Freedom Medal Is Given Kate Smith

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Calling singer Kate Smith "one of the great singers of this or any other century," President Reagan awarded the 73-year-old former entertainer the Medal of Freedom.

In making the award, the highest award that America can bestow on a civilian, Reagan said Tuesday that Miss Smith "always sang from the heart so we always listened with out hearts."

Miss Smith became synonymous with the song "God Bless America" during World War II and the years following the war. She was a common sight in helping sell war bonds during the war and was honored for her activities with the medal.

Miss Smith, who lives in Raleigh with her sister, was in a wheelchair during Tuesday's ceremony and did not speak. She suffers from diabetes and related diseases. But Miss Smith's sister, Helena Steene, responded for the entertainer, telling the president, "thank you very much."

The president helped move her wheelchair to the center of a small podium for the ceremony.

Reagan said that the title words of "God Bless America," took on a special meaning "because of the way Kate Smith sang them."

Reagan visited North Carolina briefly Tuesday to campaign for Republican congressional candidates and to give Miss Smith the medal. He also conferred briefly with GOP party leaders from several southern states before returning to Washington.

There are 208 previous recipients of the Medal of Freedom.

Revised Noise Ordinance Discussed At Gathering

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

Greenville citizens had an opportunity Tuesday night to discuss with city representatives a proposed redraft of the local noise ordinance.

Mac McCarley, assistant city attorney, and student intern Tom Marzilli explained in general terms the provisions of the proposed ordinance and the 16 interested citizens in attendance were able to voice their observations and ask questions.

McCarley said the redraft is an "attempt to get an enforceable noise regulation."

He said, "The proposed ordinance categorized permissible noise levels on the basis of use occupancy, which is divided into three categories: residential or public space; commercial or business areas; and manufacturing, industrial or agricultural areas. Permissible noise levels vary depending on time of day, also."

McCarley, quoting from a cover page on the redraft, said, "These categories are an attempt to define the general notion that neighborhoods ought to be quieter than commercial districts, and commercial districts ought to be at least a little quieter than manufacturing or industrial areas."

It was pointed out that the proposed regulation "also takes into account that a sound level which is tolerable at mid-afternoon is not tolerable at midnight."

Most of those attending the meeting at city hall were from the Tar River Neighborhood, which is generally defined as the residential area from Fifth Street north to the river. McCarley said there were one or two apartment managers in attendance, two who are involved in nightclub management, and one citizen who expressed concern about motorcycle noise.

The city spokesman said that the TRN residents were "very enthusiastic about the city's attempt to get a handle on noise in an enforceable way." McCarley said several people indicated that noise is the single biggest reason that people moved out of their neighborhood.

According to McCarley, several citizens said they would not object if the ordinance allowed a "fairly high level of noise" in the downtown district since noise levels would be regulated in residential areas.

The cover page, he explained, mentions several "major provisions" of the proposed regulation. Those suggested provisions stipulate:

— Sound levels are limited by use occupancy category and time of day;

— Permits may be obtained to exceed limits on Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings and holidays;

— Any outdoor amplified sound, including a live musical group, must have an "outdoor amplified sound permit;"

— Noise, in most cases, will be measured at the property line of the noise source;

— Some sound sources listed are exempt, such as scheduled outdoor athletic events, daytime construction operations, emergency vehicles, airplanes, lawnmowers and community concerts;

— A fee will be charged for "outdoor amplified sound permits" and "permits to exceed;"

— An ordinance violation would subject the offender to a $50 civil penalty;

— Violation of permit provisions would be cause to revoke the permit and subject the offender to a $200 civil penalty; and — In addition to civil penalties, the police department may make an in-custody misdemeanor arrest.

McCarley said citizens attending the meeting asked "specific and intelligent questions" regarding the proposed ordinance.

The assistant city attorney and Marzilli, a graduate student at East Carolina University, will be at ECU tonight to meet with university administration and student representatives for a discussion of the noise regulation.

Three Nominated For Morehead Scholarships

ANGELA MICHEL

GREGORY J. DAVIS

WM. K. WHITEHURST

Two seniors from J.H. Rose High School in Greenville and one from North Pitt High School have been nominated for consideration for Morehead Scholarships to the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

The nominees are Angela Marie Michel and Gregory Joseph Davis, both of Greenville, and William Kenneth Whitehurst of Bethel.

They will be entered in district competition in Williamston for the scholarships, which carry approximately $3,800 each year for tuition and other expenses during the school year and $2,200 each summer for participation in the John Motley Morehead Foundation's enrichment program.

Final interviews will be conducted in Chapel Hill next year.

Miss Michel is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Thomas Michel of 1101 E. Fourth St. She wants to study engineering but has carried a full schedule of academic and extra-curricula events at Rose High, including participation in cross-country, track and skating. She was the 1981 national ladies speedskating champion and has been invited to tryout for the 1982 U.S. Olympic team. At Rose she is the president of the National Honor Society.

Davis is a member of the National Honor Society at Rose, has served as a governor's page and has been active in Scouting activities. He is captain of the Rose football team and also has competed in tennis and wrestling. Davis expressed an interest in a career in medicine. He is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Kenneth Joseph Davis of 312 Rutledge Drive.

Whitehurst, who has helped manage a family-owned department store and helped supervise a supermarket while attending high school, has maintained a full circle of involvement in academic and extra-curricular affairs at North Pitt. He is president of the Student Council this year and also is captain of the varsity football team. He has lettered in baseball, football and basketball. His expressed career interest is in business management. Davis is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Cadet Whitehurst Jr. of Bethel.

Swedish Navy Still Hunting Submarine

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — The Swedish navy, using "all our helicopters and naval vessels," is still searching for a foreign submarine that was reported lurking near a top-secret base nearly four weeks ago, a government spokesman said today.

The spokesman, Wyn Engqvist, told The Associated Press that he could "neither confirm nor deny" reports in two Swedish newspapers that sightings of oil slicks and air bubbles indicate the intruder is still trapped in the area of Hors and Mysing bays, 20 miles south of here in the Stockholm archipelago.

"All I can say is that we still are using all our helicopters and naval vessels, including the naval submarine salvage ship 'Belos' in the chase," he said, declining to specify precisely where the search was going on.

On Oct. 1, the navy said that spotters had seen what appeared to be a submarine periscope in Hors Bay, near the Musko navy base. During the intensive hunt that followed, the navy carpeted the bay with tons of explosives in a futile effort to force the intruder to surface.

At one point, naval officials said a second intruder may have been spotted outside Hors Bay.

But on Tuesday, the daily Svenska Dagbladet quoted an unpublicized Defense Staff report as saying the foreign submarine had escaped no later than Oct. 7 through an outlet in the northern part of the Hors Bay search area and the second sighting might have been the original vessel.

The government has not commented on that report.

Showdown On Evicting Israel Avoided By UN

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — A showdown on an Iranian challenge to Israel's credentials in the General Assembly was avoided on Tuesday when the world body adopted a Finnish amendment to adjourn debate on the issue.

The vote was 74-9 with 31 abstentions.

Iran bolted unexpectedly from an Islamic-bloc compromise Monday in demanding the vote. The move sought to protect Israel's seating by promising to make up any funds lost if the Jewish state were ousted and the United States quit the assembly in protest as it threatened to do.

Israeli Ambassador Yehuda Z. Blum had said it was "most unlikely" the measure would succeed, declaring that "any attempt to tamper with Israel's credentials will mortally damage this organization."

U.S. Ambassador Jeane J. Kirkpatrick charged Iran was being "driven by the dynamics of extremism."

Volunteers Are Honored By Governor Jim Hunt

WILLIAMSTON — Eight individuals and two organizations from Pitt County were honored by Gov. Jim Hunt Tuesday night for individual and group volunteer efforts in varied fields of community achievements through volunteer work.

Hunt presented the awards at the Governor's Volunteer Award ceremony for northeastern North Carolina.

Also honored were seven persons and two businesses from Greene County, and an individual from Martin County. Totally, 169 individuals and 62 businesses from the 26 county area received recognition for volunteer efforts.

Individuals from Pitt County receiving awards, and the category in which the awards were made are:

- Tammy P. Burch, Individual Human Service Volunteer.
- Geneva Gillihan, Individual Community Volunteer Leader.
- Acolia Simon-Thomas, Administrator/Coordinator of Volunteers.
- Duncan Fagundus, Youth Volunteer.
- Edythe Price, Senior Citizen Volunteer.
- Joanna Tyson, Disable Person Volunteer.
- Mrs. Bernie Fowler, School Volunteer.
- Belle Thompson, One-One Volunteer.

The two Pitt County organizations receiving awards for group volunteer efforts were the Pitt County Firemen's Association in the Community Volunteer Organization category; and Burroughs Wellcome Company in the Business-Industry Volunteer Involvement category.

Greene County persons and groups who were recipients of awards are:

- Beth Morrison Moye, Individual Human Service Volunteer.
- Melvin Cunningham, Individual Community Volunteer Leader.
- Richard A. Hayes, Administrator/Coordinator of Volunteers.
- Daniel LeRoy Taylor, Jr., Youth Volunteer.
- Mrs. Frank L. Walston, Sr., Senior Citizen Volunteer.
- Joseph Corbett, Disabled Person Volunteer.
- Fred Speight, School Volunteer.

The two Greene County groups receiving awards were Hooker Ruritan Club in the Community Volunteer Organization category; and Roger Sutton Contractor in the Business-Industry Volunteer Involvement field.

Alton Hopewell of Martin County was the recipient of

The Public Behavior of Children

The following advise is from Family Life and Child Development Specialist, James E. Van Horn, Ph.D., Pennsylvania State University. His advise is lengthy but it should help any adult who is responsible for a child even for a short period of time.

Families spend most of their time out of the public's eye. Those moments that go to make up each day and week are secret moments that are known only to members of a particular family. When we look at a particular family, what we most often see is not the private behavior but rather the public behavior. When young children are involved sometimes this public behavior can provide traumatic moments for a parent.

Children can behave well in public. Sometimes children are not told, or parents do not explain, how to behave and what kind of behavior is expected in a particular place. Just as a child does not learn to count to 100 in one sitting, neither does a child learn how to behave in the supermarket in one trip. It takes repeated work and practice. Instead of waiting until the child does something that causes you the parent concern, tell the child, or remind the child before you enter the store what is expected of him. This is the parent's job. Explain that there is to be no running up and down the aisles, that he or she is to sit in the cart or hold on to the cart, or help mommy or daddy push the cart.

Give the child a job. For instances: the child could look for several items that are familiar to him — like a box of cereal or carton of milk. This doesn't mean that he runs around looking for the items, but rather that he has something to look for as the two of you make your rounds in the store.

If the child does something such as knock over a can, or run off, don't plead with the child, and don't think you as a parent must put on a performance for other adults who might be in the vicinity of this event. Simply pick the child up and calmly put the child in the cart, or pick him up and take his hand. Sometimes a parent gets into the habit of pleading with the child to do, or stop doing something. Instead of pleading, just move the child. Nothing has to be said, no arms have to be jerked, and most often, tears will be minimal. In order to get the child to behave, the parent will offer a bribe — candy, donut, etc. Instead of bribery, use a firm tone in your voice. Let the child know what he is not going to get chewing gum or candy, etc. And don't be concerned about what other people are thinking. There is almost a written guarantee that within a minute or less, all onlookers will have forgotten the incident. So why pay any attention to them? If the child just can't do what is expected in a store, tell him that you'll have to take him home. If he continues, make a move toward the car and ask him if he can behave. If he still persists, then take him home. It may mean an inconvenience for you, but the follow-through will probably teach the child one of the most valuable lessons he will learn about public behavior. The child will learn that when you say something, you mean it!

Again, when going out in public remind the child what kind of behavior is expected. Go beyond saying "be good!" That doesn't tell the child much. Rather, tell the child specifically what's expected. "In the store you will sit in the cart or hold mommy's hand." Remember that children do learn how to behave in public over a period of time. If your child was learning to count to 100 and he only got to 15, you would be proud of his progress. So, too, with behavior that is being learned. If the child sits still as you told him for the most of the shopping trip, be proud of that Praise him! He's learning. Don't expect him to learn to sit still all at one time. Try not to threaten. If the situation merits it, follow through. Take the time, now, at the teachable moment, to follow through without losing your cool and patience. Once your child learns that you mean what you say, you'll save endless minutes and hours later.

Limit The Number Of Rules

It's important to set up rules and regulations for a young child. But try not to overdo it. Too many rules can slow down your child's spontaneity and creativity. And having too many restrictions might cause your child to build up resentment. Under these circumstances your child may resist your instructions and wait for the day when he can get out from under all those can'ts and don'ts. In this case, he won't see rules and regulations as a stepping stone to learning self-discipline. So a good rule of thumb is to set only those rules and regulations that are necessary. These might include limits that help protect your child's health and safety. And rules that help to protect the property and rights of others.

YWCA Opposes Sale "Adult" Video Game

Opposition to the sale of the new "adult" video game, "Custer's Revenge" "because of its blatant racism and sexism" has been voiced by the National YWCA through its Racial Justice Committee.

The 10-woman group representing YWCAs in 435 communities (membership more than 2 million) voted unanimously to oppose the manufacture, distribution, and sale of "Custer's Revenge" and other "denigrating" video games produced by American Multiple Industries, Northridge, Calif., for the home video market.

The so-called "game," says YWCA Racial Justice Committee chairman Jacqueline Delahunt of Olga, Wash., "makes a game of sexual contact and — implicitly — of rape — raping Indian women. A male, wearing hat and boots only, "commits rape and violence against a woman. It is obviously an Indian woman as evidenced by the program title and use of arrows as a visual device."

Lecture Is Announced

The East Carolina University Department of Foreign Languages and Literatures joins with the Sigma Upsilon Chapter of Phi Sigma Iota in announcing the first of their lecture series for 1982-83.

The public is invited to hear Professor Yuri V. Karageorge read a paper, "The Crisis of the French Cinema Today" Tuesday, Nov. 2, at 7:30 p.m. in the Coffee House of Mendenhall Student Center. A reception will follow.

Dr. Karageorge holds advanced degrees from the University of Paris and New York University and has a Ph.D. from Indiana University.

He is writing a book on the cinema of Marguerite Duras.

Bridge Championships Held

The Duplicate Bridge Club Championships was held at Planters Bank last Wednesday.

Wednesday morning Mrs. Everett Pittman and Mrs. John McConney tied for first with Mrs. Walter Harbin and Mrs. C.D. Elks — .638 percent. Third place winners were Mrs. Raymond Lyder and Mrs. Tom Martin.

The Wednesday afternoon first place winners were Mrs. Beulah Eagles and Dave Proctor with .622 percent. Mrs. J.S. Rhodes Jr. and Mrs. Roger Critcher Jr. took second, while Mrs. Stuart Page and Mrs. M.H. Bynum were third. Mrs. C.F. Galloway and Mrs. C.D. Elks tied for fourth with Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Webb.

Mrs. Joyce Lamm and Lee Hastings were sixth; Mrs. Wiley Corbett and Mrs. Barry Powers, seventh; and Mrs. William McConnell and Mrs. David Steven, eighth.

The Saturday afternoon first place winners were Mrs. W.R. Harris and Dave Proctor with .587 percent. El Bass and Penny Blenk were second; Mrs. Clifton Toler and Mrs. William Parvin, third; Mrs. William McConnell and Lewis Newsome, fourth; Mrs. Wiley Corbett and Mrs. Betsy Warren, fifth; Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Webb, sixth; Mrs. Stuart Page and Mrs. Harold Forbes, seventh; and Mrs. Robert Barnhill and Mrs. Joyce Lamm, eighth.

The Saturday afternoon, Oct. 30, game is cancelled because of the Sectional Tournament being held in Wilson.

Middle's Where Your Mouth Put You

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My dearest friend, Jill (not her real name), is married to my cousin, Jack (not his real name either).

They've been having marital problems lately, and since Jill and I are so close, Jill confided that she was having an affair. She asked me not to tell my cousin Jack, and of course I promised I wouldn't.

One night Jack called me on the phone and told me that he suspected that Jill was having an affair and begged me to tell him if it was true. He promised he wouldn't tell Jill anything I told him.

Well, blood is thicker than water, so I told Jack the truth.

Jack ran right back and told Jill what I told him! Now I feel betrayed by Jack (my own cousin), and Jill is mad at me for opening my big mouth.

I know I never should have gotten involved in the first place, but Jill kept putting me in the middle of the situation. I would like your opinion.

HURT AND CONFUSED IN N.J.

DEAR H. AND C.: Nobody "put you in the middle" — you put yourself there when you accepted Jill's confidences. Then when Jack told you of his suspicions and "begged" you to tell him the truth (how did he know that you knew the truth?), you promptly betrayed Jill.

I think Jack is a big-mouth who can't be trusted. And the same goes for you. It must run in the family.

DEAR ABBY: Thanks for your column, "Always on Sunday," suggesting that church is a good place to meet people.

Since I converted to Catholicism a couple of years ago, I've been a regular churchgoer. I'd hoped to meet a nice girl and had been involved in the parish singles group, but the women seemed too "hungry" for a husband. I basically gave up looking, but continued to pray that I'd meet someone special.

This past Good Friday I was at church for confession and found myself in line with a gal about my age (28). I started a conversation, and before we left the church we had a date.

We've included going to Mass as part of our courtship, and now we have a very firm relationship, with our faith as one of the cornerstones. She recently confessed that she had prayed to meet someone special.

We've only known each other for five months, but we're talking seriously about marriage. Our case might not be typical of people who meet at church, but it's certainly one more case to support your suggestion.

Thanks, Abby.

IN LOVE IN PACIFIC PALISADES

DEAR IN: Don't thank me. Thank God for confession.

DEAR ABBY: I have been troubled by this problem for a long time and need to know if perhaps I am expecting too much of busy youngsters.

I am a grandmother who enjoys sending gifts to my grandchildren who live far away. I never know if my packages have arrived because they are never acknowledged. When I've sent checks, I know they were received because at the end of the month the cancelled checks show up.

Having my gifts go unacknowledged is beginning to get to me. All my grandchildren are over 21 and should know better. Even an old grandmother wants to be appreciated. Am I asking too much?

GRAMMA

DEAR GRAMMA: No. And if you need something to suggest that ill-mannered, ungrateful grandchildren don't deserve presents, will this do?

If you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say, send for Abby's complete booklet on letter-writing. Send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

Statistics Are Improved

There were two positive statistics for North Carolina after months of nothing but dismal reports.

The state's tax collections for September increased by 7.9 percent, which Revenue Secretary Mark Lynch said was the largest gain in five months.

It was also announced that unemployment in the state dropped to 8.7 percent in September, down from the 9 percent of August.

Lynch said the revenue figures were only slightly encouraging. The outlook for state revenues is still bad based on disappointing collections of previous months.

The improvement in unemployment figures was due mostly to the recall of workers who had been laid off, according to ESC Chairman Glenn Jernigan. It was also thought that, while there were fewer unemployed, it might be because of workers putting in less hours. The average work week dropped from 38.2 in August to 38 in September.

While tax collections improved, there was little improvement in sales and use tax collections.

The single month figures mean little, of course, but it is encouraging to see improved tax collections and lower unemployment figures after several months of unfavorable reports.

Economic Issue Resolved

Economic problems cause nations to lock horns more readily than any other issue.

We have only to witness the struggle between the Reagan administration and our European allies over construction of the Soviet gas line.

Thus it is to be applauded when a major economic dispute is settled. Last week, only shortly before a deadline, the United States and Europe agreed on limiting shipments of steel to the United States. If an agreement had not been reached the United States was prepared to impose penalty duties.

The agreement was acceptable to domestic steel makers who have been in a depression of their own and badly need relief.

The agreement can be a help in rejuvenating the United States' steel industry, and settlement of the issue removes a major threat to good relations between our country and our European allies.

Calling The Shots

I was sitting on an airplane when the man in the next seat took out his briefcase and started arranging $100 bills in neat piles.

He was talking to himself. "This goes to Nacoss, this goes to Arcose, this goes to Kernite, this goes to Kerinci, and this goes to Longspeak." Then he threw the packets in a canvas bag, and started the process all over again.

He noticed I was watching him and he said, "Did you notice if I made a pile for Jitters?"

"I don't think you did."

"Jitters really doesn't deserve any," he said. "But we're going to give him one more chance. If he forgets who his friends are the next time around, he gets zilch."

"Is it too indiscreet to ask what kind of business you're in?"

"I'm with the Tofu Growers Political Action Committee, and I have to get this money out to the congressional candidates before Election Day. TOF-PAC supports people who favor a strong American bean curd policy, and we also try to defeat candidates whose voting record on tofu is a national disgrace."

"Isn't it late in the day to be contributing to politicians' campaigns?"

"It's just the right time. Most candidates are all tapped out, and they're desperate in the last week for anything they can get. If we gave them TOF-PAC money early in the fall they wouldn't be half as indebted to us as they are now."

"You're not doing anything illegal?"

"Of course not. Political Action Committees are the heart and soul of the American democratic worry, or the bankers' PAC job."

"But," I said, "if a candidate accepts money from every PAC organization, he won't have any votes left for his constituents."

"We just don't give money to a candidate to WIN an election. Many PAC groups work to defeat an incumbent who is against their special interest. We may go into a district where a congressman has voted against every tofu price support bill ever proposed. Well, that person doesn't deserve to be in office. So we'll use our PAC funds to smear him from here to Cucamonga."

"That sounds like dirty pool."

"Every Political Action Committee is doing it now. You see, we have our choice of either giving $5,000 directly to the candidate or spending an unlimited amount to defeat the other guy."

He took out a large stack of bills and started counting them. "This money is going to destroy Senator Adolph Hasse, who tried to keep bean curds out of the school lunch program. He's number one on the TOF-PAC hit list."

I said, "I guess from what you say, the Political Action Committees are calling the election shots this year."

"Why shouldn't we? It's our money."

Out In The Open

By PAUL T. O'CONNOR

RALEIGH — It used to be that everybody with cancer died and that their survivors kept the cause of death secret. People didn't discuss cancer in the family — there was a stigma attached to it.

Our prejudices about cancer patients have changed so much recently that patients regularly speak out about their experiences now. Sara Hodgkins, state secretary of cultural resources, for example, says speaking openly with friends, with a public group in Hickory this summer and now in a newspaper interview, has made it easier for her to deal with the mastectomy and chemotherapy she underwent to rid her body of cancer last year.

Women began going public with their stories about breast cancer in the mid-70s. First Lady Betty Ford and NBC news reporter Betty Rollin provided the public with two examples of active, healthy women who could endure mastectomies and come back to lead active lives.

Mrs. Hodgkins learned that she had cancer on a Wednesday morning in June, 1981. Her doctor told her to study up on breast cancer and to think. If she chose surgery, he would schedule her for Friday morning. She needed more time than that and took a week. In that time, she talked with other doctors, with women who'd had mastectomies, and with friends. Mostly, she talked with her husband and three daughters — and "I talked to God."

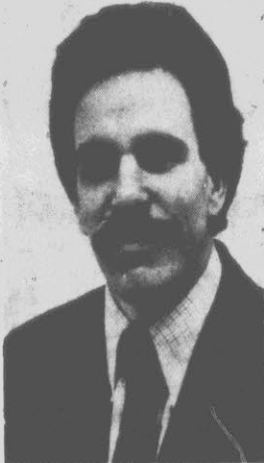

The 50-year-old former school teacher from Southern Pines was filled with anxiety.

"I really kind of resented (the cancer)," she says. "I resented it a lot because I am physically in good shape...I had taken good care of my body. I don't smoke and I felt like I had done everything I possibly could to keep from having a disease like this...I was angry. I was mad. I was really mad. I was bitter and I was scared. I thought maybe my life was going to be completely changed, my whole life, my relationship to my family and husband and my job... I was afraid I was going to lose my independence...and I was afraid because you just never know what they're going to find."

In surgery, they found that cancer had spread to her lymph nodes and that she's need chemotherapy, a debilitating treatment that Mrs. Hodgkins describes as "putting five poisons into your blood."

But before chemotherapy, there was a blood clot in her lung that meant an extra week in the hospital. Then, for eighteen treatments that began in summer and stret-

Other Editors Say EPA Drags Feet

(Salisbury Post)

When it comes to protecting citizens from hazardous wastes, the federal government is falling down on the job. All of us will pay the price later.

Under the Resource Conservation and Recovery Act of 1976, the Environmental Protection Agency is charged with the responsibility of preventing future nightmares like Love Canal in New York or the "Valley of the Drums" in Kentucky. But the EPA, apparently reflecting the Reagan administration's pro-business and anti-regulatory mood, is obviously dragging its feet.

A recent report in the new national newspaper USA Today provides dramatic evidence of the scope of the problem.

"Death waits in landfills, old garbage pits, rusted metal drums and wastewater storage ponds, looking for people to visit," the paper reported. "It is in the form of toxic waste and it poses the greatest environmental threat since the mushroom cloud blossomed over the Nevada desert in 1945."

North Carolina has several reasons for a special awareness of the toxic-waste problem:

The microchip industry that Gov. Jim Hunt is pushing so hard to attract to our state looks clean and neat at first glance. But its manufacturing operations can produce worrisome amounts of dangerous chemical byproducts. The state has to learn to dispose of those substances safely.

The crime committed against the people of this state a couple of years ago, when PCBs from a Northern plant were sprayed onto miles of North Carolina roadides to get rid of them, demonstrated the havoc that can come from dumping hazardous wastes improperly.

The continuing forceful protests over dumping of the PCB tainted soil in a state-operated landfill in Warren County shows the difficulty encountered even in trying to dispose of such wastes properly. By attempting to keep the trucks away, the Warren protesters are making themselves part of the problem instead of part of the solution.

But the EPA these days is showing little or no indication that it grasps the importance of its duty to police industry's activities in this area.

In the Reagan administration's first year, the agency received only 66 such cases from regional offices and sent only 79 to the Justice Department. That contrasts sharply with the 313 citations and 252 referrals to Justice recorded in the previous year. The trend continues.

Reagan Role Is Weighed

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Republican telephone tracking of voters in key congressional races the weekend of Oct. 16-17 showed serious Democratic gains, raising questions as to whether President Reagan's late campaigning is doing more harm than good.

Some GOP political consultants believe the Republican slide is purely the result of economic hard times, a force that presidential intervention cannot deflect. But others believe Reagan is doing more harm than good, insulting the intelligence of voters by claiming that all economic woes derive from the Democrats. In milder language, one important consultant has conveyed those views to the White House.

The president's role is the subject of debate within the White House. Pollster Richard Wirthlin has urged restraint and contended that Reagan should be more "presidential" in his campaigning. But the senior staff has written Wirthlin off as a worrywart and forged ahead with hard-nosed partisan campaigning.

Reagan Nixes Film

Presidential counselor Edwin Meese III has refused Republican National Committee funding for the film "Countdown for America" that spells out dangers of the nuclear "freeze" movement on the Nov. 2 ballot in nine states.

The 25-minute film, produced by the pro-defense American Security Council, is low-key but positive in laying out dangers for the U.S. in any nuclear freeze without ironclad on-site inspection to guarantee Soviet compliance. Short of funds to distribute the film, the council proposed a partnership with the Republican National Committee to give it maximum pre-election exposure.

Meese brought the film into the White House, where it was viewed by top officials. The verdict: Despite the film's high quality, there would be no official help from the National Committee. No reason was given, but in fact the president decided the "freeze" issue had lost some of its punch and the film could hurt some pro-freeze Republican candidates.

Lehrman's Calculated Risk

In a calculated risk, New York Republican governor candidate Lewis Lehrman is airing negative radio commercials spotlighting the frequent interrogation of the Democratic nominee for lieutenant governor, Alfred DelBello, before secret grand jury proceedings.

The risk: Attacking DelBello may offend Italian Republicans, who are faced with an all-Italian Democratic ticket of Lt. Gov. Mario Cuomo for governor and DelBello, Westchester County executive, for lieutenant governor. Republican demands that DelBello reveal the contents of his testimony were escalated by their inclusion in the radio ads.

The risk of losing Italian votes was balanced by Lehrman's need to take votes away from Cuomo. According to polls, Cuomo has failed to pull away but Lehrman has been unable to close the gap.

Cap And George Show

Refuting early alarms of mutual tensions, Secretary of State George Shultz and Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger have formed a tight alliance that is squeezing National Security Adviser William P. Clark out of the loop on some major decisions.

That may not be the intent of the two senior Cabinet officers in the Reagan administration. But the tough decisions they regularly make at their weekly lunches worry some officials who feel that compromising parochial concerns of the State and Defense Departments could sometimes be at the expense of the president's own interest.

One recent agreement pegged the foreign aid budget at just under $15 billion for the year starting next Oct. 1. During Alexander Haig's tenure at State, friction between him and Weinberger automatically bucked decisions on foreign aid to Clark's White House office, guaranteeing full study from the president's own perspective.

MONEY THE ROOT OF ALL EVIL?

We often hear people say that money is the root of all evil, believing that when they say this they are quoting the Bible. What the Bible says is that the love of money is the root of all evil. This is something quite different.

The Bible nowhere teaches that the material things of life are wrong in themselves. Most of us have observed the ruinous effect which money has had on many people. But there are fine Christians among the rich just as there are sometimes rascals among the poor, and vice versa. It is not what we have or what we lack which makes a difference in God's sight, but the way we use what we have and the way we endure what we lack.

Riches build many of our universities, endow our foundations, and do many helpful things for the human race; but riches also makes parasites out of many people. The use we make of material things spells life or death for us all. — Elisha Douglass

Even Bigger Deficit Expected

By ROBERT FURLOW

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Though it's a record, by far, the government's $110.7 billion deficit for fiscal 1982 is just a temporary stop on the way to an even greater budget shortfall, officials say.

Estimates vary widely on how high the deficit might rise in fiscal 1983, the year for which President Reagan once promised a balanced budget. But none calls for a lessening of red ink, let alone an end to the deficit spending that has now reached 13 years in a row.

As expected, the Treasury Department said Tuesday the budget shortfall for fiscal 1982, which ended Sept. 30, far surpassed the old record of $66.4 billion set in 1976.

The same Treasury report estimated a fiscal 1983 deficit of $115 billion, the second record in as many years. Private economists are talking in even larger numbers, some in the range of $150 billion or more.

Two years ago, Reagan, then a presidential candidate, said his economic program "will give us a balanced budget by 1983, and possibly by 1982." And he said after taking office last year that "if we try for '83, we're sure to get it by '84."

However, such talk has not been heard since the recession began last year. The official administration estimate is that the deficit will still be as high as $93 billion in 1984, but virtually all budget experts — including the administration's own when speaking privately — consider that number to be low. Other economists — including those in the Congressional Budget Office — say the figure could be $150 billion or so.

As for ill effects of big deficits, Reagan has said nothing recently resembling his comment, shortly after taking office, that "we know now that inflation results from all that deficit spending."

He made no mention of any such connection Tuesday when he met briefly with reporters to celebrate a separate government report that said consumer prices, held down by declining mortgage rates, inched ahead at an annual rate of just 2.1 percent in September.

The Labor Department report said inflation was running at an annual rate of 4.8 percent in the first nine months of the year, leading Reagan to say he had reduced it "back to where it was in January of 1977, when Gerald Ford left office" and that the economy was braced for recovery from the recession.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., said simply, "Of course prices are not rising as fast as they were; no one is buying anything."

A separate Labor Department report Tuesday said that Americans' inflation-adjusted average weekly earnings declined 0.3 percent in September, the same as in August. It said those earnings in September were 0.9 percent below September 1981.

Some economists, meanwhile, say federal bor-

Bid-Rigging Payments Top A Million Dollars

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state will collect over $2 million in damages from five construction companies tied to bid-rigging on 14 public-works projects across the state, a state official says.

The $2 million is the amount contractors illegally earned in 1980 when they padded project costs for state and local government projects. Special Deputy Attorney General Al Cole said Monday. Repayment terms vary but interest will be paid until all money owed is paid, he said.

The projects fall in two categories - electric and utility - and were located in towns from Belmont in Gaston County to Elizabeth City in Pasquotank County.

As a result of plea-bargaining with officials of eight electrical contractors charged with rigging bids on work at East Carolina University's Medical School, state investigators learned of at least nine more electrical construction jobs on which bids had been rigged.

Other companies may be indicted as a result of the plea-bargaining, Cole said.

Bid-rigging on five utility projects also were uncovered following testimony by convicted bid rigger Frank Carpenter, former president of Dickerson Group Inc. of Monroe. He told state investigators of his involvement after he was charged last March with rigging bids on a $5 million project to lay water lines in Pasquotank County.

Some of the money already has been returned to local governments.

Mecklenburg County has received $25,878 for inflated electrical construction bids at a wastewater treatment plant in October 1978.

Monroe has received $7,500 from the attorney general's office for illegal costs added to an August 1978 contract with Dickerson Group Inc. for improvements to the city's sewer system. Union County will receive about $96,000 that Dickerson added to its March 1979 contract for a water distribution facility, Cole said.

The other electrical projects and the amount of reimbursement from contractors include:

- The city of Roxboro: $5,000.
- Lexington Memorial Hospital: $33,000.
- Northampton County Board of Education: $10,000.
- Orange Water and Sewer Authority: $16,174.
- Pasquotank County Courthouse: $15,000.
- Rex Hospital in Raleigh: $90,000.
- Technical College of Alamance: $9,704.
- The town of Williamston: $4,500.
- Water and sewer contracts and reimbursement include:
  - The Catawba Heights Sanitary District near Belmont: $200,000 on a January 1980 contract for sewer work.

- Elizabeth City: $31,938 on a July 1979 contract for water improvements.

- Salisbury: $93,689 on a December 1979 contract for sewer work.

Marines To Get Replacements

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 1,200 U.S. Marines on duty in Lebanon will be replaced by others starting Friday, the Pentagon has announced.

The replacement is part of the normal rotation of troops and ships, the announcement said.

The Marines in Beirut were drawn from the 1,800-member 32nd Marine Amphibious Unit based at Camp Lejeune, N.C. Their replacements are part of the 24th MAU unit.

The 32nd MAU will return to the United States in late November, the Pentagon said Tuesday.

As part of the same switch, five new support ships, all based at Norfolk, Va., will go to Beirut. They are the Inchon, Fort Snelling, Sumter, La Moure County and Shreveport.

Weinberger To Southern Asia

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger will leave Friday on an 11-day visit to five nations in Southern Asia, the Pentagon says.

Weinberger plans to go to Australia, New Zealand, Thailand, Singapore and Indonesia before returning to Washington Nov. 8.

The Pentagon said Tuesday that the secretary plans to meet with leaders of each of the countries to discuss matters of mutual interest pertaining to "the security of the Pacific region."

Weinberger does not plan to take reporters along on the trip, a policy he has followed for his foreign trips since last spring.

Vote 'No Strike' At Chrysler

By ANN JOB WOOLLEY
Associated Press Writer
DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corp. workers, who voted overwhelmingly against striking for an immediate pay raise should "do better in January" at the bargaining table, says the head of the United Auto Workers.

"It was the correct decision given all the circumstances," said UAW President Douglas A. Fraser after rank-and-file workers voted Tuesday by more than a 2-1 margin against hitting picket lines during the holiday season.

Union leaders called the one-day referendum after Chrysler workers overwhelmingly rejected a proposed contract, negotiated in September, that included no immediate wage increase, although it was the first contract in three years that did not ask workers for concessions.

"I believe ... that we can do better in January than we did in September," Fraser said at a news conference Tuesday night.

Official results of the referendum, which asked autoworkers to choose between striking and working under terms of a contract that expired Sept. 15, were 2,086 to 11,589 against a strike, or 68.4 percent to 31.6 percent, the UAW said.

"We are gratified," Thomas Miner, Chrysler vice president of industrial relations, said in a statement. "We believe a strike against the company would have had serious consequences and would have jeopardized the jobs of all Chrysler employees."

"I think they (workers) used very good judgment in not jeopardizing their jobs and in not jeopardizing the corporation," said Marc Stepp, UAW vice president in charge of the Chrysler department.

In an interview today on "The CBS Morning News," Stepp was asked how he felt about the fact that more than 11,000 workers did vote to strike.

"We recognize there is frustration among the Chrysler membership," said Stepp. "They've given back over a billion dollars in wages and benefits and now they're working and living next door to a Ford worker making $100 more" per week than the average Chrysler worker.

Workers were worried about going through the Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays without jobs, local UAW officials said.

"It's already hard times for them" because of the depressed economy and poor auto sales, said Charles Thornton, president of Local 961 in Detroit, after the vote.

"They didn't want to lose their holiday pay and are hoping business will be better in January," said a union official from Local 1331 in Van Wert, Ohio, who asked not to be identified.

Chrysler's 43,200 working U.S. autoworkers, plus many of the 40,000 on indefinite layoff, were eligible to vote.

Miner had warned earlier that a walkout could be "ruinous" and would cripple the company. Fraser had called the prospect of a strike "horrifying."

Analysts had estimated that a strike would have hurt the company within a couple of weeks.

A second round of contract talks collapsed Oct. 18 when Chrysler said it could not afford worker demands for an immediate pay raise.

The first round of talks ended in a tentative contract — reached Sept. 16 — which workers rejected by a 7-3 margin.

The tentative pact tied wage increases to quarterly profits beginning in December and reinstated cost-of-living allowances — one of the concessions workers have made since 1979 to save the financially ailing No. 3 automaker.

Workers' wages will remain at the average $9.07 an hour until a new contract is reached, Stepp said.

That is about $2.60 an hour behind wages of autoworkers at General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co. — a discrepancy Fraser said must be rectified in the upcoming talks.

"I think the Chrysler workers are entitled to a greater measure of equity, they're entitled to come closer to parity with General Motors and Ford than they now are," Stepp said.

Chrysler officials "know we have the ability to strike them" if the January talks do not produce a settlement, he said.

However, he would not say if the union will set a strike deadline for the new negotiations.

Talks will resume "immediately after the holidays," Fraser said. A date has not been set.

Chrysler said in its statement that "when requested, we will meet with the union and attempt to arrive at agreements which are in the best interest of all parties concerned."

The union also announced that UAW-represented Chrysler engineers who voted to reject a separate tentative contract earlier this fall also voted Tuesday against a strike. The vote was 2,479-284, and engineers will continue working under terms of an expired contract, the union said.

Relatives Aid Rebuilding Life

WINCHESTER, Ky. (AP) — In a matter of minutes, a fire claimed the life of John Wright's wife and destroyed the small house where the couple had lived for 25 years.

Without insurance to help him rebuild, he was forced to leave familiar surroundings and move in with a daughter in Texas.

The 67-year-old retired farmer didn't like his three-month stay in the Lone Star State. He missed his friends, and he admitted that his grandchildren made him nervous. He wanted to come back to Clark County.

Edith McClanahan, Wright's 73-year-old sister, began searching for an apartment for him. The cheapest arrangement she could find was a small room in a boarding house. Room and board was $300 a month — $40 more than Wright's income from Social Security.

Then Mrs. McClanahan had a better idea. Since her brother still owned the lot where his house once stood, why not build another one there?

Without disclosing her plans to Wright, she enlisted the help of another brother, Woody, 65, and his wife, Emma.

Knowing little more than the business end of a hammer, they went to work Aug. 31 on what would be John Wright's new home.

They pooled their resources to buy lumber and pay a carpenter to erect the frame of the house and install the plumbing so it could meet inspection codes. An electrician put in the wiring free of charge.

Word of what was happening got around town and friends dropped in to help with the project. Mrs. McClanahan said. Donations of furniture trickled in — a bathtub here, a stove and a television set there.

Finally, except for a few finishing touches, the house was ready for unveiling. It had a front porch, a living room, bedroom, bathroom and kitchen. Big enough for one person.

Still in the dark, John Wright returned to Winchester last week to what he thought would be an apartment his sister had located.

Mrs. McClanahan, along with Woody and Emma Wright, drove him to the site of his former home. Just a little trek down memory lane, they said.

Mrs. McClanahan told what happened next:

"What's that house doing on my lot," John Wright asked, confused. "Looks like somebody built right on my lot."

His sister suggested they take a look "to see what they did with this house."

As Wright stepped onto the green carpet in the small living room, the three conspirators finally played their trump card.

"Welcome home. This is your house," Emma Wright said.

Overwhelmed, John Wright wept.

"If I'd a'known this house was here, I'd a'walked all the way back from Texas," he said.

THE GREENVILLE Police Department Crime Prevention Section will work with any interested group in establishing a Community Watch Team in its neighborhood. Call Sgt. D. A. Jackson at 752-3342 for details.

Polish Leadership Meets On Next Step

By THOMAS W. NETTER
Associated Press Writer
WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Communist leaders today convened the first Central Committee meeting since the Solidarity union was banned and urged party workers to improve the ravaged economy to regain public trust.

"The debate is meant to consider what to do to come up to the expectations of the working people and provide answers to questions on why many matters in this sphere still fail to get off the ground," said Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, the premier and Communist Party leader.

His remarks to the policy-making committee were reported by PAP, the state-run news agency.

Jaruzelski, who is also martial-law chief, opened the two-day session of the 200-member committee one day after Poland's Parliament approved laws cracking down on "social parasites," delinquents and drunks.

Those measures overwhelmingly passed despite warnings from the Roman Catholic church and some legislators that they would be used to punish Solidarity

Nuke Defense Believed 'Near'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nuclear physicist Edward H. Teller says American scientists are on the verge of developing amazing new defenses against nuclear weapons.

But Teller said Tuesday that security provisions prohibit him from saying much more about those developments.

"I am now convinced that these defensive weapons are feasible, that they are the means to insure stability, freedom and peace (and) that this is the right path to pursue," Teller said in a speech to the National Press Club.

Teller, 74, a Hungarian-born researcher who was instrumental in the development of the hydrogen bomb, is a senior fellow at the Hoover Institution on War, Revolution and Peace at Stanford University.

supporters and other dissidents who persist in defying the Dec. 13 martial-law edict.

The meeting was also the first since Parliament formally outlawed Solidarity Oct. 8. That legislation ignited strikes, street demonstrations and riots that left at least one person dead and many injured and detained. The union's underground command has since urged new protests leading to a general strike next spring.

Observers called the Central Committee session an attempt by the martial-law government to fix blame on former leaders for Poland's massive economic and political problems.

"The socio-economic situation cannot be radically changed overnight because the economic balance has broken down on an unprecedented scale," PAP quoted Manfred Gorywoda, a Central Committee secretary and economic adviser to Jaruzelski as saying. Gorywoda also said the main party objectives should be improving food supplies, housing and welfare for the poorest families, PAP reported.

Investigation Is Continuing

Greenville Police Chief Glenn Cannon said this morning that officers were continuing their investigation into the death last week of Virginia Elaine Carr Tatum of 609 Ford St.

The 23-year-old woman was taken to Pitt County Memorial Hospital about 11:30 p.m. Oct. 19 for treatment of head injuries.

She died about 1:30 a.m. Oct. 20, Medical Examiner Stan Harris said, as a result of "brain damage" caused by "one or more severe blows to the head."

Cannon said that a man identified as "a friend" of Mrs. Tatum's said at the time of her death that she was injured in a fall near Sadie Sautler School. Mrs. Tatum was separated from her husband and was living with her father, Marvin Carr.

"We are overcoming the crisis under an unfavorable political and economic situation in the world," the agency quoted him as saying.

Before Tuesday's Parliament votes, Prosecutor General Franciszek Rusek told legislators that the "parasitism" measure "will be of great significance for strengthening the rule of law and contribute to a stronger fight against the most dangerous symptoms of social pathology."

Only four of the 460 deputies abstained on the juvenile delinquency law and three abstained on the anti-alcoholism measure.

But 12 voted against the bill on "parasitism" and 22 abstained, reflecting wider concern over a law resembling measures that have been used in the Soviet Union against dissidents.

Non-Communist deputy Karol Malcurzynski called the law "pernicious and demagogic," and warned it could be turned against former members of the Solidarity union who are fired for striking or violating the ban on Solidarity.

Critics charge it also could be used against journalists and others purged under martial law.

The church, in a letter to Parliament, said the laws were not in the "public interest."

The anti-parasitism law requires Polish males between the ages 18 and 45 to say how they earn a living. If they have been unemployed or not attending school for more than three months and cannot give a "satisfactory" explanation, they can be forced to work at a government job or punished further, including imprisonment.

The law on juvenile delinquency penalizes parents deemed to be neglectful of their children or judged to contribute to delinquency of minors, a deputy said. The anti-alcoholism law restricts liquor sales during morning hours and provides punishments for working while drunk.

It was not immediately clear what the penalties would be for violating those two laws.

As Parliament debated the measures, a man entered the American school in a Warsaw suburb with a can of gasoline and threatened to set it ablaze, forcing 187 children and teachers to abandon the building.

Soldiers from a nearby factory tackled the man, who was arrested. The official news agency PAP identified the would-be arsonist as Jerzy Zawistowski, a 63-year-old farmer who told police he was angry because he failed to receive a "satisfactory reply" to letters he had written to President Reagan.

The incident followed anonymous threats to the U.S. Embassy and the French school, as well as vandalism of some U.S.-owned buildings last week.

TOBACCO QUEEN WINS NATIONAL HONORS ... Mary Kathryn Smith, crowned queen of the 1982 Southern Flue-Cured Tobacco Festival in Greenville last November, was first runner-up in the 34th annual National Tobacco Festival Pageant held last weekend in Richmond, Va. Miss Smith was also the winner of the talent competition. She is from Claxton, Ga.

Pay Tribute To Wooten

ATLAS WOOTEN

Bob Jenkins of Raleigh, assistant to the president of the North Carolina Farm Bureau, paid tribute to Pitt County Farm Bureau leader Atlas Wooten during a speech before the Pitt County Farm Bureau membership Tuesday night.

Jenkins praised Wooten for "his unselfish service to the Farm Bureau organization on the county, state and national level."

"Atlas Wooten has exemplified strong leadership in all these areas for the past four years," Jenkins said. "Agriculture would not have survived in this nation without leaders such as Mr. Wooten."

Alex Allen of Farmville, past president, presented Wooten a plaque from the Pitt County Farm Bureau.

Scott Luce Will Speak

SCOTT LUCE

Scott Luce will be the speaker for the final Mental Health Association-sponsored luncheon "Spotlight" talk to be held Thursday at noon at the Greenville Parks and Recreation Administration Building, 2000 Cedar Lane.

Dr. Luce's topic will be "Enhancing the Quality of Life in the Later Years." He is a geriatric specialist-clinical social worker for the Pitt County Mental Health Center and an individual, family and group counselor. He is active in the state epilepsy public education movement and is a volunteer trainer for Hospice of East Carolina and a co-leader of the local Hospice support group for persons who have lost loved ones to cancer.

The Spotlight series, which has been held each Thursday in October, is free to everyone. It is suggested that each participant take a sandwich. Beverages will be provided.

Second Thoughts About Hydro-Electric Power Plant

By BRIAN NICHOLSON

SAO PAULO, Brazil (UPI) — Pollution fighters and ecology buffs are having second thoughts about the future of Brazilian hydro-electric power as a clean and simple answer to the energy crisis.

Brazil's massive new Amazon and sub-tropical hydro schemes, the first of which is due to flood this November, are nightmares to conservationists.

They fear, for instance, that an artificial lake 120 miles long and twice the area of Lake Champlain will be stacked with rotting tropical vegetation that will fill the air with a stench of sulphur so strong that men must wear gas masks.

The acid water may eat into billion-dollar turbines as they spin.

Experts warn that a tropical ecological system may be suddenly thrown out of balance, so that just one species — perhaps the fearsome and predatory piranha fish — could multiply and crush all its competitors.

These are the Frankenstein monsters Brazilian builders and planners may create if they go too fast in flooding vast areas in building new dams. They are illustrated especially in the current construction of the mammoth hydroelectric Itaipu and Tucuruí dams.

There will be other ecological problems with the large-scale tropical construction — pollution, climatic changes, and possible disease spread — but the main ecological nightmares up to now, simply put, are fish and weeds.

But on a huge scale.

The Itaipu dam will create a lake flooding 570 square miles of forest and farm-land on the Brazil-Paraguay border in November to supply water for the world's biggest hydroelectric power plant.

Its 12.6 million kilowatt output will surpass the U.S.'s Grand Coulee by 30 percent.

Tucuruí, 225 miles from the Amazon port of Belem, will be smaller in output, but when completed in both of its stages in 1995 it will churn out 8 million kilowatts and rank fourth in the world. Its lake will be twice the size of Lake Champlain and twice the size of Itaipu's.

Brazil, the seventh largest economy in the non-communist world, is short of oil and depends on the huge hydroelectricity projects such as Itaipu and Tucuruí for industrial expansion.

Tucuruí is the first major dam in a series of half a dozen planned or projected power projects that will run heavy industry and mining in the Amazon basin. As such it will be man's biggest test yet in swamping an area covered with a dense, tropical rain forest.

Scientists say that if any significant part of that forest is left standing when Tucuruí lake forms in September of 1984, then the 834 square mile sheet of water will become a death trap and die as an ecological unit from decay and stagnation.

The process is brutally simple.

As the dammed-up river rises to cover trees and undergrowth, the plants slowly die. The decomposing vegetation feeds bacteria. With the suddenly abundant food supply, these bacteria multiply, using up more and more of the oxygen in the water.

At a certain point, the fish, lacking oxygen, start to die.

"It's like throwing a big chunk of bread into your home aquarium," said Samuel Murgel Branco a lake resources specialist who advises the Brazilian, Colombian and Surinam governments. "The fish will die but not because they're poisoned. They die from lack of oxygen because the bacteria use it all up."

As the leaves and weeds decompose, they produce nitrates and phosphates, basic fertilizer elements that enrich the water and stimulate plant life even more, from algae to rapidly-spreading water hyacinths.

If this growth gets out of hand the lake can quickly become filled with dead and decaying plants feeding their own successors in a vicious circle of stagnation.

To make matters worse, some kinds of bacteria produce sulphuric acid in the water that will corrode the hydroelectric turbines.

Other bacteria may absorb iron in the water and then deposit it deep inside the turbine and generator cooling tubes, gradually blocking them in a kind of mechanical heart attack.

These problems are more than imaginary — they have already shown up at the much smaller tropical hydro projects of Curua-una, 44 miles north of the Brazilian Amazon port of Santarem, in northern Brazil, and at Brokopondo, 70 miles south of Paramaribo, Surinam. Although Brazilian authorities say the sulphuric acid has not yet caused major disruption at Curua-una, the Brokopondo case is a classic of what can go wrong.

"At Brokopondo the workers in the power house have had to wear gas masks because of the sulphuric gas," Branco said.

Surinam authorities said they licked the hyacinth growth problem by killing the plants with chemicals.

Branco calculated that if anything much above 15-20 percent of the total vegetation — the "bio-mass" — is left uncleared at Tucuruí, then this much bigger lake could face similar problems to those at the Surinam project.

Another Tucuruí specialist, Jesus Marden of the government-backed National Institute for Amazon Research in Manaus, agrees with the 20 percent calculation but maintains that engineers should be able to clear off enough forest in time.

Marden and official spokesman Mauricio Coelho both say their lake can avoid the problems of Brokopondo because of the much higher flow rate of the Tocantins River, which will make for a quick turnover of water in the main lake.

At Tucuruí, the land clearance problem has been become more critical because there is a question whether Capemi, the company licensed to clear away the estimated $1.5 billion worth of top-quality hardwood, can clear the forest on schedule.

Capemi blames government red tape and difficult Amazon terrain. But the company's numerous critics in newspaper articles say it is poorly managed and was set up by military officers with no previous experience in major lumber operations.

At Itaipu, where much land clearing has taken place and the vegetation is not as thick as in the Amazon region, the main concern is for the future of the fish balance in the lake.

"You have the difficulty of very quickly turning a vegetable eco-system into an aquatic eco-system," Branco said.

"Then the second thing is converting a running-water system into one where the water is stopped. This latter implies a big change in the fauna — basically the fish life."

One man now working on just that problem is tropical fish expert Robert Gordon Dickson, the Brazilian son of an English immigrant.

One of his aims is to control possible rapid reproduction of the voracious, flesh-eating piranha fish. The piranha thrives in still water and has infested at least one other big Brazilian hydro lake — that of Sobradinho on the Sao Francisco River in Northeast Brazil.

"At the start this will be no problem," he said. "Test catches in the Parana River didn't show any piranha at all. But I expect that when the lake is formed they will come."

The idea is to control the piranha by promoting one fish which compete naturally for the same food sources and another which eats its eggs, he said.

This will involve artificial breeding and introduction of fish which already live in the river, but which will be unable to reproduce in still lake water.

Two other types of river fish which would otherwise die out will be similarly bred and replenished to provide continued good fishing for local residents, he said.

Fleeced By Budget-Cutters

By BOB FICK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's Office of Management and Budget, architect of the major spending cuts approved in the last two years, was criticized today for letting top federal executives dine in government facilities at taxpayer expense.

In giving his monthly "Golden Fleece Award" to the Office of Management and Budget, Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., said the failure to end those meal subsidies has permitted "government big-shots (to) eat high off the hog in 22 private dining rooms at an annual cost to the taxpayer of over $2.3 million."

"Economy begins at home and government executives making decisions on how and when to cut Social Security, food stamps, Medicare and Medicaid should provide the example of frugality by eliminating their own government subsidy programs," he said.

Ed Dale, spokesman for OMB Director David Stockman, said the issue of executive dining rooms has been raised from time after time over the years, most recently to former Democratic President Jimmy Carter in 1980.

At that time, the Carter administration said the subsidized dining rooms permit government executives to extend their day by permitting them to work through lunch. It said that in many instances those working lunches were essential to getting the day's work done.

But Proxmire, who gives the award monthly for what he considers the most wasteful use of tax funds, said the executive dining rooms were not a target of Reagan's 1983 federal budget directives that called for identifiable users of federal programs to pay the full cost of those services. Instead, he said, the burden continues to be placed on the taxpayers.

"And quite a burden it is," Proxmire commented in a statement that said government subsidies cover 82 percent of the cost of the dining room operations.

"Wouldn't it be nice if every taxpayer could walk into a swanky restaurant and have Uncle Sam pick up 82 percent of the tab like these officials?" he said.

Proxmire said a government-wide survey showed that only nine of 31 department's and agencies reported having no executive or private dining rooms.

The lowest taxpayer subsidy for the 22 administration dining-room operations, Proxmire said, was 37.8 percent for the executive dining room at the State Department.

He said the Defense Department was the biggest user of the privilege. Its six private dining rooms cost nearly $2.2 million a year and the users pay less than $370,000.

Proxmire said the Senate dining rooms, by contrast, recover all but a small portion of their costs from the users, requiring taxpayers to pick up less than 1 percent.

Records Not Understood

GASTONIA, N.C. (AP) — State officials say they cannot figure out the financial records of a Gaston County weatherization program that has been ordered temporarily closed.

Sam Feemster, interim director for Gaston Community Action which administers a $121,000 weatherization program, said all inventory has been locked up until a probe of records is completed.

The GCA's board of directors also agreed to contact the State Bureau of Investigation about looking into insulation materials reported stolen from the agency's warehouse. The SBI has not responded to the request.

Several questions surround the program, including the reported theft of materials, inaccurate records and possible misuse of materials, officials said.

Former director John McQuillan, who left the agency last month, told police that between 500 and 700 bags of insulation, worth up to $2,450, were stolen from a GCA warehouse sometime between April 1 and Aug. 27.

In another incident, Gastonia police identified men insulating a house as members of a crew using GCA equipment to blow insulation into a house that didn't qualify under the program's eligibility guidelines.

No charges were brought against them because no insulation was reported missing at the time the house was insulated.

Board president Spencer Deaton said a state investigator has made four trips to Gastonia and still is having problems understanding the weatherization records.

Exchange Club Officers Named

The Exchange Club of Greenville elected officers for the 1982-83 year at its October meeting. The following people were elected: Charles S. Forbes, president; Leonard Hignite, first vice president and James S. Wells, second vice president and secretary-treasurer.

The Exchange Club meets the second and fourth Thursday of each month at 6:30 p.m. at Three Steers Restaurant.

Thursday, the exchange Club and the Civitan Club will meet jointly at 7 p.m. The guest speaker will be Judge David J. Reid, senior judge of the N.C. Superior Court's 8th district.

Lt. Gov. Green Disclaims Having A 'Torch Man'

WINDSOR, N.C. (AP) — Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green says a former farm manager was not his "torch man."
 "There is no credence in that whatsoever that I know about," Green said Tuesday, after learning that a Clarkton man had testified in Bertie County Superior Court that Sandy White Jr. of Clarkton burned buildings for the lieutenant governor.
 "He never did any such thing for me," Green said.
 Howard Franklin Watts said in a videotape played at a sentencing hearing for former state Rep. Ron Taylor and others Tuesday that White had burned several buildings in the past.
 "He's known as a torch man for Jimmy Green," Watts told undercover agent Robert Drdak.
 White also is charged but won't be sentenced this week. The state has given him immunity from prosecution in exchange for information about a warehouse fire and other crimes.

 Agents with the State Bureau of Investigation said they would probe any involvement Green may have had in any burnings or in the FBI's Colcor investigation of corruption in southeastern North Carolina.

"We're investigating any information or allegations that come to our attention as a result of the Colcor investigation," SBI Director Haywood Starling said Tuesday.

The tape showed a meeting between Watts and Drdak, who was known in Columbus County as "Doc Ryan," an underworld figure. In the tape, Watts tells Drdak that White "had a string of successes." In that same tape, Watts told Drdak that Green was "too powerful" to be vulnerable.

 The tape was played on the second day of a sentencing hearing for Taylor, who pleaded guilty Aug. 30 to two counts of conspiracy and unlawful burning of warehouses belonging to state Sen. J.J. "Monk" Harrington, D-Bertie. The fire caused $1.2 million in damages.

Taylor, a business competitor with Harrington, had lost a patent-infringement suit to Harrington Manufacturing Co. and had been ordered to pay $350,000. Taylor faces a maximum of 40 years in prison for his part in the burnings.

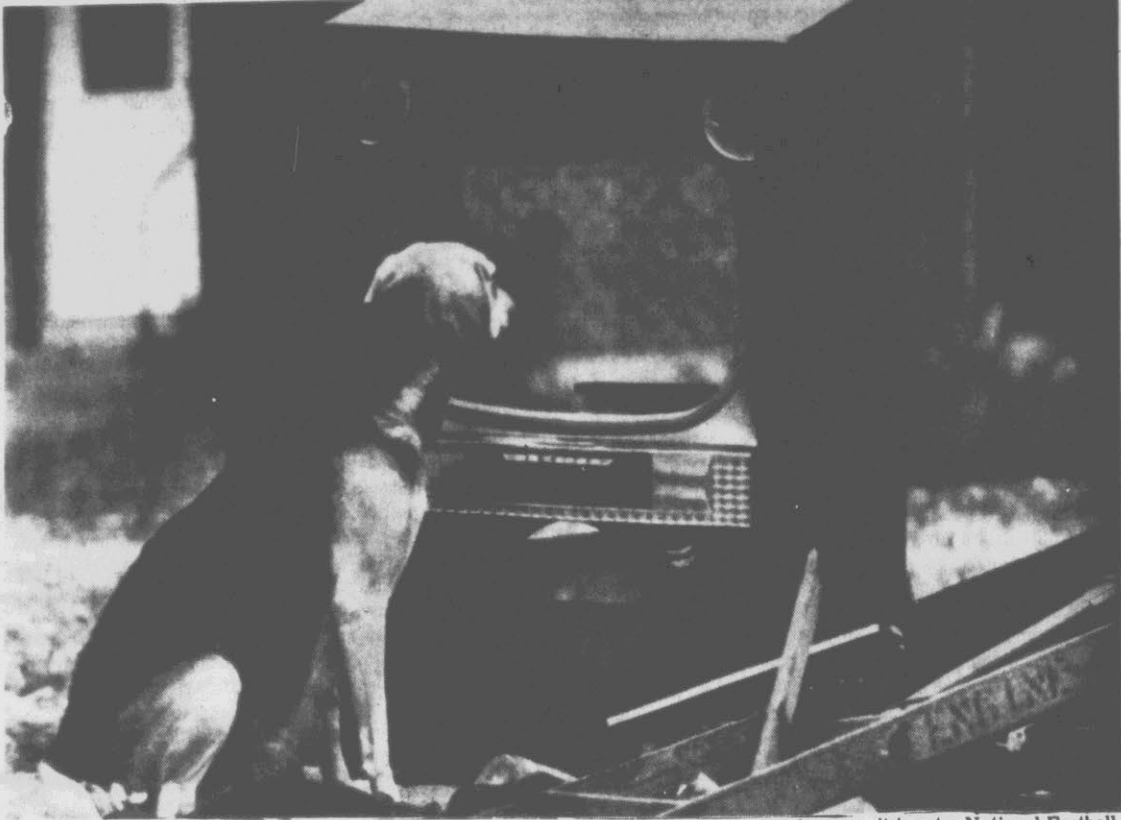

Watts also is charged in the burning, along with Graham Franklin Bridgers of Clarkton.

Green's name has surfaced before in the Colcor investigation. While posing as "Doc Ryan," Drdak sent Green a $2,000 cashier's check, which he called a political contribution.

 But Green refused it because the check did not bear the name of the contributor, as required by state law. When he learned that "Doc Ryan" actually was a federal agent, Green said Drdak had tried to entrap him.
 Tapes played Tuesday showed that FBI agents knew at least two days in advance that Taylor was planning to burn Harrington's warehouses in Bertie County. An SBI agent said an internal investigation showed state agents were not given that information.
 Bertie County Sheriff Ed Daniels said he was angry when he learned that the FBI knew in advance of the burnings.
 "That's not right. It's just not right. We could have had those warehouses staked out. The fire wouldn't have happened. Somebody could have been killed."
 Chuck Richards, an FBI spokesman, said today that he could not comment on the case because it is still pending.

Agriculture Research Agency Will Be Modernized

By JIM DRINKARD
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's top agricultural research official, conceding that critics of his agency are at least partly correct, is promising to modernize his operation to help meet the increasing global need for food.

Terry B. Kinney, administrator of the Agriculture Department's Agricultural Research Service, said Tuesday that work already has begun to lay out research plans for meeting the most urgent needs of U.S. agribusiness.

"The work of this agency has been basic to the success of American agriculture for decades," Kinney told a wheat research conference in suburban Maryland. "We have every reason to assume that the importance of the work ARS carries out will increase, if anything, because of the importance of American agricultural exports in the world market."

Critics say the research agency, once a force in making U.S. agriculture a world leader, has stagnated. Some 77 percent of its scientists are 40 or older, and officials devote more time to budget infighting than to creative scientific thought, they charge. A recent joint report from the White House science adviser and the Rockefeller Foundation, recommended a thorough shakeup of ARS.

While he did not detail his agency's response, Kinney said his revitalization plan would not be simply a bureaucratic shuffle. "The strategic plan may call for some action that will cause personal hardships for some people," he said. "It's going to, on occasion, require scientists to relocate and change the direction of their careers. ... I am talking about a serious realignment of programs, talent and resources."

Some conference participants noted that talk of increasing farm productivity sounds odd when U.S. grain bins are overflowing with surpluses and prices are depressed because of the glut.

But USDA staff members pointed out one statistic: World population growth in the next four decades will require farmers to produce as much food as was produced in the past 12,000 years. And that increase will have to come as problems with soil erosion and water supply are growing.

The USDA research arm is part of a loose network of federal and state research stations spread across the country. USDA spends about $450 million a year for basic research through ARS and provides another $140 million in block grants to help state-sponsored research at university extension stations. Critics say that hiring ceilings and a leveling off of federal support have tended to starve the department of young, newly trained scientists best equipped to pursue promising avenues like genetic engineering. The agency also has turned away from high-risk, long-term basic research, which leads to better knowledge of plant and animal biology, in favor of short-term practical pursuits. Congress and state legislatures also said to be part of the problem. "Political interests have been responsible for the establishment and retention of a large number of field sites and major facilities, many not justifiable in terms of research need or efficient allocation of scarce resources," the White House report said as it recommended that ARS consider closing some of the sites. "Many of our critics control our resources," said

Kinney, in a reference to congressional hearings on his agency's shortcomings. "For me, as an administrator, or for anyone working in ARS, to presume that we can ignore these comments is to dictate failure in the future."

Wave Of 'Me-Too' Contamination Across The U.S.

By The Associated Press
The makers of Excedrin ordered their capsules off store shelves in Colorado after one man was poisoned, and reports of product tampering — ranging from fruit to laxatives — spread across the nation in what a federal official called "a wave of 'me-too' crimes."

Consumers scrutinized containers of cold medicines and pain relievers for signs of foul play, and officials in three states warned Tuesday that any Halloween trick-or-treating should be done with caution.

In Chicago, where the scare began nearly a month ago with the deaths of seven people from cyanide-poisoned Extra-Strength Tylenol capsules, police searched Tuesday for a woman who lied about her identity after turning in a bottle of tainted capsules.

Officials of Bristol-Myers Co., the maker of Excedrin, called the mercuric chloride contamination of their product "clearly criminal" and on Tuesday ordered it withdrawn from store shelves in Colorado.

William Sinkovic, 30, of Aurora, who became ill after taking three Extra-Strength Excedrin capsules Monday, underwent surgery late Tuesday to remove the remaining mercuric chloride from his stomach. He was in critical but stable condition, said Loann Lawless of Aurora Community Hospital.

In Washington, Food and Drug Administration Commissioner Arthur Hull Hayes Jr. said it did not appear Bristol-Myers was responsible.

"We are seeing a series of localized tamperings in the Denver area and other sections of the United States," Hayes said in a statement. "None has been found to be the result of problems or contamination at the manufacturers' plants, so we must conclude at this time that we are seeing a wave of 'me-too' crimes."

In Florida, a Juno Beach policeman was hospitalized Tuesday after he began vomiting within seconds of drinking orange juice from a carton, police said. Officer Harry Browning, 27, was resting comfortably in Palm Beach Gardens Community Hospital today.

"He turned colors right before my eyes," said police Chief Robert DiSavino. The juice had been bought at a convenience store.

The county medical examiner's officer said the carton could have been injected with a product such as insecticide.

In Colorado, officials determined that another resident who became ill after taking Excedrin was not poisoned. Emily Jurick apparently just had the flu, said Dr. Barry Ruckman of the Rocky Mountain Poison Control Center.

Also Tuesday, officials at Stanley Aviation Co. in Aurora discovered a bottle of mercuric chloride was missing from the company's plant, personnel manager

Gordon Shaffer said. But the disappearance had no known link with the Sinkovic case, said Aurora police spokesman Mike Sellman. Mercuric chloride is used in fertilizers and insecticides.

The substance was found in 10 capsules turned in by Sinkovic.

In Florida's Highlands County, sheriff's officials advised area stores Tuesday to remove some fruit punch from their shelves after an Avon Park resident suffered minor mouth burns when she drank from a bottle of the beverage.

"Possibly the bottle was contaminated after it left the store," Sgt. John King said. The bottle, its contents smelling of acetone, was being sent to a state lab for testing, he said.

Also in Florida, as many as 60 containers of powdered laxative were found to have been tampered with. No illnesses were reported, but authorities were checking store shelves for suspect containers.

Since the Chicago deaths, reports of contaminated eye drops, nasal sprays or mouthwash have been reported several states including California and Texas.

In Ephrata, Wash., store owners returned Dristan capsules to the shelves Tuesday after tests on a suspicious bottle — which contained a scratched, misaligned capsule — proved negative, police said.

In Cape Cod, Mass., pain-reliever bottles were taken from the shelves of one store and mixed nuts were taken from another after they appeared to have been tampered with.

In the pain-reliever bottle, one capsule appeared "pinched," police said. The mixed-nuts jar, which had an unbroken plastic lid, contained a pill similar in color to a peanut, "indicating it spent a lot of time in the peanut jar," Detective James Lino said.

Lino said a Falmouth, Mass., pharmacist identified the pill as a pain-reliever containing codeine. He said it was being tested by the state health department.

In Minneapolis, 14-year-old Marlon Barrow drank from a carton of milk containing sodium hydroxide, a caustic chemical used in industrial cleaners, but was not seriously injured, said Dr. Gary Fifield of the Hennepin County Medical Center.

In Indiana, state police were investigating a report of a needle found in a banana, and in Arkansas, Crawford County officials said they had received a report of a needle in a pear and a nail in a snack cake.

Meanwhile Baylor University officials in Texas said Tuesday they were considering disciplinary action against a student and a former student who are marketing a kit to test for poison in over-the-counter pills and sprays.

The officials said Baylor did not authorize promotion of the kit on campus. Health officials in three states issued warnings Tuesday about Halloween. In Massachusetts, where five towns have banned trick-or-treating, officials urged parents not to let children eat candy wrap-pedin home-made packages. Arkansas officials urged parents to limit trick-or-treating to homes of friends and family, and in Ohio, the town of Conneaut canceled an annual trick-or-treating event to have been held Saturday.

Residents of Grand Junction, Colo., where three tampering incidents have been reported in 2½ weeks, "are scared, really scared," said Thomas Moore, owner of a small drug store.

"People are calling us about everything from water smelling like gasoline to canned pears that taste funny," said Dr. Kenneth Lampert, director of the Mesa County Health Department.

In Carthage, Mo., a man was charged with attempted murder for allegedly trying to poison a Jasper County Jail inmate by injecting a candy bar with cyanide.

Gary D. Kiecker, 26, allegedly was afraid that the intended victim, Buddy J. Buzzard, 21, would implicate him in some thefts, Jasper County Sheriff Leland Boatwright said Tuesday.

Youth Suicide Signs Studied

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — A University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill training director says adults need to learn to look for signs of suicide among adolescents.

Gayle Dorman, who is directing "Adolescent Suicide: Intervention and Prevention," a workshop in Raleigh this week for those who work with youths, says the signs of suicide among young people are there — if people know how to spot them.

She said depression — often related to suicide among adults — also contributes to suicide in young people. But adolescents' thinking processes are different, meaning suicidal tendencies can be harder to recognize, she said.

"Some teens are just beginning to make the transition from the concrete thinking of childhood to the abstract thinking of adulthood," she said. "It's not until you begin to master abstract thinking that you can understand death and its finality."

Ms. Dorman said suicide is the product of several factors.

"I think suicide has to do with our culture, high expectations and uncertainty about values and the future," she said. "There is a sense of hopelessness and helplessness that accompanies suicides. We don't understand why some teenagers can cope and others become self-destructive."

Suicide has crossed social and economic borders and now can be found among affluent youth as well as lower-class teens, Ms. Dorman said. In the last 20 years, the suicide rate has almost tripled, she said.

Despite that, she said, adults should not overreact to the sharp increase in the suicide rate.

"The concerns are justified. But we also need to remember that the number of youths who are attempting suicide is small," she said.

"We need to recognize those who need help, but we don't need to overreact in a way that frightens all teens."

Not Wanted By Hospice

LANCASTER, Pa. (AP) — A nurse who helped set up many "death with dignity" programs in the United States has been asked to resign as executive director of the Hospice of Lancaster, officials say.

Longstanding administrative problems led the hospice board to request Joy Ufema's resignation, Dr. Paul Irion said Tuesday.

Irion said national work by Ms. Ufema, who has helped design dozens of hospice programs around the country, failed to leave her enough time for the Lancaster hospice.

Ms. Ufema, of Philadelphia, could not be reached for comment Tuesday evening; repeated calls to her home went unanswered.

Ms. Ufema was featured in a CBS-TV movie, "A Matter of Life and Death," for her work with preparing terminally ill patients and their families for death.

Hospices provide counseling and care for dying patients to help them accept death and live their last days to the fullest. The concept, which has gained popularity since the early 1970s, steers away from treatments that merely prolong life at the cost of great suffering, although patients receive drugs to alleviate pain. The programs concentrate on cancer victims.

Driver Charged In Collision

Janice Johnson Wilson of Robersonville was charged by Greenville police with failing to stop for a stop light following investigation of a 3:07 p.m. Monday collision at the intersection of Fifth and Greene streets that resulted in an estimated $11,200 property damage.

Officers said the Wilson car collided with a truck driven by Laurie Ann Hills of Route 7, Greenville, causing an estimated $9,000 damage to the truck, $1,000 damage to the car, and $200 damage to a fire hydrant.

EXTENDED WEATHER OUTLOOK FOR N.C.

Fair Friday, highs in 70s except 60s in mountains — lows in 40s except 50s in southeast. Partly cloudy Saturday becoming fair again Sunday with highs in upper 60s both days with lows in 40s except 30s in mountains.

THE HIGHER YOU GO — A surprise snowfall in the North Carolina northwestern mountains left many areas with their first accumulation of the season. Amounts varied according to elevation as in the photo snow hadn't even accumulated on the ground by this home near Banner Elk, but the pasture above was already coated. The higher elevations such as Mt. Mitchell and Grandfather Mountain received as much as five inches. (AP Laserphoto)

Arrest Three In Theft Probe

Greenville police early today arrested three men on charges of possession of stolen property charges.

Chief Glenn Cannon identified the three as James Miller Goode Jr., 34, of Route 1, Greenville; Lloyd Jordan, 34, of 320 W. 14th St., and Willie James Scott, 31, of Goldsboro.

Cannon said the three were taken into custody about 1:15 a.m. today at the intersection of 14th and Chestnut streets when an estimated $200 in assorted packaged meats allegedly taken from the A&P Supermarket were found in their possession.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — THE PAPERBACK BOOK ON RAISING CUTE PUPS HAD DOG-EARED PAGES.
 Today's Cryptoquip clue: We equals S.

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

CP&L Plans Ask Rate Hike Again

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Rather than appeal a recent N.C. Utilities Commission decision, officials with Carolina Power & Light Co. say the utility will file again for another rate hike.
 But a spokesman for the utility said he does not know what size the request will be.
 CP&L was denied most of a $160.5 million hike it requested Sept. 24 and instead was granted an $8.8 million hike. CP&L Executive Vice President William E. Graham Jr. said the utility's decision to try again with another request rather than appeal the ruling is based on pragmatic grounds.
 "The decision not to pursue the matter through the courts is based upon the time required to resolve these issues within the judicial system and the fact that new rates could be placed in effect before this matter could be decided in the courts," Graham said in a statement.
 "The company believes the most effective means of obtaining prompt revenue relief would be to apply for increased rates as soon as a new rate can be prepared and filed."
 The commission denied CP&L's earlier request on the grounds of poor nuclear plant performance and said the utility had mismanaged nuclear operations.
 Company spokesman Mac Harris said CP&L should be judged by its entire operation, not just its nuclear plants.

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, OCT. 28, 1982
YOUR DAILY Horoscope
 from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The morning is the best time to obtain information you need to advance in your line of endeavor. You would be wise to engage only in activities you are interested in.
ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You can comprehend business deals very well today and much progress can be made. Private matters could be confusing.
TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Take time to improve your appearance and make a better impression on others. Take treatments to improve your health.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You could become confused if you neglect personal duties early in the day. You need amusement in the evening.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Plan the best way to gain your personal goals and follow through in a positive manner. Think constructively.
LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Make sure you handle public matters well. Find new appliances that will help you get ahead faster in career matters.
VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Show family members that you have their interests at heart. Seek information you need from fellow workers.
LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You have many tasks that need doing and this is the right day for such. Show more affection for the one you love.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Your associates could be just as opinionated as you, so make an effort to reach a better understanding. Be logical.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You can easily clear up a dispute early in the day, but later a close tie may not agree with you.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You can communicate well with others if you avoid getting into any arguments. Express your finest talents.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Study your true financial status and find ways of improving it. Make it a practice to save money instead of being a spendthrift.
PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You can now put your own affairs in proper focus and accomplish what has been impossible in the past. Avoid one who is irate.
IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will do well in financial and property matters, so give the proper education for best success to follow. Teach to come to quick decisions since there is a tendency to analyze too much. Give good spiritual training.

Postal Service Advises On Overseas Mailing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Postal Service officials launched their annual campaign today to get Christmas parcels, especially those going overseas, mailed early.
 Packages sent by Space Available Mail to military personnel in Africa, Australia, Central and South America and Southeast Asia must be mailed by Nov. 8 to assure delivery in time for the holiday, postal officials said.
 Parcel Airlift Mail, which is slightly more costly and travels by air in the United States and then goes overseas on a space available basis, should also be sent in November, officials said.
 Here are the deadlines for holiday mail to military personnel:
 Africa: Surface and space available, Nov. 8; parcel airlift, Nov. 15; letters and priority, Dec. 6.
 Alaska: Surface and space available, Nov. 29; parcel airlift, Dec. 6; letters and priority, Dec. 13.

'Fun' Murderer Could Receive 150-Year Sentence

NEW YORK (AP) — A smirking man who made a surprise confession to six killings told a judge he shot a friend "in the Christmas spirit" and killed the other victims "to amuse myself."

David Bullock, 21, pleaded guilty to six counts of murder Tuesday and described the shootings to State Supreme Court Justice Burton Roberts, saying killing "makes me happy."

"One of the killings, three days before last Christmas, was "in the Christmas spirit," Bullock said.

"I even said 'Merry Christmas' to him as I fired the shot. Then I opened his Christmas presents," he said.

The surprise guilty plea came during a hearing on a defense motion to suppress statements made by Bullock when he was arrested Jan. 14 at his Manhattan apartment.

The judge told Bullock that when he sentences him Nov. 29, he will "guarantee you never get out of jail as long as you shall live."

Bullock could get consecutive sentences of 25 years to life on each murder, for a minimum of 150 years in prison.

When Roberts asked Bullock if he still wanted to plead guilty, "recognizing that never, ever again will you walk the streets as a free man, that you will live and die in prison," the defendant replied, "Yes."

"It's fun," Bullock said about killing during his lengthy confession from the witness stand. He smirked and occasionally chuckled during the testimony, and told Roberts he felt no remorse.

Police described Bullock as a homosexual prostitute, and said most of his victims were homosexuals.

Under questioning from

Roberts, Bullock admitted he shot James Weber, a 42-year-old actor and performer with the Light Opera of Manhattan, last Dec. 5 in Central Park.

"I went into the park to shoot some birds. I saw Weber there. He said something. I pulled my gun out, pointed it at his head and fired," Bullock said. He said he pulled Weber's pants down and took $200 from the dead man's pockets before fleeing.

Eight days later, he said, he met a 23-year-old prostitute named Edwina Atkins and showed her the site of the Central Park shooting. "She laughed in my face," Bullock testified.

Bullock said he and Miss Atkins went to her apartment on Broadway, had sexual relations, and then he "put a pillow over her head and shot her" through the pillow because "she knew too much." He added that he set a fire in the apartment before he left.

Bullock said the next day, Dec. 14, he shot Stephen Glenn Hassell, a man who had picked him up and taken him to his lower Manhattan apartment. Hassell, 29, was identified as an investment advisor.

"I just put the pillow over his head and shot him," Bullock said. When the judge asked why, the defendant replied, "No particular reason ... something to amuse myself."

Bullock admitted he also killed 50-year-old Herberto Morales at Morales' Manhattan apartment last

Dec. 22. He said he had known Morales for more than a year and they were decorating a Christmas tree. Morales "started messing with the Christmas tree, telling me how nice the Christmas tree was, so I shot him."

"It was in the Christmas spirit," he said of the killing. "It makes me happy."

Bullock said he stole $1,000 and a television set from the apartment before setting it on fire "to cover up the fingerprints."

Bullock said he killed Michael Winley, 29, his roommate and "partner" in stolen credit card activities, and dumped his body in the Harlem River because "he crossed me too many times."

The .38-caliber pistol used to kill Winley and the four previous victims, Bullock said, had been a birthday gift from the roommate.

Bullock said that on Jan. 4, using a sawed-off shotgun, he killed Eric Michael Fuller, 28, in what police said was a robbery attempt in Mount Morris Park.

"I just stuck it in his back and it went off," Bullock said.

Bullock's lawyer, Joseph Klemmner, said his client was pleading guilty because his "chances of acquittal at a trial would be nil."

Cars Keep 'Dropping In'

CEDAR FALLS, Iowa (AP) — The Mortensen house on the corner of 13th and Bluff streets is one of the most popular homes in town. Cars are dropping in all the time — and that's the trouble.

Ralph and Alice Mortensen say their house has been a frequent target for speeding cars that miss the sweeping left turn of 33rd Street. The cars go flying into the Mortensens' yard and, sometimes, the house.

Mortensen brought his complaints to this week's City Council meeting as part of a public safety committee report. He said his property had been damaged by errant drivers 14 times since 1974.

The most serious case was /ver the summer when a car struck his porch, causing $7,000 in structural damages.

In previous years, an air conditioner on the house and a car parked in the driveway have been severely damaged, Mortensen added. Trees and shrubs, as well as city traffic signs, have repeatedly fallen victim to reckless motorists.

Mortensen said he was considering putting big boulders on his property to stop the vehicles before they hit his house.

The council told Public Works Director James Glover to study the costs of either constructing a guard rail at the corner or putting up a flashing yellow light to slow traffic.

NEW YORK (AP) - The stock market headed higher today, following through on Tuesday's late rally.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 5.24 to 1,011.31 in the first half hour.

Advances outnumbered declines by almost 3 to 1 in the early rally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Tuesday's upswing was sparked by rumors of a new cut in the discount rate by the Federal Reserve.

Many analysts said that speculation was probably misguided. But they said traders were heartened anyway by the market's quick comeback from its near-record drop the day before.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 36.33 points Monday in its largest single-day decline since it took a 38.33 loss on Oct. 28, 1929, in the midst of the Great Crash of that year.

Pitney Bowes rose 1/2 to 41 in active trading. The company reported higher quarterly earnings Tuesday.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average rallied 10.94 to 1,006.07.

Losers held a 3-2 edge on gainers at the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 102.08 million shares, against 83.72 million in the previous session.

The NYSE composite index rose 0.46 to 77.11.

Herpes Medication Is Cleared By The FDA

RESEARCH TRIANGLE PARK - The Food and Drug Administration has cleared a new therapy for severe Herpes infections that threaten the lives of thousands of cancer and organ transplant patients each year.

The new drug is an intravenous form of Zovirax brand acyclovir, the antiviral introduced this spring by Burroughs Wellcome Co. as the first effective drug for management of genital herpes.

Burroughs Wellcome said intravenous Zovirax will be used to combat potentially serious herpes simplex virus infections (HSV-1 and HSV-2) in hospitalized patients whose natural defenses against infection are impaired. The drug will also be used to treat immune-normal patients with initial genital herpes infections severe enough to warrant hospitalization.

It was pointed out that an estimated 200,000 immune-suppressed patients develop herpes virus infections each year. Most are patients receiving immune-suppressing drugs to treat cancer or to prevent the body from rejecting heart, kidney or bone marrow transplants.

In normal people, the herpes simplex virus usually causes painful, recurring genital sores or cold sores, it was explained. But in patients lacking immune protection, a herpes infection can spread throughout the body, attacking the brain, liver and other vital organs. In a child undergoing treatment for leukemia, for example, a cold sore can become a disfiguring, incapacitating lesion. Complications lead to death in about 5 percent of the immune-suppressed patients, according to the company.

Burroughs Wellcome said Zovirax IV may be a potentially life-saving drug in such cases. The firm said the drug is an important safeguard against the potentially dangerous spread of the virus.

Investigating Theft Of Cash

AYDEN - The Pitt County Sheriff's Department is investigating the theft of $600 today from a vault at Tropigas Inc., located just south of Ayden on old N.C. 11, according to Sheriff Ralph Tyson.

He said the money was taken after a hole about two feet square was knocked out of the brick vault wall and the vault was entered. Tyson said a storage area was entered first and then bricks leading to the vault were knocked out.

The incident was reported at 7:51 a.m., he said.

because it stops the active virus from multiplying and spreading in the body.

According to the company, immune-suppressed patients with herpes infections responded dramatically to the intravenous therapy in clinical studies. Patients treated with the drug healed more rapidly and experienced pain relief sooner than placebo recipients, it was reported.

Burroughs Wellcome said research to date has provided no evidence of a cure for herpes virus, which can assume an inactive form and remain in the body indefinitely. Zovirax manages active herpes infections by blocking replication of the virus in its active form.

Clinical investigations are continuing on the drug's use in preventing recurrent herpes infections in high-risk, cancer and organ transplant patients, in managing shingles, and in treating other herpes virus diseases. The company said that until studies are completed and data are reviewed, it is not known whether Zovirax IV will be indicated in these conditions.

Zovirax Sterile Powder for intravenous infusion will be available to hospitals in about four weeks. Another systemic form of Zovirax, an oral capsule, is under development.

Torre Named NL Manager Of Year

NEW YORK (AP) — Joe Torre, who in his first season skipped the Atlanta Braves to their best finish since 1969, has been named National League Manager of the Year by The Associated Press.

In balloting released today, Torre received 35 of 79 votes cast by a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters. Runnerup was Frank Robinson of the San Francisco Giants, who received 22 votes.

The Braves finished the 1982 season with a record of 89-73, overcoming a prolonged mid-summer slump to win the National League West by one game over the Los Angeles Dodgers on the final day of the season.

Atlanta had not won the division since 1969, when they finished 93-69 but lost the National League playoffs to the eventual World Series champion New York Mets.

This season, the Braves again were playoff victims of the eventual World Series champions, the St. Louis Cardinals. The Braves lost in three games to the Cardinals, but Torre was able to find solace in completely turning around one of baseball's least successful franchises over the past decade.

In four of the previous six seasons, the Braves had finished last in the NL West. In 1980, they were fourth, and they finished fourth and fifth in the two halves of 1981's strike-split season.

Fired by the New York Mets after five unsuccessful seasons, the 42-year-old Torre was hired to manage the Braves on Oct. 23, 1981. He inherited a team with basically the same personnel

Being Independent An Advantage, Emory Says

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

East Carolina football coach Ed Emory says the lack of conference affiliation doesn't bother him, and he's satisfied that the school is making the proper moves to keep the school in the Division I-A ranks — and to be a winner there.

Emory was asked at his weekly press conference his reaction to an editorial on the Raleigh News & Observer Tuesday morning urging the school to drop into the Division I-AA ranks. It further stated that East Carolina should never have left the Southern Conference.

"He's (Joe Tiede) entitled to his opinion, just like I am. I might not agree with everything he says, and I'm sure there are folks who don't agree with everything I say," Emory said.

"Not being in a conference doesn't blow my mind. Conferences are made up for baseball, volleyball, basketball and sports like that. Conferences are for tournament play and they don't have tournament play in football. I'd say that if you add up the pluses and minuses of conference membership (in football), being an independent is probably more of an advantage."

Emory noted the column said the Pirates had nothing to play for as an independent. "We've got a lot to play for. We have a whole set of goals. One of them is to go to a bowl, and if we beat West Virginia this weekend, and win the rest of our games, I think people would have to look at us. But we have to gain that kind of respect ourselves, and until we do, those kinds of articles are going to be written by somebody."

Emory, who was on the staff of Georgia Tech when ECU pulled out of the Southern Conference, said he applauded the move at the time. "I'll tell you one thing. I'd rather be playing Florida State and losing like we did last week than playing someone in the Southern and winning. That's not the way to build a program. If you're going to build a program, you've got to play the heavyweights on the road."

Emory pointed to N.C. State's series with North Carolina. "When's the first time Carolina went over to Raleigh to play? It's a lot later than most folks would think. It didn't occur until the '60's." Actually, the State-UNC series started back in 1894, with that game in Raleigh. There was a period, however, from 1943 to 1963 when all but one game was played at Chapel Hill. Four of those 21 years did not see the two play. That was probably the era Emory was referring to.

"As to not having the financial or recruiting basis, we've got more people in this area than Florida State has in its area. There are no towns around Tallahassee like Wilson, Goldsboro, Rocky Mount, Washington and New Bern and so on. We've also got the Tidewater (Virginia) area to draw from."

"I've always heard, too, that competition makes you better. So why can't this state support five Division I-A teams. I don't think that's a bad idea,"

Emory said. "We're not a football team wandering down a path with no direction," Emory said, quoting the article. "We have a goal. We want to be a Division I-A football team and we want to win on that level. Maybe people don't believe we can do it."

"But for those who don't, I'd like to suggest one thing. Go over to the Brody Medical Building (ECU School of Medicine) and walk through there. Not long ago that was just one man's dream. Leo Jenkins had that dream and nobody believed that he could make it come true, but it has. Anything can happen if you believe."

"And there's no reason why

Ayden-Grifton, after a one-game interruption from Eastern Carolina Conference play, returns to the league this Friday night with a chance to clinch at least a tie for the ECC title.

The Chargers, who upped their unbeaten record to 8-0-0 last week with a 30-15 victory over nonconference foe Lakewood, travels to Stanhope Friday to take on Southern Nash.

A victory would assure the Chargers of a share of the conference championship for the second straight year and leave Ayden-Grifton undefeated going into its season finale against SouthWest Edgecombe. It is that final battle that looms ever larger for the Chargers, who must win to clinch the ECC title outright. And A-G coach Dixon Sauls acknowledged he is concerned about his team looking past Southern Nash.

"You're always concerned about it, especially from a coaching standpoint," Sauls said. "There's a fine line between being confident and overconfidence. We hope our players play with confidence but at the same time we hope to have respect for every opponent."

The Chargers, who are ranked 12th in the state in the latest AP high school poll,

Carlton Captures Cy Young Award

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - If Steve Carlton had failed to win the National League Cy Young Award, it would have been unjust as far as Philadelphia Phillies pitching coach Claude Osteen was concerned.

"If it isn't announced that Steve Carlton has won... the award doesn't mean too much," Osteen said in a recent interview. "There is no one close to him if it (the vote) goes on achievement."

Not to worry, because 20 of 24 baseball writers who voted agreed with Osteen. Carlton's continuing refusal to submit to media interviews notwithstanding, their choice, announced Tuesday, made the 37-year-old hurler the first ever to win the award four times.

The other four first-place votes went to Bruce Sutter (2), Steve Rogers and Fernando Valenzuela.

Carlton, who along with Sandy Koufax, Jim Palmer and Tom Seaver, had won the award three times, polled 112 points (on a 5-3-1 basis), while Rogers of the Montreal Expos was runner-up with 29. Valenzuela of the Los Angeles Dodgers edged reliever Sutter of the St. Louis Cardinals 25 1/2-25.

Larry Shenk, Phillies director of public relations, telephoned Carlton at the pitcher's St. Louis home to break the news, but the left-hander wasn't there.

"I'll tell him," said his wife Beverly.

"Tell him if he has a statement to call me," Shenk advised Mrs. Carlton.

Carlton, who did not make any statement after winning the award in 1972, 1977 and 1980, maintained his silence.

Carlton, who posted a 23-11 record after losing his first four starts, was the only 20-game winner in the major leagues. It was the first time that has happened in this century.

Since Carlton won't submit to interviews, the most likely person to talk about the man who in baseball is known as "Lefty," would seem to be his pitching coach. But Osteen made it clear that Carlton didn't need much coaching.

"He's a very positive person, tries not to let negativism enter his mind in any way. There is no place for it in Carlton.

"I approached him in Montreal at the end of the season. We weren't eliminated yet, but our chances were slim. Lefty had a chance for three more starts if he worked with only three days rest, two starts with four days rest.

"I asked him if he wanted to make three more starts or two more strong starts. He looked at me and said, 'who's to say I can't have three strong ones.'"

Osteen attributed Carlton's effectiveness after 17 seasons to the pitcher's spartan conditioning program.

"He goes through a specialized conditioning program day-in and day-out," Osteen said. "I see pitchers who would like to be like Lefty in terms of training. They get excited doing his program.

But they do it two, three or four weeks and then fall by the wayside. He does it faithfully."

Osteen said confidence and desire are the other ingredients of Carlton's success formula.

"He expects to throw a shutout, strikeout, 12 or 15 batters everytime he goes out there. ... But he can take everything in stride as it happens. He may get a little disappointed, but it doesn't affect his pitching."

Osteen admits that he doesn't like to go to the mound to talk to Carlton during a game, even if the pitcher is in trouble.

"Usually Carlton just stares straight ahead as if he isn't listening. He doesn't like the game to be interrupted," Osteen said. "Most of the time I go out there, I've been sent (by the manager).

'Red': Herzog Key To Cardinals

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

St. Louis Cardinal coach Albert "Red" Schoendienst has seen his share of World Series - seven to be exact. Schoendienst knows the feel of winning it all, of being World Champion.

But, few others on the Cardinals did - until last Wednesday night when the Cardinals downed Milwaukee, 6-3, to win the '82 World Series, four games to three.

"We only had two players on the team who had even been in a World Series, Gene Tenace and George Hendrick," Schoendienst said. "I could see all the young guys waiting for that final out."

When Cardinal relief pitcher Bruce Sutter struck out Gorman Thomas for the last out, the St. Louis dugout erupted. Onto the field spilled the Cards in celebration.

And where was the experienced Schoendienst?

"I was in the clubhouse. I didn't want to get killed," said Schoendienst, who along with Cardinal pitcher Bob Forsch and trainer Bob Gieselmann spoke before the Greenville Sports Club Tuesday.

Schoendienst, who became a St. Louis coach after being the Cardinal manager for 12 years, led St. Louis to the National League pennant in 1967 and 1968, the Cardinals winning the World Series in '67.

"Why did we win it this year?" Schoendienst said. "It was due to Whitey Herzog. He put the ballclub together. He wanted speed and he got it. We just had an outstanding ballclub."

Among those on the team

who helped lead St. Louis to the World Series crown was Forsch, who was 15-9 with a 3.48 ERA this year. Forsch, however, did not fare as well in the World Series.

In his initial outing - in the World Series opener - Forsch was hit hard by the Brewers before leaving with two out in the sixth inning with Cards down, 6-0.

"Milwaukee had a good ballclub," Forsch said with a wry smile. "They made believers of me."

Said Gieselmann: "If you went bowling and came home after the sixth inning you didn't get to see him."

Forsch was not surprised. "The scouting reports we got said they could hit the ball hard," he added. "(Outfielder) George Hendrick came in one time and said, 'Do you mind if I start playing them in the third row?'"

Added Gieselmann: "Most of the time we massage a pitcher's arm after a game. I had to massage Forsch's neck from his turning (and looking) at all the balls going out (of the park)."

Both Forsch and Schoendienst agreed that winning the World Series was a team effort. "It wasn't just eight players and a pitcher," Forsch said. "We had 27 or 28 players who made contributions the entire year.

"I didn't realize how hard it was to get into the World Series and win it," he added. Schoendienst did, however, having been there before. "Anytime you've got to the World Series you've got two great ballclubs playing," he said. "Every year I was in the World Series it went seven games."

ECU Golfers Finish 6th

East Carolina's golfers closed out their fall season yesterday with a sixth place finish in the William & Mary Invitational yesterday.

The tournament, originally scheduled to be a two-day, 36-hole event, was shortened to 18 holes after Monday's play was washed out.

Virginia captured the championship with a 310 team total, while William & Mary was second at 314. ECU had a 331 total for sixth place.

Methodist's Brian Hamric fired a 75 over the wind-swept course that usually saw the wind hitting 30 miles per hour.

East Carolina's Don Sweeting had a 79 to tie for eighth place, while David Dooley had an 83, Roger Newsome had an 84, Kelly Stimart, an 85, and David Waggoner, an 86.

NFL May Play Less Than 12 Games If Strike Ends

NEW YORK (AP) — With more than one-third of the season wiped out, the National Football League is contemplating playing fewer than 12 games per team if the players strike is settled.

Several owners feel that we would have to have 13 or 12 games to have a credible season," NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle said Tuesday. "I'm not saying we would close down the season if we were faced with playing fewer than 12 games. But I don't make the final decision. That's up to the Management Council."

Jack Donlan, executive director of the council, said, "It's clear we're not going to play 16 games."

The league announced that for the sixth straight weekend, games would not be played. The strike began after two weeks of play and only eight weekends are left under the original regular-season schedule.

But, in Washington, Ed Garvey, executive director of the NFL Players Association, said he feels the season will be played in its entirety.

"No games have been canceled," Garvey said. "No season ticket money has been returned and every indication we have from the management people we have contacted is that they fully expect to play all the games, and that includes delaying the Super Bowl."

The Super Bowl is scheduled to be held Jan. 30, 1983, at the Rose Bowl in Pasadena, Calif.

"We might have to play less," Rozelle said. "It's not a matter of backing down."

"I am not saying, nor have I said that the season would be canceled if we got past that point (12 games). But at that point it becomes important as to who you're playing. You've got to have a reasonable number of divisional games."

"If you go below that, it could be pretty chaotic. The fans will say you haven't got true divisional champions."

Jim Miller, the council's public relations director, said, "We're getting very, very close to the deadline for a competitive season. We don't want to cancel, we want to play. But if the season trickles away, it's beyond our control."

DU Meeting Set Nov. 4

The Pitt County Ducks Unlimited committee reminds sportsmen who have not secured tickets for the annual DU dinner meeting on Nov. 4 that they should make their purchase in advance from a committee member.

A spokesman said the Greenville Country Club has a capacity of approximately 200 and the committee needs to know how many to expect for the meeting.

The tickets this year are $40, which includes the dinner and a $20 membership in the DU organization.

Anyone needing tickets or information regarding the meeting should contact John Farley, W.C. King, Tom Gardner, Mike Renn, Jim Morris, Dr. Ray Minges, or Dr. Ed Clement. Tickets are available at Art & Camera Shop on S. Cotanche Street or at Bond's Hunting & Fishing Shop on Arlington Boulevard.

The meeting will get underway at 6 p.m. with a social hour, followed by dinner and an auction, which highlights the area chapter's continuing effort to boost DU's international fund raising program.

Pirates' Emory...

East Carolina's football dreams can't come true either."

Emory said he was glad to see the story at the top of the front sports page. "Anytime you make the front top, it shows your program. I just wish they'd used a better picture of me," he said with a laugh.

Looking back on the Illinois State game of this past weekend, Emory said that the 21-0 victory enabled the Pirates to fulfil one of their goals — an unbeaten home season.

"I'm extremely happy to win, but I'm still disappointed in our production of points. When you get over 500 yards in offense and only score 21 points, you have to be disappointed."

Emory said he was pleased with the play of the offensive line, and that his tight ends blocked well and the running backs played well.

Quarterback Greg Stewart, who was named ECAC Back of the Week for his play in the game, rolling up over 200 yards in offense for the third time this year, didn't get Emory total praise, however.

"He did a good job, but there were things he did not do that could have gotten us more points," Emory said.

Backup quarterback Kevin Ingram, who played only briefly in the game, suffered a bruised sternum in the contest, and is questionable for this weekend's West Virginia game. "We don't know now if he'll even make the trip," Emory said.

"And on defense, you've got to be pleased any time you get a zero at the other end of the score. Their scatter offense gave us some early problems and a scare, but we came up with the big play when (Clint) Harris intercepted." East Carolina turned that into its opening touchdown, driving from near midfield after Harris' 25 yard return.

"Kevin Banks (inside linebacker) played his best game," Emory said, noting Banks was named Defensive Player of the Week. "(Jody) Schulz, (Jeff) Pegues and (Curtis) Wyatt played well at defensive end and our tackles played good. We got the best play out of our nose guards that we've had in some time, and I thought our secondary played well most of the time."

East Carolina closes out the 1982 season with four straight road games, beginning with the West Virginia University this Saturday at Morgantown, W. Va.

Ford Doesn't Recall Accusation

By The Associated Press
RALEIGH — Clemson football coach Danny Ford says he does not remember accusing N.C. State football coach Monte Kiffin Saturday of reporting Clemson to the NCAA for alleged recruiting violations.

But, Ford told WFBC-TV in Greenville, S.C., if he was filmed on video tape making the accusation, he must have said it.

"I really can't recall," Ford said Tuesday. "I understand somebody got a tape. Somebody put a tape on the den thing. Ain't no telling what I said after the game. But if I said it, I said it."

A cameraman for WPTF-TV in Raleigh recorded an exchange between the two coaches on Saturday at the conclusion of the NCSU-Clemson football game. According to the tape, Ford said he thought Kiffin may have contacted NCAA officials.

Kiffin denied Tuesday that he had contacted the NCAA. "I didn't turn him in," Kiffin told WPTF. "But if I had, I wouldn't have been wrong."

The tape depicts the two talking heatedly at Carter-Findley Stadium in Raleigh. "They've been up here three times," said Ford, whose comments were followed by some unadvised comments.

"I didn't tell them. I didn't tell them," Kiffin responded. "Who did?" Ford asked. "I never did," Kiffin said. "I never turned you in. They came up here. I don't know how they got here."

Clemson began an unofficial probe of Clemson in January

1981 after two recruits from Knoxville, Tenn., James Cofer and Terry Minor, told the NCAA a Clemson alumnus offered them gifts to attend Clemson.

On March 29, the NCAA notified Clemson that its unofficial inquiry led officials to believe there was some substance to some of the alleged violations. Clemson began its own investigation in early July, a probe which is now completed.

On Tuesday, Ford said he did not know who contacted the NCAA.

"I don't know if he (Kiffin) did or not," Ford said. "If he did, it's his business, and if we turn him in, that's our business."

Ford Tuesday brushed off questions about the long-running NCAA investigation of recruiting practices at the school Tuesday.

Ford, whose Tigers won the national championship last year, was questioned about the 19-month National Collegiate Athletic Association probe at his weekly news conference.

When asked about the possibility of knowing the outcome of the investigation next week, Ford replied, "I don't know if we'll know by then or not. But I'd like to know. Wouldn't you like to know?"

On Sunday, the Anderson Independent-Mail reported that Clemson officials would respond this week to allegations of football recruiting violations before the NCAA's Infractions Committee. The newspaper, quoting anonymous sources close to the investigation, said Clemson's case was scheduled to go before the committee Oct. 28.

Ford sidestepped a question on how his team is handling the distraction of being under a full-scale investigation.

"A distraction is an injury, or the press, or the girl's cross country team going across the field. You have distractions every year, and our people have done a great job keeping a handle on the job at hand."

Ford said he was looking forward to having the weekend off before the 15th-ranked Tigers' Nov. 6 date with 10th-ranked Atlantic Coast Conference foe North Carolina.

"When you're as beat as we are, you welcome a healing period," said the coach.

Elkins To Start Against Terps

CHAPEL HILL — North Carolina football coach Dick Crum says several factors played a part in his decision to return quarterback Rod Elkins to the starting lineup to play against Maryland Saturday.

Crum said his decision to take out junior Scott Stankavage — brought in when Elkins was sidelined with a knee injury this year and who tied a school touchdown pass record while quarterback — came after weighing seniority and the remainder of the Tar Heels' schedule.

"There are a number of things I based the decision on," Crum said. "We were playing very well with him at quarterback when he got hurt. Also, he is a senior and you have to consider that football is not a lifetime sport."

"If he were a junior, I might view it differently," Crum said. "But he only has five games left in his collegiate career and that would not be fair to him."

"It would work the other way if Scott were a senior with five games left," Crum continued. "Scott has done a fine job while in there and I'm not saying he will not play some Saturday. If the opportunity arises, he will."

Elkins will face Bobby Ross' Terrapins, a team Crum said is the strongest team the Tar Heels have faced so far this year. He said Terp quarterback Boomer Esiason poses a threat to North Carolina because he is so strong.

"Esiason is one of the big keys," Crum said. "He does so much for them. He is probably the most physical quarterback we have faced. He is hard to bring down and just shrugs off tacklers trying to sack him."

UNC Running Game Worries Maryland

COLLEGE PARK — Maryland doesn't figure to be chasing passers and receivers all over the field at North Carolina on Saturday, but they'll have their hands full checking a potent ground attack.

The 10th ranked Tar Heels average 303 yards a game rushing, fourth best in the nation, with Kelvin Bryant, Ethan Horton and Tyrone Anthony combining for a 230-yard average from the tailback spot.

"Those three backs could start for any team in the country," Maryland Coach Bobby Ross said Tuesday at his weekly news conference. "That's a problem."

"They're all a little different," Ross said. "Horton is a pounding type guy who runs right over you. Anthony explodes into the hole, while Bryant finds the hole and then explodes by you. They complement one another well."

Maryland's wide tackle six defense is doing its usual good job against the run, allowing 2.1 yards per carry, forcing opponents to the air. In the last two games, Duke threw 54 passes and Wake Forest 65, with three other foes trying 38 or more.

North Carolina has tried only 125 passes all season, forcing the Terps to concentrate more this week on stopping running plays while remaining wary of the pass.

"They don't throw as much as Wake Forest or Duke," Ross said, "but when they do, it's very effective. If you concentrate too much on the run, they've got some people who can pop the ball."

Ross said he didn't really care whether an opponent was more adept at running or passing, and then joked: "When they run, it probably makes the game shorter and I get home sooner. But as long as we win, I don't care how long it takes."

A-G Remains At #12 In Prep Poll

From Staff, Wire Reports
RALEIGH — Undefeated Ayden-Grifton remained ranked 12th in the state in the latest Associated Press poll of high school football teams.

The Chargers are 8-0 this season and lead the Eastern Carolina Conference with a 4-0 mark.

East Forysth High School stayed on the top of the Class 4A division. East Forysth received 11 first-place votes and 172 out of 190 possible points this week.

Following are the Daily Reflector rankings. They are based on points accumulated by wins. Wins over 4-A teams count 4 points, 3-A count 3, etc., with bonus points awarded for each victory the losing team accumulates. For example, a 3-A team with a 7-3 record for the season is worth 10 points for each team which beats it. Later season rankings are more accurate as points accumulate.

Kuenn AL Manager Of The Year

MILWAUKEE (AP) — When Harry Dalton called Harvey Kuenn in Stockton, Calif., last June, he had no idea he was about to hire the 1982 American League Manager of the Year.

"I think it's a great thrill. It's another thing I never expected to happen to me," Kuenn said of the award, announced Tuesday by The Associated Press.

The Milwaukee Brewers were 23-24, seven games out of first place and sinking in the AL East, when Dalton, the general manager, fired Manager Buck Rodgers and tabbed Kuenn to succeed him June 2.

The Brewers, tense and grumbling under Rodgers, relaxed under Kuenn, the club's long-time batting coach, and promptly when on a hitting tear that earned them the tag of "Harvey's Wallbangers."

They finished with the best record in the major league baseball — 95-67 — and then charged back from a 0-2 deficit to beat the California Angels in the AL playoffs before losing the World Series to the St. Louis Cardinals in seven games.

Kuenn was the choice as manager of the year of 47 of the 79 sports writers and broadcasters who voted. Earl Weaver, who resigned as Baltimore Orioles manager after 14½ seasons, was runnerup with 12 votes.

Third in the balloting with 10 votes was Gene Mauch, who quit as California Angels manager after the season. Rene Lacheman of Seattle had six votes, Ralph Houk of Boston had three and Bobby Cox of Toronto one.

Last year's AL manager of the year was Billy Martin, recently fired by the Oakland A's.

Kuenn was instructing hitters at the Brewers' Stockton farm club when Dalton called him from Seattle, where the parent club was playing.

"Harry told me the big club was going to change managers, and he asked me about three fellows he had in mind to succeed Buck," Kuenn recalled. "I gave him my opinion, and he said he would get back to me."

"Harvey was my No.1 choice all along, but I wanted his opinion on the three other possibilities because I wanted to get a feeling from him about whether he might want to manage," Dalton said. "I didn't want him to say yes just because he wanted to help the ball club out of loyalty. I wanted to know if he wanted to do it."

Dalton's only misgivings involved Kuenn's health. Kuenn, 51, had four coronary bypasses in 1976, surgery for complete kidney failure in 1977 and amputation of his right leg below the knee in 1980.

"When Harvey accepted the job, we left it completely open-ended," Dalton said. "I didn't know if it was going to be for a week, a month or the rest of the season. We just wanted somebody to take over the club now. I just said, 'Harvey, take the ball club and run with it.'" that had finished with a 50-56 record under Bobby Cox in 1981. Following Robinson in the balloting were Whitey Herzog of St. Louis with 19 votes, Dick Williams of San Diego with two and Chuck Tanner of Pittsburgh with one.

Kuenn, who on Monday was rehired for 1983, had no health problems during the season.

Atlanta won its first 13 games of the season, setting a major league record, and led the Dodgers by 10½ games on July 30. Then, the seams of Torre's young team began to unravel. They lost 11 in a row and 19 of 21, and the Braves trailed the Dodgers by four games on Aug. 18.

The Braves battled back into the picture, winning six straight from Aug. 19-24, and they led the Dodgers by one game going into the final game of the season on Oct. 3.

With fate finally back in their own hands, Torre said after winning at San Diego on Oct. 2: "Now, we can finish the season without playing scoreboard. All we've got to do is go out and win tomorrow, and there's nothing anyone can do about it."

Chargers Look To Clinch Tie For Title...

figure to be heavily favored to defeat Southern Nash, which has won just once in eight games this season under ex-North Pitt coach Pat Smith. The Firebirds are 1-3 in the ECC.

Southern Nash is led by QB Jeff Lucas, who directs the Firebird veer offense. Lucas is not only ranked among the top five quarterbacks in the league ECC but is also the top kickoff returner. He also punts.

"One key to beating them will be containing Lucas," Sauls said. "They run the option more than other team we've faced this year and our preparation will be somewhat different for them."

"They try to spread you out and try to open up some passing lanes. They try to attack the whole field more than other teams we faced."

Still, A-G should have more than enough to defeat the Firebirds. The Chargers feature the backfield tandem of fullback Jarvis Koonce (768 yards, 6 TDs) and tailback Malcolm Worthington (571 yards, 7 TDs). Sophomore Kelvin Harris, who has gained close to 400 yards, gives A-G depth.

Quarterback Joey Kennedy, perhaps the best QB in the ECC, continues to shine, having yet to throw an interception in 116 attempts. Kennedy has completed 58 of 116 for 666 yards and nine TDs to lead the ECC.

The Chargers come into the game off their highest scoring output of the year. And, while the defense gave up the most yards (183) it has surrendered all season, Sauls was happy with the win.

"We regained a little spirit, particularly on offense," Sauls said. "We had struggled in some games on offense recently but I think this game will give us some spark going into our final two games."

In games last week, North Lenoir blasted D.H. Conley, 32-0, Farmville Central blanked Southern Nash, 21-0, Charles B. Aycock edged Greene Central, 13-7, and North Pitt rallied past SouthWest Edgecombe, 20-14. Also last week, Roanoke outlasted Williamston, 12-6. Jamesville was open last week.

In games this week, Conley (1-6-1, 1-2) travels to West Craven (3-4-1, 0-3) and Williamston (2-6-0, 1-5) is at Washington (7-1-0, 5-1).

Farmville Central (3-6-0, 2-3) closes out its season at home against Greene Central (0-6-2, 0-4) and Roanoke (4-5-0, 3-4) does likewise at home versus Roanoke Rapids (6-2-0, 4-2).

Jamesville (4-4-0, 4-3) can clinch a playoff berth Friday night by defeating Creswell (6-2-0, 4-1). The game is at Creswell, which can also clinch a playoff berth with a win.

North Pitt (5-2-2, 4-1) has an open date this week.

North Pitt North Pitt has this Friday night off, but if Coach B.T. Chappell had his way the Panthers would be playing.

"I wish we could go ahead and play football Friday night," Chappell said. "I know we'd be sharper if we played this week. I just hope it doesn't hurt us."

North Pitt certainly deserves the week off, having played Farmville Central, Ayden-Grifton and SouthWest Edgecombe in the last three weeks and having lost only to unbeaten A-G.

The Panthers' biggest win of the season came last week when they rallied to defeat SouthWest and move a step closer to the first playoff berth in the school's history.

Down 14-7 and the Cougars driving, defensive lineman Ricky Wooten forced a fumble and Rodney Lawrence recovered to send the Panthers on to a tying TD. North Pitt eventually won, 20-14.

"I was some kind of pleased that when we were down 14-7 that instead of folding we showed some determination, some character," Chappell said. "I didn't know how we'd react to being behind."

North Pitt, which also assured itself of the second winning season in the school's history with the victory over SWE, ends the season next week at C.B. Aycock, a team that beat the Panthers, 36-6, a year ago.

"I don't know how we'll play, but Dennis (Bradley) and Ken (Whitehurst) and some others have been embarrassed by C.B. Aycock. I know they want to beat them."

Bradley was one of the keys to the Panthers' win last week. The 6-2, 185-pound senior running back gained 108 yards, scored one TD and added the tying PAT to lead the North Pitt attack.

Bradley, who also starts at linebacker, now leads the ECC in rushing with 825 yards and in touchdowns with 12.

Farmville Central Farmville Central, after struggling for much of the year, has won two straight and has a chance make it three this week. But, Coach Gilbert Carroll insists it won't be easy.

The Jaguars, who recorded their second shutout of the year last Friday against Southern Nash, faces arch-rival Greene Central this week in their season-finale looking for win No. 3.

The Rams are winless in eight games but Carroll insisted his team isn't taking Greene Central lightly.

"Greene Central is by no means a gimme," he said. "We've got an opportunity to finish at .500 in the conference and sole possession of fourth place, but it isn't going to be easy."

The Jaguars come into the game led by fullback James Moore, who rushed for 108

Playoff Outlook

Two weeks remain in the high school football regular season, but most of the possible playoff matchups are yet to be decided. A look at local teams and their playoff chances follows.

Eastern Carolina Conference
Unbeaten Ayden-Grifton is in the best position. Ayden-Grifton (8-0, 4-4) can assure itself of no less than a tie for first in the ECC this week by downing Southern Nash and can clinch the title outright by beating SouthWest Edgecombe next week.

If that happens, Ayden-Grifton would receive the Division I playoff berth and North Pitt would gain the Division II berth. If, however, SouthWest defeats the Chargers both teams would be tied for the title at 5-1. Further complicating matters is the fact North Pitt, should it defeat Greene Central two weeks from now, would also be 5-1, leaving three teams tied for the title — as happened last year.

Thus, a drawing would be held to determine who would represent the ECC in the Div. I and Div. II playoffs.

Northwestern Conference
Roanoke and Williamston are already out of the running for both playoff berths.

Coastal Conference
D.H. Conley is out of the running for a Div. I berth and has a only a mathematical chance at a Div. II berth, needing to defeat West Craven and Havelock and hope Havelock loses its final two games. That would leave the Vikings tied for second in the CC and give them the Div. II berth by virtue of having defeated Havelock.

Tobacco Belt
Jamesville can clinch one of two playoff berths given the conference by beating Creswell this week.

The Matchups
The winner of the ECC will play the winner of the Coastal Conference (either Havelock or North Lenoir) at the home of the CC winner.

The No. 2 team in the ECC will play host to the runnerup in the CC (either Havelock, North Lenoir or West Craven). Jamesville, if it wins, would play the winner of the Carolina Conference (probably Rosewood) on the road.

their defense to think we can physically beat them."

Carroll also feels the Jaguars must throw the ball against the Rams' 6-2 in order to win.

"I feel like if we can complete some passes it'll keep them from ganging up on the line of scrimmage (against the run)," he said.

In a side note, the Farmville Central junior varsity travels to Greene Central Thursday to the ECC JV title game to the winner.

D.H. Conley D.H. Conley coach Gerald Garner will begin a two-week gut check beginning this week when the Vikings meet West Craven.

"It's time to reach down inside for that pride. It's character time," Garner said. "You play these last two for pride and respect."

"It won't be easy."

No, it won't. The Vikings, who have played only one team that has less than a .500 record right now, meet a West Craven team which is led by the top running back in the Coastal Conference, Norman Becton.

"We're going to have our hands full," Garner said. "They have played some good football. They've lost some heartbreakers."

The Eagles, who are 0-3 in the CC, dropped a 20-18 decision to West Carteret last week and earlier this year led Havelock, 6-0, before losing in the second half.

The Vikings come into the game off a 32-0 loss to North Lenoir. The Vikings trailed by only a touchdown at the half but gave up 19 points in the fourth quarter.

"We did a credible job in the first half, but in the (fourth quarter) we just folded," Garner said. "I don't know what happened. The kids have come up short so many times this year it's get more difficult to bounce back."

But bounce back they must this week. Toward that end, Garner and the graphic arts department at DHC got together to work up a small poster which Garner will tape on each player's locker.

"It said, 'Winners never quit and quitters never win,'" Garner said. "I can't think of a more appropriate saying for us right now."

Hunt Beats Rose For 12th Win

Wilson Hunt, scored on only three times this year, rolled up a 3-0 soccer victory over Rose High School's Rampants yesterday.

Hunt, now 12-0-0, broke the ice after about 12 minutes of play when Anderson Mattox scored for a 1-0 lead. Rose's defense firmed up, however, led by the play of David Jester, Jim Carter and Lewis Robbins, and kept Hunt from scoring again until the final minute of the half when Michael Brice pushed in a goal for a 2-0 halftime lead.

Mark Schmidt, Jim Parker, Jordy Smith and Jim Benedict sparked the offense of the Rampants in the second half to some good play despite not scoring. Hunt then got its final goal in the last five minutes of the game, with Steve Jones scoring. Rose took 14 shots on goal in the game, while Hunt had 18. Rose goalie Gregg Ward recorded six saves.

Rose, now 3-6-2, plays its final game of the season on Thursday, traveling to North-eastern of Elizabeth City.

"I want to thank my two assistants for the help they've given me and the team this year," Coach Will Wiberg said. The two are Keith Johnson and Steve Brown.

Iranians Asking Confidentiality

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — A legal dispute over real estate in Durham County has prompted two native Iranians to ask that their current addresses and occupations in Iran be kept confidential so their involvement in American investments in Iran will not become known.

In papers filed in Durham County Superior Court, Sheitaneh Joroudi Moghadam and Mehr-Anguis Company ask that their names and addresses be kept secret in Iran. They are plaintiffs in a suit filed against First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Durham.

The suit, filed last month, involves the sale of Azalea Park Apartments in Durham in 1977. It says that Moghadam and Company became partial owners through a series of purchases.

The bank claims the plaintiffs defaulted on a loan to buy the apartments and is threatening to foreclose, the suit says. It asks for a judgment declaring that no default has occurred and that the bank be prevented from demanding immediate payment of the loan.

According to the suit, the bank initially owned the property and sold it to W.E. Fulford of Durham. Fulford, in turn, sold it to two other plaintiffs in the suit, Javad Vakilzadeh of Chapel Hill and Ahmad Alaghband of Corona Del Mar, Calif.

The plaintiffs contend that Vakilzadeh had been acting as an agent for various Iranians since 1976, and his job was to procure real estate investments in the United States for them. He was sent money for that purpose, the suit claims.

The suit says that Vakilzadeh and Alaghband said they were interested in buying Azalea Park Apartments for themselves and the two Iranians.

The suit says the bank should have known that the two were acting for others because, when they assumed Fulford's $1.012 million loan on the property, the bank accepted checks drawn on the company's bank account in Iran.

The suit also says the bank should have known the two were acting for others when Vakilzadeh sold his remaining interest in the property to Alaghband.

The suit indicates that the bank was aware of the Iranian investors last April. It sent word to Alaghband that it could demand full payment of the $1.012 million loan unless a new agreement was signed.

But the agreement increased interest payments from the original 9.25 percent to 13.5 percent, meaning monthly payments would increase from $8,329.84 a month to $11,597.38, the suit says.

When other financial institutions offer you money market checking...

Ask if there are strings attached.

Lots of financial institutions are beginning to offer checking accounts with "money market" rates. But, none of these accounts pay rates as high as Funds Checking<sup>SM</sup>.

And, with Funds Checking<sup>SM</sup>, there are no strings attached.

Don't tie up your money in an account that requires passbook savings.

With Funds Checking<sup>SM</sup>, there are no low-interest balances to maintain. In fact, no minimum balances at all. Simply open with $1,000 and earn money market interest.

We'll pay you the highest interest rates in the state on checking for a simple $2 a month service charge. And, if you're 55 or older, we offer Funds Checking<sup>SM</sup> with no fees whatsoever. (If you don't need checking privileges our $1,000 minimum Funds Management account earns the same interest rates as Funds Checking<sup>SM</sup> with no fees.)

Don't forget about insurance.

Your Funds Checking<sup>SM</sup> balance is insured to $100,000. Some financials offering high interest checking may forget to tell you that their repurchase agreement account isn't insured. So, ask about insurance before you tie the knot.

At North State, we'll be happy to explain all the particulars about our Funds Checking<sup>SM</sup> account. And, we won't forget a thing. Because Funds Checking<sup>SM</sup> simply pays higher interest on an insured deposit for a low monthly service fee. No strings attached.

Get the highest rates at NORTH STATE

6 medium-firm red baking apples
2 tablespoons melted butter or margarine
3/4 cup snipped coconut
3/4 cup granulated sugar
1 cup water

Heat oven to 350 F. Wash, core apples. Starting at stem ends, pare apples 1/3 way down. Dip in butter or margarine then coconut. Arrange with pared sides up, in shallow casserole. Boil sugar with water 10 minutes; pour around apples. Bake, basting frequently, 1/2 to 1 hour or until apples are easily pierced with fork and coconut is toasted golden; remove from oven. Makes 6 servings.

Amnesty International Catalogs Many Atrocities

By MAUREEN JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — In a grim catalog of human suffering, Amnesty International today reported the execution of children by Iranian firing squads and the murder of "thousands" of civilians by government-sanctioned groups, especially in Latin America.

The human rights group's annual report, covering 1981, deplored the use of the judicial capital punishment — including the death sentences hanging over 924 U.S. prisoners.

Amnesty International's report focused on dissidents and threatened minorities in nations that it said resort to political killings to put down opposition.

It attacked "continuing repression against all forms of dissent" in the Soviet Union, where 200 people were reported arrested during 1981 for expressing political or religious views.

Amnesty International, a Nobel Peace Prize-winning group based in London, campaigns for the release of political prisoners.

The 367-page review of 121 countries reported "thousands" of people killed last year by security forces or government-sanctioned death squads.

"Specific, consistent reports of torture were received from Guatemala, El Salvador, Chile, Uruguay, Haiti and Colombia, among others," the group said.

Amnesty also criticized the United States and Mexico for allegedly pressing Salvadoran, Guatemalan and Haitian refugees to return home despite danger to their lives.

It said killers decapitated a 24-year-old Salvadoran two months after he was deported by the United States.

After 21 years of lobbying governments to abolish the death penalty, Amnesty cited a sharp rise last year in the number of condemned prisoners executed around the world.

It reported at least 3,278 prisoners were executed in 34 countries — more than double the 1,229 in 29 countries during 1980.

Another 3,209 people were sentenced to death in 52 countries in 1981, it said, compared with 1,295 in 41 countries the previous year.

The statistics covered only officially reported executions, such as 96 people hanged in South Africa. They did not include what Amnesty said were "hundreds" believed ordered executed by military courts in Pakistan and similar executions elsewhere.

The fundamentalist Moslem regime of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini was responsible for the most executions, with 2,616 people facing firing squads in Iran, the review said.

Most died in an "upsurge of executions" after the June 20, 1981 ouster of President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr, it said.

"These are minimum figures — cases actually known to us," said Amnesty spokesman David Laulich. "We always find later we learn there were more. There is no question the total is horrifying."

Amnesty said it had "many reports" of children being executed in Iran and documentary evidence that a 15-year-old boy and a 13-year-old girl were killed by firing squads for allegedly belonging to the underground Mujahedeen Khalq guerrilla group.

It singled out the U.S.-backed rightist governments in El Salvador and Guatemala, and Syria's socialist Baath government for obliterating political opponents or dissidents.

In El Salvador, state troops gunned down refugees, including women and children, the report said. It also cited the torture of church workers, labor unionists and suspected leftists by government security agents.

Guatemalan security forces killed at least 3,211 people during the year, ranging from Indian peasants to Roman Catholic church workers, the report charged. It said the victims were often mutilated.

Witnesses were quoted as reporting the slayings of three farmers by uniformed troops in Colombia. The report said one old man's face was peeled off, another's throat was slit and that the third victim's intestines spilled onto the ground.

Amnesty refuses to rank the nations with the worst human rights records.

"We know any time we made anything that looked like a comparison, there'd be a great risk of someone using it for political propaganda," Laulich said.

The report said more countries are abolishing the death penalty but those retaining it use it more often. It noted "a disturbing increase" in death sentences throughout Asia and said Amnesty was particularly disturbed by stepped-up executions in China for various criminal and "counter-revolutionary" offenses. The death penalty also remains in force throughout Eastern Europe, Africa — except for tiny Cape Verde — and the Middle East.

Western countries have virtually abolished capital punishment, with the major exception of the United States, the report showed.

An Associated Press survey in August found 1,019 people on Death Row in the United States.

With France's abolition of capital punishment in 1981, Turkey was the only West European country still carrying out the death penalty, the report said.

Cooke Says British TV Image Is An 'Illusion'

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Alistair Cooke, resident Brit on the American telly, prefers programs in the United States to his native England. But, except for "M-A-S-H," "60 Minutes," and "Nightline," he means public television.

"The biggest illusion that the world shares is that the BBC (British Broadcasting Corp.) is an incomparable service," says Cooke, the urbane host of public TV's "Masterpiece Theater." "In London, I mark the Sunday papers with a red pen, and I might want to see four hours of television a week."

"In the U.S. I do the same thing and watch four hours a night." Cooke says when BBC officials lecture here, "they're wine and dine and don't get back to their hotels until 11. Then they'll turn on the telly and say: 'My God, it's all rubbish.'" (Rubbish is a kind evaluation for "Love Boat" reruns and the like.)

Actually, the distinguished Cooke is now an American citizen, but he is bicoastal, working and traveling on both sides of the Atlantic.

Cooke says his regular TV viewing includes the network news, "MacNeil-Lehrer," "Washington Week in Review," "Agnorsky & Co.," "Firing Line," "Masterpiece Theater," "Nova" and "a fatal addiction to old movies from the '30s and '40s, when I was a film critic."

"As a nightcap, I've watched 'M-A-S-H' for years. It has a nice interplay of comic and pathetic subtleties," adds Cooke. "I also like '60 Minutes,' although it's up and down. 'Nightline' is very good. News and discussion shows here are far superior. News in Britain is as bad as the BBC's world service radio is superb."

"When I go to Britain, I'm always asked if I miss anything from America. I tell them I miss television."

But not the bulk of programming on ABC, CBS and NBC. "If there was no public TV, the gap between Britain and America would be the size of the Grand Canyon," says Cooke. "When I try network TV, I'm usually disappointed. 'Behind Closed Doors,' for example, was just too slick."

Cooke says the networks don't care enough about detail and nuance. He cites "Beacon Hill," which was billed as the American "Upstairs, Downstairs." It lasted four months.

"It was a disaster. They just didn't know their stuff. They had one writer. 'Upstairs, Downstairs' had 12."

In addition, a show that explores contrasting fabrics of society can't attach itself to a city as an afterthought. Cooke says "Beacon Hill" considered Boston, Seattle and New Orleans as locales.

It also galls him to see American TV trivialize the courtroom drama. "Trials are tense and there's a quiet flow of danger, but that never comes across."

"To Serve Them All My Days," the current "Masterpiece Theater" offering about a British teacher in an all-boys school, is a moving story, full of gentle, humorous touches.

Cooke says the 13-part series is typical of the quality of the upcoming "Masterpiece Theater" season that includes Ford Madox Ford's "The Good Soldier," "Winston Churchill: The Wilderness Years," D.H. Lawrence's "Sons and Lovers," and Jack Pulman's "Private Schulz."

His favorite "Masterpiece Theater" productions have been "Upstairs, Downstairs," Henry James' "The Golden Bowl" and "Edward and Mrs. Simpson," which he calls "the best docudrama anybody's done."

He says last year's "A Town Like Alice" was "so well done. They acted melodrama like it wasn't melodrama."

Cooke doesn't mince words over his least favorite. "I couldn't abide 'Poldark,'" he says of the tale of 18th century gallantry. "I was bored stiff. It seemed to be a bunch of cardboard figures going through the motions of love and hate."

"On the air, you certainly have to disguise something you don't like. At the end, all I said was: 'This is the end of 'Poldark.' The control room breathed a sigh of relief. They weren't sure what I was going to say."

Hospital Tests For Myrna Loy

NEW YORK (AP) — Actress Myrna Loy is expected to be released soon from Lenox Hill Hospital after being admitted for a "series of tests," say hospital officials.

The 77-year-old actress was admitted on Oct. 17, said Henry Shook, the hospital's night administrator, who declined to describe Miss Loy's illness.

Japan Closes Polls

By TODD CARREL
Associated Press Writer
TOKYO (AP) — In Japan, where expressing your opinion can be considered rude, nearly 1,000 polls a year seek to find out privately what people think about everything from pets to politicians — and even to guide government policy.

The nation's citizenry are constantly buffeted by results of polls conducted by government, media groups, and about a dozen private survey organizations. Pollsters concur Japan has no counterpart to rival the scale of Gallup or Harris, America's giant independent polling organizations.

But plumbings of the public mood, in this introspective, conformist society, face peculiar problems.

"In Japan, people don't like to express their opinions," said Sigeeki Nishihira, an opinion poll expert at the government-backed Institute of Statistical Mathematics. "It's a big problem."

"A Japanese is more interested in the opinions of his neighbor," he said in a recent interview, "and expressing oneself too clearly is considered strange — even rude." The polls present an opportunity to give opinions without revealing one's identity.

Nishihira said the pollsters' chore has been complicated by the Japanese language's intrinsic vagueness — "there's intense confusion about what responses of 'yes' and 'no' really mean here."

So Japanese opinion-samplers have developed techniques he said were more complex than interviewing methods used in the United States, often spicing their lengthy questionnaires with "a lot of 'ifs' and 'supposes.'"

Despite these problems, the Japanese continue to churn out polls.

"The most recent Institute of Statistical Mathematics survey shows 902 opinion polls were conducted in 1980 — 523 by local government, 64 by the national government, 160 by media groups and 155 by other institutions. The figures do not include thousands of routine market and consumer surveys conducted by banks, companies and others."

"Survey topics are legion. The Tokyo city government recently probed high school sex and declared 10 percent of the students had had it."

"The Japan Broadcasting Corp. conducts annual polls on politics and life styles."

"The Prime Minister's Office has recently canvassed opinions on topics including pets, the environment, telephone use, the police, and attitudes of youths toward parents."

In politics, American and European pollsters often conduct surveys after speeches by government leaders to gauge levels of public support. In Japan, the order is sometimes reversed.

"The Japanese government takes a survey first, then attempts to formulate policy," said Nishihira. "The ministries want to know the thoughts of others first ... and the Japanese people think that's very democratic."

These methods have sparked controversy among pollsters. Some media pollsters maintain the government conducts surveys to prop up its policies. Government workers counter with charges that media canvassers launch biased probes to shoot down official policies and criticize leaders.

"The press is critical of our polls," said Keiko Yabuki who helps conduct opinion surveys for the Prime Minister's Office. "They say our questionnaires are bad and the results we get are good for the government."

Fergo Otsuka, her boss, called their polls as "very credible."

Her office decides which requests for polls from government agencies should be undertaken, writes questionnaires and contracts outside groups to conduct the polls. "It has commissioned 60 polls since 1947, about 30 of them last year at a cost of $2 million, Otsuka said."

He maintained there was popular interest in their polls because people believe "the government will pay attention to the results."

This office released the results of two new surveys in October. One found that while Japanese people consider the United States, then China, their nation's most important friends, they are most interested in the Asian region. The other showed that 50 percent of the respondents supported increasing the number of Indochinese refugees allowed into Japan, while 29 percent opposed it.

Nishihira complained that the sheer number of all these polls has caused many potential respondents to shut the door on some opinion surveys whom people view as pesky "door-to-door salesmen."

And in one sign that pollsters are wary of their own public image, the mass-circulation Yomiuri newspaper conducted a poll on polls.

That October 1980 opinion survey asked whether polls furnish the public with much information about the world. The results: 21 percent of the respondents said they provided much information; 57 percent said a little; 17 percent said none or almost none; and 5 percent said they didn't know.

Group Engaged In Saving California's Ecosystems

By THOMAS MURPHY
Associated Press Writer
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — When the first settlers crossed the high Sierra into California, they found a sea of grass covering almost 23 million acres. Today, only 10,000 of those acres remain unchanged.

Now the Nature Conservancy is finishing the most ambitious private conservation effort in California history to save 11 of the state's most endangered ecosystems — varied landscapes ranging from desert oases to freshwater marshes, from native wildflowers to saltbush scrub.

Each of the 11 systems is in danger of vanishing as shopping centers, parking lots, homes and farms cover the increasingly valuable landscape.

The 140,000-member conservancy, which acts as the real estate arm of the conservation movement, was established in 1951 and since then, it says, has preserved more than 1.8 million acres in the United States, Canada and the Caribbean.

To meet its goal in California, the conservancy must raise another $5 million by the end of the year. It already has collected $10 million since 1980, using the money to establish seven preserves throughout the state.

The California Critical Areas Program, as it is known, is similar to previous efforts successfully completed by the Nature Conservancy in California and other states. Perhaps the most spectacular was the $6 million purchase of 55,000-acre Santa Cruz Island in the Santa Barbara Channel in 1981.

Once they are acquired, the preserves will be open to the public for uses that range from bird watching to duck hunting.

With the help of several large corporations and a board of directors that reads like a Who's Who of California industry, the California chapter of the Nature Conservancy is unique among environmentalist groups in its ability to raise funds.

Still, California director Peter Seligman is not sure the Critical Areas Program will succeed.

"I'm hopeful that we'll raise the last $5 million," said Seligman, "but I have my fingers crossed."

Seligman, a Harlem-born graduate of Rutgers and Yale, says the Nature Conservancy has an odd composition for an environmental organization.

"The supporters...run from left to right, all the way," said Seligman, resting his sneakers on the desk of his San Francisco office. "Some of them are conservative and some of them have long beards and live in the woods in Mendocino County."

Seligman suspects the organization is popular with both ends of the political rainbow because it stays neutral on most political issues.

Its Critical Areas Program committee is composed of some of the state's top business leaders including Bank of America chairman Leland Prussia, Southern Pacific chairman Alan Furth, Hewlett Packard chairman David Packard, and Robert Erburu, president of Times Mirror.

"They have a tremendous love of California," said Seligman. "They've lived here all their lives and they've seen the change."

The board also includes the California head of the Bureau of Land Management and the director of the state Department of Fish and Game.

While an organization like the Sierra Club might lobby publicly to prevent a particular environmental mishap, Seligman says his group takes a quieter approach.

"We probably would use friends to contact important people who could influence the decision," said the 32-year-old director.

The business contacts have helped.

Southern Pacific sold the conservancy the Vernal Pools Preserve in Solano County. The conservancy is now negotiating with Union Oil to buy sand dunes in Humboldt County along the northern California coast.

Getty Oil and Chevron contributed a total of $1.5 million to help acquire a tract of valley saltbush scrub in the oil-rich Elk Hills area of Kern County west of the Mojave Desert.

Seligman said most corporations are cooperative when they discover they own irreplaceable land, especially when they "can donate a piece of land and just write it off the way they do with standard charitable contributions."

The state Department of Fish and Game helped the conservancy assess endangered ecosystems and set priorities for inclusion in the critical areas program. Criteria for inclusion were uniqueness, adequacy of present protections, and "closeness to extinction."

It was this survey that determined there was only 10,000 acres of native grasslands left of the 23 million acres of fertile soils where native grasses once grew in California. The grasslands represent nearly a quarter of California's 100 million acres.

But the conservancy hasn't been completely successful in securing some valuable tracts, especially if the land has possible commercial use. A Japanese interest in American wood chips has threatened the few remaining oak forests in California. And one man wanted to turn a desert oasis into a bullfrog farm.

"Some of the uses are so ludicrous," said Seligman. "It's as if we've gotten away from basic survival needs like food and housing and we've getting to these extraneous things like bullfrog farms and wood chips."

And then, he says, "there are always a couple of reactionaries." One of those plowed 1,500 acres of native grasslands under when the conservancy refused to pay him five times its value.

SAVING ECOSYSTEMS — This forest, a common sight to the first California settlers, is an example of the state's vanishing ecosystems. Now part of the Kern River Preserve, one of seven such preserves across the state established to protect the most endangered environments in California. (AP Laserphoto)

Large Stakes In Virginia-Maryland Oyster Wars

By CHRISTOPHER SULLIVAN
Associated Press Writer

POCOMOKE CITY, Md. (AP) — For more than 200 years, Maryland and Virginia have battled for possession of oyster beds that cling to the floor of the Chesapeake Bay. Local residents call it an "oyster war," a conflict that recently has grown more hostile. Earlier this month, gunfire from a Virginia boat wounded two Maryland watermen, and officials have increased bay patrols along the watery, zigzagging boundary that separates the two states. Since 1785, when Maryland and Virginia first entered into a compact to regulate fishing in disputed areas, the seafood competition has been waged in the courts and occasionally at sea. Some observers say the outbreaks of violence come in years, like this one, when the oyster catch is lean. Others say a disparity between the two states' fishing regulations aggravates tensions. Some blame the feisty, independent spirit of watermen and local residents' long memory of past shootings.

Thirty-three years after the last fatal shooting of a Maryland waterman, Elmira Ford, a resident of Crisfield on Maryland's Eastern Shore, still speaks angrily about it and doubts the dispute will ever be settled. "Not as long as there's oysters out there," she said. "The heart of the issue is there's been bad feeling for centuries between Maryland and Virginia ... over this very touchy issue of sovereignty," said local historian John Wennersten. "Here in 1982, it's still a frontier mentality."

The latest incident involved Randall Burke and his brother, Ronald, both of Crisfield, who were hit by pellets on Oct. 5 while returning home from oystering.

Virginia authorities arrested 33-year-old Robert P. Clock of Parksley, Va., and 58-year-old Glenn C. Evans of Saxis, Va. — who live across the disputed Pocomoke Sound.

They were charged in Maryland warrants with assault with intent to kill and other violations. Both are free on bond and will likely fight extradition to Maryland, according to their lawyer, Daniel Hartnett.

In another incident, Virginia authorities are seeking the extradition of Luther Ray Sterling of Crisfield, who was named in a warrant charging felony power-dredging for oysters in the sound in July. He was indicted the day before the shooting incident.

Before dawn recently at a watermen's cafe in Virginia, oystermen muttered about the shootings. "They just got too bold," said Bob Martin of Saxis. "They're taking food off our tables," added Don Porter.

Maryland fishermen are allowed to use crane-like "patent tongs" to bite the bay floor and bring up oysters, while Virginia residents can only use hand tongs.

Maryland's oyster season opens on Sept. 15, about two weeks ahead of Virginia's — and Marylanders can work the bay six days a week until sundown, while Virginia residents must stop at 2 p.m. and work only five days.

Vernon Drewer, who operates an oyster packing company in Saxis, echoed watermen on both sides of the state line when he complained of lax law enforcement — noting that Virginia Natural Resources police do not carry guns.

"Like I was telling one of the (agency's) commissioners, he's got a bunch of meter maids out there," said Drewer.

Some Virginia fishermen have complained about a federal judge's ruling in a suit filed by Maryland watermen, opening up Virginia bay waters to crabbing by out-of-state fishermen.

"There ain't nothing we can do about that," said A.W. Williams. "But our oysters, they're ours."

Packers pay the watermen about $5 a bushel now for crabs, but twice that amount, or more, for oysters.

Last year, the dockside value of Chesapeake Bay oysters was about $20 million. "They're off this year. It's slower," said Bob Prier of Maryland's Office of Seafood Marketing.

"Twenty-five years ago, the law was 100 percent with 'em," said Williams, referring to the roughly 50 oyster boats based in Saxis. "But now the law's against 'em for trying to protect themselves."

In a watermen's cafe across Pocomoke Sound, a Maryland oysterman concurred.

"I guess it used to be you could take the law into your own hands," said Carl Tyler. "You can't no more."

In the past, the Chesapeake's oyster wars usually amount to little more than isolated skirmishes.

In 1876 and again in 1894, the Supreme Court became the referee — ruling both times in favor of Virginia's right to keep Marylanders out of its portion of Pocomoke Sound.

In January 1928, three companies of National Guard troops were mobilized by the governor of Virginia to put down a flareup.

But it was 100 years ago when the fighting most resembled a battle. "Hell on the half-shell," Wennersten calls that period.

Rising oyster prices attracted scores of seafood prospectors. Legitimate oystermen were shanghaied and drowned, and brazen poachers engaged outnumbered police boats in deadly howdowns.

BAY DISPUTE — A mound of oyster shells in the back of a boat docked at Saxis, Va., provides mute testimony to the seafood quarry at

Deadline For Filing Of Indian Claims Is Near

By LARRY MARGASAK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — When Arthur Duhamel lowered his nets into waters once used by his ancestors, wildlife agents told him Indians couldn't fish there without a license — and Indians weren't getting many licenses.

In 1979 a federal judge said the state of Michigan acted illegally in the more than half-century that Indians were barred from fishing in their traditional waters. Now, Duhamel wants compensation for all the years he couldn't fish in Lake Michigan's New Mission Bay.

He is one of thousands of Indians hoping a lawsuit will force the United States government to represent them in court — and soon.

The lawsuit was filed in U.S. District Court by Indian rights attorneys, who noted that if the government doesn't file suits on the Indians' behalf by Dec. 31, thousands of claims will be wiped out.

On that date, the statute of limitations set by Congress and extended several times for the Indians will run out, meaning the government would be barred from filing lawsuits on behalf of Indians who were legally wronged before July 18, 1966.

The Native American Rights Fund, which filed the suit, contends the Interior Department has no intention of beating the deadline, even though it's aware of 17,000 potential claims.

They're asking U.S. District Judge Howard Corcoran to order the department to file lawsuits on behalf of the Indians before Dec. 31.

Simultaneously, the fund and some members of Congress are pushing for passage of legislation to extend the deadline. It would have to be approved during the lame duck session to begin Nov. 29.

The pre-1966 claims are often difficult to identify, because many of the wrongs were done years ago and descendants are hard to find.

One type of claim involves denial of fishing rights. Other Indians had their land taken away illegally. Still others had money taken from estates to reimburse states for old age assistance payments. Non-Indians received similar payments without paying anything back.

The chief Indian attorney in the federal lawsuit, Anita Remerowski of the Native American Rights Fund, said, "The Indians see it as one more promise that's been breached."

Added the fund's legislative director, Suzan Harjo, "There's a perception that Indian rights are subordinate to non-Indian rights. That's not what the Constitution says. It's not what the huge body of Indian law says. It's classic cavalry thinking."

Carl Shaw of the Bureau of Indian Affairs denied that the Interior Department agency is failing to meet its responsibility.

"We still believe if the deadline is not extended we will have filed all the claims by Dec. 31," he said.

"There's no way there's 17,000 claims that we haven't looked at. My people tell me we will have identified and filed by Dec. 31 those cases we feel are legitimate. The department feels no extension is necessary."

The lawsuit contends the government hasn't even investigated many potential claims, including those of Duhamel's tribe, the Grand Traverse Band of Ottawa-Chippewa Indians in Suttons Bay, Mich.

The 58-year-old Duhamel, a former pipeline welder who now runs the fishing business he always wanted, said treaties of 1836 and 1855 gave his tribe the right to fish in ancestral waters.

"We're very simple people," he said. "We believed the treaty operated to give us the right to fish. Non-Indian fishermen were all around me. A local fishing firm came right in our waters in front of our house and we couldn't take a rowboat out and fish with a hook and line."

"We attempted to fish but were always arrested. They got paranoid. They would say I was in violation of state law. I would reply they were in violation of the Constitution of the United States."

"I had to devote so much effort to fighting these people I feel my life has been shortened 10 years. Without fish, we don't live."

The greatest number of claims, the lawsuit said, involve trespass. A county would build a road through an Indian's backyard without asking, and a utility would do the same with power lines.

Bureau of Indian Affairs guidelines would legalize many of these intrusions if they're deemed beneficial to the Indians. That doesn't satisfy Emmaline Hammond, a member of the small Chukchansi Tribe who lives in rural central California on the western slope of the Sierra Nevada.

When she was a child, her family's property had only a dirt trail to an Indian cemetery. By the late 1950s, there was a dirt road. Now there's a two-lane paved county road to serve a nearby subdivision.

Drivers speed by, dumping their garbage along the way, killing pets and endangering children. Mrs. Hammond said she learned about the road when bulldozers suddenly appeared about three years ago.

Candidate Had All She Needed

TORRINGTON, Conn. (AP) — Political candidates usually want "more, more" when it comes to campaign donations. Mary Goodhouse is saying, "enough, enough."

Ms. Goodhouse, 29, has collected about $4,100 in her quest to unseat incumbent state Rep. Joseph N. Ruwen.

But that's $600 more than the Democratic political newcomer budgeted for her campaign.

"I would rather see the money go to a local cause that I think is worthwhile," said Ms. Goodhouse, a property title searcher from Goshen and the decided underdog in the heavily Republican district.

Ms. Goodhouse advised supporters to send their checks to the Save the Warner Theater Fund, a local effort to save the vacant Warner Theater in downtown Torrington.

Ruwen expressed amusement by what he says could be the low-key campaign's best political scheme.

"I've really got to hand it to her. It was clever," he said.

Taking Part In Charity Bazaar

River Town Boasts Of Old Houses

By ED SCHAFER
Associated Press Writer
STE. GENEVIEVE, Mo. (AP) — Surrounded by an untapped treasure trove, residents of this quiet Mississippi River town wonder whether their historical riches will ever be fully uncovered.

"We have more authentic houses than they have in Williamsburg (Va.)," says Bernie Schram, president of the Foundation for Restoration of Ste. Genevieve. "All those structures were carted in from elsewhere and re-constructed."

Believed by many to be the true Gateway to the West and the oldest permanent white settlement on the west bank of the Mississippi, the town is proud of its French colonial heritage and saddened that much of it may be lost to posterity.

"Ste. Genevieve is simultaneously a preservationist's dream and nightmare," Schram says. "We have the treasure, but not the means to develop it."

With the help of the University of Missouri and the State Historical Society of Missouri, some work has recently been done that only serves to point out the town's value. More than 28,000 old documents have been studied, microfilmed and computerized, providing an unbroken record of early life in the community.

There is some debate over when the town was founded, but most experts agree that it was sometime between 1723 and 1735.

The oldest renovated house, the Bolduc House, dates back to 1770. Thick oak beam walls, mottled with mud, sit atop a stone fortress foundation nearly a yard thick. It is punctuated with gunports.

A university team surveying homes in the old part of town has found, to the surprise of many, that other original log cabins still exist under additions and siding added much later.

Charles E. Peterson of Philadelphia, a consultant in architectural history and restoration, recently toured the town that he helped "discover" 40 years ago.

"I'm gratified that so many more people are interested today than they were," Peterson said after looking at the Ribault house, a 200-year-old structure being restored by a St. Louis couple.

"That house is one of the most important architectural curiosities in the United States," he said. "It hasn't been monkeyed with. It's as close to pristine as you'll ever find."

With limited funds, some of the older Ste. Genevieve buildings have been restored, but most remain unattended.

"Some were restored as museum pieces and some have been partially modernized and are lived in," says Schram, who lives with his wife, Vion, in a house built in the late 1780s. "But there are about 40 existing structures between 150 and 200 years old still out there."

"We've at least stopped the outright destruction of the old buildings," he adds. "Now we have to find some way to save them from time."

One possibility for funding would be "angels" — private preservationists willing to restore the old homes. The problem, though, is the cost, which Schram estimates conservatively at $50,000 to $80,000.

"In my experience, angels are hard to catch," agrees Peterson. "I've known people to catch them, but it takes a lot of sweat and perseverance."

Preparing For Fair's Closing

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The state plans to set up a special office in a National Guard armory to handle many expected requests for assistance after the World's Fair closes Monday.

The closing of the exposition, which opened May 1, will leave 6,750 people without jobs. State Employment Security Commissioner Robert Bible said Monday that short-term job competition among those laid off will be sharp because many of them are unskilled.

Antibiotics for Strep Throat

My son is 12 years old. Whenever he catches cold, his tonsils become swollen. When the doctor tells me he has a strep throat I become terrified. I remembered that as a child we used to worry about rheumatic fever. Is a strep throat still as dangerous as it used to be? — Mrs. D.W., Mich.

Dear Mrs. W.:
The streptococcus germ is one of a large group of bacteria or germs. Many of these bacteria are relatively harmless. Others, especially like the streptococcus hemolyticus, are responsible for infectious diseases in man.

Prior to the time that the antibiotics were discovered, the "strep" was a virulent organism that was responsible for many troublesome conditions. Rheumatic heart disease and kidney disease were two of the distressing aftermaths of streptococcus infections. Before the antibiotic era, the methods of treatment for "strep" infections were extremely limited.

Today, with culture techniques, it is possible to accurately find the exact germ that is responsible for a particular infection.

Even before the laboratory work is reported, patients are often given a wide-spectrum antibiotic to keep the offending germ under control.

Doctors have a great deal of respect for the streptococcus as a potentially dangerous organism. Yet they no longer have the same sense of anxiety that they formerly did about this germ.

Have you tried to investigate the reasons why your boy has these repeated attacks of strep throat? Are the tonsils and adenoids a potential source of infection?

Are the nasal sinuses infected? These are two of the major sources of repeated infections. Tooth decay and gum infections may also be a cause.

The chances of complications such as rheumatic fever are slight and should not be a source of distressing concern to you. It is especially true if active treatment for these infections is undertaken immediately.

My mother had a kidney removed. It was a cancer. She is 56 years old. Can she live a normal life with one kidney? — Miss B.S.T., Iowa.

Dear Miss T.:
In normal health, both kidneys function harmoniously to rid the body of waste products. Valuable nutrients in the blood are retained. The kidney machine is a remarkable clearing house filled with tubules and sieves. The functioning of the kidney is dependent on a structure that defies the imagination in its brilliance.

When one kidney is removed, the other kidney adequately takes over all activity and compensates completely for the absence of the other. When the one remaining kidney is healthy, health and life span are in no way affected.

Rarely are there any special diets or controls for the patient with one healthy functioning kidney. Patients who have had such an operation need emotional support to eradicate the fears that may exist within them.

I am certain that with complete supervision, your mother will continue to normal life expectancy.

Plan 'Elegant' Charlotte Hotel

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A Dutch investment company has announced it will convert a 53-year-old, 10-story downtown building into Charlotte's most elegant hotel instead of office condominiums, as was originally planned.

The James Lee Motor Inn will be transformed by the summer of 1983 into the Uptown Nova Plaza Hotel with 68 rooms and suites, a 100-seat penthouse restaurant and a basement-level health spa, says Farley Gharagoziou, who is overseeing the project.

"It will be the most exclusive hotel in all the states," he said of the project by Elko, N.V. "It will be very, very European in style."

Jetliner Lost Emergency Exit

SEATTLE (AP) — A new Boeing 767 jetliner lost an emergency escape slide during a recent test take-off at Portland International Airport in Oregon, but the company says the incident was not a major problem.

The jet, carrying only its flight crew, was practicing "touch-and-goes" — landings followed immediately by take-offs — on Wednesday when it lost the inflatable slide. Boeing Commercial Airplane Co. spokesman Jim Boynton said the jet sustained only a few scuffs.

'Family Farm' Goes On The Ballot In Nebraska

By ED HOWARD
Associated Press Writer
LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Nebraska is a place where the words "family farm" stand right alongside "amber waves of grain" when it comes to touching the hearts of the citizens.

In what is officially the "Cornhusker State," residents will vote Nov. 2 on a constitutional amendment which proponents say would help preserve the family farm by limiting future acquisition and operation of farms and ranches by non-family corporations.

"To suggest that someone is against the family farm is like suggesting they don't love the flag," said state Sen. John DeCamp, who opposes Initiative 300 — the Family Farm Preservation Act.

"The problem is that love of the flag or the family farm doesn't necessarily mean you know what is best for either one," he said.

Neil Oxton, head of the Nebraska Farmers Union which led the effort to place the amendment on the ballot, said its provisions are needed to keep corporate operations from "gobbling up" agricultural land and, with it, the traditional family farm operation.

Oxton acknowledges that critics, including some lawyers, contend the amendment contains vague definitions and potential loopholes that could guarantee years of legal tests if it were adopted.

"If there are problems, they can be addressed in due course," Oxton said during the initiative campaign. "We have attorneys who don't think there will be constitutional problems."

DeCamp, who faces a tough re-election bid in his rural district, said Oxton and other supporters "are missing the point entirely."

"There are questions about when and how and who could inherit agricultural land, under what circumstances, questions about the impossibility of enforcement..."

"The problems farmers face are low commodity prices, high interest rates and high production costs and those things won't be altered one bit by our telling Prudential (Insurance Co.) or someone else they can't own farm land — all we will do is dry up capital, and drive down land prices by limiting the number of people who can participate in agriculture," DeCamp said.

Oxton has acknowledged that large corporations hold only a small part of Nebraska's farmland, but that the amendment looks to the future.

"Corporations have no soul, they're just a beast of the state," Oxton said in a recent interview. "They don't owe anybody anything."

In June, Farmers Union spokesman Drey Samuelson said large corporate farm operations "don't need rural America because they don't need local banks, local implement dealers, local anything... they make their money and they export it to wherever they think it will do them the most good... they want the land but they don't much need the people."

The 1978 federal census of agriculture, the latest figures available, showed non-family corporations owned or rented about 238,000 of the 46.3 million acres of Nebraska farmland.

Family-owned corporations, which presumably are protected by the amendment, owned or operated more than 5.89 million acres.

A majority of the people queried by two statewide newspaper polls favor the amendment. It has also won wide bipartisan support, including endorsements from Republican Gov. Charles Thone and his opponent in next month's election, Democrat Bob Kerrey.

Eight farm states in the central United States — Iowa, Kansas, Minnesota, Missouri, North Dakota, South Dakota, Oklahoma and Wisconsin — regulate corporate land purchases for agricultural use through statutes, but not through constitutional amendment.

Oxton and other amendment supporters said the "No On Initiative 300 Committee" wouldn't have been organized to fight the amendment if corporations didn't fear it.

The committee has said it might spend up to $500,000 to defeat the amendment.

Its membership includes insurance companies, financial institutions, some farm and ranch owners and others.

Glen LeDioy, head of a farm and ranch management company, chairs the anti-amendment committee.

In an interview last month, he said the amendment would "help concentrate farm land in the hands of larger landowners. As land comes up for sale, larger family farm corporations would acquire it."

"That would make it difficult for younger people to get into farming and for smaller tenant farmers to expand their operations by leasing additional land," he said.

"People identify with those words 'family farm' because something in it makes you think about the history books, the independent spirit," he said.

Most GIs In Germany Live In Relative Isolation

By SUSAN J. SMITH
Associated Press Writer
HEIDELBERG, West Germany (AP) — The bowling alley in Patrick Henry Village is in the heart of Germany, but it looks and sounds more like Tennessee or Texas — what with young Americans munching on hot dogs bought with U.S. dollars, leaning on a bar where a sign proclaims, "We Sell American Beer."

It is a U.S. Army village, complete with a theater, chapel, schools, stores and a restaurant; it is so well-equipped with the necessities and comforts of home that soldiers hardly need venture elsewhere.

Many soldiers don't — the U.S. Army has been in West Germany for nearly four decades, but in many ways it behaves like an uneasy newcomer, living in isolation from the country it is helping to protect.

"There are people in Patrick Henry Village who never leave. They have never been down to the Hauptstrasse (Heidelberg's main street)," said Molly Markwick, who formerly lived in the village with her husband, an Army sergeant.

"We have structured our organization is such a way that if you want to avoid ever speaking to a German, you can," says Maj. Robert J.
Schneider, head of the Army's medical research team in Europe. "I'll bet the number of American families with German friends is under 20 percent, maybe under 10 percent."

Schneider says this isolation is a major cause of stress among GIs, and that to overcome it, the soldiers need to learn German.

Most GIs finish their tour of duty — 18 months to 3 years — without learning to say more than the few German phrases they need to get a beer, order a meal or find a public toilet.

So many soldiers say they feel uneasy off the American bases that are home to three-quarters of the U.S. soldiers and their families in Germany. They become what are referred to as "the barracks rats."

Soldiers may take tours or meet Germans through Army community offices, but Doris Scott, a public affairs officer at Mannheim, says she gets more Germans asking to meet Americans than the other way around.

"On the whole, most Americans don't like or aren't comfortable in Germany," said Spec. 5 Bob Sanders of Chicago, who is stationed in Heidelberg. "I think that problem would be erased if everyone knew the language."

Money is a factor in the soldiers' isolation. In the 1960s, the U.S. dollar bought four German marks. It now buys 2.50 marks, a constraint on low-paid lower ranks when they think about going out for a German meal.

In the past two years, many U.S. soldiers and their families have been upset by the anti-militarism and anti-Americanism of some German youth and by terrorist attacks on Army installations and Europe Commander-in-Chief Gen. Frederick Kroesen. Just this week, terrorists used gasoline and bombs to torch vehicles belonging to U.S. servicemen in Frankfurt.

"I've had young Germans spit on my shoes, swear at me in English and say, "You GI, you don't belong here, go back to America," said Spec.
5 Don Waters of Hyannis, Mass. "I'm going back, too, in 28 days, and I can't wait."

American GIs also face discrimination in Germany — some landlords won't rent them apartments and some German drinking establishments exclude soldiers.

In Giessen, a city of 78,000 in central Germany that is host to 5,000 American soldiers, the Envogue — a swanky disco — bars GIs unless they have dates.

"Soldiers are too aggressive," says Michael Rosenberg, manager of Envogue. "They are too loud.
And they are dumb."

Schneider says the isolation adds to stress suffered by GIs, most of whom have been separated from families and friends for the first time in their young lives.

In extreme cases, apparent stress has led to crazed actions.

In July, a 20-year-old private drowned in an M-60 tank after stealing the vehicle from his base and driving it on a rampage through Mannheim. The tank crushed at least 14 cars and injured four people before the GI drove it off a bridge into a river.

No one knows why the rampage occurred. But many soldiers did not seem surprised.

"I felt like doing it a million times," said one former GI who did not want to be identified.

Soviet Recruiting Women To Fill Manpower Gap

By DAVID MINTHORN
Associated Press Writer
MOSCOW (AP) — When newlywed Lyuda Burkovskaya complained about her husband's late hours, he responded with a challenge: "Look, join the service and you'll see for yourself how soldiers are delayed."

And when he was assigned to a remote garrison, she did just that.

"Of course, I thought he was joking. But when he was transferred, I obeyed him," Pvt. Burkovskaya told the Communist Party daily Pravda.

The young telephone switchboard operator is among a growing number of Soviet women who are signing up for active duty in the Red Army. Recent favorable references in the state-run media to Soviet women in uniform suggests a low-key recruitment drive is under way.

Western analysts say the Soviet government needs more female soldiers because the low birthrate in the European part of the country has diminished the pool of draft-age males. That pool is expected to dip below 2 million in 1985, down from a high of 2.6 million in 1978, analysts said.

At least 10,000 women are on active duty, the analysts report, but many more will be needed in coming years to maintain Soviet armed forces strength at 5.8 million troops.

About one million Soviet women served in the armed forces during World War II, and thousands won decorations. But active duty for women declined to low figures in the postwar years, when the number of 18-year-old males drafted for two- or three-year stints met manpower requirements.

Under the 1967 military law, women aged 19 to 30 can volunteer for stints of two, four or six years, and can serve until age 50. Most serve in medical and communications jobs or as teachers in military academies.

Krasnaya Zvezda, the armed forces daily, last month carried a picture of a Soviet woman wearing a fashionably cut private's uniform. Soviet sources said the picture was highly unusual, since women are seldom shown in olive drab.

Ogonyok, a popular monthly illustrated magazine, recently carried the reminiscences of women who served in the Soviet navy during World War II. "Since then friendship binds us like in our girlhood and warms us," one of the veterans said.

The Soviet media have repeatedly attacked the use of women soldiers in the United States, West Germany, Japan and Israel.

"Japanese militarists pin much hope on the large-scale recruitment of women for the self-defense forces," the Soviet weekly New Times charged earlier this year. "The method is not original. It has been borrowed from the United States, where no effort is stunted to get young American women to join the armed forces."

The Pravda article last summer, headlined "Shoulder to Shoulder with Men," was one of the most detailed accounts in recent years of Soviet women in the military.

Mrs. Burkovskaya and the other enlisted women in her communications unit don't regret their decision to join, Pravda said. They live in "cozy dormitories," eat at officers' clubs, attend college classes at night and can resign if they become pregnant.

However, the women have had to learn to accept discipline, and their duties can be strenuous, including working all night outdoors during bad weather.

"Still, some women aren't ready to say goodbye to army life even at age 30 or 40," Pravda said.

The article provided no figures on the number of women in uniform. All information on manpower is regarded as a state secret. However, there were several clear hints that the number of female soldiers is increasing.

"Ten years ago when I went with my girlfriends to a nearby city, crowds gathered at a bus stop and asked if we were dressed up for a movie," Senior Sgt. Vera Zagorunko was quoted as saying.

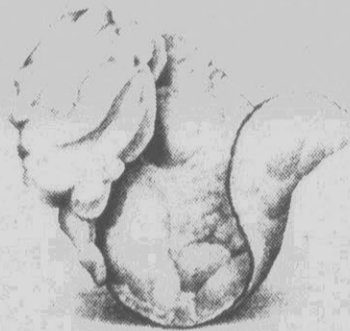

PARAMILITARY WOMEN — Soviet women, members of a paramilitary parachute club sponsored by the Soviet army, are shown in front of their aircraft near the city of Baku. An estimated 10,000 Soviet women are on active duty with the armed forces. (AP Laserphoto)

HOW TO DIP INTO FRESH INGREDIENTS,

SMOTHERED IN FRESH SOUR CREAM,

WITHOUT LEAVING YOUR CHIP IN THE DIP

Here's how new BREAKSTONE'S Gourmet Dips end up with a taste that's easy to love and a texture that's easy to dip. We start with real, creamy, fresh, natural sour cream. Next we add special ingredients that make each of our five new dips so special. Mounds of mushrooms and green herbs, or toasted onion bits, or crunchy bacon and onion, or a spicy blend of Jalapeno pepper and natural Cheddar cheese, or for sea-food lovers, real Chesapeake Clams (and lots of them).

Then each is blended to be smooth and creamy, not too thick—not too thin.

Alternate Sentence: Judge Suggests Giving Blood

By PAULA DITTRICK
United Press International

Overcrowded prisons and bulging court dockets are prompting judges to forego jail stints for convicted criminals and come up with some unusual sentences ranging from blood donations to visits to victims' homes.

Criminal justice officials across the country report many states are turning to alternative sentencing, although some judges shun the concept, saying the public wants criminals behind bars.

"The punishment system has been a failure," said County Judge Dennis Challeen of Winona, Minn. "Jailing is a recent thing. It started in 1790 in Philadelphia. It's an American invention that failed."

Many judges apparently agree. Paul Armstrong of Rapid City, S.D., recently pleaded guilty to aggravated assault and was ordered to make periodic donations to a local blood bank as part of his probation.

A Pennsylvania man who pleaded guilty in Mercer County to theft and forgery from youth baseball and football groups must educate youth groups on the wrongfulness of his crimes as part of his probation.

Courts in North Carolina's Wake County allow first-time offenders charged with a misdemeanor to keep their records clean by performing public service work in exchange for dismissal of charges. Richard Gusler, executive director of the non-profit operation known as Re-Entry Inc., said the program should be statewide.

As part of the program, some housebreakers have returned to their crime scenes and met their victims. Gusler said the confrontation dispels a victim's notion a thug broke into the house and helps a housebreaker realize the emotional impact the victim experienced.

Challeen, an author and lecturer on alternative sentencing, said punishment makes criminals useless to society as taxpayers feed, clothe and house them. But he said restitution makes people responsible.

"The problem with society is that our conservatives want to kick people's butts until they behave and the liberals want to kiss their butts until they behave, and neither one works because they're both trying to take over the problem of responsibility," Challeen said.

"The solution is that the losers have got to make themselves responsible."

William Tyson, director of the executive office of United States Attorneys in Washington, D.C., disagrees. He said the Reagan administration was committed to a "get tough again" approach.

Tyson said federal judges have received too much discretion in handing down sentences, which have sometimes become too open-ended. For instance, corporations involved in some federal suits have been ordered to make donations to specific charities in lieu of paying fines.

"We have some problems with that. Essentially the money going to charity could well be put into the U.S. Treasury," Tyson said, calling alternative sentencing a tool promoted by defense attorneys.

Government appeals are pending on several sentences Nebraska construction contractors received in federal court for fixing bids on state road projects.

U.S. District Judge Warren K. Urbom of Lincoln, Neb., has ordered companies and their officers to make payments of as much as $100,000 to specific charities. Urbom also sentenced construction executives to jail terms of 10 to 20 days.

Urbom said the sentences repay the public, deter crime and rehabilitate the people involved. Prosecutors argue Urbom lacked authority to order payments to charities, which weren't harmed by the bid-rigging schemes.

Alternative sentencing hasn't been used widely in the South. Alabama officials said their state law doesn't encourage it, and Missouri judges rarely impose community service work, even though they are authorized to do so.

Terry Brummer, administrator for the Missouri Public Defender System, said the main problem is the question of liability if someone on a community service order were hurt or injured someone else and damaged property.

Circuit Judge Sam Taylor of Montgomery, Ala., said judges reflect the community's mood about alternative sentences.

"We tend to mirror the opinion of the people who elect us," Taylor said. "If they want these folks to serve time, that's what we do." He said the public seemed "very cynical and they want them (defendants) to pay the price."

Although alternative sentences theoretically reduce jail space for violent felons, some New York City prosecutors believe repeat misdemeanor offenders should serve time behind bars.

Manhattan District Attorney spokesperson Mary Debourbin said her office opposed a community service sentence for a 27-year-old man who pleaded guilty to shoplifting more than $200 of jackets.

Ms. Debourbin said the man's previous record included 36 arrests and 24 convictions on misdemeanor charges. He has been arrested on similar charges three times since performing the community service work.

"This was the kind of person we felt should do some jail time because of his prior record," she said. "Alternative sentencing can be appropriate, but it very much depends on the nature of the crime and the defendant's prior record."

Meanwhile, Dayton, Ohio, court officials report good results and little recidivism from offenders completing "The Monday Program," which includes participants with long misdemeanor records and felony convictions.

People deemed eligible for the program undergo a 30-day indoctrination session and counseling, including a study of their criminal record and family history. Each resident pays room and board.

"I want to emphasize that this is a lockup," said Judge Kramer, now Dayton Court Administrator and former Monday director. "We have a fence around the facility and whatever privileges are granted must be earned."

Only 20 percent of the Monday graduates have been convicted of a crime since the program started in 1978. Ohio officials said the recidivism rate from state prisons was about 50 percent.

One felony has been committed by a resident while in the program. Ms. Kramer said that was the only escape attempt out of more than 20,000 trips participants have made into the community.

"It's a low-key atmosphere that reduces tension," she said. "We feel we've been successful because we have been able to help these people assimilate into the community after learning job skills and responsibility."

On his trips across the country to help local governments establish alternative sentencing, Challeen says, he has found that workable community service programs are complicated. He blames failures on lack of planning by court officials.

"There are only two countries in the world, Russia and the Union of South Africa, that put people away for longer periods of time than the United States does," he said.

Challeen said restitution sentences save taxpayers money and make people responsible to the victims.

"It puts something back into society rather than taking from society," he said.

Feet-First Safety Bicycle Is Also An Easy Chair With Wheels

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (UPI) — It somewhat resembles an easy chair with wheels and handlebars. Those who ride it say that's not an inaccurate comparison.

The recumbent bicycle looks like some weird contraption a scientist with a better idea might have invented under cloak of darkness and pain of ridicule.

That's only a partial exaggeration.

David G. Wilson, a mechanical engineering professor at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, had two main reasons for developing a prototype of a vehicle that's historically met with a rough reception from bike purists.

"I was reading about people having serious accidents — people going over handlebars on conventional racers, and I thought it might be nice if people went feet first instead," said Wilson, a trim 54-year-old with a Cary Grant lilt in his voice. "It's like sitting in an easy chair," Wilson says of his custom model, fitted with a bright orange flag to make it visible to motorists.

A fitness buff, Wilson rides his recumbent through the traffic-snarled streets of Cambridge daily and believes man has become too dependent on cars and not reliant enough on his muscles.

But those who disdain the 21-gear recumbent say it's sluggish up hill and unsafe in traffic because it's too low.

Wilson coolly pooh-poohs those notions.

"I use the bike primarily for commuting — not racing, so I really don't care how long it takes to climb a hill," Wilson said, acknowledging the 27-pound recumbent's inability to climb as swiftly as lighter conventional models.

The recumbent may well be snail-like on the climb, but according to one user, conventional bikes are no match for it once over the hump.

Otto Breski Jr., a 59-year-old flour mill executive with a bad back, says his recumbent, which is similar to Wilson's, "zooms past the (conventional) racers on the downhill."

Breski has suffered from fused vertebrae since World War II and riding in the traditional slumped position on a regular racer was painful.

"After about three-quarters of an hour, I started feeling pain," Breski says of his pre-recumbent days. After seeing Wilson's machine last year at the 180-mile Pan Massachusetts race from Old Sturbridge Village to Provincetown, Breski "got excited."

"When I tried it, I felt superb and I get 100 to 125 miles a week out of it now. It's been a Godsend," beams Breski.

There also are reports of persons with knee injuries and even apparently decrepit elderly persons using a recumbent with ease.

To Breski, the psychological change of not having his hands in front of him for protection was the toughest thing to get used to. The recumbent's handlebars are just below the seat; a rider's hands are by his sides.

One of his reservations — though quickly overcome — was the price of Wilson's Avatar 2000 model. Since there is no mass production, the bike is handmade for a pricetag of $2,100.

"When I saw the price, I said 'I'll definitely try it before I buy it,'" Breski said.

Wilson realizes the price of his machine doesn't exactly make it the vehicle of the proletariat, but that soon may change.

The Avatar, one of three similarly designed recumbents on the market, is manufactured in Wilmington, Mass. — about 15 miles north of Boston — by two former bicycle store owners, now working to get the bike mass produced.

"The objective is to sell the technology to a mass producer," said Harold Maciejewski, president of Fomac, Inc., Avatar manufacturers. Maciejewski and his partner, Richard J. Forrestal, have hand made and sold about 130 of the bikes over the past two years.

"We have no contract arrangement but we have some nibblers. The general state of the economy is hurting us because some of the people we're talking to don't want to spend the money," Maciejewski said.

He figures the mass produced version of the Avatar should run between $250 and $400 and said it should sell well because "the timing is right. Biking is very popular and people are conscious of (saving) energy."

According to the makers of another recumbent — the five-speed Hypercycle — lower prices are a better idea. The third model is the Easy Racer, made in Watsonville, Calif.

The Los Angeles-based Ava Corp., distributors of the Hypercycle, sell their model for $390 and has sold more than 2,000 in the last 18 months. Ava also sells an assembly kit for $179.

"Ours has a 20-inch wheel base for sharp cornering and it's immediately available," said Frances Snyder, Ava general manager.

She said her company is not competing with Fomac and admits "our quality is not as good cosmetically (as the Avatar.)" "We try to keep ours affordable. We have all standard parts that are interchangeable and the frame is mass produced in Taiwan. But I'm not knocking the Avatar," Ms. Snyder said.

Fantasy Islands Abound, If One Just Has Cash

By JAMES V. HEALION
GREENWICH, Conn.
(UPI) — Bruce Wennerstrom is selling dream houses and paradise islands.

His 300 available properties range from private islands to palatial villas with price tags of up to $63 million. One house includes a 20-car garage. Another has a wraparound vista he says contains "the world's most fabulous views."

The house with the garages is owned by John Bond of Escondido, Calif., retired publisher of Road and Track magazine. The garage is climate-controlled so Bond's collection of cars remains in mint condition. The first $1.4 million takes it.

Wennerstrom says the house with the view isn't as remote as it looks even if it is on Tahiti. Downtown Papeete is just five minutes from a jet airport that connects the South Seas with Los Angeles, Hawaii, New Zealand and South America.

If you prefer something on the Casablanca side of exotica, Wennerstrom offers "Bled Targui," a Moroccan villa with a walled garden in Marrakech owned by an Austrian baron. Start talking at $1.5 million.

Perhaps a house designed by professionals at the foot of Pike's Peak near Colorado Springs, Colo., might be more to your liking. It consists of two joined pyramids. Each is 26 square feet with ceilings sloping upward at a 52 degree angle. Price: $198,000.

Or maybe what's said to be one of the finest estates in the "Valley of the Moon," the wine country around Sonoma, Calif., which is going for $1.35 million, would be your preference. The land includes 2,680 Chardonnay vines.

For Civil War aficionados and physical fitness buffs, Wennerstrom offers a 20,000-square foot home of native stone and glass atop the famed Civil War site of Missionary Ridge in Chattanooga, Tenn. It has a gymnasium. Price: $2.5 million.

For those who really want to get away from it all, Wennerstrom's company specializes in islands. Twenty-eight-acre Sunset Point in Fiji might be worth considering: no cars, no stores, no telephones.

Maybe "Mary's Fancy" at St. Maarten in the Netherlands Antilles might strike yours. A local legend says one of the early settlers, Mary Van Ramondt, was given her choice of any piece of land on the island.

She chose a five-acre site just because she fancied it. The legend doesn't say what Mary did to be the beneficiary of such largesse. The acreage she selected 250 years ago is selling today for $1.5 million.

There's an 11-room Victorian lodge and 2,663 acres for sale in New York's Adirondacks. Cost: $990,000. Even at that price, it's only partially furnished and equipped.

Wennerstrom's company puts out an annual catalogue, "Previews, Guide to the World's Fine Real Estate," to help market the properties. It is heavy on color photography, runs to 320 pages, and costs $15. "It's the ultimate dream book for everyone to enjoy," Wennerstrom says.

He said the catalogue is a natural because he has never run across anybody who didn't enjoy sneaking a peek at a beautiful home.

His book covers anything from an Andalusian horse farm, to houses on tea, coffee, coconut or copra plantations — or a 13-room Georgian colonial in Gardner, Mass., which at $95,000 is the lowest priced property in the catalogue. Highest priced property is 2,138 acres at Hilo, Hawaii, at $63 million.

Wennerstrom is the president of "Previews Inc.," a Greenwich-based real estate corporation that has been negotiating "big ticket" deals in residential real estate around the world since 1935.

"Up until the spring of this year we were not impacted by the economy," he said. "The mainstream was badly impacted. But in the top end of the market it's only in recent months that there has been a slowdown."

"If somebody buys a luxury home they're buying it for the pleasure but also as a good investment and with leveling off of real estate prices there's more of a wait-and-see attitude," he said.

You may like "the magical Hawaiian residence of Clare Boothe Luce." A private beach and a view of Diamond Head are included in the $4.5 million price.

Or maybe the 10-room white brick and glass waterfront contemporary of another former member of Congress, Sen. George McGovern, the South Dakota Democrat. It has a wide view of Chesapeake Bay and is 50 miles from Washington. Price: $585,000.

Miami Dolphin Superstar Bob Kuechenberg lives in a 21-room Mediterranean mansion on Key Biscayne.

Originally, it was the Miami Beach Yacht Club. Previews calls it "a marvel of elegance," and has it listed for $2.9 million.

If you own a yacht that's more than 140 feet long and plan to visit Kuechenberg, prepare to have the bo'sun lower the launch. The limit for his docking facilities is 140 feet.

Syrian Arsenal Said Stronger

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union has rebuilt Syria's ground and air arsenal to a point where it is bigger and better than before Syrian losses in battle with Israel last summer, U.S. intelligence analysts have concluded.

However, the analysts say the Syrian buildup isn't a significant threat to what they term Israel's "military dominance" in the area.

An intelligence report says the Soviets have completed replacement of Syrian losses in tanks, planes, artillery, surface-to-air missiles and other weapons and equipment.

Soviet cargo ships have delivered about 35,000 tons of military gear to Syrian ports since early June and additional tonnage aboard at least eight heavy transport planes, the sources, who asked to remain anonymous, said Monday.

"Overall, the quantity and quality of Syria's arms inventory has increased over prewar levels," said the intelligence report. It gave no specifics.

U.S. military officers stressed that it will take more than new equipment to restore Syria's battered forces to combat effectiveness.

"The Syrians lost trained pilots and tank crews," noted one Pentagon specialist. "It's going to take some time to train their replacements."

According to intelligence analysts, the Soviets have poured billions of dollars worth of military equipment into Syria after previous defeats at the hands of the Israelis, notably in the 1973 Yom Kippur War.

Syria has received some of the most advanced weapons exported by the Soviet Union, including T-72 tanks, MiG-23 jet fighters and SU-22 ground attack planes.

The Soviets also have assigned a large number of advisers to Soviet forces over the years. An Israeli defense ministry report in August claimed there were 2,580 Soviet and East European military advisers in Syria, a larger number than in any other Middle Eastern or African nation.

U.S. military officers tend to credit American-made weapons, such as F-15 and F-16 fighter planes, for much of Israel's success against the Syrians and other Arab countries in past wars.

Gen. Charles A. Gabriel, Air Force chief of staff, emphasized this in a speech in San Bernardino, Calif.

Lowe's Pricing Policy

Many items in this tabloid carry a reference retail price. The reference is intended to provide a guide to the range of retail selling prices in our area and may be useful in identifying different units of the same manufacturer. An item's reference retail price is either the manufacturer's suggested retail price or our determination of its full retail price based on prices at which it or similar merchandise is offered by principal retailers (department stores, specialty shops and other non-discount sellers) in our selling area. While we believe our reference retails do not appreciably exceed the highest retail prices at which sales are made in our selling area, we cannot assure you that our reference retail prices, as described above, represent the prices in every community on any given day. Some items in this advertisement are listed at "regular" selling prices. The merchandise is offered at this price except during a special sale. The purpose of showing a reference retail price (or a regular price) is to assist you, our customer, in making a knowledgeable and better informed buying decision. We suggest that you also do comparative shopping and compare our prices. (Prices in this tabloid do not include delivery charges. Ask us about delivery rates.)

Lowe's Raincheck Policy: If we sell out of an advertised item, we'll issue you a raincheck. When we restock, you'll be notified so you can buy at the previously advertised price (except for products marked "Limited Quantities"). Our smaller stores may not stock all advertised items. But every item shown here can be ordered for you.
