

Income, Spending Up

By ROBERT FURLOW
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans' personal income rose 0.7 percent in October, the biggest increase since July, the government reported today.

However, a big chunk of the increase was due to rising unemployment benefits, a result of layoffs because of the lingering recession. And personal consumption spending rose only 0.1 percent, a discouraging sign for those who hope increases in consumer spending will push the economy to recovery.

In October, the Commerce Department report said, total personal income rose $19.1 billion to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $2.62 trillion.

Private wages and salaries actually declined $1.8 billion but government paychecks rose $3.6 billion over September.

More than half of the overall increase — $10.8 billion — was due to increased "transfer payments," which include payments for Social Security and other programs as well as unemployment benefits.

Jobless benefits increased $5.7 billion, today's report said, mostly because of recent legislation that extended payment of such benefits up to an extra 10 weeks.

That increase undoubtedly helped laid-off workers and their families, and could help increase businesses' sales in the future by giving jobless Americans extra money to spend. But it hardly indicated improvement in the economy.

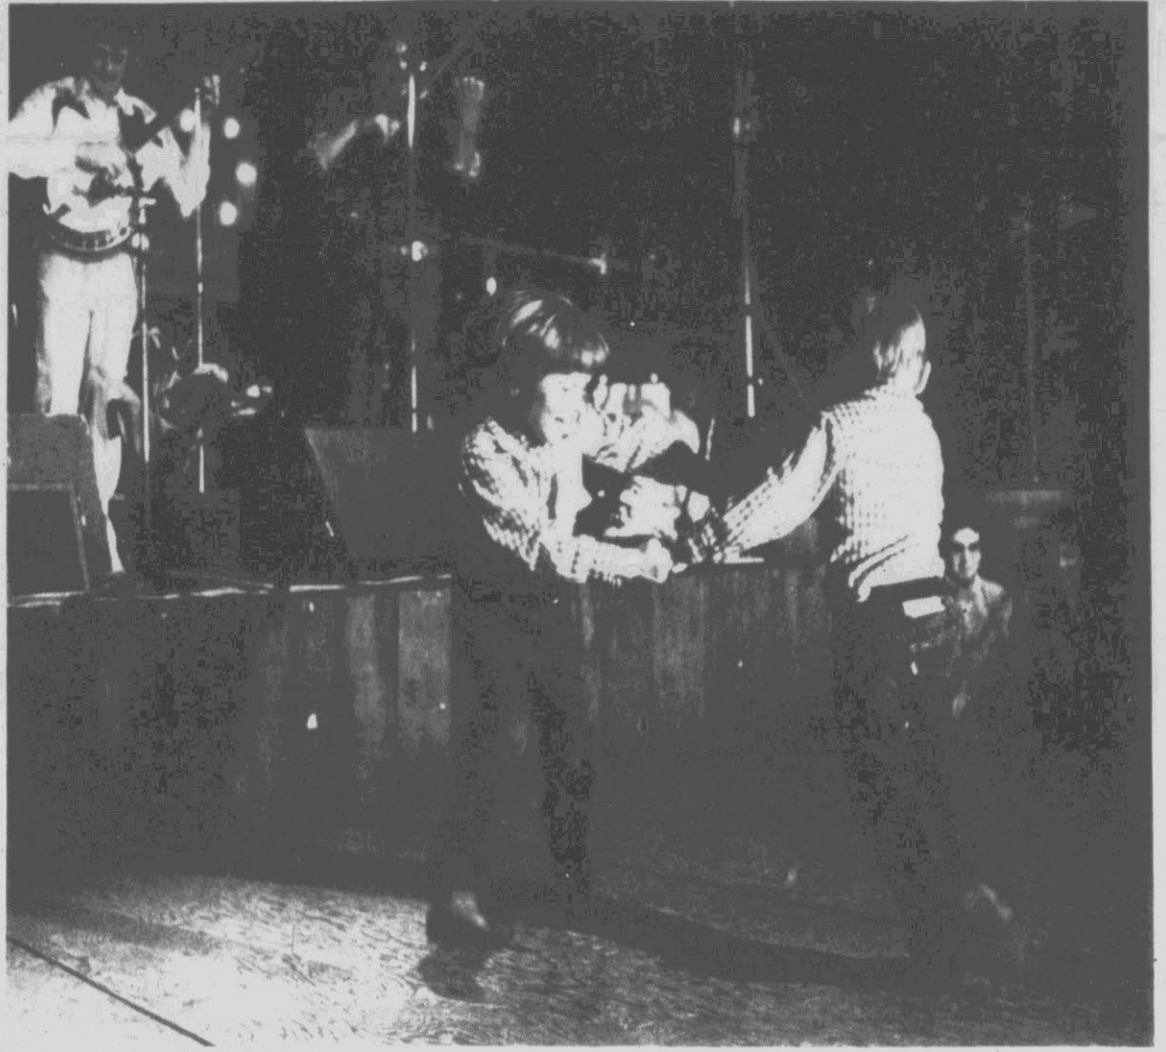

One day earlier, President Reagan had told reporters he would consider asking Congress to move up the effective date of the next step in his three-year tax-rate cut — now scheduled for next July — as a way of stimulating the economy by putting more money in consumers' pockets.

Administration officials had hoped last July's withholding tax cut would have much the same effect, but spending has risen only moderately since then.

Other recent reports have shown factory production falling, unemployment rising and retail sales increasing only modestly in October — apparent signs that the recession had continued into a 16th month.

In all, today's report said, personal consumption spending rose to an annual rate of $2.01 trillion in October.

Disposable, or after-tax, income rose 0.7 percent to an annual rate of $2.22 trillion.

Reagan Said Weighing Speed-Up Tax Rate Cuts

By OWEN ULLMANN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Under the wary eyes of Congress, President Reagan's top economic advisers are fighting over whether he should push to speed up next year's cut in income tax rates to spur the still-ailing economy.

The president says he hasn't made up his mind yet about seeking a Jan. 1 starting date for the rest of his three-year, 25 percent tax rate cut, now scheduled to show up in paycheck withholdings as of next July 1. But he acknowledged Wednesday it is an "appealing" way to stimulate the economy.

The problem is that a speed up of the tax cut, which would put an additional $14.6 billion in taxpayer pockets next year, could increase the federal deficit by the same amount.

But Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan, interviewed on the NBC-TV "Today" show, maintained, without explanation, that "the net figure" that would be added to the deficit by speeding up the tax rate cut "is closer to $6 billion to $8 billion." In theory, the economic stimulus that could result from a tax cut could, in turn, cut into the deficit that would otherwise result from the drop in federal revenue. That troubles some of the president's economic advisers and some key members of Congress at a time when congressional budget experts are already estimating that the deficit could reach an unprecedented $170 billion in fiscal 1983 and $200 billion the following year.

Administration officials say there is a vigorous debate going on within the White House over whether the tax-cut plan is good economics and good politics. Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan first proposed the idea, but is facing strong opposition from budget director David A. Stockman and chief White House economist Martin S. Feldstein.

To move up the effective date to Jan. 1, Reagan would have to win swift approval during the special post-election session of Congress that will convene at the end of this month. Presidential advisers are reported to be at sharp odds over Reagan's chances on that front.

"We would hope Congress would go along with it if he (Reagan) decides to do it," said deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes. "If they are obstructionist in that, we would have to reassess."

Initial reaction from Congress ranged from wariness among senior Republicans to outright opposition from Democratic House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill.

"The speaker feels that the solution to a $200 billion deficit is not a higher deficit," said Christopher Matthews, an aide to O'Neill. "The speaker thinks it would be hypocritical for Democrats to support that tax cut now."

Democratic Sen. Ernest Hollings of South Carolina called the idea "a short-term gimmick which admits to the long-term problems of Reaganomics."

Hearing Told Of 'Forced Labor'

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Former Soviet prisoners told an international tribunal today that camp and prison inmates are forced to work on the pipeline that will bring natural gas from Siberia to Western Europe.

One former prisoner, Machmet Kulmagambetov, said he had worked on gas pipeline projects for a total of six years in different parts of Siberia.

But neither he nor another Soviet exile questioned, Julia Wosnessenskaja, could furnish proof that forced laborers were working on the pipeline now under construction.

They and other ex-prisoners scheduled to testify left the Soviet Union by 1980 and the current project went started in 1981.

Both Kulmagambetov and Ms. Wosnessenskaja painted a grim picture of life in what another former prisoner, Georgi Davydov, said were 2,400 camps and many hundreds more prisons in the Soviet Union.

About one percent of the Soviet population, 2.5 million people, are in prison, Davydov said.

In West Germany, by comparison, approximately 0.1 percent of the population is in prison, according to statistics from the Bonn Justice Ministry. The former prisoners said they were forced at times to work between nine and 16 hours a day and that tasks ranged from felling trees to sewing for women or lugging heavy burdens.

Ms. Wosnessenskaja, an author from Leningrad, said women worked in sub-zero temperatures dressed only in thin cotton dresses, a wool cardigan and plastic boots.

Kulmagambetov said one camp where he worked in Siberia had 960 prisoners in the mid-1970s. But he claimed to have certain knowledge the number was to be increased to 1,500 to work on the pipeline.

He denounced Western firms for what he called their "aid" to the Soviet state.

President Plans Propose 'Accidental War' Guards

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a "confidence-building" message to the Soviet Union, President Reagan is "planning to propose new measures to guard against accidental nuclear war, according to administration sources.

In a prime-time, nationally televised speech next Monday night, Reagan will call for improving the hot line between Washington and Moscow and more notification before nuclear missile tests, the sources said.

The speech is designed to assure the late President Leonid I. Brezhnev's successors that the United States is committed to arms control. Reagan will draw attention to the massive sums the two superpowers spend on defense and urge a mutual effort to reverse the nuclear weapons race, said the sources, who asked not to be identified.

While Brezhnev's death last Wednesday is not viewed by U.S. officials as ushering in a new era of Soviet foreign policy, Reagan and his advisers are taking the occasion to call for improved relations. In the speech, the sources said, Reagan intends to show how U.S. proposals for cutting back nuclear missiles can foster peace.

Now under negotiation in Geneva, the proposals would cut back by one-third U.S. and Soviet intercontinental nuclear warheads and reduce or eliminate nuclear missiles in Europe. Prospects for an early agreement are considered slim.

Reagan is expected to urge the Kremlin to reach an agreement on at least some of the principles of the U.S. proposals. However, the sources said, he will not suggest a less comprehensive treaty or support ratification of the 1979 SALT accord, which sought to set ceilings on U.S. and Soviet long-range bombers and ocean-spanning missiles.

The current superpower hot line is a teleprinter between the two capitals. Established under a 1963 agreement, it is designed to flash alerts of "imminent, accidental nuclear attacks. It has never been used for that purpose, although presidents and Soviet leaders have used it on other occasions to exchange messages in times of tension, notably during the 1973 Arab-Israeli war.

Sens. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., and Sam Nunn, D-Ga., have suggested bolstering the encoded message system with a military crisis center, staffed by U.S. and Soviet officials who would quickly exchange nuclear information and warnings.

The president's speech is designed to amplify for the new Soviet leaders his call last June in Berlin for "conciliation instead of confrontation."

Polish Underground Conceding Strike Failure A Severe Blow'

By THOMAS W. NETTER
Associated Press Writer

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Fugitive Solidarity leaders admitted failure for the first time today, saying the lack of response to their call for a protest strike Nov. 10 was "a serious blow."

"Refusal to join the strike is a serious blow for the authority of the Temporary Coordinating Commission" (of the Solidarity underground). It is the first time its call got no support from union members," the statement said.

"If there wasn't enough determination for a one-day strike, it is difficult to expect planning for an all-out general strike," a reference to the underground's call for a general strike in the spring.

The statement, in the underground Warsaw bulletin "Mazowsze Weekly," was the first union comment on the weak response to calls to protest Nov. 10, the second anniversary of Solidarity's court registration.

The bulletin said the lack of response could force a change of tactics leading to "long-term resistance."

But the failure of the protests could also mean the union might assume they were in "a lost battle, a battle conducted at the wrong moment."

The statement, which was not signed by the four Temporary Commission members but was assumed to reflect their views, said official sanctions taken prior to Nov. 10 had helped cool workers' fervor.

There were some protests Nov. 10 and police used tear gas to break up demonstrations in several cities, including Warsaw.

The sanctions included threatened prison terms of up to six years, the threat of militarizing factories, or placing them under military rules and arrests and internment of unionists.

"But the date of the strike happened to be a moment when emotions had cooled down," the statement said.

"The Nov. 10 action was supposed to be an element in a radical program for struggle, for preparation of a general strike next spring."

In a last-minute addition, the statement also lauded Solidarity chief Lech Walesa who was released from internment Nov. 11, saying, "We welcome him with joy and hope."

"His attitude became for us an example of courage, determination and resistance," the typed-in comment said. "Since the very start, he has been our leader in the common struggle."

The new bulletin came as the martial law authorities reported the trial of Wladyslaw Frasyniuk, the Krakow underground leader captured by security agents Oct. 5.

The Communist Party daily, in a lengthy report on Frasyniuk's trial quoted the underground leader as disclaiming responsibility for the death of a man killed during Aug. 31 protests in his city.

The man's death was among 15 officially acknowledged in clashes with the authorities since martial law began last Dec. 13.

The arrest of Frasyniuk, followed by the seizure of his replacement, Piotr Bednarz, Nov. 7, was a major blow to the underground's Temporary Coordination Commission since both had been members.

ECU Professor Is Christmas Baking Artist

By FRANCEINE PERRY
For Agnes Freudenberg Hostettler of the East Carolina University foreign languages faculty, Christmas baking is a major enterprise. To make the hundreds of molded and decorated cookies her kitchen produces annually, she purchases 50 pounds of almonds, 30 pounds each of several other kinds of nuts and vast quantities of honey, eggs, spices, fruits and flour.

The actual baking begins in early October as she assembles ingredients for nearly a dozen different delicious types — her own adaptations of traditional southern German and Swiss recipes.

After the cookies are baked and decorated they are stored in the freezer which improves the flavor of "Lebkuchen," a gingerbread-type of honey cookie.

Her cookies are not the ordinary rolled and cutout butter and sugar cookies most American associate with Christmas. They are works of art.

Dr. Hostettler's interest in cookie baking derives from two influences: her fascination with the intricately-carved wooden molds used for ceremonial and festive flat cakes made by European bakers since the Middle Ages and her girlhood in Germany.

As a girl in Marburg/Hessen, young Agnes Freudenberg and her three sisters rarely entered the kitchen where the family's cook reigned supreme.

As Christmas approached, however, the girls and their mother, like all German women became intensely involved in the kitchen, mixing dough, rolling and shaping cookies and baking them to store away for the holidays.

"I suppose my love of cookie baking really comes from my mother," she says. In the tradition of master bakers, German housewives use decorative molds to form their cookies and artfully decorate them with icing and food dyes. The recipes used vary, according to the locality and the baker.

Lebkuchen is the oldest type. Honey cakes were part of the Egyptian culture around 1500 B.C. and were adapted by the Greeks and Romans. They were "possibly introduced" by the Roman conquerors to the northern areas now known as Switzerland and Germany, she explained.

The other two most famous types of molded cookies are "Springerle," an anise-flavored white cookie which can be colored and used as a Christmas ornament and "Marzipan," an unbaked confection made from almond paste, rosewater and sugar which is shaped and tinted to resemble fruites, vegetables and flowers.

Her Christmas cookies are shared with her five adult daughters and other relatives and friends. Many of them are packed and mailed to distant places; others go with her to Statesville for the holidays where she and her husband Ernst have a farm.

With care and good ingredients, Dr. Hostettler's cookies can be duplicated in most American kitchens. She does have some words of advice for novice bakers: —Roll out cookies on granulated sugar, rather than flour. Sugar will keep the dough from sticking and the cookies will taste better.

—Cookies can be quickly molded with a Springerle rolling pin, which is carved into squares with various designs. Rub the pin with confectioner's sugar. Cut imprinted dough squares apart with a sharp knife.

—If frosting is desired, make it in a small bowl, by dropping lemon juice into sifted confectioner's sugar.

Stir and continue adding juice until the correct consistency is reached.

Agnes Hostettler's Nurnberg Lebkuchen

1/3 cup honey, 2 T. sugar, 2 T. butter or margarine, 1 T. water, 1 egg yolk, 1 tsp. grated lemon rind, 1 T. cocoa, 1 tsp. cinnamon, 1/4 tsp. ground cloves, 1/4 tsp. cardamon, 3/4 cup white flour, 1/2 cup rye flour, 1 tsp. baking powder, 3/4 cup ground almonds, 1/4 cup candied citron, chopped and 1/4 cup golden raisins.

Policewoman Works On Rape Seminars

By MARK LANGFORD
AMARILLO, Texas (UPI) — As a former nurse, eighth grade school teacher, airline ticket saleswoman, drug counselor and mother of seven children, Diane Bosch says she has always been in the people business.

Now, only five years into her latest career, Mrs. Bosch has earned international recognition as a policewoman.

The International Association of Women Police named Mrs. Bosch the 1982 Officer of the Year after reviewing more than 1,000 applications from the United States, Canada, Britain and other countries.

She was chosen for her special talent as a communicator and for her expertise on the subject of rape.

Starting in October 1980, when she was still working the streets, patrolwoman Bosch began a series of rape seminars in her spare time.

In the past two years, more than 8,600 women from the Texas Panhandle, Oklahoma and New Mexico have learned at the seminars how to prevent rape or deal with the trauma if rape occurs.

Despite her responsibilities at home, officer Bosch wants to take her program on the road. She says misconceptions about rape still prevail.

"We can't promise women they will never be raped," she says. "We're just showing them how to survive. Just more self confidence can prevent you from becoming a victim."

"What you don't know about rape can hurt you. The deadliest myth is that rape is a sexually motivated act. It is not. Another deadly myth is that women are asking for it."

"We've seen 2-year-olds and 97-year-olds raped. What did they do to ask for it?"

Mrs. Bosch says rape is an aggressive and hostile act toward women caused by the attacker's need to dominate and control.

She says women should be aware of three different kinds of rapists — the angry, the sadistic and the more common power seeker.

"The power rapist is usually armed. He doesn't use it (his weapon) except for intimidation. His rapes are normally always planned. He wants to gain and maintain complete control. If the woman gains control, he will use more power and he may kill her."

Mrs. Bosch says the angry rapist dislikes women, does not use a weapon or plan his attacks.

"He wants to show you how no-good you are," she says. "He will slap and choke and sometime sodomize his victim."

Although self-defense is part of Mrs. Bosch's seminar, she says fighting back is not always appropriate.

She says there are no rules for behavior and she can only pass along what has worked in the past.

"Your best weapon is your brain," she says. "You can't leave it (defense) to your dog or a gun. You have to be able to overcome the fear and let your brain kick in and start working."

Besides giving practical tips on rape prevention, including home security, her seminars are designed to help families of rape victims.

"A rape is something a woman carries forever," she says. "It has broken up marriages because the husband didn't understand. Men need to attend if their wives or daughters have been raped."

Amarillo crime statistics indicate the program is helping. Rapes reported during the first six months of 1982 were down 29 percent.

In addition, Mrs. Bosch said, "When we do these (seminars) the burglary rate goes down because we stress so much prevention."

Reception Given Couple

Mr. and Mrs. John D. Taylor were honored by family and friends Sunday in celebration of their 25th wedding anniversary. A reception was held at the Bethel Baptist Church fellowship hall.

The couple was married Nov. 15, 1957, in Roanoke Rapids.

Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Langley presided at the guest register. A bouquet of fall silk flowers and pictures of the couple and their sons were displayed.

The refreshment table was covered with a natural lace cloth with a green underlay draped with bows and bells. It was centered with a bouquet of fall silk flowers and yellow tapers. Punch was poured by Edith Edwards and Laura Smith. Corinne Holmes and Jeannette Willis served wedding cake.

The gift table was covered with a white cloth and centered with fall silk flowers. Gifts were opened and displayed by Barbara Robinson and Barbara Bradley. Petrina Robinson and Tracy Woodruff assisted.

Good-byes were said Mr. and Mrs. Langley and the honorees.

Dear Abby

Boot Given To Family Ski Trip

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Eight years ago, after 13 years of marriage, my husband and I divorced. I have custody of a daughter (16) and a son (14).

My former husband (Bob) married almost immediately and lives out of state. He has continued to love and support our children through the years. They visit him for vacations and are in close touch with him, which I think is wonderful.

Bob announced six months ago that he and his wife are filing for divorce. Last week he called and asked if the children could go on a skiing vacation with him during Christmas vacation. I agreed, thinking it would be good for the children to be alone with their dad once again. Yesterday my daughter informed me that Dad told her he planned to take his new girlfriend along!

Abby, I've taken my children to church and have tried to set a good example for them, and I am very upset about this proposed arrangement. I am also angry that Bob was not completely honest with me.

I know I am still clinging to old-fashioned morals, and I probably would be called "prudish" by some, but this arrangement would contradict the teachings I have tried to instill in our children. (His divorce will not even be final at the time of this trip.)

My friends tell me that times have changed and I should be more "open-minded." What would you do under my circumstances?

OLD-FASHIONED

DEAR OLD-FASHIONED: I would tell Bob that as long as the children are in my care, I will not consent to their vacationing with him and a woman to whom he is not married. Period.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 22-year-old female who until recently was involved with a 35-year-old man for about a month. We had a good relationship and enjoyed each other's company until he wanted sex. I felt I wasn't ready for that even though I was beginning to fall in love with him.

He felt hurt and thought I didn't care for him, so he stopped calling me. Now he's telling everyone that we broke up because of the age difference. I know that wasn't true, and now I regret that I didn't give in to his demands for sex.

I can't sleep nights wishing I had been Miss Sexy instead of Miss Goody-Goody.

SORRY IN TRENTON, N.J.

DEAR SORRY: Dry your tears. You obviously didn't know him very well after a one-month involvement. He didn't drop you because he thought you didn't care for him; he dropped you because all he wanted from you was sex. If he really cared for you, he would have waited.

DEAR ABBY: My sister-in-law is pregnant with her second child and I'd like to give her a baby shower. She already has many of the things she needs for the coming baby, so I want to know if it would be proper to list on the invitations the things (brand names and colors) she needs the most, and ask the guests to please specify with their R.S.V.P. which gift they chose?

This would eliminate any duplicates at the party, and she could get the things she really needs for the baby.

PERPLEXED

DEAR PERPLEXED: It's not proper to ask for anything specific with an invitation, but if anyone should inquire, it's proper to offer suggestions.

If you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say, send for Abby's complete booklet on letter-writing. Send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

Problems? You'll feel better if you get them off your chest. Write to Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

School Study Cleared

With the Greenville Board of Education's approval of a study concerning the city and county school district merger and the county commissioners agreement to fund such a study, the new effort seems to be on its way.

The full study of the merger and related problems of the two school districts was recommended by the county board of education. Going ahead with the study was approved by the city board this week provided the study is completed in six months and some definite recommendations are forthcoming.

In the meantime the county commissioners said they would fund such a study. The county government will be responsible for having the study done and County Manager Reginald Gray said it is expected that a meeting with representatives of the Research Triangle Institute will be held to determine if the institute will do the study.

The county commissioners thanked both the county and city boards for their interest in the project.

We offer our praise to all three boards for their actions. Resolving the problems of the two school districts is difficult, indeed. It will take sincere effort on the part of everyone concerned to work out what is needed to see that the needs of our young people and the best interest of the taxpayers are met.

Pro Football Has Returned

Professional football is apparently back.

After a frustrating 57-day strike, the players and owners came to an agreement on Tuesday and they say the season will resume with games scheduled for Sunday.

For football addicts at least part of the season has been salvaged and for those who don't particularly care for the sport it means that Sunday movies will once again be knocked off television.

For the players and owners we hope a lesson has been learned; that it is costly to both sides to quit at the beginning of the season. While the players picked up some financial concessions, the strike has been costly to them and the owners.

A strike is no way to settle such things, and both sides should recognize that they owe a great deal to the fans they have inconvenienced.

THIS AFTERNOON

Racial Imbalance

By PAUL T. O'CONNOR
RALEIGH — It pays to be a white male if you're going to work for the state of North Carolina. A study conducted by the state Department of Administration and released this month finds that white males at all levels of state government are paid better than black males and women of all races.

State government has a pay scale that puts a specific salary range on each job. A new employee's salary is determined by the job's pay scale and his experience. Under this system, it should make no difference whether a new employee is black or white, male or female. All gizmo adjusters with three years' experience should make $200 a week, regardless of sex or race.

But according to DOA's study, the uniform pay scale isn't working. When the salaries of people with comparable qualifications are compared, white males regularly bring home the fatter paychecks.

Education doesn't even things out. "At every education level, white males enjoy a salary advantage over their white female, black male or black female peers," the study found. Only among those with graduate school degrees does any group — black males — come close to what white males earn.

For some white males, a shortage of education doesn't get in the way of getting a better paying job. Sometimes the person on the job doesn't have the educational qualifications it supposedly requires. Twice as many males, proportionately, hold jobs for which they don't have enough education as do the other groups.

also true. Some people have more education than a job requires — a college graduate working as a secretary, for example. There are only two-thirds as many white men, proportionately, working at jobs for which they are overqualified as there are members of the other three groups, the study shows.

The study shows that white men make up two-thirds of the state's workforce with 10 or more years of service. The study shows that proportionately white males are doing much better in terms of salaries than are any of the other groups in the category of 10-year veterans. A bright note in the study is the parity of salaries among all four groups in the under 25 age group.

These salary differences are created by something called "occupational segregation." That means that some jobs are considered "women's work," some are "white jobs," some are "black jobs."

Most clerical jobs, for example, draw about the same salaries. And most are filled by women. But the top-paying clerical jobs, those over $13,000 a year, go at a disproportionate rate to white men.

DOA Secretary Jane Patterson figured out another little trick all by herself. Administrative assistants and administrative officers, two different pay classifications, do about the same work but assistants as "officers" are paid less and these jobs most usually go to women.

So when she was named secretary of administration she re-designated all of her women "assistants" and put them on par with her male administrators. That hasn't happened everywhere, however.

Top Of The World, Ma

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent
NEW YORK (AP) — The

time is long overdue for modern architects to give some thought to how the highrise horrors they inflict on our cities look from on high as well as "the statement" they make to the man in the street.

Architects, we know, don't build buildings anymore. They make statements, lofty statements.

Well, there is room at the top for clearing up some of the clutter in their steel and concrete prose.

Many, if not most, of the visitors to our biggest cities arrive by airplane and get a good look at downtown Detroit, Chicago or San Francisco from a few thousand feet. Most flights from the West and the South into New York's La Guardia and Kennedy airports make their final approach directly over the clustered spires and upright cracker boxes of Manhattan.

The view from the top can be quite appalling.

Skyscraper rooftops offer a vista of air-conditioning hardware, elevator motor sheds, air ventilators, standpipes, puddles of rain water, broken skylights, TV antennas, communications dishes and often a random array of discarded plumbing fixtures and broken-down office furniture. I have often wondered how that stack of automobile tires ended up atop what obviously is a hotel on Central Park South. The flat top apartment blocks at least occasionally offer the sight of a well-kept penthouse garden or an unexpected nude sunbather, while the commercial establishments are uniformly dismal; not even a neon sign to relieve the bleak overview.

The medieval cathedral builders topped off their enduring masterpieces with splendid soaring Gothic spires, grinning gargoyles leaning over the eaves, somber and sometimes smiling saints tucked into niches high above the flying buttresses, out of sight capitals and pediments lovingly scrolled and sculptured. This in an age when no one but God looked down from above.

How pleasant it is to arrive in Bologna or Florence or so many lovely Italian cities along a flight path of red tiled roofs and exquisite house top gardens, dancing with statuary and sparkling with bird baths and tiny fountains in even the dingiest slum areas. Even rooftop clotheslines add more color and life to a city seen from above than that high rise wilderness of functional elevator and climate control paraphernalia.

Builders of colonial America, who seldom anointed themselves with the title of architect, did some of their best work for the birds or at least gave them the best view of the buildings. New England's charm today remains in its steeples and cupolas and weather vanes, the way the mansard roofs of Paris provide the jewels for the sunlit silver necklace of the Seine.

The House of the Seven Gables and those weathered old seaside hotels made a more enduring statement about culture and values on New England's rock ribbed coast than most of the glass and chrome exclamation points thrusting up over Boston Harbor. Even the red brick old mills of Fall River, Lowell and New Bedford wearing conical hat water towers and smiling up at us with dinosaur teeth skylights, row on row, provide a more pleasing prospect out the cabin window than what the avant-garde apostles of glass sheathed grossness have imposed on old Boston, whose proudest boasts from above are still Fanueil Hall, the Old North Church, the Custom House and Charles Bulfinch's

Strength For Today

A USEFUL HABIT

Do you read poetry?

If you do, you are an exception. To be sure, people read the few random verses which appear in magazines, but definitely to sit down and read for an hour or two from the great classical poets is something which few people do. One does not need to read much. A few verses, an ode or a sonnet, a scene from one of Shakespeare's plays — these would take only a few minutes, but the illumination they give to life is enormous.

The ancient poet Horace put it this way: "Poets, the first instructors of mankind, Brought all things to their native use."

Poetry, as someone has said, is the art of substantiating shadows. It is the utterance of deep truth — truth so deep that it transcends everyday expression. Plato declared that poetry comes nearer to vital truth than does history.

The ancient poet Horace put it this way: "Poets, the first instructors of mankind, Brought all things to their native use."

Education Helps Productivity

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) —

You've heard the usual reasons why Japanese productivity has risen while in some ways the efficiency of American production has fallen. Now consider this reason: The Japanese are better educated in the basics.

That much has been known for years by educators, but it has been a long time awaiting acceptance by some of the economic community, which usually cited as reasons the loyalty of Japanese workers or quality control programs, or the government-business partnership in that nation.

Or if not those factors, then the laxness of Americans, who knew that apprenticeship systems, worker incentives, access to capital and on-line training of executives were needed — but did little about it for many years.

Now, education has come to the fore. As a factor in productivity, "we overlook it," said William Freund, vice president and chief economist of the New York Stock Exchange, which has just completed another productivity study.

"The Japanese are better educated," he said. "They are more literate. They read better and understand better and have a better command of mathematics." No wonder, he said, that they've made productivity gains.

A section of the exchange's productivity study, the fifth in a series, provides evidence for some of the conclusions to which Freund refers.

—About 95 percent of Japanese teen-agers now graduate from high school compared with approximately 74 percent in the United States. Source: Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching.

And, says Freund, the Japanese high school graduate has the equivalent of about four more years of schooling than the U.S. high school graduate because of a longer school week and more weeks to the school year.

—In both mathematics and science the mean scores of Japan's school children are higher than in any other country, and far higher than in the United States.

Moreover, there is less variability to scores, which suggests that educational achievement in Japan is widespread. Source: International Study of Achievement in Mathematics, published by John Wiley & Sons.

—Thirteen percent of U.S. high school students in a survey could not perform reading tasks designated "functional"; 28 percent could not answer questions testing "literal comprehension" of what they read; and nearly 10 percent couldn't write prose deemed marginally acceptable.

"The results," Freund reports, "were much worse with regard to anything beyond basic skills ... Fifty-three percent couldn't write a letter correcting a billing error." Source: National Assessment for Educational Progress, Denver.

No comparison could be made at the college level, simply because American institutions are so far superior to Japan's. In fact, the stock exchange study states, Japanese colleges are a four-year vacation free of demands.

To some extent, it might be said, a young Japanese demonstrates his mental capabilities in high school and then learns to apply them by working in on-line jobs, working on the factory floor until he understands what is required.

New Strain On Relations

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's hasty announcement that the United States and its European allies had reached "substantial agreement" on a new East-West trade policy has exacerbated America's already strained relations with France.

But in the process, American officials hope the United States has cemented its friendship with the new West German government and headed off a potentially embarrassing boycott of the ninth economic summit conference next year.

Some American officials worried that French President Francois Mitterrand, already angered by the U.S. trade sanctions against the Soviet Union, might decide to boycott the summit of industrialized nations, scheduled to take place in Williamsburg, Va., next spring.

If he were able to take Germany out with him, said those officials, speaking on condition they remain nameless, the French could effectively sabotage the Williamsburg summit and embarrass the host government, the United States.

Reagan was so concerned about the general deterioration in U.S.-French relations that he secretly dispatched a trusted aide to Paris last month for a diplomatic talk with Mitterrand. The emissary, national security adviser William P. Clark, returned much encouraged, but the bloom didn't last.

Reagan apparently knew the French had expressed reservations about any public linking of the new trade agreement with the anti-Soviet sanctions. But he nonetheless used the purported agreement as the rationale for canceling the sanctions he had imposed against the Soviet Union in retaliation for the crackdown in Poland.

The sanctions had hurt U.S. relations with its allies perhaps as much as they had punished the Soviet Union by delaying construction of the trans-Siberian pipeline. It is the European allies, after all, who expect to benefit from the pipeline that will supply them with a much-needed new energy source.

Sources said West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl, who met Reagan in Washington on Monday, had let it be known that he would be delighted if the sanctions were lifted before his arrival. And his government was most cooperative in pressing for agreement on the secret draft of the new trade policy toward the Soviet Union, a policy that no one has yet signed or even confirmed is on paper.

Partly to please Kohl — and also to get the gnawing sanctions issue behind him — Reagan used his regular Saturday radio speech to announce the trade agreement. And, with the agreement in place, he said, the sanctions were no longer necessary. So he lifted them immediately.

The French, apparently concerned that Reagan's announcement made it appear they had knuckled under to the United States on trade policy in order to win relief from the sanctions, announced they were not a party to any such agreement.

Reagan, described as "perturbed" by one aide and as "furious" by another, could not produce a document to prove the French wrong. The draft, which had been through some 30 versions as the allied negotiators passed it back and forth between their governments, was, in diplomatic parlance, an "unpaper."

That is, it did not exist until everyone agreed that it did. And the French obviously weren't about to let it surface.

"What we have here," said one frustrated White House aide, "is an unagreement on an unpaper between unallies."

To the editor:

I would like to convey my deep appreciation for the delightful performance by the East Carolina Symphony in Wright Auditorium Sunday afternoon.

Commemorating the 75th anniversary of East Carolina University, Beethoven's No. 9 in D Minor was a cultural shot in the arm to Greenville and, if a large attendance is an indication of the public's preference in entertainment, there is little doubt that a love for serious music still exists.

The orchestra, aptly conducted by Robert Hause and the choral arrangement, handled by Rhonda Fleming, drew a standing ovation. The performance was enhanced by four highly acclaimed vocalists who sang the leading roles.

The joy and appreciation that is inspired by the masters was well manifested in those in attendance, including many youths, leading us to believe that they would, indeed, be always welcomed in Greenville.

Their music reflects optimism and a faith in moral values. If our children were more frequently exposed to the sensitive qualities of the classics, in an era when hard rock, with its immoral suggestions, is in abundance, perhaps, in many instances, the gap that separates the parent from the child would be narrowed.

Again, thank you, ECU.

To the editor:

What better time than this week, Nov. 15-21 — National Children's Book Week as well as American Education Week — to stress the love and need for education, books, libraries and reading. We need to read to cope with complexity — reading directions for making a model, cooking a recipe, getting a tax refund or application for work; to cope with spare time — bumper stickers, billboard, notices, cafeteria menus, bus advertisements; to communicate over time — read what happened years ago; to communicate over space — writing letters, setting up a mailbox in classroom or library; for pleasure and enjoyment — you could name it (U.S.S.R. (Uninterrupted Sustained Silent Reading) or TRIP (Time to Read in Peace) and to represent and make sense of life's experiences (guidance). This is the golden age of American education. At no other time in our history has the literacy rate been higher, academic skills greater, educational opportunities more available to more citizens.

Let's continue to encourage reading and ownership of more books by our children, with parents setting the good example — everyone at some time of the day resolving to edge in at least 15 minutes of reading. It will make itself felt at the end of the year. Then the theme, "Get Lost in a Book," will become more meaningful.

Napoleon said, "Show me a family of readers and I will show you the people who move the world."

superb Statehouse.

In the age of the airplane and the helicopter, what dazzles us most about the New York skyline are the now venerable buildings that were designed to be ogled and a-hed at by passengers arriving from Europe by ship. The Empire State's incomparable tower, perhaps the world's best known landmark since the Great Pyramid; the silver swordfish of the Chrysler Building leaping out of the sea blue sky, the Gothic grandeur of the old Woolworth Building and the golden tiara worn by New York Life. Compared with such soaring majesty the unimaginative twin towers of the World Trade Center, as seen when the "fasten seat-belt" sign lights up, are vacant blacktopped parking lots under the baleful red-eyed gaze of the blinking aircraft warning light.

Despite the ugly new office blocks and perpendicular palaces of the bankers, the elegance that is London and the glory that is Athens still survive because the builders of St. Paul's and the Houses of Parliament and the Acropolis thought that someone out there might be watching, even if it only turned out to be us. From on high, Washington, D.C., still looks serene and lovingly laid out, but the vertical vandals are at the gates.

Furthermore, when contemplating our civilization in overview, how come the unroofed sports arenas like Shea Stadium and the Michigan bowl at Ann Arbor, and the ballparks in Milwaukee and St. Louis where the World Series was played, look so grand and glittering from the Goodyear blimp while domed supercomplexes like the ones in New Orleans, Pontiac, Mich., and Seattle look like failed mushrooms or giant discarded toilet fixtures?

Which reminds me, I must get a ladder this afternoon and clean out the roof gutters. We have an airport in nearby Danbury, Conn., and you never know who's looking.

A 20th Century Master

The U.S. Postal Service planned to issue a new stamp today honoring composer Igor Stravinsky, shown here in an early drawing by his longtime friend Pablo Picasso. Stravinsky was born in Russia in 1882 and came to the U.S. in 1940 where he worked until his death in 1971. His early works, like The Rite of Spring, were so daring that they caused riots in concert halls. But audiences soon learned how to listen to Stravinsky's forceful and pounding rhythms and his blends of European cabaret music, American jazz, and the classical tradition. As one of the most innovative 20th century composers, Stravinsky clearly deserves this tribute from his adopted country.

A great many state employees are in jobs which DOA classified as either race or sex segregated. "Amazingly, 72.1 percent of all state employees met our definition of working in a sex segregated job ... 22.5 percent work in a race segregated job."

What does all of this mean in dollar terms? Using a complex form of analysis, the DOA researchers determined that white women are paid an average of $2,529 a year less than white men, black men are paid $2,212 less and black women $3,271 less.

Quartz Heaters: Questions & Answers

- Q. Quartz heaters heat objects and people, not the air. How?
- A. Quartz heaters produce infra-red radiant heat, the same as the sun. Infra-red heat does not heat the air, only objects and people. This keeps the heat you pay for from going straight up to the ceiling, which happens with most other heaters.
- Q. Will Quartz heaters heat a room?
- A. Yes. Infra-red heat absorbs into room surroundings (i.e. carpet, walls, furniture, people) and the surroundings in turn elevate air temperature in the room in less than one-half hour.
- Q. What size room will the Quartz heater heat?
- A. Up to 20 by 30 foot room. Heat travels 10 to 15 feet away from the heater at various intensity. Heat travels in an arc of 135 degrees (left to right).
- Q. Should you run a quartz heater 24 hours per day?
- A. No, in fact it is not necessary to run a quartz heater unless you are in front of the heater. This is because it doesn't heat the air, and takes only 45 seconds to get up to full heat from a cold start. It is necessary to run most other heaters more often because they heat the air, and room temperature drops quickly when the other type heater is off. This would require yet another preheating before personal comfort is achieved. This is not necessary with a PRESTO Quartz heater.
- Q. What effect will the quartz heater have on my electric bill?
- A. First, take a look at your total heating costs. Turn down the central heat (you can save 3% for every degree dropped) and turn on the quartz heater only in the room you are in. Since PRESTO'S quartz heater only costs from 2 to 9 cents per hour to operate in Greenville, it will cost you much less to heat one room with a PRESTO Quartz heater than it would to heat every room with central heat. In fact it has been noted that many people are buying 4 or 5 quartz heaters and spot heating the entire house this way.
- Q. Are Quartz Heaters safe?
- A. On PRESTO'S models there is a 360 degree safety tipover switch which cuts off the heater if accidentally tipped over in any direction. The protective front grill on all PRESTO models keep little fingers out of the tube area. PRESTO'S are safe.
- Q. Will Quartz heaters consume oxygen like kerosene heaters?
- A. No. Also quartz heaters produce no odor, and will not produce any carbon monoxide. Also it is not necessary to leave a window open while operating. Quartz heaters do not involve any combustion of oil.
- Q. Can I use extension cords with the quartz heater?
- A. Only a cord rated at least 1500 watts or 12.5 amps.
- Q. How long do quartz tubes last?
- A. PRESTO'S Quartz heaters were life tested for 10,000 hours (at 11 hours/day for 4 months equals 7 years normal use). Parts and labor are free on PRESTO Quartz heaters for one year. The nearest convenient factory authorized service center is Raleigh.
- Q. Which brand should I buy?
- A. PRESTO is an excellent buy because it is a very fine performing quartz heater backed by good service. Also it is very economical to operate, good safety features, and good selection (single tube, dual tube, or oscillating).
- Q. Which PRESTO model is best for me?
- A.
  1. Single tube - (1000 watts/3400 BTU's) great for bathroom, office, small den, eating area.
  2. Dual tube - (1500 watts/5120 BTU's) great for living room, bedroom, workshop, great room, family room, or rec. room.
  3. Oscillating quartz heater (1500 watts/5120 BTU's) Adds 60 degrees sweep of heat to the performance of the dual tube unit.
  4. PRESTO Radiator heater (1500 watts/5120 BTU's)
- Q. Where are PRESTO Quartz heaters available?
- A. PRESTO Quartz heaters are on sale now at Brendle's, located in Wilson. There will be a PRESTO factory representative on hand to answer your questions at above store on Nov. 19 and 20, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. The store address is 2101 S. Tarboro Street.

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, NOV. 19, 1982

New Layoff

AURORA - Texasgulf Inc. has laid off about 60 more workers at its Lee Creek phosphate mine.

The cutback, which follows a 10 percent reduction in workforce announced in July, brings the total number of employees laid off this year to about 200.

"This step is basically a refining process of our earlier reduction," Texasgulf spokesman Rann Carpenter said in an announcement this week. He said the combined 15 percent reduction this year at Lee Creek is still less than the nearly 30 percent cutback in phosphate mining centers in Florida.

Carpenter said the Lee Creek workers will receive eight weeks' severance pay, a Christmas bonus and insurance benefits through Dec. 31.

"We're trying to protect as many jobs as possible" at Lee Creek, Carpenter said. He said no other reductions are planned.

The cutback leaves about 1,180 persons employed at Lee Creek.

An Educators' Conference was hosted by the Office of Academic Services, NASA Public Affairs, Washington, D.C.

Requests Approved

Police Chief Glenn Cannon announced the approval of four requests for solicitations permits in Greenville.

He said the requests were submitted by: the Pan African Orthodox Christian Church to conduct a sidewalk solicitation Nov. 17-20 and Jan. 5-8 to raise money for the building fund; the Phi Eta Sigma Freshman Honor Society to conduct a sidewalk solicitation Dec. 3 and 4 to raise money for a scholarship fund;

The Salvation Army to conduct its annual sidewalk solicitation through the use of Christmas kettles Nov. 26 through Dec. 24 to raise funds for the organization's Christmas relief fund; and by St. Gabriel's School to conduct a Christmas bazaar Dec. 4 to raise funds for the school.

Listing The Trivia As Well As Controversial

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The 1980 North Carolina census contains statistics on literacy, income and age, but it also includes some less publicized facts — like the number of Aleutians and air-conditioned homes in the state.

Census documents released last week show that 57 Eskimos, 59 Aleuts and 241 Samoans have found their way to the Tar Heel state. Much of the census data was released earlier and the latest documents contain complete breakdowns by city and county.

About a fifth of North Carolina's Eskimos live in Wake County, while the Aleuts are concentrated in Lincoln and Cumberland counties, and the Samoans in Cumberland and Onslow counties.

"They're just part of the racial categories," says Frank Ambrose, a spokesman for the Census Bureau's Charlotte office. "There are 16 groups. They picked the ones most predominant in this country for the census."

Ambrose says the statistics could be used by agencies wanting to set up education courses for specific nationalities. The census indicates there are 2,043,291 occupied housing units in the state and, in an attempt to show the quality of housing, says that 83,143 lack complete plumbing for the family's private use.

But the document goes on to say that 70 percent of the state's housing units have central heat and 60 percent have air conditioners. More than 91,800 homes have more than one person per room.

"We try to keep up with the age of the homes and repairs done in the survey," Ambrose said, adding that the information is used primarily by the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

The census also gives some unusual statistics about the state's 5,881,766 residents.

The ratio of men to women has remained almost constant since 1900, when there were 98 men for each 100 women. That number dropped slightly to 94 men per 100 women in 1980.

There are many more divorced women, 128,731, than men, 86,795, in the state, but more than 60 percent of those over the age of 15 are married. There are also many more widows, 310,104, than widowers, 52,620.

The fertility ratio — the number of children under 5 years old per 1,000 women age 15-49 — for the state is 261. But the number ranges from a low of 152 in Orange County, home of the University of North Carolina, to 384 in Onslow County, home of Camp Lejeune and New River military bases.

Ambrose says each of the questions has a specific purpose, although he could not identify them all. He says the questionnaire was a collaborative effort among federal agencies in Washington and was designed to identify the people they serve.

Tests Duplicated Space Suits' Failure

By PAUL RECER
AP Aerospace Writer
SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Engineers have been able to duplicate on the ground one of two malfunctions that forced cancellation of a spacewalk on the fifth flight of the space shuttle Columbia.

Richard A. Colonna, head of a team of engineering detectives investigating the space suit problem, said Wednesday that a pressure regulator that malfunctioned in space failed again when tested at the Dryden Flight Research Center in California.

He said the regulator, designed for 4.2 pounds per square inch of oxygen pressure in the suit, would provide only 3.7 pounds — the same reading it gave in space.

Officials at the Johnson Space Center said that was good news because if the failure can be duplicated on the ground, it's believed it can be corrected more easily. An unexplained, random failure could lead to a long engineering study and a delay in NASA's future spacewalk plans.

The regulator was part of the suit to be worn by astronaut Bill Lenoir on a planned 3½-hour spacewalk earlier this week. A different component, a high-speed fan, failed on the suit of his spacewalk partner, astronaut Joe Allen.

The fan was to be tested today in California, Colonna said. Lenoir's suit was to be flown to Houston today and Allen's on Friday.

Lenoir, Allen and their crewmates, Vance Brand and Bob Overmyer, returned to earth Tuesday, landing Columbia at Edwards Air Force Base in California after five days in orbit and a successful debut of the shuttle as a space delivery vehicle.

not arise until flight seven, in April.

Mission plans on all shuttle flights call for at least two astronauts to be prepared for an emergency spacewalk in case there is a problem with doors that enclose the craft's payload bay.

The space suits also would be worn by astronauts repairing satellites or assembling large structures in orbit, activities planned by NASA for future missions.

James A. Abrahamson, associate administrator of NASA, said a decision for a spacewalk on flight six must be made quickly to give astronauts time to train.

NASA workers at Edwards continued today to prepare Columbia for a cross-country ferry flight atop a jumbo jet. The spacecraft is scheduled to be flown on Sunday from California to Kelly Air Force Base in San Antonio, Texas, for an overnight refueling stop. The craft will be flown Monday to the Kennedy Space Center in Florida.

Columbia, a veteran of more than 10 million miles in space, will be placed into a hanger at Kennedy for the start of a months-long refurbishment. The craft's next flight is set for the fall of 1983.

The next shuttle to fly will be the Challenger, a new craft that now is completing tests for the sixth mission early next year.

SENTENCED — Former Des Moines stockbroker, Gary Lewellyn, speaks to the press following sentencing to 20 years in prison on charges that he looted $17.7 million from two Iowa banks. U.S. District Court Judge Wm. C. Stuart sentenced Lewellyn to a total of 63 years in prison on 15 charges, although most of the sentences were assigned to run at the same time. (AP Laserphoto)

The astronauts flawlessly deployed into orbit two communications satellites carried aloft for paying customers.

The mission was flawed only by the spacesuit problem.

A team of seven engineers headed by Colonna were prepared to work through the weekend at the Johnson Space Center analyzing the space suit malfunctions. The suits, which cost about $2 million each, will be taken apart for study.

NASA officials are anxious to correct the cause of the failures quickly so preparations can be made for a spacewalk on the sixth shuttle flight, now set for no earlier than Jan. 24. The next spacewalk opportunity would

Two Wrecks Are Reported

An estimated $1,600 damage resulted from two traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Wednesday.

Officers reported an estimated $500 damage resulted to each of two cars involved in a 3:55 p.m. collision on Tenth Street, .01 mile east of the Anderson Street intersection.

Drivers of the cars were identified as Edna Paramore Barber of Route 2, Winterville, and Jimmie Randell Hawkins of Route 1, Ayden.

Hawkins was charged by investigators with having improper equipment (brakes).

Cars driven by Stephen M. Nelson of 204 Elm St., and Richard Jess Kerr Jr. of 105 Oak St., collided about 10:11 a.m. at the intersection of Elm and First Streets, causing an estimated $200 damage to the Nelson car and $400 damage to the Kerr vehicle.

Labor Analyst Earns Awards

RECEIVES TWO AWARDS... Mrs. Fran Thomas, labor market analyst at the Greenville Job Service office, is presented the Chairman's Award of Merit by Glenn R. Jernigan, state chairman of the Employment Security Office. Mrs. Thomas also received the Technical Award of Merit.

Fran C. Thomas, labor market analyst in the Greenville Job Service office, has received two awards from the N.C. Employment Security Commission (ESC). The awards are the distinguished Chairman's Award of Merit and the Technical Award of Merit.

They were presented at an annual institute sponsored jointly by ESC and the International Association of Personnel in Employment Security (IAPES).

Glenn R. Jernigan, chairman of the North Carolina ESC, commented that the Chairman's Award of Merit is a special award for an individual who has shared professionalism within and outside the agency.

Mrs. Thomas earned the honor by developing publications to be used jointly by ESC and the Community College system. She also prepared a labor market information handbook for both the Job Service office and the local industrial developers.

The Technical Award presented to Mrs. Thomas is for exceptional performance in the technical aspect of her work.

This occasion is the first time that an employee of the Greenville ESC office has received two major awards at one time.

Mrs. Thomas is a graduate of East Carolina University. She and her husband, Benjamin, live in Grifton. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ottis Cannon of Ayden.

Appointments Are Announced

WASHINGTON — Television Station WITN-TV, Channel 7, Washington, has announced the addition of six new personnel. Four are members of the WITN-TV EyeWitness News Team, the other two are sales personnel.

Personnel added to the news team are Jennifer Hedgecock, native of Cary and graduate of UNC, Chapel Hill; Rochester, N.Y. native Louis Ortiz, graduate of the State University of New York, Oswego, who served three years in the Army at Fort Bragg; Jack Roper, a Union, S.C. native now living in Williamston; and Brian Williams from Baltimore, a graduate of the University of Maryland who formerly wrote for newspapers.

Named to the sales staff are Evelyn Lawrence, native of Manteo, formerly with radio and TV stations in New Bern; and Windsor native David Swain Waters, who studied at East Carolina University and currently is attending Pitt Community College.

Solar Fraction

Greenville's solar fraction calculated by the department of physics of East Carolina University was 21 on Wednesday. This means that a solar water heater could have provided 21 percent of your hot water.

MRS. GLADYS HOWELL

To Head Up Santa Drive

The Mental Health Association in Pitt County has named Gladys Howell honorary chairperson of its Operation Santa Claus campaign.

The announcement was made by Zula Rouse, MHA campaign chairperson, during a kickoff tea given at the home of Mrs. Howell, wife of the chancellor of East Carolina University.

Mrs. Howell is a Phi Beta Kappa graduate of the University of North Carolina who has taught at Randolph-Macon Woman's College and at East Carolina University. She has been on a leave of absence from teaching since her husband was named acting chancellor and then chancellor. She is the mother of two sons.

Mrs. Howell said, "The Operation Santa Claus campaign enables citizens from throughout Pitt County to give gifts to patients at Cherry Hospital and Caswell Center. It is one of the greatest opportunities we have to share at Christmas in a meaningful way."

Pentagon Is Pondering Wider Polygraph-Use

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Defense Department is reportedly considering expanding the use of lie detector tests for its employees, a move that could permit the Pentagon to use polygraphs to screen job applicants and hunt leaks to reporters.

The Washington Post said in Thursday's editions that the proposal, in the form of a draft directive, has been submitted to the Office of Personnel Management to determine whether it conforms to civil service rules.

An unidentified official was quoted as saying the draft directive would permit wider use of lie detectors than a seven-year-old policy limiting their use to "serious criminal cases, national security investigations and highly sensitive national security access cases."

The official was reported as saying the draft directive would still permit employees to refuse to take a lie detector test.

But the Post said the official reported that hundreds of Pentagon employees in especially sensitive jobs are being asked to sign forms waiving their rights to refuse to take polygraph tests.

Other Pentagon officials reportedly told the Post the document is "an update," which would provide "additional insurance" against security breaches. But critics were quoted as saying the administration is trying to intimidate Pentagon employees.

William H. Taft IV, the Pentagon's general counsel, was quoted as saying the directive would be published in the Federal Register when it is in final form. A woman answering his telephone said

Taft was not feeling well and had gone to bed early Wednesday night.

Asked about the report, a Pentagon spokesman, Cmdr. Jeffrey Renk, said: "I don't have any information on that."

'Famine' To Be Held

A number of their youth at the Mount Pleasant Christian Church will hold a Planned Famine on Dec. 3.

Youth minister Mars Robinson explained that the 30 hour fast will have a two fold purpose.

"We plan for the youth participating in the program to stay together during the fast so that while we share the experience of feeling hungry, we can also learn why hunger exists in the world, and what we can do about it," he said.

The Planned Famine hunger program also has a practical side, Mars said. The youth will each contribute $6 — two for each meal missed — to participate in the program. They will seek out famine supporters to contribute $6 donations. The famine supporters will also be asked to read a fact sheet on hunger so they too might become involved.

"We hope to be able to raise a substantial amount," said the Youth Minister. "The money we raise may help feed many families, or even an entire village, for a month or longer."

The funds will be channeled through World Vision International to help the hungry people. The interdenominational Christian humanitarian agency is presently supporting a number of hunger related relief and development programs in two dozen Latin American, Asian and African countries.

For more information about the Planned Famine program call Mars Robinson at 758-1830 or 758-8713.

Church Services

The Rev. A.L. Miller, pastor of Warren Chapel Free Will Baptist Church, announces the following services for the church:

Thursday night — youth choir rehearsal; Friday — 7:30 p.m., the senior choir and ushers will be at Sweet Hope FWB Church; Saturday — 7:30 p.m., a pageant entitled "Women of the Bible"; Sunday — 11 a.m., worship service led by Elder Horace Joyner, and 3 p.m., the gospel chorus and ushers will render services at Zion Chapel FWB Church, Ayden.

Critics Say Reagan Has Abandoned Human Rights

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — To its critics, the Reagan administration has downgraded human rights to a point where the bloodiest of dictators can engage in gross acts of repression without a murmur of protest from Washington.

quiet diplomacy than former President Carter did with his activist approach.
The debate over how the United States can most effectively deal with dictatorial regimes continues unabated, with hawks and doves often questioning each other's motives as well as their judgments.
Should the United States provide aid to a repressive government? If aid is withdrawn, will the government be overthrown and replaced by a regime more repressive and anti-American as well? Should dictators be received in the Oval Office? Are private overtures more effective than public admonitions?

Almost six years after Carter made protection of human rights an administration priority, no consensus appears in sight on how to answer these questions.

Patricia Derian, assistant secretary of state for human rights under Carter, describes the Reagan approach as "a deliberate policy of being anti-human rights."
Ms. Derian's successor, Elliott Abrams, seems to look on Ms. Derian as a human rights gadfly who made a lot of noise but had little clout during her four years in office.

maintain there is no human rights dimension to administration policy.
"They're wrong," replies Abrams, who says foreign dissidents are well aware the Reagan administration supports them.
"There are a lot of critics who think, 'Oh, well, we're not doing anything behind the scenes in Korea.'" "I don't think there are many dissidents in Korea who believe that," he adds. "In fact, I wonder if there are any dissidents in Korea who believe that."

South Korean President Chun Doo-Hwan, Philippines President Ferdinand Marcos and Indonesian President Suharto.
In each of these cases, the administration maintains there has been an improvement in human rights performance and that good will gestures by Washington reinforce this trend.
Abrams also insists his quiet approach has been more successful than the Carter administration's "because our public rhetoric has not antagonized so many governments and made them less likely to cooperate with us."

Derian says the administration is eager to befriend any number of dictators but is restrained from doing so by congressional pressure. A case in point is Guatemala, which has been denied military aid since 1977 on human rights grounds but which is facing what the administration claims is a Cuban-backed insurgency.
Ms. Derian says the administration has been giving the Guatemalan government advice on improving its international image while paying little heed to continued "death and destruction" in that country.

HAILS CONSULTATIONS
PEKING (AP) — Chinese Foreign Minister Huang Hua, returning from Moscow, expressed optimism today about Sino-Soviet consultations to improve two decades of strained relations between the Communist neighbors.

Seek Electing Superintendent

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — If the 1983 General Assembly approves a legislative committee proposal, voters will decide whether the state Superintendent of Public Instruction would be appointed, rather than elected.
The Select Committee on Education on Wednesday adopted the proposal, calling for the State Board of Education to appoint the superintendent. It is included in a draft constitutional amendment, which is expected to be presented to the 1983 Legislature.
The amendment would be submitted as a statewide referendum if state lawmakers give their approval.
Under the proposal, the appointed state superintendent would hire the controller — the board's chief financial officer.
The committee is expected to act today on a package of recommendations they tentatively approved Wednesday concerning pay and compensation for public school teachers.

draft bill shortly after state board Chairman C.D. Spangler Jr. asked that no changes be recommended now in the state's system of governing public education.
"Our table of organization is not exactly as theory would recommend," Spangler said. "But the children of our state have not been poorly served, although there is always room for improvement."
He said key personnel changes should be given time to work under the current structure.
Gov. Jim Hunt agrees with Spangler, said Gary Pearce, Hunt's press secretary.
"The governor has recognized there are problems with the governance structure and there need to be clearer lines of accountability," said Pearce. "But he doesn't feel we should make this change at this time."

Former CIA Agent Sentenced

By TIM AHERN
Associated Press Writer
ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) — Edwin Wilson's lawyers say they will not back away from their claim that the former spy was working with the CIA when he sold arms to Libya, even though he was convicted in the first of four trials.

attorney. "Obviously we're going to appeal and hopefully we'll prevail in a higher court."

A federal court jury deliberated slightly more than four hours before finding the ex-CIA agent guilty Wednesday of seven counts of conspiracy and weapons violations for smuggling four handguns and an M-16 to Libya in return for $8 million.

The 54-year-old Wilson was found innocent of one charge of interstate transportation of four pistols from North Carolina to his Virginia estate.

The maximum penalty now faced by Wilson, who is held on $60 million bail, is 39 years in prison and a $240,000 fine. U.S. District Court Judge Richard L. Williams set sentencing for Dec. 17.

Wilson still faces three more trials. On Nov. 29, he goes to federal court in Houston for trial on a charge of allegedly shipping 20 tons of plastic explosives to Libya.

He also has two trials in the District of Columbia. On Jan. 5, trial begins on federal charges that Wilson conspired unsuccessfully to assassinate a Libyan dissident living in Egypt, and there is also a Jan. 25 trial for failure to register as a Libyan agent and for shipping military equipment to Libya for a terrorist training school.

Wednesday's verdict "shouldn't have any effect" on the future trials, Fahringer said.

"We will have different judges and we may get different rulings" on motions to subpoena a people who might back up the defense claim that Wilson was connected with the CIA, he said.

The defense tried to subpoena Vice President George Bush, a former CIA director, along with former CIA deputy director Adm. Bobby R. Inman and Air Force Maj. Gen. Richard Secord. But Judge Oren R. Lewis refused to issue the subpoenas.

Theodore Greenberg, the chief prosecutor, said there was "absolutely no evidence he was working for the CIA. The CIA is not on trial."

And, the prosecutor said he thinks Wednesday's verdict will hamper Wilson's attempts to use the CIA as a defense.

The verdict "sends out a message that everybody has to follow the law, no matter whom he works for or worked for," said Greenberg.

Jury member Wilbur Houk said the CIA claim "was the source of quite a bit of discussion." But jury foreman Lawrence Salzberg said the panel did not think the defense CIA claims "were proved or unproved," and finally "didn't think it was relevant."

During the two-day trial, jurors heard testimony from former Wilson employees that he successfully used the five guns early in 1979 to demonstrate to the Libyans that he could produce American weapons. Wilson later signed contracts to provide Libya with 5,000 M-16s, handguns, ammunition, military uniforms, and other items.

Fahringer argued that Wilson's motivation was to win the trust of the Libyans so he could penetrate their intelligence operation and provide information to the U.S. government.

But Greenberg and the other prosecutors said the only motivation was greed. There was no evidence Wilson worked for or with the CIA at the time of the arms deals, they said. During cross-examination questioning, the prosecutors won admissions from several former Wilson employees that neither he nor they worked for the CIA.

Made Off With Cal Tech Items

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — A teen-ager has been released to the custody of his father after allegedly taking an estimated $75,000 in computers and chemicals from the California Institute of Technology, authorities say.

"He had two complete computer systems and a large quantity of chemicals," Detective Walter Bush said Wednesday of the 16-year-old, who was not identified because of his age.

He "was just experimenting more than anything," officers said, adding that a laboratory laser belonging to Caltech also was found in the boy's house.

Prayer In Public Schools Is Approved By N.C. Baptists

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Following a tense struggle between conservatives and moderates, the N.C. Baptist State Convention passed a resolution Wednesday in favor of a constitutional amendment allowing the voluntary school prayer.

The convention, in the final day of its three-day statewide meeting, also gave its approval to resolutions calling for a nuclear freeze and a ban on abortions.

The state convention's vote on school prayer Wednesday reverses its vote on the same issue last year and is the same basic resolution adopted earlier this year by the Southern Baptist Convention.

Many Baptists had been opposed to efforts to constitutionally guarantee prayer in the schools because of the principle of separation of church and state.

Bill Boatwright, communications director of the convention, says the school prayer resolution that was passed was carefully worded. The vote came about after two resolutions had been introduced — one calling for the voluntary school prayer amendment and one against.

The resolution that passed says, in part, that nothing in the U.S. Constitution shall be construed to prohibit prayer in schools.

The issue set up a confrontation between conservatives, who wanted the amendment, and moderates, who wanted to pass a resolution that would have rejected the constitutional amendment on grounds that the government and religions should be separate.

The convention's resolution calling for a nuclear arms freeze urges President Reagan to propose to the Soviet Union "an immediate, permanent, verifiable, bilateral freeze on the further testing, production and deployment of nuclear warheads, missiles and other delivery systems." A proposed amendment to change the word "freeze" to "agreement" was voted down.

The resolution on abortions calls for a ban on abortions except when necessary to save the mother's life.

In other matters on Wednesday, the convention passed resolutions endorsing the recognition of Vietnam veterans, raising the state's legal drinking age for all types of alcohol to 21 and calling for much stronger legislation to curb drunken driving in North Carolina.

Boatwright, who has held his post for more than 10 years, said the convention considered a longer and more specific slate of resolutions this year than in the past.

"Historically the convention has come out against liquor and just left it at that, but now it's DUI (driving under the influence of alcohol) and the drinking age," he said.

"This is pure speculation, but probably the people who go to conventions are more politically astute, and they want something passed that they can take into governments and the General Assembly."

Educated Lean To Evolution

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — College graduates in the state are more likely to believe in evolution, according to a University of North Carolina poll.

The poll results indicated, however, that a majority of North Carolinians believe in the Biblical account of man's creation rather than evolution.

The 584 people were polled by the College of Journalism at UNC via telephone in October. Each was asked: "There has been a lot of talk these days about the origin of man. Which comes closest to your view: that human life was created in its present form at one point in time; or that human life has evolved over millions of years from less advanced forms; or you don't know?"

Of those questioned, 51 percent said they believed in the creation of man similar to that in Biblical accounts. Evolution was chosen by 22 percent while 27 percent said they didn't know which theory most closely matched their beliefs.

College graduates backed evolution most heavily, 40 percent choosing that option. Another 42 percent said they believed in creation and 17 percent said they didn't know.

Among high school graduates, 61 percent believed in creation and 13 percent chose evolution.

Of the people with less than a high school education, 51 percent chose creation, 8 percent chose evolution and 42 percent said they were unsure.

Among those under 40 years of age, 48 percent picked creation, 28 percent chose evolution and 24 percent said they didn't know.

Only 16 percent of those over 40 chose evolution while 53 percent said creation and 31 percent said they didn't know.

The highest percentage of "didn't know" answers came from blacks, 44 percent.

People polled were chosen by dialing randomly selected telephone numbers and the poll has a 4 percent margin of error. Officials said that means that 95 times out of 100, the results should differ no more than 4 percent from what would have been obtained if every telephone number in the state had been dialed.

Auto Firms Say They're Squeezed By Lemon Law

By Judd Everhart
Associated Press Writer

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — It's been in effect for six weeks, and so far, the nation's first "lemon law" has not generated any complaints from new car buyers. But the nation's largest auto company says the measure unfairly squeezes new car manufacturers.

F. James McDonald, president and chief operating officer at General Motors, says the Connecticut law designed to give recourse to car buyers who find themselves stuck with defective automobiles is "too rigid."

In a speech earlier this month in New Britain, McDonald said, "I don't think these types of laws are needed."

"They are too rigid, they clog an already busy legal system and they're not in the best interests of consumers," he said.

Officially known as "An Act Concerning Automobile Warranties," the measure requires automakers to refund the purchase price or replace a vehicle if, after four attempts, a problem can not be fixed, or if the vehicle is out of service at least 30 days during one year.

The measure was bitterly opposed by the auto industry during debate in the 1982 legislative session. California has passed a similar law but it does not take effect until Jan. 1, 1983.

"We don't anticipate any complaints at least until winter, because the law only covers cars purchased after Oct. 1," said Joanne Zak of the Connecticut Better Business Bureau. The bureau will handle arbitration between car buyers and auto manufacturers if the buyer gets no satisfaction from his dealer or the local "zone office" of the manufacturer.

McDonald said GM's own arbitration process is better than the lemon law. It allows a third-party volunteer mediator to listen to arguments from the buyer and GM and then make a decision, which is binding on both sides, unless the customer decides to take the company to court.

State Rep. John Woodcock, a Democrat and author of the lemon law, calls the GM plan a "clear contravention" of the law because of its binding aspects. He worked with GM and the Better Business Bureau to get the company to comply with the state's new law.

"We have finally put the burden where it should be and that is on the manufacturer," Woodcock said several days before the law went into effect.

"We don't acknowledge lemons," Gus Buentz, a GM regional public relations manager for GM, said last April before an auto consumer conference in Chicago. "We don't think there is any such thing because we feel that if you have a problem with a car, it can be fixed."

Opposition to the measure had also come from the state's 700 car dealers, who feared that customers would blame them rather than the manufacturers for malfunctioning cars.

But Edward Simmons, chief of the dealers and repairers division of the state Motor Vehicle Department, said those fears have subsided as dealers have come to understand the statute.

"They're not going to have to take the blame for problems their customers have that are beyond their control," he said.

Simmons said that many car dealers thought the law applied to any four repairs on a new car, not to four attempts to fix the same problem.

State Consumer Protection Commissioner Mary Heslin, who, with Simmons, has tried to educate consumers and dealers about the law, says she's satisfied Connecticut's law is a "measure of protection and a tool to remedy the frustrating and sometimes overwhelming problem of owning a lemon."

"Unfortunately, too many new car transactions turn sour; the vehicle spends more time in the repair shop than on the road, its owner watching the clock on his warranty ticking away," she said in a brochure about the law distributed by her office.

The BBB's Karl Tracey said provisions of the lemon law are to be included in new-car operators' manuals and warranties.

At the Chicago conference earlier this year, Clarence Ditlow, head of the Center for Auto Safety in Washington, urged consumers to use a federal law to sue if they feel they have received shoddy merchandise.

"A lemon speaks for itself," said Ditlow, an attorney.

Under the 1975 federal law, the Magnuson-Moss Act, consumers can sue if they haven't received refunds, repairs, replacements or other satisfaction on any defective warranted product.

Police Chiefs Warned, Too

ATLANTA (AP) — Any visitor to a big city needs tips on muggers, even a police chief.

So city police passed out wallet-sized cards with safety tips to those attending this week's 89th annual convention of the International Association of Chiefs of Police.

"Travel on well-lighted thoroughfares and avoid side streets," the cards suggested, and "Avoid displaying large sums of cash."

Atlanta Deputy Police Chief Calvin Childress said security for the convention is no different than for the American Bankers Association last month.

"You want to look good for all conventions, really," Childress said. "We've got 75 countries represented and 6,000 police officers, and Atlanta's afraid of one of them getting mugged."

Police Chief Vernon L. Royston of Flushing, Mich., said, "I think that's a good precaution. When you're off on a convention, you might kind of ignore the same advice that you would give others."

His wife, Jean, agreed, saying, "Don't forget, you're talking about some people from small towns."

Workshop At Pitt Hospital

A hospital workshop for business office managers and controllers sponsored by Blue Cross and Blue Shield of North Carolina will be held Tuesday at Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

The workshop will last from 9:15 a.m. to noon. Registration begins at 8:45 a.m.

Topics to be covered in the workshop are new coverages, ancillary charges on paper claims, progress on conversion to automated system and impact on hospitals, and inquiry procedures.

Fish to The Mutilated

LAGUNA NIGUEL, Calif. (AP) — Food is on the way for Pinocchio and nine other hungry brown pelicans who need fresh fish to survive because their beaks were hacked off.

The 10 birds — including Pete, Repeat, Rusty, Numero Uno, Cyrano, Shorty, Grumpy, Jimmy Durante and Barbara — had all but eaten their way out of their temporary home at the Crown Valley Animal Hospital.

But the hospital received some 40 calls Tuesday with promises of deliveries. One cat food company promised to deliver 1,000 pounds of fish by Thursday, said hospital manager Dana Brooks.

Earlier, clinic director Dr. Gayle Roberts said recent donations in fresh fish to keep the pelicans alive had decreased as the fishing haul declined at local harbors.

A total of 13 pelicans have been found mutilated in the waters off San Diego and Orange counties. One bird is at Marineland in Rancho Palos Verdes, another is at Sea World, and a third had to be killed because its beak was severed too close to the nasal passages.

The pelicans are being fed mackerel and bonita, but will eat just about any kind of fish, said Pat Moore, a spokesman for the state Department of Fish and Game in Long Beach.

Meanwhile, Pinocchio, who had an artificial fiberglass beak surgically attached on Oct. 31, is doing fine, said Jeff Lohre, a veterinarian assistant at the clinic.

A second bird, Rusty, is scheduled for surgery this Sunday.

Cargo Of Exocets Shipped Argentina

SAINT-NAZAIRE, France (AP) — An Argentine cargo ship carrying French-made Exocet missiles and other military materiel left this Atlantic coast port today for Argentina, port officials told The Associated Press.

The officials, who insisted on anonymity, said the Argentine freighter Bahia San-Blas left Saint-Nazaire carrying 200 tons of materiel including munitions, an unknown number of air-sea

Boy Surgeon Is Barred

HARARE, Zimbabwe (AP) — A Zimbabwe surgeon whose 9-year-old stepson helped amputate a patient's leg in front of an American television crew has been barred from using government health facilities, the Herald newspaper reported today.

The Health Ministry has also banned the surgeon's anaesthetist, University of Zimbabwe Prof. Ashley Duthie, from state-owned facilities, the paper said without attributing the report.

Both Duthie and the surgeon, George Patrikos, are presently out of the country. Police on Wednesday searched Patrikos's house and medical offices but found nothing unusual, police sources told The Associated Press.

Patrikos, 45, one of Zimbabwe's top surgeons, performed the operation April 30 on Julius Kwambana, a middle-aged, unemployed builder. The surgeon's stepson, Jonah, helped cut and stitch the leg for the American Broadcasting Co. show "That's Incredible."

Kwambana, in an interview with the Zimbabwe press, said the operation was a success. But he complained he had not given permission for either the boy or the camera to be in the operating theater.

The medical, dental and allied professions council has already fined Dr. Patrikos $650 for "improper conduct."

Both the surgeon and the anaesthetist have appealed against the Health Ministry ban. If their appeals fail neither will be able to lecture at the state-owned university.

Exocet missiles and five Super Etendard fighter-bombers — the same type of jets used to launch the Exocet missiles which sank the British destroyer Sheffield and the freighter Atlantic Conveyor during the Falklands war.

The French Defense Department, as is its policy, refused to comment on the reports. A spokesman added that only the purchasing nation could confirm or deny an arms deal with France.

Efforts to reach the proper officials at the Argentine and British embassies in Paris were not immediately successful.

France, the world's third largest arms dealer, lifted its embargo on shipments to Argentina on Aug. 9, two months after the British recaptured the Falklands. The embargo had been imposed by all the European Common Market countries in support of the British effort to retake the South Atlantic islands.

Last summer, France rejected allegations in the British press that French technicians continued to help the Argentines prepare the Exocets for launch during the conflict.

Pedestrian Struck By Car

Bonner Lee Latham Jr. of Route 7, Washington, was injured early this morning when struck by a car on Greenville Boulevard, .03 mile west of the Evans Street intersection, police department investigators said.

Officers reported Latham walked into the path of a car driven by Ricky Ray Stancill of Route 2, Greenville, about 1:16 a.m., and was taken to Pitt County Memorial Hospital for treatment of injuries received in the collision.

Police said an estimated $100 damage resulted to the Stancill car from the collision.

It's Not Football!

Carleton University's Geoff Wells (15) appears to jerk the ball away just as East Carolina's David Harris (52) tries to give it a boot. The action took place last night in

Minges Coliseum, as the Pirates romped to an 88-49 victory over the Canadian school in an exhibition game. (Reflector Photo by Katie Zernhelt)

Pirates Paste Canadian Team

In 88-49 Romp

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

East Carolina's new basketball coach Charlie Harrison put his team on display for the first time last night, and as might be expected, found some good and some bad along the way.

The Pirates, led by five players in double figures, had little trouble with Carleton University of Canada in the exhibition, romping to an 88-49 victory in Minges Coliseum. Bruce Peartree and Barry Wright both dumped in 16 points each, while Charles Green added 15 points and 14 rebounds, Johnny Edwards had 13 and 11 loose ball grabs, and Thom Brown hit for 11 points.

"I'm not surprised by what we saw," Harrison said afterwards. "I said that we'd have trouble against a zone because we hadn't had much practice against it. But once the jitters were over, we got some good things offensively."

Some of those good things included a 57.1 shooting percentage from the floor, as the Pirates made good on 40 of 70 shots. The starting five — Wright, Edwards, Green, Peartree and Tony Robinson, along with Brown, made good on 36 of 55 — 65.5 percent.

The Pirates also thoroughly dominated the boards, out-pulling Carleton, 51-27, led by Edwards and Green.

And at times, the Pirates played tough defense.

But all was not rosy however. The Pirates threw the ball away 23 times and shot horribly at the free throw line making just eight of 17 shots.

Harrison, however, felt that rebounding is an area of concern. "Not because we're small, but we're not utilizing our quickness to rebound. We didn't go to the boards the way we're supposed to in December. Too many times, we seemed to relax as they shot and that gave them a second shot. We can't do that."

Harrison also felt that the Pirate shot selection was "good at times, but too rushed. We're trying for the home run when we should be trying to hit singles. It's fine against a poor defensive team, but against a good defense, it will kill us."

Harrison felt the Pirates did give good help at times, but at other times, didn't.

The free throw situation is one the Pirates "will have to work on," Harrison said. "We do work on them. I haven't seen the stats yet so I can analyze them. But I didn't realize it was that bad."

The Pirates trailed the Ravens only twice in the contest, both times by one point, early on. Three other times it was tied, the last time at 13-13 on a jumper by Brock Cowan. After the Pirates pulled out by six, 21-15, a basket by Bill Holmes, followed by a three-point play by him, cut the lead to 21-20 with 11:17 showing.

Brown hit on a 15-footer and Mike Fox followed with two, and Brown hit again to run the lead out to nine, and the Pirates never led by less than five the rest of the half, scoring the final six points on a Robinson layup, a Fox jumper and a layup by Wright to go out to a 48-34 lead at intermission.

Carleton's scoring in the first half was led by Rick Powers, who collected 16 points, but he didn't score in the second half.

Asked if he made any defensive moves to shut off Powers, Harrison said, "No, I just chewed out a couple of (players) in the dressing room."

The second half turned into a rout, as the Pirates steadily pulled away from their guests, leading by as many as the final 39-point margin on several occasions.

Carleton, which is now 0-3 against American schools, shot only 30.5 percent from the floor — thanks to the usually sticky Pirate defense. "I think they were tired," Harrison said. "But this is the worst they've been beaten. They tried to slow us down by trapping us along the sidelines, but we were able to beat that."

With his first win at ECU under his belt — even though it won't show up in the stats — Harrison said he was "not overly disappointed, but not overly confident either. We're a long way from becoming a good basketball team."

The Pirates officially open the season on Saturday, Nov. 27, traveling to Durham to face Duke University. East Carolina opens its home season against Christopher Newport on Wednesday, Dec. 1.

Rampants Make Long Trip; Face Asheville In Division II Finals

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Rose High School's Rampants make the long, long trip to Asheville Friday to do battle with the Asheville Cougars for the State Division II championship — and Rampant Coach Ronald Vincent says everything tends to favor the hosting team.

"There's no way of knowing what effect the trip will have on us," Vincent said. "They have the advantage of playing at home, and not having to travel. They will be eating their own food and sleeping in their own beds. The intangibles are basically on their side."

Playing at home may not quite be correct. The game will be played at Enka High School's field, several miles west of Asheville. Asheville's stadium was declared unsafe prior to the start of the season and has since been demolished. As a result, the Cougars played all their games away from home.

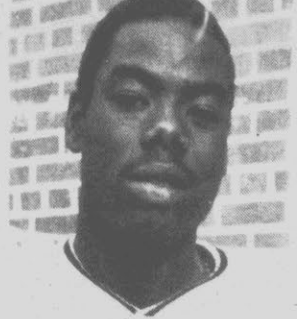

To reach Enka, according to Asheville sources, take the 19-23 South exit on Interstate 40. At the second traffic light, turn right and the stadium is straight ahead. The stadium is about one to one and a half miles off the interstate.

Rose goes into the game with the Cougars (10-1) with a 7-4 record. Rose downed Goldsboro, 14-10, last Friday night to gain the Division II finals. The Division II ranks in 4-A consisted of the four second place teams not awarded a Division I berth.

The Rampant win over Goldsboro not only propelled Rose into the finals, it snapped a 15-game streak in which the Cougars — Goldsboro brand — didn't allow double figure scoring.

Now, with a coastal plain Cougar in the bag, the Rampants are out looking for one of the mountain variety.

Frankie Carr

"Our plan going into the Goldsboro game was to play good defense and not make any mistakes that would give them the opportunity to score," Vincent said. The Rampants did play good defense, and only twice gave the Cougars a chance with offensive mistakes. Both of those came on punts, one of three and the other of 13 yards, late in the game, giving Goldsboro good field position.

Good field position was something that the Rampants had enjoyed throughout most of the game, but Rose was usually unable to move the ball against the Cougars, scoring only one of its two touchdowns on offense. The other came on the recovery of a Goldsboro fumble in the end zone by Judas Best.

"I feel we made some very important plays at some very

Ayden-Grifton Faces Its Roughest Battle Of Year

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

LITTLEFIELD — Ayden-Grifton, having played like its old self last week in one of its best efforts, faces its stiffest challenge of the season Friday evening when the Chargers battle Bertie Senior High in round two of the Division 13-A state high school playoffs.

Game time in Windsor is 8 p.m.

"They're an outstanding football team with outstanding athletes," A-G coach Dixon Sauls said. "They are potentially the best team we've played this year. But at this time of year you expect that.

"They are a very solid team in all areas, with no apparent weakness," Sauls said. "But I'm confident. I think this team will do what it takes to win the ballgame."

The Falcons and the Chargers both stand 10-1-0 this season and are coming off strong showings in first round of the playoffs. Ayden-Grifton downed Havelock, 22-12, and Bertie blanked Northampton West, 38-0 — the fourth straight shutout for the Falcons and sixth in their last seven games.

The winner will play the survivor of the Clinton-Ragsdale contest for the 3-A Eastern title.

Bertie is not particularly big — only one starter is listed at 200 pounds and none is over 200 — but the Falcons are quick. "Most of the time when I speak of other teams I usually can say we're quicker than our opponent," Sauls said. "Certainly that is not the case this time."

"They possess a lot of quickness at all positions," Sauls said. "As a team they have the best athletes we've faced."

The two teams boast outstanding defenses. The Chargers have given up just 101 points in 11 games; the Falcons have allowed but 43, and only 10 in their last seven games.

"I anticipate a defensive football game. I look for it to be a close game," said Sauls, whose Chargers have advanced to round two of the

Cougars Have Strong Attack

By WOODY PEELE, Reflector Sports Editor
An extra point over a season usually doesn't mean a lot, but for the lack of an extra point, Asheville High School might be playing in the Division I playoffs instead of facing Rose High School Friday night for the Division II title.
The Cougars lost only once during the regular season, to Western Conference champion Gastonia Ashbrook, 14-13. Every other game they've played has been a victory.
The meeting between Rose and Asheville is set for 8 p.m. Friday night at Enka High School, just west of Asheville. The Cougars' home park was declared unsafe prior to the start of the season and demolished. As a result, the Cougars played no home games during the year.

Enka, for those attending from Greenville, is located just off Interstate 40 west of Asheville. Fans should exit at 19-23 South, and turn right at the second light. The field is about a mile to a mile and a half off the interstate.
While the teams played no common opponents, two of their foes did. Asheville beat Henderson Vance in last week's first round of the Division I playoffs, 28-12. Vance beat Northern Nash, 20-0, and Rose beat Northern Nash, 16-13.
Cougars Coach Bruce Peterson is no newcomer to the football wars, but is completing his 14th season at Asheville. Last year's team finished 8-3, losing in the first round of the Division I playoffs.

"We're happy to have the opportunity to play and extend our season," Peterson said by phone when asked about the Division II playoffs. "I'm not so sure that the Division II playoff is meeting the needs of the 4-A schools, however." Peterson said the second place playoffs were to both reward schools left out of the Division I plan and to help the school financially.
"But in 4-A Division II, the schools involved are so spread out — like Greenville and Asheville — that they can't attract a lot of fans. Having no stadium this year has cost us our following, too. We're really concerned about not losing money instead of making money. The concept (Division II) may be good, but reality may be something else."

Rickman, who was injured and is uncertain for Friday's game. Rickman also does the punting and has continued with those duties despite his hurts. Peterson would not indicate the nature of Rickman's injury.
Leading the offensive line is Robert Weaver, a 6-2, 279-pound junior tackle, and Ralph Harper, a 6-0, 228-pound senior tackle.
"On defense, we run a split middle," Peterson said. He cites his two inside linebackers, Roberts and 5-11, 170-pound senior Anthony Lindsey as his leaders on defense.
"We have eight players going both ways," Peterson said. "I can't see that this causes us any problems. It could have earlier in the season, but I don't think it will at this point of the year. I look at it like this. They're not sitting on the sidelines getting cold."

"I'd like to be able to play, but I want to get the 11 best athletes on the field. I won't sacrifice skill and ability to get more people into the game."
Last week, Asheville pounded Charlotte Independence, 50-29, beating All-State quarterback Mark Maye, announced this morning as the AP's Player of the Year for North Carolina.
"It was an offensive show, no question about that," Peterson said. "We never thought that we'd score as much as we did. But I feel that we're a pretty good defensive team nevertheless."
Peterson said that he's seen Rose on film and "I think they are a fine football team. I'm impressed with what they do on defense. They come at you and don't give up many points. They give you a lot of looks on defense and I'm real concerned about moving the football."
Rose has been tough against the rush, allowing less than 1,000 yards in the 11 games played so far. They've given up only about 150 yards a game in total offense per game.
The contest will wind up the 1982 football season for the two teams.

Rampants...

important times (on defense)," Vincent said. He said these plays were the third and one, and the following fourth and one close to the Rose goal line, and the two interceptions on the final two Goldsboro series of the game.
"Craig Dupree and Roswell Streeter both played key roles in all four of those plays," Vincent said. "Streeter stopped their guy cold on third down, and then Dupree did the same thing on fourth down." That turned the ball over to Rose.
Then, on the two final series, each of them picked off a pass to finally close the door on the Cougars.
"Frankie Carr played his usual good game," Vincent said. "It didn't take them long to decide not to run over there. Chuck Whitner also played the best game of his career."
Offensively, there was little to brag about as the Rampants failed to pick up even 100 yards in total offense. Vincent did like the play of center Greg Davis and fullback Roderick Harrell. "(Donnell) Lee did a super job of returning kickoffs, too," he added.
"Goldsboro was the best team we've played on defense," he also said.

They have an outstanding running game. Their fullback (Scott Roberts) just may be the best back we've faced this year. Their tailback (Pete Calhoun) isn't bad either, and they can pass if they have to."
Vincent said the Cougar defense is very sound fundamentally, and is "very aggressive."
"They're better than anyone we've played," Vincent said after looking at two games on film. "They just run the ball so well. I'm not certain they match up with Jacksonville or Goldsboro on defense, however."
"One thing is for sure. We're going to have to play our best to beat them. We are going to have to play an errorless game to have a chance."
The game will conclude the season for both squads.

Be that as it may, Peterson is still ready to take his team up against the Rampants.
The Cougars run primarily from the slot-T offense, and Peterson notes that they "live by the run. I like to think that we can throw, but we are primarily a running team."
While complete statistics on the Cougars were unavailable, Scott Roberts, a 6-0, 200-pound senior fullback, is the leading rusher on the team with over 1,000 yards. But 5-8, 160-pound senior tailback Pete Calhoun is not far behind. "He's got right at 1,000 yards, if he didn't pass it last week," Peterson said.
The quarterback of the Cougars is Charles Belcher, a 5-11, 173-pound junior. However, he has only started the past two games, having replaced regular quarterback Andy MORGANTOWN, W.Va. — Former D.H. Conley wrestler James Johnson hopes to be a member of the 1984 United States Olympic wrestling team and he took the first step of many steps toward that goal recently when he finished first in the West Virginia Open.

Johnson, a 1976 graduate of D.H. Conley, beat West Virginia's Jody Munch, 6-4, to win the 197-pound title.
Johnson reached the finals with a pin and two decisions over a strong field of 12. Johnson is ranked second nationally in Greco-Roman style wrestling but had not wrestled under college rules in 18 months.
Johnson will next take to the mat Thanksgiving weekend when he wrestles in the prestigious Southern Open in Chattanooga. Traditionally, the Southern is one of the toughest tournaments in the Southeast and attracts nationally-ranked college teams such as Oklahoma, Oklahoma State and Ohio State.
Johnson will complete his 1982 schedule in Orlando at the Sunshine Open on New Year's Eve.

Johnson Wins; Sets Clinic Here

Johnson is a native of Greenville but now lives in Davidson where he works out with the college team in preparation for the Olympic Trials.
Johnson returns to Conley Friday and Saturday when he will conduct a series of clinics. Johnson will work with the Conley wrestlers Friday at 3:30 (ninth graders) and 5 p.m. (varsity) and Saturday at 2 p.m.
Johnson wrestled under DHC coach Milt Sherman and won the state championship in 1976. He graduated from Kentucky in 1980.

playoffs for the second straight year.

"I think," Sauls added, "both defenses will dictate what the offenses will be able to do."

Bertie, which tied for the Northeastern Conference title and was selected to represent the conference in the Division playoffs by a unanimous vote of league coaches, runs a variety of defenses, from a 4-4 look to a 6-2.

Bertie is led on defense by linebackers Willie Ryan, a 5-10, 190-pounder and Calvin Holley, a 6-2, 180-pounder.

"They blitz frequently. They try to disrupt your offense," Sauls said. "They have outstanding linebackers in Ryan and Holley."

The Falcons do not lack for offense either.

Quarterback Chris Garmon, who was all-conference last year as a junior, keys the Falcons, who are averaging just 28.2 points a game. In the backfield with Garmon, a 6-2, 188-pound senior, will be Ryan or Malcolm Hyman at fullback and Delano Jones at tailback.

"Their quickness in the backfield concerns me," Sauls said. "And, one of the big keys may be the quarterback play. Garmon has shown improvement all season."

"(Garmon) is a triple threat at quarterback. He can run the ball and he has an outstanding arm and he also handles the punting game for them," Sauls added. "With him, they have a more balanced attack than the last two teams we've played."

The Falcons run a variety of offensive sets and have a number of trick plays in their arsenal. They also love to run traps.

"That poses a problem. They trap more than any other team we've played this year," Sauls said.

Sauls admitted A-G may have to adjust its defense in hopes of containing the Falcons' trap. One likely move would have linebacker Chuck Smithwick slanting toward the line and looking more for the trap.

The Chargers may be more vulnerable to the trap than usual because defensive lineman-offensive tackle Kevin Craft is injured and may not be at 100 percent come game time.

"We hope he'll be able to play," Sauls said. "We believe he'll be able to play. But how well and whether he'll be 75 or 80 percent, we don't know."

If Craft is unable to play, Smithwick will move to tackle and Jeff Hardy, a 5-11, 167-pound senior, will take over for Smithwick at guard on offense. On defense, Craft may be replaced by David Lister, a 6-0, 171-pound junior. Lister may also play some offensive tackle.

The Chargers come into the game off one of their best efforts of the season, one which saw them trailing, 12-7, after three periods only to rally to down Havelock.

"The key factors were that we seemed ready to play mentally and we were able to come back in the fourth quarter," Sauls said. "It was a very gratifying win."

A-G had a host of heroes in the game: Smithwick, who helped key an A-G defense that held the Rams to 141 yards; tailback Kevin Harris, who gained 89 yards and scored one touchdown; fullback Jarvis Koonce, who rushed for 59 yards, three of which came on a key fourth-down en route to the go-ahead TD.

Koonce, a senior, now has 939 yards this season. Tailback Malcolm Worthington has 693 yards and Harris, a sophomore who splits time at tailback, now has 632 yards.

Quarterback Joey Kennedy hit five of 11 passes for 69 yards, giving him 992 yards for the year. Kennedy, a senior, has hit 81 of 170 passes and has had just three intercepted.

Sauls said the play of Kennedy — and Garmon — may be the determining factor come Friday evening. "The game may be decided by the quarterbacks," Sauls said.

Asked if the team or he was feeling any pressure, Sauls said: "This is the time of year for your effort during the regular season. There's no pressure. It's still fairly low-key here."

"We've worked mighty hard for this. We have aspirations to advance in the playoffs but we are going to have to be extremely determined (Friday) to achieve that goal."

Blue Devils Defeat French

DURHAM (AP) — Freshman center Mark Alarie scored 17 points to pace five double-figure scorers as Duke's Blue Devils defeated the French National team 84-75 in exhibition basketball Wednesday night.

Alarie, 6-foot-8, hit 8 of 14 field goal attempts and 1 of 2 free throws.

Danny Meagher backed Alarie with 15 points, freshman Bill Jackman added 14 and Chip Engelland and freshman Johnny Dawkins contributed 10 apiece.

Richard Dacoury led the French, scoring 20 points on 9 of 12 shooting from the floor and 2 of 3 free throws. The only other player in double figures was Phillip Szanyiel with 14 points.

Duke shot 45.2 percent from the floor on 33 of 73 firing while the French hit 33 of 67, 49.5 percent.

Duke, which outrebounded the French 40-36, trailed 38-36 at halftime before rallying.

"We're pleased with our second-half performance, the last 16 minutes of the game," Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski said. "We thought we might be a little tentative with all those young guys out there, and we were. We weren't going for loose balls and getting charges and mixing it up. Then we started doing it."

"Duke is a very great team, very impressive with their pressure on defense," said French National coach Pierre Dao. "I like the aggressive basketball they play outside and inside. It is very difficult to defend because in Europe we don't play the same type basketball. I like this type basketball."

"Each player for Duke is a good player," he added. "All five. In Europe, there are never five. Three, four, but not five."

"Many of our players could play basketball in the States, because at the beginning the French player is a man," he said. "For you 22 (years old) is not a young player. For France it is. We never start playing basketball in France before the age of 16."

Gerwin, Aguirre Spark Texas Teams

By The Associated Press
George Gerwin and Mark Aguirre were the deadeyes of Texas.

Aguirre hit two three-point goals in the final 10 seconds Wednesday night to give the Dallas Mavericks a 118-117 National Basketball Association victory over the Los Angeles Lakers. Gerwin scored 40 points, including the game-winning basket on a running hook, as the San Antonio Spurs defeated the Washington Bullets 114-112.

The Mavericks' triumph was the first in their three-season history over Los Angeles in Dallas and snapped a four-game losing streak. They overcame a 16-point deficit in the third quarter, but consecutive dunks by rookie James Worthy put the Lakers ahead 116-112 in the final minute.

Aguirre, who scored 19 points, pulled his team within one with his first three-pointer at the 10-second mark. After Michael Cooper hit one of two free throws to put Los Angeles ahead 117-115, Aguirre connected with another three-point rainbow from the corner that banked into the net with only one second left.

"I really didn't want to take the last one from the side, but I couldn't get the ball in the key," Aguirre said. "I just went to the corner, put the ball up and prayed it would go in."

In other NBA action, Philadelphia bombed Detroit 120-103. Boston clubbed

Houston 112-94. Indiana beat Golden State 124-122. Seattle ripped Atlanta 119-97 and Utah trimmed New Jersey 101-97.

Rolando Blackman led Dallas with 24 points, 12 of them in the third quarter when the Mavericks rallied from the 16-point deficit. Pat Cummings had 20 points and 17 rebounds for Dallas, while Kareem Abdul-Jabbar paced the Lakers with 22 points.

"You should have seen this locker room," Dallas Coach Dick Motta said. "This game was important to us because it was our first win in front of a sellout crowd. We've had several capacity crowds but, unfortunately, they all come against top ballclubs."

"You give a young team a chance to get a little momentum and many times you can't turn it off," Lakers Coach Pat Riley said. "The game came down to just one shot and I believe the same thing happened at The Forum last year when the Mavericks won there last year. Only that time Aguirre didn't bank the shot."

Spurs 114, Bullets 112
San Antonio also came from 16 points behind and then relied on Gerwin's heroics at the end to beat Washington.

Gerwin, who was two of nine from the field in the first quarter, scored 15 points in the second period and 15 more in the fourth, while Artis Gilmore had 12 of his 16 in the final period.

"We did all we could to stop him," Bullets guard Billy Ray

Bates said of Gerwin. "We played him well for two quarters, but for the other two, we couldn't see him."
"I knew we had three quarters to go," Gerwin said of his thoughts after the first period. "Every time I come here, I think of when I won the MVP Award in the All-star game (in 1980)."

Sonics 119, Hawks 97
David Thompson scored 15 of his 24 points in the third quarter as Seattle ran its record to 11-0 by whipping Atlanta.

The Sonics, who tied the 1964-65 Boston Celtics for the third-longest season-opening winning streak in NBA history, never trailed in the game and opened a 17-point lead in the third quarter.

The Hawks, who were led by Rudy Macklin with 19 points, cut the deficit to 91-83 in the fourth quarter, but a 16-2 streak by Seattle clinched the victory.

76ers 120, Pistons 103
Andrew Toney scored 10 of his 22 points during an 18-2 streak by Philadelphia that carried the 76ers to victory over Detroit.

The 76ers were leading 66-64 early in the third period before pulling away to an 84-66 advantage. The Pistons rallied in the fourth quarter, but never got closer than nine points.

Reflector Rankings
Following are the Daily Reflector rankings. They are based on points accumulated by wins. Wins over 4-A teams count 4 points, 3-A count 3, etc., with bonus points awarded for each victory the losing team accumulates. For example, a 3-A team with a 7-3 record for the season is worth 10 points for each team which beats it. Later season rankings are more accurate as points accumulate.

Kelly Tripucka led all scorers with 34 points for Detroit, while Moses Malone and Maurice Cheeks led the 76ers with 24 apiece.
Celtics 112, Rockets 94
Larry Bird and Danny Ainge scored 12 points apiece and Robert Parish added 10 in the decisive first quarter as Boston handed winless Houston its 10th straight defeat.

The Celtics jumped to a 37-19 lead in the first period and had a 69-48 edge at halftime. Bird finished with 21 points and Ainge 20, both in limited action, while Elvin Hayes scored 12 for Houston to become the fifth NBA player to surpass the 26,000-point mark.

Pacers 124, Warriors 122
Herb Williams scored a career-high 31 points and hit a game-winning layup with two seconds left to lead Indiana over Golden State.

Purvis Short, who led the Warriors with 29 points, tied the game at 122-122 on a basket with 14 seconds to go. A foul by Golden State gave the Pacers the ball out of bounds at the three-second mark and Indiana's Clark Kellogg tossed a pass to Williams three feet from the basket.

Jazz 101, Nets 97
Adrian Dantley scored 31 points and guards Rickey Green and Darrell Griffith each scored 18 to carry Utah past New Jersey.

Green, leading the Jazz last break, also had nine assists and five steals, while Otis Birdsong led the Nets with 22.

Declared Legally Dead, Kim Has Organs Donated For Transplants

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — South Korean fighter Duk Koo Kim's vital organs were to be removed by a team of surgeons after a judge granted Kim's mother's request to declare him legally dead and have the organs taken out for transplantation.

Kim, 23, was declared dead by District Judge Paul Goldman at 6 p.m. PST Wednesday following a brief hearing in the brain-dead boxer's hospital room. The organs were to be removed today.

"My true intention to continue the fighting spirit of Mr. Kim is to donate his living organs," Kim's mother, Sun-Yeo Yang, said through an interpreter. "By doing that Mr. Kim can live forever and have everlasting life."

A team of heart and kidney transplant experts was to arrive this morning and go immediately to Desert Springs Hospital to begin the process of removing the organs from Kim's body.

A hospital spokesman said the organs would be taken to other cities where patients are awaiting donations.

Kim's body is to be flown back to his native Seoul on Friday, accompanied by his 65-year-old mother and stepbrother. A brief funeral service is scheduled to be held by the Korean Residence Association, a local Korean group, before departure.

Kim has been comatose since he was knocked out by a vicious right to the side of his head Saturday in the 14th round of his title bout with World Boxing Association lightweight champion Ray "Boom Boom" Mancini.

His surgeon, Dr. Lonnie Hammargren, said earlier that the fighter's brain was dead and there was no sign of any blood flowing past the base of his skull.

Kim's frail mother, sobbing at times, told a press gathering in a room at the hospital that her son had "bravely performed" in his fight against Mancini and had fought to live. But, she said, the time had come to face reality.

"In spite of all our efforts even we cannot rejuvenate my son's life," she said. "If I continue to let doctors and staff supply medical care and treatment it is in a way a burden."

Hammargren praised the mother for her decision to donate her son's organs.

"I think the courage just shown by the mother has the same courage as having his life and spirit live on," he said. "I think that the spirit of this young boxer was to be the greatest in the world and bring pride to his country."

The decision by Kim's mother came after a team of four Korean doctors specializing in acupuncture treated Kim but failed to elicit any response.

"He belongs to the dead," Dr. Chang Bin Lee, vice president of South Baylor University in Garden Grove, Calif., said Wednesday.

Lee echoed earlier statements by Hammargren that there was little that could be done to save Kim's life.

"After trying all possible ways we are not optimistic," he said. "There is no reaction, no response."

Hammargren said Kim is an excellent organ donor because only his brain is severely damaged.

"His heart and kidneys and bodily organs are strong," he said. "His brain is dead and he has been declared legally dead."

Kim's mother and stepbrother, Kun-Young Kim, have been staying with a local Korean family since arriving in Las Vegas Tuesday. They were flown here by the South Korean government to be at Kim's bedside.

DUNKEL COLLEGE FOOTBALL INDEX

EXPLANATION - The Dunkel system provides a continuous index to the relative strength of all teams. It reflects average scoring margin combined with average opposition rating, weighted in favor of recent performance. Example: a 50.0 team has been 10 scoring points stronger, per game, than a 40.0 team against opposition of identical strength. Originated in 1929 by Dick Dunkel.

Wallace-Rose Hill Coach Top Pick

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

It's obvious that Wallace-Rose Hill football coach Jack Holley would rather let his record on the field do the talking for him.

He'd also rather let his players take the credit for his success instead of claiming it for himself. Nonetheless, Holley has taken a consistent loser and turned it into a 2-A title contender and earned The Associated Press high school coach of the year honor in 1982.

"The boys just worked like hell," said Holley when notified of the honor. "We just tried to keep everything positive around them."

Winning is nothing new for Holley, who came to the school from Tabor City after achieving a 150-39-8 record in 16 years. When he arrived at the Duplin County school, he inherited a team which had won just four games in the last six years.

A renewal of spirit followed Holley's arrival. His first job was to establish a weight program. Following that, Holley decided to keep all 44 players who tried out for the team. Then came the support of the local booster club.

"From what I hear, we've gotten a lot of school spirit," he said. "The students and the booster club have supported us real well."

The result was a 9-1 record and a slot in the N.C. High School Athletic Association Division II playoffs. After beating Camden 38-0 last week, Wallace-Rose Hill has the weekend off.

"I don't like that. I wish we'd play," Holley said.

As for individuals who've led to the reversal, he said he'd prefer not to cite just one player because "I'm sure I'd leave some out. It's been an overall team effort. I just hope we can continue that."

Also considered for coach of the year were: B.T. Chappell, North Pitt; Woody Fish, Bessemer City; Frank Ciamillo, Whiteville; Frank Robinson, Brevard; Dave Gutschall, Kinston; Allen Sitterle, Charlotte Independence.

Mark Maye, Charlotte Independence quarterback, was earlier named The AP player of the year. He was one of five unanimous selections to the all-star team.

Maye completed his high school career last week with more than 5,100 yards of offense.

"I've never seen one player at the quarterback position be able to dominate the game," said Sitterle of the 6-foot-4, 195-pound senior. "He has been the stick that stirs the drink."

In the more than two years Maye has been a quarterback, he has amassed 5,106 total offensive yards and is responsible for 57 touchdowns running and passing. In 1982, Maye completed 132 of 247 passes for 2,353 yards and 19 touchdowns. He also rushed 60 times for 333 yards and 12 more scores.

For his career, Maye has completed 241 passes in 450 attempts for 4,400 yards and 36 touchdowns.

Also receiving votes for player of the year honors were running backs Terry Paige of Whiteville and Marvin King of Statesville, as well as wide receiver James Brim of Mount Airy.

The other unanimous selections were Brim, Donnie Wallace of Roanoke, John Phillips of Mitchell and William Humes of Erwin.

Joining Wallace on the offensive line are Shane Logan of East Forsyth, Peter Borton of Fayetteville Douglas Byrd, Joe Naron of Randleman, and Sandy Kea of Clinton.

Along with Maye in the backfield are Terry Paige of Whiteville, Statesville's Marvin King and John Settle of Rockingham County.

Virginia Tops USSR In Double Overtime

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Virginia basketball Coach Terry Holland says he's glad he doesn't have to contend with the Russian National Team in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

And well he should be as the Soviet squad battled the Cavaliers, ranked No. 1 in the preseason, through two overtimes before falling 94-87 Wednesday night.

Othell Wilson scored four points and Rick Carlisle three in the second extra period as the Cavaliers handed the Russians their second loss in eight games on their American tour. The Russians play tonight at Illinois.

Wilson paced Virginia with 21 points and six assists while Carlisle had 20, Jim Miller 14, Ralph Sampson 13 and Craig Robinson 10. The 7-foot-4 Sampson, player of the year in college basketball for the last two seasons, also grabbed 25 rebounds and blocked nine shots in the exhibition game.

The Soviets were paced by 17-year-old Arvidas Sabonis, a 7-foot-2 center, with 21 points while Sergey Yovaisha added 16, Voldemaras Khomicus 15 and Nicolay Derugin 10.

"It was a tremendous basketball game," said Holland. "Neither team was ever willing to quit. It was what you hope a game like this would be."

Alexandr Gomelsky, the Russian coach, was visibly upset with the officiating during the game and failed to attend a news conference with Holland afterward.

"It was an impossible game to officiate," said Holland. "It looked like they would call a touch foul at one end and then let them knock the heck out of Ralph at the other end. I'm sure their coach felt the same way."

Virginia held a 71-61 lead with 7:25 remaining in regulation, but the Russians ran off nine straight points to pull within 71-70 on a Sabonis jumper with 4:43 to play.

The Russians tied it for the first time since 2:2 early in the game at 74 on another Sabonis jumper.

A pair of free throws by Khose Birukov gave the Russians their first lead of the night, 76-74, with 1:23 remaining.

Wilson tied it at 76 with a short jumper, but the Russians regained the lead 78-76 on a 15-footer by Khomicus with 50 seconds left. Wilson sent the game into overtime by hitting a pair of free throws with four seconds left.

The Cavaliers scored the first six points in the initial extra period to take an 84-78 lead, but the Russians battled back to tie it at 84 with 1:39 left.

Both teams missed two shots in the final minute of play.

The teams traded a pair of free throws to open the second overtime before a 3-point play by Carlisle gave Virginia the lead for good at 89-86 with 3:41 left.

A followup by Miller and a free throw by Ricky Stokes boosted the Cavaliers to a 92-86 lead with just under two minutes remaining.

Virginia led by as many as 14 points, 35-21, in the first half, before the Russians outscored them 12-2 over the final four minutes to pull within four at intermission, 37-33.

The Soviet team was called for 35 fouls as five Russians players fouled out. The Russians also were guilty of four technical fouls.

Expects Fan Disenchantment

NEW YORK (AP) — Now that the National Football League players' strike is over, Commissioner Pete Rozelle expects the fans to be somewhat disenchant.

"From a general standpoint I think there will be a turnoff initially by the fans," Rozelle said at a new conference Wednesday. "I just hope by working together we (the players and owners) can get entertaining NFL football back on the field."

The 28 NFL team owners unanimously ratified the collective bargaining agreement Wednesday. Players Association head Ed Garvey is expected to sign the agreement today at union headquarters in Washington.

The last step will be ratification by the rank-and-file, which is expected next Tuesday. The 57-day-old strike cost owners and players an estimated $275 million.

One way the league hopes to rebuild interest is with a 16-team "Super Bowl Tournament" that will start Jan. 8-9. Playoff games will be played each weekend leading to the Super Bowl XVII on Jan. 30 at Pasadena, Calif. Rozelle said the conference championship games may be played at neutral, warm-weather sites.

Rozelle said the playoff field was expanded to 16 teams from the usual 10 because

"when we got down to nine games (for the regular season) we knew we couldn't establish the playoffs by divisions and we could because of conferences. We felt in fairness to all the teams, and to increase fan interest, it was the thing to do."

Ninety-eight of the 224 regular-season games were wiped out by the strike.

Under the agreement the players, whose minimum wage scale under the old agreement ranged from $22,000 for rookies to $32,000 for five-year players and beyond, now have a scale that goes from $30,000 for rookies ($40,000 the next two years and $50,000 the two after that) to a top minimum wage of $200,000. They also have severance pay for the first time, ranging from $5,000 to $140,000.

Rozelle also announced the Jan. 2-3 make-up weekend schedule, the one which will fill out the regular season to nine games. On Jan. 2 it will be Atlanta at New Orleans, the Los Angeles Rams at San Francisco, the New York Giants at Philadelphia, St. Louis at Washington, Green Bay at Detroit, Chicago at Tampa Bay, Miami at Baltimore, Buffalo at New England, the New York Jets at Kansas City, the Los Angeles Raiders at San Diego, Denver at Seattle, Cincinnati at Houston and Cleveland at Pittsburgh. The Monday night game on Jan. 3 is Dallas at Minnesota.

The first round of playoffs will have the eighth-place team at the first-place team and the fifth-place team at the fourth-place team in one bracket of each conference. In the other bracket, it will be the seventh-place team at the second-place team and the sixth-place team at the third-place team.

In the second round, Jan. 15-16, the matchups will pair the winners of 1-8 against 4-5 in each conference and the winners of 2-7 and 3-6. The conference championships are set for Jan. 22-23, which was supposed to be the idle weekend preceding the Super Bowl.

The playing of postseason games other than the Super Bowl at a neutral site departs from current league policy. It was apparently prompted by the league's concern with poor winter weather, especially after last year's sub-zero American Conference championship game at Cincinnati.

In the event of ties in the standings at the end of the season, the league will use an eight-count tie-breaker system starting with head-to-head records and finishing with a coin toss. The tie-breaker system generally follows the regular one, but eliminates references to division games.

In other announcements at the news conference: — Players who are on ReservePhysically Unable to perform or ReserveNon-Football Injury list are eligible to resume conditional practice immediately.

— Active rosters will be increased from 45 to 49 for the duration of the season.

— The trading deadline will be on Nov. 30 at 4 p.m., after which all teams have played four regular-season games. Six games will be used for other procedures tied to the trading deadline.

— The deadline for reinstatement of ReserveRetired players will be Dec. 4 at 4 p.m.

— The waiver period ends Friday, Dec. 31.

— The first day to sign free agents will be the day after the regular season ends.

— The league said next year's college draft will, as usual, be based on this year's final standings.

AC Teams Seek Bids To Bowls

By TOM FOREMAN Jr. AP Sports Writer

With post-season bids hanging in the balance, several Atlantic Coast Conference teams enter the final full week of competition trying to improve their appearance for a cadre of bowl scouts.

Meanwhile, Clemson will not appear in a bowl game following an announcement made Tuesday by school president Bill Atchley. That announcement was the first indication that the school may be on the verge of NCAA-imposed sanctions.

The Tigers, who are in the driver's seat for the conference title, face arch-rival South Carolina in Death Valley.

North Carolina, ousted from the major bowl picture by two consecutive losses, is said to have a Sun Bowl date with Texas on Christmas Day. The Tar Heels can increase their record to 7-3 with a victory over Duke.

Maryland, which dropped one game behind the Tigers with last weekend's loss, hosts Virginia with a possible Aloha Bowl appearance hanging in the balance.

North Carolina State goes to a bowl this weekend — the Orange Bowl to meet Miami, Fla., with hopes of a post-season date. The Wolfpack is also awaiting word on the fate of head coach Monte Kiffin, whose job is said to be on the line despite being assured of a winning season.

Georgia Tech, which whipped Wake Forest last weekend to assure its first winning season in four years, has this Saturday off. The Demon Deacons are also resting in preparation for their trip to Tokyo for the Mirage Bowl.

Coach Danny Ford would not comment on recent reports that the Tigers would not go to a bowl, but that was several hours before Atchley's comments. Now, he says he's having a tough time keeping his team's mind on the Gamecocks.

"They had a built-in excuse last week at Maryland and they didn't take it," said Ford. "This week, we've also got a built-in excuse: I just hope they don't want to take it this week either."

South Carolina is trying to get to a 5-6 record, but Coach Richard Bell joked earlier that it won't be easy.

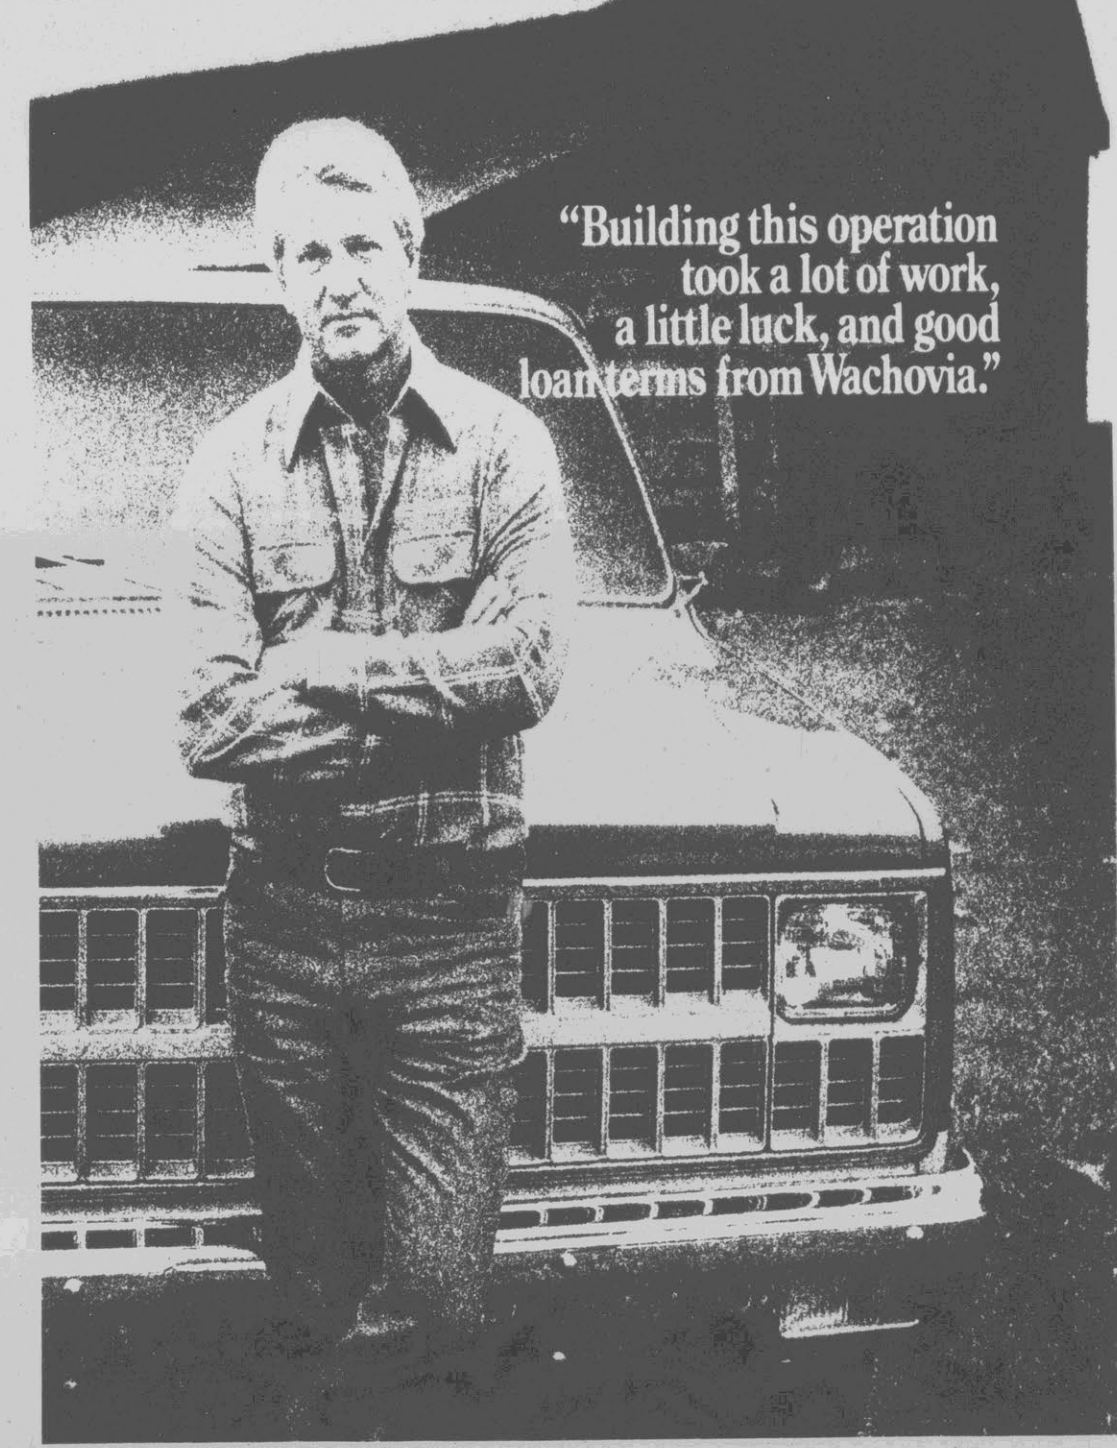

"They're trying to find some things you can do against them and we haven't discovered much," said Bell. "That's why our offensive staff slept in the office (Sunday) night."

Maryland Athletic Director Dick Dull had visions of Miami dancing in his head — then came the 24-22 loss to the Tigers.

"It's fair to say we won't be going to the Orange," said Dull. "But if we beat Virginia and finish 8-3 it would be an impressive season."

Based on Maryland's exam schedule, the Aloha would be the best since it's held on Christmas Day, as opposed to the Dec. 18 date for the Tangerine Bowl, another game considering the Terrapins as a possible team.

Virginia stands in the way of a Maryland bowl game and Coach George Welsh has to pump his team to start thinking upset.

Religious Leaders Urge Caution In Field Of Genetic Engineering

REV. PETER MARSHALL

Rev. Marshall Will Speak

The Rev. Peter Marshall will conduct services emphasizing Christian growth and maturity at Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church here Friday-Sunday.

Marshall is a nationally recognized teacher and preacher whose parents are Christian writer Catherine Marshall LeSourd and Dr. Peter Marshall, subject of the book and movie, "A Man Called Peter."

In addition to his pastorate of the East Dennis Community Church on Cape Cod, Mass. and his extensive evangelistic work, he is an author and scholar on American history as it relates to the spiritual life of this country. A graduate of Yale University and Princeton Theological Seminary, he and his wife, Edith, have three children.

Services at Jarvis will be held Friday at 7:30 p.m.; Saturday at 10 a.m. and 7:30 p.m.; and Sunday at 8:45 a.m., 11 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. Special music and singing will be led by Joanie Tyson. A nursery will be provided.

Copies of Marshall's book, "The Light and the Glory" will be available.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Researchers should be allowed to pursue genetic engineering, but they must resist tampering too much with the human species, religious representatives and specialists in ethics say.

"In my view, social and political safeguards against the potential misuse of germ-cell modification can be established which will allow for the constructive use of this powerful technique," LeRoy Walters, director of the Center for Bioethics at Georgetown University, said Wednesday.

"We should not foreclose in principle any potentially constructive application of gene therapy to human beings," he said in testimony before the House Science and Technology oversight subcommittee.

Walters was one of a panel of witnesses exploring the ethical considerations surrounding use of the gene-splicing technique, which consists of adding characteristics to cells that would not otherwise possess them.

Walters and others on the panel agreed on the need for a government body to monitor genetic engineering. That proposal was made in a report earlier in the week by the President's Commission for the Study of Ethical Problems in Medicine and Biomedical and Behavioral Research.

"I do not propose that the U.S. Congress legislate reverence," said Roger L. Shinn, professor of social ethics at Union Theological Seminary. "But I suggest that some sense of human inviolability, rooted deeply in our national and religious traditions, may influence much that we legislate and do." Seymour Siegel, professor of ethics and theology at the Jewish Theological Seminary of New York, said genetic research to remove disease and make procreation possible in families where it is not now possible should be encouraged.

"But we should restrict and restrain ourselves in the search to recreate our own species," he said.

Dr. Richard McCormick, director of the Kennedy Institute of Ethics at Georgetown, said mixing the human species with other species should be forbidden.

On the overall question of genetic engineering, he recalled that Pope John Paul II has expressed "support and caution — yes, we can abuse it but we need not."

McCormick cautioned against attempting to "perfect" human beings through genetic manipulation.

"I would be concerned about any kind of perfection procedure in which the sole means is mechanical," he said. The use of such procedures, he added, could lead to a society "that would evaluate human beings, not for what they are, but for what they can do."

FRIDAY SERVICE

A holy ghost deliverance service will be held Friday at 7:30 p.m. at Holy Mission Holy Church. Evangelist Shirley Daniel of Greenville will speak. A worship service will be held Sunday morning at 11:30. Eldress Pauline Council will be speaking at 7:30 p.m.

Hear Peter Marshall

November 19-21

Jarvis United Methodist Church

Downtown Greenville

Peter Marshall, son of Dr. Peter Marshall and Katherine Marshall, and co-author of THE LIGHT AND THE GLORY will speak a series of messages on Christian Maturity at Jarvis United Methodist Church on Friday night, November 19 at 7:30 p.m., Saturday, November 20 at 10:00 a.m. and 7:30 p.m., and on Sunday, November 21 at 8:45 and 11:00 a.m. Public is invited to attend.

Vote Higher Wine Tax

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The Alcoholic Beverage Tax Study Committee has voted to increase the state tax on wine by 5 cents to 10 cents per liter bottle, with the money going to help combat alcoholism.

The increased tax income would provide about $2 million a year to help fund rehabilitation programs on the local level through the state Department of Human Resources.

The tax on a liter of unfortified wines, which includes most table wines, would increase from 21 cents to 26 cents. Tax on fortified wines would go from 24 cents to 34 cents.

According to a report by the committee, the state has a serious problem with alcoholism and is not giving rehabilitation enough attention. It says state policy should be to increase revenues on alcoholic beverage sales for the purpose of improving alcoholism programs and to discourage drinking.

The increase, approved by a 3-2 vote on Wednesday, has to be passed by the 1983 Legislature. The Legislative Research Commission also must clear the proposed bill before it is sent to the full Legislature in January.

DRUG RAID — Marine Patrol Officer David Hoagland guards the seized 70-foot fishing vessel "Indomable" at the U.S. Coast Guard Station in Boothbay Harbor, Maine. Authorities raided the vessel Saturday night at the central Maine coastal town of Bremen where they seized an estimated 20-30 tons of marijuana. A pile of marijuana lies on the deck of the vessel. Twenty-four suspects were arraigned in the case. (AP Laserphoto)

Scout Troop Has Exercises

Members and adult leaders of Scout Troop 340, sponsored by St. James United Methodist Church, took part in an exercise demonstration Wednesday night conducted in conjunction with the November scout theme of physical fitness.

Theresa Holly, owner of the Body Shop here, offered the demonstration for the 19 scouts and four adults. The troop members took part in a 30-minute session of sit-ups, jogging in place, push-ups, all types of reaches and stretches, aerobics, and other exercises.

The activities took place during the troop's regular weekly meeting. Wayne Bryant is the scoutmaster.

City Teacher Received Life Threat Call

A teacher at South Greenville School on Wednesday received a call threatening her life, and the caller also called police to repeat his threat.

Greenville Police Chief Glenn Cannon said at 12:28 Wednesday the police station received an anonymous call from a man who said he was going to South Greenville School to shoot a teacher there.

"We immediately dispatched people to the school and called the school to alert them about the threat," Cannon said. "We were told that the teacher had earlier received a similar call but nobody at the school had called the police to report the threat."

Cannon said that security procedures were put into effect at the school, including a change in bus loading arrangements to provide tighter security for students and the teacher involved.

Cannon added it has been determined that the caller making the threat was a boyfriend of the teacher, and that efforts are being made to locate that individual in order to bring charges against him.

Fewer Job Offers Go To 'Black English' Speakers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Job applicants who speak "black English" may be getting shorter interviews, fewer job offers and lower pay than applicants who speak standard English, two researchers say.

Sandra L. Terrell and Francis Terrell, a husband and wife team on the faculty of North Texas State University at Denton, evaluated the reactions of 100 personnel managers to six applicants for secretarial work.

Three of the job seekers spoke standard English and three spoke so-called black English.

The researchers found that applicants speaking standard English were granted longer interviews. They were also offered 17 jobs, compared to eight for those who spoke black English.

And, there was a difference of almost 35 percent in the pay offered the two types of job applicants. The job hunters who spoke black English were offered an average of $3.52 an hour. Those who spoke standard English were hired at an average of $5.34 an hour.

The researchers concluded that "those who advocate training and encouraging blacks to speak black English may be running the risk of reducing that person's marketability."

They added: "For those who prefer to encourage blacks to speak black English, a more appropriate strategy might be to teach the child both black English and standard English."

The researchers defined black English as a social dialect spoken by many black Americans whose origins are in the languages of West Africa.

It is characterized by such grammatical features as the absence of the past tense form on verbs; absence of the "is" and "are" forms of the verb "to be"; use of double negatives; and the failure to use the possessive "s" ending on words.

There has been controversy over what role, if any, black English should have in the education system. Its adherents say black English is a cultural form which should be respected and preserved.

But opponents argue that giving recognition to black English by permitting its use in schools, teaching it in schools or encouraging students who speak it at home to continue doing so will handicap students' ability to compete.

In the Terrell study, the job seekers were black women between the ages of 20 to 22. The personnel managers were from large businesses which advertised secretarial job openings in local newspapers.

The Terrells' paper was to be presented at the American Speech Language Hearing Association's annual convention in Toronto this week.

Sandra Terrell is a speech-language pathologist, and Francis Terrell is a clinical psychologist.

Again Labeled 'Outstanding'

ECU News Bureau

For the 28th consecutive year, East Carolina University's Tau chapter of Phi Sigma Pi national honor fraternity has been chosen the most outstanding chapter in the nation.

Tau chapter received the 1982 Joseph Torshia Outstanding Chapter award at the fraternity's recent national convention in Arlington, Va., and two members of Tau chapter were elected to national office.

Robert Zalimeni of New Bern, a senior computer science major at ECU and 1982-83 president of Tau chapter, was elected national vice president. Michael Hosey of Greenville, 1982 graduate in accounting, was elected national alumni representative. Both will serve two-year terms.

Both Zalimeni and Hosey are recipients of Richard Cecil Todd Phi Sigma Pi scholarships at ECU, a program established by Dr. Richard C. Todd, professor-emeritus of history and one of the founders of the ECU chapter of Phi Sigma Pi. It is the oldest fraternal organization on campus.

Todd and Dr. Jack W. Thornton, professor of economics in the ECU School of Business, have held national offices in Phi Sigma Pi for the past two years, with Thornton having served as national president for 1980-82. Todd has held every office on the national level, except secretary-treasurer, of the fraternity for the past 29 years and was national alumni representative for 1980-82.

Michael Hosey has served as vice president of Tau chapter and was the first recipient of the Jack W. Thornton Scholarship established by Dr. Thornton at ECU. Zalimeni has served Tau chapter as president and as chairman of the intramurals and Heart Fund projects for the honor fraternity.

Tau chapter, with 21 members attending, had the largest single chapter attendance at the 1982 national convention.

Counselor Gets Award

Hal Smith, counselor and field representative at Johnston Technical College, was one of four outstanding counselors named by the North Carolina School Counselors Association.

The association, a division of the North Carolina Personnel and Guidance Association, gave the awards at its annual convention Nov. 11 and 12 at Radisson Hotel in Raleigh.

The School Counselor Association presented awards recognizing counselors in four employment and counseling settings: elementary school, middle school, secondary school and post-secondary school. Smith was presented a plaque naming him the outstanding post-secondary counselor in the state.

Smith has worked in student affairs at Johnston Technical College since 1977. In addition to counseling, the award cited his work with student activities, the Red Cross Bloodmobile and public relations. He is a member of the North Carolina Personnel and Guidance Association, the N.C. School Counselors Association and the College Personnel Association.

Smith was nominated for the award by the Midwest Chapter of NCPGA. He is past president of the this chapter and a former member of the NCPGA Executive Council.

Smith is a two-time graduate of East Carolina University and holds a bachelor's degree in business and a master's degree in counselor education. He is a past president of the Greenville Jaycees.

Visitors See The Enemy Face-To-Face

By JIM ABRAMS
Associated Press Writer
PANMUNJOM, Korea (AP) — In an age that threatens impersonal, long-distance destruction, a guided tour of the "truce village" on the Korean DMZ is a rare chance to look an enemy in the eye and feel the barely contained violence built upon almost 30 years of tension.

The tours of Panmunjom are conducted several times a day for U.S. and South Korean soldiers stationed at the 151-mile demilitarized zone and other parts of South Korea.

What the "tourists" are shown is a lonely cluster of huts and guard posts located in the western sector of the DMZ, the demilitarized zone which has divided the two Koreas since the 1953 armistice ending the Korean War. The truce village is the only point of official, face-to-face contact between the two Koreas, and is off-limits except on these specially approved guided tours.

The soldiers who come to see Panmunjom are men whose normal duty is manning two U.S. guard posts and doing night patrols in the demilitarized zone.

According to U.N. Command Guide Thomas Patton of Los Angeles, "We want to show them what they are defending against."

"I'm in North Korea," said one young American from the U.S. Army 2nd Division as he joined a dozen U.S. and South Korean soldiers along the north side of the green felt table in the Military Armistice Commission conference room.

Since 1953 there have been 414 often bitter exchanges by the commission across that table. But this day there are no meetings, and only a few North Korean guards watch with studied indifference as the Americans stare and take pictures.

Outside, in a cold rain, U.S. members of the U.N. Command stand armed with cameras, ready to film any incident.

The conference room is in the middle of a line of structures — the U.N. Command buildings painted blue and the North Korean buildings pink — bisected by a foot-wide concrete slab that marks the military demarcation line dividing the two camps.

Another landmark along the tour is the stump of a poplar tree adjacent to U.N. Guard Post 3 overlooking the "Bridge of No Return," the only road link between the two Koreas. In August 1976, two U.S. officers were slain by ax-swinging North Koreans when the Americans tried to prune the tree to clear an obstructed view. Three days later it was cut down.

The officers were the only U.N. Command members to be killed in the line of duty since the truce village was erected on the site of the war-destroyed hamlet of Panmunjom. Since the incident, all mingling between the two sides has been forbidden.

Patton, who has been with the U.N. Command for six months, repeatedly warns the men against any gesture that might provoke the North Koreans. There must be no pointing, no speaking into the constantly monitored microphones in the conference room, and, above all, no response to any approaches, friendly or otherwise, from the North Korean guards, he said.

In the past the North Koreans — many who in the past were said to be war orphans honed in hatred — have thrown rocks and candy, lighted fires, drawn guns and taunted the Americans and South Koreans.

Patrolling the Joint Security Area of Panmunjom for the U.N. are about 200 American and 150 South Korean troops, all volunteers meeting the requirements of an impeccable military record and the emotional stability to withstand the war of nerves. The Americans must be at least 6 feet tall and weigh 170 pounds. The South Koreans must possess a black belt in one of the martial arts.

Any infraction of the rules means immediate expulsion from the corps. "We know there are no second chances if we do something wrong," Patton said.

The tour goes well this day. The soldiers listen intently to tales of competition between the two sides over which could build a bigger flagpole, or how the North once turned a proffered cigarette into a border incident.

"They (North Koreans) have 200 guns lined up at us over a two-football field area," said one GI who helps defend South Korea's capital of Seoul, only 35 miles south of Panmunjom. "If the North ever attacks, our chances of survival are zero."

Out of the 39,000 U.S. troops in Korea, about 1,500 infantrymen aid the South Koreans assigned to the 2.5-mile-wide DMZ. They are the only U.S. troops in the world today who patrol nightly with live ammunition and orders to shoot intruders on sight. Since 1953 some 60 U.S. personnel have been killed in incidents along the DMZ, many in the late 1960s when North Korean militancy was at a peak.

There have been other casualties. On Aug. 28, Pfc. Joseph White, 20, of St.

Louis, blasted open a gate at Guardpost Oulette and defected to the North. The U.S. military is still trying to determine what led the clean-cut, reputedly strongly anti-Communist White to become the first American defector to the North in 17 years.

DMZ cuts through the buildings at center, which houses the Military Armistice Commission conference room. (AP Laserphoto)

May Act In Steel Crisis

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, blaming foreign producers for the decline of the U.S. specialty steel industry, said he may throw up trade barriers to protect hard-hit American companies.

U.S. production of specialty steel, primarily stainless and similar alloys, has dropped steadily in recent years, and the government said Tuesday that unemployment in the industry has reached 40 percent.

In a memorandum to U.S. Trade Representative Bill Brock, Reagan said he had determined the industry was being unfairly hurt by foreign imports from countries that subsidize their producers.

He cited Austria, Sweden and the European Common Market, saying they had given preferential loans, grants and other favored treatment to help their domestic industries compete in world markets.

The presidential finding could lead to protectionist measures if the International Trade Commission finds that American manufacturers have been sufficiently damaged to warrant federal intervention.

In a few weeks, an agency in Washington called the Depository Institutions Deregulation Committee, or DIDC, will make it possible for NCNB to offer something better than Money Market Fund accounts:

The kind of rates they pay, plus FDIC insurance and instant access to your money.

It all happens soon.

But, at NCNB, you can get a bonus for starting now.

The NCNB MM Account. Double Rates. Twice.

Since we want you to transfer your money to us from your broker, money fund, another bank or S&L, we know we've got to offer something special.

So, here's our "Early Sign-Up Bonus" #1:

1. Bring us $20,000 or more from some other place and deposit it in an NCNB 7-31 Day Certificate now, and we'll
2. Pay you double our current 7-31 Day Certificate rate on that money until the DIDC finalizes our new MM Account.
3. Then, when you transfer your money to an NCNB MM Account, you qualify for Double Our Money Market Rate (at least 15%, maybe more) from that date through January 31, 1983, as long as you leave an equivalent amount in the NCNB MM Account through June 30, 1983.

NCNB Bonus #2: Double-The-Rate.

If you'd like to sign up for less money, here's "Early Sign-Up Bonus" #2:

Now, there's a Money Market right in your neighborhood.

1. Right now, or before year-end, bring us $5,000 or more from some other place, and we'll

2. Guarantee you Double Our Money Market Rate (again, at least 15%) from the date your MM Account is opened through January 31, 1983, as long as you leave an equivalent amount in the account until June 30, 1983.

Since the MM Account will be available around Dec. 15, you can earn a very nice "Bonus."

Something The Money Market Funds Can't Offer.

Here are more reasons to sign up. In the first place, there's the security you get with FDIC insurance on every depositor up to $100,000.

There's the convenience of handling all your financial business at over 180 NCNB offices all over North Carolina.

And, the convenience of banking anytime when you have an NCNB 24 card to operate our money machines.

Finally, if you're interested in our new MM Account, you'll also want to ask about NCNB Deluxe Banking, all the banking services you're ever likely to need at special rates or no charge.

At least 15% interest, plus Double Our Money Market Rate, plus the convenience of handling all your finances right in your neighborhood. Why wait when you can get all that?

Come see us soon. At the bank that wants to be the best in the neighborhood.

Each depositor is insured to $100,000 by FDIC. Offer is available to individual depositors only. Additional interest earned during the "Bonus" period (through January 31, 1983) will be credited to the MM Account in 6 equal monthly payments, provided each month's average account balance is equal to or exceeds the qualifying amount on deposit in the account as of December 31, 1982. Ask us for complete details on restrictions and balance requirements which apply to payment of the bonus interest. Deposits made to the 7-31 Day Certificate are subject to an interest penalty for early withdrawal. More information on the NCNB MM Account (subject to final regulations) will be available in early December at any NCNB office.

Army Of Toy Soldiers Invades Capital

TOY SOLDIER COLLECTOR — Malcolm Forbes, 63, shares a laugh in Explorer Hall at the National Geographic Society where his collection of toy soldiers went on display. (AP Laserphoto)

By MIKE FEINSILBER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Washington was invaded by foreign armies today. All who saw the columns of troops were immediately overcome by nostalgia and surrendered to childhood memories.

The invaders — 12,000 strong — are antique toy soldiers from the collection of millionaire magazine publisher Malcolm Forbes, 63, who said he bought a squadron or two at an auction 15 years ago and "I just kept adding more, I couldn't resist."

Forbes' battalions went on display in the National Geographic Society's Explorer Hall, where they will remain until Easter.

His collection of 80,000 toy soldiers, the world's largest, is usually kept — "permanently garrisoned," he said — in a palace in Tangier, Morocco, where the Arabic edition of Forbes is published.

Those troops bivouacking in Washington this winter are displayed in realistic panoramas and dioramas: Aztec warriors in feather regalia battle Cortez' invading troops. The armies of Alexander the Great are locked in combat against the Persians. Rommel's motorized Afrika Korps roars through the desert.

A Norwegian polar expedition, complete with huskies, battles the snow and the cold. Hitler and Mussolini take the salute as the Nazi Wehrmacht parades past the Fuhrer's mountain retreat. William Tell takes arrow in hand to shoot the apple off his son's head.

The collection is under the care of Britons Peter and Anne Johnson. Mrs. Johnson was an antique dealer from whom Forbes bought soldiers. They now spend part of their lives as curators, assembling the collection in Morocco.

Forbes adds to it, "but by now it is a highly selective draft," says Johnson, who turned his acquired expertise into a book, "Toy Armies," published last year by Doubleday.

These toys, each individually painted, cost a penny apiece when Forbes was a boy. New ones of comparable individuality might sell now for $8 each, but rare antique soldiers can command $200 apiece, Johnson said.

He estimated the value of Forbes' collection at $1 million, but Forbes declined to say what his initial investment had been.

"I can honestly say I don't know, and if I did I probably wouldn't tell you because you'd think I was nuts," he told reporters at a preview.

He was asked if he considered them a business investment.

"Well, that's the sophistry I use to justify paying exorbitant amounts of money for toy soldiers," he said.

"If you buy enough of things like this, you drive up the market price. And then I'd point to the high market price and say to my wife, 'See, these are a good investment, don't be upset with me honey.'"

More Tar Heels Apply For Help On Winter Fuel

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — An increase in people applying for help in paying their winter fuel bills through the state's fuel assistance program has caused a reduction in the payments those people are receiving, officials say.

"We've heard from a number of counties indicating that applications are up," says Lynda McDaniel, energy assistance coordinator for the state Department of Human Resources in Raleigh.

Ms. McDaniel says there is some hope for relief, however, if the federal government approves $29 million for the state program — an $8 million increase over last year. She says that means individual fuel aid payments could increase slightly.

"The program didn't suffer budget cuts last year, but we're not counting money we haven't received yet. Congress will have to make some decision by mid-December," she said.

Last February, 143,075 households and 383,044 individuals statewide got one-time fuel assistance payments. The amount of money the state paid out totaled $21,173,733.

Individual payments are based on household income, the type of fuel used and projected utility costs for the region.

A one-person household with income of more than $316 a month cannot apply for assistance. Income for a family of four cannot exceed $621 a month.

"We've taken extra steps trying to touch the people in the unemployment line," said Phyllis Lynch, director of the Charlotte youth council. "There are a lot of people who weren't eligible last year but may be this year because they've lost their jobs."

Diana Weddington, program administrator in Mecklenburg County agrees that the number of people submitting applications for the assistance has increased this year.

"The turnout last year was a lot lower," she said. "There won't be a cutoff of people who receive payments. But this may affect the amount of money people receive."

The Charlotte-Mecklenburg Youth Council, which began taking applications for assistance Oct. 18, is halfway through the process but already is only 2,000 applicants short of last year's total.

As of last Friday, 5,642 low-income county residents had applied for help from the Low Income Energy Assistance Program, Ms. Weddington said.

Convention Held At N. Pitt

The annual Northeastern District Library Media Convention was held at North Pitt High School recently.

Guest speakers were Willie Nelms, director of Sheppard Memorial Library; Julie Fay of East Carolina University and Dr. Eddie West, superintendent of Pitt County schools.

Entertainment was provided by Barry Warren, comedian and graduate of North Pitt High School, and the North Pitt Ensemble, directed by Barbara Plummer.

The theme for the 1982 convention was "Libraries: New Horizons Unfolding," and was planned by the North Pitt Library Club members, under the direction of Gladys Avery and Melody Relford.

The following officers were elected for the coming year: Shirley Little of North Pitt High School, president; Cathy Baker of Farmville Central High School, vice president; Stephen Batten of Williamston High School, secretary, and Brenda Peaden of Farmville Central High School, treasurer.

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Cy Chermak fancies himself a show doctor, an expert at nursing sick television programs back to health.

Called in for urgent resuscitation, Chermak's most successful patients have been "The Virginian," "Ironside" and "CHiPs." But NBC's "CHiPs" has been suffering from declining ratings, so Chermak sought a second opinion, bringing in Paul Mason as supervising producer.

"Sometimes, the playing manager takes himself out of the lineup for new blood," Chermak said. Chermak was hired as executive producer of "CHiPs" midway through its first season in 1977. The program turned into a Top 25 program the next three seasons, but sagged last year. Its current ratings are about the same as last year: a break-even 16.8 percent of all homes watching TV and 26 percent of the homes watching TV at 8 p.m. EST on Sunday.

Some of the show's recent problems, Chermak said, stemmed from the feud between stars Erik Estrada and Larry Wilcox. Wilcox left the program after last season.

"The tension on the set disturbed audiences," said Chermak. "People were forced to choose sides, and it made them uncomfortable."

A new blond star, Tom Reilly, and a female officer, played by Tina Gayle, were added to the cast, along with the new supervising producer and three new writers.

"We're pulling back a little from the fantasy concept," Chermak said. "Our stories are more realistic. We're not stressing the recreational aspects as much, like parachute-jumping and hang-gliding."

Of course, such antics have not been entirely removed. In this Sunday's episode, Robbie Knievel, Evel Knievel's son, does a motorcycle jump over an airborne plane. And, perhaps in recognition of economic hard times in Detroit, a laid-off autoworker goes berserk and smashes several foreign cars.

The return to reality — or the "CHiPs" version of reality — brings the show full circle. When Chermak was brought in to repair the program in 1977, he rejected non-fiction.

"Having a motorcycle officer was a unique idea, but what was so exciting about giving out tickets?" he said. "The stories were very sketchy, and the scripts were trying to stick to real life."

"We took naturalism and changed it to fantasy. It became police fantasy. It wasn't real, but it was fun." The success of "Hill Street Blues" reflects current appreciation for shows that deal in realistic situations. But some changes in the public's viewing habits are beyond Chermak's control. With the increasing number of alternatives to television, finicky audiences — and jittery programmers — don't give shows the breathing room they once had.

"In 1960, a show could be

"We knew that Burr had great warmth. People trusted him. So we decided to tell smaller, more intimate stories about people in trouble."

Chermak was also involved with "The Barbary Coast," starring Doug McClure and William Shatner. It failed miserably.

"It was a Western with humor, and we tried to make it broader," Chermak said. "You know, sometimes a surgeon is going to lose a patient."

CY CHERMAK

on for 13 weeks and build audiences," said Chermak. "Today, with computer testing, networks can get a handle on a show's appeal a lot faster, and shows are pulled that much sooner."

"The Virginian" originally was an anthology Western with continuing characters. But the concept was sidetracked by big-name guest stars. "Slowly, we brought back an episodic nature with strong family bonds," Chermak said.

On "Ironside," Chermak concluded that star Raymond Burr wasn't being packaged effectively. "There was a tendency to do big stories, like an international crime figure holding San Francisco hostage."

O'Neill Stories Are Showcased

By MARY CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — That Eugene O'Neill had what it takes to be a playwright from his very first play is clear from "Three Lost Plays of Eugene O'Neill" running in a showcase production at Playhouse 46.

Having seen three other playwrights' first plays within the last week, we could only marvel at O'Neill. Only one of those three showed any potential — and it had benefitted from a staged reading last summer at a playwrights' workshop founded in the name of O'Neill.

"Three Lost Plays," seen Wednesday evening, the night after the opening, started with "A Wife for Life," O'Neill's first play. He wrote it at 24, in 1913, as an intermission diversion for his father's performance in "The Count of Monte Cristo."

Two gold prospectors talk, the younger telling about falling in love with the wife of a miner years before. She had sent him away, saying, "I am his wife and I must keep my pledge." Of course the audience realizes fast that she was the wife of the older prospector. And he had thought her faithless.

The play is short, 20 minutes, and the language pretty stilted. But O'Neill put in the heart and pulse of living people. One does not laugh at or condescend to such a story.

"The Movie Man," from 1914, is a satire on cynical American documentary film makers. Bill Kalmenson, prominent and effective in all the plays, has a contract with Gen. Pancho Gomez to film every battle of his minirevolution. There'll be no night battles and no battles on rainy days or anytime when filming would be difficult.

Kalmenson's character uses that contract in a quixotic, romantic way to aid a lady in distress. And fadeout, smiling.

"The Web," has Rosemary

Sykes as a prostitute who'd rather hold a job housecleaning. But after she gets hired, somebody always turns up who knows what she has been and feels dutybound to tell her employer, who fires her. A beating by her pimp is stopped by a man who'd been framed as a boy and sent to reform school. He, played by William Gaynor Dovey, can't get a job, when people know his record, so he steals, goes to jail, steals, goes to jail.

Innocent Plea

LOS ANGELES (AP) — David Soul, star of television's "Starsky and Hutch," has pleaded innocent to charges of spousal abuse and battery involving a fight with his wife.

The plea was entered for Soul, 39, in West Los Angeles Municipal Court on Wednesday. Deputy City Attorney Susan Kaplan said the actor did not have to be present because both charges are misdemeanors. She said Soul's trial was set for Jan. 10.

Yesterday's Cryptiquip — WHY WAS DISHWASHER'S BOOK ON POTS PANNED BY KEEN CRITICS?
 Today's Cryptiquip clue: X equals E.

The Cryptiquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Long Odds For Mass. Lottery

BOSTON (AP) — Gamblers who like long shots — 593,775-to-1, to be exact — can try their luck at the $200,000 jackpot of "Megabucks," the Massachusetts lottery's new game to benefit the arts. Sales opened Tuesday, about 16 months after the original arts lottery stalled over poor sales. The lottery commission hopes the new game will be more successful.

A dollar can be bet on six two-digit numbers from 00 to 29 at any of the state's 1,500 computerized outlets. The jackpot, which grows when there is no big weekly winner, is at least $200,000 for picking all six digits.

Brazil Election Hailed Example

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department is applauding the conduct of democratic elections in Brazil as an "impressive example" of what it called "the peaceful and progressive democratization of the country."

The Brazilian elections Monday were the first free municipal, legislative and gubernatorial elections in Brazil in 17 years. News reports said an estimated 58.5 million voters cast their ballots for more than 60,000 elective posts under a gradual liberalization program, the "abertura," under which President Joao Baptista Figueiredo has pledged to return the country to democracy.

Opening lead: Queen of Don't settle for the obvious line. If you dig deeper, you might find a way of combining your chances.

North South had an overly aggressive auction to an odds against grand slam. When South neither bid three no trump nor four spades, it was obvious that his cue bids were in search of a club slam. With all his points in prime values and obviously working well because of South's jump to two no trump, North cooperated to the hilt. However, we would have signed off in six clubs over South's five hearts; that would have been the sensible contract.

West led the queen of diamonds, and declarer saw that he had some work to do. He had to handle a loser in each red suit. If spades broke 3-3, he could set up two long spades and that would be that. But the percentages favored a 4-2 spade division.

Could that be handled? Yes — if East held three trumps or, if West held the long trumps and also the long spades. Declarer won the opening lead with the ace, cashed the ace and king of trumps and then the ace-king of spades. Next came a low spade from the table. Had East shown out, declarer would have had no problems. But when East produced a spade, declarer had to hope for a favorable distribution.

He ruffed with a low trump. Had spades been 3-3, declarer would have drawn the last trump after West followed, then crossed to the king of diamonds to take two discards on the established spades. But West did not follow; fortunately, he was also out of trumps. So now declarer's foresight paid off. He cashed his high hearts and ruffed a heart in dummy. He ruffed another spade to set up the fifth spade on the table, then drew the last trump. He could still get back to the board with the king of diamonds to cash the last spade for his thirteenth trick.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. For a copy and a scorepad, send $1.75 to "Goren-Four Deal," care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 259, Norwood, N.J. 07648. Make checks payable to Newspaperbooks.
