Ready ... If Needed

Since Dare County residents are faced with the loss of the William B. Umstead Bridge, getting across the three-mile-wide Croatan Sound can be a long wait, especially if medical attention is needed. That's where the Dare County Emergency Medical Services helicopter becomes helpful. Here, pilot C.C. Duvall and EMS member Scott Best ready the aircraft. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Bridge Knocked Out

Dare Residents Meet, Conquer New Challenge

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

MANTEO — Dare County residents, more or less used to having storms interrupt traffic along ocean highways from Kitty Hawk to Hatteras, met and conquered another challenge last week — the closing of the William B. Unstead Memorial Bridge across Croatan Sound.

The 2.7-mile bridge, which carries U.S. 64-U.S. 264 and links Dare County's Roanoke Island with the mainland, was closed to traffic 38 hours after a barge struck the bridge about 1 a.m. November 5. The collision broke 8 of 16 pilings and cracked three large concrete columns that support the bridge.

Department of Transportation officials said Saturday that it will probably be late January before repairs can be completed and the bridge reopened.

"It's caused a cutback as far as the merchants (on Roanoke Island) are concerned ... a pinch, from the people on the mainland not being able to get here, and the tourists not able to come as well," Tom McKinney, a magistrate in Manteo, said.

But McKinney emphasized, "Dare County citizens have rallied to the problem very well and are coping the best way they can. The citizens have been very brave and understand the situation."

Related Story On A-13

The biggest problem, he suggested, has been created for the Dare County residents living on the mainland — in and around the communities of Mann's Harbor, East Lake and Stumpy Point. The mainland residents now have to travel greater distances to shop or get to work, or wait in line for the temporary ferries placed in service at mid-week.

Dare County Manager Jack Cahoon said the bridge closing has "created a lot of problems in that 200 to 300 workers have to get back and forth every day ... fishermen come from that way (the mainland) this time of year ... the school system has about 180 students on the mainland ... and our landfill site is on the mainland. We take all our garbage to the mainland."

Cahoon noted that out of a population of more than 13,000 people in Dare County, 1,000 live on the mainland.

"It's just hard to imagine what kind of problems we would have had," if the bridge had been closed at the height of the summer season, Cahoon said. "The tourist trade is our main economy. It would just be, particularly in county operations, a catastrophy, especially the garbage situation.

"We dispose of about 300 to 400 cubic yards of garbage a

Reagan Lifts Soviet Trade Sanctions

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan on Saturday dropped the trade sanctions his administration imposed after the military crackdown in Poland, citing "substantial agreement" with industrialized U.S. allies on a common and more restrictive approach to East-West trade.

The agreement did not meet Reagan's original conditions for lifting the sanctions and France said it was "not a party" to any agreement.

The president had said he would not reverse course until martial law had been lifted in Poland, and the military regime there had released all political prisoners and opened a dialogue with the Solidarity trade movement.

"We have agreed not to engage in trade arrangements which contribute to the military or strategic advantage of the U.S.S.R. or serve to preferentially aid the heavily militarized Soviet economy," Reagan said in a nationally broadcast radio address.

"Now that we've achieved an agreement with our allies which provides for stronger and more effective measures, there is no further need for these sanctions, and I am lifting them today," he said.

In a government commun[illegible] in Paris, France said its views on East-West trade are well known to its allies and "took note" of the fact that Reagan had dropped the embargo.

The French announcement appeared to cast doubt on the assertion by Reagan and senior administration officials that the United States and its major allies had hammered out a common stance on trade with the Soviets.

Britain, Germany and Italy all welcomed the president's announcement. There was no reaction from the Soviet Union.

The French government said last week that it was unwilling to offer the United States any major concessions in return for the halting of the U.S. sanctions against the West European companies helping build the pipeline.

A senior U.S. official, speaking privately, said before the communique was issued that all of the partners in the long negotiating process were in substantial agreement.

Asked if that included France he replied, "On the substance, yes."

Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes told reporters aboard Air Force One returning from Chicago, where Reagan attended memorial services for his wife's stepfather, that the United States considered the French "in substantial agreement," but acknowledged what he called "a difference in perception."

"It has always been our understanding throughout the extensive negotiations with our allies that the French were in substantial agreement," Speakes said. "There's always been a difference in perception about the relationship of the pipeline sanctions and the overall East-West trade agreement the president announced today."

Speakes said there would be further talks to clarify the French position.

Some published analyses suggested during the course of the negotiations leading up to the trade policy agreement that France needed to save face by not linking an agreement to the end of sanctions and by projecting an image of steadfastness against the United States.

This interpretation, however, was not offered at the State Department on Saturday.

Senior U.S. officials briefing reporters at the State Department said nothing had been signed yet and some "details of wording" but not of substance remained to be worked out.

Reagan announced what he called a "plan of action" including:

—Priority attention will be given to high technology products, including those used in oil and gas production.

—An "urgent" study of Western energy alternatives will be launched with emphasis on dependence on energy imports from the Soviet Union.

—No new contracts for the purchase of Soviet natural gas will be signed or approved during the course of the study of alternative energy sources.

—Existing controls on the transfer of strategic items to the Soviet Union will be strengthened.

—Procedures for monitoring financial relations with the Soviet Union will be "established without delay" and the export credit policies of the nations involved will be harmonized.

"I'm pleased today to announce that the industrialized democracies have ... reached substantial agreement on a plan of action. The understanding we've reached demonstrates that the Western Alliance is fundamentally united and intends to give consideration to strategic issues when making decisions on trade with the U.S.S.R," Reagan said.

Reagan's pipeline announcement, coming shortly after he visited the Soviet embassy here to pay respects to the memory of Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev, was coupled with a message to the new leaders in the Kremlin.

Air Sickness Delays Space Walk

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Mission specialist William Lenoir, suffering from nausea, called in sick on Saturday — prompting flight officials to put off for one day the space walk he was scheduled to take early Sunday with another space shuttle crewmen.

Lenoir became the sixth of NASA's first 12 shuttle astronauts to be struck with motion sickness, the malaise of weightlessness. He and Joseph Allen had already unstowed their equipment for the outdoors exercise when Houston sent word of the postponement.

"We looked at it and said let's give them another day and not push it," said flight director John Cox.

The space walk is the only important flight objective remaining for the crew of Columbia before their return Tuesday. Shuttle communicator Jon McBride told the astronauts that Mission Control was taking advantage of flight "flexibility" in hopes Lenoir would be fully recovered for the strenuous, 3½-hour space walk.

"The report we had was he wasn't up to 100 percent yet," Cox said. "Right now he's on the mend."

The flight director said that, if it became absolutely necessary, Allen might take the space walk alone. "We would like to do it, and do it with two men," he said, "but we would go ahead with one."

Cox said also that extending the flight by a day — or even two — to get in a two-man space walk "is always an option" but no consideration had yet been given to that. Columbia has enough "consumables"

Walesa Reported Freed But Turns Up Missing

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The martial-law government announced Saturday that Lech Walesa, chief of the outlawed Solidarity trade union, had been freed after 11 months of internment, but he could not be located.

A devout Roman Catholic, he had spoken of serving the church in some capacity, and there was speculation that he might have been spirited away by church officials.

Reliable sources said that at 3 p.m., Walesa boarded a helicopter and left the remote government resort in southeastern Poland where he had been detained, but they did not know his destination.

They said he was released after being interviewed by a reporter for the government television network. The interview originally was scheduled to be broadcast Saturday night, but then was rescheduled for Sunday with no explanation given.

A transcript of the interview was obtained by some Western reporters, and it quoted Walesa as calling for an agreement "not on my knees, but a fair, proper agreement."

He said he felt there was a chance for agreement but "there is something wrong because we are not being able to understand

Vietnam Memorial Dedicated

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thousands of Vietnam veterans paraded with pride Saturday where anti-war protesters marched a decade earlier, then dedicated a new national monument honoring themselves and their 57,939 missing and fallen comrades.

They marched to the newly lain turf before the gleaming black granite walls of the monument bearing the names of Americans who did not return from Vietnam, and — in speech and song and silent reflection — paid homage to the war's victims and the 2.7 million who served and came home to an indifferent welcome from a divided nation.

Some former soldiers were almost overcome by the emotion of the moment. A few wept openly and took comfort from the embrace of their buddies. But it was a joyful occasion for most.

The crowd cheered the marchers and the marchers cheered the crowd.

The day turned cold and windy, and alternately gray and sunstreaked. The mood changed, too: once tearful and somber, a moment later, joyful and triumphant.

U.S. Park Police estimated that 150,000 people watched the parade and attended the monument dedication, but that estimate seemed high to other observers. The crowd along the line of march was sparse and many bleacher seats were empty.

Memorial ...

In the uniform of the day — olive drab field jackets and blue jeans — and often out of step, about 20,000 veterans marched in their own welcome home parade.

They marched down Constitution Avenue in ragged columns, waving little American flags, and led by white-haired Gen. William C. Westmoreland, wearing a raincoat and carrying two little flags. The old Vietnam commanding general marched with the Alabama contingent at the head of the parade.

One marching ex-GI waved and grinned and shouted, "Thank you, people." And in the crowd, a woman held aloft a sign: "Thanks, yanks."

On the same street in May, 1971, thousands of war protesters fought with police and were felled by teargas in the most violent Washington demonstration of the era. Some carried the yellow and red flag of the National Liberation Front and chanted: "Ho, Ho, Ho Chi Minh; the NLF is going to win."

But the national divisions of hawks and doves were faded memories Saturday.

Veterans walked in state units — hundreds from New York, 20 from Alaska, three legless men in wheelchairs leading Indiana's contingent, men in white shirts and three-piece suits from south Boston, a band from Delaware playing, "When Johnny Comes Marching Home Again."

In the fading uniform of an Army specialist 4th class, John Chucoski of Ijamsville, Md. marched pushing his son, Stephen, 2, in a baby carriage.

At the dedication, the highest government official present was Everett Alvarez Jr., deputy director of the Veterans Administraion and a prisoner in North Vietnam for 8½ years — longer than any other captive.

President Reagan took no part. He visited the Soviet embassy to pay his condolences on the death of Leonid I. Brezhnev, then flew to Chicago for a memorial service for Nancy Reagan's stepfather, Dr. Loyal Davis, who died Aug. 14.

Alvarez recalled the silent indifference that greeted GIs returning from a distant, costly, unpopular war.

"There was a time long past," he said, "when words would have mattered more. But at this place — for all time — it is our hearts that speak. God bless this nation and those who have honored it with their service."

Jan Scruggs, the former infantryman who conceived the idea for a monument, declared, "Now all Americans can agree that Vietnam veterans deserve recognition and appreciation for their sacrifices."

A letter from Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger to Scruggs was read at the ceremony:

"When your country called, you came. When your country refused you honor, you remained silent. With time, our nation's wounds have healed. We have finally come to appreciate your sacrifices and to pay you your tribute you so richly deserve."

A few signs of bitterness remained. One fatigue-clad marcher, George Robinson, 35, of Long Island, N.Y., carried a placard that read: "57,000 Killed in Vain. Shame, Horror, Deceit, Treachery." He told a reporter: "We all have children now, and we don't want them to march off like tin soldiers without thinking again."

About 200 members of the Vietnam Veterans Against the War, a protest group from the war era, chanted "Hell no, I won't go" and carried banners that read: "We won't be fooled again" and "We want jobs."

The monument was built from $7 million in public contributions. It takes the form of a wide V. The walls are 250 feet long. They are only a few inches high at the edges but descend 10 feet into the ground at the point where they meet.

Over the last few days, thousands of veterans and survivors of those named on the wall have visited the monument. Some placed flowers and lit candles at the base of the walls and some taped newspaper obituaries beside the names of loved ones.

The Vietnam Veterans Memorial Fund, which Scruggs founded, intends to place a flagpole and a lifesize sculpture depicting three American soldiers in Vietnam on the monument grounds to placate former servicemen who considered the monument too stark and bleak and to be a tribute to the dead but not those who fought and returned. The statue is to be put in place in about a year.

The names of the Vietnam missing and dead are listed in chronological order from 1959 to May 15, 1975, and a printed directory the size of a telephone book is on hand to help people locate a name.

each other. We are talking about the same thing but not in the same way."

Walesa said he was "a man for agreement and I want to do something for all of us, and that is why I agreed to give this interview. No matter how it will come out, I will always say what I am thinking and what I have been thinking, because I have not changed.

"Nobody forced me to do this interview or into this situation and I am just the same as when I walked in here."

There was immediate speculation that Walesa's statements would disappoint many of his most militant supporters.

The government news agency PAP announced Parliament will meet in special session on Dec. 13 — the first anniversary of military rule that began the crackdown on Solidarity. The union was outlawed in October.

Some observers speculated the Parliament might lift martial law, but others were skeptical.

PAP claimed Walesa rejoined his family at their home in the northern port of Gdansk, but it later withdrew the report without explanation. Walesa's wife told The Associated Press she had not seen him.

Earlier, about 500 people screaming "long live Solidarity!" and "We want Lech!" ringed Walesa's Gdansk home awaiting his arrival during a daylong vigil.

Walesa's reported release came two days after the Communist government announced it was freeing him because he was no longer considered a political threat.

Interior Ministry officials said Saturday that Walesa left the government resort near the Soviet border where he had spent six months of his 11 months in confinement. But conflicting reports emerged on Walesa's whereabouts after he failed to arrive in Gdansk.

The fact that no word had been received from Walesa by his family suggested he was still in the custody of security officers taking him either to Warsaw or Gdansk, or had been taken in by Catholic church officials.

The influential church had repeatedly asked for Walesa's release, and rumors circulated in Warsaw that he was taken to an undisclosed location by church officials who planned to ease him back into public life in order not to provoke new unrest.

"I believe he is in Warsaw," said the family priest, Father Henryk Jankowski, when pressed by the youthful crowd parading outside Walesa's house. "We have been waiting 11 months so let us wait for a couple hours more. For sure, he will be here tomorrow (Sunday)."

But Jankowski, Walesa's wife Danuta, and government officials declined to say if they actually knew where Walesa was. At the same time in the Roman Catholic shrine city of Czestowchowa, 125 miles southeast of Warsaw, a priest said Walesa was expected to stop there en route home.

Shuttle ...

aboard for at least two extra days.

On the shuttle's third flight, bad weather at the landing site caused NASA officials to extend the flight by one day.

Lead director Tommy Holloway said the mission agenda provided "no overriding reason" not to delay the space walk — originally scheduled for 8 a.m. EST. "If it becomes prudent, we will wait," he told reporters.

"We're looking forward to the EVA — tomorrow," commander Vance Brand said pointedly on Saturday. Communications with Earth were done for the day before Jon McBride broke the silence to tell Brand the decision to swap Sunday's activities with Monday's.

"That's affirmative," said Brand.

If Lenoir had to be sick, Saturday was a good day for it. So little work was scheduled that the astronauts pressed Houston not once, but twice, for news of home. The headlines hadn't penetrated Mission Control, however, and an official was sent off for an Associated Press summary.

"The biggest news is the new secretary-general of the Communist Party" in the Soviet Union, flight communicator Michael Coats finally told the astronauts. He also read items about Poland's Lech Walesa, the march of Vietnam veterans and the National Football League strike. He ticked off some college games, promising scores later. "Sure appreciate that," said pilot Robert Overmyer. Indiana Joe Allen asked for the Wabash-Depauw score.

Earlier, Overmyer had offered condolences to the Soviet people for Wednesday's death of Leonid Brezhnev.

"There's a little known story that I'll tell you," he told Mission Control, about "how President Brezhnev ... wearing my silver astronaut pin." Overmyer was on the Apollo-Soyuz 1975 support crew and made several trips to the Soviet Union. At a Kremlin reception, he recalled, "The Soviet delegation gave the American delegation a number of items. We weren't prepared and I took off my silver astronaut pin" for Brezhnev.

It was Brand, himself a member of the Apollo-Soyuz flight crew, who summoned NASA medical chief Dr. Sam Poole for a mid-morning medical conference.

Poole later told reporters that Lenoir and Overmyer both had suffered nausea but that Overmyer recovered on launch day. Thursday. Lenoir, he said, felt well the first day out, became ill Friday and vomited after breakfast Saturday.

Poole said if that should happen while the mission specialist was in his space suit and helmet, "it would be a most aggravating situation," adding, "We're going to be pretty cautious here."

Allen could take the walk alone, but that would bend mission rules which prefer a two-man EVA.

The illness of the two crewmen had no impact, of course, on the shuttle's main mission, which was to deploy two commercial satellites. The satellites, one for an American firm, the other for a Canadian company, were placed into their proper orbit exactly as scheduled, satisfying NASA's first commercial shuttle contract — a $17 million commitment.

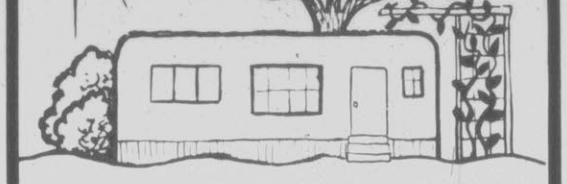

Columbia's five-day flight is to end Tuesday at 6:25 a.m. Pacific time on a concrete runway at Edwards Air Force Base in California.

ENERGY AND YOUR MOBILE HOME

Mobile homes may present special problems when it comes to retrofitting them for greater energy efficiency. Don't be discouraged though, mobile home owners can reduce energy costs in many ways.

If possible, situate your mobile home along an east-west axis. This position alone can reduce your energy use by 10 percent or more. The windows on your long south side will serve as passive solar collectors during the winter, and during summer you can easily shade them to prevent unwanted heat gain.

Since mobile homes have proportionally more window area than conventional homes, you can save energy by installing storm windows. They will reduce air infiltration by as much as 30 percent. You can make them yourself by taping polyethylene plastic to the inside of each window frame.

Skirting attached around your mobile home will save energy by reducing air movement under the flooring. Be sure the skirted space is vented so that moisture can escape.

Clever landscaping will also cut your utility bills. Vines planted on a trellis will shade a patio or wall and reduce heat gain. Trees that shed their leaves in winter will be especially effective on the west and south sides of your home.

Reflective roof coatings can keep your roof many degrees cooler. And, you can apply these paint-like coatings yourself.

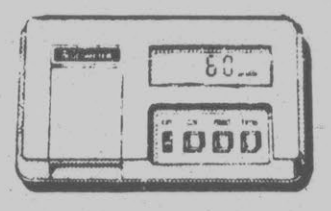

For a Free booklet on ways to save energy in your mobile home, contact the Energy Services Office at Greenville Utilities, 752-7166, ext. 278.

day," in the landfill during the summer," Cahoon noted.

Now that the beaches are far less crowded, Cahoon said "we're putting garbage in a temporary approved site near the airport until larger ferries can get running so we can take the garbage back to the mainland.

"It's just created a lot of problems, particularly for the people living on that side (the mainland side of Croatan Sound)."

He said the county last week ran a boat two round trips per day across Croatan Soundo to transport the 18 county employees and others to and from Roanoke Island. "We carried 90 to 95 people a day."

"We have fire protection on the mainland side," Cahoon said from his Manteo office, and "we've stationed an ambulance over there. "If people are in critical shape, we can transport them by helicopter."

Sheriff Frank Cahoon, who noted that the bridge divides the county in half, said he has one deputy, John Barnes, who lives at Manns Harbor and will remain on the mainland to handle calls in that western section of the county.

Highway Patrol Troop A commander Capt. Carl Gilchrist said from his Greenville office that, while all patrolmen stationed in Dare County live on Roanoke Island or the county's barrier islands, he expects no problems or changes in the patrol's operations in the area.

He noted that the Dare County deputy sheriff at Manns Harbor "will be taking mainland calls ... investigating accidents for the patrol," in routine situations. If assistance is needed, Gilchrist said troopers from adjoining counties will be sent to mainland-Dare.

Steve Basnight, superintendent of the Dare County school system, said the 95 students in kindergarten through the sixth grade were attending classes at the community center in Manns Harbor. They were being taught, he said, by "two mainland teachers and two teachers from the island" who were being ferried across the sound by boat.

The 80 students in grades seven through 12, Basnight said, were being bused to Roanoke Island's Manteo High School by Wednesday, on two N.C. Marine Fisheries' World War II landing craft that had been pressed into service as ferries.

"The greatest disadvantage is the amount of time crossing the sound ...1 hour and 15 minutes," according to Basnight. However, he said the Department of Transportation is "constructing ramps for Hatteras (Inlet) type ferries now. That will help tremendously .... it will cut the crossing time to 20 or 30 minutes.

"Our greatest problem," Basnight said, has been "getting employees to Manns Harbor in the morning." He said the boat which the two teachers have been using to reach Manns Harbor each day "leaves at 5:30 a.m., and that makes for a long day."

He said school students attending the temporary school on the mainland have been "bringing their lunches," and emphasized that "the communities of Manns Harbor, East Lake and Stumpy Point have been very cooperative. The parents have helped mow the yard, set up a playground area, and have been willing to help any way they possibly can."

Coast Guardsman Edward Mann of the cutter Point Brown said the Coast Guard is guarding the bridge to keep fishermen and other boaters from under the structure. "We'll be here until signs can be made to hopefully keep persons from under the structure."

Roanoke Islander Don Covington, who lives near the airport, said, "The only thing that will bother me about the closing is when I go home for Thanksgiving or Christmas. I was just checking to see what the schedules were for my wife. She's a nursing student and will be going to the Plymouth hospital for a tour.

"And there are some of my friends that live in Stumpy Point and work in Manteo. It'll be an inconvenience for them."

Les Garner, owner of Garner Wholesale Merchandisers Inc. in Greenville, said the bridge closing has has little effect on his firm's operations in Dare County.

"We've had to make some adjustments," Garner said. However, he noted "we have a sub-warehouse in Elizabeth City," and are able to work the islands of Dare County from that facility.

"There's been so little problem our Elizabeth City supervisor has taken care of it."

Fate Batts, director of transportation for Quinn Wholesale Co. in Warsaw, said they send a truck to Manteo, three days each week. "It's costing us about $150 extra per trip going by Elizabeth City," he said.

He said the extra cost is the result of the "2½ to 3 hours longer" the truck has to travel.

The trip from Greenville to Manteo, by way of the Croatan Sound Bridge is about 120 miles. Now that the bridge is closed, the trip is 175 miles by Elizabeth City.

From Rocky Mount to Manteo, by way of the Umstead Bridge, the trip is 136 miles, while by way of Elizabeth City, the distance is about 180 miles.

The only other route to Dare County is along US 264 to Swanquarter, and the Swanquarter to Ocracoke toll ferry. Motorists traveling to Ocrocoke on the ferry then have to drive to Hatteras Inlet and catch a ferry there to Dare County's Hatteras Island.

The present temporary ferry from the mainland to Roanoke Island, on which local area residents and emergency equipment have priority, leaves Manns Harbor at 7:15 a.m., 10:45 a.m. and 2:15 p.m. each day.

The ferry leaves the airport on Roanoke Island for the return trip to the mainland at 9 a.m., 12:30 p.m. and 4 p.m.

Mile-Long Train Leaves Tracks

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A freight train nearly a mile long derailed Saturday in a desert north of the Imperial Valley, scattering railroad cars and injuring one person, officials said Saturday.

It was the second derailment in Southern California in as many days. A Santa Fe freight train jumped tracks warped by recent storms in Tustin on Friday, but there were no injuries, police said.

And in Arizona, 14 cars of a Santa Fe freight train derailed Saturday and several caught fire. At least one firefighter was overcome by smoke.

In California, the train which derailed north of the Imperial Valley about 2 a.m. threw 20 piggyback railroad cars off the tracks. The train was carrying mostly new cars, and no hazardous materials, said Southern Pacific spokesman Tony Adams.

Jesus Valencia, in his 30s, who was riding the train, was taken to Pioneers Memorial Hospital in Brawley and treated for minor injuries. Valencia, who was believed to be an illegal alien, was released to the Border Patrol, officials said.

The train was bound from Chicago to Los Angeles when it toppled midway between Indio and Yuma, 150 miles southeast of Los Angeles, Southern Pacific Transportation spokesman Gene Hardyman said.

Service on the main line was expected to be stalled for more than 20 hours as emergency crews worked with cranes to clear up the mess.

Rail officials at the site speculated the derailment might have been caused by a broken rail. But Adams said the cause could include the effects on the tracks of extreme desert heat and cold.

In Tustin, five boxcars loaded with grain and nonhazardous materials skipped tracks at Edinger Avenue, said police Lt. Steve Foster. The track's wooden parts had apparently swelled from rain earlier in the week, pushing the steel ties outward, he said.

The train remained upright, but it blocked traffic for 18 hours, said police dispatcher Debbie Burns. Traffic was again halted Saturday as crews replaced the tracks, she said.

In northeastern Arizona near the town of Navajo, the fire in the derailed cars was contained Saturday and crews were waiting for the wreckage to cool off, said a Santa Fe official, who refused to identify himself other than as chief dispatcher for the railroad's Winslow office.

The dispatcher said he had no record of any of the cars containing dangerous substances.

But Chris Mueller, chief duty officer for the state department of Public Safety in Phoenix, said the train's cargo was believed to include "ammunition, fuel oil, corrosives and automobile passive-restraint (air bag) propellant cannisters."

Mueller said the propellant cannisters alone were classified as Class B explosives. He said he did not know if the ammunition was for military or civilian use.

Reporter Shot

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — An American reporter was shot in the head Saturday when he and two other correspondents were caught in a crossfire between left-wing guerrillas and army troops.

Clifford Krauss, on assignment here for the Cox Enterprises newspaper group, underwent surgery for removal of the bullet, which had lodged in the back of his head, and was in good condition at a hospital in San Salvador.

Krauss, 29, said the shooting occured 47 miles east of San Salvador on the Pan-American Highway when he and Robert Rivard of the Dallas Times Herald and Julia Preston of National Public Radio were caught in a firefight.

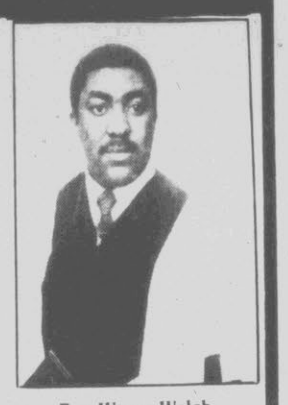

Krauss, interviewed by telephone from his hospital bed, said they had stopped at a guerrilla roadblock in San Vicente province when a group of rebels, apparently unaware that they were journalists, began firing at them.

Krauss said he and the others were attempting to identify themselves to the guerrillas when soldiers with automatic weapons approached and began shooting. The guerrillas fled, he said, but the journalists were pinned down under a vehicle by the soldiers' fire.

ECU Enrollment Declines

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Full-time enrollment on the 16 campuses of the University of North Carolina has increased an estimated 1.4 percent this fall over last year, UNC officials say.

But UNC officials said they were concerned that at seven schools, including the system's five traditionally black campuses, enrollments were below the projected range that was the basis for this year's budget.

Enrollment rose 1.5 percent at Appalachian State University, 1.3 percent at N.C. School of the Arts, 2.2 percent at N.C. State University, 1 percent at Pembroke State University, 14.8 percent at UNC-Asheville, 2 percent at UNC-Chapel Hill, 3.9 percent at UNC-Charlotte, 7 percent at UNC-Wilmington but only .3 percent at predominantly black N.C. Central University.

Enrollment declined 3 percent at predominantly black Elizabeth City State University, .6 percent at Fayetteville State University, 2.4 percent at N.C. A&T, and 1.2 percent at Winston-Salem State University.

Enrollment also declined .1 percent at East Carolina University, .2 percent at UNC-Greensboro and 1.8 percent at Western Carolina University, all mostly white schools.

Four of the black schools could lose state funds in two years if a projected downslide in enrollment holds, said Raymond Dawson, UNC's vice president for academic affairs. They are N.C. A&T, Winston-Salem State, Fayetteville State and Elizabeth City State.

Dawson said the black schools were hurt by aggressive recruiting of black high school graduates by white schools trying to reach minority goals and by uncertainty this fall about the availability to federal student aid.

Heavy Outlays

NEW YORK (AP) — The nation spent $23.4 billion on energy in the month of May, according to a survey by Energy User News. This was 9.3 percent of the gross national product.

The energy-oriented weekly said this compared with $24.9 billion in May of 1981, when energy costs accounted for 10.5 percent of the gross national product.

Tobacco Event Has Pleasures For Everyone

The fifth annual Southern Flue-Cured Tobacco Festival is under way in Pitt County and will continue with a multitude of events through Thursday.

The event has drawn up to 50,000 visitors to the area each year to honor the crop which means so much economically to North Carolina.

It is basically a fun time with such events at the Tobacco Festival Scholarship Pageant which was held Friday night. A number of events have already been held, but there is lots more to do. Next week there will be an agricultural art display, tobacco tying contest, clogging contest, tobacco grading contest. Jerry Clower will entertain Thursday at Farmers Warehouse and bands will perform at various times.

There have already been such events as the antique car parade, quilt show, pig cookoff, tractor driving contest and a warehouse dance.

The festival offers much to entertain anyone who wishes to participate. It is a time to honor the farm crop which has been of such great importance in maintaining a balanced economy for our area.

The events which are being carried out during the festival are fun for everyone regardless of whether or not they are actively involved in the tobacco industry. Let us all join in the festivities.

U.S. Space Shuttle Rapidly Proving Its Workhorse Role

Once again the American space shuttle Columbia is in orbit around the earth. Now dubbed the "space truck," the vehicle is carrying four crew members. One of their jobs was to place two communications satellites in orbit to demonstrate the practical uses of the space shuttle.

Like the other shots, this one was said to have been flawless. It was the fifth time a shuttle had been sent into orbit with little trouble. The crew and their vehicle will be in orbit until Tuesday when they will return to the earth's gravity and then attempt to land as the other shuttle flights have done.

Space shots do not necessarily cause the general excitement that they once did with the general public. In a sense, though, the shuttle flights are more exciting than the earlier experimental ones. We are finally reaching the point of making practical use of our space efforts. We have the equipment which we know is reliable and there is no end to the tasks that can be accomplished in orbit.

Sunday Morning Notes

Alvin Taylor

Daily Reflector photographer Tommy Forrest and Pitt County Magistrate Bill Whitehurst, a licensed pilot, got a very good look at the damaged William B. Umstead bridge at Roanoke Island last week.

The bridge was damaged when it was struck by a water craft on Friday of last weekend. The damage was not fully known until the next morning and then authorities, citing the extreme danger of the damaged pilings, closed the bridge to traffic.

Manteo and Nags Head were cut off to land traffic from the west and they will remain that way for some time except for a makeshift ferry operation that has been quickly assembled.

Tommy's part came when a hurry-up call was received from the Asssociated Press in Raleigh. They needed pictures of the damaged portion of the bridge for newspapers everywhere.

Tommy contacted Whitehurst who agreed to pilot the flight.

The two flew out of the Washington airport around 9:35 and made a sweep by the bridge around 10:15. Reports had indicated that several pilings had been knocked out so they were surprised to find the bridge virtually intact. Then they landed at the Manteo airport on Roanoke Island where they were told the damage was on the north side of the bridge and it was not highly visible.

Back up in the air they passed on the north side and spotted the broken concrete piling which was the most damage to be seen.

On several sweeps Tommy took pictures with a Nikon F camera and a wide angle lens. They returned to Greenville that afternoon, where the pictures were processed and transmitted on the Associated Press Laserphoto network by means of a transmitter kept permanently at the Daily Reflector office.

The demand for photos of the bridge disaster was apparently major among AP member newspapers, and the news service asked Tommy to make a second flight on Thursday. This time the landing barges being put in service as a temporary ferry were photographed, along with construction of ferry slips which will serve the area until the bridge is completed.

There were sidelights to the trip. Tommy, a radio amateur, carried a portable unit along. The four-watt unit doesn't have great range but from the air Tommy found himself talking to an instructor in an electronics class in Burlington. The signal was relayed through a repeater in Raleigh.

And the Brody Medical Sciences building is becoming a landmark in this area. Tommy said the building was clearly visible as the plane flew at around 2,000 feet between Belhaven and Bath.

Jobs

James Gerstenzang

WASHINGTON (AP) — This is the time of year in Washington when defeated candidates start casting hopeful glances at the White House, for help finding a job, and bureaucrats cast wary glances in the same direction, fearful about losing theirs.

One week beyond one election, and 103 weeks from the next, Washington is starting a new biennial cycle.

At the White House, that means taking advantage of the calendar to shuffle personnel, under the guise of a midterm break. With the last election fading and the next still far away, it also means it is time to chop up, with the least likely political damage, the budget requests that are flowing in from the government's agencies.

President Reagan has set aside 10 hours this week to listen to budget deliberations, returning to a pattern he followed last year.

This year, the talks have begun later than usual. Had they been held before Election Day, preliminary ideas about cutting spending could have leaked out and possibly hurt the Republicans. So, the first budget talks on Reagan's schedule occurred a week ago, on the very day Americans were going to the polls to cast ballots and their verdicts on the first two years of the Reagan administration.

Larry Speakes, the chief deputy White House press secretary, was talking about the number of defeated Republican candidates when the subject turned to helping them find jobs in Washington.

"There are a lot of well-qualified, soon-to-be-former (Republican) governors out there," he said.

Those ranks include Gov. William Clements of Texas, a Reagan loyalist who sampled Washington's lures during the Ford administration by taking a job at the Pentagon.

The problem is this: there aren't many jobs open. Clements was rumored to be a candidate for the job of energy secretary, even up to the day it was filled by Donald P. Hodel, who will move over from the Interior Department if given Senate approval.

The White House is a prime topic for anyone spreading shakeup rumors. Speakes went to great lengths earlier this week to deny that two of Reagan's top aides, chief of staff James A. Baker III and deputy staff chief Michael K. Deaver, had gone to Reagan with the ultimatum that if the third member of the "Big Three," counselor Edwin Meese III, did not leave, they would.

"Foolishness. Wrong. Off-the-wall," he said.

As for the budget, Reagan and his top aides will be meeting on an almost daily basis into mid-December, "when the president will begin to make final decisions," Speakes said.

"He will make decisions (on the budget) right up until Christmas," said Speakes.

Now the president is dealing with an overview of the budget situtation. That means he is focusing on the general problems posed by trying to build up defenses, hold down the deficit, fend off the political liabilities inherent in domestic program cuts, and keep to his vow not to raise taxes in 1983.

At the same time, he must demonstrate that he is willing to compromise, as he has asked the new Congress to do.

With a net Republican loss of 26 seats in the House on Nov. 2, Reagan has already begun singing a tune of reconciliation as he faces a House less likely to feel the threat of White House pressure, and a Senate that is already talking about demonstrating greater independence than it has in the past two years.

Governor's Mansion Offers Culinary Diversion

Paul T. O'Connor

RALEIGH — There's a quaint little spot in Raleigh where a couple of times a week a wonderful lunch is served. The Italian-American chef from New York prepares delicious tea bread sandwiches with cream cheese, fruit salads and delicate pastries. Nothing very heavy, almost always buffet-style.

No, the eatery isn't atop any of the city's office buildings. It's not even a restaurant. It's the Governor's Mansion.

In all, as many as 100,000 people will visit the Governor's Mansion this year. About 75 percent will be tourists who'll visit in the spring and fall or during Christmastime. But another 25,000 people will come to eat, either with the governor and his family or for a public function.

Marla Kramer, executive assistant to Carolyn Hunt, says Gov. Jim Hunt regularly uses the mansion for business lunches. Sometimes he'll have as few as four guests. At other times, there'll be 100 people invited. If Hunt invites fewer than 24 people, they can all sit in the dining room. If more than 24, a buffet will most likely be provided and guests are allowed to roam the first floor looking for a place to sit. The morning room, a brightly colored sun porch off the back of the house, is the most popular place although many people will sit on the couches and chairs of the more formal rooms.

Mrs. Hunt plans all menus. Chef Bob Passarelli uses only fresh ingredients and makes everything "from scratch", Mrs. Kramer says. Buffets are held quite often because of the time restraints the governor faces.

You don't have to have business with the governor to be invited to the mansion, however. The house is open to any statewide organization which wants to hold a dinner, lunch or tea there. For example, the N.C. March of Dimes recently booked a date. In those cases, the sponsor pays only for the groceries needed. All other services are provided free. The mansion can hold as many as 3,000 people in these cases.

If a state agency uses the mansion for lunch, they're charged for the groceries from their budget. The governor's family must also pay for its food. Ms. Kramer says that a buffet of "finger food" which will leave you feeling like you've had enough to eat costs an average of $3.50 to $4.

Service is provided by well-tailored servants — inmates from either the Wake Advancement Center or Women's Prison. For reporters, that means an opportunity to visit with their old sources, like the former Lumberton city official now serving time for misusing funds who refilled this reporter's iced tea at a recent education lunch.

Begin Visit Pinpoints Differences

Rowland Evans and Robert Novak

WASHINGTON — Stunned by estimates of how much U.S. tax money helps finance Israel's settlement and absorption of the Palestinian West Bank, an angry George Shultz has ordered aides to supply him with exact figures — possibly leading to a threatened reduction of U.S. aid in order to save the Reagan peace plan.

Shultz's exploration into the political minefields of U.S. aid to Prime Minister Menachem Begin's government followed overdue briefings by top aides 10 days ago. They showed that Begin's government now spends about $100 million a year (attributable in one form or another to U.S. aid) to supply homes for Israeli settlers, despite President Reagan's appeal for a "freeze" on all new settlements. Shultz knows Reagan's Sept. 1 peace plan is dead unless Begin reverses his settlements policy.

Begin's first attack rejecting the Reagan peace plan annoyed the Reagan administration, but was written off as preliminary Begin bombast and not final. Now that Begin is flouting his accelerated expansion of Jewish settlements, the administration's mood has har dened. With Begin due here next week for crucial White House talks, Reagan could issue this warning: Freeze settlements or take a cut in aid until settlements are frozen; American taxpayers will not subsidize the collapse of the Reagan peace plan.

The $100 million annual cost estimate of Israel's colonization of the West Bank or iginally came from Meron Benvenisti, a former deputy mayor of Jerusalem, and an outspoken foe of Begin. Mideast specialists in the State Department have accumulated voluminous data of their own, all of which conforms to Benvenisti's.

Until now, Shultz had been unaware both of the exor bitant cost and of the methods Begin is using to induce Israelis to move to the West Bank. Shultz was shocked to learn that new West Bank housing is supplied at less than one-half its cost in Israel proper; that basic services and utilities are free; that some mortgage loans of up to 80 percent are not collected so long as the buyer occupies his new home.

What hit Shultz hardest was the implication that U.S. aid to Israel may be essential for Begin to subsidize his absorption policy. Shultz saw irony in the fact that American taxpayers, suffering from deep recession and 10 percent unemployment, may be financing an Israeli policy that dooms Reagan's peace plan. In a private discussion, the president and secretary of state last week agreed that in the words of one insider, "some eggs may have to be broken" when Begin arrives Nov. 19 at the Oval Office.

Whether and how to break those eggs is undecided. In the past, every time a president hinted at cutting aid to Israel to promote American national interests, the pro-Israel bloc in Congress fought back — and won. White House operatives think it might be different today, providing anti-Israeli feelings that erupted after the Lebanese invasion and the Beirut massacre have not dissipated entirely.

Even so, there are other risks. Any hint of U.S. retaliation could fuse Israeli opposition parties to Prime Minister Begin in a national front. Begin-watchers also fear that if the U.S. cut his aid, he would starve the rest of his government to fulfil his dream of 100,000 Jewish settlers by 1986.

For Reagan to avoid those risks, and continue to use U.S. tax dollars to subvert his peace plan, however, carries graver perils. It would suffocate Arab hopes, instilled by sweet music played for Arab leaders in the White House last month, that harmony with Israel is no longer the dominant tune.

Analyst Sees Little Change From Elections

James J. Kilpatrick

WASHINGTON — Richard M. Scammon, dean of political analysts, had breakfast the other morning with a dozen senior correspondents. It was two days after the election. I wish you could have been there, for we got more lessons in an hour with Scammon than one is likely to learn in a year of political science.

Scammon is a big fellow. He is almost as big as Paul Volcker of the Fed, who is the biggest guy in town. Though he deliberately has lost weight lately, Scammon still has the general dimensions and the helmet head of a right tackle. He is not only big; when it comes to election analysis he is also wise. He is even wiser than David Broder of The Washington Post, who is wiser than all the rest.

How did he read this year's elections? The returns, says Scammon, marked "a slight swing to the left within the center." This was no great Democratic victory; it was no Republican debacle. It was not a referendum on the economic policies of the president. The election was not much of anything. It was not even very interesting.

Scammon's point was that the 1982 returns fell precisely into the pattern of off-year elections. The Democrats gained about what they could be expected histor ically to gain. Scammon has been watching these things professionally since 1955; he has edited 15 volumes of political statistics; out of his capa[illegible] head he can call up the anti-Catholic vote for Hoover in Alabama in 1928 or the primary victories of Estes Kefauver in 1952. Scammon lives all day with these things.

This year's elections saw a predictable regrouping of the familiar Democratic coalition. Blue-collar workers who had drifted away in 1980, for example, tended to drift back. To a degree, the various ethnic and religious blocs did the same thing. In the end the Democrats made large gains at the state level, picked up 26 seats in the House, and won no more than a standoff in the Senate. It was par for the course.

But wait a minute, said a correspondent, what about those seven governorships that changed hands? "Being a governor these days," said Scammon, "can buy you a lot of trouble." The most probable effect, he added, will be to introduce elements of moderation at the 1984 Democratic National Convention. Under the new rules governors will have more clout than they have held in recent years.

The election returns, in Scammon's view, brought no good news for Sen. Edward Kennedy's presidential ambitions. The Massachusetts senator handily won re-election, but his percentage of victory was his lowest in 20 years. The general rule is that winners must keep looking like winners; they must keep doing better than everyone else in the herd. At the first perception of weakness, the wolves are upon them.

Scammon takes a long view of the "dirty campaigning" thought to figure in the 1982 elections. This year's campaigns, he says, were models of high-minded politesse compared to campaigns of 50 to 100 ycars ago. We are more antiseptic now. Voters want even dirty tactics to look clean. The candidate whose record is fairly attacked has an effective defense: Just yell "Smear!" and keep running.

In the continuing conflict between pragmatism and ideology, Scammon advises, bet on pragmatism every time. The first duty of a political party, if it hopes to win elections, is to look after its own people first; the worst blunder the Republicans have made, he suggests, is in letting even a faint perception grow that they mean to do anything at all about problems of Social Security. Half of our voters are now over 50 years of age. They are potential gold to the GOP. Scammon's cynical advice to President Reagan is to denounce the forthcoming report on Social Security as "unfair" before the report is issued.

What can be expected of the incoming 98th Congress? "Much noise and little action," says Scammon. The Democrats nave no cohesive programs of their own. All the "boll weevils" who ran for re-election will be back. The old disarray will still be there. It is not like this in Great Britain, he notes. There the party that wins an election wins the right to rule; here the winning party wins a right to negotiate. That's the outlook, says Scammon, and in this town, when Scammon speaks, everybody listens.

Public Forum

To the editor:

I am writing this letter in response to my disgust at the ignorant, mud-slinging tactics used by some current politicians to win their way to office and their seeming insensitivity to national issues. Last week, like many other Americans, I was subjected to a plethora of negative political ads that seemed to overlook the real issue of the campaign. Jack Marin, a Republic candidate running for Congress in North Carolina, accused his opponent Tim Valentine, of being "one of Tip's boys" (referring to Tip O'Neal, the current speaker of the House),. A popular N.C. Democratic Party ad slogan accused the Republicans of "mud slinging" and "refusing to face the issues." I was also shocked to learn during an NBC election night broadcast that over $12 million were spent by the losing candidate in the Texas gubernatorial campaign to get re-elected and the pervasive influence of political action committees in the election.

As a two-time college graduate unemployed since February, (although I have a master's degree in community health from ECU), I submit that there should be more important considerations in the minds of politicians instead of linking opponents with negative issues. As a young, voting American who wants to work and is unable (the current U.S. Labor Department unemployment statistics for October are 10.4 percent and expected to get worse), I could really care less whether a politician is "one of Tip's boys" or whether a party "refuses to face the issues." The issue that was ignored n this campaign by some politicians was the issue of COOPERATION! Sadly, it seems, the average politician today, (in both parties), is more concerned with cutting down his opponent, outspending him and putting him in a negative light. He refuses to face national issues of unemployment and cooperation among others. I challenge anyone to find more important issues than these.

During the recent election, I had the privilege of working in the write-in campaign for a close and respected friend of mine, Freddy Jacobson, and another lady I have come to know and respect, Mariem House. I spent Nov. 2 electioneering for them at the polls in Farmville, and I want to thank the people of Farmville for their courtesy and hospitality, with special thanks to ... poppy ladies" who made a long and tiring day also a pleasant one.

However, there was also un unpleasant side to the day. Representative Sam Bundy was the one person who was overtly rude and hostile to me constantly throughout the day. He went so far as to take the flyers from the hands of people who had accepted them from me and tear them up and throw them on the ground. As he was doing this, approximately 10-20 feet from the polling place, he would say in a loud voice, "We don't need any write-ins around here. These people don't believe in that stuff over here." This went on all day long, as each person approached the polls. Not only do I find this behavior discourteous and uncalled for, but it is also illegal and obstructive to a person's right to run for office in a free government.

Sam Bundy may have been re-elected as state representative, but I do not find his behavior "representative" of the people of Farmville or of this district. I am sending copies of this letter as a complaint to the members of the Board of Elections.

Editor's note: Rep. Bundy was asked by The Daily Reflector to comment on the content of Willis's letter. His comment follows: I exercised the same right as any other candidate did on Nov. 2. I visited only the Farmville Precinct and that for only part of the day. Within due bounds, I made statements that we do not believe in write-in votes and suggested to people as they came by to vote the straight Democratic ticket. For the past two months, I, along with many others, have been saying this same thing, and, for this, I, nor they, make no apology. In Farmville, 1,219 persons agreed with me and 21 did not and in the 9th House District, 12,728 supported this position, while only 962 did not. I appreciate the vote of confidence and will continue to serve the people of Pitt and Greene counties in the 1983-84 General Assembly to the best of my ability.

Money Today Just Isn't What It Used To Be

NEW YORK (AP) — You may remember when $100,000 was something, and that anyone able to control that kind of money was someone very big. Of course you do, because it was only yesterday, it seems, that it really was something.

There are people alive today, in fact, who remember when an expenditure of $100,000 could cause an uproar in Washington, where billions of dollars in expenditures are commonplace today, even when the funds aren't available.

It was a about five years ago that the median price of existing single-family homes rose to the $100,000 level. True, the buying price was about $42,200 at that time, but that was before the financing was considered.

Assuming a $10,000 down payment, a 10 percent interest rate and a 25-year payback period, the total price on that house, if the buyer were to own it outright, was about $98,875, and that didn't include the real estate taxes.

That looks like peanuts today, when the median buy-sell price is close to $68,000, the mortgage rate is around 14.25 percent, and the total price after 25 years of mortgage payments is $248,476, assuming no late-pay penalties.

To anyone who puts three children through classy colleges the magic of $100,000, which could be the bill, isn't there anymore. True, the fear is there. But, some parents are inclined to muse, how can $100,000 be that important anymore, how can it be considered special, when it buys so little?

Perhaps the question would be more appropriately directed toward the automobile, which over a lifetime can cost you $100,000 or more, strictly in the buying of it — that is, adding together list prices and financing costs.

If you add in the costs of registration, insurance, repairs and gasoline, conceivably you could approach another $100,000, especially if your insurance bills are costly and you run into more than your share of mechanical problems.

You will have to work hard for this, but then you are likely to earn a million dollars or so in the course of perhaps 40 years working. And since you are the one earning it, how can you be awed by a mere $100,000?

To drop $100,000 into deeper perspective you may if you like consider this: $100,000 is the amount it takes, on average, simply to create and support each job. Maybe your job.

Martin Lefkowitz, a U.S. Chamber of Commerce economist, is the source of that estimate, which he arrived at only after some detailed mathematics.

As a starter, he says, consider that the average working person has 12.4 years of education which, at today's prices, he figures is worth about $31,000. Now add $50,600, which is the average investment for private-sector workers.

Well, at any rate, that's what it was in 1979, says Lefkowitz, who arrived at the figure by dividing the number of workers by the $3.9 trillion value of all plant and equipment being used in the productive process that year.

Does $50,600 sound too big? It isn't. Because of inflation alone it is now more than that. And in agriculture, even three years ago, the average investment was more than $82,000, he points out.

Next, Lefkowitz adds in the public investments in support facilities, including highways, streets, sewer and water systems, without which the economy could not function. It comes to $17,500, he says.

Add it up. It comes to $99,100. All that just so that you can do your job. And if, as Lefkowitz says, you are the $100,000 man or woman, how can $100,000 be an awesome figure anymore?

Tar Heel Gender Gap

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Polls suggest a gender gap exists in North Carolina, but the state's female political leaders disagree sharply on whether North Carolina women actually vote differently than men.

Democrats enthusiastically predict the women's vote will play an even greater role in 1984, when President Reagan and Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., would seek re-election. But GOP women argue there is little — if any — gap now and there won't be in the future once women understand Reaganomics.

National surveys, such as one conducted Election Day by The New York Times and CBS News, indicated women are more likely than men to consider themselves Democrats and less likely to approve of the president's economic policies.

The semi-annual Carolina Poll conducted by the University of North Carolina's Journalism School shows similar splits.

The October telephone survey of 584 North Carolinians, for example, found 41 percent of the women rated Reagan's performance as excellent or pretty good compared with 52 percent of the men. Forty-seven percent of the women also identified themselves as Democrats compared with just 39 percent of the men.

Philip Meyer, a Kenan professor and the poll's co-director, called that sex-based difference significant.

"It used to be that pollsters didn't care if the person who answered (a telephone survey) was a male or female," he said. "We'll have to watch for this in the future."

Jane Brown, the poll's other director and head of UNC's Center for Research in Journalism and Mass Communication, said the differences also appeared when men and women were asked whether they would vote for Helms or Gov. James B. Hunt Jr. for senator in 1984. Forty-two percent of the men but only 30 percent of the women liked Helms, whereas women for Hunt outnumbered men 54 percent to 47 percent.

"We used to have women during surveys call over their shoulders, asking their husbands who they should vote for," she said. "We don't see that as much anymore. I kind of get the sense that they're making those decisions on their own."

Today the economy is "the ultimate woman's issue" Administration Secretary Jane Patteron said. But Sen. Rachel Gray, D-Guilford, suggested Reagan and Helms' views on social legislation — particularly abortion and the Equal Rights Amendment — will spur women to the polls in 1984.

"Reagan is the best recruiter the National Organization for Women ever had, and I think Helms is second," said Terry Schooley, NOW's former state president.

One official of the Democratic Party's Unity Campaign for the November elections, said she believes the gender gap already exceeds the national average. One reason why is that 62.2 percent of the state's adult women work.

But Ms. Brown disagreed.

"I think it's less of a split, because we have fundamentalist religious operating to counteract some of this," she said.

Republicans generally dispute the idea that North Carolina has a gender gap, arguing that any split stems from ignorance about Reaganomics and a failure by pollsters to reach GOP women.

"I find on balance, the women in our group are more supportive of President Reagan than the men," said Marie Ledbetter of Asheville, president of the North Carolina Federation of Republican women.

Rep. Betsy Cochrane, R-Davie, said she believes women in her western Piedmont district are more conservative than the national average and less likely to be noticed in an overwhelmingly Democratic state.

"I don't think the spectrum is like the media is indicating," she said. "I'm finding a gap but not that much. I think as more women get informed in what is good economically I think they are more inclined to support the president."

Ideas

If the Rev. Wendell Davis, like Job, had prayed that his adversary would write a book, he may have felt that the publication of Russell Brantley's little novel was an answer to his prayers.

"The book is bad, and its author has done Baptists and Wake Forest (College) an injustice," said Davis, a Baptist minister who had been a leader when the Baptist State Convention vetoed efforts to legalize dancing at Wake Forest and other Baptist institutions.

Davis, who has been elected to the Wake Forest trustees after the convention action on dancing, pointed out that Brantly was the college's publicity man "who is supposed to present a favorable picture of the college."

Instead, said Davis, by the publication of the book, "The Education of Jonthan beam," Brantley had pictured Wake Forest as filled with "vulgarity, foul language ... drunkenness and other misconduct."

"This misleading picture will cause Baptists of North Carolina to withhold their support from our program of Christian education, not only at Wake Forest but all Baptist institutions of higher learning in the state," Davis said in confirming that he had written other Wake Forest trustees urging them to chastise Brantley.

However, the trustees rejected Davis' stand. After 1½ hours of debate, the trustees voted 16-4 to take no action against Brandley and to uphold his "inherent right to speak his piece."

One trustee called the vote "a complete victory for freedom of expression."

Brantley, a veteran North Carolina newspaperman, sat in on the meeting as part of his job as the college's communications director and heard his book attacked and defended. Later, still as part of his job, he told reporters what had happened during the closed meeting.

Actually, "The Education of Jonathan Beam" is not a dirty book, and Davis was overstating the case when he asserted it was.

Brantley's foes were not overstating when they asserted that the book was an attack on the fundamentalist wing which dominated the Baptist State Convention as it voted overwhelmingly to ban dancing on the Wake Forest campus. Like many of the Wake Forest supporters, Brantley came away from that convention session thoroughly angry. His book was the result.

It is the story of a bright and sensitive young man from the North Carolina backwoods who goes off to Convention College thinking he might become a preacher. Despite his misgivings, his minister — aided by his mother — persuades him to keep his "eyes and ears open and ... write me about the sin that goes on there."

At Convention College, John — as Jonathan Beam is called — does find some sin. He soon learned some of his professors did not believe in the Bible word for word. His Latin professor said that Jesus Christ was the best and greatest man who ever lived and it was unimportant whether or not he wasb orn of a virgin. The biology professor "didn't put any store in Adam and Eve" and told his students matter of factly that "man had developed from a species that was subhuman."

In his report to his preacher, John said it looked like he was right about Convention College.

"They act nice, preacher," he said of the faculty. "And they seem smart. They say these things aren't really important. That it's what a man does and tries to do that is important. I don't mind telling you I'm mixed up."

John becomes even more mixed up after he meets a pretty coed, the daughter of a Baptist minister. She likes individual Baptists but has no use for them in groups and detests the Baptist State Convention. She teaches him to dance and then really knocks him off his pins by kissing him goodnight.

Later John and a classmate visit a downtown beer, get drunk on beer and John winds up singing a drunken serenade beneath his girl's dormitory window. He is caught and nearly kicked out of school.

John's mother hears of his shenanigans and orders him home. He does, in time to attend the meeting of the Baptist State Convention. He attends and hears the convention debate the issue of sin at Convention College as exemplified by on-campus dancing.

He's astounded to hear himself cited as a horrible example — a young man who left home two months ago "a dedicated Christian" who has been led to doubting, to dancing, to drinking "and making a public spectacle of himself on the campus."

The convention went on to disapprove of dancing, but John wound up by telling his mother firmly: "I've got to go back to college, Ma. It's a thing I have to do.

Brantley had depicted Convention College, or Wake Forest, as a place that does what a college is supposed to do: it teaches young people to think for themselves.

The ironic thing is that, although the convention ban on dancing remains in effect to this day, it has been virtually forgotten and is completely ignored at Wake Forest and other Baptist schools.

Need For A Job Is Not Alien To Reagan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan likes to point out that he remembers the Great Depression and the personal hardships it inflicted.

He has repeatedly recalled that his father, Jack Reagan, was fired on Christmas eve in that era. So the need for a job is not alien to the president.

"I remember what it's like to be 21 and to feel your future has been mortgaged by the generation before you," he said in last week's radio address. "That's a terrible tragedy we must never allow to happen again."

In a new Reagan biography by Washington Post correspondent Lou Cannon it is noteworthy that the president's father, an ardent Franklin Roosevelt fan, worked in the local welfare office, passing out government assistance to the needy.

In those days, it is doubtful that Reagan thought of the New Deal projects as "make work and dead end," but as life savers. But over the years he has developed a visceral feeling against government-sponsored jobs and programs that eased millions over the hump in those dark days.

With 11.5 million persons unemployed, many lawmakers on Capitol Hill are beginning to wonder what is the nation's tolerable level for joblessness, and when does it become less than tolerable. They also are seriously considering whether a program to put people to work building and repairing highways, bridges and dams is in order.

The House Democratic leadership has been in the forefront of such a proposal. The Senate Republicans are coming around to it.

Whether Reagan can swallow it is not certain. His spokesman describe such programs as a "quick fix" and say that he is seeking a permanent solution to the nation's economic plight.

But a "permanent solution" to unemployment requires a permanent prosperity for this country and no economist on the current scene has offered the key to that door.

So far, administration officials have tried not to get too far out on a limb in rejecting moves to have the government create hundreds of thousands of new jobs. They don't know when they might have to compromise.

Chief White House spokesman Larry Speakes told reporters that the New Deal projects did not work. He said that a job like that "plays out after six months and dumps the people back out on the labor market, sort of the type that the Democrats from time to time introduced, and vry similar to those they have been putting out here for 40 years that have not worked and had a steady increase of unemployment over 40 years."

When he was asked whether creation of jobs for building highways and other public projects were "dead end," he replied:

"Let's just wait and see how all these things come out."

But while the White House appears to be trying to hold the line, the Senate GOP leaders are reading the midterm election results in a different way.

They are considering a proposal for a $5 billion program that would be offset by cuts in military spending.

The projected increases in defense spending so far is sacrosanct with Reagan and he remains adamant against any reductions.

Fate Of Economy May Influence Reagan's Decision To Run

WASHINGTON (AP) — This time, President Reagan counseled patience. Next election campaign, he's going to have to point to results, to an economic comeback that will prove Reaganomics works.

Unless he can, he may decide against seeking a second term in the White House.

Nobody close to Reagan is saying that out loud, although Sen. Paul N. Laxalt, incoming chairman of the Republican National Committee, did say that the economic situation would have an impact on the president's decision.

Laxalt said he wouldn't have accepted the job if he didn't think Reagan would run for a second term.

Without the economic recovery Reagan says is beginning even now, the 1984 Republican campaign will be a tough one. Richard Richards, the party chairman Laxalt is replacing, says Republicans will do poorly unless unemployment is down substantially by then.

The campaign formula that produced what successes the Republicans gained on Nov. 2 is likely to be worn out long before the presidential election.

Republicans had expected an economic upturn earlier this year, but it didn't happen. Unemployment kept going up, to 10.1 percent during the midterm election campaign, 10.4 percent in the latest, post-election statistics.

The president pointed to declining inflation and interest rates as evidence that his program of tax cuts and budget restraints is starting to pay dividends. He said unemployment always is the last program to yield to economic recovery.

And he blamed the whole problem on Democrats, saying they spent and taxed the country into a recession that began before he took office.

Reagan also said he didn't get everything he proposed when he wanted it, pointing to the fact that his big tax cut was 5 percent smaller and 8 months later than he had recommended. He also said that Reaganomics deserved more than a 13-month trial.

Richards said that won't work again. He said next time, the voters will judge the Republican record, not the Democratic past.

Reagan economic proposals will have more trouble in the new Congress than the current one, with 26 more Democrats in the House, with with the Republican Senate likely to be restive. Nineteen GOP senators, including virtually all the party's leaders, are going to be up for re-election next time, and they will be increasingly concerned with their own problems.

All of that points to a season of compromise. Not that Reagan didn't do some compromising with the current Congress. He did, but he also complained during the campaign that because of those compromises, his economic program got something less than a full, fair test.

In the new session, Reagan said in a post-election radio speech, "cooperation will be the key. Campaign rhetoric and politics must be set aside."

He then listed an agenda for the lame-duck session of Congress, featuring some elements of his campaign for Republican candidates. For example, he called for action this year on a constitutional amendment designed to balance federal budgets later in the decade. The House Democrats who spurned that when the campaign heat was on are not about to approve it now.

Instead, Democrats are talking of billions of dollars worth of emergency public works jobs and housing programs. And Reagan is talking of vetoes against any spending not in his budget.

Given the lineup in Congress for the next two years, the likelihood is that each side will have to play the cards it has, with adjustments but no dramatic initiatives. That would mean that Republicans must bank on economic recovery built around what already has been done.

Richards, who is being replaced at Reagan's behest, said Republicans will suffer in the next election if unemployment is not down to the 7 percent range, which is about where the Democratic administration left it in 1980.

"By 1984, the economic problems that we are now blaming on the Democrats and on 40 years of congressional excesses will have become our problems," he said in a pre-election interview broadcast by Cable News Network. "I don't think we can run away from it for four years.

"We can run against Jimmy Carter for two years I'm sure," he said. "The Democrats have run against Herbert Hoover for 50 and have succeeded.

"By 1984, we will have had time to work our will, and our problem is either a good, sound program and it's going to solve the problem, or it isn't and we'll pay the price in 1984."

Auto Workers Propose Bieber As Union Leader

DETROIT (AP) — Owen Bieber, chosen to replace Douglas Fraser as head of the United Auto Workers, takes on a union whose ranks have been ravaged by layoffs and demoralized by a 3½-year domestic car sales slump and plant closings.

Bieber, a vice president of the union since 1980, was chosen Friday from among three candidates by the 26-member UAW executive board. The choice was approved by the 346-member steering committee, composed of union members from the United States and Canada.

The committee's recommendation goes to delegates next May at the UAW's convention in Dallas. Traditionally, delegates always have elected the board's nominee.

The 52-year-old head of the UAW's General Motors Corp. department said the top issues of his presidency include unemployment, especially in the auto industry; the union's dwindling membership; future contract talks at GM and Ford Motor Co.; and the 1984 U.S. presidential election.

The UAW, once second in the nation in membership behind the Teamsters, has slipped to third behind the Food and Commercial Workers union.

There are slightly more than 1.1 million UAW members, down from 1.5 million in the late 1970s, and more declines are expected.

Last week, some 252,000 UAW members employed by the five major domestic automakers were reported on layoff with no date for returning to work. Thousands more already have been dropped from the lists because they have no chance of being called back.

The problem is domestic car sales, which have plunged from 8.31 million in 1979 to 6.2 million last year and total just 4.7 million so far this year. The uncertain U.S. economy and competition from imports, particularly the Japanese, are blamed.

The Big Three carmakers — GM, Ford and Chrysler Corp. — have suffered billions of dollars in losses in the past three years and even GM and Ford received contracts earlier this year that contained concessions from the UAW.

Autoworkers used to the prosperous 1960s and 1970s, when they received hefty boosts in benefits and wages in each contract, grumbled about the need for givebacks. The contract Bieber negotiated at GM in March almost was defeated, with only a slim 52 percent of the workers approving it.

GM and Ford workers will expect to get back those concessions in new contract talks set for September 1984.

Chrysler is another story. Near bankruptcy before federal loan guarantees, supplier and bank aid and worker concessions bailed it out in 1980 and 1981. Chrysler is being struck by Canadian UAW members. They insist the company repay some of those concessions. Chrysler says it cannot afford to.

U.S. contract talks hit the same snag but workers voted against a strike. Instead, they intend to resume talks in January.

But there is speculation of a possible split in the union because of the strains of each side of the border seeking its own contract. Union officials say they have no problem.

The union also hopes to regain its power and image in national politics. It supported President Carter in his 1980 bid for a second term, but many UAW members voted for Ronald Reagan.

Now, union officials say, Reagan's budget-cutting of social programs and the uncertain economy will help push those members back into the Democratic fold.

Russian Capital Braces For Foreign Dignitaries

MOSCOW (AP) — Tens of thousands of Soviet citizens filed past Leonid I. Brezhnev's open casket Saturday in a two-mile line tightly guarded by troops, police, roadblocks and checkpoints.

For the second straight day, Soviets trekked six abreast, silently and somberly paying respects to Brezhnev, whose body lay in state in the downtown House of Unions.

Central Moscow was sealed off. Thousands of police in gray wool overcoats and soldiers in brown uniforms patrolled streets and intersections, turning back all who lacked proper passes.

Only cars with official license plates were permitted to park.

Brezhnev's body lay in state on the second floor of the hall, and a two-story high portrait of the late leader, bordered in black on a red background, hung on the front of the columned building.

The line of mourners snaked past police lines from Mayakovsky Square to the hall on Prospekt Marx, where the open casket lay on red and white flowers, with the leader's medals pinned to red satin at the foot of the coffin.

A band played funeral dirges, and prominent Soviets and "hero" workers took turns standing in an honor guard beside the casket, switching every three minutes.

Mourners entered the side door and had about 30 seconds to view the body, spotlighted under chandeliers draped in black bunting.

The official news agency Tass said diplomats from 112 countries viewed the body Saturday. U.S. Ambassador Arthur A. Hartman was among them.

Outside the city center it was business as usual. Shoppers jammed state stores and traffic cruised normally on roads circling the downtown area.

In Washington, President Reagan announced he was lifting U.S. sanctions against the Soviet Union's natural-gas pipeline to Western Europe in what was seen as an overture to the Kremlin's new leadership for improved relations. Reagan had imposed the sanctions to punish the Kremlin for its support for martial law in Poland.

There was no immediate Soviet reaction.

Earlier, Reagan visited the Soviet Embassy in Washington and signed the condolence book, writing "My condolences to the family of President Brezhnev and the people of the Soviet Union. May our two peoples live in peace in the world together."

Vice President George Bush and Secretary of State George P. Shultz were heading the U.S. delegation for the burial Monday in Red Square. Government delegations from dozens of countries also were due in Moscow by Sunday.

Communist leaders of several Soviet-bloc countries, including Poland's martial-law leader Wojciech Jaruzelski, Cuba's President Fidel Castro and Afghanistan President Babrak Karmal of Afghanistan also were to attend.

China, which has been conducting talks with the Soviets about improving relations, was sending Foreign Minister Huang Hua. India's Prime Minister Indira Gandhi was representing her country, and President Mohammad Zia Ul-haq was coming from Pakistan.

Others coming include West German President Karl Carstens, Japanese Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki, French Premier Pierre Mauroy, Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau and first lady Imelda R. Marcos of the Philippines.

Western diplomatic sources said delegations have been told by Soviet officials to be in place on a cement platform at 11:30 a.m. Monday on Red Square, 30 minutes before the start of the hourlong funeral.

Brezhnev's remains will be interred in a grave by the northeast area of the Kremlin wall, only the 10th Soviet hero to be accorded the honor. Vladimir I. Lenin, founder of the Soviet state, is buried there in a red marble mausoleum. Josef Stalin's grave there is marked with a bust.

The ashes of more than 100 other prominent soviets are interred in the red brick wall, behind marble plaques.

Yuri V. Andropov, former chief of the KGB, was named the new Communist Party General Secretary on Friday, establishing him as the Kremlin's top leader to replace Brezhnev, 75, who died of a heart attack Wednesday.

There has been no announcement on Brezhnev's successor as head of state — a title known officially as president of the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet, the national Parliament which has no independent power.

Diplomats said it was not known whether the 68-year-old Andropov would meet with any Western leader coming for the funeral.

Andropov and the other members of the ruling 12-member Politburo viewed Brezhnev's body Friday and offered condolences to his grieving widow, Viktoria, 74, and their daughter Galina, who is in her late 40s.

Andropov May Change Plan

MOSCOW (AP) — Yuri V. Andropov, the new Soviet Communist Party leader, may change his country's foreign and domestic policies despite vows to follow the course set by the late Leonid I. Brezhnev during his 18 years in power.

Experts believe the Soviet economy is in such poor condition that the 68-year-old former KGB secret-police chief may have little choice but to try experiments in free enterprise and decentralization which Brezhnev resisted.

As for foreign policy, Andropov may prove more willing to compromise — but only if the United States signals it is ready to match any concessions.

If Andropov is looking for any conciliatory signal from Washington, he could find it in the announcement Saturday by President Reagan that the United States is lifting sanctions on the Soviet natural-gas pipeline to Western Europe. Reagan imposed the sanctions in response to Moscow's support for martial law in Poland.

When Andropov first was chosen to succeed Brezhnev as head of the ruling party, he showed no sign of dropping the Kremlin's position that it must continue building military strength.

'Hillside Strangler' Trial Is Nearing Anniversary

By LINDA DEUTSCH
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Court will recess early Tuesday in the "Hillside Strangler" case because the jury is having an anniversary party.

It's been one year since the mass murder trial of Angelo Buono brought them together, and the end is not in sight.

"Our last estimate, when we sat down to talk about it, was that it would end in February," Deputy Attorney General Michael Nash said. "But I think it's going to go a few months longer than that."

The star witness, confessed "Hillside Strangler" Kenneth Bianchi, has been on the witness stand for six months giving frequently conflicting stories of the murders of 10 young women and girls which he has blamed on Buono, his cousin.

Bianchi pleaded guilty to five of the slayings in return for being spared the gas chamber.

Superior Court Judge Ronald George, who also faces an effort by the defense to abort the trial, maintains a cheerful acceptance of the proceedings' marathon length.

"I thought it would be done within a year," he said with a smile. "But I've lost my capacity to be surprised at anything in this case."

George said he's grateful for the dedication of jurors, who have not been sequestered. The eight women, four men and six alternate jurors have become like a family — holding birthday parties in the jury room and snapping Polaroid pictures of each other for scrapbooks.

It took three months to seat a jury because of the expected length of the trial.

"It's really renewed my faith in the jury system," George said. "They are a very cohesive group and some of them have come to court even when they were coughing or not feeling well. They take notes and pay attention. I'm impressed with their stability."

Only two jurors have had to be replaced by alternates since the trial began — one man who had a health problem left at the outset and a woman juror had to return to work when her family suffered financial reverses.

One person in court every day is more disturbed than others about the duration of the trial. Buono, the 48-year-old defendant, emaciated after two years in jail, seems to slump lower in his chair each day, glaring silently across the courtroom at Bianchi, seated glumly on the witness stand.

Defense lawyer Katherine Mader said Buono has been particularly upset by recent defense discoveries indicating a key eyewitness called to corroborate Bianchi, Markust Camden, had spent time in a mental hospital.

"How is Angelo?" Ms. Mader responded to a questioner. "He is furious, frustrated and bitter" that two men whose mental stability has been questioned have kept him in custody for two years.

Bianchi has contradicted himself repeatedly during testimony implicating Buono in the murders. Buono steadfastly denies involvement in the killings. At one point, Bianchi said neither he nor Buono was involved in the killings, then described tortures and strangulations, insisting Buono was his partner. He also changed details in his accounts of how he and Buono allegedly committed the crimes.

Buono "wants it over with," Ms. Mader said. "He knows he didn't kill anybody and he wants to walk out of here."

But Ms. Mader and another defense lawyer, Gerald Chaleff, say they must point up every possible conflict in Bianchi's story if they are to win Buono an acquittal.

"We have to bring out every point where he is inconsistent," says Ms. Mader. "We would be negligent if we didn't."

Chaleff is in his 13th week of cross-examining Bianchi. The prosecution questioned him for seven weeks, and additional weeks were spent playing videotapes of Bianchi's interviews with psychiatrists.

Before Bianchi took the stand, the prosecution had called more than 200 other witnesses. Nash said about 60 more will testify before the case is turned over to the defense.

Chaleff and Ms. Mader aren't saying how many witnesses they will call, except to say there will be "a lot."

Meanwhile, they are trying for a mistrial on grounds that information regarding Camden's mental history was withheld from them. At a hearing last week, detectives testified they knew Camden had been in a mental hospital and relayed that information to the prosecution.

However, it was never mentioned when the witness testified and the defense laywers say they were never told.

The hearing continues Thursday, and George said he expects to make a written ruling on the issue shortly after Thanksgiving.

But it appears unlikely after all this time that he would order a mistrial before the case is placed in the hands of the jury for a verdict — probably next spring or early summer.

Cardinals Plan Finance Session

VATICAN CITY (AP) — A committee of 15 cardinals reviewing the Vatican's troubled finances will meet next week before the full College of Cardinals holds its annual conference, the Vatican announced Saturday.

A Vatican spokesman, the Rev. Romeo Panciroli, said the meeting Friday of the Council of Cardinals for the Study of Organizational and Economic Problems would be followed on Nov. 23 by a conference of all 120 cardinals.

The College of Cardinals has been held at the Vatican every year since 1979, when Pope John Paul II announced he wanted to establish closer collaboration with the prelates.

Panciroli did not say how long either meeting would last, but Vatican sources said each was expected to take about four days.

The pope created the finance council, which includes Cardinals John Krol of Philadelphia and Terence Cooke of New York, last year.

It is headed by Vatican Secretary of State Agostino Casaroli, who announced after the last meeting in March that the Holy See faced a record deficit of more than $30 million in 1982.

This time the council and the College of Cardinals also are expected to look into the Vatican bank's involvement in one of Italy's worst financial scandals.

A controversy centers on the business relationship between the late Roberto Calvi, who was president of Banco Ambrosiano, and American Archbishop Paul C. Marcinkus, president of the Vatican bank officially known as the Institute for Religious Works.

Calvi, who committed suicide in London in June, fled Italy after banking authorities questioned him about $1.4 billion in loans to several Caribbean and Latin American companies that were unable to repay them.

Because of the missing money, the Italian government liquidated Banco Ambrosiano, Italy's largest private bank, and formed a consortium of banks to take over its business.

Press reports have said Calvi apparently used a letter of reference from Marcinkus to support the loans. The Italian government has been pressing the Vatican to assume reponsibility for the loss.

Marcinkus, of Cicero, Ill., has insisted that the letter was not a guarantee.

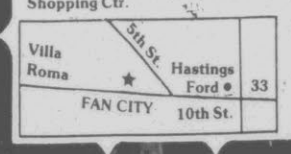

The Vatican has said Calvi gave Marcinkus a second letter releasing the Vatican bank from all responsibility for the loans.

Embassy Security Plans Lagging

WASHINGTON (AP) — Plans to improve security at U.S. embassies made after the hostage-taking in Teheran - are falling far behind schedule, according to a report by the General Accounting Office.

"State Department officials overestimated the number of posts they could improve each year," the GAO report said. "Inadequate planning, coordination, and property management caused delays in the implementation of security improvements."

The State Department first told Congress it would upgrade security at 25 posts a year for five years, according to the report by Congress' investigative arm.

That would take care of about half of all U.S. diplomatic stations overseas. Two years later, the GAO found that work had been completed at only four posts, with a fifth almost done.

At the time the report was written this past summer, major construction was under way at nine posts with work due to start at four more by the end of this year, the report said.

Names of particular posts were censored, but the GAO report drew a picture of disorganization at several of them.

The agency's report said it had made use of at least one report from the State Department's own inspector general, which described conditions at a post called "the most vulnerable U.S. facility in that country" in October 1981.

The inspector general was quoted as saying:

"...With the threat potential remaining high, very little has been done to decrease the vulnerability of U.S. diplomatic personnel and facilities .... Support from the Department has been inadequate .... For example, inquiries directed to the Department from the posts were largely ignored or inadequately answered."

Estimates of the total cost have risen to some $300 million from the original $192 estimate, the GAO said, with less protection for 55 posts foreseen than originally planned. It suggested that as much as 10 years will be needed to do the job, and that it is unlikely 70 posts will be completed in the first five years.

Diver Says He'll Never Go Again

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — A recent 37-day, simulated deep-sea dive was like "hell in a very small place" and was an experience Gary Latson says he'd rather not go through again.

Latson was one of three participants in the final dive of the four-part Atlantis series at Duke's F.G. Hall Laboratory. The dive was aborted at 2,132 feet after Latson experienced severe high pressure nervous syndrome. The project was to tie the lab's early world-record dive to 2,250 feet.

"The stresses ganged up on me," said Latson, 26, a Duke University resident in anesthesiology. "I don't want to feel the kinds of things I felt — racing thoughts, delirium, tremors. It wasn't pleasant."

The project was to examine the impact of rates of compression and gas mixtures breathed by the divers on their abilities to work at extreme depths.

Latson and Steve Porter, a professional diver, and Cmdr. Paul Barry, a Navy doctor, lived 28 days in a metal sphere 90 inches in diameter before transferring to an 18- by 10-foot chamber to complete the dive on Nov. 4.

Barry compared the living quarters to sharing a queen-sized mattress with two other people.

Barry also was sick for a day with dyspnea, or shortness of breath.

"The sensation was there was not enough air in the world to staisfy your desire to breathe," he said. "It feels like your every breath is your last one. I would compare it to drowning."

The doctor said it would take some good arguments to convince him to make another dive.

In contrast, Porter said this was his best dive. With three lab descents, including the record-breaking dive Feb. 3, Porter is believed to be the world's most experienced deep diver.

"While he (Latson) was going through this I was having the finest ride of my life — with the exception of Gary," Porter said.

"The impressions of three young men like this ... on a very difficult dive should not prevent further research," said Dr. Peter Bennett, director of the lab.

Bennett emphasized that the high pressure nervous syndrome experienced by Latson was not life threatening and said he would work to improve screening procedures to eliminate potential victims.

Reagans Attend Davis Memorial

CHICAGO (AP) — President and Mrs. Reagan flew to Chicago Saturday to attend a private memorial service for the first lady's stepfather, Dr. Loyal Davis, who died last August.

The Reagans, wearing black coats to ward off the sub-freezing temperatures in the Windy City, went directly from O'Hare International Airport by helicopter and motorcade to the soot-blackened stone building of the American College of Surgeons, which sponsored the commemorative ceremony.

Reporters were barred from the service, but were told it included several testimonials to Davis, who was a fellow of the surgeons' college for nearly 60 years and served as its president during his long career as a neurological surgeon.

Among those offering tribute was Dr. Daniel Ruge, the presidential physician who was a one-time student and a long-time colleague of Dr. Davis.

Ruge, in his prepared remarks, said: "In his early years, he did the work up, operated upon the patient in the morning, went to the lab or the office in the afternoon and often returned to nurse the patient through the night. And he knew what it was to lose as well as to win ... Now he has earned his rest."

Davis died of congestive heart failure in Scottsdale, Ariz., on Aug. 19 at the age of 86.

Reagan flew to Chicago after a morning visit to the Soviet Embassy to offer condolences on the death of Soviet president Leonid I. Brezhnev, where he expressed his desire for peaceful coexistence with the Soviet Union.

The president was conspicuously absent, however, from ceremonies in Washington dedicating the Vietnam Veterans Memorial. The event drew to the nation's capital for a day of remembrance tens of thousands of veterans, their families and the families of those who are missing or fell in the long war.

White House spokesmen insisted that Reagan meant no slight by his absence, noting he went the National Cathedral earlier in the week to hear part of the reading of names of those killed and missing in Vietnam.

However, presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said there are no plans for Reagan to visit the black granite monument anytime in the near future. The memorial is located near the Lincoln Memorial, almost within signt of the White House.

Shultz Delays Journey

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz was treated at a hospital Saturday after a piece of food became lodged in his throat at lunch. The incident forced him to postpone his departure for the Moscow funeral of Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev.

State Department spokesman Joe Reap said Shultz experienced a "coughing fit" during lunch in his dining room at the department and was driven to George Washington University Hospital about five blocks away. away.

Shultz, 56, walked into the emergency room where "normal emergency procedures were conducted for an object in the throat," including an X-ray, said Reap. The secretary was sent on his way after doctors succeeded in dislodging the obstruction after about two hours.

There was no indication of when Shultz would leave for Moscow.

Hospital spokesman Richard Ellis said that Shultz was brought to the emergency room shortly after 1:30 p.m.

While the secretary was being treated, Ellis said Shultz "appears to have a piece of food caught in his throat. He is in good condition, appears to be in no danger and they are doing tests to find out what the best procedure for removing it would be."

President Reagan, who was informed of Shultz's mishap while flying to Chicago aboard Air Force One, told reporters when he landed that the secretary was "OK."

Protests Face Begin's Visit

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin sought support from the American Jewish community here Saturday before his first meeting with President Reagan since Israel sent troops into Lebanon.

But he faced strong anti-Israeli sentiment over the Lebanon crisis, and authorities were braced for clashes between Palestinian supporters and militant Jewish groups.

The Committee to Oppose the Begin Visit, a coalition supporting Palestinians, said an end to U.S. aid for Israel would be a key demand of its protest Saturday night outside the Bonaventure Hotel, where Begin was to address 3,000 delegates to the Jewish Federation Council's annual meeting.

Committee spokewoman Phyllis Bennis said her group also was calling for Palestinian self-determination and complete Israeli withdrawal from Lebanon.

Mordechai Levy of the militant Jewish Defense Organization said he expected about 400 counter-demonstrators to "confront" the pro-Palestinians.

Despite the protests, a top Israeli official said Friday that Begin encountered "not the slightest hint" of erosion of Jewish-American support in a New York meeting with Julius Berman, president of the Conference of Major Jewish Organizations, and several other Jewish leaders.

The official, who asked not to be named, said that immediately after the massacre of Palestinians in two refugees camps outside Beirut in mid-September, there was "unease, concern" among American Jews.

But he said there was "no real wavering in the general support of Israel by the American Jewish community."

Lebanese Christian militiamen allied with Israel are said to have been responsible for the massacre.

Begin, who arrived from New York on Friday amid heavy security, said his main purpose here was to meet with the Jewish community.

He said his White House talks later this week would focus on "bilateral relations and the international situation."

Relations between Jerusalem and Washington have been strained by Israel's continuing refusal to abandon Jewish settlements along the West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip.

Israel has rejected Reagan's Middle East initiative, which calls for Palestinian autonomy in association with Jordan.

Begin was to appear on the CBS-TV program "Face the Nation" on Sunday morning and attend an Israel Bonds dinner Sunday night.

State Issues Bridge Repair Requirements

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — The state Department of Transportation issued bid requirements Saturday for repair of a damaged highway bridge across Croatan Sound and officials expect work to begin by Friday.

Bids for the work are due at 5 p.m. Monday and DOT officials hope to award the contract late Wednesday, said spokesman Max Powell.

Plans for the repair were changed because the damaged bridge — closed to traffic after being struck by a barge Nov. 5 — was "potentially unstable" and officials were afraid the original repair plans could result in further damage, said Jimmy Lee, head of bridge maintenance for the DOT.

He said officials now plan to remove two spans of roadway and replace a supporting pier damaged by the barge. Original plans called for new supports to be built around the damaged support.

The bid proposal calls for the 2.5-mile William B. Umstead Bridge to be reopened to motor vehicles by Jan. 31 instead of the original mid-January date projected by DOT officials.

"To be quite frank with you, we don't have a real firm cost estimate," Lee said. "It (the planned repair) is the only viable option we have."

Powell said representatives of four contracting firms met with DOT engineers Saturday to discuss the requirements for repairing the bridge, which connects Manns Harbor in mainland Dare County with Manteo on Roanoke Island. The companies had earlier expressed interest in the emergency contract, which bypasses normal bidding procedures.

If a contract is awarded Wednesday, Powell said the DOT expects work to begin by Friday.

A barge carrying grain struck a support pier holding up the roadway early Nov. 5 and the bridge was closed the following day when severe damage was discovered.

The closing cut off a major highway access route to Manteo and the central Outer Banks, forcing residents to take a 150-mile detour or cross Croatan Sound on three state-owned military-type landing craft pressed into service as temporary ferry boats.

DOT crews are rebuilding ferry terminals at Manteo and Manns Harbor that were abandoned when the bridge was opened almost 30 years ago in order to provide regular ferry service.

Powell said the ferries should begin operations by Thanksgiving. The cost of the ferry service and the current limited service using LCUs (Landing Craft Utility) are estimated at about $4,500 a day.

The damaged bridge support consists of 16 pilings holding up a footing. Three columns from the footing support the roadway. DOT officials originally said they would sink four 54-inch concrete pilings, two on either side of the roadway, and connect them with supports to hold up the roadway.

But Lee said those plans were scrapped "because of uncertainty as to the procedure" and a reassessment of the situation.

The process of driving the four pilings, known as jetting, could cause vibrations and settling of the damaged support and further damage, he said.

Instead, the two spans — one 130 feet long and the other 70 feet long — will be removed and placed on barges. The damaged support pier will then be removed and a new one built.

McGovern Says He Might Run Again

By WESLEY G. PIPPERT

WASHINGTON (UPI) — George McGovern, encouraged by the success of the nuclear freeze movement in the midterm elections, said Saturday he may run for president again in 1984.

The 1972 Democratic presidential nominee admitted, however, the "one thing that worries me" is the prospect of looking ridiculous as a chronic losing candidate.

"If I got into it, I'd try it out in Iowa and New Hampshire — those first two or three primaries," the former South Dakota senator said.

"If I did poorly, I'd get out. Or if it looked like I was only getting enough votes to damage a better candidate than the rest of the field, I'd get out. I wouldn't want to be a spoiler."

In an interview with United Press International in his Washington office just before leaving for the University of Dublin for two weeks, McGovern said he would not make a final decision until "well into 1983."

McGovern, 60, who served three terms in the Senate before his defeat two years ago, carried only Massachusetts and the District of Columbia in his unsuccessful attempt to deny Richard Nixon re-election in 1972.

"If I decided sometime next year I could help redefine the issues before the country in a way that would be beneficial, I might give it another try, even if I thought the odds of being nominated were not very good," McGovern said.

The liberal Democrat's 1972 campaign was built on the anti-Vietnam War sentiment in the country. He noted nuclear freeze measures carried in eight states plus the District of Columbia Nov. 4.

"If I felt that on these nuclear war issues and the priorities issues here at home that have to do with the budget and the economy and I could help sharpen that debate and help make those problems better understood, it's just possible I might get into it," McGovern said.

"I've had businessmen talk to me on airplanes about the freeze and say, 'that makes a lot of sense,'" McGovern said. "I think it's a more conservative movement than the anti-war movement was back in the '60s. There are more lawyers and clergymen involved..."

McGovern said he finds running against Reagan "an intriguing prospect."

"I'd love to debate him" said the former Dakota Wesleyan debate coach who never got a crack at Nixon.

"I think the guy is incredibly ill-informed on basic issues."

McGovern termed "outrageous" Reagan's Thursday news conference comment that there is "plenty of evidence" foreign agents have infiltrated the nuclear freeze movement.

McGovern said he has asked no one to support him and has not raised a single dollar or organized a campaign structure or political action committee, and will take no polls.

Pilot Is Killed

HENDERSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The pilot of a small airplane was killed when it crashed in the brush on Rich Mountain near Brevard, the Civil Air Patrol reported Saturday.

The patrol spotted the wreckage about noon Saturday after almost 24 hours of searching for the downed aircraft. Capt. Danny Jones of the North Carolina Civil Air Patrol said it took ground crews more than an hour to reach the plane.

The victim's identity has not been released.

The twin-engine Piper Navajo was traveling from Columbus, Ohio, to the Greenville-Spartanburg Jetport at Greer, S.C. Although, the plane could hold eight people, only the pilot was aboard.

The plane, owned by Hill-Williford Aviation of Atlanta, was last heard from at 5:16 a.m. Friday and was last seen on radar about 5 miles south of the Asheville airport, Jones said. The pilot had just made a routine check with the Federal Aviation Administration.

Hunt Previews His DUI Program

By GENE WANG

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Although he won't formally receive proposals until Tuesday, Gov. Jim Hunt has given a preview of his plans to crack down on the drunk driving problem in North Carolina.

They include mandatory jail terms of up to 14 days for drunk driving; an increase in the legal drinking age for beer and wine; and automatic license suspensions for failing a breathalyzer test.

"For too long in this state, drunken driving has been viewed by too many people as acceptable, or fun, or adventuresome, or normal," Hunt said last week.

"It is none of those things. It is a crime. It kills innocent people. In North Carolina, it will and it must be dealt with accordingly," the governor said, and outlined four proposals he has already decided to endorse.

Earlier this year, Hunt appointed a special task force to study the drunk driving problem and make recommendations to him for changes in the law. The group is scheduled to present a 30-page report to the governor Tuesday.

"We're trying to do whatever we can to change public opinion and encourage greater deterrence," said John Stevens, an Asheville lawyer and former legislator who heads the task force.

"They (the proposals) are innovative and they are different and they are tough and they will be controversial," Stevens said.

Drunk driving legislation has traditionally encountered rough going in the General Assembly, particularly in Judiciary committees packed with picky lawyers.

But Stevens says he has "a very high level of confidence" in the work of the task force, which was made up of lawyers, judges, district attorneys, legislators and citizens.

"I think the kinds of questions that will arise in the Judiciary committees are the kinds of questions we've looked at and worried about all summer long," he said.

Hunt predicted there will be "a very strong lobbying effort" for his drunk driving program and some lawmakers he already contacted his office seeking to sponsor the proposals even before the governor has made a final decision on the full package.

Library Board Meets Tuesday

Bethel COC Council Names 3 Directors

BETHEL — Directors of the Bethel Council of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce Thursday night elected Gene Briley, Johnny Howard and Toby Timberlake to three-year terms on the board.

They will succeed board chairman Bob Bowers and directors Glenn White and William Morgan Whitehurst, all of whom retired in December. Bowers announced that James Dupree will assume the chairmanship in January.

Robert Young will serve as vice chairman and Briley will be treasurer.

Bowers said the council will hold planning meetings for the new year at Rotary House Dec. 9. The 6:30 p.m. buffet meeting will be for the board of directors and their spouses.

In other areas Thursday, the board acccepted Walter Latham as the council's newest member. Young reported that the Bethel Council has contributed $150 for a half-float for the Chirstmas parade scheduled Dec. 8. Danny Norris announced that the chamber is cooperating with Bethel Recreation Department in planning for the parade, whcih will include Miss North Carolina.

King and Karen Lawrence. Members also attended the District 15 NCFS annual fall meeting held in Currituck on Nov. 6.

Most Asked Dental Questions

By Dr. Robert Capps, Dr. Danny Qualliotine and Dr. Gary Michels

ADJUSTING TO DENTURES

Q. Why is it so difficult to adjust to dentures? Aren't they made to fit individual mouths?

A. Dentures are not teeth, nor do they function like natural teeth. They are prosthetic replacements similar to replacing a lost leg or arm.

How they fit, initially, depends on how much gums have healed (or shrunk) from the time teeth were extracted, and how much the mouth tissues have changed. Healing is usually complete within six months.

The upper denture will take about 24 hours after insertion to settle in and feel secure. The lower denture will take considerably longer, though, because the muscles of the tongue, cheeks and lips tend to dislodge it. The wearer must learn to chew bilaterally, control the movement of the lower denture with the tongue, and practice speaking. Adjusting to new dentures is a learning experience that takes patience, practice, and determination.

Quota Vote Set For Dec. 16

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina flue-cured tobacco growers are organizing for a vote next month on whether to continue a marketing quota and to keep paying an assessment for promoting leaf sales.

The vote, which is taken every three years, will be Dec. 16 in the 67 counties where flue-cured tobacco is grown.

Balloting for farmers, tenants and sharecroppers will be at local polling places used by the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

A two-thirds majority is required for passage of the quota program or the assessment for the Tobacco Associates Inc. promotional organization.

Edmund Aycock of Raleigh, executive vice president of the N.C. Agribusiness Council and chairman of the Statewide Flue-Cured Tobacco Referendum Committee, said this year's vote will be one of the most important in history.

"Tobacco's critics will be watching this year's vote very closely," he said. "We need more than just a favorable vote. We need a large turnout. We need to tell the Congress, the administration and the public very loud and clear that we back our program 100 percent."

The tobacco price-support program narrowly escaped the budget ax during the last session of Congress.

Aycock also called for farmers to support Tobacco Associates' efforts in hopes of protecting and expanding foreign markets for domestic leaf. He said about half the flue-cured crop is exported.

"Competition worldwide has become fierce," Aycock said. "Our growers need a representative in the export market to promote their superior quality product."

Rep. Charlie Rose, D-N.C., said Friday he was concerned about tobacco imports too. He asked the General Accounting Office to study the problem and recommend legislation to correct it.

The United States imported 198,422 metric tons of unmanufactured tobacco leaf in 1981, up 11 percent from 1980. The value of that leaf was $491 million, according to The Tobacco Institute, the industry's lobbying arm in Washington.

By contrast, the United States exported 265,143 metric tons or $1.46 billion of unmanufactured leaf last year.

In the referendum, farmers will be asked first to consider whether they want to keep price supports, maintain acreage-poundage marketing quotas and continue the farmer-owned Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corporation.

The co-operative receives leaf that fails to bring at least 1 cent over the support price. Stabilization buys the tobacco, stores it and sells it later.

Farmers then will be asked whether to continue funding Tobacco Associates.

The referendum was established under the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938 and legislation setting up the Tobacco Associates in 1947 required a similar vote each three years.

Others on the referendum committee are Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham; John Sledge, president of the N.C. Farm Bureau Federation; James Oliver, master of the State Grange; and Isabelle M. Fletcher of Kinston, public director of the Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corporation.

MGM Says Movie Will Be Released Next Year

DURHAM, N.C. (UPI) — "Brainstorm", a movie mostly filmed in Research Triangle Park, probably will be released in 1983, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer says. The movie's future had been in doubt since last November when star Natalie Wood died in a boating accident.

No definite release date has been set, but MGM said in a press release that the film's completion will require an additional five months of editorial and process work.

Duke Union director Jake Phelps, who worked with the movie crew in filming scenes on the Duke University campus, said he was pleased at MGM's decision.

"I'm sort of thankful, really," he said late last week. "I had had a hard time accepting it wouldn't be finished.

"It would have compounded the tragedy not to have her (Ms. Wood's) last work on the screen," he said.

Described as a "contemporary suspense story," the movie also stars Christopher Walken, Cliff Robertson and Louise Fletcher. It is about a scientist who develops a mind-reading device.

The movie's completion had been in doubt because of insurance litigation following Ms. Wood's death.

Principal photography on the movie was done in North Carolina last fall, and was to have been completed in California studios. Several scenes remained to be filmed when Ms. Wood drowned Thanksgiving weekend.

MGM, thinking the movie could not be completed without Ms. Wood, stopped production and tried to collect $12 million in insurance from Lloyd's of London, the picture's principal insuror.

Lloyd's gave director Douglas Trumbull $3 million to finish the movie, with Ms. Wood's missing scenes rewritten.

Trumbull completed the film except for its special effects, and a dispute arose between Trumbull and the studio over whether terms for "Brainstorm's" completion had been fulfilled. MGM took possession of the incomplete film and its future remained in limbo for several months.

During the summer, MGM showed the incomplete film to other studios with the idea of finding a buyer. Paramount Pictures reportedly made an offer in June.

ECU Dodges Arrow For Winning Season

THE DAILY REFLECTOR
SUNDAY MORNING
NOVEMBER 14, 1982

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. — Led by Kevin Ingram's three touchdown runs and Earnest Byner's 180 yards rushing, East Carolina's Pirates successfully dodged the bullet, er — arrow, and escaped from William & Mary, 31-27, Saturday afternoon.

The win gave the Pirates a winning season for the first time in three seasons — and the first under Ed Emory.

The aerial minded Indians fought hard against the Pirates, tying the game twice, then taking the lead in the final period before East Carolina stormed back to take the lead, then hold the Indians once more in the shadow of the goal posts.

Ingram, who hit on five of ten passes for 61 yards and who rushed for 80 yards in his third start of the season at quarterback, went in from four yards out and one away for the first two ECU scores, then capped the final drive with the go-ahead score from a yard away.

Byner, who set a personal high with his 180 yards on 23 carries, scored on a 36-yard dash down the sidelines. Jeff Heath, ECU's freshman kicker from nearby Virginia Beach, booted all four PATs, and a 22-yard field goal. The three-pointer leaves him just one short of the school record of 14 for a season.

William & Mary got three of its four scores through the air. The first, however, came on a 10-yard run by Jim McHeffey, in the opening period. After that, quarterback Stan Yagiello passed nine yards to Kurt Wrigley in the second period, and 21 yards to Bernie Marrazzo in the third.

Marrazzo took the ball in hand himself for a halfback pass to Wrigley for 55 yards and the TD that put the Indians up, 27-24 with 11:29 left in the contest.

But after both teams were forced to punt, the Pirates launched a 56-yard drive after a poor Indian punt, and got into the end zone with 4:18 left to sew it up.

Even then, the Indians came back to the Pirate 17 before Martin Daniel broke up a reverse, caused a fumble that pushed the Indians back to the 27 with 45 seconds left on fourth down. The Indians once more tried for a "Hail, Mary" pass, but it was well beyond the end line and the Pirates could finally breath a sigh of relief.

That sigh quickly turned into a shout of joy as the Pirates went to their dressing room to celebrate their first winning season in three years. Now 6-4, the Pirates can now shoot for a 7-4 year next week at Temple.

For Emory, the win was especially good. "It was a great personal win for me," he said outside the dressing room. "But it is also good for East Carolina to have a winning season."

Emory was quick to praise the Indians for their effort on offense. "It was a great, great effort. They never gave up. They played inspired football."

Emory also took note of the 12th player the Indians seemed to have had on the field — the field itself. Doused with a soaking rain the night before, the field was not much for traction. "It didn't seem to hurt their north and south game," Emory said of W&M's drop-back passing. "But it did bother our east-west game, especially the quarterback and tailbacks." Emory was referring to the Pirates' like of the outside game. A number of times, the Pirates slipped and fell making cuts or trying to reverse themselves. Several times, they came when the runners were wide open and could have gotten good yardage on the play.

In contrast the Indians never slipped.

Emory, while generally praising the officials, questioned how the Indians could put up a total of 36 passes and not get one holding call against them. The Indians were flagged but twice, once for a clip and once for motion, the latter declined.

The field took the Pirates out of it on their first drive. Taking the kickoff, the Pirates slipped and had to start at the seven. Still, with Ingram and Byner running the ball, the Pirates moved it to their own 45 before Ingram went back to pass and slipped in the mud at the 37. That forced a punt.

Two plays later, however, Jody Schulz forced a fumble and Amos Twitty recovered on the W&M 43 for the Pirates.

This time, they took it in. After a first down at the 30, Byner broke up the middle for 11 more. Then, he bulled his way through the middle of the line again for 14 more to the five. After a yard gain, Ingram kept to the right side, faked a pitch and went untouched into the end zone to put ECU up, 7-0 with 8:35 left in the period.

The Pirates then got another break when Keith Brown hit Jeff Powell on the kickoff return, causing another fumble that Larry Berry recovered on the 23.

But on second down, an errant pitch was recovered by the Indians at their own 30. That started them on a 70-yard scoring drive.

Cutting the Pirates open for small passes over the middle and to the sidelines, the Indians marched downfield in short bursts. Yargiello had passes of 7, 13, 11, 14, and 15 yards, moving it to the 21. He added five on a fake reverse, and after two more yards on the ground, McHeffey kept over right tackle for the tying score with 3:48 showing.

East Carolina immediately came back on an eight-play drive to regain the lead. Byner went through the middle, broke free and put a move on the Indian secondary to advance the ball 38 yards to the Indian 25. Four plays later, he added 14 more to the one, and Ingram sneaked over from there, making it 14-7 wth 28 seconds left in the first period.

The Pirates missed on another chance after moving to the 31 when penalized 10

Tigers Withstand Maryland Rally To Win, 24-22

Clemson Clinches Tie For ACC Title

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — The fumble recovery that clinched the victory for Clemson was the one Coach Danny Ford of the Tigers had half expected all day.

Reggie Pleasant pounced on the ball after a completed Maryland pass with 3:48 left, clinching a 24-22 decision for 11th ranked Clemson over 18th ranked Maryland Saturday.

"We felt like we might get a fumble a little earlier with them coming across the field on the crossing patterns," Ford said. "But it didn't come until later, and we were certainly glad to come up with it."

"Each team got some breaks and we were fortunate to come up with the last one," Ford said of Clemson's two interceptions and three recovered fumbles against a Maryland team that ranked 16th nationally in turnover margin.

"Turnovers did it, and everyone was big," said Maryland Coach Bobby Ross. "Give them credit, they're good hitters and a heck of a defensive football team."

Ross said Maryland was content to run down the clock and try for a winning field goal until a holding penalty moved them back to the Clemson 30.

"Then we had to do something to get back a little tighter," Ross said. "We adjusted to their safety blitz and completed the pass, but then lost it."

The Terps had lost only six fumbles in nine previous games, the sixth best record in the nation.

"I can't say we should have won it," Ross said, "but we had our chances."

Clemson, 7-1-1 after winning its seventh straight, assured itself of at least a tie for the Atlantic Coast Conference championship with a 5-0 mark. Maryland is 4-1 in league play, and each team has one game left.

Maryland, 7-3, scored on a 37-yard pass from Boomer Esiason to Greg Hill and on Rick Badanjek's second one-yard TD of the game in the fourth quarter, and added a two-point conversion.

Following a four-yard Clemson punt into a 35-mile wind, the Terps took over on the Tigers' 21 and were in position to win their eighth in a row with a field goal.

But after John Tice caught his 11th pass on third down, he fumbled when hit by Terry Kinard and Pleasant recovered. Pleasant also intercepted a deflected pass at the Clemson one early in the third period, and another interception by Billy Davis ended Maryland's final hopes with 25 seconds to play.

The Tigers scored on a five-yard run by Cliff Austin and a one-yard run by Chuck McSwain to take a 14-0 lead with 12:27 left in the second period before Maryland recorded a first down.

McSwain's TD capped a 28-yard drive following a 22-yard Maryland punt into the wind. The Tigers drove only 42 yards in the third period after a 24-yard punt, scoring on Kevin Mack's one-yard run to make it 21-7.

The eventual winning points came on a 16-yard field goal by Bob Paulling with 12:37 left in the game. That score was set up when Danny Triplett recovered a Maryland fumble on the Terps' 41.

Maryland, 7-3 after having a seven-game winning streak snapped, scored its first touchdown in the second period, Badanjek going over to cap a 77-yard drive.

The game was witnessed by 51,750 fans, the fourth largest Maryland crowd.

Pleasant's interception of a pass deflected by Andy Headen provided a dramatic turnaround with Clemson leading 14-7 at the start of the third period.

After a 56-yard wind-aided punt by Dale Hatcher put the Tigers out of danger, Willie Joyner fumbled on Maryland's first play from scrimmage and Tyrone Davis recovered for Clemson on its own 49.

The Tigers stalled, but Hatcher booted his next punt out on the Maryland eight. A 24-yard punt by Maryland's Alan Sadler followed, setting up Mack's TD which came only minutes after the Tigers had been pinned back on their own one-yard line.

Clemson, ranked No. 8 in the nation in rushing defense with an 89-yard average, held the Terps to 63 yards on 30 carries. Esiason completed 24 of 39 passes for 279 yards, and was sacked three times for 31 yards.

Austin rushed for 55 yards, 38 on Clemson's first scoring drive.

Tech Beats Deacs, 45-7

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Georgia Tech running back Eddie Fortier and his Yellow Jacket teammates had something in common. Fortier hadn't scored and Georgia Tech hadn't had a winning season in four years.

All that changed Saturday as Fortier and Robert Lavette romped for two touchdowns each to lead Georgia Tech to a 45-7 pasting of Wake Forest in an Atlantic Coast Conference football game.

Fortier scored once in each half and rushed for 104 yards while Lavette had 139 yards rushing.

Lavette, a sophomore, carried 26 times in raising his season total to 1,005 yards and set a school career record for rushing touchdowns with 24. The Yellow Jackets' 45 points were their high since 1966.

Fortier, a senior, scored once in each half as the Yellow Jackets improved to 6-4, insuring them of a winning season for the first time in coach Bill Curry's three years.

Fortier's first touchdown came on a 20-yard run in the first period, giving the Yellow Jackets a 7-0 lead.

"When I broke into the clear, it almost blew my mind," he said. "I'll always remember this game."

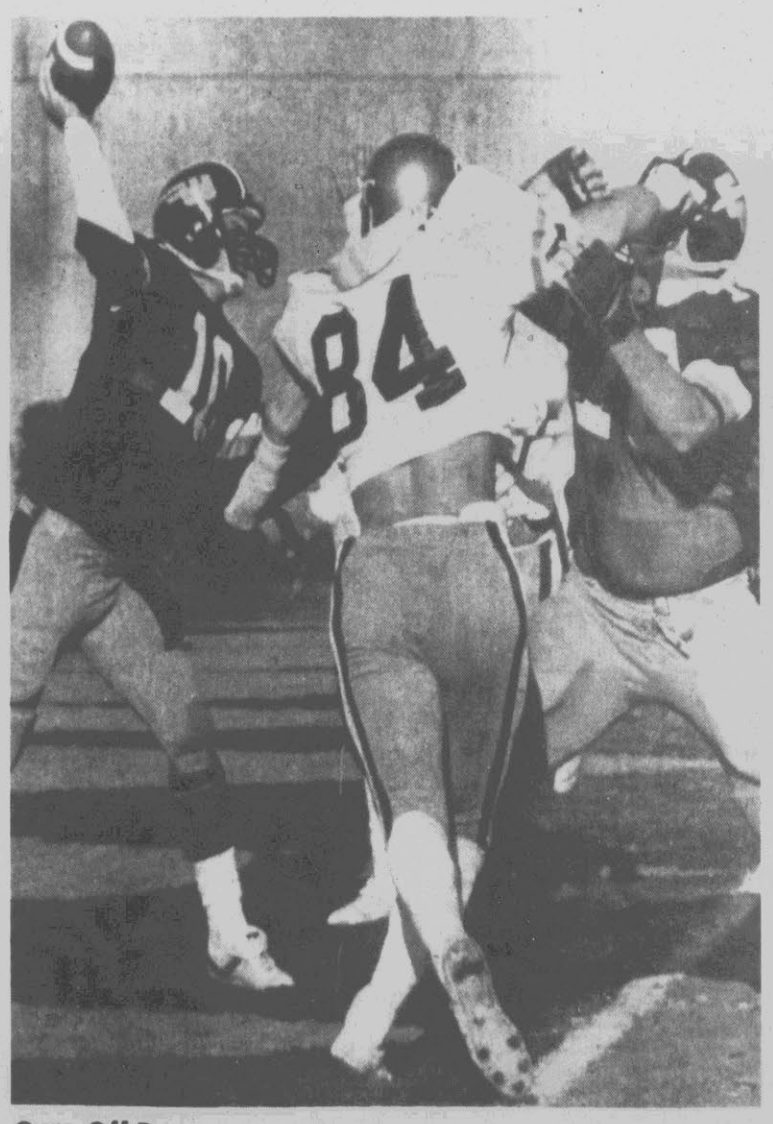

The game was one that Wake Forest coach Al Groh would just as soon forget.

"I think our team wanted to play well and I don't think we had anyone out there who didn't give it his best," Groh said. "We just didn't play well."

Wake Forest, losing its fourth straight, fell to 3-7, 0-6 in ACC action.

Tar Heels Down UVa; 'Pack Rallies By Duke

NCSU Comes From 10-0 Deficit To Win

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina State's football team had its back to the wall, with Duke threatening to score while leading 10-0. However, Wolfpack coach Monte Kiffin had a feeling his team would come back.

His feelings materialized as N.C. State scored three second-half touchdowns to defeat the Blue Devils 21-16 in Atlantic Coast Conference football Saturday.

"Talk about a team that never says die," Kiffin said. "You could see it in their faces that they would come back."

The Wolfpack offense could not get rolling in the first half but running backs Joe McIntosh and Mike Miller got untracked after intermission to lead the resurgence.

McIntosh finished with 133 yards on 27 carries and Miller ran for 100 yards on 14 carries.

N.C. State, beaten 54-0 by Penn State last week, had gone scoreless in six quarters before starting their comeback after intecepting a Duke pass in the Wolfpack end zone.

"We got the momentum when we stopped them right before the half and they missed the field goal," Kiffin said. "Then (Ken) Loney gave us the big play with his interception in the third quarter."

Duke coach Red Wilson said the interception on a halfback pass was the type of thing that would have looked like a million dollars if it had worked.

"That wasn't what beat us," Wilson said. "We had other chances to win the game and did not score."

The victory raised the Wolfpack to 6-4, 3-3 in the ACC, while Duke fell to 5-5, 2-3 in the conference.

The Wolfpack victory offset quarterback Ben Bennett's 27 of 41 passing, which netted 313 yards and one touchdown and broke several ACC records.

Duke was leading leading 10-0 midway

Bryant Rushes For 150 Yards, Two TDs

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

CHAPEL HILL — After leading North Carolina to a 27-14 Atlantic Coast Conference victory over Virginia Saturday, tailback Kelvin Bryant said he felt the team deserved a post-season invitation.

Bryant rushed 34 times for 150 yards and scored two touchdowns as scouts from the Peach and Hall of Fame bowls watched.

"This team deserves to go to a bowl," said Bryant. "We've been playing hard but we got two losses. We'll just have to get it together next week."

The Tar Heel offense sputtered at times, a problem Coach Dick Crum blamed on a loss to Clemson.

"When you have a disappointing loss like we had last week, it's tough to play well," Crum said. "We weren't real smooth but we were able to get it into the end zone when we had to do it."

Virginia Coach George Welsh said neither team was very good, "but they were better than we were."

"We made too many offensive mistakes," he said. "We fumbled the ball too much and fell down too much. North Carolina is just too good for us right now."

The victory was costly for the Tar Heels, as they lost two more offensive linemen. Starting guard Ron Spruill suffered a broken left leg, while his backup, Bobby Pope, tore left knee ligaments.

Earlier this year, center Steve McGrew suffered a knee injury and was lost for the season.

Bryant increased his season total to 755 yards rushing and, with two games remaining, needs 245 yards for his second consecutive 1,000-yard season and the third of his career.

In addition to a 1-yard scoring run in the fourth quarter, Bryant also caught a 3-yard touchdown pass from Scott Stankavage in the second period.

Walker Keys 'Dogs By Auburn, Into Sugar

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — It took a fourth-quarter comeback and another stellar performance from All-American Herschel Walker to give top-ranked Georgia its third Southeastern Conference football championship in a row Saturday.

Walker slashed three yards for his second touchdown with 8:42 remaining to give the Bulldogs a 19-14 victory over Auburn to wrap up the host berth in the Sugar Bowl.

"This is the best football team we have played this year," said Georgia's Vince Dooley, who claimed his 150th coaching victory.

"I thought it took a championship effort on our part to win today," he said. "We came back each time they scored and that's championship effort. I knew this would go down to the wire."

Walker finished with 177 yards on 31 carries and became the first college back in history to surpass the 5,000-yard mark as a junior, lifting his 32-game total to 5,097 yards.

"We knew Auburn was playing us tough and we knew we had to stick it in there," Walker said of the winning 80-yard drive that came immediately after 170-pound scatback Lionel James had given Auburn a 14-13 lead on an 87-yard scoring dash on the third play of the fourth quarter.

"I'm mighty disappointed for our players," said Coach Pat Dye of Auburn. "They did everything we asked them to get ready to play. We just came up short at the end.

"All the credit has to go to Georgia," Dye added. "They are No. 1 in the nation. They won the SEC today. And they did it with class. When they got behind, they came right back down the field and scored."

Walker, who also scored on a 47-yard scamper in the second quarter, lifted his career total to 5,097 yards, moving ahead of former Heisman Trophy winner George Rogers of South Carolina into fourth place on the NCAA's all-time rushing list.

Auburn threatened after Walker's go-ahead score, reaching the Georgia 14 before being set back by a penalty and two defensive losses, and turned the ball back on a fourth-down incompletion.

The victory lifted the Bulldogs to 10-0 for the year and 6-0 in the SEC — the 18th conference conquest in a row for Georgia.

Auburn fell to 7-3 for the year and 3-2 in the conference.

Georgia's other scoring came on a pair of field goals by Kevin Butler covering 20 and 50 yards.

Auburn drove 80 yards behind the sparkling play of quarterback Randy Campbell for its first touchdown to take a 7-3 lead six seconds before the end of the first quarter. Campbell completed three passes for 31 yards, contributed a 12-yard run later in the drive and scored on a bootleg to the right from the three.

After James' run gave the Tigers their fourth-quarter lead, Georgia marched 80 yards for the winning touchdown.

John Lastinger had a 17-yard pass to Herman Archie in the drive, but Walker was the workhorse, getting 35 yards on seven carries.

SMU 34
Texas Tech 27

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Bobby Leach's took an across-the-field lateral and ran 91 yards with four seconds to play to give second ranked Southern Methodist an incredible 34-27 victory Saturday over Texas Tech and at least a tie for the Southwest Conferene co-championship.

SMU, now 10-0 and 7-0 in SWC play, seemed destined to have their record soured after Ricky Gann's 28-yard field goal with 17 seconds left tied the score for Texas Tech.

But SMU Coach Bobby Collins dug deep into his bag of trick plays.

Blane Smith bobbled the kickoff at the Mustang 10 yard line and kept dribbling the ball around until the entire Tech return team was nearly upon him. He then snatched up the ball, faked a handoff and rifled it across field to Leach, who dashed the distance without being touched by a Red Raider. The play took 13 seconds.

SMU built a 24-10 lead over the scrappy Red Raiders, now 4-6 and 3-4, but Tech refused to quit and tied the game 24-all on Jim Hart's 16-yard touchdown pass to Buzz Tatom and Anthony Hutchison's 71 yard run.

Jeff Harrell kicked a 23-yard field goal for the Mustangs to up their lead to 27-24 with 4:05 to go but Gann retaliated to set the stage for the trick theatrics.

SMU's Eric Dickerson scored on touchdown runs of 28 and 9 yards and rushed for 115 yards on 21 carries. Craig James, the other half of the "Pony Express" tailback tandem, scored on a 16-yard run and had 97 yards in 19 carries.

However, they were both overshadowed by Hutchison, who carved out 206 yards on 39 carries.

SMU can win the SWC title outright and clinch a berth to the Cotton Bowl by either defeating or tying Arkansas next Saturday in Texas Stadium.

The Mustangs extended collegiate football's longest major college victory streak to 14. It was the first time they had defeated Texas Tech in Lubbock since 1968.

Texas 38
TCU 21

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) -Texas survived a furious Texas Christian uprising Saturday and rode Darryl Clark's two second-half touchdowns to a 38-21 Southwest Conference verdict that fanned the flames of a TCU coaching upheaval.

With Coach F.A. Dry's job in jeopardy, the Horned Frogs struck for 18 rapid-fire points and a 21-17 halftime lead that collapsed under a flurry of second-half miscues.

Texas, ranked 20th and still a SWC title contender, drove 72 yards in the third period and Clark bolted the final seven steps for the decisive touchdown.

Texas linebacker Tony Edwards pounced on a TCU fumble in the final quarter and Clark wrapped up a 44-yard scoring drive by bursting in from the 2.

Tailback John Walker sped 61 yards for still another TD with 2:10 left.

The Steers, 6-2 and 4-1, used Robert Brewer's 31-yard scoring pass to Herkie Walls and Mike Buchannan's blocked punt and subsequent 12-yard touchdown run to mount a 14-3 first quarter lead.

That jumped to 17-3 on Raul Allegre's 42-yard field goal early in the second period and the Steers seemed destined for a lopsided triumph.

With a routine rout taking shape, TCU quarterback Eddie Clark, making his first start, got the Horned Frogs rolling with a pair of quick touchdown passes.

He winged a 70-yarder to James Maness and a 12-yarder to Dwayne May while Ken Ozee started and ended the rally with field goals of 37 and 52 yards.

Arkansas 35
Texas A&M 0

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Quarterback Tom Jones, benched last week, accounted for three touchdowns and set up another with a fourth down pass completion as 10th-ranked Arkansas crushed Texas A&M 35-0 Saturday night.

The victory set up a Southwest Conference showdown next week in Dallas between the Razorbacks and second-ranked Southern Methodist. The Mustangs are 10-0 and 7-0 in the conference. Arkansas is 8-1 and 5-1 in league play.

With quarterback Gary Kubiak on the sideline, the Aggies could do nothing.

The Aggies did not make their second first down until the final play of the third quarter. When Arkansas took a 28-0 lead five minutes deep in the third quarter on Jones' 1-yard run, the Aggies had run 26 plays and netted 36 yards.

PSU Edges Notre Dame

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Todd Blackledge's 48-yard touchdown pass to Curt Warner early in the fourth quarter lifted 5th-ranked Penn State to a 24-14 victory over Notre Dame Saturday and virtually clinched a major bowl bid for the Nittany Lions.

The victory was the ninth against one loss for Penn State, which is idle next week when the bowl bids come out. The Lions close their regular season against Pitt Nov. 26.

Freshman Allen Pinkett's 93-yard kickoff return late in the second quarter gave the Irish a 14-13 lead at the half, but Notre Dame, having lost quarterback Blair Kiel early in the game, was unable to muster a meaningful attack in the second half.

The 13th-ranked Irish took the opening kickoff and marched 76 yards in 15 plays for a touchdown and a 7-0 lead.

Kiel, who has a sore right arm from a late hit in the Pitt game a week earlier, started the game but left during the drive in favor of Ken Karcher who fired an 8-yard touchdown pass to Chris Smith to cap the drive. Kiel did not throw all week in practice and threw one pass, which was incomplete before the leaving the game.

Early in the second quarter the Nittany Lions tied it on a 59-yard drive capped by Blackledge's one-yard touchdwon dive.

Two fumbles, charged to Karcher, were converted into field goals of 41 and 29 yards by Nick Gancitano to put Penn State ahead 13-7.

Gancitano's second field goal came with 1:41 left in the half. On the ensuing kickoff, Pinkett took the ball on the 7-yard line and raced down the right sideline to give Notre Dame its 14-13 lead.

After Penn State took a 19-14 lead on the Blackledge-to-Warner pass, Pat Ballage took the following kickoff, but his knee touched on the one-yard line. On the next play, Pinkett was tackled in the end zone by Walker Ashley for a safety to make it 21-14.

Late in the game, Walker ripped off a 44-yard run to set up a 27-yard field goal by Gancitano with 3:18 left to give Penn State breathing room.

The loss left Notre DAme with a 6-2-1 record. The Irish still have games to play at Air Force and Southern Cal and a victory next Saturday against Air Force could earn the Irish a bowl bid.

The third quarter was scoreless, with Notre Dame's Mike Johnston missing a 49-yard field goal attempt.

The first time the Nittany Lions gained possession in the fourth quarter they wasted no time in scoring. Warner, who gained 143 yards on 25 carries, went for four yards before Blackledge hit Kenny Jackson with a 28-yard pass to the Notre Dame 48-yard line.

Blackledge then hit Warner with a pass at the Notre Dame 25 and the Penn State tailback eluded defender Dave Duerson and raced into the end zone for a 19-14 lead. Blackledge attempted a pass for two points and failed, but the Nittany Lions got the two points on the ensuing safety.

Jackson caught 6 passes for 114 yard[illegible] marking the third straight game in which he has gone over 100 yards on receptions.

Late in the third quarter, Notre Dame was driving on the running of tailback Phil Carter and a 12-yard pass from Karcher to Mike Haywood which put the ball on the Penn State 36.

But Karcher attempted a bootled and was nailed for a 6-yard loss by Steve Sefter.

Miss. St. Upsets LSU; Southern Miss Stuns Tide

STARKVILLE, Miss. (AP) — Dana Moore kicked a 45-yard field goal in the fading seconds Saturday to lift the Mississippi State Bulldogs to a 27-24 upset of unbeaten and sixth-ranked Louisiana State in a frantic finish to a regionally televised football game.

Moore kicked the winning points with about 20 seconds left, breaking the Bulldogs' six-game losing streak after it appeared Louisiana State had rescued a 24-24 tie on fullback Mike Montz' 35-yard touchdown run with 4:52 left.

Montz had scored shortly after Mississippi State went ahead 24-17 when quarterback John Bond and end Danny Knight teamed on a 64-yard pass-run touchdown play with 10:34 left in the fourth quarter.

Knight caught the ball near mid-field and broke three tackles while galloping up the sideline for the touchdown.

Louisiana State, shut out of the Southeastern Conference championship earlier in the day by top-ranked Georgia's victory over Auburn, fell to 7-1-1, 4-1-1 in the SEC. Mississippi State is now 4-6 and 1-4.

The victory overshadowed a big day for Tiger quarterback Alan Risher, who hit 25 of 34 passes for 308 yards and two touchdowns.

Moore missed a 41-yard field goal with 5:45 left in the game, turning the ball over to LSU for its 76-yard drive capped by Montz' touchdown.

Later, Mississippi State started its winning drive from the Tiger 44, with Bond hitting Corwyn Aldredge for 14 yards to help move the ball into position for Moore's field goal.

The teams battled to a 14-14 tie in the first half, marked by Risher's two touchdown passes. He combined with split end Eric Martin on a 69-yard play in the first quarter and threw 11 yards to tailback Garry James in the second quarter. The two scoring passes gave him 28 for his career and 14 for the season, tying him with Bert Jones for school records in both categories.

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — Reggie Collier scored three touchdowns and Sam DeJarnette got two and rambled for 152 yards to lead Southern Mississippi to a 38-29 upset Saturday over 17th-ranked Alabama and hand the Crimson Tide its first loss at home since 1963.

Collier, directing the Golden Eagle offense to perfection, paced Southern to a 28-7 halftime lead as his team made good on its first 10 third-down conversions and scored on his first four possessions. Two of those touchdowns came on runs of 22 and 8 yards by the rangy quarterback.

Seventeenth-ranked Alabama, which had won 57 games in a row in Bryant-Denny Stadium, fought back to within six points early in the fourth period, but Steve Clark added a field goal and Southern held off the Tide for the upset.

Florida, back in 1963, was the last team to defeat Alabama in Tuscaloosa, 10-6.

Southern, which was slapped with a probation this week for illegal recruiting, had said it was making Alabama its bowl game. The outcome left both teams with 7-3 records.

Collier got 85 yards on 12 carries and Clemon Terrell got 71 on 19 in addition to DeJarnette's 152 yards as the Southerners ripped through the Alabama defense, especially in the first half when they compiled 219 yards on the ground.

Ricky Moore led Alabama's runners with 109 yards on 10 carries while Tide quarterback Walter Lewis completed 15 of 22 passes for 197 yards.

Craig Turner scored twice for Alabama and Joe Carter and Paul Carruth once each.

AMES, Iowa (AP) — Junior quarterback Turner Gill ran for one touchdown and threw for another as fourth-ranked Nebraska trounced Iowa State 48-10 in a Big Eight Conference football game Saturday.

Gill scored on a 22-yard run with 11:58 left in the first half to break a 7-7 tie.

Doug Wilkening's 9-yard touchdown run with 5:42 to play in the first quarter, gave the Cornhuskers a 7-0 lead. But ISU quarterback Dave Archer evened the score with a 3-yard run.

Rozier, the nation's fifth leading rusher, scored on the Huskers' opening drive of the second half with a 5-yard run, capping an 83-yard drive in 11 plays. Rozier, who had 103 yards in 19 carries, left the game in the third quarter with an ankle injury.

Nebraska is 9-1 overall, and 6-0 in the league, while the Cyclone record fell to 4-5-1 and 1-4-1 in the league.

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Kelly Phelps threw Oklahoma's first touchdown pass of the season and scored on a 38-yard run as the Sooners beat Missouri, 41-14, Saturday en route to a Big Eight title showdown with Nebraska.

Oklahoma became the last of the 97 football teams in its division to score with the pass while backs Marcus Dupree, Stanley Wilson and Steve Sewell rushed for touchdowns.

Dupree, the big-play tailback who broke the school's freshman rushing record Saturday, sprinted 70 yards to give 15th-ranked Oklahoma a 35-14 fourth-quarter lead. He added his second shortly afterward with a 7-yard run.

Sooner coaches had estimated a victory over Missouri would match Oklahoma, unbeated after six confrence games and 8-2 overall, with Nebraska next Saturday with the Huskers the favorite to win the conference crown and a trip to the Orange Bowl.

The loss leaves Missouri at 1-3-2 in the league and 4-4-2 this year.

Missouri kept close at 21-14 at the half with Eric Troy's 5-yard scoring run in its first possession of the game and quarterback Marlon Adler's 42-yard touchdown strike to split end Craig White.

But Adler's backfield footwork couldn't keep him away from the Oklahoma defenders, who repeatedly breached the Tiger line and, in one series, sacked the quarterback three times.

Dupree finished with 166 yards rushing for the day and 756 for the season, breaking the 1980 freshman record of 659 yards by George "Buster" Rhymes.

WEST POINT, N.Y. (AP) — Dan Marino threw three short touchdown passes while Pittsburgh's defense shackled Army as the eighth-ranked Panthers methodically marched to a 24-6 victory Saturday in college football.

With scouts from the Sugar, Gator and Fiesta bowls in attendance, Pitt had no trouble rebounding from last week's 31-16 loss to Notre Dame — which knocked the Panthers out of the No. spot — in running its record to 8-1.

Joe McCall rushed for 129 yards and Dwight Collins caught touchdown passes of 6 and 4 yards from Marino, who was not particularly impressive. The senior quarterback completed 9 of 19 passes for only 71 yards and suffered three interceptions.

Pitt's defense, ranked ninth in the nation in total defense, held Army to 92 yards, 82 of them on a late fourth-quarter drive capped by Bill Turner's 6-yard TD pass to Billy Noble.

With 52-21 Victory Over Purdue

Michigan Gains Rose Bowl Berth

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Michigan tailback Lawrence Ricks ran the ball 31 times for 196 yards and two touchdowns as the 14th-ranked Wolverines clinched the Big Ten football championship and a Rose Bowl berth with a 52-21 victory over Purdue Saturday.

The Wolverines, 8-0 in the conference and 8-2 overall, will represent the Big Ten against the Pac-10 Conference champion in the Rose Bowl game on Jan. 1 regardless of how they fare in their final regular season game against Ohio State next week. Purdue fell to 3-5 and 3-7.

Ricks, who gained 156 yards in the first half alone, scored on touchdown runs of 4 and 1 yards.

Michigan quarterback Steve Smith, passing sparingly, teamed up with All-American flanker Anthony Carter on TD pass plays of 48 and 62 yards and scored once himself on a 1-yard sneak.

Kerry Smith scored on a 1-yard plunge, Eddie Garrett had a 6-yard TD run and Ali Haji-Sheikh booted a 26-yard field goal for Michigan.

Purdue tailback Mel Gray scored on a 1-yard dive and quarterback Scott Campbell tossed a 4-yard TD pass to Cliff Benson and 12 yards to Rick Brunner for the mistake-plagued Boilermakers.

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — Tailback Tim Spencer carried 26 times for 190 yards, including a 16-yard touchdown burst on Ohio State's final scoring drive Saturday, to lift the Buckeyes to a 40-28 win over Northwestern.

Five different Ohio State players scored touchdowns, but the Buckeyes needed all of them to offset a brilliant passing performance by Northwestern's freshman quarterback Sandy Schwab.

Schwab connected on 27 of 43 attempts for 393 yards and three touchdowns, breaking two NCAA freshman marks held by Mark Herrmann for total offense and passing yardage in a single season.

Schwab's 14 TD passes were a single-season and career record.

Illinois.....48
Indiana.....7

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Quarterback Tony Eason threw for 200 yards, including three touchdowns passes during a three-minute burst in the first quarter that launched Illinois to a 48-7 Big Ten Conference football victory over Indiana.

Mitchell Brookins also scored three times, including once on a 14-yard pass from Eason and twice on 1-yard dives, as the Illini finished their season with a 6-3 Big Ten record and a 7-4 overall mark.

The Indiana touchdown came on a 3-yard pass from backup quarterback Cam Cameron to Scott McNabb in the game's closing minutes.

Indiana fell to 3-5 in the conference and 4-6 overall with one more game to go.

'Hard Ball' Still Pitch Being Thrown By Management

NEW YORK (AP) — Kay McMurray, chief of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, stepped gingerly into the National Football League strike Saturday at the request of the NFL players' union.

But management was still playing hard ball — sticking resolutely by its last offer and insisting that the union would have to significantly alter its position if it wants to resume bargaining.

McMurray, who heads the federal agency in Washington, D.C., met with union chief Ed Garvey and spoke by telephone with Jack Donlan, the owners' chief negotiator, in what he characterized as "very preliminary talks" aimed at ending the 54-day-old strike.

The meeting in McMurray's office Friday reflected a reversal of previously held positions.

Early in the strike, management suggested federal mediation, but the union declined, in part because Donlan once worked for the mediation service and had personal ties with many of the mediators.

McMurray finally had a small role; he brought the two sides together to decide on an outside mediator — Sam Kagel, who presided over negotiations for a month before leaving here last weekend for his home in San Francisco.

This time, it was Garvey who initiated the meeting with the mediation service. He said Saturday that if the two sides sat down together with McMurray, he could preside at "one lengthy meeting where basic issues could be resolved."

But Donlan said he simply read McMurray excerpts from the letter he sent to Garvey earlier this week. In it, he said the owners were willing to clarify ambiguities about their final contract offer that have arisen in player meetings, but that they were sticking to their final money offer.

"We thought the mediator would have been helpful in trying to avert a strike," he said. "But there's no sense going there to talk about meal money and other fringe items."

He added: "There's no sense in beating around the bush. The season's about over. We gave it our best shot."

Meanwhile, confusion continued over which teams have accepted, at least in principle, management's offer. The union concedes that New Orleans, Dallas, Houston and Denver have accepted it in principle; management says they've been joined by Buffalo, the Los Angeles Rams, Miami, Minnesota and Cincinnati, but player representatives of those teams deny it.

However, two members of the Vikings, Ahmad Rashad and Eddie Payton, said they felt the union had misrepresented their team's position, which they said was 30-5 in favor of accepting the contract in principle.

"Then I read where where our player rep (David Huffman) says we are behind the wage scale. That's absolutely wrong," Rashad said.

And the New York Giants, who rejected the Management Council offer a week ago without a formal vote, will meet again Sunday night to answer questions that have arisen among some players about the talks. That follows decisions by several teams — the union says four, management says nine — to accept the contract if questions are cleared up.

Giants Coach Ray Perkins said he had received calls from several players asking him to clarify the management offer.

And Beasley Reece, the team's player representative, said: "Ten or 15 guys got hold of me and said they wanted to have another meeting. I can only presume that some guys have a question, or want to take a formal vote on the proposal or want to change their mind."

In addition, 13 players led by Dallas Cowboy quarterback Danny White arrived in New York to make their position clear to union representatives. Most of them are big name, high-salaried players who have publicly criticized the the union position at one time or another in the dispute.

Some of those players met with a union group, and A.J. Duhe of the Miami Dolphins said Saturday they basically restated their position but that the union still remained solid.

Bruins Outscore Stanford, 38-35

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — UCLA's Tom Ramsey fired two touchdown passes and ran for another score in winning a quarterback duel from Stanford's John Elway Saturday as the 12th-ranked Bruins topped the Cardinal 38-35 in a wild Pacific-10 Conference football game at the Rose Bowl.

A crowd of 78,452 watched Ramsey, who leads the nation in passing efficiency, complete his first eight passes and finish with 19 completions in 27 attempts for 314 yards without an interception. Both of his scoring throws went to Jojo Townsell on plays of 9 and 4 yards.

Elway, the NCAA career leader in completions, connected on 29 of his 39 passing attempts for 352 yards and completed 10 in a row at one stage late in the game. He was intercepted once.

Elway threw two touchdown passes — a 47-yarder to Emile Harry with 51 seconds remaining in the first half and an 11-yarder to Vincent White with 3:52 left in the game. It was the 19th straight game in which Elway has thrown at least one TD aerial.

Stankavage completed 16 of 31 passes for 192 yards and two interceptions.

Virginia shook off an early touchdown and tied the score on Gordy Whitehead's 1-yard run. North Carolina recovered and gained a 17-7 intermission edge.

The Cavaliers threatened in the third quarter and narrowed the gap to 17-14 on Whitehead's 7-yard scoring pass to Kevin Riccio, but for much of the second half Virginia was pinned deep in its own territory.

North Carolina's Brooks Barwick kicked field goals of 34 and 42 yards, his career best.

North Carolina raised its record to 6-3, 3-2 in the ACC. Virginia fell to 2-7, 1-4 in league play.

Following a Virginia punt, North Carolina marched 58 yards in eight plays with Tyrone Anthony 1-yard touchdown capping the drive. Barwick's conversion gave the Tar Heels a 7-0 lead.

The Cavaliers quickly retaliated and marched 80 yards in 13 plays with Whitehead scoring on a 1-yard dive with 5:09 left. Wayne Morrison's kick tied the score.

Barwick broke the deadlock with 11:14 left before intermission on a 34-yard field goal.

Virginia had an opportunity to take the lead when Tim Morrison fumbled a punt and Bryan Hitchcock recovered at the Tar Heel 42. However, North Carolina's defense held and Morrison's 36-yard field goal attempt was wide.

Stankavage led the Tar Heels on an 80-yard march and passed three yards to Bryant with 5:36 left and, with Barwick's conversion, North Carolina took a 17-7 lead into the locker room.

Fortier's second touchdown came from 1 yard and capped a 10-play, 60-yard drive that was highlighted by a 21-yard pass from quarterback Jim Bob Taylor to tightend Richard Salem.

Tech added a 4-yard touchdown run by Keith Glanton after an interception by Daryl Wise and tacked on a 38-yard field goal by reserve kicker Nick Rumanes.

Lavette broke Eddie Lee Ivery's record set during the late 1970s with a pair of first-half touchdowns as Tech jumped to a 28-7 lead over Wake. The Deacons turned the ball over four times and Tech capitalized on them for three scores.

Lavette scored from 4 yards as the Yellow Jackets drove 80 yards on their initial possession. Wake Forest drove 73 yards to tie it at 7-7 on Topper Clemons' 15-yard run before Lavette scored again from 5 yards, splitting three tacklers at the line of scrimmage.

Georgia Tech added two touchdowns late in the second period. The first, set up by a Wake Forest fumble, came when Taylor threw a 23-yard touchdown pass to flanker Jeff Keisler. The next came on Fortier's 20-yard burst off tackle.

Jordan Cleared Of Wrongdoing

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — The NCAA has cleared Clemson's No.1 quarterback, Homer Jordan, of any wrongdoing in its investigation into recruiting violations and related matters at the school, according to an Anderson, S.C., newspaper.

The Anderson Independent-Mail reported Saturday that sources close to the investigation also say the National Collegiate Athletic Association has ruled Jordan eligible to play for the remainder of the season.

Clemson President Bill L. Atchley had suspended the senior quarterback from the Kentucky game earlier this season for what Atchley believed was a technical violation of NCAA rules.

According to the newspaper's sources, the NCAA investigation of the purchase of Jordan's car did not affect an alleged NCAA penalty set against Clemson last week.

Meanwhile, The Greenville, S.C., News said Saturday that an unidentified source claims Clemson will soon announce that it will be prevented from going to a postseason bowl game this year.

NCAA officials had said they would not comment on the published reports.

The source said the school's bowl hopes were eliminated by the alleged probation conditions imposed by the Atlantic Coast Conference. Bowl bids cannot be made formally until Nov. 20, although several bowls reportedly are interested in the 11th-ranked and defending national champion Tigers.

Atchley declined comment about the NCAA or the ACC findings, or whether Clemson would be eligible to go to a bowl game this season.

However, he did tell the Anderson newspaper that he has had several meetings with ACC officials during the "past few days."

Concerning Jordan, one source told The Independent-Mail, "The only thing they could pin down about the car purchase was the cosigning of the loan application. And the NCAA was satisfied with the action Clemson took by suspending Jordan earlier this season."

Jordan's car loan was cosigned by Easley businessman W.E. "Gene" Tollison. Because of Jordan's and his attorneys' presence at the NCAA infraction committee hearing last month, it was believed that Jordan's car purchase was a factor in the Clemson penalty.

However, the Anderson newspaper's source said Jordan's attorneys were able to satisfy the committee that Jordan's family paid for the car.

One of Jordan's attorneys, John Hagins of Greenville, said any sanctions that might be imposed by the NCAA had nothing to do with Jordan.

"Let me just say that the NCAA people were very complimentary with the presentation of Homer's position. Let me say extremely complimentary," Hagins said.

Mancini Retains Crown With KO

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Ray "Boom Boom" Mancini unleashed a vicious left-right combination at the beginning of the 14th round Saturday to knock out Duk Koo Kim of South Korea and retain his World Boxing Association lightweight title.

The sudden combination sent the top-ranked challenger sprawling on the canvas beneath the ropes. He staggered to his feet but fell again and was unconscious as referee Richard Green moved in to stop the fight at 19 seconds of the round.

Kim, still unconscious as ring physician Dr. Donald Romeo worked on him for several minutes after the knockout, was taken on a stretcher to a nearby hospital. His condition was not immediately known.

The knockout came after a bruising 13 rounds that saw Kim take a beating from the champion but refuse to go down.

The challenger won only a few rounds early in the fight and was well behind on the scorecards of the three ringside judges. But his southpaw, clinching style kept Mancini off-balance.

Mancini, defending his lightweight title for the second time since winning it with a first-round knockout of Art Frias last May, seemed confused by Kim's style during the early rounds.

A-G Rally Fells Havelock, 22-12

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

HAVELOCK — Ayden-Grifton looked like the Ayden-Grifton of old Friday evening — and just in time as the Chargers forged perhaps their best effort of the season when it counted most.

Ayden-Grifton dug deep to find its old self, and then melded the best of those elements of old to advance to the second round of the Division I 3-A state high school playoffs.

Down 12-7 early in the fourth period, Ayden-Grifton used a four-yard touchdown juant by Malcolm Worthington and a one-yard scoring run by Joey Kennedy to beat Havelock, 22-12, Friday in the first round of the Division I playoffs.

Ayden-Grifton, now 10-1 and 3-1 the past two years in the playoffs, travels to Bertie Friday night for round two of the playoffs. Bertie rolled by Northampton West, 38-0, in its opening-round game. Bertie is also 10-1.

"I thought this was the best effort we've had all year," Ayden-Grifton coach Dixon Sauls said outside his team's locker room. "We were really ready to play tonight.

"In some games in the second half of the year we haven't been ready. But, the kids never gave up tonight," Sauls said. "I thought we showed a lot of heart. We made our share of mistakes but with our effort we were able to overcome them tonight."

The Chargers controlled play in the opening half and led, 7-0, at the break on the strength of Kelvin Harris' eight-yard TD run. Havelock, which failed to get inside the A-G 25 in the first half, closed the deficit to 7-6 when Tom Mullens plucked a fumble by Worthington out of midair and returned it 72 yards for a TD with 4:06 left in the quarter.

The Rams then took tne lead early in the final quarter when fullback Tom Young bulled inside from a yard out to make it 12-7 with 9:33 left. The TD was set up when Joey Colly picked off a Kennedy pass — only the third INT for Kennedy this season — and returned it 15 yards to A-G 40.

"They certainly had the momentum then," Sauls said.

Not for long. Sensing its season was in jeopardy, Ayden-Grifton drove 65 yards in 11 plays to regain the lead — a lead it never lost.

With second and nine from the A-G 36, Kennedy found tight end Doug Coley open over the middle. Coley, who grabbed three passes for 50 yards, ran another 10 yards to complete the 31-yard play.

The drive almost ended three plays later when Harris fumbled at the Havelock 19. But A-G fullback Jarvis Koonce recovered at the 20. Kennedy then hit Coley for eight yards to make it fourth and one at the 12.

Koonce, who gained 59 yards, most inside the tackles against the Havelock 4-4 defense, was hit at the line but ripped through the tackle for three yards and the first down.

"I knew the team needed that and I bucked it up in there," Koonce said.

Said Sauls: "That was just an outstanding individual effort. It was the key to the game."

Two plays later, Worthington slipped off tackle for the final four yards and the TD to give A-G a 13-12 lead with 3:33 left. Kennedy then ran for the two points to up the lead to 15-12.

The Chargers sealed the win moments later. Kennedy, who also plays defensive back, intercepted a pass by Havelock quarterback D.J. Flemming and returned it 26 yards to the Havelock 14.

"I was just playing back and I read to the quarterback," Kennedy said.

It took A-G just three plays to take advantage of the turnover — the third of the game for the Rams — with Kennedy, appropriately enough, going over from a yard out. Tyrone Gay's kick made it 22-12.

"We could talk all night — about the individual efforts and the team effort. But, I'm just extremely pleased with the way were able to come back," Sauls said. "If they'll play like this — with that type of effort we got tonight — we'll be all right."

The A-G defense, which had given up over 200 yards the past two games, held the Rams to 141 yards total offense — 49 in the second half. Young, the Rams' leading rusher, was held to 45 yards on 14 carries.

"Though we gave away height and weight," Sauls said, "I thought we were quicker overall as a team and that may have been the ultimate factor in the game."

Offensively, Ayden-Grifton amassed 255 yards — 186 rushing and 69 passing — and probably would have had more except for 80 yards in penalties. Harris, a sophomore tailback, led A-G on the ground with 89 yards in 13 carries.

The A-G offensive line, led by guard Chuck Smithwick and tackle Kevin Craft, controlled the Havelock defensive front most of the night. Kennedy was never sacked and the Charger backs nearly always found holes awaiting them at the line of scrimmage.

"The right side of our offense line with Smithwick and Craft played well," Sauls said. "We had 10 players going both ways and we got tired, but they kept coming back. It was an inspired effort."

The game began with the two teams feeling each other out. A-G drove to the Ram 29 on its second possession, but Kennedy's pass on fourth and 10 slipped off Coley's fingertips.

Havelock drove to the A-G 29 late in the period but Young was stopped short of a first down on fourth and four.

Midway through the second quarter the Chargers put together the lone scoring drive of the half. Taking the ball at the 17, the Chargers used the outside running of Harris to key the nine-play march that ended with Harris' eight-yard TD run.

Harris got the drive started when he took a pitch around right end and raced 32 yards to the A-G 49. Two eight-yard runs by Harris put the ball on the Ram 29.

Kennedy then hit Gay, who made a nice leaping catch over the middle, for 15 yards to the eight. From there, Harris followed his blockers and knifed through an attempted tackle at the goalline to cap the 83-yard march. Gay's kick made it 7-0 with 2:06 to go in the half.

Havelock, which managed just three first downs in the first half, was unable to move the ball in its first two possession of the second half but then used Worthington's fumble to cut the A-G lead to one.

With the ball on the Havelock 32, Flemming fumbled and Jeffery Hardy recovered for A-G at the 29. On the first play from scrimmage, however, Worthington was hit and the ball popped high in the air. Mullens grabbed the ball out of the air and outran the Chargers for the TD. Young was stopped short on the try for two, but the Rams now trailed, 7-6.

Less than three minutes later, the Rams were headed for the go-ahead TD when Colly picked off Kennedy's pass. Flemming, who did not run the ball once in the first half, gained 18 yards in the drive.

Runs of seven and six yards on the option by the Ram quarterback put the ball on the 18. Young then went for eight yards and, two plays later, muscled inside for the touchdown from a yard out to make it 12-7.

It was a lead short-lived, however, as the Chargers rallied for two scores and the victory.

"This is one of the thrills of coaching for me," Sauls said, "from the standpoint of the effort they put out and the way they came back."

Chargers: Victory 'One Of Our Better Efforts'

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

HAVELOCK — Ayden-Grifton had not played well lately. Ayden-Grifton coach Dixon Sauls admitted it; his players knew it.

But, Friday evening the Chargers put together one of their best efforts of the year and came away with a 22-12 victory over Havelock in the first round of the Division I 3-A state high school playoffs.

The Chargers, now 10-1, travel to Bertie for round two of the playoffs. Bertie defeated Northampton West, 38-0, Friday night in its opening-round game. Bertie is also 10-1.

"We played one of our better games of the season tonight," said A-G's Chuck Smithwick, a starter at linebacker and offensive guard. "Hopefully, we're on the upswing."

"As a team, we definitely put together one of our better games," said A-G quarterback and defensive back Joey Kennedy. "This is probably the best game we've played all year."

The Chargers came into the game off a 14-7 loss to SouthWest Edgecombe, their only loss of the season. The Cougars had held the A-G offense in check and the SWE offense, meantime, ran up the second highest total yardage of the season against the Chargers.

"I think the loss to SouthWest helped us," Smithwick said. "I thought we'd be ready tonight. We had a good week of practice."

It was Smithwick who spearheaded a Charger defense that held Havelock to 141 yards — 100 rushing and 41 passing.

Kennedy, meantime, led the A-G offense, which ground out 186 yards rushing and 69 passing. Kennedy hit five of 11 passes, including a 31-yard completion to tight end Doug Coley, who caught three passes for 50 yards.

"The line did a good job on our passing and running game," said Kennedy, who threw only his third interception of the year against the Rams.

The Chargers again featured the running of three backs: fullback Jarvis Koonce (59 yards) and tailbacks Kelvin Harris (89 yards, 1 TD) and Malcolm Worthington (38 yards, 1 TD).

"All three of our backs ran well tonight," Sauls said. "And Koonce, in particular, had a good game blocking."

Koonce, who also picked a crucial first down late in the game as the Chargers drove for what proved the winning score, did most of his running inside against the Havelock stacked 4-4 defense.

"We needed to gain some yards inside and I knew I was the one who had to do it," Koonce said. "They were looking for Malcolm and Kelvin a lot. And our offensive line did a magnificent job."

Both Smithwick and Kennedy said Havelock was nowhere as good as SouthWest, but Koonce was not sure.

"There's no comparison," Smithwick said.

Added Kennedy: "No way. Their backfield is not as strong and they're not as quick."

But, said Koonce: "SouthWest was in a must-win situation and they were really ready. But I really couldn't say who was better."

On this night, however, it didn't matter whether the Cougars were better than the Rams or not. All that mattered was that the Chargers were.

ODU Swimmers Down ECU

Old Dominion defeated both the East Carolina men's and women's swimming teams by identical 60-53 scores Saturday in a meet here.

The losses left the two ECU teams at 1-1 this season.

"Any time you lose it's disappointing," ECU coach Rick Kobe said. "But it was a real close meet. Last year, our women lost to ODU by 15, 20 points and this year we were within seven."

The Pirate women broke two school marks — in the 50-meter free style and the 400-meter medley relay.

Nan George won the 50 free in 24.48, eclipsing here old mark of 24.59 which she set last year.

In the 400 medley relay, ECU swam a 4:08.76, breaking the old mark of 4:09.07 set a week ago. Team members were Luanne Peura, Joanne McCulley, Kaky Wilson and George.

ECU also won the 400-meter free relay and Nancy James finished first in the 100 free.

For the men, Chris Pittelli won the 100 free, Stan Williams captured the 50 free and Scott Eagle won the one- and three-meter diving. The Pirates also won the 400 free relay and the 400 medley relay.

ECU returns to action next Saturday when the Pirates play host to UNC-W and Georgia Southern.

Defense Keys Rampants Past Goldsboro, 14-10

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Rose High School's defense twice stopped Goldsboro a yard short of a first down just outside the ten yard line and was able to preserve a 14-10 victory Friday night in the first round of the State Division II 4-A Playoffs.

The victory moved Rose into the finals of the Division II event, to be played at Asheville next Friday night. Asheville downed Charlotte Independence, 50-29, in the western championship.

Rose trailed twice in the contest, 3-0 and 10-7, before coming back on the final period's first play to score the winning TD. But it took some super defensive play after that to hold onto the win.

Goldsboro, aided by a penalty when Rose had too many men on the field on a punt, was able to drive for a 27-yard field goal by Mike Raper on its first series of the game.

Rose, unable to move the ball in the first half, despite outstanding field position, finally cashed in when Cougar quarterback Darryl McCarter fumbled in the end zone and Judas Best pounced on it for the first Rampant score. Willie Levitt's PAT made it 7-3 and it stayed that way the rest of the half.

Goldsboro drove 80 yards on its first possesion of the second half, scoring on a 25-yard pass from McCarter to Darryl Atkinson on fourth and 19 from the 25. Raper then made it 10-7.

But Rose drove right back down the field — ironically helped along by a clipping penalty before possession changed on a punt — to score the go-ahead score on a one-yard plunge by Reggie Smith.

Rose then held on downs at the 11 on the next Goldsboro possession, and despite getting off two very poor punts on the next two series, got interceptions by Craig Dupree and Roswell Streeter to slam the door on Goldsboro.

"This is really a good feeling," an elated Rose coach Ronald Vincent said afterwards. "I thought our defense played well when it had its back to the wall. Both Dupree and (Frankie) Carr had outstanding games, and I thought Best and (William) Rhodes played well too on defense.

"Goldsboro was every bit as good as we expected them to be on defense," Vincent said. Goldsboro held Rose to only 58 yards rushing and 27 passing.

"But we decided to play a patient game against them and not give them a break," he said. It turned out that Goldsboro got few breaks and Rose got the key ones.

Goldsboro used one of the few breaks it got to score a field goal on its opening drive. After returning the kickoff to its own 36, Rose held at the 44 and forced a punt. But the Rampants had 12 men on the field on the kick, and it cost them 15 yards for unsportsmanlike conduct.

"It was a guy who hasn't played on the punting team all year," Vincent said. "He just stayed on the field for some unknown reason."

Goldsboro, moved to the Rose 42 on the play, got 15 yards on the next as Charles Howell swept the right side of the line. Two more plays resulted in a first down at the 16, but Rose held there, forcing the 27 yard kick by Raper that made it 3-0 with 6:14 left in the period.

Goldsboro appeared to get a double break on the next series. Rose, forced to punt, saw Kenny Kirkland drop the ball dead at the ten yard line, only to have it called back by illegal proceedure. Then, on the next kick, Harry Jackson returned it from the Goldsboro 28 to the Rose 16, only to have a clip at the Cougar 33 run it back to the 18.

Forcing a punt, Rose got the ball at the Cougar 48, but got only one first down, and after reaching the 21, was thrown back to the 33 and forced to punt. Rose again got it in good field position, at the Cougar 33 after a 16-yard punt return by Edward Frazier, but was unable to get a first down.

Chuch Whitner got a hand on Goldsboro's next punt, which rolled out of bounds at the Cougar 37, but once more, Rose was unable to move it and punted to the eight.

On first down, McCarter hit Jackson on a pass to the sidelines, but Jackson had to go down on one knee to catch the game, resulting in no gain. Then, on second down, McCarter retreated to the goal line to pass and was snowed under, fumbling before he hit the ground in the end zone. Best gathered it in for Rose, and suddenly, the Rampants were in the lead.

Levitt's kick, with 3:36 left in the half, put Rose up, 7-3.

Neither team was able to move the ball in the half. Goldsboro ended up with eight yards rushing and 11 passing, while Rose rushed for just 16 and had no yards passing.

Donnell Lee put Rose in great field position again with a 63-yard kickoff return, down to the Cougar 30, but Rose was unable to move it and a 47-yard field goal attempt by Levitt was short.

The Cougars then got off their best offensive drive of the game, moving 80 yards on eight plays for the go-ahead score. Sweeping from sideline to sideline, the Cougars picked up 36 yards on first down, then added eight to the opposite side. After a loss on second down, Derrick Coley swept to the right for 24 and a first down at the Rose 16.

The Rose defense seemed to dig in there, and a 15-yard clipping penalty moved it on back to the 29. After gaining four on the third down play, Goldsboro's McCarter scrambled around, then found Atkinson crossing to the sidelines at the ten. After making the catch, he scooted down the sideline to the end zone untouchded for the score, and Goldsboro was back up, 10-7, after Raper's kick with 5:29 left in the third period.

"They made an adjustment on us at the start of the second half," Vincent said of Goldsboro's ability to move the ball all of a sudden. "In the first half, we had done some things different from what they had seen us do, and they started knocking down the defensive end and pushing the linebacker outside. We finally made some adjustments, and it payed off there at the end."

Rose appeared held, however, as it started its drive back down the field to regain the lead. But on fourth and nine, Goldsboro clipped while the ball was still in the air on the punt, and the penalty gave Rose a first down at its own 48.

On first down, Kirkland hit Tyrone Smith on a square out at the Cougar 38. Roderick Harrell added nine more on first down and Kirkland got a first down on a sneak to the 28. He then hit Smith again for 13 more on the same pattern to the other side, giving Rose a first down at the 15.

"After they scored, they backed off on us, and gave us that play and we were able to take advantage of it," Vincent said.

Reggie Smith was able to pick up seven yards on third and six to get the first down at the four, and on the first play of the final quarter, he went over right guard for the score, and with 11:56 left, Levitt's kick made it 14-10.

It marked the first time in 16 games that anyone had scored in double figures against Goldsboro.

The Cougars weren't out of it, however, driving back down the field. After reaching the 11 however, they faced third and one, and twice Howell tried to sweep the right side, and twice he came up short — giving the ball back to Rose on downs.

However, after being forced to kick, Kirkland got the ball off the side of his foot for only three yards on the punt, giving Goldsboro golden field position at the 17.

However, on the second snap after that, Dupree intercepted McCarter at the three and returned it to the 16. Rose managed one first down before having to punt again — and again getting off a short kick of only 23 yards — to the 24.

With 33 seconds left, Goldsboro had to go to the air, and Streeter pulled in a second interception with 14 seconds left to seal the game.

The win boosts the Rose record to 7-4 on the season, while Goldsboro closes out at 7-4.

To Replace Weaver As Manager

Orioles Name Altobelli

BALTIMORE (AP) — Joe Altobelli doesn't have the same personality as Earl Weaver, but he has a couple of things in common with his predecessor as manager of the Baltimore Orioles.

Both learned how to win while being weaned as highly successful managers in the Baltimore farm system, and both made their way to the major league club because of their organizational connections.

"It took me longer than I thought it would take, but I finally got here," Altobelli said Friday when he was given a two-year contract to replace the retired Weaver, winning out over Baltimore coaches Ray Miller and Cal Ripken Sr.

During his 11 seasons as a minor league manager for the Orioles, Altobelli's teams finished first five times and only twice lower than third.

With Weaver riding high during his 14½ seasons with the Orioles, Altobelli lost his heir-apparent tag to follow Weaver and took the managerial job with the San Francisco Giants in 1977.

After being fired in 1979, Altobelli managed Columbus to the championship in the International League and then became third base coach of the New York Yankees for two seasons.

"Joe has a different personality than Earl," said Baltimore pitcher Scott McGregor, one of eight players on the current Baltimore roster who have played for Altobelli. "He doesn't scream as much as Earl, but he is just as intent on winning.

"The key," McGregor said, "is to get the guys to play for you. Earl wanted to be a dictator. We've got to adjust to Joe, and I don't think that will be tough."

Altobelli said he has a love-hate relationship with his players: "I love none of them; I hate none of them. We're all in there to do a job.

"I don't think it's a compliment if a player says (of a manager), 'He's a nice guy to play for.' If it's, 'I enjoy playing for him,' that's OK."

Asked his thoughts on platooning, Altobelli said: "One reason they've been successful here is that they've used all their players and used them well. I see no reason for changing."

He said reserves need times at bat to stay sharp, adding, "I'll use as many players as it takes to win a ballgame."

Altobelli indicated he'd like to have Cal Ripken Jr. return to third base after playing mostly at shortstop during his rookie season. Either way, he'd prefer to get the matter settled before spring training.

Altobelli, 50, played 15½ seasons, mostly at first base, including 166 games in the major leagues with Cleveland and Minnesota.

He was a player-coach under Weaver at Rochester in 1966 when the Orioles asked him in midseason if he'd like to manage.

"I knew I wanted to try to manage someday," Altobelli said, "so I figured why not do it now and not play a few more years. Four days later, I went to Bluefield (of the all-rookie Appalachian League)."

In his new post with the Orioles, Altobelli said he didn't have to shake up a team that finished one game behind Milwaukee in the American League East last season and has posted the best record in the majors during the past 26 years.

VMI Whips ASU, 31-14

LEXINGTON, Va. (AP) — Quarterback Kelly Raber scored two touchdowns and passed for a third to lead Virginia Military's Keydets to a 31-14 Southern Conference football victory over Appalachian State's Mountaineers.

The Keydets mounted a 24-0 lead as their defense limited the Mountaineers to just 39 yards of offense through the first 35 minutes.

Tight end Tom Radle, who capped VMI's scoring by taking Raber's 11-yard toss late in the fourth quarter, set a school record for receptions for one season as he caught three to up his total to 49.

VMI is now 2-4 in the conference and 5-5 overall with one game to play, while the Mountaineers — who also have one game remaining — fell to 3-3 in the conference and 4-6 overall.

Greenville Country Club

The Greenville Kiwanis Club golf tournament, originally scheduled for earlier in the month, but rained out, was recently completed at the Greenville Country Club.

Proceeds from the tournament went to benefit the Greenville Sports Club.

Taking first place in the event was the team of Alan Crisp, Joe Condra, L.E. Langley and Les Garner with a net score of 44. Second place went to the team of Tommie Little, Bill Mitchum, Kurt Ficklen and Mickey Herrin with a 45.

Taking closest to the pin contests were: David Nichols (#3), Don Lister (#8), Brian Berkey (#10) and Tommie Little (#15). Winning the longest drive contests were: Jim Ward (#1), Earl Wilson (#6), Bill Mitchum (#13), and Neil Lancaster (#18).

Indian Trails Country Club

The women's Ringer Tournament at Indian Trails is coming to an end. Leaders going into the final week were Marie Israel, 73, and Mary Howard and Ona Gilland, both 74, in the championship flight; Dixie Lister, 80 and Rachael Davis, 82, in the first flight; and Frances Tucker, 92 and Lib Lilley, 98, in the second flight.

The Women's Association will hold its first meeting on Monday in the club room at 6 p.m. Election of officers and upcoming events will be the topic of discussion at the dinner meeting.

Senior Citizens Day will be observed at the club each Tuesday. Reduced cart and greens fees will be given to all those over 50.

Non-member college students may sign up to play on weekdays for a $6 fee which includes greens fee and cart for 18 holes. This will run through March 15.

The five-mile rule, restricting non-members living within five-miles of the club from playing, has been waived until March 15.

Smith Not Ready To Talk Of 2nd Title

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — North Carolina coach Dean Smith has finished celebrating his first NCAA basketball title and history tells him that his defending national champions will find it hard to repeat.

On the 25th anniversary of the last national championship, the Tar Heels presented Smith with his first title, and although three of the five contributors to that gift return, Smith isn't ready to talk about a return trip.

"We have a very difficult schedule and we're going to try and do the best we can with this particular team," said Smith, Tar Heel coach for 22 years.

Graduation took point guard Jimmy Black, while the lure of playing for pay grabbed forward James Worthy after his junior year. Juniors Sam Perkins and Matt Doherty and sophomore Michael Jordan are the starters left from the 32-2 team which nipped Georgetown 63-62 on Jordan's dramatic jumper.

"If we had Worthy and Black, we'd be a contender," Smith said. "There's a general tendency each fall, if you've been to the final four, to get the pre-season attention, no matter who you lose. I would say it would be hard for any team to get back into the final four any year."

North Carolina appeared in the final four in 1981, losing 68-57 to Indiana, before last year's trip to become the first to make back-to-back appearances since UCLA in 1974 and 1975.

"I didn't think our odds last year were very good, but we were lucky and good and it all worked out," said Smith.

The talent is back for the 1982-83 season, but the luck has been missing during the first three weeks of practice. A rash of injuries so decimated the Tar Heels that Smith was forced to bring four players from the junior varsity squad and one manager from his own team for practice sessions.

Perkins has a sprained knee which has been slow responding, while Jordan suffered a broken left wrist the first week of practice. Backup center Warren Martin has a hairline fracture in his leg, while 6-foot-11 freshman Brad Daugherty and 6-4½ classmate Curtis Hunter have been slowed by leg problems.

Another freshman, Steve Hale, has managed to avoid the injury bug and Smith is pleased with what he's seen of the 6-3 Oklahoma guard.

"Hale's made a remarkable adjustment because that's the hardest position to come into at our place," Smith said. "But he's been remarkable at picking up things."

Jordan's cast will be removed Monday, five days before the Tar Heels meet St. John's in the annual Hall of Fame Classic in Springfield, Mass. Sophomore John Brownlee will likely replace Perkins, who is still complaining of soreness and missed last week's practices.

"It's just unfortunate because this is the most important part of the season. You set your offense and defense," said Smith. "It seems like we're six weeks from where we should be right now."

Smith said senior Jim Braddock will be the fourth starter while the fifth place is up for grabs. Bench strength, a problem last year, hasn't shown noticeable improvement.

Missouri, Louisiana State and 1982 semifinalist Villanova highlight the non-conference schedule while there's always Virginia lurking in the Atlantic Coast Conference wars. Each game will become more challenging as Smith waits for his team to regain its collective health.

"It'll be awhile before we settle into our chemistry," he said.

2-Yard Punt Return For TD Can't Stave Off Loss

TWIN FALLS, Idaho (AP) — His team got beat by North Fremont 32-14 in the Idaho high school A-2 football semifinals Saturday, but Tim Cordier of Kimberly scored two touchdowns — on a 71-yard pass play and a two-yard punt return.

North Fremont was backed up to its own goal line and the punter had to kick into the face of a 30 mph wind.

The high kick was blown back toward the goal, bounced on the 15 and rolled to the 2. Cordier picked it up and stepped into the end zone for a touchdown.

SPORT LINE

To The Editor:

I would like to offer these lines as an addendum to Pattie Parker's letter that appears in Sportsline last week.

Local people and others often ask why the Lady Pirates don't play Carolina instead of riding 21 hours on a bus to play Notre Dame. The answer is a simple one. Carolina simply will not play us. The Carolina coaches say they have nothing to gain by playing ECU. How true it is! They would not gain a win not would they gain respect around Chapel Hill. The pain of losing is unbearable to them. We thrashed them last year and could do it again if given the chance. Coach "Druzzi," her able assistant Beth Burns, and the Lady Pirates have what it takes—all except money.

My Pa always told me, "son, it takes money to ride the train." You know, the older I get the more I believe in that old axiom.

20-14 Win Second For Pirates Over' Pack

ECU JVs Defeat NCSU

East Carolina's junior varsity football team ground out a 20-14 victory over N.C. State's Wolfcubs Friday afternoon as the Baby Bucs ended their season with a 2-1-1 record.

It marked the second victory over the State team this season for the Pirates.

Milt Corsey got the Pirates on the scoreboard in the first period, dashing 67 yards for a 6-0 lead. A two-point try fell short.

State rallied later in the period to tie it up. Daymon Long pulled in a 27-yard touchdown pass from Jeff Hosler for the score, and a two-point try by the Wolfpack also failed, leaving it knotted at 6-6.

The Pirates went back into the lead in the second quarter on an 18-yard pass from Larry Brobst to Stuart Ramirez. Again, the two-point try failed, leaving it at 12-6.

State came back to take the lead in the third period. Barry Amatucci recovered a fumble in the end zone, and Hosler passed to Roger Carmack for a two-pointer, giving State a 14-12 lead.

But in the final quarter, Robert Fuller cracked over on a 19-yard run to put the Pirates back up for good, and a Brobst to Robert Pittman pass finished off the scoring.

Corsey led the Pirate rushing with just two carries for 67 yards, while Fuller added 33. Quarterback John Williams was five of eight for 74 yards, while Brobst was six of 11 for 60 yards. Pittman caught six of those for 46 yards, while Ramirez caught three for 42 yards.

OUTDOORS With Joe Albea

TIPS FOR DEER HUNTING from the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission:

•Have the appropriate licenses and permits for the are you plan to hunt. This would include a basic hunting license, a big-game license and a game-lands use permit — if you plan to hunt on game lands. All of these licenses are included in the sportsman's license.

•Scout the area before the season opens. Learn where the deer bed down, where they fee and where their paths lie. Then, plan you hunt accordingly.

•Know your rifle, bow or muzzleloader. Be proficient with your hunting weapon and practice before the season begins. Include some practice shots that would be realistic in hunting situations.

•Be out early. Deer begin moving well before sunrise, and you should be on your stand — and sitting quietly — when legal shooting begins at one-half hour before sunrise.

•Don't be a fair-weather sportsman. Deer can't see or smell well in a cold drizzle, so this is an excellent time to hunt. If you put up with that cold drip down you back, you might bring home some meat.

•Take care of your deer. Downed deer should be field-dressed immediately and then stored in a cool place. The "gamy" taste often found in wild meat is usually the result of poor preparation and handling by the hunter.

•Be careful. Wear blaze-orange clothing. Is that a deer you hear approaching or another hunter? If you're not absolutely sure of your target, don't shoot. You might make a mistake that will haunt you the rest of you life!

VOLUNTARY WATERFOWL STAMP OFFERED IN '83 — North Carolina conservationists and hunters will have an opportunity to help waterfowl in the future. Beginning in 1983, the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission will be offering water-fowl conservation stamps on a voluntary basis, with the funds being used by the commission for waterfowl development, management and research in North Carolina.

Limited edition art prints of the waterfowl stamps will also be sold. In other stats with similar programs, stamps and art prints have become valued collectors' items for stamp collectors and wildlife art buffs.

"This program will be unique because hunters will not be required to have a North Carolina waterfowl-conservation stamp for waterfowl hunting," said Charles Fullwood, director of field operations for the Wildlife Commission. "This program is strictly voluntary. However, buying one of these stamps or prints is a fine way to help waterfowl in North Carolina."

The Wildlife Commission is currently developing guidelines for administering the program. With North Carolina's rich waterfowl heritage, officials believe that the stamps and prints will be very popular.

"This new program will be a great help to waterfowl conservation in North Carolina in the future," Fullwood said.

THE ROANOKE-ALBEMARLE CHAPTER of the North Carolina/National Wild Turkey Federation will hold a fall meeting at Scotfield Country Club on Nov. 18 beginning at 6 p.m. The club is located between Scotland Neck and Enfield, on State Road No. 1153, off State Road No. 1003.

Social is from 6 to 7 p.m. with supper beginning at 7 p.m. Total cost is $10 for the program.

Vernon Bevill, N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission Director from Raleigh, and Carl Brown, National Director of Chapter Development from Edgefield, S.C., will present the program. There will be door prizes and valuable items for auction and raffle, including wild turkey prints, and over/under shotgun rifle, calls, knives, camouflaged clothes, wildlife prints and other related hunting and fishing items.

Also, a two-day turkey hunt for two in Alabama will be auctioned. The hunt is being donated by Doug Camp, professional turkey hunting guide from Eastabogo, Ala., who will entertain the hunters in December, 1982.

All members of the Turkey Federation, their wives and/or husbands, are urged to attend. Anyone wishing to join is also invited. The membership fee is $15 per year, for which members receive six issues of the National Magazine "Turkey Call," plus foiur issues of the state publication, "Strutt & Putt." If you plan to attend, please write a note to Bill Johnson, Route 1, Box 437, Scotland Neck, N.C. 27874.

FISHING REPORTS — Reports from the Nags Head area were very good last week. Flounder moved in heavy at the first of the week especially around Frisco pier. Bluefish, mullet and a few trout were also reported up and down the Outer Banks. Further south a few drum have been caught on Portsmouth and Ocracoke Islands.

King Mackeral were still hanging around off Core Banks. Their numbers are dwindling and they will probably disappear after the next cold snap. Snapper blues in the two-pound range were caught off the piers on Atlantic Beach.

N.C. A&T Slips By NCCU

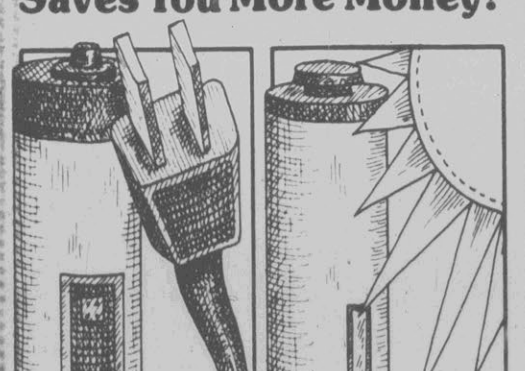

DURHAM (AP) — Aaron Herring kicked two field goals, the last with 1:19 remaining, to lift North Carolina A&T to a 13-7 non-conference college football victory over North Carolina Central Saturday.

Alvin Grier's 14-yard pass to Jesse Britt and Herring's 24-yard field goal had given the Aggies, now 2-7, a 10-0 halftime lead. Herring's 22-yard field goal boosted the margin to 13-0.

Hunter also caught 6 passes for 103 yards, setting a school season mark of 888 yards

North State's Investor Certificates.

We've outdone ourselves. Our new 3-month and 6-month Investor Certificates pay an even higher rate than our "highest rate" three and six month C.D.'s.

Now, we're offering higher-than-money-market interest on our new $1,000 minimum Investor Certificates. So you can lock in a high return on a medium or short term investment.

We think Investor's Certificates make a great deal of sense in today's changing financial environment.

10.125% *

*This is an effective annual yield based on daily compounding of a nominal rate of 9.65%.

The 6-month Investor Certificate.

With a $1,000 deposit, you receive a six-month yield that is substantially higher than any six-month certificate offered by any other financial institution in North Carolina. This means that whatever interest rates are during the next six months, your savings are earning a safe, high yield.

10.00% *

*This is an effective annual yield based on daily compounding of a nominal rate of 9.53%.

The 3-month Investor Certificate.

For the short term investment, our 3-month Investor Certificate pays a much higher rate of interest than comparable 3-month certificates. In fact, with a $1,000 minimum deposit, you can lock in a rate that is substantially higher than most 6-month certificates. If you demand liquidity, invest in a 3-month Investor.

A smart investment in today's financial environment.

At North State, we feel a short to medium term investment with higher-than-money-market interest is a safe, secure method of riding out today's interest rate fluctuations. So in response to the dramatic growth and support our investors have shown North State over the past year, we're offering these "higher than highest" certificates.

Your deposits in North State's Investor Certificates are, of course, insured to $100,000. Plus, they offer you the highest return on your savings. So drop by any of our locations and ask about an Investor's Certificate.

Higher than highest is a good investment.

ECU Holds Off W&M To Clinch Winning Season

yards for holding followed by another ten yard loss when Ingram once more slipped down.

William & Mary then drove 37 yards to tie it once more. Keeping on the ground for much of the early yardage, the Indians moved to the 46, then got 15 more on a personal foul against the Pirates. On third and ten, Yargiello hit Jeff Sanders for 14 yards and five plays later, hit hit Wrigley for the final nine yards, knotting it at 14-14 with 4:03 left in the half.

An interception by Mark Kelso in the end zone killed a late Pirate scoring drive. Just prior to that, Ingram had made an outstanding run of 23 yards, gaining about ten more after he faked going out of bounds then doubled back for more.

The Pirates drove down to the 21 on their first series of the second half but failed on two one-yard plays at that spot in trying to pick up a first down. Emory later said he should have gone for the field goal there.

After forcing a punt, however, the Pirates scored in just three plays. Taking over at midfield, the Pirates got a first down at the 36 on a 14-yard scamper by Ingram. Then, Byner burst through the middle, faked the final defender, Mark Dixon, and dove into the end zone as he was finally chased down — too late.

That made it 21-14 with 7:35 left in the third.

The Indians again drove through the air, with Yargiello lead the way on passes of 16, 24 and 8 yards, down to the 21. There, on fourth and 12, Yargiello appeared chased down, and possibly beyond the line of scrimmage before he tossed the ball up for grabs in the end zone, with Marrazzo maneuvering under it for the score. Brian Morris, however, missed the PAT, and the Pirates held the lead, 21-20 with 3:42 left.

East Carolina came back on its next drive to get Heath's 22-yarder for a 24-20 lead. Tony Baker ripped off a 21 yard run on the series, but again Ingram slipped down trying to cut at the five on third and three, and this time Emory opted for the kick. It was good with 14:18 left in the game.

After an exchange of kicks, the Indians pulled a play out of the trick bag for the go-ahead touchdown. Marrazzo took a quick pitch from Yargiello, who sprinted outside, then lofted the ball downfield for Wrigley, well beyond the Pirate secondary for the score.

"We told them (the defense) to force them to pass, to halt the run," Emory said. "On this one, everybody played rush, and they got caught on it."

Two series later, the Pirates took it back with 8:09 left in the game, and drove over the next four minutes for the winning TD. John Lisella, back to punt, fumbled the ball, but still managed to get it off hurriedly, even though ECU had put on little pressure. The kick went only 20 yards to the Pirate 44.

On second down, Ingram hit Carlton Nelson for 15 to the W&M 41. Two plays later, Baker broke away for 14 to the 23. On third and five, Ingram hit Byner coming out of the backfield for six yards to keep the drive going. Ingram then made a fine run down to the one, plunging over on the next play to return the lead to the Pirates, 31-27 with 4:18 left.

William & Mary fought back, driving on Yargiello's passes of 16, 7 and 18 yards, and a 13 yard run by Dave Scanlon, to the ECU 17. But two passes fell incomplete, and on the reverse, Daniels wrapped up Sanders for a 20-yard loss. Yargiello's last desperate effort for a score was surrounded by Pirates, but was beyond the end line, and it was all over.

The Indians fall to 2-8 on the year with the loss, while ECU goes to 6-4.

in the third period when N.C. State fullback Andre Marks capped an 80-yard march by scoring from 3 yards out.

N.C. State got the ball right back on a fumble recovery, and quarterback Tol Avery hit split end David Davis on an 11-yard touchdown pass with 1:23 left in the third period. Mike Cofer added the conversion.

The Wolfpack defense came up three pass interceptions and a fumble recovery in the second half to thwart the Duke offense.

Miller knifed through for a 30-yard touchdown run midway in the fourth quarter. Duke scored its final touchdown with 20 seconds left when Bennett passed 4 yards to Mark Militello.

Bennett's 2,760 yards passing in a season broke former Wake Forest quarterback Jay Venuto's record set in 1980 of 2,624 yards. Bennett's 6,255 career yards broke Duke quarterback Leo Hart's record of 6,116 yards in 1968-70. Bennett's touchdown pass tied Venuto's career mark of 37

Pryor TKOs Arguello In 14th

Hard Right

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Fireworks were set off at the Orange Bowl just before the main event, then quickly were erased from mind by a display of heart and skill performed by Aaron Pryor and Alexis Arguello.

Pryor, thirsting for the recognition as a great fighter, and Arguello, bent on becoming the first man to win four world titles, fought with ferocity, skill and heart Friday night.

When it was over many in a crowd of 23,800 were limp from the excitement, and Arguello was stretched unconscious on the canvas.

At the end of 13 rounds filled with brawling and boxing...and courage... judge Ken Morita of Japan had Arguello leading 127-125 (5-3, with five in even rounds).

But referee Stanley Christodoulou of South Africa and judge Ove Oveson each favored Pryor 127-124 (6-3-4 in rounds).

"I felt I was in control of the fight all along," said the 26-year-old Pryor.

In the 14th he took total control.

Early in the round, the 5-foot-6½ Pryor caught the 5-9½ Arguello with a savage right to the jaw, quickly followed by a left. The World Boxing Council lightweight champion and one of six men to win titles in three weight classes staggered across the ring to the ropes.

Pryor, called the Hawk, likes to shout, "What time is it?" and have his entourage bellow, "It's Hawk time."

It was Hawk time.

Pryor pounced, trapping Arguello against the ropes and smashing at least 14 blows to the head before Christodoulou jumped in and stopped it at 1:07 of the 14th round.

As Christodoulou pulled Pryor away, Arguello slumped unconscious to the canvas where he lie on his back, blood running from an ugly cut above his left eye.

Arguello's handlers and a doctor jumped into the ring and administered aid for several minutes before Arquello could walk from the ring with help. The native of Nicaragua, who lives in nearby King's Bay, left to a thunderous ovation from a crowd that was heavily Latin American.

Arguello passed up a news conference because he was emotionally drained, according to an aide.

Arguello's handlers decided he should go to a hospital and it was announced that he had. But Bill Miller, an adviser, said earlier this morning that instead Arguello had gone home where he had been attended to by his physician.

Before the fight, Pryor had said, "I hope after this fight, the boxing world will recognize my talent and ability as a great champion — 31-0, with 29 knockouts...and I've got to prove myself.

He proved himself...with boxing as well as brawling.

In the first, Pryor, who weighed the class limit of 140 pounds hurt Arguello, 138½ (3½ pounds more than the lightweight limit), with a five-punch flurry to the head and with a seven-punch barrage to the head.

But Arguello showed the poise developed in 80 previous fights of which he had won 76, lost 4 and scored 62 knockouts. He won 19 straight championship fights in becoming the WBA featherweight and WBC junior lightweight and lightweight champion.

Pryor kept the pressure on in the first five rounds, then in the middle rounds began boxing and using his left jab effectively.

"I felt I had to prove to myself that I can box aginst a fighter who can counterpunch and is a true champion," said Pryor. "He showed me there are fighters with hearts as big as mine when he weathered the storm in the first five rounds.

"He started picking me apart in the middle rounds like I thought he would. Then I stormed him again."

For most of the fight, Pryor threw the most punches, but Arguello's blows seemed sharper and harder. He rocked Pryor several times, but could not put him down.

"He stung me several times, but he never stung me and made me think it was over," said Pryor, who had won six of his previous title fights by knockout, but had been knocked down in the first round in three of them.

It looked as if Pryor might go in the 11th round when he was hurt by a right to the head and left ot the body just before the bell.

Then Pryor, who had been into the 12th round only once before, stepped up the pressure in the 12th and held his own in the thirteen, although he was staggered by a right late in the round.

INVESTMENT CHECKING CAN HELP BUILD YOUR BALANCE WITH MONEY MARKET RATES

Combine investment rates of return with the convenience of Checking

Investment Checking works just like your regular checking. Write checks in any amount and make deposits as you like. Home Federal pays you MONEY MARKET RATES that are currently providing an effective annual yield of 9.50 percent.

Investment Checking combines interest bearing checking with the higher yield of Home Federal's Retail Repurchase Agreements. A Repurchase Agreement is not a savings account or a deposit and is not insured by the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation. However, the Repurchase Agreements are fully collateralized and directly secured by U.S. Government Agency obligations for our customers' protection.

Investment Checking is not for everybody. It's for modern managers who want the most action for their money. Come over to Home Federal, where Investment Checking can help build your balance with MONEY MARKET RATES!

*Based on a rate of 9.11% with monthly compounding and is subject to change daily.

The Wachovia 7-Day Money Market Certificate

Another reason why Wachovia is the place for the money you want to invest, but don't want to risk.

Now the best thing about having money to tie up in a high return investment...is that you don't have to tie it up for more than a week.

If you have at least $20,000 to invest, are interested in a high rate of return, prefer the shortest term, and want to make certain your investment is safe, the Wachovia 7-Day Money Market Certificate may be for you.

Money Market Rates. Your money will earn at current money market rates, and your interest is compounded daily. A Personal Banker can advise you on the current rate.

Seven Day Term. Every seven days, you can (1) make additional deposits to your certificate, (2) withdraw all of your money with no penalties, (3) withdraw part of your money as long as you maintain a $20,000 minimum, or (4) leave your money on deposit and we'll renew your certificate automatically.

Safety and Stability. At Wachovia, you know your investment is safe, insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation and backed by the financial strength of Wachovia, a bank with an unbroken record of stability for over 100 years.

Location Convenience. You can open your 7-Day Certificate, as well as make deposits and withdrawals, at any of our nearly 200 offices statewide.

The Help of a Personal Banker. At Wachovia, you have your own Personal Banker to explain the 7-Day Certificate and other Wachovia investment options, and help you determine the combination of investments that's right for you. Anytime you have a question about your investment, simply give your Personal Banker a call.

For More Information. We'd like you to have our brochure explaining the Wachovia 7-Day Certificate and other investment options. It's available at any Wachovia office, or call and a copy will be mailed to you.

Pork Futures Rise Sharply

By KEITH E. LEIGHTY
Associated Press Writer

Pork belly futures prices advanced sharply for the second consecutive day Friday, while hogs were mixed and cattle were slightly lower on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

Demand for pork bellies is increasing as warehouse operators begin competing with bacon slicers for the product, Chuck Levitt, a livestock analyst in Chicago with Shearson American Express, said stored supplies are inadequate to meet demand and warehouse operators need to shore up their supplies this month while the hog slaughter is at its peak.

Bellies increased almost four cents in the past two days despite an increasing slaughter level, Levitt said.

Hog prices were mixed after advancing sharply Thursday. Analysts feel that the high slaughter level this week may have put so much pork into the marketing pipeline that if the slaughter level remains high next week, supplies will exceed demand and push prices down, Levitt said.

But demand for pork products continues to be strong, as warehouse operators are storing hams for the holidays, he added.

Cattle prices dropped amid indications that cash prices might be about to fall, Levitt said. Traders also were reluctant to hold contracts prior to the release Tuesday of the monthly cattle on feed report, which could show a substantial increase in the number of cattle being put in feed lots to be fattened for slaughter.

Shrimpers Say Nets Are Empty Again This Year

BEAUFORT, S.C. (AP) — A tremendous storm lashed the South Atlantic last month, bringing plummeting temperatures, vicious winds and sheets of cold rain. Dangerous weather for sailors, but nearly perfect for luring elusive shrimp out of the estuaries and into warmer water.

Yet even when the weather cleared, Bryan Shipman, a 41-year-old shrimper from St. Helena Island, chose to lay his 65-foot trawler up in drydock for a day to paint the hull.

"There ain't no shrimp here," he said, lines of disgust hardening around his mouth. "We're heading to Florida."

Shipman bought "Miss Christy" seven years ago, and for the next two years he and his two-man crew earned a good living trawling the shallow waters around Beaufort.

Then came 1977, when the shrimp mysteriously stopped running. Every year since, except 1979, the catch has grown steadily worse. Last year, South Carolina shrimpers had their worst year since 1908.

The nets are nearly as empty this year, though prices of more than $5 a pound for the largest shrimp are just barely keeping the most experienced and most fortunate in business.

"If I had my preference, I'd sell this boat in a heartbeat," Shipman said. "But things are so bad everyplace, I couldn't get a price for her. It's a good life if you're catching something. But this way now, it just plain stinks."

Shipman's lament has become a common theme in recent months among trawler captains and their crews. Deep down, he even doubts that Florida will be much better, and he's probably right.

From Wilmington to the Florida Keys, the South Atlantic has been stingy with its most valuable seafood product for the past six seasons. Shrimpers reported catches last year that were one third of what they were in the early 1970s.

For men like Bryan Shipman, wily enough and hungry enough to spend weeks away from home trawling in foreign waters, the business survives. For many others, shrimping has become a seafaring trade of the romantic past.

"We hung on until we lost the house," said Roger Judy, 34, who quit earlier this year to sell life insurance in Charleston. "When you lose your house, you know it's time to move on."

Neither shrimpers nor state wildlife officials are sure why the shrimp have stopped running. They blame a number of related factors.

Chief among them is competition from unregulated recreational fishermen using small nets in estuaries where young shrimp mature. Large kills have resulted from the practice. State officials don't know how many people use the nets or where.

Commercial shrimpers are lobbying hard for recreational licenses and wider-meshed nets.

"There used to be a few hundred people doing that, and it didn't make a difference," said shrimper Bobby Chaplin, 51, of Port Royal. "Now there's thousands doing it, and they kill more shrimp in one day than I could catch in a season."

Shrimpers also worry about the effects of pollution, especially from farm pesticides washing into coastal waters. State conservationist Charles Bearden said one such chemical, endosulfan, has caused five major fish kills this year.

The latest was Sept. 12 in Leadenwah Creek, south of Charleston. "When the stuff gets into the water it kills everything," Bearden said. "We are very concerned about its impact on the shrimp harvests."

Other important factors cited by shrimpers include lack of rainfall during late autumn to dilute briny upstream water where mature shrimp are now living, and competition from beach resort developments, especially in the area of Beaufort and Hilton Head.

Business Notes

SALES INCREASE

Hampton Industries Inc. reported that sales for the 13 weeks ended Sept. 25 were $37,707,000, as compared to $34,240,000 in 1981, an increase of some 10 percent. Earnings were $1,068,000, as compared to $1,250,000 last year.

Sales for the 39 weeks ended Sept. 25 totaled $83,650,000, up from $78,495,000 during the comparable period in 1981.

Prepshirt of Greenville is a division of Hampton Industries.

ECCNAA SESSION

The November meeting of the Eastern Carolina Chapter of the National Association of Accountants will be held Wednesday at 6:15 p.m. at the Beef Barn here.

The speaker will be Bruce Strickland Jr., financing specialist with the N.C. Department of Commerce, addressing "North Carolina Industrial Financing."

The eastern chapter is headquartered in Greenville. Anyone needing additional information should contact Paul Setliff at 752-4126.

DECREASE REPORTED

Fieldcrest Mills Inc. announced third quarter sales of $124,174,000, a decrease of 13 percent from last year's level of $143,550,000.

Net earnings for the quarter were $3,094,000, compared with $4,675,000 reported in the third quarter of 1981.

The Eden headquartered company designs, manufactures and markets bed and bath products and carpets and rugs.

ANNOUNCED L[illegible]

Eaton Corp. announced that for the third quarter of 1982, the company had a net loss of $4.9 million on sales of $618.6 million. The results compared to sales of $759.1 million and net income of $30.1 million for the 1981 period.

Company sales for the first nine months amounted to $2.07 billion, down 14 percent from sales of $2.4 billion in 1981. Net income for the first nine months of 1982 was $37.8 million, down 39 percent from net income of $62 million during the same period in 1981.

LENDING ACTIVITY

Savings and loan associations in North Carolina experienced increased savings inflows and lending activity during September, according to information reported to the Federal Home Loan Bank of Atlanta.

Net savings inflows amounted to $48.5 million compared with inflows of $24.8 million for the month a year earlier. Gross inflows, which include new deposits and interest payments, totaled $842 million and were partially offset by withdrawals of $793.5 million.

Lending activity during September was above the year-earlier level. Mortgage loans made totaled $75.4 million compared with $58.8 million last September.

RESULTS DECLINED

Lee B. Thomas, president and chief executive officer of Vermont American Corp., announced that in the third quarter, sales were $43,920,000 as compared with sales of $52,394,000 last year. Net income was $1,413,000 compared with $3,437,000 in the third quarter of 1981.

In the nine months ended Sept. 30, sales were $135,983,000, down from $156,505,000 for the 1981 period. Net income of $4,131,000 compared with $9,089,000 a year earlier.

RECORD TOTALS

Family Dollar Stores Inc., a discount store chain with 556 stores in 11 southeastern states, reported all time record sales and earnings for the fiscal year ended Aug. 31, and for the fourth quarter of fiscal 1982.

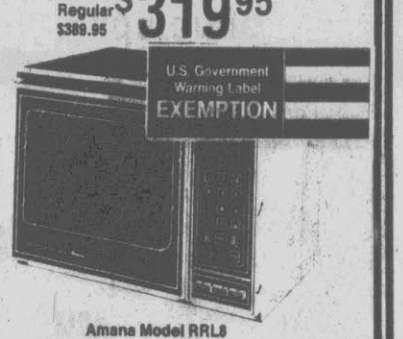

The record operating results for the year included sales of $207,419,000, or 14 percent above sales of $181,712,931 for the prior fiscal year, and net income of $10,695,407, or 17 percent above net income of $9,116,931 for 1981.

In the fourth qaurter, sales reached $54,208,263 and net income increased to $2,877,454, compared to sales of $48,902,225 and net income of $2,459,445 in the fourth quarter of fiscal 1981.

General View Of The Gallery

AN UNIDENTIFIED YOUNG MAN . . . is shown looking over part of the the exhibition now on display in Gray Gallery on campus. The annual School of Art Faculty/Student Show includes a wide range of media — sculpture, paintings, prints, photographs, textile, wood, jewelry and examples of commercial art. Gallery hours are 10 to 4 weekdays, 1-4 on Sundays.

The Annual Big Show Of Art In Greenville

A SMALL WORK . . . by Alan Johansson in vivid colors and collection of details is like a 20th century update of Persian miniatures.

Text And Photographs By Jerry Raynor

Each year it's the biggest art event in Greenville — the Annual East Carolina University School of Art Joint Faculty/Student Art Show. During the remainder of November, the large show is on view at Gray Gallery where the public can view it from ten to five on weekdays, and from one to four on Sundays. There is no admission charged. At least an hour's time should be allotted to do justice to the show.

This exhibition is not only the most extensive yearly gathering of local art, it qualifies as the most revealing insight into what's being accomplished both by students and faculty. Granted, by virtue of age, experience and training, the work of most faculty members has an edge on that of the majority of students — that's as it should be.

But in faculty and student work alike, there's evidence of tremendous energy being expanded in creativity, and evidence too of a wide range of creative talent in many instances married to painstaking craftsmanship.

Variety is of the essence in these shows, which in a very real sense, equate to a catalogue of achievements in Greenville art. There's work in the realistic vein, abstracted pieces, and experimental efforts — some that work well, others that don't quite jell.

There's small and large scale works in sculpture, jewelry, paintings, prints, drawings, collages, ceramics, textiles, photographs, mixed media — a little of everything, including a sizeable spread of commercial art work. Some of the art, such as furniture, textile items and ceramics, have a functional value.

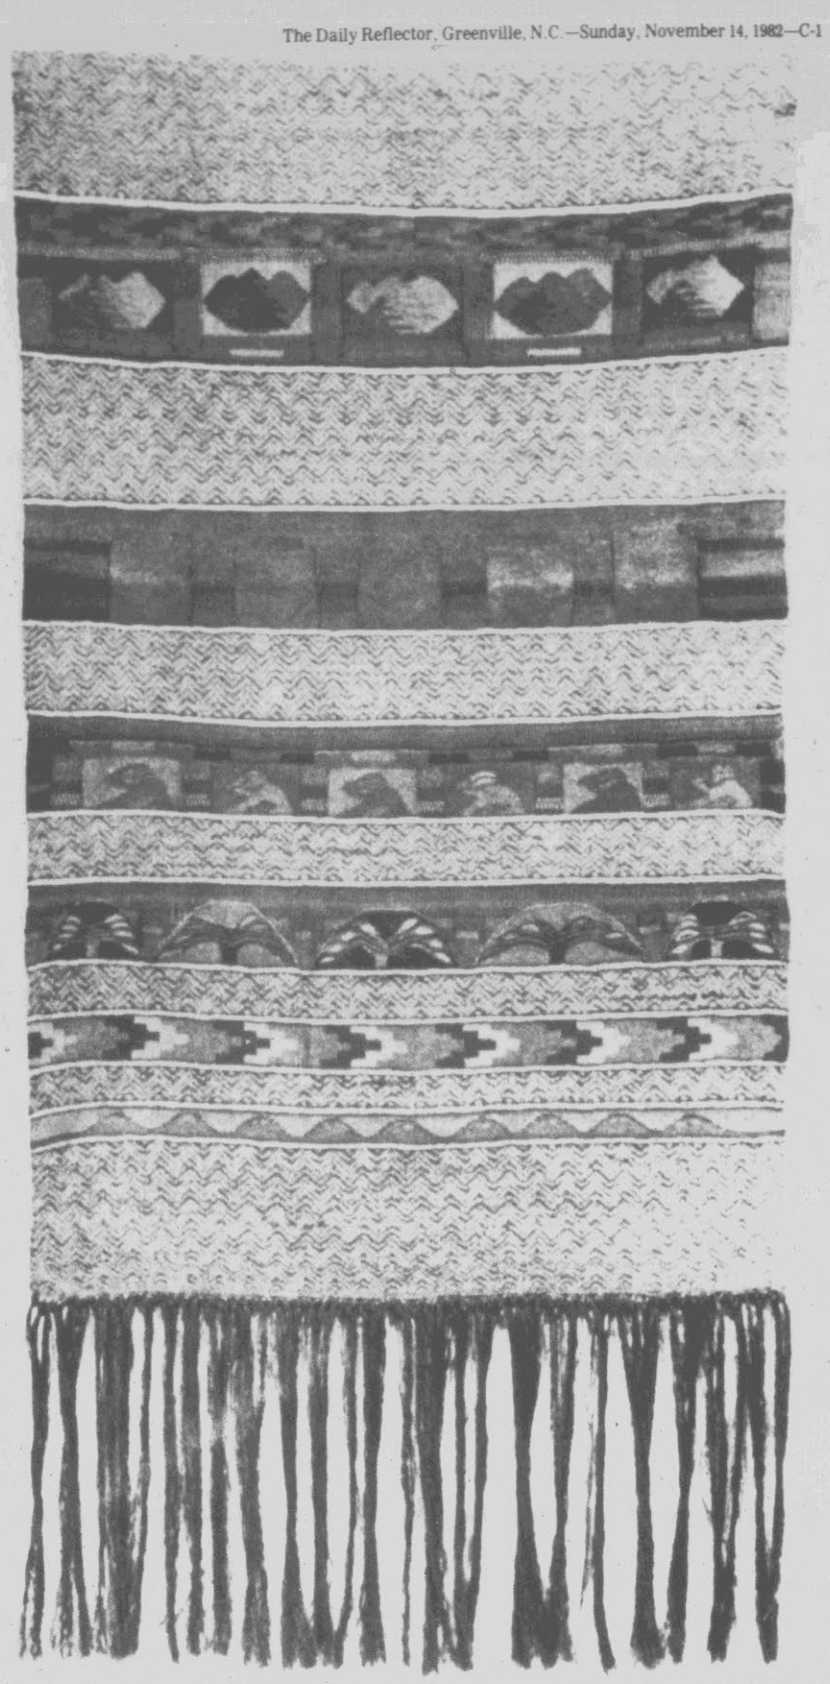

• A few random impressions — Betty Petteway's recent works evoke fragments of lovingly recalled dreams enclosed in white spaces of awakening; Micheal Voors creates a feeling of monumentality in small, densely textured works; and Roxanne Reep continues to conjure up landscapes of ideas in brilliantly colored abstractions, sometimes incorporating obvious symbols as the pasted in musical notations in "As Time Goes By."

Another Reep, Ed, like ole' man river, keeps rolling along, gathering new concepts and techniques as the years go by. His large canvases in this show are closer than ever to minimal, pared down to fields of color defined by a few straight and curved lines. John Satterfield in jewelry and Janet Fischer in textiles again demonstrate the exquisite beauty possible in metal and cloth art.

Donald Sexauer's palette is getting brighter each year, and Paul Hartley's work continues to focus on today's people as well as personages from medieval times. Robert Rasch transforms the ordinary into photographic poetry, and Tran Gordley still concentrates on large paintings of bright, rich foodstuffs.

These are only a few of my own impressions gained from this big show. Each viewer is certain to come away enriched by their own responses.

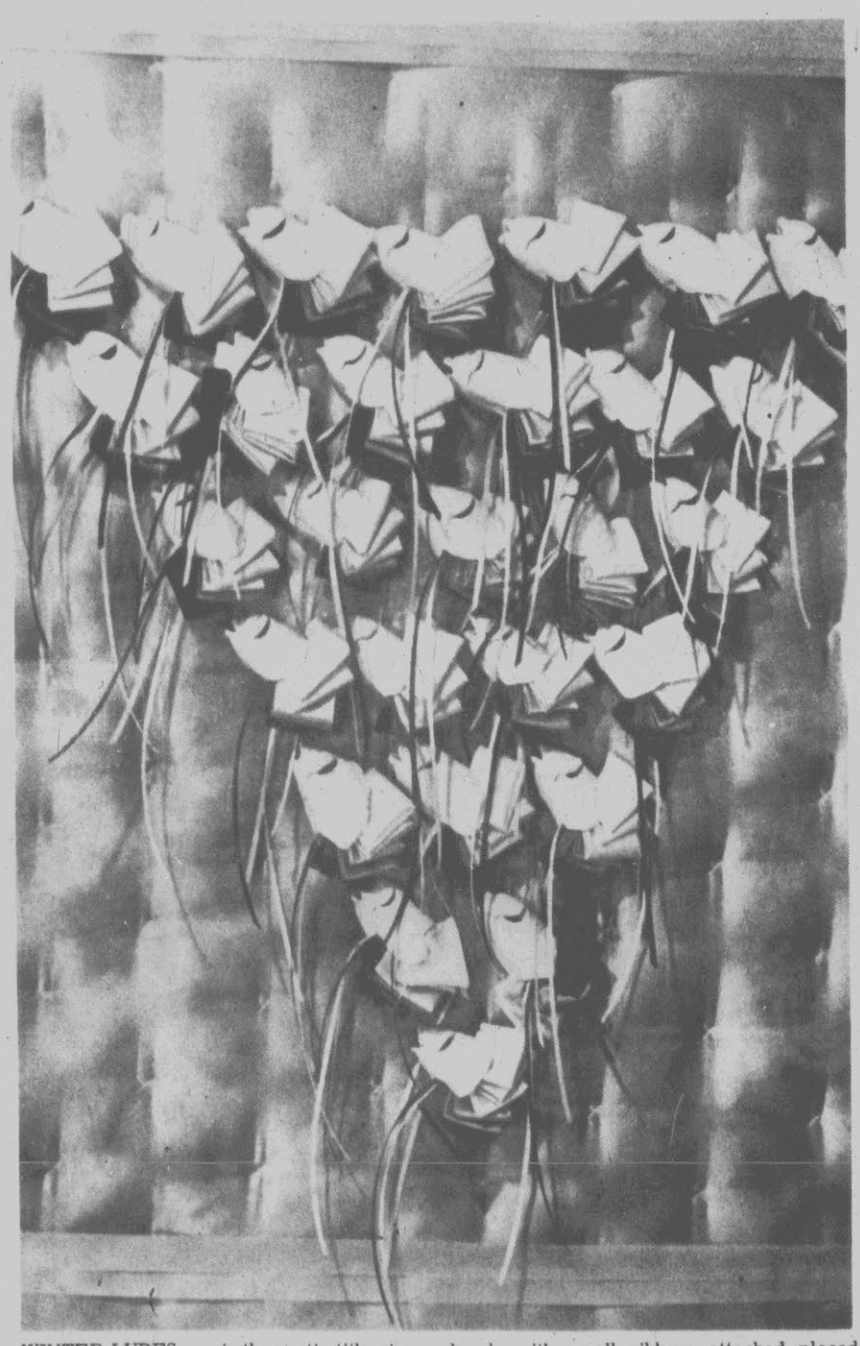

The arrangement of the show in the spacious gallery area is once more of the first order, hampered only here and there by poorly lit areas. This annual show, like the festive community outdoor sidewalk art shows, is one of the yearly art events in Greenville not to be overlooked.

GUACAMOLE . . . is the title of Janet Fischer's finely woven, textured wall hanging with horizontal bands of motifs and fringes on the bottom of the piece.

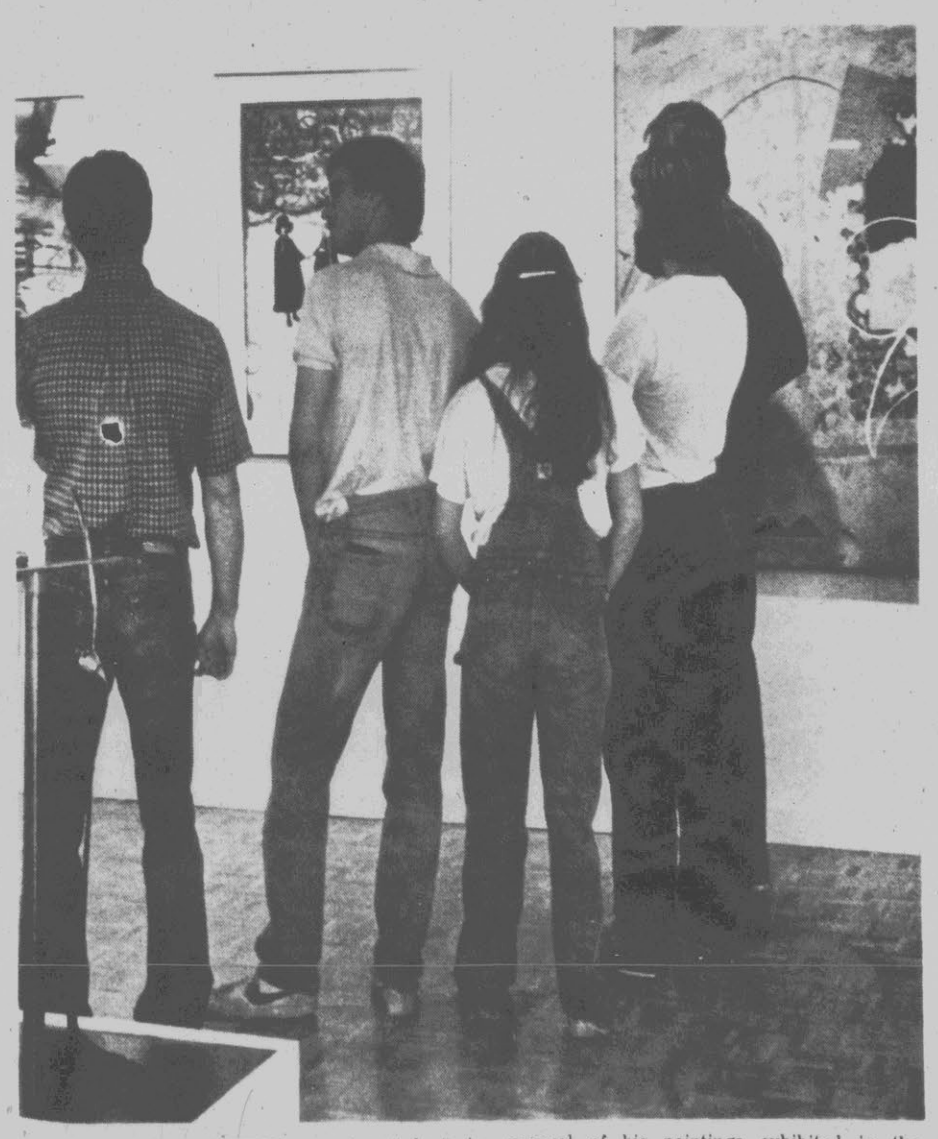

HENRY STINDT'S . . . Sample Book of Photography contains among its pages this photograph of four local artists disguised as fashionably dressed hombres of past years. Stindt shows both color and black and white photographs.

WINTER LURES . . . is the poetic title given by Anna Daughtry to her porcelain and fabric composition of a triangle of porcelain fish heads with small ribbons attached placed against a quilted satin background.

'JIM' . . . by sculptor West Crawley

Wedding Vows Said Saturday

AYDEN — The wedding ceremony of Lillian Faye Williamson and Walter Gregory Wainright took place Saturday afternoon at two o'clock in the Ayden Free Will Baptist Church. Alvin Davis conducted the service.

A program of wedding music was presented by Eloise Jackson. Bobby Bennett and Ronnie Williamson, brother of the bride, were vocalists.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Albert Lee Williamson of Greenville and Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Davenport of Ayden.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her honor attendant was Rita Ross of Greenville. Bridesmaids included Patti Williams and Joy Overcash, both of Greenville.

Rebekah Williamson of Kinston, niece of the bride, was flower girl.

David Wainright of Greenville was best man and ushers included Danny Taylor of Kinston and Don Phillips of Ayden.

The bride wore a formal gown of white organza over peau de soie designed with a high neckline encircled with Brussels lace. The fitted bodice featured a sheer yoke of illusion eged in ruffled chantilly lace with a medallion of silk Venise lace at the front center. Chantilly lace encircled the waistline. The sheer bishop sleeves were fashioned of chantilly lace and satin ribbon. The accordian pleated skirt and attached chapel length train were accented with a flounce of organza with chantilly lace and satin ribbon. She carried a nosegay of white roses and daisies, miniature pink carnations with a touch of heckleberry verbenas fashioned of silk with satin streamers. She wore a halo of white roses and baby's breath with pink miniature carnations.

The bride's mother chose a street length dress of green polyester styled with an accordian pleated overlay. The mother of the bridegroom selected a street length dress of blue polyester with long sleeves.

Each of the attendants were dressed in a huckleberry colored taffeta dress with a chiffon overlay. The tea-length gown was fashioned with handkerchief hemline, draped cowl neckline and split cape sleeves. They each carried a fan of ivory lace with pink miniature carnations, huckleberry chrysanthemums with satin streamers.

The flower girl was dressed in a pastel pink, street length dress with a square collar and sash. She carried a wicker basket of petals.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall given by the parents of the bride. Wanda Cox of Greenville presided at the bridal register. Mrs. Lester Branch served wedding cake and Mrs. Delma Brown poured punch.

Mrs. Lyle Davis directed the wedding. Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Tripp received guests.

After a wedding trip to Williamsburg, Va. the couple will be living in Wilkesboro.

The bride attended Pitt Community College and was employed by Pitt County Memorial Hospital as an x-ray technologist. The bridegroom is a purchasing agent for Blue Ridge Shoe Co. He attended East Carolina University.

MRS. WALTER GREGORY WAINRIGHT

The Dionne quintuplets, the five daughters of Oliva and Elzire Dionne, were born May 28, 1934, at Callander, Ontario. Marie, Cecile, Emile, Yvonne and Annette were international celebrities throughout the 1930s, but in later life they sought privacy.

Judge Reid Speaks To Junior Club

Judge David Reid was a special guest at the November meeting of the Junior Woman's Club of Greenville. He discussed "You Be The Judge" and stressed that knowledge of all facts is necessary before passing sentence.

President Cathy Crawford reported on the fall district meeting held in Creswell. It was attended by Shelley Basnight, Mary Shearin and the president. The club's newletter "The Jabber" won a first place and co-editors Elaine Denton and Patty Hogan were commended for the award.

American Eduction Week will be observed Nov. 14-20. The theme "A Stronger America Needs Stronger Public Schools" was announced by Brenda Jarman and Ms. Hogan. Apples were distributed to teachers in the club. Ms. Jarman announced that scholarship information had been sent to schools.

Membership chairperson Holly Edwards said orientation for new members will be held at the home of Ms. Shearin Nov. 23 at 8 p.m. Nancy Cobb, Kay Jones, Diane Jevicky, Linda Barnes and Linda Shepard, new members, will be inducted at the December meeting.

It was reported that Junior Day will be held in Farmville Jan. 22.

During next month, members will be involved in two projects. Jackie Carson asked members to bring items for Operation Santa Claus and a needy family will be sponsored at Christmas.

Nancy Harrington, Nancy Lee and Lucine Barker were meeting hostesses.

Pecan Pie & Coffee

CARROT SOUFFLE

Tasters found the nutmeg flavor tantalizing.

½ pound (5 medium) carrots, pared
3 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons minced onion
3 tablespoons all-purpose flour
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
1 cup milk
3 large eggs, separated

Slice carrots into 1½-inch lengths; cook, covered, in boiling water until very tender — about 20 mintues; drain. Puree — there should be ¾ cup. In a 2-quart saucepan, melt butter; add onion and cook gently until wilted. Stir in flour, salt, pepper and nutmeg. Off heat, gradually stir in milk until smooth. Return to moderately low heat and cook, stirring constantly until thickened and bubbling; off heat, stir in carrots; vigorously stir in egg yolks until blended; cool. Beat egg whites until stiff; fold into carrot mixture. Turn into a buttered 1-quart souffle dish. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until puffed and golden brown — 35 to 40 minutes. Serve at once. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

BARLEY SOUP

Not as thick as the traditional Scotch Broth.

1½ pounds (2) lamb shanks
¼ cup medium pearl barley
5 cups water
1 bay leaf
2 whole cloves
1 medium onion, coarsely grated
1 medium carrot, pared and coarsely grated
1 large rib celery, thinly sliced
Salt and pepper to taste

In a 3-quart saucepan bring the lamb, barley, water, bay leaf and cloves to a boil. Simmer, covered, until lamb is tender enough to be easily freed from bones — 1½ hours. Remove lamb; discard bones; dice lamb, discarding any tough parts. Remove bay leaf and cloves from broth and discard. Add onion, carrot and celery to broth; boil gently until vegetables are tender — about 15 minutes. Return lamb to soup; add salt and pepper. Skim fat, if you like, and serve hot. Or chill overnight, remove hardened surface fat and reheat. Makes about 1½ quarts.

Computer Fun At Indy Museum

By BRENDA W. ROTZOLL

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — The video games at the Indianapolis Children's Museum would turn an arcade operator green with envy. They are many and free.

Want to play with a lunar lander? Learn to fly a plane without crashing? Play vector racing? Design patterns? Compose and play your own music?

The Science Spectrum gallery features 40 hands-on exhibits using computers, vacuum tubes, laser light, mirrors and lenses, an air track and a reaction time device.

The idea is to teach basic scientific principles to children of all ages by letting them do their own experiments.

"Almost without fail people tell each other they like the gallery because they get to do the experiments themselves," said John Vanausdall, 25, curator of physical science.

The museum has flight on the brain. There's a Bernoulli Blower that produces a stream of air to keep a ball suspended to demonstrate that moving air has lower pressure than still air.

"It's the same principle that makes airplanes fly," Vanausdall said.

A computer air flight simulator teaches you to fly by changing a plane's banking and power and moving the nose up or down.

Vanausdall said some youngsters get so good they can fly the plane right through the hangar and take off again from a field ringed with mountains.

A lunar landing simulator computer teaches about thrust and gravity by landing a rocket on the moon.

An air track keeps objects suspended on tiny jets of air above a rail, removing friction to demonstrate Newton's first and second laws of motion. You learn that objects at rest want to remain at rest, or moving objects remain moving at a constant speed, and that momentum does not change when two objects collide.

The vector racing computer teaches you about the arrows used to represent speed and direction.

A pattern generator, developed by the Franklin Institute in Philadelphia, lets you create patterns and reflect them in imaginary mirrors to demonstrate symmetry.

You can write a tune on a computer with a music staff on the screen and hear it played back. Or you can punch the buttons for phonemes — sound symbols — on a talking typewriter that reads messages aloud.

At the turtle computer you learn to write a computer program. After learning new commands at each level of skill, a player can write a program that lets the turtle chase around streets and buildings to bite the bug that invaded the city.

People line up at the exhibit where a coin rolling around and down the sides of a funnel demonstrates centrifugal force.

The coins used to come back to the player, but fights over who owned which coin led to the decision to make the coins into museum contributions.

Sound is vibration, and if there's nothing for it to vibrate in, there's nothing to hear. This is demonstrated with a bell inside a jar that can be pumped out to create a vacuum. You see the bell ringing, but you hear the sound disappear as the air disappears.

Things to look at include laser light patterns, colored shadows where you create color combinations by using you hands to block a stream of basic colored light, and a spectroscope that lets you see what sort of light you're looking at.

The hands-on exhibits tend to draw clumps of people, working up their nerve to try things.

Vanausdall said he hoped adding computers would spread people out at various exhibits, but "we just had that many more people come."

Who tries things?

"The kids are much less inhibited. They're willing to rush right up and start manipulating," he said. "Adults are more likely to stand back and study it. Sometimes they won't even touch it."

Anniversary Meet Set

The fifth anniversary of the Pirate Charter Chapter will be the theme of the meeting of the ABWA Monday at 7:15 p.m. at Shoney's Restaurant.

Nina Redditt, chapter delegate to the ABWA national convention held in New Orleans, will be reporting. She will give highlights of workshops offered designed to help working women such as "Has Your Education Taken a Vacation? What's Involved in Returning to School." It was presented by Ellen Cleary, a counselor, University of New Orleans.

The installation of new officers for the coming year will be held.

Persons interested in learning more about the national organization should contact Ms. Redditt, 752-6410.

Styles For Working Women

By EILEEN PUTMAN
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — For the working woman of the '80s, the dress has arrived. No longer is it necessary to be suited up like a man to be taken seriously in the business world.

Evan Picone has done more than any other line to take the dress from office to evening wear with femininity and efficiency. The emphasis is totally on dresses, which the Picone house feels will be very popular this spring.

But first there was a series of rather washed-out pastels in green and tan silk stripes, some spruced up with a bib front but for the most part too pale to make any kind of statement.

From there on, the collection was stunning in its simplicity and functional appeal.

Linen and poplin dresses in white and camel were cool for even the most sultry spring day.

Orange, green and yellow stripes in a matte crepe jersey were played out in a two-piece dress, diagonal on the loose-fitting overblouse and strictly vertical on the straight skirt.

Pinstipes with a Wall Street flair popped up in a flowing cotton shift with a demure white collar and bright red floppy ribbon at the neck. There was a collarless version in a navy two-piece dress.

Even cotton ticking took a businesslike approach in gray and white piped around a double-breasted coat dress with a printed hankie peeking out of a pocket.

The finale dressed up a charcoal, light gray and white checked plaid with white cuffs and a high white collar. The ensemble showed in a loose straight shirt look with front tucking and in a fitted dress with a folded lapel.

Evan Picone's line is generally sold in the better dresses section of department stores, and its prices make it more affordable than the couture Joseph Picone line.

Conservative yet stylish, the line is well worth a look by the working woman interested in looking businesslike and feminine.

By contrast, Michaele Vollbracht's new spring collection is playful, and as always, avant garde. It is also feminine, flowing and highly wearable.

The collection is full of vibrant rainbow colors, used singly or in splashes of imaginative free-hand designs. The styles have ethnic overtones, especially Oriental, but also with hints of native costumes of Spain and Peru.

Although Vollbracht's collection features loose-fitting garments, almost exclusively in soft silks, the figure is never disguised. Tight waistlines, set off by sashes or leather cummerbunds, and the flowing fabric are constant reminders of the female shape.

Layering is seen in many outfits, such as double skirts — a mini over a floor-length dress — aprons over skirts, shapeless vests and bibs over blouses.

The hallmark of almost every garment is raglan sleeves tightly gathered at the wrists and lighthearted touches such as geometric tulips and ducks scattered throughout the fabric. Some of his design fabrics have the words "Central Park" printed on them because the show, which was unveiled at the Circle In The Square, was given as a benefit for the refurbishing of the park's carousel.

Although most of Vollbracht's skirts are full and gathered at the waist, his collection does feature narrow ones with slits on the side. But these are usually contrasted by loose-fitting blouses or jackets, pinched at the waist with a belt. The total look is always crisp and fresh looking.

Extra large brim straw hats that pratically hide the face also are part of Vollbracht's spring line.

The only unspectacular part of his collection are the swimsuits, which feature nothing new and look like any other bikini or one-piece suit. The beachwear coverups, however, like his day and evening wear, are playful and at times exotic.

Engagement Announced

DELLA ROCHELLE STRICKLAND...is the daughter of Mrs. Marjorie S. Manning of Greenville and Joseph William Strickland of Avon Park, Fla., who announce her engagement to Jon David Braxton, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Earl Braxton of Route 1, Farmville. A December wedding is planned.

Both of Rose's cheerleading squads were winners in the Southern Flue-Cured Tobacco Festival cheerleading competition held Nov. 6 at the Carolina East Mall Convenient Center.

The varsity squad, competing in its division among six teams, won second place and was awarded $35 and a plaque. The junior varsity, which captured first place among five squads, received $50 and a plaque. They were named the "most spirited squad." Both groups were required to perform a chant, two cheers and a dance routine.

At halftime of the homecoming football game, Harriet Morris and Marsha Tart were crowned 1982 homecoming queens. Other members of the court were LaVerne Blackwell, Diedre Brewington, Alice Dawkins, Stephanie Deans, Gena Heath, Lori Little, Patrice Sasser, Tammy Sparkman, Beth Winchester and Susan Winstead.

Kipper Hair and Linda Winstead, Delano Williams and LaVerne Blackwell were named Mr. and Miss School Spirit. Jessica Perry and Sabrina Scott are junior princesses and LaTecia Tyson and Marty Welch are sophomore princesses.

As part of the Economic Work Council Work/Learn Project, representatives from Procter and Gamble Paper Products Co. and State Bank will be visiting Rose to speak to students for one class period on requirements in high school to prepare for careers in industry and banking. The speakers who are scheduled are: Gladys Hammonds, "What Industry Is Looking For/Job Interviews," Nov. 15; Gary Giles, "Plant Engineering," Nov. 16; Lora Flake, "Computer Technology," Nov. 17; Mamie Daniel, "Warehousing/Building Maintenance," Nov. 18; Jeff Scarborough, "Mechanical Shop," Nov. 19; Bill Plueddemann, "Accounting/Computer Group," Nov. 22; and Jacqueline Arnold, "What The Banking Business Is Looking For/How to Prepare for Banking Jobs," Nov. 23.

Cut Flowers Get Energy From Soft Drink

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

A commercial floral preservative can help extend the life of cut flowers — but so can a half and half mixture of water and non-diet, lemon-like soft drink, says a horticulture professor.

Don't substitute Orange Crush or other colored soft drinks, says Jerry Robinson, because they will change the flowers' color by capillary action.

In a telephone interview, Robinson said the sugar in the soft drink provides energy for the flowers and the acid acts as a preservative. Robinson is an associate professor of horticulture at Ohio State University and consultant to the American Florists Marketing Council.

"A lot of commercial preservatives have acetic acid, which is also found in lemon-like soft drinks," Robinson added.

"Diet soft drinks won't work because they're sugar-free and the sugar is probably more important to the flowers than the acidity."

Putting pennies or aspirin in the water is not recommended, he added.

Chuck Alexander, a Cleveland, Ohio, florist and senior consultant to Florists' Transworld Delivery's Consumer Information Service, also has tips for caring for cut flowers and houseplants.

He says a beautiful flower arrangement or a houseplant may look great on top of your console television cabinet — but that's the worst location for either.

TV sets give off heat even when they are turned off and can "cook" and kill flowers and plants before their time, says Alexander.

Plants and cut flowers last longer and look best in cool, airy locations.

Cool doesn't mean drafty, Alexander adds, and direct sunlight is also bad for cut flowers and some plants.

The following tips on buying and caring for flowers and houseplants are from Alexander and a brochure published by the florists marketing council — a non-profit committee of the Society of American Florists.

—Placing cut flowers in direct sunlight hastens their development and demise.

—Leaves below the water line cause harmful bacteria to develop.

—Some flowers in mixed bouquets will die before others. Dead ones should be removed immediately to protect the healthy.

—Put flowers in water in thoroughly clean containers as soon as you get them home. With a sharp knife or pruning shears, re-cut the ends of the stems before or — preferably — while they are immersed in tepid water.

—Drooping flowers can sometimes be revived by cutting their stems on an angle with a sharp knife — using the same underwater technique.

—Don't store fruit with fresh flowers. The ethylene gas that many fruits produce in their ripening process is great for fruit but may make flowers fade faster than normal.

—Give flowering or foliage plants in pots some settling-in time — away from drafts, direct sunlight and other plants.

—Most plants need at least medium or strong light. For even growth, turn them once a week.

—Water from the top and saturate the root ball. You'll recognize that point when water begins to flow into the saucer. After about 30 minutes, empty any water remaining in the saucer. Many plants will reabsorb by wicking action some of the initial overflow.

—Remember, plants need more water during growing seasons — usually spring and summer — than they do in fall or winter.

—Underwatering is preferable to overwatering, which can kill plants by cutting off their air supply.

—Four to six applications of fertilizer a year is enough for most plant varieties. Florists can recommend the type and amount needed for specific plants.

—Plant leaves should be cleaned often with a moist tissue or soft cloth.

— Periodic repotting is needed. You'll know the time has come when roots start poking through the drainage holes or creeping over the top of the pot or when the soil dries up quickly after watering.

—The need for repotting also can be determined by comparing the diameter of the top of the pot with the height of the plant above soil level. The diameter should equal one-third to one-half the height of the plant. If it's less, it's time to repot.

Affection Should Extend To Stepchildren

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Last year my husband, our child and I received Christmas gifts from my husband's sister who lives in another state. She sent nothing for our two other children who are mine from a previous marriage. These children (I'll call them Sally and Bob) are teen-agers who are very fond of this step-aunt and would be hurt if they had known about this. I hid the gifts until Sally and Bob left to visit their father for the Christmas holidays.

Abby, most stepchildren have a hard enough "row to hoe" without being slighted by the step-family. Their need for tangible proof of affection and acceptance by the step-family may be even greater than that of the natural children due to their awkward status.

My purpose in writing this is not to chastise, but to plead with step-families to remember these children along with the natural children of the family when it comes to gift giving and other acts of kindness. I'm sure it will make them happier, and I know of at least one parent who would very much appreciate it. I'm certain that there are countless other parents who would feel the same way.

HURTING FOR THE CHILDREN

DEAR HURTING: Your letter is both timely and worthwhile. Thank you for a suggestion that will surely make Christmas a lot merrier for many stepchildren.

DEAR ABBY: I chuckled at the letter from "Upset," the 25-year-old woman whose mother ("divorced and living alone") asked Daughter to phone before dropping in on her.

Daughter would be truly upset were she to drop in unannounced to find Mother in the arms of her lover. Most kids (even at 25) assume that their parents have no interest in sex, much less a sex life. This is simply untrue.

"Upset's" mother is most likely trying to ensure her deserved privacy in order to delicately balance her need for intimacy with her desire to protect her daughter's illusion of Mom's "purity." It's a sticky situation, in which we often find ourselves in this 1982 morality.

Most 25-year-old daughters living alone would not appreciate an unannounced visit from Mom for the same reason.

DIVORCED MOTHER, LIVING ALONE

DEAR MOTHER: Right on. Unannounced visits are rarely appreciated — even in families with open minds and closed eyes.

DEAR ABBY: "Katie in Anchorage" submitted that immigrants who arrived at Ellis Island "without papers" were tagged "WOP." If that were so, we would have to assume that our immigration inspectors discriminated against Italians. No, I am told that the guardians of our gates at Ellis Island disliked all foreigners equally. So, why weren't other immigrants called "wop"?

Simply, the expression predates the immigration to America, and is Italian-Spanish in its derivation. In the Kingdom of the Two Sicilies, the expression "guappo" had reference to handsome young men who affected a sense of bravado. In Naples, "guappo" sounded like "wop."

From its true meaning — ruggedly handsome — the term began to decline in its meaning as it was applied to tough gang members, hence the pejorative "wop."

Copycat This Stir-Fry

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

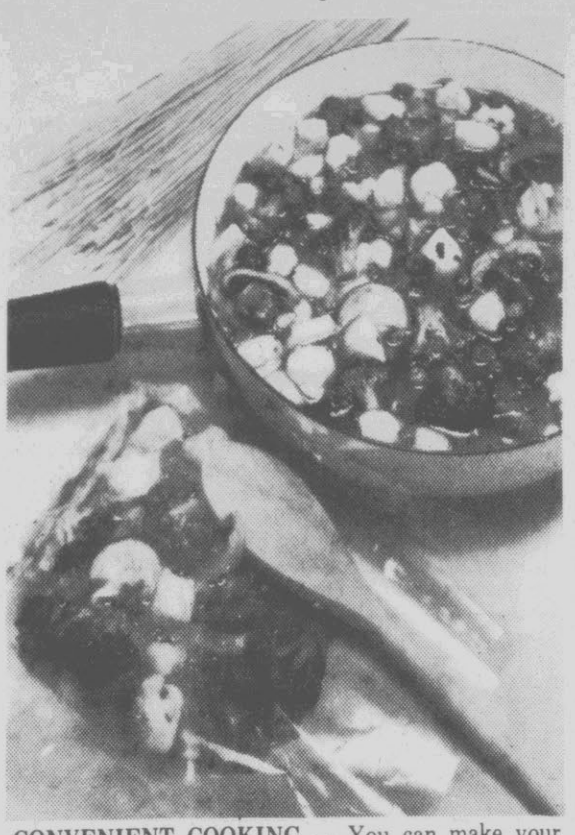

DEAR CECILY: I have an electric appliance that seals food pouches for freezer storage. Could you copycat the chicken, vegetable and vermicelli dish that is available in frozen pouches in supermarkets? My husband and I like this combination very much and it is less than 300 calories per serving. — TWO-SOME.

DEAR TWOSOME: Here is a copycat recipe of the chicken, vegetable and vermicelli dish. It is a little higher in calories than the store-bought product, but it has great flavor and texture. I think you and your husband will enjoy the home version. — C.B.

FREEZE-AHEAD CHICKEN, VEGETABLES AND VERMICELLI

- 1 tablespoon butter
- 8 ounces boneless skinless chicken cubes
- 1 and 1-3rd cups broccoli flowerets
- ½ cup sliced mushrooms
- ½ cup small cauliflowerets
- 1-3rd cup coarsely chopped onion
- 4 crosswise slices (each ¼-inch thick) zucchini, halved
- 4 crosswise slices (each ⅛-inch thick) carrot, each cut in 4 strips
- 2 tomatoes, skinned and chopped with liquid reserved (1 cup pulp with liquid)
- 3 tablespoons fresh or frozen peas
- Sauce Mixture, recipe follows
- Vermicelli Mixture, recipe follows

In a large skillet over medium heat melt butter. Add chicken; stirring almost constantly, cook until lightly browned — about 2 minutes. Add broccoli, mushrooms, cauliflowerets, onion, zucchini and carrots; stir-fry 1 minute. Add tomato with liquid and peas. Restir Sauce Mixture; add to skillet. Stirring constantly over medium heat bring to a boil and boil until clear and thickened — about 1 minute. Place about 1¼ cups chicken mixture in each of 4 boilable cooking pouches. Seal as directed. Freeze. Makes 4 servings.

CONVENIENT COOKING — You can make your own chicken, vegetable and vermicelli combination, freeze it in a boilable cooking pouch and have it ready to heat.

Sauce Mixture — In a small bowl stir together 2 tablespoons corn starch, 1 teaspoon dried basil leaves, 1 teaspoon sugar, ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon instant minced garlic, ¼ teaspoon onion powder, ¼ teaspoon pepper and ⅛ teaspoon ground turmeric. Gradually stir in until smooth 1¾ cups cool chicken bouillon or clear fat-free chicken broth and ¼ cup dry white wine.

Vermicelli Mixture — Cook and drain 4 ounces vermicelli as label directs omitting salt. Toss with 2 teaspoons grated Parmesan cheese and 2 teaspoons corn oil. Place about ½ cup warm vermicelli mixture in each of 4 boilable cooking pouches. Seal as directed. Freeze. Makes 4 servings.

To heat: For each serving, place 1 chicken and 1 vermicelli boilable cooking pouch in an uncovered saucepan of boiling water. Boil gently, uncovered, for 15 to 18 minutes. Remove from water. Shake bags to mix. Cut open and serve.

Thermostat Importance

The thermostat on your heating and cooling system determines your home energy needs, says Dr. Glenda Herman, extension housing specialist at North Carolina State University.

If one thermostat is used for temperature control, it should be centrally located on an interior wall in the main living room, she adds.

Don't put thermostats near heating ducts, under strong lights or next to a heat source. Keep them away from drafts and outside doors.

If your thermostat is off just one degree, it can affect your fuel bill and your purse.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

No one will ever convince me that the occurrence of the NFL football strike and Halley's comet within the same decade is a coincidence.

It's God's way of getting men to their feet again.

And frankly, I'm not sure I want my husband on his feet again. Since televised pro football came to a halt, the man has driven me crazy.

Oh sure, I used to kid a lot about his infatuation with the game. The nightgown out of Astroturf, knotting the cord in his I.V., and dressing his mother up in a Minnesota Viking uniform for Mother's Day. It was a joke! Actually, I thought it was a challenge.

Now that he's out of the chair and entering the mainstream of life, he's a different person. I don't know him anymore.

He said one day, "What do you have to do to get a meal around here?"

"On Monday?" I asked. "Just sit quietly in a chair and I throw it up in the air and you snatch it before it hits the floor."

"That's disgusting," he said. "And speaking of disgust, this place is a dump. We ought to move."

"We did," I said. "A week before the Super Bowl."

"Why wasn't I told of this?"

"You've never wanted to know before."

"Well, tomorrow I'm going to make some changes around here. You'll see a difference come . . . what's it called again?"

"Tuesday," I said dryly.

"I know Tuesday. I mean the others before the weekend."

"Wednesday, Thursday and Friday."

"We're going to go out into the fresh air with the babies and have picnics and play a little volleyball and throw sticks for the dog to chase."

"The babies are living in Los Angeles."

"With a sitter?"

"I don't ask."

"We're going to get back to basics. I know I've neglected a few things since the games have been on. We've got a lot of catching up to do, but we'll start by fixing up the house, rotating the tires, fertilizing the lawn and spending more time with the family and doing things that don't cost a lot of money. Incidentally, where is that nightgown you made out of Astroturf?"

"I sent it out to be mowed."

"Look at that!" he said excitedly. "Is that Halley's comet arriving early?"

Please God, let it be Terry Bradshaw going to work.

Add a teaspoon of lemon juice to cooking water to make rice fluffy.

Causes Of Watery Food

"Parents sometimes wonder why a partially eaten jar of baby food has become watery after sitting in the refrigerator overnight," says Sarah Hinton, extension nutrition specialist at North Carolina State University.

It's probably due to feeding the child directly from the jar.

Saliva contains enzymes that start the chemical reaction of digestion in the mouth. This is true for infants as well as adults.

Saliva from the child's mouth is carried back to the jar by the spoon, Mrs. Hinton says. Once introduced into the food, the saliva will start to work.

The nutritionist recommends spooning a portion of the baby food into a cup and feeding the infant from that.

Cambridge Diet Needs Monitoring

The Cambridge diet, one of the latest quick-loss plans, is so extreme in calorie reduction that it should not be undertaken without strict monitoring by a medical professional.

Sarah Hinton, extension nutrition specialist at North Carolina State University, says the 330 calorie-a-day diet does contain 75 percent of the legal standards for protein set by the Food and Drug Administration and 100 percent of the standards for minerals and vitamins.

"Even so," she cautions, "any very low-calorie diet can disrupt normal bodily functions and lead to nausea, dizziness and headaches."

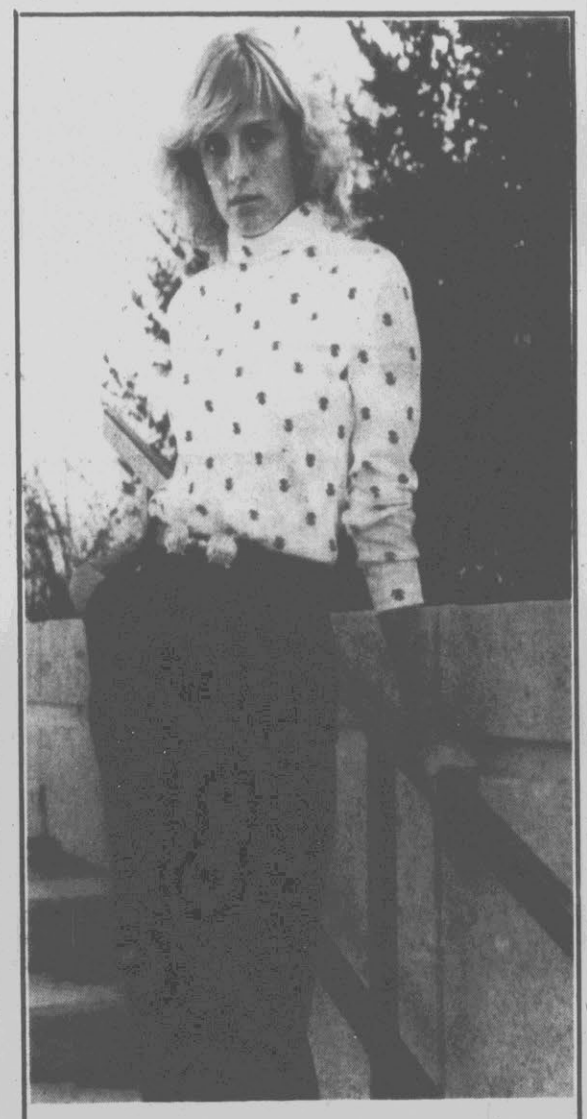

Mrs. Hinton says the Cambridge diet may be beneficial in treating the severely obese only as an alternative to surgical measures, such as gastric by-pass or stapling.

But for the majority of dieters, extreme low-calorie diets, such as the Cambridge plan, do not hit at the source of the problem — poor eating habits.

Quick weight-loss plans may offer short term solutions, but they don't help people with poor habits improve their eating patterns, Mrs. Hinton says.

Instead of sipping powdered milkshake-like formulas, Mrs. Hinton suggests dieters place themselves on a restricted low-calorie diet, centered around whole grain or enriched breads and cereals; fruits and vegetables; low-fat milk or cheese; lean meat, poultry or fish.

It's possible to lose up to 12 pounds a month with this sensible plan, she adds.

Fall for the fun of it.

ECU News Bureau

The Friends of Art, a support society for the nationally-known School of Art at East Carolina University, has elected officers and a steering committee to plan and direct a broad-based enrichment program.

Organized during the past year by a group of active supporters and School of Art Dean Richard H. Laing, the Friends of Art launched its activities at an inaugural luncheon meeting.

The first annual meeting will be held in the spring.

Laing said the membership and support activities of the Friends of Art will be of a statewide and national scope. "We are inviting members to become benefactors, sponsors, patrons or supporting members from many states. We are a nationally recognized school," he said.

Individual, corporate and alumni support will be sought. A recently organized School of Art-Alumni Professional Society has a member on the organizational steering committee.

Officers elected are: Blanche Monroe of Greenville, president; Gladys Howell, wife of ECU Chancellor John M. Howell, vice president representing the university community; Bill Freelove of Greenville, businessman and art collector, vice president representing the business community; Walter Pories of the ECU School of Medicine, representing the professional community.

Also elected were Roz Fuchs, art representative at large; Betsy Ross, representing the Art Alumni professional society, and Ray Elmore, official representative of the School of Art.

Membership is open to the public and will offer "ample opportunity for personal involvement on behalf of art on the university campus and in the community," Laing said.

Victorian Festival Scheduled Saturday

RALEIGH — A Victorian Fine Arts Festival dealing with sculpture, literature, music, painting, architecture and decorative arts will be held in Raleigh Saturday, co-sponsored by the N.C. Chapter of the Victorian Society in American and the Friends of the Library at St. Mary's College, Raleigh.

The first festival event will be a illustrated lecture at 10:30 a.m. in the State Capitol. The lecture, "Public Victorian Sculpture in Washington, D.C." will be given by James Goode, curator of the Smithsonian building and author of several books on Washington monuments and buildings. The lecture will be followed by a walking tour of statuary led by Raymond Beck, historical researcher.

At 2 p.m. in Smedes Hall on St. Mary's campus, "Black Victorian Writers in North Carolina" will be discussed by Professor Blyden Jackson of the National Humanities Center. Jackson recently directed a project on "Black Writers' Biographies: A Bibliography and Archival Assessment."

At 2:45 p.m. a tour of portraits and objects of art in Smedes Hall will be led by Martha Stoops, St. Mary's College historian, and Margaret Williams, chairman of the school's art department.

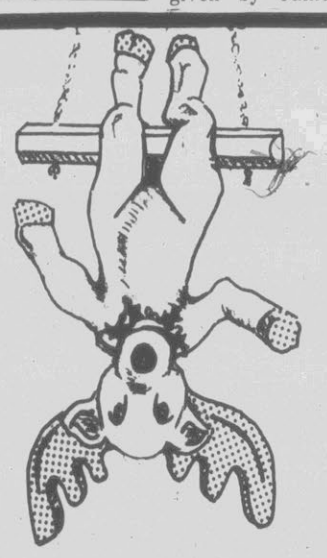

This will be followed by a pair of dramatic readings from the works of Charles Dickens by Kaaren Hawkesworth and Elliot D. Engel, taken from "Nicholas Nickleby" and "Pickwick Papers." Engel's Dickens Disciples in Raleigh is the largest Dickens study club in a world fellowship of 45 groups.

At 3:45 p.m., W. Keats Sparrow of East Carolina University will present the Hardee-Rives Cup for contributions to an appreciation of Victorian age culture in North Carolina. Victorian piano music will be performed by John Ruggero of Duke University.

Events will conclude with a program of Victorian vesper music to be given in St. Mary's Chapel at 5 p.m. by the Raleigh Boychoir directed by Thomas E. Sibley, coordinator of music education in the Wake County Public Schools.

Speeches and cultural events are open to the public without charge. Social events are limited to the membership of the sponsoring groups.

Becky Thomas Show Opening In Farmville

An exhibition of art by Farmville artist Becky Thomas will be on view today through Wednesday at the Farmville Community Arts Council Building on Main Street in Farmville.

A reception to honor the artist, open to the public, will be held from 2 to 5 p.m. today. Viewing hours at the Council Building for the show will be from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. Monday through Wednesday.

A painter who works in a variety of media — acrylic paintings, pen and ink drawings, woodcuts and intaglio prints, charcoal and pencil drawings, Mrs. Thomas concentrates on a high degree of detail in her realistic work. She notes as a primary goal in her art the desire to project realism and details so that a viewer visually experiences the subject rather than merely observe a drawing or a painting.

She received the Bachelor of Science degree from the School of Art, East Carolina University in 1974 and since graduation has worked in professional areas of interior design. Mrs. Thomas has also taught art in Wellcome Middle, Farmville Middle, and Farmville Central High School, as well as giving private art instruction. Additionally, she does free-lance art production.

Mrs. Thomas' work has been entered in numerous competitions and is in private collections in North Carolna, Virginia, Georgia and Texas.

She is married to Dan W. Thomas, Finance Officer of the Pitt County Schools. The couple has two children, Wes and Christian.

Architect Planning An Exhibition Of Folk Art

By JOHN ARNOLD

SANTA FE, N.M. (UPI) — Alexander Girard, renowned architect and designer, says he has special plans when a dazzling folk art exhibition which he has spent three years planning and implementing opens in December: "I'm going to bed."

Girard has put in long loving hours into creating the exciting, color-filled exhibit which opens officially Dec. 5 at the Museum of International Folk Art.

Only about 10 percent of the 106,000 folk art objects which the Girard Foundation has given the museum and the people of New Mexico will be exhibited in "Multiple Visions: A Common Bond."

A $1.5 million wing covering 10,500 square feet has been added to the museum to house the priceless display, and Girard has worked almost three years to create a fantasy land that colorfully highlights folk art — the common link between the world's myriad cultures.

By the time it opens to the public, museum officials estimate the 75-year-old master collector, who practiced architecture in Florence, Italy, New York, Detroit, and Santa Fe and is noted for his fabric designs, will have donated about 4,500 hours in creating his magic show.

But the first view of the exhibit may be more than some patrons are ready for.

Not only will the new wing be a jumble of form and color, but the room's open ceiling — complete with girders, air ducts and support beams — clashes with the display at first glance.

Girard dismisses criticism of the ceiling and the wing's box-like architecture.

"You're not looking at it as architecture. It's a container," he says.

And the display it contains — which probably will remain intact for at least eight years — is, to put it mildly, overwhelming.

"Lots of things got left out, while others get put in for numerous reasons," says Girard. "But it is a selection process." He says he had no preconceived notion of how the display would appear.

"Not a single pencil line was drawn or a layout created. I think it grew by itself rather than being pre-determined," he said.

"We mocked it all up with beer boxes and then translated into wood. You build lumps, and it's much better and more accurate than any drawing."

Girard says viewers will have to make more than one trip to the museum to get the true feeling of the exhibit, which contains folk art from about 100 nations, including a doll he had as a child.

"It turns out to be a thing that you do want to come back to, because it's a lot of digestion. You couldn't take it in all at once," he says. "The main statement is that folk art is a common denominator of the world, because it is indigenous and it comes from people that have not received education. But they are educated when it comes to making the stuff."

Girard and his wife Susan have collected their "stuff" for years.

In one display, folk art pieces depicting elements of heaven and hell are combined whimsically — complete with clouds and fire — to produce a striking effect. Another display portrays a bullfight scene, the ring filled with hundreds of tiny, individually placed spectators watching a bull and toreador in foreground combat.

One of the largest displays depicts a Mexican village containing thousands of figures, buildings and objects. The Girards asked the residents of a small Mexican town to create the miniature village. The designer refused to supply any guidance on how it should look — and the result is delightful.

Actor Hesitated About Donning Blue Uniform

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Stacy Keach, whose heritage is divided North and South, says he hesitated before donning a Union officer's blue uniform for the television miniseries "The Blue and the Gray."

"I was born in Savannah, Ga., and I'm proud that I was born in the South," he says. "When I was six months ago my family moved to California. But my mother was from Texas and in the summers we'd visit and I remember playing Civil War. Having a father from the North and a mother from the South I always felt caught in the middle.

"So I had a queasy feeling when they told me I was going to play a Union officer in 'The Blue and the Gray.'"

Keach stars as Maj. Jonas Steele in the eight-hour miniseries which CBS will telecast tonight, Tuesday and Wednesday. John Hammond also stars as John Geyser, a Southerner who becomes an artist-correspondent for Harper's Weekly. Both are fictional characters, but the events they participate in are based on fact.

Steele is a sort of troubleshooter for President Abraham Lincoln and Geyser is a wide-ranging correspondent, so the two characters (plus their two related families, one North, one South) are able to tie all the other characters and events of the Civil War together.

"The Blue and the Gray" is based on the personal views and impressions of Pulitzer Prize-winning historian Bruce Catton, who prepared the origi al story before his death. Ian McLelland ,Hunter wrote the screenplay.

Gregory Peck makes his television dramatic deout as Lincoln, and Sterling Hayden plays John Brown.

Director Andrew V. McLaglen, experienced in Civil War stories and Westerns, filmed the sweeping epic entirely on location in Arkansas. A number of Civil War re-enactment groups participated in the production.

"We went back to Arkansas and showed the film in Fayetteville," says Keach. "Everyone was quiet when it ended. I was expecting a reaction like a Razorback game. We forget the effect the Civil War has had on our lives, particularly in the South. Nearly everyone can point to an ancestor who was in the war."

He says he has been reading a lot about the Civil War, not only as background for his role, but because he and his brother, James, wrote the post-Civil War movie "The Long Riders"

Flutist Julius Baker To Perform In Hendrix Theater Monday

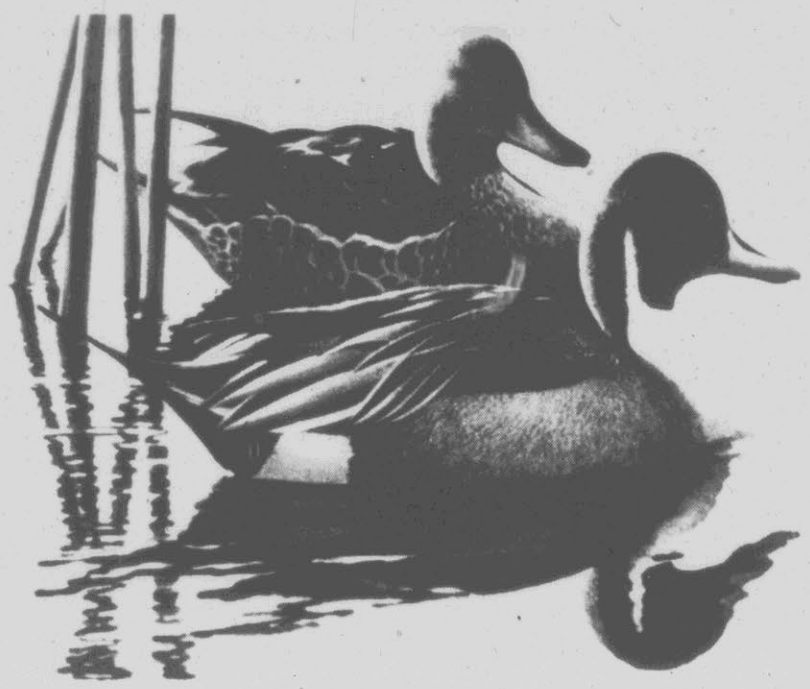

Julius Baker, flutist, an acknowledged world master artist, will be in performance at 8 p.m. Monday in Hendrix Theater in Mendenhall Student Center on the East Carolina University campus. The event is one in the series of the East Carolina University Unions Artists Series.

Tickets are priced at $7.50 and can be purchased in advance at the Central Ticket Office in Mendenhall Student Center or at the door prior to performance time.

Baker has achieved a rich career of performance activity outside New York City where he is principal flutist with the New York Philharmonic. He has performed with such prestigious American orchestras as the Cleveland, Pittsburgh, and Chicago, and as soloist with maestri Eugene Ormandy, Pierre Boulez, Seiji Ozawa, Leonard Bernstein, and Zubin Mehta.

A world traveling performer, he nonetheless manages to schedule teaching stints in between performances — at the Curtis Institute of Music, the Juilliard School, and the New England Conservatory.

He has recorded extensively on the RCA Victor, Decca, Vanguard, Westminister, and Desmar labels. Additionally, he performs each year at music festivals from New York to Japan, from California to Sweden.

New Performing Center Opened In Oregon

By JANE SEAGRAVE
Associated Press Writer

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — Giant columns of Douglas fir shoot up from a carpet of swirling pastel flowers in the lobby of the Eugene Performing Arts Center — a structure many hope will bring springtime to this city's recession-chilled economy.

When the $26.5 million center staged its formal opening this fall, it narked the climax of more than 20 years of dreams, plans and plain hard work by a group of community leaders who refused to let their vision of a downtown civic center fade.

But the Performing Arts Center — the final component of a two-block complex that includes a parking garage, a conference center and a Hilton Hotel — has also become the single biggest reason for optimism in an area that has come to regret its heavy reliance on the wood products industry.

Dick Reynolds, executive director of the center, estimates that at least $10 million will flow into Eugene annually from the new tourist and convention business the facility is expected to draw.

"We just need something like this very badly," said Assistant City Manager Dave Whitlow. "And now we've got the beginnings of a very thriving conference center."

Much of the Performing Arts Center is constructed of 20-foot-thick poured concrete, and the exterior, from some angles, looks like a massive gray fortress squatting between two of Eugene's busiest streets.

But little expense has been spared on the inside of the center, which is decorated in soft forest tones and boasts state-of-the-art sound and stage equipment.

The center includes a grand 2,531-seat concert hall, the 515-seat Soreng Theatre, a rehearsal room and a community room, and is designed to accommodate a wide variety of acts — ranging from ballet to country music.

"We want to convince people it's not a classicist center even if it is a world-class structure," said Luke Bandle, marketing director for the center.

Completion of the Eugene Performing Arts Center is a matter of no small amount of civic pride to residents of this city of 105,000, who dug deep in their pockets at a time when much of the rest of the country was taking a decidedly dim view of high taxes.

City residents obligated themselves for 20 years to pay 61 cents for $1,000 of assessed property valuation.

After proposals to build a civic center failed in 1972 and 1973, the 3-2 passage by Eugene vote s in 1978 of an $18.5 million bond issue — the largest ever proposed in the city for a single purpose — surprised even the project's most ardent supporters.

Too, this verdant city in the heart of rich timber country was still feeling prosperous in 1978. The slump in the housing industry that led to a high unemployment rate in Lane County early this year had not yet hit.

"I think the success of this whole thing was timing," said former Mayor Les Anderson, who headed the commission that began developing the center proposal in 1976 and now chairs the Performing Arts Commission. "I would not relish the idea of putting such a campaign on the ballot now. As a matter of fact, I don't think it could be done."

Still, despite hardship, the community has continued to pledge its financial support for the performing arts center.

King Ferdinand of Aragon married Isabella in 1469.

Rebel Art, Men On Paper Shows At Greenville Art Museum

SEATED YOUNG HUNTER . . . is by Eugene Speicher (1883-1962). This and about 30 other drawings of males are on loan from the Images on Paper collection of the Weatherspoon Gallery, UNC-Greensboro. The show is on view in the two south galleries of the Greenville Museum of Art, 802 South Evans Street.

November has turned out to be a rewarding month for art in Greenville. In addition to the large annual show at Gray Gallery on campus, the Greenville Museum of Art has two shows on view.

In the two South Galleries, a loan exhibition from the Dillard Collection at the Weatherspoon Gallery, UN-C-Greensboro is on view. The traveling loan show constitutes about 30 pieces from the extensive collection of Images on Paper acquisitions made possible by generous annual contributions from the Dillard Paper Company.

Entitled "Men: Images on Paper," the show incorporates drawings of males, nude and clothed, by artists who lived and worked over a period roughly covering the past 100 years.

Among artists represented in this excellent show of drawings are James McNeil Whistler, Henri Matisse, Ralphael Soyer, Eugene Speicher, Jack Beal, Abraham Walkowitz, Leland Bell, Thomas Hart Benton, and Claes Oldenburg. A couple of women artists have examples of their male subject art, including Alice Neel.

With the exception of Oldenburg's study of a man's head — engaged in sticking his tongue out, the other works are gentle, restrained, lyrical head or figure studies. (The exception jars).

Soyer's colored drawing of beatnik poets Alan Ginsburg and Gregory Corso captures the two in a meditative pose. Jack Beal's self-portrait in charcoal is a marvelous character study; and Walkowitz's 1895 nude reveals the ability of an artist to capture the subdued physical power of his subject in a traditional figure drawing.

• The current show in the North Gallery is that of the winners of annual Rebel magazine art contest at East Carolina University. A few examples of sculpture, textiles and ceramics are included, but mostly the works are paintings and prints.

This year's Rebel art seems more dispirited than that of several recent years. One large canvas, merely sketched in, is nebulous. Another large painting gives the impression of a good start that ended inconclusively, and one or two pieces are too much like what has been seen so often before in local and area shows. Nonetheless, the annual competition is a good idea, one that provides one more outlet to challenge young artists studying at ECU.

Hunt To Dedicate Anniversary Vessel

RALEIGH — Governor Jim Hunt will dedicate the keel and frame of the ship "Elizabeth II" on the Manteo waterfront at 11 a.m. Wednesday. The dedication ceremony and reception immediately following are free and open to the public.

"Elizabeth II" is a 50-ton, twin-decked vessel designed to resemble ships that carried English explorers to Roanoke Island on the coast of North Carolina during the "Roanoke voyages" of 1584-87, England's first attempts to settle the New World. The completed ship will be a focal point of the commemoration of the four hundredth anniversary of those voyages, scheduled to last from July of 1984 through August of 1987.

"It's tremendously exciting to see construction come to the point where we're ready to dedicate parts of the ship," said John Neville, executive secretary of America's Four Hundredth Anniversary Committee (AFHAC).

AFHAC, part of the N.C. Department of Cultura Resources, is responsible for planning the statewide commemoration of the quadricentennial.

"We've talked about 'Elizabeth II' for years, we've seen the plans, and now we're finally beginning to see that, yes, this looks like it's going to be a ship!" Neville commented.

Governor Hunt will make the principal speech at the dedication ceremony. Cutlural Resources Secretary Sara W. Hodgkins will also speak, as will AFHAC chairman Lindsay Warren Jr. of Goldsboro, and Charles B. Wade of Winston-Salem, chairman of AFHAC's ship committee and coordinator of the ship project.

The 82nd Airborne Division Band from Fort Bragg will perform before the ceremony. The Right Rev. B. Sidney Sanders, Bishop Coadjutor, Diocese of East Carolina, will give the invocation.

Construction of "Elizabeth II" began several months ago on a downtown Manteo site donated by the heirs of the Creef and Davis families, boatbuilding clans who worked on the site for many years. Now called the George Washington Creef Park, the construction site is open to the public.

"Watching this construction is different from watching most building," says Horace Whitfield, captain of the ship. "Whenever possible, hand labor and period tools are used, and the unusual design itself makes a visit to the site well worthwhile."

Construction of the "Elizabeth II" is being paid for entirely from private funds provided by the American Quadricentennial Corportion, a private, non-profit organization which supports AFHAC's work.

The "Elizabeth II" will be completed in time for the opening of the official commemoration on July 13, 1984 and berthed on Roanoke Island. The ship and adjacent visitor center will be maintained and operated by the Historic Sites Section of the N.C. Department of Cultural Resources.

Fully equipped and staffed, the "Elizabeth II" will sail in specified areas of North Carolina's sounds and nearby rivers, calling on several of the state's ports. Seventy feet long with a mast height of 72 feet, the vessel will draw eight feet of water.

Supervisor of construction is shipbuilder O. Lie-Nielson of Maine. Naval architect Stanley Potter, a part-time resident of Beaufort, completed plans begun by the late William Avery Baker.

Book News

By WILLIE NELMS

The recent conclusion of the World Series brings to mind the continuing popularity of baseball in American life. A sport which is synonymous with our country's past, professional baseball has been shaped by the owners and managers of various teams as much as by the players who perform on the field. Two new books at Shepperd Memorial Library describe men who have been indentified with two of the most popular professional baseball teams — the Brooklyn Dodgers and the New York Yankees.

"Branch Rickey: A Biography" by Murray Polner draws on hundreds of interviews and much previously unpublished material to describe the president of the Brooklyn Dodgers. Rickey would have been guaranteed a niche in the Hall of Fame for no other reason than he broke baseball's color barrier by signing Jackie Robinson, the first black to play in the major leagues.

Yet Rickey's contributions to the sport began long before he came to the Dodgers. He built the St. Louis Cardinals into a power with such colorful characters as Dizzy Dean, Pepper Martin, and Frankie Frisch. The author captures the essence of Rickey's character, noting that he was a man whose old-fashoined values are too often forgotten in today's game. A daring innovator on and off the field, he never ceased to take a stern paternal interest in his players. His love of baseball and his passionate belief in the dignity of all men are his legacy to the game.

Dick Schaap, the well-known television sports reporter, has written of another more contemporary baseball owner — George Steinbrenner in "Steinbrenner!" One of the most controversial figures in the sport, Steinbrenner is portrayed as a man who is most interested in inspiring the emotions of fear and admiration. As an example, the author says that the Yankee owner tried to kill this book when he heard it was being written.

This book neither vilifies nor idolizes Steinbrenner. It is an anecdotal account of the "good" and the "bad" George. It analyzes the forces that have shaped and motivated the two sides of the Yankee owner. Like the subject himself, "Steinbrenner!" is never dull.

The men discussed in these two books are different in many ways. However, each had played an important role in the development of our "national pasttime."

Culture Work Observance Set

RALEIGH — Entertainer Andy Griffith will lead the list of speakers for the 69th annual observance of Culture Week in North Carolina Tuesday through Saturday.

Other speakers scheduled during the week include author Dr. Guion Griffis; poet laureate Sam Ragan; author David Stick; Dr. John Neville, executive director of America's 400th Anniversary Committee; Dr. Sullen M. Hoy, assistant director, Division of Archives and History; Dr. William J. Chiego, chief curator, N.C. Museum of Art; and author John Shelton Reed.

Three dozen awards will be presented to persons and organizations in literature, history, art, and music. Headquarters for the observance will be Raleigh's Velvet Cloak Inn.

Most meetings are open to the public. Details on fees for meals and registration are available by calling 733-7305.

NGCSA Sets Conference

CHARLOTTE — The National Guild of Community Schools of the Arts, an association of over 70 non-profit, non-degree granting schools specializing in music, dance, drama and the visual arts, is holding its 45th annual conference at the Radisson Hotel in Charlotte today through Wednesday.

The conference is hosted by Charlotte's member school, the Community School of the Arts.

Fee for the conference, including all meetings, materials, and five meals is $50 for North Carolina residents. Daily rate for in-state residents is $20.

For more details and for registration, call 704/377-4187.

Grant To Museum

RALEIGH — A $5,000 grant has been given to the N.C. Museum of Art by the Hunt Manufacturing Co. of Statesville. The grant is to help support the opening activities of the new museum in April 1983, and will be used specifically to support Education Day on April 6.

Sixteen County Film Planned

ELIZABETH CITY — Elizabeth City-Northeastern North Carolina Tomorrow has been given $1,500 from the Dare County Tourist Bureau. The funds will be used as part of a $10,000 grant from the N.C. Department of Commerce to produce a film and brochure highlighting the 16 county northeastern quadrant of the state.

The film is targeted for the new 400th Anniversary Visitor's Center at Manteo.

Art Awareness Day Tuesday

ECU News Bureau

An Art Awareness Day for high school students will be conducted by the East Carolina University School of Art on Tuesday at the Jenkins Fine Arts Center on campus.

The purpose of the program is to acquaint students with the art programs available at ECU. More than 350 students from 20 high schools have preregistered to attend.

Demonstrations on wood design, ceramics, printmaking and aluminum casting for sculpture are among presentations to be made by members of the ECU art faculty.

Faculty member Janet Fischer is Art Awareness Day coordinator.

American Ballet Theater II To Open Theater Art Series

'FEDERICO' . . . is one of the dances in the repertoire of American Ballet Theater II. The choreography is by Lorenzo Monreal to music by George Crumb. Dancers are Julian Montaner and Andrea Boardmen. The American Ballet Theater II will perform at 8 p.m. Thursday in McGinnis Theater. The performance is sponsored by the ECU Unions Arts Series. (Photo by Jack Mitchell)

The East Carolina University Unions Theater Art Series begins its 1982-83 season with a performance by the world acclaimed American Ballet Theater II. The performance will be at 8 p.m. Thursday in McGinnis Theater on the East Carolina University campus.

Tickets are now on sale at the Central Ticket Office in Medndenhall Student Center. Tickets are priced at $8 for adults and at $5 for children 14 and younger. All tickets at the door will be $8.

American Ballet Theater II, originally Ballet Repertory Company, is a showcase for talented young dancers as part of the American Ballet Theater's commitment to bringing dance to a greater number of locations in the U.S.

Mikhail Baryshnikov, Artistic Director of American Ballet Theater, describes American Ballet Theater II "as transforming talents of excellent potential into performing artists."

Critics world-wide have praised the versatility and quality of their performances. Clive Barnes has called it "the finest small classical company in the United States."

A typical program might include a 19th century romantic ballet, a classical pas de deux, a modern dance work, and a contemporary ballet newly choreographed specifically for the company.

Since it is a small company — eight women, seven men — each member must be of soloist caliber. American Ballet Theater II "alumni" comprise one-third of American Ballet Theater. Others have gone on to dance with the Joffrey Ballet, the National Ballet of Canada, the New York City Ballet and the Alvin Ailey American Dance Company.

Topper-Nagode Recital At Fletcher Wednesday

The East Carolina University School of Music is featuring Paul Topper, violinist, and Ellen R. Nagode, pianist, in a concert at A.J. Recital Hall Wednesday at 8:15 p.m. There is no charge for admission.

Compositions to be performed are Beethoven's "Sonata, Op. 12, No. 3 in E Major for Violin and Piano" in three movements; Viotti's "Duet for One Violin"; and Franck's "Sonata for Violin and Piano" in four movements.

Topper, who received his A.Mus.D., M.M. degree from the University of Michigan, is the holder of an Artist's Diploma in Violin from Julliard School of Music. He spent eight seasons with the Indianapolis and Chautauqua Symphonies and is former concertmaster of the Toledo Opera Orchestra.

Since 1973, he has directed the North Carolina music camp Summer Strings on the Meherrin.

Ms. Negode holds an M.M. degree from the University of Michigan and a B.M. degree from Alverno College. She is an active piano recitalist and accompanist on all keyboard instruments for solo recitals and chamber ensembles.

Last summer, Ms. Nagode performed in piano masterclasses conducted by Menahem Pressler at Northwestern University, and by John Perry, in Innsbruck, Austria, as a part of the 1982 International Piano Pedagogy Workshop. She is serving as 1981-83 chairwoman of the Group Piano Section of the N.C. Teachers Association.

Auditions Set For Vocalists

CHARLOTTE — The Charlotte Symphony Orchestra will hold auditions Friday for vocalists for the new Cabaret Pops Series that begin in January.

A lyric soprano and a lyric tenor will be needed for January program of vocal selections by Strauss, Lehar, Kunecke and Kalmann.

A baritone and soprano will be needed for a March program of Broadway tunes.

Auditions will begin at 5 p.m. at Spirit Square. For an audition appointment, interested singers may call 704/332-6136 between 9 and 5 weekdays.

Notes On Today's Soloists

Jane Dillard

Gary Glaze

Joseph Pate

Jane Williams

Four out of area young singers are in Greenville to sing the lead roles in today's ECU's 75th anniversary performance of Beethoven's "Ninth Symphony." The concert is at 3:15 p.m. in newly renovated Wright Auditorium. Tickets are priced at $3 for adults and $2 for students and senior citizens.

All four have gained highly acclaimed reputations in recitals, concerts, and opera appearances.

• Jane Murray Dillard, mezzo-soprano, a graduate of East Carolna University, is currently an associate professor at UNC-Charlotte, where she teaches voice and directs the Opera Workshop. Ms. Dillard has appeared with numerous orchestras in Europe and the U.S., and has sung lead role with American and European opera companies. She has been the recipient of three Rockefeller grants, an AAUW scholarship for foreign study, and an Outstanding Alumni Award from ECU.

• Tenor Gary Glaze has received international acclaim for tenor roles with the New City City, the Netherlands, the Prague National, and the Teatro Colon of Buenos Aires opera companies. Additionally, he has performed with seven U.S. opera companies and sang the tenor roles in Ravel's 'L'Enfant et Les Sortileges" in a Balanchine production on the National Educational TV network. Among concert halls where he has appeared as guest performer are Avery Fisher Hall, Alice Tully Hall, and Carnegie Hall. A native of Pittsburgh, Glaze has been the recipient of Rockefeller Foundation and Metropolitan Opera grants.

• Nashville, Tenn. native Joseph M. Pate, a basso, now lives in New Jersey. He has performed extensively in the Philadelphia area, both with the Opera Company of Philadelphia and in numerous roles at the Academy of Vocal Arts, where he will retrun this season as a guest graduate singer to perform the role of Collatinus in "The Rape of Lucretia." Pate has also sung roles with the Washington Civic Opera, the Opera Company of North Virginia and the Wilmington, Del. Opera Society.

• Soprano Jane Wiliams has extensive operatic credits, including major roles with the Wolf Trap, Bronx and Sanfe Fe Opera companies. She has also appeared with the Los Angeles Music Theater Company, the Opera Studio, Inc., and with the Los Angeles Lyric Ensemble.

Marilyn Thompson Recital Set

KINSTON — The Black Artists' Guild is presenting soprano Marilyn Thompson in recital at 8:15 p.m. Saturday at Lenoir Community College in Kinston.

Tickets (price not specified) can be purchased at the Kinston Community Council for the Arts or at the door prior to the hour of performance.

A native of LaGrange and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hadie Thompson, Ms. Thompson began her musical studies at Hampton Institute, Virginia. She was featured soloist with the Hampton Institute Choir under Roland Carter. In a review of the Hampton Choir's Carnegie Hall concert, the critic for the New York Times described her singing as "particularly impressive."

She completed, graduate studies in voice performance at the Catholic University of America, Washington, D.C. and has also studied at the Aspen Music School in Colorado and the Blossom Festival School in Ohio.

Among engagements she has appeared in are as soprano soloist in Handel's "Messiah" in a Norfolk performance with the Virginia Philharmonic, and in the Raleigh Oratorio Society's production of Bach's "Mass in B-Minor." Most recently, Ms. Thompson was soloist at the National Association of Negro Musicians Convention in Chicago, and in a recital at Morehouse College, Atlanta.

This season, recital engagements include scheduled performances in Virginia, Washington, D.C., and New Jersey. During the 1983-84 season, she will be in a series of recitals in North Carolina under the auspices of the N.C. Arts Council's Touring Artists Program. Currently she is studying voice in New York City with Franco Iglesias.

With Singing Group

Paul Tucker, a 1981 graduate of North Pitt High School, is currently performing with the Mount Olive singers at various locations throughout eastern North Carolina.

The theme for the fall tour is "Sights and Sounds of America."

Members of the singers are selected by audition and receive scholarships at Mount Olive for their participation.

The singers have recently performed at Cape Fear Academy in Wilmington and at the Fayetteville Academy.

On Friday, they will sing at 10 a.m. at O'Berry Center in Goldsboro.

Former French Premier Pierre Laval was executed in 1945 for betraying his country to Nazi Germany during World War II.

America Film Next

"Portraits of America — The National Parks" is the title of the next film to be shown in the 1982-83 Travel-Adventure Film Series. The film will be shown at 8 p.m. Wednesday in Mendenhall's Hendrix Theater, ECU.

Tickets are priced at $3.50 ($3 per person for groups of 20 or more if purchased in advance from the Central Ticket Office). All tickets at the door are $3.50.

In this film, filmmaker Doug Jones will show some of the wonders of outdoors America from Maine's Acadia National Park on across the continent then westward to the volcanoes of Hawaii, 2,500 miles from the American mainland.

From the "birth" of Yellowstone National Park in 1872, the National Park Service has grown to encompass 39 national parks, and nearly three hundred additional areas, which together encompass a heritage from time and nature of geological wonders unsurpassed in the world.

Viewers of the film will see, among other sights, The Grand Canyon, The Everglades, the Grand Tetons and many other familiar and not so familiar scenic wonders.

No WOOW Classics

WOOW Classics, the four-hour program of classical music broadcast Sunday evenings from eight until midnight by hostess Karen Hause over radio station WOOW and cable television channel 9, will not be aired this week due to other committments by Mrs. Hause.

The program will be broadcast at the usual time next Sunday, Nov. 21 and on following Sundays.

Mercer Concert Of Sacred Music Today

Thomas Mercer, bass-baritone, will be heard in a concert of sacred music at 7 p.m. today at Trinity Free Will Baptist Church, located on East 264 Bypass, Greenville. The public is invited without charge to the concert and to the reception which follows.

Mercer, a member of Christian Arts, Inc. founded by famed opera singer Jerome Hines, will be accomnpanied by Annette Braxton, painist; Dee Ann Braxton, violinist; and Dallas Braxton, marimbist.

The first half of the program will feature seven songs — "The Lord Is My Light" by Frances Allitsen; Handel's "Largo;" Mendelssohn's "Lord God of Abraham;" the Jerome Hines arrangement of "The Lord's Prayer;" J.W. Peterson's "Let Us Break Bread Together;" "Balm In Gilead" by Herman Voss; and two Robert MacGimsey songs, "Thunderin' Wonderin'" and "Sweet Little Jesus Boy."

After an intermission, the program will consist of five additional songs — Peterson's "In The Image Of God;" John Jacob Niles' "I Wander As I Wander;" Franklin L. Sheppard's "This Is My Father's World;" "Tell Me The Story of Jesus," by Jonathan R. Sweeney; and "An Evening Prayer" by Charles H. Gabriel.

TOM MERCER

Mercer, now a resident of Greenville, began his musical career singing with church choirs in high school, and continued singing in chapel choirs while serving in the U.S. Marine Corps.

He has appeared in numerous television concerts; has sung the title role of Elijah in Mendelssohn's oratorio, "Elijah;" and sung the role of the disciple Thomas with Jerome Hines in a production of the opera "I Am The Way."

A Beloved Building Is Gone From The Winterville Scene

Recently Razed

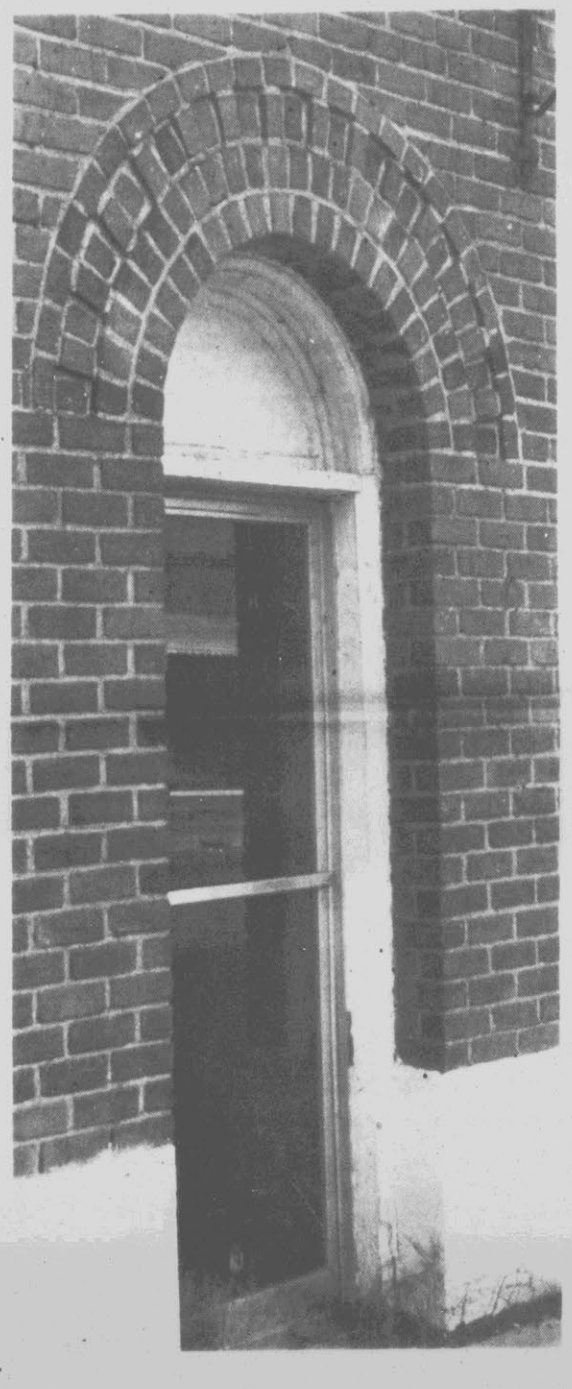

DEMOLISHED IN MID-OCTOBER . . . This Winterville building, constructed about 1919 by A.G. Cox, was demolished in mid-October. For a span of six decades, the brick structure housed a number of businesses, including the original Dixie Queen Sandwich Shop. The vacant area created by its demolition will be used as a parking lot for a local business.

THE ORIGINAL DIXIE QUEEN . . . sandwich shop, founded and operated for years by the Evans brothers, was located in an area behind this door at which Alex Evans stands. Alex and his brothers, Bert and Leon, were at one or another time active in maintaining the flourishing trade in sandwiches, hot dogs, hamburgers, and soft drinks.

Text By LaRue Evans

Photographs By Jerry Raynor

ARCHITECTUAL DETAIL . . . Several of the doors of the Cox building featured an arch of brick curved and mounted flush with the outer wall.

Is there anyone around who remembers a Reo? What about curb service or machine permanents? They were all part of a bygone era and of a recently demolished building.

For the past 60 plus-a-few years in the town of Winterville a one-story brick building stood on the same block as Ange's Store. This landmark site has recently been torn down, but there's a story to be told about those walls — and the people and businesses housed within them over the years.

The building was constructed by A.G. Cox around 1919. With four bricks placed side by side, each exterior wall was 16 inches thick. Of its several doors, two were topped by arches. Over one the insert was of wood; over another of glass. Above these inserts were other arches designed within the brickwork itself, bricks laid with ends forward but flush with the wall.

Auto Dealership

Since the building was originally used for an automobile dealership, the front featured a wall of plate glass, above which was vertical weather boarding extending to the roof line. This provided a showroom for the automobiles. A garage area was in the back, and a "filling" station on the right.

This right end was fashioned with a 60-foot circular wall recessed to provide a drive-through area for cars that needed their tanks filled with Standard Oil gasoline. Royce Hunsucker later managed the station, selling items other than gas. He sold the first radio ever bought in this area, a Crosley . . . "You are there with a Crosley."

Roy Cox, A.G.'s son, sold the Reo Flying Cloud and other cars — the Wolverine, the Durant, and the Star. Frank Harrington, a former clerk of court, the Lautares family, and the Hunsucker family all bought Reo automobiles from the Cox agency. George L. Rouse was one of those who bought a Star.

Two brothers, Miles and W.S. Stafford, later operated the dealership, the filling station, and the garage. Ola Gardner washed and greased cars.

When the Staffords moved to Greenville, the car dealership ceased to exist. Leon L. Moore Oil Company took a lease on the building. The filling station and garage continued to operate with a succession of managers. For rent, managers paid Moore one cent on each gallon of gasoline sold, which usually amounted to about $30 a month.

Some of the men who operated the station over a period of time were Walter Dail and S.J. Waters, Henry Dail, Elbert Smith, and Carl (Tap) Worthington, who stayed there 19 years.

The Dixie Queen

In 1933 Bert Evans returned from service with a savings of $640. He and his brother, Leon, rented the end of the building opposite the filling station, bought a soda fountain in Farmville for $200, and opened up a sandwich shop, hot dog and hamburger stand. In 1936, their mother, Mrs. Annie Evans, named it the Dixie Queen, the name in which the franchise was granted. But the general public called it the Dixie Queen Sandwich Shop.

Before World War II the Evans boys decided that they didn't need all their space, so the right hand side was partitioned off to provide a beauty shop for Josie Liverman. She stayed there nine years, then sold it to Juanita Olive. She in turn sold it to Moye Worthington in 1945, and it was known as Moye's Beauty Shop. In 1960 Moye vacated the shop to move across the street. Clarice Donaldson was the last to operate a beauty shop there which was literally a "hole in the wall."

The Dixie Queen continued to flourish and became the spot to which everybody gravitated. In 1937 Bert went to California. In 1939 Alex (Dick) Evans, the youngest brother, returned from the Navy and joined Leon in the business.

Even today it's not uncommon to hear someone say, "Oh! I did my courtin' at the sandwich shop. They had free music inside and she would give her son Jimmy a balanced meal at the house and "he'd still run to the Dixie Queen to order a hamburger and read the 'funny' books. Those were happy time for families with children," she continued. "All the children congregated there, yet it was a wholesome environment for them to be in."

As midnight approached, Leon and Alex would mop the floor and clean and get set up for the next day. They'd then close for the night and sit down on an outside bench to rest. Usually, at that time, local boys coming in from a date would come up and want a sandwich or two. Leon and Alex would unlock the door, go back in and in no time at all, the place would once again be filled with customers.

War Years Difficult

A Navy man, Linwood Rouse, was home on leave and sitting in front of the Dixie Queen when he heard on the radio that the Japanese had bombed Pearl Harbor and that all servicemen should return to their bases immediately.

The war years were difficult ones for the Dixie Queen as they were for everyone. Alex operated it alone, for Leon was called into service. Since sugar was not available, Alex could only get substitute Coca Cola syrup and no mayonnaise at all.

In order to sell chicken salad sandwiches, his mother would cook and cut up six roosters per week and make a gallon of mayonnaise.

With the war over, Leon returned. Then, in 1957, with a flourishing business, Leon and Alex went into a new structure, the present Dixie Queen where George Hines now specializes in seafood.

The Cox building has nurtured other businesses that became successful and later moved to larger facilities. Gurvass Vincent started his TV and Appliance Center in the former showroom area. It's where Sparky McCaskill began his insurance agency, and S.J. Waters his Waters Carpet Center.

"When I moved into the old building," explained S.J., "I paid Miss Janie Cox $40 a month's rent and she furnished the paint to freshen up the place. Later she asked for $50 with the assurance that she would never raise the rent again."

This was the policy that Miss Janie (Mrs. Roy Cox) and her children operated by — a policy of live and let live. Young people just launching a business venture would go in "on a shoe string" and gradually become successful.

"Fannie Mae Ange allowed our customers to use her vacant lot for a place to park. I wouldn't move my business from Winterville under any circumstances," said S.J. "I have a strong attachment to the place and the people that gave me my start."

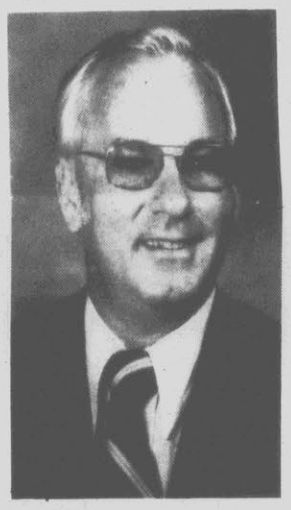

Attitude Symbolized

But the building, one that symbolized the prevailing attitude of this small community, is now gone. It was a building that helped to shape and mold the lives of many people, some still in the county and some who've left.

When he learned it no longer existed, J.B. Edwards of Winston-Salem, one of Winterville's native sons, expressed remorse. Others agree with Tap Worthington. "It'll improve the appearance of the town," he said. Another person said, "Memories will survive whether the building is there or not."

Instead of another building on the spot, it will become a parking area. George Hines has bought the land to accommodate his Dixie Queen seafood customers.

As Alfred Lord Tennyson reminds us. "The old order changeth, yielding place to new."

DESCENDANT OF FOUNDER . . . W. Riley Cox, today a businessman in Winterville, is the son of Roy and Janie Cox and a grandson of A.G. Cox, founder of the Cox building in Winterville.

CARL (TAP) WORTHINGTON . . . poses near a door beneath the enclosed drive-in shelter of the Cox Building. This end of the building featured a circular wall that provided an easy access to cars coming in from the street. For years, this area of the long brick building served as a filling station and garage. Worthington was one of several men who operated the business established there.

A FORMER PROPRIETOR . . . Mrs. Moye Worthington Smith stands at the door that once served as the entrance to a beauty shop she operated in the Cox building. Over the years, several women ran the small beauty shop behind this door.

Answer to yesterday's puzzle.

CRYPTOQUIP 11-13

YQL EHIT, IYWP-IWHSMVT IMEVTTE IMVTLTP VY IYYW IQFVYSTLF.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — COURAGEOUS WILD LION TAMERS AIMED AT WHIPPING THROUGH ACT.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: I equals C.

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Louisiana Schools Report Shortage Of Teachers

By DAN EVEN
Associated Press Writer

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — A teacher shortage is so great in Louisiana that many schools have been forced to send recruiters on raiding parties deep into other states — sometimes as far away as as Michigan and Ohio.

"We experienced more shortages for this school year than any in memory," said Jacqueline C. Lewis, director of the state's Bureau of Higher Education and Teacher Certification.

A report last month showed things are so bad that most systems had to use some non-certified teachers to keep their classrooms going.

Of the state's 45,000 public school teachers, 834 are not certified this year — up from 619 a year ago. This year's total is a 41 percent increase from 1980 when the state first started monitoring the shortage.

Without certification, a teacher cannot be hired permanently, and, with too many uncertified teachers, a school could lose its accreditation.

Since there is no statewide recruitment program, each of the state's 66 systems must handle its own hiring. The major needs this year were special education and lower elementary grade teachers.

"The major problem is that statewide in our teacher colleges, enrollment is down 50 percent from what it was five years ago," said Harold Smith, who handles teacher hiring for Iberia Parish.

Like several other parishes, Iberia has started a special out-of-state recruiting program.

Smith traveled to Texas in 1981 and to Mississippi the last two years to try to fill vacancies in his parish-wide system. From the trips, he eventually hired two teachers from Texas and about two dozen from Mississippi.

Nonetheless, the system is using 37 non-certified teachers this year, according to a state report.

In the past two years, St. Mary Parish along the Gulf coast has brought in about 100 teachers from out of state. That recruitment program includes contacting teacher colleges in 43 states.

In New Orleans, Olympia Boucree said she made recruiting forays into 20 out-of-state universities and colleges to fill over 100 teaching vacancies this year.

She went to Florida, Ohio, Michigan, Tennessee, Ohio and Pennsylvania. Eleven of the district's new teachers are from out of state.

"We had real good success in both Mississippi and Michigan," said Simeon Marcott, personnel administrator for the Acadia Parish School Board.

Marcott made three trips to Michigan and Mississippi. He got about 35 new teachers there.

Smokeout Activity Is Scheduled Here

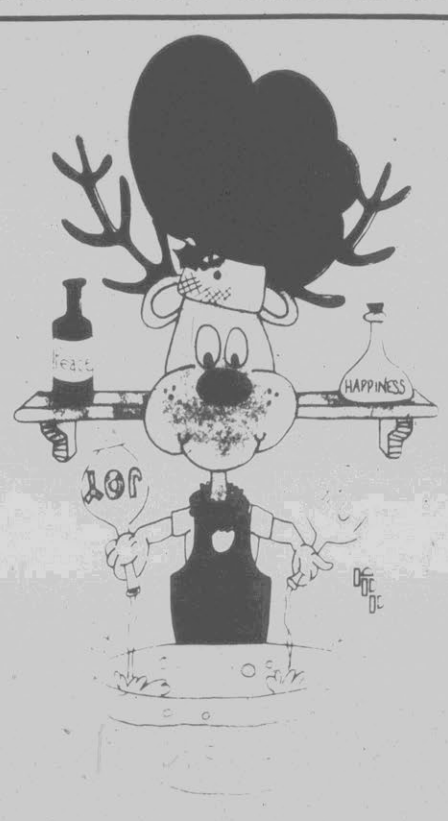

Great American Smokeout activities will be held here Thursday along with those in the rest of the United States.

Community volunteers will encourage anyone who wishes to sign a pledge not to smoke on Thursday. The 1982 goal nationwide is to get one in every five smokers to give up cigarettes from midnight to midnight Nov. 18.

The national chairman is Larry Hagman, star of the television show, "Dallas." The local chairman is Joan Boudreaux, an American Cancer Society volunteer.

Campus chairmen are members of the Alpha Omega Fraternity, which will keep a quit-smoking-for-a-day pledge booth at the Student Supply Store on campus Wednesday. They will hold a mock funeral for a smoker that evening.

Linda Leighty is the Pitt Community College chairman; Jim Britt, the Pitt County Memorial Hospital chairman. Also taking an active part are Sue Lyman, alcohol and drug counselor in the Greenville city schools; Wade Johnson in the Pitt County schools and members of the Mutual Improvement Assocation of the Greenville Church of Latter-Day Saints.

Log Home Offers Alternative To High Prices

By DAN SUSSMAN

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. (UPI) — In 1980, Jim and Sharon Thayer's dream house was nothing more than a hole in the ground and a pile of numbered and color-coded wood logs.

Today, it's a spacious three-bedroom house complete with basement and second-floor sundeck.

"And we built it ourselves, every stick of it," said Jim.

The Thayers, who live near Morgantown in northern West Virginia, are among the growing number of Americans fed up with house prices and the cost of heating and cooling, and who have a knack for do-it-yourself projects. As a result, they now have a home on which the monthly payments are less than $200 and for which the winter heating and summer air-conditioning bills are practically non-existent.

Log structures, which once served merely as lakeside vacation homes, today are a rapidly growing segment of the homebuilding industry, particularly in the Sunbelt.

Fletcher Parsons, an executive with a Ripley W.Va. construction company and president of the North American Log Builders Association, said more than 1 million log homes have been built in the United States in the past 10 years. About 10 percent of all single-family dwellings under construction now are log-built, he said.

Association figures show more than 250 companies in the United States which produce log home kits and 400 to 500 craftsmen who specialize in custom log homes.

Parsons said log homes have their strongest appeal among people who want to build them themselves.

A family project

"The homes come in kits, and the logs are pre-cut and pre notched. You just do it by the number," he said. "It becomes a family operation, a family project."

He said most kits sell for approximately $10 a square foot, and that most homes being built today are between 1,200 to 1,300 square feet.

However, those costs include only the shell of the house, the door and window frames and the roof. Inside walls, wiring, heating, plumbing and fixtures are extra.

According to Ken and Karen St. Louis, who represent Natural Shelter, Inc., another kit manufacturer, a do-it-yourself house can cost a customer about three times the basic price once the additional work is completed. If a contractor is hired to do all the construction, that basic price can balloon three to five times.

Instructions with the kits are so explicit that almost anyone can build them, said Parsons.

But the St. Louises, who, like about 50 percent of their customers, hired contractors to put up their house, know there are drawbacks.

"You have to be realistic about what you can handle yourself and how long you want to live with the building process. I have friends who have been working on theirs for 10 years," said Ken, a West Virginia University professor of speech pathology who helps his wife sell the kits as a sideline.

it took the Thayer family two days to sort the logs when the kit arrived and only about two weeks to erect the shell of the house, said Jim. However, three years after he began the project, he still has to put on the finishing touches, such as carpeting and some woodworking.

"We weren't in a hurry. If we were, we might have gotten disgusted," his wife said.

Still, it's worth the wait for many enamored with the energy efficiency and ease of exterior maintenance of log homes.

"The log house is so far in front as an energy saver it's ridiculous," said Doris Muir of Montreal, editor of the quarterly Log Home Guide for Builders and other publications on log construction.

Q. How long a cold treatment must I give hyacinth bulbs in order to force them to bloom? (D.M., Lumberton)

A. All bulbs must be given a cold treatment between 35 and 48 degrees F. for at least 13 weeks.This cold treatment can be provided in a cold frame, an unheated cellar or refrigerator. The bulbs will flower in three to four weeks after being removed from cold storage. Roots form during this cold period so it is important to water the bulbs well when they are planted and to keep the potting medium — equal parts loom, peat moss and sand or vermiculite — moist throughout the forcing process. (Joe Love, extension horticultural specialist)

Q. Why are there no berries on my American holly? (D.S., Wake Forest)

A. In hollies, male and female flowers are borne on separate plants. You may have a male plant. It will never produce fruit. You may have a female plant that did not receive proper pollination because there is no male plant in the area. Also, many hollies have poor or no crops of berries this year because the blooms were killed in the hard freeze that hit North Carrolina in April.

Q. Why do I have rhododendrons blooming now? (M.A., Raleigh)

A. Rhododendrons and many other plants have dormancy requirements that must be filled before blooming can occur. The dormancy requirement may be a length of time in cold temperatures, a period of dryness, a change in daylength, or combinations of these and other factors. A dry summer induced rhododendrons to set buds early, and cool temperatures this fall followed by rain and warm weather broke the dormancy of rhododendrons causing buds to open.

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

An 1850 Greek Revival farmhouse, tired and dilapidated, is being transformed into a so-called "idea house" of the '80s in Arlington, Mass. What's more, the step-by-step renovation is being seen on 250 public television stations.

We talked recently with Boston designer-remodeler Bob Vila, who is directing the entire project. In previous seasons on the program, "This Old House," he has tackled the restoration of a rundown Victorian, the conversion of a landmark mansion into condominiums and the remodeling-expansion of a 1956 tract house, all under the joint supervision of the Boston-based educational foundation, WGBH, and Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp.

Did Vila, as a remodeler, ever have to take over and finish a job started by a do-it-yourselfer?

"Many times. Certain do-it-yourself projects get botched-up more than others. Last summer, when called in to finish the installation of an outside deck, I discovered that the home owner had selected the wrong kind of lumber and hardware. The deck members that go in or near the ground should be of a heartwood grade that is insect and decay resistant. He had chosen a less expensive kind because he figured certain parts of the deck did not show. It's like scrimping on the foundation of a house."

What about the hardware?

"Here again, it's a matter of cost. Noncorrosive or galvanized-dipped fasteners cost more and sometimes are a bit harder to find. But when people settle for less, the eventual result is a rust stain wherever there's a nail, bolt or joint hanger."

Where else do do-it-yourselfers go wrong?

"In installing insulation. Many home owners, when installing new insulation over old, as in attic floors, neglect to place the vapor barrier down toward the ceiling below and then slash it. If the new barrier is not slashed, moisture will be trapped in the insulation. The problem occurs so often that a new 'faceless' insulation is now being made."

Other areas where do-it-yourselfers get into trouble:

"In applying resilient flooring that requres cement. The new self-sticking vinyl sheet flooring eliminates that difficulty. In making concrete, there's a tendency to add too much water to the mixture. In wallpapering, lots of persons use the wrong kind of paste. When I asked one person why he didn't follow the manufacturer's instructions, he said that when he opened the paper, he had ripped up the directions without knowing it."

What's the most common error in plumbing work?

"There's no one mistake. There are lots of them. For one thing, a check should be made to determine what your local code permits in the way of repairing water lines. If I have to pick one error, it's in the 'sweating' of a pipe. Clamps must be used to hold the pipe steady when soldering. When they aren't, the pipe moves and the solder doesn't take."

Doesn't the same precaution apply when electrical work is being done?

"Right. Electrical codes permit certain kinds of do-it-yourself work and forbid other kinds. Check, not only to avoid a fire but to be sure you do not void your insurance."

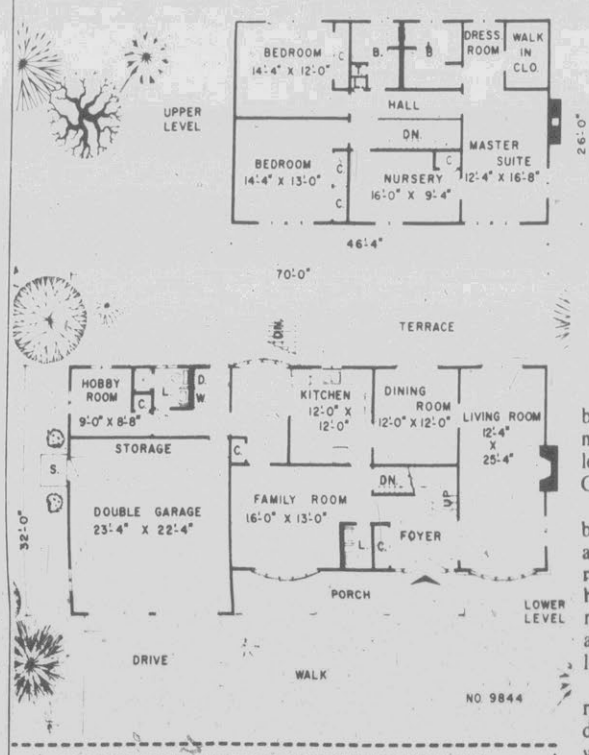

Any other areas of trouble?

"Yes. In putting up gypsum board, many people don't take the time to cut accurate holes for light fixtures and receptacles. Don't be careless with measurements. But perhaps the oddest botched-up project is one that really is simple — building shelves. Do-it-yourselfers start out fine, but after a few shelves, they get tired and inevitably lose accuracy with their handsaws. If you don't have a power saw, it's worth it to rent one if a lot of cutting is involved."

(Handy for do-it-yourselfers is Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," which can be obtained by sending $1.50 to this newspaper at Box 5, Teaneck, NJ 07666.)

PLAN YOUR HOME — The Hearthstone

Large Nursery Adjoins Master Suite

By Jerry Bishop

Master suite, complete with bath, dressing room, and 16-ft nursery, dominates the upper level of this engaging two-story Colonial home.

Besides the extensive master bedroom suite, the Hearthstone, an accommodating three bedroom plan, calls or three and one half baths, an elegant living room, and ample family living areas within its 2600 sq. ft. or living space.

A traditionally inspired exterior is marked by double entry doors, bay windows, and a wrought iron columned entry porch. Garage roof is extended over the front porch for a continuity of line, and upstairs front windows are shuttered.

Inside the double entry doors, the foyer immediately suggests space. The airy entry, coat closet at hand, allows access to family room at left, second level stairs, or living room at right.

Expansive enough to entertain a crowd, the living room is framed by bay window at front and sliding glass doors to terrace at rear. To warm this 26-ft. length of room, a wood-burning fireplace is centered on the side wall. Sliding glass doors also furnish the adjacent dining room, large, formal, and ready for guests.

Informal living areas fill the remainder of the first floor. A front-facing family room is indulged with bay window and bordered by a half bath. At rear, the kitchen exhibits extensive counter and storage space and merges with a charming bay-windowed breakfast area. Laundry room, hobby room, and full bath complete the level.

Upstairs, over half the area is occupied by the outstanding master suite, a union of large bedroom, dressing room with walk-in closet, full bath with double sinks, and 16-ft. closeted nursery. The elongated nursery can also serve as an extra bedroom or sitting room, and two additional bedrooms share a full bath.

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — We have some squeaks in a wooden stairway. I understand nails can be hammered into the risers from above to silence the noise in the case of an ordinary butt joint, but the joints in our stairway appear to be the kind in which one piece of wood is inserted into a groove in the other. I believe it is called a dadoed joint. It would seem illogical to put nails into a joint which never had them. What's the story?

A. — You are correct. You don't use nails on such a joint. What you have to do is to insert a small wooden wedge into the opening so that the joint becomes tighter. To do this, you must remove the thin piece of moulding that is just under the nose of the tread. After the wedge is in place — and trimmed off if necessary — replace the moulding or, if it was damaged in removal, attach a new piece of moulding.

Q. — I changed the washer on a sink in our basement about three months ago and it stopped the leak that was bothering us. The leak occurred again about a month later. Again I replaced the washer and again everything seemed okay. Now the same thing has taken place for the third time. What am I doing wrong?

A. — It appears the seat of the faucet and not the washer is at fault. When the seat gets roughened for whatever reason, it quickly chews up the new washer; that is, it puts a few years of wear on it in a few weeks. Turn off the water to the sink and take out the stem that holds the washer. Use a seat-dressing tool you can purchase at most hardware stores, home supply centers or plumbing supply houses. It usually comes on a card with instructions. If there is no card that gives such instructions, ask the dealer how to use it. The tool is inserted in the faucet and turned a certain way. In effect, this action smooths the faucet seat. Once this is done, put in a new washer.

Q. — Some time ago you gave advice on how to get rid of an odor in a cellar which had a dirt floor. Everything you said was OK, but you forgot to tell the questioner he could sprinkle chlorine of lime on the floor and then sweep it up later. I have found this very effective.

A. — It is effective. But chlorine of lime is a poison and must be handled with extreme care. It is especially important not to permit children and pets in the cellar while the powder is on the floor. Any one who uses it should follow the directions on the container to the letter regarding its safe use.

Q. — We have our eyes on a piece of property, but aren't certain we will want it a year from now. I want to take an option to buy, but I'm not sure exactly how it works.

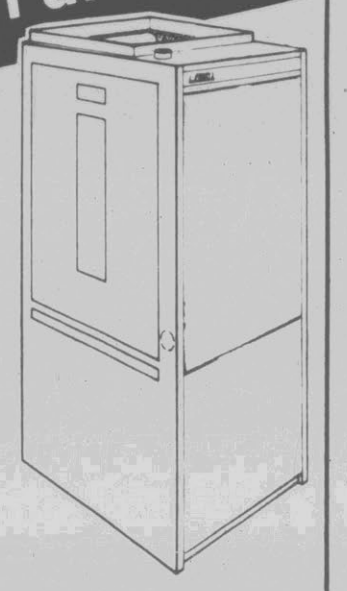

A. — An option permits you, for a specified sum, to buy the property for a certain amount, up to a certain date. It also permits you, by relinquishing the option money, not to buy the property. However, this is a subject with many variations, so be sure you have an attorney approve the terms of the agreement.

(Faucet leaks, toilet bowl troubles, noisy pipes and other subjects, are discussed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Make Simple Plumbing Repairs," which can be obtained by sending 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Bartender Offers Advice To Readers From Male's View

By BILL OUTLAW
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Bartender-turned-columnist Steven Austin gives "Straight Up" advice to readers of a North Carolina newspaper, and he hopes someday to mix it up with the likes of Dear Abby and Ann Landers.

Austin, 31, has been a bartender for most of his adult life, but he has been giving advice to readers of The High Point Enterprise since late August. He doesn't claim to have any special training for his job, other than the advice he has given while tending bar.

"That's the appeal of the column. I'm just a regular guy doing it," he said.

"I'm not a clever editor or publisher. I'm not a journalist," he said. "I'm actually what I say I am — a complex person who has been behind that bar and has known every type of person in every walk of life."

Austin said he got the idea for the column about three years ago when he was pouring drinks at a Miami bar. He was handing out advice to one of his regular customers, who told him he should put his advice in a syndicated column like Ann Landers and Abigal Van Buren.

Austin, a New York native, liked the idea, and began writing newspapers throughout the country to try and sell them on the idea. In the meantime, he moved to Jamestown, N.C., and Joe Brown, editor of The High Point Enterprise, agreed to give him a chance.

Austin said there was a need for an advice column with a male perspective and one that also gives a viewpoint from a different generation than Ann Landers and Dear Abby, who are in their 60s.

He said there are questions that he can deal with from a younger person's standpoint that they just can't relate to.

He calls his column "Straight Up With Steven The Bartender."

He responded to one letter from somene who had written to complain about getting a traffic ticket for driving too fast in school zone even though the kids were in school by saying, "Dear Idiot. When I read your letter I had to pinch myself to see if I was dreaming. You make me sick."

But most of the responses he gives are not harsh at all. They are straightforward, common-sense approaches to problems people ask him about. He answers each letter personally, and insists that no one else sees who the letters are from — not even his fiancee.

He says he receives questions on every type of problem imaginable. He says if he suspects that someone needs professional advice in a specific area, he will say so in his response to them.

Sometimes his answers require some research, while others just call for good old-fashioned horse sense.

He knows that his outlook differs from many who read his column, such as standing by his position that if you're old enough to serve in the military, you're old enough to be allowed to drink.

"I have had many customers at a bar who can easily qualify as senior citizens but have the maturity of babies," he wrote in response to one letter. "On the other hand, some of the most interesting and personable people I have met are too young to be served a drink anywhere. It's all relative pal."

He says he has received letters of admonishment from people who disagreed with responses he has given.

"Mostly they send passages from the Bible, or Billy Graham, things like that," Austin said.

Brown said he turned down many requests from people who want to write columns, but that Austin impressed him.

"He's the first one that absolutely convinced me that he's capable. He has the determination and he's going to do it," he said.

Austin makes no secret of his desire to become nationally syndicated. Even if that happens, he still plans to go on bartending, at least on a part-time basis, to keep in touch with people.

"If I just stopped being a bartender, people would say, 'He's not a bartender, he's just a writer sitting down (writing a column)."

Child Is True 'Poser'

NIOTA, Tenn. (AP) — Blond-haired Chad Cansler has been in body building contests in East Tennessee for half his life. And the 5 year old has the trophies to prove it.

But don't get the idea that the youngster looks like a miniature Mr. Universe with rippling chest, arms and leg muscles and an extra-tiny waist. Or that he can wrestle alligators or even compete in a weight-lifting match with a Chicago Bears linebacker.

When the 50-pound youngster removes his shirt, there's a clear outline of his ribs protruding.

Why, then, has the boy won seven trophies and appeared on NBC television's "real people" show?

Chad is a poser.

He can make ripples travel the length of his stomach. Or with his elbows nearly touching behind his back, he can hold his breath and push out his small chest. In a show, he usually strikes 12 poses, very similar to performances by the monstrous adults.

"As far as we know, he's the the only one in the whole world this young who does this," Alice Cansler, his 25-year-old mother, said.

"He's just a special guest poser — he's not competing," she said. "The people who put on the shows request him. He's a pretty good crowd pleaser."

Eddie Cansler, the boy's 28-year-old body-building father, said that during competitions a spotlight follows the boy as he walks to the center of the stage and poses to theme music from the movie "Rocky."

Chad has whipped crowds into a frenzy several times, his father said.

Cansler said Chad, the oldest of their two sons, began the routine while playing three years ago. Cansler soon began taking his son with him to work out with weights at a gym near their home in this McMinn County town of 700 people.

Chad also watched his father, a muscular but not huge man, compete for such titles as "Mr. East Tennessee." The boy's mother also has competed in body building contests, and won the "Ms. Choo Choo" title for best arms and legs at a Chattanooga show.

"What we really want is for someone to see him and put him on commercials, like ... advertising clothes or something," Mrs. Cansler said.

ASK OMAR

Q.—In your columns, you frequently discuss the situation where a player makes a bid over game, which you say asks about the control of the unbid suit. I am not sure just what you mean. Could you discuss a few examples to clarify the situation for me? — R. Delvecchio, New York City

(This question has been awarded the weekly prize.)

SOUTH	NORTH
1 ♠	1 ♡
3 ♡	3 ♠
4 ♣	5 ♡

South could have any of the following hands for his bidding on this sequence:

a) ♠KQ ♡KJxx ◇xx ♣AKJxx
b) ♠Kxx ♡KJxx ◇x ♣AKQxx
c) ♠Kx ♡KJxx ◇Kx ♣AKxxx
d) ♠xx ♡KJxx ◇KQ ♣AKJxx
e) ♠Qx ♡KJxx ◇Ax ♣AKxxx

The only suit that has not been cue-bid is diamonds. North's bid of five hearts, therefore, says he is interested in slam, but has two fast losers in diamonds. If that is the case, with hand a) South also has no interest, because he too has two fast diamond losers, so he simply passes.

Hand b) is another matter. South's singleton diamond means that the defenders cannot take more than one trick in that suit. He gets the message across to partner by raising to six hearts.

With hand c), South's king of diamonds also prevents the defenders from taking two fast tricks in the suit. However, it is dangerous to bid six hearts, because a lead through the king of diamonds might allow the defenders to score two tricks in the suit if the ace is behind the king. South can describe this holding to his partner by bidding five no trump. If North has the queen of diamonds, he can bid the slam in either the suit or no trump; if he does not have the queen, he has the option of bidding six no trump or taking his chances in six hearts.

Example d) has South holding both the king and queen of diamonds. Should he bid six hearts or six no trump? Since there is a known eight-card trump fit, and since South has a ruffing value in both spades and diamonds, the suit slam should be the safer bet.

South has the ace of diamonds in example e), which means that a grand slam cannot be ruled out — North's hand is unlimited except for the fact that he has no diamond control. South can tell his partner about the ace of diamonds by cue-bidding six diamonds. It is then up to North to decide whether to contract for a grand slam or to be satisfied with six hearts.

As you will see, there is nothing mysterious about the way South responds to his partner's inquiry. Each bid is logical and gives a picture of the holding in the key suit.

Public Forum Set On Hunger Funds

WASHINGTON, N.C. — The Washington, N.C., chapter of Bread for the World, the national Christian citzens' lobbying organization, will hold a public forum Sunday to discuss the impact of federal food program budget cuts on the poor of our area.

The forum was scheduled at the First Methodist Church fellowship hall, 304 W. Second St., Washington, at 9:30 this morning.

"We believe that reductions in federal funds being used for preventive nutrition programs are having a disproportionately negativer impact on the most vulnerable people in our community — poor families, unemployed, elderly people and children,'' BFW spokesperson Mary Beth Kiefer said.

Agencies invited to participate on the panel are the Food Stamp Program; the Women, Infant and Children Program; the School Lunch and School Breakfast programs; the Child Care Food Program; Outreach and the Salvation Army.

Requests Approved

Police Chief Glenn Cannon announced the approval of two requests for solicitation permits in Greenville.

Cannon said the requests were submitted by: Burning Bush Holiness Church to sell barbecue plates Nov. 13 to raise funds to help support the Supreme Gospel Singers; and by the A & T State University Alumni Association to conduct a merchant solicitation Nov. 15 through Dec. 5 to raise funds for the scholarship fund.

The District of Columbia was established at the permanent capital of the United States in 1790.

Noise Control Plan Discussed

The Greenville Environmental Advisory Commission met Thursday and reviewed the proposed noise ordinance being considered by the City Council.

The concept of a more enforceable approach to noise control within the city limits was endorsed by the commission. Mac McCarley, assistant city attorney, explained aspects of the ordinance to those present. The commission recommended that acceptable noise limits for residential areas be lower at all hours than those set for commercial areas. It also suggested a longer application period and a higher fee for special permits to exceed the ordinance.

Dr. Barney Kane, professor of environmental health at East Carolina University, was welcomed as a new member of the commission.

NOTICE OF SALE

By virtue of an order of the Superior Court of Pitt County, North Carolina, and pursuant to the power and terms contained in that certain deed of trust executed by Brenda Joyce Edwards Harris and Stephen R. Burch, Trustee, dated April 19, 1982, recorded in Book U50, page 787, Pitt County Public Registry, default having been made in the payment of the indebtedness secured thereby, I will, as Trustee, on the 13th day of December, 1982, at 12:00 o'clock noon, at the courthouse door in Greenville, North Carolina, sell at public auction to the highest bidder for cash, the following described land, to-wit:

That certain lot or parcel of land lying and being in Grimesland Township, Pitt County, North Carolina, and BEGINNING at a PK nail set in the centerline of N. C. Secondary Road 1768 also known as Bryan Street, said point being located North 58 degrees 30 minutes West 196.74 feet from the point of intersection of the centerlines of N. C. Secondary Road 1768 (Bryan Street) and Mt. Calvert Street; thence from said BEGINNING POINT running South 31 degrees 30 minutes West 180.00 feet through an iron pipe set in the southern right of way line of N. C. Secondary Road 1768 (Bryan Street) to an iron pipe set, cornering; thence running North 58 degrees 30 minutes West 100.00 feet to an iron pipe set, cornering; thence running North 31 degrees 30 minutes East 180.00 feet through an iron pipe set in the southern right of way line of N. C. Secondary Road 1768 (Bryan Street) to a PK nail set in the centerline of N. C. Secondary Road 1768 (Bryan Street), said point being South 58 degrees 30 minutes East 15.00 feet from a PK nail set in the centerline of N.C. Secondary Road 1768 at the centerline intersection of a 30 inch culvert, cornering; thence running along and with the centerline of N. C. Secondary Road 1768 (Bryan Street) 100.00 feet to the POINT OF BEGINNING as set forth on a map entitled "Survey for Brenda J. Harris," Grimesland Township, Pitt County, North Carolina, dated April 27, 1982, by Olsen Associates, Inc., Engineers and Surveyors, Greenville, North Carolina, to which map reference is made for further description.

This property is being sold subject to advalorem taxes.

A ten percent cash deposit will be required of the successful bidder on the day of sale to guarantee compliance with the bid.

Life As It's Lived

By GAIL MICHAELS

Several weeks ago, I saw a television interview with an effeciency expert who has written a book entitled "Is There Life After Housework?" His thesis is that a little preventive maintainance every day will save the person doing the cleaning a lot of time and energy.

Maybe so, but I prefer a more flexible schedule. Like the Soviets, I do everything on a five-year plan.

Five-year plans are wonderful, simply because five years is, in the final analysis, a nebulous period of time. Five years from the outset of any project is long enough to make fudging a real possibility. Deadlines become hazy. If you want to give yourself two or three more months (or years), you can always justify it by telling yourself that you never were any good at remembering dates anyway.

Now for someone like me who is motivated almost solely by guilt, this license to fudge is extremely important. If I give myself two or three weeks to complete a project and then as usual I don't complete it in four weeks or five weeks or six, I begin to be debilitated by guilt. I am painfully aware that the deadline I set for myself has passed. The dread that I'll never do what I set out to do keeps increasing so that eventually I'm overcome by it. I give up. I have to admit that I'm a failure. And naturally, the admission occasions even more guilt.

It's probably obvious by now that I don't g[illegible] much more done on a five-year plan than I do the other way, but I've always considered peace of mind to be far more comforting than a spotless house. Besides, on a five-year plan I never entirely give up on any project. For instance, every five years I think about polishing my silver. My windows, too, are on a five-year schedule. I've never had to wash them yet because we've never been in a house for more than two years, but if I ever do stay in one house for five years, I fully intend to take a swipe at the glass.

The frequent moves have not had quite as much effect on my five-year plan for cleaning the children's rooms because the movers usually move everything more or less intact, and I never seem to have the momentum at that point to make any major adjustments. Instead, every six months or so I tackle a major project in their rooms.

Last week, prompted by a shortlived autumn surge of energy, I cleaned their closets. My spring surge of energy may find me scraping a path beneath their beds. Within five years I will probably have washed the walls once, cleaned out the drawers, disposed of old toys, located the source of the peculiar smell in Zachary's room, and worked my way back to the closets again.

I am particularly fond of six-month intervals because they allow me to get through the real trouble spots, like the kitchen, in less than five years. Even I realize that taking five years to clean a kitchen could conceivably create a health hazard. But at six-month intervals I can take care of the major appliances and the sink and its nether regions before the air becomes unconscionably thick.

I'll concede that preventive maintainance is a more appetizing alternative, but where is the sense of adventure? Where is the thrill of cleaning a wall only to find an entirely different color? Where is that sense of awesome responsibility that comes with the realization that a new life has formed in the refrigerator?

Then again, I could probably live without that.

In The Area

Church Bazaar Set Saturday

The women of the Hollywood Presbyterian Church will hold their annual church bazaar form 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday in the Church Fellowship Hall.

Items being offered in the bazaar include homemade cakes, pies and candies, potted plants, canned and fresh vegetables, pickles, jellies, preserves, a special shop for Christmas shopping, a crafts shop, and used clothing and furniture.

Proceeds from the bazaar will be used in projects being carried out by the Women of the Church.

Hollywood Presbyterian Church is located on N.C. 43, about six miles south of the city limits and a short distance from D.H. Conley High School.

Retired School Personnel To Meet

The Greenville-Pitt County Chapter of Retired School Personnel will meet Wednesday at 11 a.m. at the Greenville Country Club.

Dr. Mallie Penry will speak on gerontology. Jeff McAllister, director, will give information concerning the Council on Aging.

Exercise Class Begins Tuesday

A moderate excercise program for people over 50 years old will begin Tuesday and ends Dec. 21 at Elm Street Center. The class will meet on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 10:15 to 11:15 a.m.

Fee for the class is $2 and registration will be at the first class meeting. For additional information contact Leslie Ball, 752-4137, ext. 246.

Vice Bishop Marks Anniversary

Lewis Chapel Free Will Baptist Church will observe Vice Bishop J.H. Vines' 14th anniversary Thursday through Sunday at the church.

Thursday at 7:30 p.m. the Rev. Stephen Jones of Haddock Chapel FWB Church will be in charge of services. Friday night there will be a regular business meeting. Sunday at 11 a.m. Vines and the church's senior choir will be in charge of the service.

Arthritis Unit Meets Wednesday

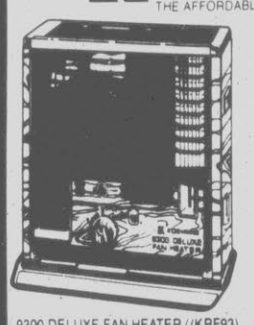

The Pitt County Arthritis Support Group will meet Wednesday at the Rehabilitation Center in the occupational therapy department of Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

The meeting coincides with a chicken supper sponsored by the Greenville Loyal Order of the Moose. Proceeds from the dinner will be donated to the Arthritis Foundation. The cost will be $2.50.

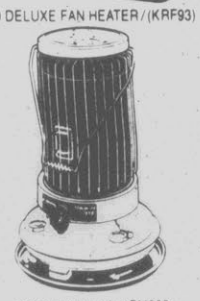

Barbara Hart can be contacted at 756-8705 for reservations by support group members desiring to meet at 6:30 p.m. at the Rehabilitation Center for the supper. The business meeting begins at 7 p.m.

'Blue And Gray' Spans Six Years

"The Blue and The Gray," a three-night, eight-hour CBS miniseries, is "the most ambitious television project the network has ever undertaken."

So says Steve Mills, CBS-TV vice president of motion pictures for television and miniseries, about the blockbuster Civil War drama. It is to be shown on Sunday, Nov. 14 (8-11 p.m.), Tuesday, Nov. 16 (9-11 p.m.), and Wednesday, Nov. 17 (8-11 p.m.).

"The Blue and The Gray" is based on historian Bruce Catton's view of the Civil War. The original TV story was prepared by Catton and John Leekley, who served as editor for the historian's posthumously published book, "Reflections on the Civil War."

The TV script was written by Ian McLellan Hunter. He says, "We're telling a sweeping story, but we're trying to avoid the so-called 'big moments' of history. Even when we show a momentous event, like Appomatox, I looked for the human moments behind it. Rather than show the legendary surrender ceremony between Grant and Lee, we looked for the lesser-known incidents: Lee's farewell to his troops, Grant forgetting to cable news of the treaty to Washington, D.C."

According to the synopsis for "The Blue and The Gray":

"The miniseries covers the tumultuous period of American history from John Brown's trial and hanging in 1859 until just past Abraham Lincoln's death in 1865. The plot focuses on two large, related families: The Geysers of Virginia and the Hales of Pennsylvania...

"The central character who serves as the most prominent link between these two families is John Geyser (John Hammond), a talented young artist who leaves his family farm near Charlottesville, Va., to work as an illustrator on his uncle's newspaper in Gettysburg, Pa. John's first assignment is to cover the trial of abolitionist John Brown.

"There, the young illustrator meets the mysterious Jonas Steele (Stacy Keach), whom John later discovers is a government agent, scout and personal bodyguard to Abraham Lincoln.

"Throughout the next six years, Jonas and John's friendship helps to sustain both men through the war's traumas."

CBS WILL BROADCAST its three-part mini-series "The Blue and The Gray," the sweeping saga of the Civil War, beginning Sunday, Nov. 14 (8-11 p.m.), continuing Tuesday, Nov. 16 (9-11 p.m.) and concluding Wednesday, Nov. 17 (8-11 p.m.).

Gold Stars Earned

To Carol Mayo Jenkins, who plays Miss Sherwood, the English teacher, on "Fame" the series serves a very special purpose aside from its entertainment values.

"'Fame' provides lots of positive role models for underprivileged kids, said Sherwood. It shows them that it's okay to have a dream and to pursue it."

Superman Still Flying High

Christopher Reeve And Margot Kidder

The bullet-fast danger and leaps of astonishing adventure that made Superman America's greatest superhero bound across the television screen when ABC rebroadcasts "Superman" as the ABC Sunday Night Movie, Nov. 14 (8-11:40 p.m.).

Christopher Reeve, who was hurled into international stardom by the same explosion that made shrapnel of the planet Krypton, is starred as the Man of Steel and High Moral Standards. Marlon Brando, Gene Hackman, Margot Kidder, Valerie Perrine and Ned Beatty are also starred in the movie Rex Reed called "an exciting, rollicking, cinematic blockbuster to bring out the child in every age group."

Just before the planet Krypton falls tragically into its own sun, the wondrously wise Jor-El (Brando) makes certain that the wisdom of his planet's ages will not be lost forever by launching his infant son on a journey to the planet Earth (the American midwest, as it turns out.) The infant, adopted by the grassroots American Kent family, grows up to be the All-American Boy times infinity, doing everything right, for the right reasons, and doing everything considerably better than any normal boy should. (It has something to do with his dense molecular structure, and the fatherly knowledge that Jor-El programmed into the computers that educated him in his space-module flight.)

In young manhood, Clark Kent — for such is his adopted name — leaves home for a strange psychic journey of the mind, traveling from the Arctic North through the universe on a 12-year trip under Jor-El's spiritual guidance. Now prepared to meet his destiny — and get a job — the young man winds up as a goodhearted if tiresomely mild-mannered reporter on the Daily Planet newspaper in Metropolis.

Reporting the news, in these pre-Watergate days, is not all-consuming. When troubles befall the citizens of Metropolis — especially the smart-aleck though gorgeous Lois Lane (Miss Kidder) — Clark Kent sheds his conservative business suit to reappear in the dashing blue cape of Superman, flying through the air, bopping bad people on the head, helping the helpless and aiding the addled.

This does not, of course, make him universally well-liked. Lex Luthor (Hackman) doesn't like him at all. That's because Lex Luthor is a villain with no saving graces, planning to blow the state of California into the sea. With the aid of two co-conspirators (Miss Perrine and Beatty), Luthor puts Superman out of action with a deadly hunk of kryptonite which has also fallen to Earth. Superman is a — literal — pushover for kryptonite.

Lex Luthor is doing okay. California is not. The state is about to split in two. And Lois Lane is about to be buried in the split. Superman is too late. There is no possible solution.

MICHAEL CAINE STARS as a psychiatrist and Nancy Allen portrays a call girl — both of whom attract police attention during the investigation of a series of brutal deaths — in "Dressed to Kill," airing on NBC Monday Night at the Movies, Nov. 15 (9-11 p.m.).

Killer Tracks Murder Witness

A high-class call girl is hunted by a razor-wielding, psychotic killer after she witnesses a murder, in "Dressed to Kill," airing on NBC Monday Night at the Movies, Nov. 15 (9-11 p.m.). The film was originally released theatrically in 1980.

In the spine-tingling drama, Michael Caine plays Dr. Robert Elliott, a New York psychiatrist whose practice is scrutinized after a former patient becomes a prime suspect in a series of wanton slayings in the city. While the police attempt to pinpoint a pattern in the attacks, Elliott continues his practice, focusing on the problems of Kate Miller (Angie Dickinson), a suburban housewife plagued by recurring romantic fantasies.

When the killer strikes again, this time attacking Mrs. Miller in an elevator, call girl Liz Blake (Nancy Allen) catches a glimpse of the fleeing assailant. While Blake attempts to cooperate with authorities — after threats from police officials — she grows increasingly concerned that the slayer may have targeted her as the next victim.

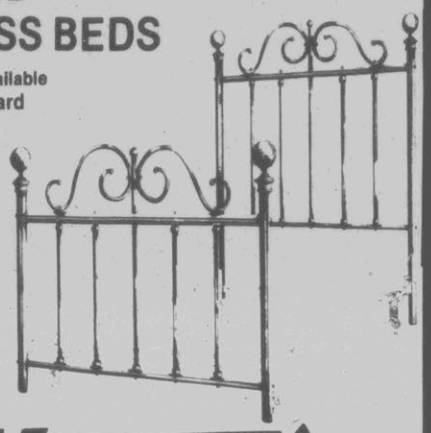

As she faces the twin threats of heavy-handed police tactics by detectives aware of her career and suspicion that she might be stalked by a psychotic killer, Blake finds some solace when she meets Peter (Keith Gordon), Kate's son. The lad seems as determined to find the killer as Blake is to avoid the assailant.

"Dressed to Kill" was written and directed by Brian De Palma. The film also stars Dennis Franz as Detective Marino, David Margulies as Dr. Levy, and Ken Baker as Warren Lockman.

Michele Will Tell

DEAR MICHELE: Can you please tell me how long George Brett has been with the Kansas City Royals? Also, where can I write to them? SUZANNE MIZELL, FAYETTEVILLE, N.C.

TO SUZANNE IN FAYETTEVILLE: George has just completed his 8th season with the Royals, having become their regular third baseman in May of 1974. Write to the Kansas City Royals, Box 1969, Kansas City, Missouri, 64141.

DEAR MICHELE: Could you please tell us who played in the original "Johnny Belinda"? Also, in what year was the movie made? We saw the new version on TV starring Richard Thomas and enjoyed it very much. L. SCHELLER, GREENVILLE, N.C.

TO L. SCHELLER IN GREENVILLE: The original Johnny Belinda was filmed in 1948, starring the current matriarch of "Falcon Crest," Jane Wyman, as the deaf-mute girl, and Lew Ayres as the doctor who worked with her.

DEAR MICHELE: What's with Tom Snyder? I thought he had something better coming up...I'll take him over David Letterman anytime! A. GOINES, MORGANTON, N.C.

TO A. GOINES IN MORGANTON: You appear to be in the minority — it looks like viewers and NBC executives are very happy with the job Letterman is doing on 'Late Night.' — Snyder is serving as an anchorman on WABC-TV News in New York, replacing Ernie Anestos, which has resulted in a wide "SAVE ERNIE" campaign.

DEAR MICHELE: I understand that some of the actors on "M*A*S*H" are leaving the series. Could you please tell me who they are? Also, I have heard thousands of rumors that Billy Carter will be playing a key role in the new series. Is this a fact or just a rumor? LES HIPENBACKER, FORT BRAGG, N.C.

TO LES IN FORT BRAGG: As you know by now, the Carter rumor was just that — a rumor. Get ready for an even bigger shock — there will be a two-hour segment scheduled for mid-season, culminating with the end of the Korean War, the MASH unit and all its stars.

(FOR ANSWERS TO YOUR QUESTIONS ABOUT TV SHOWS AND PERSONALITIES, WRITE TO 'MICHELE,' c/o The Greenville Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 30, Hopewell, Va. 23860.)

Theme Park Gave Start To Topper

The acting career of young Tim Topper, who plays Evan, the fifth McFadden, in "Seven Brides for Seven Brothers," seen on CBS-TV, Wednesday, (8-9 p.m.), has developed swiftly. This is due to good timing and his training in theme park shows.

It was less than six years ago that the Marriottville, Md., farm boy sold his favorite Morgan horse, Gypsy, to buy a car and go to college to pursue a degree in business administration.

He also took theatre arts courses at Towson (Maryland) State College. The agile Topper became such a proficient dancer that by the summer of 1978 he got his first professional job in the show at Busch Gardens in Williamsburg, Virginia.

"Energy is the key to those shows," he says. "You literally go into the audience. You are not performing for sophisticated theatergoers, but regular people who go to those parks to have an all-around good time.

"The shows are somewhat loose. People do their own thing yet work together. Six shows a day! You have to keep lively and smiling. Because you are in direct contact with your audience you get quick feedback. You can tell when you're losing them and the only way to get them back is with energy. And it works, infectiously."

With mime, clog dancing, singing and a lot of personal pizzazz, the youth was voted Entertainer of the Year at Busch Gardens.

The next summer he performed at Opryland, U.S.A., in Nashville, Tenn., earning an offer to become a featured star at Disneyworld in Orlando, Florida. But after graduation from college, Tim went to New York.

He got a part-time job as an usher at Radio City Music Hall, then decided to try out for a role in "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas."

"Talk about a cattle call," he recalls. "It was wide open and 2000 guys responded. It was nerve-wracking and tiring. I was called back four days in a row. Imagine — 2000 struggling for 22 dance assignments and one featured role. But my theme park training made me realize I had to keep up my energy level. Those six shows a day paid off and I got the part of Leroy Sliney."

After filming in Texas, he went to Hollywood to complete the film.

The Sargent's Diet

Michael Conrad, who won his second consecutive Emmy for his role of Sgt. Phil Esterhaus in "Hill Street Blues" remembers his sentiments when he picked up this year's statuette.

"I felt uncomfortable and embarrassed, but nonetheless pleased," said Conrad, who normally eschews the spotlight. "I have many, many different feelings. I know that the wonderful performances don't win many times. I just try to take it with a grain of salt."

Barton's Future Is Gravy

"I'm exactly where I wanted to be when I set out on this journey. I wanted my own apartment. I wanted to be financially comfortable, and I wanted freedom. Anything that happens next is all gravy."

At an age when most people are just starting to think about career goals, Peter Barton, star of NBC-TV's new series "The Powers of Matthew Star" (Fridays, 8-9 p.m.), has begun a second successful career.

After modeling in New York, Barton moved to Hollywood to try acting. In his 20s, he has already starred in a motion picture and two television series. Success at such a young age is sweet, but it also has its drawbacks.

"When people, strangers, constantly tell you you're special, you're wonderful, you begin to buy it," says Barton. "During my first series, 'Shirley,' I bought it — not that I was something special or 'cute' but I let them love me. How can you refuse all that love?"

When the series ended, Barton suddenly found the cheering had stopped.

"I had withdrawal symptoms. I was going on auditions, looking for work, and I felt miserable. I thought seriously about quitting the business and going back to New York."

But then he won the lead in "The Powers of Matthew Star." While filming the first episode of his new series, Barton fell on an exploding flare, suffering 3rd degree burns on his legs and back. The series was delayed a year while Barton recuperated.

"I'm a perfectionist and very goal oriented, but after the accident, I learned to put things in perspective.

"I used to drive myself crazy when I'd see something on screen that I thought was just OK. But now I can step back and realize I'm learning this business of acting — I know a lot more than I did last year, and next year I'll know more than I do today."

Barton's newfound realistic attitude has allowed him to relax on the set.

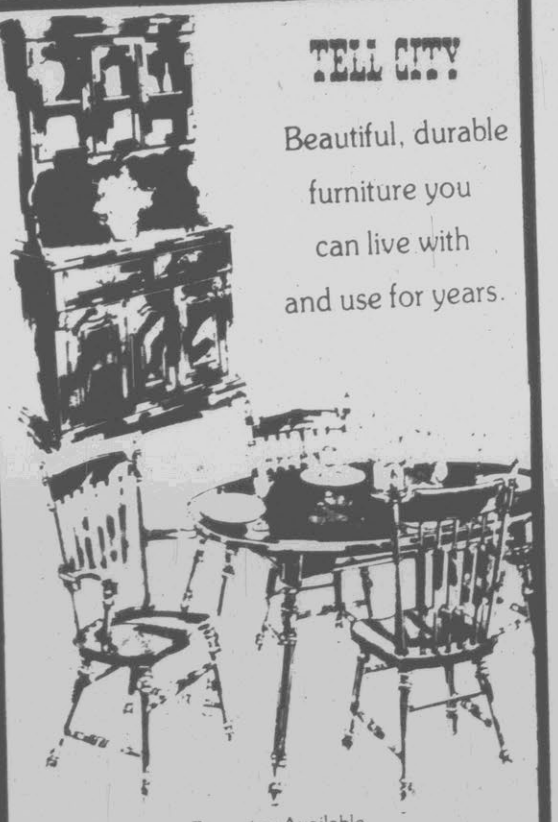

Attitude Change

Shelley Long, who spins 180 degrees from her role as a hooker in the movie "Night Shift" to that of a well-bred graduate student and cocktail waitress in "Cheers," says a recent change in attitude has enabled her to expand her range of characters.

"I used to be afraid to play anything less than a brilliant, ambitious, articulate woman, because I wanted women always to be regarded that way," said Long. "I lost sight of the fact that some of women's greatest strengths are their feelings, intuition, softness and warmth. So for the future, I'm even capable of playing dumb blondes, who sometimes know more about life than women who are locked into their heads."

Hartley In Role

Mariette Hartley has been set to star in "Crying For Cari: The Candy Lightner Story," a two-hour TV film for NBC-TV.

Hartley will play Lightner, in the true story about the femme who formed MADD (Mothers Against Drunk Drivers) when her 13-year-old twin daughter Cari was killed by a drunk driver. California Legislature last year adopted the MADD bill against drunk drivers.

David Celebrates

David Susskind will celebrate 25 years on TV with "The David Susskind Anniversary Special" which will be syndicated nationally through November. Susskind's wife, Joyce, will take on the role of interviewer, with Susskind himself as the sole guest.

'SportsWorld' Hits 200

When NBC introduced a brand new sports anthology show in 1978 with the 1980 Olympics in mind, no one realized the network had a resilient audience attraction that would flourish long after the Summer Games were over.

The show, dubbed "SportsWorld" by then-executive producer Don Ohlmeyer, was geared toward previewing Olympic heroes-to-be and refining production expertise. NBC promotional ads declared that "The 1980 Olympics don't begin in Moscow. They just end there." Coordinating producer Linda Jonsson remembers, "Most people really felt that once Moscow was over, 'SportsWorld' would cease to exist."

Yet, in the face of the United States Olympic boycott and heavy competition from more established weekend sports series on the rival networks, "SportsWorld" not only survived, but thrived. Now, almost five years after its inception, the series has celebrated its 200th show, firm in the belief that more excitement and recognition are ahead.

The most widely recognized measure of achievement, of course, is ratings, and "SportsWorld" has experienced growth every year. Significantly, the highest percentage of ratings growth came in 1981, the year after the 1980 Olympics, demonstrating that the program transcended the event which had inspired its creation. Since 1978, the show has increased its share of households by 30 percent.

Through the years, the program has presented everything from the prestigious Millrose Games in Madison Square Garden to the World Bellyflop and Cannonball Diving Championships from Vancouver, British Columbia.

"I think we've provided a certain fascination for people," assessed Jonsson. "We're not locked into any programming boundaries. We can afford to have more fun with what we do."

One of the "fun" times came in 1978 when "SportsWorld" covered Diana Nyad's attempt to swim from Cuba to Key West, Fla. Her effort was aborted after two days and the show's production crew found itself aboard a sinking boat in the Gulf of Mexico. They had to be rescued by a Cuban military vessel and were separated from all their gear so that many ended up wearing the same clothes for three days while things were being straightened out.

Also early in that first year, when Jonsson was a production assistant, a "SportsWorld" crew went abroad to do its first remote in Parma, Italy. Just minutes before they were to start filming the World Go-Kart Championships, the Italian union cameramen assigned to NBC's crew went on an extended strike and "SportsWorld" returned with a feature on a cheese factory and a hefty production bill.

TV Chatter

By Polly Vonetes

Dear Readers, last week in this column I described Abraham Lincoln's eyes as hazel or brown, the truth is – I had conflicting reports and even after checking the local library they were described as "gray with flecks of hazel or brown." But now I can report to you his description in his own words from his autobiography written Dec. 20, 1859. "I am in height, six feet, four inches, nearly; lean in flesh, weighing an average of one hundred and eighty pounds; dark complexion, with coarse black hair and gray eyes."

The American Academy of Dramatic Arts has set up a $150,000 scholarship in the memory of PRINCESS GRACE of Monaco. Her death along with the sudden death of FERNANDO LAMAS has really made this a tragic year for Hollywood.

LORENZO LAMAS, however, is finding consolation dating his "Falcon Crest" co-star ANA ALICIA, who plays his wife on the series. Oddly enough the current storyline on "Falcon Crest" has been dealing with the death of Ana's father and its effect on her and Lorenzo.

The tv movie rights to "Lana: the Lady, the Legend, the Truth," authored by LANA TURNER has been purchased by Warner Bros. Now, the big question is how do you "get it all" on the home movie screen?

ELIZABETH TAYLOR, on the other hand, has the admiration of all her peers for having the courage to file a lawsuit against American Broadcasting Co. and David Paradine Television prohibiting them from producing a fictitious docu-drama based on her life charging it as an "invasion of her privacy."

Do you think movie stars are snobbish? — T.P., Lynchburg, Va.

They only seem that way when you don't know them. After you've worked with a star or two, you realize they're just people. You end up sitting around talking casually with them, and that kind of takes away all the glamour. I suppose the exception to the rule is James Garner — whom I still consider glamorous.

Is it true that it's best to have your nose fixed when you're young? — G.K., Biloxi, Miss.

The ideal time for rhinoplasty, a "nose job," is when you're between the ages of 17 and 25. That's when you'll heal quickest. It is also important, however, that you have reached full growth before surgery, so that the new nose will match your adult features.

Are you related to Farrah? — P.E., Hobbs, N.M.

No, but Lee Majors once told me that we were alike. I said to him on a recent TV show, "I'm Alien Fawcett — no relation to Farrah." Lee replied: "I don't know about that. You're blond, aren't you?" Later on, after I'd sung, Lee changed his mind, saying, "You're right. You can't be related. You and she sing in different keys."

Do you believe that successful women pose a threat to men who are less successful? — G.D., Plainview, Texas

Both males and females who are successful can be threatening to those who are less successful. Much depends on how you handle success. The key to preventing feelings of resentment is to remain humble and gracious about your achievements. A woman who wears her success like a barbed-wire jacket, armed to injure her mate, is a fool. A man who's content with his own job, and who loves his mate, will want her to be successful.

COVER STORY

The New Sensitive Male

Illustration by Dick Hess

Is He Too Good To Be True?

By Shere Hite

There is a lot of talk today about men being more "sensitive" than they used to be. We hear of men helping out in the kitchen and around the house, we see male movie stars crying on screen. One of the most popular TV characters today is Magnum, P.I., a man who's tough on crooks but gentle with women.

Who are these new sensitive men and how many are there? Is the word sensitive supposed to mean the opposite of macho? Does it mean sensitive to women's needs — or just sensitive to the world in general? Are these new sensitive men what the women's movement has been asking for? Have men really changed?

It is my belief that few men have changed yet, but — surprisingly — many are thinking about it. Most men today are in conflict concerning their lives, wrestling inwardly with how to define themselves, questioning who they are, who they want to be, how they "ought" to behave, what their relationships with women should be like, how to make these relationships work — and wondering why, even after performing successfully as men, life isn't all it was promised to be. Being "manly" has proved to be no guarantee of happiness.

Many men feel caught in an unfair trap. They feel an urge to be more sensitive to women's needs, yet it runs against everything they've learned growing up.

To be brought up as a male in our society is to be systematically taught to deny, mistrust and suppress feelings, to be always rational, strong and competitive. In other words, to be — or at least appear to be — insensitive. One young man who participated in one of my studies described this experience in shocking detail: "I used to go hunting with my dad during my boyhood. I gave up hunting after an incident in which my dad and I were duck hunting in a boat with some other men. I had just brought down a duck and we paddled the boat over to pick it up. As we reached it, I was astonished and delighted to find it still alive and looking well. It seemed so cute and attractive — I envisioned taking it home with me, nursing it back to health and keeping it for a pet. One of the men picked it up and proceeded to beat its brains out over the side of the boat." Other men have described to me how, whenever they became "too emotional" as boys, they were told: "shape up," "be a man," "don't be a sissy."

Much of a young boy's concept of masculinity is based on how the father presents himself to the son and what role the father takes in the family. Most fathers feel they must appear to be a rock of strength, capable of handling anything, never shaken by fear or emotion, never uncertain or in doubt and always able to provide for the family. The result is that their relationships with their sons are often very distant. Explained one man, now 40: "All the years I was growing up, my father was always working, even until late at night and on weekends. I almost never saw him; he was busy providing material things for us. Today we still have no relationship. I wonder if I shouldn't feel more for him than I do — I don't feel much, except anger." And another, in his 20's, wrote: "We used to go crabbing together when I was in my early teens, but we never talked much when we went. Even today I have a hard time talking to him — we're just not on an open, talking basis. My father keeps a lot to himself — he is a loner in his own family. . . ." And a third: "The only time I remember him talking to me is when he yelled at me for something."

Knowing their fathers from such a distance, seeing them so reserved and unemotional, so rarely passionate or "overly" affectionate, most boys grow up believing that it is not masculine to communicate openly or spontaneously about their feelings. In an amazing revelation, one man (in his 40's) put it this way: "I have always kept my emotions to myself and been raised to believe that feelings are to be mastered and controlled, and I can do it. That is the area where I have contempt for people who can't do as I do."

This early training affects a man's entire personality and carries over into his relationships with women — and other men as well. One man in his 50's talked about his relationship with his wife: "I'm just learning how to communicate my feelings — and how to feel comfortable listening to others express theirs. It's something few of us men were taught to do. . . ." A 22-year-old man explained how this early training had affected his feelings for other men: "If I'm building or working on my car, etc., it is very easy to talk to men, but I have found it difficult to talk about feelings and problems. I don't know why. Do I see them as somehow 'threatening'? Am I afraid they will belittle me and my 'softness'? Do they want to talk, but can't either?"

Said one man, "My father taught me that women are traps and burdens, but the best that can be had for overcoming loneliness."

Another message boys often receive from their fathers is that it's necessary to look down on women, treat them as second class (even though usually men are also taught to "respect" their mothers) — and this too affects their relationships with women later in life.

Shere Hite is author-researcher of the recently released, new and revised paperback edition of The Hite Report on Male Sexuality (Ballantine Books).

"The model my father presented was one of Prussian arrogance," a 29-year-old man wrote to me. "In his relations with women (mainly my mother), it was clear that they were to be always beneath him." Said another, age 34, "Father never said much, but his example was to let women wait on him hand and foot, then belittle them in front of other people." And another: "My father taught me that women are traps and burdens, but the best that can be had for overcoming loneliness."

Traditionally, men have also been taught not to take love that seriously either — not to "let a woman run your life," or "let love have free reign in your life." But most men do fall in love and experience all the feelings of ecstasy and abandon, all the happiness that goes with it — for at least a little while. Then many men become confused and apprehensive. Having been brought up not to let themselves ever be out of control or overly emotional, they mistrust the excitement, the rush. Any irrational feeling is viewed as not masculine, not strong.

Wrote one man in his 20's: "To be in love is to be uncomfortable because you are out of control, you do things you wouldn't normally do. A woman is more willing to be dependent, or feel as if she is part of another person, than a man — who wants to keep a separation, keep himself for himself, who fears losing his independence. Of course, one does sometimes start to fall in love, but you can always stop it before it's too late. It will be nice in the future if they invent a pill to neutralize yourself if you fall in love — to alleviate your disease!"

These attitudes toward women foster the traditional male-dominant marriage, which is still widely prevalent among men of all ages despite lip service in favor of more sharing of housework and child care, etc. As one man put it, "I've been married eight years. I enjoy all the 'benefits' of marriage, i.e., good food, clean house, clothes, etc., as well as having a child around. Sex, too. Marriage simplifies living by having most of one's needs met in one single institution."

In my research, most men who saw marriage in a traditional way (in terms of rigidly defined male and female roles) also had sex outside of their marriages (unknown to their wives) and rarely voiced any guilt about it. Usually these men saw their infidelity as a kind of biological inevitability, a male necessity — that is, they believed that men are biologically programmed to go from "blossom to blossom" spreading their "pollen" — rather than as a reaction to circumstances of their lives or their own choices. As one man in his 40's put it, "There is a bit of 'tomcat' in me. I still believe in the family unit that our society calls for, but I do like a casual sexual relationship. A woman can never completely domesticate a man." Men with this viewpoint objected strongly to the idea that their wives might behave in the same manner.

What do these male rules do to the man who believes them and lives by them? Is he content or does he sometimes feel frustration or sadness because he is unable to relate fully to another human being? My findings indicate that those men who most accept traditional stereotypes of masculinity are those who are most unhappy with their lives. Never mind for the moment how these attitudes may hurt women. Trying to live by this male code hurts and stunts men. There is a built-in contradiction between the so-called male life style and human closeness. Men today are faced with the rather formidable choice of either continuing to live their lives as in the past — constantly having to suppress and deny their own needs and feelings (and suffering the physical and psychological repercussions) — or creating something new.

Some men — a minority, to be sure, but nonetheless men of all ages and not just younger men — are beginning to see women, love and marriage in a new way. They are searching for experiences that will allow them to grow and for relationships that will inspire and help them, rather than entrap them.

These men are beginning to realize the beneficial effects of being sensitive to a woman's needs, of putting more equality into their relationships: Explained one man, married many years, "My wife and I have gained a new respect for each other as a direct result of my understanding of how expecting her to still be responsible for all the household upkeep, entertaining, etc., in addition to a full-time job, is unfair. Since I have begun taking as much responsibility for it myself — and it's hard, I have never done it in my life before — she seems to have opened up to me more, to like me more, and we have more fun together! We're more of a team." Said another, "Basically I was trained to 'take care of' a family, to be head of a family and to provide for my wife and children's physical needs. Now I am working at learning how to care for others, to show my caring in small ways, to listen to them and share myself with them. I still think it's important for me to support them, but I certainly would listen if my wife decided she wanted to talk about working, too, or how she felt about my earning all the money. Funny, but before the last few years, we had never discussed it. I have found it hard to believe that small things I do could matter as much to my wife as my supporting her and our home. It makes me feel more human. More loved."

These men are finally breaking out of attitudes about the way men should behave. "A few years ago, I was having affairs on my wife right and left," one man revealed. "I felt guilty and didn't know why I was doing it — I just

An original sculpture in fine, hand-painted porcelain . . .

The Tiger Swallowtail

by Ian D. Loe

A distinguished artist creates a butterfly sculpture of rare beauty.

Life-size—in a natural setting—and in a single, limited edition, at the very attractive price of $120.

Butterflies . . . children of the rainbow . . . are, without a doubt, the most beautiful and most graceful of all living creatures. And of all the different kinds of butterflies that roam the world, none is more extravagantly lovely than the Tiger Swallowtail.

Now, the beauty and the charm of this entrancing butterfly have been captured in a spectacular new and original work of art, executed in a medium that is greatly treasured by collectors—fine, hand-painted porcelain.

This is the work of Ian D. Loe, an artist whose outstanding paintings and drawings of butterflies have won him an international reputation. Loe has portrayed the Tiger Swallowtail, the most familiar of all American butterflies, in a natural setting—resting gracefully upon a sprig of dogwood. The saffron yellow of its wings, with their black velvety stripes, hints of blue, and scalloped crescents of yellow and orange . . . the delicate antennae . . . even the eyes, so tiny yet so bright . . . all are depicted with precise realism, in authentic natural color.

The Tiger Swallowtail will be sculptured life-size in this delightful work of art, and will be produced exclusively for Franklin Porcelain. And this imported work will be issued at the modest price of $120—which may be paid in three convenient equal monthly installments.

In the tradition of classic works in fine porcelain, The Tiger Swallowtail will be made available in a single, limited edition, reserved exclusively for those who place orders before the end of 1983.

Here is a work that will provide a fascinating focal point of beauty for your home. And will become a treasured heirloom in your family, to be passed along with pride for generations. To reserve it, please be sure that your Reservation Application is postmarked by December 31, 1982.

Sculpture shown smaller than life-size. Actual size: approximately 3½" wide by 6⅜" deep by 3¼" high.

OUR PROMISE TO YOU—
We at Franklin Porcelain take pride in our high standards of craftsmanship. But we believe that our efforts should also be judged by the people we serve. Any work acquired from us may be returned for any reason within thirty days for your choice of replacement or a full refund.

thought I was 'male' and that's how we men are. Thought I needed variety. Now I realize our marriage was not good before I was unfaithful. I just did not realize it then. I did not connect the stresses and strains in our relationship — how we both felt tied down, especially by the kids, and blamed each other for it — with my 'desire' for other women. I did not see it as a form of hostility toward my wife — I thought it was just my 'sex drive.' I see things differently now. We have changed our marriage a lot for the better and are much happier."

Before a man can become sensitive to a woman's needs, though, he must become sensitive to his own needs and feelings. He must unlearn some of the rules of being a man. One person who did just that tells his story: "I guess I had built up feelings of resentment and anger at her all along, from way back in the beginning of the relationship. There were things she did that made me mad, that I never told her about, etc. But even more, I think I resented her for the feeling I had of being 'tied down' — even though I wanted to get married very much. All the negative parts of my life could be blamed on the marriage. But at the same time, I felt unfree, I was afraid to leave the security of marriage and get divorced. This dependency made me even angrier, as I didn't like the cowardly picture it presented. One solution to all this was to have affairs — escaping, but not escaping. . . .

"Finally, of course, all this blew up in my face. As my wife felt that I wasn't all there with her, she became more and more distant, she wanted sex less often (in some ways I was relieved), and our resentment and hostility against each other solidified until it became a wall between us. My increasing anger and frustration, even desperation (I was feeling so egoless, so bad about myself), led me to the point where I became less and less careful about hiding my affairs, and my wife confronted me with it. We separated. That was eight years ago. Two years ago, after a lot of thinking and talking with each other, we got back together, this time much happier. This time I appreciate and enjoy being married. I see it as a chance for growth together with another person, a free (even though monogamous this time) situation which gives me a broader context for my life. I am more honest. When I am angry (or I notice she is), we talk about it. We have a good thing going. I notice, too, that our really good sex seems to follow times of talking or sharing time together, especially when we divulge our secrets and dreams to one another. I am just getting to know my wife — I never did before — and she is great!"

Few men have changed yet, but many men are very uncomfortable with things the way they are and are looking for something better. As one man described his thoughts on being male: "Men are trained at an early age to disregard any and every emotion and be strong! You take someone like that and then wonder why they don't express feelings. Not only that, they are supposed to be a cross between John Wayne, the Chase Manhattan Bank and Hugh Hefner. We are only

Observations

Getting leaner. A record 70 million Americans–almost half the adult population–are now working out, slimming down, and building up fitness. Twenty-six million of them are joggers, piling up 13.5 billion miles last year, five times the distance from Earth to Pluto. At least 13 million other body builders are fighting the battle of the bulge in about 5,000 health clubs. And now American industry, grown a bit fat and sloppy while foreign competitors were getting lean and hard, has caught the fitness bug.

Saving grace. As a company, Mobil's dedicated to the growing national effort to modernize factories and improve products. Our synthetic lubricants, for example, are helping jet aircraft and Detroit's new cars to reduce fuel consumption. Using Mobil 1® in those smaller, lighter cars, some of which have built-in microcomputers to monitor fuel use, can add up to millions of gallons of gasoline saved each year.

"He gave up the limo, but kept the chauffeur."

Waste watchers. Factories, too, are operating with less and less energy waste. At Mobil's Container Corporation of America subsidiary, a two-year-old "WasteWatcher" program has saved nearly 3 million gallons of fuel oil. We slimmed down waste in trimming paperboard rolls used to make boxes, and reduced the number of containers damaged during production. We're also converting two paper mills from oil to less expensive coal. That alone will save more than 75 million gallons of fuel oil a year–and high air quality standards are being maintained by advanced anti-pollution technology.

Hefty efforts. One energy expert estimates that industry could recover up to $40 billion each year from waste heat that goes up the chimney. That's no surprise to us; we're already recovering waste heat at our refineries through more efficient equipment and improved maintenance and operating procedures, saving the equivalent of 18 million gallons of crude oil in 1981, compared with 1980. In our chemical business, we're saving substantial energy by applying new energy-efficient technology to the manufacture of ethylene, a basic building block for plastic products like our Hefty® bags. These and other energy-conservation exercises by American industry are good news: not only holding down costs to make U.S. goods more competitive, but also preserving more energy for tomorrow... when we'll really need it.

It's a fact: America's 10 largest energy-consuming industries used the equivalent of 1.2 million barrels of crude oil a day less in 1981, than was used daily in 1972, according to the Department of Energy.

But if most men are not happy with their lives at present, why don't most of them change? And why isn't change happening more quickly? Some men are held back because they're afraid that seeing women as equals and allowing feelings to have a more important part in their lives will make them seem feminine. Others fear that to change they will have to repudiate all the old ideas of strength and power, of being in control and getting things done.

But this is not true: Women don't want men to be one-sided. The idea is that both men and women should have the right to have strong and powerful sides. At the same time each should also have the right to be vulnerable at times and in need of help.

As one man pointed out, equality in a relationship between a man and a woman need not mean that the man has to be less strong: "I used to be frightened about the idea of women being assertive but have lost this fear and, indeed, rather like it. The fear in my case (and I suspect for many other men) arose because I saw the issue in terms of domination. Either I had to dominate her, or she would dominate me — and I would have to feel submissive and wormlike. But not dominating a woman does not mean being weak and spineless! Nor does it always mean being 'gentle.' It just means giving her an equal right to be assertive, maybe taking turns being 'dominant.' I don't think women want a man to be 'weak' so they can be 'strong' — I think they just don't want to be oppressed . . . . We've worked it out now so that the important thing is we both say what is on our minds and both give each other the right to do what we think best. I don't try to control her anymore, and I'm just as strong and forceful as I ever was."

Men are also held back from changing because they are afraid of what other men will think of them. They fear that those men who have not changed (and this might mean their employers) will no longer respect and associate with them if they do not stick to the old masculine mold. One man, age 27, talked about his job as an electrician on a construction site: "On the job, when a woman passes by the men stop working and stare at her, aware that the others are doing the same thing, and will nod to each other if she is sexy or make a face if they don't think she is. If you don't have a comment to support the group's opinion, you are considered a real jerk. To keep your job, you must deal with this horrible social system."

To change takes courage, plus a realization that the reason for change is not simply "to try to please women." Men must begin to see how their own happiness and their own peace of mind as individuals is going to be affected. Each man must, of course, forge ahead on his own, finding his own solution. Because there is no charted route.

To be sensitive is intimately tied up with the ability to be loving — loving not merely by providing a family with food and shelter, but by opening up about feelings, taking the risk of being different and needing someone. Most men's ability to be loving in ways that make them vulnerable has been stifled by the culture's demands for strict adherence to the "male" code; only during sex are men supposed to be out of control. But adherence to this attitude cuts off men's ability to feel fully alive.

To be more "sensitive," men have to fight against their entire upbringing and against how the world in general reinforces traditional male behavior. Power — or the elusive attempt to get it — is not sufficient compensation for the lack of closeness in a marriage or relationship with a woman or relationships with other men. Nor is it compensation for that lonely feeling a man can have when he cannot reach out to others and thus cannot let anyone in either.

For a man to be more sensitive, he must become more in touch with his own deep needs and motivations. He must be more honest with himself. He must search out what might be getting in the way of his being aware of himself on these levels. This will make it easier for him to meet the needs of others and not fear what those needs reveal. Men cannot be honest in their relationships with others if they cannot be honest with themselves. If they reach back to their buried needs, this will be an enormous step. As one put it, "As men, we have to move downward, make a journey inward, learn to refeel some feelings and do some hard thinking about why we live the way we do. I hope this happens. We need more love." FW

BEHAVIOR

PARENT TANTRUMS: WHEN YOU ACT LIKE A KID

By Judsen Culbreth

It was what the Beatles would have called a hard day's night. My husband was tied up at the office and, after my own hectic day at work, I had to face our 2-year-old daughter — alone.

She didn't want to read Babar and His Family. She did want to read Babar at Home — the book we'd left at nursery school. She didn't want dinner. She did want cookies. She didn't want a bath, then she didn't want to get out of the bath. She didn't want to play with her dishes. She did want to help Mommy do real dishes. When she poured a pot of water on the floor, I wanted bedtime. After the diaper skirmish, the pajama battle, the all-out toothbrushing war, I thought I had her subdued. "Please give Mommy a kiss good night," I asked sweetly. She socked me in the eye.

"That's it!" I screamed. "I am sick, sick, SICK of you! Leave me alone!" I shouted, as I slammed the door and left her clutching her blanket tearfully.

The next day I called my sister, a two-child veteran. "I'm a terrible mother," I wailed, repeating my story.

"I wouldn't worry about it," she reassured me. "You just had a parent tantrum. It happens to all of us."

Why do sensible adults, who love their children and want to do their best by them, sometimes feel so angry at those very same children?

"Anger is a normal response to difficult behavior," says child psychiatrist Dr. Nina Lief, director of the Early Childhood Development Center of the New York Medical College and author of The First Year of Life and The Second Year of Life (Sadlier Press).

However, as understandable as those feelings may be, adds Dr. Lief, it's up to the parent to express them appropriately. "A parent's tantrum doesn't teach the child anything worthwhile. Furthermore, it only makes the parent feel guilty."

The key to breaking a cycle of anger is to develop empathy. The more understanding you develop, the more likely your child is to respond rationally. According to one study, it is the aggressive parental response that leads the child to more disobedience and the parent to even harsher discipline, while a warmer and more gentle response actually produces better behavior.

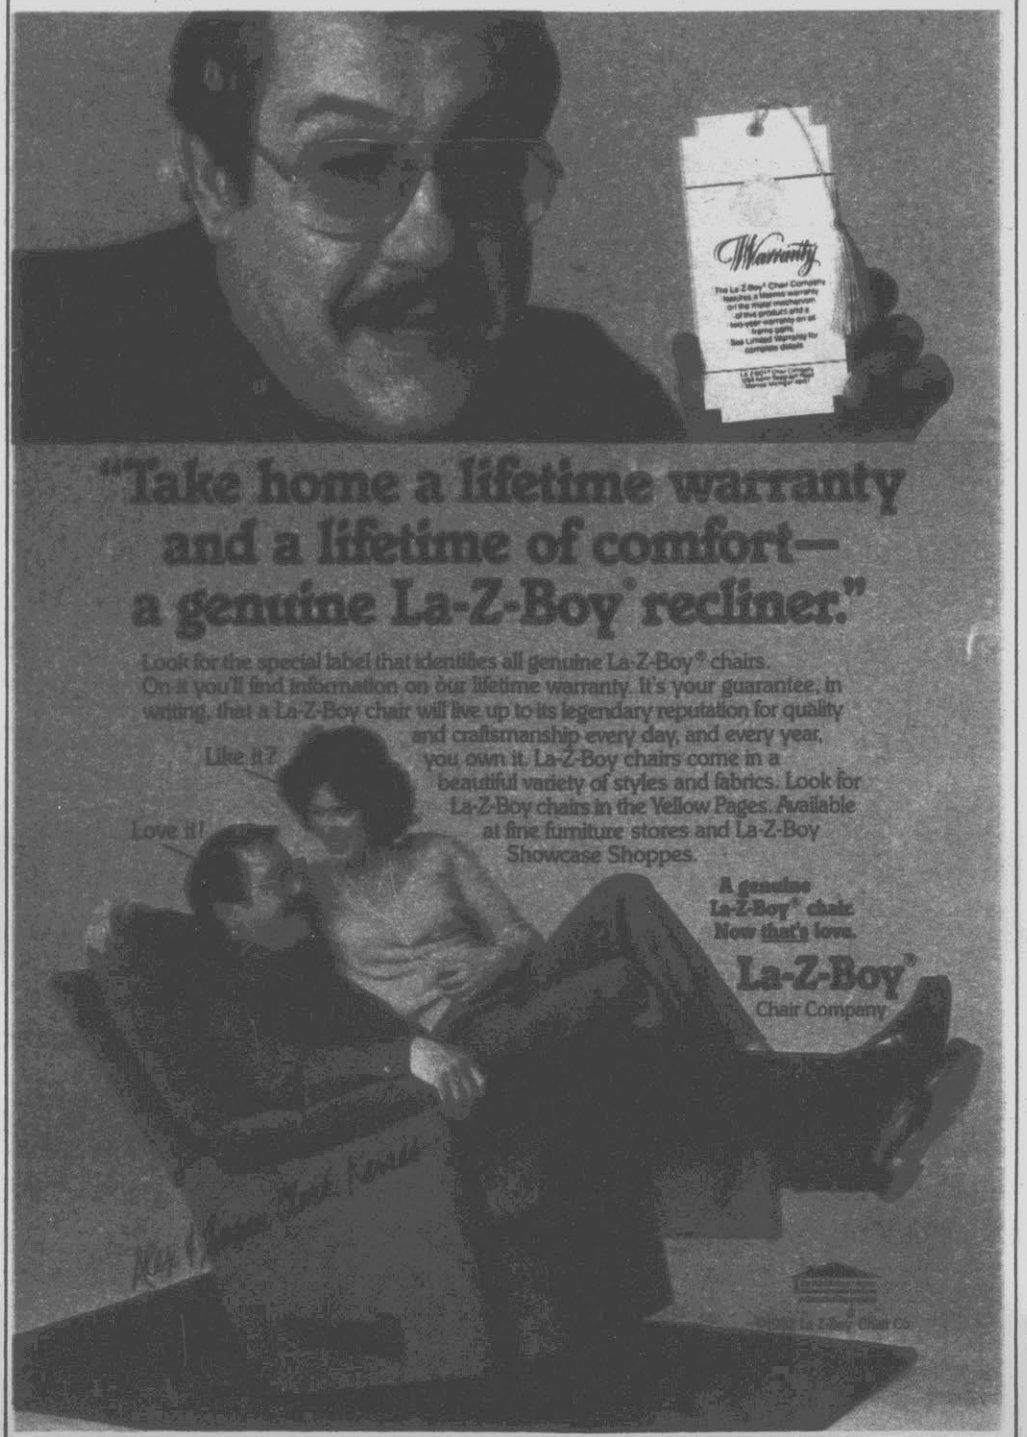

In theory, it sounds simple: Be nice to your child, and she will be nice to you. The only wrinkle in this is that a child, whether a 2-year-old who can't talk or a moody 15-year-old who won't talk, may not be skillful at expressing the feelings the parent is supposed to understand. It's the parent's job, therefore, to puzzle out what the child's actions mean, to tune into the child and find out how you can understand each other.

In my own case, for example, I wouldn't have felt so angry if I had stopped to think that my little girl was responding to my bad mood. In her own irritating way, she was trying to tell me to pay attention to her, to stop thinking about work on her time. If I had read her better, our mutual torment wouldn't have gotten so out of hand.

Dr. Lief recommends several procedures for parents to try if things do get out of hand. "First," says Dr. Lief, "see if you can relax. Next, try to consider what the child wants to tell you. If you feel you're losing control, you might get away from the combat area. Taking a walk or even going to the next room can help both of you cool down. And try to avoid screaming, shouting or a harsh tone of voice. Your attitude will make a difference. Speak in a matter-of-fact voice, and both you and the child will feel calmer."

When parents give up the idea of perfect control, concludes Dr. Lief, and work instead on communication, "they're likely to find that they've won both control and communication." FW

A WILLIAMSBURG THANKSGIVING

KING'S ARMS TAVERN CREAM OF PEANUT SOUP

1 cup finely chopped onion
1 cup finely chopped celery
¼ cup butter or margarine
3 tablespoons flour
2 qts. chicken broth
2 cups creamy peanut butter
1¾ cups light cream

1. In Dutch oven or stock pot, sauté the onion and celery in butter until soft, but not brown, about 8 minutes.

2. Stir in the flour and stir until well blended. Add the chicken broth and, stirring constantly, bring to a boil.

3. Remove from heat and puree mixture a little at a time in food processor or blender. Blend 1 cup of the soup mixture with peanut butter until smooth; along with light cream, add this to remaining soup mixture.

4. Return all to Dutch oven and heat over low heat just until hot, but do not boil. Serve garnished with chopped peanuts. A gracious way to serve this soup is to ladle it from a tureen before your guests.

GOLDEN ROAST TURKEY WITH OYSTER DRESSING

1 (12- to 16-lb.) turkey, fresh-killed or frozen, ready to stuff, thawed
Oyster Dressing, recipe follows
Vegetable oil
Giblet Gravy, recipe follows

1. Remove giblets and neck from inside turkey and reserve for making gravy. Rinse bird under running cold water, drain well and pat dry.

2. Preheat oven to 325°. Spoon some of the Oyster Dressing lightly into neck cavity of bird. Fold wings under breast of bird; fill body cavity with dressing; do not pack. Skewer opening closed, pull turkey legs together at back, tying with cord or fastening with metal clamp that may have come with the bird.

3. Place turkey on rack in shallow roasting pan, breast side up. Rub turkey skin all over with vegetable oil, to keep skin moist and aid in browning.

4. Insert meat thermometer into meat between breast and thigh; thermometer bulb should not touch bone. Roast at 325° for 4 to 4½ hours, covering with a loose sheet of foil. Remove foil during last hour of roasting time to brown; baste turkey with pan drippings. Bird is done when thermometer reads 180° to 185°, leg moves easily and thigh meat is very soft.

5. Remove turkey from oven and place on warm platter or cutting board. Allow to stand 20 to 30 minutes before serving to make carving easier. Serve with Giblet Gravy.

Chex Party Mix makes the party and saves you 50¢.

Parties are more fun when you serve the nutty-rich grain taste of Chex Party Mix. An American holiday favorite for 26 years.

TRADITIONAL PARTY MIX RECIPE

½ cup butter or margarine
1¼ tsp. seasoned salt
4½ tsp. worcestershire sauce
2 cups Corn Chex® cereal
2 cups Rice Chex® cereal
2 cups Bran Chex® cereal
2 cups Wheat Chex® cereal
1 cup salted mixed nuts

Preheat oven to 250 degrees. Heat butter in large shallow roasting pan (about 15x10x2) in oven until melted. Remove. Stir in seasoned salt and worcestershire sauce. Add Chex and nuts. Mix until all pieces are coated. Heat in oven 1 hour. Stir every 15 minutes. Spread on absorbent paper to cool. Makes about 9 cups.

Helpful Hint: Party Mix may be frozen, so save time and make a double batch. Thaw at room temperature in container in which it was stored.

HOT & SPICY PARTY MIX RECIPE

½ cup butter or margarine
1¼ tsp. salt
1 tsp. garlic powder
1 tsp. onion powder
½ tsp. chili powder
4½ tsps. worcestershire sauce
¼ tsp. bottled hot pepper sauce
2 cups Corn Chex® cereal
2 cups Rice Chex® cereal
2 cups Wheat Chex® cereal
2 cups Bran Chex® cereal
1 cup salted mixed nuts

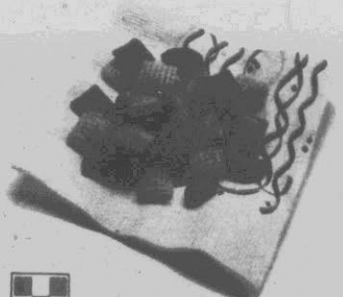

Preheat oven to 250 degrees. Heat butter in large shallow roasting pan (about 15x10x2) in oven until melted. Remove. Stir in seasonings. Add Chex and nuts. Mix until all pieces are coated. Heat in oven 1 hour. Stir every 15 minutes. Spread on absorbent paper to cool. Makes about 9 cups.

Surprise your family and guests with these delicious Party Mix variations.

A WILLIAMSBURG THANKSGIVING

OYSTER DRESSING

- 1 cup butter or margarine
- 1½ cups chopped onion
- 1½ cups chopped celery
- 2 tablespoons chopped parsley
- 1 qt. oysters and liquid
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ¾ teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
- 2 tablespoons poultry seasoning
- 4 qts. stale white bread cubes, toasted

1. Melt the butter in a large, heavy skillet. Add the onion, celery and parsley and saute over medium heat until the vegetables are tender. Do not brown.
2. Drain oysters, reserving the liquid. Chop oysters coarsely.
3. Add the chopped oysters, salt, pepper and poultry seasoning. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly for 2 minutes, until oysters start to "curl."
4. Place bread cubes in large bowl. Add sauteed vegetable-oyster mix; mix well.
5. Add a little reserved oyster liquid if the dressing seems too dry. Taste for seasoning. Stuff and truss the turkey. Place any leftover dressing in a buttered casserole; pour any remaining oyster liquid over it. Bake uncovered in oven with the turkey for the last hour of the roasting time.

Makes 12 cups, enough for a 20- to 25-lb. turkey

GIBLET GRAVY

- Turkey neck and giblets, rinsed
- 2 qts. water
- 1 peeled whole onion, stuck with 2 whole cloves
- 1 carrot, cut in quarters
- 1 sprig parsley
- 1 celery stalk, broken
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon whole black peppercorns
- ½ cup turkey pan drippings
- 6 tablespoons flour
- Few twists freshly ground black pepper

1. Place turkey neck and giblets into 3-qt. saucepan; add water, clove-studded onion, carrot, parsley, celery, ½ teaspoon salt and peppercorns. Heat to boiling; cover and simmer about 1½ hours, or until neck and giblets are tender.
2. Drain, reserving broth for gravy. Remove meat from neck and chop along with giblets for gravy.
3. In 2-qt. saucepan, blend pan drippings and flour smoothly. Add 5 cups reserved turkey stock. Cook, stirring until mixture comes to boiling and thickens. Taste and add salt and pepper if desired; stir in chopped giblets. Serve boiling hot in heated sauceboat. If gravy becomes too thick, add a little more turkey broth.

Makes about 6 cups

KING'S ARMS TAVERN COLONIAL GAME PIE

- Salt to taste
- 1 (4½- to 5-lb.) duck
- 2 lbs. rabbit or chicken, cut up
- ½ cup vegetable oil
- 2½ lbs. boneless venison or beef, cubed
- 2 cups port wine
- 1½ qts. basic brown sauce or 4 cans (10¼-oz. size) beef gravy
- 1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- ½ teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
- 1 cup currant jelly
- 1 teaspoon rosemary leaves
- 3 tablespoons brandy
- 1½ lbs. mushrooms, quartered
- ½ cup butter
- 1 lb. slab bacon, cut into ¼-inch cubes
- 1 can (15½ oz.) pearl onions or 1 lb. small white pearl onions, cooked
- 4 cups Pastry Crust Mix, recipe follows
- 1 egg
- 2 tablespoons milk

1. Preheat the oven to 400°. Salt the cavity of the duck and place on a rack in a shallow roasting pan, breast side up. Roast for 30 minutes at 400°; reduce the heat to 325°, and continue roasting until the duck tests done, about 1 to 1½ hours.
2. In large saucepan or stockpot, simmer rabbit in about 3 cups of water, for 1 hour or until tender.
3. Heat vegetable oil in large heavy skillet until hot, but not smoking. Brown venison cubes in hot oil, stirring and turning as necessary. Remove venison and drain oil from the skillet. Add port wine to the skillet, heat to boiling, scraping up and loosening all brown particles. Boil for 2 to 3 minutes.
4. Return venison to skillet and add the brown sauce. Simmer for 45 to 60 minutes, or until venison is tender.
5. Cut the duck and rabbit into medium-size pieces and place in the skillet with the venison to keep warm. Season sauce with Worcestershire, garlic, pepper, currant jelly, rosemary and brandy.
6. Saute the mushrooms in butter until lightly browned. Fry the bacon until crisp; drain. Heat the onions and drain.
7. Divide the mixture into individual greased casserole dishes and garnish the top of each with mushrooms, bacon and onions.
8. Roll out pastry crust, cut dough into circles 1 inch larger than individual casserole dish, to allow a ½-inch overlap. Place dough cover on top of each casserole; trim edges if necessary and cut out a ½-inch circle in center to allow steam to escape.
9. In small bowl, beat egg lightly with milk to make an egg wash. Brush the tops of the pastry with the egg wash.
10. Bake in a preheated 350° oven for 20 to 25 minutes, or until crust is golden brown. Serve piping hot.

Makes 12 to 15 servings

Five-year study shows:

HIGH BLOOD PRESSURE MAY BE REVERSED WITHOUT DRUGS!

Read about startling research conducted at a world-famous clinic— Now detailed in a free special report available with your trial subscription.

If you have high blood pressure, you may know all too well the misery of potent drugs.

That's how one distinguished international medical journal refers to some of the drugs used to control high blood pressure — and no wonder!

Side effects of such drugs include arthritis, liver disease, diabetes, heart failure, senility, mental depression, disturbed heart rhythms, angina, glaucoma. And a recent U.S. Government report on another drug, used by one million Americans, indicates that the drug has caused cancer in laboratory animals.

But now there's good news — exciting news — from one of the world's leading medical institutions.

Researchers there, treating 4,000 hypertensive men and women, succeeded in reversing 85% of the mild cases and 51% of the severe cases — all without using any drugs!

How was it done? Where did this crucial experiment take place? Why did the doctor who conducted the study hail it as "the first scientific proof of what many of us have been seeing in our offices for years."?

It's all explained in a fascinating, 40-page booklet called "The Natural Way to Control High Blood Pressure" — together with a host of other valuable insights to help you cope with blood-pressure problems:

- Noise, Sleep, and Your Blood Pressure
- Lower Your Blood Pressure with Better Diet
- Do You Have a Minute to Lower Your Blood Pressure?
- Potassium Puts the Lid on Blood Pressure
- Blood Pressure and Your Water Supply
- And much more

To receive your copy of this truly important special report, free, you need only try a money-saving subscription to Prevention — with the promise that, if it's not for you, you can cancel immediately . . . keep the report without obligation . . . and owe nothing.

Is Prevention really helping people like you?

Today, more than 2,350,000 men and women pay to receive Prevention every month. We just don't think Prevention could have found so many loyal friends, coast to coast, if it weren't helping people right now — and if it hadn't helped people over the years.

They depend on it for a wide range of sometimes controversial, always stimulating health ideas and guidance. On menopause and allergies, depression and back problems, insomnia and headaches.

That's why we make this special offer:

A money-saving opportunity —and the free report.

We'll send you, free, the 40-page report on high blood pressure and start you off with a twelve-month subscription at the low introductory rate of $10.97.

In addition, you have this ironclad guarantee: If you ever decide that Prevention is not for you—at any time—we'll send you a full refund on all unmailed issues. (Of course, you keep the free report, no matter what.)

Today in America, more than 20 million people are faced with high blood pressure. Thousands, perhaps millions, of others may have high blood pressure without knowing it. And, even if you're a lucky one, chances are good that your blood pressure will go up as you get older.

So, mail the coupon today, won't you!

Every issue of Prevention gives you helpful articles like these!

"Portable Garage" Car & Boat Tarp Only $7.98

If You Act Within Next 30 Days

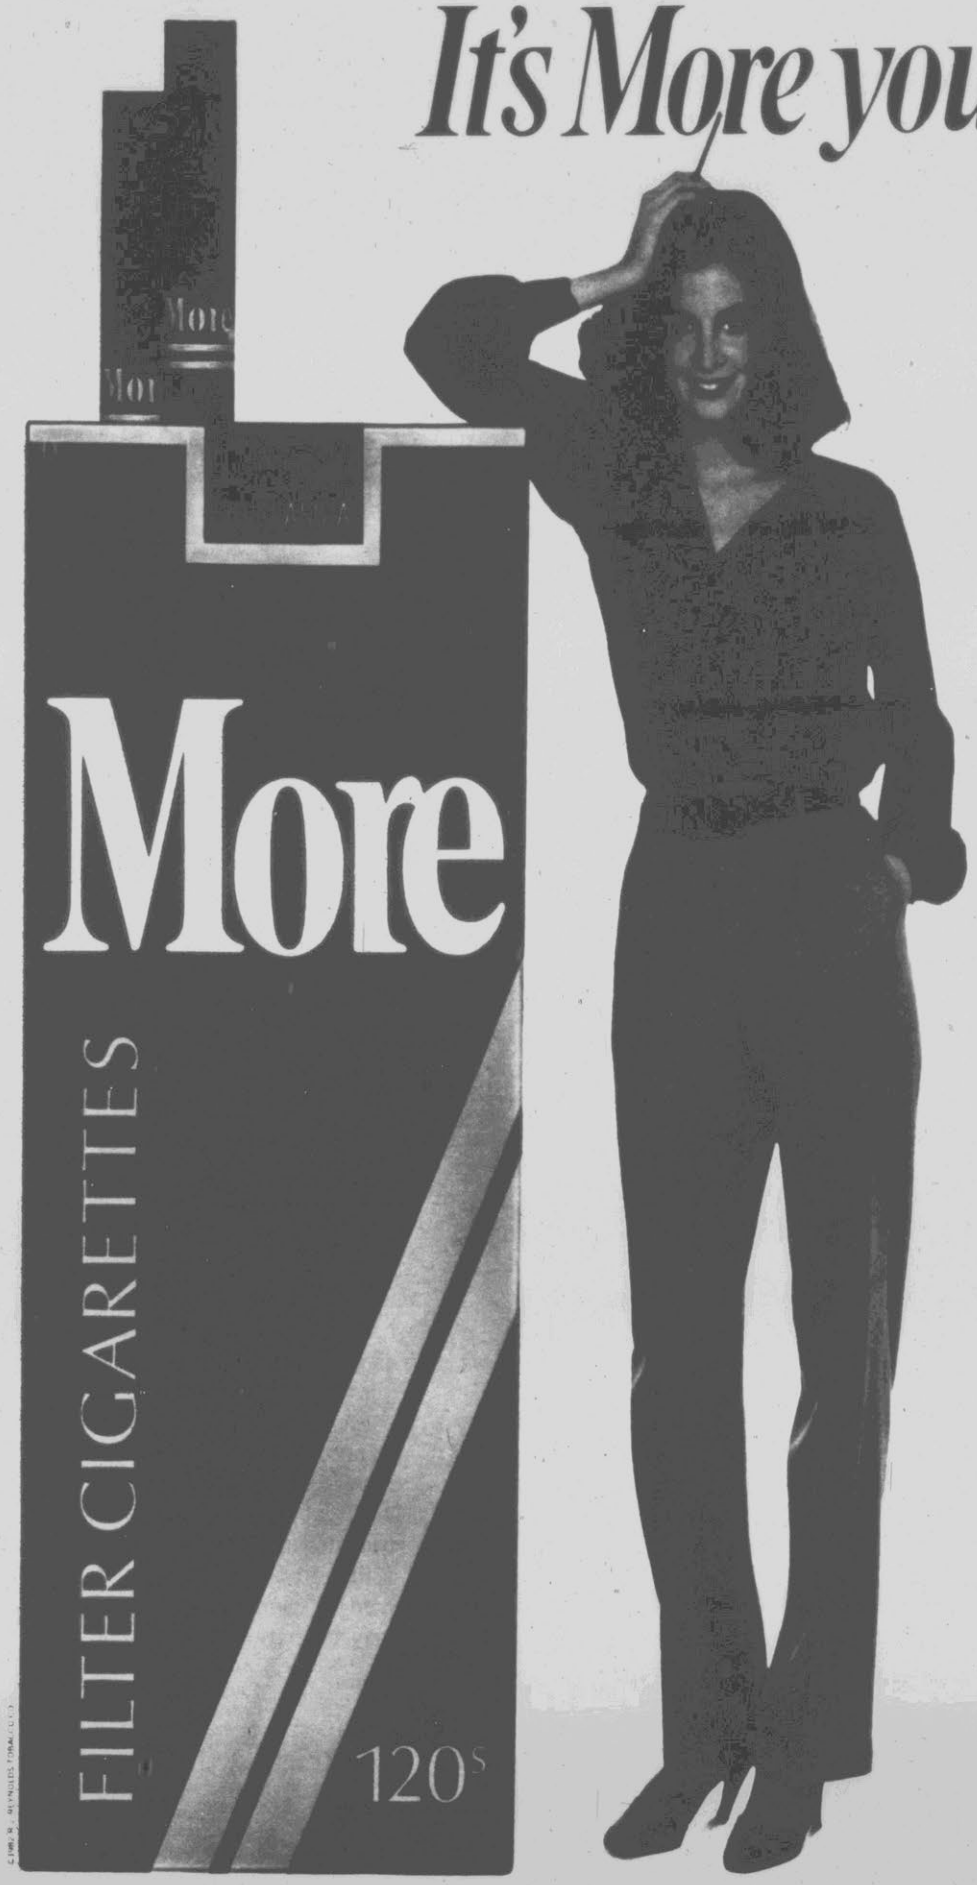

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov., 1982 —International Mail Marketing will send any consumer who sees this notice a giant "Portable Garage" Car & Boat Tarpaulin for just $7.98 if your response is received within 30 days. This is a huge, 24' x 12' tarp constructed of heavy-gauge polyvinyl and polyethelene with eight reinforced tybek grommets to insure tie-down protection from rain, sleet, snow, dust, dirt, or salt spray. "Portable Garage" is large enough to cover any car, even the biggest limousine or station wagon. It is also useful to protect boats and small trucks, barbecues, garden tractors, lawn and patio furniture or a woodpile from rough winter weather.

Each tarp comes backed by an unconditional, iron-clad guarantee of satisfaction—it must meet or exceed your every expectation or return it at any time within 30 days for prompt refund of purchase price. You may order two tarps for only $15; three for only $22; four at just $28; and five for only $33! These are commercial-grade industrial-strength tarpaulins suitable for even the most rugged use. However, because of the special low price, we must restrict requests to private consumers only; no industrial user or dealer requests will be accepted. There is a further limit of five (5) tarps per request at this low price.

To request your tarp, please send your name and address, plus appropriate payment for each tarp requested and $2.00 per order for postage and handling,no matter how many tarps you are ordering to: International Mail Marketing, Dept. GX-1528, 390 Pike Road, Huntingdon Valley, PA 19006 within the next thirty days. Credit card orders will also be accepted; simply note name of card, account number, and expiration date of card on the same paper as your name and address when ordering.

1. Preheat the oven to 400°. Grease muffin tins that are 2½ inches in diameter.
2. Using electric mixer, cream the butter and sugar until light and fluffy. Beat in the eggs and pumpkin.
3. Dredge the raisins with ½ cup of flour. Sift 3 cups of flour and the baking powder, cinnamon, nutmeg and salt together. Add the dry ingredients and milk alternately by hand, mixing just until blended. Do not overmix. Stir in the raisins.
4. Spoon into the prepared muffin tins, filling each tin ¾ full. Bake at 400° for 20 to 25 minutes. Makes 24 muffins

VIRGINIA APPLE CUSTARD TART

Pastry for 10-inch single-crust pie
3 to 4 medium cooking apples
Lemon juice
Sponge cake or 1 package (3 ozs.) lady fingers
Vanilla Cream Custard, recipe follows
½ cup apricot jam, forced through a sieve
1 tablespoon sugar
2 tablespoons kirsch
¼ cup sliced almonds, toasted

1. Preheat the oven to 375°. Lightly oil a 10-inch tart pan that is 1½ inches deep.
2. Roll out the pastry ⅛-inch thick on a lightly floured board or pastry cloth. Press it firmly into the prepared pan. Prick the dough well with a fork. Cover with greased waxed paper and fill with dried beans to prevent the dough from rising.
3. Bake at 375° for 35 minutes. Remove from the oven, take out beans, prick the bottom and return to oven for 5 minutes, or until the shell is golden brown. Cool completely.
4. Line a baking sheet with aluminum foil.
5. Quarter, peel and core the apples. Brush the apple quarters with lemon juice to keep them from discoloring.

Make 5 shallow vertical cuts down the back of each apple quarter. Be sure the cuts are shallow so that the quarters will hold their shape and make a design as they bake.

Arrange the apple quarters, cored side down, on the prepared baking sheet. Bake at 375° for 15 minutes, or until the apples are tender. Cool completely.

6. Slice the sponge cake in half horizontally. Place 1 half in the tart shell. Or line tart shell with 1 layer of closely placed lady fingers. Spread the Vanilla Cream Custard on top of the sponge cake.
7. Arrange the apple quarters in a circle on top of the Vanilla Cream Custard. Slightly overlap 3 apple quarters in the center. Refrigerate.
8. Shortly before serving, combine the apricot jam and sugar in a small saucepan. Bring to a boil, stirring constantly. Remove from the heat. Cool slightly before adding the kirsch. Brush the rim of the tart with the glaze. Press on the almonds. Spoon remaining glaze over the top of the tart.

Makes 8 to 10 servings

VANILLA CREAM CUSTARD

5 egg yolks
½ cup sugar
2 tablespoons cornstarch
2 cups milk
1 teaspoon vanilla extract

1. Beat the egg yolks and sugar rapidly to blend well.
2. In a saucepan, dissolve the cornstarch in ½ cup of milk. Add the rest of the milk and the vanilla and bring to a boil, stirring constantly.
3. Pour hot cornstarch-milk mixture gradually into the egg mixture and blend well.
4. Return to the heat and boil, stirring constantly, 2 minutes. Cover surface with waxed paper and keep in the refrigerator until chilled. Makes 2¼ cups

SALLY LUNN

1 cup milk
½ cup shortening
¼ cup water
4 cups sifted all-purpose flour, divided
⅓ cup sugar
2 teaspoons salt
2 packages active dry yeast
3 eggs

1. Preheat the oven to 350° 10 minutes before the Sally Lunn is ready to be baked. Grease a 10-inch tube cake pan or a Bundt pan.
2. Heat the milk, shortening and ¼ cup of water until very warm — about 120°. The shortening does not need to melt.
3. Blend 1⅓ cups of flour with the sugar, salt and dry yeast in a large mixing bowl. Blend the warm liquids into the flour mixture. Beat with an electric mixer at medium speed for about 2 minutes, scraping the sides of the bowl occasionally.
4. Gradually add ⅔ cup of the remaining flour and the eggs and beat at high speed for 2 minutes. Add the remaining flour and mix well. The batter will be thick but not stiff.
5. Cover and let the dough rise in a warm, draft-free place (about 85°) until it doubles in bulk — about 1 hour and 15 minutes.
6. Beat the dough down with a wooden spoon, wire whisk or at the lowest speed of electric mixer, and turn into the prepared pan. Cover and let rise in a warm, draft-free place until it has increased in bulk ⅓ to ½, about 30 minutes. Bake for 40 to 50 minutes at 350° until golden brown.
7. Run a knife around the center and outer edges of the bread and turn it onto a plate to cool. Makes 1 large ring loaf

Let Carnation velvetize your pumpkin pie.

Carnation® Velvetized® Evaporated Milk makes holiday pies so good that folks will want your recipe. But don't stop there. Add the Carnation velvet touch to all your sauces, gravies, casseroles, and desserts. What a smooth way to get compliments!

Carnation Pumpkin Pie

(Makes 9-inch pie)

2 slightly beaten eggs
1½ cups canned pumpkin
1 cup sugar
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon ginger
¼ teaspoon cloves
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
1⅔ cups (1 tall can) undiluted CARNATION® Evaporated Milk
9-inch single-crust unbaked pie shell

Combine eggs, pumpkin, sugar, salt, and spices. Gradually add evaporated milk. Mix well. Pour into unbaked pie shell. Bake in hot oven (425°F.) 15 minutes; reduce to moderate heat (350°F.) and continue baking about 40 minutes, or until knife inserted near center of pie comes out clean. Cool before serving.

NEWS FROM THE COLD FRONT

The Bettmann Archive

By Susan Gordon

After years of hearing advice about preventing and treating colds and flu, our memories start to blur the line between fact and fiction. Below we present some common notions about the common cold and influenza and explain whether they're true or false.

Colds and flu are more common in winter than summer.

TRUE. "Three or four times more common, but we don't know why for sure," says Robert Couch, M.D., director of the Influenza Research Center at the Baylor College of Medicine in Houston. The most widely accepted hypothesis is that when people spend a lot of time indoors, coming into contact with each other more, viruses spread more easily. This conclusion is based on the rise in the incidence of flu after schools open in the fall and on the observation that flu season in the tropics coincides with the rainy season, when people stay indoors.

You can catch a cold or the flu by getting wet or chilled.

FALSE. "That's an old wives' tale," says Dr. Couch. In studies that tested this myth by exposing volunteers to cold viruses, the subjects who stood in puddles until chilled contracted colds no more frequently than the nonchilled groups. Dr. Couch points out, however, that because there are so many varieties of cold and flu viruses and not all were tested in the study, we can't be completely certain that some strains aren't more easily transmitted under these conditions.

You can't do anything to prevent colds or flu.

FALSE. According to John La Montagne, Ph.D., influenza program officer for the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases, you can reduce the chances of getting sick by maintaining good health (by getting proper rest and exercise), by eating nutritiously and by avoiding crowds. Admittedly, colds are hard to avoid despite precautions, but the flu can be prevented fairly reliably with flu immunization.

Getting a flu shot guarantees that you won't come down with the disease.

FALSE. A shot immunizes against the three most common flu viruses quite effectively. However, an unfamiliar virus appears every number of years from which no one is immune, causing a serious epidemic. "That's not expected to happen this year," La Montagne notes. The Advisory Committee on Immunization Practices of the Public Health Service specifically recommends flu shots for those over 65 and anyone who has a high-risk medical condition.

There's no cure for colds or the flu.

TRUE and FALSE. "Though we haven't yet found a cure for the cold — research currently being conducted with interferon [an anti-viral agent produced by the body] looks promising — we do have a drug that relieves flu symptoms and speeds recovery," says Dr. La Montagne. It's called amantadine (sold under the trademark Symmetrel) and must be prescribed by a doctor. It can also be used as a flu preventative, taken from the start of a flu outbreak. Mild side effects such as dizziness and insomnia are reported in about 5 percent of users.

Aspirin should always be taken for cold and flu headaches.

FALSE. Aspirin does relieve the head and body aches of flu victims, but if you're suffering from a cold, you may get more relief from a nasal decongestant, because the ache is usually due to clogged sinuses. Also, aspirin should not be given to children under 16, according to the American Academy of Pediatrics. Its use has been linked to a deadly ailment called Reye's Syndrome. FW

TRENDS

"PURE AS THE DRIVEN SLUSH"

With apologies to Tallulah, the new romance novels may bring a blush to your cheek.

By Mary Ellin Barrett

Lacey sensed his flaring arousal and took a deep pleasure in the knowledge that she could excite him as much as he excited her. It made her bolder, more adventuresome than she would ever have given herself credit for back in Iowa!

—Stephanie James, Velvet Touch

Ten years ago, when romance heroines were a starry-eyed and straightlaced lot, such a racy adventure would not have been Lacey's fate. She would have had to settle for some hand-holding, a chaste kiss or two and a promise of more excitement after marriage. But now all sorts of doors have opened up to her, not the least of them the door to the bedroom. Under the covers of today's trendiest romances, heroines like Lacey are being unlaced and passions unleashed as publishers compete in a heated race for readership.

Romance novels are among the most popular books being published today — boasting some 22 million readers and more than 320 million books sold worldwide in 1981 — and the latest rage in romances is sensuality. In the past two years, three major romance publishers have introduced sexy lines of books and at least three more sensual series are due out in 1983.

There was a time when romance fans could be enticed with virtuous sagas and ingenuous heroines who received only a few kisses before wedding their heroes and shutting out the reader at book's end. But it seems as if today's romance enthusiasts want more intimate details. Observes Kathryn Falk, publisher of Romantic Times, a bimonthly newspaper for devotees of the genre, "Readers are tired of nurses, governesses and older heroes. They like the sexier books." As a result, she adds, "Many of the books are getting spicier. They don't leave as much to the imagination as they used to."

More precisely, the new recipe calls for additional spice, while at the same time retaining a measure of old-fashioned, sugary idealism. To achieve this mix, writers keep their explicit lovemaking above the waist, while the sex act itself is described euphemistically. "We have lavish detail," explains Carolyn Nichols, a senior editor at Bantam Books, "but the language of love that has been developed for these books has a high poetic and metaphorical content, and never ever do we use clinical terms." Adds Robin Grunder, an associate editor for Signet Books, "The scenes don't describe what's happening as much as what the characters are feeling. While they make love, he says beautiful things to her. There's a lot of emphasis on foreplay and afterglow."

. . . she was consumed by a raging inferno. When her eyes met his briefly, she saw that he, too, was burning with desire. And when the two fires met, they consumed the hunger that fed their fury. . . .

—Pamela Wallace, Come Back, My Love

And there's always fidelity. As Vivian Stephens, editorial director at Harlequin Books, explains, "If she goes to bed with him on page 1, that's who she has to end up with."

It is Stephens who is most often credited with launching the new trend. It began a few years back when she was an editor at the Dell Publishing Company, hoping to boost sales of Dell's old-fashioned Candlelight Romances. "How could I get a woman who had lived through the sexual revolution to read about a virgin?" recalls Stephens. "I had to bring this genre into the here and now. If they were in bed, what was going on?"

The result was Candlelight Ecstasy Romances, launched in December 1980. Jove Publications jumped on the bandwagon in June 1981 with its Second Chance at Love series; Silhouette Books followed suit with Special Edition (February 1982) and Desire (June 1982); and in 1983, Signet Books will introduce its Rapture series, Harlequin will offer its new sexy American Romances and Bantam Books will also be bringing out a line of sensual romances.

Publishers report that reader response has been glowing. Dell predicts that the sales total for Ecstasy by the end of 1983 will be 30 million. Al Liberman, senior vice president and director of marketing for Silhouette Books says that the Desire and Special Edition romances have had a 90- to 100-percent sellout rate each month at the stores.

"Women have become more and more open about their sexuality," explains Anne Gisonny, senior editor, Candlelight Romances. "It's all right now for a woman to admit to sexual fantasies." Monique Baux, 43, a romance fan from Urbana, Ill., seems to agree: "If the books were not spicy, I could not relate to them."

This is not to say that there aren't plenty of readers who still prefer their romance novels unsullied. One book-industry consultant says that the sexy novels account for only a fraction of romance-book sales. "The vast majority of volume in the business is squeaky clean," he observes. In 1981, for example, Harlequin's three romance lines (all of them tamer than the forthcoming American Romances) sold 200 million copies worldwide.

Parris Afton Bonds, romance author and vice president of Romance Writers of America says she, for one, prefers the less explicit type. "I like a little titillation," she says, "an exchange of words, looks, touches."

And author Barbara Cartland, whose virtuous 18th- and 19th-century romances have sold more than 300 million copies worldwide, decries today's trends. "Disgusting," says Cartland, who is also stepgrandmother to the Princess of Wales. "I think they're absolutely filthy. The girl is raped in revolting ways on every page, and then at the end when the hero says, 'Will you marry me?' she blushes. It's untrue to life and I don't believe women like it. Women of every age read me because I'm pure. I give them beauty and love. No woman of any age likes pornography."

Grunder offers an equally passionate reply. "I would be very insulted if someone came up to me and said, 'What you are publishing is pornography.' I don't think it is pornography. It's not prurient when people are making love. These are two individuals sharing an experience. It's romantic."

Rory was conscious of nothing in the world save Eric. All other thought had been forced from her mind except that of his body near hers, beside hers. . . . She thrilled again and again at the beauty of his touch, the spiraling passion that carried her higher than she'd ever dreamed possible.

—Billy Douglass, Search for a New Dawn

HOW TO MAKE YOURSELF PERFECTLY CLEAR

By Jane Marks

Do you ever feel misunderstood by the people closest to you? It happens to all of us at times. We may grumble and blame it on "their inability to listen" or "their indifference" to our feelings, but sometimes, according to Dr. William Offenkrantz, psychiatrist and professor of psychoanalysis at the Medical College of Wisconsin in Milwaukee, "the problem is at least as much because we haven't done all we could to articulate just exactly what it is that we want them to understand."

Consider, for example, if either of these situations sounds familiar:

- You've told your best friend about a problem you have, hoping he'd be sympathetic and supportive. But he doesn't seem very concerned. You wonder if he's really such a good friend after all.
- Recently your spouse has had a tendency to run late whenever you meet. You've been left standing outside of restaurants and movie theaters. You've complained about being forced to wait, but it hasn't helped.

Doug Jamieson

In each of these cases, it's natural to make the defensive assumption that the other person just doesn't care. But maybe that isn't the case at all. Too often, we avoid actually saying what we want (because we don't want to be demanding or we don't know exactly how to express our needs). Then we feel cheated when the other person fails to mind read.

If you need to explain what's on your mind to someone, don't be afraid to state the obvious or make a clear request. If you try to simplify your statement or if you don't take time to explain the subtleties of your thinking, the message won't come through loud and clear. For instance, a wife who says to her husband, "Tommy's birthday cake is ready at the bakery," may realize in her own mind that she'd like him to respond by picking it up, but this is not the message she's conveying to her husband. When he responds by simply saying, "Oh, good," she'll be annoyed or disappointed. The problem could be avoided if she'd be specific about her needs. A better statement is, "Tommy's cake is ready. Would you mind picking it up for me because I'd like to finish some chores?"

Similarly, if you're telling a friend about a problem and you're hoping for support, be as precise as possible. Don't merely say, "I've been feeling a little down."

It's also a good idea to avoid pat phrases and clichés, such as, "You really get on my nerves" or, "I don't feel so hot." They've been so overused that they don't carry impact.

If what you have to say is critical of the other person, there's a chance he'll become so defensive that he won't focus on your message. There's a way to avoid triggering a defensive reaction, however. "Do go ahead and say what you have to say," says Dr. Offenkrantz, "but you can do so in a nonaccusatory way. For instance, instead of, 'You are picky and mean to me; I can't stand it,' try, 'I feel bad when you criticize my clothes.'"

What do you do if the other person still misses your point? Instead of giving up, you'll gain more ground if you ask him to tell you exactly what it is you've said that worries or upsets him. Most of the time, it can turn out to be a simple, honest misunderstanding — which you then have the opportunity to clarify.

It takes a lot of courage — plus effort and persistence — to bare and share our feelings and put them into words. But it all pays off: The person you care about has a clear understanding of your needs. FW

SYNOMETRICS...an Olympic Champion's Discovery!

Turn Belly Fat into a Rock-Hard Lean Stomach

Introducing IKE BERGER
Olympic Champion and truly one of the world's great athletes
• Olympic Gold medal winner

...in 7 short minutes a day with the "miracle" of SYNOMETRICS... the fantastic new discovery for speed shaping away ugly, embarrassing fat and flab...to reveal a brand new rock-hard, lean, trim, handsome body!

"I'm over 50, yet in just 7 days SPEED SHAPER™ 'burned' off the fat and flab I've lived with for thirty years."
"I thought my fat and flab was with me for life... SYNOMETRICS "burned" it off in only 7 days."
HY HARRIS, New York, N.Y.

IKE BERGER explains SYNOMETRICS

You already know about the Isotonic and Isometric principle of body dynamics. Millions of people use one or the other in their daily exercises. One day I accidentally discovered that if I used BOTH methods together in one single exercise, I automatically speeded up the results tremendously and I reduced my daily exercise hour down to only 7 short minutes.

THE SCIENCE OF SYNOMETRICS

I later learned the scientific reason for this amazing result. It's called SYNERGISM—meaning that when you combine two methods the result is greater than the both of them separately. I now called my new discovery SYNOMETRICS and developed a special exercise unit I call the SPEED SHAPER. And that's just what it is...a speed method to give you results in minutes, NOT hours! Now...build yourself a "fantastic looking body" with the incredible SYNOMETRICS—the invention that works on the exciting new scientific concept of ISOTONIC + ISOMETRIC.

IRON CLAD MONEY BACK GUARANTEE

In just a few days you must actually begin to see measurable, real results...or your money back promptly and without any question.

• No diet needed if daily caloric intake does not add to present body weight.

TV'S THE BLUE AND THE GRAY REVIEWED BY PAGE SMITH

Tony Esparza/CBS

Gregory Peck performs ably as Abe... honestly!

By Page Smith

If the CBS miniseries The Blue and the Gray (to be broadcast Nov. 14, 16 and 17) is one of the most ambitious undertakings of the TV era, it also reveals a good deal about the state of the medium in 1982.

The eight-hour drama, which presents an array of "stars" — foremost among them Gregory Peck as Lincoln — focuses on the experiences of two related families during the American Civil War, the Geysers of Charlottesville, Va., and their cousins, the Hales of Gettysburg, Pa. Jacob Hale is the editor of the Gettysburg newspaper while Ben Geyser, head of the Virginia family (a part played effectively by Lloyd Bridges), is the prototype of Thomas Jefferson's yeoman farmer and the antithesis of the great plantation slave owner. We are thus spared the clichés of the Gone With the Wind genre. The Geysers apparently own only one domestic slave and befriend Jonathan, an ex-slave who is a potter by trade.

At the opening of the series (which was directed by Andrew McLaglen, who among his 27 films has directed five starring John Wayne), John Geyser, one of Ben's sons who shows a precocious talent as an artist, heads north to seek his fortune. Geyser (played by John Hammond) prevails on his uncle to employ him as an illustrator of articles for his newspaper. His first assignment is to cover the trial of John Brown for his raid on Harpers Ferry.

The trial is a vivid vignette, with Sterling Hayden doing a memorable bit as the Abolitionist leader. During the proceedings, Geyser begins a friendship with Jonas Steele (Stacy Keach), a Government agent, special scout for General Grant and personal bodyguard to Abraham Lincoln. Steele shares with Geyser the function of binding the various segments and subplots together, and needless to say, we have them in abundance.

On a visit home, Geyser is the anguished witness to the hanging of his black friend, Jonathan, by slave hunters for the crime of concealing runaways. This experience, plus the trial of Brown, convinces Geyser that he cannot fight in defense of slavery in the war that is clearly impending. Unwilling to join the Northern army and fight against his brothers, Geyser decides to seek a job as artist-correspondent for Harper's Weekly. His brothers denounce him as a traitor.

In his role as recorder of battles and scenes of army life, Geyser is able to guide us through the long, bloody course of the war. There are, of course, the requisite battle scenes — the First Battle of Bull Run is handled effectively — and some rather self-

STOP UNWANTED HAIR AT THE ROOTS!

SIMILAR BRAND ADVERTISED AT $11.95 OUR PRICE $4.99!

- Just Roll It On And End Mustache! Whiskers! Hair on legs, right up to your bikini!

Tired of suffering the tortures it takes to get rid of unwanted hair—the nicks that go with shaving, the irritation of depilatories, the burn of hot wax, the "bite" of tweezers! With our amazing new Hair Gone, you can help phase them out—until they (and that unwanted hair) become only a painful memory!

Safe For Even Most Delicate Skin.

This remarkable new formula is hypo-allergenic, gentle, and safe for even the most delicate skin— yet it starts working instantly to help inhibit the regrowth of unwanted hair on your face, under your arms, on your legs . . . anywhere!

Guaranteed Results in 60 Days!

Because it moisturizes and cleanses your skin as you roll it on, odorless Hair Gone leaves your skin so soft, silky smooth, and dewy-fresh . . . you'd gladly use it as part of your daily beauty routine, even if it didn't prevent unwanted hair from returning! Hair Gone works! All you do is simply roll it on (following your normal hair removal method) and it begins to help stop the regrowth of unwanted hair by halting the hair follicle at its root. With daily use, your razor, waxes or depilatories may never be needed again. How quickly it produces that result depends, of course, on your own individual body chemistry. But you must see visible results within 60 days—or money refunded!

1 Million Famous LCD Quartz Calendar Watches To Be Sold For Only $4 Apiece In Mammoth Publicity Drive

All who wish to apply for a watch should write to the company before Midnight, December 9, 1982

NEW YORK—One million famous LCD Quartz calendar watches will be sold as part of a publicity campaign for only $4 apiece to the first one million persons who apply in writing to the company before Midnight, Dec. 9, 1982.

These are the same nationally publicized LCD Quartz watches advertised in The New York Times, TV Guide, Parade and other leading publications, with a built-in computer so powerful it never needs winding and which is accurate to within seconds per month. Time and date are displayed in full Quartz digital mode; and a unique "backlight" allows viewing even at night or in total darkness.

These famous LCD Quartz calendar watches will not be sold at this price by the company in any store. To obtain one at this price, apply in writing to the company address (below) no later than Midnight, December 9, 1982.

Each watch carries a full one-year money back guarantee and will be replaced by the company, free of charge, if it ever fails to function.

There is a limit of two (2) watches per address at this price, but requests which are mailed early enough (before November 30) are permitted to order up to 5 watches.

To apply for an LCD Quartz calendar watch, mail your name and address and this original printed notice together with $4 for each watch desired. Add only $2 shipping and handling no matter how many watches you are requesting. NOTE: Specify model and color choice for each watch as follows: Men's Gold (Item #20710A), Men's Silver (Item #20720B), Ladies' Gold (Item #20730C), Ladies' Silver (Item #20740D). Mail to: Carter and Van Peel, Calendar Watch, Dept. 603-99, Box 1723, Hicksville, New York 11802. (V20700) conscious set pieces: Lincoln addressing a group of small-town citizens from the platform of his railroad car on the way to his inauguration (perhaps the best such scene in the series), and later, signing the Emancipation Proclamation.

THE BLUE AND THE GRAY

The suffering, confusion and terrible disorder of war are effectively conveyed to the viewer, as well as a number of engaging details of the daily life of soldiers, from both the North and South. The series is also distinguished by its painstaking attention to historical authenticity in minor matters.

On the less positive side, this viewer found the subplots, most of them involving young lovers, distracting (perhaps because he is an old lover) and certain themes approaching the bizarre. There is, for example, a mad Confederate officer appearing in various segments who gets his kicks by sabering wounded Yankees to death. Much is also made of Stacy Keach's apparent clairvoyance, which serves no other dramatic purpose than to provide the occasion for some lurid visual effects.

Perhaps the series' most obvious deficiency, however, is its failure to treat adequately the role of black people, slave and free, in the war. No reference is made to the heroic achievements of black soldiers — 200,000 of whom fought in the Union army — nor the political influence of such black leaders as Frederick Douglass or Sojourner Truth. After having started off so promisingly with the John Brown trial and hanging, the makers of the series have one brief subsequent episode involving the attempted rape of a slave woman by Union soldiers, followed by John Geyser informing a camp of runaway slaves of Lincoln's Emancipation Proclamation.

There are other aspects of history that the program fails to treat adequately, including the bitter opposition to the war that developed in the North and the precariousness of the Union victory.

The series ends with Lee's surrender at Appomattox and the assassination of Lincoln. The last scene depicts the wedding of John Geyser and his nurse-bride at the family homestead in Virginia. There the Hales and the Geysers, or at least those of them who have survived the war, are reunited. The message is clear: Now that the fratricidal war has ended, peace and harmony have been restored. Of course they were not. The fact is that the passions evoked by the war were to influence the course of our history for a century or more. Even today they are not entirely buried.

Because of its exclusion of important aspects of history,

Melinda Wickman/CBS

Brotherly hatred: "Passions evoked by the war were to influence history for a century or more."

The Blue and the Gray does little to extend our historical awareness. Its makers have reduced one of the tragic conflicts in all history to mere entertainment. Indeed, this viewer is not persuaded that — despite subplots, stars and relentless action — it succeeds even as entertainment, for the program does not hold our interest as a story or as a collection of stories. Perhaps the fault lies in the basic theme, which appears to be that after the bitterness of war came reconciliation. That notion is simply too bland and misleading to give force and direction to the series as a whole. FW

WHAT IN THE WORLD

By Eliot Kaplan

A FRIEND INVISIBLE IS A FRIEND INDEED

If your young child talks to imaginary friends or pets, don't worry: It's not time to have him committed. In fact, it could be a healthy sign, reports U.S.C. psychologist Jonathan Kellerman.

Kellerman told us that it's just a normal way for kids to engage in fantasy and express creativity — vital for psychological growth. Indeed, it's often the more intelligent, creative child who has imaginary playmates.

Or the child may use imaginary friends to temporarily deal with a stressful situation. Kellerman knew one 5-year-old boy who had been in an auto accident but couldn't talk about it. He could talk, though, about his 5-year-old "friend" in a car crash, which was his way of distancing himself from the incident until he could cope.

Parents should go along in a low-key fashion. "The parent must take it all in context," says Kellerman. "If the child is doing all right in school, is eating and sleeping O.K. and has real-life friends, there's nothing to worry about. But if it disrupts his life and he withdraws completely from real kids to his imaginary friends, then it may be time for counseling."

WHAT, ME WORRY?

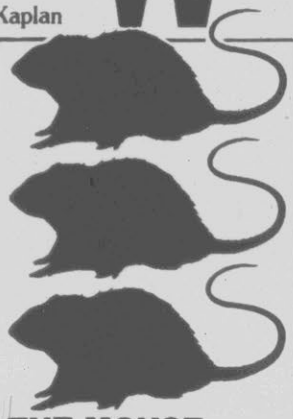

Are you positive every headache is really a brain tumor? Do you own a glow-in-the-dark telephone dial? Do you fret about getting tuna fish in the mayonnaise?

Then you're showing signs of the malady known as neurosis. The prescription: Charles Monagan's clever and reassuring new book, The Neurotic's Handbook, which reveals all those little worries we're just too ashamed to admit.

In the old days, he says, people were too busy surviving to care about spill-proof coffee cups, soft toilet seats and the like. But now with more free time, self-absorption is making us crazier than ever.

The true neurotic has an impossible life. He can't sleep (too busy turning the pillow to the "cool" side). He can't enjoy any season, from winter ("Stale odors collect in the house. You can't smell them but others can") to spring ("You can be thrown in jail for, even accidentally, killing a praying mantis"). And he'll never find true love (the real neurotic will give up when, at a restaurant, his date holds the eating utensils like a prison inmate).

Monagan admits to all the quirks indigenous to being a struggling full-time writer but told us that, at $5.95 a copy, "If all the neurotics out there buy my book, it will end my neuroses forever."

THE MOUSE THAT'S ERRORED

Have hundreds of important scientific experiments been sabotaged by impure mice? That's the threat since the recent discovery by University of Wisconsin researchers that the alleged genetically identical strain of white mice used in laboratories everywhere have been mishandled and aren't so identical after all.

The mice, inbred members of one strain, are supposed to have virtually the same genes no matter where they're bred. This is vital in controlled experiments. But the researchers found that a recent batch of mice differed greatly from the norm and even from one another.

How widespread the problem is is not yet known, but it's possible the results of experiments in a variety of fields are now flawed and their conclusions erroneous.

MATT DILLON MARSHALS HIS AIMS

We should have such problems. The biggest worry actor Matt Dillon, 18, has these days is trying to shuck his label as "America's hottest teen-age heartthrob." Seems he wants to be recognized as a serious artist, and it really bothers him when girls rant, rave, riot and generally act like he's the reincarnation of Elvis Presley.

Actually, the star of Little Darlings and My Bodyguard is now being compared to a young James Dean or Marlon Brando, especially after his sensitive, starring role in Disney's fine new film, Tex, one of three S.E. Hinton novels being made into movies with Dillon.

Back home in New York recently, Dillon told us, "I try not to think about this 'heartthrob' stuff. I'd rather have somebody come up and say, 'I really enjoyed your work.' And if they're polite, I'm happy to talk. But when they start screaming in your ear and making a scene when you're trying to be a regular Joe, well, it's embarrassing."

But it's O.K. if a girl slips you her phone number? As long as she's polite, that is?

Flashing a shy smile, Matt says, "Yeah, why not?"

So remember, girls, say please.

NATURE POSERS TEST REASON

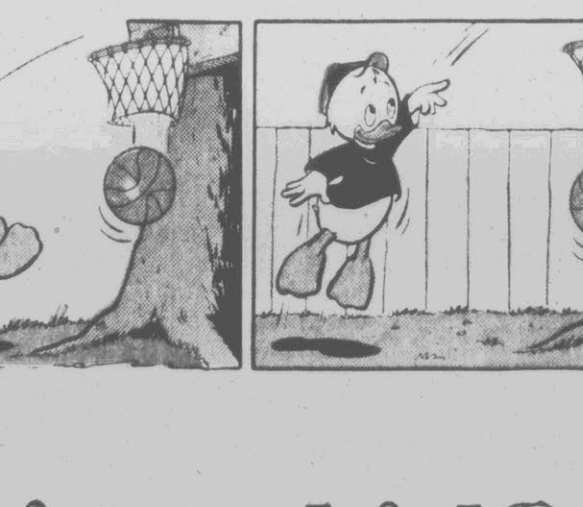

A wits tester has it:

An oak tree in Oak Park, Ill., has 17 branches, each having 11 leaves in May. If each branch doubles its leaves in 30 days, how many leaves will it have in seven full months? Can you say?

Another poser along similar lines is this: A water lily doubled in size every day for 23 days, at which time it covered an entire pond. How long did it take to cover half the pond? Do you know?

No fair peeking.

Oak Tree — probably none, for it will then be December and the leaves will have fallen. Water lily — 22 days.
