Marines Return From Lebanon

By JEAN McNAIR
Associated Press Writer

MOREHEAD CITY, N.C. (AP) — Marines who served in the peacekeeping force in Lebanon returned home today to a hero's welcome complete with high school bands and flag-waving crowds.

More than 1,600 Marines of the 32nd Marine Amphibious Unit arrived aboard five Navy ships at Morehead City and Radio Island, near their home bases at Camp Lejeune and the Marine Corps Air Station at New River.

The ships, which will return to their home port in Norfolk, Va., Thursday, had poured on the steam to get the Marines home in time to spend Thanksgiving with their families.

The first Marines to disembark marched single file off the USS Guam as two high school bands played and majorettes twirled flags and batons.

"We knew that you would do what had to be done," Maj. Gen. Al Gray, commanding general of the 2nd Marine Division, told the returning troops.

Speaking at pierside, Gray praised the Marines for their "magnificent operation in Lebanon."

The Marines, who left on May 24 for their six-month deployment, were part of the Navy's Mediterranean Amphibious Ready Group and assisted in the evacuation of Americans from war-ravaged Lebanon on June 24.

They were recalled to Beirut Aug. 25 to evacuate Palestine Liberation Organization soldiers and President Reagan ordered them back to Lebanon Sept. 29 as part of a multi-national peacekeeping force.

Col. James Mead, commander of the 32nd unit, said the Marines had been "extremely effective" in returning stability to Lebanon.

"We left with a great sense of hope, we left with a great sense of accomplishment," he said.

The Marines were to be reunited with the families at Camp Geiger later today.

One Marine, Cpl. David L. Reagan, 21, of Chesapeake, Va., was killed and three others injured Sept. 30 when an artillery shell exploded while they were trying to defuse it at the Beirut airport.

Among the crowd of more than 300 who greeted the Marines at Morehead City was Carol Campbell of Charleston, W.Va., who said she drove 10½ hours with her husband and daughter to surprise her son, Marine Sgt. Scott Taylor.

"I cried and prayed, I don't know how many tears" while he was gone, she said. "I'm glad it's over."

The Marines were relieved of their Lebanon duties Oct. 29 by the 24th Marine Amphibious Unit. After leaving Lebanon, the 32nd Unit participated in an amphibious training exercise in the western Mediterranean with the Moroccan Marines Nov. 8-10.

The units' six-month tour was part of the continuing U.S. military presence in the Mediterranean for the past 35 years.

Volcker Spurns Congressional Appeals

Fed Won't Force Rates Down

By OWEN ULLMANN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal Reserve Board Chairman Paul A. Volcker today spurned congressional calls that the central bank force interest rates down to fixed levels, saying the idea is unworkable and would rekindle inflation.

"With huge budget deficits looming, a requirement that the Federal Reserve set explicit interest rate targets is bound to be interpreted as inflationary," Volcker said in testimony prepared for delivery before the Joint Economic Committee of Congress.

Rep. Henry Reuss, D-Wis., the committee's chairman, said interest rates frequently had been "intolerably high" in recent years, and that the committee "is deeply disturbed about the (Federal Reserve's) conduct of monetary policy and its partial responsibility for the terrible unemployment and lengthy recession that we are in."

Reuss did not endorse any congressional move to have the Federal Reserve force interest rates down. But he said the board should be more flexible, keep better watch on consumer interest rates and consult more closely with Congress.

Volcker acknowledged that interest rates remain too high, but he said rates have fallen significantly since summer, mainly because of the central bank's success in lowering inflation by limiting the growth of money and credit.

"We do not believe that progress toward lower interest rates should — or for long in practice can — be forced" at the expense of excessive credit and money creation," the Fed chairman stated.

"To attempt to do so would simply risk the revival of inflationary forces; renewed expectations of inflation would soon be reflected in the longer-term credit markets, damaging prospects for the long-lasting expansion we all want."

Some economists argue that interest rates rise and fall simply as a result of the money and credit the Fed makes available.

But Volcker and other government officials say a large increase in the money supply brings interest rates down for a short time while also fueling inflation. That prospect will encourage lenders to raise interest rates, the officials argue.

Volcker urged "that we have the patience and wisdom to refrain from actions that can only be destructive."

"I believe we have come a long way toward laying the base for economic growth and stability," he said. "Economic recovery should characterize 1983, and that recovery can mark the beginning of a long period of stable growth."

But he added: "Obviously there are obstacles — interest rates are still too high; inflation is down but not out; there are strains in our financial system; we face budget deficits that are far too high; we are tempted to turn inwards or backwards for quick solutions that ultimately can not work."

Volcker was reacting to a growing impatience in Congress about the persistence of double-digit interest rates, which are far in excess of the inflation rate, now running at 5 percent a year.

Many economists blame those unusually high interest rates for blocking a long-anticipated recovery.

Several bills introduced in Congress would force the nation's central bank to take monetary actions that would set interest rates at some level only slightly above the rate of inflation.

Volcker said the proposals suffer several "fundamental defects" — they may conflict with the government's goals of promoting economic growth and low inflation, they are ambiguous, they may be impossible to implement and they "tend to politicize the entire process of monetary policy."

East Describes Tobacco As Top Domestic Issue

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

U.S. Sen. John East told a Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce Pepsi Break gathering Tuesday that, "as far as this state goes, the most important domestic issue in Congress" is tobacco.

Because of the decline in the numbers of Americans engaged in farming, East said, "there are not many congressmen and senators representing agricultural interests." This fact, combined with what East described as a "great division of opinions" on tobacco issues among North Carolinians, makes it "not as easy to go to Washington with a uniform front," the senator said.

Again citing the "great divisions as to where we ought to be going," East emphasized "we need a uniform front within the industry" to get through what he predicted will be a painful "period of transition" for the tobacco growers and manufacturers.

As a senator, East said, "one of the greatest things you can do" for the tobacco program is lobbying individually with other senators.

Aside from tobacco, which East predicted will be produced for years and years to come, the senator suggested that the Congress needs to "get back to the basics," in order to improve the position of the nation in the world.

East said federal spending must be controlled in order to have a healthy economy, and said a strong national defense is essential to the preservation of peace.

The senator said that, when President Ronald Reagan took office, interest rates were over 20 percent and the rate of inflation was 12.4 percent. While interest rates and the rate of inflation are "down drastically," East said "it's only a beginning."

He said the government, "which cannot make us whole," should "encourage and reward productivity and creativity" and get federal spending under control. And East suggested that unless the Congress places a "cap" or ceiling on spending for entitlement programs, such as Social Security, veterans' benefits and federal pensions, government spending cannot be controlled.

"Without the spirit of sacrifice ... it can't be done," East said.

East said in his opinion the president "is headed in the right direction" in the area of national defense. At best, East suggested, the United States "may be equal" to the Soviet Union militarily.

By building a strong national defense establishment, East said, America can assure peace and harmony in the world.

He said it is not spending for defense — which accounts for about 20 percent of the national budget — that needs to be cut back in order to control the federal budget. Rather, he said, it is spending for entitlement programs that account for 60 percent of the budget, that needs to be controlled.

"The great strength of democracy" East said, is that it "allows self criticism."

Damage

Police survey a fallen tree in Honolulu, where winds gusting up to 110 miles per hour knocked out utility poles and power, damaged homes and disrupted communications Tuesday. Hurricane Iwa also forced the evacuation of more than 6,000 persons from the islands of Kauai and Niihau, about 115 miles from Honolulu. (AP Laserphoto)

Hurricane Hits Hawaii

HONOLULU (AP) — Hawaii's first hurricane in 23 years battered the islands with 110 mph winds, sending more than 6,700 coastal residents from their homes and cutting virtually all communications.

At least six injuries were reported as Hurricane Iwa swirled Tuesday over the Pacific chain, sweeping through two western islands, Kauai and Niihau.

Navy ships put out to sea and tin roofs blew along flooded streets. Two Coast Guard ships with no one aboard sank before they could be taken to safe haven.

Winds up to 80 mph struck Honolulu on the island of Oahu, southeast of the storm's center. Electricity in the capital was knocked out for three hours Tuesday night and roads were flooded early today. Palm trees bent double under the force of the winds.

About 5,800 residents of low-lying areas of Kauai were evacuated to higher ground, a local emergency official said.

Coastal areas of sparsely populated Niihau were also evacuated.

"At about 8 p.m. their time (1 a.m. EST), the main force of the storm went over (Kauai) with winds about 105 to 110 mph," said Bob Blair, spokesman for the Federal Emergency Management Agency in Virginia. "They had waves up to 12 feet high."

The hurricane was moving northeast at 14 mph "and will go just northeast of Honolulu," about 125 miles southeast of Kauai, he said. Boulders four to five feet across littered the Farrington Highway on Oahu, P. Job Williams of Oahu Civil Defense said early today, and 982 people were evacuated from low-lying areas.

As much as two feet of water covered some streets along Waikiki Beach. Palm fronds littered the area. Stores, bars and restaurants closed early, with sandbags placed in front of their doors to block flooding inside and windows taped to prevent glass from flying.

Helms Calls For Farm Subsidy Settlement

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee warned European officials today that Congress will retaliate if international trade negotiators can't resolve a dispute over farm subsidies.

"My reading of the situation is that many in the U.S. Congress will regard the failure ... to make substantial progress in resolving the predatory use of agricultural export subsidies as sufficient grounds for taking unilateral actions," Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., said in remarks prepared for the Swiss-American Chamber of Commerce in Zurich.

Helms, who is also the No. 2 Republican on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said action must be taken at the upcoming meeting of member nations to the General Agreement on Trade and Tariffs in Geneva.

If that group fails to offset the damage that subsidies provided by the European Economic Community have allegedly caused to world trade, he said Congress would be likely to mandate unilateral action to protect U.S. interests.

"I would emphasize that this would leave little, if any, discretion on the part of the U.S. executive branch," Helms added. "Many Americans view these subsidies as intolerable."

The EEC farm subsidies, which have also been harshly criticized by the Reagan administration, have not only ended the need for imports but have encouraged excess production that is now being dumped on an international market already glutted with grain. Helms charged.

While the United States has tried to rein in production to offset the global stockpile, Helms accused the Europeans of continuing to encourage more and more production. He blamed them in part for dire financial straits of many American farmers.

The $190 million Congress has authorized for credit subsidies to U.S. export customers is only a "measured step" in a string of actions the United States can take if the "continuing and increasingly pernicious application" of subsidies persists, Helms said.

"I would expect to see even greater amounts of dollars spent for this purpose of fighting fire with fire," he said.

Helms also warned that the U.S. could dump billions of dollars of subsidized federal surplus dairy products onto the world market.

Cancer Survival Rate Spurs Effort To Humanize Patient And Family Care

By PATRICIA Mc CORMACK
UPI Health Editor

Jimmie C. Holland, psychiatrist, jams her hands into the big pockets of a white starched coat and talks warmly about the quiet revolution on the cancer front.

Dr. Holland, chief of psychiatry service at Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center in New York, is on the cutting edge of the movement to humanize the care of cancer patients and their families.

The revolution is underway at other big cancer treatment centers. But it is not spreading fast enough to help all who need to feel its effects if they are to cope better, Dr. Holland said the other day.

Dr. Holland's niche at Memorial is sun-splashed and decorated with blue and green geometric-patterned drapes.

The homelike office with a rocking chair and couch with a worn knitted throw on it didn't look like it belonged in any of the high-tech medical centers on York Avenue, where Memorial is situated.

Rockefeller University, where gene-splicing and recombinant DNA technology frontiers are crossed, is across the avenue. Down the street is Cornell Medical College and the big New York Hospital, considered one of the finest in the world.

"Cancer increasingly is viewed as a chronic illness care" for by the specialty of medical oncology, which assumes responsibility for the patient over long periods.

"The greater expectation of long survival heightens caution in a voiding untoward psychiatric incidents which might result from cancer treatment."

There is a second basis for the psychosocial oncology movement, Dr. Holland said.

Dear Abby

Should Fellow Remove Hat?

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I was taught that when a gentleman enters an elevator wearing a hat and there are women present, as a gesture of courtesy he should remove his hat. That has always been my practice, but I seem to be alone.

So what is your advice? When wearing a hat in an elevator with women present, should I remove my hat or not?

HAT MAN IN MANHATTAN

DEAR HAT MAN: If there's plenty of room in the elevator and you can comfortably remove your hat, remove it. But if the elevator is crowded, as it usually is, leave it on rather than risk sticking your elbow in somebody's eye.

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend, Buddy, is a great guy, but here's the problem. Now that he's into weightlifting he refuses to engage in sex! He claims that the protein lost in making love depletes the supply required by his body to build muscle, and he needs all the protein he can get.

Buddy says all great athletes know that making love saps the strength and drains the energy. I've heard that story before. Is it true? If it's not, how did it get started?

Please ask your experts, Abby. I need to know if Buddy is using weightlifting as an excuse to get out of making love to me.

FRUSTRATED IN MILL VALLEY

DEAR FRUSTRATED: I asked my consultant, Virginia Johnson, of Masters and Johnson. Her response:

"The notion that sexual activity is a drain on the body's energy can be traced back many centuries to the unscientific theory that 'vital bodily fluids' were lost forever by this route and thus needed to be preciously guarded. Today, a more scientific understanding of the processes of sexual function reveals that:

"(1) The small amount of protein contained in semen is easily replenished from normal dietary intake and represents no 'threat' to the incorporation of protein into muscle mass;

"(2) Theoretically, there are actually some advantages to regular sexual activity for male athletes, since it tends to bolster the amount of testosterone (the male sex hormone) that enters the circulation and plays an important role in the way the body transforms nitrogen from protein into muscle;

"(3) Several world-record performances have been documented as occurring within 12 hours after sexual activity."

Share this with Buddy. And if he continues to hold out, he'd better think up a better excuse.

DEAR ABBY: Will you please say something in your column about letter-writing? Some people seem to think that they cannot send a letter to a friend or relative unless it is long, so they put off writing until they have time to write 10 or 12 pages.

I don't know about others, but to me, a short letter now is a lot more appreciated than a long letter later.

DOTTY

DEAR DOTTY: I agree. Most long letters are so long the recipients put off reading them until they have more time.

DEAR ABBY: Who said, "You can't build a reputation on what you're going to do?"

W. OUT WEST

DEAR W.: Ford (Henry, not Gerald.)

BEST IN SHOW DOLL...was one belonging to Athlene Garriss. Mrs. Garriss shows her doll and trophy.

'Best In Show' From Ayden

AYDEN — Seventeen ribbons including a "best in show" were won by Athlene Garriss in the second annual doll and miniature show and sale held Saturday in Fayetteville.

Mrs. Garriss' best in show doll was an American-made Griner Doll (1853-1858). The tall doll is dressed in a white cotton dress with lace trim and wears velvet slippers which were made by Mrs. Garriss' aunt about 65 years ago.

The show was sponsored by the Highlander Doll Club of North Carolina. This was the first judged show entered by Mrs. Garriss. She entered 27 dolls.

Mrs. Garriss has been collecting dolls since 1936 when she received her first one, a gift of her husband, Lester. "The doll was Bisque and had black curls," said Mrs. Garriss.

"I have always loved dolls and started sewing for them by the time I was eight years old. After having five babies, I started collecting more dolls about five years ago and I collect any type — from Mickey Mouse to large Bisque ones," she added.

Mrs. Garriss buys dolls from "any place I can find them." Friends also bring them to her. She still sews for dolls.

"My grandchildren enjoy going to doll shows with me and enjoy talking about dolls. Very few shows are held in North Carolina and I do attend some out-of-state — I go to see what they have," she said.

Fifteen doll craftsman, collectors and designers from several states displayed their collections Saturday. Over 200 dolls were entered in the show.

Suzanne Gibson, a doll designer from New York, showed some of her old and creations in vinyl and porcelain.

Mrs. Helms Is Speaker

The Greenville Garden Club held its November meeting at the home of Mrs. L.S. Worthington. The program was given by Mrs. R.M. Helms.

Her program topic was "Ginkgo Trees, Cypresses and Their Relatives."

"Both families of trees have interesting histories — the ginkgo being much older. All of the ginkgo trees now found growing in parks and gardens and along streets originally came from Chinese temple gardens during the days of sailing ships. The bald or swamp cypress and the pond cypress are natives of the southeastern United States. The dawn redwood or metasequoia was discovered growing in an isolated valley in central China," she said.

Mrs. R.A. Davis, president, gave the welcome. Ethel Allen was a guest.

Mrs. Eugene Sutton showed two kinds of deciduous holly and explained each.

Mrs. H.C. Klingenschmitt, Mrs. F.S. Corbett, Mrs. J.A. Piver and Mrs. J.E. Ricks were assisting hostesses.

Milliners Turn Cartwheels Over The Revival Of Hats

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Senior Editor
NEW YORK (UPI) — Milliners are turning cartwheels of pure joy. Hats are back, and mostly wide-brimmed. One recession is over anyway.

Hats as the finishing touch for a woman's wardrobe went into limbo, or onto storage shelves, for several years. Only a few women clung to the hatted look. Hats no longer were requisite for attending religious services, weddings or funerals.

"I think it was the flower children who just about did us in," said Frank Olive, who's had his own millinery business for 15 years and before that was with Emme, one of the great designer names of the hat era.

"I think the wheel just turned," said Olive. "We have beautiful clothes again."

"You no longer see what I call the thrift shop 'Annie' look. Gone are the second hand looks, the orthopedic shoes.

"American women have changed their attitudes more towards the European woman's — buy less but get the best. We're no longer in a throwaway economy.

"Our lifestyle has changed. We go to restaurants instead of the clubs. The movies are changing us too ... reviving our awe of make-believe.

"Change in hair styles has been a factor. We no longer have all that bouffant look. All that teasing."

Olive said he survived the millinery recession by making hats for airlines attendants. He even did hats for Burger King uniforms. And, he designed dresses.

Olive was one of the current crop of milliners who surfaced as the designers of the big hats, many of cartwheel vintage, that the New York garment industry manufacturers used to accessorize their spring fashion collections, just shown to buyers and reporters in a two-week crush.

Olive made some of the widest sailor shapes seen, some of them 9-inch-wide bands of straw encircling the classic shallow crown.

Among others, his hats were shown with collections from Adri, Mollie Parnis, Oscar de la Renta and Adele Simpson.

Joan Simpson Raines, executive vice-president of the her mother's firm (on Seventh Avenue for half a century), laughingly commented, "We'll just have to watch and not bump into each other on the street. Or just think ... trying to get through a revolving door."

Mrs. Raines, whose husband, Richard, now is president of Adele Simpson, said that in fact she thought the hat revival "has to do with the new spirit of dressing up. The close fitting clothes, the slim skirts, call for some balance at the top."

Lee Black, who designed the hats for the Bill Blass collection, said one of the reasons for the comeback of hats was the whole generation that had grown up not wearing them.

"We're getting the young market," said Black, 38. "Motion pictures and television have been an influence."

"And clothes for spring are much more classic. The silhouette is narrowed, the waist defined. Hats help to balance the whole look."

"Some of those wide brims are not very practical on a windy day, but remember they protect the face from the sun. And we're in an era of skin care awareness."

For spring 1983, the milliner featured the classic widebrimmed cartwheel, and then varied it with squared and triangular shapes. One wide brim that he called "the bee keeper" had the brim turned down around the face; the model saw through a lacy effect. His "punchbowl" shape was a straw turned up and away from the face, looking something like a South American head-basket for lugging fruit.

The small hat was called the "fin," a head-hugger straw minus brim that had a fish fin silhouette.

Blass said he sees the hat as the finishing touch to an outfit. "but I'll be interested to see whether women once again will build a whole hat wardrobe."

Patricia Underwood, 35, an English-born designer, thinks Britain's Princess Diana has had a lot to do with hat revivals. Miss Underwood says her youthful looking wardrobe has affected international dress of the "20 to 35" group from which the hat resurgence is coming.

Miss Underwood created the big brimmed numbers for the collections of Perry Ellis, Calvin Klein, Anne Klein, Pauline Trigere, and some for Mary McFadden.

"My grandmother had her own milliner," she recalled. "And I have a friend, an elderly lady, who always wears a hat. She would say to me, 'You won't believe it, but I bought this hat at the five-and-dime. Then I go to trimming places and pick up ribbons and such.'"

Those outsize brims are not for the theater, Miss Underwood said. "A hat should not be offensive to anyone else in any way. That's unfair."

Miss Underwood's solution for what to do with a big hat on a breezy day: "It's a matter of logistics. Like a good sailor, determine where the wind is coming from and set your course accordingly."

Shoelace Beads New Teen Age Fashion Craze

DAVENPORT, Iowa (UPI) — Flower children of the '60s wore beads around their neck. Bo Derek braided beads into her hair. Today's teenagers think beads, safety pins and shoelaces are the right fashion combination.

Youngsters flocking to Davenport area department stores have bought the town out of safety pins and colored beads to make Friendship Pins.

They are made by threading any combination of beads onto a pin, which is then given to a friend, who attaches it to the criss-crossed laces of a pair of sneakers.

Observers have reported sightings of tennis shoes bulging with the plastic and metal ornamentation. At least one school principal has voiced concern that the fad is distracting students from their work.

Store managers are uncertain where the fad originated. Some speculate it was the World's Fair in Tennessee. Others have suggested Kansas City or Montana.

A toy distributor told the local newspaper his suppliers on the East and West Coasts hadn't yet heard of the craze, so he sent them a few samples to spur interest in their areas.

"It must have gotten to Chicago last week because a friend in a northern suburb called Friday and asked me to send beads and pins," the distributor said.

FARM-CITY WEEK — A farm city women's breakfast was held here Tuesday morning in observance of Farm-City Week. The purpose of a farm-city program is to bring about a better understanding of and appreciation for the American way of life. Its function is to create an impact in every home, said Mrs.

Couple Has Anniversary

AYDEN — Mr. and Mrs. Travis Dixon of Ayden celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary Saturday. A reception was held in the fellowship hall of Zion Chapel Free Will Baptist Church.

Olivia C. Dixon of Washington, D.C., niece of the honorees, was mistress of ceremonies. The celebration was given by James R. Dixon of Albany, N.Y. and Yvonne Dixon Williams of Landover, Md., son and daughter of the couple.

The program included musical tributes and other expressions by the couple's pastor, Bishop Stephen Jones, Mrs. J.M. Reaves, Bishop W.L. Jones and J.J. Brown, mayor pro tem. The couple's son narrated events from the couple's courtship and marriage. Several presentations were made to the couple.

Mr. and Mrs. Dixon are members of the Zion Chapel Church and several local and state fraternal organizations.

Gizzard Skinning Helps

Liver trimming, gizzard skinning, wing tagging, oil sac cutters, giblet stuffing, wing folding and chicken catching might not appear to be glamorous positions in this era of computer controlled information systems, but in a rural county such as Martin such jobs represent a steady pay roll.

Perdue Farms Inc. has begun taking applications for some 235 workers who will work in their chicken processing plant at Robersonville. The firm has run page ads in area newspapers calling for applicants for the above listed positions, plus many more.

The firm reported last week that the campaign had brought in some 1,400 applications and perhaps 600 more had applied prior to the advertising. The firm acquired the plant from Central Soya and expects to begin its own operations around Jan. 13.

The operation was positive economic news for Martin County where Blue Ridge Shoe Co. is closing its operations in December and County Manager Donnie Pittman said, considering the general economic conditions, "anything can help."

When the plant begins production, at least 235 workers will have regular paychecks coming in, and that certainly has to help Martin County and the general area.

Recommendations Are Made

The Governor's Task Force on Drunken Drivers has completed its proposals for coping with a major problem that affects all society.

The proposals were presented to the governor last week.

Recommendations included increasing educational efforts to make known the dangers of alcohol abuse.

There were also proposals for stricter enforcement of the drunk driving laws. Included were training more Breathalyzer operators, allowing roadside tests, allowing officers to request drivers to submit to the test before an arrest, 12 month revocation of license for not taking the test. It was also recommended that a 10-day license revocation be instituted when the test shows .10 percent alcohol blood content, mandatory minimum sentences for drunk driving and other recommendations.

The task force has done its job of outlining a serious problem and making recommendations. Now it is up to the Legislature to act on the recommendations.

Alternatives

By Paul T. O'Connor
RALEIGH — If North Carolina wants to experiment with a criminal sentencing program that uses alternatives to prison, a good place to start might be with the state's 557 female prisoners, a number of women's advocates are saying.

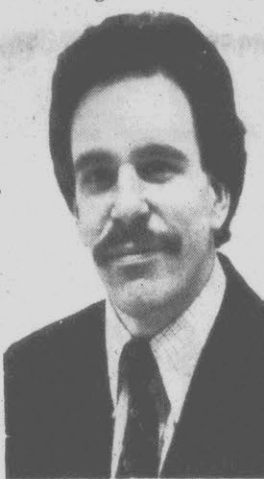

The idea of prison alternatives for inmates of both sexes is getting pushed along by the rapidly increasing costs of building cells and sustaining inmates. A new cell can cost as much as $50,000 and each of the state's 17,000 inmates costs the taxpayers $9,000 a year to keep behind bars. For the last two years, a private commission has studied the possibilities of prison alternatives and its report should be widely read when it is released this week. They'll recommend that non-violent offenders be punished through mandatory community service, required restitution and demanding probationary service.

The report will come at a time, however, when the public is crying for more effective anti-crime measures. In polls taken before the election, voters listed crime as their second greatest concern — behind the economy. "Lock them up so I'll be safe" is a very popular attitude right now.

This is why the state would be wise to experiment with women, some say. Of the women admitted to Women's Prison in Raleigh last year, 80 percent had committed nonviolent crimes, 45 percent had committed misdemeanors. Those who would start an alternatives program with women say we'd be taking less risk while we found out what works and what doesn't.

Lao-Rupert of the N.C. Prison and Jails Project in Durham says the state would find an alternatives program for women much more manageable to begin with. The smaller number of female inmates — 557 in all and only a portion of those would be involved — would be easier to monitor than a program involving men. Yet moving a few dozen out of Women's Prison could mean a significant savings.

PAUL T. O'CONNOR

All of the state's 557 female prisoners are held at Women's Prison — a facility designed to hold 500. So there is pressure to build new facilities for female prisoners — maybe another prison, or some kind of minimum security facility of halfway house. Ms. Rupert says the state would be better off identifying those non-violent prisoners who could be released into a community based punishment program. With the population of Women's Prison reduced, the state wouldn't have to build a new facility.

A woman in jail often means a child without parents. Of those who were admitted to Women's Prison last year, 78 percent had children but only 17 percent were married. The average educational level was five years and 72 percent were considered poor. They are the sole support for children but they are not with the children. If women could be punished at home, their children wouldn't get hurt in the process.

Susan Frost, a legislative researcher, presented these statistics and arguments to the Commission on the Needs of Women this month along with the recommendation that an alternatives program began with women. The report was received very warmly but it has to be remembered that the commission is made up of some

A Case For Hospitality

Well, they sent Geoffrey Arthur, Prime to the cooler the other day for 30 years. Prime, if you don't keep up on British spies, was the chap who worked in the ultra-top-secret communications system in Cheltenham, and gave top secrets away to Soviets for 14 years. He blew the West's satellite operation, the one where we could listen in on every telephone call in the USSR.

The question arises, why are the British so slow in finding out who their spies are? I think I accidentally discovered the reason the other night when I watched the TV show "Smiley's People" starring Alec Guinness, based on John Le Carre's book.

George Smiley is brought out of retirement to find out why the KGB's top man Karla has sent his daughter to a Swiss sanitarium. If they can prove Karla violated his KGB oath, by diddling with KGB funds, they can get Karla to come over to the West and make him tell every dirty little secret the KGB has. So much for plot.

While watching it I suddenly got the clue to why the British counterespionage people are so slow in getting their mole.

It appears that Her Majesty's Secret Service cannot deal with any problem without first offering the person they're talking to either a cup of tea or a drink.

"George, it's so good to see you again. How is Anne?"

"She's fine."

"Would you care for a cup of tea, George?"

"Thank you very much."

"Leggins, get George a cup of tea."

"I wanted to ask you a question. Why did Karla send Kirvosky to Paris?"

"Right, George. Do you take milk?"

"No milk, thank you."

"Of course not. You never did take it with milk. Let's see, Kirvosky. It seems he had a dustup many years ago with Kaminsky. One lump or two, George?"

"One lump will be fine, thank you."

"Only one lump of sugar for George, Leggins."

"Yessir. When I was a student at the Academy, Mr. Smiley always took one lump."

"Righto, Leggins. Most of the people in the Circus took two. But George always preferred to go it alone, and take one lump."

"About Kaminsky. You were saying?"

"Yes, Kaminsky and Kirvosky were once good friends. Is it too strong, George? Leggins tends to be very sparsish with the hot water."

"It's quite good as a matter of fact."

"There is nothing like a spot of tea when you're putting all the pieces of the puzzle together, is there, George?"

"I imagine not. You were saying Kaminsky and Kirvosky had a falling out. Do you know what it was about?"

"Something happened a long time ago between them. I don't want to get personal, Geor. But does Anne still make a good cup of tea?"

"I wouldn't know."

"Sorry to hear that, George. We all liked Anne."

"I was aware of that. Anne made tea for everybody but me. Can we get back to Kirvosky?"

"Of course. Kirvosky showed up in Paris some time ago as Karla's special boy. Kaminsky recognized him and told the head of the Free Estonian League. Another cup, George?"

"No thank you, I think I'll be running along."

"Always happy to help. Let's have a drink next week. You're a Scotch man, aren't I obtain my religion, he said

Lost Time

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan, prime mover in trying to advance the next 10 percent tax cut by six months, was mortified when he was scooped by his Cabinet colleague and sometime rival, Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige.

Seeking to get back in the limelight after many months in the shadows, Regan had been quietly pushing the accelerated tax cut for two weeks. President Reagan was so impressed that he called the Treasury secretary at home one night to convey his interest. But it was Baldrige who slipped the news to the world.

With this premature release, Treasury operatives had to make up for lost time in plugging the idea to skeptical Republicans in Congress. Don Regan himself was traveling the Capitol Hill circuit last week. But a strong attack against the idea inside the administration — led by Dr. Martin Feldstein, the aggressive new chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers — may abort Regan's plan.

Packwood's Commitments
Sen. Robert Packwood's reputation as a slick political operator was enhanced when it was learned that he won commitments for re-election as Senate Republican campaign chairman from two newly-elected conservatives at the moment he was handing out 1982 campaign funds to them.

The commitments for liberal Packwood from the Senate's two new conservatives, Rep. Paul Trible of Virginia and Chic Hecht of Nevada, was a body blow to conservative Sen. Richard Lugar's challenge against Packwood. That they were obtained at a time when Packwood was dispensing Senate campaign committee funds has raised eyebrows.

A footnote: New Right operatives grumble Lugar's campaign has been sluggish. Calling conservative senators to line up votes for him, these operatives were surprised to learn that Lugar himself had not yet called the senators. Packwood has collected an impressive string of commitments from conservatives, headed by Sen. Charles Grassley of Iowa.

A Hasty Summit
High-level officials in the administration were dismayed that President Reagan's two top foreign policy advisers, Secretary of State George Shultz and national security assistant William P. Clark, were willing to expose their chief to an unprepared summit in Moscow by sending him to the Brezhnev funeral.

These critical officials were not so much concerned that a visit would give the wrong message to the world — particularly Poland. Rather, they felt it would be an unjustifiable gamble to send the president unprepared into a summit with Soviet leader Yuri Andropov. Reagan in Moscow would have triggered far more comprehensive talks than did his standby, Vice President George Bush.

A Footnote: Friends of White House chief of staff James Baker hoped he would get some credit from the right for successfully blocking a Reagan visit to Russia. But conservatives, deeply distrustful of Baker, were unimpressed.

Percy's Primary
Rushing conservative Rep. Tom Corcoran's plans to challenge liberal Sen. Charles H. Percy in the 1984 Illinois Republican primary did not achieve its desired effect: keeping President Reagan away from a Jan. 19 fund-raiser for Percy in Chicago.

Percy's invitation to the president was accepted months ago at the recommendation of Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker. That was a preemptive strike to give Percy a free ride for a fourth-term nomination. But Corcoran counterattacked by unveiling his potential candidacy in a letter to the state's 102 Republican county chairmen.

Corcoran's letter was intended to help White House aides keep Reagan out of such intramural tangles, but it failed. Although Percy is by no means the favorite senator at the White House, his power as chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee means nobody there wants to antagonize him.

No Heir Ro Jesse
The unexpected defeat of congressional candidate William Cobey in North Carolina was particularly galling to the state's Republican leaders because they saw him as their ap-

PRESSING ON

It is of little use for us to read about the religious experience of the saints unless in our reading we find some suggestion as to how we also may obtain their confidence, security and peace.

No man in the Christian Church has advised and helped the followers of Jesus Christ so much as Paul the Apostle. He wrote thirteen epistles to churches and individuals and in them discussed almost every Christian problem. This is the way I obtain my religion, he said in substance; you can obtain it in like fashion. I gave up an external, legalistic type of religion for the internal religion of Jesus Christ. I renounced all things that I might gain that person as my friend, companion, lord, and savior.

But having received it and having entered into a new life, Paul did not stop there. "I press on," he declared, "if so be that I may lay hold on that for which also I was laid hold on by Jesus Christ." — Elisha Douglass

Finland Wants Trade Surplus

By RISTO MAENPAA
Associated Press Writer
HELSINKI, Finland (AP) — Finland, Moscow's second-leading trading partner in the West, is trying to eliminate a diplomatically embarrassing trade surplus with its giant eastern neighbor.

The Finns want to do it by buying something other than oil and natural gas, their traditional imports from the Soviet Union. But such raw materials seem to hold the key to any correction of the imbalance.

Non-traditional possibilities are heavy industry such as steel and nuclear power plants or technology, through licenses to produce Soviet-patented processes developed there.

But despite a special trade relationship, which features agreements giving the Finns long-term trade security enjoyed by few others in the West, Western analysts in Helsinki say the Finns face the same problem as other Western countries in trade with Moscow.

That is, most of what the Soviet Union has for sale — except raw materials and energy — is not worth buying by Western standards.

Unlike trade among Western nations, Finnish-Soviet commerce is not on a free-market basis but follows arrangements set down in long-term trade agreements. Soviet and Finnish officials, and generally Finnish entrepreneurs, like the arrangement.

Finland currently exports around $727.3 million more a year to the Soviet Union than it imports, despite the agreements specifying generally equal two-way trade.

Finnish officials tend not to describe the imbalance as a problem, but they are known to be concerned at their inability to live up to the balance commitment.

Twenty-five percent of Finland's foreign trade is with the Soviets. West Germany, with a much larger economic and population base, is the only other Western country whose trade volume with Moscow is higher.

Finland sends ships, machines and consumer goods eastward in exchange for Soviet natural gas and oil.

Yet Finland's oil consumption is declining, already to a point below the amount it brings in from the Soviet Union, and high Soviet gas prices are driving down Finnish usage.

Finland's first concrete step toward a solution was to set up in London an office by Neste Ltd., the state-owned trading company that is the main funnel for Soviet crude oil and natural gas into Finland. Neste will buy oil and gas from the Soviets and sell it to other countries.

Neste has bought a million tons of Libyan oil from the Soviets for direct re-sale abroad, the first time the Soviet-Finnish relationship has been allowed to spill over into other countries.

And the Soviet Union had agreed to lower its natural gas prices to Finland if the Finns would buy 150 million additional cubic meters next year. Imports this year are estimated to reach 750 million cubic meters, and customers will have to be found to use the new gas.

The price of Soviet gas, never revealed by Neste, is the principal reason a Soviet pipeline to southeastern Finland, inaugurated in January 1974, never has been used to capacity. The original pipeline agreement allots the Finns 1.4 billion cubic meters annually.

The new price-consumption agreement has not been linked specifically with the trade imbalance, but negotiations were stepped up in the fall when the balance tilted strongly toward the Finns.

Jorma Inki, a top official involved in Finnish-Soviet trade, said the surplus might fall by around $121 million this year due to higher winter-time crude oil deliveries.

But to reduce the imbalance further, he said both sides must show inventiveness and come up with new Soviet-made goods of sufficient quality to sell in Finland.

"We have a structural surplus now," said Inki, head of the Foreign Ministry's Bureau for Economic Cooperation with the Soviet Union. "We are combing the supply side of the Soviet economy for new imports."

Collision Is Investigated

Cars driven by Terry Lynn Lyles of Farmville and Sandra Kay White of Windsor collided about 8:30 p.m. Tuesday at the intersection of Cotanche and Reade streets.

Police, who charged Ms. White with driving under the influence and driving left of center, estimated damage at $800 to the Lyles car and $900 to the White vehicle.

Two Break-Ins Reported

Greenville police were continuing their investigation today of two break-ins reported about 8 a.m. Tuesday — one at North Carolina Equipment Co. on Memorial Drive and one at Famous Subs at 321 E. 10th St.

Chief Glenn Cannon said thieves entered a rear door at N.C. Equipment Co. and took several thousand dollars worth of tools as well as a quantity of antifreeze and several batteries. Several hundred dollars in cash and change, a gold necklace valued at $1,400, three rump roasts, and six gallons of wine were reported taken from the restaurant.

Governors Urge Change In Medicaid

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's governors have sent President Reagan a counterproposal to "new federalism," suggesting that the federal government assume control of the expensive Medicaid program.

The alternative plan, approved by an executive committee of the National Governors Association in Utah last week, was sent to the White House Monday. The Associated Press obtained a copy.

The governors came up with the idea after months of talks on "new federalism" failed to produce agreement with the White House on a joint proposal for Congress.

Reagan's "new federalism" plan, first unveiled last January, calls for transferring some 30 federal programs to the states and shared responsibility for welfare programs.

When negotiations with the White House stalled last summer, the governors voted to keep talking with administration officials but also to draft their own plan.

Under the governors' proposal, Washington would assume all or part of Medicaid costs. It also suggests strongly that the federal government assume responsibility for medical care of the needy.

In exchange for Medicaid, programs the governors would take over from Washington include education, transportation, job training, water and sewer grants, and urban aid.

"Under our proposal, the federal government would take over all or part of Medicaid in exchange for states' acceptance of a comparable level of categorical," a cover letter accompanying the plan said.

The plan also removes the country's principal welfare program, Aid to Families With Dependent Children, from the bargaining table.

Reagan has proposed turning AFDC over to the states entirely, at a cost of $8.1 billion annually. But the governors have long held that all basic welfare, including AFDC, should be under federal control.

The states' latest proposal would sidestep this issue by ignoring it for the time being. The federal government now pays about 60 percent of AFDC costs and the states pay most of the remainder, with some local governments participating.

The White House had no official response to the governors' latest proposals. But one official, who asked not to be quoted, said it appeared the state leaders were reverting to positions held before the long negotiations began. Congress may have to resolve the differences, he said.

Reagan's latest proposal, released in June, offered to take on many of the Medicaid options but not all of them. The administration also offered only to share the costs of long-term care.

Medicaid, which now costs the states $17.8 billion and Washington another $21 billion, remains the chief sticking point in "new federalism" negotiations.

It is the most expensive and fastest growing of all the country's public assistance programs.

The governors' sample outline for a Medicaid transfer that would turn it over to the federal government in three stages, although the exact mix was left open for future negotiation.

First, the governors would give Washington responsibility for providing Medicaid benefits to persons already eligible for Supplemental Security Income. This is an assistance program for aged, blind and disabled persons.

This part of the swap would cost the federal government about $4.1 billion, but the states listed several categorical programs of equal value that are now federally funded but that they states would pay for in the future.

Next, the federal government would assume Medicaid for AFDC beneficiaries — a $5.3 billion item.

Finally, the national government would provide long-term medical care under Medicaid. This principally involves nursing home benefits, and costs about $8.4 billion.

Israeli Airline To Be Placed In Receivership

JERUSALEM (AP) — El Al shareholders decided today to liquidate the Israeli national airline after failing to reach agreement with workers on a tough new labor contract requiring salary cuts and layoffs.

The government, which owns 97 percent of the shares, and its three junior partners resolved to put the airline that once was one of the proudest symbols of Jewish statehood into receivership.

The other shares are owned by the Jewish Agency, which oversees relations between foreign Jewry and Israel, the Histadrut labor federation, and Zim, the national shipping company.

Nahman Perel, chairman of the board of directors, read a statement to reporters after the meeting in Jerusalem's Holyland Hotel saying the shareholders had concluded that the airline's losses were too great to be recovered.

It said the shareholders saw "no chance of improving the company's financial and operational situation, because of repeated disruptions of orderly work in the company."

Negotiations to save the airline continued right up to the shareholders' meeting, but foundered over the refusal by El Al pilots to accept the package deal approved by other works committees representing the airline's 4,700 workers.

"We tried, but it didn't work," said Ezra Sadan, director general of the Finance Ministry, after the shareholders took their decision.

Union leaders claimed the decision was political, because it aimed to extricate the government from a crisis over its pledge to halt El Al flights on Sabbath and holy days.

Prime Minister Menachem Begin's government had agreed to the Sabbath ban in order to keep the ultra-orthodox Agudat Israel party in his coalition, but attempts to implement the decision met with violent opposition from the workers and aroused protests from secular liberals.

El Al has been plagued by strikes and a deficit that reached $47 million in 1980-81.

Helms, voted by readers of the most admired conservative in Congress, faces an uphill battle for re-election in 1984 against Democratic governor Jim Hunt. Hence, Republicans wanted Cobey, former University of North Carolina athletic director, seated in Congress as his successor in case Helms should lose.

Moreover, on the chance that Helms might not seek reelection in 1984, Cobey as a sitting congressman would be his obvious replacement. But Cobey is now a two-time loser (he was defeated for lieutenant governor in 1980), defeated in the 1982 debacle in North Carolina that also knocked out two Republican congressmen.

NASA Unveils Back 'Rocket'

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Space shuttle astronauts can say goodbye to computers in favor of seat-of-the-pants navigation when they test a backpack "rocket" in 1984, officials say.

Astronauts will try out the Buck Rogers-style device in two years and hope to use it to get from the shuttle to a crippled satellite three months later, Johnson Space Center officials announced Tuesday.

Two flight models and a training mockup of the Manned Maneuvering Unit are scheduled for delivery early next year, said project manager Ed Whitsett. The test is set for January 1984.

The MMUs, built by Maryland-based Martin Marietta, will cost about $7.5 million each, with the program costing about $55 million, said Steve Nesbitt, spokesman for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Testing of the MMU will depend on the success of the shuttle space suits. A 3½-hour spacewalk last week on the shuttle's fifth mission had to be scrapped when a fan went out on astronaut Joe Allen's life-support system. Then a pressure regulator failed on Bill Lenoir's suit, and the spacewalk was canceled.

The parts have been sent back to the manufacturer, Hamilton Standard, of Windsor Locks, Conn., in an effort to learn what caused the malfunctions.

The MMU looks like a door with arm rests. It attaches with latches to an astronaut's backpack and allows him to ride jets of compressed nitrogen gas away from the spaceship, roaming as far as 1,000 feet. The jets are fired by two hand controls.

The first model of the MMU has no guidance or navigation equipment.

"The astronaut is basically flying by the seat of his pants," Whitsett said. However, later models may have radar, radio beacons and small navigation computers.

"The whole idea is to make it fly like a spacecraft so the astronaut can easily adapt. It's the rent-a-car concept — he just gets it on and goes," Whitsett said.

One control fires gas jets to move the astronaut any of six directions — up, down, left, right, forward, backward, Whitsett said.

The other fires jets to control his position in space, Whitsett said. Move the stick one way and the astronaut does cartwheels, another way and he turns head over heels or spins like a skater.

"There's a lot of pep to it, but it's still very controllable. It's not enough to get good sensation of movement," he said.

The MMU carries enough fuel to accelerate from zero to 66 feet per second, or 45 mph, he said. But for safety reasons, Whitsett said, space voyagers will go much slower.

Astronauts on the 11th shuttle mission plan to fly to unit up and down the cargo bay. On the 13th flight, set for April 1984, the MMU is to be used reach the disabled Solar Maximum Satellite.

An astronaut equipped with the MMU will attach a grappling device onto the satellite with a mechanical arm, which will pull the satellite into the shuttle's cargo bay.

Two astronauts then plan to repair the satellite by replacing an electronics box. Afterward, the satellite will be returned to full operation.

Ghana Repels Attempted Coup

LONDON (AP) — Troops loyal to the military government crushed an attempted coup Tuesday in the West African nation of Ghana, its head of state announced today.

Ghanaian leader Flight Lt. Jerry Rawlings, who seized power for a second time on Dec. 31, 1981, announced the failed coup attempt in a radio broadcast from the nation's capital, Accra.

Radio Accra said Rawlings, 35, had imposed a curfew and closed Ghana's borders until further notice.

"I've come to the studio this morning to announce that loyal troops have successfully defeated an attempt to overthrow this regime, and this began yesterday afternoon," Rawlings said in the broadcast, which was monitored in London.

"All units of the armed forces and strategic points are firmly under the control of loyal troops."

"Unit commanders are to remain vigilant and move troops only on my orders or on the orders of the army commander. I urge all soldiers to remain at their posts and not believe any of the lies being fabricated."

"I'm ordering the remnants and misguided individuals still on the run to surrender to the nearest police station for their own safety. Otherwise they will be mercilessly crushed."

"I appeal to all civilians to go about their normal duties and business peacefully."

Rawlings gave no details of the alleged coup attempt.

Ghana, a nation of about 11 million people, is located just north of the equator on Africa's west coast. It has a primarily agricultural economy and was once the world's leading cocoa exporter. In recent years, however, Ghana has suffered serious balance of payments problems because of declining prices and smuggling of cocoa.

One of Rawlings' first acts after taking power the first time in June 1979 was to blow up the Makola market in Accra because it was the center of black market trade in everything that could not be found in shops at government-controlled prices.

Rawlings also executed several high-ranking army officers for corruption at that time. But he soon called elections among Ghana's five political parties and stepped down in favor of newly elected President Hilla Limann.

The young air force officer seized power again in 1982 charging that Limann had brought "nothing but repression" to Ghana. He called for "nothing less than a revolution — something that will transform the social and economic order of this country."

The World Bank listed Ghana's per capita income at $380 a year, and a loaf of bread cost the same as the minimum daily wage at the only place where it was available — the reborn Makola black market.

Ghana, formerly Britain's Gold Coast colony, was granted independence in 1957 under the late Kwame N. Nkrumah, who was ousted in 1966 by a military coup.

Reagan Studies Plan For Economic 'Fresh Boost'

By TERENCE HUNT
Associated Press Writer
SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — After endorsing a massive highway-repair and jobs program, President Reagan is considering additional proposals that he will send to Congress to curb unemployment and give the economy a "fresh boost."

Before flying here Tuesday for a six-day Thanksgiving vacation, Reagan gave his backing to a 5-cent per gallon increase in the federal gasoline tax to finance $5.5 billion in highway and bridge reconstruction projects. The program has gained bipartisan support in Congress in the face of the nation's 10.4 percent unemployment rate. It will produce and estimated 320,000 jobs. Raising the gas tax to 9 cents a gallon would cost the average motorist $30 a year, Reagan said.

Announcing his support of the highway plan, Reagan said he also was considering "a series of other measures that would help to give our economy a fresh boost as we head into 1983."

"It is my hope," he added, "that this package can be high on the agenda when the Congress returns to Washington next week."

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Reagan likely will decide on the components of the package during the vacation trip, but probably will not announce it until early next week.

Speaking with reporters on Air Force One, Speakes said the proposals under review include accelerating next July's income tax cut so that it would take effect in January. The proposal is designed to stimulate the economy by putting more money in the hands of consumers.

That plan has gotten a chilly reception in Congress. Republican congressional leaders already have told the president there are not enough votes to pass it.

But a senior administration official said in Washington that Reagan is leaning toward speeding up the 10 percent income tax cut. The source, who asked to remain anonymous, said the idea had "an awful lot of political sex appeal."

Speakes said the package also includes "unemployment measures dealing with the structural unemployment — such as joblessness among teen-agers and transitional workers."

emphasized that no decisions have been made.

Reagan will remain at his 688-acre ranch high in the Santa Ynez Mountains until Monday, when he makes a brief trip to Los Angeles to address the National League of Cities before returning to Washington.

The president and his wife, and possibly some family members, will have a private Thanksgiving dinner at the ranch Thursday.

During his stay here, Reagan will have "the usual amount of work, plus some boning up" for his five-day trip to Latin America that he will undertake next Tuesday, Speakes said.

He brought along with him briefing books on each of the countries he will visit — Brazil, Costa Rica, Honduras and Colombia, Speakes said. Reagan also will hold talks with national security advisor William P. Clark, who flew West with the president.

Reagan's California trip comes one day after he announced a "dense pack" deployment scheme for the intercontinental missile. The plan, which faces a serious challenge in Congress, calls for spacing 100 missiles closely together to protect them against a Soviet strike.

The Soviet news agency Tass said the U.S. plan was a "a new dangerous step" in preparation for nuclear war.

Americans Dislike Federal Tax The Most

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite congressional passage of the largest tax cut in history, more than one-third of Americans interviewed in a new poll consider the federal income tax the most unfair tax they have to pay.

A poll commissioned by the Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations last May found 36 percent think the federal income tax is the worst, or least fair. That was about the same percentage in 1981, 1980 and 1979.

Just 10 years ago, only 19 percent of those responding to a similar poll viewed the federal income tax as the worst.

In 1972, the local property tax was considered the worst by 45 percent. Only 30 percent now view property taxes as least fair, in part because of considerable reform efforts in most states.

The May 1982 poll found 14 percent who consider the state sales tax least fair, while 11 percent gave that distinction to state income taxes.

The latest poll sampled opinions of 1,000 adults nationwide eight months after taxpayers began feeling the first effects of the federal income-tax cut proposed by President Reagan during the presidential campaign and enacted by Congress.

Groups benefiting most from the tax cut were among those who said they still consider the federal tax the worst. Forty-eight percent of professionals, managers and business owners polled listed the tax as least fair, up from 38 percent a year earlier. And 44 percent of those with incomes of $35,000 and more also categorized the federal tax as the worst.

But 35 percent of those polled said the federal government gives them most for their money. That compares with 30 percent in 1981 and 39 percent 10 years ago. Twenty-eight percent favored the local government, 20 percent listed the state and 17 percent couldn't make a choice.

The commission that sponsored the poll is a federal-state-local group created by Congress to monitor the federal government.

Early Tax Cut Foreseen

WASHINGTON (AP) — Even though Republican leaders are skeptical, President Reagan is leaning toward asking Congress to speed up next year's scheduled 10 percent income tax cut, a senior administration official says.

The source, who requested anonymity, said Tuesday that Reagan has consulted members of Congress about advancing the tax cut from next July to January as a way to stimulate the economy.

Reagan said he has not made a decision on the issue, but the aide said, "It has an awful lot of political sex appeal."

"Legislatively, it may be very difficult to accomplish in the span of the three-week lame-duck session" that begins next week, he said. But he added, in a reference both to the White House and Capitol Hill:

"It's got everybody's imagination. People on the Hill are beginning to focus on it. I think his (Reagan's) inclination is to go ahead with it."

Last week, Republican congressional leaders cast doubt about whether Reagan could get such a shift passed by the special session of Congress.

House Republican Leader Robert H. Michel of Illinois said he told Reagan: "Well, I just said we don't have the votes." And Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker was unenthusiastic about the plan.

Reagan also said his decision Tuesday to endorse a 5-cent increase in the federal gasoline tax did not conflict with an earlier statement made at his news conference Sept. 28.

Then, Reagan said he would not support a tax increase "unless there's a palace coup and I'm overtaken or overthrown."

But on Tuesday, he said that statement should be taken "in the context ... of our tax bill." The president also contended that his meaning at the time was that he would not use highway or excise taxes as a source of general revenue.

The president said he was supporting the increase in the federal gasoline tax to 9 cents to pay for highway and bridge reconstruction projects.

He cited Transportation Department figures that show 10 percent of the nation's interstate highway system and 23,000 bridges need resurfacing, replacement or rehabilitation.

The increase would mark the first federal gasoline tax increase since 1959. States also impose taxes on gasoline that average 12 cents a gallon.

Although the president stressed the program was not a job-creating proposal, it will add 320,000 jobs to the depressed construction business and related areas, Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis said.

Senate Republican Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. of Tennessee and House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. of Massachusetts have said they will push for a highway-rebuilding project.

"From our early soundings, it appears this measure will command broad bipartisan support," the president said in a brief, hastily scheduled visit to the White House press briefing room to announce his decision.

Ports' Profit Rises 73 Percent

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Several unexpected cargo moves at the Wilmington Port are primarily responsible for an increase of more than $293,000 in profits at the state's two ports from July to October of this year, state officials say.

Comptroller Ruff A. Devane told the State Ports Authority Board of Directors on Tuesday that combined profits for the Wilmington and Morehead City ports for the first four months of the 1982-83 fiscal year were more than $697,000, compared to $403,651 during the same period last year.

Devane said that represents a 73 percent increase for the first quarter. Revenues for the period were $4,735,551, an increase of $381,776 over last year, he said.

DeVane attributed the profit increase to several unexpected cargo moves at the Wilmington port. They included an extra salt ship, an increase from the budgeted 210,000 tons of forest products to 360,000 tons and an increase in container business.

The state port at Wilmington had a net profit of $702,934 on gross revenues of $3,551,731, DeVane said. The actual profit was higher than the budgeted profit of $652,092 on budgeted revenues of $3,635,416.

Last year at this time, Wilmington had a profit of $315,974 on revenues totalling $2,987,973.

Profits at Morehead City were much less than what was expected. DeVane said Morehead City showed a $1,641 loss, despite a large profit in October.

From July through October, Morehead City had a loss of $1,641 on gross revenues of $1,178,820. The budgeted profit had been $222,080 on budgeted revenues of $1,564,408. Last year at this time, the port had a profit of $91,113.

DeVane said the loss came because revenue tonnage budgeted to move at the port by this time had not reached the level needed to raise profits, but those cargoes were expected to move in the next few months.

Group Suggests Alternatives For Prison

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Re-examination of the length of prison terms, restitution for victims of crimes and sentencing non-violent criminals to community service work are among a sweeping set of proposals included in a report to be presented today to Gov. Jim Hunt.

The recommendations are part of a two-year study conducted by the Citizens Commission on Alternatives to Incarceration.

The study presents the alternatives as a possible way to deal with prison overcrowding in North Carolina. The state's prison facilities, built to house 14,800, are currently populated by 17,400.

"As North Carolina's prison population expands and the cost of incarcerating so many offenders in state prisons rises sharply, the state should reassess its policies that favor incarceration as a penalty," the report said. "Community-based penalties as an alternative to prison are feasible for many non-violent offenders."

State Court of Appeals Judge Willis P. Whichard said that in 1980, 76 percent of the state prison population were sentenced for non-violent crimes.

Whichard is chairman of the study commission, which is made up of judges, attorneys, legislators, ex-prisoners and civic leaders.

All those convicted of misdeemeanors or non-violent felonies such as larceny or burglary should be sentenced to do community service work rather than going to prison, the study recommends.

A statewide community-based penalty program also would be established to plan alternatives to prison. The program would be designed on a case-by-case basis.

Penalties also could include forms of restitution such as paying victims for the value of stolen property, the summary says.

In addition to Hunt, the report will be presented to Attorney General Rufus L. Edmisten, Chief Justice Joseph Branch of the state Supreme Court and Correction Secretary James C. Woodard.

Among the other proposals endorsed by the commission as possible alternatives to prison sentences are:

- Eligibility for participation in felony diversion programs should not automatically be barred to persons who have previously participated in probation or other felony diversion programs. The provision could open community-based programs to repeat offenders, who are now treated more harshly by the courts and are more likely to receive an active prison sentence.

such as larceny or vandalism.

- Restitution to victims should receive top priority in distribution of court costs and fines that are levied on offenders.

— The Department of Correction should review its classification system under which prisoners are designated as maximum-, medium-, or minimum-custody.

Gypsy Moth Population Increases

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — More than 10,000 gypsy moths were trapped in the state in 1982, and agriculture officials say the leaf-chomping pests are moving toward North Carolina at an "unprecedented" rate.

State agriculture officials say they are at a loss to explain why the gypsy moths are moving through Virginia to North Carolina at a rate 20 times faster than normal.

Howard M. Singletary Jr., plant pesticide administrator for the N.C. Department of Agriculture, said the moths have moved 200 miles in the past year, to just north of the James River. He said the moths generally move about eight to 10 miles a year.

"The general front of the infestation is moving at an unprecedented rate through Virginia. Why, we don't know," Singletary said.

The large move means the main invasion probably will reach North Carolina sooner than originally anticipated, but Singletary declined to predict when they would arrive in the state.

Singletary said a total of 10,096 adult male moths were caught this year in some of the 20,000 sex-lure-baited traps that state and federal officials distributed statewide during the active moth season.

Last year, 1,873 male moths were snared in a network of about 7,000 traps in North Carolina, Singletary said.

"This represents a dramatic increase over past years that can only be partially explained by the fact that three times as many traps were monitored in 1982 compared to previous years," said a fact sheet distributed at an Agricultural Department news conference.

Just what the increase really means is unknown.

"I don't think we're prepared to answer that question," Singletary said.

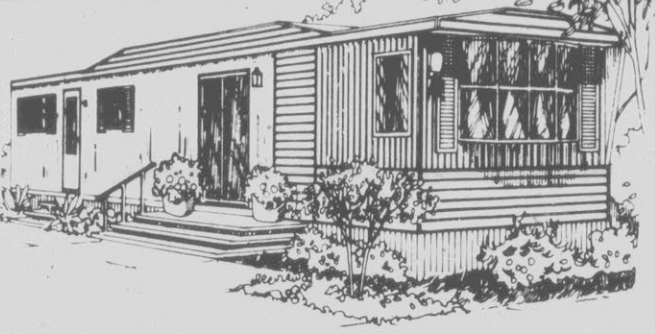

Adult gypsy moths are not destructive, and they do not confirm the presence of an infestation. But gypsy moths in the caterpillar stage defoliated an estimated 8.1 million acres of woodland in the Northeast in 1982.

Most of the trappings thus far have been in eastern North Carolina. The moths have been found found in Wake and Johnston counties and in Raleigh.

U.S. Agriculture officials are preparing to look for moth-egg masses in more than 80 locations in the state.

Life insurance payments to beneficiaries totaled $14.2 billion in 1981, an increase of 9.9 percent over 1980, and nearly double the amount paid to beneficiaries in 1971.

- Lengths of prison sentences for all types of crimes should be reevaluated with emphasis on the costs and overcrowding problems as well as on public safety and security.

- The maximum age for the sentencing classification of Committed Youthful Offender, which entitles a prisoner to discretionary release on good behavior regardless of the crime, should be increased to 25 years from 21.

- A sentencing review panel of retired judges should be created with authority to modify sentences that exceed those prescribed by the Fair Sentencing Act.

- A pretrial release program already in effect in several counties should be expanded statewide.

- Procedures should be developed to restrict the conditions under which a person on probation could be sent to prison.

- Work-release and study-release programs should be expanded to include more prisoners. The study said current programs which allow prisoner to train or study for jobs while serving their sentences are underutilized.

- An experimental restitution center should be established as an alternative to imprisonment, particularly for people who commit property crimes

Dear Mr. White,

You know what? You have two rather crazy people who watch THE SOUTHERN SPORTSMAN. Today we were just loafing (we are retired) and talking about how much we enjoy the show, and next thing we knew we were on our way to Farmville — 264 miles away — because we were so impressed by your advertisement of your restaurant.

Tonight we are in a Farmville motel, but we will be at the restaurant when it opens tomorrow morning.

Seriously, thank you for brightening our day each Sunday when we see you on T.V. Channel 12 (Richmond).

Sincerely,
K. and G. H.
Verona, Va.

P.S.

We did it! We went to the SOUTHERN SPORTSMAN RESTAURANT and had the best meal we have ever had at any restaurant.

The staff were so cordial and amused by two senior citizens driving a total of 528 miles to eat there.

We viewed the portrait of Fracas — beautiful... bought a copy of your magazine, and now we shall subscribe to it.

Thanks for a great time.

K. and G. H.

P.P.S.

We "snitched" 4 packs of matches — we want to show off with them!!

It's That Time Again!!!

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market turned upward today, rallying after the drop of the past three sessions.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off more than 41 points in the last three trading days, rose 6.07 to 997.06 in the first half hour.

Gainers and losers were about evenly balanced in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Paul Volcker, chairman of the Federal Reserve, said this morning the Fed had "welcomed" recent declines in interest rates.

Testifying before the Joint Economic Committee of Congress, Volcker said the central bank was still committed to combatting inflation by curbing the growth of the supply of money and credit in the economy.

But he said the Fed was mindful of the recession and high unemployment. Its policymakers generally foresee a gradual recovery in 1983, he said.

Today's early volume leaders included International Business Machines, up 1/2 at 81 3/4; Exxon, up 1/4 at 28 3/4; and Detroit Edison, up 1/4 at 13 1/2.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average fell 9.01 points to 990.99, its lowest level since Oct. 28.

Declines led advances by 2 to 1 on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 72.92 million shares, against 74.96 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index fell .73 to 77.12. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off 2.91 at 326.25.

Soviets Put Off Voting

MOSCOW (AP) — The national Parliament adjourned its fall session today without naming a new president to succeed Leonid I. Brezhnev in his secondary, primarily ceremonial, post.

Yuri V. Andropov, who assumed the all-powerful position as Communist Party general secretary following Brezhnev's death on Nov. 10, had been considered a top candidate for the presidency.

On Tuesday, Andropov was elected to the Presidium, the body that conducts day-to-day affairs between twice-yearly sessions of the Supreme Soviet, and some observers had speculated the move was a formality in advance of his election as president.

The vote had been widely expected during the second day of the two-day session of the Supreme Soviet. The next gathering of the Parliament is expected around Dec. 20, 10 days before the 60th anniversary of the formation of the Soviet Union.

Brezhnev became president in 1977, 13 years after he took over as party general secretary. If Andropov, the 68-year-old former head of the KGB secret police, had moved into the president's job today, it would have indicated the extent of his control in the Kremlin, observers said.

The president, formally called chairman of the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet, is head of state. But the post is restricted primarily to protocol meetings with visiting world leaders.

Until a president is named, Vice President Vasily V. Kuznetsov, 81, will continue as acting head of state.

But the only major personnel change announced at the final session was the appointment of Geidar A. Aliev, 59, as first deputy chairman of the Council of Ministers — a position equivalent to vice-premier under Premier Nikolai A. Tikhonov.

Aliev was elevated last Monday from non-voting to full membership in the ruling 12-member party Politburo, replacing long-time No. 3 man Andrei P. Kirilenko, whose retirement for health reasons was announced Monday. Aliev had served 13 years as chief of the Azerbaijan Communist Party.

Greenville Man Dies In Wreck

WILSON — The Highway Patrol said Tuesday that Fred Faulkner Jr., 35, of 905 Forrest Hills Circle, Greenville, was killed in a collision Monday at the U.S. 264-Interstate 95 intersection west of here.

Trooper J.T. Bradshaw identified Faulkner as the driver of a car which collided with a tractor-trailer driven by Emmett Powell Jr. of Lawrenceville, Va., about 5:15 a.m.

The officer said dense fog had obscured the truck as it pulled from the I-95 exit ramp across the west bound lane of U.S. 264 and into the path of the Faulkner car.

Cannon said a 24-year-old woman told officers she had returned to her apartment from jogging when she was grabbed from behind by a man who threw her face down on the ground and threatened to rape her.

Her assailant fled, the chief said, when a neighbor responded to calls for help from the woman.

Hunt Undecided On Dix

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt today said he has made no decision on whether to close the Dorothea Dix state mental hospital in Raleigh or to turn it into a prison.

Hunt, at a news conference, said he received controversial proposals for closing Dix only last Friday.

He said the administration must first decide on a recommendation from Human Resources Secretary Sarah Morrow to close the hospital before it considers the possible conversion to a prison.

On Tuesday, Dr. Morrow proposed that most of Dorothea Dix be closed and patients be transferred to the state's three other mental institutions. Hunt would have to approve the proposal.

"The plain reality is that we no longer need four psychiatric hospitals to meet the mental health needs of North Carolina," she said at a news conference Tuesday.

She said the hospital employs a staff of 1,300, making the hospital's cost $49,260 cost per patient the highest among the four mental health facilities.

At least one more psychiatric hospital might have to be closed later this decade because of declining patient admissions, she said.

Reaction was mixed from eastern North Carolina mental health officials.

Rep. Daniel T. Blue, D-Wake, called the proposal "too much, too soon."

"I'm opposed to it...especially if it's to create prison space," Blue said.

But Dr. Daniel Searcy, director of Johnston County's mental health center in Smithfield says the closing of Dix would have little impact on his county.

Atchley: We'll Clean Up Our Yard & Others

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Clemson University President Bill Atchley told fans of the school's athletic programs Tuesday night that "we're going to get our backyard clean and then we're going to help some others clean theirs."

Atchley was responding to a question about whether any other Atlantic Coast Conference schools faced investigation by the National Collegiate Athletic Association or by the ACC.

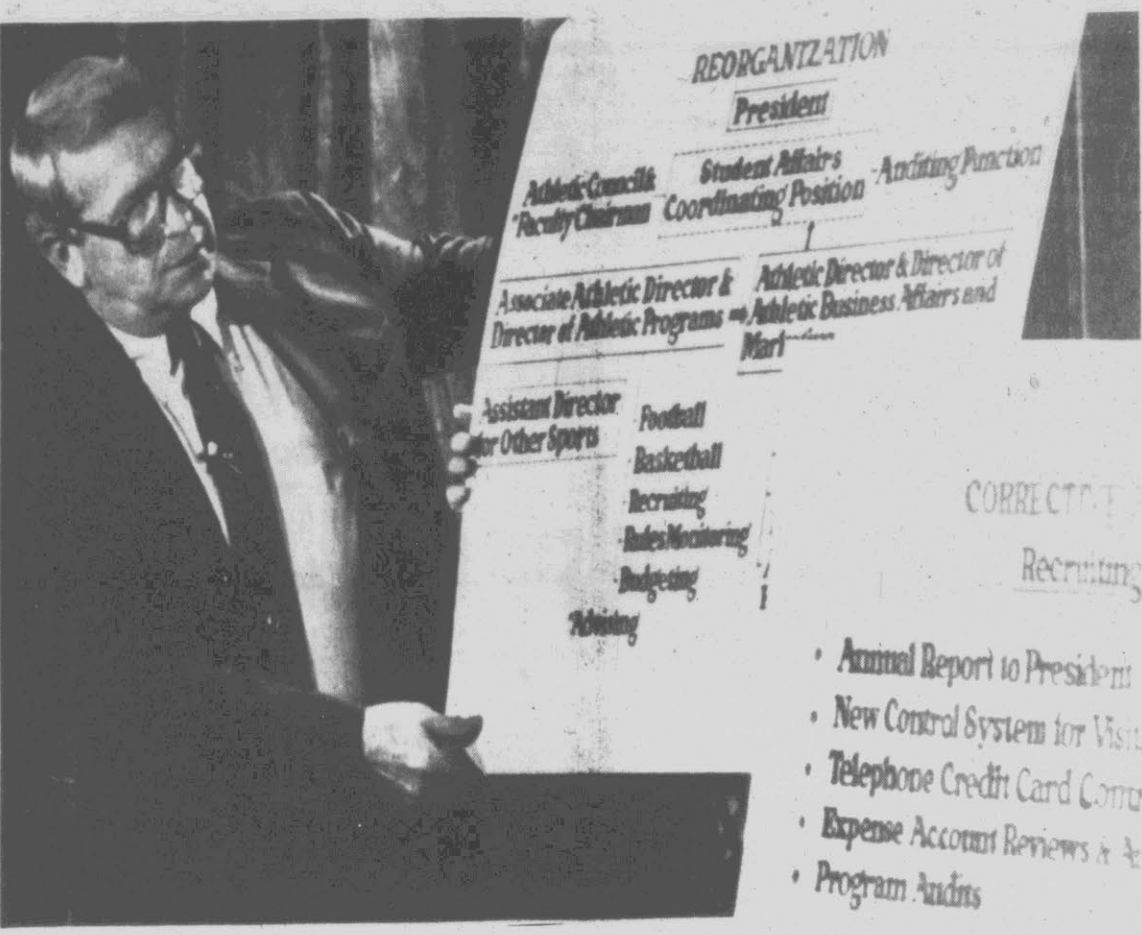

The fans phoned Atchley Tuesday night on a televised talk show in Columbia to tell him that, despite ACC and NCAA penalties against the school, they're still "with the boys all the way."

The Clemson president did his best to put a positive light on the embarrassing laundry list of recruiting violations, which ranged from offers of new cars and new clothes for prospective recruits, to outright cash gifts and promises that friends and relatives would be given scholarships.

Atchley said Clemson's planned changes in athletic policy could do a lot toward providing a model for running an athletic program.

The school faces two years probation from the NCAA, the loss of 20 scholarships and ineligibility for post-season bowl games this year and next year.

The school also faces a variety of penalties from the ACC, including loss of televi-

Discusses Football Probation
Clemson president Bill Atchley uses charts during news conference Tuesday while he discusses the sion revenues from the conference for two years, ineligibility to compete for the conference title during the next two years and no bowl appearances for the next three years.

He appeared Tuesday night on "Open Line," a call-in television show, at South Carolina Educational Television's Columbia offices. During the call-in portion of the show, he was asked several times if Clemson planned to "get out of the Atlantic Coast Conference" because of the stiff sanctions the ACC placed on Clemson.

Several of the callers angrily lashed out at the ACC. But Atchley said he didn't think leaving the conference would be a good move.

"Very few independent schools have well-rounded athletic programs," he said. "The University of South Carolina has thought many, many times about whether it was a mistake to leave the ACC."

Atchley, who answered reporters' questions earlier Tuesday in a news conference at Clemson, said the school is not appealing the NCAA penalties but plans to appeal the ACC ruling.

He was asked whether Clemson should look into forming a new conference with several strong independents such as West Virginia, Pittsburgh and Penn State. Atchley said it was an interesting possibility, but added he would rather work out his differences with the ACC.

Some reports of the Clemson violations have been blown out of proportion, he said, adding that "it's not true" that cars were given to players although some may have been offered. And he also categorized as "untrue" descriptions of Clemson's penalties as the most severe ever handed down by the NCAA. He said he called the NCAA and found out that more severe penalties have been dealt to other schools, but he named no specific examples.

LIST OF CLEMSON VIOLATIONS, PAGE 14

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — Though the NCAA and the Atlantic Coast Conference have slapped Clemson with tough penalties for more than 150 football recruiting violations, university President Bill L. Atchley says the school isn't simply going to drop back and punt.

"Clemson is one university where athletics will play a proper role — where all our programs, athletic and academic, are in proper focus and balance," Atchley said at a news conference Tuesday.

"And anyone who thinks the tail wags the dog on this campus is in for a shock," he added.

But it was the Clemson faithful who were in shock this week as the results of a 19-month probe into football recruiting violations were unveiled.

Monday, the National Collegiate Athletic Association hit Clemson with a two-year probation, limiting the school to only 20 scholarships for the next two seasons.

In addition, Clemson will not be able to appear in a bowl game this year or next and can't appear on television either next year or during the 1984 season.

However, the Tigers could appear in a bowl when the 1984 regular season is over.

But Atchley announced Tuesday the ACC came down even harder.

He said the league penalties include all the NCAA sanctions as well as:

- No bowl game in 1984.
- No share of conference TV revenues for football in 1983 or 1984.
- Clemson becomes ineligible for the ACC championship during the next two seasons.

Atchley said the university would accept the NCAA decision, but said it is appealing the ACC ruling.

He complained the conference made its decision based on partial information.

"The NCAA has the full picture. We spent three days giving it to them in person. And we know for a fact that Clemson's 'credibility' was completely restored after out presentation to the NCAA committee," he said.

The NCAA cited Clemson for violations which included gifts of cars, cash, and clothing to prospective recruits as well as scholarships for the friends and relatives of recruits.

"I don't think personally that this will have a negative effect. I look for it to bring the people (of Clemson) a little closer together," Atchley said.

The No. 10 Tigers, 8-1-1, flew to Japan Tuesday to play Wake Forest in the Mirage Bowl in Tokyo. A Clemson victory in the weekend game would give the Tigers this year's ACC crown.

Atchley didn't accuse anyone of turning the Tigers in.

"It doesn't matter to me who turned us in because if people are violating the rules, perhaps they should be turned in," he said.

He dropped an ominous warning for other schools that may be guilty of recruiting violations.

"We're going to get our backyard clean and then we're going to help some others clean theirs, if you know what I mean," Atchley said in an interview in Columbia Tuesday.

At the news conference, he announced some steps to make sure Clemson is never turned in again.

The first was a series of tough disciplinary actions aimed at Clemson personnel. The penalties included probationary periods of up to three years, salary freezes and reductions, bans on recruiting and staff reassignments.

In addition, five people not employed by the school were cut off from their connection with the athletic program for from two years to an indefinite period.

Atchley said letters of official reprimand would be sent to a few other individuals involved in minor infractions.

"From the top to the bottom there will be penalties against people whether they were involved in recruiting or had responsibility" for recruiting, he said.

But in Columbia Tuesday night, Atchley said football coach Danny Ford is "not on the hotseat."

Ford's job is not in jeopardy, "not now, not tomorrow, not anytime soon," he said after an appearance on a public television call-in program in Columbia. Callers expressed

Sauls: Second Time Tougher

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

LITTLEFIELD — Ayden-Grifton coach Dixon Sauls said the second time around was tougher.

The end was not easy either. Ayden-Grifton, making its second straight postseason trip, saw its '82 season end Friday night when Bertie downed the Chargers, 28-0, in the second round of the Division I playoffs.

The Chargers, who lost to Burlington Williams, 39-6, last year in the Eastern 3-A finals, finish the season at 10-2-0.

"This year was more of a challenge. It's a challenge to repeat," Sauls said yesterday. "I know all coaches say that, but it is harder to do it the second time than the first."

The Chargers ended the 1982 regular season in a three-way tie for the Eastern Carolina Conference title. It was the second straight year the ECC ended up in a three-way tie.

Ayden-Grifton won the draw for the ECC's Division I berth for the second year in a row and downed previously unbeaten Havelock, 22-12, in the first round of playoffs before losing to Bertie last week.

The Chargers suffered seven turnovers — including four interceptions — versus Bertie. Three of those miscues were turned into touchdowns by the Falcons, who are 10-1-0 and travel to Clinton Friday for the Eastern 3-A finals.

"They're not 28 points better than we are," Sauls insisted. "But, with the breaks they earned and the breaks they got, it's surprising that the score was just 28-0."

Quarterback Joey Kennedy, who threw just two interceptions during the regular season, had four passes intercepted by the Falcons, one of which they returned 25 yards for a TD.

The Falcons, who came into the game having given up just 43 points this year, recorded their seventh shutout and fifth in a row.

"They were as aggressive a defensive football team as we've played all year. They have outstanding quickness and once they got ahead on the scoreboard they played quicker than we did."

"I think part of that," Sauls continued, "was the emotional state of being ahead."

Sauls said perhaps the key play of the game occurred late in the first period when Kennedy was hit while trying to pass. The officials ruled it a fumble and the Falcons turned it into a TD one play later.

"It appeared he was throwing the football. I think that

Kiffin Decision A Week Away

RALEIGH (AP) — It will be at least a week before North Carolina State coach Monte Kiffin finds out if he will keep his job as head coach, N.C. State chancellor Bruce Poulton said Tuesday.

"I am not doing this from the hip. I am trying to do this in a very considerate and rational way," Poulton said.

Poulton scheduled a meeting with Kiffin for 9 a.m. today, to discuss the coach's future with the Wolfpack.

Kiffin, a former assistant coach at Nebraska and Arkansas, is in the final year of a three-year contract. He has a 16-17 record at N.C. State, with a 6-5 season this year.

Poulton said he plans to consult with several people before he makes his decision, and has scheduled meetings with different representatives.

He plans to talk with alumni, Wolfpack Club members and students.

"It is going to take a while," he said.

Dr. Robert S. Bryan, chairman of the Athletics Council, said Poulton solicited their advice Tuesday afternoon. Asked if the council gave

NFL Rank-And-File To Vote On Agreement Dec. 3

WASHINGTON (AP) — The rank-and-file of the National Football League Players Association is finally going to get its say in the contract battle that paralyzed the league for eight weeks and has left the NFL with the shortest season in its history.

On Dec. 3, 74 days after their leadership first ordered them out on strike and 17 days after negotiators reached tentative accord on a five-year, $1.6-billion collective bargaining agreement, the players will be asked to either approve or reject the pact.

Union president Gene Upshaw said a majority of the player reps said Tuesday they would recommend the pact be rejected. The player representatives, who accepted the offer by a 19-6 vote Nov. 16, will vote again next Tuesday to determine whether they will recommend the full membership ratify or reject the offer.

"If it comes down to the current offer the players will reject it," Mark Murphy, Washington Redskins' player representative and a member of the union's executive committee, said Tuesday following a meeting of union leaders and player reps.

"The vote is not something that can be taken very lightly. It is something that we will have to live with for the rest of the agreement," Upshaw said.

When the players do vote, they will be do so by written ballot with each player requested to sign his ballot. Only those players who are union members in good standing will be permitted to participate in the balloting. A simple majority of those voting will determine the fate of the contract.

Union chief Ed Garvey, accused by management of stalling a vote to get further concessions from league negotiators, said that while the players may reject the tentative agreement, it is doubtful they would resume the strike.

"There is not a lot of sentiment to go back on strike," he said. "You have to be realistic about what you can and cannot do."

The owners' chief negotiator, Jack Donlan, has told the union that the owners could lock the players out of camp if they reject the contract but choose to work. At the very least, Donlan continued, rejection of the offer would result in the owners retracting the $60-million cash bonus plan that calls for every player in the league to receive between $10,000 and $60,000 within two weeks of the agreement being signed.

Donlan also said there would be no changes in the tentative agreement. "Our deadline was last Tuesday. It's over," he said. "We feel the agreement is complete and total."

By the time the players vote they will have played four games this year — two prior to the walkout and two since their return — in what has become a nine-game regular season.

While management and union officials were not in contact on Tuesday, Paul Marz, the Pittsburgh attorney who entered the negotiations as a go-between shortly before negotiators announced an agreement, stayed in contact with both groups.

In a message to Garvey, Marz said he felt "an agreement was reached in New York last Tuesday. ... I urge you not to delay the process any further and allow the mutual agreement of the owners and players ... be submitted to the players as you told me it would be."

In reply, Garvey said: "Some of the issues have not been resolved. Our hope is to resolve these issues. We are not reneging on anything."

Meanwhile, union officials continue to refuse to initial a number of provisions of the agreement they say were never settled during the negotiations. Among the issues still under contention, according to the union, is the league's attempt to expand the season to 18 games; extending the college draft through 1992; and extending from two years to four a team's NFL rights to a drafted player who has started his professional career with another league.

"We have decided to give management a Monday deadline at midnight to wrap up all the language," Garvey said. "At that point, so this doesn't drag on, the reps will vote Tuesday morning to either recommend passage or recommend rejection of the contract. It will then go to the players."

"Some of the main issues will have to be addressed or there won't be an agreement," Upshaw said. "We feel very strongly about that."

Despite management denials of wanting to extend the 1983 season to 18 games, Garvey said the league is anxious to add the games to repay the $50 million advanced the league by the television networks for games not played during the eight-week strike.

"It is total reaching on their part to get the players to play 18 games for the same pay that they would get for 16 games," Garvey continued. "If they go up to 18 games the salary scale should go up. That has to be negotiated."

Meanwhile, an informal poll by Knight-Ridder Newspapers of player representatives and sports writers in 24 NFL cities indicates that if the vote were taken Tuesday, 17 teams would vote to ratify the agreement and seven would vote to turn it down.

The 17 teams favoring the proposal, according to the poll, are Cincinnati, Green Bay, Houston, the Los Angeles Rams, Miami, New Orleans, the New York Giants, Pittsburgh, St. Louis, San Francisco, the Los Angeles Raiders, Dallas, Denver, Atlanta, Minnesota, Tampa Bay, and Cleveland. Against acceptance are the Detroit, Philadelphia, Buffalo, Chicago, Washington, New England and the New York Jets. Four teams weren't heard from.

Attendance Up In Minors

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Attendance is up and increasing in both major and minor league baseball, Ray Kuhlman, president of the Kinston Blue Jays told the Greenville Sports Club yesterday.

"The minor leagues drew 17 million fans last year, and the Louisville Cardinals outdrew several major league teams," Kuhlman said, "averaging 12,000 a game."

Kuhlman explained to the club that the old B, C, and D classifications of league was actually still around, it just went by a different name now. "Every major league club is required to sponsor at least one team in the 3-A, 2-A and 1-A levels. A couple of them have four clubs, most have five and nine have six. One (the Cardinals) have seven. That's 65 more than the minimum requirements."

There are a total of 143 minor league clubs, not counting the Mexican League. Only two of these are independent — that is, they pay all of the team's expenses. "We tried that back in 1978, and the old family bank account took a beating," Kuhlman said.

Eighteen of the minor clubs are owned outright by the parent club. The rest, except for the two independents, operate under a working agreement with the major league clubs. "This is called a player development contract," the club owner said.

"There are ten leagues classified as A leagues, but they are not all alike and that's where the old B, C, and D classifications have disappeared to. The experience level is different in each."

What could be considered D ball are the three rookie leagues. These seasons last for 80 days. Everyone in these are considered rookies.

"A rookie may not necessarily be someone in his first year of baseball," the club owner said. "A rookie is someone who has not played 90 days in a single year. So someone who is returned to a rookie league is still a rookie. After one season in a 90-day (or longer) league, he's a limited service player. After three years as a limited service player, he's then considered a veteran forevermore."

C ball is another 80-day group with two leagues, but one league is allowed to have as many as two limited service players, while the other can have six per team.

B ball are "full-season leagues" such as the Southern League. That league must have a minimum of 11 rookies and as many as two veterans on its 25-man roster. The Florida State League has a nine rookie, two veteran rule, while the Midwest League has a six rookie, two veteran rule.

Then, in the A leagues — the California and Carolina, there are different rules. The California allowed two vets and a minimum of four rookies, while the Carolina — the top league among A teams — is allowed four veterans and has no rookie requirements.

The player development contract spells out what the parent club and the franchise owner provides. Kuhlman's contract with the Blue Jays has the parent club provide all the players, the manager, the coaches and trainers, and their salaries. "We have the right to reject one player a year," Kuhlman said. Toronto also provides uniforms, and pays a portion of the meal and hotel expenses. Kuhlman provides the remaining costs of meals and housing, plus the equipment, field, lights, housekeeping and transportation.

Kuhlman said that the Carolina League, which will field eight teams this year, considered expansion to ten teams for 1983, but only one working agreement could be ironed out, so the league will stay with eight.

"I'd love to see Greenville field a team, and Wilson, too," he said. "Then, we could hate you so good," he said with a laugh.

Lou Campinelli, head basketball coach at James Madison, will be the speaker for the next meeting of the club.

5 Rampants All-Big East

Five members of the Rose High School football team have been named to the Big East All-Conference team, as selected by the league's coaches. Two other teams, league champ Kinston, and fourth place Rocky Mount finished with five selections each also.

Selected for Rose were receiver Edward Frazier, offensive linemen Greg Davis and Bill Johnson, defensive back Roswell Streeter and defensive lineman Frankie Carr. Carr was earlier selected to the Associated Press' All-State team.

Other members of the team included: Ronnie Stample and Gerard Moody of Northern Nash, Eddie Coats of Rocky Mount, Mike Pittman of Kinston and Bernard Smith of Fike in the backfield; receiver Cordell Lyons of Rocky Mount; and linemen Howard Land and Joey Page of Fike, Mark Hawkins of Kinston, and Kenny Barcliff of Northeastern.

Defensive linebackers were Willie Battle of Northern Nash, Roy Sutton of Kinston and Pat Artis of Beddingfield. Defensive backs included Joe Walker of Rocky Mount and Christy Rodri of Hunt, while the line included John and Mike Hooten of Kinston, Vincent McKnight and Brian Sonnier of Rocky Mount and George Coleman of Hunt.

Neal Ferrell was picked as the placekicker with Mark Davis as the punter. Both are from Beddingfield.

The league decided not to choose a coach of the year anymore, by vote of the athletic directors.

Tollner Replaces Robinson

LOS ANGELES (AP) — John Robinson will no longer be on the sidelines when the Southern Cal Trojans are on the football field, but he plans to stay in close touch.

"I don't think anybody really gets football out of their system after being involved like I have," Robinson said Tuesday in announcing he is resigning the Trojans' head coaching job to become a vice president of the university.

"I'll be at every game ... and I'm sure I'll be sending plays down to Ted."

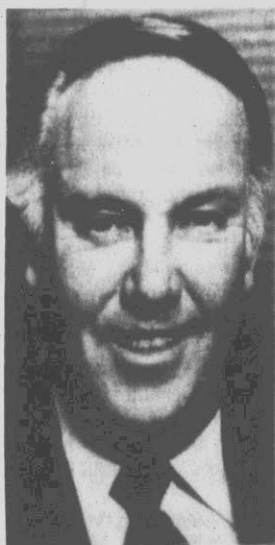

Ted Tollner, the Trojans' offensive coordinator this season after holding similar jobs at San Diego State and Brigham Young University, was named to replace Robinson, effective after Saturday's season-ending game against Notre Dame at the Los Angeles Coliseum.

Robinson's new duties as senior vice president for university relations will include public relations, alumni relations and raising funds of $50 million annually, said James H. Zumberge, the university president.

Although Robinson's resignation as coach surprised most, he said Zumberge had approached him about the vice president's post early last month and his decision was made some time ago. The coach said he did not wait until after the season to announce his move because he felt it could not be kept secret much longer.

"The concept of changing careers in mid-stream is frightening," said Robinson. "I spent 25 years in coaching and loved every minute of it. But I desired to do something that transcended coaching, and when the opportunity came this fall, it just seemed to be right. ... I think all of us wonder sometimes about what else there is we could do. I want very much to do the job well."

The 47-year-old Robinson,

John Robinson

who last January turned down a lucrative offer to become head coach of the National Football League's New England Patriots, has a 66-14-2 record in his seven years as the Southern Cal coach. During that span, the Trojans finished first once and second twice in the national college football rankings and never finished lower than 13th in the final poll.

The 1982 season has, however, been less than spectacular for Southern Cal. The Trojans, ranked No. 17, are 7-3 going into their final game and are on NCAA probation.

ECU's Baker, Ingram Honored

Tony Baker, freshman East Carolina University running back was named Rookie of the Week among the Division I ECAC teams this week for his play last Saturday against Temple University.

Baker joined junior quarterback Kevin Ingram on the ECAC honor roll. Ingram was selected earlier as the co-offensive Player of the Week for the league.

Baker, a 5-10, 175-pounder from High Point, rushed 20 times for 165 yards as the Pirates gained a 23-10 victory over the Owls in the final game of the regular season.

Wilson Accepts New Job

DURHAM (AP) — Former Duke football coach Red Wilson cleared out his office Tuesday and prepared to accept new responsibilities — an administrative position at Duke Medical Center.

Wilson, the first coach in 20 years to direct Duke to consecutive winning seasons, lost his job Saturday after his team beat the University of North Carolina, 23-17.

Wilson said Tuesday that he left a victory party at his house Saturday for a meeting with Duke Athletic Director Tom Butters with high expectations after defeating the Tar heels, and was surprised when he was offered no options by Butters that included athletics at Duke.

"He (Butters) told me the program had progressed as far as it could go under my leadership. It was one of the biggest wins of my college career. You would think I would get the chance to enjoy it. It was the least amount of time I've had to enjoy a victory like that in my 32 years of coaching." Wilson said when he returned home, he and his wife decided to let the victory party continue.

"We had no anticipation of what would happen. We wanted to keep everything quiet and let the players, fans and others enjoy the victory, without any negative news," said Mrs. Wilson.

Wilson said he met with his assistants Tuesday morning. He said they would be allowed certain privileges in finding jobs before a new coaching staff arrived, including additional money from their original contracts.

He said the coaches will be allowed to go to the American Football Coaches Association meeting in January in Los Angeles, and Duke will foot the bill.

Bob Matheson, a former defensive coach and administrative assistant to Wilson, said he has applied for the head coaching job at Duke.

Castor Player Of Year

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — Duke wide receiver Chris Castor has been named football player of the year in the Atlantic Coast Conference, edging out Maryland's Boomer Esiason, Clemson's Terry Kinard and teammate Ben Bennett.

Castor received 28 votes, Esiason 24, Kinard 21 and Bennett 19 in balloting by Atlantic Coast Conference Sportswriters Association members. All ACC running backs Cliff Austin of Clemson and Robert Lavette of Georgia Tech received two votes each.

Down linemen William Fuller of North Carolina and Clemson's William Perry received one vote each, as did Maryland running back Willie Joyner.

Castor, a senior from Cary, N.C., set two ACC records for pass receptions this year. His 13 touchdown pass receptions broke the ACC mark for a season, and his 283 yards receiving in a game against Wake Forest broke the conference's single-game record.

Castor pulled down 46 passes for 952 yards during the season, an average of 20.7 yards per catch. He was among the nation's leaders in each of those categories. Assistant Duke coach Steve Spurrier, a former pro quarterback and Heisman Trophy winner who is leaving Duke to take an expected offer as head coach of the Tampa franchise of the United States Football League, says Castor is the best receiver he's ever been around as a coach, player or observer.

"There are a lot of fast guys out here, but Chris has the ability to catch the ball while running at maximum speed, never losing a step," Spurrier said. "Most have to let up a little to do that."

Castor credited his teammates for his success.

"It's quite an honor. Although the team has had its ups and downs, it's more a reflection on our offensive unit instead of me. It's a great honor that the whole offense can be proud of."

Duke depended heavily on the passing combination of Bennett and Castor to finish with a 6-5 mark this year. The team also set an ACC record for total offense in a season.

Esiason, a 6-foot-4, 198 pound-junior from East Islip, N.Y., led Maryland's return to ACC prominence by totaling 2,231 yards, including 176 of 314 passes for 18 touchdowns. The Terrapins finished 8-3 and are one of the teams in the Aloha Bowl in Honolulu.

Bennett has set virtually every Duke passing mark and how holds six ACC record — including most total yards passing and most career touchdown passes. Bennett, a junior from Sunnyvale, Calif., is the first ACC quarterback ever to pass for more than 3,000 yards in a single season.

Duke linebacker Pete Stubbs' 11 tackles in the Blue Devils' 23-17 victory over North Carolina has earned him rookie of the week in the ACC.

Earlier, linebacker Danny Triplett of defending national champion Clemson and defensive guard Mike Corvino of bowl-bound Maryland were named ACC defensive players of the week.

In January or February 1981, a representative of the university's athletic interests employed a prospective student athlete's mother and sister for one day.

In the fall of 1979, a former assistant football coach gave a white sport shirt to a prospective student athlete.

Numerous prospective student athletes have been provided T-shirts, football jerseys or souvenir photographs during visits to the university's campus.

Improper Transportation

In January 1978, a former assistant football coach arranged for a prospective student athlete to receive a prepaid, one-way commercial airline ticket at no cost to the young man to travel to the university.

Extra Benefits to Student-Athletes

In January 1982, a representative of the university's athletic interests assigned a promissory note to arrange a loan for a student athlete to finance the purchase of an automobile.

In April 1980, the head football coach, director of athletics and dean of student affairs arranged for the university to pay the cost of a dental bill on behalf of a student athlete.

Ethical Conduct

A former assistant football coach acted contrary to the principles of ethical conduct inasmuch as he did not in all instances report himself in accordance with the generally recognized high standards normally associated with the conduct and administration of intercollegiate athletics in that his involvement in the violations set forth in this report demonstrates a knowing and willful effort on his part to operate the university's intercollegiate football program contrary to the requirements and provisions of NCAA legislation.

In the fall of 1981 and again in late February 1982, an assistant football coach telephoned the father of a prospective student athlete, the remarks of which concerning his recruitment by the university being requests to provide the NCAA false information regarding his son's recruitment by the university.

Ethical Conduct and Improper Transportation

In the fall of the 1980-81 academic year, an assistant football coach provided a prospective student athlete's father round-trip automobile transportation between his home and the university at the time he accompanied his son on an official paid visit to the university and later filed a false mileage reimbursement receipt with the university concerning this transportation.

In November 1980, an assistant football coach gave cash to a prospective student athlete during his official paid visit to the university for entertainment purposes and later filed a false expense report with the university regarding a meal provided to the young man during this visit.

Extra Benefits and Improper Financial Aid

In September 1980, following one of the university's scheduled intercollegiate football contests, a representative of the university's athletic interests gave a student athlete cash.

In three separate occasions during the fall of the 1979-80 academic year, representatives of the university's athletic interests gave a student athlete cash as a reward for being selected "specialty team player of the week."

Recruiting Inducements and Improper Campus Visits

During the 1980-81 academic year, a prospective student athlete was provided four official paid visits to the university's campus.

In December 1980, a representative of the university's athletic interests paid the costs for a prospective student athlete to be lodged for three nights at a motel and provided the young man cash, two meals and the use of a rental automobile.

In July 1980, two prospective student athletes attended the university's summer football camp for one day at no cost to either young man.

Improper Campus Visits

During the 1980-81 academic year, one prospective student athlete was provided two official paid visits to the university's campus, another was provided three visits and a third was provided two visits.

During the 1978-79 academic year, one prospective student athlete was provided three expense-paid visits to the university's campus and another was provided two visits.

During the 1978-79 academic year, a prospective student athlete was provided several visits to the university's campus.

Improper Transportation and Entertainment

Between 1977 and 1981, four prospective student athletes were provided local transportation and meals by an assistant football coach or a representative of the university's athletic interests.

Improper Entertainment

In the fall of 1977, a former assistant football coach arranged for a friend of a prospective student athlete to receive meals, lodging and entertainment during the young man's official paid visit.

Improper Transportation

In December 1977, an assistant football coach provided the mother of a prospective student athlete one-way automobile transportation from her home to the university's campus and the coach arranged for a student trainer to transport her home at the conclusion of the visit.

Extra Benefits and Improper Transportation

During his employment in the university's summer football camp in 1980, an assistant football coach provided local transportation and a meal to approximately 10 prospective student athletes, further, following the camp, the coach arranged for two student athletes to utilize his automobile to travel home for a visit while also providing five prospective student athletes transportation home.

Improper Transportation

Improper Use of Funds

In October 1980, a representative of the university's athletic interests, gave a student hostess cash for her gasoline expenses to transport a prospective student athlete from his home to the university campus.

Discusses Probation

Clemson President Bill Atchley discusses the university's probation levied by the NCAA and the ACC for recruiting violations during a news conference on Tuesday. (AP Laserphoto)

Improper Funds

In July 1980, an assistant football coach gave cash to a high school assistant football coach to reimburse the coach for expenses incurred while transporting two prospective student athletes to the university's summer football camp.

Improper Entertainment

During the 1980-81 and 1981-82 academic years, the university's football coaching staff entertained prospective and enrolled student athletes off campus at a restaurant located outside of Clemson, South Carolina, or a community contiguous thereto.

During the 1980-81 academic year, individuals who were not enrolled in the university served as hosts for prospective student athletes on their official paid visits to the university.

Trip

In the fall of 1979, a prospective student athlete was timed running the 40-yard dash by a former assistant football coach.

Improper Employment

In December 1978, a former assistant football coach arranged for a prospective student athlete to be employed by a representative of the university's athletic interests prior to the completion of the young man's senior year in high school.

In the summer of 1980, two prospective student athletes were employed by a representative of the university's athletic interests in order to assist the young man by paying the costs to attend the Clemson football camp.

Certification of Compliance with NCAA Legislation

With full knowledge at the time that certain practices of the university's intercollegiate football program were not in compliance with NCAA legislation, certain individuals (two assistant football coaches in 1978, two in 1979, two in 1980 and two in 1981) attested on statements filed with the chief executive officer of the university that they had reported their knowledge of and involvement in any violation of NCAA legislation involving the university.

Recruiting Contact

In September 1981, an assistant football coach contacted a prospective student athlete for recruiting purposes at the young man's high school outside the permissible period for in-person recruiting contacts.

In the spring of 1979, an assistant football coach contacted a prospective student athlete in person, off campus prior to the completion of the young man's junior year in high school.

On two occasions in the spring of 1977, a former assistant football coach personally contacted a prospective student athlete off campus for recruiting purposes prior to the completion of the young man's junior year in high school.

Recruiting Contact

During the 1977-78 academic year, a prospective student athlete was contacted in person, off campus for recruiting purposes on more than three occasions by members of the football coaching staff.

During the 1978-79 academic year, three prospective student athletes were contacted in person, off campus for recruiting purposes on more than three occasions by members of the football coaching staff and representatives of the university's athletic interests.

During the summer of 1979 and during the fall of the 1979-80 academic year, two prospective student athletes were contacted in person, off campus for recruiting purposes on more than two occasions by members of the football coaching staff and representatives of the university's athletic interests.

During the 1980-81 academic year, four prospective student athletes or their relatives were contacted in person, off campus for recruiting purposes on more than three occasions by members of the football coaching staff and representatives of the university's athletic interests.

Newspaper Says Pell Had Hand In 20% Of Charges

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — About 20 percent of the violations the NCAA says occurred at Clemson University were committed when University of Florida Coach Charley Pell headed the school's football program, a newspaper reported today.

The NCAA released 69 charges Tuesday involving 150 violations for which Clemson received a record-breaking probation penalty. Fifteen of the charges occurred during Pell's 1977-78 term at the South Carolina school, The Gainesville Sun reported.

The charges involving Pell's Clemson days included offers of scholarships to sisters and friends of prospects; offers of cash, TV sets, clothes and football tickets to prospects; giving an airline ticket to a prospect; giving cash to the fiancée of a prospect; exceeding the three-year limit in recruiting; and providing prospects and their parents with transportation, lodging, meals and entertainment.

The NCAA report didn't name the coaches involved, identifying them either as "head coach" or "assistant coach."

blanked A-G, 13-0.

"You're always very disappointed when you lose in playoff competition," said Sauls, whose teams are 3-2 in the playoffs the past two seasons. "But, at the same time, we're pleased with what we accomplished this year."

The Chargers opened the year by scoring 27 points in the last nine minutes to defeat Roanoke, 27-7. Victories over Farmville Central (24-6) and North Lenoir (20-0) followed.

"To come back to put 27 points on the board in nine minutes certainly let us know we had the opportunity to have a good team this year," Sauls said. "And then to win our first three games against what we consider quality opponents was also a key."

A-G struggled the following week, just beating D.H. Conley, 8-6. A-G defeated C.B. Aycock (28-8) and Greene Central (21-6) the next two weeks. The Chargers, 6-0 at the time, struggled past North Pitt (7-6) before defeating Lakewood and Southern Nash to run its record to 9-0.

The Chargers, who clinched a tie for the ECC title with its win over Southern Nash, saw its chances of winning the championship outright evaporate when they lost to SouthWest Edgecombe, 14-7.

The Chargers, however, won the draw held to decide which team would represent the league in the Division I and II playoffs and made the most of it.

"We didn't have the momentum that we had last year," said Sauls, whose team beat SouthWest a year ago to earn a tie for the ECC title. "But, when you get to the playoffs you feel like you've got something to prove. You are certainly not satisfied with just being in the playoffs."

The Chargers did more than just show up in the playoffs, but losing last week left them with bittersweet memories of the season.

"When you look back on the season immediately after the loss there is a big letdown," Sauls said. "But time has a way of healing the wounds and letting us see we accomplished a lot of our goals."

With the loss, Sauls said goodbye to seven seniors who helped the Chargers go 20-5 the past two years. Gone are Chuck Smithwick, Kevin Kraft, Jarvis Koonce, Kennedy, Derrick Atkinson, Tryone Gay and Jeffery Hardy.

Said Sauls: "They're all key players. I'm disappointed for our seniors (that the season ended like it did)."

Sauls added, however, that while the Chargers will miss those seven, A-G will not be devoid of talent.

"We certainly have the potential to have a winning season next year, but you never know. In a rural school, you're never sure you've established a program like you want. It's very cyclical. "We've had the talent the last two years, but as far as having established a program like we want, we'll have to see what happens in the future."

Some contracts can succeed only if you find a fortunate lie of the cards. In that event, you should plan the play as if that distribution exits.

West's jump to three spades at his second turn placed North in a difficult position. He realized that South might have nothing for his bid of two hearts, because it was a forced response to a takeout double. Nevertheless, North's hand was better than minimum, and his prominent values in hearts weighed against his side's defensive prospects. So he elected to take the push to four hearts.

West led the king of spades, and declarer could count only nine tricks—one spade, four hearts and four clubs. It was too much to hope for the tenth trick in diamonds by leading toward the king—West had to have the ace for his bids. Thus, the only hope was to end play

West and force him to lead a diamond, or yield a ruff-sluff. That would require a very exact distribution—West had to hold a singleton ace of trumps and no more than three clubs. With any other distribution, the defenders could avoid the impending snare.

Declarer won the ace of spades and immediately set about stripping the clubs. When West failed to follow to the third club, declarer was half way home. West could see that there was no point to ruffing the club with his trump ace, so he discarded a spade, and another on the fourth club which followed. Declarer could now make the hand in different ways. Choosing the more elegant, he sluffed a diamond on the fourth club.

Declarer then continued with a spade and West's goose was cooked. He was forced to win the queen and he could cash the ace of hearts, but then he was faced with a Hobson's choice. Another spade would allow declarer to ruff in dummy while sluffing another diamond from his hand. A diamond would present declarer with his tenth trick in that suit. Either way, declarer limited his losses to a trick in each suit except for clubs.

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, NOV. 25, 1982

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: This can be a most effective day if you make a point to stick to proven methods. Avoid a tendency to get involved in untried schemes. Be on time for appointments.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Be sure you carry through with agreements made with others. Show more affection for the one you love and get better response.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Gain the support of good friends for whatever your aims may be and get good results. Show appreciation for their help.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Show higher-ups that you are willing to go along with their ideas. Avoid a tendency to spend more money than you can afford.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You have fine ideas that need more study before you put them in operation. Strive for increased happiness.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Get in touch with experienced persons in business who can help you advance in your line of endeavor. Avoid one who likes to argue.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Make an effort to come to a better accord with associates. Not a good time to start on any new projects.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Study your environment and make plans for improvement in the future. Be sure to budget your money more carefully.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Don't invest too heavily or expect too great a profit in today's dealings. Avoid one who is troublesome. Be wise.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Know what family members expect from you and do your best to please them. Show more affection for loved one.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Be very clear in stating your aims now so that others will understand them and be willing to go along with you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You have financial matters that should be handled with the aid of experts. Make plans to be more prosperous.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Seek the right personal outlets so that you can live your life more as you want it to be. Avoid one who is gossipy.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be one of those person who should be taught to accept those things that are proven and orthodox in nature, otherwise your progeny could easily go off on wrong tangents and become less successful.

North State's Investor Certificates.

We've outdone ourselves. Our new 3-month and 6-month Investor Certificates pay an even higher rate than our "highest rate" three and six month C.D.'s.

Now, we're offering higher-than-money-market interest on our new $1,000 minimum Investor Certificates. So you can lock in a high return on a medium or short term investment.

We think Investor's Certificates make a great deal of sense in today's changing financial environment.

10.25 % *

* This is an effective annual yield based on daily compounding of a nominal rate of 9.76%.

The 6-month Investor Certificate.

With a $1,000 deposit, you receive a six-month yield that is substantially higher than any six-month certificate offered by any other financial institution in North Carolina. This means that whatever interest rates are during the next six months, your savings are earning a safe, high yield.

10.125% *

* This is an effective annual yield based on daily compounding of a nominal rate of 9.65%.

The 3-month Investor Certificate.

For the short term investment, our 3-month Investor Certificate pays a much higher rate of interest than comparable 3-month certificates. In fact, with a $1,000 minimum deposit, you can lock in a rate that is substantially higher than most 6-month certificates. If you demand liquidity, invest in a 3-month Investor.

A smart investment in today's financial environment.

At North State, we feel a short to medium term investment with higher-than-money-market interest is a safe, secure method of riding out today's interest rate fluctuations. So in response to the dramatic growth and support our investors have shown North State over the past year, we're offering these "higher than highest" certificates.

Your deposits in North State's Investor Certificates are, of course, insured to $100,000. Plus, they offer you the highest return on your savings. So drop by any of our locations and ask about an Investor's Certificate.

Higher than highest is a good investment.

Hee Haw Actor Dies In Crash

VINEMONT, Ala. (AP) — Entertainer Grady Nutt, who appears on the national television show "Hee Haw," was among three people killed late Tuesday when a light plane crashed after takeoff from an airport here, Cullman County Coroner Douglas Terry said today.

Terry would not release the names of the other victims, saying the next of kin had not been notified.

Witnesses said the plane took off from the airport, made a sharp turn and the engine seemed to stop.

Cullman city and county authorities were dispatched to the crash site, about one mile northwest of here in a wooded area.

Nutt, 47, was in Cullman Tuesday night for a banquet. A former Baptist minister, he made numerous personal appearances at Baptist and Chamber of Commerce meetings to tell stories of Christian humor. In his appearances on "Hee Haw" he told brief, humorous Christian stories.

Nutt was born in 1934 in Amarillo, Texas. He traced his show business career back to age 4 when his mother used to lift him onto a chair to take part in a gospel-singing hour on KGNC radio. He became an ordained Baptist minister two weeks after his 13th birthday.

Nutt completed four years at Baylor University in Waco, Texas, became a church youth director and in 1960 moved his family to Louisville, where he enrolled at Southern Baptist Theological Seminary.

He made the move to show business in August 1969, first as a lecturer-entertainer and later as "The Prime Minister of Humor" on "Hee-Haw."

His trademark was an endless array of stories based on Southern Baptists and the Southern way of life.

'60 Minutes' Leads Ratings 3rd Week

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS' "60 Minutes" was the top-rated prime-time program for the third week in a row, helping the network extend its run of first-place finishes to a month, figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co. showed.

CBS now has won the networks' ratings competition six times in the eight weeks of the current season. NBC won twice in October, thanks in large measure to its broadcasts of baseball's World Series.

The No. 1 network had eight other shows, in addition to "60 Minutes," in the Top 10 for the week ending Nov. 21, including the last two installments in the three-part mini-series, "The Blue and the Gray."

Part II of the expensive Civil War drama was third in the current competition, with Part III in sixth place. The opening chapter was No. 2 in the previous week's survey.

CBS' rating for the week was 20.5, with ABC second at 17 and NBC third, for the fourth consecutive week, at 13.8.

The networks say CBS' rating means in an average minute of prime time, 20.5 percent of the country's TV-equipped homes were tuned to the No. 1 network.

CBS' rating was the highest for any network this season.

TV Show Has John Ritter Going For Aging Beauty

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Television is still obsessed with, and seems somewhat shocked by, the coupling of an older woman and a younger man. But CBS, at least, had the good taste and sense to do it right.

Last month, ABC offered the sappy and irredeemable "Forbidden Love," with Andrew Stevens and Yvette Mimieux. In contrast, "In Love With an Older Woman," on CBS tonight, intelligently explores the well-traveled theme of May-September relationships.

Tonight John Ritter is the one smitten with aging beauty, although there's nothing creaky about the classy Karen Carlson.

Ritter plays 30-year-old Robert Cristenberry, an arrogant and ruthless lawyer who defends insurance companies against expensive damage claims.

Robert is also an enthusiastic player in the singles bar game. Considered a pick-up pro, Robert uses female companionship to satisfy his ego and impress his friends.

As one of his conquests says: "The sex was all right. Your warmth as a human being needs a little work."

It's only when he meets Isobel Ross (Miss Carlson) that egotism and immaturity are no longer the winning combination.

Isobel is a divorced, ex-artist who begins working for him as an investigator. She's attracted to Robert but is leery of their work relationship and their age difference, which is greater than Robert realizes.

She resists his advances, insisting they have nothing in common. She's from the radio age. He's a child of television. But his knowledge of radio comic Fred Allen earns him a date and, eventually, live-in companionship.

Unlike "Forbidden Love," this couple has more going for them than photogenic physiques. Because of Isobel, compassion and sensitivity creep into Robert's personal work ethic. Isobel regains some of the confidence and joy that had disappeared in her years of marital subordination.

And, unlike the characters played by Stevens and Miss Mimieux, these adults can think and grow. Clearly, they need each other on different levels, and the audience will care whether they stay together.

The returning daughter, always a key variable in these love stories, is handled well. Instead of exhibiting the resentment displayed by the daughter in "Forbidden Love," Debbie (Jamie Rose) is secure and perceptive enough to see the relationship from her mother's side.

Before Debbie's appearance on the scene, Robert buys her a Snoopy doll, choosing to believe that Isobel's daughter is barely out of the sandbox. Isobel does nothing to correct his misconception, and Debbie turns out to be a progressive 24-year-old, who delights in teasing the embarrassed couple. Not in front of the K-I-D, she spells out when she catches them kissing.

This could be the breakthrough dramatic role for Ritter. For six years, his physical comedy has been squandered in the mindless titillations of "Three's Company."

No Monthly Payments!

Today, more than half of all Toyota owners make no monthly car payments. Because long after their car loans were paid, their Toyotas are still running dependably. And with Toyota's optional extended service warranty, you could take 48 months to pay for your car, and still have another 12 months of driving under warranty.

Some car dealers offer low financing to get you to buy their cars. But that's no great bargain if you have to replace the car or pay for major repairs before you own your own car, and not the bank.

So before you decide to buy a car for the low monthly payments, remember...you could be driving a car with no monthly payments for years to come. Toyota...built to stay on the road for a very long time.

Backers Rally Around Jimmy Green

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Democratic allies of Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green are voicing public support for him in the face of reports he is the object of a federal investigation.

But some legislators are saying privately the allegations have raised a cloud over Green's political future and his unannounced campaign for governor.

Green, in his second term as lieutenant governor, has denied allegations that he was involved in illegal tobacco sales and declined comment on reports he is under investigation in a suspicious warehouse fire.

His administrative assistant, Arlene Pulley, said Green and his followers haven't let the allegations slow their plans for Green's campaign for the 1984 Democratic nomination for governor.

"Absolutely, we're going full steam ahead," Mrs. Pulley said. "I think he's the frontrunner in the governor's race."

"I think it's obvious to most people he hasn't been charged with anything," she added. "It's just the word of a convicted felon."

The latest allegations surfaced last week in a federal courtroom in Greenville, Tenn., where a former Green employee, Sandy White, was sentenced on a counterfeiting conviction.

White, arrested in the FBI's undercover Colcor probe, said under questioning by a federal judge that he and Green were involved in illegal tobacco sales. Assistant U.S. Attorney Guy Blackwell said in answer to questions from Judge C.G. Neese that the FBI and U.S. Agriculture Department officials were investigating a suspicious 1979 fire at a warehouse in Newport, Tenn., a year after Green sold it.

Blackwell said later that his statements in court shouldn't be interpreted to mean that Green is the target of the investigation, but sources close to the investigation said Green was being investigated for illegal tobacco sales and arson.

State Sen. Russell Walker, D-Randolph, chairman of the state Democratic Party, called the allegations "tragic" and unfair.

Walker said he stands by Green, but also said the allegations must be resolved before Green can wage a campaign for governor.

"I don't see how this kind of thing can be helpful to anyone," Walker said. "I know he'd like to get it behind him if he is going to be running. If he's going to be a viable candidate, it has to be resolved."

Green has had little to say about the allegations in public, but he spoke to Senate allies in a private meeting Monday, said Sen. Craig Lawing, D-Mecklenburg, president pro tem of the Senate and a leading Green backer.

"He just said it was unfortunate that was happening to him and there wasn't anything to it," Lawing said. "He assured us there was no basis of truth to it. He apologized for what had been put in the paper."

Lawing said if nothing comes of the allegations, Green could benefit from a sympathy vote in backlash to what might be seen as unfounded attacks on him. But he acknowledged the publicity may be hurting Green politically.

"I would say right now as long as these are nothing but allegations he might be hindered a little, but I wouldn't say he's wounded or finished or washed up," Lawing said.

He described Green as personally "a little indignant about it," and said his advice to the lieutenant governor would be to wait until well into next year before deciding whether to run for governor.

Sen. Kenneth Royall, D-Durham, chairman of the Advisory Budget Commission, said he supported Green and didn't believe the charges. But he added, "It hurts anybody anytime somebody says something derogatory."

Interviews with several other Senate leaders appointed to their posts by Green found public support for the lieutenant governor. All said they did not believe the publicity and allegations would affect Green's ability to preside over the Senate when it convenes in January.

But some of those same legislators and others, asking not to be named, also expressed a view that Green's political future had been seriously damaged.

"There are some people who feel Mr. Green now has a cloud that would take a lot of effort to remove," said one eastern North Carolina legislator. "I think Green has been damaged. For him to overcome it would be a big job."

Some legislators pointed to Green's admission last year that he accepted about $4,500 in cash from a highway contractor later sentenced to prison in the highway bid-rigging scandal. Officials in the state Attorney General's office said they investigated the incident but found no basis to bring charges.

"I don't see how he can recover," said one senator, asking not to be named. "I think the damage is permanent."

Gary Pearce, press secretary to Gov. Jim Hunt, said reports of the allegations have been confusing, making it difficult to assess the political ramifications. Hunt was elected independently of Green and has been frequently at odds with the lieutenant governor.

Hunt's senior political aide, Joe Pell, said the allegations may raise suspicions in the public about Green. But there is time, he said, for the allegations to be resolved.

"All this will be cleared up before his political future is on the line," Pell said. "The people will know."

Chief Draws Six-Year Sentence

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP)

Suspended Lake Waccamaw Police Chief L. Harold Lowery was sentenced to up to six years in prison Tuesday after his trial on bribery charges was stopped when he pleaded guilty to racketeering charges.

Lowery changed his plea to guilty in the FBI's probe of corruption in Columbus County after testimony revealed he had accepted $1,650 in bribes from undercover agents. Testimony by informant Joseph Moody and undercover FBI agent William Redden indicated Lowery took bribes on six occasions.

Lesser charges of possession and transfer of a sawed-off shotgun were dropped in the plea-bargain in U.S. District Court.

Lowery could have received a maximum sentence of 25 years in jail and/or a $25,000 fine. Lowery will begin his term after Jan. 1.

"Nobody forced you to take that money," U.S. District Court Judge W. Earl Britt said before sentencing Lowery, who will be eligible for parole immediately.

Lowery is the third public official convicted in the probe, following former county commissioner Ed Walton Williamson for racketeering and former state Rep. Ron Taylor for bribery.

FOCUS

Lebanon — A Captive Nation

This week Lebanon has little to celebrate as it begins its 40th year of independence. Years of warfare have destroyed its capital, and its citizens are still in danger as the forces of Italy, France, and the U.S. try to keep the peace. Foreign occupation is nothing new to the Lebanese. In 64 B.C. Roman soldiers first seized the nation. The Ottoman Turks controlled Lebanon from 1516 until 1918 when the League of Nations put the country under temporary French rule. France did not grant it independence until 1943. By 1970 the PLO had moved in, the Syrians followed in 1976, and Israeli forces invaded earlier this year. Many Lebanese wonder whether true independence will ever come to their troubled nation.

DO YOU KNOW — Who is Lebanon's President?

TUESDAY'S ANSWER — Franklin Pierce, a Sagittarian, was the 14th President of the United States.

Sample the Sweet Life of new Equal-free!

Enjoy the taste of sugar without saccharin.

Introducing Equal: The revolutionary sweetener breakthrough.

This is the one you've heard about. Equal is the first low-calorie sweetener with a true, sweet sugar taste—and no bitter aftertaste. Because Equal contains no saccharin!

Equal gets its sweetness from NutraSweet,™ a breakthrough sweet-ening discovery with ingredients like those found naturally in many foods.

One packet of Equal is as sweet as two teaspoons of sugar. Yet it has only 4 calories. The same amount of sugar has 8 times as many calories.

Equal is in supermarkets and drugstores everywhere. Now you can try it—free. It's a perfect way to taste the sweet life of Equal.
