Reagan Stops Short Of January Tax Cut

By TERENCE HUNT
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — President Reagan said today the tax cut due next July will give the economy a dramatic boost but stopped short of endorsing a plan to make the cut effective in January.

Reagan's intentions about the timing of the tax cut were still in doubt as he concluded a California vacation and prepared to head back to Washington.

White House aides said privately last week the president was leaning toward asking Congress to move up the tax cut to stimulate the economy despite anticipated strong opposition on Capitol Hill.

Stopping in Los Angeles to address the National League of Cities, Reagan said today that next July's 10 percent rate cut, the last installment in the three-year program, "will benefit working men and women more than anyone else and will have the most dramatic impact on our economy."

He is expected to announce his decision on the tax-cut speedup before leaving Washington Tuesday for a five-day

Latin American trip.

He promised the city officials that "the federal government will not turn its back on you" but insisted that a healthy economy would be more helpful than federal grants in solving their problems.

"Have we all become addicted to temporary bailouts, failing to realize that the only answer must be a restoration of our economy from sea to shining sea?" he asked.

Defending his economic policies, Reagan said, "It is time to give up the temporary Band-Aids and placebos and get on to the business of a real cure."

He said the tax cuts now in place are "already providing the stimulus needed to get our economy moving again."

"This tax talk in no pipe dream," he said, adding that "one of the best ways to stimulate the economy is to give the American worker a break and cut his and her tax rates."

Reagan said an improved economy is the only answer for soaring budget deficits. "There is no way we can eliminate by budget cuts alone the structural deficit built into the budget, nor can it be eliminated by raising taxes," he said.

Reagan sought to allay the fears of city officials that money which would be distributed under the administration's "new federalism" program would go to the states but not find its way into city treasuries. He said "there will be mandatory pass-through provisions to protect local units of government."

The president urged the lame-duck congressional session, which began today, to take up his "urban enterprise zone" package of tax breaks and investment incentives to lure new business into depressed urban areas.

He also made a pitch for a massive highway repair and jobs program that Congress will consider during its lame-duck meeting.

The highway repair plan, which already carried bipartisan congressional support, calls for a 5-cent per gallon increase in the federal gasoline tax to finance the work.

"It will allow us to complete the interstate system, make almost all the interstate repairs, strengthen all our dangerously weak bridges, improve thousands of others, enhance all of our safety and address the critical public transit needs of our cities," Reagan said.

Reagan's enterprise zone program contains a variety of incentives to attract new business to inner city areas.

"The plan would create a free-market environment in depressed areas through tax relief, lifting regulations and reducing other government burdens," he said.

It includes a provision to allow employers to pay a lower minimum wage to teen-age workers. The Senate has approved the package but the House has not acted. It will have to be re-introduced in the next Congress if it fails to win House passage this year.

Reagan's audience included some of the strongest critics of the administration's "new federalism" plan to replace many local grant programs with block grants to the states. City officials fear they will be left short.

Beyond that, the administration is sharply cutting back funds for the League of Cities. The group received $4 million from the federal government last year but is expected to get only $1.6 million this year. Next year, none of its grant is expected to be renewed.

Well Over Last Year's Traffic

Promising Weekend Shopping

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

If shopper traffic at several Greenville businesses on Friday and Saturday was an indication of what is in store for the Christmas buying season, local merchants appear to be in for banner sales activity.

"Tremendous" was the term applied by Greenville Banks, general manager of Belk Tyler at Carolina East Mall, in describing business at his store both Friday and Saturday.

The day after Thanksgiving traditionally launches the Christmas season for shoppers but Banks said that both Friday and Saturday were "tremendous, traffic wise and sales wise." The results of the two-day period reflected an increase of about 25 percent over last year "and it was good then," said Banks.

"We were open until 11 p.m. Friday and we had traffic until 11," the spokesman said. He added that the business "closed at 10 p.m. Saturday with people in the store."

Jerry Green, assistant manager at JCPenney, said "we were real happy with the results" of Friday and Saturday shopping and he attributed a weather change that lowered temperatures on Saturday with helping boost traffic.

Compared with last year, Saturday's business at Penney's registered the biggest percentage gain, Green reported, although Friday was a big day. He said that Saturday sales usually trail the big day-after-Thanksgiving Friday but the weather possibly altered the results this year.

He said that strong sales continue on Atari video games and microwave ovens remain popular. Friday and Saturday saw a lot of activity at Penney's auto center, Green said.

The spokesman cited a "huge increase" in applications for new charge accounts this year and he said the store has received more applications this month for charge cards than ever before.

Brownie Cordell, manager at Sears at the mall, termed Friday and Saturday business as "super" and he said the shopper activity was a continuation of good business all year long at Sears here. Cordell said that while both days were good, Saturday's percentage increase over the comparable day in 1981 was bigger than Friday's gain.

"We had more business on Friday this year but the increase over last year was bigger on Saturday," he explained. Saturday from 6-9 p.m. was the busiest period, he said.

The manager pointed out that merchants are price cutting more this year and offering more promotional goods in an effort to be competitive. He said shoppers benefit from the competition among stores.

Cordell echoed the report from Penney's on charge account increases, saying that 200 applications for cards were received on Friday and Saturday and roughly 1,000 forms have been filled out so far in November. He said that the store is making a push for new accounts, including prospects among college juniors and seniors, and he cited an overall increase in approval rates.

Herman Johnson, K-Mart manager, said that business was "real good Friday but Saturday was a little sluggish." Johnson noticed a "lot more traffic this year than last" at his store.

The assistant manager at Brody's downtown store on Evans Mall, Tim Byrd, said the firm had a "pretty good day" Friday with sales up approximately 25 percent over last year's comparable period. Traffic was generally up Friday but activity slacked off somewhat Saturday, he reported, saying that business on Saturday was about the same as last year.

'Exception' In Evidence

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —

The Supreme Court, over strong objections by three justices, today agreed to consider creating a "good faith" exception to its 68-year rule banning from trials all evidence obtained in illegal police searches.

The court's eventual decision could lead to a major overhaul of one of the key constitutional defenses available to criminal defendants.

On other subjects, the court:

—Cleared the way for the eventual public playing of tape recordings covering 2½ years of President Nixon's Oval Office conversations.

The court let stand a decision that Nixon's non-Watergate tapes must be made public, possibly at regional listening centers throughout the country. About 12½ hours of tapes relating to the Watergate scandal already are available for public listening and were not in dispute in the case acted on today.

—Refused to hear an appeal by John Demjanjuk, an Ohio autoworker accused of having operated a World War II gas chamber at a Nazi death camp, to regain his U.S. citizenship. A federal judge last year ordered Demjanjuk to forfeit his citizenship.

The federal government has sought to strip Demjanjuk of his citizenship since 1977, after he was accused of having served as a guard at the infamous Treblinka camp in Poland, where 900,000 Jews were killed.

—Agreed to review a ruling that nuclear waste disposal plans must be considered on a case-by-case basis by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission in licensing nuclear power plants.

A federal appeals court imposed the requirement on the agency last April, basing its conclusions on a law passed by Congress.

A series of NRC rules disallow consideration in each individual licensing proceeding of uncertainties in the prospects for safe, high-level waste disposal. The agency has imposed a single standard applicable to all licensing proceedings.

In the evidence case, the court said it wants to hear a new round of oral arguments in an Illinois case to study "the question whether the rule... should to any extent be modified so as, for example, not to require the exclusion of evidence obtained in the reasonable belief that the search and seizure was consistent with the Fourth Amendment."

The Constitution's Fourth Amendment protects against unreasonable police searches and seizures.

In a 1914 decision, the Supreme Court created the "exclusionary rule" to deter unlawful police conduct. Under the rule, criminal evidence obtained in a search or after an arrest later found to be unlawful cannot be used against a criminal defendant.

The rule means that convictions based, even in part, on such illegally seized evidence must be overturned.

But as crime rates have mushroomed in recent years, the rule has come under heavy attack. The court on numerous occasions has been asked — and has refused — to allow the use of evidence seized in searches that were unlawful only because of an "honest" mistake by police.

But just last June 23, the court refused to tamper with the exclusionary rule in deciding a criminal case from Alabama. "To date, we have not recognized such a 'good faith' exception and we decline to do so here," Justice Thurgood Marshall wrote for the court then.

Today, Marshall was one of the three dissenters — along with Justices William J. Brennan and John Paul Stevens — as the court agreed to consider creating such a good faith exception.

The court will use the case of Lance and Susan Gates, suspects in a Bloomingdale, Ill., drug investigation.

The Illinois Supreme Court suppressed evidence aimed against the two.

EX-DIPLOMAT SENTENCED — Rhona Ritchie leaves London's Old Bailey today after she was given a nine-month suspended jail sentence for passing confidential telegrams to an Egyptian diplomat. (AP Laserphoto)

Ex-Diplomat 'Guilty' In British Spy Case Trial

LONDON (AP) — Rhona Jane Ritchie, a former diplomat at the British Embassy in Tel Aviv, was given a nine-month suspended jail term today for passing to her Egyptian diplomat-lover confidential telegrams from Britain's foreign secretary to the U.S. secretary of state.

In passing sentence, Judge, Sir, David Croom-Johnson said: "It has been said someone in your position should be the eyes and ears of the diplomatic service, but that does not mean you were also its mouth."

Miss Ritchie whispered "thank you" when sentence was passed and she escaped a jail term. Miss Ritchie, her short dark hair streaked with gray, left the court as she had arrived — in a taxi with her parents, without speaking to reporters.

Miss Ritchie's lover, First Secretary Refaat el-Ansary, was transferred to Vienna about two months ago after his involvement in Tel Aviv with Miss Ritchie gained publicity, diplomatic sources in Cairo said.

Miss Ritchie, 30, a former first secretary, admitted to one count of wrongfully communicating information to an unauthorized person.

It was the second prosecution under Britain's Official Secrets Act in three weeks. On Nov. 10, Geoffrey Prime, a former translator at the top-secret Government Communications Headquarters in Cheltenham, pleaded guilty to charges of passing secrets to the Soviet Union and was sentenced to 35 years in prison.

British newspapers headlined reports today of another spy case in which British military secrets may have been passed through the Soviet Embassy to Argentina, Britain's foe in last spring's Falkland Islands conflict.

At a hearing in London's Old Bailey Central Criminal Court, Attorney General Sir Michael Havers said that between November of last year and February of this year, Miss Ritchie disclosed the contents of five secret diplomatic telegrams to el-Ansary, her counterpart at the Egyptian Embassy.

Since Egypt has friendly relations with Britain, "the damage to our country's interests was not in the event great," Havers said.

He described Miss Ritchie's actions as "more foolish than wicked."

Wednesday Discussion On Urban Renewal Set

Dennis Rash, president of NCNB Community Development Corp., will meet Wednesday with the city's Comprehensive Planning Committee to talk to the group about his urban renewal concepts.

Louis Clark and Dick McKee, committee chairmen, said Rash was invited because of his experience in urban development in Charlotte and Greensboro.

The CPC was formed recently to implement Greenville's comprehensive plan for urban development that was drawn up in 1981 by the city and its planning staff.

The chairmen said, "One of our charges is to come up with specific plans for the revitalization of the heart of the city. We will also concern ourselves specifically with economic growth and development, long-term traffic control in the city, further development of the school system, and effective land use."

NCNB Community Development Corp. was the first non-profit community development firm authorized by the U.S. Comptroller of the Currency. It was chartered in 1978 with a mission of acquiring and renovating or building residential properties in inner-city locations and selling, managing, or renting those properties. The company was chartered with a capital of $250,000 provided (Please turn to Page 8)

TOO MANY BILLBOARDS?

Greenville seems to be getting more and more billboards. Has anyone started talking to the commissioners about these billboards? It's beginning to look like Lejeune Boulevard, Jacksonville, around here. J.H..

Billboards are regulated by Greenville city ordinance as to location, size and set back distance, according to city planner Faryce Goode. Anyone who erects a new billboard has to make application to the planning department and is subject to enforcement by the planning and inspections departments. If you feel that the present city policy is not restrictive enough, your first step should be to make an appointment to talk to city director of planning Bobby Roberson about the changes you feel should be made, she suggested.

COOKING IS FUN!

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

I first encountered white chocolate more than a dozen years ago on a visit to a small candy factory in Florida where I tasted their specialty — white chocolate and almond "bark." Since then a famous New York restaurant has introduced a white chocolate mousse (served with a strawberry sauce) that has been widely duplicated. And some home cooks, I am told, dote on making white chocolate cake.

But even though white chocolate has become popular, what it's made of is still a mystery to many of its fans. The best white chocolate I've ever had is plainly labeled. Six ingredients go into it: sugar, whole milk solids, nonfat milk powder, cocoa butter, lecithin (an emulsifier) and pure vanilla flavoring.

Recently an imaginative cook used this white chocolate to coat walnut-stuffed figs. When we tried her recipe, it worked well. All the fig fanciers among our tasters were entranced with the combination.

WHITE CHOCOLATE WALNUT FIGS

12-ounce package dried figs (18 to 24)

18 to 24 walnut halves

Two 7-ounce packages white chocolate

1/4 cup chocolate sprinkles, if desired

Fluted paper cups

With a small sharp paring knife remove stems and blossom ends of figs. Split lengthwise down one side and stuff with a walnut half; use fingers to reshape fig.

Turn broken or chopped white chocolate into the top of a double boiler over hot (not boiling) water, making sure it does not touch the water. Over low heat, with a small wooden spoon, stir often until chocolate melts — about 20 minutes.

Insert a three-tined fork into a walnut-stuffed fig and dip it into the melted chocolate. Inserting another fork, lift fig and allow any excess chocolate to drip back into the pan. Remove fig from forks onto wax paper. Repeat with remaining figs. If desired, decorate figs with chocolate sprinkles. (If there is any chocolate left over after all figs are dipped, drop it in mint-size wafers on wax paper to serve as candy.) Let the coating set — the time will depend on temperature of chocolate and room. To hasten setting, coated figs and wafers may be refrigerated (uncovered). Place figs in individual fluted paper cups and store, covered, in a cool place.

Makes 18 to 24.

Note: You can improvise a double boiler by using a saucepan or metal mixing bowl that just fits over another saucepan. Make sure the saucepan or bowl on top is set over, not in, the water below.

TANGERINE SHERBET
Nutritious, delicious and easy to make.

6-ounce can frozen

concentrated sweetened

tangerine juice

1 1/2 cups milk

2-3rds cup nonfat dry milk

powder

Thaw tangerine juice until it slips easily out of the can and turn it into an electric blender with milk and dry milk powder. Whirl, turning off machine once midway to scrape down the sides, until foamy and blended — a matter of minutes. Turn into 2 plastic ice cube trays with dividers. Freeze until firm; cover. At serving time, run a small spatula around each divider and remove sherbet cubes. (This sherbet never gets icy-hard.) Serve "as is" to youngsters; with chocolate liqueur to adults. Makes 6 servings.

Dear Abby Pen Pals Meet And Marry

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Your column asking people to write to a lonely serviceman (or woman) prompts this letter.

Back in 1965, the Rockford Morning Star in Rockford, Ill., published the names and addresses of local servicemen who were serving overseas. Patriotic citizens were urged to "drop these lonely boys a Christmas card to let them know you care."

I was a senior in high school at the time and always enjoyed writing letters, so I wrote to several young men. (I had as many as 30 pen pals all over the world at one time.)

In August of 1966, one of the fellows I had corresponded with while he was in Vietnam came home, and we met. His name was Ray Cantwell, and he is a very special man. He is also the father of our two wonderful children, and my husband of 15 years as of Nov. 25.

How's that for a storybook romance?

SALLY CANTWELL IN LINCOLN, NEB.

DEAR SALLY: Beautiful! Happy anniversary to you and Ray. Moral: "Cast thy bread upon the waters" — and you may get wedding cake in return.

DEAR ABBY: I'm so confused I can't think straight. Last summer I started going with a lifeguard, "L," treated me really nice and I thought we had something special. I'm only 15 and a virgin, so I told "L." I wouldn't sleep with him. He said he loved me too much to pressure me, although he wanted me very much.

The real problem is that while "L." was going with me, he was having sex with a 20-year-old girl who would give it to him. Well, he got her pregnant, and she and her mom are giving him a hard time. (They want marriage.)

He told me himself that he was just using this girl, and she practically asked to be used. Being only human, he couldn't turn her down. "L." is only 18 and has his whole life ahead of him, but he may have to marry this girl to give the baby a name.

Should I stick with him through all this mess? He says he loves me and I believe him. My parents thought he was a real nice kid and they keep asking why he hasn't been around to see me. What should I say? They would never understand.

Please help me decide what to do about him.

THE GIRL IN THE BLUE BIKINI

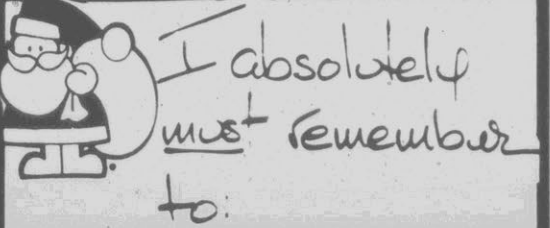

DEAR GIRL: Do yourself a favor and say goodbye to "L." He has a lot of growing up to do. I hope he becomes a man before he becomes a father, because he's facing a heavy responsibility. Tell your parents the truth, and consider yourself lucky to be rid of him.

DEAR ABBY: I'd like to add my two cents' worth to the tipping flap. I'm for doing away with the tipping system entirely. Why should waitresses have to depend on the generosity of the customers in order to make a living wage? Their employers should pay them — not the public.

THE LAST WORD

DEAR LAST: If a restaurateur were to eliminate the tipping system and pay the waiters and waitresses a living wage, he would have to charge far more than what he now charges. And that's more than most people are willing to swallow.

To make an emergency sewing kit, clean out an old lipstick container and fill it with needles wound with black, white and brown thread.

Send a gourmet basket or bag to the Smiths, the Jones, the Hardys. I get to choose from exquisite chocolates, scrumptious cookies, imported teas, even jelly bellies!

EARLY WEDDINGS
Today we think of marriage as the choice of the two people involved, but marriage has not always been romantic. Even today, some primitive societies go about it in an entirely different fashion.
In some cases, a suitor had to prove his worth to the bride's family through trial. Among the Arawaks of British Guiana, for example, the prospective bridegroom had to prove his marksmanship by shooting an arrow into a woodpecker nest from a moving boat. This meant he would be a good enough hunter to provide for a family.
Among the North Athabaskans of the Mackenzie River area of Canada, rivals wrestle for the woman. The winner claims her, even if she is already married to the loser.
Among the Kirgiz, a tribe of southwest Siberia, the groom must purchase the bride from her father. The price can be as high as eighty head of cattle.
In many tribes, a widow is required to remarry into the same family — usually the younger brother of her husband.

Miss Purvis, Mr. Keel Marry On Saturday

BETHEL — Deborah James Purvis and Ted Lanier Keel were united in marriage Saturday at five o'clock in the Bethel United Methodist Church. The Rev. Ellis Jennings Bedsworth, pastor of the church, performed the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Clayton Purvis of Bethel and parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Francis Carroll Keel of Oak City.

A program of wedding music was presented by Mike Edmondson, organist, and Jenny Gayle Reynolds sang "The Wedding Song," "One Hand, One Heart" and "Wedding Prayer."

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a formal gown of white silesta over white peau de soie designed with a Queen Anne neckline outlined in silk floral Venise lace beaded with clusters and scrolls of bridal pearls. The lace extended down to and encircled the empire waistline. The long fitted sleeves were enhanced by inserts of the silk floral Venise lace with cuffs edged in scalloped lace. Accentuated at center front with a sunburst of knife pleats, the flared skirt extended to an attached chapel length train. She wore a waltz-length veil of illusion edged in a double row of silk Venise lace held in place by a caplet overlaid in matching lace and beaded with seed pearls. Motifs of silk Venise lace were scattered over the illusion. Her formal cascade bridal bouquet consisted of phalaenopsis orchids, stephanotis, white roses and baby's breath.

Kathy Frazier of Ayden, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. Tammy Jo Purvis of Bethel, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Lou Ann Tetterton of Greenville, sister of the bridegroom, Kate Phillips of Greenville, cousin of the bridegroom, Susan Dunning of Bethel and Carol McKeel of Wilson.

The sleeveless gown was complemented by a chiffon jacket fashioned with a high neckline encircled with burgandy chantilly lace. The full sheer sleeves were enhanced with matching lace. A double corded tie sash encircled the waistline from which fell the chantilly lace peplum. They carried white muffs with red roses and a satin bow.

Kelly Keel Tetterton of Greenville, niece of the bridegroom, was the flower girl. She wore a gown of white silk organza and peau d'ange lace. The gown was styled with a high ruffled neckline with a round yoke and short puffed sleeves accented with lace. Jason Tetterton of Greenville, nephew of the bridegroom, served as ring bearer.

Honorary bridesmaids were Linda Wall, Gail James, Jackie Wooten and Debbie Carson, all of Bethel.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man. Groomsman were Kenneth Tetterton of Greenville, Paul Woodworth Jr. of Robersonville, Mike Taylor of Raleigh, Alvin Frazier of Ayden and Jimmy Benton of Elizabethtown.

The mother of the bride wore a rosette floor-length silesta gown. The mother of the bridegroom wore a royal blue velvet floor-length gown. The grandmother of the bridegroom wore a light pastel pink chiffon gown. Each wore a phalaenopsis orchid.

Mrs. John Rook Jr. of Bethel directed the wedding.

Immediately following the ceremony, the parents of the bride entertained at a reception honoring the bridal couple in the fellowship hall of the church.

After a wedding trip to the Caribbean Islands, the couple will live in Bethel.

The bride is a graduate of Atlantic Christian College and is employed by the Pitt County School System. The bridegroom is the owner of Snelling and Snelling Personnel Service of Greenville.

TAMALE PIE

A quick and easy skillet version of a popular main dish.

- 1/4 cup yellow cornmeal
- 1 pound and 12 ounce can whole tomatoes
- 1 tablespoon salad oil
- 1 medium onion, chopped medium-fine
- 1 small green pepper,

- chopped medium-fine 1/2 pound ground beef
- 1 teaspoon (or more) chili powder
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 12-ounce can whole-kernel corn, undrained
- 6-ounce can pitted small ripe olives, drained
- 1 cup diced (1/4-inch) cheddar cheese

In a small bowl stir together cornmeal and tomatoes, slightly breaking them up. In a 10-inch skillet in the oil gently cook onion and green pepper until wilted; add beef, chili powder and salt. Cook over moderately low heat, crumbling meat with a fork until it loses its red color; stir in cornmeal mixture. Cook uncovered over moderate heat for 10 minutes. Stir in corn and olives; cook over low heat, stirring once or twice, until hot — about 5 minutes. Off heat, fold in cheese. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Views On Dental Health

Kenneth T. Perkins, D.D.S. P.A.

TEETH ARE TOUGH...BUT...

Teeth are tough! Did you know that the outside layer of teeth (the enamel) is the second hardest naturally occurring substance. Only diamond is harder. That's one reason why more human teeth are found as prehistoric relics than any other part of the body.

It seems paradoxical that such a fabulously hard substance should be such easy prey to decay. It's amazing how teeth can decay in short order from contact with sugar and its eventual change into enamel-eating acid.

Another thing to be careful of is eating extremely hot and cold foods together. For example, drinking hot coffee while eating ice cream is liable to make teeth crack, because tooth enamel and the dentin underneath it expand and contract at different rates as they react to temperature changes. Tooth enamel is not damaged by hot liquids, but if something cold is consumed immediately afterward, the enamel contracts and could crack. Hot drinks are usually about 140 degrees Fahrenheit, ice cream is about 35 degrees. That much sudden change can be harmful to teeth.

Prepared as a public service to promote better dental health. From the office of: Kenneth T. Perkins, D.D.S. P.A. Evans St., Phone: 752-5126.

Harm To Athletics

At first glance it was easy to feel that Clemson University might be just another school which had gotten caught going after a superstar football player.

Clemson received probation penalties from both the National Collegiate Athletic Association and the Atlantic Coast Conference last week.

More careful study, however, showed that there was an endless list of violations including improper recruiting inducements, improper transportation, improper financial aid, and improper entertainment. Clearly the infractions were not simply a one time thing.

Of course Clemson is not the first institution to face NCAA probation and it certainly will not be the last. The flagrant violations cited should tell us, however, that it is time to do something about the hypocrisy of big time collegiate sports. Every time such violations are uncovered it damages the good name of the institution involved and it is harmful to amateur athletics in general. There is big money in sports and the payoff gets bigger every year. As long as the millions of dollars are available there is going to be the temptation to circumvent the rules.

Volunteer Work Pays Off

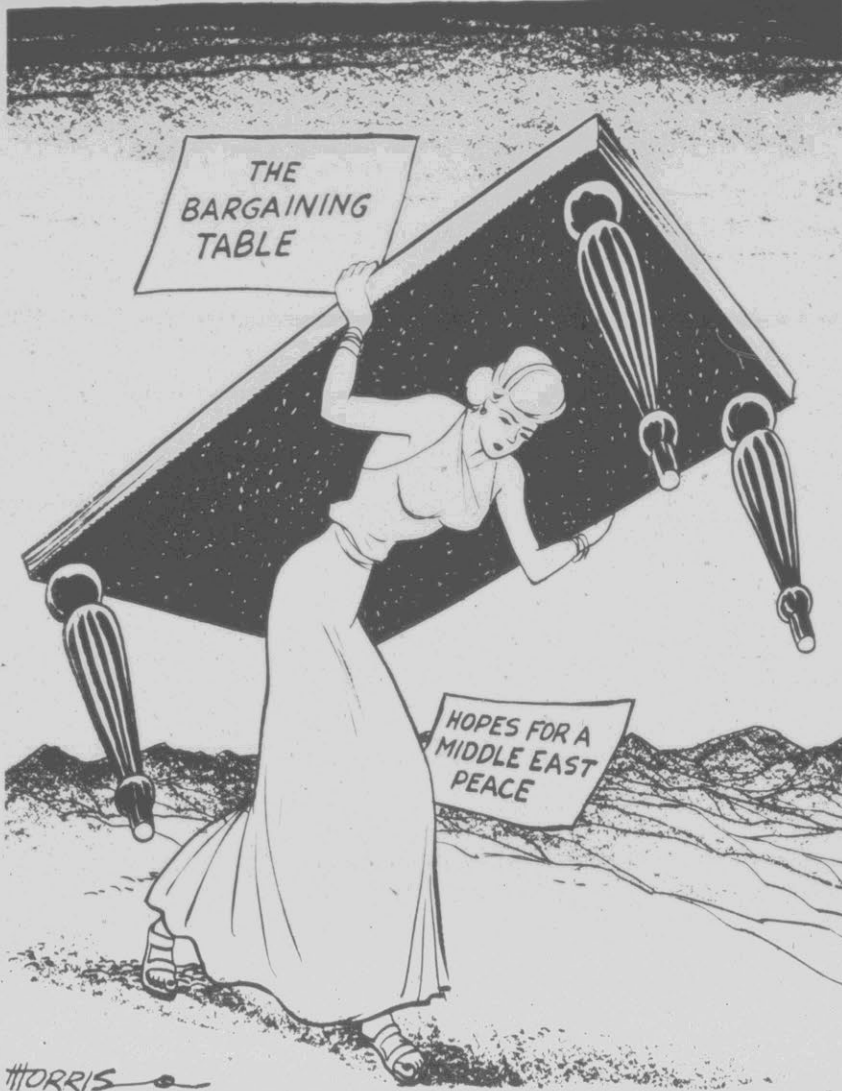

The East Carolina University Alumni Association is $45,831 richer this year through the efforts of student volunteers who manned phones for 916 hours to reach out and touch the university's scattered alumni.

The 195 volunteers, organized by the ECU ambassadors, picked up 2,158 pledges in this fashion. It was the fifth year of the campaign and over those years $219,882 has been obtained.

The volunteer students have made good use of the time on behalf of their institution. Many alumni have given who would not have done so if they had not been contacted ... and there are few old grads who don't welcome a call from their alma mater.

Clouds Over ReaganGoal

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's "new federalism" got old in a hurry.

It was supposed to have taken effect by now beginning a 10-year transition of federal programs to state governments, but it has been stalled for months.

Reagan's idea was to transfer $47 billion worth of federal programs to state governments, along with the tax sources to finance them.

The sources included half the current federal tax on gasoline, but Reagan has other plans for that revenue now.

State governors were skeptical from the outset. After months of negotiations with the administration, they have come up with a revised plan that would leave Washington fully responsible for the cost of medical care for the indigent, while shelving Reagan's proposal that the states take over most welfare programs.

The governors said the states should take over programs in education, transportation, job training, water and sewer grants and urban aid.

That puts the "new federalism" negotiations about where they were when Reagan proposed the big tradeoff in the first place.

There are political problems, too. Even if the governors had been sold on the Reagan plan, the seven new Democratic governors elected on Nov. 2 would have wanted a hand in the negotiations. The concern in the statehouses is that the administration would seek to transfer more responsibility than money.

Congressional Democrats are wary of what they see as a threat to social programs, since the Reagan plan would leave largely to state governments to decide what should be continued, what should be cut and what should be dropped. There will be more congressional Democrats next year.

And anything the administration and the governors agree upon will require congressional approval.

When he proposed "new federalism" in his State of the Union message 10 months ago, Reagan said it would cut administrative costs, improve efficiency, and make the programs more responsive to the people by putting control in the hands of governments closer to home.

"They can then preserve, lower or raise taxes on their own, and fund and manage these programs as they see fit," he said.

But the states, or most of them, have their own financial woes to worry about, and don't want another set just now. Furthermore, governors cannot deal with the questions involved in their own. Reagan has Congress; they have legislatures. Thirty-four of the 50 governors; and the overwhelming majority of the legislatures are going to be Democratic next year.

Democrats control 72 of the 99 legislative houses in the 50 states. Nebraska has a one-house, non-partisan legislature.

The Democrats gained 11 legislative houses in the off-year elections. As a result, they control both branches of the legislatures in 34 states, to 11 for the Republicans. Control is split between the parties in four states.

Those numbers don't bode well for "new federalism," either.

Nor does Reagan's decision to seek a 5-cent-a-gallon increase in the federal gasoline tax to rebuild highways and transit systems — and, in the process, to create an estimated 320,000 jobs.

The "new federalism" was to have been financed at the outset through a trust fund that would have included the proceeds of federal excise taxes, the gas tax among them. The plan was to keep 2 cents of the current 4-cent-a-gallon gasoline tax for interstate highway maintenance. The rest would have made up part of the trust fund until 1991.

At that point, the federal government was to end its excise taxes except for the interstate highway share of the gas tax. Those were to become potential sources of state revenue, to finance the programs transferred from Washington.

Dooley Is Still Around

The secret is out. Social Security is in a lot of trouble. The politicians will tell you that the system is going broke because: (A) Cost of Living Indexing is too high. (B) The work force is not contributing enough money to pay for the retired. (C) The payout for people is three times what they and their companies put in. (D) All of the above.

But no one will dare mention the real reason. I found it out by talking to a man who said he was eighty-three years old.

"You don't look it," I told him.

"I am. And that's what's killing Social Security," he chuckled. "When Roosevelt started the thing in the '30s he expected me to die when I hit 67. That's what the whole damn program was based on. People was supposed to die a few years after they collected their money. Now we're all hanging around in our 70s and 80s and the government doesn't know what to do about us."

"I don't believe anyone wants you to die before your time," I said. "America reveres its old people."

"They do and they don't," he said. "They're not about to kill us, but at the same time, they're getting pretty darned mad they have to pay for us for being alive."

"Well, it is a burden on the working class," I admitted. "Somebody should have thought of that when they started the system. The smart alecks in the New Deal drew up these fancy graphs and said, 'If Dooley, that's my name, dies at 67 and Mrs. Dooley dies at 70, we should have enough in the pot to take care of them.' Well, Mrs. Dooley and I are doing quite well, thank you, and now the pot is empty."

"I guess they're going to have to come up with dire measures to replenish the pot."

ART BUCHWALD

"They haven't come up with any good ones yet. The thinking behind Social Security was they wanted us to all get out of the work force by 65 to open up the job market for the young folks. If they change it and say you can't collect your Social Security until you're 70 that means the younger folks are going to get furious because they can't have our jobs. If the politicians cut back on our benefits they got a tiger by the tail because the senior citizen vote is the most powerful in the country. And if they raise Social Security taxes for the people who are now working, nobody is going to be able to go out and buy the things that's supposed to get us out of the recession. You don't have to be an Alan Greenspan to figure that out."

"What's the solution?"

"There ain't one, son."

That's what I keep telling you. The longer we live the worse it's going to be for everybody. Every time the medical profession finds a cure for a disease there is someone over in the Social Security Fund hitting his head against his computer."

"But we're a rich country. Surely we can take care of our old people in their September years."

"It isn't September, son, it's our December years. We're two months farther down the road than their actuarial tables. Look, don't think I'm cold-hearted about the problem. Mrs. Dooley and I were talking it over the other night and I said, 'Mama, do you want to die to save the Social Security system?' And she said, 'Not on your life! Do you?' I said, 'Nope. I'm just hitting my prime.'"

"I think you both made the right decision," I said.

"We didn't have too many choices. But I'll tell you something, son. When that trust fund goes bust there's going to be a lot of people in this country who aren't going to look kindly on us for hanging around."

"As far as I'm concerned, you and Mrs. Dooley can live as long as you want to."

"That's mighty kind of you to say that, son. Well, I guess I better start my daily walk. My doctor says it adds years to your life."

"Where do you walk?"

"Past the White House, the Capitol and the Social Security Building. Every time they see me strutting by it drives them up the wall."

Other Editors Say Views Will Vary

(Salisbury Post)

It would be too easy to call John East a shill for the National Congressional Club. The Republican senator, speaking to the state GOP, said he'd found individual reporters to be fundamentally fair. "But as for the editors," he said, "they are simply shills for the Democratic Party."

To parry East's thrust with more name-calling would be too simple a comment on what has grown into a complex issue. How fairly are East, mentor Jesse Helms and the Congressional Club treated in the press? Probably more fairly than they will ever admit.

Helms and East, masters of the caustic phrase, like to jab the press at every opportunity and blame the media for their own political shortcomings. To a limited degree, their criticism of the press may be justified.

The two senators' controversial nature begs for editorial comment. They define issues in clear black and white terms, refusing to recognize any shades of gray that could be open to interpretation or compromise. Their arguments are easy to pick apart, and some editors have had a field day doing just that ...

Ironically, East, a man who threatened earlier this year to leave the GOP over differences in economic opinion, urged the Republicans to unite into a party of broad principles and not let the media distract them ...

The fatal flaw in East's reasoning is that he fails to perceive that editors — like farmers, businessmen, teachers and everyone else — are voters, too. The views they express are the views of thinking constituents who have the good of the community, state and nation at heart.

East presumably has similar service in mind, but he employs different methods. There's plenty of room in the state and in the media for more than one point of view. John East would do well to consider the logic advanced by some of the state's editors. To cast them all as his enemies is to narrow his base of support even further.

What Will People Be Doing?

By JOHN CUNIFF

AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — The fellows who forecast by the numbers, and that includes some of the White House economists, are having a terrible time trying to figure out what the ordinary American is likely to do over the next few months.

That length of time generally is categorized as "short term," and during any such period an intermixture of psychological facts can intervene. Numbers, even economic numbers, often go in straight lines. Humans are erratic.

One well-known forecaster, Albert Sindlinger of Media, Pa., explains to his clients that his projections are always based on economic fundamentals, and that forecasts which aren't are merely "guesses, hopes or wishes."

But precisely because they are based on fundamentals, Sindlinger has joined a host of other forecasters in missing some short-term developments, or, as some of the fraternity like to call them, aberrations.

"Fundamentally based forecasts sometimes may be off on timing and magnitude," Sindlinger told clients after interest rates failed to go higher, as forecast. Those times, he said, are when "psychology drives markets."

"Sindlinger cannot forecast psychological moves because there is nothing to substantiate them," he explained. "Psychologically centered movements are volatile and can reverse themselves for no basic reason."

Such "bubbles," he advises, "later appear as short-run aberrations. The fundamentals always outlast and win out." And so, he forecasts, interest rates will rise to a "peakout" in February or March.

By then, he projects, conventional mortgages will be back up to 16.5 percent from their current levels of about 14.25, and the prime rate, which has just been cut to 11.5 percent, will rebound to 16.8 percent by Feb. 23, 1983.

The psychological factor repeatedly has confounded those forecasters who say the consumer "should be" out there spending up a storm. Why not, they say, when credit obligations have been reduced and savings have been rebuilt.

Why not? Because of psychological factors. Insecurity, for instance. Hardly a family exists without a relative or neighbor out of work. Hardly a person can be found who has forgotten the damage wrought earlier by overspending.

A flotilla of forecasters has been sunk by following the numbers instead of the psychology, and that probably includes many of those who advise the White House. Note if you will the year-long delay in the recovery's arrival.

It has been true too in the stock market, in disdain of pronouncements by some of the most highly paid gentlemen of the forecasting fraternity, some of whom have then sworn that the market rather than they were wrong.

Have you observed the depressing impact of consumer mood or psychology — or, if you prefer, the independent spirit of Americans in the marketplace — on the forecasts of the powerful people who market automobiles?

Yes, those same people who in the past have been said to create and enlarge their markets through publicity, promotion, advertising and even, at the extreme, through the technique of brainwashing consumers into "needing" cars?

The dullard economy, in contrast to repeated forecasts of recovery, provoked Argus Research to comment that "It seems appropriate ... that we present an update of an economy that's been acting like a real turkey."

But on brief reflection, consumers might say the real turkeys are the seers who have been examining the economic numbers and reaching conclusions, ignoring the mood, the psychology, the independence of people behind the numbers.

Budget Freeze Forces Medical Educators Out

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Low wages have led to an exodus of faculty from the University of North Carolina School of Medicine, says dean Dr. Stuart Bondurant.

Bondurant said nearly a dozen faculty members have left the school because of a provision in the 1982 state budget bill which bans pay increases for state workers, including research grants and receipts from hospital clinics.

"It is a widespread problem," he said. "It is most pressing in the medical school in the clinical departments, where our salaries under ordinary circumstances are not competitive with those in other medical schools around the country. When we are subjected to freeze, (that gap) widens very rapidly."

The school's division of neurosurgery, has lost two of its four members and a third may leave soon, division director Dr. M. Steve Mahaly Jr. said.

"We've lost (the faculty members) because they are not being paid commensurate with what their colleagues (nationwide) are earning," he said. "Soon, it's going to be down to just me."

Dr. K.L. Moazed, chairman of the North Carolina State University Faculty Senate, said he knew of several faculty members who have left the school for higher pay, some even doubling their wages.

"If we are to develop the state economically and build it in high-technology areas, which the governor hopes to do, then we can't afford to be diverted by having salary freezes or not giving raises to faculty members," he said.

Dr. William E. Laupus, dean of the East Carolina University School of Medicine, said he knew of no faculty departures related to the salary freeze.

"We have had several individuals who received promotions who were caught in the freeze," he said. "We feel this is a situation that needs the attention of the appropriate government agency to keep the kind of fine people we hire here."

"The fact is that we bring money into the institution and pay our own way," Mahaly said. "We are earners. The highway patrolman doesn't do that. Neither does the school-teacher."

Heavy Loss To Diseases

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Diseases of flue-cured tobacco cost North Carolina farmers $64.4 million in 1982, according to an extension plant pathologist at North Carolina State University.

Dick Powell said the estimate is based on information compiled with the help of extension agents in tobacco-producing counties. He said the loss represents 5.5 percent of the value of the crop.

Disease losses last year reduced crop value by nearly $58.8 million, or 4.9 percent, he said.

"Environmental conditions in 1982 favored the development of several disease problems in the flue-cured tobacco crop," Powell said. "Rainfall, especially early in the season, was excessive in many sections of the state. Such wet conditions favor infection by most disease-causal agents."

For example, field losses to brown spot, which amounted to about $6 million last year, showed a 50 percent increase to more than $9 million this season, he said.

Granville wilt was the most costly tobacco disease in the state in 1981 and 1982. Losses this year rose to $14.8 million, 1.28 percent of the crop value.

The second most costly tobacco disease both years was mosaic. Losses to this virus infection in 1982 amounted to about $13.3 million, 1.15 percent of crop value.

Brown spot ranked third, followed by root-knot nematodes with losses estimated at $8.9 million.

An Investment That Pays You While It Pays For Itself.

Most crops, like tobacco for instance, require a large annual capital outlay followed by a long wait for a possible profit. A Perdue broiler house on the other hand is a crop that doesn't require a large annual capital outlay, or a four to five month wait to maybe turn a profit. Perdue broilers pay after every eight/nine week flock, starting with the first one. And those checks are guaranteed.

Also, a Perdue broiler house is one of the few agricultural operations that can pay its own way. Many others can't even generate enough income to pay for themselves much less provide a profit. And when a Perdue house is paid for, it won't be worn out like most row-crop equipment — compare that to other farm investments. And at market time, Perdue even absorbs poultry market fluctuations. That makes a Perdue broiler house a virtually risk-free sound investment.

Perdue pays a guaranteed paycheck every eight/nine weeks. These checks add up to over $20,000 a year gross income on a 500' house. And with better performance comes even better pay. So if you've been depending on row crops alone, you may want to consider Perdue. A broiler operation is compatible with your other farming responsibilities. But as an investment it stands alone. There's never been a better time to talk chicken with Perdue.

Three Cars Are Damaged

Greenville police Friday charged Teresa Barrett of 123 Oakdale Road with reckless operation and driving without a license following investigation of a 4:25 p.m. collision on Fifth Street, 45 feet west of the Vance Street intersection.

Officers said the Barrett car struck a parked car owned by James C. White of 901 West Fifth St., then collided with a car driven by Carl Henry Tyndall of 404 Elizabeth St.

Damage from the mishap was estimated at $750 to the Barrett car, $1,000 to the White car and $400 to the Tyndall vehicle.

early Monday. A warm front formed along the coast Sunday and moved west into the coastal area during the afternoon.

The front continued to move west across the coastal plain into the eastern piedmont last night. As a result, the eastern part of the state had rising temperatures during the night.

There was a wide range in temperatures Sunday afternoon. Across the mountains highs ranged from 36 at Spruce Pine to 56 at Murphy.

Store Is Robbed

Greenville police are investigating a Thanksgiving night armed robbery at a local convenience store that resulted in the theft of an undetermined amount of money, according to Chief Glenn Cannon.

He said the night attendant at the Stop-N-Go store on South Memorial Drive across from the Camelot Inn told police a man armed with weapon entered the store and demanded money. The attendant said that after the robbery, she was told to lie down on the floor. The robber fled in a car, the employee reported.

Cannon, noting that the attendant was not injured, said the incident was reported at 10:03 p.m.

Charge Made After Collision

Martin Elbert Trueblood III of Elizabeth City, was charged by Greenville police Saturday with driving under the influence of narcotics and failing to stop for a stop sign following investigation of a 3:50 a.m. collision Saturday at the intersection of Fifth Street and Green Springs Park Road.

Investigators said the Trueblood car collided with an auto driven by Charles Fredrick Simpson of 11 Wildwood Villa, causing an estimated $500 damage to the Trueblood car and $750 damage to the Simpson vehicle.

In a second Saturday mishap, police charged Marvin Dail Skiles of Grimesland with careless and reckless driving and hit and run driving following investigation of an 8:30 p.m. collision on Greene Street, 1 mile south of the Farmer Street intersection.

Officers reported the Skiles car collided with an auto driven by Henry Stallings Jr. of Route 4, Greenville, causing an estimated $100 damage to the Skiles car and $400 damage to the Stallings vehicle.

Electricity For Parts Of Kauai

HONOLULU (AP) — Electricity has been partially restored on the hurricane-ravaged island of Kauai, freeing for sea duty a nuclear submarine that had been requested as an auxiliary power source, Navy officials say.

The attack submarine USS Indianapolis was ordered into Nawiliwili Harbor during the weekend to mate its nuclear-powered plant with the island's electrical system.

But three huge portable generators provided by the Navy have been installed at the Kauai Electric Co.'s major generating plant to provide backup power, so the submarine won't be needed, Lt. Cmdr Terrence Forrester, a spokesman for the U.S. Pacific Fleet, said Sunday.

The company's main generating plant was restarted Saturday night and most of Lihue, the island's largest town, had lights and power by Sunday, officials said.

Water and telephone service was restored Sunday to much of Kauai, which was hardest hit of the major islands when Hurricane Iwa swept through the area last Tuesday night with winds of up to 110 mph.

Iwa, the worst hurricane to hit Hawaii since the National Weather Service started keeping records, caused almost $200 million in damage.

There was no immediate estimate on when electrical service might completely be restored to the island's population of 39,000, officials said.

Severed Arm Reattached

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — A man whose left arm was severed in a farm accident underwent nine hours of surgery to reattach the limb, but doctors say it may be at least a year before they know if the operation was successful.

Jerry Hammond, 43, of Hudsonville, lost the arm seven inches above the elbow Friday afternoon when it was caught in a corn picker on a farm in Blendon Township.

Hammond was in satisfactory condition today in the hospital's intensive care unit, according to a hospital spokeswoman who would not give her name.

"We're hoping that if the arm survives, a year or two down the road he will have an arm with some function," said Dr. Leslie Wong, who led the surgical team in Saturday's operation at Butterworth Hospital.

"But you can't be overly optimistic even under the best of conditions, because so many things can go wrong," Wong said.

"Right now, there's no evidence of infection, and the circulation to the injured part looks excellent," Wong said. "It's an indication that it is a success so far. But that is a situation that can change at any time."

Raffle Tickets Are A Living

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — An unemployed handyman is selling $2 raffle tickets for a living.

David Stillman, 47, is printing 10,000 tickets offering as a prize his services for one year.

"It's a silly idea when you think about it, I guess, but I don't see why it wouldn't work," he said this weekend.

"Of the $20,000 earned, $1,000 would pay costs, such as ticket printing and banking charges, $4,000 would go to the raffle winner's favorite charity, and the remaining $15,000 would go into a bank which would pay me at a rate of $288 a week while I am working for the raffle winner."

Stillman said he just hasn't been able to get a job recently.

"My back is strong but I just haven't been able to find work," he said. "You see so many people out of work now. It's terrible. You get desperate."

No Emergency For Balloon

The Greenville Fire-Rescue Department was called Friday to the aid of hot air balloonists who had a few minutes before delivered Santa Claus to Pitt Plaza Shopping Center.

The call was a false alarm, a fire-rescue spokesman said. The balloonists had asked onlookers in a subdivision near the shopping center to take a rope to steady them. The onlookers had misunderstood the communication and, seeing smoke, thought they requested a call to the fire department, the spokesman said.

Two rescue trucks and a fire truck met the balloon as it put down at Aycock Junior High School, but there was no emergency.

The balloon, minutes earlier, had delivered Santa Claus to a field behind Pitt Plaza and a fire truck had taken him to greet patrons of the shopping center.

4th Arrest For Killing

WILSON, N.C. (AP) — A fourth suspect has been arrested and charged in the death of a 13-year-old boy last week, Wilson County Magistrate D.W. Stewart said Sunday.

Donald Eugene Klein died Thanksgiving Day from injuries suffered Nov. 22 when he and his brother, Edward Klein Jr., 16, were attacked and beaten with sticks while walking home from a neighborhood store.

Edward E. Dew, 17, of Wilson, was charged with murder and two counts of attempted armed robbery, Stewart said.

Edward Tyrone Meachem, 16, of Wilson, was charged with murder and two counts of attempted armed robbery. Glen Hines, 17, and Lorenza Williams, 24, both of Wilson, were charged with aiding and abetting murder and two counts of attempted armed robbery, Stewart said.

They were being held at the Wilson County Jail without bond and were scheduled to appear in district court Monday for bond hearings.

Artifacts May Divert Highway

SPOONER, Wis. (AP) — Federal transportation officials may change the route of a proposed new stretch of U.S. highway because of the discovery of 2,000-year-old artifacts that may provide new clues to primitive American societies.

The district director of the state Department of Transportation has recommended that U.S. 53, a major tourism and commerce artery, pass farther east of here so as not to disturb the site uncovered since September by the State Historical Society.

Archaeologist John Penman says many of the relics indicate that the people who made them had "a very sophisticated trade system" and that the creators "were self-sufficient in family groups."

Hungry Saints Gobble Up 49ers; Redskins Win

By The Associated Press

One game could not have been more indicative of the turnaround of two teams.

The San Francisco 49ers, defending Super Bowl champions, were on the skids, and the New Orleans Saints, 4-12 last year, were on the move.

"The Saints are a hungry club, much like we were last year," 49ers linebacker Keena Turner said.

On Sunday, the Saints won their third in a row, riding the aging arm of quarterback Ken Stabler to a 23-20 upset of the 49ers.

Stabler, cut last season by the Houston Oilers, threw for 154 yards, completing five passes in a 99-yard drive in the first quarter that he capped with a 10-yard scoring pass to fullback Wayne Wilson.

New Orleans led 23-6 after three quarters, then withstood two fourth-quarter touchdown passes by Joe Montana to up its record to 3-1. San Francisco now is 1-3.

"A lot of people had written me off," Stabler said afterward, "but I don't ever remember leaving."

The 49ers' offense sputtered as rain fell throughout the game at Candlestick Park. San Francisco fumbled twice, once at the New Orleans 24-yard line, and Montana was intercepted once, setting up a 1-yard touchdown run by George Rogers in the third quarter. New Orleans scored its other touchdown on a 2-yard run by Jimmy Rogers in the second quarter.

After four games — two since football's 57-day strike ended — only two teams remained undefeated. The Washington Redskins defeated Philadelphia 13-9 Sunday to up their record to 4-0, and tonight the Miami Dolphins put their 3-0 record on the line at Tampa Bay. Three other teams — Pittsburgh, the Los Angeles Raiders and Green Bay — lost for the first time Sunday.

The Steelers were defeated 16-0 at Seattle, Cincinnati clobbered the Raiders 31-17 and the New York Jets edged Green Bay 15-13.

Sunday's action featured a pair of record-setting passing performances and the apparent reluctance on the part of fans to forgive the strike.

Minnesota quarterback Tommy Kramer passed for 342 yards and a career-high five touchdowns, and Dan Fouts of San Diego threw for 337 yards to surpass the 300-yard plateau for an NFL-record 27th time.

Despite a full holiday weekend of play, that included two games on Thanksgiving Day, fans continued to stay away from ballparks. For 13 games this weekend, there were 117,417 no-shows and 91,660 unsold seats.

Redskins 13, Eagles 9

Mark Moseley hit a pair of long-range field goals, and Joe Theismann continued his hot hand with a 65-yard touchdown pass to Charlie Brown that boosted Washington over the 1-3 Eagles.

The Redskins intercepted Philadelphia quarterback Ron Jaworski four times, twice in the final six minutes to turn back two Eagle scoring threats. Jaworski blamed a wet field.

"The field was muddy and wet," he said. "The ball was wet and you couldn't plant your feet."

Seahawks 16, Steelers 0

The shutout was the first against the Steelers since Dec. 4, 1980, when the Oilers beat them 6-0.

Seattle rookie Norm Johnson kicked three field goals, and Jim Zorn threw an 11-yard touchdown pass to Paul Johns to even the Seahawks' record at 2-2.

The Seahawks' defense, meanwhile, held Pittsburgh to only 83 yards rushing and 135 through the air as the Steelers played much of the game without quarterback Terry Bradshaw. Bradshaw sustained a sprained shoulder after he was sacked in the first quarter.

Bengals 31, Raiders 17

Ken Anderson threw for one touchdown and ran for another, and cornerback Ken Riley returned an interception 56 yards for another score to propel Cincinnati past Los Angeles.

The Bengals, 3-1, defending American Conference champions, led 14-0 after one quarter on Anderson's 3-yard scoring pass to Rodney Holman and Riley's interception of a pass by Jim Plunkett, who was intercepted four times.

Jets 15, Packers 13

Pat Leahy's 25-yard field goal as time ran out in the third quarter lifted New York over previously unbeaten Green Bay.

Richard Todd threw a touchdown pass of 23 yards to Johnny "Lam" Jones, and the Jets, 3-1, scored their other touchdown on a 4-yard run by Mike Augustyniak. Both Green Bay scores came on touchdown passes from Lynn Dickey to rookie Phillip Epps.

Rams 20, Chiefs 14

Wendell Tyler scored two touchdowns and rushed for 138 yards as the Rams won their first game at the expense of the 1-3 Kansas City Chiefs.

Tyler's touchdowns came on runs of 1 and 23 yards in the second quarter, offsetting three fumbles. Two of Tyler's (Please turn to page 10)

Duke Blanks George Mason

DURHAM (AP) — Charles Guevara scored on a deflection Sunday to break a scoreless tie and give top-ranked Duke a 2-0 victory over George Mason in the NCAA Division I soccer quarterfinals.

The Blue Devils, who raised their record to 21-0-2, will meet defending champion Connecticut next weekend at a site to be determined. The Huskies defeated Long Island 1-0 on penalty kicks Sunday to advance to the semifinals.

Guevara's score came after Tom Kain's unsuccessful try, but Kain atoned for the miss when he added an insurance goal at the 27:13 mark on a header off a corner kick from Sean McCoy.

"We weren't doing the things we needed to do to win," said Duke Coach Tom Rennie of the scoreless first half. "We were not playing intelligently and not making the proper runs on re-starts."

George Mason, ranked sixth in Division I soccer, finished at 19-2-0.

'Pack, Ga. Tech Open Tonight

By The Associated Press
Duke University tries for its second basketball victory tonight against Appalachian State, while North Carolina State and Georgia Tech open their 1982-83 seasons in Atlantic Coast Conference action.

The Wolfpack opens with Western Carolina, while the Yellow Jackets are at home to Wofford.

The Blue Devils rallied for a 70-65 victory over East Carolina Saturday night with help from freshmen Johnny Dawkins and Mike Alarie, who scored 16 and 15 points, respectively. Coach Mike Krzyzewski also gave credit to another freshman, David Henderson, who came off the bench to score 11 points and grab 7 rebounds.

Tonight's game gives Duke a chance to avenge a defeat suffered at the hands of the Mountaineers last season.

Coach Jim Valvano has the key ingredients returning from last season's NCAA tournament team, but he's warning fans not to expect a blowout of the Catamounts.

In this weekend's action, No. 3 North Carolina fell to Missouri 64-60 as Greg Cavener hit five free throws in the closing minutes to send the Tar Heels to their second straight defeat. Penn State surprised Maryland 97-79, dropping a 76-66 decision to ruining the Terrapin season opener.

Clemson split its first two games in the Great Alaska Shootout, beating Texas A&M 82-79 in overtime, but losing a 72-63 decision to Vanderbilt in the quarterfinals. In Sunday's third-place game, the Tigers dropped a 76-66 decision to Washington.

Not Since 1919 Have Heels Lost First Two Games

By The Associated Press

In 1919, the University of North Carolina's basketball team opened with two straight losses to the Durham YMCA, 40-22 and 25-21. Nothing like that had happened since — until Saturday.

It's not even December and the Tar Heels, coming off their first, long-awaited NCAA basketball championship under Coach Dean Smith, have lost as many games as they did all last year. Then, they were 32-2. Now they are 0-2.

The Tar Heels, rated third nationally in the Associated Press preseason poll, lost 64-60 Saturday to Missouri in St. Louis. A week ago St. John's beat them 78-74 in overtime in the Hall of Fame Game at Springfield, Mass.

Not exactly the Durham YMCA — Missouri is ranked 15th nationally, St. John's is 19th. But hardly what North Carolina fans expect, particularly against opponents from outside the Atlantic Coast Conference — before the two losses, the Tar Heels were 201-32 against non-conference opponents over the past 15 years.

Part of the problem appears to be blending Sam Perkins, Michael Jordan and Matt Doherty — the three returning starters — with a group of talented, but inexperienced freshmen who must compensate for the loss of James Worthy and Jimmy Black. Part of it appears to Perkins' strained knee and Jordan's broken left wrist that Smith says put the team a week or two behind schedule.

A more subtle reason is the Tar Heels' success working against them.

As defending national champion, they were naturals for both NBC and CBS' season opening college basketball telecasts — not against patsies, but against nationally-ranked teams. Both St. John's and Missouri, of course, were geared for nothing less than knocking off the defending national champion on national television before Dick and Al and Billy and assorted millions.

That's Smith's view. Until last year, he was castigated for never winning the big one; this year, he's having trouble with the small ones.

"I'm not discouraged, but I'm disappointed," he said after Saturday's game. "We played good basketball at times but our judgment is not what I would like it to be. But that will come in time. Before the season, I knew it would be one of our toughest games. We were playing a fired-up Missouri team."

Even the Tar Heels' strong points have been working against them. In past years, a team a point or two behind in the late going would be frustrated by cool North Carolinians sinking late-game foul shots. This year, foul shooting is killing them.

In the St. John's game, they held a four-to-six point lead in the last few minutes of regulation, but continually missed the first end of one-and-one foul opportunities, allowing the New York team to get the ball back and eventually tie it. North Carolina finished the game 14 of 31 at the foul line, while St. John's was 16 for 18.

Against Missouri, the Tar Heels shot better from the line — 14 of 19. But in the final minutes, they made the mistake of fouling Greg Cavener, a Missouri forward, on the basis of his 41.8 percent percentage from the line last year. Cavener, who spent a good part of the off-season practicing his foul shooting, made five of six in the last (Please turn to page 10)

Saturday night, East Carolina's Pirates came as close to beating an Atlantic Coast Conference basketball team as they've ever come. A lot of observers along press row felt that the Pirates should have won the game.

There was no question that East Carolina outplayed the Blue Devils, touted as one of the big teams of the future. Duke had an outstanding recruiting year, and are miles deep in talent.

That factor was one of the most important ones in the eventual 70-65 victory by the Blue Devils. When Duke got into foul trouble, it simply sent in another player just as good as the one who left the court. East Carolina could not repeat this.

When ECU got into foul trouble, the Pirates had to rely on a slower paced game, trying to keep the ball away from the Blue Devils. It took them out of their offense, and their production slowed down.

"We got about any shot we wanted before we got into foul trouble," Coach Charlie Harrison said — and it was true. Prior to all three of the front court starters getting three fouls in the first half, the Pirates were continuing to ease away from the Blue Devils, leading by as much as 14 points at one time.

But when the fouls began to mount up, the Pirates had to slow the pace, and it hurt them in more ways than one.

Even so, had the Pirates had a good percentage of their free throws, they still could have pulled it out. ECU made just nine of 15, missing several times on the front end of one-and-ones. Duke canned 20 of 30 shots at the line.

Three of those foul shots came on what most felt were — at best — cheap shots by referee Jim Burch.

At the 13:48 mark of the second half, ECU held a 49-45 lead and the ball. There had been an out-of-bounds play directly in front of us on the sidelines. Referee Lou Moser was preparing to hand the ball to Charles Green when ECU's Johnny Edwards and Duke's Dan Meagher jockeyed for position. Meagher went down.

He was on the floor for about a two-count, then got to his feet. Moser went two steps onto the court to talk to both players, asking them to take it easy. Edwards replied to Moser, who then stepped back out of bounds and again prepared to hand the ball to Green. At that point, Burch, who had been stationed on the opposite side of the court, charged over, and said Edwards had intentionally fouled Meagher. At least ten seconds had gone by since the incident began.

Meager made both of his free throws as the Pirates lost possession.

Then, less than three minutes later, Green was whistled by Burch for his fourth personal. The frustrated Green, who had grabbed off the ball on a rebound as he fouled, held the ball in one hand and slapped his other hand down on the ball. Burch then whistled a technical on Green also.

"Charlie didn't say a word to (Burch)," Harrison said afterwards. "And he didn't do anything that several Duke players didn't do when they were frustrated."

Duke, not in the bonus situation at that point, did make the technical free throw, however, but missed out on the basket following the out-of-bounds play.

We are not arguing that the fouls did or did not take place. But Burch's tardiness in making the call after Moser, right on top of it, felt it was a no-call, was uncalled for. And the technical was called a cheap shot by most of the press.

At any rate, the two called resulted in three points for Duke, plus a possible two taken away from ECU when they lost possession on the initial out-of-bounds play. Five points — that was the game.

Nevertheless, we applaud the play of the Pirates. They gave Duke an outstanding game.

And if the play by the Pirates was a taste of what is to come from them, then fans should come on out Wednesday night and find out for themselves if a new day has, indeed, dawned at ECU.

Eskimos Win 5th Straight Grey Cup

TORONTO (AP) — Warren Moon has a way of putting things into perspective.

"Their disadvantage was who they were playing against, not the rain," the Edmonton quarterback said after leading the Eskimos to a 32-16 victory over the Toronto Argonauts in the Canadian Football League's championship game, the Grey Cup.

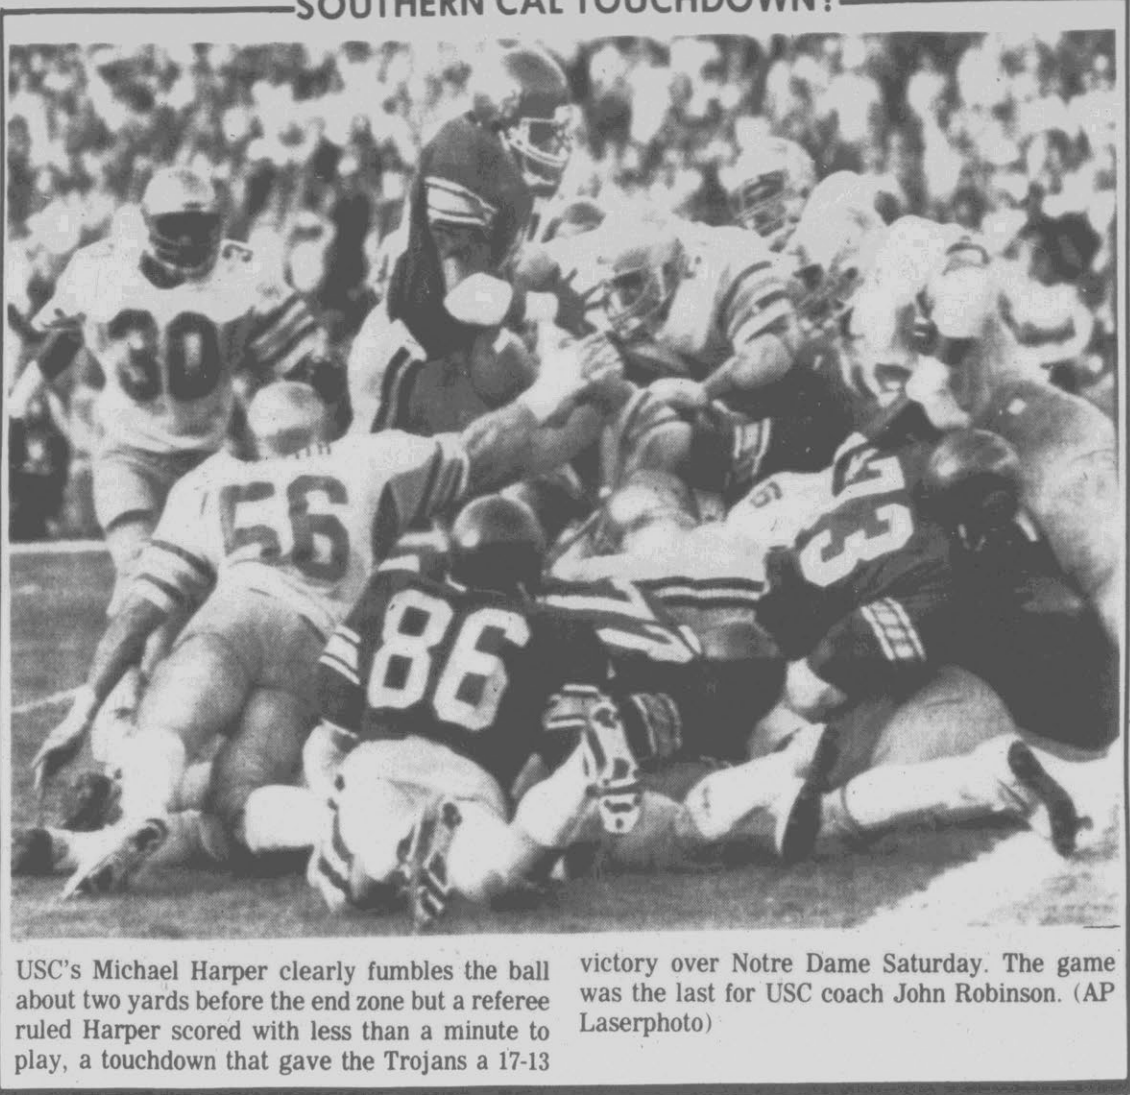

Moon, who was named the most valuable player when he led the University of Washington to an upset victory in the 1978 Rose Bowl, garnered the same honor Sunday when he riddled the Toronto defense by connecting on 21 of 33 passes for 319 yards and two touchdowns. He also was the game's top runner, gaining 91 yards in nine carries.

"There's no doubt that Warren Moon is the best quarterback in the Canadian Football League," said Edmonton Coach Campbell. "In my book, Warren Moon has so many talents.

"He scrambles as well as (Toronto quarterback Condredge) Holloway, passes as well as (Winnipeg quarterback) Dieter Brock and has almost as much wisdom and feel for the game as (former Edmonton star Tom) Wilkinson."

Holloway captured the Schenley Award last week as the CFL's most valuable player, while Brock was selected over Moon as the all-Western Division quarterback despite Moon becoming the first passer in pro football history to gain 5,000 yards through the air in a single season.

The victory was Edmonton's

USC's Michael Harper clearly fumbles the ball about two yards before the end zone but a referee ruled Harper scored with less than a minute to play, a touchdown that gave the Trojans a 17-13 record-setting fifth consecutive Grey Cup title, while it also marked the end of an era. It was the last Eskimo game for Campbell, who will become coach of the Los Angeles team in the new United States Football League next spring.

"It's the last chapter in a long book," said wide receiver Brian Kelly. "Next year we'll start a new book with a new coach."

"It's just going to be very difficult seeing Coach Campbell go," Moon said.

SOUTHERN CAL TOUCHDOWN?

"I wish I wasn't going anywhere right at this moment, but I know it's best," Campbell said. "I'll never know how far we could have gone. Could we win next year? Could we win the year after that?"

In his first year at Edmonton, Campbell's Eskimos lost in the 1977 Grey Cup. Since then, they have considered the Grey Cup their own private property.

Against the Argos on Sunday, they showed why. Dave Cutler got Edmonton out front with a 38-yard field goal on their first possession. Toronto came right back as Holloway teamed up with Emanuel Tolbert on an 84-yard touchdown pass play.

It was the first time Tolbert, the former Southern Methodist star, had touched the ball in an Argo uniform. He had been on the injured list ever since Toronto had picked him up on waivers earlier this year.

But Moon wasted no time in retaliating, marching the Eskimos 82 yards in eight plays, the final 16 yards coming on a pass to Kelly on the first play of the second period.

Holloway guided Toronto downfield again, finding Alabama State's Terry Greer in the end zone on a 10-yard pass almost six minutes later. It put Toronto in front 14-10.

With Moon completing 11 of 12 passes — the 12th was intercepted in the end zone — for 188 yards, Edmonton moved to a 20-14 halftime lead on a 41-yard TD pass play to Kelly and Cutler's 29-yard field goal.

fumbles were recovered by Kansas City, the second with four minutes to play at the Los Angeles 26. The Chiefs, however, were unable to move the ball.

Bills 20, Colts 0

Roosevelt Leaks, rushing for a career-high 22 times, scored on a pair of short runs, and Buffalo, 3-1, handed Baltimore its second straight shutout loss.

Buffalo's other points came on Efen Herrera field goals of 47 and 41 yards. The Colts, meanwhile, were totally ineffective on offense, unable to move the ball into Buffalo territory even once during the game.

Vikings 35, Bears 7

Kramer passed for 342 yards and his five touchdown strikes helped the Vikings even their record at 2-2 as Chicago slipped to 1-3.

Kramer completed 26 of 35 passes, hitting wide receiver Sammy White for three touchdowns. White caught 10 passes for 177 yards, and both his three TDs and total yardage were career highs.

"They're tough against the run, but we prepared hard for that blitz all week," Kramer said of the Bear defense. "Plus, anytime you put a defensive back on our receivers one-on-one, you're in trouble, especially Sammy. He's shifty."

Patriots 29, Oilers 21

New England Quarterback Steve Grogan, making his first start in a year, threw three touchdown passes as the Patriots and Oilers evened their records at 2-2.

Two of Grogan's scoring passes went to Stanley Morgan in the first quarter, covering 63 and 24 yards.

The Patriot defense, meanwhile, sacked Houston's Archie Manning six times.

Cardinals 23, Falcons 20

Ottis Anderson ran for 122 yards and one touchdown, and quarterback Neil Lomax scored the clinching touchdown in the fourth quarter on a 1-yard run.

Atlanta's Mick Luckhurst missed a 42-yard field goal attempt with one second left that could have sent the game into three minutes.

Smith was fulsome in his praise of Cavener along with center Steve Stipanovich and guard Jon Sundvold, the two Tiger mainstays. But he also suggested that North Carolina not be written off on the basis of two games.

"It's early, thank heavens," he said. "We're still looking for chemistry. We're experimenting a lot, trying to find the combination to go with."

Miami Faces Bucs Tonight

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Miami Coach Don Shula calls tonight's National Football League game between the unbeaten Dolphins and the winless Tampa Bay Buccaneers "a great showcase for the state of Florida."

The nationally televised 9 p.m. EST matchup in Tampa Stadium also will be a desperation game for the 0-3 Buccaneers, and one which Bucs Coach John McKay promises will be "fiercely fought."

For the Dolphins, it's a chance to stretch an untarnished record.

Although it's the first regular-season matchup since the Bucs 0-14 fledgling start in 1976, it's the sixth meeting of the intrastate rivals. Miami won that game six years ago 23-20.

Although Tampa Bay has never beaten Miami, Miami has not won by more than a touchdown in any of the pre-season exhibition games.

With just six games left in the shortened season, Tampa needs a victory to keep alive any hope of post-season play.

Asked if he found it strange to be in a desperation situation after only three games, McKay said:

"Well, I've never gone through this before and I think every coach does. The coaches who are the happiest are the guys who were 2-0 when they started. Now the ones who are 3-0 are hilarious."

Assert Reading Decline Is Not Because Of TV

By LEE MITGANG
AP Education Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — A growing body of research contends television has been unfairly blamed for declining reading scores among American children. Armed with those studies, the television industry is now going on the offensive.

The Television Information Office, an industry-financed publicity arm, this month issued a six-page research paper that argues that only "seekers of a quick remedy for scholastic shortcomings ... claim television is the cause of the problem."

Even some educators who counsel against too much television-watching say hard evidence failed to show what impact TV has on classroom performance, or whether the impact was necessarily bad.

Herbert J. Walberg, a research professor of education at the University of Illinois, likened TV to alcohol. Excessive TV viewing, such as 20 or 30 hours per week, "has a very deleterious effect" on a youngster, he said.

But an hour or so a night of good television, sipped and savored, is actually better than no TV at all, according to Walberg's "Impact of Leisure Time Television on School Learning: A Research Synthesis."

TV viewed in such moderation, Walberg said, most often occurs when parents are living up to their responsibility of monitoring programs.

Reading expert Rudolf Flesch's recent book, "Why Johnny Still Can't Read," stated even more bluntly that "too much TV" is "such a handy scapegoat the educators never fail to mention it." The real problem, insisted Flesch, was that most schools were inept at teaching reading.

The Television Information Office's paper, "Television and Education: Assessing Academic Achievement," argues that:

—A child's reading scores have more to do with "socioeconomic factors." Children of professional parents, for instance, tend to read better than those of unskilled workers.

—Heavy television viewing doesn't cause reading problems but rather is the product of those problems. "Children having difficulty with classroom study and with homework will turn to television ... precisely because of their reading difficulties."

The report concludes that "intuitive but pervasive negative attitudes" among educators about what television is doing to schoolchildren are starting to die out. "The war

Hitler Youth Movement Story On TV

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The syndicated television production "Blood and Honor" is a children's story unlike any you've ever seen. It tells of the Hitler Youth Movement, which perverted children, the world's best hope, into its worst evil.

The two-part, five-hour broadcast begins tonight and concludes next Monday, but only in 30 markets. Potentially, more than 50 percent of the nation's viewers will watch a very important work that network TV turned down.

When the networks do a miniseries, they demand name stars and extravagant spectacles. The recent "The Blue and the Gray" by CBS, for example, tried to get by on a marquee full of stars and grand-scale war scenes, while skimping on the credibility and dramatic force of its story.

What "Blood and Honor" lacks in Hollywood glamour, it more than makes up in substance and emotional impact. It deals in causes, rather than splashy special effects. And it takes the human approach, chronicling how three families coped and fared in Nazi Germany from 1933 to 1939.

The Keller family struggles with the German recession. Ernst and his wife are anti-Nazi. He thinks Hitler is a passing fancy. "We're a civilized, democratic country," he says.

Their son, Hartmut, is seduced by the uniforms and hardware of the Hitler Youth. Morally malleable, influenced by peer pressure and the need to feel important, Hartmut joins Hitler's war machine.

Actor Jeffrey Frank, a Jew whose parents fled Nazi Germany, captures the spooky amorality of Hartmut and the Hitler youth. His eyes, so vacant and distant, speak volumes about the ethically bankrupt regime, in which family, friends and life itself were secondary to blind allegiance to the Fuhrer.

At one point, Hartmut exposes the anti-Nazi leanings of his father's best friend, who is then sent to prison. Ernst smacks his son across the face several times, but doesn't reach him. "German boys don't cry," Hartmut says.

The second family portrait is of the Monkmanns, major cogs in the local Nazi movement. They have money, influence and power. On the other end of the scale are the Kuhns, a Jewish family and owners of the local tailor shop.

The way Germans individually faced Hitler's crimes is depicted in the Kellers' attitudes toward the Nazis. Before the Nazis, Hartmut and Franz Kuhn were friends, and Ernst gave Franz piano lessons.

Quickly, Hartmut, influenced by racist teachings in school, drops Franz and even steals his bread to prove his manhood. "The weak go to the wall. The strong survive," Hartmut says. Obviously, good parents are no deterrent to Hitler's propaganda machine.

Ernst, played with intense conviction by Rolf Becker, continues the piano lessons until the Nazi pressure gets too strong, then he dons a brown shirt. "It's a question of survival," he says. "We're all doing our best." His wife agrees: "We'll never change inside." Meanwhile, their daughter, Renate, resists the Nazis. In a moving scene, she goes to the Kuhns' home to continue the piano lessons for Franz. Throughout, Renate's narration serves as a time bridge and the film's social conscience.

Actual film footage of the Nazis is interspersed with the TV movie, providing an historical perspective while emphasizing to today's youth that, although this is a fictionalized story, it did happen.

"Blood and Honor," filmed on location in West Germany, was a co-production of two German companies and America's Daniel Wilson Productions, which did the bewitching "Sophisticated Gents" last season.

The film, using bilingual actors, was shot first in English, and then in German. It's a stunning achievement in any language.

For Her Book

BOSTON (AP) — Princess Cheyenne says she's giving up her striptease act, but not because she feels exploited.

"I am retiring to my book writing," said 23-year-old Lucy Johnson, known as "Princess Cheyenne" in her act at the Naked i Caberet in Boston's Combat Zone.

In an interview published Sunday in the Boston Herald American, she said her first project is a memoir to be titled "Bare."

Asked if she ever felt exploited as a stripper, Ms. Johnson said: "Everyone was in control of what they were doing, and if you're in control of what you're doing and you're making a choice, then you're not exploited."

Ms. Johnson, who was a guest on television talk shows, says she earned nearly $30,000 a year for five years as a stripper after answering a newspaper want ad for exotic dancers.

At first, she said, her parents wouldn't speak to her, but "since then, I've reconciled with my father. He even came to see the club. Not while I was working. My mother still really hates it and won't talk to me about it."

Comic Training Eyed By Miltie

NEW YORK (AP) — Comedian Milton Berle says there aren't as many good comics around as there used to be because there's nowhere for them to get the training.

"You need to flop for 10 years in different towns to develop into a comedian," Berle, 74, said in an interview published in the Dec. 6 issue of People magazine.

But the veteran comic, who hit Broadway at age 12, says Robin Williams is "a genius."

"And I think Richard Pryor, for his bag, is a genius too. And I like Dan Aykroyd and Bill Murray and Gilda Radner," he added, saying they needed a "chance to develop."

Loss Of Wife Is Still Felt

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Although actress Natalie Wood died a year ago today, her drowning is still "very traumatic" to her husband, Robert Wagner, the actor's lawyer says.

Wagner is selling the rambling Beverly Hills house the couple shared for nine years and now has a new house on Sunset Boulevard, where Miss Wood's two daughters and Wagner's own 18-year-old daughter from a previous marriage will live. They will move in early in 1983.

The actor's lawyer, Paul Ziffren, said the new house is "a perfect home for him and the children. It's much larger for them as they're growing up."

Miss Wood drowned Nov. 29 off California's Catalina Island, and her death stunned Hollywood. Her film legacy — which includes "Splendor in the Grass," "Love with a Proper Stranger" and "Rebel Without a Cause" — will grow late next year with the scheduled release of "Brainstorm," which she was filming at the time of her death.

Ziffren said her death "is still very traumatic" for Wagner, who declined to comment on his feelings through his secretary, Elizabeth Applegate.

From time to time Wagner goes to Westwood Memorial Park to visit Miss Wood's grave, which he and their daughters have dotted with gardenias, Miss Wood's favorite flower.

Costumer Adds Life To Roles

By LILLIAN SWANSON
Associated Press Writer
PITTSBURGH (AP) — He was a gimpy loner who lived on society's fringe, but in the mainstream of sleaze.

Ratso Rizzo was his name. It was actor Dustin Hoffman who gave Rizzo life in the film, "Midnight Cowboy."

But he didn't "look the part" until costume designer Ann Roth came along.

"Movie star Marcello Mastroianni was all over the marquee at that time," Ms. Roth said. "I pretended Ratso Rizzo fantasized about that. He wore a dinner jacket. His pants didn't match. He has on pointed shoes."

She had Hoffman try on the costume in the fitting room. "Suddenly, when he's standing in front of the mirror, you realize you want his teeth to look like Roquefort cheese."

Ms. Roth has created the costumes for more than 90 Broadway productions, including such hits as "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas," "The Odd Couple," "6 Rooms Riv Vu" and "Play It Again Sam."

From her sketchboard also have come costume designs for 25 films, such as "The World According to Garp," "Midnight Cowboy," "The Owl and the Pussycat" and "Kluge."

"I'm very good at it," she says. "I like doing it."

Her latest creative challenge is dressing Meryl Streep for the title role in the Mike Nichols' movie, "Silkwood."

"She's the ultimate actress," Ms. Roth says of the silky haired blonde. "Her instincts are perfect. She insists that it be right."

Saturday's Cryptoquip — MONEY MATTERS MAY KEEP UMPIRES OUT ON STRIKE.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: E equals R.

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

A People Without a Country

In 1977, the United Nations declared November 29 the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People. Most Palestinians today are refugees who fled their homes in what is now Israel during the Arab-Israeli wars of 1948 and 1967. However almost two million Palestinians still live in Israeli "occupied lands." While most people think of Palestinians as living in Mideast refugee camps, about 250,000 live in the U.S. and Europe. While some Palestinians are poor, others have made careers for themselves as doctors, lawyers, and teachers. But regardless of their economic status, most Palestinians would like to have their own homeland in the nation that was once called Palestine.

DO YOU KNOW — Which Arab nation has a population that is more than 50% Palestinian?

Crewmen Face Drug Hearing

PORTSMOUTH (AP) — A court hearing was scheduled today for the 12 crewmen of a 170-foot freighter that the Coast Guard said was seized off the North Carolina coast after marijuana residue was found aboard.

The crewmembers were charged with violating U.S. drug importation laws, said Petty Officer 3rd Class Barbara Smith, a spokeswoman for the 5th District Coast Guard headquarters here.

She said the Rodsand was boarded Thanksgiving Day by a party from the cutter Chilula, stationed at Morehead City, N.C.

The Rodsand docked here Sunday after being escorted into port by the Chilula.

Apartment Fire

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Fire officials said a handicapped man died in an apartment fire Saturday which apparently started on the living room sofa.

Police identified the victim as Albert Parks, 53. The cause of the fire is still under investigation, but officers suspect the man fell asleep while smoking a cigarette, said Durham Public Safety Sgt. Steve Conant.

Panel Critical Of Kids In Jail

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — More than 1,600 children under age 16 placed in North Carolina's adult jails each year do not belong there, a state panel says.

The governor's Advocacy Council on Children and Youth released its report, entitled "No Place for a Child: Children in North Carolina Jails," late last week. It was based on a study that began a year ago.

"We're hoping that we can draw the attention of the general public and the proper authorities that there are children being placed in jails with adults," said Sen. Helen Marvin, D-Gaston, a council representative.

The report says judges are supposed to look for juvenile detention centers before placing youths awaiting trials in adult jails, but that is not always the case. And it says four North Carolina youths have committed suicide in adult jails in the past seven years.

A 13-year-old from the Buncombe County detention center was driven to Brevard and put in an adult jail overnight when his Nov. 2 hearing was delayed. The youth, who was awaiting a court hearing in Hendersonville, tried to commit suicide.

"There was another place for the child to be sent, but the child was placed in an adult jail," Ms. Marvin said. "Not only is it a bad environment, but it makes it difficult to hope that we can ever save that child from a bad life."

The council has asked the administrative office of the court to look into the case, she said.

The report recommends that state laws determining when children should be held in secure detention be made more objective and specific. It says no additional detention centers should be built, because availability encourages courts to use them whether or not the juveniles actually require secure detention.

The state should use "home detention" or send nondangerous youths to facilities other than adult jails. A new state law prohibiting incarceration of children in adult jails should be upheld, the report advises.

Dental Hygienists Say Skills Misused

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Dental hygienists could help provide much-needed preventive treatment for gum disease in North Carolina, according to a former president of the state Dental Hygienists Association.

Dental hygienists are currently not allowed to perform gingival curettage, a tissue removal procedure, said Jane Kopczynski of Chapel Hill. Dentists are allowed to do it, although many avoid it, she said.

"If hygienists are not permitted to perform this valuable service, it will be reasonable to conclude that the epidemic of periodontal (gum) disease can be expected to continue unabated in this state," she said.

But some dentists in the state say the procedure might not be as valuable as Ms. Kopczynski thinks.

"The American Dental Association and the American Academy of Periodontology agree that gingival curettage is definitely a surgical procedure," said Dr. Stephen Buck, a Charlotte dentist. "Hygienists are not trained to do surgery. As a separate procedure, it has somewhat limited application."

Buck has testified on the subject before a state Senate committee and the North Carolina State Board of Dental Examiners. He said cleaning tartar from teeth and teaching patients personal oral hygiene are the "critical factors" in warding off gum disease.

Dr. William Current, president of the North Carolina Dental Society, said he seldom performed the procedure and said Ms. Kopczynski's contention that many dentists avoid it is true.

"According to some of the accepted authorities, there is no consensus as to the long-term value of gingival curettage," said Current.

Dentists performing gingival curettage remove infected outer cell layers from the gums immediately surrounding the teeth. Full-blown curettage requires anesthesia, dentists say.

Hygienists may accidentally perform some curettage while cleaning teeth below the gum line and that is not illegal, said Christine Lockwood, secretary of the state dental examiners board.

Ms. Kopczynski said some curettage is non-surgical and similar to root planing, which involves scraping the tooth surface below the gum line.

"When dentistry says that gingival curettage is always surgery, I'm afraid the hygienist is going to be too cautious when she cleans out the (gum line) pocket," she said.

Not all members of the hygienists association share Ms. Kopczynski's opinions about gingival curettage, said current president Peggy Sumrell.

Season Heralded By Zany Doo-Dah Parade

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — The Sound of Silence Marching Band, the traditional Synchronized Briefcase Drillteam and a bevy of baton droppers proudly strutted their stuff in the Doo Dah Parade, an event with no theme, no judging, no prizes and no order.

Sunday's parade, a spoof on Pasadena's annual Jan. 1 Rose Bowl parade, sprouted from the blurry minds of a small group of beer drinkers in 1978, when the Rose Parade was bumped to Jan. 2 because New Year's fell on a Sunday.

It's been a Southern California favorite ever since, scheduled during the holiday season whenever its organizers manage to arrange a permit.

This year's march drew about 100 entries and 40,000 spectators.

The lead-off banner proclaimed, "The Doo Dah Parade. World Rights Reserved. Any resemblance to other parades living or dead is purely coincidental!"

But there was no mistaking the march for a Chamber of Commerce event. It included no flower-trimmed floats, no precision equestrian units, no skimpily-clad majorettes — only variations on all those themes.

One popular entry — rolled by hand because motorized floats were prohibited for the first time this year — was the Thanksgiving Leftovers float, a gigantic, partially eaten turkey of papier-mache and chicken wire.

The briefcase drillteam provided some precision as its 30 business-suited members picked up, put down and tapped a staccato beat on their briefcases.

Drill sergeant James Kemp, a Bank of California vice president, said training for the event took about "20 minutes and two beers each."

A team of baton droppers masqueraded as majorettes. The power lawn mower marchers shoved their machines with glee. The Marching Leech Kazoo Band played "Zippity Doo Dah" for atmosphere.

The Sound of Silence Marching Band contributed no music at all as members manipulated floppy cloth instruments.

Zeke the Sheik from Mozambique came in a white toga with a cactus on his head. He said he was running for governor, senator, president or whatever.

And as a nod to the nation's 10.4 percent jobless rate, a host of "unemployed" workers trailed behind a hand-pulled unemployment office bearing a "Closed" sign in English and Spanish.

KEEPING IT CLEAN — Members of the Keep It Clean group march in portable showers during the Doo-Dah Parade in Pasadena. The parade began six years ago as a spoof on the Rose Parade, and this year featured nearly 100 groups and over 40,000 spectators. (AP Laserphoto)

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♦K109 ♥Q8763 ♦Q962 ♦6

The bidding has proceeded:

North East South

1 ♦ 1 NT ?

What action do you take?

A.—It's a close decision. You must speak now, because otherwise you could be frozen out of the auction. The choice is between a double and a raise to two spades. We prefer the latter. If you double and then raise partner's spades if the opponents run to clubs, partner might play you for a somewhat better hand.

Q.2—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:

♦7 ♥Q983 ♦KJ10642 ♦75

The bidding has proceeded:

North East South West

1 ♦ Pass 1 NT Pass

3 ♦ Pass ?

What action do you take?

A.—If you know that partner's jump to three spades is a limit bid and not forcing, your decision is simple. You have a rock-bottom minimum for your initial response, and we have seen better support for partner's suit. Pass. If you felt it incumbent upon you to introduce your diamond suit, may we suggest a good book on basic bidding?

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♦8643 ♥QJ108 ♦A7 ♦AQ6

What is your opening bid?

A.—Technically speaking, your heart suit is biddable. However, if you open one heart and partner responds two diamonds, you will have an unpleasant rebid to make. The hand handles much more easily if you open with a prepared bid of one club. You can raise either major if partner shows one bid one heart over one diamond and pass one no trump. And if partner raises clubs, you are in your best spot, because partner will almost surely have five clubs for that action.

Q.4—As South vulnerable, you hold:

♦AJ7 ♥952 ♦KJ4 ♦J1097

The bidding has proceeded:

North East South West

1 ♥ Pass 1 NT Pass

2 ♥ Pass ?

What action do you take?

A.—You have a maximum one no trump response and three-card support for partner's suit. In addition, partner is marked with a six-card suit for his rebid over your discouraging response. Therefore, we would be inclined to scrape up another bid, and a raise to three hearts is the standout choice.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♦KQ9874 ♥Q106 ♦84 ♦76

The bidding has proceeded:

North East South West

1 ♥ Pass 1 ♦ Pass

1 NT Pass ?

What action do you take?

A.—With your unbalanced hand, you shouldn't linger in one no trump. The decision is simply whether to raise to two hearts or to rebid your spades. Since your hand might turn out to be useless to partner in hearts if the enemy draws trumps, we suggest you rebid your spades. Partner's high cards will be more useful to you with spades as trumps than your spades will be to him if hearts is the trump suit.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♦Q109864 ♥KJ95 ♦87 ♦6

The bidding has proceeded:

North East South West

1 ♦ Dble 4 ♦ 5 ♥

5 ♦ 5 NT Pass 6 ♦

Pass Pass ?

What action do you take?

A.—East has shown a strong minor two-suiter and your holding indicates that he is probably void in spades. Partner has suggested that he does not have two sure tricks against a club slam—he did not double six clubs—and while your king of hearts might be a trick, we would not bank on it. The prudent course is to sacrifice at six spades. It should not prove expensive.
