City Council Approves Bids For Vehicles

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

The City Council awarded several key bids Thursday night and approved a lease-purchase agreement for five city vehicles, including two rescue units.

Bids for six marked police cars, amounting to $60,528, were awarded to Hastings Ford, while a $9,373.66 bid submitted by Phelps Chevrolet for one unmarked police car was approved.

City Manager Gail Meeks pointed out that money had been budgeted for six police vehicles but since the beginning of the fiscal year, a patrol unit was destroyed in the pursuit of a suspect. Ms. Meeks said the city has been reimbursed by the insurance company to buy a replacement vehicle.

Council members approved a bid of $50,979.74 submitted by Emergency Vehicle Services of Winterville for two rescue vehicles. The board chose the local bid although Southeastern Emergency Equipment of Wake Forest submitted a figure of $50,400 for the two units. Mayor Percy Cox, noting the small difference in the two bids, said the Winterville firm offered a much quicker delivery date and local servicing for the vehicles.

Other bids awarded included: $85,848, to Barrus Construction Co., for the Carver Library parking lot, South Evans Park improvements, Meadowbrook Drive paving, and East Meadowbrook Drive area storm drainage; a revised bid of $4,978 (with a city share of $498) submitted by Kinston Plumbing & Heating Co. for the plumbing segment of the local transit garage facility;

A bid of $7,676 offered by Hastings Ford for a half-ton pickup truck for the animal control division; bids by Truxmore Industries of $44,453 for a 23-cubic-yard refuse truck and $58,971 for a 27-cubic-yard containerized refuse vehicle; and $58,718 submitted by Public Works Equipment of Monroe for a street sweeper (A.E. Finley & Associates of Raleigh offered a bid of $56,391 but did not meet specifications for the equipment).

The council gave its approval to lease-purchase bids offered by First Union Leasing for the two rescue units and for the

Former KGB Boss Gets Soviet Leadership Post

By STEVEN R. HURST
Associated Press Writer
MOSCOW (AP) — Acting swiftly to fill a power vacuum, the Central Committee unanimously elected former KGB chief Yuri V. Andropov today to succeed the late Leonid I. Brezhnev as head of the Soviet Communist Party.

Andropov, who in 15 years as secret police chief crushed dissidents at home and collected intelligence from abroad, vowed to pursue Brezhnev's policies and build the power of the Soviet armed forces.

"We know full well that imperialists will never meet one's pleas for peace. It can be upheld only by resting upon the invincible might of the Soviet armed forces," Tass quoted him as telling the committee.

Andropov was nominated for the top job in the Soviet Union by his chief rival, Konstantin U. Chernenko, any there was speculation Chernenko would be named president in an attempt to demonstrate unity.

Andropov, the Soviet ambassador to Hungary during the 1956 uprising, did much of the talking for the Kremlin leadership, which finally sent in tanks to crush the workers' rebellion.

Andropov, named Thursday to head the committee arranging Brezhnev's funeral, later viewed Brezhnev's body, on display in the House of Unions in downtown Moscow.

The health of the 68-year-old Andropov, like that of Brezhnev, has been questioned but the nature of any possible illnesses is not known. When he returned from his summer vacation this year he looked drawn and pale.

The tall, gaunt Andropov wears wire-rimmed glasses and has receding white hair which he combs back.

Andropov's new title is general secretary of the Central Committee of the Communist Party. Although the job does not make him head of state, it is the most powerful position in the Soviet Union.

Andropov, in his address to the Central Committee after his election, assured members he would follow the "domestic and foreign policies that had been pursued under Leonid Brezhnev."

Tass said he pledged to "devote all his energy, knowledge and experience of life to the successful implementation of the program of building communism ... and to ensuring continuity in solving the tasks of further enhancing the economic and defense might of the U.S.S.R."

Brezhnev, who died Wednesday after an 18-year rule, also held the largely ceremonial post of president.

No announcement of a new president was expected until Nov. 23, when the appointment can be ratified by the Supreme Soviet, the rubber-stamp national Parliament.

Soviet sources speculated that Andropov's chief rival for power, long-time Brezhnev aide Chernenko, would be named president.

Andropov was nominated by Chernenko and unanimously elected by the approximately 300 members of the Central Committee in a special session today, the Tass news agency said.

The decision was made by the ruling 12-man Politburo, of which Andropov is a member, and sent to the Central Committee for confirmation, Tass said.

It took an unusually short time to select a new general secretary, suggesting that the Politburo wanted to have the question settled before Brezhnev's funeral Monday. The maneuvering for power apparently took place during the 26½ hours between Brezhnev's death Wednesday and the official death announcement Thursday.

Chernenko's reported nomination of Andropov was seen as a message of unity.

The first hint of Andropov's appointment came Thursday when he was named to head the committee planning Brezhnev's state funeral. That largely ceremonial post has traditionally gone to the man likely to succeed the late leader.

Andropov resigned his KGB post last spring shortly after he was elevated to the Secretariat of the Central Committee, which further enhanced his standing in the top circle of the party hierarchy. Observers saw the move as an attempt to remove himself from the domestic police and foreign intelligence organization.

The body of Brezhnev, 75, is lying in state in the House of Unions near Red Square, with burial beneath the square's hallowed stones set for Monday.

Andropov's promotion last spring strengthened his hand in executing day-to-day domestic policy. Among his duties, Soviet sources said at the time, was overall supervision of the state radio, television and print media and cultural affairs.

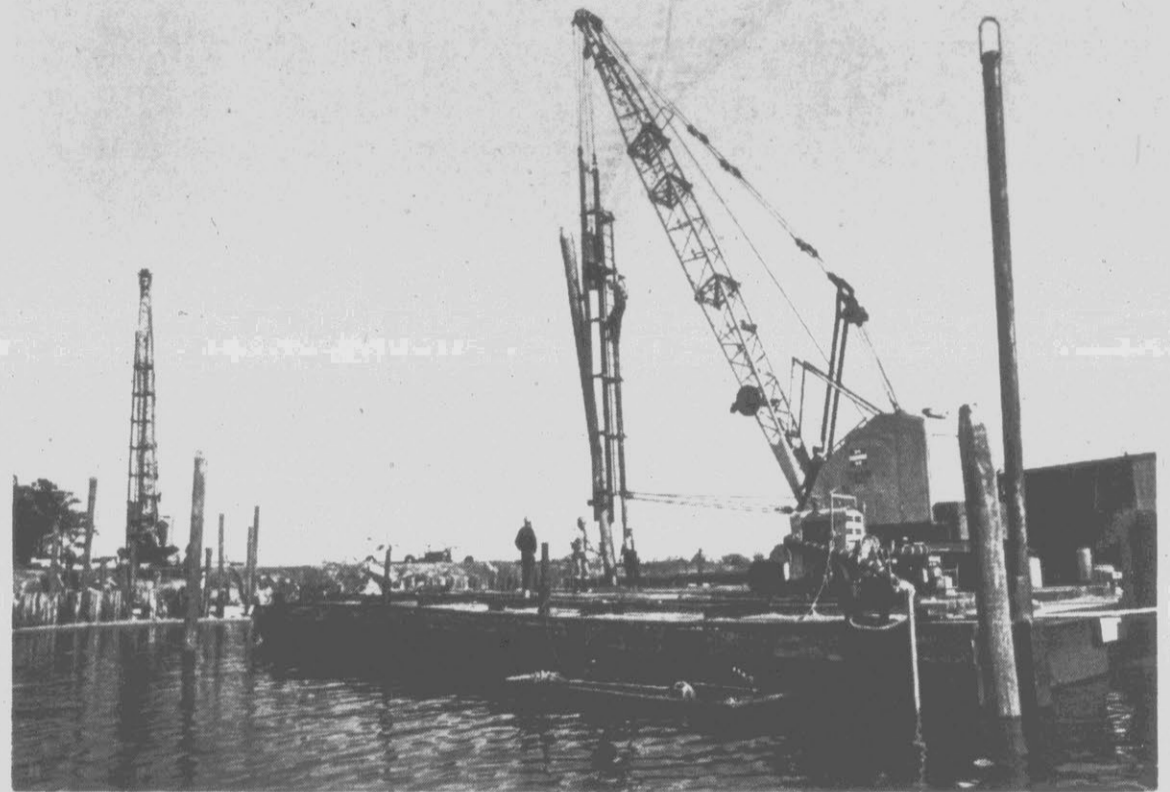

These were formerly the preserves of Mikhail A. Suslov, the Kremlin's No. 2 figure and chief ideologist until his death Jan. 25, 1982, at age 79. Suslov's death set off a race for succession to Brezhnev between Andropov and Chernenko.

Andropov, born to Russian parents June 15, 1914, seemed to have all the right credentials for the top party job.

He gained a reputation as one of the shrewdest and most urbane members of the Soviet hierarchy during his years with the KGB, and in earlier jobs as ambassador to Hungary and as a party foreign policy specialist.

Some Western analysts viewed Andropov at the time of his appointment to the Secretariat as a potential reformer, who would be receptive to experiments with incentive agriculture and private enterprise in other socialist countries — particularly Hungary — to revamp the Soviet Union's economy.

Such steps would inevitably encourage some degree of political liberalization in the Soviet Union and prompt new efforts to improve relations with the United States, the analysts said.

FERRY DOCKS UNDER CONSTRUCTION — Department of Transportation workers build a portion of a ferry dock on the Manteo side of the Croatan Sound Thursday. A similar dock is being constructed on the Mann's Harbor side of the sound to accommodate state ferries that will be transporting vehicles across the three-mile Croatan sound. The usual travel route, the William Umstead Bridge, was closed last weekend after a barge struck it. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Columbia Maneuvers To Launch A 2nd Satellite

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Pilots shifted the space shuttle's orbit today, maneuvering to dispatch a second satellite to its "geosynch" outpost 22,300 miles high. The high-altitude release will fulfill NASA's first commercial contract — a $17-million commitment to deliver the satellites to space.

The first gleaming purple satellite was sent spinning out of Columbia's cargo bay after Thursday's liftoff and Mission Control told the four astronauts this morning: "It's going to be awfully hard for you guys to top yesterday."

The crew was determined to do so, because NASA officials believe double success will give the space agency a decided edge over the European Space Agency and others competing with the shuttle for commercial launch services.

Mission specialists Joseph Allen and William Lenoir were to monitor the afternoon deployment of Telesat

Canada's Anik-C communications satellite.

During deployment of the first satellite, Columbia drifted into a slightly higher path. Commander Vance Brand and pilot Robert Overmyer corrected that today with two brief bursts from the ship's maneuvering engines. The firings also tested the engines after being exposed to the cold shadows of space for more than 24 hours.

The astronauts awakened to a loud rendition of "76 Trombones" from "The Music Man," sat down to breakfast and began exercising to keep their muscles from weakening in weightlessness. Each ran in place for 30 minutes on the treadmill in the shuttle's mid-deck.

"Either Vance has started on the treadmill, or somebody has got the biggest coffee maker brewing," Lenoir commented.

The crew activated a pair of experiments selected by NASA from hundreds submitted by students around the country. The first studies the growth of sponges in zero gravity, the second the formation of crystals in this environment.

Before retiring after Thursday's long and accomplished first day in space, Brand thanked the launch team for "a great ride" and said his crew was looking forward to four more days in orbit. They return to Earth next Tuesday.

Lenoir launched the first communications satellite, SBS-C, from the shuttle's cargo bay just eight hours after Columbia blazed away from Cape Canaveral on its inaugural mission for hire.

"Okay, Houston, we delivered; we got SBS off on time," Lenoir told Mission Control, noting the satellite was popped into its own orbit. The reply: "You got a lot of happy people down here, you guys do good work."

Forty-five minutes later a motor fired to propel the 3½-ton payload from 184 miles high toward, as Lenoir put it, "geosynch" — a stable orbit 22,300 miles out. A second engine ignition Saturday will circularize the satellite at that altitude — the geosynchronous point in space where satellite speed matches the earth's rotation and the station seems to hover over one point.

"We have started a new era. NASA has now gone into the transportation business."

The space agency's first customer also was pleased.

Veterans Are Honored Here By 2 Legion Posts

Service veterans were honored during ceremonies on the steps of the courthouse here Thursday as representatives of local American Legion posts joined in the national Veterans Day observance.

Principals of both American Legion Posts 39 and 160 took part in the annual activities. Leading their respective contingents were Adrian Adams, commander of Post 39, and Walter E. Morehead, commander of Post 160 and coordinator of Thursday's services.

Also taking part were Dr. Marshall Helms, judge advocate for Post 39; Ernest Avery, post adjutant, and Seth Jones, executive committee member.

In addition to Morehead, among those representing Post 160 were Chief John Stevens, first vice commander; Ben Brasswell, second vice commander; Rufus Huggins, chaplain, and Curtis Best, service officer.

Helms said that the American Legion stands for "all veterans of all wars." He said that although the United States is not involved in a military confrontation, the "conflict going on now is the conflict with communism."

The commander told the gathering that the "American Legion believes we ought to be prepared to wage conflict and the safest way not to wage conflict is to be prepared."

Avery said that patriotism tends to die away after a war is over and he pointed to a "great state of complacency" today in the United States. He said he felt it was a patriotic duty to continue honoring veterans.

A Junior ROTC drill unit from D.H. Conley High School, headed by Col. Carl Grantham, presented the colors. Chun Duncan, a junior at Conley, played taps.

FERRY MAKES TRIP ACROSS SOUND — The Ferry "Hatteras" makes its way across the three-mile-wide Croatan Sound Thursday afternoon. Transportation officials say the converted World War II landing craft will be used as a temporary ferry until docks can be built at Mann's Harbor and Manteo. The usual route taken by motorists was the William B. Umstead Bridge, which was closed to traffic after a piling was hit by a barge last week. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Bridge Crippled, But Reminds Outer Banks Are Not Cut Off

MANTEO, N.C. (AP) — The president of the Outer Banks Chamber of Commerce says a crippled bridge does not mean tourists cannot reach the Outer Banks.

Chris Payne, president of the chamber, said damage to the William B. Umstead bridge, the main east-west link spanning Croatan Sound between Mann's Harbor and Manteo, has hampered fall tourism — but not for obvious reasons. He said the major reason for the slight decrease was a misunderstanding among potential visitors about access to the Outer Banks.

Payne said business was off only slightly, but that it could get worse if people did not understand that it is still easy to get to the Outer Banks.

"We're in our off-season," he said. "If it had been in July, we would have had real problems. We have had merchants call and say business is down, especially in the Manteo area."

The Outer Banks have been the focus of fishermen, businessmen and others since the bridge was crippled a week ago. In the early hours of Nov. 5, a barge struck the bridge, severely damaging supports and prompting state officials to close the bridge to traffic.

Engineers estimate that it will be January before the 3-mile span is opened again to traffic.

In the meantime, two aging landing craft are making three trips daily between Mann's Harbor and Manteo, and ferries are scheduled to begin making trips within the next two weeks.

Until the ferries begin operating, vehicles must take a 150-mile detour through Edenton and Elizabeth City across the bridge at Point Harbor.

"People coming to the area ... from the Tidewater region of Virginia and all points north are not at all affected" by the bridge closing, Payne said.

Visitors from the north can still use the bridge carrying U.S. Highway 158 across Currituck Sound to Kitty Hawk, Payne added.

Judge Refuses To Dismiss Charges

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A federal judge refused Thursday to dismiss a former North Carolina Central University psychology professor's allegations that he was denied his rights by the school's refusal to grant him tenure.

Judge Hiram Ward of the U.S. Middle District Court turned down a defense motion for a directed verdict on the First Amendment issue, saying the case involving Paul Scagnelli would go to the jury.

On Wednesday, Ward granted defense motions and dismissed several other allegations in the suit, including Scagnelli's contention that school administrators discriminated against him because he is white.

The motion for a directed verdict on the First Amendment issue was made by Edward Speas, an assistant state attorney general defending NCCU, after testimony in the trial concluded Thursday.

The trial will resume Monday with closing arguments by both sides, the judge's charge to the jury and the jury's deliberations. The case is being heard by an all-white jury composed of four women and two men.

Scagnelli, a clinical psychologist now in private practice in Durham, said in his suit that he was denied tenure in 1979 because he failed a black student for plagiarism against the advice of NCCU administrators.

Boast 'Low' College Cost

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina State University in Raleigh and the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill are among the 10 least expensive schools on a list of highly selective colleges — but only for in-state residents.

"Competitive Colleges," published by Peterson's Guides in Princeton, N.J., lists N.C. State as the third least expensive competitive school in the nation at $2,672 for a year of tuition, fees, room and board.

But for students from out-of-state, the figure would be $4,496.

Costs at UNC-Chapel Hill are listed in the guide as $2,876 — the ninth cheapest on the list. But a student from outside North Carolina would have to pay $4,700.

In each case, out-of-state students pay $1,824 more than their counterparts from North Carolina.

"Competitive Colleges" focuses on what it considers the 296 most selective schools in the country. Unlike a publication by the College Board, it includes separate lists of the 10 most and least expensive colleges, but does not include in its cost estimates a student's expected personal expenses.

The Massachusetts Institute of Technology is listed as the most expensive school at $12,250 a year, while Cooper Union in New York is the least expensive at $300.

Revival Series Begins Monday

AYDEN — Revival services will be held at the House of Prayer, 1008 New Street, Ayden, Monday through Friday at 7:30 p.m.

The Rev. Jimmy Stokes will be the guest speaker. There will be different pastors and choirs participating, each night: Monday, the Rev. W.J. Best and the Sweet Hope Choir; Tuesday, the Rev. Matthew Best and the Best Chapel Choir; Wednesday, the Rev. Jimmy Swinson and the Mills Chapel Choir; Thursday, the Rev. James Smith and the DEFG Singers; and Friday, Evangelist Betty Rhinehardt and the Guiding Light Temple of Faith Choir.

ANNUAL PROGRAM
The Junior Ushers of Philippi Church of Christ, Disciples of Christ, will celebrate their third annual program Sunday at 3 p.m. The guest speaker will be the Rev. Orea Jones and the soloist will be Herbert Estelle, both of Hempstead. The Voices of Youth of Rouse's Chapel Church will be the guest choir.

TENT NOTICE
All members of Morning Light Tent No. 458 are asked to meet at Flanagan Funeral Home today at Flanagan Funeral Home at 7:30 p.m. for burial rites for Mary T. Wilson. Black should be worn.

Dear Abby

Early Bloomer Needs Mom's Understanding

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: This is to "Desperate Mom": Please don't panic. I was your little girl at age 7. By age 9 I was wearing a 36-B bra. I survived because my mom never showed signs of concern. She never cried for me. (God forbid I should carry the guilt of making my own mother cry about something over which I had no control.) Thank heavens she didn't take me to doctors or psychologists. I would have thought there was something terribly "wrong" with me if she had.

Sure, I got teased, just like the girl in my class with the prominent nose and the one across the room with a funny name nobody could pronounce. Boys called me "Milkshake." I'd scream at them and go home crying, then Mom would tell me what a big problem they had. The teasing made me strong and non-judgmental because I had a mom who gave me support and comfort.

Your little girl will be OK, just as I was, but it's up to you whether she feels like a freak or not.

EARLY BLOOMER

DEAR ABBY: In response to "Desperate Mother," whose 7-year-old daughter is developing at an early age: I also had a daughter who had to wear a bra at 6 and started her menstrual period at 7. She was 5 feet tall and fully developed at 8. I was sure she would be a freak — an Amazon!

Fortunately, she was sufficiently mature mentally and emotionally to cope with her premature development.

Today she is a beautiful, intelligent, 20-year-old college student and engaged to be married. She's still 5 feet tall and has a lovely figure. Relax, Mother!

K'S MOM

DEAR ABBY: Please tell "Desperate Mother" not to push the panic button. I was 8 when I blossomed into womanhood. I was the first one in my class to wear a bra. (The other girls envied me.) My mother tried to be casual about it but I knew she was a little perturbed about my early development.

When I saw my own 7-year-old daughter develop early, it was no big deal. I told her what she needed to know as it became relevant and she handled it quite gracefully and naturally. That's what it is — natural. Her timetable is just running a little faster than the majority.

If Mother freaks out, Daughter will feel strange and "abnormal." If Mother takes it in stride, Daughter will accept her body changes for what they are — natural steps toward becoming a woman.

BEEN THERE

DEAR BEING THERE, K'S MOM AND EARLY BLOOMER: You were only three of many who wrote to offer comfort and counsel to a mother who was about to have a nervous breakdown when her 7-year-old daughter showed symptoms of premature physical development. Thank you all for writing to help a stranger. The longer I write this column, the more convinced I am that people are better than ever.

Aging Causes Thinning Bones

Having a backache or breaking a bone usually are not serious problems for most people. But they are for a large number of women over age 60.

One woman suffers from a persistent pain in her lower back; another broke her hip months ago, but it still hasn't healed. Like one-fourth of the American white female population over age 60, they have severe cases of osteoporosis or "thinning of bones."

"Part of the natural aging process is that bones become less dense," says Mrs. Marjorie Donnelly, extension nutrition specialist at North Carolina State University. "But in osteoporosis, the condition is exaggerated. The bones lose abnormally large quantities of the calcium-containing mineral that makes them strong. As a result, the bones, especially the vertebrae and hip bone, become fragile."

As the bones become less dense, they may break under stress that would not break normal bones. "Severe thinning of the bone exists long before symptomatic complaints or outward changes are observed," the specialist adds.

Drinking a minimum of two cups of milk a day will be helpful, Mrs. Donnelly points out.

It is possible to get calcium from other foods, but it's very difficult to get enough calcium without drinking some milk, the specialist adds. Equal amounts of calcium are provided by skim, whole and two percent milk, and buttermilk, cocoa and chocolate milk.

The amount of calcium in a half cup of milk is also provided by a one-inch cube of cheddar cheese, a half cup baked custard, a half cup creamy rice pudding, a half cup yogurt, three-fourths cup tomato soup made with milk, three-fourths cup ice cream or ice milk, or one cup cottage cheese.

Calcium tablets are available, but food is the best source of calcium for the body. Milk provides the nutrients such as vitamin D and phosphorus which help the body absorb calcium more efficiently; the specialist explains.

Flouride is another nutrient that seems to help calcium retention, a reason why fluoridation of public water supplies may be a good idea.

Another way to increase the efficiency of calcium absorption is by eating calcium-rich foods several times during the day rather than all at one sitting.

Some studies indicate there is greater calcium excretion when individuals are on high protein diets. Mrs. Donnelly cautions. Dieters may want to take this into consideration when making plans for weight loss.

"Although total prevention is not possible, there can be no harm in including two cups of milk or its equivalent daily in meals and snacks," Mrs. Donnelly points out. "And it may well save much pain, suffering and expense in the years to come."

Tobacco Festival Quilt Show Set Saturday

Old and new quilts will be included in the quilt show Saturday as part of the Southern Flue-Cured Tobacco Festival at the Pitt County Fairgrounds.

The show is being sponsored by the Greenville Quilters Guild and will be held from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The public attending will be invited to try their hand at quilting on a quilt displayed in a frame," said Kay Clemens, chairman of the show. She is being assisted by Beth Howard and Juanita Plueddemann.

Members of the Pamlico River Quilters Guild will also be displaying a special quilt which they have made. Carmella Hollis is their chairman and assisted by Ruth Rose.

Lap quilting will be demonstrated throughout the day. Quilts and other crafts will be available for sale.

The quilt show will be set up in the old school house in the Village of Yesteryear.

Other activities during the "Big Saturday," will be an antique car show at 11:30 a.m. Sponsored by Toyota East, Inc., approximately 40 cars will be exhibited.

The Winterville Jaycees will supervise a tractor driving contest at 2 p.m., which is being sponsored by Hendrix Barnhill. A tour of the Village of Yesteryear will be held from 2-5 p.m. Entertainment will be provided by Magnum Recording artist — Steve Douglas and Silver Street Band.

Longer School Terms?

The chairman of the State Board of Education, C.D. Spangler, may not be well known to North Carolina school children; but his name may become a household word (heartily disliked by said children, but given a grudging approval by concerned parents and grandparents) if his proposal for longer school terms is adopted.

He says American children get too many holidays and should have more than a minimum 180-day school days per year.

To quote the man: "We need to get away from the idea that you stay on vacation until Labor Day. Those countries who don't have that mind-set are developing our cars and our television sets."

Another point: "We need to work out a system to get away from the agricultural mind-set of being on vacation in the summer so children could pick cotton. They don't do that any more."

Chairman Spangler told the State Board of Education that Japan has children in school 240 days a year, and decried the situation in which other major industrialized countries have children in school much longer than we.

"Take one smart person and teach him 180 days", he said. "Take another smart person and teach him 240, and you know who's going to win the battle."

Industrially, economically and technologically, the importance of the better-educated high school grad is becoming more and more vital in our world. Mr. Spangler sees that; so do American industrial experts, the economists, and probably many in the governmental spectrum. The added opportunity for education becomes even more important to the country as a whole when one reflects on the numbers who do not go further in technical institutes, colleges or universities.

It's one more talking point for men and women aspiring to roles in the state's political arena.

New Service Seen Ahead

Dean James Bearden has done an outstanding service in bringing the East Carolina University school of business to the point where it is respected in the academic and business world.

Now he is resigning as dean of the school. His purpose, however, is not to lead a quieter life, but rather to head a project which is dear to him. He will be full-time director of the university-affiliated Branch Banking and Trust Co. Center for Management Development. BB&T has made a $250,000 grant to establish the center and it promises to be one of the exciting developments at the university during the remainder of this century.

Bearden sees the change as an opportunity of "significance to a very large constituency of the agency."

It is that. Bearden and the center will have a unique opportunity to be of service to the business and industrial community of North Carolina and the nation.

Spangler Proposal

By PAUL T. O'CONNOR
RALEIGH - If Dick Spangler gets his way, he's likely to be the most unpopular adult North Carolina school children know. Spangler, chairman of the State Board of Education, has proposed lengthening the school year from 180 to 200 days.

falling behind the educational levels of students in other parts of the world where longer school years have already been instituted. Spangler sees a longer the pros and cons, she said a longer school year might be difficult for high school students who need to work during the summer. Also, many teachers do the university work they need to get higher degrees or certification renewals during the summer.

Many North Carolina schools are not air conditioned. "I know what it's like when it's 90 degrees and children can barely pay attention because the heat is such that children become lathargic," she says. Family vacations would be squeezed into a one-month, rather than two months, period.

Still, Ms. Martin agrees with Spangler on the advantages of a longer year. "You can't deny that today there is more to be learned than ever before," she said.

A longer school year would also restore the teaching time that has been lost as teachers have been asked to perform a greater range of duties - such as feeding children their breakfasts and making minor health checks. If teachers are working 11 school year as a way to pay teachers better. "I don't think the citizens of North Carolina are going to pay teachers more without the teachers being in the classroom more," he says. Better pay, he feels, will mean that better people get into teaching and the best people remain.

Loretta Martin, president of the N.C. Association of Educators, says Spangler's proposal came as a surprise. "We've not even discussed that," she said. But pressed to list what might be some of

Just Too Close To Call

Of all the election races last week nothing compared to the governor's contest in Illinois.

On Monday I called a friend of mine at the "Chicago Sun Times" and asked him if either Jim Thompson or Adlai Stevenson had won.

"We may not know until 1984," he told me.

"How come Illinois is so late in reporting their election results?" I wanted to know.

"Because we don't like to count all our ballots on the same night. Both sides like to keep some notes in reserve in case they need them at a future date. Like if the election is too close to call. Now that enough time has elapsed, we're starting to see a lot of votes that no one knew had been cast on election night."

"I don't understand."

"Well, while I was talking to you they just put a bulletin on my desk. They just found a whole bunch of ballot boxes underneath home plate at Wrigley Field."

"Is that good for Thompson or Stevenson?"

"They don't know yet if the ballot boxes came from downstate Illinois or the Chicago precincts. Either side could have buried them there, because as the Cubs' home field it's one of the safest hiding places in Illinois."

"Then the election is still up in the air?"

"It could be for some time. They now have scuba divers looking for punch hole cards in Lake Michigan. If they can find them and dry them off we may have a better idea of how the election is going."

"I didn't know they dumped ballots in Lake Michigan."

"They do in November. The water is freezing and you really need a close election before the state will spend any money for divers to find the boxes. Wait a minute, I just got another bulletin. They found another 2,000 ballots in the Lost and Found

But most of the people who have close party affiliations prefer to leave it up to the political pros to decide when their votes should be tallied. Besides, without NFL football the governor's race is the only sport we have."

"Rumor has it in Washington that Mayor Byrne of Chicago is holding back some of her machine votes because she hates Stevenson, and is trying to make a deal with Thompson."

"We heard the same thing here," he said. "Adlai is trying to get a search warrant so his people can go into Merchandise Mart, because he heard Byrne's people had stashed away dozens of ballot boxes on the giftware floor. I just got another bulletin. They just found another 100 ballot boxes in a derailed freight car. On the Burlington Northern Railroad outside of Springfield."

"That could put Thompson over the top," I said.

"Not necessarily. Someone told me that 200 precincts that still haven't reported in are holding back their votes in the locker room of the Chicago Bears until the freight train votes are counted."

"I must say you people in Illinois have put the thrill back in political elections. Even the network exit pollsters can't predict what's going to happen in your state from one November to the next. Have they counted your vote yet?"

"I hope so. Because my cousin and I never agree on politics and I always try to cancel out his vote."

"What does your cousin have to say to that?"

"I don't know. He's been dead for 10 years."

Baggage Room at O'Hare Airport."

"I wonder how they got lost?" I said

"The airline company official might have been carrying them out of state for safekeeping, and then forgot about them."

"That's a hard story to swallow."

"It isn't if you live in Illinois. Do you know one election official at a polling booth took all her ballots home in a shopping bag. And tried to trade them for cat food coupons?"

"Don't the people out there get mad when they can't find out who their governor is going to be?"

"It doesn't bother most of us. We're used to it. Some voters like to have their ballots counted right away.

Entitled To Fair Share

By MAXWELL GLEN and CODY SHEARER
WASHINGTON - Common or not, this story may soon be an important one. A woman falls in love with a man and delays her career to put him through professional school - only to be jilted after he graduates.

Time was when friends might have counseled the victim to forget about Mr. Wonderful. But an increasing number of the forsaken are demanding legal retribution, namely a chunk of their former lover's paycheck. If the courts go along, the trend could alter the way men and women conduct their romances.

In a matter of days, the consistently-progressive New Jersey Supreme Court is expected to determine that a professional degree constitutes a form of divisible property. Lawyers for 34-year-old Bonnie Ryan are asking that her former husband, Dr. Robert Lynn, repay their client for putting him through medical school. The lawyers argue that Mr. Ryan's degree is, at best, the product of two minds and therefore jointly-owned property.

"We are asking the court to recognize that a professional education and license have a measurable value and that possessing the training that goes with them is an economic benefit," Mrs. Ryan's attorney told the Philadelphia Inquirer. "If acquired through marriage, that benefit should be divided in a divorce case."

Heretofore, most lower-court judges in the United States have held that proceeds from a professional degree don't constitute divisible property. As their reasoning goes, knowledge acquired from schooling - not the certificate or degree itself - makes someone commercially viable. Some courts, however, have compensated plaintiffs who have subsidized their lovers' professional schooling, in recognition of career time sacrificed.

If such is the future trend, there's a growing constituency for it. More couples than ever before are living together in the absence of a marriage contract. As they postpone marriage indefinitely, they are destined to become only more interdependent.

Meanwhile, with 60 percent of all women in the work force (and some of those earning respectable salaries), women are becoming economic equals, if not dominant partners, in many relationships today. If anything, women are more capable of putting a lover through professional school than they were 20 years ago. (This is not to say that males aren't footing females' school bills too. But judging from the record, it seems that women are less inclined than men to stiff their benefactors.)

In any case, personal protection may be a natural byproduct of the times. Lawyers, naturally, think so. New York's Doris Freed, a family law expert affiliated with the American Bar Association, recommends that couples, married or otherwise, enter into contracts outlining what each partner expects, particularly when it comes to graduate school.

Adds Ohio State University law professor Nancy Erickson, "I advise my female students to ask their partners to put them through graduate school first. Or, better yet, to consider going to graduate school at the same time."

Indeed, there seems to be a widespread demand for more ground rules. According to the ABA's Freed, lawyers have seen an increasing number of clients in recent months who, in anticipation of court challenges, want either pre-nuptial contracts or more specific marriage agreements. "They obviously want to protect their losses."

Strength For Today

LIBERTY

What is liberty? The dictionary defines it as "exemption from subjection to the will of another." Singularly enough, this word goes back through the Latin to the Greek and eventually to a Sanskrit word the basic idea of which is "to grow up."

Essentially, then, liberty means the opportunity to grow up.

The outstanding characteristic of human life is that we have freedom of choice. We are at liberty to choose as we confront persons, things, ideas and courses of action. We grow as a result of our choosing. If we choose evil all the time, then we grow into foolish, evil persons; if we choose goodness, we grow into goodness. Most of us never become as good as we ought to be or as bad as we could be.

Therefore, at the time of every important decision we must make during our lifetime we stand at a crossroads. Freedom - or liberty - is our God-given opportunity to grow into what we may become. - Elisha Douglass

Other Editors Say Merchant Issues

(Laurinburg Exchange)

Merchants in North Carolina have quite a few issues to think about between now and the convening of the next session of the General Assembly.

No less than 19 issues affecting merchants were mentioned by Bill Hearn, executive with the N.C. Merchants Association in Raleigh, during a speech before members of the Scotland County Merchants Association.

At least two of these issues could possibly put merchants and bankers at odds.

One of the divisive issues concerns a bill to deregulate credit cards. The bill would allow banks to make more money off the credit card business by charging higher interest rates, adding surcharges on all items purchased with cards and charging for the privilege of carrying a bank credit card. Merchants fear the added costs would inhibit buying.

Merchants and bankers are also on opposite sides over a proposed solution to the rising number of bad checks. Merchants have found that a large percent of bad checks are the first ones written on a low-balance account. To help clerks screen possible bad checks, merchants are asking that banks print the opening date of the account on each check. Banks, however, don't want to go to the trouble or expense.

It would seem to be a ripe situation for a trade-off, with the merchants agreeing to support the bank's deregulation bill in exchange for the banks agreeing to print the opening dates of accounts on checks.

But it may be more difficult for merchants to support the deregulation bill than for bankers to agree to the extra printing.

The passage of the deregulation bill could cost merchants both as businessmen and as individual consumers. It's already more of a political issue because so many merchants' customers are opposed to it.

If a deal were to be struck, it would seem the banks would have to sweeten the pot; possibly by helping the merchants on some of those other 17 issues they are concerned about.

Not Just The Defense Budget

By JOHN CUNIFF

AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) -

Martin Feldstein, chairman of the president's council of economic advisers, said it quite bluntly: Entitlement programs such as Medicare are more to blame for budget deficits than are defense expenditures.

Defense spending as a percentage of gross national product has really not grown at all, says Feldstein. In 1960, the new chairman points out, the country spent 9.1 percent of GNP on defense, but in 1982 just 6.2 percent.

Non-defense spending, including "entitlements" such as Medicare, is another matter. It's out of hand, says Feldstein, because it is based on old economic assumptions that were overly optimistic.

Conclusion: Defense spending can be increased, and what is seen as a disproportionate share of GNP that goes to non-defense outlays can be corrected, without raising taxes or abandoning commitments to the needy.

"We have deficits because as a nation we are not as rich as we thought we would be at this time," said Feldstein this week in an address to the Commercial Club of Boston, an address whose theme was the need to cut deficits.

Coming as the administration faces the task of drafting a budget for fiscal 1984, which begins next October 1, it suggests not only the continued direction of administration thinking but future budget battles with Congress.

Feldstein, former Harvard professor and head of the National Bureau of Economic Research presented this argument:

Defense spending in 1960 was nearly 50 percent higher than in 1982 as a share of gross national product. "If defense spending today accounted for as large a share of GNP as it did in 1960 or even 1970, the deficit would be significantly larger than it is today," he told the Boston audience.

Even if defense outlays are raised from the 6.2 percent in 1982 to 8 percent in 1987, as the administration program envisions, "outlays will still be about one percent of GNP below the percentage they were in 1960."

"The real reason for large and persistent budget deficits has been the rapid growth of non-defense spending," he said. According to his calculations, non-defense spending was 9.5 percent of GNP in 1960 and 17.9 in 1982.

He contended: "If non-defense spending in 1982 was still taking the same GNP share that it did in 1970, the budget would now show a substantial surplus instead of a large deficit."

Why have non-defense outlays grown so much?

"First, the speed at which many of the outlays grew was itself unintended and unanticipated," he said. Medicare, housing, nutrition and disability insurance, to name some of the entitlements, or benefits to which people deemed eligible are entitled - "grew far beyond what had been anticipated."

While entitlements grew, economic growth slowed below the 1960s rate. Between 1960 and 1967 real GNP grew at an annual rate of 4.6 percent, said Feldstein. Since then, his figures show growth at a rate of only 2.6 percent.

Had economic growth been maintained at the higher rate, he said, the 1982 budget would be in surplus instead of showing a deficit of 3.7 percent of GNP.

"We have deficits because as a nation we are not as rich as we thought we would be at this time," said Feldstein.

"I believe that if we had known then what we know now, we would never have enacted the programs and enlarged their benefits in the way that we did."

And that, stated as clearly as probably it ever has been, is how those close to White House policy view the challenge before them - and before Congress and voters and beneficiaries.

Victor Herman Tells Long Ordeal In Siberian Camps

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Victor Herman, an American held prisoner in the Soviet Union for 45 years, says he withstood the suffering to tell people about the horrors of communism, the beauties of democracy and capitalism, and Americans' responsibility to preserve their system of government and free enterprise.

He lectured in Greenville Thursday night as part of the ECU Jewish and International Festival. His Russian-born wife, Galina, accompanied him.

Now 67, Victor Herman said he was 16 years old when he went with his family to Russia to escape the Depression and work building a Ford Motor Co. plant there. He worked as a mechanic "back when cars were simple," he said, and also pursued aviation, parachute jumping, track and marksmanship for entertainment.

A newspaper story published in a Detroit newspaper in 1935 called him "The Lindbergh of Russia" and quoted a friend as saying he was, at the time, "the Soviet Union's best all-round athlete, a man with the nerve to eat an apple while free-falling from 24,000 feet and delay a parachute opening 'til he was 1,000 feet above the ground."

His daredevil life was interrupted in 1938 by the Stalin purges which began when World War II seemed imminent. All of the Ford employees who had not already left Russia were among the foreigners rounded up into Gulag forced labor camps. He spent 10 years there and underwent unspeakable torture, he says.

In 1948 he was released from the camp but was exiled to Krasnoyarsk in Siberia. There he met a young gymnast named

VICTOR AND GALINA HERMAN

Galina whom he soon married. A term of his release had been that he not marry and, consequently, he was exiled further north in Siberia to the Arctic village of Yeniseyk. Upon arriving, he was told he would not be allowed to live in the village, but would have to survive as best he could in the woods nearby. He carved a shelter out of the ice and subsisted on the rats he could catch. One day he was amazed to see his wife, Galina, and their infant daughter appear at his entrance to his shelter. Through intuition in a region larger than the United States, Galina had found him, he said. The family stayed there in their home cut out of the ice for a year. Herman's story, up to the point of his wife's finding him outside Yeniseyk, was recently told in a CBS movie titled after Herman's autobiographical book, "Coming Out of the Ice."

The next 23 years he spent detained in Russia always under surveillance, trying to reclaim his American citizenship. In 1976 he was allowed to leave the Soviet Union, but it wasn't until 1979 that his wife and two daughters were allowed to join him here.

"I used to try to tell my daughters about America," he said, "but they couldn't believe what I was telling them. It sounded so wonderful that they thought of my stories as fairy tales. Now they tell me that America is 10 times more wonderful than I told them."

"My daughters are lovely girls, now 25 and 30. They both have good jobs in the computer field and constantly take courses of study paid for by their employers. They say they'll go to school 'til they're old ladies, there's just so much they want to learn about and experience."

Mrs. Herman accompanies her husband everywhere. She speaks no English, but he says she is totally his support for whatever he feels he has to do, just as she was that day she found him in the ice. What he feels he has to do, he says, is work as hard as he can as fast as he can to get his message to the world — democracy and free enterprise are the only way; communism does not work. He also works for the release of other political prisoners behind the Iron Curtain and donates part of the profits from the sale of his books for this purpose. He says the United States has no expertise, no knowledge about how to deal with the Soviet Union. The American way is based on truth, he says; the Soviet way on lies. Soviets make agreements knowing they're not going to keep them, he said. Americans who try to deal with Russians in a context of truth find it just doesn't work. They can learn about us just by observing; we cannot learn about them because we can never know what is the truth, Herman said.

He says he thinks the inhuman, cruel period of Soviet history is over and that democracy on one level or another may again become reality. Communism has not worked, he said.

Asked what he believed will be the effect of Leonid Brezhnev's death, he said, "It will have little or no effect. Brezhnev was a leader in name only. He did very well what he was told to do."

The same powers that were no change, but a new figurehead will appear, of course."

Herman has written three books and plans several more, he says. He sells all his books himself. These include "Coming Out of the Ice," ($18); "Realities — Might and Paradox in Soviet Russia," co-written with Fred Dohrs ($20); and "The Gray People" ($10), the profits from which go to support the American-born children of parents murdered in the Gulag. All three may be ordered from Victor Herman, Box 2640, Southfield, Mich. 48037. Prices include postage and handling.

John Horne, who grew up across the street in Crawfordsville from mission specialist Joseph Allen, met about 100 other people at the local newspaper office to watch the launch.

"They're going to go, they're going to go," he repeated as his wife, Connie wiped tears from her eyes during liftoff.

"We know how much this meant to Joe, but my thoughts were with his wife, Bonnie, too," Mrs. Horner said. "She has been so supportive of Joe and I know she was very proud of him this morning."

Mrs. Allen, the former Bonnie Jo Darling, was at Cape Canaveral to watch the launch along with the relatives of the other astronauts.

Susie Clements, who Allen crowned Crawfordsville High School homecoming queen in 1955, watched at the newspaper office.

"I actually had cold chills run down my spine as he lifted off and I had a big lump in my throat," Mrs. Clements said. "We all know how dedicated Joe has been and are thrilled to see his dreams come true."

In Lorain, Ohio, Col. Robert Overmyer's aunt watched her nephew's blast into space.

"I was a little worried at first. Just this morning, I prayed again for him to help him have a successful trip," she said.

Overmyer, pilot of the Columbia, is a Lorain native, but only a few of his relatives still live in the area.

Mrs. Fabian is his aunt by marriage. His parents are deceased.

"His mom sent all us aunts a sheet of paper telling about him, with a picture, when he first became an astronaut.

Police estimated the crowd for the Kennedy Space Center liftoff at about 125,000 people — small enough that traffic didn't interfere with the local Veterans Day parade in nearby Titusville.

Shuttle Launch Chills Shared

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The liftoff of the Columbia space shuttle on its fifth mission didn't draw as many space fans to launch site as in the past, but for some particularly interested observers elsewhere it caused fears, tears and chills down the spine.

The 74-year-old mother of commander Vance Brand said she won't sleep well again until the Columbia has finished its mission and her son is safely back to Earth.

"Vance always seems anxious to go. We are anxious to have him come back," said Donna Brand, who with husband Rudy and a roomful of friends in Longmont, Colo. watched the shuttle Columbia's liftoff Thursday.

Brand, Columbia's commander, returned unconscious from the Apollo-Soyuz mission in 1975 when trouble developed at landing.

"I tried to put fear in its proper perspective and not carry it around with me all the time," his mother said.

"I just can't imagine Vance on that," she added as the Columbia took off. "It will be very nice to see them coming in."

Tight-Lipped Over Voting Fraud Probe

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Federal officials are remaining tight-lipped about an investigation into alleged voting fraud in Western North Carolina, claiming lives or investigations might be endangered if officials talked.

Robert Pence, who heads the FBI's North Carolina operations, said his office is investigating at least six allegations of voting irregularities in Western North Carolina during the Nov. 2 election. The agency has received about 30 telephone calls about alleged voting irregularities, he said.

He refused to say which counties were involved for fear of endangering the lives of sources or prompting people to destroy evidence.

Charles Brewer, U.S. attorney for Western North Carolina's Western District, said his Asheville office received about 20 such allegations. Twelve allegations involving activities such as vote-buying, absentee-ballot fraud and voter intimidation were turned over to the FBI, he said.

Brewer refused to disclose where the investigations were being conducted but said the allegations involved elections in western part of the state.

"It's too early to say whether they're going to pan out," Brewer said. "There's definitely numerous investigations going on."

Pence and Webster urged citizens to contact FBI and U.S. attorney's offices on Election Day to report possible voting irregularities.

months, the public will see them as full-time workers which could lead to support of better teacher salaries.

Gov. Jim Hunt was also surprised by Spangler's proposal but he agreed that a longer school year would mean better educated children. In his 1980 campaign, Hunt said he wanted children out of school in time to help with farm chores. That's still a concern, Hunt said. But, if a longer school year is needed, farm chores have to come after education. Spangler says the farm argument is overblown because it would affect very few children.

Spangler said the cost of a longer year won't be as great as people think because administrators are already paid for 12 months. Still, the Legislature would have to find the money in a tight budget year.

Spangler knows of no other state in the country that has a 200-day school year but that doesn't bother him. "North Carolina is not going to follow. We can be the first," he said.

remarked freely. Not surprisingly, the rush to "contract" is easier said than done. In the process of setting one's expectations down on paper, tempers are liable to flare. One New York lawyer reports that even open-minded couples have nearly come to blows while discussing contractual clauses. Lovers may in fact learn more than they'd care to while considering the legal parameters of their hopes and dreams.

Yet it's somehow fitting that couples today would confront the prospect of a long-term relationship only after responsibility for graduate school tuition bills has been resolved. Bven in love, the baby-boom generation seems determined to get what it pays for.

City Council... Hints Plan For Public Works

refuse and container trucks and street sweeper. The agreement on the rescue vehicles calls for a two-year total of $52,868 ($26,434 annually) at an annual percentage rate of 10.3. The agreement on the other vehicles calls for a five-year total of $195,987.80 ($39,197.56 annually) at an annual percentage rate of 10.49. Interest amounts to $2,468 on the rescue units and $33,845 on the other equipment.

Cox said the city hopes eventually to establish a capital improvements fund to handle equipment purchases that would eliminate the necessity for lease-purchase arrangements.

In other business, the council approved a request by Jimmy Hughes, vice president of BMR Inc., for renewal of a special use permit to operate Papa Katz, a private club located on River Bluff Road off N.C. 33.

It was pointed out that complaints were received during the summer regarding noise from outside activities at the club but Hughes informed the board that the club no longer will have any activities outside. He said that an outside deck has been removed.

Ron Sewell, director of engineering and inspections, said the club has corrected most of the discrepancies listed following an inspection of the facility and he said an extension has been granted to complete the correction work.

Cox expressed concern that all of the items listed by the building inspector had not been taken care of.

The club is located on property zoned for highway commercial usage and Sewell said the use meets the requirements of the ordinance.

Following a public hearing, the council adopted a resolution authorizing the exchange of city-owned property in the Pactolus Township with property owned by Worthington Farms Inc., also located in the Pactolus Township. Charles Horne, director of Greenville Utilities, said the Worthington parcel was needed in order for GUC to have access to the Tarr River for the proposed waste water treatment plant.

Other council action included:

- Concurred in a resolution adopted by the Community Appearance Commission calling for the council to apply for status as an "All American City," and authorized the city staff to work with CAC representative John Bizzell in pursuing the project;

- Approved a lease agreement for the use of the vacant Winn-Dixie building on Greenville Boulevard as a training facility for police employees, at a lease cost of $1 per month, with option by either party to terminate the lease on a 10-day notice (Winn-Dixie has informed the city that it is attempting to find a suitable paying tenant for the property);

- Adopted a resolution supporting the idea that all of Pitt County be served by local telephone service;

- Adopted a resolution concurring with Stewart Sandwiches Inc. of Norfolk on the company's intent to issue revenue bonds in order to finance the cost of a micro-computer system;

- Continued action on an amendment to the Animal Control Ordinance and scheduled a public hearing on the amendment for the December meeting;

- Adopted a resolution ordering the closing of a portion of Powell Street, between East Gum Road and Church Street;

- Accepted Landmark Street, from Greenville Boulevard, southerly some 760 feet to the end of curb and gutter pavement, and Eric Court, from Brownlea Drive to the end of the cul-de-sac, for permanent maintenance by the city;

- Approved a 25 percent rate increase in the city's self-insured hospitalization program, effective Dec. 1, with the city and employees continuing to share premiums on family coverages and the city paying over half of the parent-child hospitalization coverage;

- Approved the reappointment of Councilman Louis Clark as a representative on the Mid-East Commission board;

- Approved an agreement with the N.C. Department of Transportation for required reinspection of bridges on the municipal street system; and

- Appointed Mrs. Acolia Simon Thomas and Mrs. Lilly Reid to three-year terms on the Sheppard Memorial Library Board, succeeding James Ebron Jr. and Francis Mebane Jr., who served two terms.

Ms. Meeks said the city has been notified that its application for second year funding under the community development small cities program has been approved, amounting to approximately $1 million for Phase 2 of the South Evans Project.

Councilwoman Janice Buck read a statement into the minutes of the meeting. She said she was unable to attend a special call meeting of the board on Oct. 25, when the agenda included consideration of word processor-microcomputer bids.

Mrs. Buck said, "I was especially interested in the decision due to my previous experiences in this area. My earlier request for a delay in considering the proposals for the purpose of clarifying the bids was not mentioned during this meeting. After presentation of the proposals and upon recommendation of the staff, the council agreed by majority vote to accept a bid of $62,000 for four word processor-microcomputer units produced by Lanier. Only one unit (at $7,000) was approved as part of the 1982-83 city budget."

She added, "My purpose in making this statement tonight is to point out that while I believe in supporting decisions of a governing body, I would not have been supportive of this decision at the time it was made."

Mrs. Buck said, "This decision represents an increase in administrative expenses in a year when the council had previously been able only to approve a 'maintenance' budget and the $7,000 capital expense. I find it difficult to justify the increased expense to the community in light of current economic conditions and the information made available to me prior to the final decision."

Cox said the council took the staff's request for the four units seriously and he said that, after careful study, it was pointed out that in order to make the system work, four units would be needed. He said a study committee backed the purchase and, to justify the cost, the city was eliminating one secretarial position. The mayor said all of the information was explained at the Oct. 25 meeting and the council members in attendance voted to support the purchase.

Clark said he still supports the council's decision and Councilmen George Pugh and William Hadden said they feel the system will save the city money in the long run.

Ms. Meeks reported at the Oct. 25 meeting that funds are in the present budget for a lease purchase payment this year on the equipment and she said she did not anticipate any problems with funding the payment in the next fiscal year.

WASHINGTON (AP) - In major post-election shifts, President Reagan is hinting he will propose a job-creating public works program financed with higher gasoline taxes, and reduce his record military budget.

Reagan said Thursday night he is giving "deep thought" to a plan to rebuild the nation's transportation system - and create 320,000 jobs in the process - with a 5-cents-a-gallon rise in the federal gasoline tax. The tax is now 4 cents a gallon.

Thus, he backed away from his previous hard-line stands against tax increases and government "make-work" programs.

Reagan justified his consideration of the plan by saying that job creation is not the main objective of the program, and by calling the gasoline levy a "user fee," not a tax.

Nevertheless, his comments at a nationally televised news conference suggested he is open to some alteration of his economic policy course in the wake of Democratic gains in last week's congressional elections, a continued rise in unemployment and mounting calls from congressional Democrats and Republicans for a federal jobs program.

At his last news conference six weeks ago, the president said it would take "a palace coup" for him to support new tax increases and he scorned public works projects as "artificial programs that make for dead end and temporary jobs" and only delay economic recovery.

In another policy change Thursday night, the president said he would look for savings in the new military budget he will send Congress next year, provided the cuts do not delay his plans for closing the weapons edge that he contended is held by the Soviet Union.

"We're looking at everything," he said. "I would have to say that, yes, if there are savings that can be made without delaying or setting back what we think is the improvement we must have if we are going to close that window of vulnerability (to Soviet military superiority)."

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes insisted today that, despite what Reagan said last night, the president remains firmly committed to increasing defense spending by 7 percent a year after discounting for inflation.

"I don't expect him to back down one iota," said Speakes, adding that Reagan will continue to look for ways to save money in the Defense Department by more efficient management.

Reagan did not alter his position on Social Security, however. He pledged he would do nothing to cut present benefits of people now retired, raised the possibility of changes in benefits for future retirees and spoke against raising the retirement system's payroll taxes beyond previously scheduled increases as a way to restore it to solvency.

Both parties in Congress favor some type of jobs program to combat unemployment, which rose from 10.1 percent in September to 10.4 percent last month. The Democrats, however, are pushing a more ambitious plan than the one Reagan is considering.

Rep. Henry S. Reuss, D-Wis., chairman of the Congressional Joint Economic Committee, is proposing a $3.6 billion program that would create 600,000 public works jobs in communities hardest hit by unemployment. Reuss would finance the plan with money Reagan is now earmarking for defense.

The Republican plan, promoted by Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis, would raise $5.5 billion a year, with the primary purpose of rebuilding crumbling highways and bridges and aiding mass transit systems most in need. But the secondary effect of the program, job creation, has not been lost to the administration.

Members of Congress from both parties also are pressing Reagan to scale back the record military build-up plan he has drafted for fiscal 1984 to cut the unprecedented budget deficits the government faces - more than $150 billion a year in 1983 and 1984, by most estimates.

Reagan said Lewis proposed the transportation rebuilding program just the day before. "No decision has been made," he said, but added that "it is under consultation and deep thought by all of us."

"I don't view this proposal as, let's say, a job-creating program, although, obviously, there would be jobs created by going forward with that effort," he said.

"But what we're talking about here is... if we do it, it would be a user fee. It would be dedicated to rebuilding our highways and bridges," he added. "This is a problem that must be met sooner or later."

At his Sept. 28 news conference, by contrast, Reagan was asked if he could flatly rule out any tax increases, specifically an increase in the gasoline tax.

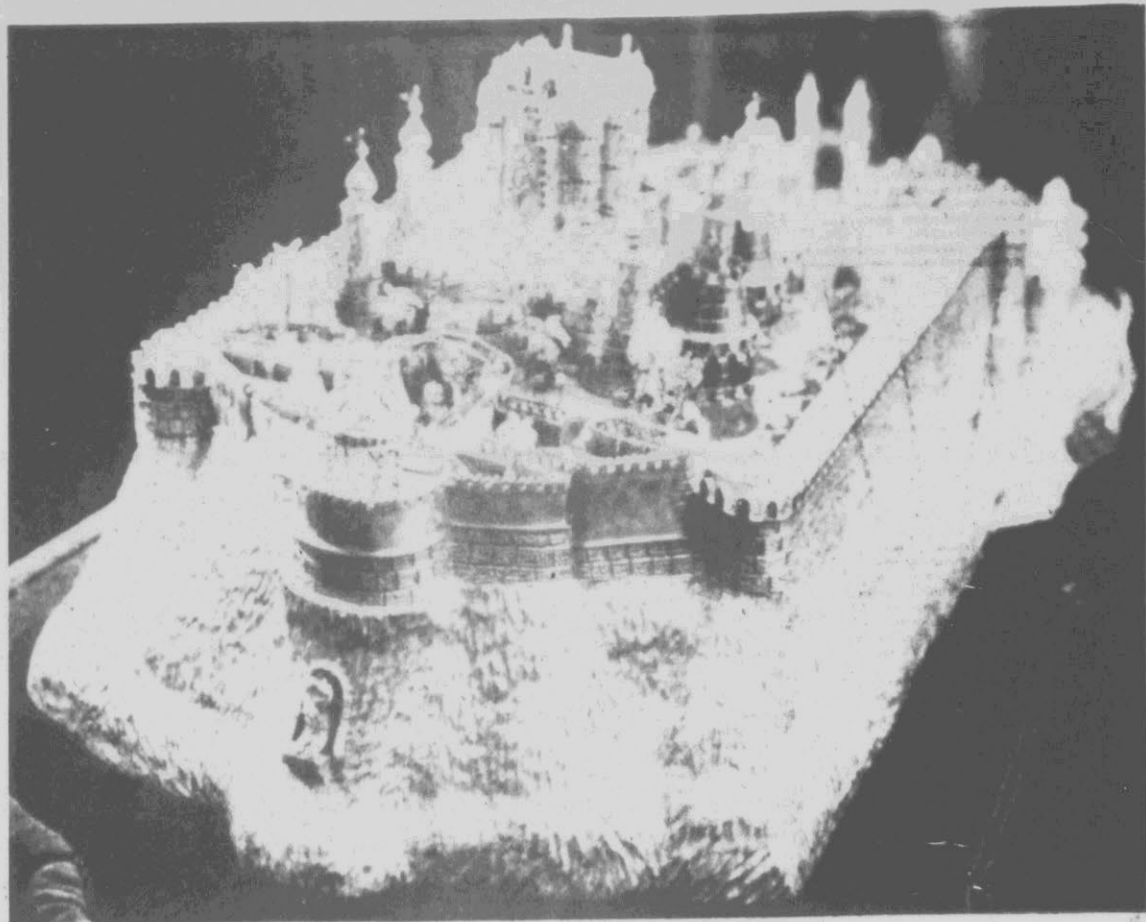

"Unless there's a palace coup and I'm overthrown or overthrown, no, I don't see the necessity for that."

On Thursday night, Reagan insisted he remains adamantly opposed to the types of public works programs sponsored by Democrats in the past. He said he will not return "to things that have been tried before in previous recessions, namely make-work job programs with the government taking billions of dollars out of the private sector to spend on these projects."

He said the government has spent $66 billion on jobs programs over the past seven years, yet unemployment has continued to climb. "We're not going to go down the dead-end street that just leaves us set up for another recession," he added.

Contending his administration is "on the right course," Reagan said "we can't resolve the problem and really do what is right for the unemployed unless we make the economy sound, expand the economy, and thus create the jobs that we must have."

Asked if he thought the unemployment rate, now at a 42-year high, would climb higher, he said, "It could possibly go up some more. It could go the other way or it could stay level."

Paleontologist Leakey Says Rich New Fossil Site Found

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) - Paleontologist Richard E. Leakey has announced the discovery of new fossils that he said may contain the bones of distant ancestors of man.

Leakey, an internationally known specialist on human origins and director of Kenya's National Museums, called the find "a tremendously important turning point in our science." He told a news conference Thursday it would help fill in the story of evolution as it occurred 14 to 15 million years ago.

The 20 fossil fragments - mostly teeth and jawbones - were discovered in Kenya's Samburu Hills on the eastern edge of the Great Rift Valley on Oct. 15, the last day of three months of field work by a joint team from Japan's Osaka University and the National Museums.

"Other material like this has been found, but never in this quantity," Leakey told the news conference at which he displayed some of the fossils. "That's really the importance of this, because with the quantity there's the potential for getting the component parts that will tell us what it is."

Leakey and Dr. Martin Pickford of the museum staff, who found the new site near the Rift Valley town of Maralal, said it was too early to determine whether the fossils are of an ancestor of contemporary apes or of man.

They said the new finds are similar to fossils found in 1934 in Pakistan and others discovered at Fort Ternan in western Kenya in 1961 by Leakey's late father, Louis B. Leakey.

The Pakistan fossils, between 8 and 9 million years old, and the Fort Ternan fossils, about 14 million years old, are the remains of a creature dubbed "Ramapithecus."

Louis Leakey originally named his find "Kenyanthropus," but other scientists accused him of nationalism and the name died out in writings on paleontology. Richard Leakey said fossils from Samburu could bring back the name.

"Dr. Pickford's discovery of this site... suggests that Kenyanthropus is almost certainly distinct from the Asiatic form, but quite similar," Leakey said.

"I can't tell you at the moment whether Kenyanthropus is going to turn out to be a four-legged ape or an incipient hominid (man-like creature). But I can tell you we've now got the site, finally, where we're going to get the evidence to answer that question."

The new fossils have been dated from geological strata in that area at about 15 million years old, still long before the appearance of upright two-legged creatures generally considered human.

Leakey and other paleontologists have placed the origin of man between 3 million and 4 million years ago in East Africa, which has been called the "Cradle of Mankind."

The Kenyan-Japanese team has been working off and on in the sweltering Samburu Hills since 1980.

On Aug. 31, Leakey and Dr. Hidemi Ishida of Osaka University announced the discovery at a separate site of a fossilized jawbone of an early ancestor of man believed to be around 8 million years old.

Ishida plans to return to the Samburu Hills in 1984 to conduct extensive work at the sites, Leakey said.

Social Security Panel Meeting

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL

Associated Press Writer
ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) — As a blue-ribbon panel sifts through dozens of proposals to rescue the financially ailing Social Security system, President Reagan is indicating he does not think higher payroll taxes should be one of them.

The president, at his nationally televised news conference Thursday night, said, "I don't think there's very much more room" to raise the payroll tax.

And he again promised that no one, "especially me ... is going to support any program for restoring fiscal solvency that reduces the checks below the level that the present beneficiaries are getting."

But he suggested there are "a number of opportunities" for reforms, including changes in the benefits of people who are now "paying in and are a long way from collecting."

The National Commission on Social Security Reform was meeting for the second day today in this city just outside Washington. The first order of business was to discuss its staff's laundry list of nearly 100 options to reduce the system's deficit, estimated to be $150 billion to $200 billion over the next seven years.

They will also decide whether to recommend taking Social Security out of the federal budget.

On Thursday, the panel of Democrats and Republicans agreed unanimously on the size of the deficit in the old age and disability funds in the 1980s and that the long-range deficit amounts to 1.8 percent of the taxable payroll.

To balance the books, the system needs to take in about 15 percent more revenue or reduce its expenditures by a like amount over the next 75 years.

The 15 commission members attended a private dinner Thursday night, and Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., said they would likely discuss on an informal basis ways to fix the Social Security system.

"I think we're going to be visiting around tonight, a lot of us, seeing if there's some common ground on some area, everybody give and take a little bit," he said. "I'm very willing to vote for a specific proposal. But I'd want some assurance that it was going to be a 13-to-2 vote or something in that neighborhood."

One way to wipe out the deficit would be to raise the combined Social Security payroll tax by 1.82 percentage points. Workers and their employers each now pay 6.7 percent for a total of 13.4 percent, part of which pays for Medicare.

Most of the 15 members seemed to favor the idea of removing Social Security from the federal budget, if only to blunt the charge that Reagan or anyone else was trying to balance the budget on the backs of the elderly.

Former Social Security

Commissioner Robert M. Ball and other Democrats on the panel favor a speed-up in payroll tax hikes to generate more cash for the system.

Ball wants to cushion that with a new, offsetting income tax credit for workers' contributions to Social Security. Alan Greenspan, the economist who chairs the panel, said it should recommend some type of "fail-safe mechanism" for Social Security. "Even if we don't agree on its details, we might agree one is necessary," he said.

Also, he said his proposal to limit cost-of-living raises to the increase in workers' average wages minus 1.5 percentage points would help stabilize the system. Benefits now rise in lockstep with consumer prices, while revenues rise only as fast as workers' wages.

Ball told reporters that allowing Social Security to borrow from the Treasury if it gets in a bind would be a good fail-safe mechanism.

Conservatives on the panel are expected to insist on changes to modify cost-of-living increases and other benefit adjustments as their price for going along with any increase in Social Security taxes.

Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., and other liberals were expected to fight any retrenchment in benefits. Pepper said the commission should urge Congress to assure the public "that we are going to maintain ... the level of benefits that prevails at the present time."

But Rep. Bill Archer, R-Texas, "If you had to go today and say to the American people, 'Pay a 30 percent payroll tax because we've assured the people they're going to get all of these benefits,' I suspect you would not get that through the Congress."

Five hundred people filled a hotel ballroom to listen to the committee's deliberations. About 50 members of the Gray Panthers marched outside chanting, "No Ifs, No Ands, No Buts, No Cost-Of-Living Cuts," and "Reagan, Reagan, You Can't Hide, The American People Are On Our Side."

Russell Jones of 111 Heritage Drive, tends his plants against the fall frost. Jones takes care of his flowers to stay busy and beautify his neighborhood while in remission from a cancer that left him bedridden earlier this year. He says that a will to live and physical activity are of prime importance when recovering from any debilitating illness.

Club Hears Fund-Raising Day For Jamie Is Held

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — The National Congression Club's clout and reputation were not overly damaged by this month's elections, according to Sen. John East, R-N.C.

The club "obviously has had a significant impact on politics in this state," East said Thursday. However, he said "national currents affected North Carolina politics" more than the club's influence.

The club, the political organization of Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., aided East's 1980 campaign for the Senate, but the seven Republicans it supported in the Nov. 2 elections were defeated.

East said the club's influence was not hurt by the defeats.

"I suppose, to the rank and file voter in this state, it's inconsequential," he said.

East described the club as a non-partisan, grassroots organization that holds little sway in how a voter chooses a candidate.

He was in Durham on Veteran's Day to present an American flag to Hillhaven Rehabilitation Center.

ATTENDS CLINIC

The Rev. R. Martin Armstrong III of Greenville was one of 84 ministers and laypeople attending the Evangelism Explosion III International Leadership Clinic held last week in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. He is a minister at Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church.

BOSTON (AP) — Residents of Bridgewater lined up bake sales, a pancake breakfast, car washes and a road race today to raise money for an 11-month-old neighbor, liver transplant patient Jamie Fiske.

Gov. Edward King has declared today "Jamie Fiske Day" in Massachusetts in honor of the baby girl whose plight received national attention.

Jamie, who had suffered a fatal liver disease, is recuperating in Minneapolis after receiving a new liver from a Utah baby. Insurance covers most of the cost of the $60,000 transplant, but there are other expenses, such as an $8,000 bill to rent the jet that flew the donated liver to Minneapolis.

Jamie's father, Charles, said Thursday in a telephone interview that his daughter was "awake and alert" and relying less on the respirator that has helped her breathe since the Nov. 5 operation.

"At first, the respirator does all the work. Then when you're a little stronger, they turn it down and you do a little bit of work. Then it gets to be 50-50 and then it's just there as backup in case of emergency," Fiske said of the progress his daughter is expected to make in breathing on her own.

He also said Jamie has begun to recognize her parents for the first time since the operation.

"She looks great. She is opening her eyes, focusing and smiling to her dad," Nancy Goedeke, a spokeswoman for the University of Minnesota Hospitals, said Thursday.

Jamie received the liver of a 10-month-old boy who received fatal injuries in a car-train accident Nov. 3. The operation took six hours.

If You Have a Habit Of Following The Crowd, We Suggest, The Best Crowd to Follow is the Crowd Going To Church

A Spiritual Ferment In Russia

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - A woman of grace, charm and stouthearted faith, Natalya Solzhenitsyn says Soviet attempts to stamp out religion have produced instead a spiritual ferment resembling the ancient origins of Christianity.

"The persecution has brought people to such a spirit of confession that has not existed since the first century," she says. "Faith has not been conquered. It has not died in Russia."

Mrs. Solzhenitsyn, wife of the exiled Russian writer Alexander Solzhenitsyn, spoke at a dinner marking the 20th anniversary of a documentary journal, Religion in Communist Dominated Areas.

She also met later with reporters at headquarters of the National Council of Churches, saying the religious stirrings in the Soviet Union are not yet a full-orbed renaissance and face intensified official reprisals, but she added:

"There are many signs of confession of faith, very joyous signs. There has been a drastic increase in the number of baptisms. Even the Soviet press admits 70 percent of the children are baptized.

"Lenin would be turning over in his grave on account of such statistics."

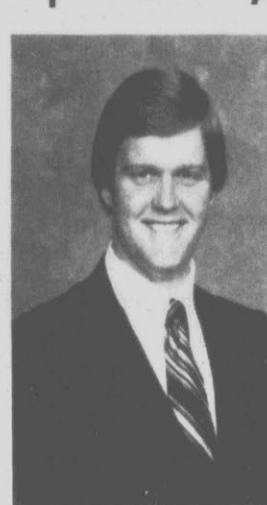

"Conversions take place in various parts of Soviet society," she said. "Not only among simple people, but in the Soviet bureaucracy. The conversions have no political character. People are simply looking for spiritual values."

She said Soviet authorities "see great danger in the movement" and have stepped up anti-religious propaganda along with "increasing incidents of searches and arrests."

"The authorities fear a national religious revitalization," she said, seeing in it a basic challenge to their own power. "The Soviet system still is struggling in its fight against God."

"The authorities are right in their fears. I do not see any other movement of any serious resistance. This opposition is passive, but those who convert do not serve

Revival To Open Sunday

REV. FERRELL HARDISON

BLACK JACK - Revival services will be held at Black Jack Pentecostal Free Will Baptist Church Sunday through Friday with the Rev. Ferrell Hardison as the guest speaker. His wife, Millie, will sing each evening.

The Sunday service will begin at 7 p.m.; the weeknight services at 7:30. Harrison is pastor of Pine Level Pentecostal F.W.B. Church and is a graduate of Heritage Bible College. He has a radio and television ministry.

Other singers, including the adult church choir, will be featured.

Quarterly Meet Over Weekend

A quarterly meeting will be observed at Haddock Chapel this weekend. The following services will be held:

Saturday - the pastor and congregation of Union Grove Church will be in charge of a 7:30 p.m. service. Sunday - Sunday school at 9:45 a.m.; morning worship at 11 a.m. with the pastor of the church, the senior choir ushers in charge; dinner at 2 p.m., followed by a 3 p.m. service in which the Rev. Tyrone Turnage, the choir, ushers and congregation of Little Creek Church will be in charge.

PASTOR'S ANNIVERSARY

The eighth anniversary of the Rev. Clifton Gardner, pastor of Selvia Chapel Free Will Baptist Church, will start Monday at 7:30 p.m.

Guest ministers and churches for the week are: Monday, the Rev. J.B. Taylor and Corey's Church; Tuesday, the Rev. Linwood Moring and the Rev. James Wright and Cedar Grove at 3 p.m.

Bishop J. Floyd Williams Returning To Greenville

Bishop J. Floyd Williams of Oklahoma City, Former General Superintendent Of The Pentecostal Holiness Church, Will Be The Featured Speaker For Five Revival Services.

November 14 - 17
Saint Paul Pentecostal Holiness Church
Highway 33 East of Greenville

Sunday Services: 11:00 A.M.
And 7:00 P.M. Monday Through Wednesday
Services: 7:30 Nightly.

Pastor Maurice Phelps Invites The Public To Hear One Of The World's Most Renowned Preachers Of This Generation As He Ministers In Each Service. A Time Of Praise And Worship Will Be Featured Nightly With Special Music In Each Service.

"have increased dramatically."

"The leaders are enslaved to their ideology, even more enslaved than those they have imprisoned," Mrs. Solzhenitsyn said. "Their only goal is to preserve their power - a demonic goal."

Recalling Jesus' admonition not to fear those who kill the body but rather those who kill the soul, she said the Russian religious protest is against those who seek to "kill both body and soul."

"The communist regime claims power not only over the body but over the soul," she said, detailing the restrictions against religious classes for children, religious literature or any religious meetings outside registered churches.

She described how as a child, her family would draw the window blinds for prayers, and how, when she was a young mathematics teacher at the University of Moscow, it cost her a full month's salary for a copy of the New Testament.

She said that when she and her husband were exiled in 1974, initially to Switzerland, they came across a copy of the journal, Religion in Communist Dominated Areas, which convinced them the west understood the Soviet situation.

"But we've come to realize that the West understands very little," she said, adding that those who compile the journal and who follow its disclosures are "a very small flock."

The journal for 20 years has been edited by the Rev. Blahoslav Hruby, a Czech-born, former OSS officer with secret sources throughout the Soviet orbit. His wife, Olga, does the translating of documents from Russian.

Richard T. Davies, a retired U.S. foreign service officer who spent 25 years at posts in Eastern Europe, including seven years as ambassador to Poland, is the new board chairman of the journal's sponsoring agency.

That is the Research Center for Religion and Human Rights in Closed Societies.

Both Davies and Mrs. Solzhenitsyn praised the Hrubys for keeping the documentary journal going against heavy odds, largely through their own efforts, in faith that, as Jesus said, the truth will make humanity free.

ANNIVERSARY
The New Deliverance F.W.B. Church of Grifton will hold its junior and senior ushers anniversary celebration Sunday at 2:30 p.m. The program will feature The New Deliverance Youth Choir and the Rouse Chapel Youth Choir. Rev. J. L. Wilson invites the public to attend.

Poultry
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) (NCDA) - The North Carolina f.o.b. dock broiler market was steady. Supply light to moderate. Demand seasonally moderate. Weights desirable. The dock weighted average price is 39.24 per pound next week for small purchases of sized plant-grade broilers picked up at processing plants. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina today was 1,293,000.

Hens
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) (NCDA) - The North Carolina hen market was steady with a steady undertone. Supplies adequate. Demand moderate. Prices paid per pound for hens over seven pounds at farm for Wednesday, Thursday and Friday slaughter was 22 cents.

NEW YORK (AP) - Stock prices were mixed today in another session of wide fluctuations. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off 10 points at 11 a.m., cut its loss to 2.85, at 1,051.88, by noon.

Advances held an 8-7 lead over declines in the broad tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues. In eight of the nine previous sessions, the Dow Jones industrials have shown net changes of at least 10 points - five of them gains, the other three losses.

Analysts said the market's zig-zag pattern stemmed from alternating waves of profit-taking and buying by traders attracted by the market's sharp rise since late summer.

Thursday's rally was touched off by a Wall Street official's statement that chances appeared "fairly good" for passage of a bill to shorten the capital gains holding period for favorable tax treatment from 12 to six months.

But there was little carryover of buying today, and sellers once again gained the upper hand. General Foods led the active list, down 1/4 at 44 1/2. A 2.31 million-share block traded at 44 1/2.

The NYSE's composite index fell .28 to 81.48. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .80 at 341.05.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 46.52 million shares at noon, against 33.40 million at the same point Thursday.

Walesa Release Order Is Signed

By THOMAS W. NETTER
 Associated Press Writer
WARSAW, Poland (AP) - Martial law authorities have signed an order for release of Solidarity chief Lech Walesa and said he will leave the remote villa where he has been held for 11 months on Saturday, a reliable source reported today.

The unofficial source, who requested anonymity, said Walesa was expected to be brought to his home in Gdansk by Sunday for a reunion with his wife and seven children.

A government source said Walesa would leave the government resort of Arlamow, the woody, hilly area near the Polish-Soviet border, on Saturday and taken directly to Gdansk. The source, an aide to a top official, requested anonymity.

Reports that Walesa had already been set free swept the capital today, but the Justice Ministry spokesmen denied them, saying "it is not true that Walesa has already been freed."

"The order of internment has been lifted, but that does not mean it has begun to function in his place of internment," an Interior Ministry spokesman said.

Officials refused to say on the record precisely when Walesa would leave Arlamow or how he would be taken to Gdansk where his wife, Danuta, is awaiting him.

Technically, Walesa could be considered a free man from the moment Interior Minister Czeslaw Kiszczak ordered his release which was announced Wednesday by government spokesman Jerzy Urban.

In announcing that Walesa would be freed, Urban skirted a reporter's question about whether the 39-year-old labor leader would be forced into exile.

"Walesa has not expressed his intentions to leave the country, but I can add that his passport is at his disposal at any moment," Urban told foreign reporters at a hastily called news conference Thursday.

Word of Walesa's impending release was the latest in a string of events indicating martial law chief Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski is now confident of control in this nation of 36 million people.

The government and the influential Roman Catholic Church announced Monday that Pope John Paul II will pay a second visit to his homeland next June.

On Wednesday, Solidarity's second bid to stir nationwide protests over its Oct. 8 outlawing fizzled when only about 2,000 of the Poland's 13 million workers reportedly attempted to strike.

Urban did not link either development to the decision to free Walesa.

He said Walesa offered to cooperate with the military government but added that "no conditions were put to Walesa concerning his release."

The news spread quickly. An estimated 6,000 demonstrators in Warsaw and 2,000 in Krakow rallied to mark Poland's re-emergence as an independent state after World War I and chanted "Walesa is free!" and "Solidarity, Solidarity!"

Police broke up the crowd with tear gas.

Carney
WASHINGTON, D.C. - Mr. Kenneth Carney, 37, died Monday at D.C. General Hospital. Funeral services will be conducted Sunday at 2 p.m. at Medley Chapel CME Church in Bethel by the Rev. Don C. Morgan, pastor, and the Rev. Ernest R. McNair. Burial will follow in the Brown Hill Cemetery.

Mr. Carney spent most of his life in Pitt County and had made his home in Washington, D.C., for the past few years. He joined the Medley Chapel Church at an early age.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Eva Gray Carney; one daughter, Pamela Carney; four sons, Kenneth Carney Jr., Marcus Carney and Timothy Carney, all of Greenville, and Kenneth Harper of Washington, D.C.; his parents, Mrs. Mary Ebron Harp of Greenville and Richard Carney Jr. of Durham; his step-parents, Elester Harp of Greenville and Mrs. Roxy Carney of Durham; two sisters, Mrs.

she visited him last month. The news about Walesa came several hours after announcement of the death of Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev. There was no immediate indication how Moscow's first change in leadership in 18 years would affect this Soviet bloc nation.

Walesa became the leader of the Soviet bloc's first independent labor movement and a hero in the West during worker unrest that rocked Poland three summers ago. The economy-crippling strikes won legalization for Solidarity, which claimed about 10 million members.

Urban said that after interviewing Walesa in Arlamow, Kiszczak decided he "is not so dangerous any longer that he would have to be held in internment."

Walesa previously refused to come to terms with the government. Mrs. Walesa said he was still defiant when

Pirates Seek Revenge Against Tribe

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
Chris Garrity might be gone, but William & Mary's aerial attack is still just as potent as the one that handed East

Carolina's Pirates a 31-21 upset loss last year — preventing the Bucs from having a winning season in Ed Emory's second year as head coach. Saturday afternoon in Williamsburg, those Indians will be trying to do the same thing — keep the Pirates from sewing up a winning season — with the two meet in a 1:30 p.m. football game.

Garrity and company launched the ball into the air 45 times last season, and Emory said he wouldn't be surprised if the Indians put it up over 50 times this Saturday.

"They've got a football team much like Texas-Arlington," Emory said. "They were picked to have their best year in history. They had ten defensive and eight offensive starters back along with 38 lettermen. They had two quarterbacks they felt were effective; they had speed at running back, and they had two good receivers returning."

However, things have not worked out well for the Indians, who have won but two times in nine games.

"Where they lost it, I don't know," Emory said. "But they are capable of beating anyone on their schedule. And they've been healthy throughout all this."

The Indians opened up with a 35-17 loss to Miami of Ohio then downed Virginia Military, 24-12. Virginia Tech, however, stomped them, 47-3, the next weekend, and Rutgers followed with a 27-17 victory.

William & Mary won its second the following Saturday against Dartmouth, 24-16, but has lost its last four in a row: to Navy, 39-3; to James Madison, 24-18; to Delaware, 62-21; and to Brown, 23-22. The Indians close out their season next weekend at Richmond.

"One thing I know about them for sure," Emory said. "They do best what we do worst. They are a great passing team. They run delays, screens, draws and underneath cuts. And what we do worst is pass defense."

Reportedly, the Indians use a two-quarterback system. They bring in starter Stan Yagiello and follow him with Dave Murphy. "I've been told they throw Yagiello until his arm falls off, then bring in Murphy and keep it going," Emory said.

A glance at the Indian stats would seem to bear that out. In their nine games to date, the Tribe has put the ball into the air 363 times. Yagiello has hit on 131 of 225 for 1,472 yards. He's had 5 touchdowns and 12 interceptions. Murphy has connected on 84 of 138 passes for 908 yards, 4 TDs and 5 interceptions.

In contrast, the Indians have been reluctant to run the ball it would seem. They've rushed only 268 times for 766 yards, led by tailback Jeff Powell. He's carried 70 times for 277 yards. Only two other rushers have as many as much as 100 yards. They're Bernie Marrazzo (37 for 150), and Dave Scanlon (50 for 236).

Top receivers are split end Jeff Sanders (48 for 650), wide receiver Kurt Wrigley (45 for 719), tight end Glenn Bodnar (27 for 272), Powell (21 for 149) and Marrazzo (20 for 135).

The leading scorer for the Indians is placekicker Brian Morris with 16 of 16 PATs, and 7 of 11 field goals.

Emory doesn't feel that the Pirates will have a great deal of difficulty in getting up for the game. "Our incentive should be great. They kept us from a winning season last year when we should have been ready to play. That should be all the motivation we need for this year. They were ready and committed to the passing game and never slowed down. We had 500 yards in total offense and still got beat because of fumbles (the Pirates lost two critical ones going in for scores).

"That 5-6 (record last year) will stay with the history of East Carolina forever. It don't erase. If we'd been 6-5 instead of 5-6, the program would have made a big jump. We needed to have a winning season and we still need it. We can do it Saturday." One thing the Pirates do not want to see for sure — another "Hail, Mary" pass by the Indian quarterback at the end of the first half. Last year, Garrity's pass to Sanders on the final play of the half staked the Indians to a 17-7 halftime lead — and eventually led to the Tribe's win.

Goldsboro Team Relies On Defense To Win 'Em

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Gerald Wisenhunt, the 18-year-veteran coach of the Goldsboro Cougars is happy to be in the Division II playoffs, thank you. And he's hopeful that come next weekend, his team will be taking a trip to the western part of the state.

"I'm disappointed that we can't be the real state champion," he said, "but we're looking at it (the Division II playoffs) as a college team would if invited to a bowl game. It's a chance to earn extra prestige for us."

"We're no worse than a lot of the other second place teams that are in the Division I playoffs, but it just wasn't our year."

Wisenhunt said that he is excited about the prospects of continuing play, "even if I'm the only one." He was speaking in reference to a number of coaches who have expressed disappointment in the Division II playoff system. "I know that a lot of people are calling it the runner-up bowl, but it's still a chance to play, and I'm sure that there are other teams that would like to be in our place."

The Cougars, despite a 7-3 record, had their problems on offense this year, and Wisenhunt says that a third-quarter injury to the starting quarterback has a lot of do with that. Starter Tim Warren, a 6-1, 198-pound junior, broke his ankle in the second quarter of the game against Rocky Mount — eventually lost by Goldsboro, 9-6. "He had been a pretty dominate force in our first two games," the coach said. "He has a strong arm and had scored both of our touchdowns against Kinston the week before. He's an overall good athlete. But then we had to take our starting defensive halfback and move him to quarterback. He's done well, but he's still not as good as our starter was."

Wisenhunt also says Goldsboro has no outstanding runner in the backfield. "You've got to have at least one good running back to have a good offense. Our offensive line is relatively inexperienced, too, and are not real big. We had some receiver problems, too. We had one starting end break his hand a couple of weeks ago, and we dropped the other end off the team about the same time."

But while the offense has been experiencing its problems, the defense has been the jewel of the team, holding opponents to less than 130 yards a game, and not giving up double figures all season long.

In fact, the Cougars have a 15-game streak of not allowing more than nine points by their opponents.

"I really don't feel like our defense, man-for-man, is as good as the team we had a year ago," Wisenhunt said. "but things have worked out well. I don't really think, either, that we've faced a real explosive team on offense. Even Jacksonville was struggling with their offense when we played them. They've gotten in all together since then."

Nevertheless, the Cougars appear to be a solid team on defense.

"I'm really worried to death (about Rose). I don't know a lot about them, but I do know that they do have great skill people, and their speed is outstanding. With guys like their flanker (Edward) Frazier and their tailback (Donnell) Lee, and their passing ability, they could break the big play on us. We've been fortunate in not allowing the big play, but I don't know if we've seen their speed before. One or two big plays, and we're out of it."

But Wisenhunt does feel that breaks will probably decide the game. "It all depends on when and where they occur in the game."

Kickoff is 8 p.m. tonight in Ficklen Stadium.

Viking, Jaguar Coaches See Contest Differently

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer
D.H. Conley and Farmville Central each played — and were beaten by — Havelock and Ayden-Grifton this year, but their coaches disagree on who will emerge the victor when the two teams battle in the opening round of 3-A Division I playoffs.

The Chargers (9-1-0) meet the Rams (10-0-0) tonight at 8 p.m. in Havelock, with the winner advancing to the second round against the survivor of the Bertie-Northampton West game.

Havelock beat Farmville Central, 14-0, and D.H. Conley, 25-16. A-G defeated Farmville, 24-6, and Conley, 8-6. Both squads also whipped North Lenior, the Rams winning, 14-0, and the Chargers, 20-0.

"I think I'd have to go with Havelock by one because they're playing it at home," DHC coach Gerald Garner said. "If it was being played at a neutral site, I'd have to rate it as a toss-up."

Farmville coach Gilbert Carroll disagreed.

"I'd have to pick Ayden-Grifton," he said. "If I had to put a score on it I'd say anywhere from 13-10 to 20-17. I'd give (Ayden-Grifton) a three-point edge."

"I think Ayden-Grifton is a touchdown better than Havelock," Carroll said, "but Havelock has the home field advantage and Ayden-Grifton is coming off a loss."

Both agreed on one point: "It should be a whale of a ballgame," Garner said.

Garner said Ayden-Grifton has the superior passing attack but that Havelock has a better running game.

"(A-G's) Joey Kennedy is the second best quarterback we faced this year," Garner said. "And Havelock is vulnerable to the pass. But, I'd have to give the running game edge to Havelock."

"The key is can Ayden-Grifton complete some passes," Carroll said. "Joey Kennedy could be the key. I think everywhere else they're fairly even."

Carroll drew some comparisons between Havelock and SouthWest Edgecombe, which defeated Ayden-Grifton, 14-7, last Friday night to force a three-way tie for the ECC title.

"I feel like Havelock and SouthWest Edgecombe have some similarities," he said. "They both have good size and strength, and they both run out of the same offense set (the wishbone)."

"But Havelock doesn't power as much (in its running game) as SouthWest. In the fourth quarter, SouthWest marched down the field on Ayden-Grifton," he said. "I don't think Havelock can do that."

"I think the Ayden-Grifton defense can handle the Havelock offense and I think Havelock is vulnerable to the pass," he added. "Havelock has a good front eight, but I question their pass defense."

Both coaches said the first teams' offensive and defensive lines are nearly equal. But, both also said the Rams have the better kicking game.

"I'd have to give the kicking game edge to Havelock," Garner said. "They are a little stronger."

"I feel like (Havelock) will kick a field goal," Carroll added. "They've got a good punter and kicker."

Basketball Invades Tube

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Beginning next week, even the most diehard basketball fan likely will get enough of the sport on television.

That's because next week, when defending national champion North Carolina opens the season against St. John's, a basketball game will be found on various channels almost every night of the week until the national championship shootout April 4.

In all, over 200 games will be televised to Charlotte-area viewers on commercial and cable television.

Here is a capsule look at some of the television season's basketball highlights:

— The Atlantic Coast Conference schedule lists 38 games — 31 during the regular season and seven in the league's post-season tournament. The number is unchanged from last season but this year Raycom-Jefferson Productions of Charlotte is producing the games for the first time.

— At least 118 collegiate games will be telecast on commercial stations.

— Three of North Carolina's first four games will be televised nationally, each on a different network.

— The long-awaited clash of star centers Ralph Sampson of Virginia and Patrick Ewing of Georgetown will be televised when their teams meet on Dec. 11. The game will be telecast on cable systems across the country, including WBTV of Charlotte and Atlanta station WTBS.

— Special events, such as the NCAA tournament in March and the Rainbow Classic in Honolulu next month, will be televised.

Television is needed to satisfy the craving of many ACC basketball fans, ACC Commissioner Bob James said.

"As far as numbers are concerned, more ACC basketball fans see their games on television rather than in person," James said. "There is a severe limitation on the number of people you can accommodate in many of the arenas."

There was quite a bit of shaking up in the standings again last week, with Tom Baines grabbing the lead all by himself again.

Rick Scoppe, who had shared the lead with Baines going into last week's picks, ended up in third place after going 7-5.

Baines heads the field with an 85-33 record, while this writer is one back at 84-34. Scoppe is one more back at 83-35, while Vickie Spivey broke out of her tie with Joe Jenkins to take over sole possession of fourth, 80-38. Joe is fifth at 78-40.

Our guest last week, City Manager Gail Meeks, turned in a fine 8-4 slate — despite her claim that she really didn't know that much about football. Maybe that again proves that knowledge isn't the prime requisite for figuring out who's going to win — just good luck. At any rate, her record pulled the guests up to 76-42 on the year.

Our guest this week will be Greenville Mayor Percy Cox.

With the regular season over in the high school ranks, our individual picks are through for the season. Last week's 3-3 record — worst of the year — resulted in a final figure of 55-11-4, not too bad.

The full poll:

Peele	Baines	Jenkins	Cox	Scoppe	Spivey
Goldsboro over Rose	Rose	Rose	Rose	Goldsboro	Goldsboro
E. Carolina over W&M	E. Carolina	W&M	E. Carolina	E. Carolina	E. Carolina
Duke over N.C. State	Duke	Duke	Duke	State	Duke
N. Carolina over Virginia	N. Carolina	N. Carolina	N. Carolina	N. Carolina	N. Carolina
Navy over S. Carolina	Navy	S. Carolina	Navy	Navy	Navy
Alabama over S. Miss	Alabama	Alabama	Alabama	Alabama	Alabama
Havelock over A-G	Havelock	Havelock	A-Grifton	Havelock	Havelock
Maryland over Clemson	Maryland	Maryland	Clemson	Maryland	Maryland
Ga. Tech over Wake	Wake	Ga. Tech	Ga. Tech	Wake	Ga. Tech
Arizona St. over Washington	Arizona St.	Arizona St.	Arizona St.	Arizona St.	Arizona St.
Penn St. over N. Dame	Penn St.	N. Dame	N. Dame	Penn St.	Penn St.
Vandy over Virginia Tech	Vandy	Va. Tech	Va. Tech	Va. Tech	Vandy

This week, with two high school teams in the playoffs from the area, we've let the panel use their expertise at picking both — Goldsboro at Rose and Ayden-Grifton at Havelock, along with the ECU-William & Mary game and the others.

First, the Rampants play host to Goldsboro in the first round of the Division II playoffs. Both teams have outstanding defenses, but Goldsboro's offense is less potent than Roses. Mistakes will probably decide it, and the panel is split, dividing the vote, 3-3. Our own choice is Goldsboro, 7-6, in overtime.

Ayden-Grifton travels to Havelock to face the unbeaten Rams. The Chargers opened up as underdogs last year and made it all the way to the Eastern finals before bowing to eventual champ Burlington Williams. This year, A-G is again the underdog, and the panel gives Havelock the nod, 5-1. Our own pick is Havelock, 21-14.

And East Carolina travels to Williamsburg with two things on its mind — a winning season and a little revenge. Last year the Indians kept the Pirates from having a winning season, and the situation is almost the same this year. The panel goes with the Pirates, 5-1, and our own personal feeling is that it will be a marathon, 38-30 in favor of the Pirates.

Our other consensus picks: Duke over N.C. State, North Carolina over Virginia, Navy over South Carolina, Alabama over Southern Mississippi, Maryland over Clemson, Georgia Tech over Wake Forest, Arizona State over Washington, Penn State over Notre Dame, and Virginia Tech and Vanderbilt, a toss-up.

Danny Ford: Distractions Bad For Tigers On Eve Of Big Game

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — If defending the 1981 national college football championship weren't enough, the Clemson Tigers have been shadowed all year by a long-running NCAA recruiting investigation that's bred speculation and rampant rumors.

"We've got so many distractions right now, it's unfair for the kids," Clemson coach Danny Ford said in a telephone interview Thursday.

The subject of Clemson's possible probation heated up this week as sportswriters ran wild with tidbits tossed by unnamed sources claiming the National Collegiate Athletic Association and Clemson's Atlantic Coast Conference had already decided the Tigers' fate.

The 34-year-old Ford said the stories were making it just that much tougher to keep his players pumped up. "We're trying like hell to do that," he said. "But it's getting harder and harder every day now because it doesn't let up."

Clemson's policy ever since the NCAA investigation began 19 months ago has been to defer all official comment to school President Bill L. Atchley.

In a statement issued by his office late Thursday afternoon, Atchley said he couldn't be very specific, but acknowledged that he had received letters from the ACC and the NCAA. "We're evaluating these reports right now and will have a comprehensive statement to make soon.

"We're very close to having this thing resolved and we want to get it behind us so we can get on with our business," Atchley said.

Ford wouldn't talk about the reports, saying he has his players to consider. "I'm not trying to be hard to get along with," he said. "But they don't need to be reading anything in the paper about me talking about it and taking my time away from them."

"We're really just trying to put that out of our heads and concentrate more on the rest of the season," sophomore quarterback Mike Epley said.

"Coach Ford said he'd tell us as soon as he received official word," said Epley. "So we're just taking everything that's in the papers now as publicity and rumors. In other words, just wait for the final word before we worry about it."

Despite reports published by The Washington Post quoting unnamed sources as saying both the ACC and the NCAA Committee on Infractions have voted to put Clemson on probation for two years, the conference and the association have officially remained mum.

Asked about possible NCAA sanctions against Clemson, NCAA spokesman Dave

Cawood said Thursday. "We have no plans to make any announcement on any school today, this week or any time in the near future."

The investigation has put pressure on the team, but no worse than last year, said Clemson sports information director Bob Bradley. "These things surfaced three or four times last year," Bradley said. "It's been something both the 1981 team and the 1982 team have had to live with."

Published reports have traced the NCAA's most recent interest in Clemson's recruiting practices back to January 1981, when James Cofer and Terry Minor asked to be released from their letters-of-intent to play at Clemson.

The two Knoxville, Tenn., high school players claimed in a $12 million suit, which they lost and are now appealing, that Clemson had violated recruiting regulations.

More recently, starting quarterback Homer Jordan's purchase of a 1982 Monte Carlo has been called into question by NCAA investigators. Jordan, an All-American candidate at the start of the season, accompanied Clemson officials to a closed session with the NCAA's infractions committee last month.

The Athens, Ga., senior led the Tigers to the national championship last year with a victory over Nebraska in the Orange Bowl. Atchley pulled him out of the starting lineup moments before kickoff in the Clemson-Kentucky game Oct. 2.

The school president said Jordan was benched "due to what may be construed in a very strict interpretation of the NCAA constitution as a technical violation."

Epley, the sophomore from Charlotte, N.C., was called on to take Jordan's place in the Kentucky game, which Clemson won 24-6. Jordan underwent exploratory knee surgery 10 days later and missed the next three games.

Epley, who quarterbacked the Tigers to victories over Duke, N.C. State and North Carolina, said he wasn't pleased with the way he got the starting job, but he was trying to make the most of the opportunity. "I would rather have gone out and won it on the field," he said.

More Indications Of Erosion By Players; Still Want Modifications

By The Associated Press
The early vote is in and players from six National Football League teams have decided to accept, with certain modifications, management's latest proposal to end the 53-day-old strike.

And there are more indications of possible erosion in the ranks of NFL Players Association even among the teams that did not vote, or would not reveal the results of a vote. A consensus shows that many players are willing to ease up on issues earlier said to be unalterable by the players union.

The teams voting to accept "in principle" the owners' offer of $1.31 billion over five years are the New Orleans Saints, Miami Dolphins, Los Angeles Rams, Houston Oilers, Cincinnati Bengals and Denver Broncos. Voting to reject the offer were the Atlanta Falcons, St. Louis Cardinals, San Francisco 49ers and Tampa Bay Buccaneers.

Other teams, including the New York Giants, New England Patriots, Green Bay Packers, Washington Redskins, Philadelphia Eagles, Detroit Lions, Baltimore Colts and Seattle Seahawks, did not vote but have voiced strong objection to management's offer.

Still other teams, did not vote but showed signs of growing uneasiness with the union's steadfast demands.

Members of the New York Jets met Monday to discuss the management proposal. One player who asked not to be identified, said that the presence of the Washington Redskins' Mark Murphy, a players association executive committee member, inhibited open discussion. Two players were said to have asked Marvin Powell, the Jets' player representative, to have a secret ballot. Powell is reported to have refused the request stating that players polled by telephone had already rejected the offer.

The Pittsburgh Steelers first met Sunday, voting 20-3 to reject the latest management proposal. Then, Tuesday, between 30 and 35 players again met for about three hours at Three Rivers Stadium, with Steelers President Dan Rooney on hand, reportedly at the request of Jack Ham, to answer any questions and further explain the proposal. Tom Condon of the Kansas City Chiefs and Jim Haslett of the Buffalo Bills were present to represent the union.

Condon interrupted Rooney several times during the meeting, but Steeler players asked Condon to let Rooney continue speaking.

The Minnesota Vikings did not vote. But player representative David Huffman said, "we feel we would like to see some significant movement on the union's part in regard to our wage scale and some other things. We're willing to make concessions on certain things to get back to negotiating."

Wide receiver Ahmad Rashad said after the meeting, "It doesn't matter whose terms you talk on as long as you talk. Those guys (the owners) got all the money. You can't sit by your wage scale and say, 'That's it or nothing' and go broke."

The Los Angeles Raiders' Mickey Marvin said that while his team did not actually vote, no more than four or five players would have rejected the offer. The 49ers and Cowboys voted to reject the offer, but did say that the owners' offer constituted a "framework" for further negotiation.

The Bills met Tuesday for three hours without taking a vote, but an envoy of Isiah Robertson, Phil Villapiano and Jon Borcard was sent to New York to meet with union officials. The Bills were to meet again today to discuss what transpired in the meeting and to possibly take a vote.

The Houston Oilers met Wednesday with a turnout of about 20 players, not enough for a vote. Player representative David Carter said that the players are prepared to accept the offer if player rosters could be frozen at 49 and adequate arrangements could be reached with regard to 1982 salary.

Ed Fisher, a non-union member of the Oilers said, "If it's the union's job to negotiate the best contract possible, if they don't negotiate a contract and the season is ended, then I don't think we've been represented very well."

To the dismay of Buccaneers quarterback Doug Williams, his team voted resoundingly in rejection of the owners offer.

Demo Dark Horses Go Before State Party Leaders

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer
NEW ORLEANS (AP) —
It's show-and-tell time for the darker horses among

Democratic presidential aspirants.
Four senators and a former governor, each of whom hopes to be the 1984

Democratic presidential nominee, are appearing at a meeting of state party leaders.
Sen. Ernest F. Hollings of South Carolina, who describes himself as the

"centrist" among the presidential hopefuls, had the lead-off spot in the agenda of the meeting of the Association of State Democratic Chairs.

Also scheduled to meet with the group today and answer questions were Sens.
Gary Hart of Colorado and John Glenn of Ohio.

Sen. Alan Cranston of California and former Gov.
Reubin Askew of Florida were on the agenda for Saturday.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts, shown by polls to be the front-runner, and Walter F. Mondale, the former vice president who ranks No. 2 in polls, were unable to attend the conference but were represented by several aides and supporters.

In addition to presidential politics, the state party leaders will hear an analysis of the 1982 elections, from pollster Peter Hart.

State party leaders ordinarily are courted by presidential aspirants, but their status for the 1984 campaign may be enhanced by the party rules changes that gave elected and party officials a stronger role at the nominating convention.

The new rules created a bloc of uncommitted delegate slots to be filled by elected and party officials.

Billy Keyserling, running the Hollings presidential exploratory committee, said the senator "thinks there is a market for a centrist."

Keyserling said Hollings has been to 40 states, but "he's not kidding himself," he said. "I found out it had nothing to do with the credentials of my firm or any of the other firms."

Nordman added that an aide told him the problem
"could be handled administratively."

The authority selects and employs architects, engineers and consultants to plan and supervise state construction and make other capital improvements.

In the past, the state's construction office has negotiated a fee after tentatively awarding the contract to an architectural engineering firm. But that has been changed recently to save time, and now fees are projected earlier to save a 30-day waiting period between tentative and final confirmation of the award.

going to run.
A Kennedy committee is expected to be in operation by January in order to have a vehicle under federal election laws for qualifying for federal matching funds.

The latest moves on exploratory committees were the formation of one by Mondale and the disbanding of one by Cranston.

The Cranston committee closed down after recommending to the senator that he run for president, advice
Cranston is expected to follow.

An aide to Cranston, who is assistant minority leader of the Senate, said an announcement probably will be made in mid-January.

Meanwhile, the Democratic presidential hopefuls were quick to comment on the death of Soviet President
Leonid Brezhnev. Most urged President Reagan to seek agreement with the Soviet Union on nuclear arms control and other issues.

Reagan, at the White House, said his administration desires to "work toward an improved relationship with the Soviet Union."

Cranston said the Reagan administration should "cool down its bellicose rhetoric
and take a more calm,
level-headed approach in
foreign policy."

and take a more calm,
level-headed approach in
foreign policy."

"Now is the time for President Reagan to reassure the Soviets that his administration will sincerely seek a fair, balanced, verifiable agreement to freeze the growth in both our nuclear arsenals and reduce both our bloated nuclear stockpiles,"
Cranston added.

Kennedy, who is on a private visit to Greece, said in a statement: "I am hopeful that the United States and the new leadership of the Soviet Union will work together to improve the relations between our two countries, to reduce the risks of nuclear war and to achieve a free and more stable world."

Hart said: "I think, and I hope, that our own government will use this occasion to reach out for the better instincts in the Soviet government to express once again our desire for peace."

Glenn expressed the hope that both the United States and the Soviet Union "will find this a time to stress negotiation and mutual understanding rather than confrontation and competition."

The Forecast For Saturday, November 13 ● Low Temperatures

WEATHER FORECAST — The National Weather Service forecasts mostly sunny weather for the western half of the country for Saturday. Mild weather is expected for the Southwest, but much of the country will be cold. Rain is forecast in Florida and from the Chesapeake to New England. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press

The balmy weather of the past week will be followed by a cold, windy weekend in North Carolina with snow flurries possible in the mountains Saturday.

A cold front will reach the mountains this evening and move quickly across the state tonight and off the coast Saturday.

As the system approaches the state, windy conditions, showers and possible thunderstorms can be expected. Saturday, snow flurries are likely in the mountains and some showers might linger over the rest of the state.

Under mostly cloudy skies, temperatures were expected to reach the upper 60s and 70s today, with scattered showers and a few thunderstorms developing in the west today and further east tonight.

Winds will increase as it turns much colder in the mountains tonight and across the rest of the state Saturday. Lows tonight will range from the 20s and 30s in the mountains to near 60 along the coast.

Highs Saturday were expected to range from the 20s and 30s in the mountains to the 50s and 60s in the extreme east.

The National Weather Service planned to post small craft advisories for the coastal waters and sounds later today. Southerly winds will climb to 15 to 25 knots today and to between 20 and 30 knots tonight.

Lows, early today were in the 40s under cloudy skies. Some light rain was reported in the western Piedmont.

Temperatures Thursday climbed into the 60s and low 70s with clouds spreading over the state from the west.

Assault Charge Is Dismissed

STATESVILLE, N.C. (AP) — An Iredell County district judge dismissed an assault charge against Sheriff LeRoy Reavis on Wednesday.

Former deputy R.H. "Sonny" Cloaninger, 29, claimed Reavis poked him in the eye with his forefinger during an Oct. 18 exchange, cutting his left cornea. Reavis, 60, denied touching the deputy.

Judge Abner Alexander dismissed the charge after more than two hours of testimony by Cloaninger and three other deputies.

Cloaninger also has a $350,000 federal suit pending against Reavis, charging among other things that his reputation has been damaged by the sheriff's statements.

Reavis fired Cloaninger, a deputy for three years, after Cloaninger charged him with assault and battery in a criminal summons. Reavis was re-elected last week to his fourth four-year term as sheriff.

Denies Lt. Gov. Tried Intervene

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A state official says Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green did not ask the Capital Building Authority to reconsider awarding a $20,000 engineering contract so that a political friend could have another chance at it.

On Oct. 14, the Capital Building Authority tentatively approved awarding the contract for consultation on the planned Charlotte Farmers Market to Grier and Fripp Architectural Engineers of Charlotte.

Theodore Nordman of Architectural Planning Associates of Charlotte, a Green political supporter, said he complained to a Green aide about not getting the contract.

Reconsideration of that contract has been placed on the board's agenda for today.

Stephanie Bass, a spokeswoman for Secretary of Administration Jane S. Patterson, said Green asked Mrs. Patterson to explain the awards process to him, but never asked that his friend be reconsidered.

"The lieutenant governor absolutely did not ask us to do this (reconsider the award)," she said.

Green was not available for comment, but an aide, William M. Franklin Jr., said Green met with Mrs. Patterson to ensure that Nordman and all other firms were being treated fairly.

Nordman, who said he has worked in political campaigns for Green and Gov. Jim Hunt, said he wanted to make sure he was being treated fairly.

Life As It's Lived

Daylight Savings Time Isn't 'Relative' To All

By GAIL MICHAELS
Almost two weeks have passed since I wiped Daylight Savings Time off the face of most of my clocks, and I'm delighted to say that I don't regret it one bit. For the last six months I have awaited its demise with the utmost impatience and resentment. All its paltry virtues mean nothing to me. As far as I'm concerned, the minute our Legislature started monkeying around with time, they overstepped their bounds.

As for those who would defend Daylight Savings Time by citing the Theory of Relativity, time may be relative in Washington, but it's not to me. Lots of things are relative in Washington, but out here in the hinterland we still value stability. For half a year my children and I suffer from chronic irritability merely because we missed one crucial hour of sleep. Like it or not, our sleep patterns are as ingrained as cigarette burns on linoleum.

What really makes me angry is that no effective rebellion is possible against this insidious threat to my family's emotional well-being. Anything more than refusing to turn up the clock on D-Day itself means missing carpools, arriving late for work, losing bridge partners, losing jobs, and as we all know, unemployment and isolation are rather irritating in their own right.

Of course, Phillip, our resident Einstein apologist, likes to point out that various fringe experiments have demonstrated that sleep is not really necessary. The most productive people among us deign to doze only two or three hours a night. Then again, these people are probably the same ones who have fireplaces installed in their offices 40 flights above the street and who have special "tall" desks built so that they can stand on their feet all day to avoid backache. For all I know, they're also the ones who are insuring the success of Gravity Boots, which are bolted to the top of a doorway and, when worn, are supposed to reverse the sagging process.

These are obviously not the ordinary people who make up the majority of our population. Ordinary people will testify that tampering with the natural order almost invariably causes irreparable harm. We have only to look at what happens to our country during Daylight Savings Time. The crime rate rises, as does the divorce rate, the rate of child abuse, and Excedrin sales. Tension, strife and misery abound.

Now consider what happens during "normal" time: Thanksgiving, Hannukah, Christmas, New Year's, and a rise in the rate of conception. People are joyous, energetic and brimming with togetherness.

I am so transformed by the return to normalcy that I've actually found myself doing things like baking cookies with both children without having cardiac arrest. And I'm catching up on my correspondence with seven people who probably think I'm dead.

Even Phillip, who for the past six months has plagued me with his insistence on setting the bedroom alarm clock 15 minutes early in order to set his alarm 15 minutes late so that he can pretend that he's had 15 minutes extra sleep, has inched the big hand eight minutes closer to normal time.

Last night I crept into the bedroom before him and recovered the last seven minutes. After all, for six months I've got my hour back, and I don't intend to be robbed of one precious second.

Rash Of Contamination Hoaxes Face Authorities

By The Associated Press
The Tylenol poisonings in Chicago have prompted a rash of contamination hoaxes, with more than half a dozen reported "victims" of tampered products turning out to be culprits.

Authorities generally say they don't know why these people — adults and youngsters — acted the way they did. One youth said he put a nail in a frankfurter to scare his girlfriend and another teen-ager said an impulse for publicity prompted him to spike chocolate milk with drain cleaner.

No one has been seriously injured in any of the incidents and police in several cases decided not to press charges.

Among the hoaxes:
—Marion Barrow, 14, of Minneapolis, admitted putting Drano in a carton of chocolate milk from the cafeteria at Northeast Junior High School on Oct. 26. Barrow had complained of throat pains after drinking the milk and was admitted to the hospital where doctors found a reddening of the esophagus. "I guess it was just mischievous," Barrow said. "We were studying about that Tylenol thing... I got the idea." No charges were filed.

—Michael McDaniel, 19, pleaded guilty to falsifying a police report after telling Pittsfield Township, Mich., authorities on Oct. 29 that he had found a nail in a Ball Park frankfurter manufactured by Hygrade Food Products of Southfield, Mich. McDaniel, who faces up to 90 days in prison and a $100 fine, said he put the nail in the hot dog to frighten his girlfriend.

—Janet Melonio, 31, of Redford Township, Mich., told police on Oct. 29 that she found a razor blade in a Ball Park frank. Police said she later admitted putting the blade in the hot dog herself. They said they would not prosecute because of "extenuating circumstances" which were not disclosed.

—An 11-year-old boy at St. Helena's School in Wilmington, Del., showed his teacher an oatmeal cream pie from his lunch with a knife blade in it on Nov. 1. Cpl. Barry Beck of the state police said the boy's father "apparently suspected something was amiss," and talked with his son who admitted putting the blade in the pie. Beck said he did not know the motive for the boy's action, but said the youngster said he'd seen a report of a similar incident on television. No charge was filed; Beck said "it didn't seem to serve any purpose."

—Della Lucille Paxton, 45, of Roanoke, Va., has been arrested after admitting tampering with Comtrex cold capsules. Ms. Paxton went to the hospital Oct. 28 complaining of abdominal pains after taking Comtrex. She later reported her capsules might have been tampered with. Both Ms. Paxton's bottle and a bottle removed from a drugstore shelf were found to contain rat poison. Police quoted Ms. Paxton as saying she poisoned the capsules because of publicity about the Tylenol case; they said she gave another reason for her actions, but declined to reveal it.

—Debra Hill, 30, of Reston, Va., reported on Oct. 22 that her eyes had been damaged by a contaminated bottle of Visine. The Food and Drug Administration said the liquid in the bottle had been replaced by a solution of hydrochloric acid. Mrs. Hill was arrested Nov. 1 and charged with making a false complaint. Police have refused to say who put the acid in the bottle, but said Mrs. Hill "deliberately misled authorities." They said they did not know the motive. Mrs. Hill said: "I did not do it."

—An 11-year-old Niles, Ill., girl admitted putting staples in some peanut-butter candy. One investigator said it "was probably a joke that went wild on her." Authorities recommended counseling, but did not file charges.

—A 12-year-old South Philadelphia boy told police on Halloween that he found a razor blade in a candy bar. During questioning, he admitted putting the blade there himself. The boy faces a charge of filing a false report to police. No motive has been determined.

—Columbus, Ohio, police say five youths were charged with delinquency for tampering with Halloween treats. Three of the boys also were charged with making false complaints about tampering. Police said the youths, ages 12 to 14, either tampered with candy they got themselves or with candy they gave to other youngsters.

the diamond finesse (if he rose with the ace, he either could not draw the last trump or else had to give up on establishing the clubs). West won the king of diamonds and gave his partner another club ruff for down two.

At the other table, declarer adopted a far sounder line. He cashed the ace of clubs, returned to his hand with the king of hearts and led a club to the king. If East now ruffs and returns a diamond, declarer can rise with the ace, draw trumps with the ace and queen and then run clubs with the help of a finesse for the jack to make his contract.

So East discarded a diamond, but that was no better. Declarer crossed back to hand with the queen of hearts and took the club finesse. He simply ran clubs until East decided to ruff. On the diamond return he rose with the ace, drew the last trump by crossing to the ace of trumps, and he was a dummy to cash whatever high clubs remained. Making four-odd.

It is easy to complain about a bad break. Sometimes it is almost as easy to protect against one!

The auction was straight forward. The only point of interest was North's sensible decision to raise competitively to two hearts despite the fact that he had only three-card support. He had a sound opening bid with prime values and a ruffing value in diamonds, so his raise has the endorsement of this department.

This hand cropped up in a team match. At both tables the defenders attacked with three rounds of spades, with declarer ruffing the third round. One declarer now cashed the king and queen of trumps to learn of the bad break. He then started on clubs.

East ruffed the second club and shifted to the nine of diamonds. Declarer found that he was forced to take

New Soviet Party Chief Seen Among Shrewdest

By DAVID MINTHORN
Associated Press Writer
MOSCOW (AP) — Yuri V. Andropov, the new Communist Party general secretary succeeding the late Leonid I. Brezhnev, is a former chief of the KGB secret police with a reputation as one of the shrewdest members of the Soviet leadership.

After the announcement today of his promotion as chief of the all-powerful Communist Party, the official Soviet news agency Tass quoted Andropov as saying he would continue the "domestic and foreign policies that had been pursued under Leonid Brezhnev."

Some Western analysts have called Andropov a "liberal," but Soviet sources say he is not.

Andropov moved into contention to succeed Brezhnev in May, when he was promoted to the Central Committee Secretariat, placing him on an equal footing in the succession stakes with Konstantin U. Chernenko, another Brezhnev protege and fellow member of the ruling Politburo.

Two days after joining the Secretariat, Andropov resigned from his 15-year job as head of the secret police, the Committee of State Security more widely known as the KGB. It was widely believed at the time that it was an effort to disassociate himself from the secret police apparatus.

Andropov's promotion to the 10-member Secretariat is believed to have strengthened his hand in executing day-to-day domestic policy, and to have given him a greater voice in preparing the agenda for the policy-making Politburo.

Among his duties in the Secretariat, Soviet sources said at the time, was overall supervision of the state radio, television and newspapers, and cultural affairs. These were formerly the preserves of Mikhail A. Suslov, the Kremlin's No. 2 figure and chief ideologist who died Jan. 25, 1982, at age 79.

His death set off the maneuvering for succession to Brezhnev.

Andropov, born to Russian parents June 15, 1914, started his political ascendancy as ambassador to Hungary during the 1956 uprising there and the ensuing Soviet invasion to crush the invasion.

At first, Andropov denied to the ill-fated Hungarian government of Imre Nagy that Soviet tanks had crossed Hungary's northeastern border and were moving on Budapest, the capital. Later, he refused to give Nagy a promise that the troop movements would halt.

Andropov returned from Hungary in 1957 to serve as chief of the Central Committee's department for liaison with the Socialist bloc. He was made KGB chief in 1967.

In that job, Andropov effectively throttled dissidents at home and supervised the collection of intelligence data from a vast network of agents in the Soviet Union and abroad. He is believed to have built up the size and importance of the KGB after it had fallen into disrepute for terrorizing the Soviet population under Josef Stalin.

In a widely quoted speech in 1973, Andropov asserted that the number of dissidents in the Soviet Union was dropping and compared them with common criminals. "We have such people in minuscule numbers," he said. "We still have them. Unfortunately they exist — as thieves, bribe-takers, speculators and other criminals..."

He said both criminals and dissidents were inflicting harm on Soviet society and that was why "they should bear punishment in complete accordance with the demands of Soviet law."

Typical of how authorities implemented that policy was the treatment of an independent group of Soviet intellectuals who banded together to monitor Soviet compliance with the East-West Helsinki Accords on human rights in 1975.

Virtually all of its two dozen members were convicted of anti-socialist agitation, sent into foreign exile or condemned to life in remote regions of the Soviet Union. The most famous member of that group was Nobel Peace Prize laureate Andrei Sakharov, who was expelled from Moscow in early 1980 and sent to live under house arrest in the Volga River city of Gorky.

Some Western analysts viewed Andropov at the time of his appointment to the Secretariat as a potential reformer, who would be receptive to experiments with incentive agriculture and private enterprise in other socialist countries — particularly Hungary — to revamp the Soviet Union's economy.

Such steps would inevitably encourage some degree of political liberalization in the Soviet Union and prompt new efforts to improve relations with the United States, the analysts said.

In a speech April 22, 1982, Andropov referred to what he described as the creative nature of Marxism-Leninism — apparently meaning the need to modify it — and the overriding issue of war and peace. He also suggested it was time for the Soviet Union to get to work at solving its various economic problems.

But other Western analysts saw a harsher tone in Andropov's Kremlin address that suggested he would not move quickly toward domestic reform or improved relations with the United States if he became party chief.

He then rejected "political pluralism" in an obvious swipe at worker unrest in Poland and the ideological dispute with Italy's maverick Communist Party, which had challenged Moscow's leading role.

Andropov also said at the time that Soviet society was developing well in a healthy atmosphere and suggested that the building of socialism came before any need to expand democracy.

Some analysts said Andropov, mindful of the impending struggle to succeed Brezhnev, appeared to be courting hard-line ideological cadres in the party, the KGB and members of the armed forces who had complained about "elements of pacifism" in Soviet youth.

Andropov was born in Nagut'skaya in the northern Caucasus to a railway employee's family. He started working at age 16 as a telegraph operator, then became a movie projectionist and a Volga boatman.

He studied water transportation at Rybinsk in 1936, then attended Petrozavodsk University but did not graduate. By then he had embarked on a career as a Communist Party official.

From 1940 to 1951, Andropov held posts in the party apparatus in the Karelo-Finnish Republic — now an autonomous region — under the tutelage of Otto Kuusinen, a Soviet leader of Finnish extraction whom some analysts regarded as a reformist, non-dogmatic figure.

Andropov was brought to Moscow in the early 1950's and was then assigned to Hungary as a junior diplomat. He was appointed ambassador there in 1954.

Returning to Moscow, Andropov was assigned to the Central Committee's socialist countries department as head of the liaison department.

Pay-TV Competition Having Impact On Networks

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — More competition for viewers from pay and cable television is forcing the major networks to stay longer with new shows that initially bombed in the ratings, says a programming executive.

"We're less swift with the ax," NBC Entertainment president Brandon Tartikoff said Thursday. "I think all three networks are holding onto shows longer because of the increased competition. Three to six weeks is no longer enough time to judge a show when people have 10 channels in the home."

"If we think a show has prospects, if it's well made, we're more inclined to stay with those shows than try something else," he said.

Tartikoff said third-ranked NBC had recently signed eight situation comedies for the entire season, even though some of them are low in the Nielsen ratings.

Tartikoff, Anthony Thomopoulos, president of ABC Entertainment, and B. Donald Grant, president of CBS Entertainment, spoke to more than 1,000 industry leaders at a meeting of the Hollywood Radio & Television Society.

In a panel discussion, they talked about figures showing that the networks' share of the television audience has dropped from 87 percent last season to 82 percent this season.

"What has happened to the

Team Is Telling Bankers' Story

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's bankers want the American public to know more about their business, so for the third straight year they have picked a team to tell their story.

Since 1979, the American Bankers Association has selected representatives to travel across the country to give speeches and media interviews. The banking advisors serve for two years on a voluntary basis and are selected from hundreds of candidates recommended by bankers representing small, medium and large banks from all regions.

This year's team is made up of 21 bankers, 15 men and six women, from 18 different states. Two are chairmen of their banks, six are presidents, 12 serve on a vice presidential level and one is an assistant vice president.

Nielsen shares is that more people are watching pay and cable television and playing video games," Thomopoulos said. "The NFL football strike has also left a void and male viewers are looking at sports events on cable."

"Viewers now have a choice of 10 or more channels. I think recent industry strikes have also had a residual effect. Viewers went to the competition or stopped watching altogether." "Our challenge," Thomopoulos said later, "is to bring viewers back to network television."

Grant pointed out that after years of enormous growth and popularity, network television has become "a mature industry."

"Our revenues are not growing at the same rate," he said. "All of us must recognize that we are a mature industry and we must deal with the costs of production."

Tartikoff said the networks should be allowed to participate in the syndication of television series after their network run. The Federal Communications Commission is now considering revoking its rule preventing network participation.

"I find it very disconcerting when we need every competitive advantage we can get to go out and bid against pay cable, which has no restrictions," he said. "We nearly lost a series ('Taxi') to pay cable."

Thomopoulos said the networks could only provide quality programming as long as they remained financially healthy.

"The networks are losing events and programs because of the heavy financial involvement of pay cable," he said. "They could create a society of haves and have nots with certain programs available only to those with the money to pay for them. We must be financially able to compete."

Club For Woody Herman Closes

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A nightclub created to bring back big-band leader Woody Herman and his 15-piece Thundering Herd to the birthplace of jazz has closed after less than a year.

"The club didn't have the funds to pay us," said Bill Byrne, a member of the band and its road manager. "Most of the guys are going home."

The club, located in the Poydras Plaza shopping mall next to the Hyatt Regency Hotel, fulfilled Herman's longstanding desire to find a home base for his band.

It opened in December 1981 and reopened last month, after a summer break, but never achieved the popularity it needed.

Herman said Tuesday that things were picking up, but Byrne said the band members had been without pay for two weeks.

He said Herman and the band had stayed on while the club's owner, Poydras Productions, tried to raise the money, but their last performance was Tuesday night.

A Review Playhouse Offers Imaginative Play

Step On A Crack
"Stop!" says the mirror voice: the traffic light by the rainbow curtains flashes red, and Ellie obeys.

Ellie's world is a cluttered room she shares with the mirror, her friends Frizbee and Lana, and children who visit the East Carolina Youth Playhouse Saturday or Sunday at 2:15 p.m.

Ellie (Ann Lyons) wants to be pretty like her real mother, wants to sing like her stepmother Lucille (Rhonda Kirby), but most of all, wants things to be the way they were before her father (Christopher Watson) remarried. Confused and troubled, Ellie resorts to pretending with her imaginary friends Frizbee (W.G. Bordeaux III) and Lana

"Step On A Crack" is a wonderfully constructed sequence of real and imagined events during the time when Ellie adjusts to her new mother. Director Douglas Ray, with Pat Pertaion, Tina Dennis, Jay Hilton and Laura Askew, has designed an entertaining production with two important messages for the audience. The first, for children, is that changes happen even when we don't want them, and that we can learn to make the most of them. The second, for adults (children already know), is that imagination provides a refuge which can see us through anything.

XGBSQ XW NMGFFGZK WMJDRKM XHW

Yesterday's Cryptoquip - PLUCKY, PENNY-PINCHING ATHLETE IS USING CHEAP SKATES.
Today's Cryptoquip clue: G equals I.

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

FOCUS

The Unseen Enemy

It was the fall of 1918. World War I was ending. But the entire world was about to fight a new, unseen enemy that would kill 30 million people in a year. The enemy? Spanish influenza. The flu of 1918 was the worst epidemic since the Black Death. In the U.S. alone it killed five times as many people as had died in the war just fought. In New York City the death toll rose to 4,500 a week. In Philadelphia it was 1,000 a day. Gravediggers fell hopelessly behind and huge tents had to be built to shelter the waiting piles of coffins. If flu strikes you this year, get rest, drink plenty of fluids and consider yourself lucky that it's not 1918.

DO YOU KNOW - On what day did World War I end in 1918?

THURSDAY'S ANSWER - President Wilson originally proclaimed Armistice Day.

Held Trek For Life And Breath

The American Lung Association of North Carolina "Trek for Life and Breath" was held last weekend in the Croatan National Forest. Awards will be presented Nov. 19 at the Southern Sportsman Restaurant in Farmville.

Trekkers solicited pledges from sponsors and hiked 20 miles along the Neusiok Trail, camping two nights, in order to raise money for the prevention and cure of lung disease.

Sponsors for the event included The Kentucky Fried Chicken of Havelock, McDonalds of Greenville, Franc White and Overton's Supermarket.

The Trek was filmed by White for a segment of "The Southern Sportsman" to be aired in early December.

Would Ease Standards Seasonally

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Streams and rivers could hold a higher concentration of wastewater discharges in colder months with no ill effects, a University of North Carolina researcher says. James C. Lamb, a professor of environmental science and engineering at UNC-Chapel Hill, said Tuesday at the 62nd annual meeting of the North Carolina Water Pollution Control Association and the state section of the American Waterworks Association that different seasons influence the ability of streams, creeks and rivers to handle wastewater. W. Lee Fleming Jr., the state's new water quality section chief, said Lamb's research and suggestions are being considered by the Water Quality Task Force of the state Division of Environmental Management. Fleming said North Carolina already allows more seasonal variation in the standards determining the levels of pollutants in the water, but said Lamb's research shows that these might be broadened considerably without affecting stream quality. U.S. Environmental Protection Agency regulations set a standard based on the worst effects of discharge pollutants, which normally occur in hot-weather months such as August. However, many streams and rivers have an "assimilation capacity" several times greater than that standard in cold-weather months when biological activity decreases and stream flows increase, Lamb said. "If officials keep track of individual stream pollution-handling capacities every month, it could save money in sewage treatment and plant design, Lamb said. Similar changes in water pollution standards have been proposed by the Reagan administration and advocated by the EPA's southeastern regional director. Environmental groups oppose those proposals and say it would put clean water up for sale because individual states could set their own standards. But existing regulations are too inflexible and unresponsive to costs and local conditions, Lamb said. Lamb said the greatest problem facing his proposals is selling the idea to the public. "It's a real public-relationships problem," he said.

Red Army Tight-Lipped About Its 'High Frontier'

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer
MOSCOW (AP) — The United States and the Soviet Union, at great cost and technological effort, are enmeshed in a competition to establish extensive military capabilities in space.

But in talking to Soviet space officials here, you'd never know it. The officials say the intent of their program is strictly peaceful and scientific and that it is the Americans who are forcing the increased attention that both militaries are giving to space projects. "The American space shuttle is the only space weapon," one of them stated in a recent interview, repeating an accusation often made by Soviet propagandists. Pravda, the Communist Party newspaper, recently charged: "American brass hats make no secret that they regard outer space as a potential theater of operations. The Pentagon also is planning to put laser weapons, spy satellites and anti-satellite systems into near-Earth orbit, and it plans to spread the arms race to outer space."

Such talk is cheap, but military space activity is not. U.S. officials say the Soviet Red Army is outpacing the United States Air Force.

Military purposes consume 70 percent of the Soviet Union's $18 billion space budget, according to a U.S. Defense Department analysis and a similar estimate by a specialist at the U.S. Embassy here. American military space programs add up to 60 percent of a $14.7 billion budget.

During a week of late-October briefings here, the Soviet government refused to make military officers available to discuss space efforts. Asking civilian officials about military plans was not a fruitful exercise.

All the officials were men, and no matter what his job or rank, he just didn't hear. Most commonly, a question drew a moment of silence, maybe a slight shrug. If he said anything, it was that he resented such questions. The shuttle accusation against the shuttle was the sole exception.

It isn't only Soviet officials who have an aversion to discussing military space plans: the U.S. shuttle is, in part, a military vehicle, and Pentagon planners are equally secretive.

Officials at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration are closed-mouthed to an extreme when talk turns to military matters. Last month, in a NASA briefing at Johnson Space

Center, officials handed out the names of four astronauts who will fly the shuttle's 10th mission, an Air Force flight next year. "Got a little on-page announcement here," one official told reporters. "Everybody hang onto it because it's also the press kit."

But in the United States there are selective news leaks — something unheard of in Soviet military circles — and Air Force space officers occasionally appear to make vague statements or to refuse comment.

Despite Soviet declarations of innocence, the United States has evidence the Soviet Union has field-tested a potent space weapon.

It is a "killer satellite" capable of attacking and destroying U.S. reconnaissance, communications, navigation and other payloads vital to the military. It was tested successfully against Soviet space targets.

American analysts are also concerned about reports of Soviet research into laser and charged-particle beams. Richard D. DeLauer, the undersecretary of defense for research and engineering, told a Senate subcommittee recently that the Soviet Salyut space station program "engages in military activities and may be the forerunner of a weapons platform."

A recently released Pentagon document, "Soviet Military Power," says: "The Soviet goal of having continuously manned space stations may support both defensive and offensive weapons in space, with man in the space station for target selection, repairs, adjustments and positive command and control."

A U.S. official who asked not to be identified said there was evidence that a Soviet laser beam satellite could be launched as early as 1985. It probably would not be too effective against American payloads, he said, but it could have an effect as a psychological symbol.

By 1990, this analyst expects at least one Soviet space station to be armed with laser guns that could vaporize orbiting targets thousands of miles away. It is "Star Wars" stuff, but U.S. officials say it's not too far-fetched.

Until recently, most U.S. and Soviet military space spending went for surveillance and defensive systems. But Soviet development of the killer satellite and laser weapon research prompted the U.S. to become more aggressive.

In its first response to the killer satellite, the Air Force is scheduled early next year to test-fire an American anti-satellite weapon — a device launched by rocket from a high-flying F15 jet fighter and equipped with sensors to search out and destroy a hostile quarry by crashing into it.

Laser and particle-beam research is also underway. In both areas, superior American technology might eventually overcome the current Soviet lead. The Reagan administration has requested $140 million for space laser research in fiscal 1983, up from $90 million in 1981.

The U.S. Space Command, established Sept. 1, will supervise increasing military operations aboard the space shuttle. About half the 300 shuttle flights planned through 1992 will be military missions.

Initially, military shuttle missions will carry out traditional defensive assignments — hauling up satellites for such things as reconnaissance, navigation and communications. But by the end of the decade the shuttle ships are expected to test laser weapons and transport the building blocks for space stations to be used for both military and civil activities.

Endowment Fund Based On The Coins They Find

By SHERRY DEVLIN
Associated Press Writer
MOSCOW, Idaho (AP) — When Terry Armstrong finds a penny on the ground or a dime in a phone booth, it goes to the University of Idaho instead of his pocket.

Armstrong and about 200 other people are saving money they find in odd places and giving it to the university for an endowment fund. So far, they've got $120, and their sights are set on $6 million — in a century or so.

"We call it the Found Money Fund of Idaho," said Armstrong, executive assistant to the university president. "About 200 of us true philanthropists donate all the money we find around town."

It all started with a penny in Armstrong's shoe.

"I walk a half mile to work and over the years picked up pennies or nickels and put them in my shoe for good luck," he said Monday.

One day in January 1981, Armstrong spotted 8 cents on the sidewalk in front of a sorority house. "I decided it was time to put all that money in a jar and see how much I could collect in a month," he said.

Armstrong's colleagues took to the idea and started depositing their "finds" in the jar. "In five months, we had $6 or $7 and realized we had to put the money to good use," he said.

Armstrong decided to start buying shares in Idaho's Fund for Academic Excellence, a general university trust fund that finances honors programs, special projects and faculty development.

Shares in the fund sell for $10 to $12, and each time the jar fills up, Armstrong buys a share in the name of the Found Money Fund. "We already have 10 shares of stock valued at $120," he said. "And there's another $12.05 in the jar."

"We're really smokin'," Armstrong said. "We've calculated it out and by plowing all the interest back into the principal, we'll have $5 million or $6 million by the 200th anniversary of the university — in 2089.

"And that's if we didn't collect another penny," he added. "But as you can see, the money in my little jar is growing exponentially. Students are starting to collect for us. We've even had a few finds by toddlers."

The Found Money Fund has no official roster of its contributors, whose finds usually are pennies, nickels and dimes.

Occasionally, however, there are bonanzas. "Just last week, our director of high school relations found two $5 bills on a cafeteria floor in Twin Falls," said Carol Yenni, co-founder of the fund.

"But we do have our rules," said Ms. Yenni, admissions assistant at the university's College of Law. "You must find the money. It can't be your own change. And if you know who the money belongs to, you've got to return it."

Finders also must be "totally dedicated," Armstrong said. "If you find $100, you've got to turn it in to the fund. But believe me, anyone who goes around checking phone booths for lost money has got to be pretty committed."

Armstrong says the Found Money Fund also "promotes fitness, sharpens observation skills and develops laudable philanthropic qualities. But mostly, it's just funner than the dickens."

PENNY PINCHER — Terry Armstrong scours the Univ. of Idaho campus for pennies and dimes. He's founder of the Found Money Fund of Idaho, and hopes to have a $6 million endowment collected by the university's 200th anniversary. (AP Laserphoto)
