Polling Sites Open 6:30 a.m. Tuesday

By TOM BAINES

Greenville and Pitt County voters will receive six ballots when they visit the polls Tuesday to participate in statewide general election balloting.

All polling sites will open for business at 6:30 a.m. and remain open until 7:30 p.m.

Curbside voting, for people who can get to the polls but are physically unable to go inside, is allowed between the hours of 7 a.m. and 6 p.m. Margaret Register, Pitt Board of Elections supervisor, said a precinct official at the polling site will provide the curbside service.

All area voters will receive a ballot for Congress in the 1st District, pitting incumbent U.S. Rep. Walter Jones, a Democrat, against Republican challenger James F. (Jim) McIntyre III of Greenville and Libertarian candidate Bobby Yates Emory.

Voters will also cast a ballot for candidates for district attorney, state Senate, state House of Representatives, and county offices. Unopposed in their election bids are Democrats Thomas D. Haigwood, for district attorney; Sam D. Bundy and Edward N. (Ed) Warren, for state House; Sandra E. Gaskins, for clerk of Superior Court; Ralph L. Tyson, for sheriff; and R. Kelly Barnhill and Burney L. Tucker, for county commissioner. Charles McLawhorn has Republican opposition for the 5th District seat on the Board of County Commissioners from W. Bruce Jones Jr. of Route 2, Ayden.

Incumbent state Sen. Vernon White of Winterville will be opposed by Sallie C. Keel, a Republican, in the race for the 9th Senatorial District seat.

Voters residing in the Bethel and Carolina precincts will receive a ballot containing the name of John B. Gillam III of Windsor, who is unopposed for the 6th House District seat in the Legislature. Since Bethel and Carolina precincts are now in the new 6th District, voters there will not have Bundy and Warren on their ballots. All other names on the ballot are the same for Bethel and Carolina voters.

The third ballot that will be handed to area voters will contain the names of Robert G. Little and Ralph C. Tucker, who are incumbent non-partisan candidates for two seats on the five-member Pitt Soil and Water Conservation District Board of Supervisors.

A ballot for state officers of the general court of justice, including chief and associate justices of the Supreme Court and Court of Appeals judgeships, will be distributed to all voters. Of the Democratic candidates for Court of Appeals, only Sidney S. Eagles Jr. has opposition, facing Republican Betty J. Pearce.

A lengthy ballot containing the names of unopposed Democratic candidates for Superior Court judgeships will also be marked by voters Tuesday. Among the candidates, Herbert O. Phillips of Morehead City is seeking a 3rd Judicial District judgeship. Pitt County is in the Third District.

Voters will be asked to make a decision on two

Polls Moved

Voters residing in the Greenville 10 and Belvoir precincts will visit new polling sites Tuesday, according to Margaret Register, Pitt Board of Elections supervisor.

Miss Register said that Greenville 10 has been relocated from Aycock Junior High School to Oakmont Baptist Church on the south side of Red Banks Road.

The Belvoir voting site, she said, has been moved from the primary school to the new Belvoir fire station, located on Highway 33 approximately 500 yards north of the intersection.

The elections official said notices of the polling site relocations were mailed to each voter in Greenville 10 and Belvoir precincts.

Miss Register said the relocations, which were approved by the elections board in August, have also received the necessary endorsement by the Justice Department. She said that precinct changes fall under the Civil Rights Act of 1965 and require Justice Department approval.

Midterm Electioneering Campaign Winding Down

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
 AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 1982 midterm campaign is closing with an echo of familiar themes and a widespread expectation that Democrats will pick up seats in Congress but probably fall short of what they need to claim a public repudiation of President Reagan's economic policies.

In the final day before voters decide, Republican and Democratic campaigners are flooding the airwaves with political ads and gearing up plans for getting their partners to the polls on Tuesday.

The economy and Social Security remained the issues that turned up in all sections of the nation, but it also was clear many races would hinge on local issues and on the personalities of the candidates.

Another issue to be dealt with on its own as a statewide referendum question in nine states was the nuclear freeze. Leaders of organizations on both sides of that debate were predicting victory for the non-binding proposals which call for a U.S.-Soviet freeze on production, deployment and development of nuclear weapons.

The final days of campaigning saw many races tighten and Democrats began to talk about a remote chance of picking up the five Senate seats that would restore the majority they lost in the 1980 Republican landslide.

Reagan, meanwhile, was on national television in a commercial accusing the Democrats of "playing on people's fears" by suggesting that Republicans would support cuts in Social Security.

"As long as I am president, we will protect the solvency of Social Security," Reagan said. "And we will protect the benefits of those who depend on it."

Reagan also injected the school prayer issue into the election-eve debate. He said the "big spenders" — the Republican buzzword for Democrats — "even drove prayer out of our nation's classrooms."

The president did not mention in the commercial, broadcast on major TV networks and in 60 cities across the country, that the Supreme Court has ruled consistently for the past 20 years that organized school prayer violates the constitutional separation of church and state.

At a news conference Sunday, Democratic Party chairman Charles T. Manatt said possible cuts in Social Security were part of "the hidden agenda" the Republicans have in mind for after the election.

"I challenge President Reagan to make a specific commitment not to cut Social Security benefits for any American currently on Social Security or those millions

Drawings Given

The Pitt County Historical Society this morning presented the Board of County Commissioners with original pen and ink drawings of the five county court houses since 1761.

The drawings, by Roger Kammerer, appear in the historical society's recently published history of Pitt County.

In addition to the drawings, which will be hung in the court house, the historical group presented commissioners with a copy of the publication and presented the county manager's office with a pen and ink drawing of the county office building.

In other business this morning, commissioners gave their approval to the installation of a new septic tank at the county animal shelter at a cost of about $900.

Athlete Shot; Said Accident

An East Carolina University football player who was accidentally shot in the abdomen by another player Sunday night was listed in guarded condition this morning at the Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Steve Sellers, a walk-on from Laurinburg, was reportedly shot by ECU starting defensive end Jeff Pegues around 9:50 last night at Belk Residence Hall while "horsing around," an ECU official said.

Sellers was taken to PCMH and was operated on for between two and a half and three hours last night following the shooting.

This morning Sellers remained in the critical care unit but was sitting up in a chair and a hospital official said that "barring anything unforeseen" Sellers would be taken from the unit tomorrow.

Pegues has been charged by campus police with illegal possession of a firearm on campus and was released on an unsecured bond.

It was not readily known what type weapon nor whose weapon it was.

Under North Carolina law dorm residents are not permitted to possess any type of firearm, firecracker or other weapons.

Pegues and Sellers both attended Scotland County High School. Sellers went to Fayetteville State for two years before transferring to ECU this past season. Sellers, a 5-10, 185-pound defensive back, was being red-shirted this year.

Pegues is a 6-2, 230-pound junior and is one of the Pirates' top defensive players.

The incident occurred at just before 10 p.m. last night. A

A weekend outing to Busch Gardens for 39 students ended in near tragedy Sunday night when an activity bus from Greene Central High School was struck head-on by a car near Greenville about 8:20 p.m.

Trooper Coy Taylor said a car driven by Turner James Thompson, Jr., of Route 1, Grimesland, was headed east on U.S. 264 about eight miles west of Greenville when it apparently crossed the center line and struck the westbound bus.

Taylor identified the driver of the bus as Lisa Carmon Ginn, of Route 4, Snow Hill, a student, who received slight injuries. The investigator said only one other student on the bus was slightly injured and transported to Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Thompson was trapped in the car for about 45 minutes while rescuers using specialized rescue equipment pried him from the wreckage. Thompson was reportedly seriously injured in the accident. A passenger identified as Dwight Avant, of Grimesland, was thrown from the car by the force of the impact and was also injured.

Taylor said the bus skidded about 190 feet after the collision which caused about $3,000 damage. The front wheels of the bus were completely severed from the vehicle during the wreck. Students were changed to another bus and carried the remainder of the trip to the high school.

Barbara Britt, teacher, traveling with the students said, "It was a nice trip, and we got only 22 miles from home and this had to happen."

Taylor said charges were pending while investigation is continuing. Taylor noted the Thompson car was a total loss.

Rescue units from Winterville and Greenville responded to the call and were assisted by a fire unit from Bell Arthur.

It's A Tossup

Throwing things at weddings is an ancient custom. Traditionally, the items thrown at the happy couple following the ceremony were considered symbolic of fertility.

Ancient Hebrews threw bits of cake, rural Britons tossed biscuits. The old Greeks threw grain and fruit, while the Romans favored nuts. The Victorians threw shoes, favoring satin slippers. Rice became the popular toss in the 1870's; more recently, Bird seed, confetti, and rose petals have become common alternatives.

Shoes have long been a part of weddings. Early German brides used to throw their shoes the way modern brides toss their bouquets. Shoes as a marriage symbol are mentioned in the Bible.

In medieval Anglo-Saxon wedding ceremonies, the father of the bride would hand one of her shoes to the groom, signifying the transfer of authority from father to husband. Then, in a tradition which, thankfully, no longer endures, the groom would hit the bride over the head with the shoe to establish his mastery.

just to brighten your day with the knowledge that we are not all such miserable wretches.

At the age of 17, I enlisted in the U.S. Army's Special Forces and received an awesome collection of combat decorations for my work against the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese army.

A week after my discharge, just before my 21st birthday, I founded my own company. It became hugely successful and allows me to spend my summers in Europe, while my hirelings look after my growing interests.

Most people who meet me find me ruggedly handsome and incredibly manly. I have more girlfriends than I can handle, and I've slept with the wives of most of my acquaintances. They all tell me I am the best lover they've ever had.

I have more money than I will ever need, and I enjoy the universal respect of my colleagues in a highly competitive industry.

In short, I am what everybody would like to be: successful, wealthy, influential and admired. And most important...

ADORED IN CHICAGO

DEAR ADORED: I congratulate you on your outstanding service record on behalf of your country. And if the rest of your letter is to be believed, you also rate high marks for your performance in both business and bedroom. You may be "ruggedly handsome," but manly? No way! One who boasts that he has slept with the wives of most of his acquaintances is not a man. He's a boy. And at your age, that is not what every man would like to be!

DEAR ABBY: May I comment regarding "Heartbroken Father," who gave his spoiled 19-year-old daughter everything and received nothing in return?

As an attorney, I've seen a lot of people in a lot of situations, and I am convinced that parents should give their children what they need but make them earn what they want.

I recently drafted a will for a woman whose son told her, "You can't take that trip. Don't spend my money!"

He may not realize it, but it's not his money until his mother dies. And when she does, he will learn that "his" money has been left to a children's hospital where it will do far more good than it ever would in his hands.

Baby Blue Will Be The 'III'

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My son-in-law is "John Q. Blue Jr." His wife (my daughter) is having a baby soon. It will be our first grandchild. She says if it is a boy, they will name him "John Q. Blue III."

Since the baby's father is "John Q. Blue Jr.," won't the baby be "John Q. Blue II"?

We have a big bet on this. What I want to know is this: If they go from "John Q. Blue Jr." to "John Q. Blue III," what in the world happened to "John Q. Blue II"? My daughter and son-in-law say, "Junior is the second."

I say that Junior is the first, since he is the first child to take the name of an ancestor. Please straighten this out.

BIG BET IN OKLAHOMA CITY

DEAR BET: When a boy is named for his father, who is a "Junior," he is called "the 3rd."

A man with "II" after his name is not named for his father, but for someone else in the family - perhaps an uncle or grandfather with the same name.

So if your grandchild is a boy, he will be "John Q. Blue III."

DEAR ABBY: I read your column for chuckles every morning in the Chicago Tribune and can't believe that there are so many people out there leading such dull, unrewarding lives. So, I'm writing to tell you about myself

Sorry, The Pot Is Here

North Carolina long has been noted for its prolific production of one golden weed and now it's acquiring a reputation for a second weed. Newsweek magazine's takeout this month on marijuana included a cover illustration purporting to show a North Carolina farmer and his crop of pot.

Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham took issue with the magazine's handling of the article, even threatening to sue until the attorney general's office told him to back off. According to Graham, there just isn't a problem in North Carolina with the production of marijuana. The problem, he says, is only with smugglers and distributors.

We have to disagree with the good commissioner. There is hardly a day goes by that marijuana is not in the news — a crop found in a field near Chicod, or Columbus County or, according to Newsweek, in the western counties along the Virginia border. Reports of marijuana being destroyed are now routine.

It's good to note that North Carolina's law enforcement officers haven't been caught up in Graham's rosy optimism.

Tomorrow's Vote Important

Tomorrow the polling places will be open throughout our area for the general election from 6:30 a.m. to 7:30 p.m.

The off-year elections are not as exciting as the years when the nation elects a president or the state chooses a governor, but be assured they are equally important to maintaining the government and the freedoms that we have.

Every vote is important and the record books are full of elections that were decided by a hundred votes or less.

Those of us who value the freedoms we have and the blessings that have been bestowed upon this nation will consider it a privilege to vote in any election.

Every vote is important tomorrow and on every election day. Cast yours.

THIS AFTERNOON

The Button Man

By PAUL T. O'CONNOR
RALEIGH — Jimmy Warlick is living, prospering proof that there's money to be made in politics — even if you have to do it legally.

In 1980, Warlick was working as a $10,000-a-year aide to 11th District Rep. Lamar Gudger when he started selling his own brand of political campaign buttons. He got into button-selling to make enough money to pay for a trip to that summer's Democratic National Convention in New York. But sales went so well, so fast, that by convention time he'd quit his job and began hawking the buttons across the country. Political Americana, Warlick's Asheville-based firm that grew out of those first button sales, has grown into a $200,000-a-year business.

Warlick started selling buttons at the spring (1980) Democratic convention. Just a few months later, in New York, he and eight helpers sold 6500 buttons at an average profit of $1 a button. At first, he sold only retail from booths set up at political events. Now he's opened a new catalogue line of political paraphernalia that's sold in bulk to candidates.

The buttons for sale to individuals are not the standard fare the candidates will give you for free. They're decorated with stars, stripes, old-fashioned lettering and the candidate's photo. (Candidates, trying to save money, rarely put their picture on freebies.) He charges $2 each — $3 for extra fancies.

The decorative buttons are produced in limited quantities, usually 1,000, and some series are numbered in much the same way artists keep track of lithographic prints. All the better to encourage collectors.

And there are some pretty famous collectors of Warlick's buttons. The Smithsonian Institute in Washington has a complete set of his 1980 presidential buttons in its collection. Warlick also provided President Carter and then candidate Ronald Reagan with sets of the buttons he sold on the campaign trail.

Warlick is a Democrat and his company doesn't do any work for Republican candidates. "I do enough business with Democrats. Most advertisers only go with one side and I just couldn't do stuff for Republican candidates knowing it might be helping to defeat a Democrat." But he does make decorative buttons of Republican presidential candidates. Politics aside, he says, a set of buttons wouldn't be complete with only one side represented.

During the 1980 campaign, Warlick and a crew of four workers followed the candidates around the country. Alabama, Tennessee, Connecticut and to Cleveland for the October debate. "We get there before the crowd and get near the stage. Then, as it fills up, we keep moving back and eventually we'll end up a quarter mile away from the stage."

"We never had any trouble with security. In fact, the White House and the Reagan people began sending us their schedules. Hamilton Jordan (Carter's chief of staff) would always ask us if we had anything new ... I heard Reagan's stump speech so many times I could do a great imitation of it and people would ask me how I knew what he was going to say."

This year, Warlick sold paraphernalia to campaigns around the country including those of West Virginia Sen. Robert Byrd and Georgia secretary of state candidate Max Cleland. Warlick's new business partner is Wallace Hyde, a Democratic party fundraiser and a strong supporter of Walter Mondale's 1984 presidential aspirations. Coincidentally, Warlick says he's in the running for the contract to do Mondale's 1984 buttons.

Warlick prefers to keep his current earnings private but admits he's doing "much better" than when he was on the congressional payroll.

Now, The Bottom Line

It is now time for this column to endorse certain political candidates for public office. We have studied all the issues and arrived at our conclusions by not only comparing who our choices are running against, but how they got there.

For U.S. Senator — Plato Syracuse. We support Plato because he was the only political candidate this year who did not have his picture taken with an unemployed automobile worker. When this was pointed out by his opponent in their final debate, Syracuse defended himself by saying, "I couldn't do anything to get the man his job back, and he knew it and I knew it, so why use up a lot of my time for a lousy two minutes on the evening news?"

For Congress — Walter Rosebud. Our reason for choosing Rosebud over his opponent is that Rosebud, although a multimillionaire, refused to use a cent of his own money to finance his election. He was quoted on "Meet the Press" as saying, "I worked hard for my fortune, and I have no intention of blowing it on an election when I can get 13 percent on tax-exempt municipal bonds. If the special interest political action committees don't want to buy my vote, then I don't think I want the job."

For Governor — Hayden Dunkerman. This was a tough choice because Dunkerman's opponent has a much prettier wife. But Dunkerman has two more children than his rival. Dunkerman also was an all-state running back in college, while his opponent, because of a bad knee, wouldn't go out for the team. Dunkerman's other qualification for making a better governor is that, in his state, which has a 20 percent Hispanic population, his whole family professes to be crazy about Mexican food.

For Lt. Governor — Ramsay Wilder gets our nod. Wilder disagrees with almost every stand Hayden Dunkerman, the man we support for governor, has taken. Therefore, since neither one of them could work together, it's doubtful that Dunkerman would dare leave the state during his four years in office. Although Wilder has no executive experience, we still endorse him because a lieutenant governor doesn't need any for this nothing job.

For State Attorney General — Dallas Reising would probably make a better attorney general than Arnie Burchett. He has been more forthright in answering the tough questions posed to him by the media. Last week in a televised debate with WTWT's hard-hitting Reg Smiley as moderator, Dallas was asked where he stood on the death penalty and he replied, "It's none of your damn business." Smiley's follow-up question on how Dallas would deal with white-collar crime brought this response: "I didn't come here to discuss my personal life." Smiley then tried to pin Dallas down on what stand he would take on prayer in public schools. Dallas replied, "I have made it a rule never to talk about the Constitution when appearing on television."

A Bloodbath In Bensalem

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
BENSALEM, Pa. — The enormity of unemployment as the cutting issue in Tuesday's election was vividly portrayed in this blue-collar, middle-to-lower-middle-income Bucks County suburb of Philadelphia where even registered Republicans now narrowly favor the Democrats as the best party to "reduce unemployment."

Calling the president's success in cutting inflation and interest rates "transitory," a tax accountant's 44-year-old wife who is a registered Democrat but switched to Ronald Reagan in 1980, summed up the bipartisan sentiment: "This unemployment is dangerous. We know that many types of work around here like the steel industry will probably never recover." She personified Reagan's vulnerability in a mid-term election that could shatter his control over Congress. On Nov. 2 she will desert the Republicans and vote for former Democratic Rep. Peter Kostmayer, running to recapture the seat he lost to incumbent Republican Jim Coyne two years ago.

The accountant's wife was one of 48 registered voters questioned by us and interviewers for Patrick Caddell's Cambridge Survey Research in this snug bedroom suburb where unemployment tops 15 percent. That high rate is partly explained by massive layoffs at U.S. Steel's Fairless works. Our political scouting expedition was targeted on Precinct E 5, which swung from 57 percent for Jimmy Carter in 1976 to 64 percent for Reagan four years later.

The voters we questioned conformed to the precinct. They voted for Reagan over Carter by 2-to-1. A principal factor at work was the 1980 blue-collar phenomenon — Democratic defections to Reagan at a time of soaring inflation and interest rates.

But Reagan's success in radically reducing inflation, and the cost of borrowing money cuts little ice here today, denying the president any offset to rampant unemployment. Asked whether "the Democrats or the Republicans in Congress would do better in reducing unemployment," the 17 registered Republicans answering the question split 9-to-8 in choosing the Democrats. Among Democrats and independents, the choice went to the Democratic Party by a better than 10-to-1 ratio.

A 65-year-old housewife who is a registered Republican captured the mood of the anti-Republican tide sweeping Bensalem. Asked whether continued Republican control of the federal government "will force even more Americans out of work," a question answered affirmatively 2-to-1 by the voters we interviewed, she unloosed a tirade: "From way back, as long as I can remember, whenever I vote Republican they have always brought more unemployment and more hard times. I should learn better." She plans to support Kostmayer.

Our interviews showed that the unemployment issue has taken on an intensity that obliterates other political factors. Reagan's favorable rating, for example, is only a shade under 50 percent: his overall job rating is positive; his handling of inflation gets strong 2-to-1 support; and on the seminal question of which party could "best handle the economy in general," the result is a 50-50 tie.

That points to deep voter disillusion with both parties. When we asked whether voters agreed or disagreed that the Democrats "just criticize the Republican programs without suggesting alternatives of their own," almost 50 percent agreed.

The voters in Precinct E 5, in short, expect no miracles

To the editor:

The so-called "Nuclear Freeze," which originated in Russia, was first publicized and carried out in Europe and now in U.S.A. This is not a guess; it is fact. For example, Yavi Kapralov, a disinformation specialist of the Russian KGB officers, spoke at the nuclear freeze meeting at the Wesley Methodist Church in Waterburg, Vermont.

Why does Russia want a nuclear freeze?
1. It would permanently freeze the U.S.A. into second place militarily forever.

2. Russia would have military superiority forever. A Soviet first strike would wipe out 95 percent of American land-based missiles and nearly as much of our ground-based bombers and submarines. Russia has 308 SS-18 missiles (small part of their stock pile), which has more destructive power than all of our missiles combined. The Russians outnumber us 47 to 1 in fighter interception and surface-to-air missiles. Soviets outnumber us 2 to 1 in intercontinental bombers and missiles. America trails the Soviet Union by 2 to 1 in warships. They have us outgunned.

3. The Russians say they will not strike first. Would you trust Russia that they would not break their promise to accomplish world domination, their primary objective?

Everyone has a solution for the nuclear dilemma, it seems, but who speaks for freedom? The communists do: they abolish freedom wherever they go. Name the many countries now under communist rule such as their last country, Afghanistan.

Church leaders, prescribing pacifism, freezes and unilateral disarmament are accepting responsibilities in trying to save the world from nuclear devastation. But what are their plans for saving freedom? Freedom is an endangered species and on at least two counts: the creeping pacifism and the perils of nuclear blackmail. Throughout history, Freedom has been man's most cherished possession. The Soviets respect/fear power. We must strengthen our defenses now to save our freedom.

Strength For Today

ESSENCE OF VICTORY

The world has always defined victory as humbling one's enemies and getting one's own way. But in the Biblical sense triumph amounts to keeping and increasing our faith in God no matter what happens to us. Triumph is inward and spiritual, not outward and material and often violent — as the world would have it.

St. Paul makes it plain in his epistles that the greatest thing which Christ had conferred upon him was triumph. Although the world might think that it had defeated him, Paul was always confident that through Christ he was defeating the world. Writing to a little group of people in Corinth, Paul was undismayed by the persecutions he had endured, the narrow escapes he had made from mobs incited against him, and what appeared every day to be the overwhelming defeat of righteousness at the hands of evil. He cries out, "Now thanks be to God who always causes us to triumph in Christ." — Elisha Douglass

Savings Bond Has A New Look

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer
The familiar U.S. savings bond has suddenly gotten a lot more complicated.

Buyers won't know exactly how much interest they'll earn until they actually cash in the bonds.

The rate will go up and down, depending on other interest rates.

There is no limit as to how high it can go, but there will be a minimum of 7.5 percent.

President Reagan announced the changes on Thursday. They apply to all series EE bonds sold starting today.

The interest rate on existing bonds was a flat 9 percent, as long as the bonds were held to their full maturity of eight years.

Sales of savings bonds sagged as interest on other investments rose. Earlier this year, Congress authorized a change in the rate structure to make the bonds more competitive.

The rate on new EE bonds held for at least five years will be linked to the market interest rate on U.S. Treasury notes and bonds, but will not go below the 7.5 percent floor.

"You get the flexibility to get high rates when there are high rates in the market, which you never had before," said Steve Meyerhardt of the Treasury Department. "On the other end of the scale, if (market) rates go down really low, the savings bond rate will not go down really low. You know exactly where it will stop."

Meyerhardt conceded that the 7.5 percent floor is lower than the 9 percent now guaranteed, but pointed out that consumers must hold existing EE bonds for a full eight years in order to get the 9 percent. If you hold the bonds for less than eight years, you get paid less interest.

Meyerhardt said the new system could mean lower earnings for consumers only "if you assume that interest rates over the long haul are going to be less than 9 percent in the market." And he said that if there were such a steep decline, there probably would have been a decrease in the fixed savings bond rate — even though the Treasury has never dropped the rate before.

Meyerhardt explained how the floating rate will work: Each six months, the government will calculate the average market interest rate being paid for U.S. Treasury notes and bonds with an outstanding maturity of five years remaining. The savings bond rate for the next 6 months will be equal to 85 percent of the market rate on the Treasury securities.

At the five-year point, the government will add up the six-month interest rates and average them to figure out the actual yield for series EE bonds. If you hold your bonds for longer than five years, additional six-month market interest rates will be averaged in.

Based on the performance of Treasury securities over the last six months, Meyerhardt said, the rate on new EE bonds for the first six months after Nov. 1 is expected to be about 11.3 percent.

What happens to holders of outstanding EE bonds and to holders of the old E bonds which were issued before 1980?

They too will earn the new, flexible rate if they are held for at least five years more. The guaranteed minimum will remain unchanged — 9 percent for EE bonds and 8.5 percent for most E bonds.

What happens if you cash in one of the new bonds before five years?

You'll be paid on a sliding scale — just as you are if you cash in the existing bonds before they reach maturity. The rate on the bonds sold beginning Monday will be 5.5 percent after 1 year and will rise to 7.25 percent after 4½ years.

How will you know what your bonds are worth?

"You won't know for sure exactly how much the bond will be worth at any point from five years on because that would depend on what the market rates are," said Meyerhardt. The face value of the new bonds will be based on what would happen if you earned the minimum guaranteed rate and held the bond for 10 years. In reality, however, the bond may be worth its face value much sooner than that.

Are the denominations changing?

No. The bonds will be available in denominations of $50, $75, $100, $200, $500, $1,000, $5,000 and $10,000. The purchase price of each bond is equal to half its face value. You will still be able to defer paying federal income tax on the earnings until you cash in the bonds and the interest remains exempt from state and local income taxes.

Cities Told Change And Growth Due

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — William C. Friday, chairman of the Governor's Commission on the Year 2000, told delegates at the 73rd annual convention of the N. C. League of Municipalities Sunday night that they can depend on two things.

They can depend on change and growth, he said. Friday, who is president of the 16-campus University of North Carolina system, said the state will need the cooperation of local governmental officials if the state is to be ready for change and growth.

The commission, founded by Gov. Jim Hunt in June 1981, is preparing a report to be made public next month, Friday said. That report will be presented to the governor in March after public comment and possibly some revisions.

Friday said people, the economy, natural resources and communities were the commission's four main areas of concern. The commission determined that "change and growth are the major conditions we must contemplate," Friday said.

He said the commission found that the state is expected to grow from 5.7 million residents to more than 7 million by the year 2000. The average age of the population will be older, and a greater percentage of the population will be more than 65 years old, he said.

The economy should achieve economic growth while maintaining a climate favorable to agriculture and industry, he said. Women will help bolster a decreasing labor force, and they should be encouraged to take non-traditional jobs, Friday said.

Natural resources must be wisely used to meet the needs of the state, and they must be protected to maintain the quality of life, he said. He added that communities will be changing, but local governments must continue to allow for the greatest amount of citizen participation.

Hunt is to be the key speaker at today's meeting. About 1,500 mayors, board members, city managers, city department heads and state and federal officials are expected to attend the three-day convention, which began Sunday and ends Tuesday in time for delegates to return home to vote.

The group plans to discuss the New Federalism's impact on cities and towns, and it plans to address several tax questions, including the possibility of increasing the sales tax by 1 cent.

Buchwald Col. ...

(Continued from page 4) like a fool, we have to endorse Reisling over Arnie Burchett, whose make-up on the show made him look terrible.

For Mayor — the incumbent, Charles Bledsoe, has done a good job and deserves another term. The fact that he gave the garbage contract for the city to his brother-in-law, and received a free trip to Tokyo from the company who sold the city 200 buses that have been recalled for faulty brakes, does not detract from our opinion that Bledsoe is probably one of the most popular machine mayors the city has ever had. We endorse Bledsoe because he is beholden to no one, thanks to a blind trust fund in the Bahamas set up by his close friends in the school contracting business.

For City Council President — Sarah Evans gets our overwhelming endorsement, because she's a woman.

As for the various propositions on the ballot: We favor all the odd-numbered ones and are against the even ones, with the exception of Proposition 82, which reads, "The people of this state believe that in the event of a nuclear attack no alternate parking will be permitted at ground zero."

Record Number Of Statewide Initiatives Slated

By LEE MITGANG
Associated Press Writer

Statewide handgun control in California, a scheme to raise taxes to build 150-mph "bullet" trains in Ohio and nuclear freeze proposals in nine states are among the ballot issues facing Americans on Tuesday.

Voters across the country will consider 52 statewide initiatives, the most in fifty years, and 185 other propositions. Initiatives are placed on the ballot by citizen action in the 23 states where that's allowed. Other propositions are referred to the voters by a variety of sources.

Bottle bills aiming to cut down trash by requiring return deposits on beverage containers will be considered in California, Colorado, Washington state and Arizona. Massachusetts is deciding whether to repeal a new bottle law before it takes effect next January.

Referendums calling for nuclear disarmament, similar to one passed last month in Wisconsin, are on ballots in nine states.

In a battle so heated it's being called "Alaska's Vietnam," Alaskans will decide whether to spend nearly $3 billion to move its capital 580 miles — and two time zones — from its current capital, Juneau, to a tiny settlement called Willow, 70 miles from Anchorage.

Equally hard-fought is the battle in California over what would be the strictest handgun control law in the nation. The National Rifle Association has been struggling to prevent passage of Proposition 15, which calls for registration of all private handguns and minimum sentences for people convicted of carrying a concealed, unregistered handgun.

By contrast, Nevada and New Hampshire voters consider constitutional amendments reaffirming the right to bear arms.

Voters in many other state will take up get-tough-on-crime measures, led by Massachusetts which considers a return to the death penalty.

Arizona, Florida and Illinois ballot measures would make it easier for judges to keep accused criminals in jail while awaiting trial.

Nevada voters will consider a constitutional amendment to allow the Legislature to block parole to offenders whose original sentences didn't allow release. New Jersey considers a $170 million prison construction bond issue.

District of Columbia voters could adopt a constitution that would be the basis for statehood. The proposed document contains a long list of controversial measures, including a guarantee of a job or adequate income to all residents.

Among local issues are a city referendum banning electroshock treatments in Berkeley, Calif., and a measure to bring prostitution back to Nevada's Lincoln County five years after the brothels were voted out.

In Missouri, voters will face ballots weighed down by scores of trivial issues like $5 increases in marriage license fees because of the way state courts have interpreted a measure the state's voters passed two years ago demanding a more direct citizen say in tax increases. Now election officials fear frustrated voters will skip the election altogether.

A "save the family farm" constitutional amendment faces Nebraskans. If passed, it would restrict non-family corporations from acquiring and operating farms and ranches. Eight central states regulate corporate farmland purchases by statute, but none through a constitutional amendment.

Gambling measures are featured in four states. In North Dakota, which has the only legal casinos outside of Atlantic City and Las Vegas, voters will decide whether to repeal a year-old law permitting $2-a-bet-limit blackjack and pull-tabs — a kind of bet in which someone pays to pull a ticket out of a jar and wins the face value of the ticket.

Minnesotans will decide whether to would allow on-track pari-mutuel betting on horse races. South Dakota voters consider an amendment clearing the way for cities and counties to approve coin-operated gambling machines, bingo, lotteries and cards. An initiative in Montana would authorize blackjack and electronically simulated games of cards, bingo and keno.

Oregon, pioneer of strict statewide land-use planning in the 1970s, considers doing away with state agencies that have controlled its growth and making land-use planning goals advisory rather than mandatory.

In one of the few echoes of Proposition 13, the tax-cutting measure passed by California four years ago, Washington voters will decide whether to put a legal cap of 12 percent on interest rates that banks, stores and credit card companies may charge.

PEANUT SALE — The Greenville Kiwanis Club will hold its annual peanut sale November 5 and 6. Mayor Percy Cox receives the first bag from Kiwanis representative Charles Hardee. Hardee said the proceeds from the sale will go toward the boys and girls fund and also for three East Carolina University scholarships. Hardee added that about $5,000 is expected to be raised. ## Opposition Leader Pressing For Statement On Secrecy Violation

By GRAHAM HEATHCOTE
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — An opposition Labor Party legislator is pressing his demand that Conservative Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher make a public statement on the state of Britain's reportedly leaky intelligence service.

Laborite lawmaker Edward Leadbitter began campaigning for a public disclosure last week after The New York Times quoted U.S. intelligence sources as saying a Briton arrested for spying at the sensitive electronic espionage center at Cheltenham had been sending key secrets to the Soviet Union.

Mrs. Thatcher made only one public comment on the case following the arrest last July of Geoffrey Arthur Prime, telling the House of Commons that the incident was serious.

Pressed to make another statement after the newspaper disclosures last week, Mrs. Thatcher declined, noting that Prime was awaiting trial. The law prohibits detailed public discussion in Britain of a particular case when a trial is pending.

Given the law, it appeared unlikely she would alter her stand despite Leadbitter's renewed appeal this weekend.

In asking for a public statement, the Laborite claimed the law was being used to cover up security problems.

"It does seem to me that there is an extensive amount of presumed privilege at the higher levels of our service for which the establishment is hellbent on covering up," he said.

Leadbitter was the first lawmaker to raise in Parliament in 1979 the case of Anthony Blunt, the former royal art adviser later stripped of his knighthood when his 1964 confession of spying for the Soviet Union in World War II was finally made public.

He said his concern about British security services arose from U.S. press reports that leaks from Britain included the location of British and American nuclear warheads and the names of intelligence agents.

The New York Times account said a scandal over the "most damaging Soviet penetration of Western security since the Second World War" was about to break in Britain.

The report said the case concerned the forthcoming trial of Prime, 44, a former translator of Russian at the secret Government Communications Headquarters at Cheltenham outside of London. Prime has been charged with spying for an undisclosed government and remains in prison.

The Daily Telegraph newspaper carried a front page report today of a Washington Post story saying U.S. intelligence sources fear a Soviet spy ring was operating at Cheltenham. The report said the ring may have passed on information about how Soviet code messages were deciphered and the deployment of North Atlantic Treaty Organization forces throughout Western Europe.

The report said the case concerned the forthcoming trial of Prime, 44, a former translator of Russian at the secret Government Communications Headquarters at Cheltenham outside of London. Prime has been

'Gender Gap' Stirs Late White House Talent Hunt

By ANN BLACKMAN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House, worried that a backlash from women dissatisfied with the Reagan administration may show up in Tuesday's election, has formed a task force to locate women for top administration jobs.

"We feel the heat directly," said Helene von Damm, the recently appointed assistant for presidential personnel. "There's a lot of pressure."

The White House has been criticized repeatedly by women's political groups for not appointing more women to top administration posts. Some Republicans have insisted the administration has knocked many women out of the running by judging them by stricter political standards than they use for men.

And for the last two years, polls have been turning up what they call the "gender gap," evidence that women have a more negative view than men of President Reagan and Republicans.

"The gender gap is important," Mrs. von Damm said in a recent interview. "If it prevails, it will be very damaging to us."

Although the White House had not made a point of publicizing the task force previously, one member of the group sought out a reporter a few days before the election to talk about it.

The gender gap was cited in an October Gallup poll when men and women were asked which party they would like to see win in their congressional district. Women preferred the Democrats over Republicans 58 percent to 42 percent, while men preferred Democrats over Republicans by a narrower 53 percent to 47 percent.

Another poll taken two weeks earlier by The Washington Post and ABC queried men and women on whether they approved or disapproved of the way Reagan was handling his job. In that poll, 45 percent of the women approved of Reagan's record and 47 percent said they disapproved. Of the men, 54 percent said they had a favorable opinion of the president, while only 40 percent said they did not.

Republicans are worried about the gap in elections because it played a major role in the 1980 elections. According to Associated Press-NBC News polls of voters in 1980, women split evenly between Carter and Reagan, but men favored by Reagan by 20 percentage points.

And polls have found a gender gap working against GOP candidates this year in many Senate and governor's races. Thus, in close races, a Republican's poor showing among women voters could cost the GOP a victory.

Mrs. von Damm, who served as Reagan's personal secretary before joining the personnel office last year, said the new task force consists of 13 women who work for the administration. Weekly they review a list of job openings and their requirements for suggestions of women to appoint to top positions.

Mrs. von Damm acknowledged that since Reagan was elected two years ago, various groups have supplied the White House with scores of names of women for positions within the administration.

"We had lots of names but they hadn't been checked out," she said, adding that the job of the new task force will be to identify qualified women for specific jobs.

"When a vacancy comes, you automatically have four or five white males," she said. "They have such a network. I need to be ahead of the curve. We look ahead to vacancies that will occur."

Women on the task force include: Ann Gorsuch, administrator at the Environmental Protection Agency; Phyllis Kaminsky, director of public information at the International Communications Agency; Ann Dore McLaughlin, director of public affairs at the Treasury Department; Lee Ann Elliott, commissioner at the Federal Election Commission.

Mrs. von Damm said that as of last September, the Reagan administration counted 86 women presidential appointees.

Bobbie Kilberg, a Republican attorney who worked in the White House in the Nixon and Ford administrations, said that during the first round of Reagan appointments, administration officials judged women by different standards than men.

"There was a litmus test for women that didn't exist for men," said Mrs. Kilberg, who served as vice chairwoman of Reagan's 1980 advisory board on women. "They would think of women as too moderate or progressive on social issues, even if it had nothing to do with the job requirements. In the Old Boy Network, people would say, 'He's okay. Don't worry.' But women didn't have that network of protectors."

Officials at the National Women's Political Caucus, which keeps tabs on presidential appointees, said that in the first 18 months of office, Reagan had appointed 55 women to full-time positions requiring Senate confirmation. They said that at the same time in the Carter administration, 65 women had been appointed.

"The Great Communicator doesn't communicate very well with women," said caucus president Kathy Wilson, a Republican. "It's too late for Reagan to repair his tattered image with women voters."

Blame Center For Lost Time

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Officials of the Mental Health Center say they could not force a schizophrenic to submit to treatment because he was an adult.

They refer to the case of William Geoffrey Fraser, who his parents say spent months wandering the streets after he was cut off from Prolixin, a drug he took to control his condition.

Fraser, who says he did not "think a single thought of my own from January 'til late May," says he wandered the streets and begged from friends and strangers. But Mental Health Center officials deny blame.

Dr. Stephen M. Moyer, assistant director for the center, told Fraser's parents, Anne and Dr. Ralph Fraser, that center records do not indicate that their son was taken off his medication.

In a June letter, Moyer told the Frasers that "Geoff's medical record does not reflect that a physician discontinued his medication. The record does reflect that Geoff has repeatedly failed to show up for scheduled injections."

Fraser, 35, had a right as an adult to refuse medication and to refuse mental health treatment, the letter continued.

The Frasers told the area mental health authority that a doctor at the Mental Health Center mistakenly reduced and then halted the Prolixin given to their son, who was an outpatient at the center.

"He was doing beautifully," Mrs. Fraser said. "We just thought never again would there be anything wrong with him."

Fraser immediately began losing control of his condition, and by January 1981 — six months after his parents said he stopped getting his treatment — he was on the streets.

"Oh, he stank and his teeth had rotted and he hadn't eaten, he had starved," his father said.

The Frasers got a court order to have him picked up and taken to the mental health center in early spring. He stayed there for about a day and was released, his father said.

A letter written in May by Dr. George E. Hamilton Jr., mental health director, told Fraser's parents that their son was released because he was involuntarily committable.

The Frasers got another court order and his son again was taken to the center — that time for 10 days. He failed to show up for a court hearing in which his parents hoped they could get a court order to ensure that he received proper medication as an outpatient.

The Frasers were finally able to convince their son to resume treatments under the care of a psychiatrist — but they regret the time he lost on the streets.

Odd Races In Indiana Vote

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — In Indiana, Tuesday's general election will pit brother against brother-in-law, bread against the record and Qualkenbush against Qualkenbush.

Republican Fred V. Qualkenbush is opposing Democrat David G. Qualkenbush in the Martin County sheriff's race. The two are not related, and Fred's campaign manager, Georgia Lee, believes voters will be able to tell the difference.

"Dave is not too tall, and thin. Fred isn't too tall either, but he's a little fuller in the face," she said.

In the Huntington County sheriff's race, incumbent Ray Williams is opposed by his brother-in-law, Van K. Juillerat.

"We got along fine before," said Juillerat. "But since I announced my candidacy, there hasn't been much talking between us."

Juillerat said he expects relations to return to normal after Nov. 2 — he's planning a family Thanksgiving dinner and Williams is invited — but Williams is taking a cautious approach: "I'm honestly not sure where I'll be having Thanksgiving."

At the other end of the state, Republican Floyd Coates has been selling 55-cent loaves of bread for 21 cents to demonstrate the ravages of inflation in his campaign to unseat incumbent U.S. Rep. Lee Hamilton, a Democrat.

Hamilton's people call it a half-baked gimmick.

Opinion Failed Specify How

Opinion Failed Specify How

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — State Attorney General Bob Corbin has issued a formal opinion stating that cities and towns may regulate the speed of trains within corporate limits.

What he didn't say was how a cop was supposed to ticket speeding trains.

The case arose from an effort in the spring by some small towns to slow passing trains, which have since promised to observe a 60 mph speed limit.

But Mayor Mary Dillon of Benson says if her community decides to enact its own train speed limit, officers won't have to outrace offending trains in prowl cars or on motorcycles. They'll simply deliver the citation to the local railroad representative.

BADMOUTH OR SWEETMOUTH?

I know it's not a pleasant subject, but halitosis is a fact of human life. It is not a disease, but a sign that something is happening in your mouth. It might be as simple as the natural action of saliva on bits of food or as serious as tooth decay, gum disease or even the symptom of a more serious disease.

Bits of food left in the mouth, is by far, the most common cause. Food debris gets caught in any number of places in the mouth, mixes with bacteria and the product is "bad breath". Onions, garlic, alcohol and tobacco, by their nature, can also cause foul breath. Cavities (which are food traps for bacteria), tartar buildup, and poorly-fitting dentures are also common causes of halitosis.

What can you do about halitosis? It's a simple, two-pronged approach: dental appointments on a regular basis and regular home care for your teeth. The dentist will fill the cavities, remove the tartar, and make sure the bridges and dentures fit. A proper brushing and flossing regimen is the key to your personal dental hygiene. Between brushings, rinse your mouth to dislodge food particles. Be a sweetmouth!

Guerrillas Claiming 20 Towns

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Leftist guerrillas have seized 20 small towns in northern El Salvador near the Honduran border and killed or wounded 403 government soldiers in their 20-day-old nationwide offensive, the rebels' Radio Venceremos claimed.

The casualty total broadcast by the clandestine station Sunday was more than double that acknowledged by the Defense Ministry since the offensive began Oct. 10. Radio Venceremos said the rebels also captured 119 government troops, but later released all of them. It did not say why the prisoners were freed.

The broadcast further claimed that senior Salvadoran and Honduran military officials met recently with the head of the U.S. Southern Command, Gen. Wallace Nutting, to plan a massive drive against rebel strongholds along the border with Honduras. The radio did not give the source of its information, but it claimed 15,000 Salvadoran and Honduran troops would participate in the operation.

It alleged the United States would support the operation with A-37 fighter bombers, armored helicopters and napalm that would be shipped from Southern Command headquarters in Panama.

There was no immediate comment from Washington or Salvadoran officials on the report.

The rebel radio also criticized U.S. Ambassador Deane R. Hinton, saying that he only spoke out against rightist violence here because of "the enormous pressure that exists in the United States on the part of the church, Congress, labor groups and even within (President) Reagan's own party."

Hinton on Friday warned that U.S. aid to El Salvador could be cut off unless the government stops rightist "thugs" accused of murdering thousands of Salvadoran civilians.

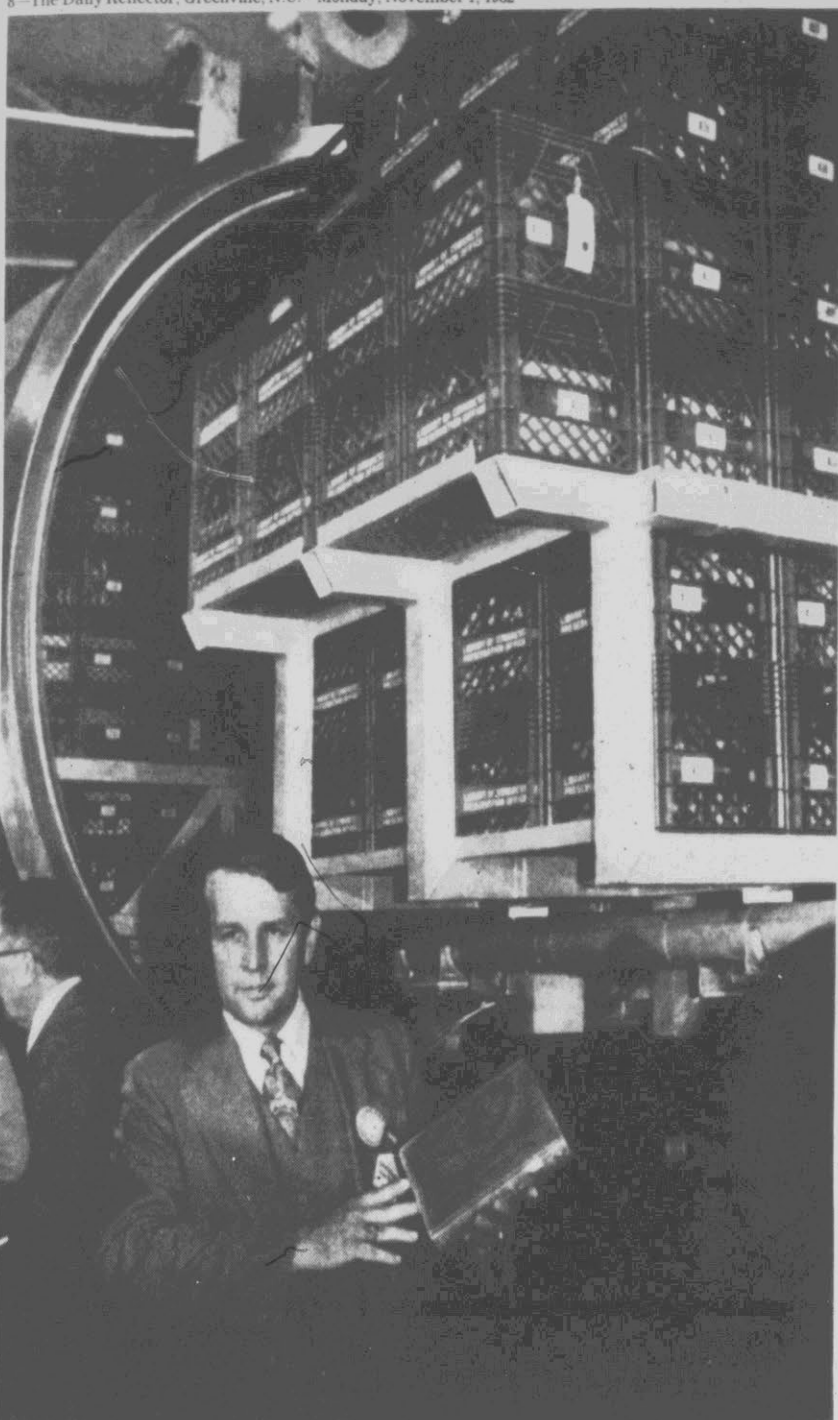

"You don't have to kill people in the night. You don't have to decapitate people" to defeat the insurgents, Hinton told a Chamber of Commerce luncheon.

"These declarations," the radio said, "are another proof of the continuing imposition of the expansionist will of the United States in El Salvador, which violates our national sovereignty and right for self-determination of our destiny."

"While the left offers political solutions through dialogue, Hinton proposes more dollars and death-dealing weapons," it said.

Last Tuesday in Mexico City, Salvadoran leftists said they had made a formal offer of peace talks to the U.S.-backed government here. But the offer apparently is unacceptable to both Salvadoran and U.S. officials unless the guerrillas first lay and former Maine senator, spelled out the election choice as "whether we stay the course for a privileged few, or say America can do better for us all."

Manatt predicted the Democrats would pick up 15 to 20 House seats, two in the Senate and gain five to seven governorships.

Manatt contended that gains in the range he was predicting "certainly would be a signal to change the course" of the president's economic program.

However, his Republican counterpart, Richard Richards, said over the weekend he expects the GOP to lose 10 or 12 House seats and would consider that a reaffirmation of the Reagan mandate.

Appearing on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley," Lyn Nofziger, former Reagan political aide, said he expects the Democrats to gain between 20 and 25 seats.

Strategists in both parties were watching a large number of close races and also were wondering which politicians thought secure would turn up losers on Election Day.

Among the tightest Senate races were contests in New Mexico, Missouri and New Jersey, where seats now held by Republicans were under strong Democratic challenge. Democratic incumbents in Montana and Nevada also were fighting for survival. And in Virginia, where Sen. Harry F. Byrd, an independent who is counted as a Democrat for purposes of party control, is retiring, the contest between GOP Rep. Paul Trible and Democratic Lt. Gov. Richard Davis is a tossup.

Democrats also were considered within striking distance of upsetting Republican senators in Utah, Wyoming, Rhode Island, Minnesota, Connecticut, and Vermont.

Democratic hopes for gains in races for governor were based on the retirements of Republican governors in Ohio, Michigan, Iowa, Minnesota, Wisconsin and Alaska. But in the two biggest states, Democratic governors were bowing out and Republican underdogs claimed they were gaining in races to succeed them.

Recent polls in California said Attorney General George Deukmejian had narrowed the lead held by Mayor Tom Bradley of Los Angeles, a Democrat, who is bidding to the first black elected governor of any state.

And in New York, Republican businessman Lewis Lehrman said he was within 3 points of Lt. Gov. Mario Cuomo, a Democrat, in their race to succeed Gov. Hugh Carey.

Reagan campaigned in 13 states and cited progress in lowering taxes, inflation and interest rates. He blamed the economic ills on the Democrats and said his opponents were "quick to criticize, but offer no real alternative."

In his closing plea to voters for which the GOP purchased television time on Saturday, Sunday and today, the president said, "I am counting on you to cast your votes for hope not despair..."

The Democrats also purchased five-minute network time slots Sunday and tonight for a commercial in which Edmund S. Muskie, the former secretary of state

Urge Same Treatment For Opposition Leaders

By ROBERT PARRY
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Eight arrested Salvadoran opposition leaders deserve at least the legal protections given to soldiers accused of killing six Americans in El Salvador, the ACLU and a human rights group say.

The ACLU and Americas Watch noted Sunday that Salvadoran national guardsmen implicated in the killings of four American churchwomen in 1980 and two U.S. labor advisers in 1981 were handled through civilian courts and none has yet to be convicted of a crime.

But the Salvadoran opposition leaders are being held by the army and are slated for trial before a military tribunal on terrorism charges, according to El Salvador's Defense Ministry.

In a letter released Sunday, the ACLU and Americas Watch urged Secretary of State George P. Shultz to move forcefully to assure that the eight leftists and labor leaders are tried in civilian courts and the whereabouts of seven others who have disappeared are revealed.

"The problem is not simply that Salvadoran citizens have been arbitrarily arrested, imprisoned without due process of law, and in some cases possibly murdered," the groups said.

"The problem is that by arresting leaders of lawful and moderate opposition parties, like the National Revolutionary Movement, the Salvadoran government has sent a signal that democracy in El Salvador is dead."

Reagan administration officials first expressed disbelief that the Salvadoran military was involved in the arrests. But they later sent Undersecretary of Defense Fred C. Ikle to the Central American country, reportedly to voice U.S. displeasure with the arrests.

"This just won't do," one Pentagon official said about the arrests. "We're not living in the era of the Spanish Inquisition."

Some administration officials have suggested that the arrests could jeopardize continued U.S. military aid to the Salvadoran army in its war against leftist guerrillas.

To continue that aid, the administration certified to Congress twice — once in January and once in July — that El Salvador was making a concerted effort to protect human rights. Another human rights certification is required in January.

The ACLU and Americas Watch, which criticized the administration's first two certifications as unjustified, said the latest disappearances reflect a consistent pattern of human rights abuses.

"The Reagan administration has built its case for continued support of the government of El Salvador primarily on the argument that the March 28 elections demonstrate that El Salvador is working out its problems democratically," the groups said. "We challenged that view on the ground that the elections lacked validity because the opposition reasonably feared to participate. Regrettably, the recent disappearances tend to confirm our doubts about the electoral process in El Salvador."

Said Best In Humanities Field

WASHINGTON (AP) — A two-year study of the nation's universities gives Harvard, Yale, Princeton and the University of California at Berkeley top ratings for their graduate programs in the humanities.

Based on a survey of more than 1,000 professors who were asked to rate the universities' reputations, Harvard led the pack in three fields, classics, philosophy and Spanish literature. Yale was No. 1 in English and French and was tied for first in German with Princeton and the University of Wisconsin-Madison.

Princeton also shared a No. 1 ranking in music with the University of Chicago and the University of California at Berkeley, according to the survey released Sunday. Overall, Berkeley and Yale were in the top five seven times, Princeton six times and Harvard five times.

The ratings were the result of a two-year, $500,000 study of the nation's graduate schools by the National Research Council, a branch of the National Academy of Sciences; the American Council of Learned Societies; the American Council on Education and the Social Services Research Council.

The report rates graduate schools in nine fields — art history, classics, English, French, German, linguistics, music, philosophy and Spanish — on a dozen different scales, including faculty, the size of their libraries, the percentage of graduates with national fellowships and their reputation.

Some 1,689 professors in those fields, or 20 percent of the entire 8,600 humanities professors nationwide, were asked to rate the universities on "the scholarly quality of their faculty."

The academic groups got responses from 1,064 faculty members. Here are the ratings on a scale where 5 meant the faculty was "distinguished," 4 "strong" and 3 "good." For each of the nine fields, all universities that scored above 4 are listed; at least five are listed in each field. Also shown are the colleges' scores transformed to a scale of 1 to 99, where 50 is the mean and about two-thirds of the ratings will fall between 40 and 60.

ART HISTORY (41 universities rated): New York University 4.9, 70; Harvard 4.9, 69; Columbia and Yale, both 4.7, 68; Princeton 4.5, 66; University of California-Berkeley 4.3, 64.

CLASSICS (35): Harvard 4.9, 70; Berkeley 4.6, 67; Yale 4.4, 65; Princeton 4.1, 62; University of Michigan-Ann Arbor 4.1, 61.

'Tampered' With Candy

By The Associated Press
Authorities in Carolina Beach and Roxboro say they are continuing their investigations into candy tampering reported this weekend by trick-or-treaters and their parents.

Roxboro police said Sunday a 6-year-old boy came home that night with a Three Musketeers bar containing a straight pin. Evelyn Painter told police she found the pin after her son, Mark, brought it home.

Two incidents were reported at Carolina Beach Saturday. Carolina Beach police officer Landis Turner said Sunday that the afternoon before a girl bit into a Reese's Peanut Butter Cup and found a pin. The next day, the father of another youngster reported to police he had found a needle in a Milky Way candy bar when he broke it open while checking the child's treats.

A spokesman for the Carolina Beach Police Department said early today that no arrests had been made in the candy tampering. The crime is a felony punishable by five to 40 years in prison.

Concerned For Morale In N.C. Job Cutbacks

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Some North Carolina office managers and other business people say they are taking extra time to talk with employees to combat morale problems brought on by job cutbacks.

Managers say they are especially talking with white-collar workers, who view cutbacks with considerable apprehension.

Jerome Rosow, director of the Work in America Institute in Scarsdale, N.Y., called the mounting apprehension a "syndrome." The non-profit institute, supported by 37 corporations, labor unions and government agencies, examines trends that affect the workplace.

"There's a whole new insecurity syndrome abroad in the land," Rosow said. "There seems to be an underlying fear throughout the country."

Some executives are trying to fight that fear before it gets out of hand.

At PPG Industries Inc. plants in Cleveland and Lexington counties, small groups of employees meet weekly with plant officials to talk about their jobs and problems the plant faces. PPG announced last month it was eliminating 200 white-collar jobs.

The situation is similar at Gold Bond Building Products, said president Mace Coleman. He said he asks employees to tell him how they feel about the Charlotte company's belt-tightening moves. "And they do," he said. Gold Bond laid off about 20 white-collar workers last January, then eliminated overtime and lengthened the work week.

PCA International Inc. Chairman Clint Byrnes said he has met more than 16 times this year with employees of his Matthews firm to hear their concerns and to discuss problems facing the portrait photography company. PCA froze salaries last July, then dismissed 110 white-collar employees.

"We try to keep people as informed as possible," Byrnes said. "I give them straight talk out of the horse's mouth. They're entitled to that. I think people can deal with anything if you level with them."

The talks are necessary to bolster the work ethic, one PCA supervisor said. Without a morale boost, "doing a good job doesn't seem to matter any more," the supervisor said. "People think, 'Why bother if you're going to get cut?'"

James Latimore, an industrial sociologist at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte, said fear of job loss eventually could affect white-collar workers' attitudes toward their employers and undermine productivity.

"White-collar workers traditionally have had fewer complaints and expressed fewer dissatisfactions because of their closer identification with the company," Latimore said.

Bethel Board To Hold Meet

BETHEL — The Bethel town board will hold its regular November meeting Tuesday at 8 p.m. in the town hall.

Elephants Banned By Alabama Signs

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — There aren't any elephants around this east Alabama city, so residents won't have a hard time complying with the road signs that prohibit them.

No one has claimed responsibility or given an explanation for the signs, which appeared two weeks ago on the outskirts of town.

City and Auburn University officials speculate the signs may refer to the symbol of the University of Alabama football team — archrival of the Auburn Tigers — or the Republican Party.

The gray elephant symbols, marked by a red diagonal slash, are on 7-foot-tall dark green signposts along Alabama 29 and Alabama 147.

"We don't know how they got there," said a spokesman for the state Highway Department, who asked to remain anonymous. "Someone should have gone through our department before putting them up, but we won't come down on them for not doing it. Things like this happen all the time during football season."

A Lee County campaign worker for Republican gubernatorial candidate Emory Polmar discounted the political theory, although election day is Tuesday.

"That's definitely not a Republican elephant. There's a difference in the way you draw a Republican elephant and an Alabama elephant," said the worker, who asked not to be identified. The worker could not describe the difference.

A spokesman at the State Democratic headquarters, who also asked not to be identified, said he didn't know anything about the signs.

"But I'll bet it's darn cute," he added.

It's not the first time animal symbols have appeared around the university town. Several years ago, tiger paw prints colored orange and blue — Auburn University's colors — were painted on an Interstate 85 exit ramp.

Arrest 5 For Wearing Hoods

LAGRANGE, Ga. (AP) — Five members of the Ku Klux Klan have been arrested on charges of violating a state law barring the wearing of any garment that conceals a person's identity — in this case, a hood.

The Klansmen were arrested on the town square Saturday night after officers saw them wearing hoods covering their faces, police Lt. Jo Barnes said. All five were released on $1,000 bond.

Ms. Barnes said the only exception to the law is "a person wearing a traditional holiday costume on the occasion of the holiday ... The Ku Klux Klan (outfit) is not a traditional Halloween costume."

INCOHERENT MAN PUNCHED PRIEST

BOSTON (AP) — A man ran up the aisle of a church and punched a priest who was about to celebrate Mass, police said.

The priest, the Rev. Mark Carr of the Most Precious Blood Church in the Hyde Park section of Boston, was not injured and he continued the 7 a.m. service Sunday, police said.

"The guy jumped the altar rail and punched the priest," said city Police Lt. Robert Faherty. "When we talked to him, he was rambling and incoherent. He said it was something about his duty to God."

Another priest at the church, who was not identified, said, "It was harmless. The poor man was sick."

Owners Scheduled To Vote On Kuhn

CHICAGO (AP) — Bowie Kuhn's backers had not given up on the possibility of an 11th-hour compromise that would save his job as baseball commissioner, but some owners also said privately they would not rule out yet another delay in the long-debated issue.

Peter O'Malley, owner of the Los Angeles Dodgers and a staunch Kuhn supporter, said Sunday evening that despite strong opposition to the commissioner in the National League, there was hope for Kuhn.

"Several proposals have been discussed, including COOBA (the acronym given a proposed super-administrator who would work alongside Kuhn). Of course, in these discussions, COOBA has taken many different shapes," O'Malley said.

Baseball's 26 owners were scheduled to vote today on Kuhn's re-election to a third seven-year term as commissioner of baseball. Kuhn needs a three-quarter majority in each league to be re-elected, meaning four votes in the National League or five in the American could oust him.

There appear to be only three nay votes in the AL — Texas, Seattle and New York — but the NL has four relatively firm "no" votes in St. Louis, New York, Houston and Atlanta. If those four vote against Kuhn, another two teams — Cincinnati and Chicago — may join them.

Several of the dissenting owners, including August A. Busch Jr. of St. Louis and Nelson Doubleday of the Mets, have indicated, however, that their votes could be changed by compromise. They have suggested that the commissioner's office be augmented by the appointment of a COOBA, which stands for Chief Operating Officer for Business Affairs. Both Busch and Doubleday, however, would like to see COOBA given equal or greater powers than the commissioner. Kuhn has said he would not accept that compromise.

"This is not just an issue of Bowie Kuhn," O'Malley said. "We want solutions that five or 10 years from now will still be sound decisions. We're talking about the structure of baseball."

O'Malley and Roy Eisenhardt, owner of the Oakland A's, are co-chairman of a Restructuring Committee charged with revamping baseball's hierarchy. In a proposal made public last summer in Chicago, baseball's two leagues would be combined administratively, and there no longer would be separate league votes on issues affecting all of baseball. A form of COOBA also was suggested in the report, but neither his duties nor powers were detailed.

"I have trouble with the word compromise," Eisenhardt said. "It makes it sound as though baseball would accept a less than ideal solution. I don't think baseball should accept anything that's less than proper. Bowie is a short-term problem."

Eisenhardt said he would rather consider any solution reached here "an accord."

"There have been a lot of things discussed between a lot of people," he said.

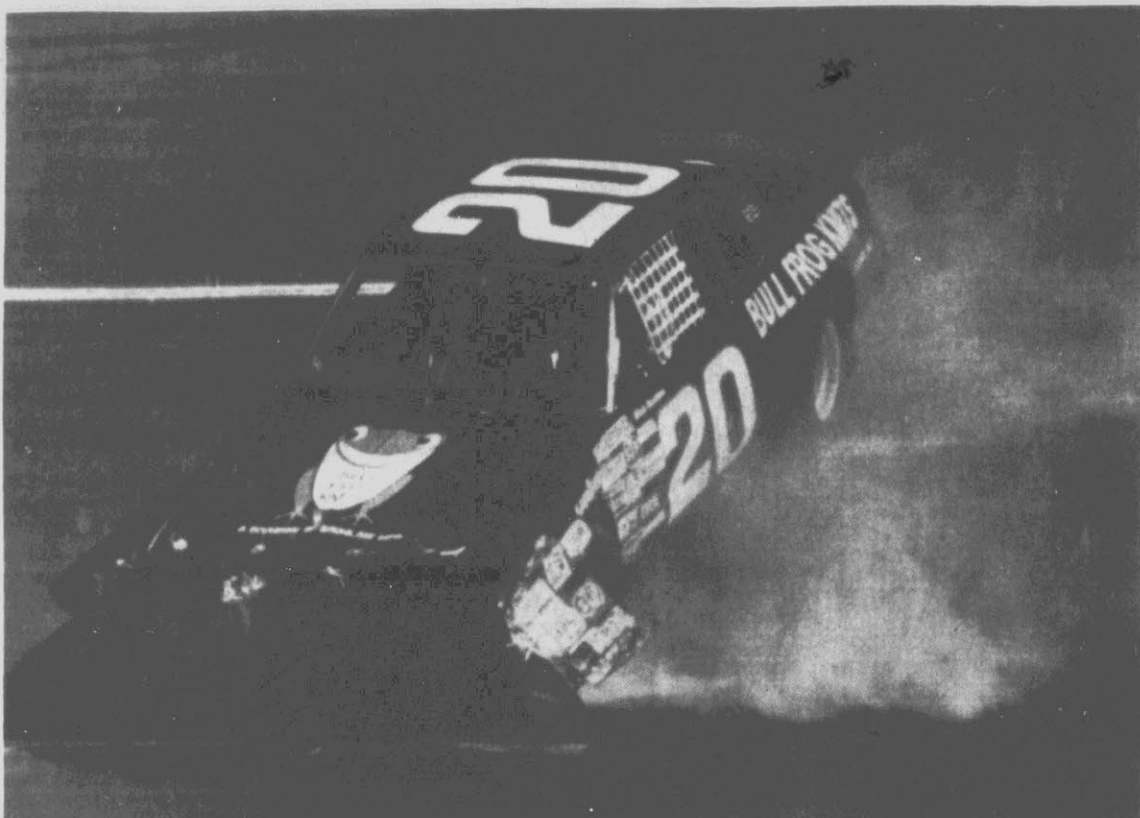

A vote on Kuhn's re-election was on the agenda for baseball's summer meetings last August in San Diego. Opposition to Kuhn had begun to form six months earlier, in the winter meetings of 1981, and the alignment against Kuhn then remains basically the same now, with two exceptions. Baltimore and San Diego, which had opposed Kuhn last December, have become backers of the commissioner.

However, opposition to the commissioner still was strong enough last August to force the Kuhn camp to delay, through parliamentary maneuvering, a re-election vote until now. While today's vote was expected by most observers to be rather quick — if not painless for the commissioner — several owners are agreed that the issue may linger.

While asking not to be quoted, one owner said that if a complex compromise solution were reached, it might take until next December's winter meeting in Honolulu before details could be smoothed over and a vote taken on Kuhn's re-election.

The two leagues were scheduled to meet separately this morning (11 a.m. CST) with the AL and NL meeting jointly in the afternoon (2:30 p.m. CST).

Allison Error Gives Waltrip 500 Victory

ROCKINGHAM (AP) — Darrell Waltrip couldn't believe his eyes.

Just 41 laps from the end of Sunday's grueling Warner Hodgdon American 500 Grand National stock car race, Waltrip sped into the first turn at North Carolina Motor Speedway and spotted chief competitor Bobby Allison's car against the guardrail along the end of the pit exit road.

"It nearly blew my mind when I saw that," Waltrip said, his eyes widening at the memory. "I believe he knew he would have been behind me when he came out (on the track) and maybe he pushed it a little too hard."

"I don't know for sure. I just came around and saw him spinning through a cloud of dust. It was incredible. I expected him to be there at the end."

Allison still tried to be there at the end of the 492-lap race on the speedway's 1.017-mile banked oval. But the best he could do was a second-place finish, driving his Chevrolet Monte Carlo across the line 9.5 seconds behind Waltrip's Buick Regal.

"I had the best car, the best engine, the best everything... then I spin the car coming off pit road and it costs us the race," Allison lamented. "I made a mistake. I can't believe it happened like that."

Allison, whose car appeared to be the strongest all day, led five times for a race-leading total of 127 laps. Waltrip, who ran a patient race and just tried to keep the leaders in sight until the last 50 laps, led four times for just 49 laps — including the last 36.

By virtue of leading at least one lap and winning the race, Waltrip came up with 180 championship points in the race. However, Allison got five-point bonuses for leading a lap and leading the most laps, so he too wound up with 180, leaving him still 37 points behind Waltrip.

But, now, there are just two races left on the schedule, next week at Atlanta and Nov. 21 at Riverside, Calif.

"I'm right where I was last year," said Waltrip, who actually was 68 points ahead of Allison after beating the latter in a one-two finish here a year ago. "I was hoping we wouldn't have to go through this again."

Waltrip wrapped up his first Winston Cup championship a year ago by finishing second at Atlanta and sixth at Riverside.

"It's really tough," Waltrip explained. "Nobody can appreciate the situation Bobby and I are in. It's really hard. You're sitting here biting your fingernails and hoping nothing goes wrong, and they're over there biting their fingernails and hoping the same thing."

The 35-year-old resident of Franklin, Tenn., continued his late-season hot streak, winning for the fourth time in the last five races and equaling his 1981 total of 12 victories.

Nobody has won more than that since 1975 when Richard Petty came up with 13 victories.

Waltrip averaged 115.122 mph as he won first-place money of $26,610.

Neil Bonnett was third in a Ford Thunderbird, followed by Terry Labonte and Morgan Shepherd, both in Buicks and

Triumph Dream Come True For Rookie Sutton

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — Hal Sutton achieved a goal and fulfilled a dream with his playoff victory in the Walt Disney World Classic, the final event on the 10-month PGA Tour schedule.

"It's a dream come true for me," Sutton said after he'd closed out his record-setting rookie season Sunday with a win.

"I'd never even dreamed of anything like this," said Bill Britton, the third-year pro who was the victim of Sutton's winning 15-foot birdie putt on the fourth hole of sudden death. Britton, who gained his playoff berth with a closing round of 64 — 8-under-par — had never come close to winning a tournament.

"I'd like to have won, but I'm tickled to death to do what I did. I played well. I didn't give anything away."

John Fought, Tony Cerda and Larry Mize achieved some goals, too. They had held positions 127, 132 and 152 on the money-winning list coming into this final event of the year.

And they played well enough to move into the top 125, the cutoff figure for inclusion in next year's all-exempt tour. Mize made the biggest jump, shooting a closing 67 for a 275 and a tie for 11th, worth $9,200, just enough to get him in.

NFL Owners Studying Union's Latest Demand

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Football League Management Council's executive committee was studying the striking union's latest contract demand, a three-year, $1.1-billion package. Even without seeing it, though, one of the owners already hates it.

"They're not going to get three years," the owners' executive committee member said of the union plan. "If they think they're going to get it, they're crazy!"

The Management Council, the owners' bargaining unit, formally offered its $1.2-billion package Sunday afternoon. On Sunday night, the union countered with its plan — and a council executive committee member countered with his comments. "They'd better take this, or something close to it," he said of the owners' offer, "or we can all go home."

The owners' negotiators spent 45 minutes discussing the proposal with union bargainers, then talks were recessed for the night.

The 42-day-old strike has claimed six regular-season weekends.

One of the player representatives assembled here at the union's behest said it could be the last weekend to bite the dust. "The settlement is reality by Wednesday, and possibly we're playing by Sunday."

If they're back on the field Nov. 7, they'll meet the NFL's unofficial deadline for saving the season.

Under the union plan, which would cover 1982-84, 80 percent of the $1.1 billion would be, in effect, placed into a central fund, administered by the union and used for salaries, incentive bonuses, pension benefits and other player-related expenses. The remaining 20 percent would go into an owners' discretionary fund, to be used for signing bonuses, free-agent acquisitions, etc.

The union package would be worth $320 million this year, with $93 million going for immediate across-the-board wage increases: $380 million in 1983 and $400 million in 1984.

The management proposal leaves this year open because the owners have yet to add up their losses. It would be worth $240 million in 1983, $260 million in 1984, $280 million in 1985 and $500 million in 1986. Seventy-five percent of the $1.2 billion would be guaranteed by the owners with $480 million of the total package to be collectively bargained and distributed by the union.

In the agreement, which expired last July 15, the collectively bargained items such as pensions and other benefits amounted to about 17 percent.

Lindley Takes Card 500

MARTINSVILLE, Va. (AP) — Butch Lindley said he knew if he could keep Sam Ard in sight, "we would have a chance" in the 250-lap Late Model Sportsman race that wound up the $111,150 Cardinal 500 Classic.

"We've found that, for some reason, this car runs better late in a race," the Pontiac driver from Greenville, S.C., said Sunday after he won the race by a lap. "That was the key. At the end of the race, I could run anywhere I wanted."

In the first half of the double-header, the 250-lap Modified race marred by a fiery crash that injured two drivers, George Kent of Horseheads, N.Y., went in front on the 168th lap and held off national champion Richie Evans of Rome, N.Y.

The union says the owners' latest offer, the first by management since Sept. 8, fails to address three of the union's five previously delineated "essential" demands — protection for veterans, the union's right to collectively bargain for incentive bonuses and a percentage of the league's television revenues.

The average pay for rookies when the fractured 1982 season began was $58,000 and the average salary of a 10-year player was $171,000.

Under the owners' proposal, the rookie minimum for the 1982, '83 and '84 seasons would be $30,000. In 1985 and '86 it would rise to $40,000. Similarly, a 10-year veteran's minimum in the first three years of the owners' agreement would be $120,000 and the next two seasons it would be $130,000.

The union objects to those numbers, saying they're too low and would affect only six percent of the league's 1,500 players.

Angry Sheriff Reportedly Detained Refs After Game

STUART, Va. (AP) — An incident in which Patrick County Sheriff Jesse Williams allegedly detained four officials after a football game in which the referee removed the sheriff from his post as a sideline official is under investigation by the Virginia High School League.

State officials are probing an allegation by the referee, Everett Fitzgerald of Roanoke, that someone scratched profanity on his car during the Oct. 9 game between Patrick County and Dan River high schools. He said it would cost $300 to $400 to have his car repainted.

Williams declined comment and would neither confirm nor deny stopping the game officials.

"I haven't harassed anybody," Williams said to questions concerning whether he had detained Fitzgerald.

Fitzgerald said he could not go into details about the events, but Harry Bushkar Jr., the district high school officials commissioner received a report from the four game officials.

Early in the game, a man helping carry the yard and down marker chains was

N.C. State's McIntosh Spells Relief M-i-l-l-e-r

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

Much to his relief, defending Atlantic Coast Conference rushing champion Joe McIntosh discovered Saturday that North Carolina State's offense can get along without him just fine.

McIntosh went out with an ankle injury in the first quarter of Saturday's game with South Carolina. While he spent the rest of the afternoon healing, freshman substitute Michael Miller ran for 158 yards on 23 carries and three touchdowns in a 33-3 victory.

Willie Joyner proved that Maryland can run the football, much to the chagrin of 10th-ranked North Carolina. The former Tar Heel resident rushed for a school-record 240 yards and two fourth-quarter touchdowns of 49 and 84 yards as the Terrapins downed the Tar Heels 31-24 and took sole possession of first place in the conference title race.

Antonio Rice had his second straight 100-yard plus rushing day as Virginia, in its second week of the wing-T offense, won its second straight game by a 37-6 margin over Virginia Military Institute.

Mike Grayson, the only running back in a newly devised formation, gained a season-high 173 yards and scored a touchdown as Duke snapped a four-game slump and whipped Georgia Tech 38-21.

No. 15 Clemson and Wake Forest had the weekend off. The Tigers tangle with the Tar Heels in Death Valley next Saturday while the Demon-Deacons meet Duke in what some expect to be an aerial circus.

"People have been saying that all State has is Joe McIntosh," the sophomore running back said. "But Mike showed he's a great running back and proved he can run against anyone."

Miller came in at 4:19 of the first quarter and promptly ripped off a 42-yard run. Two plays later, he scored on a 3-yard run.

He will likely return to his backup role next week as the 5-3 Wolfpack take on No. 8 Penn State, but Miller isn't worried about it.

"No, I'm never a man in the shadows. We play as a team," said Miller. "Am I going to get more playing time now or beat Joe out? I don't know. We'll have to let the season take care of itself."

The victory also provided Wolfpack Coach Monte Kiffin, in the last year of his three-year contract, with a moment of relief.

"This one meant a lot to us," he said. "It's tough coming off the frustrating losses we've had, but it's not like last year no more."

Joyner's performance was 18 yards shy of the aggregate total allowed by the North Carolina defense in six previous games and broke the record of 237 yards by George Scott against Villanova in 1977. Also, Maryland's 486 offensive yards were more than half the total yielded by the Tar Heel defense this season.

The Terrapins, atop the ACC with a 4-0 record and a 6-2 mark overall, meet No. 16 Miami, Fla., next week.

"We looked at their scheme on defense and we just felt like we could block it," said Maryland's shower-soaked coach Bobby Ross. "Our offensive linemen told us we could run the ball, so the second half we just decided to go out there and hammer it out."

Joyner used to live with his grandfather in Snow Hill, N.C. He later moved to Brooklyn, N.Y., but returned this weekend and made his folks proud.

"I thought we could run against them but I didn't have any idea I could get 240 yards," said Joyner.

While Kelvin Bryant scored two touchdowns on passes from Rod Elkins and rushed for 130 yards on 34 carries, the Tar Heels fell to 5-2 and 2-1. Bryant's defensive teammates were trying to overcome the shock.

Britain, American Ready For Hagler

SAN REMO, Italy (AP) — Tony Sibson of Britain and American Frank Fletcher are lining up for a middleweight title shot against undisputed champion Marvin Hagler.

The champion's manager, Pat Petronelli, said on Italian television Sunday that Hagler will be glad to meet Sibson in the ring "if we get a very good purse."

Hagler, who knocked out Venezuelan Fulgencio Obelmejias in the fifth round of his fifth title defense here Sunday, is scheduled to defend his crown against the 24-year-old Sibson within a few months unless a defense against Fletcher is arranged in advance.

"I am ready to fight Marvin when and where he likes," said Sibson, who traveled to this Italian Riviera resort to watch the Hagler-Obelmejias title fight at the Ariston Theater.

The British boxer, who left his European title vacant to pursue a world title, said he was impressed with Hagler's boxing.

"But I am sure I can do much better than Obel. I am faster and more powerful," he said.

Hagler said he would like to fight Sibson in San Remo or in nearby Monte Carlo, Monaco "because I like the Riviera very much."

He said he planned a two-week vacation in this area along with his wife.

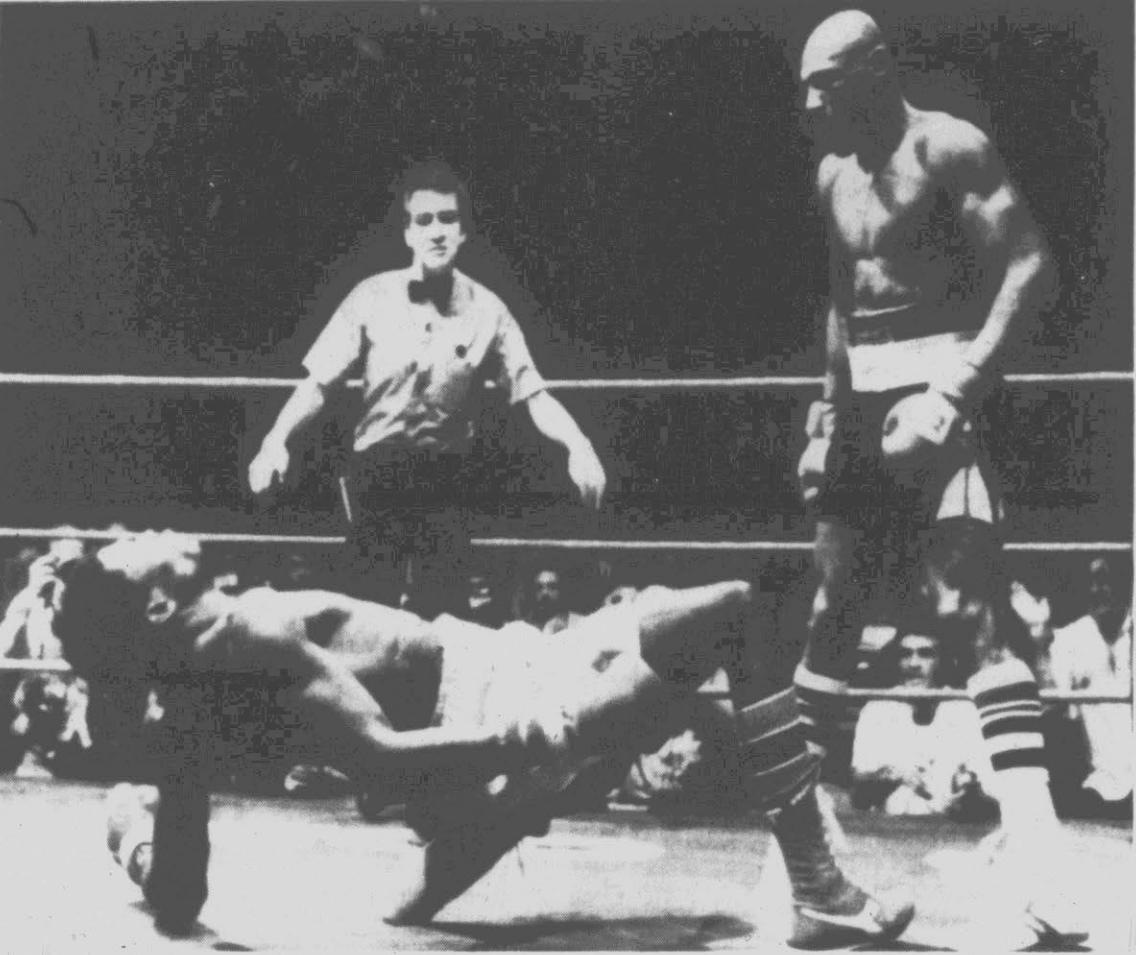

Hagler said he wanted to stay in boxing for four more years. He is undefeated since March 1976 when he lost the second match of his career on points to Willie Monroe.

He won the title in September 1980 from Britain's Alan Minter.

Meanwhile, hard-hitting Argentine Juan Domingo Roldan claimed Hagler has been avoiding him for more than a year.

"He fears my powerful punches but he will be soon forced to fight me, and he will lose the title," the 25-year-old native of Freire said here.

Roldan, ranked second in the World Boxing Association standings and fifth in the World Boxing Council, scored a quick first-round knockout victory against underdog American Reggie Ford in a middleweight match held in advance of the title bout between Hagler and Obelmejias.

Farfour Wins TRW Men's Singles Title

Allen Farfour defeated Dan Weant in a three-set match to win the men's single title of the TRW tennis Open here Sunday at the River Birch Tennis Center.

All matches except the mixed doubles were completed in the TRW tournament. The mixed doubles match was postponed because of darkness.

In the men's doubles finals, Cole King and Ted Lepper of East Carolina, who defeated Weant and Randy Bailey when Weant had to retire after an injury.

In the women's singles title match, East Carolina's Katherine Tolson upset top-seeded Joan Smith.

Smith, however, then teamed with Janet Russell of East Carolina to win the doubles title over Frances Cain and Barbara Close.

Smith and Jimmy Shackelford advanced to the mixed doubles finals, defeating Keith Zengel and Debbie Christine in a tough three-set match.

Smith and Shackelford will meet King and Tolson, who beat Cecil Morton and Leigh Shephard in another three-set match.

Shackelford upheld his No. 1 seeding with a victory over Jim Hobgood, the No. 2 seed, in the men's 35 and over singles title. Hobgood defeated Bailey to advance to the finals.

A number of consolation titles were also decided Sunday:

- Third-seeded Tommy Wilcox of Kinston defeated Bill Anderson in the men's consolation finals.
- Billy Hester and Tom Battle downed Ben Johnson and Bobby Short in the men's doubles consolation finals.
- Janice Rich defeated Terry Walker in the women's consolation singles finals. Both women are from Washington.
- Nancy Powell and Myra Hill downed Jean Coleman and Carlie Wille in the women's consolation doubles finals.
- Nelson Staton defeated Al King in the men's 35 singles consolation final.

warned about showing partisanship toward the Patrick County team. He made disparaging comments to the game officials during the first quarter, so he was asked to turn the chain over to someone else, the report said.

It said after the man was removed, one of the referees was told the man was Williams, who has a son who plays for Patrick County, located in Stuart about 50 miles south of Roanoke.

After the game, Fitzgerald and the other officials found Fitzgerald's car had been scratched and defaced with profanity.

On the return trip to Roanoke, Fitzgerald and the other three officials, riding in his car, were pulled over by a car while still in Patrick County. The report said the car, which had flashing red lights, had been following the Fitzgerald vehicle since it left Stuart.

According to the report, the man who stopped Fitzgerald was the same man Fitzgerald had removed from the chain crew. He identified himself as Sheriff Williams, but was not in uniform, the report said.

Fitzgerald was not issued a traffic ticket, but the man reportedly detained Fitzgerald and talked to him for 20 to 30 minutes.

"If certain things ... aren't forthcoming," Fitzgerald said he and the three other officials may take legal action. He said he was seeking an apology, but he didn't know whether an apology from Williams would be enough to satisfy him.

Fitzgerald said he has officiated state high school sports events 14 years and has called games in Patrick County before without any problems.

Walton, Cowens Back In The NBA

By The Associated Press

Bill Walton and Dave Cowens know the larger-than-life aura that surrounds the star athlete, the taste of champagne that goes with championships. But each played his first professional basketball game in more than two seasons this weekend thinking of smaller things.

Walton, who turns 30 next Friday, had the more inspiring debut statistically, scoring 20 points and pulling down nine rebounds Friday night as his San Diego Clippers lost to Phoenix 113-99. Afterwards, he said he was thrilled simply to be playing.

"It's as exciting as hell," he said. "It feels good just to come in and run. It's a very exciting time for me, one that I am enjoying. Losing that game is not that much fun, but I'm happy, very happy."

Cowens, who retired in 1980 after nine years with the Boston Celtics, started at power forward Saturday night for the Milwaukee Bucks, coached by his old friend and teammate, Don Nelson. He played 20 minutes, scoring eight points on three out of five from the floor and adding three rebounds and two assists as the Bucks trounced the New York Knicks 108-86. Afterwards, he was characteristically more subdued than Walton.

"I played okay, nothing special," he said. "It's going to be a matter of me getting accustomed to playing again against some of these guys."

To some extent, the biggest burden on the two readheads comes from the National Basketball Association as a whole, two-thirds of whose teams were reported to have lost money last year.

Cowens and Walton, two identifiable white stars in a predominantly black league, are gate attractions almost everywhere.

More of that pressure will fall on Walton, still babying the foot and ankle that kept him idle most of the past five years. He will limit his appearances to a game a week for the time being, yet is still expected to draw fans to see a faceless team picked to finish last in its division.

Despite his presence, however, only 5,063 fans showed up in San Diego Friday night. What they saw was a Walton several levels below the Walton who led Portland to the NBA title in 1977.

"He's not the same defensive force he was back in Portland, when he was dominant inside," said Lionel Hollins, Walton's teammate then and now. "But I think he'll get back there."

For Walton, the high point came after the Clippers rallied from an 18-point deficit to tie the score at 77-all late in the third quarter. "It's what you play for," he said. "Those moments when the crowd is screaming and everything out there is going to perfection."

Cowens, who celebrated his 34th birthday a week ago, has a lesser burden. He will be a role player for the Bucks, a team expected to contend for the NBA title. His main tasks will be rebounding, defense and serving as a physical presence alongside stars like Marques Johnson and Sidney Moncrief.

Of Cowens' first effort, Coach Nelson said: "I thought Dave played a strong game. He's not going to get the stats of some guys, but I don't care. I just wanted him to go out there and mix it up for us, which is what he did."

Added Moncrief: "He has a very good feel for the game. Most players would have trouble coming back from a two-year layoff, but not him with his attitude and desire."

Cowens said he was happy at forward rather than center, where he played most of his years with the Celtics. "I just think I'll fit in here really well, since this is such a good, experienced team," he said.

"The real test both for me and this team will come in these next few weeks because we play so much early in November."

He added: "Overall, I'm happy with my shape so far, but I don't care that much as long as we win."

Sutton Wins Disney...

Gavin Levenson, George Cadle and Ed Dougherty dropped out of the top 125 and now must attempt to regain their playing rights through the PGA Tour's annual school, or drop off the tour.

Sutton, a former national amateur champion, said he had set three goals for himself this season. "I wanted to break (Jerry) Pate's money-winning record, get a place in the top 30 (money-winners), and win a tournament," he said.

Two of them had been nailed down the week before, when he blew a last-round lead and finished second — his third runner-up spot of the year — in the Pensacola Open, assuring him of a place in the top 30 money-winners and putting him beyond Pate's record of $153,000 in winnings by a rookie.

Sutton's victory Sunday, which he called "the biggest thrill of my life," was worth $72,000 from the total purse of $400,000 and pushed his earnings to $237,434.

Sutton reached the playoff by making a 15-foot putt on the 72nd hole, finishing off a closing round of 67, which brought him from five shots off the pace, for a 269 total, 19 strokes under par.

Britton won $43,200, more than doubling his winnings for the year.

Jay Haas, who led or shared the lead through the first three rounds, blew a 5-shot lead and finished third, one shot out of the playoff, at 73-270.

He was followed by Don Pooley at 66-271. Larry Nelson, who once held a share of the lead, and Howard Twitty were at 273. Nelson had a last-round 71, Twitty 70.

Rangers Next Manager: Rader

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Doug Rader, the San Diego Padres' minor league manager at Hawaii and a former big league third baseman, was expected to be named the Texas Rangers' 12th manager in the last 12 years.

The Rangers called a press conference for today at which General Manager Joe Klein was to make formal announcement.

Rader and Chicago White Sox third base coach Jim Leyland had been the two finalists in Klein's search for someone to slap some life into a team that lost 98 games last year in the American League West.

Burt Hawkins, long-time Rangers public relations man, called to announce the press conference adding, "It ain't no secret who it is."

Rader was booked on an Eastern Airlines flight this morning from West Palm Beach, Fla.

Rader told the Dallas Morning News with a laugh,

"I'm going to Dallas to see my aunt."

Known as "The Rooster" during his playing days, which included nine years with the Houston Astros, Rader will replace interim manager Darrell Johnson.

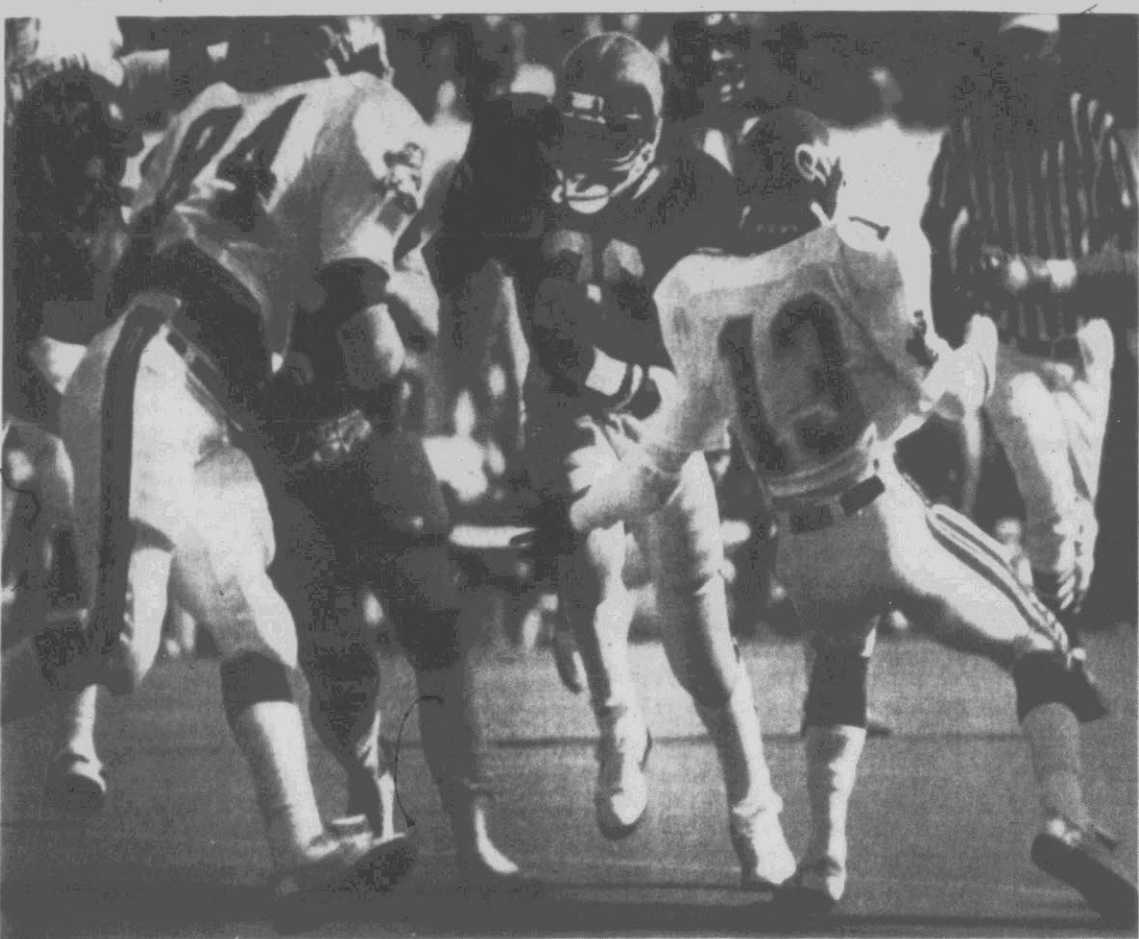

Johnson assumed the Rangers' reins when Don Zimmer was fired in July after a house-cleaning by owner Eddie Chiles that included General Manager Eddie Robinson.

Rader, who had 155 home runs and was known as a slick fielder during his 11 years in the big leagues, has the ability to motivate people, which Klein likes.

Rader was 221-201 in three years with Hawaii in the Pacific Coast League.

He also had something of a reputation as a "good-time Charley" during his playing days.

"I'm not going to apologize for having a good time while I played baseball," he said. "There's nothing wrong with being relaxed if you produce."

Hamilton, Adams, Long Get Honors

East Carolina University defensive tackle Steve Hamilton has been named the Defensive Player of the Week and flanker Stefan Adams and offensive guard Terry Long shared Offensive Player of the Week honors.

The selections were announced this morning after the East Carolina coaching staff viewed films of ECU's 30-3 loss to eighteenth-ranked West Virginia this past Saturday.

Hamilton, a 6-4, 236-pound junior from Williamsville, N.Y., was in on seven tackles — three solo, two primary and two assists. He also had one quarterback sack for minus 10 yards.

Adams, a 5-10, 183-pound sophomore from High Point, caught three passes for 53 yards.

Long, a 6-0, 279-pound junior from Columbia, S.C., graded out 100 percent on assignments and 78 percent on technique.

Punter Jeff Bolch was named the Speciality Team Player of the Week. Bolch, a 5-11, 178-pound sophomore from Hickory, punted the ball six times for a 41.8 average Saturday.

East Carolina, now 4-4 on the season, returns to action this Saturday when the Pirates travel to Texas-Arlington.

Texas-Arlington, a member of the Southland Conference, comes into the game with a 2-6-0 record and has scored 173 points but given up 235.

Texas-Arlington lost to McNeese State this past weekend, 38-12. Texas-Arl. is winless in the conference in three games. Louisiana Tech leads the league with a 4-0 mark.

The only other meeting between ECU and Texas-Arlington was in 1978 when the Pirates won, 23-17.

ECU follows its trip to Texas-Arlington with road games against William & Mary and Temple.

McDonald Wins N-S Tournery

PINEHURST (AP) — Brown McDonald of Warner Robins, Ga., built up an early lead Saturday and went on to defeat Loyal Chapman of Minneapolis 2 and 1 to win the 31st annual Men's North and South Senior Invitational Tournament.

Playing on the famed No. 2 Course at the Pinehurst Country Club, both Chapman and McDonald had their problems on the front nine. Leading 4-up, McDonald ran into trouble by driving the ball into the rough on the 10th hole, but managed to save par.

Women Protest Dailey's Appearance In Chicago

CHICAGO (AP) — The first hometown appearance of Chicago Bulls' rookie Quintin Dailey ignited protests by two women's groups who demanded that Dailey undergo counseling for his assault on a California nursing student.

The National Organization for Women mounted more than 100 pickets in front of the National Basketball Association team's downtown offices Saturday. Later, 24 pickets from the Take Back the Night Coalition, an anti-rape group, marched outside the Chicago Stadium before the start of the Bulls' home opener against the Washington Bullets.

Liz Nicholson, an official of both the Chicago and Illinois NOW organizations, said the groups object to Dailey's presence on the team "for as long as he continues to deny the seriousness of his crime."

Dailey was accused of sexually assaulting the woman student in her dormitory room while both were students at the University of San Francisco last year. He later pleaded guilty to a reduced charge of felony aggravated assault and was sentenced to three years' probation.

NOW wants Dailey to agree to rehabilitative counseling, for Bulls management to state publicly that it considers crimes against women to be a serious matter, and for the club to give "tangible support" to the victims of such crimes, Nicholson said.

Cleveland Losing Streak Now At 21

By The Associated Press
The Cleveland Cavaliers have started this National Basketball Association season the way they ended last season — losing.

The Cavaliers were beaten Sunday night by the Milwaukee Bucks 119-95, their 21st straight loss, tying an unofficial NBA record for consecutive losses over two seasons. The Detroit Pistons lost 14 games ending the 1979-80 season and seven more starting the 1980-81 campaign.

Tom Nissalke, who took over as Cavaliers' coach a week before the season opened, said he was not concerned about the losing streak, which includes two games this season and 19 last season.

"That was last year," he said. "But I can see how the team lost a lot of games. It isn't going to be easy, but we're going to be a respectable ballclub. They all need a tremendous amount of individual coaching. I knew that when I came here."

Meanwhile, the Bucks, led by rookie Paul Pressey, looked like world beaters to Nissalke.

"Their second five could be a playoff team, let alone their first five," said Nissalke. "You're not going to beat a team like that unless you just play great basketball."

Pressey and Junior Bridgeman played some terrific basketball against Cleveland, scoring 23 points each. Cliff Robinson led the Cavs with 18.

Pressey, Milwaukee's top draft pick, has been known as a defensive demon, which is what Bucks Coach Don Nelson is looking for from the 6-foot-5 guard.

"The one thing he'll always give you is defense," Nelson said. "You'll always get one end, and normally two ends."

"I think the coach was a little surprised at some of the things I could do," admitted Pressey. "I don't think he thought I could come in and do so much so fast."

SuperSonics 127, Clippers 109
Seattle pulled away in the opening half by hitting 68.2 percent from the field, with David Thompson scoring 17 of his team-leading 25 points. Gus Williams added 13 of his 23 points in the first half.

Jerome Whitehead, subbing for Bill Walton — who is limited to playing one game a week because of recurring foot problems and did not appear against Seattle — scored 29 points and added 13 rebounds. Tom Chambers had 27 points and 11 rebounds.

"I'm glad to be with a good team now," said Thompson, whose star steadily declined while he was with the Nuggets, who dealt him to the Sonics in the off-season. "I always have been confident about my abilities."

"I didn't have enough big people," said Clippers Coach Paul Silas. "When you have a Walton, he can block the middle."

Pistons 118, Pacers 115
Kelly Tripucka scored 12 of his 37 points in the fourth quarter to help Detroit hold off Indiana in the closing minutes.

The Pistons trailed 89-84 going into the final period, but six points by Tripucka and three by John Long, who scored 27 in the game, at the beginning of the fourth quarter put Detroit on top to stay.

The Pacers trailed 114-106 with 3:50 to go, but rallied to cut the deficit to 115-114 and had the ball with 10 seconds left. But a desperation shot by George Johnson missed and the Pistons' Bill Laimbeer hit two free throws with one second remaining to provide the final margin.

Johnson and rookie Clark Kellogg led the Pacers with 23 and 22 points, respectively.

Nuggets 114, Suns 110

Alex English scored eight points in the final six minutes and Denver outscored Phoenix 20-7 down the stretch. Phoenix led 94-91 with nine minutes to play but then English rallied Denver with four critical baskets which helped give the Nuggets the lead they never lost.

English led Denver with 25 points, Kiki Vandeweghe added 24 and Dan Issel 23.

Maurice Lucas paced Phoenix with 19.

Halloween Candy-Tampering Reported By Police

By BETSY BROWN KRAFT
Associated Press Writer
The Halloween scares were for real this year as police in 24 states took more than 300 reports of apples and candy sabotaged with pins, needles and razor blades. A "trick or treat" robber shot and killed an elderly Iowa man and one woman swallowed a 1½-inch needle. Only a few people, however, were reported injured Sunday night. Many parents either kept children at home, took them to parties, distributed balloons and money instead of candy, or got the goodies X-rayed at local hospitals.

The caution stemmed from the nationwide wave of product tampering and contamination that followed seven deaths from cyanide-laced Tylenol in Chicago a month ago.

"There just aren't as many kids out there this year," said police Sgt. Fred Schmidt in Schaumburg, Ill., where one of the contaminated bottles of Tylenol was discovered.

"It's like a ghost town out there," echoed Berwyn, Ill., officer Lance Rubinger.

However, a 13-year-old boy was hospitalized in Columbus, Ohio, for "questionable hallucinations and inappropriate behavior" Sunday night after eating candy, a Children's Hospital spokeswoman said.

And 16 people were taken to hospitals in Somerdale, N.J., after eating candy apparently laced with drugs at a kindergarten party. One 5-year-old girl remained hospitalized late Sunday.

In Indianapolis, a woman bit into an apple and swallowed a 1½-inch needle, but hospital officials decided not to operate. Dorsela Jones, 28, will probably "just pass it normally," a Community Hospital emergency room nurse said Sunday night.

"This is sickening," said Vernon Curnette, of Grove City, Ohio, after finding a 2-inch needle in a candy bar his 10-year-old daughter received.

Police in 24 states said they received a total of more than 300 calls of needles, pins or razor blades in Halloween treats over the weekend, according to an unofficial count by The Associated Press.

Police were unable to confirm all the incidents, and disproved a few. One 12-year-old south Philadelphia boy was accused of putting a razor blade in a candy bar and then claiming he found it that way.

A 69-year-old Iowa man was killed after answering his door Sunday night and being confronted by a man who said, "Trick or treat. Give me your money or I'll shoot."

Marvin Brandland of Fort Dodge, Iowa, was shot as he reached for the intruder's gun, police said. Police said they had no suspects.

Many parents found something else for the kids to do on Halloween night. In Texas, a carnival at a Dallas elementary school turned into a Halloween party.

Erica Caledon, 8, dressed as a cheerleader for the carnival, said she didn't mind forgoing trick-or-treating.

"I like it because I won't be dead," she said, smiling.

In Michigan, almost 500 children gathered for a trick-or-treating party at the Billie Holiday House Substance Abuse Treatment Center in Detroit.

In California, local churches and recreation centers reported seambursting attendance at Halloween parties.

"It's humongous," Barbara Anderson, recreation director at the Silverlake Recreation Center in Los Angeles, said of the party. "This is probably the biggest one we've ever had."

At hospitals in cities including Houston, St. Louis, and Sioux City, Iowa, technicians used X-ray machines to check candy for metal objects.

"We're still going strong," said Michael Carron of Christian Northeast Hospital in St. Louis at 10:30 p.m. Sunday. No objects had been found there or at Northwest Community Hospital in Des Moines, Iowa, where 700 people showed up with bags of candy.

"This year has been absolutely unbelievable," said Elmer McClung of Pittsburgh, coordinator of a network of candy clearinghouses that examine candy in Allegheny County.

"We've had candy bars with metal objects tucked inside them, glue, cat food. One child got a little trick-or-treat bag with three razor blades in the bottom," McClung said.

The children who did venture out, dressed as E.T., Annie and Strawberry Shortcake, often found themselves with bags of coins, balloons, marbles, keychains and even bandages.

"I'm afraid to give out candy," said Paul Indianer of Florida's Dade County. The U.S. Food and Drug Administration said Thursday it had received 270 reports of possible product tampering and 36 "hard-core cases."

Some Halloween celebrations were filled with a good kind of fear—make-believe.

In New York City's Greenwich Village, a crowd estimated at 100,000 gathered Sunday night to watch a parade of revelers dressed as goblins, ghouls, ghosts, tap-dancing skeletons and even a 12-foot-high scarecrow and 101 people dressed as Dalmatians.

In Baltimore, about 175 costumed people paid nocturnal visits to the grave of Edgar Allan Poe, leaving pumpkins and singing an Irish funeral song.

John Dean Opines Haig Probable 'Deep Throat'

NEW YORK (AP) — Former White House Counsel John Dean says Alexander M. Haig Jr. has to be the "Deep Throat" of Watergate fame, but the former secretary of state dismisses the notion as "absurd."

Haig on Sunday denied being the mysterious source of many explosive Washington Post stories about the scandal that toppled President Nixon.

But Dean, in his new book, alleges that Haig was among the few people who knew enough about the inner machinations of the Nixon administration to provide reliable information, according to a story in the Nov. 9 issue of Time magazine.

Even Time questioned Dean's claim, in part because of "the inherent implausibility of the ultra-dignified and instantly recognizable Haig skulking around Washington garages undetected at 2 a.m."

"Deep Throat" is the name Post reporter Bob Woodward gave to a source he met at odd hours in unorthodox places in 1972 to receive or have confirmed information for stories about the Watergate scandal which eventually led to the resignation of former President Richard Nixon.

Woodward, now an assistant managing editor at The Post, has never revealed the identity of the source.

Dean's latest claim appears in his latest book, "Lost Honor," to be published this month by Harper & Row.

"This is the first I've heard about it," said Haig at his home in Bethesda, Md. "It's absurd and probably commercially motivated."

Woodward, who with fellow Post reporter Carl Bernstein wrote "All The President's Men," the story of their coverage of Watergate, declined to comment on Dean's supposition when reached at his Washington home Sunday.

"I just don't have anything to say about it," Woodward said, chuckling. "Thanks for calling."

Dean's book says Haig was one of only a handful of people who were in a position to know that White House tapes contained deliberate erasures. That information was supposedly supplied to

Woodward by "Deep Throat."

Time said others in a position to know were Nixon, his secretary, Rose Mary Woods, and White House aides Stephen Bull and the late J. Fred Buzhardt.

Dean said Haig, who was a No. 2 aide to Henry Kissinger at the National Security Council during the Nixon administration and later Nixon's chief of staff, had access to all the other information that "Deep Throat" fed or confirmed to Woodward.

Haig's resigned as secretary of state in the Reagan administration earlier this year.

It was Dean's third guess at the identity of "Deep Throat."

Dean said in a speech in Natchitoches, La., on April 30, 1975, that the secret source was Earl J. Silbert, one of the original Watergate prosecutors and later U.S. Attorney for the District of Columbia. Silbert's response to the claim was laughter.

In 1976, Dean said he believed "Deep Throat" was Nixon speechwriter David Gergen, according to Taylor Branch, who helped Dean write "Blind Ambition." But Branch said Dean was not absolutely sure and left the name out of the book.

Gergen, now President Reagan's assistant for communications, has denied the claim.

In Los Angeles on March 1, 1978, Dean again claimed to have unmasked "Deep Throat" through a process of elimination, but he wouldn't say who it was.

Friday Wrecks Cause Damage

Three collisions investigated by Greenville police Friday resulted in an estimated $4,900 property damage.

Officers said heaviest damage resulted from a 6 a.m. mishap on Fifth Street, 75 feet west of the Oak Street intersection, involving a car driven by Cheri Bostic Fisher of 301 Greenville Blvd. and a parked car owned by Louise W. Taft Farm Account, 1705 East Fifth St.

Police who charged Ms. Fisher with driving under the influence, estimated damage at $1,500 to the Fisher car and $500 to the parked auto.

Both Ms. Fisher and a passenger in her vehicle were reported injured.

Cars driven by Robert Scott Bauer of 309B Scott Dorm, and Willie Montana Jones of 1813A Hopkins Drive, collided about 6:45 p.m. on Evans Street, one-tenth of a mile north of the 16th Street intersection, causing an estimated $1,100 damage to the Bauer car and $650 damage to the Jones vehicle.

An 8 a.m. collision on Arlington Boulevard, 500 feet east of the Hooker Road intersection, involved cars driven by Gloria Wilson Alford of 602 Clark St., and Willie James Taft of 509 Church St.

Police estimated damage from the collision at $400 to the Alford car and $800 to the Taft car.

Five Deaths Due Traffic

By The Associated Press
The state Highway Patrol says the deaths of five people in the state this weekend raised the year's highway toll to 1,045, compared to 1,240 during the same period in 1981.

The Patrol reported Sunday that a 14-year-old girl was one of the victims this weekend. She was identified as Wendy Ellen Hollowell of Plymouth, who died early Saturday in a single-vehicle accident on a rural road in Beaufort County. She was a passenger in a car that ran off a road near Washington, N.C. and struck a utility pole.

Ollie Dean Dillinger, 64, of Mount Holly, died Saturday when his car crossed the center line of N.C. 16 east of Lincoln and struck an oncoming vehicle.

Garnie Benjamin Hall, 75, of Swannanoa died Saturday when his car struck another car in the rear on U.S. 70 a mile east of Asheville.

Gary Allen Hicks, 31, of Whitakers, died Saturday when the car he was driving left an Edgecombe County highway and struck a ditch.

Russell Roscoe Forbes, 25, of Rocky Mount, also died in Edgecombe County Saturday morning when the car in which he was riding left N.C. 42 and turned over. Forbes and occupant were thrown out.

Couple Marry At Masquerade

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Bob Eberhart and Mary Holland went to a Halloween party masquerading as a bride and bridegroom. They went home as husband and wife.

"Mary's sister was having a costume party and we thought it would be fun to go as bride and groom," said Eberhart. "We've been together two years and everybody's always giving us trouble about getting married."

The couple decided not to tell their hosts — or the 30 goblins, witches, hobos and sheiks gathered — that a minister was coming to the party Saturday night to perform a wedding ceremony.

Only Ms. Holland's parents — disguised to hide their identity — were prepared for the big moment.

"We wanted something different," said Eberhart, 31. "This just fit the bill."

Personal Incomes Are Up In All But Three States

WASHINGTON (AP) — Total non-farm income rose faster than inflation in the second quarter of the year in all but three states, the Commerce Department says.

The department also reported Sunday that personal income rose 1.7 percent in the April-June quarter and 3.3 percent in North Carolina in that quarter.

The national increase was almost twice the rise of 0.9 percent in the previous quarter.

Inflation in the spring quarter increased 0.9 percent, as measured by Commerce's implicit price deflator for personal consumption spending. The price deflator is an alternative to the Consumer Price Index for measuring inflation.

The exceptions were in Montana, Kentucky and West Virginia, where income decreased partly because of declines in mining in those states, the report said.

Delaware led in second-quarter gains, with a 3.4 percent rise. The increase in North Carolina was 3.3 percent; in Michigan 3.1 percent; in Alabama 2.7 percent; and in Georgia 2.6 percent, the report said.

"Reflecting increases in the production of motor vehicles, lumber, furniture and textiles, these states had large increases in both durables and non-durables manufacturing wage and salary disbursements," it said.

The report said that "because farm income is subject to erratic changes, it is often preferable to use non-farm personal income to track current economic developments in regions and states."

—GREAT LAKES states up 2 percent to $458.2 billion.

—PLAINS states up 1.7 percent to $179.4 billion.

Arizona, up 1.5 percent to $28.5 billion; New Mexico, up 1.2 percent to $12 billion; Oklahoma, up 1.7 percent to $34.1 billion; Texas, up 1.8 percent to $169.3 billion.

Prices Lower At Supermarkets According To New Press Survey

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

October brought the third straight monthly decline in supermarket prices, according to an Associated Press survey which shows a drop of just under one-tenth of 1 percent.

Last month's decline meant that prices at the start of November were 3.9 percent higher than they were at the start of the year.

—Comparing today's prices with those 10 months earlier, the AP found that the marketbasket bill was up at the checklist store in 10 cities, rising an average of 5.6 percent. The bill was down in three cities, dropping an average of 1.7 percent. The overall increase since Jan. 1 has been 3.9 percent.

—Sugar declined in more cities during October than any other item. The price of a five-pound sack of sugar decreased in seven cities, increased in two and was unchanged in four.

—Special promotions meant lower meat prices for some shoppers. The price of a pound of chopped chuck, for example, was down at the checklist store in five cities. Weak consumer demand caused by the recession has kept meat prices relatively low, despite smaller supplies of livestock, and stores have been using sales on meat as a way to lure shoppers.

—The price of a dozen eggs dropped at the checklist store last month in six cities, rose in four cities and was unchanged in three cities. The decreases ranged from 4 percent in Albuquerque, N.M., to 17 percent in Seattle.

The drop was due mainly to lower prices for sugar, along with some decreases in the cost of meat and eggs. Overall, about half the items priced by the AP were unchanged last month, and increases and decreases among remaining items just about balanced each other out.

The AP survey is based on a randomly selected list of 14 commonly purchased food and non-food items. The items were priced at one supermarket in each of 13 cities on March 1, 1973, and have been repriced on or about the start of each succeeding month.

Among the highlights of the latest survey: —The marketbasket bill increased last month at the survey store in four cities, rising an average of 3 percent. The bill declined in nine cities, down an average of 1.4 percent. Overall, there was an average decrease of 0.07 percent in the marketbasket bills at the checklist stores.

—A look at the overall number of items in the AP survey showed about an equal number of increases and decreases. The AP also found slightly fewer increases in October than in September. Here are the percentages of increases and decreases:

The cities checked were: Albuquerque, Atlanta, Boston, Chicago, Dallas, Detroit, Los Angeles, Miami, New York, Philadelphia, Providence, R.I., Salt Lake City and Seattle.

During September, the marketbasket bill went up at the checklist store in six cities and down in seven cities, for an overall drop of 0.6 percent. Prices dropped by 0.01 percent in August.

—Sugar declined in more cities during October than any other item. The price of a five-pound sack of sugar decreased in seven cities, increased in two and was unchanged in four.

—Special promotions meant lower meat prices for some shoppers. The price of a pound of chopped chuck, for example, was down at the checklist store in five cities. Weak consumer demand caused by the recession has kept meat prices relatively low, despite smaller supplies of livestock, and stores have been using sales on meat as a way to lure shoppers.

Purse Stolen From Vehicle

Chief Glenn Cannon said police are continuing their investigation of the theft of a purse from a car parked at the Pirates' Chest on Greenville Boulevard about 9:20 p.m. Friday.

Cannon said Vickie F. Tedder of 121 Martinsborough Road told officers she was coming out of the store when she saw a man run from her car with her pocketbook.

The chief said Ms. Tedder started to chase the robber but decided to call the police instead.

About $50 in cash was inside the purse.

Actress Is Said Victim Of Strangling Attempt

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Dominique Dunne, who played the older daughter in the horror film "Poltergeist," was in a coma today after being choked by an ex-boyfriend who wanted to live with her, authorities said.

Doctors feared that Ms. Dunne, 22, may have suffered brain damage in the attack late Saturday. The dark-haired actress clung to life in the intensive care unit at Cedars Sinai Medical Center, breathing with the aid of a respirator, spokeswoman Tess Griffin said.

Tests for brain damage were not complete, said Ms. Griffin.

John Sweeney, the actress's former boyfriend, was behind bars at the Los Angeles County jail for investigation of attempted murder, sheriff's Deputy Ralph Martin said. He was arrested and ordered held without bail after questioning by deputies who responded to reports of a domestic dispute outside Ms. Dunne's West Hollywood home about 9:45 p.m. Saturday.

When officers arrived, they found the young woman lying in the driveway with Sweeney standing nearby. "I killed my girlfriend," Martin quoted Sweeney as saying.

'Mrs. Elvis' In Her Film Debut

NEW YORK (AP) — Priscilla Beaulieu Presley, once known as Mrs. Elvis, is starting a career of her own and says she is "willing to challenge the world now."

The ex-wife of the late rock 'n' roll star is making her film debut as a scuba diver in "Comeback," starring actor Michael Landon.

She stole some scenes during filming when she went underwater with real sharks while Landon used a double, according to the Nov. 8 issue of People magazine.

Emerging from waters off New Providence Island opposite Nassau, she said she didn't get the role because of her last name.

"The name can be a hindrance and a help," Mrs. Presley, 37, said. "But it's been more of a detriment. It's not the name that gets you work."

"Comeback" is to be broadcast on NBC in February and shown in theaters overseas.

Presley died five years ago of heart failure.

RADIO GUESTS
City Manager Gail Meeks announced that the guests on the "City Hall Notes" radio program this week will be Terry Anderson of the public works' sanitation division, and Mac McCarley, assistant city attorney. Tom Marzilli, an East Carolina University graduate student intern, will also be on the program.

Anderson will discuss the leaf season and leaf collection and the proposed noise ordinance will be discussed by McCarley and Marzilli.

The program is aired each Tuesday and Thursday at 6:30 p.m. on WOOW Radio.

By TOM EBLEN
Associated Press Writer
KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Organizers shut the gates and turned off the lights at the 1982 World's Fair, but not before praising the six-month exposition as a financial success that will leave this "scruffy little city" richer for years to come.

"I won't cry," an elderly man told his wife as they watched a fireworks display signal the end of the fair Sunday, "but I certainly hate to see it leave."

Thousands of tourists and dignitaries gathered in the outdoor Court of Flags to officially close the $115 million extravaganza that drew 22 nations and millions of people to this southern Appalachian city of 183,000.

Many people laughed in 1975 when several civic leaders said they wanted to put on a world's fair in Knoxville to boost the local economy and clean up a run-down section of downtown.

But on Sunday, gate turnstiles clicked nearly 86,000 times, bringing total attendance to 11,127,786. Officials said that amounted to about 10.2 million paid admissions by 6 million to 8 million people.

The attendance exceeded the 11 million visits originally predicted and World's Fair President S.H. "Bo" Roberts Jr. has said the fair will make enough money to pay all its bills — something few world's fairs have done.

During the next two weeks, workmen will begin dismantling temporary buildings, and equipment and leftover souvenirs will be auctioned. Officials hope most of the fair's assets will be bought by organizers of the 1984 World's Fair in New Orleans.

"We have seen the 1982 World's Fair serve as a catalyst to build a strong economy for our community," Mayor Randy Tyree, the Democratic nominee for governor, told the amphitheater crowd. "And we have been able to say, 'Don't ever doubt us again.'"

"You've made us proud ... making a scruffy little city here in East Tennessee known all over the world," state Tourism Commissioner Etherage Parker told about 1,500 guests who toasted the fair with 400 bottles of champagne at a private ceremony afterward.

The fair pumped millions of dollars into Knoxville and helped keep the area's unemployment rate at about 7 percent, well below the state average. However, the fair's closing means the end to paychecks for 6,750 fair employees, and the state is braced for an increase in applications for unemployment benefits.

Among the fair's legacies to the city are three large hotels and a $220 million interstate highway renovation.

The fairgrounds developed on a 72-acre railroad yard and industrial slum separating downtown Knoxville from the 30,000-student University of Tennessee campus. Now the site is slated to become a $100 million development of businesses, restaurants and condominiums.

But the city still must pay off bonds for its new convention center, built as the fair's corporate exhibit hall. And officials are looking for buyers of several fair structures, including the $13 million wedge-shaped U.S. Pavilion.

At Sunday night's closing ceremonies, the University of Tennessee band played music from Beethoven's 9th

Symphony during a 10-minute fireworks display over the fairgrounds. Marchers brought 184 torches — one for each day of the fair — to the stage as the crowd sang "America the Beautiful."

During the exposition, which opened May 1, Egypt and Peru brought antiquities, China displayed art and bricks from the Great Wall, and such European nations as France, Italy, Great Britain and Hungary showed examples energy-industry gadgets.

The 10-nation European Economic Community sponsored an exhibit, as did six states and more than 60 corporations and organizations.

The fair also brought many cultural riches to Knoxville, on the edge of the Great Smoky Mountains. The London Symphony, the Warsaw Philharmonic, Japan's Kabuki Theater, ballet star Rudolf Nureyev and violinist Isaac Stern were among the performers who graced Knoxville's stages during the past 184 days.

"I don't think this area is ever going to be the same," Roberts said.

What action do you take?

A.—Don't risk losing the spade suit! If you timidly bid three diamonds, that could easily happen. Make a takeout double. Should partner bid clubs, you certainly are strong enough to correct to diamonds, thus making it clear that your double was based on diamonds and spades.

Q.2—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠AJ10764 ♥7 ♦J105 ♣985

The bidding has proceeded:
East South West North

1 ♥ 2 ♣ 3 ♥ 3 ♣ 4 ♥ ?

*preemptive
What action do you take?

A.—There is an old adage that applies here: "Once you have described your hand with a limit bid, don't bid again!" Your preemptive leap to two spades described your hand exactly. For all you know, partner's bid of three spades might have been a tactical ploy to jockey the opponents into four hearts, which he intends doubling. Leave matters to him—pass.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠A ♥J10 ♦AJ9842 ♣J1062

The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West

1 ♥ Pass 2 ♦ Pass 2 ♥ Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—The hand was developed awkwardly. The one bid you can't make is three diamonds—that shows a sub-minimum two over one response with little outside the diamond suit. That limits your choice of responses to three clubs or a raise to three hearts. We prefer the latter despite our short trumps, because we have two honors in the suit. Three clubs virtually commits the hand to game and we do not have enough strength to do that. Of course, should partner try three no trump over three hearts, we would be happy to let him play there.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠J9 ♦AJ4 ♦J1076 ♣KQ98

The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West

1 ♠ Pass 2 ♣ Pass 2 ♥ Pass 2 NT Pass 3 ♥ ?

What action do you take?

A.—Don't persist with no trump. Partner has shown a minimum opening bid with six spades and four hearts, so you may be unable to make nine tricks before the opponents have five. All you can do now is take a preference to three spades—the suit in which you have a known eight-card fit. If partner wishes to push on to game, that's his decision.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠AJ10 ♥K762 ♦Q3 ♣A987

The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East

1 ♠ Pass 1 ♦ Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—First, if you believe that partner's one diamond response to your one club opening bid denies a four-card major, you are playing a system that is alien to us. If you agree that partner could

Spanish Solidarity

Pope John Paul II, scheduled to visit Spain this week, will find there a more solidly Roman Catholic audience than virtually anywhere in the world. Spain's non-Catholic minorities are estimated at about 50,000 people or only 1.5 per 1,000. This was not always so. During the Middle Ages, Spain was the only multiracial and multireligious country in western Europe because of its large and influential Moorish and Jewish populations. But when the Inquisition was established in 1483, thousands of Jews, Moslems and "conversos," or converted Jews, were expelled or killed. Pope John's visit was originally scheduled to coincide with the 400th anniversary of the death of St. Teresa — herself a famous "converso."

DO YOU KNOW — Under which Spanish monarchs was the Inquisition established in 1483?

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You may want to jump into all sorts of new ventures in order to get ahead faster, but first talk them over with experts.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Try to make a greater effort to cooperate more with associates and gain added respect. Avoid arguments.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Take good care of your good name and add to prestige instead of lessening it by some careless act. It's time to save more money.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Many new ideas appeal to you but you have to test them against good logic before putting them in operation. Be wise.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Seek only inexpensive pleasures now that are enjoyable and save money. Make sure you are precise in regular routines.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Be more clever in your business dealings and become more prosperous. Find better ways of doing regular routines.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Wait until evening before going after a personal aim you have in mind. Be careful of those who are jealous of you.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will have much ability at whatever is of a practical nature, especially in handling money and property affairs. A lovable child here that others may want to spoil, but don't permit this. Include some musical training.

have a major suit, then your rebid is clear—one heart must be superior to one no trump, since the latter runs the risk of missing a 4-4 heart fit.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠AQ983 ♥AQ5 ♦83 ♣A102

The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East

1 ♠ Pass 3 ♣ Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—While we would not fault you greatly if you simply bid four spades, we feel that your three aces justify one slam try. Bid four clubs. If partner doesn't cooperate by bidding four diamonds but simply signs off with four spades, pass. If partner does make a diamond cue-bid, try once more with four hearts.

GUITARS GREET THE POPE - Members of a Spanish musical group raise their guitars to cheer Pope John Paul II as he arrived at Madrid's Barajas airport Sunday at the start of a ten-day visit. A pilgrimage today to the tomb of St. Teresa in Albas de Tormes was to be the highlight of the 62-year-old pontiff's 16-city tour which began with a 21-gun salute and a welcome from King Juan Carlos. The long-planned pilgrimage was delayed a year by an attempt on the life of John Paul II. (AP Laserphoto)

Three Wrecks Are Reported

An estimated $9,100 damage resulted from three traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Saturday.

Officers said heaviest damage resulted from a 6:10 p.m. mishap at the intersection of Memorial and Club Pines Drives, involving cars driven by Lee Valious Ward of 103A Lakeview Terrace, and JoAnn Avery House of Route 4, Washington.

Police, who charged Ms. House with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety, estimated damage at $3,200 to the Ward car and $2,000 to the House vehicle.

Both Ms. House and Ward received minor injuries in the crash.

Vehicles driven by Reuben Arthur Doiron of Route 3, Greenville, and Roy Ray Harris of 208 West Gum Road, collided about 2:05 p.m. at the intersection of Dickinson Avenue and Memorial Drive, causing an estimated $2,000 damage to the Doiron truck and $1,000 damage to the Harris car.

Howard Lee Dobb of Route 1, Hookerton, and a passenger in the car he was driving were reported injured in a 7:37 p.m. mishap at the intersection of Beatty and 14th Streets.

Officers said an estimated $900 damage resulted to the Dobb car when the vehicle ran into a ditch at the intersection.

Teacher Says Parents May Fuel Alcoholism

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) - A Greensboro teacher says parents often unwittingly fuel a growing alcoholism problem among youngsters.

John Hughes, an elementary school teacher, said too many parents think the sight of a small child imbibing is funny, thereby telling the child that alcohol consumption is acceptable.

"A lot of parents think it is cute and funny for their little children to eat the cherries from the bottom of all the cocktail glasses after the party," Hughes said. "It is not cute. They (parents) will not accept the fact that alcohol is a drug."

Children get a different message when they see their parents drinking, he added.

"If it's so good, they think, maybe it's like a chocolate sundae," he said.

Hughes and others say alcohol abuse among the young is a growing problem. What once was associated as the blight of the lower classes is becoming increasingly commonplace everywhere, they say.

Larry Stone, executive director of Drug Action Council, said the problem is no longer confined to children from low-income families.

"It's everybody's problem," said Stone. The average age of patients in DAC's treatment program now is 15, compared with 25 a few years ago, he said.

Betty Thompson, an educator with the Guilford County Alcohol Information Center, said many parents "refuse to accept that the problem can touch children."

Figures on statewide alcohol and drug abuse by the very young are not available because accurate surveys are hard to make, officials say.

But one woman who said she is a reformed alcoholic told the Greensboro Daily News that her 9-year-old son attends Alcoholics Anonymous meetings. Her son began drinking when he was 4, she said.

Teachers say children also have a surprising knowledge of other drugs such as marijuana.

A teacher at a suburban Greensboro school said her students spoke with authority on marijuana.

"They knew what a joint was and what you do with a roach clip (a holder for marijuana cigarettes)," she said. "They knew that some pot has seeds and some doesn't have seeds."

Prissy The Pig Stays At Jail

WARREN, Ark. (AP) - She's bitten a deputy sheriff, but otherwise Prissy is the jailer's pet.

Prissy the pig has been held at the city jail since Saturday when her owner, Joanne Greer of Texas, was arrested on a charge of driving under the influence of alcohol.

Prissy is also picky. A police spokesman who asked that his name not be used called her "a peculiar pig. You usually don't have a pig for a pet that'll follow you around. She won't eat anything but apples and cat food."

And even though the 35-pound pig bit a deputy, the spokesman said - perhaps with relief - "She's housebroken."

An unidentified person agreed Thursday to pay Ms. Greer's $120 fine, but until the police have cash in hand, both owner and pig must stay put. Police Chief Tommy Dunaway explained that Prissy was bing kept at the jail because there is no local veterinarian.

A&T MEETING

The Pitt County chapter of the A&T Alumni Association will meet at the home of Carolyn Gorham, 102 Allendale Drive, Wednesday at 7:30 p.m.

Plans for the A & T State University Choir concert will be discussed. Aggies of the Pitt County area are invited to the meeting.

Fifth Grader Says AA Straightened Out Life

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) - In many ways, Chris is a typical, modern fifth grader. Atari and Pac Man will keep him spellbound for hours. "E.T." is his favorite Hollywood star. Chris says he wants to be a policeman, a veterinarian or a truck driver.

Chris (a fictitious name) is also Greensboro's youngest member of Alcoholics Anonymous.

His mother, Jane (also a fictitious name), is a recovered alcoholic who is trying to make up for being a poor model for her four children.

Her friends, Jane says, are shocked when they learn Chris has been in a young people's AA group for about four months. They are quick to assume he shouldn't be.

But Chris says needs AA's help. He craved beer as a toddler and guzzled it at every opportunity, he says, adding that he fears he might become addicted like both his parents.

Jane says she used to bring home tall cans of beer which Chris used to drink.

"It gets you really dizzy if you take too much" Chris says.

Several years ago, Jane began taking Chris to AA meetings when she couldn't find a sitter. This year, Chris asked if he could join. His mother placed him in the young people's group where most who attend weekly meetings are older than 16.

Chris says he needs the help AA offers. Before joining, Chris was branded an underachiever, a loner and a rebel at school.

Some might view Chris as an extreme and isolated example. But some authorities say parents may have more cause for alarm than they originally thought. Many believe a growing number of young children are imitating drinking and drug use by adults and teens.

Most parents shut their

Group Charges Rules Neglect

WASHINGTON (AP) - The number of people who die annually from job-related diseases is "roughly equivalent to an almost full DC-10 or 747 jumbo jet aircraft crashing every day of the year," the Sierra Club says.

The group says the Reagan administration is neglecting its legal responsibility to enforce job safety and health standards.

In a 25-page analysis of policies espoused by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration and the Mine Safety Health Administration, the group charged Saturday that there has been lax enforcement of existing worker protection rules and no effort to improve those already on the books.

The report, titled "Poisons on the Job: The Reagan Administration and American Workers," was issued in conjunction with the Natural Resources Defense Council and the Urban Environment Conference.

It said some 10 million workers are exposed daily to eyes to any such problem, experts say.

"We refuse to accept that the problem can touch children," says Betty Thompson with the county Alcohol Information Center.

"Our sweet, cute little babies couldn't possibly drink," we say. "They're too young. Where can they get it? They don't even know how to drink."

Young alcohol and drug users generally sneak alcohol or drugs from their parents or they are supplied by older siblings, neighborhood youngsters or babysitters, authorities say.

Last year at a rural Guilford County elementary school, three 10-year olds were suspended for possession of marijuana. One of the children found the drug at home and brought it to school, according to county school officials.

Elcom, Inc., Telecommunications Partners, Ltd., and Behrivation of North Carolina are applicants before the Federal Communications Commission (Commission) for construction permits for a new UHF commercial television station on Channel 14, Elcom, Inc., and Telecommunications Partners, Ltd. as the principal community to be served. 1. To determine with respect to Elcom, Inc., whether there is a reasonable possibility that the tower height and location proposed by the applicant would constitute a hazard to air navigation;
2. To determine with respect to Telecommunications Partners, Ltd. and Behrivation of North Carolina:
  - (a) whether the proposals of the applicants are consistent with the minimum mileage separation requirements of Section 73.610 of the Commission's rules and, if not, whether circumstances warrant a waiver of that Section.
  - (b) whether, in light of the evidence adduced pursuant to (a) above, the applicants are qualified;
  3. To determine the areas and population which would receive television service (Grade B or better) from the proposals and the availability of other Grade B service to such areas and population;
