Tobacco Growers Urge Same Quota

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — While federal officials warned of tougher foreign competition and a decline in smoking, flue-cured tobacco farmers pleaded Thursday that the 1983 marketing quota be no lower than this year's.

Growers packed the Raleigh Civic Center for a public hearing on next season's quota, mindful of the federal government's concern over the high amount of 1982 leaf that went into the Flue-Cured Tobacco Stabilization Corp. after failing to bring a satisfactory price.

But William Griffin, first vice president of the Tobacco

Growers Association of North Carolina Inc., said this year's sales were beset by poor weather, increased government tax on cigarettes and declining consumption caused by the recession. Those probably won't be recurring problems, he said.

"It is important ... that we not interpret something as being a long-term trend when it may be peculiar to this particular year," Griffin said.

Griffin said his association favored keeping or slightly increasing this year's quota in 1983. The group reached its position after surveying its membership on four options proposed by the Agriculture Department, ranging from a 14 percent decrease to a 1 percent increase, he said.

Jim Davis, director of the USDA's Tobacco and Peanut Division, said the recommendation — along with others submitted by the audience — would be considered by federal Agriculture Secretary John Block before the government decides on a quota. Davis said the government had not reached a decision and wanted all the input it could get before doing so.

But another official, Robert Miller of the Tobacco and Peanut Analysis Division, said the government was aware of flue-cured leaf's problems, especially in overseas sales.

Miller said domestic cigarette consumption appears likely to keep declining, while competition from growers in foreign nations — including China, Zimbabwe and those in Europe — is on the rise. American leaf is being hurt by heavy import duties overseas while domestic buyers are turning increasingly to cheaper foreign tobacco, he said.

The U.S. share of the world tobacco market has plummeted from 40 percent in the early 1960s to 19 percent last year, Miller said. "And it will drop more. We are the leading exporter of tobacco and our share is declining," he said.

"With no requirements to list the blend of tobacco on cigarette packages, it is understandable that manufacturers would use lots of foreign leaf," Griffin said the growers'.

Expecting New Bid To Close Church School

LOUISVILLE, Neb. (AP)

Backers of the unaccredited Faith Christian School say they expect more attempts to close it even though a judge has lifted his order to padlock the church where classes are held.

"This is only one battle in a long war," the Rev. Roy Thompson of Cleveland, acting principal of the school, said Thursday.

Cass County District Judge Raymond Case, who lifted the padlock order Wednesday, said a third court order to padlock the Faith Baptist Church hasn't been ruled out.

"We have no intention of backing down," Case said. "We're using this as a cooling-off period."

The school has been ordered closed because its teachers are not certified as required by state law.

Nineteen students attended classes at the school Thursday and were taught by three preachers trained in a Christian education curriculum used at Faith Christian.

About 350 fundamentalist preachers from around the country marched through Plattsmouth to the Cass County Jail Thursday afternoon, the second day they had rallied. Leaders of the group vowed to keep the pressure on authorities to free the Rev. Everett Sileven from jail and permit the controversial school to operate permanently.

Sileven, pastor of Faith Baptist, is serving a four-month jail sentence for defying an order to close the school.

Case said his decision earlier Thursday to lift his padlock order was an effort to prevent a repetition of the scene early Monday morning when law officers had to carry 85 weeping, praying and singing fundamentalists from the church before Cass County Sheriff Fred Tesch chained and locked the doors.

He said the number of people flocking to the small southeastern Nebraska town of 1,000 in support of the church influenced his decision to suspend the order, which he issued late last week.

County Attorney Ron Moravec said he would not drop his prosecution of the school and would take further action "in the near future," but would not elaborate.

Greg Dixon of Indianapolis, national secretary of Moral Majority, had predicted as many as 800 sympathizers would gather in Louisville. Some estimates put the number at 400 by Thursday.

The church was padlocked Monday. Case ordered the lock removed Wednesday for regularly scheduled worship services.

Hotline gets things done for you. Call 752-1336 and tell your problem or your sound-off or mail it to Hotline, The Daily Reflector, Box 1967, Greenville, N.C. 27834.

Because of the large numbers received, Hotline can answer and publish only those items considered most pertinent to our readers. Names must be given, but only initials will be used.

MADONNA RETURNED

St. Peter's Catholic Church rector Father Clifford Frost received an anonymous phone call last night saying the Madonna with Folded Hands statue missing from the church school since mid-August and appealed for in the Hotline column could be found beside the trash dumpster at Port Terminal.

He and a Greenville police officer and two others went to the appointed place and recovered the statue.

Father Frost said his congregation is jubilant about the returned Madonna and plans a celebration for Sunday at 4 p.m., at which time the Knights of Columbus will reinstate her on her pedestal — with cement.

The priest said St. Peter's parishioners have had tremendous love and concern about the loss expressed to them by people from throughout Eastern North Carolina. He invited "everyone who has had a part in the safe return of the Madonna" to the celebration.

Investigation into the theft is continuing, Greenville Police Chief Glenn Cannon said this morning, and any information from the public will be used and kept in confidence.

Carryover

The Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corp. has designated delivery points to handle growers' carryover tobacco in the state's Eastern Belt, according to Fred G. Bond, general manager.

Bond explained that carryover tobacco is tobacco in excess of 110 percent of the 1982 quota and would be subject to penalty if sold in 1982.

The spokesman said the delivery points for Area C (Eastern Belt and Sandhills area) include: Carolina Leaf Tobacco Co., N. Greene St., Greenville, telephone 758-6810; Austin Carolina Tobacco Co., W. Shine Street, Kinston, 523-8086; Eastern Processors Inc., 436 N. Pearl St., Rocky Mount, 977-2023; James I. Miller Tobacco Co., Regency Road, Wilson, 291-0595; and Tobacco Growers Services Inc., N. Main Street and Wake Chapel Road, Fuquay-Varina, 552-3865.

Bond said Area C growers will begin deliveries of tobacco on Nov. 1 and the designated points should not be called before Oct. 28 to schedule deliveries.

State's Revenues Up In September

By JOHN FLESHER

Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) —

Tax collection in North Carolina jumped by 7.9 percent in September, the biggest gain in five months, Revenue Secretary Mark Lynch said today.

Lynch called the increase "slightly encouraging," but said the state still has "a long way to go" before raising enough money to meet the fiscal 1982-83 budget.

Unless the trend continues upward in coming months, further budget cuts will be necessary, he added.

"We can be thankful that our North Carolina constitution requires that we have a balanced budget and that Governor Hunt (makes certain) that North Carolina does not spend more than the funds that are available," he said.

Lynch declined to speculate on what September's figures say about the condition of North Carolina's economy or whether the state is pulling out of the recession.

"I wouldn't want to venture a guess on that," he said. "These figures refer to past history anyway. They wouldn't reveal anything about the recession that we don't already know."

September's collections rebounded sharply from August, when they plummeted to 3 percent after hitting 5.5 percent in July.

The biggest improvement was in income tax collection, which leaped 11.6 percent over the same month in 1981. Gross revenue from quarter declaration payments by individuals increased 19.3 percent.

Unemployment Drops In N.C.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Unemployment in North Carolina fell to 8.7 percent in September after hitting 9 percent in August, the state Employment Security Commission reported today.

The improvement is primarily the result of employers recalling workers who had been temporarily laid off, ESC Chairman Glenn R. Jernigan said.

"It appears that some employers have, so far, been able to use temporary layoff periods in order to maintain production staff and avoid permanent plant closings," Jernigan said in a news release.

Also affecting the decline in joblessness was a reduction in working hours, Jernigan said. The average work week for production employees in manufacturing dropped to 38 in mid-September from 38.2 in mid-August. In mid-September a year ago, workers averaged 38.6 hours per week.

A total of 257,700 North Carolinians were out of work in September. Nationwide, 10,695,000 were unemployed for a jobless rate of 9.7 percent.

Manufacturing jobs showed a net gain of 2,700. Most of those were in furniture and fixtures, which gained 1,400 jobs in the durable goods sector for a 1.8 percent employment increase.

Nondurable goods employment was down slightly, losing 600 jobs for a 0.3 percent decline.

Nonmanufacturing jobs were up by 43,400, or 2.8 percent, as the teachers and other school employees returned to work. Meanwhile, service and trade jobs fell by a total of 2,500 or 0.3 percent as the summer tourist season drew to a close.

The average hourly earnings of North Carolina's production workers in manufacturing increased to $6.38, up from $6.33 the previous month and up 31 cents from mid-September a year ago.

'Textile Week' Observed Here

In conjunction with observing Textile Week in North and South Carolina during the week of Oct. 17-23, Fieldcrest Mills held a luncheon Tuesday at the Greenville Country Club for vocational educators in the Pitt County area.

The purpose of the luncheon was to explain the importance and the involvement of the textile industry in Pitt County and in the state of North Carolina, and to demonstrate what the industry means in terms of people, products, and progress.

Two slide presentations were given — one on the industry as a whole, the other covering the history of Fieldcrest Mills.

Educators and textile personnel attending the luncheon and a tour of both Fieldcrest Mills in Greenville included Barbara McLawhorn, instructor, D.H. Conley School; Dr. Charles Russell, Pitt Community College; Dr. Delma Blinson, superintendent of Greenville city schools; Rebecca Oates, director, secondary education, Greenville city schools; Thomas Craft, associate superintendent, Pitt County schools.

Also, Carl Toot, director, vocational education, Pitt County schools; W.C. Flake, vice president and general manager, Karastan Spinning Mills; J.M. Moore, vice president, Greenville Yarn Sales; L. Skimmer, plant manager, Karastan Spinning Mill; J.M. Strother, plant manager, Karastan Worsted Mill, and A.D. Sharpless, area personnel manager.

Refund Due Bid-Rigging

WILLIAMSTON — "We knew the state was investigating bid-rigging in general, but we were unaware we would be getting a refund due to any of the findings," said J.B. Godwin, Williamston's town administrator. "It was something of a surprise to us."

Godwin was referring to the $4,500 refund to the town of Williamston received from the state attorney general's office as a result of investigations carried out in bid-rigging on contract bids for Williamston's Sewer Treatment Plant. The attorney general's office did not identify the firms involved as investigations are still under way in bid-rigging cases statewide.

Since the $4,500 refund was for a project involving federal, state and town funds on a 75-12.5-12.5 percentage basis, the amount actually going into the town's budget is $562.50, the town's 12.5 percent share of the $4,500 refund.

"This share will be applied to the allocation of funds earmarked for the sewer plant addition costs," Godwin said.

Set Workshop On Evaluations

A workshop designed to help teachers become familiar with their new evaluation process will be held at Rose High School Monday at 4 p.m.

The workshop will be sponsored by the North Carolina Association of Educators and the National Education Association. The session will be open to all area teachers.

Staff members will go through the program item-by-item, pointing out problem areas and making suggestions that teachers can use to protect themselves from the negative aspects of the evaluation instrument. Dale Robinson will lead the workshop.

Studying Local AAUW Unit

An exploratory meeting of women interested in forming a local branch of the American Association of University Women will be held in the First American Savings and Loan's Community Room Nov. 4 at 7:30 p.m.

A speaker from the North Carolina Division membership committee will be present to answer questions about the AAUW, which is the largest and oldest national organization for women. Founded in 1882 by 65 women college graduates, there are now more than 190,000 members enrolled in more than 1,900 AAUW branches, 38 of which are in North Carolina. A previous branch chartered in Greenville in 1929 was disbanded in the mid-1970s.

Any woman holding a baccalaureate or higher degree from an accredited college or university or from a foreign institution recognized by the International Federation of University Women is eligible for membership. For further information, contact Nancy Meyer, 757-7610 after 5 p.m.

Homecoming To Be Queenless Event

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Members of the Student Government Association at the University of North Carolina-Greensboro have voted against the selection of a homecoming queen, saying it is "discriminatory and degrading."

Sybil Mann, SGA vice president, also said selection of a white student could be harmful to race relations at the school, where blacks number slightly more than 10 percent.

Until this year, UNC-G had neither a homecoming nor a queen.

On Oct. 6, the SGA's Student Senate passed a resolution against homecoming and the selection of a queen to reign during the "Fall Spral" festivities, which begin Oct. 27.

The vote was 18 to 8, according to Randy McGuire, chairman of the Homecoming Queen Committee and vice president of Elliott Council, a student group that plans social activities.

On Wednesday, McGuire defended the selection of a queen, to be crowned at an Oct. 28 soccer game between UNC-G and the University of Notre Dame, as a way to bolster school morale.

McGuire said black student groups had been asked for nominees as well as the Gay Student Alliance and others. Three of the 30 female contestants are black, he said. The winner will receive a $150 scholarship.

Tail Gate Party Part Of Hospitality Scene

One part of ECU homecoming hospitality not mentioned on official programs is a very casual affair, as down-home unpretentious as it's name — tail gate party.

People who are visiting Greenville Saturday with the idea of seeing the ECU — Illinois State football game can rest and refresh themselves between noon and 2 p.m. Saturday in the intramural field area behind Stadium No. 1.

There, visitors are urged to rest, to bring along a picnic lunch to eat with free Pepsis and Mountain Dewes being served on the spot.

Because of the demands made by homecoming activities, chairs will not be available. However, there will be tables set up in the intramural field, and patrons may bring their own folding chairs — or pillows, blankets or whatever for the rest period before the game.

Cindy Kittrell of the ECU Alumni Office explained that the concept is the brainchild of ECU alumni — especially of Al Nichols and David Murray, two members of the Pitt County chapter of the ECU Alumni Association.

"Henry Hinton of radio WRQR has also been a tremendous help in advocating the idea," Ms. Kittrell said. He has promoted it by broadcasting his show from this spot and encouraging people to come on out.

"We're excited about establishing this tail gate concept as an ECU tradition," Ms. Kittrell added. "At first, it was planned as a one-time shot only, but at the last home game, there was such a big response, with at least 200 people showing up, that we've decided to make it a regular event for each home game."

Those who want to establish territory early can park at Elmhurst School.

BOOK FAIR

STOKES — A Book Fair will be held at the Stokes School media center Oct. 25-29. Parents and students may browse or purchase materials any time between 8:30 a.m.-3 p.m. during the week.

"It's a fine way to get some pregame relaxing, to be in the open and enjoy a picnic lunch," Ms. Kittrell said. "We hope a lot of people will be showing up for the tail gate party beginning at noon on Saturday."

Railroad Widows Can Board Benefit Train

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I read you faithfully in the Williamson (W. Va.) Daily News. In September 1981, your column was headed, "Full Steam Ahead for Railroad Widows." It caught my eye because in 1930, when I was 16, I married a railroad man. We were divorced in 1962.

The article went on to give me such good news! It read: "Effective Oct. 1, 1981, remarried widows and divorced wives, mothers and widows of railroad workers will become eligible for railroad annuities in the same dollar amount and under the same rules as Social Security."

I could hardly believe my eyes! Had I not read it in your column I would never have known about it. I had not been informed in any other way.

You advised all women who qualified to write to the Railroad Retirement Board, 844 Rush St., Chicago, Ill. 60611.

I wrote immediately. After several letters back and forth, I was informed that I was eligible for benefits, and I have been receiving a monthly check ever since. It is such a help!

How can I thank you, Abby?

MRS. MILDRED H. BEVINS,
PIKEVILLE, KY.

DEAR MILDRED: Don't thank me. Thank Rep. James L. Oberstar, 8th District, Minnesota, who wrote to inform me that the law had just been passed. He added, "And I can't think of a better way of reaching the approximately 74,000 eligible women than through the Dear Abby column."

DEAR ABBY: I am a married woman (mid-30s), wife and mother, who has always been overly modest. I just hate going to my doctor for a physical — the kind where you have to take off everything, get up on the examining table, etc.

If I could do it myself, I certainly would. But, Abby, I can check my own breasts for lumps, and I do.

Would it be obnoxious of me to tell my doctor I'd rather do it myself? (Check my breasts.) I think he enjoys doing this, as I am oversized.

MODEST TO A FAULT

DEAR MODEST: It would be more foolish than obnoxious. In the first place, don't assume that your doctor "enjoys" checking for lumps. He gets as much enjoyment from it as a grocer checking for an overripe cantaloupe. You are paying for his professional expertise; use it to the fullest.

DEAR ABBY: I was glad to see that letter in your column about the couple who had separate bedrooms after 10 years of marriage and didn't care what people thought.

I hung on to the edge of the bed for 10 years before I had the courage to get twin beds, but it was either that or my sanity. My husband was a restless sleeper who thrashed around in his sleep like a wrestler. (He also snored like a bull.)

We will be celebrating our 35th wedding anniversary soon. Now that the kids have left home we have separate bedrooms! Glory hallelujah! Now I can read until the wee hours, or watch late-night TV while he snores his head off across the hall. He likes a cool room and I like it warm, but believe it or not we are very compatible. And I still get a thrill when he whispers in my ear, "Your place or mine tonight?"

Couple Celebrates Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Earl Garris Sr. of Greenville were honored at a 25th wedding anniversary reception Saturday at the Cherry Oaks Clubhouse.

It was given by Connie Lee, Earl and Karen Garris, children of the couple.

The honoree wore a navy blue knit suit complemented by a corsage of white silk roses tied with silver ribbon.

The refreshment table was covered with a white cloth with lace trim accented with silver bows. The centerpiece was an arrangement of white mums, pom poms, baby's breath and three-tiered silver candelabra. Frances Mills, sister of Mrs. Garris, poured punch. Garris' sister, Alice Binkley, served cake.

The reception area was decorated with family pictures, fall foliage, magnolia leaves and white candles.

Greeting guests and saying good-byes were the couple's children.

Patricia Garris, sister of Garris, presided at the guest register.

Mr. and Mrs. Garris were married Oct. 20, 1957, in Elm Grove Free Will Baptist Church.

Slides Shown Club Members

A tour of private and public gardens in the United States and Europe via slides was the program for members of the Grass Roots Garden Club. It was presented by Mrs. Marshall Tripp and Mrs. James Ross.

Mrs. Thurston Wynne and Mrs. Tripp were meeting hostesses.

The November meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Carl Crawford.

Dealing With Bathroom Mildew

Soiled or mildewed shower curtains don't have to spoil the appearance of an otherwise clean bathroom.

If a curtain is plastic and colorfast, it can be put in the washing machine in warm sudsy water and agitated for about three minutes, say extension clothing specialists at North Carolina State University.

Then rinse and let it spin on a gentle cycle and shake out the excess water. Hang it back up to dry.

Mildew can be removed by wiping the curtain with a solution of liquid chlorine bleach, three-quarters of a cup for each gallon of water, before washing in the machine.

Laundry or dryclean, but do not iron, out-of-season clothing before storing. Touch-up ironing is usually required before wearing anyway.

ABWA Hears Speaker

Wayne Critcher, assistant manager of The Spa, was speaker at the meeting of the Pirate Charter Chapter of the American Business Women's Association.

He told of the importance of a planned exercise program for the working woman.

The upcoming national convention in New Orleans was discussed. Rosemary Nordby, the Pirate Charter Chapter advisor at national headquarters, has invited the chapter delegate to a meeting to discuss goals and exchange ideas.

Pat Hardee, president, said a report on the convention and ABWA workshops will take place at the November meeting.

Use Baskets For Storage

If your home is short on storage space, think about baskets. They can live up any room in the house. Water resistant wicker baskets make excellent accents for the bathroom, says Dr. Wilma Hammett, extension house furnishings specialist at North Carolina State University. Use baskets to hold tub toys, rollers, laundry or decorative soap.

In the kitchen, you can store potatoes or onions in baskets. Their open weave allows air to flow through, cutting down on spoilage.

Baskets are clutter-collectors and can help save drawer space. A large, low hamper in the living room can be used for storage and can double as a coffee table or stool.

Use a basket near the fireplace to store wood, Dr. Hammett suggests.

All over the house where there is a need for more storage space, think about baskets. They're excellent accessories in any room.

Clothing Store Operated For 'Professional' Woman

By MARY A. DEMPSEY TROY, Mich. (UPI) — Janet Eckoff says corporate women have a lot in common with corporate men — they are very busy people, they feel clothes are important to their image, and they hate to shop.

With these things in mind she opened a clothing store.

"This store has a very specific target market. That is professional women, women who are making $25,000 plus," said Ms. Eckoff, a former senior product planner at the Buick Division of General Motors Corp.

She said she knows of only four similar stores — one each in Atlanta, San Francisco and New York and two in Chicago.

Before opening The Professional Woman Ltd., she did extensive market research, using subscription lists bought from Savvy and Business Week magazines.

She mailed 2,500 questionnaires to businesswomen.

"We got 750 questionnaires back, which is a very good response rate for a questionnaire that long — it was six pages," Ms. Eckoff said. "You also have to consider the women we were sending these to are very busy people."

She was surprised at the results.

"Seventy percent wanted to shop in smaller stores. Mostly they shopped at lunch or after work or on Saturdays," she said. "They hated malls. They didn't want to hassle with traffic or parking."

"These women are beginning to shop like men... They don't like to make more than one stop. They want alterations. They shop twice a year when the seasons change."

"... regular retailers don't realize they don't have time to run from store to store," said the 33-year-old entrepreneur.

"We have keyed into these women's working hours," Ms. Eckoff said. Her shop is open 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. three nights a week and until 9 p.m. two nights. It is also open Saturdays.

Its conservative, tailored suits range in price from $170 to more than $400. The only accessories available are belts, blouses, scarves and leather portfolios.

"After two years at GM, I had a closetful of dresses in bright colors that I sold at a second-hand store. I had become very uncomfortable coming into work in anything except a suit," Ms. Eckoff said.

"But it was difficult finding anything to wear. When I was looking for a suit for a major presentation (at work), the sales clerks would recommend canary yellow. They just couldn't understand it was not appropriate."

Her research also included reading books by fashion consultants and "Dress for Success" author John Molloy.

Her small shop in Troy, a northern Detroit suburb, is located inconspicuously in a modern office-retail building off a major freeway.

Personal service and high quality merchandise are the key.

"We've had people come in who spend more than $1,000 at a shot," she said. "That's a lot of money and those people deserve to have you remember their names."

She doesn't stop there. The store keeps track of the women's measurements, the clothing they buy, including swatches of suit fabrics and the type of clothing they are interested in.

When new garments arrive that the store feels would fit well in a particular customer's wardrobe, she is notified by telephone.

A limited number of styles, colors and sizes are displayed on racks.

"With something as basic as a navy blue suit, it really doesn't matter," said Ms. Eckoff. "But some of the suits in more unusual styles or colors we only buy a few of. Even if they sell fast we won't reorder them — it would be sort of a breach of promise to have all the corporate women turn up in the same suit."

She said she had no problem finding patrons despite the downturn in the economy, particularly in the Detroit area.

even in a depressed time, pays well.

"There are a lot of women out there making a lot of money. The auto industry,

A battlefield of ideas, not bayonets — to quote Under Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger — is a made-to-order choice for the United States in that conference on fostering democratic change in communist countries.

There was, when it came into being 200 years ago, no more revolutionary concept in the world than that adopted by the fledgling United States when it chose a system of government by the people, with rights and liberties assured by a Constitution.

The Constitution (wearing a made-in-America label) was so widely admired that it became the model for other peoples. Unhappily, not all remained alert to the dangers that surrounded them.

In an arena of ideologies there is nothing so revolutionary as the principles of democracy. They outshine the ideals of military rule, one-party rule, the concept of people serving the state, rather than the state serving the people, all of which dominate the global scene today.

Democracy is a rare thing in the world these days; but there was a time when all that it stood for made monarchs cringe and tyrants look under their beds at night.

Teaching its basis and aspirations to the world makes sense.

We're happy someone has finally decided to give good ideas a chance to prove themselves once more.

Passive defense doesn't work on a battlefield; it hasn't done so well in the field of political philosophies abroad, either.

All over the world there are peoples yearning for personal dignity, liberty and rights they have either never known or only faintly remember. They should be told those things do exist, and are available to all who really want them.

Have An Enjoyable Time

East Carolina University's homecomings have long been festive events. This year homecoming is even more a holiday because the university is celebrating its 75th anniversary.

There will be the traditional parade tomorrow morning, a tailgating party in the Ficklen Stadium parking lot, followed by the football game between the Pirates and Illinois State.

Following myriad events this week there will be an alumni social at the Moose Lodge tomorrow night, a black alumni dance, along with countless fraternity and private parties throughout the city.

Sunday a morning worship service is planned at Jenkins Arts Center Auditorium and Sunday night .38 Special will be in concert at Minges.

It is a happy time for students, staff, alumni and friends of the university, who all have worked so diligently to make the institution what it is today. It is our hope that visitors and all participants in the activities will enjoy themselves this weekend.

A Non-Issue Race

By PAUL T. O'CONNOR
RALEIGH — Regardless of your political affiliation, it's hard not to feel a bit of sympathy for a Greensboro lawyer who this year is seeking a seat on the State Court of Appeals. Betty Pearce is trying to become the first Republican in this century to be elected to a statewide judicial office. But as she attempts to crack the Democratic Party's grip on the state's judiciary, she's hamstrung by the Judicial Canon of Ethics which bars all talk of issues in judicial campaigns.

Under the canon, judicial candidates may campaign only on their qualifications. No discussion of their theory of judicial activism or judicial restraint. No debate on the legality of abortion or school prayer. Just where you went to school and what kind of experience you have.

In the race between Mrs. Pearce and her Democratic opponent, Sid Eagles of Raleigh, the canon appears to be more of a nuisance to the Republican. "The voter has got to have some way of making up his mind. If he doesn't know anything about either candidate, how does he make up his mind? He'll vote for the nominee of his party. Democrats outnumber Republicans so it's easier for a Democrat to be elected," Mrs. Pearce says.

And it's almost certain that most voters will go into the booth knowing little about either Eagles or Mrs. Pearce. Eagles spent $40,000 in his Democratic primary campaign against Paul Wright and says he has little left to spend. Mrs. Pearce says she's got a treasury of $15,000 for the race. That is not much political money in the nation's tenth largest state.

PAUL T. O'CONNOR
Free media is also unlikely to help the candidate become better known. Without any issues in the campaign, stories on judicial candidates are pretty dull. So here's a bit about the two candidates. You decide who is more qualified.

Mrs. Pearce is 36, a native of Greensboro and a graduate of Wellesley College in Massachusetts. She has a master's degree in English from Columbia University and a law degree from New York University. She was chosen for a Fulbright Fellowship after college but turned it down. She practiced law for four years on Wall Street before returning home in 1978 to work in a Greensboro firm.

Her political experience is limited to volunteer work in the 1980 congressional campaign of 6th District Congressman Gene Johnston. State Rep. Howard Coble is affiliated with her law firm.

Mrs. Pearce is the only woman running for state judicial office this year and with the retirement of Judge Naomi Morris, she would be the only woman on the Court of Appeals. There are no female Supreme Court justices.

Eagles, 43, a native of Asheville who was raised in Wilson County, earned both his undergraduate and law degrees at Wake Forest. He worked as a special prosecutor in the state Attorney General's office for nine years after spending three years in the Air Force. He was legal counsel to House

Other Editors Say Long-Awaited

(Raleigh Times)

When a state and federal undercover operation turns up 574 Wake County food stamp recipients suspected of lying about their income, it lends considerable credibility to welfare critics' claims of widespread fraud. These 574 represent 10 percent of all those receiving the stamps, and the investigation is far from over.

Perhaps the arrest, speedy trial and punishment of the guilty will serve as a dramatic deterrent to not only food stamp but other suspected welfare fraud in the county. Meanwhile, the high percentage of fraud should cause Wake commissioners to turn their attention to beefing up the county's own fraud investigation squad.

We suspect that few of the suspects are living on easy street. And undoubtedly many have lied to supplement limited incomes. Still there is no excuse for fraud.

For not only will the guilty suffer loss of food stamps, and be punished. They, and other honest, deserving recipients, stand to suffer from an already skeptical public's reluctance to support social programs for the poor. Fraud in welfare feeds the anti-welfare propaganda mills.

We support efforts to clean up such social programs before their abuse further shrinks the dwindling fund of compassion.

Still more cheering is the news that the undercover operation will be extended to an even more despicable kind of criminal. Agents will concentrate on snaring those unconscionable store owners who give cash instead of food for the food stamps. Under this illegal practice, which investigators call widespread, the grocer buys the stamps at perhaps half their actual value and then collects full value from the government.

These more affluent, educated and supposedly responsible members of the community should feel the full anger of the law and the disgust of the taxpayers. A simple wrist-slapping is too little for those arrested and convicted.

The clampdown on food stamp fraud is long-awaited and welcome. As it proceeds, the courts must guard against punishing the poor and the ignorant for lying about limited incomes more severely than they punish the bigger, more scheming criminals who know better and have only greed, not need, to blame for their crime.

MAKES YOU WONDER, DOESN'T IT?

By ART BUCHWALD

Suddenly, He's Rich!

I saw Mathews the other day driving a new Porsche, and the thought occurred to me that he was doing very well. Two days later I heard he was taking his wife to St. Moritz for Christmas, and buying a home in Hilton Head. Then the thought occurred to me Mathews was in on some scam, because just a year ago he was having trouble paying his electric bill.

Finally when I ran into him looking at fur coats in Neiman Marcus I decided to confront him on his new-found wealth.

"Okay, Mathews, you can level with me. Where's the money coming from?"

Mathews laughed, "You really want to know? It's coming from the NFL football strike."

"There are no games being played, so I haven't been able to place any bets with my bookie. Last year I lost my shirt, my pants and the farm to him. This year the money is all mine. I'm having a ball. I was able to send my kid to MIT with what I would have lost on the New England Patriots this year."

"You mean to say that all your new-found wealth is money that you had set aside to bet on the NFL football games?"

"That's where it comes from. This is the first year I've been able to wake up on Monday mornings without a cold sweat. I know I don't have to meet my bookie for lunch and turn over the family jewels."

"But isn't your wife suspicious of you suddenly throwing all this money around?"

"You bet she is. She figures I'm stealing from the company. Everytime I give her some cash she won't spend it because she thinks she's going to have to hire a criminal lawyer."

"Why don't you tell the truth?"

"Because I promised her seven years ago I'd stop betting on NFL games with my bookie. She'll know I lied to her if I told her where the bonanza was coming from this year. The fur coat I'm buying today would have gone for the point spread I would have had to take on the St. Louis Cardinals."

"She doesn't know how lucky she is that the players and owners can't come to terms."

"You see those two guys over there in trench coats? They're from the FBI and they've been tailing me ever since the NFL strike went into effect. They're certain I'm heisting banks, because last year at this time I couldn't even pay my Diner's Club bill. The narc agents have tapped my phone because they're sure I'm dealing in cocaine, and the IRS has audited me three times since Ed Garvey called the players out. I'm in fat city."

"I didn't know you were such a heavy better."

"Look there are millions of guys like me all over America, who can no longer put down a bet on a Dallas Cowboy game. Since they don't have to give their money to the bookies, they don't know what to do with their dough. I at least have enough sense to enjoy it while the strike is on."

"Can't you bet on other sports events?"

"I supposed I could, but I don't get the same thrill as when I can get 14 points on the Jets when they're playing in Buffalo. Do you know in 1979 I had three winners on a Sunday, and would have broken even if Philadelphia hadn't kicked a field goal in the last 10 seconds? I couldn't sleep all night. Now I don't have to worry if they score touchdowns in the last quarter."

"I wish I had bet on NFL games in the past," I said. "I'd be a rich man this fall."

"Those are the breaks," Mathews said modestly. "Some guys just luck into an NFL strike, and become rich overnight."

Mathews told the salesgirl to gift wrap the fur coat in a box and we left the store. On the sidewalk was a down and out man selling lead pencils. Mathews took out a bill and dropped it into the tin cup.

Looking For Better Way

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) —

Facing political and diplomatic problems over its trade sanctions against the Soviet Union, the Reagan administration is looking for a better way to punish Moscow — something that will work without offending voters at home and allies abroad. The goal is allied agreement on a framework of economic measures and restrictions to be applied to the Soviet Union.

"We're trying to study relationships between the West and the East ... as far as economics are concerned," said a senior administration official, speaking on the condition that his name not be used. "This involves financial terms, it involves items that we're selling to them, it involves the whole philosophical question as to whether we should be doing it and, if so, to what extent and what products."

"And the idea is that if you can reach general agreements on all this, you wouldn't have to bother with individual sanctions then," he said. "You're not trying to ease the sanctions themselves, they stay put. What you're trying to do is establish a whole new type of relationship."

That kind of economic framework has been under discussion by western foreign ministers. The administration acknowledges that it is an elusive goal, given the differing philosophies and concerns of American allies.

"At what point in time do you say you don't trade at all, or you have open trade, or you have subsidized trade or no subsidized trade?" the official asked. "How do you treat these people? I think that's the question they're addressing rather than the narrow focus ... of what we should do about the pipeline."

The administration trade sanctions deal with technology and equipment for the 3,700-mile natural gas pipeline the Soviet Union is building from Siberia to western Europe. President Reagan imposed sanctions on American export of supplies for the pipeline last December, and stiffened them in June, in response to the Soviet role in suppressing the free trade union movement in Poland. The United States tried unsuccessfully to get western European nations to follow suit.

The sanctions have cost business — and jobs — in some sections of the United States, and where they have, it is an issue in the congressional election campaign. One such area is Peoria, Ill., where Reagan campaigned on Monday for House Republican Leader Robert H. Michel. Democrat G. Douglas Stephens denounces the trade sanctions daily, pointing to their impact on the district's biggest single employer, Caterpillar Tractor Co. The firm has laid off about 8,000 workers, in part because the sanctions barred it from filling more than $90 million worth of orders for pipeline equipments. Another area firm that lost pipeline business has shut down entirely.

Part of the problem is that every trade restriction has its own side, since what the Soviet Union is not allowed to buy, American firms cannot sell.

When President Jimmy Carter imposed a partial embargo on grain sales to the Soviet Union early in the 1980 presidential campaign, Reagan said it wasn't fair to make one segment of the American economy bear the burden, and that if there were to be economic reprisals, they should be across the board.

Carter took the action — political poison in the farm belt — in retaliation for the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan. As president, Reagan lifted the embargo, although the Russian troops stayed put. He promised farmers earlier this year that he would not embargo agricultural exports except as part of a complete trade boycott, with allied backing. Then, on Oct. 15, he authorized an additional, record flow of grain sales to the Soviet Union.

German and French officials, speaking for two leading dissenters on the pipeline sanctions, said they couldn't see why grain exports by the United States were being increased while technical and industrial equipment for the pipeline was barred.

Reagan said Monday that the United States is exploring alternatives to the sanctions, talking to allies "about some other things that we believe

Strength For Today

HAPPINESS IS —

ABY-PRODUCT

How can I find happiness? First of all, we have to define what happiness is. Is it having our own way all the time? Is it giving vent to our passions? Is it making and spending a lot of money? Is it acquiring power and dominating the lives of other people? Is it being a social success?

Happiness is quite evidently beyond all this. Happiness is not the possession of anything or the exercising of a right, but rather it is an inner state of peace as regards ourselves and an eager spirit of good will as regards others.

The most striking aspect of happiness is that it comes into our lives without our knowing it. If we try to get it, it eludes us. When we do the right things and think the right thoughts and have the right attitude towards others and believe sound truths regarding God and his goodness, happiness creeps over us. It is God's gift to those who have put something else first. — Elisha Douglass

The Recovery May Disappoint

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — It may be looking far, far ahead, but when it arrives, the economic recovery might disappoint a lot of people.

It has been promised for at least a year. It has been prayed for by the unemployed. It has been planned for by those inextinguishable entrepreneurs who believe that bad times are merely the preparation for good times to come.

Its arrival has also been postponed month after month. By what seemed to be a consensus of forecasters, it was expected to be here no later than the third quarter. Now the forecasters have backtracked again. Maybe in January.

The disappointment mounts. The White House no longer tries to conceal its chagrin. Business people sound more bitter. And the list of discouraged workers — those who have given up looking — has reached a record 1.6 million.

Even further discouragement might lie ahead. The word "recovery" is a broad term that signifies improvement following an economic decline. But there are all degrees of recovery, and this one seems destined to be weak.

Moreover, it begins from a deeper base. Although the conclusion isn't shared by all, many measurements and estimates now show the recession of 1982 to be deeper than that of 1974-1975, or the worst since the 1930s.

The Wharton Economic Outlook, published as a workbook for the World Economic Outlook Conference in London later this month, assumes a U.S. overall growth rate of 3.9 percent for 1983. But it cautions against misinterpretation.

Such growth might appear strong, it says, but is far weaker than in the 1971 and 1976 recoveries. It foresees growth of construction and business plant and equipment spending as "pallid" compared with that in previous recoveries.

Morgan Guaranty Trust economists comments: "Among private-sector economists, there is a growing conviction that appreciable recovery may not occur without a further substantial decline in interest rates."

While it foresees a rise in real gross national product — real refers to inflation-adjusted — of 2.6 percent in the first quarter of 1983, it foresees little chance that business capital outlays will rise by then.

Merrill Lynch expects only a mild recovery early in 1983, although it now adds the probability that "the economy should strengthen meaningfully in the second half of 1983." That probability is based on an assumption that taxes will be cut in July and that first-half interest rates will continue to fall.

The outlook on unemployment seems especially disturbing, and that of course is the criterion by which millions of families measure economic health.

Wharton expects the jobless rate to drop to only 9 percent in 1983. Morgan foresees it rising to 10.3 percent in the first quarter of the year, even while economic recovery is underway, as measured by gross national product. Merrill Lynch's forecast is for a rate ranging downward from 10.1 percent to 9.6 in the final quarter of the year.

Overall, the economic picture, though improving, is hardly inspiring. And after so much waiting for "the recovery," which they felt was the reward for assuming the burdens of austerity, many Americans might find it disappointing.

Fire In Hold Of Marijuana Ship

PORTSMOUTH, Va. (AP) — Coast Guard investigators are investigating a fire that began in the hold of a marijuana-laden, 61-foot ship sighted by an airplane out of Elizabeth City, N.C.

Coast Guard spokesman Bruce Pimental said investigators have not determined why the Bonita began burning as it was being towed into port Thursday about 3 a.m.

The Coast Guard said the Bonita contained about 20 tons of marijuana. Its engine room burst into flames and began burning out of control, Pimental said.

The vessel was seized and seven crewmen were arrested after a "routine boarding" of the ship about 100 miles east of Cape Henry by crewmen of the cutter Point Huron, Pimental said.

"It was a boat in the area and the Huron was nearby," Pimental said.

He said the Bonita was sighted Wednesday by a Coast Guard C-130 airplane out of Elizabeth City that was making a routine check on a sailing vessel that had lost its sails and was motoring into Hampton Roads.

The Point Huron, which was on patrol in the area, was sent to investigate, he said.

The crew of the Bonita offered no resistance, Pimental said. Their names and nationalities were not known early Thursday, nor was the registration of the vessel, thought to be a charter fishing craft.

The Bonita is the eighth drug smuggling vessel to be seized this year in the waters of the 5th Coast Guard District, which includes the coasts of Virginia, North Carolina and Maryland.

Elsie L. Munsell, the U.S. attorney for the Eastern District of Virginia, said the seizure of the ship indicates drug smuggling is moving north. She said the increased arrest rate for drug smuggling in Florida and Texas has pushed the smugglers into the Chesapeake Bay and waters off the Carolinas.

Honorary Drive Head

FRANC WHITE and his dog, Fracas

Franc White, known to outdoor enthusiasts in six states as "The Southern Sportsman," is serving as the honorary chairman of the 1982 Christmas Seal campaign for the American Lung Association in North Carolina.

White developed and hosts "The Southern Sportsman," an outdoorsmen's television show syndicated in North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia. He also publishes a magazine under the same name and writes for national sporting publications.

This is the 76th year of Christmas Seals in North Carolina. Originally a fund-raising effort to fight tuberculosis, the program now provides financial support for research, education and services to combat emphysema, chronic bronchitis, asthma and other lung diseases.

Arrest Man On Break-In Count

Greenville police early today arrested Roger Carr, 25 of 403A Dudley St. on breaking, entering and larceny charges in connection with a 12:10 a.m. break-in at Harris Supermarket on North Greene Street.

Chief Glenn Cannon said officers, responding to a burglar alarm, arrested Carr as he ran from the scene. The chief said police are looking for a second man seen running from the area.

Entry was gained by breaking out a window, Cannon said, and two bags containing $109 worth of cigarettes, sausage and other items were recovered.

Cannon said Carr was placed under $10,000 bond pending a hearing.

Slumlord Is Given Jail

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A landlord who rented buildings allegedly infested with rodents has been sentenced to four years in jail.

City officials said it was the stiffest sentence ever meted out in the city for repeated violations of health and safety codes.

"While the law has teeth, it is generally recognized that it never bites," Municipal Judge James F. Nelson said before passing sentence Thursday on 52-year-old Nathaniel Wells. "I wish to dispel that notion."

Wells also was fined $9,000 and ordered to pay court costs of $5,400.

He was convicted last month of 22 health and building code violations, including allegations that he permitted rodent infestation, unsafe wiring and holes in walls.

Wells claimed he had an income of only $1,000 a month, but he reported a net worth of more than $1 million, most of it in property he said belonged to others.

But prosecutors claimed Wells, using aliases, owns 60 properties from the garment district downtown to Watts. Many of those properties previously have been cited for violations, but officials never were able to find the listed owner to serve legal papers, prosecutors said.

Iranians Lead In Enrollments

NEW YORK (AP) — Iranians make up the largest number of foreign students in the United States, with the overall foreign enrollment increasing for the eighth straight year, the Institute of International Education says.

For the 1981-82 academic year, the 326,299 foreign students accounted for 2.6 of total U.S. enrollment in higher education, the institute reported Tuesday. Of that, 35,860 were Iranians.

could be more punishment to the Soviet Union...

"We couldn't get agreement on them, but we're trying again," he said. "If we can get a better set of restrictions, other than the sanctions, we will be willing to lift those sanctions."

That better set, according to the administration, would be a comprehensive allied agreement on future trade with Moscow. But even if there were such an agreement governing trade with the East, it might not solve the problem for good. There would remain the prospect that Soviet moves like those that brought the grain embargo and the pipeline sanctions would lead the United States to a further crackdown on trade with Moscow.

association, recognizing the problems caused by the high volume of leaf going under loan, asked farmers in its survey whether they would prefer a decrease in quota or a reduction in the scheduled price support increase.

Seventy-seven percent of those surveyed favored the lower price support increase than a reduced quota, he said.

"I believe it is clear that the majority of tobacco farmers in North Carolina want the secretary of agriculture to at least maintain the quota for 1983 at the 1982 quota level," Griffin said. Farmers fear a lower quota because it probably would cause an increase in lease rates, which Griffin called "one of the most difficult problems in the program."

"We also believe that in reducing the quota and allowing price supports to continue to escalate will increase the amount of tobacco brought into the United States. On the other hand, if we can slow down the increase in the price of our tobacco and eventually grow more of it, we can reduce the amount of imported tobacco," Griffin said.

Mondale Visits N. C. Tuesday

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A spokesman for the State Democratic Party says a visit by former vice president Walter Mondale on Tuesday — the same day President Reagan is to visit the state — is a coincidence.

Spokesman Wayne McDevitt said Mondale's trip to Greensboro was planned before Reagan announced his plans to come to North Carolina.

Mondale plans to go to Rockingham Central High School in Wentworth to address students, then plans to go to Greensboro to appear with Rep. Stephen Neal, D-N.C., and on behalf of 6th District Democratic candidate Robin Britt, said Jim Taylor, a spokesman for Neal.

LAST SUNDAY MORNING AT 9:15 ANDY ROOK LEFT HOME!

It wasn't the first time. It happens almost every week. You see, Andy spends Sunday morning with about 15 other kids his age at the First Pentecostal Holiness Church. His parents don't let Andy go off by himself. They take him.

Andy loves every minute of it. And his mom and dad love it too. Not just because of the way Andy is growing. But because of the way the church helps the whole family stay closer together.

Maybe you should think about leaving home next Sunday morning! If you do, bring the whole family.

Hoping To Balance Budget By 1987

By OWEN ULLMANN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Undaunted by its past failure to eliminate federal deficits, the Reagan administration is hoping to justify its support for a balanced-budget constitutional amendment by finding a way to balance the budget in 1987.

Congressional and private budget analysts are dubious, however, that the administration will be able to come up with a believable plan for converting the projected $150 billion deficit in fiscal year 1983 to a surplus in just four years.

The administration had originally promised to balance the budget by 1984.

"You can balance any budget on paper," said Lawrence Kudlow, chief economist for the budget office.

But economists said any plan must be based on budget cuts politically acceptable to Congress and credible assumptions about the economy.

One administration official said a balanced budget in 1987 is one of the "guiding principles" budget director David A. Stockman is considering this fall as part of a fiscal 1984 budget program that will be sent to Congress in January. The official, who asked not to be identified, said the idea is still tentative and may yet be dropped. "There is no firm presidential directive to achieve that goal," he said. "It may come, but not at this point."

A Republican-led attempt to approve the balanced budget amendment in the current Congress died Oct. 1 when the House failed to produce the required two-thirds majority.

"It's reasonable to assume the president would favor it (a balanced budget in 1987) since he is seeking a balanced budget amendment," the administration official said. "This would show it's not a pie-in-the-sky idea but a goal he is shooting for."

PCA Holds Dinner Meet

Over 600 people attended the recent annual dinner meeting of the Pitt-Greene Production Credit Association, according to PCA President Arnold B. Parris.

David Harold Smith, chairman of the board of directors, presided during the business session that included a report of the directors for the past year, a financial report by the president and the nomination of one director. The election to fill the expiring directorship will be held via mail.

Entertainment for the evening was provided by Jeanne Robertson, a former Miss North Carolina and nationally known humorist.

Directors of the PCA are Smith, Arthur Roscoe Barnhill Jr. and Wayne K. Stokes, all of Pitt County, and James E. Manning and T. Weldon Shingleton, both of Greene County.

The association makes short and intermediate-term loans to farmers, ranchers and growers in Pitt and Greene counties. Main offices are located at 100 E. First St. in Greenville and branch offices are operated in Snow Hill and Farmville.

President Reagan, whose current term expires in 1984, has not said whether he will seek a second term, but some administration officials have hinted he will.

Budget experts outside the administration, however, believe the goal of a balanced budget by fiscal 1987 is almost beyond reach given forecasts showing the deficit climbing above $200 billion in 1984 without major savings in Social Security and defense, higher taxes and a strong economic recovery.

Prospects for reducing the red ink are diminished by Reagan's current stands against another tax increase or significant military spending cuts and by forecasts showing only moderate economic growth.

"It would be an extremely difficult task," said another congressional budget analyst.

"It would not be totally out of the question," added a third congressional budget source, who, like the others, did not want to be identified.

Unless the president changes his mind about taxes and defense, "you would virtually have to wipe out the basic day-to-day operations of the government, including the courts, Congress, the IRS," he said.

"Do I expect a balanced budget by 1987? Definitely not," said Rudolph Penner, chief economist for the budget office during the Ford administration. "But that doesn't mean the president can't put together a program of budget changes (acceptable to Congress) and economic assumptions that might be in the ballpark of credibility."

The administration's most recent forecast, prepared last July, predicts a deficit of $92.6 billion for 1984 and $58.5 billion in 1987. But administration officials concede those numbers are unrealistically low.

The non-partisan Congressional Budget Office forecasts a $152 billion deficit by 1985, and the Senate Budget Committee foresees deficits of $190 billion to $220 billion from 1984 through 1986 if no further spending cuts or tax increases are approved.

If Reagan refuses to budget on raising taxes or cutting defense spending, Stockman will have to base a balanced budget in 1987 on Draconian cuts in domestic programs, including Social Security and Medicare. In addition, the economy would have to be much healthier than most economists think is possible.

The state of the economy is a vital element in budget planning because of the way it affects anticipated spending and revenues.

The huge deficits confronting the government now stem largely from three years of no economic growth and the first 10 percent unemployment rate since 1940.

LEBANESE ARMY MOVES INTO VILLAGE — Israeli troops watch as trucks carrying Lebanese army troops pass their position on the road outside the village of Kfar Matta, located 15 miles southeast of Beirut Thursday. The Lebanese moved 200 troops into the area to police a cease-fire between

To Expand Probe Into Sen. Soles' Involvement

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The State Bureau of Investigation's director says an investigation of state Sen. R.C. Soles Jr.'s alleged involvement in Columbus County corruption will be expanded.

"We are looking into those allegations," said director Haywood Starling.

Meanwhile, Soles says he has done nothing to warrant any charges against him.

Soles' alleged part in the alleged vote-buying first surfaced at the conclusion of a federal probe of corruption in southeastern North Carolina, dubbed "colcor." Allegations of Soles' involvement also are contained in a 100-page FBI report filed in U.S. District Court on Tuesday.

That report is part of a sentencing memorandum for Ed Walton Williamson, a former Columbus County commissioner who pleaded guilty to bribery charges.

Soles said the federal report contains nothing new. "I don't see that there is anything new in it that hasn't been said before," he said.

The document states that Soles "expressly authorized" efforts to ensure the passage of a mixed-drink referendum in the town of Bolton through vote-buying. The report says Soles met with two undercover FBI agents on Dec. 15, 1981.

In that meeting, which was secretly tape-recorded, Soles is reported to have said he would "play ball" with the agents, who were posing as underworld figures wanting to open a nightclub as a front for several illegal operations.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Doug McCullough said most of the information in the report was given to the SBI in August. The SBI has not been given any evidence in the case, McCullough said.

U.S. attorneys say they also will ask Williamson to testify before a grand jury after Christmas about an alleged interest-free $100,000 loan to 7th District Rep. Charles Rose. The allegation was made public this week in FBI reports filed in U.S. District Court when Williamson was sentenced to 10 years in prison.

McCullough said he will send the information to the Federal Election Commission, which oversees financial disclosure statements.

Congressmen are required by the Ethics in Government Act to report income they receive outside their $60,662.50 salary.

Soviet Plane Near Coast

CAPE HATTERAS, N.C. (AP) — A U.S. Navy spokesman says the pilot of a Soviet reconnaissance aircraft who entered United States airspace Wednesday apparently did not plan anything malicious.

"There were no kind of hostile maneuvers," said Lt. Cmdr. Dale Smith of the Atlantic Fleet Public Affairs Office in Norfolk, Va. "It was pretty clearly simply a reconnaissance mission."

Officials think the plane, a Tupolev Tu-95 Bear D, entered U.S. air space to observe the USS Saratoga, which had just left naval shipyards after extensive overhauling.

The aircraft came within 90 miles of Cape Hatteras at its closest point to the coast, Smith said.

"Officially, I can't tell you why he was there," he said. "But it doesn't take a genius to figure out what they were doing considering the Saratoga was just coming out of the yards after a significant overhaul."

Two F-106s from an Atlantic City, N.J., unit pursued the plane until two F-15s from Langley Air Force Base in Virginia took over. At 8:30 a.m., two F-14s from the Naval Air Station Oceana in Virginia pursued the plane with two F-4 Phantom Jets from Seymour Johnson Air Force Base in Goldsboro flying backup. By The Associated Press

Three weeks after seven people died from taking poisoned Tylenol capsules, reports of contaminated products on grocery-store shelves kept cropping up, with new consumer complaints about mouthwash, nasal spray, soda pop and rice.

Health officials confirmed Thursday that a bottle of 7-Up bought at a Florida convenience store contained bleach after a man reported mouth irritation while taking a drink.

Also in Florida, hundreds of bags of white rice were voluntarily withdrawn from shelves in 114 7-Eleven stores in three counties after a woman reported becoming nauseated after eating it. Authorities said the rice might have been accidentally contaminated by chemicals, however.

In the Chicago suburb of Oak Park, Ill., police on Thursday told retail stores to check bottles of Listerine mouthwash for possible contamination after a woman reported mouth burns from an unwrapped bottle.

And a Texas man was hospitalized Thursday after experiencing nose pain from inhaling nasal spray that "was more acidic than normal," authorities said.

In Jacksonville, Fla., Edward Allen Parker, 27, reported he took a swig of 7-Up on Sunday and got a mouthful of bleach.

Parker said he spat out the soda and turned in the bottle to authorities. Parker said he did not swallow any.

"There was no doubt about it. It smelled like bleach and it tasted as household bleach," said Sander Bellman, director of chemistry for the Food and Drug Administration laboratory in Atlanta.

Officials of the Pepsi-Cola 7-Up bottlers in Jacksonville have expressed disbelief at Parker's claim.

Parker said his brother, Alton, bought the 7-Up in a 32-ounce glass bottle with a twist-off cap at a Zippy Mart store. Alton Parker said the bottle had been kept in the refrigerator after purchase.

Health officials were testing samples of rice from a Lakeland, Fla., store after 7-Eleven officials ordered hundreds of bags of the product pulled from store shelves in Tampa, St. Petersburg, Lakeland and Clearwater on Thursday.

A woman reported she and her family became nauseated after eating Martha White rice, and returned a half-full bag uneaten, police said.

A Polk County Health Department inspector found the remaining rice "had a peculiar odor," like insecticide, said Al Hudson, Polk County sanitarian supervisor.

There was no answer after office hours Thursday at the Martha White rice distributor's headquarters in Nashville, Tenn.

The rice was recalled "strictly as a precautionary measure," said 7-Eleven attorney Mike Sunshine in Atlanta.

Sunshine declined to speculate where the contamination could have occurred. Sanitarian Bill Melton said it might have occurred at the warehouse or by an insecticide sprayed in the store by exterminators.

In Oak Park, Ill., Sadie Daughtrey, 38, apparently suffered mouth burns from sulfuric acid from a bottle of Listerine that had been on the store shelf without the mouthwash's normal brown paper wrapping.

Police Chief Keith Bergstrom said the burning occurred Sunday, the same day she bought the mouthwash at a Jewel Food Store in Oak Park.

Mrs. Daughtrey was treated and released from Oak Park Hospital, said Larry Ellis, director of Oak Park's Public Health Department.

"It appears that this is a totally isolated incident that has no relation to any other incidents of a similar nature that have been reported in recent weeks," Jack Sholl, a spokesman for Warner Lambert Co. of Morris Plains, N.J., said. "We do not know of any other incidents involving Listerine."

Bergstrom said a second bottle without the usual wrapping was confiscated by police from the same store and taken to a state crime laboratory, where it was found not to contain the corrosive acid.

Health department officials told police Thursday that Mrs. Daughtrey's bottle did contain "a quantity" of sulfuric acid.

In Texas, Gary L. Dozzi, 30, was admitted to Methodist Central Hospital in Dallas after complaining of redness and irritation around his nose when he inhaled nasal spray, said Ed Spencer, a Dallas police spokesman.

"There's nothing to indicate now that it's more than an isolated incident," Spencer said.

Dozzi was in stable condition after using Vicks' Sinex Long Acting Nasal Spray, said Dr. Richard Casey, the emergency room physician who treated him.

"He squirted it in his nose once and it was not so bad. But he did it again and it was very, very painful," Casey said.

Dozzi bought the spray Thursday at a Kroger store in the Oak Cliff section of Dallas, Spencer said.

Police pulled the store's stock of the product and took it to the Dallas County Institute of Forensic Sciences for testing, Spencer said.

A preliminary test of the spray purchased by Dozzi showed the liquid "was more acidic than normal," Spencer said. More tests were scheduled today, he said.

The spray's maker, Richardson-Vicks Inc., believes "this to be an isolated incident," said Thomas Komisarjevsky, a spokesman for Hill & Knowlton, the public relations firm representing Richardson-Vicks.

Sweden Eyes Improvements In Anti-Sub Capability

By HARALD MOLLERSTROM
Associated Press Writer
STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — The government is considering improvements in its anti-submarine warfare capabilities after a frustrating, three-week-old search for a foreign sub failed to snare the intruder.

Another cat-and-mouse sub chase Thursday also proved fruitless, but an opinion poll shows the navy's image has not been tarnished by the failures.

Two truck drivers reported spotting what looked like a sub conning tower Thursday, sparking a new hunt off the nation's south coast. But a defense staff spokesman said, "I don't think we'll find anything."

The navy dropped tons of depth charges into Hors Bay after the periscope of the first alien sub was sighted Oct. 1 on the doorstep of the top secret Musko naval base.

Naval officers later revealed that much of the explosive attack fell on old refrigerators and other metallic junk littering the bottom of the bay about 30 miles south of Stockholm.

Ironically, the Hors Bay search began on the day the navy mothballed its last destroyer, a victim of repeated budget cuts that have left the service with a slim 13 percent of the nation's annual military outlay.

"We can't afford the destroyers," navy spokesman Capt. Sven Carlsson said recently.

The Swedish navy, once rated as one of the world's top 10, now relies on about 30 patrol boats, a dozen submarines and two helicopter units for anti-submarine operations along a 1,600-mile coast.

On Thursday, Vice Adm. Bengt Schuback, commander of the southern military region, told his officers he would try to upgrade the area's anti-submarine fighting capabilities but added that the navy lacked sufficient funds.

"Unfortunately, our resources are not good enough to carry out the tasks we are assigned," Schuback said.

Prime Minister Olof

Palme's Socialist government, which took office at the height of the sub search, appointed former Foreign Minister Sven Andersson to head a commission to investigate the operation.

Defense Minister Borje Andersson said the commission would study organizational and other measures that might be needed to prevent similar disappointing results in any future intrusion. He refused to elaborate.

The navy had hoped its carpet bombing of Hors Bay would force the alien craft to surface so that it would be identified before the eyes of the world.

Neutral Sweden, ever wary of its powerful Soviet neighbor on the other side of the Baltic Sea, was careful never to pin an identity tag on the intruder submarine. But officials left little doubt that they believed the craft came from the Soviet bloc.

Some sources said it was a sort of ritual for Soviet sub captains to earn their laurels on missions penetrating deep inside the rocky Swedish coastal waters. Other military experts noted that the deep harbors lining the long Swedish coast would offer safe launch pads to missile-firing subs from the East or the West in times of war.

The Swedes also were quick to recall an incident a year ago when a Soviet submarine, carrying nuclear-tipped torpedoes, ran aground deep inside Swedish waters. Sweden towed the craft back out to sea after holding it in the international spotlight for about a week.

The Soviets criticized Sweden during the sub search, saying it was hyping the event through the international media and claiming that it was damaging East-West relations.

When the alien periscope popped up in Hors Bay, the navy threw 40 patrol boats and 11 helicopters into the hunt. But navy officers repeatedly stressed that no nation had ever succeeded in forcing a submarine to the surface in peacetime.

The search is continuing, although it appears to be more of an exercise than anything else.

Far from criticizing the naval campaign, a poll released Thursday indicated that 80 percent of those questioned wanted the navy to take an even tougher tack toward intruding submarines.

Results of the survey showed 64 percent of those asked retained their confidence in the military despite the fruitless search. The poll said 49 percent felt the military had done a good job, while 20 percent said it had not.

PCB Protesters Vow To Continue The Fight

WARRENTON, N.C. (AP) — State officials say they hope a public hearing next week concerning the state's PCB landfill in Warren County will help stem the protests surrounding the dump.

That hearing is sponsored by the state Department of Crime Control and Public Safety and is scheduled for next Wednesday at 6:30 p.m. Department Secretary Heman Clark will moderate the hearing, spokesman Russ Edmonston said.

When asked whether he thought the meeting would mollify landfill critics, Edmonston replied, "I hope so."

The officials will make a short presentation about plans for environmental and health monitoring around the landfill and other related issues, Edmonston said.

But some PCB protesters — who have been protesting the dump since it opened over five weeks ago in Afton — say it will take more than a public hearing to please them.

Retired mechanic Henry

Rooker said he wants the PCB removed.

"I want the same truck that brought this stuff up here to haul it out," he said. "And they will or they'll get no rest from the people of Warren County."

The Rev. Luther Brown, pastor of Coley Springs Baptist Church near the landfill, said citizens will not be quiet. During the past few weeks, the church has been a meeting place for protesters.

"The protests and rallies will not stop," he said. "We won't stop until we get some satisfaction from the government."

He and others like Kenneth Ferruccio, president of Warren County Citizens Concerned About PCB, say racial considerations prompted state officials to locate the dump in Warren County, which has a high percentage of blacks.

"That dump stands for a symbol of discrimination," said Ferruccio, who is white. "It symbolizes just about everything civil rights legislation is supposed to prevent. It has to go."

John Hawkins, chairman of the Warren County Republican Party, said the landfill has united blacks and whites. "It's the first time I know where blacks and whites have come together side by side to fight for one cause," he said.

More than 500 arrests have been made since the protests began. Most arrests occurred the first week, when hundreds of people gathered near the dump and tried to keep away trucks carrying PCB-tainted soil.

Over 6,000 truckloads of the tainted soil have been dumped at the landfill since Sept. 15. The cleanup operation is expected to be completed by the end of this month.

Catholic Scholar Sees Changes

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

An analyst of Roman Catholic trends predicts the church eventually will have both women and married men as priests, once the present shrinkage of celibate male priests compels it.

It could take 20 years or longer but it's certain to happen under pressures of intensifying need for priests, says the Rev. Richard P. McBrien, head of the theology department at the Uni-

Up to that point, in his first three years in office, the pope had seemed to be "one who would use the vehicles of authority to repress rather than encourage discussion and free inquiry," McBrien says.

But he adds that events this year have altered that papal image, particularly the pope's modified tone and message on his visit to Great Britain and his turn to conciliatory dealings with the Jesuits.

The pope remains a "conservative man," McBrien says, but adds:

"We're also dealing with a man who is not absolutely rigid, and who obviously is open to growth — as we all have to be — and who does versity of Notre Dame.

He also sees recent signs that Pope John Paul II is becoming more open to change, in contrast to earlier impressions he gave of unbending conservatism.

Until the end of last year, McBrien says he was convinced the pope was "firmly fixed as a conservative pope, one who is not going to encourage dialogue, one who would not be tolerant of dissent."

Cite Bible By Mormons

NEW YORK (AP) — Mormons have published their own new edition of the King James version of the Bible, coupled with a big section of added materials, and it has received the salutes of an interfaith group.

An "outstanding service to the Bible cause," the Laymen's National Bible Committee said in a citation to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints for the new work.

Seven years in preparation by scholars and researchers, the book has 2,448 pages, 1,184 pages for the Old Testament, 406 for the New Testament, and 842 pages of appendix materials, including maps, cross-references and topical guides.

Boyd K. Packer, member of the church's ruling Council of 12, said the extra data provides the "most comprehensive compilation of scriptural information" about Jesus ever assembled.

He said "the work affirms an acceptance of, a reverence for and a testimony to the Lord Jesus Christ."

Church Marks 150th Birthday

Rountree Christian Church will hold its annual homecoming Sunday to celebrate the church's 150th anniversary.

A special "Heritage Day" program is planned with worship services beginning at 11 a.m. with Dr. Bernard Meece as the guest speaker. A traditional dinner on the grounds will follow the service.

At 2 p.m. a program sketching Rountree's heritage will be presented. Old photographs, books and documents pertaining to Rountree and its members, past and present, will be on display.

MUSIC PROGRAM

BELL ARTHUR — A special music program will open a week of revival at Bell Arthur United Methodist Church Sunday at 7:30 p.m.

Featured during the music program will be "The Anchors" gospel group.

The Rev. Ellis Bedsworth of Bethel will be the guest speaker for revival services Monday through Friday at 7:30 p.m. There will be special music each night.

MISSIONARY

Missionary Lula Slade of Tarboro will preach at Holly Hill Free Will Baptist Church Sunday at 7:30 p.m. Music will be rendered by the Stephenson Singers of Grimesland.

seem to appreciate some elements of contemporary theology."

McBrien is the author of several books on reforming trends in the church and also of the recent "Catholicism," a two-volume compendium of Catholic concepts and teachings. He also writes a weekly column syndicated in the Catholic press.

He made his comments in an interview with the Catholic Voice, the Oakland, Calif., diocesan newspaper, while in California for a recent lecture series, and later corroborated them for this summary.

He says the pope wisely "backed off" from a confrontation with the Jesuits at a reconciling meeting with the order's provincial superiors, after earlier warning them of "secularizing tendencies" and taking direct control of the order.

But then at the meeting, he gave a "relatively conciliatory talk," McBrien notes, and most important, announced they could go ahead with plans for electing their own superior general.

A "positive sign," McBrien says. "I think the pope realized he had been badly advised about problems within the Jesuit ranks."

If he really was an inflexible ideologue, McBrien adds, "he would have said, 'Well, even if all the Jesuits leave...so what? I've got to defend the truth.' He didn't though."

"He showed himself to be a man of more political realism than some may have given him credit for."

McBrien also sees papal moderation in John Paul's talks in Britain this year, in contrast to those he gave in the United States in 1979.

Unlike the U.S. visit, "the trip to Great Britain was thoroughly cast in an ecumenical way," McBrien says. Also, "whenever the pope spoke on issues like divorce and remarriage and birth control in the United States, he did so in a way that many people felt was harsh. In Great Britain, he was just the opposite."

As for the future church allowing women and married men in the priesthood, McBrien says it will stem from a "real crisis" now developing in regard to declining entries into the celibate priesthood.

"In general in this country, bishops know about it and some of them are worried about it, but nothing will be done," he says. "They'll put no pressure on the Vatican, for example, to change."

But he says the change eventually will come as the shrinkage in the quantity and quality of priests becomes "so bad" that the church will "be forced to do something."

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market kept its rally going today with an advance that put the Dow Jones industrial average within 10 points of its all-time closing high.

The Dow Jones average of 30 big-name stocks, which closed Wednesday and Thursday at new highs since early 1973, rose 5.97 to 1,042.95 by noon.

The average reached its record closing high of 1,051.70 on Jan. 11, 1973.

Advances outnumbered declines by almost 2 to 1 among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said hopes for still-lower interest rates gave the market some fresh impetus.

Before the market opened, New York's Chemical Bank cut its prime lending rate from 12 to 11½ percent, putting the benchmark rate at its lowest level in more than two years.

There was widespread speculation that the Federal Reserve might announce a reduction in the discount rate after the market's close. The discount rate, the charge the Fed imposes on loans to financial institutions, currently stands at 9½ percent.

Gainers on the active list included Citicorp, up 1½ at 38; Datapoint, up 2½ at 22; Warner Communications, up 1½ at 54½; and May Department Stores, up 1¼ at 38.

The NYSE's composite index rose 46 to 80.18. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index gained 1.69 to 325.53.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 42.69 million shares at noon, against 62.10 million at the same point Thursday.

Self-Sufficient

KARACHI, PAKISTAN (AP) — After 30 years of depending on the U.S. for food, Pakistan has shipped its first wheat exports the federal Food Ministry says.

The ministry reported Thursday that 1,300 tons of wheat, the first of 50,000 tons contracted for, have been exported to Iran.

Pakistan began importing U.S. wheat in 1952, with an average of 1 million tons a year. In 1978, after harvest failures, the government began experimenting with new strains and by 1980 reached self-sufficiency in food production, and now produces about 1 million tons surplus.

Colored Frames

But Not Lens

CORNING, NY (UPI) — Sunglass wearers who like bright colors should get them in the frames, not lenses, says a spokesman for a major sunglass manufacturer.

The most popular lens color is gray, based on consumer research by Corning Glass Works. Thirty-six percent of its customers select this shade; 25 percent choose brown; 12 percent, green and 11 percent, blue.

Researchers say two new lens colors that are expected to increase in popularity are copper and amber.

The copper colored lenses are designed for wear while driving. They filter out selected light rays so signs and road conditions appear in sharp contrast, especially in fog or haze.

The amber-colored ones are designed for hunting, golf, tennis and other activities where high contrast vision is important.

Halloween Habit

Said Undimmed

KANSAS CITY, MO. (UPI) — Hard times may dim some of America's holiday celebrations but not when it comes to Halloween habits, says a spokesman for a major greeting card designer and distributor.

John Dinardo predicts Americans will exchange more Halloween cards for this Oct. 31 than ever before — 25 million of them, a 6 percent increase over 1981.

"Despite the troubled economy, the popularity of Halloween continues with the country's growth in population because family relationships do not change even under economic duress, and it's mostly kids who send Halloween cards," says the manager of public information for Hallmark Cards.

Dinardo says the annual increase in Halloween card sales has remained fairly constant over the past five years, with a 25 percent jump overall since 1978, when 20 million were sold.

Pirates Close Out Home Slate Vs. Illinois State

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

It seems early in the year, but Saturday afternoon in Ficklen Stadium, East Carolina University closes out its home season.

The Pirates face Illinois State, 1-5, in the annual Homecoming game with kickoff set for 2 p.m.

Because the Pirates have only four home games this year, the abbreviated home slate ends, and ECU must face its final four opponents on the road this year.

East Carolina brings in a 3-3 record to the game — while head coach Ed Emory brings along with him a newly extended contract, having been awarded two extra years — through the 1984 season. The announcement of that was made yesterday morning by Chancellor John M. Howell.

The two teams will be meeting for the first time, but the Pirates may have a little more idea of what they are facing than do the Redbirds.

Illinois State comes into the game following a 48-14 drubbing by Wichita State two weeks ago. The Redbirds had the past weekend off. Wichita State, however, was the team that ECU's offensive coordinator Larry Beckish coached in the same position last week, and he's very familiar with what they can — and did do against Illinois State.

Wichita State quarterback Prince McJunkins passed for 243 yards and three scores and rushed for 10-8 and another touchdown in the contest. Both his total yards and passing yards were career highs, and a 79-yard TD pass in the game was a single play best as he hit on 14 of 21 passes.

ISU, however, held a 14-7 lead in the second period, showing that they are capable of showing a tough offense and defense.

It's that offense that has Emory and his staff worried. While by all rights, the Redbirds should be considered the same type mark FSU considered the Pirates last week, Emory warns that ISU is a good passing team — and those are the type teams that give the Pirates the most problem.

Illinois State's multiple-I offense has accounted for 1,095 yards passing in six games, as quarterback John Coppens has hit on 46 of 92 passes for 547 yards and three touchdowns. He's had six intercepted. Steve Moews, who opened at quarterback, but was beaten out by Coppens, has hit on 41 of 102 passes for 548 yards and one score with eight intercepted. He is now in a backup role to Coppens.

The chief target for their throws has been Clarence Collins, the split end, who has pulled in 27 for 425 yards and two touchdowns. Chris Bowers, the fullback, has 18 receptions for 144 yards while Marlon Young, at flanker, has 16 for 261 yards and a score. Tight end Norm Dennison has caught 12 for 157 yards.

On the ground, the Redbirds have had less success. They've rushed for only 632 yards in six games, just over 100 yards a game, led by tailback Kevin Jones with 296 yards. Bowers had added 179 yards, while backup tailback Virgil Winters has 156 yards.

On the defensive side of the ball, safety Mike Prior has six interceptions, leading a defense that has picked off 13 so far this year, returning one for a touchdown.

"They've thrown the ball close to 200 times in six ball games," Emory said in looking at the Redbirds, "and they've got close to 1,100 yards passing. And they should be awfully thirsty after watching the films of our Florida State game."

While Emory said that ISU doesn't have the same talent Florida State has, it can perform well. "Collins is an outstanding receiver, and I'll expect them to put the ball up something like 50 times in the game."

The coach feels his offense has to control the ball Saturday and not turn it over anything like the six times FSU took it away. "But we're going to open it up and try to get better," he said.

"I still think we can have a good season. We have a chance to win all five of our remaining games if we get everything in order and don't have anymore damaging injuries."

And Emory promised that the Pirates would not be looking through ISU toward their next meeting — that with nationally ranked West Virginia.

"Illinois State isn't the type of team that you do that with. If you get caught off guard and have a lot of self-pity, they can kill you," he said.

ECU's offense is paced by a fairly balanced attack. Quarterback Greg Stewart has hit on 35 of 72 passes for 630 yards, four touchdowns, and ten interceptions, four of those coming against FSU. Backup Kevin Ingram has made good on just 18 of 48 for 250 yards and one score. He's had two picked off.

On the ground, tailback Tony Baker has rushed for 405 yards, while fullback/tailback Earnest Byner has collected 326 yards. Backup fullback Reggie Branch has 192 yards, while Ingram has rushed for 111.

Top receivers are flanker Carlton Nelson and split end Ricky Nichols, both with 13 catches. Nelson had 272 yards and Nichols, 265. Both have two touchdowns.

Kickoff — 2 p.m.

Crowd — 15-20,000 (est.) in Ficklen Stadium. Capacity is 35,000. Tickets are still available.

On the air — WITN-FM (93.3) and throughout eastern North Carolina on other stations on the Pirate Sports Network.

Last meeting — none. First meeting between the two schools.

Facts & figures — ISU: Offense — Multiple I, Defense — 5-2; ECU: Offense — Multiple I; Defense — 5-2.

ISU is coached by Bob Otolski, who is in his second year. ISU was 3-7-0 in Otolski's first year last season. ECU is coached by Ed Emory, who is in his third year. Emory is 12-16-0 in his three years at ECU.

ISU's offensive line averages 228 pounds to 238 for ECU's defensive line; ECU averages 252 pounds across its offensive front compared to 233 pounds for the ISU defensive line.

ISU starts two seniors, seven juniors, eight sophomores and three freshman while ECU starts seven seniors, 11 juniors, three sophomores and one freshman.

Injuries — ISU: none reported; ECU: DL Barry Smith (ankle, lost for year), TB Jimmy Walden (ankle, doubtful), LB P.J. Jordan (ankle, questionable).

Key matchups — ECU quarterback Greg Stewart versus the ISU secondary. Stewart (72-35-10 630 4 TDs) threw four interceptions against FSU last week and faces an ISU defensive backfield that is led by free safety Mike Prior. Prior ranked second in the nation in interceptions with six prior (no pun intended) to last week with six pickoffs. Only a sophomore, Prior intercepted three passes in four games last year. He has nine INTs in 13 games. The school record for interceptions in a career is 13. Prior also leads the Redbirds with 66 tackles and has broken up eight passes. He had 14 tackles in his team's loss to Wichita State two weeks ago. ISU has picked off 13 passes as a team while its foes have intercepted 14.

Capsule — ISU comes to Greenville having won only once in six games. ECU, on the other hand, is coming off a 56-17 loss to Florida State. When ECU lost to FSU, 63-7, two years ago, the Pirates lost their next game, 35-7, to Southern Mississippi. ISU lost to Wichita State, 48-14, two weeks. Offensive coordinator Larry Beckish came to ECU from Wichita State.

ECU unveiled a new offensive wrinkle last week — a "stacked-I" — in which the tight end lines up in a standing position between the fullback and the quarterback. Said Emory: "The idea is to keep from declaring our strength to one side or the other and confuse the defense."

Freshman Tony Baker leads ECU in rushing with 405 yards in 66 carries and four TDs. Carlton Nelson and Ricky Nichols lead the Pirates in receptions with 13 each. Nelson is averaging 20.9 a catch, Nichols 20.4.

Notes — This is the only afternoon football game at Ficklen Stadium in 1982. Three special promotions are scheduled: One, a parachutist will float in with the game ball just before kickoff; two, everyone entering the stadium will receive a free bumper sticker compliments of Domino's Pizza; three, Band Day will be observed immediately following the game, with some 30 high school bands expected for the game and the competition afterwards.

Fifteen seniors will play their last home game in Ficklen Stadium on Saturday. All 15 will serve as captains. Those 15 are: Moe Bennett (LB), Tom Carnes (OL), Marvin Cobb (TB), Martin Daniel (NG), Mark Ervin (NG), Carlton Nelson (FL), Smokey Norris (SS), Sam Norris (SS), Larry O'Roark (SE), Jody Schulz (DE), Gerald Sykes (CB), Amos Twitty (LB), Oscar Tyson (OG), Deno White (FL) and Whitley Wilkerson (SN).

The Pirates have a chance at their ninth undefeated home season with a win tomorrow. The longest home winning streak in Ficklen Stadium is 16 wins, which covered from 1972 to 1975.

ECU's 1972 Southern Conference championship team, which started that 16-game home winning streak, returns here Saturday for a 10th anniversary celebration. The team, which was coached by Sonny Randle and had a 9-2 mark, will have a breakfast reunion and then be recognized at the game.

ECU has not had a winning season since 1979. Illinois State has not had a winning season since 1974 when the Redbirds were 6-5 under then-coach Gerry Hart.

Rampants Pound Wilson Fike, 34-0

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

The real Rose High School finally stood up last night to be counted.

After overcoming what had appeared to be an opening play touchdown by Wilson Fike last night, Rose came roaring back to take advantage of every break and gain a 34-0 victory in the contest.

Fike, a team not known for its passing, threw the bomb on the first play of the game, but a clipping penalty well behind the touchdown run cost the Golden Demons the score and they never came as close again.

Instead, Rose, led by Donnell Lee's running, took advantage of Fike mistakes in the first half, then dominated play in the second, to take the easy victory. Lee scored twice, on runs of three and 15 yards, while Tyrone Smith scored on a 59-yard pass from Kenny Kirkland, Bobby Buie went over from a yard out, and Rodney Smith scored on a four-yard scamper.

"Where have they been all year?" Rose coach Ronald Vincent said. "This is the way we should have been playing all year."

Vincent, who has seen his team bow to teams he felt they were easily capable of defeating, said he was really pleased with the team's performance this evening.

"We took advantage of the breaks for a change and got our offense and defense playing well together."

Oddly enough, Vincent felt the opening play of the game was the key to the victory. "When they had that touchdown called back, I really think it took something out of them. It was the turning point of the game." The coach admitted he was surprised that Fike went for the bomb on the first play — exactly what former ECU Pirate Club director Gus Andrews, now the Fike coach, wanted.

Instead of getting the touchdown, the 77-yard pass from Brian Harris to Tom Felton was called back to the Rose 43, where, after two more plays, Randy Warren intercepted the first of two passes he grabbed off during the game — and he came within a fingertip of picking off two others.

Rose, starting at its own 32, appeared stalled, but on fourth down at the 26, Kirkland was roughed as he punted, and that gave Rose a first down on the Rampant 41.

On the very next play, Smith beat the safety deep along the far sideline and pulled in a 59-yard scoring pass from Kirkland. Willie Levitt's PAT kick was blocked, however, leaving it at 6-0 with 8:28 left.

Both teams had quick turnovers in the next two series. Fike was again intercepted by Warren at the Wilson 49, but Kirkland threw it right back as Izel Jenkins picked off the ball on the next play at the Fike 22.

After an exchange of punts, Rose was again held and punted away. However, Albert Dickerson muffed the ball and Rose pounced on it at the eight, setting up another score.

On third and goal, Kirkland sneaked to the three, and from there, he pitched to Lee on the next play, who skirted the left side for the score with 32 seconds left in the quarter. Lee then threw a halfback pass to Smith for the two-point conversion, making it 14-0.

Fike suffered a big blow on the kickoff, as Jenkins, its starting tailback and safety was ejected from the game after he and a Rose player got into it on the sidelines. "I think that had to have an effect on their game," Vincent said. "Nobody else has his speed."

Rose got it back at the Fike 40 after an 11-yard punt return by Edward Frazier, and Lee broke away on second down to the 19, only to have it called back for a personal foul. That killed that drive.

Fike then launched a long drive that went as far as the Rose 27 before three penalties moved it back. From the 27, David Richardson raced to the nine, but a clip at the 14 moved it back to the 29. Fike was then charged with illegal procedure on the next play, and two plays later, Harris was sacked for a 20-yard loss. Another procedure penalty made it third and 37 from the Fike 46 — and despite a 15-yard pass completion on the play, Fike was forced to kick.

Rose drove 80 yards on the ensuing drive to make it 20-0. Using the sweep to great advantage, Lee ripped off runs of 12, 27 and 20 yards to move the ball down to the Fike 29. The drive appeared to stall there, but Frazier, on the reverse, added 15 yards for a first and goal at the five. Despite an offside penalty, Rose came back, with Lee getting ten yards on second down, to the one.

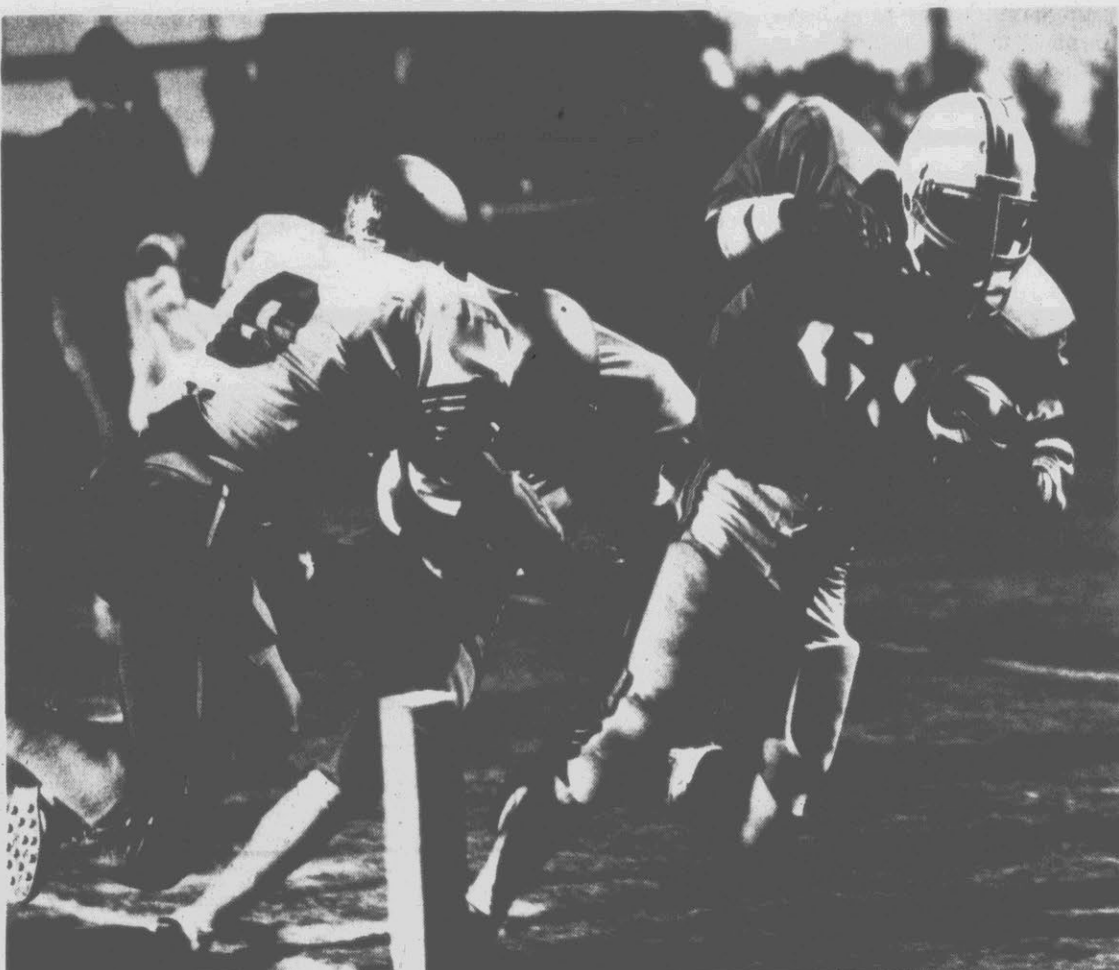

From there, reserve quarterback Bobby Buie pushed in on the sneak for the score and with 58 seconds left in the half, Rose was up 20-0 after Levitt's kick was wide.

Fike came back to the Rose 42 in the time left, but still gave up the ball on downs before the period ended.

Rose appeared marching on its opening drive of the second half, moving to the Fike 38 before a holding penalty killed the drive and a third-down halfback pass attempt by Lee was picked off by Willie Coley at the seven.

Rose got it back several plays later at the Fike 43 after a fumble, and took it in this time. Kirkland hit Tommy Bennett for 14 yards on the first play, and despite a 15-yard penalty on the next play, made up for most of it on a 17-yard pass to

Bands, Floats, Grins Greet Series Champs

ST. LOUIS (AP) —

Marching bands, floats, grinning politicians and a blizzard of red crepe and confetti, turned downtown St. Louis into a magical street carnival as more than 200,000 people celebrated the city's first baseball world championship since 1967.

Led by the 83-year-old Cardinals owner August A. Busch and Manager Whitey Herzog, the parade inched its way Thursday through a 15-block route lined up to 10-deep with fans.

"I couldn't be happier," said Busch, sipping at a bottle of the beer bearing his name. "This is wonderful."

Sitting next to Busch in the red convertible, Whitey Herzog waved to the crowd as they roared "Whitey! Whitey! Whitey!"

First baseman Keith Hernandez, his hair salted with confetti, waved to a chanting crowd as his daughter Jessie, 9, sat next to him and smiled in astonishment.

"I didn't know there would be this many people," she said.

Nestled in a corner of the truckbed for protection were Sue Hernandez and her youngest daughter.

"It was great, but it got a little rough," she said. "It was just the excitement. My little girl and I ended up on the floor of the truck because they pushed so."

As the procession neared Busch Stadium, the crowds grew thicker. Motorcycle policemen with screaming sirens escorted the vehicles, bumping fans as they surged forward to shake the hands of their heroes.

"This is the best thing to ever happen to St. Louis," Mayor Vincent C. Schoemehl Jr. said from a reviewing stand at the end of the parade route.

"I hope we never get over it," Schoemehl said. "This is something I'll remember for the rest of my life.

"For all you do," the mayor told the cheering throng as he read from a scroll proclaiming the day Fan Appreciation Day, "this day's for you."

We all got one right — we all picked Rose to win last night and we got it right.

Well, not really, but it was a nice try.

At any rate, since Rose has already played this week, we're going to use the North Pitt-SouthWest Edgecombe game as the panel's high school pick of the week.

The race continues to tighten up, as far as the standings are concerned. After seven weeks of the football season, we have a three-way tie for first place between Tom Baines, Rick Scoppe and this writer, all knotted at 60-22. Close behind come Joe Jenkins (what? out of last place?) and Vickie Spivey, tied for fourth at 57-25. Our guests have dropped into the basement with a 54-28 record.

Last week's guest, Norm Parker, the defensive coordinator at East Carolina, had only a 7-4 (we threw out the tie), but he beat offensive coordinator Larry Beckish, who turned in a 6-6 the week before.

Our guest this week is new East Carolina basketball coach Charlie Harrison, who is busy preparing for his first season with the Pirates.

Our high school picks last week resulted in a 6-0 mark, which brings us to 42-7-4 on the season.

There are several good games on the line, even with North Pitt-SW Edgecombe turned over to the panel, and Rose having already played.

First, Southern Nash visits Farmville Central. The Jaguars got a new breath of life last week with a badly needed victory over Charles B. Aycock. This time, the Jaguars seek to extend that and hopefully bring the year to a good finish for momentum going into next season. Southern has won but once this year — over Aycock — but we'll go with the Jaguars to have a happy Homecoming, 27-7.

Ayden-Grifton goes out of the conference to meet Lakewood, a 2-A team. Lakewood has had some frustrations this year, and have a chance to compare the Chargers to the Clinton Dark Horses, which defeated them earlier this year. And again, it will be no horse race, with the Chargers taking a 24-7 win.

Conley, fresh off its first victory of the year, travels to North Lenoir. The Hawks are in the thick of the Coastal Conference race, and have looked both good and bad this year. But they are riding a winning streak, and it will take a good game from the Vikes to win it. Not this time, North Lenoir wins, 21-6.

Elsewhere, it will be Greene Central over C.B. Aycock and Roanoke over Williamston.

North Pitt, after nearly pulling off a win over Ayden-Grifton, goes up against SouthWest Edgecombe this week. The Panthers have been the surprise team of the ECC this year, and a victory would just about assure them of a playoff spot.

It would be nice to see the Panthers in there, but we've got to go with SouthWest, by a 14-7 score. The panel, however, disagrees, giving North Pitt the nod, 4-2.

East Carolina entertains Illinois State in its final home game of the year. The Pirates can celebrate Ed Emory's new contract and wind up with an unbeaten season at home with the game. The Redbirds are no Florida State, but reportedly have a good passing attack. Could that spell trouble for the Pirates. The panel says no, 6-0, and we give the Pirates a 35-10 edge.

Our other concensus picks: Clemson over N.C. State; Tennessee over Georgia Tech; Texas over Southern Methodist; Ohio State over Indiana; Louisiana State over South Carolina; Maryland over Duke; Wake Forest over Virginia; Penn State over West Virginia; Vanderbilt over Mississippi; and Auburn over Mississippi State.

NLRB Counsel Enters NFL Strike

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chief counsel of the National Labor Relations Board is serving notice to the National Football League of plans to issue a complaint charging that management engaged in unfair labor practices.

At the same time, William A. Lubbers is hinting broadly that he'd drop the matter if the league's Management Council reached a labor contract accord with the striking NFL Players Association.

A statement issued Thursday in Lubbers' behalf noted that "before any complaint is issued, NFL will be given an opportunity to settle the (NLRB) case."

Implicit in any such settlement, however, is removal of a major obstacle toward ending the players' strike, now in its 32nd day.

Union chief Ed Garvey said the planned complaint "supports our long belief that they (the Management Council) have been refusing to bargain since February."

"The NLRB general counsel's statement confirms that this is indeed an unfair labor practice strike."

The Management Council response said in part: "The legal counsel of the NLRB, after a meeting with Ed Garvey, issued a series of unfair labor practice charges. He has not heard our opinion yet..."

"It is important to note that general counsel's action is nothing more than the filing of a lawsuit. We will have a hearing before an administrative law judge and, if necessary, appeal right to the NLRB, the court of appeals and the Supreme Court."

The complaint Lubbers said he has decided to issue —

although he did not say when — goes to the heart of the dispute between the NFLPA and the NFL Management Council, which have been striving to reach a contract agreement for the past week during intense negotiations in Cockeysville, Md.

It centers on the union's complaint that management has violated federal labor law by refusing to bargain in good faith with the NFLPA's negotiating committee.

The complaint planned by Lubbers, barring a settlement between the two parties, will be "based on charges filed by the National Football League Players Association and will allege that the NFL, through its Management Council, violated the National Labor Relations Act."

Lubbers said the complaint will be based in part on management's "refusal to bargain in good faith with the union (and) failing to give the union information relevant to collective bargaining."

The general counsel, who decides whether unfair labor practice complaints are worthy of further consideration by the NLRB, also said the complaint would be based on the union's assertion that management was "instituting changes in terms and conditions of employment without prior bargaining with the union, bypassing the union and attempting to deal directly with individual players, and informing players that proposed bonus monies would not be paid in the event of a work stoppage."

Any issuance of a formal complaint would send the case to trial before a National Labor Relations Board administrative law judge, and management could appeal his decision to the full five-member board. Any final board decision could still be subject to review by a federal appellate court.

D.H. Conley In Quarterfinals

BETHEL — After losing the first game of the afternoon, D.H. Conley's unbeaten Valkyries stormed back to take the next two from SouthWest Edgecombe and gain the quarterfinals of the State Volleyball Tournament.

SouthWest captured the first game of the afternoon, 15-12, putting Conley's back to the wall. But the Valkyries responded by taking a 15-7 victory in the second game to even things up. Conley then won the final game, 15-7, to eliminate the Lady Cougars.

Ann Garris served up seven straight points to spark Conley in the second game, while Jackie Daniels had what coach Martha McCaskill termed a "crucial ace" during the final game.

Conley's record now goes to 20-0 on the season, and they are one of eight teams remaining in the state.

The date, site and opponent for the next round was not known this morning, but McCaskill said that the next round must be completed by Monday.

Yarborough Claims Pole

ROCKINGHAM (AP) — Claiming his pole-winning run Thursday was the "best I've run all day," Cale Yarborough took the pole position for Sunday's NASCAR Winston Cup event, the American 500.

"The car feels perfect and the track is in good shape. These guys on the crew have done a tremendous job," Yarborough said after averaging 143.228 mph in his Valvoline Buick. His time broke the standard of 142.648 mph set in 1980 by Donnie Allison.

posted the second-fastest speed, was not as enthusiastic as Yarborough.

"I would say we have a pretty good run," Shepherd said. "I knew this morning it was going to be close. I guess the cloudy skies and cooler temperatures made it ideal for qualifying."

Shepherd, also in a Buick, posted a speed of 142.448 mph.

Buddy Baker was third at 142.443 in a Pontiac followed by Darrell Waltrip, who won last year's American 500 and is the current Winston Cup points leader, at 142.254 mph in his Buick. Waltrip said his performance could have been better.

"Well, we just ran fair," he said. "But, I guess when somebody puts a lap up there like Cale did, it can sometimes demoralize you."

David Pearson and Ricky Rudd filled the third row, Tim Richmond and Dale Earnhardt are in the fourth row while Bobby Allison and Harry Gant round out the top 10.

Joe Ruttman, Neil Bonnett, Mark Martin, Bill Elliott and Benny Parsons took positions 10 through 15.

Fike Downs Rose, 6-3

Trinity Routs Lifegate, 69-38

Mike Reynolds ran for two scores and took a pass for a third and John Moran scored twice to key Trinity to a 69-38 victory over Lifegate in a Flag Football game yesterday.

Moran scored twice — on runs of eight and 22 yards — to give Trinity a 13-0 lead early in the game. After Lifegate made it 13-6, Reynolds score from eight yards out to up the lead to 19-6.

Interceptions by Glenn Tripp and Jimmy Powers set up Trinity's next two TDs. Moran hit Reynolds for a 35-yard TD pass after Tripp's pickoff and Stan Parnamore scored on a 15-yard run after Powers' to up the lead to 31-6.

Reynolds later scored on a 32-yard run and Junior Godwin returned an interception 50 yards to make it 37-6. Trinity's final score of the half was a 39-yard run by David Casper, which gave Trinity a 50-12 lead at intermission.

Trinity upped its lead to 63-19 after three periods on a run of 23 yards by Tripp and a 27-yard pas from Dale Hudson to Randy McGowan.

Trinity's final TD came in the final period on a 12-yard pass from Murray Harris to Powers.

Lifegate drops to 2-2. Trinity is now 6-0 and travels to Edenton Saturday. Edenton is the defending state champion.

Tech Coach Excited About Playing No. 1 Huskies

By The Associated Press
You're only 3-3 on the year. You're playing the nation's top-ranked college football team this week and you're listed as a 20-point underdog. What do you do?

If you're Texas Tech Coach Jerry Moore, you get pretty excited about the whole thing. "I'd lie to you if I were to tell you our players weren't excited about playing Washington," said Moore. "In fact, we talked about Washington last week, going into the Rice game (won by Texas Tech 23-21)."

"I'm pretty open with our players and I told them, 'If we don't go down here and beat Rice, you can play Washington really tough but it won't mean very much.'"

The Red Raiders' road matchup against the top-ranked and 6-0 Huskies highlights this weekend's college football action. In other games involving The Associated Press Top Ten teams, No. 2 Pitt is at Syracuse, No. 3 Georgia is at Kentucky, No. 4 Southern Methodist is at No. 19 Texas, No. 5 Nebraska hosts Missouri, No. 6 Arkansas is at Houston, No. 7 Alabama hosts Cincinnati, and No. 9 Penn State is at No. 13 West Virginia. Eighth-ranked Arizona State and tenth-ranked North Carolina are idle.

In the Second Ten, No. 11 UCLA is at California, No. 12 Southern Cal hosts Oregon State, No. 14 Louisiana State plays host to South Carolina, No. 15 Notre Dame travels to Oregon, No. 18 Clemson is at North Carolina State, and No. 20 Oklahoma hosts Oklahoma State. No. 16 Miami of Florida and No. 17 Florida State have the week off.

"Playing the No. 1 team in the country ... a lot of people don't have the opportunity to be in a ballgame of that magnitude," said Moore.

"Every time they go out to play, they're playing for the national championship." Last year against the Red Raiders, the Huskies couldn't score a touchdown but posted a 14-7 victory on the strength of four Chuck Nelson field goals and a safety.

This year, the Huskies must defeat Texas Tech's option attack that features quarterback Jim Hart, who's averaging 137.7 yards per game this season.

"The South seems to run more of the option stuff while the West Coast seems to use more passing, with the pro-style setup," Moore said.

Syracuse's Orangemen, struggling at 1-5, lost to Penn State last week, 28-7. They'll be meeting a Top Ten team for the second week in a row when they face Pitt, 5-0, at the Carrier Dome.

Syracuse Coach Dick MacPherson will start one of two freshman quarterbacks — Todd Norley, who was 12-of-30 against Penn State, or Greg Christodulu, who got his only college start the game before.

"Todd didn't do very well, and I told him that," said MacPherson, referring to the Penn State game. "I told him, 'I thought you were nervous, I thought you'd have more poise, I understand that you're a freshman, and you got a lot of good experience and you'd better learn something from it.'"

While Syracuse has been hurt by inexperience at the quarterback slot, Pitt coach Foge Fazio has one of the country's best in Dan Marino.

Marino is 92-for-162 this season for 1,028 yards. But his interceptions outnumber his touchdown passes 14-8, causing some grumbling among demanding Pitt fans.

"Statistically, some people are not happy (with him)," Fazio said. "They expect a blowout no matter who you play. But he has been playing very well — checking off, calling the right plays, controlling the game. I don't think there is a college quarterback in the country who can do all the things Dan Marino can do."

The fourth-ranked Mustangs, 6-0, have the nation's longest major college winning streak — 10 games. The last team to beat them? Texas, by a 9-7 score last year.

"Texas will be ready to play us," said SMU's Craig James. "They usually don't lose two games in a row. We will have to play our best."

"There's not much you could say about their running backs (James and Eric Dickerson) that hasn't already been said, and unfortunately, it's all true," said Texas Coach Fred Akers. "They are big, fast and talented. Dickerson really put on an exhibition against Houston last week (SMU won, 20-14). He's amazing to be that big and have that kind of quickness and speed."

The Longhorns are coming off a 28-22 loss to Oklahoma two weeks ago.

Alabama, 5-1, dropped from second to seventh in the AP poll after a 35-28 loss to Tennessee last week. The Crimson Tide is favored to get back on the winning track against 4-2 Cincinnati, a team they've met only once ... in 1908. Alabama won that one, 16-0.

Bear Bryant, seeking his 321st coaching victory, didn't remember when he put Cincinnati on this season's schedule. Bearcat Coach Mike Gottfried said the game was scheduled 12 years ago.

Bryant said he is happy to be playing Cincinnati, mainly, he said, "because I'd like for our team to go up there sometime."

Notre Dame's Fighting Irish, 4-1, are coming off a 16-13 upset loss to Arizona. They get a chance to take out their frustrations against an 0-6 Oregon team.

"We certainly don't need Notre Dame coming in here angry over losing their first game last week," Oregon Coach Rich Brooks said, "but I guess that's the way our luck has gone this year."

"I have a feeling someone is going to jump out quickly and put four or five touchdowns on the board," Notre Dame Coach Gerry Faust said. "I just hope it's us."

"We should not be overpowered by Notre Dame," said Brooks. "Unless our defense is on the field too long."

Jaguars Blank S. Nash

STANHOPE — Halfback Toronto Moyer scored twice and a stingy defense held Southern Nash scoreless as Farmville Central downed the Firebirds, 29-0, last night in an Eastern Carolina Conference junior varsity game.

The win left Farmville 4-2 overall and 4-0 in the ECC and set up a showdown with Greene Central Thursday night in Snow Hill for the ECC title.

The Jaguars opened the scoring in the first period when cornerback Tim Joyner returned an interception 38 yards for a touchdown. The run for two failed but Farmville led, 6-0.

The Jaguars made it 14-0 at the half in the second period on a one-yard run by Edward Davis. Bobby Evans hit Dennis Tripp for the two point conversion.

Farmville then scored twice in the third period for its final total. Moyer, who rushed for 66 yards in eight carries, scored on a 34-yard run and Wesley Harris ran for the two points to make it 22-0.

Moyer then hit Bill Blount with a 28-yard pass later in the period. The PAT was kicked by Don May to make it 29-0.

The Jaguar defense was led by outside linebackers Kenny Evans (nine tackles) and Wilson Gay (eight tackles and one interception). Tripp, an inside linebacker, had seven tackles.

Farmville 6 8 15 0-29

D.H. Conley 0

North Lenoir 0

HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley and North Lenoir played to a 0-0 tie in a Coastal Conference junior varsity football game yesterday.

Neither team was able to generate enough offense to get the ball into the end zone during the contest.

The leading rusher for Conley was Joel Cox with 69 yards, but Coach Milt Sherman said the Baby Vikes were unable to be consistent on offense.

Defensively, Larry Thomas and Steve Mills led in tackles, while Leonard Johnson intercepted a pass and Thomas recovered a fumble.

Conley is now 5-1-1.

The Baby Vikes play host to West Craven next Thursday.

Fike Edges Rose By 1-0

WILSON — Wilson Fike broke open a defensive struggle with about 15 minutes left in the match yesterday to take a 1-0 soccer victory over Rose High School.

The Rampant defense, led by David Jester, Lewis Robbins, Greg Savage and Greg Fidler held Fike scoreless throughout the first half, as goalie Gregg Ward stopped all six shots in the half. He recorded ten saves for the day.

In the second half, it continued even until with about 20 minutes left, Fike began to press and Jim Mitchell scored from 15 yards out after about five more minutes of play.

Rose had a total of seven shots in the game, while Fike had 11.

"Our defense played another fine game," Coach Will Wiberg said. "We just haven't gotten enough offense the past two games. You can't expect to win if you can't put the ball in the net."

Wiberg singled out Kurt Hendrix and Allan Smith for their overall play in the game.

Rose is now 3-5-2 while Fike is 4-5-2. The Rampants take on unbeaten Wilson Hunt on Tuesday in their final regular season game of the year.

Roanoke Girls Lose Openers

TARBORO — Roanoke High School's entries into the Northeastern Conference tennis tournament were both eliminated yesterday in the first round.

Ginya Smith fell before Plymouth's Beth Robertson in split sets, 2-6, 6-1, 6-4. Then, Janet Clark was beaten by Tarboro's Jennifer Rodgers, 6-3, 6-3.

Frazier on the next. After two more plays took it to the 15, Lee went through the middle of the line for the final 15 and his second touchdown of the evening. Levitt's kick was good, making it 28-0 with 1:03 left in the quarter.

After holding Fike again, Rose took over on its own 49, and drove in once more. Again, the Demons were penalized for roughing the kicker on fourth down giving Rose a first down at the Fike 19. Reggie Smith picked up 17 yards on first down, and after the next two plays lost a yard each, Rodney Smith took a pitch out around the left side for the final four and the last touchdown. Levitt again kicked and it was 34-0 with 6:41 left.

Fike had a couple of threats after that, moving to the 43 before fumbling on one series, and to the 30 before two losses through them back and they failed to connect on a fourth and 22 pass.

Lee finished the game with 118 yards on 17 carries, his best game of the year.

"Donnell had an outstanding game tonight, and I thought Roderick Harrell had another fine game, especially with his blocking," Vincent said. "Our offense was well balanced."

Defensively, Vincent liked the play of linebacker Craig Dupree, end Frankie Carr, and Warren's play in the backfield.

"We got rid of a lot of our frustrations tonight. It was a really good victory for us."

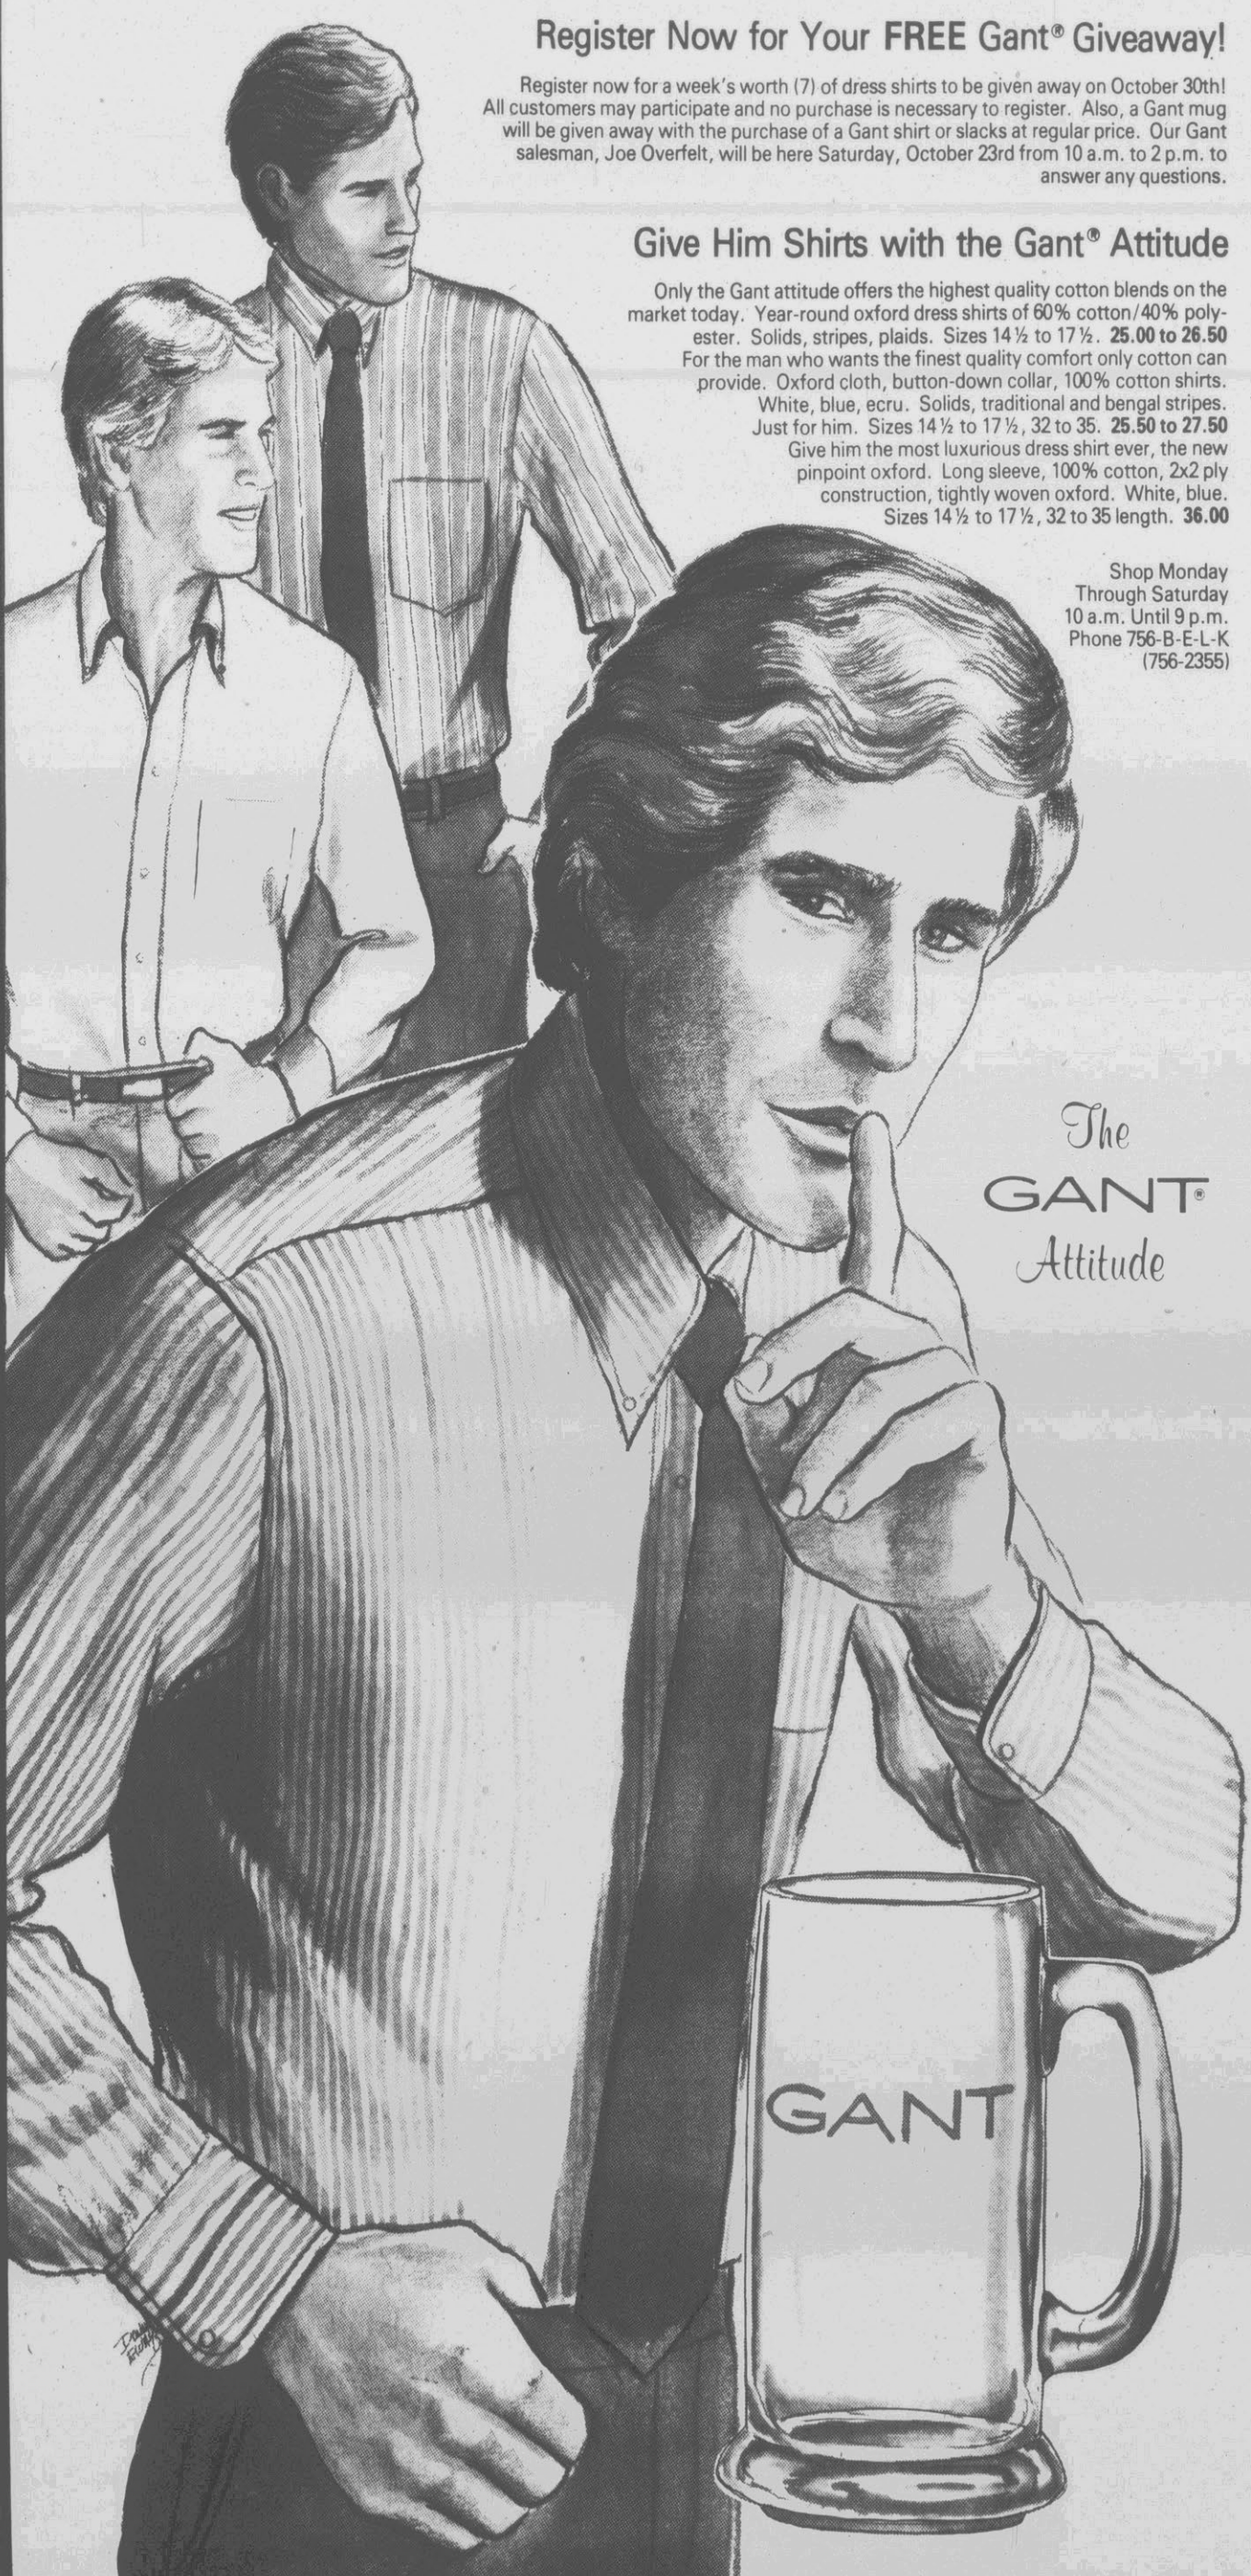

The win left Rose with a 4-4 overall mark, and 3-2 in Big East play. Fike falls to 5-3 overall and 3-2 in the league.

Rose travels to Wilson Hunt next Friday, while Fike entertains Northern Nash.

'Little Gloria' Mini-Series Will Start On NBC Monday

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Nearly 50 years ago, when times were hard and jobs were few, many Americans took comfort in knowing that even the rich have their troubles. Not much has changed.

Beginning Sunday, NBC brings to television the story of what columnist Cholly Knickerbocker dubbed the "poor little rich girl," the celebrated Gloria Vanderbilt custody case, in "Little Gloria... Happy at Last."

The four-hour miniseries Sunday and Monday nights is based on Barbara Goldsmith's 1980 non-fiction best seller.

NBC assembled a "Who's Who" cast to chronicle the 1934 custody battle. It includes Bette Davis, Angela Lansbury, Maureen Stapleton, Christopher Plummer, Martin Balsam, Glynis Johns and Barnard Hughes.

Lucy Gutteridge, a British actress with "Masterpiece Theater" and Broadway credits, is labeled a new comer by NBC, which is only true in the limited context of network commercial television. Her performance as the immature mother fighting for her daughter is especially moving.

Little Gloria, now known for her designer jeans, is the daughter of Gloria Morgan (Miss Gutteridge) and Reginald Vanderbilt (Plummer), a drinker who squandered away a $25 million fortune.

When Reggie dies in 1925 at 45, he leaves his 20-year-old wife penniless. Their child, however, is left a restricted $2.5 million trust fund by her grandfather, Cornelius Vanderbilt II.

Since little Gloria's mother is a minor, the surrogate court provides her a modest stipend to raise her daughter. She uses that money to travel with the child in Europe, leaving her with friends and relatives for weeks at a time.

After several years, the court orders the child to return to New York to get an American education. Little Gloria and her nurse (Miss Stapleton) move in with the girl's wealthy aunt, Gertrude Vanderbilt Whitney (Miss Lansbury).

While living a cozy existence with Aunt Gertrude, little Gloria is depicted as a girl ravaged by neuroses. The Lindbergh kidnapping and newspaper accounts of crazed behavior caused by the Depression fuel her paranoia, including fears her mother is going to hurt her.

It's in this context that the child's mother sues for support of her daughter, sparking a bitter tug of war with Gertrude Whitney. As backdrop, a poverty-stricken nation, pressed against the window pane of the courtroom, takes solace in the fact that the wealthy have problems, too.

At first the public supports maternal rights, but in the course of the trial, accusations of wild affairs and lesbianism surface, giving rise to the belief by some — including big Gloria's own mother (Miss Johns) — that she is an unfit mother.

The trial becomes a morality play of 1930s America. It isn't so much how Mrs. Vanderbilt lived; it's that she did it so publicly.

After too much "Great Gatsby" social extravagance early on, "Little Gloria" builds into a powerful production, capped by the tense trial that captures courtroom drama, the case's emotional conflicts and questions whether presiding judge John Francis Carew (Hughes) was competent and fair.

'Brainstorm' May Be Released In '83

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — The director of the North Carolina Film Office says "Brainstorm," a movie filmed largely in North Carolina, will be completed.

Bill Arnold, director of the office, said the film — delayed when actress Natalie Wood died last year — may be released as early as spring of 1983.

Arnold said the movie is too good not to complete. "People were just so impressed with the basic footage," he said. "Everybody said if they ever finished the doggone thing it would be some kind of a classic."

The movie is to be a science-fiction thriller involving a scientist who develops an instrument for reading minds.

Much of the photography was done in several North Carolina locations last fall. The movie was to be completed in California.

on-location production for the series, according to Suzanne Navin, community relations officer with the UNC Center for Public Television.

'Bo' Slated To Star In 'Bolero'

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Bo Derek, who undulated to stardom with sexual exploits to Ravel's "Bolero" in "10," will star this year in "Bolero," billed as "a $20 million sensuous adventure" for Golan-Globus Productions.

The blonde sex symbol will be directed by her husband, John Derek.

Young Scholars Are Challenged

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Students at the North Carolina School of Science and Mathematics were challenged Thursday to explore the larger questions of science which remain unanswered.

Dr. Lewis Thomas, chancellor of the Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center in New York City, issued the challenge as keynote speaker for the school's biennial conference at Duke University's East Campus.

Gov. Jim Hunt welcomed

Thomas as a scientist, a poet and author of two award-winning books.

More than 200 state educators and school representatives attended the conference on how to form partnerships between schools and industry, higher education and other resources to improve science and math education.

Thomas encouraged students to study three questions:

— The idea of animal awareness and the ability of animals to think as humans do.

— Chance and its role in the evolution of living things.

— How symbiotic relationships between cells evolved.

"Science teachers are often afraid to teach these major unresolved issues because they feel students can't understand them," Thomas said. "Often, students are discouraged from studying science because of tense competition for grades among those striving for admission to the medical field."

QUARTERLY MEETING
There will be a quarterly meeting this weekend at Waterside Free Will Baptist Church. The following activities are planned:

Friday night — quarterly conference; Saturday night — holy communion at 7:30; Sunday — Bishop W.L. Phillips will deliver the sermon at 11 a.m., dinner will be served at 2 p.m. and Elder Robert Phillips and Crisp Chapel will be in charge of services at 3 p.m.

Miss Endrikat had received a bachelor's degree in psychology in 1973 and a master's in school psychology in 1976 and worked in the Virginia public schools as a school psychologist.

Recipients of the Clarke award receive full tuition and are selected on the basis of academic achievement and demonstration of potential excellence in school psychology practicum courses.

Cobey, the former athletic director of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, has been regarded as a political comer since 1980, when he was a respectable loser as the GOP candidate for lieutenant governor.

V.B. "Hawk" Johnson, an Andrews supporter who opposed suggestions from state Democrats that Andrews step down, said the arrest will be a factor in the close campaign.

"It was a tremendous blow," he said. "Ike had gotten things running in his direction" and could have seized the lead over Cobey for good, he said. "But not now."

Cobey is 43, photogenic and is running with the blessing and backing of the National Congressional Club, the political fund-raising organization of Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C.

Adding to Andrews' problems is the scheduled appearance of President Reagan next Tuesday, who is supposed to campaign for Cobey.

Americans Becoming Part Of A Monitored Society

By RICK HAMPSON
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — If you have waited for a Manhattan subway train, walked down a Miami Beach street or bought Extra-Strength Tylenol in a Chicago drug store, yours may be among the million images on file in the monitored society.

The kind of automatic camera that photographed cyanide poisoning victim Paula Prince, may also have caught the image of James Lewis, a prime suspect in the seven Tylenol killings, is an increasingly popular surveillance tool.

By design and by chance, Americans are being watched in stores and factories, jails and hospitals, barnyards and locker rooms. Long a fixture in banks, where they are required by law, surveillance systems now reach from embassies to department store mannequins.

Sales by the industry, now about $500 million a year, are expected to nearly double by the end of 1984, according to Kathy Sowder of ADT Security Systems. Demand for surveillance systems has "exploded," she says, because "people are having money problems," and stealing to solve them.

"It seems wherever you look you've got a TV camera staring down at your face," says Jack Greenfield, Ms. Sowder's colleague at ADT.

In the next few years, cameras attached to recorders or monitored by human eyes will scan homes, stores and public places, "wherever people expect vandalism or theft," says Ms. Sowder.

Properly used, a television camera might have prevented the Tylenol killings, according to Bill Rudd, vice president of DA General in Needham, Mass., one of the nation's top makers of surveillance cameras.

"With a well-equipped surveillance outfit you can watch people pretty closely," he says. "If somebody's been doing something funny, it's probably going to be seen by the trained eye."

Dealers say their devices are moving beyond banks and stores and into some unusual locations:

—A house on the intercoastal waterway in Florida has underwater cameras to guard against aquatic intruders.

—A Midwestern pig farmer uses cameras to make sure his animals, who are packed tightly together as they fatten up, do not trample each other.

—New York City has cameras in several subway stations and is installing more at crime-ridden Times Square stations.

—Cameras scan the First National Bank of Chicago's public plaza in the Loop.

—On Wall Street, cameras

monitor areas where negotiable securities are handled and traded. Missing stock certificates worth about $1 million were located in a discarded box after a review of video tape showed the box was out of place.

—Cameras allow officials in several cities to keep an eye out for highway traffic jams and accidents.

—Fears of street crime in Miami Beach led authorities to install cameras that monitor a shopping area.

Part of surveillance systems' popularity is attributable to reusable video tape, which is easier to use and less expensive than film, although the picture is not as clear.

Most cameras are cheaper than guards, and they don't fall asleep or go out to the bathroom, salesmen say.

Systems now cost as little as several hundred dollars or as much as $50,000. A good bank system goes for $6,000 to $10,000.

Many systems are activated only by a particular event: The camera at Walgreen's that photographed Miss Prince buying the cyanide-laced Extra-Strength Tylenol that killed her was linked to a Northern Trust Bank automatic teller which clicked when a customer used a bank card to begin a transaction. The camera focused on the area in front of the bank machine, but took in the checkout line as well.

Other recording systems begin when someone enters the monitored space; still others come with infrared cameras that see in the dark.

The surveillance frontier is the home, says Carmine Pellosie, vice president of CCS Communication Control here. "You're not talking big money any more, and you're getting a feeling of security," he says. "It's going to get so cheap you'll use a camera instead of a front doorbell."

Although the trend toward a monitored society worries civil libertarians, they note that much of the surveillance is in public places.

"Someone on a subway platform really has no expectation of privacy," says New York Civil Liberties Union attorney Richard Emery.

The locker room, however, is another story, and Robert DeGennaro of Video Surveillance says he installs devices in such areas only if the customer company absolves him of liability for invasion of privacy.

Emery says that surveillance film or tape should be retained only for a "short period" unless needed for court use and not used to build up a library.

But Rudd, whose company installs and maintains systems and reviews and stores the film, says the record is stored for up to two years.

A spokesman for Northern Trust Bank, which installed the camera in Walgreen's several months ago, declined for security reasons to say how long the bank keeps film of snapshots.

Meanwhile, "photographs from these systems support evidence in court cases every day," Rudd says. "The surveillance camera picture has become such a tool for law enforcement it is readily accepted as substantial evidence. It is now accepted more and more without expert testimony."

Northern Ireland Sees No Peace In Elections

By ED BLANCHE
Associated Press Writer
BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — This strife-torn province appeared as divided as ever today after hardliners on both sides of its religious-political conflict won seats in an assembly that Britain hoped would represent the first step toward peace. Three members of Sinn Fein, the political wing of the outlawed Provisional Irish Republican Army, emerged victorious and Protestant radicals opposed to the IRA also scored well in first results announced Thursday. Moderate parties appeared to be the main losers.

The predominantly Roman Catholic Sinn Fein was expected to pick up another two seats in the 78-member provincial assembly when the final results of Wednesday's elections are announced.

Protestant militants denounced Sinn Fein's electoral gains as a "vote for the gun." The Catholic party said it would not take its seats in the assembly as a protest against British rule in Northern Ireland, and warned that the anti-British guerrilla campaign was not over.

It was the first time Sinn Fein, Gaelic for "Ourselves Alone," participated in an election under its own banner since the Provisional IRA was formed in December 1969 and launched its battle to unite Protestant-dominated Northern Ireland with the overwhelmingly Catholic Irish Republic.

Sinn Fein fielded 12 of the 184 candidates for the assembly. Before this week's balloting, the Social Democratic and Labor Party was the only major political voice of the Roman Catholic minority.

Britain had called the election in hopes of giving Roman Catholics a say in government and ending the 13-year-old blood feud between the province's estimated 1 million Protestants and 500,000 Roman Catholics.

The British, who have ruled the province from London since they suspended a Protestant-controlled Parliament in 1972, have said they want to hand over limited social and economic powers to the assembly — but only if 70 percent of its members, including Catholics, agree to make the new assembly work.

Among the Protestant parties, the Rev. Ian Paisley's militant Democratic Unionists won eight seats, including an easy win for the firebrand Paisley in his district of North Antrim.

The Official Unionists, the other major Protestant party, won 14 seats. Paisley's party was expected to pick up more seats from rural areas not yet counted.

Life As It's Lived

Simply A Matter Of Differing Viewpoints

By GAIL MICHAELS
I realize that I'm generalizing, but men and women do tend to have different attitudes about housework. Men believe that housework is an inefficient use of their valuable time. Men also believe that housework is not nearly as inefficient a use of women's valuable time.

Then again, men can usually withstand extremely high concentrations of mess. Women, on the other hand, tend to cave in when the ring around the bathtub surpasses an inch in thickness.

Even men who make a genuine attempt to share the housework have entirely different ideas than their wives about what should be done and how. My best friend's husband, who is 6-foot-6, is inordinately concerned with the top of the refrigerator. It's a highly compulsive woman who bothers to clean that region of the kitchen unless closing the refrigerator door sets off an avalanche. But this guy rushes to remove the dust every time they're expecting guests. He may usher them through bedrooms with unmade beds and throw open the door of a closet that is no longer walk-in, but the top of that refrigerator will dazzle the discerning eye.

My theory is that this man behaves like this because men, like crows, have an affinity for shiny things. They usually don't clean them, of course; they stroke them. Anyone who doubts this should watch a man seat himself at a table with a glass top. First, he grasps the table top on the underside and pulls himself into position. Then he drums his fingers. When he gets ready to get up, he places both hands on the top of the table and pushes.

Brass is even more irresistible than glass. We once entertained an insurance agent who almost lost his hand because he kept tracing the designs in a brass table that takes an hour and a half to polish.

Mirrors are another matter. Men don't touch them. They splatter them. Phillip uses his dental floss like a slingshot. And if it were up to him, there would be no reflection at all. As I said, men don't touch mirrors, even when they clean the bathroom. The tub can radiate, the toilet sparkle, the sink scintillate, and the mirror still looks like a startling roost.

I would venture to say that this kind of behavior originates in the average man's deep distaste for detail. For instance, men do not shut cabinet or closet doors. They do not open dirty clothes hampers. Trash cans are only relieved of their contents if they are overflowing. Sheets and blankets drooping below a bedspread's hemline commonly are supposed, by the male species, to give a bed character.

A wife's suggestion about such details are rarely appreciated. "If you don't nag so much, I'd be more inclined to help you," is Phillip's typical response.

"Why is it that when you stand over me and tell me how to load silverware into a dishwasher or how to cook canned soup, you're being helpful, but when I dare to make one criticism, I'm nagging?"

"It's the natural order of things," he grins.

"Yeah, right. All I'm trying to do is impress upon you that cleaning up the kitchen means more than washing dishes. It means wiping down that strip of counter behind the faucet before it turns black. It means emptying the sink trap before it starts hatching little bugs. It means that walking across the kitchen floor should not be like wading through Pepperidge Farm Stuffing Mix."

"If you don't like the way I clean up, you can do it yourself."

For heaven's sake, I'm not that petty.

Nuclear Freeze Issue Bedevils Some Candidates

By MIKE FEINSILBER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Campaigning for re-election in a Pennsylvania district with a strong Quaker heritage, Republican Rep. Jim Coyne finds himself pilloried for his last-minute switch to vote against a nuclear freeze resolution in the House.

The proposal failed by only two votes in August. Coyne had promised to vote for it — had even co-sponsored it — but President Reagan pleaded and Coyne decided to oppose the resolution.

In the state of Washington, the old mushroom cloud made a reappearance in a television ad for a Republican running against Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., long a national security hard-liner.

Jackson, in self defense, had to make his own television ads expressing concern over the arms race.

In Maine, Rep. David Emery is the Republican candidate for the Senate seat held by Democrat George Mitchell. Wherever he goes, Emery finds himself on the defensive as the only member of Congress from all of New England — Republican or Democrat — who opposed a nuclear freeze in that House vote.

Emery said no thanks when the Maine chapter of Physicians for Social Responsibility invited him to discuss the nuclear freeze issue — and only that issue — on a half-hour television program.

In the politics of America, the question of disarmament is assuming a prominence it has never attained. People are refusing to leave it to the experts.

On Nov. 2, nine states with a quarter of the U.S. population will vote in nuclear freeze referendums. It will be the closest thing to a national vote on a foreign policy issue in history.

Election observers cannot point to a single race where the nuclear freeze is likely to be the decisive issue. Richard Pollock, public relations adviser for some pro-freeze groups, says, "There are supposed to be four issues in 1982 — jobs, jobs, jobs and freeze."

But as Coyne, Emery and a handful of other candidates would affirm, the freeze looms as a factor in some campaigns.

Doug Bosco, a pro-freeze state legislator in California who is challenging Rep. Don Clausen, R-Calif., says "the nuclear freeze is the most important defined issue in our race."

Most of the ballots in referendum states ask variations of a single question: Do you favor a mutual, verifiable agreement by the United States and the Soviet Union not to build, test and deploy any more nuclear weapons?

When Wisconsin voted in the Sept. 14 primary, the outcome was 641,514 to 205,018 in favor of a freeze.

Freeze advocates expect to win in all nine referendum states — California, Oregon, Arizona, Montana, North Dakota, Michigan, New Jersey, Rhode Island and Massachusetts — and in the cities that also will vote on a freeze — Olympia, Wash.; Reno, Nev.; Denver, Chicago, Miami, Philadelphia, Washington and New Haven, Conn.

There is scant organized opposition, but the results on Election Day may not be as one-sided as first thought.

A Los Angeles Times poll early this month said half of the Californians surveyed who held an opinion supported a freeze, half opposed it and 40 percent had no opinion. Other polls have shown the freeze winning.

The Reagan administration has not mounted an all-out campaign for a big "no" vote, despite the president's successful arm-twisting in Congress for defeat of the freeze resolution and his view that freeze advocates are inspired by "some who want the weakening of America."

The defeated House proposal called for an immediate "mutual and verifiable" freeze. By a 204-202 vote, the House instead adopted an administration proposal calling for arms reductions before a freeze is attempted — a position many GOP candidates are espousing.

"I've not heard of very much opposition anywhere," says Carla Johnston, who runs political education workshops on behalf of the freeze campaign.

"Either the administration decided to ignore it and hope it goes away after the election, or they're not taking it seriously at all."

Ms. Johnston ventured this guess: "Women particularly tend to support the freeze, and the polls suggest that the Republicans are having difficulties with women. That may be why the administration is lying low."

In Pennsylvania's rural, staunchly Republican Butler County, where the issue will be on the Nov. 2 ballot, organizer Susan Parsons says she finds surprisingly strong encouragement for the cause.

"The only opposition has been letters in the newspapers, and one writer came up with the slogan, 'Freeze Now, Fry Later,' she says. 'I think it may pass, but I think we have to work hard for it.'"

Ben Senturia of the Nuclear Weapons Freeze Campaign National Clearinghouse in St. Louis fears that Reagan will make a last-minute move to thwart pro-freeze forces.

"What concerns me most is getting a startling October announcement from the White House, a breakthrough in the strategic arms talks with the Soviets or some startling new revelation," Senturia says. "That's a tough one to counter."

Physicians Apt to Practice What They Preach

Practice what you preach. Physicians heal thyself.

These are axioms which were considered in a recent study of physicians and were released in the Harvard Medical School Health Letter.

Physicians are likely to practice what they preach — at least most of the time according to a survey of the personal health practices of members of the Harvard Medical School faculty. More than 1,000 faculty members were sent a questionnaire. Sixty percent of them replied.

The overall survey revealed that physicians had what could be considered healthy personal habits. Just eight percent of the physicians, compared with 32 percent of the general population, smoked cigarettes. Of those who were not smokers at the time of the survey, 38 percent said that they were former cigarette smokers.

Only two percent said they used sleeping pills more than three times a week and seven percent said they took more than two alcoholic drinks a day.

Nearly 83 percent of the physicians said they drank coffee daily but nearly half of these doctors said they drank two cups or fewer daily.

Only three percent said they took antibiotics when they had an upper respiratory infection and 14 percent said they used vitamin C to protect against colds. Only 14 percent of the respondents said they took a daily multivitamin.

Despite reports that taking aspirin in low dosages will prevent heart disease, only seven percent stated that they took aspirin on a daily basis. Approximately 54 percent of the physicians said they had a routine health examination in the past two years. The examinations were more likely to be obtained by the older doctors; 41 percent in their 30s, 54 percent in their 40s, 65 percent in their 50s, and 80 percent past the age of 60 had regular examinations.

The female physicians surveyed were more likely to perform routine breast self-examination (72 percent) than the male physicians were to perform routine testicular examinations (36 percent).

Vigorous exercise was found to be popular among faculty members of all ages and sexes. Nearly half of those surveyed said they jogged or performed equivalent aerobic exercise for 20 minutes or more at least three times a week.

Seventy-three percent of those surveyed routinely used seat belts.

How do these statistics compare to those of the general population? This might turn out to be a fascinating study.

SPEAKING OF YOUR HEALTH... Candy lozenges that contain small amounts of antibiotics do not cure throat infections. In fact they are often responsible for unpleasant fungus infections in the mouth especially when used for extended periods of time.
