Army Will Get A New Helmet After 40 Years

WASHINGTON (AP) — After 40 years and three wars, the Army is trading in its metal helmet for a new, stronger, fiberglass model that looks a little like the headgear worn by the Germans during World War II.

The Army claims its fighting men will be better protected, but old soldiers are mourning the passing of the old steel pot.

The new headgear is made of a resin and synthetic fiber material called Kevlar. It gives one-third more protection than the metal version and will be better in battle because it covers the soldier's neck and temple area, say Army specialists who spent years of research and design experimentation developing it.

But even if the new helmet gives better protection against flying objects, will it be as versatile as the well-used metal veteran?

Master Sgt. Mike Mason is among those soldiers wondering.

"The uses of the steel pot as a wash basin, bucket for dousing fires or bailing out flooded fighting positions are well known," Mason wrote in an article entitled "So Long, Ol' Pot" in the Army's "Soldier" magazine.

"So are its uses as a seat, pillow and nutcracker. It also makes a fair tent-peg pounder and chock for a brakeless truck or trailer.

"And let's not forget the times many of us had to dig in with it...."

"The new Kevlar helmet could serve some of these purposes. But with the built-in webbing it doesn't make a real good washbasin or bucket."

And, "the new helmet is a little too thick to make a good shovel," Mason notes.

Perhaps reluctant to see old helmet go, the Army didn't rush into adopting its replacement. The fiberglass helmet was field tested in 1976 and 1977 and only now is the Army finishing its first purchase of 30,000 for issue.

So far, the new helmet has been given mainly to airborne troops, officials said.

Noise Ordinance Workshop City Council Visits Nightclub

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

It is unlikely that many city councils have gathered as a group to visit a nightclub. The Greenville City Council has.

Only one stop on the local nightclub circuit was made Monday by the members of the city governing board but they got their ears full and accomplished what they had set out to do.

The visit to the Attic on East Fourth Street was really not the idea of the council but was arranged for them as part of a demonstration relative to the board's consideration of a proposed redraft of the local noise ordinance.

The council members were joined at the Attic, which had not opened for business, by other city officials, representatives from East Carolina University, and several residents of the Tar River Neighborhood Association.

Attic employees demonstrated what they termed their maximum noise level, utilizing recorded music, and decibel measurements were taken by Dr. Garrett Hume, a faculty member in the speech and hearing department at ECU.

Hume said the level measured 110 decibels inside the facility and a top reading of 75 decibels was recorded outside the building on the sidewalk, the Attic's property line.

The ordinance draft proposes that the sound level permitted in the commercial zone, as measured from the property line, would be 65 decibels from 7 a.m. until 10 p.m., and 60 decibels after 10 p.m. The draft also proposes that sound levels in excess of the established limits would be permitted (maximum of 85 decibels) on certain evenings of the week if permits are secured.

Prior to making the short trip by city bus to the Attic, the council members and others attending the ordinance workshop heard a sound level demonstration in the city hall parking lot. Decibel readings were taken from the engine noise of motorcycles with muffled and unmuffled exhausts and also from a police patrol vehicle siren. The siren measured roughly 90 decibels from about 25 feet away and 80 decibels from across the parking lot. The muffled motorcycle exhaust registered a high of 70 decibels with the engine revved and the unmuffled vehicle was measured at 80 decibels.

Hume explained to the workshop gathering that the decibel scale is relative and loudness is an individual's perception of sound. He said that what is annoying to one person might be music to another.

The spokesman said in order to "tell how loud loud is," the level of intensity of a sound is measured. Decibel measuring devices are expensive, he said, and range upward from approximately $400 for a good instrument.

Mac McCarley, assistant city attorney who has been working on the proposed redraft, said that decibel levels are the heart of the noise ordinance. He said the fourth draft of the new regulation has been prepared.

Some of the complaints from citizens relative to noise have generally been directed at fraternities. McCarley said that complaints normally do not involve downtown night spots since no one resides in that area.

McCarley and ECU student intern Tom Marzilli have already conducted public meetings on the proposed regulation. The council will hold a workshop in December to consider comments made by citizens regarding the ordinance and another draft will be prepared based on that input. The board could consider official action in January, or possibly February.

A Gain For 'Indicators'

By ROBERT FURLOW
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A key barometer of the nation's future economic health rose a moderate 0.6 percent in October, the sixth gain in seven months, the government reported today.

The rise in the Commerce Department's Index of Leading Indicators was likely to be welcomed as a new sign the recession may be nearing an end after 16 months. The new report also revised September's gain from 0.5 percent to a much stronger 1.1 percent.

However, a separate index in the report — one designed to measure current economic activity rather than forecast future business — dropped 0.8 percent in October to hit its lowest level yet in the recession.

Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige said there is usually a lag of only three or four months between improvement in the leading indicators and a rise in actual business activity as measured by the separate Index of Coincident Indicators.

"I believe the prolonged lag this time, and the relatively slow rise in the leading indicators as well, was caused by the persistence of high interest rates into the summer," he said in a statement.

"With rates now down sharply, however, the housing recovery is under way," Baldrige said. "A sustained pickup in sales of new cars and other consumer durable goods can be expected to follow."

The recent increases in the leading indicators have been small by comparison with those near the end of previous recessions. For example, the index rose more than 2 percent for three months in a row at the end of the 1980 downturn.

This year's figures have tended to reinforce the forecasts of most economists that any recovery will be weak, at least at the start.

The index is designed to forecast changes in the national economy. It is made up of statistics from 10 different areas ranging from employment figures to stock prices to orders for future factory production.

In October, the new report said, five of the 10 components showed improvement, led by a continuing surge in stock prices.

Also pushing the index up in October: Initial claims for unemployment benefits slowed, building permits rose, the nation's money supply increased and business deliveries slowed — possibly indicating greater volume.

Four components did worse than in September. They included decreased new orders to factories for consumer goods, fewer contracts and orders for plants and equipment, lower prices for sensitive raw materials and a drop in total liquid assets.

The average workweek was unchanged from September.

The index had dipped 0.2 percent in August before rising again in September.

In October, the index rose to 131.9 percent of the level of 1967, a year used as a base for figuring subsequent gains and declines.

Collection of French Books And Records For Children At Library

Sheppard Memorial Library's children's room has a collection of books and records in French for children available here over the next several months.

These resources are on loan from the North Carolina Foreign Language Center, a component of the Cumberland County Public Library, which offers books, records and cassettes in more than 40 languages for libraries throughout North Carolina.

The French collection includes eight records and 50 books, many with familiar characters like Charlie Brown, Snoopy, Peter Pan and Father Noel (Santa Claus).

"We're excited about having this deposit collection on hand," children's librarian Hansy Jones said. "The library has borrowed books from the Foreign Language Center for individuals in the past. But a deposit collection can serve more people more quickly and effectively."

The children's room is located in the basement of Sheppard Library, 530 Evans Street. Also available at Sheppard is a System 80 learning machine which enables programmed self-instruction in reading, mathematics and beginning French. "Having this collection here is a great complement to the use of the System 80," Ms. Jones said. "The series owned by the library is generally designed for children in kindergarten through fifth grade. However, the program is available for any learner for whom the material is appropriate."

An initial appointment to use the System 80 should be made with the librarian. Afterwards sessions may be arranged at any time during regular library hours. Parents are encouraged to stay with their children during the learning sessions and monitor their progress.

Call Sheppard Library, 752-4177, for more information about the deposit collection and/or the System 80.

Braswell Bond Is Now Put Up

By TOM BAINES

Bond amounting to $100,000 has been put up by several individuals or couples for the release from custody of Pitt Sheriff's Deputy Billy Braswell, who is charged with the first degree murder of his wife.

According to records at the clerk's office here, the bond amounts range from $1,000 up to $11,700 and include six surety pledges of $10,000 each.

District Court Judge Horton Rountree set Braswell's bond at $100,000 on Nov. 12. In his bond order, Rountree said that, "Based upon the written examination reports filed by doctors found to be experts in the field of psychiatric medicine, the court finds that the defendant is not severely depressed or suicidal."

Rountree set the bond for Braswell's release, however, "subject ... to a psychiatric re-evaluation ... prior to his release from Pitt County Memorial Hospital, reporting that in their (the doctors) opinion the defendant is not severely depressed and shows no indication of any

Bomb Blast In 10 Downing St.

LONDON (AP) — A parcel exploded in flames today inside Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's 10 Downing St. residence, and Irish nationalists claimed responsibility for the blast, which scorched the face of an aide who opened the package.

Mrs. Thatcher, in her office on the floor above the explosion, was unhurt, officials said.

In Northern Ireland, a telephone caller told Belfast's Downtown Radio station that the Irish National Liberation Army was responsible for the attack. The caller said INLA would issue a full statement later.

INLA, a Marxist offshoot of the mostly Roman Catholic Irish Republican Army, is fighting to end British rule in the Protestant-dominated province.

INLA guerrillas murdered Airey Neave, top political colleague of Mrs. Thatcher, in March 1979.

Plan To Reduce Tobacco Quotas Is Expected

By The Associated Press:

North Carolina agricultural officials say a plan to cut flue-cured tobacco quotas by 10 percent in 1983 will cause a significant drop in tobacco growers' income.

U.S. Agriculture Secretary John R. Block met with several North Carolina tobacco leaders in Washington on Monday, and is expected to announce a major reduction in the leaf quota this week.

Block refused to disclose the exact quota for 1983, but several industry leaders have said they expect him to announce that the quota will be about 10 percent less than the 1982 quota base of 1.01 million pounds.

And state agricultural officials say such a move will have a tremendous impact.

"It (a quota reduction) is going to cut the grower's income," says John H. Cyrus, chief of tobacco affairs for the state Department of Agriculture. "It is going to cause the lease price of quotas to skyrocket."

With a 10 percent reduction, the value of tobacco Tar Heel farmers could market would drop by more than $100 million from 1982, said William E. Little, commodity director for the North Carolina Farm Bureau Federation.

Tobacco growers had hoped for a freeze of the 1983 quota at 1982 levels, but that would require Congressional action and tobacco-state congressmen have been reluctant to introduce such legislation without the broad backing of growers. Farmers have been divided on the issue.

Rep. Charles G. Rose III, D-N.C., chairman of the House Tobacco and Peanuts Subcommittee, released a letter that he wrote to Block on Monday urging him not to reduce the quota. Rose said the tobacco reform bill passed by Congress this summer would allow the agriculture secretary to reduce the annual increases in price-support levels by one-third, making tobacco more saleable in the future.

"Let's follow President Reagan's philosophy and stay the course for another year and give the new tobacco program a chance to work," Rose said in his letter.

Several leaders of the Tobacco Growers Association of North Carolina were in Washington Monday to lobby against a quota reduction. The delegation met separately with Block, Rose and U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee.

T.C. Blalock, executive vice president of the tobacco growers, said Block was sympathetic to altering the price-support index in an effort to make tobacco more competitive on world markets.

Dear Abby

Son's Tragic Death Opens New Eyes

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Recently my only son was beaten to death and the doctors asked me if they could take his corneas. I gave them permission, and I received the following letter:

"The Lions Eye Bank in Seattle wishes to extend deep appreciation to you for Edward Olsen's precious gift of sight."

"I hope it is a comfort to you at this difficult time knowing that because of your thoughtfulness, two people have been given the chance to have good vision, and the priceless gift of your loved one will continue to serve."

And enclosed with the letter was this:
"Dear Abby: As a teen-ager a few years ago, I underwent two corneal transplants — one in each eye. I want to address my feelings to my unknown donors:

"I never knew you, yet your generosity changed my life. You died, yet a part of you still lives.

"You gave of yourself. It was the last thing you gave, and you gave it to someone you didn't even know.

"My life is so different because of you. Every day I am reminded of the gift you gave me.

"I wonder about you often. Who were you? What were you like? What wonderful things did you see through these eyes?"

"Your generosity helped a stranger, and with the help of God you created a miracle — the miracle of sight. — Seeing Again"

Abby, I hope that the two people who received my son's "eyes" will read this letter and know that they were given by a loving mother who is proud to know that they are helping someone to see again.

MRS. MERLE OLSEN, KENNEWICK, WASH.

P.S. If you print this letter, please sign my name.

DEAR MRS. OLSEN: Thank you for writing. God bless you. And he will.

DEAR ABBY: I am a widow, 79 years of age, and this is the first time I've ever written to any newspaper person, but now I am at a crossroads.

For the last 50 years I have been sending money to support all kinds of charities — the Salvation Army, Boys Town and the Polio Foundation were old favorites. Then came organizations for the blind, heart, lung, epilepsy, multiple sclerosis, diabetes, cancer, muscular dystrophy, and diseases I can't even spell.

This morning I received a letter asking me to donate some money to buy dry milk for the starving children of Poland; then another one to save the whales! I don't know how so many people got my name and address. I am not a wealthy woman and I have to draw the line somewhere. But where?

HIT FROM ALL SIDES

DEAR HIT: All the causes you have mentioned are deserving, but in order to make intelligent choices, request financial statements from each organization that solicits funds.

Favor those that keep their administration costs at a minimum.

DEAR ABBY: How does one address Christmas cards to couples who are living together but are not married?

DOTTIE IN APPLE VALLEY

DEAR DOTTIE: "Miss (Ms.) Jane Abercrombie and Mr. John Fitch."

Losing Campaign Deepens Her Determination For ERA

By JILL LAWRENCE
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Five tumultuous years as a dynamo behind the losing campaign for the Equal Rights Amendment have only deepened Eleanor Smeal's determination to see women win equal rights.

The two-term president of the National Organization for Women steps down Wednesday with every indication that she will remain a highly visible feminist force.

"I'm going to stay very active in politics and women's rights," says Mrs. Smeal. "I would like to see us improve the world — make it safe for progress."

The former Pittsburgh housewife, whose husband left his job to join her in Washington, plans to lecture and write until her son graduates from high school in June.

"I never thought they (politicians) could go backwards this fast .... Sometimes I think I'll wake up and whether the world is flat or round will still be an issue," Mrs. Smeal says with good-natured disbelief.

"Whether they like it or not, they'll catch up with reality. There's a lot of us who are going to hang in there."

Mrs. Smeal's ascent from local activist to national spokeswoman was aided by a master's degree in political science and a lifelong sensitivity to discrimination.

The daughter of an Italian immigrant, she vividly recalls growing up with "tremendous discrimination on the basis of ethnicity" in Erie, Pa.

She also remembers Duke University's racial struggles in the late 1950s, and how as a student leader she tried — unsuccessfully — to encourage integration of the campus.

Her feminist awakening occurred in 1969, through books she read as she convalesced from back problems and complications after the birth of her daughter. A year later, she and her husband joined NOW.

By 1975, Eleanor Smeal had become chairman of NOW's national board and a national traveler working full-time and unpaid for the ERA. In 1977, she won the first of two terms as national NOW president.

Barred by NOW bylaws from running a third time, Ms. Smeal will be succeeded this week by NOW vice president Judy Goldsmith.

She is leaving as she came, her sense of outrage intact. Her final newsletter dwells not on her departure but on charges that the Social Security system treats women unfairly.

"I mail frequently to our members. They think they hear more from me than their families and they're right," the outgoing president says with a grin.

OUT OF OFFICE — Out-going president of the National Organization for Women Eleanor Smeal poses in her Washington office. Smeal will be succeeded by Judy Goldsmith on Wednesday. (AP Laserphoto)

Mrs. Smeal presided over NOW, the nation's largest feminist organization, as its membership swelled from 40,000 to nearly 250,000; its budget soared from $500,000 to $13 million; and its grass-roots political network grew from no political action committees to 81 in 40 states.

But the failure of the ERA looms like a giant shadow over her tenure. Her unaffected, unhyped approach has been at once praised for expanding NOW's appeal and condemned for not radiating enough charisma to win ERA ratification by the June 30 deadline.

ERA, which would outlaw discrimination against women, died after it failed to win ratification by the required 38 states. Thirty-five state legislatures approved it within its extended seven year deadline.

The battle consumed Mrs. Smeal and her family for five years, forced her into a pace she likens to a constant round of final exams or the last three weeks of a political campaign.

"I knew the odds from day one, probably better than most," she says quietly. "I almost destroyed myself. I gave what I could give. I have no personal regrets."

"You can't look at what we've done and say we've lost," she says. "The fact that we have to spend more of our lives fighting for what should have been our birthright is a tragedy. But we turned a disgraceful defeat that should never have occurred into a base of political activity."

Twelve years ago, NOW had 3,000 members and "every day was a struggle," says Mrs. Smeal, thumping the table for emphasis.

Equal pay for equal work was a radical idea, she recalls; medical and law schools had quotas for women; athletic opportunities for girls and women were minimal; and want ads were segregated by sex.

Then came the lawsuits, marches, demonstrations, phone banks, newsletters and lobbying campaigns.

"The miracle is we have done so much with so few people," says Mrs. Smeal. "We have become a majority movement intellectually. We did not start out that way."

Hope Plantation Open House Sunday

WINDSOR — The essence of an early 19th century Christmas in eastern North Carolina, with decorations of fresh evergreens such as holly, magnolia and native cedar is being recaptured in an open house at Historic Hope Plantation on Sunday.

Beginning at 1 p.m. and continuing into early evening Sunday, visitors can take in the scent of cedar, the cream and ivory beauty of dried flowers, and the luster of greenery and richly colored berries from the local countryside being used to decorate the sheen of walnut tables and the craftsmanship of hand-carved pine mantelpieces.

Additionally, pungent aromas of cured ham, hot cider and baking cookies will fill the air in the plantation's basement kitchen.

Admission to Hope Plantation is $2 for adults, 75 cents for students, and free to pre-school age children.

Sunday's open house marks the onset of holiday observances at Hope where decorations will remain on display through Wednesday, Dec. 22.

Historic Hope Plantation was the home of North Carolina Governor David Stone (1808-1810). An imposing two story structure, the Federal-Georgian homestead has been fully restored. It is located on highway NC 308 four miles west of Windsor. Visiting hours are 10 to 4 on Tuesdays through Saturdays, and from 2 to 5 on Sundays. Through Dec. 22, the house will also be open on Mondays. The plantation will close Dec. 22 and remain closed until March 1 to conserve energy.

Those interested in more details on the plantation are to write: Historic Hope Plantation, P.O. Box 601, Windsor, N.C., 27983, or call 794-3140.

SCANDINAVIAN-STYLE...sweater is knitted with circular needles in a machine-washable acrylic-blend yarn.

Pat's Pointers

By Pat Trexler

Scandinavian styling highlights this snugly warm ski sweater — certain to delight your favorite youngster, as it did my grandson, Paul, who models his own handknit pullover.

It's knitted round and round on circular needles, so there are no seams needed. Knitting worsted-weight yarn in machine-washable acrylic blend is used with directions written for sizes 4 through 16. To make the instructions easier to follow, no abbreviations are used for this Pat Trexler Original.

To obtain directions for making this original-design ski sweater, send your request for Leaflet No. KL-1128 with $1 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler ("The Daily Reflector"), P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29582.

Or you may order Kit No. KK-1128 by sending a check or money order to Pat Trexler at the same address. Prices, including shipping charges, are as follows: $12.50 for sizes 4 through 8; $15 for sizes 10 and 12; $17.50 for sizes 14 and 16. Please specify your choice of color combinations from the following: burgundy, cranberry and white; brown, honey and white; camel, caramel and natural; medium and dark blue with white. Each kit includes the instruction leaflet and Bernat Berella 4 yarn.

Dear Pat: A few weeks ago, you printed a letter from a disabled nurse who had sustained a spinal injury. I find a striking similarity between this nurse and myself. I have suffered excruciating spinal pain since 1973 and, like the writer of that letter, my sitting tolerance is quite limited. That is, the longer I sit, the greater the degree of inflammation with the attendant pain.

On the days when there is less inflammation, I do my necessary shopping. On my "bad" days, I mend, darn, knit, crochet, needlepoint and do crewel embroidery. I must admit that at times I am only able to keep my shoulders elevated in bed and would appreciate any comments from you or your readers as to just how one can continue to be active with her handwork under these circumstances.

I recently purchased a magnifier lamp that has a circular fluorescent light. This lamp, I think, will be of great assistance while doing fine handwork. I was able to purchase it from a local discount house for $90 plus tax. They are also available in smaller models costing around $35. If one found either of these too large or cumbersome, I am certain that even smaller sizes could be found at stores dealing in stamp and coin collections.

Perhaps, between this nurse and myself, we could set up a "Disabled Needleworkers' Network" with others in a similar situation. Do you have any suggestions as to how to achieve this goal? — Alice Magoon, Philadelphia, Pa.

Dear Alice: Although I have been abundantly blessed in having no physical disabilities, I would be happy to serve as a clearinghouse for your proposed "network."

On the same day your letter arrived, I received a note from Beverly Waterman and Virginia Palminter of Nichols, N.Y. 13812. Bev and Ginny have recently formed a company called Special Crafts and Techniques Inc., which is starting to manufacture apparatus for crafts for physically and visually impaired people.

I have also been corresponding recently with Lana Ford, a craft designer and occupational therapy instructor at Western Michigan University who has some terrific ideas.

My thought now is that I could establish something like a directory of those who are disabled and want to know where to find advice and aids for needlework and those who can share advice or offer special apparatus for needlework. Perhaps even a regular newsletter might evolve from this.

For starters, I would suggest that anyone interested write to me at the address given elsewhere in this column. I would ask that you understand that time might not allow me to answer all letters personally, but as soon as enough names and/or information is available, I will send it out. It would be helpful if you would include a self-addressed, stamped return envelope.

You might include such information as your special needlework interest, the nature of your disability or the type of aid or information you could make available to the Disabled Needleworkers' Network.

Garden Club Has Meeting

The Lynndale Garden Club held its meeting last week at the home of Mrs. Thomas Whitehurst. Mrs. James Bearden, Mrs. John Lynch and Mrs. S.J. Waters were assisting hostesses.

A silent auction of various handmade items donated by members was held with proceeds to be used to fund various landscaping projects including the entrances to the sub-division, Middle School and Rose High School.

Volunteers were requested to work on the high school gardens Dec. 8 at 9:30 a.m.

Mrs. Dean McCurdy's candlewick picture frame will be the club's entry in the spring craft show sponsored by the state association of garden clubs.

Christmas contributions were made. A Christmas cocktail party will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Perkins Dec. 8. New members and husbands will be honored guests.

The yard of the month award was given to Mr. and Mrs. Durward Harris.

Chapter Has Recent Meet

The Eta Delta Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi held its meeting in the home of Barbara McMillion.

President Ann Pfeifer presided over the business meeting. During the meeting, Ms. McMillion, committee chairman for ways and means, discussed the final preparations for the hot dog sale Dec. 4 at K-Mart.

The chapter voted that contributions from the chapter's money-making projects be made to the Hospice program, Cerebral Palsy and the Coastal Plains Chapter of Epilepsy Association of North Carolina.

Social chairman Mary Ellen Joyce reminded the chapter of the Christmas party Dec. 11. The XI Gamma XI chapter has been invited as guests.

Transference rituals were held for Sherry Nemeth and pledge rituals were held for Candy Gunn, Carmen Bradley, Linda Creech and Paula Sholtens meeting.

The program was given by Bonnie Martin. She discussed the history and traditions of Thanksgiving. A social hour followed.

Belts Are Emphasis

NEW YORK (UPI) — In the fashion accessories market, belt tightening is a sign of good times.

Marty Ruza, president of one belt manufacturing company, says the first six months this year were his best season in years.

Elliot Baritz, a die and button manufacturer, says the belt industry currently is his most important market.

Industry officials at the 1982 Trimmings, Accessories and Supplies Exposition were optimistic for two reasons. They said many customers are up-dating last year's garments with this year's accessories, and many designers are emphasizing waistlines in their spring apparel.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I had an aunt once who moved from the East to the West Coast and suffered from jet lag for three years.

It was something she couldn't seem to shake. Every night she went to bed at 7 p.m. and woke up at 3 a.m. It had an effect on her whole life. She didn't know what prime time was. She'd call up people at her breakfast and tell them to have a good day when they hadn't seen it yet. And it wasn't unusual for her to invite you to a candlelight dinner at 4:30 in the afternoon. (Happy hour at 3:30.)

We had a lot of fun at her expense, but I always empathized with her. Jet lag is nothing to kid around about. For those of you who have had no experience with it, let me explain what happens.

When you travel on a plane from one time zone to the next, not only does your body not know how to adjust to the change, it never forgives you for what you have done to it.

Jet lag takes away all your control over your life. The best way I can explain it is that it's a lot like standing up on a crowded subway from Bulgaria to New York. You're eating cabbage rolls at 4 a.m. and you don't know why. You're sleeping with your eyes open and you don't know why. Your head falls in your soup over a late lunch and you don't know why.

Some of the more sophisticated travelers have tried to fool their bodies. Suppose it is 11 p.m. in California and 2 a.m. in New York. They rationalize if they go to bed at 1 a.m. in California, they wake up at 7 a.m. in New York. Right? Wrong. They'll wake up at 11 a.m. in California and are late for their appointment.

There's another interesting phenomenon about a body that travels. It never turns down food. I could fly through 18 time zones in 18 hours and have a full course meal in every one of them. I have seen people outgrow their seat belts from New York to Hawaii.

There's a group of researchers who are studying ways of how to get the body to adjust to air miles. They've got it down to a diet in which you plan and reschedule your meals several days before you go on a trip. Frankly, I think it would be easier to slow the planes down.

I have my own theory. I think that jet lag is a disease of the middle class as they struggle desperately to get from one place to another.

Don't even suggest to me they get it when they ride in first class!

CWF To Have Annual Bazaar

The Christian Women's Fellowship of Red Oak Christian Church will sponsor its 14th annual bazaar and luncheon Saturday in the church fellowship hall.

The bazaar will open at 10 a.m. and will continue until 2 p.m. It will include a chicken salad lunch starting at 11:30.

Homemade cakes, pies, cookies, candy, country produce, canned pickles, preserves, handicrafts, Christmas decorations and gifts will be featured.

Sandra Stocks is president of the CWF and Rena Manning and Penny Cox are co-chairpersons of the bazaar.

Other committees include: bake shop, Lucille Evans,

Esther Roberts, Edna Simmons and Sandy Smith; country store, Agnes Gladson and Kathy Parker; handicrafts, Gail Wynne, Rubelle Goin, Carol Gordon and Virginia Greene; Christmas shop, Linda James, Claudia Manning; Flea market, Sue Pennington, Brenda Allen; chicken salad, Mary Belle Joyner, Wilma James and Betsy Bright; serving tables, Pattie Worthington and Jean Garris; beverage shop, Jean Allen and Velma Deitch; and cashier, Marie Mills.

Reception Invitation

The children of Thelma and A.J. Smith request the honor of your presence at a reception in celebration of the 50th anniversary of their parents on Dec. 5 from 2-4 p.m. at Trinity Free Will Baptist Church fellowship hall in Greenville.

The Woolly Worm Myth

It's past time to puncture the woolly worm myth. The news media regrettably contributes to a ridiculous situation by regularly quoting woolly worm observers... loosely called "authorities".

Wethinks (instead of the olde English "methinks") said authorities have tongue in cheek and are secretly enjoying their seasonal moment in the spotlight.

Consider. The woolly worm is very, very small. By volume it is about 95 percent hair, fuzz or "wool"; leaving an insignificant body which must incorporate all bodily functions as well as a "brain" which we suspect makes the head of a pin look large by comparison. Such a brain has more to do than forecast the weather. Would you trust it?

Note too, the authoritative observers of woolly worm incline to weasel on their interpretation of what the woolly worm is saying. "It could be a hard winter." "It looks like it might be a mild winter." Or,

"It reminds me of the winter of '64." (Do you remember the winter of '64? If so, which '64?).

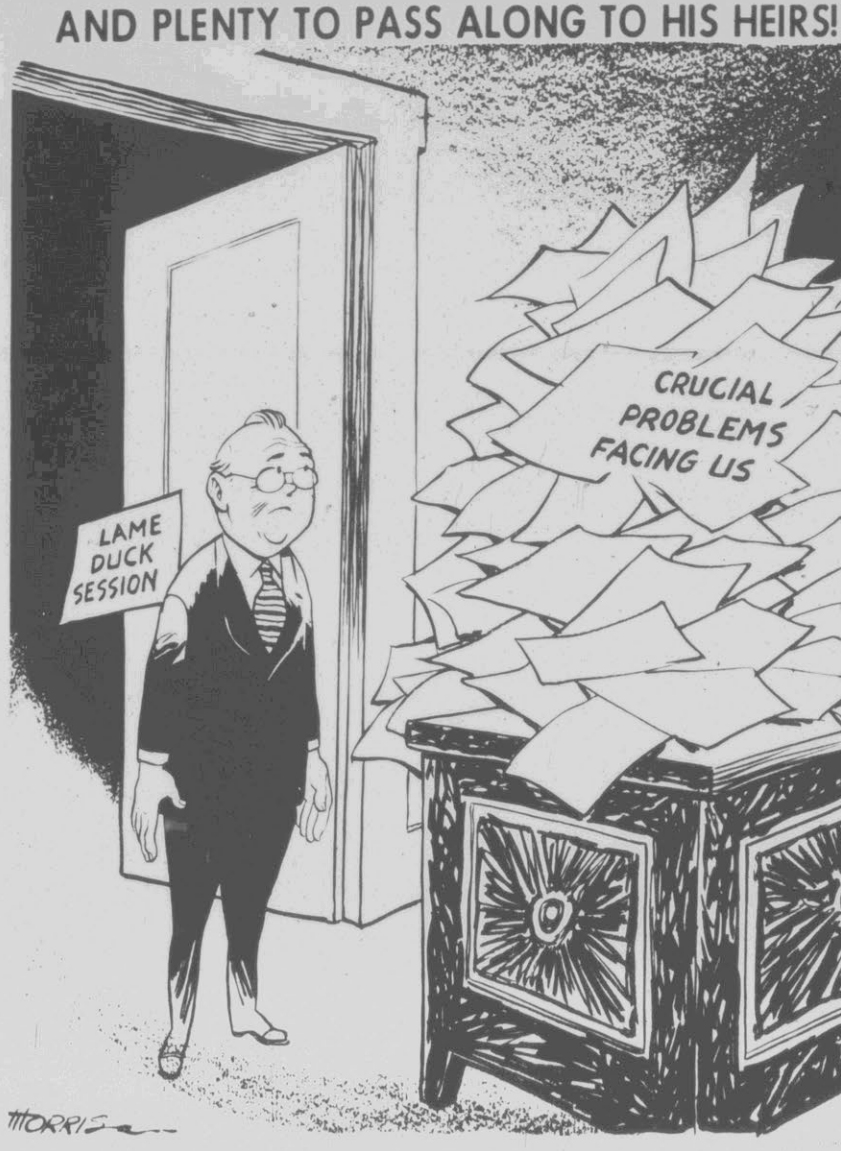

Heaven only knows (and heaven isn't talking) what the critter is really saying. It might well be "Here I am in my prime of life and this idiot is keeping me from looking for a soul-mate."

No. A woolly worm is only an innocent bystander whose preoccupation is how to fulfill its life-cycle. Anybody who takes him as a reliable forecaster has to be woollier than the worm.

Yet, each fall of the year there are people, magazines, newspapers, radio stations and even television stations who give precious time and space to the single-minded little critter as well as misleading gullible humans.

A pox on them.

Let the woolly worms alone and build up those stocks of firewood. Our left ankle has been aching off-and-on these past few weeks, a sure sign of...
Oh forget it!

An Equation For Alliance

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
BONN, West Germany — Despite fastidious preparations by conservative chancellor Helmut Kohl to install new nuclear missiles next year, the prospect is at least 50-50 that the weapons will be delayed until 1984 or beyond.

Neither Kohl nor his astute defense minister, Manfred Woerner, will entertain such speculations even in confidence. But the confluence of political forces opposed to the new missiles is gaining momentum. That momentum could tie Kohl's hands if it is joined by the appearance of progress at the U.S.-Soviet Geneva negotiations on limiting European nuclear arms; by a sudden Soviet offer to dismantle part of its SS-20 missile force; or by Soviet threats to reverse normalization between the two Germanies.

Barring unlikely accord at Geneva, the conviction of Kohl's government that the weapons will be installed ("We are going to deploy these weapons," Kohl told us Nov. 15) may prove to be a wish father to the thought. If so, the democratic world will have admitted that Moscow, not Washington, can now dictate the level of Western defenses against Soviet power. That is the bedrock equation facing Kohl and the alliance.

Kohl's preparations are admirable and far-sighted. Every location in this country earmarked for new Pershing IIs has been physically insulated from attack by peace movement extremists. Kohl has ordered that there be no "public evidence" of site preparations, but the sites will be completed and ready for deployment by year's end. The schedule here calls for deployment in another country, probably Britain or Italy, before West Germany.

These preparations are smart and to the point. The threat comes in future events beyond Kohl's control.

"The Social Democrats (SPD) may turn against the new weapons now that former chancellor Helmut Schmidt has retired from leadership. Rumors persist that Schmidt himself is less certain about his 1979 decision to deploy the new weapons if negotiations fail.

Quiet today, the Catholic Church may mobilize against the new missiles.

*A decision by the Congress to cancel deployment of the MX missile in the U.S. or reduce the number of American troops stationed here, both highly possible, would complicate Kohl's domestic problem by raising questions about American will to defend Europe.

*A Soviet threat to reverse normalization between East and West Germany could turn West Germans against the new missiles. If played, that Soviet card would affect all West German families with relatives across the border — perhaps two-thirds of West German households.

Kohl is the first conservative chancellor in 13 years. His party is favored to remain in power after the March election but he knows the emotional volatility of the nuclear issue defies rational political handling. He counts on American suzerainty to submerge irritations within NATO on such issues as Western trade with the Soviet and U.S. troop withdrawals.

Even so, dealing with Ruhr industrialists hungry for Soviet contracts and with what one politician here calls "the vituperative power" of the peace movement is a large order for Kohl and, by direct ascent, for Ronald Reagan.

Be Careful While Shopping

The Christmas shopping season obviously opened with enthusiasm among shoppers and merchants here after Thanksgiving.

It can be a happy time for all of us as we search for the perfect gift for friends and loved ones. Trips to the stores mean we get to see old friends who we seldom have time to visit and that is a positive experience.

So we can enjoy the holiday shopping season, hectic as it may be.

It is well to remember, though, there are those who want to make it less than joyful for us.

Watch out for the purse snatcher and the thief who would take your packages from your car. Be sure you know where your purse is at all times and put packages in the trunk of the car for safekeeping. Beware of walking to deserted areas of parking lots.

A little care on the part of all of us can keep the Christmas season happy.

Burger The Bolshevik

By JAMES KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — Warren Earl Burger, chief justice of the United States, projects a kind of cartoonist's image of conservatism. Color his hair silver; draw his figure portly. The image reflects the man; with few exceptions his opinions have been models of strict construction and judicial restraint. No question about it: He's a conservative.

Is that so? If by "conservative" we mean a person who prefers the old and tried to the new and untried, Burger is practically a Bolshevik. In his recent address before the Arthur Vanderbilt memorial dinner in New York, the chief ignited a string of firecracker ideas — radical ideas — for changes in our judicial system. He recalled the inventive Leonardo da Vinci, whose notes were larded with reminders to "try this" and "try that."

"Some of that spirit of da Vinci," said Burger, "must animate our profession today."

The problem facing our judicial system is a problem of overload. The causes can be easily defined. Over the past 15 or 20 years, Congress has opened a hundred new fields of litigation — civil rights, for example, and the environment — and hordes of litigants have set up their tents and gone camping in the courts. In these areas precedents are few; at both the trial and the appellate levels, judges must hack out new paths.

As Burger noted, ours is the most litigious society on earth. Our national pastime isn't baseball; it's the lawsuit. State and federal courts are glutted with civil actions. The Supreme Court has to give at least cursory attention to 4,000 petitions a year. The overload grows steadily worse, and the quality of jurisprudence must inevitably decline. If "breakdown" is to be avoided, in Burger's view, some

major innovations must be tried.

For example, A new way must be sought to cope with the protracted cases that may take six or seven months to try. Such cases, numbering about 164 this year, impose severe hardships on jurors. Empaneling competent jurors becomes a difficult task. Would some new process of arbitration be better?

Other forms of civil litigation cry out for simplification. It often is said, Burger remarked, that we tend to try cases twice — once in prolonged pretrial interrogatories, and again months later in court. Abuse of the discovery process imposes costly burdens upon the parties. One remedy, he thought, might be for judges to impose "disciplinary monetary sanctions" on attorneys guilty of the abuse.

Burger voiced other ideas calculated to strike terror into the hearts of plaintiffs' lawyers. Is there really any need, he inquired, to have personal injury and property damage cases tried in the courts at all? Why not dispose of these claims as claims for workmen's compensation are handled, by administrative agency?

The federal system employs 229 judges to handle bankruptcy cases. At least in the initial stages, couldn't most of the bankrupt estates be administered non-judicially?

How long must we wait, Burger asked, to amend the rule of diversity jurisdiction? At present, federal courts must hear the kind of damage suit that results when a driver who lives in Newark collides with a driver who lives in New York.

"We must not cling slavishly to the status quo," said Burger. "There must be a better reason for doing things than that hackneyed expression, 'But we've always done it that way.'"

Perhaps out of deference to his predecessors and colleagues on the Supreme Court, Burger made no mention in his address of the court's own contributions to the judicial overload. The court has an unfortunate habit of taking cases that are not ripe for decision; it fritters away its time on cases that lack constitutional dimension; individual justices too often feel compelled to draft long dissenting or concurring opinions that serve their consciences well

Tough Law Helps

By PAUL T. O'CONNOR
RALEIGH — As North Carolina prepares itself for a debate over Gov. Jim Hunt's package of tougher drunk driving laws, other states which have already toughened their laws are reporting significant success.

The National Safety Council reported earlier this month that traffic deaths are down 13 percent nationwide this year. The newspaper USA Today recently surveyed several states with tough new laws and found some dramatic decreases.

Maine pioneered the way with extremely harsh drunk driving laws and it has paid off. Since September, 1981, when the law went into effect, traffic deaths related to drunk driving are down by 41 percent. Since Nebraska passed its tougher laws last year, drunk driving related traffic fatalities are down by 61 percent. Maryland saw the same kind of deaths fall by 26 percent after state troopers began setting up road blocks to check drivers. California has seen a 12.8 percent drop since last March, the newspaper says. In all, 26 states and the District of Columbia have passed stringent drunk driving laws during the past year.

Even though North Carolina has not toughened its drunk driving laws yet, Hunt thinks the discussion of doing so is helping cut traffic deaths. At the press conference in which he revealed the first details of his program, Hunt said, "I believe Crime Control and Public Safety estimates that 50 percent of highway deaths are normally alcohol-related. During the first six months of the year, however, Division of Motor Vehicles records indicate that police officers suspected alcohol to be involved in only about 30 percent of the state's traffic deaths.

When Hunt announced his intentions to seek a higher minimum drinking age, he said his proposal would be supported by some youngsters. Within a week, "UnderAge," the monthly newspaper produced by teens who work with the N.C. Youth Involvement Council, had endorsed a higher drinking age.

Mary Benton Hudgens, a Raleigh high school student and one of the three editors of the paper, called for a drinking age of 19. "Raising the drinking age to 19 for beer and wine is a relatively painless way to reduce the consumption of alcohol by beginning drivers, and therefore reduce the number of teen fatalities. Quite a

The visibility that has been given to the Task Force (on drunk driving), including the series of public hearings held across the state, and the increased scrutiny of our system by such groups as Mothers Against Drunk Driving, are already doing a lot of good.

"As you know, drunken driving is one of the leading causes of death on the highway. So far this year, there have been 197 fewer traffic fatalities in North Carolina than for the same period last year."

To the editor:

There is no doubt that most of the people in Greenville are aware of the summer baseball program sponsored by the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department. For the past 10 years I have been fortunate enough to participate in this program and I express my appreciation to the department and all the people involved in this opportunity. I realize it takes a great deal of effort and time on the part of citizens, parents and the Recreation Department to provide this program for the young people of Greenville. Men from the community continue to volunteer their time to coach these teams in spite of the many and varied problems they encounter each year and parents organize and maintain these programs through their hard work. Without this cooperation, many of the youth in Greenville would be without entertainment and activity during the summer months, which could lead to destructive behavior.

Thanks to all for a job well done.

I think we sports fans should get more concerned with these events before more people get hurt or killed. I can't tell them how to box, but I think boxers should wear some kind of headgear to be protected from getting hurt. Thank you for reading this letter.

Strength For Today

A PULL DOWNWARD

Probably the most apparent and irresistible force is gravity. For some reason not understood the world tends to draw everything towards its center.

Many people do not realize that gravity operates in the moral and spiritual world precisely as it does on the physical. Moral character left to itself does not improve but deteriorates. It takes effort to lift an object off the ground; it takes effort to lift one's life out of laziness, carnality, envy, avarice and a whole host of other evils. The pull of moral gravity operates on our souls as physical gravity operates on our bodies.

One of the greatest shortcomings of the modern world is spiritual neglect. Better disposed people have never lived than the people of these modern times. But they live under the delusion that they can drift into social righteousness. They need to comprehend the seriousness of moral and spiritual gravity. — Elisha Douglass

Protect Self On Mail Orders

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Pyess Writer

Shopping by mail can save time and energy during the pre-Christmas crush, but late deliveries or mixed-up merchandise can turn holiday happiness into horror.

The Federal Trade Commission has a Mail Order Merchandise Rule to protect consumers. But the rule can't be enforced properly unless individuals know — and demand — their rights.

The FTC says January and February bring the year's biggest volume of mail-order complaints. And it says most of the letter writers are unaware that marketers have specific responsibilities in terms of when they must ship orders and what they must do if they can't meet the deadline.

It also is important to understand that the regulations don't cover everything that is shipped by mail. The rules do not apply to photo-finishing, to magazine subscriptions except for the first issue, to COD orders, to seeds and plants or to credit orders where your account is not charged before the goods are shipped.

Consumers should keep careful track of when they place their orders. That's because companies which ARE covered by the mail-order rule must ship your order by the date promised. If no date is given, the merchandise must be sent out within 30 days after your order is received.

If there is a delay in shipment, the seller must mail you what's called an "option notice," telling you what's happened and giving a new shipping date. The seller must provide a postage-free way for you to reply, accepting or rejecting the change.

If you decide you don't want to wait for your merchandise, you have the right to cancel your order and get a complete refund. If you paid by cash, check or money order, the company must mail you a refund within seven business days of the time it gets your cancellation notice. If you charged the items to a credit card, the papers adjusting your account must be mailed within one billing cycle.

If the delay is less than 30 days, you must notify the company of your decision. If you don't do anything, the seller has the right to assume you have agreed to the new date. If the delay is more than 30 days, however, the burden shifts to the company. If you don't respond, the seller must return your money by the end of the first 30 days of delay.

Compare prices carefully. When you add shipping charges, the catalog may be no cheaper than your local store — and you can't inspect the item before you buy it.

Check out the company before you place your order. How long has it been in business? Do you know anyone who has dealt with it? Does the Better Business Bureau have any record of complaints?

Make sure you understand the company policy on returns in advance. Read the fine print carefully to make sure that the seller does not reserve the right to make substitutions if the exact item you want is out of stock. If you don't want a substitute, say so.

Find out ahead of time what you should do if the merchandise arrives damaged or if something is the wrong size or color. Who has to pay the postage if you have to send something back? Never send cash through the mail and keep copies of your check or money order along with any correspondence involved.

If you have a problem with something ordered by mail, take your complaint to the seller. If that doesn't work, try contacting the Direct Mail Marketing Association, a trade group, which has a Mail Order Action Line service. The address is 6 E. 43rd St., New York, N.Y., 10017.

The same group can help you decrease — or increase — the amount of advertising mail you get. If you want to remove your name from mailing lists, write to the marketing association and ask for a mail preference service name-removal form. If you want more mail, ask for an add-on form. It includes 24 categories of advertising mail; you can check the ones you're interested in.

Farm Scene

By MIRIAM W. NANCE
Agricultural Extension Agent

Swine producers are well aware of the fact that the more pigs saved in the farrowing house means the more pigs to market. Swine management starts way before the farrowing house but proper baby pig care can greatly increase your profits. On the average, producers lose more than 25 percent of the live pigs farrowed before they are weaned.

Know when the sows are to farrow and take them to the farrowing house three-four days ahead of time. This allows the sow to become acquainted with the facility and routine of daily care. According to the NCSU swine specialist, 65 percent of all past farrowing deaths occur by the time the litter is four days old. Extra time and management spent during these days pays big dividends. Many pigs die that could be saved with a little tender loving care.

Being present at all farrowing has proven to be a big "pig saving" management factor. If you are unable to attend farrowings, raise the air temperature in the farrowing house in order to prevent chilling of the newborn pigs. The creep area should be heated to 85-90 degrees Fahrenheit by some form of zone heat. Creating a clean, dry, draft-free environment for baby pigs will save many a pig.

Baby pig navels should be dipped in an iodine solution as soon as possible to prevent entrance of infection. Needle teeth should be clipped and iron shots given during the first few days. Identification of pigs and equalization of litters should occur after the pig has had colostrum from its mother. Colostrum is the milk first let down by the sow and is highly nutritious.

Some time between three days and one week after birth castration and tail docking should occur.

The profit of your hog operation depends on the number of pigs per sow per year. One way to maximize the number of pigs out of your operation is baby pig care. For further information contact Miriam Nance, assistant agricultural extension agent at 752-2934.

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day when considerable progress can be made by carefully following previously set plans. You have considerable ingenuity, both mental and manual. Be sure to use them.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Communicating with others on a more intelligent level can bring greater harmony and success in the future.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Concentrate on adding to your present income by improving regular routines. Do nothing to endanger your security.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Do nothing about those new ideas you have until later in the day when you can work them out successfully.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You can get good advice from an expert now that could lead to more benefits in the future.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Concentrate on ways to have increased harmony with associates. Make the evening a happy one with the person who means the most to you.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Study your financial affairs and make plans to have more abundance in the future. Make new contacts of worth.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Any important appointments should be made and kept in the morning for best results. Make the evening a happy one.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Plan just how to add to present income via some added interest. Don't take any risks where credit is concerned.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Do nothing that could spoil the harmony you are now enjoying at home. Wait for a better time to start a new plan.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Analyze your present financial position and make plans to have greater income in the future. Don't waste valuable time.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You have good ideas that need more study before putting them in operation. Allow time for social pleasure.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Listen to what an expert has to say about whatever is puzzling you. Take time to improve appearance and health.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will require particular attention since the nature here is quite different from most. Your progeny will be a person of much ability and could become very successful in life. Gentle discipline is needed.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Three Wrecks Are Reported

An estimated $3,100 damage resulted from three traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Monday.

Heaviest damage resulted from a 9:10 a.m. collision on Greenville Boulevard, 60 feet south of the Granville Drive intersection involving cars driven by Robert Lyman Carraway of 1900 South Charles St. and Garland Frederick Williams of Kinston.

Damage from the mishap was set at $700 to the Carraway car and $500 to the Williams vehicle.

A collision one minute later and about 10 feet further south on Greenville Boulevard, police said, involved cars driven by Orren William Babcock Jr. of Ayden, and William Frank Brady of Route 6, Greenville.

Officers said the Brady car collided with the Babcock vehicle when the Babcock car swerved to avoid colliding with the Williams and Carraway vehicles. Damage to the Babcock car was estimated at $700 and estimated damage to the Brady vehicle was $200.

An estimated $500 damage resulted to each of two cars involved in an 8:05 a.m.

collision at the intersection of Fairview Way and Aycock Drive.

Investigators identified the drivers of the vehicles as Phillip Bryan Averette of 1027 West Wright Road and Carolyn Seydell Means of 202 Adams Blvd.

New Chief Judge For Appeals Court

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Judge Earl W. Vaughn has been chosen chief judge of the North Carolina Court of Appeals, Chief Justice Joseph Branch announced Monday.

Vaughn replaced Judge Naomi E. Morris, who retires at year's end. "I am of the opinion that Judge Vaughn's extensive general practice as an attorney, his legislative experience and his able service as a member of the court of appeals well qualify him to render an outstanding service to the courts and to the people of North Carolina," Branch said.

Vaughn, 54, will begin his duties Jan. 1. Judge Morris' court seat will be filled by Winston-Salem attorney Eugene H. Phillips.

"I am flattered at the confidence the chief judge has placed in me, and I will endeavor to justify that confidence," Vaughn said.

Vaughn, a Rockingham County native, served in the state House from 1961 to 1969 and was speaker the last three years. He received his undergraduate and law degrees from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

few high school seniors are 18 years old, but very few are 19. Raising the legal drinking age one year would in many cases make beer and wine less available to 15, 16 and 17 year olds by taking it away from their friends who are 18."

In the same issue of the paper, Stefanie Chen, another editor, suggested raising the driving age to 17. "Personal experience has led me to believe that teenagers are immature. In the society in which we are raised, little responsibility is given to young people...this isolation from responsibility is one of the reasons for our immaturity."

She argues that 16-year-olds often misuse their automobiles as a way of impressing friends. "Our immaturity and inexperience at this critical age can be fatal for some of our peers."

A Third Spy Trial In 3 Weeks

LONDON (AP) — Canadian professor Hugh George Hambleton was on trial today on charges of passing NATO secrets to the Soviets — the third prosecution in three weeks under Britain's anti-espionage Official Secrets Act.

Attorney General Sir Michael Havers told the court Monday that Hambleton revealed to British Special Branch investigators that he was smuggled to Moscow and personally thanked by then-KGB director Yuri Andropov, who is now leader of the Soviet Communist Party.

The meeting with Andropov occurred over dinner in a Moscow apartment in 1975 and was "quite an honor," Havers quoted Hambleton as saying.

Hambleton, 60, is Canadian by birth and British by descent with dual nationality. He has pleaded innocent to passing top secret Western information to Soviet agents between 1956 and 1979. He worked for the North Atlantic Treaty Organization in Paris from 1956-61 and is now economics professor at Quebec's Laval University.

The jury trial at London's Old Bailey Central Criminal Court is expected to last five days.

Earlier Monday, Rhona Jane Ritchie, 30, a former diplomat at the British Embassy in Tel Aviv, got a nine-month suspended jail sentence after pleading guilty to giving her Egyptian diplomat lover messages sent by the British foreign secretary to the U.S. secretary of state.

Miss Ritchie, described as "more foolish than wicked," escaped a jail term after defense lawyers argued that the messages she gave a year ago to Refaat El Anssary, second secretary at the Egyptian Embassy, would mostly have become public knowledge anyway.

On Nov. 10, Geoffrey Prime, a former translator at Britain's top-secret Government Communications Headquarters in Cheltenham was jailed for 35 years at the Old Bailey for spying for the Soviets. U.S. officials said it was the biggest penetration of Western intelligence since World War II.

In another development Monday, the Defense Ministry announced that Philip Aldridge, a lance corporal in the Army Intelligence Corps, had been charged with improperly carrying out his duties and was under arrest. The Intelligence Corps deals with specifically military intelligence.

The British domestic news agency, Press Association, said Aldridge had access to material concerning the Falklands war last spring, but ministry officials stressed there was no evidence information had been passed to a foreign power.

Meanwhile, at Cheltenham, coroner David Falkner ruled that Peter Ernest Brockway, 42, a radio operator at the same center where Prime worked, committed suicide by hanging himself at his home on Nov. 24.

British newspapers speculated before Monday's inquest that Brockway's death might in some way have been connected with the Prime spy scandal.

Brockway's wife Janet told Falkner her husband killed himself through depression, while police stressed that neither Special Branch officers nor any other security service were involved in investigations.

Hambleton was arrested in London last June when he came here on a British passport, saying he intended to take a sailing course, Havers said.

In Ottawa, Solicitor General Robert Kaplan told questioning legislators in the House of Commons the Canadian government did not have enough evidence to gain a conviction against Hambleton.

DRIVER RECEIVES MINOR INJURIES — A New Bern woman sustained minor injuries in a Monday morning accident. According to Highway Patrol records, Elizabeth Guion Tolson was headed north on N.C. 43 near Hollywood's Crossroads when her car ran off the right side of the roadway and struck a utility pole causing about $3,500 damage to the auto. Members of the Eastern Pines Fire/Rescue Department responded to the 9 a.m. accident. No charges were made, according to reports. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

N. C. Mobilizes Against A Season Of Shoplifting

MOREHEAD CITY, N.C. (AP) — Studies show that one of every 10 shoppers will be involved in shoplifting over the Christmas holidays, and police say honest customers are the ones who will pay.

"All crimes against business collectively cost you the customer 7 cents out of every dollar you spend," says Bradford S. Critcher, a crime-control officer with the Morehead City Police Department.

Critcher says business crimes in North Carolina in 1981 cost $528 million, compared with $50 billion nationwide.

He says shoplifting losses in the state were set at $821,472 in 15,360 reported cases — up 9 percent from 1980.

Because of the large volume of shoplifting during the Christmas season, the N.C. Merchants Association has joined the state Department of Crime Control and Public Safety and other civic groups in proclaiming December "Stop Stealing from Business Month."

The program is based on the philosophy that aggressive publicity campaigns and prosecution of shoplifters are the merchant's best defense, says Morehead City police Capt. Joseph K. Rose.

Rose recently conducted a seminar on shoplifting, sponsored by the Morehead City Police Department and the Carteret County Chamber of Commerce, as part of the statewide awareness effort.

He says clerks should watch for customers wearing heavy coats that may be used to hide objects. He says women often use maternity clothes to conceal merchandise.

"I've seen women get nine months pregnant in 45 minutes of shopping," Rose said.

Shoplifters also might conceal goods in a book with inside pages cut out or drop items in large pocketbooks or shopping bags.

One of the best ways sales clerks can deter shoplifters is by providing quick, courteous service, so a potential shoplifter will know he is being watched, Rose said.

A potential shoplifter does not have to leave a store carrying merchandise in order to be stopped or charged with stealing, Rose said. However, felonious larceny can't be charged.

Mental Health Meeting Set

A membership meeting of the Mental Health Association in Pitt County will be held Thursday from 7:30 to 9 p.m. at the Pitt County Mental Health Center, 306 Stantonsburg Road.

The purpose of this meeting, according to Pres. Charles Ross, is chapter organization. Brenda Gray, executive director, will make a presentation of structure and organization and of upcoming dates; Dr. Richard Warner, a presentation of the nominating committee; and Lauretta Lewis, a presentation of chairpersons and orientation.

Under North Carolina law, a merchant or law enforcement officer who stops someone or causes his arrest cannot be held liable for detention, malicious prosecution, false imprisonment or false arrest if there was probable cause for the detention.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices rose today, reversing Monday's decline.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, off 4.51 points Monday, was up 5.43 to 1,008.28 at the end of two hours of trading.

Seven stocks advanced for every six that fell in the midday tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The government reported this morning that the index of leading economic indicators, which is designed to detect future trends in business activity, rose 0.6 percent in October.

The rise was slightly smaller than expected. The increase for September was revised upward to 1.1 percent, however, from the 0.5 percent gain originally reported by the Commerce Department.

Meanwhile, President Reagan rejected a plan to stimulate the economy by moving up next year's income tax cut to January from July. Critics said the plan would add to the federal deficit.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks rose .31 to 78.04. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 47 at 329.28.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 33.93 million shares a third of the way through today's session, compared with 27.20 million in the same period Monday.

Exxon led the active list, up 1/8 at 28. A 526,900-share block traded at 27 1/2 a share.

Among gainers, Mattel jumped 1/4 to 28 1/2, AMR rose 1 1/2 to 20 1/2 and International Business Machines added 1 1/2 to 84. On the down side, Energy Exchange dipped 1/4 to 2, Enserch was off 1/8 at 18 1/2, and Amerada Hess fell 1/8 to 27 1/2.

Hogs

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) (NCDA) — The trend on the North Carolina hog market today was mostly 50 cents to 75 cents lower. Kinston 54.50, Clinton, Elizabethtown, Fayetteville, Dunn, Pink Hill, Chadbourne, Ayden, Pine Level, Laurinburg and Benson 54.50, Wilson 54.50, Salisbury 53.50, Rowland unreported. Sows: all weights 500 pounds up; Wilson 49.00, Fayetteville 49.00, Whiteville 49.00, Wallace 50.00, Spivey's Corner 50.00, Rowland 49.00, Durham 49.00.

Poultry

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) (NCDA) — The North Carolina f.o.b. dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 39.25 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pound birds. 100 percent of the loads offered have been confirmed, with a final weighted average of 38.16 cents f.o.b. dock or equivalent. The market is steady to firm and the live supply is moderate for a moderate to good demand. Weights mostly desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Monday was 1,756,000, compared to 1,264,000 last Monday.

Hens

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) (NCDA) — The North Carolina hen market was three cents higher. Supplies light. Demand moderate. Prices paid per pound for hens over seven pounds at farm for Monday and Tuesday slaughter was 25 cents.

suicidal or homicidal intent." Doctors Judith S. Yongue, Jerry G. Gregory, and Robert R. Ratcliffe certified in a sworn document that they conducted the psychiatric re-evaluation of Braswell. Their re-evaluation document was signed Monday.

Braswell, who remains at patient at Pitt Memorial where he has been undergoing treatment for gunshot wounds to his chest, is charged with the Sept. 27 murder of his wife, Lillie. She was found shot to death east of Farmville and Braswell was discovered less than two hours later at his home in Farmville.

Ultrasound Techniques To End The Guesswork

By ELLEN PORATH Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — High-pitched sound waves called ultrasound can take the guesswork — and some of the risk — out of brain and spinal cord surgery, say two University of Chicago researchers.

George Dohrmann, an associate professor of neurosurgery, and Jonathan Rubin, assistant professor of radiology, said Monday that the technique outperforms computerized axial tomography, or CAT scans, which are more often used by neurosurgeons.

The said they have used ultrasound to diagnose and treat 300 patients over the last three years.

Ultrasound works the way underwater sonar locates submarines. Sound waves at a frequency far above human hearing are beamed through the body to bounce off dense tissues. The echo is converted to a moving picture on a TV screen that can reveal tumors, abscesses, lesions and cysts with surprising accuracy.

Ultrasound can be used to find the depth of a brain injury and make it easier to identify the contents and determine the treatment without breaking the "dura" — the protective layer between the skull and brain, they said.

"Most of the problems we operate for are not near the surface of the brain," Dohrmann told the annual meeting of the Radiological Society of North America.

During surgery, ultrasound can help surgeons respond quickly to emergencies such as burst blood vessels. Before surgery, it can identify problems that did not show up with other diagnostic methods.

Ultrasound has increased surgeons' ability to obtain biopsies of tumors and abscesses deep within the brain, the researchers said.

"For the first time, we've been able to drain abscesses at the very center of the brain — the area of great risk," Dohrmann said.

He said ultrasound has been used to find lesions so tiny that a CAT scan "only suggested something might be present."

In addition to its relatively low cost, ultrasound testing produces no known biological hazard.

from the floor, but the continued poor free throw shooting — just 60.0 percent — is bothering Harrison. "All we can do is continue to work on it," he said after Saturday's game.

Following the game here Wednesday, the Pirates travel to Birmingham, Ala., to face Samford University, a team the Pirates beat, 75-50, in their only previous meeting, in Greenville during the 1980-81 season.

Poster night will be observed by the team, with the first 2,000 through the gate receiving color posters of the Pirate team.

Player Reps To Vote Today On Pact

WASHINGTON (AP) - The National Football League's chief negotiator and the executive director of the players' union met privately in an effort to iron out language problems in the tentative agreement of Nov. 16 that ended the 57-day players' strike. Meanwhile, player representatives from around the league were scheduled to be polled later today on whether they will recommend that the full membership either ratify or reject the contract when the league's 1,500 players vote on it Friday. Prior to Monday night's session, union officials had predicted the players would probably reject the agreement but would vote to continue playing without a contract. Union Chief Ed Garvey said late Monday night he was prepared to meet Jack

Donlan, executive director of the NFL Management Council, the league's bargaining agent, at the union's headquarters in Washington. But they could not be reached for comment early today. Although Donlan has said the league considers negotiations at an end and that a "complete and total agreement" was reached Nov. 16, his meeting with union negotiators could indicate the league is still concerned about players rejecting the pact.

The tentative agreement calls for distribution of $1.6 billion in salaries and benefits over the next five years. The contract also includes a one-time $60-million cash bonus plan that calls for each player in the league to receive between $10,000 and $60,000.

If the players fail to ratify the contract Friday, club owners will retract the cash bonuses, Donlan has said. The owners will have to reassess their position if the players fail to ratify the contract, Donlan said.

League officials also have said failure to agree on a new collective bargaining agreement would require the league to reinstate those portions of the former agreement pertaining to the regular-season and post-season schedule. The net result would be cancellation of the ninth game of the strike-shortened season and a return to the ten-team playoff format as opposed to this year's expanded 16-team tournament.

Wittenburg's 3-Pointers Pace State Past Catamounts, 103-66

RALEIGH (AP) - Derek Whittenburg took advantage of the ACC's short three-point field goal by hitting a career high 28 points and forward Thurl Bailey added 27 as No. 18 N.C. State breezed past Western Carolina 103-66 in college basketball Monday night.

Whittenburg hit on 6 of 7 three-point attempts from beyond the 19-foot range the Atlantic Coast Conference allows for three-point goals this year. In all, the Wolfpack connected on 8 of 10 three-point attempts, while the Catamounts hit 4 of 16.

Bailey added 8 rebounds to go with his 27 points as N.C. State captured its opening game of the regular season.

N.C. State coach Jim Valvano was pleased with his team's play from the perimeter.

"I think our guard play was exceptional," Valvano said.

"But, we need to improve our inside play. Thurl Bailey played well, but we need to get more production from (Alvin) Battle, (Cozell) McQueen and (Lorenzo) Charles."

Turning his attention to the new ACC rules, which also includes a 30-second shot clock, Valvano said the roles force teams to put a premium on playing man-to-man defenses.

"The new rules are going to put a premium on man-to-man defense," Valvano said. "It means you're going to need quickness and depth. Every time we went into a zone I broke out in a rash. There was more action tonight than the entire month of January last year."

Catamount coach Steve Cottrell agreed. "I think the rule changes had a tremendous affect," he said.

Cottrell had the option of whether to play with the new rules. "Of course, that was our decision. We decided this morning to play it after coach Valvano asked us. It was definitely a factor, a bigger factor than I anticipated."

Whittenburg and Bailey each had their career high point totals, and freshman guard Ernie Myers added 18 points in his collegiate debut.

Forward junior Pat Sharp led the Catamounts, now 1-1, with 18 points, followed by senior Kenny Trimier with 10.

Whittenburg piled up 21 points in the first half, gunning

USC Atop Cage Poll

By The Associated Press
The University of Southern California was ranked No. 1, and defending national champion Louisiana Tech drew the second rating in the Women's College Basketball Poll.

Southern Cal, 1-0, received 40 first-place votes for 949 points in balloting by 48 women's college coaches around the country. The poll is compiled by Mel Greenberg of the Philadelphia Inquirer.

Louisiana Tech, which opens tonight at Mississippi College, received six first-place votes and 912 points. Old Dominion, 1-0, was ranked third with 859 points, followed by Tennessee, 2-0, with 821 points. Old Dominion and Tennessee received the remaining two first place votes.

Texas, which has yet to play a game, was fifth with 741 points. Rounding out the Top Ten were Maryland, 2-0, 726 points; Kentucky, 1-0, 654; Cheyney State, 0-0, 616; Long Beach State, 0-0, 559; and Kansas State, 2-0, 484.

Bus Trip To State

A bus trip to the East Carolina-North Carolina State women's basketball game Thursday night has been arranged and will leave at 5 p.m. the day of the game from Minges Coliseum.

Cost of the trip is $5. There is no admission charge at the game.

Persons interested in taking the trip must sign up by noon Wednesday at the office of ECU Athletic Director Ken Karr.

The trip is being sponsored by the Student Athletic Board (SAB).

ECU is 2-1 going into the game against the 15th-ranked Lady Wolfpack. NCSU is 2-0.

Mancini Will Stay In Ring

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio (AP) - Ray "Boom Boom" Mancini will resume training late next month, ending the doubt which followed the death of South Korean Duk Koo Kim as a result of their Nov. 13 fight.

Mancini, the World Boxing Association lightweight champion, made it clear, though, that if safety reforms are instituted he will quit the sport.

"If they put in headgear, I'll get out. If they pad the gloves, I might as well be an amateur. If they shorten the number of rounds, I might as well be an amateur."

He says he will not know his personal reaction until he climbs into a gymnasium ring.

"I'll know once there's a guy in the ring and he starts throwing back at me. I'm thinking there will be no problem, but I won't know until I spar," Mancini said Monday during a news conference in his attorney's office.

Mancini says he wants to continue fighting despite Kim's death from severe brain damage, the result of a 14th-round knockout by the 21-year-old puncher from Youngstown in Las Vegas, Nev.

Mancini, the holder of a 25-1 record with 20 knockouts, says the national televising of the Kim fight stirred more than the usual criticism.

"Boxing takes a black eye because there are two people in the ring trying to inflict punishment," he said. "It sounds barbaric. And at times it is very brutal. But that doesn't take away from the essence of the sport. As I see it, there's an art in it (boxing)."

Alarie Paces Duke Victory

DURHAM (AP) - Mark Alarie scored 18 points and Duke used superior quickness to defeat Appalachian State 73-57 in college basketball Monday night.

The Blue Devils, who started four freshmen, pushed their record to 2-0 behind the inside-outside combination of freshmen Alarie and point guard Johnny Dawkins, who had 11 points.

Jay Bilas, a 6-foot-8 forward, added 12 points for Duke as the Atlantic Coast Conference team found plenty of room inside against Appalachian's zone defense.

Duke raised its record to 2-0 while Appalachian played its opener.

After the Mountaineers of the Southern Conference pulled within 18-13 at 6:43 of the first half, the Blue Devils outscored them 18-5 to take a 40-23 intermission edge. Appalachian State never again got closer than 15 points.

Duke's man-to-man defense forced the Mountaineers into 11 first-half turnovers and a total of 18.

Appalachian State was led in scoring by 6-4 forward David Lawrence, who scored 15 of his 17 points in the second half.

Duke used every player on its squad except freshman Bill Jackman, who is temporarily sidelined with an injury to the base of his spine.

"I thought we played excellent basketball the first 20 minutes," said Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski. "Everybody we played in the first half played very hard."

Krzyzewski credited his man-to-man defense, particularly guards Dawkins and Tom Emma for disrupting Appalachian State's deliberate motion attack. He also said depth was a key.

"I think the fact that we could play a few more players really helped us and hurt Kevin (Cantwell's) team," Krzyzewski said.

Krzyzewski also praised the 6-8 Alarie, whose 9 rebounds gave Duke a 34-23 advantage.

"Alarie's always around the boards and I think everybody on the team has confidence that he can score when he gets the ball, and that's something we didn't have last year," Krzyzewski said. "It helps all of our players, and everybody on the other team knows it."

Life In The Convent Different For East Carolina's Lady Pirates

By MARK BRAND
Special To The Reflector
STATEN ISLAND, N.Y. -

Around the corner from Rocco's Deli, in the heart of New York's Staten Island in Annadale, stands the Thanksgiving Holiday home for East Carolina women's basketball team.

The Presentation Sister House has been ECU's home away-from-home when the Lady Pirates have journeyed north the past three seasons for their annual Turkey Day feast against Northeastern-based teams.

The main work of the sisters includes staffing Island schools, teaching CCD classes in the parishes and keeping house for 22 retired sisters.

But, the sisters who live and work at this House, which will be 100 years old in 1984, are never too busy to roll out the welcome mat for the team from down south.

Sister Kathy Hollywood, formation director and recruiter for the house, serves as host and number one fan for the Lady Pirates. Hollywood, a native of Staten Island, was ECU coach Cathy Andruzzi's assistant when the two coached at Wagner College.

Outside the Presentation House, there is a basketball goal that was erected a week after Sister Hollywood moved in - just to keep her there.

"We are quite happy to have the kids every year. I'll never forget the first time they came to our place," Sister Hollywood said. "They made themselves at home and even helped in the kitchen."

Granted, being in a convent for the first time, not to mention living in one for five days, could be a shocking experience for a group of Southern girls. But the atmosphere is not stuffy.

"We are conscious of the girls coming from the South," Hollywood said. "We are eager to give them the opportunity to experience the sisters and hopefully it would be a positive experience."

"We let them have Thanksgiving dinner with us," she added. "We share our values as dedicated women in the church."

Not only do the sisters share their values with the Lady Pirates, but they also remind them of their own.

"We hope they are organizing their own values," Hollywood said. "You can still enjoy life and have fun while being into what you're into, but not get caught up. All the way around it's a good experience."

The experience is nothing new for ECU All-American Mary Denkler, a four-year veteran of the House - she and some other East Carolina players stayed there one summer.

"I always attended Catholic schools all my life, so I really feel at home," Denkler said. "My first year on this trip we stayed in a hotel and ate Thanksgiving dinner in a restaurant. Here it is a lot better. We really talk to the sisters."

But for someone not of the Catholic faith, such as guard Fran Hooks, the experience serves as a persistent reminder.

"It makes you think and be thankful," Hooks said. "Everywhere you look there's pictures and statues of Jesus. I became aware of my values."

Added Hooks: "The sisters support us, too. Before our game Friday a sister said to me, 'I'll have to spend all day on my knees praying for you guys.'"

Even though dignity is maintained, there is still room for levity. Take for example Sister Concepts, the one the players call "E.T.," after the movie character. She is no larger than the movie character and she walks and talks exactly like the real E.T.

Or, take Sister Joseph, the portly breakfast cook.

"She's the one who can curse like a sailor if you go into HER kitchen and she doesn't want you there," ECU senior Caren Truske said.

Sister Joseph does add spice to a conversation. Upon entering a conversation Thursday night prior to ECU's game with Fairfield, she said she had lost five dollars.

She had not been robbed, but had lost the money while playing poker.

"I was calling about reserving a gym for practice," Sister Hollywood said, "and I could here he in the other room saying, 'give me three!' Sister Joseph and the 'Druzz get along great because they're both Italian.'"

Sister Joseph even predicted ECU's loss to Fairfield on Friday.

Sister Joseph said, "you don't have a chance. They're a bunch of Jesuits!"

Amid the levity, there still exists the realism of the poverty and crime of New York City. The trip to Fairfield took the Lady Pirates right through the Bronx. The crime just seems to be hanging there in the smog. The sisters keep their doors locked, but, paradoxically, not for safety reasons but to keep the senile sisters from wandering off down the street.

"Our doors have always been open," Sister Hollywood said. The House, located at Saint Michael's Church on West 34th Street in New York from 1945 to 1974, is now on property that was once Saint Michael's home. The Presentation brochure states the irony:

"The Lord of our life works in strange ways to bring us back to beginnings."

The poet T.S. Eliot said it another way:

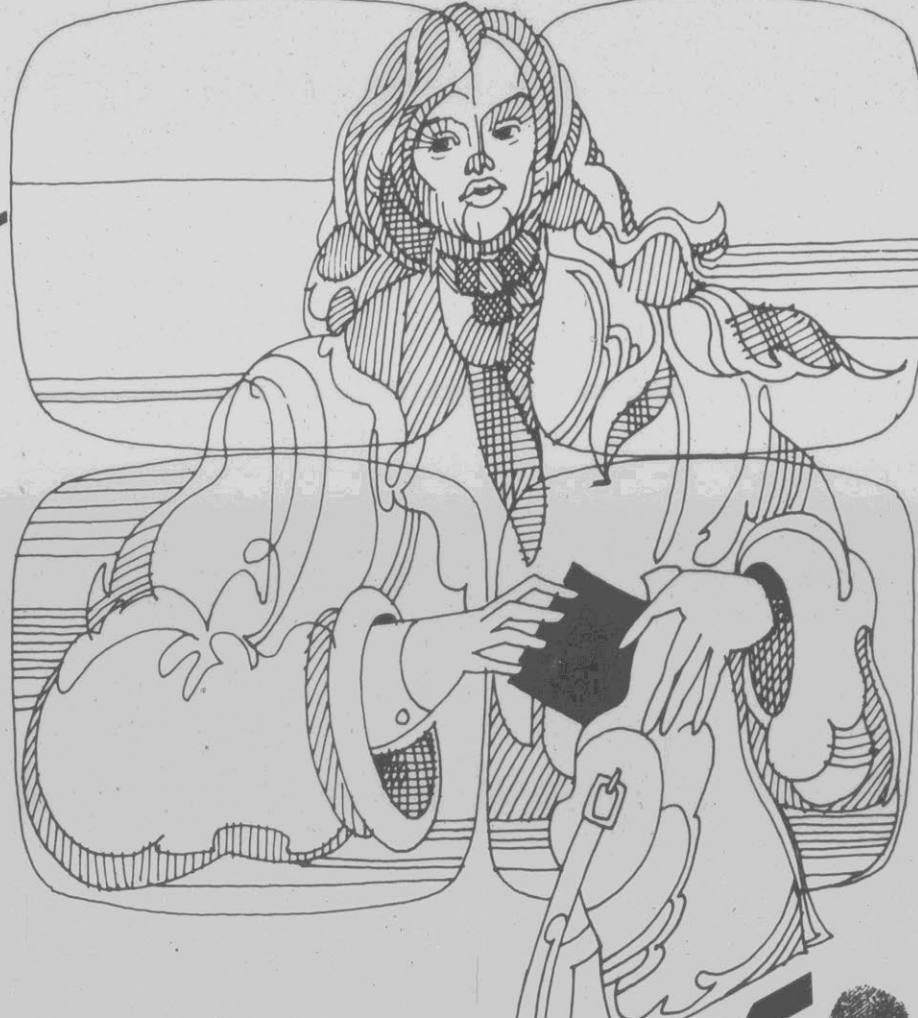

"We shall not cease from exploration

And the end of all our exploring

Will be to arrive where we started

And know the place for the first time."

Many of the Lady Pirates were spending Thanksgiving away from home for the first time, and experiencing it in a New York convent was certainly different. Now back home, perhaps they know the place for the first time.

SHOPLIFTING makes you a criminal!

And criminals do get caught!
Now the stores are wise to shoplifters, and have the manpower and sophisticated equipment to prove it. Closed circuit cameras, undercover people, specially treated tagging systems... are all used to successfully catch shoplifters. And the stores are taking legal actions! Shoplifters face even stiffer lines... even jail when they're caught. plus the humiliation of getting arrested, and a criminal record that could affect future schooling, jobs, credit rating, and the respect and trust of family and friends. Shoplifting... like any other crime... just doesn't pay!

Tampa Bay Gets Respect With Win

Tennis Program Set For Winter

Winter tennis programs sponsored by the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department will begin on Monday, Dec. 6.

There will be classes for adult advanced beginners on Mondays and Wednesdays, from 11 a.m. until 12 noon, and on Tuesdays and Thursdays at the same time. These classes are for those persons who have had formal instruction but still need to improve on the basic strokes.

There will also be an intermediate class on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 12 noon until 1 p.m. This class is for those persons with two to five years experience who are not yet tournament players.

There will be an advanced class on Wednesday from 10 to 11 a.m. This is for the tournament player.

There will be two sessions for all classes. The first will run December 6 through January 13, excluding De-

December 20-31, with the second running January 17 through February 10.

Also starting Monday there will be a junior winter workout for boys and girls grades 5-10. This will be a supervised practice with some instruction for those who want to keep their tennis sharp during the winter. Practice will be Monday and Wednesday from 4 to 5:15 p.m.

The Second annual New Year's Day Mixed Doubles Round Robin Tournament will be held December 31. Applications for this tournament may be obtained at the River Birch Tennis Center.

Registration for the classes and the junior workout may also be done this week between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

For more information, call the tennis center at 756-9343. There is a $4 registration fee for the classes.

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — The way Neal Colzie sees it, Tampa Bay gained respect and he evened a personal score during the Buccaneers' 23-17 National Football League victory over the Miami Dolphins.

"I hope people realize Tampa Bay is no pushover," Colzie said Monday night after the Bucs whipped the Dolphins for the first time in six meetings between the intrastate rivals. "I wanted to beat them bad, and we gave them a good old-fashioned beating."

The triumph, before a national television audience and Tampa Stadium crowd of 65,854, was the Bucs' first of the strike-shortened season and gave Tampa Bay NFL bragging rights in Florida.

And for Colzie, a Miami native and former Dolphin, it was a "personal victory" over his former teammates and Coach Don Shula, who saw his 3-1 Dolphins drop from the unbeaten ranks.

"I'm happy, I'm satisfied. It's a personal victory," said Colzie, who was a member of the Oakland Raiders when the club won its first world championship. "I'll trade that win for the Super Bowl we won in '77. In fact, I'd trade any Super Bowl victory to beat Don Shula."

Colzie, who signed with the Bucs as a free agent after Shula cut him during training camp in 1980, intercepted two fourth-quarter passes and returned one of them 51 yards to set up what turned out to be the winning touchdown.

James Wilder plowed into the end zone from 2 yards out to give Tampa Bay a 23-10 lead with 8:27 remaining. But the Bucs needed their fifth interception of the night — and fourth of Miami quarterback Don Strock — to stop the Dolphins' final threat.

Strock, who replaced an ineffective David Woodley at the start of the second half, directed two fourth-quarter scoring drives that kept Miami in the game. And, he had the Dolphins moving again when Mike Washington came up with his second interception as time expired.

"I made the switch at halftime hoping that we could get some things going under Strock and get some points on the board," said Shula. "We just haven't shown any rhythm in our offense, and we're having a tough time moving the ball consistently."

"This is two games in a row where we haven't done anything offensively," said Woodley. "It has to concern us a little bit."

"We're moving the ball but not scoring points. It's probably a mixture of things," he added. "Whatever it is, we'd better find out and correct them."

Tampa Bay built a 6-3 halftime lead on a pair of Bill Capesto field goals and hiked its advantage to 13-3 when quarterback Doug Williams ran 3 yards to complete a 7-play, 38-yard drive with 3:20 remaining in the third quarter.

Buc safety Cedric Brown picked off a Strock pass on Miami's next possession and returned it 24 yards to set up Capesto's third field goal of the game, a 36-yarder, for a 16-3 edge after three quarters.

That's when Strock got the Dolphins rolling, teaming with wide receiver Jimmy Cefalo on a 43-yard pass play that set up the first of two touchdown passes to reserve tight end Joe Rose.

Strock flipped a 7-yard scoring aerial to Rose to cut the Bucs' lead to 16-10 with 11:57 left to play and then rekindled Miami's hopes with an 11-yard strike to Rose that pulled Miami to within six points again with only 34 seconds left.

Dolphin Lyle Blackwood recovered an onside kick after it bounced off a Tampa Bay player at the Miami 47 and Strock moved the team to the Buc 40 before throwing the game-ending interception in the end zone.

"I was hoping it (victory) wasn't going to slip away," said Washington, who also intercepted a Woodley pass in the first half. "I've seen some strange things happen."

Christmas Musical By North Pitt's Students

Mike Coville as Charlie Brown. Two performances will be given at the school, at 8 p.m. on Thursday and again on Saturday. Tickets are $3 for adults, $1.50 for students.

Drama students at North Pitt High School are presenting "Snoopy!!!!" as their Christmas musical this year.

Performances will be given on two dates, on Thursday and again on Saturday. Curtain time both dates is 8 p.m. Tickets are $3 for adults, $1.50 for students. Children under five will be admitted free.

Cast members for the musical are Mike Coville as Charlie Brown; Curtis Moore as Linus; Sandy Braxton as Sally Brown; Lisa Ross as Lucy; Sheila Manning as Peppermint Patty; Marty Warren as Snoopy; and Rose Bell as Woodstock. Also in the cast as extras and technicians are Linda Davis, Asaer Rodgers and Marilyn Sutton.

Barbara Plummer is the director and accompanist for the production. Assistant directors are Barry Warren and Danny Dial. Sgt. John Relford assists the lighting crew.

"Snoopy!!!!" is the sequel to "You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown." Both plays are based on Charles Schultz's comic strip, "Peanuts." Music for "Snoopy!!!!" is by Larry Grossman, and lyrics are by Hal Hackaday.

Tonight: 'Something So Right'

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Sometimes in life — and always on G.E. Theater — things work out the way they're supposed to.

"Something So Right," this month's entry, is on CBS tonight, and it certainly won't disappoint viewers sitting around the family hearth, munching the family popcorn and cheering for the right ending.

It's the kind of heart-warming story, even more palatable around the holidays, that fits into General Electric's program-purchase philosophy of surrounding its commercials with the warm glow of human fellowship and accomplishment.

The company was sole sponsor of "Skyward," with Bette Davis as the spunky woman who inspired her paraplegic granddaughter to fly a plane. Last month, in "Two of a Kind," Robbie Benson was the retarded grandson. George Burns the depressed grandfather; together, they learned about dignity.

Next month, it's a repeat of "Bill," with Mickey Rooney playing a retarded man struggling for self-respect.

One welcome aspect of these productions is that their characters are not so wholesome or so beautiful that they romanticize life, rather than provide believable insights and clues into handling its harsher realities.

Another aspect is a reliance on odd couples who give lessons on the human need to be needed. Such is the case tonight, when a clownish bachelor befriends a boy in need of a surrogate dad.

Joey Bosnick, played by Ricky Schroder from "The Champ" and NBC's "Silver Spoons," isn't a bad kid. It's just that his parents are divorced, and he's acting out his anger in petty delinquency and truancy.

Joey lives with his working mother, Jeanne (Patty Duke Astin of ABC's "It Takes Two"). His father, an ex-football player played by Fred Dryer, himself a former star in the National Football League, rarely visits.

The school counselor recommends the Big Brother Organization to fill the masculine void. Jeanne resents the intrusion, but reluctantly agrees. Joey, who clings to the hero image of his absentee father, is a tougher sell. "I don't need a father," he says. "I already have one."

Joey's requirements of any prospective friend are that he knows sports, owns a boat and doesn't have bad breath. Of his own wishes, he lists being Luke Skywalker, learning to fly and being happy more of the time.

As would be expected, Joey gets a Big Brother who can't even catch a football. Arnie Potts is a balding, overweight nightclub owner who tells bad vaudeville jokes and lives alone. He says he picked Joey because he's always wanted to fly.

In an interesting piece of casting, James Farentino is perfect as Arnie, capturing the exterior immaturity and 78 RPM wise-cracking that cloaks an inner vulnerability, sweet sentimentality and, of course, a golden heart.

Farentino, the dashing doctor in ABC's "Dynasty," thinned his hair and added a pillowy paunch so that even his own mother didn't recognize him on the set.

Arnie teaches Joey about caring, responsibility and meaningful companionship, at the same time breaking down male stereotypes — Arnie cooks — and stimulating Joey to supplement his sports with a little reading.

It's a mutually beneficial relationship. Arnie learns to catch a ball and finds some love in his life — both from Joey and, quite predictably, Joey's mom.

The adult love, and the return of Joey's father, threaten the new-found brotherhood, but don't worry, this is "Something So Right." When a sob story is done well, you're not embarrassed about being mushy. In fact, it feels quite good.

'Miss Buxley' Gets Her Say

DETROIT (AP) — Miss Buxley, the scantily clad blonde secretary constantly ogled by a general in the comic strip "Beetle Bailey" has finally gotten her say.

The Detroit Free Press on Nov. 16 offered readers an opportunity to put words in Miss Buxley's mouth to show she has brains as well as beauty. The contest drew 1,000 responses.

The winning caption, published Monday, came from a reader who suggested that Miss Buxley began wearing eye-popping outfits 11 years ago to keep the cartoon character, Gen. Halftrack, away from home.

"His wife started paying me to dress this way in 1971, after he threatened to retire and spend more time with her," the bikini-clad Miss Buxley murmurs to a friend as the general walks past.

Beetle Bailey creator Mort Walker, commenting Monday on Miss Buxley's role, said: "I don't think people understand comic strips. They are symbolic and full of stereotypes. I've got a stereotype general, a stereotype private... I want everyone to know she's a sexy girl, so I put her in low-cut dresses as a symbol."

Hubcap Plans Lack Only Cash

CLEVELAND (AP) — If the self-styled queen of the hubcaps has her way, she'll become a big wheel in the furniture and accessories business.

Marilyn Pfleger figures she has a 40,000-hubcap inventory, "give or take a few thousand."

But Mrs. Pfleger said the prospect of just selling wheel covers lacked adventure. So she began creating hubcap fashions for beds, toilet seats, clocks and birdhouses.

The stainless steel bed, which has a price tag of $5,000, is festooned with hubcaps around the bottom and on the headboard. A nightstand with wheel cover motif is offered as an accessory.

The ideas aren't big sellers yet, but she blames that on a lack of capital.

"I've got all kinds of ideas," she said, "but I can't tell you about them. The only thing holding me back right now is money, and if I tell you my idea someone with money could go out and do it tomorrow."

TRADE PACT

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — In a major trade pact with its former African colony, Portugal has agreed to supply the Marxist government of Angola with petroleum technicians and hydroelectric technology in exchange for oil.

Graham Kerr Has New View Of Food

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — Graham Kerr, who tantalized television viewers with his recipes as "The Galloping Gourmet," is still talking about food — but not his former fattening delights.

Kerr now touts the virtues of health food and Christianity, prompting him to condemn his former medium.

"Television is like an open sewer flowing through our living rooms — that's why you don't see me on it very often anymore," Kerr said at a health-foods fair here Sunday.

Kerr, 48, spent a decade entertaining television audiences with his cooking and effusive personality. He radically changed his lifestyle after suffering partial paralysis in a car accident in the early 1970s.

He said he changed his eating habits while on a long sea voyage recommended by doctors.

At about the same time, he followed his wife, Treena, in becoming a devout Christian.

"I like to call myself a generic Christian," he said.

Kerr, who lives in Tacoma, Wash., advocates not only healthier food, but a less opulent standard of living.

"I was a consumer once, and now I'm a contributor," he said. He has cut his annual living expenses from $80,000 to $15,000, he said.

Kerr, who describes himself as a Scot "inadvertently born in London," directs the International Quality of Life Center. The center teaches and encourages people to live better for less and pass their savings on to the disadvantaged.

"We're suffering from over-consumption; they're suffering from under-consumption," he said.

They spent $2,700 to buy an 80-foot Christmas tree, had it trucked from Molalla, Ore., and plan to set it up in downtown Weatherford where it will be visible for miles in this rolling, western Oklahoma countryside.

A caravan of about 100 cars met the tree 20 miles north of town Sunday after it arrived following an 11-day journey.

Since buying the tree, the group has received at least $3,000 in contributions. The money was used to buy 500 strings of lights which local merchants sold at cost. Electricians have donated their time to decorate the tree.

Officials said the donation is to be applied toward the construction of a new campus Art Center. Chancellor William E. Moran, who announced the gift, said the money was given through the university's $12 million Prospectus III Campaign.

Will Meet For Checkers' Title

STONEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Jeff Webster, 16, of the Shiloh community near Stoneville, will compete against Temple, Texas' Jody Drago for the world championship of checkers Dec. 18-22.

The matches will take place at Stoneville High School and the Shiloh Volunteer Fire Department.

"My goal for this match is not to lose a game," said Webster.

It will be the first challenge to Webster's world title since he won it in England last December by defeating the British national champion, Andrew Knapp.

Any national champion could challenge him and Webster said he had expected his first challenge to come from a country where checkers is serious business, such as England.

Music Events Cancelled

Three December music events of the ECU School of Music have been cancelled.

The first is the contemporary jazz ensemble concert, originally scheduled for 8:15 p.m. Tuesday in the A.J. Fletcher Recital Hall.

The second event cancelled is the ECU Symphony Orchestra concert originally scheduled for 3:15 p.m. Sunday in Wright Auditorium.

The third event cancelled is the Trombone Choir and Jazz "Bones Concert, originally scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Dec. 7 at the A.J. Fletcher Recital Hall.

Reducing Class Shook Building

PENZANCE, England (AP) — A reducing class for overweight women that met on City Hall's second floor got off to a shaky start when the exercises "seriously overstressed" the building.

But things are back on a solid footing now that class is held in a ground-floor room.

"The building literally moved every time they were up there doing their exercises," said Desmond Hosken, secretary of the Penwith District Council. "We had to report it to the council."

A city engineer estimated the total weight of the 40-woman class at more than three tons.

Exclusionary Rule Protects Guilty, Say Critics

By TIMOTHY HARPER
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — When a crook is caught red-handed but goes free on a technicality it's often the "exclusionary rule" that gets blamed. Now the Supreme Court has promised a second look at the rule, criticized by prosecutors but praised by civil libertarians.

The high court agreed Monday to consider creating a "good faith" exception to the exclusionary rule, which says that evidence obtained illegally cannot be used in court.

Under the proposed exception, illegally obtained evidence could be used if authorities showed it was obtained in "good faith," or without intentional violation of the Constitution. That would drastically change the rule adopted by the Supreme Court in 1914 to prevent abuses by federal law enforcement officers. The rule was expanded to cover state and local police in 1961.

The exclusionary rule is based largely on Fourth Amendment prohibitions against unreasonable searches and seizures.

Police cannot search a home, stop a car or detain and question someone without probable cause to believe a crime has been committed. In the case of searching a home, police must almost always get a search warrant first.

The famous Miranda ruling of the 1960s is an example of how the exclusionary rule can also apply to the Fifth Amendment's protections against self-incrimination; because police did not inform a suspect of his constitutional right to remain silent, his subsequent confession was thrown out of court.

President Reagan, Attorney General William French Smith and other administration officials have called for changes in the rule. Several bills are pending in Congress to allow the "good faith" exception.

But only last June the high court refused to allow a "good faith" exception in an Alabama case.

"This rule rests on the absurd proposition that a law enforcement error, no matter how technical, can be used to justify throwing an entire case out of court no matter how guilty the defendant or how heinous the crime," Reagan said in a speech in New Orleans a year ago.

But the rule has its defenders.

"The exclusionary rule protects the innocent as well as the guilty. It means the ordinary citizen walking down the street will not be annoyed, harassed or humiliated by police," says William Greenhalgh, a Georgetown University law professor.

He and other public defenders and American Civil Liberties Union attorneys say the "good faith" exception would mean that any police officer could kick down any door and search both people and premises without paying any penalty.

A General Accounting Office study says the rule results in evidence being excluded in barely 1 percent of all criminal cases, and the Supreme Court has used the exclusionary rule to overturn convictions in only 70 cases in the last 20 years.

But there is little doubt that those 70 cases had a ripple effect, resulting in charges being dismissed or never even filed in hundreds of cases throughout the country.

Indeed, most lawyers now regard the suppression hearing — where they argue over what evidence was obtained illegally and must not be introduced — as more important than the trial itself. The outcome of a suppression hearing often makes a trial unnecessary.

For instance, if a confession or other key evidence is suppressed, charges are often dropped and the defendant set free. And if the evidence is ruled admissible, the defendant often realizes a trial is futile and tries to plead guilty to a lesser charge.

In the Illinois case the Supreme Court will decide in coming months, Lance and Susan Gates of Bloomington, Ill., were arrested by police who followed them to their home after getting an anonymous tip that the couple was transporting drugs.

Police stopped the couple in Bloomington as they drove back from Florida and found 350 pounds of marijuana in the trunk of their car.

The evidence was suppressed, however, on grounds the telephone tip was too vague and did not provide the "probable cause" required by the Constitution for a search and seizure.

Mayo, Trustee (now A. Louis Singleton, Substituted Trustee per Book X-49, Page 51) to secure the original indebtedness of $120,000.00 due The Federal Land Bank of Columbia, and recorded in Book J-43, Page 634, Pitt County Registry, foreclosed and offered for sale the land hereinafter described, AND WHEREAS, within the time allowed by law an advanced bid was filed with the Clerk of Superior Court and an Order under date of November 22, 1982, issued directing the Substituted Trustee to resell said land upon an opening bid of $286,700.00.
NOW THEREFORE, under and by virtue of said Order of the Clerk Superior Court of Pitt County, and the power of sale contained in said deed of trust, the undersigned Substituted Trustee will offer for sale upon said opening bid, at public auction, to the highest bidder in said deed of trust, the same lying and being in Pitt County, North Carolina, more particularly described as follows:
All of that certain tract of land containing 181.5 acres, more or less, known as 'Lot No. 2 of the Cobdale Farm' in Arthur Township, Pitt County, State of North Carolina, approximately 6 miles westwardly from the City of Greenville between Greenville and Bell Arthur, bounded north or formerly, North by the lands of Lang, Matthew Dail and Mingo; East by the Smith lands (now Smith and Carraway lands), South by the lands of Matthew Dail (Lot No. 1); and West by the run of Lightwood Knot Swamp, said tract of land, being more particularly described according to a plat of survey prepared by W. C. Dresbach and Son, C. E. and Surveyors during January of 1949 and designated thereon as Tract No. 2 of the Cobdale Farm (Matthew Dail and Troy Dail, deceased, owners) which plat recorded in Map Book 4, Page 87 of the Public Records of Pitt County is by reference incorporated herein as a part of this description.
This sale will be made subject to all ad valorem taxes or other assessments now due or which constitute a lien on the above described tract or parcel of land and the highest bidder at said sale will be required to deposit with said Trustee ten per cent (10%) of the amount of his bid to show his good faith.
This the 22nd day of November, 1982.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip - WAS FORMER CLERIC, NOW A TAILOR, STILL A MAN OF THE CLOTH?

Today's Cryptoquip clue: S equals I.

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Opening lead: Queen of ♠

Dear Charlie:

The North Americans have done exceedingly well at the World Bridge Olympiad here in Biarritz. First, George Mittleman and Diane Gordon of Canada won the Mixed Pairs title. Then the Open Pairs, after a scoring foul-up, went to West Coasters Chip Martel and Lew Stansby. The Women's Pairs was even more of a triumph. Carol Sanders, Nashville, Tenn., and Betty Ann Kennedy, Shreveport, La., took first place and, after a scoring correction, the silver medal was taken by Lynn Deas, Schenectady, N.Y., and Beth Palmer, Columbia, Md. This is the first time that one area has so completely dominated the pair events, and confirms my impression that Americans are the strongest duplicate players in the world.

Lynn Deas and Beth Palmer came up with a pretty defense on this deal from the finals to earn an excellent score. With only one ace and no king, West's hand was a doubtful opener, but duplicate buffs have become much more aggressive in recent years. North showed a strong hand by first doubling and then bidding her suit. When South rebid her suit freely, North went to game.

Deas led the top of her broken diamond sequence, and declarer carefully followed low from dummy. Palmer realized that her partner was marked with at least six diamonds by the auction, and that one diamond trick was the most that the defenders could hope for. She also saw that it was vital for her to gain the lead, for the only way the contract could be defeated was if the defenders could take two heart tricks in addition to the diamond.

And, since it was obvious that dummy's spades would provide at least two discards, the defenders needed those tricks quickly. So, East rose with the ace of diamonds at trick one, setting up the king as a trick for the declarer, and shifted to a heart. The defenders quickly reeled in two tricks in the suit for a one trick set.

I tell you, these young girls are certainly no powder puffs.

Sincerely,
 Omar

Blip, blip! Beep, beep! KABOOM!

It's the first big holiday shopping week, and if you're seeing words like "Centipede" and "Utopia" on "wish lists" this year, don't be fooled into thinking you might have a budding entomologist or political scientist in the family. It's more likely that the home video game craze has struck your family. The thanks (or the blame) goes to modern technology which has taken video games out of the arcades and put them on home TV screens. Now video addicts - or "vidiot" can play "Frogger," and "Pac-Man," or battle the bug-eyed monsters of "Space Invaders" and "The Communist Mutants from Outer Space" in the safety of their own living rooms. Just imagine - now you can save the universe without even going outside.

Building Plant In Rocky Mount

ROCKY MOUNT, N.C. (AP) - Bendix Corp. will break ground Friday for a $25 million facility that will make jet aircraft components.

The 100,000-square-foot assembly and test plant will make fuel systems for Air Force F-15 and F-16 fighter planes, said W.H. Rose, director of the Nash County Industrial Development Commission.

The facility is scheduled to open late 1983 with about 50 employees, with the payroll to expand to 250.

Consumers Council To Push Food Tax Repeal

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) - The N.C. Consumers Council will push for legislation next year to repeal the state's 3 percent food tax, possibly replacing it by increasing taxes on income, alcoholic beverages and personal property.

Council President Jane Sharp says the council is pushing for repeal of the food tax because the tax becomes even more burdensome to the poor and unemployed during a recession. She says the council has always taken the position that the food tax is a burden on the underprivileged.

"We've known for years that the tax is regressive, that it hurts low-income people," she said in a telephone interview Monday. "But the situation is especially bad now. This is the year when many unemployment benefits will run out, and just buying enough food to live on will be hard."

The council has decided to lobby the General Assembly to repeal the 3 percent tax over a four-year period, she said. The tax would be reduced by 1 percent a year for three years, while the local-option one percent tax would be repealed in the fourth year.

She says the gradual elimination of food levies has "There is no reason it can't be done here," she said. "With today's terribly high prices and low incomes, the food tax is the worst tax in the land. Anyone who thinks the food tax isn't an abomination is out of touch with the current economic picture."

Under the plan, lost state revenues would be made up by increases in other taxes, such as those on income, alcoholic beverages, new cars, boats and airplanes.

Ms. Sharp said those taxes were mentioned by state legislators in a council-sponsored survey on the food tax. She said lawmakers also suggested increasing taxes on corporations and machinery, taxing cigarettes without the 15 percent discount on tax stamps, and taxing services.
