

Possibly Limited To Chicago Area

Poison Capsules Found To Be Pried Open

By BRENDA C. COLEMAN
Associated Press Writer

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS, Ill. (AP) — Cyanide has been found in a second batch of Extra-Strength Tylenol, officials said today, and investigators looking into five deaths linked to the capsules have discovered they were "pried open" before being sold.

The Cook County medical examiner's office said it was treating the deaths as possible homicides and was trying to determine at what point the poison could have been put into the capsules.

Across the country, thousands of drugstores and drug distributors moved swiftly to take off the market a suspect batch of Extra-Strength Tylenol — lot number MC2880 — that was distributed in 34 states.

In addition, the manufacturer today said it was taking all Extra-Strength Tylenol off the market in the Chicago area because one of the victims — a 31-year-old Elmhurst woman — died from a capsule from a batch marked 1910 MD.

Lawrence G. Foster, vice president for public relations for Johnson & Johnson, the parent company of the manufacturer, said the capsule that victim took was produced in its Round Rock, Texas, plant. The MC2880 batch was produced in Pennsylvania, he said.

Since contaminated pain killer came from different parts of the country, he said, someone must have put the cyanide in the capsules while they were in the Chicago area.

He said there was no need to recall the 1910 MD batch from stores elsewhere in the country. The 34-state recall will stand, Foster said, but "it's our strong belief that the contaminated product was limited to the Chicago area. No illnesses and no deaths have been reported outside the Chicago area."

Foster said company personnel were out early today checking to make sure that all Extra-Strength Tylenol had been removed from stores in the Chicago area.

Even though there were no confirmed poisonings outside the Chicago suburbs, the nation's poison-control centers reported being swamped by calls that still trickled in early today from worried consumers who had taken the nation's best-selling, over-the-counter pain reliever.

Two victims were brothers who swallowed capsules Wednesday from a bottle bought hours earlier at a Jewel Food Stores supermarket in Arlington Heights, west of Chicago, police said. The wife of one of the brothers also took the pain reliever and was in critical condition early today with brain damage.

A 12-year-old girl from the neighboring community of Elk Grove Village who had a cold died after taking capsules that may have come from a different Jewel store.

Cyanide was found in all three bodies, as well as the body of a woman from nearby Downers Grove, in DuPage County, who collapsed at work and died Thursday after taking two capsules.

Lab tests on another DuPage County woman who died Thursday morning only a few days after giving birth to her third child were not complete, but a coroner said she had taken Extra-Strength Tylenol capsules from a bottle containing cyanide-filled pills.

Two more victims were in fair and stable condition early today at Good Samaritan Hospital in Downers Grove after swallowing Tylenol capsules.

So far, authorities have traced the MC2880-lot Tylenol bought from Jewel to a warehouse in Franklin Park, another Chicago suburb. Robert Kniffen, a spokesman for the manufacturer, said the batch went directly from a McNeil Consumer Products Co. plant in Fort Washington, Pa., to the warehouse sometime between Aug. 19 and Aug. 25.

Foster said he was told by Cook County investigators that the cyanide-loaded capsules "had been pried open and placed back together."

Sgt. Michael R. Ossler of the Arlington Heights police department said investigators were searching records for clues to a likely suspect "such as someone who had poisoned medicine before."

Dr. Edmund R. Donoghue, deputy assistant medical examiner, said the more widely distributed the cyanide is, the more likely the point of contamination "was closer to the point of manufacture."

"We believe it (the contamination) occurred after it left the manufacturer," said Foster. "We believe it happened somewhere in the distribution or at the point of sale."

Cyanide is not used in the manufacturing process for Tylenol, officials said.

McNeil, which is wholly owned by Johnson & Johnson, recalled nearly 4.7 million capsules marked MC2880, a lot of 93,400 bottles containing 50 capsules each. They were distributed in August in all states east of the Mississippi River and in North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska and part of Wyoming.

Kniffen said no product from lot MC2880 should be bought or consumed until further notice, but Dr. James P. Paulissen, director of the DuPage County (Ill.) Health Department warned against taking any kind of Tylenol. The lot number is printed on the upper left-hand corner of the label glued to the bottle.

Shelves Cleared In Local Stores

Most drug store shelves in Pitt County were cleared today of Extra Strength Tylenol — especially the capsule product — following five deaths in the Chicago area linked to cyanide poison found in some batches of the pain killer.

"We just want to get it off the shelf and make sure no one has any," druggist Charles Carter of Kroger's Sav-On said today.

But Carter and other druggists contacted this morning said none of the production batches identified as containing contaminated bottles — MC2880 and MD1910 — has been found in Pitt County. Several bottles were discovered elsewhere in North Carolina, including stores in Fayetteville, Raleigh and Greensboro.

The manufacturer, McNeil Consumer Products Co., a branch of a Johnson & Johnson subsidiary, issued a recall Thursday for Tylenol bearing the lot number MC2880. No recall had been issued as of late morning for the second batch, which was linked to only one of the deaths.

Company and health officials in Chicago expressed the belief that the contaminated Tylenol blamed for the deaths had been tampered with by someone in the Chicago area.

Bruce Johnson, druggist at the Revco store in Farmville, said his company had advised him that two other lot numbers may also be affected. He did not identify the other numbers.

Johnson said he had had several inquiries from customers today. "They're asking about it, but so far nobody has those lot numbers. We're letting them use their own judgment," he said.

Kroger's stripped its shelves of the Tylenol product and began accepting any Tylenol products returned by customers for refund.

"Since you know people are reluctant to take it, we are going to take them back for refund," Carter said. He said Kroger would assume the cost if the manufacturer declines.

Ernie Hargett of Hargett's Drugs said he had also handled some questions about the scare. "We pulled most everything off the shelf," he said.

"We took the capsules off the shelf and we're not selling them at all," a spokesman for Rite Aid in Ayden said.

Clarence Johnson of Hollowell's on Dickinson Avenue said he was contacted by telephone Thursday night by a representative of McNeil Consumer Products. "They called from McNeil and waited on the phone until I could check the shelves," he said. He said Johnson & Johnson also contacted him today to confirm that none of the contaminated batches had been found.

"I just took all the capsules off," Johnson said.

Horace Tripp of Edwards' Pharmacy in Ayden said people "have been looking and talking. I've been telling them I wouldn't buy any."

"If they don't catch the guy who did it, I wouldn't ever buy any," Tripp said.

Braswell Said In Guarded Condition

By TOM BAINES

Sheriff's Deputy Billy Braswell, for whom a warrant was obtained Thursday by the SBI charging him with the murder of his wife, remained in "guarded but stable" condition at Pitt County Memorial Hospital today where he is being treated for gunshot wounds, a PCMH spokesman said.

The SBI received the warrant for first degree murder after Magistrate Elmore Hodges found "that there is probable cause to believe that ... the defendant unlawfully, willfully and feloniously and of malice aforethought did kill and murder Lillie Mae Stencil Braswell," according to a copy of the document.

A spokesperson at the SBI office here said the supervisor was out of the office this morning and Sheriff Ralph Tyson could not be reached for a report on the status of the warrant.

A spokesman at the district attorney's office here said the warrant "will be served as soon as his (Braswell's) physical condition permits."

Mrs. Braswell was found shot to death Monday near the intersection of Chinquapin Road and U.S. 264 Alternate east of Farmville.

Braswell was found at his home on Green Street in Farmville about one hour and 35 minutes after his wife's body was discovered, authorities reported. Braswell was suffering from gunshot wounds to his chest, they said.

Dr. Richard Larson, a surgeon, said on television Thursday night that Braswell had two entry wounds in the superior portion of his abdomen. Larson, when contacted through his office this morning, referred questions regarding Braswell to the hospital information office. A spokesman there said no information was available as to the extent of Braswell's injuries.

Fifty-One B-W Workers Laid Off

By MELVIN LANG
Reflector Staff Writer

Burroughs Wellcome permanently laid off 51 workers Thursday in an employment cutback resulting from what a company spokesman said were internal production changes that lessened labor requirements at the Greenville plant.

John McConney, general plant manager, said 12 other workers were placed on temporary layoff status, leaving the pharmaceutical manufacturer with a Greenville work force of about 1,330 employees.

McConney said today the layoffs were ordered after attempts to reorganize the production staff did not work out.

"Basically, it was caused by a decline in the number of units produced at the plant. Our dollar sales are OK but there has been a change in our product mix ... (that resulted) in more production employees than we needed," McConney said.

"We lived with the situation for several months," McConney said. "Various efforts to rearrange things didn't alleviate the problem."

McConney said the company has "made every effort to lessen the impact through general severance benefits" for the workers released Thursday.

"We believe it's a difficult measure, certainly, but we believe it has corrected the situation. And we don't think it will happen again. We don't want to have to lay off people twice," McConney said.

An Employment Security Commission official said he

Damaged By Flames

BLAZE DAMAGES RESTAURANT — An early morning blaze today at Tar Landing Seafood at 105 Airport Road caused heavy fire damage to the attic and roof and heavy smoke damage to the interior of the restaurant, according to the Greenville Fire Department. Chief Jenness Allen said the fire, reported at 1:22 a.m., apparently spread from the vicinity of a deep fat fryer in the kitchen through the hood system and into the attic area. The fire department had no monetary estimate of damage and the owner of the restaurant, Bernice Branch could not be reached this morning for an estimate or regarding repair and reopening plans. Investigation of the fire was continuing, the fire department reported. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Federal Government Is Running on 'Empty'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government was running on empty today, technically broke after Congress went partying rather than staying to meet a midnight deadline for passing a compromise stopgap money bill. However, Congress was expected to easily approve the omnibus spending bill later today and administration officials said there likely would be no employee furloughs or interruption of services.

First today, the House was to spend several hours debating the proposed constitutional amendment on balancing the federal budget, then turn to the spending bill.

Following the anticipated House approval of the spending measure, the Senate was expected to take up the measure quickly thereafter.

Although the government is technically bankrupt, a spokesman for the White House Office of Management and Budget, Edwin L. Dale Jr., said most federal agencies are in a "shutdown mode," but added that, "we do not expect there to be any furloughs."

The "shutdown mode," he said, means only that employees are "theoretically supposed to prepare to shut down" their agencies.

But if Congress does not pass a bill by Monday, or if President Reagan vetoes the measure, then the government would shut down, he added.

Asked about Reagan's view of the compromise money bill, Dale said "it looks as if the president will be able to sign it, although it is still being examined in detail."

Meanwhile, a Justice Department source who declined to be named said today that department legal experts have been under pressure for the last two days from administration officials to rule that there would be no problem allowing the government to operate for several hours without financing.

The Pitt County Department of Social Services has asked Hotline to let the public know that cheese is available for eligible persons at the DSS office beginning Monday.

The cheese has just been received from the U.S. Department of Agriculture for distribution to low-income households. All households receiving food stamps during October are eligible and will be given a cheese pickup authorization card the day they pick up food stamps. Households that do not receive food stamps may make application at the DSS Mondays through Fridays from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. throughout October. Eligibility will be determined according to the total income of the household. Therefore, each person applying must know the income of everyone living in his or her house when he or she goes in to apply.

Volunteers from the community will again assist with the application for and distribution of the cheese, DSS Assistant Director Dorlas Cayton said.

Estee Lauder Vice President Spends A Lot Of Time In Travel

Traveling about 90 percent of the time is one of the things Ida Stewart does as vice president at Estee Lauder Inc. and special assistant to Mrs. Lauder.

She describes her job as "the most exciting in the world."

"Mrs. Lauder was looking for someone to teach women how to take care of their skin and how to use cosmetics for the best effect. Since my experience and training in education had been limited to teaching art and health education to sixth graders, I admitted that I didn't know a thing about cosmetics or business for that matter. At that point Mrs. Lauder looked me straight in the eye and asked two questions that were to change my life — 'You can learn, can't you?' 'You can talk, can't you?' And I did — and what an education it's been," she said. She has been with Estee Lauder 22 years.

"Some of the things I do for Estee Lauder is to thank a woman for being our customer and finding out what they like, need and dislike.

"My work is dedicated to helping people feel good about themselves and that is a science as well as an art. What makes a person feel good? A feeling of accomplishment. You must do something. Contribute — even if it's only a smile, a pretty face. Don't just stand there. Give. I learned that from Mrs. Lauder. You have to give and give and give — and the more you give the more you have to give.

"Protection is a word that we are hearing in cosmetics now more and more. Another word is repair — how the skin can repair itself with the help of a cosmetic. We are also hearing moisturizer-nourisher because so much scientific information is available and research by all cosmetic companies, large universities and hospitals," she said.

"The atmosphere in fashion and cosmetics this year is more ordered and planned. This is more or less throughout the world today. You know exactly where your skirt length is — where your jacket length is. The future trend is taking better care and more responsibility for yourself," said Mrs. Stewart.

COSMETIC VICE PRESIDENT...Ida Stewart gave a facial demonstration during her presentation Thursday.

Mrs. Stewart also does television programs, teaches beauty advisors, works with store managers and presidents, display and fashion directors, does makeup demonstrations, using all types of models.

During a luncheon presentation at the Greenville Country Club Thursday, Mrs. Stewart told the audience, "Do unclutter your life — closets, cupboard and your mind. Get rid of clothes you don't wear, dabs of cream, worn-out compacts, outmoded thoughts. Get out the clutter and get on with it. Shape up your life."

Mrs. Stewart maintains a home in Aiken, S.C. and has an apartment in New York. "This is an interesting time in my life — I'm taking control," she said.

The luncheon and presentation was sponsored by Belk Tyler at Carolina East Mall. An informal fashion show was presented by Katherine Vinson, Betsy Glenn, Carolyn Massey, Martha Roberson and Betty Blaine Worthington. Music was provided by Charles and Joann Bath. Greenville Banks, Belk Tyler manager, introduced special guests present.

The setting for Mrs. Stewart's presentation was that of "country manor."

Hostesses for the evening were Alice Moseley, Doris Harris, Marjorie Harris and Margaret Speight.

Feasting On Bouillabaisse

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

A few weeks ago I received a letter consisting of one sentence: "I would like to have the best recipe for bouillabaisse."

I was startled. When I label a recipe for a particular dish the "best," I mean it is the best recipe for that dish I have come upon to date. Because of the many adjustments possible in cooking, I know only too well that there is more than one great recipe for such classic dishes as bouillabaisse or brownies.

One of these recipes for bouillabaisse is in the newly published book, "A Feast Made for Laughter" by Craig Claiborne, food editor of The New York Times. The book is divided into three sections: a memoir of the author's life, 100 of his favorite recipes, and a list of books on food he considers make up "an all-inclusive, consciously well-rounded collection."

The memoir is an account of the center point of the lobster where tail and carcass meet. Split tail and carcass. Cut carcass in half lengthwise. Scoop out the liver and coral and place in a small mixing bowl. Cut tail section into 4 pieces crosswise.

Add the carcass and any scraps of lobster to the tomato mixture. Cover and simmer 30 minutes.

Meanwhile, blend the butter and flour with the fingers, then mix with the reserved coral and liver.

Strain the tomato mixture through a sieve, pushing through as many solids as possible. Return mixture to saucepan, bring to the boil and add the red snapper, mussels, clams, shrimp, and reserved lobster tail. Simmer uncovered 15 minutes.

Stir in the coral mixture and bring to the boil. Add the Pernod. Scoop into hot soup plates and serve.
Yield: 4 servings.

Flour Storage In Freezer

To keep its freshness and baking quality and to preserve moisture, flour must be stored in an airtight container in a cool, dry place.

Never store near a heat source advise extension home economics specialists at North Carolina State University.

Flour can be frozen for long-term storage and is especially helpful for whole wheat and graham flours which contain the oil-rich germ of the wheat kernel. These flours can become rancid if improperly stored. To freeze, wrap bag carefully in moistureproof material or place flour in a heavy plastic bag.

Women Commercial Pilots Spending Furlough Time

By MARLENE AIG
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — As a teen-ager in California, Jean Haley Harper would watch her father fly crop-dusting planes with more than a daughter's casual interest. She figured she could do that, so she started flying lessons at 16.

"My dad was thrilled that I was interested in flying," she recalls.

Then, four years later, in 1970, she got serious about flying, and began racking up flying time and licenses by hauling skydivers and doing some crop dusting herself. She was determined to be a pilot for a major commercial airline.

Her dad's enthusiasm cooled under fears that daughter Jean's hopes would be "dashed by the cold world out there." Women, after all, didn't fly commercial airliners.

"He didn't think it could be done," she says. "He felt I was wasting my career preparation on something that was hopeless."

But in 1973 Frontier Airlines hired Emily Warner as the first modern major airline pilot and, despite ribbing from the men in general aviation, Mrs. Harper kept at it — flying charters, teaching, doing anything to gain experience.

"I got angry," she says. "Not discouraged."

In January 1978, it all paid off when Jean Haley Harper became the third of what were to be 30 women pilots hired by United Airlines.

"There wasn't a happier daddy on the block."

It was a small club that Mrs. Harper joined. There are 43,000 commercial pilots in the United States, and only about 175 are women.

And as Jean Haley Harper's father feared, the "cold world out there" has dashed — or at least delayed — the dreams of half of them. Like more than 3,700 other pilots, they're now on furlough.

For Mrs. Harper, it means she's spent the last year in her Aurora, Colo. home, trying her hand at free-lance writing.

For Denise Brown, laid off in 1980 nearly two years ago after flying for Western Airlines, it means loading boxes for United Parcel Service to pay the mortgage and tuition for an airline mechanics course.

For Cyd Fougner Edwards, furloughed from Western the same year, it means working as a Flight Data Specialist for the Federal Aviation Administration. The job, created after the air traffic controllers strike, is primarily clerical.

"I'm overqualified," says Mrs. Edwards. "But now I'm a federal employee and I get a paycheck."

What bothers these women, they say in interviews, is not that they have been laid off in disproportionate numbers. That's a product of a seniority system all accept.

"We really don't want to be differentiated as a minority," says Karen Kahn, a pilot with Continental and president of the International Social Affiliation of Women Pilots, known as ISA Plus 21.

Each pilot is given a seniority number the day she or he is hired. The number dictates the order of furlough — and the order of rehiring.

"Numbers know no color, race or sex," says Ms. Kahn. "We're qualified, but airline jobs are not real plentiful right now."

"It's frustrating," admits Lynn Evans, furloughed from United's friendly skies in 1980 after 22 months. "But it's part of the aviation business and I knew it was part of it."

What's bothers these women most is that their careers were grounded almost as soon as they had taken off.

Denise Brown remembers working 80 hours a week, holding down four jobs at a time, to get the hours and licenses needed to become a commercial pilot.

"I was furloughed," she says wistfully, "just as I was sighing relief at being successful."

For many, it was a hard ascent.

Barbara Gamzkow, 33, started her career in aviation as a flight attendant. After long — and expensive — training, she landed a job with Flying Tigers. But the furlough notice came in April, after 3½ years.

"When you're a female pilot, people think you're special and you get to thinking you're special, too," she says. "Then the rug is pulled out from under you. You can't settle for less excitement."

Ms. Gamzkow has spent three months singing backup for the San Francisco rock band Explosion. She plans to do some lead singing and is even talking about forming another band with some of Explosion's members.

"I would like to go back to flying, but I still have to make a living," she says.

Like Ms. Gamzkow, many women pilots are using the time to reassess a career choice that took so much time, effort and money that it's too hard to just abandon without regrets.

Furloughed in December 1980 from United, 28-year-old Molly Flanagan has a new appreciation for the degree she earned in marketing.

While working in the family almond business in Chowchilla, Calif., she does some corporate flying and thinks about what other skill she should cultivate. And she realizes the personal price she paid for flying.

"I have little social life," she says. "I was so caught up in the job."

Quilters And Indian Camp Set For Show

CHARLOTTE — Dot Dymond and Penny Withers of Davidson create heirlooms. They started Grand Revival Quilts six years ago with the intention of reviving quilt making as an art.

"It took us four months to make the first quilt," said Ms. Withers. Since then, by dividing labor according to their expertise they have shortened production time to two weeks.

Ms. Dymond, the artist, designs the patterns and chooses the colors. Ms. Withers pieces the designs and they quilt together.

One of their quilt patterns, stained glass, was recently featured in "Decorating and Craft Ideas" magazine and will be on display at the Grand Revival booth at the Southern Christmas Show here at the Charlotte Merchandise Mart Nov. 13-21.

Another section of their exhibit will have an Oriental flavor, highlighting a Ming mums quilt along with pillow shams, wallhangings and other quilted pieces.

The Museum of Natural History in Raleigh has requested a quilt for their permanent collection.

The Schiele Museum's exhibit will highlight an 18th century Blackfoot Indian camp. The exhibit will feature a tipi (teepee) lighted with the glow of a fire with a Blackfoot woman and infant. Outside will be her mate and visiting trapper.

There will be hundreds of craftspeople demonstrating and selling. Old towns will have an old-fashioned post office, shops and fire station. A miniatures section will have dozens of doll houses decked out for the holidays. There'll be cooking clinics, a food pavilion, decorated trees, mantels, windows and doors. Other highlights will be an animal's Christmas, craft clinics and a holiday marketplace.

Show hours are 10 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. weekdays and Saturdays and 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sundays.

Dear Abby

Horn-Honking, Barking Dogs Is Inconsiderate

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: There's a problem in our neighborhood, but maybe if you print this, it will give the guilty ones something to think about. We are stuck with this nuisance because we've let it go for so long that nobody wants to tell a nice young man that he has been disturbing our peace for 10 years. Except for this younger couple, everyone in our neighborhood is retired.

Our young neighbor leaves for work at 6:45, backs his car out into the street and honks his horn with a little "beep beep" as he drives away. At first we all thought it was rather sweet of him to bid his wife a second goodbye, but some of us older people do not sleep well at night, and once we're awakened it's impossible to go back to sleep again.

Retired folks have had to get up early for many years, and we think we've finally earned the right to stay up late and sleep in the morning.

Please remind people that unnecessary horn-honking is inconsiderate and downright irritating. Thank you.
NO MORE BEEP BEEP

DEAR NO: I agree, unnecessary horn-honking (and dog-barking and lawn-mowing and kid-calling) is inconsiderate. So let all you guilty ones out there repent, and sin no more.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I own a small cafe in an area that caters to summer tourists.

We have two nice, clean rest rooms for the convenience of our customers, but because so many people stop in only to use our rest rooms, we decided to put up a sign:

"If you are not a customer, we charge 50 cents for using our rest rooms."

Abby, I wish you could have heard some of the names we've been called by people who have come in only to use the rest room! Some have caused terrible scenes, saying they have never heard of anything so cheap, and they will never set foot in our place again if they are starving!

Don't these people realize that we have to pay for the toilet paper, soap, towels, water (hot and cold), air-freshener, plus the electricity for the lights and the fan that provides ventilation while they are in there? All these things add up.

Abby, do you think we're out of line to charge non-customers 50 cents for the use of our rest rooms?
BAD-MOUTHED IN CASCADE, COLO.

DEAR BAD-MOUTHED: Has the revenue collected since posting the sign compensated for the bad-mouthing and noisy scenes it's created? If not, take down the sign. The tourists will be relieved. And so will you.

DEAR ABBY: While shopping at a very nice supermarket, I came upon something I'd never seen before and wonder if anyone else has ever encountered a similar experience.

I saw a woman take a bottle of ketchup from the shelf, remove the lid, extend her finger down into the bottle, then lick the ketchup from her finger! She continued to do this with several different brands of ketchup, then chose a small bottle that she hadn't opened. I was shocked and a little sick to my stomach thinking that someone was going to buy a bottle of ketchup that this woman had stuck her finger into. She looked to be about 80, was very well dressed, and I doubt that she was hungry.

Needless to say, I don't shop in that store anymore. What would you have done, Abby?
HOLD THE KETCHUP IN HONAKER, VA.

DEAR HOLD: I would have quietly reported the lady to the management.

DEAR ABBY: If you can stand one more comment regarding responses to Julia Child's letter on abortion: Rather than agitating to get as many human beings born as possible on the chance that one of them will be another Beethoven, the anti-abortion crowd should ask themselves whether in today's world, a second Beethoven would get a chance to develop his genius before he was mugged, brain-washed or smothered in pollution.

Commission Doing Job

The State Utilities Commission sent shock waves through the complicated world of electric power financing last week when it rejected a Carolina Power & Light Co. request for a 15.48 percent increase in its current rates, approving instead an increase of less than 1 percent.

The commission, which had previously been considered as one friendly to the utilities, complained about CP&L's management regarding nuclear plant performance. The commission also said it regarded recent salary increases as excessive in view of economic conditions.

The ruling meant lower stock prices for both CP&L and Duke Power when the New York Stock Exchange opened on Monday.

CP&L said it intended to file an appeal and also a new rate increase request. Certainly that is CP&L's right but we feel the Utilities Commission ruling finally puts it in the position of doing what it is supposed to do — that is assuring that the consumer receives electric power at the lowest rate possible, commiserate with allowing a fair return on investment for stockholders of the power companies.

When the power companies which operate in North Carolina effectively demonstrate to the commission that they are operating at utmost efficiency they will be on firm ground in requesting new rate reviews.

Registration Deadline Near

Potential voters are reminded that voter registration hours have been extended.

The Pitt Board of Elections office will be open Saturday from 9 a.m. until 3 p.m.

The deadline for registering or changing registration is Monday and the office will be open until 5 p.m. that day.

The general election is Nov. 2 and those who are eligible to vote but are not registered will not be able to participate in choosing our elected leaders.

There is a simple way of determining what kind of government we will have. That is by voting in every election.

There are only two days left for every possible voter to make certain that he can participate in the next general election.

Negative Campaigning

"Negative Political Ad Agency, may I help you?"

"This is Chaps Dunbar. I'm running for senator this November and I was calling to inquire about your negative political ad campaigns."

"Just a minute. You want to speak to Mr. Slinger."

"Slinger, my campaign seems to be in a little bit of trouble and I was hoping your people could come up with a few dirty TV commercials to help me get well in the polls again? I was very impressed with the one I saw the other night for Bill Damadun, in which you filmed an actor who looked like his opponent, Horace Lager, pushing an old lady down the stairs in her wheelchair and a voice said, 'That is Horace Lager's answer to Social Security.'"

"Yes. We're very proud of that one ourselves. We had to use six old ladies before we got it right. Thank God for Medicare or we would have gone over budget. Do you know we had more protests on it than any negative commercial we've ever done? But our surveys indicate that 87 percent of the people now believe Lager pushes old ladies down the stairs."

ART BUCHWALD

"What can you do for me?"

"Give me a little background on your opponent."

"He's a former congressman named Flap who has been traveling around the state promising the people jobs, prosperity and an honest government — the usual stuff. Trouble is, he looks like a young Jimmy Stewart and the people think he can do it."

"You got any dirt on him we can use in a TV Commercial?"

"He played left tackle at college, and was once penalized 15 yards for unnecessary roughness."

"What else?"

"We couldn't find too much stuff on him after that."

"Okay, we'll take the testimonial approach. We won't show Flap in your commercials. But we'll show people who support him."

"What's so dirty about that?"

"Well get a clip of Castro ranting and raving and waving his hands. Then underneath we'll run subtitles of what he's supposed to be saying — something like, 'If Americans elect Congressman Flap to the Senate, you will make me the happiest dictator in the world.'"

"That's pretty negative. I'll tell you what seems to be a big issue here. Crime in the streets."

"We can hang that one on Flap. We'll show a guy being mugged in the park, and then we'll show a clip of Flap smiling and shaking hands with workers as they leave the gate of a factory. Our announcer will intone, 'Congressman Flap cares more about freeing criminals than he does about protecting the victims of crimes.'"

"I don't get it."

"Most factories look like prisons, and nobody will know the people he is shaking hands with aren't inmates."

"That is about as dirty as you can get," Chaps chuckled.

Slinger said, "Did you see the mean one we ran last week, in which we used the ex-wife of Dick Tanquery, who is running for Congress, and she said into the camera, 'I lived with him for 20 years, now you people can live with him for two.'"

"I loved it. Particularly when she showed the bruises on her arms. You people real-

You'll Think Twice

By PAUL T. O'CONNOR

RALEIGH — The basic structure of the anti-drunken driving legislation that Gov. Jim Hunt will present to the General Assembly in January has been written and it includes some tough new measures that'll make you think twice about drinking and driving.

At the heart of the proposal is a replacement of the "Driving Under the Influence" statute and its lesser offenses with a single offense known as "Impaired Driving."

The proposal was drafted by the Governor's Task Force on Drunk Driving which Hunt established to help him formulate a new state policy. It includes mandatory jail sentences for drunk drivers, an end to plea bargains that reduce drunken driving charges to lesser offenses, new measures to make judges and district attorneys more accountable and provisions to impound or confiscate the cars of drunk drivers.

Statesville Superior Court Judge Robert Collier, who oversaw the drafting of the bill, says he's discussed the proposal with Hunt and the governor agrees with the approach.

If the 48-page bill passes, defendants will no longer be able to get a drunken driving charge reduced to either a "10 violation" or to "careless and reckless driving" as happens quite often now. A five-step system of mandatory penalties, which Collier calls "true presumptive sentencing," is established.

The two harshest steps include five "grossly aggravating" factors: Second drunken driving in 10 years, speeding to elude arrest, speeding 30 miles per hour over the speed limit, driving while license revoked for previous drunken driving conviction and causing an accident in which someone is seriously hurt. If any of these five factors is involved in a drunk driver's arrest, he'll be jailed for at least seven days and maybe for as long as a year and face a maximum possible fine of $1,000. If two of the factors are present, he gets 14 days minimum, up to two years and a maximum fine of $2,000.

The lower three steps involve a number of aggravating and mitigating factors that when added up by a judge will decide whether the drunk spends one, two or three days in jail and faces fines of $100, $250 or $500. These three grades also allow for revocation of driver's licenses and compulsory community service.

"There's one offense with five levels of punishment," Collier summarized. "The two most serious require jail terms. The last three, which deal with relatively unaggravated first offenders, offer the judge the option of jail, community service or license revocation."

The bill also says that a 16- or 17-year-old caught driving with any alcohol in his blood will face a $100 fine, up to six months in jail and automatic loss of his license until his 18th birthday. The task force thinks the threat of a lost license will do more to keep kids from drinking than anything else in their package.

Anyone would lose their license for a year for failing to take a breathalyzer test or for wilfully failing to complete drunken driving school. Anyone blowing .10 on the breathalyzer would immediately and automatically lose

To the editor:

Regarding your Sunday story titled "Greenville Jews Differ on Israeli Involvement," you are perfectly correct in concluding that Jewish People in and outside of Israel mourn the horrible carnage in West Beirut.

It is unfortunate that you did not publish more of Ms. Blumenfeld's responses as she is a most knowledgeable person concerning affairs in the Middle East. Ms. Blumenfeld is the president of Congregation Bayt Shalom of Greenville.

While I am sure the Jewish Community of Greenville appreciates your efforts in reporting their views, it would seem only just and responsible to be so diligent as to obtain the views of some of the members of Greenville's Lebanese Christian community. It should not be overlooked that those who committed this universally abhorred atrocity were, after all, Lebanese Christian militiamen.

Other Editors Say Stedman Said It

(Goldsboro News-Argus)

"The bottom line is that Congress refuses to come to grips with the core problem; and that is balancing the budget by cutting expenses and not by raising taxes."

With those words, David Stedman stripped the nation's economic dilemma of its political rhetoric and double talk. Stedman, chairman of North Carolina Citizens for Business and Industry, noted that in 1983 the federal government will spend $112 billion more than it collects in taxes. That will pile the national debt up the trillion-dollar level.

The deficit this year will be twice as large as any in history. There can be no significant economic recovery until the government gets control of its excessive spending.

Stedman said it. All of us know it. Our people in Washington know it. Even the biggest spenders in the nation's capital know it.

The problem is that politics is placed before the economic well-being of the nation. Our politicians, through a spend-tax approach, have doled out government largesse (extracted first from the taxpayers) to the undeserving as well as to the needy, to individuals and to local governments for years.

The local individuals and governments joyfully received and spent the "government" money because they did not have to look their fellow taxpayers in the eye and say, "This is coming out of your pocket."

When the money ran short, the government cranked up the presses and printed more. President Reagan comes on the scene determined to control spending. He tries.

There is a hue and cry from local and state governments and institutions and individuals who have been too long at the trough.

So with all the moaning about cuts, we wake up to realize Congress has visited upon us the biggest budget and the biggest deficit in history.

Recovery Evidence Is Missing

By JOHN CUNIFF

AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — President

Reagan may — or may not — have saved the nation from financial disaster, as he suggested this week in his news conference, but he cannot yet offer solid evidence that a significant recovery has begun.

So far, he has yet to convince consumers that it is time to spend or business that it is time to invest, and economic activity therefore remains at a level that nobody, including the president, can say is healthy.

His policies probably have helped lower inflation and interest rates, but he has also probably convinced few people that such improvements aren't just the reverse side of unemployment, recession, and economic hesitancy.

He hasn't managed as yet to get the budget in balance, and the prospects for soon doing so are poor. The government share of the economy has grown. Relative to government, that is, the private sector, which Reagan hopes will lift the economy from the prolonged recession, has shrunk during his time in office.

The need for greater military security generally is cited as the reason for the budget imbalance, but the shortfall of revenues from the weakened private sector is probably a great reason why. The jobless aren't big spenders.

Many are embittered too, judging from the graffiti. "Military spending is welfare for the Pentagon," is appearing on walls in poorer neighborhoods, where social welfare spending has been reduced because of budget constraints.

But the president is correct in stating that it takes time to produce a basic turnaround in the economy, and while economists will argue about it for decades, it seems true that many economic problems were indeed inherited.

The president can take a great deal of credit also for selling Americans on the idea that they had to get down to brass tacks — that they couldn't continue to enjoy the good life by spending away the economic assets that had been built

Philosophy Differences

By JAMES GERSTENZANG

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) —

With the dome of the Capitol forming a perfect backdrop to the East, and the sun sinking in the West, President Reagan stood on a platform at a reception with Tip O'Neill and Howard H. Baker Jr.

"Howard, you were not asked here tonight to referee," Reagan said to the Senate majority leader, after acknowledging the presence of the House speaker, whom the president called "my other good friend and fellow Irishman."

The president seems fond of saying that after 5 p.m., he and Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. are the best of friends. But that's hard to tell from what they say about each other between sun-up and sun-down.

They are more than just political antagonists — one the leader of the Republican administration and the other the head of the Democratic opposition in the House — who spar at each other for political purposes only.

Rather, they claim to represent two different approaches to the nation's economic problems, and their sparring is only likely to increase in the coming pre-election weeks, because the Democrats are more than willing to make the economy the focus of the campaign.

Although interest rates and the rate of inflation have dropped since Reagan took office, unemployment has climbed and the number of business failures has, too. So, as Reagan crows about his administration's success in trimming inflation, the Democrats are making a concerted effort to follow up as often as possible with their side of the story: the price being paid by unemployed workers.

"Everytime he goes into the economy, he's going into quicksand," said Christopher J. Matthews, O'Neill's spokesman and administrative assistant. "The more he struggles, the more he sinks."

Reagan rarely mentions the speaker by name in his public appearances. But in his efforts to buy time for his economic program and protect the Republican majority in the Senate, he is frequently trying to answer the Democrats' complaints.

"To charge that our administration is trying to reduce inflation on the backs of the unemployed is to stand truth on its head," Reagan said in a speech in Manhattan, Kan. on Sept. 9.

The next day, in Hooper, Utah, he did directly address criticism voiced by the speaker: "...the leadership," Tip O'Neill and his cohorts, went public with their statements that I was hard-hearted and that they were standing in the way of my imposing on the poor and the needy and so forth. Well, what do they think that their inflation over these last 30 years has done to the poor?"

And so the war of words continued. From O'Neill's copying machines a little later came a variation on his favorite theme:

"For 20 months, the president has steered our country toward economic disaster. His Pentagon shopping spree triples the national debt. His huge and unfair tax breaks bankrupt the treasury. Thirteen million people are out of work. As unemployment rises, the president does nothing to avert a second depression."

Matthews, who worked in the Jimmy Carter White House, knows full well how a president and his aides can bring attention to an issue.

"The president has the ability to focus the national limelight almost at will," he said. "All we can do is put it in the proper context."

"He tries to pound away at what he calls the 'Democratic legacy,'" Matthews said, referring to Reagan's frequent theme that nearly 40 years of Democratic legislative control have brought the country to its current economic state.

So, Matthews said, the Democratic leadership in Congress will focus on what he called the "Republican legacy" of recession and unemployment.

With pollsters reporting that Reagan's personal popularity remains high, while his policies are getting lower marks, this strategy may

Strength For Today

LIVING IN HEAVEN

A Scotsman was once asked whether or not he expected to get to heaven.

"Expect to get to heaven!" exclaimed the Scotsman. "Why, moon, that is where I live every day!"

The Scotsman was no chauvinist referring to his native land — a pleasant place, to be sure, but scarcely deserving the designation of heaven. He meant instead the moral environment which he tried to create around him. If we live in an atmosphere of faith and joy, of good works, charitable judgment, and unselfishness, we have nothing to fear from death.

If, on the other hand, selfishness binds us like a chain, and hate makes bitter our thoughts and words, then we are living in hell before we even die. Death will only intensify and bring to a climax the type of life we have been living. If we live in heaven now, in all probability we will live in heaven beyond. However, if we live in hell now, that will also be our final reward. — Elisha Douglass

More N.J. Teachers Ordered Into Makeshift Jail

By The Associated Press
A new group of striking teachers in Teaneck, N.J., was ordered to join dozens of colleagues today in custody at a makeshift jail for ignoring a judge's back-to-work order, and a marathon bargaining session recessed early today.

Eighty-four teachers were held in a school building during school hours Thursday for defying the order by Superior Court Judge Sherwin D. Lester, and 75 teachers were to join them today. Lester said he would consider firing the strikers if contract talks don't produce a settlement by Monday.

"This has become a charade that is being played less at the bargaining table than on the streets and in the press," Lester said.

Negotiations in the 15-day strike resumed just after noon Thursday and recessed at 2:30 a.m. today, to resume at 9 a.m.

Elsewhere, about 290,000 students were affected by strikes by 16,536 teachers in Michigan, Illinois, Pennsylvania and New York. No settlement is in sight in the largest walkout — in Detroit, where a job action by 11,000 teachers has idled 200,000 students for more than two weeks.

In Teaneck, where 419 teachers and 170 secretaries and aides went on strike Sept. 17, school board officials say they offered to raise teacher salaries by 16.5 percent over two years. The union seeks a 19.5 percent boost, the board said.

Strikes by public employees are illegal in New Jersey under a ruling by the state Supreme Court. Schools have remained open for the 5,200 Teaneck students.

On Thursday, teachers were guarded by sheriff's officers in a grade school that was cleared of students. The strikers, whose names were randomly chosen, will be released for the weekend.

Teaneck Teachers Association President Irwin Pollner said the jailed teachers were in good spirits. "They came out more determined than when they came in," he said.

In Michigan, strikes ended Thursday in four Saginaw Bay-area school systems, while fact-finding continued in the Detroit walkout.

Teachers in St. Charles, Merrill, Breckenridge and Ashley voted Thursday to return to work without contracts, Harry Boyes, a spokesman for the Michigan Education Association, said.

The strike began Tuesday in Merrill and the three others Wednesday, affecting 215 teachers and 4,590 students. Classes resumed in Ashley and Breckenridge on Thursday, with St. Charles students going back today and no date was set for reopening in Merrill.

"They're going back without a contract, but that's not to say they may not do this (strike) again," Boyes said.

In Illinois, where three strikes affect 465 teachers and 8,640 students, the Bremen Township school board on Thursday authorized attorneys to seek a court order to force 267 teachers back to work.

Carl Dillow, assistant superintendent, said the strike, entering its 10th day today, has kept 5,800 students out of four high schools for too long "and we must do all we can to get the schools open." Pay and job security issues were disputed.

Strikes also continued in Hamilton County Community Unit District in southern Illinois and in Paris in the east-central part of the state.

Bargainers planned to resume talks Sunday night in Deer Park, N.Y., where 305 teachers struck after talks broke off Monday. The Long Island district was kept open for its 5,000 students as substitutes and administrators taught classes.

In Pennsylvania, classes resume today for 2,100 students in the Penn Cabria district near Cresson. The district's 118 teachers ratified a two-year contract Thursday, ending their 17-day walkout. Classes for 2,100 students resume today. Statewide, 21 strikes by

Order Students Curb Drinking

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Officials are cracking down on drinking at group functions at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte, but a student leader says students who wish to imbibe will do so.

Beginning this academic year, groups will be restricted to one keg or seven cases of beer for every 50 people, or three liters of wine for every 10 people at school-sponsored events.

New rules also dictate that alcoholic beverages be provided by an organization sponsoring an event or by people attending — but not by both.

"We wanted to maintain a better handle on alcohol use on campus," said Robert Albright, UNCC's vice chancellor for student affairs. "We wanted to restrict the blatant display and use of alcohol in places not always restricted before."

Albright says the new rule may doom the policy of free beer at the university's annual "Jam Up," a spring weekend of concerts and jollification.

"It's an extremely popular event," he said. "We had 7,000-8,000 people attending. Major beer distributors gave kegs and kegs of beer. And students brought their own. In that particular instance, we will no longer allow giving away free beer."

But Linda Russell, a UNCC senior member of the council that hashed out much of the new policy before the administration adopted it, said she didn't expect the policy to affect the event.

"I don't really think it will hurt Jam Up too much, because a lot of people brought their own beer anyway," Ms. Russell said. "But it was a big advertisement to say 'no free beer.' If it hurts Jam Up, it will be because people hear 'no free beer' and think that means no beer at all."

Ms. Russell said the new rules would spark some resentment but predicted that students would find ways to drink all they want.

"If there's a specified amount of alcohol, when the party's over, if there are people who still want to drink, they will go to bars," she said. "Some people go to fraternity houses or restaurants to party anyway."

The new rules include a cutback on the number of places where alcohol may be consumed, though students will be allowed to drink in their rooms.

A Use For Ready Cash

BELOIT, Wis. (AP) — Attention all millionaires: There's a Midwestern college with the answer to that perennial question — what to do with the spare cash.

Beloit College says in newspaper advertisements that it is offering the rich a chance to "be associated with one of the premier liberal arts colleges in the country."

The ads are headlined, "We're Looking for another D.K. Pearsons. Are you that kind of person — an individual willing to commit $1 million or more to our kind of school?"

Pearsons, a Chicago philanthropist, gave Beloit College more than $500,000 between 1889 and 1910.

The southeastern Wisconsin college, with 1,000 students from 42 countries, spent $5,500 on the quarter-page ads that appeared Thursday in The New York Times and The Wall Street Journal.

"A gift to us would go further than it would in a larger institution," said Roger Hull, the college president.

Beloit College received one response to the ad Thursday, and the individual was "very encouraging," Hull said.

Derailed Tank Cars Still Burning For Fourth Day

LIVINGSTON, La. (AP) — About five derailed tank cars loaded with toxic vinyl chloride burned for a fourth day today, threatening to prevent a return home before the weekend for 2,700 evacuated residents.

authorities said. Four people who had been evacuated were arrested Thursday for returning to their homes without authorization, said Sgt. Stephen Campbell, a Louisiana State Police spokesman. Two of those arrested had been warned three times to stay out of the contaminated area, he said.

Campbell said, the situation probably was still too dangerous to let any more people return home today.

... We've still got about five vinyl chloride cars burning, along with who knows how many others," Campbell said early today. "There's still a lot of fire in there — although not of such a high intensity as earlier — and there's still reason to be considered about the possibility of explosions."

Before Thursday's burnouts, officials estimated seven to 10 cars were on fire. Three large explosions over two days rocked the site. Campbell said monitoring continued to show satisfactory air and water quality readings on the perimeter of the derailment scene, indicating contamination had been mostly contained. There were earlier reports that spillage had contaminated both the ground and small streams, but Campbell said it "is still confined only to the immediate area of the derailment."

Officials Disagree On Impact Of Bill To Regulate Migrants

By MARY ANNE RHYNE Associated Press Writer RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Government officials disagree whether a bill before the U.S. Senate would clarify who is responsible for adequately paying, housing and transporting migrant farmworkers — farmers or crewleaders.

farmworkers contend that existing laws usually hold crewleaders responsible for paying, housing and transporting workers while growers who oversee the work escape responsibility. They say crewleaders often are helpless to correct problems.

However, growers say they hire crewleaders to harvest their crops and do not have time to supervise them or continually check for possible violations. They also claim they unfairly are required to register with the federal government under a law they say is aimed at crewleaders, who move around more and thus are more difficult to regulate.

But James Stewart, eastern area director of the U.S. Labor Department's Wage and Hour Division in Raleigh, said the bill would not bring many changes to North Carolina.

"I don't see that much is going to impact on migrant and seasonal farmworker situation here in North Carolina," Stewart said. "The definitions and things being cleared up are not really the things we were involved in in Eastern North Carolina."

Stewart said the bill would be more favorable to growers than the existing law.

John Sledge, president of the North Carolina Farm Bureau Federation, said the bill would "be a great relief for farmers" who have been forced to register as labor contractors. He said many farms in the state would be exempt because they are small and owned by families. Chuck Eppinette of Farmworkers Legal Services, an organization paid by the government to represent farmworkers in legal matters, said the bill was not what his group ideally wanted but was "the best thing we could expect."

Travelli said the Reagan administration drafted the bill and there have been lengthy negotiations with growers, migrant representatives and union members to agree on a plan. He said all groups involved agreed to support the measure.

No injuries have been reported. Between 500 to 600 people who lived farther from the site of the derailment were allowed to return home Wednesday. Although about four chemical cars burned themselves out Thursday,

Most of the workers laid off were involved in processing Burroughs Wellcome products made at the local plant.

Marine 'Joked' Over His Dying

CHESAPEAKE, Va. (AP) — A 21-year-old Marine killed in Beirut when he and fellow Marines were trying to defuse an artillery shell had joked in a letter about the possibility of dying in Lebanon, his widow said today.

Rhonda Reagan, 18, said she received the letter Thursday — the day David Reagan died in an explosion that wounded three other American Marines, part of a multinational peacekeeping force.

"He talked about it all the time," said Mrs. Reagan in a tearful interview on the CBS Morning News. "He'd joke around about it and everything."

"In the letter he was joking around and saying, 'You know, if you see me on the news, it's probably because I've died, or got killed or something.'"

"He was joking around! And it had to happen!" Members of Reagan's family who gathered here Thursday said they feared it might be David when they heard a Marine had been killed.

"It was like intuition or something. Something told me it was David when I got through reading that letter and it flashed on the news at that point," said Reagan's mother-in-law, June Hunter.

"But why did it have to be David?" asked his sister, Shirley Dudley. "He was a good boy. He never was in any trouble.

"Last summer he had a good training with the Marines and was making the Marines his career... I guess you can say he never reached his career because he gave his life for his country."

Mrs. Dudley, like her brother a resident of Chesapeake, said her father had a total of 16 children from two marriages, eight from each marriage. The father, Oliver T. Reagan, died 10 years ago.

The dead Marine was one of three brothers to enlist in the Marines. The others are Billy and Charles Reagan. Charles is on assignment in Germany; Billy has left the Marine Corps.

David Reagan joined the Marines shortly after his 1979 graduation from Oscar Smith High School in this coastal Virginia city. He married 2½ years ago.

Reagan was active in the ROTC program at Oscar Smith, where he graduated in 1979. He had kept in touch with his instructors there.

Reagan was described as "a pretty dedicated person" by Walter Bray, a friend from junior high and high school days.

"It surprised me quite a bit when I heard," Bray said. "He's done quite a bit... given a lot."

Reagan, one of about 800 Marines assigned to the peacekeeping force in Lebanon, was injured as the four Marines tried to defuse a 155mm artillery shell at the Beirut airport and the missile exploded.

A Marine engineer, Reagan was airlifted to the Norfolk-based amphibious assault ship Guam, where he died on an operating table. The other Marines were being treated for injuries.

Reagan was the first American to die since Marines returned to the Lebanese capital Wednesday as peacekeepers.

"There are some people really shaken," Oscar Smith principal Harold Dodge said today, "because David never really left the community."

The principal said one of Reagan's traits was determination. "He decided he wanted a car, and even though he came from a large family, he got a part-time job and got it. I remember he asked one of the teachers who was a mechanic 10,000 questions."

Receive Award

Bill Twine and the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department's Programs for Special Populations are recipients of the 1982 Charles T. Mitchell Award given by the Association for Retarded Citizens of North Carolina for outstanding service by a recreation agency to mentally retarded individuals.

The award was presented by Nell Hewitt, awards chairperson, at the annual ARCNC awards luncheon held in Southern Pines.

Some of the department's programs include Special Olympics; RECESS, an after school program; canoeing and camping for special populations; activities for visually impaired people; bowling; wheelchair basketball; Camp Sunshine Day Camp and other activities.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

WHO WROTE THE BIBLE ?

AUTHORSHIP OF THE BIBLE, NATURALLY, CAN NOT BE ASCRIBED TO ANY ONE PERSON, OR GROUP OF PERSONS, BUT, WHEN WE VIEW ITS AUTHORSHIP CLOSELY, WE CAN ONLY GASP WITH AMAZEMENT OVER THE VAST ARRAY OF PARTICIPANTS WHO, WRITING OVER A PERIOD OF 1500 YEARS, CAME FROM EVERY WALK OF LIFE! ASSUREDLY, ALL OF THEM WROTE UNDER THE INSPIRATION OF DIVINE GUIDANCE FOR, ALTHOUGH SOME WERE INTELLECTUALLY GIFTED, OTHERS WERE HARDLY LITERATE ENOUGH TO FASHION THE WORDS THEY WROTE! THEY WERE:

KINGS, PEASANTS, PRIESTS, FISHERMEN, SHEPHERDS, GENERALS, LAWYERS, DOCTORS, TAX COLLECTORS, POLITICIANS, NOBLEMEN, MARTYRS, SOLDIERS, AND SLAVES!

THEY USED EVERY AVAILABLE FORM OF EXPRESSION:

PROSE, POETRY, PARABLES, PRAYERS, SERMONS, SONGS, HISTORY, LAW, LETTERS, DIALOGUE, ANECDOTES, RITUAL, ROMANCE, BIOGRAPHY, EULOGY, ALLEGORY, PROPHECY!

THEY WROTE IN WIDELY VARIED SITUATIONS:

IN PRISONS AND PALACES, CITIES, TOWNS, AND VILLAGES, DARK CAVES, AND ARID DESERTS, BY RIVERS, ON MOUNTAINS, IN DEFEAT, IN VICTORY, IN EXILE!

THEY WROTE ON ALMOST EVERY SUBJECT FOR MANKIND:

GOD AND THE DEVIL, CHRIST AND THE HOLY SPIRIT, CREATION AND SIN, THIEVERY AND CHARITY, HATEFULNESS AND KINDNESS, HONESTY AND TRICKERY, PROPHETS FALSE AND TRUE, LIFE, DEATH, HEAVEN, HELL!

ABOVE ALL, THEY WROTE OF GOD'S PROMISES AND PLANS FOR HIS UNIVERSE, AND OF HIS LOVE FOR US, HIS CHILDREN... WHAT A MAJESTIC HERITAGE IS OURS - THE HOLY BIBLE!

NEXT WEEK: HOW WISE ARE WE ABOUT THE THREE WISE MEN?

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) (NCDA) — The North Carolina hen market was steady with a firm undertone. Supplies light. Demand good. Prices paid per pound for hens over seven pounds at farm for Wednesday, Thursday and Friday slaughter was 15 cents.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed today, steadying after the sharp decline of the past two sessions. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off 23.08 points Wednesday and Thursday, rose 1.28 to 897.53 by noon today. Losers held a slight lead over gainers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues. Analysts said traders had grown increasingly wary in the past few days about the chances for any recovery from the recession in the near future.

The government's index of leading economic indicators, which had risen for four consecutive months, took a 0.9 percent dip in August. Brokers said traders also had begun to anticipate an abundance of bad news when companies issue their third-quarter earnings reports over the next several weeks.

Johnson & Johnson led the active list, down 1/2 at 42 1/2, after falling 3 points on Thursday. The Food and Drug Administration advised people to stop using the company's Extra-Strength Tylenol while investigators sought information on how cyanide had been introduced into some capsules of the product in the Chicago area.

Hopes Retain Smaller Offices

WASHINGTON (AP) — Postmaster General William F. Bolger says the public interest would not be served by rapidly carrying out a General Accounting Office recommendation to close 7,000 small post offices serving mostly rural areas. "In our view, it is clearly in the public's interest to maintain an effective and convenient universal service, and this is not accomplished by rapidly changing the structure of our mail system as the GAO report indicates," Bolger said. He made the statement in a report issued Thursday by the GAO, the investigative arm of Congress. The GAO said that closing the post offices could save between $125 million and $150 million by 1990.

Schmidt Ousted As Chancellor

By SUSAN J. SMITH
 Associated Press Writer
BONN, West Germany (AP) — Parliament ousted Social Democrat Helmut Schmidt as West Germany's chancellor today and elected conservative opposition leader Helmut Kohl to replace him, ending 13 years of center-left government.

It was the first time in West German history that a chancellor had been ousted and a new chancellor elected in a no-confidence vote. Kohl, chairman of the conservative Christian Democratic Union, was to be sworn in as chancellor later in the day. Schmidt had been chancellor since 1974.

The vote was 256 for Kohl, 235 against with four abstentions, and two members absent from the 497-member Parliament.

Kohl needed 249 votes in the Parliament to succeed. He received seven more votes than necessary.

The vote was taken just two weeks after Schmidt's coalition government with the small liberal Free Democrat Party shattered over economic reasons.

The four Free Democrats in Schmidt's Cabinet resigned Sept. 17 and began negotiating with the opposition Christian Democrats to form a new coalition to overthrow Schmidt.

On Tuesday, 34 of the 53 Free Democrats in the Bundestag voted to form the coalition with the 225 conservative deputies of the Christian Democratic Party and its Bavarian counterpart, the Christian Social Union. It was the votes from the small Free Democrat Party that made it possible to oust Schmidt.

The vote was announced by Richard Stuecklen, the president of the Bundestag, the West German Parliament. Upon hearing the result, the 52-year-old Kohl, now destined to be sixth and youngest chancellor of West Germany, bent his head in acknowledgement.

Kohl's supporters congratulated him even before the vote was announced. Some of his own deputies asked him for autographs. Stuecklen asked Kohl if he would accept the vote.

"Herr President, I accept the vote," Kohl said. A sombre Schmidt, 63, took his place among the Social Democratic deputies to hear the vote, no longer returning to the front bench where the chancellor traditionally sits with his ministers.

Schmidt went over to shake Kohl's hand when the result was known. Kohl takes over from Schmidt two years before Schmidt's regular four-year term is up.

Kohl has led the conservative parliamentary opposition for more than a decade. A staunch family man, he has frequently echoed Ronald Reagan's fears of the Soviet military buildup.

"What use is the best social policy when the Cossacks come marching in?" Kohl asked the voters in the 1976 election campaign which won him an impressive 48.6 percent of the vote.

Schmidt had tried to steer West Germany on a pragmatic diplomatic course between the Soviet Union and the United States, supporting East-West detente even as the concept fell into disfavor with the Reagan administration.

In a speech to Parliament before today's vote, Schmidt denounced the Free Democrats who defected from his coalition.

"The voters will not forget this behavior for many years," Schmidt said.

"Your way of behaving is legal, but it has no inner, no moral justification," Schmidt said.

Schmidt said those planning to vote him out of office lacked credibility because they were attempting to change governments without first going to the voters for new elections.

He challenged his opponents' pledge to hold elections next March.

"I think it very improbable that you will dissolve Parliament in January so that the people can vote on March 6," Schmidt said. "Please, tell Parliament and thus the whole people today, without ifs or buts, that we will elect a new Parliament on March 6."

On the eve of the vote, Schmidt sought to reassure West Germany's Western allies, telling a hastily convened meeting of the diplomatic corps in Bonn that "our partners must know that in democratically constituted states, changes in political leadership are normal."

"I know that abroad, the long shadows of our past sometimes distort events and opinions in our country and sometimes revive old doubts in the Germans," he said. "I beg you to have trust in the constancy of the Germans."

Schmidt took office in 1974 succeeding Willy Brandt, a fellow Social Democrat who quit over a spy scandal.

He had been chancellor longer than anyone since conservative Konrad Adenauer, West Germany's first post-war leader.

Pirates Attempt To 'Show' Missouri

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

East Carolina's Pirates are making noises about deserving to be in the Division I-A ranks. They've come close to showing N.C. State that they belong, and more than impressed Division I-AA member East Tennessee and I-A Central Michigan.

But Missouri is the "Show Me" state, and this Saturday afternoon, the Pirates will be attempting to do just that to the Missouri Tigers of the Big Eight. Kickoff is set for 2:30 p.m. Eastern time.

The contest — the first meeting of the two schools — will put one of the country's top defensive teams up against one of the nation's best passing teams. And therein will probably lie the battle.

East Carolina currently ranks 11th in the NCAA Division I-A standings in total defense, allowing 252 yards a game. Missouri ranks 10th in passing offense, sending the ball through the air for 267 yards a game.

Missouri quarterback Marlon Adler is 10th in the nation in passing efficiency, a system which is based on percentage, yardage per attempt, touchdowns per attempt and interceptions per attempt. Adler has completed 33 of 59 attempts for 640 yards, three touchdowns and has had five picked off.

In contrast, Greg Stewart of the Pirates — who shares time with Kevin Ingram — ranks 17th among individual leaders. He's hit on 27 of 47 for 441 yards, three scores and five interceptions.

Adler is also ranked 16th nationally in total offense with a 215.7 average per game.

"I'm not concerned with what Missouri does. I'm only concerned with the things that we can control," ECU coach Ed Emory said. "That's enthusiasm, execution, game plan and the like."

"We're not making a big thing about playing Missouri," the coach continued. "We're practicing to get better and better only. I don't believe in the saying that practice makes perfect. I believe perfect practices makes perfect execution."

"They say you have to believe you can win. But then, a lot of teams go out and change their personnel, or their defense, or something they've been doing that's been successful when they go up against a team like Missouri. But how can your players believe in what you're doing if you throw in a lot of changes. We're preparing for this one just like we would for anyone else."

And Emory doesn't feel that the Pirates have to prove they belong in Division I-A. "We're already there," he said, emphatically.

"Of course, we're excited about playing Missouri. They have a fine program and a great tradition."

Emory said that while Missouri's passing game is a great one, he's very impressed with the Tiger defense. "They have a great secondary. It's one of the best I've ever played against. I thought N.C. State had a great secondary until I saw theirs. State's is good, but theirs is better. They have eight seniors with great experience. They are big, mobile and they get after you."

Tops among them are Demetrius Johnson, a 6-0, 185-pound senior, and Kevin Potter, a 5-10, 187-pound senior. Johnson is a cornerback, while Potter is the strong safety.

"On offense, they have a couple of big redwoods at tackle and they are big at center, but I think skillwise, we can match 'em."

Emory feels that the key to winning will be to cut down on the big play, eliminate turnovers and protect the football. "They are known for a good kicking game, and we have to contain that," Emory said.

Missouri comes into the game — like East Carolina — with a 2-1 record. The Tigers opened the season with a 28-14 win over Colorado State, and followed that up with a 23-10 win over Army. Last week, they were shut out by Texas — at Austin — by 21-0.

"They're coming off a tough loss," Emory said. "But I'd rather play a team after a loss. The hardest thing to do is come back after a loss."

Missouri's running game hasn't been that productive so far, having rushed for only 147.0 yards a game. The Tigers are led by Tracey Mack, who has 161 yards on 39 carries. No other Tiger has 100 yards as yet.

Top receivers include Andy Gibler, 9 for 183 and 1 touchdown; Curtland Thomas, 6-173-3, and James Caver, 6-152-0.

The Tigers on defense have held opponents to 149 yards a game passing and 125 rushing.

East Carolina, meanwhile, is rushing for 206.7 yards a game and passing for 192.3. They are allowing 101.3 on the ground and 150.7 through the air.

Freshman tailback Tony Baker leads the rushing with 119 yards, while fullback Earnest Byner had 163.

As far as who will start at quarterback, Emory wouldn't name names. "The best option quarterback through this week's practices will start. Both (Stewart and Ingram) have their strong points. Both bring in things that the other can't do. And both of them are getting better and better."

The Pirates, too, have an identity problem in Missouri. "We get copies of articles that have been in papers out there," Emory said. "One calls us a power, another, a softy, and another refers to Missouri's watered-down schedule."

"A lot of people in Missouri are saying who is East Carolina? I just hope and pray they'll know come Saturday night."

For by then, Emory hopes, the Pirates will indeed have shown 'em.

Unlikely Hero Keeps Giants In Race

By The Associated Press

The San Francisco Giants were down to their last out and maybe their last chance to win the National League West pennant. Manager Frank Robinson looked down his bench and found an unlikely hero in Ron Pruitt.

Thanks to Pruitt's clutch pinch-hit, two-run bloop single in the bottom of the ninth inning Thursday night, the Giants culminated a dramatic comeback with a 7-6 victory over the Houston Astros. Leonard Evans had walked Coupled with Los Angeles' 10-3 pasting of the first-place Braves, the triumph moved the Giants — and the Dodgers — within a game of the top with three games remaining.

For the Giants, those three contests will be at home against the Dodgers, beginning tonight. Atlanta, meanwhile, is in San Diego for three games.

Pruitt hit a 3-1 pitch from reliever Dave Smith for his first hit of the season, scoring Darrell Evans and Jeff Leonard. Evans had walked before reliever Dave Smith walked pinch-hitter Jim Wohlford.

"I was a little more comfortable than I thought I'd be," said Pruitt, who spent most of the season in the minor leagues. "He walked the guy before me, so I was going to wait until he threw me strikes. I wouldn't have swung at the last pitch unless it was a fastball. He gave me one, and I didn't have a good swing, but I got good results."

Then the Giants, who have won 20 of their last 26 games, rallied once more, setting up a wild weekend.

Dodgers 10, Braves 3

The Braves took a 2-0 lead in the first on Dale Murphy's run-scoring double and a pennant race. Houston had built a 5-0 lead only to see the Giants rally with three runs in the seventh inning and two in the eighth to tie the game. But Harry Spilman hit his second homer of the night in the top of the ninth to make it 6-5 Houston.

Then the Giants, who have won 20 of their last 26 games, rallied once more, setting up a wild weekend.

Dodgers 10, Braves 3

The Braves took a 2-0 lead in the first on Dale Murphy's run-scoring double and a single by Chris Chambliss. But Rick Monday's RBI single in the second made it 2-1 and the Dodgers took the lead for good as Bill Russell scored on a throwing error by Claudell Washington in the third and Dusty Baker hit a sacrifice fly for a 3-2 Dodger lead. Ken Landreaux eventually scored on wild pitch.

Then came the big seventh. Baker's two-run single helped the Dodgers ice the game. The other runs in the four-run inning came on Landreaux's double and Jose Morales' pinch-hit single.

Joe Beckwith was superb in relief, striking out five and surrendering only two hits in 3-2 innings.

But the race couldn't be much tighter, as Chris Chambliss, a veteran of several such pennant dashes with the Yankees, understands.

"It's been a crazy race all along," he said. "It's definitely going to go down to the wire."

Pirates 7, Cardinals 2

Manny Sarmiento gave up five hits in six innings and Rod Scurry provided three innings of hitless relief to hand St.

Louis its third straight loss since clinching in the East. Dale Berra knocked in two runs with a first-inning single for Pittsburgh.

Reds 6, Padres 4

Dan Driessen slammed a two-run homer to lift Cincinnati to victory and avoid losing its 100th game this season. Ron Oester and Duane Walker also homered for the Reds.

Cubs 3, Mets 1

Ryne Sandberg had three hits and scored twice to pace the Cubs.

"I can't say enough about Ryne Sandberg," said Manager Lee Elia. "With Bump Wills playing out his option, I have to protect myself. Now, I'm not afraid to go with Sandberg at second base. I know he can do the job."

Phillies 5, Expos 4

Despite having pitchers Jay Baller and Ed Farmer ejected, the Phillies beat Montreal on Garry Maddox' RBI single in the bottom of the ninth. Manny Trillo opened the ninth with a double off reliever Jeff Reardon, 7-4, and rookie Julio Franco was intentionally walked. Greg Gross walked to load the bases before Maddox delivered his game-winning hit.

Baller, starting his first major league game, was ejected for hitting Montreal starter Scott Sanderson with a pitch leading off the fifth. Sanderson had hit Baller in the third and received a warning from home plate umpire Eric Gregg, which carries an automatic $50 fine.

Farmer was ejected in the eighth for arguing a call on a checked swing with third-base umpire Ed Vargo.

Phils rookie Al Sanchez had a homer and a two-run double.

Tiger Coach Stops Boycott

WILLIAMSTON — Williamston High School football coach Harold Robinson has dropped seven players off his team in an effort to quell a rebellion.

The Tigers, who play host to Tarboro High School tonight, will enter the game with only 19 players, and just three seniors.

Earlier this week, Robinson suspended two players for "disciplinary reasons." He would not specify the nature of the players' actions which led to the suspensions.

Tuesday, he learned that five other players were attempting to set up a "strike" against him because of the suspensions. "I was told that they would boycott Tuesday's practice. I got word to them that if they did boycott, they could turn in their gear."

Robinson said the five did not show up and were dropped from the team. The two suspended players have also left the team, Robinson said. All seven of the players were starters on the team that has opened with a 2-3 record.

Robinson declined to name the players. "I would rather not," he said when asked to name them.

The losses leave the Tigers with just 19 players for the remainder of the season. "We're all juniors and sophomores except for three seniors. The ones who wanted to play showed up for practice, ready to play. We'll go on. We're ready to play."

Baseball Leader Predicts Long Strike By Pro Football Players

CLEVELAND (AP) — The tug-of-war over money in the National Football League players strike means the dispute won't be settled quickly, the director of player relations for major league baseball predicts.

"The guy out on the street obviously is tired of the whole thing and is saying 'just play ball.' But there's more to it than that."

"It's a struggle of who is going to control the money, and as a result, it looks like a long strike, a hell of a long strike," said Ray Grebey, who represented owners in the 50-day baseball strike in 1981.

But the baseball strike did not hurt fan support, he said, noting that attendance has surged this year. At least one team, the California Angels, set an all-time attendance mark this year, he said.

Sharp differences exist between the 10-day NFL walkout and the 1981 strike by baseball players, Grebey said Thursday.

The baseball strike was based on one well-defined issue, compensation for top free agent players, Grebey said.

"The (football) players are being offered a tremendous amount of money. They are being offered more money than baseball's total revenues in the last seven years," he said.

NFL owners have offered compensation of $1.6 billion over the next five years. The players are demanding the same amount over four years and a salary scale for players, based partly on seniority.

Grebeby said that compared with baseball owners he represents, the NFL team owners are much more solidified in labor matters.

"We had two or three owners defect during the strike last year," Grebey said. "The NFL owners are much better disciplined."

"They (NFL owners) are very strong. I'm certain they're going to be patient," he said.

Haas, who won the Hall of Fame Classic in his last start, birdied four of his first five holes, played the front in 30, didn't make a bogey and didn't have a 5 on his card.

"I took last week off and thought some of the magic might have rubbed off," Haas said.

But it didn't.

It was very much in evidence on the sixth hole. Haas' second shot skipped off the surface of a lake and ran safely up the bank. He chipped close and saved par.

"I'm in a great mood now," he said. "Maybe it's momentum. I'm just free-wheeling it."

Haas Takes Early Lead In Texas Open Tourney

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Jay Haas took the lead and Craig Stadler took another big step toward his chief goal — golf's money-winning title.

"It's No. 1 on my agenda right now. I've got the top spot now and I don't want to give it up," Stadler said after posting a 5-under-par 65 Thursday in the first round of the $250,000 Texas Open.

That left him two strokes behind Haas' pace-setting 63 and tied for second with Dan Pohl, Curtis Strange, Keith Fergus and Jim Dent.

And Stadler, winner of the Masters and three other tournaments this season, was eight strokes ahead of PGA champion Ray Floyd, who struggled to a 73 that left him in danger of missing the cut for the final two rounds.

Stadler leads the money-winning race with $441,301. Floyd is second with $386,809 and has only an outside chance of catching up. Only three more official events remain on the PGA Tour schedule after this tournament.

Ben Crenshaw, who lost a playoff for this title a year ago, shot a 66 in his first competitive round in more than a month and was tied with Tom Purtzer, Larry Ziegler, Johnny Miller, Mike Nicolette and George Cadle.

Defending title-holder Bill Rogers was two over par at 72 and Lee Trevino played the 6,525-yard Oak Hills Country Club course in 69.

Haas, who won the Hall of Fame Classic in his last start, birdied four of his first five holes, played the front in 30, didn't make a bogey and didn't have a 5 on his card.

"I took last week off and thought some of the magic might have rubbed off," Haas said.

But it didn't.

It was very much in evidence on the sixth hole. Haas' second shot skipped off the surface of a lake and ran safely up the bank. He chipped close and saved par.

"I'm in a great mood now," he said. "Maybe it's momentum. I'm just free-wheeling it."

Hunt Defeats Rose Kickers

WILSON — Wilson Hunt scored a goal in each half to slip by Greenville Rose, 2-0, yesterday afternoon in a hard-fought Big East Conference soccer match.

Wilson Hunt, undefeated and unscored on in six conference games this year, took a 1-0 lead three minutes into the match when Anderson Mattox scored the first of his two goals.

Hunt, which is 6-1 overall, finished the half with 13 shots on goal, but the Rampants, led by John Little and Lewis Robbins on defense, did not give up another goal.

Rose, now 1-2-2 this year, their first playing soccer, outplayed the Warriors in the second half but could not score a goal against Hunt goalkeeper Klaus Zuberbuehler.

The Rampants outshot Hunt, 6-3, in the second half. For the game, Hunt had 16 shots and Rose 12.

"It was the best half of the season for us," Rose coach

Will Wiberg said. "For the first 15 minutes we controlled the game. We did everything but score."

Mattox scored Hunt's final goal with about 25 minutes gone in the second half for the final tally.

"This was our best game of the year," Wiberg said.

Rose goalkeeper Craig Ward had 10 saves.

Rose plays host to Northeastern Tuesday. That game, and the following home game will be played on the ECU field adjoining Ficklen Stadium.

Bamberger Is Given New Contract By Mets

NEW YORK (AP) — George Bamberger says he didn't want to go out a loser, so he has signed a contract to manage the New York Mets for at least one more season.

Bamberger signed the one-year pact Thursday, optimistic the Mets could regroup from a year that will end with the club in last place and Bamberger having lived through his first losing season as a manager.

The Mets manager held off on making a decision whether to return until just four days before the end of the 1982 season, he said, "because I wanted to give Frank Cashen (Mets general manager) time in case he wanted to fire me."

Finally, Bamberger said he told his wife, Wilma, that he had decided to remain with the team on Wednesday.

"I didn't want to go out a loser," he said. "I've never finished under .500 before, and I think things can change. Our young kids have performed very well."

Bamberger spent 2½ seasons as manager of the Milwaukee Brewers beginning in 1978. The club won 90 or more games in each of his first two seasons. He then underwent open heart surgery in March of 1980, returned as Brewers manager on June 6 and retired for health reasons on Sept. 6. The Mets hired Bamberger last Oct. 20.

"Cashen, (owner Nelson) Doubleday and (club President Fred) Wilpon hired me to do a job," Bamberger said at a news conference. "Things did not go as we anticipated. They still wanted me back. They had faith in me."

Among the club's problems were the failure of its veteran pitching staff — compounded by the injury and illness of ace reliever Neil Allen — and the year-long slump of multimillionaire outfielder George Foster.

"Neil Allen got hurt, and that cost us at least 10 games this season, and I'm being conservative," Bamberger said. "And George Foster? I don't know what happened. Maybe it was the adjustment to having to carry a ballclub. But if he bounces back, that means another eight or 10 games, maybe."

The amount of Bamberger's contract was not announced, but Cashen said the manager had been given a raise over the estimated $220,000 he earned in 1982. Cashen also said he had offered Bamberger more than one year in the contract, but that Bamberger had declined.

"If things don't work out," Bamberger explained, "they don't have to pay me for a second year. This way, nobody gets nothing for nothing."

Bamberger was asked if the Mets' disappointing season had taught him any lessons.

"Sure, I've learned a lot," Bamberger said. "I can't think of any specific examples right now...."

And Cashen interjected: "He found out that he couldn't win without talent."

Nebraska Takes On Auburn

By The Associated Press
The Nebraska Cornhuskers, who traveled East last week and lost to Penn State in the final seconds, take the road South Saturday, this time to meet Auburn.

It will be the eighth-ranked Huskers' first regular-season trip to the Deep South since 1978, when they lost a 20-3 decision to that year's eventual national champion, Alabama.

Against No. 3 Penn State, which is idle this week, Nebraska finally succumbed to the passing quarterback Todd Blackledge, who has thrown 15 touchdown passes in four games this season. In contrast, Auburn has broken into the rankings in the 20th spot with a sparkling running attack.

After last week's 24-14 victory over Tennessee, their third straight triumph this year, the Tigers were No. 3 in the nation with 335 yards rushing per game.

That will present problems for Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne, but his worries are no greater than those of Auburn Coach Pat Dye because Nebraska is first in the nation in rushing with 417 yards per game and first in total offense with 619.

"They really don't have a weakness," Dye said of Nebraska. "They have a strong offensive line and perhaps the strongest center in college football ever (Dave Rimington). They have two great running backs and great receivers and a quarterback who can get the ball to them. We're scratching our heads trying to figure what to do to slow them up a little bit."

Dye said Nebraska quarterback Turner Gill "is probably in the Top 10 in the nation as far as skill and ability."

Countering Nebraska's 1-2 rushing tandem of Roger Craig and Mike Rozier are Auburn running backs Bo Jackson and Lionel James, who are averaging nearly 200 yards per game between them. All of the Tigers' runners are averaging 5.7 yards per carry.

Dye gives a lot of credit for Auburn's tremendous improvement on offense to 6-foot-6, 266-pound junior David Jordan.

"I think we have progressed to this point a lot quicker than people thought we would," Jordan said. "For that matter, we may even have surprised ourselves a little bit. We are really proud of what we've been able to do so far. Our backs are congratulating us more after each game and that's nice. Usually the only people who watch us or care about us are our mamas and the coaches."

"Auburn is going to be awfully tough, which we knew all along," Osborne said. "We've just got to put the Penn State loss behind us and concentrate on Auburn."

In one other game pairing two teams in the Top 20, No. 14 West Virginia will be at No. 2 Pittsburgh.

The Panthers will be facing another high-powered passing attack. Last week, Pitt defeated Tony Eason of Illinois 20-3 and this Saturday Jeff Hostetter will match arms with the Panthers' Dan Marino, who has led his team to a 3-0 record despite a rash of interceptions.

"The Mountaineers are for real," Pitt Coach Foge Fazio says. "You can't beat Oklahoma and Maryland and not be for real. West Virginia is now on a par with Pitt and Penn State."

Indeed, Eastern football followers are busting their buttons over having four teams in the rankings. In addition to Pitt, Penn State and West Virginia, Boston College is ranked 18th and will play host to Temple Saturday night.

Other games Saturday match San Diego State at No. 1 Washington, LSU at No. 4 Florida, No. 6 Georgia at Mississippi State, No. 9 UCLA at Colorado, No. 11 Notre Dame at Michigan State, Georgia Tech at No. 12 North Carolina and Oregon at No. 16 Southern California.

At night, Arkansas State faces No. 5 Alabama at Birmingham, North Texas State is at No. 7 Southern Methodist, Texas Christian meets No. 10 Arkansas at Little Rock, Kansas State is at No. 13 Arizona State, No. 15 Texas is at Rice, No. 17 Miami, Fla., is at Louisville and Illinois is at No. 19 Minnesota.

Cubs Fall To Rocky Mount

ROCKY MOUNT — Rose High School's junior varsity scored on its first drive of the evening, but that was it as Rocky Mount came back to score a 25-7 victory over the Rampant Cubs last night.

Todd Martin threw to Arthur Brown for 15 yards for the score and Brian Bridges kicked the PAT for the early Rose lead.

After that, however, Rocky Mount took over and dominated the rest of the game, using their aerial attack to score four touchdowns.

The loss drops Rose to 3-2 on the season, and 1-1 in Big East play. Rose plays host to Beddingfield next Thursday.

PINETOPS — Fullback Edward Davis rushed for 140 yards and scored two touchdowns to lead the Farmville Central junior varsity to a 14-6 win over SouthWest Edgecombe Thursday night.

Farmville, now 1-2 overall and 1-0 in the league, trailed, 6-0, after the first period but rallied to tie the game on a six-yard run by Davis in the second period. Bobby Evans hit Toronto Moyer for the two points to give the Jaguars an 8-6 lead at the half.

Neither team scored in the third period. The Jaguars sealed the win in the final period on a 34-yard run by Davis. The kick for the PAT failed but the Jaguars led, 14-6.

Davis carried the ball 25 times in gaining his 140 yards. Linebacker Wilson Gaye led the Jaguars on defense with 15 tackles. Jerome Daniels and Dennis Tripp each had 10 tackles.

Moyer, the Farmville punter, had three punts for a 40-yard average.

Farmville managed 205 yards total offense — 175 rushing and 30 passing — to 189 for SouthWest.

Farmville plays host to North Pitt Thursday.

'Knight Rider' Stars A Rival To 'General Lee'

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — With the high cost of gasoline, NBC hopes youngsters will stop cruising on Friday nights and stay home for the bionic car on "Knight Rider."

The indestructible KITT, a computer-driven Trans Am, is a thinking tank, with feelings. It also drives itself, talks, shows off and pouts. This car doesn't need a mechanic; it needs a shrink.

By comparison, the General Lee, the best actor on "The Dukes of Hazzard," is a Model T.

KITT is certainly the star of NBC's new program, which begins its series run tonight. (A two-hour special was broadcast last Sunday.) This flashy car joins the assembly line of TV's thinking transports, including "Mister Ed," "My Mother the Car," and "Herbie, the Love Bug."

The other pretty front end in "Knight Rider" is David Hasselhoff, known for six years as Snapper Foster on "The Young and the Restless." David and KITT bicker like any other TV couple.

In Sunday's episode, Hasselhoff's cop character, David Knight, was shot in the face; with the violence re-played in slow motion three times. A rich, dying benefactor saved Knight's life, gave him a new identity and KITT.

In the series, David will use the car to fight criminals beyond the reach of ordinary law enforcement, proving that "one man can make a difference."

The real difference, of course, is KITT. NBC's strategy is that car enthusiasts (men and kids) will watch CBS' "The Dukes of Hazzard" at 8, then more high-flying stunts at 9. With top-rated "Dallas" emphasizing horizontal action on CBS, "Knight Rider" is bona fide counter-programming.

On Sunday, KITT won a demolition derby without a dent or paint chip. It stood up on two wheels to slide between two cars. It also ejected a couple of be-bop car thieves.

But KITT had the good sense to avoid a confrontation with the Teamsters. With a kamikaze truck, bent on a head-on collision, super car decided on flight rather than fight.

One of the car's best tricks may have been its ratings. "Knight Rider" drew a 21.7 percent rating of all TV households and a 33 percent share of the households with their sets on. The NBC program won its timeslot against first-run programming on ABC and CBS.

An imaginative promotional campaign, featuring race car driver Johnny Rutherford in KITT and a General Lee lookalike, may have fueled the ratings success.

But General Lee hasn't been displaced as TV's favorite hunk yet, even though last week's "Dukes" premiere, with a new blond and brunet replacing Bo and Luke, had a 20.6 rating and 36 share, down from last year's season-opener.

It didn't take long for Coy and Vance to get down to basics. Their first appearance had them soaring across the screen in a blue speedster. The car, which didn't have its doors welded shut, was wrecked later, and the new Duke boys — without a scratch — jumped into the General Lee.

Some things never change in Hazzard County, particularly the plot and dialogue. Coy (Byron Cherry) and Vance (Christopher Mayer) will get into hot water every week with Boss Hogg, Mayer, the one with some acting experience, will say memorable things like: "I sure hope so, Cous."

Reportedly, some "Dukes" veterans grumbled about the newcomers' acting and timing. But those aren't the kind of nuances that should bother this show's steady customers.

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Drama Critic
NEW YORK (AP) — Well, "The Queen and the Rebels" has a superb set, a large, musty, church-like town hall designed by David Jenkins. And the play does bring the gifted Colleen Dewhurst back to Broadway.

The bad news: "Queen," written in 1949 by Italy's Ugo Betti, is a creaky, turgid, melodramatic, romantically pessimistic forgettable, translated here by Henry Reed into stilted English.

Opening Thursday, set in a modern civil war but in no specific nation, it starts with off-stage shooting and proves to be:

—A salute to the kind of human dignity and spirit personified by the woman Miss Dewhurst plays.

—A broadside against the treachery, oppressiveness and inhumanity of all governments, be they royalist, revolutionary or just putting on airs.

—The kind of serious drama in which you hear dialogue like, "You are the hook from which the great act of tyranny hangs."

In "Queen," Miss Dewhurst essays an earthy, aging, part-time prostitute who, with a group of travelers, has been captured by scruffy rebels in a small village in a war-torn country.

It seems she's come to see and seek help from her young lover (Scott Hylands), a strutting cad. A rebel functionary, he's actually a no-good, a cynic hoping to profit from war, not free the people.

He tries to give her the brush-off. But other parties, namely his army's political commissar and the nation's fugitive queen, cause both his undoing and Miss Dewhurst's moment of tragic triumph.

There's a mild surprise in the desultory opening scenes when the stern, sinister commissar (played by Peter Michael Goetz, a fine actor in a lost cause) reveals his true identity.

Not so Miss Dewhurst's realization of who of her fellow travelers is the nation's queen-on-the-lam — a pathetic, frightened wretch (Betty Miller) who only wants to flee and live quietly ever after.

The prostitute and her ex-lover plan the queen's death, for reasons so convoluted only John LeCarre could explain them. Then the prostitute succumbs to the pleas of the poor lady and helps her escape.

In due course, Miss Dewhurst is suspected of being the queen, particularly when the lights dim after an explosion and Goetz leans over the table, cigarette lighter in hand, and demands:

"Madam. Who are you?"

End of act one. After halftime, polemics fill the air. And Miss Dewhurst defiantly takes on regal airs, faces death as a queen accused of many sins, including disfigurement of the dead.

Rebels come and go. A wounded general groans with fever. The real queen is captured but not unmasked and continues to have trouble, likewise the royal impostor, who faces a firing squad.

And the queen's young son is brought in and threatened with death unless Miss Dewhurst divulges certain secrets.

Laborious, all this, and Waris Hussein's uncertain direction doesn't help; at one point you hear a helicopter approaching when by then you've gotten the impression this civil war is of Thirties vintage.

Jane Greenwood's costumes don't help, either. The rebel general's dusty threads seem fresh from "For Whom the Bell Tolls," those of his mostly bearded troops from the U.S. Army by way of Vietnam.

True, "Queen" does let Miss Dewhurst periodically shine as her middle-aged prostitute rises from the dreags of humanity to all that is good and decent in this wicked world.

seriously boring. Not even her great talent saves it. I sure wish she'd try comedy for a change.

Ike Fails To Avoid Jail

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Singer Ike Turner's bid to avoid a 30-day county jail term failed when the California Supreme Court refused to review an appeal of his conviction on cocaine possession charges.

Turner, who had been part of the hit Ike and Tina Turner act before they split several years ago, had challenged the validity of a search that resulted in seizure of cocaine at his recording studio, Bolic Sound, and an adjoining residence in March 1980.

His petition said that an informant had told police Turner possessed cocaine and had cocaine in ashtrays and dishes at his living quarters and the recording studio.

Turner contended that a warrant to do a night search was improper since the property seized might have been located during daylight hours, and asked that the evidence be suppressed.

The Supreme Court denied without comment his request to review a state appeals court ruling upholding the conviction.

The Los Angeles County Superior Court sentence of three years' probation with a condition he spend the first 30 days in custody had been stayed pending appeal, and Turner is free on bail.

Turner's attorney was out of town and could not be reached for comment on appeal prospects. The case must return to the Los Angeles court before a date for Turner to start serving the sentence can be set.

Findings Re-Open Debate On Homo Erectus Roots

By PAUL RAE BURN
AP Science Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Despite the large number of human fossils found in Africa, a researcher says new evidence suggests that human beings did not evolve there but in Europe, Asia or the Middle East.

Charles Repenning of the U.S. Geological Survey in Menlo Park, Calif., said Thursday that the human ancestor known as Homo erectus apparently inhabited Israel before Africa.

That doesn't necessarily mean that Homo erectus evolved in Israel, Repenning said in a telephone interview.
"It's conceivable that he evolved elsewhere and was on his way to Africa when he died in Israel," he said.

Repenning has determined that Homo erectus lived in Israel 500,000 years before it lived in Africa.
David Pilbeam, professor of anthropology at Harvard University, called Repenning's finding "surprising." Pilbeam said he has not yet seen Repenning's study, which appears in the current issue of Nature magazine.
Pilbeam said the finding is "feasible," but that it is contradicted by a substantial body of circumstantial evidence—that hominids — humans, their direct ancestors and their extinct cousins — evolved in Africa.
Repenning agreed that the australopithecines — the ape-like ancestors of Homo erectus — evolved in Africa. "But they got out of Africa and Homo evolved somewhere else, according to the Ubeidiya story," he said.
Repenning proposed his theory on the basis of a new analysis of an archeological site in Israel called Ubeidiya, near the Sea of Galilee.
Stone tools associated with Homo erectus have been found there and judged to be about 700,000 years old. Similar tools thought to be 1.5 million years old have been found in excavations in Tanzania and Kenya. The explanation has been that Homo erectus, who presumably made those tools, lived in Africa hundreds of thousands of years before he eventually migrated to Israel.

Repenning and his collaborator, Oldrich Fejfar of Czechoslovakia, say animal fossils found at Ubeidiya must be at least 2 million years old, and that the stone tools — so-called Early Acheulian tools — therefore must also be that old. That puts Homo erectus in Israel 500,000 years before the first evidence of the creature in Africa.
The age of the animal fossils has been determined by establishing the age of the geological formations in which they have been found around the world, Repenning said.
Repenning and Fejfar are among perhaps a dozen people in the world who study the fossilized ancestors of microtine rodents — mouse-like animals including lemmings and muskrats. One such ancestor, known as Lagurodon, has been found in excavations of material about 2 million years old, Repenning said. "It becomes extinct long before 700,000 years ago," he said.
Fossils of Lagurodon were found at Ubeidiya near tools made by Homo erectus, Repenning said, so those tools should also be about 2 million years old — 500,000 years older than similar tools found in Kenya and Tanzania.

Repenning and Fejfar then examined many other animal fossils from Ubeidiya — including primitive bears, hyenas and saber-tooth tigers — to confirm his date of 2 million years for the site.
William Farrand, a University of Michigan geologist, said in a telephone interview that "an age of 2 million years is really out in left field as far as the conventional wisdom is concerned." He said radioactive dating of lava flows at Ubeidiya has been used along with other evidence to establish the conventional date of 700,000 years ago.

Repenning said the dating of the lava flow means only that Ubeidiya is more than 700,000 years old. "You have no idea (from the lava) how much older" he said.

Life As It's Lived

A Zest For Life Marks Two-Year-Old's Style

By GAIL MICHAELS
My forays into the shopping mall invariably begin with a mad dash after Zachary, who has memorized all the turns to the ice cream store and knows from experience that if he can only manage to get near enough to give weight to an appeal from his round blue eyes, I will most probably break down and provide him with a scoop of Elsie's ambrosia.
And more often than not, as I am demonstrating my prowess at track and field, some indulgent grandparent type asks me, "Don't you wish you had some of his energy?"
Of course, I do. For years my children have been tapping my energy source like aliens from "Star Trek" and I'd love to reciprocate. But as much as I would treasure a portion of Zachary's physical momentum, I much prefer the opportunity I have to share his enthusiasm for life.

There is nothing quite like a 2-year-old's delight in living. Three and 4-year-olds have it but to a lesser extent. As each year passes, even for a child, the lengthening list of responsibilities seem to make us a little more hesitant, and little less certain of ourselves and future.
The 2-year-old, however, cares nothing for the future. He stands at the threshold of existence with a newfound power to interact with his environment. Every push in a swing is a thrill. Every silly face is an occasion for irresponsible mirth. He is an intrepid explorer, curious, imitative and loving. And although he is occasionally thwarted by giants, he retains his emotional stature through his quickness to forgive.

Naturally, Zachary's willingness to forgive prompts me to respond in kind. His age seems to mitigate all offenses. "Just you hush!" and "You stop it!" are commands I won't tolerate in a year. But somehow, coming from that clownish little mouth screwed into a tight "O", they are rather endearing how. Even the worst offenses of which he is capable are tinged with a touch of humor. Parents far sterner than I would find it difficult to stay angry at the offering of two grubby fat hands crammed with zinnia heads. "I weeded," he says.
His worries are few. He worries about where his grandparents are and when he will see them next. He worries, though not much, about retaining his position as Mama's little darling. "I'm the only baby," he reminds me. "See my blue eyes."
But as carefree as he is, even he has presentiments that his world will change. Not long ago he spotted his first pair of tennis shoes stashed away in the closet. He studied them and tried to push his feet into them. Then sadly, he handed them to me. "I can't wear them. They're for a tiny baby."
I felt that familiar constriction of the heart as I took them back with the realization that he'd soon grow out of another pair, and another, and another. Still, I can't regret the sadness. It's to much a part of the joy that will nourish me so much longer than if it were mine alone.

File Further Plans On Coastal Drilling

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Atlantic Richfield Co. has filed plans to drill up to six exploratory oil and gas wells in tracts leased off the North Carolina coast.
ARCO and Chevron U.S.A. have leased offshore tracts from the U.S. Bureau of Land Management, but have specified different methods for drilling wells.
ARCO plans to use a semi-submersible platform floating on huge pontoons to explore about 45 miles off Cape Lookout in 1,300 feet of water. Chevron plans to use a drill ship, positioned over each well hole by a computerized guidance system operating in about 2,000 feet of water.

While Chevron, which filed its plan in June, expects to begin drilling 34 miles northeast of Cape Hatteras within a year, ARCO officials said their starting date may be delayed as late as 1984.
Lawrence E. Roberts, coordinator for ARCO's project, said detailed engineering studies must be made to allow drilling equipment to operate in the strong currents of the Gulf Stream.
An environmental report prepared for ARCO by Dames and Moore of Cranford, N.J., shows the major concerns are with the discharge of mud used to lubricate the drill, the possibility of an oil spill and the disruption of fishing around the drill site.
The report concludes that about 3,710 barrels of drill cuttings and 16,800 barrels of mud would be discharged on the sea floor and might smother bottom-dwelling organisms. Drilling mud contains some heavy metals that may be absorbed by small organisms and, if those organisms are eaten by larger fish, the metals could become concentrated, the report says.
The report concludes that the chances of an appreciable oil spill or extensive disruption of fishing are virtually nonexistent.

'Buzzed' By The Soviets

HONOLULU (AP) — A U.S. naval task force in the Northern Pacific has been repeatedly buzzed by Soviet warplanes in the past week, according to the commander of the U.S. Pacific Fleet.

Admiral Sylvester R. Foley said Thursday the planes had been reconnoitering the ships and simulating air-to-surface missile attacks. He said that such encounters are common during naval exercises.

He added that the encounters have resulted in some "very hairy situations," and that carrier-based F-14 Tomcats have been dispatched to intercept the Soviet planes.

The Navy has been conducting cold weather exercises in an area between the Aleutian Islands of Alaska and the Soviet-occupied Kuril Islands, which have been claimed by Japan. The two battle groups of 15 ships in the task force include the carriers Enterprise and Midway.

Navy reports say the Soviet aircraft include Bear heavy-prop bombers and Badger jets, based in Kamchatka, less than 500 miles away.

The California-based Enterprise rendezvoused Saturday with the Japan-based Midway about 150 miles southwest of the Aleutians.

Foley said the Soviet planes had buzzed the fleet 50 times in five days.

Approve Annexations By Lumberton Schools

LUMBERTON, N.C. (AP) — The U.S. Justice Department has approved the annexation of three neighborhoods into the Lumberton City School system, after contending earlier the move violated civil rights laws.

Dr. Gilbert Carroll, school superintendent, said Thursday he received a letter from Justice Department attorneys giving permission for the system to keep two of the disputed neighborhoods.

The ruling on the third neighborhood was moot, since it already has been placed under the jurisdiction of the Robeson County school system.

The Barker Ten-Mile, Lakewood Estates and Clyburn Pines-Country Club neighborhoods were parts of the county school system until a decade ago, when they were annexed by the city. Clyburn Pines-Country Club was returned to the county system earlier this year.

Justice Department officials ruled that the annexations violated the 1965 Voting Rights Act, which requires approval of any changes in election laws or voting districts in certain areas. The act empowers the department to veto such changes if they're found to dilute minority voting strength.

The annexations of the three Lumberton neighborhoods altered the voting districts for election of city and county school boards.

The Clyburn Pines and Country Club Citizens Association filed suit against the Lumberton and Robeson County school boards and state Attorney General Rufus Edmisten this summer. The suit challenged the constitutionality of the decision to return Clyburn Pines-

A cash bar and hors d'oeuvres will be at 6 p.m. and the program will start at 7 p.m. Registration is $4.50.

Ms. Foley is a clinical nurse specialist in pediatric oncology from Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center in New York, and received the Marie Hippensteel Lingeman Award for Excellence in Nursing Practice. Country Club to the county school system.

The General Assembly approved that move, and the city and county school boards made it official June 4.

In a related development, the Clyburn Pines Citizens Association is seeking an injunction against Lumberton's plan to assess children from their neighborhood a $70 tuition fee to attend city schools.

A hearing on the suit is scheduled for Oct. 11 in Robeson County Superior Court.

The fee is in place of a special supplemental school tax of 15 cents per $100 property valuation on city residents, officials say.

Carroll said county commissioners must decide whether to levy the tax on the Barker Ten Mile and Lakewood Estates areas.

Quarterly Meeting

Quarterly meeting will be held this weekend at Cherry Lane Free Will Baptist Church with the following services scheduled:

Saturday, 8 p.m., holy communion with Best Chapel and the Rev. Matthew Best in charge; Sunday, 11 a.m., the senior choir of Cherry Lane and the pastor, the Rev. C.R. Parker, will lead the services, and at 3 p.m., Bishop W.L. Phillips and his church from Farmville will lead the service.

CULIACAN, Mexico (AP) — Cleanup crews fanned out today to clear debris left by Hurricane Paul, which reportedly killed 24 people and drove 10,000 from their homes before disintegrating in the northeast Mexico high country.

The official Notimex news agency quoted Sinaloa Gov. Antonio Toledo Corro as saying Thursday that 24 people died in his state and the hardest hit communities were Alvarado, Guasave and Ohome.

Other news reports of casualties, however, were significantly lower, and a Red Cross spokesman in this state capital 787 miles northwest of Mexico City said the only human damage of the hurricane was "pure fright." The Red Cross in Los Mochis, a coastal city of 250,000 people close to where the hurricane smashed into the Sinaloa coast early Thursday, said damage estimates and lists of any casualties would not be available immediately. It said cleanup teams were hoping to clear up much of the debris by later today.

"Many houses were completely destroyed. Others had their roofs torn off or windows blown out," said a Red Cross official in Los Mochis, who asked not to be named.

In La Paz, capital of South Baja California across the Gulf of California, Jose Rodriguez of the Red Cross said an initial estimate was that 10,000 people were driven from their homes there.

He said there were no confirmed reports of deaths.

The hurricane swept over the southern tip of the Baja California peninsula Wednesday night and roared into Los Mochis at dawn Thursday with gusts as high as 112 mph and heavy rains, felling power lines and disrupting telephones.

The hurricane lost strength quickly, however, as it continued inland into the mountains. By Thursday night, a forecaster at the National Weather Service in Mexico City said, "It has dissipated. It doesn't exist anymore."

He said there were rains

"of little importance" lingering in Sonora and Chihuahua states further north.

The Mexico City newspaper Excelsior reported that despite the damages the hurricane will benefit agricultural areas of northern Mexico, where rains have been scarce this year.

It said reservoirs in Sinaloa state were only 40 percent full and quoted the Agriculture Department as saying the hurricane "will bring about great benefits to agriculture, especially in Sinaloa state."

Newspapers reported that 1 million acres of farmland in the Culiacan valley in Sinaloa were under water.

FWB Session Begins Monday

The 114th annual session of the Northeast Conference "B" Division of the United American Free Will Baptist Denomination Inc. will convene with the Good Hope FWB Church in Winterville Oct. 4-10.

Bishop C.C. Thomas will preside while Dr. W.H. Mitchell is the host pastor.

Speakers and events will include: Monday, 7:30 p.m., the Rev. Samuel Hardy; Tuesday, 7:30 p.m., the Rev. A. L. Miller; Wednesday, 11 a.m., Eldress Day Session, 7:30 p.m., youth program; Thursday, 11 a.m. the Rev. David Daniel, 7:30 p.m., Elder C. L. ## FOCUS

Tugging For The Title

The top contenders for the U.S. Tug-of-War championships will meet Sunday at the Knoxville World's Fair. The winners and the losers will be working together for one goal: to return the competition to the Olympic Games. Tug-of-war developed among the tribes of Borneo, India, and Burma. They used it during ceremonies for the dead to represent the conflict between good and evil. Some ancient people also thought a tug-of-war match could help predict the weather. About 500 B.C. the Greeks added tug-of-war to their Olympic Games. It was also included in the modern games which began in 1896. But later the Olympic Committee dropped this event, along with others such as American football, baseball, and golf.

It is a pleasure to watch an expert technician in action. This hand contains several points worth studying. We admire South's courage in bidding two spades vulnerable over an opposing no trump opener. Personally, we prefer a slightly more robust trump suit for that action. North's raise to game is impeccable. West led the ace of clubs — a card that had all the earmarks of being the top of a doubleton. South would have liked to run the lead to his hand, but he urgently needed an entry to dummy to take the trump finesse. So he called for dummy's queen. East took the ace and returned the ten of clubs. In keeping with his original idea, declarer won in dummy and took the spade finesse. When the queen held, he cashed the ace of spades to fell the king. Obviously, declarer would need an end play to bring home his contract — he had a
