Excellence Awards

RALEIGH — Four Pitt County towns — Ayden, Bethel, Grifton and Farmville — received Community of Excellence awards for their efforts to promote industrial development from Gov. Jim Hunt at a banquet here Wednesday night.

Bethel and Grifton received the award for the first time. It was the third Community of Excellence award received by Farmville, and the second for Ayden.

The four Pitt towns were among 132 communities in the state honored at the Governor's Conference on Economic Development. The three-year-old Community of Excellence program has helped the state's recruitment of new industry, Hunt told the gathering.

Praising developers and local officials for their efforts to attract new industry, the governor said in the past six years, $11 billion has been spent by new and expanding industries and 174,000 new jobs created.

The Community of Excellence awards are based on criteria established by the Department of Commerce — "the kinds of things industry needs to locate there," a spokesman for the governor's office said.

Selection of the award winners is made after a team from the Commerce Department visits the communities to see how well they meet the criteria.

CELEBRATING SUCCESSFUL UNITED WAY DRIVE ... Pitt County United Way has reached its goal for 1982, campaign officials have announced, and a victory day celebration was held Wednesday at Greenville Country Club. According to Frank Grooms, 1982 general chairman, the organization raised $515,304, 105 percent of its goal of $489,020. Above, at the celebration, are Gene Parker, vice chairman of the industrial, commercial and service divisions of the campaign; Grooms; Peggy Christopher, vice chairman of the business, county and special gifts divisions of the campaign; Harry Leslie, president of United Way, and Lou Folger, executive director of the organization. Compromise Talked, But Confrontation Is Feared

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The talk is of compromise but the outlook for confrontation as President Reagan and House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. lead partisan analyses of a midterm election that offer a mix of triumph and loss for Republicans and Democrats alike.

"We will extend to him (Reagan) the hand of cooperation," the Democratic speaker said Wednesday.

At the other end of Pennsylvania Avenue, the president pledged in the White House Rose Garden to work with Congress "in a bipartisan fashion to solve the major problems that still have to be solved."

But there is every likelihood the partisan differences of the past two years over how to deal with those problems will continue in the 98th Congress that takes office in January with a markedly more Democratic House but with a 54-46 Republican majority in the Senate holding steady.

The talk of cooperation Wednesday was reminiscent of statements made immediately after the 1980 election when Reagan, then the president-elect, met with congressional leaders and said, "We aren't going to accomplish anything unless we cooperate with the House and Senate."

O'Neill was equally conciliatory and pledged to withhold criticism of the new president "so we can turn the economy around and make the country work."

That spirit lasted until Reagan proposed tax and budget cuts the Democrats felt would dismantle many of the programs they had enacted over the past generation.

In Tuesday's elections, the Democrats won 267 seats, with two of them not declared winners in North Carolina and Texas until Wednesday. The Republicans won 165 seats and a Republican who lost his primary won in California's 43rd District as a write-in candidate. Two Georgia House seats held by Democrats are likely to stay that way when they are decided in delayed elections Nov. 30.

If the Georgia contests go as expected, the Democrats will add 26 seats to their House majority, by consensus a handful more than either party had counted on.

Republican Sen. John Chafee of Rhode Island was leading with absentee ballots still to be counted. That won't be done until Friday.

Votes also still were being counted in the race for governor of Illinois between Republican incumbent James Thompson and Democratic challenger Adlai Stevenson III.

As expected, the Democrats made some of the biggest gains in contests for governor.

Not counting the Illinois race, which was supposed to be a runaway for Thompson, the Democrats netted seven governorships, including five in the once solidly Republican Midwest.

Helped by the retirements of Republican incumbents, Democrats won the governorships of Ohio, Michigan, Minnesota, Wisconsin and Alaska. In addition, Democrats beat Republican governors in Nebraska, Nevada, Arkansas and Texas.

The only Republican gains were in New Hampshire where John Sununu defeated Gov. Hugh Gallen and in California where George Deukmejian upset Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley.

Resolutions calling for a U.S.-Soviet freeze on production, development and deployment of nuclear weapons were approved in eight of nine states where they were submitted for statewide balloting.

Making the best of a result the administration had hoped would not occur, the White House issued a statement welcoming the vote as "an expression of concern and a desire to achieve progress on arms control."

Only in Arizona did voters reject a freeze resolution. It was approved in California, Massachusetts, Montana, Michigan, North Dakota, New Jersey, Oregon and Rhode Island.

Stock Prices Bouncing As Investors React To Record

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices bounced around wildly in some of the busiest trading in Wall Street history today as investors reacted to the market's record rise to a new high on Wednesday.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which surged 43.41 points to a new peak of 1,065.49 Wednesday, was down .37 at 1,065.12 in the first half hour today.

But analysts said a meaningful reading of the average was not immediately available, since many of the stocks used in computing it were delayed in opening because of the avalanche of orders pouring into the market.

By 10:30 a.m., more than 22 million shares had changed hands on the New York Stock Exchange, and brokers predicted a challenge to the full day's record of 147.07 million set Oct. 7.

Ever since the Dow industrials started to rally in August from a two-year low of 776.92, hopes had been mounting that the market could challenge the record reached almost a decade ago on Jan. 11, 1973, when it closed at 1,051.70.

But few had believed it would happen so quickly.

"It was an incredibly impressive performance," said Edward Yardeni, economist at the firm of Prudential-Bache Securities. "It just tore through that previous high."

Donald Regan, secretary of the Treasury and a former chairman of Merrill Lynch & Co., borrowed from the firm's advertising slogan to declare, "The stock market is bullish on America."

"Since August we have seen a steady rise in market confidence that inflation is under control and interest rates are coming down," Regan said in a statement. "Today's historic high shows that the seeds of economic recovery planted last year are now bearing fruit."

Amid the euphoria, some observers pointed out that a Dow Jones industrial average above 1,050 now is less impressive than a Dow above 1,050 in 1973 because of inflation.

Anthony Tabell of the firm Delafield, Harvey, Tabell in Princeton, N.J., calculated recently that if the average were adjusted for inflation since 1966, it would be about 362, not over 1,000.

But the bulls of Wall Street weren't letting any calculations spoil their party.

"We ordered champagne for our stock traders five minutes after the market closed, and we're going for a vintage number," said John A. Conlon Jr., who heads some trading operations at E.F. Hutton & Co.

"There is a feeling of real, real optimism," Jensen said.

U.S. Marines Await Orders In Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The first deployment of U.S. Marines into Christian east Beirut failed to materialize today and the Marines still waiting at the airport at nightfall for their marching orders.

Their movement apparently was delayed by Lebanese soldiers moving into the eastern sector earlier today and threatening to arrest Christian militiamen refusing to lay down their arms. It appeared to be the government's first full-scale effort to take control of the section which has been run by the militias for the past eight years.

Phalange militia spokesman Fadi Hayek said his men would cooperate with the Lebanese army setting up positions at key points, but would not disarm until ordered to do so by President Amin Gemayel.

At sunset, 12 Marines in four jeeps remained at the international airport in Moslem west Beirut, ready to roll into the sector. They had been scheduled to begin patrolling the area in early afternoon.

Marine spokesman Capt. Dale Dye said the Marines "did not receive an execute order from our higher headquarters." He said the Marines would not enter the area of the war-torn capital at night.

"We have absolutely no plans to patrol after dark. We are not going out after dark," Dye said. "We're on hold and will continue to hold."

Earlier in the day, however, French paratroopers from the multinational peacekeeping force sent a three-jeep patrol into east Beirut and Italian peacekeepers were slated to begin patrols there late Wednesday night.

U.S. Embassy spokesman Chris Ross said the delay was "procedural. There's no fundamental problem. It's just a matter of getting the orders passed down the chain of command" from Washington.

In the Chouf mountains 12 miles southeast of Beirut, police said at least eight people were killed and 20 wounded in another series of clashes between rightist Christian and leftist Druse Moslem militiamen in the villages of Brih and Kfar Nabrah.

The Christian-owned Voice of Lebanon radio station said 14 people died in fighting with machine guns, mortars and rocket-propelled grenades. Christian and Druse private armies have been battling in the Israeli-occupied area for the past four weeks.

Solidarity Leaders Call For Big Protest March

By THOMAS W. NETTER
Associated Press Writer
WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Leaders of the outlawed Solidarity union today called on fellow unionists to join a protest march next Wednesday at the end of a planned eight-hour nationwide strike.

Warsaw Solidarity chief Zbigniew Bujak asked workers to march to the city's grave of the unknown soldier that day — the second anniversary of court-ordered registration of Solidarity as the Soviet bloc's only independent union.

"In case police attack, the demonstrators should disperse and then regather to make sure they reach the grave," Bujak and other local Solidarity officials said in a statement in today's issue of the outlawed weekly Warsaw Solidarity.

Meanwhile, a military prosecutor's office issued a communique today reporting the arrests or indictments of 17 members of Solidarity, which was outlawed by Parliament on Oct. 8.

It said four students were indicted in Silesia for participating in a "youth resistance movement of Solidarity," and another 11 people for distributing publications from a "committee of social resistance." It was not clear whether all those indicted were arrested or what measures were taken against them.

Solidarity's national leaders had earlier called for the strike next Wednesday as the first in a series of protests aimed at culminating in a general strike in December to mark the first anniversary of Polish martial law.

The new call for protest, in defiance of martial law bans on marches and demonstrations, came as Poland's Communist authorities issued new warnings against unrest.

Politburo member Kazimierz Barcikowski told shipyard workers at the Baltic port of Szczecin on Wednesday the government's hopes to end martial law this year could only be realized amid "calm and stabilization."

Barcikowski was quoted by the Polish news agency PAP as saying the Communist Party was the only group that can solve Poland's economic and social ills, and that "the calls for strikes and street brawls ... cannot be treated as a program."

In recent days, government posters have appeared in Warsaw showing a fist smashing a window and the word "enough" — an apparent message against street disorders.

Government officials said recently they planned "persuasive measures" to prevent new protests but did not elaborate.

A Warsaw judge on Wednesday postponed indefinitely one of the cases against Jan Jozef Lipski, the Solidarity adviser who returned voluntarily from London to face charges of organizing a strike under martial law. The judge said Lipski was not well enough to stand trial.

He returned to Poland in September from London, where he underwent treatment for heart problems. Judge Maria Chlopek-Pszczolkowska granted the postponement after a prison doctor testified about Lipski's heart ailments and said a team of experts should examine him.

Along with five other leaders of the disbanded dissident committee for Social Self-Defense, he also is charged with seeking to overthrow the state, but no trial date has been set.

Lipski, 56, was charged with organizing a strike by workers at Warsaw's Ursus tractor factory shortly after martial law was declared Dec. 13. His trial had been postponed earlier this year when he was sent to London for heart treatment.

In another development, Poland and its Western bankers signed an agreement Wednesday in Vienna deferring payment of 95 percent of its $2.4 billion 1982 debt for eight years. The long-debated agreement also schedules interest payments of $1.1 billion in three installments this month, next month and in March, 1983.

The bankers issued a terse communique in the names of Poland's central Bank Handlowy and 503 Western banks saying the remaining 5 percent of the debt would be due on Aug. 20, 1983, and Nov. 20, 1983.

The banks also reluctantly agreed to recycle half of the interest back to Poland as a three-year loan totalling $550 million. The total foreign debt of cash-pinched Poland is believed near $27 billion.

Borrowing For Social Security

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the first time ever, Social Security's old-age trust fund must borrow money this week from another fund in the system to pay for checks going out to retirees.

About $1 billion will be borrowed on Friday from the Disability Insurance Trust Fund, another component of the Social Security system, said Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan.

Regan, who is also managing trustee for Social Security, said the borrowing is necessary to ensure November pension payments.

The government has long been paying old-age benefits at a greater pace than it has been taking in money from payroll taxes. Social Security's disability and health insurance trust funds are independently solvent.

Congress, noting the trend, authorized Regan last December to borrow among trust funds in order to keep the checks going out. Officials had said informally several weeks ago that the borrowing would be necessary beginning in November.

A Wednesday report from the Treasury Department said the retirees' fund — officially the Old Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund — would need between $7 billion and $11 billion in borrowed money between now and next June 30.

The bulk of that money will be borrowed next month since the congressional authorization runs out at the end of December, officials said.

Spring Follies Report Highlights Meeting

A report on the upcoming spring follies, being sponsored by the Greenville Service League, was given at the meeting of the group Monday.

Mrs. Edward Smith, chairman, said work is well under way on the presentation entitled "Stutting Southern" to be held May 13-14 in Wright Auditorium. All profits from the project will go into the Laughinghouse Hospital Fund to provide care for persons in Pitt County needing assistance with hospital bills.

Mrs. Charles Wilkerson said patron letters will be sent within the next few weeks. Mrs. James Carter and Mrs. William Brewer are heading the program committee.

Mrs. Frank Layne, president, continued the meeting with reports from committee chairmen. Mrs. Kelly Barnhill, Bloodmobile, said 56 members worked 19 1/2 hours and collected 415 units during the two-day visit at East Carolina University. The visits this month are Nov. 9, Pitt Community College, Umstead Dormitory, Nov. 16, and Empire Brushes on Nov. 22.

Mrs. William McConnell said a new storage room had been provided for the Hospital Gift Shop. A new minicart has arrived and is ready for use. She reported a check for $75,000 from the league has been sent to the hospital to pay for equipment pledged last spring. A Telemetry Monitoring System requested at the October meeting will also be purchased. Its cost is approximately $7,500.

Mrs. Horton Rountree received six memorials for the Laughinghouse Fund and answered five calls. Mrs. Norwood Whitehurst furnished one layette. Civil Defense Chairman Mrs. Fred Robbins announced that five league member completed the first aid course given last month.

Hospital Activities Chairman Mrs. C.W. Harvey Jr. reported Halloween tray favors were furnished at the hospital and an arrangement placed on the pediatric floor. Volunteers were obtained to help with Thanksgiving favors.

Mrs. J.W.H. Roberts ask that unwrapped gifts for Operation Santa Claus be brought to the December meeting. Members were reminded to bring donations for Christmas baskets.

Mrs. Layne said the Woodmen of the World had presented the league an American flag which had been given to Pitt Memorial Hospital.

Dear Abby

She No Longer Lives With Razor

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a 26-year-old woman who has just undergone an unbelievable experience. I'm a part-time secretary and fashion model. It all started when a male co-worker at the office announced that he was going to grow a beard because shaving irritated his skin. Well, shaving my legs and underarms has always irritated my skin, too, so I decided if a man could stop shaving and be accepted, so could I.

After I stopped shaving, my agent informed me that unless I shave my legs and armpits I was unemployable as a fashion model. My love life also changed dramatically. The men I had dated stopped asking me out.

I suppose I could have started shaving again, but I didn't because there was an important principle involved, so I threw away my razor.

I have learned two things from this experience: (1) Femininity is not achieved with a razor and cosmetics; it comes from within. (2) A man in our society may choose not to shave and suffer no repercussions. A female does not have that option.

LETTING IT GROW

DEAR LETTING: A woman who wants to be a fashion model (in the United States) knows that shaving her legs and armpits goes with the territory, so when you stopped shaving you should have anticipated the consequences.

However, a woman whose love life suffers because she throws away her razor has endured a hair-raising experience. Your relationships must have been very superficial.

Some women shave to please themselves because in our culture we're conditioned to regard body hair on women as unsightly and therefore undesirable.

But there are men out there who prefer women to be entirely natural, hairy legs and armpits included. Hang in there, and keep looking!

DEAR ABBY: Please tell "Package Deal," the decent man with an 8-year-old daughter, that if he's looking for a nice woman to marry, he should go to the ballpark. That's where all the single parents (and some of the married ones) find the action in this town.

If Package Deal signed up his daughter for baseball or softball, or volunteered his services as coach, manager or concession worker, I'll bet that before he could say "Jackie Robinson," he'd be fighting off the women with a baseball bat.

HAVING FUN IN ROCKLEDGE, FLA.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "NOTHING TO LIVE FOR" IN COLUMBUS: No one ever collapsed under the burdens of a single day. It is when the burdens of tomorrow are added to it that it becomes unbearable. Live one day at a time.

If you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say, send for Abby's complete booklet on letter-writing. Send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

NEW YORK (AP) — A school started by the fashion apparel industry here at the end of World War II to fill an anticipated need for trained workers has grown into a university with over 12,000 students, representing every state in the union plus 56 foreign countries.

The Fashion Institute of Technology now offers 16 major courses, including fashion, jewelry and textile design, fashion buying and merchandising, cosmetics, fragrances and toiletries.

menswear design and marketing, fashion photography, patternmaking technology, advertising and communications, and display exhibit techniques. In addition, there are liberal arts, fine arts and continuing education programs.

The school graduates 2,000 students a year, according to F.I.T. President Marvin Feldman. Some 70 percent of the students are women, he says, but the number of men is steadily on the increase.

Messages For All

Tuesday's off-year elections, not one of the most exciting political events in the nation's history, offered something for everyone, it seems.

The Democrats picked up some 24 seats in the House of Representatives and made large gains in the numbers of Democratic governors. This was hailed by Democratic party leaders as a repudiation of the policies of Ronald Reagan, as well it could be.

On the other hand the administration had made a case for the drop in the Republican representation in the House as being expected, citing a history of such in off-year elections. Reagan was happy that Republican control was maintained in the Senate, and he was personally happy that his party captured both the U.S. Senate seat and the governorship in his home state of California.

If there was no great landslide, the administration must recognize that it was being told something in the House results. It is in that chamber where all members are voted on every two years and where the Republican party was already in a minority.

The issues were the economy, unemployment, Social Security and perhaps the far right fringe of the GOP. Now both parties must read the results of both the 1980 and 1982 elections, if they wish to understand the voters.

It is likely that the budgetary cuts made by the Reagan administration are still popular with the voters and it is clear there is a strong sentiment throughout the nation for no new taxes. The Democrats learned this the hard way in 1980.

Now the message to the Reagan administration is that voters want a government more concerned with the plight of the unemployed. Erosion of the Social Security program is a real fear of working Americans and potential loss of their jobs is downright frightening.

It is likely that many voters are concerned that Reagan is catering too much to the rightist of his party and they would like to see a more moderate approach to economic and social issues.

The Democrats ignored the public's concern with rapidly increasing government spending to the point of near disaster. Now President Reagan can ignore the messages of this election at his political peril.

THEN WE DON'T WANT TO HEAR HIS GRIPING!

Day Of Blah And Blues

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent
NEW YORK (AP) —

Our guest in the studio today came up short when the votes were tallied in this November's off-year elections. Can you tell us, congressman, why you think the voters rejected you?

—An ungrateful electorate thought it was time for a change.

—The voters were duped into buying attractively packaged inferior merchandise. The media was the message.

—My opponent didn't have to run on my record.

—Half the lies told about me during the campaign weren't true.

—The opposition accused me of non-stop junketeering at the taxpayers' expense. I was out of the country at the time and couldn't answer these vicious calumnies.

—I was willing to meet the president half way, and wound up with half as many votes as last time.

—Job security was the main issue. Mine.

—Lots of last-minute money from highly suspect sources came pouring into the other party's campaign coffers.

—My opponent showed a high respect for the truth during the race. He used it sparingly.

—The polls were right for a change. They showed an erosion of support as soon as I announced for re-election.

—I learned a basic political lesson the hard way: Never underestimate the gullibility of the American voter.

—his defeat comes at an inconvenient time in my career, just as I was about to get a larger office in the Rayburn Building.

—I kept my hands clean in Watergate, Koreagate and Abscam, and hence got no prime time TV exposure.

—Restricting did me in. It brought in better informed voters.

—My opponent is a newcomer to politics. He had the advantage of not being so well known.

—Our final poll indicated women voters were lined up behind me, but it didn't show they were trying to shove me out.

—I spent many hours at factory gates, but my aides neglected to inform me they had closed two months ago.

—I was always the friend of the working man and woman. That 10 percent unemployment rate made the difference.

—The American voter has spoken. Nonsense, as usual.

—When it comes to stuffing ballot boxes, I characterize my opponent as more of a taxidermist than a tactician.

—I never expected that nuclear freeze issue to blow up in my face.

—There's a lot to be said for going down to defeat with your integrity intact, but my speech writers can't seem to get a handle on it.

—What are we going to do with all these leftover sandwiches and victory banners?

—I took a straightforward stand on debating the issues with my opponent. I was against the idea from the start.

—This is not so much a defeat for me as a victory for pie-in-the-sky political dreamers who think you can dance without paying the piper.

—I predict the economy is in for a terrible jolt. Mine, anyway.

—I should like to thank the people who worked so hard in my behalf, if they really were any outside my immediate family.

—When you get right down to it, Washington really is a very boring city.

—My defeat was a simple matter of demographics. There were more people out there against me than for me.

Eye Race In 1984

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Key Democratic congressional victories may mean that conservative Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., will face a strong 1984 re-election challenge from Gov. Jim Hunt, say North Carolina political leaders.

"I think it was an indication to the senator that there's a very real problem back here in North Carolina," state Republican Chairman David Flaherty said.

"If I was the senator, I'd be looking at what's going on when I see a liberal congressional delegation from a conservative state," Flaherty added.

Neither Helms nor Hunt openly has declared interest in the race but spokesmen for both sides acknowledge privately they are considering running.

"The 1982 race was the one we had to win before we could start looking at '84 and I think it will have a great impact as to what the future will be," said Russell Walker, chairman of the state Democratic Party.

"We have critically wounded the National Congressional Club monster and in 1984 we'll cut its head off," said Randolph E. Cloud, campaign coordinator for Democratic Rep. Ike Andrews, who overcame a recent drunken driving conviction to win a sixth term and dash GOP hopes to pick up his seat.

Andrews defeated former University of North Carolina Athletic Director Bill Cobey, who spent $500,000 in the state's most expensive congressional campaign and drew an appearance from President Reagan.

Andrews spent about $120,000 on the race.

Unofficial election returns showed that Democrats gained one seat and apparently captured another in a close race in the 11th District. A two-seat gain would give Democrats nine of the state's 11 seats, restoring the margin held before the 1980 GOP sweep.

Freshman Republican Eugene Johnston from the 6th District was soundly defeated by Democrat Robin Britt and it appeared that freshman Republican Bill Hendon in the 11th District would be ousted by state Sen. James McClure "Jamie" Clarke, a Democrat. Hendon trailed by more than 1,000 votes in complete unofficial returns but said he may ask for a recount.

Democrats interpreted the victories as rejections of President Reagan's economic policies and campaign tactics used by the National Congressional Club. Helms' money-raising organization which has become the largest political action committee in the nation.

Helms' organization was closely tied to Cobey's campaign. It also supported other GOP challenges, none of them successful, with large campaign donations, staff organizers and heavy television and radio advertising.

Because Helms and the club are so closely linked, Democrats speculated that the election could forecast problems for Helms should he seek re-election in 1984.

Helms started the Raleigh-based club in 1972 to pay off his Senate campaign debt. The organization has (Please Turn To Page 5)

Rosebud Leaves Scene

SCRABBLE, Va. — Several weeks ago, in a mood of puzzlement bordering close upon panic, I inquired of my editors and readers what should be done about a personal problem. The problem was a skunk, name of Rosebud, who had established herself in living quarters under the cottage where I have my office. The problem, I am happy to report, has now been resolved.

Let me say, to begin with, that my editors were no help. This was not surprising. I was for 17 years an editor myself, and I know something of the breed. Editors are all very useful when it comes to chastising the bureaucrats in Washington or the Soviets in Afghanistan, but they are cosmic fellows, unequipped for coping with skunks in a crawl space.

But, ah, gentle readers, how wonderful you are! I have been more than 40 years in this crazy business; I can recall no response like this one. Nothing that I wrote about Richard Nixon or the Supreme Court or the travails of Jimmy Carter ever provoked such an outpouring of mail. In my small office we were compelled of necessity to answer each of you with the same skunk letter; it did not adequately convey my thanks for such understanding and advice.

To review the facts: Last June we observed a curious hole under the old cottage—a hole too small for a groundhog and too large for a chipmunk. The hole obviously was being put to regular use, but it was not until September that we discovered, to our considerable consternation, that our tenant was a skunk—a well-mannered, inoffensive, plausibly attractive but potentially disastrous skunk.

JAMES J. KILPATRICK

I talked the matter over with my wife, who said helpfully that Rosebud was my problem, not hers. I discussed the problem with my neighbor Eugene McCarthy, the part-time politician and full-time poet. He began by quoting Yeats on "a bloody and a sudden end, gunshot, or noose," and concluded by recommending that a small ball of barbed wire be wrapped around a long pole, which was then to be thrust under the cottage until the ball entangled the skunk's tail, after which the skunk was to be withdrawn. Poets are worse than editors.

Chiefly I appealed to our young caretaker, Rick Johnson, who has a way with animals. I asked him to get together with Rosebud and negotiate a solution. And I appealed to editors and readers.

Advice poured in. It was divided in this fashion: About two-thirds of my counselors said, in effect, "Leave Rosebud alone!" It is amazing how many people are fond of skunks. Another 25 or 30 percent proposed various measures—mostly mothballs—by which Rosebud might be persuaded to depart. One ingenious gentleman suggested that the crawl space be condemned for a federal rural renewal project. Several readers sent plans and diagrams. One recommendation called for a congressional committee to explore the situation in person. The remaining 5 to 10 percent minced no words. In a lamentably vengeful spirit, based upon experiences horrendously recounted, they said: Kill the little black-and-white varmint. Only they did not say varmint.

The end of the story is as satisfactory as it is anticlimactic. Rosebud has gone. The door to her apartment has been firmly boarded shut. All mail is to be forwarded to (Please turn to Page 6)

Strength For Today

IF OUR LORD WERE TO RETURN

It is amazing to confront the historical fact that the people who hated Jesus and put him to death were the most highly respected, highly moral people of his age. At the very end these highly moral people brought in the riffraff to stage a mob scene. But it was all planned by the respectable leaders of society. The one class of people Jesus could not get along with was the good people.

Why? Because these people were sure that they were good enough. They were absolutely certain of what they had attained, morally. No one could come telling them how to live better lives.

If Jesus were to return to the world today, disguised as he was 2000 years ago, he would in all probability not be executed; but he would be treated with indifference if not contempt by many if not most of the so-called better class of people. All of which should make us reflect on the essential value of our own morality. —Elisha Douglass

We the family members of the late Howard Manning Jr. wish to clarify certain facts related to his death. The employee who was with Howard when the shooting occurred reports that he did NOT wrestle with the men and did what they instructed him to do.

He would not have risked his life and the life of his co-worker by resisting the gunmen.

Further, Howard's clothes were disheveled by rescue workers and others trying to assist him.

Other Editors Say Not Best Answer

(Washington Daily News)

The proposal to have lawyers involved in court actions over the state to grade the judges whom they face leaves much to be desired.

From what we read and understand, the results will be kept secret; but somehow matters of this nature have a way of leaking out and while secrecy makes truth ever harder to come by, truth will eventually come out.

So if a grading system is to be used, it ought to be a public matter and people other than lawyers ought to be participating. The system is missing out on one of the most valuable sources of grading knowledge when jurors are passed over. If jurors could grade the judges, they have no axes to grind and they hardly will have to face the same judge again, so their judgment should be very sound and very much sought — it seems to us.

We suspect that members of the news media covering courts regularly have a very good concept of how judges perform. Why should not they participate also?

We do see some good which can come out of a grading system, but if we are to employ such a system anywhere along the line, we ought to seek out the best possible method.

While viewing the idea with a degree of approval, we also view it with a degree of skepticism in that if only trial lawyers are to participate in the grading and if the results are to be kept under lock and key, we doubt very much the wisdom of even entering into such a system.

At least the concept as now suggested hardly is the best answer. In many ways it is not even a good answer. It can be improved upon very much, and if worked correctly it can be of service in North Carolina.

Then we can see in many given cases which are hotly contested where lawyers on a losing side might well and conscientiously believe the presiding judge is responsible and thereby grade him lower than he or she deserves. But the jurors there would have no such peevish and no such hurt feelings.

We very much believe that lawyers will be very honest in their appraisals, but with human nature what it is, we all know that some lawyers are closer in terms of friendships with this judge than with that judge.

Maybe a trial period of one year might give all of some indication of how the grading system works. At least the proposal should not be put on the shelf without some in-depth study being given the proposition.

De Lorean, The Entrepreneur

By JOHN CUNNIFF

AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — Strip away his jet set, swinger, socialite and alleged criminal labels and what you see in John De Lorean, the automaker accused of dealing in cocaine, is thoroughly American, says Eugene Jennings.

De Lorean, said Jennings — whose academic endeavors cross many disciplines, including psychology, accounting and management — is an ordinary American entrepreneur, a risk-taker, a doer, a mover, a frail and error-prone person.

"He belongs to a class of people which has of late been heralded as what America needs to get moving again, but which is also roundly castigated when they appear to be without clothes," the professor, author and consultant said.

As an entrepreneur there is little exceptional or unique about De Lorean, said Jennings, among whose many books is "The Executive In Crisis," a study of why corporate leaders fail. "He is a very ordinary individual, so much so that he made all the classic mistakes that beset entrepreneurs."

To understand De Lorean, said Jennings, who has spent his adult life analyzing the corporation and advising the people in it, there are four distinct types of American entrepreneurs:

1. The inventor, such as Thomas Alva Edison, who builds an organization to either create or sell his product.

2. The innovator, such as Henry Ford, who builds an organization to exploit a young or growing market through unique changes in the product, such as development of the Model T.

3. The dealer, or capitalist risk-taker, known today as the venture capitalist, who finances the company in expectation of a high return.

4. The maverick, who sets up his own company in protest to his feelings of extreme humiliation and frustration and his craving for independence and fame.

Jennings maintains that some of all four motives is in each entrepreneur, but that each also has one of the four as a central, driving force. "De Lorean is a maverick type who discovered he could not live in the other guy's world and so had to create his own," the Michigan State University professor said.

In seeking to build his own empire, Jennings continued, De Lorean fell into some age-old traps, including these:

1. Undercapitalization.

"He grossly underestimated the rate at which he would burn up capital and cash in going from R&D (research and development) to the showroom."

2. The rush-to-market trap. "He borrowed freely from other vehicles and produced a car without any redeeming qualities. He spent too little time attempting to remove the imperfections, especially in windows and doors."

3. I-can-do-it-all trap. "He grossly overestimated his knowledge and ability, and declined to bring in and tolerate experts who might have filled the voids." This trap often can escalate into the "I-can-do-anything trap."

4. It's-my-company trap. "People unaccustomed to being their own bosses become uncouthly abusive of the rights of ownership. Often, they fail to make a proper distinction between personal assets and corporate needs."

5. Failure to adjust. "Successful entrepreneurs such as Edison and Ford were prepared to make many sacrifices of time, money, family, marriage and personal health, and they threw themselves into the venture. They adjusted to the requirements of entrepreneurship. De Lorean remained a world traveler, socialite and media figure. He thought he could oversee rather than manage."

6. The ego trap. The worst of all, says Jennings. "An entrepreneur treats his creation as a parent treats a baby. The feeling is intense, and if the entrepreneur is a maverick it means he rejects all the more the possibility of losing his offspring. He will if necessary go to any length to save it, even violating his own sense of morality."

Allegedly, De Lorean became involved in the illegal cocaine trade, but it is nothing unusual for business people under pressure to succumb to quick-money deals, Jennings reminds us.

During the Great Depression of the 1930s, he observes, otherwise reputable businessmen sought profits in illegal liquor deals. During World War II there were black markets, in the 1960s there was a spate of dubious financial leveraging. And in the 1980s, he points out, some business people smother their sense of propriety and become involved in casinos and gambling.

The pressures on the entrepreneur are enormous. The traps and temptations are many. The risk is huge. The praise is bountiful when they succeed within bounds, but when they fail there are no limits or bounds to the castigation.

The losers backed by the club included former professional basketball player John W. "Jack" Marin in the 2nd District, former North Vietnam prisoner of war Eugene "Red" McDaniels of the 3rd District, Ed Johnson in the 7th District, Anne Bagnal in the 5th District and Harris Blake in the 8th District.

"It shows a repudiation of the kind of tactics, the kinds of advertising the Congressional Club has put out there for its candidates," Walker said.

Instead, Walker said the vote indicated Hunt "has a tremendous following and appeal to the people of North Carolina."

Hunt made numerous campaign appearances on behalf of Clarke, Britt and Andrews, all congressional winners, and made television commercials for Clarke.

"They would like to discredit the Congressional Club," Flaherty said. "But they can't blame them for this loss. We just got creamed in the South."

Flaherty said he believed a gloomy economic outlook, sparked by Democratic campaigns, pushed previously undecided voters to support Democrats.

Tom Ellis, chairman of the club, said the vote had nothing to do with his organization.

"The Congressional Club isn't even known in the Greensboro market," he said, referring to GOP candidate Johnston's loss.

"They (Democrats) are raising Cain because they don't like to be challenged. They like to get through their primaries and call it quits," he said. "What they want to do is hurt the club so we don't try to get conservative candidates elected over liberal candidates in North Carolina."

Ellis said he didn't believe the election damaged the club's reputation and said the organization will not change its tactics.

"It probably would have looked easier (for Helms) if we had won two or three races but maybe it will get our troops fighting harder," he said.

Reagan Campaign Visit Proved No Guarantee

By MAUREEN SANTINI
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan traveled more than 32,000 miles to campaign for fellow Republicans, but a presidential visit did not guarantee success: more than half the candidates lost.

By White House count, Reagan campaigned for 36 Republicans since July 1981. Seventeen won while 19 lost.

Reagan's candidates fared better in some states than in others. In North Carolina, for example, all seven congressional candidates for whom the president campaigned appeared to have lost.

On the other hand, in Reagan's home state of California, Republicans won both the Senate and gubernatorial races, much to the president's delight.

In the Rose Garden Wednesday, a reporter asked Reagan whether he would miss poking fun at California Gov. Edmund G. Brown, the Democratic candidate for Senate.

"I am just smiling broadly," Reagan replied. "California, as you might know, was one of the happier moments of the evening for me last night."

When Reagan was asked whether he thought his visit to Nevada helped Republican Jacob "Chic" Hecht defeat Democratic Sen. Howard Cannon, the president responded, "Chic Hecht won. I wouldn't take that credit."

There was little discussion at the White House on Wednesday about the value of Reagan's campaign appearances, although deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said the president had not sought out easy races.

"Batting .500 in the big leagues is not bad in this day and age," Speakes told reporters. "We did not draw races to fatten our batting average or hang a scalp on the totem pole."

Other victorious Republicans for whom Reagan campaigned included Sens. David Durenberger of Minnesota, Malcolm Wallop of Wyoming, John Heinz of Pennsylvania, and Orrin Hatch of Utah.

In addition, Reagan made appearances for Gov. Richard Thornburgh of Pennsylvania; San Diego Mayor Pete Wilson, who defeated Brown for a California Senate seat; George Deukmejian, who won the gubernatorial race in California; Virginia Rep. Paul Trible, who won a Senate seat; House Republican Leader Bob Michel of Illinois and seven other winning congressional candidates.

Republican Senate candidates who lost their elections despite a presidential visit included Sen. Harrison Schmitt of New Mexico, Larry Williams in Montana, Rep. Millicent Fenwick of New Jersey, Robin Beard of Tennessee and Rep. James Collins in Texas.

Perhaps one of the most embarrassing losses for the president was in Texas, where Gov. William Clements was defeated by Democratic Attorney General Mark White. Reagan had appeared at a fund-raiser for Clements.

Other losing Republican gubernatorial candidates for whom Reagan appeared were Rep. Clarence Brown in Ohio, Gov. Robert List in Nevada, John Irick in New Mexico and Gov. Charles Thone in Nebraska.

As the campaign began in earnest, there was a difference of opinion among White House advisers as to exactly how much Reagan should actively campaign, and where he should go.

But there was no doubt that the No. 1 priority was retaining Republican control of the Senate. The Republican margin remained 54-46 after the election.

White House Chief of Staff James A. Baker III said, "We felt it was important that the president go out and campaign vigorously and effectively, not try and hide here in the White House as has been tried in the past."

However, Reagan campaigned for the most part in states where his personal popularity remained high and where political advisers deemed a visit would have major impact. He mostly avoided large, industrial states where unemployment was particularly high.

Bob Neuman, spokesman for the Democratic National Committee, said the election results show that "coattails are pretty short."

But he said Reagan was smart enough to stay out of states where his presence may have backfired. "So he wound his way around the Rocky Mountains for days on end."

Neuman suggested the president's time may not have been used to best advantage, contending a last-minute trip to Texas perhaps could have saved Clements. Reagan's last appearance there was June 16.

Board Will Ask Money For Math And Science

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The State Board of Education was scheduled today to ask a state panel for $3.9 million to hire one-third of the state's high school math and science teachers year-round.

The board was to ask the Legislature's Advisory Budget Commission to fund the program to raise the salaries of 963 of the state's 2,887 math and science teachers.

The board decided Wednesday to ask for the money, agreeing that extra money is needed to attract more science and math teachers to the state.

There is a national shortage of teachers trained in science and math, said Miriam Leiva, an associate professor of math at University of North Carolina-Charlotte and chairman of a state committee studying math instruction.

She told the board that private industry is taking some of the best teachers out of public classrooms. Teachers are leaving the profession for more money, she added.

"And more than half of those who did (leave) chose not to teach because they go into more lucrative jobs in business and industry," said Ms. Leiva.

But Loretta Martin, president of the N.C. Association of Educators, expressed doubts about the plan and asked the board to consider an alternate proposal to lengthening some teachers' contracts.

Board member Barbara Tapscott of Burlington also said she would prefer a plan in which all teachers had 12-month contracts. Granting year-long contracts to math and science teachers is a good place to start, she added.

The board did not specify how teachers would be selected for the program. If the plan is approved, the salaries of the teachers chosen would rise 20 percent.

For example, the starting salary for a math or science teacher would rise from $13,010 to $15,612. For a teacher with a graduate degree at the top of the experience scale, the salary would go from $19,630 to $23,556.

If the ABC approves the program today, legislators would consider it in January.

Found Dead At Home

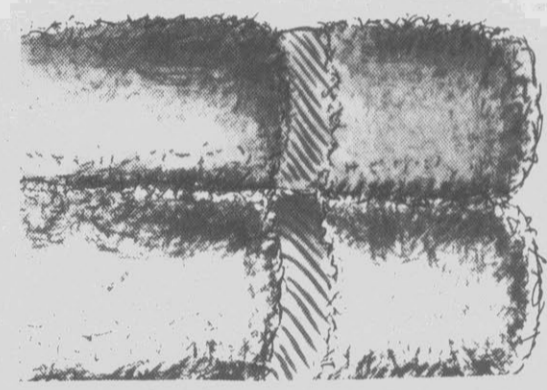

Greenville Police Chief Glenn Cannon said this morning that Van Buren Carroll, 74, of 1509A Allen St. was found dead in the living room of his home about 11:30 a.m. Wednesday.

He said the cause of death was a self-inflicted shotgun wound in his lower left chest. Carroll was last seen alive about 5 p.m. Tuesday, the chief said.

Chairman Supporting Longer School Year

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Japan and other industrial nations are out-producing the United States because its school children attend school longer each year, the chairman of the State Board of Education says.

"We need to work out a system to get away from the agricultural mind-set of being on vacation in the summer so children could pick cotton," Chairman G.D. "Dick" Spangler said Wednesday. "They don't do that anymore."

The board was discussing lengthening contracts for some of the state's math and science teachers when Spangler, a Charlotte businessman, said American school children get too many holidays now.

"We need to get away from the idea that you stay on vacation until Labor Day," he said. "Those countries who don't have that mind-set are developing our cars and our television sets."

Last year, the Legislature approved a proposal which said, in case of ice and snow, students could attend as few as 175 days of the minimum 180-day school year, without making up the days.

State Schools Superintendent Craig Phillips said North Carolina is like many other states. Six states have provisions for a maximum year of 200 days, but most states have 175- to 180-day school years, he said.

But Spangler said that is not sufficient compared to some other nations, and added that short school years are adding to the nation's unemployment.

"We have almost 11 percent unemployment, because other countries are out-producing us," he said.

"Japan has children in school 240 days a year," he continued. "It's a very bad situation when other major industrialized countries have children in school so much longer. Take one smart person and teach him 180 days. Take another smart person and teach him 240 and you know who's going to win the battle."

Spangler said he plans to keep pushing for a longer school year.

"We're talking about increasing the number of days teachers are paid," he said, "but not increasing the number of days teachers teach."

Declare Law Is Ignored

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — A state law requiring cooperation on educational policy by the University of North Carolina Board of Governors and the state's private colleges and universities is being ignored, officials said Wednesday.

UNC President William C. Friday and the North Carolina Association of Independent Colleges and Universities want the law changed, saying the UNC board of governors has a "serious conflict of interest" in reviewing aid requests from private colleges to the Legislature.

A committee of the UNC board voted Wednesday to study its responsibilities under the law and whether it should also seek repeal.

Each side blames the other for obstructing the 1971 statute, which also gives the UNC board the right to review requests for state aid by the private schools.

"This is demonstrated by the repeated assertions of officials of the university and members of the board that their first obligation is to the state-supported institutions," association president John T. Henley told a committee of the board Wednesday.

Spirit Of Volunteerism Growing In Many Places

By IKE FLORES
Associated Press Writer

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — When Orlando Police Chief William Koleszar wanted to outfit his new six-member horse patrol, he raised $40,000 from local businessmen and neighborhood groups.

And when officials of Altamonte Springs, an Orlando suburb, decided to finance an $8,000 lift for the handicapped at a recreation center swimming pool, they persuaded the local owner of several fast-food franchises to pick up the tab.

An aggressive volunteer spirit is growing in many areas. The reasons are varied — a response to President Reagan's call for such private efforts, the administration's cuts in social programs, the economic hard times — but the effort in fast-growing central Florida has been particularly strong.

Gifts of time and money from individuals, corporations and private organizations to city and county governments in the area are providing police horse patrols, police vehicles, public swimming pools, free labor at city parks and thousands of school aides.

Elsewhere in the state, local charities and church groups are stepping up efforts to provide groceries, clothing, housing, nursery services, money and even dental care to those unable to manage under Social Security, Medicare, Medicaid, food stamps and other assistance programs.

"Personally, I would love to see churches more involved with this kind of work," said the Rev. Ron Greiser of Holy Trinity Episcopal Church in West Palm Beach. "For years, we allowed the federal government to take over work that we once did."

The Charter Co. in Jacksonville has "adopted" a senior citizen housing complex.

Many of the corporation's employees volunteer workdays to clean yards, wash windows, paint and do other chores to help out the residents of Hogan's Creek Towers. The company donates the materials, the workers their labor.

"We've become a model for Southern Bell and (others), which are also adopting senior-citizen developments," says Ann Knight, a Charter Co. records analyst who helped get the project started.

In Fort Lauderdale, Allstate Insurance Co. provided financing to rehabilitate a housing project for the handicapped and elderly in a slum section of the city.

Business donations to local governments of parks, fountains, statues and land for new fire stations or roadways is part of an American tradition.

Donations and financial support that were once graciously accepted, but unsolicited, are being actively sought.

"We've got to get away from tapping the traditional revenue generators," says Jeff Etchberger, Altamonte Springs city manager. "We're going to the people and saying, 'Hey, if you think enough of this project to give a little extra, we'd appreciate it.'"

"It's a spin-off of the economic times and is particularly good for Florida," he said, "because we have such a large population of retirees who have some very valuable skills that can be a benefit to local government."

Some Florida church leaders are not sure they can take up the slack left by federal budget cuts, but they are trying.

Baptist churches in southern Florida's Palm Beach County enlist 15 to 20 dentists to work with a mobile clinic which travels the state, treating migrant farm workers and the poor and handing out dental kits.

Ministers in the Boynton Beach area, between Palm Beach and Boca Raton, have formed the Metropolitan Ministerial Alliance Inc., an organization they hope can fill a need the government has missed. Their concern is housing.

Dr. R.M. Lee of St. John Missionary Baptist Church says he has little faith in the worth of housing projects run under government guidelines.

"Even when the money for those things were flowing freely, you practically had to be a crook to get the money," Lee said. "If you didn't know the right source who could get you the right contacts, your proposal was put in the stack and probably lost."

While realizing the many problems involved, Lee and others hope to tap private foundations, which he says don't impose so many guidelines.

Florida's congressional delegation has become the first to establish a program under the administration's Private Sector Initiatives Task Force, a special two-year effort to stimulate such projects throughout the country.

"Florida is taking a very active role in solving community problems," said the task force chairman, Armco Steel Corp. executive William Verity.

Some community leaders say private help for public projects has always been a way of getting around bureaucracies or of providing help where government doesn't.

Postage Meters Widely Used

STAMFORD, Conn. (AP) — A total of 1,820,866 licensed postage meters are in use around the world, according to a survey by a maker of mailroom equipment.

Postage meters are used in more than 100 countries. The United States has the largest postage meter population with 826,061 in service, followed by Canada with 113,019, Great Britain with 74,719 and West Germany with 21,982.

Eugene Krantz, of Pitney Bowes says "Metered mail is, for the most part, business mail."

Festival Has Other Features

An open house and tour of the Village of Yesteryear at the Pitt County Fairgrounds will be held in conjunction with the Southern Flue-Cured Tobacco Festival on Nov. 13 from 2-5 p.m.

The village, a creation of the American Legion Post in Greenville, consists of a mule and cow barn built in 1852; a pre-historic log cabin; corn bin; chicken house; smoke house and a church.

There will also be an old farm implement display featuring tools tobacco farmers used in the past.

Members of a special committee from the festival's board of directors will serve as guides. At the same time as the tour of the Village of Yesteryear there will be an exhibit of more than 40 antique cars, a quilt show, a tractor driving contest and a pig barbecue cook-off.

Turnout Of Voters Saw 'Turnaround'

By SALLY JACOBSEN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Democrats may have "returned to the fold" to help increase the voter turnout in the midterm elections and break a 22-year pattern of falling participation, says an expert in voting trends.

Curtis Gans, head of the Committee for the Study of the American Electorate, estimated Wednesday that about 39 percent of eligible Americans voted in Tuesday's elections.

That marked a slight increase from the 37.9 percent turnout of 1978 — also a non-presidential election year. Participation in that election was the smallest since 1942.

Voter interest is always lower when a presidential contest isn't held. Two years ago, when President Reagan was elected, 53.9 percent of those 18 or older voted.

Since 1960, turnout has steadily declined in both presidential and off-year elections.

And Gans predicted that this year's upturn would be temporary, sparked partly by "the degree of polarization" created by the Reagan administration.

He said the administration's policies may have "energized people" and "sharpened their interest in politics. Voters, he said, may feel real things are being discussed," such as inflation and unemployment.

Moreover, he speculated that the higher turnout may be a signal that those working-class and black Democrats, who voted Republican in 1980 or didn't vote at all, are "coming back to the Democratic fold."

The analyst's turnout estimate was based on an examination of the unofficial returns in 41 states of the statewide contest that drew the highest number of votes.

In those states, Tuesday's results were compared with the 1978 returns and with the voting age population in each state. The Census Bureau estimates there are 169.3 million Americans of voting age.

Of those 41 states, voter turnout was higher in 24 states and lower in 17 than in 1978, he said. With the final tallies, however, the rate may go up in as many as 30 states, he said.

States with a higher turnout this year, based on unofficial returns, are: Alabama, where turnout was up 8.0 percentage points from 1978; Arizona, 2.6; Arkansas, 12.1; Delaware, 4.0; Georgia, 9.8; Idaho, 1.0; Illinois, 1.7; Iowa, 8.2.

Maine, 6.8; Maryland, 1.5; Michigan, 1.0; Nebraska, 2.7; New Jersey, 2.1; New Mexico, 0.6; New York, 2.1; Ohio, 5.2.

Oklahoma, 1.1; Rhode Island, 0.9; South Carolina, 14.0; South Dakota, 3.6; Texas, 1.7; Vermont, 8.2; Virginia, 2.4; and West Virginia, 2.6.

These are the states with a lower turnout this year: California, where turnout was 2.5 percentage points lower than in 1978; Colorado, 3.4; Connecticut, 0.9; Florida, 6.8; Hawaii, 0.7; Kansas, 1.9; Massachusetts, 0.6; Minnesota, 1.6; Mississippi, 0.3.

Montana, 1.8; Nevada, 6.1; New Hampshire, 3.4; Oregon, 1.8; Pennsylvania, 2.7; Tennessee, 1.0; Wisconsin, 0.1; and Wyoming, 0.2.

States in which the final turnout tallies may go up, instead of down, are Hawaii, Massachusetts, Mississippi, Tennessee, Wisconsin and Wyoming, Gans said.

Victory's Thrill Must Suffice

CENTRAL POINT, Ore. (AP) — For Betty Anders and F. Lorain Tate, the thrill of victory will have to be enough.

The two were elected Tuesday to the posts of city recorder and city treasurer. But in a separate vote, Central Point voters approved a revised city charter that does away with the jobs.

"Well, that's the will of the people, I guess," said Mrs. Tate, who has been treasurer since 1965.

"I've never been defeated before in an election," she said. "I don't know if you'd call this a defeat or not."

Reunion For Airmen Who Flew The Hump

By VICTORIA GRAHAM
Associated Press Writer
PEKING (AP) — David Orth is a big, hearty farmer from Modesto, Calif., but his eyes fill with tears and his voice falters when he speaks of the perilous days 37 years ago when he "flew the Hump."
"Sometimes our men would pray for bad weather so the Japanese couldn't find us," the 60-year-old former crew chief said Wednesday. "We didn't know which was worse, the weather or the Japanese shooting at us, but they both were pretty darn bad."

Orth is one of 115 former pilots and crewmen who have returned to China to relive their World War II flights over the treacherous Hump — the stormy, 700-mile route over the Himalayas between China and India.

They and their families will fly it again Sunday when they take a one-hour commemorative commercial flight from Canton to Calcutta. But that flight will be in a modern jetliner high above the tallest peaks, not in the underpowered, overloaded C-47s that sometimes were dashed into the jagged mountains by the winds or downed by Japanese Zeros.

"When we flew from Shanghai to Kunming the other day," said Orth with a quaver in his voice, "I recognized the terrain immediately and it was as if 37 years had never happened."

"When you can bring back yesterday as this trip has, it is all worthwhile."

The Hump pilots flew supplies for Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalists to use against the Japanese. The returning Americans were soon reminded that their Chinese hosts' enemies now are not the Japanese but those same Nationalists, who moved to Taiwan after they lost the civil war to the Communists in 1949.

The Americans returned with caps displaying their wartime insignia, a shield surmounted by the cross-d American and Nationalist flags. Some wore their old flight jackets with the emblem of the old alliance on them. Their Chinese tour guides asked them to remove the badges, saying they were an insult and an indication of support for the government on Taiwan. Waiters in Kunming wouldn't serve them until they put the caps off of sight.

"This emblem means a lot to these men," said Orth. "After all, it's the symbol they fought under and their friends died under. You can't forget those kinds of things easily."

"We were fighting for the Chinese people, one people, and one day Taiwan will come back," said Peyton Walmsley of Seal Beach, Calif.

From 1942 to 1945, the U.S. Air Force flew the Hump in C-47, C-46 and C-54 transports and C-109 tankers, a four-to-five-hour ordeal, to supply the Chinese forces.

"We flew everything from bulldozer parts to rock crushers to chewing gum to cigarettes," said Orth. "If something was too big to carry in one piece, we just cut it up with torches and welded it together later."

Flying the Hump became a legend, treasured by more than 4,000 members of the Hump Flyers Association in the United States. Many never saw the mountains that gave the route its name because they were blanketed in clouds.

The twin-engine planes couldn't fly above 20,000 feet so they couldn't escape the weather. They had to fly through it and fight it. Sometimes they hid in the clouds and took their chances with the mountains to escape the Japanese.

"Planes were torn apart by the wind," said Orth. "Sometimes they just flipped over, just like a kite might be snapped around by a huge gust of wind."

If the weather was bad, the pilots had to keep flying after they took off because there was no place for them to land.

"The only thing to do was Orth said.

Capt. William McReynolds of Honolulu was 24 when he first flew the Hump. He made 83 round trips and considers himself lucky to be alive.

"Of course, you were always aware you could be killed at any minute," he said. "You were a fool if you weren't afraid because so many people died."

The Hump remains a magnet, he said.

"It won't be the same as flying through the wind and snow, and we certainly won't have Japanese planes shooting at us," he said. "But what a strange and wonderful feeling it will be to relive that feeling."

Social Security Fears During Campaign 'Shameless': Nixon

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —

Former President Nixon said today "the most shameful talk" of the election just past was about Social Security and said that people must be made aware it's "better to have some preventive medicine now than surgery later."

Nixon said that to keep Social Security going he would recommend no changes for those now receiving benefits. But he said there must be a new course for people who will become eligible in the future.

"Those members of Congress who refuse to look at the issue are on the wrong side," the former president said.

Nixon appeared on NBC-TV's "Today" show in two segments, one to talk about the election, the other about foreign policy.

Of President Reagan, Nixon said: "He is not stupid. He'll look at the election results. He'll see that he doesn't have as much support in the House" in the 98th Congress as he did in the last two years in the House, which went along with the major features of his economic program.

He also said he thinks Reagan "has not lost his stroke. He's lost it temporarily, some of it. Looking to the future, he is going to be able to govern, and govern effectively."

Nixon said he thinks it is possible conservatives will become even more disenchanted with Reagan in the next two years.

Asked to give a one-sentence description of various political leaders, Nixon made these observations:

—Thomas P. O'Neill, the speaker of the House: "A very astute, tough, ruthless politician, tending toward demagoguery."

—Ex-President Carter: "A man with very strong convictions. A man who feels very strongly that he did the right thing ... and will do everything he can to assure his place in history."

—Alexander M. Haig, who served Nixon as chief of staff in his last year in office and later secretary of state under Reagan: "One who rendered enormous service to the country. ... One who had some personality problems in dealing with others ... but one that I think history will treat better than his current contemporaries."

Asked if Haig was the "deep throat" of Bob Woodward and Carl Bernstein's Watergate book — an allegation made recently by John Dean — Nixon said: "That's slightly ridiculous. Al Haig is many things, but he knows nothing about the whole Watergate business, had nothing whatever to do with it at the time it happened. He became my chief of staff, frankly, after we lost that battle."

In the second segment of the interview, dealing with foreign policy, Nixon said the Reagan administration must take more positive control of events in the Mideast.

Nixon said Reagan must become an active participant in formulating Mideast policy and that "once we determine who is right, we must squeeze toward that goal."

Nixon said that Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin "has the opportunity to bite the bullet" on the Palestinian cause. Asked, however, whether he sees Begin doing that, Nixon replied, "Not at all."

He said Begin must realize he no longer has a blank check on American support and that once he is made to see that he might be amenable to a compromise.

The former president said he was not at all disturbed by the fact that U.S. Marines had been sent to Lebanon.

"It is far better that we send some troops now on a peaceful mission than to have to send more later," he said.

The former president, who has just written his second book on foreign policy, was asked whether he would have preferred to play a role in recent events in the Mideast.

Nixon said that a former president carries too much baggage for that and probably is not fitted for such a role. He praised Reagan's special ambassador, Philip Habib, as "the best man for the job."

Nixon recently returned from a visit to China 10 years after, as president, he re-established relations between the two countries. He was asked whether he fears reduced tensions between the Soviet Union and China.

"I think we should welcome it," Nixon said. "If there were a conflict between those countries, it would inevitably spread to world conflict."

But he said because "we don't want the Chinese back in the arms of the Russians," the United States must strengthen its economic ties to China.

"It is also absolutely essential that President Reagan and Leonid Brezhnev meet to reduce chances of miscalculations."

And Nixon said that once there is such a meeting the stage would be set for the beginning of arms control talks.

Impressive Number Of Blacks Won Seats In Vote

By The Associated Press
 Redistricting, strong black-white coalitions and some well-qualified candidates Tuesday elected impressive numbers of blacks to state and local positions, black officials say.
 At the state level, 13 blacks were elected to the Legislature. Beginning in 1983 there will be 12 black House members and black senator in the General Assembly, the largest number of blacks to serve in the Legislature since Reconstruction.
 In House elections, Democrat Herman Gist of Greensboro was elected to the 26th District. In the 39th District, blacks Annie B. Kennedy and C.B. Hauser were elected. Sidney Locks was elected to a seat in the 16th District, while Phil Berry and Jim Richardson secured two seats in the 36th District. Nick Jeralds and C.R. Edwards were elected in the 18th District, and Frank Ballance was elected to the 7th District.

 Black House incumbents re-elected were Melvin Creecy, in the 5th District; Dan Blue Jr., in the 21st District; and Kenneth Spaulding, in the 23rd District.
 In the Senate, William Martin of Greensboro won the seat in the 31st District, replacing retiring Sen. Henry Frye, D-Guilford, who also is black.
 In sheriff's races, Wake County Sheriff John Baker — a black won the job four years ago — easily won re-election.

In Warren County, Theodore Williams was elected sheriff. A black, he has been acting sheriff since he defeated a white deputy in the Democratic primary, replacing the former sheriff, who did not seek re-election.
 Pender County's new sheriff is black Democrat George Wright, who defeated incumbent James Bradshaw and write-in candidate K.S. Powers.
 In New Hanover County, black Democrat Joseph McQueen Jr., a county sheriff's captain, defeated retired U.S. Customs Service agent and Republican candidate John M. Dolan.
 Elsewhere in southeastern North Carolina, Bladen County voters elected Byron McNeill to the Board of County Commissioners for a second term. Berline Graham of East Arcadia won her bid for a two-year term to the county Board of Education.

 In New Hanover County, Sandy Martin, a philosophy and religion professor at the University of North Carolina at Wilmington, will join Dorothy Johnson as the second black on the seven-member Board of Education.
 In Pender County, Bonnie

Parker defeated a Republican challenge to become possibly the first black county commissioner in that county.
 Black candidate Rubin Sloan was elected to the Brunswick County Board of Commissioners, while Democrat Joseph Beatty was elected to the Brunswick County Board of Education.
 In Columbus County, LaDeen Powell became the first black official in Whiteville history by winning one of three seats on the Whiteville City Board of Education.

 Edgecombe County voters voted for a black Republican, Shelly Willingham, to win a black majority on the board of commissioners. Warren County voters also sent two black candidates to office in that county's board of commissioners.

 In Gates County, history was made when voters elected Cheryl Holland as the Gates County Clerk of Superior Court. She is the first black clerk ever elected in that county.
 Benjamin Ruffin, Gov. Jim

Hunt's minority affairs assistant, said black gains in all races indicate a growing black voice in the electoral process.
 "Many of these wins, especially in places where blacks don't constitute the majority, are proof that the black vote is being taken seriously," he said.

Driver Faces Varied Charges

Greenville police charged Richard Morris Hamill, 50, of Route 4, Greenville, with careless and reckless driving, assault with a deadly weapon and driving without an operator's license following investigation of a 5:30 p.m. collision Tuesday on Greene Street, 30 feet south of the First Street intersection.
 Officers said a car driven by Hamill collided with a car driven by Marlene Snyder Ross of Azalea Gardens several times, finally forcing the Ross car stop.
 Police, who witnessed the incident, reported that a passenger in the Ross car, identified as Hamill's wife Brenda Sue Hamill, shouted to officers that Hamill had been "trying to kill us."
 In addition to the charges resulting from the collision, Hamill was charged with carrying a concealed weapon after officers found a .32 caliber pistol in the car, and with assault by pointing a gun in connection with an earlier incident.
 Damage to the Hamill car from the collision was set at $50, while damage to the Ross vehicle was estimated at $150.

Fear More Violence In Ulster Prison

By ED BLANCHE
Associated Press Writer
BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Protestants and Roman Catholics fear a new outbreak of violence in Northern Ireland's prisons where convicted guerrillas from both sides carry on their sectarian feuding behind bars.

The crisis in the heavily guarded prisons, long a battleground in Northern Ireland's 13-year-old conflict, mirrors the mounting sectarian tension in the streets. Twenty-one people have been killed in the last two months.

The prison feuds, with convicted Protestant and Catholic gunmen demanding segregation from each other, erupted last month into cellblock clashes in Belfast's Maze prison, Magilligan prison near Londonderry and a women's institution at Armagh.

Tommy Lyttle, a leader of the militant Protestant Ulster Defense Association, said that the cellblocks are "a powderkeg" and warned "people are going to get killed" if the situation worsens.

Security authorities say the trouble could spread to the streets.

At least 12 inmates in Magilligan were hospitalized after a riot Oct. 20 between convicted Protestants and guards of the mainly Protestant prison service. The outbreak occurred the same day as violence-marred elections for a new provincial assembly.

In a three-day rampage, 120 Protestant loyalists wrecked cellblocks in the Maze, where last year 10 jailed Catholic nationalists starved themselves to death in a seven-month hunger strike demanding political prisoner status.

And the weekly Republican News, an IRA publication, said three Catholic women in Armagh were beaten by Protestants while a movie was being shown in the prison chapel.

Under Britain's controversial "criminalization" policy of treating convicted guerrillas as criminals rather than political prisoners — the root of the IRA hunger strike — Protestants and Catholics are mixed regardless of politics or religion.

The British believe that segregation will bestow a form of political prisoner status on the guerrilla groups and permit them to establish tight command structures that would turn the cellblocks into virtual training camps, as happened in the "special category" compounds before 1976.

Cellblock segregation was one of the demands made by the hunger-strikers, all members of the outlawed Provisional Irish Republican Army or its Marxist splinter faction, the Irish National Liberation Army.

But while the British allowed them to wear their own clothes and associate among themselves, they did not completely segregate the Catholic nationalists from their Protestant rivals.

IRA inmates in the Maze stepped up their campaign for segregation Tuesday when 145 men who have refused to do any prison work called off a protest launched during the hunger strike.

By doing so, they will return to prison workshops, kitchens and recreation areas where they will mix with Protestants, stirring new tension and putting pressure on the authorities to segregate the feuding factions.

The government's Northern Ireland Office said in a statement that "The disturbances are a consequence of a coordinated campaign by convicted prisoners, both Loyalist (Protestant) and Republican (Catholic), to dictate conditions under which they are being held. This is unacceptable."

The predominantly Catholic IRA is fighting to drive the British out of Northern Ireland. It seeks to unite the Protestant-dominated province with the Catholic-majority Irish Republic to end 60 years of partition.

The Protestant loyalists belong to the Ulster Defense Association, the outlawed Ulster Volunteer Force and the banned Red Hand Commando.

These avowedly pro-

British extremists violently oppose reunification, fearing domination by the Ireland's 4 million Catholics.

Lyttle charged that the Catholics have ganged up on the Protestants, who are outnumbered 2-1 in the prisons by jailed IRA and INLA activists.

That's the reverse of the population ratio in the province, where the million-strong Protestant majority outnumbers the 500,000 Catholics. There are about 800 convicted IRA and INLA members in prison and about 300 loyalists.

Said Lyttle: "One man had his throat cut and others were slashed. We've demanded segregation for years. But no one's paid any notice. Things are coming to a head now. The authorities are going to have to do something soon."

The Republican News also cited claims by IRA men in the Maze's H-shaped blocks that Protestant trustees who prepare prison meals lace food served to Catholic prisoners with kitchen scouring powder.

Homecoming Queen Wheelchair-Bound

BOILING SPRINGS, N.C. (AP) — Perhaps one of the highlights of 22-year-old Eva Whittington's college life came at Gardner-Webb College this past weekend, when she was named homecoming queen.

Ms. Whittington accepted her crown and burst into tears as she became the first wheelchair-bound student ever to be named homecoming queen at Gardner-Webb.

Ms. Whittington, at 5-foot-9, held her own in a family with three brothers. She played basketball in high school and also was a cheerleader.

But all that ended in March of her senior year in high school, when the car she was driving spun out of control on an icy road near Concord, flipped over a bridge and landed in a stream.

"My back was broken," she says. "I had no feeling in my legs." It took rescue workers 45 minutes to get her out of her smashed vehicle. After three months in the hospital, doctors told Ms. Whittington she had a severed spinal cord; she would never walk again.

At first, "I wanted to die," she admits.

But things began to change. She got a job at a local department store and Ms. Whittington says she began to think of returning to school. She enrolled at Gardner-Webb and decided she could live a full life again.

And she's done it.

Two Collisions On Wednesday

An estimated $5,500 property damage resulted from two traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Wednesday.

Officers said heaviest damage resulted from a 5:50 p.m. collision at the intersection of Howell and Pitt streets involving cars driven by Rickey Jason Poplin of 223 Jones Dorm and Alex Junior Barrett of 1223 Davenport St.

Barrett was charged with failing to stop for a stop sign and driving without an operator's license by police, who estimated damage at $2,400 to the Poplin car and $800 to the Barrett auto.

A 5:40 p.m. mishap at the intersection of Greenville Boulevard and Grandville Drive involved cars driven by John Miller Davis Jr. of Raleigh and Angella Dawn Brinn of 112B N. Holly St.

Damage from the mishap was set at $1,500 to the Davis car and $800 to the Brinn auto.

Mexico Seeing Two Walkouts

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Workers and management of Mexico's largest airline agreed to resume talks aimed at ending a three-day-old strike, but there was no end in sight to a walkout that closed the National University.

The strike by non-academic personnel has idled about 45,000 teachers and has shut about 350,000 students out of the classrooms.

The Department of Labor said Wednesday that the government-controlled Mexicana airline and the union representing 7,323 striking ground workers would resume talks. Officials did not specify when the bargaining would begin.

Negotiations broke off Sunday when Mexicana rejected the union's demand for a 43 percent to 50 percent wage increase to offset inflation, expected to reach 100 percent by year's end.

The company on Tuesday offered a 25 percent wage increase and 4.5 percent more in benefits, saying the offer was not negotiable. Workers currently earn the equivalent of $170 to $645 a month.

The strike, which started Monday, has forced Mexicana to cancel flights to 28 cities within Mexico and 14 in the United States and the Caribbean, officials said. The canceled flights carry an average of 20,000 passengers daily.

Meanwhile, the Department of Labor said there was little sign of progress toward resolving the strike by 23,000 non-academic staff members at the free National University of Mexico. The university strike also started Monday.

The workers are demanding a 50 percent wage increase, but the university says it cannot offer more than 25 percent. The striking workers' salaries now range from the monthly equivalent of $214 to $442.

Mexico's 4 million-member Federation of Labor, the country's equivalent of the AFL-CIO, has called for a national strike Nov. 11 if big businesses fail to offer emergency wage increases before that day.

The Mexicana and National University workers are not members of the labor federation.

Saw A Drop In Poultry Output

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's poultry output by federally inspected slaughter plants dropped 1 percent from a year earlier during September, according to the Agriculture Department.

A preliminary monthly report said Tuesday that September production totaled 1.84 billion pounds, including 1.42 billion pounds of young broiler chickens and 72.2 million pounds of "mature" chickens.

Turkey output, at 334 million pounds during the month, was down 3 percent from the year-earlier level, the report said. Other poultry, including duck production at 10.8 million pounds, accounted for the remainder.

Looking Ahead To Year 2000

A conference on "Farming in Eastern North Carolina in the Year 2000," is scheduled to be held at the McKimmon Center at N.C. State University in Raleigh Feb. 8, 1983.

Raymond Meiggs, agriculture development chairman for the Eastern North Carolina Chamber of Commerce, said, "It's important ... that we have a goodly number of farmers attend this conference ... and that they have some input."

He said the conference will result in recommendations designed to "help Eastern North Carolina farming regain its equilibrium."

The tentative program includes talks by Gov. Jim Hunt and University of North Carolina President William Friday, panel discussions on expanding the farm income base, and group discussions on resource limitations and constraints on development, processing, farm commodity opportunities and production systems, and world and domestic marketing.

REQUESTS APPROVED
Police Chief Glenn Cannon announced the approval of two requests for solicitation permits in Greenville.

Cannon said the requests were submitted by: the Girl Scouts of America to conduct a door-to-door solicitation Nov. 8-22 to sell calendars to raise money for local girl scout troops; and by Alpha Xi Delta to conduct a sidewalk solicitation Nov. 13 to raise funds for UNICEF.

Family Support for the Chronic Invalid

Families who have a chronically sick person often ask how they can be of maximum support to the patient. In addition to supplying physical needs, emotional support is extremely important.

To attain this, one must start by knowing that sick persons live in a special world that seems to revolve around them and their immediate needs.

Time hangs heavy for chronic invalids. They are deprived of many of the joys of living and become totally preoccupied with their illnesses and their needs. Sometimes the chronically ill are thought to be selfish. They are not. They are all consumed by the immediacy of their symptoms and their overtones of fear and anxiety.

The family must try to be patient and understanding without being oversolicitous and pampering. Invalids must be urged to take an active part in personal and family affairs to help break their concentration on their own illnesses.

When patients become so demanding that the family is unable to keep up with the pressures, they too may need support and even professional guidance.

The family physician, of course, has the keenest insight into the emotional and physical needs of patients. With the doctor's guidance and with help from a religious adviser, the chronic invalid can be encouraged to live in dignity and be made to be a responsible member of the household.

It is an arduous task. Sometimes members of the family are unable to accommodate themselves to the intensity of this burden. Mutual support by members of the family is essential if the patient is to be the beneficiary of such kindness.

A number of my friends are talking about this problem. If a woman decides to become pregnant by artificial insemination, does the donor of the sperm eventually have legal rights as a father. Do you know if this question has come up legally? — Mr. K.C., Maine.

Dear Mr. C.: This problem has come up for active discussion since the technique of artificial insemination was first established. No universal answer is available for the legal, social, religious, and psychological aspects of artificial insemination.

The permutations and combinations are limitless. They vary from state to state and country to country.

Many cases are on record of legal complications that might have been avoided had all parties involved understood every phase of the problem. Today, before this technique of impregnation is used, standard legal forms are signed by all people involved. Even with this kind of legal ritual, many court cases still occur to iron out the complexities that may arise.

I speculate when I say that I doubt that the donor of the sperm would have any legal rights as the father. For the donor never knows or certainly should never know to whom his sperm has been given. Only with anonymity can the legal implications be avoided.

Surprise Storm Struck Texas Coast Community; Heavy Loss

By CAM ROSSIE
Associated Press Writer
PORT ISABEL, Texas
(AP) — Damage from a surprise storm that uprooted trees, downed power lines and tossed mobile homes into a canal could reach $1 million in this community alone, authorities say.

The hurricane-force storm caught residents off guard when it blew through town early Wednesday, injuring 17 people — five of them seriously enough to require hospitalization.

"We were totally unprepared because no one issued a warning," said Minnie Solomonson, mayor of South Padre Island, which also suffered damage. "It was just a freak."

The losses could reach into the millions of dollars, and the damages in Port Isabel alone should total more than $1 million, Mayor Quirino Martinez estimated.

As winds gusted to nearly 100 mph in some places, dozens of mobile homes toppled into a canal, trees were uprooted and portions of the two communities were swamped. At least 18 airplanes were damaged at area airports and one Port Isabel apartment complex was nearly razed. Some homes were destroyed and resort hotels on the island were damaged, according to Ms. Solomonson and Martinez.

"I thought the building was just going to come crashing down," said Sheila S. Kilgore of St. Louis, who was staying in a South Padre Island hotel room on a business trip.

About two dozen families from the two communities were left homeless and others from a damaged camper park nearby also sought shelter, according to Nita Flewelling of the Red Cross' Brownsville Chapter. Port Isabel schools were closed Wednesday because of the "commotion" that carried over into morning cleanup efforts, said Ruth Gower of the Red Cross.

"Some people say they took a pretty good shaking from the wind," she said. The National Weather Service in Brownsville said the storm was triggered by an unusually strong early season cold front that col-

Residents of the University Towers in Greenville were treated to stories and refreshments Sunday afternoon by members of the ECU Library Science fraternity, Alpha Beta Alpha, in the lobby of the apartment complex.

Approximately 20 residents were treated to stories read by Betty Reddick, Ann Stocks and Gene Parsons. Teresa Taylor, president of the ECU chapter, introduced the group. Refreshments were served by Teresa Crissman and Tammy Lee Jolly.

Alpha Beta Alpha is a national Library Science Fraternity. The ECU chapter (Alpha Eta) was begun in 1966. Current officers include Hank Gardner, vice president; Teresa Crissman, secretary; Mima Dixon, treasurer, and Tracy Delius, historian-reporter. Dr. Carol Veitch is adviser for the group.

lided with the warm, unstable tropical air in South Texas.

U.S. Coast Guard Chief Bill Barts, in charge of the Port Isabel station, said the National Weather Service forecast the Coast Guard received Tuesday called for southeast winds at 17 to 23 mph shifting to northerly 23 to 34 mph as a weather front came through.

But the storm's gusts reached nearly 100 mph at Port Isabel and 81 mph on Padre Island.

"We didn't know it was going to be as bad as it was," said Barts.

N.C. Supreme Court Upholds Provision On Mortgage Loan

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The North Carolina Supreme Court has upheld the constitutionality of a law allowing the state Housing Finance Agency to provide mortgage loans to middle-income homebuyers.

In a unanimous decision Wednesday, the court affirmed a ruling made in March by Superior Court Judge James H. Pou Bailey.

The agency sells tax-exempt bonds and uses the money to make low-interest mortgage loans to lower-income people and to those who develop apartments for lower-income tenants.

The agency was authorized by law in 1979 to include moderate-income people and in December 1981 the agency proposed two $30 million bond issues to help moderate-income families to buy homes and to help developers build moderately priced homes.

The Local Government Commission, a state agency that must consider all proposed bond issues, refused to approve the agency's bond sale because an attorney questioned the constitutionality of the amendment extending the law to moderate-income people.

But the high court decided that, in an opinion written by Justice H. Phil Carlton, that "in expanding the agency's power to help those with 'moderate incomes,' the Legislature is acting with the same public purpose in mind (as the original law)."

In another decision, the court ordered a new trial for two brothers convicted of second-degree murder after a fight at a Sampson County nightclub.

The court said Willie James Boykin was prevented from testifying about his motives for making false confessions in the shootings of two men at a nightclub near Harrells. The cases were consolidated, meaning Willie Boykin was prevented from testifying that he had confessed to protect his brother, Walter Dal Boykin Jr., the court said.

That left the jury with the mistaken impression that Willie Boykin was the only defendant to confess to the shooting, the court ruled.

In other rulings: — No error was found in the Court of Appeals' decision to uphold a second-degree murder conviction and life sentence for Ernest Thomas "Pete" Corn. Corn was found guilty in Transylvania County in the 1979 death of Lloyd F. Melton.

— A guilty verdict in the manslaughter trial of Thomas Glenn Bailey in Nash Superior Court was reversed and a new trial was ordered because the court decided three jurors had been prejudiced after Nash County Sheriff Frank Brown took them to a restaurant during deliberations.

— The court ordered a new trial for Johnnie Sparks, convicted in Guilford County Superior Court and sentenced to life imprisonment on a first-degree sex offense stemming from an alleged attack on an 8-year-old boy. — No error was found in the trial of Tommie Howard White, convicted in Carteret County Superior Court in an attack on a 16-year-old Sanitary Restaurant employee in Morehead City.

Diabetes Month Named

November has been proclaimed National Diabetes Month.

According to information released by the Pitt County chapter of the American Diabetes Association, there are 6 million diagnosed diabetics in the United States and another 4 million who do not know they have diabetes.

The Pitt County chapter of the ADA was established in March of this year, largely to conduct patient education programs about how to live a fulfilling life while having the disease.

There is a toll-free number one can use to ask about symptoms, treatment and other aspects of the condition — 800-682-9692.

The next public education meeting of the Pitt County chapter will be held Nov. 18 at 7:30 p.m. at the Willis Building, corner of First and Reade streets.

Named For Court Post

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Chief Resident Superior Court Judge E. Maurice Braswell was appointed Wednesday to the North Carolina Court of Appeals.

Braswell, of Fayetteville, was elected to the appeals court Tuesday, but was appointed by Gov. Jim Hunt so that he immediately could fill the unexpired term of Judge Edward B. Clark, who retired last summer.

Braswell was unopposed in the judgeship race and normally would have taken the post in January.

Braswell is expected to be sworn in during the first week of December, leaving an immediate vacancy in the 12th Judicial District superior court.

The Judicial Nominating Committee is scheduled to meet within two weeks to recommend candidates for the vacancy to Hunt. The governor will select his nominee from that list.

With Braswell's departure, Superior Court Judge D.B. Herring Jr. will become senior resident judge. Herring first took office in 1975 when he was appointed to fill the unexpired term of Coy E. Brewer, who died in office.

Braswell, 59, began law practice in 1950. He served as a prosecutor for 12 years and has been a superior court judge since 1962.

Knox Is Seeking Club's Support

Charlotte Mayor Eddie Knox, a potential Democratic candidate for governor in 1984, has written participants in the North Tar River Fellowship Club meeting here last month in an apparent bid to promote his campaign.

Knox, who was a guest at the meeting, used the letters to invite the participants to write him expressing their concerns for the state during the next few years to help him develop his campaign program.

Some 400 persons attended the fellowship club meeting, held at M.K. Blount's River Road Ranch on Oct. 6.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) (NCDA) — The North Carolina f.o.b. dock broiler market was steady. Supply moderate. Demand moderate to good. The dock weighted average price is 38.41 per pound this week for small purchases of sized plant-grade broilers picked up at processing plants. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina today was 1,587,000.

points since Aug. 12, when it stood at 776.92, its lowest level since April 21, 1980.

Growing expectations of further declines in interest rates and lasting relief from double-digit inflation raised hopes for an economic recovery and spurred the rally. Analysts also said there was relief that Tuesday's elections were out of the way, and a belief that the Federal Reserve Board now could move to reduce interest rates further without being criticized for taking sides in a political campaign.

Among economic developments today, the Labor Department reported a record 4.68 million Americans received unemployment benefits in the week ended Oct. 16. It also said first-time claims for the week ended Oct. 23 from 687,000 the previous week. The Commerce Department said the nation's foreign trade deficit rose to $13.1 billion in the third quarter, more than double the $5.8 billion of the second quarter.

Exxon topped the active list at midday on the NYSE, up 1/4 at 31 1/4, in trading that included a block of 700,000 shares changing hands at 31 1/4 shares.

NEW YORK (AP) — The Dow Jones industrials average slipped from record-high levels in Wall Street's busiest morning ever today. Analysts attributed the decline in big-name issues to selling by investors seeking to cash in on an unprecedented surge in stock prices.

But while the blue-chip average fell, overall activity indicated buying interest remained strong.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, which soared a record 43.41 points Wednesday, was off 3.04 points to 1,062.45 at noon. Wednesday's close of 1,065.49 was an all-time high for the best-known indicator of stock-market activity, eclipsing the 1,051.70 mark reached Jan. 11, 1973.

More than three stocks rose in price for every two that fell on the New York Stock Exchange.

The NYSE composite index of all its listed common stock rose 43 to 82.48. The American Stock Exchange market value index was up 2.70 to 339.15.

Big Board volume reached an unprecedented 75.86 million shares after two hours of trading, up from 53.52 million as of the same time Wednesday and surpassing the 72.17 million shares of the comparable period Oct. 7, when trading for the day reached an all-time high of 147.07 million shares.

Wednesday's gains brought the rise in the Dow Jones industrials average to 288.57

BULL SESSION — Uta Saebel, 15, encourages Hansi the bull to take a wall as she trots around the countryside near Wetzelar, West Germany on her unique mount. Uta learned to ride about a year ago but her parents weren't able to get her a horse. She saw Hansi in a neighbor's pasture, and took her by the horns (as it were) and has been riding Hansi ever since. She's been teaching him dressage and even a little bit of jumping. (AP Laserphoto)

Miss N. C. In Bethel Parade

BETHEL — Miss North Carolina will be the special guest at the Bethel Christmas Parade, town commissioners reported at the board's meeting this week.

The parade is scheduled for Dec. 8 at 4 p.m. according to town recreation official Danny Norris.

The town opened bids at the meeting for two projects and awarded contracts to the low bidders.

Brown Roofing and Heating was low bidder for a new roof on the police and fire station and was awarded contract. Their bid totaled $3,794.

Bids for installing a fence around Pinelawn Cemetery and the water plant were opened and Eastern Fence was the low bidder with an approximate cost of $7,500.

The board accepted and ratified a bid from Ferrell Blount for a lot on Crawford Street.

Other business included: • An ordinance was approved on first reading for a franchise for cable vision granting a non-exclusive cable franchise to Greenville Cable TV.

• Additional liability insurance coverage for the town was approved for rescue and

Recall: Report False

WASHINGTON (AP) — A government recall of Ballpark Franks has been canceled because reports of hotdogs being contaminated by a razor blade and a tack proved to be false.

Officials in the Agriculture Department said Wednesday that Hygrade Food Products Corp., of Livonia, Mich., ended its recall after examinations showed that two of four reported tampering incidents were hoaxes.

Donald L. Houston, administrator of USDA's Food Safety and Inspection Service, said that examination of 600,000 pounds of the franks revealed no tampering or foreign objects.

The recall involved only franks from Hygrade's plant at Livonia, Mich. The products can be identified by a "12M" embossed on the edge of the package.

Rampants Seek Third Straight Victory

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer
Its playoff hopes but a flicker. Greenville Rose goes for its third straight victory Friday when the Rampants entertain Northeastern in the regular-season finale for both teams. The Rampants, who are 5-4 overall and a 4-2 in the conference, must beat the Eagles and hope Wilson Fike downs Rocky Mount to get a playoff berth. If that happens, Rose would be the Big East Division II playoff representative. Kinston clinched the league title and the Division I playoff berth last week with a 20-0 win over Rocky Mount.

Center Gregg Davis

Rose's chance of landing a Division II berth isn't good. The Gryphons figure to defeat Fike. Still, any chance is better than none — and Rose coach Ronald Vincent is pleased with his team — playoff berth or no.

"I extremely pleased with the guys' attitude," Vincent said, "and the way they've come back from a lot of hard times. They've played well."

Never as well, though, as last Friday evening when Rose shutout Wilson Hunt, 22-0. The Rose defense held Hunt to a negative three yards total offense and minus 30 yards rushing.

"It was probably the best game we've played all year,"

Vincent said. "As the stats showed, our defense was very strong."

Vincent hopes for a similar effort against Northeastern as the Rampants look for their third straight shutout. Rose has outscored its last two foes, 56 to 0.

Said Vincent: "Our defense is really excited about the chance of getting its third shutout in a row."

The Rampants figure to be heavily favored to defeat the Eagles, who have won just once in nine outings. Northeastern, 0-6 in the league, downed 2-A Camden, 14-0, the third game of the season.

Since then, however, the Eagles have lost six straight and have given up over 30 points five consecutive weeks while scoring but 43 points. Northeastern has scored only 55 points this season and has given up 228 points.

"They're a very young team," Vincent said. "They've had some problems this year."

Northeastern, coached by ex-East Carolina University player Mike Herring, is led by running back Eric Shannon, a 6-1, 195-pounder who also returns kickoffs and punts.

One of the Eagles' problems has been quarterback, where two players alternate — Doug Shannon and Melvin Hawkins.

The Eagles are a big squad — they average over 230 yard across the front line on defense — but they are slow. Leading the defense are ends Chris Sanders and Avery Brooks and linebackers Ernest Shannon and Kevin Rogers.

The game is Homecoming for the Rampants and it also Tobacco Festival weekend, and the winner of the game — designated the Junior Tobacco Bowl Game — getting a trophy from the Southern Flue-Cured Tobacco Association.

"It's our Homecoming Game and our seniors really want to finish strong," he said. "We had some good things happen the last few weeks and we want to finish up playing well."

"So," he added, "we have the incentive of it being Homecoming, that we want to finish with a good record and we still have a chance at a Division II playoff spot."

One thing that does concern Vincent is that the Rampants will not be in school Friday. The only other time that has occurred this season was on Oct. 8 and the Rampants defeated Beddingfield that night, 17-13.

"We didn't play well that night," Vincent said. "I don't know what kind of effect it (being out of school) will have."

Vincent does believe that winning Friday would help Rose in the off-season and in preparing for next year.

"There's a carryover," he said. "It helps create a good attitude and helps people become interested in what you're trying to do."

The Rampants come into Friday's game off an impressive victory over Hunt. The Rampants dominated the game in nearly every area, outgaining the Warriors by a 334 to minus three-yard margin.

Vincent said he did not expect such an easy victory. "Going into the game we thought they had as good offensive personnel as anyone," he said. "I think we controlled the line of scrimmage and they got frustrated early."

"We stopped their offense early and our offense got some momentum and it just seemed the momentum grew as the game went on."

Vincent praised the play of defensive ends Frankie Carr and Tommy Sparkman and inside linebackers Craig Dupree and Reggie Clark.

"Carr had another super night," he said. "And Sparkman probably played his best game of the year."

Vincent also cited the Rose offensive line for its work. "The offensive line had its best game of year," he said.

The Rose offensive line includes Gregg Davis, Bill

Johnson, Jay Mahoney, Greg Britt and Frankie Carr. "We had the best trap blocking at Rose High that we've ever had," Vincent said.

The only negative point to the game, Vincent said, was six fumbles. "We also had a couple of opportunities to score and didn't," he said. "But, overall, I was extremely pleased with our performance."

Pirate Club Shortfall Adds To ECU Deficit

From staff and wire reports
The failure of the school's athletic booster club to meet its pledges is the biggest reason East Carolina University's athletic department is faced with heavy losses, a school official said Wednesday.

The department lost about $175,000 last year and owed $573,873 as of June 30 this year, said Clifton G. Moore, ECU vice chancellor of fiscal affairs, in a telephone interview.

The booster organization, called the Pirate Club, had pledged $350,000 to the department, but contributed only $242,000, Moore said.

"The Chancellor has all intentions of not going deeper into the red," Moore said. "Hopefully, we're going to come close to breaking even this year."

School officials said ECU hoped to avoid future deficits by raising $1 million, or $200,000 a year, over the next five years. That drive, which began about three months ago, has already passed the $500,000 mark, school Chancellor John M. Howell said.

The department's current deficit has been covered with money borrowed from non-tax university funds on which the athletic department is paying interest, Moore said.

His comments came in response to an audit by the State Auditor's Office showing the ECU athletic fund had lost $321,735 in 1980-1981.

Pirate Club Executive Director Richard Dupree, who took over the reigns of the organization just over a year ago, said, "I suppose that's basically true," that the club fell short of its goal a year ago.

"But there are some other sides to that coin too," he added. Dupree said that the $350,000 pledge was for "unrestricted funds" only. "It's just been in the last couple of years that the Pirate Club has received restricted gifts. These count in Pirate Club memberships, but they do not get counted in the total pledge picture." Such restricted gifts might be for a certain sport, or a project of the Pirate Club or the university. The gifts of such things as courtesy cars by auto dealers count toward their Pirate Club memberships, but also do not show up in the "pledge" amount, and gifts for endowments also do not show up.

Dupree said that the Pirate Club thus is raising more money, but it always doesn't show up in the "pledge."

Another problem he said which throws off the pledge figure is that some people prefer to make their contribution in installments. "That way, when the year ends, they might have paid only half of their pledge, so the rest of that money comes under the next year's total. It all comes out in the wash from year to year."

Dupree did feel that the problem should be a rallying point for the Pirate fans to do more in the future. "The people in the Pirate Club have to rally. We've simply got to do more to back the program."

Dupree said that the club is undergoing some reorganization and that there would be some changes in the way the fund drives are run. "We're making plans right now for our spring drive, and we want to make sure that everyone is asked to join the club. There have been people in the past who have said that they were never asked to join. In Greenville, for instance, we're going to run the drive after the same fashion the United Way campaign is run.

"Hopefully, this will give us the ability to improve our pledges, and get the money that is needed."

Justice Dept. Gets Into Act

WASHINGTON (AP) — Major college football powers challenging the exclusive right of the National Collegiate Athletic Association to market televised games have the support of the Justice Department.

The universities of Oklahoma and Georgia, two of the game's most powerful football forces, are challenging the NCAA's television broadcast rights, leading a group of major college football powers seeking to sell the rights to own their games.

The department said it agreed with the ruling of a federal judge that the NCAA restrictions violate federal antitrust law.

"The NCAA's restrictions ... were properly found to be an unreasonable restraint of trade," said the department in a legal brief filed with the U.S. 10th Circuit Court of Appeals.

The NCAA wants the appeals court to overturn the lower court ruling Sept. 15 by U.S. District Court Judge Juan G. Burciaga of New Mexico.

The Justice Department, in its friend-of-the-court brief, said it agreed with Burciaga that the NCAA's television policy deprives its members of the right to compete in the sale of television rights.

The NCAA includes about 500 member colleges and universities that field football teams and 187 schools in the Division I category of major teams. The NCAA has television contracts with ABC, CBS, and the Turner cable broadcasting system.

The television contracts were worth $29 million in 1978 and are expected to be worth $72 million in 1985, the Justice Department said.

The major powers dissatisfied with the NCAA rules which restricted the number of their televised games formed the College Football Association in the 1970s and negotiated a contract with NBC.

The NCAA said the contract violated its by-laws and has threatened sanctions against the CFA schools.

The Justice Department said, "because of the NCAA's dominant regulatory position in the world of college sports, such sanctions would devastate a school's athletic programs, make it impossible to recruit quality athletes and reduce the income and prestige resulting from participation in intercollegiate athletic events."

However, department lawyers said that Burciaga went too far in declaring that the NCAA policy was on its face a form of price fixing or a group boycott in violation of federal antitrust law.

"The NCAA's television restraints ... are not naked restraints, manifestly unrelated to any legitimate cooperative endeavor," the department said.

But it said the NCAA had failed, based on the available evidence, to show that its policy has a pro-competitive effect.

"The NCAA offered justifications allegedly showing the importance of the television restrictions for the continued efficacy of its pro-competitive functions," the department said. "But after reviewing the evidence the district court correctly rejected those justifications."

NFL Players Looking At USFL

Planters Bank Aids ECU Drive

NEW YORK (AP) — Striking National Football League players are talking about jumping en masse to the United States Football League.

And Chet Simmons, commissioner of the USFL, is beginning to wonder if the NFL is thinking about jumping on the fledgling league.

The NFL Management Council is proposing, in the negotiations to end 45-day-old players' strike, a series of provisions which would, in effect, penalize the new league and any players who might head its way.

A number of player representatives at the negotiation site visited Simmons' midtown office a few blocks away, and said if they became free agents through voided contracts, large chunks of NFL rosters could jump to the USFL, which opens its first season next March.

"If contracts were voided and we were faced with 1,500 free agents, that would be a bonanza that we never counted on," Simmons said later. "But if they wanted to move a team in toto, that's a possibility I had never thought about before today."

Don Hasselback, player rep for the New England Patriots, also mentioned that the union will give to the USFL a list of 352 names of NFL players due to become free agents on Feb. 1. And Ed Garvey, executive director of the union, said NFL players could legally sign "futures" contracts with USFL teams, as Larry Csonka and Paul Warfield did in the 1970s with the now-defunct World Football League.

Among the proposals reportedly being made by the NFL Management Council, the owners' bargaining unit, in this current round of negotiations:

—Moving the NFL college draft from late April to Feb. 1, about the same time the USFL plans to conduct its draft.

—Adding mid-round draft choices for the poorer teams in each year's draft (a bottom-of-the-ladder team might get an extra selection in the sixth or seventh rounds, for example), reducing the available pool of talent.

—A year's severance-pay penalty for any player who leaves the NFL for another league and then returns in a subsequent year. (A five-year player, for example, who joins another league, comes back to the NFL a few years later and retires one year after that would not get severance-pay credit for that sixth NFL year).

—Additional draft selections for expansion teams, likewise reducing players who might opt for the USFL.

—Expansion from two to five years of the provision which permits a team to retain the rights to a player who either is drafted and goes to another league or leaves a team for another league. (If, for instance, a rookie drafted by Washington opted for the USFL or the Canadian League and two years later chose to return to the NFL, his rights would still belong to the Redskins for three years and he could play for them only, unless he was cut or traded).

—An increase of the active roster from 45 to 49 players (again reducing the available pool of talent).
"In the beginning," Simmons said, "there was every indication that the NFL was not interested in stopping the USFL from forming. Now I have to begin to wonder. There may be more of a threat than we first perceived."

The severance part of the package now on the bargaining table is new to the thinking of NFL ownership. There is no severance pay now. The owners are offering severance tied to their proposed minimum-salary schedule, to begin with vested players (those in the league after three games of their fourth season).

But under the Management Council proposal the severance would be paid "immediately following the third game of the NFL regular season next following the player's leaving the NFL or any other professional football league, whichever occurs later." In other words, a player cut during the 1983 season wouldn't get his check until the third game of the 1984 season — or until he retired from the USFL, CFL or any other league. The union is asking that severance begin with a player's rookie year ($15,000 for each year of service) and that it be paid immediately.

Among the other proposals in the management council's proposal, which the owners say is worth $1.313 billion and would run through the 1986 season:

—Doubling postseason paychecks (the largest amount going from $18,000 to $36,000 for members of the winning Super Bowl team, the smallest being a jump from $2,500 to $5,000 for members of the losing Pro Bowl team).

—Creating new collectively bargained performance or incentive bonuses "for which all players will be eligible."

For "individual playing time" in the regular season,

ECU Takes Two Wins

RICHMOND, Va. — East Carolina won a pair of games in volleyball last night, downing Virginia Commonwealth and George Mason.

In the opener against VCU, the Lady Pirates gained an 11-15, 15-9, 18-16 win. They then topped the Patriots 15-12, 15-8.

"The match against VCU was a great one," Coach Lynn Davidson said. "We had a little trouble getting started, but in the second game, we got things going and controlled the tempo."

"In the third game, at the eight-point mark (where the teams switch sides), we were ahead, but the momentum changed. VCU had match points several times, but our kids just kept fighting back."

Davidson singled out Dale LaVant and Lexanne Keeter for their play, saying "they both came on strong in the end."

Of the George Mason match, Davidson said, "We didn't have much trouble. We played really well."

Darlene Hedges "just intimidated Mason," according to the coach. "Sandy Gideon's passing was excellent."

The victories boosted the Lady Pirates to 23-12, tying the mark for the most wins in a season. They can exceed that on Saturday in the Duke Quad tournament, which also will feature Virginia and Georgia.

Cerone Re-signs With Yankees

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Yankees catcher Rick Cerone, who had been eligible for free agency and had talked about moving to another team, has re-signed with the Yankees.

"Rick always wanted to stay with the Yankees," George Kalafatis, Cerone's agent, said Wednesday. "He always wanted to be a part of the Yankees."

Cerone signed a multiyear contract. Terms were not announced.

Cerone was traded by the Toronto Blue Jays to New York in 1980 and hit .277 with 14 homers and 85 runs batted in that season.

He has been slowed by injuries the past two seasons. He broke his right thumb early in the 1981 season and hit .244 with just two homers in 71 games that year.

Last season, Cerone broke his left thumb and hit just .227. He was also bothered when the Yankees traded for Minnesota catcher Butch Wynegar while Cerone was on the disabled list.

Cerone, who split playing time with Wynegar behind the plate, had been told by Yankees owner George Steinbrenner that he would replace Graig Nettles at third base, prompting Cerone to suggest he might seek a move to another team.

But Kalafatis said Cerone wanted to stay with Yankees, and said the two sides were never far apart during contract negotiations.

"Our discussions with Rick and his agent were conducted very professionally, resulting in our agreement that provides for, and protects the best interests of Rick and the Yankees," said team President Lou Saban.

players will receive $2,500 for appearing in 25 percent of all offensive or defensive plays, $5,000 for appearing in 50 percent of them and $7,500 for appearing in 75 percent or more of them.

For "team performance" in the regular season, if a team ranks in the top five in official NFL statistics in passing offense or defense, rushing offense or defense or total offense or defense, a player will earn a bonus similar to the playing-time checks, i.e., $2,500 for being in 25 percent of the offensive or defensive plays, etc.

—An increase in total pension contributions from last season's $8.195 million to $12.5 million per year.

—Quadrupling major medical coverage to $1 million per player and increasing life insurance from $30,000 to $50,000 for rookies and from $5,000 to $10,000 for each year of service for veterans, up to a maximum of $100,000 (from the existing $50,000).

On Wednesday, while negotiations went on quietly (and only occasionally, the face-to-face bargaining consuming about five and from Simmons' office and NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle's office and welcoming Ted Turner, the cable television magnate who bankrolled the short-lived players' all-star season and who said he's still interested in televising and financing a players' league if the talks fail to result in a settlement.

The NFL wiped the Nov. 7-8 games off the slate Wednesday, reducing the season to no more than 11 games. When and if it resumes, the playoff berths will be decided by conference standings, not by divisional position. This is to avoid a situation in which one or more teams with, say, an 8-3 record in one division might be knocked out of the playoffs by a team with a 6-5 record in another division within the same conference.

Current plans for the resumption of the season call for two weekends of the strike to be made up Jan. 2-3 and Jan. 8, 9 and 10. Those games will involve divisional rivals and will be chosen with an eye toward balancing home-and-away schedules.

Clemson, Carolina Fight To Stay Alive

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

While Maryland seeks to extend its winning streak, Clemson and North Carolina will fight to remain alive this weekend in the Atlantic Coast Conference football title chase.

The Terrapins are 4-0 in the conference and 6-2 overall, good enough to guide them into The Associated Press college football poll at No. 19. They'll face Miami, Fla., at Maryland's Byrd Stadium.

Clemson is 3-0 and needs a victory to stay alive in the championship picture. North Carolina, 2-1 after last weekend's 31-24 loss to the Terrapins, must win to hold onto its faint title dreams.

In other conference action, Duke and Wake Forest tangle in Durham and Virginia looks for its third straight victory against erratic Georgia Tech.

Bobby Ross succeeded Jerry Claiborne as head coach and brought life to a dull Maryland offense. After losses to Penn State and West Virginia, he's rallied his team to within striking distance of the ACC crown, which would be its first since 1976.

The Clemson matchup, two weeks away, looms as the battle for conference honors, but Ross refuses to look beyond this weekend.

"No way. I don't think that can possibly happen," says Ross. "We're a team that realizes our potential."

That potential was brought to light last weekend when tailback Willie Joyner, a transplanted North Carolinian, rushed for a school-record 240 yards and two fourth-quarter touchdowns.

"We've gotten steadily better in the rushing game and we've got a lot of confidence in it," Ross adds.

Miami's strength was the passing of quarterback Jim Kelly, but he was injured earlier this season. Mark Richt was doing an adequate job as replacement, but Hurricane Coach Howard Schnellenberger suspended Richt and another player this week for rules infractions.

Redshirt freshman Kyle Vanderwende will start in place of Richt, but Schnellenberger is more concerned about stopping Maryland's running game.

"Our team has played well defensively throughout most of the season," said Schnellenberger. "It will possibly be our sternest challenge of the year facing this Maryland offense that is balanced so well both running and passing."

To have any chance of winning his second ACC title in five years, Tar Heel Coach Dick Crum not only must beat the Tigers in Death Valley, but also must depend on Clemson to knock off Maryland in two weeks.

"Our job is to get settled back down and play with poise and intelligence," says Crum. "First, we have to beat Clemson down there, which is no small task."

"Second, Clemson would have to come back from a loss and beat Maryland. Their track record in College Park is not that good," he adds.

While the Tar Heels still boast the league's top rushing offense, Clemson has the ACC's leading rusher in Cliff Austin, who is averaging more than 115 yards per game.

Off the field, Clemson's attention has been focused on the NCAA's investigations into alleged football recruiting violations. Coach Danny Ford won't comment on the results of the probe, sticking to the task at hand.

"We'll have to play our best game of the year to win because they're the best team we've played personnel-wise," he says. "We're concerned about how we'll be able to move the ball against them."

Clemson had last weekend off to get some players back into fighting shape, but Ford will still be without the services of quarterback Homer Jordan, defensive tackle Dan Benish and cornerback Ronald Watson.

Duke used a double-tight end alignment to rack up rushing yardage against Georgia Tech en route to a 38-21 victory to snap a four-game losing streak. Mike Grayson gained 188 yards in the triumph, which raised Duke's conference mark to 1-2.

"We'll continue to use it," says Coach Red Wilson of the unusual formation. "We'll go against Wake with a similar game plan, but make a few little changes and do a few things just for them."

Wake Forest, second to the Blue Devils in rushing in yards a game. Groh may be the service of quarterback Michael Ramsey, who's pulled a hamstring muscle. That leaves Cary Schofield's arm as the major weapon against the Blue Devils.

"Right now, our game is a real challenge against a team that is anticipating the pass," says Groh.

It's been 12 years since Virginia's team, and Coach George Welsh isn't counting his eggs yet.

"Georgia Tech is a better Wake Forest or VMI," says

4-4 and have a chance for a winning season for the first time in a long time."

To be exact, it's been four years since the Yellow Jackets have finished above .500 and they jeopardized chances to break that drought last week with the loss to the Blue Devils. To win this week, Bill Curry's defense will have to stop the Cavalier wing-T which is primarily responsible for Virginia's modest streak.

"We're going to have to improve our defense against the rush," says Curry.

Madlock Hopes To Be Known

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

Now that he's succeeded the popular Willie Stargell as captain of the Pittsburgh Pirates, Bill Madlock hopes baseball fans finally will discover who he is.

hitting title again in 1976, batting .339, but when time came to pick a token player from the Cubs for the All-Star game, Reds' Manager Sparky Anderson chose Steve Swisher, a sub-catcher and a .240 hitter.

But he wouldn't bet on it.

"Next spring, I'll start making reservations for my annual mid-summer break," said the stocky, hard-hitting third baseman. "It won't be Chicago (site of the All-Star game July 6). As usual, I'll be taking the wife to Las Vegas."

"That's what I've been doing pretty regularly for the last six years."

The second best active hitter in all baseball (tied with George Brett at .316 just back of Rod Carew's .331), three times batting champion of the National League, Madlock acknowledges that he suffers an identity problem.

"That really burned me up," he said. "That's when I decided to take the wife to Las Vegas, forget baseball and have a ball."

It was while at Las Vegas that Madlock spotted an antique Chinese clock in the MGM Hotel, bought it and immediately became an antique clock freak, a vice which he merged with a fetish for old cars.

But that's another story.

"I never got into another All-Star Game until last year when I batted .341 for the season to win the batting title again," he said. "I felt a lot of times I deserved it but I never got a call."

He's baseball's "Mr. X." He's a "Who's He?" instead of a "Who's Who" personality. He gets a little weary of quipsters saying that Madlock drives his limousine up to the gate of Three Rivers Stadium and nobody gets out.

"It bothered me for a long time, now I'm resigned to it," he said of being ignored for All Star teams. "I've got so I enjoy Las Vegas. I forget baseball, get rested and refreshed and come back for a better last half-season."

The 31-year-old Madlock was in New York this week for some public relations work, aimed at dressing up his image.

"One time a guy was picked over me who had only 14 rbis — I had 50. Another time I deserved it but Tom Lasorda (Dodger manager) picked Lopes (Dave Lopes of the Dodgers, saying, 'Dave hasn't played in it before.' I thought I was a cinch in 1980 because our man, Chuck Tanner, was the manager. But Chuck couldn't pick me because I was having a bad year (.277)."

Madlock said he didn't expect to be picked by the fans because of his anonymity at Pittsburgh and the tough competition (earlier Pete Rose, Ron Cey and Mike Schmidt).

"Schmidt is the best player in baseball," he said. "But this year I had better stax because pitchers refused to pitch to him. I thought I deserved it over Bob Horner and Ray Knight."

"I've always liked New York," he said. "Fans here are real baseball fans and they give you credit."

Madlock wishes he could say the same about Pittsburgh.

"The people are good there," he said, "but they're not baseball fans. It gets awfully lonesome playing before 5,000 and 6,000 even when you're in a pennant race. It's a steel and mining town. They come out of those dirty mines and blast furnaces and all they want to do is grab a cold beer and go out and see people beat up on each other."

"They're more football fans."

But he wasn't, so Madlock and the missus just flew to Las Vegas to forget their frustrations.

"I don't gamble," the rugged, bearded infielder said. "I leave that to Cynthia. She loves the slots. I just look at the shows and scout around for clocks and old cars."

Madlock says he now has a collection of 30 antique clocks from all over the world and his back yard cluttered with antique gasoline guzzlers — a '52 Ford, '57 Mercedes, two Rolls-Royces ('57 and '80 vintage), an '82 Mercedes and a Cherokee Jeep.

Madlock's identity crisis, however, started before he came to Pittsburgh in 1979 after stints with Texas, the Chicago Cubs and San Francisco Giants.

He was with the Cubs when he played in his first All-Star Game in 1975, hitting .354 that year to lead the league and being co-winner of the game's MVP Award. He won the

"I ride the Jeep," said. "The clocks? They're all in the living room where nobody sits but when all those chimes go off at the same time you think you're on Times Square at midnight New Year's Eve."

SouthWest Edgecombe has been there all year. As each week passed and the victories piled up, SouthWest Edgecombe has continued to grow in significance, looming always larger.

Ayden-Grifton has tried not to look ahead to SouthWest. But it has not always been easy. Not when the game figured to decide the Eastern Carolina Conference championship.

"We've looked forward to the game without looking forward to it," A-G coach Dixon Sauls admitted. "I think that the game has been in the back of the mind of the coaches and players all season."

"We've always felt," he said, "we'd be playing SouthWest Edgecombe for the conference championship."

And so the Chargers shall. Come Friday night when A-G travels to Pinetops the ECC title will be on the line. A win will give the Chargers the crown — not to mention a perfect 10-0 season.

A loss, however, would leave the Chargers and Cougars tied for the ECC title. If that happens, and if North Pitt defeats Charles B. Aycock, the ECC will end up in a three-way tie — the same as a year ago — and a drawing will be held to decide who will be the ECC's Division I and II playoff representatives.

Sauls understandably hopes that doesn't happen. Said Sauls: "We hope to win the conference championship on the field."

The Cougars have more than enough talent — and incentive — to deny Sauls and his team the victory.

Incentive? Pick 'em:

- The Cougars lost to Ayden-Grifton, 14-0, in the last game of the season last year to force the three-way tie and a draw.
- Worse, when the draw was held the Chargers won and C.B. Aycock received the Div. II bid. The Cougars stayed home. No doubt, that is much on the Cougars' minds.
- It is also the Cougars final game of the season and they would like little more than to spoil the Ayden-Grifton's perfect season and its bid for the ECC title.

"It's going to be an excellent test as we attempt to cap off an undefeated season," Sauls said. "They pose a great deal of problems."

The main problem is the Cougars' size. They are big — and fast. Six Cougars tip the scales at over 200 pounds, and all are starters. The Cougars are a power team. They run straight at an opponent as if to say: Stop us — if you can.

"They have tremendous size," Sauls said, "but, again, we feel like we'll have the advantage in quickness."

Among the players Sauls will be counting on most to offset the Cougars' size are linebacker/offensive lineman Chuck Smithwick and quarterback Joey Kennedy. Said Sauls: "If anything has carried us this season it has been the play of our seniors, particularly Chuck Smithwick and Joey Kennedy."

Smithwick is, if not the best, then one of the best players in the league — defensively and offensively. He leads the team in tackles, and it is he and tackle Kevin Craft are who the Chargers go behind when they need the tough yards.

Kennedy, in his first year at quarterback, has been simply amazing. He leads the league in passing and has thrown just one interception — that coming last week — all year.

Kennedy gives the Chargers the best passing attack in the conference. Said Sauls: "He has come up with the big plays when we've needed them."

The Chargers also have the confidence that winning nine straight games — and 19 of 22 in the past two years — brings.

"I don't feel we are in awe of them. We are confident and winning ballclub, and we have confidence in our players — especially our seniors — that we'll make the plays it takes to win," Sauls said.

"This is what you shoot for, the opportunity to play in this type of game. This is a players' game."

The pick here? It's a tough choice, but the nod goes to Ayden-Grifton, say 20-13.

Laker Coach Finds Little Wrong Now

By The Associated Press
Los Angeles Coach Pat Riley was unhappy with his team's play on opening day.

But he couldn't find much wrong with Wednesday night's 135-134 National Basketball Association win over the Denver Nuggets.

"We played terribly last Friday," Riley said of the defending NBA champions' opening-day loss to Golden State. "But we were much better tonight."

James Worthy, the Lakers' No. 1 draft pick, was the Los Angeles hero — tipping in the winning shot with four seconds left.

"Both teams showed great poise down the stretch," said Riley. "You have to have some luck during a season — and we had some tonight."

Elsewhere in the NBA, it was Seattle 109, San Antonio 107; Golden State 99, New York 97; Boston 111, Indiana 104; Detroit 152, Chicago 144; Philadelphia 130, San Diego 111; Washington 104, New Jersey 85 and Dallas 102, Houston 101.

Denver's Doug Moe was a frustrated coach after Wednesday night's loss: "We were playing great and then we slowed it down, and we can't afford to do that again this time."

He said the key was a failure to keep pressure on the Laker defense. "I don't know why we started to stand around, but we did, and that let them pressure us defensively and the result was some bad passes and turnovers."

"Our games here (in Denver) are always high-scoring, but I just don't know why they always have to be one-pointers," said Riley.

Worthy, who scored 22 points, was positioned perfectly under the basket after Kareem Abdul-Jabbar misfired on a short hook shot. Dan Issel's last-second desperation shot from the corner failed to fall for Denver.

Los Angeles trailed 134-129 after the Vandeweghe score to go in the over. But the Nuggets were unable to score the rest of the game, and the Lakers closed within a point on two hook shots by Abdul-Jabbar, the last with 41 seconds.

SuperSonics 109, Spurs 107

David Thompson's 28-foot jump shot at the buzzer lifted Seattle over San Antonio. After San Antonio's Johnny Moore missed a jumper at Seattle's Jack Sikma rebounded with two seconds left, the Sonics called time out with the Spurs leading 107-106. Seattle's Williams inbounded the pass to Thompson who fired the three-pointer over San Antonio's Ed Rains.

Thompson led Seattle with 21 points while guard George Gervin with 26.

Warriors 99, Knicks 97

Sam Williams made two free throws with two seconds remaining, wrapping up a furious comeback for Golden State. New York led by as many as 14 points in the final period and was ahead 87-88 with 2:13 left. Williams scored 10 of his 13 points in the final quarter and all six Warriors points in the final minute.

Purvis Short led the Warriors in scoring with 31 points and guard World Free had 27.

Celtics 111, Pacers 110

Larry Bird scored 10 of his team-high 23 points in a decisive 31-point third period as Boston beat Indiana.

The Celtics, who had opened the season with two victories on the road, employed 11 all players on the squad in improving their Boston Garden opening game record to 25-12.

Robert Parish scored 17 points and Gerald Henderson 15 in the Celtics' balanced attack. Billy Knight led Indiana with 25 points, including six in a row in the final seconds. Herb Williams had 24 points and Clark Kellogg 19.

Pistons 152, Bulls 144

Isiah Thomas and Kelly Tripucka scored 28 points each as Detroit defeated Chicago for its fourth consecutive victory.

The Bulls, who fell to 0-3 despite a 41-point performance by Reggie Theus, twice pulled even with the Pistons in the second quarter after staging a 15-2 upsurge.

However, they never came closer than eight points apart that, and a 10-1 scoring spurt by the Pistons in the final two minutes gave Detroit an 80-70 advantage at intermission.

"That score is characteristic of playing a team like that," said Detroit Coach Scotty Robertson. "Bulls Coach (Paul) Westhead has got them away from playing a slowdown game, and I admire him for that. I was pleased by the way we reacted to their running game."

76ers 130, Clippers 111

Moses Malone scored 29 points and pulled down 17 rebounds as Philadelphia beat San Diego.

The Clippers' Randy Smith, who scored 14 points, was honored by the 76ers before the game for setting a new league record by playing in his 845th consecutive game, surpassing the mark of 844 set by Johnny Kerr from Oct. 31, 1954, through Nov. 4, 1965.

Kerr, who played with Syracuse, Philadelphia and Baltimore during his streak, was at the game to congratulate Smith.

Bullets 104, Nets 85

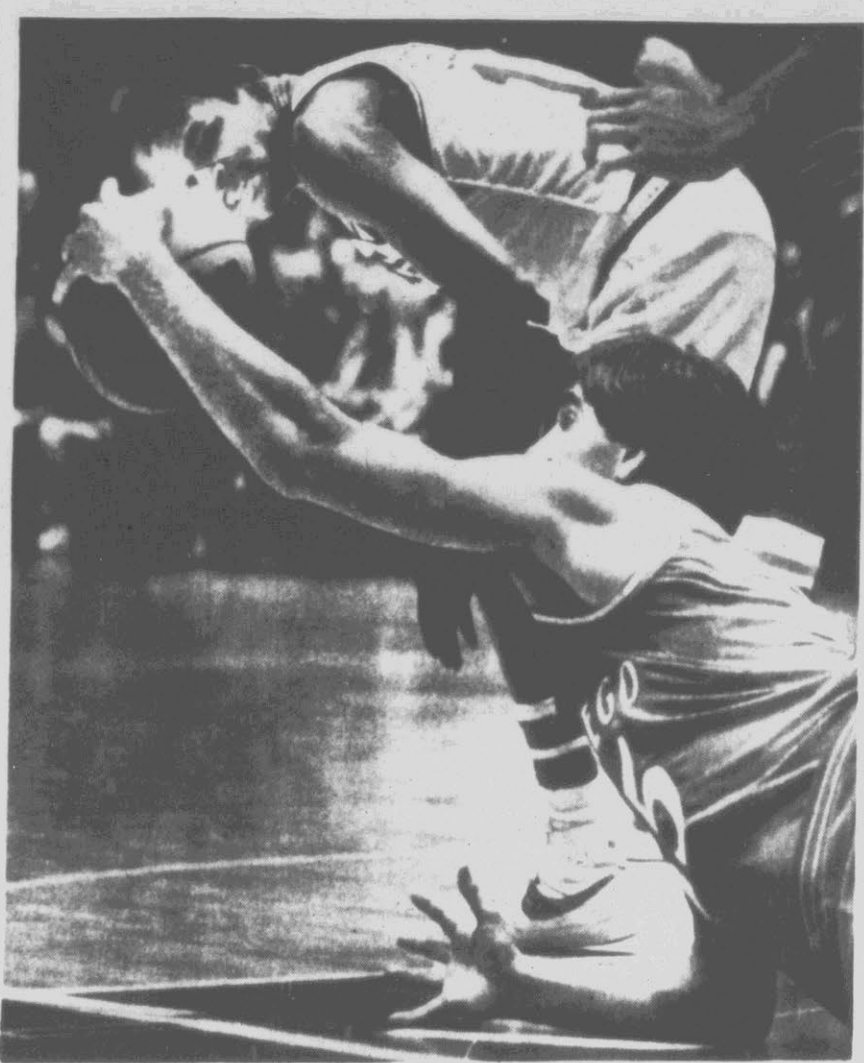

Frank Johnson scored 24 points, including eight in the decisive second quarter, and had a career-high 14 assists to lead Washington over New Jersey.

New Jersey used 12 points by Otis Birdsong to take a 26-22 lead after the first quarter. In the second quarter, after the Nets' advantage swelled to 34-26, the Bullets scored 14 straight points to take a lead they never lost.

Mavericks 102, Rockets 101

Kelvin Ransey's two free throws with 18 seconds left lifted Dallas over Houston. Ransey's free throws put Dallas ahead 102-98, but the Rockets' Allen Leavell connected on a 3-point shot and Houston quickly fouled Rolando Blackman, who missed both of his free throws.

Cummings, S.D. Agree; Will Join Team Friday

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Former DePaul star Terry Cummings, tired of long and frustrating negotiations, says he wouldn't be certain he's playing in the National Basketball Association until he reached Milwaukee.

The San Diego Clippers announced an agreement Wednesday night with Cummings' agent, Tom Collins, that will pay $1.7 million over four years. The signing was set for Milwaukee, where Cummings was expected to play Friday night.

At least twice, there were premature "announcements" that the 6-foot-10 power forward — the Clippers' No. 1 pick in the 1982 college draft and the second player taken — had been signed.

Cummings finally intervened and told his agent to sign, foregoing a clause with stepped-up compensation in event of salary problems.

"I felt it was too small of a thing to keep me away," Cummings said of the acceleration clause which would have required Clippers owner Donald T. Sterling to pay the balance of the contract immediately if he was late on any salary payment.

"When Tom called me again tonight, I told him, 'Let's get on with it.' That other stuff is a waste of time."

Cummings was so convinced that the papers were ready to sign Wednesday morning that he was in the St. Louis airport waiting for a flight to Philadelphia to join the Clippers in time for Wednesday night's game with the 76ers.

Collins tracked him down and "he told me to go back to Chicago, that the deal had fallen through again," Cummings said.

In Dallas, Clippers General Manager Paul Phipps said a final agreement "was a big hassle, but I feel great about it now." Phipps had announced on Oct. 25 that an agreement would be signed by the weekend.

Alan Rothenberg, an attorney given full authority by Sterling to deal with Cummings and Collins, said early Wednesday that the deal was done. When Collins' lawyer reviewed the contract and noticed the acceleration clause was missing, it was off again.

After intervening, Cummings commented, "It's about time."

The Clippers waived second-year guard John Douglas to make room for Cummings on the 12-man roster.

Randy Smith Surpasses Mark

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Neither torn thigh muscles nor free agency has kept San Diego Clippers guard Randy Smith from playing basketball — and in 845 consecutive games, at that.

Smith eclipsed Johnny Kerr's 17-year-old National Basketball Association record of 844 games Wednesday night when he scored 14 points in the Clippers' 130-111 loss to the Philadelphia 76ers.

"Now that I've got the record," Smith bubbled afterward, "I'd like to hold it for at least 1,000 games."

The 33-year-old veteran, who last missed a game on Feb. 15, 1972, during his rookie year with the Buffalo Braves, labeled the evening "my most memorable night."

It was a night that Kerr will find hard to forget, too.

Kerr, 50, now a Chicago television commentator, hugged Smith during a pregame ceremony to mark the feat.

And besides giving the 6-foot-3 guard the record, Kerr passed along some other trinkets, including his nickname.

"For 18 years I've been known as the 'Iron-Man,'" Kerr told Smith before a crowd of 13,674 at the Spectrum. "Now I'm passing it on to you. And I hope you can hold onto it until the end of your career."

With that, Kerr handed Smith a telegram, which was signed by all NBA teams along with Commissioner Larry O'Brien.

As for his "Iron-Man" status, Kerr gave Smith some "iron" — a set of new golf clubs.

But the gift that Smith has cherished the most in recent days came within hours of the start of the season.

After last season with the New York Knicks, Smith was an unsigned free agent. "I was looking for a miracle. I tried to remain optimistic," said Smith.

Suddenly, Clippers Coach Paul Silas signed him. "He has maturity and character," Silas declared after the defeat to the 76ers.

Smith, a strict vegetarian, who believes hill running has helped give him the endurance, said, "I can't explain my durability other than I've taken care of myself over the years."

The road to Kerr's feat has been anything but smooth for Smith, a 1971 seventh-round draft choice for Buffalo out of Buffalo State.

Smith still shudders at the thought of a 25-game stretch with the Cleveland Cavaliers when he played with a torn thigh muscle.

"It was the worst injury I ever had," recalled Smith. "I came home one night, and I was going to take some time off, that I couldn't run anymore on one leg."

"My wife said 'Hey, what about the streak?' I said 'wait a minute, what about me?' She just looked at me. I kept on playing."

'Voice Of The Motherland' Woos Taiwan People

By LIU HEUNG SHING
Associated Press Writer
PEKING (AP) — The lilt-ing strains of sentimental Chinese music are followed by a soft, resonant female voice which coos: "Dear Taiwan compatriots, I just want to be your friend."

It is the melodious, beckoning "Voice of the Motherland" — 42-year-old
Xu Man, and her program,
"Friends on the Air," part of an intensified radio propaganda campaign directed at Taiwan.

Eight times a day, Miss Xu's 15-minute program is beamed over 11 frequencies across the 100-mile Taiwan Straits. Neither strident nor dogmatic, she is the embodiment of peaceful reunification, the voice of maternal persuasion.

Her message is soft-sell, in contrast to the hostile, self-righteous propaganda of the Cultural Revolution era when announcers read People's Daily editorials and lectured the Taiwanese about the glories of communism. Absent are the threats to "liberate" Taiwan where many Chinese fled after the Communist takeover in 1949.

"We hear she is really big on Taiwan," one of her colleagues at Central Broadcasting boasts.

"We want to quietly dispel the Koumintang (Nationalist Chinese) rumors and set the record straight," Miss Xu said in a recent interview.
Taiwanese "newspapers are still printing stories that we need a permit to leave our houses and each person has only one inch of cloth rationed each month."

One Taiwan listener wrote Miss Wu to ask: "After the reunification of Taiwan with the mainland, would we also need cooking oil and cotton coupons to live on Taiwan?"
Her answer: Of course not.

Taiwan can maintain its present lifestyle.

Taiwan authorities continue to jam the mainland broadcasts, without complete success, and Miss Xu's listeners run the risk of penalties that could be as severe as a prison term.

Miss Xu, the mother of three, has short-cropped hair, deep dimples and a broad smile. She wears baggy, nondescript trousers and a gray jacket with a brightly colored shirt.

Every day she courts 18 million Chinese on Taiwan, appealing to the profit instincts of Taiwan businessmen and plucking at the heartstrings of those who long to see loved ones on the mainland.

Her refrain is China's nine-point plan for peaceful reunification, which claims Taiwan may retain capitalism, its armed forces, and its less-restricted way of life.

Politics is interwoven with Chinese fairy tales about the moon festival, advice on treating stomach cancer with herbal medicine, and interviews with former Nationalist Chinese officers who returned to the mainland.

Tourism is a major theme, artfully wrapped around nationalism.

Miss Xu reminds her listeners that all Chinese should see the grandeur of the Motherland, weaving visions of standing at the Great Wall, climbing the misty Taishan mountain, floating down the gorges of the Yangtze River.

She answers letters from listeners on the air. Her program has received about 400 letters since it began in January 1981, and she directs her listeners to write to a box number at any Chinese diplomatic post. There are no

Weather For Crops 'Good'

WASHINGTON (AP) — As American farmers enjoyed mostly favorable weather for bumper grain and soybean harvests last week, other areas of the world were not so fortunate.

The government's Joint Agricultural Weather Facility says that in the Soviet Union "unfavorably dry weather" continued to
crops in some major grain areas.

In Australia, hot weather
"baked the parched agricultural lands of eastern Australia" as producers harvested "severely stunted wheat and barley."

But in Europe, the weekly report said that "dry, cool weather which followed light showers in England, France and northern Italy should allow final winter wheat planting to take place and permit topsoils to dry out, reducing seed-rot potential."

Showers helped winter crops in West Germany and parts of East Germany, but Poland continued dry.

In South America, crop areas of southern Brazil were aided by drier weather following earlier downpours, the report said.

The "early withdrawal of the summer monsoon" in India has caused unfavorable planting conditions, the report said. Thus, the winter grain "crop will have to rely heavily on showers during the autumn and winter."

Participated In Dropout Review

Pitt County Extended
School was one of six model programs that participated recently in Gov. Jim Hunt's Western North Carolina Conference on School Dropouts.

The program consisted of a slide presentation depicting the extended school, a descriptive narrative by the principal, a talk by two students and a brief overview of dual enrollment by Pitt Community College's dean of students. A question and answer session followed each of the three presentations.

The program uses the resources of both public schools and the community college to keep students in school.

This is the second time the extended school has been invited to present its model program at a statewide conference.

Spokesmen Say Special Interest Funds Unwasted

By DON McLEOD
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Although only one of their targeted candidates was defeated, special interest groups say the millions of dollars they spent on the midterm congressional election was not wasted.

"In every state where we made significant expenditures of funds, the incumbent is less popular," said Terry Dolan, whose National Conservative Political Action Committee led the attack on congressional liberals. But, he said Wednesday, NCPAC-backed candidates demonstrated an "inability to focus on that unpopularity."

Dolan noted that all the incumbents targeted by NCPAC did worse Tuesday than in their last elections. NCPAC — pronounced "Nickpack" — spent about $4 million trying to defeat 17 senators and as many House members.

But only one of the targeted incumbents — Democratic Sen. Howard Cannon — was a sure loser. Donlan said he pumped $200,000 into that race to ensure that Cannon would be defeated by Republican challenger Chic Hecht, who won by two percentage points.

NCPAC's biggest effort, however, was in Maryland, where it spent $650,000 over the last year and a half trying to discredit and defeat Sen. Paul Sarbanes. But the Democratic incumbent trounced Republican Larry Hogan with 63 percent of the vote.

Hogan was so embarrassed by the group's unsolicited support that he was moved at one point in the campaign to declare during a televised debate with Sarbanes that "I hereby denounce NCPAC."

The only other race in doubt with NCPAC involvement was in Rhode Island, where Sen. John Chaffee, one of three Republicans on the group's hit list, was ahead of Democrat Julius Michaelson but by a margin too close to call until absentee ballots are counted.

In most other cases the targeted incumbent senators won easily. They included Democrats Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts, Robert Byrd of West Virginia, Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, Howard Metzenbaum of Ohio, Daniel Patrick Moynihan of New York, George Mitchell of Maine, Jim Sasser of Tennessee, Donald Riegle of Michigan, Dennis DeConcini of Arizona, Quentin Burdick of North Dakota, John Melcher of Montana and Spark Matsunaga of Hawaii; and Republicans Lowell Weicker of Connecticut and Robert Stafford of Vermont.

All 17 House members that NCPAC went after were re-elected. They included most of the House Democratic leadership, among them Majority Leader Jim Wright of Texas, Majority Whip Thomas Foley of Washington, Appropriations Committee Chairman Jamie Whitten of Mississippi, Ways and Means Committee Chairman Dan Rostenkowski of Illinois and Budget Committee Chairman James Jones of Oklahoma.

NCPAC spent more than $200,000 trying to beat Wright and more than $100,000 against Jones. Despite Dolan's claim that NCPAC's efforts may have cut into the winners' vote totals, the contrast with the same group's effort just two years ago was dramatic. In 1980, NCPAC spent nearly $1 million on the novel idea of attacking targeted candidates with negative campaigns of its own instead of limiting itself to contributing to candidates it liked.

This strategy allowed NCPAC to pump large amounts of money into campaigns. By operating on its own, the group could spend as much money as it wanted, whereas federal election law limits direct contributions to candidates or coordinated expenditures to $5,000 from any group to a single candidate.

The negative tactics, usually a blitz of expensive television and radio commercials attacking incumbents whom NCPAC considered too liberal, were credited in large measure in 1980 with helping to defeat Democratic Sens. George McGovern of South Dakota, Frank Church of Idaho, Birch Bayh of Indiana and John Culver of Iowa.

The success of the 1980 effort added greatly to NCPAC's prestige as a political force and its fund-raising ability. This year, the group raised some $10 million, with $4 million of it spent on negative campaigning.

The expensive failures of the 1982 drive may weaken the groups' clout, although Dolan said he didn't think that would happen.

Fred Wertheimer, president of Common Cause, said Wednesday that the NCPAC experience was the "one area where major campaign expenditures clearly backfired."

"There's no question that NCPAC turned out to be the biggest loser in the 1982 elections," Wertheimer said. Senate Minority Leader Byrd said NCPAC "took a severe beating all over this country, and I would hope that the landscape will not be cluttered up again with the radical right groups such as NCPAC."

Another well-funded conservative group, the National Congressional Club founded by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., did little better despite comparable spending in support of conservative candidates.

The Helms group had endorsed four Senate candidates and all lost. It backed 14 House candidates and only Rep. James Hansen of Utah won. Another, Republican Rep. Bill Hendon, R-N.C., was trailing in a race that had not been called by Wednesday.

Various other groups had hit lists or supported friendly candidates on a large scale in Tuesday's elections, but with more mixed results.

Organized labor spent a record $17 million on Senate, House and gubernatorial races. Of the 29 Senate candidates backed by the AFL-CIO's political arm, 19 were elected, and 235 of 368 of the group's House choices won.

The National Organization of Women backed 14 Senate candidates, but only six won, while 60 of its 94 House choices were elected. The Women's Political Caucus lost 13 of 22 House races, and both of the women Senate candidates it backed were beaten. Half of the six Senate candidates backed by the National Abortion Rights Action League lost, while 47 of its 70 House picks were winning or leading in their races.

A coalition supporting a freeze on nuclear arms spent more than $2 million dollars on a hit list. Of the 30 House members targeted for defeat, 11 lost or were trailing.

The absence of any clear trends in these results indicates that most efforts by such groups had little effect on campaigns.

Resume Mining Phosphate Rock

AURORA — TexasGulf Chemicals Co., which suspended its phosphate mining operations here in July, resumed mining phosphate rock at its Lee Creek site Monday.

Company officials said mining was resumed because the "stock of phosphate rock was down." They noted that the mine would continue to operate "from now on."

When TexasGulf announced suspension of mining operations in the summer, it also announced that 10 percent of the firm's 1,400 employees were being terminated, citing a depressed demand for fertilizer and related chemicals.

Some 350 persons were effected by the shutdown. Of those, about 210 were transferred to chemical plant operations at Lee Creek.

However, officials said today that the resumption of mining operations will have "no effect" on hiring.

They said rather than hiring, workers are being "transferred back to the mine" from other operations.

Pope Warns Young People Of Paths Leading To Terrorism

MADRID (AP) — Pope John Paul II, addressing hundreds of thousands of youths who packed a soccer stadium and nearby streets, implored them to shun drugs, sex and violence, which he said can lead "to the spiral of terrorism."

The pope, making a 16-city tour of Spain, told the cheering audience Wednesday evening: "Neither drugs nor alcohol nor sex nor a resigned uncritical passivity — what you call pasotismo (angry apathy) — are an answer in the face of evil."

As the pontiff traveled today to Guadalupe, birthplace of the Spanish conquistadors, a senior Spanish army general was killed in Madrid by gunmen who peppered his official car with submachine gun fire, police said.

Maj. Gen. Victor Lago

Roman, a 63-year-old father of eight, was commander of the army's most powerful unit, the Brunete Armored Division. He was killed instantly and his soldier-driver was wounded slightly. The gunmen escaped.

Lago Roman was the first political assassination victim in Spain since the pontiff arrived here Sunday. After visiting Guadalupe, the pope will travel to Segovia and Toledo.

About 130,000 people packed the Bernabeu soccer stadium Wednesday night, greeting John Paul with showers of confetti and rhythmic chants of "Viva el Papa" as he circled the stadium in an open Land Rover before delivering his homily.

Hundreds of thousands who could not get into the stadium jammed the nearby streets, following the ceremony on giant television screens. Municipal police estimated the crowd inside and near the stadium at 500,000.

John Paul, the first pontiff to visit Spain, said "drugs, excessive sex and violence" common in modern society can lead "the young Christian ... to the spiral of terrorism."

He called on young people to react with "sane criticism" to what he described as media "manipulation" of sex and violence.

The 62-year-old pope showed signs of fatigue as he moved from place to place following his crowded schedule on the fourth day of his 10-day trip.

John Paul was to celebrate Mass in Toledo, the central city that was the home of Spain's Roman Catholic kings between the years 1087 and 1561. In the evening, he was to visit Segovia to honor St. John of the Cross, the 16th century reformist Carmelite monk and renowned mystic poet who was the subject of John Paul's doctoral thesis.

In another prayer service Wednesday, John Paul touched on the role of the Church in modern Spain. In the face of declining church attendance and what Catholic clerics call "de-Christianization" of Spanish life, the pope urged Catholics to look to their faith for answers to the problems of modern urban life.

Speaking at a Mass at a low-income housing project on the outskirts of Madrid, the pope acknowledged the problems of a neighborhood,

Spanish General Assassinated

SPECIAL AWARD — This untitled painting by Rick Woolard of a weathered old house on a country lane next to a tobacco field received the top "special award" prize in the show of inmate art on display at Carolina East Mall through Saturday. The traveling show of art work by inmates in North Carolina correctional institutes was judged by three faculty members of the school of art, East Carolina University — Dean Richard Laing, Ed Reep and Ray Elmore. More than 100 works are included in the show, which will travel to several locations in the state. (Reflector Photo by Jerry Raynor)

By SUSAN LINNÉE
Associated Press Writer
MADRID (AP) — Maj. Gen Victor Lago Roman, commander of the army's premier division, was assassinated today by gunmen who raked his official car with submachine gun fire from a motorcycle in a busy Madrid intersection.
Lago Roman, 63-year-old head of the Brunete 1 Armored Division, died instantly and his soldier-driver suffered minor wounds, police said. The driver earlier was reported in critical condition.

No group immediately claimed responsibility for the assassination. The national news agency EFE quoted police sources as saying the attack had the markings of ETA-M, military wing of the Basque separatist organization.
The agency quoted the sources as saying bullet casings found at the scene of the attack near Madrid's Arch of Triumph were of the type frequently used by members of ETA.
The military chauffeur,

Juan Carlos Villalba Gonzalez, told reporters two young men on a motorcycle approached the general's car from the right and opened fire. Other witnesses reported seeing four men on two motorcycles.
The attack occurred as the general was being driven to his headquarters at El Pardo, about six miles from the scene of the shooting.
Lago Roman, the father of eight, was the first major official assassinated since the Socialists' sweeping victory in last week's general elections.
The attack occurred at 8:35 a.m. (2:35 a.m. EST) in the north-central residential area of Moncloa on the day the National Electoral Commission was to confirm the election results officially.

ETA-M vowed to continue its campaign of violence, blamed for more than 375 killings since 1968, during the election campaign. Last Sunday, a police officer was killed in an explosion in the northern Basque city of Vitoria.
The most recent attack on a military officer in Madrid occurred May 4, 1981, when a general and a policeman were shot and killed by the radical Maoist organization, Grapo.
Pope John Paul II, on the fifth day of his 10-tour of Spain, was arriving the city of Guadalupe, 250 miles southwest of Madrid, when the attack occurred. On Saturday, the pope, who has been heavily guarded in Spain, is to pay a brief visit to the volatile Basque country.

The general took command of Brunete 1, considered by military authorities to be the principal tactical unit in the Spanish army, in September, 1981. Earlier, he served as governor of the Madrid military district.
ETA, the Basque language acronym for Basque Land and Liberty, has been blamed for most of 36 previous political killings in Spain this year.
The ETA-M wing is believed to have about 100 adherents who demand immediate independence for the Basque provinces of northern Spain. ETA-M claimed 49 killings in 1981, and three kidnappings.

FHA-HERO Chapter Attends

The Ayden-Grifton High School Chapter of FHA-HERO attended the District 1 Leadership Meeting at the Gates County Community Center in Gatesville.
The theme for the meeting was "Move to Improve." Students were involved in mini-sessions covering such topics as leadership and parliamentary procedure.
Eight students from Ayden-Grifton served on the Credentials Committee.
They were Cheryal Blount, Pat Chamberlain, Belinda Eubanks, Angela Griffin, Betty Underwood, Patricia Phillips, Floristine Mills and Tammy Hawkins. They were responsible for the introduction of the candidates running for state parliamentarian.

The chapter advisers who attended included Joyce McLawhorn, Marilyn Barfield and student teacher Melva Pollard.

Affirms Most Turn To Newspapers For News

WASHINGTON — A University of Maryland communications professor has interpreted a new study of television's impact as meaning that most Americans — contrary to the belief generally held for more than a decade — get their news from newspapers instead of TV.
For most people, Professor Lawrence Lichty said, TV news is just another show "and not a very habit-forming one at that."

He acknowledged that 50 million people watch network news each evening, but pointed out that only 1 percent of the 78 million TV households in the United States watch CBS' Evening News as often as four times a week.
Lichty said only two types of Americans get much news from TV: those who watch a lot and for whom the news is just another show, and those who are younger, better educated and are heavy readers of newspapers.

Television, he said, offers "news as entertainment, as spectacle, as distraction" and has assumed the role of the sensational "yellow press" of the early 1900s and of Look and Life magazines in the 1940s.

ASK FOR 'MISSING'
ROME (AP) — Premier Giovanni Spadolini's office says he has asked Argentina to provide details on missing Italians believed to have been killed during the Argentine military's crackdown on leftists in the late 1970s.

Lichty based his theory on a study done by the Simmons Market Research Bureau in New York into how much exposure advertising gets in various media. The study is based on more than 15,000 interviews.
Since 1970, annual Roper Organization surveys have indicated Americans rely mostly on television for news. Lichty said the Simmons study contradicted that conclusion.
The Simmons study shows that, while more than two-thirds of adults read at least part of a newspaper every day, fewer than one-third of all adults watch any TV on any given day, Lichty said.

Shootout Followed A Chance Meeting

MONROE, N.C. (AP) — Two State Bureau of Investigation agents happened upon two suspects in a suspected smuggling ring at a convenience store in Anson County and a shootout followed, officials say.
Anson County Sheriff Tommy Allen said Wednesday that the shootout the day before may have been linked to 500 pounds of marijuana and some unidentified white powder found in a Union County house Tuesday night.

Agents were driving west from Wadesboro toward Monroe on U.S. 74 when the shootout occurred, Allen said. They stopped at a convenience store in Polkton where they saw two men matching the description of suspects allegedly connected to the drug operation, Allen said.
The suspects fled in a light-green 1983 Lincoln Continental and several shots were fired, Allen said.

The Most Efficient Gas Furnace in the World

96% Efficiency!

It's So Efficient, You Can Vent it with Regular PVC Plastic Pipe.

LENNOX PULSE FURNACE

The Lennox Pulse gas furnace is the most significant breakthrough in furnace design in over 40 years. It produces heat unlike any other furnace with greater efficiency than ever before possible. Operating on a principle of pulse combustion, small quantities of gas and air are electrically ignited at a rate of 60 to 70 times per second. A condensing heat exchanger extracts 200 to 350 degrees more heat from your fuel than is currently possible with conventional gas furnaces.

Unprecedented Heating Efficiency
If your present gas furnace is over five years old, it is probably in the range of 55 to 60% efficient, compared to the Pulse's 91 to 96%. This difference can mean drastic reductions in your monthly heating bills — enough to justify replacing your present unit today, even if it still operates. The Pulse furnace is that efficient. Even if your system is a newer "high efficiency" model, you can still save big with the Lennox Pulse.
*Annual Fuel Utilization Efficiency (AFUE) as determined by Department of Energy Standards. The higher the percentage, the greater the efficiency and your energy savings.

Warranted Heat Exchanger
The heat exchanger assembly is designed for long service life and carries a 20-year limited warranty against defects and failure.

When will the Pulse be available and in what sizes?
Pulse furnaces are available in three input sizes: 40,000, 60,000 and 80,000 Btu/h. 100,000 and 130,000 Btu/h models will be available in late 1982. Several blower sizes will be available on some sizes making a total of eight up-flow models.

Will horizontal and down-flow units be available?
Lennox is presently working on both horizontal and down-flow furnaces but production dates have not yet been established.
The Pulse heat exchanger will also be applied to our commercial rooftop units and gas/electric packaged units.

Iranian Children Join In Death-To-America Rally

By CHARLES J. HANLEY
Associated Press Writer

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Tens of thousands of schoolchildren chanting "Death to America!" marched to the former U.S. Embassy today, marking the third anniversary of the seizure of the American hostages.

From kindergarteners to teen-agers, they cursed the "Great Satan America" in a well-orchestrated demonstration that featured the burning of a U.S. flag and exhortations by Moïsem clergyman Mussavi Khomeini to follow their elders' examples. He said taking over the "spy den" was a "victory of oppressed people over a superpower."

The banners and posters had slogans such as "all our troubles are because of America" and "The U.S.A. is condemned to death."

Scores of Iranian revolutionary guards carrying Kalashnikov automatic rifles patrolled in and around the 27-acre compound seized by Iranian militants on Nov. 4, 1979. The last group of the hostages was released Jan. 20, 1981.

A small group of officially invited American journalists was allowed inside the compound, but most chose to stick to a rooftop for a vantage point. They were warned against taking pictures inside the compound.

Rumors abound in Tehran about the use being made of the old U.S. enclave. A Western diplomatic source in Tehran said screams and shooting have been heard from the grounds, indicating it may be used as a prison.

Reporters estimated about 50,000 people were at today's march.

Hundreds of thousands of protesters used to turn out during the 444-day hostage crisis. Shouts of "Margh bar Amerika!" — "Death to America!" would fill the air.

The same chant was echoed Wednesday by grieving black-robed women and angry young men in fatigues who gathered at Behesht Zahara Cemetery to bury two dozen unknown soldiers.

Thousands of civilians once gathered there to mourn victims of the war with Iraq, now more than two years old. But only 200 people — many of them soldiers brought in for the ceremony — watched Wednesday's mass burial.

"The people are tired of the war. They are tired of the government," one disillusioned former official told this reporter. Fearing retaliation, he requested anonymity.

The Islamic Guidance Ministry, the public relations arm of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's regime, took a small group of American reporters to the cemetery outside Tehran to give them a foretaste of the embassy rally.

Beneath the fir trees, scores of women huddled together in the mud, fearful that a missing son or husband might be among the decomposed bodies found on the border war's battlefields.

Some of the weeping, wailing women clutched large framed photographs of their loved ones.

One stout woman ran after the American visitors and screamed in Farsi from beneath her black veil: "Why don't you leave us alone! Leave us alone!"

After the well-rehearsed chants against America, Iraq and Israel, the young soldiers seemed more interested in the foreigners than in the ceremony.

One group of uniformed men was asked why they blame the United States for Iraq's war against Iran.

"Because if America was not behind Iraq, Iraq would have been destroyed by now," replied a scar-faced lieutenant, Iraj Shehrmohammedi.

Both Iran and Iraq are reported obtaining arms from both the Western and Soviet blocs.

When a reporter suggested Iran might some day restore diplomatic relations with the United States, the soldiers exploded.

"Nah! Nah!" they shouted. "Never," said one. "America is an exploiter. It would be like the relationship between a lamb and a wolf."

Aged Tigers Are Put To Death

DETROIT (AP) — An injunction blocking the Detroit Zoo from killing three old Siberian tigers was lifted by a judge and the animals were put to death with a lethal dose of barbiturates.

"It's never easy when you terminate an animal's life," Zoo Director Steve Graham said. Wayne County Circuit Judge Paul Teranes lifted the order Wednesday, finding the zoo was acting reasonably in seeking to kill the diseased animals, ages 11 to 16.

Krescentia Doppelberger, who filed the suit seeking the injunction, said opponents of the killings "always said we'd go along with whatever decision was made, but we hoped we could come up with something better."

Diner Sues Over 'Crime Spree'

MINEOLA, N.Y. (AP) — A diner in Old Westbury has been sued for $10 million by a youth who was shot during a crime spree by a gang that robbed, raped and assaulted about 75 customers.

Rory Moroney, 17, of Westbury claimed in the suit that the Sea Crest Diner failed to provide adequate security, his lawyer said Tuesday. The diner's windows weren't clear enough for people outside to see what was going on during the May 29 attack, the suit alleges.

The five attackers pleaded guilty Monday and will be sentenced Dec. 7. The owner of the Sea Crest, Nick Boujoukos, denied the lawsuit's charges, saying, "It wasn't my fault, those idiots (gang) shouldn't have been on the streets."

Postponement Disappoints

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States has expressed disappointment that Peruvian President Fernando Belaunde had postponed his scheduled visit to Washington next week.

No reason for the postponement was given, but officials here said it stemmed from a dispute between the two countries over allegations from the U.S. textile industry that the Peruvian government is subsidizing textile exports to the United States.

A Better Fare For Your Better Half.

PIEDMONT'S $29 TAKE-THE-FAMILY FARE.

Recently, some airlines have come out with programs that allow frequent flyers to earn free trips.

Perhaps you've been planning such a trip for your spouse.

The drawback is you have to take a lot of trips to earn a free one. Which can take months, or even years.

On Piedmont, you don't have to wait to take along your better half.

Piedmont's Take-

The-Family Fare is the next best thing to free. And to get it, all you have to do is buy a full-fare adult ticket.

Whenever you hold a full-fare ticket on Piedmont, you can take along your wife or husband (and your kids under 18) for $29 each, each way.* Simply buy your ticket by March 31, 1983.

Leave and return any time you like, as long as you travel together. Except around certain holidays, this fare is good on every flight to every Piedmont city.

So, pack your bags. You've waited long enough.

*$49 to Colorado or Texas. For details, call your travel agent, or call Piedmont in Kinston at 522-4544 or 1-800-672-0191 toll-free.

The Five Courthouses Of Pitt

PITT COUNTY COURTHOUSE
BUILT IN 1761
DRAWN BY R. HAMMERER 1982

PITT'S FIRST ... courthouse, built about 1761, was located on what is now N.C. 33, just east of River Gate Shopping Center. A marker now identifies the site.

Pitt County has been served by five courthouses during its 221-year history.

Monday, the Pitt County Historical Society presented the Pitt County Board of Commissioners with pen and ink drawings of the five structures, by Roger Kammerer of Greenville.

The first courthouse, built around 1761, stood on the Captain John Hardee land, located off what is now N.C. 33 just east of River Gate Shopping Center.

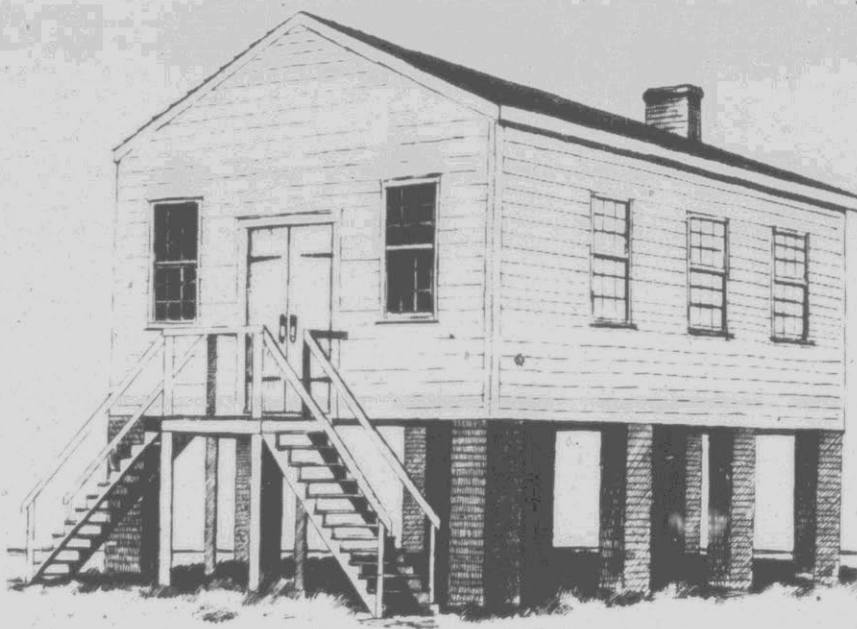

The first courthouse to be built in Greenville, completed during or shortly after the Revolution, was built on pillars and located in the vicinity of the present structure.

The third courthouse, constructed about 1834, was the first brick building. It was destroyed by fire in 1858.

Construction of the county's fourth courthouse was begun in 1860 but, because of the Civil War, was not completed until 1878. This building, too, was destroyed by fire, in 1910.

The present courthouse opened for business in 1911. Since its construction, it has been renovated several times and a major addition to the facility was completed in 1966.

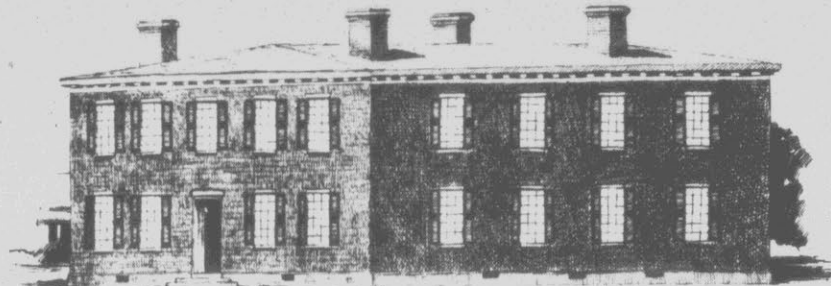

The drawings are included in the Historical Society's recently published Chronicles of Pitt County, and also appear in a limited edition of 100 sets.

Chocolate Milk Plank Helpful

plank in Crawford's platform obviously sweetened his chances, Mrs. Nelson said.

WORLAND, Wyo. (AP) — Wyoming's election candidates missed a sure thing in the way of campaign promises — chocolate milk.

In a mock election Tuesday by a fifth-grade social studies class at West Side Elementary School, student Milton Crawford, running as a Republican, beat Democrat Barbara Jordan for state superintendent of public instruction by promising chocolate milk for lunch.

Teacher Cindy Nelson's class was divided into political parties that chose candidates for governor, sheriff and superintendent.

Inspections Plan

Fire-Rescue Chief Jenness Allen announced the initiation of a new fire safety inspections program designed to help fire-rescue personnel develop familiarity with the property and buildings they protect.

Allen said the city has been divided into nine inspection areas, with each station inspecting three sections of the city. Officers at each station will maintain records on inspections conducted in their assigned areas.

According to the chief, on-duty fire-rescue officers will inspect the smaller, less-complicated structures, while more complex buildings will be inspected by the Fire Prevention Bureau. He said if officers locate a critical situation, their findings will be referred to the bureau for further investigation.

CRYPTQUIP 11-4

KB WL YNR WZNOQ QEAX

Yesterday's Cryptquip — SWORDSWALLOWER SNACKED ON TWO TACKS.
Today's Cryptquip clue: T equals O.

The Cryptquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, NOV. 5, 1982

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The morning is the best time to wind up matters which started yesterday. You are also able to entertain congenials later in the day. Make well-rounded plans for the future.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Find out what family members expect from you and try to please them to the best of your ability.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Good day for communications and discussing unfinished business and make real progress. Quietly gather the data you need.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Make sure your financial and business affairs are in good order. A monetary expert can give excellent advice to follow.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) A fine day for thinking over your personal wishes and making a plan to gain them in a positive way.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) You have private affairs that need more attention so that you can work them sensibly and get good results.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) First tackle all that work ahead of you and then you can engage in favorite hobby. Take no chances with your reputation.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Spend more time on business matters early in the day and gain added prestige and prosperity. Be alert to an opportunity.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Look for new and better ways of advancing in your career. You can now make a contact who can be most helpful to you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Study your duties well and figure a better way to be more efficient. Don't neglect important correspondence.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Attend to a monetary matter that is vital to your welfare. Listen carefully to what others have to say.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Engage in work for which you have had little time lately and accomplish a great deal. Come to a fine accord with co-worker.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Plan your activities so you can enjoy whatever means the most to you. Show more affection for family members.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will require a good education in order to be successful upon reaching maturity. Not much of a mixer early in life but will be more outgoing as time goes on. There is much musical talent in this chart.

West led the ten of diamonds, and declarer realized that there was the danger of a defensive ruff. In an effort to prevent that, declarer won in hand and immediately led a trump. East won the king and continued with the two of diamonds—a suit preference signal to show that his entry was in the lower-ranked side suit, i.e., clubs.

Landlord Pleads No Contest To 6 Charges Of Code Violation

WASHINGTON (AP) — A landlord from Greensboro, N.C., pleaded no contest to six criminal charges that he violated the District of Columbia housing code by failing to provide heat and hot water to tenants in three buildings.

In return for the plea Wednesday from Robert S. Farmer, 52, the city government agreed to drop 30 other housing charges it had brought against him in February.

Farmer could face 60 days in jail and a $1,800 fine when he is sentenced Dec. 13 in D.C. Superior Court.

In another case, in January tenants successfully brought a civil suit charging that Farmer had failed to supply them with heat and hot water since October 1981.

In that case, Superior Judge William S. Thompson sentenced Farmer to 90 days in jail and a $300 fine for failing to respond to repeated court orders to provide adequate heat and hot water.

Farmer's appeal of the decision is pending.

Trying To Salvage Old Root Systems

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — A Duke University scientist says he and a handful of students must run against the clock in order to save the root systems of chestnut trees destroyed years ago.

"We're literally working against time," Dr. William J. Stambaugh of Duke's School of Forestry and Environmental Studies said.

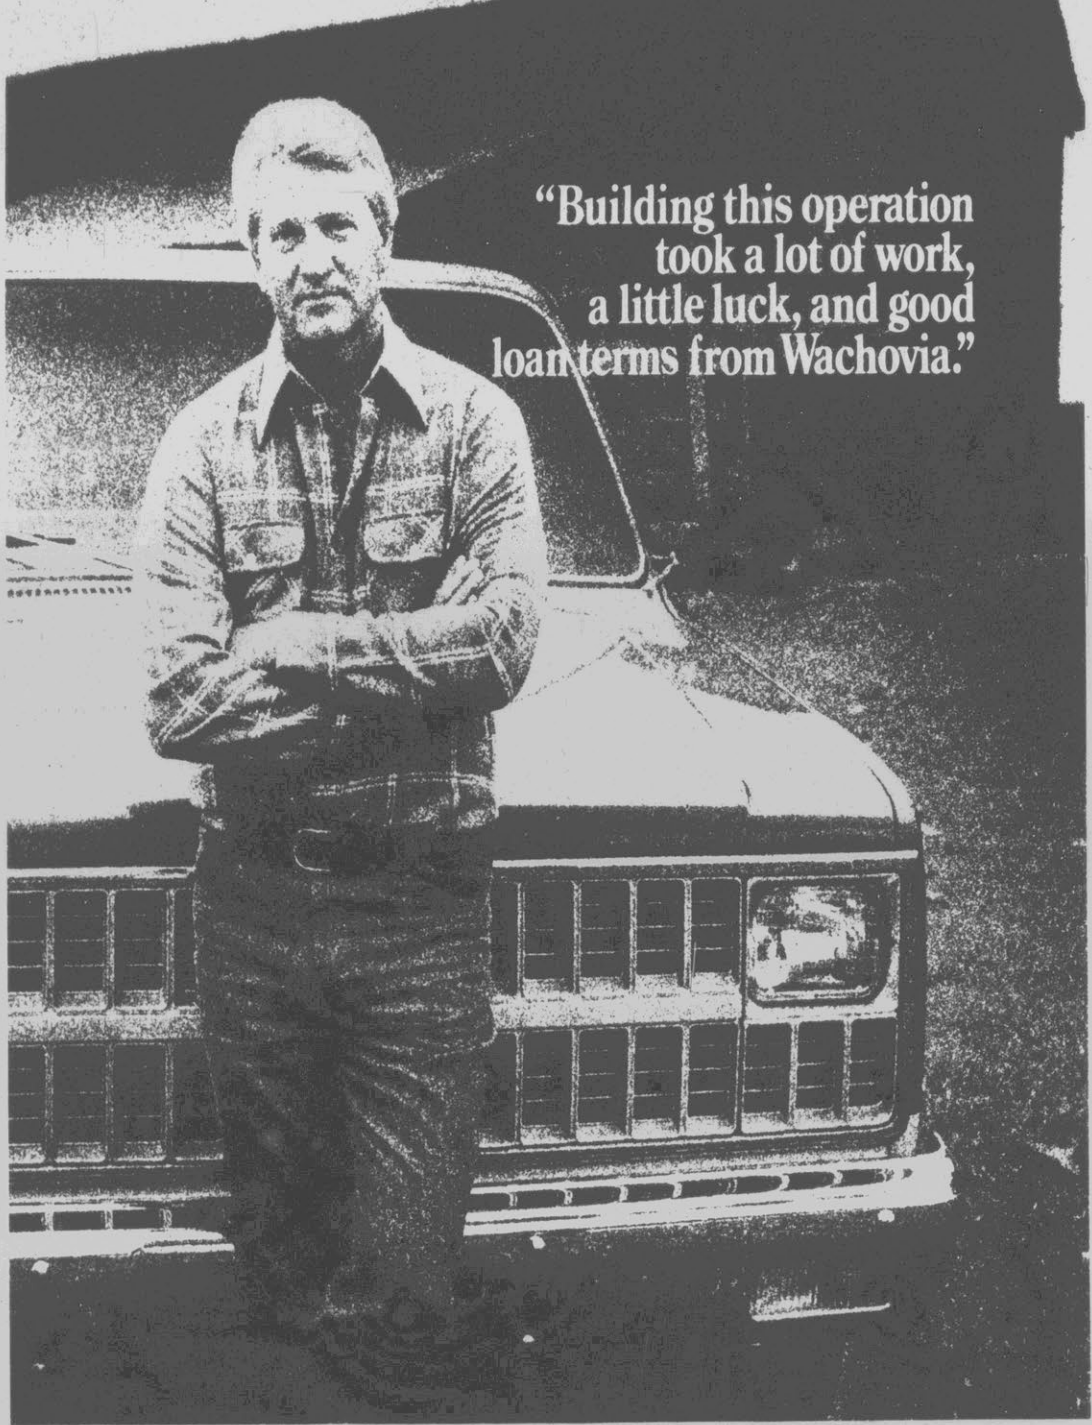

He and his students are hoping a natural enemy of the blight that all but decimated chestnut trees at the turn of the century may help save the trees now.

The natural foe of the blight is called hypovirulence. It can reduce the severity of the blight — called Endothia parasitica — that struck native chestnut trees in 1904.

He said hypovirulence can allow the tree to survive by causing the blight fungus itself to become diseased.

The fungus was noticed at the Bronx Zoo in 1904. The fungus, believed to have originated in Asia, all but eliminated chestnut trees in this country as tree-girdling cankers slowly killed trees by depriving them of water and nutrients.

The fungus struck rapidly, Stambaugh said. The chestnut, once the premier tree of Eastern hardwood forests and prized as a source of food and strong, durable wood, soon was little more than a memory.

Broadway Is On Home Screens

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) - You don't have to come to New York to see Broadway. On Friday, the Great White Way comes home to 150,000 subscription TV viewers. Rather than theater in the round, it will be theater in the living room.

It also will be television-theater history. "Sophisticated Ladies" will be the first ongoing, first-run Broadway production available live on television. Parking will be free, but viewers must supply their own orange drinks and candy.

"Sophisticated Ladies," a musical compilation of Duke Ellington's tunes, is an appropriate pioneer, says Louise Westergaard, one of the show's five producers. "There's a universality and familiarity to Ellington's music," she says. "There isn't a cocktail lounge in Podunk, Iowa, that doesn't play Ellington's music. 'Sophisticated Ladies' is glamorous, elegant and fast-moving.

"If we were a straight book show with a beginning, middle and an end, then this could damage our national tour and hurt our box office with out-of-towners. But we're the kind of show that people want to see again and again."

At least that's the belief motivating the producers of "Sophisticated Ladies" in their one-shot presentation over pay-for-view systems Friday night in Los Angeles, Chicago, Miami, Washington and 34 other cities. The $15 home ticket is not available in New York and its neighboring areas.

The top ticket price for "Sophisticated Ladies" here is $35, although two-fors are available, keeping current theater capacity at 80 percent to 85 percent. Mrs. Westergaard also says "Sophisticated Ladies" plans a national touring company and productions in Las Vegas in December and London next June.

Oak Media Corp., which is selling Friday's broadcast to pay systems, projects a 1.5 million potential viewers. That would be a gross of $2.25 million, short of the break-even mark, according to spokesman Art Reynolds.

Other broadcasts on a pay-for-view basis have been a Rolling Stones concert and several major boxing matches.

There also have been other theater productions on cable and commercial television. "Camelot," which took two weeks to tape, was on Home Box Office. "Sweeney Todd" on The Entertainment Channel, and "Ain't Misbehavin'" on NBC. But these weren't live, and the originals had long since left Broadway.

"We're not stopping and starting. We're going straight through," says Bruce Brandwen, executive producer of the telecast. "There's a certain excitement and energy for anything that's live."

As in the theater, there will be a 10-minute intermission. Brandwen says the orchestra might play for the home folks, and the telecast will have some preaped interviews.

From a production standpoint, Brandwen says "Sophisticated Ladies" is easily captured live because there aren't any extensive production numbers. The action is kept to a limited area, so close-up shots can be used, allowing the viewer to get an even better perspective than the balcony spectator.

Brandwen says current hits "Nine" and "Dreamgirls" are also relatively self-contained, but "42nd Street" "would be much more difficult to capture live."

And Brandwen doesn't expect, in the near future, simultaneous first-night openings in the theaters and homes.

"To sell the show across the country, it must first have taken hold as a hit," he says. "But it's a way of educating and familiarizing the American public with Broadway." The producers aren't predicting that live TV is going to supplant live theater, either, even with the escalating cost of tickets and incidental for theater-goers. "Nicholas Nickleby" sold out at $100 a ticket," Mrs. Westergaard says. "There's a magic with live Broadway."

Computer Graphics On CBS Added To 'Glitz'

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) - It was like watching "Star Wars."

CBS' new graphics, unveiled during Tuesday night's election coverage, were straight out of a science fiction movie, but they were real. In fact, so real, they almost looked alive.

Computers talked to computers, and the result was a map of the United States, which then turned three-dimensional, added different colors to Democratic and Republican states, twirled and became horizontal bar charts showing data for the individual races and overall election breakdowns.

Art Bloom, director of CBS' coverage, had promised that CBS was going to "enter the computer graphics era in a big way." He was right.

Van Gordon Sauter, president of CBS News, said the graphics advanced the art that came out of the network's National Football League coverage.

"We're doing more innovative graphics," said Sauter. "They're colorful, clear and they move. The information also comes up very quickly."

Despite the financial problems at CBS News, there evidently was no scrimping election night. Ed Joyce, executive vice president of CBS News, said there were no cutbacks for the effort. "Election night is the most important statement that a news organization makes," he said.

It also leaves a major impression with viewers, and the CBS graphics were one of the memorable aspects of TV's vote-count coverage.

NBC had a huge computer-generated scoreboard behind co-anchors Roger Mudd and Tom Brokaw. ABC, which brought news into the world of arcade-like graphics under news president Roone Arledge, was less glitzy than CBS, offering a large cast, including co-anchors Frank Reynolds, David Brinkley and Ted Koppel.

"The best video is the sight of three fine minds at work," Robert Siegenthaler, ABC News' vice president for production, said before the telecast. "Graphics should not be wagging the reporting."

Another significant feature of CBS' non-verbal coverage was the videotaped shots of the winners and losers, along with identifying facts and figures about them. This wrinkle could be traced back to Arledge when his pioneering efforts at ABC Sports brought athletes "up close and personal."

Sauter, who freshened the look of the "CBS Evening News" by emphasizing graphics, had struck again.

Ticket Prices For ECU Friday Event Reduced

NEW YORK - The Campus Entertainment Network today announced its decision to reduce ticket prices for its satellite telecast of Duke Ellington's "Sophisticated Ladies" live from Broadway's Lunt-Fontaine Theater Friday at East Carolina University. Tickets are now $3 for students and $5 for the general public. The CEN Spokesman commented, "Our commitment is to bring first-rate entertainment to as many people as possible on college campuses and the surrounding communities. The reduced-ticket price will now allow everyone to experience this historic telecast of the Tony Award-winning musical during its current run on Broadway."

'Copycat' Criminals Seen Having An Excuse

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
Associated Press Writer
BOSTON (AP) — The copycat criminals who poison medicine bottles may be emotionally immature people, desperate for a leader, who finally have an excuse to carry out their long-held grudges, psychiatrists say.

Since seven people died in the Chicago area from cyanide-filled Tylenol capsules, sabotaged medicines — and lately food — have appeared in stores across the United States.

Psychiatrists speculate that this series is the work of people who are unduly susceptible to the power of suggestion.

"People who have difficulty running their own lives — people who have relatively weak ego structures, to put it technically — will rely upon others to tell them what to do and what to be," says Dr. Richard Galdston of Harvard Medical School.

These are people who long for their childhood days when they always had someone to tell them how to act, he says. "It is, in that sense, a re-enactment of a childhood tradition."

Why copy a killing? Maybe they have longed to murder. Many people scheme and dream about doing in an enemy, but they never come close to actual violence. But the copycat criminals have poor control of the urges that society forbids.

"Individuals who have a marginal adaptation of their aggressive impulses, assuming that they haven't killed anybody but have an inclination to, respond to the suggestive stimuli of the notoriety and infamy that surrounds the Tylenol case," Galdston says.

Dr. Thomas Gutheil, director of the Program in Psychiatry and the Law at the Massachusetts Mental Health Center, said people may tussle for years with a yen to do something violent. Then they see somebody else do it.

"When certain phenomena happen," he said, "individuals who are struggling inside with impulses act as though one side of the struggle has been given the go-ahead and may act."

However, drawing a profile of the person capable of spiking a medicine bottle is difficult.

"It would be somebody who certainly has a great amount of aggression," he says. "He might carry it around for several years. Seeing the event, seeing the killer get publicity and seeing how hard it is to catch the person could just serve to precipitate some kind of violence of this type."

Some psychiatrists doubt whether they can figure out much about these people's motives before they are caught.

"I do not believe that psychiatry has a great deal to offer in characterizing these people in advance," says Dr. Peter Kramer, director of outpatient psychiatry at Rhode Island Hospital. "There's no scientific basis for making these predictions."

Some even question whether the copycat poisoners are suffering from neurosis, psychosis or any other degree of mental sickness.

"I think it's premature to say these people are mad rather than bad," says Dr. George Murray of Massachusetts General Hospital. "Putting them in that category makes people feel better, since they don't have to think that humanity can be so inherently evil. I don't think these people have psychiatric disease."

Among the tampering cases that have emerged since the Tylenol poisonings: —A man in Aurora, Colo., was in critical condition after he took Extra-Strength Excedrin capsules that were tainted with mercuric chloride.

—Cases of contaminated eyedrops, nasal sprays and mouthwash have been reported in several states.

—In Minneapolis, a boy drank milk from a carton containing sodium hydroxide, a chemical used in industrial cleaners, but was not seriously hurt.

Such crimes seem random. But Gutheil says the poisoner probably fantasized about who would be killed by the doctored drugs and had a specific victim in mind.

"It's random in fact," said Gutheil, "but in their fantasy, it's a guided missile."

Adds Galdston: "If they have somebody they want to do in but can't, the next best thing is to kill somebody whom they don't know at all. That way they can imagine their enemy in his or her stead."

Robbins says the intended victim may also be the city where the killer lives, the world in general or American capitalism.

Galdston speculates that such pill poisoners may have committed similar crimes "

$50,000 To A Paperboy

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A Cary paperboy was awarded a $50,000 settlement Tuesday for injuries he suffered when he was struck by a hit-and-run driver a year ago.

David Patrick Jeans was hit Oct. 6, 1981, on a rural road less than a mile from Cary. He was discovered laying in a ditch by a state trooper and taken to Rex Hospital where he remained for about a week.

Pamela Ann Dillon, 18, pleaded guilty in Wake Superior Court in July to felony hit-and-run and received a suspended two-year prison sentence.

She and her mother, Beverly Ann Dillon, agreed to pay the money to Jeans. Superior Court Judge Robert L. Farmer, who had to approve the settlement because Jeans is a minor, ordered that Jeans' attorney, Michael A. Swann of Raleigh, be paid $12,625.25 of the settlement for his legal work.

The order also said Jeans' mother, Wanda Dean Jeans, was to be paid $4,889.96 for her son's medical expenses and her loss of earnings while caring for her son.

The suit, filed last month, claimed that Miss Dillon negligently operated her car and that Mrs. Dillon failed to exercise good judgement in allowing her daughter to drive the car.

A Frightening Lesson

On November 4, 1979, Americans were shocked to learn that Iranians had seized the U.S. Embassy in Teheran and were holding 53 Americans hostage. In a sense, the seizure was a religious act. The militants were followers of the Ayatollah Khomeini, Iran's supreme ruler and leader of its Shi'ite Moslems. Shi'ites believe a successor to the Prophet Mohammed will someday establish a Moslem Kingdom on Earth. Many Shi'ites believe Khomeini is that savior. Therefore, any act committed against those he called "the American devils" was right and proper. The seizure of the U.S. Embassy was only the beginning of what one journalist has called "a frightening lesson in the shattering power of irrationality."

DO YOU KNOW — Which Moslem sect is in the majority in the Middle East?

WEDNESDAY'S ANSWER — The Sandwich Islands are now known as the Hawaiian Islands.
