Brezhnev Dies

LEONID BREZHNEV

MOSCOW (AP) — Leonid I. Brezhnev, who ruled the Soviet Union for 18 years, pursued detente with the West and raised his country to nuclear parity with the United States, has died. He was 75.

Brezhnev died Wednesday at 8:30 a.m. (12:30 a.m. EST), but the official announcement was withheld until 11 a.m. today (3 a.m. EST) while maneuvering for a successor began behind the towering, red walls of the Kremlin.

No new party chief or president was immediately named to fill Brezhnev's posts. But Western experts believe the power vacuum may be filled in the short run by a collective leadership including former KGB chief Yuri V. Andropov and long-time Brezhnev associate Konstantin Chernenko, the two men most often touted as likely successors.

The Brezhnev era was marked by firm action to suppress dissent in the Soviet Union. When Czechoslovakia challenged Kremlin domination in the East bloc in 1968, Brezhnev sent Soviet tanks into Prague to crush "socialism with a human face."

As Communist Party chief and president, Brezhnev saw the Soviet Union achieve its aim of becoming a true global power. Strategic balance with the United States was confirmed in 1972 when he signed the SALT I treaty with President Richard M. Nixon.

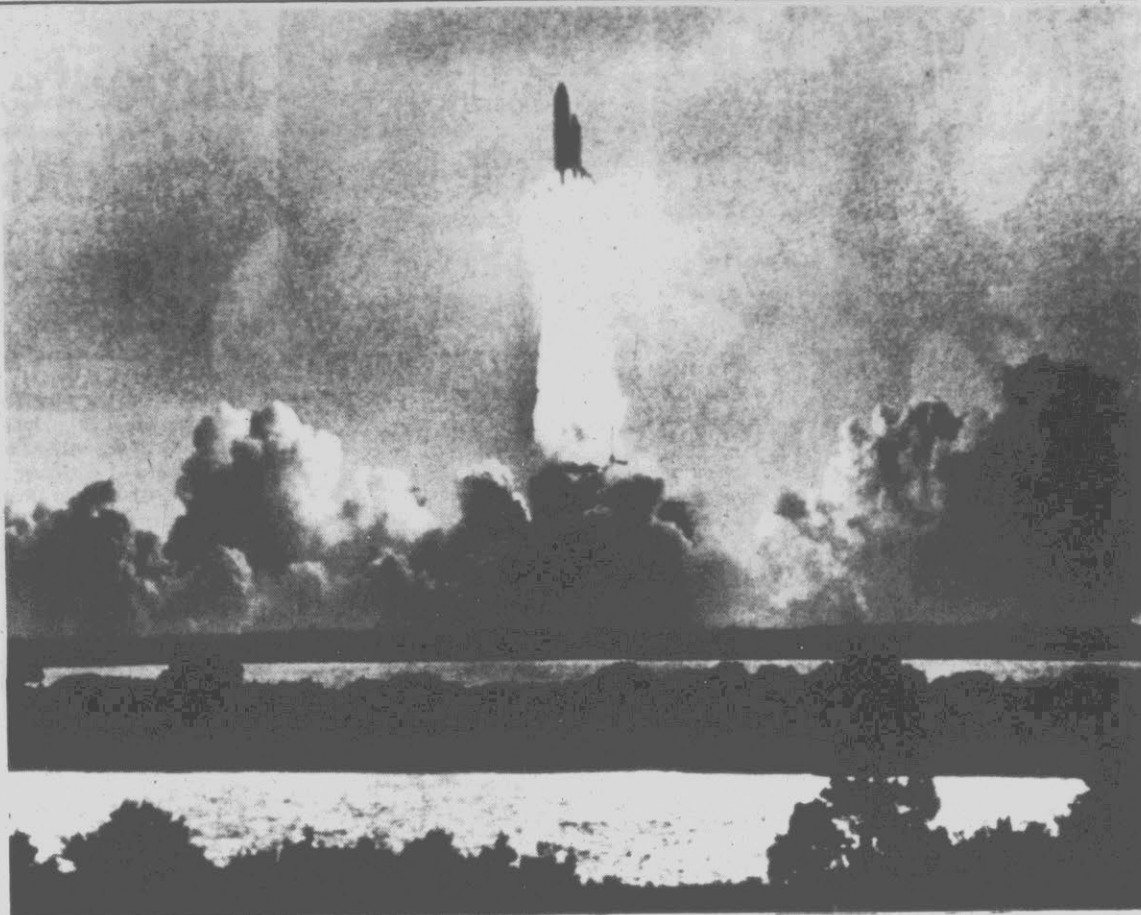

But when Brezhnev died, the Soviet economy was stagnating and the life of ordinary Soviet citizens was not improving. For the first time since World War II, Red Army soldiers were involved in a war — fighting to prop up a shaky Marxist regime in Afghanistan.

The new Soviet leadership also will face continued turmoil in Poland, the withering of detente, new strains with the United States and no solution to the Soviet-China split.

The official Tass news agency said today that the president and party secretary general had died a "sudden death."

No cause of death was given was given in the official obituary, although Brezhnev has been ailing for years and there were reports he suffered from heart trouble, a stroke and cancer.

"The name of Leonid Ilyich Brezhnev, a true continuer of Lenin's great cause and an ardent champion of peace and Communism, will live forever in the hearts of the Soviet people and the entire progressive mankind," the Tass announcement said.

Poland's Authorities Order Walesa Release

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Poland's martial law authorities have ordered the release from internment of Solidarity leader Lech Walesa who has been held since martial law began Dec. 13, government spokesman Jerzy Urban said today.

The news coincided with the announcement of the death of Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev in Moscow and came 24 hours after nationwide strikes called by the Solidarity underground in Poland were blunted effectively.

Urban had indicated Wednesday that because the work stoppages were minor, the martial law regime might go ahead with plans to lift military rule by the end of the year.

Urban, in a hurriedly called press conference for foreign journalists today, said Walesa would be released "in a few days," due to technical reasons, but did not elaborate.

Walesa has been held in solitary confinement at a government resort in southeastern Poland near the Soviet border since May. He was moved there from a Warsaw villa where he was held after being seized Dec. 13.

Urban said Walesa had written a letter to martial law chief Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski offering to come to terms with the authorities and had suggested a meeting to discuss Poland's labor troubles.

Increased Gasoline Tax Seen Way To Finance Added Jobs

WASHINGTON (AP) — With Congress searching for ways to create new jobs, the Reagan administration is taking another look at raising the gasoline tax to finance a massive highway construction program that could put people to work.

Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis argued for the new gasoline tax — doubling the current federal levy of 4 cents a gallon — at the White House Wednesday. He said the higher tax would produce $5.5 billion a year for highway construction and improvements to mass transit systems.

But President Reagan, who rejected a similar proposal early this year, held off a decision and wanted more detailed information about the plan. Several sources, asking not to be identified by name, said the proposal had strong support from most of the Cabinet members present.

Lewis took pains not to characterize the measure as a jobs bill, but administration estimates are that it would produce 320,000 additional jobs, mostly in the hard-hit construction field.

A&P Offers Reward

The A&P supermarket chain has offered a $5,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of those responsible for the murder of Howard Manning Jr.

The governor's office announced earlier this week that it is also offering a $5,000 reward on the Manning case.

Manning, 39, of Farmville, co-manager of the A&P store in Greenville, was shot Oct. 23 while taking cash and receipts to a bank deposit box. He died at Pitt County Memorial Hospital a short time later.

Tobacco Queen Will Be Chosen Friday Evening

Contestants from the five southern flue-cured tobacco-producing states will vie for the title of 1983 queen of the Southern Flue-Cured Tobacco Festival and $2,250 in prizes during the scholarship pageant scheduled for Friday at 8 p.m. in the Ayden-Grifton High School Auditorium.

Contestants will be judged in four categories including evening gown, swim suit, talent and interview. The 1982 queen, Mary Kathryn Smith of Claxton, Ga., will crown the winner.

Melinda Michele Adams of Greenville is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roger L. Adams. She is a senior at J.H. Rose High and hopes to major in interior design in college.

Miss Adams is vice president of Kajes Charm School and senior representative of the Keywanette Club. She enjoys ballet, aerobics, modeling, interior design and is an acolyte and intercessor at St. Timothy's Episcopal Church.

Her talent presentation will be a modern ballet performed to the tune of "Esmerelda."

Karen Elizabeth Cottingham is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Ferren of Greenville. She is a senior at D.H. Conley High School where she is a member of the National Honor Society and a marshal.

Miss Cottingham is president of Kajes School of Modeling and her hobbies include art, aerobics and roller skating. She will be performing a comedy sketch from Neil Simons' "The Star Spangled Girl."

Shirley Rebecca Grant of Florence, S.C., is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Willard Ellis Grant and is a junior at Francis Marion College where she is a dean's list student, a marshal, a cheerleader and scholastic and standards chairman for ZTA Sorority. She is the GOVERNOR'S NUMBER?

Doesn't the Governor have a toll-free number? What is it? M.A.

The number is 800-662-7952. This service can be used by state residents who wish to get assistance on problems with any department, program, agency or other institution of the state government. More than 12,000 citizens used the service during the past year, a spokesman for the office said.

FEEDBACK

As feedback for the Friday Hotline item about sources of help from a child who is confronted with incest in the home, the Mental Health Center says that the Parents Anonymous group it sponsors is being expanded to serve as a support group for anyone experiencing any kind of violence in the home. For information about when the group meets, call 752-0119.

There is a shelter in Goldsboro for women experiencing family difficulty and needing a place to live temporarily. It's called Shelter Inc. Referrals may be made by many different agencies. To inquire directly, you may call the shelter, 736-1313, but you may need an agency referral.

Raleigh has a similar shelter called the Wake County Family Violence Prevention Center, but it is only for women of age, not for minors, a spokesman for the center said.

Dear Abby

Molester Could Be Next Door

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Although you have been criticized for printing too many letters pertaining to sex, you cannot alert parents often enough to the danger of children being sexually abused.

I am the mother of a 2½-year-old daughter who was raped by my 15-year-old brother.

Thank God, she was able to tell me what happened in her own words. I could see she was hurting so I took her to a doctor, who is now treating her for gonorrhea! By the way, it wasn't easy for the doctor, since he had never treated a patient that young for a social disease.

Abby, please keep telling parents to take their children seriously when they come to them with stories about sexual matters.

How many mothers would believe a 2½-year-old could be raped? How many mothers even consider the possibility that their child could be sexually molested by a family member or a friendly neighbor?

Parents, I urge you to keep a careful watch over your children, and when they give you any hint that they are being violated, investigate thoroughly.

Thank God, my child will be OK. Will yours?

SMARTER IN DAYTON

DEAR SMARTER: Thanks for letting me remind parents once more to teach their children that their bodies are "private" — and if anyone tries to entice them into any kind of "play" involving their bodies, to report it to Mama and Papa at once.

DEAR ABBY: Re "Pigged-Out in Pottsville, Pa." who complained about her friends sending candy, fruitcake, nuts and home-baked goodies to friends they know are trying to watch their calories:

We have a similar problem with friends and relatives who bring over these goodies, knowing that my husband is diabetic. They usually say, "I know Bob can't eat these, but Merry Christmas!" I feel as though they're saying, "Merry Christmas to everyone but Bob."

Why not send a small fruit basket or even some diabetic candy or cookies to let that person know he's not forgotten?

UPSET IN ARIZONA

DEAR UPSET: A thoughtful idea. Thanks for a timely reminder.

Med School Studies Pregnancy Problems

ECU News Bureau

During pregnancy, an internal communications system or "feedback pathway" exists between the reproductive tract and the hypothalamus, a region that is situated deeply in the brain and is the controlling center of the body's nervous system.

Dysfunctions or breaks in the "pathway" cause some of the major complications of pregnancy, says Dr. David R. Garris, assistant professor of anatomy with East Carolina University School of Medicine.

Dr. Garris is collaborating in research on these problems with Dr. R.B. Billiard of Case Western Reserve University in Cleveland, Ohio under an $850,000 National Institutes of Health grant. This is part of a large project grant under the direction of Dr. Brian Little, chairman of the department of reproductive biology at the university.

Their studies will concentrate on a search for specific neurons within the hypothalamic cell nuclei that are sensitive to and functionally dependent on ovarian steroid hormones, a group name for substances such as progesterone and estradiol.

The hypothalamus is recognized as being involved with such important body functions as body temperature, sleep, hunger, food intake and pituitary regulation.

Garris says that interruptions in the "pathway" could be a cause for infertility pregnancy complications, reproductive tract atrophy and similar problems.

Swedish Couples Live Together First

By BIRGIT LOFGREN
Associated Press Writer
STOCKHOLM, Sweden
(AP) — A greater percentage of men and women live together outside marriage in Sweden than anywhere else in the world, according to experts here.

Their estimates come as no jolt to Swedes who for the past two decades have considered the practice perfectly normal.

In fact, it is highly abnormal nowadays for Swedish men and women to marry without having lived together beforehand. Experts estimate that 99 percent of a current group of newlyweds shared quarters before marriage, in contrast to only 1 percent in the 1950s.

A recent government report said about 20 percent of all couples living together — 55 percent of them in the 18-24 age bracket — are not married.

In the United States, which has a population of 228 million, the U.S. Bureau of the Census has counted 1,808,000 households made up of unmarried couples as of July 1, 1981. This accounts for 2 percent of all households in the United States.

The Swedes have even invented a word for cohabiting men and women — "sambo," from the Swedish words for "living together." "Sambo" has been in general usage since the 1960s.

Among the trend-setters is Liberal Party leader Ola Ullsten, former foreign minister whose "sambo," Charlotte von Redlich, sometimes accompanied him on official trips.

Swedish press reports said their hosts on trips to Egypt and Zimbabwe, in Africa, embarrassingly groped for the proper dinner-seating arrangements and hotel accommodations.

Social scientists have been busy trying to explain the tendency away from marriage vows.

Some say the main reasons are the introduction of birth control pills and mid-1970s laws granting abortion upon request. Others insist the phenomenon evolved because this Protestant though secularized nation of 8.3 million has no deep-rooted Christian ethic stigmatizing cohabitation as "living in sin."

Other important factors include the growing equality for women in society, the labor market during the economic boom of the 1960s and the general youth rebellion that swept Europe and North America in that decade.

Legislators have been unable to keep pace with the social developments, and as a result unmarried couples are not quite on an equal legal footing with married ones.

Until a recent Swedish Supreme Court ruling, legal protection has been particularly poor for unmarried housewives without incomes of their own. They had no right, as by marriage, to joint property in case of separation or death.

Three years ago, Ingrid Eriksson, now 40, and her cohabiting partner decided to split up, after 17 years together and three children. She had reared the children and taken care of the household, but as the sole wage-earner he owned the house. Ms. Eriksson had to move out and go on welfare until she found a job as a cleaning woman.

The Supreme Court agreed with two lower courts that

Ms. Eriksson should get half the couple's home and property.

"An interesting and surprising side effect was that the test case also helped improve the situation for divorcing, married housewives," said lawyer Lloyd Kaiding, Ms. Eriksson's attorney.

He explained that a married woman previously had no right to joint property if a contract giving the husband exclusive control of his belongings had been established before marriage. Two such cases have gone in the women's favor since Ms. Eriksson's court victory.

Last December, a government-appointed family law committee proposed matrimonial reform to replace Sweden's marriage code that dates back to 1920.

The proposal, to be submitted late next year to the Riksdag, Sweden's parliament, virtually would eliminate legal differences between unmarried and married couples. Kaiding, a member of the law committee, said the principal change would be to put into law the court decision in the Eriksson case.

Critics of the reform, like Anders Agell, law professor at Uppsala University just north of Stockholm, contend such extensive laws favoring cohabitators is not an admirable goal.

"Such legislation could boost the cohabitation tendency even further and encourage couples not to marry," said Agell, author of several books on the legal status of cohabiting couples.

Legislators already have minimized many differences. Taxation is equal for unmarried and married couples, and children have equal legal rights whether or not the parents are married.

The number of children born outside wedlock has grown rapidly over the years. Fifteen years ago 14.6 percent of newborns in Sweden were illegitimate, compared with 33 percent in 1976 and 41 percent last year.

Statistics also show instability exists in cohabitation, especially among young people.

The government study showed that 5 percent of unmarried female Swedes lived with more than one man before their 20th birthday.

Bridge Is Major Loss

One thing the Outer Banks and Eastern North Carolina didn't need was the wrecking of a span in the William B. Umstead bridge at Manteo.

Bridge pilings were extensively damaged last weekend and resulted in its being closed to traffic. It will stay that way for weeks while a bridge building firm is retained to come in and reconstruct it.

It means that land access to Manteo from the west is cut off. Traffic from the west must now detour to the north to reach the Outer Banks and Manteo. Much of the coastal area's supplies reach it by truck from eastern communities. Winter and summer there is steady traffic from throughout the state headed to the Outer Banks by way of U.S. 64 and 264. Now this vital link is cut for an indefinite length of time. A makeshift ferry service has been set up but it will provide little relief.

Of course, the bridge dates back only 27 years but before that there was adequate ferry service across the waters. Since then the route has become heavily used and provides essential service to the Outer Banks.

Getting along without the bridge will be difficult, but of course not impossible. All who are accustomed to using it will just have to improvise. In the meantime hopefully repairs will proceed rapidly and strong efforts will be made to retrieve the cost from those responsible for the damage.

A Day To Say Thanks

Today is Veterans Day, a day which grew out of Armistice day which observed the end of World War I.

Since then millions of Americans have gone to the battlefields of the Pacific and Europe. They have fought in Korea and Vietnam and selected numbers have taken part in missions throughout the world designed to keep the peace.

Most were citizen soldiers who have since melted back into the civilian population and are little distinguishable from those who work and live next to them. That is as it should be in a democracy.

Still, it is well to have a day to honor those who have served in the armed forces. It gives our society the opportunity to say thank you and it affords those who served, a moment to reflect on the time when they answered their country's call to arms.

Our nation makes military mistakes, but without the veterans we might today be goose stepping to a militaristic government, or crushed by the oppression of communism.

THIS AFTERNOON

No Alternatives?

By PAUL T. O'CONNOR
RALEIGH — When Gov. Jim Hunt formed his special study committee on school construction financing, he asked its members to give him some fresh ideas. He stacked the committee with some of the state's leading businessmen and educators and told them to put some of the miracles of modern financing to work for the state's schools.

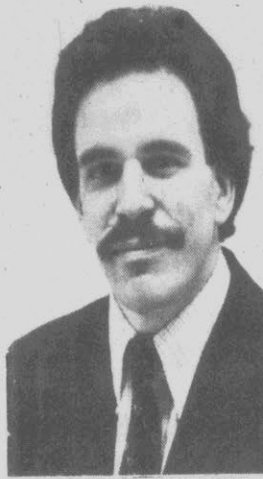

If the committee eventually recommends the methods of financing discussed at their November meeting, Hunt is likely to be disappointed. As committee chairman Dick Spangler said after two hours of highly technical discussion, "We're looking an awfully lot like ground zero."

Ground zero represents the three financing methods already widely discussed for rebuilding the state's aging schools: bonds, a penny increase in the sales tax and a legislative appropriation. All three proposals carry with them considerable political risks.

The state Department of Public Instruction estimates that $1.8 billion is needed to rebuild the public schools. Traditionally, school construction is the responsibility of the counties but the state has regularly chipped in with about one-third of the costs. So, the state need to raise $600 million, the committee figures.

In past years, the state has issued bonds for school construction. If the state chooses to borrow $600 million, said several business members of the committee, there is no cheaper approach than bonds. Put the full faith and credit of the state behind the bonds and you'll get the best interest rates possible. But such a large issue at today's interest rates would seriously strap the state. And John Medlin, chairman of Wachovia Bank, told the committee that there was no way the state could take on such a debt without raising taxes to pay for it. Hunt has expressed reluctance to ask for a bond issue fearing it wouldn't pass in these recessionary times.

Hunt is deadset against the second most often mentioned proposal. The state Board of Education and Craig Phillips, superintendent of public instruction, want a one-cent increase with a portion of the money earmarked for school construction. Hunt says it wouldn't be fair to ask people to pay higher taxes during such difficult times. Keep in mind that he may seek another office someday.

Others proposed a pay-as-you-go approach. As Bill Lee of Duke Power said, the Legislature should allocate a certain amount of money for construction each year — the equivalent of what it would cost to pay back the bonds. The problem with this is that the 1983 Legislature cannot bind future Legislatures to that commitment. And, with the 1983 budget looking so awfully tight, it's unlikely any money could be found.

Although these three ideas

Other Editors Say Our Microchips

(Greensboro Record)

The future, as measured by use of computers, already is here on most college campuses. The cathode ray tube and the microcomputer in their various forms have become campus fixtures, handy if not altogether necessary in some cases.

There seems to be little, if any, doubt but that this will be the computer generation of students.

For example, Drexel University in Philadelphia has announced it will require its students to buy computers beginning next year. Clarkson College in Potsdam, N.Y., will give each of its entering freshmen in 1983 a microcomputer. In 1985, Carnegie Mellon University in Pittsburgh will come on line with a decentralized system developed by IBM that will be the largest computer network in the world.

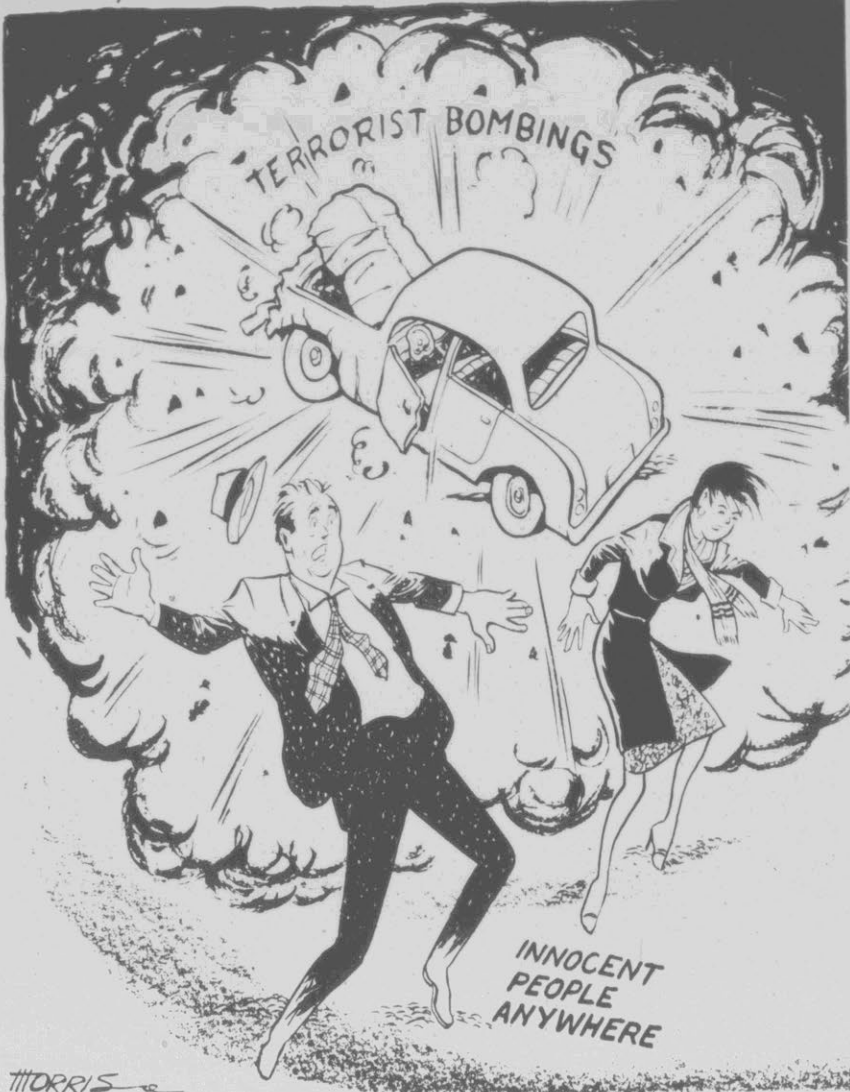

Heralding the classroom of the future, the Carnegie Mellon system will give instant access to library holdings and data banks undreamed of by earlier collegiate generations. Among other conveniences, students will be able to take examinations electronically and zip them off to their professors, sitting in their dens at home. The ultimate will be the time when the student never has to appear on campus.

We wonder if there isn't a danger of over-computerization. The computer undeniably is great for the retrieval of information, for solving abstract problems, for designing, and even for answering the telephone.

But if, say, too many courses are planned to conform with the demands of the system, won't the nuances so important in English literature and foreign languages be lost? And if and when the time ever comes when it won't be necessary for students to mingle on a campus, will college life become a dead lifestyle — or does the informal exchange of ideas on campus really have much to do with college education?

We're not opposed to progress. We welcome it. We just want to be sure it is what it purports to be.

Political Reality

Statehood Still Remote

By STEVEN KOMAROW
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The will of the voters may be at odds with political reality in the District of Columbia, where elected officials are pondering the fate of a controversial state constitution approved in last week's election.

Barry said he himself "only reluctantly" voted for the constitution. As for sending it quickly to Capitol Hill, Barry said his staff was studying the matter.

City officials privately hold out little hope that Congress would approve statehood for New Columbia, as the area would be called, based on the proposed constitution or even with a more conventional document. A proposed amendment to the U.S. Constitution simply giving the district voting representation in Congress has been approved in only 9 states in four years.

Interviews with key congressmen last spring, following adoption of the constitution by the drafting convention, showed little support even from members normally friendly toward home rule for the city.

Congress, which has veto power over all bills passed by the D.C. Council, last year overwhelmingly vetoed an act liberalizing the city's sexual assault laws, including those covering homosexuality. The Moral Majority, a fundamentalist Christian group which engineered the veto, promises to do the same if the proposed state constitution is ever brought to a vote.

"We are adamantly opposed to many of the provisions in it," said Ronald Godwin, the group's executive vice president in Lynchburg, Va. Although a formal position was still in the works, Godwin said in a telephone interview he believed the constitution was a "cloak" for "a gay political rights action."

To avoid the embarrassment of another congressional veto, city officials may propose their own amendments to the constitution before pushing for approval. Just prior to the election, the city council passed a bill giving itself a right to put proposed amendments on the ballot prior to statehood.

Gay rights, however, is a popular cause in the district, and Barry and incoming council chairman David A. Clarke were elected with the help of gay activists.

Asked about Clarke's plans for the constitution, aide Anne Meister said Clarke was tied up with his transition. "Right now, we're not really addressing it at all," she said.

Walter E. Fauntroy, the district's non-voting representative in the House, was sharply critical of the constitutional convention, saying the only chance statehood had was with a non-controversial proposal. Fauntroy has promised to help with re-drafting the constitution to make it more palatable to Congress.

Once the constitution is sent to Congress, a bill would have to be introduced to admit the city to the union. Approval takes a majority vote of both houses.

Congress in the past has forced states to change their constitutions before approving statehood. Utah, for example, had to change a provision allowing men to have more than one wife.

The district's case is different than the admittance of a territory because the federal city was established in the U.S. Constitution. The

Kremlin Will Play It Cool

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Kremlin — and the United States — have been preparing for the death of Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev for at least two years, so the shock to both systems is likely to be limited.

In the Kremlin, a makeshift board of directors had already taken over most decision-making powers, and three possible contenders had emerged as potential successors once Brezhnev passed away, according to U.S. officials.

Here, at the other end of the U.S.-Soviet relationship, officials are expecting no great departures from an aggressive foreign policy that has remained relatively static while Brezhnev's energies ebbed away.

The Kremlin is expected to focus its efforts on an orderly transition, cautious not to jangle the nerves of 262 million citizens experiencing harder times with the shortages of meat and other essentials as winter approaches.

"Their major concern is their domestic legitimacy," said a U.S. analyst last week, as Brezhnev faded away. "Their real concern is that the people — the unwashed — are going to rise up. There is a tremendous concern about people's loyalties. They do believe that Russians are anarchists."

With that in mind, and as Brezhnev's infirmities multiplied, five men in the Kremlin gradually took charge, reducing the Soviet president to little more than a symbol, U.S. officials said.

Without a formal agreement, and even while at least two were jockeying to inherit Brezhnev's mantle, the five — Konstantin Chernenko, Yuri Andropov, Andrei A. Gromyko, Dmitri Ustinov and Nikolai A. Tikhonov — ran the Soviet government.

Chernenko, who was Brezhnev's right-hand man, and Andropov, former head of the KGB, the secret police, found their own powers increasing to the point they are considered by Reagan administration analysts to be the two leading contenders to succeed Brezhnev.

Victor Grishin, head of the Communist party in Moscow, is also thought to be in the running. A fourth erstwhile contender, Andrei Kirilenko, is in poor health and no longer figures in U.S. speculation. In fact, when rumors reached here Wednesday that a Soviet leader had died, some administration officials thought it might be the 76-year-old Kirilenko.

Brezhnev no longer chaired Kremlin committees. "He really isn't running the country anymore," another U.S. analyst observed on Monday. But he was kept in symbolic power because "they feel it's better than to have an open leadership fight."

The quiet transition actually began with the death of Premier Alexei Kosygin two years ago and accelerated with the passing in January of Mikhail Suslov, the leading Communist party theoretician.

In the meantime, the Reagan administration came into power here and embarked on a major arms buildup.

Possibly because the transition was under way, or perhaps in response to a toughened U.S. foreign policy, the Soviets were less ambitious abroad.

"As long as the Soviet government is in a transition period, it's unlikely to take any new initiatives, either of a positive or a negative kind," a top administration official noted recently.

Another said the Soviets might have been tempted in the late 1970s to challenge the United States by moving into Iran or into Southeast Asia. "You could have made a very strong argument that we were getting closer to war," he said.

But now, he said, "if the central issue in our relationship is whether we are getting closer to or further away from war, then I would say we are getting further away from war."

However, a report to Congress last summer warned of the possibility "that the suc-

HAND OF GOD

A great religious leader of generations ago, assailed by persecution and overshadowed by what seemed certain defeat, cried out stridently, "So long as the hand of God is in it, my work will not perish."

Life changes very little from century to century — at least as far as fundamentals are concerned. People have been fighting battles against doubt, sorrow, sensuality, addiction, avarice, and jealousy since the beginning of time. People have been hoping and trying to achieve in every age, and in every age have seen their fondest hopes crushed.

But we should never forget that standing over us is an almighty and omniscient Deity who is also a Heavenly Father. Not a sparrow falls but God notes it; every hair of our head is numbered. And this God who notes and numbers also keeps the planets in their courses.

So if we get ourselves right with God, then, no matter what happens, our work will not perish. — Elisha Douglass

Staving Off Financial Crisis

By OWEN ULLMANN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — International financiers have pieced together a string of multibillion dollar emergency loans for the Third World's three biggest debtors to avert a major global banking crisis.

Mexico and Argentina, two of the major borrowers in the Third World, have just won tentative approval for nearly $6 billion in emergency loans from the government-sponsored International Monetary Fund. Another major borrower, Brazil, is lining up more than $1 billion in short-term credits.

The list of developing nations falling into financial 'straits' is growing rapidly because of a prolonged worldwide recession that has depressed demand and prices for oil, gold and other commodities these nations count on for their foreign earnings.

As a result, their revenues from exports are failing to keep up with their costs for imports and meeting prior debts.

South Africa, for example, received last week a $1.67 billion loan from the 146-nation IMF to help it meet its debt that stems from falling prices for gold, its major export.

The prospect of defaults has sent a nervous chill throughout the world's private banking community, which has hundreds of billions of dollars worth of loans outstanding in Third World.

Mexico, Argentina and Brazil alone owe an estimated $200 billion to foreign lenders, mostly private banks in the United States and other industrial countries. According to most counts, which are imprecise, Mexico owes $81 billion, Brazil owes between $60 billion and $87 billion, and Argentina owes between $37 billion and $40 billion.

Financial sources said Wednesday that the IMF tentatively approved a $3.8 billion loan to Mexico and about $2.1 billion in credit for Argentina to help the two nations meet their foreign debts.

In return for the aid, both countries will be forced to take stern belt-tightening steps at home, according to the sources.

Meanwhile, banking sources in London said Wednesday that U.S. banks provided Brazil with about $600 million in emergency short-term loans to help the South American country pay up to $4 billion for imports that it can not cover from export revenues.

The U.S. government is expected to loan Brazil another $500 million to $1 billion later this year, the sources said. The Treasury Department refused comment.

The loans to Mexico and Argentina are subject to the formal approval of the IMF's board of directors, a formality that will take at least a month.

In Mexico City, Treasury Secretary Jesus Silva Herzog said Mexico had agreed to drastic cuts in government spending to eliminate a multibillion dollar budget deficit as part of the accord with the IMF.

Carlos Tello Maciaw, president of the Bank of Mexico, the country's central bank, said the nation would not alter its currency control program to obtain the loan. He said Mexico would maintain its two-tiered exchange rate for the Mexican peso of 50 to the dollar for certain essential imports and 70 to the dollar for other official transactions.

The peso is worth considerably less in free market trading outside the country, as well as on the black market, where it was quoted as low as 130 to the dollar.

The three-year loan to Mexico is the centerpiece of an aid package stitched together by international bankers and governments to prevent a default. The U.S. government has contributed nearly $3 billion to Mexico in loans, advance oil payments and credits for the purchase of U.S. agricultural products.

IMF and Mexican officials reached a tentative agreement Tuesday after haggling for months over the specific conditions, the sources said.

The loan would be the second largest ever extended by the IMF. The largest loan, valued at $5.3 billion in current dollars, went to India a year ago.

cession will bring a period of turmoil."

The report, by the Congressional Research Service, said "preoccupation by Soviet leaders with the struggle for power could result in a decision-making paralysis, a turning inward and retrenchment, at least until the succession is resolved."

But the predominant view within the administration is that the Soviets are being cautious while sorting out their new leadership.

During the war in Lebanon there was no real threat of Soviet intervention. And while the Soviets were poised to move their troops into Poland twice in the last two years, they held back.

In the Geneva arms control talks, the Soviets have offered a proposal to reduce strategic nuclear weapons on both sides. While the administration considers the offer inadequate, it is on the table, being negotiated, along with the cutbacks proposed in May by President Reagan.

U.S. policy-makers see precedents in the 1953-54 and 1965 transition periods. After the death of Josef Stalin and the forced retirement of Nikita Khrushchev the Soviets compensated for uncertainty at home by showing an interest in reaching understandings with the West.

Whoever succeeds Brezhnev, according to Paul Cook, a State Department expert, he is unlikely to rule longer than the end of the decade. The reason, Cook said in a recent report to the Joint Economic Committee of Congress, is his age.

Of the leading candidates, Chernenko is 70, Andropov, 68, and Grishin, 67.

Hunger Project Plans Workshop On Tuesday

ECU NEWS BUREAU
The international Hunger Project and the Greenville Hunger Coalition will sponsor a public workshop Tuesday from 3-7 p.m. in the Mendenhall Student Center at East Carolina University.

Coordinator Jennifer Baughan, a graduate student in psychology at ECU, said the workshop briefing will cover three major areas:

— The basic facts about hunger, how it is defined, how it is measured worldwide, how resources are produced and distributed and where the hunger populations are.

— The major assumptions and false beliefs about why hunger persists (too many people, not enough food, insufficient land and distribution possibilities).

— What concerned people can do to become effective participants in ending hunger.

The workshop leader will be Marty Corley, a Virginia veteran of the U.S. Peace Corps who spent three years in Malaysia. Ms. Corley's husband, also a Hunger Project volunteer, is the financial adviser.

The Hunger Project is a grass-roots movement of nearly 3 million people in 19 nations who are "making individual commitments to do whatever is necessary to end hunger in a world of plenty by the end of this century," said Ms. Baughan.

The workshop will be open to all interested persons in the campus and local communities. Sponsors would prefer to have those who plan to attend telephone and reserve seats.

Reservations and further information are available from Jennifer Baughan at 355-6855 or Steve Dear at 752-8786.

Members of the Greenville Hunger Coalition and the Greenville Hunger Project meet regularly at the ECU Newman Center on 10th Street. Both groups include ECU students, employees and local citizens.

are all well worn, the committee appears convinced that there are no other viable alternatives. Creative financing ideas, such as a lease arrangement discussed at the committee's initial meeting, wouldn't be any less expensive than bonds, they said.

But one legislator, Rep. Charles Beall of Haywood County, was slightly critical of the committee after the meeting. "They don't seem to be interested in trying anything different," he said. Beall says the state ought to look at the possibility of a statewide lottery or of extending the $120 tax ceiling on major purchases. The state might want to emulate South Carolina's mini-bottle cocktails law and place a 25-cent tax on each drink, Beall said.

None of those ideas would be easy to get through the Legislature, he said. But neither would any of the three finance methods that people have been talking about for three years.

Suffered Only Minor Injuries

NEW HILL, Pa. — The Pennsylvania State Police said today that five Greenville, N.C., residents escaped with minor injuries when the bus in which they were traveling was struck by a tractor-trailer on the Pennsylvania Turnpike near Fort Littleton, about 45 miles west of Harrisburg, about 8 a.m. Wednesday.

Passengers on the bus, owned by the Fountain of Life, included the Rev. Jim Whittington, his brother Larry Whittington, Pat Moore, Bob Ringer and Robert J. Sims.

State police spokesmen, who reported Sims, 34, was driving the bus at the time, said a tractor-trailer driven by Salvatore Cappello, 29, of Patterson, N.J., ran through the medial barrier guard rail and collided with the east-bound bus.

The spokesman said the bus rolled over on its right side and came to rest on top of the guardrail on the south side of the highway, with about a third of the bus hanging over a 40-foot cliff.

The spokesman said all the people on the bus were taken to the McConnellsburg Medical Center where they were treated and released.

Cappello and a passenger in the truck, Joni Galipolli, 25, of Patterson, N.J., were admitted for treatment of their injuries.

According to the state police, Cappello, who apparently fell asleep at the wheel, suffered relatively minor injuries, while Miss Galipolli suffered burns, and a broken shoulder when she was thrown from the truck as it jackknifed.

The accident closed both east-bound lanes of the turnpike for about two hours, spokesmen said.

While no estimate of the damage was available from the Pennsylvania State Police, a spokesman for the Fountain of Life said the 10-day old bus, valued at $320,000, was a total loss.

New Policy On Absences

WILLIAMSTON — An updated policy clarifying what constitutes excused absences was approved by the Martin County Board of Education at its November meeting.

One of the provisions in the updated policy is that of requiring students who miss school to present signed notes from parents, and then permitting students the opportunity to make up any missed work.

Associate Superintendent Comer Griffin noted that the clarification was needed, as handling excused absences in the county's various schools has become "much less than uniform."

Citing a sanitation problem at West Martin School Cafeteria, caused by the necessity of keeping doors open in warm weather, Advisory Committee member Ken Carlton requested the board to look into the cost of installing air conditioning in the cafeteria. He said the committee will be willing to provide financial and other help in installing air conditioning in the cafeteria.

Board members agreed to have a cost study conducted for the project. It was noted that seven or eight school cafeterias in the county are not air conditioned.

The school board endorsed a request to permit a fund raising drive for United Way to be conducted among school employees.

Altair Airlines To 'Reorganize'

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Recession and the lingering effects of the 1981 air traffic controllers' strike prompted Altair Airlines Inc. to suspend service and file for reorganization, say company officials.

Altair President Henry Hill said Tuesday the airline hopes to protect itself under bankruptcy laws from creditors owed more than $2.6 million.

The shutdown of Altair, which serves 16 East Coast cities, puts 652 employees out of work. It is the second airline this year to suspend operations; Dallas-based Braniff International stopped flying in May.

Judge Denies Braswell Move

A Superior Court judge has denied a motion filed by the district attorney's office to move Pitt Sheriff's Deputy Billy Braswell from Pitt County Memorial Hospital to a medical facility within the prison system.

Tom Haigwood, chief assistant district attorney, said that Judge Bradford Tillery denied a motion for safekeeping order that sought to move Braswell to the hospital unit at Central Prison in Raleigh.

Braswell, who is charged with the first degree murder of his wife, Lillie, has been a patient at PCMH since Sept. 27 when he was admitted for treatment of gunshot wounds to his chest.

Haigwood said the motion to move Braswell was filed in an effort to try to save the county the expense of continuing to

Expect Change In Colcor Pleas

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — A federal attorney who in the FBI's Colcor investigation says he has statements or agreements from five defendants that they will change their pleas, a Wilmington newspaper reported today.

In today's edition of the Wilmington Star-News, Assistant U.S. Attorney J. Douglas McCullough is quoted as saying he has signed pleas or agreements with attorneys for the five.

Will Discuss Block Grant

WINTERVILLE — An information meeting on the community block grant Winterville received last week will be held Nov. 18 at 7 p.m. in the town hall, Mayor E.C. Hines announced this week at the Board of Aldermen's monthly meeting.

Persons seeking information on the grant should attend the meeting, noted Hines.

Bruce Gray, chairman of Recreation Commission, gave a progress report on the ball park lights. The park needs to be lighted between now and summer, said Gray.

The town has agreed to install the poles, furnish the transformers and switches and the Recreation Department will furnish the lights and poles.

The board nominated John D. Weathering to serve a one-year term on the Mid-East Commission.

George Cox of Missionary Baptist Church requested the use of town equipment, including a trash truck, for raking elderly persons yards.

The new Winterville Chief of Police, Keith Knox, (formerly a deputy sheriff with Pitt County) will begin work Nov. 23, it was announced.

provide officers on a full-time basis to guard the deputy at the hospital.

Braswell, who is being held without privilege of bond, has been guarded round the clock since a warrant was served charging him with the murder of his wife, Sheriff Ralph Tyson said that three deputies are utilized each day to handle the 24-hour guard duties.

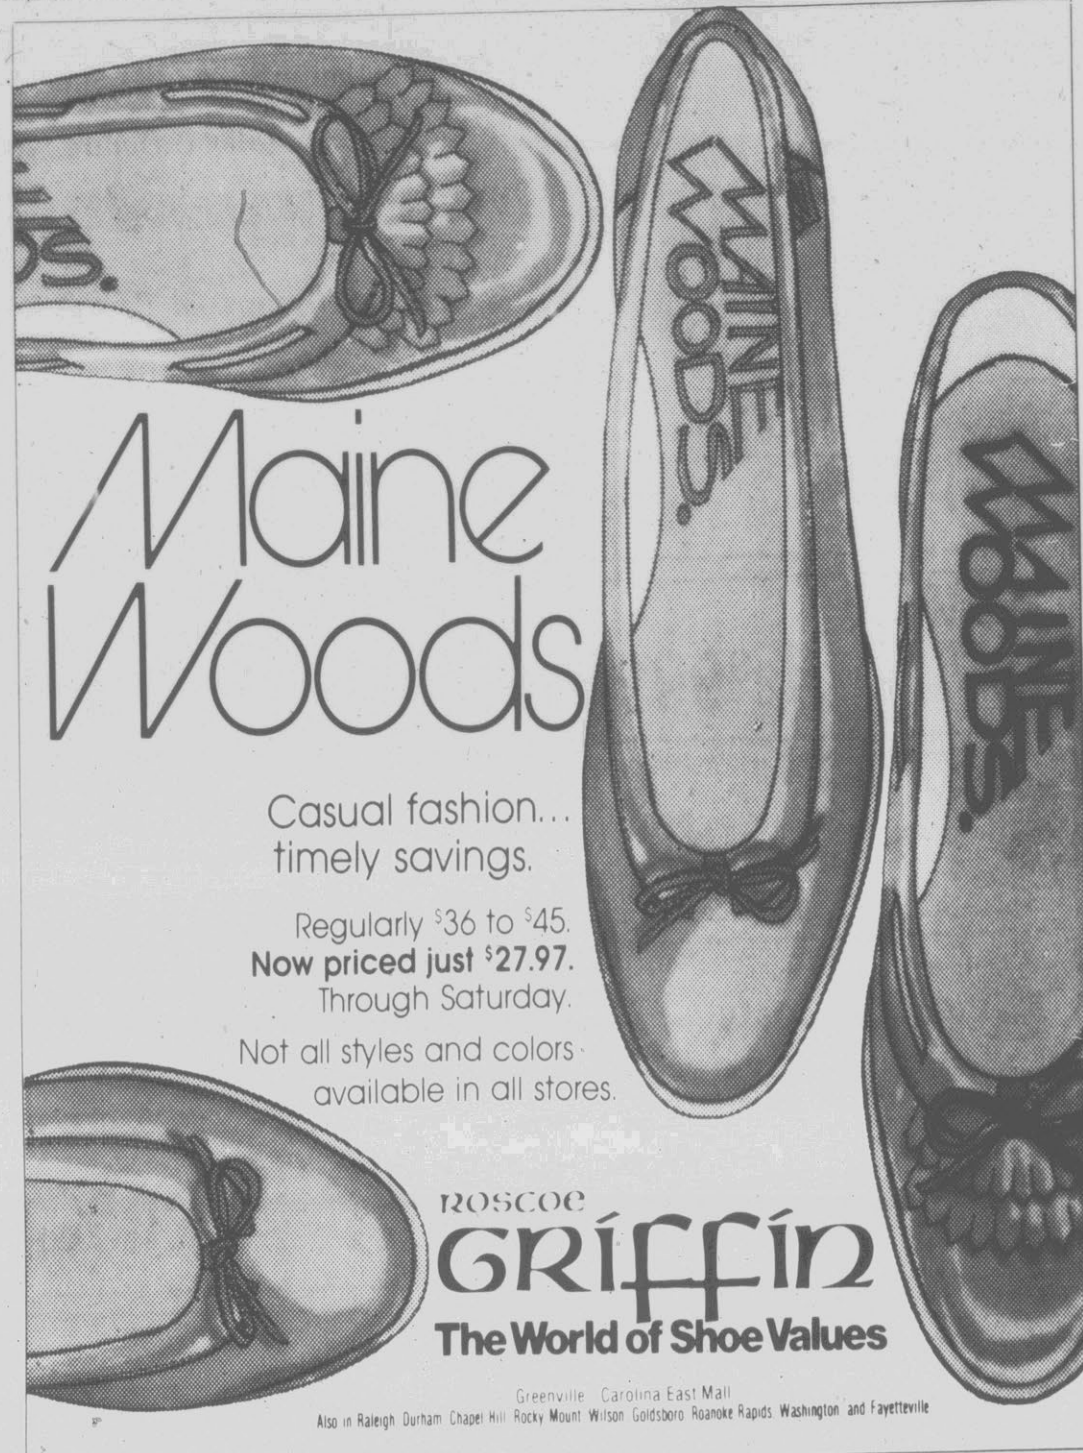

District Court Judge Lee Lumpkin denied in October a request that bond be set for Braswell. The motion was filed by Braswell's attorney, David T. Greer.

Haigwood said Braswell will remain at the hospital until doctors approve his release and subsequent transfer to the jail.

A hearing for Braswell has been scheduled for Nov. 19 but Haigwood said he would be surprised if it is held before the deputy is released from the hospital.

A spokesman at PCMH said this morning that Braswell is listed in satisfactory condition.

Relatives And Friends Conduct A Ritual Of Names

By MIKE FEINSIBBER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — In their silent search for black granite walls for familiar names, the kin and friends of those who died in Vietnam are conducting their own people's ceremony on this Veterans Day.

At Arlington National Cemetery, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger was speaking after the traditional wreath-laying.

And at the White House, President Reagan was honoring Raymond Weeks, who is credited with the idea of changing Armistice Day, which observed the end of hostilities in World War I, into a holiday honoring all American veterans.

But veterans of the Vietnam War and relatives of those killed or missing there are not waiting for Saturday's ceremony dedicating the new monument.

In a spontaneous ritual, they look for names.

The walls name 57,939 who did not come home.

The fence surrounding the monument was removed Wednesday, and people streamed in.

Now, daylong, hundreds stand before the two walls, talking softly, reflecting.

The half-inch names, etched in granite, are listed in the order in which the casualties occurred, so any one name is difficult to find.

Volunteers, wearing yellow ski caps, carry 763-page directories the thickness of phone books and help locate names.

"I've got two brothers and an uncle up there, on that wall, plus half my company," said Ron Huntley, who commanded a company of Marines in Vietnam.

His brothers, one older, one younger, were in the Army — grunts in the war's vernacular.

Jerome Jackson hitchhiked here from Oregon with a sign that said, "Nam Vet to D.C." and in the journey sensed a new mood of national reconciliation.

Jackson said he put his sign in the back windows of cars that stopped for him "and people waved and honked."

Vietnam veterans, he concluded, are no longer outcasts, victims of a war that soured their countrymen at home while they fought abroad.

President Reagan and his wife, Nancy, quietly took part Wednesday in the salute to those who died and to all 2.7 million Americans who served in Vietnam.

They slipped from the White House as darkness fell and spent a few minutes in a small vaulted chapel of the Washington Cathedral where volunteers are reading the 57,939 names — a vigil that will take 56 hours.

The president appeared moved. He and Mrs. Reagan lit a votive candle in another chapel.

Leaving, Reagan told reporters that Americans killed in Vietnam "died for freedom just as surely as any men who ever fought for this country, and the tragedy was they were asked to fight and die for a cause that our country was unwilling to win."

At the Vietnam memorial, Jackson, an infantry medic in the war, met up with his buddies from Oregon.

"There were 686 men from Oregon killed in the war, and we wanted to bring that many down here, but we couldn't raise the money," he said.

The controversy about the memorial's design continued. The walls are 250 feet long and descend 10 feet deep where they meet — a design so stark it arouses strong feelings.

Some veterans had protested against it, seeking something more heroic. They wanted a statue and a flag. They called the design funereal. A statue and a flag will be added, next year, off to one side.

Ex-Marine James Webb, author of the war novel, "Fields of Fire," could not conceal his dismay with the design.

"Art is a metaphor," he said, "and public art is a political metaphor. Ask yourself what this metaphorical statement is."

But Dennis D'Andrea of Hillsboro, Ore., who flew a helicopter in the war, liked what he saw.

"They got it right," he said. "They got it just right. They didn't glorify it."

No Fee Charge Decision On ECU Lecture

A decision has been made by the Student Union Minority Art Committee to waive the $5 admission fee for the lecture by former Soviet prisoner Victor Herman to take place at 8 o'clock tonight in Hendrix Theater in Mendenhall Student Union Building.

Ken Hammond, coordinator of entertainment events at ECU, said the Committee felt that because of public interest in Herman's lecture about his years of exile in Siberia, it would be a good gesture to make possible a larger attendance by waiving the admission fee for this event.

Hammond said it is likely that Herman will be making comments on Leonid Brezhnev, the Soviet leader who died yesterday.

REMEMBRANCE — President and Mrs. Reagan light a candle in a small chapel of the National Cathedral in Washington Wednesday night at a candlelight vigil honoring those who died in Vietnam. The vigil began with the reading of the names of those who died in the war, a process that was expected to take 56 hours. (AP Laserphoto)

Damage Heavy In Collisions

An estimated $10,100 damage resulted from two traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Wednesday.

Officers said heaviest damage resulted from a 5:30 p.m. mishap at the intersection of Greenville Boulevard and Granville Drive, involving a motorcycle driven by George Lee Shaver Jr. of Plymouth, and a car operated by Marilee Martin Little of 110 Lord Ashley Drive.

Damage from the mishap was estimated at $5,600 to the motorcycle and $4,000 to the car.

Cars driven by Alfred Mark Dawes of Ayden, and Bobby Maurice Harris Jr. of 430 Pittman Drive, collided about 4:33 p.m. on Millbrook Street, 20 feet east of the Pine Street intersection, causing an estimated $400 damage to the Dawes car and $100 damage to the Harris vehicle.

N.C. Bottle Bill Chances Dim

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) —
Chances are dimming for a "bottle bill" setting mandatory deposits on drink

containers, a leading sponsor of the idea in North Carolina says.
Rep. David Diamont, D-Surry, said he was not sure he would sponsor a mandatory-deposit bill again next year after a legislative study committee agreed Wednesday not to recommend a bill to the 1983 General Assembly.

"With the economy the way it is now and the fact there has not been any mass movement in the public for a bottle bill, it means the bottle bill's chances aren't as good as they've been in the past,"
Diamont said.

The study committee, headed by Diamont, voted unanimously to draft a report to the 1983 General Assembly saying it was unable to make any recommendation on a bottle bill or alternatives. It said the General Assembly should seek more information on the impact a bottle bill would have in the state.

The decision was a setback for Diamont, who has been the leading proponent of the proposal in the General Assembly.

While varying in detail, the bottle bills would establish a deposit — usually 5 cents — on each bottle, can and other beverage container. Supporters contend the deposit would prompt people to return the containers to recover their deposit and thus provide a financial incentive to reduce litter.

Mandatory-deposit bills have been defeated in legislative sessions for the past decade, including Diamont's bill in 1981 that would have called a statewide referendum on the issue.

The bills have been strongly opposed by a wide range of groups including beer and soft drink manufacturers, bottlers, container manufacturers, retailers and labor unions.

Sam Whitehurst, president of the North Carolina Soft Drink Association and a leading lobbyist against the proposal, said he did not read the decision as a defeat for the bottle bill, but instead indicated a stalemate on the issue.

Diamont said he didn't push the panel to vote for a bottle bill because it probably would have been deadlocked. He said he was disappointed that environmental and farm groups were not more active in their support for the bill.

"Being a veteran down here, I realize that unless the governor of North Carolina or a group of highly influential people decide a bottle bill is best for North Carolina, it's not going to pass,"
Diamont said.

Several states now have some form of bottle bill. But opponents said four state —
California, Colorado,
Washington and Arizona — defeated bottle bill proposals in referendums last week.

Three Received Scouters Award

Three people received
Scouting's "Award of Merit"
Tuesday night during the Pitt District's annual leader's recognition dinner at the Moose Lodge.

The award, the highest honor given to an adult Scout leaders by the district, was presented to Lucy Adams,
George Attmore and Jimmie
Hardee. Joe Goodson, a 1980
"Award of Merit" recipient, announced this year's honorees.

The district level "Distinguished Service Award" was presented to Ken Littleken, Cubmaster; Bill Fuqua,
Scoutmaster; Bill Plued-demann, commissioner; and
Wayne Bryant, district
Scouter.

During the banquet, district officers for 1983 were installed by Walter Hood.
They are: Tom Harwell,
chairman; Heber Adams, commissioner, and Bob

Mosley, Scout executive.

Eight area Scouts who received their Eagle awards during 1982 were recognized.
They were: Shannon Stan-forth, John V. Hankins and James S. Worley, all of Troop 340, Greenville; James
Hamilton, Troop 826,
Greenville; William C. Dunn and Thad C. Gaylord, both of Troop 550, Winterville;
Walter Tripp, Troop 452,
Greenville, and Andy Ma-jette, Troop 200, Grimesland.

It was pointed out that 1982 is being celebrated worldwide as the 75th anniversary of Scouting.

Busy Weekend For Social Security Commission

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer
ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) — The chairman of the blue-ribbon commission grappling with Social Security's problems says it is unlikely to complete its work this week, and a Republican senator says no one should "look for miracles."

The 15 members of the National Commission on Social Security Reform will try to hammer out a consensus at the three-day meeting starting today in this historic city across the Potomac River from the capital.

But the political acrimony over Social Security that pervaded the congressional elections may make it even harder for the panel to achieve the goal President Reagan laid down for it 11 months ago: a bipartisan rescue plan that Democrats and Republicans alike can support.

Alan Greenspan, the economist who chairs the panel, said in an interview Wednesday, "I can't conceive of us actually, literally completing our work this weekend in these three days."

"Most of the major decisions will be fully discussed and I think people's positions will become fairly clear," Greenspan said, but he added, "I think that at a minimum there will be a (later) meeting at which we will actually make a final approval."

By law, the commission must report back to Reagan and Congress by Dec. 31.

Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., the chairman of the Senate Finance Committee and one of seven influential lawmakers on the panel, said Wednesday, "Commissions come and go — don't look for miracles to come from the commission."

Dole, who last week suggested the commission postpone its recommendations until Democratic leaders spell out what reforms they would accept, said, "If we could get an agreement that there is a problem and it amounts to X number of dollars, that would be very helpful. I'm not as optimistic about making specific recommendations."

Dole said one option will be to speed up already-scheduled increases in Social Security taxes and limit cost-of-living hikes.

Dole said one thing the members can agree on is that Congress will have to authorize interfund borrowing to allow the retirement trust fund to stay afloat for the next two years.

The old age fund had to borrow $581 million from the disability reserve last week to cover the Nov. 3rd checks, and it is expected to borrow up to $11 billion more before its temporary borrowing authority expires on Dec. 31. Those loans will enable it to keep paying benefits on time until July.

A background paper prepared by the commission's staff says Social Security needs to save $75 billion to $201 billion between now and 1990 in order to maintain a minimal 15 percent reserve in its trust funds. Robert J. Myers, the executive director, said that to be safe, the experts are looking for savings of $150 billion to $200 billion.

The staff background paper listed 97 options to shore up Social Security, ranging from universal coverage to modified cost-of-living hikes to higher taxes to gradually raising the retirement age starting in 1990 or later.

Congress raised Social Security taxes in 1977 to bail the system out of an earlier crisis, but it quickly slipped back into trouble because the benefits linked to the Consumer Price Index rose faster than revenues, which are tied to workers' wages.

To safeguard against a repetition of that problem, Greenspan has broached the idea of giving beneficiaries cost-of-living hikes equal to the rise in workers' average wages minus 1.5 percentage points. That would save $75 billion by 1990.

Requiring Social Security coverage in 1984 for the more than 6 million civil servants and non-profit workers outside the system could bring in $110 billion.

Robert M. Ball, a liberal former Social Security commissioner, wants his fellow panel members to recommend raising the payroll tax from 6.7 percent to 7.65 — the rate it is scheduled to hit in 1990 — while giving workers an income tax credit for their payroll tax contributions.

1982 Award To Alumnus

Paul Andrews, sanitarian specialist with the Pitt County Health Department, was the recipient of an East Carolina University alumni award at the recent annual alumni luncheon on campus.

Andrews was recognized as the ECU Department of Environmental Health's "Outstanding Alumnus" for 1982.

He holds bachelor and master's degrees from ECU and teaches part-time in the ECU environmental health program.

The award presentation cited Andrews' ability to plan and organize programs, which has included duties relating to individual water supply protection, on-site waste water disposal, sanitation of mobile home parks and swimming pools, and milk sanitation.

In addition, Andrews has been involved in research dealing with carbon monoxide levels in Pitt County homes since 1975.

Andrews is a 1966 graduate of Fike High School in Wilson. His wife, Alta, is an assistant professor in the ECU School of Nursing. They are the parents of one child.

Appointed AP Gov't Reporter

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Mary Anne Rhyne has been appointed state government reporter in North Carolina for The Associated Press.

She succeeds William Welch, who has been promoted to the news cooperative's Washington staff. Welch, 29, was named state government reporter in 1978.

Ms. Rhyne, 25, a native of Hickory, joined the AP in 1979. She has held a variety of assignments in the Raleigh bureau, including coverage of the last two elections and the 1981 and 1982 sessions of the Legislature.

'Found' E.T. Had Unlisted Number

LAREDO, Texas (AP) — "E.T.," the lovable, home-sick alien in the film of the same name, isn't phoning home these days. Children are calling him instead to find out how he's doing.

A Laredo businessman says school children have mistaken a computer-generated voice answering a telephone number for the "extra-terrestrial."

The children somehow discovered the unlisted phone number of Autophone, a telephone paging system, and began calling it to listen to the voice.

Autophone manager Paul Russum Jr. said customers call the unlisted number to leave special messages and the computer answers in sequence, "Enter password... Time out... Bye-bye."

Russum said he was puzzled when the line was jammed with calls after 3 p.m. for the past two weeks. It turns out that students who had passed around the telephone number were calling it after school to listen to the computer talk. Russum said he began monitoring the calls Tuesday.

He said the children would listen to the computer's raspy voice, then say, "Is that you, E.T.? Did you phone home?"

Russum said he will put a stop to the calls by changing the number.

But first, he said, "We'll probably let everybody play around with it just a little bit more, and listen to E.T. and let everybody have a chance to hear him. We're excited about it, too."

Cite Advances By Women In Military

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
It will be difficult if not impossible for female soldiers to be get equal footing with their male counterparts as long as they are excluded from combat, says the chairman of a national defense advisory group.
But Maria Torralva of the Defense Advisory Committee on Women in the Services says she thinks new fighting techniques will involve women in combat regardless of military rules.

"In the next war, the battleground will not be clear. Ultimately, whether you have combat exclusion or not does not matter," she said. "The bottom line is it's going to take everybody, all human resources we have."
Mrs. Torralva and the 34-member committee, which advises the defense secretary on issues affecting women, held a four-day meeting this week in Fayetteville and toured nearby Fort Bragg to talk with female soldiers.
The panel got a preview of the unpublished report by the Women in the Army Policy Review Group, which moves women further from combat duty.
The report's recommendations led the Army to bar women from 23 Military Occupation Specialties that would be involved in direct combat with an enemy during war. Women already are excluded from 64 occupational specialties in the military.
The report also recommended that all recruits undergo physical tests to determine which jobs they are capable of performing. Each occupation specialty would be classified by the amount of upper body strength required to perform the task.

The physical testing will not begin until the tests are validated through a study of 2,000 male and female recruits scheduled to be completed next July.
"The message coming from the Army to us on the committee is that no woman can be denied a job she's capable of performing, taking into view the combat exclusion," Mrs. Torralva said.
"There was a lot of apprehension and suspicion as to how the Army study might affect not only Army women but all military women. Morale has been a little bit low. I think this will calm those fears."
The advisory committee has championed women's rights to try non-traditional military jobs. In spring 1979, it recommended women be trained as pilots. Several months later, a training program for female pilots began.
The group also pushed admittance of women into military service academies like West Point. That integration began in 1976.
There are 2,650 women at Fort Bragg. That includes 15 women in the 1st Special Operations Command, which houses the elite Green Berets. There are no full-fledged female Green Berets because none has received combat training.
Two years ago Army Capt. Kathleen Wilder became the first woman to complete the Green Beret training program but she was denied her beret after an instructor failed her on field training.

The committee dealt with a number of other issues — pregnancy, uniforms, sexual harassment and single parenthood.
Mrs. Torralva said great progress has been made in educating women how to report harassment, establishing grievance procedures and raising the consciousness of soldiers about harassment. Eliminating sexual harassment has been a priority of the committee.

Awards Event Set For Festival

The awards banquet for the fifth annual Southern Flue-Cured Tobacco Festival will honor the commissioners of agriculture from the five tobacco-producing states of North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia, Georgia and Florida.
The event will be a highlight of the six-day festival and is scheduled for Monday at 7 p.m. at the Greenville Country Club.
The keynote speaker will be Congressman William C. Wampler, who represents the ninth district in the state of Virginia.
Wampler has earned the nickname "The Bald Eagle of the Cumberlands" and has received the "Watchdog of the Treasury" award from the National Association of Small Businessmen several times.
The Tobacco Farmer of the Year will be honored at the banquet along with other festival award-winners.

Seek Higher Drinking Age

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The Carolina Motor Club's board of directors says it will urge legislators in North Carolina and South Carolina to increase the drinking age from 18 to 19.
"We feel the adoption of this type legislation will help provide additional time between when many young people are learning to drive, and when many are also beginning to drink alcoholic beverages," said Kenneth M. Sprunt of Wilmington, chairman of the club's resolutions committee.
A resolution urging the two states to raise their drinking age was approved during the club's board meeting Monday.
Sprunt said an insurance industry survey shows that drivers aged 16 to 19 account for 22 percent of the highway deaths in the country.
"This is simply more than what this organization can condone," he said.
The 220,000-member club also approved resolutions that condemned implementation of the auto-emissions inspections in Mecklenburg County, pledged to continue efforts to keep twin-trailer trucks from operating on highways in the Carolinas and asked congressional delegations from the Carolinas to approve a one-year extension of the Highway Trust Fund during the next session of Congress.

Contaminated Fish Are Found

LEXINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Mercury-contaminated fish are still being found in a major High Rock Lake tributary, 20 months after workers called for state intervention against the Duracell Battery plant, officials said.
Latest tests show that fish in Abbotts Creek have mercury levels more than twice the recommended limit for human consumption, said Bryant Haskins, state Department of Human Resources spokesman.
The highest level, found in a large mouth bass, was a concentration of 2.4 parts per million. However, Haskins said the results are not surprising.
"These results really don't show anything new or different," Haskins said. "We think we've stopped all the active contamination, but its still going to be years before we see the levels falling (from natural attrition)."

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market declined moderately today in a continuation of the selling that set in Wednesday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off 15.73 Wednesday, slipped another 3.41 to 1,041.11 by noon today.

Declines outnumbered advances by about 8 to 5 among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Trading was relatively quiet with many financial institutions closed in observance of Veterans Day.

Analysts said news of the death of Leonid Brezhnev, the Soviet leader, had no major impact on the market, but did pose some new uncertainties for investors.

Generally, they viewed today's declines as an extension of the selling that began Wednesday after the market launched an unsuccessful bid to surpass the record highs it reached last week.

With doubts persisting about the Federal Reserve's next credit-policy moves, brokers said many traders were selling stocks to cash in on the market's dramatic gains since late summer.

Among some recently strong issues, Sears Roebuck dropped 1/4 to 30 3/4; General Electric 3/8 to 89 3/4, and Merrill Lynch 1/8 to 66.

The NYSE's composite index lost .39 to 81.04. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off 1.60 at 338.27.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 33.40 million shares at noon, against 53.14 million at the same point Wednesday.

Top Defenses Set To Collide

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

It might end up at nothing to nothing — but for the sudden death rules put into the high school playoffs a few years back.

That's the way the Rose High School-Goldsboro football game in the first round of the State Division II 4-A playoffs could end up — with an overtime deciding it all.

If not, it could be which team takes advantage of the other's mistakes.

Kickoff is set for 8 p.m. in Ficklen Stadium on Friday night. Rose High officials note that season tickets are not valid for playoff games. All tickets are $3.

Both Rose and Goldsboro come into the game with the reputation of being a much more dominate team on defense. Rose's defense shut out its last three foes, although Northeastern did manage seven points by blocking a punt.

Goldsboro, meanwhile, has four shutouts to its credit this year — including the last three games in a row.

No one — not even unbeaten Jacksonville — scored more than nine points against the Cougars this year. Rocky Mount, New Hanover and Southern Wayne each scored nine, while Fike got seven, Kinston got six, and Jacksonville got only three.

That same Jacksonville club rolled up 23 points in beating Rose in the first game of the season for the Rampants.

Goldsboro's string of not allowing double figures goes back five games into the 1981 season — a total of 15 in a row.

The Cougars finished the regular season with a 7-3 record. They beat Fike, 14-7, Kinston, 13-6; New Hanover, 12-9, Hoggard, 7-3, New Bern, 12-0, Eastern Wayne 10-0, and Wilmington Laney, 27-0. They lost to Jacksonville, 3-0, Rocky Mount, 9-7, and Southern Wayne, 9-6.

Rose played six common opponents with the Cougars. They lost to Jacksonville, 23-22, New Bern, 21-14, Rocky Mount, 13-7, and Kinston, 21-9, while beating Fike, 34-0, and Hoggard, 25-3.

Both come into the Division II playoffs after big wins. Rose blew out Northeastern, 36-7, in the final game of the season, while Goldsboro topped Laney. Both of the losing teams were the cellar-dwellers in their respective leagues.

"I was really pleased with the way we played the Northeastern game," Coach Ronald Vincent, whose team is in the playoff for the second straight year. "I thought our defense played very well again for us."

"The offense did some really good things too. The offensive line has gotten better and better with each passing game recently."

Vincent said he thought the defense was playing as well as any Rose High School defense. "It's very solid."

"Our kicking game wasn't quite as well-polished as I would have liked. We had one punt and one extra point blocked and that concerns me. We really have to work on that this week."

Although the Division II playoffs may not be quite like the real thing (the Division I playoffs), Vincent said that it does give the team a "second chance."

"We've got a second chance to show people that we're better than our record. It's an indication too that we're playing better now. I just hope it carries over into the playoffs."

Goldsboro, Vincent feels, is a typical Goldsboro team. "They are very strong defensively. They've had three straight shutouts and the are well-coached."

Offensively, Goldsboro lost its regular quarterback early in the season, but Vincent said that the replacement has done an adequate job. "They'll still throw the ball, and they run the ball well too, with a lot of traps, sweeps and quite a few reverses."

However, Goldsboro hasn't been all that successful with its offense. The Cougars have picked up only 1,293 yards for the season in total offense. Of that, 467 comes on the ground and 826 through the air. They've rushed 324 times, giving them under two yards a carry, and hit on 57 of 146 passes for their yardage. The Cougars have been intercepted 11 times.

The leading rusher is junior Rodney Woodard, who has 336 yards on 115 carries. Next is Dan Williamson with 142 yards on 82 lugs. Williamson is a senior.

Quarterbacking is Darryl

McCarter, a junior, who's hit on 41 of 109 for 519 yards — with seven interceptions. Top receiver is flanker Harry Jackson with 21 for 412 yards.

In contrast, Rose has picked up 2,367 yards in total offense. The Rampants have rushed for 1,552 and passed for 815.

The leading rusher is tailback Donnell Lee with 692 yards on 155 carries for ten touchdowns. Next comes fullback Rodrick Harrell with 310 yards on 89 trips. Reggie Smith, who subs for Harrell, has 40 carries for 219 yards.

Quarterback Kenny Kirkland has hit on 69 of 145 passes for 695 yards and four touchdowns. He's has seven picked off, while the team as a whole has had 14 intercepted.

Top receiver is flanker Edward Frazier with 26 catches for 364 yards. Split end Tyrone Smith has caught 14 for 196 yards.

The defense, however, is a different story for each team, and therein may lie the difference in the game.

Goldsboro has held its opponents to only 46 points — Rose has given up 108. Goldsboro has allowed their opponents only 89.5 yards a game rushing and 39.5 yards a contest passing.

Baby Bucs Host Pack

East Carolina University's junior varsity football team will play host to N.C. State Friday at 2 p.m. in Ficklen Stadium.

The game is the final junior varsity contest for the year. The Baby Bucs come into the game with a 1-1 record, having beaten the Wolfpack Cubs earlier in the year in Raleigh, 14-12.

For the game, eight minute quarters will be used, with a very short halftime, with an expected game time of one hour.

Rose's defense is not far behind. Rose has allowed 85.0 yards a game rushing an 67.7 yards a game through the air.

That's a total of 129.0 yards a game against the Cougars, as compared to 152.7 for the Rampants.

Top defensive players for the Cougars include Darryl Best, a 5-9, 165-pound senior linebacker, and John Breeden, a 6-0, 161-pound senior who also plays linebacker.

They are helped out by Stevie Taylor, a 5-11, 167-pound senior tackle and Darryl Atkinson, a 5-8, 166-pound senior at defensive end.

Leading the Rose defense is defensive end Frankie Carr, 6-1, 187, senior; defensive end Tommy Sparkman, 6-0, 180, senior; and linebacker Craig Dupree, 5-10, 169, senior.

The winner of the contest travels to face the winner of the Charlotte Independence-Asheville game, being played Friday night in Asheville. That game will be played next Friday and the winner will be the Division II champion in 1-A.

Havelock, Not Deep In Talent, Unbeaten Because Of 'Want-To'

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

Havelock head coach Wilbur Sasser leaves no doubt that he knows why his Rams are undefeated as they prepare for round one of the Division I 3-A state high school playoffs.

"They've just got a lot of 'want-to.' We're not unbelievably deep in talent, but there's no question that this is the hardest working team I've ever had," Sasser said.

The will to work has paid dividends. The Rams are undefeated in 10 games and come Friday night return to the high school playoffs after a one-year absence against Ayden-Grifton.

Game time is 8 p.m. at Rams Stadium.

Havelock, the Coastal Conference champion, is led by a defense that has held opponents to just 65 points in 10 games. The Rams, who run a stacked 4-4, are big — their front line averages 206 pounds — and fast.

"We feel our defense has been our strongest point game in and game out this season," Sasser said. "I feel like we're pretty quick and aggressive."

The biggest and best is senior defensive end Eric Kling, a 6-4, 205-pounder who leads the Rams with 140 tackles. Said Sasser: "He's the best I've ever coached and one of the best I've ever seen."

Joining Kling up front is defensive tackle Ronald Lundy, a 6-5, 215-pounder who has 89 tackles. Filling out the Rams' front four are David O'Conner (6-4, 230) at tackle and John Hyland (5-10, 175) at end.

Backing up the Rams' front four are Tim Fennell (5-8, 165) and Dwain Becton (5-11, 195) at outside linebacker and Kevin Sublette (6-0, 213) and Leon Staton (6-3, 180) at inside linebacker.

It is that core group of eight that Sasser counts on to accomplish the Rams' prime defensive objective: stop the run.

"Our defense is set up to stop the run," Sasser said. "Our whole idea is we're trying to force the other team to pass the ball. We're hoping they will try to pass."

Defending against the pass is Tom Mullens (5-8, 150) and Joey Colly (5-10, 150) at cornerbacks and Dwight Downie (5-7, 165) at safety.

Some say the Rams' pass defense is weak in comparison to the rest of their defense. Sasser disagreed.

"We've got good speed and quickness in the (defensive) backfield," Sasser said. "What we tell our guys is don't get beat long. We've had some shorter passes completed against us, but we tell the guys it takes a eight or ten of those to beat you. It only takes one long one."

"That may be another key to our season: We have not been burned by the long pass at all."

Few teams have had time because of pressure from the Ram front four and their blitzing linebackers. The Rams surrendered 177 yards passing to West Carteret and Sasser said A-G quarterback Joey Kennedy compares favorably with West Carteret QB Lonnie Mister.

"I've been very impressed with Kennedy and Ayden-Grifton's passing game," Sasser said.

Sasser also said he felt the Chargers' running game offers a challenge. "I think they have very good balance," he said. "They probably have the best three backs of any one team we've played all year."

Again, however, the Rams are not without their own outstanding backs, with fullback Tim Young being the best. Young, a 6-1, 190-pounder, leads the Rams with 650 yards and 17 touchdowns.

The Rams run out of a wishbone with two tight ends "90 percent of the time," Sasser said, and are averaging 22.8 points a game.

Senior D.J. Flemming (5-7, 150) quarterbacks the Rams, who are averaging under five passes a game. Mullens and Terrence Evans (5-9, 170) are at halfback along side Young.

The Rams front seven average over 190 pounds a man. Marty Rivenbark (6-0, 170) is at center with Kurt Zander (6-0, 205) and Becton at guards and Sublette and James Jones (6-4, 210) at tackle.

Staton and Gene Haas (5-10, 150) are the tight ends.

"I think size-wise were about average for a 3-A team," Sasser said. "We've got in some height, which looks good in uniform, but we're not that fast in the backfield."

"Offensively, we don't have any fantastic people who stand out," he added. "We depend on all our backs and we run about an equal number of options and misdirections."

"If I had to pick a weakness it'd have to be our passing," he said. "But, that can also work for us. People don't think we can pass and they don't expect us to, but we will pass during the playoffs."

Sasser said the Ayden-Grifton defense, the ECC's best, is one of his main worries.

"They have tremendous personnel on defense," he said. "They come at you, and they always have five or six people in on the tackle. They pursue extremely well."

Considering MacGregor

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The PGA Tour is considering Cary's MacGregor Downs Country Club as the site for an event in next year's Tournament Players Series, a tour official said.

There are 10 tournaments in the newly formed series, which was designed to broaden the competitive scope of the PGA Tour. The series will have purses ranging from $150,000 to $200,000.

Steve Rankin, public relations director for the tour, said there have been negotiations with MacGregor but no final decision has been made.

NOTES...Havelock has only three players listed as going both ways...A-G has anywhere from eight to 10...

Rams Stadium holds 3,000 fans and is expected to be full Friday night...

Havelock and Ayden-Grifton have three common foes: D.H. Conley, North Lenoir and Farmville Central. The Rams defeated DHC (35-16), North Lenoir (14-0) and Farmville Central (17-0). The Chargers beat DHC (7-6), North Lenoir (20-0) and Farmville (24-6).

Havelock was 5-5 last season...Ayden-Grifton was 10-3 and advanced to the 3-A Eastern finals...Along the way, A-G beat Coastal Conference champ White Oak, 8-0.

Lady Pirates Take 2 Matches

CHARLOTTE — East Carolina University's women's volleyball team would up the regular season with a pair of victories yesterday, downing USC-Lancaster and UNC Charlotte.

In the opener, the Lady Pirates had little trouble with the South Carolina team, downing them 15-7, 15-4. They came back to whip Charlotte in three games, 15-6, 13-15, and 15-4.

Games To Be Aired

Radio stations in Farmville and Greenville will be carrying both of the area playoff games involving Pitt County teams on Friday night.

WNCT-AM in Greenville and WRQR-FM in Farmville will both be broadcasting the Rose High School-Goldsboro High School game in the Division II 4-A playoffs, as they have done all season long.

It was announced this morning that WGHB-AM in Farmville will also carry the Ayden-Grifton-Havelock contest, with Joby Griffin and Gene Gray handling the contest. They normally broadcast Farmville Central games.

"In the (Lancaster) match, we played well and we didn't have a lot of trouble with them," Coach Lynn Davidson said.

"We came out really hot in the first game against Charlotte. We just blew them off the court. All of the kids played well," Davidson continued. She singled out the play of Stacey Weitzel in the game, saying "Stacey hit a few balls that could have gone to the floor."

"In the second game, they came back on us because we had a little trouble passing. But we just blew them off the court in the third game."

In that, she praised the play of Lexanne Keeter.

The Lady Pirates complete the regular season with a 26-16 record, and look now toward their chances at an at-large berth in the NCAA Division I tournament.

Bengals, Browns Okay New Proposals

NEW YORK (AP) — Cincinnati Bengals and Denver Broncos players are the latest to give ground in the National Football League strike.

Players from both teams voted Wednesday to accept in principle management's latest money offer, joining the New Orleans Saints, Los Angeles Rams and Houston Oilers, who had previously voted to accept the essence of the club owners' plan.

Cincinnati's vote, on the strike's 51st day, was 31-5 with two abstentions. The Broncos voted unanimously to accept management's offer if the owners would make certain concessions.

Twenty-nine Bronco players reviewed the $1.31 billion, five-year offer by the NFL Management Council, and voted to accept the proposal conditionally. The players listed 13 provisions they considered unacceptable, but worthy of discussion.

"We've tried to say, in a positive way, that we want to play football," said quarterback Craig Morton. "Everybody isn't going to get his own way, but that's the way negotiations have gone so far. We need to compromise. We think the owners want to know how the players feel — not just the union leaders."

"We feel if we don't get something accomplished by this weekend, if (the season) will be all over."

Center Bill Bryan said the vote was taken "in a spirit of compromise. That's what we're trying to project."

Among the contested 13 issues was the players' demand for 100 per cent of their salaries even if the season is abbreviated, and matters involving a roster freeze and free agency.

Those issues, however, are some of the same items which union and management negotiators have failed to agree upon at the bargaining table, prompting Bronco player representative Aaron Kyle to suggest that the team's vote actually "reinforces the union position" — an opinion not shared by most of the other players at the meeting.

"Management's offer was not a take-it-or-leave-it proposal, and maybe it was put out as a feeler," said Kyle. "We agreed to accept their proposal with certain changes, but reject it as written, and that's our statement on the matter."

The Dallas Cowboys are the only other team thus far to make their vote public, and while they have rejected the proposal they said they would accept it if certain changes were made.

The votes were taken in response to an overture from the owners, who sent out copies of their latest proposal to players from each NFL team in hopes of getting an informal feel of the players' climate. The players' union has ostracized the owners for bypassing the organization and going directly to the players.

The Minnesota Vikings, meanwhile, asked the union to alter its demand for a wage scale.

"I don't think it's a crack," emphasized Viking punter Greg Coleman. "I think it's a sign that guys just want to get things going."

After 36 of the 55 Vikings players met Wednesday night, Minnesota player representative David Huffman said, "We feel we would like to see some significant movement on the union's part in regard to our wage scale and some other things. Not away from the wage scale — but some significant movement to get negotiations going again."

The meeting was closed to the media. Asked if a vote was taken, Huffman said, "Not really ... (but) we did make some decisions as a team." Huffman added that he would be in New York today "to talk to the executive committee of the union. I'll give them some of our ideas."

The Los Angeles Raiders also failed to vote on the management offer, but guard Mickey Marvin said his club may be ready to approve the club owners' proposal. "Only four or five would have voted to reject the proposal if a vote was taken," Marvin said of the meeting of 30 Raiders.

Despite the latest developments, Ed Garvey, executive director of the players' union, continued to insist Wednesday that the leaders' stand had the support of all 28 teams.

He also said that Chuck Sullivan, chairman of the Management Council's executive committee, had indicated to him the owners' negotiators may be preparing a new offer. But Sullivan denied it.

Garvey further said it was "significant" that the three television networks were reportedly seeking refunds of money paid to the league for games wiped out by the strike.

Garvey described published reports that the three television networks were seeking refunds was "probably the most significant thing to happen in the last six weeks."

"Since day one, when we found out the networks have been advancing their money for games not played we raised that issue with the Justice Department and said it was an illegal interference in a labor dispute," Garvey said. "That interference has now come to a halt." League and network officials are to sit down this week to discuss the refunds.

CBS, NBC and ABC have written to the league seeking the immediate refund for money advanced for games unplayed. The $74 million represents more than half the money the league has already received in 1982. The networks were to have paid the NFL $331 million in 1982, the first year of a five-year, $2.1-billion television package.

Meanwhile, Garvey denied that union president Gene Upshaw and another member of the union's executive committee had threatened a player representative.

Upshaw and Elvin Bethea, the Houston player rep, were named in charges filed Tuesday by the Management Council in a complaint lodged with the National Labor Relations Board. It contends that Russell Erxleben, New Orleans' player rep, had been "threatened, restrained and coerced" by Upshaw and Bethea on or about Oct. 5, 13, 28 and Nov. 8.

RALEIGH (AP) — The top positions in Class 4A and Class 3A remained the same in high school football this week, but there was a slight shakeup in at the top in 2A-1A teams.

East Forsyth kept its top 4A standing and Statesville managed the same in the 3A statistics, but Randleman moved into a tie for first with Whiteville in the 2A-1A standings.

In other 4A standings, Pine Forest dropped from No. 2 to No. 7 as all other teams shifted places. Gastonia Ashbrook moved from fourth into second place, while Jacksonville jumped from fifth to third.

Henderson Vance moved down a spot to No. 4. Greensboro Page, formerly fifth, and Fayetteville Douglas Byrd, formerly sixth, each moved up a notch. Charlotte Independence and Asheville are in eighth and ninth, the reverse of last week. Greensboro Smith moved into 10th to tie with Raleigh Millbrook.

The first four places remained unchanged in Class 3A. Statesville, Burlington Williams, Boiling Springs Crest and Brevard lead.

In other standings, Kannapolis Brown held on to its No. 8 rank and Lexington remained at No. 10. Mt. Airy dropped from fifth to ninth, following Friday's 26-8 loss to Stokes.

Here is how a statewide panel of sportswriters voted this week in the Associated Press poll of N.C. high school football teams. First-place votes are in parentheses, followed by points which are awarded on a basis of 10 for first place, 9 for second, then 8, 7, etc.

Reflector Standings

Following are the Daily Reflector rankings. They are based on points accumulated by wins. Wins over 4-A teams count 4 points, 3-A count 3, etc., with bonus points awarded for each victory the losing team accumulates. For example, a 3-A team with a 7-3 record for the season is worth 10 points for each team which beats it. Later season rankings are more accurate as points accumulate.

Big Losses Expected If Super Bowl Dumped

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Losses estimated to be in the $50-million range will be suffered by Los Angeles area businesses if the Super Bowl, scheduled for Pasadena Jan. 30, is canceled or postponed because of the National Football League players strike.

Rolf Arnheim, executive vice president of the Pasadena Chamber of Commerce, estimates the losses at $40 to $60 million, the lower figure if the game were to have one California team and the higher if two out-of-state clubs were involved.

He said the National Football League informed the Los Angeles Convention and Visitors Bureau on Wednesday that hotels in which the league reserved an estimated 50,000 rooms for Super Bowl week could turn to contingency plans with the NFL Players Association walkout now in its eighth week.

"Commissioner Pete Rozelle sent the letter to inform the hotels they could make contingency plans for the weekend," NFL Public Relations Director Jim Heffernan announced in New York. "We still hope the game will be played. If the date is moved, we will have to find alternative housing."

Eve Helms, director of sales for the Pasadena Hilton hotel, said it did not have any NFL reservations but that corporations have booked rooms.

"The message to the convention bureau was a signal to us also," she said. "I really expected we would have some official word on whether the game was to be canceled or the date changed. But we have received no word yet."

"So we are holding the rooms now but are prepared to release them and refund money."

"The NFL does not want the hotel industry to be left holding the bag should the Super Bowl be moved or the date changed," Arnheim said. Hotels and motels, restaurants and bars, tourist attractions, car rentals and taxi companies all have been counting on the influx of visitors for the Super Bowl, a crowd which in the past has gained a free-spending reputation.

The stadium holds approximately 105,000.

Pasadena City Manager Donald F. McIntyre estimates the city government would be out about $200,000 from the loss of the stadium rental and a tax of 50 cents per seat.

Ford: Game Not Life Or Death

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

Clemson and Maryland will face off this weekend in what everybody's calling the Atlantic Coast Conference football championship — everybody, that is, except Tiger Coach Danny Ford.

The Terrapins and the Tigers are undefeated in four conference games, but after Saturday's encounter, each team will have a league game remaining. So Ford isn't ready to put the life-or-death tag on the matchup.

"North Carolina was a big game for us, but it is no bigger than this one," Ford told reporters earlier this week. "Maryland was not supposed to be a big threat but they definitely are."

The Tar Heels, who are 2-2 and saw their hopes for the ACC title vanish with last week's loss to the Tigers, begin a salvage effort Saturday with Virginia. Duke's high-powered offense will seek a winning season this weekend against a North Carolina State team with the same goal in mind.

In the final conference matchup, Georgia Tech travels to Wake Forest.

The Tigers, ranked 13th in the latest Associated Press college football poll, have been making just as much news off the field as on it. This week, The Washington Post reported that the Tigers would be placed on probation by the ACC. The report could not be confirmed and conference and school officials have said nothing.

Ford hasn't commented either, choosing to concentrate on the Terrapins.

"In August, Maryland was not considered that much of a threat by those who are supposed to know what they are talking about," he said. "Now they're ranked in the Top 20 and averaging 32 points a game. You'd have to say their offense is going to get your attention."

While Ford is worried about

Maryland's offense, Terrapin Coach Bobby Ross is concerned with the Clemson defense, especially after his Terrapin attack struggled to reach an 18-17 victory over Miami, Fla.

"Clemson is a great defensive football team," says Ross. "They give you a lot of pressure. You've got to be able to handle it."

"We're going to mix things up. We're not going to get locked into any one thing," he adds.

North Carolina Coach Dick Crum did something quite unusual this week when he spoke of his team's bowl possibilities. Since the national championship and a major bowl are out of the question, Crum says his team must concentrate on the next three games if it's to spend December in post-season preparation.

"Of course, you always consult with your seniors on bowls you're going to," says Crum. "If we're not playing well, even if we win the last three, we're not going to a bowl game."

With the incentive to play well and a post-season game at stake, Virginia's George Welsh isn't too sure that now is the time to travel to Chapel Hill.

"It's not a good time to catch them, psychologically," says Welsh. "I don't think they will be down."

The Cavaliers haven't won in Chapel Hill since 1968 and they'll attempt to break that string with two injured quarterbacks. With Mike Eck out for the season, Welsh has to choose between senior Gordie Whitehead and junior Wayne Schuchts.

Whitehead is trying to recover from a shoulder injury and Schuchts has cracked ribs. Freshman tailback Antonio Rice has carried much of the offensive burden and has three times been named rookie of the week.

A 54-0 loss to Penn State helped rekindle rumors of Coach Monte Kiffin's imminent firing at N.C. State. Kiffin is more worried about a winning season and how he'll stop the pass-oriented Blue Devils.

"There's pressure enough as there is. If you start letting all the outside pressures get to you, I think you'd go bananas," he said. "Coming off a loss like this, we want to make sure we get our heads up against Duke."

There's still talk of a bowl at Duke and center Phil Ebinger would like to keep that talk alive with a victory this weekend.

"We're on the upswing again with two big victories. This game with State is very important," says Ebinger.

Georgia Tech's Bill Curry is worried about all facets of the Wake Forest attack as he, too, seeks a winning season.

"We are worried not only about Wake Forest's offense, which everyone knows can move the football on anybody, but also their defense, which is a new one for us this year," he says.

But the Demon Deacon defense didn't do much to stop the Blue Devils, and Al Groh is worried that it won't stop the Yellow Jackets, either.

"They are more run oriented than Duke and we are going to have to control their running game," says Groh. "Robert Lavette is having an outstanding year. He is very strong ... and he is a challenging kind of runner."

No Comment On Report Tigers Put On Probation

WASHINGTON (AP) — National Collegiate Athletic Association officials are refusing comment on a newspaper report that the NCAA Committee on Infractions has voted to put the Clemson University football program on probation.

The Washington Post said in today's editions that the committee voted to put the Clemson program on probation for two years because of infractions including recruiting violations.

The Post quoted unidentified sources as saying the action would bar the defending national collegiate football champions from regional and national telecasts and postseason bowl play for two years.

NCAA officials reached at Shawnee Mission, Kan., Wednesday night declined to comment on the report.

Clemson officials said they had not heard about the probation. They referred questions to University President Bill L. Atchley, who was in St. Louis for a meeting Wednesday.

The Post said Clemson can accept or appeal the sanctions, which also would reduce the number of football scholarships the university can grant. The newspaper also said the NCAA has asked Clemson to show cause why the university should not take disciplinary action against three assistant coaches.

A source said that the NCAA brought more than 150 charges against Clemson's football program, according to the newspaper.

The Post story appeared two days after the newspaper, again quoting unidentified sources, said that the Atlantic Coast Conference had imposed two years' probation on Clemson.

The NCAA action would be the second major sanction against Clemson since 1975, when the basketball program received three years' probation and the football program was publicly reprimanded.

Coaches Dislike Ejection Rule

By ELISSA MCCRARY
Associated Press Writer

CHARLOTTE (AP) — High school coaches say a new national rule that allows officials to eject a football coach from a game for poor sportsmanship is unfair and should be dropped from the books.

"It just gives an official too much control over a coach," said Will Holthouser, head football coach at Charlotte's Harding High School. "It should be gotten rid of."

"It's a bad rule, pure and simple," said another coach, who asked not to be identified. "There's too much left up to the official and too few guidelines in the rule book."

Controversy over the rule, which went into effect this year, arose Tuesday when Garinger High School football coach Gerald Hasty was fired from his coaching job after being ejected from a game Friday for what a referee ruled was unsportsmanlike conduct.

Hasty had been a coach in the Charlotte-Mecklenburg area since 1979 and coach at Garinger since last year.

An official said Hasty used profanity twice while disputing penalties during a game.

The new national high-school football rule says that if coaches are penalized twice for unsportsmanlike conduct, they must be thrown out of the game.

Hasty's dismissal came a month after Charlotte-Mecklenburg school superintendent Jay Robinson announced a crackdown on coaches' conduct.

"When we met to discuss coaches' conduct, we had had three coaches ejected from games in 10 days, and that's just not acceptable," Robinson said.

Robinson said at the meeting that any coach ejected because of poor sportsmanship would be fired from his coaching job.

Hasty was the only coach ordered out of a game since that time.

Officials at the state High School Athletic Association in Chapel Hill say they have no plans to seek changes in the rule or interfere with decisions on coaches made by local school administrators. They also said the Charlotte incident was the first of its kind in the state, as far as they could determine.

"As far as we're concerned, something like this is an administrative decision," said Simon Terrell, head of the association. "We may hear some complaints but we would not get into decisions made by school officials. It's not up to us to step in and question a decision of this type as long as the rule is being followed."

However, coaches like Holthouser say the rule isn't clear and leaves the definition of unsportsmanlike conduct up to the officials.

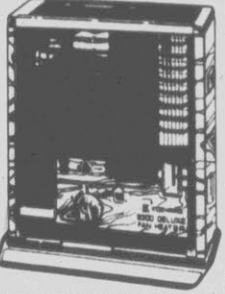

"What we have here are officials who come out one night a week to officiate at a Friday night game, and they hold a coach's future in their hands," said Holthouser, who was ejected from a game earlier this year. "The official says coach Hasty used profanity. What may be profane to him wouldn't be profane to another official. It's all up to his (the official's) discretion."

"What happens with this rule is that an official knows if he cites a coach for poor sportsmanship early in a game, that coach isn't going to be able to say anything, question anything, all night," he added. "He (the official) knows he's got him (the coach) quiet for the rest of the night, no matter what happens, or the coach is out. That's not fair."

Holthouser and other coaches also say they question Robinson's decision to fire coaches if they are ejected because of poor sportsmanship. They say punishment for such offenses should be consistent statewide.

"Why should coaches in Charlotte-Mecklenburg be required to have different standards on the field than other coaches in the state?" asked one coach. "A decision like this one shouldn't be made on a local level."

Robinson defended his decision, saying, "A coach is a role model for his players. If young people are to look up to him and be like him, then I think he has to have exemplary conduct. He has set high standards for sportsmanship."

Blood Donated

A Bloodmobile visit at Pitt Community College this week resulted in the collection of 123 pints of blood, according to Mrs. Ruth Taylor of the Pitt County Red Cross.

Mrs. Taylor said that in addition to the blood donations, there were 11 deferrals for various health reasons.

The PCC drive was sponsored by the Student Government Association and Connie Wrenn, student counselor and advisor, served as coordinator.

The Red Cross spokesman said the next Bloodmobile visit in the area will be on Tuesday at Umstead Dorm at East Carolina University.

Ten-Year-Old Girl Killed By Dog Pack

PAOLI, Ind. (AP) — A pack of dogs attacked and killed a 10-year-old girl as she rode her bicycle to her grandparents' house, authorities said.

The girl, identified as Margaret Thacker, had left home shortly before 5 p.m. Wednesday to pick up schoolwork from her grandparents' house about a mile away, said Orange County sheriff's deputy Tony R. Underwood.

She was about halfway there when 15 dogs attacked, the deputy said. The girl got off the bike but only ran a few feet before the dogs caught her, Underwood said.

The owner of the dogs, Clifford Bird, told authorities his wife saw the girl's bike in

Martin Co. Employees To Share In Fund Drive

WILLIAMSTON — A motion to offer their support to the United Way program in Martin County was approved by members of the Martin County Board of Commissioners at the board's November meeting.

The motion entails permission for county employees to voluntarily take part in a payroll deduction program as a means of contributing to United Way. Commissioners also agreed to take an active role in working with the organization and in supporting the agency's programs.

It was noted that among agencies to receive assistance from United Way are the Heart Association, the American Red Cross, the Boy and Girl Scouts, and the Council on Aging. It was also emphasized that for the greater part, money raised for United Way will stay in the county.

Dr. Geoffrey Balkham and Allie Stafford, co-chairmen for the Martin County United Way, revealed that the county goal for the upcoming 1983-84 year has been budgeted at $29,500. To date, more than $3,500 has been pledged toward the budget goal.

No decision was made, but discussion was carried out on a request to allow the Martin County Extension Service to use the entire agricultural building when other offices are moved to the new courthouse now under construction. One of the hoped for changes in the buildings structure would be constructing an auditorium within the building. Estimated cost for this project is about $70,000. Commissioners' concurred in considering the request, but agreed that they must first see how this would work out in conjunction with possible plans to renovate the building for energy saving purposes.

The board also agreed to be an official part of the opening of the Roanoke Arts and Crafts Guild on Saturday.

World Hunger Theme of Fast

"World hunger can be stopped if everyone will do a little something about it" is the theme of the upcoming "Fast for a World Harvest" project being sponsored by the East Carolina University Hunger Coalition.

On Tuesday afternoon from 3 to 7 p.m. an "Ending Hunger Briefing" will be presented in the coffee-house at Mendenhall Center. Marty Corley, who will conduct the meeting, says, "The briefing provides information on the status of world hunger that has taken an incredible amount of time to put together." She added the briefing will be a good opportunity for interested people to get current information on the total picture of world hunger.

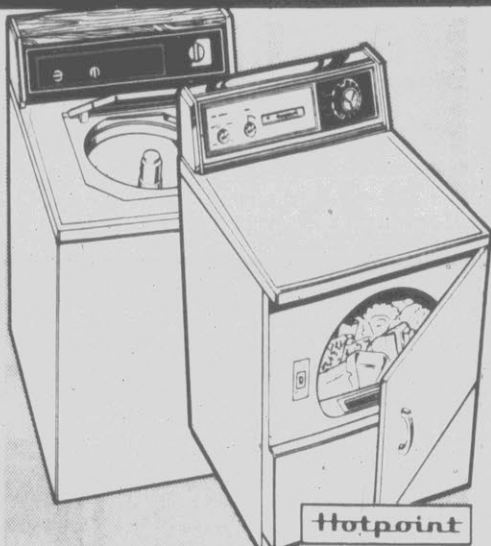

Jennifer Baughn, a local hunger project coordinator, noted the briefing will serve to show people the difference they can make as individuals in the problem of hunger.

On Thursday's "Fast for a World Harvest," the coalition is asking persons to go without eating for one day, or else skip one meal and donate their food money to Oxfam American. Oxfam is an organization that supports self-help development projects in the poorest areas of Asia, Africa and Latin America.

Other events relating to world hunger will be conducted during the week of Nov. 15-19. Anyone wanting more information on the fast or other projects can call 752-4216.

Soviets Plan Pursue A Comet

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer
MOSCOW (AP) — The director of the Soviet Institute of Space Research was discussing space science with an American reporter when a colleague entered the room with a message.

A quick reading, and Dr. Roald Sagdeyev smiled broadly, obviously pleased.

"The news in this telex is extremely exciting," he told his visitor in perfect English. "Halley's comet has been detected for the first time by the five-meter telescope on Mount Palomar (in California)."

"So it's really coming," the reporter said.

"Yes, it's really coming," Sagdeyev replied, laughing.

He laughed because he knew that every 76 years, like clockwork, the celebrated comet visits this corner of the universe and lights up the heavens.

"The big news would be if it did not appear," the director said.

Halley's comet, more than one billion miles away, will stage its most brilliant display when it makes its closest approach to the sun in March 1986. The comet rounds the star at 140,000 miles an hour, its head expanding to more than 100,000 miles in diameter and its tail of dust and gases lengthening to more than 50 million miles.

The Soviets have a special interest in Halley's comet. In one of the most ambitious deep space endeavors of the 1980s, they are to dispatch two unmanned spacecraft to within a few hundred miles of this speeding target to seek clues to the origin of our solar system.

They will have a chance to upstage the United States, which last year was forced to cancel plans to launch a pair of Halley's probes because of a shortage of funds in the National Aeronautics and Space Administration budget. Japan and the European Space Agency each are to send a spacecraft to explore the comet, but their plans are less ambitious than the Russians.

Sagdeyev spoke proudly of the Soviet mission. He said the two identical probes will be launched a week apart in December 1984 on a 15-month journey. In June 1985, both will fly near Venus, parachuting data-gathering modules to the surface and using the Venusian gravitational field to accelerate on a path to intercept Halley's.

"In the beginning of March 1986 we will have our first encounter with the comet," Sagdeyev reported. "We have 20 different experiments aboard, starting with a TV camera to take pictures which I expect will be as brilliant as those taken of Jupiter and Saturn by the American Voyager."

"There are several different chemical experiments to measure the composition of the gas plasma evaporating from the comet and the composition of the small dust particles which are released from the nuclei," he said. Sagdeyev said the Soviets, Japanese and Europeans are coordinating their efforts so each of the four spacecraft will approach the comet from a different direction and at various distances to obtain maximum information.

Although no American spacecraft will join the parade, American scientists are coordinating the International Halley Watch, which will supervise the worldwide observation of the comet and interpretation of the data from the four spacecraft, sounding rockets, balloons, telescopes and other sources.

What do scientists expect to learn?

Comets, Sagdeyev said, are debris left from the creation of the solar system 4.5 billion years ago and contain primordial matter in pristine form.

"They preserve this matter in the original state," he said. "It could tell us much about the birth and history of the solar system."

To mount such scientific missions, Soviet scientists, like those in NASA, have to squeeze the funds from a space budget that is increasingly devoted to military projects.

As a result, Sagdeyev strongly advocates international cooperation in space science programs to cut spending and duplication. The Soviet Halley probes, for example, carry experiments designed by scientists of eight nations.

The director said he was extremely disappointed when there was no major followup to the joint U.S.-U.S.S.R. manned space flight in 1975.

"Both sides lost a lot," he said. "Especially the scientists. Because when Apollo-Soyuz first started, people said this is the first step. First we will test the compatibility of the equipment, and the next step would be to use the machinery for science."

"But it was not done."

Would he like to see more joint flights with the Americans?

"I would like to see joint enterprises in space — not necessarily joint manned flights," he replied.

Sagdeyev said he feels the Americans with their expertise are playing an exact role as coordinators of International Halley Watch.

"There should be such an international division of duties," he said. "If everybody would be rushing toward Halley's Comet there would be a traffic jam."

Sagdeyev reported the American and Soviet roles in planetary exploration, although not coordinated, are clearly defined by the relative technology of the two nations.

With much better electronic miniaturization and longer-lived spacecraft, he said, the United States is more suited to probe the distant outer planets, while the Soviets have concentrated on the inner planets, particularly Venus.

"This approach is quite complementary because both sides share their data," he said.

Sagdeyev noted the Soviets postponed Mars exploration after America's 1976 Viking landers "made such an important contribution to Martian science that everybody now must stop and think about what the next approach should be."

And he expressed envy over a very sophisticated U.S. Space Telescope that is to be carried up by the space shuttle in 1985 to peer deep into the universe.

"We are very jealous of this type of project I must confess," he stated. "It is a very giant step forward."

Today's Cryptiquip clue: E equals P.

The Cryptiquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Manteo Landing Craft Service

MANTEO, N.C. (AP) — Tourists and others wishing to make the trip from Manns Harbor to Manteo must wait about two more weeks before they are allowed to use ferries, a state official says.

Max Powell, spokesman for the state Department of Transportation, said two World War II-vintage landing craft are now carrying vehicles across Croatan Sound. Workers began building landing docks Wednesday to handle ferry service across the sound until the William B. Umstead Bridge is opened again to traffic.

The surplus landing craft were scheduled to make three roundtrips on Wednesday.

The bridge was severely damaged Friday morning by a northbound barge. State officials say it is a "miracle" that the bridge did not collapse under traffic because many of the 3-mile span's supports were damaged.

Powell said tourist traffic will be allowed to use the ferries once they begin their runs in two weeks, but only on a low-priority basis.

The two ferries, the Lindsey Warren and the Ethridge, were used on the Cape Hatteras-Ocracoke run but were taken out of service for the fall and winter months.

Meanwhile, some of residents of Manns Harbor and Manteo said the bridge closing is affecting them.

Joseph J. Carleno, 18, of East Lake, said the bridge closing kept him from visiting his girlfriend, and two retired crab fishermen, Carl Twiford and Woddy Mann, complained that the bridge closing has imposed a burden on them. "You can't get no work done," said Twiford. "It's messed everybody up over there," added John A.

Branden of Manns Harbor, who works in Manteo. Motor vehicles trying to get from Manns Harbor to Manteo and the Outer Banks are being forced to take a 150-mile detour through Edenton and Elizabeth City across the bridge at Point Harbor.

Declared Insane
At Trial, Man Freed

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A Wadesboro man judged to be insane when he killed another person with his car has been ordered freed because a judge ruled that the man showed no more signs of mental illness.

James Henry Autry, who allegedly heard voices telling him to take his own life or someone else's on the day his car rammed the rear of a car driven by Monroe businessman Robert E. Lee, was ordered freed last month after less than three months of treatment.

Lee, 51, was killed Oct. 16, 1981, when a car driven by Autry slammed into the rear of his car in Monroe. In an Oct. 14 hearing this year in Wake County, a district court judge ruled that evidence showed the 35-year-old Autry "without any showing of mental illness other than his history."

Autry was confined at Dorothea Dix hospital July 23

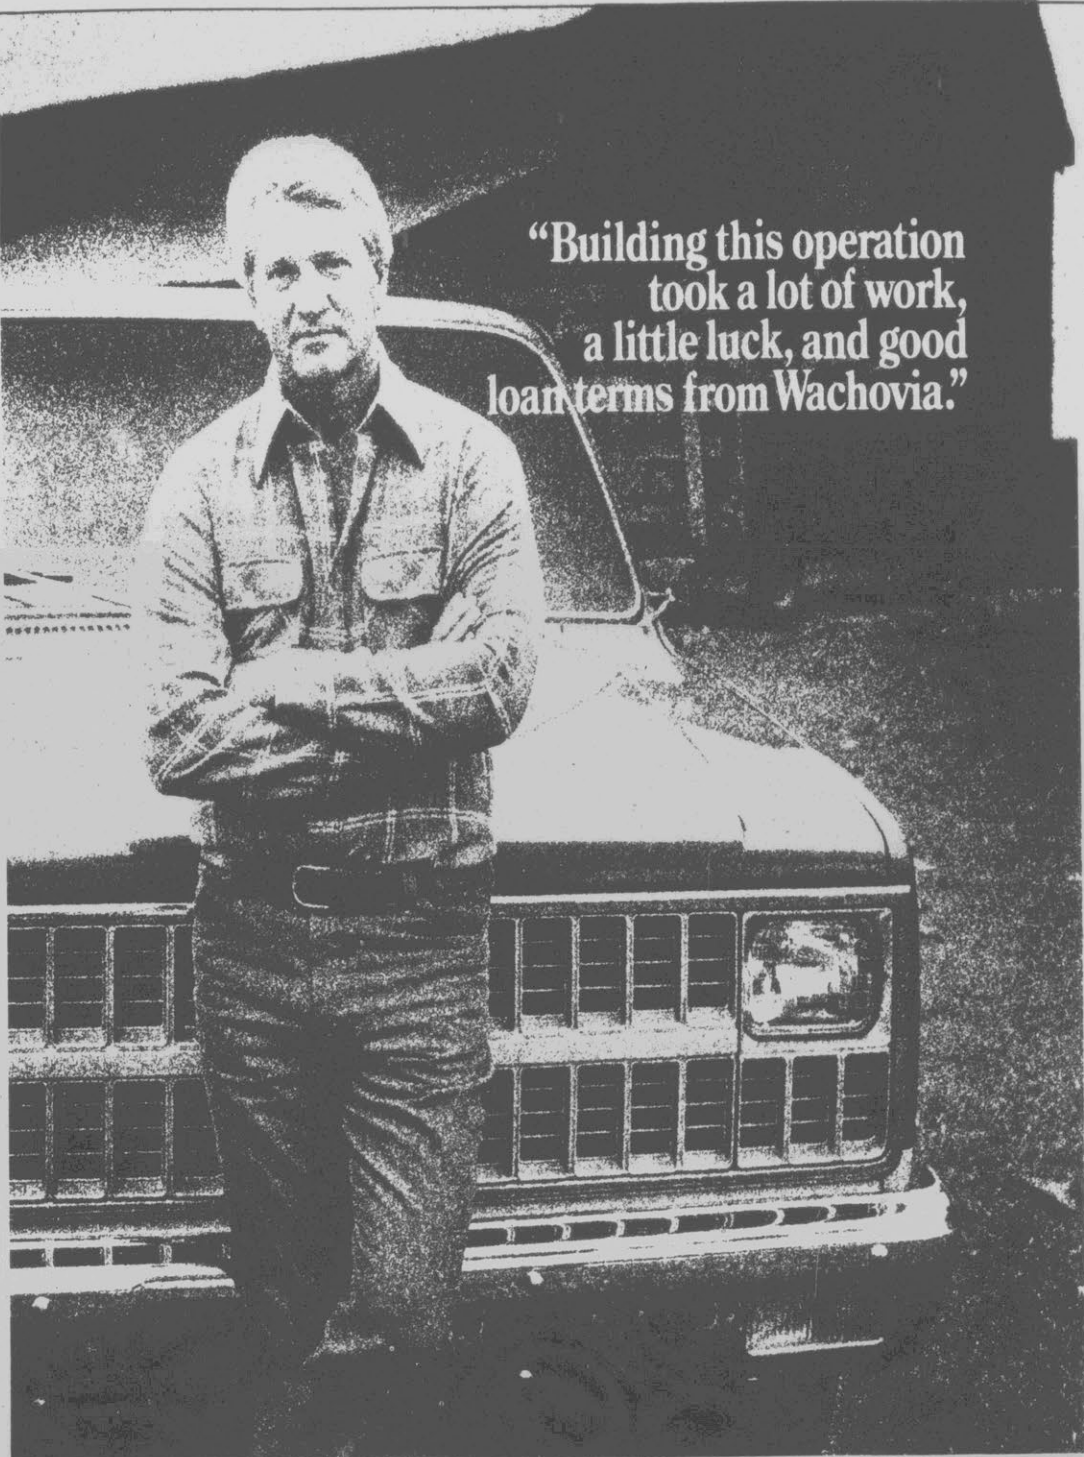

after a trial in which he was found not guilty of manslaughter by reason of insanity.

The crash that killed Lee occurred after Autry left a Monroe doctor's office. Witnesses said Autry's car sped into the rear of Lee's car, causing an explosion and fire. Autry suffered minor injuries in the wreck.

Four psychiatrists testified that Autry had been suffering from paranoid schizophrenia since 1979 and said his illness could be controlled by medication but he had not taken medication for at least a month before the wreck.

Testimony showed that Autry told doctors he heard voices that told him to take his own life or someone else's life on the day of the wreck.

Monroe District Attorney Carroll Lwewder said he had no comment on the decision to release Autry.

The Nation Remembers

Since the beginning of our Republic, 40 million Americans have fought in wars. Nearly 3 million served in Vietnam. This Veteran's Day is dedicated to those veterans who came home — not to parades but to silence and a nation that wanted to forget. Today the silence ends with the dedication of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial, two black granite walls forming a V and inscribed with the names of the 57,661 persons who died in that war. Like the war it remembers, the memorial has inspired controversy. Some say it is reminiscent of the peace sign anti-war protesters used. Others have praised the memorial for its poignant eloquence.

Opening lead: Jack of ♦.

Bridge is a logical game. It is all very well to play by instinct, but in the long run probabilities will win out.

South had a rebid problem when North responded to his spade opening bid with one no trump. A rebid of two spades would have suggested neither the strength nor the balanced nature of South's hand, and a jump to three spades was out of the question with such a poor suit. His decision to raise to two no trump was a practical solution. After North probed for a heart contract, the pair staggered into four spades.

West led the top of his club sequence. Declarer won the king of clubs and cashed the ace. He crossed to dummy with the ace of diamonds and discarded a heart on the queen of clubs. All that remained was to hold his trump losers to three.

Declarer led a trump from the table and inserted the jack. West won the queen and exited with a diamond. Declarer won and led a low trump, but when West showed out, declarer still had to lose three trump tricks and his contract.

Declarer was in a trifle too much of a hurry to get rid of his heart loser. Better technique and timing would have landed the game.

Declarer was correct in taking his two club winners out of the way, but at trick three he should have led a low trump from his hand. If spades were 3-2, it made no difference whether declarer led a low or a high spade — he would not lose more than three trump tricks. But what if spades were 4-1?

If the singleton trump was the nine, it would be right to lead a high spade at trick three. But it is three times as likely that the singleton will

The Daily Reflector, Greenville, N.C. be an honor. Therefore, it is correct to lead a low trump.

Assume that West wins and shifts to a diamond. Declarer wins in dummy, takes his heart sluff on the queen of clubs and leads another trump from the table. Now there is no way that East can take more than his two top trumps.

Declares Public Was 'Snookered'

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., says lawmakers need to forget about last week's congressional races and get to the work before them.

"It's time to back off and lay politics aside," he said while attending the induction Wednesday of James C. Fox as a federal District Court judge.

He said he has "purposely not commented" on the election because "I think the worst thing we can do now is to get up an emotional atmosphere that would have an adverse effect on Congress pulling together."

Emotions ran high in some precincts in North Carolina last week. The Republican congressional losses included two of the four North Carolina seats the party held.

None of the six congressional candidates, including two incumbents, backed by Helms and his National Congressional Club won.

Some Democrats claimed negative advertising by the Congressional Club in North Carolina and elsewhere cost some club candidates the elections. But Thomas Ellis, chairman of the political action committee, said the club was not an issue in the election.

Helms said "the people got snookered" in the election. Nationwide, Democrats gained 24 seats in Congress and increase their governmental total from 27 to 34.

In North Carolina, the 11-member congressional delegation during the next Congress will be composed of nine Democrats and two Republicans.

Helms said the public does not understand President Reagan's economic policies, which he said has helped lower inflation.

"The people who bankrupted the Social Security system are saying President Reagan is responsible" and "the big spenders who led us to a trillion-dollar debt are talking about the recession," Helms said.

"I don't think the public understands that the day Reagan became president, the prime rate was 21.5 percent and now it is 11.75, inflation was 13 percent and now it is less than 5 percent," he said.

Lots Of Bubbly

PARIS (AP) — Champagne producers are reaping a record 1982 harvest after three bad years which made the bubbly white wine expensive and scarce, the French Champagne Association says.

A spokesman for the association said this year's crop averaged 14,080 pounds of grapes per acre, 4,400 pounds per acre more than the previous record yield in 1970.

Brinkley Brought Imagination

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The technical foul-ups on ABC's "This Week with David Brinkley" are, oddly, a measure of the show's imagination and an indication of how it has helped wake up Sunday mornings.

Last Sunday, when "This Week" stretched television's technological trickery by having all five new U.S. senators-elect on its live broadcast, the Las Vegas signal from Chic Hecht, the winning Republican from Nevada, was missing.

The other link-ups worked fine: Democrat Frank Lautenberg of New Jersey in New York; Republican Paul Trible of Virginia in Washington; Democrat Jeff Bingaman of New Mexico in Phoenix and Republican Pete Wilson of California in Los Angeles.

Wilson said he could hear Hecht, and the quick-witted Brinkley suggested that maybe Wilson "could tell us what he said."

This sort of glitch is not encountered by NBC's "Meet the Press" or CBS' "Face the Nation," which are studio panel interviews, often taped before broadcast.

"Meet the Press," which began its 35th year last week, highlighted the occasion by recalling the program's original introduction — newspaper presses in action, symbolizing that this was a print program on television.

Three decades later, only "This Week," among the three network Sunday interview shows, is a television program on television.

Beginning its second year this Sunday, "This Week" utilizes satellites and other technical advances to great advantage. There are unique risks, but live TV makes for lively TV. With or without Hecht — and his hook-up was eventually restored — last Sunday's show was entertaining and informative.

The five newcomers were questioned by Brinkley, Sam Donaldson and George Will on such subjects as Social Security, federal deficits and defense spending. Their comparative views and political rhetoric were eye-opening.

Hecht, for instance, was trying to back off his campaign views on the nuclear freeze issue, saying he didn't have all the facts just then, but Donaldson wouldn't let him hedge.

"Sam serves a real purpose," Brinkley said. "He antagonizes a lot of people. He's not bland, predictable or dull."

The other Sunday shows have their tough interviewers, too. CBS' Phil Jones in particular was diligent in trying to pin down Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., last week's guest on "Face the Nation."

But when all was said and done, CBS had only Kemp and NBC had only Rep. Jim Wright of Texas, the House Majority Leader, making their partisan points, while "This Week," a half hour longer, had imaginative interviews, plus news, background reports, commentary and a free-wheeling roundtable discussion.

Last December, at the height of the scare over the purported hit squads from Libya, "This Week" scored with a satellite interview of the Libyan leader, Col. Moammar Khadafy.

"I don't know if we got any great news out of it," Brinkley said. "But what was memorable were the dramatics about it. He came on as if he were John Barrymore, carefully arranging his clothes and preening himself. He was like a ham actor backstage."

Khadafy also came live, which is the way "This Week" goes after newsmakers.

"ABC loses money on our program," Brinkley said. "Everytime we have a satellite link-up from Beirut, it costs $15,000. But ABC has never turned us down. They leave us alone editorially and financially. It's the best deal I've ever had."

In terms of bringing hard-to-reach people to the broadcast, Brinkley has become an advocate of 1980s technology. In terms of personal style of journalism, however, he's the same no-frills reporter he was when he began working for NBC 39 years ago.

He doesn't use a Tele-Prompter to read his copy, and he writes his own material.

"I began in broadcasting without a TelePrompter," he said. "The thing still gives me a little hangup. I'm talking to people in their living rooms, and I don't want some element coming between me and them."

"And I can't read anything I didn't write. I can't use other people's words."

Dolly Prepares Resume Career

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Entertainer Dolly Parton, who underwent abdominal surgery in September, says she's well again and ready to resume her career.

"I'm just so happy to be back workin' that I thought it would be nice to say 'thank you' to all the people that sent me get well cards and to show that I'm still kickin'," she said Wednesday.

Ms. Parton, 36, said at a rehearsal and news conference that she will make her first appearance in Atlantic City, N.J., on Nov. 19. She also plans a 12-day tour of South Africa.

Ms. Parton, who starred in the movies "9 To 5" and "Best Little Whorehouse in Texas," said she has been offered a role as a witch in an upcoming sequel to the "Superman" movies. She said she has not decided whether to take the part.

Of her illness, Ms. Parton said, "That was the first time in my life that I've got that far down. It was a time of personal growth. I thought a lot about myself."

Ms. Parton was hospitalized for bleeding abdominal polyps.

"They say I'm completely well now, and I'm feeling good," she said.

To Produce Special

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Howard W. Koch will produce the 55th annual Academy Awards television special scheduled for the Los Angeles Music Center April 11, 1983.

Koch has produced the Oscar presentations on seven previous occasions, including last year when he took over the reins from Melvin Frank who became ill during rehearsals.

Hospitality House Nov. 13

WASHINGTON — Cardio-pulmonary resuscitation, a human relations committee and food from an eastern N.C. restaurant are the topics on Kay Currie's Hospitality House program, airing from 3 to 3:30 p.m. Saturday over WITN-TV, channel 7, Washington.

Robert Whitehead, chairman of the New Bern-Craven County Human Relations Committee, explains how eastern North Carolinians can contact the committee about problems or questions. The committee, in turn, refers people to the proper source for aid.

The second guest is Jerry Blount, owner of The Depot Restaurant in Rocky Mount. The restaurant is made from historic train cars. Blount, assisted by Allen Harrell, will prepare one of his specialty dishes.

A life-saving CPR demonstration will be given by Ken Rhoades, the final guest on Saturday's show.

Day-By-Day Space Shuttle Flight Plan

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer
CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Space shuttle Columbia's first operational flight will be a busy five-day mission, featuring the ship's first four-person crew, deployment of two commercial satellites and space walks by two astronauts known as mission specialists.

Commanding the flight is veteran astronaut Vance Brand, accompanied by three newcomers to space: Pilot Robert Overmyer and mission specialists William Lenoir and Joseph Allen.

Here are the daily highlights as scheduled by NASA before the flight:

DAY ONE
Columbia roars away from launch pad 39A at 7:19 a.m. EST into a 17,400-mile-per-hour orbit 184 miles above the Earth. An hour later, after systems have been checked, Overmyer remotely opens the ship's 60-foot-long cargo bay doors, exposing the two satellites and radiators that dissipate excess spacecraft heat.

Brand maneuvers the ship into the proper alignment for deployment of the first satellite. Eight hours after launch, following a 90-minute countdown, Lenoir and Allen remotely activate spring devices to eject a Satellite Business Systems outpayload over the Pacific Ocean.

Forty-five minutes later an automatic timer on the satellite fires a spacecraft engine to send it hurtling toward its destination, a stationary position 22,300 miles high.

DAY 2
Astronauts exercise, check several ship systems and fire a maneuvering engine to adjust the orbital path, changed slightly by the satellite separation.

Thirty-three hours into the flight, over the Pacific, Lenoir and Allen eject Telesat of Canada's Anik satellite. Again, 45 minutes later, a timer fires an on-board engine to propel the payload toward its 22,300-mile-high outpost.

Brand and Overmyer maneuver Columbia so its starboard side looks the sun. It is to hold this position for 47 hours, so the astronauts can test certain systems to determine how they endure extremes of heat and cold. Temperatures on the sun side register up to 250 degrees Fahrenheit in space, while shaded areas log readings down to 215 degrees below zero.

DAY 3
The day's flight plan is relatively light, in case the time is needed to eject one of the satellites that may have encountered a problem on one of the earlier attempts.

The spacemen spend most of the day checking many of the spaceship's thousands of systems, including the testing of an engine that has been exposed overnight to the extreme cold. Lenoir and Allen begin preparing suits and other equipment for their joint space walk the next day.

DAY 4
Lenoir and Allen move into an airlock to don bulky space-walking suits and to pre-breathe pure oxygen for three hours to eliminate the possibility of painful bends, caused when nitrogen pools in the body joints. They open an airlock hatch and float into the open cargo bay.

Attached to rope-like tethers, they move down guide wires the 60-foot length of the bay, testing their ability to maneuver, and then return to a work station near the hatch to practice using wrenches and other tools to be used for future spacecraft and satellite repair jobs. After rehearsing emergency door closing procedures with a set of winches, the walkers return to the airlock after a 3½-hour excursion.

Brand and Overmyer conduct five test-firings on an engine exposed to the cold for nearly two days. In another thermal test, they point the ship's nose to the sun, a position to be held for 19 hours.

DAY 5
During this last full day of the mission, the crew makes extensive checks of flight control and other systems needed for re-entry and they pack away equipment in preparation for returning to Earth the next morning.

DAY 6
As the astronauts enter their 81st and final orbit, Mission Control feeds them computer updates for re-entry and they turn the ship around 180 degrees so they are flying backward. That puts the two rear deorbit engines in position to slow the vehicle when they are fired.

Brand triggers the engines high over the Indian Ocean, starting Columbia — returned to a nose-first position — on an hour-long descent that passes just north of Australia, across the Pacific north of Hawaii and across the California coast to a landing on runway 17 on a dry lake bed at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif.

At higher altitudes, Brand guides the ship through a series of rigorous maneuvers and then turns the craft over to its automatic landing system until he takes manual control again at 2,500 feet for the touchdown.

Readers Become Better Citizens

NEW YORK (UPI) — Students who read newspapers in class are apt to become better citizens, according to two recent studies.

The research was done with inner-city grade school students in Richmond, Va., and high school students in San Francisco.

Both studies indicate frequent, year-round use of daily newspapers as a teaching device can significantly increase student interest in and knowledge of current events, while improving their ability to use the paper effectively.

The research was done for the Newspaper Readership Project of the Newspaper Advertising Bureau, Inc.

NAB's Thelma Anderson, who supervised the research, says, "It adds to what we have learned from a number of studies over the years: that newspapers in the classroom can help improve the academic skills and performance levels of students in grade and high schools."
