N.C. Coast Buffeted; Flooding In Some Sections

By The Associated Press

Storm warnings remained in effect early today for coastal areas in southeastern North Carolina as high winds continued to batter beaches, causing flooding in some areas.

Little Damage Locally From Sunday Storm

High winds that roughed up the North Carolina coast this weekend did little damage in Pitt County despite the fact that 45 miles away in New Bern, water covered highway 17 and gale force winds wreaked havoc with power lines.

This morning utility companies around the county reported slim damage from the gusts that buffeted the area Sunday.

"We had one pole blown down at Black Jack and it was just a tap pole, not a main pole," said Greenville Utilities Assistant Director Malcolm Green. "We had scattered outages around the county, but nothing major at all."

Green said two main crews worked last night.

Ayden Utilities reported only minor outages also. "We had nothing serious," said Mark Sugg, director. "Just fuses blown and some limbs down."

Gusts exceeding 30 miles per hour were unofficially recorded in Greenville last night. Winds averaged steady at 15-16 miles per hour throughout Sunday.

No major flooding was reported by 11 a.m. today from the 1.70 inches of rain measured by the Greenville Utilities Water Plant from midnight Sunday through 8 a.m. today. The level of the Tar River rose from 3.5 feet Friday to 5.7 feet by 8 a.m. today, according to GUC.

"We have lots of debris in the streets," said Mayo Allen, Greenville Public Works director. "One or two streets flooded for a few minutes but then cleared when the rain slackened off. Just normal problems."

Allen said leaves and other debris clogged catch basins, causing water to back up.

Temperatures Sunday varied only slightly, with a high of 50 degrees Fahrenheit and a low of 44 degrees recorded by GUC. At 8 a.m. today it was 54 degrees.

The National Weather Service reported that serious flooding was expected to continue early today along the south end of the Pamlico Sound and along the Neuse River.

The water level near New Bern was about 8 feet above normal and flooding was occurring early this morning along the banks of the river in the New Bern area. Highway 17 was under several feet of water near the Neuse River bridge and some cars were stalled in the flood waters.

At Kitty Hawk, one cottage was swept into the surf while the roof of another was blown off and at least three others were in danger, but officials said no injuries had been reported.

Serious flooding also was reported between Oriental and Arapahoe along the Neuse River in southern Pamlico County early today, the National Weather Service reported.

Light flooding was also occurring at Messic and Bayboro, and some people left the area for higher grounds late Sunday.

At least three sailboats were disabled off the Virginia and North Carolina coasts as waves reached heights of 25 feet, the Coast Guard said. Those aboard were safely returned to shore with the help of helicopters and Coast Guard cutters.

In addition, two large sailing yachts, part of the seasonal southbound pleasure boat migration down the Inland Waterway, ran aground in Albemarle Sound waters Sunday afternoon.

In South Carolina, Coast Guard officials reported several boats had problems caused by winds and high seas, but no injuries were reported.

Gusts of 80 mph were reported Sunday afternoon south of Frying Pan Shoals. Winds at other spots gusted to 40 and 50 mph.

Kitty Hawk firefighters closed off N.C. 158 along the beach when tides 1-2 feet above normal came within 10 feet of the pavement. Motorists in New Hanover County were warned to be sure their vehicles were on high ground to avoid salt water damage.

The weather service has advised travelers on the Outer Banks to avoid N.C. 12, where water and sand was reported on the pavement near Buxton. Forecasters said northeast winds could cause more flooding on beaches facing east and north adding that coastal areas of Virginia and Maryland can expect tides 2 to 3 feet above normal though this afternoon.

Dare County Sheriff-elect Bert Austin, on Hatteras Island, said the Ocracoke, Cedar Island and Swan Quarter ferry services shut down early Sunday.

In Carolina Beach, water had risen to street level in some places by 7:30 p.m., with high tide expected to bring water 2 feet higher by 2 a.m. Monday.

Storm-force winds blew down trees over power lines in the Morehead City area and near New Bern, causing some power failures. Water was four feet higher than normal on the south end of Pamlico Sound and in the Neuse and Trent estuaries with another three-foot rise expected by dawn. Sunday evening water had risen to the ground floor of the Holiday Inn in New Bern.

'Miracle Valley' Melee Said Rooted In Earlier Frustration

MIRACLE VALLEY, Ariz. (AP) - A bloody melee between a religious sect and police that left two people dead was sparked by the group's anger over a real estate deal that went sour, the Arizona Daily Star reported today.

Quoting an anonymous source, the Star said Julius Gillespie, an elder in the all-black Christ Miracle Healing Center and Church, told friends before the confrontation Saturday that members were outraged over "fraud" in their purchase of a former motel.

Details of the alleged fraud were not described in the newspaper.

The blue-painted motel building on Highway 92, dubbed Saint's Place, is home to many church members. It also was the scene of an argument last week, when a church member tried to take down a notice of a sheriff's sale for the property, the Star said.

A witness said a Cochise County sheriff's deputy told the church member he could be arrested if he removed the sign. The deputy left after erecting it, but within hours the sign had been taken down, the newspaper said.

FBI agents interviewed church members Sunday in the investigation of the previous day's violence, which left nine injured.

Details of the violence remained sketchy, said Sgt. Allen Schmidt, spokesman for the Public Safety Department, who did not know if any of the church members shot had been armed.

Paul Brinkley-Rogers, a reporter for the Star, said he was threatened by a church member as he witnessed the melee.

"I was trying to take down her words in my notebook and watch for the women behind me running toward the law officers with ax handles, hammers, baseball bats, gardening implements, scissors and even a broom," Brinkley-Rogers said in a copyright story.

Tensions have surrounded the sect, with an estimated 300 members.

Police And SBI Hunt Pair In Holdup, Killing

Greenville police and agents of the State Bureau of Investigation are continuing their hunt today for two masked gunmen who shot and killed A&P Supermarket co-manager Howard Manning Jr. in a robbery about 9:50 p.m. Saturday.

Medical examiner Dr. Stan Harris said this morning that Manning, 39, of Farmville, died at Pitt County Memorial Hospital about 11 p.m. Saturday from internal bleeding which resulted from the shotgun wound in his abdomen.

Chief Glenn Cannon said Manning and another store employee had walked from the A&P Supermarket at Greenville Square Shopping Center to the Branch Banking & Trust Co. branch office on Arlington Boulevard to make a deposit. He said when the two arrived at the bank, they were approached by two men wearing ski masks and armed with a shotgun.

Cannon said Manning was shot after the two men demanded the money and Manning began "tussling" with them.

After the shooting, Cannon said Manning's co-worker ran back to the store and had other employees call for medical assistance and the police.

A search of the area following the shooting, Cannon said, failed to turn up any trace of the masked men. He noted that they were last seen running from the area of the bank.

The chief said about $21,000 in cash, checks and food stamps was taken by the robbers.

Manning, who grew up near Fountain and graduated from Farmville High School in 1962, had been employed with the A&P Supermarket in Farmville, for 12 years before that store closed four years ago. He was transferred to Greenville.

and was named co-manager of the local store three years ago.

"I'm so shocked at Howard's death that I really don't know what to say," Alvis Tyndall of Farmville said this morning. Tyndall, now manager of the IGA supermarket in Farmville, worked with Manning at the Farmville A&P for 12 years before it closed.

HOWARD MANNING

"Working with him all those years, he was like family," Tyndall said. "It's one of those things you don't know how to take ... which way to turn in trying to say how you feel."

A&P employee Ernest Willoughby described Manning as "one of the very kindest people that you would ever want to know." Willoughby worked with Manning at the Farmville store and later at the Greenville A&P.

Mrs. Faye Morris, another A&P employee said "I just think it's sad. He was a good person ... would do anything he could for somebody." She had worked with Manning for the past 8 years, both in Farmville and Greenville.

Death Scene For Two

TWO KILLED IN WRECK ... Two local men were killed Sunday in a 6:40 a.m. collision at the intersection of Fourth Street and Cemetery Road. Investigators identified the two as Clint Vernon Feamster, 21 of 100 Kirkland Drive, the driver of the car, and William Howard Hansberry, 20 of 1211 E. 14th Street. Officers said the vehicle, apparently traveling at a high rate of speed along Fourth Street, failed to stop at the intersection and crashed into a barricade, fence and tree, before coming to a halt on the grounds of Greenwood Cemetery. Damage was estimated at $5,000 to the car and $1,000 to the fence. Medical examiner Dr. Stan Harris said Feamster died at the scene from multiple head injuries, while Hansberry died of chest injuries a short time after arriving at Pitt County Memorial Hospital's emergency room. Agenda of Impossibilities Suits Jacqueline Wexler

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
United Press International
Her second day on the job the new president of the National Conference of Christians and Jews ticked off goals.

The conference crusades for brotherhood and its traditional twin goals aimed at bigots warring on racial or religious grounds.

A visitor told Jacqueline Grennan Wexler, the first woman president of the organization, the list sounded like "an agenda of impossibilities."

But Mrs. Wexler said firmly she is determined that the NCCJ move to defuse new human relations tensions in American society — tensions she believes can topple the democracy if unrelieved.

Samples: Moral Majority versus the women's movement; Right to Life versus Planned Parenthood Federation of America; peace crusade versus the Defense Department and military establishment.

"We've become a nation of name callers — polarized by single issue politics and out to win battles against each other," Mrs. Wexler said.

"It seems to me one of the greatest challenges of our times is how we deal with single-issue politics."

"I don't think a democracy survives long under those circumstances. I think a democracy always is making compromises, trade-offs, moving ahead. That is the nature of a democracy."

"Where one ideology prevails, a nation becomes a totalitarian state."

That's what brought down the Holy Roman Empire, Mrs. Wexler said. The totalitarian state is seen in Russia, modern China, modern Iran — "for starters," she said.

"There is no dissent, no negotiated positions, no freedom of speech and no respect for opposing views."

Mrs. Wexler, with the blessing of her board, intends to lead the NCCJ in a widened crusade aimed at modifying the hate she claims is dividing America.

She believes, for example, the NCCJ must act as mediator, referee and honest broker between warring factions.

According to her "impossible agenda" she would like disarmament movement people sit down with military establishment people — talking about the complicated issues, stopping the name calling, moderating the hate.

The same for Right to Life leaders and those at the Planned Parenthood Federation of America. Ditto for Moral Majority chieftains and rulers of the National Organization of Women.

"In certain sections of the country, tensions are quite high," she said, citing polarized feelings over Mexican wetbacks in the west and boat people on the east coast.

She would like people fighting wetbacks and other immigrants to remember that their own ancestors were immigrants. To defuse that battle, especially sharp during a time of high unemployment, Mrs. Wexler feels the NCCJ, as "honest broker," might be able to get the two sides together.

The NCCJ was set up in 1928 to advance brotherhood and relieve racial and religious tensions. It was begun by people outraged over the anti-Catholic bigotry that surfaced when Alfred E. Smith, a Catholic, ran for president.

In the early days, records show, the conference led a fight against the Ku Klux Klan that added Catholics and Jews to its nationwide hate-mongering against blacks.

"I say if we can make a one or two percent change, that's progress," Mrs. Wexler said. "That's how I see the evolution of mankind."

Mrs. Wexler — petite, peppery, intense, intelligent, warm — brims with common sense.

Consider: Her organization, with a $8.5 million budget, is dipping into reserves. The common sense way, she moved to solve the cash-flow problem.

One of her first acts was to move staff and furnishings into less space at the Brotherhood Building.

Two floors will be rented out, providing extra money.

Mrs. Wexler's office is about 10-by-20 feet. The one she passed up as part of consolidating space at NCCJ headquarters was "the size of a ballroom," she said.

"This is fine," she said, gesturing with her arms in what may be the smallest presidential suite in New York City.

"We're a non-profit organization, after all."

Mrs. Wexler comes across super-intelligent, warm, intense and determined. What she does is tempered by garden-variety common sense — as displayed by her solution for added revenue.

Mrs. Wexler is a former Roman Catholic nun, former president of Webster College in suburban St. Louis, former president of Hunter College of the City University of New York, board member of multi-national corporations, a trustee of the University of Pennsylvania, an adviser to the director of the National Institutes of Health.

Before all those things, back in 1951, as a Sister of Loretto, she taught English and mathematics.

In defense of her "impossible agenda" aimed at making America less hateful, Mrs. Wexler said the vote for women once was an item on an impossible agenda. The same for a Jew becoming president of a non-Jewish American university or a Catholic being president of the nation.

"I have come from a time in my life where I have seen the first Jewish president of a non-Jewish University," she said. "And now it is common, thanks be."

Catholic John F. Kennedy got to the White House, she recalled. And, of course, women got the vote.

"Someone had to think these things were important and then the lever began to move," Mrs. Wexler said.

"Evolutionary not revolutionary change. Evolution respects continuity, tradition. Revolutionary change always is trying to topple one absolute authority and substitute another."

Mrs. Wexler recently told a reporter her formation as a sister prepared her in a positive way for everything she had done during a remarkable career.

"I entered to commit myself to the people of God, the human race," she said. "That's how I saw the presidency at Hunter. That's how I see the NCCJ."

She recalled that as a teacher she tried to get youths to "respect commitment, to search for truth and respect ambiguity, to respect authority and have the courage to disagree."

"All those are part and parcel of why I'm interested in NCCJ," she said.

Mrs. Wexler was born Jean Marie Grennan, Aug. 2, 1926, in Sterling, Ill. When she entered the Sisters of Loretto in 1949, she took the name Jacqueline to honor a dead brother, Jack.

By the time she was president of Webster College, Vatican II had dictated radical changes for nuns. As Sister Jacqueline and head of Webster in the 1960s, she attracted national attention for efforts to revitalize her college. In 1967, she led a movement to pass control of the institution from the Sisters of Loretto to a board of lay trustees. The same year she asked to be released from her vows as a religious — and was.

She remained for two more years as president. In 1969, she was married to a Manhattan businessman, Paul J. Wexler. The service was Catholic but a rabbi gave the final blessing.

As for her new mission, Mrs. Wexler said she will try every way possible to get polarized factions into productive dialogue. That is the distinct mission of the National Conference of Christians and Jews, as she sees it.

Pat's Pointers

By Pat Trexler

Reminiscent of an old country general store, these Christmas tree ornaments — mason jar, milk bottle, coffee pot and bag of penny candy — will create an air of nostalgia for your Christmas. The tops of the ornaments are left open to hold candy or a tiny gift. Designer Pauline Asmus suggests that you add to the nostalgia theme by hanging them on the tree with old-fashioned slip-on clothespins.

These clever ornaments are made with simple stitches on 7-mesh plastic canvas using needlepoint yarns — or leftover yarns from your needlework bag. Why not make an extra set so your favorite little one can enjoy playing country store? Or better yet, let the child learn to needlepoint with this beginner-easy set.

To obtain directions for making the Country Style Ornaments, send your request for Leaflet No. NP-1082 with $1 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler ("The Daily Reflector"), P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29582.

"I would like them to hear one another before damning each other," she said.

She said the issues on which so many are polarized cross religious, racial, ethnic, sex and national lines.

The NCCJ runs "Brotherhood Week" — an annual event. So what is it doing about the large disturbance in "brotherhood" on earth these days in the Middle East?

"We will not take sides in an absolute way," Mrs. Wexler said.

"But 'brotherhood' means respect and support for other individuals in your family. Anyone who in any form believes in the fatherhood of God must believe that the Godhead is concerned about all 'His' or 'Her' children and wants them to be in harmony."

"In that regard I consider all religious wars in all of history to be blasphemous."

"You do not shoot your brother in the name of your Father!"

Mrs. Wexler was asked if that is what is going on in the Middle East?

She replied: "I think so."

Or you may order kit No. NPK-1082 by sending a check or money order for $11 to Pat Trexler at the same address. Each kit has the instruction leaflet plus sufficient canvas, yarn and ribbon to make eight ornaments, with shipping charges included.

If you decide to teach a child to needlepoint on plastic canvas using these ornaments as his or her first project, here are a few tips to help you.

Older children can quickly learn to cut the shapes from the plastic canvas themselves, but a very young child may need your help. While you cut the shapes, have the child practice the side half cross-stitch on a scrap of canvas.

Another obstacle for little ones will be threading the needle. I suggest that you take an old envelope and cut a one-fourth-inch strip along one folded edge of the envelope. Then cut this strip into 1- or 2-inch lengths. Lay one end of the yarn inside the fold and push the folded paper into the eye of the needle.

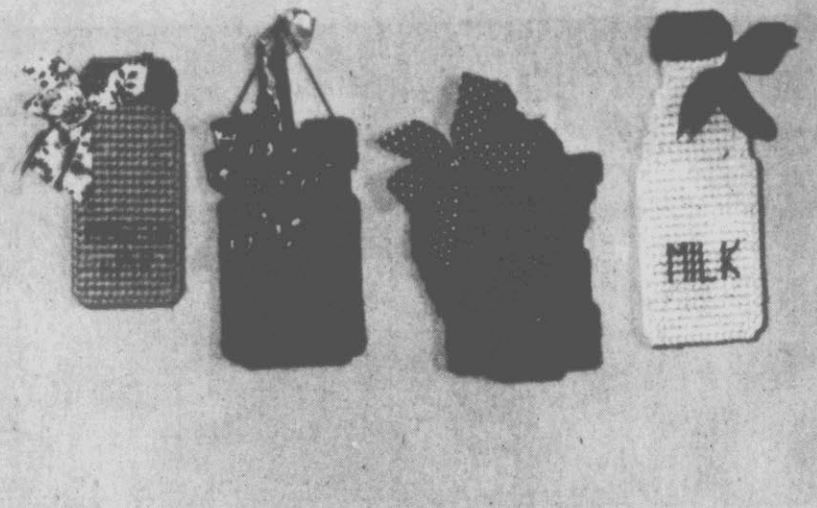

Then teach the "waste-knot" trick — a method of securing the beginning strand of yarn. Make a knot in the end of the yarn in the needle. You might then tell the child that this is breaking a rule of no knots in needlepoint — your little pupil will probably relish the idea of breaking a rule right away!

The needle is then taken down through the canvas from the right to the wrong side so that the knot is on the right side. It should be placed a couple of inches away from the point where the first stitch will be made and should lay in the direction the child will be stitching.

To make that a little clearer, let's assume that the first stitch will be taken in the upper left corner and the stitching will proceed from left to right. Place the knot 2 inches in from the left corner on the top row of the canvas.

Then, as the stitches are worked from left to right, they will automatically cover (and thus secure) the yarn on the wrong side. After taking a few stitches, the knot will be snipped away.

When the first few stitches are completed, show your little student how to secure all other yarn ends by running the threaded needle under some previously worked stitches.

ADD NOSTALGIA...to your Christmas tree with handmade ornaments reminiscent of the country general store, Pat suggests.

The mason jar is the simplest of the shapes in the country-store set, so I would suggest that you start the child on this one — working four rows in light gray for the jar lid and then the balance of the piece in light turquoise.

When two identical pieces have been made, show your pupil how to join them with overcast stitches. With the two pieces held so that the wrong sides are facing each other, the needle is brought up through the holes of both pieces; then it is taken to the back of the work and brought up through the next set of holes. This is repeated all around, taking extra stitches at the corners for good coverage.

You may be starting your pupil on a lifetime hobby that will bring untold hours of pleasure in the future. A bonus for busy mothers is the quiet, rapt attention most children give to this type of activity — a real plus when mothers are busy with routine duties or holiday preparations!

BEAN TOSTADAS

An easy version.
1/2 pound ground beef
1-3rd cup chopped (medium-fine) onion
1-3rd cup chopped (medium-fine) green pepper
1 clove garlic, minced
8-ounce can tomato sauce
1 teaspoon ground cumin
20-ounce can kidney beans, drained
Cooking Oil
Four 6-inch corn tortillas
Garnish: Shredded lettuce and Jack cheese

In a large skillet over moderate heat, cook beef, crumbling with a fork, until it loses its red color. Add onion, green pepper and garlic and stir for a few minutes. Stir in tomato sauce and cumin; simmer 5 minutes. Stir in beans; cover and simmer, stirring occasionally until hot — about 15 minutes. In a skillet in 1/4-inch of hot oil fry tortillas, one at a time, until lightly browned; drain on paper towels. Top each tortilla with bean mixture. Add garnish. Makes 4 servings.

Nutrition Advice Is Plentiful Who To Believe Is The Problem

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer
Trying to figure out what to eat these days is enough to drive you to drink.
Improper eating habits —

including the consumption of too much salt, sugar and fats and not enough fiber — have been linked to health problems including heart diseases and many forms of cancer.

There's no shortage of advice on nutrition, whether you are trying to change your diet to improve your health, your appearance or both.

Reliable advice is a different story, however. And the New York Heart Association is trying to help people sort out some of the conflicting claims.

The association has published "A Consumer's Guide To Choosing and Using the Nutrition Counseling for Cardiovascular Health." It is available from the New York Heart Association, 205 E. 42nd St., New York, N.Y., 10017. There is no charge, but you should enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope at least 8 1/2 by 4 inches with your order.

The guide is designed for readers who are particularly worried about dietary dangers that can lead to heart trouble, but it is valuable for anyone who is confused about food.

The guide points out that the first step is a visit to the doctor. The problems start after the doctor has made his or her diagnosis and recommended a course of action. Most people need someone who can help them implement the changes that have been suggested and make it easier for them to adapt their lives to new eating habits.

That "someone," says the heart association, should be a registered dietician — a nutrition expert who has been certified by the American Dietetic Association. Qualifications for registered dieticians include passage of a national examination and a minimum of a baccalaureate degree in foods, nutrition or a related science.

Many registered dieticians call themselves nutritionists or food or nutrition counselors. People who are NOT registered often use similar titles, however, and those titles may be meaningless. To avoid problems, look for the letters "R.D." after the individual's name.

Some dieticians specialize in particular diseases or conditions. To find someone who suits your needs, ask your doctor for a recommendation. If he or she cannot help, contact the Consulting Nutritionists in Private Practice, a division of the American Dietetic Association, at P.O. Box 345, Cold Spring, N.Y., 10516. If you are looking for a dietician who specializes in cardiovascular problems, check your local chapter of the American Heart Association.

Don't expect an instant analysis and solution of your problems. You probably will need a diet designed for you. Many dieticians will ask patients to keep a "food diary" to use as a basis for a new eating plan that fits your taste, budget and lifestyle. You generally will need at least two visits to the dietician — one for evaluation and one for follow-up counseling.

The cost of diet advice varies; a reputable counselor should be willing to explain the fee structure with you in advance. If you have been referred to a dietician by a doctor, the bills may be covered by medical insurance; check your policy.

One kind of nutrition counseling you do NOT need, according to specialists at Cornell University in Ithaca, N.Y., is the kind that promises to tell you what's wrong with you by analyzing your hair.

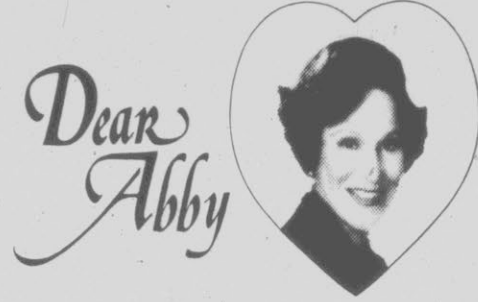

Christina Stark of the school's division of nutritional sciences says companies claiming that hair analysis can tell you which vitamins and minerals you are lacking are not only misleading, but "can be downright dangerous if taken seriously."

Ms. Stark says the mineral content of hair varies according to factors including age, sex, air pollution and even the use of hair spray. As for vitamins, she says, "hair doesn't even have any vitamins in it, so any advice regarding vitamins is meaningless."

Ms. Stark warns that "unsuspecting consumers will change their eating habits as a result of the hair analyses and unnecessarily add expensive and some-

Pennies Suggested As Safe Halloween Treat

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Halloween will soon be here, and despite all the publicity about children who have been victims of poisoned candy and apples with razor blades, thousands of youngsters will be out "trick-or-treating" again this year.

I pray you will print this suggestion: Instead of handing out candy or fruit, get several rolls of pennies from the bank, and when the youngsters show up, drop two or three pennies into their trick-or-treat bags. The kids will get a kick out of counting their money when they get home, and their parents will rest a little easier.

This may not solve the problem entirely, but it might help.

MARY B., CHARLESTON, S.C.

DEAR MARY: Good suggestion. And regarding this "trick-or-treat" business: In the good old days, youngsters would tour their own neighborhoods to show off their Halloween costumes and receive a modest treat.

In recent years, however, gangs of older kids have gone all over town demanding booty in exchange for "protection" against having one's garbage cans overturned, windows soaped, eggs thrown and property vandalized. This is blackmail! Law enforcers everywhere have had to swell their ranks in order to protect citizens.

In these crazy times, young children should not be out at night unless accompanied by an adult.

DEAR ABBY: I have a very good friend who always brings her 4-year-old son along when she comes to play bridge at my home. The boy interrupts when adults are talking, runs around the house making as much noise as he can, walks on my furniture and is generally a nuisance. I've tried to keep him amused with toys, color books, TV, etc., but he wants to be where his mother is.

When he misbehaves, his mother meekly asks him to "stop" — but he pays no attention to her.

I don't think it's my place to discipline the child, but I am at the end of my rope. What do you suggest?

FRUSTRATED HOSTESS

DEAR FRUSTRATED: Ask your friend to please get a sitter and leave the boy at home. Explain that the child is bored in the company of adults and he misbehaves to get attention. If your friend continues to bring the boy, don't invite her back until the boy grows up.

DEAR ABBY: I met this guy I'll call Ritchie one night. He said he was 24. (I'm 20.) I really fell for him hard. We dated for about a week. He told me he lived at home with his parents. Then when I tried calling him, his father answered the phone and called Ritchie, but when I said, "Hello, Ritchie? This is Terri," he hung up the phone.

I have tried calling him several times since then, but as soon as he hears my voice he hangs up on me. The last time I said, "Please don't hang up, I want to talk to you," but he hung up before I even finished the sentence.

What could the matter be? If I did something to upset him or make him angry, I wish he would tell me. We were getting along great together. I can't figure it out, can you?

OUT OF IDEAS

DEAR OUT: You are "out" all right, and better off for it. In any case, Ritchie has given you a very clear message: He doesn't want to talk to you, which I think says it all.

Views On Dental Health

Kenneth T. Perkins, D.D.S. P.A.

WHY DENTAL INSURANCE?

Consider these statistics: Of children over fifteen, 75% have some form of gum disease and an average of 11 cavities. By middle age, 2 out of 3 people will have serious gum problems and be well on the way to losing all of their teeth.

Why should such a technologically advanced country as ours be in such a poor state of dental health? The answer is: neglect! Few Americans see a dentist as often as they should and many have NEVER seen one. There are many reasons for this and one of them is money. Now something is being done about it.

While most Americans have some kind of medical insurance, dental insurance has lagged far behind, but now dental coverage is growing by leaps and bounds. Today, some 65 million (3 out of every 10 Americans) are covered by some form of dental insurance and estimates are that coverage could increase to 95 million by 1985.

Labor unions have been striving for wider dental protection and are responsible for much of this increase. In these times of inflation, the average American can use all the help he can get.

Prepared as a public service to promote better dental health. From the office of: Kenneth T. Perkins, D.D.S. P.A. Evans St., Phone: 752-5126.

Zip Zippers After Wearing
Any garments with slide fasteners should have the zipper fully closed prior to being hung up or otherwise stored after wearing.
According to Dr. Judieth Mock, extension clothing specialist at North Carolina State University, the zipper should also be in a completely closed position prior to laundering or drycleaning because such a procedure helps to maintain the garment's proper shape and balance during the cleaning process.

Applying Economics

For the 11th time an American has been awarded the Nobel Prize in the field of economics.

And, for the 11th time it poses the same old question:

"Why is it that if the field of economics is so 'hot' in this country, that the national economy is forever hovering between extremes of boom and bust?"

One answer might be that people in government are politicians first, and economics is allowed to just happen.

Maybe that is not all bad.

To govern requires a high degree of sensitivity as to what the people want, and then providing it.

The economy — whether local, state, regional or national — often has to be bent near (and to) the breaking point to meet those wants.

Nevertheless, it does seem reasonable that our political leadership should inform constituents that what they "want" may pose unwanted results.

Hospital Meets Projections

Even in these tight times Pitt County Memorial Hospital managed to follow its budgeted revenues and expenses closely during the past fiscal year.

Revenues were within 1 percent of projections. Expenses were within 0.5 percent. Hospital officials said revenues ran $823,000 above projections and patient days were up 3 percent.

The figures indicate Pitt County Memorial Hospital is operating about as planned. The projections, of course, take into account growth that is expected during the fiscal year and apparently there were no unexpected decreases in revenues during the concluded fiscal year.

Pitt County Memorial Hospital appears fiscally on schedule.

THIS AFTERNOON

A Statwide Code

By PAUL T. O'CONNOR
RALEIGH — Does it make any sense to create a statewide housing code that any municipality can freely refuse to enforce? The legislature's Housing Study Commission thinks so. With five percent of the state's 2.5 million housing units failing to meet national standards, the commission is betting the legislature will okay a minimal policy that counties and municipalities will then agree to enforce.

North Carolina has a statewide building code that covers new construction and any existing buildings that are considered life-threatening. Many municipalities and counties also have housing codes that set minimum standards. But in many areas there are no housing codes and thousands of North Carolinians are living without indoor plumbing or adequate heating. Only about one-third of the state's land area is covered by local codes.

Landlords who bring their houses up to code would qualify for a corporate tax credit worth as much as $500 per unit.

The proposal would encourage local governments to enforce the code by giving them extra consideration in the award of Community Development Block Grants. The state would also assist in the training of housing inspectors.

But say that with all of this a town council still refuses to enforce the code and a landlord still refuses to fix up a substandard unit. How can this code help the tenant? Why have a code no one must enforce?

Commission counsel Gerry Cohen — in a brief aside while answering another question — explained what might be the code's greatest impact. A city might not enforce the code but with it in effect, the renter would law it would be standard for use in Landlord-Tenant Act suits in all areas of the state which do not have a stricter local code, Leslie Winner, a commission member, said.

Another commission proposal, Ms. Winner said, would allow renters to take their suits under the Landlord-Tenant Act to small claims court. Currently they have to take such claims to district court where a lawyer is usually needed.

So, maybe it does make sense to have a statewide housing code that any municipality can refuse to enforce. It depends on what you're trying to do.

Tell It To The EPA

By ART BUCHWALD

"Environmental Protection Agency. May I help you?"

"Yes, somebody is pouring toxic sludge in my backyard."

"I'll connect you with Mr. Digging in our mudslide division."

"I don't want to talk about mudslides I want to talk about toxic substances."

"We've combined toxic wastes, mudslides and killer ants in one department, as an economy measure. Mr. Digging is on the line."

"Digging, I want you to know that someone is dumping toxic sludge in my back yard."

"So?"

"So what is the Environmental Protection Agency going to do about it?"

"How much waste is being dumped?"

"Three truckloads and the driver says he's going back for more."

"Well it has to be dumped

SOMEWHERE."

"I thought your job was to see that the citizen was protected against the dumping of toxic substances in residential areas."

"It is. Where do you live?"

"In North Carolina."

"Did you call the Denver office to lodge a complaint?"

"Why should I call Denver?"

"It handles all poison waste complaints for North Carolina. At least it did until we shut it down for economy reasons."

"Then what good would it have done me to call Denver?"

"You would have gotten a telephone recording referring you to one of our other regional offices."

"Well, since I've got you on the phone and Denver is closed, where do I call?"

"Let me see. St. Paul, Minnesota, is closed; Portland, Oregon, is closed; Albuquerque is closed. Here's one that is still open — in Baton Rouge, Louisiana."

"Give me their number."

"You'll waste a call. They only deal in waivers for dirty coal furnaces."

"What do you people do in Washington?"

"We're involved in getting the government off people's backs. We weigh the price of environmental protection against the price to industry and then decide, cost-wise, whether we should enforce the regulations or not."

"I thought you were mandated to protect the environmental health of the country."

"We are, but we have priorities."

"What kind of priorities?"

"The Clean Water Act for one. We've lowered the population levels permitted by communities who discharge sewage into lakes and streams by 50 percent. This will save the taxpayers over $2 billion, at no hazard to the people."

"Who says so?"

"Our new studies indicate water will absorb a lot more pollutants than scientists originally believed."

"What about acid rain?"

"The jury is still out on acid rain. There are rumors it stunts trees, and kills wildlife, but we only have the word of people who live in the Midwest, Northeast and Canada for that. We're not going to go on a fishing expedition just because the water in Maine tastes like shaving lotion."

"Okay, let's get back to my problem. What are you going to do about the toxic waste they're dumping in my back yard?"

"Have you thought about selling your house?"

"Yeh, but who is going to buy it with poison all over it?"

"If you don't report it to the EPA, who will ever know?"

Other Editors Say Safety Threat

(Rocky Mount Telegram)

Cause for considerable concern is the report from the N.C. Highway Patrol on accidents involving motorized bicycle riders.

That report shows that more than a quarter of the operators arrested had suspended or revoked driver's licenses.

Since North Carolina, for some strange reason, does not require people who operate the so-called Moped machine to have operator's licenses it must be assumed that the indicated suspensions meant that the operators had lost their licenses to drive automobiles and had resorted to the Moped as a means of transportation, while continuing to consume alcoholic beverages.

Statistics show that since 1979 an average of 10 persons have been killed each year in mishaps involving Mopeds while close to 200 have been injured annually.

Thus, a person under the influence of alcohol may be almost as dangerous on the highway while operating a Moped — or a bicycle, for that matter — as if he were driving a car.

By getting in the way and providing dangerous obstacles the two-wheel vehicle operator certainly becomes a menace while he is operating improperly on the highway.

Even as traffic officials everywhere are placing more emphasis than ever on drunken driving offenses, it stands to reason that it is going to become necessary to include the Moped and bike riders when considering traffic bans.

An irresponsible driver poses a threat to the safety and well-being of the driving public whether he's driving a bicycle with a motor attached to it or whether he's driving a conventional four-wheel automobile.

We see no reason why there should be any deviation in the application of the traffic statutes of North Carolina.

Strength For Today

HOPE ETERNAL

There are some ideas which reappear in people's minds generation after generation. One of these is the conviction held from the earliest days of human history that life does not end with death. The Egyptians prepared their mummies and buried their kings, sometimes in sailing crafts intended to take them to a new and better world. Socrates died maintaining that the soul of man lives on forever. Aristotle declared that something within which feels, thinks, desires, and animates is a factor essentially divine and consequently imperishable.

Many people think that the belief in immortality was introduced to the world by Christianity. This is not true, nor does the New Testament make this claim. It simply says that Christ brought immortality to light. He illuminated with added splendor what man already knew.

It has been said that in the desire for immortality, we have full proof of it. — Elisha Douglass

Helms Also Helps Demos

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Republican Sen. Jesse Helms, who has raised millions of dollars for conservative GOP candidates, is becoming one of the biggest money-raisers for Democrats too.

No, Helms hasn't changed sides. But Democratic fund-raisers have found Helms to be their favorite target, and they are invoking his name across the country to raise money.

"You have to have a devil," explains Patricia Keefer, a professional money raiser and political consultant. "You have to have someone for people to respond to. That's how you raise money."

for the North Carolina Campaign Fund, a political action committee started by supporters of Democratic Gov. Jim Hunt.

It was begun in an effort to counter the successes of Helms' Raleigh-based National Congressional Club, which has used direct-mail techniques to build a national list of conservative givers and which has become among the most successful political action committees in the country.

Although Hunt says he has no formal ties to the new committee, many observers see it as a possible vehicle to launch a 1984 Senate campaign by Hunt.

The N.C. Campaign Fund recently sent out its first mailing, attacking Helms as a "dangerous right-wing demagogue" and accusing him of "racial bigotry and religious intolerance."

Tom Ellis, chairman of the National Congressional Club, called the letter "extreme, ultra-liberal rhetoric" and "filled with half-truths." Even some Democrats named as members of the N.C. Campaign Fund's advisory board disagreed with the letter's harsh language.

Ellis, responding to Ms. Keefer's comments that Helms has become a target for Democratic money-raisers, said, "It's just the extreme liberals that are cranking up."

The letter has been sent to 100,000 people nationally, Ms. Keefer said. It is something of a test run, to measure reaction to the appeal and to try to build a list of people who will give to a Democratic appeal aimed at de-have a vehicle for taking his landlord to court. The courts will enforce the code.

Under the state's Landlord-Tenant Act, a tenant can sue if a housing unit isn't kept up to local standards. If there are no local standards, the renter then has nothing to base his claim upon. Four Study Gambling Revenues

By LEE MITGANG
Associated Press Writer

In four states where the riffing of Bible pages is more common than the shuffling of cards, voters will be thinking horse racing, blackjack and video gambling games on Election Day.

Gambling backers in those states — Montana, South Dakota, Minnesota and North Dakota — say it would be a boon at a time when agriculture, mining and timber industries are slumping.

But opponents, led by church groups, insist that recession or no, gambling is still the devil's work, breeding family problems and destroying the heartland's tranquil way of life.

North Dakota voters will decide whether to repeal a year-old law permitting pull-tabs and $2-a-bet-limit blackjack. Under that law, proceeds go for charitable purposes. If Measure 6 passes, only bingo and raffles would be legal.

Polls predict a close contest.

The gross income from this first year was $18.5 million, more than $17 million of which came from blackjack and pull-tabs, which are cards bearing concealed numbers. A gambler buys a card, pulls a tab to reveal the number and checks it against a posted list of winning numbers.

After state taxes and expenses, the remaining $11.4 million went to causes including public television, a multiple sclerosis foundation and the Fargo-Moorhead Civic Opera.

Meanwhile, bumper stickers are appearing in Minnesota, North Dakota's eastern neighbor, that read "Another Taxpayer For Horseshoeing." If Amendment 3 passes, Minnesota would become the 31st state to permit on-track pari-mutuel betting on horse races. Foes are led by a Baptist church-based group called Citizens Alert for Liberty and Morality (CALM). Passage of an amendment in Minnesota requires a 60 percent plurality.

In South Dakota, Amendment D would clear the way for coin-operated machines, bingo, lotteries and cards in any city or county that voted for it in local elections. If the amendment passes, the state would set betting limits, and resulting fees and taxes would go to the state's general fund. Church groups oppose it, while tourism, hotel and motel interests especially in the western part of the state have banded together as Citizens for South Dakota to back the amendment.

An opposition leader, the Rev. Richard Ward of Rapid City, said: "I'm a native South Dakotan and just feel that having lived all my life here and appreciating the life style, I certainly didn't think we need to open it up to casino-type, wide-open gambling."

But in Watertown, located in a portion of the state some call the "Bible Belt," a straw poll said 51 percent of those responding favored the limited gambling amendment, with 45 percent opposed and the rest undecided.

Montana voters will consider Initiative 92 which would authorize blackjack and electronically simulated games of cards, bingo and keno. Currently the state allows some limited legal gambling — certain card and bingo games. The initiative would specifically legalize keno and the electronic devices, which are already in wide use in the state although their legality is in dispute.

Supporters of the initiative who have banded together as the "92 U-Bet Campaign" say the measure would create a new industry to offset the sagging agriculture, mining and timber industries. Church groups counter that gambling would bring in crime, casinos and family troubles.

The proposal, said Jack Snyder, chairman of Montanans for Gambling, "is about controlling gambling in a rational, uniform manner resulting in jobs for our citizens, revenue for our local government and an extra attraction for our tourists."

The Cuban Missile Crisis: Part Two

October 24/25, 1962: The world waited anxiously as the U.S. fleet sailed into the Caribbean to enforce President Kennedy's naval quarantine of Cuba. At the same time, a Soviet fleet steamed toward Cuba. Neither the President nor his staff knew what would happen when the ships made contact. On October 25, Soviet ships carrying missiles turned back. But missiles still remained on Cuban soil. The White House Press Secretary warned: "Further action will be justified if construction of Cuban missile bases continues." No one wanted to think about the kind of "further action" that might come if the Soviets refused to dismantle the Cuban bases.

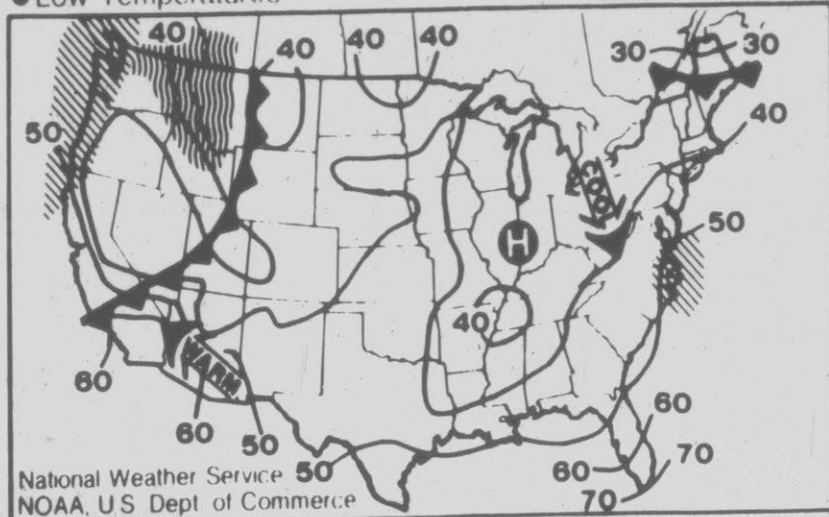

DO YOU KNOW — Who was President Kennedy's Secretary of Defense during the Cuban missile crisis?

FRIDAY'S ANSWER — Nikita Khrushchev was Premier of the Soviet Union during the Cuban missile crisis.

The Forecast For Tuesday, October 26
● Low Temperatures

National Weather Service NOAA, U.S. Dept. of Commerce

Fronts: Cold Warm Occluded Stationary

WEATHER FORECAST — The National Weather Service forecasts sunny but cooler weather for most areas Tuesday. Rain and showers are forecast in the Northwest. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
Gale and storm warnings were in effect in coastal areas of North Carolina today, but the storm center was moving away from the state's coast this morning.

Storm warnings continue in effect for the North Carolina coast from Cape Lookout northward and for the Albemarle and Pamlico sounds.

The storm center was moving gradually north northeastward this morning. Rain will taper off across the state today as the low pulls to the northeast and high pressure returns to the state.

Gale warnings are in effect south of Cape Lookout. Northerly winds 55 to 65 knots will be possible north of Cape Lookout as the low moves into that area. These winds will begin to subside later today.

The rain will continue over most of the state this morning but taper off over interior sections as the day wears on. Winds will slowly diminish during the day also as the storm center moves slowly away from North Carolina.

Even as the storm center moves away from the coast problems will not end for the Outer Banks. Northwest winds behind the storm center will push water from the sounds across the Outer Banks.

Temperatures will remain cool today with highs reaching upper 40s and 50s. Some light rain may linger east of the mountains tonight as lows dip into the 40s with 30s for the mountains. Sunny skies will spread in from the west Tuesday. Highs will reach upper 50s and low 60s.

All this wind gave the coast a real beating during the night as several areas reported beach erosion and coastal flooding. More reports will become available after daylight.

The rough weather was not confined only to the coast. A cold windswept rain soaked most sections of the state and light snow and sleet were reported at higher elevations of the North Carolina mountains.

Rainfall totals were heaviest in the east and ranged from a few hundredths of an inch in the mountains to almost 3 and a half inches at Cape Hatteras for the past 24 hours.

Temperatures held in the 40s most of the night but ranged from some 30s in the mountains to upper 60s on the Outer Banks.

Reagan Doubts Major Damage

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says he doesn't believe the nation's high unemployment rate will hurt Republican candidates' chances in the November elections.

Asked by reporters if unemployment would climb higher before starting to drop, the president said Sunday, "It could and it couldn't."

Unemployment reached a 42-year peak of 10.1 percent in September, and some economists have said that it is likely to continue rising.

Reagan spoke with reporters as he returned to the White House from a weekend at Camp David, Md.

feating Helms.

The idea is for the committee to take money received from this mailing and plow it back into more mailings, building the list of givers as Helms' organization did several years ago.

The letter is not the first her firm has sent out raising money by attacking Helms. She said her firm does mailings to raise money for groups such as the Democratic National Committee, the Democratic Senate Campaign Committee, a committee called Independent Action and U.S. Rep. Morris Udall, D-Arizona. Some of them have been aimed at Helms.

Although the letter does not say so, Ms. Keefer and most Democrats expect Hunt to be the Democrats' challenger for Helms' Senate seat when it is up in 1984.

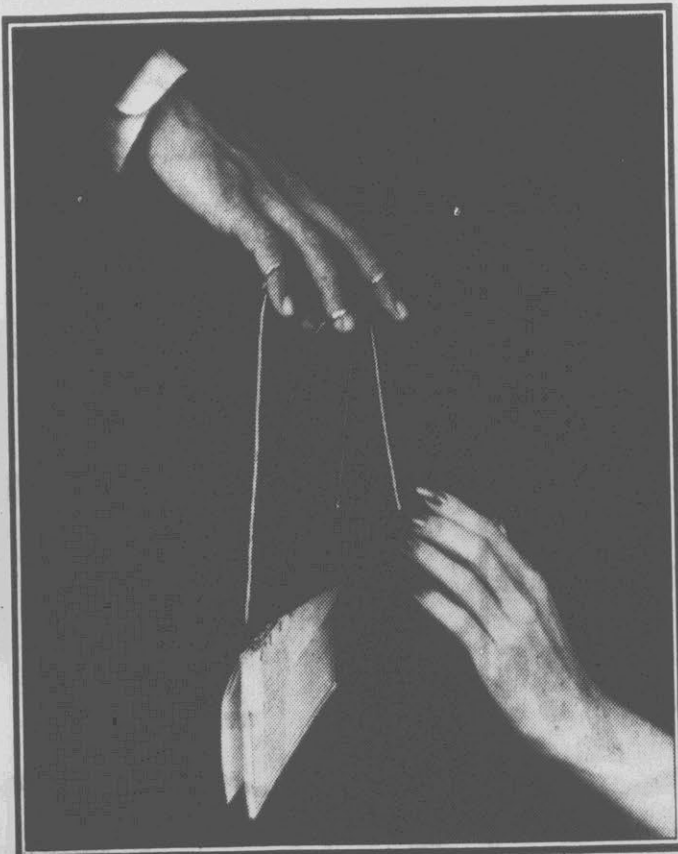

Included with the letter is a reprint of a news account about a poll showing Hunt leading Helms.

Hunt hasn't said if he'll run, but Democrats appear to be girding for just such a battle. And Ms. Keefer says Democratic leaders nationally are looking forward to it.

"People are sensing that Jesse Helms is increasingly vulnerable to defeat in North Carolina," she said. "They're saying it nationally, and in fact the word on the street is he might run for president, not because he would win but to be an ideological spokesman and to avoid a Senate race."

Ellis, head of the Congressional Club, dismissed her comments and said he knew of no plans for a Helms presidential campaign. "I don't know how she got so knowledgeable in Washington," he said. "If there is, I don't know anything about it."

When other financial institutions offer you money market checking...

Ask if there are strings attached.

Lots of financial institutions are beginning to offer checking accounts with "money market" rates. But, none of these accounts pay rates as high as Funds CheckingSM.

And, with Funds CheckingSM there are no strings attached.

Don't tie up your money in an account that requires passbook savings.

With Funds CheckingSM there are no low-interest balances to maintain. In fact, no minimum balances at all. Simply open with $1,000 and earn money market interest.

We'll pay you the highest interest rates in the state on checking for a simple $2 a month service charge. And, if you're 55 or older, we offer Funds CheckingSM with no fees whatsoever. (If you don't need checking privileges our $1,000 minimum Funds Management account earns the same interest rates as Funds CheckingSM with no fees.)

Don't forget about insurance.

Your Funds CheckingSM balance is insured to $100,000. Some financials offering high interest checking may forget to tell you that their repurchase agreement account isn't insured. So, ask about insurance before you tie the knot.

At North State, we'll be happy to explain all the particulars about our Funds CheckingSM account. And, we won't forget a thing. Because Funds CheckingSM simply pays higher interest on an insured deposit for a low monthly service fee. No strings attached.

Sharon Tells Inquiry He Authorized Militia Entry

By MARCUS ELIASON
Associated Press Writer
JERUSALEM (AP) — Defense Minister Ariel Sharon was quoted today as telling a judicial inquiry that he personally authorized Lebanese Christian militiamen to enter two Palestinian refugee camps in west Beirut to flush out PLO guerrillas.

Israel blames the militiamen for the subsequent massacre of hundreds of civilian men, women and children in the camps.

Sharon said his decision to allow the militia operation stemmed from an Israeli Cabinet decision Sept. 15 to have the Lebanese fighters take a wider combat role, according to reports on Israel Radio and Armed Forces Radio from staffers who left the hearing room.

With his political career hanging in the balance, Sharon testified in public before the judicial panel investigating Israeli conduct during the Beirut massacre.

Shortly after beginning his testimony, Sharon was quoted by an Armed Forces Radio as saying he was "surprised, shocked and agitated" when he learned of the bloodbath.

While the session was being held in public, reporters were not allowed to return once they left the room.

The Armed Forces Radio report said Sharon began by tracing the history of Israel's June 6 invasion of Lebanon and the background leading up to his decision to occupy west Beirut on Sept. 15, a day after the assassination of President-elect Bashir Gemayel.

Israeli news reports said Sharon insisted on testifying publicly before the three-man judicial panel because he wanted to demonstrate that he has nothing to hide.

Sharon's critics charge he made a tragic error in allowing Christian militiamen into the Sabra and Chatilla Palestinian refugee camps on Sept. 16.

Israel Radio said Prime Minister Menachem Begin would face the panel later this week, along with other members of his Cabinet. But Begin's spokesman Uri Porat said the prime minister had not been summoned yet.

For the first time since the hearings began last week, reporters and other members of the public were allowed into the hearing room today. However, the commission may bar the public from hearing portions of Sharon's statements, which probably will include what are considered sensitive military matters.

Sharon has said the army allowed Christian Phalangist militiamen into the Beirut camps in what was to have been a limited operation to drive out Palestine Liberation Organization guerrillas, but never believed "in our darkest dreams" that they would carry out a massacre.

Critics say the army should have taken into account the hostility between Lebanon's Christian militias and the Palestinians, especially since Phalangist militia leader Bashir Gemayel, then president-elect of Lebanon, had been murdered two days before.

There also has been controversy over when the Israeli army found out that hundreds of civilian men, women and children were being slaughtered, and when and how they moved to stop the killing.

Outrage over the massacre shook Begin's ruling coalition and sparked the largest anti-government public protest in the history of the Jewish state.

The military chief of staff, Lt. Gen. Raphael Eytan, testified for four hours behind closed doors Sunday, a commission announcement said. Eytan, accompanied by three aides, presented army background to the panel and then answered its questions, the commission announcement said.

Yitzhak Hofi, the former Mossad intelligence agency chief, testified last week in another closed session.

The commission announcement said the panel — appointed by Begin under heavy pressure at home and from abroad — was seeking testimony from foreign citizens, including Lebanese nationals, and from representatives of international organizations.

The commission expects to complete this week its collection of materials from the army, the defense and foreign ministries, Begin's office and the cabinet secretary, the announcement said. It also is collecting tapes from Israel Radio and Television, including some material that was not broadcast.

the announcement said. Commission investigators have begun interrogating witnesses on the basis of the material already received, it said.

Supreme Court President Yitzhak Kahan heads the commission, which includes another Supreme Court justice, Aharon Barak, and retired army Maj. Gen. Yona Efrat. Its chambers are located on the Hebrew University campus in Jerusalem.

Re-Hiring Considered

Burroughs Wellcome, which permanently laid off 51 workers at the Greenville facility at the end of November and placed 12 other workers on temporary layoff status, is looking into the possibility of rehiring some workers on a temporary basis, according to John McConney, general plant manager.

McConney said today that the company is "possibly going to need some on a temporary basis" but the situation would not involve a permanent rehiring.

"As of now, the hiring need has not been defined," McConney said. He pointed out, however, that the number of temporary employees added would probably be less than the 51 involved in the permanent layoff.

The spokesman explained that Burroughs Wellcome makes what he termed a seasonal product in Atroban and some workers would be brought in temporarily to get ready for fall packaging to meet the needs of the next calendar year. The number of employees has not been defined at this time, he said.

McConney said there is another area that the company is looking into that might result in some temporary rehiring but he said details on that are not available at this time.

He said it could be a "couple of weeks" before the company determines its rehiring needs.

Gymnastics Classes Set

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department is offering a new season of progressive gymnastics for youths ages 3 through 14 at Elm Street Center beginning Nov. 1.

Pre-schoolers will meet twice weekly on Mondays and Wednesdays at one of three time slots — 2:15-2:45; 2:45-3:15; or 3:45-4:15. Fee is $20.

School age children will meet three times weekly on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. Time slots are: 4-15-5:00 or 5:15-6. Fee $30.

These classes will run for six weeks. Registration is limited. Pre-registration is today or Wednesday at Elm Street from 4 to 6 p.m.

For more information, call the instructor, April Maxam at 752-1584.

EXTENDED WEATHER OUTLOOK FOR N.C.

Decreasing clouds near the coast Wednesday, otherwise fair weather Wednesday through Friday. Highs in 60s, some 70s mainly in southeast. Lows in the 40s with some 30s in the mountains.

Wrecks Cause Heavy Damage

An estimated $4,800 property damage resulted from two collisions investigated by Greenville police Friday.

Officers said heaviest damage resulted from an 8:55 a.m. collision at the intersection of Second and Evans Streets, involving vehicles driven by Beverly Combs Hitchcock of Route 1, Bethel, and Vernon Roosevelt Morris of Tice Trailer Park.

Police, who charged Ms. Hitchcock with failing to stop for a stop sign, estimated damage at $1,500 to the Hitchcock truck and $2,500 to the Morris car.

Cars driven by Thelma Briley Whitaker of 108 East Ninth St., and Vicky Joe Smith of Quail Hollow Trailer Park, collided about 11:12 a.m. on Reade Street, 65 feet south of the Third Street intersection.

Damage was estimated at $600 to the Whitaker car and $250 to the Smith vehicle.

Farm Scene

By LEROY JAMES
County Extension Chairman

Only a small fraction of the 1982 crop of soybeans and corn were forward priced earlier through the use of a cash forward contract or a future market hedge. This means that most of this fall's harvest is still to be priced.

With cash prices "scraping bottom" over the next several weeks grain producers should be evaluating practical alternatives to harvest selling at these distressed prices.

Many producers are reluctant to sell at these levels and would prefer to retain ownership. Retaining ownership for several months may be difficult for many producers because of inadequate storage space or the need for immediate cash flow.

All producers are eligible for the soybean loan program but only those who participated in three reduced acreage program for corn are eligible to use the corn loan.

In the case of soybeans, the $5.03 loan rate in Tennessee will generate about the same amount of cash flow as will actual sale of soybeans. Interest is paid on the loan only if cash prices rise enough to justify redemption from the loan.

Grain producers storing on the farm would incur cash storage costs of about 15 cents per bushel for the nine-month loan period. The cost allocation covers labor, electricity, maintenance and repairs, insurance on the stored crop and handling shrinkage.

In addition, any downturn in the futures market results in an out-of-pocket loss rather than just lower prices received from the sale of stored grain. The use of price-later or deferred pricing agreements with elevators should also be used with caution.

Ranked 10th Output Of Hazardous Wastes

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina industries have produced more than 1.78 billion pounds of hazardous waste since 1980 — about 310 pounds per resident — making it the 10th largest hazardous waste producer in the country, a state report says.

The figures are part of a report released in September by the N.C. Solid & Hazardous Waste Management Branch of the Department of Human Resources. The report was the first of its kind, since the reporting of hazardous waste became mandatory for companies producing more than 2,200 pounds of hazardous waste each month, according to a story in today's editions of The Charlotte Observer.

Before Nov. 19, 1980, hazardous-waste producers weren't required to report their hazardous waste and many disposed of it on site.

O. W. Strickland, supervisor of the N.C. Solid & Hazardous Waste Management Branch of the Department of Human Resources, says North Carolina industries ranked 10th in the nation, producing a total of 1,780,651,229 pounds of hazardous wastes.

Of that amount, 113,519,764 pounds was shipped out of state, including 47,856,591 pounds to South Carolina. Of the rest, 1.6 billion was treated at the site of creation. The rest was either incinerated, recycled, or put in hazardous waste landfills.

The chemical and allied products industry was the leading generator of hazardous waste with 22 of the nearly 1.78 billion total pounds. Furniture and fixtures followed with 13, trailed by textile mill products (12), machinery, (9), electric and electronic machinery (8), lumber and wood products (8), fabricated metal products (6), rubber and miscellaneous plastics (5), paper and allied products (3), primary metal industries (2).

Mecklenburg County has the most firms producing hazardous wastes — 72. The top 10 consists of Guilford (51) Davidson (28), Catawba (24), Caldwell (21), Wake (21), Forsyth (18), New Hanover (14), Scotland (12) Gaston (11) and Burke (11).

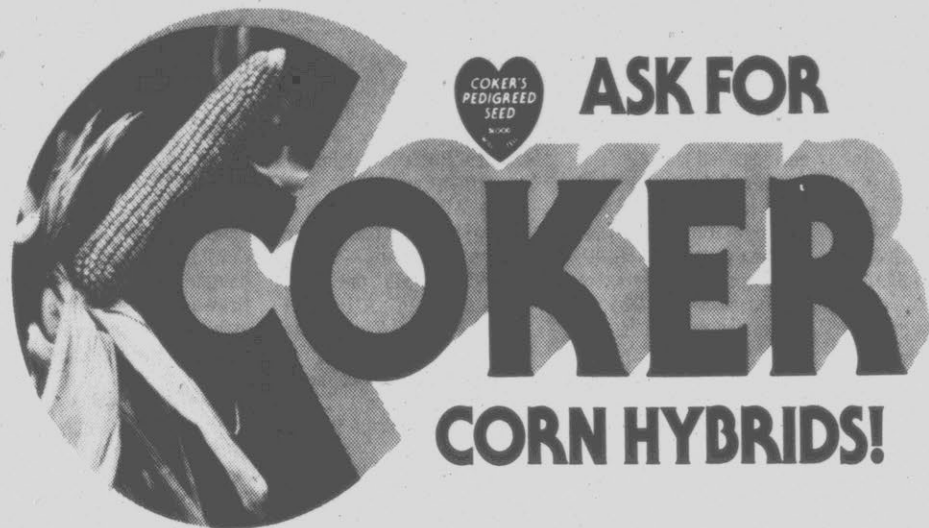

EXPLOSIVE BOTTLE
TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Explosives experts safely dismantled a small bomb hidden in a soft drink at a bus stop Sunday, authorities said.

the newspaper story said. Nearly 99 of the state's 806 hazardous waste generators are in 17 counties, most of them in the Piedmont. The top 10 counties by poundage are: New Hanover (1,407,742,397), Wake

(202,119,965), Cleveland (36,429,694), Mecklenburg (33,080,477), Forsyth (13,647,979), Granville (12,450,829), Cabarrus (9,976,577), Pitt (7,996,381), Caldwell (7,369,649) and Moore (5,456,324).

Six Collisions For City Yesterday

An estimated $8,850 property damage resulted from six traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Sunday.

Officers said heaviest damage resulted from a 2:40 a.m. collision on Greenville Boulevard, two-tenths of a mile west of the Granville Drive intersection, involving cars driven by Theresa Croom Tyson of 500 Verdant St., and David Christopher Pratt of Ayden.

Police, who charged Ms. Tyson with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety, estimated damage at $1,500 to the Tyson car and $1,300 to the Pratt auto.

Cars driven by Lisa Lane Steen of Ayden, and James Richard White Jr. of 505 E. Fifth St., collided about 10:22 a.m. on Fifth Street, 50 feet east of the Rotary Avenue intersection.

William Todd Rhodes of 107A Eric Court.

Cars driven by Bob Harrell Cannon of 101A Lakeview Terrace and Thomas Stuart Holderby of Reidsville, collided about 11:30 a.m. at the intersection of Greenville and Arlington Boulevards, causing an estimated $350 damage to the Cannon car and $500 damage to the Holderby auto.

A 10:52 a.m. mishap on Paige Drive, 600 feet west of the Memorial Drive intersection involved cars driven by Mary Jones Worsley of 1710B W. Conley St., and Jacqueline Maurice Scott of Route 1, Greenville.

Damage from the mishap was set at $200 to the Worsley car and $400 to the Scott vehicle.

Arrest Trio For Robbery

Three people from Ayden have been arrested following investigation of a break-in and safe robbery reported Oct. 7 at the Kash & Karry Store on Highway 43 at Bells Fork, according to Sheriff Ralph Tyson.

He said that officers arrested Randal Ray Hardee, 17, of Box 187; William Harvey Humbles III, 19, Village Trailer Park; and Donald Ray Brown, 20, Lot 109 Sunny Lane Trailer Park. Hardee was charged with breaking, entering and larceny and safecracking, Tyson said, while Humbles and Brown were each charged with safecracking.

In the incident, a safe containing approximately $2,000, money orders, deposit bags and various papers, was apparently loaded on a hand cart and wheeled out of the store, Tyson said. He said that 25 cartons of cigarettes were also reported missing. Damage to the store was estimated at $300.

The sheriff said the safe was found on a creek bank about a quarter of a mile east of Ayden on Highway 102. He said the safe had been cut open, apparently with a blow torch, and a few melted coins were found inside. Authorities recovered a hand cart from a pond located off the County Home Road, he said.

Tyson said other arrests are pending in the matter and investigation is continuing.

Vincent Lowe, President, BB&T

Thus, the loan application here. It's a way to take care of most of your loan and credit card request paperwork ahead of time, because we know perfectly well you have better things to do than sit around a bank answering questions.

BB&T'S LOAN LAUNCHER. ASKING FOR A CONSUMER LOAN CAN'T GET ANY SIMPLER.

All you do is fill out the form, then hand it, or even mail it, to any BB&T loan officer. You'll be given a quick answer by telephone and, if your loan is approved, asked to come in, sign the papers, and pick up the money you need for home improvements, car, bill consolidation, vacation, or whatever.

With BB&T's simple interest, you pay interest only on exactly the amount of money you owe for exactly the amount of time you owe it. So if you make payments early or pay extra amounts, you save money.

LOAN LAUNCHER IS THE FIRST STEP TO A SERVICE THAT WILL DO YOU CREDIT.

If you're approved for BB&T's Constant Credit, you'll have a personal line of credit and can get a loan in precisely the time it takes you to write a check. Say your car needs costly repairs. Or you run into a real bargain, but your checking account balance won't cover its cost. You just write a check for more than your balance and we automatically advance you enough to cover it in units of $100 up to your credit limit.

AND, FINALLY, LOAN LAUNCHER CAN PUT A TRUMP CARD IN YOUR HAND.

If you qualify for Visa or MasterCard, you'll have a powerful friend on your side. Because these two prestigious credit cards are honored by merchants around the corner, around the country, around the world. So you can get services, merchandise, transportation, even cash wherever you are.

So if you'd like to apply for Visa, MasterCard, Constant Credit, or a consumer loan for any worthwhile purpose, here's your chance. Pick up your pen, fill out the form and get it to BB&T. We're going to give credit where credit is due.

Why are we doing this, you ask? Why else? We want your business at BB&T, and we're going to give you the kinds of extras that will earn it.

Hens
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) (NCDA) — The North Carolina hen market was steady. Supplies burdensome. Demand light. Prices paid per pound for hens over seven pounds at farm for Monday and Tuesday slaughter was 10 cents.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market sold off sharply today amid concern that interest rates might be turning upward.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which reached 10-year highs last week, tumbled 21.89 to 1,009.57 by noon.

Declines outnumbered advances by more than 7 to 1 among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Expectations built up late last week that the Federal Reserve might lower its discount rate, the charge it sets on loans to private financial institutions.

But by today there had been no such move by the Fed, which had made five previous half-point cuts in the discount rate since late summer.

Brokers said the resulting letdown prompted forecasts that interest rates, after falling steeply of late, might reverse their decline. In the bond market this morning, prices of long-term government bonds dropped about $5 for every $1,000 in face value as rates rose. Stock traders, meanwhile, began scrambling to cash in on the market's recent spectacular gains.

Exxon, which reported slightly lower third-quarter earnings, fell 1 to 30 1/2.

Other losers among the most active stocks included International Business Machines, down 1 1/4 at 81 1/4; American Telephone & Telegraph, down 3/4 at 59 3/4, and Schlumberger, off 2 1/2 at 39 3/4.

The NYSE's composite index dropped 1.87 to 77.81. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down 6.66 at 319.94.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 39.64 million shares at noontime, against 42.69 million at the same point Friday.

Sizzlin' 65 Gives Peete Pensacola

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — Calvin Peete stalked a pair of rookie leaders for three rounds of the Pensacola Open. But in the end, his quest for the $36,000 first prize became a battle between himself and the Perdido Bay Country Club course.

"I didn't really feel any pressure. With the wind and tough pin placements, I felt if I could beat the course, I would have a chance to win," Peete said Sunday, after firing a 6-under-par 65 en route to a seven-stroke victory in the $200,000 event.

"It's a confidence builder that you can go out on the last day and shoot a good score like that," said Peete, who captured his fourth PGA title of the season. "It gives you a feeling that whenever you're within four or five shots, you've got a chance."

Peete, who finished with a 72-hole total of 16-under-par 268, began the final round two shots off the pace set by rookie Hal Sutton.

Sutton faltered on the front nine of the par-71, 7,093-yard Perdido course, however, and never seriously challenged Peete after falling behind on the seventh hole.

"I felt I had good control of the my golf swing and I played aggressively," said Peete. "A lot of times that's the difference between being a leader and the man who is pursuing."

"Players have a tendency to try to protect their lead, while the guy who is behind goes out and plays his normal game," added Peete, who birdied two of the first three holes to pull within a shot of the lead.

Sutton, who became the most prolific money-winning rookie ever, shot a final-round 74 to finish in a tie for second with 1980 Pensacola Open winner Dan Hallderson at 9-under-par 275.

U.S. Open champion Tom Watson was among five golfers at 276, while defending Pensacola champion Jerry Pate led a group at 277.

Joining Watson at 276 were George Burns, John Fought, Mike Sullivan and Brad Bryant.

Salazar Wins

Salazar Captures NYC Marathon

NEW YORK (AP) — Alberto Salazar and Grete Waitz got what they wanted in the New York City Marathon — victory. And Fred Lebow, the marathon's director, got what he wanted — a close race.

In a tense finish, decided by a late surge by Salazar, the 24-year-old long distance star from Eugene, Ore., edged gritty Rodolfo Gomez of Mexico Sunday in 2 hours, 9 minutes, 29 seconds for his third consecutive triumph in the New York City Marathon.

Waitz, 29, from Oslo, Norway, won the women's division for the fourth time in five years, in 2:27:14 — her first marathon finish since capturing the New York City event for the third year in a row in 1980.

Neither winner was close to breaking the world-bests — Salazar's 2:08:13 for men and New Zealander Allison Roe's 2:25:29 for women, both in this race last year.

Both, however, were very content to win. Salazar had suffered tendinitis in his left foot three weeks ago while training and had refrained from making a prediction on his time, as he had done in each of his two previous New York races.

"I'm not making any predictions, I just want to win," he said.

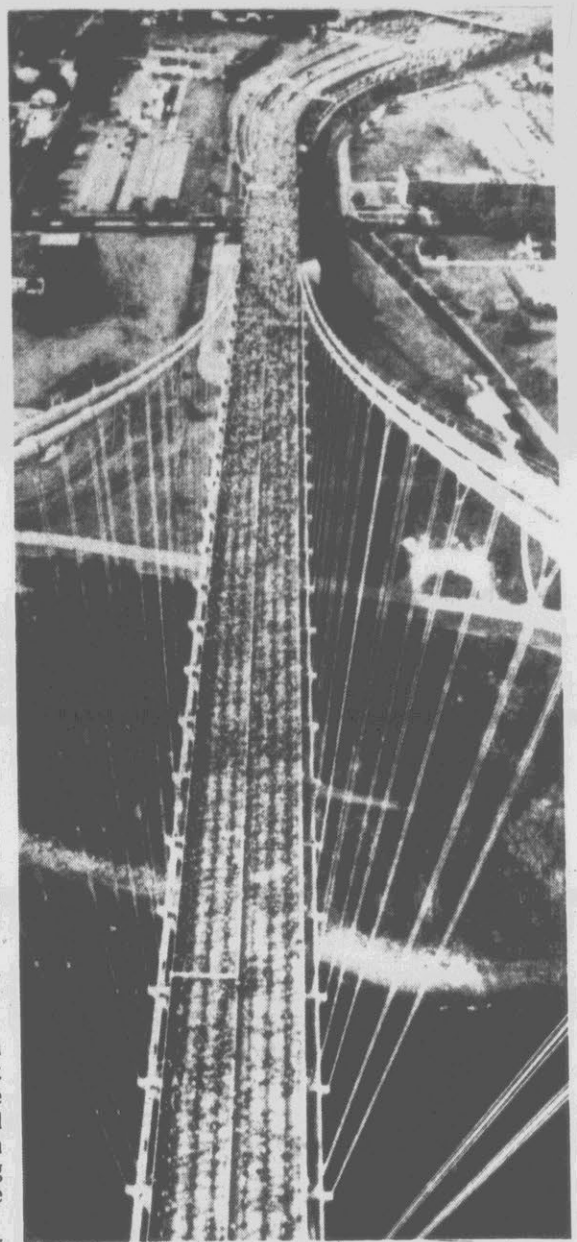

Waitz had the same idea after dropping out of last year's race near the 15-mile mark with shin splints and dropping out of the Boston Marathon in April with leg pains after leading past the 20-mile mark.

"I didn't want to go for any records," she said after winning easily. "I just ran for the victory. I was not concerned about the time. My goal was to complete the race."

Lebow was more concerned with a close finish than with the men's and women's winners running faster than Salazar and Roe did in 1981.

"We have the records already," he said. "I would like to see a competitive race. The New York City winner never has been challenged."

He was challenged Sunday. The confident Salazar got all he could handle from the dogged Gomez, who had been

Both runners admitted they were in pain during the race, but both gutted it out to produce the first close finish in the race's 13-year history. Only four seconds separated them at the end — Gomez

NFL Players Remain Firm

WASHINGTON (AP) — Five weeks into their strike, National Football League players have reaffirmed their support of the demands that first placed them on the sidelines.

Approximately 100 players, with representatives from every team in the league, attended a five-hour meeting Sunday to review the status of negotiations and prospects of ending a strike that has forced either the postponement or cancellation of five weekends of the regular season.

At the close of the meeting, which included a number of previously outspoken critics of the association's leadership, union President Gene Upshaw announced, "To a man they said they will not go back without a contract."

During Sunday's meeting, the union's 28 player representatives unanimously adopted a resolution reaffirming their support for a proposal first approved by the player reps in August.

The proposal calls for a collective bargaining agreement to include: immediate substantial wage increases for virtually all players; a guarantee that players will receive a fair share of future NFL revenues; elimination of wage inequities; lengthening of careers through elimination of incentives to cut older players for financial reasons; and rewarding performance through significant incentives.

The same resolution was passed by the player reps on Aug. 31 in Chicago, the site of their last meeting.

The player representatives also demanded the league's negotiators "bargain in good faith to end the strike."

"We came out of this meeting even more united than before," said Ed Garvey, executive director of the players' association.

The league's 1,500 players have been on strike since Sept.

21. Negotiations aimed at ending the league's first inseason strike were recessed Saturday with no date set to return to the bargaining table.

The recess ended 12 days of bargaining that included agreement on most of the non-economic issues that had separated both sides in the dispute.

The key economic questions remain, however, with both the union and the owners holding to their original positions.

Indians Continuing Attempts At Luring Martin As Manager

CLEVELAND (AP) — Dave Garcia, a personable, stable baseball man, suggested during his final days as the Cleveland Indians' manager that his replacement "should have a personality that is the opposite of mine."

The man to whom Garcia was referring, and the man the Indians are trying to lure to Cleveland, is Billy Martin.

Volatile, unpredictable, but undeniably capable of putting fans in the ballpark, Martin is now in hiding, probably on a hunting trip. Friends say he is trying to recover from the shock of being fired by a major league club for the sixth time — this time the Oakland A's.

Martin, 54, showed up last Wednesday night, the night of his firing, at a Lake Tahoe casino, where his friend Box Car Willie, the country singer, was performing. The ousted manager drew a laugh from the crowd when he requested the Hank Williams' tune, "I'm So Lonesome I Could Cry."

"I feel Billy is misunderstood more than anything," said Box Car Willie, whose real name is Lecil Travis Martin (no relation). "Billy's career is a lot like Box Car Willie's: The fans love me, but the people in the industry sometimes don't want to accept me."

That seems to have been the case for Martin in Oakland. When he was signed by the A's to a five-year contract in 1980, the franchise was in a shambles. The team had lost 108 games and had drawn just 307,000 people to the park in 1979.

Martin quickly matched an exciting style of play to the young players in Oakland, and the A's started winning — just as Martin's teams had done in Minnesota, Texas, Detroit and New York. The A's also attracted a million more fans in 1981 than they did in 1979.

But this year, as was the case in each of Martin's previous managerial stints, his team slipped.

Late in the year, he reportedly became extremely moody, once tearing up his office and another time leaving the ballpark in tears.

It was that sort of problem that evidently led to his firing this year, just one year after he led the A's to a division title. The same problem kept the Indians from hiring Martin after he was let go by Yankees' owner George

Schoendienst, Forsch To Speak At Sports Club

A trio of St. Louis Cardinals — led by Coach Albert "Red" Schoendienst — will be the featured speakers at the regular meeting of the Greenville Sports Club Tuesday at noon at the Holiday Inn.

Joining Schoendienst at the luncheon will be St. Louis pitcher Bob Forsch and Cardinal trainer Gene Gieselmann.

St. Louis won the 1982 World Series, four games to three, over the Milwaukee Brewers. The Cardinals clinched the title this past Wednesday night with a 6-3 victory over the Brewers.

Schoendienst, who will be the main speaker at the meeting, is now a Cardinal coach after having managed St. Louis for 12 years, the longest tenure for a Cardinal manager. He led the Cardinals to National League pennants in 1967 and 1968 and the World Championship in 1967.

Schoendienst also served as interim manager in 1980 after Whitey Herzog was moved to general manager. As a player, Schoendienst appeared in 2,216 games. He has 2,449 hits and a lifetime batting average of .289.

Forsch, 32, has been with the Cardinals since 1974, when he came up to the Big Leagues after stints with, among others, Tulsa and Arkansas. Forsch was 7-4 his first season and has a career best of 20-7 in 1977.

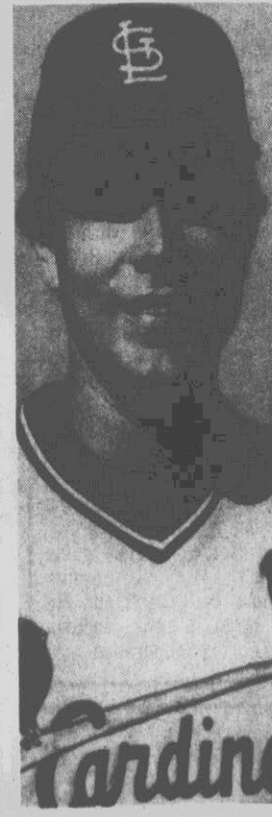

Forsch, a 6-4, 215-pound right-hander, had a career record of 94-73 with an ERA of 3.51 prior to this season. Forsch was 15-9 this season with one save and a 3.48 ERA.

Forsch was 0-2 in the World Series, losing 10-0 in the opener and 6-4 in the fifth game.

Forsch and his brother, Ken, are the first brother combination in baseball history to pitch no-hitters. Forsch threw his no-hitter against Philadelphia in his opening game of the season in 1978.

Gieselmann was the trainer for the National League All-Star team this year. A graduate of Wichita State, Gieselmann took over as head trainer for St. Louis in 1971.

In the off season, he is a trainer for all "Super Star" and "Super Team" competition in Florida and Hawaii.

Waltrip-Allison Duel Put On Hold

American 500 Postponed

ROCKINGHAM (AP) — It'll be another week of tense waiting for Darrell Waltrip and Bobby Allison.

Another case of the now-infamous "Rockingham weather" forced postponement of Sunday's Warner Hodgdon American 500 Grand National stock car race until next Sunday.

A cold rain began falling steadily about 30 minutes before the scheduled start of the 500-mile event at North Carolina Motor Speedway. Officials waited about 90 minutes before announcing the fourth postponement in the last six Grand National events here.

Last spring's Carolina 500 was rained out two consecutive weekends.

"I've been here six times now and race twice," said Bill Elliott. "This is absolutely the most depressing thing that a driver can go through."

Waltrip, who leads Allison by just 37 points in the battle for the Winston Cup season championship, also was disappointed by the postponement.

"We go through this so often here and it's hard on everybody — the drivers, the crews, the fans, everybody," Waltrip said. "We're all here ready to run and now we've got to wait it out."

This is a particularly frustrating delay for both Waltrip and Allison, but for different reasons. Waltrip, the defending Winston Cup champion, is on another late-season roll. The man who won seven races and finished no worse than third in 13 of the final 14 races a year ago has won three in a row and four of the last seven this season.

"Things are going so good for us, we hate to wait. We are ready every week."

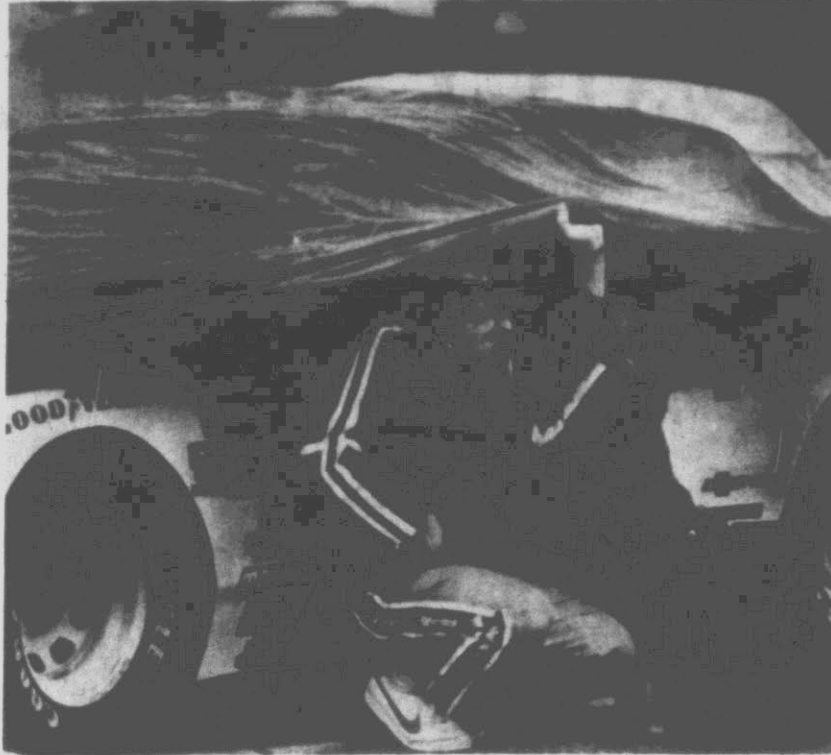

Meanwhile, Allison has dropped out of three straight races with blown engines and lost a 148-point lead over Waltrip in the process. The veteran of 17 Grand National seasons — still looking for his first championship — figures Rockingham's 1.017-mile-banked oval is the right place to turn his slide around.

"The driver who has won the American 500 has gone on to win the championship three of the past four years. I want to continue that pattern," Allison explained.

"It's a race and a track that can make or break you because it's so easy to get in trouble in Rockingham. Me or Darrell, either one, could leave here in great shape with a big point lead with only two races left. It (the postponement) is frustrating for everyone."

The 36-car lineup will remain the same, with record-setting pole sitter Cale Yarborough at the front for the 12:05 EST start.

Track officials have scheduled a practice session from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. on Saturday.

Salazar Triumphs...

"Halfway through the race, I had stitches in my side," said Salazar.

"The last three miles I had pains in my stomach," said Gomez.

"I didn't force the pace," said Salazar. "I had to lay back. I was nervous. I had to hang back and hope he didn't pull away from me."

Without "a rabbit" to set a fast early pace, Salazar took control of the tempo. But his pace was not nearly as fast as the record race he had run a year ago.

He led most of the way until Gomez forged ahead near the 18-mile mark. Gomez held the lead, opening what appeared to be a substantial margin, between the 19th and 20th miles.

But Salazar came back at him, catching him about the 21-mile mark.

Then, the two raced virtually shoulder-to-shoulder for nearly five miles, before Salazar literally left Gomez in a cloud of dust with about 600 yards to go.

By then, the pace had picked up considerably, with Salazar tossing in a 4:31 mile between the 25th and 26th miles.

"When Salazar changed the pace, I couldn't follow him," said the struggling Gomez. "I was surprised when he increased the tempo drastically. Then, we entered a dust storm."

At that point, Salazar made his decisive surge, and as Gomez said, "That was the margin of victory."

"I hope I don't (have to) make a habit of sprinting at the end," said Salazar. "My nerves can't take it."

It was Salazar's second straight close marathon victory. Six months ago at Boston, he beat Dick Beardsley by two seconds.

Beardsley, expected to be Salazar's closest competitor Sunday in a "grudge" race, never was a factor. He suffered a cramp near the nine-mile mark and wound up a disappointed 30th in 2:18:12.

Players Firm... SCOREBOARD

agement has refused to negotiate on are the implementation of a wage scale, creation of a central salary fund and the players' demand for a fixed percentage of the league's TV revenues.

Referring to the five points listed in their resolution, Garvey said: "Management has yet to come up with a system to address these issues. The wage scale and central fund are our way. If they have some solution we will listen to it."

"Management's side keeps saying there is an alternative," Garvey continued. "We say what is it?"

When the two sides recessed their negotiations on Saturday, mediator Sam Kagel instructed both sides to "reassess and re-examine" their positions.

"We reassess and re-examine and came back to where we are," Upshaw said Sunday night.

Sunday night, Garvey attempted to contact Jack Donlan, the owners' chief negotiator, in hopes of setting up a new round of talks. Garvey said Donlan, who was not at home, would return the call today.

"We don't want to delay the negotiations," Garvey said.

"We're ready to bargain tonight."

One of the issues discussed Sunday by the player representatives was the effect of a ruling last week by the U.S. Court of Appeals overturning a lower court decision that had prohibited club owners from filing suit in local courts to bar players from playing in a series of union-sponsored all-star games.

Joseph A. Yablonski, the union's chief counsel, said the union is reviewing its options including asking for a rehearing in the appellate court, taking the case to the U.S. Supreme Court or returning to U.S. District Court to attack the validity of the league's player contracts.

The player representatives also received a briefing on the decision last Thursday by National Labor Relations Board General Counsel William A. Lubbers to issue a complaint that management negotiators have failed to bargain in good faith.

Lubbers indicated he would monitor the negotiating process prior to seeking an injunction against the owners' negotiating team.

"I would think the likelihood of the injunction has increased as a result of the recess," Yablonski said.

Indians...

Steinbrenner — for the second time — in mid-1979. Cleveland instead turned to the mild-mannered Garcia.

"We didn't go after Billy then because he was so close to a nervous breakdown," said Indians President Gabe Paul, a longtime acquaintance of Martin. "When I saw him, he was in a shell. Otherwise, he would have been our manager. I didn't think he could manage any more then. But he made a remarkable recovery."

Now, the Indians are pulling out all stops in going after Martin. They reportedly have offered him a three-year deal worth $1 million that would be paid on top of the $250,000 a year Oakland owes him through 1985. There has been no official response from Martin's lawyer, Eddie Sapir.

Detractors who note that Martin has been unable to maintain his successes carry no weight in Cleveland. The Indians, who have not finished near the top since 1959 and who have not won a pennant since 1954, would be thrilled to contend for even one year.

"There would be no problems with him," Paul said. "Nobody knows Billy better than I do. All we want are results."

Likewise, Indians General Manager Phil Seghi is excited about the prospect of Martin managing here.

"I've known Billy since he was a ballplayer for me in Cincinnati. He was an aggressive ballplayer then, and he's an aggressive manager now," Seghi said. "I think if he wants to bring 'Billy Ball,' if that's what you want to call it, to Cleveland, that's fine. I think he played Billy Ball in Minnesota, Detroit and Texas."

If Martin chooses Cleveland over a number of other teams that may be interested, including the Yankees, he'll receive immediate support from at least two of the Indians' top players. Third baseman Toby Harrah and first baseman Mike Hargrove both worked for him in Texas.

"It would be tremendous for the city," Hargrove said. "I hope they sweeten the pot enough to get him."

"I like his brand of baseball," Harrah said. "He will use more squeeze plays in a week than we've had in my four years here. He knows how to get those easy runs. Billy is the best manager I have ever played for. When he says something, no one doubts his word."

Match Rained Out

East Carolina's tennis match with Richmond set for this afternoon was cancelled early this morning because of rain.

The match will not be made up.

ECU returns to action Wednesday when it plays host to UNC-Wilmington.

The 1982 home season for East Carolina ended Saturday, producing the ninth unbeaten season in Ficklen Stadium for the Pirates in 20 years of play.

That's something that Ed Emory would like to continue as the years go by, but he'd also like to be able to bring in some other teams with more of a national identification. While Central Michigan might be one of the stronger teams in the Mid-American Conference — and one of two Division I-A teams in that league — that team is not a household word in this part of the country.

And just as Missouri fans wore "East Who?" buttons a few weeks ago, and Florida State fans gave the Pirates no respect, ECU fans might just as easily be tempted to wear "Illinois Who?" buttons, and give Richmond and East Tennessee no respect.

At any rate, over the next few years, until the Pirates do gain a certain amount of respect among the other Division I-A's, it's more likely that the ECU schedule will have a lopsided look with more games on the road than at home.

East Carolina now enters the more lopsided end of this year's slate, playing its final four games on the road.

They must open the trip against nationally ranked West Virginia, which suffered a shutout victory at the hands of Penn State last weekend. Coach Ed Emory has said he enjoys playing a team after it has lost. "You don't learn losing," he has said.

However, West Virginia is a passing team, and despite not scoring against Penn State, they did move the ball well, passing for nearly 300 yards. Pass defense has been one of the weaker parts of the Pirate attack this season.

Still, the possibility of a victory is there, and we would assume that the Pirates will not just roll over and die because the Mountaineers are nationally ranked and are a passing team.

That game will be followed by a trip to Texas-Arlington. The Movin' Mavs have had their troubles earlier in the year, but won two of their last three, bowing to Wichita State Saturday. Illinois State coach Bob Otoliski, who's Redbirds played Wichita State two weeks ago, compared ECU to Wichita State favorably, saying the big difference in the two was the passing of WSU quarterback Prince McJunkins. Wichita State had a tougher time beating UT-A, however, than it did ISU, and didn't have to play the Mavs at home — with the Southland Conference officials.

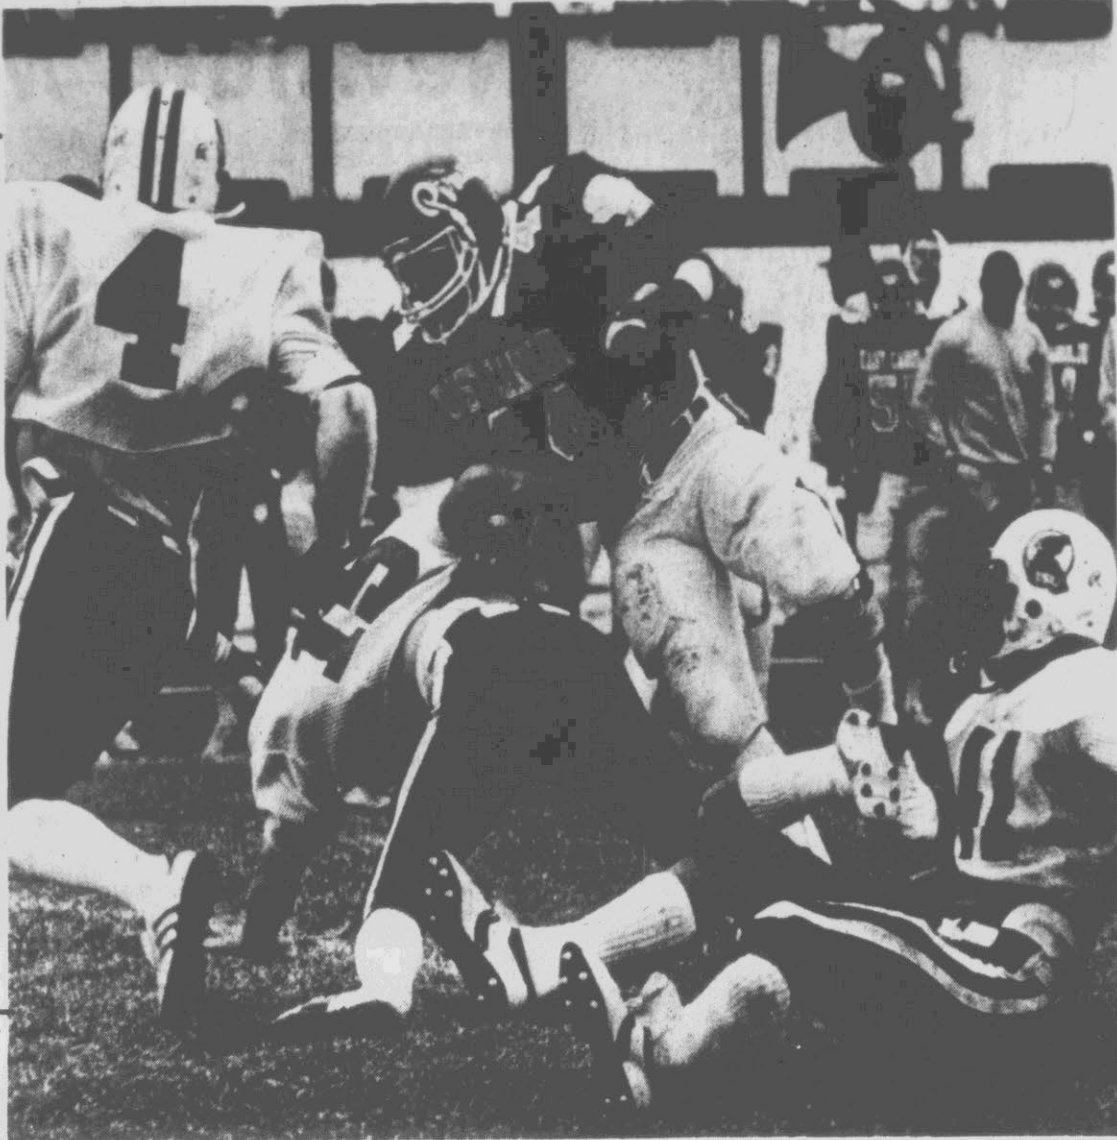

After that comes a trip to William & Mary, where emotion may play a big role in the game. And that, too, can be a dangerous thing. William & Mary passed the Pirates silly last year in the final game of the season, ending Emory's hopes of a winning season in that season finale. If there is any game the Pirates want to win this year, it will be that one.

The season then closes out in Philadelphia against Temple University. The Owls may not get many national headlines, but they play an outstanding schedule, and have played both Pittsburgh and Penn State tough this year. It will be no easy task.

The Pirates, now 4-3, have an excellent shot at a winning season, needing only two wins in the last four games. It won't be easy, and there are no patsies along the way.

Struggles Ahead

East Carolina running back Earnest Byner bulls ahead for yardage Saturday in the Pirates' 21-0 victory over Illinois State. Byner rushed for 68 yards to help ECU win its final home game of the year. Trying to bring him down is ISU free safety Mike Prior. Cornerback Ray Jalivay (4) moves in to help. (Reflector photo by Tommy Forrest)

Offensive Line, Banks Honored

The entire East Carolina University offensive line has been named jointly as the Offensive Players of the Week and linebacker Kevin Banks was selected as the Defensive Player of the Week.

The selections were announced this morning after the ECU coaching staff viewed films Sunday of ECU's 21-0 victory over Illinois State.

The Pirate offensive line, which was instrumental in ECU running up 518 yards total offense Saturday against ISU, consists of Terry Long and Norman Quick at guards, John Floyd at center and Tom Carnes and John Robertson at tackles.

Jeff Autry, a 6-3, 250-pound sophomore from Covington, Ga., split time at tackle and was also picked for the award. "The offensive line played well enough for East Carolina to have won 60-0," ECU coach Ed Emory said.

Long, the team's strongest player, is a 6-0, 279-pound junior from Columbia, S.C., and Quick is a 6-2, 245-pound sophomore. Floyd is a 6-1, 248-pound junior from Fairmont, N.C.

Carnes is a 6-5, 264-pound senior from Norfolk, Va., and Robertson is a 6-6, 250-pound junior from Eden, N.C.

Banks, a 5-11, 221-pound junior from Gloucester, Va., had 10 tackles (two solo, six primary and two assists) and the "Big Play" of the week. He also had a quarterback sack, one tackle for loss and one blocked pass.

"He played well," Emory said. "He's a very pleasant surprise at linebacker this season."

Calvin Adams, a 5-10, 165-pound sophomore from High Point, was the Speciality Player of the Week.

East Carolina now 4-3, travels to West Virginia this week. The Mountaineers, ranked 13th in the nation by the AP last week, lost to Penn State, 24-0, Saturday.

West Virginia, now 5-2, is expected to be without starting quarterback Jeff Hostetter and may be without tailback Tom Gray.

Hostetter has a sprained big toe and a hyperextended knee but played anyway against PSU, completing 19 of 37 passes for 250 yards. He also had two passes intercepted.

Sophomore Kevin White will start Saturday against ECU, West Virginia coach Don Nehlsen said.

"His toe was bothering him," Nehlsen said. "We probably shouldn't have played him, but it was Penn State."

Hostetter transferred to West Virginia from Penn State.

"We are not going to play Jeff until he's healthy," Nehlsen said.

Gray has cracked ribs and will probably miss a game or two. He caught eight passes for 88 yards and carried 14 times for 48 yards against PSU.

West Virginia defeated ECU, 20-3, last season.

The game is the first of four straight road games for ECU, which completed its home season Saturday.

After facing the Mountaineers, the Pirates travel to Texas-Arlington, William & Mary and Temple.

What's Wrong With The LSU Offense???

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — The question was asked again and again: What was wrong with the offense of 14th-ranked Louisiana State?

In the wake of the Tigers' 14-6 victory Saturday night over independent South Carolina, LSU Coach Jerry Stovall said he planned to spend plenty of time viewing films to see if he could find the problem.

"It was obvious, we had trouble moving the ball. We were inconsistent," Stovall said. "It wasn't pretty, but we did win. Let's hope it was only a temporary thing."

Stovall gave credit to 3-4 South Carolina, a three-touchdown underdog which played an inspired game on defense.

LSU finished with only 12 first downs and 256 yards total offense. The Tigers went into the game averaging 430 yards a contest.

LSU, 5-0-1 and off to the best start since the 1973 Tiger club won its first nine games, needs its potent offense back fast. Ole Miss and Alabama are the next two foes on the schedule.

Those are "must" victories for the Tigers if they want to stay in the Southeastern Conference race and have a shot at the Sugar Bowl.

Before a record crowd of 78,944, defensive players were the stars in the intersectional matchup.

"Our Bandits (the LSU defense) played superbly and the kicking game was good," said Stovall. "But give their defense a lot of credit too. They came up with some big plays."

Senior quarterback Alan Risher threw scoring passes of six and 25 yards to Eric Martin in the first half for LSU's lone touchdowns. Otherwise, the offense sputtered.

LSU didn't convert on a third down play until nine minutes were left in the game.

Trinity Rolls To Seventh Straight Win

EDENTON — Trinity rolled to a 48-27 flag football victory over Edenton Saturday, to remain unbeaten through seven games.

Trinity got on the scoreboard in the first period on an eight yard run by John Moran, then added another score in the second period on a seven-yard run by Moran for a 14-0 lead. Edenton came back to score on a 27-yard pass to cut it to 14-6 at the half.

David Casper scored on a 28-yard run in the third period, raising the score to 27-6.

In the final period, both teams went wild. Trinity scored on a one-yard run by Casper, followed by a three-yard run by Moran for a 33-6 lead. Edenton scored on a 49-yard pass, and then Moran hit Darrell Wells on a 30-yard scoring pass. Edenton scored from 32 yards out on a pass, but Casper returned the kickoff 75 yards for the final Trinity score, making it 48-20. Edenton then scored on a 22-yard pass to close out the scoring.

Edenton is now 3-3 on the season. Trinity, which has now qualified for the state playoffs, plays host to New Bern on Thursday in its final game of the regular season.

SHOPLIFTING

makes you a criminal!

And criminals do get caught! Now the stores are wise to shoplifters and have the manpower and sophisticated equipment to prove it. Closed circuit cameras, undercover people, specially trained tagging systems, are all used to successfully catch shoplifters! And the stores are taking legal actions! Shoplifters face even stiffer fines — even jail when they're caught! plus the humiliation of getting arrested and a criminal record that could effect future schooling, jobs, credit rating, and the respect and trust of family and friends. Shoplifting like any other crime... just doesn't pay!

'No Satisfaction' From Loud, Lavish Offering

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Drama Critic
NEW YORK (AP) - Early in the second act, a prancing lad, stripped to the waist, lips and tongue akimbo, essays a No-Cal Mick Jagger, yowling, "I don't - get no - satis - faction."
That pretty well sums up "Rock 'n Roll: The First 5,000 Years," a loud, lavish, awful, 70-song, 25-performer "multi-media" rock revue opening Sunday on Broadway.
You don't get no satisfaction - unless you're the sort who gets blissed out, if not struck deaf, by rock's sheer, raw power. In which case you'd do better watching The Who smoke dynamite.
Foaled by Bob Gill and Robert Rabinowitz, creators of the multi-media "Beatlemania" of a few Broadway seasons ago, "Rock" employs basically the same film, photo-montage and rock-music techniques.
But mercy, it's so pretentious, purporting via split-screen film and photos to tell the story of mankind as the performers behind a see-through screen or below it, the story of rock 'n' roll.
A rush of images fill the screens - Egyptian, Greek and Roman antiquity, Eisenhower, pro football, Coretta King, skateboarding, space exploration. Ms. magazine covers, the Depression, Vietnam, big-city riots, the Great War, psychedelia, hippies in flowered fields, Nixon, Hitler, John F. Kennedy, the assassination of Sadat, a mother buying her daughter a fur coat.
At first, there's a vague sequence to it, a vague parallel of very ancient history to the early, innocent days of rock and such rock heroes as Jerry Lee Lewis, Chuck Berry, Elvis, Chubby Checker.
But soon that, like the music, just becomes one eye and ear-boggling mess. You start wondering which will succumb first, your hearing, your mind or the phalanx of huge speakers standing guard to make certain no patron goes unthrobbed.
True, there are some good moments - the "Tubular Bells" number, Joyce Leigh

Bowden's Carole King-ing on "I Feel the Earth Move," the "Mrs. Robinson" bit, and Rob Barnes' whimsically marching "Say It Loud, I'm Black and I'm Proud."
Such times are few, surrounded by one forgettable impression of rock star after another, the big hits punctuated by often clumsy, obvious film and photo parallels.
Heavy metal brings on shots of Hitler Youth, Vietnam protest films, the music of Bob Dylan, the first of the great nostril singers. Space travel begets a suitably bizarre David Bowie clone. The A-bomb at Hiroshima, after a loud, rumbling low-frequency sound effect, yields "Imagine" (what else?), wistfully sung by a John Lennon look-alike.
There's also a visual comparison of the Watergate hearings with the Nuremberg trials. I forget what rock hits underscored that. But then, there's a whole lot in this caper to forget anyway.
It keeps reminding you how much of rock is throw-away music, music you once got stoned on or even danced to, but not music that lasts - unlike the wares of "Beatlemania."
The show, awkwardly trying to show how the old yields to the new, starts with a Frank Sinatra recording

"Love is a Many Splendored Thing," a forget-it ballad if ever. But at least there was a measure of craftsmanship in that song.
Not so the majority of hits revived in "Rock." They just get louder and lazier. For the record, the busy but routine choreography and direction is by Joe Layton, who in his time has done much better.
He's wasted his time and talent on this one. The only thing that could improve "Rock 'n Roll: The First 5,000 Years" is a massive power failure.
Patricia O'Haire of the New York Daily News said of the musical, "... what is being presented on stage is more fluff than substance. More to the point, it has no point at all."
Robert Palmer of The New York Times said, "This is one rock musical rock fans will actually enjoy, and for theatergoers who haven't yet made peace with the electronic monster in their midst, it's the best introduction this side of the real thing."

Newhart, MASH Back Tonight

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) - Dick Loudon, who writes do-it-yourself books on subjects like easier wood paneling, is about to fulfill his dream of owning an old Vermont inn.
Before finalizing the deal, he asks his wife for an opinion:
"I like it," she says.
Pause... "No, you don't."
"I'm excited about it," she says.
Double pause... "No, you're not."
Few people can make this comic exchange work. But Bob Newhart can, and does. With his wry inflection and deadpan delivery, Newhart gave psychiatry a funny name in the old "Bob Newhart Show." Now he's doing the same thing for innkeeping in "Newhart," the new CBS series opening tonight.

The trend in sophisticated sitcoms is to have ensemble casts who spread around the jokes. But when your name is the title, the show's on your shoulders. Newhart doesn't play Dick Loudon as much as he plays his brand of subtle, understated comedy.

Dick is a history buff, another reason why he's keen on the Stratford Inn, which was built in 1774 and in need of modernization. He discovers that James Madison once stayed there. Just think of all that can be learned about Madison.
Like what? asks his dubious wife.

Harmony To Discord Site

UNITED NATIONS (AP) - Conductor Zubin Mehta and his New York Philharmonic brought a little harmony to the United Nations, where discord has been a frequent visitor.
Mehta observed the irony. "One thought crosses my mind - that on such an auspicious occasion, you consider that we can play harmony and you can't," he told the cheering audience at the end of Sunday's "U.N. Day" performance, celebrating the 37th anniversary of the charter that established the world organization.
U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar observed earlier that 1982 was "a year when discord more often than not triumphed over harmony" at the world body.

The orchestra opened with "Sequoia," inspired by the giant California redwoods and written by Joan Tower, assistant professor of music at Bard College in New York City, and ended with "Pictures At An Exhibition," by Soviet composer Modest Mussorgsky.
The other composition was Beethoven's "Concerto in D Major for Violin," with Israeli-born Pinchas Zuckerman as soloist.

Like, "he wasn't particular where he slept."
"Newhart" gets mileage out of the century gap. When the inn's first guests arrive, Dick checks the bottom line in the dusty register and finds that the going rate is a farthing.
And when the guests call the front desk and request a radiator, Newhart gets to play with his favorite comedic prop: the telephone.
"Newhart" misses Suzanne Pleshette, his wife from another TV life. Her vitality energized Newhart and the previous show. She also was cheeky enough to occasionally knock his stuffing out. Mary Frann's Mrs. Loudon lacks spunk.

The other characters may grow on you. They're certainly an odd lot: an absent-minded handyman (Tom Poston), who is far from handy, the neighborly souvenir shop owner and perpetual liar (Steven Kampmann), and the wealthy maid (Jennifer Holmes), who wants the job to see "what it's like to be average."
Her credentials: a degree in European history, current classes at Dartmouth in Renaissance theology, and Olympic ski team potential.
"That's basically what we're looking for," says Dick. "As a matter of fact, I can't see any reason not to vote for you."
"Newhart" is good but also lucky, since it follows the stately "M-A-S-H," which should do well in the ratings in its final season.

Sadly for quality TV fans, there's a light at the end of the tunnel, as the Korean War will end with a two-hour movie in February. After 10 years, the producers and some of the cast felt the show was running out of stories. They - not CBS - decided to bring the boys home.
"M-A-S-H," which has the first original episode of its short season tonight, confirms why it will be sorely missed. Alan Alda co-wrote this episode, and the treatment displays the program's hallmarks of jabbing humor and strong underlying feeling.
It showcases a longtime bit player, Nurse Kellye (Kellye Nakahara), who rebels at being a wallflower, and is angry that Hawkeye (Alda) doesn't notice her special qualities because he only sees conventional beauty.
"Sorry she's not here," says Kellye, alone in the nurses' tent when Hawkeye arrives.

"Who?"
"Whoever you came to see."

More Than Half From Elsewhere

WASHINGTON (AP) - More than half the people living in the western United States were born in states other than the one in which they now reside, according to a population study released by the Census Bureau.

Nationwide, 36 percent of Americans moved to a state different from the one in which they were born, the United States Population Data Sheet of the Population Reference Bureau said Sunday.

The report illustrated the tendency of Americans to move to southern and western states.

The Mountain states had the highest percentage of residents who were born elsewhere, 56 percent, followed by the Pacific states, 54 percent.

Of the dozen states with 50 percent or more born elsewhere, only Florida, the District of Columbia and New Hampshire were in another region.

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, OCT. 26, 1982

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: An excellent day to put in motion new ideas that could lead to greater abundance in the future. Contact persons who are aware of modern trends and who can work in harmony with you.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Try to gain the cooperation of clever persons for a fine plan you have in mind. Take no chances with your reputation now.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Get in touch with persons who can be helpful in furthering your civic aims. Consult business expert for advice you need.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Know better what is expected of you by associates and then you can deal with them more equitably. Avoid a troublemaker.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You can reach more accord with loved one at this time. A higher-up can give you the support you need now.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Contact progressive friends and make future plans for mutual gain. You comprehend worldly affairs better at this time.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Pay attention to what a co-worker has to suggest for greater mutual success. Avoid one who likes to waste your time.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Find a new outlet for your fine talents and gain added income. Seek a better way to handle regular routines.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Make sure your business matters are handled wisely. Take health treatments and be ready to handle difficult tasks.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Your creativity is high now and you can accomplish a great deal. A fine time to repay social obligations.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Study conditions at home carefully and make needed changes. Make your environment more modern and add to its value.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Obtain important data you need in order to operate more intelligently with your associates. Engage in favorite hobby.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Organize your affairs so you can operate more smoothly and efficiently. Do those things that will please family members.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be interested in new ideas and systems, so make certain the most modern type education is provided and then the maximum of success can be realized. A gentle soul here who should also have musical training.

Ending Stay At Heart Institute

HOUSTON (AP) — Indian president Zail Singh will end his nearly month-long stay at the Texas Heart Institute this week to return to New Delhi, a spokesman says.

Singh, 66, who underwent bypass surgery Oct. 6 at the Houston hospital, will leave Friday, a spokesman said

Sunday. Heart transplant pioneer Dr. Denton Cooley performed the operation. Singh is "doing very well," said a member of his staff who asked not to be identified. "He will be leaving on the 29th and returning to New Delhi on the 31st after a day in New York."

Q.1—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠8752 ♥6 ♦QJ105 ♣A763
 The bidding has proceeded:
 West North East South
 1 ♦ 2 ♣* Pass ?

*preemptive

What action do you take?

A.—What has happened to the heart suit? It belongs to the enemy. If you pass timidly or make a half hearted raise to three spades, there is every likelihood that your opponents, who have by far the majority of the points, will locate their fit. Jump to four spades. Besides the fact that you might make that contract if there is a magic fit, you are increasing the preempt to a level where West will not know what to do.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠A1072 ♥7 ♦J954 ♣AQ95
 North East South West
 1 ♥ Pass 1 ♣ Pass 3 ♣ Pass ?

What action do you take?

A.—You have the equivalent of an opening bid and partner has made a jump. Therefore, slam is in the offing. However, you cannot force the issue because you could have two or more fast losers in diamonds and partner's heart values won't be carrying their full weight. Inform partner of your interest with a cue-bid of four clubs, but go no further than four spades unless partner cooperates strongly.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠AJ854 ♥6 ♦95 ♣109852
 The bidding has proceeded:
 West North East South
 1 ♥ Dble 4 ♥ ?

What action do you take?

A.—Aggressive bidding by the enemy has disrupted the normal flow of communications for your side. You do not have much in the way of high cards but, opposite a takeout double, your hand has tremendous trick-taking possibilities. As a rule of thumb, when you have a 5-5-2-1 shape and partner has made an inforamatory double indicating support for both of your suits, bid twice as much as your point-count dictates. Here, a bid of four spades is well within your reach.

Q.4—North-South vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠7 ♥A10654 ♦93 ♣KJ852
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♣ 3 ♦ ?

What action do you take?

A.—Sometimes preempts accomplish their purpose—that's why people continue to use them. East's jump to three diamonds on this hand has made life difficult for South. South's hand just isn't good enough for a free bid at the three- or four-level. He should pass and hope that his partner can take some action. If it turns out that the opponents have talked you out of something, that is the price you occasionally have to pay for a sound bidding structure.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠KQ83 ♥95 ♦82 ♣AJ1076
 Partner opens the bidding with one diamond. What do you respond?

A.—Regardless of whether you play four- or five-card major suit opening bids, you should respond two clubs. Do not make the "cheap" response of one spade on a hand where you are strong enough to bid naturally. Besides, one spade may not be all that economical. If opener rebids two diamonds, you would have to show your second suit at the three-level!

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠K95 ♥AQ62 ♦A7 ♣A1095
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 NT Pass 3 ♣ Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—You don't know whether partner is interested in game or slam, and you don't really care. You could hardly have a better hand for him—all primes, control of every suit and a ruffing value. Bid four clubs. That establishes spades as trumps and at the same time shows a maximum no trump with first-round control in clubs. If partner is interested in slam, he will go on from there; if not, he will sign off at four spades.

Discordant Note Facing Baptists

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A proposal increasing the number of members a church may have on the Baptist State Convention's General Board and the boards of its 12 institutions and agencies may again pit big churches against smaller ones.

The practice of restricting the number of members a church can have on the boards began in 1976, when small churches protested that their voice was being lost because agencies and universities were drawing most of their trustees from larger churches. The convention then recommended that no church can have six members serv-

NCAE Testing Its Clout In Number of State Campaigns

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The N.C. Association of Educators says it poured $101,000 in campaign contributions into state races with an 86 percent success rate of those it endorsed, but it may have made some powerful enemies in the process.

A governor's office source, who asked not to be identified, says teachers are definitely more influential now than in the past.

"You can tell by watching candidates for the legislature fall all over themselves for the teachers' endorsement. It's significant when a group can raise $100,000 for political spending," he said.

But, he adds, "You don't get much out of the legislature by insulting people like Kenneth Royall. Let's say you put $4,000 into a race where the other guy wins. After it's over, how do you go to the winner and say, 'Senator Royall, we need such-and-such.'"

The NCAE, which represents 41,000 of the state's 50,000 teachers, contributed the maximum amount under the law — $4,000 — to political unknown Rosalie

Gates, a Democrat running against Sen. Kenneth Royall in District 13.

"They gave her money - they gave her a lot of money," said Royall, chairman of the state's Advisory Budget Commission, who faces no opposition in the general election. "It was aimed at me, I know it was. I think it was a mistake they made, but that's their business."

But NCAE leaders say they are generally untroubled at facing legislators they opposed. "And it's made some of them more responsive," said an NCAE political leader, who asked not to be identified. "They know we've been there."

NCAE directors agreed to hire their first full-time political coordinator two years ago and escalated their political commitment with the 1981 election of John Wilson as NCAE president. Wilson, one of the most outspoken, controversial leaders the teachers' group has had, was at the helm as teachers began issuing legislative "report cards," rating voting records on education.

"Rating political influence on a scale of 1 to 10, we started at about a 2," said Wilson, who is no longer president of the group. "Now, we're probably up to about a 5. I think we're going in the right direction. But we probably have a long way to go as far as finances and contributions and putting together the solid constituency support a politician would need."

Since then, the group has given $1,000 to Lura Tally, a House member who won the Democratic nomination for one of two Senate seats in the 12th District. She joined incumbent Anthony Rand in edging out incumbent Joe Raynor.

In Senate District 22, teachers gave $2,000 to James Polk of Charlotte, a Democratic challenger running for the Senate. He won the primary and faces opposition in the general election.

In Senate District 28, the NCAE gave $1,000 each to Zeb Shepherd and Dennis Winner, challengers running for the Democratic nomination for two seats, and gave no contribution to incumbent Sen. Bob Swain of Asheville. Swain and Winner won.

Four States Face Bottle Referendum

By SCOTT KRAFT
Associated Press Writer

The battle over empty soda bottles and beer cans — and the nickels shoppers would get for lugging them back to market — rages in four Western states this election year as voters consider adopting bottle-deposit laws.

The hottest and costliest skirmish over deposit laws is in California, where opponents have poured about $4 million into a contest that supporters say could affect the future of bottle legislation in other states.

"We got New York this spring," said Sandra Nelson, the bottle-bill lobbyist for Environmental Action in Washington. If California passes the measure in November, she said, it will be "like a death knell" for deposit law opponents.

Initiatives also are on the ballot in Colorado, Arizona and Washington state, marking the environmental groups' broadest effort in more than three years to put mandatory deposit laws on state books.

In Massachusetts, a Nov. 2 referendum would repeal a deposit law already on the books but not set to take effect until Jan. 17.

Nine states, beginning with Oregon in 1972, have approved some form of bottle-can deposit plan aimed at reducing litter and increasing recycling. The latest was New York, where the Legislature passed a bottle bill last spring.

Proponents — environmental groups as well as farmers — say bottle laws reduce litter, save tax dollars in trash and landfill costs and conserve energy by recycling glass and aluminum.

Opponents — led by beverage manufacturers and bottlers and organized labor — say bottle laws raise the price of beer and soft drinks, force people in the container industry out of work, hurt charitable and for-profit recycling efforts and fail to significantly reduce litter.

"There has been, it seems, a vigorous push by a very small hardcore group of dedicated lobbyists to get this on the ballot in several states, but they are an extremely small minority," says Roger Bernstein, of the Glass Packaging Institute, for years a leader against mandatory deposit bottle bills.

The issue also is being considered in Rhode Island, where 25 of the state's 39 cities are voting on non-binding resolutions to urge the General Assembly to pass a bottle bill.

Bottle bills have been peddled, recycled and peddled again since the early 1970s — in Congress, state legislatures, statewide initiatives and city commissions. This year is the third try for the initiative in Washington state.

Recent statewide votes on the issue haven't fared well. Five initiatives have been offered since 1979 — and all were defeated.

California's Proposition 11 is based on Oregon's law, as are most deposit laws. It would buyers of beer, soft drinks or mineral water to pay a nickel deposit on each can or bottle. The deposit would be refunded when the customer returned the empty container.

As of mid-September, Proposition 11 opponents had raised $3.7 million and a spokesman for the group says the war chest has grown steadily. Supporters of the bottle-deposit issue have spent less than $1 million, but opinion polls in the state show them leading.

California has 16 glass container manufacturing plants — the most in the nation, and the can making industry also is concentrated there.

"We've been behind in the polls, but certainly a lot less behind than three or four months ago," says Gilbert Moore, of the opposition, Californians for Sensible Laws.

A television advertising blitz in Colorado has slashed the proponents' lead on Issue 5 as well, Ms. Nelson said. She said she expects opponents to outspend proponents about 3 to 1.

The opposition group, Coloradans for Voluntary Recycling, claims a mandatory bottle deposit will replace effective, convenient and profitable voluntary recycling with a cumbersome and expensive container collection system.

Initiative 414 in Washington state is similar to a measure voters rejected in 1979.

NOTICE

Elcom, Inc., Telecommunications Partners, Ltd. and Behrman of North Carolina are applicants before the Federal Communications Commission (Commission) for construction permits for a new UHF commercial television station on channel 14. Elcom, Inc. and Telecommunications Partners, Ltd. specify Greenville, North Carolina as the principal community to be served. Behrman of North Carolina specifies Ayden, North Carolina as the principal community to be served.

By Order adopted September 20, 1982 and entered on September 24, 1982 the Commission designated these applications for a comparative hearing in a consolidated proceeding on the following issues:

1. To determine with respect to Elcom, Inc., whether there is a reasonable possibility that the tower height and location proposed by the applicant would constitute a hazard to air navigation.
2. To determine with respect to Telecommunications Partners, Ltd. and Behrman of North Carolina: (a) whether the proposals of the applicants are consistent with the minimum mileage separation requirements of Section 73.410 of the Commission's rules and, if not, whether circumstances warrant a waiver of that Section; (b) whether, in light of the evidence adduced pursuant to (a), above, the applicants are qualified;
3. To determine the areas and population which would receive television service (Grade B or better) from the proposals and the availability of other Grade B service to such areas and population;
4. To determine, in light of Section 307(b) of the Communication Act of 1934, as amended, which of the proposals would best provide a fair, efficient and equitable distribution of broadcast service;
5. In the event it is concluded from issue 4, above, that a choice among applications should not be based solely on considerations relating to Section 307(b), to determine which of the proposals would, on a comparative basis, best serve the public interest;
6. To determine, in light of the evidence adduced pursuant to the foregoing issues, which of the applications should be granted.

The hearing is to commence at 10:00 a.m., January 12, 1983 with a prehearing conference being held at 9:00 a.m. on December 9, 1982, both in the offices of the Commission in Washington, D.C. A copy of the application of Elcom, Inc., amendments and related documents are available for public inspection during regular business hours at the offices of Edwin Gray, CPA, 212 West Fifth Street, Greenville, North Carolina 27834.

World-Class Pollution Fight On The Great Lakes

By BRIAN TUCKER
Associated Press Writer

CLEVELAND (AP) — Lakes Erie, Huron, Michigan, Ontario and Superior — a gift of Ice Age glaciers — are many things to the millions of North Americans near their shores. It is here they work, play, drink — and discard their waste.

For a decade, the United States and Canada have been cleaning up these natural wonders. It has cost billions and some major problems remain to be solved. But even so, the results are remarkable.

Kent Fuller, planning chief of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's Great Lakes National Program, calls it "a world-class example of a pollution control effort."

"In many respects, the lakes now are doing very well," he said. "... In the obviously visible stuff, we really have made a lot of progress."

It is what can't be seen that has environmentalists worried today. Toxic substances like cancer-causing polychlorinated biphenyls, or PCBs, are still getting into the lakes — often from the air. Environmentalists say the danger may be more serious than the pollution of the '60s.

They note that the lakes have been a litmus test for worldwide environmental hazards like DDT. The presence of these new toxic contaminants, then, has an ominous meaning because what is being discovered often comes from distant places.

What the Great Lakes must tackle in the '80s — after a decade-long fight to stop cities and industries from using the water as a waste dumping ground — other areas also will have to help clean up, the environmentalists say.

But now the money to continue the battle to clean up the lakes is drying up, along with other federal spending.

And some, like Patricia Bonner, spokeswoman for the International Joint Commission, the U.S.-Canadian agency that has overseen the boundary waters since 1909, fear lasting harm.

"The lakes are cleaner than they were 20 years ago and the water quality has improved," says William C. Sonzogni, of the Great Lakes Environmental Research Laboratory in Michigan. "We've gotten this far. Let's not stop."

The '60s are not remembered with fondness by those who love these waters. Fishing was at low ebb. Blue pike disappeared from Lake Erie. The ravenous sea lamprey moved in from the Atlantic and devoured trout. Algae used up oxygen, choking fish.

Tourists were turned off by pollution. Beaches closed. Shallow Lake Erie was declared dead.

Finally, it was bad enough to make somebody do something about it.

In the '70s, the United States and Canada decided to stop the abuses. With federal aid, cities built sewage treatment plants. Willingly or under threat of lawsuits and fines, industry cleaned up its act.

An example of the improvement is the notorious Cuyahoga, which flows into Lake Erie. Laden with oil and the filth of industry, the river started to burn on June 22, 1969. The blaze marked a low point for Cleveland, the river and the lakes.

"I don't like to talk about how it was and I don't like people asking about the fire," says Edith Crosby, hostess for 19 years at Jim's Steak House, a riverfront restaurant. She remembers gray, oily water and sees a difference.

"This river freezes now and it wouldn't back then. And the gulls come up here and feed, so there's fish. People call here and demand a window seat."

The change reflects industry's investments to stop dumping wastes into the river and the $500 million Cleveland spent to improve sewage treatment plants.

It was one of many projects prompted by the 1972 Clean Water Act, which grew out of a U.S.-Canadian agreement to do something about pollution.

In a construction binge, the United States built $4.9 billion in new sewage plants from 1972 to 1981 in the Great Lakes basin. Canada has spent $1.2 billion on similar projects.

Officials in the EPA's Great Lakes office conservatively estimate that industry spent an equal amount.

Treatment plants, including a $1 billion project in Detroit, reduced phosphorus, a nutrient that spurred algae growth. Fuller said phosphorus discharge into Lake Erie was cut from 8,000 metric tons a year in 1975 to 3,000 tons six years later.

Also helpful were six state legislatures that banned the sale of detergents containing phosphates. Only Pennsylvania and Ohio declined to go along.

Lee Botts, former chairwoman of the now-defunct Great Lakes Basin Commission and now a research associate for the Center for Urban Affairs and Policy Research at Northwestern University, says Lake Erie became a symbol because its problems were so visible.

"There was no oxygen left. Fish and other forms of life were disappearing and massive amounts of algae was washing up," she said. "The idea that you could really do that with a lake as large as Lake Erie is what really grabbed people's attention."

In the lakes cleanup, industry has tackled massive projects. One of the largest was in northern Minnesota, where Reserve Mining Co. spent more than $370 million to clean up its iron ore refining plant.

Scientists found asbestos-like fibers from the plant over hundreds of square miles of Lake Superior. Now, Phil Cook, a chemist at the EPA's research lab in Duluth, can say, "I think one could drink unfiltered water in the lake now and have nothing to worry about."

Mrs. Botts says there has been a change in attitude by industry. She notes that when U.S. Steel Corp. began eyeing Conneaut, Ohio, for a new mill, one of the first things it did was assess environmental problems.

"Not only can industry under the law not dump its wastes, I don't think they would if they could," she says. "They need clean water, too."

One concern of environmentalists is the presence of cancer-causing chemicals and heavy metals buried in the lake sands. "Whether that is just a convenient method of disposal or a time bomb, we don't know," said Sonzogni.

Another is runoff of pesticides and fertilizers from farmers' fields. On a demonstration basis, the EPA and other federal agencies supply farmers with no-till equipment that plants seeds without severely disturbing the soil.

But the critical threat to water and fish are PCBs, once commonly used in electrical insulation, and other toxic compounds entering the Great Lakes through the air or groundwater.

These potentially cancer-causing agents build up in the fatty tissue of fish, then endanger humans who eat their catch.

The pesticide DDT was banned after it turned up in the food chain in the Great Lakes, and PCBs were first found in the United States in Lake Michigan, notes Mrs. Botts.

Toxaphene, a pesticide that replaced DDT but is little used in the Great Lakes region, recently has been found in Lake Michigan fish, she said. Levels of the pesticide in the fish have exceeded allowable limits for food set by the government.

Toxaphene is most heavily used in the Dakotas and in the South, scientists say. Its presence in the lakes is "absolutely an airborne problem," says Sonzogni.

The scope of the potential problem of toxic contaminants is staggering. Fifty-two chemicals including Mirex, a pesticide, and suspected carcinogens like dioxin and PCBs are being monitored in the Niagara River, which links Ontario with the upper Great Lakes.

But there are encouraging signs. Fuller says Mirex and PCBs are less prevalent. Mercury levels also are down in the lakes, but dioxin may be increasing, he said.

Acid rain, a more publicized environmental problem, is less significant in the Great Lakes because of their size and the fact that much of the lakes is buffered by a limestone base that counters acidity.

"We found PCBs in a lake on Isle Royale (an island national park off the coast of Michigan's Upper Peninsula in Lake Superior)," Fuller said. "It's airborne and who knows where they're coming from. The point is they're everywhere."

Madonna McGrath, director of the EPA's Great Lakes office, says scientists estimate 60 percent of the PCBs in the lakes come through the air, with that figure rising to 90 percent in Lake Superior.

Ms. McGrath's office has established 35 collection sites to sample airborne pollutants, the first step toward determining the scope of the problem.

"With the air currents, some of this might be coming from as far away as Japan," she said. "Why should the U.S. and Canada spend a lot of money on controls if the problem is that long-range?"

The problem haunting any major pollution-control project is money.

For example, the EPA estimates separating sanitary waste systems from storm sewers in the Great Lakes basin would cost $8 billion. A tunnel-reservoir system in Chicago alone would cost a projected $4 billion.

But as the scope of the problems and the costs of the proposed solutions become known, government money is drying up.

Research into Great Lakes pollution has been cut from $30 million to $3 million by the Reagan administration, according to a recent study by 10 environmental organizations.

The cuts forced a virtual shutdown of EPA's Large Lakes Research Laboratory at Grosse Ile, Mich., which had been responsible for finding toxaphene in fish. The EPA's Great Lakes office in Chicago has had its budget cut from a high of $7.5 million in 1978 to $3.8 million in the proposed 1983 budget.

The administration proposed eliminating funds for the Great Lakes Environmental Research Laboratory at Ann Arbor, Mich., where scientists study how pollutants move about. Director Dr. Eugene Aubert says legislation to restore funds for the lab, which received $3.4 million last year, is pending in Congress.

Meanwhile, the Great Lakes Basin Commission, which for 14 years provided planning assistance and information coordination to the federal and state agencies working on the lakes, has been dismantled.

In Buffalo, N.Y., the Great Lakes Laboratory, a non-profit research facility set up after the Buffalo River was declared one of the nation's three worst-polluted rivers, has lost 21 of 25 employees. Its $700,000 budget is now $90,000.

"If people didn't monitor the Great Lakes, the Mirex problem, the mercury problem, the PCB problem probably would never have been discovered," said V. Ray Frederick, assistant director. "I think we've got to continue the search for exotic pollutants."

If responsibility for pollution programs is to be handed over to the states by the Reagan administration, environmentalists say little is likely to be done, considering the financial problems of states like Ohio and Michigan.

"How can we tell the (U.S. and Canadian) governments what to do if the states can't provide us with the data?" asks Ms. Bonner of the International Joint Commission, which had relied heavily on the Great Lakes Basin Commission.

U.S. Rep. James Blanchard, D-Mich., claims the Reagan administration is trying to cut federal support of Great Lakes programs by 70 to 80 percent. He has proposed legislation to set up a coordinating office for the 10 government agencies and departments dealing with lakes-related issues.

That proposal was supported in a General Accounting Office report which concluded a more comprehensive approach is needed to clean up the lakes.

ENJOYING THE RIVER AGAIN — Evening diners, many of whom arrived by boat, enjoy their dinners from the deck at Fagan's overlooking the Cuyahoga River in Cleveland. The river caught fire in 1969 due to the amount of pollutants it carried on its surface. People no longer have to worry about that. (AP Laserphoto)

Five Collisions In City On Saturday

An estimated $11,150 property damage resulted from five traffic collisions investigated in Greenville Saturday.

Heaviest damage, according to officers, resulted from a 10:05 p.m. collision on Charles Street, 50 feet south of the Oakmont Drive intersection, involving cars driven by Paul Gregory Kennedy of Winterville, and James Keith Slaughter of New Bern.

Police, who charged Slaughter with driving under the influence, estimated damage at $4,000 to the Kennedy car and $2,000 to the Slaughter vehicle.

Investigators said a car driven by James Arthur Cherry of 1207 S. Clark St., collided with a utility pole on Clark Street, 150 feet north of the 13th Street intersection about 1 p.m., causing an estimated $2,000 damage to the car and $300 damage to the utility pole.

Cars driven by Cleve Tripp Wallace of Route 13, Greenville, and Walter Dennis Bell of Route 5, Greenville, collided about 3:10 p.m. on Airport Road, a tenth of a mile west of the Greene Street intersection.

Officers estimated damage from the mishap at $600 to the Wallace car and $900 to the Bell auto.

Cars driven by Mark Anthony Losito of Jacksonville, Ellis Franklin Hall Jr. of 318 Pinewood Road, and Robert Steven Waters of Raleigh, collided about 1:55 p.m. Saturday at the intersection of Greenville and Arlington Boulevards.

Investigators set damage from the mishap at $200 to the Losito and Waters cars and $400 to the Hall auto.

Highway Patrol investigators said an estimated $50 damage resulted to a Greenville Police Department car driven by Shirley Ann Person of 313 Oakgrove Drive, when the car collided with a vehicle driven by James Roland Howard of 2119 S. Village Drive, about 2:30 p.m. at the intersection of White and Fourth Streets.

Damage to the Howard car was set at $500.

Say Disabled Not Buying

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) —

Developers are seeking changes to a state law requiring them to build 5 percent of their apartment units for handicapped people because they say the disabled are not buying them.

"It's really disappointing," said Russell Marshall, vice president of the Paragon Group which operates three Charlotte apartment complexes. "You're required to build the 5 percent but then you find very few are occupied by the handicapped."

Builders receive a $550 state tax credit for each special unit they build. The units include features such as extra-wide doors, ramps and spaces for wheel chairs.

Paul Leonard, executive vice president of Charlotte-based John Crosland Co., compiled figures three years ago showing that only eight of 67 specially equipped apartments in 10 complexes were occupied by the handicapped. Leonard said he believes the figures still are accurate.

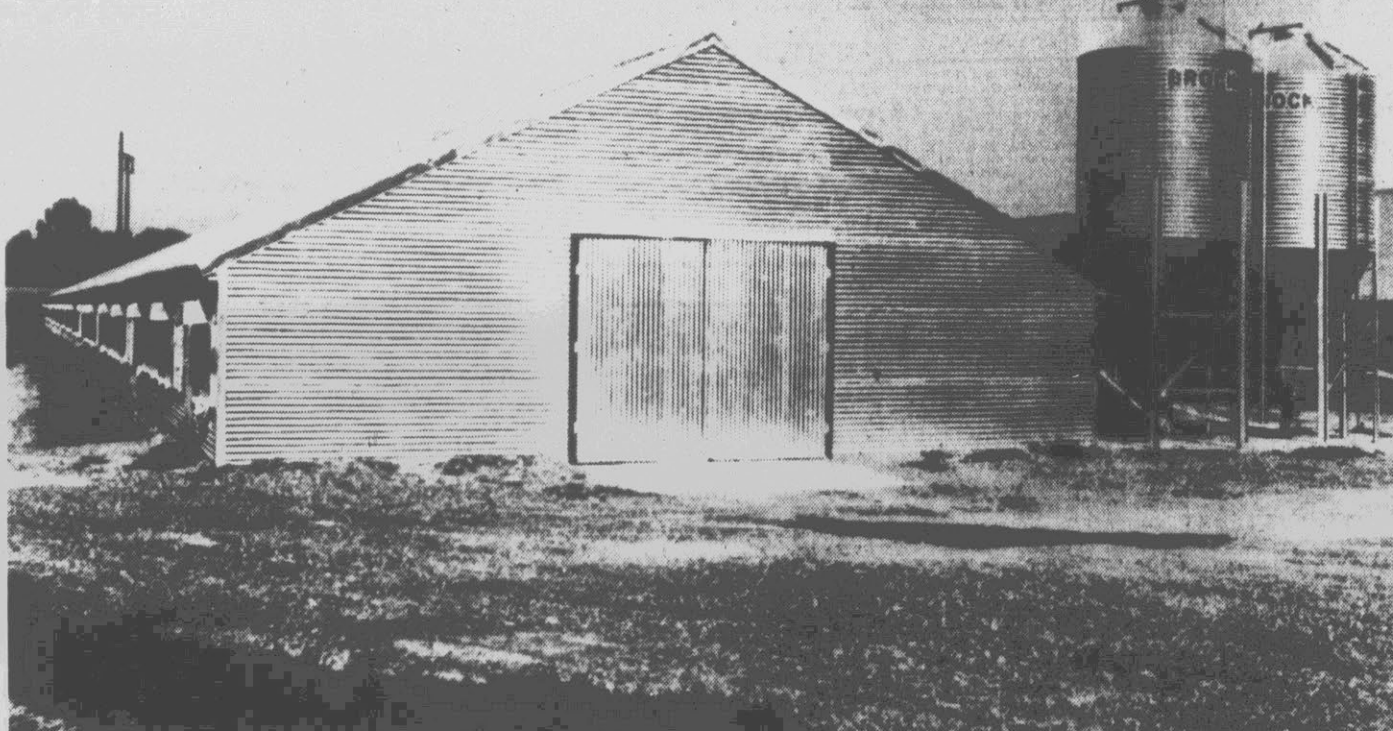

Builders also complain about the added price of the special units. Leonard figures the additional interior cost at $578. One architect, Reg Narmour, estimated the cost for inside and outside modifications could run up to $1,000 per apartment.

Some advocates for the handicapped say many apartments are just too expensive for handicapped people. They also say the number of special apartments remains so small that there seldom is one open at the time a handicapped person is ready to move in.

One problem is knowing how many handicapped people want apartments. National surveys tend to agree that 6 percent of the population is physically impaired. But many of those people live in private residences or in nursing homes.

The debate has been going on for years. The 5 percent figure was arrived at in 1973 only after negotiations between builders and advocates for the handicapped.

Perdue Broiler Houses...

An Investment That Pays You While It Pays For Itself.

Most crops, like tobacco for instance, require a large annual capital outlay followed by a long wait for a possible profit. A Perdue broiler house on the other hand is a crop that doesn't require a large annual capital outlay, or a four to five month wait to maybe turn a profit. Perdue broilers pay after every eight/nine week flock, starting with the first one. And those checks are guaranteed.

Also, a Perdue broiler house is one of the few agricultural operations that can pay its own way. Many others can't even generate enough income to pay for themselves much less provide a profit. And when a Perdue house is paid for, it won't be worn out like most row-crop equipment — compare that to other farm investments. And at market time, Perdue even absorbs poultry market fluctuations. That makes a Perdue broiler house a virtually risk-free sound investment.

Perdue pays a guaranteed paycheck every eight/nine weeks. These checks add up to over $20,000 a year gross income on a 500' house. And with better performance comes even better pay. So if you've been depending on row crops alone, you may want to consider Perdue. A broiler operation is compatible with your other farming responsibilities. But as an investment it stands alone. There's never been a better time to talk chicken with Perdue.
