

Commissioners To Fund Schools Study

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners this morning adopted a resolution thanking the Pitt County Board of Education and the Greenville city school board for their action last week in recommending that a comprehensive study of the two systems be made and used as the basis for discussions on merging the two school districts.

The resolution also said the Board of County Commissioners will provide "reasonable" funding for the study. County Manager Reginald Gray noted that efforts are now being made to schedule a meeting with representatives of the Research Triangle Institute later this month to discuss the possibility of that organization conducting the school study. Commissioners this morning voted to accept a bid from Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. to provide banking services for the county for a two year period.

Gray told the board that the Wachovia bid was the best bid received at the bid-opening Friday.

Wachovia has been handling county banking services for the past two years.

The board also received bids for a new ambulance for the county ambulance services today. The bids included $25,207 from Emergency Vehicles Services Inc., $26,127 from Southeastern Emergency Equipment Co., and $26,515 from Ashley Ambulance Sales.

No action was taken on the bids, pending a review of the proposals by the state Office of Emergency Medical Services.

Commissioners also voted to endorse a Greenville Utilities Commission proposal to extend water mains in rural areas north of the Tar River, but not to designate any specific service area.

The Utilities Commission last month had asked the county board to approve a rural water service area, in which the GUC would extend water service to rural residents as line extension proved to be economically feasible.

$2 Million Space Suits Flawed

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Serious problems developed this morning with NASA's new generation, $2-million space suits and Mission Control cancelled a joint space walk by two shuttle astronauts.

It was the first test of the suits, which have had a history of development troubles that more than doubled their cost.

NASA officials were considering the possibility of extending the shuttle mission for one extra day, to Wednesday, if the suits can be fixed later today. This would allow a Tuesday space walk, but the scenario was "not too likely," an official said. At midmorning, the suits were still out of whack.

Shuttle manager Glynn Lunney told reporters, "We still feel very good about this flight," noting the crew last week had accomplished its main mission — deployment of two commercial satellites. But he readily conceded, "We're disappointed" by the suit failures.

One suit, worn by Joseph Allen, had a bad oxygen fan, and its balkiness — a "motorboating" sound — was clearly audible to Mission Control. The trouble with the second suit, donned by William Lenoir, could only be seen on a gauge. Officials said a regulator indicated low pressure.

After Allen's fan broke down, officials wanted Lenoir to test his suit in a space "standstill" by moving out into Columbia's airlock, the ship's doorstep to space. That also had to be scrubbed.

"This isn't our day for suits," said Allen, who had rehearsed the two-man space walk for month-after-month in water-tank simulations.

"Good try but no cigar," said Robert Stewart, the ground communicator. "You know how Monday mornings are." The scrub came an hour before the 7:50 a.m. EST space walk was to have begun. The astronauts were never in danger, and even if the problems had occurred after the walk had begun, Lunney said there would have time to safely end the walk.

The suits were developed by Hamilton Standard Division of United Technologies under a $46.9 million contract covering 43 suits and 13 life support systems. Problems, including an oxygen fire in an unmanned suit and a pressure leak because of failed stitching, contributed to cost overruns that pushed the actual price to more than $107 million.

"We'll be right back," Lunney added, saying the walk might be rescheduled on one of three flights planned in the first half of next year. NASA would like to have this experience before committing an astronaut to maneuver away from the ship with a jet-powered back pack on flight 11 in 1984.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration's fifth shuttle flight was scheduled to end Tuesday — the space walk its only disappointment. With no more major tasks before the crew, commander Vance Brand said, "We're looking forward to returning tomorrow."

The five-day mission is to conclude with a landing at 6:33 a.m. PST at Edwards Air Force Base in the California desert.

The astronauts kept a stiff upper lip. Within an hour after the scrub, pilot Robert Overmyer joined Allen for a televised demonstration of weightlessness in the Columbia cabin. Overmyer shaved, Allen spun a gyroscope and said, "I'm too young to shave, but I'm not too young to play with toys." He's a babyfaced 45 years old.

Allen and Lenoir were to have been NASA's 28th and 29th spacewalkers, but the first to test the shuttle suits.

The problems began shortly after Allen and Lenoir moved into the shuttle airlock.

Chancellor Howell Says ECU Enrollment Above Figures For Last Year

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

East Carolina University Chancellor John Howell said this morning there is no reason for alarm about the .1 percent decrease in ECU's enrollment reported to the University of North Carolina Board of Governors Friday.

Howell said the reported decrease was a comparison of a projection with a projection and that, in actuality, enrollment this year is up from last year. He said there is no reason to think that the number of dropouts during the remainder of the year will be any greater than those of last year.

"What the .1 difference actually reflects," he said, "is that our guessers guessed very well," he commented.

"We had a head count enrollment for fall of 1981 of 13,264," he said. "The head count this fall showed 13,311 enrolled. That was why we announced an increase in enrollment at the beginning of this year and why we've walked lightly this year, thinking things were going very well."

"Full-time equivalent is always less than head count, because part-time students are counted as fractions. Our full-time equivalent last year was 12,186; our full-time equivalent this year, 12,224. "Our business office counts full-time equivalents each month and these always decline as the year goes on. At the end of the year, the monthly totals are divided by nine," he explained.

"By either count, we had an increase."

"What Dawson (UNC vice president for academic affairs Raymond H. Dawson) was reporting on Friday was a comparison of what we previously had estimated that our enrollment would be a year ago and a more recent projection of this year's

Walesa Returns Home; Goals 'Not Abandoned'

By SYLWESTER KRUPPA
Associated Press Writer

GDANSK, Poland (AP) — Lech Walesa, freed from government detention after 11 months, vowed today to remain faithful to the spirit of the outlawed union Solidarity.

He had not "signed anything, declared anything or joined anything" during his detention, Walesa said at a news conference the day after he returned to his family. He apparently referred to "loyalty oaths" extracted from some unionists as a condition for freedom.

Explaining the mysterious one-day delay in his return home after being released Sunday, he said he was taken to a meeting with the Polish general prosecutor for a review of martial law.

He returned home Sunday night to the Gdansk apartment where his family and 500 well-wishers gave him a tumultuous welcome.

"We have to reach agreement, but not on our knees" Walesa told the crowd when his shouts drew him to his window Sunday night. "I will be faithful and there is no force that can divide us. I want everything to go the way we established it," Walesa said. "I will not abandon the road and the ideals which we set forth in August."

At the news conference today in his apartment, Walesa was asked about hundreds of his Solidarity colleagues still interned.

"I weep over their fate and I will do everything to get them out by peaceful means," he said.

Parliament banned Solidarity on Oct. 8. The union had been suspended and thousands of activists interned when martial law was decreed Dec. 13 to crush 16 months of Solidarity-inspired strikes and challenges to communist authority.

Defector Claims KGB Opposed Afghan Action

NEW YORK (AP) — The late Soviet president Leonid Brezhnev decided to invade Afghanistan despite KGB advice that it was a war the Soviet Union "cannot win and cannot abandon," says a KGB defector.

Vladimir Kuzichkin, 35, also claimed in an interview in the Nov. 22 edition of Time magazine that Afghan President Babrak Karmal is a KGB agent of long standing and that Soviet secret police murdered Karmal's predecessor.

Kuzichkin, a former KGB major who defected to the British in June from his post in Tehran, Iran, was in the KGB's "Directorate S," which controls the activities of Soviet-born agents operating abroad, Time said.

He told the magazine that Brezhnev overruled repeated advice from the KGB not to turn Afghanistan into a Soviet satellite.

He said the late Soviet leader ignored warnings that "a communist takeover in Afghanistan presented hair-raising problems... an openly communist regime would arouse hostility that would then be directed against the Soviet Union."

He quoted one KGB general as saying that "Afghanistan is our Vietnam. Look at what has happened... we are bogged down in a war we cannot win and cannot abandon."

Kuzichkin also told the magazine that Karmal's predecessor, Hafizullah Amin, was installed as president by the Soviets but that Amin "did not honor specific promises made to the Soviet Union."

Amin intended to turn Afghanistan against the Soviet Union, the agent said. "So the Politburo decided Amin had to go. Preferably quietly — but certainly dead."

After unsuccessful attempts by a secret agent to poison the president, a KGB-led Soviet force stormed the palace and killed him, the agent said.

The attack force "consisted of a few hundred Soviet commandos, plus a specially trained assault group of KGB officers — rather like the U.S. Green Berets," Kuzichkin said. "They were all in Afghan uniforms, and their vehicles all had Afghan markings."

The agent said Karmal was a Soviet agent of high standing. Karmal was brought to Moscow, where he agreed to be the president of Afghanistan and to invite Soviet troops in to protect his regime. Kuzichkin said

Husband Is Right About Gift Of Wine

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I disagree on something and want you to settle it.

He appreciates fine wine and most of our friends are aware of it, so occasionally when we invite guests for dinner they bring a bottle of wine.

My husband thanks them for it, puts it away, and then he serves a wine of his own choice with our dinner.

We were recently criticized for not serving the wine a guest had brought that evening.

My husband insists that when someone brings wine, it is a gift for us, and we are under no obligation to serve it. I say that if a guest brings a bottle of wine, no matter what wine we had intended to serve we should serve the wine the guest brought. Maybe I'm wrong, but I am not having another dinner party until I find out.

ON THE FENCE

DEAR ON: Get off the fence — on your husband's side. He's right. (P.S. If it is understood in advance that a dinner guest is providing the wine, then that wine should be served.)

DEAR ABBY: I am a senior citizen in fairly good health. I lost my wife many years ago and have some living relatives, but when I die I do not want to leave anything to my relatives. Some I haven't spoken to in 30 years. I want to leave everything I have to a couple who befriended me. (I have a nice savings and some time certificates, furniture, etc.)

I talked to a man at my bank and he told me that whatever I leave will automatically go to my nearest of kin. Is this correct?

SACRAMENTO, CALIF., READER

DEAR READER: No. Only if you leave no will does everything automatically go to the nearest of kin. Now, talk to a lawyer.

DEAR ABBY: No, no, ten-thousand times NO! Your advice to "Seeing Red," who wrote that a relative had extracted a deathbed promise that if "H" showed up at his funeral, he'd throw her out, was desperately off the mark. "Seeing" asked for suggestions on how to keep his promise, and you actually helped him!

Abby, except for public figures, church funerals are not private invitation-only affairs. They are opportunities for individuals to lay aside the divisions that may have separated them in life in order that they can pray for the repose of the soul of the dead. If a reconciliation was impossible while one of the aggrieved parties was living, at least at the funeral the survivor can make some sort of peace.

The church does not bar its doors to people merely because they quarrel. In my opinion, the person who should be bounced from this funeral is not the one the dying man finds so odious, it is the corpse who, even facing Judgment, cannot relax his embrace on a grudge.

PRIEST IN CHICAGO SUBURBS

DEAR PRIEST: Sorry, Father, I cannot go along with "bouncing" a corpse from his own funeral.

If "H," who was specifically asked to stay away, wants to "make some sort of peace and pray for the repose of the soul of the dead," let her do so privately, at another time, instead of crashing the funeral.

Problems? You'll feel better if you get them off your chest. Write to Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

All the child psychology books I've ever read take you down the yellow brick road past puberty, serious petting, into mature relationships and leave you.

But parenting isn't like that. There are 30 million parents out there with kids between the ages of 18-55 who drift in and out of their lives like a revolving door.

The empty-nest syndrome is overrated. I have heard of some parents who moved during the night to another city (and left no forwarding address). Others have installed pay showers. Still another parent I know waited until her son got up one night to use the bathroom, then painted his room pink and rented it to a pocket-computer salesman.

No parent likes to change locks, but the situation is definitely getting out of hand. Children simply aren't leaving the home after school anymore as they did in the '60s. When they do, they multiply and come back tenfold.

So how do you displace an aging teenager? It isn't easy. When our son's bedroom began to take on the appeal of a roadside zoo (complete with sawdust on the floor), we took action.

First, we set the table for two. This made him aware that he was not expected for dinner.

Second, we intercepted his mail, wrote "No such person at this address" and had it returned to the post office for forwarding.

We posted signs in the hallway reading, "OCCUPANCY BY MORE THAN TWO IN THIS HOUSE IS A FIRE HAZARD."

We were considering telling him he would have to share his room with the family pet (and buying a wolf) when we came up with a daring but cruel idea. We stopped stocking the refrigerator.

I'll never forget the look of fear in that child's eyes standing in front of the refrigerator door (the hairs in his nose becoming frosted) saying, "Is that all there is?" if I live to be a hundred.

We never saw him again. You hear a lot of dialogue on the death of the American family. Families aren't dying. They're merging into big conglomerates. Daughters and sons who are between roommates (legal and lethal) drift in and approach the desk like they're in a hotel asking, "Is my old room still available?" Cribs and strollers appear with babies. Cars and special menus are requested.

I rechecked my child psychology book the other day for the answer and wondered, "Is there life after the index?"

Marriage Superstitions

Many superstitions have become wedding traditions. All had a specific meaning at some point, although many of these are lost in antiquity.

Carrying the bride over the threshold supposedly refers back to the days when a man captured his "bride" and carried her away. However, the more practical interpretation is that were the bride to trip on the threshold, it would be extremely bad luck; therefore she is carried to avoid the possibility of falling.

An ancient and often-observed tradition is that the bride and groom not see each other on the day of the wedding until the actual ceremony. Reasons for this are largely lost; it is conjectured that the practical reason was to deny either party a chance to change their minds at the last minute.

We all know of black-cat superstitions. But did you know that for a bride, the worst luck is if a PIG runs across her path?

Meeting a chimney-sweep on your wedding day is good luck. But meeting or seeing him is not enough to guarantee the luck, you must touch him or speak to him.

Perhaps soda bread is so well liked because it not only tastes good but is easy to make. Served warm from the oven, it's a thrifty addition to a simple weekend brunch or light supper.

Now a new recipe varies the soda bread theme. Oats are added along with the flour to make a texture change. Another feature of this loaf: it doesn't call for sugar; a little Parmesan cheese makes an excellent flavor substitute.

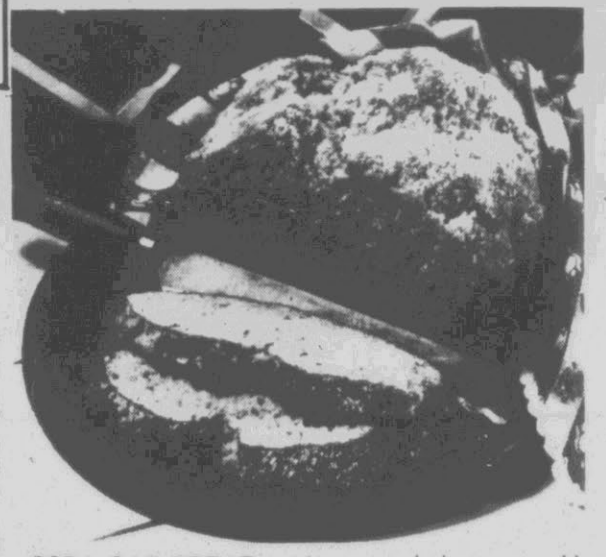

SODA OAT BREAD
1 3/4 cups all-purpose flour
1 1/2 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 teaspoon baking soda
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup quick or regular oats

3 tablespoons butter, cut in 3 pats
4 tablespoons Parmesan cheese
2 large eggs
1/2 cup buttermilk

In a medium bowl stir together flour, baking powder, soda and salt; stir in oats. With a pastry blender cut in butter until it is in small particles. Stir in 3 tablespoons of the Parmesan. In a small bowl, beat eggs just until yolks and whites are combined; reserve 1 tablespoon for brushing on bread. To the remaining beaten eggs add buttermilk and beat until blended; stir into flour mixture until a stiff dough is formed.

With lightly floured hands knead dough in the bowl about a dozen times. Shape into a ball; place in a buttered 1-quart shallow, round baking dish (7 by 1 1/2 inches) and flatten evenly to cover bottom. With a sharp knife cut an X about 1/4-inch deep through the center and to the edges. Brush with reserved 1 tablespoon beaten egg; sprinkle with remaining 1 tablespoon Parmesan.

Pat's Pointers

By Pat Trexler

Red-and-white candy canes and picot edging are the highlights of an excitingly different bright-green crocheted Christmas tree skirt, sure to be treasured for years to come. Worked in worsted weight yarn with a size K hook, it's quick and easy to make.

The red-and-green ornaments are crocheted with sports weight yarn over Styrofoam or Dylite balls.

To obtain directions for making the Candy Cane Tree Skirt and the ornaments, send your request for Leaflet No. CL-1114 with $1 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler ("The Dyal Reflector"), P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29582.

Or, you may order a kit with all instructions and materials — except crochet hooks — by sending a check or money order to Pat Trexler at the same address. Send $16 for Kit No. CK-1114-A (tree skirt only); $8.50 for CK-1114-B (ornaments only); or $20 for CK-1114-C (skirt and ornaments). Shipping charges are included.

With your crochet hook and some imagination, you can create unique and beautiful Christmas gifts at a fraction of the cost of buying them. If you are not experienced in working intricate shapes or in planning garments on your own, there is still a wide variety of gifts you can make in simple squares and rectangles.

Just to give you an idea — and to hopefully start your own creative juices flowing — here are some directions for a colorful place mat set.

With a heavy crochet cotton or any sturdy yarn of your choice, work a chain approximately 18 inches long, counting the chains as you go.

To work the pattern stitch that I will give you, you need to loosely chain a multiple of five stitches, so plan to end the chain when your count reaches a number ending with a five or a zero.

This pattern is worked in three colors. Your lightest color will be Color A, the medium color will be Color B and the darkest one will be Color C. Your starting chain and first four rows are worked with Color A.

Row 1: Single crochet in the 2nd chain from the hook and in each remaining chain to the end. Chain 1 and turn.

Rows 2, 3, and 4: Single crochet in each stitch across. At the end of each row, chain 1 and turn. At the end of Row 4, draw color B through the last 2 loops of the last single crochet before working the turning chain.

Row 5: Single crochet in each of the first 4 stitches. Step 1: Working into the row below, draw up a loop in single crochet below the single crochet just worked and under each of the next 2 single crochets, keeping all loops on the hook. Step 2: Insert the hook in the top of the next single crochet (immediately after the last single crochet worked on this row) and draw the yarn through that single crochet and through 3 of the loops on the hook. Step 3: Yarnover and draw through the remaining 2 loops — thus making 1 cluster stitch. Step 4: Single crochet in each of the next 4 stitches. Repeat these 4 steps over and over across to

Time Is With Us

Before it all becomes "lost in the shuffle" of news out of the Soviet Union, let it be said that Leonid Brezhnev was a product of his generation in Russia that vowed the motherland would not again be ravaged by conquerors or would-be conquerors.

That memory has dominated the Soviet policies of post-World War II. The ranks of those who lived through that horror-filled ordeal are thinning.

In that light, the harsh foreign and domestic policies of modern Russia are more understandable. Indeed, the men who shaped them emerge as strong and unyielding figures who in another setting might well have been admirable and probably even likeable.

Given another background, one might presume they would have emerged in leadership roles in the West; even in America. Unhappily for the world, it is their highly-disciplined and doctrinaire personalities and convictions that pose uncertainties and risks that cannot be ignored except at our own peril.

Emergence of a former KGB leader in the Kremlin leadership is a continuation of tradition in the Soviet hierarchy, offering no likelihood of relaxing the hard line toward the Russian people and the peoples beyond the Russian "sphere."

If there is any comfort to be taken these days in the Moscow story, it is that time is on "our side". Within the lifetimes of most of us, a new generation of leadership will have to take over the reins in Russia. Hopefully, their attention will focus inward ... on the needs of their own people on a broad spectrum of domestic problems.

Maybe then the rest of the world can breathe easier.

Outer Bankers Are Coping

It should not be overlooked among the problems caused by the closing of the William B. Umstead Bridge at Roanoke Island that the state and the people of the area have reacted quickly to offset the inconvenience.

Within days after a span of the bridge was damaged in a collision a temporary ferry service had been established by the state. Using landing craft the vessels were put into service to carry some vehicles across the expanse of water.

The residents of the Outer Banks are reporting dealing with the problem and arrangements are being made to handle school attendance, solid waste disposal and the other routine activities which were disrupted by the closing of the bridge.

Opening of the bridge 27 years ago was hailed as the beginning of a new era for the Outer Banks. It was, but the residents of the area have shown they can cope with the bridge's being out, just as did their forefathers who lived in isolation for centuries.

High Cost Of Elections

One of the richest men I know is Tarbaum. Therefore I was surprised to see him handing the clerk in the supermarket food stamps last Wednesday.

"What happened, Tarbaum?" I asked.

"I lost the election for the school board last week."

"I know that, but why are you on food stamps?"

"I spent $6 million of my own money. I got wiped out."

"I don't believe it. Why would you spend $6 million to be elected to the school board?"

"I didn't intend to. When I decided to run the most I was going to spend was $4 million. But I didn't realize it would turn into such a dirty campaign. My opponent took the low road. He said I thought the Head Start program was a claiming race at the Laurel Race Track. I had no choice but to buy television time and say he believed Remedial English was what Prince Andrew did on shore leave."

"I saw that commercial. It was quite effective."

"It should have been. It cost me a half a million bucks. When I started the race the polls had me leading by 14 points. I hired one of the best professional campaign directors in the country. He told me the only way to win a school board election was to promise to do away with the football team and put more money in textbooks. I bought time on all four TV stations to announce my plan, and the next day my opponent was leading me by 26 points."

"So you had to play catch-up," I said.

"It cost me $2 million to deny I had said it. Then my campaign speechwriter suggested I hit hard on the prayers-in-school issue."

"Which side did you take?"

"I came out on the same side as the Supreme Court, and even printed their decision in the newspapers."

"That was a stupid thing to do."

"Don't I know it. The Prayer in School Political Action Committee decided to spend a million dollars in my district to defeat me. My campaign manager said we had to match them dollar for dollar or we'd lose the election."

"Did you ever think of bowing out of the race when it started costing you so much money?"

"Yes. But my wife wouldn't hear of it. She had invited all our friends and people who worked in my campaign to a victory party at our estate, and she said she'd be humiliated with the caterer if she had to cancel it. Besides, I found I loved campaigning and shaking hands with people, and handing out bumper stickers to strangers. Once politics gets in your blood you don't think about what it's going to cost you."

"So you just kept plowing ahead?"

"I fired my campaign manager and brought in two guys from New York who worked on Mayor Koch's campaign for governor. We redid all our television commercials and started with a fresh conservative slant. In the first TV spot I promised if I was elected to the school board I would hire 20 percent of the teachers to balance the budget. The Teachers Political Action Committee sent in a half million dollars to defeat me. They plastered the town with billboards saying I was trying to buy the election."

"That must have hurt."

"Not as much as my second commercial when I reversed myself and said if I was elected I would hire 20 percent MORE teachers, and raise their salaries to the national level."

"So that took the teachers off your back?"

"Yes, but it brought in the Political Action Committee Against Paying Teachers a Living Wage, and they decided to get me for caving in to the union."

"When was that?"

"I think it was about the time I had to sell my house to stay in the race."

"You sold your house?"

"And the boat and the car and my wife's diamond engagement ring. You know I

To Decriminalize?

By PAUL T. O'CONNOR

RALEIGH — Every year, state and local police issue 600,000 traffic tickets on North Carolina roads. Not all of those traffic offenders are required to go before the judge but every ticket must be processed through the courts — a volume of busy work that keeps judges and district attorneys from devoting the time they'd like to give to more serious cases.

The N.C. Courts Commission wants to decriminalize minor traffic offenses as a way of taking many of these tickets out of the courts. Their draft proposal won't reduce the monetary sting of getting a speeding ticket but the commission does hope it will take as many as 300,000 cases off the state's district court dockets.

Here's how the commission's proposal would work: for minor offenses such as driving at 50 miles per hour in a 35 zone, or any other offense in which a driver is now allowed to waive his court date, the driver would be issued a ticket. He could mail in that ticket along with the monetary "penalty" it carries and the usual court costs. That's not much different from the current system. But, under the commission's proposal, you wouldn't be pleading guilty to a crime. Rep. Parks Helms, of Charlotte, commission chairman, says removing the criminal stigma of a ticket will do a great deal to increase the number of people who go ahead and mail their tickets in.

Even when people plead guilty, some like to explain why they went through that stop sign. For those people, and for those who don't think they're "responsible" for the infraction, there is a court process. The chief district court judge would either designate a magistrate or one of his judges to hear such cases. Because a criminal charge is not involved, a far less complex court proceeding would be held. No district attorney would be present and there'd be no juries. There would be no direct appeal to Superior Court but those who maintained their innocence could initiate a civil action there.

PAUL T. O'CONNOR

Anyone who failed to show up in court or to pay his ticket through the mail would have his license taken away by the Division of Motor Vehicles.

The commission has a number of tough questions to answer before it can take the proposal to the General Assembly. Franklin County clerk Ralph Knott, noting that police and magistrates often work closely together, asked if a magistrate can be an impartial arbiter. Helms says that in large counties a magistrate will be assigned exclusively to this duty so they won't have that conflict. In smaller counties, judges will have to handle traffic tickets.

Rep. Dan Blue of Raleigh asks how long a police officer can detain a speeder when no crime has been committed. If an officer suspects that a driver won't pay the ticket, he'll order him to deposit at the courthouse a sum equal to the penalty and court costs. This would be essential for out-of-state drivers. But Blue asks if an officer can hold a speeder long enough to drive to a courthouse.

Other states have answered these questions and

Other Editors Say Writing Tests

(Greensboro Record)

The state Board of Education took a big step in the right direction the other day. It recommended that the high school competency test include scoring for writing skills as well as reading and mathematics proficiency.

With that decision, the burden now shifts to the state legislature. It will be asked to appropriate almost $600,000 to put the recommendation into effect. No change in state law is required, but according to the state board, money will be needed to train teachers to administer the test and to pay for grading.

Under the state board's plan, the program would be phased in over the next four years and the writing portion would be fully incorporated into the competency test beginning with the graduating class of 1987. As a part of the phasing-in, written sections would be included in achievement tests for sixth and ninth graders beginning in 1983.

It appears the state board has overcome two major obstacles to testing for writing skills: (1) invalid testing mechanisms and (2) unreliable and uneconomical methods of grading the tests. According to James Hemby of the North Carolina Competency Testing Board, field tests have "provided convincing evidence that each of these problems can be satisfactorily solved."

The test itself is expected to be reasonably simple. One of two writing samples would include a telephone call memo. The other section would consist of a persuasive paragraph in which the student expressed an opinion and then supported the opinion with reasons. Another section would include an objective quiz on the mechanics of writing.

Even though new expenditures are not what the legislature seeks, we think legislators would be well-advised to find the funds needed to make writing a part of the competency test. Writing — communicating — is just as important a test of the educated person as is reading or computing.

Top Reagan Staff Split

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — White House chief of staff James Baker's decision to cancel his regular 7:30 a.m. breakfast with Edwin Meese and Michael Deaver beginning last week was the first post-election symptom that the troubled White House troika is creating more problems for Ronald Reagan than it solves.

The intimate half-hour over scrambled eggs and bacon has been a staple on Reagan's White House menu. Assurances that all is well with the troika, explicitly conveyed to us in an unsolicited conference telephone call from Baker and Meese on Nov. 9, are contrary to what one aide calls "observable facts."

Discordant personalities are envenomed by feuds over policies for the next two years. Reagan must choose whether to engineer a midterm house-cleaning — or remain trapped in his troika. Watching what one adviser calls "extreme anxieties" within the troika from his small office in the White House basement is National Security Adviser William P. Clark, heir presumptive to power if Reagan cleans house.

Although precise details are shrouded, this much seems certain: Early this week, Baker and Deaver, who often join forces against Meese, talked to the president about staff "problems." Published reports that the president was asked to find a new job for Meese or face Baker's resignation are discounted by other staffers. Baker's less convulsive aim appears to be a more centralized staff under his control — "a Baker preemptive strike," in the words of one insider.

But that would risk immediate reactions from the quiet man in the White House basement, Clark, one of Reagan's first political aides in Sacramento, remains close to Ed Meese both personally and ideologically. Clark has been spending far more time with Reagan lately than national security concerns dictate. Since the election, Clark has told Reagan what the president himself suspects: He should have followed his own instincts in the campaign and he must follow them, particularly on defense and foreign policy, as he prepares for the next two years.

Symbolic of the struggle in the troika is the Baker-Deaver agreement that Reagan should yield to Budget Director David Stockman and cut the new defense budget by a full 10 percent, roughly $25 billion. Meese views this as hoisting the white flag. Clark joins Meese, convinced that Reagan's surrender on rearming America would have disastrous worldwide repercussions.

The Baker-Deaver duo controlled Reagan's part in the 1982 campaign. Deaver, whose personal influence with both Ronald and Nancy Reagan is thought excessive by some White House aides, kept Reagan scrupulously removed from the nuclear-freeze debate. That's why the Oct. 26 Soviet nuclear test of a new counterforce missile was concealed, astonishing Clark. Clark considered the Soviet test an unexpected political bonus for Reagan in battling the nuclear-freeze issue on nine state ballots.

Baker persuaded Reagan to politically exploit the offer of huge U.S. grain sales to Moscow during the campaign. The NSC adviser was shocked, viewing the offer as an unseemly contradiction of Reagan's anti-Soviet posture.

Meese was excluded from 1982 campaign decisions. "He was told to disengage," a White House aide told us, and to concentrate on post-election strategy. But Baker, backed by Deaver, is gaining control of that strategy.

By long habit, Reagan temporizes when confronted with harsh decisions involving his staff, but there have been sensational exceptions. If he does cut the harness of his troika, the quiet man in the White House basement will be brought upstairs.

Strength For Today

GIVE SOMEONE A PAT ON THE BACK

The words of an old popular song advise us, "Give yourself a pat on the back, and say to yourself, 'Your jolly good health, you've had a good kday today!'"

There is probably some sound psychology in this. We all like to be reassured, praised, congratulated. Provided confidence does not swell into over-confidence and self-delusion, it is good to be able to hold up our heads.

But better still is giving someone else a pat. We all tend to regard ourselves as not nearly so lucky or happy as we should be. Yet if we look around with an impartial view, we are likely to be astonished at the number of people whose good fortune is much less, whose burden is heavier.

This very day, by a friendly word, a small courtesy, a few minutes of sincere interest, we can make someone's day a bit brighter. And we may be surprised to find out that our own sky is brighter, too. — Elisha Douglass

Dismay On Toy Quality, Prices

By LOUISE COOK Associated Press Writer

Kathy Decker and Douglas Thomson are experts on toys.

As the mother of a 6-year-old boy, Mrs. Decker is a toy buyer.

As the president of the Toy Manufacturers of America Inc., Thomson is a toy seller.

Mrs. Decker is concerned about what she says is the poor quality of many of today's toys, about advertising which promises more than the toys produce and about price tags which are too high.

Thomson says he shares many of Mrs. Decker's concerns. He also worries about the high costs of production, about low profit margins and about toys that are misused.

With barely a month to go before Christmas, The Associated Press brought Mrs. Decker and Thomson together, via telephone, to talk about toys.

From her home in Danville, Ill., Mrs. Decker listed some of the complaints she has and some of the problems relayed to her by parents of her son Adam's friends. In New York, Thomson — who has two grown children himself — listened, sympathized and explained.

"One of the biggest complaints, is poor quality overall," Mrs. Decker began. Toys with pieces that fall off or don't work properly. "Things with tracks — the object never stays on the tracks." Spring-action toys that don't spring. "You're spending a lot of time and energy returning toys that should work in the first place

"One of the other problems is they (toys) are so overpriced ... I can buy my son a shirt for what it costs to put Barbie in a pair of Jordache jeans ... It is the parents' responsibility to say no, but most parents want to buy their kids toys ... You just want them to work and you want them to be reasonable ..."

Barely pausing for breath, Mrs. Decker continued: "I think the ads are misleading. I know they have guidelines (but) a good portion of them on television on Saturday morning show all these super things that (the toys) are doing that they don't do at all ..."

"Then there are the novelty toys. The toys that require absolutely no imagination ... Plastic toys. Those things don't last out to the parking lot ..."

Mrs. Decker said there are some brands of toys which are excellent. "And I think that the video games — if they're supervised — are good ..." But she said that even the most careful parent can't monitor all the toys a child gets. And the packaging on many toys makes it impossible to inspect the toy before you buy it, she said.

Thomson agreed that many of Mrs. Decker's points were valid. But he said there are problems the public often does not understand. "Let's talk pricing for just a minute ... The reason that prices on goods that are made in the United States are so high is that we have the highest-cost manufacturing operations in the world ... We have very high interest rates, we have deficit spending in our government ... Our national policies over recent years have been very clearly that we would support increases in Social Security, increases in the minimum wage, increases in regulations of all sorts, a huge government bureaucracy. And all that money ends up somewhere and it ends up right in the price of the goods."

He said toy industry profit margins are "extremely low," adding that a survey of 50 major manufacturers showed average 1981 profits of 1.3 percent after taxes.

Thomson defended advertising, saying there are strict standards — both before and after commercials are broadcast. "They (the ads) are supposed to be in perfect scale. They're supposed not to do anything that can't be done by the average child."

He said consumers should use their buying power to express their views. "The do-nothing toys. I agree with you. Don't buy 'em."

In addition, Thomson said, "We do suggest very strongly to people: Know their children ... Know the environment they (the toys) are going to be brought into and then try to choose toys accordingly. And then, if you do have a problem, I recommend going very, very hard on the manufacturer."

Thomson said toys are tested rigorously for safety and "there are very few accidents of a serious nature." Those accidents that do occur, he said, tend to be highly publicized and often result from factors beyond the control of the manufacturer — children on tricycles falling down stairs, for example.

Seven People Rescued By Coast Guard From Sailboat Off N.C.

CAPE HATTERAS, N.C. (AP) — The seven people aboard a 50-foot sailboat when it was disabled in the Gulf Stream by strong winds were safe and sound today as their vessel was towed to port, the Coast Guard said.

The crew of the ketch Klarwasser were on the 327-foot high-endurance cutter Taney, which took the boat in tow about 11 a.m. Sunday and headed for Morehead City, N.C., said Lt. Roger Gibson of the Coast Guard's 5th District headquarters in Portsmouth, Va.

The Klarwasser, which was disabled Saturday about 135 miles southeast of Cape Hatteras, was due to arrive at Morehead City today, Gibson said.

A rescue effort that ranged up and down the Atlantic coast began at noon Saturday when an amateur radio operator in Florida heard a distress call from Royal Gibson Jr., 42, who said his ketch was wallowing with its sails blown out in heavy seas of the storm-swept Atlantic.

Gibson, of Fairhaven, N.J., told Christopher Christ, the Jacksonville ham radio operator, that his yacht had lost power and that he was using the diminishing energy in his batteries to communicate, Coast Guard Lt. j.g. J.J. Bowles said. Gibson said he did not have the means to recharge the batteries.

Gibson told Christ his ketch had encountered "giant" seas and winds in excess of 65 mph when a cold decriminalized minor traffic offenses. Helms says it's essential that North Carolina do the same. With the legislature almost certain to write tougher drunk driving laws next year, district courts will be swamped with new work. Drunk driving trials will take longer to hear and, with tougher penalties, defendants will be less likely to plead guilty. That means more trials. Helms says that room must be made on the court dockets for all this new drunk driving work. He thinks decriminalization of minor traffic offenses would go a long way toward doing that.

front swept off the North Carolina coast Friday night. He said his crew members, including his 12-year-old daughter, Amy, and 12-year-old Adam Clammer, were uncomfortable but not injured.

Christ notified the Coast Guard at Mayport, Fla., and Lt. j.g. Ronald J. Kochan, the duty officer there, relayed the distress call to the Coast Guard at Cape Hatteras. The Klarwasser was too far offshore to transmit a direct distress message on her short-range VHF marine radio, said Hal Scarborough, who was standing watch at the Hatteras station.

The Taney, 80 miles away on patrol, was diverted to the Klarwasser by the Rescue Coordination Center of the 5th Coast Guard District in Portsmouth, and arrived on the scene Saturday night.

A C-130 aircraft from the Coast Guard Air Station at Elizabeth City, N.C., circled over the yacht throughout the afternoon Saturday.

The plane, piloted by Lt. Thomas Gordon, located and diverted a merchant ship, the World Zeal, to the area of the Klarwasser, which stood by the yacht until the Taney arrived.

Gordon said the jib and mainsail aboard the Klarwasser had been blown away and that the mizzen sail "was in tatters." He said he was told by Gibson that his boat did not appear to be leaking but was rolling heavily and uncontrollably.

Gibson also told Gordon that he was unable to start his auxiliary engine.

Lt. Gibson identified the other passengers as Allen Clammer, father of the 12-year old boy; Ray Klar, 64; Ken Spilke, 38, and George Boochet.

He said the disabled yacht had sailed from Morehead City earlier in the week on a voyage to St. Thomas in the Virgin Islands.

"We had two full days of very stormy weather," he said in a telephone interview. "All of us were just about to fall asleep last night (Saturday). I don't think we realized how much effort we were putting into sailing the boat."

Soon Facing Benefits, Penalties Of New Tax Laws

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Millions of Americans are about to reap the benefits and pay the penalties of the 1981 and 1982 tax bills passed by Congress.

Many of the major provisions of last year's tax cut did not take effect until this year. You will see the first dollars-and-cents tax impact of things like All Savers Certificates, Individual Retirement Accounts and the reduction in the marriage penalty when you file the return due April 15, 1983. Congressional action this year was much more limited, but the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 also could affect the amount of money you owe or the size of the refund you will get.

The most sweeping change is the four-stage reduction in rates that began in October 1981. The impact on last year's tax bills was relatively small — a 5 percent cut was implemented on Oct. 1; spread over the entire year, it meant a reduction of only 1.25 percent.

The 1982 cut, however, is a full 10 percent and so is the 1983 reduction. (The 1984 cut will be 5 percent.)

Here's an example of what it means: Assume you're married with a taxable income of $30,000 and are filing a joint return. Your federal income tax bill for 1981 was $6,160. Your marginal tax rate — the maximum rate you paid — was 37 percent.

Your 1982 tax bill will be $5,607 — a cut of $553. Your marginal tax rate is 33 percent.

Your 1983 tax bill at the same income level will be only $5,064 — a cut of $543. Your marginal rate will be reduced to 30 percent.

The rate changes mean that income you earn next year will be worth more money in your pocket than income you earn this year. And, on the opposite side of the coin, this year's deductions will be worth more than next year's.

Suppose you earn an extra $500 this year; You get a Christmas bonus or make an extra sale. The Internal Revenue Service will take 33 percent or $165. If you earn that extra $500 next year, the IRS will take only 30 percent or $150.

Conversely, suppose you reduce your taxable income by $500 this year — not by earning less, but by cutting the amount that is subject to federal income tax through a deduction, exclusion or exemption. You'll cut your tax bill by $165. Next year, the same reduction in income would be worth only $150.

"The year-end planning strategy is to try to defer your income until 1983 ... and to accelerate deductions into '82," said Sidney Kess, a partner with the accounting firm of Main Hurdman and the company's director of tax planning and policy.

Kess said taxpayers should start looking for savings in the category of exclusions and adjustments to income — money that doesn't have to be counted as income for tax purposes. You don't have to itemize your deductions to take advantage of these exclusions.

The interest earned on an All Savers Certificate, for example, is excluded from your income up to a maximum of $1,000 for a single person and $2,000 for a married couple filing jointly. The certificates went on sale Oct. 1, 1981; they will be available until Dec. 31, 1982. If you haven't earned the maximum, you might want to buy one of the certificates; interest earned in 1982 can be excluded from 1982 income.

Contributions to an Individual Retirement Account or a Keogh plan also can be subtracted from your income; there is no tax due on the contributions or on the interest they earn until you begin withdrawals. Starting this year, any wage earner can set aside up to $2,000 in an IRA; the limit on contributions to a Keogh plan — a similar tax-sheltered pension for the self-employed — was raised to $15,000. You have until April 15, 1983 to open an IRA for 1982; you can deduct contributions from your 1982 income even if you don't open the account until 1983. The rules for a Keogh account are different — you can contribute to an existing plan until April 15 and still take the exclusion on your 1982 return, but you must open the account itself by Jan. 1.

Two-income couples will get a break this year. They can adjust their income to subtract 5 percent of the lesser of the two incomes or $1,500 — whichever is less. (The maximum deduction rises to $3,000 in 1983.) A married couple with incomes of $15,000 and $10,000, for example, can deduct $500 — 5 percent of the smaller of the two incomes.

While many people will pay less tax than they expected, the unemployed may pay more, Kess said.

That's because the 1982 tax act changed the way you calculate the amount of unemployment compensation benefits which are taxable.

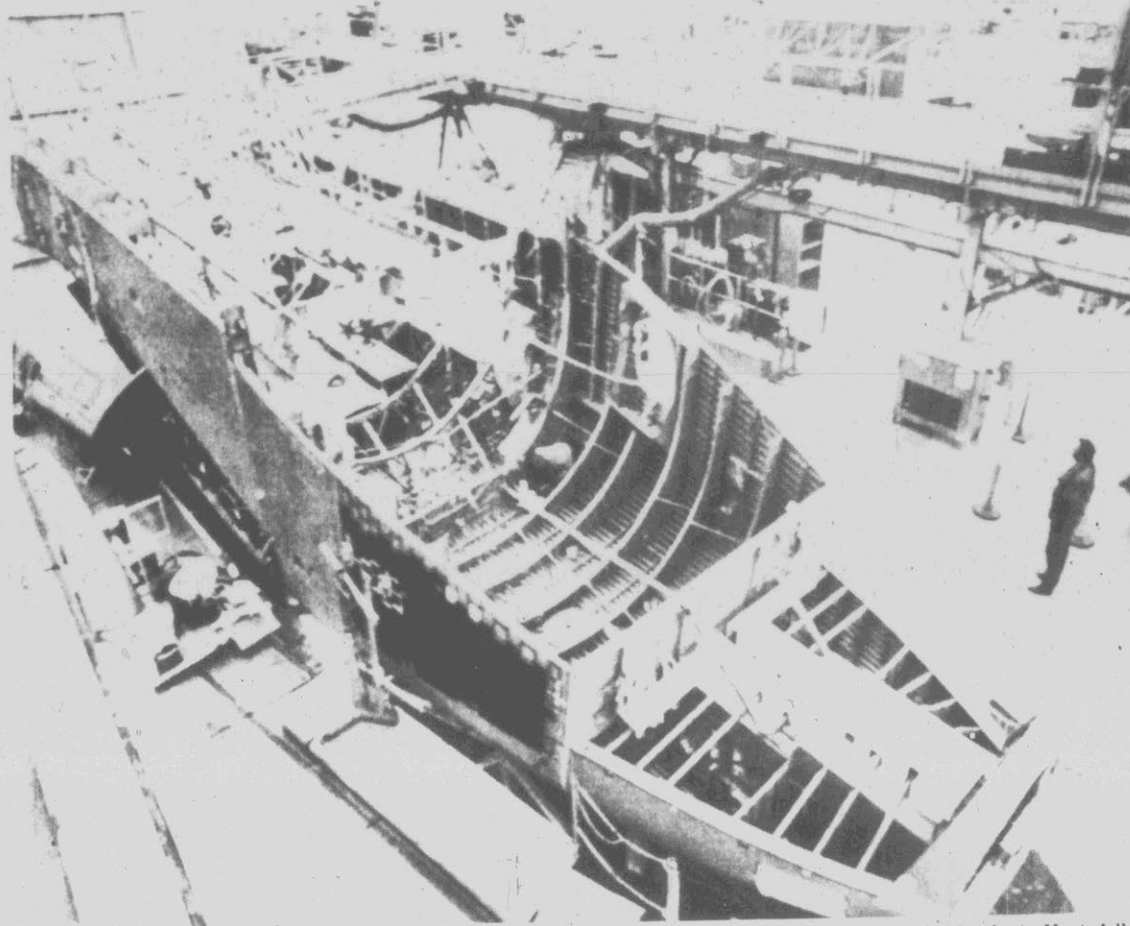

Under the old law, the amount of unemployment compensation included as part of a taxpayer's gross income was the lesser of two figures: The amount of the compensation itself or half of the sum over $20,000 for a single person or $25,000 for a married person filing jointly.

Under the new law, which is retroactive to Jan. 1, 1982, the threshold goes down to $12,000 for a single person or $18,000 for a married person filing jointly.

Here's an example of what the change means: You're married, filing a joint return. You earned $17,000 from January through August, then you lost your job. During the rest of 1982, you received $4,000 in unemployment compensation benefits.

Under the old law, none of your unemployment compensation benefits would have counted in your gross income for tax purposes since benefits and income combined did not exceed $25,000.

Under the new law, you will have to include $1,500 of the benefits — half of the excess income over $18,000 — in your gross income. Depending on your taxable income — after deductions — that can mean several hundred dollars added to your tax bill.

SHUTTLE TAKING SHAPE — Rockwell technicians, dwarfed by the high flat aluminum sides of the space shuttle "Discovery", work throughout the fuselage and cargo bay assembling the third shuttle for America's space fleet at

Rockwell International's Palmdale, Calif. plant. Next fall, Discovery will take its place alongside two sisterships, the veteran Columbia and Challenger. (AP Laserphoto)

Third Shuttle Of U.S. Fleet Is Being Built In California

By ROBERT LOCKE
AP Science Writer

PALMDALE, Calif. (AP) — For visitors who can't recognize a space shuttle in the making, a sign inside Building 294 states: "OV-103 Discovery" with an arrow pointing to scattered piles of parts.

This is Discovery, the third space shuttle for America's fleet. NASA manifests say the ship will handle Flight 12 in March 1984.

The veteran Columbia, now in its fifth flight, also will be joined by Challenger which was outfitted with the last of its three engines several days ago at Cape Canaveral.

By early December, Challenger should be on its launch pad for final tests before its Jan. 20 debut.

It will be a year before the great motorized doors of the Rockwell International hangar here slide open for delivery of "Orbital Vehicle 103" — Discovery — to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

For now, Building 294 is crowded with spacecraft parts and rolling tool boxes. Discovery sits amid the clutter in giant pieces with light green aluminum skin. On the wall is a message: "A spaceship has landed on Earth. It came from Rockwell."

NASA shuttles are assembled from parts supplied by contractors around the country. The ships are put together on the edge of this desert town 40 miles north of Los Angeles and scarcely 20 miles from Columbia's landing strip at Edwards Air Force Base.

The scene in Building 294: The vertical tail section, three stories high, rests on its side in a nest of scaffolding. Wing sections that will pivot sit on sturdy dollies. The skin that will cover the crew compartment is at one side on a trailer, its windows and openings covered with transparent plastic.

In a stockroom, row upon row of gray plastic boxes, each holding the individually numbered heat shield tiles that must be glued one by one to the ship's belly. Some black, saucer-sized tiles are already in place, with identifying stickers dangling like price tags from their edges.

The stockroom also has 3-foot-square slabs of thermal blanket that are replacing tiles where heat is less intense.

The biggest piece of Discovery is a 100-foot chunk of its body — the nose blunt and open, its high, flat sides dwarfing the technicians who crawl through holes in the fuselage or scramble along gangplanks and ladders to work in the cargo bay.

The ship, already sporting most of its stubby wings, is raised off the floor and surrounded by scaffolds and platforms.

As one workman uses a whirring drill, another runs a hand file along the edge of a metal sheet destined for space. Others work among the miles of conduit, cable and wires that stretch throughout the ship.

Atlantis, the last of four shuttles now funded, is in the pipeline.

"We're just starting to get some pieces of Atlantis," said Rockwell spokesman Bill Green. "It's just starting construction."

Chef Baked A Sculpture

IMMOKALEE, Fla. (AP) — A restaurant chef who once chopped onions at 200 mph while blindfolded may have set a new culinary record.

Richard Russo, chef at the Frontier Inn here, spent three weeks baking and crafting 800 loaves of bread into the form of a conestoga wagon.

"Guinness has the world's largest sandwich and the world's largest loaf of bread. But this is going to be the first and largest bread sculpture," he said Sunday.

Russo, 36, used 2,000 pounds of flour in the project. After the unleavened Italian bread was baked, he cut and lacquered it into the shape of a wagon.

"I use the bread as if it were wood," Russo said.

The sculpture measured 31.4 feet long, 6.2 feet high and 5.3 feet wide, covered with 50 pounds of chocolate icing. He said the measurements were certified and submitted to officials of the Guinness Book of World Records.

Then he attempted another record — for the world's largest flambe — by pouring on cooking alcohol and setting the $1,000 sculpture on fire Saturday.

Two years ago, Russo drew publicity with an onion-chopping exhibition in Fort Myers in which he went through 89 pounds of onions in 20 minutes and 50 seconds before a cheering restaurant crowd. Then he blindfolded himself and chopped onions at a knife speed clocked at 200 mph.

His next project is "the world's largest glazed donut. The problem will be building a vat large enough to fry it."

Barriers Fail On Technology

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Commerce Department apparently has failed to prevent the flow of American military technology to the Soviet Union, a Senate subcommittee says.

In a 67-page report released Sunday, the permanent subcommittee on investigations recommended that the United States strengthen its intelligence and enforcement efforts to halt a "massive, well planned and well managed" Soviet effort to acquire U.S. technology.

The subcommittee stopped short, however, of adopting a staff recommendation that the department be stripped of its enforcement powers under the Export Administration Act.

"The evidence is strong that virtually all the technology they obtain from the West is applied to the Soviet military industry," the panel said.

The minority staff of the subcommittee, after a year-long investigation, recommended at the hearings that the Customs Service be given full responsibility for enforcement of export controls.

The Commerce Department now has the primary responsibility, through its Compliance Division, with the Customs Service assigned a secondary role.

"The evidence strongly suggests that the Commerce Department to date has been unable to enforce the EAA controls in the face of mounting Soviet efforts to secure sensitive American technology," the subcommittee's report said.

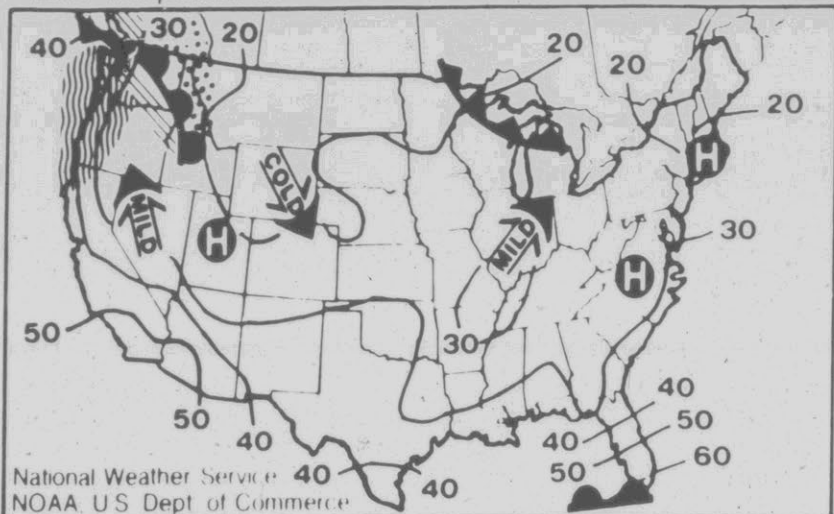

In the meantime, said the subcommittee, "advanced American micro-electronics, laser, radar and precision manufacturing technologies have been obtained by the Soviets and have enabled them to make giant strides in military strength at a minimum of risk, investment and resources."

The subcommittee is a panel of the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee.

The Forecast For

Tuesday, November 16
• Low Temperatures

Rain ☁ Snow ❄
Showers ☂ Flurries ❄❄

Fronts: Cold ☐ Warm ☐ Occluded ☐ Stationary ☐

WEATHER FORECAST — The National Weather Service forecast for Tuesday predicts showers in parts of Washington, Oregon and California. Rain is expected in a line running from parts of Washington and Oregon into Idaho. Snow is predicted in a line running from parts of western Canada into Washington, parts of Idaho and Montana. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
Sunny skies are scheduled to return to most parts of North Carolina today.

Mostly sunny weather will be rule across the state, although some light rain and cloudiness lingered along the coast this morning.

Highs today will be in the 40s, with some 50s mainly in the south and east. Fair weather is expected tonight as temperatures dip into the 20s, except for the 30s near the coast and 40s on the Outer Banks.

There will be lots of sunshine again Tuesday but there may be a few clouds along the coast and in the southeastern part of the state. Highs will be mostly in the 50s.

A small craft advisory is in effect along the coast. Northwest winds at 15 to 25 knots will become northeast tonight and decrease to 10 to 20 knots. Northeast winds at 10 to 20 knots will continue Tuesday.

A cold front advanced across the Tar Heel state Sunday night, reaching the coastal sections just before sunrise. Light rain along and just ahead of the front dampened many areas, especially in the eastern half of the state.

Skies began to clear during the early morning hours today as northerly winds began to funnel drier air into the region. The clearing trend will spread to the coast this morning as the cold front moves offshore.

A large high pressure system centered over the southern great plains will drift slowly to the east through Tuesday. As a result, fair weather is on tap for the next couple of days.

There may be a few clouds along the coast and in the southeast Tuesday. As the wind flow becomes more easterly, cloudiness over the offshore waters could drift inland.

Pre-dawn temperatures early today ranged from the 30s in the west to the 60s on the Outer Banks. Rather cool readings will prevail today but even colder temperatures will be the rule tonight under clear skies with light winds. The mercury will dip below freezing in all areas except near the coast.

Sam Currin Denies Any Political Aspirations

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — U.S. Attorney Sam Currin, a former assistant to U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms, is denying accusations made by some Democrats that he is using his office as a stepping stone for his political aspirations.

"There's probably not a prosecutor in the country that hasn't been accused of using his office to further his own political career," Currin said. "I guess I'm no different than any other prosecutor. I think our record speaks for itself."

At the center of the controversy are criminal charges stemming from the 21-month undercover investigation into corruption — Colcor. Several public officials, all Democrats, were indicted on Colcor charges, and the names of other officials have been raised in documents and videotapes shown in court.

"I think no matter who the U.S. attorney is or who the attorney general of North Carolina is, when you're dealing with these kinds of cases, you expect some criticism from some people," Currin said.

Currin says he runs his office with "political blinders" and has little contact with Helms. However, he readily acknowledges that his philosophy is in line with that of Helms.

Currin worked as Helms' assistant for 3½ years and served as special counsel to Helms on the Select Committee on Ethics that investigated misconduct by Sen. Herman Talmadge, D-Ga.

Currin points out that the two most-noted cases his office has handled — the Colcor investigation and the fraud case involving former labor leader Wilbur Hobby — were initiated by his Democratic predecessor, James L. Blackburn.

A Raleigh attorney and Hobby associate has filed a grievance with the N.C. State Bar questioning whether Currin had released more information than allowed under the N.C. Code of Professional Responsibility.

The code states that attorneys may announce the name, age, residence, occupation and family status of a defendant; the identities of victims, investigating officers and arresting officers; a description of physical evidence, but not a confession; and the substance and text of the charges.

The bar's staff attorneys review each complaint and a grievance committee decides whether any action should be taken.

Currin said he was not aware of the complaint.

James Nance, a Fayetteville attorney who represents a Colcor defendant, also has accused Currin of tipping off the media before the Colcor indictments were announced.

Nance also charges that Currin was trying to hurt Rep. Charlie Rose's chances of winning re-election in eastern North Carolina by making public an allegation that Rose had accepted an unreported, interest-free $100,000 loan. The allegation was contained in a sentencing memorandum in the case of Nance's Colcor client, former Columbus County Commissioner Edward Walton Williamson.

Rose and Gov. Jim Hunt also have charged that the disclosure was unfair.

Currin has said it was necessary to include the statement to show that Williamson was predisposed to accept bribe money and to rebut Nance's argument that his client had been entrapped by undercover agents.

Trying Want-Ads In Quest For Baby

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. (AP) — Unable to have a child of their own, Arlene and Lionel Gorbaty have turned to newspaper want ads in their quest for an infant.

"I've exhausted all other resources," said Mrs. Gorbaty, a substitute teacher who has experienced two miscarriages that were "quite traumatic."

Mrs. Gorbaty and her husband, a diagnostic radiologist, say they are running out of time to have their own children — he is 39 and she is 35.

"At our ages, there's not much optimism," Mrs. Gorbaty said.

So the Morgantown couple began running classified advertisements in newspapers from Florida to California.

ADOPTION: Professional, happily married couple wishes to provide security and love to infant," the ads say. "All expenses paid. Call collect (304) 599-1330."

The Gorbats included a letter when they sent the ads to newspapers in West Virginia, Pennsylvania, Florida and California.

"Both (of us) coming from large, close-knit families, children have always been part of our dreams and our life's plan," the letter says. "There were three children in Mrs. Gorbaty's family and six in her husband's."

Mrs. Gorbaty said she checked with lawyers before sending the material and was told there would be no legal problems, but she said some newspapers have refused to run the ads.

Before resorting to want ads, Mrs. Gorbaty said, she and her husband contacted about 1,000 gynecologists in the eastern half of the country, asking if they knew of any children who might be available for adoption. But she said the doctors gave no reply.

See Retreat To Protectionism

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Two bank officials who specialize in financing foreign investment say they fear that Western nations may retreat behind increased trade protectionism as the world recession lingers.

"On the business side, if protectionism grows, you could expect the depression to go on longer," said John Oram, London-based representative for Charlotte's First Union National Bank.

Oram and Peter Bush, First Union's representative in West Germany, said a retreat to protectionism could be particularly damaging in North Carolina and South Carolina because the two states offer attractive business environments and are well positioned to benefit from any increase in international investment.

Armed Robbery Here Saturday

Greenville police are continuing their investigation of a reported armed robbery at 609 Cotanche St. about 8 p.m. Saturday.

Chief Glenn Cannon said Jeffrey Sauls, a deliveryman for Domino's Pizza at 1201 Charles St., told officers he went to the Cotanche Street home to deliver a pizza, but no one answered the door when he knocked.

He said a man then came up behind him, threatened him with a knife, and demanded money.

Cannon said the robber, reportedly wearing a ski mask, then fled with a small amount of cash.

New Chance To Vote On Union

LEXINGTON, N.C. (AP) — More than 1,000 production and maintenance workers at PPG Industries Inc. will have a second chance Tuesday and Wednesday to vote whether they want the Teamsters Union to represent them.

In July 1978, workers at the fiberglass plant voted 698-639 for the Teamsters and the election was certified despite 31 objections raised by PPG with the National Labor Relations Board.

Views On Dental Health

Kenneth T. Perkins, D.D.S. P.A.

FLUORIDE'S FIRST BIG TEST

In 1945, New York's State health department conducted one of the first and most rigorously controlled research projects in medical history. Teams of dentists examined the teeth of thousands of school children in the Hudson River cities of Newburgh and Kingston which both had fluoride-free water. In both towns, they found the same high incidence of tooth decay.

Then on May 2, 1945 a small feeder machine was turned on in Newburgh's filtration plant; from that moment on, Newburgh's water contained 1.2 parts of fluoride per million.

Over the next ten years, doctors and dentists repeatedly checked the children medically and dentally. When the decade ended, they had found only one difference. In Newburgh, children between six and ten — who had been drinking fluoridated water all their lives — had 60% fewer decayed, missing or filled teeth than youngsters from the same age group in Kingston.

Today, fluoridation is accepted and endorsed as a major public health measure in preventing tooth decay by virtually every scientific and health organization in the country.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices tumbled today as traders scrambled to cash in on the market's gains of the past three months.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 17.75 to 1,022.17 by noon.

Declines outnumbered advances by about 6 to 1 among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said there was no single news development to account for the slide.

They said a series of wide swings in stock prices last week had apparently convinced many investors that the historic rally that began in mid-August had run out of momentum, at least for the moment.

On Friday the Dow Jones industrial average fell 14.81 to 1,039.92, finishing the week with a net loss of 11.86 points.

Wall Streeters also were uneasy about the outlook for Federal Reserve credit policy. The Fed's policy-setting Open Market Committee is scheduled to meet Tuesday, and weekly statistics on the money supply were due to be reported after the market.

Howell Says ...

enrollment. These projections have to be made for budgeting purposes and ours turned out to be very accurate.

"We projected that we would have 11,499 students not counting those enrolled in the School of Medicine. Last year, our actual average full-time equivalent was 11,496. Somehow in the working up of final estimates, they took 19 off our 11,499 and came up with a projected enrollment of 11,480. But 11,496 is a firm figure, so you can see that we actually had more students than we projected and budgeted for. Any way you count, it was so close that it made no difference in the value we were able to provide our students.

"Another point — when you look at the total enrollment of the University, our enrollment is up more than these minus-the-medical school figures reflect, because the Medical School increased by about 30 students. These figures are kept separate because the budgets are separate and what Dawson was reporting Friday was minus the medical schools. The 12,044 is our enrollment counting the medical school."

"We are not alarmed," Howell said. "By all the hard evidence we have right now, in contrast to the projections reported Friday, we have more students this year than last year and our budget was about as close to target as you can get."

Credited With Saving A Life

Greenville area native Lois Staton has been credited with saving the life of an elderly Waynesville area resident Nov. 4.

According to an article published in the Waynesville Mountaineer on Nov. 5, Miss Staton, who is director of the Haywood County Arts Council, broke open a locked door and rushed into the burning home of 80-year-old Florence DeVore to pull her out of the smoke and flames to safety.

Miss Staton, who lives in Asheville, was at the Tuscolá Park home of a neighbor of Ms. DeVore when she noticed smoke pouring out of the DeVore house, principally in the attached garage area. She rushed into the garage, found no one, then forced open the front door and found Miss DeVore on some steps. Just as the two women emerged from the house, there was an explosion in the basement and a ball of flame shot up into the house, said Mrs. G.M. Howe, the neighbor Miss Staton had been visiting. Junaluska Fire Chief Bill James was quoted as saying Miss DeVore probably would have perished without Miss Staton's assistance.

Both women sustained some injury from smoke inhalation. Ms. DeVore was hospitalized as a precaution because of a pre-existing heart condition. According to Dr. Lois Staton, aunt of Miss Staton who lives in Greenville, Miss Staton has since visited Ms. DeVore in the hospital and says she's expected to go home today. Ms. DeVore is an artist. Her house, studio, garage and automobile were severely damaged by the fire which apparently started in the car.

Miss Staton is the daughter of the late James Luther Staton and the late Mrs. Virginia Purvis Staton of Bethel.

Outer Banks Entry Route Advisory

RALEIGH — Officials in Raleigh have issued an advisory for an alternate entry route to the Outer Banks for those planning to attend the Wednesday dedication of the ship "Elizabeth II" at Manteo.

Due to the closed bridge between Mann's Harbor on the mainland and Roanoke Island, the travel schedule across Croatan Sound is subject to long delays. The advisory also applies to any travel to the Outer Banks from the mainland.

Travelers to the Outer Bank, until further notice, are advised as an alternate route to take U.S. 17 north from Williamston to Elizabeth City, then U.S. 158 from Elizabeth City through Camden and Currituck Counties, down through Kitty Hawk and Kill Devil Hills, then from Nags Head across Roanoke Sound to Roanoke Island.

This route entails approximately an extra hour of travel, but those attempting to go by Mann's Harbor are warned of a long, tedious wait for ferry service from the mainland to Roanoke Island.

Book Week At Pactolus School

PACTOLUS — The 1982 Children's Book Week theme at Pactolus Elementary will be "Get Lost In A Book The World Over," an international variation on the standard theme, "Get Lost In A Book."

Manolita F. Buck, professor of Spanish at East Carolina University, will present a Spanish program to all students and Sylvia Weismeyer, a foreign exchange student at ECU, will present a French program to all fourth and fifth graders. Each day a different country will be highlighted in a special story session.

In addition, the Pactolus Home Extension Club will prepare various foreign treats for the students and a display of international artifacts will be on exhibit in the library. Flags and travel posters will be displayed in the halls.

Temple Coach To Lead Owls For Last Time Against ECU

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Wayne Hardin, who has had only three losing seasons in 13 years as Temple University's head football coach, will lead the Owls for the final time Saturday when they host East Carolina.

The game is the season finale for the Pirates, who are 6-4.

Hardin is the second coach of a major sport at Temple to quit since Peter J. Liacouras became university president in July. Basketball Coach Don Casey left under pressure from Liacouras, but the 55-year-old Hardin denied Sunday he was pressured to quit.

Hardin said his decision "has been a culmination of a long period of time, nothing in particular."

"I just thought it was time to retire. I've been thinking about it the last two or three years."

Temple officials expressed surprise about Hardin's decision, which he announced

Saturday after an upset loss to Colgate.

"I was shocked," said Athletic Director Gavin White.

"I intend to talk with him and haven't discounted the possibility of talking him out of it. If not, I'll have to find a coach, internally or externally," White said.

Hardin said the team should have won more than four games this season.

"But the program is in good shape and at the point where a lot of people can do a good job," he said.

Hardin said the frustration of being unable to defeat Temple's intrastate rivals, Penn State and Pitt, did not play a role in his decision.

"You don't have to beat Penn State and Pitt to have a successful season," he said.

Despite Hardin's hard work, many of the team members at the urban university have been players passed over by Penn State and Pitt.

But Temple has come close to beating Penn State and Pitt several times. The Owls twice lost to Penn State by one point and another time by three on a last-second field goal. In 1979, Hardin's Owls lost 10-9 to Pitt.

Hardin indicated he was open to a good coaching offer. "I'm not fixed so well that I can't listen," he said.

Hardin ranks 15th among the nation's active coaches with a winning record of 118-73-5. He took Temple to the Garden State Bowl in 1979, when the Owls beat California. Temple was ranked 17th in the nation that season.

Temple takes a 4-6 record into the finale Saturday against East Carolina.

Hardin had six straight winning seasons at Temple, from 1970 to 1975, and an all-time university record of 14 consecutive victories. In 1974, his team posted a 9-1 record, the best in the school's history.

As coach at Navy, he produced such stars as Roger Staubach and Joe Bellino, both Heisman Trophy winners.

Temple quarterback Steve Joachim won the Maxwell Award in 1974.

Life Support Keeps Duk Koo Kim Alive

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — South Korean fighter Duk Koo Kim, showing no sign of brain function or response to any stimuli, remained alive only with the help of life support machinery while the doctor who operated on him said it would be several days before he makes a decision on shutting the machinery off.

"We want to see if we can do anything else," Dr. Lonnie Hammargren said Sunday, though adding there was "no sign of any responsiveness" and little hope Kim could survive.

"What functions remain, we don't know," he added.

Kim, knocked unconscious by World Boxing Association lightweight champion Ray "Boom Boom" Mancini in the 14th round of their title fight Saturday with a vicious right hand to the left side of the face, suffered a torn blood vessel and has a blood clot on one entire side of his head, according to Hammargren.

Mancini, who attended mass in a local hotel Sunday, said he was praying for the 23-year-old fighter.

"I pray for him and I ask the people of America and my family, to pray for him," he said. "I also pray for his family."

Mancini, his voice cracking at times, said he was numbed by Kim's condition.

"I'm very saddened, very sorry it had to happen," he said. "It hurts bad to know you're a part of it."

Mancini, his family, and about 100 followers crowded into a room at the Tropicana Hotel to celebrate mass with the Rev. Tim O'Neil, a priest who traveled with Mancini from Youngstown, Ohio, for the fight.

"Being a Christian I rely on my faith in God that all things happen for a reason," he said. "I just have to rely on my faith to get through this."

Mancini, wearing sunglasses to hide a bruised and swollen left eye, said his future in boxing was uncertain, adding that he was "going to have to sit down and seriously think about it."

Seattle Still Going Full Tilt With Win #10 Over Houston

By The Associated Press
The Seattle SuperSonics, still going at top speed, left the winless Houston Rockets on the launching pad again.

The Sonics, 10-0 this season, held off a late rally to defeat the 0-8 Rockets 102-99 Sunday night. Seattle is now five victories away from equalling the best start ever by a National Basketball Association club, 15-0 by the 1948-49 Washington Capitals.

"We've played well, and if we keep going like this, we'll be real good," Seattle Coach Lenny Wilkens said. "We haven't had many tests, like being behind 15 or 20 points. We need a couple more tests."

The Sonics, who have won all seven of their road games, built a 90-75 lead by hitting seven of their first eight shots in the fourth quarter. But Houston rallied, cutting the Seattle lead to 99-96 with nine straight points, capped by James Bailey's free throws with 1:10 to play.

Gus Williams' foul shot with 58 seconds left and two more free throws by David Thompson with 33 seconds remaining gave Seattle a 102-96 edge.

Rookie Terry Teagle tossed in a three-point shot with 21 seconds to go to trim the deficit to 102-99. The Rockets got one more chance to tie the game in the waning seconds, but Allen Leavell's three-point attempt missed.

"I thought we were more aggressive than we have been," said Houston Coach Del Harris, who saw his team lose by 33 points at Seattle in the season opener for both. "We were more serious about defense and rebounding. When you're shooting as bad as we are, the only way to keep in the game is by rebounding and defense."

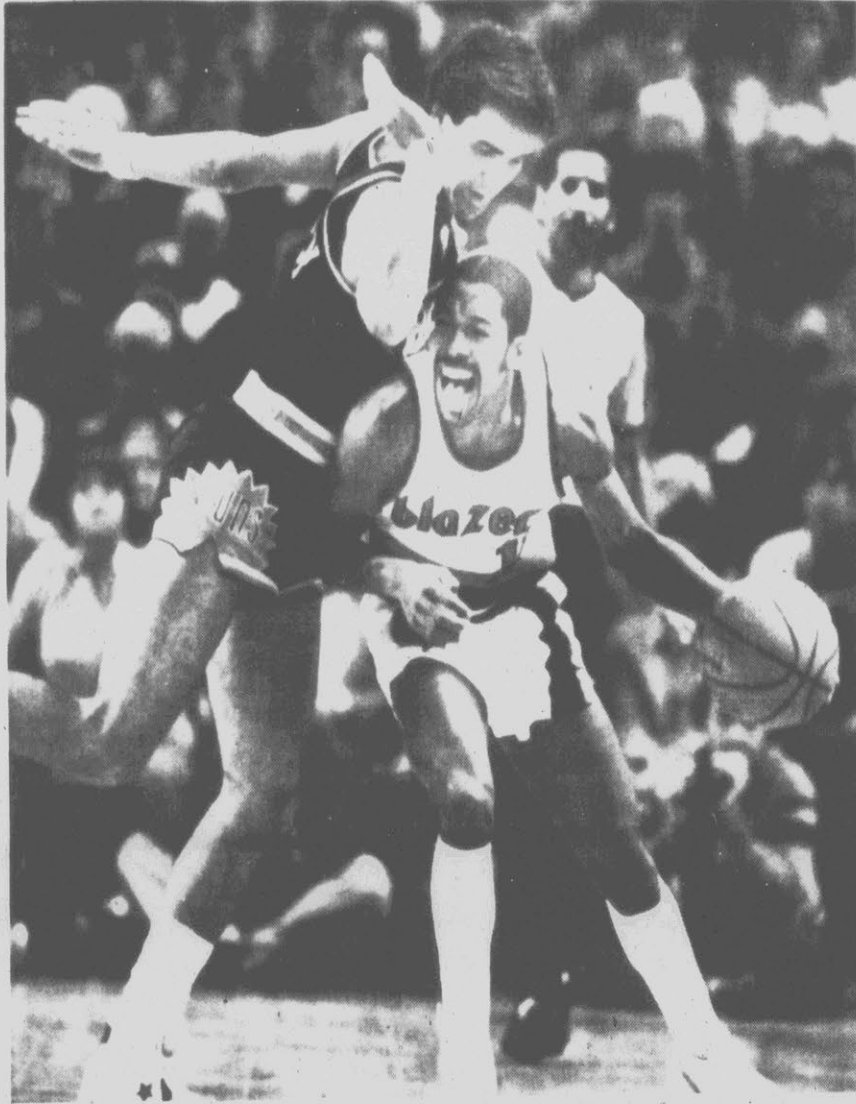

Williams led Seattle with 20 points, while Greg Kelsey and James Donaldson each came off the bench to score 18. Jack Sikma added 17 points and 14 rebounds.

Teagle, making his first NBA start, led Houston with 22.

76ers 102, Bullets 93
Philadelphia won its eighth game in nine outings as Julius Erving scored 25 points and Moses Malone added 20 points and 19 rebounds against Washington.

The 76ers blew an early 13-point lead, but still had a 43-41 advantage at halftime. Then with Erving and Malone scoring nine points apiece, Philadelphia outscored the Bullets 19-10 at the start of the second half and Washington never got closer than seven

NFL Talks Remain Stalled

NEW YORK (AP) — There is no sign that talks aimed at ending the 56-day National Football League players strike will resume soon, as management sticks to its position that it has made a "bottom-line" offer.

In fact, there were several indications Sunday that negotiations would not take place again without movement on the players' side.

"I don't think they will meet soon, not unless the ballplayers move further from the position they've already taken," said Kay McMurray, director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, after separate talks over the weekend with management negotiator Jack Donlan and union chief Ed Garvey.

McMurray said he expected both sides "are going to have to let the pressures build up" before there is movement.

Meanwhile, Donlan said Sunday he has told mediator Sam Kagel that he saw no reason to have another meeting with Garvey. Kagel recessed the latest round of bargaining Nov. 6 after little progress was made.

At that time, Donlan made what he called a "bottom-line offer," a package the owners valued at $1.313 billion over four years, starting in 1983, and $60 million in bonus money in 1982. The union has asked for $1.1 billion over three years, starting in 1982.

Donlan conferred Sunday with Chuck Sullivan, owner of the New England Patriots and chairman of the owners' executive committee.

Sullivan, asked if he felt the best interests of the league were being served in Donlan's rejecting Kagel's proposal to restart the talks, replied: "Absolutely. The meetings we had in Cockeysville (Md.) and New York were a waste of time. It created feelings in the fans and players that something was happening when, in fact, nothing was happening."

Garvey pulled a reverse of sorts last week by enlisting the aid of McMurray in his quest to resume the negotiations. Shortly after the strike began, Donlan suggested federal mediation but Garvey rejected it.

A hearing before an administrative law judge on a complaint issued against the Management Council by the National Labor Relations Board, originally scheduled for today, has been postponed to Nov. 29 at the Management Council's request. The complaint cites 17 violations, including failing to bargain in good faith and attempting to bypass the union and negotiate directly with the players.

The New York Daily News reported in today's editions that the six-man executive committee of the players association had voted to accept the general framework of management's last proposal. Approval would still have to come from the player representatives, however, before the union would act further.

David Sheridan, spokesman for the players association, said Sunday night that 26 player representatives had met Sunday night "for a 30-minute informational meeting. No votes were taken."

REED'S

Carolina East Mall, Greenville
Fine Jewelers And Diamond Importers Since 1893

Woody Peele

When Ed Emory went to talk about the upcoming game with William & Mary at his weekly press conference last Tuesday, he said that the Indians scared him because they do best what the Pirates do worst.

He was referring to William & Mary's outstanding passing game as compared to East Carolina's poor pass defense.

Because of this, Emory expected to have his hands full against William & Mary, and if that was the case, he wasn't disappointed at all.

For the spectator, it turned out to be a heckuva football game.

The Indians' passing game was just as good as it was billed. But for several dropped passes by receivers who were wide open, the outcome of the 31-27 ECU win could have been different.

At the same time, had the field conditions been different, East Carolina might have won more handily.

A heavy rain Friday night left the playing surface in soupy condition. Emory pointed out afterwards that while both teams play on the same field, William & Mary's chief game plans call for receivers to go downfield and the quarterback to drop back. "North and South" running is the terms coaches use these days.

East Carolina's offense, however, is predicated on being able to go "East and West" before heading "North and South."

The Pirates just weren't able to make their cuts down field, or to stop on the roll out to get off a pass. Several times plays lost yardage or failed to gain simply because the Pirate ballcarrier slipped to the turf when untouched. Many times, those runs would have resulted in good yardage.

For the most part, East Carolina's offensive line dominated the Indians, opening up good holes for the backs to operate through.

But at the same time, the Indian offensive line was able to give quarterback Stan Yagiello enough time to get off the pass. On nearly every passing play, too, Yagiello had all five receivers out, running patterns all over the field. Most of the receptions came in the area assigned to the corner backs and linebackers. A few were also swing passes to the trailing back as a safety valve.

The Indians, for the second year in a row, threw one up for grabs that settled in for a touchdown, as the scrambling Yagiello hit Bernie Mazzarro in the end zone for the third W&M touchdown.

Fortunately, on the final play of the game for the Indians; another "Hail, Mary" didn't make it, preserving the Pirate victory.

For Emory, it was a time of celebration. After two losing seasons — one of which his Pirates should have never had but did by losing to the Indians last year — he finally has a winner.

He can make that winner a little sweeter next Saturday at Philadelphia against Temple. But it won't be easy there either.

ECU's Byner Gains Honor

East Carolina running back Earnest Byner has been named Offensive Player of the Week and defensive end Jody Schulz and linebacker Amos Twitty are ECU's co-Defensive Players of the Week.

The picks were announced this morning after the ECU coaching staff viewed the films of ECU's 31-27 win over William & Mary.

The win leaves ECU at 6-4 and gives the Pirates their first winning season under ECU third-year coach Ed Emory. The Pirates close out the season this Saturday afternoon on the road against Temple (6-4).

The game is the fourth of four straight road games for the Pirates, who will be looking for their third straight victory and their best finish since 1979 when the Pirates were 7-3-1 under then coach Pat Dye.

Byner, a 5-10, 205-pound junior from Milledgeville, Ga., rushed for 180 yards and one touchdown on 23 carries against the Indians. He also caught a pass for six yards.

Byner's touchdown came on a 36-yard run in the third quarter.

The 180 yards was the best effort of the season by an ECU back. The previous best was 154 yards by freshman Tony Baker against Richmond.

The 180 yards was also a career best for Byner, who now has rushed for 771 yards this season.

Schulz, the 6-4, 235-pound senior All-American candidate, had eight tackles, a quarterback sack and also caused a fumble in the Pirates win. Schulz also had a tackle for a loss.

Schulz, who is from Chester, Md., was also instrumental in stopping William & Mary on a last-minute drive that helped seal the Pirate victory.

Twitty, a 6-1, 210-pound senior from Heath Springs, S.C., had 15 tackles and a fumble recovery.

Jimmy Walden was named the Specialty Team Player of the Week by the ECU staff. Walden, a 5-10, 175-pound sophomore from Greensboro, returned two kickoffs for 54 yards.

Larry Bird had 20 points and 14 rebounds and Boston held Milwaukee scoreless for 5:41 down the stretch.

The Bucks overcame a 16-point Celtic lead in the second quarter to take a 94-90 edge with 7:18 to play. But Milwaukee's scoring drought enabled Boston to come back. Free throws by Cedric Maxwell and Robert Parish broke a 98-98 tie in the final seconds.

Sidney Moncrief had 22 points to lead the Bucks.

Suns 102, Blazers 94

Alvan Adams scored 22 points and Maurice Lucas added 21 as Phoenix beat Portland for its fourth victory in a row.

The Suns, 8-2, never trailed, although the Trail Blazers got within two points on several occasions in the third quarter after Phoenix led by as many as 13 in the first half. A 10-0 spurt by the Suns to start the fourth quarter kept them in control.

Darnell Valentine and Calvin Natt scored 20 points apiece for Portland.

Lakers 111, Cavaliers 98

Jamaal Wilkes scored 30 points and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar added 25 more to lead Los Angeles over Cleveland.

The Lakers, 7-0 since a season-opening loss, handed the Cavaliers their seventh loss in eight starts.

Mass Auditions For TV Staged

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The job applicants were told to be themselves, so one guy tried the old chair trick, yanking it away just as the girl started to sit down. It was not your typical briefcase, button-down collar interview.

The eager actors and actresses who responded to ABC-TV's annual talent search were given four minutes on stage, each hoping to do or say or act something so memorable that they would linger in the mind of directors who will be casting ABC's pilots and television movies for next season.

The auditions began Nov. 8 and end this Thursday. In all, ABC expects to see about 1,000 performers wishing upon a star, and hoping to become one.

Inviting prospects to mass auditions and scouting the New York theaters is a procedure born to help feed the great maw of modern television. "With cable and more made-for-TV movies, we need actors," said Randall James, ABC's East Coast casting manager. "We must start cultivating ways for talent to get to us."

He also noted, however, "It takes a lot of guts to come here. These people have to live with rejection day in and day out."

But for every 100 or so rejections, James expects one winner.

That's why Kathleen Salamone of Schenectady, N.Y., took a pratfall when her audition partner gave her chair the old heave-ho. They were doing a scene from "Beyond Therapy," a recent play that was yanked from Broadway as quickly as the chair.

"I picked a crazy, slapstick piece to get noticed," said Miss Salamone, whose last TV role was in the movie "For Lovers Only," in which she played a newlywed whose husband ignored her for Pac-Man. "In the small amount of time we have, the best we can do is pick a light, quick piece and have fun."

Mark McConnell, a fledgling actor from Seattle who's earning his daily bread in a cheese shop, took the opposite approach. He and his partner, Leah Joki of Butte, Mont., did a softer scene from the movie "Carnal Knowledge."

"We thought we could make as big a splash by not moving at all," said Mc-Connell. James' advice to actors was to pick something that displayed their strengths. "If they're great with physical comedy, they should show that off," he said. "Some try to reach too much."

Another aspirant did his own material, racing from one dialect to another. "He went from a Brooklyn taxi driver to an Irish cop to a priest," said James. "We were looking for acting and emoting, and he was doing characterizations."

When ABC auditions in New York, James said, a different type of acting talent is on display.

"The actors in Los Angeles are not as concerned with being great actors, they just want to be discovered," he explained. "At a casting call in Los Angeles, you'll see a lot more physicality. The acting depth is not there. People in New York are more pragmatic, more serious about their craft."

McConnell, the cheese salesman from Seattle, said he harbored no fantasies about becoming the next Tom Selleck, sex-symbol star of the CBS series, "Magnum, P.I.," at least not right away. But whenever he can, he'll take his act on the network's road.

"Next time I walk into a casting room, they might remember me from the ABC audition," he said. "It may not be today ... or tomorrow. But it might be next year."

film credits include co-starring roles in several Clint Eastwood movies, did a guest spot on a "Fall Guy" episode to air November 17. (AP Laserphoto)

Opryland On The Road In Big Hunt For Talent

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Opryland is going on the road in a coast-to-coast search for singers, dancers and other performers for next year's shows at the Nashville entertainment park.

The first auditions are scheduled Wednesday in Provo, Utah. From there, Opryland officials will go to San Francisco and then around the country, winding up back in Nashville in late December and January.

"Performers whom we hire are some of the best in the nation, and versatility is a key factor," said Bob Whittaker, Opryland entertainment director. "In many cases, we need singers who can dance and dancers who can sing. And we certainly are looking for both country and non-country performers."

The auditions will be for singers, dancers, dance captains, conductor-pianists, musicians, stage managers and technicians, Opryland officials say.

The auditions are not for Grand Ole Opry, the 57-year-old country music radio show presented at the park. Park officials estimate 7,000 performers, musicians and technicians will audition in 31 cities for between 375 and 400 Opryland positions needed for spring, summer and fall performances in 1983.

The shows at the park range from relatively small bluegrass and gospel music performances to major productions requiring as many as 18 singers and dancers and 12- to 14-piece orchestras. The musical styles featured include country, pop, rock 'n' roll, Broadway and Gay 90s.

Weekly pay is $235 for singers-dancers, $296 for instrumentalists, $443 for conductor-pianists, $283 for stage managers and $199 for technicians.

The audition schedule after Provo:

San Francisco, Nov. 18; Los Angeles, Nov. 21; Albuquerque, N.M., Nov. 23; Winston-Salem, N.C., Nov. 29; Chapel Hill, N.C., Nov. 30; Columbus, Ohio, Dec. 1; College Park, Md., Dec. 2; Ann Arbor, Mich., Dec. 6; Detroit, Dec. 7; Morgantown, W.Va., Dec. 8.

Use Film By Haldeman

ROLLING HILLS ESTATES, Calif. (AP) — A producer is working on a six-part television series culled from hours of home movies shot by former Nixon aide H.R. Haldeman at the White House.

Producer James Patrick Devaney says he hopes to complete the project, based on 20,000 feet of Super-8 film, sometime next year.

In addition to the Haldeman footage, the series will include interviews with other key figures of the time.

Titled "A View From the White House," the show is "not looking to redeem" Haldeman, "nor are we out to crucify him," said Devaney.

The show will include interviews with congressmen, journalists, foreign leaders and ex-White House aides such as John Ehrlichman, Charles Colson, Herb Klein and Bryce Harlow.

"I think one of the things emerging in the interviews is a consensus that Nixon is a very complex person ... who in some cases has been misunderstood or not given a fair shake," said Devaney.

Polly Holliday Filling The Gap

NEW YORK (AP) — Actress Polly Holliday says she stepped into the television sitcom "Private Benjamin" because "a lot of people's jobs were at stake."

Miss Holliday, who starred in the television series "Flo," will portray "a gung-ho Army woman" in the TV series until actress Eileen Brennan, who was injured in a car accident, recovers.

"I hated to get a job at the expense of someone's misfortune," Miss Holliday, 44, said in an interview published in this week's "People" magazine. "But a lot of other people's jobs were at stake. I didn't want to see the show fold."

Begin Returns To Bury Wife

JERUSALEM (AP) — Wracked with grief, Prime Minister Menachem Begin has returned from the United States to bury his wife of 43 years today at the biblical burial site on the Mount of Olives.

ALIZA BEGIN

The private funeral ceremony added to the sombre mood of a country commemorating a day of mourning for the 75 Israeli troops killed Thursday when an Israeli military headquarters building collapsed in Tyre, southern Lebanon.

Begin's wife, Aliza, died Sunday from a heart attack after being hospitalized early last month for treatment of chronic asthma and acute respiratory problems. She was 62.

The 69-year-old prime minister received the news in Los Angeles at the start of a 10-day visit to the United States that was to have included a meeting with President Reagan.

Israel Radio said his first reaction was: "I shouldn't have left her."

Begin immediately flew back to Israel and arrived at Ben Gurion International Airport early Monday morning. He looked pale as he walked slowly from the plane and leaned heavily on the arm of his daughter Leah, who traveled to the United States with him.

The prime minister was met by his other daughter, Hasia and son, Binyamin. Deputy Prime Minister Simcha Erlich and Economic Coordination Minister Yaacov Meridor were also on hand.

Photographers were not permitted to take pictures of the bereaved Prime Minister.

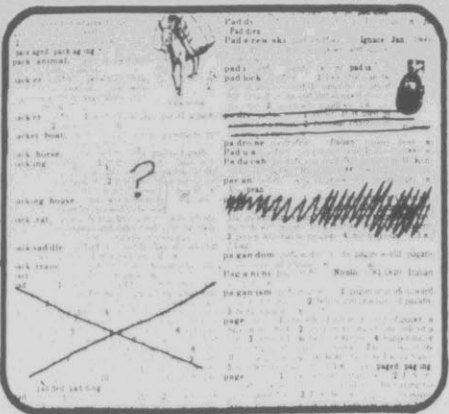

Mrs. Begin was to be buried near the graves of Moshe Barazani and Meir Feinstein, underground guerrillas who blew themselves up in Acre prison on April 27, 1947, rather than be hanged by the British for their underground activities.

Feinstein was a member of the Irgun Z'vai Leumi, the guerrilla force headed by Menachem Begin prior to the creation of the state in 1948.

Begin himself asked in a will he drew up after becoming prime minister in 1977 to be buried with his wife alongside the two men's graves.

The cortege was to leave the Sanhedria funeral parlor at 1 p.m. (8 a.m. EST) for the Mount of Olives. The family requested that the funeral be private.

What's the Word?

This month the Unicorn Hunters of Sault Ste. Marie, Michigan are taking nominations for words to be banished from the English language because of over-use or abuse. "Natural" is a likely candidate. Since advertisers have begun using the word to describe everything from granola to hair spray, it's lost its meaning anyway. And how about "ignominy"? Few people know what it means, and no one knows how it's pronounced. "Effect" and "affect" might as well go — most people have no idea when to use one rather than the other. But what effect (or affect?) will dropping these words have on our language? No doubt many will say this entire project reaches the depths of ignominy. Well, that's a natural response.

Driver Charged After Collision

An estimated $1,900 property damage resulted from two traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Friday.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from a 1:30 p.m. collision at the intersection of Tenth and Evans Streets, involving cars driven by Roden Junior Greene of Route 1, Greenville, and Donald Lindsey Green of Route 4, Greenville.

Police, who charged D.L. Greene with driving while his license are revoked and exceeding a safe speed, estimated damage at $800 to the R.J. Greene car and $350 to the D.L. Greene vehicle.

Cars driven by Clifford Stanley Strickland Jr. of Route 2, Farmville, and Jonnie Wayne Sharpe of Route 4, Greenville, collided about 1:33 p.m. on Arlington Boulevard, 60 feet east of the Evans Street intersection, causing an estimated $600 damage to the Strickland car and $150 damage to the Sharpe car.

Extended Time Plan Opposed

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The state school board has a multi-million dollar plan it hopes will keep math and science teachers interested in working in the public schools, but critics say it won't work.

Educators say the erosion of certified math and science teachers to other fields is serious. In North Carolina, about 40 percent of the junior and senior high math teachers and 29 percent of the science teachers aren't certified in their fields.

In an effort to remedy the problem, the state school board this month proposed a $3.9-million program to employ some teachers year-round, raising their salaries by as much as 20 percent.

However, critics of the plan say it won't attract many college students or teachers who are considering jobs in the industry because salaries won't be competitive.

Some teachers don't like the proposal because they don't want to work year round.

"Working 10 months is one of the pleasures of being a teacher," said Frances Johnson, a Charlotte woman who left a nine-year teaching career two years ago to become a systems analyst in private industry.

"If they had wanted to pay me more for 10 months' work, that might have convinced me. But if I'm going to work 12 months, I'm better off here. I'd never go back — no way," she said.

Critics of the plan also say it probably won't attract many college students or teachers who are considering jobs in industry, partly because salaries still wouldn't be competitive.

A starting teacher with a bachelor's degree now earns $13,010 and working 12 months could start at $15,612. Those figures do not include local pay supplements, which vary from city to city.

A spokesman at Appalachian State University in Boone, the state's largest teacher education school, says some math-education graduates leave for other fields where they can earn 50 percent or 100 percent more than starting teachers.

Critics also say the plan can't compensate for other drawbacks of teaching, such as low prestige.

"The money didn't make the difference to me," said Rosemary Sigado, a former Charlotte-Mecklenburg math and science teacher who took a technical writing job in industry. "There's no respect for teachers, they seem to be the lowest on the totem pole. And personal growth is about unheard of."

Today's Cryptiquip clue: N equals W.

The Cryptiquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. with one spade. What do you respond?
A. — Don't let that fifth spade talk you into doing something rash. You have a relatively balanced hand worth 9 points in support of spades — no more. That qualifies your hand for a sound raise to two spades. Anything else would be foolhardy.

Q.1 — Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦A1085 ♦AKQ72 ♦AQ5
The bidding has proceeded: South West North East
1 ♦ Pass 1 ♦ Pass
What do you bid now?
A. — Since this hand has all the earmarks of a possible slam, it is your duty to advise partner of this. The surest way to get your message across is with a jump shift, and the only one that presents itself is a jump to three clubs. Don't worry about partner raising clubs; you can return to hearts at the same level. If partner bids three no trump over three clubs, a simple four hearts will be adequate to complete the description of your hand.

Q.2 — Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦AQ105 ♦A4 ♦954 ♦J876
The bidding has proceeded: North East South West
1 ♦ Pass 1 ♦ Pass
2 ♥ Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A. — Because of partner's reverse, you are again in slam territory. The principle is the same as in the above — you flash the signal to partner by jumping. Here, the obvious jump is to four clubs. Since you have bypassed three no trump, you must be expressing slam interest.

Q.3 — Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦KJ1062 ♦A98 ♦73 ♦854
Partner opens the bidding

Q.4 — As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♦A1076 ♥5 ♦J952 ♦AQ95
The bidding has proceeded: North East South West
1 ♦ Pass 1 ♦ Pass
3 ♣ Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A. — Your hand revalues to about an opening bid, and an opening bid facing a hand that has opened and jumped is in the slam zone. So it is simply a matter of orderly investigation. Start off with a cue-bid of four clubs. That will convey your intentions. Thereafter, all further moves are up to your partner; you have done your bit.

Q.5 — Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦AQ762 ♦85 ♦7 ♦K8752
The bidding has proceeded: West North East South
1 ♦ Bble 1 ♦ ?
What action do you take?
A. — It looks as if East is taking advantage of the vulnerability to engage in a bit of psychic bidding. If he has spades, where are all the hearts? Partner surely isn't doubling with shortage in spades and heart length. The way to expose him is to start off with a double, then jump in spades yourself.

Q.6 — Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠A84 ♥K5 ♦Q5 ♣KQ10652
The bidding has proceeded: East South West North
1 ♦ 2 ♣ Pass 3 ♣ ?
What action do you take?
A. — Your hand is worth a shot at game, but we do not suggest that you bid three no trump. It is a sound principle that, when contracting for a close game, the stronger defensive hand should be on lead — you could gain a trick or tempo from that if partner had as little as J-x in spades. So we would cue-bid three spades to give partner the chance to convert to three no trump.

Ranchers Require Payment For Hunting On Lands

Farm Scene

By ROGER COBB
Agricultural Extension Agent

Granville wilt and mosaic have been the two most costly tobacco diseases in Pitt County for the past two years. Farmers need to become more aware of the causes of these two diseases so that they can deal with them.

First, let's review mosaic and how it lives and spreads. Mosaic does not kill tobacco plants. Instead, it is characterized by causing a mottled appearance to the leaves, usually in the top of the plant. The mottling appears as alternate areas of light and dark green color. During periods of high temperature and high light intensity, affected leaves often burn and become brittle. This is known as mosaic burn.

The plant does not die because of mosaic but stunting of leaf or plant often does occur. Also the quality of the leaf is reduced. Mosaic-infected leaves are more difficult to cure and are much thicker than non-affected leaves.

Mosaic is caused by a virus. The virus is very small and cannot be seen with an ordinary microscope. But once that virus is introduced into a living cell it becomes a part of that cell. It distorts the cell and multiplies, soon spreading over the entire leaf.

The disease spreads through the sap of infected tobacco plants. Sap is carried from a diseased plant to a healthy plant and then the healthy plant is infected. This can be done when transplants are pulled, topped, harvested or cultivated.

Horsenettle, a weed common to North Carolina, can also be infected with mosaic. These weeds need to be removed from tobacco fields to prevent the spread to tobacco.

Crop rotation and sanitation are the keys to mosaic control. Mosaic must survive or overwinter in living plant tissue. If you do an excellent job of R-9-P this will take away much of the living tissue that the virus needs to survive. If you set tobacco transplants out in a field that has old debris infected with mosaic, you will soon see mosaic again. This is why rotation and good R-9-P programs are necessary if you are to control mosaic.

Of course all sanitation practices will help control mosaic. Mosaic-resistant varieties can also be used to control mosaic but usually are not very popular due to poorer quality. A person with a severe mosaic problem may be forced to use one of the resistant varieties.

Granville wilt is a destructive tobacco disease which causes wilting and eventual death of tobacco plants. The disease is not caused by adverse environmental conditions but is caused by tiny organisms called bacteria. The bacteria can multiply rapidly under favorable soil conditions. The bacteria enter the plants through wounds or natural openings.

Once the bacteria enter the plant they multiply rapidly and actually physically prevent water and nutrient movement in the plant. This causes the initial wilting and even death.

The Granville wilt bacteria survive in the soil on old plant bed debris. This can be moved around from field to field on equipment, by moving transplants, or by washing soil from infected areas. The bacteria can even survive in pond water.

Granville wilt is influenced by environmental conditions. The organism is highly favored by high soil moisture and warm temperatures. Wounds on the roots caused by nematodes or cultivation creates avenues for the bacteria to enter plants.

The control of Granville wilt is neither simple or easy. The bacteria needs plant root hosts to survive on so continuous culture insures the buildup of the disease. Control under continuous culture is almost impossible so we must depend on rotation with crops such as soybeans, corn and small grain to help reduce bacteria levels.

Stalk and root destruction is also a necessary practice for Granville wilt control. The bacteria survive poorly in the absence of plant roots and stalks so a good job of stalk and root destruction is necessary.

Varietal resistance is a help with Granville wilt control. Highly resistant varieties are not immune to wilt. If used alone in a field with high infestation levels

TGA Having Annual Session In Raleigh

RALEIGH — The annual meeting of the Tobacco Growers Association will be held on Nov. 13 in the Kerr Scott Building on the N.C. State Fairgrounds beginning at 9:30 a.m.

According to Roger Cobb, Pitt agricultural extension agent, the keynote speaker will be U.S. Secretary of Agriculture John Block. The meeting will also be attended by Senator Jesse Helms, Fred Bond and Jim Starkey with Universal Leaf. Jim Davis will review the rules regulating the new Tobacco Bill.

All farmers are welcome to attend, said Cobb.

even these varieties will suffer.

Multipurpose chemicals by themselves are not enough to combat wilt. They must be used in combination with resistant varieties, stalk and root destruction and rotation for a successful crop.

•11-year-olds, first place, Monty King; second place, Harold Barrett and Amanda Jacobs; third place Sean Jones.

•12-year-olds, first place, Russ Edwards; second place, Carlton Elks, Mark Smith and Stacy Cayton.

Alice Keene, Community Schools coordinator, said the schools were "very pleased to have such a great turnout for the Play Day."

"This success would not have been possible without the cooperation between schools and parents who worked with and supported the total program."

Tuesday Agenda

Two rezoning requests highlight the business agenda for Tuesday's 7:30 p.m. meeting of the Greenville Planning & Zoning Commission at city hall.

The rezoning requests were submitted by: J.T. Manning Jr. to rezone 4.51 acres, located south of Fornes Run and Joe Laney property, west of Tucker Farms and Alice Drive, north of Alice Stocks property, and east of John L. Kerr property, from RA-20 to R-9; and by University Medical Park Inc. to rezone 6.7 acres, located in the University Medical Park and south of Stantonsburg Road, east of John Hopkins Drive, and west of James M. Moye heirs property, from medical arts to office and institutional.

Other business on the agenda includes: preliminary subdivision plat of University Medical Park (revised), located south of Stantonsburg Road; discussion of the land use intensity parking requirements; and discussion relative to the APA conference on Thursday in New Bern.

this year, many ranchers are charging as much as $200 a day to have game stalked and slain on their property.

H&H Hunting Unlimited, announced last month that it would act as an agent in selling daily permits — ranging from $50 for deer and bear to $20 for some game birds — for about 25 ranches covering about 200,000 acres of private land in the center of the state.

The most pricey pay-to-hunt venture was recently announced by the Eastern Slope Landowners Association, which advertises a "quality hunting experience" for $200 a day on some big ranches north of Helena.

One of the ranchers, Mike Curran, estimates the block of pay hunting land, largely posted in the past, runs as high as 400,000 acres and has a lot of elk, deer and antelope.

Still, most hunters aren't reaching into their wallets to shoot on private land, because most of the pay hunting this year is in the foothills country of central Montana.

"People in Montana talk about the economic benefits from hunting to saloons, motels and such, but the people (ranchers) who feed the game don't make a dime," Curran said.

Hunters who pay the $200 a day fee will have to sign a liability release and won't be able to drive their vehicles on the ranches. The association will provide a vehicle, gasoline and driver, and help retrieve bagged game.

Although the ranchers say their operation will be supervised by a private outfitter, Curran said it won't be a guide service.

"At first blush, $200 a day may seem expensive," Curran said. "But consider what it would cost to rent a four-wheel-drive vehicle and a driver for a day."

Ron Marcoux, associate director of the state wildlife agency, said landowners have a right to charge a trespass fee, but that it is a "fine line" whether driving hunters out of shooting areas for a fee would require ranch employees to be licensed outfitters or guides.

Meanwhile, if you say "flush" in some central Montana goose pits it could refer more to the condition of your wallet than to a waterfowl on the wing.

Harley Yaeger of the state wildlife agency said that one group of waterfowlers has paid up to $3,000 to lease land near the big public shooting area at Freezeout Lake.

Rancher Dan Wepler, who owns about 9,600 acres near Ryegate north of Billings, Montana's largest city, said he decided to charge hunters $20 a day to shoot elk and antelope last year. Wepler said he decided to ask for money because of the inconvenience.

Wepler said that out-of-state hunters, who flock to Montana from Minnesota and other states in the Midwest, didn't mind the charge, "but a few people from Billings questioned it."

Al Jenkins, president of the Billings Rod and Gun Club, said most Montana natives are less than thrilled over pay hunting.

"If they (ranchers) do this, sportsmen will stay away in droves," he said. "In two years they (ranchers) will be overrun with game eating their haystacks and will petition the Fish and Game Commission for special seasons."

"You know, paying takes all the sport out of it," Jenkins said. "If you're going to pay you might as well pay green fees and play golf."

But pay hunting has not taken over. It's almost nonexistent in southeastern Montana, says Ken Walcheck, a wildlife agency spokesman in Miles City.

"We have so many deer and antelope this year that the ranchers are looking for hunters to harvest those animals," he said.
