Amtrak Standoff Continues

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A gunman holding his family hostage in an Amtrak passenger car says the woman with him is dead and claims his brother-in-law — possibly dead — is in the room with his two children, police said Saturday.

Police Chief Fred Heineman said the man, identified only as W. Rodriguez, first told police the other man was dead, then claimed he was only shot in the hand. But Heineman said the claims were "all suspect."

"He is paranoid. He is irrational. He has a strong desire to kill himself," Heineman said Saturday night, more than 40 hours after gunshots erupted in Amtrak's Silver Star outside Raleigh.

Police have not heard from the woman, believed to be the mother of two children in the car, since the standoff began. Heineman said Rodriguez sometimes refers to the woman as his wife, but calls her his sister at other times.

Late Saturday night the man requested and received intravenous solutions of saline and glucose, said Dr. Susanne White of the Wake County Medical Center. She said she believed they would drink the solutions.

Earlier Saturday, the gunman vowed to "fight with you to the end," and said it was time to end the standoff.

On another occasion, he threatened to kill himself after letting his children go.

"He's wanting to get out. He just wants to work it out," said police Sgt. Mike Longmire.

Police said they could hear the man clicking the bolt of what sounded like an automatic weapon.

Police set up communications, and negotiations began in earnest about noon.

On several occasions, the talks were broken off while the gunman tried to quiet a crying child.

Later in the afteroon, police brought in a social worker who failed to elicit a response.

Police had maintained through the early afternoon that they would not bring anything to Rodriguez until he let the children go. Later, a translator said he would try to convince Heineman to let him go in alone with matches for Rodriguez and orange juice for the children.

"We hope this will convince you that we are trying to help you, that you can trust us and that we are sincere," said Jorge Oliva, an emergency medical services employee who is translating for police.

Heineman said matches were delivered outside the compartment door and fire engines were called in.

Child Killed, 34 People Hurt

Grenades Blast Temple

ROME (AP) — Five elegantly dressed men hurled grenades into a crowd of Jews leaving holiday celebrations at Rome's main synagogue Saturday, killing a 2-year-old boy and wounding 34 people before escaping in a hail of submachine gunfire, police and witnesses said.

Enraged Jews, some in blood-stained prayer shawls, gathered outside the domed, yellowish stone Central Synagogue after the attack, some screaming abuse at Pope John Paul II for meeting last month with PLO chief Yasser Arafat, others wailing, sobbing and fainting when victims' names were read.

Nearly 10 hours later, a bomb exploded a few blocks away outside the unoccupied Syrian Embassy, causing slight damage but no injuries, police said. There were no arrests and no claim of responsibility.

The synagogue attack was the latest in a series of anti-Semitic assaults in Europe that have left nearly 20 dead and more than 200 wounded in two years. No group claimed responsibility, but previous attacks have been claimed by the radical Palestinian group Black June and the French leftist gang Direct Action.

Although the Roman Catholic pontiff and the Palestine Liberation Organization condemned the synagogue assault, more than 1,500 angry people marched on the PLO headquarters in the Italian capital, shouting "Assassins!" and "Hangman Arafat!"

"This is an Arab terrorist attack with the blessings of the pope!" a man shouted.

Police eased the crowd away from the PLO building, then scuffled with demonstrators as they tried to march on the Quirinale Palace, official residence of President Sandro Pertini. Police blocked the crowd just off the central Piazza Venezia. Protesters damaged two police cars but no arrests were reported.

The boy killed in the synagogue attack was identified as Stefano Tache. His father Joseph, his mother Daniela and his 4-year-old brother Marco were wounded. Marco was listed in serious condition with head wounds, while his parents were in satisfactory condition.

Witnesses and police gave the following description of what happened:

Five elegantly dressed, swarthy young men, who appeared to be of Middle Eastern origin, walked calmly up to the back entrance of the 108-year-old, two-story synagogue in the ancient ghetto where Jews were once forced to live by medieval popes.

Initial reports said the terrorists overpowered a police officer standing guard outside the synagogue, but officials later said no police were protecting the building.

Jobless Rate Looms As Handicap For '82 GOP

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

A News Analysis

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan used to say a recession was when your neighbor lost his job and a depression was when you lost your own. By that definition, this is a depression for 11.3 million Americans.

And by any definition, that is trouble for Republican candidates in the elections three weeks from Tuesday.

The president is, after all, the one minding the store, and in election times of economic hardship, his party's ticket usually suffers for it.

The increase in the unemployment rate, to 10.1 percent in September, came as no surprise. Since they expected it, Republicans were bracing and Democrats blaming even before the Labor Department reported that unemployment had hit double digits for the first time since 1940.

The announcement on Friday produced a mimeographed deluge in Washington. Organized labor staged a rally across the street from the White House. A handful of protesters chained themselves to an entrance at the Labor Department. Democrats called it a national tragedy, and blamed Reagan. The U.S. Chamber of Commerce called it a national tragedy and blamed Democrats.

Reagan blamed them, too. In politics as in football, the best defense is a good offense.

The president, in Long Beach, Calif., signed a bill to promote exports and said it would create hundreds of thousands of new jobs. The administration hadn't shown much interest in the measure until lately, when it was embraced as a step toward economic recovery. The signing was rescheduled so as to come a few hours after the unemployment report.

None of these exercises was long on spontaneity. Both sides knew what was coming. A point-3 percent increase in the unemployment rate, representing an additional 450,000 people without jobs, edged the index into double figures. The difference between 9.8 percent unemployed and 10.1 percent isn't much unless you happened to be one of the people who lost a job between in September. The big difference was symbolic: the first double digit un-

Poland Pledges To Free Some Interned Unionists

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — In an apparent effort to head off riots over the outlawing of Solidarity, Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski pledged Saturday to free a "large number" of interned unionists held under martial law.

The martial law chief also vowed, in a speech before Parliament, to ease travel restrictions, limit the practice of internment and lift martial law eventually — but only if "social peace" is achieved.

President Reagan, reacting angrily to the outlawing of Solidarity by the Polish Parliament on Friday, said he will move as quickly as possible to suspend "most favored" nation trading status given to the Soviet-bloc country.

This will hamper Poland's ability to earn dollars and export food and manufactured goods to the United States. Tariffs on Polish goods imported by the United States will rise considerably with the loss of the trading status.

Reagan called the outlawing of Solidarity "another far-reaching step in the persecution of the Polish people," and declared: "America cannot stand idly by in the face of these threats."

Reagan spoke in a radio address from his ranch in the mountains north of Santa Barbara, Calif.

In his speech prior to Reagan's announcement, Jaruzelski, who is also Communist Party leader and defense minister, warned that Poland "is not a toy to play with."

Reagan first took action against Poland on Dec. 24, shortly after the imposition of martial law, and also announced sanctions against the Soviet Union for its complicity in the military crackdown.

He suspended talks for a new grain agreement with the Soviet Union, and blocked shipments of high-technology items to the Soviets and Poland. He also limited other commerce between the United States and Poland such as suspending Polish airline flights to the

ECU Has A Question

Classrooms, Or Trees?

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Objections to the site of a proposed new classroom building at East Carolina University — on a portion of what remains of the six-acre Sally Joyner Davis Arboretum — are being voiced by some faculty members and students at the school.

After receiving $265,000 in planning money from the General Assembly, and following a site selection process, the ECU Board of Trustees last spring voted to locate the proposed facility south of Graham and Rawl buildings, partly on the site of the old steam plant and laundry. The proposed building — to be the largest classroom building at the school — will also take up part of the arboretum.

There is some question as to whether the General Assembly next year will appropriate the $13.5 million needed for construction of the three-story, 167,000-square-foot building which will house 60 classrooms and 180 faculty offices.

"I don't know. With the economy like it is now, who can say," Cliff Moore, vice chancellor for business affairs said.

Tobacco '83: It Could Be A Question Of Survival

By MELVIN LANG
Reflector Staff Writer

Flue-cured tobacco growers are nearing the end of an auction season marked by record high prices despite a lack of concentrated demand on the part of buyers and continuing uncertainty over their price-support and production control programs. At stake, they fear, is their future as farmers.

Auction prices on the Eastern Belt, largest of the auction systems in the five-state flue-cured producing area, are averaging above $180 per 100 pounds this summer. But growers and buyers acknowledge most of the impetus for that high average has come from price-support levels that some say are artificially high.

The Flue-Cured Tobacco Stabilization Corp., a grower cooperative that administers the price-support program, has taken under loan more than a quarter of this year's crop. Its share of the sales last Wednesday in the Eastern Belt approached the 50 percent level.

Fred Bond of Cary, administrative leader of the Stabilization Corp., told a congressional hearing last week the co-op would take in about 250 million pounds of tobacco this sales season. Much of that is quality leaf — the type of tobacco that normally goes to the buying companies. By comparison, Stabilization took in only 106 million pounds of the 1981 crop, which was larger than this year.

Bond and other industry spokesmen have blamed the lack of industry initiative on several factors, but mainly on congressional action to double the federal tax on cigarettes and the expanded importation of less-expensive foreign tobacco.

Pitt County growers, along with farmers throughout the production area, face another referendum later this year on whether they want to keep tobacco under the control program that was begun nearly a half-century ago after over production and lack of demand saw tobacco prices zoom downward.

Under that program, the U.S. secretary of agriculture will announce poundage quotas for next year about Dec. 1. The referendum will be held shortly after his announcement.

A "no" vote in that referendum would mean the controlled tobacco program would be abandoned, along with price supports. An affirmative vote would continue the program for three more years, subject to any new congressional action.

A former Stabilization board member, W. Alex Allen of Farmville, is one of those who believes the control program must be kept.

"The people are going to have to look at this situation very hard and decidein their own way whether they can come up with something that is comparable or better. Until they decide to tear it down, they better think many times," Allen said in an interview.

"By all means, hold on to the program ... A little hurt is not like a bloody murder," Allen said.

Allen, who has interests in producing and selling tobacco, said he favors retention of the price-support levels as called for under the existing program coupled with a cut in production quotas for 1983.

"There are always two sides to any question," Allen explained. "Industry has got to look at their ledger sheet. I just feel like they are carrying it a little too far in demanding that the farmer do different things.

"Leasing (of quota) is one of the items that comes up in different discussions. I would leave it to your discretion as to whether leasing actually causes higher costs to industry, but when a grower who leases tobacco and one who doesn't put their tobacco on the warehouse floor, the buyer doesn't know which was leased.

"Leasing is only the proposition of two farmers getting together and agreeing (on a price)," Allen said.

Allen observed that "tobacco is an unusal item, and I don't think there is another commodity like it."

"There is only one place for tobacco to go, and that is industry. It's not like vegetables, beef, corn or other grains — and industry can buy that tobacco or not buy it at the auction place," Allen said.

"That gives them both ends of the rope, as I see it. I think that's an unreasonable situation for the farmer to be in."

Grower-warehouseman Chester Don Worthington of Worthington Farms also expressed support for retention of the control program — but not at the existing price-support levels, which buyers say are well above levels for similar tobacco on the world market.

"If we are not willing to compete, we might as well get out of the business," Worthington said.

"Right now the (support) price of tobacco is much higher than it should be if we are to survive" as a viable competitor on the world market, he explained. "Yoy don't survive in any business when you raise prices as if you are in a monopoly."

Worthington, who said he believes the support levels could be cut by 25 percent, noted that he testified before a congressional committee about four years ago in favor of freezing support prices.

"Now a freeze of prices is what a lot of farmers talking about. Freezing would keep you where you are, but that won't do the job ... If we go into 1983 at the same level, we'll face the same situation," he said.

"Our controls and price structure are two different things. We can control acres and pounds and still have have the price structure (at a level) where it would compete. There is a point it (tobacco) would sell.

"When it sets support prices above the world market, it encourages growers to produce for a market that is nonexistent."

Worthington said he expects an order to reduce yield next year.

"I do not want a cut, but I don't see that the secretary will have any choice," he said.

Representatives of two major farm-financing agencies said growers are showing a reasonably good repayment ability as a result of their tobacco sales, but both said it was premature to project what would happen next year.

Arnold Parris, president of the Pitt-Greene Production Credit Association, saidthe PCA's "loans have been handled extremely well. We are well satisfied with repayment up to his point."

Jimmy Smith, county administrator for the Farmers Home Administration, said his agency was "pleased so far" over how farmers were handling their loans. "We've got a way to go, but we're in line with last year," he said.

Smith said there "are too many uncertainties to formulate any plans" for FmHA policy next year.

"One thing is this contribution that growers have to make to Stabilization. I want to have some idea of what that's going to be. It's three cents this year. If that gets too high, it could really be a factor," he said.

Jobs ...

employment since the days just before World War II. The jobless rate in 1940 was 14.6 percent.

It introduces a frightening word into the campaign debate over Reaganomics. The word is depression. Reagan doesn't use it any more, but he did frequently during the campaign that won him the White House.

He stirred controversy by saying that what then-President Carter called a recession was in fact a depression. Campaigning in the industrial Midwest two years ago, he said unemployment there was "comparable to the Great Depression of the 1930s. That's not the recession he (Carter) speaks of, that's depression."

The unemployment rate is much worse now.

Reagan's 1982 campaign argument is that the problem was, and is, the fault of the Democrats and their spending habits. He said Friday that today's unemployment stems from "the tragic excesses of the past." Campaigning in Reno, Nev., on the eve of the unemployment report, Reagan said the Democrats who would be lambasting the administration over it were the people in charge "when the economy started going haywire.

"What are they offering now except their failed policies of the past?" he asked, "spend and spend, tax and tax, and if that isn't enough, borrow and borrow."

He complained on Friday about "those who would make a political football of this cruel fate for so many people." Since he used the unemployment issue himself in his 1980 campaign, the acceptibility of the tactic would seem to depend on who is kicking the football.

For all the problems, the public opinion polls still indicate that Americans are willing to wait a while longer for Reaganomics to work, and that many of them agree with the president's contention that current problems are the legacy of past Democratic policies.

Democrats have been figuring that 10 percent unemployment might change that. They'll find out in little more than three weeks.

Amtrak ...

"We've offered him matches," he said. "If it's for cigarettes, so much the better."

When police attempted to deliver cigarettes and drinks to the compartment, a single shot was fired through the door, Heineman said, adding that it was the fourth shot fired from the compartment Saturday.

He said the police strategy was to continue offering food to keep the children nourished, adding the strategy could change if the children became weak or sick.

Police said Rodriguez was talking in English and Spanish, although officers previously thought the man understood only Spanish. At one point in the negotiations Saturday, the gunmen told police he didn't like the way his statements were being translated.

Police tightened security at the train station at about 11 a.m. after they heard reports that Rodriguez had a machine gun and was holding it on one of his children. About a half hour later, police heard gunfire from inside the train. Police said the shots apparently went through the roof of the train.

Police armed with high-powered rifles took up positions overlooking the train, and ordered reporters to clear the station. Policemen with rifles pointed at the train replaced cameramen at the station's windows. Police said they thought the man was armed only with a .45-caliber pistol, but the man later told police, "I got a machine gun and could kill people."

Police told the man they believed him.

Ms. White was brought in to monitor the health of the two children inside the railroad car. After hearing police tape recordings of events inside the railroad car, she said she heard what sounded like a baby less than 9 months old crying.

"I could hear the little girl crying for her mother, asking her mother to wake up," said Ms. White.

Police said they are afraid the girl's mother may have been harmed, because they have not heard her moving around in the car since Friday afternoon.

Police appealed to the man to think of his children, and not keep them cooped up inside the cabin.

"Whatever happens, you are responsible as a parent," said Oliva through a bullhorn. "How long do you think you can keep this up?"

Oliva warned that infant might be getting dehydrated.

Heineman said there is water in the railroad car, and that police believe the man brought food on the trip.

Inside, about 300 people, mostly teen-agers, were attending the Shimat Torah, a celebration of the yearly cycle of the reading of the Torah, the Jewish holy scriptures. They were also witnessing a bar mitzvah, the Jewish celebration of a boy's 13th birthday and religious maturity.

When the celebrants emerged, the terrorists hurled four hand grenades and fired at least 30 shots from submachine guns to cover their escape, police said. The grenades bounced off the steps and exploded in the street.

Police said the wounded were all hit by grenade fragments. At least four people were hospitalized in serious condition.

"I was leaving with the others when it happened," said Dr. Marco Zarzati. "We took refuge inside. The explosions and shooting lasted at least two minutes. When it was quiet, I went outside. The sight was terrible."

Antoninesca Giovanoni, a porter at an apartment building across from the synagogue, said she opened her door and saw "two women, one man and a months-old baby bleeding ...screaming for help.

"They stayed here for about 10 minutes before an ambulance came," she said, showing her blood-stained apartment.

The terrorists apparently fled on foot and then escaped in a red Volkswagen and a white Austin, police said.

The secret of the magic sign.

In 1946, when we first opened Overton's, the grocery business operated like a lot of others. Come Monday morning, we'd open for the week's business. And every day, right on through Saturday evening each week, we'd work along helping customers, weighing produce and cutting meat.

But since that time, supermarket hours have become more complex. Big chains started extending their hours. Some went to 24 hour days. And then they decided to open Sunday, too. But, it seemed to us that the longer these markets stayed open, the less important being cheerful and helpful became.

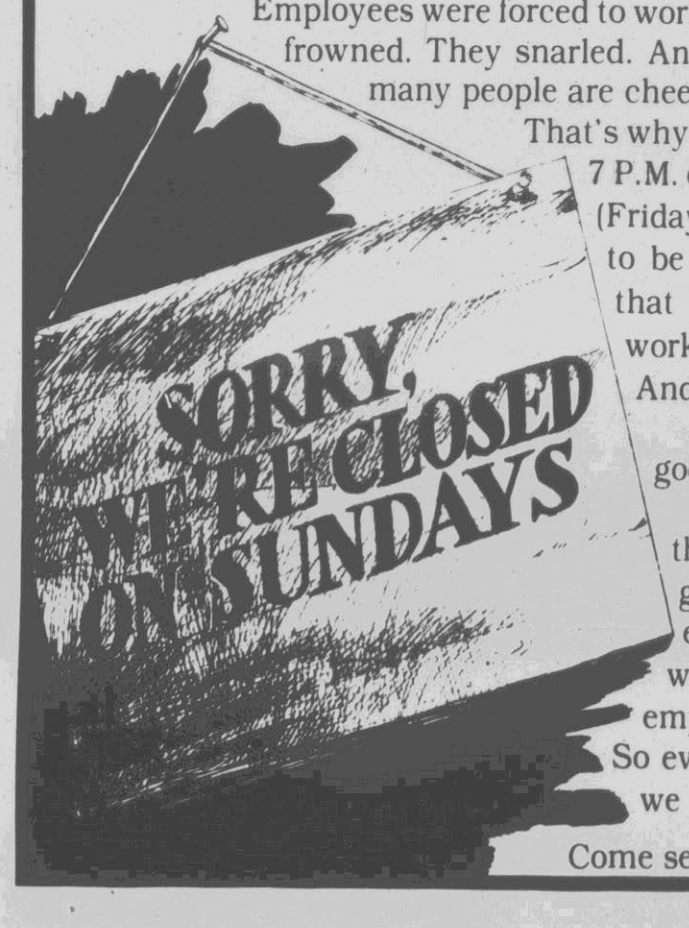
Employees were forced to work all night. Keep odd hours. They frowned. They snarled. And who can blame them? Not very many people are cheerful at 4 A.M. on Sunday morning.

That's why we still open at 8 A.M. and close at 7 P.M. every day, Monday through Saturday. (Friday's till 8.) We expect our employees to be cheerful and helpful every hour that we're open. So, we don't ask them to work long days and odd hours.

And guess what? It pays off.

Because Overton's real secret is good service.

Now some people might not agree that being closed on Sundays means good service. But we know our employees enjoy Sunday off. And we believe that being good to our employees means better service to you. So every Saturday evening at Overton's we hang out the magic sign.



Come see us.

Extortionist Is Arrested

CHICAGO (AP) — A 20-year-old man was charged with extortion Saturday after he allegedly threatened to poison hospital patients with cyanide-laced Extra-Strength Tylenol unless he was paid $8,000, the FBI said.

FBI spokesman Anthony DeLorenzo said there is "no credible evidence" to link Howard with the poisoning deaths of seven people in Chicago. DeLorenzo said the man, Jerome Howard of Chicago, claimed in an extortion letter that he was responsible for the seven deaths, each of whom died after taking an Extra-Strength Tylenol capsule loaded with cyanide.

DeLorenzo said Howard left the letter at Gottlieb Memorial Hospital in Melrose Park, a western suburb of Chicago, on Wednesday, a week after the first poisoning occurred. In the letter, he threatened to poison patients at the hospital with cyanide-laced Extra-Strength Tylenol unless his demand for $8,000 was met, DeLorenzo said.

Water Fungus May Help In Curbing Mosquitoes

By JONATHAN W. OATIS
Associated Press Writer

The mosquito-killing potential of a water fungus was accidentally uncovered by Clemson University researchers now probing the mold as a new weapon in the battle against the disease-bearing insect.

A graduate student at Clemson looking at another fungus as a possible mosquito control agent in 1975 found the young insects, or larvae, infected with the killer fungus with the tongue-twisting name leptolegnia.

Since then, leptolegnia has turned out to be an effective mosquito killer in the laboratory, says Thomas McInnis Jr., who heads the Clemson effort.

The fungus has proved deadly to eight species of mosquitoes, including two that carry encephalitis, yellow fever and dengue fever, says McInnis, an associate professor of botany.

A lot of work remains to be done on leptolegnia, which McInnis says is 15 to 20 years away from commercial application, providing it pans out.

But the recent discovery that leptolegnia seems to target mosquitoes exclusively, ignoring other insects, is among several features researchers find encouraging.

McInnis estimates that another fungus, lagenidium giganteum, is four to five years away from wide-scale use in the mosquito war.

Leptolegnia acts as a mosquito parasite. Its spores invade the aquatic larva from outside or, after being eaten by the larva, the inside. Hyphae, threadlike growths from the spores, burst from the insect, making the cylindrical animal look like a brush. In the lab, infection can occur in just one day.

McInnis says results so far are promising that the fungus will prove safe and economical.

Fungi are just one type of biological control agent under examination. In addition to about 15 to 20 types of fungi being looked at, bacteria, viruses, nematodes and fish are also being considered, McInnis says. Several bacterial mosquito killers are already on the market.

Research into natural ways to control mosquitoes began in earnest within the last two decades, after the dangers of chemical pesticides became apparent, McInnis says.

Biological pesticides have the advantage of being more target specific than their chemical counterparts.

"Chemical pesticides generally do not discriminate between a pest and a harmless insect," says McInnis, while biological agents are "fairly innocuous as far as the other plants and animals in the environment."

The researcher says leptolegnia acts three times faster in the lab than lagenidium and does better in culture. In addition, lagenedium acts on other insects, while so far leptolegnia appears to affect only mosquitos.

Leslie Schimmel, a graduate student working for McInnis, gave leptolegnia a shot at 16 families of insect and water fleas, including dragonflies, aquatic beetles, black flies and midges. She says the fungus had no effect in the lab on any of them.

More than 70,000 persons died and 58,000 were injured in 1970 when an earthquake struck Peru.

Poor Revenue Outlook Seen By The Speaker

State House Speaker Liston Ramsey says at this point it doesn't look good.

In conversations at the North Tar River Fellowship Club event held at the Blount Ranch last week, he said that no one knows what will happen to the economy but the budget for the 1983-85 biennium has to be based on the present unhappy outlook.

How about the raises that state workers and teachers are clamoring for?

Ramsey says, "We're going to do what is fair." However, he noted that it is not fair to put a tax increase on the man who is working only three days per week in the factory.

He did indicate that, despite the tight times, there would likely be some capital improvements included in the budget. Traditionally, capital improvements have run about 3 percent of the total budget and some improvement projects are essential to running the government. Unlike personnel costs, capital improvements are a one-time cost, which is not automatically built into future budgets.

Ramsey is also a member of the Advisory Budget Commission which prepares the budget recommendations.

His comments here simply emphasize the feeling that money will be tight in the coming biennium. There will be great pressure for pay increases, and certainly teachers can point to their relatively low salary standings in relation to other states.

The outlook, though, is that the budget-makers will give priority to preserving the jobs of those currently on the state payroll and providing for other essential needs. Pay raises will likely depend on as yet unseen evidence of improvement in the national and North Carolina economy.

President Reagan Merely Invoked Free Speech Right

President Reagan, angered by a congressional candidate's heckling at a gathering of GOP hopefuls in the White House last week, did what president have often wanted to do — he told the man to "shut up."

Interestingly, the candidate from California, Gary Richard Arnold, is philosophically to the right of the Republican party and he was questioning the president about abandonment of so-called conservative causes.

News accounts said the president first attempted to answer the candidate's charges but, after several interruptions, finally told the man to shut up.

Some argued that candidate Arnold only exercised his right to free speech. Perhaps so, and it is a right we will always defend.

Alvin Taylor — Sunday Morning Notes

Fire Prevention Week has just passed with all the demonstrations and appropriate warnings about home and business fires.

Everyone knows how devastating a home fire can be but few of us are really prepared for such a disaster.

He and his family were at home on King George Road at 6:30 on Oct. 18 when a pan caught fire. The flames spread through the vent and into the attic where it was burning beyond control.

Branch says he couldn't get the fire out because he didn't have a fire extinguisher. He ran next door and got one. When he directed it towards the flames he found the extingusher was dead. It took the Eastern Pines Fire Department about an hour to put the fire out, and with a few moments more delay, it could have burned the dwelling to the ground.

Based on his experience, Branch recommends that everyone have a reliable fire extinguisher. "I promise you I'll never be without one," Branch said.

He also says having a smoke detector is of utmost importance. His family was awake at the time of the fire, and the smoke alarm went off. But he believes they could have perished if the fire had broken out while they were asleep and there had been no smoke alarm.

Particularly people in older homes should consider smoke alarms and obtain fire extinguishers. "People who need it most perhaps feel they don't have the money," Branch said, but he indicated it is an investment everyone should make.

An inventory of household goods is indispensible in the event of fire, particularly including the contents of the attic, which most might forget. Branch had his household contents insured but can't recall everything that was in the attic.

Then there is inconvenience ... clothing and personal items were not available. The Branch family spent several days in the home of an associate, Bill Clark, and then went to the Holiday Inn. There was another move to a suite at the motel. They will next move to a unit at Quail Ridge Condomidiums and finally back to their home, once reconstruction is completed.

Their 3-year-old daughter, Dare, is taken daily to the Clark home to maintain the home environment.

The inconvenience is indescribable, Branch says ... looking after details following the fire, rebuilding the house and making arrangement for the children. "You're worn out by the end of the day," he said.

Of course, everyone agrees the way to avoid all the trauma and perhaps danger is to avoid the fire, and that is what Fire Prevention Week was all about.

Walter Mears — Fodder

WASHINGTON (AP) — Winning isn't everything, and while it usually beats losing, President Reagan may get more political mileage out of his last setback in Congress than he could have gained in victory.

What he didn't get was a balanced budget amendment to the Constitution. What he got was an issue, and one he intends to ride hard in the final month of the congressional election campaign.

Had it come out the other way, his speechwriters would have had to overhaul the script. Now, with minor editing changes, the president can continue to point in wrath to the fact that House Democrats defeated the measure.

The proposed constitutional amendment would not have balanced the budget, nor could it have taken effect during Reagan's current term in the White House. The budget year just ended will show a deficit of about $110 billion, and next year's will be substantially higher. The president has become exceedingly cautious about forecasting a break-even budget; he said only that he "would be willing to have a go" at balancing the 1986 budget.

The administration is braced for a possible increase in the unemployment rate that could push the index past 10 percent for the first time since the waning days of the Depression.

In those circumstances, the balanced budget vote is a made-to-order Republican issue. "This vote makes clear who supports a balanced budget and who does not," said Reagan. "Voters across America should count heads and take names. In November, we must elect representatives who support the amendment."

It's all symbolism; none of it will make any difference in the budget years immediately ahead.

But it may make a difference in the campaign. "Tragically and for purely partisan reasons, these same House Democrats who didn't want the vote have again played politics with the will of the people," Reagan glowered after the amendment was turned down last Friday. "... Today I share the deep, burning anger, I think, of millions of Americans."

There's plenty of political motivation to go around, on both sides. Reagan had been complaining regularly that Democrats in the House bottled up the amendment and wouldn't permit a vote because they feared it would pass. "We need and deserve a vote on this fundamental reform," he said before there was one. "The time to act is now."

With the administration pressing the issue, supporters of the amendment got enough signatures to force action on the House floor. Since Congress was about to recess for the campaign, it wouldn't have come until after the Nov. 2 balloting, although there was gossip that the White House might call the House and Senate back to Washington to force the issue shortly before the election.

So House Democratic leaders decided to force it themselves, rushing the measure to a vote on a day's notice. Reagan didn't have time for the kind of lobbying he's brought to bear on other economic issues, and the outcome wasn't even close.

The amendment got a majority, 236 to 187, but fell 46 votes short of the two-thirds margin it takes to approve a constitutional amendment for submission to the states. Twenty Republicans were among the opponents. The GOP Senate had approved the amendment earlier in the session.

The measure will be back, perhaps as early as the lame-duck session of Congress that convenes next month. In the meantime, Reagan will make the most of it in the campaign for Republican congressional candidates.

Paul T. O'Connor — Where Are The Gubernatorial Candidates?

RALEIGH — With only about a year to go before the gubernatorial campaign starts in earnest, there's hardly a Democratic candidate anyone can call a hot prospect. A lot of names are getting thrown around but party officials say no one is really catching the imagination of the party faithful.

Little surprise. Every well-known contender carries some unwanted baggage with him. Attorney General Rufus Edmisten is heard from the most but he has an image as a lightweight. It's all that "singing" he does at barbecues and the pomposity he brings to practically every public statement he makes.

That's better than what people are saying about Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green who accepted a $4,000 cash gift from a bid-rigger and then explained to the public that the gent was just being generous to poor old Jimmy. Possible candidate John Ingram, the insurance commissioner who spends a lot of time in Myrtle Beach, S.C., is considered a loon by many Democrats. They think "Fighting For You" John — who appears to fire deputy commissioners as frequently as he rejects car insurance rate hikes and whose jack-o-lantern smile and glassy eyes are permanently frozen to his face — is just too "different" for the Governor's Mansion.

There are other possibilities. Word is that Commerce Secretary Lauch Faircloth will run. And "Two-Year" Tom Gilmore of Greensboro persists in the dream. Seventh District Rep. Charlie Rose also gets mention. And Charlotte Mayor Eddie Knox is trying to disprove the notion that a Queen City mayor can't become chief executive.

In their quest to find a well-known and well-respected candidate, Democrats turned to UNC President Bill Friday — who has said "no" so far.

The newest name getting thrown about is House Speaker Liston B. Ramsey. "Wouldn't the speaker make a good governor!", a Ramsey follower says to a reporter over breakfast. But the speaker has always said he has no ambitions beyond his present job. His lieutenants say that's why he'll be such a good speaker for the next umpteen sessions — his personal ambition won't get in the way of running the House.

Ramsey refuses to rule out the possibility. That in itself is a change of position from just a year ago. "I've had a number of people come and ask me and, of course I'm human; when someone mentions that to you, you think about it; but I don't see any draft movement," he said.

One day Pearce showed the pile of junk to Gov. Jim Hunt who was astounded. He'd been wondering where his UFO magazine was.

It seems the governor believes there's life in the stars. "It stands to reason that in that great universe there might be a form of life far advanced beyond ours," he says.

Hunt said his wife and daughter think they saw a flying saucer hovering over the family farm in Rock Ridge several years ago.

Overheard in a Raleigh restaurant: a woman ordering a rare steak, "I want that steak very rare", she said. To which the waitress asked, "How rare?".

"So I could put some Unguentine on it and send it back to grazing in the pasture."

Rowland Evans and Robert Novak — Report Says Gemayal Was 'Coerced'

WASHINGTON — Shortly before his assassination, Lebanon's President-elect Bashir Gemayal was "coerced" by armed Israeli troops into boarding a helicopter to be flown south just across the border for a final confrontation on Israel's unsatisfied demand that he sign a peace treaty.

That was not the first journey by Israel's man-in-Beirut to talk face-to-face with Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Defense Minister Ariel Sharon. Their alliance had been solid.

Gemayal's decision to thwart Begin was thus a seminal turnaround in which the U.S. played a major role. For the first time since the 1975 civil war began in Lebanon, Gemayal's refusal to play Begin's Quisling ended Israel's dominance over Lebanon's bloody politics and enthroned the U.S.

The only concession that Begin could extract from Bashir Gemayal was half-baked: At an appropriate time following his swearing-in as preeident, he told Begin, he would agree to end the state of beligerency between the two countries.

Gemayal's late-night flying visit to Prime Minister Begin on Sept. 10, four days before his assassination, has been reported (but never confirmed by either the Israeli or Lebanese governments). Not known until completion last week of a confidential Reagan administration intelligence study are these new facts: that the Israelis "coerced" the Lebanese president-elect ("kidnapped" him, one Middle East insider told us) to get him into an Israeli helicopter for the short trip south — and browbeat him when he got there; and that Begin knew that if the U.S. could maneuver itself into the role of chief mediator between Lebanon, Syria and Israel, Begin's dream of an Israeli-made peace treaty with Beirut would fade away.

For Begin, a peace treaty on Israel's terms with its northern Arab neighbor was the one certain way of justifying Israel's casualties, military and diplomatic.

James J. Kilpatrick — American Inventiveness Is Thriving

CHICAGO — For the past year, since Congress took its first half-step on Mr. Reagan's road to recovery, the media vultures who feed on bad news have been croaking about the weaknesses in our economy — the bankruptcies, the business failures, the high rate of unemployment, the sad plight of automobiles, housing and steel.

Fair enough. There's no disputing the bad news. But without putting on the Pollyanna act, let me sketch another side of the picture. Consider, if you please, the revolutionary changes that are taking place in the American business office. Just for a minute or two, let us consider our strengths.

I flew out to Chicago a couple of days ago to deliver Old No. 1 before a luncheon of the National Office Products Association. I hung around to marvel at what is going on. Has American inventiveness gone to the bowwows? Is our marketplace down with a wasting disease? Don't you believe it. At Chicago's vast McCormick Place, the joint is jumping.

These days it is hard to recall the business offices that most of us grew up with. We had three mechanical contraptions — the two-piece telephone, the manual typewriter and the hand-cranked adding machine. We posted our books by hand in a standard Boorum . Pease ledger, bound in black with trim in red and gold. Those were the armband and eyeshade days, and they weren't so very long ago.

I still type my own stuff on a rimfire Underwood, but I am among the last of the dinosaur breed. The International Data Corp. recently offered some projections on the new world ahead. There are now an estimated 52 million white-collar workers. By 1986 their numbers will have increased to 55 million, and their individual productivity will have soared. Today only one out of five office workers has a keyboard; four years hence, only one in five will not have a keyboard.

The technology of word processing, data storage and data retrieval changes at bewildering speed. New generations of computer software tread upon one another's feet. When I left daily newpapering in 1966, wonderful new computers were just revolutionizing our composing rooms. The machines were as big as hall closets. Today those computers are regarded with the nostalgic affection reserved for steam locomotives and the DC-3. A little chip now does it all.

The International Data Corp. projects sales for the industry over the next four years of $180 billion in products that, for the most part, did not even exist 10 years ago. Five thousand vendors are competing in a market of 12,000 products. The electronic typewriter — as distinguished from the merely electric typewriter — is a product so hot that a sales growth of 28 percent per year is foreseen. Personal computers will soon be as commonplace as dishwashing machines.

To the non-mechanical person — meaning me — the exhibits are flabbergasting. But even the observer who has trouble changing a light bulb can comprehend that we are witnessing changes not in degree, but in kind. This is not true of other industries. We still build houses the old way, one 2-by-4 at a time. The internal combustion engine is at bottom the same old engine.

But in the office — as in medicine, printing and communication — the changes are profound. Although Japanese and European manufacturers are coming on strong, this is still primarily an American revolution. For the aggressive competitor, the marketing challenges are exciting, and the potential profits promise bonanzas to the winners.

The human problems are as formidable as the electronic innovations are amazing. Millions of clerical workers must be trained to use these new machines. For middle-aged workers — and for middle-aged teachers of secretarial and office skills — some traumatic times lie ahead. The high school senior who has not mastered at least the basics of computer language will enter the job market already behind in the race.

We spend too much time worrying over our weaknesses. These too will pass. For a change, let us hear a few whistles of admiration for the vitality so evident at McCormick Place this week. The Republic will yet survive.

Saturday, Oct. 16, is World Food Day. WFD is sponsored by the Food and Agricultural Organization of the United Nations. The day is proclaimed worldwide and is set aside for the purpose of educating people about the enormous problem of hunger and starvation on our planet.

According to U.N. statistics, 50,000 people die every day from "dramatic starvation." Author Richard Barnet calls hunger the hidden holocaust of our time.

Hunger can be prevented — no one need starve in our world of plenty. But this can only be done if we join together and make the eradication of hunger a world priority.

Presently world military spending comes to about $1 million per minute. Clearly, military spending is our priority. I believe that the connections betweeen starvation and preparation for war are obvious. One begets the other.

On WFD, make a personal effort to identify some of the things that you can do to help alleviate this hunger holocaust. If you're a student at ECU, get involved in our WFD activities this Tuesday. For more information, call 752-4216 or 355-6855.

To the editor:

After reading your column on Tuesday, Oct. 5, concerning Rep. Ike Andrews, D-N.C., I was under the impression that driving under the influence of alcohol in North Carolina was a little more serious than a simple apology in the paper.

Several statements made in the article do not exactly coincide with the way most people feel about the subject. Rep. Andrews states that he did not pull over to the side of the road because he thought the blue light behind him was intended for someone else. Most people driving on the highways today will pull over for a blue light or an emergency vehicle to yield right of way. How does Rep. Andrews feel about this? He also states he does not think he was under the influence of alcohol when arrested. I assumed this was to be determined by the arresting officer.

My only reason for voicing my opinion of this is along with the $200 bond would this same treatment have been given to the (average) citizen of North Carolina on a Saturday night.

Bearish Market Has Experts Guessing

Was it lower interest rates, institutional buying panic, the possibility that Reaganomics will work — or be changed after the coming elections, or that foreign money will continue to pour into the United States?

Who knows what role these possibilities play, any more than you can say for sure the pessimistic bears aren't correct? Bears still roam the field, and don't seemed inclined to crawl into hibernation.

"The market's behavior of the past two weeks has provided fresh evidence that we are witnessing the early phase of the 1982 crash," claims the Holt Investment Advisory in its issue of Oct. 1. "The contrived August bubble is about to burst," it says. "Full-scale crash in the months ahead."

This is always the way it is when the market is making a major move. It doesn't announce its intentions, as lingering memories of the great crash of 1929 can attest. It is only in review that the patterns become a bit clearer.

Reviews, however, aren't appreciated in an atmosphere that puts a premium on previews. Money is made from guessing the future rather than analyzing the past. And so, while history may be worth more than the glancing review that Wall Street gives it, the overhwelming interest is on what might happen.

Is The CIA Involved On Campus?

WASHINGTON — In the movie "Raiders of the Lost Ark," archaeologist Indiana Jones temporarily gives up the monastic life of a college professor to run a small errand for the U.S. government. At the request of American intelligence officers, he agrees to track down the "covenant of the ark"' lest it fall into Nazi hands.

Regardless of one's belief in religious artifacts, the story is pure fiction, right? Hardly. Even today, the CIA maintains secret operations on many American campuses, contracting professors to steer foreign students toward agency employment and to perform covert research and technical duties.

Unfortunately, like the lost ark, the full story of CIA involvement on campus may be eternally destined to government secrecy. A U.S. court of appeals here ruled last week that the CIA had neither to confirm nor deny such campus activities.

The court's decision was a personal defeat for 1975 UCLA graduate Nathan Gardels, who had spent the last seven years gathering 600 government documents in the hope of outlining CIA activity at his school and others in the University of California system. Now an economics adviser to California Gov. Jerry Brown, Gardels believes secret recruiting and research by professors for the CIA makes a mockery of the ideals of a modern, open university.

"I never really cared if a professor worked with the CIA," admitted Gardels last week. "I just wanted the information to be known to university officials."

The court, however, took another view. "To admit that the CIA had such contacts at (UCLA) would allow foreign intelligence agencies to try to zero in and identify specifically what was the nature of those relationships, or with whom," the court declared.

Yet, though it sidestepped the details, the court acknowledged that the CIA uses professors and students as "intelligence sources" and for recruiting and research purposes. On one hand' of course, little imagination is required to surmise that the agency relies on well-traveled and well-read academics for analyses of, for example, leftist politics in Europe, Africa or Latin America. On the other, the depth of CIA infiltration can boggle the mind: "Special relationships" have led the agency to systematically harass foreign student dissidents at some schools and subcontract the brainpower of entire departments at others.

In 1976 the Senate Intelligence Committee estimated that the agency wae operating on more than 100 campuses; three times as many professors were in some way connected. The Campaign for Political Rights, a Washington-based coalition which works to end covert operations at home and abroad, estimates that the numbers may be as high today.

To be sure, last week's ruling will freeze the flow of new information about campus operations. In light of the administration's new guidelines favoring domestic spying, leaks about CIA campus links could easily be construed as a criminal breach of national security.

Yet, the court has also endorsed a program which runs counter to the goals of American colleges and universities. Central to the notion of "the academy" are the long-standing principles of intellectual honesty, open exchange of ideas and freedom from persecution for political beliefs. While these certainly vary from school to school, they serve as the ideal toward which all good universities strive; professors who secretly moonlight for the government's spy shops not only corrupt these principles, but poison the aspirations of students and colleagues.

Harvard University, which with 10 other schools prohibits professors from engaging in covert activities, states in its policy: "It is inappropriate for members of the academic community to be acting secretly on behalf of the government in his (sic) relationship with other members of the academic community."

Were it on the up-and-up, professorial relationships with American intelligence agencies might not differ much from the resarch and recruiting service performed regularly for corporations, think tanks and even other government agencies (despite the fact a House subcommittee has charged the intelligence agencies with having little respect for intellectual honesty, and preferring to manipulate evidence to their own designs).

Yet we wonder how those academics who double as operatives can justify their contributions to an agency which, from time to time, has been found to overthrow governments, assassinate public figures and employ questionable methods for equally questionable ends. It seems particularly spurious for a college professor to rationalize services for the CIA if only because the dirty work would be executed by someone else.

Beer Or Not, He Got His Medal

Before he was ordered to Washington on Sept. 5, 1945, R. Geddie Herring was not certain what the Navy had in store for him. The young lieutenant was fearful at times that he faced court martial. Instead, Navy Secretary James Forrestal presented him the Congressional Medal of Honor.

"It was a surprise to me," the Roseboro resident said later.

Herring recalls that as he lay in a Quantico, Va., hospital a few weeks earlier, ill from jaundice and recuperating from severe shrapnel wounds, he frequently thought how lucky he was to have escaped death in a Feb. 17, 1945, battle off Iwo Jima. Twenty-one members of his 57-man crew were killed and 15 others seriously wounded.

The 24-year-old Navy officer also wondered whether he would face charges for having too many cases os beer aboard his ship, the LCIG 449, an infantry landing craft that had been converted into an attack vessel with the installation of 12 rocket launchers.

"We had 130 cases of beer in the forward hold when the ship was hit," Herring recalled in an interview years later. "We were supposed to have only one case per man, but we had accidentally drawn a double ration," he added with a chuckle.

Herring, now 61, still bears scars of the fierce fighting which ensued when his ship and 12 others like it sought to provide covering fire for underwater demolition teams which were preparing the way for the U.S. assault on Iwo Jima, one of the bloodiest battles of World War II.

"Twelve of the 13 ships got clobbered," Herring recalled in a recent telephone interview. "Although none were sunk, Japanese shells tore up their top sides." Six other skippers recieved the Navy Cross for their valor in the fighting, but Herring was awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor, the nation's top award for heroism.

The citation said Herring "directed shattering barrages of 40-mm and 20-mm gunfire against hostile beaches until struck down by the enemy's savage counterfire which blasted the 449's heavy guns and whipped her decks into sheets of flame.

"Regaining consciousness despite profuse bleeding, he was again critically wounded when a Japanese morter crashed the conning station, instantly killing or wounding most of the officers and leaving the ship without navigation control. Upon recovering the second time, Lieutenant Herring resolutely climbed down to the pilot house and, fighting against his rapidly waning strength, took over the helm, established communication with the engine room and carried on valiantly until relief could be obtained ...," the citation read.

The shrapnel left Herring's right foot broken and his left shoulder shattered. While in Saipan Herring was scheduled three times to undergo surgery for amputation of his left arm, but each time it was delayed. With the aid of penicillian, doctors were able to save the arm, but the muscle was torn so badly it affected the use of his left arm and hand.

Herring was given a hero's reception when he returned to Roseboro in 1946. He was greeted by a parade with three bands, a picnic at his church and a dance that night, The following year, he was elected mayor of the southeastern North Carolina town. Since then he has served 10 years on the Sampsom County Board of Education, including two years as chairman.

While he was in the hospital at Quantico, Herring met a dark-haired nurse, Virginia Lee Higgs of Parkersburg, W.Va., who was in charge of physio-therapy at the hospital. They were married on March 15, 1947, and have three children, two boys and a girl.

Herring, who retired recently as a partner and president of Central Farms, Inc., a producer of fertile chicks, said the Medal of Honor has had little effect "on me individually, but it has given me an opportunity to meet many people, particularly presidents, that I wouldn't have met." He explained that the Medal of Honor winners are invited to all presidential inaugurations, where they get to meet ingoing and outgoing presidents.

At Roseboro, few people remember that one of its own holds the nation's highest decoration for valor. Herring keeps the medal in a dresser drawer at home and takes it out only when he is getting ready to attend a presidential inauguration or one of the biennial conventions of Medal of Honor winners. Last year 201 of the 257 surviving winners of the medal attended the convention in Honolulu, In previous years, Herring has journeyed to New York City, Chicago, Washington, Dallas, Seattle, Tulsa and Orlando for reunions of the military men who ranged in rank from private to general.

While others have forgotten, Herring still recalls vividly the details of that hectic day off Iwo Jima 37 years ago when those little ships "got clobbered" while leading the way for the amphibious assault on that Japanese bastion. While he remembers, Herring hopes the Navy has forgotten about those 130 cases of beer stored illegally in the hold of the 449.

Rum And Coke, And A Campaign

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — The Democratic Party is sticking by him, but the re-election bid of Rep. Ike Andrews, D-N.C., has been seriously — and perhaps fatally — damaged by his arrest and guilty plea for driving under the influence.

When Andrews should have been gearing up to counter a strong challenge from Republican William Cobey, he was instead confessing he drank rum and Coke while driving home for the congressional election recess.

"It was wrong. I knew it was wrong when I did it: There is no excuse for it," he said at a news conference two days after his arrest Oct. 2.

Raleigh police stopped Andrews' car following a chase of several miles and charged him with driving under the influence, speeding and other traffic violations.

He refused to take a breathalyzer test but later went to a Raleigh hospital for a blood test. Although he said he was not drunk at the time, the test showed a blood alcohol level of .19 percent. State law states a level of .10 percent or higher is evidence a person is intoxicated.

The test prompted Andrews to go ahead and plead guilty to the driving charge and two other offenses and enter no contest pleas to two more. He was convicted on all five counts, placed on two years probation and fined $500. A condition of his probation will prevent him from drinking during that period.

Following his unscheduled court appearance, Andrews said he was getting the matter behind him so he could move ahead with his campaign, but he hoped the incident would serve as an example to others.

"This affords me a great chance to offer myself as an example and I will," he said. "This is not the thing to do."

The plea came days after Andrews met with Democratic Party officials from the 4th Congressional District to discuss the implications of his arrest, amid indications some people wanted him to resign.

Party officials announced Andrews would remain in the race and they were standing with him.

"The decision (on whether to resign) was Ike's, and that's the way it was laid out from the very beginning," said state Sen. Russell Walker, D-Randolph, the state Democratic Party chairman.

"The fact of the matter is once everything was said, he got together with his campaign people and came back and said he was staying," said Walker, who acklowledged he was leaning toward resignation.

"We felt Andrews had the best chance," said Martha Speed of Louisburg, the 4th District party chairman. Mrs. Speed said she is planning a rally for Andrews and other Democratic candidates in Franklin County.

If Andrews had resigned, his replacement would have encountered serious problems putting together a campaign with less than a month left before the election. There was also some question whether there was time to prepare new election ballots.

Despite the party support, Andrews is limping into the campaign when he needs to be running full speed against Cobey's well-financed campaign.

With Andrews' arrest occurring just a month before the election, there is little need for the GOP to dwell on the incident.

George Gallup

Poll

PRINCETON, N.J. — For the first time in the 47-year history of the Gallup Poll, Republican Party preference at the congressional level is as high in the South as outside the South.

The latest nationwide Gallup survey on congressional preferences shows the GOP winning 44 percent of the popular vote in the 13-state Southern region to 56 percent for the Democratic Party. This is the same division as found outside the South.

This development does not mean that proportionately as many Republicans and Democrats will be elected in and outside the South but it does point to a dramatic change in the nation's political geography.

The current survey figures for the South — which match the actual division of the vote in the 1980 congressional elections there — represent the culmination of a 50-year trend which has shown steady gains in the South in the popular vote for Republican congressional candidates. During this period GOP strength has been as low as 18.5 percent, in the 1940 elections.

Historically, the GOP has been confronted with the virtually impossible task of winning enough seats outside the South to offset the Democrats' advantage there. This has meant that the GOP has had to win two-thirds, or about 200 of the approximately 300 seats outside the South, to win a majority of the total seats in the house of Representatives, or 218 out of 435. The Democratic Party, on the other hand has had to win only about 100 out of the 300 seats outside the South to have a working majority in the House.

Even in today's more evenly balanced political climate, if Southern Republicans were able to retain the 43 House seats they now hold, the GOP would have to capture well over half the seats outside the South to win a simple majority in the House in November's election.

Some political observers view the trend toward the GOP in the South as a logical development since Southern Democrats, they note, tend to be more closely aligned with Republicans than with Northern Democrats. They view the South, in one sense, as "natural turf" for Republican candidates in terms of its basic political philosophy.

As the following table indicates, Southerners describe themselves as more to the "right of center" in their political philosophy than do voters outside the South:

POLITICAL PHILOSOPHY

	National	South	Non-South
Right of center	34%	40%	31%
Center	41	36	43
Left of center	15	11	17
No opinion	10	13	9
TOTALS	100	100	100

The findings are based on personal interviews with 1,580 adults conducted March 12-15. For results based on a sample of this size, an error margin of plus or minus three percentage points is appropriate.

Gravely Establishes 20 ECU Scholarships

ECU News Bureau

The Gravely Foundation of Rocky Mount is establishing through the East Carolina University Foundation a program to provide 20 new academic scholarships a year and a student loan fund at ECU, it was announced Saturday.

Dr. F. Douglas Moore, acting vice chancellor for institutional advancement and planning, reported to the ECU Foundation board of directors that the Gravely scholarships and loan fund will amount to approximately $15,000 a year for four years.

Two scholarships of $1,000 each will be awarded annually to entering freshmen in the top 1 percent academically of the incoming class.

Six scholarships for full tuition and fees each are to be distributed in the college of arts and sciences with one each in the departments of English, physical education, recreation and safety, math, political science, science education and sociology; two to the school of art, two to the school of allied health and social professions, one each for special education and elementary education in the school of education, two to the school of music, two to the school of nursing and one each to the schools of home economics and technology.

Foundation president Max R. Joyner expressed appreciation to the Gravely Foundation and made a presentation to Mrs. W.B. Lea of Rocky Mount and other principals of the Gravely Foundation. It was established by founders of the China American Tobacco Co., a worldwide leaf exporting firm headquartered in Rocky Mount.

Branch Banking and Trust Co. of Wilson was given special recognition in appreciation of a recent $250,000 gift by BB&T to the Center for Management Development in the ECU School of Business.

ECU Chancellor John M. Howell, chairman of the ECU Foundation Board, stressed the "continuing importance of private sector funding in enhancing the overall quality of the university."

In addition to providing a broad base of educational opportunity through scholarships, increased private sector funding makes possible more faculty research and professional advancement, Howell said.

Dr. Moore, the foundation secretary, reported assets of the foundation increased by more than 38 percent during the past 12 months. Gifts of cash and pladges and gifts-in-kind to the ECU Foundation totaled more than $880,000 last year.

Gifts-in-kind included "everything from real property, pianos and computers to half-interest in mineral rights of a section of land in Cimarron County, Okla., value unknown," Moore said.

He said final arrangements are being made through the foundation for funding and commitments to establish an additional seven endowed scholarships. Also, he reported that the university expects to realize 20 percent of the earnings of a $386,000 trust fund established by an estate.

The foundation board honored John F. Minges of Greenville for his service as president of the foundation during a two-year term which ended this year. Under Minges' leadership, assets and resources of the ECU Fondation more than doubled, Moore said. Minges was presented a plaque in recognition of service.

Rags To Riches — And Back

MARKLEEVILLE, Calif. (UPI) — Federal officials say the rags-to-riches story of tiny, underpopulated Alpine County in the Sierra Nevada turns out to be a Census Bureau yarn.

"I have seen them make mistakes before but I have never seen a mistake of this nature," said Bill Schooling, director of the California Census Data Center.

A check of the figures showed a mistake had boosted the county of about 1,100 residents and 20 percent unemployment to the third wealthiest in the nation, behind Bristol Bay, Alaska, and Falls Church, Va.

In reviewing the statistics, federal census officials in Maryland said Alpine County's average income was $7,669, instead of the $12,861 reported earlier by the agency.

Warren Group Staging March

By MELANIE SILL
United Press International

Despite assurances from Gov. James B. Hunt Jr. that he will work to ensure the safety of a PCB landfill in Warren County, landfill opponents vowed Saturday to keep fighting the dump and mounted a 55-mile protest march to Raleigh.

The State Highway Patrol said about 50 people marching south on the shoulder of U.S. 401 had reached Louisburg by Saturday afternoon. The marchers, some of whom left Afton Friday afternoon, planned to rally in the capital Monday afternoon or Tuesday.

Ken Ferruccio, leader of Warren County Citizens Concerned about PCB, said he and others who met with Hunt in Raleigh Friday joined the march Saturday morning at the Franklin County line.

Ferruccio said he and other PCB opponents who talked with Hunt went back to Afton Friday night to meet with county residents and citizens group members.

"Their decision was the dump must go, and the decision was that we would march today," Ferruccio said.

But the marchers apparently did not have the unanimous backing of Warren County residents who have participated in almost daily protests since the state started trucking contaminated soil to the landfill Sept. 15.

Joyce Lubbers, one of about 10 people who met with Hunt Friday, said she was pleased by Hunt's response and his promise to work for the safety of Warren County residents. She said she was angered by the marchers' vow to keep fighting to get the landfill moved out of Warren County.

"I think that we got just about all we could get, and clear-thinking individuals feel that," said Mrs. Lubbers, a member of a steering committee that has coordinated opposition to the landfill. "I didn't know anything about this march until a few minutes ago, and I'm very disturbed about it."

Gary Pearce, Hunt's news secretary, characterized the nearly two-hour meeting Friday as "friendly and very upfront."

Job Woes Likely To Linger For U.S. Blue-Collar Force

WASHINGTON (AP) — For millions of American blue-collar workers, dwindling job opportunities will be a grim reality long after the economy rebounds from its deep recession, private business analysts say.

Behind the overall national 10.1 percent unemployment rate in September are obscure statistics that the economists said spell bad news for millions of workers — predominantly men — who envisioned a lifetime career in heavy manufacturing.

Several economists interviewed following release of the September unemployment figures last week noted that the 15.6 percent jobless rate for blue-collar workers was three times that of white-collar counterparts.

And while these analysts gave varying predictions of when a business turnaround will occur, they agreed that millions of jobs in such industries as auto, steel and rubber have been lost forever.

For the last 10 years, they said, the American economy has been changing from reliance on the basic heavy manufacturing industries, which held sway in an earlier era, to dependency on high-technology goods and services.

The roots of this changing economy go far deeper — and have much greater ramifications for the labor force — than the transitory business slump the nation has been experiencing since the fall of 1981, the analysts said.

"There won't be a basic restoration of the jobs lost in heavy manufacturing," asserted Allen Sinai, vice president and chief economist of Data Resources, Inc., a Lexington, Mass.-based forecasting firm.

Joel Popkin, a Washington economist, said employment opportunities will remain depressed long after a business recovery "for those blue-collar workers in the manfacturing sector."

"It seems to me that what's happening in the economy right now is a secular trend that will lead the U.S. out of the production of less sophisticated manufacturing goods," Popkin said. "It's an adjustment to a structural change that is taking place in the economy."

Although September's jobless rate was the highest since 1940, producing screams of outrage by Democratic politicians and labor leaders, the individual statistics for blue-collar workers presented a more dismal picture:

—Since September 1981, total employment among blue-collar workers has declined by 2.1 million, while overall employment among white-collar workers has risen by nearly a million.

—Employment in transportation equipment industries such as automaking has dwindled by 200,000 in a year.

Unions representing blue-collar employees swallowed most of the wage concessions that workers have given to management in major collective bargaining this year. Yet, there is no assurance the concessions will guarantee a restoration of industries such as auto manufacturing, where more some 350,000 workers have been laid off.

General Motors Chairman Roger B. Smith, attending a meeting of the Business Council in Hot Springs, Va., said that while he looks for an imminent upturn to pull the auto industry out of a three-year slump, "I don't expect any great big surge (in auto worker recalls). As a matter of fact, that would be counter-productive."

The economists said job prospects for young people and blacks, while extremely scare during the current recession, aren't as dismal as those of blue-collar workers. Youthful job-seekers can be trained for the new work that will be created in the future, while older workers face plant closures and retraining, they said.

"There are lasting scars that are associated with such job market traumas," said Donald H. Strazheim, vice president of Wharton Econometrics.

"You may, in fact, see the foreign producers building their plants here (in the United States)," he said. "The people in Flint, Saginaw (Michigan) and Akron (Ohio), will find that their industry has moved and that they will have to move as well."

Sandra Shaber, an analyst with Chase Econometrics in Bala Cynwyd, Pa., bemoaned "never plants — plants that will never open again. There will be a very heavy incidence of people who will not get their jobs back at all."

The lack of a national strategy for retraining dislocated workers "is a major barrier to America's economic renewal," Pat Choate, a onetime Commerce Department economist, said in a recent study produced for Congress.

Fed Sticks To Tight-Money Plan

BY OWEN ULLMANN
Associated Press Writer

HOT SPRINGS, Va. (AP) — Federal Reserve Chairman Paul A. Volcker declared Saturday that the nation's central bank is sticking with its inflation-fighting, tight-money policy rather than trying to force interest rates down to trigger a long-awaited economic recovery.

Volcker denied recent reports that the bank, in a major policy shift, is backing away from its tough anti-inflationary stance because of growing alarm about a deteriorating economy and surging unemployment.

Nevertheless, he expressed concern that recovery continues to elude the country long after most forecasters had predicted an economic upturn. He said he still expects a "moderate" recovery, although he declined to predict when it would arrive.

Volcker said interest rates have fallen significantly since the summer because of weak loan demand caused by the recession and the central bank's success in lowering inflation.

"We do not think we can force interest rates lower. We will not force interest rates lower," the bank chairman said at a rare news conference held at a resort hotel, where he is attending a meeting of chairmen of the nation's largest corporations.

"We welcome declines in interest rates obviously, but those have to be based on a sense of progress on the inflationary front if they are going to be sustained," he said.

Volcker reaffirmed that the bank would continue to slow inflation by restraining the growth of money and credit. The continuing concern about inflation is not something that "can be turned on or off and it's not going to be turned on or off," he said.

The belief within the financial community that the Fed is relaxing its monetary policy was bolstered Friday, when the central bank lowered its "discount" lending rate to financial institutions from 10 percent to 9.5 percent, the lowest level in more than three years. It was the fifth drop in that rate since July, when the bank was charging 12 percent.

Volcker said the rate reduction "represents no change in the basic thrust of policy."

He acknowledged, however, that the Fed would be forced temporarily to alter its technical procedures for restraining growth in the money supply because of recent changesin the banking laws. But the change has "zero policy significance," he declared.

Volcker has been the center of economic controversy since he took over the Fed three years ago and began fighting inflation by controlling the growth of money and credit.

The result was that interest rates rose to record levels and eventually triggered a short recession in 1980 and the current 15-month recession, which has just produced the first 10 percent unemployment rate since 1940.

Volcker has resisted calls to loosen the Fed's tight-money policy, arguing that inflation and interest rates would only surge up again as a result.

"I think the inflationary momentum that has come to grip the economy in the 60s and the 70s has been broken and I do think the prospects are good for some further reductions," he said Saturday.

"But I am under no illusions that that look at the future depends upon continuing vigilence and discipline in monetary policy."

Inflation is running at an annual rate of 5 percent to 6 percent, down from the peak of more than 13 percent in 1979.

He described the decline in interest rates "as a reward for that progress."

Asked if the Fed is playing politics with the Reagan adminstration in trying to encourage lower interest rates before the November election, he noted that at this time in 1980 the bank had raised the discount rate.

"I understand a certain amount of cynicism exists on this point," he said. "You're tempted to go in a hole and hide until the election is over, but I decided in the end, we'd better do what we thought was right anyway."

One source of reports that the Fed was easing its anti-inflation policies was a decision by the board's policy-setting group last week not to adhere strictly to its most closely watched measure of money supply growth.

That measure, called M-1, includes cash and checking account deposits. The bank's policy calls for that particular money supply to grow no more than 5.5 percent this year, although the growth is currently exceeding that figure.

Volcker said it will be impossible for the bank to measure M-1 accurately in the coming months because of some financial changes. One is the maturing of some $31 billion of All-Savers certificates, which could lead to a temporary surge in M-1.

The other factor is the creation of new money-market fund deposit accounts for banks and savings and loan associations. Transfer of funds into these accounts could temporarily depress M-1, Volcker said.

As a result, the central bank will have to use other measures to ascertain the growth of money and credit and will not attempt to keep M-1 strictly within its target range until the effects of these banking changes can be determined, he said.

"M-1, not be choice, but events, is going to give off unreliable signals," he said. "... When you have a figure which you know is going to be off base, its no sense to follow the figure."

He described the change as if "the wind blew a tree into the house so we had to move to an apartment while we repair the house."

ECU: Will It Be Classrooms, Or Trees?

But Moore said that if the classroom building is funded "the south end of it will be over the building that now handles the steam interchanges. It was built so another building can be put on top of it. The north end of it (the new classroom facility) will be 10 or 15 feet from the sidewalk back of Graham."

"I think there are probably better locations," ECU biology Professor Vincent Bellis said last week. "The question is whether all alternatives were given due consideration prior to the decision. I wonder if long-term campus development was carefully considered."

According to Dr. Bellis, "the very emotional issue" voiced by many of the objectors is "the so-called arboretum which has been pretty well nibbled away by other construction activities" and the "very large and majestic trees."

However, Bellis said, "I think the primary consideration is the dispersion of traffic — auto and people — density on campus. Again, that relates to the long-term planning considerations. I think it (locating the new building near the central campus) will eventually add to the congestion of the central and east end of the campus."

By locating the new classroom building in the area behind Joyner Library there is "an opportunity to spread to the west end of the campus now," Bellis said.

"It's an aesthetic question ... a planning question. Does it serve well?" Bellis suggested.

According to Bellis, there is "a little over an acre" of the old arboretum left. "The building and parking lot will take up most of that space," although "the old university lake area wil not be directly involved in the building project.

"The primary impact will be an aesthetic and visual one" Bellis said, citing the "removal of several large trees ... oaks and a willow. The number is not as important as the statue, size and age of a few of them."

Again, Bellis said, "I don't think trees is the basic issue ... It's dispersion of density, the utilization of facilities.

"I would hope that when a major decision like this has to be made, there would be more of an attempt to involve the entire university community. I think there should be ... so the kinds of problems we've run into could be avoided. The emotional aspect of this issue could have been avoided if wider representation from the university community were involved in the decision-making process."

"There's a considerable amount of discussion on this that's really off the issue," Chancellor John Howell said, when asked about the controversary.

"One of the first questions we have to answer is: Do we need the building? If we don't, we don't have to disrupt anything. And a few of the people have raised this issue.

"We've had a fairly high utilization of space for a long time. And we need space," Howell emphasized. "There's a considerable number of faculty members who share office space ... two to an office, a great many graduate students who have teaching responsibilities who have inadequate places to meet their students. We have 179 faculty members sharing offices and 182 teaching students who don't have a good place to meet.

"There is a very good justification for the building."

Howell continued, "The next question we get to is: Where? And there are not many places on campus we could build a building that big.

"It all boils down to the place there in the arboretum, or the place back of the library ... the wooded area back of the "Y" Hut, infirmary and library. And that would sacrifice more trees than the place we're talking about," Howell said.

"A major consideration for me is the parking places" behind the library and student union. "Those places are full a good part of the day. We needed that parking space when it was put in. And Tom Brewer (former chancellor of the school) took flack when trees were cut down to build it.

"One of the things we have to keep in mind is where people are going to park. We don't have enough parking space and I'd have to think a good while before setting a building on top of that parking spot. We'd have to cut down trees somewhere else to provide parking."

Howell said another consideration that has been raised by people is that "it would be good to put the classroom building near the library and the student center in order to increase utilization of those two parts of the university."

"That overlooks several things. First, it overlooks that in a university physical plant plan it's better to have all classrooms close together than it is to have one building close to the library. Think in terms of student traffic. They go from one classroom building to another more often each day than they go to the library.

"Those are my considerations," Howell said.

"In addition, the architect looked at both places. The board of trustees and the buildings and grounds committee (of the board) looked at both places. The architect thought the arboretum area would be best. The trustees and I agreed to it, too.

"The building as planned," Howell said, "will have the whole first floor devoted to lecture rooms with floors sloping down to the lecturn in sort of a semi-circle — a relatively new design. And the arboretum is ideally configured for that. It already has a bowl shape to it. Building the space would be a whole lot cheaper over there," with a less excavation.

"And other problems could arise" if the new classroom building were put behind the library, Howell said, adding: "There's a public street there, trees — pieces of property we don't own would have to be dealt with. All those things would have to be taken into consideration."

"I think that is the most substantial objection ... the one in most need of a response.

"That arboreturm, first proposed in the mid 1930s, was built as a WPA (Works Progress Administration) project — a job-making project," and covered about six acres, "bounded on the west by the old steam plant, on the north by what now is Graham Building and the street in front of Rawl and Austin ... bounded on the south by the creek (Green Mill Run) and included a pond. It was bounded on the east by the football field."

"My best guess" Howell said, is that Christenbury Memorial Gymnasium, built in 1952, first encroached on the arboreturm, followed by the Rawl Building in 1959, and the addition to Graham Building, then the biology building in 1969. Also taking part of the original arboretum area is a parking lot south of 10th Street and the widening of 10th Street itself.

"A good portion of the new building will be built over the utility building where the steam plant was and on the parking lot around it, which was never in the arboretum," Howell said.

"Twenty-five years ago when I came here, the arboretum was pretty much run down. I'd be willing to consider doing something about it, but I couldn't think we could restore it. I'd be willing to consider the re-establishment of the Sally Joyner Davis Arboretum on some other plot.

"The second issue of course is trees. But that's not as an important issue as a spot named for somebody," Howell said.

"You have to keep in mind that we're apt to build in spots where there is a tree. The university, of course, is concerned about trees and we don't want to destroy trees heedlessly. In fact ... in the past 14 years we've purchased 777 trees, and those are trees, and 3,500 seedlings. That's over 55 trees a year we planted for the last 14 years. We feel comfortable we've replaced the trees, and more, from what we've had to cut down," Howell said.

As administrative head of the university, Howell said, "I don't have the luxury of looking at trees as a single issue. I have to consider all aspects of the university.

"My response is that the most significant and compelling issue at the university is the education program. If I have to weigh providing space where faculty and students get together for instruction against cutting down a tree, I have to decide in favor of education."

Will the General Assembly include the new building in the State budget next year?

House Speaker Liston Ramsey said last week that there will be some money for capital inprovements — "3 percent has been the traditional amount" — even though there are many demands being made on the state's limited revenues.

Ramsey added that capital improvements are one area of state spending that doesn't reoccur each year after they are budgeted and they can be cut from the budget if the state's financial situation fails to improve.

Poles ...

Neither Jaruzelski nor government press spokesman Jerzy Urban would provide details on when or how many of the estimated 700 to 1,000 interned unionists still held without charge would be released. There was no mention of the hundreds of unionists jailed — not interned — for terms of up to 10 years on charges of violating martial law.

Poland has been rocked by protests over the last 10 months, and it was believed freedom for internees might help blunt any new riots.

Solidarity chief Lech Walesa and other members of the union were seized during and after the Dec. 13 crackdown that suspended the giant labor federation.

Lebanon Delays Plan To Disarm Christian Militia

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Plans to disarm right-wing Christian militias in east Beirut were postponed Saturday after the Lebanese army requested more time to complete its massive sweep of Moslem west Beirut, government sources said.

Israeli forces meanwhile consolidated their positions in southeastern Lebanon and were moving in prefabricated houses in preparation for winter.

A U.S. official touring the Palestinian refugee camp of Ain El-Helweh in southern Lebanon on Saturday asked Israel to keep Christian militiamen out of the camp following the killing of a Palestinian man there last month.

M. Peter Mcpherson, head of the U.S. Agency for International Development, said he told Israeli officials that "the camps need to be free of militias."

Lebanese newspapers and government sources who did not want to be quoted by name said the plan to disarm Christian militias in east Beirut initially was scheduled to start Sunday, but the Lebanese army requested an extension of its sweep for arms in west Beirut.

The sources said Christian President Amin Gemayel wanted to begin demilitarizing east Beirut before heading to Washington and talks with President Reagan Oct. 19. He was also reported wanting to declare Beirut a demilitarized city before trying to extend army control over separate areas outside Beirut now controlled by Israeli, Syrian and Palestine Liberation Organization forces.

More than 1,000 illegal aliens, suspected criminals, escaped convicts and people carrying false papers and expired visas have been rounded up since the Lebanese army launched its sweep of west Beirut Tuesday.

A Lebanese army spokesman said army troops raided a building containing a printing press and arrested 10 people on forgery counts. He said 3,385 false identity cards and 1,145 forged passports were confiscated in the operation.

Lebanese newspapers said Gemayel may request that the 3,500-man multinational force made up of U.S. Marines and French and Italian troops be increased to 15,000. They said Gemayel may also ask that the multinational force, now stationed in Beirut, be expanded to northern, eastern and southern Lebanon.

The Associated Press correspondent Edmond Chedid reported from southern Lebanon that the Israelis moved trucks and heavy equipment to Wadi El-Khou near the village of Marjeyoun, five miles north of the Israeli border.

He said the Israelis were moving prefabricated houses into the same area at night over the past two days, apparently in preparation for the rainy season that begins in a few weeks.

U.S. special envoy Philip C. Habib has been trying to negotiate an agreement for a step-by-step withdrawal of Israeli troops, Syrian forces and Palestinian guerrillas from Lebanon. Habib is now in Washington.

Dennis Brown, head of the U.N. Relief and Works Agency in Sidon, southern Lebanon, said there is "a very nervous atmosphere" in Palestinian camps in the region.

Right-wing militiamen, many of them Christians, have moved into areas in southern Lebanon that were PLO strongholds before Israel's invasion of Lebanon June 6. Relief workers say the militiamen are frightening the Palestinian refugees living in the region.

A 70-year-old Palestinian man was killed and several people were injured Sept. 28 when gunmen entered the camp of Ain El-Helweh and began to fire indiscriminately, Lebanese police said.

Israeli officers who attended the meeting with relief agencies' officials said they had agreed to patrol the camps and keep out Lebanese militiamen.

Fears of Christian attacks in Palestinian refugee camps heightened after the massacre of about 600 men, women and children by Christian militiamen in the Beirut refugee camps of Sabra and Chatilla Sept. 16-18. The massacre began the day after Israeli troops moved into west Beirut and surrounded the camps.

Country Music Awards Set For Monday

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — "Outlaw" Willie Nelson, traditionalist Ricky Skaggs and teen sensation Alabama were nominated for five awards in Monday night's nationally televised Country Music Association Awards show.

Barbara Mandrell, forced to cancel her popular network TV show because of the strain on her voice, had a chance to win country's most prestigious award — Entertainer of the Year — for the third straight year. She is the only entertainer ever to win it twice.

Nelson, a former Entertainer of the Year who was favored to win the title again, refused to perform on the show in a dispute over how many members of his band could join him on stage. He was not scheduled to attend the show.

The man credited with launching country music's progressive "outlaw" movement also was nominated for top male vocalist, top single, top album, vocal duo with Waylon Jennings and top song for "Always on My Mind," an award which goes to the songwriter.

Skaggs, 27, the hottest new performer to break out of Nashville this year, was the longshot for Entertainer of the Year. The bluegrass-flavored singer also was nominated for male vocalist, instrumental group, the Horizon Award and top single for "Crying My Heart Out Over You."

Alabama and the Oak Ridge Boys — whose appeal rests in the heart of the teen set — tried to become the first group ever to win country's top award. Alabama also was nominated for top vocal group, instrumental group, top album and top single for "Love in the First Degree."

Country singer George Jones, arrested for drunken driving twice and public drunkenness and cocaine possession once this year, was nominated for top album for "Still the Same Ole Me." He also was nominated for top male vocalist, an award he has won for the last two years.

Some of the biggest names in country music failed to make the cut for the CMA awards, voted on by the organization's 7,000 paying members.

Kenny Rogers, who makes about $2 million a month from entertaining, was not nominated. Dolly Parton, Crystal Gayle, Charley Pride, Don Williams and Johnny Cash also were absent.

While Cash wasn't nominated, his daughter, Rosanne, was a finalist in three of the 11 categories — female vocalist, top album and the Horizon Award, which is given to country's newest stars.

Others competing for female vocalist were Miss Mandrell, Janie Fricke, Emmylou Harris and pop singer Juice Newton.

The winners were to be announced on the 90-minute awards show to be telecast live by CBS from the Grand Ole Opry House. Miss Mandrell and Mac Davis are co-hosts of the program, which begins at 9:30 p.m. EDT.

The CMA, an organization formed to promote country music, hosts one of three country music awards shows. The others are the fan-voted Music City News Awards show and the Academy of Country Music Awards show.

Soviet Spy Plane Circles Area Over Trapped Sub

BERGA NAVAL BASE, Sweden (AP) — A Soviet spy plane is criss-crossing the Baltic trying to make contact with a submarine trapped near Stockholm, and the Swedes have set up a jamming station to prevent communication between the two, informed sources said Saturday.

The sources, who requested anonymity, said the spy plane was an Ilyushin-38, and that it has displayed "unusual interest" in the Hors Bay area near the top secret Musko naval base, where the intruder was first sighted Oct. 1.

Lt. Col. Jan Ake Berg of the Swedish Defense Staff declined to comment on the report, saying only: "We are continuing as before. We receive many tips from the public and are following up some of them." He refused to give details of the search tactics.

However, the Swedish navy is known to have at least two remote-controlled minisubs that can carry TV cameras or explosives. The navy also has a new type of acoustic signal device that can attach itself magnetically to its undersea quarry.

More than 1,000 Swedes defied the chilly autumn weather and rainy skies to follow the search from the coast. Authorities, worrying that the influx of spectators may interfere with the navy's operation, sent soldiers to close off a main road leading to the area.

During the first week of the search, patrol boats and helicopters dropped more than 30 depth charges, some containing 220 pounds of TNT, around the sub in an attempt to force it to surface.

The Soviet news agency Tass has denied that any submarine in Hors Bay is Soviet. The United States and other NATO countries with subs in the Baltic Sea have denied their subs are involved.

Berg said the entire Stockholm Archipelago was being searched for foreign su bmarines but that the closed-off area of Hors Bay was "exceptionally interesting."

He also said naval authorities confirmed they have had "definite indications" from a second submarine outside Hors Bay, but he declined to say if any furt her contact with the second submarine was made Saturday.

Naval authorities said three powerful mines were detonated Thursday in Hors Bay.

"The mines were detonated by certain indications," Capt. Sven Carlsson said. "It has not been ascertained whether these indications came from a submarine. The mines may also have been detonated by mistake."

The mines were part of a permanent mine field in place to protect the Musko base, just south of this naval training facility.

They usually are not armed and in order to explode must first be activated by military personnel, Carlsson said.

He said the mine exlosions occurred in an area about 19 miles south of Hors Bay.

The explosive power of the three mines was almost 4,400 pounds, more than en ough to sink a submarine, but Carlsson said no submarine was sunk.

Asked if the sub in Hors Bay could have escaped during the week-long hunt for it, Carlsson said: "It's possible, but there is a greater probability that it is still there."

A family of four spent spent the night in a small car near the coast to make sure they would not miss the start of Saturday's activities.

Many of the spectators scanned the bay with binoculars, and a man was doing brisk business with a hot dog stand.

"I know people would be curious, and they didn't disappoint me," he said.

Two British Soldiers Honored

LONDON (UPI) — A colonel and a sergeant, both killed charging through Argentine gunfire in the Falklands, have been awarded Britain's highest award for gallantry — the Victoria Cross, it was announced Saturday.

The posthumous awards went to Lt. Col. Herbert "H" Jones, commander of the 2nd battalion paratroop regiment, who was cut down in the battle for Goose Green, and Sgt. Ian McKay of the 3rd battalion, killed in one of the final assaults on Mount Longdon.

The two Victoria Crosses were among 577 honors awarded for service in the South Atlantic campaign which was sparked by the April 2 seizure of the Falkland Islands by Argentina.

Other recipients were the two commanders of the Falkands Task force, rear Adm. John "Sandy" Woodward and Maj. Gen. Jeremy Moore, who both receive knighthoods along with the island's governor, Rex Hunt.

The purple-ribboned medal instituted by Queen Victoria in 1856 bears the simple inscription "For Valor," and is awarded for outstanding heroism under fire. Only four VC's have been handed out since World War II.

Officers told McKay's family his bravery on Mount Longdon, the final objective before Stanley and the defeat of the Argentines, saved many lives.

The official citation said McKay, 29, "performed with outstanding selflessness, perseverance and courage" and "with a complete disregard for his own safety."

The sergeant died when he charged an enemy position on his own, after three soldiers with him fell back,

List Cut To Four In Cyanide Deaths

CHICAGO (AP) — Investigators are focusing on four primary leads in their investigation of the murders of seven people who took cyanide-laden Extra-Strength Tylenol capsules, state Attorney General Tyrone Fahner said Saturday.

"Of the eight or nine leads we had, four are still being actively worked," Fahner said at an afternoon news briefing. "The rest have washed out."

Also on Saturday, investigators pored over hundreds of photographs taken by a surveillance camera inside a Chicago drug store where a victim of cyanide poisoning purchased a bottle of Extra-Strength Tylenol, police said.

The film is from a camera, mounted above a bank machine just inside the entrance, that takes panoramic shots of the area every time a bank transaction is completed.

"I understand the FBI and people from the task force have looked into this, as well as two of our guys (detectives)," police Sgt. Len Muscolino said. "But so far, nothing has come from them."

The victim — flight attendant Paula Prince, 35, who bought a bottle of Extra-Strength Tylenol at the Walgreens store on Sept. 29 — was one of seven people in the Chicago area who died after taking capsules of the pain reliever which were laced with cyanide.

The examination of the photographs was part of a wider probe to find the person responsible for the killings.

Chicago police have jurisdiction in the Prince death, the only one to occur in the city itself, and are conducting their investigation in conjunction with a task force of 100 federal, state and suburban law agencies.

Meanwhile Saturday, a Chicago detective arrived in Sheridan, Wyo., to check out the circumstances surrounding the death on July 26 of a young man, police said. The death was attributed to cyanide, but sources said there was no indication so far that it was linked in any way to the Chicago deaths or to Tylenol.

Fahner said the number of calls to a special telephone line set up by the task force has dwindled to a "trickle." Many of the calls have been from "cranks" and self-described "psychics," Fahner said.

"The longer the investigation takes, the greater the frustration level of the public will be," Fahner said. "But I said from day 1 that we will solve this case and I believe in my heart and my mind that we will."

Investigators already have discounted links between the Chicago-area deaths and two other faraway poisonings — the cyanide death in April of a graduate student in Philadelphia and the non-fatal poisoning of a California man who said he took Extra-Strength Tylenol capsules containing strychnine.

Police in Philadelphia have said the cyanide death there appeared to have been suicide, and police in Oroville, Calif., say the non-fatal poisoning of Greg Blagg appeared to have been the work of a "copy-cat," who heard about the Chicago poisonings.

However, Blagg was interviewed again Friday by police. He was poisoned Sept. 30, the day the Chicago cyanide deaths were revealed, but said he bought the Extra-Strength Tylenol two weeks earlier. His bottle of capsules and two others from the same drugstore were found to contain strychnine.

The authorities also continued to search for the person who tried to extort $1 million from the manufacturers of Extra-Strength Tylenol, threatening a second wave of poisonings unless the ransom was met. One man has been questioned about the letter and released.

The threat has been termed a hoax, but the authorities nevertheless want to track down the person who wrote the letter.

The letter was sent to McNeil Consumer Products Co., a subsidiary of Johnson & Johnson, and demanded the deposit of $1 million into an account at Continental Illinois National Bank & Trust Co. of Chicago.

The account, which had been closed, was traced to a "formerly successful stock broker who had suffered considerable financial reverses," said a law enforcement source in Washington.

Illinois Attorney General Tyrone Fahner, the head of the task force, said the man had been questioned and was not among the "eight or nine" prime suspects in the seven killings.

The man was questioned by FBI agents for two hours Friday afternoon, said his lawyer, Thomas Foran, a former U.S. attorney in Chicago. He said his client submitted to questioning voluntarily and provided handwriting samples. The man was not identified.

Protective Vest Fails Knife Test

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Civic club members say a colleague who knifed a man during a bulletproof vest demonstration took part in the fatal display reluctantly.

Mark Wagstaff, 30, a local businessman and a member of the Pyramid Club, collapsed and died after fellow club member Jim Shepherd pushed a 2½-inch long paring knife through a protective vest, police and club members said.

Shepherd "didn't want to do it, I could tell. But Mark insisted, so he did," club secretary Gary L. Britton said.

Britton said Wagstaff's vest stopped the knife once but Wagstaff wanted to show off the effectiveness of the vest one more time to the Friday breakfast club crowd.

"Mark sat down and then insisted Jim do it again," Britton said and Shepherd "definitely didn't want to do it a second time when Mark insisted."

The little knife punctured the vest. Wagstaff put it down and started to talk about another topic when he suddenly collapsed as the 38 members in the audience jumped up in disbelief.

"I opened his shirt and there was a lot of blood," Britton said. Wagstaff never regained consciousness and was dead on arrival at a hospital.

Wagstaff, who ran the Wagstaff Enterprises security firm, was promoting the vests for sale. Police said their detectives had never heard of the brand of vest he was selling. Police would not divulge the name of the manufacturer.

Shepherd, owner of a photographic studio, had no business relationship with Wagstaff. Club members described them as friends.

"It was a real freak accident. It was just an accident," police Sgt. Don Pennington said. Shepherd was not taken into custody and police said no charges would be filed against him.

No one answered the telephone at Shepherd's home Saturday. Lt. Tom Mundy, a police spokesman, said Shepherd was "in extreme shock."

States Intensify College Controls

WASHINGTON (AP) — A prestigious education group, citing the "suffocating regulations" that states are placing on colleges and universities, said Saturday that higher education officials must take the offensive or risk ceding more power to government and accreditation agencies.

Despite decreased federal rulemaking under the Reagan administration, state regulation of public colleges has intensified, according to the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching.

At the same time, the foundation said, specialized accreditation agencies "threaten the intergrity of higher education from within."

The foundation exhorted college presidents, faculty and trustees to strengthen their own leadership and self-policing mechanisms. If higher education fails to do so, it "will probably by default lose its own leadership and control," said Ernest L. Boyer, president of the foundation and a former U.S. commissioner of education.

In its report on "The Control of the Campus," the foundation said that in Pennsylvania, "the state's central government controls (all university) purchases over $1,000, all contracts, all civil service management, administrative classifications and pay telephone installations ... The state also supervises such fundamental matters as academic program and formal planning, tuition, financial aid programs and federal grants. This is simply bad management."

"In Arizona and Nevada, the state legislature or its staff decides on student-faculty ratios, and in Arkansas, a state agency in the executive branch decides on purchases costing over $1,000," the report said.

"Trying to administer a college by remote control ignores principles of good management, reflects a climate of distrust and assumes incorrectly that if centralized management is increased, efficiency will improve," the study said.

"To impose suffocating requirements on colleges at a time when flexibility is required is the wrong prescription," the foundation warned. "To cut back in both money and flexibility is to make a difficult situation almost hopeless."

Winds Fan California Fires

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Two major brush fires swept through Southern California on Saturday, destroying houses and mobile homes as Santa Ana winds pushed one giant blaze all the way to the Pacific Ocean.

They were among a rash of fires spurred by winds and 90-degree temperatures that blackened skies over four Southern California counties, scorching more than 12,000 acres.

Clouds of reddish-gray and black smoke towered over the coastline from a Dayton Canyon fire north of Los Angeles which covered 3,000 acres and destroyed six structures as it swept to the Pacific.

By midafternoon the blaze had leaped the Pacific Coast Highway at the Paradise Cove fishing resort, igniting mobile homes near the beach about 20 miles from Dayton Canyon where it started. Dense smoke blotted out the sun and caused bumper-to-bumper traffic for miles along major highways.

Democrats Putting Pressure On GOP Freshmen

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — During an election year in which most House incumbents appear comfortably entrenched, Democratic campaign officials are concentrating on defeating the first-term Republicans swept into office in Ronald Reagan's 1980 landslide.

Democrats are making their push against these 32 freshmen as both parties find themselves in surprising agreement on one point: Republicans probably will lose 10 to 15 House seats.

Both sides also agree that with unemployment at a record level of 10.1 percent the economy will be the overriding campaign issue. The state of the economy coupled with the failure of congressional redistricting to produce the GOP bonanza once predicted by party leaders has Republicans bracing for a loss.

House Republican Leader Robert H. Michel of Illinois, in a tight re-election race himself, pegs the GOP loss at no more than 12 House seats — similar to the 15-seat Democratic gain predicted by Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., and other Democratic leaders.

Earlier this year, O'Neill was predicted Democratic gains of 40 to 50 seats, based on the weakening economy.

But Democratic analysts scaled that figure down, citing far heavier campaign expenditures by Republicans per race and the continuing popularity of President Reagan — especially in the West and Southwest — despite the unpopularity of some of his programs.

Republicans control the Senate by a 54-46 margin but remain a minority in the House, where they hold 192 of the 435 seats. Virtually all analysts predict continued Republican control of the Senate and continued Democratic rule in the House.

Republicans like Michel, elected in urban areas of the Northeast and Midwest plagued by high industrial unemployment, seem the most vulnerable.

Of this group, Democrats are focusing most of their energies on the 52 first-term Republicans, many of whom were elected on Reagan's coattails in 1980, many from traditionally Democratic areas.

If the 1982 elections are to be viewed as a referendum on Reagan's economic program, it will be in these districts, Democratic analysts contend.

"Many of these Republicans were elected in 1980 by a very small margin, many by less than a percentage point or two. They are very vulnerable," said Evan Zeppos, a spokesman for the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee.

"By contrast, most of the Democrats on the ballot are strong ones. After all, they got through 1978 and 1980," he said.

Republican campaign officials agree on the vulnerability of many of their freshmen House members.

"The Democrats have targeted them just as we targeted Democratic freshmen in 1980," said a top GOP campaign official.

Unlike 1980, when they knocked off some senior Democrats, Republicans are not concentrating much effort this year in going after well-established Democrats.

Instead, they're focusing on newly created seats and on those where incumbents have retired.

Meanwhile, Democrats also are trying to topple the No. 1 Republican — Michel — but Repubicans are putting little emphasis this year on trying to unseat either O'Neill or House Democratic Leader Jim Wright of Texas.

In fact, it is a year in which most long-time incumbents of both parties seem fairly well entrenched, despite the vulnerabilty of Michel, a Republican in a district of high unemployment.

For most incumbents seeking re-election "it's a standoff," said Rep. Guy Vander Jagt of Michigan, the House GOP campaign chairman.

"The real battleground will be over the open seats," he said.

This year, there are 210 Democratic incumbents seeking re-election and 161 Repblicans seeking new terms — and six races where, because of redistricting, Democratic incumbents are facing Republican incumbents in the same districts.

Also on the ballot are 57 so-called open seats, districts without an incumbent seeking re-election: 21 newly created seats, 16 open seats that had been Republican and 21 open seats that had been Democratic.

Repbulican leaders once predictued a GOP gain of a dozen or more seats because of redistricting brought about by population shifts reflected in the 1980 census.

But the automatic GOP gain failed to materialize, in part due to Democratic-controlled state legislatures that generally sought to minimize such gains.

As a result, Democratic and Republican officials agree, the whole redistricting issue has evaporated.

However, redistricting did result in six races in which Democratic incumbents are vying with Republican incumbents for the same turf.

Of these, the most hotly contested may be in the 4th District of Massachusetts, where two popular incumbents — Republican Margaret Heckler and Democrat Barney Frank are slugging it out.

Other incumbent-vs.-incumbent races include: California Republican John Rousselot and Democrat Marty Martinez; Missouri Republican Wendall Bailey and Democrat Ike Skelton; New York Republican Guy Molinari and Democrat Leo Zefferetti; New York Republican Benjamin Gilman and Democrat Peter Peyser; South Dakota Democrat Tom Daschle and Republican Clint Roberts.

Natural Gas Supply Reported Adequate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A government study predicts adequate natural gas supplies for the winter and says even unusually cold temperatures should cause no significant disruptions.

The projection by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission is based on a survey of winter gas supplies for 24 pipeline companies that transport 94 percent of natural gas used in interstate commerce.

The report said the pipeline companies project natural gas supplies of 6,653 billion cubic feet available from November 1982 through March 1983. It said the amount represents an increase of 616 billion cubic feet or 10 percent over actual deliveries last year.

"The 1981-82 winter season was 2.1 percent warmer than normal on a nationwide basis," the study said. "As a result of reduced projected demand, certain pipeline companies will have gas supplies available which they are not planning to take this winter and others are either making or proposing to make off-system sales because of the temporary excess of natural gas available."

If the winter is colder than the "coldest weather pattern projected" in the survey, the government study said, some industrial "dislocations" could be anticipated.

The report said even an unusually cold winter is not expected to result in "any significant industrial dislocation or shutdown."

Even though the United States has a large surplus of natural gas, private industry analysts expect gas prices will go up 10 to 20 percent.

The Washington-based Cabot Consulting Group predicted natural gas prices would exceed oil prices in traditional heating markets by 1985 when most gas prices are fully decontrolled.

Natural gas still is cheaper than home-heating oil refined from crude. But natural gas' price advantage is eroding, the group said in a separate study.

The government study, released late Friday, said 13 of the 24 pipelines surveyed project increased gas available during the coming winter, compared to the 1981-82 deliveries. They are Arkansas Louisiana, Cities Service, Colorado Interstate, Columbia, Consolidated, Michigan Wisconsin, Natural Gas Pipeline, Northern Natural, Northwest Pipeline, Tennessee Gas, Transcontinental, Trunkline and United.

Six pipelines — Algonquin, Midwestern, Mississippi River, National Fuel, Panhandle Eastern and Texas Gas — forecast reduced supply levels but do not anticipate any gas shortage during the coming winter, the study, released late Friday, said.

Five pipeline companies — El Paso, Florida Gas, Southern, Texas Eastern and Transwestern — forecast some level of shortage but anticipated no problems with delivery, the report said.

Stolen Checks Listed

Chief of Police Glenn Cannon has asked that Greenville area merchants be on the lookout for $2,650 worth of Citicorp travelers checks in $50 and $100 denominations that were stolen from a guest at a local motel Sept. 19.

Two of the checks — one for $50 and the other for $100 — were recovered last week after being passed at two local stores, Cannon said.

The recovery of those checks, the chief added, led to the arrest Thursday of Quana Lavette Nobles, 24, of Kinston on uttering forged check charges.

The stolen checks include 15 checks for $50 each, with serial numbers between 2612-321-326 and 2612-321-340 and 19 checks for $100 with serial numbers from 1726-095-971 and 1726-095-989.

Cannon urged anyone having information about any of the checks to call the police department.

Justices To Hear Schools' Dispute

By KEVIN COSTELLOE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bob Jones III says he and his strict, Christian university are the "guinea pigs" in a test of religious freedom and the power of federal tax collectors.

William T. Coleman Jr., a prominent black lawyer, says giving federal tax breaks to Bob Jones University and other racially biased private schools would violate "fundamental national policy."

After months of heated rhetoric over one of the Reagan administration's stormiest issues, the Supreme Court will hear the dispute Tuesday.

The oral arguments involve an Internal Revenue Service ban on federal tax exemptions for racially discriminatory private schools which has been opposed by the Reagan administration.

"We're kind of the guinea pigs," Jones says of the Greenville, S.C., university's fight to regain its tax-exempt status.

That status was revoked as of December 1970. The Reagan administration said last January it intended to grant federal tax exemptions to the university and other racially biased private schools. The administration now says the Supreme Court must decide whether the IRS lacked congressional authority in imposing the ban in 1970.

Jones also maintains the IRS revocation violated his school's right to religious freedom, because the government must not supervise religious practices. The university president added in a telephone interview Thursday:

"We believe that if the strict construction of the law and the strict construction of the Constitution are observed, there's no way we can lose."

The plan to lift the disputed tax-exemption prohibition raised an outcry among blacks, civil rights groups and others.

The Supreme Court picked Coleman to defend the IRS ban, after the government declined to support it.

"Here, recognition of tax exemption would be utterly inconsistent with federal law and fundamental national policy condemning racial discrimination in public and private education," Coleman, a former Cabinet officer in the Ford administration, has told the Supreme Court.

William Bradford Reynolds, an assistant attorney general, will tell the court Tuesday that while the administration detests racial bias, it believes the IRS ban lacks proper legal basis and still wants Congress to enact the ban it has proposed.

Having Reynolds — the head of the Justice Department's civil rights division — argue for the government is another twist in the unusual case.

Lawrence G. Wallace has represented the government in the case as acting solicitor general and ordinarily would be expected to argue before the Supreme Court.

But Wallace has told the Supreme Court the IRS was justified in imposing the ban.

"He (Wallace) can't argue it because he has dissasociated himself in part from the government's position," said one Justice Department source who asked not to be identified.

The Supreme Court is not expected to decide the case for several months.

The 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals early in 1981 affirmed the refusal to give tax exemptions to Bob Jones University and the Goldsboro Christian Schools in Goldsboro, N.C. The Supreme Court also is considering Goldsboro's challenge to that decision.

Bob Jones University forbids interracial dating and interracial marriage.

But university president Jones says the school's policy applies to all races, adding: "Why anyone should think this is a slap against blacks, I don't understand. There is no malevolence of any kind against blacks."

Fewer than a dozen of the 6,300 students at Bob Jones were black as of last March.

Baker's 154 Yards, 2 TDs Key ECU By Richmond

Freshman tailback Tony Baker scored two touchdowns and ran for 154 yards in leading the East Carolina Pirates to a 35-14 victory over the University of Richmond Spiders last night in Ficklen Stadium.

The victory came easier than the final score would indicate as the Spiders got their final eight points late in the contest against the Pirate reserves.

East Carolina rolled up 500 yards in total offense, their highest production of the year, while holding Richmond to 234 yards.

Greg Stewart, who shared Player of the Game honors with Baker, threw for one touchdown and passed for another in getting a total of 202 yards in total offense — 167 of them on seven of 15 passes. It was his second game of 200-plus yards this season.

Richmond scored first in the game getting a 20-yard field goal from John Roach, who added a 34-yarder in the third period.

East Carolina came back on a one-yard plunge by Earnest Byner, followed by a four-yarder by Baker on the next series. Stewart then hit Ricky Nichols on a 46-yard bomb with just seven seconds left in the first half.

Baker's second TD, a 75-yard scamper on the option, closed out the third quarter with 10 seconds showing, and Stewart scored on a two-yard run in the early minutes of the final period.

Richmond's lone touchdown — the first TD scored in Ficklen by a Pirate opponent this year — came with 2:07 left on a nine-yard run by reserve tailback Danny Holly. Quarterback Danny Kees ran over the two-point conversion to complete the scoring.

ECU Coach Ed Emory said that he was worried about the Pirates' momentum after Richmond got its opening field goal, but that was quickly dispelled.

"When we came back 7-3, I believe our kids realized they could move the ball on them. I felt like we were in complete command at 14-3. Our defense played well, but we always start slow against Richmond due to those wide splits."

Emory said the Pirates played quite well and smoothly in the first half. "But in the third quarter we came out with two fumbles and an interception. You can't do those things and be good."

The Pirates actually lost four of five fumbles, going along with their one interception. Richmond fumbled five

Record Run

Brewers Pound Angels; Cards Nip Braves In 9th

Obkerfell's Single Leads St. Louis To 4-3 Victory

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Ken Obkerfell drove a line drive single to deep center in the ninth inning, scoring rookie David Green from second with the winning run as the St. Louis Cardinals rallied for a 4-3 victory over the Atlanta Braves to take a 2-0 lead in the National League championship series.

Green, who had entered the game as a defensive replacement at third base in the eighth inning, opened the Cardinals ninth with a single to left. Tommy Herr sacrificed the runner to second, bringing up Obkerfell.

With Bruce Sutter, ace of the Cardinals' bullpen on deck, the Braves decided to pitch to the third baseman rather than walk him and face a possible pinch-hitter. Obkerfell spoiled the strategy with a drive over center fielder Brett Butler's head that brought Green tearing home and left the Cardinals one victory away from their first World Series appearance since 1968.

They will try for that spot Sunday night in Atlanta with Joaquin Andujar facing Rick Camp of the Braves in the third game of the series.

Sutter had rescued the Cardinals from a two-out, no out jam in the eighth and then St. Louis rallied to tie the score against Gene Garber in the bottom of the inning.

Atlanta starter Phil Niekro, who was pitching with just two days' rest after working 4 1-3 innings in Wednesday's rained-out opener, turned in six gritty innings for the Braves.

The Cardinals, who struggled in the early going against Niekro's dancing knuckleball, came from two runs behind to tie the score 3-3.

They nicked Niekro for a run in the sixth on a single by Keith Hernandez and Darrell Porter's RBI double. After Atlanta pinch-hit for Niekro in the seventh, Garber came out of the Braves' bullpen.

He set the Cardinals down in order in their half of the seventh, and then Atlanta wasted a golden opportunity to add to its lead

Milwaukee Wins, 9-5, To Even Playoff Series

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Pitcher Moose Haas and outfielder Mark Brouhard — neither of whom has started down the stretch — helped carry the Milwaukee Brewers to a 9-5 victory over the fumble-fingered California Angels, tying their American League playoff series at two games apiece.

Haas, who had not started since Sept. 13, pitched 52-3 innings of no-hit ball, finally leaving after Don Baylor's grand slam homer with one out in the eighth and Jim Slaton retired the final five Angels for the save.

Brouhard, who had not started since Sept. 5 and last played in a game on Sept. 11, drove in three runs, two with an eighth-inning homer and scored four times to tie a major league playoff record held jointly by Steve Garvey of Los Angeles and Bob Robertson of Pittsburgh.

Haas sat through two short rain delays, the final one after he had walked the leadoff batter in the sixth. He attributed those delays, in part, for his inability to finish the game, but he said a little trick taught to him by teammate Don Sutton had helped him hang around that long.

"Don Sutton suggested it. He had done it, and I guess he had leanred it from Doc Medich," Haas said. "During the rain delays, I'd go into the press room next to the clubhouse and keep myself in shape by throwing the ball against the wall."

Haas said he was aware of the no-hitter, "and I would have liked to have had it. Anybody would. But I'm just glad to win."

Brouhard made his start as a late replacement for Ben Oglivie, who bruised his ribs in Friday's third game. He said he learned about his start from coach Sal Bando one-half hour before gametime.

"'I went over and looked at the lineup card and there I was," said Brouhard, who then was asked if he wanted to start again in Sunday's deciding Game 5, which will feature Bruce Kison — who won Game 2 for California — on the mound against Milwaukee ace Pete Vuckovich.

No. 4 Alabama Beats No. 3 Penn St., 42-21

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Bear Bryant proved to be a prophet as well as a winner.

"If we lose the kicking game, we can't win," the legendary Alabama coach predicted a few days before Saturday's battle with third-ranked Penn State.

His remarks rang true. Shortly after the final gun, with the scoreboard showing No. 4 Alabama a 42-21 winner, Bryant admitted that "The kicking game saved it for us. I didn't think before the game we could win unless we won the kicking game. They had a couple (of punts) blocked, and I doubt if we could have won without them."

Penn State punter Ralph Giacomarro brought a 40.8-yard average into the game. But his first kick of the day was blocked and recovered at the Nittany Lions' 14 to set up Alabama's first touchdown on Walter Lewis' 4-yard run, and his last punt struck one of his blockers in the back, and rebounded 39 yards to the 12, where the Crimson Tide took over and scored two plays later to help turn a 27-21 squeaker into a romp.

"I've never seen anything like that last blocked punt, and I hope I don't see it again," said Joe Paterno, whose teams have surrendered more points only once in his 17 years as Penn State's coach. That beating occurred in 1966, his first season, in a 49-11 loss to UCLA.

"We punt from the double-wing, and we've always had success, and I don't think the formation is at fault," Paterno said. "It was just poor execution on our part."

Besides his touchdown run, Lewis passed six yards to Joe Carter for a TD that broke a 7-7 tie early in the second quarter and set up the first of Linnie Patrick's two touchdown bursts with three key runs and a tricky underhand shovel pass, one of three the Bear pulled from his bottomless bag of tricks.

Lewis ran Alabama's Wishbone to near-perfection in the first half, at times breaking it to line up a halfback in the slot and often freezing Penn State's defense with his fakes and cuts. He finished with 86 yards on 22 carries and was 9-of-14 through the air for 96 more.

"I didn't plan to play Walter Lewis as much as I did," Bryant said. "But I knew I was going to try and win with him. I started to substitute for him a couple of times, but Mal Moore (offensive coordinator) talked me out of it."

After scoring once and passing for the touchdown that put Alabama ahead 14-7, Lewis completed his brilliant first-half performance by running five times for 40 yards and shoveling an underhand pass to fullback Don Horstead behind the line for 13 more to set up Patrick's 11-yard run with 2:24 left in the half that gave the Crimson Tide a 21-7 lead.

However, Alabama needed field goals of 27 and 47 yards by Peter Kim, the latter with 7:11 left to play, to withstand a pair of Penn State touchdowns in the second half on Jon Williams' 5-yard run midway through the third period and Todd Blackledge's 13-yard pass to Kevin

VPI Rallies By Blue Devils

DURHAM (AP) —Virginia Tech coach Bill Dooley's team trailed Duke 21-14 with less than two minutes to play, and Dooley had a decision to make about which quarterback to use.

He had benched starter Todd Greenwood in the third period in favor of reserve Mark Cox, who rallied the Gobblers for one touchdown and led Tech on a long fourth period drive which ended with an interception deep in Duke territory.

Dooley chose to reinstate Greenwood and the choice paid off as he connected on a 49-yard scoring toss to wide receiver Allan Thomas with 33 seconds left and then hit tight end Mike Shaw on a 2-point conversion as the Gobblers shocked Duke 22-21.

"We decided to put Greenwood back in at the finish because Cox had just thrown an interception and we felt he might still be thinking about it," Dooley said. "Greenwood had had time to rest and he's also had more playing time. So we went with experience, too."

Duke had jumped out to a 21-0 lead early in the second quarter and Duke coach Red Wilson thought he had the game in hand before Greenwood's last-minute heroics.

"I never believed that they would score," Wilson said. "That a team could come back like they did, it's just a tough way to lose one."

In the final seconds, Duke drove to the Gobblers' 35 behind the passing of quarterback Ben Bennett, but Kenneth Harper's 51-yard field goal attempt was wide.

The Blue Devils, 3-2, built a 21-0 lead early in the second period as Bennett found split end Chris Castor for two touchdowns. Bennett completed 20 of 29 passes for 290 yards.

Virginia Tech, also 3-2, scored a touchdown late in the second quarter and added another when Cox combined with Tony McKee for a 36-yard scoring pass with 1:41 left in the third period.

Tar Heels Whip Deacons

AP Sports Writer

WINSTON-SALEM — Scott Stankavage threw two second-half touchdown passes Saturday, but North Carolina Coach Dick Crum praised his 12th-ranked Tar Heel's running game after defeating Wake Forest 24-7.

While Stankavage completed 11 of 19 passes for 113 yards, his touchdown passes were set up by the 368 yards rushing gained by Tyrone Anthony, Kelvin Bryant and crew.

"We've got three good tailbacks," Crum said. "We got Kelvin and Tyrone going today and didn't use Ethan (Horton) because of that. Next week, he may play more than them."

Crum said he wanted to give Bryant more playing time following his early season injuries.

"Kelvin's starting to come on," Crum said. "He had some misfortune in the first half with fumbles which cost him yardage. But give Wake credit. They were really hitting."

"Our defense played with good intensity and showed more signs that we are becoming a proud defensive fighting team," Wake Forest Coach Al Groh said. "If we make the touchdowns, make the field goals and don't fumble, we have a chance to win the game."

Mark Smith caught both scoring passes, the first a 26-yarder following a fumble by Wake quarterback Gary Schofield to snap a 7-7 tie.

North Carolina, 4-1, 1-0 in the ACC, marched 73 yards at the start of the fourth quarter with Bryant doing most of the work. When Bryant was stopped at the Wake Forest 2, Brooks Barwick kicked a 24-yard field goal with 11:50 left to extend the Tar Heel lead to 17-7.

After Walter Black blocked a Phil Denfeld field goal attempt, the Tar Heels marched 80 yards with Smith scoring on a 14-yard pass with 1:40 remaining.

In the second quarter, Wake Forest converted one of Bryant's fumbles into a touchdown on Michael Ramseur's 1-yard run to tie it at 7.

Sooners Upset Texas; Wisconsin Beats OSU

DALLAS (AP) — Freshman Marcus DuPree's 63-yard touchdown run, his first as a collegian, and senior Weldon Ledbetter's 59 and 15-yard scoring dashes, ignited the Oklahoma Sooners Saturday to a 28-22 upset of 13th-ranked and previously unbeaten Texas.

The Sooners, 3-2, shocked the favored Longhorns before a sellout crowd of 75,000 on a trick play featuring DuPree, the 210-pound, 6-foot-3 freshman from Philadelphia, Miss. DuPree faked a reverse, broke a tackle, and used his 4.5 speed to outrun the Texas secondary for the touchdown.

Ledbetter's third-quarter 59-yard scoring run was his longest as a Sooner, and he scored again on a 15-yarder in the fourth period for a 28-16 lead before the Longhorns rallied for a final score.

Texas scored twice around his final score. Longhorns quarterback Robert Brewer's passes set up John Walker's 3-yard touchdown run that had brought Texas to within 21-16, and he connected with Herkie Walls on a 27-yard touchdown pass to scare the Sooners.

The Longhorns, 3-1, tied it 7-7 on a 6-yard touchdown pass from Brewer to Walls, but the Sooners moved ahead again on Wilson's 3-yard touchdown run.

A 32-yard field goal by Texas' Raul Allegre cut the Longhorn deficit to 14-10 at halftime.

Scott Case intercepted a third period Brewer pass in Oklahoma territory and Ledbetter struck for a 21-10 Sooner advantage. He broke over left guard and bolted to the end zone untouched.

Texas made it close, driving 65 yards in 12 plays in the fourth period with Walker diving three yards for the touchdown with 14:57 to go to cut the Oklahoma lead to 21-16.

But, as it had done all day, Oklahoma rolled 80 yards in six plays for the game-winner. Fred Sims charged 51 yards to the Texas 22, and three plays later Ledbetter scored his second touchdown.

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Tailback John Williams ran 1 yard for a touchdown on Wisconsin's opening series Saturday, leading the Badgers to a 6-0 Big Ten football victory over Ohio State and ending 64 years of losing in Columbus.

It marked the first time Wisconsin won in 60 years of playing at Ohio Stadium. Wisconsin had lost 18 times and managed three ties in playing in the mammoth horseshoe.

Ohio State dropped its third straight home decision, the first time the Buckeyes had lost that many in a row at home since 1967. The Buckeyes' scoreless streak has now reached six quarters this season.

Wisconsin, 2-1 in the league and 3-2 overall, relied on its defense in heavy rain to send the Buckeyes to their third defeat in five games this year. Ohio State is 1-1 in the Big Ten.

Wisconsin quarterback Randy Wright opened the game with five straight completions, breaking a school record with 15 consecutive completions over two games. Greg Bohlig established the Wisconsin record with 12 straight completions over three games in 1974.

The Badgers drove 80 yards in their 14-play touchdown series. Wright connected on three straight passes for 41 yards in the drive. Ohio State failed to post its 87th straight home sellout with a little over 1,000 tickets unsold. Despite the poor weather, a crowd of 88,344 watched the contest.

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — Junior Mike Rozier ran for 212 yards and scored two crucial fourth-quarter touchdowns as seventh-ranked Nebraska held off pesky Colorado 40-14 Saturday in Big Eight Conference football.

Colorado, trailing 20-0, rallied for two touchdowns in the third quarter to cut the deficit to 20-14. Randy Essington flipped a 37-yard pass to running back Richard Johnson for the first score, and Johnson ran 24 yards for the other.

But Nebraska responded to the challenge, scoring two touchdowns just 17 seconds apart in the final period to clinch its fourth victory in five outings. The Cornhuskers first put togethers a 16-play, 91-yard drive, with Rozier catching a 6-yard pass from quarterback Turner Gill for the score with 8:26 left in the game.

On Colorado's next play from scrimmage, Essington's pass was tipped by linebacker Mike Knox and intercepted by Steve Damkroger, who returned 25 yards to the Colorado 11-yard line. Rozier scored on the ensuing play, ripping 11 yards off the right side, and the Huskers suddenly had a comfortable 33-14 lead with 8:09 remaining.

Colorado, which fell to 1-4 on the season, drove to the Nebraska 4-yard line in the closing seconds but failed to score.

Hostetler's two-yard bootleg was set up when, with 1:26 remaining, Boston College's George Radachowsky fumbled a punt at his own 19-yard line and West Virginia's Tom Bowman recovered.

The victory improved the Mountaineers' record to 4-1-0. Boston College drops to 3-1-1 with the loss.

Trailing 13-7 midway through the fourth quarter, Boston College tied the game with 8:25 left when reserve quarterback John Loughery flipped an eight-yard touchdown pass to Scott Nizolek on a fourth down fake field goal play.

West Virginia had taken a 13-6 lead in the third quarter when middle guard Dave Oblak intercepted BC quarterback Doug Flutie at the Eagle 35-yard line. Oblak ran into the end zone but the touchdown was wiped out by a holding penalty. Three plays later, freshman running back Tom Gray ran 2 yards for a touchdown.

Boston College knotted the game early in the third quarter on a 25-yard field goal by Kevin Snow. The three-pointer was set up when Vic Crawford intercepted a Hostetler pass.

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — All-American Herschel Walker rambled for three touchdowns and 149 yards to smash the Southeastern Conference career rushing record as fifth-ranked Georgia overpowered Mississippi 33-10 Saturday.

The Georgia defense frustrated a potent Ole Miss offense that punched out almost 400 yards in the first three quarters by coming up with eight turnovers, including seven pass interceptions.

Walker, a 221-pound junior, lifted his career total to 4,158 yards, breaking the former SEC standard set at 4,035 by former Louisiana State star Charles Alexander in four seasons beginning in 1975.

Walker's touchdowns came on runs of 3, 1 and 9 yards. The last two came in the second half.

The Bulldogs had broken a 10-10 deadlock on the final play of the first half when sophomore Kevin Butler kicked a 59-yard field goal, tying the SEC record set in 1969 against the Bulldogs by Cloyce Hinton of Ole Miss.

Butler also kicked a 47-yard field goal in the first period and Georgia's other score came in the third quarter when John Lastinger fired a 4-yard scoring pass to Norris Brown.

The victory lifted Georgia to 5-0 for the year and 2-0 in the SEC, and it was its 14th consecutive conference victory.

Ole Miss, which fell to 2-3 overall and 0-2 in the conference, scored its points in the second period on Todd Gatlin's 27-yard field goal and a 9-yard pass from Kent Austin to Michael Harmon.

UCLA 24
Arizona 24

Arizona freshman Max Zendejas had booted a 43-yard field goal with 33 seconds to go, apparently giving the Wildcats an upset victory, but Ramsey, who completed 29 of 43 passes for 345 yards, quickly moved the Bruins into position for Lee's game-tying three-pointer.

Both Ramsey and Arizona quarterback Tom Tunnicliffe fired two touchdown passes apiece in the wild game, played before a crowd of 50,133. Ramsey's 29 completions and 345 yards in passing are both single-game UCLA records.

Tunnicliffe hit 13 of his 20 throws for 178 yards.

The game was the conference opener for the Bruins, who are 4-0-1 overall. Arizona, a 16-point underdog, is 1-1-1 in league play and 1-2-1 on the season.

Arizona scored on its first two possessions, going 80 yards on eight plays each time. The Wildcats took a 7-0 lead after 5:54 of play when Phil Freeman scored on a 6-yard run one play after Courtney Griffin raced 50 yards.

The Bruins had an 80-yard, eight-play drive of their own to tie it 7-7, the touchdown coming on a 25-yard pass from Ramsey to Jojo Townsell. The Wildcats then made it 14-7 with Freeman scoring on a 4-yard pass from Tunnicliffe.

UCLA tied the score again with nine minutes to go in the second quarter, moving 80 yards on 14 plays and scoring on a 7-yard pass from Ramsey to Cormac Carney.

The Bruins took a 21-14 lead after just 3:01 of the second half when Frank Cephous tallied on a 9-yard run. The UCLA needed five plays to go 33 yards after Eugene Leoni recovered a fumble by Griffin.

Arizona tied the game again with 3:34 left in the third period on a 28-yard pass from Tunnicliffe to Jay Dobyns, which climaxed an eight-play, 87-yard march.

Texas Tech 3

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Quarterback Tom Jones passed for two touchdowns as ninth-ranked Arkansas whipped Texas Tech 21-3 Saturday in a Southwest Conference football game.

For the second week in a row, the Arkansas defense held tough. Tech managed only three first downs and 83 yards total offense in the first half.

Jones, who completed seven of nine passes for 145 yards in the first half, combined with Gary Anderson on a 74-yard scoring pass on the Razorbacks' second possession.

The next time the Razorbacks got the ball, they covered 83 yards in seven plays. On third and seven from the Arkansas 30, Jones rolled left away from pressure and hit Mark Mistler for 29 yards. On the next play, Jones kept on the option play, cut through a seam and manuevered 36 yards to the Tech 5. On first down, Jones handed off to Jessie Clark, who followed Steve Kort and Alfred Mohammed into the end zone standing up.

ECU Beats Duke To Win V'ball Tourney

East Carolina University whipped Duke in two matches — both of which went to three games — to win the fifth annual ECU Women's Volleyball Invitational on Saturday afternoon.

ECU, now 19-10, advanced to the finals by defeating UNC-Charlotte 7-15, 15-7, 17-15. Duke defeated ECU, 15-7, 15-6 to advance to the finals unbeaten in the double-elimination tournament.

The Lady Pirates, who played five matches Saturday, defeated Duke 15-10, 8-15, 15-6 to force a second match to determine the tournament championship. Duke won the first game, 15-8, but ECU rallied to win the last two, 16-14, 15-6, to take the title.

"In the first match against Duke we played well," East Carolina coach Lynn Davidson said. "The momentum shifted back and forth the entire game. At one point in the match we were really down and could have lost the tournament. But, we were very composed. We hung in there and came back to win."

Of the second match, Davidson said: "The momentum was the deciding factor. We had a couple of calls go our way. I'm very excited for our kids. It's time they finally took one (a tournament title)."

Davidson said one of the keys to the Lady Pirates' victory was their physical conditioning, which allowed them to stay fresh despite playing five matches — three of which went three games.

ECU opened play Saturday by defeating UNCC 15-3, 15-13. Duke stayed in step by downing William & Mary 12-15, 15-1, 15-7. UNCC then eliminated N.C. A&T 15-5, 15-6 and William & Mary 15-6, 15-5 to advance to the finals of the loser's bracket against ECU.

ECU placed three players on the all-tournament team: Stacey Weitzel, Johanna Fry and Diane Lloyd. Duke had two players on the team: Diane Brown and Sarah Gilbertson.

Late FG Lifts Irish By Miami

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Mike Johnston, a senior walk-on who didn't earn a scholarship until this season, was thinking only of "getting off a good kick. I kept looking at the tee. I never looked up."

When Johnston finally lifted his head, he saw his 32-yard field goal with 11 seconds left go sailing over the crossbar to lift 10th ranked and unbeaten Notre Dame to a 16-14 victory over 17th-ranked Miami of Florida.

Johnston was a linebacker in high school and never took kicking seriously "until I met Bob Thomas and his father, who is a soccer enthusiast."

Johnston and Thomas, also a former Notre Damer who kicks with the Detroit Lions of the National Football League, met in their hometown of Rochester, N.Y., but it wasn't Thomas who got Johnston to go to Notre Dame without a scholarship.

"My Dad graduated from here in 1958, so I was coming to Notre Dame from the very day I was born," said Johnston.

Johnston accounted for all nine of Notre Dame's second-half points and now is 9-of-9 for the season, providing the margin of victory in three of Notre Dame's four triumphs.

"He's a walk-on, and I'm sure glad I gave him a scholarship this year," said Irish coach Gerry Faust. "He's worth every penny of it."

It appeared as if Notre Dame's luck had run out when Blair Kiel's pass was intercepted by Rodney Bellinger in the end zone with 5:00 left. But the Irish eventually regained possession following a punt with 1:47 to play, then marched downfield on the passing of Kiel and the running of Phil Carter to set up Johnston's game-winning kick.

The game-winning field goal was Johnston's ninth in as many tries this season and dropped the 17th-ranked Hurricanes to a 4-2 mark.

Held scoreless in the first half when Notre Dame took a 7-0 lead after a fumble recovery deep in Miami territory, the Hurricanes took the second half kickoff and, with the aid of 34-yard pass interference play, tied the score on a 1-yard pass from Mark Richt to Glenn Dennison.

Notre Dame, unable to muster a sustained drive through much of the third quarter, regained the lead at 10-7 on Johnston's 29-yard kick with 2:53 in the period.

The Irish were forced to punt early in the fourth quarter and Miami took over on its own 11 following a clipping penalty. Richt completed a pair of short passes to backs Speedy Neal and Belk before unloading the 79-yard touchdown bomb to Belk, who grabbed the ball at the 30, eluded safety Dave Duerson, and raced into the end zone.

Notre Dame came back with a 42-field goal by Johnston and threatened to go ahead with a drive that carried to the Miami 6 before it was squelched by Rodney Bellinger's interception of a Blair Kiel pass in the end zone.

Purdue 34

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — Tony Eason hurled four touchdown passes, one a 50-yard bomb in the fourth quarter, as Big 10 leader Illinois rallied to defeat winless Purdue, 38-34, Saturday.

In a sizzling aerial duel with Purdue's Scott Campbell, Eason connected on 28 of 40 passes for 358 yards. Campbell completed 21 of 46 passes, three for touchdowns, and totalled 265.

Three of Purdue's touchdowns stemmed from Illinois fumbles and a fourth was set up in the final quarter on a pass interference infraction that gave the Boilermakers the ball on the one yard line. From there, Rod Carter scored his second touchdown and Purdue took a 34-31 lead.

Campbell herded Purdue to the Illinois 30 but his final pass attempt was caught out of the end zone by Derrick Taylor as time ran out.

Illinois boosted its record to 4-0 in the Big 10 and 5-1 for the season, while Purdue slumped to 0-3 in the conference and 0-5 for the season.

Illinois' barefoot kicker, Mike Bass, scored on a 33-year field goal but ended his streak at 13 consecutive field goals made later in the quarter when a 51-yard attempt was wide.

Indiana 20

Indiana appeared finished when Ron Hawley intercepted a pass by Indiana's Babe Laufenberg at the Hawkeyes' 3-yard line with just over two minutes to go. But the Hoosiers got the ball back when Iowa punted and started their final drive from their own 29-yard line.

Laufenberg, who set an Indiana single-game record with 390 yards passing, completed passes of 24 yards to John Boyd, 8 yards to Johnnie Salters, 14 yards to Duane Gunn and 17 yards to Terry Smith for a first-down at the Iowa 8 with 20 seconds to go. The Hoosiers, out of time-outs, managed only one more play, and a 6-yard completion to Scott McNabb left the ball at the 2-yard line as the game ended.

Louisville.....14

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Rod Moore ran for two scores and Tim Riordan accounted for two others Saturday night as Temple routed Louisville 55-14 in a college football game.

Moore scored on runs of 2 and 1 yards as the Owls, 3-3, built a 17-7 edge in the second quarter.

Riordan's 8-yard run with 4:54 left in the third period gave Temple a 34-14 lead.

Louisville, 2-3, held a brief 7-3 lead in the first quarter after Frank Minnifield returned a punt 88 yards for a touchdown. But Temple immediately responded with an 80-yard, seven-play scoring drive capped by Moore's first TD run, and the Owls were unstoppable thereafter.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — Jack Teichmann set two school kicking records to pace Southern Conference-leading Tennessee-Chattanooga to a 27-6 conference football victory Saturday night over East Tennessee State.

Teichmann, a German-born kicker who lives in Prattville, Ala., booted his eighth and ninth field goals of the season and converted his 43rd, 44th and 45th PATs to contribute to all of the Moccasins' scoring. The previous school record of eight field goals and 43 straight PATs were set by Joe Zeman who played his last season in 1980.

Reserve QB Helps Lead No. 1 Huskies Past Cal

SEATTLE (AP) — Tim Cowan came off the bench to replace an injured Steve Pelluer and fired three touchdown passes Saturday as No.1-ranked Washington crushed California's Golden Bears 50-7 in a Pacific-10 Conference football game.

Cowan, a senior, took over late in the second quarter after Pelluer suffered a mild concussion. At the time, Washington led 9-0 on three Chuck Nelson field goals and was struggling on offense.

Cowan, who started last season as Washington's regular quarterback but lost the job to Pelluer because of a thumb injury, threw for all of his touchdowns in the third quarter as Washington broke open the game with a 27-point explosion. He had scoring passes of 41 and 12 yards to Aaron Williams and a 15-yarder to Anthony Allen.

Against the Golden Bears, who came into the game with a 3-1 record, Washington finally looked worthy of its top ranking in the Associated Press weekly college poll. The Huskies, who have been No.1 for four straight weeks, sputtered here the two previous weeks against Oregon and San Diego State.

Washington, two-time defending Pac-10 champion, improved its season record to 5-0 and 3-0 in league play. The defeat left the Golden Bears with an 0-2 Pac-10 record.

It was the first tie for both teams since 1966, when Missouri fought Iowa State to a 10-10 deadlock and Kansas Statee struggled to a 3-3 standoff with Kansas.

Missouri grabbed a 7-0 lead in the first quarter on a 2-yard touchdown plunge by Tracey Mack. Kansas State, outplayed statistically most of the day, stayed alive with an intense defensive effort.

An 8-yard punt by Missouri quarterback-punter Marlon Adler put K-Statein motion on its touchdown drive late in the third period. On the first play of the fourth quarter, Missouri's Rod Skillman dropped Bogue for a 6-yard loss, setting up fourth-and-18 from the Missouri 33.

Vandy Upsets Florida; Maryland Rolls By 38-0

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Vanderbilt offensive tackle Rob Monaco recovered a fumble for a touchdown and quarterback Whit Taylor shredded the defense of No. 14 Florida for 287 aerial yards as the Commodores stunned the Gators 31-29 Saturday night.

The Commodores broke a 21-21 deadlock with a 30-yard field goal by Ricky Anderson in the third quarter and then scored the game-winner when Monaco fell on Vanderbilt split end Phil Roach's fumble in the end zone.

The Southeastern Conference victory gives Vanderbilt a 1-1 league mark and a 3-2 overall record — the Commodores best start since 1975. The win was only Vanderbilt's second in its last 40 SEC outings.

Florida, which suffered its second straight loss after three season-opening wins, is 1-2 in the SEC.

After Monaco's touchdown recovery, the Gators got back in the game on a 7-yard scoring pass from quarterback Wayne Peace to wide receiver Dwayne Dixon with 5:02 remaining.

Maryland.....38

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — Bobby Ross was wary of a letdown, but the Maryland coach needn't have worried as the Terps scored on five of their first six possessions and whipped mismatched Indiana State 38-0 Saturday.

"I was very concerned before the game," Ross confessed. "We didn't really know how good they were. They had won seven of their last eight, and we could have looking ahead to our Atlantic Coast Conference games."

"We were very sharp offensively in the first half," Ross said, but noted that he warned the Terps to continue playing hard.

Maryland maintained its intensity after the 35-0 first half, but a steady flood of substitutes kept the score down.

"Thank Coach Ross," said Coach Dennis Raetz of Indiana State. "He could have made it a lot worse. I respect him for the way he handled himself in the second half."

Ross went with his first offensive team on the initial series of the third quarter, when Jess Atkinson's 43-yard field goal completed the scoring, and then substiuted freely.

The decision to give the first team one more chance cost quarterback Boomer Esiason a Maryland record.

The junior quarterback had completed 13 of 14 passes in the first half, the best single-game completion percentage in the school's history.

But he misfired on his lone attempt of the second half, which left stand Bob Avellini's 1974 mark of 10-for-11.

"I wasn't concerned about the record," Ross said, "and I don't think Boomer was aware of it."

Levi Up By Four At LaJet

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — Front-running Wayne Levi, quietly establishing himself as one of golf's finer young players, compiled a solid, 4-under-par 69 and pulled away to a commanding, 4-stroke lead Saturday in the third round of the $350,000 LaJet Classic.

Levi, who has collected his fourth career title, more than $200,000 in winnings and very little attention this season, finished three trips over the 7,077-yard Fairway Oaks Golf and Racquet Club course in 203, 13 shots under par.

"With this big a lead, I don't want to blow it," Levi said. "I want to win this thing pretty bad."

Floyd, the PGA titleholder and No. 2 on the money list and the only man with any real chance to catch Stadler, left the tournament and returned to his home in Miami after his second round Friday. His score of 146 was, however, good enough to make it. He was unable to obtain airline connections to meet his Saturday morning tee time and was forced to withdraw.

"Well, I guess I did it again, didn't I?" Floyd said by telephone from his home. A similar situation developed in the Tournament Players Championship in Florida this spring, but Floyd was able to return in time for that tournament.

Floyd's withdrawal left Stadler with a lead of more than $57,000 with only two more tournaments to play this season. Floyd is not expected to compete in either.

Levi, who has led or shared the lead all the way, once held a 6-stroke advantage before making his lone bogey of the day on the 15th, where he put his second shot in a bunker.

South African Bobby Cole scored a two-putt birdie-4 on the final hole to finish off a 69 and take second alone at 207.

"I hadn't planned on playing here, but Laura (his wife, former LPGA pro Laura Baugh) convinced me I should give it a try and here I am in good position," Cole said.

Gary Koch, currently holding the 125th spot on the money list — the last qualifying position for next year's all-exempt tour — scrambled to a 70 in the mild, sunny weather and was next at 208.

"He's way ahead," Koch said, looking ahead to his chance of catching Levi in Sunday's final round. "He's already won this year. He's putting well. I know him well. When he gets in front, he's a very hard man to beat."

Howard Twitty, with a 69 in gentle breezes that offered a welcome contrast to Friday's howling gales, was tied with veteran Bruce Devlin at 207, a distant six shots back. Devlin matched par 72.

Stadler, seeking a fifth title of the season, was seven strokes away at 210 and was tied with Thomas Gray, Andy Bean, D.A. Weibring, Ed Fiori and Mark McCumber. Gray had the best round of the day, a 66.

Cards Nip Braves...

in the eighth. The Braves had runners at first and second with none out when Sutter relieved for St. Louis and pitched out of the jam, keeping the Cardinals just one run behind.

St. Louis tied the score against Garber in the bottom of the eighth when Porter walked with one out and raced to third on a single by George Hendrick. Rookie Willie McGee, who had struck out three times and made a costly three-base error which gave the Braves an early run, came through with a bouncer up the middle that forced Hendrick but allowed Porter to score the tying run.

One of Niekro's darting knucklers gave St. Louis a run in the first inning, when the Braves twice missed double plays that would have gotten them out of the inning. Tommy Herr opened with a walk and was forced at second by Oberkfell on what seemed a routine double play that the Braves simply failed to turn over fast enough.

Lonnie Smith singled Oberkfell to third. On a hit-and-run play, Hernandez lined a shot to shortstop that looked like another DP. But Rafael Ramirez trapped the ball and could only get the batter, keeping the inning alive. Then Porter walked and when the fourth ball bounced away from catcher Bruce Benedict for a wild pitch, Oberkfell scored.

The Braves bounced back in the third. Benedict opened with a walk and Niekro sacrificed him to second. After Claudell Washington struck out, Ramirez singled to center, scoring Benedict. The ball, acting like one of Niekro's knucklers, darted under the glove of McGee and rolled to the fence, allowing Ramirez to circle the bases as well.

The Cardinals tried to come back in the fourth when Porter opened with a double and took third on a passed ball. But Niekro shut the door, striking out Hendrick and McGee before walking Ozzie Smith and then getting pitcher John Stuper to end the inning.

In the Atlanta fifth, Glenn Hubbard opened with a single and dashed to third on Benedict's double. Then Niekro contributed a sacrifice fly, making it 3-1.

The Cards came at Niekro in the sixth when Hernandez opened with a single and Porter doubled into the right field corner. Hernandez scored on the hit but Porter was out trying to stretch it into a triple. That meant followup hits by Hendrick and Ozzie Smith were wasted.

In the eighth, the Braves had runners had at first and second with none out, hoping to add to their lead. But Sutter, ace of the Cardinal bullpen, came on to strike out Bob Horner. Dale Murphy was out trying to steal and Jerry Royster bounced back to the mound.

Baugh with 13:52 remaining that cut the Alabama lead to 24-21.

Two touchdown passes by Blackledge — the first teaming with Curt Warner on a 69-yarder to tie the score 7-7 — gave Blackledge 17 for the year, breaking the single-season Penn State record he shared with John Hufnagel (1972) and Chuck Fusina (1977).

The victory boosted Alabama's record to 5-0 and gave Coach Bear Bryant his 320th coaching triumph, including a 4-0 mark against Penn State's Joe Paterno. Penn State is 4-1 and had won seven games in a row since losing to Alabama 31-16 last Nov. 14 in the first regular-season clash between two of college football's traditional powers.

DAVIDSON (AP) — Fullback Bob Miller ran for three touchdowns and freshman quarterback Jay Poag ran 74 yards on his first collegiate rushing attempt as Davidson beat Guilford 35-22 in college football Saturday.

While Miller scored from 5 yards and two 1-yard bursts, halfback Leonard Walker helped power Davidson's drives, gaining a career-high 191 yards in 26 carries, including a 66-yard touchdown.

Poag, normally the third string quarterback, took his first snap as a collegiate player and ran Davidson's longest touchdown from scrimmage this season as the Wildcats went to 2-3.

Guilford's Earl Clinton led the Quakers, 3-3, hitting 20 of 33 pass attempts for 338 yards and two touchdowns.

GREENSBORO (AP) — Kevin Joiner ran a touchdown and passed to Dennis Mahan for two others in the last nine minutes Saturday to rally Hampton Institute to a 19-9 college football victory over winless North Carolina A&T.

The Aggies, 0-4, took a 3-0 lead with 10:39 left on Aaron Herring's 30-yard field goal, but Oliver James returned the kickoff 70 yards to the A&T 21, and Joiner scored from the 1.

A&T took a 9-3 lead with 4:46 remaining when Keith James hit Jess Britt on a 46-yard scoring pass, but Joiner came back to hit Mahan on a 50-yard bomb on third-and-8 with 3:12 left to give the Pirates the lead for good.

Greco's 6 FGs Spark Auburn By Kentucky

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — Junior Al Del Greco set a Southeastern Conference record with six field goals for all the Auburn scoring in an 18-3 SEC victory over winless Kentucky on Saturday.

The Wildcats' only points also came on a field goal, a 20-yarder by Chris Caudell.

Del Greco hit on kicks of 22, 28, 26, 20, 39 and 38 yards to surpass by one the mark held by Auburn's George Portela, set in 1977, Tennessee's Alan Duncan, in 1978, and Florida's Brian Clark, in 1980.

Del Greco missed another attempt from 39 yards and the seven tries also set a conference record.

Auburn held a 9-0 edge when Caudell kicked his 3-pointer, but the Auburn defense did not let Kentucky get close to scoring until after Del Greco's other three field goals.

With less than a minute left, Kentucky quarterback Randy Jenkins completed a 51-yard pass to Allan Watson inside the Auburn 10, but Auburn safety Dennis Collier intercepted at the 5.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Quarterback Kelly Lowrey ran for one touchdown and passed for two more as Florida State demolished Southern Illinois 59-8 in college football action Saturday night.

Lowrey, who scored Florida State's first touchdown on a one-yard sneak, was one of seven Seminoles who scored TDs as Coach Bobby Bowden emptied his bench against the underdog Salukis.

Florida State, an independent, improved its record to 4-1 in front of a Doak Campbell Stadium homecoming crowd of 51,232, while the Division I-AA Salukis of the Missouri Valley Conference dropped to 3-3.

Lowrey, who completed 12 of 22 passes for 217 yards, started, but alternated with Blair Williams who also threw for two touchdowns while completing 7 of 8 passes for 144 yards.

Kansas 24

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Ernest Anderson rushed 270 yards for Oklahoma State, but Kansas quarterback Frank Seurer's passing forced the Cowboys to settle for a 24-24 tie in a Big Eight Conference football opener Saturday.

After Anderson broke open the scoring with a 58-yard touchdown run in the first quarter, Cowboy quarterback Ike Jackson launched the Oklahoma State passing game with a pair of touchdown strikes that gave the Cowboys a 24-10 halftime lead.

But Seurer's aerial attack, including the game-tying 80-yard touchdown pass to Bob Johnson, buoyed the Kansas offense and gave the Jayhawks a 1-2-2 season record.

Minnesota 21

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — Northwestern University broke a 38-game Big Ten losing streak Saturday as freshman quarterback Sandy Schwab ran for one touchdown and passed for another to lead with Wildcats to a 31-21 victory over error-prone Minnesota.

Just two weeks ago the Wildcats snapped a 34-game losing streak, a major college record. The last time they won a Big Ten game was Nov. 19, 1977, when they defeated Illinois 21-7.

Ricky Edwards rambled 147 yards in 28 carries through a porous Gopher defense and scored one touchdown for Northwestern, which raised its record to 1-3 in the conference and 2-4 overall.

The Wildcats came from a 21-3 deficit by scoring three touchdowns within a six minute span midway through the game.

With a comfortable lead and 1:01 left in the half, Minnesota chose to punt at its own 44. But center Steve Mulholland's snap sailed over punter Paul Blanchard's head for a 38-yard loss to the Minnesota six. On the next play, Schwab tossed a scoring pass to John Harvey. Rick Salvino's kick made it 21-10.

The Wildcat offense came out roaring in the second half, moving 80 yards in eight plays with Edwards capping the drive with a 20 yard scamper around left end untouched for the score to make it 21-17.

Three plays later, Mike Guendling picked off a Mike Hohensee pass and ran it back 22 yards before fumbling in the end zone where teammate Rick Raffin fell on it for the go-ahead score.

Raffin then stopped another drive, intercepting a Hohensee pass and returning it to the Minnesota 27. After gains by Edwards of 14 and 17 yards, Schwab scored on a keeper from one yard out. Salvino's kick made it 31-21.

BYU 40
New Mexico 12

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Fullback Casey Tiumalu scored two touchdowns as Brigham Young parlayed four New Mexico turnovers into a 26-point third quarter en route to a crucial 40-12 Western Athletic Conference victory Saturday.

Tiumalu scored on runs of 10 and 4 yards to cap the Cougars' offensive onslaught in the decisive third quarter when New Mexico could do litt and BYU could do nothing wrong.

BYU, which moved into a tie with New Mexico for the WAC lead at 2-1, also got an 18-yard mouchdown run by junior quarterback Steve Young, a 30-yard field goal by Kurt Gunther and a safety in the third period. The scores were set up by three New Mexico fumbles and an interception. BYU is 3-2 overall.

Michigan St. 17

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — All-American wide receiver Anthony Carter set up two of Michigan's three first-half touchdowns and scored one himself in the third quarter as the Wolverines rolled to a 31-17 Big Ten football victory over winless Michigan State Saturday.

Carter's 14-yard TD grab gave him 31 for his career, breaking the Big Ten record formerly held by Indiana's Jade Butcher.

When Michigan State was unable to move on its first possession, punter Ralf Mojsiejenko boomed a 45-yard punt that Carter gathered in on his own 33 and snaked upfield to the Spartans' 17. Four plays later, Michigan quarterback Steve Smith ran it in from 2 yards out for a touchdown.

Michigan tailback Lawrence Ricks gave the Wolverines a 14-0 lead with a 7-yard touchdown run early in the second quarter.

The next time Michigan got the ball, Smith and Carter teamed up for a 61-yard gain to the Michigan State 17 on a key third-and-eight. Moments later, Smith tossed a 7-yard TD strike to tight end Greg Dunaway to complete an 80-yard, 8-play drive that made it 21-0.

The victory left Michigan 3-2 for the season, 3-0 in the Big Ten. Three of the Spartans' five defeats have been against conference foes.

Clemson Routs Cavaliers, 48-0

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — Clemson's Tigers, using a devastating rushing attack led by Cliff Austin, Jeff McCall and Chuck McSwain, crushed Virginia's winless Cavaliers 48-0 Saturday night in a nationally televised Atlantic Coast Conference football game.

Austin, McCall and McSwain all rushed for more than 100 yards and each scored as the Tigers, 1-0 in the ACC and 3-1-1 overall, continued their mastery over the Cavaliers, playing their first-ever home game at night. Clemson is now 22-0 against Virginia since the series began in 1955.

Clemson's virtually impenetrable defense bottled up Virginia, which didn't manage a first down until the 13:31 mark of the second quarter. Virginia, 0-5, has lost eight in a row 18 of its last 19 games. The Cavaliers are 0-3 in the ACC.

The Tigers, the defending national champions, sputtered on their first two possessions but then began an assault on the Virginia defense that saw them score virtually at will in the game televised by the Turner Broadcasting System with Austin scoring twice and setting up a field goal.

Austin's 1-yard sweep for a touchdown capped a 12-play, 66-yard drive that gave Clemson its first score with 4:28 left in the first quarter.

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP) — Furman running back Stanford Jennings covered 114 yards on 19 carries Saturday, making his way into his school's record books and pacing his team to a crucial 12-6 Southern Conference victory over Western Carolina.

Western Carolina quarterback Ronnie Mixon, who completed 16 of 33 passes, was intercepted three times by the Furman defense. Western Carolina also suffered four fumbles.

Jennings, a junior, moved into third place on the school's all-time rushing list. He has a total of 1,977 yards in career rushing.

Late Score Lets Rose Top Bruins

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

The Bruins, winners of just one game this fall, fought hard all the way and were in the lead for most of the second half thanks to two field goals by Neal Ferrell and a touchdown catch at the end of the half by Mike Ward.

Rose took the initial lead in the game when Jay Mahoney recovered quarterback Kenny Kirkland's fumble in the end zone and Willie Levitt added the PAT kick.

After Hunt came back to score on a school record 40-yard field goal by Ferrell in the second period, Levett then outdid that with a new Rose High record field goal of 48-yards for a 10-3 lead.

But just seconds before the half ended, Ward got loose in the secondary for a 43-yard touchdown reception from Darren Bynum that tied the score at halftime, 10-10.

In the third period, another Ferrell field goal, of 29 yards, put Beddingfield up, and despite several Rose thrusts at the end zone, it began to look like the Rampants might not be able to score again.

But thanks to a 22-yard reverse by Edward Frazier, the Rampants got back into good field position, and Lee scored inside the two-minute mark to give Rose the victory.

"I feel real good to be able to pull that one out," a very relieved Rampant Coach Ronald Vincent said. "I just hope that this might be an indication that things might be changing for the better."

Vincent said that while perhaps Rose didn't really deserve to win that the Rampants had lost some games this year he felt they did deserve to win. "So maybe now, we're going to get the breaks for a while."

The coach said he thought the Rose defense played well — most of the time. "The defensive backfield had a very good game, with the exception of that one play when they scored."

On that play, Vincent said that back Roswell Streeter had the receiver well covered, but then turned and tripped himself, leaving Ward wide open for the catch and the ensuing touchdown run.

"But we're still not making the big play," Vincent said. "We're so close. But we're just missing one block, or missing one assignment, of dropping one pass. It makes it tough to win like that.

"I really don't think we've made good use of our talent yet, either," he added.

Early on, the Rampants appeared to be on the verge of making a runaway of it. They stopped Beddingfield cold the first time it had the ball and marched to a touchdown on the first Rose possession.

Taking over on their own 43 after a punt, Rose moved in 13 plays for the score. After grinding it out on short plays to the 33, Kirkland hit Frazier for 15 yards to the 18. Four plays later, Reggie Smith banged for four yards on fourth and two at the ten, setting up first and goal from the six.

On first down, Cyrus Blackwell got five of those, to the one. Kirkland, however, fumbled the next snap from center, and the ball bounced into the end zone and a crowd of linemen from both teams.

Beddingfield came right back and drove back down the field, but were finally stalled at the Rose 42. They then held and got it back at the Bruin 48, driving for their first field goal.

Facing fourth and nine at the Rose 38, Bynum hit Greg Bridgers for those nine yards to keep the drive alive. Then, after Ricky Barnes picked up 11 yards on two carries to the 18, he was thrown for a loss of two before Craig Dupree sacked Bynum for a ten-yard loss. The Bruins got back six of those, but faced a fourth and 16, so they called on Ferrell.

The junior specialist booted it through with just a few yards to spare from 40 yards away, putting Beddingfield on the board, 7-3, with 6:22 left in the half.

Rose came quickly back with its own three-pointer. Lee got the Rampants into good field position with a 43-yard return of the kickoff to the Beddingfield 38. But after reaching the 26, Lee was thrown for a five-yard loss on second down, and Rose had to settle for Levitt's 48-yard kick that just settled beyond the cross-bar for the three-points.

After Dupree had again sacked Bynum, the Bruins faced a third and 19 at their own 17, but Rose allowed Johnny Hines to burst through the middle for 27 and a first down. Two plays later, Bynum hit Ward for nine to the Rose 43. From there on third down Ward cut across to the middle of the field and when Streeter fell down, it was an easy run after he pulled in the pass from Bynum for the 43-yard scoring romp. Ferrell's kick tied it at 10-10 with 41 seconds left in the half.

Rose moved from its own 44 to the Bruin 31 before being thrown for a loss and seeing a fourth down pass fall incomplete.

Beddingfield later got it back on its own 26 following the first of three interceptions the Bruins made. Bynum hit Ward for 12 and a first down and Hines broke throught the middle for 19 yards and a first down at the Rose 40. Hines appeared to fumble before he was down with Rose pouncing on the ball, but the officials ruled the ball dead on the play.

Hines added 13 yards two play later, but the drive finally petered out after reaching the 11. Facing a fourth and four, Ferrell again got the call and his 29-yarder was true, giving the Bruins a 13-10 lead with 4:41 left in the quarter.

Rose, meanwhile, had threat after threat go by the boards until the final — and fatal — one.

First, after the kickoff, the Rampants moved from their own 37 to the Beddingfield 40 where they had a first down, but ended up losing four yards on the series.

On the final play of the third period, Battle Wall recovered a Bruin fumble at the Beddingfield 18, but again, Rose lost ground, and a 47-yard field goal attempt by Levitt never got over ten feet off the ground.

Midway through the final period, Rose got it back at its own 43 and drove to the Bruin 24 before losing it on an interception.

On the first play, Frazier got the ball on the reverse, broke a couple of tackles and sped to the 17 before he was finally knocked out of bounds. One pass from there fell incomplete.

But on second down, Lee took the pitch from Kirkland and headed around the right side. He got one block at the corner, broke a couple of tackles and speed the 17 yards into the end zone with 1:49 left for the score.

"Donnell made a tremendous run on that last play," Vincent said. "He wanted to score, and he did."

Lee, who had been out of practice most of the week with a leg injury, did not start and didn't see action until the second quarter of the game.

The win kept the Rampants in the thick of the Big East race, now 2-1 in the league and 3-3 overall. Beddingfield falls to 0-3 in the conference and 1-4-1 overall.

The game was reminiscent of the one the Rampants played at Beddingfield two years ago, also winning in the closing minutes of the contest, 7-6. At that time the Rampants were ranked No. 1 in the state, but proceeded to lose three of their next four and lose the conference championship.

Hoping to avoid a repeat of that Rose travels to meet first place — and highly surprising — Kinston next Friday night.

Looking For Room

Surprising Panthers Down Jags, 13-0

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

BETHEL — North Pitt ended 11 years of frustration against Farmville Central Friday evening and it was a sweet victory indeed for Coach B.T. Chappell and his Panthers.

North Pitt, the surprise team in the Eastern Carolina Conference this year, used a 63-yard punt return by Alvin Grimes and two fumbles recoveries in the second half by Harold Northern to down Farmville, 13-0.

"I'm just feeling relieved right now," Chappell said after the win, North Pitt's first ever over the Jaguars. "I'm emotionally drained."

The win was the Panthers' third straight and upped their record to 4-1-2 on the season. The victory also assured the Panthers of a share of the ECC lead and set up a showdown with Ayden-Grifton next Friday.

Ayden-Grifton downed Greene Central, 21-6, Friday night and is tied for the ECC lead with North Pitt at 3-0. The winner will take over sole possession of first in the ECC.

SouthWest Edgecombe, which had an open date this week, is at 2-0 and has yet to play either North Pitt or Ayden-Grifton.

"I bet my heart started (pounding) at 12 noon today," Chappell said. "I was going berserk."

So, too, were some of his players. Said Chappell: "I had some boys today — talk about tension and all — who were complaing of upset stomaches, and some were nauseated."

When the game ended, it was Farmville Central coach Gilbert Carroll who was sick. Carroll, who coached despite having the flu, had little to say following the loss.

"I'll just be glad when it's all over. I sure will," he said after seeing his Jaguars fall to 1-6-0 overall and 0-3 in the league.

North Pitt, which had never beaten Farmville in 11 previous games, took a 6-0 lead without its offense taking the field. After the Panther defense stopped Farmville on its intitial possession, Grimes took an Alan Wooten punt at the 37 and raced nearly untouched down the left sideline for the touchdown.

"I was hollering for them (his players) to get out of the way," Chappell said.

It was the second punt Grimes has returned for a touchdown this season. The 5-10, 160-pound junior, leads the ECC in punt returns.

Neither team managed to get inside the others' 40 the rest of the first half. Between them, there was only one first down — by Farmville — the remainder of the half as the game turned into a punting duel.

Wooten, the league's No. 1 ranked punter, punted the ball five times in the first half and Ken Whitehurst, the No. 2 punter in the league, punted three times.

For the game, Wooten, who was a doubtful starter because of an ankle injury, punted seven times for a 39.7 average. Whitehurst, who is also the Panthers' starting quarterback, punted five times for a 40.6 average.

The second half, much of which was played in a fog so dense it was impossible to see the opposing sideline, saw more of the same as the teams exchanged punts on their opening possessions. After North Pitt punted for a second time, the Jaguars began their only drive of night.

Farmville used a flea flicker to march from its 49 to the Panther 17 before fumbling. With first and 15 from the North Pitt 42 as the final period began, quarterback Jerry Foreman passed to wide receiver Reggie Willoughby in the left flat.

Willoughby pitched back to Tony Hargrove to set the flea flicker in motion. Hargrove gained 13 yards before being stopped at the North Pitt 28. Tailback Wesley Carmon then gained seven yards to the 21 — the deepest penetration of the night for Farmville.

However, on the next play Carmon fumbled — his third of the evening — and defensive lineman Ricky Wooten recovered at the 22.

It was the first of three Farmville fumbles in the final period. Farmville fumbled five times in all, losing three.

North Pitt managed two first downs following the fumble before punting. The Panthers got the ball back seconds later, however, when Foreman, starting for the injured Sam Sumrell, fumbled at the Farmville 40 and Northern scooped the ball up and returned it 32 yards to the FC eight.

Fullback Dennis Bradley carried three straight times, going over from two yards out on the third carry. William Rollins kicked the PAT and North Pitt led, 13-0, with 4:11 to go in the game.

Dennis Tyson returned the ensuing kickoff 25 yards to the North Pitt 43 and Farmville drove to the 26 before North Pitt's Ricky Hines stripped Foreman of the ball.

Northern picked up the fumble and rumbled 23 yards before being run down at the FC 37 as the Jaguars saw their last chance of avoiding their second shut out of the season elude them.

North Pitt, which has given up an average of 158.8 yards total offense this year, second best in the ECC, held the Jaguars to 122 yards — 93 rushing and 29 passing.

The Panther offense, on the other hand, managed even less yardage. North Pitt had 112 yards total offense — 108 rushing and four passing.

"I respect their defense," Chappell said. "They've got a good defense. You look at the stats and you see who they've played. Four of the five teams they lost to (before tonight) are undefeated."

Chappell also had praise for his defense, which was led by Rodney Lawrence with 11 tackles and Grimes with nine.

"Our defense has carried us all year," Chappell said. "We were trying to stop their fullback and we had a man assigned to Carmon all night."

The strategy worked. The Panthers limited FC fullback James Moore to 49 yards in 14 carries did an even better job on Carmon, a 9.8 sprinter, holding him to a minus six yards.

Hargrove led Farmville with 67 yards in eight carries. North Pitt was led by Bradley, who rushed for 62 yards in 17 carries. Bradley now has rushed for 623 yards this season — tops in the ECC.

"We've played well all year and people still don't recognize us as having a very good football team," Chappell said. "Maybe this will convince some people."

Regardless of how good they are, the Panthers are dedicated. "We don't have school Monday and I was going to

Ross Has Broken Ankle

BETHEL — North Pitt offensive tackle Tony Ross broke his ankle in the Panthers' 13-0 win over Farmville Central Friday night and is lost for the season.

Ross, a 6-0, 205-pound junior who plays left tackle, was injured with 5:15 remaining in the first period and was taken to the hospital by the Bethel Rescue Squad.

North Pitt coach B.T. Chappell said Ross was to have undergone surgery Saturday morning.

"It's a setback for our offensive line," Chappell said. "I told you earlier in the season we were having problems on the left side of the offensive line, but against Greene Central we ran the left side behind Ross and (guard) Reggie Williams."

Ross is expected to recover fully and be able to play next year.

Chargers Top Rams, 21-6

SNOW HILL — Quarterback Joey Kennedy, who was involved in an accident while driving his car prior to the game, tossed two touchdown passes to key Ayden-Grifton by Greene Central, 21-6, Friday night in an Eastern Carolina Conference football game.

Kennedy's car reportedly rolled over with him and reserve quarterback Billy Wiggins in it before the game. Neither player was hurt. "It shook them up, though," A-G coach Dixon Sauls said.

Kennedy hit on five of 16 passes for 82 yards, including a 28-yard scoring pass to Doug Coley and an 11-yard pass to Quentin Warren in the second half that carried A-G to the win.

Kennedy, the league's leading passer, has now thrown 88 passes without an interception. Kennedy has completed 43 of 88 for 525 yards and seven TDs in this, his first year at quarterback.

The victory left the Chargers at 6-0-0 overall and 3-0 in the league. The Chargers are tied with North Pitt for the lead in the ECC. A-G plays host to North Pitt this Friday.

Ayden-Grifton used a balanced running attack and Kennedy's passing for the win. Sophomore tailback Kelvin Harris and senior fullback Jarvis Koonce each rushed for 76 yards and sophomore tailback Malcolm Worthington had 69 yards. Ayden-Grifton rushed for 242 yards total.

"All the backs ran extremely hard," Sauls said.

The Charger defense, meanwhile, continued to shine, holding the Rams to 86 yards total offense — 62 rushing and 24 passing. It was the third time this season A-G has held an opponent under 100 yards total offense.

Leading the defense was linebackers Chuck Smithwick and Koonce and lineman Jeffrey Hardy.

The Chargers also suffered their second straight week of over 100 yards in penalties. A-G was whistled for 11 penalties for 112 yards against the Rams. Last week, A-G had 135 yards in penalties against C.B. Aycock.

Ayden-Grifton took the opening kickoff and drove down the field to take an early 8-0 lead on a 15-yard run by Worthington. Worthington keyed the drive with a 15-yard run earlier in the march.

Worthington ran for the two points to give A-G an 8-0 lead with 7:25 left in the first period.

Neither team managed to score the rest of the first half. The Rams, now 0-5-2 overall and 0-3 in the league, drove to the A-G 14 on their second possession but the march fizzled out.

The Chargers were not so lucky in the third period. The Rams took the ball on their 40 and used a 10-yard pass from quarterback Elmer Dixon to Anthony Thompson to spark a 60-yard march.

Dixon capped the drive with a one-yard quarterback sneak with 5:46 left to cut the deficit to 8-6. The pass for two failed.

A-G came back immediately to re-establish control. Driving down the field behind the running of its three backs, A-G scored on its next possession on a 28-yard pass from Kennedy to Coley. Tyrone Gay kicked the PAT and A-G led, 15-6, with 3:04 left in the period.

A-G's final TD came midway through the final period when Kennedy hit Warren from 10 yards out. The kick was blocked.

"I was really pleased with the way the kids played," Greene Central coach Spence Grantham said. "We were really down after the North Pitt game and I wasn't exactly sure how we'd respond."

Late Score Nips Vikings

MOREHEAD CITY — Quarterback Lonnie Mister passed to Clem Sanford with 35 seconds left to lift West Carteret to a 12-7 win over D.H. Conley Friday night in the opening Coastal Conference game for both teams.

The Patriots trailed, 7-6, when they stopped the Conley on downs at the WC 27 with about two minutes left.

Mister led West Carteret down the field with six pass completions, the final one a 22-yarder to Sanford. The pass for the two-point conversion failed, but West Carteret led, 12-7.

The Vikings managed to get to about midfield after the ensuing kickoff before time ran out. The loss drops DHC to 0-5-1 overall. West Carteret is now 4-2 on the season.

The game was scoreless at the end of the first period, but Conley took the lead in the second period when tailback Mitchell Cox capped a long drive with a two-yard run. Mike Long kicked the PAT and DHC led, 7-0, with 3:31 to go in the half.

It stayed that way until the final period when the Patriots closed within a point on an 84-yard run by Theodore Courman. The pass for the two points was no good, but the Patriots trailed only 7-6.

DHC took the ensuing kickoff and marched to the West Carteret 27 before being stopped on downs and giving Patriots the ball back for their winning touchdown drive.

On that final Conley drive, the Vikes had a play that went down to the WC 2, only to have it called back by a penalty.

Cox led DHC in rushing with 91 yards in 16 carries. Courman led West Carteret on the ground with 120 yards in eight carries.

The Vikings outgained the Patriots in total offense, 227 to 180. DHC had 154 yards rushing and 83 passing. The Patriots had 104 rushing and 76 passing.

Roanoke Mistakes Turn Into 54-0 Bertie Victory

WINDSOR — Bertie High School, unbeaten in six games now, took advantage of Roanoke fumbles and interceptions to roll up a 54-0 victory over the Redskins Friday night.

The victory, combined with Washington's 24-0 win over Ahoskie, sets up a clash between the two unbeatens next week in Washington.

Bertie jumped out into a 19-0 lead in the first quarter, never having to drive more than 20 yards thanks to Roanoke mistakes.

The first came just minutes into the game when Roanoke fumbled at its own 13 after taking the initial kickoff. The first play after that Bertie gained six yards, then Delno Jones took it the final seven yards. Chris Garmon kicked the PAT for a 7-0 lead.

Only two minutes later, Bertie was back in the end zone. After an interception at the Roanoke 12, Bertie pushed it in with Willie Ryan scoring from three yards away for a 13-0 lead.

Then, after another interception at the Redskin 20, Garmon passed 20 yards to Vernon Speller, running it to 19-0 at the end of the quarter.

The Falcons added two more scores in the second quarter. Ryan scored both of those, on runs of five and 13 yards. Both scores came on drives following Redskin punts.

Bertie got the second half off with a bang, as Darrell Ruffin ran the opening kickoff back 85 yards for still another Falcon touchdown. Four minutes later, a Redskin fumble was recovered at the Roanoke 24, setting up a one-yard plunge by Jones to up the lead to 47-0.

Roanoke had one opportunity to score, completing a pass in the end zone, but a penalty on the play nullified the talley and Roanoke failed to threaten again.

The loss dropped the Redskins to 3-4 overall and 2-3 in league play. The Redskins play host to Tarboro on Friday.

Lady Pirates In Three Wins

East Carolina's Lady Pirates, seeking to win their own ECU Invitational Volleyball Tournament, won three matches and lost one as round robin play for the first half of the tournament was completed Friday.

Duke also finished the first day's play 3-1, but still gained top seeding for Saturday's round. The Lady Blue Devils lost their first match, falling to defending champion UNC Charlotte, 15-9, 15-13, then beat William & Mary, 15-4, 15-13, and topped North Carolina A&T, 15-1, 15-4. They finished that up with a 15-12, 15-13 win over East Carolina.

The Lady Pirates beat A&T, 15-5, 15-2, and took UNCC, 15-5, 17-15. They added a 15-17, 15-6, 15-5 win over William & Mary to complete its round.

UNCC took A&T, 15-5, 15-12 and beat William & Mary, 15-2, 15-8. The other game saw William & Mary top A&T, 15-5, 15-12.

Following completion of the first round, the double elimination bracket's first round game was played, with William & Mary downing A&T, 15-10, 13-15, 15-8 to set up the rest of the bracket for the first round. In other play to start the double elimination event, Duke was to face A&T and UNCC met the Pirates.

"We struggled a lot (Friday)," Coach Lynn Davidson said following ECU's first round. "It just wasn't a good day for us. In every game there was always something that wasn't working.

"I'm looking forward to (Saturday). I feel it's going to be a new day for us. We have a tough opening match, but we still have a good chance to win."

High School Wins First In Six Years

ENSIGN, Kan. (AP) — It was cause for flag-waving and horn-blowing in this tiny southwest Kansas town. Ensign High School won a football game — its first in six years.

"I took them (the team) on three tours through town with my red lights and siren going," said Dave Foskuhl, deputy Gray County sheriff. "I must have had 30 cars behind me. When you've got a town with a population of 209, and you've got 30 cars behind you, you know it's something big."

Foskuhl led the Ensign team on the 12-mile victory drive from Montezuma, where the Wildcats broke a 48-game losing streak with a 58-56 triple overtime win.

It was the first win for the eight-man football team since a 14-6 season-opening victory over Fargon, Okla., in 1977.

"I go to every game, and I've never seen anything like it,' Foskuhl said. "The coach just got down on his knees and cried. The players were crying, the cheerleaders were crying, the fans were crying.

"Those Montezumas were crying, but that was for a different reason."

Fullback Danny Singhisen ended the marathon game when he scored a touchdown and added the extra point in the third overtime. Although Montezuma answered with a touchdown, Singhisen stopped a 2-point conversion try a yard short of the end zone to hand the Wildcats the victory.

The Wildcats were down to 10 players after two injuries earlier this year. The squad is made up from the school's enrollment of 21 students.

The team suffered another blow when James Snedecor, a senior running back, was hurt in the first quarter.

times, but lost only one and also had one interception.

Baker, according to Emory, was not in top shape, but was forced into the game when starter Jimmy Walden suffered a sprained ankle.

The coach also had great praise for Stewart. "He had a great week in practice. He's a fine passer and had a fine game."

Richmond's Dal Shealy heaped praise on the Pirates. "This was the bes ECU team that we have faced since we've been at Richmond. They have more team speed on both offense and defense than any other team we have faced this season and they have some excellent talent in all areas. Jody Schulz just keeps getting better and better."

The Spiders appeared to be ready to show the Pirates a battle on their first possession, driving steadily down the field in short bursts, excepting a 24-yard pass from Van McLaughlin to Clayton White that put the ball on the ECU 24. But the Pirates then firmed up and Roach kicked a 20-yard field goal for an early 3-0 lead with 8:41 left in the first period.

That seemed to inspire the Pirate offense, which scored on its next two possessions. Taking over at its 18, the Pirates drilled in downfield in 10 plays, sparked by a 17-yard scramble by Stewart, and a 36-yard pass from Stewart to Carlton Nelson. The latter put the ball on the Spider 11. Four plays later, Byner went over the top for the final yard and Jeff Heath kicked the first of five PATs for a 7-3 lead with 4:21 left.

After holding the Spiders, the Pirates got it back on their own 37 and helped by a Stewart pass to Nichols for 16 yards, moved over midfield. Jimmy Walden broke away for 13 to the 31, and Stewart hit Stefon Adams for 15 more to the 15. Walden went through the middle for 11, and then Baker took a pitchout around the left side for the final four.

Both teams had threats over the next few minutes, with Richmond moving to the ECU 44 before being forced to punt. East Carolina later reached the Spider 40 before punting it away.

But on the next series, the Pirates drove 67 yards on just four plays to make it 21-3 at the half. The first three plays moved it ot the Spider 46, and on the next play, Stewart hit Nichols on the fly for the score, closing out the first half.

Richmond had two early second half threats thanks to fumbles. They recovered one at the ECU 27, but a fumble on an attempted field goal cost them the ball. One play later they got it back on another fumble at the 39, but after reaching the three, McLaughlin fumbled and Hal Stephens recovered for ECU.

Another ECU fumble, this at the UR 43, set up the second Spider field goal. Napoleon DuBois hit White for 12 yards on first down, then went to him again for nine to the ECU 32. A pass interference penalty against the Pirates helped overcome a clip against the Spiders, putting the ball on the ECU 18. But the defense again dug in, and Roach kicked a 34-yarder with 1:02 left in the third, making it 21-6.

East Carolina used just three plays to counter. The first two gained five from the 20, and on third down, Kevin Ingram started around the right side, then pitched back to Baker, who danced down the sidelines in front of the ECU bench, dashing 75 yards for the fourth Pirate touchdown.

The Pirates closed out their scoring on their next possession, moving 77 yards on nine plays. Baker ran for 15 on second down, and then took an option toss 24 yards more to the Spider 34. A 46-yard pass from Stewart to Adams overcame a 16-yard clipping penalty, and put the ball on the UR 4. Two plays later, Stewart dashed through the left side for the final two and the Pirates took a 35-6 lead with 9:12 left.

The Pirates did have another chance, as Heath missed out on a 43-yard field goal attempt after the Pirates had moved from their own 48 to the UR 28.

Richmond, working against the Pirate reserves, finally got into the end zone in the final five minutes of play. Led by Holly's rushing, the Spiders moved downfield in nine plays. Holley picked up 15 and after the Spiders reached the 28, a 13-yard personal foul penalty against ECU put the ball on the 12. Two plays later, from the nine, Holly took a quick pitch, headed right, bounced off two tacklers and danced into the end zone. Kees ran over the PAT to make it 35-14.

Richmond later drove to the 29 before a Roach field goal on the final play of the game was well-short from 45 yards.

The victory boosted the Pirate record to 3-3 on the year, while Richmond falls to 0-5.

destined for the end zone until Duke linebacker Emmett Tilley stopped it with an interception at the Duke 28, returning it to the Virginia Tech 49.

A Duke drive stalled and Virginia Tech took over on its own 13 with 1:29 remaining, and Greenwood returned to lead the Gobblers on their winning march.

Duke scored on its first three possessions as Bennett hit on 11 straight passes.

The Blue Devils drove 87 yards with Bennett finding Castor wide open in the corner of the end zone at 7:15.

Duke got the ball back two plays later when Tilley recovered Virginia Tech running back Billy Hite's fumble at the 50-yard-line. Bennett moved the club to the 6-yard line and three plays later Joel Blunk scored from 1-yard.

The Blue Devil defense again shut down the Gobblers and gave Bennett and the offense another opportunity. Duke launched a 6-play, 56-yard drive capped by Bennett's 29-yard-pass to Castor with 13:29 remaining in the half.

Tech's lone score came after the Gobblers' Jeremiah Thomas pounced on Greg Boone's fumble at the Duke 2. Three plays later, Greenwood found Shaw in the end zone.

Virginia Tech played without career rushing leader Cyrus Lawrence because of a knee injury which occured in last week's loss to Wake Forest.

"To be honest with you, I hope Benji's back alive," Brouhard said. "He's been one of our horses all year. I'm just glad to get in there when my chance comes and be able to do something halfway decent."

Milwaukee's victories Friday and Saturday enabled the Brewers to become only the second team in the 13 years of league playoffs to tie a series after starting out two games down. The other was Detroit in 1972, but the Tigers lost that series to Oakland.

"Coming back two down, we knew we had our backs to the wall," Haas said. "There was a personal satisfaction in the way I pitched, but it was great for the club and we'll go out tomorrow for another showdown."

Angels Manager Gene Mauch dismissed the importance of any momentum the Brewers might carry into Game 5.

"Momentum obviously was of no advantage to us, so why should it be any special advantage to them?" Mauch said. "It's down to one game, and we're going to win because we have to."

The Angels committed three errors in the game, two by third baseman Doug DeCinces, and the Brewers scored two unearned runs. Still, Mauch felt non-plussed.

"There's nothing so unusual to me that I haven't seen it happen before," Mauch said.

Angels right fielder Reggie Jackson, who went 0-for-4, said the Brewers' comeback should not have surprised anyone.

"They're a good team and you don't count them out until they're out — just like Yogi (Berra) said," Jackson noted.

Haas struck out seven and wlked five, losing his no-hitter and shutout with two out in the sixth inning on a Fred Lynn double. Haas finally left the game after throwing 136 pitches, the final one to Baylor — who set a playoff record with his grand slam homer that gave him 10 RBI in the series. The previous RBI record was nine, set by the New York Yankees' Graig Nettles in three games last year.

Haas left in favor of Jim Slaton with one out in the eighth after giving up five hits and crowning a roller-coaster season that saw him lose four of six in May, win four in a row in July and lose three of four in August before being dropped from the regular rotation for Don Sutton. Slaton retired the last five batters for the save.

The 26-year-old Haas was helped by a 16 mile-per-hour wind that transformed a Reggie Jackson shot in the fourth inning into a flyout at the warning track. It was the only well-hit ball off Haas until Lynn clubbed his run-scoring double on Haas' 99th pitch of the game.

The Brewers scored three runs in the second inning, two of them unearned, with the help of two errors and a wild pitch by John.

Ted Simmons led off the Milwaukee second by walking and one out later, John wild-pitched Simmons to second. John then walked Don Money, bringing up Brouhard.

Brouhard's single to center drove in Simmons, and when Lynn's throw to third hit Money for an error, another run scored. Angels third baseman Doug DeCinces, who sustained a broken nose in Game 3 when he fouled the ball off the plate and into his face, chased Lynn's throw down near the photographers's stand at the end of the Angels' dugout and his wild throw took one hop into the right field stands, allowing Brouhard to score.

In the fourth, Milwaukee added three more with the help of two more John wild pitches, tying a league Championship Series record for the number of wild pitches in a game. John again walked the leadoff batter, Gorman Thomas. Don Money followed with a single that sent Thomas to third. Brouhard then grounded to shortstop Foli, whose throw home nailed Thomas but left runners at first and second.

John's wild-pitch advanced the runners and Charlie Moore was walked to load the bases. John then threw a third wild pitch that scored Money and Jim Gantner followed with a single that scored Brouhard and chased John. The third run of the inning scored on a grounder by Paul Molitor off reliever Dave Goltz.

AL Crown Up For Grabs

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Forget the past. It all comes down to Sunday in the American League Championship Series.

"I was looking forward to seeing it be all over today," said Reggie Jackson, whose California Angels lost 9-5 Saturday to the Milwaukee Brewers to even the best-of-five series to two games apiece. "I'll be here tomorrow."

So will Bruce Kison, who will start for the Angels, and Pete Vuckovich, the Brewers' starter.Both pitchers will be starting on three days rest.

Angels Manager Gene Mauch, who had planned on starting a rested Ken Forsch Saturday, decided instead to go with Tommy John on three days' rest.Still, John's ineffectiveness did not dissuade Mauch from deciding to start Kison Sunday.

"I don't think it's a bit unusual in a playoff or a World Series to pick out the three best pitchers on the team and go with them," Mauch said. "I know Bruce Kison and his adrenaline will overcome any shortness of rest that might affect his performance."

Brewers Manager Harvey Kuenn said proper rest — or lack of it — has no bearing on his decision to go with Vuckovich in the critical fifth game.

"Vuke has pitched very well against California," Kuenn said.

Player Workouts Fall By The Wayside

By The Associated Press

Three weekends' worth of games have disintegrated since the start of the National Football's first inseason strike. So has the togetherness of many players who vowed to work out collectively during the dispute.

Within a few days of the Sept.21 start of the strike, the teams' player representatives were saying the players would, for the most part, attempt to stick together, find alternative practice sites and conduct workouts to remain as close to game-ready as possible.

When Gene Upshaw, the president of the union and guard for the Los Angeles Raiders, said in announcing the start of the strike: "No practices, no workouts, no games will be played ..." the owners of the 28 teams took him at his word. Under orders from the NFL Management Council, their bargaining unit, the owners shut down their facilities.

At first, the players remained united in their effort to stay in shape. Thirty-five or more players routinely gathered at high school facilities or parks, places they could run patterns and go through calisthenics.

But within two weeks, the numbers dropped — sometimes precipitously. The everyday workouts became every-other-day workouts. Some players returned home, saying they needed work more than workouts because their funds were running low. Others chose to take what one player called "mini-vacations."

In Cincinnati, the Bengals abandoned practices altogether. "Due to the present situation," player rep Mike Fuller said of the stalemated negotiations, "(we) have decided to end formal workouts and allow players to seek alternative employment, whether it be locally or in towns outside the Cincinnati area ... You can't expect people to continue to sit by because of the situation."

Coach Forrest Gregg, prohibited by the Management Council directive from maintaining formal contact with his players, nevertheless distressed by their decision. "I'd like to see them continue to work, so when they come in they won't be in poor condition" Gregg said. "I don't think our team or any other team is going to be in playing condition when they come back."

The New York Jets and New York Giants, too, abandoned their orgaized workouts by the time the strike entered its third week, the players having dispersed to work out on their own or find temporary work.

One member of the Giants, who asked not to be identified, gave an indication of the lack of interest in sticking together. He said the Giants players were asked to meet last week to vote on candidates for the union's so-called all-star series. Only 15 showed up, he said.

The Chicago Bears appeared, as of the middle of last week, to be among the teams deviating from the norm by staying pretty much together. Said Brian Baschnagel, Chicago's player rep: "We are practicing three times a week with about 32 to 35 players showing up. Everyone has shown up at one time or another. We've had good turnouts for two reasons. First, the players want to retain their skills and, second, we keep everyone informed of what's going on ...

"We have no contact. We run through plays and also have individual drills. It's easier to work out as a team than alone, but a lot of the players have told me they're also working out alone," said Baschnagel. "Nobody has taken any side jobs as yet. I guess nobody's in an awkward position financially."

In a suburb of New Orleans, where more than 30 of the Saints worked out at a high school field two weeks ago, only 11 showed up for a one-hour drill a week ago. Some of the absences were due to a charity function being conducted at the same time. The next day, seven more showed up, still a disappointing turnout as far as Russell Erxleben, the Saints' player rep, was concerned.

"It's hard to say who's working," he said of the 33 missing Saints while those present did some stretching, some wind sprints. "We're not getting a hell of a lot done with 18 people. But we're going to get the best we can out of what we have."

Workouts in Pittsburgh are as informal as they come, some of the Steelers tossing a ball around and running some laps at Pitt Stadium, others (mainly linemen) lifting weights a few times a week at a local health club. Some Steelers have returned home while others are still in Pittsburgh because of a weekend dinner honoring 50 Steeler seasons.

Quarterback Bill Kenney of the Chiefs said about 20 players have left Kansas City for their homes elsewhere, with the remainder working out three days a week, running and stretching, then going through some game drills. "No contact; just something to keep in shape," Kenney said. The extent and sophistication of the drills, he said, depends on how many players show up.

Dave Brown, the Seattle player rep, was vague about the Seahawks' workouts. He said an "overwhelming majority" of Seahawks were showing up for practice, but he refused to give any numbers, nor would he say how often they were working out and many players had left Seattle and returned home. The Seattle team was galvanized at the start of the season by the furor over the waiving of former player rep Sam McCullum,

Most of the Cowboys are staying around Dallas and the quarterbacks, receivers and defensive backs are getting together three or four days a week to run pass patterns, quarterback Danny White said. The conditioning and weightlifting is an individual matter, he said.

The defending champion San Francisco 49ers have been holding informal workouts at a junior college south of San Francisco since the strike began. Virtually all the players were there at the start, but last week the number still attending was below 30.

TD Aerials Spark Bullets

SWAN QUARTER — David Biggs caught three touchdown passes from Richie Ange as Jamesville High School rolled to a 40-6 victory over Mattamuskeet Friday in the Tobacco Belt Conference.

Matthew Moore, who scored twice in the game, got things started for the Bullets in the first period, scoring on a 15-yard scamper. Hosting Mattamuskeet countered, however, with quarterback Merron Burrus scoring on a three-yard plunge to knot it at 6-6 at the end of the first period.

But the Lakers could get no more the rest of the night as Jamesville held them to only 46 yards in total offense.

Biggs and Ange got their act going in the second period, scoring twice. The first came on a 16-yard pass, followed by a Carlton Rodgers run for the two-point conversion giving the Bullets a 14-6 lead. Biggs then took a three yard pass from Ange to open the margin to 20-6 at halftime.

In the third period, the two combined again from six yards out for a 26-6 lead after three quarters of play.

Moore scored his second touchdown of the evening to start the fourth period scoring on a 41-yard romp. Rodgers finished it off with a gallop of 80 yards with an interception.

Rodgers highlighted the defense, making 18 solo tackles and having eight assists at linebacker. Moore led the offense with 16 carries for 135 yards.

Jamesville is now 4-3 overall and 4-2 in conference play. The Bullets go outside the league on Friday to face Midway in a road game.

Fan's Catch Evokes Ire

MILWAUKEE (AP) — A fan who reached over an outfield railing to catch a controversial home run by Bob Boone of California in the Milwaukee Brewers playoff victory over the Angels didn't see the end of the game from his seat.

He got escorted out of Milwaukee County Stadium and it was just in time, a witness to the incident said after the Brewers' 5-3 win over the Angels Friday.

"People came from all over the bleachers. They were ready to beat on him," said Joseph Meyer, who was sitting nearby. "They were angry."

The Brewers were leading California 5-0 in the eighth inning of their American League Championship Series game when Boone hit the fly ball off Don Sutton.

Photographers, including television network cameramen, captured the scene, as the fan reached over the rail and caught the ball as it seemed to be dropping into the outstretched glove of Brewer left fielder Ben Oglivie.

"You could see him (the fan) reach down," Meyer said. "If Benji wouldn't have had it, it would have hit the mesh there and bounced into play, no question. There was no way that should have been a home run."

But the left field umpire Larry Barnett ruled it a homer and before the inning ended, the Angels had scored two more times.

The Brewers trail in the best-of-five series, two games to one.

As for the fan who made the catch, "for a split second he was happy, holding it (the ball) up, and then people started yelling at him," Meyer said.

Allison, Waltrip Both Have Same Idea—Winning Race Important

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Bobby Allison and Darrell Waltrip, battling for NASCAR's Winston Cup championship, both have the same idea.

"If you're worrying about points, second place is good," Allison says. "If you're worrying about winning races, second place is losing.

"Our team feels we have to focus on winning, not on getting points," adding Allison, who is in his 21st year of Grand National racing and still is trying for his first championship.

Waltrip, who won his first title a year ago after joining car-owner and crew chief Junior Johnson, says, "You worry about winning first. That's what we're after every time we go out there. If you win enough, the points take care of themselves."

Johnson, who made stock car's Hall of Fame as a driver, agrees that's the way it should be. But he said Friday that the NASCAR point system does not lend itself well to that theory.

"You don't win as many races as we have and go home with just five points," Johnson said. "That's a damn joke."

He was referring to NASCAR's point system, which awards 175 points for a victory and 170 for second-place, with five more points for leading any lap in the race and an additional five points for leading the most laps. Even 40th place gets 43 points.

Waltrip won the title a year ago by coming from 341 points behind Allison, and he's trying to come from behind again this year. After being more than 200 points behind when third-place Terry Labonte led earlier this season, he now trails Allison by 15 points going into Sunday's National 500 at Charlotte Motor Speedway.

In capturing the title last year, Waltrip won 12 races — the most since all-time NAS-CAR victory leader Richard Petty won 13 times in 1975. Waltrip's 10 victories this year led everyone again with five races still to run, but he still has had to come from behind.

"You do your best to try to win all the races you enter," Johnson said Friday as rain washed out all the on-track action. "You can't help but think about the championship because it is important. But you can't overlook races and try to stroke into the points.

"You try to win, but if you have a problem, like cutting a tire down or something, then it's different. If you lose a lap or two over that kind of thing and it (the victory) is gone, then you try to salvage what you can.

"Another thing," Johnson added, "is that after winning all them races, you're not hurt so much if you can't win the championship 'cause you get most of the (prize) money. That can salvage the season for you."

Meanwhile, both Waltrip and Allison are trying hard to psyche out the other.

Allison, winner of six races this season, has not missed a chance lately to accuse Johnson of mechanical and aerodynamic cheating, and NASCAR of letting him get away with it.

Since Johnson's cars have won four of the last six NAS-CAR championships (three with Cale Yarborough driving), Waltrip says, "We have the psychological advantage. We're better prepared to run hard every week than any other team.

"He (Allison) is too obsessed with that one car (Johnson's). But that's not just this year. It's not a personal thing, it's that car No. 11 (Waltrip's). He's always felt it's had an advantage, that it's a company (NASCAR-favored) car."

OUTDOORS With Joe Albea

D.U. BANQUET SET — The Pitt County Chapter of Ducks Unlimited will hold its annual membership banquet Thursday night, Nov. 4, at the Greenville Country Club.

The banquet will begin at 6 p.m. Tickets are available from any committee member or by writing John Farley, P.O. Box 1466, Greenville, N.C. 27834. The Country Club has limited seating capacity so it's a good idea to purchase your ticket early.

The Pitt County Chapter continues to be one of the top contributing chapters in the state. Countless hours are put in each year by volunteer committee members to make the fund raiser enjoyable to the D.U. member and a money-maker for the waterfowl breeding grounds in Canada.

Be sure to attend this year's banquet and contribute to a very worthwhile conservation group.

Marlin Fishing Trip with J.H. Hudson, custom-made hunting knife by Charles Gilbert, D.U. Print of the Year (by Chet Reneson), Canada D.U. Print of the Year, watercolor by local artist Bob Pittman, hunting trips and a 17-foot skiff and trailor.

D.U.'s CHEF SURPRISE — Every angler and nimrod has at one time or another brought home his vanquished quarry only to be greeted by a quizzical look from a spouse or mother that begged: "What in the world am I going to do with that?"

"Why, cook it for supper," comes the usual reply as the sport heads for the sink to scrub up for the feast.

Most family cookbooks, which are basic enough to include instructions on boiling an egg, offer little help, and the cook is forced to frantically phone friends or relatives for advice.

But now, thanks to Ducks Unlimited, wild game cookery need no longer be so intimidating. The DU Cookbook has just been published — in the nick of time for hunting season.

There are, of course, other game cookbooks on the marker. What makes the DU Cookbook so special is that it includes 458 tried and true recipes — some handed down through generations of hunters — for everything from soup to nuts.

And, while some of the recipes lean toward the exotic, the majority provide simple, down-to-earth instructions on preparing fish and game. (After all, how fancy could the ingredients be for something called Dr. Hodges Buzzard Breath Chili?)

Not all of the recipes call for wild game, and there are sections on appetizers, soups, stews and mouth-watering desserts.

Part of the $7.95 cost of the book goes to help DU in its waterfowl conservation effort. A worthy cause, to be sure.

MUZZLE-LOADING DEER SEASON — The season for taking white-tail deer (antlered deer only) with a muzzle-loading gun opens Monday, Oct. 11, and runs through Oct. 16. Pistols or modern firearms may not be carried during this special season.

FISHING REPORT — Saltwater fishing has remained good due in part to the beautiful weather of late. King Mackeral still remain the talk of the Morehead City waterfront.

Drum, bluefish and flounder are being caught at Ocracoke, with spot, croaker, flounder and small blues reported from the piers on Bogue Banks.

Ladd Preserves Brewers' 5-3 Victory

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Pete Ladd doesn't pretend to be filling Rollie Fingers' shoes — although his size 15 feet would be more than adequate — but the Milwaukee Brewers' rookie relief pitcher made believers of the California Angels.

Ladd relieved starter Don Sutton with the tying run at the plate in the eighth inning Friday and retired all four men he faced, preserving a 5-3 Milwaukee victory as the Brewers stayed alive in the American League playoffs.

Sutton, now 4-1 in league championship series for his career, matched his season high with nine strikeouts in 72-3 innings. Paul Molitor slugged a two-run homer that proved decisive for the Brewers, who had to win or face elimination in this best-of-five series.

The Angels, who won the first two games in Anaheim Tuesday and Wednesday, planned to pitch Tommy John against the Brewers' Moose Haas in Game 4 today, beginning 1 p.m. EDT.

With Fingers, the Brewers' star relief pitcher, sidelined since Sept. 2 with a torn muscle in his right forearm, Manager Harvey Kuenn went to the hulking, hard-throwing Ladd as his short relief pitcher.

Ladd struck out two of the four men he faced. He has faced seven batters in this series and has retired all of them, five on strikeouts.

Ladd, called up from Vancouver in early July, said he has tried to cultivate a mental toughness like that of Hall of Fame pitcher Bob Gibson, his boyhood idol.

"Gibson was very intimidating, to the point where even some of his teammates disliked him," Ladd said. "That's the way I try to be."

Sutton carried a four-hitter and a 5-0 lead into the Angels' eighth when Bob Boone led off with a disputed home run.

Ben Oglivie was primed to attempt a leaping catch in front of the left field wall, but a fan in the bleachers grabbed the ball before Oglivie could get to it. Umpire Larry Barnett, who was patroling the left field line, signaled home run as Oglivie and other Brewers vehemently protested.

"The fan's hands were behind the fence. That's the way I saw it," Barnett said. "I signaled home run. It would have been spectator interference and the batter would have been out if in my judgment he (Oglivie) could have caught the ball."

"Without a doubt I would have caught the ball, but he (the fan) had his hand over the fence," Oglivie said.

Rod Carew bunted for a hit one out later. Sutton then struck out Reggie Jackson for the third time, but Fred Lynn and Don Baylor followed with RBI doubles to make it 5-3.

Ladd relieved and retired Doug DeCinces on a grounder to end the inning. Ladd got Bobby Grich on a grounder to start the ninth and then struck out pinch-batter Rob Wilfong and Boone.

Ancient Mariner
Gaylord Perry, at 44 the oldest active pitcher in the major leagues, autographs baseballs for fans who attended a luncheon for Perry at the home of W.M. "Booger" Scales on Thursday. Perry, who hopes to return to the Seattle Mariners next spring, received two $250 checks from the fans: one to pay his "spitter" fine assessed this year, and another for any future one. Perry has won 307 career games, says he still wants to surpass Walter Johnson's strikeout record, despite having been passed by Houston's Nolan Ryan for strikeouts among active pitchers. Perry is some 60 short of Johnson. (Reflector Photo)

Rainouts Make Braves Anxious

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The Atlanta Braves are getting a bit anxious to play the St. Louis Cardinals again.

But a second rainout in three days isn't disturbing Phil Niekro.

"I was ready to pitch tonight. I'll be ready to pitch tomorrow," said the 43-year-old knuckleballer following a deluge Friday night that shoved back the second game of the National League's championship series to tonight. "I don't think this delay will hurt me.

The rainout may have helped Atlanta, which trails the best-of-five series, one game to none.

Had Friday night's game been played, right-hander Tommy Boggs would have pitched for the Braves, and Niekro probably would have limited to working just the third game for Atlanta.

"It doesn't disappoint everybody, with the exception of the fans," said Niekro, whose 41-3 shutout innings on the mound were wasted Wednesday in a washout.

"If anybody's disappointed, it's probably Tommy Boggs. He was ready to pitch tonight. It's something over which we have no control," Niekro said.

St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog agreed.

"I don't worry about that," said Herzog about the postponement, called only 37 minutes after the game was to have begun. "We've got to win two ballgames. It's just one of those things."

The rainouts, which were the first at the Cards' ballpark since June 1979, could affect next week's World Series scheduling.

Barring further delay, the series between the Braves and St. Louis could end Tuesday — if it goes five games. The World Series is currently scheduled to start Tuesday in the NL city.

"That's great, but we didn't win a 162-game season with one pitcher," the 26-year-old Braves hurler said when asked about not starting. "I was psyched up to pitch. We thought they'd stay all night to get this one in."

As it turned out, however, the postponement did soothe ruffled feelings between Niekro, who said he was ready to pitch Friday, and his manager.

"If I was in his position, I might have done the same thing," said Niekro in considering Joe Torre's decision not to pitch him 48 hours after Wednesday's rained out opener. "At the same time, he knew that I was concerned because I was ready."

Herzog said rookie John Stuper, 9-7, will remain St. Louis' pitcher in the second game.

Interest Rate Continue Rally

By KEITH E. LEIGHTY
Associated Press Writer

Interest rate futures continued rallying Friday on the Chicago Board of trade amid ideas that the nation's weak economy will persist and demand for credit ease.

Treasury bonds rallied sharply through the middle of the session, climbing almost two percentage points, before losing some of the gain near the close.

The rally is likely to continue, said Geraldine Szymanski, a currency analyst in Chicago with ContiCurrencies, Inc., as after the close of trading, the Federal Reserve reported a decrease in the nation's money supply and cut its discount rate, the interest rate charged for loans to member banks.

In trading Friday, Treasury bonds settled 16 ticks to 27 ticks higher with the contract for delivery in December at 74-22. A tick is 1-32 of a percentage point and represents a price move of $31.25 on a contract with a face value of $100,000.

Livestock and meat prices were mostly higher in very heavy trading on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

There was some weakness in live hogs and frozen pork bellies but it was said to be limit-ed to contracts for delivery next year as a result of a technical trading factor.

Chuck Levitt, a livestock analyst in Chicago with Shearson American Express, said the weakness in those deferred contracts resulted from traders liq-uidating "spread" positions, in which they had previously bought contracts for delivery next year while selling contracts for delivery this year to take advantage of the changing relationship in prices.

Levitt said the nearby contracts also were supported by ideas that cash prices would be higher next week. He said prices for pork products, such as, fresh pork bellies and hams, were a little higher, indicating hog prices might increase.

Buying by commercial firms, those that use the product, was supportive for cattle prices, Levitt said.

He noted that the slaughter of cattle has been heavy all week but the "the market soaked it up extremely well."

He said retailers continue to feature beef in grocery stores and weekend sales could provide a signal for futures prices next week.

NOW YOU DON'T HAVE TO GIVE UP THE BENEFITS OF WHOLE LIFE INSURANCE TO EARN TODAY'S HIGH INTEREST.

PILOT LIFE'S NEW UNIVERSAL LIFE PLAN OFFERS YOU BOTH.

Traditionally, whole life insurance has been one of the best ways for the average man or woman to provide financial security for heirs, plus a build-up of cash values. In recent years, however, as new investment opportunities have been created, many people have discovered ways for their money to earn higher yields than were legally possible through insurance cash values. And so they've been tempted to trade off the benefits of whole life for the possibility of increased return.

PILOT HAS THE ANSWER

Now, you can have both. With Pilot's new Universal Life Plan, you can have substantial life insurance protection at low premiums, while you build cash values that earn tax-free interest at today's high interest rates. Financial security for your beneficiaries... and high earnings for you.

TAX-FREE CASH VALUES

Your cash values not only grow at a faster rate, they accumulate tax-free. And most death benefits will pass to your beneficiaries free of Federal income taxes, as they always have.

Compare these outstanding benefits of Pilot's "Universal Life":

- Cash value earns interest at current high interest rates.
- Adjustable coverage and premiums as needs change.
- Accumulated interest is nontaxable.
- Tax-free withdrawals from cash values.
- One policy covers all life insurance needs.

ADJUSTABLE COVERAGE... FLEXIBLE PREMIUMS

The amount of protection is completely adaptable to your changing needs. As long as you remain insurable, you may increase or decrease the amount of your coverage without changing policies. After your initial premium, you may pay your premiums anytime you choose, in any amount you choose. You control the assets and values of your policy.

AVAILABLE CASH VALUE

The cash build-up in Pilot's Universal Life Plan may be withdrawn, tax-free, at any time. Or it can be used to increase your protection, purchase paid-up coverage, or be left to accumulate tax-deferred interest for your retirement.

FULL DISCLOSURE

In addition to a current brochure explaining benefits, you will receive an annual report summarizing all of your transactions.

SETTLEMENT OPTIONS

Arrangements may be made for the payment of benefits in a single sum, or under a variety of retirement benefits or income options.

PLUS...A TEN-DAY "FREE LOOK"

We invite you to examine our plan for 10 days. If you are in any way dissatisfied, your premium will be refunded.

ONE POLICY FITS ALL

Pilot's Universal Life creates many financial planning options for your estate, your cash flow, and even your retirement. All designed to make your money work for you in the best way possible, at every stage of your life, through your maturing financial needs. It gives you the protection you need and the high interest earnings you want in one complete package. Invest in a better life with the Pilot. Passive Solar Project Done

This 1500-square foot passive solar house, built entirely by Pitt Community College students, features two Trombe walls, (behind sliding glass doors) pre-condition tubes (extreme left and right, on ground) and a solar water heater. Sam Arnett, assistant chairman of the PCC architectural drafting department, says solar energy provides 80 percent of the house's heating and cooling needs, although initial estimates said only 60 percent. The house will be auctioned Oct. 23.

SOLAR WATER HEATER...Arnett said the solar-powered water heater can raise water temperature to 140 degrees Fahrenheit in three hours. Even on cloudy days in August, he said water temperature reached 90 degrees F. The heater has an electrical back-up unit.

PCC Solar House Ready For Auction

In October of 1980, Pitt Community College began a unique project that involved planning, designing and constructing a house that proved passive solar can be utilized at a moderate cost. Two years later, that project is complete and is ready to be sold Oct. 23 at 10:00 a.m.

Since 1980, PCC drafting, energy, carpentry, heating and air, electrical and masonry students have built a passive solar house on a three-quarter acre lot near Winterville.

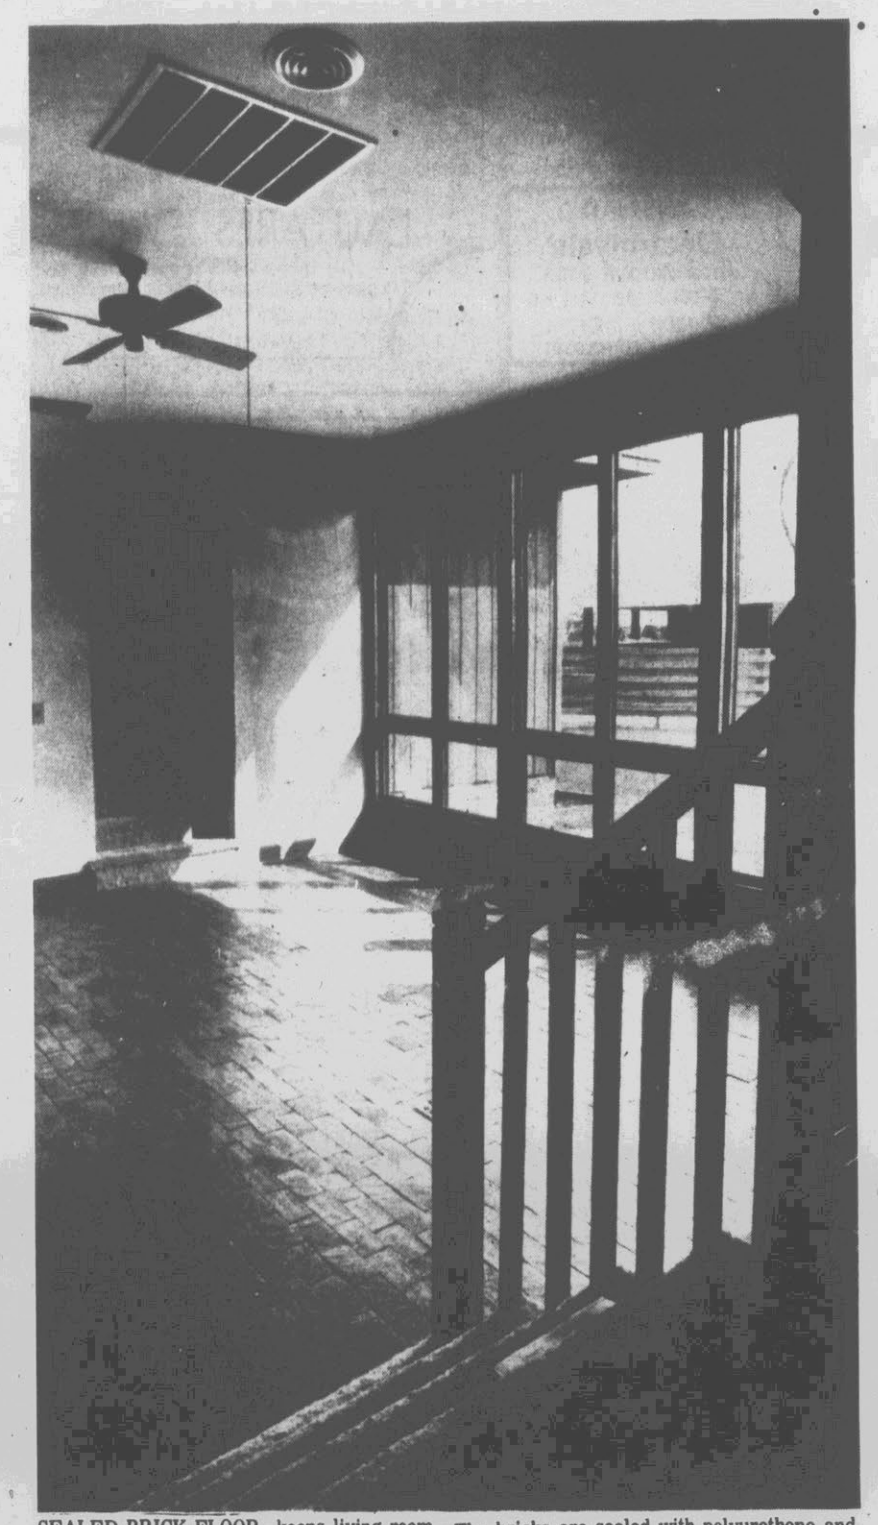
"We had a $5,000 grant from the North Carolina Energy Institute," said Sam Arnett, and assistant chairman of the PCC Architectural Drafting Department. "What they had in mind in giving this grant was a project designed to demonstrate passive solar is feasible in a medium price-range project."

The house has classic passive solar features — Trombe walls to provide space heating, pre-condition tubes to bring passively cooled air into the living area and insulation to reduce heat loss and sun infiltration.

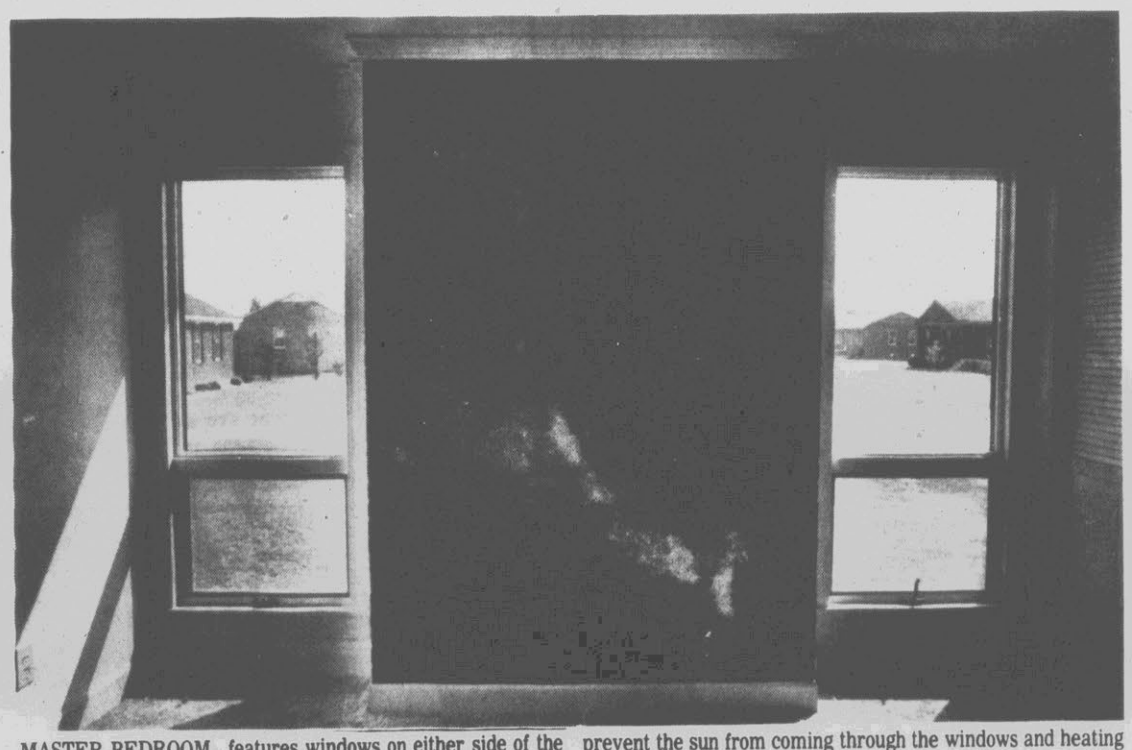
In addition, the house has sufficient overhang on the south side to prevent solar gain during the summer, but allowing sunlight to penetrate the living space in the winter.

Although the house has a back-up heat pump, Arnett estimates that 80 percent of the house's heating needs can be met by the passive solar design and that 70 percent of the hot water needs can be supplied by the solar water heater.

The house will be auctioned Oct. 23 at 10:00 a.m. For further information contact Arnett at 756-3130.



SEALED BRICK FLOOR...keeps living room cool in summer, retains warmth in winter. The floor is insulated to level R-11, or 3½ inches. The bricks are sealed with polyurethene and are easy to keep clean, said Arnett.



MASTER BEDROOM...features windows on either side of the Trombe wall, center. The house is designed, said Arnett, so that during the hot summer months, the eaves of the house prevent the sun from coming through the windows and heating up the living space. The house has three bedrooms.

With A Prayer In Her Heart

Dr. Magno Works For Hospice Development

By PATRICIA Mc-CORMACK
UPI Health Editor

Dr. Josefina Magno comes across as an earth mother type — strong, dauntless, understanding. What the widow told an observer the other day supports that first impression.

Dr. Magno, a native of Manila, had just about raised her seven children when she lost a breast to cancer in 1972. She said there was no time for self-pity or despair.

She is a veteran at showing courage, having raised the brood — ages one-to-10 — alone after her husband, also a physician, died.

During the breast cancer ordeal Dr. Magno said she tapped courage from her reserves, strengthening her faith and defying defeat.

"I am amazed at the human spirit," she said, detailing some of her trials.

In the hospital, recovering from the mastectomy, and later, during post-treatment, Dr. Magno's life bent in a new direction, she recalled.

"I saw cancer patients in various stages — some recuperating, some terminal," she said. "I felt their pains and those of their friends and families.

"What I saw and felt put a prayer in my heart."

She said the prayer went something like this:

"God, let me spend my time with them, let me see what I can do to help with my remaining time and strength."

Ten years after that turn in the road, Dr. Magno is on the cutting edge of one of the fastest-growing movements in America — the hospice movement, a crusade springing from grassroots in hundreds of communities nationwide.

She is executive director of the National Hospice Organization in McLean, Va. Next month she will become director of the Center for Hospice Studies at Georgetown University Medical School in Washington, D.C.

There are some 700 hospices across America, up from just a handful a decade ago. As a result of President Reagan signing a new law early in September, a year from now Dr. Magno expects the hospice movement to expand rapidly.

The law says some services given by approved hospices will be reimbursed by Medicare, starting in September, 1983. Home nursing care included.

Dr. Magno said this should make it possible for more of the terminally-ill to spend the last days in the family bosom, sharing tears, fears, and love as time winds down.

Dr. Magno said 67 percent of Americans want to die at home, if possible.

Hospice is a concept more than a building where people go to die, though some community hospices have buildings with homelike rooms for the days when the family no longer can provide for the dying loved one.

"There is no curative treatment," Dr. Magno said, "and the goal of care is to palliation — make the patient as comfortable as possible."

Hospice care is an alternative to therapeutic or institutional care for the terminally ill since care is provided primarily in the patient's home.

What does terminally ill mean and who determines if a person is "terminal?"

"A doctor must certify a patient is terminal," Dr. Magno said.

"The doctor must say there is no more curative treatment and that the patient should be made as comfortable as possible.

"To be admitted to hospice care, a person's life expectancy must be limited to six months or less, as judged by a doctor."

Dr. Magno said the hospice concept emphasizes psychological, emotional, physical and spiritual support to the terminally ill and their families.

"Hospice care is provided by a team of nurses , physicians, social workers, counselors and volunteers. Without volunteers there would be no hospice movement.

"A gentler way of dying is what hospice is all about," Dr. Magno said.

"For the family, there is involvement and assistance that helps strip away the fears of the dying process. The help goes on during the bereavement period.

"The beauty of hospice, actually, is in involving the family in care. The last days become the most meaningful. There is time to heal relationships, to say the goodbyes, to say I love you.

"There is time to tie the loose ends of life together in a healthy way.

"What makes bereavement difficult a lot of times is guilt. That is, aside from the heartbreak inherent in the loss of a loved one.

"If broken relations are not mended before the death, the guilt can be awful.

"The grieving say to themselves — 'Why didn't I clear the air' or 'If I could have done something more, maybe it would have been better'.

"Hospice makes it possible for the family to do all that can be done and that helps."

But she said, "Some feelings, however, must work themselves out."

Dr. Magno gave an example of such a feeling, citing the remorse a person feels when asking — "Why didn't I tell him I loved him?"

What's wrong with most of the patients accepted in hospice programs?

"Ninety-five percent are terminal with cancer," Dr Magno said.

At any given time, however, there is just enough hospice capacity to care for from five-to-10 percent of the 360,000 dying of cancer annually.

"We have a long way to go.

"I would like to see more nursing homes and hospitals develop hospice units within their institutions — a part of the places where there is more time for compassion."

Speaking as a physician, Dr. Magno told a little

She said doctors may find it difficult to accept the concept of a patient being given up, to class a person "terminal."

"We physicians were taught to cure. In hospice it is accepted that the patient is no longer curable. We recognize that life is near its end.

"The doctor must recognize that death comes not as his failure but as a natural end of life.

"Some physicians are afraid to be too close to the dying. It makes them think they are a failure."

How does Dr. Magno feel after 10 years in the hospice movement and countless hours at the bedside of the dying?

"It has increased my faith that God knows and takes care," she said.

"God does take care. You would believe if you could have looked over my shoulder. You would have seen for yourself what I have seen. People go peacefully.

"Death is inevitable. There is a deep realization about that. Death comes to everyone. It is a part of God's plan for life."

What is the hardest part for the family of the dying?

"Not knowing what is going on and feeling powerless," Dr. Magno said.

"The patient may be in and out. The patient may not be able to eat for a day or two. The family sees legs swell up. The family wants to know what is going on.

"The family wants to ask questions. Outside the hospice setting, some of these questions cannot be asked because they seem too small."

If she had to put a definition of hospice into words that would cover every base, what would Dr. Magno say?

"Hospice is a concept of caring for the terminally ill and their families, enabling the patient to live as fully as possible, making the entire family the unit of care and centering the caring process within the home."

The NHO provides a "Locator Directory." This is a directory of hospice programs in America, including those in the planning stage. It is available through the NHO office — 1311A Dolley Madison Blvd., McLean, Va. 22101. Phone: 703-356-6770.

How does a community group get a hospice started?

In Arlington, Va., where Dr. Magno lives, some people in the community, including two nurses, wanted to start one. They met in Dr. Magno's home and said they would do it. They needed $53 to incorporate. They could not come up with it among themselves. The $53 was donated.

The organization was called the Hospice of Northern Virginia. It serves an area that includes Arlington, Fairfax County, Alexandria City, Falls Church and Prince Georges County.

A vacant school was converted into an in-patient facility. Patients may bring things from home — even a comfortable chair, if that's what's pleasing.

"The most important room in the hospice is the meditation chapel," Dr. Magno said.

Garris-Robinson Vows Said

Pamela Marie Robinson became the bride of Hubert Ronald Garris in a five o'clock candlelight ceremony Saturday at Oakmont Baptist Church. The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Gordon Conklin and Dr. Harold W. Deitch.

A program of wedding music was presented by Dr. Sam Winchester Jr., organist, and Cecelia Knight of Lancaster, S.C., cousin of the bride, vocalist.

Parents of the bridal couple are Mr. and Mrs. Jack Robinson and Mr. and Mrs. Hubert W. Garris, all of Greenville.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore an ivory floor length gown with a chapel train of chiffon and re-embroidered alencon lace over taffeta. The fitted bodice featured a Queen Anne neckline, full length tapered sleeves and a natural waist. Re-embroidered alencon lace etched with seed pearls adorned the bodice, encircled the neckline and appliqued the sleeves. Bridal buttons fastened the illusion yoke. The floor length flared skirt extended into a chapel train. Beaded alencon lace motifs adorned the train. Scalloped alencon lace bordered the hemline of the gown. She wore a waltz length ivory mantilla of nylon illusion designed with scattered Venise floral appliques. She carried a bouquet of stephanotis and purple silk violets centered on her mother's wedding Bible.

Bridesmaids included Debra Kennington, cousin of the bride, Vicky Hudson, sister of the bridegroom, Sue Cannon and Diane Corbin, all of Greenville, Trudy Sumerlin of Gardnerville and Patsy Lee of Hilton Head, S.C. Their huckleberry chiffon over taffeta floor length gowns were designed like that of the honor attendant. Each attendant carried a bouquet of pink silk violets and angel breath with satin streamers.

Joy Robinson of Rock Hill, S.C. and Beverly Brown of Manning, S.C., cousins of the bride, were honorary bridesmaids and carried long-stemmed red roses. Amber Hudson, niece of the bridegroom, was flower girl and wore a pale lavender floor length dress and carried a white basket filled with mum petals. Lee Isley, cousin of the bride, was ring bearer.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and ushers included Scott Garris, brother of the bridegroom, Lynn Hudson, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, Perry Johnson, all of Greenville, Mark Robinson of San Antonio, Tex., brother of the bride, Eddie Horne of Richlands and Ricky Davis of Wilmington.

The mother of the bride wore a Mendicini original gown of teal silesta designed by Lila Broude accented by Venise lace. The mother of the bridegroom wore a burgundy silesta gown featuring a scoop neckline and matchingt caplet. Both wore wristlets of pink rosebuds.

The wedding was directed by Trish Byrum and Bet Alford.

The bride attended Radford University and graduated from East Carolina University. She teaches at Farmville Middle School. The bridegroom attended ECU and is employed by Coca-Cola Bottling Co.

The couple will live in Greenville after a wedding trip to Florida.

A reception was given by the parents of the bride at the Cherry Oaks Club House where guests were greeted by Mr. and Mrs. Ronnie Tripp. Mr. and Mrs. Smith Faulkenberry of Lancaster, S.C., aunt and uncle of the bride, presided at the guest register. Aunts of the bride assisted in serving.

MRS. HUBERT RONALD GARRIS

A bridesmaids luncheon was held Saturday at the home of Rose Tripp. Peaches Jordan and Edna Murray were assisting hostesses.

A cookout was given by Mr. and Mrs. Roy Jones and Mrs. Anna Garris, grandparents of the bridegroom. An after-rehearsal cocktail party was given by the parents of the bridegroom and Mr. and Mrs. Lynn Hudson, sister and brother-in-law of the bridegroom, at Cherry Oaks Club House.

Wedding Invitation

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Alton Whitehurst and Mr. and Mrs. George Robert Crawford request the honor of your presence at the marriage of their children, Emma Susan and George Ronald, on Oct. 23 at 2 p.m. at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Whitehurst on the Pactolus Highway. A reception will follow.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Every parent at one time or another has threatened his child with the "real world."

It has been described as a "jungle," a "place where you can count your friends on one hand" and "a future existence where you won't have your parents to kick around anymore."

It's a threat for everything from washing your hands before dinner to finishing college.

Some parents are even concerned that their children are so pampered and spoiled, they won't be able to handle the pressures of the "real world" when they enter it.

Not to worry.

When Bobby was three, he developed arthritis and was to spend the rest of his life in debilitating pain.

When Sheila was six, her mother left one day in the car to "think things out." She never came home again and Sheila was raised by a father who drank and a grandmother who prayed.

Mark was four years old when another child called him "nigger" and said he couldn't slide down the same slide as the other children. It was to be his first, but not his last, encounter with prejudice.

Kevin was seven when his bicycle which he bought with his own money was stolen and the policeman shrugged and said, "There's nothing we can do about it."

At age 10, Barbara was told baseball was a boy's game and what would a girl want to be on the team for. She couldn't even spell discrimination.

Rick was nine years old when a group of boys shoved his head into a paper towel dispenser in a restroom of a movie house and demanded his money. It was a Disney movie because his mother said she didn't want him to see all that violence and get ideas.

Michelle was 16 when the car in which she was driving was hit broadside by a drunk driver. Her best friend died instantly.

At 17, Kenny was invited to a war he did not want to attend and had to make a decision to either fight it or leave his country.

The "real world" is a myth, children. You entered it slippery and warm and complacent. When you chose to ignore it, you were smacked on the behind to fill your lungs with cries of annoyance, shock and rage. How much more real can it get than that!

MRS. JOHN NATHANIEL WELLS

Couple Marries On Saturday

FARMVILLE — Margaret Williams McGaughey was married to John Nathaniel Wells in the Farmville United Methodist Church Saturday evening at eight o'clock. The Rev. R. Dennis Ricks performed the double ring, candlelight ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Robert Trusell McGaughey of Farmville and Mr. and Mrs. John Henton Wells of Bailey.

Escorted and given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of ivory organza over peau de soie designed with a Queen Anne neckline outlined in silk A-line skirt and attached cathedral length train were accented with an edging of scalloped re-embroidered alencon lace. She carried a spray of gardenias and stephanotis centered on her mother's wedding prayer book of alencon lace with seed pearls.

Louise Kirkpatrick McGaughey of Farmville, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and Mrs. Walter Sidney Tayloe III of Elkin was matron of honor. Venise lace. The empire bodice was overlaid in re-embroidered alencon lace that continued over the shoulders and down the back. The long fitted sleeves were enhanced with appliques of re-embroidered alencon lace and finished with cuffs of matching lace. The modified Bridesmaids included Gina Patterson of Kings Mountain, Linda Williams of Shelby, Mrs. John Bridges of Lawndale, Morgan Hines of Rocky Mount, cousin of the bride, and Sherry McCall of Wilmington, cousin of the bridegroom.

The attendants wore formal gowns of teal taffeta designed with an open neckline featuring a double ruffle of taffeta extending into a scooped back. A crushed sash encircled the waist of the gathered skirt enhanced by a cascading bouquet of white glamelias.

The father of the bridegroom was best and groomsmen were Randy Walters, brother-in-law of the bridgroom, Ryan Walters, nephew of the bridegroom, and Dan Carraway, all of Farmville, William M. Hines Jr. of Rocky Mount, cousin of the bride, David Bissette of Raleigh, Alan Coker of Marion and Robert Cook of Wake Forest. Hunter Walters of Farmville, nephew of the bridegroom, was acolyte.

The mother of the bride wore a peacock teal silk tissue taffeta long dress with a Victorian capelet collar effect. The mother of the bridegroom selected a formal pale rose crepe gown featuring a long-sleeved jacket. Both had white double orchid corsages pinned to their bags.

The bride graduated from Meredith College and is an auditor in the North Carolina Department of Revenue. The bridegroom is a graduate of North Carolina State University and is an assistant manager of the Raleigh FCX. The couple will live in Raleigh after a trip to Atlanta, Ga.

The bride's parents entertained at a reception at the DAR Chapter House in Farmville. Guests were greeted by Mr. and Mrs. Linwood E. Mercer and Mr. and Mrs. Bob Moye and Mr. and Mrs. John Williams presided at the register.

After the wedding cake was cut by the bridel couple, it was served by Mr. and Mrs. Tom Bullock and Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Ledbetter.

Weekend parties for members of the wedding party and out-of-town guests included an informal supper given by Mr. and Mrs. Billy R. Carraway and Mrs. Margaret F. Morgan Saturday. A brunch was also held Saturday given by Mrs. J. Irvin Morgan Jr., grandmother of the bride, and Mr. and Mrs. W. MacArthur Hines, aunt and uncle of the bride. The parents of the bridegroom gave a rehearsal dinner party Friday.

Halloween Helps Kids Master Fears

The scary masks, costumes and traditions of the holiday contribute directly to a child's development, Royeton adds in an article in the October issue of Parents magazine.

"... witches and ghosts as well as Darth Vader or Dracula... represent the child's own feelings, his anxieties about the unknown, or the angers and aggressions of others — all in one way or another frightening and hard to control," says the Walnut Creek, Calif. expert.

"Halloween provides him with a publicly endorsed opportunity to deal with these feelings following the same psychological process he uses in everyday imaginary play.

"By becoming an imaginary character, he tames those forces that threaten to overwhelm him," Royeton says in the article co-authored with writer Susan Isaacs.

Royeton says trick-or-treating is based on the same desire to overcome fears.

"The child's disguise represents safety when he goes out into the night to knock on strangers' doors and threaten a trick if he doesn't get a treat.

"For once he holds power and adults are expected to comply."

Royeton also says Halloween gives children a chance to strengthen their identities by pretending to be what they want to be.

"Farrah (Fawcett) or other glamour figures may symbolize femininity and maturity; Wonder Woman, courage and control."

Fabric Softeners Can Cause Stain

A mysterious looking stain that appears on clothes after they come out of the washer is often blamed on minerals in the water or trouble with the machine. In reality, the trouble may be caused by fabric softeners, says Dr. Linda McCutcheon, extension housing specialist at North Carolina State University.

Many of these kinds of stains fooled experts at first. A researcher finally determined that the stains resulted from pouring undiluted fabric softener directly onto clothes.

To avoid such stains, be sure to add liquid fabric softeners to the water and not onto the clothes.

To remove such a stain, work an all-purpose detergent into the satin and relaunder the garment in water that's as hot as is safe for the fabric. If a stain still remains, sponge the stained area with rubbing alcohol or a cleaning fluid. Rinse well and relaunder.

Check the weather if you are thinking about whipping up egg whites for meringue or frosting. High humidity can make the whites "fall" so you may want to select another dish when weather is humid.

Shirred Eggs With Ham
Pound Cake & Coffee

ELSIE'S POUND CAKE
Repeated by request.

Three 1/4-pound sticks butter (1 1/2 cups), at room temperature
1-pound box confectioners' sugar
6 large eggs
2 1/2 cups sifted all-purpose flour
1 tablespoon vanilla
1 tablespoon fresh lemon juice

In the large bowl of an electric mixer beat together the butter and sugar until light and fluffy. At medium speed beat in eggs, 1 at a time, for 1 minute after each addition. Beat in flour, in 4 additions, until blended each time. Beat in vanilla and lemon juice. Turn into a greased and floured 10-inch angelcake pan. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in the center comes out clean — 1 hour. Cool cake in pan on a wire rack for 5 minutes. Loosen edges and around tube; turn out on rack and cool completely.

BLUEBERRY PIE
It has a luscious creamy filling.

1-3rd cup sugar
2 tablespoons corn starch
1 cup milk
1 cup sour cream
1 1/2 teaspoons vanilla
1 cup fresh blueberries
8-inch baked graham cracker crust

In a 1 1/2-quart saucepan stir together the sugar and cornstarch; gradually stir in the milk, keeping smooth. Over medium heat, stirring constantly, cook until mixture shows it is boiling because it bubbles and sputters and mounds slightly when dropped from a spoon. Off heat, with a wire whisk gently stir in the sour cream and vanilla until blended. Fold in the blueberries. Turn into the graham cracker crust. Refrigerate to set — several hours or overnight. Makes 6 servings.

Miss Green, Mr. Carson Wed

MRS. SAMUEL TAYLOR CARSON JR.

ROBERSONVILLE — Marian Fountain Green and Samuel Taylor Carson Jr. exchanged wedding vows Saturday at 3 p.m. in the First Christian Church. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Marion Green of Robersonville. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Taylor Carson Sr. of Bethel.

Miss Green was given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father. She wore a formal gown of white silk organza over taffeta designed with a fitted empire bodice, traditional sleeves and a semi-fitted full skirt. The bodice was enhanced by a sweetheart neckline and was overlaid with imported re-embroidered alencon lace. The sleeves had matching lace appliques. The skirt had lace appliques and a scalloped lace hemline border which extended into a chapel train. She wore a chapel length mantilla with a border of matching alencon lace and scattered motifs accented with pearls and attached to a chapel cap. She carried a cascade bouquet of georgiana orchids, white roses and stephanotis, gypsophilia and springerii fern.

Musical selections included "The Gift of Love," "The Wedding Benediction" and the "The Lord's Prayer," sung by Susan H. Pair of Greenville, cousin of the bride. Michael Reagan was soloist.

Mrs. William Clark Everett of Greenville was her sister's honor attendant. Bridesmaids included Susan Rose and Mary Elizabeth Carson of Bethel, sisters of the bridegroom, Mrs. David Wayne Loop of Jacksonville, Fla., Betty Grace Smith of Raleigh, Frances Clayton Plumlee of Raleigh, Dorothy Ann Worsham of Chattanooga, Tenn. and Stephanie Padgett Moore of Nashville, Tenn. They wore floor length gowns of voile styled with an ivory bodice with a rounded neckline and short puffed sleeves edged in cluny lace. The skirt was fashioned in azure blue and sashed at the waistline in raspberry. They carried loose cascade bouquets of rubrum lilies and gypsophilia.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and groomsmen were William Markam Green of Robersonville, brother of the bride, Thomas Clayton Carson III of Bethel, Michael John Bolt of Shelby, Christopher Clyde James and Charles Neal James, both of Greenville, Ken Stewart Perry of Bethel and William Oscar Peele III of Williamston.

A garden reception was held at the home of the bride.

The couple will be living in Bethel after a wedding trip to Sea Island, Ga.

A wedding breakfast was held Saturday at the Holiday Inn in Greenville for the bridal couple, their families and out-of-town guests. Aunts and uncles of the bride were hosts and hostesses.

A rehearsal dinner was held Friday evening at the Greenville Country Club given by the parents, family and friends of the bridegroom. The couple was then honored at a dance given by the parents of the bride and friends of the bridal couple.

The bride was honored at a bridesmaids luncheon Friday held at the home of Mrs. Charles L. Wilson of Robersonville. Mrs. David Wayne Loop of Jacksonville was co-hostess.

The bride graduated from St. Mary's College in Raleigh and the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill. She is a communications specialist with the East Carolina School of Medicine and Pitt County Hospital. The bridegroom attended North Carolina State University in Raleigh and is engaged in farming.

On The Young Side

By Lisa Wang

After a schoolwide vote was taken on Thursday, "The 1980's" has been chosen as this year's theme for homecoming which is scheduled for the first week in November.

The week's activities will culminate in the Friday night football game and dance afterwards. The band, Pocket Addition, will be performing at the dance.

The newly formed Pep Club has elected officers. LaVerne Blackwell will be serving as president and will be assisted by Lynette Hammond, vice president, John Ward, secretary, Glenda Daniels, treasurer, Cedric Reid, sergeant-at-arms and Delano Williams, parliamentarian.

The club, which is open to all students, was designed to promote school spirit at all sports activities.

Two other clubs also held elections recently to name new officers. To lead the Health Careers Club are Merri Ellen Kendrick, president, Lisa Wang, vice president, Jennie Randolph, secretary, and Stephanie Deans, treasurer.

Carol Dohm Gives Talk

She told of the year she and her family spent in Oxford, England. They returned home prior to the opening of school.

Mrs. Charles Lewis, president, conducted the business meeting. Project ideas for the coming year were discussed. Year books were distributed and books for the year were displayed.

Margaret Schiller, November hostess, announced a tour of the Rose High School live project, a passive solar house, prior the meeting. Members and guests are asked to meet at the house site.

Vows Said In Noon Ceremony

GREENSBORO — Mary Lou Beard, daughter of Mrs. E.N. Beard III of Greensboro and the late Mr. Beard, was married Saturday to William David Murray, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Murchison Murray of Greenville.

The double ring ceremony was performed by Dr. Joseph Mullin at high noon in Memorial Chapel, First Presbyterian Church. A program of organ music was presented by Franklin Pethel.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and ushers included Franklin Clark and Rob Dyer of Greenville and Rusty Sherrill of Greensboro.

The bride wore a gown of ivory satin which featured a Queen Anne neckline and empire bodice. Alencon appliques detailed the bodice and fitted net sleeves. Brussels motifs edged in alencon lace accented the A-line skirt. Scalloped lace edged the skirt and chapel length train which was accented with scattered appliques. She wore a walking length mantilla of silk illusion accented with alencon lace and Brussels motifs . She carried a bouquet of gardenias.

The attendants were each dressed in a gown of American beauty tissue taffeta styled with pouf sleeves, scooped necklines and a natural waistline with a pleated cummerbund and bouffant skirt. Their bouquets were of rubrum lilies.

The couple will live in High Point after a wedding trip to the Virgin Islands.

Update Fashions With Legwear

Legwear is an affordable way to update your fashion look for fall. Both sheers and opaques offer a palatte of colors ranging from teal, grape, garnet, mauve, paprika, chestnut and deep gold to subtle pastels, says Dr. Judieth Mock, extension clothing specialist at North Carolina State University.

Black, off-white and gray are also popular.

Lace, dots and stripes will give new dimensions to sheers with treatments like raindrops, pointelle, pinstripes and seed-pearl, the specialist adds.

For long life, wash hosiery after each wearing. Hand wash delicate sheers or place hoisery in a mesh bag and machine wash it on the gentle cycle.

Keep a stain removal chart handy. Some spots and stains require special treatment before washing. It also helps to treat as soon as possible before stains become set in fibers.

Fun Collections End Milan Show

By DANIELA PETROFF
AP Fashion Writer

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Claude Montana for Complice and Luciano Soprani for Basile brought the showings of the Italian ready-to-wear collections for next spring and summer to a grande finale with two young fun-filled collections.

In from Paris, where he will soon present his own label collection, Montana appeared on the Milan runway Thursday for the first time to take a deserved bow.

Next a quick stop at the office to check the mail and read the papers in a cool, efficient pants suit with jean snaps in light blue linen, also known as imitation denim at a high price.

Then it's off to the beach in blue poplin Bermudas and Hawaiian shirt top. A plunge into the sea in a slick black and yellow bathing suit, complete with snorkel and fishing knife, then lunch in an olive green leather suit with blouson jacket and loose mid-calf skirt.

Afternoon sees Ms. Chic back into the city for an important business meeting in a brown and black pants suit with black cotton blouson jacket and chocolate satin pants.

But for evening the Basile woman takes off for her favorite oil well to drink in the pleasure of an Arabian night. White linen tunics complete with chador and harem pants of printed cotton voile combine to make her a sheik's delight.

Like most of the collections shown in Milan this week, the Complice and Basile lines were in a somber color scheme of black, gray and brown with spurts of fuchsia red, sea green and peacock blue.

Dear Abby

Self-Esteem Eases Her Pain

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Today would have been my mother's 53rd birthday. I say "would have been" because five years ago she checked into a local motel, hung out the "Do Not Disturb" sign and took an overdose of sleeping pills. She lived in a big city, and we didn't find her until two days later, despite a frantic search.

I cannot begin to describe the hell that I, her oldest daughter, have gone through since. I kept asking myself, "Why would a beautiful, respected, successful businesswoman do such a thing? Why didn't I see, hear or feel it coming? What could I have done to stop her? Why didn't she tell me how much she was hurting? And worst of all, if she really loved me, how could she leave me like this?"

Those questions haunted me. Ending one's own life is a tragedy, but the guilt borne by the survivors is also tragic.

After a loved one has committed suicide, counseling for the survivors is very helpful, but it is also important to keep busy. They should try new experiences and new challenges in order to build their self-confidence and self-esteem. Some suggestions:

1) Volunteer to work with children in hospitals, preschools and public schools, Boy/Girl Scouts, YMCA and other social organizations.

2) Work with foreign adults and students who are struggling to learn English. Local high schools with foreign students can help you get started, and you need no foreign language skills or previous experience.

3) Become a homemaker aide through your state family and child service agency. Many young women today are on public assistance and need help in learning simple household budgeting, child care and homemaking skills.

4) Join a small church and learn about its various services and activities.

5) Take adult education classes; everything from shorthand to cake decorating is offered. Or join a service club like the Red Cross.

6) Join the Peace Corps. It has people starting at 43, 62 and 77. There is no age limit.

MAKING IT IN MISSOURI

DEAR MAKING IT: Thank you for an inspiring letter that may help others to make it, too.

DEAR ABBY: The woman I work for and have known for a long time offered me $300 to seduce her 15-year-old stepson. She thought it was time he had some experience. I am not that kind of woman, but I could sure use the money.

I am 31, divorced and respectable, if that makes any difference. Would it be wrong?

UNDECIDED IN ATHERTON

DEAR UNDECIDED: You're wise to question the proposition. It's not only "wrong," it's illegal. The boy is a minor.

DEAR ABBY: I see nothing wrong with asking my son or his wife what his salary is. After all, I am only interested in their well-being.

My husband disagrees, and we've decided to abide by your opinion.

LOVING MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Grown children are entitled to their privacy. I vote with your husband.

about the health hazards of smoking and drinking, but there's another habit I never see mentioned — chewing tobacco! My husband has this habit. The effect on his breath, teeth and gums is awful, not to mention what it must do to his mouth and stomach. (I know he's not supposed to swallow it, but since it's impossible to spit in church or other public places, what else can he do?)

He's a very considerate man, and he doesn't keep six or seven cans around the house to spit in, but every time I want to lean over and give him a big fat kiss, I see a big lump in his cheek, so I lean over in the other direction and forget it. I love him, but when I see him put that pinch between his cheek and gum, I'd like to slug him.

Am I the only woman who feels that way?

TURNED OFF IN TEXAS

DEAR TURNED OFF: I'm sure you're not. But don't be so quick to assume that only men chew tobacco. Some women have the habit, too.

By SHARON BROOM
N.C. Museum of Art

A major contribution of eight artworks ranging from ancient Egyptian artifacts to contemporary abstract paintings has been given by Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Hanes of Winston-Salem to the North Carolina Museum of Art. The gifts include an unusually well-preserved boat model with human figures from ancient Egypt's Middle Kingdom and a bust of the goddess Sekhmet from the New Kingdom; "Raqqa II," a monumental canvas by contemporary artist Frank Stella; and "Pi," a 1960 work by Morris Louis.

Gordon and Helen C. Hanes, nationally known for their involvement in the arts, have long been associated with the North Carolina Museum of Art. Hanes, who is chairman of the museum's board of trustees, has been a member of the State Art Museum Building Commission since its inception in 1967 and was a member of the Art Commission, which preceded the board of trustees, from 1973 to 1978.

MIDDLE KINGDOM BOAT . . . A well-preserved wood boat model with oarsmen, 41 inches long, of the Egyptian Middle Kingdom, is one of the treasures of eight art works ranging from ancient artifacts to contemporary paintings given by Mrs. and Mrs. Gordon Hanes to the North Carolina Museum of Art. The two have contributed substantially to the Museum's collections through the years. (Photo Courtesy N.C. Museum of Art)

Museum Director Dr. Edgar Peters Bowron, in announcing the gifts, noted that they continue a tradition of generosity on the part of the Hanes family toward the North Carolina museum. "Thanks to their generosity, the museum was able to significantly enrich its Egyptian, Greek and Roman collections and to establish, practically from scratch, a collection of African, Oceanic and New World art.

"The Hanes also have given the museum most of the significant works of contemporary art in its collec- Frank Stella's "Raqqa II" (1970), which measures 25 feet wide and 10 feet high, is a major addition to the museum's contemporary collection. Born in Massachusetts in 1936, Stella achieved early recognition with his first exhibition in 1959 and has received worldwide acclaim since then.

Stella developed the concept of the irregularly shaped canvas, a major departure from the typical rectangular canvas which had dominated art in modern times. Color and shape became his primary concerns, and he found himself at the center of a contemporary movement which argued for the elimination of storytelling from art.

"Raqqa II" is one of the last works in Stella's "Protractor Series" of the late 1960's, which developed variations on the basic forms of intersecting circles and squares. These complex, dynamic and colorful canvases have come to be regarded as virtual symbols of contemporary American art.

Stella is represented in numerous museum collections in the U.S., Europe and Japan, including the Museum of Modern Art in New York and the National Gallery in Washington.

Further adding to the museum's collection of modern art is "Pi," an important work by Morris Louis. A Baltimore native, Louis later moved to Washington where he became a preeminent figure among the Washington Color School painters.

In 1954, Louis began to experiment with spilling thinned acrylic paint onto unstretched canvas, rather than applying paint with the traditional brush. This technique culminated in a 1960 series called the "Unfurleds," characterized by huge canvases with blank centers framed by diagonal stripes across the ends. "Pi," which measures almost 9x15 feet, is a prime example from this series.

Since his death in 1962, Louis has come to be regarded as a central figure in the development of abstract art. His works are represented in the Museum of Modern Art and the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York, the National Gallery in Washington and museums in Europe, Australia and Israel.

In contrast to these recent works is a wooden model of a boat with human figures, dating from the 12th or 13th dynasties of Egypt's Middle Kingdom period (2052-1778 B.C.). Such wooden models depicting daily activities were often placed in tombs to serve the deceased in the next life. This model, 41 inches long and 30 inches tall, is among the best preserved examples in the U.S. The brightly painted figures give an air of spontaneity to the piece, capturing in three dimensions a vignette of ancient Egypt that we know otherwise only from tomb paintings.

In other ancient Egyptian work, the goddess Sekhmet appears in female form with the head of a lioness. This fragment, broken above the waist, comes from a standing figure thought to have been located at the Temple of Mut of Karnak, where numerous examples of a seated version of Sekhmet are still in place. Twenty-three inches tall, the carving in black granite is of impressive quality and preservation, and beautifully illustrates the fine stoneworking techniques that characterize the best of Egyptian sculpture. It dates from the 18th dynasty of the New Kingdom period (1403-1365 B.C.).

Hanes, who retired in 1978 as president and chairman of the Hanes Corporation, is currently serving on the board of Hanes Dye and Finishing Company. He is a member of the Collector's Committee of the National Gallery of Art, the Folger Shakespeare Library Commitee and the National Board of the Smithsonian Associates.

Visitors will get their first look at the major recent acquisitions when the museum opens to the public in its new building on Blue Ridge Boulevard April 9-10, 1983.

Two Women Never Met Their Benefactor

Heirs To Royalties Of Conan Creator

By PAT REMICK

RANGER, Texas (UPI) — Alla Ray Kuykendall was only 18 the day Robert Howard, pulp magazine writer and creator of a barbarian named Conan, killed himself in a small West Texas town 30 miles away.

Today at the age of 64, Alla Ray Kuykendall Morris and her mother, the first Alla Ray Kuykendall, receive thousands of dollars in royalties annually from the works of a man they never knew, Howard, and whose creations — including Conan — languished in relative obscurity for more than 20 years.

"It's been very interesting," said Mrs. Morris. "It has been very nice to have all this extra money."

It was a June day 46 years ago in the West Texas town of Cross Plains when Howard, only 30, put a .38-caliber Colt to his head when he learned his comatose mother would never again recognize him.

She died two days later and his father, Dr. I.M. Howard, never got over their deaths.

Before the younger Howard died, he supported himself by selling stories filled with gore, barbarism, black magic and the occult to pulp magazines.

Howard's best-known character today is Conan, a barbarian who lived 12,000 years ago. His adventures have been recorded in new books using Howard's original storylines and in comic books, a comic strip and the movie, "Conan the Barbarian" — the first of three films planned about the character.

"He had a marvelous imagination," said Mrs. Morris, a former English literature teacher. "He wrote completely out of his environment. He never traveled in any way and yet he wrote with a good deal of accuracy about the various periods and places he describes."

"My father had a small hospital and, during the war years, he was very hard pressed to get doctors," Mrs. Morris said. "Through my aunt and uncle, my daddy learned of Dr. Howard's plight and he brought him here. He was simply unable to maintain a practice by himself. It helped daddy and made it easy for Dr. Howard."

The doctor's possessions consisted of a couple of thousand dollars in the bank, some manuscripts in a trunk — and the copyrights to Robert's work.

"It was meaningless to us, comparatively," said Mrs. Morris.

Kuykendall received a letter from a literary agency informing him of the royalties from the works of his late friend's son.

"My father every once in a while would get a check for a couple of hundred dollars, or maybe $80 once or twice a year," she said.

About a year after her father died in 1959, the literary agency closed down. It suggested that Howard's property be put in the hands of a Pasadena, Tex., paper warehouse operator named Glenn Lord, who was a fan of Howard's and had collected many of his works.

"It was he who built up the interest in Conan when he took over as literary agent," Mrs. Morris said. "He began collecting things and sending copies of manuscripts to publishers and magazines.

"By sheer perseverance and enthusiasm, he created a market. It started growing slowly about the late 1950s. It gradually grew and grew and grew until by the 1960s, Robert became quite a popular writer. From then on, it just burgeoned.

"All this time we didn't know a thing about it except we'd get checks, and they became more regular and larger."

But along with the bigger dividend checks came copyright problems. So the Kuykendalls and Philadelphia science fiction writer Sprague de Camp established Conan Properties, of which the Kuykendalls own half.

De Camp had edited some of Howard's works for publication in book form and began writing new stories using Howard's characters and storylines.

Although Mrs. Morris declines to reveal the amount of royalties she and her 89-year-old mother have received, she acknowledges it is in the thousands. She says it has been put to good use.

"We've established a permanent collection at Ranger Junior College with museum type bookcases so it will be lasting," she said.

"We've helped enormously with the library in Cross Plains by supplying them with copies and funds. We've maintained the graves and we've given a good many things in the names of Robert and Dr.I.M. Howard."

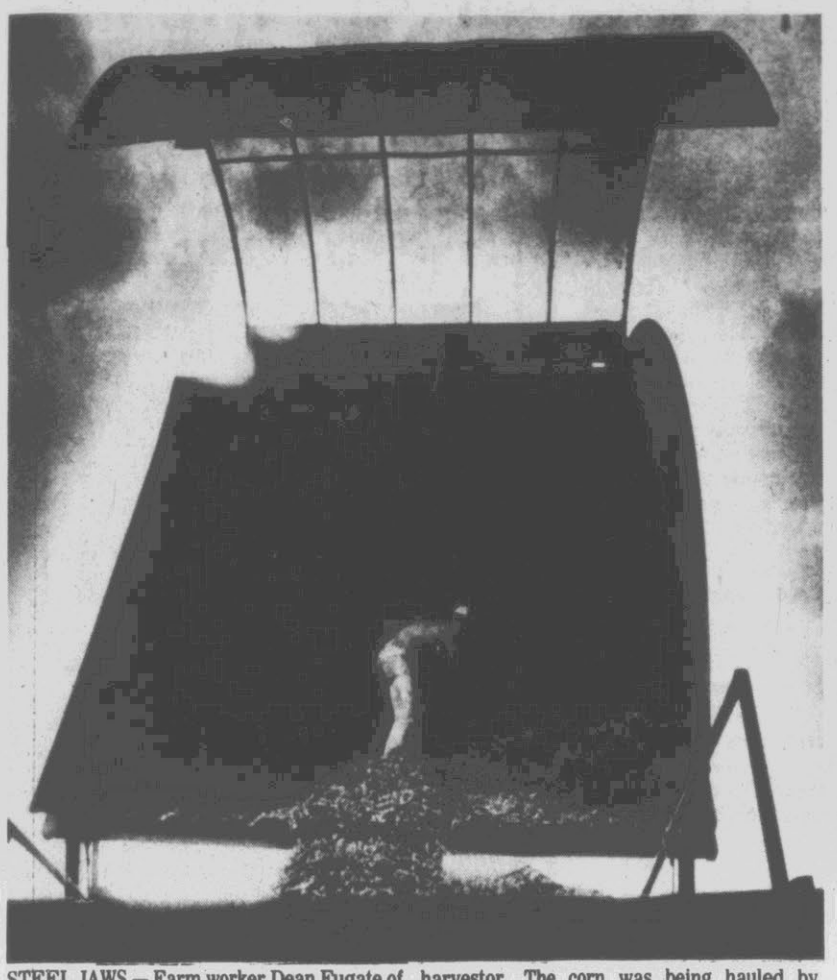
WPA Art, Orr Etchings On View At GMA



STEEL JAWS — Farm worker Dean Fugate of Blacksburg, Va., looks as if he's about to be devoured by a giant steel monster. Fugate was cleaning corn silage from a large dumpster, which is used to catch the cuttings from a harvestor. The corn was being hauled by trailer to a silo, where it will be stored and later used for winter feeding of livestock. (AP Laserphoto)

Two sections of the permanent collection of the Greenville Museum of Art — the Works Progress Administration group of graphics, and the Louis Orr etchings of North Carolina historical landmarks — are being exhibited at the Greenville Museum of Art, 802 S. Evans St.

The WPA works are being shown in the North Gallery, and the Orr etchings in the South Gallery.

The WPA Graphics Collection was presented in 1943 to the Community Arts Center that was the forerunner to the Greenville Art Center (later renamed the Greenville Museum of Art). This group of 20 prints made by artists active during the Depression years of the 1930s was acquired through the efforts of the late Rachel Maxwell Moore and Lucy Cherry Crisp.

Mary Anne Pennington, the museum's executive director, notes there is no central style or theme prevailing in the 20 prints. "The media used encompasses all printmaking techniques then employed and the subject matter is broad in range," she says.

The 50 Louis Orr etchings of North Carolina landmarks on view in the South Gallery was presented to the museum in 1951 by the late Dr. Robert Lee Humber. Orr, a French artist known for his skill in this field of art requiring meticulous detail to attention combine with true artistry, was persuaded by Humber to come to North Carolina to record the state's outstanding natural landmarks and historic buildings, old and contemporary. The result was a collection of 50 prints covering places and buildings across the state from the mountains to the seashore.

"Louis Orr did not make a drawing of a building but a portrait, and endows it with personality and enduring life," Humber stated at the time Orr finished the series after 12 years of working on the plates.

Both collections have recently undergone extensive preservation efforts including new matting and framing with funds provided for conservation purposes by the Rachel Maxwell Moore Art Foundation.

This is the first opportunity in several years the public has had to view the WPA collection and the Orr collection in their entirety at the same time.

ECU Museum Appraised

ECU News Bureau

"It's a beautiful exhibition place," said the director of the Huntsville, Ala., Museum of Art, referring to East Carolina University's chief art exhibition area.

The Alabama visitor, Donald Knaub, was at ECU recently as a representative of the American Association of Museums. Under sponsorship of the association's Museum Assessment Program, Knaub examined ECU's Gray Gallery and the permanent collection of the ECU Museum of Art and will report his recommendations later in a detailed written document.

Knaub said his early impressions were that the museum's internal operation is "set up nicely" and that the Gray Gallery facilities have "tremendous potential" as an exhibition area.

Knaub's visit was coordinated by Randolph Osman, director of the ECU museum.

Gray Gallery, the largest exhibition facility maintained by the ECU School of Art, is located in the east end of Jenkins Fine Arts Center on ECU's main campus.

Edenton To Celebrate Tea Party Anniversary

EDENTON — The 208th anniversary of the Edenton Tea Party will be observed Oct. 23 with main events getting under way at 10 a.m. and continuing until early evening.

It was on Oct. 25, 1774, that 51 Edenton women protested the tax the British had imposed on tea, the favorite beverage of Colonial America in the days before coffee and colas became America's popular drinks.

Among entertainments being offered on Tea Party Celebration Day is the award-winning 2nd North Carolina Regiment of Foote which will be hosting a 100-person military encampment of men, women and children in authentic 18th century dress, living as they might have in Revolutionary War times. A military parade will be held and demonstrations will include tomahawk throwing and battle skirmishes.

An authentic sailing vessel, the skipjack "Norfolk," will be anchored along the waterfront and can be boarded and inspected except during the time it will be engaged in a mock sea battle. The vessel is provided as a special goodwill gesture from the city of Norfolk, Va.

Other attractions will include music by the Suffolk (Va.) Hornpipe and Clog Association; the 18th century Dance Ensemble from Williamsburg, Va.; the North Carolina Artist Flute and Percussion Ensemble, and hammered dulcimer music by Michael Mann.

Activities planned for children include hoop-rolling, top spinning, pea dab shooting, horseshoes and free movies. A special one-man show of political cartoons by Dwane Powell of the Raleigh News and Observer will be held in the courthouse.

Additionally, period craftsmen will give demonstrations on the Courthouse Green, fortunes will be told by a "witch woman," and an archaeological display of Afro-American culture of the 18th century will be on view at the Municipal Building.

The Optimist Club will prepare and sell meals cooked in open kettles, and Penelope's Tea Room will be open.

Book News

By Hansy Jones

Teachers, den mothers, scout masters, and leaders of all types of youth groups will find, in the juvenile collection at Shepperd Library, some imaginative answers to the ubiquitous question of how to celebrate the next Big Occasion.

"Holiday Programs for Boys and Girls," a new and revised addition by Aileen Fisher, is indeed a treasury of plays, poems, skits, group readings, and recitations for young people of elementary and junior high ages. In addition to a variety of material for the big days on the calandar, there are also hard-to-find activities for less celebrated occasions such as Election Day, Book Week and Arbor Day. From a simple classroom program to an elaborate assembly, it is difficult to imagine an occasion for which something appropriate can't be found in this collection. All of the selections include simple requirements for successful staging, and all are royalty-free for schools, clubs and similar amateur groups.

For groups who would like to incorporate a little thoughtfulness into their fun, "Let's Find the Big Idea" is a fun to act out selection of fables and stories dramatized into skits, playlets and plays that can be produced almost any place with very little practice and simple props. The unique feature of this selection in the opportunity offered for audience participation. Before the performance, the listeners are asked to pay careful attention to the dialogue because at the end they will be asked "What's the Big Idea?" This is an ideal volume for any group of young people who are interested in discovering and sharing some big ideas together. The selection is wide enough to provide something appropriate for any occasion.

"Good Stories for Great Holidays" offers that all-important ingredient for any celebration — just the right story. Compiled by Frances Jenkins Olcott, this delightful old-fashioned potpourri of folk tales, fairy tales, myths, legends and historical vignettes is designed to privide story-telling material for each of yearly holidays. The time-tested stories range from early twentieth century America to some ancient literary sources. Among the authors sre such distinguished names as Samuel Pepys, Henry Cabot Lodge, Charles Dickens, Hans Christian Anderson, the Brothers Grimm and Ovid. Suited to reading aloud or to children's own reading this is a cornucopia of stories perfect for getting into the holiday spirit the year round.

Autobiography Reveals 25 Years Of Suffering

"The dear, sweet, miserable, lousy, rotten poison, that was my master. Yes master, I'm at your disposal ... do with me as you wish ..." This is an excerpt from the poignant account of author Fred Roebuck's alcoholic enslavement, which spanned 25 years of shame, self-degredation, good intentions and broken promises.

The book deserves reading by anyone who has had or been close to anyone with the devastating experience of alcoholism. It tells the story of Buck Roebuck's early bouts with drinking when he was shackled with an inferiority complex that stemmed from an overbearing father and an abusive twin brother.

At age 18, Buck joined the Army and by the time he returned home he was a confirmed alcoholic. Years of untold agony followed in which he lost his wife and children because of his drinking problem.

He caught freight trains to undetermined destinations, lived eight years on skid row, drank sterno, bay rum, shaving lotion and antiseptics for alcoholic substitutes when the real thing was not available.

Written in a simple, Southern dialect, the book reveals years of being torn between the love of right principles in living and the love of alcohol. This duality festered futile battles within him that led to periods of drunken stupors, days of panhandling to finance his habit, of loitering and charges of vagrancy. At times he wanted death, but always lacked the courage to bring it about.

Roebuck possessed an insatiable passion for explanations to unanswered, profound questions. Why was he born? What was mankind's destiny? If God was just, why so much suffering and injustice? When will it end? None of it made sense, so he continued to search for solace in a bottle.

Physically, Roebuck became a wreck. He lost most of his teeth in fights, 40 percent of his stomach and part of his liver. He acquired tuberculosis and his weight fell to 109 pounds. All human dignity was gone and he touched the bottom.

In desperation and for what Roebuck says was the lack of help from any other source, he appealed to God, and at this point began a miraculous road to recovery. Roebuck has remained sober for eight years.

The success of this book, penned without a great deal of literary skill, is dervived from its personal emotional and dramatic impact.

Roebuck's victory gives us a definite sense of achievement, but since there is little explanation of how he resolved the nagging spiritual questions that had bothered him for years, it leaves us with emotionalism without logic.

At any rate, "The Trail Of A Tramp" provides the reader with an incentive to dig for those answers, based on sound Bible truths.

Croatan Hiking Reservations Available

Some reservations are still open for volunteers to go on an early November backpacking-hiking "Trek for Life and Breath" along the Neusiok Trail in the Croatan National Forest south of New Bern.

The trip is sponsored by the Eastern Region of the American Lung Association of North Carolina as a benefit fund-raising event.

The three-day hike, to take place Nov. 5-7, is free. However, participants must raise $200 in donations from sponsors. The sponsors' money will be used to help support educational programs and services to lung diseases such as emphysema, asthma, cancer and chronic bronchitis.

Chairman for the trek is Franc White, host of "The Southern Sportsman" TV show. White plans to do the cooking and will film the trek for use on his program.

Trekkers will meet at the Pinecliff Campground at Cherry Point on Nov. 5, where they will camp for the night. After breakfast Saturday, they will hike for 10 miles, camp Saturday night, and hike the final 10 miles on Sunday. Ed Dwan, forester with the Croatan National Forest service, will be the guide on the trail.

Participants need to be in good physical condition. A limit of 50 people has been set for the event. Interested trekkers can pick up registration forms at local sporting goods stores or contact the lung association at 752-5093, or write to: P.O. Box 1407, Greenville, N.C., 27834.

Eskimo Theater

By JO-ANNE BYRNE

ST. PAUL, Minn. (UPI) — Her black mask is fearsome, the eyes red-rimmed. She hisses, snarls, pounces and then coyly struts for an audience tense and visibly frightened.

Makka Kleist is one of seven touring members of the Tukak Theater, the world's first professional Eskimo theater troupe.

It came into existence because four Greenlanders who wanted to become actors were rejected by Danish theater schools.

Ms. Kleist, 31, recalls the hurt she experienced when people said, "How can you be an actor, you Eskimo you?"

In 1977 she joined the fledgling Tukak, the first professional Greenlandic theater and the first Inuit (Eskimo) theater in the world.

Now she stuns audiences with frightening performances such as one demonstrating the ancient art of masking.

In ancient days the Inuit mask was created from blubber, animal blood and plant colors. In today's sophisticated times the mask goes on swiftly with greasepaint.

"The idea is to make your face as ugly as possible," Ms. Kleist said. "You have to know the part of your face you can use to become really frightening," she added, inserting a wooden block in her mouth to stretch her face into a Satanic grimace.

Tukak players use the mask as a learning process to teach children the meaning of fear, Nilsson said.

Children of today, surfeited with the violence of television, "don't know how to react when really faced with a drastic situation," he said. "It is more important today to know fear."

Tukak does much more than frighten children. The group has developed nine plays that touch on the culture of Greenland, a country in which 80 percent of the people are Inuit.

"We didn't want to copy European theater," Nilsson said. "We wanted to try to achieve the tradition of the storyteller in the theater."

Tukak has fused the language, music and masks of tribal Greenland with modern European performance techniques and uses a theatrical form in which the actor, rather than the written play, is the focus.

Tukak's best known play, "Inuit-Human Beings," can be interpreted both as a myth about the colonization of Greenland, or as a drama about the suppression of a people and the process by which it frees itself.

When Nilsson, an actor himself, agreed to train the four original members of the troupe, it was expected that the group would return to Greenland.

"But the impact of the theater was so strong," he said, "we decided to settle down as a professional theater school for Greenlanders."

The school's base remains Denmark for economic reasons. One third of Tukak's current annual comes from government support and the remainder from box office receipts and touring.

Tukak's current tour, its first in the United States with the exception of appearances in Alaska, will take the group to both the East and West Coasts. Several performances in St. Paul were part of a "Scandinavia Today-Minnesota" celebration.

Nilsson believes what he has seen while touring the United States and Canada indicates his troupe has achieved much more than native American theaters. Noting Tukak is distinct not only because all of the actors are Inuit but also "because we are making good theater," he said Tukak can compete with any company in the world.

"We have reached a point where we are acknowledged because of our art and not because of who we are."

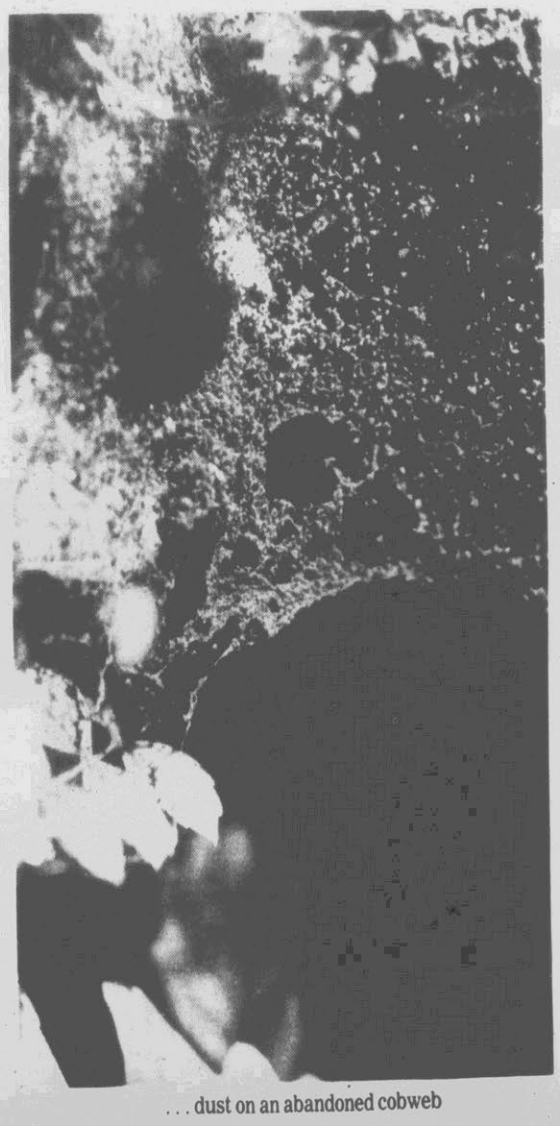
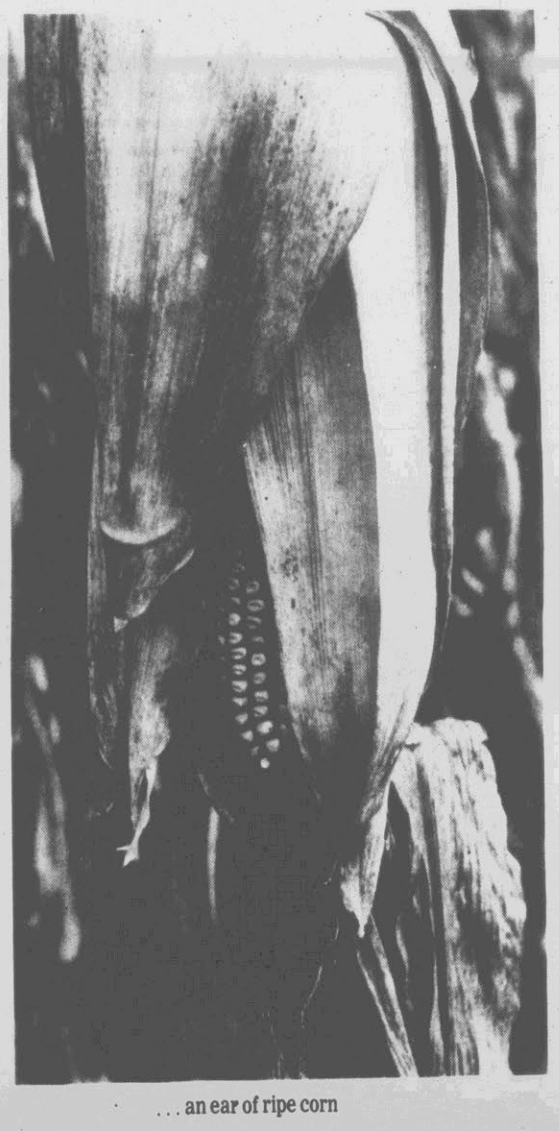
October, The Golden Month

Text, Photos By Jerry Raynor



. . . dust on an abandoned cobweb



. . . an ear of ripe corn

October's first color is gold, running the gamut from pale lemon to deep burnished bronze. When the tenth month of the year arrives in eastern North Carolina, the long green summer is at its tail end.

Green tobacco has been cured to harvest gold. Fields of corn have ripened, and farmers are busy gathering in the heavy ripe ears.

Leaves of thick rows of soybeans turn lemon gold, then brown, and vivid orange pumpkins are transported from the vine to be piled in yards for sale.

In city lawns and in the countryside, sycamore trees and grapevines are among the first of leaf shedding nature to display tints of cream, gold and russet in their leaves.

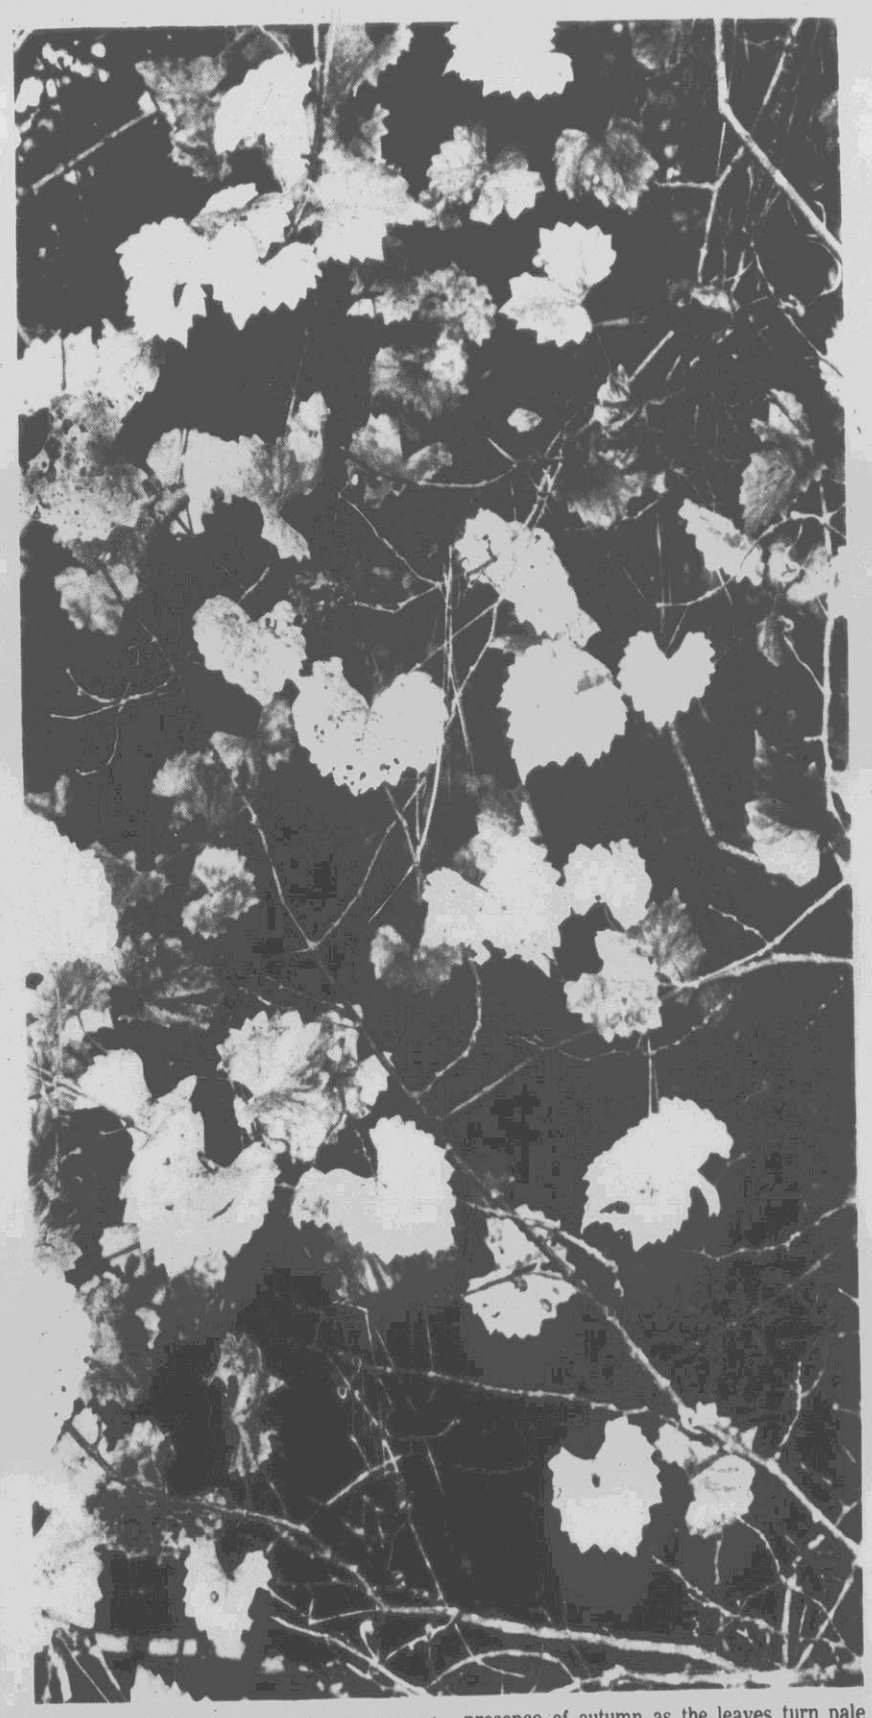
Gold-hued wild flowers blaze like golden fires across the eastern North Carolina landscape in October. In ditches, along the borders of forests, in open fields, goldenrod in half a dozen varities are at their peak. This flower, more than any other of October's many yellow flowers, is the symbol of October as the golden month.

October is also, like April, a month in which lavendars, purples and lilacs make a colorful outdoor display.

Sweeping sprays of gerardia, spikes of trilisa and stands of wild purple asters are in full flower, often mixed in with gold flowers and the whites of rabbit tobacco and thick clustered white asters.

In this first full month of autumn, the Indian summer days are ones mostly radiant with the lingering warmth of summer touched by the first suggestion of cooler autumn days just weeks away.

. . . soft light of an Indian summer October day filters through clouds to reflect on the waters of Neuse River



. . . leaves of the wild grape vine are among the first of forest growth to herald the presence of autumn as the leaves turn pale yellow and brown

Life As It's Lived

By Gail Michaels

The national trend toward conservatism has prompted a rash of articles lauding the value of family traditions. Traditions promote a sense of continuity, a pride in family membership, and the beatitude that comes from preserving something so wonderfully special and worthwhile, or so they say.

But just as I've never been able to believe that Olivia Walton never raised her voice to her children, I can't beleive that one generation's traditions can be adopted by the next generations with unqualified success, especially those traditions which were originally practical solutions to problems that no longer exist.

My grandmother, for instance, always had a cedar Christmas tree. When her children were small, she didn't have access to any other kind. Now that she does, she still prefers the cedar because she associates it with so many lovely memories. That's fine, but they're her memories, not mine. The only memory I have of those ceders is the agony of helping to trim them. I'd rather decorate barbed wire.

Obviously, I didn't find it difficult to give up that particular tradition. Others, like big family gatherings on Christmas day, have been harder to give up. Unfortunately, no normal 6 year old is going to believe after 11 hours on the road that the large lump shaped like a Big Wheel under the forbidden blanket in the back of the stationwagon is the sweater she helped pick out for her grandfather. So whatever family we gather together with on Christmas Day has to gather under our roof.

But the misery of altering a beloved holiday tradition is nothing compared to the misery of altering day-to-day traditions like child-rearing customs. These are the traditions least likely to promote family unity, and most likely to survive. We despise them, yet they're so deeply ingrained that exorcising them is like cutting out one's own appendix.

Cleaning one's plate is among the worst. I remember the hours I sat staring at cold macaroni and cheese feeling anything but pity for the children in China. Those same children, who are now located in India and Somalia, excite more compassion in Meg.

"I know what we can do," she said, staring down at her plate of cold lasagna. "We can wrap it up in aluminum foil and send it to them by mail."

"When they got it it wouldn't be any good."

"It's not any good now."

"Young lady ...

"Well, it isn't, and besides, if I eat it , I might get fat and make those poor children feel even worse."

"That is not the point. You have access to the nurishment that they don't have and you should be appreciative."

The thin ice of logic was giving way. "Eat your dinner. Now!" I roared.

"All right," she grumbled, attempting to seperate the ricotto cheese from the rest of the concoction. "But nobody makes you clean your plate."

"But I clean it, don't I?"

"But nobody makes you."

"My mother used to, and that's why I clean my plate now and why I make you clean your plate. Do you understand?"

Cotton Stages N.C. Comeback

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The seeds are being sown for the comeback of "King Cotton," once the pick of Southern crops.

Last year, North Carolina produced about 95,000 bales of cotton at 480 pounds per ba e, considerably below the peak year of cotton production in 1926, when there were 1,208,000 bales of cotton produced at 500 pounds a bale.

But it does represent a considerable increase since 1967, when the crop hit its all-time low with only 43,000 bales produced in the state.

Ironically, one of the reasons cotton has found new life is that Southern farmers are looking for crops to replace tobacco, which supplanted cotton as the state's No. 1 cash crop during the 1930s.

"Farmers should think seriously about turning to cotton," said J. K. Jones, vice president for agricultural research for Cotton Incorporated's Raleigh office.

"What other alternatives to tobacco are there? Corn and soybeans can't bring the prices cotton brings when conditions are right. And peanuts have had their problems lately," Jones said.

Walter Johnson, cotton specialist for the state Department of Agriculture, agrees that farmers should consider growing cotton. But he and Allen York, an N.C. State University agricultural extension specialist, say cotton's resurgence may be put off by the state of the economy.

"You don't grow something because you love it or because your granddaddy grew it. It's strictly a matter of profit," he said.

Stereo Emphasis Shifts To Cars

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

The high fidelity industry presents a paradox. Over the past 30 years — its period of greatest growth — technical excellence has reached a high level of development.

At least one industry leader says that nothing introduced in the near future is likely to greatly improve on the best home equipment already being marketed. Despite this achievement, stereo components are owned by only an estimated 20 to 30 percent of Americans.

Reasons sometimes suggested for the apparent disparity n the worth of the products and their consumer appeal have included the difficulty of understanding the technical data necessary to select components wisely and the higher cost of stereo in comparison with other home entertainment products such as television sets.

The industry's apparent inability to present its case persuasively to the buying public is also a part of the problem, say some observers.

According to Dr. Amar G. Bose, president of Bose Corp., a component maker specializing in speakers and amplifiers; the industry is pursuing a self-defeating course by marketing components with ever more complicated controls — which few consumers can or wish to figure out.

"Enthusiasts — for example those who read the high fidelity specialty magazines — represent less than one half of 1 percent of the market," he said. Yet much of the manufacturer advertising and salesmanship in audio specialty stores is geared to this tiny portion of the public.

Bose said simpler-to-operate components preassembled in a system at the retail or manufacturing level would find broader consumer acceptance and were, therefore, a likely future development.

Providing a highly accessible, superior listening experience on fine equipment would also lead to more consumer interest in high fidelity, he said.

Furthermore, Bose thinks he has found the ideal place to provide that listening experience — in the family car.

Recently Bose Corp. and Delco Electronics Division of General Motors held a news conference in New York to introduce such a car stereo system which will be offered as a $900 option in GM's most costly 1983 models — the Cadillac Seville and Eldorado, the Buick Riviera and the Oldsmobile Toronado.

Automobiles are generally downgraded as concert quality listening areas. The difficulties of providing a strong and unwavering signal in a vehicle moving at 50 mph through a variety of interference zones is enough to give an audio engineer a headache.

However, Bose said, once the signal difficulty is overcome (and today's best receivers and antennas eliminate the problem, in his opinion) the car has one factor going for it. It is an environment in which every variable important in the design of a perfect sound system can be known.

The variables are: size and description of listening environment; position of the sound source, and position of the listener. A designer of home stereos has no access to such data. But a designer of a sound system for a specific automobile does.

Bose and Delco say they spent three years and over $12 million to develop the system which is engineered specifically for each car and has four separate speaker-amplifers — one for each sitting position. The AM-FM clock radio-casette players have both Dolby and Dynamic Noise Reduction and automatic fast forward and rewind buttons. Though the sound is high tech, the controls are very simple, so no one will feel overwhelmed by them.

One reason the two companies were willing to spend the time and money to develop what is, after all, an automotive accessory is that changes in living patterns have made such amenities desirable to Americans. Commuting by car may occupy several hours a day, during which an individual may rely on the car radio for companionship and emotional gratification.

These factors help explain the growth in the number of factory-installed stereo radios that has been recorded in recent years. As recently as 1977, stereo sets were found in only about 35 percent of GM's cars. Today, more than 60 percent of GM vehicles have factory-installed stereo players.

Bad news for those who might think of buying the radio, but not the car. Since the systems are designed as an integral part of each car, they cannot be removed and used in other cars and it would be impossible to develop such a system for use as an add-on in any make of car, according to Bose. If you do that, you are back to the old drawback — you don't know the environment, speaker or listener position.

Q. How can I protect my fig bush this winter? Last year it froze back ti the ground. (C.R., Cherryville)

A. The best way to protect figs is to plant them where they are protected from the winter sun and from cold winter winds. Unseasonably warm temperatures during the winter may cause growth. If this happens, and a sudden freeze occurs, it is likely you will get a geat deal of winter killing. You can protect established plants when you hear of severe weather predictions by covering them with straw, cornstalks, or other suitable materials.

Q. I've got a poorly drained, low area that I would like to improve for flower beds by adding peat moss and sand. How much should I add to do an adequate job? (J.N., Greensboro)

A. Peat moss and sand are not likely to solve your problem. In fact, peat moss may make it worse by increasing the water holding capacity of the soil. You've got to drain the area in some way. Dig a trench, put in tile, grade it — do something to get the water off. If this is not possible, build a mound or berm on which to set your flowers.

Q. What is wrong with my peonies? One year they are filled with buds that open and are beautiful and the next year they are filled with buds but only a few open. (R.D., Hickory)

You are probably not doing anything wrong. The prime prerequisite for good growth and flowering is a well-drained soil. This may require adding organic matter and planting in a raised bed. Light is another factor in the successful growing of peonies. the plant will grow and produce good foliage in shady locations, but flowering will be sparse or non-existent. Select an area that receives six to eight inches of sunlight per day or thin out surrounding shade trees. Good air circulation will also decrease disease problems. FOr herbaceous peonies obtained this fall, be sure the tuber has three to five "eyes" or "buds" present.

How Precious Is Time?

NEW YORK (UPI) — Time is precious to some people. So precious that some may choose to pay $15,000 for a wristwatch to keep track of it.

That's the top price in a line of new platinum and platinum-gold watches that start at $1,500. They were introduced at a recent news conference in New York and are scheduled to reach stores early in 1983.

The manufacturer says they are the first to be made entirely of precious metal, except for the electronic component.

Many have a new ball bearing quartz movement.

Miro Bapic, president of Johnson Matthey Time company, of Geneva, Switzerland, says he expects each to become an heirloom.

The watches are stemless. The setting control is on the back and can be operated with a ballpoint pen tip or other pointed object — or the platinum key with diamond inset that comes with each watch.

Platinum is considered the rarest, noblest precious metal. Only 90 tons of it are mined annually in the free world, compared with more than 1,000 tons of gold. Six months and 10 tons of ore are required to extract one ounce of pure platinum. The refining process takes up to eight weeks, compared with one week to refine gold.

It is considered an ideal metal for jewelry and watches because it is acid and heat-resistant, has a high resistance to corrosion and is not susceptible to the effects of weather, water or oxygen.

While the comparative inexpensiveness of gypsum board first brought it to the attention of do-it-yourselfers many years ago, other qualities kept it in the best-seller class.

Gypsum board, sometimes called plasterboard, proved to be fire-resistant, a highly desirable asset, as well as resistant to decay and vermin. But like other wall materials, it is not perfect and sometimes requires attention.

Repairs become necessary when nails pop, covered pipes leak, children get rambunctious and changes of climate occur. The most common problem is nail-popping, a general term which covers a lot of territory but is easily recognizable when, to put it simply, nail heads become visible. You can't just hammer them back in because (1) it won't hide the damage, and (2) the nail heads will come out again.

Repair step No. 1 is to withdraw the offending nail. If it can't be done easily without the possibility of further damage to the board, place a piece of wood under the head of the hammer and then withdraw the nail carefully. I have seen instructions that call for hammering the nail back in and then covering the hole with compound, but experience has taught me that it is only a question of time before the popping occurs again.

When the old nail is out, renail the board a couple of inches away, but this time be sure to use a plasterboard nail, repeating the process wherever a nail is pulled out. There are several types of these special nails, but all are designed not to pop. When the new nail is driven in, the hammer head will make a slight dimple, but do not hammer so hard that the tough paper covering the core is broken, otherwise you will have an additional repair. The dimple and any hole made by the nail should be filled with a patching plaster or spackling compound. The area may have to be touched up to match the surrounding surface. By the way, any time gypsum board is painted, it's a good idea to save any unused paint for just such repairs.

Sometimes the best way to disguise a patch of this sort is to use wallpaper, using a design close to the one already there. Here again, leftover wallpaper comes in handy.

What causes nails in gypsum board to pop? It might be smooth nails were used or perhaps the installation procedures were not according to the instructions of plasterboard manufacturers. But most of the time, it's probably because the studs or joists or other structural members have contracted and expanded due to climatic changes, either suddenly or over a period of time. The same thing causes floors and stairs to squeak.

Gypsum board, once available mostly in white-paper finishes, now comes in almost any finish you can imagine, including simulated wood, and in several kinds of edge finishes, such as square, beveled, tapered and recessed. It can also be obtained in different thicknesses and in many sizes with a basic width of 4 feet.

Application of gypsum board is by adhesive or nailing. It can be painted or wallpapered and put up either vertically or horizantally.

(Various do-it-yourself subjects are discussed in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," which can be obtained by sending $1.50 to this paper at Box 5, Teaneck, NJ 07666.)

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG

Q. — I have some concrete work to do and have been told it is important to use clean sand. How do I determine whether sand is clean? Is the kind bought in lumber yards clean? My friend says there is a way to tell whether sand is clean by filling a jar with water and sand, but he does not know how the test is made. It sure would help if you know.

A. — The sand bought in lumber yards generally is all right for use in a concrete mix, but just to be certain, tell the dealer how it is to be used. The test you mention is a real old-timer. It consists of filling a jar with water to the halfway point. Add sand to the water until the mixture is at the three-quarter mark. Put a cover on the jar and mix well. Let it stand for a couple of hours. Should a lot of silt — say, a quarter of an inch — be on the top of the sand at that time, the sand should not be used for concrete mixture.

Q. — We are having a house built and having quite a discussion as to which side the kitchen should be on. I maintain it should be on the side where it will get the strongest winds, thus making it cool in the hot weather. Am I correct?

A. — Partly. It is the general belief that, when the kitchen is hit by the summer's prevailing winds, it will be cooler in the hot weather and warmer in the cold. Note the point about the summer's prevailing winds.

Q. — I intend to put a second floor in our garage for storage purposes. What size joists are needed? I assume they would be 16 inches apart.

A. — The joists can be either 2 by 6s or 2 by 8s, depending on how much weight is to be supported. The smaller joists will support people, but if you are using the floor for heavy storage also and-or a workshop, 2 by 8s are preferable. They should be 16 inches apart on center, not merely 16 inches apart. "On center" means from the center of one joist to the center of the next. The joists usually can be supported by the top plates of the walls, but where this is not possible, supports must be fastened to the wall studs.

Q. — After I found out how much it cost to install gutters and downspouts around my house, I decided to tackle the job myself. What can you tell me to make the job easier?

A. — Not enough in the amount of space available. Go to your local bookstore and find a book on the subject. Also, how about the establishment where you will purchase the considerable amount of material required? The chances are it has a booklet or some other informational data on the installation procedures. One of the most common mistakes of the novice in this type of project is to overlap the joints so that the water flows into the open joints rather than across the closed parts of the joints. Don't make that error and the chances are you will be to handle the job.

Q. — In spreading adhesive to lay resilient floor tiles, how much should be spread at one time?

A. — When using the black adhesive with asphalt and vinyl asbestos tiles, one-fourth of the floor. When using the adhesive for other kinds of tiles, no more than enough to handle about 10 tiles.

Parapsychology's Quest For Cross-Correspondence

Hunt Continues For Evidence Of Life After Death

By ROBERT MUSEL
UPI Senior Editor

LONDON (UPI) — The chapter in the history of parapsychology known as "The Cross-Correspondence" contains the "most persuasive" evidence yet assembled in favor of the theory that there is human survival after bodily death, says a prominent researcher.

Professor Arthur Ellison's reference to this curious and thought-provoking episode in his presidential address to the Society for Psychical Research stirred the embers of a venerable controversy.

Ellison's claim sent some of his listeners to consult files still awaiting complete unravelling although the first of the 3,000 scripts involved were sent in by mediums more than 80 years ago.

The Cross-Correspondence scripts are known by that name as a kind of shorthand label for the communications — if that's what they are — taken down by 12 mediums in different parts of the world from Boston to India over a period of 30 years by automatic or trance writing.

Ellison, a distinguished engineer, said in an interview he mentioned the Cross Correspondence in his presidential address partly in the hope those scripts still undeciphered would be studied by someone with the requisite qualifications.

He or she will be hard to find, he said. The task needs someone with vast literary knowledge in English, Latin and Greek and the private means to spend months and years in research.

As it stands, partly revealed, he said, "The Cross-Correspondence is the most persuasive evidence we have in my view for human survival after bodily death. I myself am fairly persuaded that we do survive."

Ellison is head of the Department of Electrical and Electronic Engineering at London's City University and a former visiting professor at Massachusetts Institute of Technology. When he is not designing large electrical machines he conducts his own experiments in psychical research, measuring brain rhythms in various mental states and dabbling in astral projection.

The latter involves trying to free the spirit temporarily from the body. He says he has had one awesome experience in this field but he said this was nothing unusual. When 300 scientists at a recent conference he attended at Oxford were asked how many had had "baffling experiences" about half the hands shot up.

Parapsychology always has had its share of eccentrics but so many scientists — and, significantly, politicians — are now interested, Ellison said, that "we are almost there as far as scientific respectability is concerned."

Some accept them as proof of life after death — a subject the Society was urged to examine by one of its more prominent and more religious members before the turn of the century, British Prime Minister W.E. Gladstone.

Some are not sure what they mean or even if they mean anything.

But most students agree that the integrity of the key figures involved diminishes the possibility of fraud.

True or false, the story begins in the 1880s with three learned friends in Cambridge, all interested in psychical research. One was Henry Sidgwick, Professor of Moral Philosophy at Cambridge. Another was Frederic Myers, Inspector of Schools at Cambridge, and the third Edmund Gurney, a classical scholar.

There are two versions of what happened.

One is that they agreed to try to prove survival after their deaths by communicating with this world in "messages" couched in such obscure terms — literary references in Latin, Greek and English, for example — that they would be incomprehensible to the mediums receiving them though not to their classically trained friends still alive.

Ellison does not believe this version since he has found nothing in the Society's minutes to indicate they had such a plan. He agrees with the majority view that the pact was made after death, with Myers as the Chief Communicator.

Gurney died in 1888, Sidgwick in 1900, Myers in 1901. The messages started a few months later.

"Each piece was incomplete," Ellison said. "When all the fragments were sent to London by the various automatic writers, all of whom did not know each other, and were examined together, they were found to form pieces of a puzzle, some pieces providing clues to other pieces.

"Many such puzzles were so transmitted, it appears by our deceased experts, who claimed they had devised the plan to eliminate cross-telepathy between the mediums and to demonstrate their concious planning presence, but not here in this world.

"The very style of the scripts was also characteristic of the personalities of the claimed communicators."

One of the mediums was a Mrs. Holland, sister of Rudyard Kipling. In 1903, she sent the Society from her home in India a script purportedly from Myers. It contained an accurate description of a room in the home of a close friend of Myers, Mrs. A.W. Verrall, lecturer in classics at Newnham College.

A second script that same year, also allegedly from Myers, said, "Dear Mrs. Verrall I am very anxious to speak to some of my old friends." It ended with directions to send the script to Mrs. Verrall. Mrs. Holland did not know who she was and sent it to the Society instead.

Three weeks after the death of Dr. A.W. Verrall of Trinity College in 1912 one of the mediums got a line, allegedly from him, about a traveller looking longingly across a torrent to an inn. Mrs. Verrall said she could not find any connection between the traveller and her husband.

In 1913 came the sentence "Has the passage been identified?" and the words "Lavender or lub".

Then came another alleged communication:

"He of little patience demands now this third time whether the pilgrim has been understood? The reference to Dante makes clear."

That opened the door, so to speak. Verrall had once written an essay about Statius, an obscure imitator of Virgil, who hesitated to cross a torrent to declare himself a Christian, an incident mentioned by Dante.

COMMUNICATOR ... Frederic Myers, above, reportedly is the chief communicator of cross-communication messages — messages sent after one's death — that began following his death in London in 1901. Some researchers say the messages are the best evidence yet that there is human survival after bodily death. (UPI Photo)

Tar Heels Get Ready For Oktoberfest

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The city of Munich, West Germany, is half way around the world from Charlotte, N.C., but every October the two cities pay homage to a 170-year-old celebration called Oktoberfest.

For the 7,000 Germans who live in the Charlotte area, the local Oktoberfest is like a week-long visit to the Old Country. Radio stations feature the works of such German composers as Richard Wilhelm Wagner, oompah bands play polka music on the street corners and the standard fare includes sauer kraut, hot German potato salad and dark beer.

The annual Oktoberfest has become so popular in Charlotte that the city scheduled two festivals this year.

"The Oktoberfests have gotten really good response, particularly the one last year, so this year we decided to hold two," said Michael A. Almond, a Charlotte attorney who serves as president of the newly formed German-American Heritage Society Inc. The group held its first festival last year. A second group, the German American Club, sponsored its 15th October celebration this year.

The festivities got under way Wednesday with the dedication of a bronze sundial by the German government. It will end Sunday with a program by Dance Gallery Charlotte honoring German poet and playwright Johann Wolfgang von Goethe.

"This celebration is done for fun," said Robert Friedl, president of the German-American Club. "And it's a way to keep a tradition alive for the German families who live here."

The first Oktoberfest was held in 1810 in Munich for the wedding party of Prince Ludwig of Bavaria. The festival was held at a racetrack and the prince's party brought the people out for beer, food and fun.

For the business community and the employees of the 50 German companies in Charlotte, the German-American Heritage Society sponsored a business seminar entitled "Exporting to Germany — Opportunities to Do Business in West Germany." The seminar was sold out.

The Oktoberfests scheduled Saturday offered authentic food and music for the entire family. The Bavarian Show Band from Munich was hired to play the tunes for the polka.

Q.—We have a player in our game who repeatedly makes psychic bids. Are such bids legal? If they are, can you either suggest a defense against them or a way of getting that player out of our game?—J. Rosenberg, Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.

(This question has been awarded our weekly prize.)

A.—First of all, there is nothing illegal about a psychic bid—there is nothing in the Laws to prevent them. Next, I am not sure that you should want to remove someone from your game who psyches regularly. In all the years that I have played bridge, I have yet to meet a psychic bidder who is a winner. And to confuse you even more, there is no real defense against a psychic bid!

There are a number of nuisance bids that are difficult to handle. That's why they are used. The type that come most readily to mind is a preempt. Sometimes an opposing preemptive bid will catch you with an awkward hand that you just cannot handle, and, as a result, it will succeed.

At least with a preemptive bid you know something about the bidder's hand. You know that he has a hand of less than opening bid strength and length in the suit that he has bid. The trouble with a psychic bid is that you don't know that the bid is psychic when it is made; you only find out later.

Here is a golden rule to follow, and it will not only save you a lot of money but will make your life easier. Presume that any bid made by your opponent is genuine until it is proved otherwise, and act accordingly.

The psychic bidder must reveal that his bid was a bluff early in the auction, or else he will get his side into serious trouble. For instance, suppose that the bidding has gone:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
Pass!

South's one spade response was forcing for one round, yet North elected to pass. Ergo, North's opening bid was psychic! After all, he was risking missing game or even slam by passing partner's response.

I vividly remember a hand I held not too long after I had started playing bridge. We were vulnerable; our opponents were not. The dealer was known for his psychic bidding. I picked up:

♠QJ109xx ♡AQx ◇Qxx ♣x

Sure enough, the dealer opened one spade! My first thought was: "Of course, he's psyching again. I had better get in there with a double and then bid spades to show him up." Fortunately, I remembered the advice I gave you earlier in the column, so I passed.

To my surprise, my opponents ended in four spades, which I doubled for a handsome profit! My right-hand opponent had opened on a five-card headed by the ace and my left-hand opponent had a doubleton king and eventually gave opener a spade preference. Since my partner had a yarborough, had I entered the auction, it would have been the opponents who reaped the dividends, rather than we.

NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC COLIFORM BACTERIA FOUND IN DRINKING WATER

During Sept. 1982 coliform bacteria was found in drinking water samples from the Shady Knoll Mobile Estates water system above the limit as it appears in the "Rules Governing Public Water Supplies."

Coliform bacteria is an environmental bacteria which is found in the soil and intestinal tract of warm blooded animals. The presence of coliform bacteria in drinking water indicates that some contamination has occurred.

In an attempt to correct the cause of the contamination we have installed continuous disinfection equipment. Check samples submitted on 9-14-82 & 9-15-82 show the water to be free of coliform bacteria.

OLD AND NEW:
THE BEST OF BOTH WORLDS

Just twelve minutes from downtown Greenville in Stokes, a surprise awaits a special buyer. This historic countryside residence was built in 1913 with stained glass windows, beveled glass doors and mirrors, two staircases of Birdseye Maple, high ceilings in spacious rooms, three functional fireplaces, oak floors on first floor and heart pine on second.

One year ago this house was completely renovated using the finest materials and workmanship available. A new kitchen with handmade cabinets, pine flooring, large center work island, Jenn-Aire and KitchenAid appliances, 2 inch solid maple countertops and lighting accents is a gourmet cook's dream.

The entire house has refinished floors (carpet in all bedroom areas) new solid brass hardware and light fixtures, custom built-ins, cabinets and has been repainted. Custom window treatments and wall coverings grace all rooms. Heating, Air-conditioning, wiring and plumbing are all new.

The floor plan is ideal for entertaining. The first floor consists of front and rear foyers with staircases, library-den, huge living room with screened porch, large dining room, half bath, guest or master suite with dressing area and full bath, kitchen with French doors to an enclosed porch, breakfast room with bay window and utility room with a second KitchenAid dishwasher and range for ease in entertaining. The second floor has a disappearing staircase to a large attic, 45 ft. long center hall, three large bedrooms, two full baths with every convenience and a room-size closet dressing area.

In a word, nothing has been overlooked—no expense spared— and it shows. There is no other House like it and there won't be. This rare property is surrounded by nearly an acre of country tranquility, garage and several outbuildings. Reduced to $150,000. Please call our office for full details or to schedule your private viewing.

By JOHN DINGMAN
Associated Press Writer

VICKSBURG, Miss. (AP) — For many folks, the mighty Mississippi River just rolls along. But it is a vital part of life for some teen-agers in Vicksburg.

They are students in an unusual class offered by Vicksburg High School which covers the river from end to end, not so much with books but with the words of those who know it best — rivermen, engineers, historians and musicians.

The course is offered with the cooperation of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and other experts who bring their knowledge to the classroom. The curriculum includes a trip on the river on the corps' workboat, the "Lipsomb," piloted by Capt. Wally Flowers.

The teacher, Edward Wong, says the aim is to make the river come alive for the students.

He conceded that when he first became involved, he wondered what could be said about a "big ditch."

But, as he got to know the Mississippi, he delved into every facet of the river: its causes, how the river differs from others, even what drives it along its course from Minnesota to the Gulf of Mexico.

Tracey Walters, a 17-year-old senior who completed the river course last semester, said she especially enjoyed the history of the Mississippi, learning how the river has developed and what it has meant to the state.

Another senior, 17-year-old Tony Corpus, said he wants to be a hydraulic engineer and entered the class to learn more about the engineering aspects of the river.

For him, one of the highlights was a visit to the Corps of Engineers' Waterways Experiment Station in Vicksburg, which features working models of the river. Corpus said he valued the chance to talk informally with the engineers and ask them questions.

Both students said they were like most teen-agers who paid only casual attention to the Mississippi. Now, they said, they are river buffs.

The class was created in 1974 by Mrs. W.W. Geddings, a teacher who since has retired. She wanted to give Vicksburg students a better understanding of the physical, social and psychological impacts of the Mississipi River.

At first, the elective course was restricted to the top members of their class, but now a B average will provide entry.

Wong, who succeeded her, concentrates on bringing in historians and others who can relate the lore of the river. Another speaker was a man who rafted down the river from Iowa to New Orleans.

Others have played and sung the music of the Mississippi, and boatmen tell tales of the river.

Wong plans at least two such speakers every week. On the other days, the students work on their own study projects or go on field trips as far away as Baton Rouge, La.

Vicksburg's National Military Park also provides a living laboratory, as the students learn of the siege of the city during the Civil War and the part the river played.

Wong calls it a wonderful adventure for him, too, a unique class in which the teacher is just a coordinator, with the actual teaching done by resource people and the students themselves.

He said neither he nor the students will look out over the Mississippi again and consider it just a "big ditch."

Country's Best Chosen In Nashville

Country music singers Mac Davis and Barbara Mandrell will host the 16th annual Country Music Awards, to be broadcast live from Nashville, Tenn., Monday, Oct. 11 (9:30-11 p.m.) on CBS.

The Country Music Association Awards are the most coveted in the world of country music to many artists, and probably no single CMA Award is more highly prized than the Entertainer of the Year Award. This year's nominees are:

ALABAMA. A few years ago, the country music group Alabama was an obscure band that had never had a hit single. The group's principal musicians, three cousins from Ft. Payne, Ala., had been cutting records, playing small clubs and chasing stardom for a decade without success. In fact, they were on the verge of quitting the music business.

Not any more.

Last year, their hits "Old Flame," "Feels So Right" and "Love in the First Degree" shot to the top of the charts. This year, Alabama has been honored with four CMA Award nominations.

BARBARA MANDRELL. The 5'2" Miss Mandrell has been performing almost continuously since she was 11 years old. Except for a brief period in 1967, when she married and temporarily gave up her musical aspirations, her career has been in ascendence ever since.

In addition to her vocal talents, Miss Mandrell, who twice has won the CMA Award for Entertainer of the Year (1980, 1981), plays bass, banjo, guitar, mandolin, pedal steel and saxophone — usually one at a time.

WILLIE NELSON. Born during the depths of the Great Depression, Nelson cut his musical teeth on hard living and honky-tonks. In the 1950s, he played music in rowdy establishments like Ft. Worth's Bloody Bucket, where he remembers the performers had to be shielded from flying bottles by chicken-wire fences. Now, Nelson plays to vast arenas of adoring fans, yet his music remains virtually unchanged.

OAK RIDGE BOYS. Although the group's origins are in the staid world of gospel music, the "Oaks" have become one of the hottest names in country music.

BESIDES CO-HOSTING THE 16th annual Country Music Association Awards with Mac Davis, Barbara Mandrell is vying for the Entertainer of the Year Award. The special will be broadcast on Monday, Oct. 11 (9:30-11 p.m.) on CBS.

He Hit Too Hard

When boxer Earnie Shavers tested for the role of Clubber Lang in Sylvester Stallone's "Rocky III," Sylvester kept insisting that Shaver hit him harder. Earnie proceeded to knock him off camera. Shavers didn't get the part, but he's thinking about testing for the part of J.R. Ewing's bodyguard on "Dallas."

Six Years On The Road

A runaway teenager abandons her baby on the freeway. Poncherello meets his new "probationary" partner, and manager Tom Lasorda of the Los Angeles Dodgers gets a ticket on his way to the World Series, as "CHiPs" returns for its sixth season on NBC, Sunday, Oct. 10 (8-9 p.m.).

"I'm more keyed up because we are going to be breaking new ground and working in new and different areas than we have before," said Erik Estrada, who plays Officer Francis "Ponch" Poncherello on the series.

The primary changes are in the cast. Ponch will become a training officer for his new partner, Bobby Nelson (Tom Reilly), and a friend to the three new regular rookie highway patrol officers.

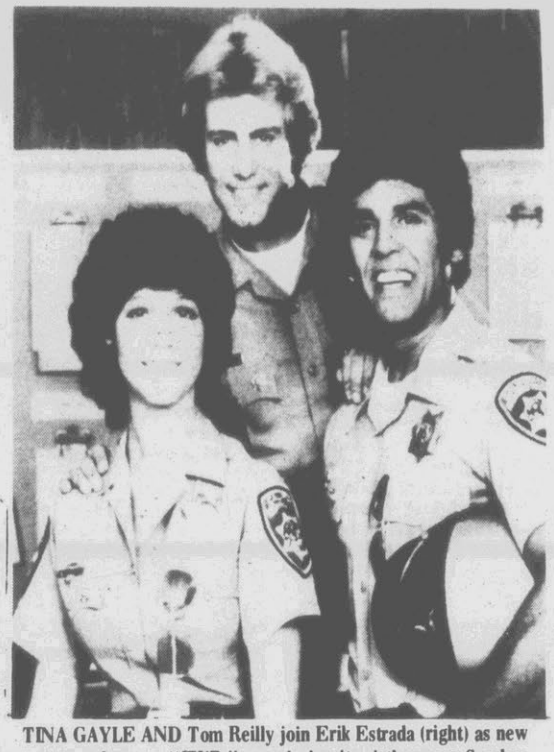
"I am really excited about the new season because of the chance to show a different side of the character I have been playing for five seasons," said Estrada. "In the scripts and in real life, I hope I can be of great help to the new members of the cast."

Reilly won the part of Bobby Nelson over 2,000 other hopefuls. The 6'2" actor was already a skilled motorcycle rider, but worked primarily as a New York model.

"I am amazed at the quickness with which Erik and Tom have taken to each other," said Paul Mason, the show's supervising producer. "It shows on the screen, too. The fictional and professional relationship is everything we could have hoped for."

The new female lead for "CHiPs" is Tina Gayle as Officer Kathleen Linahan. An ex-Dallas Cowboy Cheerleader and model, Miss Gayle plays the only woman highway patrol officer on the duty roster.

In the series episodes now being shot or in various stages of production, Chermak will be dealing with numerous realistic, meaningful and fun ideas, including child pornography, the baby-selling racket, and the exercise boom.



TINA GAYLE AND Tom Reilly join Erik Estrada (right) as new cast members on "CHiPs" premiering its sixth season Sunday, Oct. 10 (8-9 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

Birthstone OF THE Month
Opal

Opal alternates with tourmaline as the birthstone for October. The historical background of opal is as colorful as the gem itself. There are numerous quotations and references attesting to the fact that it has been admired and treasured by mankind for many centuries. The Roman scholar, Pliny, described the opal as having the fire of the Carbuncle, the brilliant purple of the amethyst, and the sea-green color of the emerald, all shining together in incredible union. Eastern people placed the gem in a highly esteemed position, regarding it as a sacred stone embodying the spirit of truth. The Arabs believed that opals fell from heaven in flashes of lightning and thus acquired their marvelous colors. The companion stone tourmaline is available in over twenty colors. Now thru the end of October all opal rings are on sale, 20% off our already low catalog price.

Letter Sent With Love

A handicapped child's outlook on life is dramatically changed through a pen-pal relationship with Elvis Presley, in "Touched by Love," to be broadcast on NBC's Monday Night at the Movies, Oct. 11 (9-11 p.m.).

The drama, which is based on the book "To Elvis With Love" and inspired by an actual story, stars Deborah Raffin as Lena Canada, a volunteer in a small home for physically handicapped children. After a brief period, she takes a personal interest in Karen (Diane Lane), an adolescent who has remained a silent loner from the time she entered the home.

On a trip to a nearby town with Karen, Canada notices that the youngster seems to be intrigued by a magazine containing a picture of Elvis Presley. When Karen begins to open up as she listens to Presley music, Canada agrees to help her write a fan letter to Elvis. In the days that follow, Karen waits anxiously for a response from her idol.

Canada attempts to explain that Elvis most probably cannot respond to all of his mail, but — to the surprise of all but Karen — Presley does write back and continues his pen-pal relationship with the youngster over an extended period of time.

"Touched by Love," which was originally released theatrically in 1980 under the title "To Elvis With Love," also stars Michael Learned as Dr. Bell, John Amos as Tony, Cristina Raines as Amy, and Clu Gulager as Don Fielder.

Merle Haggard Can Do It All

Few musicians working in the field of country music have distinguished themselves in of many different dimensions of their craft as has Merle Haggard. His singular sense of dedication and his talents as a singer, songwriter, bandleader, instrumentalist and music historian have earned him the enduring respect of his contemporaries.

He has been the recipient of five Country Music Association(CMA) Awards, including the coveted Entertainer of the Year Award (1970). This year, the artistry of Merle Haggard has once again been recognized with CMA nominations for Male Vocalist of the Year and Album of the Year, for his LP "Big City." These, and other awards will be presented at the 16th annual Country Music Association Awards special, to be broadcast live from Nashville, Tenn., Monday, Oct. 11 (9:30-11 p.m.) on CBS.

Merle Haggard. The name. The weather-beaten face. The homemade tattos and soft sense of pain in the eyes are testimonials to where he's been and what he's seen.

He was born in a converted railway boxcar in California. Haggard's family didn't have much, but they had music — Merle's father and grandfather were champion fiddle players.

Years were to pass before he would accept music as his true calling; years of hopping trains and wandering (he first ran off at age 14), working odd jobs or not working at all, scrapes with the law.

After a stint in jail for robbery, Haggard found work as a ditchdigger, and moonlighted as a guitarist in bars. After some local recordings in Bakersfield, Ca., Haggard came to the attention of Capital Records in 1965.

Since that time he has hit the No. 1-spot on country charts 27 times, with more than 50 chart records.

Michele Will Tell

DEAR MICHELE: Could you give me some information on Efrem Zimbalist Jr.? SCOTT LYNCH, LUCAMA, N.C.

TO SCOTT: Efrem Zimbalist Jr. was introduced to the performing arts almost from birth. Born in New York City, he is the son of famed concert violinist Efrem Zimbalist Sr., and of the late Alama Gluck, noted opera star. World War II interrupted his drama studies — and he served his country as a first lieutenant in the infantry. Efrem lives in Encino, California, with his wife, Stephanie. They have one daughter, Stephanie, also an actress. Golf is his primary interest outside of his profession.

DEAR MICHELE: I would like to know if you could tell me the name of the girl who plays the role of Angie on "The Young and the Restless," and where I can write her? CURIOUS L.D., HENDERSON, N.C.

TO CURIOUS L.D. IN HENDERSON: Liz Keifer appears as Angela Lawrence on 'Y & R'. Write to her in c/o the soap, CBS-TV, 51 W. 52 Street, N.Y., N.Y., 10019.

DEAR MICHELE: My daughter and son are having a disagreement. Would you please try to help us? Is Heather Thomas, who plays on "The Fall Guy" the same Heather as on "Dynasty"? If so, could you tell me where she is from? B. LOCKLEAR, PARKTON, N.C.

TO B. LOCKLEAR: No, Heather Thomas of "The Fall Guy" and Heather Locklear of "Dynasty," and now appearing on "T.J. Hooker," are 'not' the same person. Miss Thomas was born in Greenwich, Connecticut, and moved with her family to Santa Monica, California, when she was very young. Miss Locklear was born and raised in Los Angeles.

DEAR MICHELE: I'm a dear fan of "Trapper John, M.D.'s" Brian Mitchell, and I would greatly like to contact him. Where can I write to him? ANGELA COLESTON, GOLDSBORO, N.C.

TO ANGELA: Fans of Brian 'Jackpot' Mitchell may write to him in c/o "Trapper John, M.D.", CBS-TV, 51 W. 52 Street, N.Y., N.Y., 10019.

Paul Huson: A 'Lapsed Witch'

A most unusual technical expert — a lapsed witch — is involved behind the scenes of the new mystery series, "Tucker's Witch," starring Tim Matheson and Catherine Hicks, which airs Wednesdays (10-11 p.m.) on CBS.

The expert is the show's executive story consultant, Paul Huson, who, with executive consultant William Bast, created the series and wrote the pilot script. Take it from Huson, men as well as women can be witches.

"However," he says, "to keep your standing in the occult world, you can't diversify, and I've been too busy on other things to qualify. That's why I call myself a lapsed witch."

Huson, a native of England, has written seven books on witchcraft, one of them a best seller, and believes one of his ancestors may have been hanged as a witch in the 17th century.

In the series, Matheson and Miss Hicks play Rick and Amanda Tucker, husband-and-wife private detectives who find their lives complicated by her erratic witchly powers. She inherited her witchcraft from her grandmother and is still learning how to use it.

"That's actually very close to what goes on in the field," explained Huson. "Anyone with psychic gifts can never be sure when they'll be effective. Amanda can make a light go on or off — sometimes. She can concentrate and come up with the description of a murder suspect, only to find she's describing an innocent mailman.

"In witchcraft, practice makes perfect, so Amanda keeps trying, and every now and then, something works okay. But she'll never cast spells or boil up a cauldron of some unspeakable mixture.

"Her power lies in ESP and psychokinesis — the ability to move small objects. She might be considered a super medium who relies on intuition and has a 50-50 chance of being right."

"I've been interested in the field since my teens," he says. "I've come to believe that virtually everyone has had some experience with the occult — witchcraft, if you will — whether they realize it or not."

Can't Play By Ear

Calista Hendrickson, costume designer for Miss Piggy, has an unusual problem. "Miss Piggy's ears," says Calista, "are one of her finest features, but they also present a problem that other costume designers don't have to deal with. Do we cover one ear, or both,or none? And if we give her earrings, where do we place them? Remember, this is a glamorous, high fashion pig, and we have to do right by her."

CATHERINE O'HARA IS a member of the resident repertory cast of "SCTV Network/90," the late-night comedy series airing on NBC, Fridays (12:30-2 a.m.). O'Hara's comedy characterizations, like those of the rest of the cast, take place in the setting of a fictional television station.

'SCTV' Is Looking Good

Catherine O'Hara tends just to smile graciously and then quickly point out that others must share the credit when her work on NBC-TV's "SCTV Network" (Fridays, 12:30-2 a.m.) comedy series draws forth mighty accolades — accolades such as a network producer referring to her as "one of the finest comediennes in North America." Or a magazine writer's recent comment: "At 28, O'Hara is believed by many in the business to be the finest comic actress of her generation."

"I find it very flattering," Catherine says. "I guess if people really love the show and I'm part of it, I get part of the credit. If the show's good, then everyone looks good."

That the show is indeed quite good is a belief that Catherine shares with many critics. Catherine thinks that she and her fellow SCTV-ers (all of whom enjoy the luxury of writing a lot of what they perform) can thank an honest approach to their work for the show's success. "I believe that at its best we really write to entertain ourselves and not just think, 'This is what people like. We don't think it's funny but this is what will please the public.' We really try to make ourselves laugh. And I believe that if you work with that kind of sincerity, people will respond to it."

Although Catherine revels in live performances, having come the route of the Second City stage revue in Toronto, she would not particularly care to see "SCTV Network" change to a live format with a studio audience. "With live television, you can either play the camera or not be aware of the camera. You're always aware of the audience because you're supposed to be entertaining. But I think in our situation (pretaped with no audience), we have a chance to react off each other and take more time with our characters and the scenes we're doing, because we don't have to play for laughs.

"I like where there's an intimacy about a scene and the audience at home feels they're right there with you. And I think it's easier, if you have an intimate scene happening, if you're just aware of your character and the character you're working with, and you let the audience sort of sneak in on that. It they're right there and laughing, it's not quite the same."

Civil War Hybrid

Civil War buff Stacy Keach was born in Savannah, Ga. — but that doesn't neccessarily make him a Southerner. For soon after he was born, the family moved to California.

"My mother's family was from the South," Keach says, "and my father was from the North. When I was growing up, I was very proud of the fact that I was a sort of hydrid."

But last year, at least for the thre months while he filmed "The Blue and The Gray," Keach had to surrender his neutrality. He stars as Jonas Steele, a Union scout and bodyguard to Abraham Lincoln.

Screen Debut

Cartoons Lead Off Saturdays

Saturday programming through the early afternoon on CBS is loaded with entertainment for children, primarily cartoon shows. Starting at 8 a.m., many new and well-known characters will be seen in a variety of animated adventures.

One of the new shows is "Gilligan's Planet," an animated comedy/adventure series starring the voices of most of the original "Gilligan's Island" cast. Humorous situations are in store for the castaways when a powerful rocketship built by the Professor launches them off their island and maroons them on a remote planet in outer space, inhabited by strange and exotic aliens.

"Pandamonium" is a new animated series starring three talking panda bears and their teenage human friends, whose quest to discover the lost pieces of a magical, mystical pyramid is constantly threatened, as are they themselves, by the evil alien Mondragorr.

"Meatballs & Spaghetti" is an animated comedy series starring a plump musician named Meatball and his skinny singer-wife, Spaghetti. Along with Meatball's friend, Clyde, and Spaghetti's compulsively loyal dog, Woofer, they form a rock group and encounter a variety of misadventures as they travel around the country in a van, looking for their next gig. During each episode, an original song will be performed by the group.

Weekly Wrinkles

Bill Walsh, coach of the San Francisco 49ers, is the first professor of finesse in football. "Every week of the season is like cramming for a final exam," says quarterback coach Sam Wyche. "He doesn't come up with one or two new wrinkles, it's more like 10."

Move Over Pete.

Dodger second baseman Steve Sax may be the next Pete Rose. He not only runs to first base on walks, he also feels no game is complete without a dirty uniform. Rose is Sax's idol, but when they dined together Pete said he wouldn't hesitate to knock Sax on his butt.

Trick Collapses

One of the oldest tricks in baseball is a loaded bat. Dan Ford was playing with the California Angels last season when he got caught. When he hit the ball in a game against Cleveland the top of his bat collapsed. Ford ran half-heartedly toward first and then, a realist, turned toward the dugout. He was suspended for three days. He had cork in his bat.

Stage Set For Series

The World Series. It's that special October event — the World Championship of the sport — that captures the interest of baseball fans throughout the world. For NBC Sports baseball broadcasters Joe Garagiola, Tony Kubek and Dick Enberg, the "Fall Classic" is truly special. Besides the memories of broadcasting the World Series, Garagiola and Kubek have memories of playing in the Series — as rookies. For 1981 Emmy Award winner Enberg, the 1982 event represents his World Series debut.

"Working my first World Series is similar to doing my first Wimbledon, Super Bowl or NCAA college basketball championship game," says Enberg. "It's the creme de la creme."

NBC will broadcast the first game of the series on Tuesday, Oct. 12 (8-11 p.m.). The 1982 World Series also represents Enberg's first working assignment with Garagiola and Kubek, an opportunity he's very much looking forward to.

"As a fan, I've listened and enjoyed their [illegible] throughout the years," says Enberg. "It'll be a joy to have the chance to work with them in such a pressure-packed event like the series."

Garagiola knows first-hand of the series and its pressure. "Everything you do in the series is done under a microscope," says Garagiola, the starting catcher for the 1946 World Champion St. Louis Cardinals. "I remember the four hits I got in game four were played up because it was a new record for hits in a World Series game. But winning the seventh game over Boston — even though I was in the clubhouse with a ripped finger, courtesy of Ted Williams — was without a doubt my biggest thrill.

"As a broadcaster I get excited," says Garagiola, who broadcast his first game for NBC in 1961, "because I've had the chance to watch so many great athletes like Roberto Clemente and Brooks Robinson dominate the series like it was their own little stage."

For Tony Kubek, the former New York Yankee who played on three World Series Championship teams, the excitement of series past is still easily remembered. "My first World Series (1957) stands out not because of the two homers I hit in my hometown of Milwaukee. It was because there I was, a rookie, playing in the same World Series with future Hall-of-Famers Mickey Mantle, Whitey Ford, Yogi Berra, Casey Stengel, Henry Aaron, Eddie Mathews and Warren Spahn.

"The World Series is so special because for almost two weeks, the sport captivates the imagination of a nation, a continent and parts of the world," says Kubek of the event that will be seen in Canada, Mexico, Japan, England and Korea courtesy of NBC Sports.

Different Rules For The CFL

Now that Canadian Football League games are being broadcast weekly on NBC, fans in the United States have undoubtedly been noticing several major differences between the game in this country and the way it is played in Canada. Probably the single most important variable in playing style between the CFL and the NFL is the near total domination of the pass in the CFL.

The most vivid examples of the emphasis on the passing game are last year's CFL passing statistics, which revealed that five teams broke the league single-season record for passes thrown; four broke the record for passes completed; and five CFL all-time single-season pass receiving yardage records were set over the course of the 1981 campaign.

Jillian's Contract

Ann Jillian, a veteran of motion pictures, television, stage and nightclubs and who was recently nominated for an Emmy Award has signed an exclusive performing contract with Columbia Pictures Television.

TV Chatter

By Polly Vonetes

HBO has done it again — they have just added another "first" to their list of special programs — ELIZABETH TAYLOR and RICHARD BURTON have been signed to video tape their new Broadway play, "Private Lives," for viewing on HBO in early 1984. The Noel Coward play will be produced by the Elizabeth Theatre Group (Obviously what Elizabeth wants Elizabeth gets).

"Cast of Characters" is a soon-to-be-released book that you may not want to miss — especially if you think you have family problems. SEAN CATHERINE DEREK tells "all" about her famous father, JOHN DEREK, and her step mothers, URSULA ANDRESS, LINDA EVANS and BO DEREK. A kind of "Daddy Dearest," it is complete with daddy's rages, money problems, sex advice and one tragedy or comedy after another.

It took an estate in exclusive Westchester to get RODNEY DANGERFIELD the respect he has been longing for. TV commercials, movies and a busy restaurant has made Rodney one of the richest men in show business — and you know how money is — it commands a lot of respect.

FERNANDO LAMAS has been forced to withdraw from the new ROBERT URICH series, "Gavilan," because of a painful back injury. Noted British actor PATRICK MACNEE ("The Avengers"), has been signed to replace him in the role of Milo Bentley.

Never substitute for the very best

The Ralph Lauren shirt is an expression of quality and integrity, from the selection of the patterns to the execution of every detail. Some of the details to look for in a Ralph Lauren shirt are: The finest single-needle tailoring; All seams have a very narrow single-stitch closing and are closed with eighteen stitches per inch; Real ocean pearl buttons; A collar and neckband that are distinctively tailored to mold comfortably around the neck; The fabric is the finest quality all-cotton made from long-staple yarns that will mellow with age and actually improve with subsequent launderings. We now have an excellent selection of solids and patterns for Fall in all our fine stores.

Animals detect weather changes.

FOR RICHARD E. HALLGREN, director, National Weather Service

What part of the country has ideal weather conditions? And can wild animals actually sense changes in weather before meteorologists do? — C.M.G., Tuscaloosa, Ala.

● Many people feel that San Diego, Calif., Key West, Fla., and Lihue, Hawaii, have ideal weather conditions. They are adjacent to large bodies of water that stabilize the temperature and are located in the temperature zone characterized by moderate summer and mild winter temperatures. As to the second question, there's no scientific evidence that animals can predict changes in weather. Animals, with their keen body senses, can, however, detect and sometimes react to, changes in atmospheric pressure and humidity which can signal changes in the weather.

FOR BARBARA MANDRELL, singer-TV star

What do you miss most when you're on the road? — B.J., Warren, Ohio

● Sitting down for a meal at my own kitchen or dining room table. A meal is the one time of the day at home when we stop the phone calls and sit and talk to each other — just like every other normal family. I suppose I miss a sense of permanence and belonging that comes with a more stable life.

FOR DANNY THOMAS, actor-comedian

Aren't you fed up with all those jokes about Catholicism that Bob Hope and others keep cracking? —K.K., Scranton, Pa.

UPI

● No, because they're funny and not done in a cruel or mocking way. Bob Hope recently said I had stained-glass windows in my golf cart. My religion is important, and I wouldn't want it ridiculed. But I do think the church is big enough to take a joke.

FOR LIVIA SYLVA, cosmetologist

Why is it that a dab of perfume lingers for hours on some women, while others splash it on and it wears off in seconds? — R.B., Ogden, Utah

● Fragrance is different on everyone's body. It depends on a person's skin type, diet and personal body chemistry. To make a fragrance linger, seek out a perfume with a stronger oil base. This helps make the scent last.

Wide World

Bishop: Dreamed of sleeping alone.

FROM THE "ASK" EDITOR

PRIVATE MOMENTS: Comedian Joey Bishop, now touring the country in Tribute to Vaudeville, said he comes from poor stock and, as a child, never had what most kids today take for granted. "I was one of five and we all slept in one bed," he said. "It wasn't until I got married that I knew what it was like to sleep alone." . . . After all the commotion died down about a man being found in Queen Elizabeth's boudoir, a new fuss started up. News about the separate bedrooms of the monarch and her husband caused curiosity and concern. Why, people wondered, did the Queen and Prince Phillip spend their nights apart, instead of under the same blankets like any other married couple? Well, the story can now be told. There is togetherness at the palace. Sources say the Queen does get a nightly cuddle. Seems the two rooms are for convenience sake, so if one is asleep, the other is not awakened by a late arrival or early departure. . . . Ursula Andress and Harry Hamlin, 30, are under the same roof once again. Ursula, 46, told a friend that she doesn't want son Dimitri to be an only child. . . . FORGETTABLE MOMENTS: Roberta Peters, who just chalked up her 31st year at the Metropolitan Opera, says if you want to call her anything, try "durable diva," not "veteran star." "I'm in my prime," Roberta, 52, reminded a rookie reporter who described her as a veteran, "I'm not in my dotage." . . . Fifteen years ago, while Bel Kaufman was being interviewed about Up the Down Staircase (her first novel which became a best seller and TV series) during lunch, she did full justice to a huge steak. As she and the reporter parted, Bel asked what kind of an impression she made. "You eat like a minor novelist," he replied. . . . Actor Ed Asner, who played the on-the-ball editor Lou Grant, asked a man with whom he'd spent three days on business matters, why he was limping. Only then did he realize that the man was afflicted with a permanent limp. . . . When West Coast members of Overeaters Anonymous flew East for their convention at the Concord Hotel, some were amused by the film shown during the trip, and some were downright insulted, interpreting the choice as a dig. The movie was Porky's.

PRO AND CON

Should States Adopt Mandatory Criminal Sentencing, Eliminating The Possibility of Parole?

(Question submitted by George Mocol, Mankato, Minn.)

Send questions of national significance, on a postcard, to "Pro & Con," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022
We'll pay $10 for those published.

PRO John L. Ray, City Council member (D.), District of Columbia

Yes. Mandatory sentencing should be imposed for certain crimes. We must say there are certain crimes we will not tolerate. Mandatory sentencing, for those who commit crimes of violence with firearms or sell and distribute illegal drugs, will send a strong message of deterrence. Mandatory sentencing coupled with swift punishment will reduce crime. Significant crime decreases have been recorded in Michigan, Florida and other jurisdictions which have enforced mandatory sentencing fairly and vigorously.

CON Arthur B. Spitzer, legal director, American Civil Liberties Union, National Capital Area

Of course criminals should be punished. But most prosecutors and judges agree with us that mandatory minimum sentencing is not an effective weapon against crime. It deprives judges of the basic power to fit the punishment to the individual crime and the individual criminal. It also results in a decrease in guilty pleas and convictions because criminals won't plead guilty if they can't get a reduced sentence in exchange. This results in enormous backlogs for the courts, preventing speedy convictions.

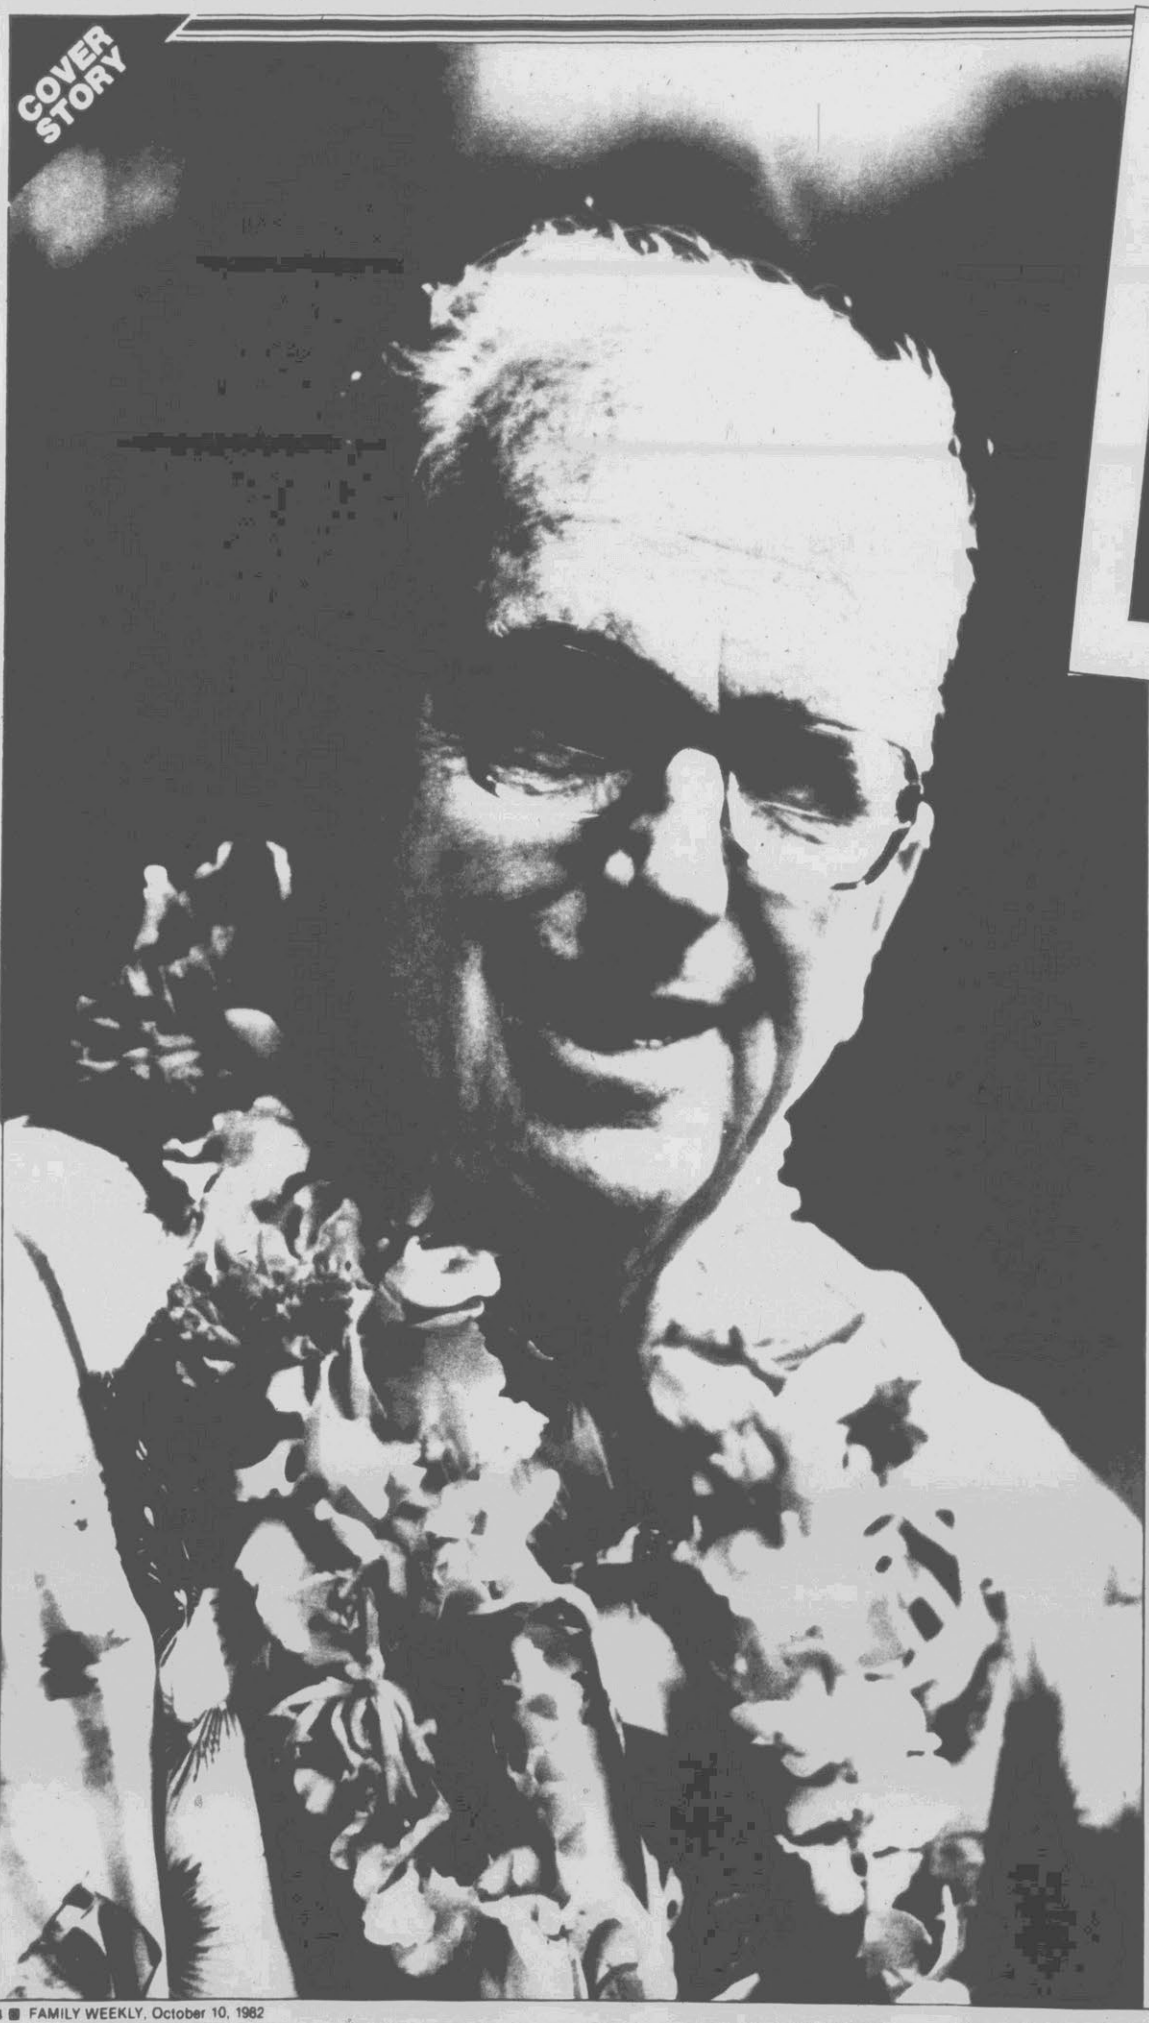
COVER STORY



Douglas Kirkland/Contact

The Bettmann Archive

Five years ago, when I should have been retiring at age 70, I was unexpectedly invited to join the council which advises America's space agency, NASA, and I found myself living among the stars. I had already visited every spot on the surface of the earth I had longed to see, save one, and now I was free to roam the farthest galaxies.

This kind of good luck characterizes my life. Born of parents I never knew, I found a home with a wonderful, impoverished woman who took in orphans, Mrs. Michener, and on several occasions when her luck ran out, I lived in the local poorhouse. I knew great poverty, many hard times, and the ugliest that a rural society can enforce.

It did not damage me, because our home was filled with kids, with laughter and with riotous good times. Of crucial importance: Each night at dusk Mrs. Michener gathered her brood and read us the great novels of Dickens, Thackeray, Charles Reade and the Pole, Sienkiewicz. From the age of 5, I had an intimate knowledge of literature and knew instinctively the elements of a good story.

Of equal importance: Just as I was learning to read for myself, our little town, Doylestown, Pa., opened a free library, and it seems that the first two cards were signed for by Margaret Mead, the future world-famous anthropologist (who also grew up there) and me. Miss Price, the librarian, once told me: "You and Margaret have read every book in the place."

Michener (above) as budding author and (left) still flowering in his 70's: "It heartens me to think of Verdi who composed thundering operas in his 80's, Michelangelo who did fine work in his 90th year, and Titian, who painted better than ever in his 100th."

JAMES A. MICHENER MY FIRST 75 YEARS

My subsequent career stands as a great tribute to the American way of life. Because I did well in school, I was identified as a bright lad and consequently received scholarships and fellowships of all kinds. I would ultimately attend nine of the world's best colleges and universities, always at public expense. If I'd been born in a country with a harsh caste system I might never have been discovered and would have spent my life counting gasoline drums. I was the product of America's dedication to free public education.

Some years ago a tax man calculated that America had spent about $11,000 educating me and had, at that time, taken back in taxes upon books, plays and television shows I had initiated more than $68 million. Not from me personally, you understand, but upon the flow of money made possible by my works. That is the splendid gamble made by free societies.

Before the age of 40 I never had a clue as to what I wanted to be. I had knocked about the world. I had been an academic bum. I had drifted rather aimlessly. Best of all, I listened to the marvelous yarns by men in the fo'c'sles of the ships in which I worked, or along the highways I roamed, or in bull sessions with learned men.

In these years of casting about, two characteristics intensified: the intention to make something of myself, if only as repayment for the investment society had made in me, so I stayed out of jail and out of trouble generally; and an overwhelming interest in the arts. I read almost every good novel ever written, especially those by European and Asian authors whom other Americans overlooked. I visited almost every major art museum in Europe. I acquired a library of Gramophone records to which I listened constantly, a custom I continue to this day. And I saw all the good movies and plays of my time.

From this intense, almost passionate love of the arts I deduced the rules and understandings I would follow when I began to produce works of my own, and if I were to counsel a young person today who aspired to a lifetime in the arts, my rules would be simple: Read, listen, see what capable people have done before you. Know what's being done in these fields right now. And engage in some exercise like eurythmic dancing or pottery making so that you acquire a sense of movement and form. What specific formal courses the young person took would not concern me very much.

In a long lifetime of creative thinking I was able to develop only three original ideas. Many people never develop any. Most people, if they tried, could generate at least one or two. Geniuses like Einstein and Edison provided at least 10 or more, which is really quite miraculous. My three determined the course of my life.

First, at a very early age when I was knocking about the world, I discovered that all men truly are brothers, and I have never deviated from this basic principle. If I have been able to write compassionately of jungle headhunters in the Solomons, of Jewish intellectuals in Galilee, of Spanish grandees in Toledo, of Indians in Colorado and of black slaves in Maryland, it can only be because through my sense of brotherhood I was able to imagine myself one of them. A man who does not know his parents cannot afford to laugh at Jews or Catholics or blacks or Mexicans, because he might very well be one of them.

Second, from my extensive research in Asia I learned that the most expensive commodity a nation can have is a poorly paid labor force, for then the managers do not have to invent new machines or new ways of doing things. If you pay a man 20 cents an hour, you can waste his efforts. If you must pay him $8 an hour, you'd better arrange it so that he can work at maximum capacity. I prefer a society which pays its workers the highest possible wages, then taxes them vigorously for things like hospitals, good roads, schools, libraries, art museums and day-care centers.

Third, I was overseas when television hit our land, so I did not witness the first violent explosion, but when I returned and saw for myself its profound potential, I listened attentively when prophets predicted: "This is the death blow to the book. Nobody will read anymore." I believed this for about a week and then I saw as clearly as if the words had been engraved in flame, the greater truth: In an age of the 47-minute television show, with 13 minutes of ads to round out the hour, sensible people will be more eager to read than ever before, and they'll be wanting exactly the kind of long, involved books that I want to write. So today I receive hundreds of letters each year complaining that my books are too short: "When I realized that I had only two chapters left, I began to ration myself, because I did not want to lose the little universe you created."

I am still approached by people who ask: "Is the novel dead?" I always laugh and say: "You're asking the wrong guy."

I brood constantly about the future of my country, for I love it intensely and have tried to serve it as best I could. Today I can identify three threatening dangers for which we seem not to have devised answers, and I see clearly that any one of them could destroy us.

First, it seems that despite all our efforts, our rich people get richer and our poor grow poorer. We really must guard against this, and if new inventions mean that we can produce all our food and consumable goods with fewer workers, we must devise some way to plough our profits back into the hands of people who will spend them creatively to balance technology with workers. Americans hate the idea of handouts, or a dole, or unemployment compensation, and perhaps we are prudent in clinging to the cautious dictates of the puritan work ethic. But if we reject anything which smacks of socialism in redistributing profits, we are obligated to dream up something better. Taxes are the contribution well-to-do people make to avoid revolution, and we had better

Second, we have still not solved the problem of race in America, for we continue to penalize blacks solely because they're black and Hispanics because they're either Mexican, Puerto Rican, or Cuban. I foresee great dangers down the line if we exacerbate this situation, but precisely what should be done right now I do not know.

Third, extremely dangerous signs warn me that our nation is not keeping up intellectually, and that we run a serious risk of falling behind countries such as Japan, Germany, Russia and China. We are not producing enough mathematicians, engineers, advanced scientists and computer experts, and if we allow this discrepancy to continue we will pay a terrible price in inefficiency before this century ends.

When a man who has enjoyed a fine life grows older, he inescapably begins to study younger people, for now he must accept the fact that one day soon they really will take over the work he has been doing. I see mainly the young people who want to be writers or to have a life in the arts, the ones who are already doing well in the sciences and who seek guidance for the talents they have displayed. A young person who wants to talk with me has to drive a far distance and trek down lonely roads, and this weeds out the irresponsible.

And these young people seem better in almost every respect than I was at their age. They know more. They are more responsible. They can write better and pass stiffer examinations. We have demonstrable proof that in athletics they can run faster, jump higher and shoot baskets with far greater precision, and I find the same superiority in their abstract skills. We do not have to worry about the best because they are better than their predecessors.

And I doubt that those young people on the bottom rungs are much worse off than those on the bottom rungs in my day were. They seem to be the same in all countries, and the best we can do is what adults did in my day: Give them constant guidance and as much moral support as possible. I doubt we can ever rescue them.

It is the middle group which causes real distress, for they are far less competent than the middle group of my day. In fact, I was the middle group, and I was encouraged to learn, to discipline myself and to make my way in an indifferent world. Today's group seems to lack basic skills and dedication. This is frightening, because in the long run of history, nations have always had to depend upon this middle group for the great constructive work that keeps a nation strong and prosperous. If we allow this middle group to leave our schools without real skills and capabilities, we are doomed.

To give only one example: A child today with obvious potential must learn to handle a computer. For instance, some departments at Harvard will no longer grant an advanced degree if the intending scholar is not proficient in computers. I was recently in the editorial offices of the largest newspaper in Holland where I was told: "Unless a person is skilled in computers, he could not possibly work here." And the editor pointed to a huge array of desks on which stood not a single typewriter but about 90 individual computers locked into a huge system half a block away.

I can hardly wait to get out of bed in the morning, I have so many exciting things I want to do: write, listen to music, take walks...

When a man has enjoyed the good luck I've had, it is understandable if he becomes an optimist. I remain one. I have enormous confidence in my country and can foresee about 75 years of continued leadership and prosperity. After the year 2060 my crystal ball grows cloudy, for I reflect that throughout world history every nation which once stood where we now stand was ultimately forced to surrender its leadership position. We shall do the same, inevitably, but I see these reasons for justifying temporary optimism.

We are a nation rich in natural resources, rich in human composition, dedicated to education for all and a fair chance for most of us. We occupy natural boundaries, with oceans defining our land east and west, with friendly borders north and south. We have a stunningly successful system of government, with its unique three-part system of responsibility and fruitful mix of central power in Washington and relegated power in the 50 state capitals. Best of all, we are a nation of ideas and aspirations, and I cannot see us faltering too badly within the next three-quarters of a century.

But I do foresee certain radical changes and we should be alert to them. I believe that we should give Puerto Rico her absolute freedom, now. I know that most Puerto Ricans do not want this, but I fear that the minority which does will continue to be a source of grave trouble, of threats, of bombings, of urban revolution, and I suspect that the only sensible solution is immediate independence. My experience with many similar situations around the world confirms me in this belief.

Already evolving is a major problem along our southern border where, along the Rio Grande and across the New Mexico-Arizona-California desert lands, a new nation is being constructed, half-Mexican, half-American. Our country may find itself powerless to halt the free flow of people back and forth across this border, and with Mexican population increasing astronomically each year, the pressure will come mainly from the south. An expert would be very unwise to predict what that border will be like in the year 2060.

In many ways our nation grows better. When I married my rambunctious Japanese-American wife in 1955, our wedding was illegal in six states and we had to avoid traveling in them, since any ill-spirited citizen could have caused our arrest. Now that nonsense is outlawed and my wife and I never have a day's trouble, whereas years ago we would have had.

As for myself at age 75, I can hardly wait to get out of bed in the morning, I have so many exciting things I want to do: write, listen to music, take walks along the Chesapeake, argue with friends, read my letters from learned people in all parts of the world.

I rise each morning at 7:30, throw some cold water on my face, gulp down some grapefruit juice and am at my desk within five minutes. My wife gives me hell for not shaving, but that can wait. I type slowly on an old-fashioned machine, using two fingers and one thumb. I write almost everything three times and would not even dare to send out the first draft of an important letter. I have said of myself: "I am not a good writer first time around, but I am one of the world's great rewriters."

Except for my book Sports in America, in which records were particularly important, I have always done my own research, but once the manuscript has been completed as meticulously as possible, I invite four outside experts — a subject-matter scholar, editor, style arbiter on words and final checker — to tear it apart, and to them I am deeply indebted. Even so, a few errors and infelicities always remain, and I am disgusted when we find them in the finished book.

I read a huge amount but take few notes. When I'm working intensively I can keep about 500 books in mind — not completely, of course, but in general — and I rarely have difficulty in going back to the exact spot I need to authenticate some important detail. Three months after the book is published, I erase my mind as if it were a blackboard.

In the work I am about to tackle, a long novel on Texas, I shall for the first time engage two research assistants at the beginning, one an expert in Mexican history, one on the development of Texas. Since I shall be 78 when the job is done, I figure I will be able to use some help.

I never work in the afternoon, rarely at night, but each day as dusk approaches I take a two-mile walk and come home steaming. I am devoted to nature and the wild animals who share this earth with us and would never like to compose a book which did not pay tribute to them in some way.

At the conclusion of every book I swear: "The next one will be short." But as I start to work I begin to ask myself: "Who was this man's grandfather? Where did the family come from? How did they acquire the farm?" And whammo! Seven hundred pages.

Some years ago I had a massive heart attack, about the biggest a man can have and still survive. Fortunately, I fell into the hands of a family friend, Dr. Paul Dudley White, who had helped President Eisenhower. He did not believe in babying patients and he told me: "Jim, when you get out of bed, I want you to do everything you ever did before, but in moderation. If you drop dead, tough luck, but you'd have done so just sitting in a chair." Since then I've written seven major books, traveled around the world four times and played vigorous tennis. But I have also cut out fatty foods, eggs and Spanish flan, which I love passionately. Small sacrifices if they enable one to keep working.

I have bursting ideas for half a dozen more books, but I am aware that after 70 one slows down. I can no longer do the amount of work I once did, and if I stay up till midnight debating with friends, I must take a nap the next day. I feel no diminution of intellectual power, but I suppose no individual is a good judge of that.

It heartens me to think of those great men whose powers did not flag: Verdi who composed thundering operas in his 80's, Michelangelo who did fine work in his 90th year, and Titian, who painted better than ever in his 100th. My personal hero is the Japanese wood block artist Hokusai about whom I wrote. He said: "If I live to be 90, I'll really have learned how to draw." He died at 89, short of the mark, but still trying.

Few people listen to critics more attentively than I. If Vincent Canby says a movie is good, I go see it. If Jonathan Yardley and Anatole Broyard tell me a book is first rate, I buy it. If John Canaday and Jack Kroll assure me that a painter is worth looking at, I look. But I never bother with what critics say about my own work; indeed, I refuse even to read them. A critic is most helpful in advising you how to spend your money; he is useless in telling you how to spend your life.

As to the place on earth I missed, it is the South Pole, and it irritates me to think that I never reached it. But I take solace in the ancient Japanese custom of leaving good work unfinished. If a perfect temple was built, they left one line incomplete; if a perfect cup was turned on the wheel, the potter left one dent. I leave the South Pole to the future adventurers who will love this earth as much as I do. FW

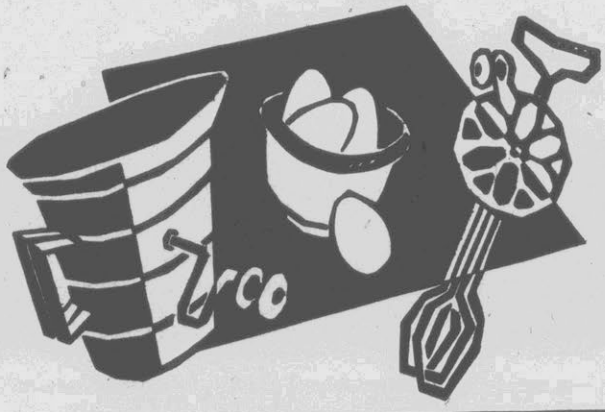
Just Maybe: The World's Best Chocolate Cake

By Marilyn Hansen

Maida Heatter, wizard of chocolate, has recreated this fabled cake of her memory, The French Chocolate Loaf Cake, as the very first recipe in her new cookbook, Maida Heatter's New Book of Great Desserts. This is a very special, rich, chocolate cake. The most important secret for making it successfully is to follow the directions exactly, and absolutely do not overbake. It should be dense and moist.

"Ovens are the No. 1 most important thing in baking," Maida says. "Get yourself a Taylor mercury thermometer from your local hardware and kitchen shop and test your oven every single time you bake. Also, follow a recipe, don't substitute. In baking, exact measurements are more important than anything else."

Treat yourself to this luscious chocolate cake and have a dessert you won't forget.



Rita Grasso

FRENCH CHOCOLATE LOAF CAKE

¾ cup sifted cornstarch (sift before measuring and do not pack down when measuring)
8 oz. semisweet chocolate
1 tablespoon instant coffee
¼ cup boiling water
3 oz. (¾ stick) unsalted butter
½ cup granulated sugar
4 large eggs, separated

1. Adjust a rack one-third up from the bottom of the oven and preheat oven to 350°. You will need a loaf pan with a 6-cup capacity; mine measures 8½ × 4½ × 2¾.

2. To line the pan with foil: Place the pan upside down on the work surface. Measure the bottom of the pan — the bottom of my pan measures 7⅞ × 3⅞ inches (yours may vary). Cut two strips of foil; one to fit the length (bottom and sides) and one to fit the width (bottom and sides). For the measurements of my pan, one piece is cut a scant 7⅞ × about 10 inches, and one piece is cut a scant 3⅞ × about 14½ inches (both measurements allow a little excess to extend over the rim of the pan when the foil is in place). If the foil is not measured carefully and if it is too wide, it will wrinkle when it is placed in the pan:

3. Carefully place one piece of the foil in the pan, press it into place, and then place the other piece in the pan and press it into place. There will be two thicknesses on the bottom. The sides of the foil may extend about ½ inch or so above the pan and may be folded down over the rim. (Since the pan flares at the top, the upper corners of the pan will remain unlined — it is O.K.)

Handle the foil carefully and do not wrinkle it — the wrinkles would show up on the finished cake.

4. Prepare the foil. One method is to brush it carefully with 1 tablespoon melted butter. The other is to set the pan aside until you are ready to pour the batter in, and then spray it generously with vegetable cooking spray. The spray does a slightly better job than butter; with butter the cake might stick, but it will be minimal.

5. After sifting and measuring the cornstarch, resift it three more times and set it aside.

6. Break up or coarsely chop the chocolate and place it in a heavy saucepan with about a 4-cup capacity. Dissolve the coffee in the water and pour it over the chocolate. Cover, place over low heat, and let stand for a few minutes until the chocolate starts to melt. Do not overcook. Stir (preferably with a small wire whisk) until smooth, and then transfer to a small bowl to stop the cooking and cool slightly.

CHOCOLATE CAKE

7. Meanwhile, in the large bowl of an electric mixer, beat the butter until soft. Gradually add the sugar and beat for 2 or 3 minutes, scraping the bowl occasionally with a rubber spatula. Add the yolks one at a time, scraping the bowl and beating after each addition until incorporated. Then continue to beat for a few minutes until the mixture is pale and creamy.

8. On low speed add the chocolate, which may still be slightly warm or may be at room temperature. Scrape the bowl and beat only until smooth. Add the cornstarch, scrape the bowl and beat only until smooth. Remove from the mixer and set aside.

9. In the small bowl of the electric mixer, with clean beaters (or if you prefer, in any small bowl with an egg beater), beat the whites and the salt only until the whites just stand up straight when the beaters are raised — do not overbeat.

10. Add 1 rounded tablespoon of the whites (just guess the amount — don't measure) to the chocolate mixture and stir to mix. Repeat with a second spoonful and then with a third. Fold in about half of the remaining whites without being too thorough, and then fold in the balance of the whites, folding gently but completely.

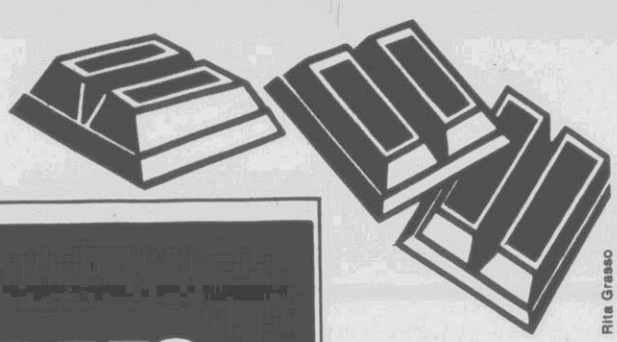
11. Place the cake in a larger pan (which must not be deeper than the cake pan). Pour boiling water into the large pan until it is about an inch deep.

Bake for 45 to 55 minutes until a cake tester gently inserted into the middle, all the way to the bottom, comes out just barely clean and dry. Test very carefully several times to be sure. There will be a thin crust on top; the middle of the cake will be soft. Do not overbake.

12. Turn off the heat and open the oven door a few inches; let cool that way for 20 minutes. Then open the oven door all the way and let the cake stand for about an hour until cooled to room temperature. (If you need the oven, let the cake cool in the oven for only half the time, and then let it finish cooling in the kitchen.)

Remove the cake pan from the water and dry the pan. Cover the cake with a flat serving plate or a board. Turn over the plate or board and the cake pan, remove the pan and the foil. Serve the cake upside down. (The cake may now be frozen.)



Rita Grasso

13. Before serving, the cake may be covered with chocolate curls (see below) and then sprinkled generously with confectioners' sugar sifted through a strainer held over the top.

This may be served as it is, but it is better with a spoonful of softly whipped cream (sweetened only slightly with confectioners' or granulated sugar, and flavored slightly with vanilla extract). And with a spoonful of fresh raspberries or strawberries, or with just barely thawed and partially drained frozen raspberries.

Make the portions small.

Makes 10 servings

MILK CHOCOLATE CURLS

1. These are the easiest chocolate curls, and they're adorable. They are made with a swivel-bladed vegetable peeler and with milk chocolate, which will give the results you want with the least amount of trouble. The ½-lb. bar is thicker than most smaller bars; you will use only about an ounce or so, but you will have better results with a thick piece of chocolate.

2. Work over wax paper. Hold a piece of the chocolate in your left hand, making the curls either from the side of the piece of chocolate or from the bottom; try both. Move the vegetable peeler along the chocolate, moving it toward yourself, pressing it very firmly against the chocolate. Spoon the curls on the cake, piling on as many as will stay.

Note: We found while testing the recipe that it is easy to make the chocolate curls by placing a 1¾-inch by 3-inch piece cut from the ½-lb. milk chocolate candy bar bottom side up on a piece of waxed paper on your kitchen counter and drawing the swivel vegetable peeler firmly across the piece lengthwise, away from you. Lift chocolate curls with two toothpicks onto the cake.

Specialty Insurance

Does Your Cat Need Coverage?

By Andrea Pawlyna

Most of us are undoubtedly familiar with the basic kinds of insurance. Auto insurance, for example, and health insurance have become practical necessities in today's society.

Many less well-known forms of insurance exist, however, and offer coverage to fill very specific needs. The list of possible insurance plans available is varied and includes such exotica as pet health insurance, hang-glider coverage and earthquake insurance, among others.

Are they worth it? One rule of thumb to go by when considering any insurance policy is not to insure anything "that your budget can handle reasonably well," advises James Hunt, of the Ralph Nader-affiliated National Insurance Consumer Organization.

"Nobody should insure themselves for things that cost a few hundred dollars. Those are risks that people should assume themselves," he says, adding that it's wiser to spend your insurance dollar on plans that provide coverage for catastrophic losses.

Specialty insurance plans include the following:

Pet insurance: Accidental injury and comprehensive major medical coverage for dogs and cats is currently available to residents of California and New York state. For instance, Veterinary Pet Insurance, in Garden Grove, Calif., and Frontier Insurance Company, located in Monticello, N.Y., offer policies that range in approximate annual cost from $34 to $109 for dogs; $34 to $105 for cats, depending on the age of the animal.

Neither company covers routine care, immunizations, spaying or neutering or ,pre-existing conditions. Frontier plans to make pet insurance available nationwide in the next couple of months.

Contact lens insurance: Typical policies involve a $20 to $25 annual premium plus an additional $7 to $15 deductible for each replacement lens. Soft lenses are usually slightly more expensive to insure than hard lenses.

Policies are available through private practitioners as well as retail chain stores.

During the first year of contact lens wear, insurance is probably a good idea because of the greater likelihood of loss or damage from inexperienced handling. But unless you need repeated lens replacements, the cost of insurance is likely to outweigh any benefits.

Health insurance for travelers: Of the 30 million Americans expected to travel abroad this year, as many as one million will become ill or injured and another 12,000 will die while there.

Faced with these statistics, many insurance companies offer special medical policies for travelers. These policies can cover a wide range of possible medical expenses, including transportation to the nearest hospital.

Premiums are based on the number of days spent traveling and the amount of coverage desired, ranging from 60 cents a day on some policies to $115 for six months of coverage.

Before obtaining trip insurance (check with your travel agent), it's a good idea to investigate the coverage of any existing health plan you may already have. Frequently, major medical benefits are payable for accidents or illnesses that occur anywhere in the world. But these benefits may only apply to certain countries and they may be less extensive than your coverage at home.

Trip cancellation insurance and baggage insurance: Trip cancellation insurance reimburses you for nonrefundable deposits if your trip is unexpectedly cancelled, interrupted or delayed due to death, illness, default by the airline or tour operator, strike, bad weather or other forces beyond your control. The cost averages about $4 to $4.50 per $100 of insurance. This type of insurance is particularly advisable in cases of charter trips where cancellation penalties are frequently high.

Airlines will settle with you for loss or theft of baggage, but they will not automatically insure your possessions. Baggage insurance, which reimburses you for lost or stolen possessions, and covers you for the duration of your trip, costs about $11 for $500 worth of insurance and is advisable on trips where you'll be carrying valuable possessions or making a lot of stops.

Moving insurance: Homeowners policies do not always cover household goods in transit. Movers are liable for a minimum of 60 cents per pound per damaged article (for example, a two-pound broken lamp valued at $1,000 would only be compensated with $1.20), although higher coverage amounts are available for a fee.

Insurance companies can offer an "all risk" moving policy which fills in the gaps in carrier-offered liability coverage. Premiums are based on the shipment's declared value, approximately $5 per $1,000 of value on average policies. FW

Teeth and Gums: An Owner's Manual

By Kathleen Beckett

One of the most common medical ailments afflicting mankind, experts claim, is periodontal disease, but if you're like many people, you've probably never heard of it. If left unchecked, periodontal disease can result in the need for complicated corrective surgery, or permanent loss of some of your teeth. Fortunately, it's also one of the most easily prevented diseases and, if caught early on, one of the most easily treated.

Periodontal disease is a condition affecting the gums and jawbone, and it is most prevalent in people over 30. According to Dr. Erwin Barrington, vice president of the American Academy of Periodontology, it starts as gingivitis, an inflammation of the gum tissue.

Kimanne Core Uhler

The culprit that causes the condition is dental placque — a thin, sticky, colorless layer of bacteria and debris that is forming constantly on the teeth. If left undisturbed, placque will harden within 12 to 14 hours into a deposit called calculus, or tartar. The tartar eventually forces the gums away from the teeth, creating gum pockets, which can become infected. As the disease progresses, it can also destroy the jawbone — and if it does, you are in danger of losing your teeth.

Unfortunately, there aren't always symptoms of periodontal disease. The usual telltale signs, according to Dr. James Tobias, former president of the American Academy of Periodontology, are: bleeding gums; red, swollen, or tender gums; sensitivity to cold ("This could be the result of loosening of the gums around the teeth."); mouth odor and bad breath ("caused by the by-products of bacterial activity in the gum crevice"); loose or drifting teeth, or a change in bite.

You can help prevent the development of all of these conditions with a simple regimen of care. "Clean teeth do not decay, nor do they develop periodontal disease," claims Dr. Tobias. He suggests that you maintain good nutrition; find a dentist "who insists on regular cleanings and who checks gums with a periodontal probe during examinations"; and, of course, brush and floss properly daily.

Brushing and flossing are probably the most effective measures you can take against periodontal disease — but be sure you do them correctly. "People have been talking for years about brushing up and down, but that's the wrong way," Dr. Tobias says. "You are pushing placque under the gums when you go up and down. Instead, use a slight rotary motion, placing the bulk of the brush bristles on the side of the tooth and the outer row of bristles into the gum crevice. Bristles should be soft and flexible and rounded on their tips. With a little rotary motion, those hundreds of bristles working on a single tooth will actually scrape off placque."

When flossing, Dr. Tobias continues, "the floss should become a blade when you hold it tightly between your fingers. Pass it between your teeth in a kind of sawing action. Let it drop down to the edge of the gum or just below, then engage the tooth and scrape up so that you literally cut off the placque."

Once the placque has hardened into tartar, however, you need professional care to remove it, according to Dr. Barrington. "In very mild cases, one, two, or three cleaning appointments are all that's needed to bring things under control." But, as the disease progresses, the treatment does too, and chances are your dentist will refer you to a periodontist or gum specialist for more extensive treatment, which in some cases includes surgery.

The Government is currently funding research to study the effects of another treatment for gum disease — the use of baking soda and peroxide to fight the bacteria that causes periodontal problems. Some periodontists say this method could replace gum surgery; others think it sounds too simple to be true. FW

WHAT IN THE WORLD

By Eliot Kaplan

HOSPITAL ADVICE ILL-CONCEIVED

After healing the sick and releasing them, hospitals may inadvertently be ushering them right back in — by giving discharged patients instructional pamphlets that are too complicated for them to understand.

E. Paul Lansdale

A new study at the University of Virginia Medical Center found that such materials, used to inform patients of problems and proper treatments, are written for people reading at a 10th-grade level. Unfortunately, the average patient at the center reads at a 7th-grade level.

And since most patients forget nearly half of all oral instructions within five minutes, the incomprehensibleness of the literature can lead to a lack of compliance, a return to the hospital and possibly death.

HANGING OUT

If life is looking down to you these days, here's a way to lift your spirits: hanging. No, not the way John Brown met his maker, but hanging upside down by your ankles from an eight-foot-high metal bar.

Robert Martin says he's been hanging one way or another since age 9. So 12 years ago, the Pasadena Calif., orthopedist, now 73, invented inversion boots, padded clamps that fit snugly around the ankle and hook to the bar. Since 1979, 100,000 pairs have been sold, beginning at about $80. And folks like Frank Sinatra, Wayne Newton, the Dallas Cowboys and Boston Celtics have all latched on.

Inversion is really a natural state of affairs, believes Martin. After all, we're born upside down. He says it's important for all of us to hang every day, because it alleviates the stress that gravity places on our bodies, gradually compressing our tissues. (That's why we shrink as we get older.) It's wonderful for backaches, he told us. "I never found a person with a backache who didn't want to be stretched," he notes.

So here's looking (up) at you, kid.

CASHING IN AT HOME

With close to 11 million Americans out of work, making ends meet can be a nifty trick these days. Now a New Jersey man named Jack Aboff has put together some advice on how to pick up extra money on the side (legally, of course). His new booklet, "105 Ways to Make Money at Home," offers some novel ideas, such as chauffeuring people to the airport in their own cars, dog walking for profit, doing market research interviews and sweeping sidewalks for store owners (we didn't say all the jobs were fun, you know). It also includes over 100 inflation-fighting tips to stretch the new money you make.

Dog walking can help you clean up.

The book is available for FAMILY WEEKLY readers at half price. Send $1.50 (includes postage) to Laurel House, P.O. Box 85FW, Livingston, N.J. 07039.

ELDERLY PLAY THE DATING GAME

Marcia Goldenberg

David Guttmann, director of Catholic University's Center for the Study of Pre-retirement and Aging, says most of the elderly he speaks with express interest in establishing new relationships after some initial period of mourning, usually one to three years.

Demographics provide one barrier: There are six times as many widows over 65 as widowers. Grown-up children often resist the idea of their parents dating, says Guttmann, because they may resent having to develop a brand new image of their parents, may fear having to share an inheritance, or may be worried about gaining a new stepparent. "Middle-aged people feel they can engage in any and all behaviors," says Guttmann. "But when it comes to their parents, they lose all perspective."

Guttmann says more men than women express a desire to remarry. And as for sex, "The desire varies from person to person," he says, "but the need for intimacy is very important."

DEATH ON THE JOB

Each year some 13,000 Americans die on their jobs. And a new study shows that if you drive as part of your work, you're three times more likely to be killed than if you work in a factory or mine.

Researchers from Johns Hopkins University looked at 148 work-related deaths in Maryland in 1978. As reported in the Journal of the American Medical Association, they found that 40 percent occurred in transportation vehicles, including planes and boats, and that heavy trucks were involved in over half of the vehicle deaths.

The researchers found that most of the deaths came in areas not covered by Federal regulations. For instance, truck steering wheels sit horizontally rather than vertically as in cars — the main reason most of the truck drivers died of severe abdominal injuries. The study also notes that as employers switch to smaller, gas-saving company cars, their workers' risk of death rises, perhaps doubling.

MATH-MAGIC TO PONDER

Invite a friend to open a book to a page at random and to select one of the first nine words in the first nine lines. Have your friend multiply the page number by 10, add 25, add the number of the line, multiply by 10 again, and add the position of the word in the line (one to nine).

Now, given the result of this computation, subtract 250 and you will have from left to right the page, the line and the number of the word.
