City School Bd. Endorses Schools Study

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Members of the Greenville Board of Education on Monday endorsed a Pitt County School Board recommendation for a study proposal for merger of the city and county school systems.

The recommendation for the study proposal for merger was made by the County school board at a noon meeting on Nov. 8 to which the city school board and the Pitt County Board of Commissioners were invited.

The motion approved Monday night by a 5-2 vote was made by member Jerry Smith. His motion was for endorsement of the proposed study, with two stipulations set forth. One is that the study be completed in six months, and the second is that the study call for specific recommendations.

A first motion, made by Frank Grooms, was defeated by a vote of 5-2. Grooms' more detailed motion was for endorsement of the study recommended by the Pitt County Board of Education, with three stipulations attached. These were: (1) That the study be completed by March 1, 1983; (2) that a commitment be made by the county board of education to accept recommendations made in the study; and (3) that the county board appoint four members and the city board three members to make a review of the study and to take appropriate action required as a result of the study.

Discussion on the proposed response was held in executive session. When the question was raised as to whether closed session discussion on this issue was justifiable under state law guidelines applicable to closed sessions, Superintendent Dr. Delma Blinson said "in discussion of personnel matters during the closed session, someone raised a question on the board's response, so we carried out discussion on the matter while in executive session."

The two motions on the response were made in open session following closed session discussions.

One member, Ernest Brown, left the meeting before action was taken on the board's response, saying he had another commitment.

Prior to discussion and action on the response, the school board heard statements from two former board members on the issue.

Mrs. Terry Shank noted her first reaction was to wonder why the need for a new study when one already existed, but after more thought, she feels a new study will serve to "gain more perspective, will provide criteria for both boards to consider." She mentioned the problems faced by the city schools in light of student population losses and resultant funding losses each year and expressed a fear that merger or some alternative action to keep city school programs viable could be as far as "five years down the road."

"I would like to suggest a time frame be put into acceptance of study recommendations," Mrs. Shank added. "It will do no one any good if the city system loses each year and gets down to where only the classroom basics exist."

Dr. Jon Tingelstad, noting he had been cited as partial to total consolidation, said he stood by that viewpoint. "I think it is the only solution on a long term basis. . . . It will be essential for both boards to maintain a dialogue."

He added that he encouraged the board to consider a positive response, "not as a resolution or a solution, but as a stepping stone to a study to get the needed answers. This has to be accomplished quickly. I hope to see more intellectual curiosity in order to come to the right decision."

In a brief press conference this morning, board chairman Jack Wall issued a prepared statement on the school board's response: "The Greenville Board of Education endorses and supports the concept of a study as contained in the recommendation of the Pitt County Board of Education. We feel this is indeed a constructive and positive step toward assuring the best possible education for all the children in Pitt County and we pledge our best efforts to achieve that goal. The Greenville Board of Education feels the study should be completed within six months and that the study should make specific recommendations concerning merger or the alternative for solving the problems of declining enrollment in Greenville City Schools."

In other matters at Monday's action meeting, the board:

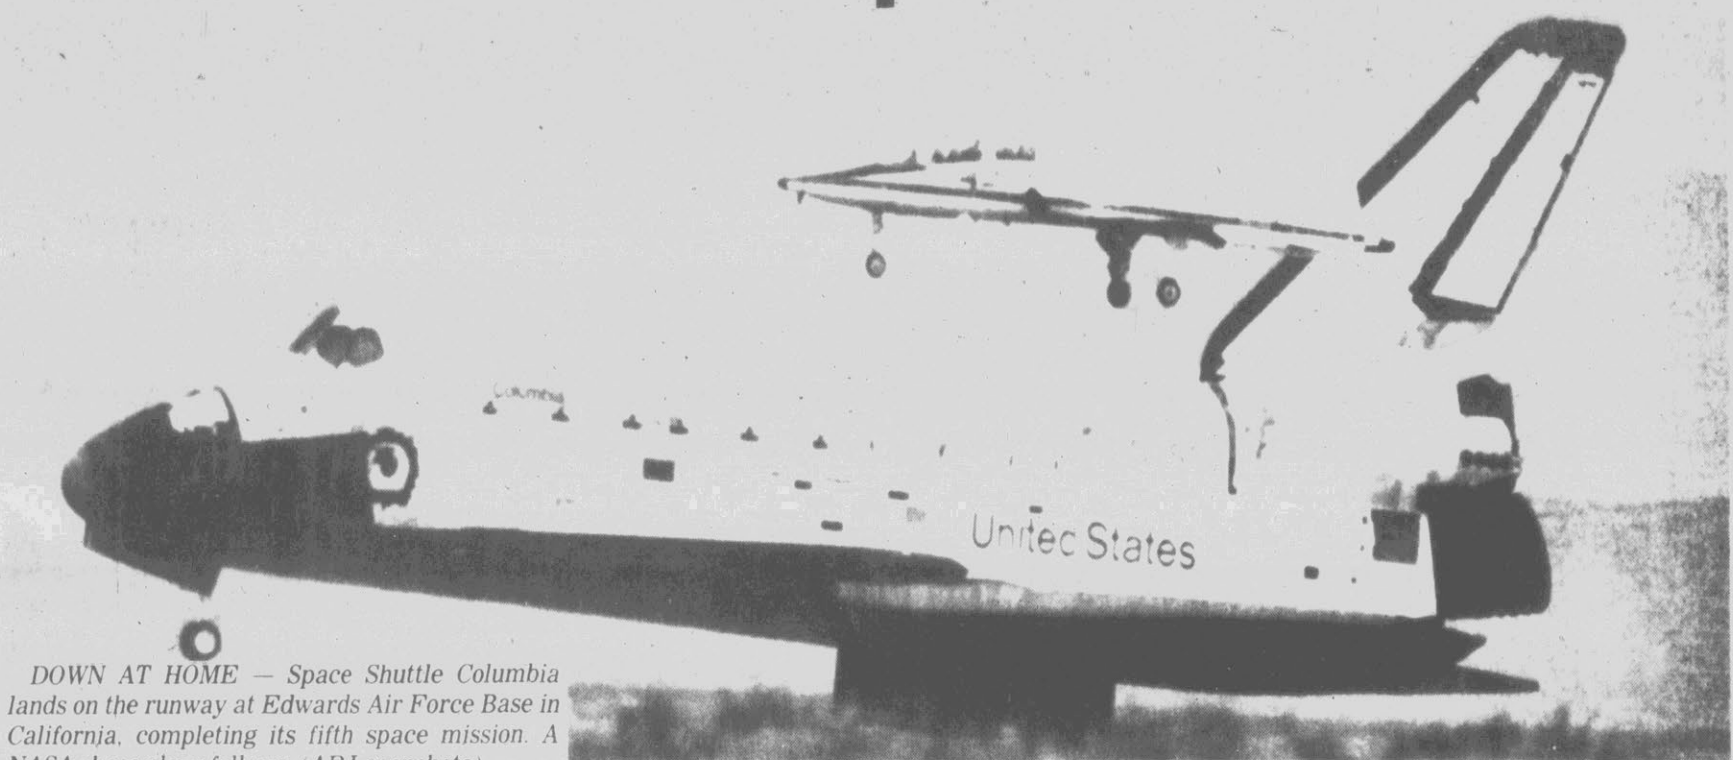

- Was presented a report of the audit of school funds for 1981-82, presented by Mike Joyner of John C. Proctor & Co., CPA, auditors of the funds. Joyner reported that following an audit recommendation, student fees this year were being handled through the central office accounting so that these funds could be audited; and that the food service fund in 1981-82 showed a healthy improvement — with an income of $62,000 as compared to a loss of $14,000 in the previous school year.

- Approved the election of two personnel, the resignation of four personnel, and leave for two personnel.

- Approved the concept of an energy conservation program within city schools with the idea that schools that showing substantial savings will benefit from the savings through additional allocations for instructional material and library books.

Columbia Completes Mission

DOWN AT HOME — Space Shuttle Columbia lands on the runway at Edwards Air Force Base in California, completing its fifth space mission. A NASA chase plane follows. (AP Laserphoto)

By ROBERT LOCKE

AP Science Writer
EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — Space shuttle Columbia broke through desert cloudcover at dawn today and returned to Earth for the fifth time in just 19 months. The mission milestone: establishing the American ship as a commercial cargo carrier.

Landing was smooth and right on the centerline. Mischievously, Commander Vance Brand asked Mission Control: "Are we down now? Are we on the ground?" The reply: "Absolutely. It was beautiful."

"You certainly lived up to your motto. Welcome home," said ground communicator Roy Bridges. "Yes sir. We Deliver," said Brand.

We Deliver. That was the NASA slogan, in orbit and on Earth, all through the flight. At one point, after deploying two commercial satellites, the cargo handlers waved a sign that added: "Fast and Courteous Service."

The crew arrived home elated with the satellite deployments, but disappointed by a canceled space walk. Landing seemed invigorating, and everyone was full of wisecracks as work crews "safed" the vehicle.

Thirty minutes after touchdown, the astronauts — Brand, Robert Overmyer, Joseph Allen and William Lenoir — stepped from the ship that had been their home for five days. Waving and smiling, they bounced jauntily, one after the other, down a stair ramp and made a walkaround inspection of Columbia.

With more than 10-million miles the odometer, Columbia's return crowned five flights for the world's first reliable spacecraft and its owner, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. Columbia is now scheduled for an overhaul and the next three flights will be flown by Challenger, now completing final modifications.

Brand guided Columbia through high clouds and calm winds, sun sparkling off the craft, to touch down on Runway 22, a 15,000-foot concrete skirt that sits on California's Mojave Desert.

For re-entry, mission specialist Allen rode in the cockpit, while Lenoir strapped himself into a seat on a lower deck.

He and Overmyer got the "go for deorbit burn" early this morning, and at 5:33 a.m. Pacific time they triggered the rockets high above the Indian Ocean. "On time, good burn," confirmed Brand as the ship headed into Earth atmosphere.

The braking rockets slowed the shuttle's 17,400-mile-an-hour orbital speed and started it from 184 miles high on a long, blazing descent back to Earth. Columbia plunged into the thickening atmosphere on a course that took it over the Pacific north of Hawaii and across the California coast.

Autoland computers guided the craft to about 40,000 feet and then, well above cloudcover that quit at 15,000, Brand took over.

He put Columbia down 30 seconds early, at 6:33 a.m., just seven minutes after sunrise.

Columbia kicked up dust to end a postcard-perfect landing.

Mission Control woke the astronauts before midnight, California time, to the music, "Take Me Home, Country Roads." Allen asked, "Is that Runway 22 in West Virginia?"

Before descent began, Bridges told Brand that conditions were "a little less than we'd like," with a high cloud deck and moderate winds. "Doesn't sound ideal, but doesn't sound too bad," Brand said. "We'll be alert to pull the nose up a little bit and bring boards in if required" to slow Columbia down. It wasn't necessary, though Brand took the controls far sooner than originally planned to bring the ship through the clouds.

Near the desert air base, an estimated crowd of 50,000 braved chilly temperatures to view the landing.

The astronauts returned in triumph despite the cancellation of Monday's space walk, derailed by technical faults in NASA's new $2-million space suits.

Modest Climb In Wholesale Prices Cited

By MERRILL HARTSON

Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices last month rose a modest 5.7 percent, calculated annually, as auto dealers introduced higher priced 1983 models, the government said today. Food and energy prices both fell slightly.

The new Labor Department report means that, for the first 10 months of 1982, inflation at the wholesale level is running at 3.3 percent. If that rate persists for the rest of the year, it would be the smallest full-year gain since the 3.2 percent of 1971.

White House spokesman Peter Roussel called today's report "good news. It indicates we're winning the battle against inflation."

In the battle against the recession, however, the Federal Reserve Board reported fresh bad news. It said factory and mine production fell 0.8 percent last month, the 13th decline in the last 15 months and the sharpest one-month fall since April. Car and truck production fell 17 percent from September.

As for wholesale prices, the Bureau of Labor Statistics said that, without the higher car and truck prices, the overall level would have remained essentially unchanged for September.

Prices to auto dealers rose 4.1 percent for cars and 6.7 percent for light trucks as domestic producers instituted price hikes for new-model-year vehicles. Those increases came about as manufacturers ended their discounts to dealers for remaining 1982 models.

Wholesale costs for new cars had tumbled 6.3 percent from August to September and costs for light trucks declined by 3.5 percent. That had contributed largely to a net, seasonally adjusted 1.7 percent fall in wholesale prices in September.

Food prices, largely reflecting continuing bumper harvests, fell 0.2 percent in October, following a 0.5 percent decline the previous month.

Energy prices edged down 0.1 percent following four months of increases. Natural gas prices fell 0.9 percent after a 2.7 percent rise in September. Gasoline prices decreased 1.3 percent after falling 0.9 percent the previous month.

Within the various categories of the wholesale price index, the sharpest rise was posted for tobacco products, which went up 11.8 percent.

In October alone, wholesale prices overall rose at a seasonally adjusted 0.5 percent, compared with the 0.1 percent decline in September and increases of 0.6 percent in July and August. If prices rose for 12 months straight at the October level, the yearly rise would be 5.7 percent.

The annual rate reported by the department is based on a more precise calculation of monthly price changes than the monthly figure released by the department.

Today's report said that for the 12 months ending in October, wholesale prices rose 3.6 percent.

In all, the unadjusted Producer Price Index, the formal name for the wholesale price calculation, stood at 284.1 in October, meaning that goods costing $10 at wholesale in 1967 would have cost $28.41 last month.

For all of 1981, prices at the wholesale level surged 7 percent following an 11.8 percent rise the year before. Economists have attributed the improved wholesale price inflation showing in part to the deep recession, abundant crop harvests and the worldwide oil glut.

The department reported this detailed examination of wholesale price activity last month:

—The overall food price decline was paced by lower prices for pork. Prices also declined for fresh fruits, flour, dairy products and rice and other cereals. Egg prices were up sharply, however, as prices also rose for poultry, fish, coffee, soft drinks, and shortening and cooking oil.

—The decline in energy prices came despite a 1 percent rise in home heating oil prices, which had been off 1.6 percent in September.

—Capital equipment costs rose 0.2 percent following a 0.4 percent decline in September that had been largely the result of the manufacturers' end-of-the-model-year incentives. Those costs are for machinery and transportation equipment used by business.

Prices rose last month for lawnmowers, drugs, lamps and bulbs, silver jewelry and tableware.

In contrast, September price declines accelerated last month for cosmetics and athletic goods. Prices fell down after rising in September for me-

Find 8 Dead In Private Plane's Crash

MARTINSVILLE, Va. (AP) - Eight people have died in an airplane crash that went undiscovered for nearly 17 hours until the pilot of another plane spotted the wreckage in dense woods less than a mile from the tiny airport from which the downed plane had taken off.

The twin-engine Piper Navajo, piloted by a Baltimore construction company executive, went down in fog and drizzling rain between 6:30 p.m. and 7 p.m. Sunday after taking off from Blue Ridge Airport about 10 miles west of this southern Virginia city near the North Carolina border, authorities said.

The wreckage was not discovered until nearly noon Monday about 1,500 feet from the airport's only runway, said state Trooper Larry Hypes.

Earlier Sunday, the travelers had celebrated the third birthday of Timothy Fromm, grandson of the pilot and his wife and son of the couple's daughter and son-in-law. All died in the crash.

Martinsville-Henry County Hospital spokeswoman Helen Schemhl identified the dead as J. Edgar Steigerwald Jr.,

53, the pilot; his wife, Lois, 48; daughter Amy, 18; daughter Pamela Steigerwald Fromm and her husband, Timothy G. Fromm, both about 30; their son, Timothy, 3; Renita Copeland, about 20; and Susan Goshorn, 19.

The Steigerwalds lived in Towson, Md.

Dr. John P. Bing said that "almost certainly" the victims died from the impact of the crash and not from exposure to temperatures that dropped into the 20s Sunday night. The plane did not catch fire.

Steigerwald was president of J.E. Steigerwald Co. Inc.,

a Baltimore construction company founded by his father.

Fromm and his wife, Miss Steigerwald and Miss Goshorn were students at the Evangelical Institute in Greenville, S.C., a two-year independent Bible school with about 80 students, said Daniel Johnson, dean of men at the school. Miss Copeland was a student at Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore.

The victims had been vacationing at a home owned by the Steigerwalds, located on the Smith River in nearby Patrick County.

They had arrived at Blue Ridge Airport on Thursday afternoon and had spent four days at the home, said Dale Maddox, family friend and caretaker at the residence. He said the family has been coming to the house regularly for two years.

The plane apparently crashed at a steep angle shortly after takeoff, according to Clyde Richardson, manager of the airport, which is located about 50 miles south of Roanoke near the North Carolina line. It clipped off the top of a couple of trees before shearing a large oak tree about eight feet off the ground.

About 30 feet beyond the oak, the plane came to a halt after slamming into a pair of foot-thick trees. Both engines, the wings and the front of the cockpit were ripped from the plane.

Steigerwald was en route to the Greenville school at the time of the crash, a family spokesman told Ms. Schemhl. According to two flight plans Steigerwald filed with the Danville Flight Service on Sunday afternoon, the plane was to fly to Greenville, then to Baltimore.

Richardson watched from his living quarters at the airport as the plane revved up its engines and taxied down the runway into the fog and drizzle. He saw the plane take off and said it didn't appear to be having any trouble.

Airport officials were not aware that anything was amiss until late Monday morning when Federal Aviation Administration officials notified them a signal from an emergency locating transmitter - a device that goes off automatically in crashes - had been picked up near the Blue Ridge Airport.

The pilot of a small plane leaving Blue Ridge a short time later saw the wreckage and turned back to the airport. He and Richardson set out for the crash site and reached it about 11:30 a.m., Richardson said.

All the victims remained in their seats, although the seats were tossed around the inside of the craft, Richardson said.

Contents of the plane were strewn around it in a broad circle: a home video cassette of the movie "Chariots of Fire," a green duffel bag hanging from a tree; a white hair dryer ground into the soft earth; a book of Christmas carols and a pair of mystery novels with the titles "They Found Him Dead" and "Echo of a Nightmare."

A muddled, black-bound Bible lay 10 feet in front of the torn cockpit, surrounded by three golf balls. Another Bible lay near the shorn left wing.

DUI Task Force Will Release Report Today

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) - The Governor's Task Force on Drunken Driving is scheduled to present its 30 recommendations to Gov. Jim Hunt today, and Hunt has said he is in agreement with most of them.

Hunt has said he approves of the task force's major recommendations for increased penalties, including mandatory jail terms and license suspension, and an increase in the minimum age for purchasing beer and wine.

The governor said he would support raising the beer and wine purchasing age from 18, but said he had made no decision on whether the age should be 19, 20 or 21.

Hunt "generally views (the recommendations) with favor, but he hasn't made up his mind on all of them," spokesman Brent Hackney said.

The governor said Friday that he will support the proposals in the 1983 Legislature. He is expected to include his drunken driving recommendations in a special message on crime to the Legislature, probably in February.

John S. Stevens, chairman of the task force, was to present the report to Hunt at a luncheon meeting in Raleigh.

Hunt appointed the 27-member panel in February amid rising public and official concern over the effectiveness of drunken driving statutes in a state where about 50 percent of all traffic fatalities involve alcohol.

The report includes a statement that North Carolina's criminal justice system must undergo "radical change" to reduce accidents caused by drunken drivers.

"Only a radical change in how our criminal justice system deals with the drinking driver, oriented toward general deterrence of drinking and driving behavior, can achieve any measureable reduction in alcohol-related traffic accidents," the report says.

Among the other recommendations is a plan to make restaurant and tavern owners liable for civil damages from accidents caused by underage patrons who were served alcohol illegally.

"I would imagine that to be the most controversial," Hackney said.

Other recommendations include:

- Abolishing existing drunken driving laws and lesser offenses and replacing them with an "impaired driving" law, which would eliminate plea-bargaining. It would provide for mandatory jail sentences of one to 14 days, depending on the severity of the case.

- Suspending the driver's license for 10 days of anyone recording .10 or more blood-alcohol level on a Breathalyzer test.

- Making it a criminal offense to operate a motor vehicle while possessing an open container of beer or wine. The Legislature rejected this proposal in earlier sessions.

Board Plans 7 Hearings

Seven public hearings on requests for special use permits are scheduled for consideration by the Greenville Board of Adjustments at Thursday's 7:30 p.m. meeting at city hall.

The requests were submitted by: Bernice Branch and Allison Aviation, in order to allow a mobile home as an office and classroom on the southeast corner of Airport Road and Highway 11; Johnny L. Jackson, in order to allow a mobile home park on the southside of Belvoir Highway across from Stanhill's Trailer Park, just inside the extraterritorial boundary;

Ledyard Ross, in order to allow a mobile home at 3010 S. Memorial Drive to be used as an office for used car sales; Douglas Teel, in order to operate a home occupation at 108 Pearl Drive;

Clifton Felton Jr., in order to allow a mobile home on Lots 1 and 2, Block A, of White Road Estates on State Road 1708; Michael W. and Pamela J. Clark, in order to allow a mobile home on Lots 1 and 2, Block B, of White Road Estates; and by Eastern Construction Co., in order to allow a concrete mixing operation on the property fronting on NC 11, adjacent to Westhaven Subdivision.

A Statement

City Councilwoman Janice Buck read a statement into the minutes of last Thursday's council session regarding the proposed merger study for the city and county school systems.

Mrs. Buck, the council's observer to the city school board, said, "I would like to express my thanks to Dr. (Delima) Blinson and members of the school board, the county commissioners, and Dr. Eddie West and members of the Pitt County School Board for their many hours of work and sincere efforts toward the continued success and improvement of our total educational system."

The council member added, "I feel that much as been accomplished so far, and I have great faith in a bright future for the education of all the children of Pitt County."

The school boards have agreed that a study of the city and county systems should be made and utilized as the basis for discussions on merging the two school districts.

New Books For Home Sewing

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

People who sew are always looking for short cuts to save time and effort without sacrificing quality.

That's especially true of the thousands of women with outside jobs who have less and less time for making clothing, accessories and home furnishings.

One publisher's response to the problem is "Speed Sewing," by Janice S. Saunders (Van Nostrand Reinhold $16.95), consumer education director for a nationwide fabric store chain and former national school manager for a major American sewing machine manufacturer.

In her 103 projects, Ms. Saunders demonstrates how today's fabrics and new machines make it possible to do mechanically what used to be handwork. The single most valuable technique, to this reviewer, was setting in sleeves flawlessly by machine without first basting them.

Another excellent new book is the third edition of "Vogue Sewing" (Harper and Row). It isn't as expensive as it first appears, since it comes with the offer of a free Vogue pattern of the buyer's choice, at any price up to $12.50, or about half the cost of the $24.95 book.

Beginners who have not yet learned to choose good styles for their figures just by looking at sketches or photographs in pattern books will find a chart of tips, along with full explanations and illustrations for altering patterns for individual figure problems.

Other useful features include a three-page guide to linings and underlinings by brand name and fiber content, weight, color and use; directions for testing knits' stretchability, which can vary enormously; a fabric width conversion chart — invaluable if the fabric you want doesn't come in any of the widths named on the pattern of your choice.

Other good values are a $5.95 spiral-bound paperback, "Sew Wonderful Silk," by Cheryl Arrants with Jan Asbjornsen and "Sew Wonderful Gourmet Garments," by Mrs. Arrants, with illustrations and technical art by her husband, Dennis.

The silk book discusses, among other things, selecting fabric stores, evaluating fabrics before buying, preparing fabrics for cutting and sewing, pretreating washable silks and avoiding tears and other damage to fragile fabrics.

The garments book contains easy-to-follow directions for 10 women's wear designs — including dresses, pants, a tunic, a coat and a jacket — to be made without paper patterns. While the puffed sleeve designs may look dated a season or two from now, enough other garments are classics to make the book a good buy.

Sew Wonderful is a Seattle-based corporation whose services include publishing educational materials and monitoring fabrics and sewing supplies for manufacturers who seek the company's endorsement.

Both books are sold in stores and by direct mail from the publishers, Sew Wonderful, P.O. Box 31928, Seattle, Wash. 98103. Add $1 to the price of each book for postage and handling.

"The Complete Book of Sewing Short Cuts," by Claire B. Shaeffer (Sterling $17.95) contains a lot of sound basic information but doesn't measure up to the Vogue, Saunders or Arrants-Asbjornsen books.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I can't think of a mother in this entire world who has not committed the first sin of parenting: comparing her children.

From the day kids are born, we compare them with ourselves, their siblings, their contemporaries and every other child with whom they come in contact.

They can't do anything right. They're smaller than their brother when he was that age. They are dumber than their sister in math. They're lazier than the boy next door. They don't catch a baseball like their dad did. Their hair doesn't hold curl like their mother's.

I remember one day my younger son said, "Why do you always compare me to my brother?"

"Because you're a cheap shot," I said.

"I wish I was an only child."

"Wouldn't matter," I said.

"When I was carrying your brother, I compared him to a baby my best friend was carrying. Hers moved a lot more than he did. Tell you what. I'll go an entire day without comparing you to anyone. Deal?"

We shook hands on it.

Fifteen hours later as I tucked him into bed I said, "Well, I did it. Not once today did I compare you to your brother."

"Big deal," he said. "You didn't speak to me all day."

"You know something?" I said. "You've got a temper just like your father. Go to sleep!"

Most mothers fall heir to the sin of comparison. They learned it at their mother's knee.

All the while I was growing up my mother would point a finger at me and say, "Erma Louise, I swear if you don't remind me of my cousin Sarah Jane. That girl could turn a sane man into a vegetable in two hours." After awhile the nickname stuck. When I talked loud, she'd yell "Speak up, Sarah Jane! I can't hear you!" Or when I was bad she'd say, "Okay, Sarah Jane, I'm getting my switch."

I never saw Sarah Jane until someone died in the family. She came to the funeral like a four-alarm fire, outshouted everyone, sat with her knees apart, ate like a pig and wasn't too bright.

Her mother looked over at her and said, "Keep it up, Sarah Jane. You're acting just like my cousin, Edith Mae! From here on in, I'm calling you Edith Mae."

I hope to heaven in all my lifetime, I never meet Edith Mae face to face!

Dear Abby

Tragic Tale Could Avert Accident

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: We have just lost our little daughter. Because your audience is so wide, you might think it worth printing how our baby died so that other parents will know. We did all the things one is supposed to do to keep a baby safe.

We put plug guards in the electrical outlets, locked up all our household cleansers, always used her car seat, etc. However, never did we think that a bathroom fixture might be dangerous to her!

We were at her grandparents' house when she toddled off. We found her in the bathroom with her head face down in the toilet bowl.

Although my husband worked and worked on her until the paramedics arrived, nothing could be done. It would have been the easiest of accidents to prevent — to always make sure everywhere she was that the toilet lid was down and the bathroom door securely closed. If only we had known!

The newspaper labeled it a "freak accident," and perhaps it was, but if it happened to our precious baby, it could happen to another child. It would help us to think that even one parent might be alerted to this possible hazard.

MR. & MRS. J.G. IN PHOENIX

DEAR MR. & MRS. J.G.: My heart goes out to you. What kind and generous people you are to have written in your time of sorrow hoping to save some other child from the tragedy yours suffered. May God keep her in his loving care and give you the strength to bear the burden of your irreplaceable loss.

What a pity that you will never know how many toddlers will be saved because you cared enough to write.

DEAR ABBY: In a recent column you advised John Paul Jones Jr. that at the time of his father's death, he could simply drop the "Junior." This is not correct.

When a child is named "Junior," it is on his birth certificate, and it is part of his legal name. His father then may — or may not — choose to call himself "Senior" to avoid confusion, but that would be an "assumed" name. It does not become part of his legal name.

Sen. Barry Goldwater may be referred to as "Barry Goldwater Sr." but that is not his legal name.

No one has a "Senior" on his birth certificate because when a child is named, it is impossible to know whether he will (1) marry, (2) have children and (3) name a son after himself. If a man has a son and names him "Junior," it is on that son's birth certificate, and he is Junior forever. If upon his father's death, he wants to drop the Junior, he would have to change his name on all his insurance, bank accounts, driver's license, Social Security, automobile title, deeds, will, etc. What a chore!

A LAWYER WHO IS ALSO A JR.

DEAR LAWYER: Thanks for the lesson...I learned something today.

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem I need your advice on, but I hesitate to write because it's very confidential and I don't want anyone in this little town to know my business.

First, please tell me what you do with the letters people send to you after you've answered them. Do you save them?

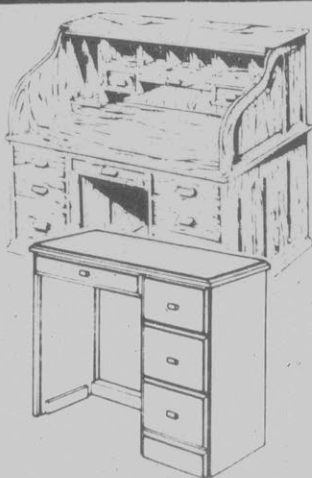

It is safe to use real names? How can a writer be absolutely sure confidences disclosed will be confidential?
JUST CHECKING

DEAR JUST: The letters I receive are destroyed immediately after they're answered. All letters are held in the strictest of confidence. It is "safe" to use real names, but not essential. A self-addressed stamped envelope is required for a personal, unpublished reply.

An Orderly Transition

There was little reason to expect any change in direction for Soviet leadership following the death of Leonid I. Brezhnev.

Nevertheless, the western world had to breathe a sigh of relief when Yuri V. Andropov was quickly named to succeed Brezhnev. It is not that Andropov is likely to make major changes in the Soviet Union's relations with the western nation. The danger was that a bitter power struggle could have broken out among the aging leaders of the Kremlin. That could have meant uncertainty about the stability of the Soviet government and would have been cause for real alarm in Washington and elsewhere.

Apparently the Kremlin leaders recognized the necessity for showing the world and its own citizens that the nation has the capacity for orderly transition of power. We suspect that the swift move to choose a successor was based primarily on the desire to show that strong leadership was still functioning in the Kremlin.

So far as the man who was chosen is concerned we can expect more of the same line from the Kremlin that we have seen in the past. Andropov is said to be an admirer of some of the western culture. He speaks English. On the other hand he made his name as head of the KGB secret police for 15 years. That experience alone is not likely to make him receptive to the call for human rights in the Soviet Union and its satellites.

There will still be a time of uncertainty in the Politbureau which named Andropov as General Secretary of the Central Committee of the Communist Party. He will still have to establish himself as the leader in fact and that could involve some struggle. After that, western relations with the Soviet Union will probably go along as they have in the past.

SEEMS TO THINK HE'LL BLEND RIGHT IN!

BY JAMES KILPATRICK

Coping With A Deficit

WASHINGTON - Now that the elections are behind us, presumably it will be possible for persons high in political life to confront the one major issue that has been taboo for months: Social Security, and what to do about it.

The National Advisory Commission on Social Security Reform met this past weekend to vote on various options and recommendations. The commission's final report will be useful, to be sure, but it will tell us little that informed actuaries have not been telling us all along. The system is in deep trouble for the short range; it is in less trouble for the long range. The need for immediate remedial action is now imperative.

Let us reason together. For purposes of discussion, let us accept the estimate that, depending upon the level of economic activity, the Social Security System faces a shortfall over the next six years of roughly $150 to $200 billion.

That deficit can be made up in only one of two ways, or by a combination of both: We can reduce benefits, or we can raise revenues. At the outset, two measures may be dismissed out of hand. It is politically inconceivable that Congress would agree to reduce the benefits now being paid to retirees. No way. Forget it. Secondly, it soon will become actuarially impossible for the major trust fund to borrow from its little brothers. By midsummer, all three funds will be broke.

Very well. Current benefits cannot be reduced, but at least in theory, prospective benefits could be reduced. One proposal is to limit the annual cost-of-living increase to perhaps 4 percent in 1983 and 1984, and to a new rule of 1.5 percent less than the preceding year's increase in wages thereafter. Over the short haul, this would reduce outlays by about $150 billion.

JAMES J. KILPATRICK

On a one-to-10 scale of political appeal, this rates about 1.5.

Another idea, of little value for the short haul but of much value over the long range, is gradually to advance the age at which maximum benefits are paid. The idea makes great good sense from every demographic standpoint. Under present law, the worker who will be 55 in January 1983 could expect maximum benefits in January of 1993. He would not be greatly discommoded by having to wait until July of 1993 when he would be 65 years and six months. Under this plan, the worker who is now 53 might have to wait until he reached 66, and so on. Political appeal: maybe 4 or 5.

Consider a couple of proposals on the revenue side: Congress could vote to accelerate the already scheduled increase in the rate of Social Security taxes. Political appeal: zero. Last week it was announced that the present rate of 6.7 percent will be applied in 1983 to the first $35,700 in wages, rather than to the first $32,400. That is all the immediate tax increase the traffic will bear.

Another idea: Provide that Social Security benefits would be taxed as other income is taxed for retirees having substantial private incomes. Political appeal: 9.9.

Yet another idea, this one casually advanced by Majority Leader Jim Wright a few days ago: Impose an additional tax of 50 cents a gallon on whiskey, the proceeds to be earmarked for the Social Security funds. Political appeal: 3.6. Such an earmarking for an alcoholics program might make sense, but a nexus to old age retirement would be hard to defend. Many old persons would resent the connection. A related idea, to tie the volatile wind-fall profits tax on oil to Social Security, has even less appeal.

Still another proposal is to require that all newly hired state and federal employees be required to pay Social Security taxes as others do. This might raise $35 billion over the six years. Political appeal: perhaps 5.

So it goes. The foregoing proposals are merely examples of what might be done. None of the proposals touches the best of all possible plans, which would phase in voluntary alternatives. So sensible an approach is too much to ask of even the most conscientious members of Congress. But the 36 million (Continued on page 6)

Gasoline Tax Idea A Ploy

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON - Moments after President Reagan told his press conference Thursday that it would not take a palace coup after all for him to support higher gas taxes, one of his anti-tax economic advisers voiced his own disapproval of the scheme, but added: "If we get away with just that, we'll be well ahead of the game."

The nickel-a-gallon tax to finance public works spending is, therefore, a ploy to appease growing bipartisan hunger on Capitol Hill for old-fashioned pump-priming in the New Deal tradition. It is supposed to preempt ambitious schemes for far more spending and far higher taxes.

However improbable that goal, the gas-tax ploy marks another benchmark in the administration's departure from basic principles. It undercuts both the New Federalism and free-market economics; it signals that the White House is moving toward accommodation, not confrontation, with the expanded Democratic majority in the House and increasingly fractious Republicans in the Senate.

It also provides fresh evidence that Reagan is no match for the concentrated barrage from his advisers. Indeed, his turnaround on the gas tax raises this question: Can he withstand the renewed spend-and-tax syndrome, no matter how much he protests?

Consider the private White House briefing of Sept. 28 in preparation for the night's press conference. In the critique of Reagan's answers during a question-and-answer prep session, budget director David Stockman cautioned him about promising a balanced budget in the years ahead.

But, Reagan asked, wouldn't the $100 billion tax increase he reluctantly swallowed last summer at least trim the projected future deficit? No, Stockman replied, the deficits will get bigger. Stunned, the president said: "If I had known that, I never would have backed the tax cut." For the next 10 minutes of the briefing, Reagan's eyes glazed over and his mind seemed detached.

Accordingly, at that night's press conference, when he was asked about new tax hikes and "specifically, an increase in the gasoline tax," he replied: "Unless there's a palace coup and I'm overthrown (laughter) or overthrown, no." Hearing that, and coupling it with his shock during the afternoon briefing session, White House insiders assumed the president had drawn the line.

What's more, there were plenty of arguments inside the administration to bolster the president's instincts against the gas tax, plugged relentlessly for two years by Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis. Stockman, for once opposing higher taxes, has argued that the non-interstate highways most in need of repair are the responsibility of the states. Reagan's New Federalism would dictate that if states want to repair their roads, they should raise their own gasoline taxes.

The more sophisticated argument at the Treasury discounts the notion that the gas tax actually creates jobs. The increase in the price of gasoline could cost as many jobs in the energy industry as it creates building highways.

But even the Treasury is split. At last week's Cabinet council meeting the day before Reagan's press conference, Stockman was the only solid voice against the tax. Even White House aide Rich Williamson, usually strong against higher taxes, was benevolently neutral in his role as the presidential liaison with hard-pressed state governments.

At last week's press conference (his first since Sept. 28), the president apparently had forgotten that his "palace coup" crack answered a specific gasoline-tax question, claiming he was referring only to "general" tax increases. More remarkably, Reagan had swallowed whole Lewis's contention that the tax is a "user fee" (Treasury experts consider it plain and simple, an excise tax). Reagan also reverted to New Deal logic in declaring "There would be jobs created" by the tax.

Still Hope For Freedom

The symbol of freedom in Poland Solidarity Chief Lech Walesa was ordered released from custody last week.

It may or may not have been related to the death of Soviet Chief Leonid Brezhnev. If it was, it was done at the urging of the Soviet leaders only as a means of extending the impression of compassionate communist government.

Whatever the reason for Walesa's release, he continues to represent a threat to communist style government. Because he is the symbol of the desire for increased freedom, the Polish government will consider him dangerous.

Lech Walesa may yet bring more individual freedom to Poland and perhaps to all the communist world.

At least he has been freed and that says as much for the movement he represents as anything.

THIS AFTERNOON

Public Defenders

By PAUL T. O'CONNOR

RALEIGH - Researchers have come up with some numbers that should encourage those who propose expansion of the state's public defender system. Four researchers told the N.C. Courts Commission this month that public defenders not only cost the state less money, they also do a better job of defending their clients.

North Carolina currently has two ways of providing legal counsel for indigent defendants in criminal trials. In six judicial districts around the state, a public defender's office is operated. State-paid staff lawyers defend those facing criminal charges. In the rest of the state, the courts have a list of private lawyers who agree to defend indigents. The state pays the lawyers. But the fee is usually less than he'd charge a client who could pay his own bills.

For years the argument has raged: Which of the two methods is less expensive? Three legislative researchers who combed through 8,000 criminal cases where the state paid the bill one way or the other, say it isn't even close. The state can defend an indigent through a public defender's office for an average cost of $130 while it costs $181 per case with a private attorney. The difference would be greater, the researchers said, if statistical adjustments were made to bring two different record-keeping systems into alignment.

During this debate, it's been widely held that public defender offices are most cost effective in larger cities where private lawyers are more expensive and where a public defender's office could operate more efficiently. For those reasons, judicial districts centered in Asheville,

PAUL T. O'CONNOR

Gastonia, Fayetteville, Greensboro and Charlotte have been provided with public defenders. The study, as researcher Les Stevens reported, questioned that assumption. He found that lawyers in small towns were paid more for providing indigent service than were lawyers in the large cities which don't have public defenders.

The argument that an indigent defendant is better served by a private attorney was rebuffed by Stevens Clarke of the Institute of Government. His study of the state's presumptive sentencing act found that defendants who can pay to hire their own lawyer do much better, especially in sentencing, than those defendants who must rely on the state for a lawyer. But, among the indigent, those represented by a public defender fared much better than those who were represented by a state-paid private lawyer.

In theft cases, sentences for indigent defendants ran 40 percent longer than for those who paid their lawyers. But in charge for violent felonies, public defenders did almost as well as privately paid lawyers in getting charges dismissed before a trial.

On average, public defenders are younger than private lawyers. But many experienced private lawyers won't take ordinary indigent cases. That means indigents are often defended by younger, less experienced, private lawyers who don't specialize in criminal law the way public defenders do, said Rep. Robert Hunter of Marion. Several commission members recommended an expanded system of public defender offices with a

Other Editors Say Curse Of Money

(Asheboro Courier Tribune)

In the event you have questioned the Hunt administration's reluctance to seek new bond issues in these troubled times, take note of the referendum returns in the recent elections. Faced with two proposed constitutional amendments, the voters approved the one which cost nothing. The other one, which really only hinted of money, went down in a landslide.

To be sure, the defeat of the amendment to authorize something called "tax increment bonds" can't be attributed solely to finances. It's quite likely thousands of voters went into the booth without the foggiest idea of what this complicated proposal meant. If you theorize that they saw the word "bonds" and voted against, you probably have as good a grasp on state politics as anyone else.

Much the same may have occurred back in June when voters declined to extend government bond coverage to private colleges. Together, these results illustrate why Gov. Jim Hunt has been holding up putting those clean water bonds before the public and why officials within and without the administration believe this would be a poor time to seek new bond money for education. As the bureaucrats might say, the probability of approval is insufficient. Those who work outside government would simply guess that the issues would get killed if they were put on the ballot.

Admittedly, a bond issue is not the same as a constitutional amendment. Bonds always have built-in proponents who get out and try to spread the word. And strange as it seems, bond issues in North Carolina come about with much less frequency than constitutional amendments. There have been seven attempts to amend the state's constitution this year - and that in itself is enough to make a person vote "no". Somebody out there must think this state has the most imperfect constitution in the world.

Nevertheless, the evidence is that any proposal even lightly cursed by money is not likely to survive in the current atmosphere.

Strength For Today

RENEWAL PRAYERS

Our prayers day by day should be more for the renewal of the inner life than for specific things. Always there is a place in prayer for things - daily bread, guidance, success in one's efforts. But to the end that these may be accomplished, we are told to pray for our inner spiritual life to be renewed. This the Lord's Prayer particularly emphasizes. What we need is not so much to have things given us as to be strengthened and made so resourceful that we can get them for ourselves. Therefore, the counsel of the Bible is that we are to pray constantly for the upbuilding and enrichment of our souls; for the vitalizing of our powers until we can use them as God intends we should.

The great preacher Phillips Brooks once said in a sermon, "Do not pray for tasks equal to your powers; pray for powers equal to your tasks. Then the doing of your work will be no miracle, but you yourself will be the miracle." - Elisha Douglass

Must Have A Market To Sell

By JOHN CUNIFF

AP Business Analyst NEW YORK (AP) - Henry Ford, among many others, said it a long time ago: There has to be a market if you intend to sell your product.

Ford made sure of that in his own way by dropping the price of his vehicles to meet income levels, thus generating sales and providing jobs and higher wages for workers who might eventually become customers themselves.

Industry says it cannot be done today. Wages, it declares, already are too high and cannot be raised. Prices, it says, are so low they cannot be cut. And, you need no reminding, unemployment is high and buying sentiment is low.

In short, the economic recovery may be stalled by the inability of either producer or consumer to get off the mark. The market, that is, might not exist. And until it does, of course, those promises of recovery have little substance.

The consensus forecast of a third-quarter recovery was wrong, and most of the big-name forecasters now are in the process of revising their promises of a fourth-quarter recovery. The new consensus is, wait 'til next year.

One of the main reasons offered for this sorry condition is the high rate of unemployment, although anyone with an electronic calculator or even a simple pencil, as in Henry Ford's day, could have foreseen the developing problem.

Unemployment, it is now said, has consumed the willingness and ability of the market to respond to lower interest rates and price inducements. It has spread fear to an extent not indicated by the 10.4 percent unemployment rate.

To the 11.3 million unemployed workers, for example, must be added the 6.6 million who seek full-time work but who are involuntarily working part time, and the 1.8 million who have given up looking. That's 19.7 million.

The impact is larger still. While not all these workers are the sole support of their families, some are. By any reasonable estimate, the number of people directly affected therefore is well over 30 million.

In some geographical areas and industrial categories the impact is almost catastrophic.

The jobless rate in parts of Michigan, for example, is nearly double the national rate. During September, unemployment in mining was 18.4 percent and in construction 22.6 percent. It was 13.8 percent in manufacturing, but that too doesn't tell an entire story, because some jobs have been lost forever.

It adds up to an obvious conclusion: There is an ulcer in the consumer market. Great numbers of people are without the ability or willingness to buy.

Declining interest rates, it is said, will be a great antidote for the unwillingness. But, in spite of all the good news about interest rates, you may have noticed that it is taking a bit of time for the affect to trickle down.

True, a big effort is being made by automobile manufacturers to supply lower-cost credit, but most conventional lending institutions are slow to change. If you obtain a 16 percent car loan consider yourself lucky, because many other customers are still paying 18 percent. And you probably have noticed too that your credit card balances are still carrying an 18 percent carrying charge.

Lenders don't deny that they are lowering rates slowly, but they ask you to consider their tough situation. If overall rates should rise again, they say, they cannot afford to be caught with a lot of money lent at rates too low.

In summary, they cannot get off the mark. Nor, of course, can producers the consumers. And, of course, when you don't have buyers or sellers, you just don't have a market.

Battle Erupts Between Rival Militia Forces In Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Christian and Moslem Druse militiamen battled in the central Lebanese mountain town of Aley today, but Israeli troops intervened and imposed a cease-fire, state and privately owned radio stations reported.

They said the fighting ended at 1:15 p.m. (6:15 a.m. EST), two hours after Israeli armored forces rolled into the town, blaring appeals for a truce through bullhorns.

There was no immediate report on casualties in the latest round of fighting in Aley, 7.5 miles southeast of Beirut.

The radios also reported that Israeli forces had withdrawn from the Yarze neighborhood that houses the Lebanese army command and U.S. Ambassador Robert Dillon's mansion five miles east of Beirut.

Aley sits on the international highway that links Beirut with the Syrian capital of Damascus. The radios said the highway was still open to traffic despite the Aley clashes, which involved machine guns and mortars.

An Israeli army spokesman earlier reported gunmen fired a rocket-propelled grenade at an Israeli patrol south of Beirut before dawn today and Israeli soldiers killed one of the attackers in the ensuing shootout.

The incident occurred near the town of Shweifat, five miles southeast of Beirut's center, and none of the Israeli soldiers was hurt, the spokesman said in a telephone call from suburban Baabda.

He did not identify the dead assailant or say whether his body had been recovered.

But the Voice of Free Lebanon radio station of the rightist Christian Phalange Party said the ambushers were believed to be leftist Druse militiamen from Shweifat.

The radio said Israeli forces cordoned off the area after the 3 a.m. ambush and mounted a search in the hills overlooking the town.

Christian militiamen and Druse have been clashing in several villages of the Aley and Chouf regions in Lebanon's central mountains for the past five weeks and more than 50 people have been killed in the sectarian violence.

The two groups have been traditional foes for centuries. The animosity was sharpened by Lebanon's 1975-76 civil war when Druse militiamen sided with Palestinian guerrillas against a coalition of rightist Christians.

Both Christian and Druse leaders accused Israel of provoking the latest clash, but Israel denied the charge.

Lebanon's state radio claimed the Israeli troops opened fire without provocation in the area of the reported ambush.

Fire Damaged Family's Home

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lewis Lane Jr. and their five children on N.C. 43 near Calico was severely damaged by fire Monday afternoon.

Robert Halstead Jr., president of the Gardnersville Fire Department, said the double-wide mobile home had fire coming out a window when firemen arrived. The blaze was contained to one room by the firefighters, but severe heat and smoke damage was still done throughout the dwelling, he said.

Halstead said Mrs. Lane had gone to pick up her children from school when the fire started. He had no estimate of damage nor any determination as to the cause of the fire.

The call went in at 2:55 p.m. and Gardnersville was assisted by the Black Jack and Ayden fire departments.

Association's Man Of Year

Matthew Ward was honored Monday by the Pitt County Black Association of America as its "Man of the Year."

Ward's impact for good on young people and his service to his community were the prime factors in his being chosen to receive the award, President Arthur Staton said.

Ward is a native of Greenville, a 1971 graduate of Rose High School. He attended Pitt Community College and is a past member of the Greenville Jaycees, a member of the NAACP, and does volunteer work with the Juvenile Court Counselors office and the mental health center. He is employed at Procter and Gamble Co. here and is the past program director of the Boys Club of Pitt County.

Recitations For School Children

Mrs. Joanna Tyson, reciter of the poetry of Paul Laurence Dunbar, is assisting Greenville and Pitt County schools this week with their observance of National Children's Book Week.

Mrs. Tyson, who recently was honored by Gov. Jim Hunt as Pitt County Handicapped Volunteer of the Year, entertained students at Eastern School Monday with recitations prefaced by a short sketch of Dunbar's life and an assessment of his contribution to American literature. On Wednesday she will be at South Greenville School; Saturday night at Wellcome Middle School.

Also, Saturday night she will appear at a banquet at Cornerstone Missionary Baptist Church.

inside the administration that this at least would forestall worse retreats is dimmed by decisions facing the president this week. He will be asked by his budget-makers whether he wants to slash defense spending, raise taxes or abandon the balanced-budget goal.

Ronald Reagan, still ignoring the monetary policy that has created this deep recession, is entrapped in the budget process that led to the huge tax increase (and no relief in budget deficits). The immemorial pressures to spend and tax are not going to be assuaged by the ploy of a 5-cent gas tax.

The report will most certainly lead the commission to recommend expansion of the public defender system. Franklin Freeman, director of the N.C. Administrative Office of the Courts, says indigent defense will cost the state $16 million by 1984. A $50 difference in cost for each of the 60,000 indigent cases the state will pay for in that year — a total of $3 million — is too big to ignore.

War On Bank Accounts

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A bidding war on interest rates on large accounts broke out among North Carolina's four largest banks on Monday, and one banking official compared it to a "gasoline war."

The war began after North Carolina National Bank proposed to double the current money market interest rates on large accounts for the next six weeks.

By late Monday, First Union National Bank, The Northwestern Bank and Wachovia Bank and Trust Co. were offering a minimum 15 percent interest on an annual basis to customers willing to invest $20,000 in a 7-day certificate of deposit.

"Nobody's real happy about (paying) 15 percent," says John J. Ong, spokesman for Northwestern Bank. "In some cases it's sort of like a gasoline war."

The banks say they had to meet the rates offered by their competitors in order to keep their customers as they prepare for introduction of another savings plan, called a money-market account, that becomes available on Dec. 14.

Early customers may be the ones who benefit from the intense competition among banks and savings and loans, said Daniel P. Collins, financial industry analyst for Wheat, First Securities Inc. in Richmond, Va.

"You could very well see (a rate war) initially, but I think it'll settle down," Collins said. "The feeling is that if a bank gets the deposit in the early stages, it's likely to keep that deposit."

Banks and savings and loans see the new account as their key to attracting some of the more than $230 million invested in mutual money-market funds — much of which was siphoned away from banks and savings and loans in the first place.

The high interest rates have drawn criticism from some banking officials as the rate on the 7-day certificates last week was less than 9 percent. Spokesman for the banks said they would lose money on the accounts because of the higher rates.

NCNB's apparent attempt to draw savers away from money market funds was criticized Monday by Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. president John Medlin.

"Unrealistic pricing was a factor in the banking problems of the 1930s which spawned many of the deposit rate limitations that now are gradually being removed," Medlin said.

An NCNB spokesman said its program was "designed to attract new accounts." Existing customers will not be eligible for the new program.

WHAT TO DO IF YOU SMELL GAS.

Call Greenville Utilities immediately. Anytime day or night. We'll get a serviceman to your home or location to correct the problem.

If you don't know what natural gas smells like, stop by our office and pick up a scratch and sniff leaflet.

While you're waiting for him to get there, open a window, make sure you use no electrical switches. Extinguish any open flames and evacuate the area.

Because even though natural gas contains no poisonous ingredients, a leak can become hazardous if combustible gas pockets are allowed to form, which makes it important for you to know what natural gas smells like.

*Note: If the leak is located in the customers piping or appliances, a service charge will be billed on the following monthly utility bill.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — A broad selling wave swept the stock market today, extending a two-day retreat, as the prime rate rose for the first time in nine months and new signs pointed to a delayed recovery from recession.

Nearly 10 stocks fell in price for every one that rose in the midday tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, down 33.30 points over the past two sessions, plummeted another 17.11 points to 1,004.32 in the first two hours of trading.

"Interest rates have stopped going down for a while while the market has been hoping they would keep going down," said analyst Eldon Grimm at Birt, Wilson & Co. Inc.

Concern has risen that the Federal Reserve Board would be more cautious in lowering interest rates as a result of a continued surge in growth of the money supply. The Fed reported after the close of trading Monday that two key measures of the money supply remained above the upper limits of its growth targets.

And today, Chemical Bank raised its prime rate to 12 percent from the 11.5 percent level it adopted Oct. 22, when it undercut the rest of the banking industry. Other large banks kept their prime rate at 12 percent.

In economic developments, the Fed reported that output of the nation's factories and mines fell 0.8 percent in October, the 13th decline in 15 months. The Labor Department said wholesale prices rose 0.5 percent in October after falling 0.1 percent in September.

The NYSE's composite index fell 1.52 to 77.80. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down 9.03 at 325.43.

Big Bond volume reached 50.30 million shares a third of the way through today's session, up from 39.34 million in the same period Monday.

Governor Will Inspect Bridge

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt is scheduled to inspect the damages today at the William B. Umstead bridge, which was knocked out of commission earlier this month when it was struck by a barge.

"He wants to inspect the damage and get a briefing on the situation, since he'll be in the neighborhood," said Brent Hackney, Hunt's deputy press secretary. "He requested federal aid to get it repaired and he wants to check on his investment."

Hunt will view the damage by boat at about 2 p.m. today, Hackney said. He is scheduled to attend functions relating to the 400th anniversary of the colonization of Roanoke Island before visiting the bridge.

Meanwhile, three companies submitted bids ranging from $387,000 to $869,000 Monday for the contract to repair the William B. Umstead bridge, a state official said.

And Coast Guard officials admitted Monday that they should have notified state officials sooner than 40 hours after the barge reported striking the bridge, which serves as the main east-west

El Salvador In No Rush To Try

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Five national guardsmen face trial for the 1980 slayings of four American Roman Catholic churchwomen, and a court source says there is sufficient evidence "to hang them."

Monday's ruling by Judge Bernardo Rauda Murcia came 17 days after U.S. Ambassador Deane R. Hinton warned that Washington might sever aid to war-torn El Salvador unless there was progress in this case and one involving the murder of two American land reform advisers.

The guardsmen have until Thursday to appoint lawyers and appeal Rauda Murcia's decision. Prosecutors and the defense then have two weeks to prepare their cases. A five-man jury hears the evidence.

A verdict could come by early January, according to Jose Anibal Jimenez, the judge's secretary.

NFL Strike Could Be Settled Today

NEW YORK (AP) — Paul Marth, a running back turned lawyer who last weekend became a mutually agreed-upon go-between for the National Football League owners and players, believes a settlement in the 57-day-old strike could come today. But his presence in the talks was about the only thing mutually agreed upon Monday night. Neither side expressed his optimism. And neither agreed on just what the problem was. As midnight approached, Marth stood in the lobby of a midtown Manhattan hotel and said: "Sometime this evening we should have an all-inclusive agreement." Unbeknownst to him, though, union chief Ed Garvey was at a different hotel, firing a salvo at the owners for what he called their "union busting" and claiming the Management Council had pulled back earlier offers. "There is not a deal that is even close," he said.

And shortly thereafter, Jim Miller, the Management Council's public relations director, observed from his office: "We're not too close together" and said the owners' offer had been "restructured," not reduced.

Then Marth's optimism waned a bit. "I thought we were going to get together earlier in the evening, but things got late," he said. "I am still optimistic, but it won't be tonight. Some of the (management) people were disappointed at the remarks Ed made at the press conference. I am still optimistic for a settlement tomorrow."

The sudden surge of activity was accompanied by the disclosure of Tex Schramm, president of the Dallas Cowboys and chairman of the NFL's Competition Committee, of contingency scheduling for the rest of the season, a plan calling for a 10-game season and a full playoff slate employing midweek wild-card games.

Garvey insisted key portions of the owners' most recent proposal had been withdrawn by the Management Council, that it had reduced severance pay for older players, eliminated incentive bonuses and reneged on an agreement to reinstate with back pay player reps cut before the strike began. "That actually reduced their last offer substantially," Garvey said, "while we have moved considerably in their direction."

But Miller said the owners, in their four-year, $1.313 billion offer, had simply taken money from several areas to satisfy union demands for more money in others. And he denied the Management Council had ever agreed to security for player reps.

Monday's developments followed nine days of virtual inactivity, during which Garvey repeatedly tried and failed to bring the Management Council back to the bargaining table. The owners' negotiators had walked away from it the night of Nov. 6 — mediator Sam Kagel went home to San Francisco that night, too — and said it had no intention of returning unless the union moved markedly from its position.

Over the weekend, Garvey met with Kay McMurray, the head of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, a reversal of the union's previous stance against the owners' side, saying: "I don't think they (the two sides) will meet soon, not unless the ballplayers move further from the position they've already taken."

That's when Marth, a running back for the Pittsburgh Steelers (1964-69) and Denver Broncos (1970) and now vice president of the National Hockey League's Pittsburgh Penguins got involved as a messenger between the union and Management Council. The Penguins, like the NFL's San Francisco 49ers, are owned by the DeBartolo family. On Monday night, Garvey said Marth's optimism was misguided and called him "someone from management."

On Monday, the National Labor Relations Board rejected a union request that it seek an injunction to force the Management Council to bargain "in good faith," an action which would have forced the owners' negotiators back to the table.

Still pending, and set for a Nov. 29 hearing before an administrative law judge is an unfair labor practice complaint alleging the Management Council attempted to bypass the union and bargain directly with the players.

Schramm said the season would resume Sunday if an agreement was reached by Wednesday. The 10-game schedule would include two weekends affected by the strike, with playoff berths decided by conference rather than division records.

In another development, Chicago Bears offensive tackle Ted Albrecht filed a class-action suit Monday on behalf of himself and all other players on the injured-reserve list.

The suit, filed in Cook County Circuit Court, says that since Albrecht and about 150 other players entered into a standard NFL contract, they are entitled to pay despite the strike. The 27-year-old Albrecht was injured in pre-season play.

The suit says the contract requires that if a player is injured in the performance of his services for the team, he "will continue to receive his yearly salary for so long, during the season of injury only and for no subsequent period."

Georgia, Southern Methodist Atop Poll; Arizona State Drops

By The Associated Press Georgia and Southern Methodist remained 1-2 today in The Associated Press college football poll, while Arizona State dropped from third to eighth after suffering its first loss of the season, Penn State inched ahead of Nebraska into third place and Alabama fell out of the Top Twenty for the first time in six years.

Georgia, seeking its second national championship in three years, is No. 1 for the second week in a row following a 19-14 victory over Auburn. The Bulldogs received 47 of 59 first-place votes and 1,167 of a possible 1,180 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters.

SMU pulled out an amazing 34-27 triumph over Texas Tech on a 91-yard run with four seconds left following a bobbled kickoff and a lateral pass. The Mustangs, the only unbeaten-untied major college team other than Georgia, received eight first-place votes and 1,110 points.

However, they lost ground to the Bulldogs. Last week, Georgia led SMU 33-19 in first-place votes and 1,150-1,126 in points, with 59 voters participating.

Penn State jumped from fifth to third with two first-place ballots and 1,007 points by defeating Notre Dame 24-14. The Nittany Lions took over third place from Arizona State, which lost to Washington 17-13.

The other two first-place votes went to Nebraska, which held onto fourth place by trouncing Iowa State 48-10. The Cornhuskers received 998 points.

Washington's victory over Arizona State lifted the Huskies from seventh place to fifth with 923 points. Pitt rebounded from its only setback with a 24-6 decision over Army and climbed from eighth to sixth with 860 points.

Florida State vaulted from ninth to seventh with 771 points by clobbering Louisville 49-14. Arizona State was next with 713 points, followed by Arkansas, up from 10th to ninth with 682 points after a 35-0 whipping of Texas A&M. Defending national champion Clemson, 11th a week ago, rounded out the Top Ten with 627 points after a 24-22 triumph over Maryland.

The Second Ten consists of UCLA, LSU, Michigan, Oklahoma, Southern California, West Virginia, Texas, Notre Dame, Maryland and Tulsa. LSU, sixth last week, lost to Mississippi State 27-24.

Last week's Second Ten consisted of Clemson, UCLA, Notre Dame, Michigan, Oklahoma, Southern Cal, Alabama, Maryland, West Virginia and Texas.

Alabama dropped out in the wake of its second consecutive loss and third of the season, a 38-29 setback at the hands of Southern Mississippi. The only other time the Crimson Tide did not appear in the rankings during the past 12 years was one week in 1976.

That made room for Tulsa to crack the Top Twenty for the first time in 30 years since a 12th-place finish in 1952. The Golden Hurricane boosted its record to 9-1 by routing Indiana State 48-14.

Pirates Hosting Canadian Team

East Carolina University's men's basketball team will open its 1982-83 season Wednesday night with an exhibition game against Carleton University of Canada.

The game will start at 7:30 p.m., with the doors opening at 6:30 p.m. Tickets are $2 for adults, $1 for children 12 and under, with ECU students admitted free with ID and activity card.

The game will mark the coaching debut at East Carolina of Charlie Harrison, who joined Pirates this summer after Dave Odum resigned to take a position with the University of Virginia.

A native of Scotland Neck, Harrison came to East Carolina from Iowa State. He has also worked as an assistant at Indiana, Clemson, Oklahoma and New Mexico, where he served as interim coach one year after the rest of the coaching staff was fired for NCAA violations.

"I'm excited about getting this season underway," Harrison said. "We need to expose our players to someone other than themselves at this point, which the exhibition game will do."

"We need for our kids to see themselves in a competitive situation on film in order to correct and adjust as needed before we open the season on November 27 at Duke University."

Carleton brings three major players into the game. They include 6-5 forward Keith Kelso, who averaged 19 points and 8 rebounds last year; 6-0 point guard Bill Holmes, who averaged 8 assists a game; and 6-1 guard Rick Powers, who sat out last year after averaging 24.7 points a game in 1980-81.

The exhibition is the only public appearance for the Pirates prior to the start of the regular season. Their first home game is December 1 against Christopher Newport.

American In For Baseball

American University will be a part of the ECAC-South for baseball, East Carolina University athletic director Ken Karr announced today.

American, located in Washington, D.C., will join ECU, James Madison, Richmond, William & Mary and George Mason in the league for the upcoming season.

Dr. Karr said he did not know whether the move by American would mean the school might be interested in joining the ECAC-South for basketball in the future.

The basketball league was left with only six schools when Old Dominion withdrew at the end of last season to join the Sun Belt. The basketball league consists of ECU, William & Mary, James Madison, George Mason, Richmond and Navy. The Midshipmen do not play with the league in baseball, with the Ivy League teams.

Penn State Is Computer Leader

Penn State continues to hold to, and expand on its lead in the Daily Reflector Computer Rankings this week.

The Nittany Lions are over 120 points ahead of their nearest rival, Georgia, which leads the Associated Press and United Press International polls.

The Reflector poll is based on strength of schedule, awarding six points for each game a team wins, four points for each game its victims' win, and two for each game its victims' victims' win.

Penn State, 9-1 on the season, has piled up 710 points, as it plays one of the tougher schedules in the country — and wins with it. Georgia, 10-0, has 582 points with a schedule obviously not quite as tough.

Third comes Pittsburgh, followed by Alabama. The Crimson Tide, despite having lost three games, has beaten tough opposition to pile up its points.

Two East Carolina opponents also appear in the Top Ten, sixth ranked West Virginia, and tied for eighth Florida State.

The Top Twenty follows:

1. Penn State (9-1)	710
2. Georgia (10-0)	582
3. Pittsburgh (8-1)	540
4. Alabama (7-3)	472

Could This Be The Cavaliers' Year?

One in a Series
By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

In two of the past three years, Virginia has been on the outside looking in at the NCAA basketball championships, but now, in Ralph Sampson's senior year, the Cavaliers could get through the door.

The South is loaded with pretenders to the collegiate basketball throne currently occupied by North Carolina. Virginia Coach Terry Holland feels this might be the year of the Cavalier.

"The first thing you have to do is set long-range goals. I think our team is definitely capable of that," said Holland. "Of course, you have to get into the NCAA tournament."

Virginia should reach that goal, especially since the 7-foot-4 Sampson is eager to make up for past frustrations in his final collegiate season.

"Ralph wants very badly for this to be the best basketball team he's played on, but he may become too uptight," said Holland. "There may be too much pressure on him."

In Sampson's freshman year, the Cavaliers couldn't get beyond the first round of the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament, although they did win the National Invitation Tournament. They made the NCAA's Final Four in his sophomore year, but were beaten by North Carolina in the semifinals.

Last season, Alabama-Birmingham ended Virginia's title bid.

The Cavaliers lost scoring guard Jeff Jones, but still have much experience in the backcourt with Otell Wilson and Ricky Stokes. In the frontcourt, there are senior Craig Robinson and sophomores Tim Mullen and Jim Miller.

North Carolina Coach Dea Smith, meanwhile, is concerned about getting a healthy team on the court in time for Saturday's opener against St. John's. Junior center Sam Perkins has a sprained knee and sophomore forward Michael Jordan has a broken wrist. Three others also have missed considerable practice time due to injuries.

"It'll be a while before we settle into our chemistry," said Smith.

Louisville and Memphis State will vie for supremacy in the Metro Conference. Both teams made the NCAA tournament last season, and while the Tigers were beaten by Villanova in the East Regional, the Cardinals went to the Final Four before losing to Georgetown.

Six lettermen are gone from Louisville, but Coach Denny Crum is depending on the McCray boys — Rodney and Scooter — to provide leadership for a return trip to the Final Four.

"We expect Rodney to carry more of an offensive load this season, but he could care less if he scores, just so we win," said Crum.

Crum also landed an outstanding freshman in 6-8 Billy Thompson, one of the nation's best high school players and a threat to crack the starting five.

Center Keith Lee leads Memphis State, which compiled a 24-5 record last season. Lee averaged more than 18 points and 11 rebounds per game last season, while Derrick Phillips and Otis Jackson also helped the Tigers reach the third round of the NCAA tournament.

Kentucky, Tennessee and Alabama are the top candidates for the Southeastern Conference title. Kentucky Coach Joe B. Hall has not chosen his starting five, but it's certain that 7-foot center Sam Bowie, suffering from a hairline fracture of the left shinbone, will not be in it.

Derrick Hord, Charles Hurt and Dirk Minniefield are back from last season's 22-8 team, but Bowie, sidelined with an injury all of last season, is a question mark.

"We won't know anything before the X-rays on Dec. 14," said Hall, who is trying to push his team beyond last season's first-round upset loss to Middle Tennessee State.

Dale Ellis averaged 21.2 points last season for Tennessee, which will try for its fifth consecutive post-season appearance. Three other starters from last season also are back.

Alabama-Birmingham, defending Sun Belt Conference champion, was a surprise last season, reaching the round of eight before losing to Louisville. This season, the Blazers are without six of their top seven players from that 25-6 team, leading conference coaches to pick newcomer Old Dominion for the title.

Tennessee-Chattanooga, defending Southern Conference champion, is picked to win again, led by Willie White.

In the ECAC-South, James Madison lost scoring leader Linton Townes, but will open its new 7,500-seat arena with three of the five starters who reached the NCAA tournament last season.

Murray State should be alone at the top of the Ohio Valley Conference now that Western Kentucky has left for the Sun Belt Conference. Four starters and a redshirted player return from the 20-8 OVC co-champions of last season.

Of the southern independents, Southwestern Louisiana appears the strongest, as the Ragin' Cajuns have three starters and two lettermen from a team that went 24-8 last season.

Bowl Bids Falling Into Place Despite Being Unofficial As Yet

By The Associated Press

The official bowl bids must wait until the weekend, but college football's postseason lineup is beginning to take shape now that it appears that the Sugar Bowl has lined up Penn State as the opponent for No.1-ranked Georgia on New Year's Night.

While Penn State apparently had not made a definite commitment to the Sugar Bowl pending a meeting between Coach Joe Paterno and his senior players, The Associated Press learned that Paterno had been in touch with a New Orleans hotel concerning accommodations. The Nittany Lions were ranked No.4 in last week's AP poll.

Georgia and second-ranked Southern Methodist are the only major unbeaten-untied teams. Georgia clinched its third consecutive Sugar Bowl berth by defeating Auburn 19-14 on Saturday. The 10-0 Bulldogs close out their regular season Nov.27 against 6-4 Georgia Tech.

SMU, also 10-0, winds up its regular season Saturday against 8-1 Arkansas, needing a victory or a tie to represent the Southwest Conference in the Cotton Bowl. Arkansas is the SWC's only other Cotton Bowl possibility.

Pitt reportedly will be the visiting team in the Cotton Bowl. Penn State, 9-1, and Pitt, 8-1, meet Nov.26, six days after most of the bowls will be locked up.

The annual rumor circulated that some of the bowls would wait for the results of the Thanksgiving weekend games before making their decisions, but that didn't last long.

The host team in the Orange Bowl will be the Big Eight champion, either Nebraska or Oklahoma. If Florida State beats LSU on Saturday night, the Seminoles will be the other half of the Orange Bowl matchup. However, an LSU victory would throw the Orange Bowl into a state of confusion since LSU is not high on its list.

If LSU wins, it is in line for the Bluebonnet Bowl, probably against Arkansas or SMU, whichever one does not go to the Cotton Bowl. The LSU-Florida State loser likely will go to the Gator Bowl against West Virginia, although the Bluebonnet Bowl will take LSU win, lose or draw. The Orange Bowl has not given up on Pitt, especially if SMU loses to Arkansas.

Some Orange Bowl committee members are pushing for Notre Dame, which has lost two games and tied one and has road games remaining at Air Force and Southern Cal. Notre Dame, regardless of its record, would almost certainly cut into the TV ratings of the Sugar Bowl, which goes head-to-head with the Orange Bowl.

Also on the Orange Bowl's list — possibly — is defending national champion Clemson, which won the 1981 title by defeating Nebraska in Miami. However, Clemson has been under investigation by the NCAA and the Atlantic Coast Conference for alleged recruiting violations.

It was known that Clemson had told certain bowls last week that the school would not be allowed to play in a post-season game, but later word said the ACC would permit Clemson to play in a Jan.1 game because of the large payoff. However, if Clemson does go on probation, the Tigers may decide to begin the penalty immediately and get one no-bowl year out of the way so other schools cannot use it against them as much in recruiting.

The Rose Bowl, of course, matches the Pacific-10 and Big Ten champs. Michigan has clinched the Big Ten title, while Washington is favored to beat Washington State on Saturday and lock up the Pac-10 crown.

Arizona State reportedly will host the Fiesta Bowl in its own stadium at Tempe — it could be embarrassing to all concerned if the Sun Devils lose to Arizona on Nov.27 — against the Nebraska-Oklahoma loser.

Other bowl pairings could wind up this way:

Sun Bowl, Texas-North Carolina; Aloha Bowl, UCLA-Maryland; Liberty Bowl, Alabama-Illinois; Tangerine Bowl, Auburn-Boston College; Holiday Bowl, WAC champion (probably Brigham Young) vs. Ohio State; Hall of Fame Bowl, Vanderbilt vs. opponent to be selected, perhaps Stanford if it defeats California; Independence Bowl, Miami, Fla.-Tulsa; Peach Bowl, Iowa vs. Tennessee or Florida; California Bowl, Fresno State-Bowling Green.

Villanova Favored In Big East; Ewing Makes Hoyas Contender

One in a Series
By The Associated Press

The Big East Conference, entering its fourth season, has emerged as one of the premier major college basketball conferences in the nation, producing three of the final eight teams in the NCAA tournament last season.

Villanova, with four starters from last season's East Regional finalists, is the choice of the league's coaches to win its third straight Big East title.

But the imposing figure of 7-foot sophomore Pat Ewing makes Georgetown a leading contender despite the loss of four seniors from last season's 30-7 team which was the runner-up to NCAA champion North Carolina.

St. John's and Syracuse also are highly regarded. Boston College, newcomer Pittsborough, Providence, Connecticut and Seton Hall complete the Big East lineup. The conference has landed a hefty television package for 112 games, making it again the most televised basketball conference in the country.

"If there's a tougher conference in the country, I'd like to see it," said Villanova Coach Rollie Massimino, whose Wildcats posted a 28-7 record last season. "Four losses should win it."

Villanova will be counting on holdovers John Pinone, a 6-8, 230-pound center, 6-9 Ed Pinckney and guards Stewart Granger, the Big East assist leader the past two years, and Dwayne McClain, plus 6-7 freshman Harold Pressley, who figures to step into a starting forward spot.

"If Ewing is No.1 in this league," said Syracuse Coach Jim Boeheim, "then Pinckney is 1A."

Pinckney, a sophomore who averaged 14.2 points and 7.8 rebounds last season, was named the most valuable player at the National Sports Festival during the summer. He underwent surgery to remove cartilage fragments in his knee and may not be in top shape at the start of this season.

Pinone averaged 17.2 points and 6.6 rebounds last season and is called "the backbone of our team" by Massimino. The Wildcats also have more depth this season than in the past, especially if freshman guard Dwight Wilbur and 6-11 Wyatt Maker come through.

Massimino has great respect for Ewing, who displayed brilliant defensive ability and averaged 12.7 points and 7.5 rebounds per game as a freshman.

"Ewing is capable of dominating any game in any league in the country," said Massimino. "He has tremendous desire and has the experience of the Final Four."

Georgetown Coach John Thompson has adopted a cautious attitude about this season.

"We're in a transition period," he said. "I'm waiting to see how rapidly our young people mature. We are young and unexperienced. This also is the year Georgetown will be hunted. The young players will not have the luxury of blending in like last year's freshmen. They will be asked to contribute early."

Gone are backcourt ace Eric "Sleepy" Floyd and Eric Smith. Returnees include sophomores Anthony Jones, Billy Martin and Ralph Dalton, and junior point guard Fred Brown. David Wingate, 6-5 swingman, heads the frosh contingent.

All five starters, plus key reserves, return for Coach Lou Carnesecca at St. John's, 21-9 last season. Forwards David Russell (17.4 points, 6.9 rebounds), Billy Goodwin (14.7, 5.5) and soph swingman Chris Mullin (16.6) lead the Redmen.

St. John's opens against North Carolina Saturday night at Springfield, Mass. "It'll give us insight on how good we are and what we have to do to get better," Carnesecca said.

Syracuse, 16-13, lacks a good big man, but returns all its starters, headed by Erich Santifer, Leo Rautins and Tony Bruin. Rafael Addison, 6-7, is the key frosh addition.

Boston College, which reached the NCAA final eight, has a new coach in Gene Williams, replacing Tom Davis, now at Stanford. The Eagles also lost a 21-point scorer in John Bagley to the National Basketball Association after his junior year.

Juniors Jay Murphy and

Martin Clark, each 6-9, are Boston College's key returnees.

Pitt, which joined the Big East this season after a 20-10 campaign, is led by Clyde Vaughan (18.0, 9.5). Providence is counting on Otis Thorpe, Connecticut has lost three top players to graduation, while Seton Hall is rebuilding under new Coach P.J. Carlesmino.

Meanwhile, the old Eastern Eight now is the Atlantic Ten. Pitt withdrew but St. Joseph's, Temple and Penn State joined the conference. Temple and St. Joe's figure to battle Rutgers for the title.

La Salle and American University appear to be the best in the East Coast Conference, while Penn and Princeton, as usual, and Columbia and Cornell, as possibilities, head the Ivy League.

Iona, 24-9 last season and paced by Gary Springer, appears much the class of the ECAC Metro Atlantic against the likes of Manhattan and Fordham.

Other ECAC divisions:

North: Northeastern, which made it to the NCAA final 16, doesn't figure to repeat as champion. Boston University and Canisius are the favorites.

Metro: Robert Morris and Fairleigh Dickinson have the best talent.

South: James Madison is favored for a third consecutive NCAA berth.

Kim Clings To Life; Doctors To Make Decision In 'Few Days'

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — The neurologist attending boxer Duk Koo Kim says he will decide "within a few days" whether to take away the support system keeping the 23-year-old South Korean alive.

Dr. Lonnie Hammargren said examinations on Kim have shown "no sign of brain life" since he was carried unconscious Saturday from the outdoor arena at Caesars Palace.

"We're still doing some tests and we want to wait a couple of days to see how they work out," before disconnecting the life support system, Hammargren said Monday.

Disconnecting the system would bring death to the 23-year-old Kim "within a matter of minutes," Hammargren said.

The neurologist said he was consulting with other specialists in the Las Vegas area in the tests being conducted.

The boxer's mother and two of his brothers were to fly here tonight. Mrs. Yang Sun-Yo, who on Monday said she could not afford the trip, was given financial assistance today by the government of President Chun Doo-Hwan. Until her arrival, Kim's manager, Hyun Chi Kim, who is not related to the fighter, has permission to make any decisions regarding Duk Koo Kim.

The neurologist said he would be making a decision on the life support system "in a matter of days — it certainly won't be weeks."

The hospital continued to report the same prognosis for Kim that was first given Saturday night — "very critical, probably terminal."

Kim was critically injured when he was knocked out by Ray "Boom Boom" Mancini in the 14th round of Saturday's nationally televised World Boxing Association lightweight championship fight.

Kim was placed on a life support system following 2½ hours of surgery to relieve a massive blood clot.

Hammargren met at the hospital Monday with Nan Shin Cho, a member of the Korean consulate from Los Angeles. The two discussed Kim's condition and contacts with relatives in Korea.

Hammargren said Sunday he would have the final say on when the life support system is removed.

"You really have to look at it as what you would do if it were your own family," Hammargren told a news conference. "I think that's the final decision."

Mancini's manager, Dave Wolf, said the Youngstown, Ohio champion spent several hours at the hospital Sunday night, talking with Kim's people. The injured fighter has not been allowed any visitors.

Earlier Sunday Mancini had attended mass and prayed for Kim.

"He's still so upset, we're not even discussing the future," Wolf said Monday when asked about Mancini's career plans. "That's so far beyond what we are able to deal with right now."

"I have no idea how he will bounce back," Wolf said of Mancini. "This thing is going to affect him the rest of his life, not just his boxing career. He's a very sensitive man and it's wounded him very deeply."

The match's promoter, Bob Arum, repeated Monday his call for a study as to how boxing deaths can be avoided.

"We've got to make sure we take steps to avoid something like this in the future, and that we not just throw a lot of bull around," Arum said.

Friends Wonder How Mancini Will React To Ring Tragedy

WARREN, Ohio (AP) — With South Korean boxer Duk Koo Kim barely clinging to life, friends and relatives of Ray "Boom Boom" Mancini, the man who knocked out Kim, wonder how Mancini will ultimately react to the tragedy.

"I'd like him to quit, yes," said Mancini's sister, Ellen. "But it's not my decision to make. All I could think about is it could have been him." Mancini, 21, of Youngstown, retained his World Boxing Association lightweight title by stopping Kim Saturday during the 14th round of their bout in Las Vegas, Nev. The challenger staggered to his feet after a knockdown punch, but then collapsed into a coma.

Mancini expressed grief at the injury to Kim and said he will think hard about resuming his career. Family and friends promised to support whatever decision Mancini makes.

"I feel really bad for Ray," said Marty Chance, a friend from Niles who flew to Las Vegas to watch Mancini's fight. "Maybe this is an omen for him to get out of boxing while he's ahead."

The champion's father, Lenny, a former boxer, said, "It's one of those things in the game. Whenever Ray fights, I am concerned for both fighters, not just my son. But I won't tell him to quit."

"I'd say 99.5 percent of the people will be for him," Murphy Griffith, Mancini's trainer, told The (Warren) Tribune Chronicle.

"But there will be the others, the stupid, crank calls and even threats probably," Griffith said. "But Ray didn't commit a crime and the condolence calls, the ones with good sense, should help him with any guilt feelings he'll have."

This was not Griffith's first brush with serious injury in the ring. Nearly 20 years ago, his nephew, Emile Griffith, was a welterweight champion when he knocked out Benny Paret in the 12th round of a fight. Paret never regained consciousness and died 10 days later.

The Ring Record Book lists 337 professional fighters who have died from boxing injuries since World War II in the United States. 120 people have died from boxing-related injuries. Three of those fights involved champions.

In addition to Emile Griffith, Sugar Ramos won the featherweight title in 1963 when Davey Moore could not answer the 11th round bell of a fight. Moore collapsed in his dressing room and died.

Devils Must Be Error Free To Win

DURHAM (AP) — Duke football coach Red Wilson says the only way his club can defeat North Carolina this weekend is to play error-free ball.

"We cannot turn the ball over a single time and expect to win," he said. "We can't turn it over deep in our own territory, we can't afford to throw interceptions."

Duke's offense will have to control the ball for long periods, while the defense will have to make big plays and "play over our heads," Wilson said.

"History is filled with teams doing this (upsetting favored opponents)," he said. "We will go into the game with the feeling that we can win the game."

Duke didn't play error-free ball in a 21-16 loss to North Carolina State last week. The Blue Devils suffered three pass interceptions and lost a fumble in the game.

But Wilson said missed scoring opportunities in the first half were Duke's undoing in that loss.

"People have been talking a great deal about the interception (of a Duke pass that ended a drive) in the second half, but the part of the game that bothered me the most was our inability to score when we had the chance to score," Wilson said in his weekly news conference.

"We cannot miss these opportunities if we hope to have any chance of beating a fine team like North Carolina."

Realism Goal Of TV Feature

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) - The Civil War and "The Blue and the Gray" each took four years to finish. "Compared to us," said the man in charge of the television movie, "Gone With the Wind" was a breeze.

Bob Markell, head of CBS' miniseries unit, said realism was a prime concern in the 78 days required to shoot the three-part series. That took the project to rural northwestern Arkansas.

Almost 6,000 local people were judged to have the right look and made their TV debut as extras. "Their faces had Arkansas written all over them," Markell said. "The long hair and facial hair back then was close to what they're wearing today."

This integrity impressed historical writer William C. Davis, editor of the monthly magazine Civil War Times. "It was almost a return to the ancestral past," wrote Davis, who watched some location shooting. "Blue and gray were at it again."

Indeed, "The Blue and the Gray," which has its second of three installments tonight, was almost obsessed with the accuracy of historical detail.

For example, Rip Torn, as Gen. Ulysses S. Grant, insisted on shooting a scene again because he realized he had played the right-handed Grant writing a dispatch with his left hand.

Costumes, of course, help transport the viewer back 120 years. "You've got to have clothing that looks like it didn't just come out of a closet," Markell said.

Civil War re-enactment groups brought their uniforms and weapons to help authenticate the front-line soldiers in the big battle scenes. But CBS still had to make many of the 600 military uniforms and other apparel, including Gen. Robert E. Lee's boots, which cost more than $1,000 to reproduce.

"There haven't been many Civil War movies done before," Markell said. "We couldn't borrow much." What they could borrow included Errol Flynn's uniforms from the 1941 movie, "They Died With Their Boots On," and costumes from "Gone With the Wind," filmed in 1939.

Considering television's fear of offending viewers, tonight's battle scenes are quite graphic. "We were as violent as necessary to show that war is not painless," Markell said. "We didn't exploit, but it would have been a disservice to present an antiseptic war."

Some of the authenticity is provided by the actors who play key historical figures, such as Gregory Peck as Abraham Lincoln.

Peck, 66, appearing in his first television drama, remembered childhood parades in his hometown when old Union and Confederate soldiers marched on Independence Day. Peck is also a fervent admirer of Lincoln and has more than 1,000 books about the Civil War president in his personal library.

When Peck portrayed Gen. Douglas MacArthur on film, he rejected heavy makeup. But Lincoln's face is etched in every schoolchild's memory, so the likeness had to be exact. And it is.

Peck already had a long, lean, Lincoln-like look. His daily makeup regimen included receding his hairline, putting putty behind his ears to force them out and attaching a latex mole, nose, lower lip and cheeks.

Peck had memorized the Gettysburg Address when he was 12. But it was Cal Kinzer, the movie's technical adviser, who spotted a mistake in the script's version of the famous speech. He made a call to the Lincoln Memorial in Washington, and a National Park Service ranger read him the engraved speech on the wall.

If you didn't know that Lincoln said "that government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth," not "... this earth," in the address, you will tonight.

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Penthouse magazine will launch an adult programming service for pay and cable television next April in a joint venture with SelecTV, publisher Bob Guccione announced Monday.

The new service of original programming and motion pictures will be sent by satellite to 33 cable systems affiliated with SelecTV's pay television operations in Los Angeles and Milwaukee.

Guccione announced formation of the Penthouse Television Network at the programming conference of the National Cable Television Association.

"This is the premiere adult service, and we feel we will be able to offer the viewing public something it cannot see elsewhere," Guccione said.

Penthouse will be the second men's magazine to enter the field. Playboy magazine began operation of the Escapade-Playboy Channel in January. The system will

NCAE Opposes Teacher Policy

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALF IGH, N.C. (AP) —
The state teachers organization has gone on record as opposing efforts to layoff teachers in order to get a pay increase for public school teachers and state employees.

"We'd be very upset if in order to compensate the teachers of this state fairly, we'd have to make class sizes larger. And that's just what layoffs would involve," says Loretta Martin, president of the North Carolina Association of Educators.

Ms. Martin said the group's board of directors decided in a weekend meeting to seek reinstatement of $120 million in wages lost when Gov. Jim Hunt froze state employees' salaries for fiscal 1982-83.

The board also decided to seek a raise for 1983-84 of 10 percent or the cost of living, whichever is higher. Ms. Martin said in a telephone interview Monday.

"I have to be optimistic," she said. "We've gone without a pay increase for two years except for the small 5 percent the year before last. I believe the governor and the legislators I've talked with realize this is not a fair way to treat state employees and they've got to do something."

Hunt has endorsed a pay raise for state workers and teachers, but his aides say if the economy doesn't improve there won't be enough money for one without deep spending cuts.

Some aides have said privately that laying off some workers might be the only way to give others higher wages. Ms. Martin, however, said the NCAE would strongly oppose layoffs.

The NCAE will seek legislation limiting class size to 26 students for grades k-12, which probably would cost $87 million, she added.

Other top legislative goals include an appropriation for educational materials, continued funding of exceptional children's programs, a voluntary payroll deduction for NCAE dues and an increase in sick leave time. Ms. Martin said. The state Personnel Commission said Monday it was increasing sick leave time for state employees other than teachers from 10 to 12 days per year.

The state Board of Education approved Nov. 4 a measure adding a writing section to the competency test for high school graduates. Ms. Martin said the NCAE wants to make sure high school graduates are competent writers, but that the group would insist on a remedial program to help students who don't pass it.

The NCAE opposes a proposal to hire one-third of the state's math and science teachers to work all year, Ms. Martin said. While it would give those teachers more work, it would cause morale problems among the other two-thirds, she said.

Proposals to increase the school year from 180 days to 200 days and the number of required credits for graduation from 18 to 20 are still being studied, she said.

Urges Closing Big Loophole

MONROE, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina should close a loophole that allows mental patients to go free without being required to undergo follow-up treatment, a judge says.

District Judge George Bason of Wake County called the current law "toothless" and said it forced him to release a Wadesboro man from a mental hospital against a psychiatrist's recommendation.

Bason unconditionally released James Autry, 35, from Raleigh's Dorothea Dix Hospital on Oct. 14, just 84 days after he was committed after being found innocent of manslaughter by reason of insanity.

Autry had been charged with involuntary manslaughter after his Lincoln Continental slammed into the rear of a compact car last October, instantly killing the driver, Robert Lee Jr., 51, a Monroe insurance agent.

Dr. James Groce, a staff psychiatrist at Dix, had examined Autry on Sept. 28 and found him to be both mentally ill and a danger to himself or others, court documents show. Those two conditions must be met before a person can be involuntarily committed to a state mental institution.

But Bason said that if there is no evidence a patient has been abusive, dangerous or violent during the period of hospitalization, the law requires judges to free them.

"There is no way for the public to be assured it is being protected in these types of cases," he said. "I have been hearing these commitment cases for eight years and all along I have talked about the loophole that exists in the law."

"I firmly believe that there should be some requirement for follow-up where the patient would periodically present himself to a local mental health center for a mental examination and a re-examination of the treatment and medication given that patient," he said.

In his judicial order releasing Autry, Bason wrote that there was "no clear, cogent and convincing evidence of mental illness or danger to self or to others" during Autry's stay at the hospital.

The judge further wrote that Autry "has been described as a model patient on the ward without any indications of danger to self or others. He is described as pleasant, agreeable, cooperative...."

Escaped

Greenville police were looking today for Darrell Drewman Teel of 612 S. Pitt St. in connection with an armed robbery about 6:55 p.m. Monday at B&B Foodlane at 1006 Bancroft Ave., Chief Glenn Cannon said.

Cannon said a masked man entered the food store with a shotgun and demanded that the clerk open the cash register. The robber fled on foot after taking an undetermined amount of cash from the business.

Cannon said a warrant charging Teel with armed robbery was secured later in the evening. Teel was located at 210 Columbia Ave. a short time later, Cannon said, but Teel escaped as officers attempted to arrest him.

World Joblessness
Misery may love company but there's probably small comfort for the nation's 11.5 million unemployed in knowing they are not alone in the world. While U.S. unemployment recently rose to 10.4 percent, the unemployment rate in Canada reached 12.7 percent. Unemployment has also climbed in the 10 Common Market countries where 9.8 percent of workers were jobless in September. Belgium had the highest unemployment rate in the Common Market with 14.8 percent and Luxembourg the lowest at 1.3 percent. But the situation of our neighbor to the south makes our country's employment picture look rosy by comparison. In Mexico a startling 50 percent of workers are either out of work or marginally employed.

North-South appeared to have reached an unbeatable four spade contract. But a clever falsecard by West turned a silk purse into a sow's ear.

South showed his solid six-card spade suit by making a jump rebid at his second turn. Since North was near minimum for his two-over-one response, he could do no more than raise to game.

West led his singleton club. East won the queen with the ace and returned the deuce. West ruffed with the jack of spades (!) and shifted to a diamond. Suddenly, a simple contract was in danger of going down to defeat. It seemed to declarer that East's return of the deuce of clubs was a suit preference signal for a diamond. Denies Appeals To Reinstatement Officers

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — An attorney for two white Greensboro policemen who were fired after being accused of using illegal drugs says the denial of their appeals to be reinstated on the force was racially motivated.

City Manager Thomas Z. Osborne denied the appeals of R.L. Huckabee and R.F. Mattiello on Monday. Huckabee and Mattiello were among 11 officers who resigned or were fired after a departmental investigation of drug use by Greensboro police. Six of those appealed their punishment to higher-ranking city officials.

Of the six who appealed their firings, only Huckabee and Mattiello waived their right to a departmental hearing and didn't contest the allegations against them.

Wayne Harrison, the attorney for Huckabee and Mattiello, says they would still have their jobs if the city administration was not worried about getting feedback from the black community and the media.

"Now, the (city) bureaucracy finds itself in a position where it feels the press will flay them alive and the black community will flay them alive if any of those white guys get off," Harrison said. Harrison said he feels certain that Osborne would have reinstated the two men after ordering some kind of punishment if it were not for the city's fears of upsetting blacks and the media.

The Police Department began its investigation of drug use by some of its officers after former Sgt. Warren Armstrong was charged in March with cocaine possession and trafficking. He was sentenced to two years in prison.

Mattiello and Huckabee were accused of lesser infractions, but were never charged, Harrison said. But he said his clients wouldn't pursue their case in federal court because it would be too expensive.

Harrison says Mattiello admitted once using mari-

'Blunt Differences On Bishops' Letter

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —

Several Catholic bishops are criticizing a proposed pastoral letter challenging U.S. nuclear weapons policy, with one claiming it minimizes the "horrible sufferings" of those living under dictatorships.

But whether the differences voiced at the National Conference of Catholic Bishops are as extensive as they are blunt remains uncertain.

In any case, the opening debate on Monday among the nation's Roman Catholic bishops on a long-planned and provocative repudiation of using nuclear arms produced some sizzling ecclesiastical fireworks.

Archbishop Philip M. Hannan of New Orleans assailed the draft as minimizing "the horrible sufferings ... of those enslaved by Communism and other dictatorships." He also said it wasn't balanced with "the aggression and repression of the Reds."

But Archbishop Raymond G. Hunthausen of Seattle hailed the document as reflecting the "spirit of Christ," and called the current strategy of nuclear deterrence "idolatry" and "profoundly anti-Christian."

The subject was laid aside for Tuesday's sessions on other business matters, with discussion of it resuming Wednesday and Thursday. About 300 bishops are attending the conference.

At Monday's session, the pope's representative in this country, Archbishop Pio Laghi, admonished that the bishops act only with "the greatest possible unanimity" on such a sensitive issue.

If their teaching is "either muted or fractionalized," he said, it "would not serve the best interests of either the church or the world." But he offered "my encouragement" to the effort.

Several bishops branded false published reports that Pope John Paul II or other Vatican authorities had sought to curb or tone down the proposed pastoral teaching letter.

Such reports "are just not true," said Archbishop Joseph L. Bernardin of Chicago, head of a committee which has shepherded the document through more than a year of hearings and drafts.

He and others said that while the Vatican was being kept fully informed about the pastoral letter, there has been no pressure applied from there.

The draft letter calls for a nuclear freeze, condemns any threat or intention to use nuclear weapons as immoral, and says even possession of such weapons as a deterrent is tolerable only if steps are being taken toward mutual disarmament.

The 105-page document also condemns any first use of nuclear weapons or their targeting on bases near population centers — both now features of U.S. nuclear strategy.

In the opening debate, Cardinal Terence Cooke of New York said the document has "great potential ... for seriously dividing our church and nation."

But Hannan, the bishop from New Orleans, said, "The letter ignores completely our duty to defend Western Europe." This echoed a criticism by Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger that the United States and its NATO allies, without the option of a nuclear response, lacked adequate defense against conventional attack.

On the other hand, Cardinal John Krol of Philadelphia strongly defended the letter as recognizing "the current harsh realities," the obligation to resist tyranny and the right of self-defense.

But he said "weapons of massive destruction which attack not only the unjust aggressor but also vast numbers of non-combatants, exceed the limits of the right of self-defense, and as such merit unequivocal condemnation."

Archbishop John R. Quinn of San Francisco said the letter was balanced and based on clear moral principles. But he said that while it rejects any nuclear exchange, concluding it could not be limited, it does not clearly rule out nuclear retaliation in case of a nuclear attack.

Disabled Ketch Safe

ELIZABETH CITY, N.C. (AP) — A New Jersey yachtsman and six crew members were to arrive in Morehead City early Tuesday after drifting in rough seas for two days off the coast without food, power or sails.

The captain and owner of the 50-foot ketch Klarwasser, Royal Gibson Jr., said Sunday in a radio-telephone interview from the Coast Guard cutter Taney that he didn't know how much longer they could have held out.

"We had two full days of very stormy weather," he said. "All of us were just about to fall asleep on our feet last night. I don't think we realized now much effort we were putting into sailing the boat."

Gibson said Sunday that the mizzen reef and staysail were blown out Friday night and that the crew had to operate with only a tattered emergency storm sail. The auxiliary engine was not working, the battery was dying and the vessel was rolling back and forth out of control.

Gibson said he recorded 50-knot winds Saturday and seas were as high as 20 feet.

The boat left Morehead City Thursday and was bound for St. Thomas, Virgin Islands, when it hit the rough cold front.
