Israeli Govm't Bows To Pressure

Full Judicial Inquiry Into Atrocity Set

By ARTHUR MAX
Associated Press Writer

JERUSALEM (AP) — The Israeli government, bowing to unprecedented public pressure, decided today to set up a full-scale judicial inquiry into the conduct of the government and army during the massacre at two Palestinian refugee camps in west Beirut.

The investigating commission will examine "all facts and factors relating to the atrocity," said Cabinet Secretary Dan Meridor, reading a communique to reporters.

He said the commission will have "the widest authority" to investigate the Sept. 16-18 massacre, which has sent shock waves of guilt and anger through the Jewish state.

The massacre of several hundred Palestinians at the Chatilla and Sabra camps has been blamed on Lebanese Christian militiamen.

Prime Minister Menachem Begin was to officially convey the inquiry decision to Supreme Court President Yitzhak Kahan on Wednesday. Kahan will appoint the committee members, probably three public figures headed by a judge.

Under Israeli law, a judicial inquiry commission is empowered to subpoena witnesses, swear them in and penalize them for perjury.

At first, the government refused to call an investigation and defeated motions in Parliament to set up a probe of the massacre. As pressure mounted, it decided on an inquiry to be headed by Kahan, but did not include the powers of a judicial inquiry.

Today's decision followed a protest rally on Saturday by 400,000 Israelis, the largest anti-government demonstration Israel has ever known. There have been widespread calls for the resignations of Begin and Defense Minister Ariel Sharon.

The stability of Begin's government was also threatened when two coalition partners warned they might quit if a judicial inquiry was ruled out.

Meridor said the latest decision aimed "to put an end to the baseless libel alleging that the government has something to hide or seeks to evade a full investigation."

Some critics had feared the government would seek to protect itself by ordering a probe into the army's conduct only. But Deputy Premier David Levy appeared to lay that suspicion to rest when he said all levels, government and other, would be investigated.

"The government set no limitations in any area," he said. "Everything is open to examination — the political level and also the other level," meaning the army.

The main questions facing the commission are:
—Who gave the army orders to allow Lebanese Christian militiamen into the refugee camps on what was supposed to be a search-and-destroy mission against Palestinian guerrillas?

—Whether the army and government should have known that the militiamen might exact reprisals for the murder of then Lebanese President-elect Bashir Gemayel, leader of the Christian Phalange militia?

—Why the massacre of hundreds of Palestinians went on for more than 30 hours before the Israelis intervened?

The Israeli press continued to publish probing articles on the circumstances of the massacre. Zeev Schiff, the respected military affairs correspondent of the Haaretz newspaper, wrote that the massacre may not have been "spontaneous vengeance" after the death of Gemayel, but rather a "preplanned action (by the Christian militiamen) aimed to cause mass flight of Palestinians from Lebanon." Schiff cited an "authoritative examination" as the source for his report but gave no other attribution.

Most critics welcomed the decision to open a probe, but the opposition Labor Party regretted that the government did not resolve to investigate events from Sept. 15, when the Israeli army invaded west Beirut. That was a day before the massacre started. Labor says that since the Israeli government said it acted to prevent bloodshed in the wake of Gemayel's death, it was doubly responsible for protecting the Palestinians.

Peace Now, Israel's leading anti-war movement, said it welcomed the decision to open an investigation, but continued to insist on the resignations of Begin and Sharon.

After the inquiry decision was announced, the government said it was canceling a plan for a pro-government rally next Saturday. It had been designed to counter last Saturday's massive anti-government rally.

The statement said that in its earlier request to Kahan to head the investigation, the government was convinced it had acted "for an absolutely objective investigation to be conducted as speedily as possible of the tragic episode."

But Kahan had refused the request because the issue was already before the Supreme Court in the shape of a petition to force a judicial inquiry, and since this procedure could take weeks, the government decided to call for a judicial probe without waiting, the communique said.

Beirut Port Area Evacuated Today By Israeli Troops

By The Associated Press

Israeli forces evacuated the port of Beirut today and the Cabinet in Jerusalem approved a full-scale judicial inquiry into the conduct of the Israeli government and army during the massacre at two Palestinian refugee camps in the Lebanese capital.

In another development, the Palestine Liberation Organization's top military commander, Brig. Saad Sayel, was reported killed by up to 30 men firing automatic rifles and rocket-propelled grenades in an ambush in eastern Lebanon's Bekaa Valley, the Christian Voice of Lebanon Radio said.

About 100 Israeli troops and seven armored vehicles formed a column and departed the Beirut port area at about 12:15 p.m. (6:15 a.m. EDT). One laughing Israeli soldier threw a green smoke bomb at the Lebanese as he drove off, shouting, "We're going back to Israel."

Lebanese army units and members of the Italian peacekeeping force took charge of the port. The Italians also were deployed in the Chatilla refugee camp and at the nearby Kuwaiti Embassy and airport traffic circle. French peacekeepers were deployed at the Sabra camp and the municipal stadium.

The 1,200 U.S. Marines in the multinational peacekeeping force are refusing to land until all Israeli units evacuate west Beirut.

The Israeli Cabinet's decision to open an inquiry into the massacre at the Sabra and Chatilla camps was reported by Deputy Prime Minister David Levy, who told reporters in Jerusalem: "The government set no limitations in any area. Everything is open to examination — the political level and also the other level," meaning the army.

Under Israeli law, a judicial inquiry commission is empowered to subpoena any witness, take testimony under oath and penalize perjurers. The decision to open a probe followed unprecedented public outrage in Israel over Prime Minister Menachem Begin's earlier refusal to set up a full-scale inquiry into the killing of hundreds of Palestinians at the camps last week.

The Voice of Lebanon and other radio station quoted the Palestinian news agency Wafa as saying Sayel — the PLO's chief of staff — was assassinated while driving from Rayak to Baalbeck. The reports said the PLO blamed "Zionist murderers and their criminal agents."

Sayel, also known as Abul Walid, was in his early 50s. He was a former Jordanian officer who joined the Al Fatah guerrilla group in 1970, when the Jordanians drove the PLO out of their country. He eventually was elected to Fatah's 40-man Central Committee.

He headed the PLO's main military operations room in Beirut and was among the last PLO men evacuated from the city in late August and early September under the plan negotiated by U.S. envoy Philip C. Habib.

Lebanese press reports said Sayel returned to Lebanon a week after his evacuation to Latakia, Syria, a port north of Lebanon.

Commission Here To Tour Facilities

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Members of the Advisory Budget Commission arrived here late this morning to tour facilities at the Walter B. Jones Alcoholic Rehabilitation Center, Pitt Community College and East Carolina University.

The ABC, composed of 10 members of the General Assembly and two at-large members, spent an hour at the ARC before visiting Pitt Community College at noon for lunch and a tour of facilities there.

The group was scheduled to tour the ECU medical school's Brody Medical Science Building at 2 p.m., then visit the university's main campus.

ECU Chancellor John Howell was scheduled to host the visitors at dinner at the chancellor's home at 6:30 p.m.

Sen. Kenneth Royal, chairman of the advisory budget group, said, "We feel it is very important ... very helpful when preparing a budget, to visit ... and see where the money has gone and what the needs really are."

He said the budget-makers would visit "every school under the (University of North Carolina) Board of Governors — all 16 campuses," as well as "many of the mental health facilities" and other state-supported operations.

"I made this same trip in 1972," Royal said, "and it's remarkable the progress that's been made."

The budget group visited Elizabeth City State University earlier today.

Wednesday they will drive to Rocky Mount, Wilson, Goldsboro, Maury and Kinston to view other state facilities.

State operations in the Wilmington and Morehead City areas will be viewed Thursday, while on Friday ABC members will visit Pembroke State University at Lumberton and Fayetteville State University.

Unemployment 8.6% In August

RALEIGH — The Pitt County unemployment rate for the month of August was 8.6 percent, the N.C. Employment Security Commission reported this week.

The ESC said 4,250 persons in the county were unemployed, out of a total of 49,520 in the civilian labor force, while 45,270 persons had jobs during the month.

The unemployment rate for Martin County for August was 12.6 percent, while the rate for Greene County was 7.5 percent.

State-wide, unemployment in 42 counties increased during August, while unemployment in 53 counties decreased. Five counties remained unchanged.

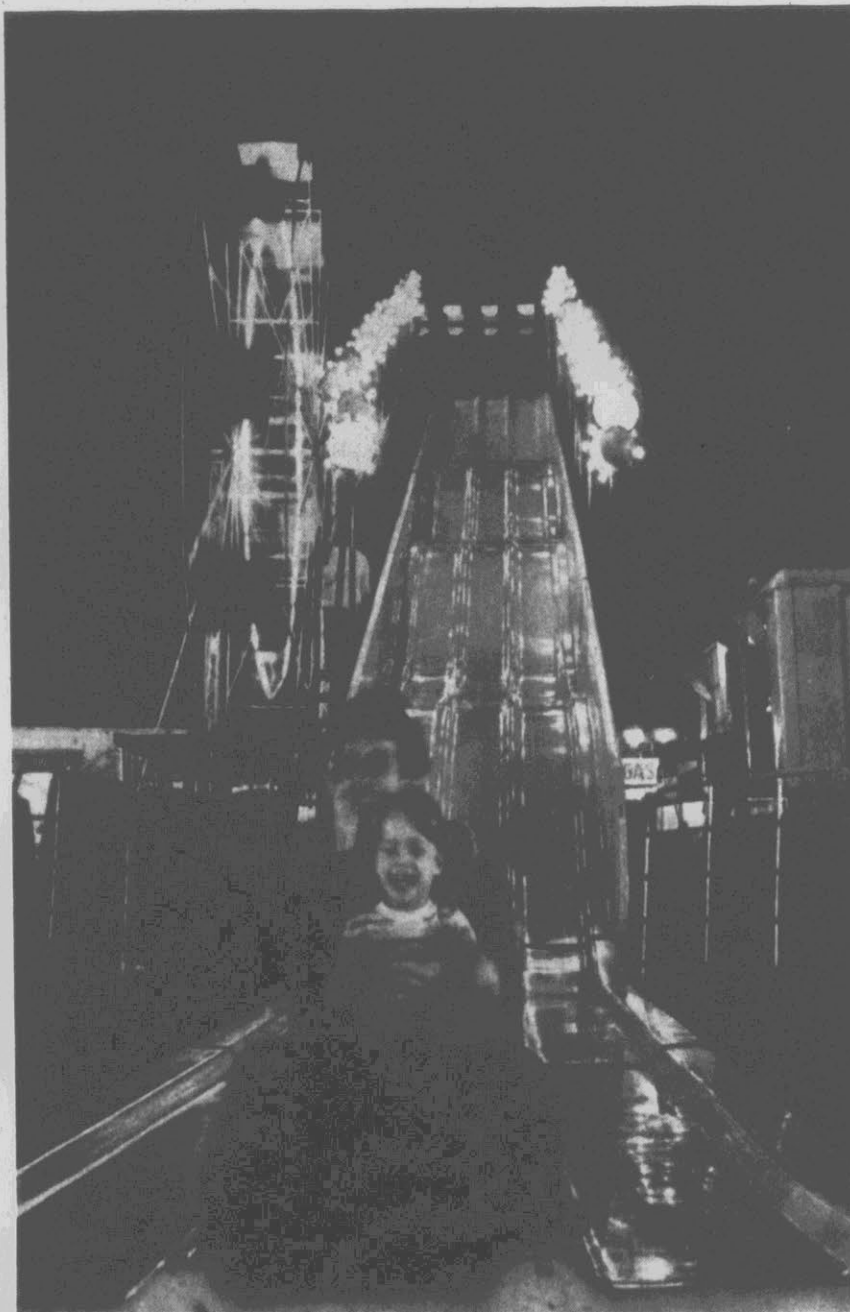

The county rates reported by the ESC reflect a decrease in unemployment statewide during August. In July the statewide unemployment rate was 9.8 percent while in August, the rate was 9.0 percent.

"We attribute the decrease in unemployment rates to the fact that in August, a large number of workers returned to jobs after temporary layoffs," Donald A. Brande, director of the Labor Market Information Division of the ESC said.

Forty-nine counties recorded double-digit unemployment for the month.

Story Of Homicide Is Being Pieced Together

By TOM BAINES and CAROL TYER

Reflector Staff Writers
SBI agents continued today with the grim task of piecing together information from Monday's tragic shooting death of a county deputy sheriff's wife and the discovery of the officer critically wounded at his Farmville home.

Dr. Stan Harris, Pitt County medical examiner, said this morning that Lillie Mae Stancil Braswell died of internal hemorrhaging from gunshot wounds to the chest. Harris said the wife of Deputy Billy Rudolph Braswell died "sometime between 11 and 11:30 in the morning."

The medical examiner said, "It is homicide."

A spokesman at the SBI office in Greenville said this morning that Mrs. Braswell, 39, was found dead at approximately 11:40 a.m. on the side of the road near the intersection of Chiquapin Road and U.S. 264 Alternate east of Farmville. The spokesman said a passing motorist discovered the body.

According to the agent, Braswell was found at his 204 Green St. residence in Farmville around 1:15 p.m. suffering from gunshot wounds to the chest. Braswell, 41, underwent surgery at Pitt County Memorial Hospital and a spokesman said this morning that his condition was listed as "critical but stable."

The SBI spokesman said that Mrs. Braswell's car was parked at the intersection, which is about two miles from Farmville.

The spokesman declined additional comment pending further investigation of the incidents.

Pitt County Sheriff Ralph Tyson said today that the SBI has been asked to handle the investigation and he said that his office "will be assisting if we are able to help in any way." Tyson said that, "I understand they (SBI) are trying to talk to everybody who might know something."

Jerry Jones, manager of the Northwest Branch of First State bank in Greenville, said Mrs. Braswell was head teller at that branch. She left the bank Monday morning, telling Jones only that she would "be back in a few minutes," he said.

Jones characterized Mrs. Braswell as "a good worker, friendly, liked by fellow employees and customers alike."

He said, "We're all still in shock about the killing. It's not something that ought to be happening here in Greenville to one of us."

Frank Harrell, a neighbor of the Braswells in Farmville, said, "Lillie was just as nice and friendly as she could be, the kind of neighbor who visits right often." Harrell said her husband was "always polite, but kind of distant. He wouldn't come to a cookout or stop and talk or anything like that, mostly just stayed in the house and watched TV when he wasn't working. I think."

Another neighbor, L.O. Stephenson, said he observed the Braswells' car parked at an angle with the right hand

Grammar Use Can Hinder

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My friend, Cyndi, is 25, a good dresser, has a nice personality and lots of common sense. She has held well-paying, responsible jobs that involve contact with the public. With all her exposure to the public and bosses, why does she say, "I seen him the other day" or, "He don't know nothing"?

Abby, this girl is no dummy, but the way she talks sure makes her come across like one. I know she knows better, but I wonder if she can hear herself, doesn't care, or simply doesn't think it matters that she sounds like a dumb broad. Why does she do this?

PUZZLED

DEAR PUZZLED: Cyndi may "know better," but apparently constant exposure to poor grammar during her early years has made her insensitive to poor grammar. Even with all you say she has going for her, she won't last long in a job that requires her to meet the public unless she cleans up her act. If she's your friend, help her.

DEAR ABBY: Some time ago, my husband started to collect X-rated movies (the silent type) as a hobby. I wasn't aware of it until I found them, then he asked me to watch one with him. Just to please him, I did, but it didn't turn me on at all. It's so mechanical and impersonal.

I enjoy sex and have no problem with my imagination. It's far superior to those celluloid dummies. My husband must enjoy this sort of thing, otherwise why would he collect it? Whenever I'm away from home, I know he watches these films. Am I unreasonable to bug him to get rid of this trash?

REDWOOD CITY

DEAR REDWOOD: Yes. The fact that he hid his hobby from you indicates that he's somewhat immature and ashamed of his hobby. But it's his home, too, and as long as he doesn't impose his "trash" on you, you have no right to bug him to dispose of it.

DEAR ABBY: One night our son said to his wife, "Go get the book I left in the hall." Although he is not crippled, and she is not mute, she complied without saying a word. Our son is 28 and his wife is 23.

Neither my husband nor I said anything at the time, but later we agreed that it was unpleasant behavior on our son's part, and pathetic behavior on the part of his wife. This wasn't the first time we observed his chauvinism and her meek compliance. Right after their wedding, we dropped them off at the house where they were to spend the night, and she carried their bags while he walked ahead, burden-free.

I think we should say something to our son about his lack of consideration for his wife. My husband says it's none of our business, and to interfere would be tampering with their relationship. Also, he says that perhaps our son needs a "slave" and his wife enjoys the role.

Are there no instances where interference is appropriate? If we saw our son stealing money from his wife or beating her up, would we not feel compelled to say something about it even if his wife were too shy or insecure to complain or defend herself?

DISTRESSED BUT STILL SILENT

DEAR DISTRESSED: As I view it, the only problem here is that you are dismayed with (1) the rude and inconsiderate way your son treats his wife, and (2) her uncomplaining acceptance of it. Although it's unpleasant to witness, as long as he doesn't physically abuse her and she's not complaining, you'd be wise to offer no suggestions.

If you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say, send for Abby's complete booklet on letter-writing. Send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

Disenchanted Moms Start High Point Birth Center

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — For women who want to bear their children in a home atmosphere but under medical supervision, several "birth centers" are being planned in North Carolina.

Elizabeth Dickson, a 40-year-old certified nurse-midwife, will open Carolina Birth Center Inc. next month in High Point.

State officials say it will be the first institution of its kind in North Carolina although there reportedly are plans for birth centers in Asheville and Raleigh. Midwives have been available at Chatham Hospital in Siler City since 1977.

Thirty-one nurse-midwives have been approved by the N.C. Board of Medical Examiners to deliver babies with a doctor's help.

Dr. Richard R. Nugent of the state Department of Human Resources said three nurse-midwives, including Ms. Dickson, have been licensed by the state to deliver babies outside hospitals.

Ms. Dickson's birth center will have two delivery rooms similar to bedrooms. The labor lounge will resemble a den, with reclining chairs and a television. A kitchenette can be used by family members, who will be encouraged to attend the birth.

Natural childbirth and extensive pre-natal care and counseling will be emphasized at the Carolina Birth Center, Ms. Dickson says.

"I encourage the woman to labor however she is most comfortable," Ms. Dickson said. "If she wants to be on her hands and knees or squatting or walking, that's fine. She's the one who knows her body best."

While some obstetricians spend only a few minutes in pre-natal visits with healthy pregnant women, Ms. Dickson spends an hour or more. Unlike doctors who check in occasionally during the hours preceding a birth, Ms. Dickson says she will be present from the start of labor through delivery.

Some obstetricians say the birth center won't be as safe as a hospital.

"I really feel much more safe being in the hospital, where if something does go wrong I'll have the facilities necessary to provide the best care," said Dr. Charles W. Lomax, a Greensboro obstetrician with 14 years of experience.

Dr. H. Kent Bennett, a High Point obstetrician for 17 years and president of the Guilford County Medical Society, didn't oppose the centers.

"Basically, I think they're providing a service to that segment of the community that wants a... more natural, more home-like sort of delivery," he said.

The center's fee — for prenatal visits, delivery, two home visits and a six-week appointment after the birth — is $1,200. High Point Memorial Hospital spokesman Barry Ward said the average hospital charge for delivery alone is about $1,200.

Ms. Dickson said she accepts only clients who are in good health and have no medical conditions that increase the chance of a difficult delivery. Eighteen pregnant women already have signed up as clients.

Rats Swim, Jog To Help Humans

Rats at Duke University are swimming and jogging their way to better health — maybe for all of us.

They're part of a research project to determine why exercise prevents heart disease. "Fifty percent of all deaths in the U.S. each year are caused by heart disease," Dr. R. Sanders Williams, chief of research in preventive cardiology at Duke, said. "We know exercise has some preventive effect, but we don't know exactly why. If we can find out, we might be able to design better exercise programs."

How much exercise is enough? Is it good for some, but not others?

"These are some of the things we want to understand," Williams said. "Exercise causes some basic biochemical changes in the body," he said. "Learning more about these changes could lead us to drug treatments that amplify the beneficial effects of exercise."

"Some of the rats sit around in their cages and get fat while others exercise," Williams said. "We had a colony of rats running on treadmills this summer and another group swam daily."

Do they like the water?

"I don't know if they like it, but rats are good natural swimmers. You could invite on into your pool and he'd swim for an hour without any trouble," he said.

After their workouts, the rats undergo tests to see what changes have occurred in them that have not occurred in their sedentary counterparts.

In addition to the rats, Durham public safety officers and firemen are being studied by 20 Duke researchers to determine the role of exercise in the treatment of hypertension.

Scandinavian Culture To Be U.S. Feature

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures
Contemporary Scandinavian culture will be in the limelight in a number of American cities over the next 12 months or so.

"Scandinavia Today" is the sixth and last in a series developed by the National Endowment for the Humanities. The programs, which began in 1977, have included in-depth looks at Canada, Mexico, Japan, Belgium and Egypt — all aimed at enriching American cultural life by educating us about other nations.

Scandinavian design is one of the region's greatest contemporary contributions to the rest of the world and many of the events will focus on the arts, crafts and industrial design of Denmark, Finland, Iceland, Norway and Sweden.

Two exhibitions which do just that recently opened in New York on the same day. Both will travel to other cities later on. At Cooper-Hewitt Museum, the Smithsonian's National Museum of Design, a collection of more than 300 Scandinavian masterworks created between 1880 and today was unveiled.

The same day at Cooper Union (an institution of higher education which has no relation to Cooper-Hewitt) an exhibit of Danish industrial design opened.

Both displays showed how much the contemporary American home furnishings industry owes Scandinavia. Products developed in the early 1920s are still being sold here and ideas from the same era continue to inspire American designers.

According to David McFadden, curator for the Cooper-Hewitt show, "Scandinavian Design Now," his hardest task was choosing what to include. "In every period, there were at least 50 additional objects I wanted to show but had no room for," he said.

Many of the attitudes now surfacing as new in the United States had their counterparts in Scandinavia long ago, he added. For example, nowadays there is a revival of interest in traditional American furnishings.

Adelines Have Annual Guest Night

The Eastern Carolina Chapter of Sweet Adelines Inc. held its annual guest night recently.

Guests were welcomed by Mary Koonce, president, and Retha Johnson, membership chairman. They were given a brief history of the Sweet Adelines organization and of the local chapter by Janet Rodgers. Director Carolyn Ipock taught the guests a short song and explained the four parts that make barbershop harmony. The chorus then entertained with several songs.

Guests were Myrtle Fleming, Sandra Greene, B.J. Harrell, Nita Hedreen, Jimmie Leggett, and Martha Wilkerson, all of Greenville; Sally Bruton of Kinston; and Grace Baggett, Wanda Collins and Wanda Paramore of Winterville.

The chapter rehearses each Monday at 7:30 p.m. at The Memorial Baptist Church. Interested women from throughout Eastern North Carolina are invited to participate.

A similar desire engulfed the Scandinavians in the latter part of the 19th and the early 20th centuries.

Today, many Americans believe industry has a responsibility to meet the real needs of the society that supports it by creating items of functional design, moderate price and beauty. This attitude was put forth (and accepted by Scandinavian industry) as early as 1919.

Although there are differences from one Scandinavian country to another, Scandinavian design taken as a whole stands for "a quality of health, unpretentiousness and practicality that I would call humanism. It differs from fashion in its stress on the integrity of the material, which provides a sense of permanence," said McFadden.

The key relationship between function and the shape and structure of an item was illustrated at the Cooper Union exhibition of Danish products — "Design: The Problem Comes First."

Instead of just showing a series of finished products, the exhibit explores the idea behind the product and the creative process which led to its development.

An example illustrates the theme: reasoning that the attic has potentially the best view and light and could be the most attractive space in the house if light and air were admitted, V. Kann Rasmussen & Co.'s designers set out to find an economical way to provide this light and air.

The resulting Velux window is installed flush with the roof, fitting economically between the rafters. Hardware to open the window is installed at the top instead of the bottom — making it possible to place the window low to the attic floor and provide a better view.

Safety and cleaning considerations were also taken into account in the design. The window pivots open 180 degrees, permitting both interior and exterior surfaces to be cleaned from inside the house. A bolt makes it possible to lock the window in place when it is slightly open to provide both security and ventilation.

Finally, window shades, blinds, awnings and a remote control system for their use have been added as options. The window — though designed in 1942 — is still being marketed.

After it leaves Cooper Union, the Danish design exhibit will be at Chicago's Museum of Science and Industry Oct. 20 through Jan. 6, 1983. Then it moves to Washington and the American Institute of Architects in June.

The Scandinavian show will be on view at Cooper-Hewitt through Jan. 2, 1983. Then it moves to the Museum of Art in St. Paul from Feb. 27 to April 24 and to the Smithsonian in Washington from July 8 to Oct. 10.

Other cities where major Scandinavian exhibits, theatrical and musical performances and symposiums will take place include Minneapolis, Seattle and Tacoma, Wash., and Los Angeles.

Some of the best fiction being written today is never serialized in the slick magazines or makes it to the New York Times list.

They're messages between the working wife/bachelor and the woman who comes in to clean their house/apartment. Sometimes, they never even see one another. They communicate only by notes left on the refrigerator door.

The following is a series of written communiques between Wilma and her employer, Mrs. Rutledge.

"Mrs. Rutledge: There is a cat mess at the end of the sofa." Wilma.

"Mrs. Rutledge: 'What do you want me to do with it?'" Wilma.

"Wilma: You are limited on options. You can surround it with sand and use it as a putting green, gift-wrap it and amaze your friends, or clean it up. I prefer the latter." Mrs. Rutledge.

"Mrs. Rutledge: I was going to clean up the you-know-what, but the sweeper smells funny and sounds strange and won't pick up anything. Can you fix it?" Wilma.

"Wilma: The cat is missing. I suggest you check the sweeper bag." Mrs. Rutledge.

"Mrs. Rutledge: The cat was not in the bag. Maybe the cat mess is not a mess at all. It looks just like something in a green bowl in the refrigerator. Is it what I think it is?" Wilma.

"Wilma: What do you think it is?" Mrs. Rutledge.

"Mrs. Rutledge: I knew once, but I forgot. The sweeper works just fine. What did you do to it?" Wilma.

"Wilma: I emptied the bag." Mrs. Rutledge.

"Mrs. Rutledge: You know that little problem I told you about two weeks ago about the cat? I think I solved the problem. I moved the sofa over it and you can hardly notice it now." Wilma.

"Wilma: You're fired!" Mrs. Rutledge.

"Mrs. Rutledge: There is another cat mess I didn't tell you about. It's hard to find. I'm the only one who knows where it is. Goodbye." Wilma.

Fiscal Bills Tied Up

The Senate fight by Sen. Jesse Helms to attach a school prayer measure to the debt ceiling bill has ended with the Helms forces unable to break a filibuster.

As can be expected in an election year, both sides are left complaining that about the tactics used to bring the measure before the House, or the filibuster which prevented a vote on it.

The school prayer issue is heavily political with both sides attempting to find a political base using the issue.

What ever the merits of this social legislation, it is time for Congress to look at its rules which allow some totally unrelated matter to be attached to important fiscal legislation. The vitally important debt ceiling bill and other spending legislation have been held up in the Senate while some totally unrelated matter that could have easily waited until next year was debated.

That shouldn't be. Both Houses of Congress must find ways to make certain that immediately needed fiscal legislation can move through the processes of becoming law without being encumbered with unrelated amendments. It should be a firm rule in both Houses that only amendments related to fiscal matters can be offered for bills which deal with the budget.

Budget Commission Visiting

The North Carolina Advisory Budget Commission is visiting in the area today as a part of its consideration of state budget appropriations for the coming biennium.

Included is a visit to Pitt Community College, where the group will have lunch, the ECU campus, the Brody School of Medicine building and the Alcoholic Rehabilitation Center.

The visit is important for members of the powerful body which will have a great deal to say about what is included in the budget that is finally approved by next year's session of the General Assembly.

The state-wide tour may be doubly important this year as budget planners ponder what do to about state revenues which are less than had been anticipated.

We think the Advisory Budget Commission will find that appropriated state funds are being well-spent for the maximum advantage of North Carolina citizens in their visits to state supported institutions here.

THIS AFTERNOON

Need Alternative

By PAUL T. O'CONNOR
RALEIGH — Willis Whichard, state Court of Appeals judge, came across an incredible case recently. A 19-year-old who had no previous record robbed a convenience store of $50. The next day he came to his senses, turned himself over to the police and returned the money. He pleaded guilty and the judge gave him 14 years.

Whichard, who is also chairman of the Citizens Commission on Alternatives to Incarceration, is dumbfounded by the case. Putting aside the question of fairness to the youngster, he asks if the state is spending its money wisely when it pays $9,500 a year for 14 years to incarcerate a young man who stole $50 and then decided to give it back.

The Department of Correction budget this year is $171 million. Since the day 11 years ago when Whichard first entered the General Assembly as a representative from Durham County that budget has increased by 400 percent. Talk about the growth of government.

North Carolina's prison population is up to about 17,000 and corrections officials estimate that at the current rate of growth the total will pass 20,600 by 1987. The state is short 3,000 cells already and each new cell the state builds costs about $54,000. A program to build enough cells to properly hold a population of 20,600 would cost $350 million, a member of Whichard's commission says.

With the state spending all this money locking people up, Whichard asks if we're getting anything out of it. He doesn't think so.

North Carolina has one of the highest rates of incarceration in the world and one of the lowest crime rates in the United States. That would appear to justify the policy of imprisoning a lot of people, Whichard says. But there are other states which have crime rates as low as ours and they aren't in-carcerating nearly as many people.

Whichard's commission, which was funded through private grants, is compiling a list of alternatives to incarceration which it will release later this year. The report is being anxiously awaited by prison system officials and by legislators.

"Prison is an appropriate resource for people who harm others or show time after time that they will violate the rights of others," Whichard says. But of those imprisoned in 1980, three-quarters had not been involved in violent acts and at least one-third were there for first offenses. These people could be punished in other ways, Whichard says.

He'd like to see greater emphasis on restitution. If a young man steals a tape deck, he should have to repay the victim as a part of his punishment. "This is a common practice now as a condition for parole but we suggest increased use in connection with restitution to society, also."

Instead of sending a youngster to jail, he could be made to perform community service. Maybe he should pay for the tape deck and then also work free for the highway department mowing grass every weekend for a period determined by a judge. Some programs in place already have the defendants working on local civic projects and for local governments.

Whichard says he senses the public's attitude toward prison hardening. People are tired of crime and they want more criminals locked away and for longer periods. But the costs are becoming prohibitive and the high prison rate doesn't appear to be

Other Editors Say Hunt Vs. Helms?

Washington Daily News)

It is rather fascinating sometimes to realize that a lot of people are actually thinking now beyond next election date, November 2, 1982, and thinking in terms of 1984 when we shall elect a president, a governor, and a United States senator here in North Carolina.

While the race for president is already taking shape nationally, and while we are having more and more pronounced moves in the direction of gubernatorial candidacies, the fact today in our state as we see it is that the biggest race of all is likely to be that between incumbent Senator Jesse Helms and Governor Jim Hunt for the senatorial seat now occupied by Mr. Helms.

Is Jim Hunt really going to run? We hear this question asked every so often. Sometime ago, we listened to a conversation between some of our state Democratic leaders, and one of them observed "Jim Hunt definitely is going to run; he has gone too far in that direction to back up now; if he pulls out, he'll be charged with being afraid."

That observation may be putting the matter bluntly. There may be other very strong reasons why this or that candidate might decide at the last minute either to be a candidate or not to be a candidate. Mr. Hunt has that choice. And in a real sense Mr. Helms has that choice too.

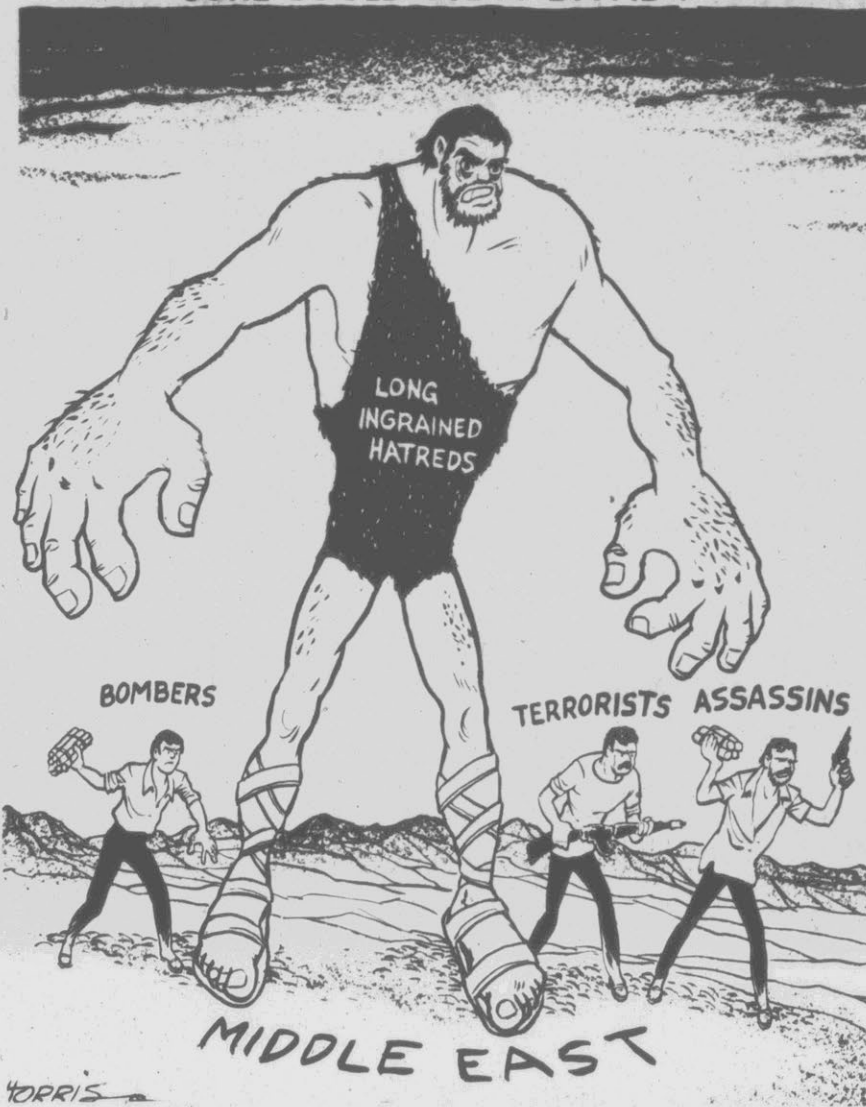

It would be most unusual for a national senatorial race in North Carolina to overshadow the race for governor, but it could happen. Me. Helms is colorful and Mr. Hunt is personable. Both have fine organizations, and both will probably have good financial backing. A lot of money will be spent.

Recent polls, as we read about them right now place Mr. Helms and Mr. Hunt about even. While we must caution against taking any poll seriously that seeks to say what the picture will be two years hence, we must also take into consideration that both Mr. Hunt and Mr. Helms are veteran politicians who know their way around and who can be expected to generate enthusiasm, work, and votes out over the state.

Now if we are asked the question "will Jim Hunt run", we would have to say that unofficially he appears to be running already, and it would appear now that he is doing the things normally expected of a candidate who will be running two years hence.

We suspect this one campaign will be the hardest fought, the most expensive, and the most watched nationally of any political contest ever in North Carolina; and this race is between two real pros — no amateurs need apply.

Glenn Won't Look Back

WASHINGTON — John Glenn and I talked for more than an hour the other day fore I thought I had the beginning of a sense of what he is about and how he might become the next president of the United States. "I'm like Satchel Paige," he said. "I really do believe you should never look back, because they might be gaining on you."

That may not sound like much, but Senator Glenn doesn't give an interviewer a lot to work with. It's even worse if the interviewer is prepared — because then you know that you're hearing, word for word, what he told the last two dozen interviewers.

The man doesn't raise his voice, move his body or use his hands — at least not very much.

Are you going to run for president? I asked — knowing that he is.

"I don't rule it out," he said.

Why would you want to be president?

"I don't like the way the country is going."

Why did you come a Democrat?

"My parents were."

What would the country be like now if Jimmy Carter had been re-elected in 1980?

"Probably better."

How do you react to Presi-

"Disagree."

The answer to any of those questions was hardly critical to me. I was searching, a little desperately after a while, for a subject that would start him talking about his own public passions, his vision of America, Reagan, himself — anything but the statistics and Washington-speak he was giving me.

OK. OK. Record deficits will take 53 percent of national savings this year and 70 percent next year. We could save $5 billion of the money being spent on the Rapid Deployment Force. We only graduated 58,000 engineers, to 74,000 from Japan and 300,000 for Russia. "The hearing this morning ..." "Stockman's testimony ..." "Hollings' bill ..." Enough. I got it.

Then, somehow, we got on the subject of the reduction last year of the number of lower-income children applying to colleges. Glenn began using the word "opportunity" over and over again. "These people," he said of the Reagan administration, "have a totally different idea of what America stands for. America should stand for giving every kid a chance, a good chance."

Then he went back to the president's remark about the Great Society hurting blacks: "Reagan is just preposterous. I can't believe a president of the United States believes that."

His voice still did not change. I'm not sure it does. But the Democrat from Ohio continued: "When Reagan was a kid and I was a kid, America was a little village with a cobbler down the road. Then New England became the cobbler, and now Korea or Brazil is the cobbler. We can't deal with this world by looking back, by hearkening back to simpler days when problems seemed smaller."

Then he quoted Satchel Paige. I then realized that John Glenn, a real hero of two wars and outer space, never seems to talk about the past. Ronald Reagan, the celluloid hero, talks about almost nothing but the past — in private conversations about the old days in Hollywood, in public speeches about how great America was when he was younger.

A year from now, I suspect, Glenn may be seen as the Democrats' strongest candidate for 1984. He is seen as a "conservative Democrat," although "cautious Democrat" might be more accurate. He has almost total name identification because most voters shared five hours in orbit with him 20 years ago — that was as good as a movie. What he needs now is a theme, an issue, a rationale for his candidacy. And he may be finding one: Don't look back! Let's go!

Stockman Is Said Leaving

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — Budget Director David Stockman's closest associates say that at long last he will resign as budget director once the new budget is finished early next year, and then go into private business to support his new wife.

Rumors about Stockman departing have abounded ever since the famed November 1981 article in the Atlantic Monthly that expressed misgivings about Reaganomics. But this is the first time that his intimates in the Office of Management and Budget have predicted his departure. The tipoff, they say, is the announcement that the 36-year-old bachelor will wed in February — just after the new budget is wrapped up.

A footnote: The White House wants a successor who can get along with Congress much better than Stockman did. That weakens White House aide Richard Darman's hopes for the job and enhances the current leading candidate: Secretary of Commerce Malcolm Baldrige.

Unbalancing Democrats
The main reason why the constitutional amendment for a balanced budget remains bottled up in the House Judiciary Committee is pressure on conservative "Boll Weevil" Democrats from the regular Democratic leadership, dangling choice committee assignments for next year.

One Boll Weevil, Rep. Jack Highower of Texas, actually signed the petition to force the amendment out of the committee. But under intense leadership pressure, he removed his signature. Texas Rep. Phil Gramm, the conservative Democrat leading the balanced budget push, led one fellow Boll Weevil to the room where the discharge petition is signed, only to have him intercepted by Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill. As a result of such activity, the petition is 18 votes short of the two-thirds needed, with no hope save for a lame-duck post-election session.

A footnote: Sponsors of the amendment are burning that one of the nation's leading conservatives, Rep. Jack Kemp, will not sign the petition. He has turned aside suggestions that he assist in getting the bill to the House floor (where it is sure to pass) and then vote his convictions against it. He opposes it on grounds that it would probably lead to higher taxes.

Wilson's Complaint
White House insiders are peeved at private grumbling from San Diego Mayor Pete Wilson that President Reagan has "too long a memory" and still harbors resentment over Wilson's record as a one-time Rockefeller Republican and backer of President Ford over Reagan in the 1976 presidential race.

These complaints come as private White House polls show Wilson now running behind Democratic Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. for the Senate. That swift Brown surge has dismayed presidential aides who view Wilson's grumbling about Reagan as unbecoming and unfair.

Actually, Reagan starred at a Wilson fund-raiser at the Century Plaza Hotel in Los Angeles in August. If Wilson wants the president to spend more time on his campaign, he may be in for a disappointment. Certainly the fact that Wilson's peeve has reached

To the editor:

I would like to comment on the After-School Care Programs begun this year by the Greenville City Schools System. These programs operate at each elementary school from immediately after school until 6:00 p.m. The cost to parents is moderate ($3 per day) and the quality of care is proving itself to be excellent.

My five-year-old at Eastern School is being cared for after school by a well-qualified loving teacher in a balanced environment of play, learning and cultural activities. The convenience and economy of these programs make them a service to working parents. As a parent and a professional in the field of Child Development, I am most concerned with the quality of care my child receives. In my opinion, Eastern's After-School program is one of the finest offered in the city.

A national news magazine recently identified a large population of "Latchkey" Children (children left to care for themselves after school while their parents work) in North Carolina — an area they described as not offering public after-school care. The city schools of Greenville do now offer an alternative to parents which is convenient, affordable and beneficial to the physical, social and emotional well-being of the child.

I would like to commend the Greenville City School System for their sensitivity in identifying a very real need in the community and instituting a quality program that meets both the needs of working parents and developing children.

Congratulations and thank you.

Anatomy Of A Big Bankruptcy

By ROBERT J. NEFF
Associated Press Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — Struggling under a $465 million debt and facing continuing losses, AM International Inc. threw in the towel last April and went to court to seek protection from its 8,000 creditors while it reorganizes.

The long-time manufacturer of business equipment thus became one of the largest casualties of the recession in a year that already has seen a post-Depression record number of bankruptcy filings.

J.B. Freeman Jr., the third man to head AM in a little over a year, says he is "optimistic that we should be out of bankruptcy" by next August, but he concedes the company has a long way to go.

AM International, which traces its beginnings back to 1893, once flourished with its Addressograph and Multi-graph business machines. Critics say it failed to keep pace in the highly competitive field in recent years and fell on hard times.

In 1976, AM hired Roy L. Ash, co-founder of Litton Industries, as chief executive officer. He tried to modernize accounting procedures and shift AM into more high-technology products, but analysts say those moves led to borrowing short-term for expansion at a greater rate than the loans could be repaid.

Ash resigned in February 1981 in a dispute over the company's finances and was replaced by Richard B. Black, who came from the Maremont Corp., a big auto-parts manufacturer.

Black left last March. His successor was Freeman, a 45-year-old Texan he brought to AM from Maremont.

Black left behind a nest-egg of $15 million that he accumulated by closing unprofitable divisions and reducing AM's work force from 17,500 people to 12,000. Freeman has built the cash reserve to $42 million, largely through the sale of non-profitable operations, stimulating sales of profitable products and bringing out new products.

"It's not all that dramatic," Freeman says. "We've emphasized sales. We haven't quite gotten them up to where we want to, but we've stopped the fall-off."

When Freeman began his presidency, AM had reported a loss of $44.5 million in the first half of its 1982 fiscal year. The year before, the loss had reached $245.1 million. He estimates that for this fiscal year, which ended July 31, the loss will be cut to around $50 million.

"We're creating credibility among our customers, emphasizing profitability among our sales people and convincing our employees to have patience to stay on," he says.

Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy laws allows a company to keep operating under existing management with court protection from creditors while it tries to come up with a plan for paying its debts.

While the reorganization plan is being worked out by the company and its creditors, AM does not have to pay its bills or interest on loans. All of its debt is unsecured, which means all creditors will get the same treatment when it comes to paying off.

Freeman says he "enjoys challenges" and that he considered the job of reviving AM "do-able" when he was elevated from the post of AM's chief financial officer. He says he believes AM has made good progress toward that goal.

"I feel employees' morale is better than it has been in a year or two," he added. "We've launched several projects to let them know what's been going on and we've achieved a certain stability."

Asked to assess AM's present financial status, Freeman says, "No company in Chapter 11 can be categorized in terribly good health."

But he adds: "Chapter 11 is a temporary condition. Until reorganization is done we really can't speculate on AM's financial health. To say that AM is healthy means saying that it's making a profit, and we haven't quite done that yet."

Rate Hikes Rejected; Utility's Stock Slumps

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Sales of Carolina Power and Light Co. and Duke Power Co. stock were brisk in the aftermath of the state Utilities Commission's rejection of most of CP&L's requested rate increase.

Also, CP&L announced it was laying off 100 construction and office workers and supervisors at its Shearon Harris Nuclear Plant.

CP&L's stock was the most heavily traded on the New York Stock Exchange on Monday, as its value dropped 1 1/2 to 19 3/4 in heavy trading. Duke has a rate case pending and its stock fell heavily.

The decline would translate into a paper loss of $63 million if shareholders sold at the lower price, one research group estimated. "Investors were selling (CP&L) stock hoping to invest in something that would give them a better return," said Scott Sartorius, analyst at Salmon Brothers Inc., New York.

"The bottom line is: The rate payer is the clear winner in this decision. the (investor) is the loser."

Argus Research Corp., New York, reduced its estimate of the company's earnings for 1982 to $3-$3.10 per share, down from $3.50.

Warden To Step Aside

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Central Prison Warden Sam Garrison says he won't take his old job again when he returns from a period of indefinite sick leave.

"I'm just kind of tired," Garrison said Monday in a telephone interview. "I won't be coming back as warden. I'll be coming back with the (corrections) department, some other job."

State Department of Corrections Secretary James Woodard announced Monday that Garrison, 46, would take sick leave.

Woodard said Garrison requested immediate leave and that it was granted by Rae McNamara, director of the division of prisons.

Deputy Warden Nathan A. Rice was named acting warden, said department spokesman Stuart Shadbolt.

Woodard said he did not know how long Garrison would be on leave.

"No decision's been made as to what position he'll hold if and when he comes back," said Shadbolt.

Woodard declined to state a reason for the sick leave. "I guess Sam just needs a little relief," he said. "Sam's had a whole lot on him in the last three, four years in particular."

Shadbolt said Garrison would receive his full salary while on leave.

Asked if he wanted Garrison to resume duties as warden, Woodard said: "I'm not going to comment on that. As far as I know he'll be strong enough to return to work with the Department of Corrections."

Woodard said the sick-leave was not connected to Garrison's drunken-driving arrest last December. The charge was later dismissed, but Garrison's doctor testified during his trial that Garrison was taking medication for a health problem.

Garrison has been with the department 24 years and has been warden since April 1, 1973, when Rice also became deputy warden. Rice has been with the department 20 years.

Warns Of Tax Shelter Abuses

By JIM LUTHER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Internal Revenue Service Commissioner Roscoe L. Egger is warning upper-income Americans who invest in exotic tax-avoidance schemes: "Participating in abusive tax shelters can be hazardous to your wealth."

In testimony prepared for a hearing today by a House Ways and Means subcommittee, Egger pledged an all-out campaign against fraudulent shelters.

"I wish to make it very clear to individuals considering investing in tax shelters, and to those thinking of starting one, that the risks are now substantial," Egger said. "We intend to vigorously impose the new fines and penalties enacted by Congress (earlier this year) and, when appropriate, criminally prosecute those responsible."

The "abusive tax shelters" to which Egger referred are investments entered into chiefly to get large, quick tax deductions and with little expectation of making a profit.

"Much of what is being marketed today is not a tax shelter at all, but outright fraud," Egger said.

Egger outlined one recently uncovered way to beat the tax collector — an involved scheme in which the government, through tax refunds, provided the cash required to finance the investment. He said about 5,200 people invested in the scheme over the last three years, wiping out as much as $62 million of their tax liability.

The IRS now has under examination 281,000 returns that appear to involve abusive shelters. Over the past 11 months, the agency completed auditing 61,772 such returns and found what it contends is a tax underpayment of $824.3 million — an average of more than $11,000 per return.

During the same 11 months, criminal prosecutions were recommended against 81 promoters or brokers of shelters and 30 were convicted. Those 81 cases involve 13,000 investors and an estimated additional tax liability of $2.6 billion, the IRS said.

Tax shelters became a hot political topic earlier this year when it was disclosed that Attorney General William French Smith invested in two oil and gas shelters that would have yielded tax deductions of about $3 for each $1 invested. Smith later announced he would pare back his deductions.

Most tax shelters are devised only for investors in the 50 percent income tax bracket. Although there are numerous tax-avoidance plans that meet IRS approval, the agency is especially wary of any promising big, immediate deductions and of those that are entered into late in the year.

Most shelters take advantage of special provisions in tax law that were enacted as an incentive to investment — such as the 10-percent investment credit and depreciation on property.

"When abusive, illegal and fraudulent tax shelters are openly touted as proper investments," Egger said, confidence in the self-assessment tax system drops, "producing the likelihood of reduced revenues and voluntary compliance and all that implies."

Corrections

An article in The Daily Reflector on Sunday incorrectly listed Mrs. Winnie Wiggins Satterthwaite as the sole donor of the Satterthwaite Store at Pactolus to the Connor Eagles Home-Steak. The store actually was donated to the homestead exhibit by the heirs of J.J. Satterthwaite — Mrs. Satterthwaite, Fernando Satterthwaite of Farmville and Mrs. Julia S. Mitchell of Yanceyville.

Another article in Sunday's Reflector on Jewish reaction to events in the Mideast misspelled the name of Paula Blumenfeld. The article also stated that Ms. Blumenfeld attended Hebrew University last year when she actually was a student there 11 years ago.

EPA Cracks Down On Auto Emission Tampering

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — "Save Fuel, Save Money," proclaim the ads for gadgets that allow motorists to junk a pollution control device that some motorists claim is a waste of money.

The problem with the devices, according to the Environmental Protection Agency, is that they can be used to violate many state laws and can increase a car's pollution emissions eight-fold.

EPA officials say there is growing trend among motorists to tamper with their auto pollution controls in the mistaken belief that they can increase fuel economy or car performance.

In the minds of many motorists, the catalytic converter — a muffler-like chamber through which a car's exhaust gases are filtered — cuts down on performance. The converters have been required equipment on most cars sold in the United States since 1975.

Critics say the converter's chambers can clog, causing the car to operate poorly or not at all. Motorists also complain because they can only use unleaded gasoline — which sells for about 6-cents-a-gallon more than leaded.

Many motorists are fighting back by getting rid of their catalytic converters by installing the conversion kits, the EPA says. In recent spot checks, pollution controls on 20 percent of the cars have been tampered with and on 8 percent of the cars checked the catalytic converter has been removed.

In an enforcement crackdown, the EPA on Monday announced it was seeking to levy civil fines of $327,500 against four muffler shops and a cab company accused of removing catalytic converters.

The largest fine is $120,000 against Lew Smith's Muffler and Parts, a small shop in Covington, Ky., where officials say 48 converters were taken off cars.

Lew Smith, owner of the shop, said he was surprised by the threatened fine since the conversion kits he bought are advertised in national magazines and sold openly to customers in many department stores.

Muffler shops generally are charging $25 to $35 for the converter kits. A catalytic converter, by comparison, costs between $150 and $400.

Federal law allows the EPA to fine repair shop owners $2,500 for each catalyst they remove, although it is not a violation to manufacture the kits that allow the car to operate after the catalyst has been removed. Moreover, it is not against the law for an individual to install one of the kits on his car.

While 40 states have their own laws making it illegal for motorists to tamper with pollution devices, EPA says those laws are poorly enforced.

As a result, the market for the conversion kits is booming. Officials estimate that as many as 1 million to 2 million are being sold annually.

Two of the most popular kits, which are essentially a piece of pipe and clamps, are sold under the name "Test Tube" and "Catalytic Converter Replacement Pipes."

Cedric Kotowicz, president of Products for Power, said his "Test Tube" is sold only for the purpose of allowing motorists to remove their catalytic converters to test whether they are causing the car to malfunction.

He pointed to warnings on the box stating, "Federal, state or local laws may prohibit the user from leaving this device on the vehicle after testing has been completed."

Kotowicz, of Addison, Ill., conceded that some motorists may ignore the warning, but he said, "We are only prescribing one use. If some of the public is misusing it, that is beyond my control."

Herman Smith, president of National Muffler Manufacturing Corp., of Atlanta, said he has been selling his "Catalytic Converter Replacement Kit" for three years because "we are serving a need." He said he has sold kits to police departments and the U.S. military.

Boosters of the kits say that catalysts on many cars are failing after the warranty runs out, leaving motorists with the unpleasant prospect of having to pay between $175 and $400 for a replacement catalyst.

But James Sakolosky, EPA enforcement branch chief, said most catalysts are holding up well. Officials said it is also a misconception that removing the devices will improve car performance.

"New cars are designed with the catalyst as an integral part of the system. Removing the catalyst upsets this balance," said EPA Assistant Administrator

Kathleen Bennett.

The agency said it was also seeking fines from Three Star Muffler Inc., Memphis, Tenn., $105,000; Big Muffler Shop of Florida Inc., Sarasota, Fla., $55,000; Ayers Auto Air and Muffler City of Tampa, Fla., $35,000; and Sun Lines Cab Co. of Fort Myers, Fla., $12,500.

Last Captive Of Kidnap Gang Escapes From Car

CONROE, Texas (AP) — A captive firefighter leaped from the trunk of a car under tow early today after his abductor — who officials allege masterminded the live burial of another kidnap victim — abandoned the car and fled.

Coby Garland Hamilton, 28, the Houston firefighter missing since Sunday morning, made his escape near George West in South Texas, Montgomery County sheriff's spokesman Ed deForest said.

He was uninjured, said Live Oak County Sheriff Larry Busby. "He was hungry, so I ordered him a meal, and I imagine he's a little bit tired," Busby said.

The sheriff said officers are searching for Ronald White, 40, being sought on an aggravated kidnapping warrant from Montgomery County in the abduction of Michael Baucom, 21, of La Marque. Baucom was buried alive for four days before his rescue Sunday morning.

Busby — whose county is some 200 miles from the area where Hamilton disappeared — said Deputy Roy Hart found the car abandoned at about 2:30 a.m. and learned through a license check that it was stolen. He called for a wrecker.

"Coby was in the trunk, but he kept quiet and didn't make any noise because he thought maybe the suspect had returned," Busby said. When the wrecker began towing the car, Hamilton pried open the trunk with a tire tool, leaped out and ran to a nearby house.

Officials say White is the prime suspect in Hamilton's abduction.

Busby refused to let Hamilton speak with The Associated Press.

"He was abducted at approximately 2 a.m. Sunday from a Jiffy food store very close to the point where the people were arrested in the Baucom kidnapping," deForest said of Hamilton. He said Hamilton and his abductor drove through several East Texas towns before heading south.

"From time to time he would put Hamilton in the trunk of the car," deForest said. "Yesterday afternoon, he put him in the trunk and fled on foot."

DeForest said Hamilton described his abductor as "mentally erratic."

"He said he was convinced that had they been stopped by a law officer there would have been shooting," deForest said.

On Sunday morning, Hamilton had been delivering the Houston Chronicle in an area near where deputies arrested three people and rescued Baucom from the box where he had been buried for four days.

DeForest said Hamilton's wife reported that she hadn't heard from her husband since he called home early Sunday. She said he spoke in an uncharacteristic manner and said he had met a friend and they were taking a short trip.

"She said that was entirely unlike her husband and that he sounded strange and under pressure," deForest said.

White was charged in an arrest warrant Sunday with kidnapping Baucom, 20, who was abducted late Tuesday and buried early Wednesday.

White had worked for Baucom's father, Benny E. Baucom, the elder Baucom said.

"He was such a nice guy," the elder Baucom said. "Even after he quit working for me, I loaned him my truck."

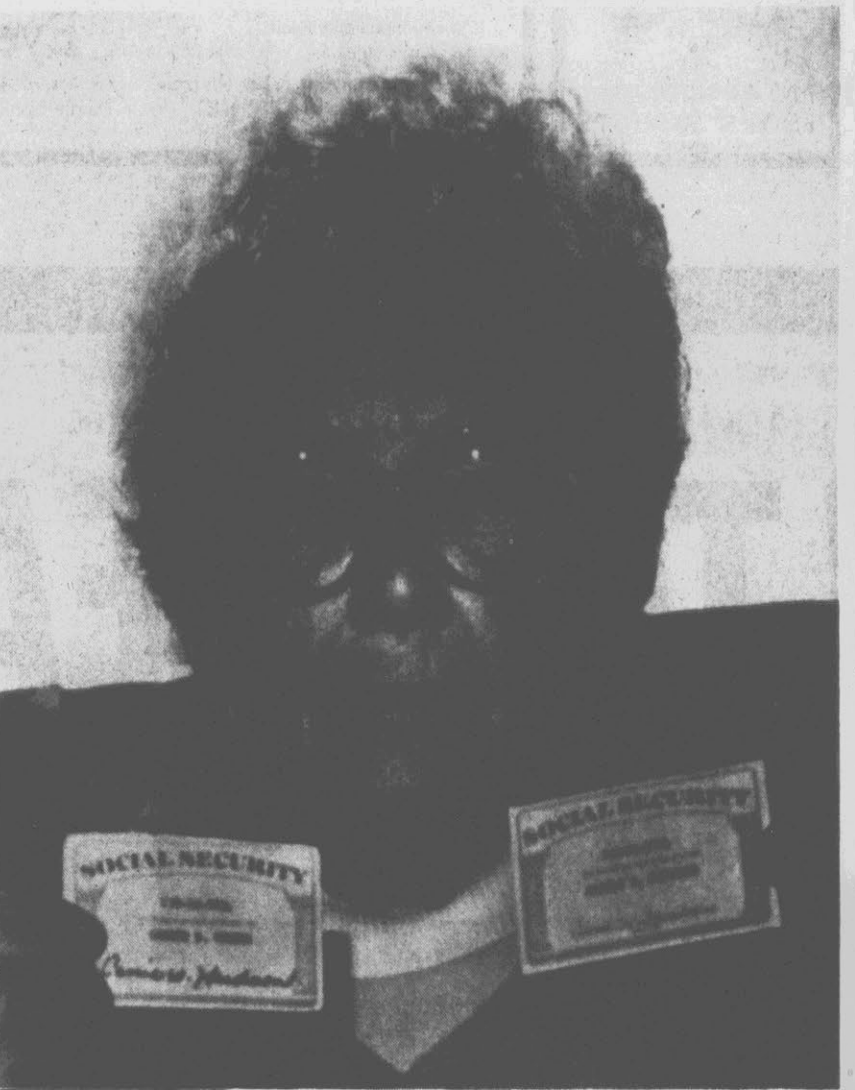

Baucom was rescued

Sunday morning after one of the three people arrested near New Caney led deputies to where he was buried. Baucom, buried with a loaf of bread and a jug of water, said later he feared he would die if he ever fell asleep.

A $75,000 ransom demanded by kidnappers for the release of Baucom was never paid.

The three people arrested were identified as Timothy Michael Connelly, 19, of Burlington, Iowa; Mark Oler, 21, and Deborah Williams, 29, both of Conroe. They were charged with aggravated kidnapping and held on $100,000 bonds in the Galveston County jail.

The suspects were arrested after authorities found copies of ransom notes in a car full of weapons and ammunition.

International Harvester Puts End To Uncertainty

By DALE LEACH
Associated Press Writer
SPRINGFIELD, Ohio (AP) — Relieved workers and community leaders raised toasts in taverns and placed thank-you signs in windows as International Harvester Co. ended a two-state tug of war by deciding to consolidate its bus and truck operations here.

"Everyone's happy about it," said Kathy Atchison, an employee of the Harvester Inn near the IH body plant, where workers began gathering at about noon Monday after hearing the city's largest employer declare it would stay. "The announcement took a lot off of people's minds."

But it was bitter news for residents of Fort Wayne, Ind., which will lose 2,200 jobs with the decision by Harvester, although the company will retain about 1,900 workers there in non-assembly jobs.

"The decision comes as a harsh blow to thousands of individuals who work for this major employer," said Fort Wayne Mayor Winfield Moses Jr. "I'm not surprised. I am disappointed and I'm deeply concerned about the worry I know this decision will cause."

Financially troubled Harvester, which expects to lose $1.5 billion this year, announced in August it would close one of its North American truck plants, prompting a $30 million bidding war between Indiana and Ohio. A third truck plant in Chatham, Ontario, was not involved because of a U.S.-Canadian trade agreement.

However, Donald D. Lennox, Harvester's president and chief operating officer, said Monday the decision to consolidate in Springfield hinged on its more efficient plant, 40 years newer than Fort Wayne's.

In Springfield, a city of 73,000 people in central Ohio, Harvester workers and community leaders gathered in taverns and at private clubs to celebrate. Signs saying "Thanks IH" and "Springfield Loves IH" appeared at businesses.

Ohio Gov. James A. Rhodes, in Springfield for the announcement, said, "You know, there's not much of a line between misery and happiness."

But it was a line the people of Springfield had grown weary of walking. Ms. Atchison said recent talk at the tavern by workers centered on the possibility the truck assembly plant would be lost.

"You know, they'd see an ad for something and then they'd say, 'Nope, I better not use that money in the bank,' because they didn't know what would happen."

Monday's jubilation was tempered by concern for Harvester's future. Lennox admitted that the company's efforts to rid itself of unprofitable lines have not yet shown results.

But he said the consolidation at Springfield would save Harvester $50 million a year and put it back on the road to profitability.

For Ohio, it will mean about 1,500 new jobs in the next 15 months as Harvester expands its truck and bus production at Springfield from a present rate of about 150 per day to around 400 a day.

IH employs about 3,200 workers in the two Springfield plants. About 2,000 of them would have lost their jobs if the truck assembly plant had closed. There are about 2,300 workers on indefinite layoff, who presumably would be first in line for hiring.

"You can all be very proud — the IH employees, the Springfield citizens — of the job that your leaders did in persuading IH to expand in Springfield," Lennox said.

He credited Rhodes "first, foremost" with helping Harvester reach its decision.

Lennox said the company "sincerely did not intend to get this into the dramatic type of bidding war" between the two states.

Fort Wayne and Indiana officials worked together on a $31 million package of low-cost loans and other concessions, which included having Harvester sell the plant to the city and lease it back.

But Ohio's $30 million package included a similar arrangement, and last week Rhodes persuaded the state Controlling Board to increase Ohio's loan guarantee and actual loans from 66 percent to 90 percent of the package, which leaves Ohio liable for about $27 million of the deal.

Although Fort Wayne came out the loser, the decision was "kind of a relief" after weeks of uncertainty, said Rex Bear, president of United Auto Workers Local 57.

The Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette, in an editorial today, said community leaders and residents "did everything that reasonably could be expected of them ... We fought a good fight and lost."

Indiana Gov. Robert D. Orr was critical that Ohio was allowed to restructure its offer to Harvester despite a "gentleman's agreement" there would be no changes in the two states' proposals once submitted. But he added: "What could anger at this point do? It's over. It's done. The decision has been made. We have to go on from here."

Ex-Legislators Top Lobbyists

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — When it comes to influencing the General Assembly, former legislators know best, says a study which lists North Carolina's five top lobbyists as former lawmakers.

The North Carolina Center for Public Policy Research Inc. released a report Monday on a survey of lobbyists, legislators and reporters who cover the General Assembly. The center released an effectiveness ranking of legislators in June.

Banks, industry, tobacco, insurance and various trade associations have the most influential lobbyists in the legislature, said the report. The center is a private, nonprofit group that examines government policies and legislative trends.

Lacy Maddox, who compiled the survey, said it marked the first time the center had undertaken a ranking of lobbyists. She said the five top lobbyists represented a clear consensus of those who responded to the survey.

"They were pretty much far above the others," she said. "They were mentioned most often."

Ranked as the top lobbyist in the legislature was John R. Jordan, a former state senator and Raleigh lawyer most widely known as the chief lobbyist for banks.

Jordan represents the N.C. Bankers Association in addition to associations of Alcoholic Beverage Control boards, auto wholesalers, life insurance companies, wholesalers and the N.C. Manufactured Housing Institute.

Jordan also was counted as a lobbyist for the University of North Carolina system since he serves as chairman of its Board of Governors, although he is not officially registered as a university lobbyist.

Ranked second was Sam Johnson, a former state House member and Raleigh lawyer who represents the N.C. Merchants Association, N.C. Associated Industries and associations of certified public accountants, auto dealers and dairy product dealers.

Third was Tom White, a Kinston lawyer and former state senator who was appropriations chairman and Advisory Budget Commission chairman in the 1960s. He lobbies on behalf of tobacco for the Tobacco Tax Council and represents the Federal Land Bank of Columbia and Interstate Insurers Inc.

Fourth was J. Ruffin Bailey, a former state senator and a Raleigh lawyer who is a leading lobbyist for insurance and represents the American Insurance Association. He also lobbies for associations of beer wholesalers, credit unions and mobile home movers.

Fifth was Zeb Alley, Gov. Jim Hunt's personal lobbyist. Alley is a former state senator and a Waynesville lawyer who joined Hunt's staff as legislative lobbyist in 1981 and is paid by the state.

The survey is included in the center's book, Article II, which was released Monday. It is a directory of legislators in the 1981-82 session that includes their voting records, biographical information and comparisons of their effectiveness as rated by the survey.

The report also listed legislators whose effectiveness has improved the most. In the Senate, moving up most since 1977-78 was Carolyn Mathis, D-Mecklenburg. In the House, moving up the most since 1977-78 was George Hux, D-Halifax, who was defeated in his renomination bid.

The previously released effectiveness rankings listed Senate Ways and Means Chairman Kenneth Royall, D-Durham, and House Speaker Liston Ramsey, D-Madison, as the most effective legislators.

Some Democrats Blast Reagan Medicare Council

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some congressional Democrats and senior citizens' groups are criticizing the Reagan administration for failing to appoint any elderly or disabled representatives to a new Medicare advisory council.

Health insurers are also upset with the appointments to the 13-member panel, which were made by Health and Human Services Secretary Richard S. Schweiker on Sept. 16.

Critics say the council may be biased toward business and may not adequately represent the interests of the more than 28 million elderly or disabled Medicare beneficiaries.

The panel, chaired by Dr. Otis R. Bowen, former Republican governor of Indiana, has not yet begun its work, but it is under orders to draw up by July 1 a blueprint for reform of the $50 billion program, which faces severe financial difficulties by the end of this decade.

Reps. Henry A. Waxman, D-Calif., and Andy Jacobs Jr., D-Ind., sent Schweiker an angry letter last Thursday decrying the "lack of balance in the perspectives and expertise of the appointees."

"There are no representatives of the elderly and disabled that Medicare serves and no representatives of the third party payors and the voluntary health sector that are so important to our nation's health financing and delivery system," they said.

Warning that the council's recommendations "will not be perceived as objective or credible," they urged Schweiker to "reconsider these appointees and reconstitute a more balanced council."

Claire Dorrell, spokeswoman for Schweiker, said the agency had no immediate reaction to the complaints.

William R. Hutton, executive director of the National Council of Senior Citizens, said, "The council is biased toward the for-profit business sector." He said that at a minimum, representatives of the elderly should be added.

Fred De Luca, a spokesman for the Hospital Insurance Association of America, said his group "is very puzzled and disappointed by the exclusion of health insurance companies."

Schweiker was required under the law to appoint a quadrennial Social Security Advisory Council. Because a national commission already is laboring to find solutions to the imminent crisis in Social Security's old age fund, Schweiker said the new council would direct its attention to Medicare.

In addition to Bowen, its members are: Richard W. Rahn, vice president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States; James D. McKeivitt, a lobbyist for the National Federation of Independent Business; Stanford D. Arnold of Lansing, Mich., secretary-treasurer of the Michigan Building and Construction Trades Council; Alvin E. Heapes of New York, president of the Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Union and a vice president of the AFL-CIO.

Also, Carlos J. Arboleya, president of the Consolidated Barnet Banks of Miami; Karl D. Bays of Evanston, Ill., chairman of the board of the American Hospital Supply Corp.; Kenneth M. McCaffree of Seattle, a businessman and retired University of Washington economics professor; Samuel H. Howard of Nashville, Tenn., vice president and treasurer of the Hospital Corp. of America.

Also, James Balog of New York, senior executive vice president of Drexel, Burnham, Lambert; Linda H. Aiken, vice president of the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation of Princeton, N.J.; David W. Christopher of the Pittsburgh office of Price Waterhouse & Co., and C. Joseph Stetler, a lawyer and former chairman of the Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association.

Waxman is chairman of the House Energy and Commerce subcommittee on health and Jacobs chairman of the House Ways and Means subcommittee on health.

They said Schweiker's appointments would exacerbate fears that the Reagan administration's goal is to curb Medicare benefits and eventually turn the program over to the private sector.

More Activists Join PCB Protests

By ROBIN TEATER
Associated Press Writer
AFTON, N.C. (AP) — A march and rally were planned for today by opponents of the Warren County PCB landfill as a growing number of well-known activists became involved in the controversy.

Police arrested 114 people Monday, including Delegate Walter E. Fauntroy of Washington, D.C., on charges of impeding traffic as they tried to block trucks carrying dirt laden with PCB-laced oil to the landfill.

About 500 marchers took part in Monday's demonstration as the protests entered their 13th day.

Meanwhile, the head of the National Wildlife Federation, the nation's largest conservation organization, said state officials should have treated the soil where it lay instead of trying to move it.

"There is adequate technology to handle it in place," said Jay Hair, a former N.C. State University professor of zoology.

Hair added, however, that protests against the dumping

"are getting a bit beyond the realm of the rational and on into the emotional."

Ann Sheppard Turner, the only white and only women among the Wilmington 10, was arrested Monday. The Wilmington 10 were charged with firebombing a grocery store during racial upheavals in Wilmington in 1971. They were convicted but an appeals court later reversed the ruling.

Also arrested were Nelson Johnson, a leader of the Communist Workers Party; Martha Nathan, wife of a CWP member slain during the Greensboro confrontation with Ku Klux Klansmen and Nazis in 1979; and Evelyn Lowery, wife of Joseph Lowery, president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference.

Ken Ferruccio, president of Warren County Citizens Concerned About PCB, said Ms. Lowery and seven other protestors remained in jail Monday night. He said landfill opponents would meet today at 10 a.m. at the Coley Springs Baptist Church and would begin their march at noon.

Fauntroy was charged with impeding traffic and resisting arrest after he knelt and sat in front of a dump truck trying to enter the landfill, a sheriff's department spokesman said.

Fauntroy, a Democrat representing the District of Columbia, is on the board of directors of the SCLC and is chairman of the Congressional Black Caucus. He does not have the right to vote in Congress.

"I hadn't planned on this," said the Democrat, a non-voting representative of the District of Columbia. "I came here to express my support for the people here."

He said he told a state trooper he was a member of Congress and could not be arrested, but the trooper arrested him anyway.

"I fully expect when the state troopers become familiar with the law I will be released. I don't think the people of North Carolina should have a congressman locked up," Fauntroy said.

He was released early Monday evening after posting a $200 unsecured bond and is scheduled to appear in District Court in Warrenton on Oct. 29.

Following the first wave of arrests, about 400 demonstrators regrouped at nearby Coley Springs Church, then marched a half mile to block trucks on U.S. 401.

There highway patrolmen took 50 more people into custody, including the Rev. Curtis Harris of Hopewell, Va., chairman of the Virginia SCLC.

Monday's arrests brought to more than 350 the number of people taken into custody or charged as a result of protests against the dumping of soil at the EPA-approved dump site.

Civil rights demonstrators have joined the protests, saying the state chose Warren County for the landfill because it has a high number of black residents living there.

Oil laced with PCBs was dumped illegally along 210 miles of North Carolina roadsides in 14 counties in 1978. Soil from the spill sites is being put into the landfill.

Polychlorinated biphenyls were used as insulation in electric transformers until the chemical was banned by the federal government. The ban was ordered after tests showed the chemical caused cancer in laboratory animals.

GAO Claims Discrimination By VA Against Female Veterans

WASHINGTON (AP) — Veterans Administration health care centers are providing inadequate services for women despite the growing number of female veterans, congressional auditors have concluded.

In a report prepared for Sen. Daniel K. Inouye, D-Hawaii, the General Accounting Office said VA health care programs have typically been oriented to male health care needs because most veterans are male.

The report said 742,000 veterans, about 2 percent of the total, are women. The proportion is growing rapidly, said the report, which was released Monday.

Before 1975, women made up only 2 percent of the nation's military strength, but this had increased nearly 6 percent in 1977 and is expected to reach 12 percent in 1984.

Despite that, the GAO said:

—Only one of the VA medical centers visited by the GAO team had reviewed medical charts to monitor the completeness of female patients' medical examinations. This center, in Syracuse, N.Y., found that pelvic examinations had been done for 27 percent of the women, breast examinations for 40 percent and pap smears for none. All are techniques for detecting cancer in women.

—At seven out of 23 VA medical facilities, the team found that women are not eligible for outpatient gynecological treatment for nonservice-connected disabilities even if it is needed to avoid hospitalization. The same facilities treat virtually all outpatient medical needs of male patients, whether service-connected or not.

—Ten of the VA's 16 domiciliarys, which care for disabled veterans who do not need hospitalization, will not admit women because of a lack of privacy in sleeping and toilet facilities.

—Some psychiatric programs at the VA's Brentwood, Calif., Medical Center do not provide treatment to women because privacy is not adequate in the sleeping areas or because there is not enough staff to supervise a sexually mixed psychiatric group.

—Under a VA regulation upheld recently by the U.S. Court of Appeals, female veterans are not eligible for medical care for normal pregnancy and childbirth even if they were pregnant when discharged from the service.

—VA "has not adequately considered the increasing female veteran population in long-range planning."

Up To $470 Million Damage Due Western Floods

By The Associated Press
Utah residents began digging out of a soggy blanket of mud and debris, but more rain was falling today as downpours that broke a dam and endangered $450 million worth of crops swept eastward from California.

In Salt Lake City, officials issued an appeal early today for volunteers to help with sandbagging, and the Utah Highway Patrol reported parts of two main city routes fender-deep in water.

More than 1,000 homes were flooded and 400 people were forced to evacuate Monday after one of Utah's worst storms in 50 years — an early fall tempest that took forecasters by surprise.

"The probability of this kind of storm happening is once every 100 years," Keith Goates of the National Weather Service said Monday.

Rain also fell in the water-logged High Sierra of California, but today's forecast called for clear skies that could let waters recede and residents clean up. Dozens of residents were still isolated Monday after a rain-swollen dam broke on North Lake near Bishop, Calif., washing out roads and forcing hundreds of residents from their homes.

Three days of rain have pounded harvest-ready crops in California, devastating raisins and wine grapes and causing damage that could reach $450 million, the state Farm Bureau said Monday.

In Colorado, up to a foot of snow was expected in the Rocky Mountains today as the storms moved in from the west. On Monday, rain at lower elevations "really made a mess" of a mudslide that began Sunday before the storm, a Colorado State Patrol dispatcher said.

A California couple died in a traffic accident Monday on a rain-slickened road in Colorado, authorities said.

After Utah Gov. Scott Matheson declared a state of emergency in Salt Lake County, the weather service issued a flash flood watch for all of Utah late Monday and early today as rain poured from slate-gray skies for a fourth day. Salt Lake County, the state's most populous, could be soaked by more than half an inch overnight, officials said.

More than 400 Salt Lake County residents fled their homes as the Jordan River flooded after Sunday's downpour.

As of Monday, water damage was placed at up to $15 million, said Salt Lake County Public Works Director Don Spencer. Commercial losses ranged between $5 million and $10 million, while residential damages totaled about $5 million, he said.

Matheson's declaration activated the Utah National Guard, which provided manpower and heavy equipment to help communities dig out from mud and debris.

Lorayne Tempest, division director of Utah's Comprehensive Emergency Management Team, said the governor will consider asking President Reagan to declare the state a federal disaster area.

Forecasters said the Sunday rainfall was the heaviest to hit Salt Lake County in 50 years. More than 2 inches fell on Salt Lake City, while some areas of Salt Lake County received up to 4

The storm also tipped the measurements for the wettest water year at the Salt Lake International Airport. As of Monday, 23 inches of rain had fallen at the monitoring station. The record was 22.26 inches set in the 1972-73 water year, which runs from Oct. 1 to Sept. 30, the weather service said.

In the southern Utah town of Springdale, residents waited anxiously for the rain to stop after spending Monday cleaning up following an early morning flash flood that left car-sized boulders in its path.

Springdale Mayor Bob Ralston said no injuries were reported, but he expected property damage to be extensive. He said the water gushed out of two ravines on West Temple Mountain, west of the city.

"You could hear it coming for five minutes. It sounded just like a jet taking off," said Marcus Thompson of Springdale. "I looked out the door and a 5-foot wall of water was coming down the road."

The California Farm Bureau estimates the showers carried last week by tropical storm Olivia could cause damages as high as $150 million each to the raisin and wine grape crops if more rain arrives, while an estimated $30 million to $40 million worth of processing tomatoes are endangered.

As much as $110 million worth of fresh grapes, almonds, melons, strawberries and dry beans could also be lost, the Farm Bureau said.

"It depends on the upcoming weather," said Farm Bureau spokesman Clark Ziggs in Sacramento. "I don't expect to lose that, but it could go that high."

The five-day forecast was optimistic, said National Weather Service forecaster Glenn Trapp. In the Fresno area, which produces almost all of the nation's raisins, it was sunny Monday.

"We had an excellent day, but it's three days too late," said Ron Kister, president of the Raisin Bargaining Association.

Ninety percent of the nation's raisin crop was drying in the fields when Olivia arrived last week, said Fresno County Agriculture Commissioner Cosmo Insalaco.

In West Bishop, Calif., homes were shored up with sandbags and residents cleaning up from the dam break were warned to boil water.

The Big Pine Indian Reservation and the Dixon and exclusive Aspendell areas, about 300 miles north of Los Angeles, were hardest hit by the dam-caused flooding, but no injuries were reported.

In Inyo County, damage was estimated at $7.5 million, including 83 homes, 16 county roads and four bridges, county officials said.

WEATHER FORECAST — The National Weather Service forecasts warm weather for Wednesday over the eastern half of the nation except New England, and for the Pacific coast. Cool weather is due in the central Plains. Showers are indicated for the northern and central Rockies and from the eastern Plains to the upper Great Lakes. (AP Laserphoto Map)

Fair weather was expected to move back into North Carolina today and remain throughout the week, as a weak high pressure center covered much of the Mid- and South Atlantic states this morning.

That stable air mass was expected to be reinforced by more high pressure currently moving south out of southeast Canada, the National Weather Service said.

Patchy clouds and fog this morning were expected to give way to sunny skies by late morning into the afternoon. Highs were to be in the 70s with some 60s over the mountains.

By tonight fair skies again were anticipated, with lows dropping into the 40s over the mountains. 50s eastward and 60s along the coast. The outlook for Wednesday is again for fair skies with highs in the 70s except for 80 degrees over the southwest corner of the state.

Morning clouds Monday gave way to sunshine by afternoon with temperatures climbing into the 70s for the most part east of the mountains.

The range went from an even 80 degrees at Fayetteville to a mild 73 at both Cape Hatteras and Greensboro. Mountains reports were cooler with 51 at Mt. Mitchell and 56 at Grandfather Mountain the afternoon highs.

Rainfall overnight was restricted to a few showers and even thundershowers over the northwest Piedmont and part of the northeast Piedmont. An isolated shower or two was also noted over the southern piedmont.

The spotty rainfall dissipated during the early morning hours today. Little if any is expected over interior areas of the state for the rest of the week.

Rail Group Will Hold Meet

The acting directors of the N.C. Chapter of the National Association of Railroad Passengers will meet Saturday at 4 p.m. in Chapel Hill at the Carolina Inn.

W. C. Cobb of Greenville, an acting director of the state chapter, said that letters and resolutions will be signed Saturday for distribution to the 340 NARP members in North Carolina and South Carolina.

Cobb said the goal of the state organization is to make citizens more aware of the importance of railroads and passenger service.

Workshops On Child Discipline

A series of workshops to assist child-care providers in implementing a discipline policy as an educational tool will be held at the Pitt County Office Building, 1717 W. Fifth St., Oct. 5, Nov. 9 and Dec. 7.

The free workshops will be held from 9 a.m. until 3:30 p.m. each day.

If you are planning to attend or further information is needed, call Kay Galloway, Pitt Community College Preschool Laboratory, 752-4493, or Brenda Ernest, Acres, 756-5956, before Oct. 5.

To Close Road About 3 Days

The Stokestown Road — SR 1753 a mile east of N.C. 43 — will be closed for about three days beginning today, Department of Transportation Division Engineer C.W. Snell said Monday.

The closing will allow highway maintenance forces to replace an inadequate drainage pipe with a larger one better able to carry the water under the road.

Installation of the pipe is part of the Swift Creek Watershed project, designed to provide better flood protection and drainage in the Swift Creek area.

Snell said traffic will be detoured over N.C. 43, SR 1792 and SR 1755.

New Thumb And New Gun

HONOR, Mich. (AP) — A hunting accident that nearly cost a teen-ager his right hand apparently hasn't discouraged him from the sport — and he'll use a thumb that used to be a toe to hold the gun.

"I've got a new shotgun and I've shot a couple times since," said Mark Rhodes, 15. "I am going to try again for a deer this year."

Rhodes lost his right thumb Nov. 15 when his shotgun discharged on a deer hunting trip. His hand was severely damaged, requiring six operations to repair.

During the most recent surgery on Aug. 26, the second toe on Mark's right foot was transplanted to his hand, said his surgeon, Dr. Ronald Clark.

The result is that Rhodes will have a "pretty functional hand," Clark said.

With the new thumb, he expects the youth to have motion, feeling and the ability to write. He also will need further surgery to the rest of his hand.

"If he had done this in 1965, or even 1970, he wouldn't have much of a hand left," said Clark, who estimated about 200 toe-hand transplants have been done in the United States since the procedure was developed in 1969.

Rhodes, who missed the first two weeks of school because of the surgery, said his hand is still numb because the nerves have not healed, and he walks with a slight limp.

His old gun may have been the cause of his accident, Rhodes said, noting the accident occurred when he set the 12-gauge shotgun down butt-first. The safety on the 12-gauge didn't always work, he said.

"It was the most devastating hand injury I've ever seen in my seven years in the business," said Terry Money, coordinator of the Benzie County Ambulance Service. "The muzzle blast of a shotgun at a four- or eight-inch range is nothing to mess with."

Money was hunting with Rhodes when the accident occurred. He administered emergency first aid and drove the boy to a hospital.

Arrested During School Break-In

Greenville police Monday arrested Willie Earl Thigpen, 22, of 312 Old London Inn on charges of breaking, entering and larceny in connection with a 9 p.m. break-in at South Greenville School.

Chief Glenn Cannon said officers went to the school in response to a burglar alarm and found Thigpen inside the building.

The chief said entrance to the school was gained by breaking a window. A fan valued at $20 and a record player valued at $75 were recovered from a spot near the broken window.

Bond for Thigpen was set at $5,000.

Cars Collided Here Yesterday

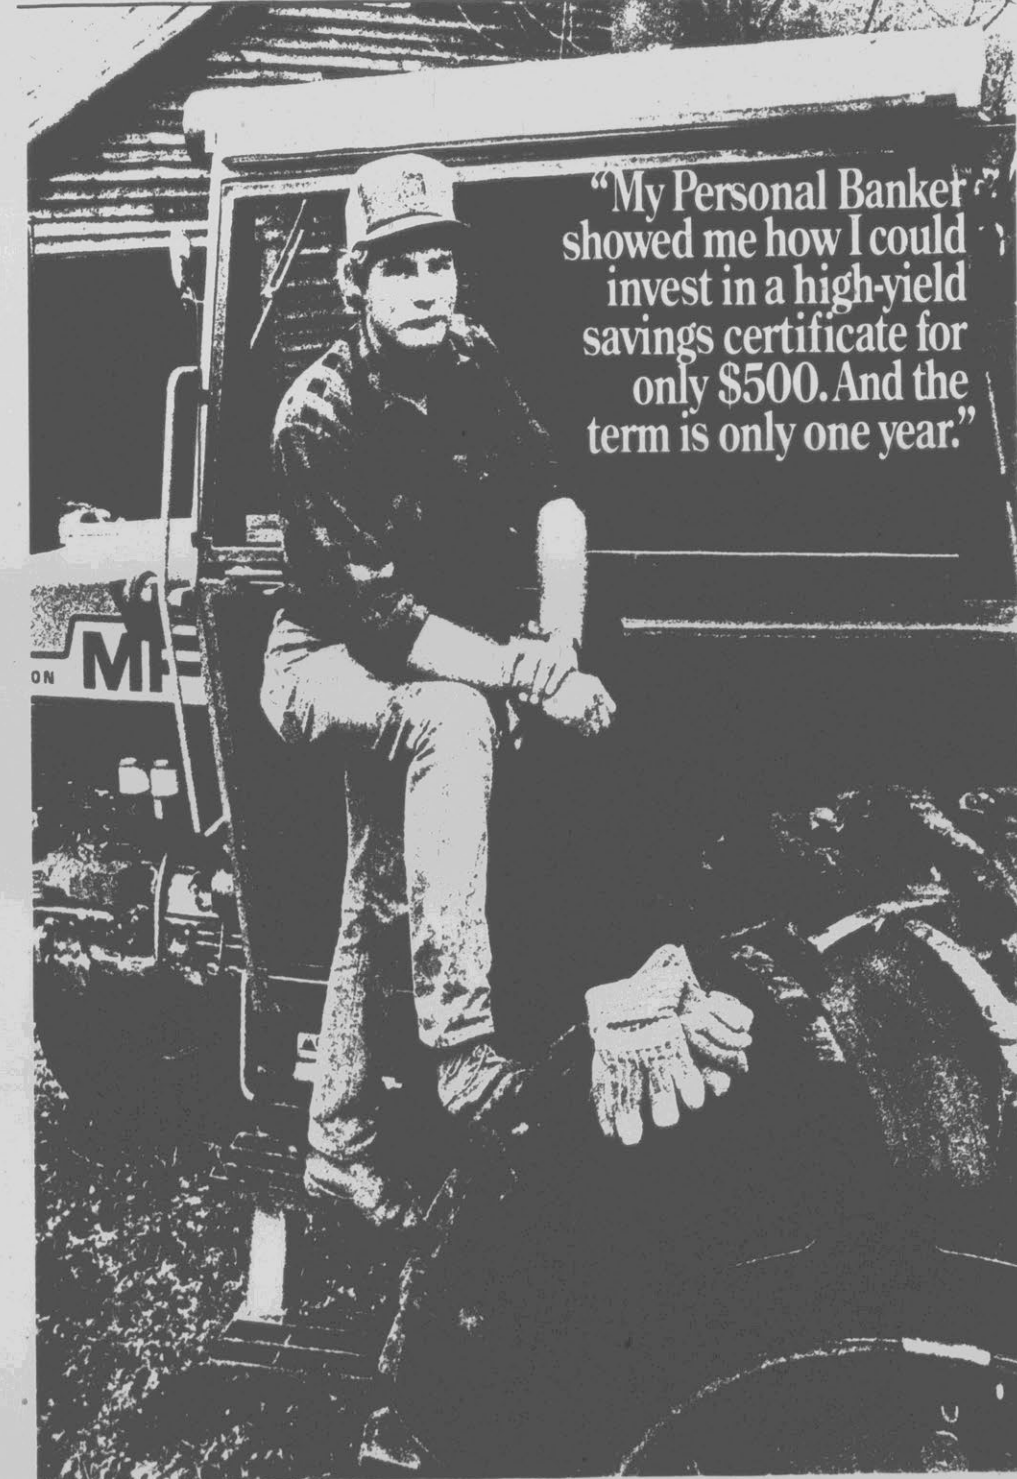

Cars driven by Drew Kimberly Lane of Stonewall and Bobby G. Thomas of Route 4, Greenville, collided about 10:04 a.m. Monday on Charles Street, 70 feet north of the 14th Street intersection.

Police investigators estimated damage from the mishap at $500 to the Lane car and $1,900 to the Thomas vehicle.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, which edged up 1.38 points Monday, gained another 1.47 points to 922.37 at noon.

Advancing issues held a slight lead over losers on the New York Stock Exchange.

Shortly before noon, Bankers Trust, the nation's 10th largest bank, reduced its prime lending rate to 13 percent from the 13.5 level that has prevailed in the industry since Aug. 20. It was the lowest level in nearly two years for the base upon which banks compute interest charges on short-term loans to their most creditworthy corporate customers.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed stock rose .05 to 70.93. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off .65 at 288.52.

U.S. 264 Public Hearing Slated

The N.C. Department of Transportation will hold a public hearing on the proposed four-laning of U.S. 264 from Greenville to Washington at 7:30 p.m. Oct. 12 at the Pacolus School gymnasium.

The proposed design for the project calls for adding a 24-foot wide roadway and a 36-foot wide median to the existing roadway. The new lanes would be on the north side of the present roadway from Rams Horn Road (SR 1538) to N.C. 30, on the side side from N.C. 30 to the Grimesland Road (SR 1565), and on the north side from the Grimesland Road to Bull Frog Ranch Road (SR 1427) in Beaufort County. From Bull Frog Ranch Road to the present five-lane curb and gutter section west of Washington the existing highway will be widened to five lanes.

door left wide open when he got home Monday about midday. He said he might have heard gunshots a short time later, but "couldn't be sure." He said the Braswells were, in his view, "a nice young couple."

Susan Daughtry, a Farmville resident who works in Greenville, reported the murder to Farmville police, who relayed it to the sheriff's department and the Farmville Rescue Squad, according to her husband, Daryl.

Daughtry said his wife reported she saw a car beside the road at the Chinquapin Road-264A intersection with a woman's body behind it. Daughtry said his wife got out of her car, looked at the second vehicle, and then went to the nearest telephone to call authorities.

Daughtry, who said he joined his wife at the scene, reported that they waited with sheriff's department officers who told them not to leave until SBI officers arrived, which was about two and a half hours later.

"The body lay there ... an inordinately long time and no news media was called," said Daughtry. "I'd have called somebody if I could have gotten away."

Braswell, an investigator, had been with the sheriff's department since 1969, having joined the county after serving with the Farmville Police Department for nearly three years, according to Tyson. He served in the Army from 1959 until 1962, having been traiped as a military policeman.

New Element Said 'Created'

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Scientists in West Germany have created a new element in what one expert hailed as "an incredible technological feat."

The disclosure of element 109 was made Monday at an international physics conference inaugurating Michigan State University's new cyclotron laboratory.

Only 92 elements are found in nature, but experiments like this one have, in the last few decades, resulted in the production of minute quantities of new elements.

The man-made elements are heavier than natural elements and are radioactive. They generally disintegrate into lighter elements in a very short time — sometimes in millionths of a second.

"It was a hard experiment and the group is very happy about it," Ernst Roeckl said of the work by physicists at the Gesellschaft Fur Schwerionen Forschung at Darmstadt, West Germany.

The discovery is "an incredible technological feat," said David Scott, associate director of the new cyclotron at MSU. He said he was impressed with the detection scheme which sorted one atom of the new element from millions of particle collisions occurring in a laboratory experiment.

The element, not yet named, was created Aug. 28 "and it existed for only one-3,000th of a second," said Roeckl. Word of the element was given at a conference in Cambridge, England, last week, but was not widely disseminated.

In the experiment, an atom of the new element was detected after bombarding a target of iron with a stream of highly accelerated bismuth nuclei. Nuclei are the cores of atoms.

It is questionable whether element 109 will have any practical application. A number of man-made elements have had practical use, including the nuclear fuel plutonium.

Elements are basic, chemically distinct varieties of matter such as hydrogen and oxygen. Uranium is the heaviest naturally occurring element. By bombarding uranium with other elements and forcing additional protons into their nuclei, scientists are able to form elements that are heavier than those found in nature.

EXPORTS ARE UP
NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iranian oil exports from Kharg Island increased in September, following a dip in August caused by Iraqi bombing raids on the Persian Gulf terminal, an authoritative publication said Monday.

An investigation of his background was ordered after a woman with a history of suicide attempts was found to have overdosed on drugs allegedly prescribed by Dixon.

Police are continuing their investigation of a break-in reported at 607 Griffin St. about 11:30 p.m. Monday night.

Chief Glenn Cannon said entrance to the home was gained through a window and two television sets and a radio, valued at $530 were reported taken.

Women Miners Settle A Suit

WHEELING, W.Va. (AP) — Eight female coal miners who claimed male workers spied on them while they dressed and showered have settled a $5.5 million lawsuit against Consolidation Coal Co.

The suit said a peephole enabled men to watch their locker room from a foreman's office at the Shoemaker Mine in Benwood, and that the company knew about the hole for a year before it was closed.

The settlement was reached Monday in U.S. District Court after five days of testimony but before the case went to the jury. Judge Charles T. Haden did not announce the damages. The women's attorney, James Borda, said it was an amount "we could live with."

Now—Who Will Face The Cardinals?

By The Associated Press
And who, pray tell, are the St. Louis Cardinals going to meet in the National League playoffs? Don't ask.

While Whitey Herzog's Re-birds nailed down their first-ever NL East pennant Monday with a 4-2 victory over Montreal, the tight-as-a-drum NL West got even tighter. Phil Niekro, 16-4, hurled a two-hitter as the Atlanta Braves snapped San Francisco's five-game winning streak with a 7-0 victory, while Cincinnati's Mario Soto five-hit Los Angeles 6-1. That put the Braves and Dodgers — both with 85-71 records — into a first-place tie, while the Giants trail by the co-leaders by one game with six to go.

In other NL action, Chicago topped Philadelphia 8-1, New York beat Pittsburgh 4-1, and Houston defeated San Diego 7-3.

"I want to play the Braves," said Cardinal outfielder Willie McGee. "I don't want to have to deal with the Giants the way they're playing right now."

McGee's three-run, inside-the-park homer off Bill Gullickson, 12-13, highlighted a four-run first inning. Dave LaPoint, 9-3, was the winning pitcher.

"I thought we had a good chance to win it in spring training, but then I started to wonder when we hit a rash of injuries in May," said Herzog, who had won three American League West titles as manager of the Kansas City Royals. "The first one is always the most exciting, but to me they're all good because that's what you're in this game for, to win."

"This is like winning the first leg of the Triple Crown," said Jim Kaat, the Cards' 43-year old reliever. "We've just won the Kentucky Derby, and now there's two big races to go."

While the race ended in the East, it reached fever pitch in the West.

"Everything is of bigger magnitude right now," Niekro said after blanking the Giants. "Every pitch, every strikeout, every hit is of bigger magnitude."

"Pitching is the key to any pennant race," said Brave first baseman Chris Chambliss, whose two-run double topped off a five-run Atlanta fourth inning. "He's (Niekro) been pitching great all year but I've been here three years and I've never seen him so good. His knuckleball can't be hit when he gets it over the plate. They just can't hit it."

Which is something the Dodgers haven't done much of, either.

"Everybody's stopped hitting," said Dodger Manager Tom Lasorda. "Nobody knows why people go into slumps. It seems like lately it's just been everybody."

Soto, 14-12, allowed just one hit after the fourth inning as he handed the Dodgers their sixth straight loss.

"The last time I faced them, I pitched my worst game in baseball," said Soto, who lost to the Dodgers 7-2 on Sept. 6. "I never forget things like that. They beat on me like I was a pitching coach. I felt bad. I remembered that tonight. In the first couple of innings, I was thinking about that."

"I'm just hoping we can pull something out of the hat tomorrow, get started again," said Lasorda.

But tomorrow is running out for the Dodgers, Giants and Braves. For the

Cubs 8, Phillies 1
Bill Buckner's RBI triple highlighted a four-run Cub third inning. Randy Martz, 11-10, scattered seven hits before being relieved by Dick Tidrow in the ninth, as the Phillies were eliminated from the East race with their loss and the Cards' victory.

"Sure, I'm disappointed," said Phillies Manager Pat Corrales. "I expected us to go into the last week fighting for it (the division title), which we didn't do. It got away from us."

"We weren't that great," said third baseman Mike Schmidt. "We didn't have it together at any point. We were lucky enough to hang close.

"We did have our fate in our hands three or four weeks ago and that's what makes this period of frustration possible."

First baseman Pete Rose added, "You can say we choked but I wouldn't say that. Anytime you go in a slump people say you're tight. I'm not tight. It just wasn't much fun because we were losing."

Mets 4, Pirates 1
Rookie Scott Holman, 2-1, fired a seven-hitter and drove in a run with a fifth-inning single to lead the Mets over the Pirates.

Before the game, the Mets honored retiring Pirates slugger Willie Stargell. And later, Holman ended the game by striking out Stargell with two men on base in the ninth.

"My heart was pumping when I had to face Stargell in that situation," said Holman. "I was hoping to get him to ground out. I was even happier to strike out one of the greatest players in baseball."

Astros 7, Padres 3
Alan Ashby, the Astros' switch-hitting catcher, belted homers from each side of the plate to give reliever Vern Ruhle, 9-13, the victory.

"I know this is the first time," said Ashby, who hit a solo homer from the left side and a three-run shot from the right. "The only other time I've ever hit two in a game came here in San Diego the last time we were in, and they both were hit lefty."

Jose Cruz collected three hits and scored twice for Houston.

Two Tie In Contest

James Hawkins of 1228 Farmville Blvd., Greenville, and Vernie Dove, Jr., of 1-5 Wilson Acres, Greenville, tied for first place in last week's Daily Reflector Football Contest.

The two both missed just two games of the 32 listed contests, and were both two points off the point total with guesses of 79 and 75 respectively. The actual point total was 77.

The next in this year's series of contests appears in today's paper.

Thursday Meeting Set For Next Strike Talks

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Football League players strike moved into its second week today with only the technicality of a formal announcement keeping next weekend's 14 games alive.

Negotiators for the NFL Management Council and the Players Association announced Monday that they will meet in Washington Thursday, virtually guaranteeing that the entire league schedule will be called off for the second straight week.

In a television appearance Sunday, NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle said that unless agreement is reached by Thursday, there could be no games next weekend.

Jim Miller, a Management Council spokesman, said Monday he assumes the games will be called off. Given the distance between the two sides, it appears unlikely that even around-the-clock talks starting now could save next weekend's games.

A second Sunday without NFL games would extract additional financial costs. Unofficial estimates put the price tag on the first week of the strike at nearly $70 million.

By striking Sunday, NFL players lost somewhere between $8 million and $9 million in salary. The Management Council estimated that the 28 teams lost $29 million in gate receipts and television money, though the television revenue is a point of dispute — the networks are paying their regular fees for the first two weeks of the strike, but owners are counting it as a loss because they say they will have to pay it back next year.

Other losers Sunday were the 14 cities where games weren't played, an estimated $2 million each in hotel and restaurant revenue; and concessionaires, who put their losses at $2 million.

The basic bargaining issue is based on a simple question: Shall players continue to negotiate individual contracts with individual teams or shall there be a wage scale, with players paid according to their seniority in the league?

Having moved from its previously unmovable position, a demand for a percentage of league revenues, the union wants the wage scale.

But the Management Council, representing the owners, has so far refused to budge from what until now has been considered an immutable fact of life in professional sports — individual contracts with individual teams.

Following Sunday's six-hour bargaining session at Hofstra University in Hempstead, N.Y., Jack Donlan, chief negotiator for the Management Council, said the owners were willing to guarantee the $1.6 billion they have offered, "if the union drops its demand for a wage scale."

The guarantee would take the form of a pool from which any money not spent during the five-year life of the contract would be distributed to the players based on a formula to be negotiated.

One source who attended Sunday's session said most of the six hours of negotiations was spent reiterating the basic, long-held positions of both sides.

Cardinals Ice East's Pennant

MONTREAL (AP) — In the 1930s, they were known as the Gas House Gang. During the war years, they were a bunch of youngsters called the St. Louis Swiftnies. When they dominated the National League in the late 1960s, they were known as El Birdos.

Under any nickname, the St. Louis Cardinals are now what they were then.

Champions.

The Redbirds clinched the National League East pennant — their first title since they won the NL flag in 1968 — with a 4-2 victory Monday night over the Montreal Expos. Willie McGee's three-run homer highlighted a four-run first inning, while starter Dave LaPoint was the winning pitcher.

McGee? LaPoint? Whatever happened to names like Musial and Brock?

"When you look at our club, it seems as though everyone out there is someone we got in a trade," said Manager Whitey Herzog, who personally molded the current Cardinal team in less than two years.

The rebirth of the Cards began on June 9, 1980, when Herzog was named manager. He succeeded former third baseman Ken Boyer, whose death from cancer earlier this year is commemorated by the Cards' wearing of black arm bands on their home uniforms.

Herzog was then given the role of general manager on Aug. 29, and, after handing the managerial reins to coach Red Schoendienst on an interim basis, he was named combined manager-GM on Oct. 24, 1980.

Then the man affectionately known as the "White Rat" set in motion a rapid-fire series of trades that changed the look of the team. He acquired relief ace Bruce Sutter from the Chicago Cubs; outfielder Lonnie Smith from Philadelphia; shortstop Ozzie Smith, catcher Gene Tenace and pitcher Steve Mura from San Diego; outfielder McGee from the New York Yankees; pitcher Joaquin Andujar from Houston, and LaPoint from Milwaukee. He also signed free agent catcher Darrell Porter.

"It was 25 guys or whatever we have on our roster going out there and pulling for each other every day," said third baseman Ken Oberkell. "If there was one thing over another maybe it was our attitude. We knew we had to go out there every day and give 100 percent."

"I'm just happy I've had the opportunity to play," said McGee, a rookie. "I didn't want to hurt this club. Whitey was great in that he gave me the opportunity to play, which is something the Yankees never did."

Reid To Miss Missouri Game

In the ever-thinning ranks of East Carolina's linebackers, a decision has been made on one and another will miss Saturday's game with Missouri.

Mike Grant, who was the leading tackler for the Pirates last season, will be redshirted, it was announced following tests yesterday. Grant, who has suffered from chronic kneecap problems, underwent surgery in June, and has been slow in his rehabilitation progress.

The Pirates also learned that Ron Reid, who had moved into one of the starting linebacker slots, will be doubtful for Saturday. Reid suffered a knee injury against Central Michigan on last Saturday and probably will not be ready to play until next week's game with Richmond.

P.J. Jordan and Kevin Banks will start at linebacker against Missouri, with Dewayne Anderson and Amos Twitty, the latter coming off an injury, as backups.

The Pirates have also named their game captains for this weekend.

Terry Long and Kevin Ingram will serve as the offensive captains, and Clint Harris and Jody Schulz will head up the defensive unit. Whitley Wilkerson and Randy Bost will serve as special team captains.

The Pirates and Missouri meet for the first time ever on Saturday at 2:30 p.m., Eastern time.

Lady Pirates Rip Wilmington

East Carolina's Lady Pirate volleyball team rolled to a 3-0 victory over UNC-Wilmington last night in Minges Coliseum.

The Lady Pirates romped in the first game, taking a 15-1 victory, then swept through the best-of-five match with 15-2, 15-3 wins.

"Our goal was to win the match in three games and to keep Wilmington to a limited number of points," Coach Lynn Davidson said. "We jumped on them at the beginning and took control of the match. (They) have a better team and they can play better. I think we psyched them out with our hitting."

had some nice hits and Johanna hit the holes well. Overall, everyone played well and I am very pleased. We still need to work on our floor skills and our mental attitude. (ECU has) improved so much from last year, but they know they still have a long way to go."

East Carolina is now 9-6 on the year, and returns to play on Friday in the Carolina Classic at the University of South Carolina. That tournament winds up on Saturday.

Pitt, Penn St. Climb On Poll

By The Associated Press
The Pitt Panthers, bounced from the top spot earlier this season despite an unbeaten record, have climbed from third place to second in The Associated Press college football poll, seven points behind top-ranked Washington.

Penn State made the most dramatic move, jumping from eighth to third in Monday's poll after a 27-24 victory Saturday over Nebraska. That dropped the Cornhuskers from second to eighth in the poll.

Three teams — Boston College, Minnesota and Auburn — made the Top Twenty for the first time this season, while Ohio State, Illinois and Michigan dropped out.

Washington, following its 37-21 victory over Oregon, received 25 of 59 first-place votes and 1,114 of a possible 1,180 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters. Pitt, a 20-3 winner over Illinois, received 19 first-place ballots and 1,107 points.

Last week, with 55 voters responding, Washington led Nebraska 1,045 points to 1,011, with Pitt at 989.

Seven first-place votes went to Penn State, which scored with four seconds left to beat Nebraska. The Nittany Lions received 1,032 points.

Florida rose from fifth to fourth with one first-place vote and 973 points after defeating Mississippi State 27-17. The Gators swapped places with Alabama, which edged Vanderbilt 24-21 and slipped from fourth to fifth with four first-place votes and 968 points.

Georgia beat South Carolina 34-18 and climbed from seventh to sixth with one first-place vote and 864 points, while Southern Methodist, a 16-13 winner over Texas Christian, dropped from sixth to seventh with 803 points.

Nebraska was eighth with 702 points, followed by UCLA — the Bruins received the remaining first-place ballot — with 662 points and Arkansas, with 607. UCLA, No. 12 last week, moved into the Top Ten with a 31-27 victory over Michigan, while Arkansas edged Mississippi 14-12 and slipped from ninth to 10th.

UCLA's surge pushed Notre Dame out of the Top Ten despite a 28-14 triumph over Purdue. Behind the Irish in the Second Ten are North Carolina, Arizona State, West Virginia, Texas, Southern California, Miami, Boston College, Minnesota and Auburn.

Last week, it was North Carolina, UCLA, Ohio State, Arizona State, West Virginia, Miami, Texas, Southern Cal, Illinois and Michigan.

Boston College raised its record to 2-0-1 by defeating Navy 31-0, Minnesota (3-0) trounced Washington State 41-11 and Auburn (3-0) defeated Tennessee 24-14.

Meanwhile, Michigan dropped out of the Top Twenty by blowing a 21-0 lead and losing to UCLA. Ohio State, No. 3 a week ago, disappeared by losing to Stanford 23-20.

It was Minnesota's first appearance in the rankings since the middle of the 1977 season, while Boston College had not appeared since early in 1976.

up with 612 yards of total offense — highest output for a Duke team in 41 years. The 51 points were the most ever scored by Duke against an ACC opponent.

Duke quarterback Ben Bennett completed 21 of 30 passes for 291 yards and three touchdowns. Wide receiver Chris Castor caught seven, including TD grabs of 6 and 31 yards.

"He (Bennett) was great, but he had a lot of help. They have two good wideouts, a good right end, and good protection. Tactically, we blitzed too much and left (Darryl) Reaves one-on-one with Castor too much," Welsh said.

"Our pass rush was not able to pressure Bennett much, and you can't expect your defensive backs to stay with receivers if a quarterback is given that much time. Our entire defense just broke down."

The fact Duke beat the Cavaliers so badly didn't sit too well with Coach Monte Kiffin of N.C. State.

"You don't see it happen two weeks in a row," he told his weekly news conference at which he said overconfidence might be a problem.

That won't be a problem at Virginia, where Welsh is trying to work the magic he did in building a winning program in a nine-year stint at Navy.

"I hope we're not as bad as we looked, because we looked bad," said Welsh. "We haven't made any progress. We've gotten worse. I don't think there's any question about that."

"I don't think anybody on the team had a good game against Duke. It was our poorest performance, and against the best team we've played so far."

It marked the fourth time in the last seven years the Cavaliers have begun a season with three straight defeats. They were stung perhaps as much a week earlier by a 21-17 upset at the hands of James Madison, a Division I-AA team they had routed 69-9 just three years ago.

State Looks For Cavs To Change

AP Sports Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Meeting Virginia after its 51-17 loss to Duke isn't too pleasing for either physical or strategic reasons, says North Carolina State football coach Monte Kiffin.

"The Blue Devils pounded on the Cavaliers by the rush and the pass, and Kiffin believes the extent of last weekend's drubbing will force Virginia coaches to alter their defensive plans. Such alterations could cause problems."

"We've got to be prepared for some things they didn't do," Kiffin said Monday. "Usually, a team doesn't come back out and play exactly the same way."

"It's not good to play a defensive team after they've had 51 points scored on them. If your defense has a real bad day, perhaps they might go to a whole new package," he added.

N.C. State's offense may undergo some changes as well, but not necessarily because it was virtually shut down in the 23-6 loss to Maryland.

Joe McIntosh has been ailing since the start of the season and Kiffin says he now has a matching set of hip pointers. The sophomore tailback will be held out of practice for most of the week and a decision will be made later on his status for the Virginia game.

"He needs to get off the field for a couple of days," says Kiffin. "He tried to practice all last week and he really wasn't 100 percent."

Quarterback Tol Avery suffered a mild concussion in the Terrapin game and will also be held out of contact drills this week. He is expected to start against Virginia, however.

A four-minute stretch ended N.C. State's hopes of remaining undefeated and atop the Atlantic Coast Conference. Early in the second quarter, after Maryland scored a touchdown, the Terps took two Wolfpack turnovers and turned them into 10 points. With another field goal late in the period, N.C. State was down 20-0.

"We just had one bad period. We weren't a good enough football team to come from behind once we were down," he said.

UNC-Tech On Tube

NEW YORK (AP) — Ten college football games, including West Virginia at Pitt and Georgia at Mississippi State, will be televised Saturday on a regional basis as part of a TV doubleheader. ABC-TV announced Monday that West Virginia-Pitt will be its lead regional, starting at noon, EDT. Other games to air at noon are Georgia Tech at North Carolina, Houston at Baylor and a pair of Division I-AA contests — Idaho State at Montana State and Akron at Middle Tennessee State.

A sixth game on ABC will be San Jose State at California, beginning at 3 p.m., EDT.

CBS, which earlier announced Georgia at Mississippi State as its top regional, said it also will televise New Mexico at Air Force, Texas Tech at Texas A&M and Tulsa at Kansas.

The CBS games will air at 3:30 p.m., EDT, with the kickoff at 3:45.

Houston-Baylor, Akron-Middle Tennessee and Texas Tech-Texas A&M originally were scheduled as night games.

Angels Just Two Away From Title; Could Clinch Tonight

By The Associated Press
The California Angels know the sweet taste of success. And tonight, they might sip champagne.

"It's not over yet, but it's just about a situation where we know what's going to happen," said California's Don Baylor after his run-scoring single in the seventh inning Monday night sparked a 3-2 victory over second-place Kansas City that reduced the Angels' magic number to just two in the American League West.

California, which has won eight of its last 10 games, now leads Kansas City by 4½ games and can wrap up the division by beating the Royals either tonight or Wednesday night. Kansas City has dropped 10 of its last 11.

In other AL games, New York routed Boston 10-3, Texas downed Oakland 4-1, and Seattle and Chicago split a two-night doubleheader, Seattle winning the opener 8-4 and the White Sox taking the nightcap 4-1.

Baylor's one-out single — his AL-leading 21st game-winning hit — followed an intentional walk to Doug DeCinces.

"They put me on the spot from time to time, and I have to come through," he said. "It's a challenge, there's no doubt about that."

Tommy John, 14-12, scattered 10 hits over eight innings while beating Kansas City for the fourth time this season and running his career record to 14-4 against the Royals.

"To beat Kansas City in its own ballpark and hold them to two runs, I feel I pitched a pretty good game," he said.

"We've got to win one more game. I hope we do it tomorrow night, but if not, we've got the games in LA."

John left in the ninth inning after walking pinch-hitter Ron Johnson. Luis Sanchez came in for his fourth save as the Angels, who won the AL West in 1979, moved closer to a second division title.

Kansas City had taken a 2-0 lead on U.L. Washington's solo homer in the first inning and Willie Aikens' run-scoring single in the fourth.

California, held hitless through the first four innings, tied it in the fifth on Juan Beniquez' double, a two-base throwing error by Kansas City third baseman George Brett that allowed Tim Lincecum to reach second and Brian Downing's RBI single.

"That was a tough one. They have all been tough lately," said Kansas City Manager Dick Howser. "We played hard again tonight, but just didn't get the job done."

"If I had to put my finger on one key game, it would've been last Wednesday in California," he said, referring to Kansas City's 8-5 loss to the Angels, then the Royals' seventh straight setback.

Said DeCinces: "Their backs are against the wall. If we win one of the next two, it's over. I'm not taking anything away from them. We still have to do it."

Yankees 10, Red Sox 3

New York got six runs in the first inning, capped by Rick Cerrone's three-run homer. Jerry Mumphrey added a homer and two singles in driving in two more runs.

Dave Righetti, 11-9, pitched seven innings for New York.

Billy Says He's Been Contacted

OAKLAND (AP) — Oakland A's Manager Billy Martin says he's been approached by the New York Yankees and the Cleveland Indians about managing those teams, but isn't looking for a way out of his job with the fifth-place A's.

"I'm not soliciting jobs. I have three more years on my contract with Oakland," Martin said Monday night as his team's record fell to 66-90 with a loss in Texas.

"There are only two clubs that have called, New York and Cleveland," Martin added. "Other than that I have no comment."

Before leaving Oakland for the road trip that also will take the A's to Kansas City, Martin said: "I want to stay here. My home is here."

Martin, whose A's won the American League West last season, was raised just north of Oakland, in Berkeley. He reportedly is receiving more than $200,000 a year under his five-year contract with Oakland.

He said Oakland President Roy Eisenhart gave Yankees owner George Steinbrenner and Cleveland president Gabe Paul permission to talk to him about managing jobs.

Martin, 54, managed the Yankees during five seasons. He started in August 1975, replacing Bill Virdon. Steinbrenner fired Martin in July 1978, rehired him the next spring and fired him in October 1979.

Martin has also managed Detroit and Texas, for three years each, and was in Minnesota for one season.

Clyde King has been managing the sixth-place Yankees on an interim basis since replacing Gene Michael on Aug. 4. Michael had taken over for Bob Lemon on April 27.

Bill Bergesch, the Yankees vice president for baseball operations, said King's status won't be discussed until the season ends, "but that will be strictly up to Mr. Steinbrenner."

Dave Garcia has managed the Indians to a 76-78 record this season, and Paul declined comment on the possibility of Martin joining the organization.

A's shortstop Fred Stanley, who played for Martin in New York, doubts Martin will return to the Yankees.

"Billy has done a lot of real good things for the Oakland A's, and I'd be a little surprised if he left," said the shortstop, who also thinks Martin would do well if he did return to New York.

Boston hit into three double plays and has now grounded into 169 twin-killings this season, one short of the American League record set by the Philadelphia Athletics in 1950.

Rookie Mike Smithson pitched a four-hitter for Texas. Smithson, 34, took a one-hit shutout into the eighth before Mike Davis' double drove in Oakland's run.

Rick Langford, 11-16, also pitched a complete game in taking the loss.

Rookie catcher Bobby Johnson drove in three Texas runs with a two-run single and an RBI double.

Mariners 8-1, Rangers 4-4
Gaylord Perry, making his first start since serving a 10-day suspension for throwing an illegal pitch, notched his 307th career victory as Seattle won the opener and eliminated Chicago from AL West pennant contention.

Perry is now 10-12 this season. Loser Jerry Koosman, 11-7, had his five-game winning streak broken.

In the second game, Steve Kemp belted a three-run homer while three Chicago pitchers held Texas to six hits.

Jim Kern, 2-1, making his first start of the season, allowed four hits in 61-3 innings. Sparky Lyle permitted two hits in 1 2-3 innings while Salome Barojas finished up for his 19th save.

Japanese Technology Is Key

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent
When Rickey Henderson's base-stealing record — 125 or 130, whatever — is written into baseball's record book at the end of the year, it should carry the familiar appellation: "Made in Japan."

When Pete Rose is through ripping up many of Ty Cobb's and Hank Aaron's all-time marks for hitting and longevity, it wouldn't be amiss to add the little footnote: "Made in Japan."

It's not that these two modern-day wonders of the diamond — one noted for his base-path speed and the other for his enduring batting prowess — have partaken of some magical Buddhist potion from the mysterious Far East. They've simply — along with many other leading major league figures — taken advantage of the ingenious Japanese technology.

This is the same sort of technology that has made alarming inroads into America's automobile and electronic industries. The Japanese now are involved in an even more sensitive area — the multi-billion-dollar sports business.

In Henderson's case, it's the Japanese shoes the fleet Oakland outfielder wore in shattering Lou Brock's record as a base thief.

The 41-year-old Rose wears the shoes and gloves and other paraphernalia and swings the bat produced by R. K. Mizuno Sporting Goods Ltd. of Osaka, Japan, for which he is reported receiving a yearly fee in six figures.

The forthright Phillies first baseman, featured at a Mizuno product show in New York a couple of years ago, shocked a few American patriots by saying: "These Japanese are so smart, I don't see how we won the war."

The company has designed a special shoe with what it calls "foot path" cleats which is worn by Henderson and some other players. It's cleats are angled off-center instead straight and is supposed to allow the runner to roll with his natural stride.

It is made of special polyurethane plastic which makes it light and flexible and it has a cup insole that conforms to the exact shape of the wearer's foot.

Mizuno claims to have captured 15 to 20 percent of the major league shoe market in the last three years. Henderson's name has been attached to a pro-cleat adaptation now is being marketed for high school and Little League players.

Nike, of Beaverton, Ore., which does a $700 million-a-year business in baseball and other athletic shoes, acknowledged the Mizuno inroads, but other sports firms were skeptical.

"A lot of what they do is window dressing," says Frank Torre, senior vice president in charge of sales for Rawlings, headquartered in St. Louis, a leading manufacturer of both gloves and bats.

"If they're so hot," says Torre, brother of Braves Manager Joe Torre, "how come when Japanese teams come over here, they load up with all the American balls, bats and gloves they can get their hands on?"

Wilson: Poll Berth May Hurt Blue Devil Team

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer
DURHAM, N.C. (AP) —

There was a time when Red Wilson was concerned with college football polls, but he told reporters Monday that those days are gone, even though his Duke football team is 3-0.

The Blue Devils are off to their best start in 11 years and may be headed for a spot in The Associated Press Top 20 college football poll. That possibility doesn't do much for Wilson, and he doesn't think it would do much for his squad.

"I dislike ratings and rankings," says Wilson. "It works to our detriment, I can assure you."

When he was a head coach at Elon College, Wilson was quite interested in polls. His Fightin' Christians had to make the NAIA's top eight teams to qualify for the national playoffs.

"I was interested in the rankings then but they don't mean anything now," he says. "Personally, I wish we didn't have them."

Despite his dislike, fame has followed success. Duke was scheduled to be on television when it faced Navy at home this weekend. According to school officials, however, the plan was nixed when the Midshipmen lost to Boston College 31-0.

The Blue Devils are undefeated after three games, their best start since 1971 and based on its victory over

Virginia, Wilson may have to spend his time trying to keep his team out of the Top 20.

In the 51-17 romp, quarterback Ben Bennett hit 21 of 30 passes for 291 yards and three touchdowns. Bennett has completed 66 percent of his passes, and the Blue Devils have moved to fourth nationally in passing offense and fifth in total offense.

The statistics are impressive, but Wilson isn't discounting Navy as a pushover. "Don't think that because they're (Navy) 1-2 they're not a good football team," he said.

Wilson said Navy had "a good passing team" and said the Blue Devils will have to improve their pass defense to remain unbeaten.

TV Ratings Dropped Without NFL Contests

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC's telecasts of two Canadian football games outdrew CBS' replay of last year's Super Bowl in the nation's three largest cities, according to overnight Nielsen ratings released Monday. But the ratings were far lower than the NFL normally draws.

Ratings in New York, Chicago and Los Angeles for CBS, NBC and for the ABC telecast of the crucial American League East baseball game between Baltimore and Milwaukee were all about a third to a half of what the NBC and CBS drew nationwide for NFL games on the average Sunday last season.

The figures also indicated that a lot of sets were turned off on the first weekend of the National Football League players strike.

The overnights are quick rating checks done in New York, Los Angeles and Chicago. The rating constitutes the percentage of total sets in a given area that are tuned to a particular show. The share is that show's percentage of sets actually turned on.

According to figures released by NBC, the CFL game between British Columbia and Toronto, shown from 1:30 p.m. EDT to 4:12 p.m., received a rating of 4.2 with a 12 share in New York; a 5.8 rating with an 18 share in Chicago and a 6.7 rating with an 18 share in Los Angeles. The second game, shown from approximately 4 p.m. to 7 p.m., did a 5.6 and a 12 in New York, a 6.7 and a 17 in Chicago and an 5.5 and a 13 in Los Angeles.

That compares to a 2.8 with an eight share for the San Francisco Cincinnati Super Bowl in New York, a 4.4 with a 13 share in Chicago and a 5.8 with a 16 share in Los Angeles.

ABC's telecast of the crucial American League East baseball game between Baltimore and Milwaukee received a 2.8 rating in New York, a 4.4 rating in Chicago and a 7.9 in Los Angeles, with a 21 percent share. By comparison, final nationwide ratings for the 1981 season show that CBS averaged 17.5 with a 41 share and NBC 13.9 with a 33 share.

NBC spokesman Tom Merritt also pointed out that the relatively high percentages for relatively low ratings on Sunday indicated that a lot of sets were turned off.

Pete's Aggression May Be Slipping

By The Associated Press

His words created the same effect as a pickax striking pavement. Pete Rose, "Charlie Hustle," the man for whom baseball had become a lifelong love affair, might be losing some of his aggressiveness.

He had gone from hitting .325 in 1981 to a paltry .273 so far this season. If he finished the season at that mark, it would be his worst batting average since 1964 when he hit .269 in his second season with the Cincinnati Reds.

"I guess when you've got a .310 lifetime average, this has to be considered an off year," Rose says. "It's taken me a long time to adjust to hitting second ... my whole philosophy has always been to be aggressive, but I've taken so many pitches this year, I think I've lost some of my aggressiveness."

Rose's entire career has been a succession of changes. While with the Reds, he moved from second base to the outfield to make room for Joe Morgan. He played all the outfield positions, finally moving from left field to third base to make room for George Foster. When he went to the Phillies, he played first base because Mike Schmidt was at third.

All that time, he was a leadoff hitter, the tablesetter, the run scorer. In order to do his job, he had to get on base. So, he got hits, and he did his job better than any man since Ty Cobb. With 3,864 lifetime hits, he trails only Cobb's major league record of 4,191.

Rose, 41 years old, first was moved into the No. 2 spot in the batting order late last season behind Lonnie Smith, who since was traded to the St. Louis Cardinals.

"I was hitting .337 when they switched me," Rose recalled, "then I went down to .325 while I was hitting behind Lonnie Smith."

When Rose found out he would be hitting No. 2 again this season, this time behind rookie Bob Dernier, he wasn't sure what goals to set for himself.

"I set my normal goal to hit .300, but I didn't set a goal to get 200 hits, which I usually do," Rose said. "I didn't know what goal to set. My role had changed, and I'd become a move-em-along kind of guy."

"We were winning a lot, and I'm not the kind of guy who goes 0-for-4 or 0-for-5 and tears his locker apart. I don't worry about myself when we're winning," Rose said.

"But it's taken me a long time to adjust to hitting second. The average person doesn't know how much of a difference it is, especially when you're hitting behind a guy like Dernier who was hitting .300 early in the season. While Rose ranks in the top 10 in almost every offensive category except homers and RBI, he set a record this season of which he wasn't particularly proud. On Sept. 1 against Atlanta, rose grounded out in the fifth inning, making the 8,594th out of his career, one more than Hank Aaron.

ACC Honors Two Players

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) —

Duke quarterback Ben Bennett and North Carolina center Steve McGrew were named offensive players of the week in the Atlantic Coast Conference for their performances in a pair of weekend victories, league officials said.

Bennett, a junior from Sunnyvale, Calif., completed 21 of 30 passes for 291 yards and three touchdowns as the Blue Devils whipped conference foe Virginia, 51-17. Bennett has now thrown 107 passes in a row without an interception, a school record.

He also has thrown 24 scoring passes, tying a record set by Scotty Glacken in the 1960s.

McGrew, a senior from Westchester, Ohio, graded out at 96 percent as the 12th-ranked Tar Heels whipped Army, 62-8. McGrew recorded six knockdowns, four pins and a perfect score on his pass blocking, according to UNC coaches.

The selections were made by a panel of sportswriters and broadcasters of the Atlantic Coast Sportswriters Association.

Earlier, Clemson safety Terry Kinard and Maryland tackle Mark Duda were named the league's defensive standouts for the week.

DUNKEL COLLEGE FOOTBALL INDEX

EXPLANATION - The Dunkel system provides a continuous index to the relative strength of all teams. It reflects average scoring margin combined with average opponent rating, weighted in favor of recent performance. Example: a 50.0 team has been 10 scoring points stronger, per game, than a 40.0 team against opposition of identical strength. Originated in 1929 by Dick Dunkel.

British Stars In CBS-TV Film

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — "Witness for the Prosecution," a two-hour CBS-TV movie, will star a predominantly British cast headed by Sir Ralph Richardson, Deborah Kerr, Donald Pleasance and Diana Rigg.

The only top American in the Hallmark Hall of Fame special will be Beau Bridges as Leonard Vole, the hapless American accused of having murdered a wealthy older English woman friend.

Richardson will portray the defense counsel with Miss Kerr in the role of the barrister's garrulous nurse.

'Dumpling' Series For TV

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Disney's new live-action TV comedy series, "The Apple Dumpling Gang," features Barry Van Dyke and Tim Thomerson in the roles originated for the movies by Don Knotts and Tim Conway. Featured in the cast are Geoffrey Lewis, Henry Jones, Adam Rich and Bridgette Andersen.

CREATURE FEATURE — Ricky Schroder, star of television's new series "Silver Spoons," entertains a little creature from outer space (played by Billy Barty) during taping of a sketch called "Q.T." for NBC's upcoming Bob Hope special — "Bob Hope's Star-Studded Spoof of the New TV Season, G-Rated with Glamour, Glitter & Gags." New Orleans Symphony Plans European Tour

By JOHN DeMERS
NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — With French pianist Philippe Entremont at the helm, the New Orleans Symphony has turned its back on a bankruptcy scare and focused on its first-ever tour of Europe.

Conductor Entremont, plying the contacts made during decades as a touring artist, first thrust his orchestra onto the national scene last winter — drawing solid notices for a concert at New York's Carnegie Hall.

The European tour, however, is seen as the first giant step to an international reputation and revived interest from recording companies, who tapped the symphony only once before it slipped into a sea of red ink in 1978.

"I think this is really remarkable for an orchestra during these hard times," Entremont said.

"It's a bit extravagant but it's good. I think it marks a big date for a city like New Orleans, which has been so famous for Carnival and jazz but not so much for cultural things."

Entremont, who came to New Orleans in 1980 as a symbol of the orchestra's full recovery, plans to help its reputation along by turning up in his most familiar role — facing a keyboard as well as his musicians for Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 1.

"It's tricky but he does it very well," said assistant manager Dan Fumald, who coordinated the tour through 19 cities in five countries beginning Sept. 29. "It's just a resetting of the instrument to face the orchestra. He plays the solo part and conducts at the same time."

"It's not only an artistic accomplishment but a gymnastic feat as well."

The orchestra will travel with 84 musicians and a full staff through Italy,

Switzerland, Austria, Germany and France. The tour has been in the works for two years, ever since Entremont came to the orchestra as conductor and music director.

"When I accepted the position, I knew that it was possible for me to do a few things of value for the orchestra," Entremont said. "Being European myself and having a career in Europe, it was possible for me to arrange a tour."

"The fact that we are sold out in most of those places is very, very rewarding to me."

To get the tour off the ground, local businesses and individuals put up $200,000. Each of the 19 concerts will produce a fee but, according to Fumald, hardly enough to cover the nearly $500,000 the trip is expected to cost.

"The cost of putting an orchestra on a stage anywhere, here or abroad, will far exceed any fee we can expect from any sponsor," he said. "The rest comes from contributions."

Winners Named

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Winners of the 1982 Scott Newman Drug Abuse Prevention award, presented to television shows which do the most to discourage drug use, went to two series and an NBC special this year.

The awards were founded by Paul Newman and his wife, Joanne Woodward, following the death of their son, Scott, from a drug overdose.

Tom Selleck Stars In A Made-For-TV Movie

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid" are alive and well in "The Shadow Riders," a made-for-TV yarn starring Tom Selleck, whose gifts are that he looks good AND seems to like whatever it is he's doing.

Louis L'Amour, the famed writer of cowboy adventures, provided the story for tonight's CBS movie, a snug-fitting vehicle for Selleck. The former Marlboro Man, who is Mr. Right for half of America on "Magnum, P.I.," effectively brings twinkles, dimples and glints to the screen.

Thumb through any department store supplement or watch a jeans commercial and you know that macho is marketable. But Selleck, who was impressive in last season's serious-minded "Divorce Wars," has charm, humor and vulnerability, which casting directors say make him non-threatening to male viewers.

Selleck plays Butch Cassidy, the gregarious cowboy, to Sam Elliott's Sundance Kid, the strong, silent type. Another similarity is that Elliott — like Robert Redford in the film — is sweet on Katharine Ross. Elliott and Miss Ross, who starred together in "Murder in Texas," are an off-screen couple.

"The Shadow Riders" is fun-filled escapism, an old-fashioned western they don't make anymore. Only in a western can a hero say "A man's gotta do what he's gotta do," without the audience groaning in pain. It's the style and sense of fun of this film that Elliott's character — not the marrying type — starts to utter those immortal words, when Miss Ross finishes the thought.

The escapist qualities extend to the violence. Only the bad guys get shot, and they die gently and quietly. This isn't a Sam Peckinpah film.

The story focuses on the Traven brothers, who fought on opposite sides of the Civil War, reuniting after the war. Selleck (Mac) wears blue. Elliott (Dal) wears gray. The upbeat sentiment is expressed by Mac: "Blue-gray doesn't matter. A man fights for what he believes in."

Winners, of course, can be idealistic. The problem is with Confederate Maj. Ashbury (Geoffrey Lewis), whose gun-raising efforts to keep the South armed draws him into slave-trading. It just so happens that Maj. Ashbury has begun by kidnapping the Traven's brothers and sisters, plus Dal's girl friend, from their

Texas homestead. Dal and Mac discover this when they return home, and the rest of the movie is spent tracking down Maj. Ashbury. Although the movie's sets have a western look, the chase scenes don't ring entirely true. That's what can happen when a Texas western is shot on location in Southern California.

But the missing cactus is a relatively minor nit, since the film is more for Selleck to smile and be diverting. In one high-action scene, he knocks down a man and his horse. Then he punches out the hombre while simultaneously mounting the downed animal. The camera doesn't show Selleck's face, but it's a good bet he's smirking.

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Opening lead: King of ♥.

Sometimes you should be grateful that you have opponents. They tell you how to play the hand.

The bidding shown is from a rubber bridge game. We would have cue-bid hearts at our second turn with the South cards, because three spades isn't 100 percent forcing and to be dropped short of game with this powerhouse would have been most distressing. But South compensated with an over-aggressive jump to slam—especially since North had warned him that some of his values were in hearts, where they might have been useless to South.

Had there been no bidding by East-West, declarer would almost surely have gone down to defeat in his contract of six spades. He would quite likely win the ace of hearts and use the entry to dummy to take two diamond finesses. Here, however, West's opening bid and free rebid surely marked him with all the missing cards, so declarer cast around for a better line—and found one.

deed, winning the ace of hearts at trick one would lead automatically to the con-tract's defeat. Instead, declarer played low from dummy at the first trick and ruffed in his hand. Next came three rounds of trumps, followed by the king of clubs.

Obviously, West could not afford to win the ace of clubs, for then declarer would have an entry to dummy to use the good clubs. So he ducked, but
end played. No matter which suit he played, he would have to give declarer an entry to the table, and declarer could take four diamond discards on the ace of hearts and three clubs.

Note that this line would succeed even if West could hold off on the ace of clubs for another round. Declarer would then simply concede a diamond trick and make his slam.

What Did Confucius Say?

For years the words "Confucius say..." have been a sure laugh-getter. But what did Chinese philosopher Confucius, born on this date in 551 B.C., really say?
As the first private teacher in China, Confucius emphasized the importance of political reform, which he hoped would make the government more responsive to its citizens' needs. But his teachings were as much about morality as politics. He taught that,
strives to help others succeed." For nearly 2,000 years Confucius's ideas were the strongest single influence on Chinese society. In fact, until a communist government took power in 1949, his teachings were part of China's official philosophy.

Board Angered
By Rejection

WAYNESVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The State Board of Elections has rejected the man local Democratic leaders chose to replace Haywood County's retiring elections board chairman.

State party Chairman
Russell G. Walker said Monday he had decided not to submit the names of Haywood Democrats' first and second choices, David Vance and James Francis, after state Elections Board Chairman Robert Spearman told him the board would not accept Vance.

to Vance stems from his employment with the same firm that employs another Haywood board member, Thomas Hart, according to state elections director Alex Brock.

"It's my understanding that the problem, as the board members saw it, was that he (Vance) was technically under Mr. Hart's supervision and they felt that could produce an undesirable situation," Brock said.

But David Smathers, Haywood County Democratic chairman, said that point was well-aided prior to Vance's selection by the local committee. He said a majority of the committee members believed Vance would not be affected by his proximity to Hart at work.

"I don't see any compelling reason why the state board refused to appoint David Vance," Smathers said.

"In my opinion, members of the state board, by their actions in clearly indicating what their decision would be beforehand, have involved themselves in local party politics beyond their proper function," Smathers added.
"I'd like to see an investigation by someone into their reasoning for this."

committee approved Vance two weeks ago to replace L.A. Matthews, who resigned last month because of poor health.

The names of Vance and Francis were sent to state party officials for forwarding to the State Board of Elections.

According to party rules, the local chairman of the executive committee nominates two candidates for a replacement to the local board. After approval by the local executive committee, those names are sent to state party headquarters, which usually recommends the county's first choice to the state election board.

In most cases, the state board affirms the state party's suggestion.

"This is the first time this has ever happened that I know of, and I've been party chairman four years," Walker said of the state board's refusal to accept the party's recommendation.

But Brock disagreed, saying, "It has happened several times before, if not numerous times, so it is not totally unheard of."

Brock said the state board has received "numerous" complaints from Haywood County about Vance's nomination and that four of the five board members had decided not to appoint him because of his connection with Hart.

Hart, the Republican member of the board, is a supervisor in the department where Vance works at Champion International's paper mill in Canton.

"I'm very disappointed," Smathers said. "I feel like both men are very capable and of excellent character, but I feel like the committee selected David Vance as its nominee and unless there are some very serious reasons for it, he ought to have been appointed."

Smathers said he agreed with Walker's decision not to submit Francis' name because he said Francis would always serve under a cloud of controversy if he was appointed under the circumstances.

"Unless I am forced to,
I'm not going to submit any more names to the state board until after the general election," Smathers said.
"That will give things time to settle down."

LOCKHART, S.C. (AP) —
Three North Carolina men were injured, one critically, when their light plane apparently ran out of gas and crashed after being diverted from a fog-covered Charlotte, N.C., airport, authorities said.

"I personally think it was a miracle that those men escaped alive," Union County Deputy Ray Crocker Jr. said Monday while looking over the wreckage of the single-engine Piper Cherokee.

Injured in the Monday morning crash were the plane's owner and pilot, Elbert Benton, 48, and his two passengers — Steve Mealy, 35, and Mealy's 17-year-old son, Steve Jr. All three are Charlotte residents.

mechanic, was listed in critical condition Monday night in the neurology unit at Spartanburg General Hospital following abdominal surgery, a hospital spokesman said.

The elder Mealy, a car service manager, was in serious condition in Spartanburg hospital's intensive care unit, and his son was in stable condition at Wallace Thomson Hospital, officials said.

Jim Harben, area supervisor of the Federal Aviation Administration, said the plane radioed Douglas Municipal Airport in Charlotte to land, but was told the airport was socked in by fog.

"Physically speaking, they were closer to Spartanburg anyway, so we directed them there," Harben said. "They indicated they were about out of fuel. Then we turned them towards the Union County Airport and the next thing we knew, he (Benton) said, 'We are out of gas and we are going down.'"

The aircraft crashed about 8:05 a.m. on a farm owned by Dan Sprouse of the Kelton community. The heavily wooded crash site near S.C.
105 was about 3 miles northwest of Lockhart and 60 miles southwest of Charlotte.

The wings of the plane,
which had departed Daytona, Fla. earlier that morning, were sheared off the crumpled fuselage,
authorities said.

"They were awfully lucky

The FAA launched a search for the downed plane immediately after losing contact.

PITT COUNTY, NORTH CAROLINA

Pursuant to G.S. 163-128, Notice is hereby given of change in location of polling place in Belvoir Precinct, Pitt County, North Carolina.

The administrative decision pertaining to this change is recorded in Minutes of meeting of the Pitt County Board of Elections dated August 27, 1982. Following excerpt from said minutes:

One of the purposes of this meeting was to further investigate proposed changes in locations of polling places for Belvoir Precinct. Advisory Panel On Civil Rights Said Less Active CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina's advisory panel to the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights has fallen on hard times, largely because of changing political attitudes, members and observers say.

"There's no doubt that the change in political climate is affecting the initiative, imagination and leadership of the Civil Rights Commission and all of its advisory committees," said W.W. Finlator, a retired Raleigh minister and past chairman of the N.C. Advisory Committee to the commission. "The whole structure has been weakened."

The Civil Rights Commission was created by the Civil Rights Act of 1957 as an independent critic of government protections for minorities and the disadvantaged.

The N.C. Advisory Committee is one of 50 state committees that monitor civil rights on the local level, conducting wide-ranging investigations and informal hearings that help set the commission's agenda.

North Carolina's first appointees, meeting every two months between 1959 and 1962 under Greensboro lawyer McNeill Smith, conducted such a sweeping survey of the legal rights of white and nonwhite citizens that their findings were published as a book in 1962.

From 1969 to 1980, the committee published a study every other year on issues such as migrant labor, the state prison system and the desegregation of the University of North Carolina system.

Lately, the North Carolina committee has been less active, and its members complain of dwindling attendance at its meetings.

Since publishing its last report — a November 1980 study of race relations in Greensboro — the N.C. Advisory Committee has undertaken no major projects, says committee Chairman Tommie Young of Greensboro.

Arthritis Group Meeting Set

The Pitt County Arthritis Support Group will meet Thursday at 7 p.m. at the Pitt County Memorial Hospital Rehabilitation Center's Occupational Therapy Department.

George Misoyianis, health educator with the N.C. Department of Human Resources, will present a program on management of stress. There will also be a demonstration of Christmas crafts during the social hour.

While the Pitt County Arthritis Support Group

normally meets the fourth Thursday of each month at the Rehabilitation Center, the September session will be Thursday night and the November meeting will be held on Nov. 18.

The meetings are open to the public.

Additional information about the support group may be had by calling Lena Jackson at 756-2675, Gloria Herring at 522-1318, Jane Hulsey at 756-5509, or Beth Dominick at 753-5509 or 752-2934, extension 302.

Until a June meeting in Winston-Salem, the full 20-member committee hadn't met formally for 10 months. That meeting, sources told The Charlotte Observer, was called after several committee members complained about inactivity.

At two of the three meetings held since the committee got 10 new members last year, fewer than half the members have attended.

"I've been a little bit unhappy about the limitations of the group and particularly about attendance," says Sol Jacobs, a retired Greensboro delicatessen owner and new committee member.

"I'm frustrated by our inability to move on more issues," Jacobs added. "There is a general feeling that there is much to do, but the committee isn't doing it."

Ms. Young blamed the Reagan administration for the decline in the committee's activities.

Earlier this month, the leaders of 33 state advisory committees broke with agency policy by writing directly to

President Reagan, saying his policies, budget cuts and appointments have caused a "dangerous deterioration in the federal enforcement of civil rights."

Ms. Young didn't sign the letter, but said she agreed with it.

"When it comes to the enforcement of civil rights, one by one, we find there is a great deal of retrenchment," said Ms. Young, a media professor at N.C. A&T State University in Greensboro.

Under Reagan's proposed 1983 budget, the commission's budget would be cut from $13 million to $11.6 million. Two of 10 regional offices would be closed, and the activities of the advisory committees would be cut in half.

In the eight-state region that includes North Carolina and South Carolina, the budget would cut operating funds from $41,000 to $36,000. Most of the money pays travel expenses for state committee members, who are volunteers.

With an average cost of $1,500 per meeting, the committees — already limited to about three meetings per year — would meet even less.

"What we're trying to tell Congress and the administration is that this kind of cutting is intolerable," said Don Deppe, deputy director of the commission's office of regional programs in Washington.

But Finlator and others say the committee's fortunes need not be tied strictly to the budget.

Though agency rules require the presence of a regional staff member from Atlanta at all formal meetings, he says, there is nothing to keep committee members from meeting informally.

"With the climate as it is — with regression and retrenchment and withdrawal of commitment to civil rights by the federal government — it's now more than ever necessary for these committees to be on the job, to take the bull by the horns and go to work," Finlator said.

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

I received a touching letter from Carla W. in New York. This charming 12-year-old described accurately and simply her relationship with her 73-year-old grandfather who lives with her, her brother, her mother, and father.

The relationship between Carla and her grandfather in no way encroached on her relationship with her own father. Yet it highlighted a growth experience which undoubtedly will pay great dividends when Carla grows up.

There was warmth, understanding, teaching of morals, ethics, and mutual kindness that will last long after the grandfather will have passed away.

The letter came coincidentally with a book that was sent to me for review. It is called "When the Wind Blows Hard." It is written by Denise Gosliner Orenstein and is charmingly illustrated by Linda Strauss Edwards.

In essence the book is the story of a child who, because of some special circumstances, had to leave New York City and move to a small town in Alaska. The precipitous change and the dislocation from her city and friends was overwhelming. In a short time, this child developed an astoundingly stable relationship with a friend and with her grandfather who helped overcome the immensity of the separation from her previous life.

The story is a gentle but persuasive portrait of the loveliness of a relationship between a child and an elderly man who recognized the emotional needs of a child and offered support during a difficult period of emotional growth.

"When the Wind Blows Hard" is published by Addison-Wesley. The book deserves to be part of the growth experience of any child who has suffered the pain of dislocation and temporary abandonment. During such cataclysmic experiences children deserve the gentle understanding that converts a traumatic experience into one that serves as a growth experience of childhood.

Whenever I eat shrimp or clams or mussels, I break out in hives. Is there any way I can be made less allergic to them? — Miss K.C., Mass.
Dear Miss C.:

You ruined my day. I love shrimp, clams and mussels and sympathize with anyone who is so highly sensitive to these delicious morsels. I wish that there was some way that you could be sensitized to them. I doubt it. Yet consultation with a specialist in allergy may reveal some special way that you could be "immunized" to these gustatorial delights. Until then, however, I would suggest that you limit yourself to foods that you know are delicious but will not produce those itchy hives.
