Middle School Contract Let

In 420 days, the new Ayden Middle School will become a reality, according to action taken by the Pitt County Board of Education today.
It will have a roughed-in gym and dressing rooms and will have air conditioning only in the offices and library, said board members.
The board let a $2,175,344 contract this morning for the construction of the school.
In addition, ducts for air conditioning will be run throughout the structure but the cooling units will be installed only in the administrative areas and the library, said Superintendent Eddie West.

The contracts were awarded after negotiations between the low bidders on the project and Dr. West and Associate Superintendent Thomas Craft reduced the Sept. 30 bid by $99,723.

Contracts went to the following companies: Farrow and Sons, general contractors; Kipco, plumbing; Southern Piping, air conditioning and Wells Electric, electrical installation.
The Sept. 30 bid totaled $2,191,094 without contingency monies and architectural-engineering fees — $167,000 below the June 1981 bid for the project.

The renegotiated price accepted today — $2,175,344 — also includes a $51,431 contingency — standard in projects this large, Craft said — and the $32,541 architect and engineering fee.
Craft said the $2,175,344 represents the total cost of the project. West said construction will begin in 30 days.

The largest single deletion from the Sept. 30th bid — and the most disliked by representatives from Ayden — is the $24,984 that would have paid for air-conditioning units in classrooms.

"I do not want to see the PTA have to come back and pay for the air conditioning to go in," said board member Walter Gaskins.

"We said Ayden Middle was our number one priority and I feel we should stick with that," noted board member Steve Tripp.

The school system's financial status for major capital outlay totals $2,556,640, including $2,346,640 in cash on hand for Ayden Middle (includes state Literary Loan), $125,000 in escrow for Chicod School (for construction of a new lunchroom) and $85,000 in school food service equipment monies.

With the revised cost of the Ayden Middle School, the following spending alternatives are possible: $2,175,344 for Ayden Middle; $350,000 for Chicod project and $31,296 in escrow for Pactolus School.

Board members had no official estimate of the Chicod lunchroom project cost.

Mobile Home Park Plans Gain Okay

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

The Greenville Planning & Zoning Commission approved a preliminary plat for a mobile home park Tuesday night and recommended that the Board of Adjustments, in considering a special use permit request for the development, call for the deletion of a road-front lot as a mobile unit site on the layout.

The plat involves Country Paradise Estates, proposed for development on the south side of the Belvoir Highway, just west of Stencil's Trailer Park. The extraterritorial jurisdiction boundary forms the western property line of the tract.

Staff planner Skip Browder pointed out that several years ago the agent for the mobile home developers contacted the city and asked about the status of the property relative to the extraterritorial jurisdiction. He said the developers were told then that the property was not a part of the city.

Browder said that the property owners proceeded with plans to develop the tract and recently started site preparations. A neighbor saw the site work under way and called the city, according to Browder, and it was discovered that the property is in the extraterritorial jurisdiction. The city spokesman said the developers have been very cooperative and have revised the development plans, adding a buffer. At the present time, Browder said there are no staff objections to the development.

He explained that the tract is zoned for RA-20 (residential-agricultural) usage and mobile home development would require a special use permit from the Board of Adjustments.

Stanley Gray of Route 4, Greenville, who said his property was bordered on two sides by the proposed mobile home park, contended that having the units behind his house would hurt the value of his property. He said at the least, he would like to see the front lot left open. Gray said deletion of the front unit would enhance the looks of the park.

Gray said he expects his yard will be used as a shortcut to a store across the highway and he suggested that a fence would help the situation.

Charlie Spain of Route 6, Greenville, who said he and his father own five houses near the development, said he was concerned that some of the mobile home residents would use the driveways of the houses to exit the park. Spain questioned the location of the proposed recreational area on the front section of the development and he also stated his objection to one mobile unit being located out in front of the park.

Phil Dickerson, representing the developers, said that septic tanks will be necessary in the park and must be located 100 feet from any well location. Because of that provision, the site designated for recreation near the existing dwellings could not be used for a mobile unit, he said.

Browder said much more recreational acreage is being set aside than required.

He said that while the planning board could not mandate a change in the development plat relative to the special use permit, it could recommend changes to the Board of Adjustments in considering the permit.

Commissioner Elbert Mills, who voted against approval of the plat, said he would be inclined to eliminate the lot in

Another Indictment In Colcor Probe

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A federal grand jury has returned another indictment in the FBI's investigation of corruption in southeastern North Carolina, but prosecutors are waiting for arrests before disclosing who is involved.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Doug McCullough said the new indictment would be made public after arrests were made. He refused to comment further.

The indictment against one or more people came Tuesday, hours after former state Rep. Ron Taylor was sentenced to five years in prison and fined $10,000 for accepting a bribe from undercover agents.

U.S. District Judge Franklin Dupree gave Taylor, 30, of Bladen County, the maximum sentence after watching about 15 minutes of a videotape that showed Taylor accept a handful of bills from undercover agents and stuff them into his pockets.

The former three-term legislator has pleaded guilty to unrelated state charges in the unlawful burning of warehouses owned by state Sen. J.J. "Monk" Harrington, D-Bertie. He faces up to 40 years in prison and will be sentenced Monday in Bertie County Superior Court.

Taylor, who heads a family farm-machine company, was involved in several legal battles with Harrington, also the head of a farm-machine company, over patents for tobacco harvesters.

Taylor was seeking re-election but he withdrew from the race after pleading guilty to the burning charges.

Dupree said Taylor could begin his sentence Dec. 1, after completing medical treatment for injuries he sustained in a recent car accident. He said Taylor probably would serve his sentence at the federal prison in Springfield, Mo., where he could receive more medical attention.

Taylor was one of 21 people arrested July 29 after a 21-month FBI undercover investigation of corruption in Columbus and Bladen counties codenamed "Colcor."

He was the second public official to plead guilty to charges stemming from the probe. Former Columbus County Commissioner Edward Walton Williamson pleaded guilty to bribery Monday and was sentenced to 10 years in prison.

In Williamson's sentencing memorandum, McCullough and federal prosecutors raise other charges, saying that state Sen. R.C. Soles Jr., D-Columbus, "expressly authorized and approved" efforts to ensure passage of a mixed-drink referendum in Bolton through vote-buying.

The videotape of Taylor was made March 23 in a Whiteville apartment rented by the undercover agents. Taylor, dressed in jeans and a plaid shirt, talked freely as he sipped a drink and smoked cigarettes.

"Being in the Legislature is about like a big country club," Taylor said. "You just make friends, just meet folks."

"If we were friends and had a relationship ... anything that I can do to help you, fine and dandy, and if I ever know of anything to help me, you know, courtesy for a courtesy."

Beside Taylor in the videotape was Howard Watts of Clarkton, who has been charged with helping Taylor receive a bribe. McCullough identified the agents off-camera as Robert J. Drdak and Bradley D. Hoferkamp.

The sound on the tape was muffled but Taylor could be understood talking about his bad luck.

"I haven't got any money; I haven't got any friends. I'm tired of that," he said.

Taylor talked most about his role in the Legislature and his political leverage, particularly on the state Ports Authority. He said he had a good relationship with state employees in the area, particularly Alcohol Law Enforcement agents.

"There is somebody I can get some help out of in every agency," he said. "I have pulled all kinds of tricks out of the bag."

He said he had a good relationship with House Speaker Liston Ramsey and talked about his membership on the Governmental Operations Committee.

He referred to committee members Sen. Kenneth Royall, D-Durham, and Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir, as "the biggest two guns in the state." He said Sen. Craig Lawing, D-

Mecklenburg, was a "crook if I ever saw one" and added that he was "my kind of man."

McCullough said Lawing was not under investigation.

"He (Taylor) was blowing his own horn and we felt it was important to show the court ... his version of his influence," McCullough said. "It's unfortunate that he maligned anyone, this was the way he chose to explain how important he is."

Lawing said he had no idea what Taylor was talking about.

Garnishment Threat Raised

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House Appropriations subcommittee chairman says that if Interior Secretary James Watt does not reimburse the Treasury $8,842 by Nov. 1, he will ask the panel to order it deducted from Watt's paychecks.

Rep. Sidney Yates, D-Ill., warned Watt in a letter Monday that he would press for garnishment unless the Cabinet member repays tax money he and his wife spent for private parties at a federally owned mansion during the 1981 Christmas season.

Subcommittee sources said Tuesday that Watt had angrily complained to Yates that the letter — Yates' third seeking repayment — became public before he saw it. The sources indicated that department officials were still reviewing how much should be repaid.

Resurfacing

The local resurfacing program for 1982, approved recently by the City Council, will require an expenditure of $24,024 for the patching and reconditioning of about 1.5 miles of city streets.

On-site inspections are conducted each year by the city to determine a priority listing of resurfacing needs. The priority list this year includes: Hilltop Street from Fifth to Fourth; Clark on Bonners Lane to the concrete pavement; Clairmont Circle; Eighth from Cotanche to James;

Holly from First to Avery; Sulgrave Road from the end of curb and gutter to Charles Boulevard; Third from Lewis to Meade; Hillcrest Drive; Washington from 100 feet south of Eighth to Ninth; Wilkshire Drive from Adams Boulevard to the dead end;

Glennwood Drive from Memorial Drive to Sunset Avenue; Holly Street from Fifth to Fourth; Shawnee Place from Millbrook to Aztec Lane; Abel from Pendleton to the dead end; and Third from Tyson to Memorial Drive.

The city said the public works department will soon begin preparing the streets for resurfacing. The program is supervised by Ron Sewell, director of engineering and inspections.

Meeting Lebanon's Appeals To Require Time

By R. GREGORY NOKES

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although the Reagan administration still wants foreign forces out of Lebanon by the end of the year, officials say virtually all of the major issues concerning withdrawal need to be worked out.

Lebanese President Amin Gemayel was flying to Paris today after a day of meetings with President Reagan, Secretary of State George P. Shultz and other top administration officials.

While the meetings Tuesday were regarded as useful, officials indicated a great deal more needs to be done before an agreement for a withdrawal of Syrian, Israeli and Palestinian troops from Lebanon could be worked out.

One official, who asked to remain anonymous, said "a number of seemingly irreconcilable positions" still need to be resolved, although he said the administration is aiming to get a complete troop withdrawal by the end of the year.

Morris Draper, Reagan's special Mideast envoy, planned to return to the region later this week to resume negotiations.

Gemayel also raised the possibility of broadening the size and mandate of the multinational force, but he did not specifically ask for more U.S. Marines, according to a senior American official.

Reagan told Gemayel that "all of these matters will have to be given serious consideration," said the official.

The official said: "No one asked for an increase in American forces ... Having said that, if we wish to volunteer them, I suppose they would be welcome." The official asked for anonymity.

About 1,200 U.S. Marines, part of a three-nation peacekeeping force, have been deployed in Beirut since mid-September. French and Italian troops comprise the rest of the force.

Reagan said he had promised Gemayel his administration would continue its support for "the sovereignty, unity, territorial integrity and freedom of Lebanon."

Gemayel thanked Reagan and the American people for their efforts to "end the suffering of my country."

In a briefing for reporters following the Gemayel-Shultz meeting, the senior official said "virtually all" of the major issues leading to a withdrawal still had to be resolved.

Among them, he said, is the need for "an agreed framework" for the withdrawal "where everyone understands when the other person will be leaving."

The Syrians, he said, would not accept any explicit linkage in the pullout of their forces with the pullout of Israeli forces.

"Nevertheless, if you are going to get a withdrawal of all foreign forces, all foreign forces have to withdraw," he said.

Nobel Prize In Economics For American Prof.

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — University of Chicago Professor George Stigler, a conservative economist, won the Nobel Memorial Award in Economic Science today for research that showed the impact of government regulation on the economy.

It was the 11th time that an American has won the prize, which this year carries a stipend of $157,000.

"Naturally I feel delighted, how can I feel another other way?," said Stigler, reached by telephone in Chicago after the award was announced.

"Certainly I'm surprised," he said. "I heard that two other individuals were going to win it ... and they certainly will sooner or later."

Stigler was the second American to win a Nobel prize this year. Professor Kenneth G. Wilson of Cornell University won the prize in physics Monday. The final prize, in literature, is to be announced Thursday.

The Swedish Academy of Sciences, in giving the award to Stigler, cited the 71-year-old economist for "his seminal studies of industrial structures, functioning of markets and causes and effects of public regulations."

He said he supports President Reagan's policies of less government spending and deregulating the economy, but that he could not make any substantive comment on this.

"Certainly no economist, no one at all really, can avoid hearing talk about (Reaganomics), but I'm quite conservative and I think the emphasis on decreased public expenditure and decreased public regulation would be fine," he said. "But that's not a very scientific observation."

"I'm no specialist in that area," he said, "but judging from what I've seen of Nobel prize winners, you have to learn to comment on things you don't really know much about."

As early as the 1940s, Stigler studied effects of some regulatory legislation in the United States, particularly rent controls and minimum-wage legislation. He indicated that far-reaching, unintended side-effects could arise alongside

CENTURY CLUB FEEDBACK

The Century Club, Hotline has learned, is the brain child of Gov. Jim Hunt and Ernest Messer, the state's assistant Human Resources secretary for aging. Begun in April of this year, it is an effort to recognize every North Carolinian who is more than 100 years old and to honor each who turns 100 on his or her birthday. "The response has been surprising to us," a Division on Aging spokesperson said. "We've already heard from about 380 persons who are 100 or over and more requests come in every day." The division recognizes each centenarian with a "certificate of honor for service to community and family" and encourages local honoring of the 100 year old.

Anyone wishing to nominate someone for the honor should send name and proof of age to Ernest Messer, Division of Aging, Department of Human Resources, 708 Hillsboro St., Suite 200, Raleigh, N.C. 27603.

Homemaker's Haven

By Evelyn L. Spangler
Pitt Home Agent

Autumn is the in-between season, the perfect time to conduct a home "energy inventory." The purpose is to determine how well your home will be able to withstand winter's onslaught — and how well your budget will be able to take the shock of skyrocketing fuel costs.

There are several places to begin your "energy inventory." Your home's heating system and insulation are two vital check points.

But one of the first places you should look is at your window. Most people are surprised to learn that, with the exception of an un-insulated attic, windows are the worst energy wasters in the home. In fact, according to the U.S. Dept. of Energy, windows can be responsible for over one-third of winter heat loss in a typical home.

The quickest, easiest and least expensive solution to blocking this heat waste is to use a familiar product that's been around for years. However, now the product is being recognized all over again — this time as an important tool in the fight against spiraling energy prices.

What is it? According to researchers, it's the window shade.

A team of scientists at the Illinois Institute of Technology conducted a test to find out if the three common interior window treatments — window shades, venetian blinds and draperies — have an impact on the energy you use. They found that drawing a window shade at night and during the cold evening and morning hours can cut the amount of heat normally lost through windows by 24 to 31 percent. Obviously, the less heat lost through the windows, the less fuel you'll need to keep your home comfortably warm.

This energy savings translates into dollar savings. The researchers estimate that homeowners who diligently use window shades can chop up to eight percent off their fuel bills for a typical home in a moderate climate.

While the conventional window shade was shown to be a significant energy-saver, the other typical window coverings were less effective at preventing heat loss. Lined draperies and venetian blinds reduced heat waste only six to seven percent; that's about one-fourth as well as window shades, the scientists reported.

Continue your "energy inventory" by checking to see if your windows need caulking. If the putty around window frames is old and cracked, or if there is putty missing in places and you can feel drafts, you should recaulk.

While you're at it, determine if your windows — and your doors, as well — need to be weatherstripped. Wind and drafts seep into the home and precious fuel seeps out through the perimeters of windows and doors, driving fuel bills up.

However, even well-caulked and weatherstripped windows cannot prevent the heat loss that takes place through the window glass itself. That's because glass is a conductor of heat. Heat passes through glass so well that three to four times more heat is lost through the window than through the sash area, reports the Dept. of Energy.

But since the drawn window shade "barricades"

'Starving Is Best Way To Reduce'

By LINDAS MATT SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (UPI) — Dr. Donald Robertson says the best way for fat people to lose weight is to "starve."

Shedding weight, he says, is the easy part of his weight-loss program. The hard part is helping his patients keep the pounds off.

"The body perceives it's being starved, then allows fat stored to become available for mobilization," Robertson said.

Robertson, who uses a weight-loss program offered in nine clinics across the country, says 40 percent of patients on the program are able to keep their weight off indefinitely.

Sound familiar? Nationwide statistics show fewer than 5 percent of people on conventional diets can lose 40 pounds and only 1 percent can keep the weight off.

But Robertson says that, unlike other weight-loss programs, his is supported by scientific data that is constantly updated.

The Southwest Bariatric Nutrition Center uses a multi-disciplinary approach to losing weight that was developed by Drs. George L. Blackburn and Peter G. Lindner at Harvard Medical School and Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

The program involves a modified fast diet and counseling by a nutritionist, clinical psychologist and exercise specialist.

Blackburn reported in a five-year follow-up of patients on his program that 75 to 80 percent lost 50 pounds or more and 40 percent were able to keep the weight off.

Robertson said bariatrics — the medical management of the adult overweight patient — has acquired a "shady" image because it has been poorly regulated, allowing many "quacks" to operate.

"The proliferation of clinics has been only in the 1970's," he said. "When people saw how much money was in this thing they jumped on the bandwagon."

The American Society of Bariatric Physicians estimates the total amount spent by Americans on weight reduction in 1981 at

Dr. Jim Worth was speaker at the meeting of the Greenville Business and Professional Women's Club held last week.

He is an instructor in the math department at East Carolina University. He demonstrated the Apple II word processor with video screen and printer. "How computers can play a part in the office and at home" was sponsored by the Personal and Professional Development Committee headed by Lucille Moore.

The Ways and Means Committee, chaired by Nancy Smith, hosted the meeting.

Plans were finalized for National Business Women's Week including a breakfast, lunch and dinner.

Membership is open to all persons actively engaged in business or the professions and to persons enrolled in college or a university. For information call Pam Davis, 758-7728, or Doris Marlowe, 756-3868 (evenings).

$15.4 to $17.2 billion. Robertson said this compares with a combined $26 billion for heart and cancer research and treatment.

Robertson, a gastroenterologist, said he got into bariatrics only because he was convinced the Blackburn program is successful and safe.

Patients are interviewed by Robertson, their medical histories taken and extensive tests are performed. They are placed on a diet of only protein in the form of meat, fish and poultry.

Robertson said patients go hungry for about four days, then begin to lose their appetites as their bodies burn up fat. Most patients lose about a pound of fat a day — at a cost of about $15 to $18 per pound, he said.

Later, patients are reintroduced gradually to vegetables, breads, dairy products and fruit, until they learn how to eat a balanced diet while still maintaining their weight.

Patients attend about 12 hours of classes each in nutrition, exercise and behavior modification.

Bosses' Night Is Planned

The Greenville Chapter, Professional Secretaries International will have its second annual Bosses' Night Monday at the Beef Barn. Greenville attorney Milton Williamson will be the featured speaker.

The presentation of certificates to Greenville's two newest Certified Professional Secretaries, Anne Harrington and Betty Thompson, will be held.

Bosses' Night offers chapter members an opportunity to honor their bosses and given them a look at the organization functions.

The window and forms an insulation cell, it is able to keep heat in that normally would flow through the glass. The result: your home stays warm with less fuel used. And that equals lower heating costs.

Based on the Illinois Tech. research, the Window Shade Manufacturers Association recommends the following tips to help benefit from the study's findings. First, make sure the shades are properly installed. In the study, they are placed inside the window jamb with one-fourth inch clearance along the vertical edge. This provides the tightest seal and prevents the maximum amount of heat from filtering out the window.

Then, when the air outside is coldest — at night and during the frigid evening and early morning hours — keep your shades drawn. They will form an effective barrier against escaping heat. Warm air, normally drawn to the window, will bounce off and stay where you want it.

On sunny days, make the sun your partner in helping to warm your home. Raise your shades, particularly on the sunny windows facing south. This allows solar radiation to help take some of the bite out of winter's chill, at no cost to you.

Initiates Service Held

A service for new initiates was held at the Beta Alpha Chapter of Delta Kappa Gamma dinner meeting Thursday.

Nancy Jessup, Rosina Lao, Elizabeth Sparrow, Carrie Joyner, Mary Schmidt and Nancy Lee Urbscheit are new members.

A memorial service for Mrs. J.B. Spilman and Dr. Ruth Modlin, former members of the group, was held.

Dr. Edwin L. West, superintendent of Pitt County Schools, was featured speaker. He identified trends of quality in the education programs in the county schools and told of changes which will occur in the field of education as the decade progresses.

The meeting was held at St. Paul's Episcopal Church.

Leggy Looks At Dior, Chanel

By SUZY PATTERSON
AP Fashion Writer

PARIS (AP) — Paris is baring legs in many ready-to-wear shows, and the house of Dior is no exception.

Designer Marc Bohan presented a boutique line Monday that looked quite wearable and young, if not something to set the world aflame.

The shorter skirts above the knee usually have the look of a dropped or forgotten waist, with two-toned double belts at the hip. Tricolored solids in one outfit or hip-belted full linen minis or longer dresses in sky blue, light pink or white also give the same casual long-waisted effect.

Another main theme is to mix soft suede in the same outfit with bright or pastel polished cotton or smooth linen. In tunics, shorts, blouses or little collarless jacket combinations, these looked attractive in hot red mixed with khaki stripes or solids — as well as in light shades of grey, yellow, blue.

Besides stripes all over the place, Bohan succeeded quite well with Prince of Wales outfits in soft wool crepes or satiny silks, with long or short skirts, loosely-belted shifts, and fitted jackets with white lapels.

The chemise dresses were shown in striped jacquard silks or sometimes in palm frond motifs, and big bicolor straw hats were the original new toppers.

Bohan didn't forget pants, mixing long trousers or shorts with casual jackets in another color.

Turning to evening, he worked over flounces ad infinitum. One might forget the rather cheesy gypsy flower prints. More successful are his sheaths, long dresses and ballerinas in white satin with pink, Devonshire cream white or blue with a coral or yellow silk lining. Box short jackets with elaborate ribbon or raffia edging topped the short skirts, and a new blouse top was the white decollete backless vest.

Load yourselves down with pearls, big gold chains and brooches for this year's Chanel look. Another great new accessory is the pastel print or jacquard bag to match the pastel outfit.

Bucking the shorter-dress tide, Daniel Hechter showed very big gaucho pants, longish skirts, wrapped tops and scarves in cowboy-style outfits in fall tones of brown, (Please Turn To Page 5)

Ask Father For Help In Planning

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I want to have a party in the family room of our house next spring. My problem is my father. He said I can't have it there because that's where he likes to sit and relax during the evening.

My father said that when he was my age (I'll be 14 in March) he had parties in the basement, garage or outside. He gave me those choices for my party, but we have no basement, our garage is too small, and there would be a problem with mosquitoes if I had it outside.

How can I persuade my father to let me have the family room for just three hours — from 8 p.m. until 11 p.m.?

NEEDS YOUR HELP

DEAR NEEDS: You need more help than my help — you need an ally in your camp. You don't mention your mother; if you have one, draft her!

Perhaps if your father knew more about your plans — how many kids, the games you'll play, what refreshments you plan to serve, etc. — he'd be more cooperative. Your father, like most people, probably fears the unknown, and is therefore negative. If you ask for his help in planning the party, it might improve your chances. You sound like a good kid. Good luck!

DEAR ABBY: To the man who couldn't stand the sound of birds singing in his yard: For shame! Robert Frost said it so much better than I could ever say it in his poem, "A Minor Bird":

"I have wished a bird would fly away,
"And not sing by my house all day;
"Have clapped my hands at him from the door
"When it seemed as if I could bear no more.
"The fault must partly have been in me.
"The bird was not to blame for his key.
"And of course there must be something wrong

"In wanting to silence any song."
Chirp, chirp!

Crime's Power In Drugs

The Reagan administration says it is getting serious about the war on drug trafficking.

The Justice Department says it plans to put federal task forces in 12 cities, provide more jail space and 1,000 additional federal agents and prosecutors to combat the nation's drug problem.

President Reagan saw the effort as a war on organized crime which he said "reaches into every segment of our society." He cited the drug efforts as "a major initiative that I believe can mark a turning point in the battle against crime."

If federal investigators want to get at the very heart of crime they can do no better than to start with drug trafficking. Illegal drugs are relatively easily smuggled into the country. They are high profit items for organized crime and they are easy to push on the streets.

Drugs are a major part of organized crime's operations and they also contribute to petty crimes because those who need them will risk jail or even death in their attempts to get the cash to support their habits.

If we are declaring war on drug trafficking there should be no letup until we have effectively reduced this problem which threatens our society. If illegal drugs can be gotten under control much of the power of organized crime will have been eliminated.

The CruX Of N.Y. Choice

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WOODBURY, N.Y. — A distress signal was sounded to Nassau County Democrats on Long Island last week when their candidate for governor, Mario Cuomo, suddenly raised an exotic issue: the gold standard.

"You know who's for the gold standard?" Cuomo asked in stand-up, nightclub comic style. "Lew Lehrman, one guy in Russia, one guy in South Africa. The other two guys have cornered the market on gold." Party faithful attending the $125-a-plate dinner seemed puzzled but laughed anyway, which was more reaction than Lt. Gov. Cuomo got twice earlier in the day when he brought up gold for the first time in the campaign.

Businessman-scholar Lewis Lehrman, Republican nominee for governor, is indeed a devoted hard-money man, but he has not mentioned gold in this campaign. That Cuomo would do so in an effort to show Lehrman as a bit nutty betrays his groping for new tactics in a race far closer than it was supposed to be.

Cuomo did not get the expected upward surge from his Sept. 23 primary upset over New York City Mayor Edward Koch. Instead, all polls (including private Democratic tracking last Thursday night) show Cuomo hanging onto an insignificant 4 percentage-point lead. Financed largely out of his personal fortune, Lehrman's yearlong television blitz has established him in the public mind as a tax-cutter concerned about jobs and crime.

"I'm worried," Cuomo told the Democrats here. "We have an awful lot at stake on Nov. 2." Indeed, pioneer supply-sider Lehrman represents the best hope nationally for radical economic reform, pressing faithfully toward a tax-reduction, economic-growth model partially abandoned by Ronald Reagan. For Lehrman to win a state that long has been a citadel of bipartisan liberalism would invigorate downhearted right-wing populists nationally.

One reason Cuomo worries is that he is running below levels in the suburbs usually needed for a statewide Democratic win. His attacks on Lehrman as "the architect of Reaganomics" have little appeal in Nassau County, where unemployment is less than 5 percent thanks to generous transfusions of defense spending.

Besides, for well over a year Lehrman has not disguised his impatience with the Reagan administration's timid economic policies, leading Cuomo to charge Lehrman with espousing a "radical" form of Reaganomics. Before his speech here, Cuomo showed us a John Birch Society newspaper containing a long interview with Lehrman. In conversation with us, he three times linked Lehrman as an associate of notorious supply-siders Arthur Laffer and Jude Wanniski.

But Democratic insiders doubt New Yorkers are interested in John Birchers, supply-siders or the gold standard. Cuomo's problem in the suburbs is his intimate alliance with his party's dominant elitist wing. Democratic politicians here believe Cuomo will take a bath in Nassau — unless he can move to the center in the next two weeks.

He is trying to do that by calling himself a fiscal conservative and gingerly joining the tax-cut camp. But one Democratic operative complains: "Mario worries about what the village Voice (the left-wing weekly) thinks about what he's going to say." To such politicians, he depends too much on the good opinion of avant garde journalists Jimmy Breslin and Jack Newfield. Advice that Cuomo must shore up his Italian heritage, even if it means brazenly xenophobic television commercials, has been ignored.

Instead, Cuomo harps on Lehrman's daring 40 percent New York state tax-cut proposal, the cutting edge of Lehrman's campaign, against the advice of cautious aides. The Cuomo camp was overjoyed when Republican-Conservative state Sen. John Marchi, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, last week withheld support.

Put United Way Over Top

As of last weekend the Pitt United Way had reached 23.6 percent of its goal.

Director Lou Folger said $115,702.35 had been contributed or pledged toward the goal of $489,020.18.

This is good progress in the drive to provide the funds for a number of public service agencies which are so helpful to our county. All of them are needed in our area.

We hope that collections for United Way will move along rapidly. Our county has had great success in meeting its goals in record time in recent years and there is no reason we cannot do the same this year.

Giving or pledging promptly can soon put the United Way drive over the top.

Not Under The Table

"Okay, Sir, here is your quiz for the next stop. The people are mad as hell out there because they have an 18 percent unemployment rate. Where does your heart go?"

"Out to them. As long as one person in this country is jobless I will not be satisfied."

"Good. Who is to blame for the high unemployment rate?"

"There is enough blame to go around for everybody. But we are at least doing something about it, unlike those big spenders in Congress who got us into this mess in the first place."

"Where is the recession?"

"It's bottomed out and we are recovery-bound, thanks to lower interest rates, lower inflation and confidence by the people on Wall Street who are willing to back our programs by investing in the great American free enterprise system."

"What must we avoid to get people back to work again?"

"A quick fix, which may temporarily put people back to work, but will never solve the severe economic problems that I inherited from an irresponsible opposition party that has been on a drunken spending binge for four decades."

"Why did they spend this money?"

"Because it wasn't theirs. It was the American taxpayers'."

"What do you believe in more than anything else?"

"The American dream."

"And how can we achieve the American dream?"

"By staying the course which I have set, and by passing a constitutional amendment guaranteeing a balanced budget, which will permit us to live within our means."

"Who is preventing us from having a balanced budget?"

"A small group of selfish

men in Congress who are willing to sell our birthright to satisfy the greedy pressure groups who feel the federal government must solve all their problems."

"What will put people back to work?"

"My tax program which encourages business to invest in new plants, expand production and give the consumer more money in his pocket to spend on goods."

"What have you done to address the double-digit unemployment rate?"

"I have just signed a job-training bill which will make it possible for a million people to learn new trades and skills to prepare them for the prosperity which is just over the horizon."

"What will they have to do until they find a job?"

"Show patience and forbearance. I can't turn around overnight what the opposition has done in the past 40 years to put the country in the shape it is in today."

"How much of the unemployment in the country are you willing to take the blame for?"

"When I came into office it was 7.5 percent. Now it's 10.1 percent. I'm willing to take the blame for 2.6 percent of it. Can I read a letter from a 9-year-old boy in Madison, Wisconsin?"

"Sure, go ahead."

"Dear Mr. President, 'My father doesn't have a job and neither does my mother. But I am not one of those who marches to the drumbeat of doom and gloom. I know it isn't your fault that the dark cloud of unemployment lies over the land. Please don't let Congress spend any more money on wasteful programs that will only return us to big spending and big taxing and double-digit inflation which has caused the pounding economic hangover America is now suffering."

'Signed, Donny Schmidlapp'

"And what do you say to Donny?"

"I say, Donny, I hear you. I only wish you were old enough to vote."

"Well, that takes care of the unemployment issue. One more question and then we'll let you take a nap. What didn't you come to Washington to play?"

"Party politics, as usual. And most of all I did not come here to further mortgage the future of the American people just to buy a short-term political popularity, by sweeping our problems under the table."

Future Of Farms

*By PAUL T. O'CONNOR

RALEIGH — With 90,000 acres of North Carolina farm and wood land being converted to other uses every year, it's little wonder that state and local officials are becoming concerned about the state's farm future.

The Institute of Government has conducted a study of measures used across the country to combat the loss of prime farmland. Researcher William Campbell outlined several broad areas in which the state could work to keep farmland from being put to other uses.

Property tax relief is the most popular form of farmland preservation. The idea is to "make it easier for a farmer to continue farming by lowering his taxes — a substantial expense of farming — and thereby remove one incentive for converting his land to nonfarm uses."

There are several techniques used to provide property tax relief and Campbell concludes that the approach North Carolina has taken "has not significantly slowed the conversion of farmland to other uses." The state's approach has been to tax farmland at a rate determined by its farm use, even if the land is worth much more as a future housing or shopping area site. The relief, Campbell says, has simply allowed farmers to hold onto their land until the time came for them to sell out to non-farm interests.

Campbell finds more promising the approaches taken in Wisconsin and California where tax relief is tied to either a personal contract that the land won't be converted for a specified period or a local governmental ordinance restricting non-farm use.

Agricultural districts are catching on in some states. Once farmers decide to turn their communities into such districts, the local government is limited in its power to put in new roads, sewers and to annex these areas. All of that reduces the desirability of the land for development. In return, farmers get tax breaks and protection against nuisance lawsuits. The Legislature would have to pass enabling legislation for the formation farmland and farm buildings.

North Carolina currently has a "Right to Farm" law that is aimed at cutting down nuisance lawsuits filed against farmers. Such suits often drive people out of farming. But Campbell says the law lacks the precision needed to make it valuable to farmers. For example, the law fails to say who bears the burden of proving whether or not a farm operation is a nuisance.

The author also finds considerable promise in the practice of acquiring development rights to farmland. Under this arrangement, government agencies or private private foundations purchase a development easement to a piece of land from its owner. In some cases, the landowner donates the easement which means he can write himself a massive tax deduction. In either case, the easement means a farmer can't sell the property for development.

In his conclusion, Campbell says that he sees the most promise for North Carolina in a combination of a private organization's purchase of easements while state and local governments restrict public works development in farm areas — a move which would discourage development there. To these measures, he would add a program of tax incentives for those who wish to hold onto their land.

PAUL T. O'CONNOR

of such districts in North Carolina.

Agricultural zones go one step beyond districts in that conversion of land to non-farm uses in these zones is prohibited. Agricultural zoning in North Carolina now allows a hodge-podge of uses for the land. Campbell says that formation of prohibitive zones would require legislation giving counties the power to regulate the use of

THE MIRACLE LIFE

Christianity is a miracle religion. Take miracle out of Christianity and you still have a commendable system of ethics, but you have no religion.

Religion begins when the power of the unseen world starts to impinge upon the situations of the material world. Religion is the assurance given to men's hearts that there is another order of life different and beyond the order which they apprehend with their five physical senses. And as soon as we begin to think in terms such as this, we immediately find ourselves in the realm of miracle.

And just as Christianity is the miracle religion, so the Christian life is a miracle. Of all the miracles which have occurred in the history of the Christian Church, none is so astounding as the miracle of a converted and regenerated life. Sinners who have become saints are greater miracles than cripples who have become athletes. The person of faith walks continually in the light and joy of another and better world. — Elisha Douglass

To the editor:

We read with great interest the letter in the Public Forum from Sharon Evans, Bus 139 driver. We are parents with children riding bus 139.

We applaud Sharon for trying to see that justice is done. We appreciate her conscientiousness in seeing that our children are picked up and delivered safely to their homes and schools.

As citizens of Greenville and Pitt County, we feel that everyone needs to be more aware of school buses and the rule that we MUST obey. Our attention as drivers MUST be focused on the school bus and the children boarding or leaving the bus. This is a law where exceptions cannot be made. We are dealing with the lives of children. If you pass a stopped school bus for any reason, the law has been broken and that person is guilty.

To Sharon we say, don't give up on our system of justice. Keep turning in the drivers that break the laws. One day your effort will be rewarded because you are going to let these people know that you care and that you are doing your job.

In this complicated world today, we cannot affect political, economic and world problems, but we CAN and DO take a stand on the safety of our children.

Second Mortgages Proliferate

By JOHN CUNNIFF

AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — Seldom do you see or hear advertisements urging you to take a second mortgage on your home, and yet the practice is proliferating, perhaps to the extent of being the only growth sector in the home financing industry.

Anxious sellers are using them to encourage buyers, owners are relying on them to cover balloon payments on first mortgages or to finance education, and lenders of various sorts find them a more secure form of making loans.

One lender, Advance Mortgage Corp., estimates that the dollar volume of second mortgages doubled between 1979 and 1981, while first mortgages, the traditional vehicle of home financing, were cut in half.

Dollar figures are difficult to assemble, but Walter Blass, Advance's executive vice president, estimates that in 1979 new first mortgages totaled $180 billion and seconds only $9.5 billion. A year later, he says, newly made first mortgages fell to $93 billion while second mortgages rose to $19 billion.

Blass believes the trend has accelerated this year.

Effectively disguising the second-mortgage practice has been the tendency of both lender and borrower to refer to such financing by the euphemism "home equity loan" in an attempt to avoid the stigma of the generic description.

By whatever name they are called, the National Association of Realtors estimates that far more than half of single-family home sales in the past couple of years were facilitated by such loans to buyers from sellers.

They have also helped California homeowners retire big short-term loans — so-called balloon mortgages that were issued for two or three years by sellers eager to move their properties. And they have made it possible for homeowners to finance a variety of costly expenditures, including college tuitions.

The basic change that has made such loans possible was the tripling in value of the U.S. housing stock between 1970 and 1980, when it reached about $4 trillion, with un-mortgaged equity of about $3.1 trillion.

But other factors too have been involved, including a change in the U.S. Bankruptcy Code in October 1979 that sharply increased the lender's risk on signature loans. After that, many consumer finance companies moved into second mortgages and away from their traditional business in small loans.

Blass estimates that since 1977 the small loans outstanding among consumer finance companies have increased barely 10 percent while second mortgages outstanding have multiplied five times. Spurred also by the rise of bank credit cards, which often fill the same function as personal loans, several consumer finance companies have been cutting the number of offices.

In 1973, banks and thrift institutions were given the right to make seconds, and private mortgage insurance followed. A secondary market, essential for mortgage banker participation, began developing in 1980.

The result of all the changes has in effect been a savings bank for homeowners.

"For most Americans the equity in their home has become their principal savings," Blass says. "The only way to withdraw this nest egg without selling their house and having to look for another is a second mortgage."

But the practice also has many critics, particularly those who fear that the housing values on which loans are based might shrink. And there have been collection problems, especially when lenders fail to determine if the borrower doesn't already have several other loans on the same property.

Whatever its defects, the practice of second mortgaging, politely referred to as the home equity business, has become the source of liquidity for millions of families otherwise squeezed dry by recession and inflation.

Bankers Report Rise In Saving By Consumers

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Bank officials say the recession has resulted in consumers returning to their habits of earlier years when people saved more money and were less prone to take on large debts.

"The value system has changed," said North Carolina National Bank President Hugh L. McColl Jr. "We've broken the back of inflationary expectations."

McColl and other banking officials in North Carolina say that individual borrowers are keeping up with their loan payments better than recession-plagued businesses.

"The best performance we're getting in our loans is in the consumer area," McColl said. "The consumer customer is doing quite well."

H. Jack Runnion, executive vice president of Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., agreed. "Consumer charge-offs as a percentage of loans are very low — not as high as you would expect," he said.

McColl said NCNB's ratio of credit card losses to sales was only one-half of one percent during the first nine months of this year, compared with 0.66 percent for the same period last year and 0.96 percent in the first nine months of 1980.

Credit card losses at Northwestern Bank are about the same this year as last year, partly because of the bank's tightening of credit criteria, said vice president Larry Shepherd.

"That has helped us control our credit losses," Shepherd said. "We approve 40 to 45 percent of the credit card applications we get now. Two years ago, we would approve maybe 60 to 65 percent."

Runnion said nearly all of Wachovia's losses come from large corporations, while McColl said most of NCNB's losses were in the middle-size to large business category. Small business defaults accounted for the highest percentage of Northwestern's losses, said John Ong, vice president for investor relations.

Although declining interest rates should help some hard-pressed companies, the banks may not yet have seen a peak in their loan losses, the officials said.

"Banks are nothing but a mirror of the world around them," McColl said. "Our performance tends to mirror the economy."

Charlotte police said the boys' father, Bernard Evans, told police his sons Israel and Taij Evans had swallowed the substance.

for Lehrman because of the tax proposal.

Marchi is not alone. Establishment Republicans regard Lehrman as a bad dream from which the party will soon awake. State Controller Ned Regan, the only Republican in state office, likes the Lehrman plan no better than Marchi does. The Cuomo camp hopes Regan will get up courage to oppose it if Cuomo opens up a lead in the polls.

This is less a partisan struggle than a choice between radical change and bipartisan status quo. When asked at a press conference about Marchi's defection, Lehrman ignored the senator and declared: "I'm not running for office to uphold the failed policies of the past. I believe in change. I intend to do the things that partisan politicians have believed impossible."

After seeming in late summer to back away from tax reduction, Lehrman now has pinned everything on public desire to throw off the government's yoke. The Cuomo camp is considering a new television commercial that attacks the 40 percent tax cut. That would further clarify the choice, with broad implications for the future of national politics.

 the preliminary, desired effects of regulation.
 Preliminary observations led him to the hypothesis that, in practice, some regulations protect firms, organizations, and professional and occupational groups instead of the general public.
 Stigler found firm statistical support for this hypothesis in a number of studies, but it still is too early to assess the ultimate accuracy of his theory, the award citation said.
 Another study showed regulation of electricity rates lacked observable effects. Stigler said one explanation was that regulation can be based on erroneous perceptions and in practice be difficult to implement.
 His work on the consequences of regulatory legislation has set a pattern for numerous similar studies, performed by other researchers in many countries, the award citation said.
 The Swedish Academy said Stigler "through long and extensive research efforts ... has made fundamental contributions to the study of market processes and the analysis of the structure of industries."

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — President Reagan's decision to campaign in North Carolina proves Republican challengers are closing in on their incumbent Democrat opponents, state GOP chairman David Flaherty says.
 The White House announced Tuesday that Reagan will visit the state next Tuesday to stump for Republican candidates and present a Medal of Freedom to singer Kate Smith.
 Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes says the president will speak at a rally, meet with party chairmen from Southeastern states, and attend a separate reception for contributors of large sums.

 "I think when you have as many close races as we have, this could be the impetus to put them (the GOP candidates) over the top," Flaherty said in a telephone interview. "This is an indication of just how close they are."
 Reagan aides had previously indicated he would make a personal appearance only if chances were good for Republican victories.

The reception for major contributors and the rally will be held at the Raleigh Civic Center. Proceeds from both will go to the GOP congressional candidates.
 Tickets for the rally will cost $3 per person. Flaherty said he didn't know where the presentation of the Medal of Freedom to Miss Smith, a Raleigh resident, would take place.

Flaherty says Reagan's visit should help focus voters' attention on "real issues" instead of "smears the Democrats keep putting out."

 Lynne Garrison, a spokeswoman for Gov. Jim Hunt, said: "I think the people of North Carolina will welcome the chance to ask Reagan questions about a few things, such as unemployment."

 Board members adopted a resolution thanking Howard Wilson, who has resigned from the commission after serving since April of 1981, for his service.

Qualifying Test

RECORD CRIME RATE
 TOKYO (AP) — Japan's crime rate rose 7.8 percent in 1981, soaring to a new post-war record, the Justice Ministry announced.
TYPHOONED
 BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Typhoon Nancy, moving across central Vietnam from the South China Sea, has wrecked homes and submerged ripening rice crops in three provinces, Radio Hanoi reported Tuesday.

The Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test-National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test will be administered to sophomores and juniors on Saturday from 8:30 a.m. to about 11 a.m. at Rose High School.
 The PSAT/NMSQT is the qualifying test for students who wish to participate in the nationwide scholarship competitions conducted by the National Merit Scholarship Corp. Although sophomores will be taking the test this year for practice, they will only be allowed as juniors to qualify for the National Merit Scholarship Program of the National Achievement Scholarship Program for Outstanding Negro Students.
 Sophomores and juniors may register for the test in the guidance office at Rose High. Students who will march in the ECU Homecoming parade will start testing at 7 a.m.

Nearly All Pass Charity Bazaar Exhaust Tests To Be Oct. 30

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — All but six of 178 cars checked for carbon dioxide in their exhausts Monday passed Environmental Protection Agency Standards, Mecklenburg County environmental health officials said.
 Free checks were offered by the county Environmental Health Department, which is charged with selling the idea of the upcoming inspections to the public.
 After Dec. 1, all gas-powered vehicles of 1971 model year or later registered to residents of Mecklenburg County will be tested in addition to the regular safety inspection. The cost for an annual inspection will jump from $4.25 to $8.50.

Carolina East Mall will present its fourth annual charity bazaar Oct. 30 from 10 a.m. until 9 p.m. Over 40 non-profit organizations are scheduled to participate by selling handmade or home-baked items.
 A news article published in Tuesday's edition of The Daily Reflector incorrectly said the bazaar would be held this weekend.
 The theme of the bazaar will be "Halloween," and prizes will be awarded to the organization with the best decorated booth.

REQUESTS APPROVED
 Police Chief Glenn Cannon announced the approval of three requests for solicitation permits in Greenville.
 Cannon said the requests were submitted by: the Americans Against Atomic Armaments to conduct a solicitation Oct. 18 through Dec. 18 to raise funds to be used to increase the public's consciousness to the threat of nuclear war;
 Gamma Sigma Sigma national service sorority to conduct a sidewalk solicitation Oct. 29 to raise funds for a handicapped child in Pitt County; and Chicod School to conduct a merchant solicitation Oct. 20-29 to solicit gifts to be given away at the school's Halloween carnival.

BOARD MEETING
 The advisory board of the Greenville Treatment Facility for Women will meet Oct. 26 at 7 p.m. at the facility on U.S. 264 East. Elections for officers will be held and a halloween party is scheduled after the meeting.

REVIVAL
 Revival services will begin at the Sheldermine Pentecostal Holiness Church on Wednesday and continue through Sunday with the pastor, the Rev. Bobby Williams, as the speaker. Services begin at 7:30 p.m.

Guilty Plea Is Entered By Vickery

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State Sen. Charles E. Vickery, D-Orange, pleaded guilty Tuesday to two charges of passing worthless checks after saying he was unaware that police had been searching for him.

Orange County deputies and Raleigh police had been unable to find Vickery to serve the warrants since two misdemeanor warrants were taken out against him on Sept. 1 by Sharon Fussell, an administrator for the Sir Walter Center where Vickery maintained an office.

Ms. Fussell said Tuesday night that Vickery owed a total of $3,805 for rent, telephone and secretarial expenses from June 1 "to today."

Vickery turned himself in at the Wake County Courthouse and pleaded guilty to the charges. Magistrate G.W. Willis found Vickery guilty of the misdemeanor charges and accepted a check for $62 in court costs plus $2,233.05, the combined value of the worthless checks Vickery passed in June and July.

Vickery also agreed to pay the Sir Walter Center the remaining $1,572.94 he owes.

"It was an unfortunate set of circumstances, and all that has been resolved," said Vickery's lawyer, Robert Casey, following the court proceedings.

Casey said Tuesday that Vickery had paid the full amount of $3,805 to the clerk of court for keeping and that it will be turned over to Ms. Fussell Wednesday.

Spokesmen for the Orange County Sheriff's Department said deputies tried from Sept. 9 to Sept. 13 to serve the summonses, which would have required Vickery to appear in court to answer the charges.

Vickery said Monday night he knew of no worthless checks and was unaware of any attempt by law enforcement officers to locate him.

"So far as I know, I haven't written a bad check and I'm not hard to find," he said. "I've written bad checks before. I don't want to say it's a common thing. If I have (written a bad check), it's something I don't know about."

Vickery, who was elected to the Senate in 1974, decided not to run for re-election this year after running into legal difficulties on several fronts.

On Nov. 5 the N.C. State Bar's disciplinary hearing commission will consider a May 19 request by the bar that Vickery be disciplined for his handling of a 1981 traffic case. The bar charged that Vickery violated the Code of Professional Responsibility by failing to represent a defendant in court and refusing to refund $127 the defendant had paid him.

Last December, Vickery was convicted of driving with a blood alcohol level of more than 0.10. His driver's license was revoked because he refused to take a Breathalyzer test at the time of his arrest.

Last year a Chapel Hill woman filed a $1 million civil lawsuit against Vickery, saying he was negligent in performing a marriage between she and a Chapel Hill attorney under authority granted him by a $10 mail-order minister's certificate in 1972. A judge had ruled the wedding invalid. The woman dropped the lawsuit as it was going to trial in April.

Brady Prefers Reagan Return

WASHINGTON (AP) — White House press secretary James S. Brady says he has a good reason for wanting President Reagan re-elected in 1984.

"Sure," Brady said during a surprise visit to the White House press room on Tuesday. "Why not? You don't want me moping around unemployed."

It was the first time Brady has been back to the briefing room since last Nov. 9, when he dedicated the newly re-decorated facility.

Brady was at the White House to have lunch with Dr. Arthur Koberne, the neurosurgeon who operated him after Brady was shot in the head during the March 30, 1981 assassination attempt on Reagan.

Mastermind In $6 Million Check Cashing Scheme Finally Caught

By BETSY KENEDY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — A meticulous record-keeper living a double life — with a "flea-bag" Harlem apartment and a 14-room home in the country — masterminded a check-cashing scheme that netted him $6 million and hit virtually every New York City bank, police said.

An alert bank manager's suspicion of a $275 check cashed by two women led to the man's arrest, ending what police said was a 7-year-old operation that netted about $3,500 a day.

Joel Johnson, 52, was seized Tuesday at the Harlem address, an apartment in a block of abandoned buildings taken over by squatters, from which he allegedly coordinated the scam, police Capt. Harold Wischerth said Tuesday.

Dolores Johnson, 47, not related to Joel Johnson, and Carol Evans, 31, two New York City women who allegedly cashed checks for Johnson, also were taken and charged with possession of forged instruments.

Police said the women gave information that led to Johnson's arrest on charges of grand larceny, forgery and possession of forgery devices.

Officer John Clifford said the alleged scam was carried out in all the city's major banks.

"I can't think of one that wasn't hit," he said.

Johnson, who police said drove a Porsche and who was well-dressed and well-spoken when arrested, told them that he had "people inside various bank branches who cooperated in the scheme." He also said he trained and employed five women to go into banks and cash the phony checks, police said.

"He kept quite extensive records," Wischerth said on Tuesday. "He knew each bank he wanted to hit; he kept records of what banks were hit and he knew which ones not to hit. He even knew the ones he planned to hit today."

He also seemed to have internal bank records listing names on company payroll and savings accounts, the captain said.

According to police, the women, using the identities of legitimate bank customers, cashed phony checks made out in the customers' names at various banks throughout the city.

Apart from his apartment "office," Johnson gave police another East Harlem address and said he owned a 14-room house in Monticello, a resort area in Sullivan County.

Besides employing the five women, Wischerth said, "the indications are that (Johnson) took care of a lot of other people along the way in the banks."

Johnson told police that he had worked as an assistant manager at a Chemical Bank branch in Brooklyn until he was dismissed in 1975.

But William Hefferly, a Chemical spokesman, said the bank "had no knowledge and can't confirm" that Johnson was a former employee. The bank said it was cooperating with the police and Manhattan District Attorney Robert Morgenthau.

The operation came to light Monday after the manager of a Chemical Bank branch in Manhattan became suspicious of a $275 check cashed by the two women.

Officers were summoned and the women were arrested, confessing to police, Wischerth said.

Police said they hauled off "three suitcases full of records" — blank checks, computerized printouts and a check-writing machine.

Please report any damaged traffic signs or traffic control devices to the Public Works Department, 752-4137.

Demos, GOP Argue Congressional Economics Lift

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic and Republican spokesmen, agreeing they have no miracle cures for the nation's economic ills, argued over whether Congress should enact legislation to spark the economy or simply give President Reagan's economic program more time.

In the second of two nationally broadcast "congressional leadership" debates sponsored by the League of Women Voters, representatives of the two parties also agreed Tuesday night that Congress will refuse to cut Social Security benefits to shrink government red ink.

They also went over familiar themes from familiar viewpoints.

"We are bottoming out. We are on the threshold of recovery. Let's don't kill it," said Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan.

"We're on the brink of an economic catastrophe," said Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark.

"Democrats believe it doesn't have to be this way," Bumpers said, referring to the nation's 10.1 percent unemployment rate.

"Reaganomics does not cause unemployment," countered Rep. Barber B. Conable Jr., R-N.Y. The president's economic program is "designed to deal with what causes unemployment" — inflation and high interest rates.

"Would higher taxes and more government spending help?" Conable asked the Democrats.

During Tuesday night's debate, Reagan himself was not an issue — as he has been in numerous campaigns around the country.

The only direct reference to Reagan came when Dole said, "The president is very pragmatic, very flexible and very fair."

"I can't believe you said that," Bumpers retorted.

Bumpers and House Democratic Whip Thomas S. Foley of Washington advocated legislation that would create public service jobs and spur the housing industry, but denied they were simply trying to throw money at the problem of joblessness.

"We're proposing some limited programs to get the economy sparked a bit," Foley said.

But neither side dealt with the problem of unemployment in specific terms, prompting debate moderator Marlene Sanders of CBS News to interject: "The unemployed can't take much comfort from this discussion so far."

The adversaries acknowledged that voters were being shortchanged this year by the lack of debate over the future of Social Security.

A bipartisan presidential commission is preparing a report on what action should be taken to keep the retirement system solvent.

The panel's recommendations will not be made until after the Nov. 2 elections and candidates of both parties have been reluctant to focus on the politically sensitive issue, saying they will withhold public statements until after the commission issues its report.

"Every alternative that commission is going to come in with will be an unhappy one," Bumpers said.

But Conable, a member of the commission, declared that "nobody ... is advocating cutting benefits. ... Congress would refuse to enact" benefit cuts.

He added, though, that something must be done "so that benefits don't outrun our capacity to pay for them."

In any case, Conable said, Social Security changes will be "very gradual."

"We can all accept that," Foley said.

Concerning the role of government, the Democrats and the Republicans took the traditional stands of their parties.

"We (government) can't do everything," Dole said, adding that the search for further budget cuts next year should leave "nothing off limits."

Foley said defense spending has been too high under Reagan.

"The Democrats are increasingly going to raise the question whether that defense doesn't have to be managed as well as any civilian program," Foley said.

On the issue of tax policy, the Democrats and Republicans agreed that the legislation passed this year to close loopholes was necessary and beneficial. But they disagreed over the value of last year's tax legislation and the three-year tax cut it contained.

Dole offered the most partisan note during the debate saying, "Check what we've done, and not what we say, and then vote Republican on Nov. 2."

The one-hour debate was held in the caucus room of the Cannon House Office Building. The first debate in the series was held Oct. 5 and focused on defense issues.

Teen Pregnancy Widespread

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Sexual activity and pregnancy are increasing among adolescents in both rich and poor nations, but scant attention is being devoted to the problems that result, says the medical director of a worldwide family planning group.

Medical problems that young mothers face are "a whole neglected area," said Dr. Pramilla Senanayake of the International Planned Parenthood Federation in London.

"These girls are producing babies when they're still babies themselves," she said before addressing the 10th World Congress of Gynecology and Obstetrics here. "I see pregnant girls as young as 13 or 14. This is a girl who is producing a child with the first or second or third egg she has ever produced."

The condition seriously threatens "the life and health of a young woman" and the unborn child, Mrs. Senanayake said.

Young mothers are much more likely to bleed, have prolonged labor and other delivery problems. The rates of spontaneous abortion, premature birth, low birth weight and infant mortality are much higher among adolescents than adults, she said.

Society often winds up supporting the unmarried mother and her child, Mrs. Senanayake said. Also, a young mother may never finish her education or develop her talents, she said.

Mrs. Senanayake, a native of Sri Lanka, said "a very long and slow and tedious process" of education tailored to different cultures is essential. "Neither the adolescents nor sex are, in themselves, the problem ... It's how society copes with them."

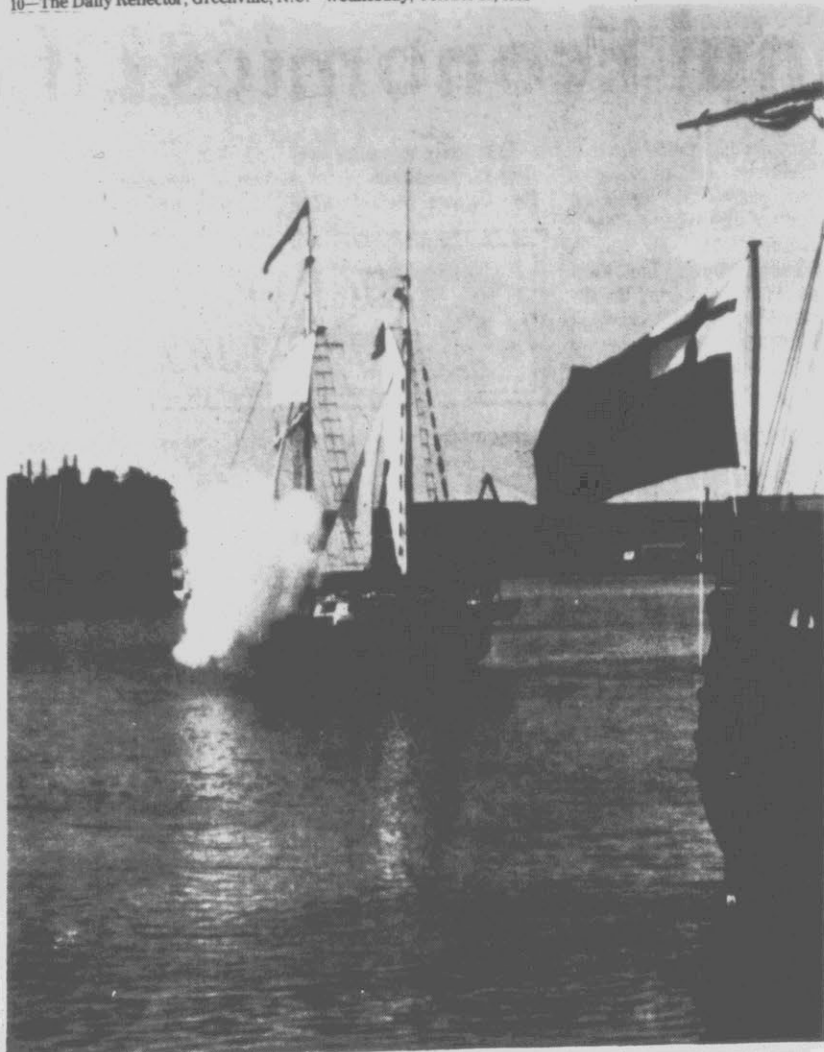

Many industrialized nations frown on sexual experimentation among youngsters, she said. But in some rural areas of developing countries, society encourages marriage and children soon after puberty.

For some poor people, many children are desired as laborers and security to the parents in their old age.

"Once a boy is 7 or 8, he's an extra pair of hands on the farm," she said.

She urged that birth control be available but warned that "contraception on demand, without sympathetic counseling at the same time, may confuse" youngsters.

"Few would argue ... that the best contraception for many unmarried adolescents is to say 'no' and mean 'no.'"

Soviet Offensive Said Failure In Afghanistan

By RICHARD BILL
Associated Press Writer
ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Soviet troops made an unsuccessful drive against guerrillas in Afghanistan's Panjsher Valley recently, losing 400 men and leaving Afghan army units pinned down when they retreated, a French guerrilla supporter claimed.

Jean Jose Puig of the organization Les Amies de L'Afghanistan, who recently returned from a 10-week visit to Afghanistan, said Tuesday the offensive about 70 miles north of the capital city of Kabul began in mid-September and ended following heavy Soviet losses.

Western diplomatic sources reported that fighting was continuing in the Kabul area, where they said Soviet and guerrilla forces were trading intense rocket and artillery barrages.

Puig, whose reports could not be verified independently, said many civilians were killed by Soviet bombers during the Panjsher offensive. He also claimed Soviet troops were systematically emptying villages, burning crops and slaughtering livestock in areas just outside the capital in an effort to deny bases to the rebels.

The Soviets sent an estimated 85,000 troops into Afghanistan in December 1979 to support the pro-Moscow regime of President Babrak Karmal against Moslem guerrillas.

"The Russians aren't waging an anti-guerrilla war," Puig charged. "They're trying to drive a wedge between the population and the resistance."

He said the Soviets left the Panjsher Valley after sustaining heavy losses, leaving behind regular Afghan army troops who are still pinned down at Rokha and Anawa.

The Western diplomatic sources, quoting reports received at their missions in Kabul, said intense bombing and rocketing was still going on in the Pagman area, about 10 miles northwest of Kabul. The sources, who asked not to be identified, said Soviet ground forces left the area Oct. 5.

The Western sources said the villages of Khoja Mosafar, Gozan and Isa Khel were badly hit, forcing many inhabitants to flee to Kabul. Artillery fire was reported aimed on a mountain range behind Khoja Mosafar, where guerrillas have fired rocket launchers at low-flying helicopter gunships.

Western diplomats reported a "major firefight" around Bagram airport last Wednesday and Thursday. The airport is the largest Soviet military installation in Afghanistan.

Government troops sealed off the area and conducted house-to-house searches for guerrillas and weapons, the diplomatic sources said.

Residents were forced to produce identity cards and several people were trucked off after being told they were eligible to be drafted into the Afghan army, said the sources.

Puig said the Soviets used a new bomber in their Panjsher Valley push.

Military analysts in Islamabad identified it as a SU-25, designed to attack tanks and heavy artillery. Diplomatic sources said they believed the planes flew missions from the Soviet side of the border.

Logar Valley, 15 miles from Kabul, was reported to be firmly in Soviet hands after heavy fighting and bombing attacks in early summer.

The nearby scenic Shomali area also was said to have been under heavy artillery attack recently.

Builders Plan Community

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — John Crosland Co., builders of homes for middle-income buyers, has announced a new community in the $140,000 to $175,000 price range.

Generally, houses in the price range are custom designed and built. The company already has broken ground on two houses, a model and one built on speculation. By spring, officials expect to have built one house from each floor plan.

Explosion, Fire At Wilmington

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — One person was killed in an explosion and fire about 2 a.m. today in the offices of Key Motor Co. near U.S. 17-74 in Wilmington.

Authorities said the victim was burned beyond recognition.

Witnesses said they heard an explosion and then saw flames engulf the building. Firefighters were able to contain the blaze quickly but the office building was destroyed.

There were no cars in the damaged lot.

Big Cocaine Bust Ended Dream Of John De Lorean

By LINDA DEUTSCH
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — John Z. De Lorean, a one-time boy wonder at General Motors who went on to manufacture his own futuristic stainless steel sports car, set up a $24 million cocaine deal in a desperate bid to save his bankrupt company, the FBI says.

De Lorean, 57, was arrested Tuesday at an airport hotel with several kilograms of cocaine, said Richard T. Bretzing, special agent in charge of the FBI Los Angeles office.

His arrest came on the same day the British government said it would permanently close the Northern Ireland plant which built De Lorean's cars. It had been in receivership since February.

The arrests of De Lorean and two other men taken into custody on Monday ended a five-month undercover probe which tracked the auto executive across the nation, said Bretzing.

"His company is in severe financial problems," Bretzing said at a news conference. "And he feared the possibility of his company being closed down by the government which had extended loans to him..."

He was expressing interest in financing some type of operation that would produce quickly, large sums of money in return for the investments."

Bretzing said De Lorean came to Los Angeles to buy 220 pounds of cocaine for distribution in Southern California at a street price of $24 million.

The others charged in the case were arrested Monday night. Bretzing said agents seized 60 pounds of cocaine with a street value of $6.5 million.

Charged with De Lorean were William Morgan Hetrick, 50, owner of an Morgan Aviation, an aircraft service company in Mojave, Calif., and Stephen Lee Arrington, 34, of San Diego, described as an associate of Hetrick. The three were accused of conspiring to distribute cocaine and possession of cocaine with intent to distribute.

De Lorean was taken to city jail where he was booked with his two co-defendants. They remained in custody late Tuesday, awaiting arraignment and setting of bail.

Hetrick was arrested in Hollywood and Arrington was picked up near Van Nuys Airport, Bretzing said. The men, if convicted, face maximum sentences of 15 years in prison and a $25,000 fine.

When arrested, De Lorean had several kilograms of cocaine from the same batch confiscated Monday night by the FBI, Bretzing said. A kilogram is 2.2 pounds.

He declined to comment on the apparent implication that an undercover officer had delivered the drug to De Lorean, but confirmed it was an undercover investigation.

De Lorean, son of an auto assembly worker, became the youngest general manager in the history of General Motors Corp. when he took over the Pontiac division in 1965. He rose to a $650,000-a-year vice presidency before resigning in 1973 after a dispute over the company's direction.

He launched De Lorean Motor Cars Ltd. in 1975. In 1978 the venture opened a plant near Belfast. It was heavily subsidized by the British government because of the 2,600 jobs created in the unemployment-ridden area.

The $25,000 sports car, assembled with components from other auto companies, was noteworthy for its stainless steel body and gull-wing doors, hinged from the roof. De Lorean had hoped to sell 20,000 vehicles a year, but many piled up unsold in the United States.

The company went stopped production and went into receivership in February with debts estimated at up to $68 million. The British government — which had invested more than $130 million in the project — said Tuesday it would close the plant permanently.

De Lorean is married to Cristina Ferrara, a top New York fashion model more than 20 years his junior.

Bretzing said an "arrangement had been made between Hetrick and De Lorean for delivery of 100 kilos (220 pounds) of cocaine which were to be purchased by De Lorean for distribution in the Southern California area."

He said the FBI was aware of De Lorean's alleged involvement from the beginning of the investigation, which also involved the Drug Enforcement Administration, Internal Revenue Service, U.S. Customs Department and Ventura police.

Meanwhile, Philip Xanthos, assistant chief of criminal investigations for the IRS, said his agents were fanning out across the country seizing assets owned by Hetrick to satisfy a $6.5 million lien for alleged non-payment of 1980-81 income taxes.

Xanthos said agents had already seized two pleasure boats in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., five aircraft and an IBM computer.

Dismissing Suit On Food Town

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Three years after Albert Gubay filed suit in an attempt to keep Food Town Stores Inc. from advertising the "Lowest Food Prices in North Carolina," both parties have agreed to dismiss the suit.

Gubay's 3 Guys Ltd. and Food Town agreed to "voluntarily" dismiss the lawsuit against Food Town without prejudice and with the right of 3 Guys to reinstate the lawsuit within one year from this date," according to a statement issued to the media.

The statement blamed "adverse procedural rulings" for the dismissal. Trevor Wilson, president of the chain's American operations based in Salisbury, could not be reached for further comment.

Should 3 Guys decide to refile the suit, nearly 2 1/2 years of litigation would be wiped out by the voluntary dismissal.

Makers Of Tylenol Hope To Rehabilitate Its Name

By MICHAEL BEZDEK
Associated Press Writer
NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J.
(AP) — Johnson & Johnson executives say they would like to begin in earnest the task of rehabilitating Tylenol's good name, but the chore will be difficult until the poisonings of seven people are resolved.

"What we need is a fast arrest," said Lawrence Foster, vice president for public relations for the New Brunswick-based health care giant.

Johnson & Johnson officials say they've done everything possible to expedite the capture of whoever put cyanide in Extra-Strength Tylenol capsules, killing seven people in the Chicago area. And they've also worked hard to help consumers.

The company has recalled and examined millions of Extra-Strength and regular Tylenol capsules, offered a $100,000 reward, set up a telephone hotline, cooperated with investigators and hired private detectives. It has also offered cash refunds or tablet exchanges for some 22 million bottles of Tylenol — offers Johnson & Johnson said could cost $79 million.

Joseph Chiesa, president of McNeil Consumer Products Co., the subsidiary that makes Tylenol, said the battle to save the aspirin-free pain reliever will be waged whether or not arrests are made.

He said the effort involves both Tylenol — the nation's best-selling over-the-counter pain-reliever until two weeks ago — and Johnson & Johnson, because "there is a clear number of consumers who now identify Johnson & Johnson as the maker of Tylenol along with McNeil."

Chiesa said he would not detail plans for the rehabilitation effort, except that the product would be made with new tamper-resistant packaging and that the name Tylenol would be retained.

Keeping the name is a wise move, said Stephen A. Greyser, a marketing professor at the Harvard Business School. "The cost of relaunching — even though that would be expensive — would be less than starting a new brand name," he said.

Chiesa also said the company has no plans to eliminate Tylenol capsules in favor of tablet and liquid forms, which are still sold.

New advertising for Tylenol will "be different than our normal messages" of the past and be "reflective of the current situation," he said.

Chiesa would not speculate on the dollar loss to Johnson & Johnson, which had sales of $5.4 billion in 1981, but said the firm expects to feel the impact of the poisonings through 1983.

Analysts have estimated 1981 Tylenol sales at about $400 million, for a 37 percent share of the analgesic market — more than Anacin, Bayer aspirin, Bufferin and Excedrin combined. Sales of Tylenol, which contains the aspirin substitute acetaminophen, have doubled since 1976.

Neil Sweig, a health products analyst for Shearson American Express, said the poisonings could cost the firm about $75 million in net profits.

He predicted the recall and destruction of capsules would be reflected in a 25 cents per share loss in the third quarter, and that repackaging costs would result in another 15 cents per share loss in the fourth quarter. Johnson & Johnson last year earned $2.51 per share.

Sweig and others said Johnson & Johnson will be able to rebound, but the experts are less sure about Tylenol. The drug is the leading product among 120 Johnson and Johnson subsidiaries, but accounts for only about 7 percent of company sales.

The product's chief assets, analysts said, were the fact that no manufacturer error was indicated in the deaths, and the forthright way Johnson & Johnson executives reacted to the poisonings. Another plus, experts say, is consumer confidence in the company and Tylenol's previous popularity.

Support for Johnson & Johnson has come from such varied sources as analysts, government officials, competitors and even the New Jersey Council of Churches. And the 1,200 employees at McNeil's Fort Washington, Pa., plant offered to each provide $100 toward a reward for whoever finds the culprit who tampered with their product. The offer was politely rejected by Johnson & Johnson.

Prosecutors say they believe someone introduced the cyanide to the Extra-Strength Tylenol capsules after they left the manufacturer — making this case unlike others in which producers have been blamed for sickness or death.

"The great difference is that it's not their fault. It's a pathetic case, but there's a great challenge there. I'm reasonably certain they can come back," said Dr. Thomas Robertson, chairman of the marketing department at University of Pennsylvania's Wharton School.

A lawyer has filed suit against Johnson & Johnson on behalf of several families of poisoning victims. But an article in the National Law Journal says it will be difficult to convince a jury that the company is liable for the deaths — especially if tampering by a third party is shown.

However, Dr. Roger Strang, marketing professor at New York University, and other experts say Tylenol is in grave danger as a product because of the seven deaths.

The link, said Dr. Robert Blattberg, a professor of marketing at the University of Chicago, will hurt Tylenol "a lot. And it's going to affect other kinds of products in capsules."

Sweig said that although some other manufacturers of pain-relievers are reporting sales increases, "I have spoken with a lot of them, and they are all frightened about what this is going to do to the market."

At Johnson & Johnson, three task forces are working on the image problem. And the company has preliminary results from consumer attitude studies indicating Tylenol tablets are selling, said Foster.

Chiesa says he is "optimistic" about Tylenol. He strongly disagrees with "marketing experts who say this rings the death knell on the Tylenol franchise."

Foster said consumers will realize "we were victimized along with society" and that because of "goodwill" generated by the 95-year-old Johnson & Johnson, "we may come out of this with a stronger image."

POLICY REVERSAL

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's government, in a policy reversal, plans to allow immigrant women settled in Britain to bring in their husbands or fiancés, three British newspapers say.

Janet Gaynor Alert, Talking

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Janet Gaynor, critically injured six weeks ago in a traffic accident, is improving so much that her doctors have upgraded her condition from serious to satisfactory.

The 76-year-old silent movie star was alert and talking Tuesday, and her doctors also had her moved from the intensive care unit at San Francisco General Hospital to a single room with a private nurse, said spokeswoman Linda De La Ysla.

Miss Gaynor, who won the first Oscar for an actress in 1928, was injured Sept. 5 when a van rammed a taxi carrying her and her husband Paul Gregory, actress Mary Martin and Miss Martin's manager, Ben Washer. Washer, 76, was killed. Gregory, 62, and Miss Martin, 68, star of "South Pacific" and "Peter Pan," have been released from the hospital.

The driver of the van, Robert Cato, 32, of San Francisco, has pleaded innocent to charges of vehicular manslaughter, drunken driving, speeding and running a red light.

The 'Mary Rose' Promises To Be A British Jewel

By MARK S. SMITH
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — King Henry VIII's flagship the Mary Rose, raised after 437 years on the sea bottom, seems destined to become the crowning jewel in a grand display of life in the British navy.

The Tudor warship, which sank while sailing to fight the French in 1545, was hoisted to the surface near Portsmouth harbor Oct. 11.

The feat climaxed a three-year archaeological project and three days of suspenseful live TV coverage watched by millions of Britons.

The Mary Rose Trust headed by Prince Charles plans to drydock the ship next to another famous vessel that once sailed out of Portsmouth — HMS Victory, on whose deck Lord Nelson died in 1805 after his fleet thwarted Napoleon at the battle of Trafalgar.

History has left a wealth of mementoes of Britain's seafaring past in Portsmouth, a city of winding streets where Charles Dickens was born and the port from which Royal Navy fleets sailed for Jutland in World War I, Normandy in World War II and the Falklands just last spring.

Moored in the harbor are a pair of 19th century wooden frigates, HMS Foudroyant and HMS Gannet, and adjacent to the Royal Navy docks is the Submarine Museum featuring HMS Alliance, last of Britain's World War II subs.

Plans are afoot to tow HMS

Warrior, the nation's first ironclad, down from the northwest port of Hartlepool where the vessel — built in 1860 — is undergoing restoration.

"What with those ships and the large number of historic buildings around the middle of Portsmouth dockyard, it all begins to add up to a stupendous collection," says Arthur Rodgers, spokesman for the Mary Rose Trust.

The Mary Rose will be the pride of that collection. Raised from the bottom of the Solent — the English Channel inlet bounded by Portsmouth harbor and the Isle of Wight — at a cost of $6.8 million, the 91-gun galleon had lain preserved in chalky mud, since it sank before Henry's eyes on July 19, 1545, taking with it 660 of the 700 men on board.

Historians differ on the reason the Mary Rose sank.

Some say it was overloaded with bowmen and soldiers, others that its unruly crew capsized it. There is a theory that the vessel's lower gun ports, foolishly opened well before battle was joined, admitted seawater to the ship's hold.

The French claimed their cannon sank the ship.

Whatever the reason, Henry, watching from a few hundred yards away on shore, was horrified. Hearing the cries of dying seamen carrying across the water, he is said to have exclaimed: "Oh, my gentlemen! Oh, my gallant men."

It wasn't long before Henry attempted to salvage the pride of his fleet, which he named after his sister Mary, queen of France.

A month after the sinking in just 45 feet of water, two British 700-tonners, the Jesus of Lubeck and the Samson, ran a cable through the wreck's rigging and tried to pull it up at low tide.

"I trust with the leave of God, she shall be brought upright again tomorrow," said Admiral of the Fleet Lord Lisie. His trust was misplaced. Some guns were recovered, but not the ship.

Over the centuries, the multi-decked wreck was covered by silt. In 1845, the Royal Engineers blew up part of the superstructure because it was a hazard to shipping.

After that, the wreck was forgotten — until 1965, when writer and amateur diver Alexander McKee formed Project Solent Ships with a mandate to locate wrecks near Portsmouth.

It took five years, dozens of dives and hundreds of hours of sonar scanning to pinpoint the Mary Rose, and raising it proved a tricky business. The upper decks had to be dismantled and a lifting frame fitted to the surviving starboard portion of the hull.

Over three years, some 3,000 timbers were brought to the surface, along with 17,000 artifacts, before the operation to winch up the shell. It proved a hair-raising project, plagued by bad weather, deceptive tides and salvage gear that snapped and buckled.

But the raising was only the first stage in an elaborate plan to reconstruct the Mary Rose on a drydock pedestal, giving a cutaway view of the interior.

Trust officials say it will give a "doll's house" look at life on a Tudor warship. Arrows, shoes, combs, 16th century musical instruments, shaving kit, utensils, coins, leeching bowls and rudimentary tools are among artifacts to be displayed both in the ship and in a nearby museum building.

According to Andrew Fielding, deputy archaeol-ical director, the rebuilding will take "many years."

No one can say how long the final reconstruction and treatment will take. But if the experience of the Swedish warship the Wasa is any guide, it could be decades.

Built to fight in the Thirty Years War with Poland and Germany, the Wasa went down in 1628 in even more embarrassing circumstances than the Mary Rose. One mile out on its maiden voyage, it capsized under the weight of its guns.

The Wasa was raised in 1961. It is still being worked on.

Old Spirits In Old House

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — The old house had spirits, but not the haunting kind.

Matthew Gleason, 17, tore open a basement wall during remodeling of a Victorian house last week and found 50 bottles of scotch, bourbon, brandy, wine and ale.

Newspapers packed around some bottles dated back to 1921, two years after the start of Prohibition. One bottle of brandy was dated 1912.

Matthew's parents, Lee and Chloe Gleason, bought the mansion two years ago and said they weren't surprised it contained the booze.

The previous owner was Mamie McLeod, an artist who inherited the house from her mother, Clara Williams, whose California Wine House in Tacoma established the family fortune. The basement of the house contained a lot of vintage wine that was removed before the house was sold, Mrs. Gleason said.

The Gleasons say they have no intention of toasting their good fortune with the vintage stuff.

The corks will stay in place, said Mrs. Gleason, at least until they find out what 60-year-old imported scotch is worth.

Halloween Is More Frightening To Many This Year

By DAVID L. LANGFORD
Associated Press Writer

The Tylenol murders prompted one community to ban trick-or-treating this Halloween out of fear of "copycat" poisonings and police in many cities are taking extra precautions, but most say you can't outlaw a tradition.

"I would not allow my children to take candy this particular Halloween," Chicago Mayor Jane Byrne said on Tuesday. Other authorities concurred, and in many places, police planned stepped up patrols or increased inspection of Halloween plunder.

Halloween sometimes is dangerous. A Louisiana man last year shot and killed a 13-year-old youth who showed up at his door wearing an Army costume and carrying a toy submachine gun. Police in Muncie, Ind., found some lick-on stickers picturing Mickey Mouse and Donald Duck that had been laced with LSD.

But the deaths of seven people in the Chicago area 2½ weeks ago after they took Extra-Strength Tylenol spiked with cyanide prompted warnings that this year could be worse. "Bad things come out at Halloween," said Illinois Attorney General Tyrone Fahner, who heads the task force investigating the poisonings. "This year has particular problems."

Since the cyanide deaths, products such as mouthwash and eyedrops have been found laced with acid or poison in isolated cases in several states, including California, Florida, Ohio and Colorado.

Fahner said many "very concerned" people have called the Tylenol hotline, worried about copycat poisoners. He is writing to PTA groups and churches in the state suggesting they organize Halloween parties in churches or neighborhoods to "control what's given to kids."

Mrs. Byrne said more than 1 million fliers will go to schools, libraries and churches, urging parents to accompany children on Halloween night and to examine carefully everything children eat.

A California mother of two boys, ages 7 and 14, said, "All you can do is keep cautioning and cautioning."

"It's a cardinal sin for my kids to eat anything before I inspect it," added Diane Peets, president of the Meadows School PTA in Valencia, a Los Angeles suburb.

"We don't want to cancel trick-or-treating because of the flakes out there," said Pittsburgh Police Sgt. Herman Mitchell, supervisor of community relations, "but we're going to be extra careful this Halloween."

Pittsburgh police are expanding a Halloween candy check program that has been in effect for three years. Youngsters are urged to take suspicious candy to their neighborhood precinct station where police and health department officials can inspect it.

"We're beefing up the program this year," Mitchell said. "All our precincts will be open."

In Cheyenne, Wyo., Memorial Hospital of Laramie County has announced free X-ray service for bags of candy children collect. A spokesman said it would detect solid hazards such as pins or razor blades, but not drugs.

Officials in Lexington, Ky., have asked that trick-or-treating be restricted to two hours early in the evening of Saturday, Oct. 30. Police also have advised children to check the wrappers of commercial treats for signs of tampering.

Likewise, Mayor Mike DiNunzio of Lansdale, Pa., a short distance from the headquarters of the manufacturer of Tylenol, said, "We just instituted a program of local mayors to concentrate all trick-or-treater activities on Saturday evening. This way we can have our police forces aware of everything that's going on."

"We didn't have Tylenol in mind when we did it...But I can see where what we've done would be important."

As for banning trick-or-treating, he said, "You can't do that. It's such a custom around here."

In Dudley, Mass., however, village officials citing the Tylenol poisonings voted Monday night to outlaw trick-or-treating.

"There's kind of a sick situation right now," said Bernard J. Wielock, the village chairman. "It is the atmosphere around the world. It is sad."

Trick-or-treating also has been banned in Shreve, Ohio, but for a different reason. Mayor Bruce A. Briggs ordered the ban in the north-eastern Ohio town of 1,600 people because of the recent attempts to abduct two young girls in the area and the unsolved abduction-slaying of a child in nearby Marshallville last July.

But Los Angeles police Lt. Dan Cooke said, "I don't know how you cancel trick-or-treating. People are going to do it anyway."

Sgt. Bruce Beauchamp of the police community resources department in Garden Grove, Calif., said, "Trying to legislate against trick-or-treating is like trying to legislate against prostitution.

Composition To Be World's Fair Event

ECU News Bureau

A work by East Carolina University faculty composer Robert Stine will be performed in Knoxville, Tenn., Saturday as part of the fall World's Fair events.

Stine's composition, "The heave-tree ...," composed in 1976 for flute and tape, will be part of the International Electronic Music Plus Festival at the fair.

Another Stine composition, "Veiled Dream" of 1981 for clarinet, oboe, cello, piano and percussions, was premiered by the professionally new music ensemble Renaissance at Harkness Chapel in Cleveland, Ohio, while Stine was conducting a composition masterclass at the Cleveland Institute of Music last month.

A member of the ECU School of Music faculty since the autumn of 1981, Stine recently won the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers Composer's Award for the second time.

He is an alumnus of UNC-Chapel Hill with advanced degrees from the Cleveland Institute. Among his recent compositions are the Second Symphony, commissioned by the National Endowment for the Arts, "In a Dark Mood" for chamber ensemble and chamber orchestra, and a string quartet. His works have been performed at the San Francisco Conservatory and at the national conference for the American Society of University Composers.

Before joining the ECU faculty, Stine taught at the University of California, Berkeley.

'Spotlight' Talk By Dr. Mathis

Dr. James Mathis will be the speaker for the third Mental Health Association-sponsored luncheon "Spotlight" talk to be held Thursday at noon at the Greenville Parks and Recreation Administration Building, 2000 Cedar Lane.

Dr. Mathis's topic will be "Mid-Life Years — When the Bills Come Due." He is chairman of the department of psychiatry of the East Carolina University School of Medicine.

The Spotlight series, being held each Thursday this month, is free to everyone. It is suggested that each participant take a sandwich. Beverages will be provided.

Theorists Of The 'New Right' Dislike Their Title

By EVANS WITT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The New Right doesn't want to be called the New Right anymore. "Populists," they say, would be better. Their theorists say populism sides with blue-collar workers against Washington lawyers and other "elitists" in an era when all the traditional labels — liberal, conservative, Democratic, Republican — no longer seem to fit.

The theorists are people like Rep. Jack Kemp, D-N.Y.; Richard Viguerie, the direct-mail fund-raiser for New Right causes; Terry Dolan, head of the National Conservative Political Action Committee, and commentator Kevin Phillips, architect of President Nixon's "Southern strategy" for the 1972 campaign.

"The liberal coalition is dying because most of its leaders are elitists," Viguerie explains in the October issue of The New Conservative Digest, which he publishes.

"There are millions of Americans who feel that neither liberals nor conservatives, Democrats nor Republicans really care about their concerns. ... These are the people who feel strongly about such issues as crime, illegal drug use, pornography, illegal aliens ..."

"Conservatives and the New Populist Coalition can govern at local, state and national levels far into the 21st century if we join with tens of millions of angry and frustrated Americans."

The magazine's targets tell something about populist concerns. "Big Labor" is bad, but so is "Big Business." Government, including the Pentagon, wastes billions of dollars. Such attacks on business and military spending were rarely heard from the New Right of yore.

Other "elitists" singled out for a populist revolt are television network executives, the National Council of Churches, executives of large banks, national union officials, the National Education Association, federal employees and judges who free criminals on technicalities.

The populist idea is believed to have originated with Phillips, also known as the man who dreamed up the "Silent Majority," the elusive electorate that Nixon wooed in 1968, and the concept of the "Sunbelt v. the Frostbelt" in the 1970s.

Phillips argues in a new book, "Post-Conservative America," that traditional political philosophies have been tried and found wanting. He used the term "populist" to describe the political attitudes of many Americans who are neither conservative nor liberal.

He and others mention the property tax revolt among Californians in 1978 as a prime example of the "new populism" in action.

Many of these "progressives," who came from the student anti-war movement of the late 1960s and early 1970s, see a failure of liberalism but reject conservative views as well. Typically, they focus more on the local rather than federal government level. Politicians who might be called progressives include former student activist Tom Hayden, now running for the California Assembly; Rep. Byron Dorgan of North Dakota; Nicholas Carbone, former president of the Hartford, Conn., city council, and Peter Shapiro, Essex County (Newark) executive in New Jersey.

A leading exponent of progressive views is Lee Webb, executive director of the Conference on Alternative State and Local Policies, a network of progressive politicians. "We can't expect progress out of Washington to solve people's problems. The only place it can happen is at the state level or below," he said in a recent interview. The irony is that these new "populist" and "progressive" labels are drawn from American political movements of the past. Populism was the name of the political movement that arose in the Southern and Western farm areas in the late 1800s. Savaged by dropping farm prices, the populists saw the railroads and Eastern bankers as the enemy, and urged reforms to regulate the railroads, increase the money supply and give voters a more direct role in government. The populists formed a political party that ran a presidential candidate in 1892, James Weaver, who received a million votes. When the Democrats nominated Williams Jennings Bryan for president in 1896, the populists gained a spokesman inside a major party. By the early years of the 20th century, the progressives had taken over populist ideas and were putting them into action. Republicans led by Theodore Roosevelt were in the forefront of this movement, with the help in Congress of Robert La Follette of Wisconsin, who later founded a Progressive Party and ran for president in 1924.

Full Extent Of Those PLO Tunnels Is Yet Unknown

By CLARA HEMPHILL
Associated Press Writer
BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The tunnels twist and turn for miles under the Lebanese capital, sometimes so narrow a man has to crawl through them, sometimes wide enough to take a truck.

This is the underground network the Palestine Liberation Organization used to hide guerrillas and arms in its last stronghold during the summer Israeli invasion and bombardment. It is largely unexplored by outsiders, and military officials say it may be months before its full extent is known.

"We haven't explored the whole network," said Capt. Corrado Cantatore, spokesman for the Italian troops in the multinational peacekeeping force. "But as far as we know, the tunnels are connected with many exits."

The tunnels were built after the PLO arrived in Lebanon in 1970 and were believed to be fairly extensive by the time of the 1975-76 civil war.

Some guerrilla leaders had talked about the tunnels before their evacuation from west Beirut six weeks ago, saying they were patterned after those used by the Viet Cong during the Vietnam War.

Several ranking members of the more radical wings of the PLO visited Vietnam in the late 1970s and later remarked that they had found the Viet Cong tactics against the United States "instructive."

"We learned a lot about tunnels from Vietnam," a senior PLO official remarked during an interview last winter.

PLO tunnels were found in southern Lebanon soon after Israel invaded June 6. Israeli troops found huge caches of arms, shells and dynamite in tunnels in a small village south of Sidon and said 300 trucks were not enough to carry them away.

But the Israelis apparently did not find all the hiding places. A few guerrillas claimed they hid in the tunnels under Beaufort Castle, a fortress built by Crusaders in the Middle Ages, for five weeks after it fell to Israel.

There have been rumors of a sophisticated underground center in Sidon — also known as Saida — with gates opening on the sea that could be operated by signals transmitted by submarines. Israeli military officials in Sidon, a former PLO stronghold on the Mediterranean 25 miles south of Beirut, said they had searched up and down the coast but had not found any such center or gate.

In Beirut, the tunnels run under the Palestinian refugee camps of Sabra, Chatilla and Bourj el-Barajneh, former strongholds of the PLO which took the brunt of Israeli bombing during the war.

Some of the entrances are disguised to look like cellar doors on any house, with concrete steps leading down to the basement. Others are small openings in mounds of earth, leading into large bunkers with concrete walls where hundreds of civilians as well as guerrillas took shelter during Israeli air raids. A few are large, with a ramp sloping down like the entrance to an underground garage.

The tunnels were still littered with cases of dynamite, shells and bombs when a reporter visited them. Dirty blankets and pillows, cans of food and high school textbooks on the floors show that people slept, ate and even studied there.

The tunnels are dark and damp, with tiny shafts for air and light. Cockroaches crawl on the concrete walls.

The Lebanese army discovered the tunnels when its soldiers took up positions in Bourj el-Barajneh last month after the departure of PLO guerrillas.

Army sources said they found stolen cars, a printing press, disassembled parts of helicopters and underwater scooters that could transport one or two people along the seabed. They said they also found food supplies and a radio relay station.

Cantatore said Italian troops patrolling the camps are more concerned about finding unexploded bombs above ground and clearing the area of mines than exploring the tunnels, so it will be some time before anyone knows exactly how extensive the system is. But Lebanese security sources said they have found at least four miles of tunnels running under the refugee camps in Beirut with one exit near the airport.

Cantatore said the tunnels were used basically for defense, although they also made it possible for the guerrillas to supply their positions with arms and ammunition.

"The tunnels were not something to help them fight.

They were something to help them survive," he said in an interview. "A tunnel can only be used as an offensive thing if it goes behind enemy lines."

The tunnels apparently provided good protection during Israeli air raids, but may have been death traps during the Sept. 16-18 massacre of hundreds of people in the Sabra and Chatilla camps. Security sources said grenade explosions blocked the entrances to the bunkers, and some people may have been trapped inside.

Moustafa Habra, a survivor of the massacre, said he was hiding in a bunker with 100 other people when rightist Christian militiamen burst in and hauled men, women and children out. Habra's wife and three children were killed. He was shot down by machine-gun fire with a line of 30 men but despite his wounds managed to crawl away to safety after the gunmen left.

Rarely Refuse Office Chores

HOLYOKE, Mass. (UPI) — American secretaries rarely refuse their bosses' requests to do office chores, but sometimes they feel they must, a recent survey shows.

The study by American Pad and Paper Co., an office supplies manufacturer, found 80 percent of the respondents said they had never refused a boss's request. Of those who had, one said she'd been asked to clean a restroom, and another, to backdate a company postage meter.

The most frequently cited refusal was running personal errands, such as Christmas shopping.

Californians Eat Cheeses

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Californians are the biggest cheese eaters in the United States. They eat about 29 pounds per capita each year — or about as much as Europeans.

Research by the California Milk Advisory Board indicates consumers in the other 49 states account for only 18 pounds each.

About 20 different cheeses of many ethnic origins are currently produced in California, where cheesemaking was introduced by Father Junipero Serra and his Franciscan followers when they established Christian outposts on the California coastline.

The group had learned cheesemaking from their native island of Majorca.

Italian settlers later brought mozzarella and ricotta; the French, brie and camembert; the Swiss, gruyere and Swiss cheese; the Greeks, feta; and the English, cheddar.

Other ethnic groups have produced California blue, colby, cream, teleme, hoop, farmers, bakers, and string cheese, as well as Mexican varieties including some made with the fiery jalapeno peppers.

Commercial hard-cheese producers in the Golden State won 17 of 20 medals in national competition last year.

INDIVIDUAL TOURISTS
TOKYO (AP) — China will permit individuals to tour the communist nation, ending a policy restricting most visitors to group tours, says Han Kehua, director of the National Tourism Administration.

Helms Avers 'Scrap' Leaf Curbs Ahead

By The Associated Press
U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., has gained the Reagan administration's backing for higher tariffs to be paid by manufacturing companies that import foreign "scrap" tobacco, a Raleigh newspaper reported today.

The News and Observer of Raleigh said in today's editions that Helms had met recently with Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan and has gained the administration's support in taking steps that would limit the foreign tobacco imports by raising the tariffs on "scrap tobacco."

The scrap tobacco issue has been one area of concern among tobacco growers concerned about the increase in foreign-grown tobacco since 1978.

The North Carolina Farm Bureau has charged that importers, in a ploy to pay artificially low tariffs, have been threshing quality leaf into small strips and labeling it scrap tobacco.

However, Democratic officials have contended that changing the tariff classification for scrap tobacco would not limit imports. They point to a provision that would allow companies to reclaim duties if they exported tobacco as well.

Scrap tobacco has a tariff of 16.1 cents a pound, while normal quality flue-cured tobacco has a duty of 35 cents a pound.

A U.S. General Accounting Office report estimated that the country had lost as much as $188 million in import tariffs during the 1970s because of improperly classified tobacco.

The amount of imported foreign leaf, classified as scrap, rose from 15.1 million pounds in 1971-72 to a high of 139 million pounds in 1979-80.

It was unclear when Helms would make the announcement of a tariff increase. Political observers have speculated that the announcement would be made shortly before President Reagan's planned trip to North Carolina next week.

Helms was delivering a speech in Dallas Tuesday and could not be reached for comment.

George S. Dunlop, agriculture adviser to Helms, said, "I think you are correct to say something is shaking on it."

But Dunlop declined to provide any details because he said he didn't want to jeopardize the administration's decision.

William E. Little, commodity director of the farm bureau, said he expected something to break on the scrap tobacco issue "in a few days."

Minor Pain For Divers

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — The director of the simulated deep sea dive at Duke University says the divers experienced minor aches and pains Tuesday, but they would not interfere with decompression.

Dr. Peter Bennett, director of the F.G. Hall Hyperbaric Laboratory, said the divers should reach a simulated depth of 1,000 feet this weekend, which will allow them to move into an adjacent 18-by-10-foot chamber via an air lock.

The divers have been in the 8-foot-diameter pressure chamber since Sept. 27 to study their ability to work at great ocean depths using an experimental breathing mixture of oxygen, nitrogen and helium. Their dive was cut short last week after one diver experienced dizziness, memory loss and nausea associated with high pressure nervous syndrome.

Bennett said the minor discomforts would continue to ease as the pressure dropped at a rate of three feet an hour.

The diver who has been suffering symptoms of high pressure nervous syndrome is still receiving some sedation for the condition, but has shown some improvement, Bennett said.

Still-Smasher A Collector Of Whiskey Decanters

By THOMAS S. WATSON
Associated Press Writer
LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) —
He was the scourge of moonshiners, tromping through the hills of Kentucky, Indiana and Tennessee, smashing illegal stills and confiscating bottled brew.

Now in his retirement years, William "Big Six" Henderson collects whiskey decanters instead of destroying them. He boasts a collection of nearly 3,000, with likenesses of politicians and celebrities, animals, states, weapons and even a moonshiner, complete with corn-cob pipe and whiskey jug.

"They say I have the largest collection in the world," the 79-year-old Henderson says.

"I don't advertise my collection generally, because if anybody tried to steal any of the decanters, I'd have to shoot them."

During his 28 years as a treasury agent, Henderson roamed the hills of Kentucky, Indiana, Tennessee and West Virginia, seizing and smashing more than 6,000 illegal stills. He keeps a still he captured in his basement, which also houses his bottle collection.

Henderson began collecting decanters after seeing a Civil War commemorative bottle of a Union sergeant who looked like his father, George Washington Henderson. The elder Henderson fought in the Civil War.

He "raised the flag at Bowling Green March 12, 1862," Henderson said, and was later captured and imprisoned by Confederate troops at Andersonville, Ga. One of the few children of Civil War soldiers still alive, Henderson said his father was 63 when he was born.

Henderson has some strong and painful memories of his career as a treasury agent. He has some dangerous keepsakes, too.

"I keep a machine gun, two sawed-off shotguns and an M-2 loaded and ready," Henderson says. "I've been shot, four times and I've accidentally shot myself twice."

His left arm is partially disabled because of a shotgun wound inflicted by a moonshiner.

Henderson got his nickname, "Big Six," when he was a child because he resembled Christy "Big Six" Mathewson, a pitcher for the old New York Giants. Later, after earning a law degree, Henderson spurned a pitching offer from the Chicago White Sox because his mother didn't approve.

"She started crying," he said. "I already had a law degree I had gone to school at night to get."

But Henderson made little use of the law degree; he joined the Louisville &

Nashville Railroad as a rate clerk. After that, he became a treasury agent.

In 1970, he was appointed federal marshal for the western district of Kentucky by then-President Richard Nixon and held the position for almost six years.

In the last few years, Henderson has spent some of his time making appearances at community events where he usually erects a still, producing distilled water instead of moonshine, and talks about his past. And, he has devoted much of his time caring for his bottles.

Many of the decanters, some no longer found in stores, were made by the James Beam Distilling Co. of Clermont, Ky.

One in the collection is a gold decanter depicting the late entertainer Elvis Presley.

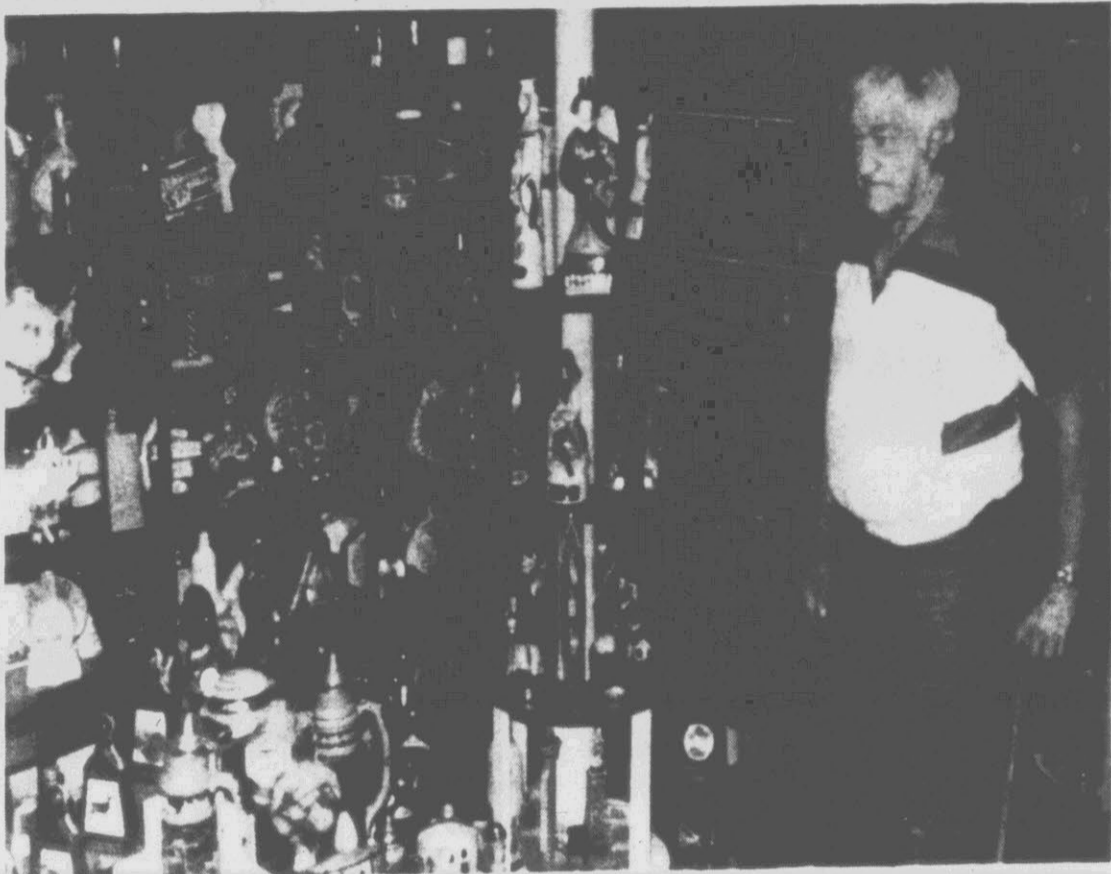

"That cost a man in Bowling Green, Ky., $740 five years ago," Henderson said, explaining how the bottle ended up in his collection.

"A fellow in Bowling Green had a big liquor store that I caught bringing in moonshine whiskey," he said. "He got about 60 days and a $1,000 fine. This was 30 years ago. The old man died and his deathbed request was that I be given a set of bottles of his that I didn't have. It was just a few months ago that his son gave me the gold Elvis bottle, although he'd held it for years."

There are just two decanters from the Beam collection that have eluded Henderson's grasp. One is a rare First National Bank of Chicago centennial commemorative valued at $6,000, he said. The other bears the likeness of former Vice President Spiro Agnew.

"Sen. Marlow Cook (a former Republican senator from Kentucky) said he could get the Agnew bottle for $500," Henderson said. "I told him I wouldn't give $500 for the bottle and Agnew both. However, I'd give $1,000 or more for that First National Bank Bottle."

Want Their Claws Back

BALTIMORE (AP) — A public relations firm wants to get its claws back on an elaborate crab costume that was stolen after the grand opening of a downtown seafood restaurant.

Rapport, the firm that hired actors to dress up as fish, oysters and sea monsters for the restaurant opening, has taken out newspaper ads appealing for the costume's return.

"It's humorous story, but it's a serious matter, the costume is valued at $2,000 or $3,000," said publicist Ann von Forthuber. "How long can a crab live out of water? You can't steam it, you can't mate it. You can't even wear it in public, so why not return it?"

The costume was last seen being picked up by a man in a tuxedo in the room where it was left after the opening of the Oyster Bar on Oct. 3, Ms. von Forthuber said.

The firm's ad exhorts the thief to "Bring Back The Crab. You Know Who You Are." The ad says no questions will be asked if the costume is returned.

The affair attracted Maryland celebrities, including former Gov. Marvin Mandel, former Baltimore Orioles star Brooks Robinson and a host of local television personalities and city officials.

Some Do Not Talk Enough

NEW YORK (UPI) — Women have always been accused of talking too much, but at least one group of women doesn't talk enough, says an expert in teaching speaking skills to managers.

"Fear of speaking in public and an aversion to technology are two important reasons that surprisingly few middle management women make it to senior management ranks," says Virgil Scudder. Scudder is president of MediaCom, a New York firm that has trained more than 5,000 executives.

"Studies show that women at all levels in business and the community tend to be more afraid of public speaking than men," Scudder says. "Particularly in critical areas such as job interviews and salary negotiations, many women tend to underplay their role."

Pros and Cons of Spas

My father and mother have for years gone to a spa in Europe. They are convinced that their yearly treatments are responsible for their good health. I am now 19 and they are beginning to put pressure on me to join them at the end of the year to get me revitalized.

It has become a matter of conflict. I don't believe in their value. My boyfriend, who is a medical student, doesn't either. It makes for a moderate amount of unpleasantness. How do you feel about this? — Miss. C.Y., N.J.
Dear Miss Y.:

I really wish I could give you an impartial, objective opinion about spas. I can't. For I had an experience which does not make me a great enthusiast for drinking mineral water or getting massages and mud packs with special "radioactive" mud.

In an effort to learn something more about spas, I once visited one in Italy. Because I was a physician, special consideration was given to me and I was invited to partake of all of their facilities. After a superficial medical examination, written instructions were given to me as to how and when and at what intervals to drink water No. 1, water No. 2, and water No. 3. I remember vividly that I couldn't stand the taste of each singly or when combined. This was made particularly difficult for me because the prescribed drinking episodes took place at 8 a.m. while a vigorous orchestra (honest) played a variety of European waltzes.

At any rate, I drank the water, took the baths and the mud packs. After four increasingly vigorous treatments I noticed a distinct and constant pain in my neck. I was assured this was my body's plea for more treatment. I took the next two treatments and then wore a neck collar for nine months. You can therefore understand that my enthusiasm for spas is at a minimum level.

Yet the dogmatic believers in spas will never be dissuaded by my opinion that there is no great scientific substantiation of "miracle cures" that are reported. Why then do I not actively condemn them? The reason is simple.

A change of climate, rest, spa activity, dietary regimes,

Stock And Market Reports

By The Associated Press

Following is a summary of market prices and conditions of N.C. farm products as reported by the Federal-State Market News Service of the N.C. Department of Agriculture.

Hogs: Steady to 50 higher at N.C. buying stations. Kinston 55.00 per hundred pounds; Clinton, Fayetteville, Dunn, Elizabethtown, Pink Hill, Pine Level, Chadbourne, Ayden, Laurinburg and Benson 56.00; Wilson 56.00; Salisbury 54.00; Rowland 54.00.

N.C. broilers: Market steady. Supply light to moderate. Demand good. N.C. dock weighted average price is 41.71 cents per pound this week for small purchases of plant grade broilers picked up at processing plants. Estimated slaughter Tuesday totaled 1,769,000 head and average live weight 4.07 pounds per bird on Oct. 15.

N.C. hens: Market 2 cents higher for heavy type hens. Supply light. Demand good. Prices paid per pound for hens over seven pounds at farm 18 cents.

New York broilerfryers: Trucklot buying interest is very light. Offerings are more available, particularly for late week, but are not yet forced. Distributive movement is at best fair and floor stocks are ample. The market tone is only steady with traders becoming increasingly nervous in the face of the upcoming final week of the month.

N.C. eggs: Market unchanged. N.C. weighted average price for small sales of consumer Grade A white eggs in cartons delivered to retail stores: large 74.42 cents per dozen; medium 65.19; small 51.25.

FARMVILLE - The Farmville tobacco market will end sales for the 1982 season Thursday.

Sales supervisor Georgia Willoughby said the volume of sales in Farmville Monday was heavy and demand remained relatively steady Tuesday, although prices on most grades were generally lower.

The market sold 807,736 pounds Monday for an average of $180.57 per hundred pounds. The market on Tuesday sold 743,477 pounds of tobacco for an average of $174.95 per hundred.

To date, the market has sold 28,497,852 pounds for an average of $182.76.

"We feel like it's been a good season in Farmville," Mrs. Willoughby said.

Citing the fact that "we had so much water" at the beginning of the harvest season, she said quality was less than expected. However, Mrs. Willoughby said, "Quality improved toward the end of the season."

Slow Quarter In GNP Data

WASHINGTON (AP) - The U.S. economy slowed in the just-finished third quarter of the year, inching ahead at a 0.8 percent annual rate compared with a 2.1 percent rate in the spring quarter, the government reported today.

Two quarters of growth in inflation-adjusted gross national product - the broadest measure of U.S. economic activity - normally would be accepted as marking an end to a national recession.

But the gains have been so small that few economists are willing to declare that genuine recovery is under way. Typical recessions in recent years have been followed by robust growth at annual rates of about 7 percent.

Real GNP, which had fallen at annual rates of 5.3 percent and 5.1 percent in the last quarter of 1981 and the first quarter of this year, rose to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $1.481 trillion in the July-September period, today's Commerce Department report said.

Before adjustment for inflation, GNP, a measure of all goods and services produced in the nation, rose 6.2 percent to an annual rate of $3.091 trillion.

Inflation, as measured by the broad-based GNP implicit price deflator, rose at an annual rate of 5.4 percent during the period, up a bit from the 4.6 percent rate in the second quarter, the report said.

In the third quarter, it said, inflation-adjusted final sales by U.S. business declined 0.6 percent compared with a decrease of 0.9 percent in the second quarter.

Business investment, net exports and state and local government purchases also declined. However, those decreases were outweighed slightly by gains in personal consumption spending, federal government purchases and residential construction.

Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan has forecast a pickup in real GNP to an annual rate of 3 percent to 4 percent in the current fourth quarter. However, most other economists, both inside and outside government, say another small gain is much more likely.

Commerce economists had estimated one month ago in their "flash" projection that the economy was growing at a skimpy 1.5 percent annual rate in the then-unfinished quarter.

That would mean two straight quarters of growth - since second-quarter real GNP was up at a rate of 2.1 percent - but economists remained unconvinced that genuine recovery had arrived.

Most still remain unconvinced.

Recently, a few more positive signs have shown up. For example, Commerce reported Tuesday that housing starts by the nation's builders rose 14.4 percent in September, hitting the second highest rate for the year.

Both private and government economists said falling interest rates meant a housing recovery probably would continue. And President Reagan quickly contended the figures showed that "the solid progress against the record inflation and interest rates we inherited is sparking a rebound in this bedrock industry."

In addition, retail sales rose 1 percent in September, wiping out a decline of the same amount in August.

On the other hand, big industry remains in sad shape. That was shown in Federal Reserve Board reports within the past week indicating that national industrial production as well as factory use both fell in September for the 12th time in 14 months.

And unemployment is at 10.1 percent, the highest since 1940.

Most economic forecasting firms are talking about still another small gain in real GNP in the current quarter. Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan has been forecasting growth at an annual rate of 3 percent to 4 percent, but no other mainstream economists see that much expansion.

Even that kind of growth would be only about half the rate experienced in typical recoveries from the seven previous recessions since World War II.

EATON'S UNITED WAY CONTRIBUTION ... The Pitt County United Way was presented a check for $44,416 by Eaton Corp. today. Craig Krupa, United Way committee chairman at Eaton, said 98 percent of the employees contributed to the campaign with an average gift of $94. The corporate gift was

St. Louis Cardinal runner Lonnie Smith dives for home plate as Milwaukee Brewer catcher Ted Simmons reaches to tag him in the third inning of Tuesday night's World Series game in St. Louis.

Stuper Super In 13-1 Card Win

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The preliminaries are over. Now, the St. Louis Cardinals and Milwaukee Brewers are ready for the main event.

The rollercoaster 1982 World Series, which has twisted more times than a belly dancer, is down to one decisive, final game with the world championship on the line.

The Cardinals forced tonight's seventh-game showdown with a marathon 13-1 rain-delayed victory Tuesday night in Game Six, a game during which temperatures plunged more than 20 degrees.

The Cardinals forced tonight's seventh-game showdown with a marathon 13-1 rain-delayed victory Tuesday night in Game Six, a game during which temperatures plunged more than 20 degrees.

Cardinal Manager Whitey Herzog said he had no hesitation about using the fiery Dominican right-hander, who was the best pitcher on the St. Louis staff for the season's final month.

"Joaquin gets the ball," said Herzog. "If I don't give him the ball, I'm sure I'd be one dead man."

Rookie John Stuper had the ball for Game Six and responded with a four-hitter. He was backed by a high-powered Cardinal attack that included home runs by Keith Hernandez, who drove in four runs, and Darrell Porter, who delivered two, and a Series record three extra base hits by designated hitter Dan Iorg.

Stuper thought the Cardinal hitters seemed awfully familiar.

"We looked like the Milwaukee Brewers," he said. St. Louis climbed all over Brewer starter Don Sutton, tagging him for seven runs and seven hits in 41-3 innings. Sutton left an instant before the first rain delay, a 26-minute teaser in the fifth inning. Then, in the sixth, a deluge hit Busch Stadium, halting play two hours, 13 minutes in the middle of a Cardinal rally that produced six runs and wrapped up a victory St. Louis had to have.

Stuper waited out both delays and came back without problems each time. He retired 15 consecutive batters over the middle innings and had a two-hit shutout until the ninth inning.

"Considering the circumstances and the importance of it, this is the best game of my life," said Stuper. Before he started, he had been a little concerned about the pitching pairing, a rookie going up against a 17-year veteran with 258 career victories.

"I said that the matchup of Sutton and Stuper seemed like a huge mismatch," he said. "But in the game of baseball, anything can happen."

And on Tuesday night, just about everything did. There were four errors by the Brewers, two apiece by second baseman Jim Gantner and shortstop Robin Yount, who carried a .524 batting average into the game but went 0-for-4. When Yount made his second error in the ninth inning, the remnants of the crowd of 53,723 hooted him, mimicking the MVP chants he has heard so frequently from Milwaukee fans.

This nightmare started early for Milwaukee with the Cards striking for a pair of unearned runs with two out in the second inning. Iorg doubled on a ball that glanced out of left fielder Ben Oglivie's glove. Willie McGee followed with a bouncer that went right through Yount's legs for an error and then Tommy Herr doubled, scoring McGee.

In the fourth, George Hendrick opened with a single and trotted home on Porter's homer, making it 4-0. Then Iorg tripled and buzzed home on a suicide squeeze bunt by Herr.

In the fifth, Lonnie Smith singled and Hernandez, who had snapped out of an 0-for-15 Series slump with three hits in Game Five, ripped his home run, making it 7-0. At that point, Sutton departed, a moment before the rains came, delaying the game for the first time.

"I just couldn't put the ball in the right spots," said Sutton, "and you can't get away with that with a good hitting club."

Asked about the home runs, the Brewer pitcher frowned. "They were not good pitches because good pitches aren't hit that far."

The rains let up and after a 26-minute mini-delay, play resumed. But in the sixth inning, the rain began in earnest.

Commissioner Bowie Kuhn said there was no thought to calling the game. No World Series game has ever been shortened by weather and the tradition wasn't about to be changed now.

"We knew we were going to play nine innings in fairness to everybody," said Herzog. Milwaukee Manager Harvey Kuenn wasn't about to surrender three innings worth of swings just because of a little rain.

"We weren't going to leave until the game was finished," said Kuenn. "The game is meant to be played over nine innings. That's the way it should be."

That was fine with the Cardinals. They had scored one more run before the big rain on Iorg's double, a wild pitch by Doc Medich and a single by McGee. Herr had followed with another hit and another wild pitch advanced the runners. When play resumed, David Green walked,

Conley's Gatlin Picks Terps In Surprise Move

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer
HOLLYWOOD — In somewhat of a surprise decision, D.H. Conley star point guard Keith Gatlin announced this morning he will attend the University of Maryland to play basketball.

Gatlin narrowed the list of the over 200 colleges and universities which had contacted him to three: Maryland, North Carolina State and Wake Forest, before deciding last week on Maryland.

The decision is not binding, however, until Gatlin signs with Maryland. High school players cannot sign a letter-of-intent until Nov. 10.

Gatlin, a 6-5, 160-pound senior at Conley, is considered the top high school prospect in the state. Gatlin averaged about 22 points, six rebounds and five assists a game last year.

"After much thought, meditation and consideration I have decided to further my education by accepting a scholarship to the University of Maryland," said Gatlin in announcing the decision.

"This is the hardest decision I've ever made in my life," Gatlin said, adding that playing in the Atlantic Coast Conference "has always been a dream."

Gatlin was widely rumored to be going to N.C. State and admitted he had been "leaning that way" until recently.

"Somebody had to get hurt (because of the choice)," he said. "When I went up there I got to know a lot of the players."

"I like the people and the area and I like the program," Gatlin added. "I felt more at home at Maryland. I like their style of basketball, the fast break."

Asked why he was making the decision so early, Gatlin said: "I was getting tired of it all (the recruiting). It started last year and it was getting kind of hectic."

The recruiting hit perhaps its highest point earlier this summer when Gatlin attended the Five-Star Basketball Camp and was named an all-star in each of the three weeks he was at the camp.

Gatlin also received the Best Playmaker Award and the Sportsmanship Award at the camp.

D.H. Conley coach Shelley Marsh, who will have the services of Gatlin for one final season, said of Gatlin:

"In overall ability, he's the best player I've ever had. For all phases of the game he's the best I've had."

"He went to Maryland and was really impressed with the chancellor and the people there. (Maryland coach) Lefty (Driesell) was real down to earth, like Keith said. He liked the things he said to him."

"And," Marsh added, "I think he also considered the exposure the program would offer him."

Among those at the announcement, which was made in one of the offices at D.H. Conley, were Gatlin's mother, Nora, and his father, Calvin. Mrs. Gatlin has helped screen and arrange for various coaches to see her son.

She said she has experienced none of the horror stories that are said to often accompany recruiting of star athletes.

"I'd like to thank everybody, all the schools that showed interest in Keith. Everybody was great. We met a lot of people who would have been unable to meet otherwise."

Then, she added: "Now we can get some rest."

Rose, Fike Meet In Thursday Night Contest In Ficklen Stadium

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Rose High School again falls victim to the fact that it has no playing field of its own this weekend, as it faces Wilson Fike on Thursday night at 8 p.m. in Ficklen Stadium.

The game, normally scheduled for Friday, had to be moved up since Ficklen owner East Carolina plays on Saturday afternoon, and has established a policy on having no Friday high school games on nights prior to home afternoon contests.

And while Rose High School accepts the situation, it does cut back on the amount of preparation the Rampants can get in prior to the game.

"It's really hard to get ready in three days," Coach Ronald Vincent said. "We're going to have to have a great deal of pride and drive to pull it out."

The difference, Vincent feels, is that Fike comes into the game following a victory, while the Rampants come in after a loss.

Rose fell to Kinston last Friday night, 21-9, in a game Vincent termed "a real heart-breaker."

Fike, meanwhile was downing Wilson Beddingfield, 28-19, a team Rose beat only 17-13 in the closing minutes a week earlier.

In other Big East games, Rocky Mount beat Wilson Hunt, 26-7, while Northern Nash crushed hapless Northeastern, 35-7.

The loss to Kinston, as well as being a tough one to accept, also effectively killed Rose's chances of a post-season bid. Rose would have to win its remaining three games, and hope for some outside help to still qualify for one of the two spots — either in Division I or Division II.

The key to the whole game Friday night was one play.

At the time, Rose was trailing 7-3, and had a second and goal from the two yard line. Despite trailing, Rose was taking control of the game at the time.

"We'd called a power off-tackle play, giving the ball to Donnell Lee," Vincent said. "Their tackle or linebacker, I don't remember which now, had moved out of position. The blocking was perfect — the hole was there."

The only problem was that quarterback Kenny Kirkland bobbled the ball coming out under center. Before he could regain control, he was hit and the ball rolled to the 14-yard line where a Kinston player scooped it up and dashed 84 yards for what proved to be the killing score.

It was a 14-point turnaround. Instead of leading 10-7, Rose was behind 14-3.

"It all came down to that one play," Vincent said. "It was like letting the air out of a balloon."

Vincent said the same type thing has happened to Rose before this season. "It just seems like when we get down there on the goal line, someone gets overanxious. It's a shame too, because (the players) have given the effort to win and played hard."

"We've just seemed to have a lot of adversity this year, and we can't seem to control it," he added.

Vincent said he was pleased with the play of the receivers in the game. "And I'm real pleased with the play of Roderick Harrell. Bill Johnson and Jay Mahoney had good games, too."

On defense, Vincent singled out linebacker Craig Dupree, and backs Tim Shank, Roswell Streeter and Randy Warren.

"It seems like we got the breaks last year, but not this year. Maybe it's just things evening up. I don't know. The bad thing about it is that in many ways we're a better team this year."

Fike's Golden Demons will present another problem for the Rampants. Fike has been playing well, bringing a 5-2 record into the game. The Demons are 3-1 in league play and also have a good shot at one of the two playoff spots this year.

"Fike is an extremely good team this year," Vincent said. "They are playing better right now than they have all year, improving week by week.

They have some very talented people."

Fike opened the season with a 14-7 loss to Goldsboro, then downed both Athens Drive (23-9) and Southern Nash (48-7). In conference play, Fike has beaten Northeastern, 14-6, Hunt, 7-0, and Beddingfield, while losing to Kinston, 14-7.

The Fike offense is led by tailback Izel Jenkins, who, along with Rose receiver Edward Frazier, is one of the reigning track champions of the east. Jenkins is one of the few people to have beaten Frazier on the track.

Jenkins also plays safety on defense.

"Their offensive line is very strong," Vincent pointed out. "They are primarily a running team. They don't throw much; about like Kinston. But when they throw they throw better than Kinston did."

Defensively, the Demons are a good deal stronger too. "They are more aggressive than they have been in the past. They don't play 'wait and see' now, they come at you."

"Fike is coming in with a whole lot on the line. They are still in contention for the title, so we're really going to have to work hard to be ready to play 'em."

Emory: Some Positive Things In Loss To FSU

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

"Going back to Florida State, and I really don't want to go back," Ed Emory summed up last Saturday night's 57-17 loss to the nationally ranked Seminoles at his press conference yesterday.

Emory praised FSU as deserving its national ranking and as one of the few teams that is able to do what most would like to do — take advantage of weaknesses.

"Florida State is a very good football team. Going down there we thought they were the best offensive team we've faced at East Carolina. They have been explosive against everyone they've played."

"But we thought we had a chance to win. We thought if we did it would be 34-33 or 33-32 or something like that. But they just have great ability."

Emory said that when you look at a team on film you can usually pick out some weakness. "But there are not many teams that can take advantage of that weakness. Florida State can. They isolated and exploited out linebackers and cornerbacks. They did it with motion and with their formations. They caught us in man-to-man when we went with it, and were able to exploit that."

Emory added that the Pirates were able to stop the Seminoles fairly well at their best ground-game weapon, the sweep. "But they did a good job of picking us to death. They threw the ball exceptionally well."

Emory said that the Pirates helped FSU by having four interceptions and losing two of four fumbles. "One of those interceptions was a good play; the other two were just poor judgement (on the part of quarterback Greg Stewart)."

"But our defense went two-for-two (the first two times) on what we call 'sudden change.' The third time, we had them fourth and 11, and that penalty (pass interference in the end zone) killed us. It really let the air out of us. And it was a bad call to boot."

Despite the fact that FSU rolled up over 700 yards, Emory did feel there were some bright spots on defense, namely the play of defensive end Jody Schulz and safety Clint Harris. "Our defensive ends played well, but our linebacker play was not good. Our defensive tackles played well, but we've lost (nose guard) Barry Smith for the rest of the year."

"In the secondary, Harris played well, but the others didn't do a real fine job."

On the other side of the ball, Emory feels that if the offense could have gotten cranked up a little earlier, it could have been different. "Losing the ball six times and still getting the yardage we did shows that we weren't intimidated. They (FSU) got everything they could get, but at the same time we got all that we could get too (17 points). Their 56 points was hard-earned because our kid didn't quit."

The coach said that while quarterback Stewart and Kevin Ingram continue to improve, that they still have a ways to go to win the big

UNC Defeats ECU Spikers

The loss leaves ECU at 19-11.

"We were beaten by a team better than us," ECU coach Lynn Davidson said. "They controlled the offense and did what they wanted to do."

"Even though our kids were ready for the match we were basically overpowered."

Davidson praised the play of Stacey Weitzel. "Stacey played here best defensive match I've ever seen here play," Davidson said.

ECU returns to action Friday when it travels to Appalachian State.

games. "We haven't had the kind of quarterback play it takes to win the big ones."

At the same time, he has praise for the running of backs Earnest Byner, who opened at tailback instead of fullback, along with Reggie Branch and Scott Lewis at the fullback slots. "The offensive line played well, too."

Emory pointed out that in his three years at East Carolina, the Pirates have lost 16 times. Of those losses, 13 of them came against teams with more prominent programs. "And I don't know of any person who could have taken the talent we came here with and won against these teams," Emory added.

"We're going to be a good football team in 1982. But you have to ask, does the time make the coach or does the coach make the times," he said in reference to East Carolina's much-tougher schedule as compared to that of earlier years. "I think we're on the right track, but we still have a long way to go."

Emory pointed out that FSU has a $4 million budget for football. "They spend $1 million a year on scholarships and $3 million to operate. They spend $400- to $500,000 a year on recruiting."

East Carolina, in contrast has a budget of approximately $2 million for its entire athletic program.

Emory said that he wasn't worried about what the press or the people thought about his team. "All I care about is what they think about themselves. A football program is built on pride, and I hope that we have the self-motivated people that can come back hard this week."

"The number one thing we have to do is eliminate missed assignments and make the proper adjustments," Emory said.

The Pirates will close out their home season on Saturday — seeking to have an unbeaten home record — as they face Illinois State at 2 p.m. in Ficklen Stadium.

Letter Asked For Tennessee Victory

By The Associated Press
It may not have had any effect on Tennessee's upset of Alabama, but then again, it may have. You never know what will fire up a football team.

It probably won't go down in history with Notre Dame's winning one for the Gipper, but Coach Johnny Majors thought enough of the letter to read it to his Tennessee team two days before the Alabama game. It was written by Elder Jack Green of Carthage, Tenn., pastor of the Hartsville Missionary Baptist Church, and it went like this:

"To Coach Johnny Majors and the Tennessee football team:

"I shall not begin this letter with the usual 'I know this probably won't get read by you but ...' because I have confidence that it will be read and heard. This letter is the fulfillment of a promise I made over a year ago, and though I have been slow in keeping it, I feel that now is the time to share it.

"I am the youngest of five brothers from a family that has made trips to Neyland Stadium in the fall a regular occurrence for over 30 years now. Tennessee football has never controlled our lives, but it has been a wonderful part of it. We are all big fans, but without question, and with unanimous agreement from all the family members, the biggest and most faithful fan of the bunch was my third brother, Johnny, who passed away in a car accident in March of 1981. This was the saddest thing that ever happened in our lives and, Coach Majors, I know that you know how it feels to lose a brother.

"I wish every one of you could have met Johnny. He was the ultimate optimist. For example, the Vols may have been crushed on a Saturday and the family would ride home sulking about the loss, and he would want to talk about how the Vols would win the next Saturday. In fact, no matter what kind of team Tennessee had, he always believed that they could, and would, win. Even in the worst of defeat, he never got depressed, and if he was able, he would be there the next Saturday.

"Johnny was only 5-foot-5 and 145 pounds (125 in high school), but he was a good athlete. He was a champion wrestler at Castle Heights Military Academy, one that started for four years and won over 80 percent of his matches.

He did play football and ran cross-country, but he excelled as a wrestler. No matter what sport he played, he always kept his head up and had an excellent competitive spirit.

"Don't worry, I am not going to say he was Mr. Perfect. As a brother, you learn to pick on your other brothers' faults quite easily. Johnny never was the smartest guy in the world, and he had a big nose. We would make fun of those things until we made him mad, and then we would have to watch it. That was really something about him; he was the most likable guy in our family, but one would be wise to have him on your side in a fight or a football game.

"Why? Well, as I said, Johnny was not all that intelligent, and if you told him to tackle a bulldozer, he would do it. He might get killed, but that bulldozer would know that it had been hit. To be so stinkin' small, he could knock the living daylight out of a person.

"But he is gone now, and all we have are memories. There is not a fall Saturday that goes by that I don't think about Johnny and what he would say about this game or that game. I miss him a lot, but I made a promise to him before they closed his casket and were to lower his body into the ground. With tears, I said goodbye, kissed him and told him, 'I'll tell Johnny (Coach Majors) to win one for you.'

"Gentlemen, I do not want this to be a George Gipp letter and try to get you up for the game. You should already be fired up. Yes, you are going up against a tough team, and I probably could not have picked a tougher game to ask you to win, but you can do it. God blessed every one of you with talent, not to hide it, but to use it. This team may be tough, they may have been praised by sports writers, coaches, players and fans, they may have the greatest coach of all time, but, by golly reason in the world to be afraid of them.

"You have the ability, not just to stay with them, but to beat them. I know; I've seen you play. You played a good game Saturday night (a 24-24 tie with LSU on Oct. 9), and you have the ability to do that every Saturday.

"I am not asking you to just win for my brother, but to win for yourselves. Some fans may get down on all of you, but they can't make a single block or tackle for you. Johnny would have loved to get out there and help you do it, and he never stopped cheering Tennessee on to victory. Yeah, you may be playing a bulldozer of a team, but there is gonna be a lot of dents in it before the afternoon of Saturday, Oct. 16, is over. I'm counting on you; my family is counting on you; Johnny, if he was here, would be counting on you. Now, count on yourselves."

Netters Roll Past Campbell

East Carolina lost two matches by default but otherwise had its way with Campbell as the Pirates beat the Camels, 7-2, in a men's college tennis match yesterday.

ECU, now 1-0, won the first four singles matches before Kevin Covington was forced to default with an injured ankle. Covington was leading at the time of his injury 7-6, 0-1.

Campbell's other win came in the final doubles match when Cole King hurt his ankle. East Carolina plays host to Richmond on Monday at 3 p.m.

Ted Lepper (EC) d. David Holland 6-2, 6-2.
Galen Treble (EC) d. Frankie DelConte 6-3, 6-0.
Cole King (EC) d. Steve Davis 5-7, 6-0, 6-1.

Vikings Top Rampants, 2-0

Kinston scored once in each half and gained a 2-0 soccer victory over Rose High School yesterday.

Trey Aikens scored from 15 yards out in the first half after 5:30 to put Kinston into the lead. But the Rose defense, led by David Jester, Jim Carter and Lewis Robbins, held Kinston scoreless the rest of the half.

In the second half, Kinston's Schwartz scored at the six minute mark from 20 yards out to finish up the scoring. "We missed a number of fine scoring opportunities during the first half," Coach Will Wiberg said. "Had we made it 1-1, I feel we may have captured the momentum. We played well, but Kinston capitalized on our mistakes."

Wiberg singled out the defensive play of Thomas Warburton and Gene West in the game.

Kinston had 18 shots on goal, while Rose had ten.

Kinston, which has won three straight now, is 6-4-0 and in second place in the Big East standings. Rose falls to 3-4-2 in its first season, and will play at Fike on Thursday.

Pirate Golfers In Third Place

BUIES CREEK — East Carolina's golfers are only two shots off the lead at the halfway point of the 36-hole Hargrove B. Davis Invitational Golf Tournament at Campbell University.

The Pirates Chris Czaja double bogeyed the 18th hole, costing the Pirates the lead in the event, as the University of North Carolina took first place after the opening round with a 362 total. Guilford is second at 363, followed by East Carolina at 364.

Guilford's Charles Bradshaw leads the individual field with a 68, while East Carolina's David Dooley is second with a 69. Joe Dobson of Coastal Carolina and Steve Harwell of Guilford are tied for third with 70's.

Dooley, who had his clubs stolen during the Duke tournament last week, is breaking in a new set of clubs and apparently is finding them to his liking.

Other ECU scores include Don Sweeting 71, Kelly Stimart 73, David Woodard 74 and Czaja 77.

Kinston Hands Rose 1st Loss

Kinston's girls' tennis team stunned Rose High School's previously unbeaten lassies yesterday with a 6-3 victory.

The Valkyries dominated the match, sweeping each of the singles in two sets except for the number six event, where Hayes Warren forced Ann Sabistan to go three sets. Otherwise, Rose never won more than four games in a set, and only twice won that many.

The defeat left Rose with a 12-1 record on the season. The Rampettes travel to Wilson Fike on Thursday.

Summary:

Greene Central 0

SNOW HILL — Greene Central closed out the 1982 girls tennis season yesterday again bowing to strong Charles B. Aycock, 9-0.

Aycock has now won 35 straight matches, allowing Greene Central only eight games during the afternoon.

The Lady Rams close out the year with a 3-9 overall mark and an 0-4 Eastern Carolina Conference record.

None of the Lady Rams qualified for the sectionals, and thus had completed the year's play.

Ayden-Grifton Moves To 12th On Poll

From Staff, Wire Reports
Ayden-Grifton, fresh off a narrow 7-6 victory over North Pitt, is tied for No. 12 in this week's Associated Press poll of the top high school football teams in North Carolina.

The Chargers, who are 7-0 overall and atop the Eastern Carolina Conference with a 4-0 record, were unranked last week. A-G has been ranked 16th earlier in the year.

The top three spots in Class 4A were unchanged from last week. East Forsyth retains the lead with 135 points and five first-place votes. Pine Forest trails by three points. Gastonia Ashbrook is in third, but with six first-place votes. Class 3A Statesville leads Burlington Williams by five points and two first-place votes. Crest replaces Kannapolis Brown, which had been ranked third for five weeks. Kannapolis, a 21-7 loser last week to Lexington, drops to eighth. Whiteville leads Randleman by 15 points in the Class 2A-1A poll. North Duplin switched places with Ashe Central for third.

Other Class 4A changes: Fayetteville Douglas Byrd dropped from No. 4 to No. 6; Rocky Mount falls from sixth to ninth; Jacksonville moved from seventh to fifth; Greensboro Page climbed one notch to No. 4; Asheville and Henderson Vance and North Mecklenburg moved up one spot and Class 3A Hayesville moves down five places to No. 10. Charlotte Catholic fall a spot. Bessemer City moved into eighth from 11th.

9. Rocky Mount 6-1-0
10. Fayetteville Douglas Byrd 6-1-0
11. Bessemer City 6-1-0
12. Charlotte Catholic 6-1-0
13. Henderson Vance 6-1-0

Hernandez: Timing Is Right

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Keith Hernandez says the time of the year may be accounting for the St. Louis Cardinals' sudden resurgence at home plate.

"The ball carries here until the middle of May, and then it doesn't carry again until after the middle of September," said Hernandez following an eruption by St. Louis again Tuesday night during the rain-delayed Game Six of the World Series.

"Humidity is what usually keeps the ball from carrying. This is a big ballpark, but we have enough power," said the Cards' first baseman. "We're 'gap' hitters. We hit the ball between outfielders and get doubles and triples instead of home runs."

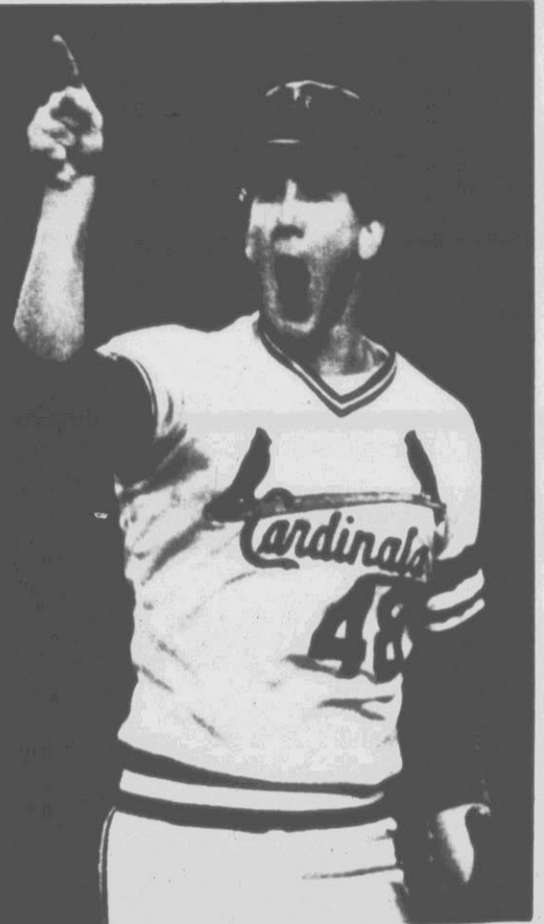

It was the second straight heavy-hitting performance for St. Louis, which beleaguered four Milwaukee Brewers pitchers for 12 hits in its 13-1 victory.

Six of the Cards' hits were for extra bases. And, thanks to two-run clouts by Darrell Porter and Hernandez in the fourth and fifth innings, the Cardinals scored a total of 13 runs.

"Both teams have shown that they can score a lot of runs. Both teams have shown that they can come from behind," he said. "The team that executes the best and doesn't make mistakes is going to win. It may come down to a little play."

Cards rookie outfielder Willie McGee predicted St. Louis' lopsided margin of victory Tuesday night would mean nothing in the final contest.

"It's going to be interesting. In baseball you never know, you just hope," McGee said. "Tomorrow night will be different. We'll have to forget about tonight."

Pointing One Out

St. Louis Cardinal pitcher John Stuper points out a popout to Cards' shortstop Ozzie Smith for the last out in the eighth inning of Tuesday night's 13-1 Cardinal win over the Milwaukee Brewers in the World Series in St. Louis. National League champions homered more than once for only the 10th time in 1982.

"It's been kind of hard to figure it," said St. Louis second baseman Tommy Herr in respect to a Series which now stands tied at three games apiece.

"There really hasn't been a set pattern to enable you to figure how things are going to go. We felt Game Five should have been ours. It's really unusual to get 15 hits and not get a win."

Herr ventured the opinion, however, that "the best team's going to win" tonight's seventh and final game.

"Both teams have shown that they can score a lot of runs. Both teams have shown that they can come from behind," he said. "The team that executes the best and doesn't make mistakes is going to win. It may come down to a little play."

Cards rookie outfielder Willie McGee predicted St. Louis' lopsided margin of victory Tuesday night would mean nothing in the final contest.

No Shortage Of Quality Basketballers In State

By LEE CREEK
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Despite the fact two of North Carolina's most highly-regarded prep stars moved out of state, there will no shortage of cage talent this season.

The two that left — 7-foot Chris Washburn of Hickory and 6-8 Tico Cooper of Charlotte Providence Day — would have had plenty of competition had they not gone traveling.

Washburn, a 240-pound Associated Press All-State choice last year, transferred to Fork Union Military Academy in Virginia. Cooper, a Brevard native, transferred to Butler, Pa., High School.

They were two of the better players this summer at the Prep Stars Camp, operated at Elon College by Southern Durham coach Larry Parrish, former North Carolina star Dennis Wuycik and former Duke star Dick DeVenzio.

Another outstanding player at the camp was 6-9 Danny Manning of Greensboro Page, a junior and son of former Carolina Cougar Ed Manning. Rated by many as the top underclassman in the state, he may be the best of them all.

"He could be point guard in the pros in about six years," said DeVenzio. "He has a very fine outside shot. He's just a tremendous prospect."

Brewers Like Their Situation

ST. LOUIS (AP) — To a man, the Milwaukee Brewers spoke bravely that they are exactly where they want to be — with their backs to the wall.

"If you can avoid this, I would recommend it," catcher Ted Simmons said early today. "But we have been through this before. Hopefully, we have learned how to pull it out under these circumstances."

The Brewers' 13-1 loss to the St. Louis Cardinals in a rain-delayed game that ended early this morning, squared the 1982 World Series at three games apiece, setting up a decisive seventh game tonight.

The Brewers' 13-1 loss to the St. Louis Cardinals in a rain-delayed game that ended early this morning, squared the 1982 World Series at three games apiece, setting up a decisive seventh game tonight.

"But it is only one game. We have been through this before, and we know what we have to do to pull it through," he said.

The Brewers blew a four-game lead in the standings before they clinched the American League's East Division title in the last game of the regular season.

Then they lost the first two games of the league playoffs to California before winning the next three for the pennant.

"What we are doing probably isn't pretty. I wish there were an easier way to do this. But maybe it was meant to be this way," said third baseman Paul Molitor.

"We have come from behind all year, with our backs to the wall, and now we have to do it again," Molitor said. "Maybe we are running out of time. Maybe there is only a given number of times we can do this."

"But we are here," he continued, "and I guess we are going to find out what kind of character this team is made of."

The Brewers led with an ace pitcher Tuesday, Don Sutton. He had thrown the division-clinching victory against Baltimore and then beat California after the Brewers trailed the Angels by two games.

Sutton, 37, ran out of magic against the Cardinals. They rocked him with home runs by Keith Hernandez and former Brewer catcher Darrell Porter.

Sutton said he did not have the same quality slider that he used against the Angels.

"I thought I made some good pitches, but my location was not very good," Sutton said. "The slider I had in Milwaukee that day was the best I had all year. I didn't have the same kind of slider, but I thought I had good enough stuff to win if I had made my location better."

"I made some good pitches, but you have to give them credit," he said. "They hit some good pitches where I didn't want to pitch them."

Sutton said he could not second-guess the homer pitches he threw.

He said both were in the direction he had intended, but that he got them too high.

"If I could have had good location, I don't think any of that would have happened," he said. "They really weren't bad pitches. But they hit what I gave them."

"There is nothing you can say about them," pitching coach Pat Dobson said. "He had all the pitches, and he had good command most the night."

"There were just a couple of pitches that got away from him," Dobson said, "and that seemed to give them whatever it was that they needed."

SPORT LINE

To The Editor
In their three road games, the Pirates have played before 50,000 plus. Now that's pretty good for a no name school. But, I haven't seen support for ECU at home over 20,000 in some time. Why? Is it because the school is in the shadow of the ACC. No, it's because you don't care enough to show your concern.

Some say, "Give us a big name team to play ECU at home and I'll go." Wrong! Miami, Florida came to Greenville to play, but only that once. No support, no home to home games.

Where has all the support gone? To the ACC, I hope not. No, I believe people are staying home, no long supporting the Pirates because "they don't belong in Division IA" or "If they would win, I would go." Support is needed to help the Pirates win.

I'm tired of hearing things like "Florida State on vacation," and "East who?" I believe that they're going to regret those words in the near future.

Those young people who play for ECU need someone to pull for them. Most of their parents can't come see them play. So area support is the next best thing.

Also we shouldn't be upset with ECU's win-lose record or Emory shouldn't be compared to Dye because there is a big difference from Southern Conference teams to the big guns we now play.

I've heard that next year's schedule is tougher than the last three. So with big time football here and with the support that only you can give, East Carolina will become nationally known. Also it will give the fans those home to home games we want.

Please support the Pirates this Saturday.

Millions Lost During Football Strike

By The Associated Press
The month-old National Football League players strike has cut a multi-million dollar swath through professional football and its environs, bringing a financial squeeze that touches everyone from superstar quarterbacks to charity organizations.

Few people or businesses, even those on the periphery of football, are immune.

Cities, counties and various public authorities that count on tax money or a piece of the ticket action from professional football have lost, by most estimates, somewhere between $6 million and $7 million. Hardest hit is the city of Pontiac, Mich., which has been forced to freeze hiring, promotions and pay raises because it hasn't received the $825,000 it expected from three Detroit Lions home games.

Restaurants, bars, hotels and motels in NFL cities, which anticipate a large increase in business on game Sundays as well as bars all over the country where a television crowd swells business markedly on Sundays and Monday nights. The amount lost is almost impossible to calculate — hotels and motels in Green Bay, Wis., for example, do $1.3 million in weekend business when the Packers are home.

The players themselves, many of whom have returned to off-season jobs. The teams, which are losing somewhere between $500,000 and $900,000 in ticket revenues for each game lost and another $250,000 or so in television revenue. And the officials, who make from $450 to $1,100 a game.

The ancillary services, including the folks who make T-shirts, mugs, toy helmets, pennants and the like. One such firm, the Rudy Gomez Co. of Dallas, says business is down 25 to 30 percent since the strike began.

Vendors, parking attendants and ticket-takers, most of them part-timers, have been laid off. Concessionaires are big losers — officials in Cleveland estimate they're out $385,000 for the two home games lost. In Detroit, charities get a slice of the concession money — such as Leader Dogs for the Blind, which estimates it gets $30,000 a year from sales in the Pontiac Silverdome.

Some in the world of pro football are hurting less than others. Television, both network and local, has lost little by juggling schedules and shifting advertisers around. Some advertisers, who pay upward of $125,000 for 30 seconds of football action, have opted for prime-time programs with similar ratings; others have decided to pay less for substitute Sunday sports programming in the $35,000-$40,000 per half-minute range.

Advertising money is pretty much in a state of flux," says James Kelly, vice president of Blair Advertising, which sells time for stations around the country. "I really don't think there's been that much lost at this point.

"But if they cancel the season, there will be some serious economic losses. There's no way a network can make up for losing the Super Bowl. That's 17 minutes at $475,000 for 30 seconds."

The economics of the situation are tricky. Some local takes are based on sliding percentages, some in anticipation of a full house. Some cities get a piece of the parking and the concessions. And figuring the amount of money lost by bars, restaurants and hotels is difficult. The best estimate, gleaned from an Associated Press survey of all NFL cities, is that nearly $7 million in public funds has already been lost along with millions more in ancillary revenue.

Others suggest that the unemployment caused by the strike might contribute to long-term economic problems. But the vendors, are part-timers: college students, retirees, policemen or teachers supplementing their incomes. In many cases, the jobs are only eight Sundays a year.

"To put a number on what the strike is costing or would cost the city would be guesswork," says Dan McGowan, chief administrative analyst for Los Angeles. But he adds: "There's no way that we can have major events like football games not happening and not lose money."

New York City Controller Harrison J. Goldin is more willing to go out on a limb. He estimates that the strike has cost the city $450,000 so far and that if the season is called off, the total loss might be as high as $8 million. And his estimates don't take in the Giants, whose stadium is only eight miles west of Manhattan in the New Jersey Meadowlands and whose fans often return to the city after a game.

Goldin's estimate is based on $1 million in taxes, rentals at Shea Stadium, parking, and transit fares from people taking subways and buses to Jet games. But financial analysts point out that people not taking public transit to go to a football game might very well take it elsewhere.

The same goes for hotel rooms. A hotel two blocks from the New Orleans Superdome had 300 reservations for people coming in from Denver for the Saints' game with the Broncos. "They almost all showed up," says General Manager Richard W. Benson. "And they had an excellent time."

Not so the drain from the cancellation of a Monday night game — San Francisco at Tampa Bay. The Bay Harbor Inn lost 175 room reservations — 100 from the 49ers and 75 from the ABC television crew. Eastern Airlines estimated that it lost $50,000 in fares and the Tampa Sports Authority estimated that it lost $140,000 in various fees.

Officials in Green Bay, which draws many fans from surrounding areas, estimate that $1.3 million is spent on a game weekend. "The motel rooms were virtually empty for the game that was supposed to be played this past weekend," says Jim Van Matre, director of tourism for the city's Visitors and Convention Bureau. "The loss was substantial. You could see it just driving around the city."

But Harry Maier, business editor of the Green Bay Press-Gazette, suggests that many people who might stay away on a football weekend come into town when it's not overrun by hordes of fans. He suggests that the loss might be more like $400,000 to $500,000 per game weekend.

For the players, the losses are more tangible. Quarterbacks and other stars are losing huge amounts — as much as $30,000 to $35,000 per game for some. But they often find ways of making money back — Green Bay's James Lofton, the team's player representative, earned $23,000 Monday night in winning ABC's NFL Superstars Competition.

For the average player, the amount lost is less, but the insecurity is probably greater. Ray Oldham, a Detroit safety, has homes both in Tennessee and in the Detroit area and is living off savings. "I'm caught not knowing whether to go home," he says. "I'm probably paying more bills than most guys. I have a mortgage at home, a water bill, a phone bill, electric bill, the taxes and the insurance on both places, they all add up."

Others are making public appearances for which they get paid. Some, like Giant punter Dave Jennings are taking jobs in restaurants primarily as publicity stunts. In Green Bay, a singing group called the Pack Men — wide receiver John Jefferson, defensive end Ezra Johnson, running backs Gerry Ellis and Harlan Huckleby — is making some side money.

But for the younger players, there's considerable insecurity. To add to it, they might ponder the prediction of George Young, general manager of the New York Giants, that a quarter of the strikers may be out of jobs next year.

Young suggests that younger players won't be able to make up for the experience they might have gained during a strike, particularly with the 1983 draft expected to be outstanding. And he says marginal veterans may also have problems sticking. "I feel sorry for them," he says. "It's a sad situation."

Being In A Corner No New Brewer Experience

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Now, in this corner, wearing blue and gold, are the Milwaukee Brewers.

You've seen them here before. Against Baltimore on the last day of the season. Against California, down 2-0, one loss short of going home.

They always seem to win when it counts.

And, in this corner, wearing red and white, are the St. Louis Cardinals.

They might not be as familiar because they seem to do things easier, like the way they won the sixth game on Tuesday night. A rainy laugher, 13-1.

The Cards won the division title a week before the season ended. The Brewers on the final day.

The Cards won the pennant with three straight wins. The Brewers took five games.

Now, for the seventh time in two weeks, these two teams meet. But this time, it's all on the line. It's the seventh game of the World Series and nothing could be finer.

World Series history is filled with memorable seventh games, and this one has all the ingredients of a good one.

In 1957, Milwaukee, then of the National League, got three wins from Lew Burdette, including Game Seven when he pitched with two days rest because Warren Spahn had the flu.

In 1960, the New York Yankees were the big hitters, the Pittsburgh Pirates, the scrappers.

The Yankees shattered records and beat the Pirates by scores of 16-3, 10-0 and 12-0. But the Pirates won in the bottom of the ninth of the seventh game when Bill Mazeroski hit that dramatic home run.

In 1967, St. Louis and Boston played a seventh game. Bob Gibson, making his third start, tossed a three-hitter and hit a home run. The Cards won 7-2.

In 1968, Mickey Lolich of Detroit beat St. Louis for the third time in the seventh game, and who can forget Al Kaline, in his 16th season, finally having a dream come true just playing in the World Series?

In 1971, Roberto Clemente and Steve Blass were the heroes. Blass pitched the seventh game, tossed a four-hitter, and Pittsburgh beat Baltimore. Clemente's talents finally got the publicity they deserved. He hit safely in each game, got two home runs and batted 4-14.

In 1979, it was Baltimore and Pittsburgh again. The Pirates trailed the Series 1-3, but came back to win behind Willie Stargell, who destroyed the Orioles with three home runs, including a two-run shot in the seventh game.

Now it is St. Louis and Milwaukee, two teams who are frequent clones of each other.

The Cards aren't supposed to be big hitters, but they crushed the Brewers 13-1, and had two homers, to send the Series to a seventh game.

The Brewers are sluggers, the power hitters who win with

Three-Wheelers Pursue Aliens

GORDON'S WELL, Calif. (AP) - The man scooting across the sand on an overgrown, motorized tricycle is not a weekend thrill seeker but a U.S. Border Patrol agent looking for illegal aliens.
 Agent Luis Chavarria, 25, says the patrol recently exchanged four-wheel vehicles for desert motorcycles so agents can hop over dunes at 30 mph chasing aliens who are kept in sight by a Border Patrol airplane.
 The bikes are in use at a busy U.S. entry point - a five-mile stretch of rolling dunes between Interstate 8 and the nearest highway in Mexico. Some people try to walk 50 miles across the desert to Niland, while others attempt a 100-mile journey north to Indio, he said.

SCUBA Safety In Numbers

The scuba diver lives by numbers. Knowledge of depth, pressure, time, weight are numerical necessities to those who breathe an artificial atmosphere underwater.
 In an emergency, 919-684-8111 will reach DAN, the Diving Accident Network hotline. A physician trained in hyperbaric medicine is standing by, ready to offer advice in the treatment of diving accidents and help set in motion emergency services. 919-684-8111. It's a number worth memorizing.

A public service message from the U.S. Department of Commerce, National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

A Cleopatra Inside Each Belly Dancer

By PATRICK CONNOLLY
Associated Press Writer
SEATTLE (AP) — They twirl in the living room and kick in the kitchen. They are housewives, insurance agents, truck dispatchers and civil servants with a little Cleopatra inside them, yearning to be free.

They are belly dancers. "In America today, it's all jeans and T-shirts, but that doesn't do anything for the peacock in everybody," says Helen Noreen Mehan, a Denton, Texas, "oriental dance artist."

She recently attended a belly dance convention in Seattle called "Fantasia" with about 200 women from as far away as Alaska and Colombia, South America. They came to step out, dress up and talk shop.

They danced with veils and balanced swords and baskets on their heads. They used exotic names like "Delilah" and "Jareeda."

They shopped and they swapped business cards and broadsheets. "Bellydancers ... Bellygrammatics ... notary services," read one.

Ms. Mehan danced "urban Cairo" style, popular in nightclubs and cabarets. On the side, she sold shimmer lotions, arm and leg glitter, facial rhinestones and false eyelashes.

"This isn't dress-for-success-at-the-office makeup," she said, adjusting her veil. "I try to have things you can't get at the drugstore, like this purple fingernail polish."

"I make dancers look expensive and elegant. They get treated right when they perform. They don't look like cheap hookers."

She started practicing belly dancing pose seven years ago, she said, by balancing a soup can on her head when she walked to the store. Now she balances a heavy brass candelabra, with candles ablaze.

Denton — a town more accustomed to mechanical bull bars than casbahs — is accustomed to Ms. Mehan by now.

Sharel Dover set up shop at the convention with headscarves, makeup kits and tassels. "Tassels cheaper by the dozen. Put 'em on your hip and give 'em a flick. Happy twirling," she told customers.

Thirty-six-year-old Kathleen "Katiya" Gamble of Juneau, Alaska, who dispatches long-haul trucks up and down the West Coast, said: "I do a man's job all day. It's nice to be a woman by night."

"This kind of dance is what it's all about to be a woman, about being strong and being free."

Jo "Jaleila" Siangco, a 38-year-old personnel analyst for the state of Alaska in Juneau, shook her necklance. Her flowing black and orange skirt followed with a ripple. "My normal wear is business suits. I dance because I get a kick out of being somebody I'm normally not," she said.

Diane "Zanuba" Rorvick, a Seattle insurance company policy analyst who wore a snap-on nose ring, said she loved to dress up.

Su "Hamadryad" Hendrix of Juneau agreed: "Yes, it's a chance to dress up ... I've also got a bad back and it's cheaper than a chiropractor."

Maria "Marja" Bellows, a 46-year-old grandmother who teaches English at the Instituto de Meyer in Bogota, Colombia, said the belly dance confab was worth the flight to Seattle.

"I'm the only belly dancer in Bogota, and sometimes I get lonesome for my belly dancer sisters," she said.

Togged in shimmering red skirt and gold coins, Julie "Kalish" Paige, a 60-year-old Seattle housewife with five children and three grandchildren, said she lacks the discipline to do routine exercises for 10 minutes a day.

But time flies when she belly dances for an hour. "When I'm through, I feel really hepped up, peppy and ready to go," she said.

Ralph Mosley, 53, of Seattle, who with his wife, Mary, publishes a belly dance periodical called, "Fantasia," organized the convention. He said there were 1.2 million belly dancers in the United States and Canada.

Hold Closed Door Hearings In Israel On Massacre

By ARTHUR MAX
Associated Press Writer

JERUSALEM (AP) — Yitzhak Hofi, former head of the Mossad intelligence agency, appeared before a judicial panel today as the first witness in closed-door hearings on Israel's conduct during the Beirut massacre last month.

The outcome of the probe could affect the future of Prime Minister Menachem Begin's government.

Two army officers, whose names were not released, were to testify after Hofi — a reserve major general who headed the Mossad for eight years but retired four days before the massacre began Sept. 16.

The hearing took place behind closed doors in a building on the Hebrew University campus in west Jerusalem. Security guards kept reporters at bay.

The panel was expected to decide next week whether to open future hearings to the public.

Defense Minister Ariel Sharon, under sharp attack for allowing Christian militiamen to enter the Sabra and Chatilla Palestinian refugee camps in west Beirut, will testify early next week, said a spokesman for the inquiry commission. The army chief of staff, Lt. Gen. Raphael Eytan, also is to testify next week.

The spokesman said the commission could take three months to issue its report.

Members of the panel and their investigators have refused to talk with reporters, and the only information on the probe comes from terse official communiques issued by a spokesman.

On Tuesday, the panel finished the process of collecting documents and visiting former Israeli army positions overlooking the two refugee camps where Sept. 16-18.

At least 3,000 people died in a killing rampage Sept. 16-18. At least 340 Palestinian refugees, including old men, women and children, were killed, according to figures from the International Red Cross.

Officials and political observers agree that a report critical of Begin and Sharon's conduct during the killings could topple the government coalition, which already has shown signs of internal divisions over the massacre.

Begin reluctantly agreed to a full-scale inquiry three weeks ago under pressure from the opposition. The killings, and the presence of the Israeli army outside the camps, also sparked an international public outcry.

The government appointed Yitzhak Kahan, president of the Supreme Court, to form the investigating panel.

Kahan, whose rulings from the bench rarely defy government policy, decided to chair the panel himself. He named Yona Efrat, a former distinguished military officer who now is a businessman, and Supreme Court Justice Aharon Barak as the two other members of the commission.

Barak gained international attention in 1977, when as attorney general he forced the resignation of then-Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin over an illegal bank account. Barak also was a key negotiator at the Camp David peace talks with Egypt in 1978.

The government has given the commission full powers to investigate not only the military aspects but also the political implications of the killings. This means the panel will be empowered to rule whether Begin and Sharon were responsible, even if they were not fully informed of events as they unfolded.

Much of the controversy centers on when the Israelis learned of the massacre and what they did to stop it.

Begin has denied any responsibility for the massacre. But critics say the government could have prevented the killing of Palestinian refugees by not allowing the Christian militiamen enter the Israeli-encircled camps in the first place.

Sharon has said the army allowed the right-wing militiamen into the camps to sweep out Palestine Liberation Organization guerrillas believed hiding there. He said Israel never dreamed there would be a slaughter.

Israeli troops invaded Lebanon June 6 to crush the PLO, saying Palestinian guerrillas were using their bases in Lebanon to stage attacks on Jewish settlements in northern Israel.

People Of Northern Ireland Are Voting Today On New Assembly

By ED BLANCHE
Associated Press Writer

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — With more than 25,000 soldiers and police standing guard against renewed violence, the people of Northern Ireland voted today for a new provincial assembly that Britain hopes will bring Protestants and Roman Catholics together.

Despite Britain's high hopes, however, the election is not expected to produce a blueprint for peace after 13 years of fighting between Northern Ireland's estimated 1 million Protestants and the 500,000-strong Roman Catholic minority.

A steady trickle of voters was seen at polling places around Belfast early today as residents cast their ballots on their way to work on a windy, chilly morning.

"Things are quiet for now," a police spokesman said.

Political observers predicted that only half of the province's 1 million eligible voters would turn out. Most Protestants reject the idea of an assembly that would force them to share power with the Catholics, and many Catholic leaders oppose the assembly plan because it does not end British rule.

The first official results of the balloting for the 78-member assembly were not expected to be announced until Thursday.

On Tuesday, a bomb exploded outside the headquarters of the main Protestant party, the Official Unionists who are fielding 42 candidates in the election. There were no injuries in the blast, which was claimed by the Marxist Irish National Liberation Army, an offshoot of the Roman Catholic-dominated Provisional Irish Republican Army.

But the Royal Ulster Constabulary claimed the two groups "intend to step up their campaign of death and destruction" to disrupt the voting, and 25,000 police reservists and British troops were called out to guard polling stations and candidates.

It was the biggest security operation since the 1981 riots triggered by the death of 10 convicted guerrillas on a hunger strike in Belfast's Maze prison.

After 10 years of direct rule by the London government, Britain has promised to hand over limited social and economic powers to the new assembly — if 70 percent of its members approve. The provision is designed to avert any possibility of Protestant control of the assembly.

It is Britain's first major political initiative in the province since the last power-sharing attempt six years ago. Britain suspended the Protestant-controlled Parliament in 1972.

The province has gone to the polls nine times since 1973, but all elections failed to produce a compromise to end the bloodshed.

A British Broadcasting

Corp. opinion poll last week indicated that moderate parties were likely to make gains in the election.

But such polls have proved notoriously inaccurate in the past, and most political observers agreed that Ulster was expected to vote along traditional sectarian lines. Religion has determined political loyalties in Ireland since the 16th century.

A total of 184 candidates from 17 parties and a handful of independents campaigned for assembly seats. Candidates included 42 Official Unionists, 35 from the militant Protestant leader Ian Paisley's Democratic Unionist Party and 12 from Sinn Fein, the political arm of the outlawed Provisional IRA.

On the Catholic side, the Social Democratic and Labor Party and Sinn Fein, have said they will not take their assembly seats as a way to protest Britain's policies.

The main Protestant factions, the Official Unionists and Paisley's Democratic Unionists have said they will take their seats, but both parties are deeply divided over what they want the assembly to achieve.

Reflecting the feelings of politicians and voters alike, Official Unionist Party leader James Molyneux has described the assembly as an "unworkable" idea.

"Let's face it, the assembly isn't going to work," said Cornelius O'Shea, a Catholic tobaccoist in west Belfast. "If there aren't going to be any Catholics in it, it becomes a futile exercise and all we're left with is a vote for the gun."

Protestant shipyard worker James MacDonald said: "We can't have majority rule, so what's the point? All the election is going to do is prove what we already know — no one has a solution that will please everybody."

The outlawed Provisional IRA is fighting to drive the British from Northern Ireland. It wants to reunite the province with the overwhelmingly Catholic Irish Republic to the south after 60 years of partition.

PELICANS MUTILATED — Dr. Heather Miller, a psychopathologist, says "a Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde personality is chopping beaks off pelicans". At least ten of the mutilated birds have been seen in the harbor at Dana Point, Calif. Two of the birds have been rescued and have to be hand fed; the others will starve to death. Ralph Young, information officer for the Department of Fish and Game, says "If prosecuted under federal law, whoever is doing this to the endangered species of brown pelican could be fined $20,000 on each count." NBC Wins Nielsens Through World Series

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Propelled by baseball's World Series, NBC won its first weekly victory in the networks' prime-time ratings race in more than a year, according to figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co.

The "fall classic," which pitted the Milwaukee Brewers against the St. Louis Cardinals, boosted NBC to first in the network standings for the week ended Oct. 17, as the sports event took the first four places in the ratings Top 10.

NBC was three full ratings points ahead of CBS, the usual frontrunner.

One casualty of NBC's baseball triumph was CBS' "60 Minutes," which regularly ranks high in the ratings. It was shoved to No. 35 by the Sunday game, which finished No. 1.

ABC's "Ripley's Believe It Or Not," also up against Sunday's game, finished in 66th place — dead last.

NBC won the week with a rating of 20.4, Nielsen said. CBS was second with 17.3 and ABC was third with 15.6. The networks say this means in an average prime-time minute, 20.4 percent of the nation's homes with television were tuned to NBC.

NBC's last victory came in the week ended Sept. 13, 1981, when the network finished first with the Miss America Pageant.

The only sour note for NBC was that its highest-rated regular show was "CHiPs" in a tie for 20th place.

Some of the shows NBC had counted on to lift it from the ratings cellar finished far behind. "Fame" was No. 60, "Taxi" was 61st, "Cheers" was 63rd, and "The Devlin Connection" was 64th.

The No. 1 show of the week was Sunday's fifth game. ABC, however, did not count Sunday's game because it began in the afternoon and spilled over into prime-time. Both CBS and NBC counted Game No. 5, however, because more than half of it was played in prime time in the East.

The networks receive identical data from the Nielsen Co., but may interpret as they chose. The networks rarely differ in their listings of the shows, and conflicts usually occur only under a circumstance such as the one involving a game that runs into prime time.

The only World Series game last week that failed to make the Top 10 was Saturday's game, an afternoon contest. The NBC pre-game shows Tuesday and Wednesday finished in the second highest 10 shows.

The highest-rated show after the four World Series games was "The Country Music Awards" on CBS. The most popular series of the week was CBS' "Magnum, P.I.," starring Tom Selleck as a Hawaiian private detective, which was sixth.

Here are the 10 highest-rated shows:

World Series Game No. 5, a rating of 32.8 or 27.3 million households, NBC; World Series Game No. 2, 29.1 or 24.2 million, NBC; World Series Game No. 1, 27.9 or 23.2 million, NBC; World Series Game No. 3, 25.0 or 20.8 million, NBC; "The Country Music Awards," 24.4 or 20.3 million, CBS;

"Magnum, P.I.," 23.7 or 19.7 million, CBS; "M-A-S-H.," 22.4 or 18.6 million, CBS; "Three's Company," 21.7 or 18.0 million, ABC; "The Jeffersons," 21.3 or 17.7 million, CBS; "One Day at a Time," 21.0 or 17.4 million, CBS.

The remainder of the Top 20:

"Trapper John, M.D.," and "Dallas," tied, both CBS; "Simon & Simon," CBS; "Too Close for Comfort," ABC; World Series Pre-Game Show No. 2, NBC; "9-to-5," ABC; "Archie Bunker's Place" and Gloria," tied, both CBS; World Series Pre-Game Show No. 1, NBC; "CHiPs," NBC, and "Laverne & Shirley," ABC, tied.

'Twilight Zone' Signs Quinlan

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Kathleen Quinlan signed with producers Steven Spielberg and John Landis to star in one of the four episodes of the movie "The Twilight Zone" in which actor Vic Morrow and two child stars were killed earlier this year.

Quinlan is best remembered for her screen roles in "I Never Promised You a Rose Garden," "The Runner Stumbles," "The Promise" and "Sunday Lovers."

38 SPECIAL TO PERFORM SUNDAY — The rock group, 38 Special, a six-piece group from Jacksonville, Fla., will perform in Minges Coliseum at 8 p.m. Sunday. Tickets for the concert are available from the Central Ticket Office, Mendenhall Student Center. The group's album, "Wild-Eyed Southern Boys," sold 1.2 million copies in 1981. They have just released a new album, "Special Forces," and a single, "Caught Up In You."

Blatant 'Beefcake' Is Mark Of TV Season

By FRED ROTHENBERG AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The most blatant theme of new shows in the month-old television season is Stud Power. The top stars all seem to be male hunks.

Last Sunday, swarthy Erik Estrada posed in his skivvies as a male model on "CHiPs," then postured in his bikini briefs as a boxer in the movie "Honeyboy."

It didn't take long for the new country cousins from the "Dukes of Hazzard" to show off their physiques. In the first episode, right after their car leaped across the screen, Coy and Vance Duke had their first public inspection. They took off their shirts to chop wood.

This bulging beefcake is designed to appeal to young audiences, whose major requirement is that the star smile a lot and look pretty. Byron Cherry (Coy Duke) had never acted before. Peter Barton of "The Powers of Matthew Star" was a model.

Publicity shots of Jon-Erik Hexxum in "Voyagers" feature his bare chest. David Hasselhoff, upstaged by his computer car in "Knight Rider," was soap opera heartthrob Snapper Foster for six years.

Older audiences, looking for a little sophistication with their handsome hunks, can also find it in the new programs. These stars can be merry men, capable of poking themselves and others. The art of self-deprecation, mastered by Tom Selleck, is now practiced by Lee Horsley of "Matt Houston," Bruce Boxleitner of "Bring 'em Back Alive" and Robert Ulrich of "Gavilan."

One NBC promo for the yet-unveiled "Gavilan" shows him punching out a culprit, then wringing his hand at the pain of it all.

"Women love Tom Selleck, but he's also a man's man," says Al Onorato, a casting director. "Men don't feel threatened by him."

Television, if anything, is not a three-dimensional medium.

If you're a man, you should be tall, dark and handsome, like Selleck, or Jack Scalia, who was a high-priced fashion model before "The Devil Connection."

One irony is that the new shows projected as the biggest hits are "Newhart" and "Gloria." Bob Newhart and Sally Struthers don't come from the sex-symbol stamp.

"Hollywood didn't know what to do with Sally," says Onorato. "She doesn't have sex appeal. She's bizarre and kooky."

Miss Struthers is one of the few female leads in the new programs. Part of this relates to the networks, their consciousness raised a bit by feminism, pulling back on packaging female beauties who couldn't look good and act well at the same time.

But it's also the realization that women are controlling the commercial dial more than ever. Advertisers have always coveted women viewer-consumers. And, with cable television's sports and movies attracting male viewers, NBC, CBS and ABC are in danger of programming for ladies only.

This is the season they practice.

Plan Re-Release Of 'Oklahoma'

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — "Oklahoma!" the Academy Award-winning musical, will be re-released by the Samuel Goldwyn Co. in its original 70mm road show version next month.

The film, based on the Rogers and Hammerstein Broadway record-breaker, stars Gordon MacRae, Shirley Jones, Gloria Grahame and Gene Nelson and was directed by Fred Zinnemann. "Oklahoma!" was first released as a motion picture in 1955.

Dolly Back To Work Nov. 19

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Dolly Parton, who underwent surgery last month, will return to work with two engagements at Resorts International in Atlantic City Nov. 19-21 and Nov. 26-28.

The singer-actress was stricken in Indianapolis Aug. 22 during her first concert tour in three years after completing starring roles in the movies "Nine to Five" and "Best Little Whorehouse in Texas."

Miss Parton underwent gynecological surgery on Labor Day and currently is recuperating at home in Nashville, Tenn., with her husband, Carl Dean.

CRYPTOQUIP 10-20

OATWKBV XGWW EGWWVW; EGWWAKTGJV
BGT OLAWJXVW, OAWLVW

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — BARBER PROMISES CUSTOMERS CUT-RATE PRICES.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: W equals S.

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

The bidding:
South West North East
Pass Pass 1♦ 3♣
Pass Pass Dble Pass
4♥ Pass Pass Pass
Opening lead: Eight of ♠.

Preemptive bidding can deflect the opponents from reaching their best contract. But when it fails to do so, that tactic can paint a picture of the hand that allows declarer to make a contract that would normally go down!

Looking at the North-South hands, you would want to play this hand in four hearts. Given normal distribution, your expectation would be to lose two heart tricks and a spade. North-South surmounted East's barrage to reach that contract. At his second turn, North doubled—for takeout, since his partner had not yet bid—and South felt completely safe when he introduced his heart suit at the four-level.

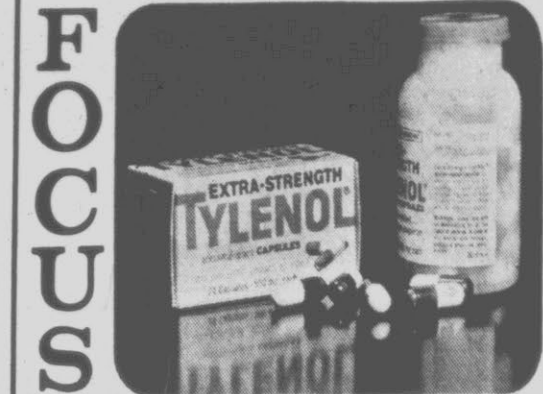

West led his top spade, East won the ace and shifted to a diamond. Declarer won in hand with the ace and led a trump to the queen, which held. Since he had to take care of his two spades, he came to hand with the queen of clubs, ruffed a spade in dummy and then tried the ace-king of clubs, on which he sluffed his last spade.

Not only was declarer delighted that three rounds of clubs went through, but he now had an almost complete count on East's hand. For his jump to three spades East surely had a seven-card suit. He had shown up with three clubs, a diamond and a heart, so twelve of his cards were known. Was his last card a heart or a diamond?

Since declarer could see eight hearts but only seven diamonds in his hand and dummy combined, the odds slightly favored that East's remaining card was a diamond. Declarer elected to play on that assumption. He cashed the king-queen of diamonds. After ruffing dummy's last diamond for his ninth trick, he then exited with a trump.

West won the trick cheaply, but he has yet to thank

FOCUS

National Headache

According to one study, Americans are more likely to suffer headaches than any other group in the world. In fact in the ten seconds you've been reading this, about 8,900 aspirins and other pain-killers were swallowed nationwide. That comes to about 28 billion a year, adding up to an annual national expenditure of $1.2 billion. Since the recent deaths from cyanide-contaminated Tylenol, drug producers are worrying about a decline in this lucrative market. But ironically the reason the Tylenol deaths were so shocking is the very fact that they were so unusual. Taking non-prescription pain-relievers is among the safest routine activities — safer even than driving to the store to buy them.

DO YOU KNOW — What federal agency must approve all drugs?

TUESDAY'S ANSWER — Pierre Gemayel founded the Maronite Christian Phalangist Party.

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A fine day and evening for you to make whatever changes and new arrangements that are necessary to gain your most cherished desires. Adopt a more outgoing attitude.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You have the opportunity to obtain the data you need in order to advance and expand in your career. Be more affectionate.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Use proven methods where a new project is concerned. Heed the advice of fellow workers who know their business.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Have a more direct approach with associates and come to a better accord. Take time to improve your personal life.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Show that you are capable of doing any kind of work that is required to gain the approval of higher-ups.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Join with good friends in talks that could lead to mutual benefits. Become your dynamic self again and accomplish more.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Try to be more cooperative with others for the good of all. Show more consideration for those who have done favors for you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Use a more direct way of communicating with others and get better results than in the past. Choose your companions carefully.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Find better ways of increasing income and stop being so narrow-minded. Consult an expert who can give you fine suggestions.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You can engage in activities now that will bring you greater personal happiness. Make sure to use care in motion.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Do something thoughtful for those who have helped you in the past. Express love and happiness to others.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Contact good friends who can assist you in gaining your fondest aims. A fine evening for the social side of life.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Engage in new business activities that can bring you the benefits you desire. Avoid taking a risk in travel.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be most able at self-expression and can get own points across with clarity, but teach first to have all the facts and figures needed before going ahead with a project. Direct education along professional lines for best results.

STOP WASTING ENERGY!

Polyurethane foam provides up to 175% greater insulating effectiveness than our fiber glass insulated water heaters.

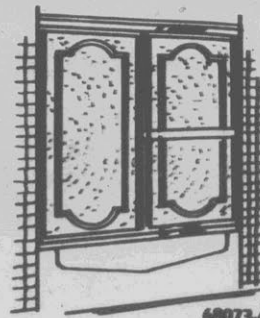

*In accordance with U.S. Government Test Procedures, the operating cost was calculated on the basis of 64.3 gallons per day of hot water usage by a family of 4 with 99° F. temp. rise, with gas rate of 47.6¢ per therm and electricity rate of 5.6¢ per kilowatt hour (U.S. government 1981 national average cost figures). Savings were calculated by subtracting the operating cost of our 40-gal. Power Miser™ 5 gas and 52-gal. electric models from the cost of operating our standard 40-gal. gas and 52-gal. electric water heaters. Savings may be more or less depending on your hot water usage and local utility rates.
