Repairs Progressing

FIRST STREET PAVING — The city has put down a base course of asphalt at the site of the drainage repair project on First Street and the final surface course should be down in seven to 10 days, a spokesman said. The street is open again to traffic. While the final paving will wind up the street segment of the repair work, construction of an open channel to handle drainage on the north side of the corridor remains. The extensive repair project began after the drainage system under the street collapsed following heavy rains on July 13, causing a section of the street to cave in. (Reflector Staff Photo)

'Copycat' Poisoning Suspected In Calif.

By JOHN DOWLING
Associated Press Writer

A "copycat" inspired by the cyanide-tainted drugs that killed seven people in Chicago may have been responsible for strychnine-laced Extra-Strength Tylenol found in a California drugstore, authorities said.

The incident in Oroville, Calif., prompted Tylenol's manufacturer to issue an urgent appeal for stores across the nation to withdraw all Tylenol capsule products from sale. Many retailers already had, and Chicago and at least two states, Colorado and North Dakota, have banned sale of the products.

"It's highly suspected at this point in time that it was a copycat crime," said police Sgt. Jack Lee in Oroville, where a butcher, 27-year-old Greg Blagg, was treated for strychnine poisoning.

Blagg, questioned by FBI agents for two hours Tuesday, told reporters he had bought the strychnine-tainted Tylenol two weeks before taking the capsule — long before the Chicago-area deaths. But Lee, besides calling the incident a possible copycat crime, also said Blagg's account of the purchase date "has not been confirmed."

"There's a possibility it might not have been" purchased on or about Sept. 15, Lee said.

Lee said the poisoning, revealed Tuesday, was believed to be a "local crime," and Illinois Attorney General Tyrone Fahner said there was "no reason to suspect any connection" between the California incident and last week's deaths in Chicago and four suburbs.

At a briefing, Fahner also said investigators are now inclined to believe that only one person was involved in the Chicago poisonings and said a list of suspects had been narrowed to "eight or nine," all local residents. He declined to elaborate, but said none was in California at a time connected to the strychnine poisoning.

A federal law enforcement official who declined to be identified said investigators had not discounted a link in the two cases, and Fahner said "caution precludes me from saying there is no connection."

California Health Director Beverlee Myers called the discovery of the tainted bottles "cause for concern, not for panic." She told reporters in Sacramento that her department was sending investigators to Oroville, about 100 miles north of San Francisco, to collect all the Tylenol they could find within 25 miles.

Blagg, a butcher, said he went into convulsions Thursday after taking a capsule of the best-selling pain remedy. Capsules from the bottle and two other bottles from the same store, a Longs Drug Store outlet, contained strychnine, the federal Food and Drug Administration said.

Fahner, who heads a task force of more than 100 investigators from federal, county and state agencies, said officials are checking whether someone who wanted Johnson & Johnson stock prices to fall was involved. The stock price has dropped from 47⅛ to 39 since Sept. 28.

Fahner also said not all of the primary suspects have been interviewed and "it looks less and less that it's more than one" person involved.

"We're better off than we were yesterday," he said of the progress of the investigation. "I think we're on the right track."

In Memphis, Tenn., medical investigators were asked to examine Tylenol capsules found in the cab of a 46-year-old truck driver who died Tuesday after a grain delivery.

No Fire, Brimstone Yet For Local Campaigning

By MELVIN LANG
Reflector Staff Writer

Politicial campaigning in Pitt County — and for Congress in the 1st District — is not shaping up as one of those heart-tearing, knuckle-rubbing, hysteria-filled episodes this fall.

The Democratic incumbents are running on their records in previous sessions of Congress and the Legislature; Republicans are new and trying to expand for the future as much as for 1982, and two write-in legislative candidates are on the sidelines looking for an opening.

Pitt Democratic Chairman George Saleeby of Grifton says his party is looking for "unity" and a big voter turnout in its bid to return U.S. Rep. Walter Jones and legislators Vernon White of Winterville to the state Senate and Sam Bundy of Farmville to the House.

Jones' opponent, Republican James McIntyre, acknowleges that running against the veteran congressman is difficult and has yet to mount an active campaign.

"Walter Jones is very popular," McIntyre said. "His voting record is sometimes different from what the people would want ... but he's personally popular with the people here in eastern North Carolina."

McIntyre, a Greenville acoountant, is treasurer of the state Republican Party, which has begun mounting symbolic candidates in some races.

The most interest so far has been generated by three female candidates from Greenville: Republican Sally Keel, who is trying to unseat White in the Senate, and two write-in candidates, Mariem House and Fredrica Jacobson.

Ms. House is seeking the state Senate seat while Ms. Jacobson is running for the state House against Bundy. Both are sponsored by a coalition of women formed after the defeat of the Equal Rights Amendment earlier this year.

Ms. Keel says she is devoting most of her resources to personal appearances and media advertising while Ms. House and Ms. Jacobson, without a party affiliation for their campaigns, are stressing one-on-one personal approaches in search of name recognition.

"Really, it's been an education for us," Ms. Jacobson said. "You don't really realize how many probelms there are and how widespread is the feeling that you're not being listened to."

Ms. Jacobson said her campaign is stressing information on how voters can cast ballots for the write-in candidates.

Ms. Keel also emphasized that her campaign has been informative. "I feel extremely positive about it, not so much from the political point of view, of winning, but more from the point that I've learned so much about what the people are interested in. I've learned an awful lot about Pitt County."

As for the Democrats, Saleeby says the party is "going to have a get-out-the-vote campaign, using air and newspaper advertising. Our plans are to turn out a big Democratic vote in an off year, to try to get a big majority."

"We are aware of some opposition ... (and) we're not taking this lightly. My intentions are that we have a big, big win. I don't foresee any problems with any of the Democrats being elected," Saleeby said.

To Let Contract On Ayden School

A contract will be let on the Ayden Middle School project by the Pitt County Board of Education within 10 days, school Superintendent Eddie West says.

"We are not ready today to accept a final bid," Dr. West said at Tuesday's monthly meeting of the Pitt County Board of Education. West said he believed the county could get "a little better deal by talking some more."

"I want to negotiate with the low bidders some more to try and get the most for the taxpayers' dollars," he said.

A meeting will be called within 10 days, he added, to announce the board's decision on the contract.

The board accepted base bids on the project (no gym and dressing rooms) and required bidders to submit figures for three alternatives — dressing rooms "hulled" in, both gym and dressing rooms "hulled" in and complete school.

The lowest bid on the complete school, said Associate Superintendent Thomas Craft, was $2,371,289 — $167,274 below the previous bid let in June of 1981. He attributed the reduction to a decline in the price of building materials.

Low bids for the complete school alternative were submitted by Kenneth Reed (general contracting, $1,541,700); Kipco (plumbing, $254,433); Central Heating (heating and air conditioning, $363,000) and Live Wire Electric (electrical installation, $212,156.)

The following low bids on the three alternatives would be considered if the board does not let a contract on the complete school:

•$2,057,244, base bid, no gym, no dressing rooms. Low bids by Farrior and Sons, (general contracting, $1,312,160); Kipco (plumbing, $222,444); Southern Piping (heating and air conditioning, $337,000) and Wells Electric (electrical installation, $185, 640.)

•$2,097,044, dressing rooms hulled in. Low bids by Far-

Farmville Board Clears Way On Project For Child Care Center

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

FARMVILLE — After many months of consideration, town commissioners voted Tuesday night to lease the town-owned Hospitality Hut on Vines Street for use as the Edwin Kids' Day Care Center.

Terms of the lease call for the tenant to do all maintenance on the building and pay all utilities and insurance. Edith Gay Barnes and other members of her family have plans for a day care center to serve residents of the South Farmville area.

A budget amendment was approved which authorized the spending of $9,000 as the town's participation in a chamber of commerce-sponsored promotion of Farmville as a good place to live and shop.

Mayor Rusty Duke was appointed the voting delegate to the N.C. League of Municipalities meeting to be held in Greensboro the first weekend in November. Town Administrator Bob Morgan was named the alternate delegate.

A public hearing was held on a proposed inventory of industrial wastewater that may need pretreatment before entering the town's treatment facility and receiving stream. The intent of the program is to prevent the introduction of pollutants which the plant cannot handle. It is expected that the program will provide the legal authority for the town to require industries to treat their own waste water up to required standards. Pridgen Consultants Inc. has been awarded the contract to prepare an ordinance for enablement of the program.

A lease to the Farmville Junior Woman's Club of a 12-by-75-foot piece of town property immediately behind the club's Little Red School was approved. The land is needed for the organization to build an addition to the kindergarten-nursery school.

A resolution was adopted authorizing the exchange of property between the town of Farmville and the Rev. Charlie Parker. The property to be exchanged is a town-owned lot at 301 Wallace St. and a portion of a lot lying behind 305 Wallace St. that belongs to Parker.

Revisions to the Community Development Program of the town were approved. Among them is the addition of a loan category for assistance in weatherization and energy-saving improvements.

Condemnation of property at 200 Wallace St. was approved. The action was taken through the power of eminent domain as most of the heirs of Cora Atkinson, original owner of the property, have not been located.

The town administrator was authorized to sign a revised contract and agreement with ENSCO of Little Rock, Ark., for the disposal of 27 PCB-contaminated capacitors. Costs of shipping containers, freight and disposal are estimated to be $2,000.

The purchase of storm windows for the police department office upstairs in the municipal building was approved. The windows are to be bought from Farmville Hardware Company at a cost of $395.15.

Installation by Eastern Insulation of $523.60 worth of insulation in the fire station ceiling was approved.

Authorization to procure bids for a new police car on 1982 and 1983 models was given. The town budget allows for the purchase of one new police patrol car a year.

The purchase of 20 additional roll-out carts for the town's sanitation program was approved. Each cart costs $52.

Approval was given for the town to open an account with the North Carolina Cash Management Trust. Use of

'Strange' Sub Depth-Charged

By DICK SODERLUND
Associated Press Writer

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — The Swedish navy, trying to capture a mysterious submarine that may be from the Soviet bloc, dropped depth charges today on the vessel near Sweden's main naval base, officials said.

A navy spokesman confirmed that "at least one" depth charge was dropped today on the unidentified vessel, trapped in Hors Bay, Stockholm's inner archipelago and subjected to a depth charge barrage since Monday.

Although officials have refused to speculate on the nationality of the submarine, Swedish newspapers have reported that the vessel was believed to belong to a Warsaw Pact nation, perhaps from the Soviet Union or Poland.

Adm. Christer Kierkegaard, who directed the hunt, said that "this time we are determined to outlast it and force it up, not just send it off with a slap in the bottom."

Navy spokesman Capt. Hans von Hofsten said, "We are widening the scope of possibilities. The vessel has withstood a very hard shakeup and has not always reacted as expected."

More than a dozen depth charges were dropped since Monday to force the submarine to surface, and officials speculated today that the vessel withstanding the beating may be a new, small spy sub, possibly a remote controlled crewless one.

Escape routes in the 12-mile long, 3-mile wide bay have been blocked by the Swedish navy since the vessel was first spotted Friday.

The dramatic sub hunt off the top secret base of Musko, 18 miles south of Stockholm, is the most serious naval incident since a Soviet submarine U 137 grounded close to the main southern navy base at Karlskrona a year ago.

While the chase went on with navy ships, helicopters and navy divers, and new explosions were heard just a few miles from the naval base school area, ambulances waited there to get possible casualties from the submerged sub to nearby hospitals.

'Average Persons In Unaverage Situation'

By MARC ROSENWASSER
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — One American describes her as a "trooper ... Not above taking her shoes off, sitting on the floor and having a couple of beers."

Another says she "looks like an ambassador's wife. She carries herself well, dresses nicely, is soft spoken and always seems concerned when she's talking to someone."

What does Donna Hartman, wife of U.S. Ambassador to Moscow Arthur Hartman, think of Donna Hartman?

"An average person in an unaverage situation," she says.

Tall and lean with graying sandy-colored hair, the 54-year-old mother of five has not led what most would consider an average life.

She studied social psychology at the London School of Economics, has practiced yoga for several years and has worked at various times as a typist, English teacher and commercial landscape consultant.

In Moscow, she busies herself with daily Russian language classes, gardening and modern dance classes — all of which she takes seriously.

Russian classes are held daily for one or two hours. Gardening at the ambassador's official residence, says one person who has seen Mrs. Hartman do it, means "getting down in the dirt and digging."

As for modern dancing, Mrs. Hartman once leaped, fell and broke a bone in her foot.

She does all this, in addition to scheduling the use of their home for various activities, arranging for American artists to perform in Moscow and fufilling the social duties of an ambassador's wife.

It's a serious business, rubbing shoulders with Kremlin officials in Moscow or French leaders in Paris, where the Hartmans were based before their arrival in the Soviet capital in October 1981. But it's not serious enough to prevent the first lady of the American community here from enjoying a joke or two at her own expense.

"I talk to Russians every day," she said, with a laugh. "There are the butlers, maids and gardeners ... Oh, yes, there are the drivers."

She told how, nearly 35 years ago, her sister insisted she meet Arthur Hartman because she thought they looked alike.

"What do you think now?" she asked as she sat with U.S. Embassy spokesman Frank Tonini in the Hartmans' elegant residence, Spasso house.

"Well, you're both tall," replied Tonini.

"And we both have big noses," added Mrs. Hartman.

If anything, hers is a nose for the news.

Several weeks ago, Donna Hartman stepped into controversy.

On her own initiative, she went to the apartment of Soviet hunger striker Yuri Balovlenkov and tried to convince him to stop his fast for the right to join his American wife in the United States.

"I was really upset and fearful," she said. "He was so sure he wasn't going to die and that he was going to win."

Mrs. Hartman presented the 33-year-old computer programmer with a bright red rose picked from her garden, a tape recording of the opera, "La Traviata," and a note that said:

"To Yuri, so that you can hear the beauties of the world now that you've seen them in your daughter."

Balovlenkov, who days before had seen his 2-year-old child for the first time, later gave up his fast — but only after his wife, fearing for his health, falsely told him that Soviet authorities had decided to let him leave the country.

Joke as she does about her limited contacts, the ambassador and his wife regularly invite "official" and "unofficial" Soviets to functions at their home. One recent event was a screening of the movie, "E.T. — The Extra-Terrestrial."

"I try to provide and maintain a stage on which things can happen and then let them happen," says Mrs. Hartman.

Armadillo Accessories New Fad In Making?

By TERESA H. ANDERSON

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (UPI) — Call it the big armadillo roundup.

If an enterprising furrier has his way, 20,000 Texas armadillos soon may sacrifice their tough armored hides to become the latest Cowboy fashion fad.

"We've been thinking about working with armadillos for several years. Now, we've come up with the right formulas on tanning... and we've decided to make hatbands, belt buckles, belts, hatpins, bolo (string) ties and whatever else," he said.

The hide is not the only part of the odd-looking mammal that will be used in cowboy clothing, Wallace said.

"We're using the armadillo head on bolo ties. We're using armadillo feet as an accessory on a hatband and also the tail as a hatband accessory. We're using everything except the intestines, which we are experimenting with for coyote lure, and the breath, which we haven't been able to capture yet."

All kinds of people have been snaring or picking up armadillos since Wallace began advertising in Texas newspapers for the animals earlier this year.

"Hunters go and shoot the armadillo then bring it to our pickup points each week and sell it to us," Wallace said. He pays $2.50 apiece for armadillos people bring to him at his B & W Fur Coin Halletsville midway between San Antonio and Houston.

The coati, also known as the hog-nosed coon, is usually found in the dense, wet forests of South America and Mexico, but since the beginning of the century coatis have moved into the southwestern United States. If there are no trees around, this long-snouted member of the raccoon family will sleep in caves and rock piles, instead of on branches.

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a five by seven picture. During the second week with a wallet size picture and write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement. Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to "The Daily Reflector" one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

Sorority Has New Pledges

The Eta Delta Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi held its meeting Tuesday. New pledges were present for the model meeting.

Carmon Bradley, Linda Creech, Candy Gunn and Paula Scholten are pledges and Serri Nemeth is transferring from Greensboro.

They were given information on the different committees and their functional purpose within the sorority.

Upcoming projects for the chapter are the craft fair at Carolina East Mall Oct. 30 and a hotdog sale in December.

President Kay Fogg was hostess for the meeting.

The ringtail has a long, bushy tail and is a member of the raccoon family. It ranges from Oregon to Panama, and during the gold rush in the American West prospectors often kept ringtails in their camps to catch rats and mice. Because of its slender body, long whiskers, and big appetite for small rodents, it was called miner's cat and coon cat.

COOKING IS FUN!

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

WALDORF SALAD CUPCAKES

They are unusual — and good.

1 1/2 cups all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon baking soda
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon ground cinnamon
1 large egg
3/4 cup sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
1-3rd cup real mayonnaise
1 cup coarsely chopped unpeeled red apple
1/2 cup coarsely chopped walnuts
1/4 cup finely chopped celery

Put a paper baking cup into each of 12 muffin-pan cups that are 2 1/2 inches across the top and 2 inches deep. Stir together flour, soda, salt and cinnamon. In the large bowl of an electric mixer at medium speed beat egg, sugar and vanilla until blended. At low speed beat in mayonnaise until blended; add flour mixture and beat until smooth. With a spoon, stir in apple, walnuts and celery. Spoon into baking cups. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in the center comes out clean — 30 to 35 minutes. Cool in pan for 5 minutes. Remove cupcakes in liners to a wire rack to cool. Makes 12.

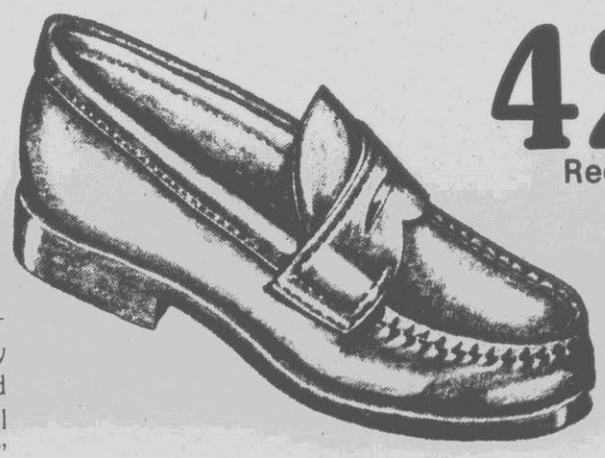

CUCUMBER MOLDS

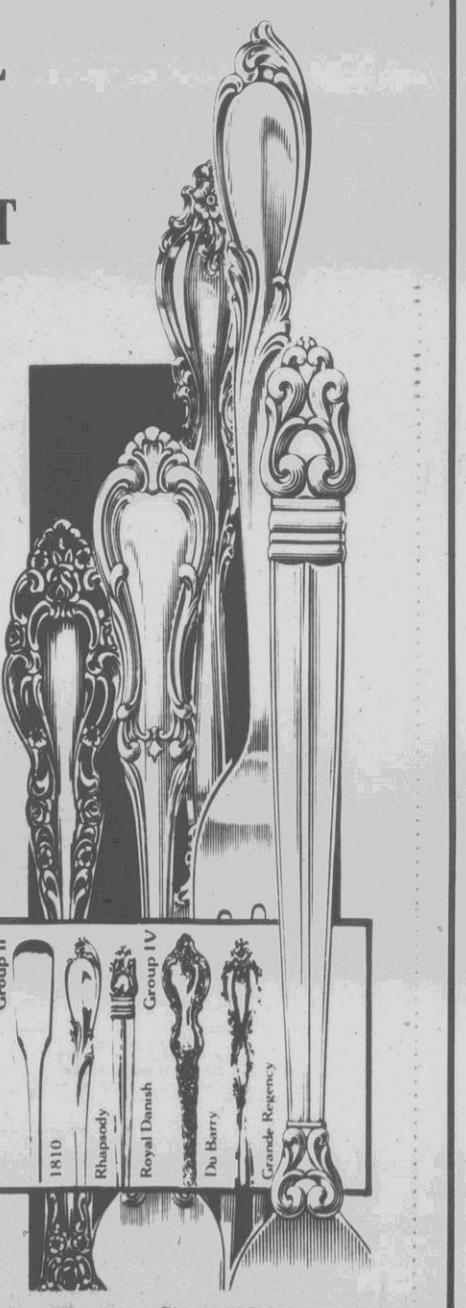

The cucumber gives delicate flavor.

Two cucumbers (each about 4 ounces)
1 envelope unflavored gelatin
1/4 cup cold water
1/2 cup sour cream
1-3rd cup mayonnaise
1/2 to 1 teaspoon salt
White pepper to taste
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce

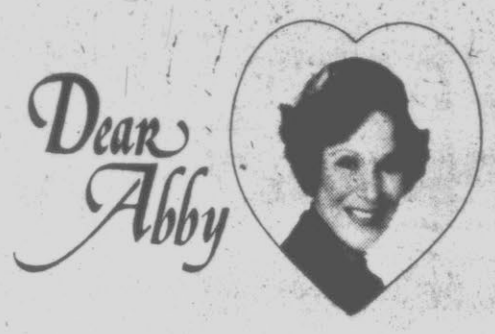

Pare cucumbers; halve lengthwise; scoop out seeds and discard. Coarsely grate cucumbers — there should be 1 1/2 cups packed down. In the top of a double boiler, sprinkle gelatin over water to soften — about 5 minutes; over boiling water heat, without stirring, until gelatin dissolves — several minutes. Off heat, whisk in sour cream. In a small bowl gently whisk together until blended the mayonnaise, salt, pepper and Worcestershire; whisk into gelatin mixture. Stir in cucumber. Turn into 6-ounce custard cups or individual molds. Chill to set. At serving time, unmold. Garnish, if you like, with watercress and sweet red pepper. Makes 6 servings.

Device Blocks Out Noise

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Please tell "Ready to Kill a Mockingbird in Anaheim" that there is a device on the market that will drown out not only the noise of the mockingbird, but barking dogs, loud stereos, wild parties, roaring cars, motorcycles, neighbors in their pool till all hours, bouncing tennis balls at 6 a.m. and snoring husbands.

It's an electric fan that produces a sound similar to running water or ocean tides.

OHIO BIRD-WATCHER

DEAR BIRD-WATCHER: Possibly. But it could create another problem: The sound of running water or ocean tides may find "Ready" groping his way to the bathroom all night.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: The person who is annoyed by the early morning mockingbird serenades should wear earplugs. To most of us, this marvelous songster has a repertoire that rivals having an orchestra seat at the Met.

Maybe that Anaheim grouch would be helped by a couple of highballs made with that new Mexican drink, "Tequila Mockingbird."

FRANZ W. ZEISKE, BELLVILLE, TEXAS

DEAR ABBY: I am the mother of a beautiful 7-year-old daughter. Just before her fifth birthday, I started using underarm deodorant on her because she perspired like a grown woman, and the odor was unbearable.

Now we have another problem. I noticed that her breasts looked swollen. I felt them and asked her if they hurt, and she said yes, so I had to accept the fact that this was the beginning stage of breast development. I took her to a pediatrician who said she looked "normal" and there was nothing to worry about. Abby, at 7? I am about to have a nervous breakdown.

I am so afraid our little girl will become a fully developed woman too soon. She is only a baby in the first grade and she doesn't know anything about life. I often cry, worrying that the other children will start teasing her as soon as it becomes noticeable.

Please help me. Is there any way to stop this early development without hurting her?

DESPERATE MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: You don't say whether you live on a farm, a ranch or in a large city where you have access to a wide range of medical services. Your child should be seen by a competent endocrinologist who can explain exactly what is happening and how it should be handled, psychologically as well as medically.

Please send me your name and address, and I will refer you to the best help available near you. Please don't panic. While this is an unusual case, it is not unheard of.

DEAR ABBY: I have friends I'll call Dr. and Mrs. Johnson. I've always considered them very good friends, but now I have my doubts.

Last week I had a very nice write-up in the local newspaper. Today, while I was delivering some vegetables from my garden to her, Mrs. Johnson showed me their new litter of puppies, and lo and behold, there was my picture on the floor of the kennel with dog litter deposited on my face!

Should I be hurt?

CONFUSED IN CLARKSTON, WASH.

DEAR CONFUSED: Don't let it bother you. I'm sure my picture has been on the bottom of a lot of bird cages, and it doesn't offend me one bit.

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, creator of fiction's most famous detective, Sherlock Holmes, was born in 1857. The adventures of Holmes and his companion, Dr. Watson, as they pursued the dreaded Moriarty and other Victorian criminals have been the basis for more than 100 films. Doyle died in 1930.

Help From Government

Out in the state of Washington, American Express Co., a creditor of Washington Public Power Co., has come up with a plan to help the power company pay off its $2.25 billion debt.

The Wall Street Journal reported that Shearson American Express Inc. presented the plan at a meeting of 88 utilities which have contracts with the supply systems and are liable for the $2.25 billion in bonds that were sold to finance two nuclear-power plants which have since been canceled.

All the company has to do is borrow some $1.5 billion from the federal government at around 7 percent interest, and then invest the money at a considerably higher rate of interest. The proceeds would be used to pay off the debt.

Is the federal government willing to do this? Well, no, but if Shearson becomes the utilities financial consultant it will attempt to sell the government the plan.

And why would the government even be interested in such a thing? Well, the officials say because all alternative plans are worse. "This is our idea of the most equitable resolution of a situation where there are enormous numbers of problems.

We wish Washington Public Power Co. the best in solving all its problems. And if it succeeds in selling the federal government on this plan, we hope such funds are made available to everybody. We have lots of places we would like to put money like that.

Andrews Has Responsibility

Rep. Ike Andrews has asked the public's forgive ness following his arrest over the weekend on driving under the influence and other charges.

Rep. Andrews at a press conference admitted he had some rum, but not to violating the DUI laws.

For Andrews, the problems couldn't have come at a worse time, with the election only a month away.

There was some sentiment for his withdrawal as a candidate for the Congressional seat he holds, but the State Democratic Party decided to back his continued candidacy.

Rep. Andrews guilt or innocence must be determined by the courts, but he did fail to take the Breathalyzer test which would have told us whether or not he was legally intoxicated. He has not set a good public example in this or previous driving violation situations and he must bear the full responsibility for all that.

DOESN'T SEEM QUITE SPORTING!

Under That Cover Story

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Contrary to denials from the White House, the decision that President Reagan will not come to New York to boost Lewis Lehrman's Republican campaign for. governor was made by the Lehrman high command.

The key topic of the post-primary Lehrman strategy session was how to combat efforts by Lt. Gov. Mario Cuomo, surprise winner of the Democratic primary over New York City Mayor Ed Koch, to tie Reaganomics to Lehrman. With unemployment rising and the president's popularity dropping in New York, it was decided that a flying visit by Reagan was not needed.

The cover story was for both the White House and the Lehrman campaign to say the decision was made by the president's men. When White House chief of staff James Baker went to New York last week to raise funds for Lehrman (a personal friend of long standing), he declared Reagan would not be coming to New York to campaign in the governor's race because Lehrman can win without his help.

Glenn And The Gays

The biggest Democrat who did not officially endorse the Sept. 29 fund-raising dinner for the homosexual movement at Manhattan's Waldorf-Astoria Hotel was Sen. John Glenn, adding more doubts about his ability to amass a coalition for the 1984 presidential nomination.

Glenn's principal rival for second place in the early running, former vice president Walter F. Mondale, was the gay rights dinner's keynote speaker. The front-runner, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, endorsed the dinner, as did Sen. Alan Cranston. The endorsers included such big-name non-presidential candidates as Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, Mayor Kevin White of Boston, Mayor Donald Fraser of Minneapolis and Mayor Andrew Young of Atlanta.

Glenn aide William White told us there was no record that the senator's endorsement had been requested, but suggested the answer might have been no. Although the homosexual movement now seems part of the Democratic coalition, White said Glenn was against lending his name to "single-issue" causes.

Who's GOP Leader?

As the mid-term election campaign nears its climax, a peculiar struggle is being fought out over whether Richard Richards will be permitted to serve out his four-year term as Republican national chairman.

Senior White House staffers have decreed that whatever the outcome Nov. 2, Richards must go and be replaced by the more dynamic Secretary of Transportation Drew Lewis. But Richards is fighting hard for his job and may save it, as he did under similar White House assault last year. Unless President Reagan specifically asks Richards to leave, there is no sign he will quit.

Lewis says he has no desire for the national chairmanship but would accept it if asked by the president. Presidential chief of staff James Baker is believed to want Lewis' strong hand at the national committee whether or not Reagan seeks reelection. If Reagan does not run, Lewis as national chairman would be a prime choice to be running mate on a ticket headed by Vice President George Bush.

Bush Vs. Kemp

Vice President George Bush gained ground on the right wing of the Republican Party, helping to force the balanced-budget constitutional amendment out of the House Judiciary Committee by pumping the telephone for the last 18 names on the discharge petition — a list that included Rep. Jack Kemp, normally the champion of the right.

The final 12 signers gathered in Bush's Capitol Hill office to march together (under the leadership of Oklahoma's Rep. Mickey Edwards, chairman of the American Conservative Union) to sign the petition, foreclosing Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill from peeling other names off it. Kemp was not among the marchers, agreeing reluctantly to sign the petition, but only by himself.

Kemp finally yielded to arguments by his close friend, House Republican whip Trent Lott, to sign so that the House could work its will. But he still opposes the amendment on grounds it will lead to higher taxee.

Feuding GOP Senators

With the quiet blessing of the White House, Sen. Richard Lugar of Indiana is challenging anti-Reagan Sen. Robert Packwood of Oregon for the Senate Republican campaign chairmanship — a move hastened by Packwood's own tactics.

Lugar had been planning the race for some time but did not want to announce it until after his expected reelection to the Senate Nov. 2. So, when Packwood telephoned Lugar to ask his support for reelection to a third term as campaign committee chairman (as he had on his previous two terms), Lugar said he was not quite ready.

Accordingly, Lugar was not

Hint Retaliation

RALEIGH — Lingering disappointment over the outcome of the 2nd Congressional District Democratic primary this year and questions over why Warren County was chosen for the state's PCB dump apparently have Gov. Jim Hunt in trouble with some black leaders in the state.

A half-dozen black leaders from the 2nd District and from Raleigh say privately that blacks may demonstrate their displeasure with Hunt at the polls next month.

In the 2nd District primary between Tim Valentine, a white, and Mickey Michaux, a black, Hunt pledged neutrality. Michaux won the first primary but Valentine forced a runoff which he then won. Although they admit that they have little evidence to support their claims, some blacks say Hunt's key political operatives in the district worked for Valentine. For example, in the Wilson precinct of Betty McCain — Hunt's 1980 campaign chairmwoman — Michaux got only a handful of votes.

Other black leaders criticize Hunt for remaining neutral. Given the great support blacks have shown for Hunt and the Democratic Party and given the state's failure to elect a black congressman in this century, Hunt should have sided with Michaux. Hunt couldn't publicly endorse Michaux but he could have out his organization to work for Michaux, a Durham black leader said.

Michaux's loss was the main topic of discussion when a number of black political leaders from across the state assembled in Winston-Salem last month, one Raleigh black said. "The aspirations and hopes of people around the state were affected by this," one of them said. "He not only would have represented the 2nd District, he would have represented all blacks in the state."

PAUL T. O'CONNOR

Hunt's troubles with blacks in the district got worse in mid-September when the state began filling its Warren County dump with PCB-ladened soil. "The perception is that that county was selected not lony for its soil and geographic reference to where the spills were but also because its a small county, one of the poorest counties, there's high unemployment and it's majority black," the black spokesman said.

Hunt has said repeatedly that the Warren County site was chosen on its merits and that he was neutral in the congressional primary. A top aide says, Hunt has caught flak from Valentine supporters who feel he haloed Michaux during the campaign. Some Valentine supporters have even questioned Hunt's efforts to help Michaux pay off his debt.

Is Jim Hunt in danger of losing his black support? Probrably not, the complaining blacks say. Although Hunt has done little to correct the situation, he's too good a politician to allow things to continue to worsen, they say.

There is talk of trying to get Hunt's attention. "The problem is that we have been playing Democratic politics instead of playing politics,"

That Takeover Battle

It isn't easy to explain what happened in the bloody takeover battle involving four giant conglomerates, Bendix, Martin Marietta, United Technologies and Allied Corp.

One fine day some months back, Charlie Bendix, flush with cash, was taking a stroll down Takeover Lane, when he stopped in front of Marty Marietta's house.

"Nice home you got there," Charlie said to Marty, who was out mowing his lawn. "How much you want for it?"

Marty said, "Buzz off, Charlie. My house is not for sale."

"I happen to know your relatives would sell it in a minute if the price was right. If you won't turn it over to me in a friendly manner, I'll make them an offer they can't refuse."

"Oh yeh, wise guy," Marty said. "If you try to buy my house, I'll buy your house. How do you like that?"

Charlie laughed at him because he knew Marty didn't have the money to buy the Bendix house.

The next day Charlie ran an ad in the newspaper saying he would pay twice as much for Marty's house as it was worth.

Marty ran an ad the following morning saying he would buy out anyone who had an interest in Charlie's house.

ART BUCHWALD

The price on both houses went soaring, and Charlie and Marty had to go to the banks to borrow large sums of money to try to purchase each other's homes.

Charlie had done a lot of homework, and he knew in a real estate war he could outlast Marty.

His information was correct, up to a point.

Marty had a pal named Hugh Nighted, who loved to dabble in real estate, and anything else that caught his eye. Marty went to Hugh and said, "Charlie Bendix is trying to buy my house and to defend myself I'm trying to buy his house. Right now he's got me against the wall because I don't have enough money to swing my end of the deal."

"Tell you what I'll do," Hugh said. "I'll buy Charlie's house with you. All I want is the kitchen, one bathroom and the living room. You can have the basement and the upper floor. We'll split the dining room between us."

Marty was relieved because with Hugh's backing he now had a chance to save his own house.

When it was announced that Hugh Nighted was behind Marty, Charlie Bendix should have backed out of the deal. But Charlie was a proud man and he didn't want everyone in the neighborhood saying he didn't know how to buy another guy's house. So Charlie upped the ante again for Marty's place, and before long both Marty's and Charlie's homes had the most inflated real estate prices ever seen on Takeover Lane.

For a while it looked as if Charlie would wind up owning Marty's house and Marty would wind up owning Charlie's house at 10 times what each had paid for them.

At this point, an acquaintance of Charlie's, named Al Eyed, came to Bendix and

To the editor:

Feelings run high over registration for a possible military draft. It is a religious issue — explicitly for Enten Eller, but equally so for those who insist on registration.

Why is it so essential that every American man should file a particular form when he turns 18? Failure to do so hurts no one. The information is available. In the cases now going through the courts, the men have supplied their names and addesses. Most would be granted conscientious objector status in a draft. Why are they subject to a possible $10,000 fine and five years in jail?

I suggest this answer: Everyone must recognize the government's right to demand a particular kind of service. The god who stands over this nation in the pledge of allegiance has become a god of war. Every young man is required to do homage to that god by filing the form.

The refusers understand this. They are in the tradition of the biblical Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego, who refused to worship Nebuchadnezzar's golden image.

I don't want to take anything away from those who obey the law when I note that, if a man is concerned merely with his own safety and well being, registration is the percentage play. There may never be a draft. If there is, he may not be selected. And even if he is, he may escape unscathed to enjoy his veteran's benefits.

The refusers, on the other hand, have met the issue head on. They have not waited for a war to begin. I believe they are rendering the most important possible national service by refusing to worship the god of war.

Strength For Today

THAT INNER KNOWLEDGE

We often use the expression, "The Kingdom of God".

What is the kingdom of God? The kingdom of God is the rule of God, but it is a concept so immense that even Jesus himself did not try to define it or explain it in any single declaration. Jesus broke up the idea, so to speak, into little understandable parts and presented the different aspects of the kingdom by what are known as parables.

He said that the kingdom of heaven was like leaven in a lump of dough; like seed cast upon different kinds of soil; like a grain of mustard seed. He also declared that the kingdom was like a treasure hidden in a field, or like a pearl of great price.

We must always remember that the kingdom of God is as unseen as God Himself. It is simply the rule of God in people's hearts. It grows by power inherent in the universe. It is in heaven and it is on earth. But more important, it is in our very hearts. — Elisha Douglass

Tougher At The Top For Young

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — William M. Agee, 44, holder of a master's in business from Harvard, chief of a multibillion dollar corporation, wealthy while young enough to enjoy it, admired by many, nevertheless has a severe handicap.

Agee, the chairman of Bendix Corp., who began one of the biggest corporate brawls of all time when he sought to acquire the Martin-Marietta Corp. and found his own company acquired by Allied Corp., is an early arrival.

Early arrivals, says Prof. Eugene E. Jennings, are executives who rise to positions of responsibility in advance of their age group, often with gaps in their experience and lacking the polish and wisdom that comes with years.

They often blunder, says Jennings, "and they seldom learn from their mistakes." Eventually, he says, they go into smaller companies or set up their own businesses where they can live and produce with their egos intact.

"It is no act of genius on my part to place my bets on a person like Wyman at CBS (Thomas H. Wyman, CBS chairman, who earned considerable operating experience with Nestles, Polaroid, Green Giant and Pillsbury) and to withhold my bets from Agee of Bendix," he said. Agee, he predicts, will leave Bendix.

In three decades of research, Jennings has found the turnover rate among early arrivals in the position of corporate president, that is, age 40 years or under, is nearly three times that of those who arrive at age 50 years or older.

One of the missing ingredients in their experience is operational management, said Jennings, who, as confidential adviser to corporation chairmen and presidents has a rare perch from which to observe the business scene.

"At least 50 percent of those early arrivals who are fired at the top, or who leave under less than auspicious circumstances, have come up through staff positions and never had to cut teeth on operational management," he said.

Such people are suddenly given operating management authority, he said, "but they have not been seasoned in the emotional caldron of sticky authority relationships above and below them, and so are emotionally immature."

Jennings, professor of business at Michigan State University and author of many books on corporations and their management, observes that early-arrival presidents always demonstrate a vast intellectual superiority which becomes the basis for their promotions to the highest levels.

In turn, he said, this rapid mobility "creates an expectation in early arrivals that they will be as good as their trainee records, which is a fancy way of saying they get very big egos."

A big ego, says Jennings, who is also trained as a psychologist, "makes it very difficult for the early arrival to deal with authority relationships, and creates an arrogance that alienates him from those who could or would help."

Almost invariably, he continues, support is then withdrawn at the highest places, referring to the recent resignation of four Bendix directors and the earlier departure, last fall, of four others.

Should the board members spot in time the imbalance between intelligence and experience, Jennings believes, they can protect the inexperienced executive from his tendency to blunder. But, he remarked, boards often fail to appreciate the dangers until the individual has grabbed authority and is more interested in removing them instead of heeding their wise counsel.

According to Jennings, the early arrival who serves longest and best generally does so under any of three situations:

—Before reaching the ultimate authority he has a strong sponsor who also serves as a good coach, and who lets out the reins of authority only as the early arrival progresses.

—He has a strong board that carefully controls and guides him.

—The company he serves has a strong tradition, and clear-cut policies and practices from which the early arrival cannot deviate far.

As Jennings analyzes the case of William Agee, the young executive was being seasoned by his predecessor, Michael Blumenthal, but Blumenthal left to become Treasury Secretary under President Jimmy Carter. By the time Blumenthal was ready to leave Washington Agee already had assumed the role of chairman.

He predicts now that Agee will move to a smaller company or one of his own making, "for he shall not be able to make the emotional commitment to survive under the wise but heavy hand of Edward L. Hennessy, Jr. (Allied chairman), a powerful board that won't resign from its responsibilities, and the strong policies and practices of Allied, one of the finest run corporations in America."

But, says Jennings, if Agee follows the pattern of other intelligent early arrivals, he will succeed and make a strong contribution "on his own terms and with his ego intact."

Andrews Is Resuming Re-Election Campaign

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Rep. Ike Andrews, D-N.C., facing drunken-driving charges, said he wil continue to run for re-election to the 4th Congresional District, and vowed to wage a vigorous campaign against Republican challenger Bill Cobey.

"I think it will be more offensive than defensive, but it will not include any attacks on Mr. Cobey in personal manner," he said in an interview with The Associated Press Tuesday.

Cobey, meanwhile, was scheduled today to get a visit Vice President George Bush. He was scheduled to visit Raleigh to campaign for Cobey, along with campaign stops for 5th District GOP challenger Anne Bagnal and 11th District GOP Rep. William Hendon.

Andrews scheduled no personal appearances but said he was preparing to launch an offensive to counter political accusations raised against him by Cobey.

"I want to get on the attack, but I want it to be in a very factual way," he said.

Andrews decided he would stay in the election race after meeting with state and district party chairmen Monday night. In a closed meeting, Democrats decided to continue their support of Andrews, despite his arrest Saturday night by Raleigh police.

Andrews was stopped on the Raleigh Beltline and charged with driving under the influence of alcohol, speeding, failure to stop for a blue light and siren and illegal transportation of liquor. He refused to take a police Breathalyzer test but later took a blood-alcohol test at the request of his lawyer. Results of that test have not been made public.

Though Andrews has admitted drinking some rum while driving that night, he said he does not think he was intoxicated whe police stopped him.

Andrews said he will continue his campaign with an emphasis on Cobey advertisements that deal "with some of the issues and statements he's made about me."

Some television ads run by the Cobey camp have accused Andrews of failing to support a balanced budget. An unidentified GOP official said the Cobey campaign pulled off the air some of its ads criticizing Andrews for earlier troubles with his congressional expense account and automobile leasing. An earlier ad, quoting Democrats supporting Cobey and stressing his character, appeared in their place.

Tom Fetzer, Cobey's campaign manager, said the changes were not made because of Andrews' arrest. "We have not made any changes in TV that had not already been decided," he said.

Cobey continued Tuesday to say little of Andrews' arrest. "I just really want to be sensitive," he said. "It's an unfortunate thing. I'm sorry it happened. I don't know how it'll impact this campaign."

at all pleased when word came back from several fellow senators that Packwood was telling them that Lugar would not run. He immediately sent out a letter to all Republicans urging them to "withhold committing yourself to any candidate" until after Nov. 2. President Reagan's men at the White House could hardly constrain themselves from cheering.

One black said the feeling could spill over into the 4th Congressional District where blacks are already dissastisfied with Rep. Ike Andrews. It would be no great loss to blacks if either Andrews or Valentine lost, they feel. And if a black boycott could be held responsible for the loss of either, it would make a point with the governor before his 1984 Senate race against Jesse Helms. It would make Hunt and the Democrats realize they've got to earn black support. They can't take it for granted.

"So does Marty Marietta and Hugh Nighted," Charley said.

"The only difference," Al said, "is if I buy it, I'll let you live in it for a while. If those guys buy it they'll kick your tail out in the gutter."

Charlie Bendix was in tears. "All I tried to do was buy Marty's house, and now I have to sell mine. Is that fair?"

"It's dog eat dog on Takeover Lane. If it will make you feel any better, Marty almost went broke trying to stop you from buying his home. He'll be in debt for 10 years. Well, do you and I have a deal?"

"What choice do I have?"

"None. So just sign here. By the way, what are you going to tell your wife?" Al asked.

"I don't have to tell her anything," Charlie replied. "It was her idea in the first place."

one black member of Hunt's administration said.

Blacks in the 2nd District might not vote for Valentine. It's unlikely that they'd swing to Republican Jack Marin but their absence in the polls — where they'd be expected to vote 90 or 95 percent Democratic — would be felt.

Double Protection?

If U.S. health officials have their way, soon no one will suffer the red rash and fever of measles again. Four years ago scientists set this month as the culmination of a drive to eradicate measles from this country. It may take longer but the benefits could be far-reaching. Though measles are only a temporary discomfort for most, about 10% of all cases result in complications that range from ear infections to brain damage. Perhaps most intriguing of all is the theory that measles could be a factor in causing multiple sclerosis. If so, a measles vaccine could be a vaccine for MS too. Doctors won't know for sure until this generation of vaccinated children reaches young adulthood — the age when MS usually strikes.

DO YOU KNOW — TRUE or FALSE: A vaccine is now available for mumps.

TUESDAY'S ANSWER — The griffin was a mythical beast that was part eagle and part lion.

Kennesaw Goes About Business With Gun Law

By ROBERT BYRD
Associated Press Writer

KENNESAW, Ga. (AP) — A 6-month-old law requiring gun ownership by residents of this "controversial but safe" suburb is scaring off the crooks, the mayor says.

Crime is down, the legal skirmishes have stopped and people are finding better things to talk about in the six months since the law requiring each household to own a gun and ammunition was passed March 15, town officials say.

Even the American Civil Liberties Union is satisfied, because exemptions are allowed for conscientious objectors.

The town of 5,400 people made news when it passed the ordinance, which came in response to a handgun ban passed in Morton Grove, Ill. The law took effect June 1.

Kennesaw has had no armed robberies this year, compared with seven in 1981, Ruble said. It had two home burglaries between March 15 and Sept. 1, compared to 42 in the same period last year, he said.

"We attribute this to the deterrent effect of the gun law," said Mayor Darvin Purdy, an outspoken supporter of the law. "We tried to figure any other variables that have changed since then, and we found none."

Passage of the law was followed by exchanges of legal firepower. The ACLU shot back with a lawsuit that both parties eventually agreed to dismiss.

Before the matter went to court, the law was fine-tuned to exempt anyone with a "conscientious objection" to it, explained Gene Guerrero, director of the ACLU of Georgia.

"Our concern was coercion against an individual who didn't want to have a gun in their home," Guerrero said. "That's over with. The law was changed to do what we sought all along ... people in Kennesaw know that they don't have to have a gun if they don't want to."

The gun law carries no enforcement provisions of its own, but as a misdemeanor under the city code, could bring violators a fine of up to $200 and 60 days in jail.

Richard Butler, a Kennesaw TV repairman, challenged the law, but U.S. District Judge Owen Forrester scrapped the suit when both sides agreed Butler had conscientious objections to having a gun in his house — and so was exempt.

Another suit to kill the ordinance would be pointless, Guerrero said.

"You have to have a reason for being in court, and that's difficult to do if there is no real danger at all for anyone being prosecuted under the ordinance," he said.

The law was a boon to souvenir sellers in Kennesaw, which is near the site of the Civil War's Battle of Kennesaw Mountain and has a small tourist trade.

One shop owner, Dent "Wildman" Myers, took to packing a .357-caliber Magnum on his left hip and a .44-caliber "Son of Sam Special" on his right. Over his cash register was a sign: "All shoplifters will be shot regardless of race, creed, religion or national origin."

Another souvenir shop did well with a poster showing a handgun and the legend: "Never Mind The Dog. Beware Of Owner." A T-shirt popular in town carried the words, "Kennesaw — Controversial But Safe."

After the law was publicized, the town began receiving money and spare guns from sympathizers around the country.

The town still gets occasional donations from gun buffs who support the ordinance, Purdy said. The money, about $10,000 so far, was used to defray legal costs in the fight with the ACLU.

Donations also have gone to support city gun safety classes, which were "pretty regular" around the time the law took effect but now take place only about once a month, the mayor said.

Gifts of pistols to the town have stopped. The few weapons that came in were used in the gun classes, and the city plans to give them to poor people when the safety program ends, Purdy said.

Polls have shown residents are split in their views of the law. Purdy said they just don't talk about it much anymore, "only occasionally when news people come around to remind them of it."

Attention has focused more on baseball and the possibility of a World Series in Atlanta, 20 miles to the south, Ruble said.

"Yeah, we're more interested in the Braves," who face the St. Louis Cardinals for the National League pennant this week, he added.

Betty Speir To Address Nurses

Betty Speir, vice chairman of the state Democratic Party and a member of the State Board of Education, will be the guest speaker of the North Carolina Nurses Association Oct. 12 at the Willis Building in Greenville.

She will talk about political awareness for nurses.

Registration begins at 6:30 p.m., with the meeting starting at 7 p.m. The meeting is open to nurses and interested persons. Non-members will be asked to pay a $2 registrastion fee. For further information, call Martha Engelke, 757-6061.

State High Court Rules On Evidence, Testimony Process

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The North Carolina Supreme Court has ruled that the parents of a minor child may be held responsible for damages resulting from that child's misdeeds if the parents knew the child was potentially harmful to others but failed to control their child.

The court ruled Tuesday in a case arising from a personal injury lawsuit filed by a Chapel Hill woman. She was raped by a Chapel Hill youth in June 1978, and the woman sued the boy and his parents. She contended that the parents were negligent because the youth was under the influence of drugs when he broke into her home, threatened her and repeatedly raped her.

The justices ruled unanimously that situations do exist when parents should be held responsible for what their children do.

Justice Burley B. Mitchell Jr. wrote for the court that parents cannot always be held accountable, but "a parent who knows or should know of the dangerous propensities of his child may be held liable" in some cases.

The court held that the parents were not liable for damages because there was little they could do "short of physically restraining" their son.

In other rulings, the high court overturned a 26-year-old precedent against using illegally obtained evidence in hearings to consider revoking probation, urged the Legislature to clarify a sex offense and adopted a standard for determining whether a court-appointed lawyer provided adequate counsel.

The evidence ruling came in the case of Dennis Lombardo, who was convicted in August 1979 in Hyde Superior Court on felony charges of selling and delivering marijuana. Fifteen days after his conviction, Lombardo was stopped at a Florida airport and officials seized a quantity of drugs from a suitcase.

State officials tried to revoke Lombardo's probation but he said that police illegally seized his baggage claim ticket and checked his luggage for drugs. He asked that the evidence not be admitted in court and a state judge agreed. That ruling was overruled by the state Court of Appeals.

The high court ruled that laws excluding such evidence should not be applied in probation hearings. The court ruled 26 years ago that such exclusions should be followed in all criminal cases.

In other rulings:

— In the Mecklenburg County case of Henry Weaver, the court adopted a standard for determining whether a court-appointed attorney performed adequately.

Weaver had appealed his first-degree rape conviction and life prison sentence saying that he was denied effective counsel. The high court disagreed and upheld the conviction.

But the court cited McMann versus Richardson, a case that went before the U.S. Supreme Court, which concluded that adequate counsel was performance "within the range of competence demanded of attorneys in criminal cases."

— The court said the state's rape shield law does not prevent attorneys from questioning victims about conflicting statements that may concern sexual activity. The justices said the questioning should reflect on the witness's credibility, not her virtue.

— The court also stopped judgment in a case involving Gene McGaha, who was charged in Scotland County with committing a sexual offense against a girl who was 12 years and eight months old. The court ruled that the law affects girls 12 years and younger. The court criticized the law for being vague.

Bank Robbery Suspect Held

MORGANTON, N.C. (AP) — A North Carolina National Bank branch was robbed shortly before noon Tuesday, with police apprehending a suspect about 90 minutes later, authorities said.

The Quaker Meadows Branch was robbed at 11:23 a.m. police said. However, they refused to identify the suspect who was apprehended in the western portion of Burke County.

Police said the robber entered the bank at about 11: 20 a.m. armed with a hand gun and demanded money. He then drove away, no one was injured in the robbery and no shots were fired, according to police.

Investigator Johnny Wehunt of the Morganton Police Department would not release details about the robbery, saying an undetermined amount of money was taken.

Mattingly To Command Flight

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Astronaut Thomas K. Mattingly will command the first space shuttle mission entirely devoted to secret Department of Defense work, NASA says.

The mission is scheduled to blast off from the Kennedy Space Center in late 1983, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration said Tuesday.

Mattingly, who flew on the Apollo 16 lunar mission, was commander of the space shuttle's fourth voyage.

With him on the shuttle flight will be astronauts Loren J. Shriver, as pilot, and mission specialists Ellison S. Onizuka and James F. Buchli.

Tamper-Resistant Drug Packaging Being Studied

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The drug industry and federal health officials are searching for ways to prevent tampering with over-the-counter drugs, but they say it will never be possible to provide absolute protection against sabotage.

Dr. Arthur Hull Hayes Jr., head of the Food and Drug Administration, said all consumers should be more wary about the medicines they take following the seven deaths from cyanide-tainted Tylenol capsules in the Chicago area last week.

Hayes said the FDA "will begin work to develop a federal requirement for tamper-resistant packaging." But he said, "I don't think for this sort of problem there is any quick fix."

"Consumers must also act to protect themselves from injury by being aware of the conditions of the packages they buy, the pills and capsules they take and the liquids they drink," Hayes told a news conference after the first meeting of a government-industry Joint Committee on Product Safety.

James D. Cope, the president of the Proprietary Association, a trade group of over-the-counter drug makers, echoed Hayes' advice that the buyer must beware.

"As a consumer, I would be very cautious in the coming days and months. I would look at everything I ingest," said Cope, who is chairman of the product safety panel. "If it looks suspicious, or smells suspicious, I would be suspicious."

Hayes said one of the Chicago victims died after swallowing a tainted Extra-Strength Tylenol capsule that had been placed with six other poisoned Extra-Strength capsules in a bottle of regular Tylenol.

"A tamper-proof package is not possible ... " said Hayes. "Neither the FDA nor the industry can guarantee protection against a single individual bent on committing such a terrible act as that we have witnessed in Chicago."

"The malicious mind can also be a clever mind," Hayes said.

Hayes also expressed concern that the nation may be exposed to attempts to imitate the Chicago killer.

Noting the discovery of Tylenol capsules laced with strychnine in Oroville, Calif., he said, "Quite honestly, I'm not sure it's terribly different from the first hijacking. You wonder who's going to think of it next?"

Cope criticized Cook County, Ill., for passing new packaging rules for non-prescription drugs.

"We ask for restraint on the part of local officials," he said. "This industry is hard at work on this problem and we believe that a sense of perspective and balance should be maintained."

Experts from industry and government will meet Thursday to develop standards for tamper-resistant packaging. They will report to the Proprietary Association's board of directors in New York on Oct. 14.

Both Hayes and Cope said the industry may need time to obtain new packaging materials for its products.

They said that seals underneath bottle caps, new seals outside the bottle cap, and so-called blister packs — pills on a cardboard sheet covered by plastic — are all possible ways to safeguard the drugs.

Meanwhile, Rep. Edward R. Madigan, R-Ill., said he will introduce legislation when Congress reconvenes late next month that would require the sealing of over-the-counter drugs.

Madigan's proposal would make it illegal to sell non-prescription drugs unless they were sealed and carried this statement: "WARNING: This container has been sealed. If the seal is broken, return to the place of purchase."

Job Freezes For CP&L

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Job freezes and construction delays are ahead for Carolina Power and Light Co. until further notice, the president of the Raleigh-based utility says.

In a letter to company supervisors Oct 1, CP&L president Sherwood H. Smith Jr. said that seven cutbacks have to be implemented in light of the N.C. Utilities Commission's recent decision to grant the utility only about 5 percent of a $160.5 million rate increase request.

The seven cost-cutting measures are:

— An immediate hiring freeze, including all but "certain nuclear and other essential personnel."

— Moving from 1985 to 1986 the date of service for Harris Nuclear Unit 1 in Wake County.

— Postponing construction on Harris Unit 2 at least one year, meaning the company will budget no funds to build the unit next year.

— Mayo Unit 2, under construction near Roxboro and scheduled for service in 1991, probably will be rescheduled.

— Reviewing other elements of the construction budget later this fall with final decisions to be made in December.

— Reducing expenditures in every department immediately. The letter calls for reductions in "personnel, travel, outside services and materials. Zero-based budgets are to be prepared for the year 1983."

"Restrictive regulation commission actions in limiting the company's ability to recover higher costs through rates" have made it necessary to put the cost-cutting measures into effect, Smith said.

DECREE EXTENDED

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — A state of emergency decree imposed hours after President Anwar Sadat was slain by Moslem fanatics last Oct. 6 has been extended for one year by Egypt's Parliament.

RAPS NICARAGUA

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — Thomas O. Enders, assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs, accused Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista regime of "propagating violence in Costa Rica and Honduras" while training leftist guerrillas to seize power in El Salvador.

Seven Solicitation Requests Approved

Police Chief Glenn Cannon announced the approval of seven requests for solicitation permits in Greenville.

Cannon said the requests were submitted by: the Friends of Kidney Patients group to conduct a bake sale and yard sale on Oct. 9 to raise funds which will be used for emergency needs of kidney patients; the United Revival Prayer Center to conduct a door-to-door and merchant solicitation Oct. 1 through Dec. 31 to raise money for the building fund;

The Pinochle Bugs Social and Civic Club to conduct a merchant-industry solicitation during October, November and December to obtain advertisements to be placed in a souvenir booklet for the Pinochle Conclave in Greenville, scheduled for April 22-24; the M. House-F. Jacobson campaign to conduct a door-to-door solicitation Oct. 2-16 to advertise write-in candidates for the November elections;

G.R. Whitfield School to conduct a merchant solicitation Sept. 28 through Oct. 29 to solicit small gifts and door prizes to be given away at the school's annual Halloween Carnival; Mount Calvary Christian Academy to conduct a merchant solicitation Sept. 28 through Oct. 29 to solicit gifts to be auctioned at the fall festival to raise funds for the academy; and by the Pitt County Council on Alcoholism to conduct a sidewalk solicitation during October, November and December to increase involvement and support of the council.

Help Neighbors

Greenville Police Chief Glenn Cannon today said the number of home break-ins might be reduced if local area residents would report any unusual activity at neighboring houses.

Cannon said the number of house break-ins has been on the increase, and suggested that, if people would call the police department when they see strangers around a neighbor's house, officers would be sent to investigate.

The chief said residents should lock their homes — both doors and windows — when they leave their houses. "Unlocked doors and windows make it easy for thieves to enter and serve as an invitation to robbers," he said.

Cannon also suggested that when people will be away from their homes for several days, they should tell their neighbors and have their neighbors check their houses occasionally to make sure everything is in order.

"Police officers can't be everywhere at once," Cannon said. "We need the help and assistance of the general public to combat break-ins and other crimes."

Fire-Rescue Dept. Is Visiting Schools

The Greenville Fire-Rescue Department, in connection with it's observance of Fire Prevention Week, is visiting all elementary schools and day care centers in the city to display fire and rescue equipment and hold fire drills.

In addition, fire and rescue units will be at Carolina East Mall today, Pitt Plaza Thursday and Greenville Square Friday from 7 p.m. until 9 p.m. A highlight of the visits to the shopping centers will be demonstrations of the department's 85-foot snorkle, Chief Jenness Allen said.

Allen said the visits to the schools, day care centers and the shopping centers are deisgned to make the public more aware of fire safety in their homes and places of work.

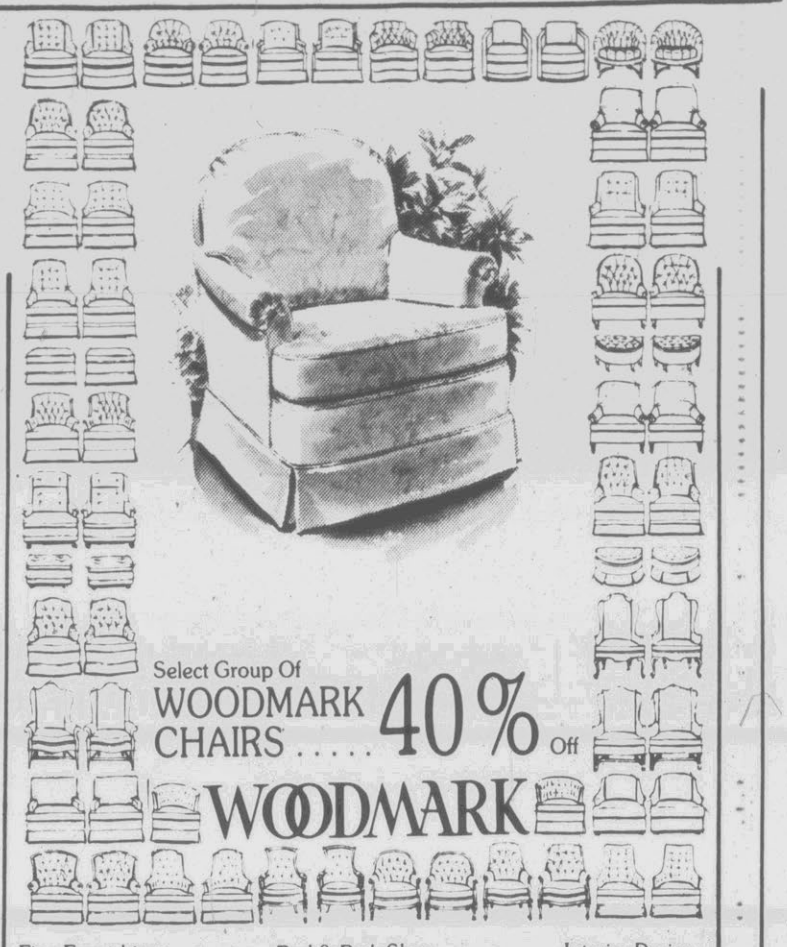

Allen noted that the fire-rescue department in conjunction with the Greenville Moose Lodge will provide window stickers to be placed on bedroom windows of the handicapped, senior citizens and children. The free stickers let fire-rescue personnel know where people might be in the event of a fire.

The stickers may be picked up at the main fire station at the intersection of Fifth and Greene streets, Allen noted.

COUNCIL ON AGING

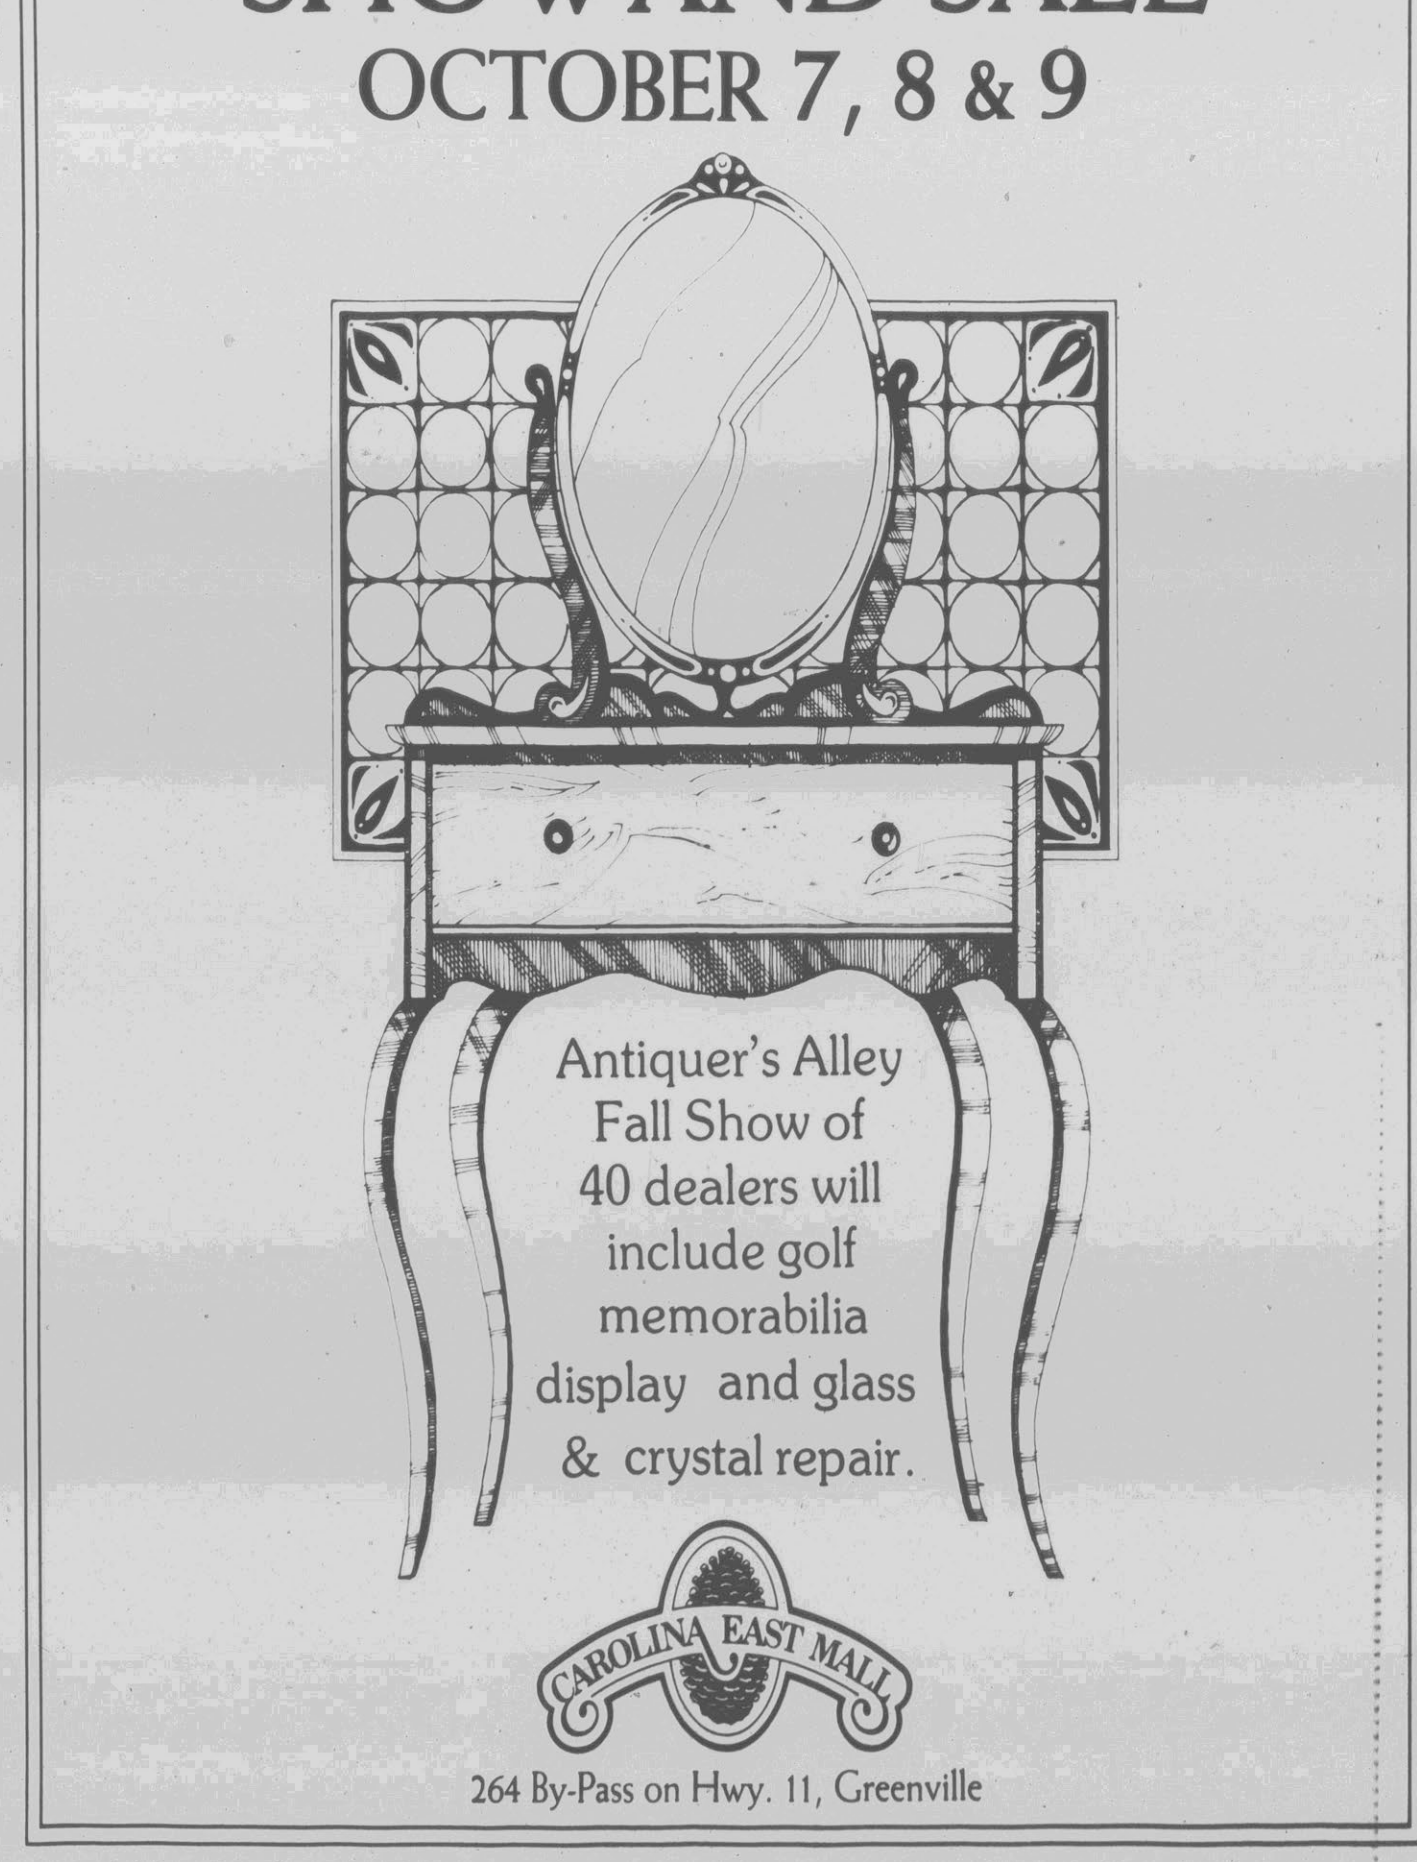

The Pitt County Council on Aging will hold its annual meeting Tuesday at 2 p.m. in the Council's offices at 1717 W. Fifth St. Elections wil be held to fill vacancies on the board of directors.

Poor Year For Automakers

By ANN JOB WOOLLEY
Associated Press Writer

DETROIT (AP) — Domestic automakers wrapped up a dismal 1982 model year with sales at their lowest level in 21 years, and analysts blamed it on the economy — not the cars.

The five major U.S. car companies said Tuesday they sold 5,543,006 cars from last October to the end of September, the traditional model year period. The sales were off 15.9 percent from last year's already-depressed level of 6,590,017.

U.S. car sales were down in the month of September as well — by 5.8 percent.

Overall, it was the lowest model year sales since 1961, when 5,491,600 vehicles were sold.

"Primarily, it was the economy," said David Healy, analyst at Drexel, Burnham Lambert Inc. in New York. "There was a very weak trend in real income strength but interest rates and unemployment rates remained high."

Healy noted "there was pretty much a wide selection" of cars — for consumers who chose to buy.

John Hammond, analyst at Data Resources Inc. in Lexington, Mass., said compact car sales were the big disappointment. Consumers preferred large cars and high-performance models as gasoline prices dropped and then stabilized over the year, he said.

Imports also faltered in the model year. Importers reported sales of 2,140,621 cars, down 9.3 percent from 1981's record 2,360,546. It was the lowest model-year sales for foreign cars since 1978, when 1,979,000 were sold.

The industry model year — for both foreign and domestic — totaled 7,683,627 vehicles, down 14.1 percent from last year's 8,950,563. It was the poorest model year since 1963 when 7,427,000 U.S. and imported cars were sold. The record year had been 1973 when 11.8 million cars were sold, 10 million of them U.S.-made.

But imports' total for September was up 9.2 percent from September 1981, as 182,248 cars were sold, compared with 166,845 last year.

Domestic carmakers said they delivered 488,512 cars in the month, a drop from 518,522 last month.

But analysts said the sales actually showed more consumers buying cars in the month than in August, when 409,411 were sold.

"Incentives are helping," Healy said, noting many buyers took advantage of sales programs on leftover 1982 models as 1983 cars arrived in showrooms.

"If the 1983 models were barn burners, the (September) rate would not have dropped nearly as much as it did," Hammond said.

Both analysts expect slight improvements in the coming months.

So far for calendar year 1982, domestic and foreign automakers have sold 5,941,434 cars, down 11.7 percent from 6,728,392 last year.

Import sales in 1982 are down 6.9 percent from 1981 and domestic sales are down 13.5 percent from 1981.

Tar Heel Votes In Congress

Roll Call Report

HOUSE

PIPELINE — By a vote of 206 for and 203 against, the House gave its support to President Reagan's economic sanctions against the new Soviet pipeline that will supply Siberian natural gas to Western Europe. The effect of this vote was to render meaningless a pending bill (HR 6838) to repeal the sanctions. HR 6838 later was passed and sent to the Senate, with he proviso that no slave labor is being used to build the pipeline.

Several U.S. companies and their European Licensees have lost lucrative Soviet contracts as a result of the sanctions, which Reagan imposed in response to the Soviet crackdown in Poland.

Supporter Benjamin Gilman, R-N.Y., said "now is not the time to lag in support of the president and the courageous action he has taken."

Opponent Robert Michel, R-Ill., said the sanctions are hurting the U.S. economy and angering allies, yet are not significantly slowing progress on the pipeline or fazing Soviet leaders, who "are hard and cold men and women who are moved by hard and cold facts, not pious wishes or macho rhetoric."

Members voting "yea" supported the pipeline sanctions.

NATIONAL PARKS — The House passed, 319 for and 84 against, a bill setting stricter federal regulation of national parks, including more scrutiny by the Interior Department of actions by other federal agencies that affect adjacent areas. The National Park Service would have to provide Congress with a state of the parks report every two years, and would have to take other action to prevent degradation of the system. The bill, opposed by the Administration as a new and costly layer of unneeded regulation, was yet another sign of the clash between environmentalists and Interior Secretary James Watt over the future of the park system. The bill (HR 5162) was sent to the Senate.

Sponsor John Seiberling, D-Ohio, said the bill does not create buffer zones around national parks, but seeks to prevent "careless or unknowing federal actions that could degrade park resources."

Opponent Don Young, R-Alaska, said the bill "expands the authority of the National Park Service beyond the boundaries of the park system unit, creating federal buffer zones on state, local and private lands."

INDUSTRY — By a vote of 173 for and 154 against, the House adopted an amendment that, in effect, killed a bill to revitalize industries needed in the event of a war. The amendment specified that loans and loan guarantees could not be made under the legislation if the Treasury Department ruled the outlay would put upward pressure on interest rates. After this Treasury Department "veto" was approved, Democrats pulled the bill (HR 5540) off the floor. The bill proposed spending up to $1 billion annually to modernize industries — many of them aged factories in the Midwest and Northeast — for any future defense preparedness role. To many Republicans, the bill was the old-fashioned Democratic medicine of using heavy federal spending to stimulate the economy.

Rep. Bill McCollum, R-Fla., who sponsored the amendment, said it was wrong to increase borrowing by the Treasury at a time when "it has been estimated the federal government will take over one-half of all of the available credit" in the economy.

Opponent Mary Rose Oakar, D-Ohio, said the amendment was "deliberately intended to gut the bill" that would provide needed job retraining and modernization to serve national defense needs.

Most members voting "yea" were opposed to the bill.

Neal, Johnston and Rose did not vote.

SENATE

SUGAR — By a vote of 60 for and 31 against, the Senate tabled and thus killed an amendment to lower the sugar price support level from 17 cents to 14 cents per pound. The 17 cents figure, previously legislated by Congress, is for the year beginning Oct. 1, 1982. The amendment was offered to the bill raising the national debt ceiling (HJ Res 520). Many of the 60 senators voting to table did so not because they favor high sugar price supports but because they did not want the debt bill encumbered by extraneous amendments.Senators voting "nay" argued that the federal sugar program is too protective of producers and too costly to consumers.

Sens. John East, R, and Jesse Helms, R, voted "yea."

JOBLESS PAY — By a vote of 50 for and 48 against, the Senate tabled and thus killed an attempt to preserve 13 weeks worth of supplemental unemployment benefits in an estimated 30 states that have the highest unemployment rates. The weeks are in addition to the initial 26 weeks of benefits and are also separate from the additional 6-to10 weeks provided to all states in the recently-enacted 1982 tax hike legislation. The 13 weeks of supplemental benefits are being or have been ended under a 1981 change in the eligibility formulas. The vote occured during debate on the measure (HJRes 599) providing temporary funding of the government for the first part of fiscal 1983. The bill was passed and sent to the conference with the House.

Supporters said countless families depend on the supplemental benefits for their economic survival, while opponents argued that to preserve them would bust the budget by several billion dollars.

Senators voting "nay" wanted to retain the extra 13 weeks of jobless pay in certain states.

East and Helms voted "yea."

CLINCH RIVER — The Senate rejected, 48 for and 49 against an amendment to deny funding in fiscal 1983 for further development of a fast-breeder reactor at Clinch-River Tenn. The experimental reactor is designed to create more nuclear fuel than it consumes. The amendment was proposed to the stopgap funding measure for 1983 (see preceding vote).

Supporter Paul Tsongas, D-Mass., said the Clinch River project was becoming technologically obsolete and riddled with cost overruns, and he added "it will generate large amounts of plutonium which can be used in nuclear weapons."

Opponent Jim Sasser, D-Tenn., said the reactor "is a necessary and vital first step in insuring our nation's future energy independence."

Members voting "nay" wanted to continue developing the fast-breeder nuclear reactor.

Plan Added Beach Units

WRIGHTSVILLE BEACH, N.C. (AP) — Shell Island Corp. has applied for permission to build four five-story condominiums with a total of 160 units, 16 single-family homes and 253 townhouses north of Wrightsville Beach.

The corporation's plans call for a total of 429 residential units, a 150-seat restaurant, a clubsite and a store on approximately 50 acres of its property. The proposal calls for more than 33 acres of the corporation's property would be donated to the town for conservation purposes.

According to the corporation's application, construction of the project would begin Jan. 1, 1983, with completion expected by by Dec. 31, 1988.

Contrary to an application filed by the corporation with the state Office of Coastal Management last year, its most recent proposal calls for all development to meet state oceanfront and soundfront setbacks and avoid areas of environmental concern.

Through the conservation areas to be deeded to the town, the plan also provides for public access to the beach. A total lack of public access in the earlier plan was one of the state's main objections to the proposal.

Published By James Young

Dr. James H. Young, director of institutional development at Pitt Community College, has published a booklet entitled "The Complete Guide To Administration of Title III Grants."

It is designed, said Young, to assist colleges and universities in interpreting complex federal statutes and regulations and to provide practical strategies for compliance with these rules.

The 16-page volume contains manual and computerized systems for grants monitering and evaluation as well as suggestions concerning fiscal accountability and administrative control of such programs.

Dr. Young is a specialist in grants administration and higher education management. He has published numerous previous articles in these fields.

Abandoned Aliens To Scan Suspect Photo Lineup

EDINBURG, Texas (AP) — Authorities are asking illegal aliens from El Salvador to help identify the two men who left them trapped in the back of a sweltering truck, suffocating four people.

Police found three men and a woman dead and 12 others suffering from dehydration and lack of air Monday night in the 18-wheeler parked on the outskirts of this southern Texas town.

The survivors told officers they came from El Salvador to the Mexican border town of Reynosa by bus and then paid up to $1,500 each to be smuggled to Houston, and then on to Los Angeles, Washington, New York or other cities.

Joel Young, of the criminal intelligence service of the Texas Department of Public Safety, said he expected an arrest warrant to be issued today for a 39-year-old man who has been living in the area.

"We'll probably charge him tomorrow because he was the driver. We haven't located him yet," Young said late Tuesday.

Authorities traced both the truck and items found in a "safe house" where some of the aliens stayed over the weekend to the unidentified suspect, he said.

Also being sought was the driver of a delivery van that was used to transport some of the aliens from place to place, the investigator said.

Erasmo C. Bravo, chief investigator for the Hidalgo County sheriff's department, said he believed "this is a large smuggling operation" operating "for quite some time."

"The aliens are supposed to look at some photo lineups in the morning. We're kind of holding off on the warrants until we get positive identifications from the lineups," Young said.

According to Young, the Salvadorans were in a party of about 50 people who swam or waded across the Rio Grande over the weekend. They then split into three groups and some were left in the back of the large, refrigerated truck Sunday night, he said.

"We don't know what time it was, but 26 of them apparently were put into the truck, and the air conditioning was kept on. The smugglers came back Monday morning and gave them all Cokes and so forth."

After the smugglers left again, around 10 a.m., the truck's air conditioning quit, Young said.

The door to the 40-foot compartment would not open from the inside. With outdoor temperatures reaching 92 degrees, the 13 males and 13 females, ranging in age from 14 to 37, quickly began suffering and tore at the sheet metal plating from inside in a futile effort to escape, Young said.

The survivors were freed Monday night when the smugglers returned, he said.

"My feeling is that they came back — either to bring more aliens or to come check on them — and when they opened the thing up, they saw the dead and sick and just panicked. They got the well ones and drove off. They left the trailer open, and the people just stayed around ... Most of them were in kind of a daze," he said.

A passerby saw people crawling out of the truck and called police to report a major accident. The truck was discovered on U.S. 281, just 15 miles north of the Mexican border.

Hildago County Peace Justice Homero Jasso said the four victims died of asphyxiation.

The 12 survivors, some unconscious, were taken to Edinburg General Hospital. Four were treated and released and two were transferred later to McAllen Methodist Hospital.

WEAPONS SEARCH — Lebanese army soldiers question a family outside their home in West Beirut as they search house to house, looking for weapons that have been left behind by Palestinian fighters. Lebanese troops closed off the shopping area of Hamra in the heart of West Beirut as they conducted their search for weapons and illegal aliens. They found both. (AP Laserphoto)

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices opened mostly higher today, extending the market's gain in the previous session.

Aerospace, mining and some technology issues paced the early advances, while oil-service stocks turned lower.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 4.69 to 911.88 after 30 minutes of trading.

The market gained some momentum from a decline in interest rates. Rates on short-term Treasury bills fell by up to 15 basis points, or hundredths of a percentage point, in the credit markets Tuesday. Prices of long-term government bonds, which move in the opposite direction from interest rates, rose about $5 for every $1,000 in face value.

And today, the rate on federal funds — short-term loans of excess reserves among banks — dropped to 9½ percent from 10¼ percent late Tuesday and 10¼ percent late Monday.

Among the NYSE's early gainers today were Citicorp ¼ to 30, Digital Equipment ⅝ to 78¾, American Telephone & Telegraph ⅜ to 57⅝ and Homestake Mining ⅞ to 36¾.

On Tuesday, the Dow Jones industrial average rose 3.58 to 907.19.

Advances outpaced declines by about 9 to 5 on the NYSE, whose composite index gained 0.29 to 70.06.

Erred About Acid Drops

RIALTO, Calif. (AP) — Laboratory tests have shown that an emergency room doctor was mistaken in saying a woman's eyes were burned by acid-contaminated eye drops, officials say.

The tests Tuesday contradicted initial reports from San Bernardino County Medical Center, where Caroll Sam, 28, went Monday for treatment of a burning sensation in her eyes after using Visine A.C. eye drops, officials at the county crime lab said.

Dr. Douglas Gruzd had told reporters Tuesday that the solution was excessively acid.

His report, following the deaths of seven people in the Chicago area from cyanide-poisoned Extra-Strength Tylenol, report prompted fears the eye drops may have been tampered with.

Anthony Longhetti, director of the San Bernardino County sheriff's crime lab, said the Visine A.C. which Ms. Sam used had an acidity level "which is well within the normal range."

Gruzd had said a "rough test" by hospital technicians revealed a "dangerous acid solution ... much more acid than we would expect" in the drops taken by Ms. Sam.

The statement was "incorrect," Longhetti said.

"Sometimes people can be sensitive to preservatives, either the preservatives or the buffers that are put in eyedrops," said Dr. Francis Comunale, director of the medical center.

New Standards For Grain Dust

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Labor Department says it will propose "as soon as possible" a new worker safety standard to minimize the risk of grain elevator dust explosions.

Citing some 200 deaths from grain dust explosions since 1960, the Occupational Safety and Health Administration on Tuesday promised regulatory change that "addresses the unique hazards present in grain handling facilities."

Raising Prices On Cigarettes

By The Associated Press

Within the last week three major American cigarette manufacturers have announced they will raise prices before a federal cigarette tax increase takes effect next year.

During the past week, R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., Phillip Morris Inc. and Lorillard officials have announced price hikes ranging from 3 to 4.2 cents per pack.

Cigarette-manufacturing executives said they decided to raise the price on their products to ease the impact of a federal excise tax which will double the per-pack tax on cigarettes. That tax takes effect Jan. 1.

"What we're trying to to is put together a program to ease the impact of the tax," Reynolds spokesman Dave Fishel said Tuesday. "The total tax amounts to $4 per thousand (cigarettes). We went up last Friday to $2 per thousand." That increase equals a 4-cents-per-pack increase.

Reynolds, which has plants in Winston-Salem, produces Winston, Salem, Camel, Vantage, Now, More and Doral cigarettes in a total of 35 brands and sizes.

Lorillard, a division of Lowe's Theaters Inc., with cigarette plants in Greensboro, increased prices on all brands by $1.50 per 1,000 last week, Lorillard spokeswoman Sara Ridgeway said.

Executives who asked not to be named said Lorillard — which manufactures Kent, Newport, True, Golden Lights, Triumph and Old Gold — raised prices in response to the federal tax increase.

George Knox, a spokesman for Philip Morris, which makes most of its cigarettes in Richmond, Va., said in New York that the price of the company's major 100- to 120-millimeter brands was boosted by 4.2 cents a pack on Monday. Prices for shorter, regular-length cigarette were increased by 3.2 cents a pack, Knox said.

Philip Morris makes Marlboro, Benson and Hedges, Merit, Virginia Slims, Parliament and Cambridge brands.

The federal excise tax on a pack of cigarettes will jump from 8 cents to 16 cents. The tax was contained in a tax bill offered by President Reagan that was fought by the cigarette lobby in Washington before Congress passed the bill in August. Reynolds officials said said the tax increase was unfair to the 50 million Americans who smoke cigarettes.

Reynolds will use the money from the price increase to finance a promotional campaign for wholesalers and consumers when the tax takes effect, Fishel said.

"We're going to try to keep sales from dropping by more than they have to as a result of the tax," he said.

But the price hikes likely will be even larger to people who buy cigarettes from vending machines. Industry officials say the per-pack price will increase by at least 5 cents in machines — the smallest price increase vending machines will register.

Intense Effort

PARIS (AP) — U.S. officials say more than 20,000 Soviets and Soviet agents are working full time in a "staggering effort" to buy or steal Western technology for military uses, and are achieving success.

The officials who insisted on anonymity, spoke Tuesday to reporters following a two-day meeting where American diplomats pressed their allies for a full review of the sophisticated electronic devices approved for export to the Soviet bloc.

The officials refused to characterize the allies' reaction to U.S. warnings about the Soviet Union's siphoning of Western technology, except to say there was a "general consensus that we have to take it seriously and tighten up."

Danny Again Seeks Funds

NEW YORK (AP) — Actor Danny Thomas is trying to raise a $100 million endowment for the children's hospital he founded 20 years ago because he has "got to get it endowed before I die."

Thomas, 68, wearing formal attire and chewing a cigar, wined a small group of philanthropists and corporate executives Tuesday to start his new drive for the St. Jude Children's Research Hospital of Memphis, Tenn.

He is seeking the endowment because "I can't make it. I need money that's making money." Many local fundraising efforts also help the hospital meet its operating budget, reported at $36 million a year.

St. Jude, started in 1962, is a cancer research center and has an endowment of more than $10 million, hospital officials say.

Thomas introduced his daughter, actress Marlo Thomas, to the group, and explained why he keeps pushing for the hospital.

"You see a teen-ager go from one of these diseases, you just get so emotional," he said.

Minor Damage From Dust Fire

Production at Procter & Gamble's Pampers operation was interrupted Tuesday afternoon when overheating in a glue system phase apparently led to what turned out to be a minor dust fire, according to Robert Griffin, plant manager.

Griffin said an operator noticed overheating involving the glue system around 1:30 p.m. and shut down his line. The manager said a spark apparently ignited dust in the metal ductwork and because personnel did not know the extent of possible fire in the duct, they took several hours to check and make sure there were no problems.

Griffin said that while plant personnel handled the situation, Staton House Fire Department was called as a precautionary measure to stand by during the shutdown.

"We didn't have a major blaze," Griffin said, adding that there were no injuries and no damage to equipment or to raw materials. He said the only monetary loss involved about one shift of production and full operations were under way today. The incident did not interrupt any product shipments, he said.

He said dry chemicals were used in making sure that the ducts were free of problems and "we made a big mess. We cleaned up and you wouldn't know we had a problem if you came out today."

Griffin said, "We can never say enough about the volunteer fire service provided by Staton House. They give us counseling and training and do a superb job."

Atlanta Pins Hopes Of NL Pennant On Phil Niekro

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Their star pitcher is 43 years old, but the Atlanta Braves are pinning their hopes on Phil Niekro for a National League pennant.

"Niekro is the key," said Keith Hernandez of the St. Louis Cardinals prior to today's 2:15 p.m. CDT opener of the best-of-five National League Championship Series. "If everybody threw a knuckleball...it would be different."

Instead, St. Louis hitters were to be looking at pitches which by the regular season's windup were mesmerizing Atlanta opponents.

The mound rival of Niekro, 17-4, was to be St. Louis right-hander Joaquin Andujar, 15-10, no slouch either. The hard-throwing Andujar, the NL's pitcher of the month for September, had won seven straight since last losing Aug. 6 and carried a nifty 2.47 earned run average.

Atlanta Manager Joe Torre said starting the short series on St. Louis' home Busch Stadium artificial turf should pose no problem for his club.

"I think we're 13 over (.500) on the road and three over at home," Torre said. "I think with the bigger ballparks we play in on the road, it helps our pitchers."

Niekro, whose last two outings were shutouts, is considered Atlanta's best hope for offsetting the Cards' edges in team hitting and speed.

"If he gets it over, he's close to being unbeatable," said Torre in respect to the pitcher's specialty. "I know. I caught it and played against him and didn't like either."

Torre said rookie right-hander Pascual Perez, 4-4, will get the call for the Braves in Thursday night's second game, and Rick Camp, 13-11, will pitch Friday's third game in Atlanta.

St. Louis will counter Thursday with Bob Forsch, 15-9, and Friday with rookie John Stuper, 9-7. If a fourth game is needed, it will match Tommy Boggs, 2-2, of the Braves against Cards rookie left-hander Dave LaP-oint, 9-3.

"The first one is the key one, especially when you have to win only three," said Torre. "But if we lose two here, it's

Home Run

Baylor's 5 RBI Keys Angels By Brewers

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — The first game of the California-Milwaukee slugfest in the American League Championship series belongs to Don Baylor and the Angels.

And Baylor, the designated hitter who drove in a playoff record-tying five runs in California's 8-3 victory Tuesday night, believes the Angels are on a roll heading into tonight's rematch at Anaheim Stadium.

"Momentum means a lot in sports," Baylor said after he provided one run with a sacrifice fly in the first inning, tripled home a pair in the third, then singled home two more in the fourth as the Angels moved out to a 7-3 advantage.

"We'll go out there again and have 64,000 people in the stands, and the only thing that can stop momentum is good pitching," Baylor added.

The Angels got the good pitching in the opener of the best-of-five series, with Tommy John, 14-12 during the regular season, going the distance. He settled down after allowing a two-run homer to Gorman Thomas in the second inning and another Brewer run in the third. John allowed seven hits, and was never in serious trouble after the third.

Brewer starter Mike Caldwell, 17-13, gave up seven hits and six runs, five earned, before giving way to Jim Slaton with one on and none out in the fourth inning.

Baylor, who had 93 RBI this season and a league-high 21 game-winning RBI, said he's a different hitter with men on base.

"It's obvious I don't concentrate when there aren't men on base," he said, "but when there are, I do a lot more thinking. I look for a good pitch in a zone that I can drive.

"I try to stay away from the home run and just hit the ball hard someplace.

Baylor, whose future is uncertain since he's playing out the last year of his contract with the Angels, said he's not concerned with building a case for himself in negotiations with the club.

"I've been here for six years, through some low times and some high times, and I'd like to stay here now that we have a really good nucleus," he said. "But I'm not worried about my numbers.

"All I want to do is help this club get into the World Series."

Fred Lynn, who had three hits, including a solo homer in the fifth for the Angels' final run, said of Baylor: "Don's been driving in runs for us in clutch situations all year long; we rely heavily on him."

Baylor nevertheless said John's pitching against the powerful Brewers, who led the AL with 216 homers this year, probably made the difference.

"I think the key was when Tommy John settled down after the home run (to Thomas)," Baylor said.

The 39-year-old John, traded to the Angels from the New York Yankees Aug. 31, said he was extremely happy with his situation.

"Sally (his wife) and I still have tickets from Newark to Florida, where we were going to spend the month of October," he said. "I thank Buzzie Bavasi (Angels' general manager) for our being here."

Desite the one-sided loss in the opener, played before an ALCS record crowd of 64,406, the Brewers feel confident they can bounce back.

Milwaukee Manager Harvey Kuenn said: "The players reacted like it was the first game of any series. They did not take it bad. We will come right back. It will probably be a shootout. We will come out swinging, starting with the first pitch."

Pete Vukovich, who was 3-0 against the Angels this year and is 5-0 lifetime against them, will try to even the series tonight when he faces California's Bruce Kison. Vukovich was 18-6 this season. Kison, apparently back in form after struggling back from arm surgery two years ago, was 10-5 this season and 1-1 against the Brewers.

Missouri Loss Disappoints Emory

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

When Ed Emory and his East Carolina Pirates went to Columbia, Mo., last Friday afternoon, it was with all the intent of coming home Saturday night with a victory tucked under their belts.

But it was not to be. Missouri scored two late touchdowns and pulled out a 28-9 victory over the Pirates.

"I'm very, very disappointed in the loss to Missouri," Emory said at his weekly press conference yesterday. "I felt like this was the time when we could make big strides in our program. I thought we had an excellent chance to come out of the game with a win, and I'm disappointed that we haven't beaten a team of (Missouri's) caliber since I've been here.

"But this was the first time that I've felt we've had the talent to do it," Emory said, adding that he feels that his assessment of the Pirate talent was correct.

Injuries hurt the Pirates, Emory said, adding that "That's football." The Pirates were without starting nose guard Barry Smith, and also missing a number of linebackers, including Ron Reid, who now appears out for the season. Reid suffered a knee injury against Central Michigan, as did Adams. "I felt like if Reid was in there, that could have affected their offense," the coach said.

"Our players at linebacker will be good, but we have so much time invested in people like Ron Reid and Mike Grant, and we've had to start all over with some of the people we're having to play now. They have to catch up to the others. Having to make personnel changes slows you down."

Another problems was that staring quarterback Greg Stewart was sidelined with an asthma attack prior to the game. Emory said he isn't sure what brought it on. Prior to the East Tennessee game, Stewart became questionable because of hyperventalation, although he did eventually start.

Panthers Looking For First Win Ever Against Farmville

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

In the 12 years North Pitt has played football the Panthers have never beaten Farmville Central. Never.

A study in discouragement if ever there was one. North Pitt has never managed to score more than 12 points against the Jaguars and have been outscored, 413 to 51, in 11 previous games.

The Panthers have come close to beating Farmville Central only once: in 1980, when they lost 7-0.

The Panthers hope to do more than get close come Friday evening. They hope to end the winless streak, and there probably has never been a better opportunity than now.

The Panthers come into the game having won two straight and tied for the lead in the Eastern Carolina Conference. Moreover, the Panthers, who are 3-1-2, are unbeaten in their last five games, having defeated Greene Central, 28-14, last week.

"I think we're getting tense," North Pitt coach B.T. Chappell said. "We're not as loose. We're feeling more pressure.

"I don't know if we know how to handle it or not. It's hard to tell what the players are feeling."

Because of that Chappell remained unsure what to expect when the two ECC foes meet in Bethel. Said Chappell: "I don't know how it'll go. We could fall flat on our face — or

NFL Talks

Garvey Ready To Return To Bargaining Table

WASHINGTON (AP) — Union chief Ed Garvey has had his greatly awaited meeting with a committee of National Football League club owners, and says he's ready to go back to the bargaining table with their negotiators.

Garvey says he would call Jack Donlan, his counterpart on the owners' bargaining committee, to set up a new round of negotiations.

"We are not going to stand on ceremony about who makes the next call. If he doesn't call me I will call him on Wednesday," Garvey said Tuesday after he met with the six-member executive committee of the NFL Management Council.

Meanwhile, a federal judge was expected to rule today on the union's request for a temporary restraining order clearing the way for striking players to participate in a series of union-organized games. Union officials Tuesday postponed for a week, the first two of a planned series of all-star games, blaming legal harassment by the club owners. The players squads had been decimated by NFL clubs who successfully tied up the players in litigations aimed at blocking their playing.

Nine months after formal negotiations began and 15 days after the players began the first in-season strike NFL history, the owners finally agreed to Garvey's challenge to come to the table.

For 90 minutes at the Hunt Valley Inn in Baltimore, the union's executive director explained the players' demand for a minimum wage scale.

"The meeting was to give Ed Garvey a chance to sell the executive committee on a wage scale. He failed. No agreements were made at the non-negotiating session," Miller said.

A member of the union's negotiating team who attended the talks said the owners listened to the proposal, said little and then, "started looking for the door."

While Garvey admitted no progress had been made he found solace in the presence of the owners at the table.

"We are encouraged that every one of the members of the executive committee was present," Garvey said. "It is a strong signal they are focused on the issues and involved in the bargaining process."

Garvey said he hoped the meeting was the "beginning of a true dialogue ... we consider it the first of many sessions."

Attending the meeting were Dan Rooney of the Pittsburgh Steelers, Jim Kensil of the New York Jets, Tampa Bay owner Hugh Culverhouse, Philadelphia Eagles' owner Leonard Tose, Mike Brown of Cincinnati and Chuck Sullivan of New England.

Union president Gene Upshaw, Stan White of the Detroit Lions, and the Washington Redskins' Mark Murphy, all members of the union's executive committee, joined Garvey in representing the NFLPA at the session.

According to Miller and Donlan, the meeting was arranged by Garvey and Rooney.

Under the ground rules set up for the meeting, Garvey would get one chance to sell the owners on the minimum wage.

"The owners told him they weren't interested in a wage scale," Miller said.

In another development, Commissioner Pete Rozelle was quoted in today's editions of The New York Times as saying it was a consensus of the Management Council's executive committee that the season would not resume if fewer than 13 games per team could be played.

Rozelle, who met with the committee Monday, said no final decision had been made on the matter, but said it was the general feeling that "fewer than 13 games would not constitute a credible season."

Each team played two games before the strike began.

Knights Beat Goldsboro

Greenville Christian gained a 4-3 overtime shootout victory over Goldsboro Christian yesterday in a soccer match.

Greenville Christian moved out to a 2-0 lead in the first half as Chris Harris scored twice. The first goal came seven minutes into the half, assisted by Brian House. Harris then scored at the 32 minute mark on an assist by Troy Stox.

In the second half, Goldsboro rallied to score twice. Daryl Anderson scored six minutes into the half, followed by Chris Wise at 18 minutes on a penalty kick.

Neither team scored again the rest of regulation play, nor in two five minute overtimes, sending the game into a shootout on penalty kicks.

Doug Spiron scored for Goldsboro, but Mike Bragg countered for the Knights. Harris then hit on his last shot for a 4-3 GCA win.

"Goldsboro played much better than we expected," coach Dale Thatcher said. "A few of our people were out and it hurt us more than I thought it would. We had 46 shots on goals, but it was just one of those times when it wouldn't go in. We controlled the ball and did most of the shooting. I'm just glad to get the win."

Greenville goalie Darrell Harris had ten saves, while Goldsboro's Steve Vann had 26

Greenville Christian is now 5-4 and plays host to Friendship Christian on Friday.

Northeastern 2
Rose.....1

Northeastern scored two goals in the last five minutes of the first half and went on to slip past Greenville Rose, 2-1, Tuesday afternoon in a Big East Conference soccer match.

Rose, now 1-3-2, grabbed the lead on a goal by Jordy Smith at the 20-minute mark. Smith scored from about 25 feet out on an assist from Mark Schmidt for the early lead.

It stayed that way until the final five minutes of the half, when the Eagles took advantage of some Rampant errors to put two goals into the net and take a 2-1 lead at the half.

Neither team scored in the second half as Northeastern held on to capture its third straight victory. The Eagles are 3-2-1 overall.

Northeastern outshot the Rampants, 22-13.

Rose coach Will Wiberg said Smith and Jim Parker, both wings, played well. "Our wings did a good job," he said.

Wiberg also praised the defensive play of Greg Savage and Greg Fidler.

Rose returns to action Tuesday when the Rampants travel to Rocky Mount. The match will be played on the N.C. Wesleyan field.

CHAPEL HILL — There are no Lawrence Taylors or Buddy Currys in the North Carolina defense, but that's no problem for Coach Dick Crum.

The Tar Heels are ranked 12th in the latest Associated Press college football poll, but they're first in total defense, allowing a measly 161 yards per game. That's 25 yards better than second-place Arizona State.

"The thing I like about this defense is that we've got 11 guys all playing on the same page," Crum told reporters Tuesday. "That's a credit to our defensive coaching staff."

Crum said it's tough to keep an entire defensive unit playing well week-to-week, but he says opponents can't single out one player on the Tar Heel defense and wait for the other 10 to fall apart.

"We can always cut down on the number of missed tackles, the completions that people have against you," he said. "You've always got to be striving to improve."

North Carolina's offense also ranks in the top 10 NCAA figures, standing fifth in total offense at 462 yards per game.

In the 41-0 walloping of Georgia Tech, Crum got a look at his top three running backs. Ethan Horton is still listed as the starter, although Kelvin Bryant is expected to get slightly more playing time against Wake Forest. Against the Yellow Jackets, Bryant rushed for 55 yards on 14 carries and one touchdown. He also completed a 12-yard option pass.

"The thing we're gonna try to do with Kelvin is bring him along," said Crum. "We really don't hit our backs during the week."

Tyrone Anthony had the biggest day of his career against the Demon Deacons last season, rushing for 224 yards and two touchdowns as the Tar Heels romped to a 48-10 triumph.

Once again, the defense will be tested by a pass-oriented attack. Gary Schofield returned to the Demon Deacon lineup against Virginia Tech after missing the Appalachian State game due to injury. He celebrated his return by throwing the game-winning pass to Chip Richmond in a 13-10 victory.

"They made several big plays when they had to," said Crum. "Whenever we play Wake Forest, we catch their best effort."

Wake Forest has had sporadic performances from its running backs. Michael Ramseur gained 191 yards against Appalachian State, but managed only 55 yards on 22 carries against the Gobblers.

"A lot of people suggest that we don't have to worry about the running game," he said. "But with Ramseur, I think you've gotta pay some attention to the running game. Obviously, he has some running talent."

Crum also said quarterback Rod Elkins, who suffered a knee injury against Army, is off his crutches and walking, but he would not predict when Elkins would return.

"Rod'll come around at his own pace," he said. "Trying to put a date on it, all it is is speculation."

For Milwaukee, Series Begins For Real Tonight

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — As far as many of the Milwaukee Brewers are concerned, the American League Championship Series begins for real tonight.

"I really think the series in Baltimore took a lot out of us," said Milwaukee first baseman Cecil Cooper after the California Angels trounced the Brewers 8-3 Tuesday night. "It was really emotional. Tonight was a feeling out process for us.

"We made some mistakes and didn't play very well. We'll just come back tomorrow and slug a little bit. We will, you can't hold us too long."

Baltimore found that out last Sunday. The Orioles won three straight games over the Brewers to tie them for the AL East lead before Milwaukee rolled to a 10-2 triumph on the final day of the season to earn its spot in the league playoffs.

Veteran left-hander Tommy John, after a wobbly beginning, took the sting out of the normally thunderous Milwaukee bats Tuesday night as the Angels took a 1-0 lead over the Brewers in the best-of-five series.

"He's Tommy John, what can I say?" said Cooper. "He's much the same as (Mike) Caldwell. He stays downstairs."

Caldwell, who started the opener for the Brewers, wasn't downstairs enough in the opener. He was out of the game after facing one batter in the fourth inning. The Angels rocked him for seven hits and six runs.

"I just didn't locate my pitches very well," said the Milwaukee left-hander. "They just hit the ball. Every time I made a mistake, they hit it hard. It was just their night, not mine. That's the way it goes. We'll be back."

Pete Vuckovich, 18-6 during the season and 3-0 against the Angels, will start for Milwaukee tonight against Bruce Kison, 10-5.

"It will probably be a shoot-out," said Milwaukee Manager Harvey Kuenn about tonight's game. "We will play the same game that got us here. We will come out swinging, starting with the first pitch."

The Brewers were in good shape early in the opener. Gorman Thomas' towering two-run homer in the second inning and Cooper's infield out in the third gave Milwaukee a 3-1 lead. But it didn't last long as the Angels scored four times in the bottom of the third.

"In a short series, you always like to win the first game," said Kuenn. "We didn't. We'll just have to bounce back. You want to stay away from the big inning. We didn't do that, and then we couldn't play the type of game we play."

The Brewers led the majors in homers (216) and runs scored (891) during the season. But John blanked them on only three hits over the final six innings.

"I think the key was when Tommy John settled down after they got the lead," said Don Baylor, who drove in playoff record-tying five runs for the Angels. "We're the type of club that when we are down, we do not give up. But you have to say the same thing about Milwaukee."

"We like to score as many runs as we can against this ball club," said Fred Lynn, who had three hits including a solo homer. "We got off to a good start. I'm sure everybody's happy to get this one under their belts."

John, acquired by the Angels from the New York Yankees on Aug. 31, now has a 4-0 lifetime record in league playoff games.

Rose Boys, Girls C-C Teams Win

Rose High Schools' boys' cross-country team gained a 25-32 victory over Northeastern yesterday in the final regular season Big East match of the season.

Rose's girls' cross-country team also wound up the 1982 regular season with another victory downing Northeastern of Elizabeth City. There was no team score since Northeastern did not field enough girls to count points.

Rose's John Ormond crossed the finish line first in 17:45, well ahead of second place Cliff Shaw of Northeastern, who finished in 18:17.

Northeastern's Mike Sharpe was third in 18:29, while Rose took the next two places. Jeremiah Brown finished fourth in 18:46, followed by Alan Dickens in 19:11.

The second five had Mike Johnson of Northeastern in 19:32, followed by Paul Bolen of Rose in 19:40, Frank Rabey of Rose in 19:57, Todd Crouch of Rose in 20:09 and Randy Gomez of Northeastern in 20:23.

Other Rose finishers included Jimmy Bryant, 12th in 21:11, Will Hester, 13th in 21:48, Lane Odom, 14th in 21:55, Les Tuern, 16th in 22:08, and Joe Rayle, 17th in 23:09.

"Alan Dickens is a first year runner and senior," Coach Ron Hochmuth said. "He has really helped the program in the top five considering he's a rookie. And yesterday, Frank Labey ran the race of his career."

Rose finishes the regular season with a 9-4 record.

The Rampants will travel to Boone on Saturday to take part in the Appalachian State Invitational, which brings together 23 of the top teams in the state. They will then particpate in the Big East meet on Wednesday at Wilson Beddingfield.

• •

Rose swept the first seven places in the event, with Gloria Adams finishing first in 28:14. Bridgett Branch was second in 28:57, followed by Carol Moore in 29:05 and Amy Moore in 29:11.

Layne King was fifth in 30:17, trailed by Gina Branch at 31:03, and Emily McDonnell at 33:13.

Northeastern's Verna Baker was eighth in 36:55, with teammate Darlene Squires ninth in 37:56. Rose's Tammy Jones rounded out the field finishing tenth in 38:38.

Rose is now 7-1, and will compete in the conference meet set next Wednesday at Wilson Beddingfield.

Ex-Mars Hill Coach Appeals

MARS HILL (AP) — Claude "Hoot" Gibson on Monday formally appealed a decision to dismiss him as Mars Hill's athletic director and head football coach.

The appeal to the Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees was received by an assistant to college President Dr. Fred Bentley. A spokesman in Bentley's office said no date had been set for the hearing in front of the 10-person panel. Bentley was away and could not be reached for comment.

The hearing date will be scheduled by Benjamin Knott of Charlotte, the Chairman of the Board of Trustees.

Interim head coach Billy Simmons said he didn't believe the appeal would affect preparations for Saturday's game at Savannah State.

"Most of the guys knew he hadn't decided on the appeal when they chose to come back, so I don't think that's going to disrupt anything," Simmons said.

A-G Tied For 18th In Poll

From Staff, Wire Reports

Ayden-Grifton, unbeaten after five games and tied for the lead in the Eastern Carolina Conference, is tied for 18th in the latest Associated Press poll of North Carolina high school football teams.

The Chargers, who travel to Greeene Central Friday, were tied with Reidsville for 18th. The Chargers were ranked 16th in the first AP poll but dropped out of the poll last week after an 8-6 win over D.H. Conley.

East Forsyth, coming off its toughest test of the season, has gained the top spot in the 4A ranks.

The Eagles moved to the top of the 4A division of the poll, conducted this week by a statewide panel of 18 sportswriters. East Forsyth replaces Asheville, which lost 13-12 Friday to Gastonia Ashbrook and fell to ninth. Ashbrook, unrated two weeks ago and 12th last week, is fifth this week.

East Forsyth allowed six points in its first four games but had a challenge last Friday from Winston-Salem Parkland, winning 15-12.

In 3A competition, Burlington Williams continues to lead the pack. It received 10 first-place votes this week to put it in the lead for the third straight week. The Bulldogs, defending state playoff champion, totaled 145 points.

Statesville, with 136 points, is second, while Kannapolis Brown comes in 11 points behind with 125 for third. Boiling Springs Crest and Clinton are fourth and fifth.

Brevard, unranked last week, received two first-place votes and moved into a tie for ninth with North Rowan, which was No. 14 last week.

Whiteville and Randleman continued to lead the Class 2A-1A poll. Charlotte Catholic and North Duplin were promoted one place each as Robbinsville, ranked third last week, dropped to eighth.

Reflector Rankings

Following are the Daily Reflector rankings. They are based on points accumulated by wins and reflect strength of schedule. Wins over 4-A teams count 4 points, 3-A count 3, etc., with bonus points awarded for each victory the losing team accumulates. For example, a 3-A team with a 7-3 record for the season is worth 10 points for each team which beats it. Later season rankings are more accurate as points accumulate.

Panthers Go For 3rd Straight Win...

The two teams have one common foe: D.H. Conley. Farmville whipped the Vikings, 40-0, while the Panthers tied DHC, 6-6. "Farmville just manhandled them, which was something we couldn't do," Chappell said.

The Panthers figure to be favored, but Chappell insisted that the Jaguars are better than their 1-5-0 record. "They're pretty solid all across the line," Chappell said. "I really think overall they've got people over there who are outstanding athletes."

North Pitt is not without a few outstanding players of its own. The Panthers are led by running back Dennis Bradley, who ran for 168 yards and three scores last week.

Not bad, considering the 6-2, 185-pound senior was given the go-ahead to play only hours before the game. Bradley had a blood clot in his calf, Chappell said, and "we didn't even know he was going to be able to play until about 12 hours before the game."

Another Panther who has turned in an outstanding season thus far is defensive back Gentry Sneed. Sneed, a 5-10, 150-pound sophomore, has interecepted five passes.

It is that type of effort that has put the Panthers were there are. "They've got some confidence," Chappell said, "but they know it's going to be tough the rest of the year."

In other games, unbeaten Ayden-Grifton (5-0-0, 2-0) travels to Greene Central (0-4-2, 0-2) and D.H. Conley (0-4-1, 0-0) is at West Carteret (3-2-0, 0-0) for its opening Coastal Conference game.

In Northeastern Conference play, Roanoke (3-3-0, 2-2) travels to undefeated Bertie (5-0-0, 3-0). Williamston (2-4-0, 1-3) has an open date. Also this week, Jamesville (3-3-0, 3-2) is at Mattamuskeet.

In games last week, Ayden-Grifton whipped Charles B. Aycock, 28-8, SouthWest Edgecombe edged Farmville, 12-7, Ahoskie slipped past Roanoke, 16-7, Tarboro defeated Williamston, 34-0, and Jamesville blanked Aurora, 36-0.

Farmville Central

The injury list continues to mount at Farmville Central as the Jaguars prepare to play a North Pitt team revitalized by two straight wins and only one loss in six games.

"With the number of kids we've got out we'll be lucky to get 11 out there who can play," Farmville Central coach Gilbert Carroll said.

The Jaguars' latest casualties are starting quarterback Sam Sumrell and punter Alan Wooten.

Sumrell, a senior, suffered a shoulder separation against SouthWest Edgecombe and is lost for the season. Wooten, one of the conference's top punters, has a severely sprained ankle. Carroll was not sure if Wooten would play Friday night.

Carroll said Jerry Foreman, a 5-9, 145-pound senior, will replace Sumrell at quarterback.

Farmville has now lost almost a half dozen players to injuries since the year began and is now down to about 20 players on the roster. While the injuries have mounted, so, too, have the losses.

Farmville, which has played every team to a near-standoff in the first half only to falter in the second, absorbed its fifth loss in six games last week, after leading SWE, 7-6, at the half.

"We got worn down, but that wasn't what beat us," he said. No, a blocked punt did that in the fourth period.

Carroll compared the Panthers favorably with the Cougars, who were picked to battle Ayden-Grifton for the ECC title. Said Carroll: "I'd put North Pitt up there with SouthWest. From what I've seen, North Pitt may be just as good as (SouthWest)."

The Panthers are led by running back Dennis Bradley, who gained 168 yards and scored three TDs last week. "We've got to try to shut him down. He's going to get some yards, but we've got to try to keep him from breaking any long ones," Carroll said.

Added Carroll: "I know they feel like they're getting better every week, and I feel we're getting better every week. But, it's a tough situation (with the injuries)."

Ayden-Grifton

Ayden-Grifton hit the midpoint of its 1982 season undefeated and looking like the team to beat in the ECC. But, Ayden-Grifton coach Dixon Sauls, while happy to be unbeaten, insists room remains for improvement.

"We're certainly pleased to be 5-0, but we're never satisfied," said Sauls, whose Chargers have won 10 straight regular season games and 12 of their last 13.

Sauls main concern is penalties. The Chargers had 135 yards in penalties last week in their 28-8 victory over Charles B. Aycock and are averaging just under 70 yards in penalties a game.

"We're working on it this week every day," Sauls said. "We feel like if you commit an excessive amount of penalties it's a lack of self-discipline."

There are few things Sauls likes less than a lack of self-discipline, and he will be looking for improvement in that area when the Chargers battles Greene Central Friday night.

The Chargers go into the game the obvious favorite — the Rams are winless in six games — and are led by an aggressive, hard-hitting defense. The Chargers allowed Aycock just 120 yards total offense. In five games, A-G has given up just 27 points and its opponents are averaging a meager 107 yards per game in total offense.

The Chargers are led on defense by senior linebacker Chuck Smithwick, a 6-0, 192-pounder. Smithwick may not play this week, however, after suffering an injury last week. Smithwick, who Sauls said is the Chargers' best defensive player, also starts at offensive guard.

"He's doubtful," Sauls said. "He wants to play but we're going to hold him out of practice this week and see what happens (on Friday night)."

Offensively, the Chargers ran up 426 yards total offense — the best effort of the year by A-G. Fullback Jarvis Koonce led the offensive attack with 162 yards rushing.

It is that type of effort Sauls will be looking for this week. Sauls insists, however, that he is taking nothing for granted.

"They've had some critical injuries — they lost both their linebackers and have had to make adjustments weekly," Sauls said. "We respect every team. Every team (on our schedule) is capable of beating us."

Sauls is particularly concerned with Greene Central quarterback Elmer Dixon, who has been injured off and on this season but who is scheduled to start on Friday.

"They have struggled some on offense but they pose a particular problem with their passing," Sauls said. "Elmer Dixon is the most talented passer we've faced this year."

D.H. Conley

D.H. Conley coach Gerald Garner was hoping an open date would give his team's various injuries a chance to heal. Instead, the off-week proved detrimental to his team's health.

The Vikings may have lost their top two receivers during this week. Tight end Otis Payton suffered a shoulder separation two weeks ago against Ayden-Grifton and he reinjured it this week.

Joining Payton on the injured list is split end Todd Rouse. Rouse suffered a knee injury in a pick-up game and is questionable. Both Rouse and Payton also play defense, Rouse being a linebacker and Payton a defensive end.

"It definitely worries me," Garner said. "If these two guys are unable to go we're only going to have one player — John Brown — who has had a reception in a game."

The injuries will also effect the offensive plan Garner hopes to use against West Carteret. "We're going to have to establish our running game," he said. "Without our top two receivers, we're going to have to run the ball against those guys."

The Patriots, who are coming off a 34-6 loss to powerful Clinton, are led by quarterback Lonnie Mister, a 6-0, 190-pounder. "He was throwing the ball 50, 55 yards during warmups," Garner said. "He's the best quarterback we've seen this year."

The Patriots run out of what Garner called a 'diamond' set, a modified version of a T-formation. In the 'diamond' set, the fullback is set back behind the two halfbacks.

"They are very outside oriented and they run a lot of leads off tackler," Garner said.

Defensively, the Patriots run a 6-2. "They're extremely big," Garner said. "Both their guards and tackles are in the 214-243 range."

Against Clinton, the Patriots were down only 7-0 at the half before the Dark Horses erupted in the second half. According to Garner's stats, the Patriots ran 54 plays — 27 running and 27 passing.

"They're a fine team. I feel West Carteret can challenge for the conference (title)," Garner said. "This is a big ballgame for us. We're pulling out all the stops in Vikingland."

Braves, Cards Go At It....

In addition to the matchup between Niekro and Andjuar, possibly also in the fifth game if the series goes that far, the championship was to be a contest of bullpens.

Gene Garber, enjoying his best season, has 30 saves for Atlanta, drawing backing from rookie Steve Bedrosian's 11. For St. Louis, the top firemen are Bruce Sutter, 36 saves, and Doug Bair, eight.

"I think we have better pitching, I think we have better defense and I know we have better speed," said Hernandez, the Cards' Gold Glove first baseman.

"It comes down to Niekro and whether we can beat him. He's tough, but we're about due. If we win the first game, I like our chances. Even if we don't, I still do."

The hopes of the Braves, who owned a 7-5 edge over St. Louis during the regular season, were heightened Tuesday by the progress of slugger Bob Horner.

Horner, who has been idled except for one pinch-hit appearance since suffering a hyperextended elbow Sept. 18, swung freely in the batting cage. "Right now it's about 50-50," his manager said in respect to Horner's availability. "He's getting progressively better."

If Horner is in the lineup, he will bat fifth behind cleanup hitter Chris Chambliss. If not, the spot will be occupied by rookie outfielder Terry Harper.

Jerry Royster, who has been filling in for Horner at third base, will shift to left field in Harper's spot if Horner is back. For the Cards, meanwhile, it was announced that George Hendrick will start in right field despite the trouble he has with Niekro's pitching.

St. Louis also has a nearly healthy shortstop in Ozzie Smith. He was out for two weeks with a hemorrhaging right thigh.

Smith took treatments to dissolve a hematoma, his most serious career injury. The injury occurred first at San Francisco when Smith was hit by Giants catcher Bob Brenly while trying to complete a double play.

After locking up their first division title six nights before the season finished, the Cards went into a four-game swoon which ended on the final day.

"For us, the season ended when we clinched," said second baseman Tommy Herr, however, in downplaying the significance of the skid. "After that, everybody just walked around sort of in a state of euphoria."

Atlanta's crown came tougher, falling into place the last day when both the Braves and Los Angeles Dodgers lost. Atlanta earlier in the season led by 10½ games only to fall behind and retake the lead in the final 10 days.

Torre said he hopes the Braves have ended their celebration and will have no letdown.

"Yesterday, everybody was coming along and getting back down to earth," he said. "They just had a certain amount of time to try to get over what's happened to us all year."

Emory Disappointed With Loss To Missouri...

"Maybe it's stress bringing it on, I don't know," Emory said.

The coach said he thinks Missouri is a fine team with a fine program and great tradition. "We've lost to two teams now that have but two losses between them. We were hoping to be 4-0 and at least 3-1 right now, but I still think we have a chance to have a good season."

What worries the coach is "how much it took out of us to play hard and come up short. We won't know till Saturday." Emory was referring to Saturday's 7 p.m. meeting with old rival Richmond in Ficklen Stadium.

"Our players have told me that this was no moral victory. They hurt inside, but not like they hurt after last year at Chapel Hill. The number one rule in football is don't beat youself. Saturday we didn't do a good job of that in some areas," Emory said.

While he felt the defense played well enough to win, there were some breakdowns. "I was disappointed in our linebacker play. Our defensive end play was great. Our tackles did a good job and our nose guard was adequate. I was concerned with some of our tackling in the secondary. We missed five tackles that they turned into big plays. That concerns me more than allowing them to catch the pass."

Emory also pointed out that 57 percent of Missouri's completions were for five yards or less. "So their completion figures are somewhat misleading and not always because of the secondary. We did have six sacks and three more tackels for losses, and that's good. But we do have to get better in the secondary to have a chance against some of the teams upcoming."

Offensively, Emory felt the middle of the line, the centers and guards, played well, but the tackles did not. "Our tight end didn't play well either, and you're probably going to see (Damon) Pope move to first team this Saturday."

Emory felt that receivers played well, and also noted that Stefon Adams has been returned to the wide receiver spot, to share duty with Carlton Nelson. Adams had been returned to running back after the injury to Jimmy Walton, now back in action.

The backs' play also was pleasing to Emory, with the exception of quarterback.

"I was especially disappointed in the second half," he said. "It's up to your quarterback to keep you from getting beat. But (Kevin) Ingram made some poor decisions and judgements. It hurt when we lost Stewart."

Without Stewart, it left the Pirates with only one experienced quarterback in Ingram. "We're working John Williams more this week to try and bring him along as quickly as we can," he said of the third string quarterback.

"We played Ingram because he has quick feet, great ability and — he was the only one we had," Emory said. "The quarterback must turn a bad play into a good one, or at least a neutral one. But he can't turn them into a disaster, and there were a couple of times it got to be a disaster."

Emory said that the only adjustment Missouri made at halftime was to blitz a corner and safety and that Ingram did not pick this up.

Court Rejects Turner's Suit

NEW YORK (AP) — While Ted Turner's Atlanta Braves are playing in the National League playoffs, his cable television network will be carrying something else.

Turner failed in his bid for a quick review of a judge's order that barred him from nationally televising the Braves-St.Louis Cardinal series over WTBS, which he owns.

The 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals on Tuesday rejected Turner's effort to get a full review and a decision on a lower court's injunction by Wednesday afternoon — in time for the first Braves' playoff game.

Presiding Judge Jon O. Newman termed it a request for a "super-expedited appeal" in announcing the court's vote to deny it.

In a recent column we discussed the effectiveness of an "uppercut" at the bridge table. But the defenders do not always have to succeed with this tactic. Sometimes declarer has a counter.

North and South bid well to get to a good game. South valued his hand at better than minimum because of the six-card suit, so he made a game try in clubs. Since North had a maximum raise and help in clubs, he bounced straight to game.

West led the king and ace of diamonds, and continued with the jack. A careless defender in the East chair would present declarer with his contract by sluffing a black card on this trick. Declarer would ruff, take two winning heart finesses and eventually concede a spade trick, but the contract would be in the bag.

Fortunately, our East was made of sterner stuff. Instead of discarding, he ruffed with his "useless" nine of trumps. Now it was declarer's turn to shine.

If South chooses to overruff, he will be defeated. The defenders will then have to come to a trump trick and a spade. If you don't believe us, try it for yourself. Fortunately, declarer had an elegant riposte.

Instead of overruffing, South discarded his low spade—a trick he would have to concede in any event. It made no difference how the defenders conducted matters from that point on. Declarer would win the next trick and pick up the king of trumps with the help of a finesse. Then the rest of the tricks would be his. Making four-odd.

Duke Divers' Tremors Subside

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Duke University divers have overcome high pressure nervous syndrome symptoms they suffered while compressing to a simulated depth of 2,132 feet, Dr. Peter Bennett said Tuesday.

Bennett, Duke's F.G. Hall Environmental Laboratory director, said tremors the three men experienced while gaining pressure had subsided and one of the men had also "settled down" from a nervous stomach and hyperactivity, he said.

The three, Steve Porter, Dr. Gary Latson and Navy Cmdr. Paul Barry, still have shown no signs of nitrogen narcosis, which bothered previous Duke divers at similar depths.

Bennett said the lack of narcosis, or a simulated drunkenness caused by breathing nitrogen under pressure, indicates the five percent nitrogen mixture the divers are breathing is more effective than the 10 percent nitrogen solution divers used last spring.

Hatteras Fund At One-Third Of Goal

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Almost one-third of a statewide goal of $1 million to help keep the Hatteras Lighthouse from toppling into the ocean has been raised, one of the members of a committee to save the light said Tuesday.

Grandfather Mountain developer Hugh Morton said $300,000 had been raised to save the nation's tallest masonry lighthouse, which is located on the Outer Banks.

At Morton's urging, the Travel Council of North Carolina agreed to spend $175,000 of that amount to buy 1,100 large sandbags and 5,000 units of artifical seaweed to stem the encroaching Atlantic.

"The Lighthouse is going to be saved in the next 12 months, and it will be our donations to do it," he said.

Donations have come from across the state and elsewhere under the leadership of Gov. Jim Hunt and U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms, two politicians who are normally political foes but who agreed work together to save the lighthouse.

Sandbagging at the light already has begun, and Morton said he hopes other work at the light can begin this month. Final permits, performance bonds and other details are in progress, he said.

Meekins Marine Construction Co. of Hatteras will install the seascape under the supervision of William Garrett of Wilmington, Del., inventor of the plastic seaweed and an engineer with the DuPont Company.

Seascape is best described as 4-foot lengths of plastic fronds which catch shifting sand in the currents. Garrett installed 500 units of his seaweed at the lighhouse in June 1981 as an experiment, and the beach began to build back up.

Garrett is contributing an additional 500 units of seascape to accompany the 5,000 fronds that will be imbedded at the light. The seascape is manufactured at the DuPont plant in Roanoke Rapids, Morton said.

Violence Marks Many Stories About Prison Life

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

BUNN, N.C. (AP) — There are as many stories of prison life as there are inmates, and many of the tales are violent.

"Fighting and stealing, I've seen it friend," says Embery Shepherd, serving 50 to 60 years at the state prison at Franklin County and convicted of the second-degree murder of his wife.

"You get a bunch of fools together and anything's subject to happen," says Shepherd, 50, who sleeps in the camp "sick room," which has been pressed into service as a 12-man barracks.

Inmates like Shepherd and others interviewed in North Carolina prisons describe a scary life where the young and defenseless are victimized, where inmate "bulls" seek the slightest signs of weakness.

But he adds: "I'm trying to keep a low profile. It's hard. There are some guys it seems don't want to get out of prison."

Prison officials are skeptical of some of the inmate scare stories, though they acknowledge the presence of drugs and violence.

Prison wardens can show creative vehicles of thwarted drug smuggling — such as hallucinogens stored in hollowed-out pencils. And most can produce a collection of homemade weapons taken from prisoners — fashioned from scraps of metal torn from beds or the inside of a shoe, or made from a stolen kitchen tool.

"I suspect you can get any drug you want in any of our prisons," said one official, asking not to be named. "But then, I suspect you can get them in most high schools too."

Twenty eight inmates died inside North Carolina's prisons last year, the same as the year before and eight more than in 1979. Most were attributed to natural causes, but five died violently last year. Seven died of violence the year before.

There were 2,686 cases in 1980 in which inmates were disciplined for assaulting another inmate. The number has been steadily increasing and is more than double the number in 1975. Prison officials say they don't know how many cases there were last year.

"Of course, we're dealing with violent individuals," said Correction Department spokesman Stuart Shadbolt. "And we're dealing with the age of inmates that's prone to violence. That doesn't mean that if you get sent to prison you're going to get beat up on."

Shadbolt said he knew of no particular problem at Odum, but noted it is a close-custody camp, the security grade between maximum and medium. "Odum is a tough population, just about half a step down from Central Prison," he said.

There hasn't been a riot in the state's prison since the major one at Central Prison in 1968, which was blamed on power and money created by the prisons leather-goods production.

Earlier this year prison violence gained headlines, though. Three inmates at Central took hostages and complained of poor conditions, and an inmate at Polk Youth Center was acquitted of escape charges after testifying he fled because another inmate threatened to rape him.

In the dorms, 60 or 70 men sleep in a single room, divided from a like room by a barred hallway. Inside that hallway are posted one or two guards who don't venture inside the rooms after lights go out unless they've got reinforcements.

"The only time we'd go in a dorm after lockup is if we had to take somebody out for fighting or something — and then only after getting some help," says C.E. King, assistant supervisor at the Franklin unit.

The result is a system that relies on the inmates themselves to ensure order. "Normally, we'd have some inmates to break it up before we get in," adds King. "We've got some responsible inmates."

Inmates normally are free during the daytime hours to walk around the camp, to lie in their bunks, to watch television or otherwise pass the time. Many have jobs or take education or trade courses.

Idleness is always a problem, but prison officials say they've made strides to correct it. Shadbolt says of the state's prisoners, 6,000 are taking classes and 6,600 are assigned to work, some on road crews.

Close to 4,500 have no job or school, and of those better than 2,500 could be assigned to jobs if they were available. Those that work earn as much as $1 a day and time off their sentences.

At most, there are surprisingly few guards. At Franklin, for instance, where 170 men are kept in space designed for 120, there typically is a guard in each of four towers, one in the yard and one or two in the secure area between the barracks, and a sargeant that roams around.

"You've got four guards outside and three inside, and it's policy not to go in the dorms after 10 unless you've got enough help," said one Correction Department official closely familiar with the prison operations, who asked not to be named.

"How can you say there's any control? Are you going to go in there?" he asked.

Shadbolt acknowledges the point, even about parts of Central Prison where maximum-custody inmates are kept in dorms. "I think if we were completely honest we'd say we don't have maximum custody at the old Central," he said. "How can you have maximum custody when you have dorm space?

"How much staff can you have to provide total control over dorms?" he adds. "How much money will taxpayers be willing to spend to guarantee safety of our inmates?"

INMATE LIFE — Prisoners work in the laundry at Craggy Prison, their lives governed by rigid rules. The sign at upper left says, "Attention! When officer blows whistle, all inmates will immediately line up in 2 lines, one behind the other, for a count." (AP Laserphoto)

Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

Lifting the Veil of Depression

My daughter has just finished high school and will soon be going to college. She is a very serious student and seems to enjoy her school and her friends.

Recently, she seems to have drawn herself into a shell and can't get out of it. Isn't it unusual for a girl of her age to become, as she says, "tired and depressed"? What can we do to help her? — Mrs. D.R., Md.

Dear Mrs. R.:

Doctors all over America are aware of the fact that adolescents and young adults often show evidence of depression. Sometimes it is extremely difficult to pinpoint the reasons. Nevertheless, its cause must be found and treatment instituted as quickly as possible.

Depression is probably one of the most common of all symptoms brought to the attention of the American physician. It presents itself in a wide variety of vague, generalized, non-specific pains and aches along with an overwhelming sense of fatigue.

Because it wears so many masks, a sense of depression may often be overlooked. Sometimes it is the last diagnosis to be arrived at as an explanation for unusual physical or emotional behavior patterns.

Along with fatigue can come restlessness, irritability, loss of appetite, and an absolute inability to function. Patients of all ages withdraw into their own world of isolation and take no active part in the functioning of their studies, their home, or their friends.

Unfortunately, there are no chemical or scientific methods by which the degree of depression can be measured. The result is that a mild depression may not be suspected as being responsible for the symptoms that the patient presents.

Depression is not a symptom that one should be ashamed of. In this complex, hectic, confused world of ours it is not surprising that a sense of depression can occur in the young and in the healthy.

When depression exists, it is imperative that a complete physical examination be made to be sure that there are no physical or organic reasons for the listlessness and the inability to cope with everyday problems. If indeed there are no organic reasons for your daughter's behavior patterns, you must give credence to the need for psychological support and study.

There was a time when people of all ages would react in anger to the mere suggestion that they needed psychological consultation. Today, however, mature, intelligent people do not feel stigmatized because they cannot cope with all of the burdens that temporarily exist in their lives. Intensive psychotherapy may not be necessary. Sometimes a short period of "talking out" intimate problems can clarify major problems and give patients a better insight into emotional health. This can be done with the help of a psychiatrist, a psychologist or a trained social worker. They can often delve into one's past and unravel some of its mysteries.

During the last 20 years, the horizons have opened wide for the treatment of depression with drugs. Many excellent ones are available. Your own family physician in conjunction with a psychiatrist might, in fact, try one of the many safe drugs that are available in an effort to lift the veil of depression that now envelops your daughter.

CBS Emerges Nielsen Winner In Premiere Week

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — CBS won the coveted top spot in the weekly A.C. Nielsen television ratings during the important fall premiere week while NBC, counting on its new comedies and dramas to lift it out of the ratings cellar, was back in familiar territory: third place.

The highest-rated show for the premiere week was the return of the ABC comedy "Three's Company" for its sixth year.

CBS, first in the ratings for the past two years, started the fall season with a rating of 17.9 while ABC was close behind with 17.3. NBC was in third place with 14.4. The networks say that CBS' rating means that in an average prime-time minute, 17.9 percent of the nation's homes with TV were tuned to the network.

Ten of the 15 lowest-rated shows for the week ended Oct. 3 were NBC offerings, including some programs making their debut. NBC's highest-ranked show was Johnny Carson's sentimental look at his 20 years as host of "The Tonight Show," which finished in 11th place.

The premiere of NBC's mystery-comedy "Remington Steele" came in 52nd. "Taxi" — the comedy NBC picked up after ABC dropped it — was 56th. "The Powers of Matthew Star," a show with a touch of the supernatural aimed at young people, was 55th; the comedy "Cheers" was 60th; the mystery-comedy "The Devlin Connection," marking Rock Hudson's return to series television, was 62nd; and "Voyagers," a children's show about time travel, was in last place at 63rd.

Some returning NBC shows also fared badly. "Fame," a drama set in New York's High School for the Performing Arts, was in 51st place, and the comedy "Love, Sidney" was in 59th place.

"When (competing specials) end and the season settles into series vs. series we believe NBC will show improvement," said NBC spokesman Gene Walsh.

Walsh said the two-hour premiere of CBS' "Magnum, P.I." and the one-hour special of ABC's "Too Close for Comfort" took viewers away from "Cheers" and "Taxi." The two-hour ABC "Love Boat" special blunted the premiere of "The Devlin Connection."

Baseball fever, however, hit all three networks, especially in Los Angeles, the nation's second-largest television market. On Friday night, for instance, 55 percent of the viewers in Los Angeles were tuned to the Dodgers-Giants or Rangers-Angels games. The Dodgers game outdrew everything on the networks and the Angels game did better than CBS' "The Dukes of Hazzard."

No new series made the Top 10 in the past week, and only two appeared in the Top 20. ABC's "Matt Houston," about a playboy detective, was 18th and CBS' "Square Pegs," a comedy about two girls trying to find their niche in high school, was 20th. The revamped version of NBC's "Little House on the Prairie," now called "Little House: A New Beginning," finished in 16th place.

"Three's Company," a rating of 24.2 or 20.2 million households, ABC; CBS Movie Special, "Drop Out Father," 23.8 or 19.8 million, CBS; "Magnum, P.I.," 23.1 or 19.2 million, CBS; "60 Minutes," 22.7 or 18.9 million, CBS; "Dallas," 22.5 or 18.7 million, CBS; "9 to 5," 22.4 or 18.6 million, ABC; "The Love Boat," 21.7 or 18.1 million, ABC; "Too Close for Comfort," 21.5 or 17.9 million, ABC; "Laverne and Shirley," 21.4 or 17.8 million, ABC; Movie-"Money on the Side," 21.0 or 17.4 million, ABC.

"Johnny Carson's 'Tonight Show': 20th Anniversary," NBC; Movie-"Smokey and the Bandit II," ABC; "Happy Days," ABC; "Falcon Crest," CBS; "Hart to Hart," ABC; "Little House: A New Beginning," NBC; Movie-"The Shadow Riders," CBS; "Matt Houston," ABC; "Facts of Life," NBC; "Square Pegs," CBS.

Historical Profile Of Anwar Sadat On PBS

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A year after Anwar Sadat's death, television offers a new historical profile of the Egyptian president and, in a separate broadcast, a compelling way of examining the men who plotted his assassination. Shown on different nights, these programs fit togther quite nicely.

"The Killing of Sadat: Why Was Cairo Calm?" on PBS tonight explains how Sadat was a hero in the West but not in his homeland. It sets the economic and social backdrop for ABC News' "20-20" segment on the executed assassins' motives and their blueprint for murder. The report includes exclusive pretrial interrogation statements.

The ABC report will be on Thursday night, if the National League playoff game is rained out; otherwise it will be on Oct. 21.

"The Assassination of President Sadat" is more gripping and sensational, employing American actors to read the assassins' statements. Also seen are eyewitness accounts and news footage.

Correspondent Tom Jarriel could have quoted from the statements, but the unusual reconstruction technique allows for a more human and dramatically forceful story.

Using split screens and visual effects, ABC distinguishes the real killers in their cages during the trial from the actors — in prison garb — who explain strategies and rationales. The assassins felt Sadat had strayed from Islamic law while governing Egypt. One wanted to "kill the leader of those who do not believe."

ABC has been the most daring network in seeking new methods of communicating information. Last season, "20-20" picked up a local documentary that used actors to recreate the effort to save President Reagan after he was shot in 1981.

More visually exciting presentations are seen as one way for "20-20" to compete against entertainment programming, including "Hill Street Blues," on Thursday nights.

The actors are passionate, yet clinical, in detailing the assassination. It becomes macabre play-by-play and riveting TV. An introductory explanation from host Hugh Downs and clear labeling clarifies what's happening on the screen.

It's possible actors don't capture the real inflection of the killers, and the public's distinctions between news and entertainment will be further blurred. But, in this case, ABC doesn't let the production get too theatrical, and the walls of journalism don't fall down.

Public TV also succeeds with a more conventional anniversary story, bringing a year's perspective to explain what life was like under Sadat. To some, Sadat wasn't Time magazine's "Man of the Year," the avuncular leader who smoked a pipe, called Walter Cronkite "Walter" and made peace with Israel.

"The American and Western press spoiled him," says Egyptian publisher Mustapha Amin.

The broadcast, which includes pro- and anti-Sadat officials, latches on to a post-mortem Cronkite did for CBS: "Cairo is calm today, surprisingly, extraordinarily calm ...The people show none of the emotion that might be expected on the morrow of this nation's greatest tragedy."

The peace that made Sadat an international hero didn't bring Egypt's masses prosperity. His open-door policy brought in Western capital and Kentucky Fried Chicken, which just made the rich richer, according to the broadcast.

Peace, Arab money, American know-how and Egyptian labor didn't become a magic formula. Saudi Arabia withdrew financial backing, and Sadat's law requiring that Western businesses have Egyptian partners proved unworkable for reasons of culture and attitude.

Sadat was more democratic than his predecessor, Gamal Nasser, but he still imposed censorship. Says one of his assassins: "He made himself a king, in the Republic of Egypt."

EXTENDED WEATHER OUTLOOK FOR N.C.

Off-Broadway Musical 'Lennon' Disappoints

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Drama Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — It has a few good moments and a wide sample of his music, from "A Hard Day's Night" to "Imagine" and "The Ballad of John and Yoko." And no doubt it'll bring in many, many fans of the Beatles.

But I fear even they will be disappointed by "Lennon," the new off-Broadway musical based on the life of John Lennon, the charismatic ex-Beatle whose killing here in 1980 stunned the world.

The show, like the Beatles a Liverpool import, is surprisingly routine, long on old-hat Lennon history, short on imaginative staging and fresh insights into the man and his music.

Written and directed by Bob Eaton, it opened Tuesday, starring David Patrick Kelly as a young, rebellious, vulnerable Lennon, and Robert LuPone as Lennon in his prime — cool, detached, self-assured and even mildly amused after years of torment.

Neither resembles Lennon. And Gusti Bogok, a tiny, shiny-eyed gamin cast as Yoko Ono, Lennon's guiding light and second wife, doesn't even come close to her in appearance. But the idea of the show isn't to give you a night of look-alikes from Beatledom.

It aims at showing what made Lennon so unique, what shaped his attitudes, influenced his life and music. Admirable, but "Lennon" fails at this, and takes a long two hours and 40 minutes to do it.

Nine young actors, seven men and two women, are present here, singing and playing a variety of instruments as well as roles. As the various characters in his life, most of them — and the show's two Lennons — take turns narrating his story.

They tell of his working-class origins, his Aunt Mimi who raised him, his art school days, his first meeting with Paul McCartney (Vincent Irazarry creditably essays him), his inner turmoil and insecurity, and of the Beatles' rise from scruffy leather-jacket rockers to world-famous millionaires.

On and on the story goes, chronologically detailing and depicting the various phases of Lennon's life — the Maharishi and acid-laced magical mystery eras, the Beatles' break-up, his radicalization and "bed-ins" for peace with Yoko, his various trials, tribulations and dark despairs.

Finally, and with a coy, stupifingly dull "house-husband" vignette, you get to the peace and contentment Lennon finally found both as a man and an artist before his brutal death on Dec. 8, 1980.

A long night, all of it played out on Peter David Gould's ordinary black-and-white rock concert set, which has large panels on which photographs of the real people in Lennon's life are distractingly displayed during the assorted scenes on stage.

Most of the Lennon-chronicling is familiar in the extreme, re-telling you far more about him than you really want to know while advancing the not-too-startling notion that his music came from his life.

Well, at least there are several performing pluses. Such as Kelly, quite convincing as the young Lennon. And Miss Bogok — who while unmemorable as Yoko Ono, has a clear, lovely voice that deserves a better forum.

Of the supporting cast, I'd pick John Jellison as someone you're going to hear a lot about in coming years. He's downright brilliant in all his varied roles, be it as Lennon's kindly, eccentric art teacher, as a prissy Hamburg club-owner, or, in a brief, wickedly right-on impersonation, as the late Ed Sullivan, who in 1964 gave the Beatles their first U.S. TV shot.

Hospitality House

WASHINGTON — Kay Currie's Hospitality House this Saturday is being aired from 3 to 3:30 p.m. The weekly personality interview program is broadcast over WITN-TV, Channel 7.

This week's Hospitality House was filmed on location at the Christmas Shop in Manteo. Ms. Currie talks to Eddie Greene, who has made his dream of a art gallery-gift shop on the Outer Banks a reality. The shop features local, regional and Southern art, seashells and eastern North Carolina's widest range of Christmas ornaments.

Boz Scaggs And Friend Robbed

DALLAS (AP) — A well-dressed man robbed Boz Scaggs of $1,800 after handcuffing the singer to a shower soap dish in a hotel room, police said.

The man, armed with a .45-caliber automatic pistol, also tied Scaggs' female companion to a doorknob, police said Tuesday. The robber also made off with three rings of undisclosed value.

The Grammy award-winning singer, whose hits include "What Can I Say" and "Lowdown," and Victoria Pryor were unhurt. They were freed by a third companion, Jack Hobday, who entered the room while the robbery was in progress Monday and was forced to lie on the floor until the gunman left, authorities said.

Scaggs said he was in town for a wedding.

Same Old Formula For Guinness Book

By PAUL MOSES
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Records are made to be broken, whether by the woman who ate 100 yards of spaghetti in less than 28 seconds or the man facing a 10,000-year prison stretch.

And when they are, the annual "Guinness Book of World Records" is there to preserve them in all their glory or oddity.

But the 1983 version adds the happy achievements of Salus and Minnie Newquist of Ft. Smith, Ark., for their 82nd wedding anniversary; and the Rev. Theodore Hesburgh, the Notre Dame University president whose 90th honorary degree outdid the previous record of 89 set by the late President Herbert Hoover.

Dudley Wayne Kyzer of Tuscaloosa, Ala., earned a mention that he probably doesn't want. He owns the world's longest prison sentence — 10,000 years for a triple murder.

Presumably happier at her own length-related entry was Donna Maiello, who munched her 100 yards of spaghetti at Ann and Tony's Restaurant in New York City on May 22.

The book, which has just passed its 28th anniversary and is in the 21st U.S. edition, claims a record of its own. General editor Norris McWhirter writes in the preface that "global sale of this book in 23 languages has now become the highest of any copyright book, fiction or non-fiction."

Belgian-born Sheika Dena Al-Fassi, 23, made the newest Guinness edition by filing a record $3 billion alimony claim in Los Angeles last February against Sheik Mohammed Al-Fassi, 28.

A less dubious honor went to Broadway's Marian Seldes, dubbed "most durable actress" after she appeared in all 1,793 performances of "Deathtrap" during its 4½-year run.

Another high-class entry was the "most expensive hotel suite," which goes for $5,500 a day at the Hotel Nova-Park Elysees in Paris. The royal suite, designed for politicians who need protection, features bullet-proof windows, an escape elevator, adjoining bodyguard suites and seven bathrooms. The book says former President Jimmy Carter was one of the first to visit.

There also were new stunts in this year's version.

INVITATION TO BID
BALLFIELD LIGHTING AND TENNIS COURT LIGHTING CONSTRUCTION OF PARK RESTROOM BUILDING

Sealed proposals will be received at Jaycee Park, Greenville Recreation and Parks Department Administrative Offices, Greenville, North Carolina, by the Recreation and Parks Director until 10 a.m., Wednesday, October 13, 1982, and then publicly opened and read for:

Bid #1-The materials and labor necessary to install and make operational forty-eight 1500 watt metal halide light fixtures on the ballfield at West Meadowbrook Park, and twelve 1500 watt metal halide light fixtures at the tennis courts at Thomas Foreman Park.

Bid #2-The labor, equipment and tools necessary to construct a two hundred fifty square foot outdoor restroom building completely finished and located in West Meadowbrook Park. The Recreation and Parks Department, City of Greenville, will furnish all materials necessary for the construction.

Each of these two items are to be bid separately. The name, address, and North Carolina license number of the bidder, the date and time of bid opening, and the contract bid upon shall be clearly indicated on the outside of the envelope.

Drawings and Specifications may be examined and obtained at the Recreation and Parks Administrative Office, Jaycee Park, Greenville, North Carolina.

Each proposal shall be accompanied by a cash deposit or certified check drawn on a bank or trust company, insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, of an amount equal to not less than five percent (5%) of the proposal; or in lieu thereof, a bidder may offer a Bid Bond of five percent (5%) of the proposal executed by a surety company licensed under the laws of North Carolina to execute such bonds, conditioned that such surety will, upon demand, forthwith make payment to the obligee upon said bond if the bidder fails to execute the Contract in accordance with the Bid Bond. Upon failure to forthwith make payment, the surety shall pay to the obligee an amount equal to double the amount of the said bond. This deposit shall be retained by the Owner as liquidated damages in the event of failure of the successful bidder to execute the Contract within ten (10) days after the award or to give satisfactory surety as required by law.

A performance Bond and Labor and Material payment Bond will be required by each Contractor for One Hundred Percent (100%) of the Contract amount.

Payments will be made on the basis of ninety percent (90%) of monthly estimates of labor and materials incorporated into the work plus ninety percent (90%) of materials suitably stored; and final payment will be made upon completion and acceptance of the work by the Owner.

No bid may be withdrawn for a period of thirty (30) days after the scheduled closing time for receipt of bids. The Owner reserves the right to reject any and all bids, to waive informalities and to award contracts in the best interest of the Owner.

Attention is called to the fact that not less than the minimum salaries and wages as set forth in the Contract Documents must be paid on this project and that the Contractor must ensure that employees and applicants for employment are not discriminated against because of their race, color, religion, sex, or national origin.

Anheuser-Busch Says Beer Boycott Isn't Working

By ERIC NEWHOUSE
Associated Press Writer

ST. LOUIS (AP) — One month after Operation PUSH announced a national boycott of Anheuser-Busch, the world's largest brewery says the campaign isn't working.

But the Rev. Jesse Jackson, head of the self-help group, says, "The word is out across black America that Bud is a dud and that you drink something else."

Anheuser-Busch disagrees.

"We haven't been able to detect any effect of the boycott," said Wayman Smith III, a vice president for the brewery that markets Michelob, Budweiser Light and Busch beers. "We're still making the same amount of beer and selling the same amount of beer.

"In fact, we're having record sales," he said. "We're not sure if the boycott is hurting us or helping us."

The dispute started in August when Jackson, head of the Chicago-based organization, came to St. Louis and proposed the national boycott, charging that only one of the company's 950 distributors was black and two were Hispanic.

On Sept. 3, Anheuser-Busch announced a $5 million grant to train minorities to become distributors. The grant, the company said, had nothing to do with the threat of a boycott by PUSH, an acronym for People United to Serve Humanity.

The following day, Jackson announced the boycott. He accused the brewery, as well, of attempting to discredit him.

"Why are we boycotting Anheuser-Busch?" he asked. "Because they have 950 wholesale distributorships, but only one is black-owned; they are spending $254 million in advertising this year, yet less than 2 percent is with black advertising firms and black media; while 18 percent of their total employment is non-white, blacks are concentrated in the lower positions and their employment does not reflect reciprocity.

"Anheuser-Busch is lacking in reciprocal trade with the black community," he said. "They claim they reinvest between $40 million and $45 million in the black community annually, but we doubt these figures."

In 1969, the Congress of Racial Equality asked its members to shun Budweiser to protest Anheuser-Busch's record of hiring blacks. At that time, minorities accounted for less than 3 percent of the company's more than 5,000 employees.

The next year, the company adopted an affirmative action program. Minorities now make up 18 percent of the company's nearly 14,000 employees.

Most of the minority employees are hourly workers, but the company says 17.5 percent of its technicians and 9.6 percent of the managers are minorities.

The company also instituted a minority purchasing plan, which will do an estimated $18 million business this year. And it puts $10 million into minority banks and $7 million into advertising with predominantly black media.

Excluding its payroll, Anheuser-Busch does an estimated $50 million business a year with the black community, said Smith, one of the company's two black vice presidents. The company made a profit of $217.4 million in 1981 on sales of over $3.8 billion.

Brewery officials point out that they are already doing more than the target figures called for in PUSH contracts with other industries. Coca-Cola signed a one-year $30 million contract, while Seven-Up agreed to a five-year commitment to put $61 million into the black community. Heublein Corp., which owns Kentucky Fried Chicken, had previously accepted a five-year $60 million pact.

So far, few black groups have endorsed the boycott.

"Anheuser-Busch is the last company in this country that I would want to see pressured on behalf of the black community," said William Douthit, president of the Urban League of Metropolitan St. Louis. "...Busch has done hundreds of things for the black community on its own — without any push from anyone."

Regional directors of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People met several weeks ago in New York and decided the organization would not support the boycott.

"The NAACP does not have a campaign against the Anheuser-Busch Co., nor have any of its (1,800) units been authorized to form coalitions with other groups for that purpose," it said.

"It is our thinking that PUSH did not research Anheuser-Busch in its hiring practices, its affirmative action program, its corporate management and middle-management hiring practices as they relate to blacks," said William L. Slaten, president of the St. Louis Federation of Block Units, an affiliate of the National Urban League.

"We accept the concept of boycotts in general," Slaten added. "However, we feel that PUSH has made a gross error in judgment in terms of targeting Anheuser-Busch."

Two of the three major black newspapers in St. Louis have opposed the boycott and criticized Jackson's approach. Jackson has sued one of the papers, the Sentinel, a weekly, for $3.3 million.

"We have never filed a libel suit before," said Jackson. "But in this case, the charges of kickback and extortion are clearly libelous and designed to discredit us with the black community."

Housewives See 'Value' Rising

The study indicates it would cost a husband that much in wages on the average for a live-in housekeeper, or $8,900 for one who lives out.

The research was done for the American Council of Life Insurance, using data from more than 50 private employment agencies and state employment departments.

An article in the council's newsletter, The Family Economist, says replacement cost for the housewife's housekeeping duties would be more in a big city but less in a rural area. The figures are based on a five day, 40 hour week for a family of four, with two small children, one of them in school.

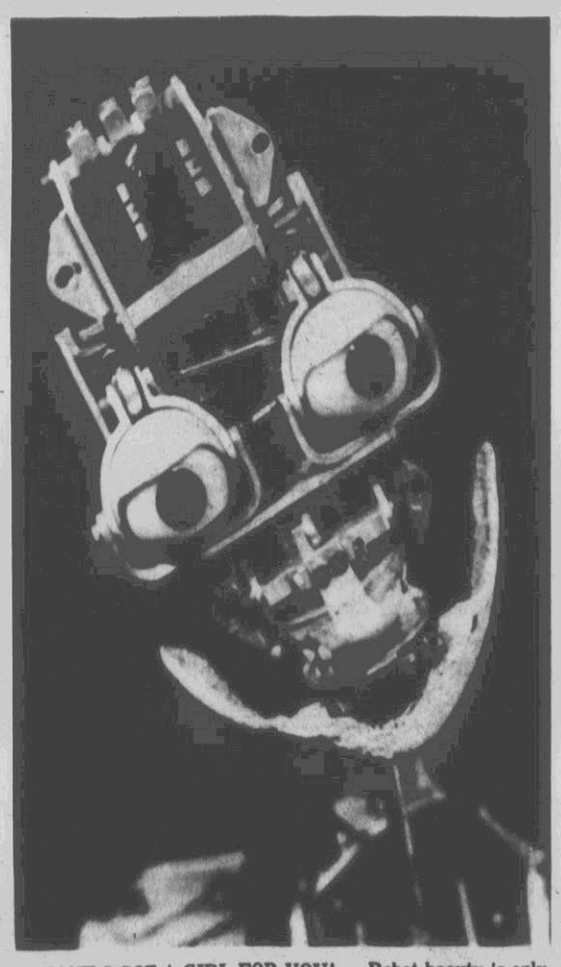

Allow Delay On Education Check

NEW YORK (UPI) — Students getting Veterans Administration education payments should allow at least four weeks from the time their enrollment certificate is sent in until their first payment arrives.

If a student feels the initial payment for a school term is late, he or she should check with the school to see when the certificate was mailed, according to the VA Office of Public and Consumer Affairs, in New York.

If an advance payment check is expected, the VA says, make sure the required written request was signed and submitted to the government agency at least a month before the beginning of the semester.

An overpayment that is outstanding could also cause delays, the agency says, for students who have received VA education benefits in the past.

Quaker Institution Gives Draft Resisters Support

By JOHN M. DOYLE
Associated Press Writer

RICHMOND, Ind. (AP) — At Earlham College, a Quaker school where students can major in Peace and Global Studies, officials are coming to the aid of young men who refuse to register for the draft.

"Earlham College is a Quaker institution which has historically witnessed to the cause of peace and conciliation," school authorities said in a recent statement on draft registration.

Right now they are helping Mike Frisch, a 20-year-old economics major from East Chatham, N.Y., who decided two years ago he would not comply with the law.

The school, located on 600 acres of rolling woodland near the Indiana-Ohio border, is backing Frisch because "we want to support people who make a difficult decision after careful examination of their conscience," said Earlham President Franklin Wallin.

"We're not doing this for people who forgot to register or were too lazy to do so," he said. "This is just for people who are doing it as a matter of principle."

The school says it will make up any federal aid a student loses because of failure to register for the draft provided that the student's "actions are based on matters of deeply held belief and conscience."

Its administrative council adopted that policy last spring in response to a new federal law that will make all non-registrants for the draft ineligible for federal aid.

Frisch still hasn't registered for the draft and a federal grand jury in Indianapolis is investigating his case, although he has not been indicted.

"I couldn't ask for more from Earlham," said Frisch. "I'm not trying to be a star. I'm just one of many trying to stop rampant militarism."

The Selective Service says 674,000 young men across the country have failed to register for the draft. So far, two people have been convicted of failing to register under the law signed by former President Carter. The latest, Benjamin Sasway, a 21-year-old political science major, was sentenced Monday in San Diego to 2½ years in a federal minimum-security facility.

Since 1847, Earlham has stood by its Quaker founders' principles, said Wallin, who is called Frank by everyone on campus, in keeping with Quaker tradition that all students and faculty stay on a first-name basis.

"It's the Quaker sense of egalitarianism," he said, adding that there are no fraternities or sororities at the school because "we don't want organizations where someone can be excluded.

"Private institutions have to celebrate their independence and one of the ways of doing it is taking stands on what you believe in," said Wallin. "You don't get to show your values unless there is a crisis. It's in the history of the institution to help people."

"Dedication to teaching," he declared. "I did not want to enter the world of 'publish or perish,' which means publishing trivia. Here it is teach or perish."

A former Air Force pilot, Noyd began teaching at Earlham in 1969 when he got out of prison.

"I was a Vietnam resister," said Noyd. "I tried to resign my commission and sought conscientious objector status. I was court martialed instead. One of the reasons I'm at Earlham is because of that."

School officials don't display promotional materials for the armed services, and they don't permit military recruiters on campus.

The school, which has an enrollment of about 1,110, is run by the Quaker concept of consensus. No board or committee can take any action, make any recommendation or issue any ruling unless all of its members are in accord.

"Decisions are made very slowly," said Leonard W. Clark, a philosophy professor who is also the school's provost.

"You've got to get consensus for the new — or you keep the old," said Wallin. "The structure of Earlham is conservative.

"I think a lot of our students are quite shocked when they go to graduate schools where it's dog-eat-dog," said Wallin. "They aren't wise to the ways of beating the system. Sometimes graduates come back and say 'You didn't prepare me for the bad teaching at law school.' I don't worry about that. The world needs a lot more trust than mistrust."

Woolly Bear News 'Good'

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Woolly bear caterpillars don't have meteorological degrees or radar screens, but as weather forecasters, they have good news for Louisiana.

Conventional forecasters have been dishing out dismal predictions of an icy winter this year, but Louisiana caterpillars have been in hiding — and that's a good sign.

Cajun folklore holds that if the caterpillars come out during the first 10 days of autumn, the winter will be cold and hard, said Randy Whatley, a student of the lore of Acadians, who left Canada for Louisiana more than 200 years ago.

In early fall, "they're usually seen running across roads like they're in a hurry," he said. "I haven't seen that going on yet."

But Tynes warned that such a folk belief can be guesswork. If one doesn't want to rely on the crawling creatures, Whatley provides other ways Cajuns forecast the weather:

—If the day dawns foggy and there are cobweb formations in the grass, the rest of the day will be clear.

—If horses get frisky on a cool day, the weather will soon turn very cold.

—If the wind shifts from east to west to north, it's going to rain.

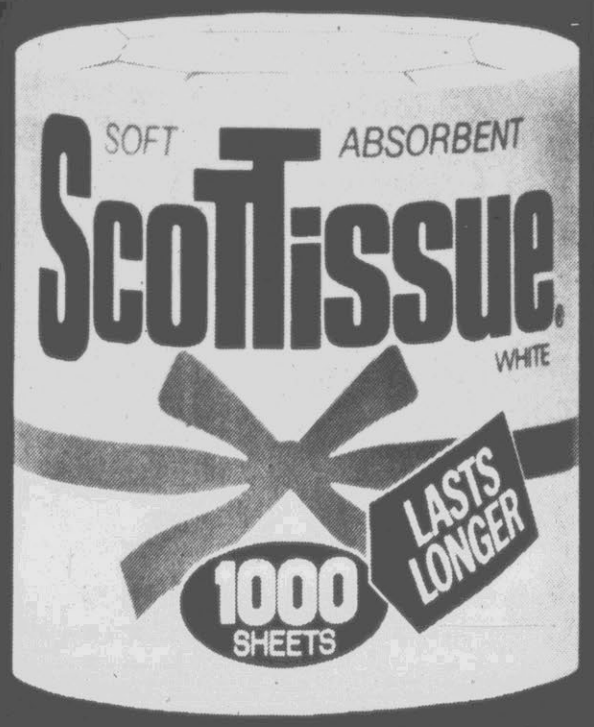

SORRY SHE MISSED — Sara Jane Moore, pictured recently in her prison quarters at Pleasanton, Calif., says she's sorry she missed when she fired a shot at President Ford seven years ago. But she also told the San Jose Mercury that she is "grateful" she didn't kill him. She is serving a life term at the Federal Correctional Facility in Pleasanton. (AP Laserphoto)

Increased Risk Of Dehydration

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (UPI) — People who use sunscreen lotion during strenuous exercise may run a higher risk of dehydration or heat stroke than those who take a chance on getting sunburned, a Texas A and M study shows.

The research was done by Tom Wells, who recently received his PhD in physical education.

McKenna's Wagon Distributes Meals To Homeless

By SARA P. WILKS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — As dusk falls across Farragut Square, thousands of workers pour out of office buildings two blocks from the White House and head for home without a glance at the converted ice cream truck and its curious clientele.

Some 30 to 35 men have lined up, their calloused hands clutching at plastic bags that contain their belongings. They are waiting for sandwiches, yogurt, potato chips and hot chocolate from McKenna's Wagon, a new volunteer effort to feed the city's homeless, destitute men and women.

A lady known as Miss Doris rises from a park bench and follows the men to the wagon for dinner.

Miss Doris sleeps in a parking garage and hasn't eaten all day. She takes one of two sandwiches and tucks it in her tattered shawl for later. "You're just wonderful people," she tells the volunteers in the truck. "I don't know what we'd do without you."

McKenna's Wagon rolled onto the streets of the nation's capital on Sept. 3, providing dinner seven days a week. A dozen volunteers take turns picking up food and supplies, preparing sandwiches and taking the truck on its rounds. Each night, the lines have grown longer along the curbside, as more and more needy people hear about the free meal.

"We're up to almost 300 each night," said Dr. Veronica Maz, a former Georgetown University sociology professor who started the wagon program. "There must be many more people out there than we realize who are hungry, who are sleeping in parks and alleys."

Shelters in the city currently house 467 men and 158 women. There are 193 homeless families in the District of Columbia, according to the latest figures from the city's Department of Human Services. Those families include 424 children.

"Lately we've been seeing mothers and children at a few of the stops," said Ms. Maz. "Some of them are shoeless, and we've found out that some of the mothers and children have been sleeping in the parks. Sometimes they don't come again and we don't know what's happened to them."

Beginning at 5:30 p.m., driver Bob Harris weaves the truck on its daily route to Lafayette Park, Washington Circle, Farragut Square, a triangle at 11th and I streets, Northwest, and Dupont Circle if supplies last that long.

Most of the food is purchased for 5 cents a pound from the Capital Area Community Food Bank, a non-profit, private organization which collects food donated from area supermarket chains. Food, gasoline, cups and sandwich wrap cost just over $100 a week, some of which comes from donations by Washington residents, churches and community groups.

McKenna's Wagon was named after the late Rev. Horace B. McKenna, a local Jesuit priest who worked among the poor. It is a follow-up project to Martha's Table, which Ms. Maz began six months ago to provide a learning center, companionship and a free meal to children from broken or impoverished homes in the city.

"Many of these are the children of the very, very poor," said Ms. Maz. "Some of them have parents who don't care whether they go to school or not."

Martha's Table, located at 14th and W streets, and McKenna's Wagon, depend totally upon volunteers like Ms. Maz who stopped teaching at Georgetown in 1980.

Ms. Maz says she doesn't miss the academic life, claiming she's "still teaching people. It's just a different group of people. I'm doing something I think is more meaningful to me personally."

Connie Ridge is another volunteer who finds time one day a week to make 200 sandwiches and then rides the truck to distribute them. Ms. Ridge, who helps run the Mount Vernon Center for Homeless Women here, recognizes many of the gaunt faces and specifically watches for "Carlos" at the Washington Circle stop near George Washington University. The 70-year-old black man hasn't appeared at the truck for days, she said. "I know he loves peanut butter and I want to give him an extra sandwich tonight if I see him."

LINING UP — Some of Washington's homeless people line up at the window of McKenna's Wagon in Lafayette Square in Washington to receive food. McKenna's Wagon rolls out into the streets of the nation's capital to provide dinner for Washington's homeless every day of the week. (AP Laserphoto)

Pawnees Seek Independence From Federal $$$

By GIL BROYLES
Associated Press Writer

PAWNEE, Okla. (AP) — The tiny Pawnee Nation, wracked by poverty, unemployment and alcoholism, is taking steps it hopes will lead the tribe to economic recovery and away from dependence on dwindling federal dollars.

The Indians are placing their financial future on high-stakes bingo, discount cigarettes and development of a 20-acre industrial plot on the tribe's cramped, square-mile reserve near the banks of Black Beer Creek.

A Tulsa public relations agency has even been hired to enhance the Pawnee image to attract potential bingo players as well as industry.

About half of the nation's 2,300 Pawnees live in or near Pawnee County in north-central Oklahoma, an area known mostly for its winter wheat and beef cattle. But little of the area's prosperity rubs off on the reservation where unemployment is nearly 50 percent, said Richard Anderson, director of the tribe's business development office.

In 1981, the tribe received nearly $1 million from the federal government, but suffered this year because of the reduction in federal job training programs like the Comprehensive Employment Training Act, says Tom Knife Chief, business development specialist for the Pawnees.

Alcoholism is another pervasive problem and the educational and poverty levels among the Pawnees are "world-champion bad," said Bill DeGeer, a Tulsa stockbroker who is vice chairman of the Pawnee Tribal Development Corp.

The five-member development group was formed a year ago by the tribe's elected, eight-member business council to pursue the Pawnees' economic independence.

"We're having to do some crawling before we do our walking," said De Geer, adding that the tribe is looking for assets it can turn into money.

First, there is bingo. Because it is on Indian land, the tribe operates outside the state law that limits bingo winnings to $100. Elsewhere, only non-profit, charitable organizations are granted bingo licenses.

On the tribal reserve, bingo jackpots can range up to $3,000 in a single game during special, Saturday afternoon sessions. The total payout on "super bingo" day is more than $10,000. Regular Monday and Thursday night sessions offer smaller jackpots.

The big jackpots draw bingo players from as far away as Wichita, Kan., Oklahoma City and Tulsa, Anderson said. A gymnasium, converted into a bingo hall with rows of tables and folding chairs, seats about 200 people.

The Creek and Ponca tribes operate similar bingo games on tribal land in Oklahoma. The Pawnees have offered big-time bingo since February. The Seminole tribe in Florida has made the game a multimillion-dollar enterprise.

Pawnee officials hope to emulate the Seminoles by building a bingo hall to seat up to 600 people. It will be the first tenant of the tribe's industrial tract. Anderson said it should be open before the end of the year and could produce revenue of $250,000 annually.

Another "excellent revenue producer" is the tribal "smoke shop," where tax-free cigarettes can be purchased for discounts of about 20 percent, DeGeer said.

Meanwhile, land is being prepared at the Pawnee Tribal Industrial Park for a variety of businesses, mostly small companies. The businesses, a handful of them being courted now, are expected to give employment preference to Pawnees, Anderson said. Funding for the site work is provided by the federal Economic Development Administration.

"The financial and business community never saw fit to get in bed with the Indian tribes," said DeGeer. But he said incentives, such as low taxes and a concentrated labor supply, should convince industry the Pawnees "might be a pretty attractive business partner."

Michael Wallis, representative for Hood, Hope & Associates Inc., said the Pawnees are a unique client for the public relations firm.

"We're having to work very gently. It's not like a bank or an oil firm," Wallis said. "There is this tremendous pride."

Wallis said the tribe values its history of service to the United States cavalry as expert scouts and his company intends to retain the tribe's proud image.

"They don't want to go back to the old Pawnee Bill days," Wallis said, referring to the promoter who, around the turn of the century, ran a Wild West show that employed many Pawnees. "He was a white guy, kind of a scrawny version of Buffalo Bill, who really ripped them off."

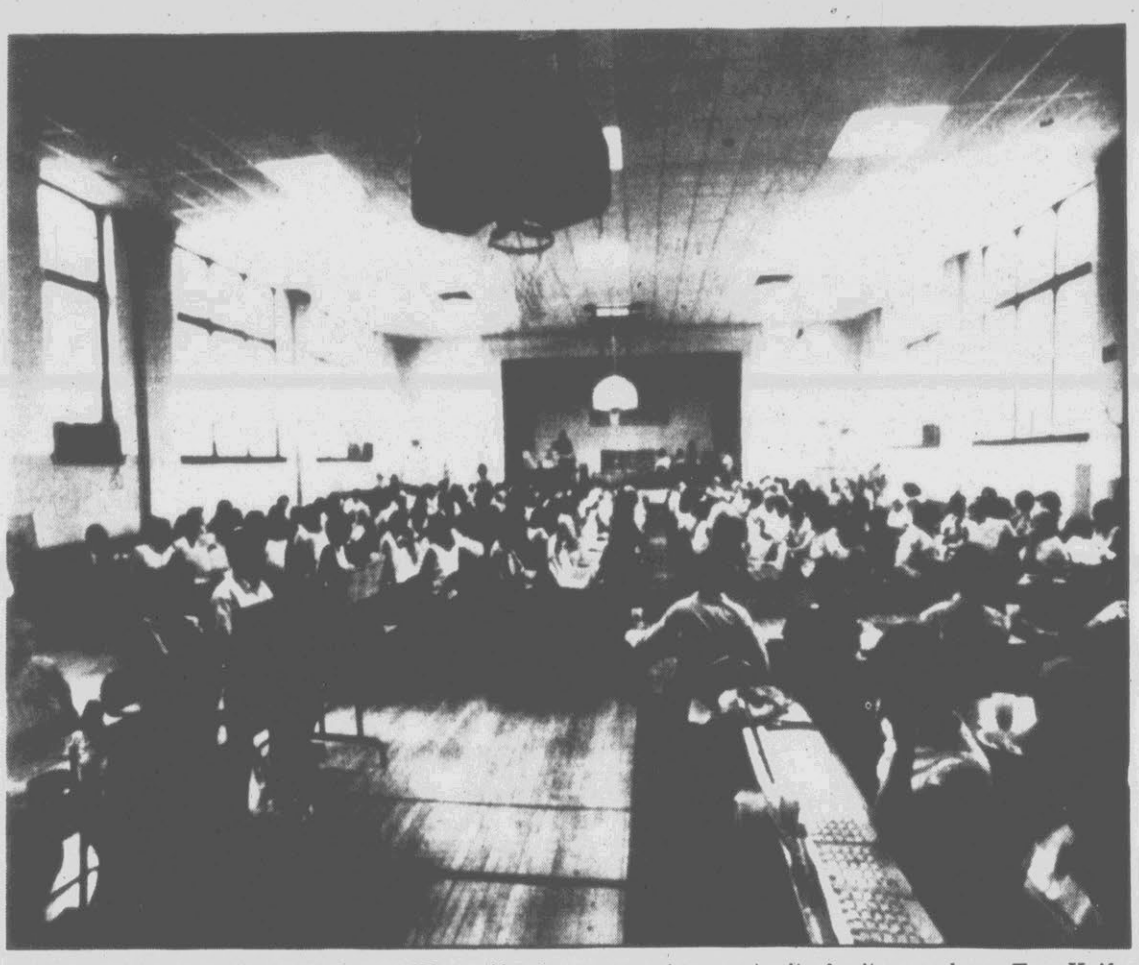

Anderson said some of the proceeds from the tribe's activities will be used to convert the abandoned Indian school superintendent's home into a Pawnee museum. Other buildings on the tribal land will either be razed or renovated, he said.

The most important aim, however, is improving tribal social services such as burial assistance and scholarship assistance, Anderson said.

The tribe also hopes to be able to pay dividends to individual members, Anderson said, but most of the money will be plowed back into other money-making activities.

Can-Opener Is Bag-Opener

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — Another small appliance manufacturer has added a bag opening feature to its electric can opener, as food manufacturers begin to market food packed in retort pouches. The unopened pouches are designed to store safely on pantry shelves, without refrigeration. The new Oster Can Opener-Bag Opener uses a serrated cutting wheel to open the pouches and other bagged convenience foods, such as instant dinners, boil-in-bag meals, snacks, cake mixes, frozen entrees and vegetables.

WHEN TOM KNIFE CHIEF TALKS — About 200 people crowd a gym on Pawnee Indian tribal grounds to play "super bingo". The tiny, destitute tribe is using bingo as a means to provide economic opportunity for its members. Tom Knife Chief calls out the coordinates during the regular bingo games from the stage. Kudzu Vine Once Seen A Blessing

By MELISSA JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer

CHIPLEY, Fla. (AP) — It once was known as a miracle vine that could save the South from washing away. Now the leafy legume called kudzu has been relegated to the ranks of a pesky weed that won't go away.

With its heyday as a soil conservation tool long past, kudzu has been ridiculed, cursed and reviled in Southern folklore as a creeping menace that spreads so fast it can beat farmers home from the fields and swallow unsuspecting cows.

"Cuss-you vine," as some rural folk call it, was even immortalized in verse by Georgia poet James Dickey. His poem, "Kudzu," was first published in the New Yorker in 1963.

While many of the tales are tall, the so-called "mile-a-minute vine" does run rampant in many parts of the Southeast, covering fields, trees, utility poles and even unoccupied houses.

Indeed, kudzu's legendary spreading ability is one of the drawbacks that overshadows the vine's benefits as a soil saver, says Dr. Mike Owen, an agronomist at the University of Florida.

"It is considered a fairly major problem in Florida and the Southeast," Owen says, particularly in forests, where it can literally strangle trees and shut out their light.

Controlling kudzu, usually with herbicides, is a costly process that never has been undertaken on a large scale.

But if most scorn kudzu as a once-valuable soil saver run amok, the vine's varied defenders and promoters believe its fall from grace was premature.

In Japan, one of the vine's native countries, hundreds of thousands of pounds of kudzu powder go into confections each year. "The Book of Kudzu" suggests Americans use it as a thickening agent, base for noodles and coating for fried foods.

It was here, not far from what now is Interstate 10, that a turn-of-the-century photographer and naturalist named C.E. Pleas launched a 20-year crusade to convince Americans of kudzu's virtues.

Kudzu actually was introduced in the United States in 1876 at the Japanese pavilion of the Philadelphia Centennial Exposition, where it served as an ornamental vine.

The plant, which may bloom into wysteria-like flowers in late summer, was used by some as decorative foilage by the time Pleas, in 1902, noticed his cows greedily munching it.

Eight years later, Pleas had the first commercial planting of kudzu, some 35 acres of pasture, and determined the vine could be cured as hay for livestock.

Reaction was cautious in the South, where the climate was ideal for the vine. By the mid-1930s, its reputation as a "miracle" soil saver blossomed.

The U.S. Soil Conservation Service began recommending its use for erosion control in 1935; later its soil stabilization properties were widely proclaimed and a huge planting campaign was undertaken.

By 1943, the Atlanta-based Kudzu Club of America had 20,000 card-carrying members who held rallies in support of the vine.

But the love affair didn't last forever. Several factors, including the growth of timber as a Southern crop, led to its decline, according to Robert MacLauchlan, chief plant materials specialist for the Soil Conservation Service.

After World War II, cotton and corn fields gave way to pastures and forests, which were more vulnerable to kudzu's attack.

Say Crises Resolved By Prayer

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Life has its crossroads, its searing intervals when a person momentarily isn't sure which way to go or what to do, but in which the situation compels a choice. Out of experiencing such crises, four noted women say the answers come through prayer.

"In faith, you turn to the source in times of stress and there'll always be direction," says Coretta Scott King. "It may not be what you asked for, but it's what God wants you to do."

She says that was the determining factor, after a 1956 fire-bombing of her home where she and her first child were alone, that forged her initial, fateful commitment to the civil rights cause led by her late husband, Martin Luther King.

Shaken directly by the danger of it, "I had to do some deep soul searching about my commitment to the struggle. I knew I would have to be as committed as my husband." Then and there, in earnest prayer, cradling her child outside their blasted bedroom, she made her commitment, "prepared for whatever might take place."

She and the other three women appeared on a panel at the recent Episcopal Church convention here, describing differing critical times in their lives when they say they found God's guidance through prayer.

The others were Margaret Dehqani-Tafti, who with her husband was nearly killed in Iran and whose son was slain there; Louisa Kennedy, whose husband was among U. S. hostages held in Iran, and U. S. Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Connor.

Mrs. Dehqani-Tafti, wife of the Anglican bishop in Iran, told of his being marked for death by the revolutionaries there and of three Iranian gunmen crashing into their bedroom late one night as they slept.

"God gave me the power at that moment to throw myself over his body," she said. Five shots were fired, all of them missing. "In that instant I was aware of the concerned prayers of thousands around the world."

Afterward, she said, "we realized that God still had some work for us." They managed to get out of the country, but their only son was slain by assassins, "an act of revenge because they had missed his father," she said.

Justice O'Connor's hour of decision came when the offer of the Supreme Court appointment came, the first ever to a woman. "It was like a thunderbolt," she said. If she accepted it, "I knew it would change my life unalterably and the lives of my husband, my children, parents, relatives and friends."

Her "first, immediate instinct was to pray to God about how to respond," she said. "The response derived from prayer was that we are to use whatever talents God has given me."

"I think God has a calling for each of us," she added, and once his will becomes clear and the decision made, "don't look back" but "go forward" with it.

"All of a Christian's life is under God's will," she said. "We have no right to divide our lives between time for working and time for God. We are to serve within whatever profession or trade we are in, not just outside it."

Fieldcrest To Close Mill

EDEN, N.C. (AP) — Fieldcrest Mills Inc. has announed it will phase out operations at its Whiteville Rug plant, which has been operating since 1973.

Officials said foreign imports, currency exchange rates and generally weak economic conditions forced the plant closure. Operations will be cut back over several months and separation pay will be given to 23 employees as they are terminated.

Computer Terminals In The Air And Hotel Room

By NORMAN BLACK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — John Q. Public, a sales manager at a major corporation, is working at his computer terminal in New York when he gets an order from the boss — get out to Los Angeles and help close a major deal.

Two hours later, Public is on the airplane. He checks in by phone for some final instructions, then pulls out a portable terminal provided by the airline and resumes work. When he's done, his latest sales report is transmitted back to New York, from 40,000 feet in the air.

Later that night, Public checks into a hotel. He flips on a small computer terminal in his room, reads several "electronic mail" messages waiting for him from other sales agents and files his own report back to New York on the Los Angeles contract.

Dallas-based Travelhost Inc. plans to begin placing small computer terminals in hotel and motel rooms in January. The company is convinced it can entice hotel operators to place 500,000 terminals in the field by mid-1985.

An unrelated company, Airfone Inc., hopes to begin testing the nation's first commercial air-to-ground telephone system next month. Assuming the experiment works, Airfone officials say it's a small step from an airplane telephone system transmitting voices to a phone system transmitting computer data.

Some preliminary tests indicate that the idea is feasible, says John D. Goeken, founder and president of Airfone, a Washington, D.C.-based company that is now 50 percent owned by the Western Union Corp.

Officials of Airfone and Travelhost, although approaching their ventures from different perspectives, are focusing on the same travel market. The development of video teleconference facilities, allowing corporate executives to meet via television, will never completely replace the need for face-to-face meetings, the officials say.

"This will be the first amenity introduced for the hotel industry in the last 30 years that's significant enough to help push the industry into a new future," says Dr. Lee H. Smith, president of Travelhost. "... this will become a vital service to the in-room traveler that allows him to avail himself of some very good travel-related services in an easy fashion."

Travelhost and another Dallas company, the Quazon Corp., have already developed a simple, "user friendly" computer terminal for the new service. Quazon will manufacture the devices, with the first to be available in January.

Smith says the terminals will prove attractive to hotel operators because they'll receive a payment every time a terminal in one of their rooms is turned on. Travelers, meantime, after punching in a credit card number, will be able to send and receive electronic messages; make airline reservations; check addresses and menus at restaurants; peruse the offerings of merchandisers, and check the stock market and latest news reports.

"If a person can count to 10, he or she can operate this Travelhost terminal," Smith claims.

Travelhost has yet to announce how much the service will cost the traveler, although Smith says the rates "will certainly be competitive with what's out there now for home computer users. A rough ballpark might be $20 an hour during peak time and $7 or $8 during non-peak.

"Portability isn't here yet for computers, and we think the timing is absolutely right and that we can ... capture a significant share of the market," he adds.

While there might not be many people carrying portable computers now, that is clearly something envisioned by Airfone. The company says that one day airline travelers will be able to use their own terminal or a portable device provided by the airline to work during flights.

If you have the equipment to attach a computer to a telephone, he adds, "it doesn't make any difference whether the phone is on the ground or in the air."

Bill Gordon, Airfone's director of network planning, says the company has been developing the air-to-ground telephone service since 1974.

"But it took us until 1979 to ask the Federal Communications Commission to authorize the service and allocate frequencies," he added. "The FCC hasn't done that yet; because they want to see the results of our experiment. We've got licenses now to build 37 ground stations and we're reaching the point of putting the gear into the airplanes.

"The airlines are very interested in this," Gordon concluded. "They want to make the transportation time for their passengers as enjoyable and productive as possible."

Lobbying To Host Reagan

DALLAS (AP) — The 1984 race for the nation's top office hasn't officially begun yet, but managers of some of this city's poshest hotels are already campaigning for the president.

They're quietly lobbying for the right to host President Reagan when he is in Dallas in 1984 for the Republican National Convention.

"There isn't a hotel man out in that city that wouldn't love to have the president of the United States stay in his facility," said Charley Bass, director of the Dallas Convention and Visitors Bureau.

"It's somewhat of an ego thing. It helps your hotel when you can get a picture of the president in your facility," he said.

Republican officials, who recently started scouting the hotels, probably will decide by January or February after consulting with the White House and Secret Service where Reagan will stay, Bass said.

Mrs. Reagan attended a meeting this summer in the Loews Anatole's $600-a-night 2,300-square-foot Sovereign Presidential Suite, decorated with Oriental rugs, chandeliers and antiques.

See Early Raise By Textile Mills

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Pay envelopes for thousands of textile workers may be a little thicker next month, partly because of an upcoming visit by a textile union president, a top local union official claims.

Jim Walraven, Mid-South Director of the Amalgamated Clothing and Textile Workers Union's textile division, was referring to Murray Finley's stops in North Carolina and South Carolina.

"I think he speeded up the announcements," said Walraven.

Companies announcing wage increases affecting 67,000 employees were Cone Mills Corp. of Greensboro, Burlington Industries of Greensboro and Cannon Mills Co. of Kannapolis.

Efficient Solar Cell Developed

By ROBERT LOCKE
AP Science Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Researchers say they have developed a low-cost, high-performance solar cell that may convert sunlight into electricity for utilities more cheaply than oil- or gas-fired turbines.

"We foresee this as a billion-dollar business in the early 1990s," said Arthur H. Firester, head of process and applications research at RCA Corp.'s laboratory in Princeton, N.J.

Researchers around the world are competing to develop commercially feasible photovoltaics — silicon sheets that, with no moving parts, react to sunlight by producing an electric current.

"We think we've developed enough expertise to pick a winner and we picked this," Firester said. "We think the future is amorphous silicon," a patented process developed eight years ago by RCA.

RCA researchers got an enthusiastic reception at a photovoltaics conference in San Diego last week by reporting they had coaxed 10 percent efficiency from a small test version of the device. Efficiency is the percentage of the sun's energy that is converted into electricity and Firester said 10 percent is the minimum for commercial use.

Other versions have hit efficiencies of 14 percent and more but cost as much as $20 a watt, Firester said in an interview. "With this material at 10 percent efficiency, we're estimating the cost at 50 cents a watt." He said further research could eventually push efficiency to near 20 percent.

"Even at 50 cents a watt," he said, "this stuff is not going to compete with coal and nuclear, but what it will do is be cheaper than oil and gas."

Other experts, although enthusiastic about the research, cautioned Monday that the results came from a custom-made square cell just a half-inch on a side. Performance must be maintained in mass-produced, long-lasting cells that measure, in Firester's vision, 2 by 4 feet.

"This was one of the more exciting technical announcements at the conference," said Tony Pearson, program administration manager at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory's photovoltaics center in Pasadena.

"If a commercial product could be put on the marketplace with those parameters (of efficiency and cost) and last something like 20 years, then that would be a real barn-burner," he said.

"But getting into commercial production is complex and risky," Pearson said. "I don't think this rules out any of the other approaches at this time."

Nick Patapoff, photovoltaics expert at Southern California Edison, said the utility has been working with a variety of solar and wind energy systems and "is very interested in (RCA's device). It's very promising ...

"But I don't think it's a sign that everybody else should get out of the business. You're talking on the order of three years just to get a manufacturing line set up ... even if you started right now."

But Patapoff noted the best high-volume price for solar cells now would probably be about $5 a watt and range up to $10 or more.

The costs don't stop at the solar cell, he said. The rest of the system — installation, collecting the electricity and converting it into the appropriate alternating current for home use — can add up to $5 a watt, depending on efficiency.

Patapoff said Firester's goal of holding additional costs to $1 per watt or less may be "somewhat optimistic."

Firester said moving into a manufacturing stage will take about five years and "by business standards, it's probably considered high risk. We see some problems, but we don't see any showstoppers."

He said RCA is aiming not at small rooftop systems for homeowners but at utilities, which could use fields of solar cells.

How Much Insulation Power Do You Need And Where Do You Need It?

Generally speaking, you'll need more insulation in your attic than in walls and floors. Come in and talk to one of our insulation professionals. He can help make your job easier by recommending the type and amount of insulation needed for your home.

How To Measure The Amount You Need

Multiply the length of your attic by its width to get total square footage. Multiply this by either .90 for joists 15" apart or .94 for joist 23" apart. (In most attics it's usually one or the other.) This will give you the amount of insulation needed.

What Is R-Value?
R-value is resistance to heat flow. The higher the R-value, the greater the insulating power. Ask your seller for the fact sheet on insulation R-values.
