservative Democrat who had supported so many Reagan measures. Later White House assurances that the president still backs Barbour and never intended to go to Mississippi only helped a little.

Such bumbling may be less significant, however, than Republican waste of a superior war chest. The party's unified television campaign of 1978 has not been duplicated. The Senate campaign, led by liberal Sen. Robert Packwood, shuns Republican-Reagan institutional advertising. The House campaign's television spots are viewed as watery by operatives in the Republican National Committee and White House.

With neither president nor money fully harnessed, the message from current polls is that the recession threatens a Democratic landslide. Republican congressmen in marginal districts face unprecedented Democratic unity amidst a sick economy.

With sincere Republican predictions of rare mid-term gains scarcely died down, it is now GOP panic time. Party strategists believe the only answer is to mobilize The Great Communicator on television and the political circuit, promising to produce jobs, jobs and more jobs in the future.

Such presidential salvation is difficult considering the administration's own internal predictions for a most modest

Strength For Today

LAW AND LOVE

In the discussion of moral problems, one often hears the statement that we should approach the solution of such problems only from the positive standpoint, not from the negative. Instead of stating flatly that certain things are wrong, we are urged to point out the advantages which accrue to goodness in life. According to this point of view, we should emphasize the goodness rather than the evil.

There is some truth to this viewpoint, but if the approach to moral problems is to be realistic, it must contain both the negative and positive elements. Evil must be designated as evil in no uncertain terms, just as good must be designated as good. A continually negative approach ends in legalism, but a continually positive approach ends in sentimentality. The best analysis of moral problems involves both positive and negative elements.

Sound morality involves both law and love. — Elisha Douglass

Maybe Savings In 2nd Opinion

By LOUISE COOK

Associated Press Writer

That old saying about two heads being better than one may be able to save you pain and money when it comes to medical treatment.

A growing number of people in the health-care industry, including some government experts, are urging consumers to seek a second opinion about certain recommended treatment, particularly elective surgery.

The Health Care Financing Administration of the Department of Health and Human Services even has a special, toll-free hotline that members of the public can call to find out where to go for a second opinion about non-emergency operations.

Anne Verano, a spokeswoman for the agency, says the program, begun late in 1978, "has been worth the effort that we've put into it."

She said operators for the hotline field 1,000 calls a month.

Ms. Verano said the department has no statistics yet on how many people who have used the hotline actually got second opinion; nor does anyone have comprehensive figures on how many unnecessary operations have been avoided. She said, however, that program staffers hope to have a summary about the results of the project by the end of the year.

Meanwhile, Ms. Verano said, "the department thinks it's worthwhile. The interest is there."

Medicare — the federal insurance program for older Americans — pays for second opinions on the same basis it pays for other treatment. Ms. Verano said state-run Medicaid programs for the poor and most private insurers also will foot most of the bill for second opinions.

A free booklet, "Facing Surgery? Why Not Get A Second Opinion?" is available from Surgery, Health and Human Services, Washington, D.C., 20201. Ms. Verano said 7 1/2 million copies of the booklet have been distributed so far.

The Health Care Financing Administration hotline program is limited to second opinions on operations which are recommended, but do not involve a life-threatening emergency situation — things like tonsillectomies and hysterectomies.

Another group of patients — cancer victims — also will be able to get information soon on alternative treatments through a computerized databank being set up by the National Cancer Institute.

"PDQ," standing for "Protocol Data Query," will go into operation on Oct. 1 and will enable patients and their doctors to find out the latest available types of treatment for many different types of cancers. The information, supplied by the Cancer Therapy Evaluation Program of the institute, will be updated monthly.

Dr. Vincent DeVita, director of the National Cancer Institute, explained at a recent news conference in New York sponsored by the General Motors Cancer Research Foundation that in order to gain access to the databank in its early stages you must use one of the 1,800 computer terminals connected to the central computer facility at the National Library of Medicine in Bethesda, Md.

Regional coordinating centers can perform searches for you or identify libraries close to your home that can do the work. There is a fee for the service, depending on how long the search takes and how much information is printed out.

As the system develops, DeVita said he expected it will be available to anyone with a home computer — much the same way that news and shopping information is now available. Doctors who have computer terminals will be able to get special numbers giving them access to the PDQ system.

The computer system also will "make it possible for everybody in the country to get access to the same quality of medical care," he said, and will be particularly useful to the "average practicing physician" who might not be familiar with the latest of treatments.

Further information is available from the International Cancer Research Data Bank Program, National Cancer Institute, Westwood Building, Room 10A18, Bethesda, Md., 20205.

FOCUS

A "Nast-y" Crusader

More than 100 years after his death in prison, William "Boss" Tweed remains a symbol of political corruption. But we might not remember him if it weren't for the efforts of political cartoonist Thomas Nast. In a series of cartoons like this one, Nast exposed the corruption of the Tweed Ring and helped bring about the downfall of Tweed's Tammany Hall political machine. Nast also created symbols that are still used in modern political cartoons — including the Republican elephant and the Democratic donkey. Today, on the 142nd anniversary of his birth, he remains a major influence for editorial cartoonists whose job is to observe and criticize the political process and, if necessary, to be "Nast-y."

DO YOU KNOW — What animal did Nast use to symbolize the Tammany Hall political machine?

Utilities Commission No More 'Mr. Nice Guy'

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Less than a year after Wall Street analysts called it one of the nation's most pro-business utility regulators, North Carolina's utilities commission is getting tough, some observers say.

Analysts are taking a second look at the commission in light of several decisions, including last week's rejection of almost all of Carolina Power & Light Co.'s proposed $160 million increase.

Two months earlier, the commission granted only half of a $22.4 million increase requested by Virginia Electric and Power Co., which serves northeastern North Carolina.

The Veeco and CP&L rulings and recent changes in North Carolina utilities law have prompted the analysts to revise their thinking about the commission. Earlier this year financial analysts ranked the commission as one of the most favorable in the nation in its treatment of utilities.

Commission actions influence the advice Wall Street gives about buying securities of CP&L and other North Carolina utilities.

"They're taking a lot of political heat," said James P. O'Mealia, analyst at Argus Research Corp. in New York. "It has affected them and they're becoming a lot more strict."

Argus and Merrill Lynch Co. have downgraded ratings of the commission's friendliness to utilities, and two other firms are watching developments closely, spokesmen said.

State Rep. J.P. Huskins, D-Iredell, agreed that the commission seems "to be taking a tougher stance." Huskins is one of the legislators who helped write a new utility law.

But not everyone agrees.

"This is just a one-shot deal for the present," said Wells Eddleman of the Kudzu Alliance, a Durham-based anti-nuclear group. "The long-term trends have been very bad for consumers."

Douglas W. Booth, president of Duke Power Co.,

which has a rate request pending before the commission, said it isn't possible to judge the regulatory environment yet.

"I think you'd have to see whether a pattern developed," he said.

Utilities Commission Chairman Robert K. Koger denied the group has decided to change.

"We're just trying to fairly weight the evidence," he said.

Two things about the Veeco and CP&L cases lead some to believe a new trend has been set. The commission is granting a lower percentage of proposed increases and is using its new power to deny increases to cover some fuel costs and some of the costs of financing new construction work.

Before the new utility law took effect in July, the two costs were approved.

Last year, electric utilities got 79 percent of the amount they requested from the commission. By contrast,

CP&L got little more than 5 percent of its most recent request and Veeco got about 50 percent of its request.

Also, the commission appeared to focus new scrutiny on the question of profit. It approved a rate of return of 14.5 percent on CP&L stockholders' investment, 4 percentage points less than the company had requested.

Murder Theory Is Yet To Be Proved

HAYS, N.C. (AP) — Wilkes County Sheriff Kyle Gentry believes Garry Patrick Sidden's cousin shot and killed him in a family feud. Gentry also thinks Sidden's two sons were kidnapped and murdered.

The problem, Gentry says, is proving his theories.

Two months after Sidden's death, his two sons remain missing and two people charged with murder are still at large.

"We're at a standstill," said Gentry. "We have no leads left to check out."

Sidden was shot in the back and neck early July 22.

His cousin, Tony Mitchell Sidden, 35, of Hays, and Tony Sidden's stepson, Anthony Ray Blankenship, 15, have been charged. The two suspects and Tony Sidden's wife, Brenda Moore Sidden, and her teen-aged daughter have not been seen since the shooting.

Gentry said he had never seen a family of four vanish so completely.

"He (Tony Sidden) had several different cars in different people's names, so we don't know what kind of car they might have been in," he said.

Investigators say Garry Sidden's sons, Garry Jr., 16, and Gavin Sidden, 10, may have been kidnapped because they saw their father killed. The boys have not been seen since their father's death.

"Based on the length of time they've been missing without a trace and some information we learned in the investigation, I think they are no longer alive," Gentry said.

Three weeks after the shooting, the FBI issued a warrant charging that Tony Sidden fled North Carolina to avoid prosecution.

Gentry said investigators still believe the shooting was the result of a family feud.

Garry Sidden was convicted of shooting Tony Sidden about four months before Garry Sidden was killed. Garry Sidden was sentenced to two years in prison but was free on a $10,000 bond pending appeal at the time of his death.

MOVE TO THE MUSIC

Every morning I keep my figure in shape and my mind in gear. How? By listening to the news on this FM portable radio when I bike. I got it at a low saver's price when I moved my checking account to First American.

FETUS FACTS

If you are a typical mother, don't ask where you went wrong if your infant is a thumbsucker. You are completely innocent. Thumbsuckers are born, not made. Medical pictures of the fetus show that many babies are already well into the habit of thumbsucking by the seventh month in the uterus. In fact, all kinds of preparations are going on before birth to get baby's mouth ready for its complex tasks.

Did you know that teeth are already beginning to form in the growing fetus just three months after conception? Indeed, some parts of the 20 primary teeth, (also called baby teeth) can be recognized at this early stage. Even tiny pieces of the first permanent molars are growing. The rest of the permanent teeth wait until right after birth to start forming inside the gums.

Sometimes, shortly after birth, parents or physicians may notice little white spots on the upper palate (roof of the mouth). These are little keratinized structures (keratine is a tough, fibrous protein found in nails, hair and teeth). They are not significant and normally will disappear in 10 to 14 days.

Prepared as a public service to promote better dental health. From the office of: Kenneth T. Perkins, D.D.S. P.A. Evans St., Phone: 752-5126.

ECU Scientists Study Vessel

ECU News Bureau

YORKTOWN, VA. — A Revolutionary War Supply Vessel, scuttled by General Cornwallis at Yorktown in 1781, is being studied by underwater archaeologists from East Carolina University in Greenville.

A team of graduate students led by Gordon Watts, a director for the ECU program in Maritime History and Underwater Archaeology, is assisting the Archaeology Branch of the Virginia Historical Landmarks Commission in excavating one of several ships strategically scuttled by the British general in the final hours of the revolution.

Cornwallis sank the ships to discourage an amphibious attack to his rear by a fleet of French and American vessels lying in wait off the Virginia Capes.

Watts said that he and archaeologists in Virginia have worked the sites since the early 1970s to determine the significance of the ships. Since then, a coffer dam has been constructed around the best preserved site and a water purification system has been installed to clear the water for better visibility.

The ECU crew arrived in Yorktown Sept. 21. They will work at the site through October 20.

In addition to Watts, the crew consists of Lee Cox of Philadelphia, Brian Watson of Wilmington, Dave Moore of Eden, and Sam Newell of Snow Hill.

They are living on a vessel provided by the Virginia Institute of Marine Sciences.

Sea Grant Program Set

Dr. B.J. Copeland, director of the University of North Carolina Sea Grant Program, will speak to the Pamlico-Tar River Foundation Thursday at 7:30 p.m. at the Beaufort County Courthouse.

Dr. Copeland became director of Sea Grant in 1973 and has published about 100 articles and reports dealing with estuarine ecology, water quality, marine resource utilization and coastal zone management. He is currently working on a book on the Pamlico-Tar River.

Lt. Allen is a graduate of the School of Business of East Carolina University and is the son of Lt. Col. John Gorman Allen Jr., U.S. Army retired, of Greenville. He reports for active duty in October to The Basic School, Marine Corps Development and Education Command, Quantico, Va.

Administering the oath of office was Col. Sheldon C. Downes, USMCR, chairman of and professor in the Department of Rehabilitation Studies at East Carolina University.

Mecklenburg County Weighing A 'Revolutionary' Teaching Plan

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A plan that would drastically change the teacher's job could be the last hope for public schools in North Carolina and elsewhere, the man who devised it says.

The Charlotte-Mecklenburg school board Tuesday will consider the plan, aimed at attracting the best and brightest students to the teaching profession and keeping them in the schools.

"I really believe that if public education in America can be saved, it can be saved here," said Phil Schlechty, a University of North Carolina professor who led the committee that developed the plan.

"I know if nothing's done, these will be the good old days in education. In 15 to 20 years the schools will be the homes of the helpless led by the hopeless."

The plan would set up more time-consuming, demanding and practical standards for becoming a tenured teacher. But it also would set up rewards to make career teaching a better paid, more attractive and responsible job.

Teachers could be promoted to higher positions, resembling assistant, associate and full professorships in higher education. Their salaries would be approximately equal to those of mid-level managers in high-technology industries.

"The General Assembly, the county commissioners, the board of education and, ultimately, the taxpayers will have to decide if they're willing to pay for this program," said Superintendent Jay Robinson, noting the program will require an unknown amount of additional money.

Robinson said he thinks the plan could mean the difference between good or bad schools by the year 2000.

He said the plan addresses national trends indicating that some of the best teachers are leaving the profession because they are frustrated by low salaries, lower job prestige and a system that rewards sheer endurance instead of talent, achievement or hard work.

Under the current system, college graduates must pass the National Teachers Examination, then work under probation for three years. After that, the teacher automatically is tenured and can be fired only for serious offenses. Teachers are paid according to experience and education.

The Charlotte-Mecklenburg plan was developed by an 11-member committee of teachers, administrators and local residents appointed by Robinson more than a year ago.

Under the plan, new teachers would be trained for four to six years. They would be evaluated four times during their first year and those who are successful would become "career teacher nominees." Any teacher not reaching that status by the second year would have to quit.

After three years, promising teachers would become "career candidates." Some would reach "career teacher" status after their fourth year, gaining tenure and a sizable raise. Others might spend six years working toward that goal.

At that point, tenured teachers could choose several fields of advancement and look forward to further promotions with generous salary increases.

Four Wrecks Cause Damage

An estimated $4,600 damage resulted from four traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Sunday.

Officers said heaviest damage resulted from an 8 p.m. collision on Greenville Boulevard, 3 mile east of the Evans Street intersection, where a car driven by Aaron Vandiford Williams of 2614 Tryon Drive collided with a fire hydrant.

Damage to the car was estimated at $2,500, while no damage to the hydrant was reported.

Cars driven by Cynthia Ann Creel of 1902 East Fourth St., and David Henry Cox of 305C Azalea Gardens, collided about 10:10 a.m. at the intersection of Fifth Street and Memorial Drive, causing an estimated $500 damage to the Creel car and $300 damage to the Cox auto.

Cars driven by Donna Lynn Gay of Williamston and Russell Eugene Barnes of Roanoke Rapids, collided about 8:15 p.m. at the intersection of Greene Street and Airport Road.

Officers estimated damage at $400 to the Barnes car and $300 to the Gay auto.

Investigators reported Nancy Anne Morris of 900 Heath St. was charged with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of a 10:28 p.m. mishap at the intersection of Reade and Cotanche Streets.

Police, who identified the driver of the other car involved as Michael Stephen Haut of 418 Pittman Drive, estimated damage at $100 to the Morris car and $500 to the Haut vehicle.

Perdue Broiler Houses...

An Investment That Pays You While It Pays For Itself.

Most crops, like tobacco for instance, require a large annual capital outlay followed by a long wait for a possible profit. A Perdue broiler house on the other hand is a crop that doesn't require a large annual capital outlay, or a four to five month wait to maybe turn a profit. Perdue broilers pay after every eight/nine week flock, starting with the first one. And those checks are guaranteed.

Also, a Perdue broiler house is one of the few agricultural operations that can pay its own way. Many others can't even generate enough income to pay for themselves much less provide a profit. And when a Perdue house is paid for, it won't be worn out like most row-crop equipment — compare that to other farm investments. And at market time, Perdue even absorbs poultry market fluctuations. That makes a Perdue broiler house a virtually risk-free sound investment.

Perdue pays a guaranteed paycheck every eight/nine weeks. These checks add up to over $20,000 a year gross income on a 500' house. And with better performance comes even better pay. So if you've been depending on row crops alone, you may want to consider Perdue. A broiler operation is compatible with your other farming responsibilities. But as an investment it stands alone. There's never been a better time to talk chicken with Perdue.

YOU'RE IN CHARGE!

You may not use a credit card when you flip a light switch, push the button on your blender or raise the thermostat setting, but you are "charging" electricity.

Energy is something you buy, like groceries or clothes. It's something that must be manufactured and delivered to your home. We're the ones responsible for seeing that you have all the electricity you need, when you need it. But you and your family make the final decisions on how much energy you will use and how to budget for that use.

The average American family spends between $2000 and $4000 on energy expenditures every year. Your decisions on energy use and conservation investments could reduce your energy bill by a substantial percentage — without any "sacrifice" of quality of life.

Greenville Utilities has developed energy services to assist customers in saving energy dollars.

Wayne Rescue Squads Dominate N.C. Event

ASHEVILLE — Four Wayne County rescue squads dominated the state heavy duty rescue and first aid competitions sponsored by the North Carolina Association of Rescue Squads here Saturday.

A Mount Olive Rescue Squad team took first place in the rescue competition, while a team from Goldsboro took first place in the first aid contest. Teams from Freemont Rescue Squad and Grantham Rescue Squad took third and fourth place in the first aid competition.

The Mount Olive squad has dominated state rescue competition since the volunteer Greenville Rescue Squad disbanded in February 1980. It has placed first in the competition for the past three years.

Between 1961 and 1980, Greenville teams took 28 state rescue and first aid trophies, including 15 first place awards. Greenville teams also won 13 international first aid and heavy duty rescue trophies, including three world championships.

Saturday's award was the second consecutive year that a team from Goldsboro has placed first in the first aid competition.

A former member of the old Greenville Rescue Squad, Stuart Savage, a staff writer for The Daily Reflector, has acted as training officer for Mount Olive's heavy duty rescue team for the past three years.

Oil And Gas PACs Give Most

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional candidates have received $4.3 million so far from oil and gas companies for the 1982 elections, according to a consumer coalition critical of the oil industry's political influence.

The Citizen-Labor Energy Coalition, updating an earlier study, said Sunday that 196 political action committees (PACs) with oil and gas interests gave the money to the congressional candidates from Jan. 1, 1981, to July 31, 1982.

It was the largest political contribution from a single industry.

"The message to members of Congress and would-be candidates is as powerful as it is obvious — the oil industry is ready and able to spend millions of dollars to protect its friends and defeat its enemies," said Energy Coalition Executive Director Robert M. Brandon.

Brandon said the growing number of oil and gas PACs is "making a mockery" of campaign spending limits. "With nearly 200 PACs, the oil industry is able to channel almost any amount of contributions into the coffers of its supporters," he said.

Political action committees are sponsored by businesses, unions and associations which solicit funds from their executives or members for the purpose of supporting political candidates. Federal law permits a PAC to give candidates $5,000 in their primary campaign and another $5,000 for the general election. The average congressional candidate gets 40 percent of his money from PACs.

The American Petroleum Institute said oil and gas company PACs were exercising their right to participate in the political process.

The coalition study said Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, received the largest amount of oil and gas money of any Senate candidate — $125,158. Rep. Phil Gramm, D-Texas, led House candidates with $82,600.

While both are Democrats, the survey said the oil and gas PACs had contributed three times more money to Republicans than Democrats.

In addition to Bentsen, eight other Senate candidates have received over $50,000, the survey said. They are Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, $107,296; Sen. Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo., $88,579; Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., $78,934; Sen. Harrison Schmitt, R-N.M., $73,100; Rep. Jim Santini, who lost a bid for the Democratic Senate nomination in Nevada, $70,614; Rep. Cleve Benedict, Republican Senate candidate in West Virginia, $66,531; Sen. David Durenberger, R-Minn., $57,500; and Pete Wilson, Republican Senate candidate in California, $57,201.

Following Gramm in the House were Liles Williams, a Republican candidate in Mississippi, $37,987; and Reps. Jim Jones, D-Okla., $33,150; Robert Michel, R-Ill., $32,202; John Rousselot, R-Calif., $29,525; Clint Roberts, R-S.D., $29,100; Jack Fields, R-Texas, $29,050; Jim Coyne, R-Pa., $28,675.

Jack Martin, Bentsen's state campaign director, said Bentsen was happy to lead all candidates in contributions since "oil and gas is a vital part of our state."

Motive Unclear In Shooting Of 13, Including 5 Of His Children

By BOB DVORCHAK
Associated Press Writer
WILKES-BARRE, Pa. — A prison guard in custody today after a shooting rampage that left 13 people dead — five of them his own sons and daughters — was "worried about his children" and had been involved in a custody dispute, neighbors said.

George Banks, 40, has been charged in five of Saturday's 13 slayings, with more charges to be filed Tuesday or Wednesday, said Robert Gillespie, Luzerne County district attorney.

The victims included seven children — five of them Banks' — and six adults, including four women who gave birth to his children and a man who apparently was a bystander. Another bystander was critically wounded, police said.

Gillespie refused Sunday to suggest a motive, saying he was barred from discussing "evidentiary" matters.

Neighbors said Banks may have been driven by a custody battle with Sharon Mazzillo, 24, the mother of their 5-year-old child, Kissmayou Banks, who was born out of wedlock. Both Ms. Mazzillo and the child were killed.

Elaine Monahan, who lived across the street from Banks' two-story frame house, said he had asked her to appear as a witness in the custody dispute. "To fight for his kids like that and then do something like this," she added grimly.

Banks' mother, Mary Yelland, said her son began having "problems" three weeks ago at his job. "They told him to come home and see a psychiatrist," Mrs. Yelland said. She did not know if her son had seen a doctor and did not specify the problems.

Mrs. Yelland refused further comment. On Sunday she tacked to her door a hand-printed sign reading: "Reporters, you are not welcome! Please have the respect enough not to knock, and leave me spend Sunday in prayer."
 "He had problems he could not deal with any more," said Robert Brunson, 36, who helped talk Banks into surrendering. "He was worried about his children. He said he tried to get help, but there was none available. He said it was a good day to die. He wanted to die."

Banks is black and the women who had his children were white. After he moved into this predominantly white neighborhood four years ago, his porch was firebombed, neighbors said. But they stressed that other local property was damaged at that time and many neighbors did not think the firebombing was racially motivated.

Banks was held alone at the Luzerne County Prison. Two guards were posted at his cell door and he was under closed-circuit television surveillance.

"He said he was going to kill himself and nobody was going to stop him," said Margie Collins, a prison nurse who examined Banks after he surrendered. She said Banks told her he had been drinking a fifth of gin a day for four days.

Banks had been on extended leave since Sept. 6 from his job as a tower guard at a state prison near Harrisburg, where he has worked since 1980 after serving seven years for an armed robbery conviction.

Three of the dead women and five of the slain children lived in a house on

Volcano Sleeps After Eruption

VOLCANO, Hawaii (AP) — Thousands of people flocked to the site of a brief, spectacular eruption of Kilauea Volcano, with park rangers allowing visitors to approach the cooling, encrusted lava flow.

However, the heat generated by the molten rock on the floor of the huge summit crater kept the sightseers at a safe distance.

The eruption, which created a curtain of fire in the night sky, occurred Saturday night after about two hours warning in the form of a series of mini-earthquakes and a swelling of the volcano summit.

The quakes marked the opening of a crack about three-fourths of a mile long in the southern part of the crater floor near the Halemauau Firepit.

At 6:44 p.m., lava started spewing from the fissure and after several hours, the molten rock was reaching an average 100 feet in the air, with some bursts of 200 feet, according to observers.

The activity began to die down at about midnight Saturday and ended completely by 9 a.m. Sunday.

The eruption spilled an estimated 3 million cubic meters of lava onto the crater floor, creating one lava flow about a mile long, scientists said.

That lava volume was considerably greater than that produced by Kilauea's last eruption April 30, about a mile from Saturday's eruption. The earlier eruption lasted 19 hours.

The eruption took place inside Hawaii Volcanoes National Park and posed no danger to buildings.

Surprise! Players, Owners Disagree On Offer

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. (AP) — Players union leaders disagree that management's latest guarantee of $1.6 billion over a five-year period could help settle the National Football League strike.

Jack Donlan, chief negotiator for the NFL owners, said after a six-hour negotiating session Sunday that the Management Council had offered to distribute, in the form of bonuses, the difference between $1.6 billion and the amount of money teams spend in salaries in the next five years.

In return, the players union would drop its wage-scale demand and return to the system of individually negotiated contracts.

"That sounds more like what we were talking about," said Gene Upshaw, president of the players union, who nevertheless said the meetings — the first since talks broke off Sept. 17 — were unfruitful.

"The session ended just as it started," Upshaw said. "There is no change in the owners' position in almost all the players demands."

Ed Garvey, the NFL Players Association's executive director, was unenthusiastic about Donlan's proposal. "It's essentially a false guarantee," Garvey said. "We still don't know where the money is going to go and to suggest to an active player today that you're going to divide it up five years from today is ludicrous."

Garvey also suggested that the bonus money would be given to rookies to keep them from signing contracts with the new United States Football League.

"There is no new offer from the owners," Garvey added. "What they had on the table Sept. 8 is still there. I'm amazed that they wouldn't put something on the table that would entice the players to come back."

Garvey said he didn't believe owners would get serious until Oct. 6, after television money runs out.

"The networks have funded them for two weeks so they haven't felt the pinch yet," the union leader said. "When they see that nobody comes in, then maybe they'll get serious."

Donlan, however, said Sunday's proposal was bona fide.

"We made a move today which we are very hopeful and very optimistic is going to end the dispute," he said. "We hope to be back negotiating early this week," probably in Washington.

Donlan said any of the $1.6 billion not spent on salaries would be "put in a kitty" and distributed according to a formula to all players active during the five-year term of the agreement.

He said this would solve the players' complaint that management would have an incentive to cut higher-priced veterans in favor of rookies.

Before Sunday's talks resumed at Hofstra University, Upshaw and NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle, who has stayed away from the negotiating sessions, gave generally bleak outlooks in television interviews.

Upshaw said on CBS' "Face The Nation" that the strike "may go on a lot longer than anticipated because the networks are involved."

The three networks have said they will pay the NFL about $30 million for this weekend's games and another $30 million for next weekend's, the money to be refunded next year only if the games are eventually canceled.

Upshaw said that CBS, ABC and NBC are in an "untenable position... We feel the networks have to be investigated. There's no room in this for a third party."

Upshaw also said the union, which has threatened legal action because of what he termed the networks' "funding of the strike," would testify next Thursday before Rep. Peter Rodino, D-N.J., chairman of the House Judiciary Committee.

Rozelle said on "The NFL Today" that the strike would have to be settled by Thursday in order to rescue next Sunday's and Monday night's games.

And he added that it would be very difficult for the league to make up more than one lost weekend because of problems with weather in January and the need to keep a firm date for the Super Bowl in Pasadena, Calif.

Also at the bargaining session were Chip Yablonski and Dick Berthelsen, counsel for the union, and executive board members Mark Murphy (Washington), Tom Condon (Kansas City), Dan Jiggetts (Chicago), James Lofton (Green Bay), Jeff Van Note (Atlanta), John Bunting (Philadelphia) and Stan White (Detroit). Jimmy Cefalo (Miami) was delayed when his flight from Florida was fogged in.

Guards kept everyone but the negotiators out of the building — and for a moment, they kept Garvey out, too. He had to show a credit card to prove his identity before the guards would let him pass.

In his interview on "Face The Nation," Upshaw denied there was "erosion" in the union's solidarity. "In every labor position, there's always disagreement within the ranks," he said. "When there's no football being played, that's living proof we're solid."

Upshaw also said he expects that within the next few days, "the owners will open the doors and will try to bribe players, invite them in. But the players are too smart... I'm not saying no players will go in, but I'm saying enough will stay out that we'll hold together."

ECU's Harris, Nichols Get Player Honors

East Carolina University free safety Clint Harris and wide receiver Ricky Nichols have been named offensive and defensive Players of the Week for their efforts in the Pirates' 24-6 win over Central Michigan Saturday night.

The ECU coaching staff made the selections Sunday night after reviewing films of Saturday night's win.

Harris, a 6-0, 200-pound junior from Chesapeake, Va., intercepted a pass and returned it 77 yards for a touchdown to key the Pirates to their second win in three outings this season.

Harris, who also runs track at ECU, was credited with five total hits and he also knocked down a pass along with his interception, which gave the Pirates a 24-6 lead in the final period.

"I won't say that it (Harris' pickoff) was the turning point, but it sure took us out of it," Central Michigan coach Herb Deromedi said after the game Saturday night.

Nichols, a 5-10, 175-pound sophomore from Chesapeake, Va., caught two passes for 87 yards. One of his catches was a 50-yarder that set up ECU's first score of the game.

But, Nichols' efforts in other areas impressed ECU coach Ed Emory just as much as his two catches.

"Ricky did an exceptional job blocking, which is so critical for from our wide receiver in our offense," Emory said.

Asked if there was a turning point in the game, Emory said: "The turning point? I suppose when Nichols caught the long pass... That was enough because they (the Chippewas) have not got in their yet thanks to our defense."

ECU returns to action Saturday when the Pirates travel to Missouri to take on the Tigers. Missouri is coming off a 21-0 loss to 17th-ranked Texas.

"This (the win over CMU) is the type of game that should prepare us well for Missouri," Emory said.

Emory will be at the Quarterback Club beginning at 6 o'clock tonight at the Ramada Inn. Emory will answer questions about ECU's win over CMU, the Pirates' upcoming game against Missouri and other questions pertaining to the Pirate football.

After San Fran Downs Slumping Dodgers

Giants, Braves One Back Of L.A.

By The Associated Press

The slumping Los Angeles Dodgers still have the San Francisco Giants and Atlanta Braves right where they want them — in second place and one game back in the National League West.

The Dodgers retained a one-game lead despite a 3-2 loss Sunday to the fast-closing Giants, who moved into a second-place tie with Atlanta, which dropped a 3-2 decision to San Diego. The loss was the fifth straight for the Dodgers and fourth in a row by one run.

All three teams have seven games remaining in the regular season with the Braves and Giants meeting tonight and Tuesday in San Francisco, while the Dodgers open a two-game series at home with Cincinnati tonight.

"We're still in first place, it's that simple," said Los Angeles Manager Tommy Lasorda. "I'd rather be where we are than where they are."

Burt Hooton, 3-7, who gave up all three San Francisco runs in the fifth inning on Jack Clark's RBI double and Darrell Evans' two-run homer, said Los Angeles is still playing well despite the losing streak.

Al Holland, who picked up his fifth save with 3 2/3 innings of one-hit ball in relief of starter Fred Breining, disputed Lasorda's comment.

"I think we're in the driver's seat now because we're playing the best baseball in the major leagues," said Holland after the Giants posted their 10th win in 12 games.

The Dodgers scored runs in the sixth and seventh innings on Steve Garvey's RBI single and Baker's run-scoring groundout.

Padres 3, Braves 2
Joe Pittman singled home the tie-breaking run with one out in the ninth inning as San Diego trimmed Atlanta. Tony Gwynn started the rally with a walk, was sacrificed to second and scored on Pittman's single off Rick Camp.

Gary Lucas, 1-10, got the win with three innings of one-hit relief.

Atlanta scored on Chris Chambliss' home run in the second inning and Terry Harper's sacrifice fly in the sixth.

San Diego took a 1-0 lead in the second when Harper dropped Gene Richards' fly ball down the left-field line and saw it fall out of his glove over the fence in foul territory for a four-base error.

"They're all important now because we've got to win them all," said Manager Joe Torre of the Braves upcoming series with the Giants. "I'm pleased we're going out there after a good effort. We just lost to a good pitcher."

Cubs 6, Cardinals 1
St. Louis had its magic number for clinching the NL East reduced to two despite losing to Chicago, thanks to the Mets' win over second-place Philadelphia.

St. Louis, which has six games remaining, needs any combination of wins or Philadelphia losses totaling two to nail down its first title since 1968.

Ferguson Jenkins, 13-15, pitched seven-hit ball for eight innings to record his 277th career triumph and capped Chicago's two-out, five-run first inning outburst with a two-run double. Jay Johnstone also had a two-run double in the inning and Junior Kennedy added an RBI single off Eric Rasmussen, 0-2.

"It's bad in the fact that we could have clinched a tie."

Rookie Helps Birds Close Gap In East

By The Associated Press

The critical moment of the most crucial game in the American League East pennant race this year came down to a battle of two rookies.

With one out in the eighth inning Sunday, Milwaukee's Bob Skube was perched on third base with his AL East-leading Brewers trailing second-place Baltimore 3-2.

Cecil Cooper then lifted a soft fly to center field, where Orioles rookie John Shelby caught the ball as Skube tagged up.

Shelby's throw home took one hop to Orioles catcher Rick Dempsey, who made the tag just in time to complete the double play and end Milwaukee's threat. Baltimore added two insurance runs in the ninth for a 5-2 victory, which cut Milwaukee's lead to just two games over the Orioles.

Each team has seven games left, and the Brewers and Orioles end the season with a four-game series in Baltimore.

In other AL games, Texas beat West Division-leading California 7-5; Oakland rallied past Kansas City 5-4; Boston downed New York 5-2; Cleveland edged Detroit 4-3; Minnesota nipped Chicago 2-1; and Toronto topped Seattle 6-2.

"I knew Shelby had a good arm, and I knew we had a chance once I saw him (Skube) coming in," Dempsey said.

Orioles starter Dennis Martinez, 15-12, said "that was the play of the game. If they tied the game, they might feel completely different."

Skube, a pinch-hitter whose single had set up a Milwaukee run in the eighth, said he gave it his best shot.

"My instructions were to go and I went," he said. "I got a real good jump. If the throw is off six inches one way or the other, I'm safe."

Eddie Murray drilled his 31st homer and added a sacrifice fly, while Milwaukee's Gorman Thomas belted his 39th homer, tops in the majors.

Rangers 7, Angels 5
Larry Parrish hit a three-run homer, capping a four-run first inning to highlight the Texas victory.

California remained 3 1/2 games ahead of Kansas City in the AL West. Any combination of California victories and Kansas City losses totalling four will give the Angels the pennant.

Reggie Jackson hit his 36th homer, while Fred Lynn and Doug DeCinces also homered for California.

A's 5, Royals 4
Mike Heath's run-scoring single with two out in the eighth capped an Oakland comeback and sent Kansas City to its ninth loss in 10 games.

Jerry Martin and U.L. Washington had homered as the Royals took a 4-0 lead, but Oakland rallied as Dwayne Murphy and Tony Armas hit solo homers and Mike Davis belted a two-run double.

Red Sox 5, Yankees 2
Jim Rice's two-out triple gave Boston a 3-2 lead in the seventh inning. The Red Sox added two insurance runs in the eighth. Dwight Evans smacked his 28th homer, a two-run shot, off loser Ron Guidry, 14-8.

Bob Stanley, 12-7, got the victory after bailing out starter Mike Torrez in the sixth.

Twins 2, White Sox 1
Bobby Castillo tossed a five-hitter and Gary Gaetti hit his 25th homer for the Twins. Castillo, 12-11, won his fourth straight game while beating Richard Dotson, 11-14.

Ron Washington tripled and added three singles for Minnesota.

Indians 4, Tigers 3
Jack Perconte had an RBI double as the Indians capitalized on some shabby Detroit fielding. Two of Cleveland's runs scored on Tigers errors.

Len Barker upped his record to 14-11 despite yielding a two-run homer to Alan Trammell.

Blue Jays 6, Mariners 2
Dave Stieb, 16-14, bested Seattle's Floyd Bannister, 12-12, who was hurt by three unearned runs.

Buck Martinez homered and drove in two runs for Toronto. Bannister struck out eight, running his AL-leading total to 203.

Clampett Earns 1st PGA Victory

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — Young Bobby Clampett got the monkey off his back at the $250,000 Southern Open golf tournament, the same event that launched another great career 11 years ago for close friend Johnny Miller.

Clampett, clad in gray knickers, matching argyle socks and a white hat, shirt and shoes, earned his first Professional Golfers Association victory Sunday by battering the 6,791-yard Green Island Country Club course with a 64 and a 14-under-par 266 total to win $45,000.

Hale Irwin, who shattered the tournament record with a 61 Sunday, including nine birdies, slipped past third-round leader George Burns to take second-place money of $27,000 with a 268. Burns, with a finishing 68, was next at 269.

"I felt like I was going to win but I didn't know when," said the 22-year-old Clampett. "It's been a weight on my shoulders."

With the victory, Clampett, a slim, curly haired blond, now has earned $379,500 in only two years on the tour. He had come close twice, losing in playoffs during that time, and has six second places and three third places, including a third in the U.S. Open.

"It's a great feeling, it really is. I've felt like this before, but never as strong as now," said the smiling youngster.

"Johnny Miller called me twice while on the course," said Clampett of his friend who won his first ever PGA title here in 1971 and has since won 20 others and hauled in nearly $1.7 million on the tour.

He said Miller left messages of encouragement and wished him luck on the seventh and 10th holes.

"I then went out and birdied 7, 10, 11, 12 and 13. John's a very good friend. He's like a big brother," said Clampett.

Little Takes Seniors

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Gene Littler credited his victory in the World Seniors Invitational golf tournament to his putting. But it was a longer shot — 118 yards to be exact — that put the 52-year-old champion out of reach.

Littler fired his fourth consecutive sub-par round Sunday, a 2-under par 70, and finished with an 8-under par 280 to win the $150,000 tournament.

The highlight of the round was Littler's eagle on No. 14, a 343-yard par 4. With his ball 118 yards from the pin, he pulled out his 9-iron and watched his shot roll into the hole.

"It landed to the right of the cup and ran right in," Littler said. "When I made that, it was pretty well all over with."

Littler added a 20-foot putt for a birdie on the next hole and was never threatened thereafter, finishing a comfortable five strokes ahead of second-place Miller Barber.

Peter Thomson, who shot a 68 in the final round, was third at 286. Gay Brewer, Roberto DeVicenzo and Howie Johnson were eight strokes back in fourth at 288.

Arnold Palmer, Bob Goalby and Tom Nienpore were at 289. Littler was in trouble early Sunday, missing a 15-foot par putt at No. 1 and bogeying No. 3. But he recovered to birdie the 6th hole on an 18-foot shot.

For the afternoon, he hit 13 greens and needed only 30 putts.

"It was probably my best putting week in four or five years," he said. "I putted extremely well."

It was Littler's fourth victory on the seniors tour. He won the Vintage Invitational in 1981 and teamed with Bob Rosburg to win the Legends of Golf tournament. Before joining the seniors tour, he had 29 victories on the PGA Tour, the last in 1977.

Littler won the first World Seniors at the Quail Hollow Country Club in 1980.

Duke Stuns #1 Tigers in Soccer

DURHAM (AP) — Junior forward Bob Jenkins scored a breakaway goal with 28:05 left Sunday to lift No. 7 Duke to a 1-0 victory over top-ranked Clemson in a rain-soaked Atlantic Coast Conference soccer match.

Jenkins took the ball on a header from forward Tom Kain and outmaneuvered Tiger goalie Jamie Swanner in a one-on-one situation for the goal.

The Blue Devils, undefeated in eight games, outshot Clemson 12-10, but many of the Tigers' attempts came in the final minutes.

Clemson senior Maxwell Amatasiro kicked what appeared to be the tying shot as Duke goalie Pat Johnston was out of position, but senior co-captain Graziano Giglio moved into the net to make the save.

Last week, Clemson knocked off Southern Illinois-Edwardsville to claim the No. 1 spot. The Tigers are now 5-1.

Saturday night turned into another disappointment at Ficklen Stadium. But the disappointment was not so much what went on on the field as the Pirates gained a 24-6 victory over a tough Central Michigan football team, but what went on in the stands.

Or maybe better said, what didn't go on. Following East Carolina's opening game at N.C. State — a game many still feel the Pirates would have won if they had, like State, played a game the week earlier — there were thoughts that the next two home games would attract a good crowd.

Prior to the start of last week's East Tennessee State game, some 28,000 to 30,000 people were expected for the contest, but only slightly over 22,000 were there. This past Saturday night it turned out to be even worse. Only just over 18,000 were listed as attending the game — against perhaps the best team scheduled into Ficklen this year. Perhaps it can be said that Central Michigan had no identity to the fans of East Carolina. But what can also be asked is what identity do the fans of Missouri have with the Pirates? We'll have to compare crowds next Saturday.

There are several things which hurt here. The Pirate fans want ECU to win, and they want them to bring in big time names to be seen. But it is difficult to attract big name teams to a 35,000 seat stadium that is only about half full most of the time.

Too, having less than 20,000 hurts the Pirate chances of remaining in Division I-A, where a 20,000 average attendance is one of the requirements.

"What do they want?" one official said. "Maybe we need to cut back to three or even two home games if they don't want to come out."

We hope it doesn't come to that. But if the fans don't start coming out soon, there may not be a football program for them to watch a few more years down the road. East Carolina cannot continue to play Division I football before sparse home crowds. It's simply slow suicide.

The Pirates too, could find their basketball status in doubt in the very near future. Just as there was a move in football to reduce the number of Division I-A teams, there is a groundswell starting to drop the number of Division I-A basketball schools.

Currently including nearly 300 members, the powers that be wish to lower that number by about one-third or more. The main reason for this is the new revenues coming into the NCAA's Division I-A pocketbooks from the telecasting of the post-season championship tournament. Everybody is wanting to get into the act, and those teams that are traditional powers don't want to share the wealth any more than they have to.

So, a proposal will probably be brought up at the next NCAA convention. That would probably limit Division I-A schools to those who have a playing court that seats a minimum of 6,000, who average 4,000 paid attendance, and who sponsor at least eight varsity NCAA-recognized sports.

According to Dr. Ken Karr, ECU athletic director, the Pirates meet only the eight-spot requirement. Minges Coliseum seats between 5,000 and 6,000, but probably could be upgraded to 6,000 with some hasty work if it comes to that.

The 4,000 paid average could become a problem, however. While the students are counted in that number under NCAA guidelines, the Pirates have been averaging only around 2,000 over the past few years.

Karr feels that East Carolina's membership in Division I-A in football could be carryover for the school in basketball, but that is just speculation now. He also feels that the ECAC-South, as a conference, could get I-A status, but that too is questionable, since of the six members, ECU, George Mason and Navy do not currently reach those criteria and William & Mary is borderline.

Of course, if ECU should lose Division I-A status in football, that would open a whole new can of worms.

It all boils down to this: support must be there through the good and lean years. The fan is the one who holds the weapon in his hands. He can help the program with his attendance, or he can blow the program away with his indifference.

Harrison To Speak

East Carolina head basketball coach Charlie Harrison will be the featured speaker at the regular meeting of the Greenville Sports Club Tuesday at noon at the Holiday Inn.

Harrison begins his first season at ECU this year after taking over for former ECU coach Dave Odom, who left ECU to take an assistant coaching job at Virginia earlier this year.

Harrison, a native of Scotland Neck, has been an assistant coach at Iowa State the past two seasons. He was the acting head coach at New Mexico in 1979-80 and has also been an assistant at Clemson Harrison did his undergraduate work at Guilford College and was awarded a Masters of Science degree from Indiana.

To The Sports Editor:

I am an out of state subscriber to your newspaper for the reason my son is a Pirate — a fact he and I are proud of. We believe in the Pirate program and Ed Emory.

A recent article in one of the Raleigh newspapers concerning athletic budgets, sources of revenue, the deficit at ECU, etc. should make the football fans of Eastern Carolina more determined than ever to promote and support ECU athletics, particularly football.

I believe that the school, its administration and coaching staff are committed to building a competitive program in every respect; in spite of other schools within the state refusing to play them and in spite of inadequate media coverage.

Fans in Eastern North Carolina need to unite, rally around the Pirates and show their support by at least attending the games. Filling the stadium is support, personal and financial.

The starting offensive and defensive line-ups for ECU include just a very few Seniors and it's not difficult to believe that the next few years have got to be better and better with the quality athletics now in the program.

Pirates 3, Expos 0
Pittsburgh's Larry McWilliams fired a five-hitter, Jason Thompson cracked a two-run homer and Jim Morrison added a solo shot as Montreal's chances of repeating as NL East champions were just about extinguished.

McWilliams, 34, walked two and struck out five in tossing his second shutout of the season.

The Expos will be elimi-

Nolan Ryan, 34, struck out 11, marking the 14th time in his career the right-hander has fanned 10 or more batters in a game, and combined with Bert Boberge on a six-hitter as Houston beat Cincinnati. The Astros scored on two-run doubles by Al Howe and Scott Lockets.

Many NFL 'Addicts' Suffering, But Other Fans Trying To Relax

By The Associated Press
While many football addicts across the United States are suffering withdrawal symptoms, other fans are finding ways to relax during the first interruption of the National Football League schedule in 63 years.

"I want my Sunday football," moaned William Dooland, an Oakland, Calif., airport ticket agent. "I don't care how narrow-minded that sounds. Sunday is my day to relax after a long week. I relax by watching NFL football. I don't like baseball ... I don't like college football ... Canadian football ... reruns ... or Shirley Temple movies. I like live NFL football."

"You go two weeks, just get involved in the football season and they cut you off," said Rick Wright, a University of Puget Sound student in Tacoma, Wash., referring to the NFL players' strike that started last week after each team had played two games. "It's very addictive."

Television on Sunday offered Canadian pro football, baseball games involving pennant races and a rerun of last January's Super Bowl. But this didn't appease some of the hard-core NFL fans.

"I like to sit in front of my TV set with a 12-pack of beer and watch the games with my friends," said Janet Divers, a legal secretary from Fremont, Calif. "But I'm not going to watch that Canadian junk. I keep up with all the NFL players, but Canadian football just isn't the same. It's Greek to me."

Some people on the other end of the spectrum — the football widows and the others who would just as soon see the NFL go on strike and stay on strike — were delighted.

"Football is such a bore, especially on TV," said Christine Hansell, a housewife from Lafayette, Wash. "Now we can go bike riding and have a nice family picnic. I hope the players go on strike the whole season. I know I won't miss the games. Good riddance, I say."

In Pittsburgh, a radio station sponsored a tailgate party similar to the ones that are common outside NFL stadiums before games. Only this one was held outside empty Three Rivers Stadium. Two amplified bands took turns serenading the fans, some of whom tossed footballs around while swilling beer and singing the Pittsburgh Steelers fight song.

"The fans have the attitude that just because there's no game doesn't mean they can't have fun," said former Steelers running back Rocky Bleier.

One of those who was able to go on a family outing was Walt Michaels, head coach of the New York Jets.

Michaels and his wife, Betty, drove about 100 miles from their home on New York's Long Island to New Haven, Conn., to watch son Mark, a freshman, play football for Yale on Saturday.

Other coaches also took the opportunity to see their sons play ball.

San Francisco 49ers Coach Bill Walsh saw his son Craig play for Pomona College Saturday and Miami Coach Don Shula watched his son Mike Shula play a prep game Friday night.

Many fans apparently took their own footballs to parks and yards Sunday as St. John's Hospital in Cleveland had 11 people show up in the emergency room with injuries from playing football.

"We saw injured knees, broken wrists, broken clavicles and broken ribs," said Peggy Drew, head nurse of the emergency room. "One man was knocked out; it wasn't a supervised game and he wasn't wearing a helmet. She said the ages of the injured ranged from 14 to 22."

"Most of them said that if the (Cleveland) Browns had been on TV or in town they would've been watching, but since they weren't, the fans decided to try it on their own," she said.

Lee Corey, owner of the Studio East lounge in Kanawha City, W.Va., said he would have his "big screen" television on tonight, just as he does on normal Monday nights during the football season, "but I would say that there won't be that much interest. I think my customers won't care about Canadian football."

Arlington Park Race track in suburban Chicago had a larger-than-normal crowd of more than 14,000 for Sunday's card and track spokesman Tom Rivera attributed part of the increase to the football strike. Chicago Bears players Willie McClelland, Brian Cabral and Emery Moorehead were aboard "retired" thoroughbreds in a charity race, with McClelland the winner.

A Review

'Hello Dolly' A Display Of Talent

More than anything else, Farmville's production of "Hello, Dolly!" shows that the community has a pool of outstanding talent to draw on for first rate amateur theatrical efforts. One of America's favorite musical-comedies of recent decades, "Hello, Dolly!" has an entertaining blend of story, song, dance and a formidable character in Mrs. Dolly Gallagher Levi, plus an old-fashioned ambience that makes it suitable for family fare. The major obstacle in the Farmville Community Arts Council's presentation of this big cast musical (more than 40 cast members) is the inadequate stage and technical facilities at Farmville Central High School. Director Don Roebuck and producer Doris Briley have achieved a minor miracle in making it work as smoothly as it does. Dot Dee Moye is particularly handicapped in the choreography. Judging from the satisfying results she gets from her dancers in a severely cramped space, it would be nice someday to see what she could do with plenty of space for opening up dance sequences. A special bouquet is due musical director Kathryn Sauls. One of the most common shortcomings of amateur productions utilizing a band without a pit is excessive volume that drowns out singers. Not so in "Hello, Dolly!" She has skillfully retained the upbeat tempo without once overwhelming the singers. Willa Rae Bullock gives a very creditable performance as the lovable, shrewd, Dolly Levi who wants wealthy miser Horace Vandergelder as her next husband. She fondly recalls the philosophy of her late beloved husband, that "money is like manure, it needs to be circulated to make things grow." Ms. Bullock is endowed with a fine voice that is perhaps a shade too powerful for the requirements of musical comedy. Chris Burti is physically perfect as Vandergelder, the work horse man of means whose life is devoted to his feed store. He has a fine, sonorous voice well suited for this type of role. However, he could enhance the role considerably simply by speeding things up a bit several notches above the slow, deliberate approach he used on opening night Friday.

Mike Barnette as Cornelius Hackl and Jay Brumeloe in the role of Barnaby Tucker, the two Vandergelder's clerks, have two of the play's choice roles, and they quickly establish themselves as audience favorites. It's worth the trip to Farmville simply to hear Barnette sing. Barbara Sauls is a real show stopper in her small Ernestina bit, and the two millinery ladies — Cordelia Deans as Irene Molly and Valerie Fountain as Minnie Fay are lovely to look at and can sing well too. David Whitley and Mary Morrison Dixon as Ambrose Kemper, suitor of Ermengarde, Horace's daughter, add a winsome touch of the romance-in-doubt element. Farmville's octet of Harmonid Gardens waiters must certainly take the record as being the youngest group ever assembled for "Dolly!" It's doubtful if more than two of the eight have ever shaved — but they dance the intricate "Waiters' Galop" with complete assurance. It's good to have "Dolly!" back in the area, with its turn of

'Moon' Unhappy As Valley Girl Judge

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Moon Zappa, whose popular record "Valley Girls" spotlighted a Southern California teen trend, was not impressed by the young women hoping to appear on television as examples of the "ultimate Valley girl." To some of the thousand or so contestants who jammed the Sherman Oaks Galleria on Saturday, the competition was an opportunity to out-Val Miss Zappa, who put the teen jargon to music by her father, rock musician Frank Zappa. "It is like a nightmare," said Miss Zappa, who served as a judge along with former Miss America pageant host Bert Parks, George Christy of the Hollywood Reporter, and Sarah Purcell, Fred Willard and Byron Allen, regulars on NBC's show "Real People," where the winners will appear. "After this contest," Miss Zappa said, "I hope all the winners take over my position as spokesperson for the Valley girls."

Val girls are marked by a love of shopping and use of such expressions as "grody to the max," meaning disgusting, and "fer shurr," or for sure. One winning contestant, Erica Freudenberg, 16, of Canoga Park, helped her cause by turning the fad phrase "Gag me with a spoon" to "Pitch me with a fork."

Kimberly Bickel, 16, of North Hollywood, who did not win a TV berth, complained some competitors were cheating because they weren't from the San Fernando Valley. She sniffed: "There are even some girls from Whittier" — just east of Los Angeles and south of San Fernando.

the century comedy and its parade of catchy tunes — "Hello Dolly!", "Put On Your Sunday Clothes," "Elegance," and "It Only Takes A Moment," to name the best of the 15 songs in the score. The Farmville Arts Council took on a real challenge tackling a show of this dimension in the face of obvious space and technical limitations. That they have succeeded in making it an evening of enjoyable entertainment is a credit to lots of people — on and off stage — who have given it their best. The final two performances of "Hello Dolly!" are tonight and tomorrow night at the Farmville Central High School Auditorium. Curtain time is 8 p.m. Tickets, priced at $3.50, are available at the door. Jerry Raynor

What action do you take?
A.—What action would you like to take? You can't bid two hearts freely, for that would be forcing and could propel your side to an uncomfortable level. You might double one spade if you were sure that would end the auction, but there is a reasonable chance that someone won't sit for it—perhaps even your partner. The prudent course is to pass and await developments.

What do you bid now?
A.—So far, you have shown nothing but four or five worthless clubs. Despite that, partner is prepared to contract for eleven tricks. Your red cards must mesh extremely well with partner's holding, and your hand should contribute two or three tricks to your side's efforts. The least you can do is bid six clubs—we would even vote for a bid of five hearts as a grand slam probe.

What action do you take?
A.—Partner's bid is the Unusual No Trump convention. Therefore, you should not bid hearts or raise no trump—partner is asking you to bid your better minor. Since you have a minimum hand for his purposes, all you can do is oblige by bidding three clubs.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

A.—When you hold the equivalent of 19 points as responder, you jump shift with one of two types of hands—either when you have a self-sufficient suit of your own, or when you have a fit for partner's suit. This hand certainly meets the latter condition, so jump to three hearts. Don't worry about the fact that it is a four-card suit. You can always correct to spades if partner raises your suit.

Mobile Home Dwellers Face A Zoning Conflict

LIBERTY, N.C. (AP) — A zoning battle in this Randolph County town is indicative of a statewide clash between owners of mobile homes and their counterparts in site-built dwellings, mobile home dwellers say.

As more people buy mobile home because they can't afford a house, pressure is growing for city officials to rewrite zoning ordinances to allow them to locate their homes on individual lots inside city limits.

The controversy pits city officials and the owners of site-built homes against some lower- and middle-income families with mobile homes. One side fears property value losses and the other side sees manufactured housing as the only viable choice in home ownership.

"The major problem is the old bias against mobile homes," said Bill Maskal, planning consultant for the North Carolina Manufactured Housing Institute. The trade association of producers and suppliers is trying to change restrictive ordinances and educate local officials about manufactured housing.

In March, the Liberty town board adopted ordinances extending the prohibition of single-wide mobile homes on individual lots, already banned inside the city limits, to a one-mile zone outside the city limits.

Area mobile-home owners, led by Liberty mobile-home dealer Doug Garrett, asked the town board to allow single-wide mobile homes in areas other than trailer parks.

Steve Frazier and his wife had purchased a five-acre tract in the one-mile zone, planning to place a single-wide mobile home on the lot while they saved the money to build a site-built home. With the new ordinances, he said, they could not live on their own property.

The majority of the town board held to the argument that mobile homes threatened property values as well as the general appearance of the town. Garrett threatened a class-action suit against the town, claiming that the ban on single-wides was discriminatory.

Garrett also placed a single-wide on a lot in the one-mile zone to test the city ordinance. The mobile home, occupied by a state highway patrolman, remains on the lot while city officials ponder their next move.

"Basically, state and local governments have not realized that all (manufactured) homes built since 1967 are built to a national standard," Maskal said. "But more of the progressive towns who are seeking new industry realize they cannot provide housing for low- to medium-income people any other way."

Maskal said the manufactured housing institute estimates that 6 percent of the state's population lives in manufactured housing.

"These are areas like Liberty that were losing population constantly," he said. "They're kidding themselves if they think the economy is going to turn around in the next year."

Free Speech Vote: 12-10

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Faced with what it saw as a choice between supporting free speech and the right to have an abortion, the N.C. Civil Liberties Union chose free speech — narrowly.

NCCLU's board of directors voted 12-10 Friday to continue supporting two men who are defendants in a slander suit filed by the owner of a Jacksonville abortion clinic.

"There was tension (among the directors) between the interest of women's freedom to choose abortion and freedom of speech," said George Gardner, NCCLU executive director. "We came down for freedom of speech."

James and David Henderson of Jacksonville, abortion opponents, had picketed an abortion clinic for a year when the clinic's owner, Dr. Takey Crist, sued them in June for $200,000.

The suit charges libel and slander based on signs and chants the Hendersons used while picketing the Crist Clinic for Women, Gardner said. He said he did not know the specific slogans cited in the suit.

The NCCLU, soon after the suit was filed, agreed to defend the Hendersons because the suit was trying to deprive them of their freedom to express their opinion on abortion, Gardner said.

But he said that taking the case put the organization in conflict with its top national priority — defending women's access to abortions.

The suit is scheduled to be heard in Superior Court in Jacksonville.

Killer Bees As Nasty As Their Name

By WARREN E. LEARY
AP Science Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - "Killer bees" are as nasty and ill-tempered as their reputation indicates and they could mean big trouble for the beekeeping industry when they reach the United States, scientists say.

In one of the most extensive studies of the bees' aggressive behavior, U.S. Agriculture Department scientists say the insects are more prone to attack than normal bees, do so in greater numbers and inflict more stings.

The Africanized bees were airborne and ready to attack at the first sign of a threat, while regular honey bees stayed near the hive entrance until the threat was more imminent, says a report published today in Science magazine.

The Africanized bee, so named because it descends from a variety imported from South Africa, was tested against the normal European-derived honey bee during simulated attacks on their hives.

The scientists sprayed each hive with a chemical derived from bee stings, which stirred aggressive behavior, struck the side of the hive to vibrate it and then rolled targets to the entrance.

In tests on large colonies, Africanized bees rose to the attack more quickly and delivered 8.2 times more stings on leather targets than other bees, said the researchers.

In fact, even this number is probably an underestimation because the targets were so covered with bees that others swarming nearby could not reach the surface to sting it, they said.

The report also refuted the theory that the Africanized bees would become more docile as they spread north and mated with other bees. The bees have spread into Panama and are expected to reach the United States by the end of the decade.

The stinging rate of bees in Venezuela was about three times higher than those tested earlier in Brazil, where the African bees were introduced in 1956 in an attempt to boost honey production, said the study.

Stinging rate is important because of the amount of toxin it introduces into the target. While some people die each year from allergic reactions to a bee sting, most non-allergic people can survive the small amount of toxin in a few stings.

However, deaths attributed to attacks by Africanized bees - the origin of their "killer" label - often result from the combined toxin of hundreds of stings, said one of the researchers.

The study by Anita M. Collins, Thomas E. Rinderer, John R. Harbo and Alan B. Bollen involved testing more than 300 bee colonies in Venezuela and at the USDA Bee Breeding and Stock Center Laboratory in Baton Rouge, La.

Ms. Collins said in a telephone interview that current estimates indicate the bees could be in the Southwestern U.S. between 1988 and 1992. They probably could survive year-round in southern sections of the country and most of California, and venture north during the summer, she said.

"There is the potential that most of the United States would see the bee at some time of the year," she said. Because of public concerns about stinging, laws could arise restricting the commercial movement of bees and the size of colonies, she said. And many beekeepers might get out of the business, she added.

"The impact of such a bee on the U.S. beekeeping industry and agriculture would be considerable," said the study.

"The resulting reduction in honey production, and the loss of the major insect pollinator of many crops, would constitute a major expense for American agriculture," it continued.

Ms. Collins said there was no way to stop the bee invasion, but scientists may be able to blunt its impact. Researchers are beginning a breeding selection program which may make it possible to substitute more docile queens in Africanized hives. This could make later generations less aggressive and better honey producers, she said.

127 Houses For Rent

Kids Build A Cabin In The Sky

By OSKER SPICER
The Charlotte News
CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Charlie Covington, Chris Davis, James Losee and Jody Thompson share a carpeted two-story house.

The all-electric house is rustic, but it boasts unusual porthole-shaped windows. There's also a bar with rough-hewn bar stools.

A typical bachelor pad? Well, not exactly.

All the members of this quartet are under 13. Their "house" sits above the ground, wedged between three trees in a southeast Charlotte home. And the only drinks served at their bar are lemonade and soda.

Visitors scamper up the gangplank to the tree house entrance.

Well, maybe if you're over 30, it's more a matter of timidly inching up.

But once you make it to the top and enter the plywood hut, sturdily wedged against two young dogwood trees and a large oak in the back yard, you realize the climb was worth it.

The four untrained builders consider their recently completed tree house a work of art.

This is obviously no ordinary tree house — there are carpeted floors on both levels, the homemade bar, a sturdy kid-made table and several shelves and coat hooks.

The windows are covered by screens, and a long extension cord runs from the main house, supplying the tree house with power for lights, a radio and conceivably a television (so much for the romantic notions of primitive islands).

The tree house idea came from Charlie, 12, who lives on Folger Drive, in the Lansdowne subdivision. The tree house is in his backyard.

At the end of school last spring, his mother urged him to come up with a constructive summer project.

So, he knocked the idea around with his neighborhood friends: Chris, 13; James, 9; and Jody, 12, and they decided to tackle the tree house project.

Three of the boys are students at McClintock Junior High School. James attends St. Gabriel's Catholic School.

"We scrounged around for pieces of wood," Charlie said. "My church (St. Stephen United Methodist) had some stacked in a room, so we asked our minister to give us all of the scraps."

The scraps supplied by the Rev. Bill Bass were quite helpful, Charlie said, but the boys still found themselves scouring the streets for extra wood.

"My mom would cruise us around to various construction sites," Charlie said. "The regular workers were very agreeable. They would say, 'Take what you want', then the big guy (a supervisor) would come and say, 'What are you doing?'"

Charlie, son of Bob and Ann Barker, readily admits the project was a collective effort. "Everybody's mom did something," he said. "Jody's dad let us use his power saw and drill."

"Yeah, we couldn't have made it without the power tools," added Chris, son of John and Mary Davis of nearby Winterset Drive. He said the building project took a little more than two months. They started in early June.

Jody is the son of Waddy and Byrd Thompson of nearby Wingrave Drive.

The cost of the tree house came to about $75 for nails, extra tools, sheets of heavy plastic (used for the roofing), door handles and most recently a few padlocks and attachments.

"Some neighborhood kids tried to break in," Charlie explained, "and one of them had eggs in his hand."

James, son of Richard and Marlene Losee of Folger Drive, suggested the three would-be burglars probably had planned to vandalize the place.

One of the two entrances to the tree house was especially designed for Dion, Charlie's dog and the watchdog of the tree house.

"We're going to put insulation in the walls before winter," Chris said, while hammering a nail into a loose board.

But the place is already pretty comfortable, they said. They have spent at least four nights there.

Other neighborhood kids, or adults for that matter, are welcome to visit, they said.

"The only rule is that the guys who tried to egg us will not be allowed up here," said Chris.

Delayed

PORTSMOUTH, England (AP) — Storms Sunday delayed a delicate operation to lift the wreck of Henry VIII's 91-gun flagship, the Mary Rose, from the seabed of the English Channel, 436 years after the wooden-hulled fighting ship sank while the monarch watched.

Officials of the Mary Rose Trust, formed to raise the well-preserved wreck, said they called off the much-lauded operation because of rough seas buffeting the giant crane and the 125-ton steel cradle designed to raise the starboard side of the wreck.

The 370-ton Mary Rose, pride of Henry's fleet, sank in 1545 in a storm as it went into battle against the French while the king watched from the shore.

The wreckage was discovered 17 years ago in one of the world's most ambitious underwater archeological quests.

Once the wreck has been lifted, it will be towed on a barge into Portsmouth dockyard for eventual display along with the thousands of items, including cannon and bows and arrows, already recovered by divers.

Two Rescued By Surfers

WRIGHTSVILLE BEACH, N.C. (AP) — Four surfers came to the rescue Sunday night after a 5-year-old boy slipped from a pier into stormy seas and his father, trying to save the boy, became stranded with him in the waves.

Neither Charles Earney, nor his son, Barrett, were strong swimmers. But when the boy plunged 35 feet into the water, Earney scrambled down slippery pilings to the water to reach him.

Earney pulled his son to him and the pair clutched the beams of the pier as breakers pounded over their heads.

Jerry Hendrix, 20, of Wilmington, said he was surfing near the pier when he saw the child fall. Hendrix and Bobby Brooks paddled their surfboards to the father and son and brought the boy to safety.

"The little boy was scared to death," Hendrix said.

After the boy was rescued onlookers realized Earney was not a swimmer, so surfers Randall Simpson, 19, and James Fletcher, 21, came to his aid.

The father and son were treated at Cape Fear Memorial Hospital for scrapes and released.

"When he was going over the side, the only way to describe it is sheer panic," said Earney, a resident of Wrightsville Beach and an accounting professor at the University of North Carolina at Wilmington.

Earney thanked the surfers for their help.

"I'm afraid the story would have ended a whole lot differently if they hadn't been there," he said.

Candidate Cissy Has Skin Tests

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Cissy Baker, congressional candidate and daughter of Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker, has undergone tests to determine what is causing blisters on her skin.

A Baptist Hospital spokesman said doctors took a skin biopsy from Miss Baker's fingers Sunday but had not issued results of the tests.

Miss Baker, 27, a Republican, is running against Democrat Jim Cooper for the state's newly created 4th Congressional District.
