Reagan Told No Votes To Pass Moving Up Tax Cut

By MAUREEN SANTINI
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican leaders in Congress are telling President Reagan they will push for a jobs program in the post-election session, but warning they see little hope for moving up the income tax cut to January.

After meeting with Reagan at the White House on Thursday, Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker and House Republican Leader Robert Michel said a jobs program is one of the priorities for the lame-duck session starting Nov. 29.

The congressional leaders, conferring with Reagan for the first time since the Nov. 2 election, said they also told the president he did not have enough support to push up the date of the tax cut.

"We don't have the votes," Michel said he informed Reagan.

Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said later the president wanted to discuss the tax cut issue further with his economic advisers.

Speakes said Friday Reagan probably would decide in the next few days whether to ask the lame-duck session of Congress to advance the date of the tax cut, but would not try to bring it up during the regular congressional session next year.

Asked whether Reagan was surprised to hear that he doesn't have the necessary votes for the proposal, Speakes replied, "No, we know it's going to be difficult."

He acknowledged Reagan's advisers were torn over the issue, adding, "The president very often gets conflicting opinions from his advisers."

In addition, the GOP leaders predicted it would be difficult to make further cuts in non-defense spending, despite Reagan's assertion in New Orleans on Tuesday that that is precisely where he intended to cut.

"I think we've cut just about as much as we can cut," Baker said. "We're wrung a lot out of the non-defense side. Now we are going to have to take a look at the defense side."

The main purpose of the three-week congressional session is to pass appropriations bills for fiscal year 1983, which began Oct. 1. The government has been operating under emergency spending bills.

But on the jobs issue, Baker said he believed Reagan would propose that Congress pass a program to repair highways and bridges financed by a 5-cents-a-gallon increase in gasoline taxes.

Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis has said that proposal would create about 320,000 jobs. Reagan prefers not to call it a jobs program, since he opposed the public works approach to the unemployment dilemma during the campaign.

Baker, who is from Tennessee, left open the possibility that he may support a more extensive jobs program, though he did not give any details.

"What I'm saying is I'm going to talk to the speaker (Thomas O'Neill) and we're going to gin up a jobs bill," Baker said. O'Neill, D-Mass., is the House speaker.

With unemployment at 10.4 percent, Michel said, "The key element is jobs and putting people back to work. The question is, how do you best do that?" Unemployment was a major issue in the November elections in which the GOP lost 26 House seats.

Reagan is considering asking Congress to push up the date of the tax cut — the third installment of his 25-percent income tax reduction over three years — as a way to stimulate the economy.

Under Reagan's proposal, the 5 percent cut in tax rates due Jan. 1, 1984, and the second 10 percent reduction in the amount of tax withheld from worker paychecks, due next July 1, would instead take effect Jan. 1, 1983. The net effect would be a 15 percent cut in tax rates in 1983, rather than 10 percent, and the full reduction would be reflected in paychecks at the start of the year.

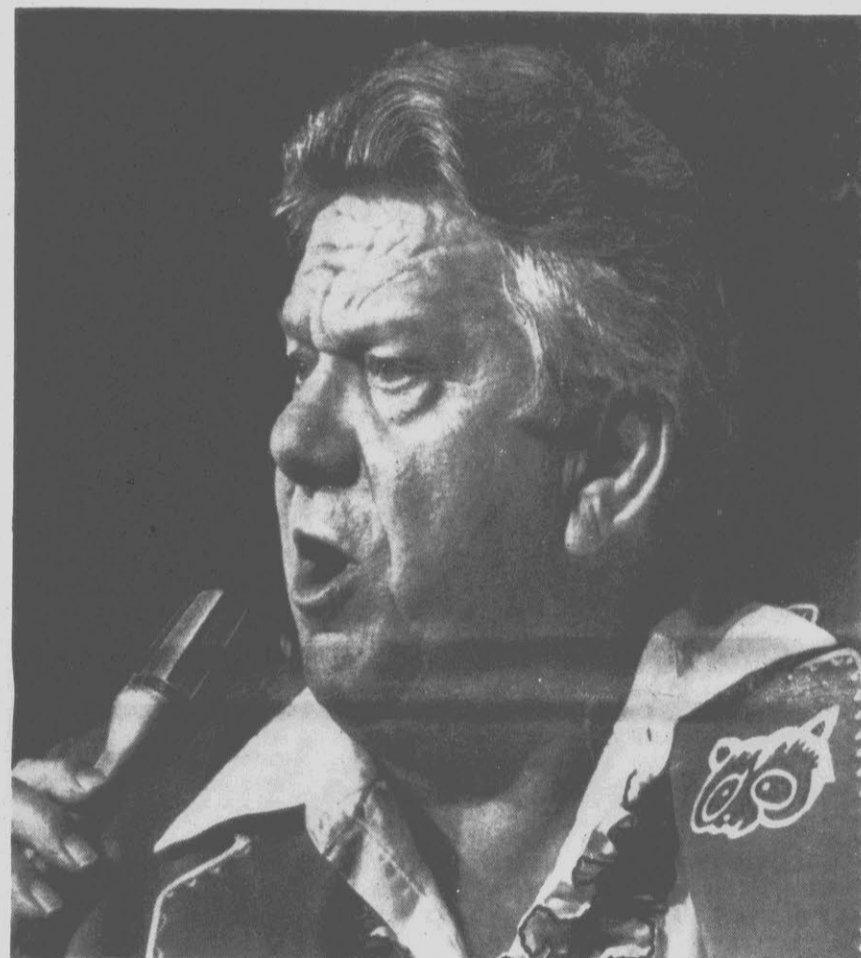

Advancing the income tax would increase the deficit by nearly $15 billion. The fiscal 1983 deficit is already projected at $170 billion.

Neither Baker nor Michel were enthusiastic about the idea which would mean an extra $93 in 1983 for a typical family of four with an income of $20,000.

Michel said if the end result were higher interest rates, "Then I would have some serious reservations about it." A larger deficit can lead to higher interest rates as the government borrows money.

On the matter of budget cuts, Baker said several billion dollars could be shaved from defense spending because of the drop in inflation over the past year. But added it would be dangerous to make "massive cuts" in the defense budget.

Martin County Seeing Big Employment Lift

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer
ROBERSONVILLE — At a time when counties are looking for any good news to boost their economic situations, a Maryland-based chicken processing giant is providing a shot in the arm for Martin County's employment picture. Perdue Farms Inc. has begun taking applications in a hiring push that will result in employment for approximately 235 workers when the firm kicks off operations at its new plant here, a spokesman said. Tom Moyers, director of employee relations for the firm here, said Perdue has set a target date of Jan. 13 to launch processing activities in Robersonville.

Moyers said the hiring of workers from the area's employment roster is viewed as a plus not only for Robersonville and Martin County "but for us as well."

As of Thursday, the company's hiring campaign had resulted in approximately 1,400 applications being filed, said Moyers, who noted that probably 600 more job seekers asked for employment before Perdue began advertising to fill the plant needs.

The spokesman credited the state Job Service office in Williamston, managed by Kathy Wong, as doing "a fine job in referring applicants to us." Moyers said the staff members have "gone out of their way to help" Perdue.

Moyers said Perdue, which assumed ownership of the Robersonville plant from Central Soya Co. in April, is still in the process of renovating the North Green Street facility to meet its processing requirements. He said that while no additions have been made to the plant,

UFO Obsession Proved Fatal For A Woman

GRAND MARAIS, Minn. (AP) — A man and woman apparently waiting for a flying saucer spent a month in a car in the snowy wilderness of northeastern Minnesota before the woman died and the man fell unconscious, authorities say.

Gerald Flach, 38, an electrician from West St. Paul, was found semiconscious Monday by a motorist on Gunflint Trail.

Laverne Landis, 48, a registered nurse from St. Paul, Minn., was found dead in the car several hundreds yards away. An autopsy disclosed she had died from hypothermia, dehydration and starvation.

Flach was treated at Cook County North Shore Hospital in Grand Marais and was released Thursday. He was taken to a Veterans Administration hospital for psychiatric evaluation, doctors said.

Cook County Deputy Sheriff Frank Redfield said no criminal charges were filed, and there was no evidence of foul play.

Flach was described by a friend as having become obsessed in recent months with unidentified flying objects.

"Flach said he had been receiving messages through Ms. Landis from some higher power," Redfield said. "The most recent message directed them to go to the end of the Gunflint Trail and await further messages."

"These people kind of believed in flying saucers."

They waited in their compact car for more than four weeks, apparently eating vitamins and drinking water from nearby Loon Lake, authorities said.

Jack McDonnell of Grand Marais found Flach about 10:20 a.m. Monday, according to Bruce Kerfoot of the Gunflint Trail Rescue Squad. Flach told him his friend in the car needed medical attention.

A rescue squad used a four-wheel-drive vehicle to reach Ms. Landis. The car was snowed in on a small access road a few hundred yards from the main road. It was out of gasoline.

"I believe they were parked there like four to six weeks.

Govm't Says Economy 'Flat' In 3rd Quarter

By ROBERT FURLOW
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Revising its national growth figures downward, the government said today the national economy stayed flat in the July-September quarter rather than inching upward as first estimated.

The Commerce Department report also said U.S. corporations' profits rose slightly in the quarter. However, they remained at a low level.

Neither piece of news was likely to surprise government officials and private economists, who are generally agreed that the recession moved into a 16th month in October and may well be continuing yet.

The inflation-adjusted, or "real," gross national product stayed at an annual rate of $1.478 trillion, the same as in the second quarter, the new report said.

Commerce Department economists had estimated last month — before all economic data for the third quarter was in — that there had been a gain at an annual rate of 0.8 percent. Since then, officials said newer reports — especially one showing the foreign trade deficit higher than expected for the quarter — made it likely real GNP would be revised downward.

Real GNP — the broadest measure of U.S. economic activity — is a figure designed to include all goods and services produced in a given period.

Before adjustment for inflation, GNP rose 4.7 percent to a rate of $3.081 trillion in the quarter.

The profits picture improved only slightly. In the third quarter, the report said:

— Before-tax corporate profits rose 4.8 percent to an annual rate of $179.9 billion after rising a slim 0.1 percent in the second quarter.

— After-tax profits rose 2.4 percent to a rate of $119.1 billion.

Food Stamp Rules Aimed At Illegal Exchange

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Stricter rules in the food stamp program are designed to reduce the illegal exchange of food stamps for money and other items such as guns, televisions, stolen property, and marijuana, officials say.

"You name it, we bought it," said Frank Weeks, an investigator with the U.S. Department of Agriculture in Raleigh. He said an agent in Raleigh recently bought $14,000 of non-taxed liquor with the stamps as part of an investigation of food stamp fraud.

On the black market, Weeks said, the person who accepts food stamps for non-authorized merchandise usually has an outlet to redeem the stamps, such as a friend who owns a food store. Merchants usually pay at least 50 cents on the dollar, then turn in the stamps for full face value.

"To the store owner, it's just like money," Weeks said. "The bank credits his bank account with whatever he has at the end of the week."

Defrauding the program means exchanging food stamps for non-edible merchandise such as cigarettes, alcoholic beverages and paper products.

In a Shelby case, Weeks said, a store owner gave a customer $100 for $200 in food stamps. The bank credited the store for $200 in stamps, so the owner made $100 on the deal.

In order to combat this type of fraud, state officials are trying to cut down on food-stamp fraud by warning grocery-store owners that they could lose their food-stamp business permanently if commit fraud.

Anything from accepting $200 in food stamps for $100 cash to allowing a customer to pay for beer and wine with the coupons can be considered fraud. If a store is caught for fraud three times, it could be barred from the food-stamp program.

The new federal law Congress passed this year is a drastic change from the old law, which set a maximum disqualification period of three years.

Under the new rules, a store would be disqualified from the food-stamp program for six months to five years, instead of the current 30 days. A second violation would mean disqualification for one to 10 years.

"Some stores disregard the food-stamp regulation altogether," said Louis Mathis, chief of compliance in the Atlanta office of the Food and Nutrition Service which administers the coupon program. "It's just like coming to a red light and you know you're supposed to stop, but you don't — you just go ahead."

Food-stamp fraud is on the rise in North Carolina, figures show. In 1980-81, state officials processed 958 cases and ordered repayments of $548,000. That figure jumped 64 percent in 1981-82 to 1,486 cases worth $848,000, said Larry Goolsby, chief of the state's food-stamp program.

CROWNED MISS WORLD — Chestnut-haired Mariasela Alvarez Lebron of the Dominican Republic is crowned Miss World in London by the 1981 winner, Pilin Leon of Venezuela. (AP Laserphoto)

Miss World From Dominican Republic

LONDON (AP) — The new Miss World, Mariasela Alvarez Lebron of the Dominican Republic, began her one-year reign in joy and disbelief at a coronation ball that lasted until the early hours of the morning.

"I never expected to be crowned," the lanky 22-year-old architecture student told reporters with a grin. "When it all started, I hoped to get a final place, but not to be crowned."

More than 1,000 people, including the 68 contestants, packed the Great Room of London's Grosvenor House hotel for the dinner and dancing organized by the beauty pageant's organizers.

Earlier, a few miles away at the Royal Albert Hall, Miss Alvarez Lebron beat 67 other national beauty queens to win the coveted contest and prizes worth more than $48,000.

The new Miss World is the daughter of a biology professor and the youngest of four children. She said the title made her feel "wonderful" and was "a great thing for my country."

"We are a poor country, but we have a very kind people," she said.

Miss Alvarez Lebron listed her hobbies as gymnastics, volleyball, singing and ballet.

She has chestnut hair and eyes to match. When told she resembles last year's winner, Pilin Leon of Venezuela, she said modestly: "I've been told I look like her, but I don't think so. She is very beautiful."

In second place in the Thursday night contest was Miss Finland, 20-year-old model Sari Kaarina Aspholm, and the third place went to the local favorite, 20-year-old Della Dolan, of the United Kingdom.

Miss United States, 23-year-old Luann Cauchey of Abilene, Texas, was among the seven finalists but did not place. Ms. Cauchey could not be found at her hotel immediately after the contest, and efforts to reach her parents, who are accompanying her, also proved unsuccessful.

Miss Cauchey, a blond, blue-eyed employee with a Houston advertising firm, was quoted by her companions as saying that this was her first trip outside the United States and Mexico, and she was hoping to see more of Europe, particularly Switzerland, before returning home.

The U.S. beauty queen wore a brown shirt and black cowboy hat in the national costume section of the contest and changed to pink — her favorite color — for the swimsuit parade.

For evening dress — a section restricted to the 15 semifinalists only — she wore a tight-fitting royal blue costume.

Before the contest, Miss Cauchey, a church-going Methodist, had protested to the competition's organizers about some of the poses she said cameramen asked contestants to adopt during swimsuit rehearsals.

Miss Alvarez Lebron won a check for the equivalent of $8,000, a year-long modeling contract guaranteeing an income of $40,000 and a screen test arranged by Dodi Fayed, executive producer of the Oscar-winning British movie, Chariots of Fire.

Miss Finland received $3,200 and Miss United Kingdom $1,600. The U.S. beauty queen, like other finalists, won $800.

Millions of viewers in more than 40 countries saw the beauty pageant live on television, the organizers said.

The competition's nine judges included Kimberley

Santos of Guam, who was promoted to Miss World in 1980 when Gabriella Brum of West Germany quit less than 24 hours after winning the crown.

Burley Prices Disappointing

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Burley tobacco farmers say they aren't satisfied with the prices they're getting at this year's markets, and they're upset because they say tobacco companies asked them to plant more tobacco after last year's low supply.

Prices increased on Asheville's burley market Thursday after a lackluster opening day performance Wednesday, when sales were temporarily halted at one warehouse.

A nationwide burley crop of more than 750 million pounds has been projected, but prices are lower than expected as buyers have said they will require only about 650 million pounds.

"Now they've got it," one farmer said, "and they don't want to pay for it."

The situation in the first two days of sales on North Carolina markets was a far cry from this time last year when the crop was short and buyers took anything and everything.

Upset by lower-than-expected prices, farmers stopped the sale in the middle of the fourth row at Day's Big Red Warehouse, where burley sold in the first row for $1.75 a pound. The second row brought about $1.65 and by the time the buyers started working the third row, the price was down to $1.55 a pound.

After a cooling-off period, the buyers and sellers went back to auctions and started over again.

Prices were a little better the second time around the floor, but farmers said they still weren't satisfied.

No incidents were reported at Boone and West Jefferson, North Carolina's other two burley markets on the first two days of sales.

Warehousemen at both markets said some farmers had complained they were disappointed in the prices, but sales have moved uninterrupted.

Thursday's sales in Asheville seemed improved.

"It was the difference in night and day," said James W. Stewart, owner of Planter's Warehouse in Asheville, after Thursday's first sale. "I don't know what caused it."

Stewart said he expected Thursday's average at his warehouse to be about $1.80 per pound, up about 5 cents a pound from the previous day.

Top quality leaf tied in the traditional hands and sorted by grades Thursday went for $1.88 to $1.91 a pound at the Asheville market. Good leaf ungraded in sheets sold for about $1.51 per pound.

"People who are grading their tobacco are getting more for it. It really pays off," Stewart said.

Soviets Confiscate Camera Equipment

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt says the confiscation of a Raleigh television crew's camera equipment in Moscow this week is a "terrible" action on the part of the Soviets.

A U.S. State Department spokesman said Thursday that the confiscation of the camera equipment from a reporter and photographer for WRAL-TV is an early sign of tighter security by the new Soviet regime, the television station reported Thursday.

WRAL-TV said a high ranking State Department spokesman, who asked to remain anonymous, said his agency has been watching the country closely for such signs since Yuri Andropov took over after the death of President Leonid Brezhnev.

Reporter Shelly Kofler and photographer Bruce Witmann of WRAL-TV arrived in Moscow with the N.C. Friendship Force Monday night. Their camera equipment was immediately confiscated by customs agents and has not been returned, the station said.

Hunt, whose wife, Carolyn, is traveling with the Friendship Force, said he feels it is good for the American press to accompany the Friendship groups into the Soviet Union. Hunt labeled the Soviet actions "terrible."

Tar Heel Participation In 'Smokeout' Said Up

By STEVEN K. PAULSON
Associated Press Writer
Turkey sandwiches took the place of cigarettes in many parts of North Carolina Thursday as the American Cancer Society used various incentives to lure smokers into participating in this year's Great American Smokeout campaign.

Events throughout the state Thursday included a cold-turkey sandwich giveaway in Charlotte, a giant ashtray in Shelby for smokers to douse their cigarettes, a media campaign in Winston-Salem, headquarters of R.J. Reynolds Tobacco, and a quit-smoking booth at Seymour Johnson Air Force Base.

At Chowan County high schools, students were served turkey sandwich lunches to call attention to the anti-smoking campaign. Marilyn Morris, spokesman for the society's North Carolina division, said North Carolina's participation in the nationwide event increased this year. She said 40 of the cancer society's 104 units statewide participated this year, up from 33 the year before.

"In some places, the participation in the communities has been very great. This tends to be larger in big cities, such as Charlotte, Greensboro and Raleigh. In rural counties where a lot of tobacco is grown, they are not as interested in the smokeout," she said.

Mrs. Morris said the North Carolina division of the American Cancer Society refused to participate in 1978, but decided to join in 1979. Since then, participation has increased, from 26 units in 1979 to 40 in 1982.

She said the agency has not received any criticism from tobacco manufacturers or growers for its participation.

David Fishel, a spokesman for R.J. Reynolds Tobacco, said sales figures show that previous smokeouts haven't had much impact on the tobacco industry.

"We're looking for a record year in terms of cigarette sales this year," he said. Fishel said cigarette manufacturers sold more than 600 billion cigarettes last year, and the industry expects demand to be up 1.5 percent this year.

Asked for his reaction to the smokeout, state Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham said that it is an individual's choice to quit smoking.

"Our concern about tobacco is economic," he said. "It is a $1.4 billion crop in North Carolina, and to do away with tobacco would create economic chaos within the state and within other flue-cured and burley tobacco-producing states."

FASHION HAIRDOS...before and after. Yes it's the same woman in both pictures. Mario Morelli of Phoenix, Ariz. transformed his model's long hair into a short coiffure during a show of hair stylists in New York. (AP Laserphoto)

Neat Hairdos Back In Style

By EILEEN PUTMAN
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Tousled, unruly tresses may have worked for the rebellious '60s or the changeable '70s, but it's the sleek, short cut that's turning heads in the '80s. Neatness is finally in.

Hair harmonizes with the new fashions: slim, disciplined, clean-lined and with a definite direction. There are curls, but they are on top.

Like the new spring fashions, the look is reminiscent of the '50s and '40s, and some women may find themselves emerging from the beauty salon resembling Lucille Ball's curly redhead on the old "I Love Lucy" show.

The look is full on top and slim and blunt on the sides, like the pompadour, French twist or bob. It is functional and flattering for the busy, somewhat older, modern woman.

It takes special help to carry it off, and so pomades, perms, hairsprays, setting gels and other beauty aids are making a comeback.

But women need not adopt the rigid plastered look of the '50s. The new setting aids rely on a softer touch, say stylists who met here last week at a show by Zotos hair products manufacturers and Intercoiffure, a stylists' association.

"They're using sprays and gels but the look is fuller, more natural than the '50s. Hair was too polished in the '50s," said Dwight Miller, a stylist from Westport, Conn.

All this has been a boon for the hair care industry. The permanent wave — which ranges in cost from $25 to $100 — is enjoying its biggest popularity since its inception 50 years ago.

Of the $11 billion women spent last year in hair salons, $3.5 billion was spent on permanents. Stylists expect the figure to go much higher as the short, full-volume look replaces long, heavy hair.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Have you noticed? There are no more Mr. Nice Guys in television commercials anymore. The hucksters who used to refer to their opposition as Brand X are gone. The housewives who diplomatically referred to the rival product as the "other leading toothpaste" are no more. The car salesman who used to slip over his competitor's car in a sheet went out with ring around the collar.

I can't remember who put on the gloves first, but one day I was horrified to hear Hertz call Avis by name and Coke to acknowledge Pepsi existed. (Somehow I figured they had just heard rumors.)

From that day forward, there were no holds barred. The consumers watched the war on their television screens. We saw who had the catsup that was runny and which one took three years to get out of the neck of the bottle because of its thickness.

We saw the women who dedicated their lives to searching for a peanut butter that wasn't oily and when they found one dropped the other one like a bad habit.

We saw a stupid husband drag in big-name cold remedies that only made his wife sicker when indeed she had ordered the one with the shot glass on top.

They named names. Lately, one of the more interesting commercial battles taking place is on fast food commercials. It's called the Battle of the Burgers. I never knew you could say so much about a hamburger before.

One blasted its competition, saying they turned out burgers like a $3,000 flat house and let them sit around and turn cold.

They countered with the speed-factor, saying they could fill your order in less than a minute or they'd give you a free burger.

Another emporium said they customized their burgers and if you didn't want the pickle or the lettuce, you didn't have to have it.

One fast foods chain started to tout their exotic menu and said they'd love to compare it with their competition, but their competition didn't have anything to compare it with... yet.

The latest drama is a three-way deal to determine if Burger King's $20 million advertising campaign touting a bigger hamburger than McDonald's and Wendy's was true. It was.

The commercials are more fun these days than "The Dukes of Hazzard" on a Saturday night. Tune in next week for the next episode.

The honoree was remembered with a corsage of yellow and lavender pom poms tied with white ribbon.

The living room was decorated with white bells, ivy, lavender daisies and pom poms with lavender and purple streamers.

A hand-cut white linen cloth covered the refreshment table which was centered with a white bell surrounded by lavender daisies and ivy with streamers.

Mrs. William E. Moseley was assisting hostess.

The Public's Business

The Greenville City Board of Education — and some other public boards — has a serious problem. It is a tendency to discuss the public's business behind closed doors.

Specifically it happened in discussions this week by the city school board about the county board of education's proposal that a study of school merger be instituted. The city board concurred with the recommendation and stipulated that the study be completed within six months and that definite recommendations be forthcoming.

Unfortunately the board members left the public meeting and went behind closed doors to discuss the issue. Asked about this breach of public trust, Supt. Delma Blinson offered the oldest and lamest excuse in the business. He said that "in discussion of personnel matters during the closed session, someone raised a question on the board's response (to the study proposal), so we carried out discussions on the matter while in executive session."

That is poppycock. The laws of North Carolina are very specific that the public's business should be carried on in public meetings. Only sensitive personnel matters or real estate negotiations are exempted. If we can judge by the amount of time some of our boards are spending behind closed doors there must be a monumental amount of real estate transactions being carried on.

Let us keep the taxpayers' business public. We can't see where any public official has anything to lose by fully informing the people.

Tax Still Has To Be Paid

Internal Revenue Service form 1040EZ is with us and the service says that 22 million U.S. taxpayers will find it easier to file their taxes.

The EZ could be read "Easy" and it earned its suffix because it only requires 11 entries to complete. It is designed for people claiming one personal exemption, and with income from wages, salaries, tips and up to $400 interest.

No doubt the new form will be a boon to millions of taxpayers who don't need accountants to figure out their capital gains. It is short and to the point.

Of course, while it may be easy to comprehend and to fill out, like all other tax return forms, it doesn't make paying the tax any easier.

CAMA Up Again

By PAUL T. O'CONNOR
RALEIGH — The Coastal Area Management Act (CAMA) will come up before the legislature again in 1983 and Sen. Mel Daniels of Pasquotank County, one of the act's strongest critics, says he'd like to see some changes made. But Joe Grimsley, secretary of natural resources and community development, says he'll oppose those changes and predicts that the General Assembly will also.

CAMA regulates development within the state's 20 coastal counties. It calls for the establishment of zoning and land use planning within the region and sets aside designated areas of environmental concern — areas like tidal swamps, marshes, lowlands. Activities within those designated areas are restricted with special permission required from either the state or a local governing body.

Daniels' complaints about CAMA led to the formation of a special legislative study commission after the 1981 session. It's expected to report within several weeks and its recommendations are likely to be considered in the next session. The legislature will also have to consider Grimsley's request for state funding to pick up $1 million, of CAMA money being cut out of the federal budget.

Daniels would like the 15-member Coastal Area Regulatory Commission expanded to 24 members. He says each of the 20 covered counties should have a representative and the other four seats would go to the experts which the law requires. Grimsley says he'd oppose this because "you can't manage a regulatory with that many people. And, also, why should a county with 5,000 people have the same representation as Wilmington?"

On the other hand, Daniels wants the 47-member advisory council, which works alongside the commission, trimmed down. He says that's too many people to be effective. In an advisory role, Grimsley sees no problem with having that many members.

In the 1981 session, money was appropriated to buy beachfront property for with that many people. And, also, why should a county with 5,000 people have the same representation as Wilmington?"

Public hearings on CAMA were held up and down the coast this fall and Grimsley and Daniels have different opinions of what was said. Grimsley voiced approval of CAMA and that many said they'd like to see the act strengthened. Daniels was quoted in one newspaper as saying CAMA's supporters "orchestrated" the public hearings. He agrees that local government officials strongly support the act saying they like the money CAMA brings them for land use planning. He says many other people don't support the act.

CAMA's got some powerful foes in the Senate where Grimsley last session feared a move to repeal the act. But CAMA has one powerful supporter, also. Gov. Jim Hunt helped get the act through the legislature in 1973 and he'll work to protect it again this year, Grimsley vows.

PAUL T. O'CONNOR

public access to the state's beaches. A Daniels' sponsored provision has the state buying land which CAMA forbids development on. Now Daniels wants that philosophy extended to other property which the coastal commission restricts development on. He says the state should either buy this land from its owners or provide them with some kind of tax relief. Grimsley says he doesn't see any legislative support for such a move. RECEPTION COMMITTEE!

USSR Election Night

As I predicted six months ago, Yuri Andropov became the new General Secretary of the Communist Party. But last Thursday was still one of the most exciting election nights in Russian history.

"Good evening. Welcome to Soviet Broadcasting System's election night coverage. I'm Dan Ratevich, and we have tonight Lesley Stahlingrad, Dmitri Brinksley, Igor Brokaw, and Ilyich Moyers, giving you latest results on exciting election for successor to Comrade Leonid Brezhnev, who just went to that great Politburo in the sky.

"Lesley, we hear you have early report from Odessa." "I do, Dan. Odessa polls closed just two minutes ago, and the 'SBS Exit Poll' indicates big victory for Communist Party there. Odessa has always been bellwether for how rest of country will go. The big turnout for Communists in Odessa means encouraging sign for Communist Party in other parts of Union of Soviet Socialist Republics."

"Igor, how are we doing in Minsk and Smolensk?" "Our exit polls in Minsk and Smolensk indicate possible landslide for Kremlin." "How do you explain this?" "Exit pollsters found voters very unhappy with no food in shops, shoddy consumer goods, no housing, and rotten winter. They say they voted Communist to send a message to Moscow."

"Dmitri Brinksley, how do you read these results so far?" "Is sign Soviet people are fed up with system and want change. Our SBS breakdown shows old people are worried about social security, women don't like nuclear arms race, young people want Soviets out of Afghanistan, and factory bosses are against government regulations. It always happens in off-year election."

ART BUCHWALD

"Let's go to Ilyich Moyers for in-depth commentary on what this means for presidential candidates."

"We shouldn't read too much into early election results, Dan. Although it is now predicted Yuri Andropov, former head of KGB, got 99 percent of votes in his district, he still has an image problem. Andropov is household name in Soviet Union, and while everyone is still scared silly of him, he is dull speaker and has no television appeal. Konstantin Chernenko was handpicked successor by Brezhnev but is 71 years old and may be considered too young for the job. Moscow party boss Viktor Grishin is dark horse, and Defense Minister Ustinov has built up war chest from military which puts other candidates at big disadvantage when it comes to buying television time. At the moment head of Soviet Union is still up for grabs."

"Lesley, you have new results from Ukraine."

"Yes, Dan. The Ukraine, with three percent of the votes in, is going heavily for Andropov. This is one of the places the KGB Political Action Committee concentrated on because farmers were very unhappy with Chernenko's refusal to buy enough grain from the United States."

"Dmitri, you wanted to say something?" "I would just like to say the large dissident vote in Siberia that the Pravda News Poll had predicted didn't materialize. Despite appeals from the 'Voice of America' the dissidents stayed home, and that could account for the overwhelming sweep of the Communist Party in Dudinka, where Viktor Grishin counted on a low turnout."

"Igor, you've been watching Tashkent. Any trends there we should be aware of?" "They seem to be having some trouble with the voting machines in Tashkent, and at the moment SBS is listing this district as the only one in the Soviet Union 'too close to call.'"

New Labels Are Useful

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan hasn't been overthrown, only overtaken by events. He said it would take a palace coup to make him see the need for any tax increase, but he's considering one now.

He has, however, given it an alias. That is standard procedure any time the Reagan administration discusses proposals to raise more federal revenue.

The five-cent-a-gallon gasoline tax increase now under consideration is, by Reagan's account, not a tax but a user fee. It would look like a tax, and act like a tax, and the administration called the gas tax a tax when Reagan proposed to return half of it to the states as part of his "new federalism" program.

The proceeds of an increase, about $5.5 billion a year, would be used to rebuild roadways and bridges along the federal interstate highway system. Not incidentally, the projects involved would create an estimated 320,000 jobs.

According to the president, the $100 billion tax increase enacted last summer was misrepresented as the biggest tax increase ever, when it really should have been described as tax reform.

Before that, the assumed name for federal tax increases was revenue enhancement.

The president said on Sept. 28 that there would be none in his new budget, under any name. "Will you flatly rule out any tax increases, revenue enhancers or specifically an increase in the gasoline tax?" he was asked at a news conference.

"Unless there's a palace coup and I'm overthrown — or overthrown — no, I don't see the necessity for that," he replied.

But he has been overtaken, by rising unemployment, with about 11.6 million Americans now out of work. The pressure for a jobs program — public works, tax incentives or some combination — is coming now from Republicans as well as from Democrats.

Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., chairman of the Budget Committee, says the new budget should put the emphasis on jobs, even if it costs a little inflation. Chastened by the election returns that cost them 26 House seats, other Republicans are thinking that way, too.

The highway projects that would be financed with the gas tax money would give the administration something to show them, and also a counterproposal to most costly, ambitious Democratic demands for public works jobs.

But Reagan plays down the job-creating aspect of the highway plan. "I don't view this proposal as, let's say, a job creating program although, obviously, there would be jobs created by going forward with that effort," he said at his Nov. 11 news conference.

Actually, 320,000 jobs, which wouldn't be available until the tax was passed, projects were chosen, and contracts were let, would not do much to cope with unemployment. An administration move in that direction would be a token, not a solution.

More to the point, Reagan always has scorned Democratic calls for public works jobs programs as makework, quick-fix solutions that have failed before and would again.

"Let's quit kidding ourselves," he said Tuesday. "We will not solve the problems of unemployed auto workers and steel workers with another giant, temporary, public works program."

"Over the seven-year period ending in 1981, government spent $66 billion on so-called jobs programs and during those seven years unemployment increased and the economy worsened."

Reagan said a 10-year trend of rising unemployment "was not caused by highway potholes." But he added that highways and bridges need repairs, "and I am considering an initiative for that."

By handling the matter that way, Reagan can keep criticizing Democratic jobs proposals, while pursuing his own, limited public works plan.

Other Editors Say Going Under

(Laurinburg Exchange)

What would be your reaction if you learned that more than half of the fourth graders in the Scotland County school system were carriers of a disease which, given the right conditions, could kill them?

Probably not the same reaction you would have if you learned that a large percent of those same students can't swim. Yet lacking the ability to swim contributes to more deaths of young people than any single disease.

A swimming program being conducted at South Scotland and East Laurinburg primary schools for fourth graders has turned up some shocking statistics about the number of students in Scotland County who cannot swim.

At South Scotland, 43 of the 91 fourth-grade students participated in the swimming program were categorized as non-swimmers after a first-day test. At East Laurinburg 67 of 77 fourth-grade students in the program were categorized as non-swimmers.

That doesn't mean the students didn't know a wide variety of strokes. It means they would probably drown if they suddenly found themselves in water over their heads.

Too many people look on swimming as an elitist-type sport reserved for the country-club set. To the contrary, it is a deterrent to injury and possible accidental death that should be taught to everyone.

The pilot swimming program at the two schools has been a success so far. But the school system cannot be expected in the near future to be able to teach basic swimming skills to all students. With the closing of the county's only public swimming pool by the Parks and Recreation Department, a lack of basic swimming skills is likely to become even more widespread.

Right now it's up to parents to take advantage of any opportunities — as limited as they may be — to insure their children's safety in the water by helping them learn how to swim.

Small Businesses Trim Prices

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — A

survey of small-business firms showed that one of every five lowered its prices in the third quarter of the year, even though costs for many of the companies continued to rise.

The 20 percent rate of price-cutting was the highest ever recorded in the nine-year-old quarterly survey, conducted among companies of the National Federation of Independent Business, which claims more than 500,000 members.

"The major impetus behind the price declines has been high interest rates and weak demand," said Professor William Dunkelberg of Purdue University who, with Professor Jonathan Scott of Southern Methodist University, analyzed the results.

The pressure of high interest and low demand, he said "forced cash-hungry firms to cut prices in order to reduce inventory and maintain cash flow." In doing so, he said, many companies failed to cover their costs.

The consequences are mixed.

"Firms are still being squeezed," said Dunkelberg. "They need to raise prices or cut costs in order to generate more cash and strengthen their financial structure."

With interest rates falling, however, indications are strong that some companies will be able to solve the cash problem by lowering costs. This is especially true, the professor said, if the recovery is strong enough to raise output-per-manhour faster than increases in wage costs.

"But," he said, "if wage gains pick up, or the recovery is too weak to substantially improve productivity, firms will have to raise prices in order to survive."

Because of weak demand, however, the latter option seems to be denied small businesses. Only 19 percent said they planned immediate price increases, a record low level in bold contrast to percentages near 70 in the 1970s.

If demand does indeed pick up, and if companies manage to keep their costs down, the beginnings of a return to financial health could begin as early as the next quarter, Dunkelberg said. Many companies have sharply lowered their breakeven points, he said, and can respond quickly to renewed economic growth.

The companies that would seem best off under such circumstances would be those without pressing needs to raise cash to retire previous obligations and "reliquify" balance sheets. But if deflation sets in — that is, a long period of falling prices, rather than simply declining rates of price increases, as in disinflation — the consequences could be serious.

Then, warned Dunkelberg, "the burden of repaying the 'survival' debts incurred during the past few years will increase," making it difficult for companies to raise capital for rebuilding inventories. Many companies, he indicated, might be prevented from participating in whatever recovery occurs.

The evidence provided by the small-business survey indicates that Federal Reserve policy has been effective in moderating inflation, but it suggests also that the goal was reached only after a great deal of bankruptcies and pain.

The same survey produced the 11th quarterly employment decline in the past 12 quarters. Only 9 percent of the 2,026-firm sample reported unfilled jobs, the lowest figure since 1973, when the survey was initiated.

Dunkelberg expects the employment situation to remain depressed for many more weeks.

"Because of the fragile financial condition of small firms, there will be no new hiring in anticipation of recovery," the professor said. "Small business cannot afford to speculate on the recovery."

But some light finally did appear on the small-business horizon. For the first time in a year-and-a-half the percentage of companies planning capital outlays, such as for equipment, vehicles and structures, rose.

Dunkelberg said he considered the 24 percent figure low when compared to the 30 percent-plus rates of capital spending in 1978 and 1979, "but consistent with the decline in long-term interest rates."

Seek Fresh Standards For Day-Care Centers

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — New standards for day-care centers should include specific adult-child ratios, the amount of play space available and set qualifications for staff members, says the Mecklenburg County Council for children.

Dolly Tate, president of the council, says the state should establish a grading system for day-care centers and establish minimum qualifications for staff members who work with children.

She says doing those things would make it easier for parents to judge what type of care their children are receiving.

"We feel that every mother wants the best for her child," said council President Dolly Tate. "These are things we feel are important. You've got to have some standards and a good staff."

The council's recommendations were made Wednesday to a legislative committee studying day care called for a three-tiered grading for North Carolina centers.

Under the council's proposals, top-level centers would have one adult to care for five infants. Adult-child ratios for 1-year olds would be one to six; for 2-year-olds, one to seven; for 3-year olds, one to 10; 4-year-olds, one to 12; 5-year-olds, one to 15; and for school-age children, one to 20.

The centers also would be required to have 100 square feet of outdoor play space for each child and to offer 12 hours of additional training for staff members each year.

Day-care centers falling into the two lower categories would have less stringent requirements.

The council also requested:

—Minimum qualifications for staff members who work in all types of day-care centers.

—State standards for family day-care homes — that is, homes that provide care for more than one child but less than six children. The council wants regulations to require annual sanitation and fire inspections.

—A change in the law that allows a day-care center to enroll 20 percent more children than it's licensed for. The council wants the over-enrollment figure reduced to 10 percent.

—Tax credits to employers who help employees with child-care expenses. The council wants the tax credit to be available to all employers who provide some form of financial assistance for day care, including employers who operate day-care centers on company property.

The legislative committee will study the proposals and may include some of them in a report to the Legislative Research Commission, which sends its findings to the General Assembly.

Book Week Is Observed

"Get Lost in a Book" is the theme for Children's Book Week which was celebrated at Elmhurst Elementary School Nov. 14-20. Many projects are being carried out to help students realize the importance of books.

Each class made decorations depicting their favorite books for the walls in the lunch room, and are having a READ IN each day when teachers and students stop everything for a reading time.

On Wednesday Mrs. Jane Maier was a guest storyteller. Other story tellers included: Hansy Jones, children's librarian at Sheppard Memorial Library; Charles Ross, director of instruction; Carolyn Ferebee, community-school coordinator; Bernie Colardo, a parent; and Leslie Washburn, principal of Elmhurst School. Delmar Blinson, superintendent, will tell stories later this month.

In addition to the guest storytellers, teachers and aides have been invited to visit another class during the week to read stories to children.

As for his earlier renunciation of a gasoline tax increase, Reagan told his latest news conference that meant "on the general subject of tax increases, as such, it would take a palace coup."

"But what we're talking about here is, also, and we have used the term to try and make people understand what it would be, that if we do it, it would be a user fee."

If there has been a coup, only the dictionary has been toppled.

Print New King James Bible

By GRAHAM HEATHCOTE
Associated Press Writer
LONDON — A new edition of the King James Bible appeared today in London, but unlike some modern versions it reads like the holy book first translated from Latin to English more than 300 years ago.

The latest revision, according to its British publisher, Samuel Bagster and Sons Ltd., introduces modern punctuation while strictly limiting changes to ensure the true meaning of the old language is preserved.

The Holy Bible: Revised Authorized Version is a new edition of the Authorized Version ordered by King James I of England in 1611. The king wanted to make the Bible available in English for the whole population, instead of only the educated who knew Latin.

The Bible Society in London, which owns more than 28,000 versions of the Bible in every published language, said the old Bible in the major revision of 1769 remains the most popular Bible among the world's Christians. The last version involved 24,000 changes.

In the new edition the word order of the old Bible is retained, but "you" and "your" are substituted for "thee," "thou" and "thine."

Verb endings are modernized, grammar updated and words which have changed their meaning over nearly four centuries have been replaced. There are footnotes giving alternative translations of words and phrases, explaining unusual words, citing cross-references between the Old and New Testaments, and variations in the surviving Greek manuscripts of the New Testament.

The new Bible first appeared in the United States Aug. 4 after seven years of work by 130 scholars in English-speaking countries. Then a British team "de-Americanized" the text, said Alan Matthews, managing director of the publishing company.

Bagster founded his religious publishing business in 1794 and his company's "Daily Light" religious readings were said to be the favorite texts of Queen Victoria.

"The new Bible was commissioned by Sam Moore, president of the Thomas Nelson Bible Co. in Nashville, Tenn., to retain as much as possible of the beauty and poetry of the original King James version and make word changes that were only absolutely necessary," Matthews said.

He said there have been about 40 new versions of the Bible in the last 30 years, "basically because Christendom wanted to put the Scriptures into today's languages. They didn't meet the needs of many people, who tend to associate the Bible with a black cover and 'Authorized Version' on the preface."

The new Bible, however, only comes in black in more expensively bound editions. The standard hardback has a brown cover and retails at $9.52.

Bagsters claim the new Bible is only the fifth revision since 1611 and the first since 1769, although that is doubted by some experts.

Two excerpts from the British edition indicate the moderate changes:

Old Testament, Authorized Version, Psalm 1: "Blessed is the man that walketh not in the council of the ungodly, nor standeth in the way of sinners, nor sitteth in the seat of the scornful."

Revised Authorized Version: "Blessed is the man who walks not in the council of the ungodly, nor stands in the path of sinners, nor sits in the seat of the scornful."

New Testament, Authorized Version, 1 Corinthians, 13:4: "Charity suffereth long, and is kind; charity envieth not; charity vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up..."

Revised Authorized Version: "Love suffers long and is kind; love does not envy; love does not parade itself, is not puffed up..."

Woolly Worms Signal Possibly Mild Winter

By ELISSA MCCRARY
Associated Press Writer
If the colors on woolly worms in the North Carolina mountains are any indication, this winter will be a mild one, says a researcher at Appalachian State University.

Dr. Sandra Glover says the hundreds of woolly worms she studied this year were browner in color and had few black bands on them.

"My studies showed that this winter will be similar to the winter of 1978-79," said Dr. Glover, who currently is on leave from the university to pursue further woolly worm studies. "I hate to say it will be a mild winter, but the worms indicate that it will be the least severe winter since I've been doing the studies."

"When I say winter, I mean the 13 weeks of winter beginning about Dec. 21 and running through March 21," she said. "The prediction doesn't apply to anything before or after those dates."

This is the eighth year Dr. Glover has conducted her woolly worm studies.

This year, she studied about 500 worms collected from mountain roadsides and about 200 worms she hatched in the biology laboratory.

Woolly worm predictions are based on the folk belief that the coloring of the worms in the fall is an indication of the winter to come. The more black on the brown-and-black striped worms, the colder or more severe the winter. More of the brown coloring means a milder winter.

Dr. Glover begins collecting the furry creatures for her studies every year on Oct. 1. She says she plans to collect the worms for two more years to try to determine if there's any truth about the worms and what, if any, environmental factors causes colors on the caterpillars to vary each year.

Dr. Glover says so far, she hasn't reached any conclusions in her 10 year study. "It looks like it's going to be very difficult to reach a conclusion in this study," she said. "I really don't know if at the end of the 10 years, I'll have an answer. I guess I'll just stick with it another two years and see what happens."

Dr. Glover also is conducting life-cycle studies on the worms, using baby woolies hatched in the lab. She says the baby worms are about the size of a pencil dot when they are hatched.

GOP Meets On Saturday

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — At least 250 Republicans are expected to attend the GOP's special convention Saturday to adopt a new platform and organizational plan.

The party also will hold a dinner Friday night to honor its recent congressional candidates, nearly all of whom lost in the Nov. 2 sweep by Democrats. Speaker for the dinner is Sen. John East, R-N.C.

About 150 people are expected to attend the dinner, said David Flaherty, state party chairman.

The convention will begin at 9 a.m. Saturday with platform revisions from 10 to 11 a.m. and discussion of the plan of organization from 11 a.m. to noon.

Proposed major changes in the plan of organization include designation of a coordinator for candidate recruitment and tightening attendance requirements for central and executive committee members.

Also to be discussed are proposals to require voters at precinct meetings and convention delegates to have been registered Republicans for at least 90 days and establish minimum numerical requirements for precinct organizations.

At the 1981 state convention in Wilmington, there were 2,300 delegates present to elect party officers. That's when Flaherty was re-elected to a two-year term.

TOWN OVERRUN
ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Afghan guerrillas have overrun the town of Rokha, one of two positions held by government security forces in the Panjsher Valley 70 miles north of Kabul, according to a report reaching Pakistan.

Our older citizens are many times the unfortunate victims of fraudulent schemes. Con artists are slick. A free brochure on Defensive Living for Older Adults is available at the Police Department.

Education Forum

ECU News Bureau
A regional public forum on ways of improving the quality of science and mathematics education has been scheduled for Dec. 1 at East Carolina University.

Panelists composed of leaders in education, industry and government are to address questions of community involvement in science and math education and of how to develop the social, economic and technological growth of the northeastern North Carolina region.

Sponsors of the forum are the Governor's Task Force on Science and Technology and the ECU Regional Development Institute and the ECU Rural Education Institute. The program is scheduled from 6 until 9 p.m. at the Willis Building, First and Reade Streets.

Moderators for the panels will be Dr. Francis Harrison, chair of the mathematics department, N.C. Wesleyan College, Rocky Mount, and Janice Faulkner, assistant to the director, ECU Regional Development Institute.

Teamsters Lose Union Election

LEXINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Workers at PPG Industries have voted against the Teamsters union, a sharp turnaround from two years ago when workers voted to join the union.

William H. Grant, Teamster organizer, said the 779-335 vote showed "a lot of workers just are not willing to tamper with the status quo" during tough economic times.

Life As It's Lived

Belief In Enchantment Belongs To Every Child

By GAIL MICHAELS
There are two kinds of children in this world: the ones who believe in magic and the ones who don't.

To differentiate between them is easy. As a general rule, children who believe in magic are enthusiastic and brimming over with an endless store of wonderful, crazy ideas. There's a delicious touch of the untamed about them. Being around them is soul-stirring.

Children who don't believe in magic are all too often pedantic and self-righteous. As Christmas nears, they turn into small Scrooges, intent upon imposing their colorless views on the dwindling circle of believers. For the unbelievers, Christmas is merely an occasion for counting the loot.

For the believers the toys are almost an afterthought. The beauty of the Christmas tree, the anticipation of fat jolly elves and dainty reindeer, the awesomeness of the Christmas story, these are what delight them. And if they have temporarily convinced themselves that there is no Santa Claus, they plunge even more deeply into the preparations, weaving yuletide tales to thrill the hearts of little brothers and sisters until Christmas Eve when they all drift off into sleep hoping to hear in spite of themselves the sound of jinglebells on the roof.

Believers can exhaust an adult with their energy, but it's far more exhausting to be in the presence of a 7- or 8-year-old cynic. There's something disquieting about a child that age who is already jaded, whose horizons are already narrowing. He has lost the childlike capacity to embrace the world so apparent in my pukish daughter as she sidles up to me with a conspiratorial look and tells me, "Tracy and I made a witch's brew for good luck yesterday, and I can just feel it working!"

Her world is enchanted; the possibilities are boundless. She asserts that she doesn't really, truly believe in fairies, but her eyes widen as I tell her of the time that I peered at sunset into a small wooded area along a lonesome road in Ireland and was almost certain that I saw the tip of a small coat whisked away into the misty green. "Did you really, Mommy?" she whispers.

Children need to believe in magic. For that matter so do adults. Perhaps that accounts for the stunning popularity of "E.T." We all yearn for something beyond ourselves. To harbor some sense of enchantment in a mechanistic world is a source of hope.

It's possible that the hope is unfounded; whether or not this makes it less important is a thought that occurred to me after I had been outside pulling up the remains of summer's flowers and noticed a plastic Ziploc bag half-filled with dirt and twigs and withered flower petals. It was a bumblebee trap, prepared with painstaking care by Meg and two friends during one of the balmy days of early fall when the bees were sluggish and hopefully not as wary as they should be. The idea was that the bee, attracted to the flower petals, would get caught in the debris. Just for good measure the children had chanted a spell over it. As I had foreseen, the trap hadn't worked.

Driven by a determination to tidy my surroundings, I picked the trap up and dropped it into my lawn and leaf bag to be buried ignominiously in some landfill. Now I'm sorry. I wish I had left it there in the yard for the next warm day and a new crop of bumblebees.

Artificial Seaweed Said Helping

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) - Artificial seaweed "planted" offshore from the Cape Hatteras Lighthouse is responsible for a buildup of more than 200 feet of beach around the lighthouse, says Gov. Jim Hunt.

"Apparently, the artificial seaweed is really working," Hunt said at his weekly news conference Thursday.

Hunt said his measurements showed that the water is 345 feet from the base of the lighthouse compared with about 100 feet last year.

Hunt and Linville developer Hugh Morton, both in the Save the Cape Hatteras Lighthouse Committee, flew to the 112-year-old lighthouse Wednesday to examine efforts to protect it from erosion.

The committee has spent $165,000 to implant 5,500 units of artificial seaweed, Seascape, in the ocean near the lighthouse. The Seascape is designed to slow the water current and cause sand to drop down and build up the beach.

The artificial seaweed was developed by Bill Garrett, a Du Pont engineer, developed the process on his own time. He planted the first 500 units of the seaweed last year. Garrett a crew of diver just finished planting the other 5,000 units, which they hope will form an artificial reef off the coast.

"Everybody" is really elated at the way things have gone up to this point," Morton said. "It worked even faster than we thought it would."

Hunt said he believed recent storms helped build up the beach because the more turbulent waters stirred up a great deal of sand that was collected by the Seascape.

Morton said the committee hopes to raise $1 million and already has received $275,000. He said most of the efforts to shore up the base of the lighthouse are complete until next spring, when officials will re-evaluate the situation.

"What we have done is not going to finish it. There is more work to be done," Morton said.

The artificial seaweed is designed to work much like real seaweed. Garrett says the base of each unit is filled with sand to anchor it. Rows of synthetic fronds that extend from the base slow the ocean's current, which is laden with sand, causing the sand to drop to the ocean bottom between the fronds and the lighthouse.

Charge Rape By Ex-Candidate

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) - A Chapel Hill man who twice ran unsuccessfully for sheriff of Orange County was arrested and charged Wednesday with the first-degree rape of a 7-year-old girl.

Eugene Richard Mauer was released on $10,000 bond. He appeared in Chapel Hill District Court Thursday where his probable cause hearing was set for Dec. 7.

According to the arrest warrant, the crime with which Mauer is charged occurred Oct. 8.

SBI agents handled the arrest at the request of District Attorney Wade Barber Jr., who said that request was made "because of our desire to avoid any appearance or suspicion on anyone's part of political motivations regarding this investigation."

Mauer, who operates a construction business and ran unsuccessfully for sheriff in 1978, was one of six candidates who ran in the Democratic primary in June. His 67 votes received were the least of the candidates.

Pentagon Adopts A Polygraph Policy On Sensitive Positions

WASHINGTON (AP) - Senior Pentagon officials say a new Defense Department policy may force thousands of civilian and military personnel to choose between taking a lie detector test or losing access to highly secret information.

Any person a sensitive job who refused a request to take a polygraph examination would be shifted to a non-sensitive job, according to the officials, who requested anonymity.

If a person took a test and flunked it, the officials said Thursday, this likely would serve as a "flare" and probably would lead to a deeper security investigation.

Catto pictured it. The revised regulations for the department as a whole and the special program put into effect in August for the much smaller group of those dealing with what is called "Sensitive Compartmented Information" of a very secret nature would not force anybody to take a lie detector test.

A memo signed by Deputy Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci, a former high official in the Central Intelligence Agency, said that "a strong ... individual security assessment process is of fundamental importance" in keeping tabs on those with access to the highly secret information. "Individuals cleared for access to Special Compartmented Information (SCI) shall be advised that they may be requested to take a polygraph examination to be conducted on an aperiodic (random) basis at any time after the initial clearance," Carlucci's memo said.

Close Election Revives Tales Of Chicago Voting

By JAMES LITKE
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — The dead no longer vote in Chicago, but the closest race for governor in Illinois history has revived this city's image as a town where names travel regularly from the cemetery to the polling booth.

Reports of "moist ballots" too wet to feed through vote-counting machines and the disappearance of ballots that later turned up in automobile trunks and shopping bags reminded people of the glory days of the Cook County Democratic machine.

"It used to be such an obvious thing," mused Chicago Sun-Times columnist Mike Royko. "There's less and less stealing (of votes) going on for a number of reasons."

"First, there's more and more exposure. For another thing, there's the (U.S.) Justice Department," he said. "A lot of people have been indicted and convicted in the past for the real flagrant stuff."

And the man who helped drive such practices underground, James "Big Jim" Thompson, is the same man who barely escaped for a third term as governor in the recently completed general election.

As a U.S. attorney in Chicago, Thompson helped lead an election cleanup drive in the early 1970s. A decade later the Republican governor faced a surprisingly stiff challenge Nov. 2 from Democrat Adlai Stevenson III. Thompson was considered a clear favorite, but an unexpectedly heavy turnout in Chicago tightened the race.

According to an Associated Press survey of the state's 102 counties, Thompson now leads Stevenson by 4,941 votes out of more than 3.6 million cast, a margin of less than two-tenths of 1 percent.

Thompson is expected to be certified the official winner of the election when the State Board of Elections meets Monday in Springfield. However, Stevenson says he will ask for a recount and even has gone so far as to meet with a "transition team" in case a new tabulation declares him the winner.

Chicago residents vote in one of the nation's largest jurisdictions — more than 1.5 million registered voters, overwhelmingly Democratic, divided among 2,910 precincts. They are handed a ballot, they punch a hole next to the candidate of their choice, and hand it over to an election judge. The judge puts the completed ballots in a sealed voting box, which is opened when the polls officially close.

Under Illinois law, a count must be done in each precinct. That is where the problems developed. The election judges, aided by the latest in computer technology, made the same old human errors, leaving behind the computer tapes and data packs necessary for an official count.

In some cases, even the voting boxes — the bottom line should tallying disputes arise — were left behind.

Suddenly, the old accounts of the city's reputation as the last big bastion of graft, intimidation and vote fraud were resurrected. Nothing illegal happened this time around — nothing "verifiable" anyway, the Justice Department says. It only looked that way.

Even Republicans seemed to get involved, especially after ballots from 64 suburban Cook County precincts, with GOP leanings, were reported as being "too moist" to be tallied by machine. They had to be taken to a warehouse where they were dried and counted.

Suburban election officials attributed the problem to nearly four days of rain and the sweaty palms of voters who stood in long lines to cast ballots.

In Chicago, election officials discovered ballots missing from 15 precincts. The next day, empty ballot boxes were found in five of those precincts.

But by the time the city's official canvass was completed last week, all the ballots had turned up. Some were discovered in the trunk of a car, others were found in a shopping bag behind a desk in a precinct office. Not surprisingly, the votes were in line with how the rest of the city voted — "Punch 10," a straight Democratic ticket.

But there may be more problems.

Earlier this week, U.S. Attorney Dan K. Webb said he is looking into "more significant and specific" vote-fraud allegations lodged recently with his office. He declined to discuss specific charges.

"My favorite election story," recalled Royko, "was one that took place in 1960s when the (Democratic) ward committeemen used to bring results to the old Sherman Hotel to report directly to Mayor (Richard J.) Daley."

"Bernie Neistein lived on the lakefront, but he was still boss of the 29th, one of the legendary wards on the West Side long after it had gone almost completely black," he continued. "Well, somebody asked him how it went and he says 'One of my precinct captains delivered his precinct 300-0.'"

"So one of the guys yells back at Bernie. 'Whaddya, nuts? You wanna get the feds in here? Give the Republican 10 votes.'"

SAPLINGS COME HOME — Saplings of cherry blossom trees which had been sent to the U.S. in 1912 to be planted on the bank of the Potomac River in Washington, D.C., were planted Thursday at Toneri Park in Tokyo. Over 300 persons, including the Governor of Tokyo and representatives from the U.S. and the American Embassy attended the planting ceremony. The Potomac cherry blossom trees were presented to the U.S. 70 years ago to promote friendship between the two countries. But the mother trees, which had been growing along the Ara River were cut down during World War II because their saplings were flowering in the country of the enemy. U.S. First Lady Nancy Reagan promised to send back some saplings of the cherry blossom trees growing along the Potomac in February last year. (AP Laserphoto)

New Use For An Aging Hospital

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — About 2,000 inmates may be transferred to Dorothea Dix Hospital if the state's oldest psychiatric hospital is turned over to the Department of Corrections, state officials say.

James C. Woodard, secretary of the Department of Corrections, said Thursday that plans are now in the talking stage for the transfer, but that nothing has been finalized.

"That kind of facility was built with security in mind, and while it's not the way we'd build it if we were building something new, it could be converted to our uses far less expensively than we could build it," Woodard said of the Dix plant.

The state's four psychiatric hospitals have been operating at 80 percent to 85 percent capacity in recent months while the state's prison system is overcrowded with 17,400 inmates, officials said.

The facility now has 1.4 million square feet of space, 800,000 of which is currently in use.

Airline Plans Resume Service

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Sunbird Airlines of Denver, N.C., announced Thursday that it plans to resume service to the Smith Reynolds Airport in Winston-Salem next year.

Sunbird and Piedmont Airlines, based in Winston-Salem, teamed up to provide the service.

Sunbird spokesman Hugh Bingman said the airline will make three roundtrips to Charlotte each business day.

Service was discontinued in 1980 because of low ridership and equipment problems.

CHURCH SERVICE

The Rev. Hue Walston and the Walston Travelers and the congregation from Sycamore Baptist Church will have services at Conetoe Baptist Church Sunday at 5 p.m.

The main concerns of the Department of Human Resources are ensuring proper care for the 668 patients now at Dix and providing alternative job opportunities for the institution's 1,314 employees, said Lucy H. Bode, department spokeswoman.

"I don't know that it's an agreement," she said of the discussions with the Department of Corrections. "Both of us are looking at our department needs. But the first and foremost priorities are the patients and employees at Dix."

Department officials were seeking assurances that funds would be provided to return minimally impaired patients to treatment facilities in their communities, she said.

University of North Carolina President William C. Friday said school officials are making plans for the school's students who are assigned to Dix.

"I just happen to know that someone in state government has decided it's going to be used for other purposes," Friday said.

"The only knowledge that has been communicated to me from him (Friday) was that a decision has been made," said Dr. Thomas Curtis, chairman of the psychiatry department at the UNC School of Medicine. "That information is hard enough that judicious people like me have to plan for the future. What we do from that base on, we don't sit with our heads in the sand, we continue to think about the future."

Patrol Building Hit By Vehicle

An estimated $6,200 property damage resulted when vehicle operated by a 17-year-old student-driver ran into the Highway Patrol Troop A headquarters building here Thursday.

Trooper A.G. Wright, who investigated the collision, identified the driver as Jacqueline Denise Cherry of 200B Arthur St.

He said Miss Cherry had her foot on the vehicle's accelerator rather than the brake while attempting to park the car. Wright said the car hit a section of the building housing the drivers license division and the office of Department of Motor Vehicles hearing officer Bruce Guerrant.

Neither Guerrant, who was in his office at the time, nor Miss Cherry was injured.

Damage to the car was estimated at $1,200, while damage to the building was set at $5,000.

A spokesman for the drivers license division said this morning that Miss Cherry had come to the office to take the road test, but was unable to do so because she was not accompanied by a parent. She was returning to the building to ask for some additional information when the accident occurred.

No charges were made in connection with the mishap.

Gunmen Fire On Israeli At Lebanon Port City

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Gunmen in a speeding car opened fire on a jeep carrying Israeli troops in the southern port of Sidon today, killing one soldier and wounding three, an Israeli army spokesman said.

U.S. presidential envoy Philip C. Habib arrived in Beirut from Rome, meanwhile, to try to arrange the withdrawal of foreign troops from Lebanon. Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan said.

A group calling itself the Lebanese National Resistance claimed responsibility for the Sidon attack in a communique reported by the Palestine Liberation Organization news agency Wafa.

The communique claimed Israeli forces imposed a curfew and arrested dozens of Palestinians and Lebanese after the attack in Sidon, 25 miles south of Beirut.

The group's Armed Struggle Organization earlier claimed responsibility for an explosion that wrecked the Israeli military governor's headquarters in the southernmost Lebanese port of Tyre last week that killed 75 Israeli soldiers.

Tyre is 25 miles south of Sidon. Both cities were PLO strongholds until Israel's June 6 invasion of Lebanon routed Palestinian guerrillas from southern Lebanon and west Beirut.

The attack today occurred about 800 yards east of the Israeli military headquarters in Sidon, the Israeli army spokesman in the Beirut suburb of Baabda said.

Lebanese radios reported that Israeli forces today lifted a three-day curfew in Aley, 7.5 miles southeast of Beirut, and reopened roads for traffic in the Chouf region after factional clashes subsided in both areas.

Sectarian fighting between Christian and Druse militiamen claimed more than 50 lives in the last four weeks in the Chouf and Aley regions in Lebanon's central mountains.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz told reporters in Washington Thursday the United States was pressing for "as rapid as possible removal of all foreign forces from Lebanon." The Israelis, Syrians and the PLO all have troops in Lebanon.

Habib's assistant, Morris Draper, has been shuttling between Beirut and Jerusalem almost daily for the last two weeks in an effort to get Lebanon and Israel to begin the withdrawal talks.

"It's not going as fast as we would like," Shultz said of the progress toward the start of negotiations. The United States is expected to participate.

The main point of contention is Israel's demand that the negotiations should cover political issues between the two countries while Lebanon insists on focusing the talks on the military aspects of the Israeli withdrawal.

quoted its Washington correspondent Aziz Raad as saying Habib's main task was to try to bring about an agreement in principle on an Israeli pullout from Lebanon and then work out a timetable for simultaneous withdrawal of Syrian and Palestinian forces.

Israel and Syria maintain an estimated 35,000 troops apiece in this war-shattered Mediterranean country. Israel invaded Lebanon to force out Palestinian guerrillas and Syrian peacekeeping troops have been stationed in the country since 1976 under an Arab League mandate.

Pirates Close Out Year At Temple

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Maybe the pressure of a winning season is off the East Carolina Pirates now, but the opportunity to add to the win list might not come as easily as Coach Ed Emory had hoped for.

"Last week, I was hoping that Colgate would upset Temple. That would leave Temple at 4-6 and mean that our game wouldn't be the difference in a winning season," Emory said. Colgate obliged, upsetting the Owls, 24-17.

However, not long after the game, ended, Temple coach Wayne Hardin announced that he would retire after this Saturday's East Carolina contest, to be played in Veterans Stadium in Philadelphia at 1:30 p.m.

"Last Saturday, I saw the wind and rain and the condition of the field (at William & Mary) and wondered if (W&M Coach Jimmie) Laycock knew the man upstairs. The conditions were there for an upset," Emory said. "Nothing could have helped (William & Mary) more."

But the sun finally shown on the Pirates, who rallied in the final period to pull out a 31-27 win over the Indians, insuring East Carolina of its first winning season in Emory's three years as head coach.

"Now the elements of emotion are playing a big role in this Saturday's game, with Hardin's resignation. After they got upset I thought we were going to have some luck, and then this comes up."

Nevertheless, Emory sees Temple as a good opportunity for the Pirates to have their best year in several seasons. A victory would wind them up at 7-4, best since 1979, when the Pirates were 7-3-1.

"Temple is a team a lot like East Carolina. They are battling for equality with their instate teams, Pittsburgh and Penn State, just like we are with Carolina and State."

Emory said that Temple, which lost to Penn State, 31-14, and to Pittsburgh, 38-17, has "the best offensive line we've faced this year." Two weeks ago, the Owls carried West Virginia to the wire before the Mountaineers came back with a 20-17 win. That same WVU team downed East Carolina, 30-3, a week earlier.

"Their left tackle (Mike McCleann 6-5) is listed at 275, but he looks 300-plus. They have a huge offensive line, and good receivers with an outstanding quarterback. They match up better than we do (offense vs. defense)."

The Temple offense is led by a pair of players who figure in the national statistics. Quarterback Tim Riordan ranks ninth in the country in passing efficiency. He's connected on 135 of 214 passes for 1,592 yards, 12 touchdowns and seven interceptions.

His chief targets have been split end Reggie Brown, 38 catches for 526 yards; flanker Reuben McCoy, 29-347, and running back Sherman Myers, 16-191.

It also marks the final career game for 16 Pirates: linebacker Moe Bennett, offensive tackle Tom Carnes, fullback Marvin Cobb, nose guard Martin Daniel, nose guard Mark Ervin, flanker Carlton Nelson, strong safety Sam Norris, strong safety Smokey Norris, split end Larry O'Roark; defensive end Jody Schulz, cornerback Gerald Sykes, linebacker Amos Twitty, flanker Deno White, and snappy Whitley Wilkerson.

Some Questions Still Remain

By The Associated Press

Union and management representatives are continuing to squabble over details even as practices are held for the 14 games to be played this weekend following settlement of the eight-week National Football League players strike.

Distrust among the two sides was a key factor in keeping three of the 28 teams off the practice field until Thursday, while the other 25 started workouts Wednesday.

The New York Jets management didn't open camp until Thursday because union chief Ed Garvey hadn't initiated the collective bargaining agreement. After Jets President Jim Kensil was assured by NFL officials that Garvey would sign Thursday morning, he opened the team's practice facilities.

attempt to work out the differences. Minor suggestions have been proposed to which management may respond."

Garvey said in the statement the union was "surprised to find that in the (owners') latest document given to us at 2:20 p.m. today, they have not included the severance pay agreement for Mike Kadish (of Buffalo) and Herb Orvis (of Baltimore), reps cut because of union activity, and they continue to refuse to provide specific language on the annual guarantee."

At Management Council headquarters in New York, spokesman Jim Miller said: "We did not agree to severance. We agreed to the 'money now' provision," the bonus which will pay all players up to $60,000 this year.

Miller also insisted the language on the annual guarantee was in the contract.

Garvey's statement concluded: "Prior to submitting this document to the union members for a vote, all the I's must be dotted and all the T's must be crossed. It would be foolish to send an incomplete document to the players, or one that could be misinterpreted."

Many Fans Really Don't Care

The Detroit Lions and Chicago Bears, who meet each other Sunday, had avoided practice Wednesday because they wanted to confer first with their player representatives.

On Thursday, Bears punter Bob Parsons said Chicago started practice when the Lions did. "Some guys didn't want to practice ... and at one time the vote was 20-20 whether to go out. But Detroit's decision switched it."

"Eight weeks and a total waste of time," said disgruntled Bears running back Walter Payton, who said he wouldn't bother to vote next Tuesday when all the players decide whether to accept the strike-ending agreement.

Garvey, although he initiated portions of it Thursday, expressed dissatisfaction with parts of the settlement that already has been unanimously approved by the owners.

During a meeting in Washington, D.C., involving Garvey, owners' negotiator Jack Donlan and lawyers for both sides, the union released a statement from Garvey which said, in part: "I have today initialed all aspects of the agreement where agreement has been reached, using the Management Council document presented Nov. 16 at midnight. Naturally, where agreement has not been reached, the attorneys will try to work out the differences. Minor suggestions have been proposed to which management may respond."

Garvey said in the statement the union was "surprised to find that in the (owners') latest document given to us at 2:20 p.m. today, they have not included the severance pay agreement for Mike Kadish (of Buffalo) and Herb Orvis (of Baltimore), reps cut because of union activity, and they continue to refuse to provide specific language on the annual guarantee."

Miller also insisted the language on the annual guarantee was in the contract.

Garvey's statement concluded: "Prior to submitting this document to the union members for a vote, all the I's must be dotted and all the T's must be crossed. It would be foolish to send an incomplete document to the players, or one that could be misinterpreted."

"In order to make certain that all players fully understand all aspects of the proposed agreement, we will hold a player rep meeting on Monday in Washington, D.C. to go over the document with a fine-tooth comb."

Players association president Gene Upshaw told a news conference in San Francisco that the players' vote scheduled next Tuesday could be close.

"It could go either way ... There could be whole teams who vote against it," he said, citing strong signs of dissent in Chicago, Detroit, New England and Philadelphia.

If the collective bargaining agreement is defeated by the 1,500 players, they could continue playing while negotiating resumes or they could resume their strike.

Upshaw, a guard with the Los Angeles Raiders, said he wasn't particularly pleased with the agreement, but he defended it as protecting the union and gaining a wage scale. Specifically, Upshaw noted, "If they (the NFL) go to cable, pay or satellite TV, we can reopen the contract" for further bargaining.

He said he told the player reps, "That was the last dollar I could get out of them (the owners)." The reps voted to send the agreement along to the rank and file without recommendation because, as Lions player rep and union executive committee member Stan White said, the reps didn't want to prejudice the players for or against it.

By The Associated Press
NEW YORK (AP) — Professional football fans are divided over whether the strike-shortened National Football League season should be canceled rather than resumed this weekend, according to an Associated Press-NBC News poll.

However, those questioned before the strike were more likely to say the rest of the season should be canceled than those interviewed after the strike was settled.

In the poll, 723 people who said they follow professional football were interviewed by telephone Monday and Tuesday in a nationwide scientific random sampling — 472 of them before and 251 after the tentative agreement was announced in New York shortly after 6 p.m. Tuesday.

Among all 723 fans, 56 percent said the NFL should cancel the rest of this season's games. That includes 64 percent of those questioned before the settlement was announced.

However, among the fans interviewed after the settlement was announced, 49 percent said the rest of the season should be canceled, while 45 percent said play should resume and 6 percent were not sure.

In announcing the settlement, the NFL said games would resume as scheduled this Sunday and the Super Bowl will still be played Jan. 30 in Pasadena, Calif. However, counting two games played by each team before the strike, the season will only be nine games instead of the scheduled 16.

In the poll, 64 percent of those interviewed before the settlement was announced said the players should accept the owners' latest offer.

Among all the fans, 53 percent said they have an unfavorable opinion of Ed Garvey, the head of the players' union. Sixteen percent said they have a favorable opinion of Garvey, and 31 percent said they have no opinion of him.

As with all sample surveys, the results of AP-NBC News polls can vary from the opinions of all football fans because of chance variations in the sample.

For a poll based on about 700 interviews, the results are subject to an error margin of 4 percentage points either way because of chance variations. That is, if one could have talked this past week to all football fans, there is only 1 chance in 20 that the findings would vary by more than 4 percentage points.

Of course, the results could differ from other polls for a number of reasons. Differences in the exact wording of questions, differences in when the interviews were conducted and different methods of interviewing could also cause variations.

Thompson terms a transition period.

Villanova is relying on burly 6-8 senior John Pinone (14.2, 6.6 rebounds), smooth 6-9 sophomore Ed Pinckney (14.2, 7.8), Stewart Granger, the Big East assist leader the past two seasons, and freshman Harold Pressley, a 6-7 forward.

St. John's, 21-9 last season and ranked 19th nationally, returns all key players, including David Russell (17.4 points, 6.9 rebounds), soph Chris Mullin (16.6) and Billy Goodwin (14.7).

"Those three guys will have to maintain what they did last year and get help from the middle," said Coach Lou Carnesecca. The Redmen have 7-footers Jeff Allen and Bill Wenington sharing the center spot.

The nine-member Big East also includes Syracuse, Providence, Connecticut, Seton Hall and newcomer Pittsburgh.

Syracuse lacks a real big man, but figures to be a Big East contender with Leo Rautins, Tony Bruin and Erich Santifer. Boston College has a new coach in Gary Williams and lost 21-point scorer John Bagley to the pros, but has some frontcourt strength in Jay Murphy and Martin Clark.

Junior Clyde Vaughan (18.0, 9.5) leads Pitt, Otis Thorpe (14.1, 8.0) heads Providence, while both Connecticut and Seton Hall, under new coach P.J. Carlisimo, will be rebuilding after key graduation losses.

The Big East will hold a postseason tourney for the first time at Madison Square Garden.

Elsewhere, last season's Eastern Eight has become the Atlantic Ten. Pitt quit, but Temple, Penn State and St. Joseph's joined the conference.

Despite Ranking, No One Sure How Good Georgetown Will Be

By The Associated Press

Despite its No. 2 preseason ranking, no one knows how good Georgetown University's basketball team will be this season. Count John Thompson, the Hoyas' coach, among them.

One thing everyone knows is that 7-foot Pat Ewing, a sensation as a freshman last season, can be a dominating force. He helped Georgetown to within one field goal of beating North Carolina for the NCAA crown last March.

Thompson likens Ewing to Bill Russell, the former Boston Celtics' star whom the Hoyas' coach says is the greatest player he ever saw. Thompson once served as Russell's backup center at Boston.

"Pat has the same desire to win," said Thompson, who guided the Hoyas to a 30-7 record last season. "He's very competitive. He knows Russell won. Pat wants to win."

Rollie Massimino, coach of Villanova, said, "Ewing is capable of dominating any game in any league in the country. He has tremendous desire and has the experience of the Final Four."

Ewing, who says he is committed to four years at Georgetown rather than jumping to the National Basketball Association, displayed outstanding defensive abilities last season while averaging 12.7 points and 7.5 rebounds. Villanova, which has four starters returning, is ranked fifth nationally and favored by the Big East Conference coaches to repeat as league champion for the third straight year. The Wildcats, 28-7 and an NCAA Eastern finalist last season, drew seven votes from the nine Big East coaches. Coaches were not allowed to vote for their own team.

Georgetown and St. John's each drew one vote to win the championship for this premier league in the East, which placed Georgetown, Boston College and Villanova in the NCAA final eight last season.

"We're trying to find out about our young people," said Thompson, who lost standout seniors Sleepy Floyd and Eric Smith. In addition to Ewing, Fred Brown, a guard-forward, is the only returning starter.

"There is potential for a good team. Just when they will be, I don't know," said Thompson.

Sophomores Anthony Jones and Billy Martin join highly regarded freshmen David Wingate, Michael Jackson and Horace Broadnax for what There's an old saying about into every life, a little rain must fall.

Last week, the panel of experts found out what the people of Johnstown, Pa., have known for a long time: some of those rains make the dams break and you get completely washed away.

Talk about a disaster. Maybe Bear Bryant can loan us a couple of handkerchiefs to cry into. The best record recorded last week was by our guest, Mayor Percy Cox.

The worst was by Rick Scoppe, who had only a 4-8 mark. The rest of us were a miserable 5-7.

As it was, it didn't change the standings much. Tom Baines continues to lead the pack with a 90-40 record, while we are second at 89-41. Scoppe follows with an 87-43 mark. Two more games behind is Vickie Spivey at 85-45, while Joe Jenkins is now at 83-47. Our guests bring up the rear with an 82-48 mark and can overtake Jenkins this week — sending him back where he belongs, or so we've been told.

Our guest this week is a former panel member, George Holland of the Daily Reflector composing room. George dropped off several years back, but we're glad to have him back again this week.

There are three area games of interest — East Carolina at Temple, Rose at Asheville and Ayden-Grifton at Bertie.

Peele	Spivey	Jenkins	Scoppe	Holland	Baines
Asheville over Rose	Asheville	Asheville	Asheville	Asheville	Asheville
Temple over ECU	Temple	Temple	Temple	Temple	Temple
Carolina over Duke	Carolina	Duke	Carolina	Carolina	Carolina
Miami over N.C. State	Miami	Miami	Miami	Miami	Miami
Miss. State over Ole Miss	Miss. State	Ole Miss	Miss. St.	Miss. St.	Miss. St.
Southern Cal over UCLA	UCLA	UCLA	So. Calif.	UCLA	So. Calif.
Bertie over Ayden-Grifton	Bertie	Bertie	Bertie	Bertie	Bertie
Clemson over S. Carolina	Clemson	Clemson	Clemson	Clemson	Clemson
Maryland over Virginia	Maryland	Maryland	Maryland	Maryland	Maryland
Florida St. over LSU	Florida St.	LSU	Florida St.	Florida St.	LSU
Indiana over Purdue	Indiana	Purdue	Purdue	Purdue	Purdue
W&M over Richmond	W&M	Richmond	W&M	W&M	W&M

Ayden-Grifton visits Bertie in the second round of the Division I Class 3-A playoffs. The Chargers surprised a lot of people by rolling over Havelock last week, but their challenge is a little tougher this week in Bertie. The Falcons lost only to Washington — a team denied a playoff berth in the coaches' vote after a three-way tie in the Northeastern. Bertie is known as a strong defensive team, and the panel is giving Bertie the nod, 6-0. Our own personal pick is the Falcons by 28-14.

Rose travels to Asheville, and that alone might be the key to the game. It's a long way to ride on a bus, then play a football game after just a few hours rest.

The Rampants are a good defensive team and it will take all their best defense to have a chance against the Cougars, who have one of the best offenses in the state. Here, the panel looks to Asheville to win this one, again by a 6-0 margin. Our own look at the game sees the Cougars winning, 21-17.

Finally, the Pirates travel to Temple in the final game of the season for them. Owl coach Wayne Hardin made things a little tougher by announcing he would retire as the Temple coach following the game.

East Carolina wants to win — but so do the Owls, and Hardin's move may make the difference. The panel picks Temple, again 6-0. We look for a 20-16 win by the Owls.

Our other consensus picks: North Carolina over Duke; Miami, Fla., over N.C. State; Mississippi State over Mississippi; Southern Cal and UCLA, a toss-up; Clemson over South Carolina; Maryland over Virginia; Florida State over Louisiana State; Purdue over Indiana; and William & Mary over Richmond.

Southern Cal Gets Nod As Top Women's Team; ECU Gets Votes

By The Associated Press
The University of Southern California, which recruited the nation's outstanding freshman, 6-foot 2-inch Cheryl Miller, has been selected as the No. 1 team in the preseason women's college basketball poll compiled by Mel Greenberg of the Philadelphia Inquirer.

Southern Cal, which finished sixth in last season's final poll, conducted before the NCAA Women's Final Four, received 32 first-place votes and 1,026 points from the panel of 54 coaches. It is the first time Southern Cal ever has been ranked No. 1.

Coach Linda Sharp's team finished last season with a 23-4 record, losing in the NCAA Midwest Regional final to Tennessee.

Miller, who was pursued by more than 200 colleges, scored 105 points in a game for Riverside Polytechnic High last season and ended her career with 3,445 points, 1,620 rebounds and 435 assists.

"I think they looked at the fact that we have the nation's top recruit, four starters back and six of our first seven people," Sharp said of the voting. "We lost our four games by two, two, one and five (points) for a total of 10 points. I think we've made up for that over the summer."

Southern California also returns 6-3 twin sisters Pam and Paula McGee, both junior All-Americans.

Defending NCAA champion Louisiana Tech, which lost Wade Trophy winner Pam Kelly and guard Angela Turner through graduation, finished second in the balloting with 11 first-place votes and 995 points. The Techsters, 69-1 the past two seasons, are led by guard Kim Mulkey and Janice Lawrence.

Old Dominion, which has 6-8 senior Anne Donovan, received 10 first-place votes and 972 points for third place. The Monarchs were seventh in the final poll and finished with a 22-6 record after being ousted by Kansas State in the NCAA Eastern semifinals.

Tennessee, which has been to the finals five of the past six years, was fourth with one first-place vote and 932 points. Texas (755), the Southwest Conference favorite, gained the fifth spot by one point over Maryland.

Georgia (670) and Southeastern Conference champion Kentucky (641), expected to battle Tennessee for league honors, finished seventh and eighth, respectively.

Ninth-ranked Cheyney State (623), runner-up to Louisiana Tech for the NCAA title, 76-62, returns four starters, but has lost All-American Val Walker through graduation.

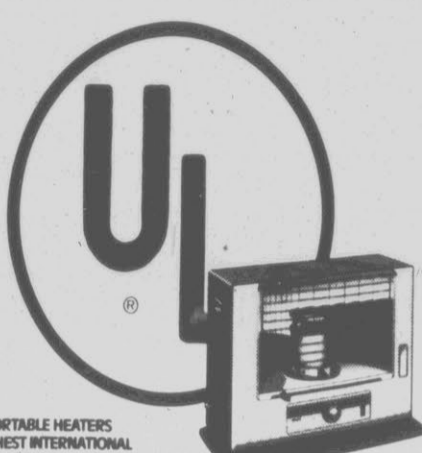

Long Beach State (594), the Western Collegiate Athletic Association champion over Southern California and led by senior Lataunya Pollard, completes the top 10.

The second 10 in order, includes Big Eight favorite Kansas State, Atlantic Ten pick Penn State, South Carolina, Rutgers, North Carolina State, Arizona State, Stephen F. Austin, Drake, Mississippi and California.

Missing from last year's final top 20 were No. 11 Villanova, No. 17 Memphis State, No. 19 Oregon and No. 20 Missouri.

Arguments Heard In NCAA Suit Over Football Television Rights

DENVER (AP) — A three-judge federal appeals court panel has heard oral arguments in the National Collegiate Athletic Association's bid to retain its control over the televising of college football.

The judges, sitting in the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, took the case under advisement Thursday and will issue a written decision at a later date.

The NCAA is asking the appeals court to overturn a Sept. 15 decision by U.S. District Court Judge Juan G. Burciaga, who ruled in favor of the universities of Oklahoma and Georgia in their suit to gain the right to negotiate their own TV contracts.

Burciaga ruled that the NCAA's $281-million television contracts with two networks and a cable system constituted a monopoly in violation of federal anti-trust laws and thus were void. The appellate court stayed Burciaga's ruling pending the outcome of the appeal.

In briefs filed with the Circuit Court prior to Thursday's hour-long hearing, the NCAA claimed its television policy, which gives it exclusive rights to college football telecasts, does not fit the federal definition of an illegal monopoly.

The NCAA has contended that by allowing only a limited number of games to be televised, it has increased attendance across the country and made televised games more attractive.

The U.S. Justice Department recently filed a "friend of the court" brief which concurred with several points raised by the two universities, but the NCAA said the department failed to answer the key question of whether the NCAA's restrictions "are pro-competitive and output-enhancing or anti-competitive and output-reducing."

Unless the restrictions reduce output, NCAA attorney Frank Easterbrook argued, they cannot harm consumers and therefore don't violate anti-trust laws.

Easterbrook told the three-judge panel that "output" should be defined as the total number of viewers watching college football, whether attending a game in person or watching on television. He contended that the NCAA's TV plan has increased attendance at stadiums by limiting the total number of televised games.

Attorneys for the universities, however, insisted that output should be measured by the number of games televised.

Andy Coats of Oklahoma City said the NCAA's equating of output with viewership is "a startling revelation." Added his colleague, Clyde Muchmore, "Viewership may be why the networks buy games, but it's not what they buy."

"There is a feeling on the part of the NCAA that if Judge Burciaga's ruling isn't struck down, only the college football superpowers will survive," said Coats. "We think just the opposite will occur. College basketball games are not regulated. They are televised every night and college basketball is thriving.

"The NCAA says it has increased the competitive balance, but we say the balance is better in a free market such as basketball."

Muchmore argued that the NCAA "makes more money by cutting back the number of games," which amounts to price-fixing and is clearly a violation of anti-trust laws.

Ruttman Paces Practice Runs

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — Joe Ruttman of nearby Ontario, Calif., turned in a near-record performance Thursday in a practice session for Sunday's $243,000 Winston Western 500 at the Riverside International Raceway.

Ruttman toured the 2.6-mile Riverside road course at 114.139 miles-per-hour, not far off the course record of 114.981 mph set last year by Darrell Waltrip.

Ruttman was driving the same Henry Ranier Pontiac that Bobby Allison drove to victory in the 1981 Winston Western 500.

Allison and Waltrip, who are locked in a tight battle for the 1982 Winston Cup championship, were second and third, respectively, during the practice session. Allison, switching from a Chevrolet to a Pontiac, was clocked at 114.111 mph while Waltrip was timed in 113.365 mph.

Waltrip holds a 22-point lead over Allison entering Sunday's race.

Clippers Win Second Game

By The Associated Press
Something had to give when the 1-7 Cleveland Cavaliers met the 1-8 San Diego Clippers.

Cleveland couldn't hold on to a slim halftime lead as Terry Cummings, San Diego's talented rookie forward, scored 30 points, 12 of them in the third quarter, to lead the Clippers to a 107-98 National Basketball Association victory Thursday night.

"We played much better tonight," Clippers Coach Paul Silas said. "It's good to win in any event. We're still young and are prone to rookie mistakes.

Scott Wedman scored 14 of his team-leading 25 points in the first half to help the Cavaliers take a 50-47 advantage at intermission.

But Cummings, who is averaging nearly 24 points per game, asserted himself in the third quarter, putting the Clippers ahead to stay midway through the period on a short jumper. That made it 59-58 and San Diego led 77-74 at the end of the third quarter.

"We ran the offense at the end much more than the whole game," said Cummings, who also had 11 rebounds. "The coach said to go out and have fun."

The Clippers outscored the Cavaliers 9-2 to start the fourth quarter to make it 86-76 and Cleveland didn't get closer than six points after that. San Diego led by as many as 12 points in the late going.

Tom Chambers and Randy Smith added 18 and 12 points, respectively, for the Clippers, while Geoff Huston had 19 points and a game-high 12 assists for Cleveland.

"We didn't get into a continuity in the second half," Huston said. "We took shots too quickly. Mike Brooks, Terry Cummings and Tom Chambers all played really well. I'm really impressed by Cummings."

Nuggets 118, Suns 107
Alex English scored 32 points and Billy McKinney 30 to lead Denver over Phoenix, snapping the Suns' five-game winning streak.

Phoenix led by a point at halftime, but McKinney hit two free throws 18 seconds into the third period. Hot shooting by McKinney and English helped the Nuggets, who won their third straight game on the road, take an 89-82 lead heading into the fourth quarter. In the final period, they led by as many as 10 points on four occasions.

Bucks 89, Knicks 77
Sidney Moncrief scored 19 points and Junior Bridgeman hit 10 of his 14 in the fourth quarter as Milwaukee overcame a miserable 14-minute stretch to beat New York.

Moncrief scored nine points in the first quarter as Milwaukee went ahead 29-19, and a 12-3 streak by the Bucks gave them their largest lead.

Division Breakdowns Mean Little Now

By The Associated Press
The strike-fragmented National Football League season resumes Sunday with a new look for the standings. Forget the familiar divisional breakdowns. They don't mean much in the framework of the new playoff system which will qualify 16 teams for what the NFL has termed the Super Bowl Tournament. What's significant now are the American and National Conference standings because the top eight clubs in both will advance to the postseason play. Going into the resumed season, there are seven undefeated 2-0 teams, four in the AFC and three in the NFC. Two of them meet head-on with the Miami Dolphins traveling to Buffalo to meet the

Bills in a key AFC showdown. The remaining AFC unbeaten are Pittsburgh, which resumes against Houston, 1-1, and the Raiders, who will make their Los Angeles debut Monday night against San Diego, 1-1. In the NFC, unbeaten Detroit and Washington go on the road against winless opponents, the Lions at Chicago and the Redskins at the New York Giants. Green Bay, also 2-0, hosts 1-1 Minnesota at Milwaukee. In other AFC games, Baltimore, 0-2, visits the New York Jets, 1-1, New England, 1-1, is at Cleveland, 1-1, and Seattle, 0-2, at Denver, 1-1. In the NFC, the Los Angeles Rams, 0-2, play at Atlanta, 1-1, San Francisco, 0-2, is at St. Louis, 1-1, and Tampa Bay, 0-2, goes against Dallas, 1-1.

Interconference pairings have Cincinnati, 1-1, at Philadelphia, 1-1, and Kansas City, 1-1, at New Orleans, 1-1. All of the teams will be playing on short preparation time. Most clubs resumed workouts immediately after the agreement was reached. The Super Bowl champion San Francisco 49ers had a limited practice Tuesday night, taking advantage of the three-hour time difference between New York, where the negotiations were held and their base in California. The Jets skipped Wednesday practice when the club refused to open their camp until the agreement was initiated by both sides Thursday morning. Chicago and Detroit also did not work until Thursday.

"They were loose and ready to go," said Lions' Coach Monte Clark, who sent his club through two workouts Thursday, a regimen usually reserved for the opening days of training camp. Four teams, including the Lions, must come right back with games four days after Sunday, on Thanksgiving Day. In those contests, Cleveland plays at Dallas and the Giants will be at Detroit. "Our depth is going to be more important than ever," said Clark. "We'll try to substitute more than normal." The teams go into Sunday's action with expanded active rosters of 49 players instead of the 45 active and four-man reserve units they had been using. It was decided to increase the number of active players to compensate for possible injuries and fatigue caused by the eight-week layoff. In addition, for the next two weeks, teams can restore players from their injured reserve lists without risking them or the players they

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

HOW THE BIBLE JUDGES GREED!

THE BIBLE MAKES MANY REFERENCES TO DISHONESTY AND GREED. TWO OF THE COMMANDMENTS ARE, "THOU SHALT NOT STEAL" AND "THOU SHALT NOT COVET..." TO THE PATRIARCHS, COVETING WAS AS SINFUL AS STEALING. CONSIDER ELISHA'S GREEDY SERVANT, GEHAZI. AFTER NAAMAN, THE GREAT SYRIAN GENERAL WAS HEALED OF HIS LEPROSY BY ELISHA, HE TRIED TO PAY HIM BUT WAS REFUSED. IT WOULD NOT BE COVETING TO ACQUIRE THE MONEY ALREADY OFFERED, THOUGHT GREEDY GEHAZI, RUNNING AFTER NAAMAN'S DEPARTING CHARIOT. (II KINGS 5:20-27) HE TOLD HIM ELISHA HAD CHANGED HIS MIND. SO, LOADING GEHAZI WITH PRESENTS, NAAMAN...

IT IS ELISHA'S SERVANT!

...CONTINUED HOMEWARD, HAPPY, AS GEHAZI UNTIL HE FACED ELISHA AND LEARNED HE WAS TO BE CURSED WITH THE LEPROSY OF NAAMAN AS PUNISHMENT FOR HIS DISHONESTY!

If You Have a Habit Of Following The Crowd, We Suggest, The Best Crowd to Follow is the Crowd Going To Church

Book Applies 'Story Theology'

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

Before the start of printing in the mid-15th century, Christianity in order to perpetuate its message relied heavily on art — church statuary, frescoes, stained-glass windows and paintings. They told the story visually for the largely illiterate masses, who generally couldn't read and who lacked the luxury of costly handwritten scrolls for it anyway.

For different reasons "we're getting closer" to a similar dependence on visual-oral communication, says the Rev. Warner Hutchinson, co-author of a new art-with-story book about Jesus. It's an unusual one, using the religious paintings and drawings of the classical masters, including many works that most people have never had a chance to see before.

They were extracted from the archives and underground storerooms of the National Gallery of Art in Washington, D.C., which has one of the most extensive collections of religious art in the world, much of it never displayed for lack of space. Works reproduced in the new book, "An Illustrated Life of Jesus," published by Abingdon, depicts his days from birth through his ministry, miracles, trial, crucifixion, resurrection and ascension.

In compiling the sequence of art, along with brisk accounts of events it depicts, Hutchinson says "we deliberately had in mind" the widespread lack of knowledge both about religious art and the background events.

Religious illiteracy has been spreading for about half a century and "more so today" in an increasingly secularized society, Hutchinson said in an interview.

"We've lost not only our religious understanding, but understanding of the classics," he said. "How can most moderns pick up John Milton who portrays religious subjects and know what he's talking about?"

"Television has largely taken the place of books. We've lost much of our cultural heritage. We can talk about Pac-Man (a video game character) and that's about it."

The atmosphere has spurred a theological trend — what's called "story theology" — which holds that the best way to teach it these days is simply to tell the story of divine events in history rather than by theological formulas.

"Our book fits into that mode, telling the story of Jesus with the art stimulating reflections about the meaning," he said.

The approach is akin to that used by medieval Christianity in conditions that made the church the main patron and inspiration to art. Of great paintings in the medieval and Renaissance period from about 1300 to 1700, Hutchinson says about 80 percent is religious art, inspired by and portraying religious stories.

Hutchinson, a United Church of Christ minister, one-time Navy chaplain and presently head of a computerized editorial service for publishers, prepared the book with a Jewish colleague, Richard I. Abrams, an Esquire, Inc., executive.

About a third of the artworks included have never been displayed or published, although produced by masters such as Rembrandt, Durer and Tintoretto, Hutchinson said.

Another third are moderately well known works, while the other third are famed paintings, such as Rembrandt's Descent from the Cross, Fra Angelo's Adoration of the Magi and Salvador Dali's Last Supper. "It was the opportunity to take the great art holdings which our nation owns and make them available across-the-board to people," Hutchinson said, noting many of the works have never been seen before generally.

Retrieving them from the "subterranean level" of the national gallery was "almost like an archaeological dig," with no telling what would turn up, Hutchinson said.

In the new book, he said the effort is to clarify the religious stories behind the art for those who don't know the stories, and also to explain the artists' perspective and methods to those unacquainted with that aspect.

Thanksgiving Service Set

A special service of thanksgiving will be held at the Christian Science Church Nov. 25 at 11 a.m.

Brief selections from the Christian Science textbook "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy will be read.

The presidential Thanksgiving proclamation will also be included in the service which is open to the public. The church is located at 400 Meade St.

Anti-Christian Propaganda

TUPELO, Miss. (AP) — "Anti-Christian programming is increasing on the networks," says the Rev. Donal E. Wildmon, head of the Coalition for Better Television.

His comment came after the Greek Orthodox Archdiocese of America protested that recent episodes of an NBC program, "Taxi," depicted a priest as suggesting adultery as a means to reconcile a marriage.

Wildmon says "this type of ridicule" has become common on the networks which "have mocked Christianity's attitude toward the sacredness of life for some time."

No Legal Bar To Ordination

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The top court of the United Methodist Church says that nothing in church law prohibits ordination of a homosexual, and specific decisions about it now rest with regional units.

In existing church law, "we find no provisions making same sex orientation a disqualification from ordination," the church's Judicial Council said.

Its ruling came on a challenge by the church's Rocky Mountain Conference to action by Bishop Melvin E. Wheatley Jr. in appointing an avowed homosexual to the staff of a Denver parish.

FISH FACE — Drew Barrymore makes a fish-face during rehearsal in New York for "Saturday Night Live" which she will host this Saturday. (AP Laserphoto)

Drew On 'Saturday Night Live'

By JUDIE GLAVE
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Move over, E.T. Unless you can make a fish face, turn your eyelids inside out or make gurgling noises, it looks like your leading lady, Drew Barrymore, has lost her heart to another.

The precocious 7-year-old actress revealed during a rehearsal Thursday for this week's Saturday Night Live show that cast member Tim Kazurinsky has captured her heart.

"I like all of them," she said when asked who her favorite Saturday Night Live player is. But leaning closer, she whispered, "I can't say who my real favorite is because the others will get jealous." Then after sweeping the room with her eyes to make certain no one was near, she quickly added, "It's Tim."

The blonde bundle of energy, who made her film debut as a playmate to the lovable creature from outer space in "E.T.," gave the secret away, however, when she arrived at NBC's Rockefeller Center studio

Thursday afternoon and jumped into Kazurinsky's arms the moment she spotted him.

The granddaughter of actor John Barrymore, Drew is the youngest person to ever host the late night comedy-variety show. In fact, she's younger than the show itself, which is in its eighth season.

A veteran actress who started her career at 2½ in the television movie "Suddenly Love," Drew wasted little time in getting down to business.

Sitting on "Saturday Night Live," producer Dick Ebersole's lap, the youngster frankly answered questions about herself and her work — stopping once to admonish Kazurinsky about his smoking habit.

Pointing her finger towards the comedian, who sat across the room about to light a cigarette, she sternly said, "He promised me he wouldn't smoke."

"I hate smoking," she added, wrinkling her nose.

Kazurinsky quickly squashed the cigarette back into its pack.

A frequent visitor to New York, the child star says she likes the city better than her native California because "I love to ice skate."

"We can roller skate in California but on the ice you can fall and slide. You do that on roller skates and ouch!"

The interview complete, Drew scampered back to Kazurinsky who gave her stage directions and tried to give her "camera savvy."

While the producers were occupied with more technical details, the two passed the time making fish faces and gurgling noises at each other.

Her mother, Ildiko, sat watching Drew — dressed in a gray sweatsuit, pink moccasins and pink legwarmers — rehearse her lines.

"She told me when she was 4 years old she wanted to do a film," she said, discussing Drew's early career.

"Believe me if she didn't want to do something she wouldn't. She definitely has a mind of her own."

She added that Drew's career has not robbed her of a "normal" childhood.

"That's what I love most about her, she's so normal," said Miss Barrymore looking at her daughter, who at that moment had rolled up her sleeve and was comparing arm muscles with Kazurinsky.

A Deaf Cop Is Another Twist

NEW YORK (AP) — "Longstreet" was a blind detective. "Ironside" was crippled. On Saturday, CBS invents a new twist, a deaf cop in "Hear No Evil."

The movie's humor and clever dialogue are several cuts above standard police drama. But it's not in the same league as "Hill Street Blues" for job reality and human emotion.

Gil Gerard, formerly Buck Rogers, has returned from the 25th century to star as Bill Dragon, a dedicated cop who loses his hearing after a motorcycle gang booby-traps his car. Gerard shows a breezy amiability in this new role.

Dragon's police partner, played by former San Francisco 49ers football star Bernie Casey, is named Monday. (Counting Sgt. Jack Friday, played by Jack Webb — "Just the fact, ma'am, just the facts" — that leaves only five days for future tough-guy roles.) In the mold of cops Hill and Renko on "Hill Street," Dragon and Monday have a humorous, mutually needing relationship.

The two detectives are bird-dogging a band of Hell's Angel types who are suspected of manufacturing PCP, the drug known as angel dust. "We're not a gang," says one biker. "We're a club." The "club" members are ugly and nasty, except for one salvageable soul (Wings Hauser) who later turns government witness.

By that time, Dragon has lost his hearing and his badge, but not his police instincts and desires. That's when the story begins to

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled Thursday that an interview rejected by Us before being sold to Forum was improperly promoted because Forum's advertisements said the singer "tells Forum" what she "would never tell Us."

The court said Cher, 36, had given the interview to radio talk-show host Fred Robbins with the understanding that it would be published in Us, and called the advertising "patently false."

Robbins also sold the interview to The Star magazine.

Questions, Answers On Proposed Tax-Cut Timing

By JIM LUTHER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — If Congress changes the timing of next year's individual tax cut to stimulate the economy, it would mean an extra $93 for the typical $20,000 family of four to spend in 1983.

A proposal being weighed by President Reagan would combine next year's 10 percent tax-rate cut with the 5 percent reduction scheduled for 1984 and reflect the full 15 percent reduction in paychecks starting Jan. 1, 1983.

The idea was proposed by Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan. The president, while making no commitment to support it, described it as an appealing way to help pull the economy out of recession.

Here are some questions and answers on how it would work.

Q. Suppose I'm part of that typical $20,000-a-year family of four. The president and Congress promised the 1981 tax-cut bill would give me a $464 reduction when the measure was fully effective in 1984.

A. If the president and Congress agree with Regan's proposal, you will still get the full $464. You'll just get $93 of it more quickly than the present law allows.

Q. How?

A. Let's go back to Oct. 1, 1981, when we started feeling the first effect of the tax cut. That's when the amounts withheld from paychecks for federal income taxes were reduced an average of 5 percent. But only withholding was changed at that time — there was no reduction in the tax rates, the amount of your tax liability.

Q. So what happened when I filed my tax return in April 1982?

A. The tables you used to complete your tax return — but not the basic tax rates — had been adjusted to cut your taxes by about 1.25 percent.

That was to cover the 5 percent cut in withholding that took effect in October. The actual reduction in taxes for 1981 was only 1.25 percent instead of 5 percent because the withholding was in effect only for one quarter.

Q. But what about the tax rates?

A. On Jan. 1, 1982, tax rates were reduced across the board by an average of 10 percent, but the government took only 5 percent less out of your checks during the first half of the year.

On July 1, 1982, withholding was cut another 10 percent. Taxes withheld from your paychecks in the last half of 1982 have been about 15 percent less than before the bill was passed.

In 1981 and 1982 combined, your $2,013 tax liability was cut by $228. If you were claiming the proper number of allowances, the amount withheld from your checks should have dropped by about the same amount.

Q. Under present law I'm due another 10 percent cut in 1983?

A. Starting Jan. 1, your tax rates will drop roughly another 10 percent, meaning they will be 20 percent below pre-1981 levels. Your 1983 tax cut will be $143 but you won't feel it until withholding is reduced again on July 1, by 10 percent.

In the first six months of 1983, withholding will be about 15 percent less than under the old law. In the last half of the year, withholding will be 25 percent lower than pre-1981. Over the 12 months, that averages 20 percent — same as the tax cut.

On Jan. 1, 1984, the final 5 percent cut in tax rates goes into effect. Your tax rates and your withholding will be about 25 percent less than if the tax cut had never been enacted.

Q. So if I'm still making $20,000 a year in 1984, what will I get?

A. Another $93. Added to the $143 in 1983 and $228 for 1981 and 1982, that means that when the program is fully effective, your $2,013 liability will be down to $1,549 — a cut of 23 percent.

Q. But a 10 percent cut in 1982, 10 percent in 1983 and 5 percent in 1984 add up to 25 percent, not 23.

Q. You're not being cheated; 25 percent was just shorthand. The correct figure is 23 percent because the second and third parts were cuts of a smaller "pie."

To illustrate, if you take away 10 percent of 100, you're left with 90. Take 10 percent of 90 and you're left with 81. Finally, take 5 percent from 81 and you're left with 77 — which is a 23 percent cut from 100.

Q. I would still get the same $464 total tax cut under the idea the president is considering?

A. Yes. But instead of waiting for your withholding to drop 10 percent on July 1, and for your tax liabilities to drop the final 5 percent on Jan. 1, 1984, both changes would take effect Jan. 1, 1983.

Instead of getting a $143 tax cut in 1983, you'd get $143 plus $93 — $236.

Q. They say that giving us the 1984 tax cut this year would worsen the federal deficit. Why not just make the July 1983 withholding cut effective six months earlier?

A. That would give you more money in the first half of 1983 but it wouldn't change your tax liability. Withholding would be 25 percent lower for the entire year but your tax liability would be down only 20 percent. When you filed your tax return in 1984, you'd have to give part of the money back.

Four Collisions In Greenville Thursday

An estimated $3,600 damage resulted from four traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Thursday.

Officers said heaviest damage resulted from a 5:47 p.m. incident at the intersection of Fifth and Elm streets, where cars driven by Helen Vance Steer of 2306 E. Third St. and Jeanne Turcotte Clark of 1704 E. Third St. collided, causing $450 damage to the Steer car and $1,000 damage to the Clark vehicle.

Cars driven by Jeffrey Credle of Ayden and Julie Ann Edwards of Route 1, Winterville, collided about 3:58 p.m. on Memorial Drive, 120 feet south of the Fifth Street intersection, causing an estimated $50 damage to the Credle car and $1,000 damage to the Edwards vehicle.

Officers charged Ms. Edwards with following too close.

Calvin Coolidge Hansley of 113 Wade St. was charged with failing to yield the right of way following investigation of an 10:43 p.m. collision at the intersection of 14th and Broad streets.

Police, who charged Hansley with failing to yield the right of way, identified the driver of the second car involved as Jerry Knight of 1206B Davenport St.

Damage was estimated at $300 to each of the two vehicles involved.

Cars driven by Susan Dyanne Jarrett of 103C Cedar Court and Robert David Wheeler Jr. of Grifton collided about 4:30 p.m. at the intersection of Evans Street and Greenville Boulevard, causing an estimated $100 damage to the Jarrett car and $400 damage to the Wheeler vehicle.

Police charged Wheeler with having improper equipment (brakes).

Members also discussed preliminary plans for the association's local involvement in "Public Service Awareness Week," set for April 18-23.

Some 40 members and guests attended the meeting at The Three Steers.

The next meeting will be held on the third Thursday in January.

Opening lead: Queen of ♠

There are two ways to win at bridge - never take a wrong guess, or perfect your technique. Of the two, we recommend the latter. It is less likely to backfire.

As the cards lie, East West have a good sacrifice at four spades. However, we do not fault either of them for failing to enter the auction at this vulnerability. Not that four hearts was a laydown. But excellent declarer play thwarted some fine defense.

West led the queen of spades, and at first glance it might seem that the contract hinged solely on declarer's ability to divine the trump situation. But South was able to find a sure-trick line regardless of who held the queen of trumps.

Declarer won the first trick in dummy and immediately ruffed a spade. Next, he made the farsighted play of cashing the king of trumps from hand. Had East showed out on this trick, the finesse would have been marked and there would have been no way that declarer could have lost more than a diamond trick and two clubs.

When West showed out on this trick, declarer proved that he had not taken a wrong view. He cashed the ace of hearts and the ace king of diamonds, then exited with a diamond. East, aware of a looming end play, did the best he could by jettisoning his two diamond honors under the ace king, so West was able to win the third diamond with his ten. Since a spade or diamond continuation would present declarer with his contract via a ruff-suff, West was forced to shift to a club. Declarer played the queen from dummy. East realized that he would still be employed if he took the ace, so he ducked. Declarer countered by simply exiting with a heart. East was forced to win, and faced the choice of presenting declarer with his contract either via a ruff-suff, or by leading a club away from the ace into dummy's king. Either way, declarer could lose only one club trick!

FOCUS

U.S. and Brazil - A Troubled Friendship

U.S. officials watched Brazil this week to see how recent elections there might influence relations between Brasilia and Washington. The U.S. is the largest importer of Brazilian goods, and American companies have invested $8 billion there. U.S. banks also hold a large percentage of Brazil's foreign debt. But diplomatic relations have been strained since 1979 when President Carter accused Brazil's government of human rights violations. President Reagan has worked to improve U.S.-Brazilian relations. And Administration officials hope the recent elections - the first in Brazil since 1964 - will help renew friendship between our two countries.

DO YOU KNOW - What is Brazil's official language?

THURSDAY'S ANSWER - Modest Mussorgsky composed "Pictures at an Exhibition."

Report Pneumonia Cases Appear High

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The number of pneumonia cases being treated in the state is unusually high for this time of year, doctors and hospital officials say.

Dr. David Hunter Moore, director of Mercy Hospital's emergency room in Charlotte, said his staff has treated more pneumonia patients in the past four weeks than during all of last winter.

One pediatrician said she has seen 50 percent to 75 percent more children with pneumonia than she saw last fall.

However, the doctors said the increase in pneumonia cases is nowhere near an epidemic stage.

"The fact most of these people are being treated as outpatients is good evidence there is no cause for concern or alarm," said Dr. Edward Green, a Charlotte pediatrician.

Green said he has seen an average of 11 to 15 patients a day with pneumonia or bronchitis in the past four weeks. That's about a 50 percent increase over the usual number for this time of year, he said.

Doctors, who have no ready explanation for the increase in pneumonia cases, said the rapid weather change from summer heat to autumn chill is keeping people in closer contact indoors. That increases the chances of spreading infection, they said.

"We have two populations we're dealing with — the bacteria population and the people population," said Dr. William Skeen, a Mooresville family practitioner.

"I don't think it's anything the people population is doing," he said. "I think it's something the 'bug' population is doing. There may be a new bug or a resistant strain of old bugs popping up."

Doctors advise for avoiding coming down with pneumonia is much like that for keeping generally healthy: Eat nutritionally sound meals, get adequate rest, use common hygiene practices and avoid contact with someone who is ill.

Symposium Being Planned

What are the alternatives to jail for juvenile offenders?

This issue will be discussed at a Juvenile Justice Symposium set for Tuesday, Nov. 23, at 7 p.m. at East Carolina University's Willis Building Auditorium, located at First and Reade Streets.

The program is co-sponsored by the Greenville-Pitt County League of Women Voters and the ECU Department of Social Work and Correctional Services.

According to Jayne Silliman, juvenile justice chairperson for the League, the symposium was developed as a public service after passage of N.C. Law G.S. 7A-576 (c,d) which states that juveniles can no longer be jailed after June 30, 1983.

Panel speakers at the event include J. Robert Weber of the ECU correctional services faculty; Eve Rogers, chief juvenile court counselor for the third judicial district, Wilkesboro; and Judge Gilbert H. Burnett, 15th judicial district, Williamston.

Ms. Silliman will be moderator.

A question-answer session will follow the panelists' symposium.

Wild Turkey For Holiday

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa (AP) — Edna Davis admits her feathers were a bit ruffled by the way some neighbors decided to repay her hospitality.

But now she's decided the unorthodox Thanksgiving gift — a live, 22-pound wild turkey — will make a great centerpiece and she's having it dressed for the occasion.

Before the Charles Collier family moved to Crescent, Iowa, they decided to show their gratitude to Mrs. Davis and her son, Jim, for all their kindness while they had been neighbors.

It wasn't unusual for the Colliers to give the Davis' vegetables from their garden, so when a wild turkey wandered into their yard, it seemed only natural to share their bounty.

The Colliers put the bird in a box and left it on Mrs. Davis' doorstep.

But the idea was a little too natural for Mrs. Davis, who said she didn't know how to convert roosting turkey into roasting turkey.

But the Council Bluffs Animal Control Department found a butcher to do the dirty work and the turkey now will be guest of honor at the Davis table on Thanksgiving Day.

"I was kind of mad at first," she said. But once she thought of the cost and difficulty of getting a nice fresh turkey, she changed her mind.

"I just felt like I was almost in heaven yesterday," she said.
