HOME DAMAGED BY FIRE — Members of the Greenville Fire-Rescue Department investigate the scene of a blaze that caused heavy damage to the Gene Adams home, 105 Avon Lane, early this morning. Firemen first arriving on the scene found heavy fire in the kitchen area of the house. Adams said he and his family left for school and work about 6:30 a.m. and the kitchen was not used. Adams said he had no indication as to the cause of the blaze. Investigation was continuing. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Cyanide Pill Probe Tries New Scene

By JOHN WOLFE
Associated Press Writer
Authorities investigating seven poisoning deaths in the Chicago area want to question a man who "popped up" in connection with a cyanide death in Philadelphia six months ago, Chicago's police superintendent said today.

Illinois Attorney General Tyrone Fahner said the April 3 cyanide death of a University of Pennsylvania graduate student "offers promise" for possible leads in seven deaths from cyanide-laced Extra-Strength Tylenol in the Chicago area last week.

The death of William Pascual originally was ruled a suicide, but Philadelphia police reopened the case after the Chicago poisonings and discovered that a bottle of Extra-Strength Tylenol capsules found in his apartment contained cyanide that was not detected in the initial investigation.

The Chicago Sun-Times today quoted unidentified police sources as saying a search was being made in the Chicago area for an associate of Pascual, but authorities warned the investigation is still "raw."

The associate, described in newspaper and broadcast reports as a dental student at the University of Pennsylvania, drew attention after Philadelphia police received an anonymous call saying the dental student "knows something about it (the death)," the Chicago Tribune reported.

In an interview on the "Today" show, Chicago Police Superintendent Richard Brzezczek said "there is a gentleman that popped up" in the Philadelphia investigation last April "that we're interested in talking to."

Asked if there were any links between the Chicago and Philadelphia deaths, he replied, "The one link that could possibly be talked about is the fact that there's some indication that the person we want to talk to who's somewhere in the Philadelphia area may have some association with the city of Chicago."

Fahner, heading an investigation into the Chicago-area deaths from cyanide-tainted Extra-Strength Tylenol, said Wednesday the Philadelphia development "offers promise ... in terms of a Chicago angle," but warned "caution is in order" in trying to link the two sets of events.

Brzezczek said authorities did not have a suspect "we can tie some evidence to" in the cyanide deaths.

Philadelphia police said Wednesday that preliminary tests at the time of Pascual's death from cyanide poisoning — ruled a suicide when a note mailed to his mother was found — showed nothing unusual in the Tylenol capsules found in a shoe at his apartment. But tests this week found some of the capsules contained cyanide, said police Chief Inspector Frank Scafidi.

Pascual's widow, Kathleen Burkhalter, was quoted in the Philadelphia Inquirer today as saying she didn't believe her husband killed himself. "There was no motive," she said. "He was not depressed."

Tylenol capsules have been withdrawn from the market nationwide.

64 Hurt In Truck Accident

LYNCHBURG, Va. (AP) — A truck carrying dozens of University of Virginia students to a party overturned and landed on a car, killing one student and injuring 64 people, authorities said.

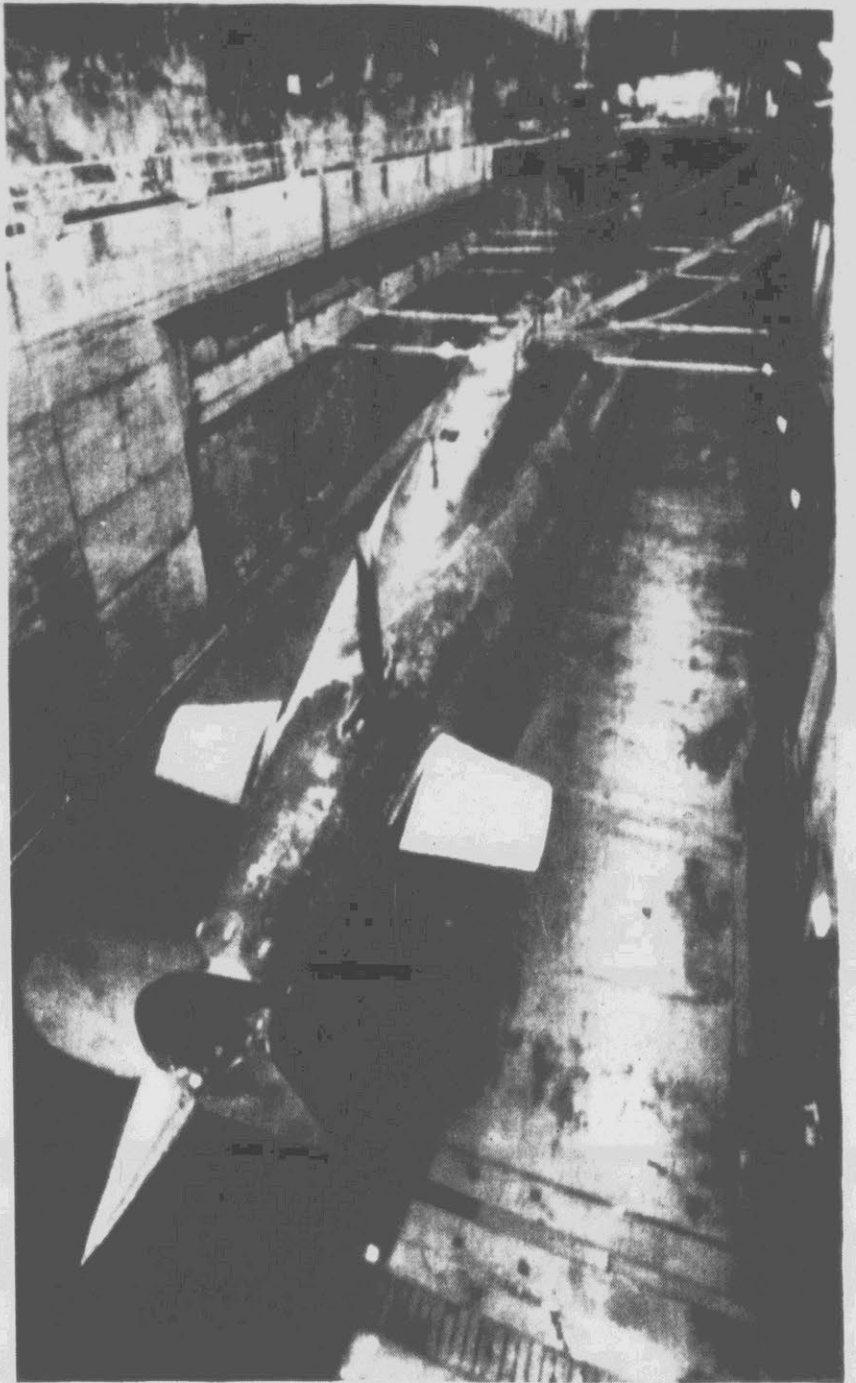

Fifteen students and the car's driver were admitted to Lynchburg General Hospital after the accident Wednesday night, hospital spokeswoman Susan Bumgarner said today. Three were reported in critical condition.

The driver of the car, Marcellus Ligon of Lynchburg, was in fair condition after undergoing surgery early today, said Carol Griffin, spokeswoman for Lynchburg General.

The U-Haul truck was carrying members of the Sigma Chi fraternity and potential fraternity recruits to Randolph-Macon Woman's College here. Fraternities at the university traditionally rent trucks to travel to women's colleges for parties.

State police said 62 students were in the back of the 25-foot truck and two were in the cab. The truck was heading south when it rounded a curve and overturned, landing on a compact car that was heading north, said Officer R.L. Roach.

Roach said no charges had been filed in the accident Wednesday night.

Pres. Reagan Bracing For Report On Jobless

RENO, Nev. AP) — President Reagan, bracing for bad news on unemployment, told a Republican political rally today that critics of his policies should "join us in correcting the ills of the economy rather than carping about it."

Reagan flew here on his fourth campaign foray in four weeks, trying to boost the political fortunes of Republican Gov. Robert List and Chic Hecht, the GOP candidate trying to unseat four-term Sen. Howard Cannon, a Democrat. Both List and Hecht have been loyal supporters of the president's economic program.

Repeating a theme now common in his campaign speeches, Reagan tried to blame Democrats for the recession and unemployment plaguing the nation. "Right now," he said in remarks prepared for the rally, "we're all paying the penalty of those tragic excesses of the past."

Many forecasters are predicting that the jobless rate will surge to 10 percent in the new unemployment figures to be posted Friday. That would give Democrats new ammunition in the last weeks of this campaign season.

"I have some questions for those who will be all over our (television) screens tomorrow," Reagan told his Reno audience.

"Where were they when the economy first started going haywire? What are they offering except the same failed policies they pushed in the past? Why don't they show some real concern for the unemployed and join us in correcting the ills of the economy rather than carping about it?"

Appealing to voters not to abandon him now, Reagan said, "We Americans have been tested by these past few years of discouragement. But we've never been quitters and we're not about to quit now."

He said it was "an unfortunate fact of life that unemployment is one of the last symptoms of recession to yield to recovery."

"You don't know how much I wish there were some quick and easy cure for this terrible economic mess that was so long in the making," Reagan said. "But it does seem to me that the people who created the mess we're in are the last ones who should be delivering sermons on how to get us out."

The president's five-day trip will take him to San Diego, Calif. on Friday for a meeting with the president-elect of Mexico, to his ranch near Santa Barbara for two days off, and to Dallas for more Republican campaigning Monday.

Reagan told an audience of Republican candidates Wednesday at the White House that unemployment was 7.4 percent when he took office 20 months ago, and added: "If, as everybody is worried, it goes to 10 percent, well, then I'll take blame for 2.6 percent."

It was at the same gathering that Reagan lost his temper after being interrupted repeatedly by a Republican congressional candidate from Santa Cruz, Calif., and told him to "shut up." The exchange came as the questioner, Gary Arnold, kept breaking in while Reagan was talking about his economic program.

List's re-election campaign has been saddled with the weight of the state's record-level unemployment, 10.6 percent, and a drop in tourism.

Secretary of State Thad Eure, Transportation Secretary Bill Roberson, Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham, Commissioner of Insurance John Ingram and State Auditor Ed Renfrow were among some 400 persons to attend the fifth annual meeting of the North Tar River Fellowship Club held Wednesday at the Blount Farm on the Old River Road.

Club president Ed Warren, a state representative, said the club is designed to "promote our area — roads, education, industry, health care ..."

Eure, introduced by Warren as "the oldest rat in the Democratic barn," told the gathering, "This area of the state has just started making history." He added that he is always happy to visit this area to "see the true and faithful Democrats here in eastern North Carolina."

Liston Ramsey, speaker of the House of Representatives, told the crowd "this party would not be a success unless somebody" mentioned the East Carolina University medical school. "Fortunately," Ramsey said, "I had the good judgment" to join other legislative supporters of the medical school early in the battle for the four-year school.

Ramsey also said that "if you continue to send state senators and representatives of the same quality," as Sen. Vernon White and House members Ed Warren and Sam Bundy to Raleigh, "you'll win whatever you want because they are great."

Ramsey, a member of the Advisory Budget Commission, was one of a score of House and Senate members to attend the gathering. Other ABC members attending were Rep. Sam Bundy, Rep. Harold Hardison, Sen. Robert Jordan, Rep. Allen Adams and Betty McCain.

Mrs. McCain read a letter from Gov. Jim Hunt citing a "scheduling conflict" for his inability to attend the event and calling the North Tar River Fellowship Club "a great social and political

Dear Abby

Sparks Fly When He Plays Smoking Game

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are separated. When he comes to visit our 10-year-old daughter, I try to make his visits pleasant for all of us.

He is a smoker. I am not. He has agreed not to smoke in my house. However, he teases our daughter by asking her if she wants a cigarette, then he instructs her to get one out of the pack and put it in his mouth. (He doesn't light it.)

He knows I disapprove of this, but he does it in a joking way. Not wanting to cause any arguments, I say nothing.

A few days ago, he put an unlit cigarette in her mouth. I had to leave the room to keep from telling him off in front of our daughter. Later when we were alone, I stated my objections. He brushed them off and said I was "over-reacting."

Soon our daughter will be spending weekends with him, and I am worried that his "joking" with cigarettes will continue. And, of course, he can smoke in his own house.

Am I overreacting? Both my husband and I love this child. How should I handle this?

CONCERNED MOTHER

DEAR CONCERNED: Tell your husband that you disapprove of the positive message he is giving your daughter with regard to smoking. Not only is he letting her think that smoking is OK, he is subtly encouraging her to smoke. The reason is obvious. He's trying to get your goat. Tell your daughter she is not to put a cigarette in her mouth, and forbid your husband to play any more cigarette games with the child.

DEAR ABBY: I am engaged to marry a man who was married before, and we're having a major disagreement. He still wears his wedding ring, even though I have asked him to please put it away. He claims the only reason he wears it is because he "likes" it.

To my way of thinking, a wedding ring is more than just a piece of jewelry — it symbolizes something. Is my request unreasonable?

FOOLISH IN PHOENIX

DEAR FOOLISH: No. Your fiance is either consciously or unconsciously reluctant to "let go" of his first marriage. If you let him put a wedding ring on your finger while he is still wearing his, you are indeed foolish.

DEAR ABBY: Is there a way to keep someone from attending a funeral? A relative of mine is not going to last much longer, and he has told me that if "H" shows up at the wake, funeral or cemetery, I should throw her out!

The dying relative detests "H" with a passion — and for good reason. I promised him that "H" will not get in.

That's my problem, Abby. There will be funeral services in a church. How do you keep someone out of church? And how do you keep her from going to a cemetery?

I have given my solemn promise, and I intend to keep it. But how?

SEEING RED IN READING, PA.

DEAR SEEING: First, advise the person who is not welcome that it will be a private funeral. Then hire a security guard.

Have him stationed at the door together with someone who can identify the person who is not welcome. (You, perhaps?) And if the "crasher" shows up, the security guard will "guide" her gently but firmly away.

Everybody needs friends. For some practical tips on how to be popular, get Abby's Popularity booklet. Send $1 plus a long, self-addressed stamped (37 cents) envelope to Abby, Popularity, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

Wife Speaks Up On Farm Issues

By STEVE KLINE
Associated Press Writer
OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — A group of Nebraska farm wives, frustrated by what they felt was their secondary role in debates over farm policies, gathered in 1976 to do something about their common concerns.

The result was WIFE — Women Involved in Farm Economics.

The women felt they were not being allowed to contribute to the efforts of male-dominated farm groups like the Farm Bureau or Grange, according to the president of the Nebraska chapter of WIFE, Luella Stevens of Gothenberg.

"I was kind of tired of setting up chairs, making coffee and being part of the cute little programs they would work out for the women at their conventions," said Mrs. Stevens.

From that small beginning in Sydney, Neb., WIFE now has 3,000 members in 18 states. And it is claiming growing influence in its struggle for a meaningful voice in farm economics.

"Farm women today are more educated, more sophisticated," said Mrs. Sydney Beck of Pansley, Ala., WIFE national vice president. "They do more on the farm, and they want to do more about the issues."

A month after WIFE was founded, it sent two busloads of farm wives to Washington, where they dressed in red to symbolize the plight of their family budgets. They buttonholed members of Congress to express their anger over low commodity prices.

In contrast to the tractorcade protests of the American Agriculture Movement a few years ago, WIFE members are low-key. "We try to be positive. We research intensively, and then we just try to make our points in Washington," said Mrs. Beck.

WIFE still sends groups of two or three members to Washington every month (and they still wear red), Mrs. Beck said. "Each state takes a month and is responsible for sending someone. One of our biggest battles in getting money for the trips," she added.

What has WIFE accomplished since 1976? Mrs. Stevens said the organization can't point to specific pieces of legislation, but counts as its greatest accomplishment getting its foot in the door in Washington.

The chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, E. "Kika" de la Garza, D-Texas, calls WIFE an "effective" group because it is able to clearly communicate the plight of the farmer.

"We still haven't brought prosperity to agriculture," Mrs. Beck said. "But we're growing in influence."

When they go to Washington, according to

Mrs. Beck, WIFE members try to hammer home the message that many agricultural producers have to pay more to grow food than they get when they sell it. Eliminating that situation is the organization's major goal, she said.

As Mrs. Stevens put it to U.S. Agriculture Secretary John Block when he visited Nebraska last spring, they ask officials: How does the government expect farmers to pay 1981 production costs with 1931 receipts?

Other objectives, Mrs. Stevens said, are to educate a government that WIFE believes does not respond "to the critical farm problems," to give producers a greater voice in shaping agricultural policy, to promote gasohol and further research and development of farm by-products, to encourage development of new markets for U.S. farm products and to guard against imports that harm domestic producers.

"It's a slow, slow process. You have to remember that we're (farmers) only 3 percent of the population. But we're starting to have an influence. They know us in Washington now," said Mrs. Stevens, who has visited the capital twice in the past year.

"Five years ago, we had problems even getting into congressional offices. Now, they seem to even welcome us," she said.

WIFE depends on members dues of $25 a year and private donations. Of the dues, $10 is for the group's national newsletter, "WIFE Line," published in Lewistown, Mont.

None of the officers of the non-profit group is salaried, said Mrs. Stevens. The group's "headquarters" is located in the hometown of the year's national president. This year, June Saylor of Clovis, N.M., is president.

In addition to Nebraska, WIFE has chapters in Kansas, South Dakota, Colorado, Wyoming, Arizona, New Mexico, Texas, Oklahoma, Montana, Washington, Idaho, North Dakota, Alabama, South Carolina, Virginia, Georgia and Florida, according to the group.

A three-train railway accident at Greta Green, Scotland, in 1915, killed 227 persons and injured 250.

League Projects Discussed At Meet

"Funded Projects Within the Service League" was the topic of the program given at the meeting of the Greenville Service League Monday.

Mrs. Charles Wilkerson Jr., program chairman, presented each project chairman, who explained the source of funds and expenditures for projects. This program was designed to update and better acquaint the membership with the changes in policy and funding that have taken place in the last several years. A question and answer period followed.

The league is studying ways to continue funding layettes and emergency charity and a means to increase income for the Laughinghouse Hospital Fund. It was stated that all profits from the Hospital Coffee Shop and Gift Shop must be used to purchase equipment for Pitt Memorial Hospital and can't be channeled into other funds.

President Mrs. Frank Layne welcomed Mrs. Lyman Ormond, of the league advisory board, who read a memorial tribute to Mrs. Rosamond Wagner, who served on the advisory board until her death.

Mrs. Robert VanVeld read a request from the hospital administrator asking the league to purchase an additional Telemetry Monitoring System for the Post Medical Intensive Care Unit. She said it had been approved by the Pitt Memorial Hospital Gifts Committee.

Mrs. Kelly Barnhill, bloodmobile chairman, reported 319 units collected during the two September visits to the Moose Lodge and Tyler Dormitory with 53 members working 176 hours. She reminded members to sign up for the upcoming Bloodmobile visits at Mendenhall Student Center Oct. 26-27.

Mrs. Horton Rountree reported receiving 11 memorials for the Laughinghouse Hospital Fund last month and answering a request.

Rain Or Shine, She Tends Bing's Grave

By KATHERINE KEEVIL, Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — There are no signs leading to the regulation gravestone of the late entertainer Bing Crosby, but an intent grandmother in golfing shoes is a sure guide.

Every Friday without fail, 55-year-old Marion Love Massey visits Holy Cross Cemetery, where she tends not only Crosby's grave, but those of his first wife, Dixie Lee, his father and mother.

Harry and Catherine; his brother, Laurence; and a grandson, Brian.

Mrs. Massey first trims the grass around the markers set into the ground, then scrubs and waxes the markers and the embossed names.

But her most tender care is reserved for the grave of Harry Lillis Crosby, otherwise known as Bing.

Crosby's grave is a shrine to Mrs. Massey, who said she met him when she was working as a hostess for the CBS studio in 1946.

"I can feel him here," she said on an overcast Friday, as she sat on the steps of a grotto a few feet from Crosby's grave.

"He was always jolly and joking with people," she said. "He took care of a lot of people."

She leaves her home in Woodland Hills, 25 miles northwest of the cemetery, in time to arrive at the cemetery by 7 a.m. She tries to get on the road again before the evening's rush-hour traffic begins.

Mrs. Massey began visiting the crooner's grave a month after his death on Oct. 14, 1977. There were no flowers at the site, so she decided to take on the responsibility.

Nothing keeps her from the task. Two years ago, she backed up her car from her garage and thought she heard a crunch, so got out to survey the damage. The car ran over her, breaking her shoulder and foot. She had a friend bring her to the cemetery for her next visit.

On his last birthday, she set out an arrangement with an accompanying message: "Happy Birthday, Bing, May 2, Love, Marion." As a remembrance of a favorite Crosby sport, she placed a small plastic golfer, a cart and a tee nearby.

At Christmas, she brings a tree, which she decorates.

"I don't know of any other cases in the cemetery with someone coming as consistently," said Philip Birgel, general manager of Holy Cross.

Birgel said that Mrs. Massey abides by the cemetery rules for markers. He also said that there had been no contact with the Crosby family, but he assumes they don't have anything against Mrs. Massey maintaining the grave site.

Hard Times Are Boom Times For Gourmet Food

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Illegal narcotics from the same part of the world have an easier time making it to the United States than the coffee bean known Jamaica Blue Mountain.

Historically the coffee has been shipped to Britain for roasting, then re-exported. It winds up costing around $20 per pound in the United States — when you can find it. On top of that, one dealer says, many purveyors dilute the real stuff with up to 98 percent of beans from other sources.

Patrick Sibbles, chief executive of Coffee Industries Ltd., of Kingston, Jamaica, promises to change all that.

At a recent International Food and Wine Show, Sibbles said his firm has begun exporting the coffee direct to the United States.

It is roasted in Jamaica, exported as a "value-added" product and is or will soon be available in major eastern cities, retailing at just over $18 a pound, Sibbles said.

He said it will also be available on the West Coast within a few weeks.

Demand for costly foods is rising despite the recession, another exhibitor said, because "small luxuries like gourmet foods always are popular in a low economy."

Dennis Balint, western division manager of Universal Foods Corp., said his company's 1982 best-seller list includes tortellini, ravioli, Pommery mustards, pizza sticks, Irish biscuits and vegetarian herb pate.

Other advances in fancy eating and drinking unveiled at the San Francisco show:

—Le Trois Petits Cochons of New York City, pate makers, said they're expanding to other U.S. outlets. Their products include pate de lapin a l'armagnac —

"If they would oppose it, we would naturally have to respect their wishes and advise the individual accordingly," he said. "I'm sure they must be aware of it, with all the publicity."

Mrs. Massey, a grandmother of three, said that her family doesn't resent her devotion to Crosby. In fact, her husband, Lee, tells her when Crosby's movies are on television.

At the cemetery, she is joined by an assortment of regular visitors who make it "just like home," Mrs. Massey said. The more knowledgeable can point out the graves of Bela Lugosi, Jimmy Durante, Charles Boyer, Louella Parsons and Sharon Tate Polanski.

"I feel good when I leave here," she said.

rabbit and pork meat with prunes and armagnac, a French brandy.

—Shellfish canned by a process developed in Chile was displayed by the Cocosa Co., of Pasadena, Calif. Fresh-caught clams, sea snails and abalone are placed in a holding tank on the boat for two hours before they are killed, shelled then canned on board. The products are said to have a three-year shelf life without refrigeration.

—The makers of a new Italian liqueur, Kambusa l'amaricante, are looking for a U.S. distributor. The Bonomelli company, of Milan, says the liqueur also acts as a digestive, although it can be drunk before a meal. The herbal drink has the bittersweet taste of Campari but is more intense and much heavier in consistency.

—Light beer from Japan, first available in California, is expanding distribution into New York and Honolulu. A 12-ounce bottle of the Kirin label beer contains 105 calories, its makers say.

—Quiche and crepe mixes from Matrice, San Francisco, need only water and the addition of specialty ingredients as desired prior to cooking.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

My friend, Hazel, dropped by the other day and was amazed to find that another child had moved back home with us.

"I'm so proud of Russell and his independence," she bragged. "You wouldn't catch him living at home with us. After all, he is 26 years old!"

"Does he have his own apartment?" I asked.

"Apartment! My dear, he has his own house. Dan and I mean, at the end of all those years, what have you got to show for it except a bunch of rent receipts?"

"You bought his home?"

"It was the least we could do," she said. "After all, where was he going to put all that furniture he carted away for the last eight years? It's all worked out perfect. Just when we made the last payment on his car, his lease was up on the apartment."

"You bought his car?"

"How else could he get to his father's plant? We originally bought him a motorcycle, but those things are so dangerous. When we paid his insurance premiums, they told us because he rode a motorcycle, he was a high risk. We couldn't afford those kind of rates."

"You pay his insurance?"

"Only his car and his health. I mean what are kids supposed to do these days? Most of them can't even afford to be sick. We figured insurance was safer than taking a chance on being hit with a hospital bill cold turkey. Especially since he's taking some night classes and burning the candle at both ends."

"A lot of kids are going to school part-time."
"It's all we can afford," she said. "What with his food, utilities, and the new baby coming."
"He's married?" I asked.
"Again. Believe you me, it's not true that two can live cheaper than one. The girl eats like a horse. But she's much nicer than the one we pay alimony to. Now there's a piece of work. I worry about Russell, I really do. All that responsibility. The future so iffy. But it's like Dan and I told him. You have to get out of the nest and stand on your own two feet sometime."
As I saw her to the door she leaned over and whispered, "Do him a favor. Boot him out. It's the only way he's going to know what independence is all about. He'll either sink or swim."

Gliding Into New Tax

For many of us, the world of business frequently is confusing. But one business announcement this week is quite clear. R.J. Reynolds is trying to eat its cake from both ends and still have a four-tiered beauty for show.

Along with the other tobacco manufacturing companies, Reynolds publicly decried the vote in Congress to double the federal tax on cigarettes to 16 cents a pack as of Jan. 1. Everyone in the industry agreed — growers, smokers, manufacturers, processors, shippers. Now along comes Reynolds with a grandiose scheme to "ease the impact" of the eight-cent tax hike. How? Reynolds raised its own price by four cents last week.

Reynolds advertising rhetoric makes the whole thing confusingly clear. It appears the company plans to use income from that four cents between now and January for a promotional campaign. On Jan. 1, the four cents would be transformed into half of that tax increase. By Reynolds' reasoning, the public — that's the smoker — has been led slowly into a major increase in his cost while the industry — including Reynolds — has had the benefit of a major advertising campaign to keep sales up at the expense of the consumer.

That's the same kind of logic that has resulted in a situation where U.S. tobacco companies provide technology and money for growers in other countries that then produce tobacco cheaper than it can be produced in this country.

The result of that kind of maneuvering has been clearly demonstrated during the current tobacco auction season. Buying companies have been slack in their purchases, especially of the tobacco they can buy elsewhere at a cheaper price, and the growers' cooperative has again filled its storage bins with tobacco that couldn't be sold at a respectable price.

It's the same as if Reynolds were saying to the smokers: OK, you habit-ridden puffers, you pay for our advertising so that we can keep our sales where they are ... or you'll pay that eight-cent tax plus more to us come Jan. 1. Or put another way, we the smokers will be the ones to suffer — not Reynolds.

Philip Morris and Lorillard followed Reynolds' announcement with increases of their own, but at least they made no effort to claim they were helping the consumer. After all, the increases are expected to boost the companies' profits by about $200 million between now and Jan. 1.

Reynolds is the company that distributed those "Pride in Tobacco" stickers, caps and whatever. Perhaps the Reynolds decision-makers ought to look at that slogan more often.

THE GUY WHO'S BEEN WIELDING INFLUENCE!

By JAMES KILPATRICK

How To Evict A Skunk?

SCRABBLE, Va. — It was early June, if memory serves, when we first observed the hole. It was a hole about the size of a softball, too large to be a chipmunk hole, too small to be a groundhog hole, and because we could not imagine what animal had made this hole under the cottage, we put the matter out of mind. Now we know.

Knowledge is not always to be preferred to ignorance. The hole had been made by a skunk, and the skunk is dwelling there now.

So that you will fully understand the dimensions of this quandary, I should explain that the cottage was built around 1924 by old Mr. Corbin. He was not old Mr. Corbin then, of course; he would have been a young and virile Mr. Corbin. He felled some nearby oak trees, sawed them into honest 2-by-4s and 1-inch sidings, and built the cottage with his own hands. But he built it with no particular foundation, right next to the ground, so that on the south side there's nothing to prevent a snake or a chipmunk, or as matters have developed, a skunk, from gaining easy access.

In 1973 we enlarged the old cottage by adding two rooms for my office, but we kept two bedrooms for guests. One of these bedrooms is now occupied by our daughter-in-

JAMES J. KILPATRICK law Mila, who came back from Europe with us 10 days ago. She is about seven and a half months pregnant. There you have the picture: Mila in the office; Rosebud under the house.

How do we know our unwelcome tenant is a skunk? It is not because of any telltale aroma. I will emphasize that point in a moment. This is why. On the Wednesday before we went to Europe on Friday, we returned from Culpeper about 3 o'clock in the afternoon. Broad daylight. There was Rosebud by the cottage. At our approach she slipped into that hole as gracefully as Margot Fonteyn doing a knee bend. Whish! You could tell she knew her own front door. I filled the hole with dirt and tamped it down, knowing the exercise was futile, and sure enough, the next morning the hole had been neatly reopened. It is still open; it is still being used.

Rosebud has been constantly in the back of my mind since that day. Indeed, I have thought of little else. Cruising up the Rhine, I was possessed by wild imaginings. A guillotine, perhaps? A booby-trapped shotgun just outside the hole? An electric eye that would ring an alarm in my bedroom? Maybe a trap would do the job. Poison gas? The key is to discover when Rosebud is in and when she is out, for if we knew definitely when she had gone shopping, we could barricade that hole with concrete blocks. But short of posting Rick Johnson as an all-night sentry, which surely would puzzle Mila, how are we to know?

Rick is our caretaker. He is a volunteer fireman; he heads the local rescue squad; he lives at the foot of our hill, and he can do anything. He is a wonderful young man, but he loves animals and would not swat a fly if he could shoo the fly away. I discussed the matter with Rick. My suggestion was that he negotiate a friendly solution. Just talk to Rosebud, I said. We do not want to institute eviction proceedings. Explain the situation nicely, Rappahannock County is big enough for all of us.

A part of the problem, you see, is that this creature has not been a nuisance. Indeed, she approaches the ideal tenant: no loud parties, no rock music, no smell of cabbage. No smell at all. My strong inclination is to do nothing. The cardinal principle of statecraft, said Randolph, is never needlessly to disturb a thing at rest.

We have decided not to inform Mila. She is a Spanish girl, the lovely child of the diplomatic world, fluent in three languages, a beloved daughter-in-law, but she is not acquainted with such American phenomena as a skunk under her bedroom. This decision, I think, is sound. A little knowledge,

Close Rein On Queries

By JAMES GERSTENZANG Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) — With increasing frequency, reporters covering President Reagan are being cut off in their efforts to question the president in anything less than a structured setting for which he has been thoroughly briefed.

Two days in a row last week, a White House aide took pains to limit the questioning of the president. It was made clear such steps were being taken at the direction of senior staff members.

The president spoke to Republicans one afternoon on Capitol Hill. As Reagan wound up his remarks, assistant White House press secretary Mark Weinberg moved several reporters away from the president as they were about to question him about the death of a U.S. marine in Lebanon.

One reporter was told that the president's senior aides anticipated a question about the marine's death and wanted the president to avoid talking about it.

A day earlier, when Reagan spoke at several political events in Richmond, Va., Weinberg switched off a television light in the middle of questioning about Lebanon, and the president walked out of the room.

On Capitol Hill, when the president emerged from the Cannon Office Building, where he spoke, reporters and camera crews were kept at least 50 yards away. On his return to the White House, he walked out to the South Lawn where arrangements were being made for an evening barbecue for members of Congress. But again reporters were ordered away from him.

Before the president left the White House for the Capitol, the assistant press secretary said that for security reasons, reporters would be kept far enough away from Reagan so that he would not pause to answer their questions, even though the Capitol Hill street had been cleared of all pedestrians.

Reagan was being accompanied to the House of office building by a small group of reporters, known as a pool, who were expected to report to their colleagues on his motorcade from the White House. There was no limit on the number of reporters allowed to cover the speech to the Republicans.

In their report afterward, two "pool reporters," Bruce

Drake of the Daily News, and Sarah Fritz of U.S. News & World Report, gave this short-hand, tongue-in-cheek account, making references to broadcast reporters who tried to call out questions:

"Only noteworthy items are the White House efforts to prevent any opportunity to shout questions. When president began moving off the rostrum to his right, Weinberg quickly reined in the eminent Mr. (Frank) Sesno (of AP Radio) and his Killer Mike (microphone) to forestall a question, which would have been on the Marine death in Lebanon. "When Reagan exited the Cannon Building, pool was kept more than a half block away where Ms. (Andrea) Mitchell (of NBC) stewed out of shouting distance with her question about a report that Marine was killed by a cluster bomb."

Later that day, the president did respond to a question about Lebanon, while making his way to a picnic table at the barbecue.

He chatted with two senior advisers, and then, when asked whether there was any news from Lebanon, replied, "We're still checking the details."

Was there any change, he was asked? "No, just grief," he replied.

A year ago, White House aides moved to limit questions called out to the president in the Oval Office when he posed for pictures and reduced the number of reporters allowed into such sessions.

At the time, they said questions could be asked at the president's regular news conferences and at informal question-and-answer sessions that he would hold with some frequency.

But his news conference last week was his first in two months. It was preceded, as has become the custom, by nearly two days of presidential preparation. The most recent "mini-news conference," in the White House press briefing room, was in August, ending a three-month drought.

The infrequency with which Reagan engages in a question-and-answer session with White House reporters, however, does not mean that his views are not being publicized.

Several times a week, reporters and cameras are allowed to record his comments, to visiting business

New Nursing Test Approved

Taking a new test, 77 of 82 ECU School of Nursing graduates passed the state nursing boards which were offered last July.

The result was pleasing to officials of the school. Dean Emily Henning sees the new tests as more nearly reflecting what nursing is about. They better indicate a nurse's knowledge and experience, she said.

Pitt Community College nursing department chairman Judy Kuykendall agreed that the new tests are an improvement, although PCC graduates have yet to take it.

Certainly it is impressive that such a large percent of the ECU graduates who took the test passed it. There was improvement in percentage passing for other nursing programs in the state, also. This does not necessarily mean that the test has been made easier. Rather, the new test may be more in line with the training and experience that North Carolina nursing graduates are getting today.

Money Not There

By PAUL T. O'CONNOR RALEIGH — A senator sat in the Legislative snack bar last June shortly before adjournment of the budget session. "This used to be fun when we had a lot of money to spend," he said as he downed a hot dog with mustard and onions. "It's not so much fun anymore."

If he thought things were bad last year, wait til he gets back to Raleigh in January. He'll find state employees and teachers clamoring for a pay raise and the health plan facing gigantic cost increases. But there won't be any surplus from which to fund any of this. Gov. Jim Hunt reports revenue growth is so small he's having trouble paying this year's bills.

Hunt has said a pay raise is his top priority. So let's look at how that might come about. Each one percent increase in salary, across-the-board, will cost the state about $30 million. Anything less than 4 or 5 percent and the governor gets called cheap and the teachers start politicking for new legislative candidates. So let's say we need $150 million. Add to that the reinstatement of merit raises and the expected increase in health care costs — about $130 million. Traditionally, there are four ways to get that money. If the state spends less than

To the editor:

In these times of economic struggle, the last thing a person needs is to be asked for money. Also, in these times of moral and social desiccation, one cannot afford to allow a program to collapse that has helped dozens of young people come off the streets, off drugs and alcohol, and on to the good news of Jesus Christ.

The Refreshing Outreach run by Dick and Marsha Arno, Route 2, Box 84, Farmville, is in desperate need of financial help. This had become a home to runaways and young people involved in alcohol and drug abuse who had before been struggling through the pressures of an uncaring society. Through the Arnos' loving care, they had been led in the only direction in which they could have found the support and hope for the future they needed — to God.

So many people have heard of the caring assistance received at The Refreshing that hundreds had to be turned away toward other centers. Just when The Refreshing was beginning to expand and open its doors to more young people, the entire operation was flooded out in a violent rainstorm — a total loss. Dick Arno is trying to regroup, but without funds, it has appeared hopeless at times. But still, trusting totally in God, he wades forward with an assured faith that his needs will be met.

Dick Arno is not the type of man to ask for help, but I am asking as a Christian brother of his and as a human who sees not one human in need, but hundreds, perhaps thousands in truly desperate need of help. When Jesus said, "Lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven," I think He was referring to needs just like this.

To the editor:

The ECU Symphony Orchestra gave a lovely pop concert at a lakeside setting on a nearby country estate Sunday. This town and whole community is so fortunate to have such quality music offered for free. So, where were all the people?

For one who has moved here from Washington, D.C., with all that city has to offer in fine music, I am amazed and proud of this local orchestra right here in our midst. I would hope that more and more people, lovers of music and potential lovers of music, will attend each and every one of these future orchestral offerings. I can promise they will never leave a concert disappointed. Good show, East Carolina. Once again your orchestra has offered an enrichment to this town that money cannot buy.

Consumer May Be Frail Reed

By JOHN CUNNIFF AP Business Analyst NEW YORK (AP) — To those struggling to keep abreast of bills, often without a job to help finance the effort, it must seem incredibly naive to hear it said again and again: The consumer will spend us out of the recession.

The Reagan administration, promising recovery, says it. Manufacturers pray for it. Brokers assure their customers it will occur. Economists proclaim it in their seemingly erudite but often revised analyses of the marketplace.

Why? Because, it is admitted by many of those who continue to make the forecast, the consumer offers the only immediate possibility for recovery before the end of the year, remote as that possibility may be.

Other candidates for leadership have bowed out. The federal government is seeking to hold down spending.

Business is loaded with debt and dares not spend for expansion. State and local governments just haven't got the money.

On the other hand, some sets of statistics suggest that the consumer segment is in the best position of all to spend, having reduced its installment debt, raised its savings rate, and benefitted from more disposable income. Not by much, to be sure, but enough to give hope.

In the consumer there is hope, and hope, therefore, has become the basis of many forecasts, especially those made by political figures and by those who otherwise are seeking to sell something, such as carmakers and stock brokers.

But now the suspicion is growing that, despite the apparent statistical evidence, the consumer may have neither the means nor the willingness to comply with the expectations. A breakdown of the statistics reveals weaknesses.

While disposable income has risen, for example, not all has gone into the pockets of consumers, and so is not available for spending. Much interest income is tied up; it cannot be used for spending without incurring penalties.

Aggregate numbers — for savings or income, for example — can also be skewed by extremes. Wealthy consumers have the ability to earn large amounts of interest. But the unemployed, those working reduced hours, and those who have given up looking — about 17 million — may have little or no interest income.

Some consumers also have enjoyed other additions to their assets that cannot be touched. Into this category fall employer contributions to pension and insurance programs and more rarely, delayed compensation plans. Moreover, while many families have enhanced their assets over the past few years they have done so by stretching their budgets to the limit. And many of these are the same people that Detroit had hoped would buy automobiles.

Besides ability — or inability — to spend, another consideration is getting renewed attention. That is, many consumers have expressed their lack of willingness to spend regardless of their financial position. They are insecure.

And so, having watched and waited for consumers to get back into the swing of things, uncertainties are now working their way into the forecasts of those who had expected them to lead the economy out of the wilderness.

That consumers will do so remains the most popular forecast in circulation. But they must think: What other choice is there if you hope for recovery?

There is no excuse for not being able to count up to nine. Indeed, you don't even have to go beyond your fingers!

The bidding was simple enough. However, all too many times we have seen some weird contract reached when North feels it incumbent upon him to jump to three diamonds in response to his partner's opening bid—"But partner, I had a five-card suit." Even worse is when North opts to bid two diamonds and languishes there. Although North has only nine points, he does have a fair five-card suit and good intermediates, so his jump to the no trump game is fully justified.

With his useless hand, West chose a top-of-nothing lead. It had tremendous, though undeserved, success.

Participant In Duke Program

LAGRANGE, Ga. — Jeff Holley, 14, participated in Duke University's Talent Identification Program recently. He spent three weeks studying geometry there.

He is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Richard Holley of LaGrange and is the grandson of Mrs. R.H. Worthington of Ayden, N.C.

Holley's involvement in the TIP program goes back two years when he was one of 9,000 academically top-rated seventh graders from throughout the Southeast selected in Duke's first annual talent search.

Holley is now a freshman student at LaGrange High School.

REVIVAL
WINTERVILLE — Harvest revival services will continue through Friday night at Morning Star Holy Church. The services start at 8 p.m.

Declarer played low from dummy. East won the queen and shifted to the jack of hearts. Declarer tried the finesse. West took his king and continued hearts, and the defenders could not be prevented from scoring at least three heart tricks, the ace of diamonds and a club. Down one.

Once the ace of diamonds is forced out, declarer has at least nine tricks. Therefore, there is no need to jeopardize his contract by playing a low club from dummy. If declarer rises with the ace, the defenders cannot get more than two tricks in that suit because the combined J-10 guarantee a second stopper. Declarer can then proceed to knock out the ace of diamonds, and use the king of spades as an entry to the table, if necessary, to run the suit. At worst, correct defense will hold declarer to his contract. If the defenders try to beat him in the club suit, he will make an over-trick.

Will we ever see the day when there is a home computer at every bridge table to assist in the counting process?

Govm't Scraps Publications

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is scrapping nearly 2,000 government publications in an effort to save $21 million next year. That still leaves 10,000 federal pamphlets and booklets, most of which are distributed free.

Administration officials said Wednesday the publication hit list only targets materials that are either duplicated by other government publications, available from other publishers, or of minimal informational value.

Most of the publications to be eliminated deal with farming, the environment, jobs, and health issues. Others tell how to buy a Christmas tree and clean a kitchen sink.

Alternatives To Tylenol

WASHINGTON (AP) — Aggressive marketing made Tylenol No. 1 in the massive U.S. pain reliever market, but there are several alternatives for people wary about the product in the wake of the Chicago cyanide poisonings.

Other brands of acetaminophen — the generic name for Tylenol — are available, as well as numerous aspirin-based pain relievers.

pushing the idea. Third choice, pay for a raise with the increase we can expect in the tax collections next year. State economists will have that projection ready by the end of the month but they won't release it until January. But Williams doesn't expect the projection to be that encouraging for fiscal years 1983-85 and this is really a dangerous way of writing up a budget.

Fourth choice, cut money out of the base budget and use it for a pay raise. Most likely this is where the pay raise will come from, sources say.

In past years, the legislature has completely axed some programs but mostly they've trimmed programs. They cut travel budgets and eliminated unfilled public relations jobs. They froze new equipment purchases and said schoolchildren could use an old textbook for another year. But state officials say most of that trimming is finished now, there's not a great deal of that easy stuff that's left to cut.

So now come programs. And the prime targets will have to be education and human service programs. The public schools get $1.5 billion and the universities $600 million a year. Human service programs get $560 million. "If you cut everything else in the budget, you can't do much for a pay raise," Williams says with a bit of exaggeration. But it is true that cutting the whole Department of Administration's $55 million budget would only save enough for a two percent salary increase. There is talk that a move maybe made to increase class sizes. If you put more children in one room, you can hire fewer teachers. Also, you can't expect the regional education centers to come under attack and health insurance benefits to be trimmed. And in any program that survived the Legislature's 1981 base budget hit may have another storm to weather. Next year, the Legislature will find itself caught between state employees who want more money and advocates of programs that are about to be cut. It probably won't be much fun.

Bush In N.C., Says GOP Will Do Well In November

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Democrats will feel the excesses of their predecessors when the American people go to the polls in November, Vice President George Bush believes.

The nation's current economic problems are a "mess the American people still say was left to us by our predecessors," he said.

Bush stumped the state Wednesday, visiting GOP congressmen and candidates alike in a tour of North Carolina. Today Bush is to attend two events for freshman Republican Rep. William Hendon of the 11th District.

In a partisan speech at the Raleigh Sheraton Motel Wednesday night, Bush said Democrats must bear the blame for 20 years of excessive government spending.

Attending the event were GOP Sens. Jesse Helms and John East, 6th District Rep. Gene Johnston, and Republican congressional candidates Red McDaniel of the 3rd District, Jim McIntyre of the 1st District, and Ed Johnson of the 7th.

Earlier in the day, Bush attended a $1,000-per-couple dinner at the home of Tom Ellis, chairman of the National Congressional Club.

Bush visited the Raleigh area to plug the candidacy of Republican Bill Cobey, who is challenging Democrat Ike Andrews for election to the 4th District.

Over 100 people attended the fund-raiser at Ellis' home, Cobey supporters said.

Bush also traveled to Winston-Salem, where Republican Anne Bagnal is challenging incumbent Democrat Stephen Neal for his 5th Congressional District seat.

In Winston-Salem, Bush said that next month's election is a "test to see how the American people view conditions out there." Bush said the GOP would do well in the congressional elections.

"Not that there's not tough problems," he said. "The president is only beginning to turn the country around after decade upon decade of going in one direction."

"But on balance, you're going to see things work out pretty darn well in these elections," Bush said.

Speaking at a fund-raising lunch for Ms. Bagnal, Bush said the consumers can feel some of the accomplishments of President Reagan's administration.

Bush said inflation has been reduced more than half to an annual rate of 5.9 percent. Cutbacks in business regulation will save consumers and business more than $70 billion over the next decade, Bush said, adding that real average weekly earnings are up for the first time in five years. The administration has cut the rate of growth in federal spending and provided the first real tax cut in 20 years, Bush noted.

"Now all of this is in jeopardy," he said. "The leaders of the Democratic Party ... have launched a frontal attack on the president's program for economic recovery, including turning around the tax reductions we've already passed."

Bush blamed previous Democratic policies for "a legacy of recession, skyrocketing interest rates and unemployment" and said the American electorate now faces a choice of more Republican policies or a return to heavy Democratic spending.

"The question now before the electorate is: Will these important gains for the Americans now be abolished? Will these tax deductions be taken back in next year's Congress?" he asked.

He also said detractors who say the Reagan administration has no compassion are wrong.

Bush also found time to go jogging with Johnston, and also toured an R.J. Reynolds cigarette manufacturing plant and met with workers before flying to Raleigh.

His last visit to North Carolina was in April 191, when the vice president visited to rally support for Reagan's economic package.

Industry Builds For The Future

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although hard hit by unemployment, the construction industry is spending money to create new skilled workers for the future.

The nation will need some 3.5 million new craft workers by 1990, according to the U.S. Department of Labor. Construction services will be needed to handle the building and maintenance backlog of public service systems estimated at $3 trillion in value, says the Associated General Contractors of America, a trade association of general contractors.

To replace workers who retire, or change jobs, AGC has developed a variety of programs to educate and train not only those in the construction industry but also anyone else interested in a career in the industry.

Administration Proposing To Set Medicare Fees

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hospital industry officials are applauding the Reagan administration's proposal to set Medicare fees in advance, but say they still have some reservations about the payment plan.

Health and Human Services Secretary Richard S. Schweiker unveiled the outline Wednesday of a Medicare prospective payment plan that would tie hospital fees to patient diagnoses.

Lay The Blame On 'Predators'

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — "Violent predators" — dangerous, young, active and persistent criminals — may be causing rehabilitation programs to look like failures, the Rand Corp. says.

In a six-year study being released today, Rand found criminals can be classified by the specific combinations of crimes they commit and the worst were those who commit robbery, assault and drug dealing.

These so-called "violent predators" are poor candidates for rehabilitation, said the researchers, and "by focusing on the less serious but still highly active offenders, existing rehabilitation programs may prove more effective than they currently appear."

Hospitals would get a pre-determined fee, regardless of how long or how briefly a patient stayed for treatment.

Congress in August ordered the administration to devise a new payment scheme for the $56 billion Medicare program, which pays hospital and medical bills for 29 million elderly or disabled Americans.

Congress also ordered cuts to save $13.3 billion — including $6 billion in hospital costs — over the next three years.

Schweiker told reporters Medicare reform is needed to end the "constant litany of upward hospital costs."

Even though the Medicare program is operating in the black now, it faces serious financial problems by the end of this decade.

Under the administration proposal, hospitals would receive fees based on how each case falls into a spectrum of 467 standard diagnoses.

Schweiker complained that Medicare now pays hospitals "whatever they spend — which is obviously a disincentive" to hold down costs.

For example, he said, Medicare may pay $1,500 to one hospital for treating a heart attack, while another gets $9,000, with no difference in the quality of the care.

But the administration plan calls for all hospitals in a standard metropolitan area to be paid the same fee, with some adjustments to reflect local wage rates and to recognize the extra costs in teaching hospitals.

Alex McMahon, president of the American Hospital Association, said Schweiker should experiment with a variety of prospective payment methods.

Basing payments on the "diagnostic-related groups" is "exactly the wrong way to go," said McMahon. "There is a readiness to change in the field and we shouldn't be tied to a single solution at this point."

Michael Bromberg, executive director of the Federation of American Hospitals, said his group of profit-making hospitals supports the diagnostic-related approach, but has "a lot of questions about whether they have the correct data" on hospital costs.

He added: "What some medical records clerk wrote down as the diagnosis may be way off ... We want to take a close look at the data they're going to use."

Schweiker said he hopes Congress will pass a prospective payment bill in time to start a national program by next Oct. 1. States probably would get an extra year for transition to the new system.

Meanwhile, Schweiker said he will use his administrative powers to encourage states to switch to prospective payment rates for Medicare.

His department recently gave Massachusetts and New York a green light to begin experiments with prospective payment methods designed to produce savings of at least 1 percent to 5 percent in Medicare costs.

In a policy statement to appear in the Federal Register on Friday, Schweiker will notify states that they will have to follow his payment plan if they want to undertake similar statewide experiments with Medicare.

The New York and Massachusetts experiments involve set fees for all major third-party insurance programs, including Medicaid and Blue Cross and Blue Shield, as well as Medicare.

The health secretary said Medicare will spend $38 billion on hospital care alone in 1983 and, unless checked, its hospital bill will jump by 52 percent from 1983 to 1985.

He said Medicare's hospital expenditures soared 19.2 percent annually from 1979 to 1982 and currently are rising at a 15.5 percent pace that is triple the overall inflation rate.

Schweiker said the administration is still interested in trying to give the elderly vouchers to shop around for Medicare services. That would be compatible with this payment plan, he said.

GOING DOWN TO THE RIVER — With a canoe borrowed from the university's intramurals office, East Carolina University students Christine Vandever, left, of Havelock and Rhonda Rice of Gastonia use skateboards to transport the craft and their picnic goodies across campus to the Tar River. The ingenious method of moving the canoe to the river worked and the girls enjoyed their outing on a bright, sunny October afternoon. (ECU News Bureau Photo by Marianne Baines).

Knox Campaigning For Governorship

Charlotte mayor Eddie Knox said here Wednesday that his campaign for governor is "going pretty good."

Knox, in Greenville to attend the annual North Tar River Fellowship Club meeting, said he has spent much time "speaking ... and at events like this ... more than we had expected at this stage." He said his bid for the Democratic nomination in 1984 has progressed to "the point that people come up to meet you."

"I've been down east — Tarboro, Rocky Mount a couple of times, Franklin County, Cumberland County, New Hanover three or four times, Goldsboro, Robeson County three times — I think the only way to get there is meet a lot of people."

EDDIE KNOX

Knox said in his opinion the most critical issue now facing the state is unemployment.

"I don't think we've experienced the worst yet," Knox emphasized. Worse economic times, Knox said may not be "just around the corner." They "may be lurking at our door."

Knox also cited crime as another major issue of his campaign.

Faces Prison On Fraud

AIKEN, S.C. (AP) — The 1981 U.S. Jaycees Outstanding Young Farmer, Danny Bundrick, was sentenced to prison for farm fraud, but won't have to report until Jan. 14 so he can harvest his fall crops.

Bundrick, a state representative who resigned his seat in July, faces three five-year prison terms, to run concurrently, U.S. District Judge Charles E. Simons Jr. imposed the sentence Wednesday.

Bundrick pleaded guilty to three fraud counts and agreed to pay back $700,000 owed the federal government for fraudulently obtained loans and crop disaster payments.

City's Building Activity Lagged

Building activity in Greenville during June climbed slightly from May results but fell short of the value of permits issued here in April, according to a statewide report released by Labor Commissioner John Brooks.

Permit values of $1,277,265 for June compared with $1,105,324 reported in May and $2,666,933 in April.

For the first six months of 1982, permits valued at $7,976,882 were issued for local construction, ranking Greenville 13th among the 44 reporting cities of more than 10,000 population.

Construction authorized in Pitt County during June totaled $2,693,922, up from $1,220,282 reported in May but down slightly from April's $2,811,152. The June figure included $395,950 for 12 single-family units, $1,207,800 for 40 multifamily units, $771,315 for 17 non-residential structures; and $318,857 for 78 additions and alterations. June building activity dropped 10.8 percent from last June, to 3,482 units from 3,904, the commissioner reported. He said, however, that value gained 3.8 percent from $93,922,796 to $97,530,719.

Brooks said construction authorized in the 44 reporting cities during the first six months dropped from 20,762 to 16,146 units. Estimated value of the building dropped from $556,511,515 to $482,031,053.

Compared to last June, the average construction cost for a single-family home rose 3.8 percent, to $42,755 from $41,194.

and for the first six months in several eastern towns included: Elizabeth City, $109,812, $3,282,797; Goldsboro, $289,295, $7,324,465; Jacksonville, $1,469,438, $10,139,418; Kinston, $68,000, $2,395,662; New Bern, $357,805, $2,943,628; Roanoke Rapids, $211,402, $1,441,983; Rocky Mount, $684,589, $4,953,657; Tarboro, $159,200, $10,918,240; and Wilson, $892,929, $7,015,482.

Raleigh, with $21,593,730, led individual cities in value reported, followed by Monroe with $12,101,478, Winston-Salem with $10,980,894, Charlotte with $10,197,336, Durham, with $9,277,163, and Greensboro, $4,244,170.

Military Accidents Claim Two Lives

By The Associated Press
A hand grenade believed to be a dud and an artillery shell gone awry are being blamed for the deaths of two civilians in separate accidents at military bases.

A woman driving her car on a well-traveled road through the Camp Lejeune, N.C., base died of head injuries after she was hit Wednesday by shrapnel from the errant shell fired during a routine military exercise, authorities said.

Military officials said "normal precautions," including the posting of signs in areas near the exercise, had been taken to guard against accidents.

In Fort Irwin, Calif., a member of a civilian team combing an Army weapons range for unexploded hand grenades died when he stepped on a live grenade buried in the shifting desert sand. Five others were injured, three of them seriously, an Army spokesman said.

Killed in the Camp Lejeune accident was Theresa Slovik, 42, the wife of a retired Marine officer. Her 7-year-old daughter, who was also in the car, was not injured.

Mrs. Slovik died about 5:20 p.m. at a Navy hospital in Portsmouth, Va., where she was transferred by helicopter after being treated at the Naval Regional Medical Center at Camp Lejeune.

Gunnery Sgt. Floyd Penton, a base spokesman, said Mrs. Slovik was traveling on Lyman road near the center of the base shortly before noon when a shell from a 155-mm howitzer exploded near her car.

The military-maintained, two-lane road runs through thick woods and leads to one of the main gates of the base. At one point, it comes within 1,500 meters of the artillery range, Penton said. He added that officials were withholding the identification of the units in the firing exercise pending an investigation.

At Fort Irwin, Stephen A. Stulnaker, 26, of Barstow, apparently triggered the explosion about 20 minutes after his team began searching for unexploded grenades, said Maj. Jim Fetig. Stulnaker died at Weed Army Community Hospital on the Army post.

"They were clearing the area — in other words, checking for dud grenades," Fetig said. "Stulnaker apparently stepped on a grenade beneath the surface of the ground."

Also injured in the Fort Irwin accident were Timothy Jerscheid, 22, and Larry D. Carpenter, 29, both in serious condition; Lee D. Piles, 23, serious but stable, and Alfred J. Schwark, 35, stable. All are from Barstow and employees of Boeing Services International, a Seattle-based firm working under a military contract.

The sixth victim, Lt. David White, commander of the civilian team, was treated and released for a shrapnel wound to a finger.

The five civilians were marking grenades and other unexploded weapons to be removed in preparation for range improvements.

The men, who Fetig said "were following Army procedure," were walking in line about three feet apart when Stulnaker, in the middle, stepped on the buried grenade.

Grenades are packed with seven ounces of high explosives and serrated wire shrapnel, Fetig said, and have a 115-foot casualty range.

"Realistic" live-fire exercises are part of the normal training routine at the post, Fetig said.

Four Accidents In City On Wednesday

An estimated $6,500 property damage resulted from a series of four traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Wednesday.

Officers said heaviest damage resulted from a 10:50 p.m. mishap on Fifth Street, 200 feet west of the Bancroft Avenue intersection, involving vehicles driven by Harvey Newton of 408A Roundtree Drive, Franklin Darrell Anderson of Route 8, Greenville, and Gregory Mark Daniels of 900 Bancroft Ave.

Police, who charged Anderson with following too closely and driving under the influence, estimated damage at $1,700 each to the Anderson and Daniels car and $100 to the Newton truck.

Joyce Toler Anderson of Route 13, Greenville, was charged with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of a 5:20 p.m. collision on Arlington Boulevard, 34 feet north of the Greenville Boulevard intersection.

Officers said the Anderson car collided with an auto driven by Gloria Averett Ampsacher of 101 Academy St., causing $300 damage to the Anderson car and $950 damage to the Ampsacher car.

Cars driven by Eloise Garrett Folger of 208 Country Club Drive and James Arthur Acklin of Route 1, Bethel, collided about 11 a.m. on Memorial Drive, 800 feet south of the South Village Drive intersection, causing $100 damage to the Folger car and $1,000 damage to the Acklin auto.

A 9 a.m. collision at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Chestnut Street involved cars driven by Ariane Coward Jones of 300 Church St., and Marvin Lee Hamm of Route 2, Greenville, investigators said.

Damage from the mishap was set at $200 to the Jones car and $300 to the Hamm vehicle.

FCC Plan For Mobile Phones Upheld By Court

By NORMAN BLACK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —
The U.S. Court of Appeals here has upheld a plan adopted by the Federal Communications Commission in 1978 to spur competition in the mobile telephone industry.

The court, in rejecting an appeal filed by the Telocator Network of America, said it could find no reason to disturb the commission's decision to set aside new radio frequencies for mobile telephone operators and to allow any firm — not just existing operators — to use the frequencies.

The 58-page opinion also broadly reaffirms the FCC's discretion "to steer (an) industry in what it perceives to be a superior technological direction" through the adoption of new operating rules.

"This is a nice decision for the commission because it affirms our authority to implement a new and innovative service," Gary Epstein, the chief of the FCC's common carrier bureau, said Wednesday. "It affirms our expertise and authority when we have built a reasonable record."

The decision handed down by the court late Tuesday does not involve the latest advance in mobile telephone systems, a technology known as cellular radio. The FCC has only recently begun considering applications to build cellular systems, which offer much greater capacity and better quality than conventional systems.

Instead, the court was asked by Telocator to review the manner in which the FCC opened up 24 new radio channels for conventional systems in 1978 as a "stopgap" measure to alleviate pent-up demand.

Telocator is a national trade organization that represents the firms that specialize in providing mobile telephone and paging services. Such firms are generally known as radio common carriers.

The commission had realized as early as the mid-1960's that existing mobile phone systems were running out of capacity and that additional frequencies would have to be set aside for the service. It also decided, however, that it wanted to prod the industry to make more efficient use of any new frequencies it did set aside.

As a result, it adopted a new regulatory scheme requiring carriers that wanted to use the new frequencies to build "trunked" systems. Such a system, in essence, means companies must share a block of frequencies and operate transmitters that can scan all available channels until an open one is found.

A trunked system, since it involves sharing, can accommodate more operators than the traditional system of assigning specific radio channels to operators for their exclusive use.

The FCC's allocation of the 24 new channels in 1978, doubling the number of frequencies then available for mobile telephones, was supported by Telocator and its members. But the trade organization objected strenuously to the FCC's trunking requirements and its refusal to restrict the use of the new frequencies to firms already in the business that needed more capacity. Telocator charged the commission was "pursuing competition purely for competition's sake" without determining that competition was needed to provide better service to the public. Many radio carriers are small firms that could be forced out of business by a sudden influx of new competitors, Telocator said.

The court countered it could not find unreasonable the FCC's decision that the trunking requirements, when coupled with the new frequencies, would make room for new competitors and that such competition was to be desired. The court added the trade group had failed to present any evidence that would prove its contentions about the financial health of the industry.

Despite Telocator's appeal, the FCC began implementing its new policy in 1980 and has already authorized construction of trunked mobile phone systems in Houston, Dallas-Fort Worth, Chicago, Miami, Boston, Los Angeles and Washington, D.C. According to the court's opinion, the systems in Houston, Dallas and Chicago are already in operation.

Add To Comfort Of Beirut Duty

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. military officials are trying to make life more comfortable for Marines on peacekeeping duty in Lebanon, but a Pentagon spokesman says that doesn't mean they are preparing to stay into winter.

Spokesman Benjamin Welles reported Tuesday that the Marines are setting up bigger tents and platforms for the troops to sleep on so their bedding will be off the ground before the fall rains set in.

When a reporter asked whether this indicated preparations were being made for Marines to remain in Lebanon into the winter, Welles said, "I have no reason to think so." He added that "if they need winter clothing I am sure it will be provided, but I don't think it will be needed."

Bug Uses Tools To Attract Prey

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — As bugs, go, the assassin bug doesn't look like much — but it's a sneaky predator that uses a unique form of fishing and camouflage to lure its prey.

The fingernail-sized predator uses a dead termite to attract other termites, says Dr. Elizabeth A. McMahan, a biology professor at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. She discovered the voracious bug while studying termites in Costa Rica two years ago.

She said she wanted to see what termites would do if she poked a hole in their nest. "Then what looked like a small piece of the nest walked over to the edge of the hole and grabbed a termite," she recalled.

Fascinated, she watched as the bug sucked the juices out of the dead termite. Then, like a fisherman dangling a worm, the bug shook the carcass over the nest, grabbing more termites as they came up to eat the carcass. "When I first saw it, I thought it couldn't possibly be true," Ms. McMahan said. "Nobody has ever seen this before."

Since then, Ms. McMahan has determined that the bug camouflages itself by glueing bits of termite nest to its body so that it blends in with its surroundings, and then sits down to wait for a termite to come by.

The assassin bug can attract more termites because the termites need to eat the carcass, she said. Wood, termite's primary food, contains low levels of nitrogen. So the termites must eat their dead in order to get that nitrogen to survive, she said.

"They can't afford to lose any of it," Ms. McMahan said.

She speculated that the assassin bug's special talents were not observed before because scientists who study termites weren't looking for assassin bugs.

Her discovery was made in 1980 at a station operated by the Duke University-based Organization for Tropical Studies. The latest issue of the French journal Insectes outlines her discovery.

Sen. East Planning To Return $140,000

Sen. John East, R-N.C., announced that he will return to the U.S. Treasury over $140,000 of the funds allocated to him by the government to run his senate offices.

East said, "We've managed to save over 14 percent of the yearly salary allowance allocated to operated offices in Washington and North Carolina without sacrificing the quality of service we provide. If this kind of savings could be achieved throughout the entire federal budget, we could save over 100 billion dollars this year alone."

The Greenville senator said, "Although you can never be certain that every single item in the federal budget can be reduced by a fixed amount, this 14 percent savings in my own office proves to me that real savings for the taxpayer can be made at the federal level if you just put your mind to it."

Driver Charged In Collision

Robert Allen Barbare of Naranja, Fla., was charged with driving left of center following an investigation of an 11:20 p.m. collision Tuesday at the intersection of Fifth and Cotanche streets.

Police reported the Barbare car collided with a car operated by Mark Jackson Robinson of 205 Harrell St., causing an estimated $500 damage to the Barbare car and $2,000 damage to the Robinson vehicle.

Associated Press Writer
MINNEAPOLIS (AP) —

The Minneapolis Star and Tribune, promoted last spring as an all-day newspaper, is ceasing publication of its afternoon newstand edition and laying off 75 employees in a cost-cutting move, the company says.

Editor Charles Bailey, who resigned Wednesday to protest the cutbacks, called the move "a very serious mistake, one that will have grave consequences for the newspaper."

The cuts, which include 30 news jobs, will bring the paper's news staff to 200. Total employment at the paper now is 2,400.

"I think we can continue to put out an excellent newspaper with 200 professionals and a large support staff," publisher Donald Dwight said.

In other cost-cutting moves, Dwight said the paper will end its Minnesota Poll, a feature since 1944, and eliminate management bonuses.

Dwight said revenues have remained flat in the past three years while costs have grown.

J. Christopher Burns, associate publisher, said revenues are expected to fall about $8 million short of this year's budgeted projections of $123 million.

The cuts follow the merger last April of the afternoon Minneapolis Star and the morning Minneapolis Tribune. The company then gave severance pay to about 100 employees, including more than 30 journalists.

At that time, there was no way to "forecast with certainty all the new organizational requirements," Dwight said. "Also, we had brighter expectations for the economy in 1982, expectations that have not materialized."

The afternoon edition will cease publication later this month.

The Minneapolis Star and Tribune was promoted as an all-day newspaper that would combine spot coverage with in-depth treatment of the news and include all the features of the two previous newspapers. Afternoon sales were restricted to newsstands. Circulation was about 360,000.

Bailey, 53, said he disagreed sharply with the layoff decision, but found himself a "minority of one" in meetings with the newspaper's senior managers. The decision was approved by John Cowles Jr., president of Cowles Media Co., owner of the paper.

"I was not opposed to some staff reduction by attrition over time, but I argued as long and as persuasively as I could against layoffs," Bailey told the staff.

Bailey had planned to step down as editor of the newspapers at the end of the year and become the Star and Tribune's chief correspondent in Washington, where he worked for 18 years before becoming editor 10 years ago.

Dwight said employees with more than 10 years of service will get 40 weeks severance pay and up to five years of assistance on medical coverage. Those with less time will get 26 weeks pay and a year of medical coverage.

Bailey told the staff that severance benefits to employees covered by a contract with the Newspaper Guild will be determined in negotiations with the union. Guild spokesman Bob Schafer said the union would not respond to the layoffs until it receives more information from the company.

Solar Fraction

The solar fraction for this area Wednesday, as computed by the East Carolina University Department of Physics, was 66. This means that a solar water heater could have provided 66 percent of your hot water needs.

Disruptions Just Too Much: Reagan Says 'Shut Up'

UNSUCCESSFUL RESTRAINT — An unidentified colleague attempts to restrain Gary Arnold of Santa Cruz, Calif. during an exchange with President Reagan in the East Room of the White House. After repeatedly interrupting the President, Mr. Reagan told him to "shut up". (AP Laserphoto)

By TERENCE HUNT, Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A Republican candidate who created a scene at the White House and was told by President Reagan to shut up says he spoke out because "Somebody has to say that the emperor has no clothes."

"There are two Reagans," Gary Richard Arnold complained Wednesday after his extraordinary confrontation with the president. "I agree with 90 percent of what he says, and disagree with 90 percent of what he does."

Accusing Reagan of giving only lip service to conservative causes, Arnold said, "Reagan has lost touch with Reaganomics. Reagan is not Reagan."

Arnold, a Santa Cruz businessman trying to unseat three-term Democratic congressman Leon Panetta in California's 16th District, touched off the incident in the chandelied East Room of the White House as Reagan was giving a pep talk to 90 GOP candidates.

Reagan was trying to make the point that before he took office, government spending had been rising faster than Americans' wages. Suddenly, Arnold rose from his back-row chair and interrupted the president.

In a defiant tone, Arnold charged that Reagan was responsible for the largest tax increase in history, had abandoned Taiwan, had increased trade with the Soviet Union and had not carried out the Republican Party platform of 1980. Arnold said Republicans who opposed the tax increase — including himself — were denied GOP campaign funds.

Two or three people tried to push Arnold down into his chair but he brushed them off.

"We have a Tylenol taxation situation here, and we have a Reagan-mortis setting into the nation's body politic," he argued. Across the room, an unidentified man stood and applauded Arnold.

Red-faced and angry, Reagan stared directly at Arnold and replied: "Okay. I don't know who the two of you are, but you haven't said a word that's true yet."

For the next five minutes, Reagan answered charges from his challenger, who stood 25 feet away and interrupted the president at least a half-dozen times before it was all over.

Secret Service agents did not intervene but watched Arnold intently. Two men took up positions behind Arnold.

The president frequently pointed his finger at Arnold throughout the exchange.

Reagan denied that the tax increase was the largest in history, or that he had abandoned Taiwan, and tried to respond to the charges with facts and figures. He also tried humor, cracking, "I thought this (meeting) was for Republican candidates."

Finally, Reagan lost his patience when Arnold kept interrupting and refused to let the president reply.

"Shut up," Reagan snapped. "Look."

Shortly afterward, Arnold sat down and Reagan went on with his speech.

Returning to the Oval Office, Reagan asked aides for the candidate's name, said White House deputy press secretary Larry Speakes.

Edward Rollins, director of the White House political office, said that despite his outburst, Arnold was "still better than the Democratic candidate in the district."

Speaking with reporters who followed him outside, Arnold said, "The illusion that Reagan is right is wrong ... If Reagan's actions followed up his rhetoric, I'd support him."

"Name me one issue on the 1980 Republican platform that he's helped," said Arnold, complaining that the Departments of education and energy had not been abolished and that Reagan had filled his administration with 83 members of the Council of Foreign Relations and the Trilateral Commission — two private groups that are popular targets of right-wing conservatives.

He also complained the Republican National Committee had spent $500,000 from contributors for passage of the tax increase bill.

"That was illegal," he claimed. "They took those funds away from candidates in there that haven't received one cent, one solitary penny."

Lecturer Lyn Nofziger Has Election Predictions

By TERENCE HUNT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lyn Nofziger, the slimmed-down, cigar-chomping Reaganite strategist, is sitting out his first election since 1966, making money on the lecture circuit and predicting that Republicans won't suffer disaster in 1982.

And if he's wrong?
"Then it tells me people are really concerned about the economy and that they're blaming the president," Nofziger says.

After suffering a mild stroke last May, Nofziger has shed 37 pounds and the pottiness that helped him push reporters away from Ronald Reagan during the 1980 presidential campaign.

He still wears the Mickey Mouse tie and rumpled sports coat that were his trademarks. He's cut down on his work: 10 hours a day now instead of 12 or more he put in at the White House where he headed Reagan's political staff until stepping down early this year.

Nofziger, who got into politics with Reagan in California, now runs a political consulting office, helping corporations and associations cut through the bureaucracy and get appointments with the right people.

For 1982, he's optimistic for Republicans. He doesn't think the economy is so bad off, and he doesn't think voters will abandon the GOP. "All you gotta do is go get on an airplane, go to an airport, go to restaurants, and I know they claim they're hurting but... there's an awful lot of people out flying around and eating out," he said between lecture trips early this week.

His 1982 predictions:

—The GOP will lose 10-15 House seats in 1982. It would be a strong midterm showing for the party of a new president.

—Republicans will pick up two or three Senate seats and lose four or five governors' races.

If it happens that way, Nofziger said, "I read that as being a usual off-year, of no great political significance. I don't see a disaster out there yet."

From Nofziger's viewpoint, next month's elections will not be a referendum on Reagan policies. "Governors don't really run on a national issue," he said. "So many incumbent congressmen get thrown out for other things, not for their votes but for how their people think they're treating their constituents. I think the referendum on Reaganomics comes in 1984."

What about unemployment, at its highest rate in 41 years?
"Oh, it'll play some sort of a role, but the formation of new businesses exceeds the number of bankruptcies," he said. "There was a time when if a guy wanted to work, he would take a job just for work, but now unemployment insurance and things are so good that people can be fussy."

With his background as a Reagan insider and a colorful political strategist, Nofziger travels around the country, picking up $7,500 for half-hour speeches to bankers, cattlemen, meat packers and corporate groups. "I tell them what I think is going to happen in the elections, try to give them a better feel of what this White House and this administration are like."

He gave a half-dozen speeches over the summer, and has eight-to-10 more on his schedule this month.

Nofziger said he does not want candidates as clients, but agreed to work for two who were friends and long-time Reagan supporters — Senate candidate Chic Hecht of Nevada and California lieutenant governor candidate Carol Hallett.

He said he was pleased that Reagan is out campaigning this month, since some White House staffers fear the president's image will be tarnished if GOP losses are heavy. Reagan plans to be on the road 14 days, much of it toward the end of the campaign.

"I'd have told him that they're going to blame you whether or not you campaign, if they lose some, so you ought to go out and campaign," said Nofziger. "You're going to want these people all supporting you over the next two years, and therefore you've got to show you're supportive."

Nofziger said Democrats might pick up a Senate seat in California, where Gov. Edmund Brown is battling Republican Mayor Pete Wilson of San Diego.

Assessing other Senate contests, he predicted victory for these Republicans: Millicent Fenwick in New Jersey, Harrison Schmitt of New Mexico and Orrin Hatch of Utah. He said GOP Senate candidates have a chance in Ohio, Montana, North Dakota, Texas, Nevada and Maine.

Most political strategists believe Ohio, North Dakota and Texas are safe Democratic seats, and that John Melcher is likely to win re-election in Montana. Democratic Sen. Howard Cannon is in a close race with Hecht in Nevada.

Town Officials Hot Over Game

KENTWOOD, Mich. (AP)

The City Council has passed a resolution opposing a video game called "Firebug," saying it tests arson skills.

Councilwoman Beverly Bacon said Wednesday that the council had passed a resolution opposing the home video game and recommending that retailers in the Grand Rapids suburb not sell it.

There are no reports that any Kentwood residents actually are playing the game, designed for Apple home computers, but "we don't even want it to come here," Ms. Bacon said.

"I think it's in very poor taste," Mayor Gerry DeRuiter said after the council session Tuesday. "We don't want our kids playing a game that tests arson skills."

The game, as originally marketed by the Muse Software and Computer Center of Baltimore last spring, asked potential players: "How good are you at setting fires? Think you can run through a building? Pick up and drop gas cans to set it ablaze and get out alive?" The shorter the fuse a player carried, the higher his level of skill, according to the directions.

Kentwood officials learned of the game through the Michigan chapter of the International Association of Arson Investigators.

A spokeswoman for Muse denied the game "encourages people to go out and burn down buildings."

The firm has no plans to pull the game off the market or modify it, but did change the brochure that accompanies it, said Rhonda Uretzky-Miller. The brochure, which Ms. Uretzky-Miller termed "offensive," was distributed for three weeks in May and was changed after a spate of complaints, she said Wednesday.

The new directions do not mention buildings or arsonists, Ms. Uretzky-Miller said. The brochure instead asks players if they can "succeed at a test of fire" and "guide a mechanical firebug through a maze."

Muse also changed the object from burning down a five-story building to destroying a five-level maze, she said.

But Lt. John Wiechert of the Michigan State Police fire marshal division said he is not convinced the new brochure is any better.

"You don't need to involve gas cans and fuses," he said Wednesday from his Lansing office. "Why don't they have a dog lost in a five-story building or something?"

Two Arrested On Pot Counts

Greenville police Tuesday night arrested Elbert Junior Corey, 24, of Route 2, Ayden, and Tammy Brown, 25 of Route 2, Snow Hill, on charges of possession of marijuana.

Chief Glenn Cannon said officers charged the two after stopping a car in which they were traveling at the intersection of Third Street and Memorial Drive, about 11:15 p.m. He said two "joints" and a bag containing about 25 grams of marijuana were recovered from the vehicle.

In addition to the drug charge, Corey was charged with driving under the influence of drugs.

Salute Agents Who Gave Lives

WASHINGTON (AP)

The FBI has paid a special tribute to the 26 agents who have died in the line of duty since the law enforcement agency was founded in 1908.

The first agent killed in the line of duty was Edwin C. Shanahan of the Chicago office on Oct. 11, 1925. He was shot by a car thief.

The most recent deaths occurred on Aug. 9, 1979. Johnnie L. Oliver was shot by a fugitive in Cleveland. On the same day, 2,000 miles away, J. Robert Porter and Charles W. Elmore were killed by an intruder in the FBI's El Centro, Cal., who opened fire with no warning and then killed himself.

Says His Dismissal Is Not A 'Total Surprise'

EMERALD ISLE, N.C. (AP) — J.A. "Joe" Porter, fired Wednesday from his job as the chief financial officer of the state's public school system, said the decision to fire him was not a total surprise.

Porter, 59, said the State Board of Education's decision "has not come as a shock."

Porter, whom some believe may jump from his controller's job to a post with the state Office of Budget and Management, said in a telephone interview that he had not made future plans yet.

"I don't know what my plans are," he said.

The state board met briefly in executive session Wednesday, emerging from closed doors after 15 minutes. Board Chairman C.D. "Dick" Spangler made a motion to fire Porter, state Department of Public Instruction spokesman Tom I. Davis said. Davis said there were no dissenters in the voice vote.

Porter, who will have served 30 years in state government by Nov. 1, loses his job effective Dec. 31. His dismissal ends over a year of legislative speculation and debate over the future of Porter's office. No interim controller has been appointed to succeed Porter.

Porter's office came under fire last year during the full session of the N.C. General Assembly when some lawmakers, grumbling when they learned that the spending needs for public schools had been underestimated by $16 million for the two-year period, demanded tighter control by the state board on budgeting and spending.

Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir, and Sen. Kenneth Royall, D-Durham, sponsored a bill that year to shift Porter's office from the education board to the budget office. That bill remained in committee until the short session this year, when the senators revived the bill and finally called for a legislative study into how the state education system is governed.

Gov. Jim Hunt urged board members in August to resolve quickly the questions surrounding the controller's office, pledging his cooperation with the board's decisions. He was not available for comment Wednesday.

Porter said he might enter the teaching profession, but remained uncertain.

"I'm eligible for retirement Nov. 1 and I've been giving some thought to some things I might like to do."

Custodial Role Conditions Eyed

NEW YORK (AP) — A report issued here on abuses suffered by perhaps as many as 500,000 children of alcoholic parents has recommended legislation to compel an alcoholic parent to undergo treatment as a condition of retaining custody of children.

The report also suggested the alcoholic beverage industry finance research on alcoholics' children.

Among findings of the state-sponsored report were that alcoholic parents are most likely to produce alcoholic children. Approximately 58 percent of adult alcoholics in 13 state treatment centers were the children of alcoholic parents.

"At an early age, these children are trapped in a self-destructive cycle of despair and failure that ruins their lives and harms the society of which they are a part," said Gov. Hugh L. Carey in releasing the report prepared under the auspices of the state Division of Alcoholism and Alcohol Abuse.

HABIB LEAVES — Special Middle East envoy Philip Habib gestures to reporters as he leaves the White House Wednesday after a meeting with President Reagan in the Oval Office. Habib said the U.S. expects the Lebanese government to extend "due process" to Palestinian refugees rounded up in the campaign to restore law and order in Beirut. (AP Laserphoto)

The dock weighted average price for this week is 41.44 for small purchases of plant grade broilers picked up at processing plants. Estimated slaughter today, 1,705,000.

NEW YORK (AP) - Stock prices surged ahead in record volume today as falling interest rates continued Wednesday's powerful rally in the stock, bond and bullion markets.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials by noon stood at 959.99, up 15.73 today. That came on the heels of a 37.07-point gain. The second-largest daily increase ever for the closely watched average.

Volume today was very heavy, hitting 72.17 million shares in the first two hours. The New York Stock Exchange tape fell several minutes behind in reporting trades as soon as the market opened. The first hour's volume was 43.66 million, which broke the record of 39.94 million set Sept. 3.

Stocks rising in price outnumbered those falling by more than 10 to 1. The buying spree was attributed to a widespread feeling that interest rates would fall further. That anticipation also fueled a buying binge in credit markets today, pushing bond prices higher.

And moments before the stock market opened this morning, Manufacturers Hanover Trust cut its prime rate from 13.5 percent to 13 percent, a move that several other major banks quickly made too. Bankers Trust had cut its prime to 13 percent last week.

The drop in interest rates caused the value of long-term Treasury bonds to jump by more than $25 for each $1,000 in face value today. The yield on one-year Treasury bills was down more than half a percentage point by noon.

On the New York Commodity Exchange, the price of gold for immediate delivery jumped $27.60 a troy ounce to $425.

The NYSE's most-active list was topped by Duke Power, which was up 3/4 to 22 1/4. American Telephone and Telegraph rose 3/4 to 59 1/4 and International Business Machines rose 1/4 to 79 3/4.

The NYSE's composite index gained 1.29 to 73.49.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 7.01 at 295.29.

Reeling Rampants Face Beddingfield

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
Rose High School, still wondering where it went wrong on the season, attempts to get back on its feet Friday against Big East foe Wilson Beddingfield.

The game will be played at Beddingfield, starting at 8 p.m.

The Rampants, now 2-3, come into the game following a 13-7 loss to unbeaten Rocky Mount — a game in which the Rampants more than once had the opportunity to win.

Twice in the final period, the Rampants had a first down inside the ten yard line and both times came away empty as Rocky Mount clung to its lead — and a share of first place in the Big East.

Rocky Mount is tied with Kinston for first in the league, both 2-0, while Rose, Fike, Northern Nash and Hunt are all 1-1. Northeastern and Beddingfield are 0-2 in conference play.

"I was extremely pleased with our defensive play," Coach Ronald Vincent said of the Rocky Mount game. "Frankie Carr played an outstanding game (at defensive end). He had something like five sacks and a number of tackles. Our defensive backs also played the best game they've played so far."

However, offensive mistakes helped turn the tide for the Gryphons.

"Like I said Friday night, we didn't miss assignments, we just missed blocks. We had our chances. When you get inside the five yard line twice, you're supposed to score. And I credit that to missed blocks."

"What bothers me is that there are five or six big plays that we don't get and that separates us from being 5-0 and 2-3. I feel that we are just as good as anyone we've played. But we are just not making the big plays that the good teams have to make."

Vincent pointed out several of these in the Rocky Mount game: "(Edward) Frazier drops that pass, way out in front of everyone, a sure touchdown. Down there when they scored, the ball went right through the hands of our linebacker. Another time, we drop an interception right in front of the bench. Down there when we get close, we have a tackle fall down when one block will get us into the end zone."

But, Vincent feels, the Rampants can still be a good team.

"One thing I can feel good about, our specialty teams are playing perhaps the best they've ever played since I've been here."

Beddingfield comes into Friday night's game with only one victory behind it, a 15-0 victory over winless Southern Nash. They also tied winless Greene Central, 0-0, in the opener.

Their other non-conference game was a loss to SouthWest Edgecombe, 12-7. All three are 3-A schools.

In Big East play, they've lost to Rocky Mount, 13-7, and Northern Nash, 27-14.

"They are a young team," Vincent said, "and they play several sophomores. But they hustle well and they refuse to give up."

Vincent lists Mark Davis, who quarterbacked the club last year, as the top player on the Bruin team. Davis has been Mr. Everything for Beddingfield this year. He's played at tailback, wide receiver and flanker on offense, corner back on defense, and handles the punts and kickoffs. He is a breakaway threat who is rated as strong and fast.

Top runner on the team is 6-0, 225-pound junior Ricky Barnes, who, according to Vincent, is "hard to bring down."

Darren Bynum, a sophomore, is handling the quarterback duties, and rates as a fairly good passer, but without outstanding receivers.

"They pass a lot more than they have in the past," Vincent said. Scouting reports say they will put the ball up anywhere on the field, on any down.

On the defensive side of the line, Beddingfield runs a 5-2, "about the same thing we've seen the last two weeks," Vincent said. "We've changed some our of blocking schemes to try and take better advantage of what we're doing."

Top defensive men for Beddingfield include linebacker Pat Artis and safety Johnny Hines. Woody Mercer is rated as the top defensive lineman, and Greg Hill the best offensive lineman.

"They are capable of getting up in a hurry," Vincent pointed out, noting that the Bruins scored 14 points in just over three minutes against Northern Nash.

Rose, meanwhile, has several injured players whose status is uncertain. Tailback Donnell Lee is nursing a bad ankle and linebacker Craig Dupree took a hard lick on the jaw against Rocky Mount. Both are questionable for Friday's game. Defensive back Tim Shank and lineman Chuck Whitner are both nursing bruises but should be ready.

The Rampant offense is led by Lee, who has rushed for 330 yards. Fullback Roderick Harrell has 125 yards, while Frazier has rushed for 112.

Quarterback Kenny Kirkland has hit on 35 of 74 passes for 314 yards with one touchdown and four interceptions. Frazier leads the receivers with 13 catches for 195 yards. Lee had 12 catches, but only 44 yards. Next week, Rose travels to meet surprising Kinston, which is tied for the league lead going into this weekend's games.

Herzog Claims Niekro Balking

ST. LOUIS (AP) — What his hitters have been unable to pick up in Phil Niekro's pitches, says Whitey Herzog, umpires should be able to discern in the Atlanta Braves veteran's delivery.

The St. Louis Cardinals manager voiced his claim after Wednesday's rained-out opener of the National League Championship Series, insisting the Atlanta Braves hurler balked "at least seven or eight times." Not surprisingly, his opinion spurred dissent.

"If you watch the replays, I think you'd have to say he didn't stop," said Herzog after studying Niekro's consistently quick moves toward home plate, one leading off the stretch to Tommy Herr's being thrown out during an attempted steal in the third inning.

"Rule 8.05, Paragraph M in the rulebook is very explicit about that. It says the pitcher has to completely stop," Herzog said. "There's no doubt in my mind with Tommy he didn't stop. But he's been doing it for years."

Niekro, in response to Herzog's charge, said simply, "I don't know of a pitcher in baseball that hasn't been called for a balk."

"I've been doing it for 18 years (in the majors) and 24 total," the 43-year-old knuckleballer said, however. "It (motion) is the same I've been doing in the past."

Siding with Niekro was plate umpire Billy Williams, who said he discussed the Atlanta hurler's deliveries with fellow arbiters during the contest.

"His stop was good enough for them, as it was for myself," said Williams. "and I told Whitey. It's aimed at our judgment if he came to a complete stop. Some pitchers in throwing are coming down and lifting their leg — which is a balk."

Unable to win disputes at home plate with Williams after Herr was thrown out and while Keith Hernandez of St. Louis was batting in the first inning, Herzog remained adamant nonetheless.

"They've got different rules and rules for different pitchers, that's all," the Cards' pilot said. "If my pitchers failed to stop, they'd all be called for balks."

A FOURTH MAJOR SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — The LPGA now has a fourth major championship. Commissioner John D. Laupheimer announced at the U.S. Women's Open that the new major is the $310,000 Nabisco-Dinah Shore tournament.

Wichita State Admits Wrong

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — Wichita State University has admitted that National Collegiate Athletic Association recruiting regulations were violated recently at the Missouri Valley Conference school.

Ted Bredehoft, WSU's director of athletics, announced Wednesday that the university notified the NCAA on Sept. 10 that rules regarding the recruitment of a student-athlete had been violated. The prospect did not enroll at WSU, he said.

Bredehoft said WSU has received a letter of preliminary inquiry from the NCAA as a result of the school's admission. He would not disclose which sport was involved or any other details of the violations.

The Wichita Eagle-Beacon reported in its Thursday edition that sources at WSU said the violations involved a junior college prospect for the Shocker football team.

The Eagle-Beacon said sources identified the prospect as Dennis "Tex" Allen, a wide receiver who enrolled as a sophomore this fall at Kansas State University.

Allen, who was a member of the Butler County Community College team that won the national championship in 1981, told the Eagle-Beacon he had met with NCAA investigators several times and discussed WSU recruiting.

The Butler County team was coached last year by Fayne Henson, who became offensive coordinator for WSU on July 20. Allen told the newspaper Henson and another coach drove him from his home in Dallas to Wichita in mid-August for a recruiting visit.

Sources at WSU confirmed the story and identified the other coach as Sam Campbell, a graduate assistant, the Eagle-Beacon said.

ECU Hosting Volleyball Event

East Carolina University's Lady Pirates play host to their own ECU Invitational Volleyball Tournament on Friday and Saturday, with four other teams here to vie for the title.

Prior to the start of the season, Coach Lynn Davidson said that winning the ECU Invitational would be one of the team's main goals for the coming year, and she continues to echo that feeling.

"I would have to say that UNC Charlotte is the favorite this year. They won it last year, and I guess they are favored again," Davidson said. "But I really feel that we should have a real good chance to win."

Others in the field, along with ECU and UNCC include Duke University, William & Mary, and N.C. A&T.

Play will get underway Friday at 12 noon with Duke meeting UNCC and East Carolina taking on A&T. At 1:30 p.m., William & Mary faces Duke, while UNCC and the Lady Pirates play.

Set for 3 p.m. are A&T vs. UNCC and William & Mary against ECU. At 4:30, Duke plays A&T and W&M faces UNCC. First round play winds up at 6 p.m. with A&T taking on William & Mary and East Carolina facing Duke.

Results of the first round will be used to seed the teams for the final round, a double-elimination event. The first round of that will be held on Friday at 8 p.m. when the number four seeded team meets the number five team.

Saturday at 9 a.m., play continues with 2 facing 3 and 1 meeting the winner of the Friday game between 4 and 5.

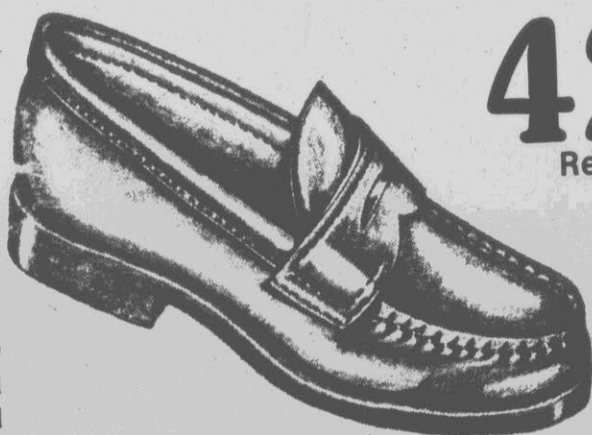

More games are set at noon and 1:30 with the finals at 3 p.m. Should an extra game be needed, it would be played at 5 p.m.

All games will be played in Minges Coliseum, and admission is free.

Kison Hurls Angels To 4-2 Win Virginia Can Do Three Things For First Time

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Bruce Kison was the forgotten man of the California pitching staff during much of the 1982 season. But come September, the lanky right-hander was rediscovered. And come October, he's hurled the Angels to within one game of the World Series.

Kison fired a brilliant five-hitter and retired the final 13 batters he faced Wednesday night as the Angels took a 2-0 lead over Milwaukee in the American League Championship Series by beating the Brewers 4-2.

The teams weren't scheduled today with the best-of-five series moving to Milwaukee for Game Three on Friday. Left-hander Geoff Zahn will attempt to complete a California sweep against Milwaukee right-hander Don Sutton.

Fourth and fifth games, if necessary, will be played Saturday and Sunday, respectively. But the Brewers have to win Friday or their season is over.

And their challenge is obvious considering no team in the 13-year history of league playoffs has ever come back to win from an 0-2 deficit.

Kison, who didn't start a game for the Angels between June 22, when he was sidelined briefly after a line drive by Johnny Grubb of Texas hit him in the leg, and Sept. 14.

When he did return, it was to the bullpen, where he made 16 relief appearances after angrily rejecting a suggestion that he pitch himself into shape in the minor leagues.

The trouble didn't stop there for the 32-year-old Kison, who was rumored to be on the trading block. At one point, it was reported that he was going to the New York Yankees in exchange for Tommy John, whom the Angels later acquired for three minor leaguers.

"I don't put a lot of emphasis on rumors, reports or sources close to the team," said Kison. "I'm sure my name was brought up, but until something happens, a ballplayer doesn't have any control over it. So rather than get myself mentally exhausted over it, I just kept pitching."

When he returned to the Angels' rotation after 82 days without a start, he didn't blow the opportunity, shutting out the Chicago White Sox. He won two more games before the end of the regular season, enhancing his reputation as a superb September performer.

"For many years with Pittsburgh, I had the fortune, the opportunity, the chance to play with a ballclub in a pennant race," said Kison. "That's the only reason I can think of for my September record."

The Brewers could probably think of another reason after being stymied for the second straight night by a veteran California pitcher: John limited Milwaukee to seven hits in an 8-3 victory by the Angels Tuesday night.

"Bruce pitched a great game, that's all there is to it," said losing pitcher Pete Vuckovich, who wasn't bad himself, yielding only six hits, none of them after the fourth inning. "A great September pitcher beat us."

Kison wasn't the only player with a late-season reputation to inflict damage on the Brewers. Reggie Jackson, the Angels' Mr. October, broke one playoff record and tied a league playoff mark with a booming homer to straight-away center in the third inning.

The blow gave him 18 playoff RBIs, breaking the record he shared with former New York Yankees teammate Graig Nettles, and six homers in league championship play, tying him with George Brett of Kansas City.

Afterward, Jackson was asked if he deserved the title "Mr. October."

He replied: "I'd like to share it with the whole ball club. Just send me the check."

Jackson's homer gave the Angels a 3-0 lead. They had scored twice in the second inning on Tim Lincecum's bases-loaded single to left and Bob Boone's suicide squeeze bunt.

The Angels made it 4-0 in the fourth on a sacrifice fly by Boone. The Brewers got their runs in the fifth on one of two hits by Charlie Moore and a two-out, two-run inside-the-park homer by Paul Molitor.

Moore was at second when Molitor lined what appeared to be a sharp single to center. However, California's Fred Lynn failed in an attempt to catch the ball at his shoetops and while right fielder Jackson chased the ball down at the center field fence, Molitor circled the bases with only the second inside-the-park homer in league playoff history. Nettles hit the other one in 1980.

But that was it for Milwaukee as Kison, who walked none and struck out eight, didn't allow the Brewers to get another runner on base.

"He threw a hell of a game," said Moore. "He got his pitches where he wanted them, mixed them up very well and made us chase a lot of bad balls."

"He's a very deceptive pitcher with a deceptive motion," said Molitor, who also mentioned that the Brewers went after several pitches out of the strike zone.

Vuckovich blamed himself for the loss, saying, "Coming out of the chute, I put us down, I've got to take the blame, it's that simple."

Faced with having to win three straight games, the Brewers still expressed hope.

"I'm definitely glad we're going back to Milwaukee," said Manager Harvey Kuenn. "We've had our backs up against the wall before. I'm still very confident we'll win and my players are confident."

"I'm not giving up until they tell us to go home, that's the way I'm looking at it," said Moore. "We ain't beat yet."

Virginia Can Do Three Things For First Time

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer
Virginia has never been on national television, never played a night game at home and has never beaten Clemson. For sure, two of those streaks will be broken this weekend.

The Cavaliers will host the defending national champions in the Saturday night special, thanks to Musco Lighting of Iowa and WTBS-TV. Duke will also represent the Atlantic Coast Conference on regional television this weekend as it meets Virginia Tech.

No. 12 North Carolina travels to Wake Forest in the other intraconference battle, while Georgia Tech is at Tulane and Indiana State goes to Maryland. North Carolina State has the weekend off.

Quarterback Homer Jordan will return to the Tiger starting lineup after being held out of last week's game at the request of school president Bill Atchley. Coach Danny Ford said what was overlooked in the matter was the play of Jordan's replacements, who led the Tigers to a 24-6 victory over Kentucky.

"There is always something good from something bad and that was the case with Homer sitting out the Kentucky game," said Ford. "We now know we have two more excellent quarterbacks, Mike Eppley and Anthony Parete did a tremendous job."

Virginia Coach George Welsh doesn't consider Clemson invincible, but he did admit the Tigers, who've beaten the Cavaliers 21 consecutive times, are "the best defensive team we've faced this year."

"We're not very good," he added. "We've got to improve if we're going to win some games. We've got to get better. I haven't seen a lot of progress since the Navy game."

Duke went for three quarters without any offense before taking Navy down to the wire in a 27-21 loss. Coach Red Wilson said his team lost its concentration and intensity last week and plans for them to regain those qualities in time for the Gobblers.

"We will have a great deal of improvement from the performance last Saturday," said Wilson.

The Gobblers are 2-2, but are looking to rally from last weekend's loss to Wake Forest. They expect to have the services of tailback Cyrus Lawrence, who missed much of the Demon Deacon battle with a sprained knee.

North Carolina boasts the top defense in the country and has rolled up some impressive offensive numbers since the season-opening loss to Pittsburgh. Although his team is an 18-point favorite, Coach Dick Crum isn't taking Wake Forest lightly.

"We expect a tough game, one we'll have to be prepared for," he said.

Wake Forest's offense has been on a roller coaster. Quarterback Gary Schofield returned to the lineup against Virginia Tech and fired the winning touchdown pass to David Richmond.

Coach Al Groh is searching for a defense that can stop the trio of Kelvin Bryant, Ethan Horton and Tyrone Anthony.

"Kelvin Bryant is an E.T. runner, he's from another universe," said Groh.

George, Richards Pace EC Swimmers

Nan George and Kevin Richards led the field as the East Carolina University swimming team held its annual Pentathlon last night.

George finished the meet with a total of 3,136 points, while Richards ended up with 2,103.

For Richards, it was an easier victory. Winning the 100-meter backstroke, Richards added a second place finish in the 200 IM and a third in the 100 butterfly for his total. Second place went to Doug McMillan with 1,836 points. McMillan won two events, the 200 IM and the 100 butterfly.

Stan Williams finished third, with 1,739 points, winning the 100 freestyle and finishing second in the 100 backstroke.

Eric Sebnick won the 100 breaststroke in meet record time of 1:02.47.

For George, the overall victory came tougher as she beat out Kaky Wilson by less than 100 points. Both women won two events. George took the 200 IM and the 100 freestyle, while Wilson took the 100 butterfly and 100 breaststroke, the last in record time of 1:13.00.

Luanne Peura took the other first, in the 100 backstroke.

"I was very pleased," rookie coach Rick Kobe said afterwards. "The kids from last year swam better or right at their times from last year. This kind of meet is hard because the swimmers don't get much time to rest. They can get frustrated. In a real meet, there's 25 to 30 minutes between events and they don't swim every event. This is a chance to see how some of the kids will do. We had a couple of disappointments today — kids who didn't swim as fast as we thought they would. We also had a few surprises with kids swimming much better. They are definitely going to help us."

Diver Scott Eagle and Tracey Fearington didn't compete because of an illness and injury, respectively.

East Carolina's annual Purple-Gold meet will be held on October 20 at 7 p.m.

Gant Captures National Pole

HARRISBURG, N.C. (AP) — Harry Gant won the $15,000 pole position for Sunday's National 500 stock car race by turning a lap of 164.654 mph in qualifying Wednesday at the Charlotte Motor Speedway.

Gant, a 42-year-old native of Taylorsville, N.C., drove a Buick owned by actor Burt Reynolds in qualifying on the 1.5-mile track.

Drivers for positions one through 15 were determined Wednesday and qualifying was to continue today for spots 16 through 30. The final 10 positions in the 40-car field will be decided Friday.

Rookie Geoff Bodine, of Pleasant Garden, N.C., drove his Pontiac 163.760 mph to take the second spot in the $380,000 NASCAR race. Darrell Waltrip, of Franklin, Tenn., driving a Buick, had the third fastest lap in the run for the pole with a speed of 163.473 mph.

They were followed by Morgan Shepherd, of Conover, N.C., who took his Buick around the track at 163.310 mph and Bill Elliott of Dawsonville, Ga., in a Ford, had the fifth fastest lap of 162.901 mph.

Drivers who qualified for positions two through 15 received $500 each. There were 48 drivers who made the run for the pole Wednesday, taking two turns around the track, with their fastest lap counting.

The $380,000 purse for the 334-lap race Sunday is the third richest of the 1982 NASCAR Winston Cup Series and Charlotte Speedway President H.A. "Humpty" Wheeler predicted the 40-car field would be the tightest the speedway has ever seen.

"I don't think there will be more than 5 mph difference (between the top qualifier and the last)," Wheeler said.

"I've been nervous all day, but the car's been running real good," Gant said. He said he felt some pressure to win the pole position because he turned some of the fastest laps in practice Tuesday, when he was clocked at speeds of more than 162 mph.

Neil Bonnett, winner of the speedway's World 600 in May, had one of the two fastest laps in practice Tuesday with 162.798 mph in his Ford. But his speed of 162.808 mph Wednesday only captured the seventh starting spot.

"I was trying to make a run at it, but the car got a little loose, the tires got hot and I couldn't make but one lap," Bonnett said.

The top 15 qualifiers Wednesday for Sunday's National 500 NASCAR Grand National stock car race with type of car and speed:

1. Harry Gant, Taylorsville, N.C., Buick, 164.654 mph.
2. Geoff Bodine, Pleasant Garden, N.C., Pontiac, 163.760 mph.
3. Darrell Waltrip, Franklin, Tenn., Buick, 163.473 mph.
4. Morgan Shepherd, Conover, N.C., Buick, 163.310 mph.
5. Bill Elliott, Dawsonville, Ga., Ford, 162.901 mph.
6. Ricky Rudd, Chesapeake, Va., Pontiac, 162.881 mph.
7. Neil Bonnett, Bessemer, Ala., Ford, 162.808 mph.

Campbell Kickers Top East Carolina By 5-2

Campbell University spotted East Carolina a 1-0 lead yesterday in a soccer match, then came back to take a 5-2 victory over the Pirates.

East Carolina got on the scoreboard first against the Camels, ranked ninth in the south, on a freak play, Campbell goalie Louie Arias blocked an ECU shot on the goal but was unable to come up with the ball, and Bill Merwin hit the ball in with the back of his foot for the score. Chip Baker was given an assist on the play.

East Carolina's other goal came in the second half by Doug Kelly with an assist by Mark Hardy.

Campbell's scoring was led by Juan Gomez with two, while Mike Griffin, Phillippe Bottin and David Nesbit each had one goal.

"We just had too many mental lapses in the backfield," coach Robbie Church said. "We gave them too many goals. We had good play out of Doug Kelly and Todd Engels.

The Pirates are now 4-4, while Campbell is 6-3. East Carolina plays host to Virginia Commonwealth on Sunday at 3 p.m. at the ECU soccer field. "VCU will be a good opponent for us, but we don't know much about them," Church said.

Say Aspirin Not Safe For Pregnant Women

By DANIEL Q. HANEY

Associated Press Writer
BOSTON (AP) - Taking aspirin during pregnancy may cause potentially dangerous bleeding in newborn babies, and expectant mothers should avoid the drug, doctors warn.

10 mothers who took aspirin within five days of delivery. Nine of their babies had bleeding tendencies. Their problems included skin hemorrhages, bleeding under the whites of their eyes, bloody urine and bleeding after circumcision. The bleeding stopped within a few days.

The doctors found that aspirin also caused unusual bleeding in the women.

Blood tests showed evidence of bleeding in six of the women who took aspirin before delivery. Four of them suffered obvious abnormal blood loss, including hemorrhaging after delivery and excessive bleeding during Caesarean section.

"The newborn has a mild platelet dysfunction under normal circumstances that causes no problems," Dr. Marie J. Stuart, who directed the study, said in an interview. "If the mother has had aspirin, this passes (through) the placenta, and the newborn's physiological defect is enhanced."

Seven of the women studied took aspirin within 12 hours after giving birth, and two of them also had considerable uterine bleeding.

search suggests that newborns are more susceptible to the effects of aspirin than their mothers. They recommended that babies born to mothers who used aspirin within five days of delivery be evaluated for the presence of bleeding.

"Although we didn't notice serious bleeding in full-term infants," the doctor said, "it's possible that in the premature infant it could give rise to serious bleeding."

Pushing Action On VA Budget

WASHINGTON (AP) - Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., is urging President Reagan to either appoint a new Veterans Administration head quickly or personally approve the agency's proposed budget.

The proposed budget, which will take shape between now and January, is in danger of being slashed unwisely because it has no chief administrator, Cranston said Wednesday.

VA administrator Robert P. Nimmo resigned Monday, citing personal reasons. He had been criticized by some veterans for insensitivity to their needs and by congressmen for alleged abuse of office perquisites.

Arrests Hit Fraud Ring

ATLANTA (AP) - A 41-year-old man described by authorities as the mastermind of a $900,000 food stamp fraud ring operating in five states has been arrested in Houston, federal officials have announced.

Joseph Henry Brown was arrested Tuesday night and charged with racketeering and defrauding the federal government of some $500,000 in food stamps in Atlanta and another $400,000 in Miami, said Tom Lynn, a supervisory special agent with the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Also arrested in Houston on Wednesday were Teresa Burton and Carolyn Weyman, both of Houston. Authorities said the two women, who were charged with food stamp fraud, were employees of Brown.

In addition to Georgia and Florida, Lynn said the fraud ring also operated in Texas, South Carolina and Mississippi. Lynn said the fraud ring operated out of a fictitious grocery, Iklass Produce Co. in Atlanta. People applied for food stamps at offices of the Department of Family and Children's Services by giving false names and financial information.

Brown allegedly paid one-third of the face value of the stamps and then redeemed them for their full value, Lynn said.

"They got it pretty well down to a science," he said. "But we got onto them pretty quick."

Lynn said that in July 1981, Brown and Dorothy Parrish, no age available, were arrested in Miami in connection with the food stamp operation, but Brown fled after his arrest. Ms. Parrish was charged with food stamp fraud, he said.

Also arrested in connection with the case was Denise Williams Jackson.

Son Andrew 'Outrages' Queen

LONDON (AP) — A Caribbean fling by Prince Andrew and American-born actress Koo Stark, who has appeared nude in erotic films, is creating an uproar among Britain's tabloids and stories that Queen Elizabeth II is "in a rage."

All tabloids today splashed their front pages with stories about the vacation taken by the 25-year-old actress and the prince, who has been dubbed "Randy Andy" because of his many girlfriends.

A smaller account was carried by the respected Daily Telegraph, which said Miss Stark was described as "Britain's Emmanuelle," after she appeared in an erotic film seven years ago called "Emily."

Some newspapers and the British Broadcasting Corp. television network on Wednesday carried pictures of Miss Stark, 25, daughter of movie producer Wilbur Stark, appearing nude in that film. The BBC clips showed her asking a man to make love to her.

Stills for "Emily" printed in British newspapers showed her naked with another naked woman in what the Daily Mail tabloid described as a torrid "lesbian shower scene."

The Sun tabloid quoted an unidentified member of the queen's staff as saying, "It is one thing for a prince to be seen with a film actress — but quite another to go away on holiday with a blue movie star. The queen feels badly let down."

The tabloid said: "The queen is in a rage," although it did not attribute the statement. The queen is with her husband Prince Philip on a tour of Australia.

The Daily Mail reported the actress' mother accompanied her daughter and the 22-year-old prince to a royal hideaway on the island of Mustique as a chaperone at the queen's urging.

Buckingham Palace denied this.

In Bridgetown, Barbados, a well-informed source who declined to be identified said Andrew, Miss Stark and at least one unidentified companion arrived Tuesday on Antigua on a scheduled flight from London, then flew to Mustique, 100 miles west.

Mustique is owned by Colin Tennant, a friend of Princess Margaret, who has often gone there with friends. The island house is heavily guarded.

The Daily Express said the flight from Antigua to Mustique was booked by an official in the British High Commissioner's office in Barbados. It quoted charter firm clerk Susan Freer as saying: "The prince and Koo seemed extremely relaxed."

The Daily Mail quoted Miss Stark's stepfather, Carl Caruso, as saying from his Venice, Fla., home that Andrew and the actress, whose real name is Kathleen, were being chaperoned by her mother.

"My wife Kathy is with them under express orders from the queen. Koo said the queen had indicated that if her mother didn't go with them to the Caribbean...then the queen would be forced to appoint a chaperone," it quoted Caruso as saying. Independent efforts to reach Caruso were not immediately successful.

A Buckingham Palace spokesman said, "Prince

Andrew is a 22-year-old man and I think that speaks for itself. Koo Stark's mother may be with the couple. But she is certainly not there upon the wishes of the queen."

Earlier, the palace would not say whether Miss Stark was in Andrew's party and also would not confirm a Daily Express report that the actress, who has lived in London since she was 14, recently spent three days with Andrew as a guest of the queen at Balmoral Castle in Scotland.

Andrew is on leave from the Royal Navy after co-piloting a navy helicopter during the Falkland Islands war with Argentina. Miss Stark was first named publicly as a friend of Andrew on Sept. 20, two days after his return from the Falklands.

The Sun quoted Stark, whose latest movies are "Cat People" and "The Thing," as saying in Los Angeles that his daughter was bubbling over with excitement when he saw her in August.

"She told me it was love, but she would not say who," he was quoted as saying. "Now I understand why."

Today's tabloid accounts say she has also appeared nude in explicit sex scenes in a British television play called "The Blue Film" and in a movie called "Cruel Passion" about the 18th century French aristocrat the Marquis de Sade.

N.C. Stores No Longer Selling Tylenol Capsule

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Drug store operators around the state say they are no longer selling capsules of Extra-Strength Tylenol since some of the capsules have been blamed for seven deaths.

"We haven't sold one single bottle since the first day," when the deaths were revealed, said Bob Lewis of Avondale Pharmacy in Charlotte.

"I tried to sell tablets to a lady today, and she wouldn't buy them," added John Grandy, a pharmacist at King Drugs in Charlotte.

Charlotte stores are still selling other Tylenol products, such as extra-and regular-strength tablets, Tylenol liquid and Tylenol for children.

But several pharmacists said customers are asking what they can substitute for Tylenol, whose active ingredient is acetaminophen, a non-aspirin pain reliever.

"There are two dozen other companies that sell the same thing," Lewis said.

The same holds true in Durham, where pharmacists at several drug stores in reported that both regular Tylenol capsules and Extra-Strength Tylenol capsules had been pulled from shelves until further notice.

"I don't imagine you'd be able to find a Tylenol capsule from coast to coast," said Pat Mehling, pharmacist at Kerr Drug Store in Durham. Customers are not touching the Tylenol tablets at his store, Mehling said.

Mehling and pharmacists across the nation are responding in light of the findings that poisonous cyanide had been placed in capsules of the extra-strength pain reliever. Seven people in the Chicago area have died from taking the capsules, prompting officials to theorize that a "madman" must have put the lethal agent in the capsules.

Meanwhile, North Carolina officials said Wednesday that tests determined that Tylenol samples from stores across North Carolina contain none of the cyanide.

"We're pleased to report no positive results as a result of our laboratory analysis," said Robert Gordon, deputy director of the Food and Drug Protection Division of the state Department of Agriculture.

Police in California said Wednesday that a "copycat" inspired by the cyanide-tainted drugs that killed seven people in Chicago may have been responsible for strychnine-laced Extra-Strength Tylenol found in a California drugstore.

Gordon said North Carolina officials were testing only for cyanide, but that they were developing a method to test for strychnine if that became necessary.

FALL ARRIVES IN THE MOUNTAINS — A pair of White Tail deer stand alert in the early morning mist on Grandfather Mountain, startled by noise of a passing automobile. Some of autumn's leaves are already dropping to the ground, while most of the trees are approaching their traditional October brilliance. The leaves will be at their best at the highest elevations in the North Carolina mountains by the end of this week; and later in the month the color show will move to the lower elevations. Forecasters say this year's leaf display will be the best in several years because plenty of moisture earlier in the season. (Photo by Hugh Morton)

Uniting On Liberal Role

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A Charlotte minister who espouses several moderate and liberal causes hopes to get 200 churches on a conference mailing list to form a support network for liberal and moderate Baptists.

The Rev. R. Eugene Owens of Myers Park Baptist Church in Charlotte told over 100 Baptists at the three-day "Theology is a Verb" conference that women's rights, nuclear disarmament and social justice are some of the causes the network should espouse.

The network, which would attempt to improve morale among less-conservative members of Baptist churches, may challenge the conservative image of the Southern Baptist Convention, observers believe.

But the network will not have a name, said the Rev. Robert McClernon, pastor of the Watts Street Baptist Church in Durham.

"If we gave this bunch a name, then people would start talking about how we're trying to split the (Southern Baptist) Convention," he said. "We're just going to try to work together on some issues we think are important."

Conference participants also agreed to:

- Raise funds for a national Baptist resource center for peacemaking.

- Promote future communication between Southern Baptist churches that share a liturgical style of worship and common concerns on social issues.

- Help support women ordained as Southern Baptist ministers.

- Work to raise money for supporting efforts by the National Council of Catholic Bishops to promote nuclear disarmament.

Atlanta Undertaking Aggressive War On Crime

By SCOTT SHEPARD
Associated Press Writer
ATLANTA (AP) — The nightmare began more than three years ago when police discovered the bodies of two black teen-agers in a vacant lot. Before it was over, 29 young people were dead, and the image of a city that symbolized the new South was tarnished.

But now city officials are trying to improve that picture with an aggressive war on crime.

It hasn't been easy. Long before authorities decided that a mass murderer was stalking the city's young, Atlanta's homicide rate was climbing so rapidly that in 1979 it was labeled a "war zone" by some observers.

That year Atlanta recorded 231 homicides — tops in the nation for a metropolitan area its size. The epidemic led Gov. George Busbee to order state troopers into the city to assist the beleaguered police.

Among the victims were an Ohio doctor, gunned down during a robbery attempt outside his hotel, and former Gov. Carl Sanders' secretary, shot to death on a crowded downtown street. Both deaths were highly publicized.

Most of the 1979 homicides "had nothing to do with Atlanta," said Mayor Andrew Young in a recent interview. "I think we got caught between the drug wars in Detroit and Miami."

"A number of people came here to get away and cool off," he said. "They weren't in the drug business here. They were sort of hiding out here, but they were found here and killed here."

"The missing and murdered children — I still don't know how to explain that," said Young.

It damaged Atlanta's image but did not break its spirit, Young said.

"I don't know of any city in America that had the social and political fabric in place to have dealt with that kind of crisis with so little turmoil," the mayor said. "The leadership of the city was both black and white and that made the difference."

But the 22-month string of murders that led to the arrest of Wayne Williams and his conviction earlier this year in connection with two of the deaths left Atlanta with "an image problem," Young said.

"When you put all these things together, you do get a kind of perception that crime is a problem (in Atlanta)," he said. "But that's something we've been working on and I think with some success."

To symbolize that success, the city recently erected a huge sign which proclaims — "We have raised a brave and beautiful city ... Atlanta," quoting from a speech made by journalist Henry W. Grady in 1886.

"The message replaced a billboard erected in 1979 by an outraged merchant — "Warning ... you are in Atlanta, where police are: underpaid, undermanned, under-equipped. Use extreme caution while here."

Young says things have changed. "What we've tried to do," Young said, "is run a tight ship on our streets on the theory that the way you prevent crime is to establish order. When people get a sense that you don't even jaywalk in downtown, then that contributes to an orderly presence and a respect for law."

Gene Slade, executive director of the privately funded Metropolitan Atlanta Crime Commission, said there is statistical evidence to support Young's claims.

Through Sept. 23 of this year, 108 homicides had been recorded in Atlanta. In 1981, there were 182 murders in the city; in 1980, 200. Other categories of crime also show declines, according to Atlanta police statistics.

Authorities say the drop in the city's crime rate can be traced, in some part, to a formal agreement between the city's police department and the Atlanta Business Coalition, which represents various business organizations including the Atlanta Business League, the Atlanta

Chamber of Commerce and the Atlanta Convention and Visitors Bureau.

Proposed in late 1981 and approved in June, the pact established a partnership to "strengthen present efforts to fight crime on the streets of the central city," Public Safety Commissioner George Napper said.

And according to businessman Joel Goldberg, who heads the coalition, "the results have shown we were right on target. There is nowhere near the crime in downtown Atlanta now" as in 1979. Among other things, the agreement led the police department to take officers out of their cars and put them on the streets for more visibility. They walk beats or ride horses or motor scooters.

The police department also has up to 30 undercover female officers on downtown streets during business hours to prevent purse snatching.

It also operates a van which makes periodic sweeps through the city, picking up derelicts and taking them to jail, church-run missions or social service agencies.

The business community has instituted greater security measures, including the hiring of police to work as security guards during off-duty hours, training its own employees in security procedures and establishing security escort services for employees who work late.

It also distributes anti-crime literature and has set up an advisory panel to assist the police in devising anti-crime programs.

Candidates See Bigger Outlays

WASHINGTON (AP) — Candidates for Congress spent $30 million more during the first 18 months of the current campaign than they did during the same period in the 1980 races, the Federal Election Commission reports.

The commission said the 2,020 candidates registered in Senate and House races this year spent $133.6 million between Jan. 1, 1981 and June 30 of this year. The same candidates had raised $175.6 million.

For the same period in the 1980 races, 2,184 candidates had raised $125.8 million and spent $103 million.

Stark Contrast Displays Change In N.C. Prisons

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) —
The trip from Piedmont Correctional Center, a modern 12-story prison at Salisbury, to Craggy Prison, an aging lime-green fortress at Asheville, is a trip from the best of North Carolina's prison system to one of its worst.

The contrast between the two is stark and illustrative of how much change North Carolina's prisons have undergone in the past several years.

"Down there, there's more people," said Lance Conrad, 22, perched atop a third bunk in the barracks at Craggy, where he is serving seven years for breaking and entering and larceny. "But they're more equipped to handle it at Salisbury. This — you don't have any privacy."

If and when century-old Central Prison in Raleigh is demolished next year, Craggy may well be the worst in the state's 81-prison system.

"I'd like to close it (Craggy Prison)," said Rae McNamara, state prisons director. "But I see no hope of doing that anytime soon."

Craggy sits on the side of a mountain hard by the French Broad River. It was built in 1924 when counties ran their own prisons, and remains as a three-story medium custody unit, with inmates sleeping in large dorm rooms.

It is older and unlike the state's road camps. Its rooms are arranged like points from a star. It is an uneven star, though, and guards cannot see through the barred doors inside each room from their central station.

"You don't have the visibility of inmates in these dorms like you should have, and it creates problems," said R.C. Forester, prison superintendent.

"When you don't have visibility, your inmates do things they aren't supposed to," he added. "They know as well as we do that we can't see them."

Two Craggy inmates died of stabblings with prison-made weapons in 1978. For ester's first year at the prison, he said.

The prison is kept over capacity. But, owing to its design, is less crowded than many of the state's units. One recent day it had 219 inmates, in space with a theoretical capacity of 194.

But even with the prison system's crowding problem, Ms. McNamara shut down part of Craggy earlier this year. A basement row of dark single-man cells, each windowless and with a bed and toilet the only furnishings, were closed.

The state Human Resources Department's division of health services inspects state prisons for sanitation, but it no longer bothers at Craggy's old facilities.

"I was told it was not necessary," said William Broadway, the district sanitarian. "We were just wasting our time and effort."

Many of the inmates work in the large laundry, where clothes from half the state's prisons are washed. Others pass their time in the prison's small front yard. A larger exercise yard has been built on the mountain top, a healthy climb from the prison, but hasn't been opened yet.

At Salisbury, the 12-story brick Piedmont Correctional Center is set in rolling woodlands and, but for its two concrete guard towers and fencing, looks more like a community college or hospital.

Inside, the technology is computer-age. Guards monitor inmates with microphones and television cameras, and infra-red beams replace fencing around open areas and rooftops.

The prison was built with 480 single-man cells, but on this day Superintendent Robert L. Hinton has 568 medium-custody inmates. Because of crowding, he's added second beds in more than 60 cells.

"It's still far superior to most institutions in the country," says Hinton. "As other states consider new construction (of prisons), they come here and look at our buildings."

The prison was built at a cost of $14 million, and has its own 20-bed hospital where minor surgery is performed. About one-fifth of the inmates have jobs, and others can take courses that include auto-repair and air conditioning.

The cells are arranged 16 to each two-story cell block, 96 to each two-floor group of cellblocks. Cells have barless windows, and inmates can lock their own doors to keep out other inmates.

The prison has a large gym, with a full-size basketball court and even pool tables.

Such amenities don't amount to coddling, they amount to control, says Hinton.

"At first, they are dissatisfied when they come here because we have more control," he said. "At field units, they have almost complete run."

"But after a while they get to appreciate the privacy, the air conditioning, and a few of the luxuries we have."

ONE OF THE WORST — Bunk beds are stacked three high at Craggy Prison, which state officials say is overcrowded and has some of the worst problems in the state. (AP Laserphoto)

New 'Masterpiece Theater' Starts Sunday

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The new "Masterpiece Theater" presentation is like a great novel. Once you start it, you won't want to put it down.

As a counterpoint to the general humdrum of the networks' new season, "To Serve Them All My Days," beginning Sunday, is quite likely the most amusing, affecting and tender television of the season. Waiting each week for the 13-part series won't be easy.

It's episodic soap opera with intelligence and depth, offering compelling love stories, not the least of which is main character David Poylett-Jones' eternal affair with a boys' boarding school in England between world wars.

Through Bamfylde, David is transformed from a pitifully shaky, shell-shocked war veteran into an assertive history teacher and inspirational leader of the boys in the school and the men on the faculty. He comes to learn that he needs his students as much as they need him.

All the while, he struggles nobly with his psychological baggage: the class conflict between his Welsh mining roots and his allegiance to a school for the privileged, and the war which he fought but never could forgive or forget.

David's idealism and stubborn devotion to his values are his strengths — and his weaknesses. He's sure to win you and warm you.

John Duttine, the best television actor in England last year, brings out David's gentleness and compassion, both in his patience and enthusiasm in school, and his boundless but blind love for the women in his life.

David is merely one of the character gems from the R.F. Delderfield novel, which has been shaped into powerfully moving television by Andrew Davies.

Algy Herries (Frank Middlemass), the headmaster of Bamfylde who took a chance on David and subtly prodded him to greatness, is the most agreeable character we've seen on TV. Always flustered but never rattled, he's so comically good-natured and perceptive he could do Sanka ads.

On the other end of the lovability scale is Alcock, an icy martinet whose views on discipline and education clash with David's progressive ways and sensitivity. Charles Kay's heartless portrayal is so devastating he should get hate mail.

In between the benevolent and the despotic is a cranky old teacher with cigarettes and cynicism dripping constantly from his lips. Not since Humphrey Bogart has an actor (Alan MacNaughtan) been as deft with a butt. Howarth's wry is allowed to mellow whenever he drinks gin with David. He is indeed a valued friend.

Every school has a buffoon, and Carter (Neil Stacy) owns that role. He's a militaristic flag-waver, but a toy soldier, exempted from the war by a bum knee. David, of course, won't let him play war games with his war, and they battle on philosophical grounds.

But, unlike the foils on commercial television, Carter is a worthy adversary, a three-dimensional jingoist whose flaw is his extremity, not the integrity of his beliefs.

As a backdrop to the campus story line is Delderfield's keen insights into the economic and social struggles in not so merry of England.

"To Serve Them All My Days" is totally satisfying. It has heart, soul and credibility. It's television to be savored, coming from — not Hollywood — but the British Broadcasting Corp. and the Australian Broadcasting Commission.

Movie Workers To Vote On Terms

By JAY ARNOLD
Associated Press Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Behind-the-camera movie workers and producers reached a tentative agreement early today on a new contract, averting a threatened strike that could have halted production of motion pictures and most prime-time television programs.

The three-year agreement for the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and the basic crafts unions was reached with the Alliance of Motion Picture and Television Producers after 10 hours of bargaining.

The new agreement, retroactive to Aug. 1, calls for an initial 6 percent wage increase followed by a 4 percent raise on Feb. 1, 1983, and 7 percent more on Aug.

1, 1983, and Aug. 1, 1984, for a total 26.2 percent increase compounded over the length of the contract, said union spokesman Mac St. Johns.

Mail ballots will be sent to 20,000 IATSE members and the 7,000 members of the basic crafts, with the ballots due to be returned 10 days later, St. Johns said.

The contract also calls for increases in health and welfare benefits.

Earlier, union president Walter Diehl had warned that Wednesday's meeting would be the last unless progress was made, raising fears of the third major walkout against the motion picture industry in two years. Actors struck in 1980 and writers struck in 1981.

The union's 23 locals represent cameramen, art directors, soundmen, make-up artists, grips, electricians, scenic and title artists, and other behind-the-scene production workers.

St. Johns said the current average pay for behind-the-camera workers is about $12 per hour, adding that wages range from $10 an hour for some employees to $5,000 a week for some cameramen.

The producers group represents the seven major film studios and 250 independent producers.

Nancy Stops By To Talk About A Book

LOS ANGELES (AP) — First lady Nancy Reagan stopped by Merv Griffin's television show and chatted about everything from her pet charity, a foster grandparents program, to teen-age drug abuse and the problems of being wife of the president.

"It's really different than I expected it to be," Mrs. Reagan said of life in the White House. "I didn't expect it to be this busy."

"Most of our adult life has been public lives, but I didn't expect it to be, I guess, this public," Mrs. Reagan, dressed in a long black silk skirt and white blouse, said Wednesday night.

Discussing her work to combat drug and alcohol addiction among young people, Mrs. Reagan said she was astonished that some children were exposed to intoxicants at such a young age.

"I went to a class for kids in third and fourth grades," she said. "It was a prevention class ... (but) every one of them had been approached."

She also promoted her new book on the foster grandparents program, "To Love A Child."

The book details her experiences and observations on the program, which she encountered 15 years ago when it was under way only in a Sacramento hospital.

"Now it's in every state, but I wish there would be a lot more," she said.

The hour-long show is to be broadcast in many U.S. cities Oct. 21.

Disc Jockey Will Pay Off

YANKTON, S.D. (AP) — A local disc jockey is preparing to sling hash at a local restaurant as part of his apology for calling waitresses "fat and ugly."

It all started two weeks ago during a sports quiz show on radio station WNAX. In awarding the prize, a gift certificate at JoDean's steak house, disc jockey Dan Christopherson commented on the waitresses.

"I said, 'JoDean's offers enjoyable dining and good food but oh are their waitresses ugly,'" Christopherson recalled. "I just made the comment on the air that the waitresses at JoDean's are fat and ugly."

That didn't sit well with the waitresses, and 15 of them picketed Wednesday outside the radio station.

"It got to the point where we got phone calls that asked if I was the fat one or the ugly one," said waitress Ruby Guthmiller.

The maligned waitresses, wearing JoDean's uniforms of blue calico blouses and denim skirts, marched in front of the station for hours, at times chanting, "Dan, Dan, he's our man, he can say 'sorry,' sure he can."

One little boy carried a sign reading, "My mom is not dumb and ugly."

Both sides made a joke out of the tongue-in-cheek comment, and Christopherson said he realizes how hard waitresses work and how much their good will means to customers.

Christopherson said he wouldn't wear a skirt during his stint as a waitress Saturday. But the picketing waitresses agreed to make him a calico blouse.

Christopherson added, "I get to keep all my tips."

Plastic Blondes Giving Way To Macho Males

By VERNON SCOTT
UPI Hollywood Reporter
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Jay Bernstein, 45, Hollywood power broker, career manipulator and movie-TV deal-maker, says plastic blondes are giving way to macho males.

There are perhaps fewer than 100 Hollywood power brokers — producers, directors, personal managers, agents, studio heads, TV brass and a handful of stars (Clint Eastwood and Warren Beatty).

They are the shakers and makers of show biz. They can reach one another on the telephone and they keep in touch.

Bernstein began as a press agent and personal manager who steered Farrah Fawcett, Lee Majors, Kristy McNichol and others to stardom.

He is best known for making media stars of Farrah and Suzanne Somers. Since leaving Bernstein they have enjoyed lower public profiles.

In partnership with Larry Thompson, Bernstein is producing the new TV series, "Bring 'Em Back Alive," starring Bruce Boxleitner, who they see in the van of a trend to all-American heroes in movies and TV.

It is more than a trend. It's a landslide. Most new TV series feature broad-shouldered, bare-chested heroes.

Tom Selleck of "Magnum, P.I." is the prototype for Robert Urich of "Gavilan," Perry King of "Quest," Peter Barton of "The Powers of Matthew Star," David Hasselhoff in "Knight Rider" and Lee Horsely of "Matt Houston."

Also muscling in are Pierce Brosnan in "Remington Steele," Stephen Collins in "Tales of the Gold Monkey," Jon-Erik Hexum in "Voyagers" and seven young bucks in "Seven Brides For Seven Brothers."

Gil Girard and Jeff Conaway, Bernstein clients, will star next January in "Gib," and "Greystone's Odyssey," two additional new series with macho heroes.

Bernstein perceives sociological implications in the trend.

"In good times when everyone is employed and the economy is booming, Americans enjoy movies and TV shows involving social problems starring ethnic types in character leads," he said. "In bad times, such as these, audiences have enough problems of their own. They don't want to think. They look for handsome, macho males who can handle any problem that comes along. They want entertainment, escapism."

"In good times audiences like to see glamorous blondes as they did in the '60s and '70s but in tough times they prefer to see strong women."

"The philosophic concept of the good-looking, macho leading man is as simple as the father figure, or big brother or strong lover who helps you get through your own weak times. They represent men who can solve problems and project optimism."

"I'm trying to bring back idealized role model stars, actors in the style of John Wayne, Clark Gable, Alan Ladd and Gary Cooper — good-looking guys who males can relate to and women can fantasize about."

"Most people these days prefer to relate to American-type heroes than ethnics like Al Pacino, Dustin Hoffman, Robert DeNiro and Richard Dreyfuss."

According to Bernstein, that doesn't mean those actors won't find work. Rather, they will simply have to make room for the new breed.

He foresees continued success for such heroic screen figures as Eastwood, Burt Reynolds and Harrison Ford and a chance for Christopher (Superman) Reeve if he returns to his bigger-than-life roles. He thinks Sylvester Stallone, an ethnic type thanks to Rocky Balboa, has a big future but only if he stops playing street people.

"The old moguls made stars," Bernstein said, "and that's what I'm attempting to do. Actors today may become stars but they have a tough time staying on top. They need advice and careful career handling."

"In the old days when studios ran this town there were seven guys who made the decisions on pictures and stars. Today there are 75 guys and I can get in touch with almost all of them. It's easier to operate now than in the '30s and '40s."

"I'm in the business of giving the public heroes and heroines. Talent is important, but it's not the single vital element."

"When I was young the medium was the movies. Today the medium is the media itself. That's why Brooke Shields is a bigger star than Merle Streep."

Workshop On Child Care Held

A childcare workshop on "Developing A Discipline Philosophy" was held Tuesday with Dr. Jane Teleki, chairman of development and child relations at East Carolina University, as the featured speaker.

The meeting focused on attitudes and feelings on adults' interaction with young children. Emphasis was placed on discipline as an education tool rather than a punishment.

Co-ordinators for the workshop, sponsored by Pitt Community College and ECU, were Kay Galloway of PCC and Brenda Ernest, director of Waldrop Acres Child Care Center.

Others on the program included Nancy Norwood, day care coordinator of Beaufort County; Sue Creech, chairman of childhood development programs at PCC; Dr. Charles Snow, child development specialist at ECU, and Juliette McKoy, day care consultant from Raleigh.

Autumn Leaves

The reds, golds and browns of fall are peaking in many parts of the country this week, including Western Maryland where the annual Autumn Glory Festival begins today. The colorful foliage trees wear at this time is the result of a process called "abscission." As the time to shed leaves approaches, a disc of cork cells grows across the base of each leaf stalk. This is the abscission or cutting off layer. The cells block the stem from receiving food and water. Soon the leaf's chlorophyll breaks down. Chlorophyll gives the leaf its green color, which covers other pigments. Without the chlorophyll's green, the hidden red and gold pigments can be seen.

Study Set For Carter Center

By STEELE HOLMAN
Associated Press Writer
ATLANTA (AP) — Former President Carter's new center on public policy will launch a study this month of the future of the 1978 Camp David peace accords and Middle Eastern economic development as its first undertaking.

The former chief executive, speaking Wednesday night at a question-and-answer session with Emory University students, said he will visit several countries in the Middle East in compiling the report.

Carter said he intends to confer with various Middle Eastern leaders to "find out what they would be willing to do" to promote peace in the area. After the Middle East report is issued, the policy center then will address nuclear weapons control, Carter said.

The public policy center will be constructed adjacent to Carter's presidential library, which will be in northeast Atlanta near the Emory campus. The former president said he envisions the center eventually being used as a center for mediation of international disputes.

Answering another question, Carter said the Reagan administration embargo against the Soviet gas pipeline will fail, estrange U.S. allies and benefit the Soviet Union.

Instead of promoting harmony between the United States and its European allies, the embargo is causing discord between them because it calls on Europe to bear the economic sacrifices of maintaining the sanctions. The Reagan administration announced the embargo against participation in the trans-European pipeline as a response to Soviet actions in Poland.

"This effort has been driving a wedge between us and our allies, and it has cemented the relationship between the Soviet Union and our allies," said Carter, who has joined the Emory faculty as a professor.

An economic embargo "should have a chance of being successful, and there is no possibility that this embargo by the Reagan administration will be successful," he said.

On a domestic issue, Carter called President Reagan "cowardly" for calling for a balanced budget constitutional amendment after proposing a federal budget with a deficit that would exceed in four years all previous federal deficits.

Peru Won't Buy F-16 Fighter

WASHINGTON (AP) — Peru has changed its mind and won't buy a lower-powered version of the advanced U.S. F-16 fighter, the Pentagon says.

Last summer, Pentagon officials reported that Peru was interested in buying U.S. warplanes after about a decade of relying heavily on the Soviet Union for military equipment.

A spokesman said the U.S. government offered to provide the Lima government with price and other information for 26 of the export models of the F-16 fighter "but the offer was declined."

Unemployment An 'Expectable Issue' In Elections

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —
With new unemployment figures due Friday, Republicans are trying to limit the political damage from the high jobless rate while Democrats scramble to turn the statistics to their advantage in next month's elections.

President Reagan has tried to pin the blame for the nation's soaring unemployment rate on the policies of previous Democratic office-holders. Democrats have been just as relentless in trying to paint the administration's economic policies as the villain.

The tempo of charges and countercharges is expected to reach a crescendo when the September figures are released, the last set of statistics before Nov. 2. Unemployment stood at 9.8 percent in August, but many experts predict the new figures may top the politically sensitive 10 percent mark.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., turned a routine administrative chore Tuesday into a media event — and another opportunity to blast Reagan.

O'Neill called reporters and photographers to his ceremonial office in the Capitol to witness his signing of compromise legislation to create a job training program to replace the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act, which expired Sept. 30.

"The ship of state is in a storm-tossed sea," O'Neill said. "The president of the United States is the mariner. He says let's stay to the course. Any wise mariner would try to get out of the storm and salvage the ship of state."

With House Democratic Leader Jim Wright of Texas and Whip Thomas S. Foley of Washington looking on, O'Neill said he wanted to use the occasion to make clear that the training bill "will not provide a single job," as would a public works jobs bill that Democratic leaders have been pushing.

For more than 100 years, the speaker of the House and the presiding officer of the Senate sign — in a routine fashion — all legislation which Congress sends to the White House for the president's signature. Veteran House aides said they could not recall so much fanfare surrounding the chore.

Reagan tentatively had been scheduled to sign the measure into law today, but White House aides said Tuesday night that the bill signing would not be on today's schedule. No explanation was given.

Reagan has thrown his support behind the training measure and prodded Congress to pass it, which it did just before recessing last week for the November elections. Democrats have protested that the bill really was their idea.

Meanwhile, Terry Michael, president of the Association of House Democratic Press Assistants, has sent a list of suggestions to his colleagues "on how you might structure media events for your district, or media market, to remind constituents of the devastating effects of Reaganomics — Republicanomics."

Michael, whose group consists of the spokesmen for Democratic members of the House, said in an interview that the suggestions are aimed at helping "promote public policy discussion." Michael works for Rep. Robert T. Matsui, D-Calif.

A GOP member of the House who intercepted the list of suggestions is protesting the media advice from the Democratic press assistants as a misuse of taxpayers' money.

In a letter to the House Ethics Committee, Rep. Carroll A. Campbell Jr., R-S.C., said, "This seems to be a coordinated effort on the part of House employees to orchestrate the activities of political campaigns..."

He said in an interview that such activities should be left to the GOP and Democratic campaign committees, which are supported by private contributions.

"They (Democrats) offer nothing in this, they offer only exploitation of an issue that is on the minds of everybody in this country," Campbell said of the media tactics. "They don't offer hope."

Michael said he only is trying "to make Democrats more effective communicators to counteract an effective communicator in the White House in a discussion of public policy questions."

Among the media suggestions for Democratic press secretaries when the unemployment figures come out:

—Arrange a visit "at the local unemployment compensation office ... Your local TV stations and photo editors for your local newspapers can replace their stock shots of unemployment lines with pictures of your boss talking with the unemployed..."

—"Hold your meeting, press conference rally, etc ..." at a "site that visually evokes the hardship of unemployment."

Speaking of Your Health...

Fear of Flying After Heart Attack

My husband had a mild heart attack about six years ago. He has completely recovered and is able to put in a good day's work as an accountant. The only thing that remains is that he is terribly afraid to fly. Our children live on the West Coast and because of his fear we cannot have the pleasure of seeing them. Is there any danger to his flying or is this all in his head? — Mrs. R.T., Mass.

Dear Mrs. T.:
The cabins of all large planes are carefully pressurized. Even if an emergency does arise, oxygen is immediately available if the pressure level should suddenly change. It is for this reason that most people with a heart or lung problem are usually given permission to fly.

Of course, before undertaking a flight, all patients with chronic bronchitis, asthma, emphysema, anemia, and circulatory problems and heart conditions should have the definite permission of their doctor.

Carrying heavy baggage is an unnecessary burden for people with a heart condition. Airport personnel when alerted are remarkably helpful in supplying chairs and motorized vehicles to relieve the elderly or the infirm of the stresses of boarding or deplaning. Such arrangements can be made in advance or directly at the airport.

To me, the story of your husband suggests that the fear of flying revolves around his psychological status rather than his physical condition. Confrontation with him about his fears and a sympathetic understanding of his psychological stresses may separate him from the terror that keeps him from enjoying this very special kind of family reunion.

I have been told that I have an early skin cancer of the face. The doctor doesn't believe that there is any need to take it off right away. I am glad about that and I would like to know if there are special ways that this can be done without causing a scar. — Mr. D.A.H., Ga.

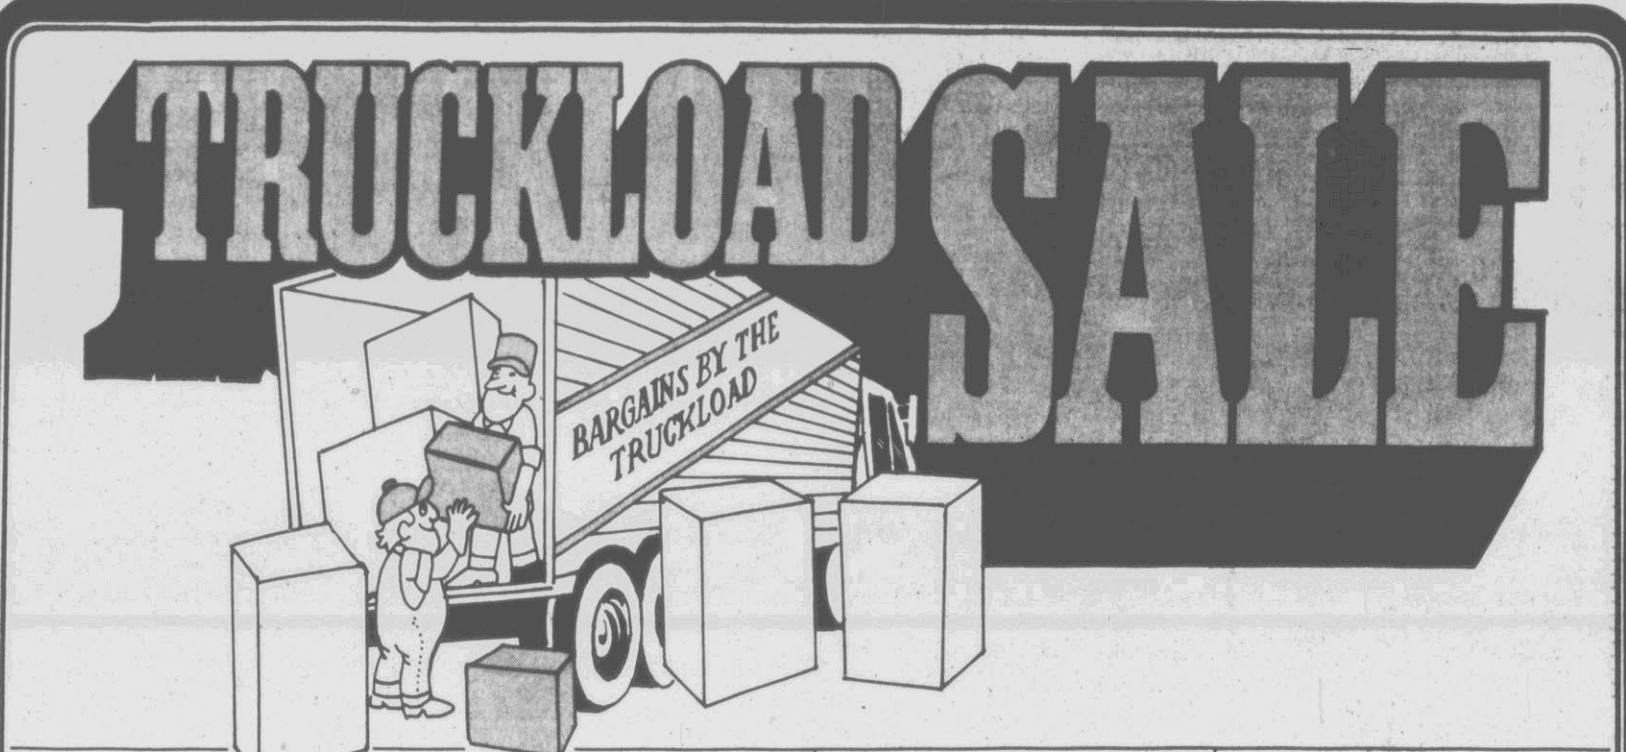

Dear Mr. H.:
Skin cancers of the face are cured in a high percentage of cases. When the cancer is found early and removed immediately, the results are astonishing.

I am somewhat confused by your letter. If a portion of the skin was removed for biopsy, and it was definitely found to be cancerous, you should not be given the choice of waiting. For as I said, the greatest number of cures revolve around the immediate removal of a cancer when first detected.

I can understand your wanting to get a cosmetic result without any marked scarring. However, the prime purpose of any procedure for cancer is to cure it permanently. The ideal method of treatment is one that cures.

Cancers can be removed by surgical excision, by chemical and electrical cauterization, by freezing, and by laser beam techniques. The choice of the procedure is made by the doctor. A scar is a small price to pay for saving your health and your life.
