Futrell Leaves ECU Post

By STUART SAVAGE

Ashley Futrell, a trustee of East Carolina University since 1969, resigned as chairman Saturday "for personal reasons." He was succeeded by C. Ralph Kinsey Jr. of Charlotte, who had been vice chairman.

Futrell, who was elected trustee chairman August 1981 and was re-elected in August of this year, will continue as a member of the board until his term expires June 30, 1983.

He underwent heart surgery last July, coinciding with a brief effort to have him replaced as chairman, but Futrell told the board Saturday health was not involved in his decision to resign. He did not cite publicly a specific reason for his resignation.

"It has been my distinct privilege to enjoy a long and pleasant association with this institution," he told the board.

"Back in 1964, I announced my candidacy for the N.C. state Senate." In the campaign, Futrell said, "I said often that our destiny and our future were inevitably tied to the progress and service of East Carolina College, and I felt we must seek and nurture closer ties with this institution. It did not seem to be much of a political issue, and it really was not. But our people began to think more in terms of East Carolina College."

Following his election, Futrell said, "We immediately faced the nursing school issue" in the General Assembly, "then there were the two-year and the four-year medical schools to be fought for ... and it was a fight all the way, but I found inspiration in that search for greatness for this institution.

"In between came the fight for university status," Futrell said, "and I guess I was the scorekeeper on this. I was deeply saddened when we realized we did not have enough votes for East Carolina College alone (the General Assembly voted to give all state-supported colleges university status). We accepted and let me say proudly that I was in the midst of every legislative fight for this institution."

Futrell was appointed to the ECU board in 1969 by then Gov. Bob Scott.

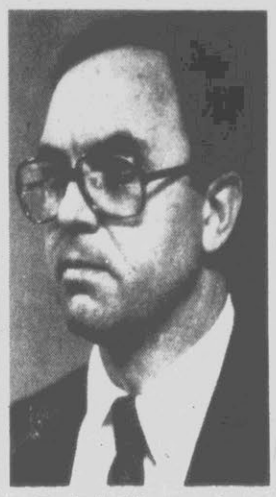

"Now, as I look back over almost 14 years, there have been ups and downs, many happy moments and some trying ones, but there have been few

"The future of East Carolina University is important to all of us. If we must fight for recognition, then let us be ready to do battle. The greatness we see ahead will only be stilled by a lack of greatness in the hearts of those in command. Alarms Send Fire Trucks Rolling

'We Know This Thing Is Working'

By MELVIN LANG
Reflector Staff Writer

A wisp of smoke from a cigarette, a blast of wind through an open window or a level change on a telephone line can send Greenville's fire department on an emergency response to Pitt County Memorial Hospital or University Towers, a public housing facility.

Any of those isolated events can trigger automatic alarms at the hospital or the apartment building. It is not an infrequent occurrence at either facility.

Each time one of the alarms goes off, it brings a response from the city fire-rescue department — a chief's car, two pumpers, a snorkle truck and a rescue truck. So far they have not been needed on any of the dozens of responses the department has made to the hospital and University Tower during the last two years.

Fire-Rescue Chief Jenness Allen said his department has responded to a "half-dozen" or so alarms at University Towers in the last two weeks. Three of those calls were on the same night.

"We don't get overly concerned about it because the system is doing its job." Allen said. "When it does this, at least we know this thing is working."

Joe Laney, director of the Greenville Housing Authority, said most of the recent calls to University

After 49 Years, Bloom Says It's New Ball Game

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

On Jan. 1 District Attorney Eli Bloom, the man with the longest tenure as a prosecutor in North Carolina — 49 years, will be unemployed.

Bloom, who decided not to seek re-election, said last week that he will take the month of January off, then begin work in the field of public relations as a volunteer at Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

A native of Weldon, Bloom graduated from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill in 1927, then moved to Greenville where he and his wife operated a ladies clothing store until he received his law license in 1932 and began practicing with the late Jack Spain.

A year later, in 1933, Bloom began his career as a prosecutor in the Ayden and Grifton municipal courts. The following year he became prosecutor in the old Greenville municipal court, a post he held until the General Assembly created the District Court system.

Bloom became district attorney 11 years and 10 months ago when the district attorney system was established.

Bloom described the difference between the old municipal Recorders' Court system and the present District Court system as "just like going in a mule and wagon, then transferring to an airplane."

"It's a different ball game today," Bloom said, because of "the Miranda warning" and other steps to protect the rights of the accused. "The different rights people have (today) didn't exist at that time."

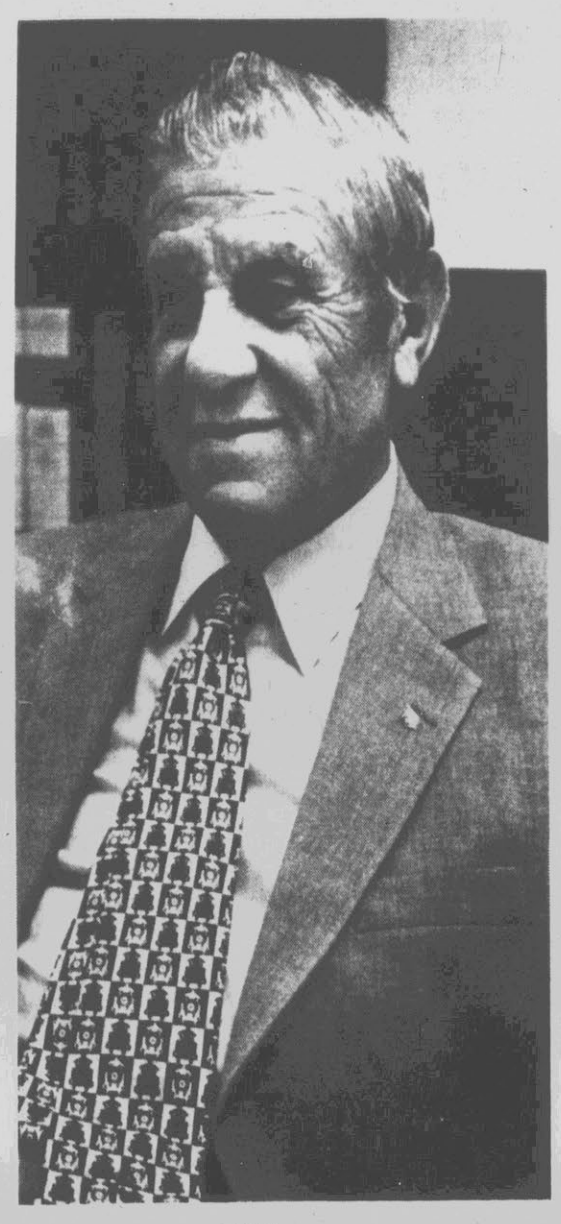

The veteran prosecutor also cited such things as the establishment of the state's public defender system and speedy trial-fair sentencing legislation as major changes in the criminal justice system in the past few years.

Now, Bloom said, the state "has to let the defendant's attorney know everything you know" before trial. "You can't have a surprise witness."

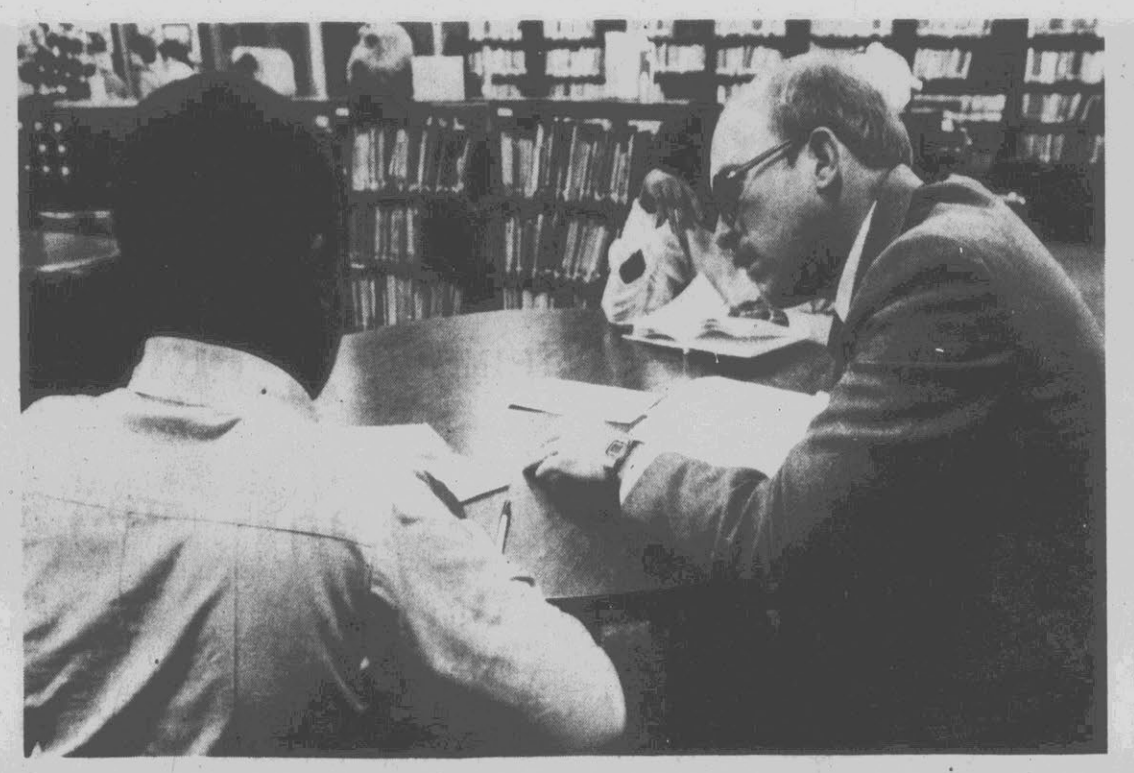

Bloom seemed reluctant to talk of past cases. "There's been so many of them. It's bound to be in the tens of thousands."

But he cited the "Connie Branch case (in Pitt County) and the Pearson Willis case in Carteret County ... both were murder-for-hire cases, and the Doss case (in Pitt County

Adopt-A-School Offers Volunteers Chance To Share

By MARY SCHULKEN

Adoption, according to the American College Dictionary, means to "take as one's own" and 94 organizations or businesses have entered into that relationship recently with the schools in Pitt County.

The Adopt-A -School program is just one of the volunteer programs in Pitt County's schools, said Carol Barwick, Community Schools volunteer coordinator for the county, but it is one that she feels is special because it emphasizes community involvement and sharing time rather than money.

"Adopt-A-School stresses human involvement versus financial involvement," said Ms. Barwick. "It also stresses the group approach to volunteering rather than the individual approach.

"It's aim is to involve large numbers of people versus one or two people," she added.

In the program, schools are adopted by local interested groups and citizens who are, said Ms. Barwick, "willing to give of themselves and their time to enrich the educational experiences of our students."

Groups who adopt can, for example, provide resource persons for the school, sponsor clubs, assist with building and

Braswell Case Goes To Grand Jury

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

A District Court judge has found probable cause to send the first degree murder case against Pitt Sheriff's Deputy Billy Braswell to the grand jury.

Judge H. Horton Rountree conducted a probable cause hearing here Friday and found cause to remand the case to the grand jury for bill of indictment consideration.

Rountree ruled that bond for Braswell, who is charged with the Sept. 27 murder of his wife, Lillie, near Farmville, will stand at $100,000. Braswell was released on bond Tuesday and was discharged from Pitt County Memorial Hospital where he underwent over two months of treatment for gunshot wounds to his chest.

During Friday afternoon's hearing, Milton Howell of Farmville testified that he and his wife saw a man he identified as Braswell sitting in a car with a woman as Howell drove near the intersection of Chinquapin Road and U.S. 264 Alternate the morning of Sept. 27.

Howell testified that he and his wife heard what they thought was a car backfiring and as they drove by Braswell's vehicle "a lady turned around like she was getting out the car and never got back up."

The witness said he stopped his vehicle and saw a woman lying face down beside the car. Howell said he told his wife he thought that Braswell had "evidently pulled a drunken driver and she fell out of the car."

Howell, who said he had never seen Lillie Braswell, told the court that he drove off and proceeded to work. He said he later talked to authorities about what he and his wife had observed.

Howell testified that he saw two cars parked off the road near the intersection. He said the two individuals were seated in what he described as a silver-colored unmarked car parked behind a blue vehicle.

Deputy Sheriff Wayne Nobles testified that he was summoned to the scene and recognized the dead woman

Alarm ...

Towers were traceable to a defective alarm, which was replaced early last week.

The corrective action, however, did not stop the alarms — firemen were back at the apartment building Thursday after a momentary power interruption triggered one of the 25 or more smoke alarms in University Towers.

"We are satisfied with the system," Laney said. He added, however, that annual checks will be made on the alarm system in the apartments, which opened in August 1980 and provide housing for about 60 people.

"The smoke detectors meet federal specifications," Laney said. "If you blow smoke into them, they'll go off — and we have some heavy smokers over there."

Nelson Hester of Telecommunications, which maintains the alarms in University Towers, said a major problem in the past has been breezes that flow through the halls of the building.

"They don't have central air and they leave the windows open at each end of the hallway. That creates a wind tunnel. These alarms won't take a whole lot of wind without going off," Hester said.

Jack Richardson, director of the hospital, said the automatic alarm system — which sets off an alarm at the fire station — is required by law. "When you've got people in bed, you have to take more precautions," Richardson said.

"It'll go off for what we consider a minor thing," he added. "You hate to cry wolf but you have to take these precautions."

as Lillie Braswell. Nobles said that he and other officers went to Braswell's home in Farmville and found the deputy in a reclining chair in the living room of the dwelling. He said Braswell was "very pale and white" and had what he observed to be two bullet wounds in his chest.

Nobles testified that the Farmville rescue unit was summoned and Braswell was transported to Pitt Memorial.

Dennis Honeycutt, who said he operates the mobile crime lab for the State Bureau of Investigation, testified that he found a chrome-plated Colt revolver in the front seat of Braswell's patrol vehicle, which was parked at Braswell's house.

Nobles testified that he saw two weapons, one in Braswell's car and a second weapon on the living room floor beside the recliner.

Braswell did not attend Friday's hearing and was represented in court by attorneys David T. Greer and Cherry Stokes.

Don Stevens from the N.C. attorney general's office in Raleigh represented the state at Friday's hearing.

dull ones. I was honored to serve as vice chairman under both Roddy Jones and Troy Pate. And I hope they know that I tried to give both of them my fullest measure of help and support.

"Since boarding the Pirate ship in 1969, my loyalties, my dedication, my energies and yes, my small worldly contributions, have been directed toward East Carolina University."

According to Futrell, "The future of East Carolina University is important to all of us. If we must fight for recognition, then let us be ready to do battle. The greatness we see ahead will only be stilled by a lack of greatness in the hearts of those in command. As you bleed purple and sweat gold, let each drop be an element of challenge and not a token of accomplishment. May you serve living humanity.

"For personal reasons," Futrell said, "I now offer my resignation as chairman of this board of trustees. Thank you each, along with a score of other trustees, for the many kindnesses shown me over the years."

The board then voted to accept Futrell's resignation, "with deep appreciation ... for his many years of service.

Speaking as the new chairman, Kinsey said, "Since Robert Morgan joined this board approximately 25 years ago, and served for 15 years, no person has served as a trustee as long as Ashley Futrell."

Saying Futrell "has served with great distinction," Kinsey said "He has filled the positions of vice chairman and chairman in some of the most significant times in the history of the university, in terms of growth and program expansion and change. His wisdom has been a steadying influence for these many years."

Kinsey said Futrell "has dedicated himself to improvement in every major area of this university ... a devoted missionary and spokesman for this univeristy and its mission to serve the people."

After adopting a resolution expressing its "deep gratitude" to Futrell, trustees then elected James H. Maynard as the new vice chairman.

Kinsey, a Charlotte attorney, graduated from East Carolina University in 1964, with an A.B. degree in business administration, and received his law degree from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill in 1967.

He first served on the ECU board in 1972 and 1973, then was appointed by Gov. Jim Hunt in 1978. He will be eligible for reappointment when his present term expires June 30, 1983.

Maynard, a Raleigh resident, is president and chairman of the board of Golden Corral Corp., which develops and operates family steak houses throughout the South. He graduated from East Carolina in 1965 with an A.B. degree in psychology. His term as a trustee will expire June 30, 1985.

Futrell, a Rich Square native and graduate of Duke University in 1933, is now editor and publisher of the Washington (N.C.) Daily News. He served three terms in the North Carolina Senate, begining in 1965, is a past president of the N.C. Press Association, and has served as a member of the State Democratic Executive Committee and the N.C. Court Reform Commission.

In other business Saturday trustees recommended, subject to the approval of the University of North Carolina Board of Governors, changing the name of the ECU School of Allied Health and Social Professions to the school of allied health and social work; voted approval for the expenditure of $170,000 for repairs to the roof of Garrett residence hall, and heard a number of staff reports.

several years ago) where a young boy was stabbed to death by an escaped convict," as memorable ones.

Other things have changed, too. Bloom said when he began his career as a prosecutor, he was paid $25 a month. That was increased to $50 a month his first year in Greenville.

For some 10 years, until Oct. 1, 1981, when the district was split, Bloom and his staff of eight assistants handled cases in Pitt, Craven, Carteret and Jones counties. Since that time, Bloom, with a staff of four assistant DAs, one administrative assistant, one secretary and an intern from East Carolina University, has handled only Pitt County cases.

While prosecuting in "Superior Court is more of a challenge," Bloom said he "enjoyed all of them."

"I've trained 19 assistants" as district attorney, Bloom noted with some pride. "Three of them are now judges and two are district attorneys."

"All the assistants I've had gave me a retirement party Thursday night, and gave me a wrist watch," Bloom noted. "All but two were there ... one was out of state and the other was at a public defender's conference."

"I'm leaving my office in good hands," Bloom said, referring to Tom Haigwood, who will become district attorney after 10 years as Bloom's assistant.

Schools ...

grounds projects, provide individual volunteers or allow student internships.

"There are many more possibilities," said Ms. Barwick. "It's a program anyone can be involved in since it doesn't take dollars and cents to do it."

Many businesses who have adopted schools, said Ms. Barwick, allow employees to go to schools during business hours to work with students.

Ty Hart, for example, tutored students at A.G. Cox School in Winterville last year and will again this year. His employer, Carolina Telephone and Telegraph, adopted A.G. Cox and lets Hart leave work the hours he's needed at the school.

Hart has children at Cox, but says that's not his primary reason for volunteering for the program.

"It gives me a sense of belonging to the community," said Hart. "I enjoy the kids and I feel as though I'm doing something that's helping."

Volunteering in the Adopt-A-School program, he said, has kept him in touch with the school.

Every school in Pitt County is adopted, said Ms. Barwick, and some have numerous adopters.

"The number of adopters is not important, though," she said. "One of our goals is to create a greater sense of community and in Falkland, for example, the Falkland Ruritans adopted the school and brought people into the schools who had not been involved in a very long time.

"They were Falkland's only adopters last year," she added.

One of the benefits of the program, said Ms. Barwick, is that volunteers often motivate the hard-to-reach students.

"The people in the community can motivate in some instances when the teacher cannot," she explained. "The kids often can't see the relevance of school to their life and when they see farmers and merchants, etc. coming into the classroom it can get them turned on."

Most of all, Ms. Barwick said, the program sets an example for the students.

"Hopefully these volunteers will serve as a role models and the kids will return to others in a few years the hours they've been given through the program."

U.S. Tells Japan Trade Barriers Are Possible

TOKYO (UPI) — A ranking American trade official bluntly warned Japan Saturday the United States might erect trade barriers unless American goods were soon given greater access to Japanese markets.

Deputy U.S. Trade Representative David McDonald, who had warned earlier this week the United States could impose time-consuming lot inspections on Japanese auto imports, said Saturday his statement "was an appeal to the basic sense of fairness of the Japanese people."

"They cannot expect us to be discriminated against in favor of their own domestic producers while they enjoy benefits in our market," McDonald said at a news conference following a fourth round of Japan-U.S. trade talks.

"It's a situation which simply cannot continue," he said. "Something is going to give there one way or the other."

The U.S. trade team has set "a number of definite time limits (for Japanese response) on different proposals," McDonald said.

"I do believe they will respond to us (within the time limits imposed)," he said. "We did advise them that we consider an indefinite response a negative response."

McDonald did not disclose details on the American timetable, but indicated that the deadlines fell at the end of this month and in the early part of January.

The American demands concern the relaxation or elimination of quotas and tariffs affecting the import of beef, citrus fruits, tobacco, metal baseball bats and other items.

"The American position in respect to beef and citrus is that there should be a phased liberalization" of import quotas, McDonald said.

He acknowledged that political considerations made the issue a thorny one for the Japanese but added that easing beef and citrus quotas "is not as politically impossible as it is sometimes made out to be."

On the baseball bats, McDonald said talks with Japan's Ministry of International Trade and Industry (MITI) has produced progress toward a new agreement.

"Essentially, we think the Japanese government should offer our (baseball bat) manufacturers the same privileges that we offer Japanese manufacturers," McDonald said.

Heart Patient Has Surgery

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Barney Clark underwent surgery Saturday evening to correct a complication following a pioneering transplant operation in which his diseased heart was replaced with a softly whirring mechanical device.

Clark, who had been taken off the critical list earlier in the day, was returned to the operating room at University of Utah Medical Center after several air sacs in his lungs were found to have ruptured and leaked air into his chest wall.

The complication was not linked to the artificial heart, which was working perfectly, Dr. Chase Peterson said.

Dr. William DeVries, who headed the surgical team which implanted the artificial heart, reopened Clark's chest Saturday and saw the lungs bubbling, said Peterson, university vice president of health services.

After about an hour's surgery, doctors were satisfied that they had corrected the problem.

Clark, 61, has a history of chronic, mild emphysema not related to his cardiomyopathy heart disease and a "stiff lung" due to age, Peterson said.

When Clark was on a respirator during and after his heart surgery, his lungs received more air than usual and this, combined with the stiffness, led to the ruptures, he said.

DeVries corrected three or four ruptured sacs and three or four others were considered minor enough to be left to heal themselves, Peterson said. A chest tube was inserted to remove any air that may still leak until the sacs heal.

Clark's condition remained serious following Saturday's surgery, said spokesman John Dwan.

Peterson said that Clark is aware he most likely will eventually die of complications from the artificial heart, but "We hope it will be five or 10 years."

"I just want to thank everybody who has had anything to do with this," Clark's wife, Una Loy, told reporters earlier Saturday. "I'm very grateful."

She recalled what her husband told her before the operation to implant the Jarvik-7 artificial heart, invented by Dr. Robert Jarvik.

"He said, 'Just in case I don't see you again, I want you to know you've beeen a darned good wife.'"

Later, after the surgery, she told him that she loved him.

"He put his hand on his chest," she said. "I said, 'You're trying to tell us you love us?' and he nodded.

"I said, 'I'm so grateful. I thought maybe since you have an artificial heart, you might not still love us.'"

Clark's son, Dr. Stephen Clark, said his father was "beginning to act himself this morning."

"We're all beginning to see that light in his eye that will sustain him," said the younger Clark, a surgeon. "We're certainly more hopeful now than a few days ago.

Last Monday, Clark and his wife had quietly boarded a commercial flight from Seattle to Salt Lake City, his heart rapidly drawing life from his fatigued body.

He received a polyurethane heart in a seven-hour operation that began ahead of schedule late Wednesday as his condition worsened. Now, doctors say, the device is returning the rest of his organs to normal by increasing the blood flow to them.

Peterson said earlier Saturday that doctors had increased Clark's heart rate from 85 to 90 beats per minute, that his temperature was 98.9 degrees — slightly above the normal of 98.6 — and that his blood pressure was an acceptable 124 over 60.

The mechanical pump is putting out 7.2 liters of blood per minute, in the normal range. Clark's ailing natural heart was pumping only one liter of blood per minute before surgery, Peterson said.

For Clark and his wife, the Jarvik-7 heart that was his last hope for life will mean drastic changes.

The mechanical heart, the first to be implanted permanently in a human, is tethered by six-foot hoses to a 375-pound console holding the air compressor that drives it.

Doctors hope Clark will be strong enough to push the wheeled unit, but its bulk and a four-hour limit on its ability to power the heart without an electrical outlet preclude all but brief trips from home.

And always present, doctors say, is the danger of unknown and possibly debilitating complications.

Despite the dangers, "he had absolutely no ambivalence of feeling over what he was going to do," said Margaret Miller, the medical center social worker assigned to the case. "They're very anxious that they say everything that will be supportive of this project."

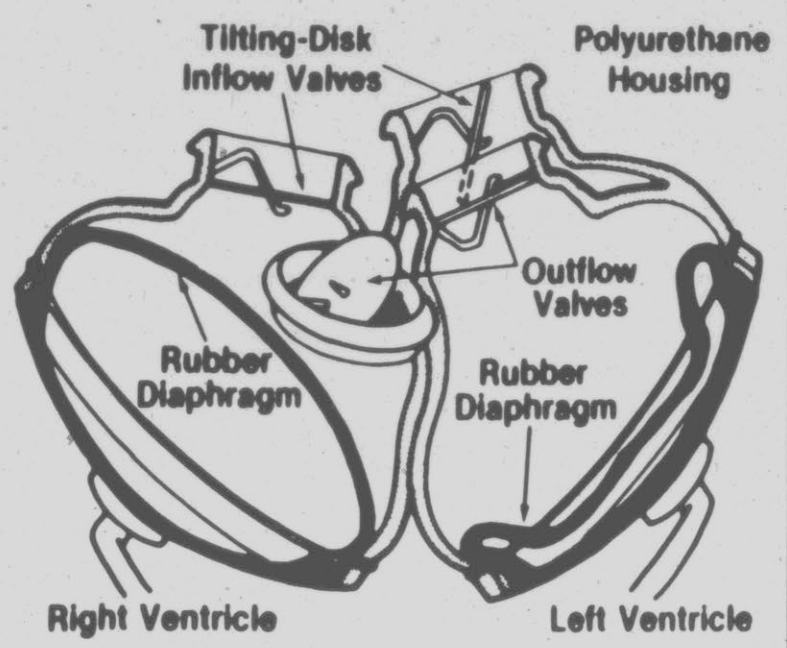

Clark, of suburban Seattle, led an active life until he was diagnosed three years ago as having cardiomyopathy, a degenerative heart disease.

Clark accepted the diagnosis of his disease courageously and continued to live as actively as possible, relatives said. His heart deteriorated rapidly, finally leaving him with no medical recourse other than the artificial heart, said DeVries. Clark was not a candidate for a heart transplant because of his age.

The 11-page consent form Clark signed made no guarantees. Indeed, it warned that the operation could shorten his life.

Israeli Officials Blast U.S. Opposition To Aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — Philip Habib, President Reagan's chief Middle East peace negotiator, is being recalled to Washington for consultations next week, the State Department said Saturday.

The decision to bring Habib home comes at a time of worsening U.S. relations with Israel. Key Israeli officials complained that the Reagan administration committed an "unfriendly act" by opposing a proposed increase in aid in Congress.

Susan Pittman, a State Department spokeswoman, said Ambassador Morris Draper, Habib's principal associate in U.S. efforts to set Reagan's Middle East peace inititive in motion, also is returning to Washington for the discussions.

Although there was no announced connection, the decision to bring Habib and Draper to Washington was made known shortly after Israeli Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir criticized the administration in a radio interview.

Shamir said he believes the administration's opposition to a $475 million boost in assistance proposed by the Senate Appropriations Committee was inspired by "President Reagan's wish to influence the Arabs to accept the Reagan (Mideast peace) plan" which Israel has rejected.

"I emphasize, the things which were said, and the explanation ... are more important than the opposition itself," he said. "What was said by representatives of the State Department was unfriendly to Israel."

The State Department on Friday said that President Reagan believes any increase in the proposed $2.4 billion in aid for Israel for the current fiscal year would be "excessive."

"Indeed, any increase could imperil the strenuous effort we are making to find a settlement in Lebanon and to make progress in the broader peace effort," said Alan Romberg, the department's deputy spokesman.

Romberg said earlier in the week that approval of the increase could be misinterpreted.

Deputy Secretary of State Kenneth Dam told members of Congress that approval "would leave America in a precarious position" and "sharply increase the difficulty of drawing into the larger peace process those whose participation is essential to progress."

"We are not contributing to Israel's security by making peace more remote," Dam said.

Floods Strike Mississippi Valley

By ANDY O'CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

Floodwaters from a third day of rain in the Mississippi River Valley weakened dams and forced evacuations from isolated towns Saturday, while Christmas shoppers from Baltimore to Boston strolled in a record-breaking heat wave.

The mayor of Kenner, La., asked motorists to stay off the streets Saturday to avoid sloshing floodwaters into homes, and the Coast Guard used boats to rescue families stranded in an Arkansas delta.

The entire state of Alabama was under a flash flood watch and thunderstorms were rolling in. Hundreds of people were evacuated in Missouri, Louisiana and Arkansas, where water was 15 feet deep in the town of Clinton.

Tornadoes and torrential rains in the Mississippi Valley killed 14 people last week, and some states expected their troubles to get worse. The National Weather Service said more Arkansas rivers would reach flood stage in the next few days.

"It's going to rain all weekend," said weather service meteorologist Bill Wipfler in St. Louis.

The heat wave put off the first day of the ski season until another weekend at two ski areas, and coaxed New Yorkers out into the streets in their shirt sleeves.

Baltimore's 74-degree weather broke a 109-year-old temperature record for the date of 73 degrees.

The temperature hit 68 degrees Saturday in Concord, N.H., breaking the 63-degree record set for the date in 1941. The 68-degree heat in Windsor Locks, Conn., made Saturday the hottest December day on record in Connecticut, passing by one degree the record set Dec. 10, 1946. In Boston, which was buried under a blizzard Dec. 6, 1981, the mercury hit 64 degrees, breaking the 63-degree record for the date set in 1950.

Hunter ski area in the Catskill Mountains of New York had planned to make Saturday the beginning of ski season, but the heat melted 3 inches of snow off the trails. Seven Springs ski resort in Pennsylvania's Somerset County said the weather quashed the season opening there too.

Although most of the floodwaters had receded by Saturday in the central Arkansas town of Clinton, the 1,284 residents still had no drinking water, electricity or telephone service. Authorities were driving in medication to people in need because the drug stores were under water, officials said.

One 65-year-old man drove into the floodwater of the Little Red River there and was washed away and drowned.

About 350 people were being evacuated Saturday in trucks from the flood-surrounded town of Portia in northeast Arkansas, state police trooper Charles Harper said.

Harper said the Coast Guard was using three boats to rescue families stranded in the farm delta north of Portia.

Flooding and dams weakened by rain-swollen lakes forced evacuations Friday in the Missouri towns of Piedmont and Rolla, and volunteer firefighters took about 30 senior citizens from an apartment complex in Marthasville after a nearby creek flooded.

Acreage Cuts Cause Agony For Farmers

The tobacco growing industry was hit with another blow as the flue-cured tobacco quota was cut 10 percent by Secretary of Agriculture John R. Block.

The cut was not very palatable to tobacco growers and everyone else connected with the production of tobacco.

Growers would have preferred a reduction in the support prices for next year, but this would have required additional action by Congress and posed further risk of the outright abolishment of the program.

Tobacco experts fear the reduction will reduce profits, force more farmers to lease tobacco allotments and send the leasing costs, which are already high, skyrocketing.

T.C. Blalock, executive secretary of the Tobacco Growers Association of North Carolina, said the cuts could have far-reaching effects in our state. He said it could affect "furniture stores, the automobile dealers, everybody."

N.C. Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham said, "They cut through the hide on this one."

U.S. Agriculture Secretary did allow Flue-Cured Stabilization Corp. to sell excess tobacco directly to foreign nations. This was seen by some as helping the situation.

The cut in acreage was not desirable at this point and certainly a freeze in support prices would be a better answer to tobacco's problems. There seems to be no way around it, given the current law on the tobacco program, however. And any further attempts to change the law could result in still more woes for the tobacco farmer.

Drama

NEW YORK (AP) — A kind of economic suspense is building with the start of Christmas shopping, and it is more than the children wondering how generous Santa will be.

This year all economists' eyes are on holiday retail sales because many experts believe the results will show clearly whether consumers are ready and willing to spend more freely — and thereby help lead the economy out of recession.

Here are some questions and answers to help explain why the holiday sales performance is considered more critical to the economy this year than in the past:

Q. How are Christmas sales so far?

A. An Associated Press spot check last Friday, which usually is the busiest shopping day of the year, showed a heavy turnout of shoppers in most parts of the country. Retailers were optimistic that sales would surpass, at least modestly, last year's results, but they also said they did not expect a buying boom. Shoppers said they were looking harder than usual for practical gifts — and for bargain prices.

Q. Interest rates are lower now than last Christmas. Doesn't that mean people will spend more?

A. Some interest rates are lower than a year ago, but consumers have benefitted less from the decline than businesses have. The prime lending rate, which a bank quotes for a short-term business loan, is 11.5 percent compared with 16 percent a year ago. But consumers have not been so fortunate. Credit card interest rates, for example, generally are as high as a year ago. And while some consumer rates, such as those on home mortgages, have fallen, the rate on credit card purchases more directly affects retail sales.

Q. Why are economists looking at Christmas sales for signs of economic recovery?

A. In the U.S. economy, clues are crucial. And while the government's gauge of future economic activity, called the Index of Leading Indicators, has been pointing toward recovery in recent months, the evidence has been missing. The nation's industrial output has continued to fall and businesses are still cutting back on payrolls as well as major spending projects. As often occurs, that leaves the consumer to lead the way to recovery.

Q. What's holding consumers back?

A. At first glance, it would seem that people might be more than willing to spend more freely. Inflation is down to about a 5 percent annual rate — compared with 8.9 percent last year and 12.4 percent the year before — and the outlook is for continued price moderation in 1983. What's more, people's overall financial condition is judged by many economists to be usually strong. Carol Brock Kenney, an economist at the investment firm of Shearson-American Express, figures that consumers are burdened less by installment debt today than at any time in the past 30 years. But there remains a strong fear among many people that while they still are working, the recession puts their job in jeopardy.

Q. What would happen if the retail sales tally shows no improvement in spending?

A. Economists say it may mean financial disaster for some retailers. The Christmas season accounts for half, or more, of a year's profits for some storeowners. And even for the retailers that would survive, the implications of a weak holiday buying season would prove damaging in the longer run. That is because consumers, if unwilling to spend more freely at Christmas, may be even less unlikely to launch a spending spree in the months afterward, economists say.

Sunday Morning Notes

Things change and those of us who were in the military become nostalgic whenever changes are made in the training methods or equipment of days gone by.

A little of our confidence was eroded when the M-1 rifle was eliminated and something new was substituted that we old vets well knew we could neither understand nor use if we were ever summoned back to the defense of our country.

Changes in uniforms we could accept. After all, even an army has to stay fashionable. More modern trucks, tanks and even the elimination of the battleship (which may now come back) were accepted as part of keeping our war machine modern.

The Army's most recent announcement, however, tore at the very heart of anyone who had served since the early days of World War II. Anyone who has never lived with a steel helmet cannot imagine how depressing it is to learn that the Army has, after 40 years, developed a new helmet.

No doubt the new helmet will be billed as a better one. It is made of resin and a synthetic fiber. It reportedly has a third more protection than the old helmets. But disadvantages are already apparent. The webbing which supports the helmet when worn, for instance, is built in.

Those who have never closely inspected the old helmets might not realize that what they see a soldier wearing in parades and some training is not the helmet at all; rather it is the plastic helmet liner which includes the webbing. The steel helmet fits over the plastic liner; hence its name the steel "pot."

The uses of the steel pot are legendary. Other than for combat its most popular use was as a washing and shaving basin. It has also been used for hammering, digging, foot resting, sitting and as a head rest. Of course Army regulations forbade all these extra uses, but they were the most widely ignored regulations ever put down.

The steel pot was the most versatile device ever issued by the U.S. Army. No resin and synthetic fiber helmet with webbing attached can ever come close to replacing it as a utilitarian tool or in the hearts of our fighting men. If we lose the next war it will be because the steel pot didn't go with our soldiers.

Come to think of it, there will be a lot of those steel pots available as surplus if the Army eliminates them all. They should have myriad uses around the home, business or farm. All those uses devised by soldiers over the decades still apply. And if that doesn't suit the civilian's taste, the pots make simply fantastic flower beds.

Mending Relations In South America Is A Timely Thing

President Reagan visited South America last week in a move much needed to improve United States relations with our South American neighbors.

The president offered some solace to economically troubled Brazil with agreement to a $1.2 billion loan to that country. He made it clear that economic cooperation was needed between the United States and Brazil and said that restrictions on free world trade was an "ugly spector stalking the world."

He also hit at counterfeit revolutionaries citing a "revolution of territorial conquests, a revolution of coercion and thought control where states rule behind the barrel of a gun and erect barbed wire walls not to keep enemies out, but to keep their own people in."

It was a message that the president was expected to repeat in other countries he was to visit.

The presidential tour is important because we so badly need to maintain our alliances in South America. We also need to pledge to do all we can to keep this hemisphere free of the tyranny that we now witness in Poland and other communist countries.

This is a good time to mend our relations in South America.

Report Pinpoints Differences Of Opinion

RALEIGH — Gov. Jim Hunt received the report of the Citizens Commission on Alternatives to Incarceration with all of the delight expected of a politician who is being pulled from two directions.

The report calls for sending fewer people to jail, punishing them instead through community-based programs. The commission feels such programs would better rehabilitate criminals and ease the tremendous flow of tax money into the prison system. Being able to cut the corrections budget would certainly help Hunt in these bad economic times.

The report came at a time, however, when the polls say that the public is more concerned than ever about violent crime. The public is disgusted with judges who let criminals off with suspended sentences so they can keep on committing crimes. When he spoke to the commission, Hunt opted to reflect the public sentiment. He said he appreciated their work but he wasn't going to support any of their proposals unless the ideas would improve public safety.

Hunt's tough talk doesn't solve the prison overcrowding problem which North Carolina faces, however. The population was up to 17,400 the week of Thanksgiving and the commission predicts it will hit 20,600 by 1987. Consider that each inmate costs the state $9,000 a year to maintain. New cells average $50,000 to build.

North Carolina is not alone in the prison population problem. Nationwide, the Christian Science Monitor reports, there are 385,000 people behind bars. That's twice as many people as were imprisoned 10 years ago. Two-thirds of the states are under court orer to reduce crowding and most are doing so not by building new prisons but by reducing prison population through measures such as those suggested by the North Carolina study.

The National Conference of State Legislatures recently reported on some measures taken by other states.

Minnesota adopted sentencing guidelines in 1980 that restrict imprisonment to the most serious offenses and to felons with criminal records. Virginia and Georgia are either sending non-violent offenders to halfway houses or assigning them to community supervision, NCSL reports.

Some states have decided to continue their current sentencing procedures but to release people early. In Michigan, Connecticut and Washington, inmates with just a few months to go before release get out early if the prisons fill up to capacity. Illinois releases prisoners three months early if they've earned good conduct credit. Early release programs are also being used in Texas, Missouri, Wisconsin, California, Maryland, Pennsylvania, South Carolina and Arizona. New Jersey and Massachusetts are considering such legislation.

No doubt, there was strong sentiment in all of these states for throwing away the jailhouse key. The practical elements of imprisoning all of those people, however, apparently overruled.

What remains to be seen is whether Hunt will continue to tow the hard line or embrace prison alternatives as a program the public can be protected with. Commission chairman Judge Willis Whichard has said repreatedly that prison alternatives will not get public support unless they are clearly seen as a form of punishment. By showing the same skepticism about alternatives which the public expresses in the polls, Hunt sets himself up as a tough man to persuade. Then, if he does decide to support some of the commission's recommendations, he can tell the public he was skeptical, too, but has now seen the light.

Legislators Again Face Highway Funding

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Despite a bruising battle last year, the General Assembly will again be confronted with the problem of finding additional money for the state highway program when lawmakers return in January.

And they apparently will be left on their own to find a solution, because Gov. Jim Hunt plans to make legislators aware of the situation but won't offer any recommendations.

"I don't think it's a problem that can be ignored," said Gary Pearce, Hunt's news secretary.

"People must be aware the consequences of doing nothing are we'll have to stop building any roads in North Carolina," he said.

In 1981, Hunt proposed a $180 million highway funding package to the Legislature, but lawmakers approved a total of $120 million, primarily from a 3-cent per gallon state gas tax increase and increases in motor vehicles fees.

The governor also proposed raising liquor and beer taxes and adoption of a severance tax on mineral mining operations, but those failed because of heavy opposition.

This year, Pearce says "it's up to the Legislature to decide what it wants to do about it."

"As far as Hunt's concerned, he's put his proposal down there and it's still before them," Pearce said.

The problem involves the state's ability to match federal funds for highway construction.

By July 1 of next year, officials estimate the state will have between $16 million and $25 million available, enough to obtain $48 million to $60 million in federal funds. But North Carolina stands to lose another $120 million in federal money unless more state money can be found.

The situation will worsen by July 1, 1984, when officials project there will be no state money to match a projected $200 million in available federal funds.

The federal money comes from the 4-cent per gallon federal gasoline tax. States can obtain their share of the money by providing state funds to pay part of the cost for eligible projects. The amounts range from 10 percent for interstate highways to 25 percent for primary road construction.

"The point is a lot of federal gas tax dollars we send to Washington will go to other states, not North Carolina," Pearce said.

At least one lawmaker is preparing legislation to provide more highway money. Sen. George Marion, who sponsored the unsuccessful effort to raise liquor and beer taxes last year, said he hopes to introduce a new measure on the first day of the session.

Protectionism Leads To Statesmanship

WASHINGTON — Waves of protectionism are washing over Capitol Hill these days. It will take real statesmanship — a commodity always in short supply — for the Congress and the administration to hold them back.

Fortunately, a report has just come to hand that may make a difference. In this town, few reports make any difference at all, but an evenhanded study by the Center for American Businccs in St. Louis reminds us anew of the maxim that trade is a two-way street. By coincidence, a respected senator, Nancy Landon Kassebaum of Kansas, recently has made the same point. The report ought to be read and the senator ought to be heard.

First the report. It was prepared chiefly by Murray L. Weidenbaum, until recently the chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers. He begins by reviewing the persuasive case made by American manufacturers in favor of more restrictive trade policies.

For one example, Japanese automobiles: Last year the Japanese sold 1.8 million cars in the United States. The share of imported automobiles has climbed from 18 percent of the domestic market in 1977 to 27 percent last year. As one consequence, sales of domestically made cars fell last year to a 20-year low. Our big four manufacturers suffered losses of $4.2 billion in 1980 and $1.3 billion in 1981.

For a second example, steel: In 1981 foreign oroducers claimed 16 percent of the U.S. market. For a third example, textiles: Imports of apparel now comprise one-fourth of the domestic market. Other examples: sugar and footwear and even mushrooms. Domestic producers have reacted by obtaining a wide variety of quotas, agreements, understandings and trigger mechanisms. Still the inflow continues. Last year we had a trade imbalance with Japan of nearly $16 billion.

Very well. But Weidenbaum carefully paints the other side of the picture. We tend too often to forget that we had a net favorable balance with Western Europe last year of more than $12 billion. And because we cherish the illusion that the United States is the veritable Galahad of international commerce, sans peur et sans reproche, we forget how many barriers we ourselves have raised against the concept of "free trade."

These merit a moment of reflection. While we are grumbling about foreign restrictions against U.S. exports, we ought in decency to acknowledge our Jones Act, which restricts foreign shipping; we ought to acknowledge the bewildering profusion of "Buy American" laws; we should take note of the many quotas and high tariffs we impose; and we ought not to close our eyes to the many domestic regulations that prevent our domestic manufacturers from effective competition abroad.

On balance, if I read Weidenbaum correctly, the foreign barriers are higher and tighter — and sometimes trickier — than ours. France, for one example, recently announced a policy by which imported video recorders must be cleared through customs at Poitiers, 100 kilometers south of Tours in the middle of nowhere, with a customs staff of four.

But Weidenbaum's report comes down strongly on the side of continued efforts by the United States to open channels, not to close them by protectionist legislation. "The goods we import are cheaper than domestic substitutes. Our 225 million consumers have more choice. The markets for our exports are less restricted than they might otherwise be."

Senator Kassebaum, in her address to a conference on international affairs last month, came down solidly on the side of free trade. "We should not seek foreign scapegoats for our domestic problems. We should not imagine that we can measurably improve our lot by restricting trade, because that road can lead to ruin for American farmers and industrial workers who themselves produce for export."

These are words of wisdom. It is understandable, and it may seem politically expedient, to sympathize with the producers of textiles, autos and steel. They are hurting. But in the long haul, and in terms of the economy as a whole, protectionist measures will not make things better; they will only make things worse.

To the editor:

Destructive critics — those who find fault with the actions of others, but who never have better solutions — irritate me. In a recent letter to the editor, Mr. Patrick O'Neill of the Greenville Peace Committee berates President Reagan for a number of things — mostly related to military spending and nuclear weapons. He apparently has no better suggestions. All he wants is peace. Who doesn't, for crying out loud! No one wants or appreciates peace more than military members who have risked their all for country and fellow citizens. War is hell on earth. Yet, they are smart and dedicated enough to recognize that the freedoms our country provides for each individual are worth sacrificing for.

Sure we can have peace. All we need do is pay the price. One option is to unilaterally stop production of nuclear weapons, ban the bombs, etc., and depend upon world opinion to influence the behavior of any aggressor. Avoidance of war would be guaranteed and so would the demise of democratic government which has been so instrumental in promoting individual dignity and prosperity. Yes, we could return to becoming absolute subjects of a system. What a price to pay. Or we could negotiate a reduction in nuclear weapons.

Question: How do you negotiate with a hooded assailant in a dark alley who has an object pressed against your backbone and demands all that you have labored for in a lifetime? Only a fool would willingly place himself in such jeopardy. Finally, we can pay the price to provide a military force sufficient to deter aggression. History clearly teaches that a succcessful negotiation of difference is possible only when adversaries are essentially equal in power. The alternative is called capitulation of the weaker.

Destructive critics are found in most organizations. Although they may have good intentions, I consider them arrogant, uniformed or both.

When one is destructive in any manner and cannot or will not go to the trouble of offering some constructive alternatives, that person does a disservice to his fellow citizens.

Eight weeks ago a 12-year-old Greenville boy found three half-starved kittens in a field near the Greenville Animal Shelter. The boy stopped to look at them and they tried to climb up his pants. They did not hiss as kittens of a gone-wild mother cat do. So the boy knew that they were familiar with human beings. He bicycled home and told his mother. She had a fever and had a lot of work to do. She sighed and said, "That's all we need!" After a while the boy asked very quietly: "Could I choose one?" When the mother heard this she saw in a flash her son at the site of the kittens deciding which one to let live and which two to leave to die — slowly.

It is not cruel to have a cat or dog spayed or neutered. (We do it all the time to other domesticated animals.) There are too many unwanted dogs and cats, and human beings are not thoughtful of the unwanted overpopulation. Please, pleave have your cat or dog spayed or neutered as the case may be.

To the editor:

It's always timely to list some Do's for Children/Teen-agers:

1. Be loyal to the members of your family. When you knock your parents or a brother or sister to outsiders, you do more damage to yourself than you do to them.
2. Don't try to turn one parent against the other. It could cause serious trouble and you'll wish you hadn't.
3. Don't ask your parents if you can do something because "everyone else is doing it." It's the poorest reason in the world.
4. Before you ask for something, including permission, think — do you really want it or do you want it because some of your friends have it?
5. Keep your word. When you think you might be late, call home and say so. It will let your parents know you are a responsible, trustworthy, considerate person.
6. Offer to do things around the house without being asked. Initiative is a sign of maturity.
7. Remember to give a compliment when it is deserved. "Nice dinner, Mom," may be the nicest thing anyone has said to her today.

Note: Let this go up on the kitchen wall near the fridge, or possibly on your mirror in your own bedroom.

Rationalizing A Presidential Journey

BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — Even before any details of President Reagan's hectic, five-day Latin American tour had been finalized, his senior aides were showing concern that the trip was being seen as something of a junket.

For a White House that tries its best to perfect the art of long-range planning, the trip to Brazil, Colombia, Costa Rica and Honduras was announced with almost unseemly haste. Throughout the weeks leading up to the trip, White House aides took pains to portray it as one of diplomatic significance and not just a walk on the diplomatic highwire.

The visit to Honduras — which shifts the complexion of the entire journey and closes it with a strong focus on troubled Central America — was announced less than two weeks ago.

At that time, an advance party from the White House was still checking out the facilities there and trying to determine whether a complicated presidential visit to the small, Central American nation was possible.

With Congress returning to Washington for a special session requested by the president, White House aides were being asked why Reagan was leaving town — and what was so urgent about visiting South America this week.

In their on-the-record comments, White House and State Department officials stressed that the president wanted to demonstrate his long-standing interest in hemispheric problems, and to patch up U.S. ties to Latin America in the wake of the Falkland Islands conflict. The Reagan administration lost some ground in South America when it supported Britain's fight against Argentina last spring.

"This trip really has its roots in his long-standing decision to create a better relationship between North America and South America," said David R. Gergen, Reagan's assistant for communications.

Thus, the president is trying to focus on the area's long-range financial problems, as well as the more immediate economic woes created by the worldwide recession, the limited markets for South American products, and the high cost of importing sources of energy.

As for the suggestion that Reagan was undertaking the international venture to shift the focus of the country away from its difficult domestic problems and the economy, Gergen said:

"I would challenge the assumption that he is doing this just to be seen on the diplomatic highwire. I don't find in him the desire to go globetrotting that occurs in some presidents."

But the president's aides, speaking privately, are willing to acknowledge that this trip was put together rather speedily. Some were saying a week ago that they were less prepared for this journey than for any of his previous five foreign trips.

Just days before it was announced in late October, the only foreign travel contemplated for the president was a possible trip to the Orient in the spring.

"It was arranged rather quickly," confided one well-placed White House official, who asked that he not be further identified.

This aide said the president's national security adviser, William Clark, felt it was important to focus attention on Latin America, as well as on Europe and the Middle East.

"There is a desire to show the American interests and concerns in a part of the world other than those on the front burner," the White House official said.

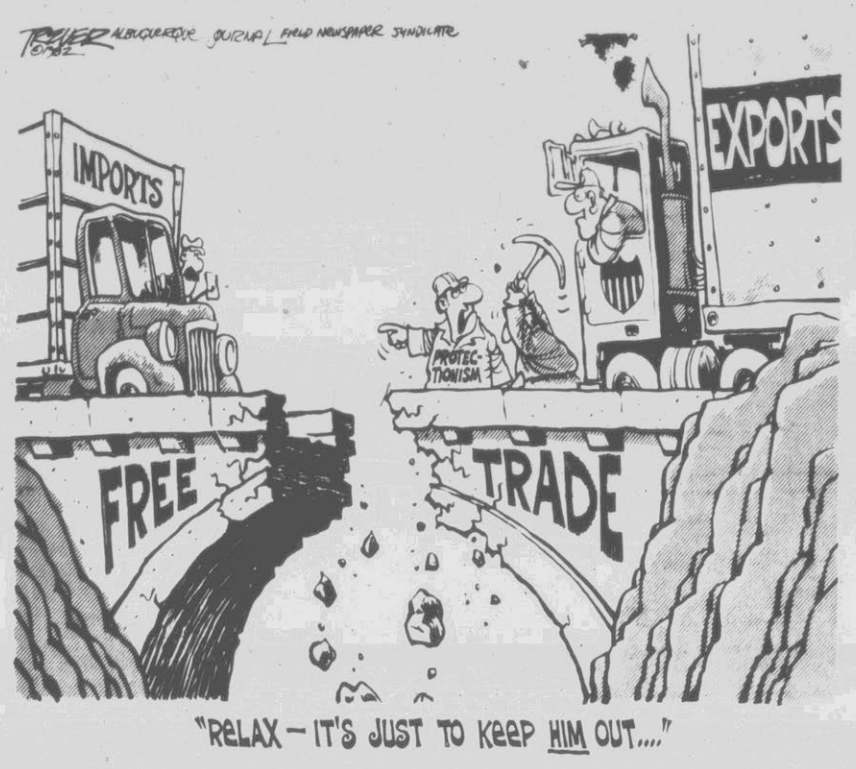

As for how the countries on the trip were chosen, there are these answers from State Department officials and others familiar with the continent and with the pre-trip planning:

Brazil? It's the biggest nation in Latin America, its economy is the most advanced, and the president of the United States cannot ignore it on his first visit to South America.

Colombia? "Because he's going to Brazil," said one official.

Costa Rica? The president feels that in the face of guerrilla activity throughout the region, Costa Rica is demonstrating its commitment to democracy, as well as tackling its severe economic problems.

Honduras? Along with Costa Rica, it was one of the few places in Central America that would be safe for a presidential visit.

"RELAX — IT'S JUST TO KEEP HIM OUT...."

A Species Of Boll Weevil

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Phil Gramm, D-Texas, must feel a little unloved these days.

Gramm is a familiar name to those who keep up with federal budget matters. He is half of the "Gramm-Latta" budget reconciliation bill of 1981, which gave President Reagan in one swoop almost everything he asked Congress for in federal spending cuts.

Gramm is a "Boll Weevil" — a conservative Democrat who often talks and acts more conservatively than many Republicans. He was one of about 40 Boll Weevils who tipped the scales in this Congress toward Reagan and away from the main line Democrats.

But as the new Congress convenes in January, it will become apparent at the House Democratic caucus that there is a difference between Boll Weevils.

Some will be welcomed back to the fold, such as Reps. G. V. Montgomery, D-Miss., and Kent Hance, D-Texas, who worked hard to pass the Reagan program.Just like Gramm.

Well, not quite just like Gramm.

Phil Gramm is likely to be swatted down, just like the ugly little bug that set up housekeeping in cotton bolls and convinced southern farmers that maybe they should plant peanuts. Gramm almost certainly will lose his seat on the House Budget Committee and maybe even on the House Energy and Commerce Committee.

That means he may well become Rep. Phil Gramm, R-Texas — not D-Texas — within a relatively short time.

What is the difference between Gramm and the other Boll Weevils?

It isn't philosophy. They all generally think alike.

It isn't that he was more effective than the others. Montgomery probably did more damage to the Democrats quietly than Gramm did loudly.

It isn't that he didn't hew to the party line, Congressional Democrats have stretched the party tent to hold almost every philosophy, ranging from the segregationist Democrats of the 1950s and 1960s to the more recent liberals who suspect that Jane Fonda is a little conservative.

It isn't even that the Democratic leadership is out to get Gramm. House Speaker Thomas O'Neill says he'd just as soon not punish any Democrat for any reason.

The "get Gramm" move is coming from grass roots House Democrats, particularly southerners who remained loyal to the leadership despite possible political consequences.

And the real reason that Gramm faces discipline is that he publicly enjoyed what he was doing and cooperated a little too closely and openly with the White House and other Republicans.

The other Boll Weevils let it be known that they were good Democrats, but could not support their party leadership's position because it would violate their principles and the clear will of their constituents. That always is reason enough for any party to excuse defections.

But those who watched the 1981-82 budget battles remember Gramm jumping to his feet, clapping wildly and cheering when his party went down in flames.

George Gallup

Poll

PRINCETON, N.J. — As Congress reconvened last week to consider, among other things, a public works bill, unemployment affected at least one adult American in five (21 percent). This represents a small but significant increase from the 17 percent recorded in a June survey.

The latest Gallup survey found 11 percent of the public either unemployed and actively looking for jobs or so discouraged they have given up looking. In addition, 10 percent of persons who now hold either full-time or part-time jobs say they are either very likely (5 percent) or fairly likely (5 percent) to lose their jobs or be laid off within the next 12 months.

One of the most pressing matters on the agenda of the special session of Congress is consideration of a public works bill. One such bill would provide approximately 320,000 jobs to make necessary repairs to the nation's highways and bridges and would be financed mainly by a 5-cent federal tax on gasoline.

Fear Higher Among Blacks, Blue-Collar Workers

Fear of unemployment is higher among black workers, 17 percent of whom say it is very likely or fairly likely they will be laid off. In sharp contrast, only 9 percent of employed whites think it is at least fairly likely they will lose their jobs within the next 12 months.

Other worker groups with greater-than-average apprehension about the security of their jobs include 18- to 29-year-olds (14 percent), unskilled blue-collar workers (23 percent), persons whose family income is less than $15,000 per year (12 percent), members of labor-union households (17 percent), and Midwesterners (14 percent). In addition, about twice the proportion of Democrats (11 percent) and Independents (13 percent) as Republicans (6 percent) are fearful of losing their jobs.

Comparison of the latest findings with the June survey shows fear of joblessness to have grown in most major worker groups, a notable exception being men. In June, 11 percent of male workers and 6 percent of females told our interviewers they thought it was very or fairly likely they would be terminated within 12 months. In the latest survey, 11 percent of men feel their jobs are in jeopardy but the proportion of working women sharing this fear grew by 4 percentage points to 10 percent, so that women are now as apprehensive as men about their jobs.

The following question was asked of employed persons:

"Thinking about the next 12 months, how likely do you think it is that you will lose your job or be laid off — very likely, fairly likely, not too likely, or not at all likely?"

Likelihood Of Losing Job
(Based on employed persons)

	Jan.	June	Nov.
Very likely	3%	4%	5%
Fairly likely	6	4	5
Not too likely	14	15	15
Not at all likely	31	29	26
No opinion	1	2	2
Total employed	55	54	53

For results based on a sample of this size, one can say with 95 percent confidence that the error attributable to sampling and other random effects could be three percentage points in either direction.

Gordon Gray Wore Many Hats

When Gordon Gray died a few days ago, newspaper stories cited his many achievements in great detail — presidential adviser, secretary of the Army, state senator, president of the Consolidated University of North Carolina and newspaper publisher. But the account I read did not mention the most controversial task the unassuming Winston-Salem millionaire ever undertook.

At President Eisenhower's behest, Gray served as chairman of a special security board of the Atomic Energy Commission, which voted 2-1 to bar Dr. J. Robert Oppenheimer from further contact with the nation's atomic secrets. Gray sided with the majority which found that Oppenheimer, who headed a team of scientists that produced the atomic bomb during World War II, was "a loyal citizen" but still a security risk. The board apparently based its finding on allegations that Oppenheimer's wife had joined the Communist Party during her student days.

The board's decision to side with caution when the nation's security was at stake came at the height of what has been called the McCarthy Era. Sen. Josephy McCarthy, R-Wis., caused a near-reign of terror with his unproven allegations that the federal government was honeycombed with Communists.

Gray — described by Eisenhower as one of the finest Americans he knew — had commented on the Communist threat four years earlier when he was inaugurated as president of the Consolidated UNC system. Gray said that academic freedom had been used at times "as a cloak to give a sort of immunity to Communists and their side-car passengers." He expressed the opinion that firmness toward Communists, when prudently excercised, would not violate the academic principles of unfettered research and the pursuit of truth.

However, he gave assurance that "we shall not persecute the innocent, nor malign the clearly misunderstood. And we shall be convinced beyond a reasonable doubt."

Gray, an heir to the Reynolds Tobacco millions, was born in Baltimore but was reared in Winston-Salem. Although he had not wanted to go to college, he enrolled at the University of North Carolina and made the highest grades in his 1930 graduating class. At Yale, where he earned his law degree in 1933, Gray was an editor of the Yale Law Journal. While practicing law in Winston-Salem he was elected to the state Senate. He was re-elected twice.

In the spring of 1942, Gray declined a commission in the Navy and enlisted in the Army as a private. He advanced to corporal, lieutenant and captain before the end of World War II, which found him an intelligence officer on the staff of Gen. Omar Bradley. Gray described his military career as "utterly undistinguished."

Two years later he went to Washington as assistant secretary to the Army, and had advanced to secretary when he stepped down in 1950 — while artillery boomed a 17-gun salute and an Army band played Dixie — to become president of the consolidated university. Gray presided over UNC — which then consisted of N.C. State in Raleigh, Woman's College in Greensboro and UNC in Chapel Hill — when black students were admitted for the first time following a decision of the U.S. Supreme Court. His regime also saw the completion of the UNC Division of Health Affairs. This included the schools of dentistry and nursing, a four-year medical school and teaching hospital.

While president of the consolidated university, Gray performed major tasks for Presidents Truman and Eisenhower. Truman described as "monumental" a report which Gray prepared to guide American foreign economic policy after the end of the Marshall Plan. He also served as director of a strategy board Truman set up to coordinate the activities by which the United States waged psychological warfare against Communists. Eisenhower appointed him to the President's Committee on International Information Activities, which made specific recommendations for combatting the spread of Communism.

Although Gray's even temper was not often disturbed, he was at times provoked by repeated references to his wealth.

Perhaps It's A Showcase For Private Enterprise

NEW YORK (AP) — The 1984 Los Angeles Olympic Games are being financed without municipal money, without the aid of lotteries, and without donations as such, and yet they are likely to show a "profit" rather than big debts.

In a business sense, big municipal debts have been the legacy of recent games, such as in Lake Placid, N.Y. and Montreal. But no debts will be left to the City of Los Angeles. By law, it cannot even be involved in financing.

For the first time in history, money for the Olympics is being produced entirely by the private sector, mainly through the sales of television rights and corporate sponsorships, and to a smaller extent through ticket sales.

When the games are over, said Peter Ueberroth, president of the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee, "we should have a small surplus for youth and sports." To say nothing of several new or totally refurbished buildings.

It was not the committee's primary goal to make it so, but some people will view the results as a showcase of free enterprise, said Ueberroth, an entrepreneur who built a small travel agency into one of the nation's largest.

The original objective was simply to get the games for Los Angeles, a goal with which the International Olympic Committee agreed. However, the city then objected to the usual stipulation that it accept financial responsibility. The city was about to abandon its rights to the games when the IOC relented.

Instead of the city guaranteeing the financing, the organizing committee, made up of prominent Los Angeles-area residents, would be responsible. And the organizing committee had its own restrictions. Many individuals and companies, for example, were willing to donate funds. The committee didn't want them.

"Donations devastate a community," said Ueberroth. People might reduce donations to other athletic organizations and give to the committee simply to obtain tickets, he explained. "We wanted support, not enemies," he said.

Instead, it was agreed to accept about 30 corporate sponsors, and commit them in some way to enhancing athletic, community or Olympic programs.

Converse Rubber will sponsor a national basketball tournament, United Airlines a sailing program for youngsters. Southland Corp. will build the velodrome, or cycling track, which reverts to California State University after the games, and also sponsor a national bicycle tourney.

Twenty-eight sponsors have been chosen so far. McDonald's Corp. is building a swim center on the University of Southern California campus that later will be open to area residents. American Telephone & Telegraph Co. will offer communications and consulting, International Business Machines Corp. will provide data processing, Japan's Fuji Corp. will handle photo developing and printing.

For becoming a sponsor, the corporations receive the right to use in their advertising the Olympic emblem — a design of red, white and blue stars and rings — and the mascot, "Sam," a good-natured, multitalented little eagle who, among other things, plays tennis, rides horses, dives and lifts weights.

Ueberroth expects a minimum of $140 million from sponsors, compared with $7 million from 381 sponsors at the Lake Placid Winter Olympics in 1980. "We made the supply and demand tighter," said Ueberroth the businessman.

With about 600 days to the opening ceremonies most of the $140 million from sponsors is already committed. Television rights have brought in $280 million, with American Broadcasting Cos. obtaining U.S. rights. And since ticket sales will add more millions, the committee is almost certain to reach its goal.

That goal is $470 million. Ueberroth and the committee are convinced it is more than enough to cover all the bills, and still leave $10 million for the U.S. Olympic Committee to spend on American youth and sports.

And leave also a dining hall at the University of Southern California, an administration building and a sportsmedicine lab at UCLA, a refurbished Coliseum and Exposition Park, seven running tracks, many jobs...

And no public debt

Twins Born Safely After Copter Crashes

LONG BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — Twin girls were born at a hospital early Saturday to a woman who was pulled unhurt from a crashed helicopter in a fog-shrouded field on a college campus.

The twins were delivered at Long Beach Memorial Hospital to Ruth P. Arthurs, 31, of Huntington Beach shortly after the helicopter she was being transported in was forced to make a crash landing.

Mrs. Arthurs escaped injury but a doctor aboard the aircraft suffered minor injuries when the chopper's pilot set the craft down about 2:15 a.m. PST in a field on the campus of California State University at Long Beach.

The pilot and a nurse aboard the aircraft also escaped unharmed.

Paramedics rushed the pregnant woman to Long Beach Memorial Hospital, her original destination, where she gave birth, hospital spokesman Bill McGee said. Both she and the twins were in good condition, he said.

The helicopter, leased by Memorial as part of its Life Flight program which transports emergency patients to the hospital, was extensively damaged.

It was forced to crash-land after the craft's oil line pressure fell and caused the engine to quit, McGee said.

McGee identified the physician aboard the craft as Dr. C.T. Weatherford, a labor and delivery resident at Memorial. The nurse was Sharon Brahms, and the pilot was Mike Brand.

Mrs. Arthurs was being transported by the medivac helicopter after she went into premature labor.

After the crash, she was transported by ambulance to the hospital where the healthy twin girls were delivered.

Pro-Reagan Democrats Face Retribution

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Phil Gramm, a Texas Democrat and outspoken supporter of President Reagan's economic programs, is fighting an uphill battle to keep from being stripped of key committee posts in the new Congress.

Other conservative Democrats who actively supported Reagan the past two years may be in for lesser forms of retribution as party members prepare to vote for congressional leadership and committee assignments for 1983-84.

Both parties are holding closed-door organizational meetings this week for the new 98th Congress that will convene Jan. 3. The move against Gramm could come then or in January, when the full caucuses vote on the recommendations.

With their party's ranks swelled by 26 House seats in the Nov. 2 election, Democratic leaders seem bent on making an example of Gramm, whose open siding with Republicans on budget issues was a constant source of irritation.

"Gramm will lose his Budget (Committee) seat as an absolute minimum. There's strong sentiment for stripping him of his Energy and Commerce Committee seat as well and, possibly even kicking him out of the Democratic caucus," said one key Democratic aide who declined to be identified.

If Democrats retaliate against him, Gramm says he may switch parties and become a Republican — or go back to teaching economics at Texas A&M after his term expires in 1984. He said such "discpline" would disenfrancise his constituents.

"There's no doubt that if the leadership decides to push the effort to take the Budget Committee seat away from me, they've probably got the votes to do it," Gramm said in an interview. "But it will cost them something — it will send a clear signal to conservatives that, if you're serious about the things you believe in, don't send a Democrat to represent you.

"It will be a signal that we (the leadership) will tolerate a Democrat who is a conservative only if he will sit back on 'Redneck Row,' vote late, give us his vote if we really need it and cast a protest vote after the issues are already decided," he said.

House leaders won't admit publicly that they're out to get Gramm, but aides claim it's no secret that he tops their hit list.

Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., when asked earlier if Gramm and other rebellious Democrats would be disciplined, always responded that such measures could not be taken in midterm, saying the party's organizing caucus was the appropriate vehicle.

"That time is now," O'Neill said at a recent news conference.

Chris Matthews, an aide to the Massachusetts Democrat, insisted that O'Neill would not take a direct role in disciplinary moves against Gramm. The effort will come from "grass-roots Democrats, particularly those in Gramm's own region," Matthews said.

Sources said that Gramm's sharpest critic among the leadershp is Majority Leader Jim Wright, a fellow Texan.

"Wright was furious after Gramm attended Democratic budget strategy sessions, then ran out to the Republican leadership and told them what he'd heard," said one source.

Wright, for the record, won't say how he'll vote on the Gramm matter — other than to note that Gramm's membership on the budget panel is "an honor" rather than a right.

As a result of the November elections, there will be 269 Democrats in the 435-member House in the next Congress — as opposed to 243 in the current one. All are automatically members of the Democratic Caucus, which begins its organizational meetings on Monday.

Rep. Gillis Long, D-La., the caucus chairman, said talk about kicking Gramm off the Budget Committee has been widespread for some time and that vote on it seems inevitable.

Long would not predict the outcome, saying his job as chairman makes him "something of a judge on the matter."

Congressional sources said other, less harsh, disciplinary moves may be taken against Democratic Reps. G.V. Montgomery of Mississippi, Larry McDonald of Georgia and Kent Hance of Texas for their open support of Reagan's programs.

The rest of the some 40 Democratic "Boll Weevils" who supported most or parts of Reagan's programs will be left alone, leadership aides agree.

House leaders, however, are seeking a rules change that would allow the Democratic caucus to boot out members who switch parties — like Rep. Eugene Atkinson, now a Pennsylvania Republican.

Gramm is trying to rally support of fellow conservatives but acknowledges that the odds are against him. Of the 269 Democrats in the new House, "only about 30 can be considered conservatives," he said.

Times Are Hard?

EUCLID, Ohio (UPI) — Times are tough all over. The recession has even hit Lincoln Electric Co. in Euclid.

Christmas bonuses this year averaged only $15,460 — per employee. That was down from $22,690 last year.

The company paid out $41.2 million to 2,634 employees this year, a decline of $18 million from 1981.

William Irrgang, chairman and chief executive officer of the company, which is the world's largest manufacturer of industrial motors, said the firm's incentive program was put to a severe test this year.

He said that under the program all employees with more than two years service are guaranteed a minimum of 30 hours regular pay whether there is work or not.

Reagan Signs Extradition Treaty

By HELEN THOMAS

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (UPI) — President Reagan, rebuffing a Communist heckler, declared Saturday the United States cannot have close relations with Nicaragua as long as it "is destabilizing its neighbors by protecting guerrillas and exporting violence."

Reagan spoke after signing an extradition treaty with Costa Rica. He was scheduled to wind up his five-day Latin American tour and return to Washington Saturday night after a stop in Honduras to meet with Presidents Roberto Suazo Cordova of Honduras and Efrain Riots Montt of Guatemala.

The extradition treaty was spurred by the case of fugutive financier Robert Vesco, who spent from 1972 to May 1982 in Costa Rica out of reach of U.S. authorities and now lives in Nicaragua.

As Reagan prepared to speak during the ceremony in San Jose's ornate 19th century Teatro Nacional, a man in a business suit rose in the first balcony and delivered a three-minute attack on Washington's "gringo policy."

The audience of dignitaries erupted into shouts of "fuera, fuera" (out, out), hissing and stamping but Sergio Eric Ardon, one of four Communist members of Costa Rica's legislature, finished speaking. He stayed to listen to Reagan's speech but remained seated during a standing ovation to the U.S. president.

In his speech, Reagan pledged the United States will continue to support the emerging democracies in Honduras and and El Salvador.

But he rejected Colombian President Belesario Betancur's call during his visit to Bogota Friday for the United States to accept the political reality of the hemisphere and end attempts to "isolate" and "exclude" the leftist regimes.

Although neither Betancur nor Reagan mentioned the countries by name, it was clear that they referred to Nicaragua and Cuba.

"Any nation destabilizing its neighbors by protecting guerrillas and exporting violence should forfeit close and fruitful relations with the people of the United States of America — and with any people who truly love peace and freedom," Reagan said.

While Americans and Costa Ricans "live the peaceful revolution of democracy," secure under the rule of law, he said,"there are outsiders who would exploit our rich new world by undermining the democratic systems that make us free.

"We of this hemisphere must stand together so that we can continue to improve the quality of life for our people. We must be strong enough, our people prosperous enough and our democracies stable enough to remain independent, at peace and free," he said.

Reagan reaffirmed his policy for peace in Central America is "democracy, rejection of extremism and the force of arms, and respect for human rights and the rule of law."

"What we strive for is a hemisphere where the future is determined not by bullets, but by ballots — a hemisphere of countries at peace with themselves, and one another, and at peace with the world," Reagan said.

Legislator Takes Floor From Reagan

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (UPI) — President Reagan won thunderous applause Saturday for rebuffing a Communist member of the Costa Rican legislature who interruped his speech with a three-minute attack on U.S. policy.

The president called it "a tribute to democracy" that such a verbal attack could be delivered in Costa Rica, the oldest democracy in Central America. "We wouldn't be allowed to do so in a communist country," he said.

Reagan had just walked to the poduim in the ornate 19th century Teatro Nacional when Sergio Eric Ardon rose from his seat in the first tier of the balcony. Apologizing for interrupting the ceremony, he said it was the only way to get his views across.

The dignitaries assembled in the 1,000-seat theater to see Reagan and Costa Rican President Luis Alberto Monge sign an extradition treaty broke into shouts of "fuera, fuera" (out, out), hissing and stamping on the wooden floor.

Although the uproar virtually drowned out his voice, Ardon continued reading a statement attacking "gringo policy" that had appeared earlier in a local newspaper. People sitting near him stopped civil guards from approaching.

Reagan appeared startled and walked over to Monge, who told him the speaker was one of four Communist members of the legislature. Reagan picked up earphones to see if Ardon's words were being translated from Spanish.

China Adopts Plan For Reunification

By MICHAEL ROSS

PEKING (UPI) — China adopted a new constitution Saturday that restores the post of head of state, sets out a formula for the reunification of Taiwan and obligates all parents to practice birth control.

Passed overwhelmingly by the National Peoples Congress, China's version of parliament, the 138-article state constitution also places greater stress on individual and minority rights, although it abolishes a right-to-strike provision contained in the 1978 constitution.

In theory, the new constitution wrests control of the 4.2 million-member army from the Communist Party through the creation of a state military commission. In practice, however, it is still not clear how the new state council will function alongside the Communist Party's Military Affairs Commission.

Like a new party constitution adopted recently, the state constitution eliminates leftover language from the 1966-76 Cultural Revolution. It stresses stability, modernization and economic reform over Mao Tse-tung's edict of "continuous revolution."

Two years in the drafting, it is China's third constitution in just seven years but the first to bear the authoritative imprint of Deng Xiaoping, China's paramount ruler.

Together with recent purges and reshuffles within the party and the military, it is part of Deng's attempt to ingrain his reforms so deeply into China's power structure that they will not be seriously challenged after his death.

Although he appears to be in good health, Deng is 78 and in the words of one diplomat, "knows time is running against him."

The new constitution contains several changes from a draft version under public debate since April.

One change was the addition of a birth control article stipulating that all married couples "have the duty to practice family planning." A recent census showed China's population has soared past 1 billion and despite restrictions on large families, it continues to grow at a rate officials fear may undermine long-range economic planning.

Addressing the congress earlier this week on the current five-year economic plan, Premier Zhao Ziyang called for "strict control" to keep population growth to within 1.3 percent a year.

The constitution declares that Taiwan "is part of the sacred territory" of China and contains an article that would let the Nationalist island operate as a special administrative zone with greater autonomy and more flexible regulations than those applying to other parts of the country.

The article on Taiwan could also apply to Hong Kong, which China has said it will reclaim when a British lease expires in 1997.

The constitution also re-establishes the ceremonial post of president, abolished by Mao, and formally divests Mao's people's communes of their grass roots political authority.

Kick Off Show

These dolls will kick off an annual Doll Show conducted by the Salvation Army of Greenville. The dolls are dressed by various churches and organizations in the community and will be on display at a reception in the Salvation Army Building beginning Sunday from 2 p.m. until 5 p.m. The dolls will later be given to needy children in the community to make their Christmas merrier. (Reflector photo by Chris Bennett)

Parade Saturday

Seven bands are scheduled to perform in the 1982 Greenville Jaycee Christmas Parade Saturday at noon.

Jaycee spokesmen said bands will be entered by Rose, D.H. Conley, Farmville Central, North Pitt, West Craven, Northern Nash and Durham high schools. The parade also will include 10 professional floats, several beauty queens, clowns, antique cars and special guests.

The parade route will begin at First and Reade streets, continue to Reade Circle and turn right on Dickenson Avenue and then left on Washington Street. The procession will end on First Street.

Anyone who would like to participate may call Jim Alligood at 758-1121, Mike Messick at 757-3461 or Bobby James at 758-1512.

Orchestra Opens Campaign

The East Carolina Orchestra and Chamber Music Association Inc., parent agency of the Eastern Youth Orchestra, is conducting a fund-raising drive for the orchestra's activities.

Letters are being sent to the persons in the community seeking contributions to the fund through family membership subscription. Membership in the association is available to all interested persons who contribute at least $10. Additionally, a $5 fee is paid by members of the Eastern Youth Orchestra.

The 1982-83 school year marks the third year of the association. It offers an opportunity to any string, woodwind, brass or percussion player in the area who is qualified to pass the audition requirements to play in the orchestra.

Contributions or requests for additional information may be made to: Dr. Charles Moore, Treasurer, East Carolina Orchestra Association, P.O. Box 4123, Greenville, N.C., 27834.

Business Holds Opening

Grand opening ceremonies were held Friday for the Land & Sea Outlet located in Greenville Square Shopping Center.

According to Libby Keel Hancock, owner and manager, the new firm will offer selections of pottery, wicker and other gift items. The fresh-frozen seafood department will offer a selection of delicacies from the sea which will be packaged in assorted sizes.

Housing Authority To Meet

The Greenville Housing Authority will hold its regular December meeting Monday at 7:30 p.m. The authority meets at the agency's 1103 Broad Street central office.

Nomination Forms Available

Nomination forms are being made available by the Greenville Jaycees for the organization's Distinguished Service Award, which will be presented at the Jaycees' annual banquet Jan. 20.

Jaycee spokesman Charles Asbell said forms may be obtained from the Greenville Chamber of Commerce and city hall, or by writing to DSA, P.O. Box 1466, Greenville. Asbell said all nominations must be submitted before Dec. 31 to be considered in the judging.

The Jaycees each year present the DSA award to a man under the age of 36 who has provided outstanding service to the community and his profession.

Plane Clips Off Airport Tower

BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — A jet carrying more than 40 U.S. TV journalists home from covering President Reagan's visit clipped an airport tower on takeoff Saturday, mangling its landing gear, and then made a belly landing on the runway in a cloud of dust after circling and dumping fuel.

The 47 passengers and 11 crew members slid down inflated emergency chutes and only a few suffered minor injuries, said U.S. Embassy duty officer Peggy Jones.

In New York, a spokesman for CBS News, which chartered the jet through Global International Airways, said there were 44 passengers on the plane. He said one person had a "bruised elbow" and the others were being examined by doctors here.

There was no immediate explanation for the discrepancy in figures given by the embassy and CBS.

The CBS spokesman said the Boeing 707 had been chartered by CBS to bring home employees of his network, NBC, ABC and Cable News Network, who had been covering the presidential visit to Brazil that ended Thursday.

The plane took off at 8:30 a.m. (6:30 a.m. EST), bound for Atlanta, Washington and New York, where it was due at 8 p.m. EST.

But David Broderick, a Global International vice president aboard the flight, said the jetliner struck a tower on the end of the runway as it took off, crumpling most of its landing gear.

"The people were startled," Broderick said. "There was the shock of the noise and then we were in the air."

CBS correspondent Steve Kroft recalled: "We were going down the runway and I said I didn't think we had enough power to take off. Four seconds after takeoff there was a bang, and someone yelled that there was a hole in the wing."

Broderick said "the pilot maintained the craft, circled" and dumped most of the airplane's fuel to avoid possible fire during the emergency landing. The precaution took about an hour, he said.

The passengers were given emergency landing instructions — head down, seat belt fastened and hands around ankles — and the pilot brought the plane down, Broderick said.

"It was a particulary difficult landing because we couldn't retract" the damaged landing gear, he said.

Television film taken during the landing showed the airplane hit the runway on its nose and slid to a stop in a cloud of dust. The passengers and crew then used emergency chutes to escape.

"Everyone was calm but very scared," Kroft told The Associated Press.

CBS News senior producer Lew Allison added, "I was very, very worried. It's a feeling of not having control."

Broderick said a Federal Aviation Administration team was headed to Brasilia to determine the cause of the accident

Cherokees Offering Big-Bucks Bingo

CHEROKEE, N.C. (AP) — The Eastern Band of Cherokees, crippled by 22 percent unemployment in November, are looking for a financial jackpot in high-stakes bingo games.

The games are aimed at bringing jobs, tourists and money to the reservation in the western North Carolina mountains. The lure Saturday, the first day of the games, was a $225,000 payout.

Organizer Dan McCoy said a yearlong series of bingo games is planned. He expected as many as 4,000 players to fill a 50,000-square-foot converted textile mill owned by the tribe Saturday. The games were to last from 1 p.m. Saturday until 1 a.m. Sunday.

"Most of the people who play bingo like to play for big money," said McCoy, 39, one of 5,500 people on the reservation and a Cherokee businessman. "We'll probably get them from like Chicago, Philadelphia, Memphis, Jacksonville."

The operation may be the largest bingo game ever in North Carolina because state law requires such games be sponsored by tax-exempt charitable or related organizations and not pay more than $12,000 over two days.

But federal appellate courts have held those restrictions are not applicable to federal Indian reservations.

The 12-member tribal council voted last year to allow bingo as a way to raise money for the reservation. It gets a $150,000 annual guarantee from the games plus a percentage of the profits. In January, McCoy and fellow Cherokee John Young won a 10-year contract to run the games.

"My basic concern is to stimulate the economy, get something going for our tribe and the reservation," McCoy said. "The spin-off, of course, is the motels, the restaurants, the shops it could bring."

The factory had been empty for two years. McCoy said some outside associates will supply the bingo expertise. About 150 Cherokees have been hired, most of them part time, to help.

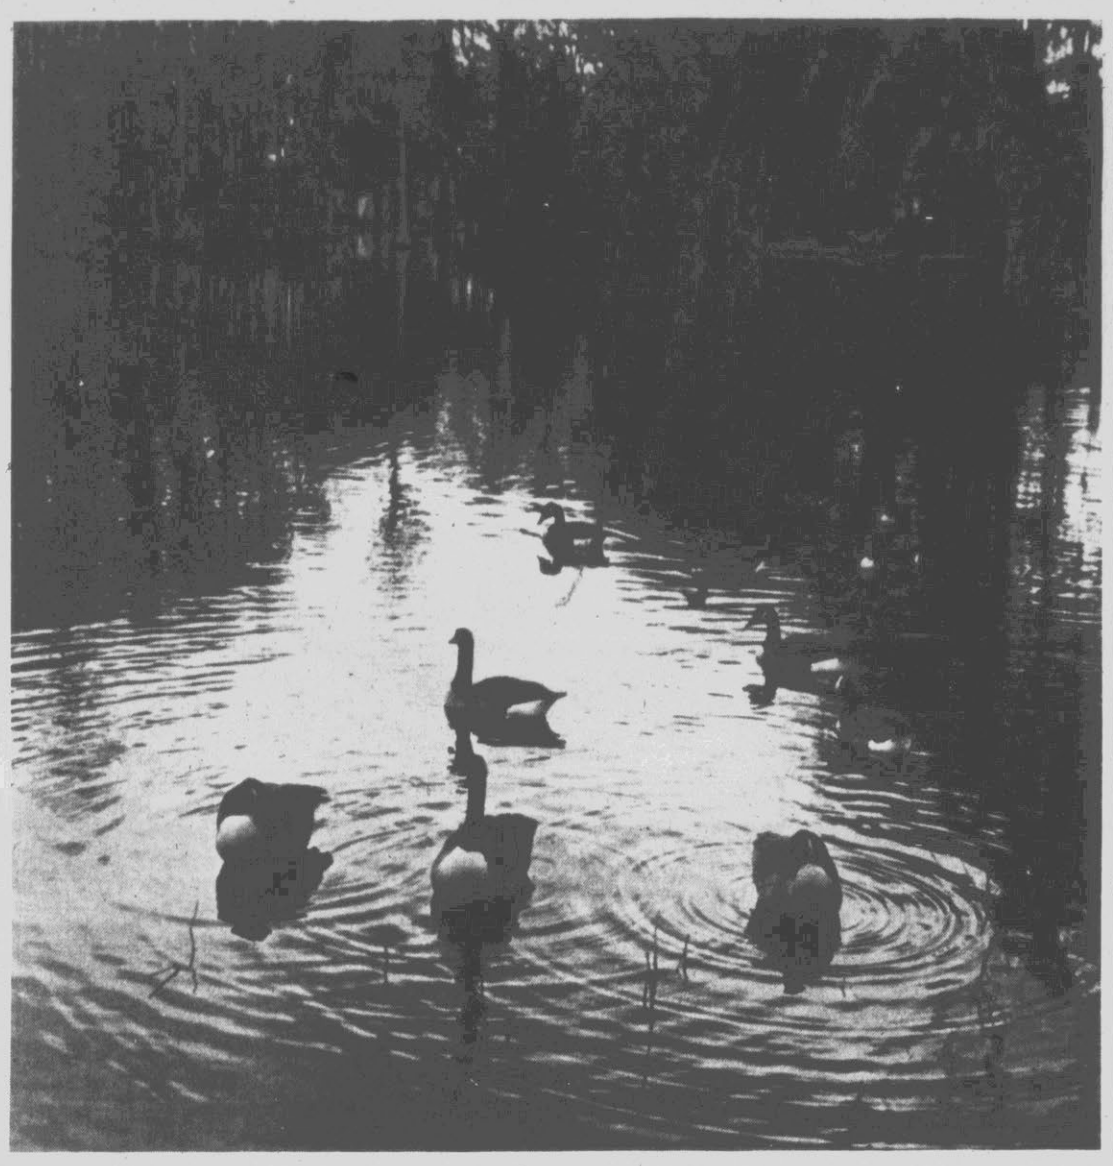

At the main evening session, players will pay a minimum of $50 to play 20 games, each paying $5,000, McCoy said. They also may pay an extra $15 to play four jackpot games paying $7,500 to $25,000 each.

Games will be scheduled for twice-monthly Saturdays for the next year, McCoy said.

The state attorney general's staff, concerned with possible violations of gambling laws, researched state law and court rulings.

"We haven't yet found any reason for which we felt we could step in," said John Elmore, special assistant to Attorney General Rufus Edmisten.

Down On The Old Millpond

A flock of Canada geese gently stirs the quiet water of a tranquil millpond in the edge of the Jones County town of Trenton. These geese, which are tame, are from the same family of birds that migrate each winter from their cold homeland in Canada to the warmer climate of the South. Accustomed to humans and the noise of vehicles passing by on a nearby highway, the Trenton geese seldom scare when approached, offering a picturesque attraction. As an added attraction, a flock of Mallard ducks has been sharing the pond this fall. (Reflecter photo by Stuart Savage)

HOW TO BUY A COMPUTER

By the time you read this document you will have realized that a Computer Professionals Incorporated (CPI) Computer System is more than just a small business computer. It is a systematic approach to the automation of your organization. It is your guarantee that:

1. The right hardware/software system for your organization will be installed.
2. You will always be in control of your vital business functions.
3. Your investment is 100% protected.

The following plan is presented to assure you that the necessary steps have been taken to make this protection meaningful.

Step 1 — Survey of Needs

Your CPI representatives spend a good deal of time in studying your volumes of business data. Why? They are vitally concerned about what you want out of your computer. This first visit with you is just the beginning of the fact gathering process that eventually will lead us to the presentation of the right business system for your organization. We probe for sufficient detail about your business to enable us to present hardware and software geared specifically to your company's needs.

Step 2 — Demonstration

The programs you see running during the demonstration are in use by our customers. We provide a live, running set of programs instead of a rigged or "canned" demonstration so that you can see all the facets of an actual demonstration. There are no hidden gimmicks! We go to great lengths to simplify the operation of the CPI Business Computer System for your clerical staff.

Step 3 — Agreement

Contained within our agreement are all of the necessary ingredients for a successful data processing installation, spelled out in language you can understand not computerese. The computer, programs, and support, are detailed with all related costs...nothing has been left out.

Upon approval of the agreement, we will begin preparations for you.

Step 4 — Implementation

As the plan points out we both have certain responsibilities which must be carried out in order to guarantee your satisfaction with your system. This plan is based on many years of experience in the installation of business computers. Let us put this experience to work for you.

Step 5 — Acceptance

This is the marriage of your business needs to current "State-of-the-Art" computer technology. You will see your programs running with representative data, producing your reports. This is the only way we can be sure that the right system has been proposed and that you are acquiring the most efficient and economical system for your organization.

Justice Says He Resents Name-Calling By Public

By ELIZABETH OLSON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Justice Harry Blackmun, in an unusual television interview broadcast Saturday, said he resented being called a "butcher" and "murderer" for the historic 1973 decision legalizing abortion.

"You can think of any name to call someone, and I have been called it — Butcher of Dachau, murderer, Pontius Pilate, King Herod — you name it," said the author of the decision.

Blackmun made the comments in an interview with Cable News Network as the court began its first sweeping review of the abortion controversy in a decade.

Blackmun said he agonized over the decision that legalized abortion, and noted he was denounced afterwards in an avalanche of mail. The 7-2 ruling became the prime target of the anti-abortion movement.

"I pulled no punches in that respect and did what (former Justice) Hugo Black had told me when I first came here not to do — namely, never display any agony in the decision making. I think that's usually pretty good advice, but I purposefully did not follow it here," he said.

The interview was the first inside a justice's office on court matters. Mrs. O'Connor gave a brief interview last year on another topic.

Giving a glimpse into the secret workings of the court, Blackmun said the justices, including himself, are "prima donnas" and admitted "there are times when it gets a little tense."

"I'm sure that we all play hardball a little too much on occasion," he said. "But if someone's going to play hardball with me, I'll play hardball back."

Blackmun, 74, was appointed by Richard Nixon in 1970. He has been edging toward the liberal wing of the court.

In recent months Blackmun has clashed with Justice O'Connor, appointed by President Reagan as the court's first woman and newest justice.

Blackmun noted Mrs. O'Connor appears to have joined the conservative wing. "The justice is able, articulate," he said. "She gives no quarter, she asks no quarter and she's a fine justice."

Blackmun recalled accidentally brushing his hearing aid and causing a beep to go off during the court's secret weekly conference.

"I did it a second time and Justice O'Connor said, 'I think the room is bugged.' And Justice (John Paul) Stevens immediately supported her."

Blackmun said he mischievously said nothing until another justice saw him brush the device during courtroom arguments. "Then, of course, the secret was out and we all laughed about it."

Blackmun also said he was not disturbed by efforts in Congress to strip the courts of jurisdiction in controversial issues like busing.

"Any congressman ... just as any citizen is entitled to that point of view. And it just might be that some of us don't believe in school busing as an ultimate remedy for everything," he said.

Court To Close Out Year

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court this week hears the year's last cases affecting who may run for the presidency, how far Congress may go in censoring government regulations and the rights of drunken drivers.

In the last round of oral arguments before the court breaks for a four-week holiday recess, lawyers for 1980 presidential candidate John Anderson will urge the justices Monday to strike down state election laws that make it difficult for independent candidates to get on the ballot.

On Tuesday attorneys for the co-equal Congress will try to convince the court to uphold the congressional power to veto agency regulations it does not like.

Also seeking a high court reversal will be law enforcement officials in South Dakota, who want permission to use a driver's refusal to take a blood alcohol test as evidence against him in drunken driving cases.

The court likely will not rule on the cases until spring.

In Anderson's case, there is no rush for an opinion. Whatever happens will have no direct impact on the former Illinois congressman.

But if Anderson wins — and the court strikes down an Ohio election law that threatened to keep him off the ballot in 1980 — it could open the door to more independent bids for the White House in 1984.

Anderson is challenging an Ohio law — similar to some in other states — that compels an unaffiliated presidential candidate to register for the state ballot as much as five months before Republicans, Democrats and registered third parties must declare who their candidate is.

Tuesday's arguments on Congress' "legislative veto powers" will pit Congress against the executive branch in a historic battle over the Constitution's separation-of-powers rule.

Attorneys for the Senate and House will debate a Reagan administration lawyer over whether Congress legally can veto regulations written by executive branch or independent government agencies. The lower court ruled the legislative veto is unconstitutional.

The case before the Supreme Court tests only one use of Congress' veto in an immigration matter. But its practical effects could be far-reaching.

Congress has given itself veto powers under more than 200 laws involving war powers, consumer product safety and labor issues. The legislative veto almost was used to block the sale of AWACS radar planes to Saudi Arabia. Just last May, Congress did use it to override a controversial Federal Trade Commission rule on used car sales.

Joining in the national concern over traffic deaths caused by intoxicated motorists, the justices Wednesday examine a South Dakota ruling that a driver's refusal to take a blood alcohol test cannot be used against him in court.

The state court found it would violate the driver's Fifth Amendment right not to incriminate himself. South Dakota prosecutors, who brought the appeal, contend they ought to be able to admit in court if an allegedly drunk driver refused to take a "breathalyzer" test.

Free Clinic Helps Poor

CLEVELAND (AP) — Hundreds of poor, laid-off and homeless people accepted a hot lunch, groceries and a free medical examination Saturday, courtesy of the employees of St. John Hospital.

"It's been two years since I had a physical," said Ken Burton, 44, who has been laid off as a skilled machine repairman for 2½ years. "I think this is the first time I've smiled in a couple of weeks."

The only thing doctors could find wrong with him was blistered feet. Burton, who has no home, spends a lot of time walking because "when you stay at the Salvation Army, they only let you stay for a night, then you have to move on."

The free, one-day clinic provided lunch for about 500 people and physicals for about 200.

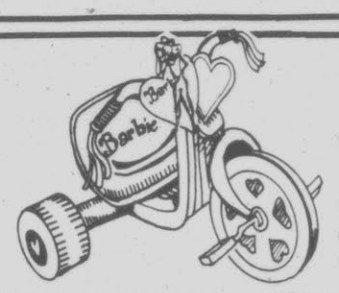

The employees of the west side hospital "were trying to figure out what we could do for the neighborhood at Christmas," said Dr. Carla Streepy. "It was a real slow time in the emergency room."

An anonymous donor gave the project $2,000, which was used to buy groceries, and the hospital donated food and facilities for a spaghetti lunch.

Wives Strike For More Attention

SMITHFIELD, R.I. (AP) — Fifteen housewives who say they are overworked and underloved have declared themselves on strike until their husbands stop taking them for granted.

"Appreciation isn't too much to ask for a slave who's on call 24 hours a day," said Terry Waterman, one of the group of neighbors which has sworn off cooking, cleaning and other other household chores until their husbands meet their demands.

Five of the women were on the picket line for a second day Saturday outside their homes in their neighborhood of this rural town northwest of Providence.

"We'll do absolutely none of the things that wives and mothers are normally expected to do," vowed the movement organizer, Gloria Gangi. She carried a homemade sign that asked: "Have You Hugged Your Wife Today"?

"The strike won't end until all the husbands get together and agree to pull their weight and show us some recognition for all the work we do. There'll be no meals, no laundry, no nothing," she said.

The women said they will take care of their children during the walkout.

However, Jim Gangi, who was minding their 18-month-old son Saturday while his wife was picketing, said he doubts the strike will change things much.

"I mean, what can she do? If she doesn't cook she won't have anything to eat," Gangi said. "If she doesn't do the laundry, she's not going to have clean clothes to wear.

"I didn't put a gun to her head and force her to get married and have a baby. That's what she wanted."

State To Help Selective Service

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Starting this week, the Selective Service system will get some help from North Carolina's motor vehicles division in tracking down men ages 18 to 22 who have not registered for the draft.

R.W. Wilkins, state motor vehicles commissioner, said his office will begin combing its driver's license records for young male drivers. The Selective Service had reached similar agreements with 44 other states by Friday.

Officials say about 5.5 percent of an estimated 250,000 North Carolina men eligible for draft registration have failed to sign up since the Reagan admininistration reinstated the registration requirement two years ago.

North Carolina's drivers' records are public.

The results of the motor vehicles division search will be sent to the Selective Service in Great Lakes, Ill. Wilkins told the Charlotte Observer the Selective Service will pay at least $4,000 for the list.

Men born since Jan. 1, 1960, are required to submit their names, addresses and Social Security numbers within 30 days of turning 18.

William McCachren, director of the North Carolina Selective Service office, said his office has asked every high school to post draft registration requirements and broadcast them over public address systems.

Medicine Man Still Holds Spot In Indian Hospital

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer

CHEROKEE, N.C. (AP) — At first glance, the Cherokee Indian Hospital looks like the most advanced facility modern medicine can offer.

But inside its earth-banked walls, underneath a roof bristling with solar panels and beside rooms packed with the latest diagnostic equipment, some patients are being healed through traditional Indian medicine generations old.

"With Indian medicine, there is no cure or treatment," said hospital administrator Dr. J.T. Garrett, who is also an apprentice medicine man in the Cherokee tradition. "The medicine man helps the patients cure themselves."

Garrett, 40, said his dream is to combine the best of modern and Indian medicine at the hospital, which serves almost 10,000 members of the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians living on or near the Qualla reservation in the mountains of western North Carolina.

Garrett is not a physician but has a doctorate in health education.

Many of the details of Indian medicine are "quasi-secret" and are passed down from a medicine man to his apprentices only over years of observing and fasting, Garrett said. Many medicine practitioners won't even discuss their art with fellow Indians, much less white people, he said.

Garrett said his own position is sensitive because he is a "tsilaghe unag" — Indian for half-Cherokee. That means some Cherokee do not accept his ideas about traditional medicine, he said.

Garrett studied for about 23 years with Amoneeta Sequoyah, a medicine man who died last year at the age of 80. "It was seven years before he would take me into his confidence," he said.

Beginning when he was 12 years old, Garrett began having visions of "circles coming together."

"I began to interpret it myself as different belief systems coming together in a different approach," he said. "My vision quest was to bridge the gap between modern medicine and traditional medicine."

Garrett earned a bachelor's degree in biochemistry, a two-year degree in environmental health and a master's degree in public health before earning his doctorate. At one point he had vowed never to return to the reservation, but said Sequoyah had advised him that one day all his education and experience would become integrated with his Indian roots.

Indian medicine is based on the belief that sickness is caused by a physical, mental or spiritual imbalance that the patient must correct himself, Garrett said.

"It's like holistic medicine, but it doesn't have the false sense of hope of holistic medicine," Garrett said. "You may not be able to be healed ... in which case you need a support system to accept death. Even death was (traditionally) considered precious."

Jamscam Sessions To Begin

By CANDEE WILDE

CONCORD, N.C. (UPI) — Three former Jaycee leaders go on trial Monday on charges of misapplying funds during the Jamscam scandal that rocked the charitable organization.

Former state Jaycee President Johnny Fletcher of Concord; former Jaycee national chairman Robert Rushton of Gray, Ga.; and former Charlotte Jaycee president Thomas Alsop are charged with misapplying Jaycee funds raised for charity.

All three have pleaded innocent.

Two former state Jaycee leaders will testify for the prosecution in Cabarrus County Superior Court, where the case was moved because of pretrial publicity.

Maurice H. Wilson, the former state Jaycee executive director, and former state Jaycee President J. Harold Herring — once a candidate for national Jaycee president — agreed to testify under plea-bargaining agreements that led to reduced charges against them.

They will be sentenced following the trial.

A 1980 investigation revealed up to $239,000 in Jaycee funds were diverted to non-charitable purposes. The investigation was named Jamscam because much of the money was raised from the sale of grape jelly for the North Carolina Burn Center in Chapel Hill.

Authorities contend some of the money was used to pay membership dues for fake chapters in order to pad enrollment figures and enchance the state Jaycee organization's image with the national Jaycees.

The state Jaycees won national membership awards, but enrollment tumbled from 23,000 in 1979 to 7,772 last year following the scandal.

Wilson, 37, pleaded guilty in June 1981 to 13 charges involving the diversion of funds. He had been charged with more than 70 counts, but the rest were dropped. Wilson was the only one of the five tried in Randolph County, where the state Jaycee headquarters are located.

The trial was moved to Cabarrus County a month after Wilson entered his plea.

Herring pleaded no contest to two charges involving $16,700 in misapplied funds late last year. Six other charges against him were dropped.

Belhaven Man Held In Theft

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A Belhaven man was arrested Friday and charged in Thursday's robbery of the Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. in Belhaven, the FBI said.

James Marshal Jenkins, 31, was arrested for violation of a federal bank robbery statute and his two brothers, Kenneth Artro Jenkins, 21, and William Irving Jenkins, 33, also of Belhaven, were arrested and charged as accessories after the fact of bank robbery.

The trio had a hearing before the Eastern District U.S. Magistrate Charles K. McCotter Jr. in New Bern Friday. Bond was set for James Jenkins at $20,000, and at $15,000 each for his brothers.

The three were being held in the Craven County jail in New Bern.

Hunt Requests Judicial Help In Anti-DUI Drive

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt has written North Carolina judges, district attorneys and lawyers in a plea for support to strengthen state laws dealing with drunken drivers.

"We must ... restore the faith of our citizens in their judicial system," Hunt wrote. "As attorneys, you and I must face the unpleasant fact that many people in our state believe that our courts do not deal seriously and effectively with drunk-driving cases."

To restore that faith, Hunt urged the group to support recommendations which his Governor's Task Force on Drunken Drivers presented last month. The task force recommended that the General Assembly raise the legal drinking age to 19, write a new driving-while-impaired law to replace the existing driving-under-the-influence law and require prosecutors to explain publicly whey they plea bargain in drunken driving cases.

Hunt said he did not expect everyone to support all 30 recommendations and acknowledged that he has not decided whether to support all of them. But he praised the proposals because they "not only will give us fairer and more effective tools for punishing drunk drivers, but also change our attitudes, as individuals and as a society, about drinking and driving."

Hunt explained that he was appealing to the legal community for help because that is where citizens look for sound judgment and responsible leadership.

Device Aids In Crib Deaths

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — A home monitoring system that warns parents about signs of Sudden Infant Death Syndrome is helping save lives of North Carolina children, say workers at N.C. Memorial Hospital.

The syndrome, also called crib death, occurs when an apparently normal infant dies suddenly and unexpectedly, usually during sleep. There is no known cause for the disorder, which accounts for one-third of the deaths of children between the age of one week and one year.

Peak age for the syndrome is between two and four months. Approximately 2,000 children in the United States die from the disorder each year.

Between 12 and 15 babies now are participating in the hospital's year-old Infant Monitoring Program. Doctors identify high-risk children. The hospital loans several of the expensive machines used to monitor breathing and heart rates and educates families on their use.

The monitor involves placing electrodes on the child's skin. When breathing rates or heart rates drop to a certain point, an alarm goes off.

"Some infants are felt to be at a greater risk for crib death than others," said Dr. Marianna Henry, pediatric pulmonary fellow at N.C. Memorial. "Infants which quit breathing often become limp and blue and require vigorous stimulation by their parents."

Infants who are brothers or sisters of a crib death victim also may be at a slightly increased risk and may be candidates for home monitoring, Ms. Henry said.

After physicians identify the high risk children, nurses teach the parents how to work the equipment and how to resuscitate the infant.

"Since the monitors trigger an alarm when the infant's heart or respiratory rate falls below a normal level, we teach them what to do if the alarm should go off," said Polly Johnson, pediatric nurse clinician.

Social workers at the hospital help families cope with the stress of having a baby on a monitor.

The hospital has seven monitors donated by various groups and individuals. The monitors, which cost about $1,600 each, also may be rented from commercial programs for between $250 and $300 a month.

Dental Tips

By Dr. Robert Capps, Dr. Danny Qualliotine and Dr. Gary Michels

WHAT KIND OF FILLING?

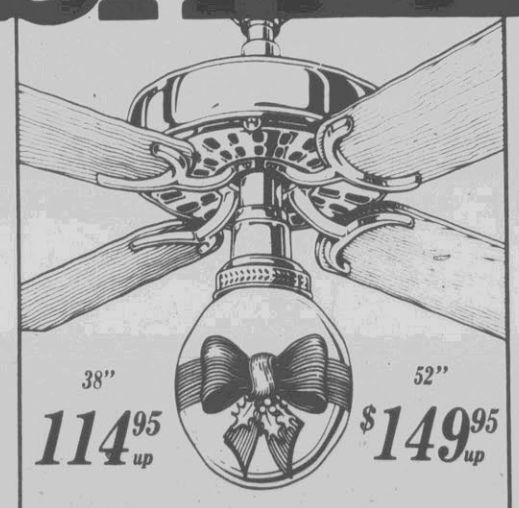

Q: How does a dentist determine what type of filling to use in a tooth?

A: A silver alloy is usually the best filling to use in most dental cavities because it is durable and inexpensive, and does the job of sealing the opening of the tooth against further decay. However, when the tooth is damaged extensively, gold is the better filling material, because the silver alloy is not strong enough to withstand chewing pressures and will fracture.

The third filling choice, a mix of resin and plastic, is used in front (anterior) teeth because it blends with the natural tooth color and looks better. Not as durable as the other two filling materials, it requires periodic replacing, as it stains and washes out.

Tar Heels Rally To Nip LSU

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — After No. 15 North Carolina rallied to beat unranked Louisiana State 47-43 Saturday, Tar Heels coach Dean Smith said it was a strange college basketball game.

"It was one of the strangest I've ever been involved in," said Smith, who has been the head coach at North Carolina for 21 years.

Michael Jordan, who gave North Carolina the national title last year when he hit a jump shot with less than 20 seconds remaining against Georgetown, sank three foul shots in the final 37 seconds and Buzz Peterson scored 18 points, all in the second half, as the Tar Heels boosted their record to 2-2. Louisiana St. fell to 3-2.

Forward Matt Doherty converted two foul shots in a one-and-one situation in the final four seconds for North Carolina, which rallied from a 21-9 halftime deficit and went almost 11 minutes without a field goal in the first half.

"Coach Smith told us at halftime we were only down by 12 points," Doherty said. "Losing 21-9 is the same as losing 52-40. Forget about our point total."

Behind Peterson, who converted nine straight field goals in the second half, North Carolina turned the game around.

"I told them to take their time and hit the open shot," Smith said.

Peterson, a sophomore guard who scored only 35 points all last season, said, "All I did was hit the open shot."

Jordan made both shots in a one-and-one situation with 37 seconds left to give North Carolina a 44-43 lead. The 6-foot-5 sophomore guard was fouled while driving toward the basket after he slapped the ball away from Tiger guard Howard Carter. Louisiana St. committed 10 of its 18 turnovers in the second half.

Jordan added another free throw with nine seconds left after he was fouled taking down a rebound of a missed Louisiana St. shot. Jordan finished with 13 points, nine in the second half.

Peterson scored 12 of the Tar Heels' first 14 points to pull them to within one. Center Sam Perkins' hook shot with 12:48 left gave North Carolina its first lead, 25-24, since the opening minutes of the game.

Perkins, a 6-9 junior, finished with 10 points, eight in the second half.

North Carolina scored the first two field goals of the game, but didn't score another one for 10:51 as Louisiana St. raced to a 19-5 lead. The Tar Heels' only point in that span was a technical foul shot made by Doherty.

North Carolina converted only four of 16 field goal attempts in the first half and

Herschel Walker

Walker Captures Heisman

NEW YORK (AP) — Herschel Walker of top-ranked Georgia, whose sprinter's speed and bull-like power have him on the brink of college football's all-time rushing mark, finally won the Heisman Trophy Saturday night after two narrow misses.

Walker, third in the voting as a freshman and second as a sophomore, won easily over Stanford quarterback John Elway, major college football's all-time passing leader, and Southern Methodist tailback Eric Dickerson, the top ground-gainer in Southwest Conference history,

Crediting his teammates for his winning the honor, Walker said:

"People have to make people. I've been surrounded by fine athletes and people who have helped me. Life is a team, and if it wasn't for them, I wouldn't be here."

Walker also squelched any speculation that he might skip his final year at Georgia to play professional football.

"College has helped me be a better person," he said when explaining he would return to school for his senior year.

Only a junior, the 6-foot-1, 220-pound Walker ranks third on the all-time NCAA rushing list with 5,259 yards and needs only 823 yards next year to take over the top spot. It also puts him in position to win a second Heisman, a feat accomplished previously only by Ohio State tailback Archie Griffin in 1974 and 1975.

"I had a great deal of doubt that I would win it because there were so many fine athletes," Walker said.

Dickerson, who also attended the ceremonies, said: "I don't feel bad. I feel I lost to a great athlete and a great person."

Walker is the 32nd running back to win the Heisman, awarded annually by the Downtown Athletic Club of New York to "the outstanding college football player in the United States." Nebraska flankerback Johnny Rodgers in 1972 was the last non-running back and Pat Sullivan of Auburn in 1971 was the last quarterback.

Only two linemen, both ends, have ever won the award — Larry Kelley of Yale in 1936 and Leon Hart of Notre Dame in 1949.

Walker, a 6-foot-1, 220-pound blend of power and world class sprinter speed, carried all six of the Heisman voting regions. Rounding out the list of top 10 finishers behind Walker, Elway and Dickerson were Anthony Carter of Michigan, Dave Rimington of Nebraska, Todd Blackledge of Penn Sate, Tom Ramsey of UCLA, Tony Eason of Illinois, Dan Marino of Pitt, Mike Rozier of Nebraska and Curt Warner of Penn State.

As a freshman in 1980, Walker finished third in the Heisman voting behind South Carolina tailback George Rogers and Pitt defensive end Hugh Green. Last year, he was runner-up to Southern California tailback Marcus Allen, who set a single-season rushing mark of 2,342 yards.

Although hampered by a broken thumb that limited him to 11 carries for 20 yards in the 1982 opener, the Wrightsville, Ga., native was the nation's second leading rusher this year behind Oklahoma State's Ernest Anderson with 335 carries for 1,752 yards as he led Georgia to an 11-0 record and a No. 1 regular-season ranking.

With one year left in his collegiate career, Walker trails only Tony Dorsett of Pitt (6,082 yards, bowl games not included) and Charles White of Southern

East Carolina Men, Women Victorious

Denkler's 32 Key Lady Bucs

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Mary Denkler pushed through 32 points and Loraine Foster added 22 as East Carolina University's Lady Pirates kept their Minges Coliseum record intact last night with an 81-70 victory over previously unbeaten St. Peter's.

Denkler missed only three times during the evening, hitting 12 of 14 shots from the floor and eight of nine at the line as she just missed her season and career high of 33, set in the opener against Fayetteville State.

And help came from an unexpected source as Caren Truske pushed through ten points, a career high, as she played her first full game and probably the best of her career. Delphine Mabry, making her second start for the Lady Pirates, added nine, while Fran Hooks pushed through eight.

Those five players were on the court for all but a total of five minutes out of a possible 200.

"I was more nervous about this game than any we've played," Coach Cathy Andruzzi said. "This was a critical game for us. It gave the girls a chance to prove what they could do against a very good team."

St. Peter's came into the game following a 67-56 victory over Villanova, a team that handed the Pirates a 72-59 spanking last year.

"They (St. Peter's) beat Villanova at (Villanova's) place. They are a very good team, but I wanted this one for the kids. They played their hearts out against State (a 75-63 loss earlier this week).

"We played not to lose tonight instead of to win, but that's okay. We were hesitant and their guards gave us trouble."

There were times when the Pirates, playing their second game in three days, looked sluggish. Andruzzi, who admitted to holding a practice session Saturday afternoon, said that the team was tired, but more mentally tired than anything else.

During the first half, East Carolina grabbed a quick four point lead, but then fell behind by as many as eight points during the middle of the period.

But Denkler and Foster guided a comeback that pushed ECU ahead by as many as 12 before the half came to an end.

Denkler, seven of nine in the half from the floor, hit from the inside, and Foster, seven of 11, scored from the outside on long jumpers. St. Peter's Amanda Berry countered some of that with 12 points of her own.

The quickness of Berry and Blanche Jones helped to cause the Pirates some of their problems. A layup by Berry gave the Lady Peacocks their first lead at 8-6, and a three-foot jumper by Bonita Singleton returned them to the lead at 12-10.

St. Peter's held the lead — or were tied with the Lady Pirates — over the next five minutes, moving out as much as eight at 20-12 on two baskets by Berry, and jumpers from Debbie Anderson and Maribel Ewens.

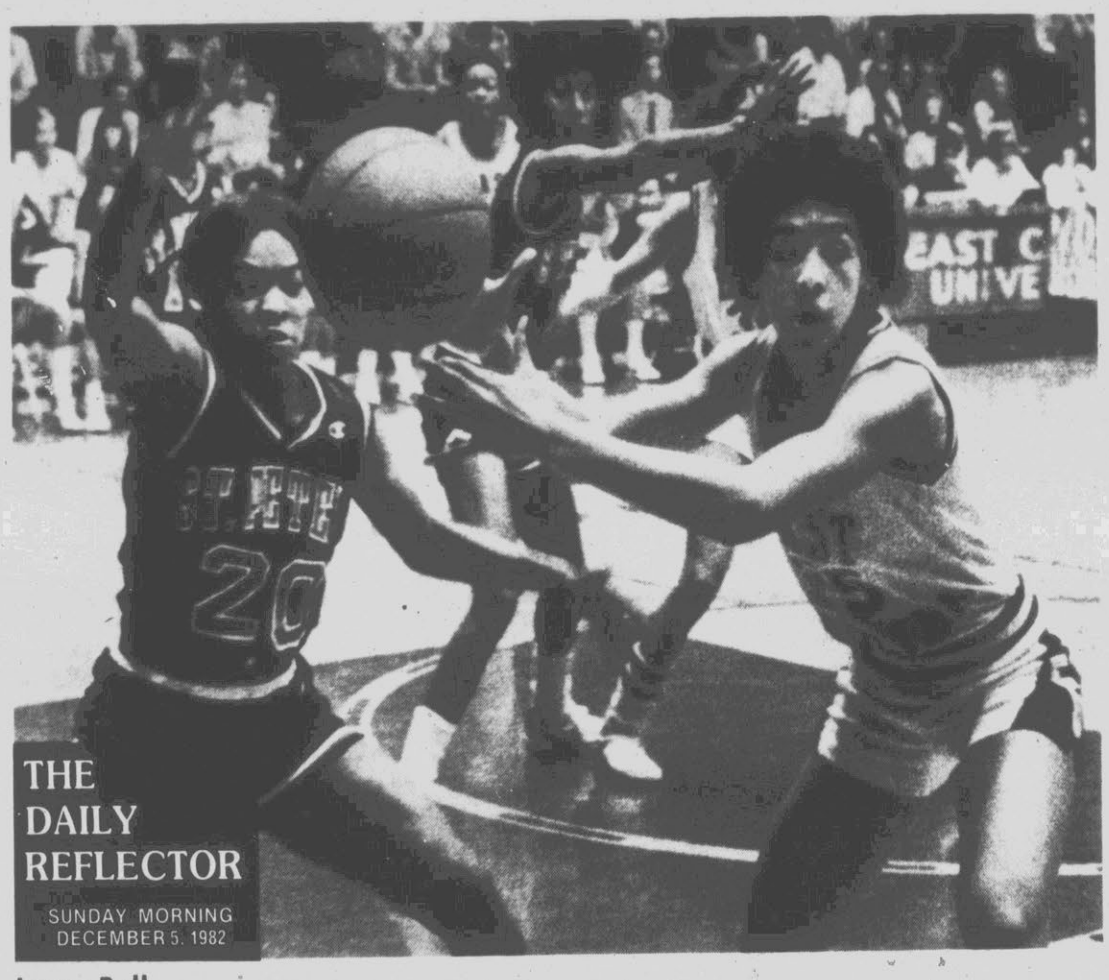

Truske hit to tie it at 20-all after Denkler had hit a layup and two free throws. Jones made two free throws to move St. Peter's back out, but Foster's jumper tied it up for the last time, and then hit again to put ECU ahead for good, 24-22.

Foster added a jumper and Denkler hit from the lane to run the lead out to six. Truske added two late jumpers to open up a 12-point lead, 36-24, and the Pirates took a 38-26 lead into the dressing room.

ECU ran its lead out to as much as 14 points early in the period and held a 10-14 point lead throughout the first ten minutes — until Jones and Thompson both hit to cut the lead back to six, 56-50. The Pirates ran it back out to 12, but again St. Peter's cut it back to eight, 64-56, with 6:41 left.

Denkler then hit, followed with two free throws, added two more at the line after that, then hit on a layup to run the lead back oto 14. A three-point play by Mabry upped the lead to 17, 75-58, with 3:29 left, and it was all over.

Pirates Edge 'Dogs, 87-81

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — Bruce Peartree hit three crucial free throws in the final minute of play, and freshman Johnny Edwards pushed through 28 points to help East Carolina University to an 87-81 victory over Samford University last night in Birmingham.

Coach Charlie Harrison called the victory a crucial one for the Pirates — their first on the road — in the pre-Christmas schedule for ECU.

East Carolina gained the lead with about seven minutes left on a jumper by Tony Robinson at 69-68. Charles Green added a layup to run the lead to three, and Samford never got closer than two again, despite having several opportunities.

Barry Wright hit three of the next four Pirate baskets to keep them in front before Edwards made two free throws with 1:18 left for an 83-78 lead. A three-point play by Ricky Moore cut the lead to two, 83-81, but Peartree made the first of two free throws with 46 seconds left. Lanauze Hollis then missed on a shot and Green got the loose ball and was fouled.

He made the first of the one-and-one attempt, but Samford, aftrer getting the rebound, missed again and Edwards got the rebound out to Peartree, who was again fouled.

This time he hit both of them.

That made it 87-81 — the final margin.

The fast-paced game, the Homecoming affair for Samford before a packed house, saw both teams go almost point-for-point in the first half. For most of the first half, it was shot-for-shot, with neither team able to get ahead more than two points.

Finally, with about five and a half minutes left, ECU got a basket from David Harris for a 33-30 lead and the Pirates slowly moved out to as much as a seven point edge, 41-37 on a basket by Robinson and two free throws by the freshman point guard. Over the final minute, however, the Bulldogs cut into the lead and trailed by only 42-40 at intermission.

The first half had seen 14 ties before the Pirates finally broke away from Samford.

Darryl Hagler put Samford back into the lead, 43-42 early in the second half, and the Bulldogs moved out by as much as three points, 52-48, on a three-point play by Hollis.

Cavs Place 4 In Double Figures

No. 1 UVa Rolls By VMI, 86-41

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — Virginia Coach Terry Holland, pleased after his top-ranked Cavaliers blitzed Virginia Military 86-41 Saturday night, said, "We got what we would like to get in a game like this at this time of the year."

The Cavaliers, making their final home appearance in six weeks, placed four players in double figures with Jimmy Miller leading the way.

"We got to look at a lot of people," said Holland. "We got good play off the bench and we played good defense. For the most part I was very pleased with how hard we played. We ran the offense, took care of the ball and played good, hard defense."

VMI Coach Marty Fletcher said, "We came in here with a positive attitude. We had some goals for our team and we accomplished some of them. We weren't happy with the point spread, of course, but we did want to hold Virginia to around 80 points and hold Ralph (Sampson) to two slams. He only got one."

Virginia begins its long road trip Wednesday at Duke in the Atlantic Coast Conference opener for both teams. The Cavaliers then meet Georgetown Dec. 11 at the Capital Centre in Washington, D.C.

Playing before the 30th consecutive sellout crowd in University Hall, the Cavaliers upped their record to 4-0 and established a school record with their 34th straight victory at home. The old mark of 33 was set between 1912 and 1916.

It was the 25th triumph in a row against state competition for Virginia, which got 15 points from Miller, 12 from Tim Mullen and 10 each from Ralph Sampson and Rick Carlisle.

VMI, 0-3 and loser of 34 of its last 35 games, got 12 points from Cedric Wins, who fouled out with 6:14 to play. VMI has lost 22 consecutive games on the road.

Virginia, beating VMI for the 11th straight time, jumped out to a 14-4 lead in the first 3½ minutes and never looked back.

Midway through the half, the Cavaliers got a followup by Dan Merrifield, a short jumper by Miller, a drive by Ricky Stokes and a 15-footer from Mullen to up an 18-point bulge, 28-10, with 9:03 left before intermission.

Another 8-0 run on baskets by Carlisle,

Wake Forest Demolishes UNC-A

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — John Toms and Alvis Rogers scored nine points in a 13-2 Wake Forest scoring spree Saturday night and the Demon Deacons cruised to a 72-54 college basketball victory over North Carolina-Asheville.

Toms finished with a game-high 17 points on seven of nine from the field. Rogers scored 16 and grabbed 10 rebounds. Danny Young scored 13 for Wake Forest, which climbed to 2-0.

After the Bulldogs mounted a comeback that erased a seven-point deficit and tied the game at 45-all with 9:54 to play, the Demon Deacons scored five straight points and added eight more after a UNC-Asheville basket to take 58-47 lead with 5:26 left.

Wake Forest led 37-29 before center Pat Jolley keyed UNC-Asheville's comeback with three baskets. Later, with the game tied at 45, Toms scored on a three-point play and Rogers canned a pair of jump shots. Four free throws and a fast break layup by Toms put Wake Forest up by 11.

The Demon Deacons never trailed after tying the game at 8-8 early in the first half, but the Bulldogs scored six of the final eight points of the half to cut the lead to 32-29 at intermission.

UNC-Asheville, now 5-3, was led by guard Paul Allen with 12 points.

Wake Forest shot only 49 percent from the field and was hampered by 40 percent foul shooting. They forced the Bulldogs into 23 turnovers, including 10 in the final nine minutes.

THE VOTE

NFL Players Delay For One Day Polling Of Teams On Contract

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Football League Players Association said Saturday it has delayed for one day the polling of team representatives on whether to recommend ratification of the proposed contract with team owners.

The union announced Friday that the 28 player representatives would be vote by telephone Friday night and Saturday on whether to recommend approval of the Nov. 16 settlement which ended the union's 57-day strike.

However, union spokesmen said the non-binding vote by the reps could not be completed until Saturday night because some players were traveling to Sunday games and could not be reached.

Jay Benoit and Doug Allen, the spokesmen, said the results of the vote would be made public on Sunday, if all 28 representatives are reached.

They declined to say how many representatives they had reached.

On Friday, Ed Garvey, the union's executive director, said the 1,500 members of the association will vote Wednesday on whether to ratify the five-year proposal, which the league says provides for $1.6 billion in total player costs over the length of the pact.

Players will sign their ballots, which then will be collected by their representatives and sent to the union's headquarters in Washington.

Since the two sides agreed on a tentative settlement in New York, Garvey and union officials have met periodically with management negotiators and with Paul Martha, a Pittsburgh lawyer and former player who served as an intermediary in the final stages of the talks, in an effort to clarify language and clear up remaining issues.

Garvey said in his statement that he and Martha agreed Friday afternoon "that agreement had been reached on all outstanding bargaining issues. There will be no further modifications."

Management had been saying since Nov. 16 that the deal reached in New York was a complete agreement and that there would be no further modificatons.

Asked for comment Friday on Garvey's statement, the NFL Management Council, the bargaining agent for the owners, said Martha no longer represented management.

Garvey has declined to discuss the details of his talks with Martha.

Among the outstanding issues had been the length of the season, the status of unfair labor practice complaints pending against the NFL, players' rights to sue the league as individuals, and the continuation of the college draft in its present form through 1992.

Napoleon Leads Navy's Charge Past Army

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Army Coach Ed Cavanaugh said he was "realistic" about his future after ending his third consecutive losing season Saturday with a 24-7 loss to arch-rival Navy.

Cavanaugh, whose three-year contract ends this season, said if Army officials are concerned about his record, "it's very understandable after a demonstration like that.

"It's wins and losses," added the 54-year-old coach, who compiled a 4-7 record this season and a 10-21-2 mark in three years at West Point. "I know that."

Lt. Gen. Willard Scott, superintendent at the academy, declined to say whether Cavanaugh's job is in jeopardy.

At halftime, Scott told The Associated Press: "It's more than this game that decides coaches."

Navy defeated Army behind the running of Napoleon McCallum and Rich Clouse to continue its recent domination of the 83-game series between the two military schools.

McCallum scored Navy's first touchdown on a 3-yard run in the first period and gained 88 yards for the game as Navy defeated Army for the 39th time. Army has won 37 games in the series and seven have ended in ties.

Army managed to score its first opening-quarter touchdown since 1977, but the Cadets could do little else against a strong Navy defense.

Turnovers set up all the first-half points as Navy moved out to a 10-7 lead.

Army's defense held on the opening series of the game, and Navy was forced to punt. But Dee Bryant bobbled the punt and Navy's Rick Pagel fell on the ball at the 9.

Three plays later, McCallum scored from the 3 and Todd Solomon added the conversion to give Navy a 7-0 lead.

Navy widened its lead to 10-0 on a 24-yard field goal by Solomon less than two minutes later.

The boot was set up when Army quarterback Rich Laughlin threw a pass right to Navy rover Brian Cianella.

With 6:30 left in the first period, Navy's Clouse bobbled on his 16-yard-line and Army's Mike Staver recovered.

Six plays later, Laughlin scored from 3 yards out on an option play. The kick by Craig Stopa made it 10-7.

Navy scored again with 3:33 left in the third quarter, on a 17-yard pass from quarterback Ricky Williamson to split end Bill Cebak, with Solomon kicking the extra point.

Clouse, who gained 64 yards for the game, rushed for 16 yards on four carries during the drive to set up the touchdown.

A minute into the fourth quarter, Navy closed out the scoring on a 1-yard run by Jim Scannell.

Solomon kicked the point after.

Texas Shocks Arkansas, 33-7

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas quarterback Robert Brewer cashed three Arkansas mistakes into touchdowns with his bulls-eye passing Saturday and the No. 12-ranked Longhorns clinched second place in the Southwest Conference with a 33-7 upset over the No. 6-ranked Razorbacks.

The Sun Bowl-bound Longhorns, who meet North Carolina Christmas Day, finished the regular season 9-2 overall and 7-1 in the SWC.

Bluebonnet Bowl-bound Arkansas, playing New Year's Eve against Florida, was third in the SWC with records of 8-2-1 and 5-2-1.

Arkansas, which hasn't won in Austin since 1966, was its own worst enemy with a series of critical mistakes before 67,092 Memorial Stadium fans and a national television audience.

Quarterback Tom Jones, who suffered a broken arm in the second quarter, yielded a first-period interception that led to Ervin Davis' 1-yard scoring run following a brilliant series of completions by Brewer.

Arkansas struck back for a 7-7 tie on a 46-yard scoring pass from Brad Taylor to Gary Anderson, but the Longhorns pounced on another error.

Defensive end Kiki DeAyala read the option to perfection and batted down a Taylor pitch, then recovered the ball at the Longhorn 21.

Brewer struck three plays later with a 37-yard touchdown pass to the fleet Herkie Walls, who had outdistanced the Arkansas secondary.

Anderson fumbled a punt with less than two minutes to play in the half and Texas quickly made it 21-7. Ronnie Mullins claimed the ball at the Arkansas 19 and Brewer sneaked across from the 1-yard line six plays later, after he set up the score with a 13-yard pass.

Reserve running back Mike Luck scampered 9 yards in the third period against the tired Arkansas defense for the Longhorns fourth touchdown.

A 45-yard fourth quarter field goal by Raul Allegre also came courtesy of an Arkansas interception.

Texas now has a 48-16-0 lead over the Razorbacks in their all-time series. The win gave the Longhorns some measure of revenge for a 42-11 defeat by Arkansas last year, when Texas was ranked No. 1 in the nation.

Arkansas center Greg Garrison gave the Longhorns two more points late in the fourth period when he snapped the ball over punter Taylor's head out of the end zone.

The Razorbacks had three scoring chances in the second half but Martin Smith missed a 40-yard field-goal try, Taylor's fourth-down pass on the Texas 23 fell incomplete, and Taylor was intercepted with 15 seconds to go at the Texas 13.

Gators Upend FSU, 13-10

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Jim Gainey's 22-yard field goal with 3:32 left to play capped a methodical grind-it-out drive that lasted almost 8½ minutes and gave underdog Florida a 13-10 victory Saturday night over 15th-ranked Florida State in an intrastate rivalry between bowl-bound college football teams.

Florida trailed 10-0 until second-string quarterback Bob Hewko replaced Wayne Peace with 3½ minutes left in the first half and led the Gators on a quick 67-yard touchdown drive, scoring himself on a 10-yard keeper. Gainey tied the score with a 23-yard field goal midway through the third period.

The Gators, who will meet Arkansas in the Bluebonnet Bowl, wound up their regular season with an 8-3 record. Florida State also finished 8-3 and the Seminoles will face West Virginia in the Gator Bowl.

Florida State built its 10-0 lead on Philip Hall's 37-yard field 10 plays after the opening kickoff and Greg Allen's 3-yard touchdown run early in the second quarter. It was the 21st touchdown of the season for Allen, the nation's leaing scorer.

Florida's winning drive began with 11:55 remaining after Hall was wide to the left on a chip-shot 26-yard field goal attempt, his first miss of the season following six successful three-pointers.

The march included strong running by Lorenzo Hampton and Neal Anderson, a 13-yard screen pass from Hewko to Hampton and an 18-yard pass interference call against Florida State's Larry Harris that gave the Gators a first down at the Seminoles' 2-yard line.

Florida State then reached the Florida 32 with 1:32 seconds left but managed only one yard on four plays.

Augustana 0

PHENIX CITY, Ala. (AP) — Quarterback David Archer shocked Augustana College with a 71-yard scoring bomb to Al Sheppard only 19 seconds before halftime to power West Georgia to a 14-0 victory over the Vikings Saturday and the NCAA Division III football title in the Amos Alonzo Stagg Bowl.

Only moments earlier, the West Georgia Braves, running their perfect season to 12-0, stopped Augustana at their 1-foot line before marching 99 yards for the only scoring of the first half.

David Phillips scored on a 5-yard run with just 1:17 remaining for the only scoring of the second half. The Braves marched 74 yards for the insurance points after West Georgia stopped Augustana's last scoring threat with five minutes left to play.

Maryland Survives; Louisville Beaten

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Sophomore Adrian Branch scored 23 points, including 16 in the second half to lead Maryland to a 67-66 college basketball victory over Canisius Saturday night.

The visiting Terrapins notched strings of 10 and seven points to build a 22-10 lead midway in the first half and rode to a 35-29 halftime margin. Canisius rallied to lead briefly at 41:40 on Mark Smrek's three-point play with 16:09 left before Maryland countered to lead by as many as nine points twice down the stretch.

Maryland, now 2-1, received scoring help from Mark Fothergill with 14 points while Ben Coleman chipped in with 13 and Jeff Adkins added 11 for the victors, who shot 55.9 percent from the field for the game.

Sophomore Ray Hall topped the Golden Griffins, now 1-2, with 20 points, while Lee Stringfellow added 18 and Robert Turner collected 11.

Georgia.....82
Ga.Tech 67

ATLANTA (AP) — Gerald Crosby sank three 3-point baskets in the first seven minutes of the second half as Georgia pulled away from Georgia Tech and downed the Yellow Jackets 82-67 in college basketball Saturday night.

Crosby tallied 11 of his 15 points during a stretch in which Georgia outscored Tech 20-2, surging to a 62-43 advantage with 12:34 remaining after holding only a 1-point lead at halftime.

It was the third victory this season for the unbeaten Bulldogs, and Tech took its first defeat in three outings.

Crosby started the second half spurt with a fast-break layup and came back moments later with his first three point basket, a 19-footer.

The game was played under Atlantic Coast Conference rules — an 18-foot 3-point goal circle and a 30-second clock.

The Yellow Jackets were held scoreless for a 6:27 period during the Georgia run, with the Bulldogs holding a 15-0 margin during that time.

The Jackets stayed with Georgia throughout the first half, when each team had leads of as many as 4 points. The score was deadlocked a dozen times, and the lead changed hands four times, the last on Lamar Heard's baseline jumper with 19 seconds remaining to give Georgia a 42-41 halftime advantage.

Terry Fair led Georgia's scoring with 18 points, and Vern Fleming contributed 17. Tech was led by George Thomas with 16 points and Anthony Byrd and Danny Pearson added 13 apiece.

Purdue.....69
Louisville.....63

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Steve Reid came off the bench to score 24 points and spark Purdue to a 69-63 upset victory over No.7 Louisville in college basketball Saturday night.

Reid, a 5-foot-10 sophomore guard, entered the game midway of the first half and scored six points to help the Boilermakers take a 28-26 halftime lead.

After Louisville had regained the lead in the second half, Reid hit a shot with 13:22 to go put Purdue on top for good at 42-41.

Over the last seven minutes, Reid scored 14 of Purdue's last 19 points, including eight free throws down the stretch, as the Boilermakers raised their record to 4-0.

Purdue's zone defense shut off Louisville's inside game, holding the Cardinals' starting front line of Scooter McCray, Rodney McCray and Charles Jones to a combined 25 points. The Cardinals, 4-1, were led by guard Lancaster Gordon's 22 points.

UNCC.....60

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Carlos Yates fired in 27 points on 12 of 13 shots from the field Saturday night as George Mason raced to a 71-60 nonconference college basketball victory over North Carolina-Charlotte.

The Patriots, now 3-1, shot 68.2 percent from the field in the first half as they expanded a 10-8 lead to a 16-8 egde midway through the period. George Mason claimed a 34-21 halftime edge and was never seriously threatened.

After Yates, Andy Bolden scored 10 points and was the only other Patriot in double-figures. Overall, George Mason shot 68.3 percent from the field, a school record.

UNC-Charlotte was hampered by poor shooting for the second time in three games. The 49ers shot 7 of 23 for 30.4 percent in the first half and finished at 40 percent. Melvin Johnson led the attack with 21 points. Randy Davis added 10 as UNC-Charlotte dropped to 1-2.

Furman 68
Bucknell 67

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — Furman guard Michael Hunt scored 18 points, including one on a free throw with four seconds left in the second overtime, as the Paladins came from behind to beat Bucknell 68-67 in the consolation game of the IPTAY basketball tournament Saturday.

'Cats Beat Villanova

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Derrick Hord scored 26 points and Charles Hurt added 15 Saturday to power third-ranked Kentucky to a 93-79 college basketball victory over fourth-ranked Villanova.

It was the third straight victory for unbeaten Kentucky, while Villanova's record dropped to 1-1.

Both Hord and Hurt are 6-foot-6 seniors. Hurt was perfect on all seven of his shots from the field, with all but two of his points coming in the first half.

Kentucky dominated most of the game and appeared as if it would turn the game into a rout, leading by as much as 14 points early in the second. But Villanova's big men, Ed Pinckney and John Pinone, who were bottled up in the first half by Kentucky's zone defense, and guard Stewart Granger finally started connecting and Villanova reduced its deficit to 81-77 with about 1:30 remaining.

Granger hit consecutive jumpers to cut the margin to four points, but then Pinckney fouled out and Granger lost another field goal when he was called for charging.

Meanwhile, Hord scored four points and Dirk Minniefield sank six free throws as Kentucky pulled away for good.

Early in the first half, Hurt hit five straight baskets within three minutes, taking Kentucky from a 9-8 deficit to a 16-13 lead. Kentucky wasn't headed thereafter.

Hord and Hurt combined for 27 points in the first half as Kentucky took a 48-35 lead at intermission.

Also scoring in double figures for Kentucky's Wildcats were Melvin Turpin with 15 points, Dicky Beal with 11 and Minniefield with 10. Minniefield also broke a Kentucky record by handing out 14 assists.

Granger paced the Wildcats from Philadelphia with 22 points. Pinckney finished with 17 points and Pinone added 16.

Houston.....78
Biscayne 59

MIAMI (AP) — Larry Micheaux scored 24 points and Clyde Drexler added 20 Saturday night as 11th-ranked Houston crushed Biscayne 78-59 in college basketball action.

The triumph boosted the Cougars' record to 4-0, while Biscayne, a NCAA Division II team, which upset Houston 76-74 here two years ago, dropped to 3-2.

Micheaux scored 10 of his game-high total as Houston cruised to a 30-25 halftime lead. Drexler, who also had 10 in the opening half, ignited an eight-point run with three consecutive baskets as the Cougars broke away from a 4-4 tie and never looked back.

Seven-foot center Akeem Abdul Olajuwon, who scored 14 points, dominated the second half, scoring 10 points and blocking five shots. Michael Young added 12 points for Houston.

Larry Russell paced Biscayne with 17 points, while teammates Dane Johnson and Ted Mizerak contributed 12 and 10, respectively.

S. Miss Edges Clemson

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — Tournament MVP Curtis Green scored 19 points to lift Southern Mississippi to a 60-58 championship basketball win over Clemson in the IPTAY Tournament Saturday night.

The victory by Southern Mississippi's Golden Eagles' snapped a six-year Clemson winning streak in the tournament and marked only the third time in the event's 10 years that the Tigers had failed to win the championship.

Clemson squandered a seven-point, first-half lead and held a slim 33-32 advantage at intermission. In the second half, Southern Mississippi came out with a 14-6 scoring barrage that resulted in a 46-39 edge. Clemson could never overcome the deficit.

The Tigers managed to close within two points on four occasions in the final 10 minutes, the last time on a baseline jumper by freshman guard Chris Michael with 50 seconds remaining, to make the score 56-54.

Southern Mississippi turned the ball over on the ensuing in-bounds play, but the Golden Eagles managed to steal the ball with 26 seconds left to avert a tie score.

Green dropped both ends of a 1-and-1 with 21 seconds remaining and after David Shaffer, who led Clemson scoring with 14 points, hit a layup, Larry Boyd iced the win with a pair of free throws at the 10-second mark.

The victory boosted Southern Mississippi to 4-1, while Clemson dropped to 2-3.

Memphis St. 104
Ball State 81

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Forward Bobby Parks and guard Phillip Haynes combined for 38 points Saturday night to lead No.5 Memphis State to a 104-81 basketball victory over Ball State.

Parks scored 20 points, 15 of them in the first half. Haynes had 18 points, with 10 of those coming in the first period.

Ball State guard Ray McCallum led all scorers with 26 points.

The victory pushed Memphis State's record to 4-0, while Ball State slipped to 1-2.

St. John's 61
Providence 60

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Jeff Allen, a 6-foot-10 junior center, made two free throws with one second remaining Saturday night, rallying 12th ranked St. John's of New York to a 61-60 Big East basketball victory over Providence.

The unbeaten Redmen trailed from midway through the first half before pulling out their fifth victory. They were helped as Providence managed only 16 of 27 free throws.

The Friars missed four times on the front end of one and one situations and twice on the second free throw down the stretch.

Texas-El Paso 54

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Ted Kitchel scored 23 points Saturday as eighth-ranked Indiana, overcoming a poor-shooting first half, raced to a 16-point lead in the second period and beat Texas-El Paso 65-54.

The Hoosiers hit just 32 percent from the field in the first half and got nine of their final 11 points in that period from the free throw line for a narrow 28-26 lead at the intermission.

Marquette 73
Texas A&M 58

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Sophomore Terry Reason scored a career-high 21 points in his first collegiate basketball start, leading 17th-ranked Marquette to a 73-58 victory over Texas A&M Saturday night.

Dwayne Johnson scored all but 2 of his 14 points in the second half for Marquette, 2-0.

Pirates Nip 'Dogs. . .

They stretched that out to as many as six, 62-56 on two baskets by Craig Beard.

Down 68-62 with 9:08 left to play in the game, East Carolina put on a rally as Peartree hit two free throws, then Robinson followed with a basket to cut the lead to 68-67. Robinson, with a chance at a three-pointer missed, but after several exchanges of the basketball, Robinson hit his jumper and the Pirates were ahead for good, 69-68.

"I was pleased for our kids," Harrison said afterwards. "It was up and down, up and down with two teams just playing like hell out there.

"I don't care what happens at the Civic Center tonight (a reference to the fact that 13th ranked Alabama was also playing in Birmingham Saturday night), and after what I saw on tv today, there was no better college game than we had here tonight," Harrison added.

"Mike's (Samford coach Mike Hanks) team played hard and smart. I don't think they got complacent when they were up by six in the second half, but our kids buckled up and surprised them and forced a couple of turnovers.

"We had someone different carry us at different times tonight, even our bench helped out as at one time we had three freshman in there."

East Carolina finished the game with a 56.1 percentage from the floor, while Samford also shot well, hitting 56.9 percent.

Samford held a slim rebounding edge, 32-29, with Edwards, Hollis and Andy Donnelly each pulling seven boards.

The Pirates made good use of the foul line too, hitting 23 of 32 tries, while Samford made only 15 of 21 attempts.

Edwards made 12 of 15 field goal attempts and four of six free throws for his 28 point total. In addition, Wright added 17, Green hit 14, Peartree had 11 and Robinson, 10.

Samford was paced by Beard with 24, while Hollis had 13, Bernie Matthews and Donnelly each had 12, and Moore hit 10.

Samford drops to 1-2 with the loss.

East Carolina, now 2-1, travels to face 18th ranked N.C. State on Wednesday in Raleigh. They are then idle until December 17-18, when they travel to Lafayette, La., for the Cajun Classic.

Walker Wins...

Cal (5,598) on the NCAA career rushing chart.

Elway, a senior, completed 262 of 405 passes this fall for 3,242 yards and 24 touchdowns. Dickerson, also a senior, finished third nationally in rushing with 1,617 yards on 232 carries, although he alternated with Craig James all season. Dickerson's average of 7.5 yards per carry trailed only the 7.5 mark of Tulsa's Michael Gunter.

Walker, who holds the Southeastern Conference career rushing and scoring records, rushed for 1,616 yards in 1980 — most ever by a freshman — in leading Georgia to its first national championship, and 1,891 yards last year — most by a sophomore. Barring injury, he should become college football's all-time rushing and scoring king next season.

Walker will be formally presented with the Heisman Trophy at the annual Heisman banquet Thursday night.

Georgia's only other Heisman winner was halfback Frank Sinkwich in 1942.

Mullen and Sampson and two free throws by Miller widened Virginia's advantage to 22 points, 38-16, with 4:38 remaining in the half.

Virginia extended its spread to 30 points, 55-25, on a Sampson dunk with 15:31 left to play in the game. At the 12:07 mark, the Virginia margin was 40 points, Kenny Lambiotte's jumper making it 67-27.

The Cavaliers' largest lead of the night was 47 points.

Notre Dame 64

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — A layup by Ralph Jackson with three seconds to go lifted No.6-ranked UCLA to a 65-64 college basketball victory over Notre Dame Saturday night.

The Irish, 2-2, trailed 35-31 at halftime but tied the Bruins six times in the final period and took their first lead of the second half at 62-61 on a basket by John Paxson with 1:30 remaining.

UCLA, 3-0, pulled ahead again 63-62 on two free throws by forward Kenny Fields. Paxson, who scored a game-high 25 points, put the Irish ahead for the final time at 64-63 on a pair of free throws with 27 seconds left.

UCLA called a time out after Paxson's free throws, then worked the ball to Jackson, who drove in from the right side for the game-winning basket.

Fields led UCLA with 19 points. Darren Daye added 16 points and Jackson finished with 14 for the Bruins. Tim Kempton, one of three freshmen starting for Notre Dame, scored a career-high 17 points.

The Peacocks cut it back to as little as nine in the time remaining, but were never able to really make a threat.

"We controlled the ball well at the end when we had to," Andruzzi said. "Their press gave us some trouble, but we were able to solve it.

"I thought we shot good percentage shots," the coach said. The stat sheet proved that true. ECU hit on 62.3 percent, as compared to 47.2 percent for St. Peter's.

Andruzzi praised Hooks for her play on a much taller opponent — also for playing with a stress fracture on her shooting hand.

"Delphine did a great job in her second start, and Caren played an outstanding game. Denk had her usual game — they played a box and one on her in the second half and we didn't force the ball inside but she still got her shots. Loraine had another good one too."

Andruzzi said that she didn't substitute at all in the second half because of the ability of St. Peter's. "The girls in there were the ones with experience, and we had to have them in there against a team of St. Peter's caliber. The other kids are just too young right now."

Andruzzi said that the win was important for ECU. Not only did it even the team's record at 2-2, Andruzzi said that the team has been through a pressure week. "We had to ride 12 hours in vans back from New York, then play a team like State. We had the problem of losing a player, and it's tough.

"We're giving them Sunday and Monday off. They need it. Some of them are worried about their school work, too."

Jones led the St. Peter's scoring with 22 points, while Berry added 16 and Diane Casella had 10. The Lady Peacocks drop to 2-1 on the year.

East Carolina returns to action on Saturday, hosting Appalachian State in their final home game for the next 60 days.

committed 13 of its 17 turnovers before intermission.

The last time the Tar Heels scored less than 10 points in the first half was in a 1979 regular season game against Duke, when they trailed 7-0.

After North Carolina guard Jim Braddock scored a 15-footer to make it 19-7, it was another 4:02 before the Tar Heels scored again on Jordan's 15-foot jump shot.

Freshman Jerry Reynolds, a 6-9 forward, and Carter keyed Louisiana St. in the first half with six points each.

Reynolds led Louisiana St. with 14 points, while Carter finished with 11.

Leonard Mitchell, who averaged 20 points in the Tigers' first four games, finished with three points and fouled out when he sent Jordan to the line with 37 seconds left.

ASU 64
Augusta College .. 60

BOONE (AP) — Two technical free throws by Bryan Hunt with two seconds left, following an illegal timeout, lifted Appalachian State to a 64-62 college basketball victory over Augusta College Saturday night.

Augusta's Jaguars had taken a 62-60 lead with 20 seconds left on Daryl Banks two free throws, but Hunt connected on a 20-footer with four seconds left to pull the Mountaineers even.

On the ensuing inbounds play, Augusta called a timeout, but it was their sixth timeout and resulted in a technical foul. Hunt stepped to the line and knocked in both shots to give the Mountaineers their first victory in four starts.

Eagle Gives Pate Two-Stroke Lead

SUN CITY, Bophuthatswana (AP) — Jerry Pate sank a 117-yard, across-the-water chip shot to eagle the par-5 ninth hole Saturday to storm back into the lead of golf's richest tournament, the Million Dollar Challenge.

Pate's eagle helped him shoot the lowest round of the four-day tournament, a 6-under-par 66, for a 10-under total of 206.

Lanny Wadkins fired a 68 for a three-round total of 208, while Ray Floyd and Craig Stadler were tied for third at 209.

Spain's Seve Ballesteros, who shared the lead after the first day with Pate and then had it by himself after Friday's round, had three successive bogeys in carding a 1-over 73. He was tied with defending champion Johnny Miller at 211.

First prize in the tournament, which ends Sunday, is $300,000. Second place is worth $150,000 and third pays $105,000. The player who finishes last in 10th place even gets $50,000.

The golfers were invited to compete by Gary Player — who shot a par-72 and is ninth at 218 — along with the Southern Sun hotel chain, which is putting up part of the prize money. Other companies, along with television rights and the gate, make up the rest of the million-dollar prize.

Top prize in last year's tournament, the first year it was held, was $500,000.

Bophuthatswana is a black homeland that South Africa alone recognizes as an independent country. Because of racial segregation in South Africa, no other professional golf association sanctions the tournament.

Pate called his amazing chip shot "just lucky," but said it inspired him for the rest of the round, in which he had two birdies and no bogeys.

The 29-year-old Macon, Ga., player was more than a football field from the ninth hole and resting in what is locally called "deep snake grass" when he selected his pitching wedge. Pate stroked the ball high and above the pin, and his shot hit the spongy green, rolled downhill and fell into the cup.

"I really didn't putt that well today," he said. "I hit the ball close to the hole each time."

Wadkins said he is going into Sunday's final looking "for a lot of threes." Wadkins turns 33 years old Sunday and hopes to add another three with the $300,000 first prize.

Jack Nicklaus shot a par-72 for a 3-under total of 213, seven shots back. Lee Trevino's 2-under 70 put him at 214, while Australian Greg Norman bogeyed one-third of the course Saturday in recording a 78, putting him last at 221.

Palmer, Boros Atop Seniors

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. (AP) — Arnold Palmer and Julius Boros, both members of the PGA Hall of Fame, tied for the third-round lead of the PGA Seniors Championship Saturday with 2-under-par totals of 214.

Palmer, who began the day tied for first with Howie Johnson, could have taken sole possession of first place, but bogeyed the final hole on the wind-swept PGA National Golf Club Champion Course.

Boros, returning to form after a five-way heart bypass, shot a 2-under 70. Johnson faltered to a 78 and seventh place.

Former Masters champion Art Wall had a 71 for even-par 216 and third place. Play in the $150,000 event concludes Sunday.

Unbeaten 'Skins Face Dallas

By The Associated Press

With five games remaining in the strike-abbreviated National Football League season, the Washington Redskins and Baltimore Colts own the only two perfect records.

That is, Washington's is perfect, and Baltimore's perfectly awful.

On Sunday, the Dallas Cowboys, one of three teams with a 3-1 record in the National Conference, goes gunning for the Redskins in Washington, hoping to hand them their first loss and climb into a share of first place.

About an hour's drive away, in Baltimore, the Colts will be trying to avoid the next step on what could be their first winless season. They take an 0-4 record into their game against the Cincinnati Bengals, one of six teams sharing first place in the American Conference with a 3-1 record.

Sunday's other games are Seattle at the Los Angeles Raiders, Kansas City at Pittsburgh, San Diego at Cleveland, Houston at the New York Giants, Buffalo vs. Green Bay at Milwaukee, Minnesota at Miami, New England at Chicago, St. Louis at Philadelphia, Tampa Bay at New Orleans and Atlanta at Denver. On Monday night, the New York Jets visit Detroit.

On Thursday night, San Francisco improved its record to 2-3 with a 30-24 victory over the Los Angeles Rams. Joe Montana tied an NFL record by passing for 305 yards, the fourth game in a row he has gone over the 300 mark.

"We realize what kind of team Dallas is and what kind of challenge we have," says Washington Coach Joe Gibbs. "This game will be the only chance we have to play Dallas, at least in the regular season, and that makes it important, too."

Although the passion of the George Allen era in Washington has cooled, Dallas-Washington remains something special in the nation's capital.

"We've had a lot great games in Washington," said Dallas Coach Tom Landry. "They were a lot of fun and this won't be any different because the fans are no different. They haven't changed. Nobody likes the Cowboys much in Washington, D.C.

The Redskins, he said, are "playing as well as any team in the league. They're in excellent mental condition. They were that way the end of last season when they won most of their games. They started out winning this year and they've beaten some excellent teams ... They're for real."

Although the Colts have lost 18 of the past 19 games and haven't scored since the strike ended two games ago, Coach Forrest Gregg says his Bengals will be taking them seriously. "Oce we began looking at the films, the players saw what type of team we are facing, and I'm sure there won't be a letdown," he said.

Baltimore Coach Frank Kush has called his players "inept" and "pathetic" and, when asked what kind of a chance they had against Cincinnati, he replied: "They outman us. Who are you trying to kid?"

The Seahawks, who lost their two pre-strike games under Coach Jack Patera, have won their two post-strike games under Coach Mike McCormack.

"The obvious difference is the head coach," said wide receiver Steve Largent. "Had there not been the change, I don't think we'd be in the position we are now. Mike's kind of relaxed the atmosphere. There's enough pressure in the game itself, we don't need the pressure of nit-picky rules that if you break them you get hit over the head with a large bat. We were punished more than was necessary."

Last week the Seahawks beat Pittsburgh, knocking quarterback Terry Bradshaw out of commission in the process. Now they go after the Raiders.

"It's a much different Seahawk team than before the strike," said LA Coach Tom Flores, "and I think that's mostly because they are gaining confidence and believing in themselves."

Coach Chuck Noll says Bradshaw "will be OK" for the Steelers' meeting with Kansas City, but Cliff Stoudt could be Pittsburgh's starter. In Kansas City, the question has not been who the Steelers' quarterback would be, but who would start for the Chiefs — Steve Fuller or Bill Kenney. Kenney has been the starter most of the season, completing 42 of 71 passing attempts for 466 yards and a touchdown — but Levy said he will start Fuller.

San Diego's main concern isn't the Browns but Cleveland's weather. "I heard the forecast wasa for good weather, but said the same thing about Cincinnati in January," Coach Don Coryell said, recalling the playoff loss to the Bengals in sub-zero temperatures.

Cleveland and San Diego each are 2-2 going into the game. "The loser won't be out of it, but will be forced to finish real strong to stay in it," Coryell said. "I look for it to be a game that comes down to the last play."

The Giants will have Rob Carpenter starting in their backfield against his former Houston teammates. Carpenter, who helped lead the Giants into the playoffs last season, ended a long holdout by signing with the Giants last Monday. When he was asked if he felt he could get ready for the game on such short notice, Carpenter took a swipe at the Oilers, replying:

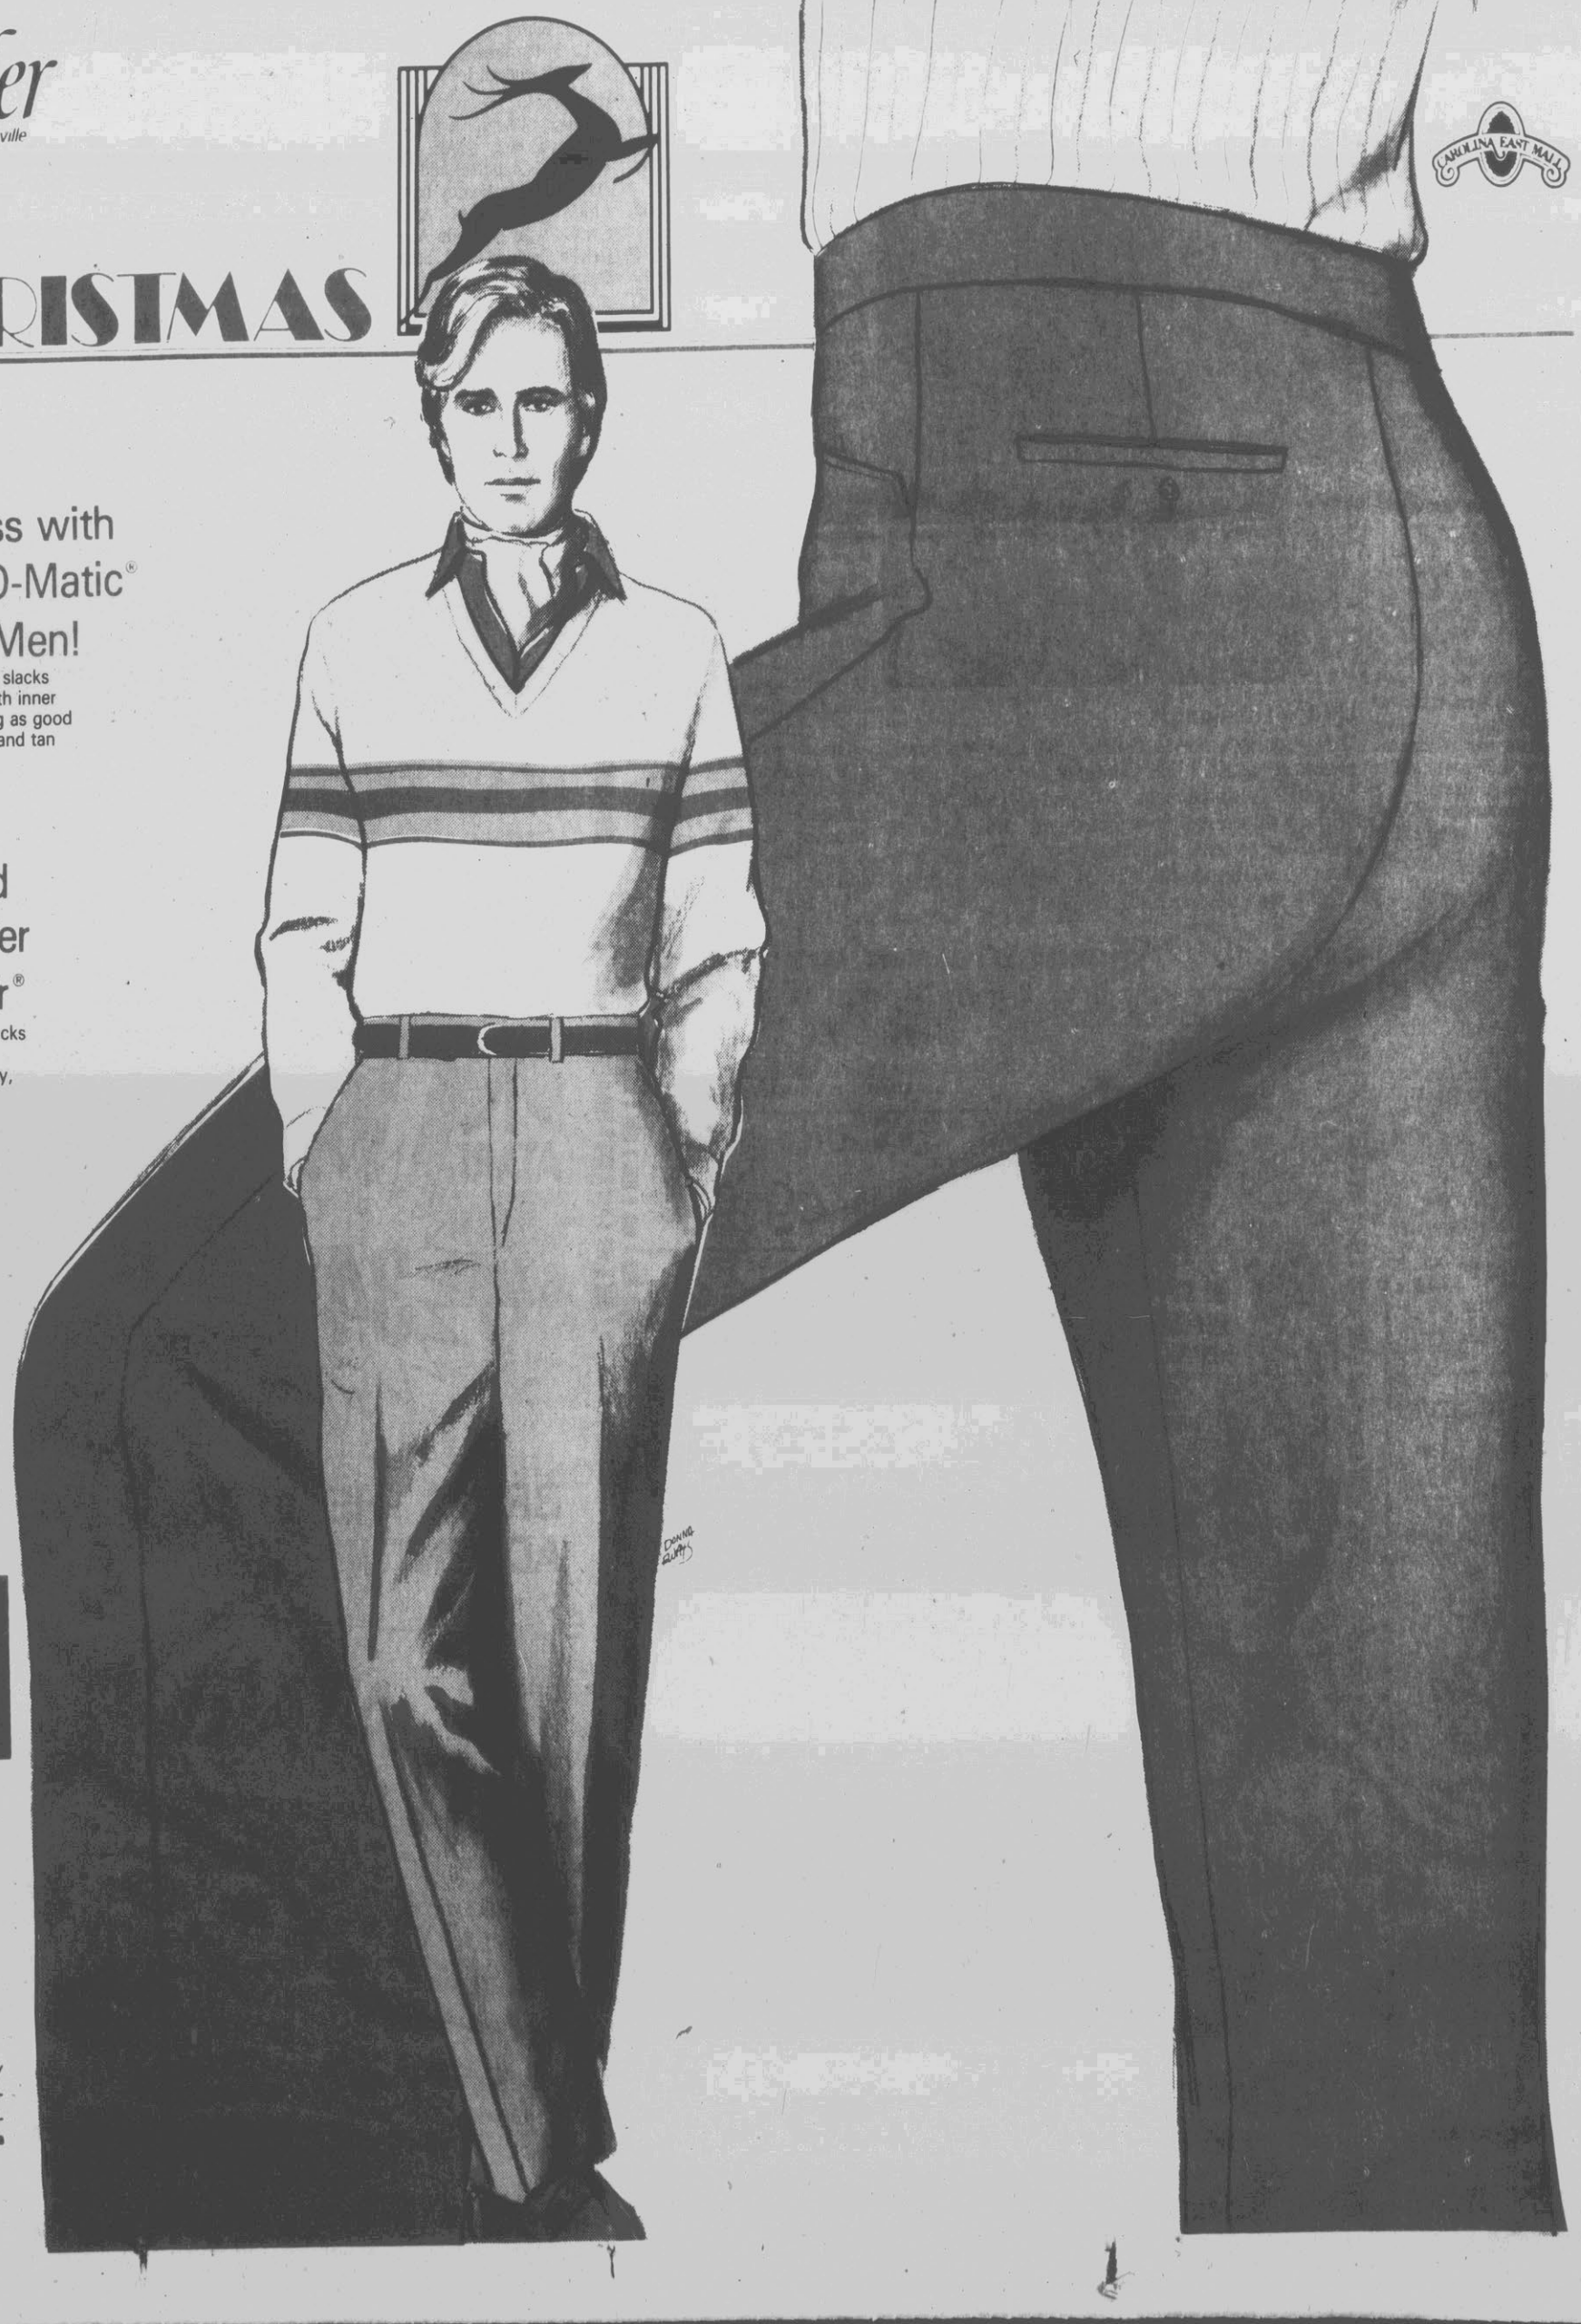

"If I can't get ready for Houston, I can't get ready for anybody."

Gatlin Paces Conley Past Rose, 50-46

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

HOLLYWOOD — Conley High School superstar Keith Gatlin — while not having one of his better nights — came up with a key three-point play that allowed the Vikings to escape with a 50-46 victory over Rose High School Friday night.

Gatlin's three-pointer came with 23 seconds left to play just after Rose's Jeff Hopkins missed a layup that would have put the Rampants into a 46-45 lead. Instead, Gatlin ran the lead out to 48-44, slamming the door on the Rampants.

Earlier in the evening, D.H. Conley's girls swarmed all over Rose, 63-37.

For the Conley teams, the wins boosted their records to 2-0, while the outings were the first of the year for the Rampants.

"I've got to be real glad that (Hopkins) missed that shot," Conley coach Shelley Marsh said afterwards. "If he had hit that, I don't know what would have happened."

As it was, Leon Cox came away with the rebound and fed it outside. The ball eventually got to Gatlin on the fast break and he drove in for the score, getting fouled on the play.

As might be expected this early in the season, it was a sloppy game. Conley committed 26 turnovers during the contest, while Rose had only 12. Both teams shot poorly — Conley making 18 of 51 (35.3 percent) while Rose hit 21 of 67 (31.3). Rebounding was nearly even with Rose holding a slim 42-41 edge.

Conley won the game at the foul line, hitting 14 of 20, while Rose made just four of 12 shots. Gatlin was eight of nine at the line.

It was a mixed night for the Viking star, who was closely guarded nearly all the time. He hit on just six of 16 shots from the floor — getting two rejected by Rose defenders. He did pull in 13 rebounds, but had only one assist. He also blocked a shot.

"We were a step too fast all evening," Marsh said of his team's play. "It seemed like we wanted to rush everything, and Keith was no exception. We never got into our offense; we played Rose's game all night long."

Marsh said that missing Mitchell Cox from the game was a big factor, too. Cox was suspended from the team for two games for disciplinary reasons, Marsh said. "It hurt our offense. We didn't have time to get the team ready to play without him.

"Our shots were falling a little short. We have to settle down and play our game."

At the opposite end of the bench, Rose coach Jim Brewington was happy despite the loss.

"I'm tickled to death. We didn't win, but they showed me something. A couple of breaks here and there and we would have won it. The kids played well, and they proved that they can play."

Brewington said that Donnell Lee's getting into early foul trouble guarding Gatlin hurt the Rampants. Lee picked up four first half fouls and picked up his fifth with 27 seconds left in the third quarter.

"Albert Brown came in and played well off the bench and so did Carlton Wilson," Brewington said.

"I told 'em coming down here that we didn't want to get blown out. I wanted 'em to come in and stay close. This will give us something to build on now. They did what I asked of them, and they played better defense and rebounded better than I expected them to."

Rose grabbed the early lead in the game, with Conley taking the lead for the first time at 6-5 on a shot from the corner by Donald Wilson. Gatlin following with a drive to up the lead to three before Rose came back to regain the lead at 11-10 on a drive by Lee. Hopkins hit two free throws and ran it to 13-10 before a bakset by Reggie Smith and two Gatlin free throws put Conley back up 14-13 at the end of the period.

Conley then outscored Rose, 12-2 in the first five minutes of the second quarter, running its lead out to 26-15. But the Rampants, led by Brown, charged back and cut the lead to four, 28-24 before trailing 31-26 at intermission.

Rose scored the first two baskets of the second half to trim the Viking lead to one, but Smith hit to up it to three again, and after another Rose basket cut it to one again, Gatlin made two more baskets to run it back out to five, 37-32.

But after it reached seven, 41-34, Rose got the final three baskets of the period to pull within one again, 41-40.

At the start of the final period, Conley went into a freeze, designed to run the clock and to pull Rose out of its zone.

"But even when they came out, as soon as we started toward the basket, they dropped back into a semi-zone," Marsh said of his team's failure to go to the basket. Conley made just two of four attempts.

After moving out by 45-40 on a basket and two free throws by Wilson, Conley saw Rose come back on baskets by Tony Clemons and Alan Dickens to pull within one again.

Then, with about 30 seconds left, Hopkins got all alone under the basket, got a fast break pass, but missed the shot and Cox got the rebound and the feed went to Gatlin for the clincher.

In addition to Gatlin's 20, Wilson added 12. Clemons led Rose with 16 points.

Conley's girls had little trouble with Rose after the first five minutes. Rose led once, 4-2, but Conley regained it on two baskets by Darlene Cannon, 6-4, and pulled out to a 12-8 lead at the end of the first period.

Actually, from an 8-8 tie with 2:17 left, Conley threw in 18 straight points to run out to a 26-8 margin, sparked by the play of Cheryl Thompson who made four baskets in the string.

At the start of the second period, Conley made eight of its first nine shots, and powered out to a 34-14 lead at the half.

In the third period, Conley made its first five tries, and eventually led by as much as 30, 52-22, before Rose scored the final two baskets of the period to cut it to 52-26. Conley coasted through the final period with mostly reserves in the game, matching Rose's 11-point output.

Conley finished the game with a hot 52 percentage from the floor, and was hitting 56.1 percent before the regulars came out. Rose, in contrast, hit just 25.4 percent for the contest.

Conley also enjoyed a 49-37 rebounding edge.

"We usually get layups and chances like we got tonight, but we usually don't hit this well," Conley Coach Joy James said. "I'm very satisfied with our game tonight. They worked hard on defense and blocked out well to get to the boards.

"I certainly wasn't expecting a win like this. Rose has potential. I don't watch the scoreboard, so I was surprised that they had only scored 34 points. They got good shots, but they just weren't falling for them.

"It was a good game for us. With four starters back, the key to us winning is getting more playing time together so it comes natural, and we were able to do that tonight."

Rose coach Dennis Gibson said he couldn't take anything from Conley. "They're just as good as I thought they'd be," he said. "We hurt ourselves by getting so far back. We missed (Linda) Winstead (out with the flu), and we had trouble adjusting to not having her in there.

"I was hoping that we'd come in a little stronger on the boards, but our young kids haven't made the adjustments they need to make yet. Their having a game on us hurt us too."

Mechio Kornegay led the Conley scoring with 13 points, while Lisa Mills added 12. Rose was led by Alma Atkinson with 14.

Rose returns to action on Tuesday, hosting North Pitt in its home opener. Conley plays host to Ayden-Grifton.

Ayden-Grifton Survives Rally By North Lenoir

LITTLEFIELD — Ayden-Grifton survived a rally by North Lenoir in the second half and pulled out a 76-65 victory over the Hawks Friday night, winning its first victory of the young year.

The North Lenoir girls remained unbeaten with a 61-51 win over the Lady Chargers.

Ayden-Grifton's boys jumped out to a 20-10 lead in the first period and outscored the Hawks 18-12 in the second quarter. That staked the Chargers to a 38-22 halftime lead. Both teams pushed through 15 third period points, leaving Ayden-Grifton in a 53-37 lead going into the final period.

In that, A-G stretched its lead out to 20 points but North Lenoir put on a furious rally that cut the margin back to only four points before Jeff Dixon hit several key free throws that helped to open the margin again.

"We played well, but we really got tired," A-G Coach Bob Murphrey said. "We should have substituted earlier, but we were playing so well. They sort of got their second wind and came back like gang busters."

Thomas Anderson led the Ayden-Grifton attack with 21 points, also pulling nine rebounds. Calvin Peterson added 16 points, while Dixon had 13, including seven of eight at the line — mostly in the final quarter. Freshman center Marvin Smith added 11 points and had eight rebounds.

North Lenoir was paced by Maurice Thorbes with 25 points, while James Fisher had 24.

In the girls' contest, Ayden-Grifton got away to a slow start, falling back 13-2 in the first period. North Lenoir again outhit the Lady Chargers, 21-13, in the second period, running its lead out to 34-15 at the half.

Ayden-Grifton began to take control in the third period, cutting the lead to 44-28. They again outhit North Lenoir, 23-17, in the final quarter, but it wasn't enough to erase the big lead.

Helen Wooten led North Lenoir with 17 points, while veronica Chapman added 14 and Stephanie Hemby had 12. Linda Brown led Ayden-Grifton with 19, while Angela Griffin had 12 and Stelena Roundtree had 10.

Ayden-Grifton was hampered by the loss of center Cora Faison with an injury early in the second period. She was unable to return to the lineup for the game.

Ayden-Grifton travels to D.H. Conley on Tuesday.

Knights Whip Goldsboro Five

Greenville Christian Academy placed three players in double figures and used an active defense to build a 19-point lead in the first quarter en route to a 65-46 win over Goldsboro Christian Friday night.

In the girls' game, GCA whipped Lifegate, 48-12.

It was the season-opener for both GCA squads and an East Carolina Christian Conference game for the boys.

The Knights, using a man-to-man defense to force a number of turnovers, went out to a 23-4 lead in the first period and never were threatened. The Knights led at the half, 34-14, and outscored Goldsboro, 15-14 and 16-15, in the last two periods.

Jerry Butts and Chris Stox both had 13 points for GCA and Chris Harris added 12. Lee Price led all scorers with 14 for Goldsboro and John Rivenbark had 11 for the visitors.

"No doubt about it, our defense was just super," GCA coach Daie Thatcher said. "We had almost a 20-point lead in the first quarter thanks to our defense."

In the girls' game, GCA jumped out to a 9-0 lead in the first period, upped its lead to 20-6 at the half and never trailed. The Lady Knights outscored Lifgate, 16-4 and 12-2, the final two periods.

Kathy Vernelson led GCA with 13 points and Beverly Hurst added 11. No one for Lifegate was in double figures.

GCA returns to action Tuesday when the GCA boys face Lifegate and the girls and junior varsity meet Mt. Calvary. All three games are at home.

South Lenoir Slips By Rams

DEEP RUN — Craig Warren's three-point play and Reggie Wingate's two foul shots lifted South Lenoir past Greene Central, 52-51, in overtime Friday night in a nonconference basketball game.

In the girls' game, Greene Central whipped South Lenoir, 50-34.

Greene Central (0-2) had a chance to win the game in regulation, but Theodore Edwards missed two free throws with eight seconds left to send it into OT. The Rams hit just 12 of 26 free throws.

In overtime, Warren drove the lane for a bucket and was fouled. He canned the free throw to make it 50-47 with 50 seconds to go. Edwards hit two FTs to make it 50-49, but Wingate countered with two foul throws with eight seconds to go to seal the win.

The Rams, now 0-2, led, 10-9, at the end of the first period and 23-22 at the half. South Lenoir used a strong third period (21 to 12) to take a 43-35 lead, but the Rams rallied, outscoring the Blue Devils, 10 to 2, to tie the game and send it into OT.

"We had every opportunity to win, but we didn't," Greene Central coach Lewis Godwin said. "But we played so much better than Tuesday I was tickled."

The Rams lost to Beddingfield, 59-49, Tuesday.

Greene Central was led by James Thompson with 20 points. The Blue Devils, now 1-1, were led by Sylvester Whitfield with 16 points. Donald Ingram scored 11 for South Lenoir.

In the girls' game, the Lady Rams surged to a 10-2 lead after one quarter and upped their lead to 25-11 at the half. Greene Central outscored South Lenoir, 9 to 7 and 16-11, the final two periods to win its second in as many games.

Cindi Hicks paced the Lady Rams with 14 and Sharon Myatt added 11. Jimi Hill scored 11 points for the Lady Blue Devils.

Greene Central returns to action Friday when the Rams travel to North Lenoir.

Williamston Trims Bears

WILLIAMSTON — Williamston High School used a balanced scoring attack to run past 1-A Bear Grass Friday night, 57-33, and claim its first win of the young season.

Bear Grass' girls held off a Williamston rally, 37-36, to claim their second win of the season, however.

The Williamston boys, now 1-1, ran out to an 11-4 lead over Bear Grass in the first period of the game, then outshot the Bears, 20-11, in the second period. That gave the Tigers a 31-15 halftime lead.

The action slowed in the third period, but the Tigers still upped the lead to 40-21 going into the final quarter. In that, Williamston outscored Bear Grass, 17-12, to win going away.

Joe Williams was the only Williamston scorer in double figures with 12, while the team had 11 other players contribute to the scoring. Bear Grass did not have anyone in double figures.

In the girls' contest, Bear Grass eased out into a 10-7 lead after one quarter of competition. Williamston could only manage four points in the second frame, while the Lady Bears pushed through 12, running their lead out to 22-11 at halftime.

Williamston launched a comeback in the third period, however, outscoring the Bears, 15-4, pulling even at 26-26 at the end of the period. There were several more ties, but Williamston was never able to take the lead.

Trailing by one, Lynn Sanders got off a buzzer shot that went through, but the officials ruled it too late to count and Bear Grass claimed the win.

Angie Mizelle led Bear Grass with 19 points, while Lynn Mills had 11 for Williamston.

Williamston travels to Plymouth on Tuesday, while the Bears go to Aurora as both begin conference play.

JV Game: Williamston 60, Bear Grass 26.

Roanoke Holds Off Panthers For Win No. 2

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

BETHEL — Roanoke coach Clarence Atkinson is far from pleased with the play of his Redskins through two games, but he isn't arguing with the results — a pair of victories.

Roanoke, a perennial power in the Northeastern Conference, got 15 points from James Duggins and foiled a late rally by North Pitt en route to a 42-36 win in a nonconference basketball game Friday night.

In the girls' game, North Pitt outlasted Roanoke, 33-31.

It was the second straight victory of the young season for the Redskins, who beat another Eastern Carolina Conference team — Ayden-Grifton — Tuesday. North Pitt falls to 1-1.

"We didn't play well," Atkinson said, "and I know they didn't play as well as they can, but we'll accept this one."

North Pitt contributed substantially to its fall. The Panthers hit but two of 17 free throws, including the front side of four one-and-ones and two two-shot fouls in the fourth period.

"I don't know what happened, but somebody on this club can hit (foul shots). That was the ballgame," North Pitt's Cobby Deans said. "The ballgame was our foul shooting, and some mental mistakes in the late part of the game."

The Panthers, who played much of the second half with starters Dennis Bradley and Greg Hines on the bench with foul troubles, saw Roanoke push its lead from one to 10 with 1:25 left.

The Panthers forced two quick turnovers and Bradley turned them both into FGs to cut the deficit to 40-36 with 41 seconds left. The Panthers had a chance to close to within two, but Ronnie Howard missed a one-and-one with 36 seconds to go in the game.

Roanoke's Rick Hines, who came off the bench to connect on seven of nine at the foul line, hit both ends of a one-and-one with seven seconds remaining to seal the win.

Reserve Charles Harris topped the Panthers with 12 points and Hines had 10 as North Pitt hit just 36.1% (17 of 47) from the floor. Roanoke shot 44.1% (15 of 34) from the field and 14 of 21 from the foul line.

Roanoke outrebounded North Pitt, 33 to 29. Forwards Ricky Highsmith and Greg Everett had 10 each for Roanoke. Bradley, who was 0-7 from the foul line, led all rebounders with 11.

"I was pretty well pleased with our rebounding," Deans said. "Offensively, I thought we did a good job getting the ball inside against them. Defensively, we were far for this time of year."

Roanoke, as it did against Ayden-Grifton, relied almost exclusively on a 2-3 zone. And, early on at least, it caused the Panthers problems as they missed five out of their first six shots.

The Redskins went up, 8-2, on a drive down the middle by Duggins only to see North Pitt cut it to 8-5 going into the second period. Everett's tip in upped the lead to 14-9 with 5:26 to go in the half.

The Panthers then went to work on the Roanoke zone. Hines knifed through the 'Skins on the baseline for a basket and Bradley, at high post, sliced through the lane and took a pass from Daniel Keel, who was playing low post, and laid the ball in to cut it to 14-13.

Harris followed with a layup on the break to give the Panthers the lead, but Everett's three-point play with six seconds to go put the Redskins up, 18-15, at intermission.

The Panthers ran into problems early in the third period when Bradley picked up two fouls within 15 seconds and went to the bench with four. Hines and Keel were whistled for their third fouls moments later.

"We kind of lost our poise there. Some of our veterans didn't play smart, which is what I didn't think I'd see," Deans said.

The Panthers used the perimeter shooting of Hines, who hit two in a row, and Harris, who swished three straight, to take a 25-24 lead with 1:38 left. Rick Hines hit two FTs to give Roanoke a 28-27 lead after three quarters.

Roanoke threatened to blow the Panthers out in the final period. Duggins hit two layups and a free throw — after Hines picked up his fourth foul with 4:36 remaining — and Highsmith hit two free throws and a field goal to key Roanoke to a 40-30 lead.

Without Hines, who picked up his fifth foul with 3:59 to go, North Pitt came back within six, could get no closer as 15 missed free throws — nine of which came in the fourth period — haunted the Panthers to the end.

"We just didn't play smart," Deans said.

In the girls' game, Sudie Sharpe scored 16 points and grabbed 16 rebounds and Delores Pittman ripped off 18 rebounds to lead the Pant-HERS past Roanoke in a sloppily played game.

North Pitt, now 2-0, had 33 turnovers and the Lady Redskins 16. The Pant-HERS overcame their miscues and an early five-point deficit to drop Roanoke to 0-2. Roanoke did not have anyone in double figures.

"It was something like championship wrestling (out there)," Pant-HERS coach Randy Avery said. "It was rough but we're happy to be 2-0."

Many of North Pitt's mistakes were caused by the Roanoke press, which Avery's team never solved.

"We had worked on the press but I can see we need to work on it more," said Avery as he went down his stat sheet. "I just think we were a litte intimidated by their size."

In a slow first period, Roanoke took a 5-0 lead with 1:47 to go before Sharpe wheeled inside for the Pant-HERS' first field goal of the night. Sharpe canned eight of 12 from the floor.

After Roanoke upped its advantage to five with 2½ minutes to go in the second period, North Pitt closed to 14-12.

The Pant-HERS took their first lead early in the third quarter on a jumper by Linda Harrell and expanded their lead to 20-16 on two buckets by Sharpe before Roanoke cut it to 22-20 at the end of the period.

North Pitt pushed its lead to 28-22 early in the final period only to see the Lady Redskins rally to within one (30-29) on a

Jaguars Top Beddingfield

STANTONSBURG — Reggie Gorham, making his first start ever for Farmville Central, sank two free throws with five seconds left to preserve a 45-42 victory over Wilson Beddingfield Friday night for the Jaguars.

In the girls' contest, Beddingfield romped to a 65-36 win.

Farmville Central ran out to a 12-6 lead over Beddingfield in the first quarter of the boys' contest, then repeated its scoring with 12 more in the second period. The Bruins added eight more points and trailed 24-14 at the half. Of those 14 points, Beddingfield's Baron Burks scored 12.

In the second half, Beddingfield began a comeback, outhitting the Jaguars, 13-8 to cut the lead back to 32-27.

In the last period, Farmville stretched its lead out to 40-32 with 1:39 left to play, but two free throws by Burks, followed by steals that led to two more Bruin baskets cut it back to 40-38. Gorham then hit the first of two free throws to make it 41-38 before Mike Ward scored to cut it to one again.

Clarence Pettway slammed in a dunk with 24 seconds left to move the lead back to three, but Burks scored again with 15 seconds left. Gorham then scored his two free throws with five seconds left to insure the Jaguar win.

Gorham, who started in place of the ill Bobby Carraway, was not only starting for the first time, but also played the point guard position for the first time ever in the game. He finished with 11 points, while Pettway had 14 to lead the Jags.

Burks led Beddingfield with 18 points.

In the girls' contest, Beddingfield inched into a 12-11 lead after one frame, then pulled away to go out to a 32-20 halftime lead. Beddingfield outhit Farmville, 20-9, in the second frame for the lead.

Things got little better for Farmville the rest of the way. They were outhit, 18-9, in the third period and 15-7, in the fourth, as the Lady Brins steadily pulled away.

Hope Lofton led Beddingfield with 15, while Jackie Thompson added 13, Stephanie Woods had 12, and Tracy Hooker had 11. Farmville was led by Stephanie Newton with 12, while Debra Joyner had 10.

Farmville travels to North Lenoir on Tuesday for its next outing.

pair of jumpers and a foul shot by Mary Bland.

Harrell's drive the length of the floor for a layup made it 32-29. North Pitt then had a chance to seal the win at the foul line but could not, missing four one-and-ones.

However, the Pant-HERS rebounded each miss. Ginya Smith's jumper narrowed the deficit to 32-31 with 40 seconds left. But, Joycelene Brown made one of two at the line and Sharpe tapped the rebound out to Brown and North Pitt ran out the final seven seconds to win.

Lowe Leads State To Victory

RALEIGH (AP) — Sidney Lowe led a balanced scoring attack with 16 points and 18th-ranked North Carolina State scored 100 points or more for the second consecutive game to defeat North Carolina A&T 100-70 in college basketball Friday night.

The Wolfpack, who rarely scored more than 70 points last year while using a slower style of play, upped their record to 2-0 with the victory.

Thurl Bailey and Dereck Whittenburg added 14 points each, freshman George McClain chipped in 12 and Ernie Myers 11 for the Wolfpack. Bailey also grabbed 10 rebounds to give N.C. State a 47-32 board edge.

N.C. State coach Jim Valvano felt his team was sharper in its 103-66 opening game victory over Western Carolina.

"Once again, I thought our backcourt played well," he said. "We still have to get more out of our inside game.

"We played better defensively with a smaller lineup. We have good perimeter shooting and better overall depth helped," Valvano said.

A&T, who gained a spot in the NCAA playoffs last season as the Mid-Eastern Athletic Confernce champions, stayed close in the first six minutes, but N.C. State ran off 10 straight points to take an 18-8 lead and the Aggies never recovered.

The Wolfpack led 37-22 at the half, and cruised on home for the victory.

N.C. State hit 25 of 37 second-half field goal attempts and ballooned its lead to 32 points with 7:06 left when Lowe converted a steal into a layup and added a free throw to complete the three-point play and make it 78-46. The game was played under new Atlantic Coast Confernce rules calling for a 30-second shot clock and a 19-foot, three-point field goal.

The Wolfpack finished with 38 of 76 shooting, 50 percent, while A&T was 22 of 68, 39.7 percent.

The Aggies, 0-1, were led by Eric Boyd with 24 points and Juan Lanauze with 18.

Two East Teams Claim Crowns

RALEIGH (AP) — Randleman rolled to its second consecutive 2-A NCHSAA state football championship Friday night, while Brevard captured the 3-A crown and Jacksonville claimed the 4-A title.

Fullback Tim Proctor rushed for 112 yards and scored two touchdowns as Randleman defeated Whiteville 23-6 to win the N.C. High School Athletic Association Class 2-A football title for the second straight year.

At Brevard, Kenny Edwards and Marion Crite connected on a 36-yard touchdown pass to break a tie and lead Brevard to a 15-7 victory over Bertie and the 3-A title.

Jacksonville's Tyrone Currence ran for 117 yards and a touchdown in recording a 15-6 victory over Greensboro Page for the 4-A crown.

Proctor and Tony Gross led Randleman's 266-yard rushing output in its triumph over Whiteville.

Randleman broke it open in the first half when Proctor scored on a 40-yard pass from Steve Lisk with 44 seconds remaining to make it 16-6.

Proctor then gave the Tigers an insurance score in the third quarter with a 61-yard touchdown run.

Whiteville was hurt by the ineffectiveness of star running back Terry Paige, who suffered a sprained ankle last week in the school's semifinal victory. Paige twice served as a pass decoy and carried once for a 2-yard loss.

Both teams finished with 13-1 records.

Brevard was on the receiving end of a lucky break in its win over Bertie. Edwards' pass was tipped by Willie Ryan, but Crite gathered it in and scored early in the period to break a 7-7 tie. The Blue Devils faked the extra-point kick, and Edwards passed to Mitch Wike for the two-point conversion.

Brevard went 59 yards in 17 plays and scored on Kevin Whitmire's 1-yard dive with 9:22 left before halftime. Marion Crite's extra-point kick gave the Blue Devils a 7-0 lead.

After Guy Hayes recovered a Brevard fumble, Bertie traveled 46 yards to a score on Willie Ryan's 1-yard run with 1:25 to play before intermission. Darryl Ruffin's kick tied the score at 7-7.

The victory closed Brevard's season at 14-0, extended their winning streak to 19 games and gave them their second state title ever. The Blue Devils took their first championship 22 years ago.

Bertie finished at 12-2.

The Jacksonville-Greensboro Page game was a rematch of the 1980 4-A championship, which Page won 36-14.

But this time Jacksonville took the honors behind Currence's running. He raced 69 yards to the Page 11-yard line midway in the fourth period. Six rushes later he scored from the 1 to give the Cardinals their final margin of victory with 2:50 left.

Page, alternating sophomore quarterbacks Stafford Moser and Todd Ellis, hit on 15 of 38 passes for 221 yards, but had four intercepted.

Moser directed the Pirates' only touchdown, completing 4 of 5 passes as Page took the opening kickoff and marched 73 yards, capped by his 6-yard pass to Tim Harbaugh. The PAT failed, leaving Page ahead 6-0 with 9:35 left.

Ellis Dillahunt scored Jacksonville's first touchdown after intercepting a pass to give the Cardinals possession on the Page 34, and then rushing it over from a yard six plays later.

Darren Hall and Scotty Arnold sacked Moser for a safety which gave Jacksonville a 9-6 lead early in the third period.

Jacksonville finished with a 14-0 record while Page closed at 12-2.

Bullets Fall To Plymouth

PLYMOUTH — Plymouth High School had little trouble in rolling to a pair of wins over Jamesville High School Friday night.

The Vikings ripped the Bullets, 75-38, in the boys game, and took a 57-27 decision in the girls.

In the opener, Plymouth's lassies ran out to a 13-8 lead after one period and extended that to 35-16 at the half. Plymouth slowed to only nine points in the third period, but still added two points to its lead for a 44-23 margin. Plymouth outhit the Lady Bullets, 13-4, in the final period.

Alberia Armond and Benita Bell each had 13 points for Plymouth while Odessa Blount added 10. Kim Floyd led all scorers with 17 for Jamesville.

In the boys' contest, Plymouth roared away to a 23-7 lead after one quarter and was never headed. The Vikings outscored Jamesville, 19-4, in the second frame, running the lead out to 42-12 at intermission.

In the third period, Plymouth upped its lead to 59-20 before allowing a 19-16 margin by the Bullets in the final period.

Johnny White led Plymouth with 14 points, while Myron Bell added 12. Tony Brown and Travis Brown each had 10. Kenneth Moore led Jamesville with 11.

Jamesville's boys and girls are both 0-2 and open Tobacco Belt play on Tuesday at Choc winity.

BEST VERSUS BEST

KANSAS CITY (AP) — There are two schools of thought in coaching in any sport: Do you probe for a weakness in the other team or attack its strength?

The coach of the Kansas City team in the NBA, Cotton Fitzsimmons, believes in sending his best against the other side's best.

"I've always felt you should go at people's strength," he said. "If you don't, it shows a flaw in your character."

Grifton Golf Notes

GRIFTON — The mixed superball tournament scheduled last Sunday was postponed because of weather conditions, and has been reset for today at the Indian Trails Country Club.

A women's "Get Together" has been scheduled for Thursday. Women from Happy Valley, Hilma, Tarboro, Minnesot and River Bend Country Clubs are invited to join in the activities. Tee off time is set for 10:30 a.m.

Bobby Price recorded his first eagle at Indian Trails on the par four ninth hole. He hit a sand wedge from 100 yards out into the cup on his second shot. He was playing with Cecil Lilley and Drew Harper III.

CAN'T TOP DAD

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Danny Schayes, the center of the Utah Jazz, is a son of Pro Basketball Hall of Famer Dolph Schayes.

Danny thinks that has created problems for him.

"I have to admit there were problems because of that," Danny said. "There was extra pressure on me from outside sources to try to maintain the level set by my father. Actually, there are very few players who ever have matched the level he set. I just go out to play the best game that I can in my own style."

Hearns Takes A New Title

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — He's called the Hit Man because of his power. But Thomas Hearns was the Stick and Move Man against Wilfred Benitez, and his tatics paid off in a second championship.

"Do you pay $100 to see somebody ride a bicycle? Do you pay $500 to see a man run," Gregorio Benitez, Wilfred's father and trainer, complained after Hearns boxed his way to the World Boxing Council super welterweight title Friday night at the Superdome.

An estimated crowd of 12,000 watched Hearns nullify Benitez' counter-punching with movement and a stiff left jab for a victory that put him in good position for a challenge against Marvelous Marvin Hagler, the undisputed middleweight champion.

The former World Boxing Association welterweight champion impressed two judges. Tony Castellano of New York scored it 144-139 and Dick Young of Los Angeles saw it 146-136 for Hearns. Judge Lou Fillipo of Los Angeles scored it 142-142, making it a majority decision.

The AP favored Hearns 143-139.

"I knew the fight was going to be like that if it went the distance," complained father Benitez. "I thought I had won the fight; but the judges decided the fight," said the son, who is one of six men to win three world titles.

"From Round 1 I thought I was ahead," said Hearns. "The scorekeeper who had me even had to be a asleep."

While Hearns and Benitez engaged in a tactical battle that had many gaps in the action, Wilfredo Gomez watched on television in a dressing room, an ice pack pressed to his left eye.

Lupe Pintor didn't watch. He was in another dressing room, stretched on a trainer's table, exhausted.

Before the Hearns-Benitez bout, Gomez, of Puerto Rico, the WBC super bantamweight champion, and Pintor, of Mexico, the WBC bantamweight champion, waged war for Gomez' title.The two little warriors, each weighing 121½ pounds, a half-pound less than the super bantamweight limit, rocked and socked one another for 13 rounds. Gomez landed bombing rights and Pintor hooks and stiff jabs.

Then in the 14th round, Gomez knocked down Pintor with an overhand right and left to the head. Pintor barely beat the count of 10, then went down again from a right-left to the head, and referee Arthur Mercante stopped it at 2:44 of the round.

The 6-foot-1 Hearns used his eight-inch reach advantage, especially after he hurt his right hand in the seventh or eighth round.

"It started to hurt, so I started to ignore the right hand and concentrated on the left jab."

The man who scored 32 knockouts in posting a 36-1 record, dominated the late rounds with his jab after Benitez had gained momentum in the middle rounds.

In the ninth round, the 5-10 Benitez, who weighed 152, two pounds under the limit, caught Hearns, 153¾, with a short left hook to the head as Hearns was moving backwards.

Hearns fell on the seat of his pants, but got up immediately. Hearns said Benitez had stepped on his foot, but it was ruled a knockdown.

Hearns scored a knockdown in the fifth round when he caught Benitez with a right that sent him backwards. Benitez's gloves and knee touched the canvas, making it a knockdown.

But neither fighter was in serious trouble, as finesse and tactics ruled.

"I feel like a champ," said Hearns. "I'd like to tell Detroit (his hometown) we did it again."

The 24-year-old Hearns was the World Boxing Association welterweight champion until he was stopped in the 14th round by the now-retired Sugar Ray Leonard in a fight for the undisputed title Sept. 16, 1981.

Benitez's only previous loss came when he was failed to hold the WBC welterweight title against Leonard, who stopped him in the 15th round Nov. 30, 1979. The 24-year-old Benitez, who also held the WBA junior welterweight title, now has a 43-2-1 record, with 26 knockouts.

Hearns said he would give Benitez a rematch. But a fight with Hagler could get in the way, and Benitez has been talking about campaigning as a middleweight.

Gomez, 26, who has a 38-1-1 record, with 38 knockouts, said the fight was his 17th and last defense of the 122-pound class title. He said he has been promised a title shot against the winner of Juan LaPorte's WBC featherweight (126 pounds) title defense against Ruben Castillo, which is set for January.

Pintor, 27, who has a 49-6-1 record, with 38 knockouts, is still the WBC bantamweight champion, but has said he will not fight again at 118 pounds.

Gomez and Pintor each were guaranteed $625,000, while Hearns and Benitez were guaranteed $1.25 million and had percentage arrangments.

The fight was televised live on pay-per-view television and on closed-circuit TV at 150 locations in the United States. It also was beamed to about 15 other countries.

MOST HUNTERS spoil their game before it gets to the kitchen. By the time wild game reaches the kitchen it's often only good dog meet — if your dog will eat it.

"More meat is mishandled and ruined in the field than anywhere else," says Pat Billmeyer, author of The Encyclopedia of Wild Game and Fish Cleaning and Cooking. "Thousands, maybe millions, of dollars of wild game will end up in garbage cans this season. The reason is simply that many people don't know how to properly clean wild game."

In her book, Billmeyer reveals the secrets to properly clean and cook more than 200 types of wild game, fish, fowl and reptiles. Writes Billmeyer: "A hunter must know these secrets if the meat is to taste good, without a bitter, gamy taste."

She has these basic tips to pass along:

(1) When transporting game never tie the carcass on the hood of the car where the engine heat can cause the meat to deteriorate.

(2) If your family isn't familar with the taste of big game, ask your butcher to cut ouit the most tender chops, steaks and roasts and then grind the rest. It can be mized with beef suet or pork fat to give a delicious taste and guard aginst dryness.

(3) Many people don't realize that small game animals like muskrat, groundhog, possum and raccoon are edible and delicious if the glands are removed and the meat is correctly prepared.

Proper handling from the field to the table will make your family look forward to you triumphant return from your sporting expeditions. The Encyclopedia of Wild Game and Fish cleaning and Cooking can make you hobby pay off in dollars saved at the table.

WATERFOWL season — The third portion of the N.C. Waterfowl Season opens this Tuesday, Dec. 7. It will run through Jan. 20.

Canada Goose season is still closed until Dec. 20.

WATERFOWL HUNTING available on Jordan Lake. The N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission and Corps of Engineers have released information that will assist waterfowl hunters in enjoying the New Hope Game Land, including B. Everett Jordan Lake.

This area, located in Chatham, Durham, Orange and Wake counties, will be open for waterfowl hunting each Monday, Wednesday and Saturday during the season. In addition, waterfowl hunting will be allowed on Christmas Day, New Year's Day and on the opening and closing days of the waterfowl seasons.

All State and Federal waterfowl seasons and regulations apply. Watefowl hunters using the game lands must have a valid hunting license, game lands use permit and a Federal migratory bird stamp. Anyone desiring additional information, such as daily bag limits, should contact the NCWRC for a copy of "1982-83 North Carolina and Federal Migratory Bird Hunting Regulations Abstract."

Also, Corps of Engineers regulations prohibit the use of vegetation from prject lands to construct duck blinds, the contruction of stationary blinds ion the flood pool and the leaving of either floating or shorebased blinds on the project. Hunters can use camouflaged boats and shorebased blinds provided they are removed after each use.

Jordan Lake is a multiple-purpose reservoir project, and hunters are cautioned not to hunt inhabited areas, recreation areas, marinas and the dam site.

Duquesne Coach Accuses N-LV Of Rough-House Game Tactics

By The Associated Press

They call themselves the Runnin' Rebels — but to Duquesne Coach Jim Satalin, the Nevada-Las Vegas basketball team looked more like the Fighting Rebels.

"They have some funny people on that team," said Satalin after Friday night's rugged 67-54 loss to the nation's 20th-ranked team. "Their No. 33 (Eldridge Hudson) was an outright thug. We like to play hard, but they were looking for something."

The second meeting ever between the teams was marred by two shoving matches that occurred in the second half, one of which resulted in a technical foul on the Rebels' Danny Tarkanian, son of the Nevada-Las Vegas coach. In the second incident, Duquesne's Pat Farrell and Gary Graham of UNLV were ejected.

"It was an aggressive game," was the way UNLV Coach Jerry Tarkanian described it. "We expected a tough game."

But if there were any bullies in the contest at Pittsburgh, UNLV's Larry Anderson saw them on the other side.

"We're used to more of a finesse-type game," said Anderson, the Rebels' high scorer with 21 points. "But they have some big, slow guys who like to beat you up."

In other games involving the nation's ranked teams, No. 2 Georgetown walloped St. Francis (Pa.) 75-40; 10th-ranked Iowa turned back Navy 76-65; No. 18 North Carolina State rolled past North Carolina A&T 100-70, and 19th-ranked Oregon State defeated the University of Portland, 55-44.

Anderson scored 17 of his points in the second half as the Rebels took command of the game after Duquesne tied the score early in the third quarter. Anderson broke a 24-24 tie with a three-point play that put UNLV ahead to stay three minutes into the second half.

The game was a homecoming for Anderson.

"When I recruited him three years ago, I promised him a game in Pittsburgh," said Tarkanian of the Pittsburgh native. "He finally got it."

Bill Martin scored 20 points to lead Georgetown over St. Francis in the opening game of the Wendy's Classic Tournament at Western Kentucky University. Georgetown held St. Francis to just 14 points in the first half. Georgetown will face host Western Kentucky, which beat Northern Iowa 63-57, in the final.

Bob Hansen scored 22 to lead Iowa over stubborn Navy in the opening round of the Hawkeye Classic. Iowa took a 14-point lead early in the second half, then had to hold off a Navy rally as the Midshipmen hit repeatedly from the outside.

"Defensively in the second half, we had good pressure," said Iowa Coach Lute Olson, "but when they're raining them in from 30 feet, it makes no difference how you play if the other team shoots like that."

Hawaii defeated Pittsburgh 70-67 in the other half of the Hawkeye Classic.

Sidney Lowe scored 16 points to lead five double-figure scorers as North Carolina State walloped North Carolina A&T. Thurl Bailey and Dereck Whittenburg added 14 points each, freshman George McClain chipped in with 12 and Ernie Myers had 11 for the Wolfpack. Bailey also grabbed 10 rebounds to give N.C. State a 47-32 edge in that department.

Myers' free throws at 13:07 snapped an 8-8 tie and began a 10-0 N.C. State spurt which propelled the Wolfpack into a 37-22 halftime lead.

"I thought our backcourt played well," N.C. State Coach Jim Valvano said. "We had good depth in the backcourt. If there are five guards on the same team around, I haven't seen them. Myers didn't have his normal game, but George McClain and the others played well."

Charlie Sitton poured in a career-high 27 points to lead Oregon State over the University of Portland. Oregon State outscored the Pilots 16-4 over the final seven minutes to secure the triumph.

The Beavers, playing their home opener, led most of the game despite sluggish offensive play and cold outside shooting. Portland twice came back from eight-point deficits, once in the first and once in the second half, before the Beavers put the game away.

Quickness, Finesse Win For Bucks

By The Associated Press

The Milwaukee Bucks have had little choice lately but to go back to what has made them one of the best teams in the National Basketball Association the last few years.

With 6-foot-11 center Bob Lanier and 6-9 power forward Dave Cowens both out of the lineup with injured knees, the Bucks used quickness and finesse to defeat an old nemesis in the strength department, the Boston Celtics, 115-112 Friday night.

Marques Johnson poured in 10 of his 28 points in the final period, including the go-ahead jump shot with 1:04 to play, to lead the Bucks.

"They played better without their bigger, slower people," Boston Coach Bill Fitch said. "Lanier and Cowens are both good players, but their aggressiveness and quickness really picked them up tonight."

"I knew we were going to be smaller tonight, but we had a really nice flow," Bucks Coach Don Nelson said. "I think Boston is the best defensive team in the league, and it took a supreme effort on our part."

In other NBA games, Washington beat New York 105-98, Los Angeles tripped Portland 115-100, Philadelphia pounded San Diego 127-110, Denver outscored Chicago 132-124, Golden State stopped Kansas City 123-107, San Antonio outlasted Houston 88-78, New Jersey trimmed Atlanta 107-99 and Indiana defeated Cleveland 111-103.

"They took advantage of us inside and really made us pay the price," Nelson said of the Bucks' disadvantage inside, "but we were able to hit our open shots and fast break at the other end. My club just dug in and played well."

The score was tied nine times in the second half until Johnson scored six consecutive points to put the Bucks ahead 106-100.

Boston fought back to take a 112-110 lead with 1:41 remaining, but Milwaukee's Alton Lister hit a free throw with 1:29 left and Johnson followed with his turnaround jumper over 6-10 Kevin McHale for a 113-112 Bucks edge with 1:04 to go.

McHale, who scored a season-high 30 points, and Robert Parish, who had 23 points, missed shots in the final minute to keep Boston from taking the lead.

"We got three shots that we wanted at the end and missed," Fitch said. "If Kareem Abdul-Jabbar misses a sky hook, or if Robert misses his tear-dropper jumper, you can say you had the shots you wanted. They just missed. If I could have the same shots every time we played them, we'd win more than 50 percent."

Sidney Moncrief, who had 25 points for Milwaukee, hit two free throws in the final seconds to finish the scoring.

76ers 127, Clipperd 110

Andrew Toney scored 31 points, 11 of them in the third quarter when Philadelphia went ahead of San Diego to stay after trailing at halftime.

Bill Walton, who had 16 points and 10 rebounds, held Moses Malone to six points and three rebounds in the first half, but Malone finished with 16 points and 17 rebounds for the 76ers.

The Clippers, 0-5 with Walton in the lineup, were led by Terry Cummings with 30 points.

Lakers 115, Blazers 100

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 22 points and Norm Nixon 20 as Los Angeles beat Portland for its eighth consecutive victory.

The Lakers used 14-0 and 12-0 streaks to take a 55-43 lead at halftime. The Trail Blazers got as close as three points in the second half.

Spurs 88, Rockets 78

Mike Mitchell scored 28 points to lead San Antonio over intrastate rival Houston, which scored just 26 points in the first half and 10 in the second quarter. Rookie Terry Teagle led the Rockets with 24 points.

Bullets 105, Knicks 98

Jeff Ruland had 23 points and 13 rebounds to lead Washington over New York.

Greg Ballard added 22 points and Don Collins 21 for the Bullets. Collins had eight in the decisive third quarter when Washington outscored the Knicks 28-16 to take an 80-64 lead into the final period.

Warriors 123, Kings 107

Golden State snapped an eight-game road losing streak as Purvis Short scored 23 points and Larry Smith 22 against Kansas City.

The Warriors, playing without injured regulars Joe Barry Carroll and World Free, had not won a road game since their season opener.

Eddie Johnson scored 27 points to lead the Kings.

Nuggets 132, Bulls 124

Alex English scored 29 points and Billy McKinney 22 as Denver handed Chicago its 10th straight road loss of the season.

Denver led 112-99 with 8:40 to play before the Bulls scored eight straight points to trim the deficit to five. But Rich Kelley scored on two straight rebound baskets to go back ahead by 10.

Orlando Woolridge and Reggie Theus led Chicago with 26 points apiece.

Nets 107, Hawks 99

Buck Williams had 22 points and 17 rebounds as New Jersey beat Atlanta for its third straight victory.

Atlanta led most of the game until midway through the fourth quarter, but the Nets finally tied the score 91-91 and then outscored the Hawks 16-8 the rest of the way as they missed six three-point field goals.

Pacers 111, Cavaliers 103

Billy Knight scored a season-high 41 points, including 10 straight field goals at one stretch in the first half, as Indiana handed Cleveland its 15th loss in 17 games.

Rookie Clark Kellogg scored 23 points for Indiana, while Cliff Robinson scored 24 points and had 19 rebounds for the Cavaliers.

Clemson In Title Game

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — Sophomore David Shaffer, who moved from his usual forward spot to the wing position for the first time, poured in 24 points Friday to lead Clemson to an 85-73 win over Bucknell in the first round of the IPTAY Tournament.

The Tigers evened their record at 2-2.

The Tigers, who also got double figure performances from senior Fred Gilliam and sophomore Milan Belich, led 40-35 at intermission. Bucknell rallied to within 1 before Gilliam and Shaffer ignited a Clemson explosion that put the Tigers up by as many as 13 points.

Bucknell was forced to foul in the closing minutes and Clemson made the most of the opportunities.

In the first half, Bucknell jumped to a 10-6 lead before long jumpers by Belich and Gilliam tied it with 14 minutes remaining at the half.

However, it wasn't until Clarke Bynum hit a jumper from the baseline midway through the half that Clemson took the lead for good 16-14.

While Clemson Coach Bill Foster was obviously pleased with the victory, he indicated that he wasn't always happy with the way his team performed.

"There were times when we played good in spurts, there were other times when we were pretty bad," Foster said. "We had a great deal of inconsistency. We definitely look young tonight, but some of that had to do with the play of Bucknell."

Foster was particularly concerned about the play of the point guard, even though Belich did an admirable job in his 24 minutes of play.

"I definitely feel we are going to be a better club when we get (Mike) Eppley back. The team will be much more cohesive when he returns. He should be back after next week."

Eppley was the starting quarterback for the Clemson football team and joined the basketball team only last week.

Bucknell Coach Charlie Woollum was pleased with his team's effort in spite of a few problems.

"I think we played pretty well tonight, but we made some mistakes and you just can't do that to a good team. This is a tough place to play and I thought we handled it pretty well.

"The kids gave it a good effort," he added. "We got it down to six points and we had the ball, but we took a bad shot."

FOOTBALL PIONEER

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Few people had more impact on college football than Walter Camp of Yale.

Camp not only was a highly successful coach at Yale during the latter part of the 19th century, he is also credited with having played a leading part in originating the All-America team.

And he also wrote a good many of the rules of the game which have carried over to today.

Business Notes

BUYING ASSETS

Tandy Corp./Radio Shack announced an agreement to acquire the assets of Interconnect Telecommunications Systems Inc. of Lexington, Ky., a telephone interconnect company operating in the Kentucky and Ohio areas.

Tandy, which said the acquisition is for an undisclosed amount of cash, reported that ITS will be integrated into Radio Shack to broaden the scope of its telephone marketing.

For the 12 months ended June 30, ITS had sales of approximately $8.5 million.

14TH STORE

D.A. Kelly's, a junior women's fashion chain, announced the opening of its 14th store, a 3,600-square-foot unit, in Jacksonville Mall, Jacksonville, on Nov. 26.

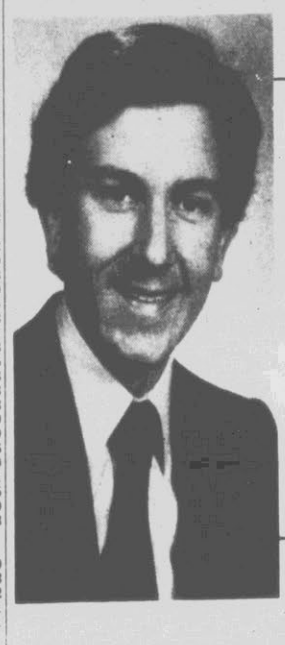

The chain, which has a store in Greenville, said Sheila Tart is the manager of the Jacksonville facility.

P&G PURCHASE

The Procter & Gamble Co. announced that it has reached agreement to purchase Coca-Cola Bottling Mideast Inc., a privately held bottling company in Lexington, Ky., for an undisclosed amount.

The bottling company has plants in Lexington and Louisville, and is a licensed bottler of Coca-Cola Co. soft drinks, and other brands, throughout portions of Kentucky.

John G. Smale, P&G president, said, "The purchase of a bottling operation is a logical step in the further development of our interest in the soft drink business."

WILLIAM G. STATON

EXECUTIVE VP

Parks Dalton, president of Interstate Securities, announced that Bethel native William G. Staton, C.F.A., has been elected executive vice president. Dalton said that with Staton's election, he is now director of marketing as well.

Staton joined Interstate in 1971 as a financial analyst and became director of the research department in 1975. He is a chartered financial analyst and a member of Interstate's board of directors.

After graduating from Bethel High School, Staton received a degree in business administration from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill in 1969 and earned a master's degree in finance in 1971 from Wharton Business School.

Staton and his wife, Linda, have a daughter and reside in Charlotte.

Cattle Prices Show Loss

By KEITH GAVE
Associated Press Writer

Weak cash prices and burdensome supplies pushed cattle futures prices lower Friday in moderate trading on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

"I get the impression that people in the beef industry are running kind of scared right now," said Bob Kuhn, meat and livestock analyst in Chicago with Merrill Lynch Com-modities.

Kuhn noted that slaughter levels are running much higher than expected, and traders ex-pect low cash and dressed beef prices to continue next week.

Kuhn cited a U.S. Department of Agriculture report released Friday that showed beef production is 14 percent higher than a year ago.

Pork production, meanwhile, is 5 percent lower than last year, according to the report. Pork complex futures closed narrowly mixed in light trading.

"The cash hog market is holding up fairly well," Kuhn said. "It's not booming, but it seems to have reached its seasonal bottom a month or so ago and it's moving higher."

Live hog futures closed .33 cent lower to .20 cent higher, with contracts for delivery in December at 57.62 cents a pound; frozen pork bellies were .80 cent lower to unchanged, with February at 80.02 cents a pound; live cattle prices closed .85 cent lower to .30 cent higher, with December at 58.80 cents a pound; and feeder cattle were .95 cent lower to unchanged, with January at 64.60 cents a pound.

Gold and silver prices closed slightly lower in light trading on the Commodity Exchange in New York.

"Gold has been consolidating since Friday and Monday" when strong gains were posted, said Gail Levey, an analyst of precious metals in New York with Shearson-American Ex-press. "Right now, the trading is pretty lackluster. The market is just waiting for fresh news."

She said buyers were not even motivated by widespread speculation that the Federal Reserve System might lower the discount rate, the interest the central bank charges on loans to banks and other savings institutions.

"We've heard those rumors so many times before," Ms. Levey said.

Analysts said gold prices soon could reach $450 per troy ounce if market expectations of an easier monetary policy are realized. A cut in the discount rate would push interest rates lower, which traditionally fuels gold prices.

Profit-taking in the wake of recent gains persisted in the silver pits, where trading was light.

Gold was traded in a narrow range and prices settled $1.50 to $4.20 lower, with contracts for delivery in December at $441.40 per troy ounce. Silver prices were 5 cents to 9.1 cents lower, with December settling at $10.37 a troy ounce.

Grain and soybean futures prices closed mixed in lackluster trading on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Selling by commission houses, or firms that buy and sell commodities for customers, pressured prices throughout the day, said Susan Hackmann, grains analyst with A.G. Beck-er.

Continued tight farmer holding, meanwhile, provided underlying support in the soybean, corn and wheat pits, she said.

Trading was very light and stayed with narrow ranges, she added.

"There wasn't a lot of other activity going on," she said, adding that outside markets provided little direction. Financial futures prices were higher, but gold prices closed easier.

Some analysts expressed concern that heavy rains throughout the Grain Belt could damage grains currently in storage. However, they said no spoilage had been reported.

Wheat futures prices settled 1¼ cents to 1½ cents lower, with contracts for delivery in December at $3.21¾ a bushel; corn prices were ¾ cent lower to ¼ cent higher, with December at $2.31 a bushel; oats were ¾ cent lower to ½ cent higher, with December at $1.57 a bush-el; and soybeans were 1 cents lower to 3½ cents lower, with January at $5.63½ a bushel.

Financial futures strengthened in light, choppy trading on the Chicago Board of Trade. Treasury bond futures, GNMA futures and Treasury note futures all were higher.

Prices fell in early trading on long liquidation, but rallied largely on expectations that money supply figures to be announced after the close would show a larger decline than previously anticipated, floor sources said.

N.C. Institutions Wary Of Change

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina banks and savings and loan officials say they're not sure whether consolidating their industries' regulators will benefit their firms.

The idea of one federal superagency to regulate the various segments of the financial industry surfaced late last month, when the Treasury Department released an Oct. 20 memo from Secretary Donald Regan to Vice President George Bush.

In the memo, Regan recommended Bush set up a panel to determine whether there should be consolidation of finance industry regulatory agencies such as the Federal Reserve Board, Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., Comptroller of the Currency, Securities and Exchange Commission and the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

"Each regulator serves a unique purpose for a unique part of the industry," said Mark Leggett, director of public affairs for North Carolina National Bank in Charlotte. "It's highly specialized."

Thad Woodard, president of the N.C. Savings and Loan League, questioned whether people with particular needs who have been served by particular segments of the financial industry would be able to find satisfactory service with one superagency.

C.C. Hope, vice chairman of First Union National Bank in Charlotte, said the consolidation could reduce flexibility that financial institutions now enjoy.

He noted that a bank now may choose to be a national bank under the jurisdiction of the comptroller. If management doesn't like that agency's approach, it has the option of becoming a state bank that is a member of the Federal Reserve system or a nonmember bank that is strictly under the direction of state officials.

Rose's May Lease Units

ROANOKE, Va. (AP) — Rose's Stores Inc., a North Carolina-based department store chain, is negotiating to take over some of the 21 Woolco store spaces in Virginia, says a Rose's vice president.

"We're looking at it, but there's been no lease agreement yet," Thomas Banks said Friday.

He said the 240-store chain has looked at all the Virginia Woolco stores but "I know we are not interested in all of them."

Rose's operates 180 department stores and 60 smaller P.H. Rose variety stores in 14 states from its Henderson, N.C., headquarters.

The F.W. Woolworth Co. is closing its 335 discount Woolco stores in January because of financial losses and has started an inventory closeout sale nationwide.

Banks said his company hopes to decide within two weeks which spaces it would lease. Negotiations will be with individual landlords for the property, he said.

Miss Taylor, Mr. Ray Wed Saturday

Selvia Chapel Missionary Baptist Church here was the scene of the candlelight wedding of Patricia Lynn Taylor and Todd Anthony Ray of East Orange, N.J., Saturday at 3 p.m.. The double-ring ceremony was conducted by the Rev. Johnny B. Taylor, father of the bride, assisted by Elder Dennis Wooten.

Parents of the bride are Rev. and Mrs. Taylor of Greenville. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Novella Ray of East Orange, N.J. and Ed Jones Ray of Asbury Park, N.J.

Wedding music was presented by organist, Mark Joyner of Roxboro., and soloists, Mrs. Wanda Joyner of Roxboro and Ronald Alston of Warrenton.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father. She wore a formal white gown of sheerganza over peau de soie and silk venise lace. The gown was designed with a high neckline and sheer yoke appliqued with sculptured venise lace encrusted with pearls and irridescents. The full bishop sleeves with lace appliques closed with wide lace cuffs. The circular skirt, appliqued with lace and accented with a deep lace ruffle, softly flowed into an attached chapel-length train. She wore a painted-front pillbox hat with silk illusion veil. She carried a cascade bouquet of white and pink pixie carnations, baby's breath and white orchids.

Sylvia Taylor of Greenville, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. She wore a mauve crepe-back satin gown fashioned with a sheer chantilly yoke, short puffed sleeves and fitted front-peaked waistline. She wore a painted pillbox hat of matching crepe-back satin and carried a classic bouquet in shades of pink and burgundy pixie carnations.

Bridesmaids were Robin Ray of East Orange, N.J., sister of the bridegroom; Sylvia Mills, Barbara Smith and Carolyn Wilson, all of Greenville; Linda Johnson of Clayton; Loretta Manago of Charlotte; Marsha Vines of Farmville; and Glenda Graham of Kinston. They wore formal gowns of cranberry and headpieces identical to that of the maid of honor and carried similar bouquets.

The flower girl, Tiffany Ray of East Orange, N.J., niece of the bridegroom, wore an antique satin gown with a mauve cumberbund and carried a basket filled with pink and burgandy flowers tied with matching bows. Bryan Taylor, brother of the bride, was ring bearer.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Groomsmen were Vincent King of Silver Spring, Md.; Andre Virgil of Liverpool, England; Kim Fisher and Robbie Martin, both cousins of the bridegroom from East Orange, N.J.; John Taylor of Greenville, brother of the bride; Bobby Lee III of Charleston, S.C.; James Mitchell of Miami, Fla.; and Albert Pope of Greensboro.

The wedding was directed by Mrs. Rosa L. Harris of Greenville.

The mother of the bride wore a formal gown of dusty rose. The mother of the bridegroom chose a formal gray dress with burgundy accessories. Both were remembered with pink carnation corsages.

For the wedding trip, the bride wore a winter white suit with cranberry accessories and the orchid lifted from her bouquet. The couple will reside in Goldsboro.

The bride is a graduate of J.H. Rose High School and North Carolina Central University. She is employed as a personal banker at Wachovia Bank and Trust Company at Seymour Johnson Air Force Base in Goldsboro. The bridegroom is a graduate of East Orange High School, East Orange, N.J., and serves in the U.S. Air Force as a SSGT and is enrolled at St. Leo's College at Seymour Johnson.

An after-rehearsal dinner was given by the grandmother of the bride, Mrs. Vella Jordan, in the fellowship hall of the church.

Following the ceremony, a reception given by the parents of the bride was held in the Holidome of the Holiday Inn. Guests were greeted by Mrs. Ernestine Peterson. Mrs. Bessie Smith presided at the guest register. Mrs. Shirley Hart introduced the receiving line. Natalie Fleming poured punch and cake was served by Mrs. Felicia Sharp after the first traditional slice was cut by the bridal couple. Goodbyes were said by the parents of the bridal couple.

On The Young Side

By Lisa Wang

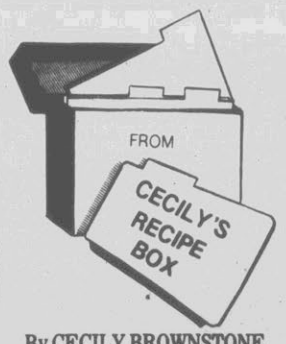

Six students have been selected for membership in Quill and Scrool, an international honor society for high school journalists. Members, who are chosen on the basis of outstanding journalistic work, are all in the upper third of their class.

New members are Sheila Craft (junior), editor of Visa, the school yearbook; Stephanie Deans (senior) associate editor of Rampant Lines, the school newspaper; Karen Dunlap (junior), business manager of Visa; Anne Heath (senior), co-editor of Insights, the school literary magazine; Josie Keller (senior), co-editor of Insights and announcer for "Rampant Review," the school radio broadcast; and Lisa Wang (senior), editor-in-chief of Rampant Lines, co-editor of Insights, and reporter for "On the Young Side."

Colette Resnik and Lisa Wang were first- and second-place winners, respectively, in the school-wide Voice of Democracy speech contest, sponsored by the Veterans of Foreign Wars. Nine students from Rose competed for the two places, which were awarded $50 and $25 prizes. To enter the competition, each entrant submitted a tape of his speech on the subject "Youth: America's Strength." Each speech had to be between three and five minutes in length. Speeches were judged on delivery, originality and content. Colette's speech advanced to the county level, where it won second place and a $50 U.S. Savings Bond.

Miss Glutting, Mr. Smith Married

The wedding of Brenda Lee Glutting and Roland Andrew Smith III, both of Greenville, took place Saturday afternoon at two o'clock in the Hooker Memorial Church here. The double-ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Ralph Messick.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Robert V. Glutting and Mr. and Mrs. Roland A. Smith, all of Greenville.

Escorted by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of white silkened organza, chantilly lace, pearls and chantilace designed with a fitted all-lace bodice. The gown featured a Queen Anne neckline with a keyhole back opening encrusted with pearls and full bishop sleeves closed with lace cuffs. The A-line skirt, which flowed into a cathedral-length train, was designed with an accordian panel of silkened organza bordered with chantilace which encircled the hemline and cathedral train featuring a panel of chantilly lace. Her waltz-length veil bordered with chantilace was attached to a Juliet cap of lace and pearls. She carried a cascade bouquet of white silk gardenias with white baby's breath placed on top of a Bible tied with white lace and satin ribbon.

Bobbi Glutting of Greenville, sister of the bride, served as maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Phyllis W. Oakley, Anne Joyner and Jennifer Smith, sister of the bridegroom, all of Greenville.

Each attendant wore a floor-length gown of cherry taffeta with a fitted bodice and off-the-shoulder neckline accented with a ruffle which extended down the back to the waist. The waist was sashed in taffeta and the skirt was gathered. They each carried a hand nosegay of a single white mum with baby's breath tied with cherry red streamers and backed with a white lace doily.

Flower girl Sara Stasavich of Greenville wore a long gown of white chiffon over pink taffeta. The neckline and hemline were edged in lace. She carried a natural wicker basket filled with flower petals featuring a floral spray of white pompons and cherry red ribbons. Ring bearer was Christopher Williams of Greenville.

MRS. ROLAND ANDREW SMITH III

The father of the bridegroom served as best man. Ushers were Chris Glutting and Keith Glutting, both brothers of the bride from Leitchfield, Ky., and Mac Avery and Garland Lancaster Jr., both of Greenville.

A program of wedding music was performed by organist Mrs. Rosemary Fischer and soloist Mrs. Susie Pair, both of Greenville.

The mother of the bride wore a long formal matching dress and coat of forest green Qiana. The mother of the bridegroom wore a formal gown of beige chiffon with lace and a taffeta skirt. Each mother was remembered with a corsage of white phaleanopsis orchids.

The reception was given by the parents of the bride at Brook Valley Country Club. A rehearsal dinner was given by the parents of the bridegroom at Three Steers Restaurant.

Prior to the wedding a bridal shower was given by Bobbi Glutting, sister of the bride. A pig picking in honor of the bride and bridegroom was given by Mr. and Mrs. Walter Stasavich and Mr. and Mrs. Roger Bullock, all of Greenville.

The bride and the bridegroom both graduated from J.H. Rose High School. The bridegroom is a graduate of Martin Community College. The bride is a secretary for Chocowinity, a son, Clay Bradford, November 27 in Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Got a new word for you today.

Egalitarian.

Actually, it's not new; it just hasn't been used too much until now. It means "equal political, economic and legal rights for all citizens," or in today's context: a lot of women are making as much as or more money than their husbands.

The only reason I bring it up is that is has just been discovered that when men get a good case of egalitarianism, they have a rotten love life, are prone to divorce and have an early death.

I was talking with some of my friends and we can't figure it out. We all had husbands who took care of us for years while we stayed home and it never made us sick. As a matter of fact, cooking the bacon instead of bringing it home never brought on violence, affected our love life and if you can believe the statistics actually had us outliving our husbands.

My friends and I agreed that we should all hop in and offer some solutions to the problem by telling men how we did it. We figured one of the best ways was to tell men what they told us 20 years ago when they were the breadwinners.

"What you're doing is just as important as what I'm doing. The fact that I get paid a lot of money for it is of no consequence. If you want or need something, you know that all you have to do is ask."

Just because you are not paid for what you do doesn't mean you're dumb or stupid. I love you when you get mad."

"Look, we didn't make the rules, and besides, what's such a big deal about seeing your name on a bank statement or a credit card? As long as you're married to me, you'll always have credit."

"Thank goodness you have a job that doesn't require enough stress to bring about a heart attack. Believe me, it's a jungle out there."

"I didn't marry a calculator. I married a man who was supposed to share my life. What's mine is yours. What's yours is mine. We're partners."

I don't pretend that Egalitarian is an easy word to swallow. Although it's something that isn't spoken of, women know this. In fact, no one understands it better. After all, we didn't buy those explanations either. It all comes down to years of tradition and attitude.

Somehow it was assumed when we married for richer or for poorer, in sickness and in health, we were referring to the bridegroom's earnings and not the bride's. Then came Egalitarian.

Somehow, it doesn't seem to be worth having a rotten sex life, divorcing your wife, or dying over.

Ludwig Van Beethoven was born in 1770 in Bonn. Although he started in music as a solo pianist, his increasig deafness made a career as a virtuoso impossible. Many of his greatest compositions were written when he was either virtually or totally deaf. He died in 1827 at the age of 57.

INFORMAL BUFFET
Vegetables & Cheese Dip
Sliced Meats & Potato Salad
Ice Cream & Walnut Pralines

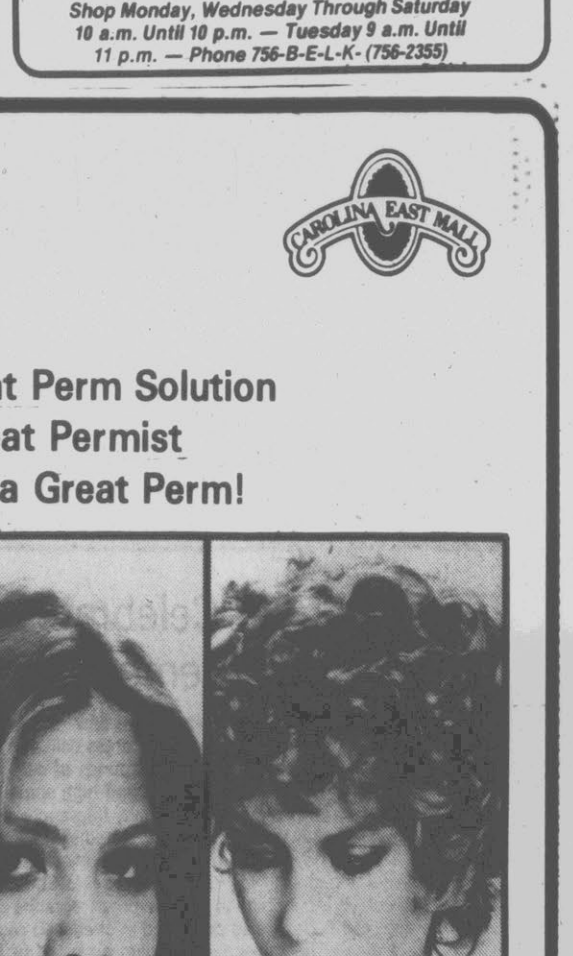

WALNUT PRALINES
Perfect to serve now and at Christmas.

- 1 cup firmly packed light brown sugar
- ½ cup granulated sugar
- ½ cup half-and-half
- 2 tablespoons light corn syrup
- 1 cup coarsely broken walnuts
- ½ teaspoon vanilla

In a heavy saucepan stir together brown sugar, granulated sugar, half-and-half and corn syrup. Over medium heat, stirring constantly, bring to a boil. Without stirring, continue boiling until temperature on candy thermometer reaches 238 degrees or until a teaspoonful of the mixture dropped into a bowl of very cold water forms a soft ball that flattens upon removal from the water. Let stand off heat until lukewarm (110 degrees). Add nuts and vanilla. With a wooden spoon beat until mixture begins to thicken and loses its gloss — about 5 minutes. Drop by teaspoonfuls onto wax paper-lined cookie sheets. Let stand until firm. Wrap individually in wax paper and store in a tightly covered container in the refrigerator. Makes about 2 dozen.

The differences among professional perm products vary much less than the differences amoung permists. Perm solutions do basically two things: break down the hair bonds, allowing hair to take new 'shape' and re-bond the hair to lock in the new shape. The rest of the responsibility for giving you the look you want is in the permist's hands. They must first determine if you want long or short, curly or wavy. Dear Abby

Wanted, Needed Gifts Are Holiday Best

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Last year you devoted an entire column to what and what not to give for Christmas gifts. I thought it was one of the most helpful columns you ever wrote. Please run it again.

RIO GRANDE GRANDMA

DEAR GRANDMA: That column was so well-received, I'm repeating it. Here it is:

DEAR READERS: Can you believe it's time to prepare for the holidays again? Well, it is, so do yourselves a favor and do your Christmas (or Hanukkah) shopping early.

If you're wondering what to give Aunt Jennie or Grandpa, who don't get out much, let me tell you what not to give them:

No dusting powder, after-shave or cologne. (They probably have several unopened boxes gathering dust on their closet shelves.)

Grandpa doesn't need another necktie, and Aunt Bertha doesn't really want any more brooches, necklaces or bracelets.

With the price of groceries so high, folks who live alone on a fixed income probably would be delighted to receive a basket of goodies. Include small cans of salmon, chicken, ham, tuna, vegetables, fruit, instant coffee, tea bags, crackers, cookies and instant soup mixes.

Older people who live in confined quarters do not need more "things" that are ornamental only. Don't send music boxes, statuettes or other bric-a-brac.

A truly thoughtful gift: postcards and some lined stationery with envelopes and a generous supply of postage stamps. (Enclose some felt-tip pens, too.)

The homebound will appreciate a box of greeting cards for all occasions so that they too can send birthday, anniversary, graduation, get-well and condolence cards to others. (Be a sport! Stamp some envelopes.)

Don't give anyone a gift of clothing unless you're absolutely sure the size is right. That goes for the color and style, too.

If you're tempted to pass along a scarf, purse, wallet or some useless little doodad you received for Christmas three years ago, please don't. It's a pretty fair bet the recipient will find it just as useless as you did. (Besides, you might get it back the year after next.)

If someone on your gift list is living on a pension, a check for any amount would be much more appreciated than a frivolous little trinket. Or give someone who's counting pennies a year's subscription to a newspaper or magazine you know he or she will enjoy.

Please, don't ever send a gift in a box bearing the name of a store unless you bought it there. Should the recipient want to exchange it, he will be embarrassed, the store clerks will look bewildered, and it won't make you look too good.

If you buy a gift on sale, be sure it's appropriate, since if the recipient tries to take it back he will be told, "Sorry, sale merchandise is not returnable."

Don't give anyone a pet unless you're absolutely sure it's wanted and will be properly cared for. And if you want to delight someone who considers his pet a "member of the family," include a tin of cat or dog food for the pet.

Don't give wine or liquor unless you're sure the recipients imbibe. Candy, nuts and fruitcake make wonderful gifts for those who aren't counting calories, but please have compassion for those who are, and lead them not into temptation.

Resist giving toddlers stuffed animals and dolls that are bigger than they are. And parents will thank you for not sending their children horns, drums, sirens or whistles. If you give a child a game or book, be sure it's in the appropriate age range.

Instead of giving someone a gift with permission to "exchange it if it's not what you want," save yourself (and him) much time and effort and give him a gift certificate in the first place.

Holiday time can be very depressing for people who are alone, so if you know someone who might be alone and lonely, give him (or her) the best gift of all — an invitation to spend the holidays with you and your family. Loneliness is the ultimate poverty.

Love, ABBY

Hypnotists Using Past Lives To Help Now

By STEVE GRAHAM
Associated Press Writer

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Thirty years after the "reincarnation" of Bridey Murphy relived life in 19th-century Ireland, hypnotists are taking clients to controversial "former lives" in hopes of solving mental problems.

But other therapists are discounting the practice as being nothing more than confabulation — the creation of convenient fantasies.

In November 1952, amateur hypnotist Morey Bernstein began a series of experiments with Ruth Tighe in Pueblo, Colo., in which she related the life and death of a barrister's wife.

When the experiments became publicized and his book, "The Search for Bridey Murphy," was published, a storm of controversy erupted over the implications of reincarnation.

With deceptive ease, most people can be hypnotized and relate a past life, say authorities on the subject. For about $50 an hour, many of the growing number of hypnotherapists will attempt to take a client back in time for curiosity or therapy.

Eugene Paquet, who runs a Portland hypnosis clinic called "Journey Inward," says sometimes it takes two or three sessions, but most people say they have been around before.

"Some people relive it. Some people just remember it. It depends on the individual," he said.

"Almost everybody will claim a past life — but you can also progress someone to the year 2000," said Portland clinical psychiatrist Stanley Abrams. "It's a nice gimmick, I suppose, but there's no way I'd believe it."

Dr. Ken Paltrow, a Portland psychiatrist, says he's not ready to espouse the reincarnation theory. "But I've used it (past-life regression) and it's helped out many people in many ways."

Paltrow says he has had a dozen patients who, under hypnosis, saw themselves as Jewish victims of Nazi concentration camps, although only two were Jewish.

"After they experienced their own deaths, they all felt better," he says.

Edith Fiore, a clinical psychologist in Saratoga, Calif., says she uses past-life regression for all therapy and tends to believe in reincarnation.

"It doesn't really matter one whit. This really works," says Dr. Fiore, whose book, "You Have Been Here Before," details the treatment of several clients whose in-trance experiences helped clear up such problems as fear of heights, smoking, migraine headaches and sexual problems.

She says about 500 psychiatrists or psychologists worldwide use past-life regressions for treatment and have formed the Association of Past-Life Researchers and Therapists.

In addition, members of the growing hypnotherapy industry offer to take clients back in time for treatment or just for fun. Most psychologists and psychiatrists are at odds with the virtually unregulated hypnotherapy industry, saying the hypnotherapists are not prepared to fool around with a person's psyche.

Now divorced and remarried, Ruth Tighe Morrow lives in a Denver suburb where she still maintains her privacy with an unlisted telephone number.

"We've remained good friends," Bernstein, now 63, said in a telephone interview from his Pueblo, Colo., home from which he runs an investment business. "But oddly enough, we haven't seen each other in 10 years."

Historic Wood Houses Are Facing Extinction

By ANN TABOROFF
Associated Press Writer

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — The 19th-century wood houses of Istanbul, precious remnants of the old city, are threatened with extinction.

Neglect, insects, moisture and changing social conditions have destroyed almost all but 1 percent of the city's wood houses. The remaining houses are distinguished by second-story bay windows and fanciful woodwork.

The jutting window, known as a "havat" (a Turkish word meaning life), was the lifeline of Turkish women of the last century. From behind the elaborate wood screens, they could sit and survey the street without being seen.

The gingerbread carving characteristic of these houses derives from a long and sophisticated tradition of woodwork in Turkey. Intricately carved and inlaid doors and cabinets from the Middle Ages can still be seen in Topkapi, the palace of the Ottoman sultans, and in many mosques.

The best-preserved houses are on the Prince's Islands in the Sea of Marmara, 90 minutes from Istanbul by ferry and since the 1800s the favored summer vacation spot of the city's upper class.

But the highest concentration of wood houses is found in two partially industrialized, down-at-heels districts, Suleymaniye and Zeyrek, located in the historic center of Istanbul. Surrounded by Istanbul's most famous mosques and bazaars, the traditional wood houses here are rotting away.

Hundreds of thousands of immigrants from rural Anatolia who have poured into Istanbul since 1960 in search of work and better lives have passed through the run-down wood houses of Zeyrek and Suleymaniye, living four or five to a room and sharing a common toilet. Often the houses lack kitchens and even running water.

As soon as they can, the immigrants, most of them landless peasants, move on to the new residential areas that have sprung up around the fringes of the city.

Between 1977 and 1980, 35 of the 224 wood houses in Zeyrek collapsed. More were lost last winter.

The Flu: Costly Illness In Lives And Money That Strikes In Winter

By WARREN E. LEARY
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Winter means the coming of cold winds, gray skies and snow, but it also heralds the season of the most frequently occurring infectious illness in the country — influenza.

The flu is so familiar that most people take it for granted.

They forget that it is a serious disease that leads to thousands of deaths each year and costs the nation billions of dollars in medical costs and lost earnings.

The following are questions and answers about flu and its impact:

Q. What kind of disease is flu?

A. Influenza is a family of contagious respiratory diseases caused by viruses. It is most prevalent during winter and afflicts people worldwide. Outbreaks in local communities are called endemic, while those affecting a state or country can become epidemics. A rare outbreak that strikes worldwide is called a pandemic.

Q. How severe a flu season do experts expect this winter?

A. No one knows. The federal Centers for Disease Control says the 1981-82 season was unusually mild. Relatively few cases were reported with widespread activity in only four states compared with 32 states the previous year. Experts say no new flu strain has appeared so far to suggest a bad upcoming season, but it's too early to tell.

Q. How many kinds of flu are there?

A. There are three major types of influenza viruses, designated A, B and C. They are all related, but flu A is more common and most serious. Type C seldom is a major health problem. And while type B can cause large outbreaks of serious disease, it usually is far less threatening than type A.

Q. Why is type A so bad?

A. It can spread around the world in a matter of months, with a lot of illness and death. Every known pandemic has been caused by type A viruses. They can mutate into new strains readily, bypassing any acquired immunity people may have developed from previous infections.

Q. Who is susceptible to flu?

A. Everyone, but to different degrees. People who have had one type of flu may develop immunity to a closely related strain. But because there are so many varieties — and more developing constantly — virtually everyone is at risk. However, a recent study in Israel also indicates those who smoke cigarettes are more likely to catch flu and get sicker from it than nonsmokers.

Q. Are the risks and consequences of flu the same for everyone?

A. No. Serious complications such as pneumonia and death are more likely in certain high-risk groups: people over 65, those chronically ill with heart, lung and kidney diseases, sufferers of sickle cell or severe diabetics and patients whose immune systems are depressed because of organ transplants or cancer therapy.

Q. How do you catch flu?

A. The disease is contracted from viruses shed by those previously infected. The viruses typically enters the respiratory tract through airborne droplets and lodge in the nasal passages. They also can reside on surfaces contaminated by sufferers, such as telephones, and be transferred by the hands to the nose and mouth.

Q. What are the symptoms of flu?

A. Symptoms begin to appear 24 to 48 hours after infection and may last from a few days to more than a week. They include fever, chills, malaise, sore throat, cough, respiratory congestion, nasal discharge, headache, watery or burning eyes, muscle ache and loss of appetite.

Q. How do you treat flu?

A. Common flu treatment basically involves easing the symptoms while your body rides out the disease. This means taking aspirin or acetaminophen to control fever and aches, antihistamines for congestion and cough medicines. Bed rest, nutritious foods and plenty of liquids also are recommended.

Q. How else can you treat flu or prevent it and its complications?

A. Flu vaccines, made from the viruses themselves, can prevent the disease. Since most flu-related deaths stem from subsequent pneumonia, new anti-pneumonia vaccines also can help.

Q. Who should be vaccinated?

A. The government recommends that all high-risk people get flu and pneumonia shots at the beginning of flu season.

Street Children Eke Out Living In Brazil Cities

By BRYNA BRENNAN
Associated Press Writer

BELEM, Brazil (AP) — Scores of youngsters attempting to eke out an existence on the streets hawk plastic bags along the docks of this northern port city, surrounding shoppers and pleading for spare change for their wares.

They make up a small part of what UNICEF says is one of Brazil's "most urgent problems." They are abandoned children, making their living on the streets.

UNICEF puts the number of abandoned children in Brazil at up to 25 million — more than the population of all of Central America or more than the combined population of the states of Pennsylvania, Ohio and West Virginia.

Children in Rio de Janeiro's posh Copacabana and Ipanema beaches roam by the outdoor cafes, selling peanuts and flowers. Street urchins in the modern inland capital of Brasilia walk along the commercial streets, offering shoe shines or lottery tickets.

The problem has been found in most of Latin America, said Bill Myers, a UNICEF counselor who is working in Brasilia with the government to combat the situation. "But the sheer numbers here are enormous," he said.

"We think, by observation, that the problem is getting worse as the economy gets worse," Myers said. "We know that it is tied with uncontrolled, rapid urbanization."

Many of the children have been completely abandoned by their parents and dumped onto the streets, but large numbers leave home "and work on the streets because their parents are just too poor to take care of them."

UNICEF, the Brazilian Secretariat of Social Assistance and the National Child Welfare Foundation are in the infant stages of preparing a program to deal with what they call the "street children."

Myers says UNICEF is looking on a "micro" basis at existing programs for children around the country and attempting to find a plan that can be adopted on a national level. One of the goals, he explained, is to offer "some protection from malnutrition, disease and exploitation."

Brazil traditionally has "adopted the European and American attitude of putting these kids into institutions," he said. About 6,000 children are institutionalized in the country, Myers added.

"And like every institution, they're as cold as they can be," he said. "They break the child's ties with the community, take him out of the real world and then dump him back without any real skills."

The alternative "is to help the kid in the community, on the streets," Myers said. "We can't import an answer. And we can't change that the kids have to work."

Brazilian law bans children under 12 from working and permits youths between 12 and 16 to work as apprentices. But the authorities, Myers points out, are forced to look the other way.

Mayor Says Race Is Still An Issue

By HAROLD JACKSON

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (UPI) — A sharecropper's son who became the first black mayor of a city that once bitterly fought integration says he knows better than to think race is no longer a political issue in Birmingham.

Richard Arrington Jr., 47, has come a long way since his father borrowed bus fare in 1940 to bring his family to Birmingham to work in the city's now-closed steel mills.

Arrington, near the midpoint of his first term, says he plans to seek re-election.

"I want to do two things in particular. All of it has to be done by productive leadership. Obviously, I feel overall I have been a good mayor, but I'm totally confident that I can be an even better mayor," he said.

"First, I want to get this city on sound economic ground. Secondly, once the next election is over, I should be able to lead the city towards greater racial harmony. If I attain those goals I will leave political office a happy man."

Race became an issue in Arrington's first mayoral campaign and after his election, he was accused of being biased during city council elections and in the process to choose a new police chief, who wound up being white.

"I think things are quiet for the moment," Arrington said of the race issue. "I don't intend to engage in any kind of race-baiting campaign during my re-election campaigne.

"I think it is important that we move Birmingham past that point of racial antagonism, but I have no doubt race will be raised in the election. I feel some white candidates will otherwise have little else to talk about in campaigning against me. I look for some candidates to try to put race in there."

Arrington has always been motivated to excel. After public school, he earned degrees from Miles College, the University of Detroit and a Ph.D. in vertebrate zoology from the University of Oklahoma.

He returned to Birmingham to teach at Miles and soon became dean of the college. In the early 1970s, Arrington became director of the Alabama Center for Higher Education, a consortium of black colleges.

He kept the job until he was inaugurated as mayor in 1980.

Arrington has not let charges of bias interfere with his programs to bring greater minority participation in city government and construction projects.

"In the past 30 months, we have had $18 million of city work go to bona fide minority firms. That's about eight times what had gone to minority firms in all the rest of the city's history," he said.

The mayor also takes credit for ending a seven-year-old suit against the city alleging discrimination against women and blacks.

"We have not done a lot of hiring, but about 50 percent of those hired have been black and a third of them have been female," he said.

Arrington's administration also has produced a city housing program that saw the most single-family home construction since 1962 and an across-the-board 9 percent reduction in all crimes except auto theft.

"We're experiencing the first steady decline in crime in eight years," he said. "Many people suggested that if I were elected mayor, there would be an increase in crime. They suggested that I would be soft on criminals."

Arrington feels everyone will be able to see the accomplishments of his administration just by taking a walk through downtown Birmingham and seeing all the conpleted and ongoing commercial construction.

"In this depressed time for construction, we had 317 new construction permits issued whose total value exceeds $140 million. We have three new office buildings complete or just about complete that real estate people told me would never come to fruition."

Arrington said if he wins a second term and finishes the projects he has started, he will end his political career on that happy note.

Face-Readers Say Andropov 'Humane'

By PETER COSTA

NEW YORK (UPI) — Would you buy a used car from Soviet Communist Party Secretary Yuri Andropov?

"Face-reading experts" Dr. Leopold Bellak and Samm Sinclair Baker say they would, but they would also demand a test drive.

Many psychologists and psychiatrists say face reading is nonsense, comparable to long-discredited head feeling.

But Bellak — who also is co-author of "The Complete Scarsdale Medical Diet" — says the muscles in the face pull the skin into characteristic expressions so that the face does reflect the mind. He bases his interpretation of faces on more than 30 years of experience and research.

Bellak and Sinclair, authors of "Reading Faces," compiled a personality sketch of the Soviet Union's new leader and reported they were left with a very "hopeful" feeling.

"Although his face shows intense underlying strength, humane qualities are dominant," said Baker.

"But I would not have bought a used car from Brezhnev, however. He would do absolutely anything to serve his own purposes," Baker said Wednesday.

By examining the right side of Andropov's face, they found his right eye to be staring and cold which they say reveals solid, stern, rocklike qualities.

This severity is reinforced by a very strong chin that may indicate a tendency in the former KGB chief to be hard and unmoving, they said.

"The right corner of Andropov's mouth is pulled down, showing the capacity for derision, skepticism, determination and aggression. However, the left side, the side of the face that reveals traits people most often prefer to hide from the world, is dominated by sensitivity.

"If approached correctly, Andropov could be agreeable," Baker said. "His softer attributes are much more apparent than Brezhnev's, whose face revealed only implacable, unyielding traits."

Nationalist China Holds On To Traditional Ways

By JOHN RODERICK
AP Special Corrspondent

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — To some, Taiwan is a staunch and much-abused anti-Communist bastion of the free world. To others, it is a political embarrassment that will not go away.

Since 1949, this large island off the China mainland has been the seat of the Nationalist Chinese government in exile. In the last 11 years ithas been buffeted by international storms that might have sunk less buoyant societies.

Ousted from the United Nations in 1971, its diplomatic ties with all the world's major nations including the United States sevesed since 1979, it refuses to stop making an international nuisance of itself.

It refuses to compromise with its long-time enemy in Peking on an agreement that could end 55 years of hostility and lead to unification of China.

The death of former President Chiang Kai-shek in 1975 in no way altered the Nationalists' stony refusal to grasp the Communist hand of reconciliation, although their prestige has suffered and their best friend, the United States, considers Peking's terms generous.

"The people here do not wish to negotiate away their freedom and democracy," says James Soong, the top government spokesman. "The national consensus is that we do not want communism. We have everything to lose and nothing to gain."

Since the Nationalists came here in defeat in 1949, the island's 18 million highly motivated people have developed Asia's highest standard of living after Japan. Per capita annual income is more than $2,000 and expected to hit $6,200 by the end of the 1980s, 10 times that of the mainland. 1982 economic growth, in a global business slowdown, is estimated at a respectable 5 percent.

Taiwan rejects — for reasons partly emotional, partly logical — Peking's seductive offer to continue to go its own way economically, politically and internationally — even to keep its own armed forces — if it will fly the flag of the People's Republic.

Older Nationalists here have long memories, and neither defeat nor success has eased their abhorrence of communism.

Aware that Peking's tolerance may not last forever, they see creation of a military deterrent as urgent.

Export Subsidy Spat Nears Solution

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — From the fury expressed by many Americans about European stubbornness over Common Market agricultural policies, you might think the United States is ready to pull the trigger on an all-out trade war.

Agriculture Secretary John R. Block says Congress "won't have to push me very hard" to win support for protectionist legislation aimed at countering the Common Market's export subsidies.

The remark was made in exasperation last week after the windup of an 88-nation ministerial trade conference in Geneva, Switzerland, on the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

U.S. officials had hoped to get some significant concession by the Common Market countries which would have led to the gradual ending of export subsidies.

The practice, according to the U.S. view — which was supported widely among non-European nations — threatens to destroy free trade in the world. And, closer to home, subsidized European commodities are elbowing their way into traditional U.S. foreign markets.

Block said he is working on "a package and a plan" to counter the European subsidies, but declined to be more specific. The Reagan administration has been under growing pressure to teach Europe a lesson by dumping surplus U.S. commodities, such as dairy products and grain, on the world market at cut-rate prices.

Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., who led a nine-member congressional delegation to Geneva, said "a protectionist backlash in Congress" could develop next year.

The flap with the Common Market probably would have come to a head anyway, but it probably was fueled substantially by the current world commodity situation and, specifically, slumping U.S. farm exports.

With huge supplies hanging over the markets, prices of wheat, corn and other products have been held down. The depressed world economy, meanwhile, has dampened demand.

An immediate consequence has been the dramatic cooling-of the value of U.S. farm exports, which increased for 12 consecutive years to a record $43.8 billion in 1980-81. In the fiscal year that ended on Sept. 30, shipments declined to $39.1 billion and are forecast to drop further in 1982-83 to $37.5 billion.

The United States not only is the world's largest agricultural exporter, it is one of the biggest importers, taking $15.3 billion worth last fiscal year.

Another point that remembered by many U.S. officials — even in the heat of retaliatory passion — is that the Common Market is one of the American farmer's biggest customers. Last year, while overall exports declined, sales to there actually rose slightly in value to about $9.1 billion from $8.9 billion in 1980-81.

The heart of the whole matter is the European Common Agricultural Policy — CAP — which, as one commentary put it, "has always demanded attention" since it was started in 1968.

Device Probes Atom's Nucleus

By PAUL RAEBURN
AP Science Writer

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Physicists have a new tool for probing the mysteries of the nucleus of the atom —, a 150-ton machine built to slam one nucleus into another with the force of an earthquake.

The aim is simple: to set the nuclei ringing like tiny bells or even rip them apart into hundreds of bits of debris.

Scientists say the machine will help answer persistent questions about the nature of the nucleus and the forces that hold it together. With luck, the device might also enable physicists to create the long-sought superheavy elements — substances so much heavier than natural materials they could have strange and important properties.

The Michigan State University machine, known as a superconducting cyclotron, does its work with icy efficiency — its two identical electromagnets are cooled to 450 degrees below zero.

Scientists say the machine, the first of its kind, heralds a new era in nuclear physics, a field that had its heyday in the 1950s and until now had been declining in importance.

"This is the most important breakthrough in cyclotron design in 15 years," says Francesco Resmini, associate director of the Michigan State cyclotron laboratory.

Resmini, from the University of Milan, is apprenticing at Michigan State. He'll build a similar machine in Milan when he returns there.

Canada and Texas A&M University also plan to build superconducting cyclotrons. M Ihkyklo zonhis one kind of atom smasher — what physicists call a particle accelerator. The first was built in 1932, and bigger, more powerful ones followed. By the 1950s, though, increasing their power any more seemed impossible.

The Michigan State machine has broken that barrier, however, by taking advantage of the odd phenomenon of superconductivity, in which certain metals, when cooled to extremely low temperatures in a bath of liquid helium, are able to conduct electricity with no resistance. This is the first cyclotron to be built with superconductors.

The use of superconducting electromagnets in the Michigan State cyclotron reduces the machine's power requirements by 90 percent — an important consideration when money for basic research is scarce.

The frigid electromagnets also make it possible to pack a greater wallop of the nucleus, a tightly packed cluster of protons and neutrons in the center of the atom.

The Michigan State machine was turned on for the first time on the last day of August5%0 y u0yuqrs0qvter planning for its construction began. The first experiment was done Sept. 15.

Long before the machine was completed, however, construction of a second, larger superconducting cyclotron was begun right beside it.

The two will constitute the National Superconducting Cyclotron Laboratory. They are funded primarily by the National Science Foundation. The cost of the two cyclotrons and associated equipment will be about $30 million.

When the second cyclotron is completed, the first will serve as an injector, generating a beam of high-speed nuclei and channeling it into the second cyclotron where it will receive a second kick, pushing it to higher speeds.

The completed cyclotron is known as the K500 — a term indicating that the machine can pack 500 electron volts of energy into a nucleus. That's enough to get a helium nucleus (a very light nucleus) moving at about half the speed of light — roughly 90,000 miles per second. The same energy packed into a heavier nucleus, such as carbon or uranium, produces a lower speed.

The second cyclotron will be an even more powerful K800. With the combination of the two, it will be possible to accelerate nuclei of uranium, the heaviest naturally existing element, to a speed of some 60,000 miles a second — about one-third the speed of light.

At that point, the tandem cyclotrons will be on the threshold of creating quark matter, an extremely unusual form of matter that may have existed in the first few instants after the birth of the universe.

The K500 cyclotron at Michigan State rests inside a concrete vault with walls 6 feet thick to contain radiation produced during the operation of the machine. A concrete door as thick as it is high is wheeled aside on railroad tracks to allow workers inside.

About 300 kinds of nuclei exist in nature, says David Scott, another associate director of the Michigan State cyclotron lab. They are the 92 elements ranging from hydrogen to uranium, plus their isotopes — forms of the elements with different numbers of neutrons.

Some 1,600 additional nuclei not found in nature have been created in accelerators. They include the trans-uranic elements, elements heavier than uranium, which has 92 protons and 92 electrons. In September, German physicists reported the creation of the newest element yet, with 109 protons and 109 electrons. Scott expects the MSU machine to create many more.

The discovery of element 109 may not be important in itself, but the sifting of that single nucleus from vast quantities of atomic debris was an important achievement, says Scott.

"It's equivalent to being able to pick one specially marked grain of sand out of a trainload of sand," he says.

"If you could produce large quantities, they could make a compact energy source or a compact bomb," Scott says.

Scott and his colleagues are eager to climb out of the "valley of stability" to get a broader view of the physical world.

After 33 Years, Has NATO Outlived Usefulness?

By DAVID MASON
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — Has the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, the pact formed in 1949 by the United States and its Western Europe allies as a bulwark against the Communist threat, outlived its usefulness?

Quarrels between the 16 NATO partners in the economic and political fields have been common. But now, significantly, they are surfacing in the military realm, the primary purpose of the alliance when it was created 33 years ago.

Explaining these emerging differences, Sir Nicholas Henderson, until June the British ambassador in Washington, said in a recent article:

"We have moved a long way from the one-sided relationship of the immediate postwar years when Americans were giants and the Europeans pygmies."

NATO is now an umbrella for overall relations between the United States and its West European allies — and their attitude toward the Soviet Union. Economic and political strains are no longer divorced from military considerations.

Joseph Luns, secretary-general of NATO, argues that the alliance has for three decades passed its central test.

Noting that it was created for the common defense of more than 380 million people on both sides of the Atlantic, he said: "Today, that number is nearer 580 million and the organization can claim that it has successfully provided for their defense since 1949."

However, Luns, writing in the latest official NATO handbook, added, "These are turbulent times and the difficulties and concerns we now face are not likely to be removed suddenly."

The North Atlantic Treaty, signed by 12 nations originally, came into force Aug. 24, 1949, with a proclamation by President Harry S. Truman.

U.S. Secretary of State Dean Acheson was the first chairman of the NATO council.

The treaty was negotiated quickly because of uncertainties about Soviet intentions four years after World War II.

Even in 1945, not long after victory over Germany, Winston Churchill had said of the Soviets: "An iron curtain is drawn down upon their front. We do not know what is going on behind...." By 1948, the Russians had established the blockade of Berlin, cutting all land routes to the city.

The NATO treaty says an armed attack on one or more members in Europe or North America "shall be considered an attack against them all." Members also pledged to "eliminate conflict in their international economic policies."

Today NATO has these problems to grapple with:

SOVIET PIPELINE

Differences now with the Reagan administration over European contracts to supply parts for the Siberian natural gas pipeline led to a crisis this past summer and the issue is not entirely resolved.

The pipeline episode not only involved compressors and other equipment which President Reagan sought to embargo, but fundamental policies toward trading with the Communist bloc.

Reagan slapped sanctions on firms in Britain, France, Italy and West Germany for shipping pipeline parts to the Soviet Union. He wanted to punish Moscow for the martial-law crackdown in Poland and to prevent it from collecting hard currency through gas sales to Western Europe, due to start in 1984.

The West Europeans, suffering from heavy unemployment, contended that Soviet trade must continue as long as it is "mutually beneficial." Reagan was doing the same thing by selling grain to the Soviets, they said.

Reagan lifted the sanctions Nov. 16 against a vague promise by the West Europeans to reconsider trade policies.

France said it was "not a party to what may not have even been an agreement," and Britain said no commitments had been given.

The London Economist magazine called the agreement "a pipe of peace as smoky as war."

Prime Minister Poul Schlueter of Denmark said, "We certainly do not want a continuation of economic warfare between East and West."

Britain has been angered by what it considers a lack of allied cooperation in the aftermath of its Falklands war with Argentina.

While the United States and most European partners supported Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher with economic and military sanctions during the war, problems have arisen since.

Against Britain's wishes, the United States voted for an Argentine-inspired U.N. General Assembly resolution calling for fresh negotiations over sovereignty of the South Atlantic colony.

France resumed shipments of Super Etendard fighter planes and Exocet missiles to Argentina, "disappointing" London because Argentina has never formally agreed to end hostilities. Britain was "stabbed in the back," Robert Banks, a Conservative member of Parliament, complained.

Banks wanted NATO to stop such arms shipments, but NATO's Supreme Commander for Europe, U.S. Gen. Bernard W. Rogers, sidestepped the issue.

MILITARY SPENDING

Several European partners have fallen short on the agreed goal of a 3 percent real increase in military spending.

Such indications that Western Europe is less than enthusiastic about shoring up its own defenses have led to calls in the U.S. Congress to withdraw 20,000 of the 300,000 American troops in Western Europe.

Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Texas, told a mid-November meeting of NATO parliamentarians in London: "We need concrete actions to show Americans that Europeans are as concerned about European security as they are."

Apparently jarred by the prospect of U.S. troop cuts, the 180 lawmakers urged NATO members to "devote the resources necessary to achieve a significant improvement in the conventional capability of the alliance ... and to refain from unilateral troop reductions...."

NATO ITSELF

The group, meeting as the North Atlantic Assembly, debated, "Is NATO still valid?" Most said it was still a vital shield against the Soviet Union, but they deplored the lack of consultation among allied leaders and the lack of common economic policies.

Robert McCrindle, a British Conservative, asked: "Do we always think of our allies before taking decisions? The answer must be yes if we are thinking of major military decisions." But on trade and economic cooperation, "the answer must sometimes be no."

He said consultation must be improved if "we are to prevent the eventual crumbling of the treaty organization."

Wrote Sir Nicholas Henderson:

"To understand why the present storm buffets the Atlantic we must take account of certain fundamental alterations in the relative strengths of the U.S. and Europe and in public mood."

He listed the increasing economic strength of Europe, doubts about dependence on the U.S. nuclear deterrent amid a growing "peace mood" in Western Europe, and increasing agreement among Europeans themselves on international issues.

A pitcher's earned-run average is determined by multiplying the number of earned runs he has allowed by nine and then dividing by the total of innings pitched.

Performer Hopes To Be Modern-Day Houdini

BY JOE McKNIGHT
Associated Press Writer

LONDON, Ohio (AP) — When his allowance runs short, Mark Johnson picks up some change at school by picking locks.

It's a legitimate pastime. He wins every bet with fellow students that he can open school lockers, bike locks or whatever they have under lock and key.

Winning such bets helps keep him in books about escapism, his favorite topic, and about his hero, Harry Houdini, a Hungarian native who was billed as the most famous escape artist of all time.

The slender 18-year-old Johnson hopes to some day be the Houdini of modern times. Escapism, he says, is perfected mainly through practice, developing physical dexterity and logic.

Until he can earn his way with that profession, Johnson plans to learn computer programming and hopes to become a systems analyst. With that knowledge in mind, he then wants to enroll at a state university to study acting.

"That will help me get confidence and recognition," he said.

Then he hopes to earn his keep with computers until he gets his Houdini act together.

He practices escapism — some call it tricks, but he sees it as an art form — "during any free time I get, if I'm not at my homework or playing chess."

As a senior at London High School last year, he was an "A" student and took a full complement of courses, plus an independent course of study in computer science. He played percussion instruments and piano in seven school and private bands.

Johnson, the middle of three children of a Presbyterian minister, got interested in escapism after reading a couple of books about Houdini. He has since become intimately familiar with the man he calls "my i d o l ."

"His mind is always working," said his mother, Ruthanne Johnson. "I think he does escapism because of his logic. He's never gotten into anything he couldn't get out of."

Johnson continually baffles one local policeman by escaping from handcuffs. The officer even searched him once for hidden keys or lock picks.

The youth admits only to unusual dexterity and says that, while freeing himself from some restraints is painful, he never resorts to self injury, such as dislocating bone joints to achieve freedom.

Escaping from a straitjacket, he says, is physically painful.

"It takes 10 to 15 minutes and makes my arm muscles sore," he said.

No one on the local police department has figured out yet how he got out of a city jail cell after being handcuffed and locked up. He makes an early claim to some degree of professionalism by not allowing the public to watch most of his escape feats, so no one saw him shed the chains and cuffs or unlock the cell door.

He's also escaped from a canvas U.S. Mail sack after freeing himself of handcuffs and other restraints.

A couple of feats still elude him.

A local bank won't allow him to be locked in its vault so he can try to escape.

And his mother blew the whistle on one stunt. He was visiting in the Bahama Islands and wanted to be chained, sacked and dumped into the ocean to see if he could escape.

Painting Portrays City Of Peking 50 Years Ago

By LIU HEUNG SHING
Associated Press Writer

PEKING (AP) — The U.S. Marines drill in the old legation quarter. Beggars seek alms in broken rice bowls. Chinese aristocrats strut in Western clothes with blonde wives on their arms. Rickshaw boys argue with traffic cops and portraits of Chairman Mao Tse-tung are nowhere in sight.

This was Peking of 50 years ago, its riches, poverty and bygone diversity captured in minute detail by painter Wang Daguan in a 164-foot scroll.

"I wanted to give people today a glimpse of life in the 1930s in what was China's most fascinating city, Peking," the 57-year-old Wang told the Associated Press in an interview.

In the scroll of history he depicts the majestic city walls razed by the Communists, the graceful arches replaced by massive socialist architecture, the religious processions that no longer take place, and the frenetic capitalism that has been banned.

The artist peeps into the streets and courtyards of Peking's "Hutong," where ordinary families squabble and laugh, where old men lovingly tend their birds, where matriarchs rule and daughters-in-law cringe.

He peeps into the bedchamber of a concubine with bound feet as she primps and awaits her patron.

"I was so poor in those days," said Wang, the son of a coolie. "I used to wander around the streets of Peking. I saw rickshaw men drop dead in their tracks and I saw the extravagance and squanderings of high society. I wanted to capture it all, but I am not really talented."

Wang, who usually earns a living as a railroad trade union employee, is a collector not only of images but of sounds of the pre-Communist past. He has acted as a consultant to moviemakers who want to capture the sounds and costumes of the ancient city of swallows.

Aided by a remarkable memory and powers of mimicry, Wang has tape recorded the jingles, slogans and calls of more than 100 hawkers, acrobats, knife sharpeners, diamond merchants of the old days.

His most ambitious achievement, however, is the monumental scroll in 12 sections 16 inches wide. It is being financed by the state while Wang, a self-taught artist, is on extended leave from his job.

Wang was inspired to paint his scroll at the start of the 1966-76 Cultural Revolution, which called for abolishing all things old. As a Communist party union leader, he was pushed aside by Red Guards and left without a job. That gave him time to walk and remember and sketch.

He produced a draft in secret, but in those days of smashing the old, he would never have been permitted to display such useless images of the decadent past.

In 1978, however, Wang's dusty draft was discovered by the newly established Chinese Painters' Workshop, which was organized by leading artists to uncover talent. With a resurrected respect for the past, the association was delighted by Wang's vision and decided to fund it.

To jog his memory, Wang goes back to the old hutongs where a familiar threshhold, a glimpse of the Forbidden City, an old man he remembers or a willow tree can inspire him.

And he conjures up the cable cars that run no more, the lavish wedding banquets, the storytellers in teahouses, the fortune tellers and wizards, the coffinmakers trundling with their wares.

Train Rolls On In Gold Country

By JOHN J. SANKO

DURANGO, Colo. (UPI) — Old narrow gauge locomotives, their stacks still belching smoke and their shrill whistles echoing across the countryside, provide a daily reminder of the gold and silver mining days long past.

The Durango and Silverton Narrow Gauge Railroad carries thousands of passengers each year through some of Colorado's most beautiful high country, conjuring up images of hardy mountain men who once lived in the snowcapped Rockies.

"This is the only town in the USA where you can hear a steam-train whistle blow every day of the year except Christmas Eve and Christmas Day," said Jim M. Mayer, vice president and superintendent of operations for the railroad.

The railroad, sold by the Denver and Rio Grande in 1981 to wealthy Orlando, Fla., businessman Charles E. Bradshaw Jr., carried 135,000 passengers from this southern Colorado ranching town last year. This year, operating through the winter, the total is expected to reach a record 165,000.

"They call it God's country and they aren't kidding — it's out of this world," said Dorothea McCarter of Cole City, Ill., who rode in an open car during the 90-mile trip between Silverton and Durango.

Florence Allai of Joliet, Ill., said she did not even mind the coal dust on her clothes in the open car. She said she rejected an offer to go in a closed car, warmed by a coal furnace, in order to experience the trip more fully.

"It was worth it — every bit of it," she said. "We even had snow coming into the car. We enjoyed everything — the waterfall, the mountains, the canyons. Everything was great."

"It was wonderful," said Russell McCarter as he helped his wife from the open car, once used to transport livestock. "Awesome is the best way to describe this country."

The narrow gauge railroad — with some of its refurbished cars more than a century old — carries passengers through part of the 2 million acre San Juan National Forest as it runs along the Animas River. The train also carries food and other goods to guest ranches, and makes stops for backpackers, fishermen and hikers.

"For all intents and purposes, except there are more passengers now than there is freight, the train itself is no different that it was 100 years ago," Mayer said.

Some railroad workers are descendants of railroad men who were on the line in July 1882 when it opened. Through the years, the line has carried more than $300 million in gold and silver from the San Juan Mountains.

Richard Connor, 21, is an engineer on the narrow gauge. His father, George, 50, is a trainmaster; his grandfather also worked on the line and his great grandfather was an engineer on the early runs.

"I guess you could say it runs in the blood," George Connor said. "It's a job, but it's an exciting job. It's quite an experience."

Because narrow gauge railroads in general quit operating a long time ago, the Durango and Silverton has its own maintenance and construction shop. Its yard is filled with pieces of scrapped metal and ancient cars.

"They look like junk when we first get them, but we turn them into something beautiful," Mayer said. "It's important to keep them authentic. We want them to look the same as when they originally rolled down the track."

The oldest car still in use was made in 1878. A car where snacks are sold once carried mail. A taste of life in the days of the rich silver kings is available in the president's car — a sleeper which reportedly once carried President James A. Garfield.

The train reaches a top speed of 20 mph, but travels only 5 mph on narrow mountain bridges and the sharp spots over cliffs.

Hometown Finally Takes Note

By MIKE HENDRICKS
Associated Press Writer

KINDERHOOK, N.Y. (AP) — After more than a century with little more than an historical marker at his home and a wreath on his grave, the people of Kinderhook are getting around to remembering Martin Van Buren — the local boy who grew up to be president.

For years, weeds grew around the neglected granite monument on his grave. Junk accumulated in the hallways and rooms of Van Buren's mansion, mixing with the historic artifacts.

Annual wreath-laying ceremonies marking the birthday of the nation's eighth president attracted few people to the cemetery outside town.

"It seemed as if Martin Van Buren was just a forgotten man," says Kinderhook Town Supervisor John Scheriff, who spent a quarter-century working with others to have Van Buren recognized in his hometown.

After all those years and years of neglect, Van Buren is being remembered; in Kinderhook, at least.

The townspeople have been celebrating the memory of Van Buren for the last several months with extravagant costume balls, colorful parades through town and hundreds of thousands of dollars spent salvaging Van Buren's old home, Lindenwald.

The revival culminates with the bicentennial of his birth, Dec. 5.

For most of the 120 years since his death, the people of Kinderhook had basically forgotten that a president once walked their streets.

His birthplace, his parent's tavern, was torn down in the 1920s.

Even Congress was apathetic toward the man who was America's first native born president, served as Andrew Jackson's vice president, and was secretary of state and minister to England, as well as U.S. senator and New York governor. Smvezalhpieces of legislation aimed at restoring the Lindenwald mansion were rejected.

Although considered one of the first masters of American politics, Van Buren is generally remembered for presiding over the nation's first great economic depression.

"People native to this area are either pro or con about Van Buren," Mrs. Piwonka says.

Child's Murder May Help Save Other Children

By PAUL ROLLY

SUNSET, Utah (UPI) — When 3-year-old Rachael Runyan was kidnaped Aug. 26 and later found murdered the public outcry led to nation-wide action to combat such terrible crimes.

A federal law has been passed giving parents of missing children access to a nationwide clearinghouse administered by the FBI, with the information sent to local law enforcement agencies throughout the country.

More than 30,000 children in Utah have been fingerprinted. Their blood types are on file and their parents have identification packets in case a child disappears.

A group of "concerned mothers" has been established to lobby the Utah Legislature for tougher child kidnapping laws.

Thousands of people took part in a desperate three-week search for blonde, blue-eyed Rachael, which ended when her body, with hands tied behind her back, was found in a remote creek bed.

The nightmare began when Elaine Runyan sent her three small children out to play. Not long afterwards, Justin, her 5-year-old son, ran home shouting "A man has taken Rachael away in a car."

"Rachael didn't die for nothing," Mrs. Runyan said at her daughter's September funeral in their small home town of Sunset. "Something positive has to come out of this to help other people."

During the three-week searching, the community of Sunset — population 6,000 — and many others who heard about the kidnapping became determined to do get the little girl back.

"When we decided to do something to get Rachael back, I knew we'd get a response. But I never dreamed it would be of such magnitude," said Glenn Thomas, chairman of the "Rachael Runyan Committee."

The committee of Sunset citizens got flyers printed with Rachael's picture and a composite drawing of the man suspected of kidnapping her.

The Runyans' Mormonh Bishop, Bob Stebel, offered the Mormon stake center in the neighborhood as headquarters for the work and the word spread.

As many as 75 people at a time were stapling and stuffing envelopes.

"Many non-Mormons came to the stake center to help," said the mayor. "They worked shoulder to shoulder with their Mormon neighbors for a common cause."

One local business donated $8,000 for mailing costs. Another business donated $10,000, some of which was used to send Jeff and Elaine Runyan to New York to tell their story to the national media.

After Elaine pleaded with a national audience watching the Today Show to "make sure if you adopt a child within the next year, that it isn't my little girl," the mail came pouring in from all over the country.

A $40,000 reward was offered for Rachael's safe return. The city of Sunset committed $20,000 and the Runyan family committed $20,000.

"Truck drivers began calling us," said Thomas. "They picked up flyers and passed them out to truck stops everywhere they wunt."

Salesmen and vacationing Utahns took flyers with them. One poster was found tacked to a hut on the Hawaiian island of Maui.

Throughout the search, Jeff, 25, and Elaine Runyan, 24, granted interviews and brought donuts to police officers working on the hundreds of leads they were getting from phone calls and letters each week.

"Those kids were incredible," said Sant. "They remained strong, and they were willing to do anything they could to get their daughter back."

Once, during the ordeal, Runyan admitted the strong public image he and his wife maintained was not the true picture.

"You're just seeing the tip of the iceberg," he said. "We've cried a river of tears."

Rachael's badly decomposed body finally was discovered Sept. 19 in a shallow creek bed in the mountains of northern Utah. Identification was hampered by the lack of dental records or clear fingerprints. Her killer has not yet been found.

The tragic story could have ended with Rachael's funeral, attended by about 400 people, but it didn't.

PTA chapters across the state dusted off child protection programs that had fallen into disuse.

About 2,000 mothers around the state stood on street corners, making sure kids got to school safely. Families put posters in their windows to let kids know if they are in trouble, they can run to that house.

Practically every law enforcement agency in Utah instituted new educational programs in the schools to make kids wary of strangers.

"We've detained some innocent people because they looked suspicious around some kids. And sometimes they've been parents," said Salt Lake County Sheriff Pete Hayward.

"And in every case they didn't mind. In fact, they were glad," he said. "And so was I. I'd rather respond to 1,000 false cases than let one go by that turned out to be a real one."

Terry Knowles, special agent in charge of the FBI in Utah, spoke at an elementary school near Salt Lake City about kidnapping. He was doing it as a favor for a 12-year-old boy who needed to organize a community meeting for his Eagle Scout award.

"I had 50 information sheets printed," said Knowles. "And I figured that would be too many. I know it takes a heck of a lot to get me to go to a school on my night off." But at meeting he got 500 requests for the sheets.

"That blew my mind," said Knowles. "And the people wanted to stay and ask questions. The intensity of that meeting never died down."

Rachael's tragedy also played a positive role in Congress.

On Sept. 30, Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, gave an impassioned plea before a joint conference committee trying to break a stalemate keeping the Child Protection Act from becoming law. An amendment he supported was passed, the bill whizzed through both houses, and President Reagan signed it into law.

The Utah fingerprinting of children — to ensure that no missing child went undentified — had its own drama.

First in line was a handsome 5-year-old boy. His mother was by his side as a volunteer pressed his finger on the ink pad.

When he was through, Justin Runyan, witness to one of the most infamous crimes in Utah history, turned with his mother and went home.

Pacino Plays The Title Role

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Al Pacino will make one of his rare appearances in a Hollywood-made movie when he stars in the title role of "Scarface" at Universal Studios.

Brian De Palma will direct the New York-based actor in the melodrama, which will be filmed at the studio and on locations in Santa Barbara, Calif., New York City and Miami.

Pacino will play the role that brought international recognition to Edward G. Robinson in the 1930s.

Proposals For Needy People May Not Save All Roads And Bridges

By RICK HAMPSON
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The public works proposals floating around Washington might get some potholes filled and some bridges painted, but experts say none seem likely to provide enough money or skills to rebuild the nation's cracking foundation.

Although politicians are intrigued by the idea of hiring the unemployed to preserve and protect the nation's bridges, roads and tunnels, critics warn that quick, easy tasks to occupy needy people might not save needy structures.

With Congress set to reconvene Monday, there are "a lot of ideas, but very few details," said Margaret Downs of the Northeast-Midwest Institute, which does research for members of Congress from 18 states.

Most Democratic proposals try to direct money to areas where unemployment is highest, while Republicans seem more intent on targeting the most pressing repairs.

Roger Vaughan of the Council of State Planning Agencies, a Washington research group serving state governors, warns against "a fatal confusion of two separate problems — creating jobs and repairing infrastructure. ... We've got to get past the pork barrel."

Programs that create jobs quickly are at odds with the fundamental need for major capital works projects that require time to design, plan and prepare. "These proposals do nothing to solve the problem," Vaughan said. "You do not fill potholes with untrained and unskilled people."

And filling potholes cannot save a deteriorated roadbed, nor painting redeem a bridge already weakened by rust, he added.

Agreeing with Vaughan on the importance of a permanent policy was Pat Choate, who co-authored a study of infrastructure, "America in Ruins," published by the Council of State Planning Agencies. "There is a danger that this little flurry will obstruct the view that we need a long-term federal capital budget strategy," Choate said.

But he parted company with Vaughan over the value of applying a jobs plan to the deteriorating infrastructure.

A jobs bill "can do a lot for the infrastructure," he said, if it took the form of federal "public works revenue sharing."

Choate pointed out that many of the unemployed are skilled or semi-skilled construction workers. At any rate, he said, "You don't need a Ph.D. from Cal Tech to paint a bridge."

Although he agreed that a jobs program should not be a palliative, Choate maintained it would meet a real need. "States and localities have stopped much of their work altogther" and have projects "backed up in the pipeline. .. . We're not talking about boondoggle jobs," he said.

Whatever a jobs bill's impact on unemployment, it is clear the cost of rebuilding America — estimated as high as $3 trillion — far outstrips even the more ambitious proposals, which would add less than $10 billion a year to current infrastructure spending.

"The only solution to infrastructure is to spend more, probably twice what we're spending now," Vaughan said. "There's no gimmick, no shortcut." He estimated such spending in 1981 at $70 billion and suggests an additional $70 billion was needed.

Former White House adviser Amitai Etzioni, who spent two years researching the development of America's infrastructure, says it would take $300 billion a year for 10 years to repair the national lifelines. A $7 billion public works program would reach only "one of 43 things that need to be fixed," he said.

Officials say it is imperative that any new jobs program avoids the errors of the Local Public Works Program, passed in 1976.

Studies of that program's impact indicate that some states and localities stopped spending their own money and waited for federal dollars. "There was no net increase in spending on public works," Vaughan said.

We Roll Out The Red Carpet

The great thing about Farmville, N.C. is we don't know any strangers. Everyone is always welcome. It just comes natural to say "Howdy" when you see a new face on Main Street.

It's a feeling of pride that stems from knowing we live in one of the greatest little cities in the world. Sure we're proud of our agricultural base, our quality industrial citizens, our school system, and an arts council that's recognized as one of the best in the state. But the thing that really makes Farmville great is its people. Friendly, down home people who still know how to pitch-in and help their neighbors. People who really mean it when they say, "How ya doin'?" When you come to Farmville, we do more than just say, "Welcome," we roll out the red carpet...just for you.

Here's the Answer

Q. — We have an asphalt shingle roof. In several places, there is a discoloration on the shingles that puzzles us. It is a kind of brown to black color and seems to be some kind of fungus growth. Can you tell us what it is and how we can get rid of it?

A. — It is probably a discoloration caused by algae and can occur on almost any kind of roof. It usually takes place where there are warm, humid conditions. However, the algae do not feed on the roofing material, so they do not affect the life expectancy of the roof. While the growth is difficult to remove from roofing surfaces, it may be cleaned with a diluted chlorine bleach solution. Since this solution can be hazardous when carried onto a roof, it has to be handled with extreme care. If you decide to ignore the algae growth, it will do little else to your roof except to darken it somewhat. For those who live in areas of the country where warm, humid conditions encourage the growth of algae and who contemplate reroofing, consider the use of algae-resistant asphalt shingles now available.

Q. — The chain link fence that encloses our front yard has begun to rust in spots and is in need of a painting. Is there anything special I should know about repairing it?

A. — Yes. You should brush it with a stiff wire brush, especially where there are signs of rust or peeling. If you are in an area where the fence has been subjected to salt spray or chemical fumes, hose it down with fresh water and let it dry thoroughly. The rusted places should be covered with what is called a rusty metal primer. Wait at least 24 hours, then cover with a rust-inhibiting paint, which now comes in colors. Before you start work on the fence, cut down all weeds and long grass that might interfere with the surface preparation and painting.

Q. I had several small azaleas killed by the cold last winter. How can I protect them this year? (M.H., Hudson)

A. Mulch provides an ideal insulation for landscape plants. Four to six inches of most organic materials will aid in winter protection. Before adding this layer of mulch, fertilize with a 0-20-20 fertilizer. The phosphorous encourages root growth while the potash helps in lowering the freezing point of plant tissue. Use 0-20-20 at the rate of one pound per 100 square feet of plant bed area. Broadcast evenly around the plants and try not to concentrate the fertilizer in a ring or handfuls under the foliage, as this could result in root damage. Water thoroughly after this treatment. This will especially help azaleas and lower the amount of leaf drop. Do not apply quickly available nitrogen in the late summer and fall because it encourages tender vegetative growth. Remember to water shrubs during dry periods and periods when water is frozen in the ground, because plants are still taking up water in the summer. Most shrubs killed in the winter die from lack of water rather than from actual cold temperatures.

Q. My dwarf yaupon holly has never had any berries. Does it have to be a certain age before it will fruit? (T.R., Rocky Mount)

A. Dwarf yaupon holly is sterile and will never have any berries.

Q. Can you give me some information on growing mushrooms at home? (H.A., Boone)

A. The cost for the material and labor for mushrooms produced at home may be slightly greater than the cost of mushrooms purchased at the local store. However, mushroom culture at home can be a fascinating winter hobby with a reward of fresh mushrooms for family and friends. Most gardemers will find it difficult to prepare a suitable mushroom compost from a small heap of manure. Without the facilities of the commercial grower for pasteurizing, the compost prepared by an amateur will frequently be unsuited for mushroom culture because of the presence of harmful fungi, nematodes and insect pests.

In recent years a few nurserymen and seedmen have been offering trays containing mushroom compost especially prepared for home use. The trays are prepared for the nurserymen and seedmen by commercial mushroom growers who are equipped to compost manure economically, pasteurize the compost effectively and grow spawn — the propagating material used by all growers for planting the beds. Full directions for growing mushrooms are furnished along with the trays. If the directions are carefully followed and if the trays are placed in a cool, damp location, moderate yields can be expected, usually between one-half pound and one pound per square foot of tray space.

Q. This summer I picked what I thought were blackberries along the edge of our woods. Now someone tells me they are dewberries. What's the difference? (L.J., China Grove)

A. Dewberry is the name given to species of blackberries that have a trailing or prostrate habit. Dewberries should not be confused with the long, lopping or arching canes of wild blackberry species. There is also a short, shrubby blackberry with sweeter fruit than those of arching blackberry species that is called dewberry in some areas.

PLAN YOUR HOME — The Fallingbush

Bachelor's Apartment Asset To Plan

By Jerry Bishop

Self-contained and ready for family living, the main level of this split entry home is augmented by a well-designed bachelor's apartment on the lower level.

The Fallingbush, a three bedroom plan, also features a lavish master bedroom with adjoining terrace, a large eat-in kitchen, and a lower level family room with half bath.

Shake shingles and brick layer the exterior of this attractive home. Inside, the design is geared to dual functions as family home and separate apartment.

Double doors open to the split entry, and, up a few steps, a gracious foyer preludes the main level. Besides its role in channeling traffic, the foyer also provides an area for shedding and hanging coats and allows direct access to living room at left and terrace at right.

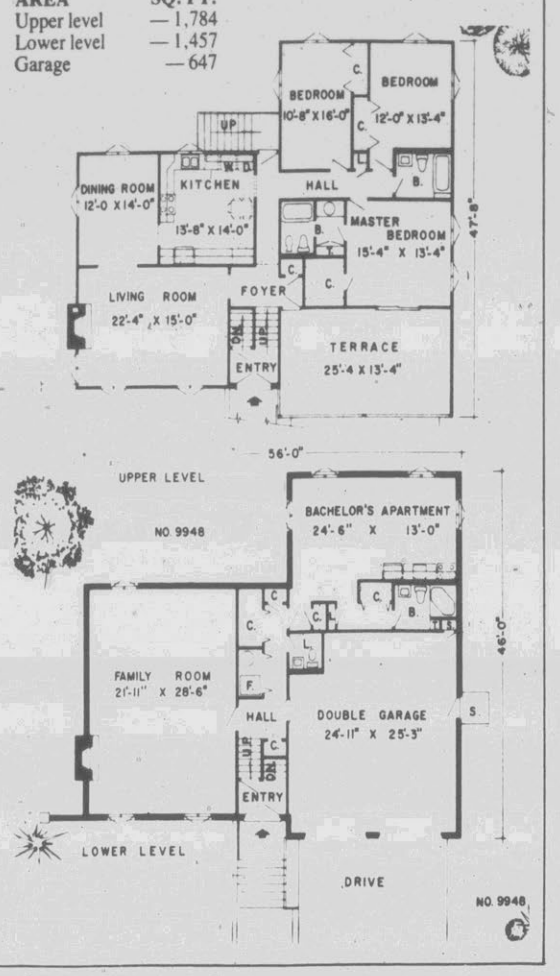

The living room extends 22 feet to include a cozy wood-burning fireplace and joins a formal dining room at rear. Bordering the two rooms is a kitchen, large, functional, and well-supplied with laundry and dining space.

A hallway serves to separate activity areas from the sleeping wing, where three sizable bedrooms are grouped around two full baths. Indulged with walk-in closet and compartmented bath, the master bedroom enjoys sliding glass doors to the 25-ft terrace, roofed for use even during light summer rains.

Downstairs, a huge family room is warmed by a fireplace, and closet space and half bath are nearby.

The bachelor's apartment, a spacious studio arrangement, calls for full bath, cooking facilities, and closets. A double garage is provided.

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

A careless painter, amateur or professional, is often responsible for a stuck window.

The most common cause of a window that refuses to budge is dried paint which got there because the last person who painted the windows allowed some of the paint to get into the channels one way or another.

If you want to damage the window, grab yourself a screwdriver and force it between the sash and the moulding. You may or may not unloosen the window, but you are almost certain to leave conspicuous marks. That's because the tip of the blade is a bit too thick for the purpose. You can get the desired result — breaking the paint film — by inserting the blade of a putty knife between the sash and moulding and jiggling it slightly or, if necessary, tapping it lightly with a hammer. Usually, you have to do this on all four sides of the window, although sometimes the unsticking will take place after one or two sides are treated.

When the hardened paint cannot be reached from the inside, since it got outside via a careless exterior painter, you will have to tackle the problem from outdoors. In that case, the putty knife or any tool with an edge thinner than a screwdriver blade should again be used. It should be inserted first between the bottom of the sash and the top of the sill and then, if that doesn't work, wherever necessary.

Incidentally, even better than a putty knife in the preceding operations is a small, serrated type of tool made especially for the purpose. It is available in well-stocked stores that sell hardware products.

There are, of course, other causes for stuck windows besides hardened paint. One of these is warping caused by high humidity or water. The general cure for this problem is to get or make a block of wood that will fit snugly into the sash grooves and, tapping it lightly with a hammer, run it along the groove. It will expand the frame and usually enable the window to slide properly. If it doesn't, use the same block of wood and place it against the vertical parts of the sash. Tap it with a hammer as you move it up and down. In any action of this kind, where tapping with a hammer is part of the method, work with deliberate care so that you do not crack the pane.

If everything fails, you will have to use the last-resort step, which is to remove the sash from the frame. This can be a bit tricky, so do not attempt it unless you are fairly handy and reasonably certain you can do it.

Matched Rooms Of Furniture Are On The Way Out

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

The furniture "suite" may not be dead, but it definitely is in its dotage.

At the recently concluded national furniture market in North Carolina, it was evident a large portion of the industry is coming to accept that it cannot insist that Americans buy their furniture by the matched roomful.

Instead, the industry has admitted that many people buy furniture piece by piece and that each addition to the home is viewed as an occasion of importance for the purchaser.

In recognition of this fact, a number of furniture producers cut back on introductions of complete matched groupings of new bedroom and dining-room furniture and, instead, concentrated on offering new individual pieces.

According to a trade publication, the movement by consumers away from suite purchases also affected the way retailers bought at the market. The retailers praised new introductions with individual personality pieces suitable for single purchases.

Stores are likely to continue to show furniture by the suite in full room settings, the publication added. But they will also offer encouragement and decorating guidance to those who prefer to buy only one or two pieces instead of the whole room, according to the publication, "Retailing Home Furnishings."

Since consumers — especially at the upper end of the purchasing scale — have been buying single, unmatched furniture items for years, the industry's acceptance of furniture by the piece instead of by the pound has been a long time coming.

Poor retail sales in recent years have helped produce many attitude changes in the industry. In this case, change is all to the good, according to Kevin O'Connor, vice president of the Manor House division of Singer Furniture, since it puts the industry more in tune with its market.

O'Connor summarized as a dominant consumer attitude today a desire for furniture that is of good quality and long-lasting instead of faddish, and is made of wood, not synthetic materials.

The desire for stylish, high-quality furniture has also been noticed by decorating magazine editors. Dorothy Kalins, editor of Metropolitan Home magazine, and Peggy Kennedy, executive editor of House Beautiful, both noted that today their readers are more affluent, better educated and more interested in their home than ever before.

As a result, Ms. Kalins sees an increasing demand for what she calls virtuoso pieces — furniture which reflects the personality and tastes of the buyer. Money is not the issue. A Metropolitan Home reader is more likely to spend $4,000 for a single piece of high-quality furniture and then pair it with something inexpensive picked up at a yard sale than to buy a totally matched suite of furniture for $3,000, she said.

Ms. Kennedy says her readers prefer to put together their own furniture combinations, rather than accept ready-made suites.

As if on cue, a number of manufacturers at the market reported that their best-selling items are single pieces that combine decorative pizzazz with multiple function and usability in a number of rooms.

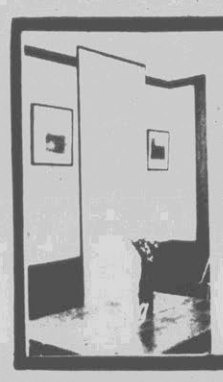

One example of the sort of furniture with special appeal nowadays is the rolltop desk. Several noted exceptionally good sales for costly models of rolltop desks. One version, for example, sells for $3,900. Its manufacturer attributes its success to its novelty, high-quality features and usability as both work surface and storage for family records and paper supplies.

Another popular single furniture item is the armoire which offers options to be used as wardrobe storage in a bedroom, a bar or a storage unit for electronic components in the living room, dining room or family room.

Expensive canopy beds — some of them featuring elaborate carving — are also selling well. "People often buy just the bed which they pair with pieces already in their possession," noted Don McCreary of National Mount Airy Furniture.

"People are definitely buying by item rather than a collection of furniture in the same style for a room," summarized Sherwood Robertson of American Drew Co.

In the next five years, Robertson expects to see an even more dramatic shift in consumer buying habits.

Suggestions For N.C. Winter Travels

RALEIGH — The North Carolina Department of Natural Resources and Community Development has provided some suggestions for winter travel statewide.

North Carolina offers a wealth of outdoor adventure to travelers in winter, from the coastal woods of Pamlico River to the historic sights of Buncombe County in the west.

.A few suggestions incude a visit to one of North Carolina's coastal parks, where migratory birds and waterfowl abound. Merchants Millpond State Park in Gates County rents canoes to visitors who wish the view the whistling swans and many types of duck in the area.

Goose Creek Park in Beaufort County has a number of boardwalks and an observation deck which provides visitors a panoramic view of the Pamlico River and of migratory waterfowl.

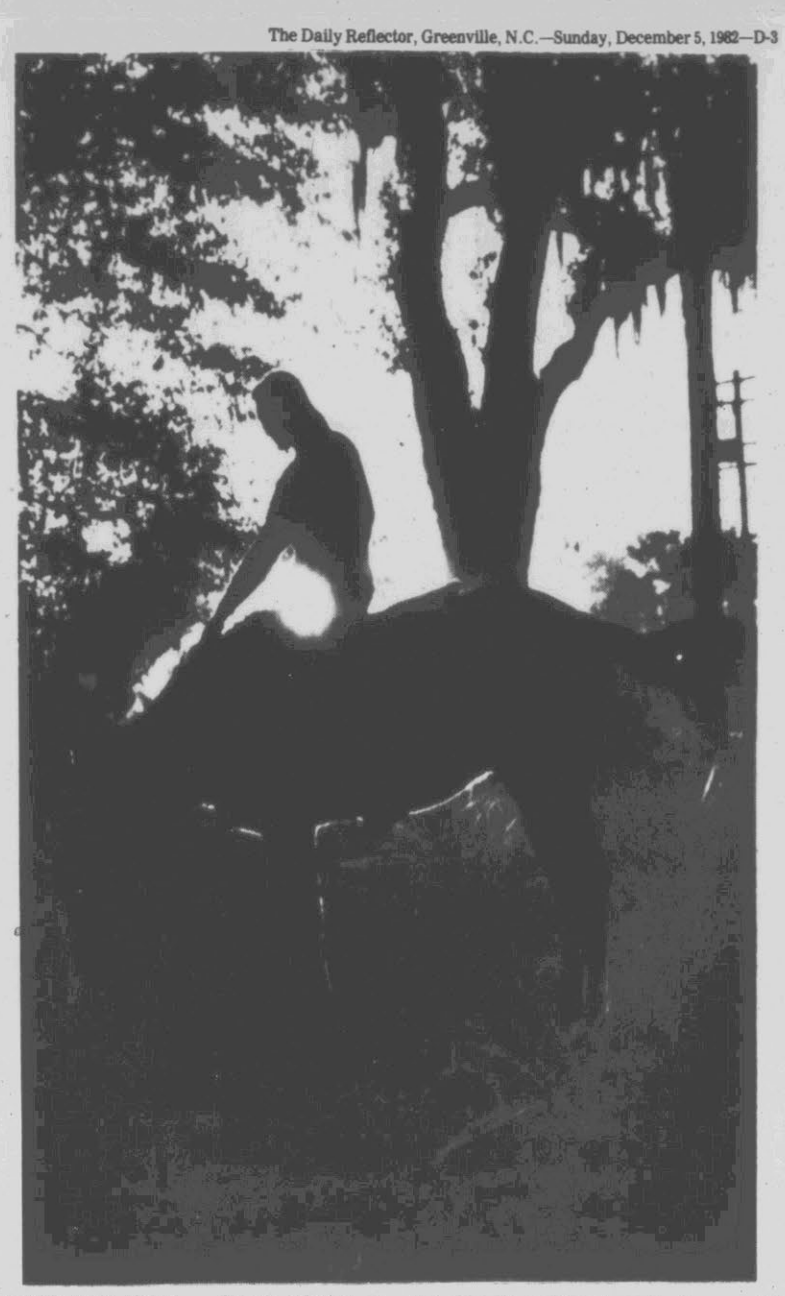

North Carolina's parks are open year round with limited facilities during the winter months. The bare woods make spotting animals and birds easy. Family campsites are rented at a reduced rate of $3.50 per night, and with fewer people in the park areas, chances are better for getting a prime site.

In Piedmont North Carolina, visitors can enjoy December sights, sounds, and smells recreated in the restored Moravian town of Old Salem. Visitors can walk through the historic area in an unhurried manner in a place much like it was 200 years ago.

A capital city attraction is the annual tour of Historic Oakwood in Raleigh which takes place Dec. 11 and 12.

A HURRY UP JOB — With final semester exams and completion deadlines approaching, East Carolina University sophomore art student Tina Benson of Raleigh spreads her work across the floor of the corridor in a campus residence hall. Book News

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By Meredith Foltz

Two new books at Sheppard Memorial Library take on the risky but fascinating task of predicting the future.

"Megatrends" by John Naisbitt forecasts the probable course of the United States in the 1980s. Naisbitt tries to help the reader see the broad outlines of change which are often missed or ignored as the news media leads us from event to event and crisis to crises.

The first of the ten trends the author foresees is already in progress: a shift from an industrial to an informational society. Americans are also moving toward high technology tempered by human needs; a global economy; longer-term planning; a more grassroots, participatory democracy; self-reliance; informal networking, especially in business; population shifts to the South and West; and more options for personal lifestyles.

Naisbitt has analyzed aspects of present society — from the hospice movement to Reaganomics — to uncover the philosophies which will direct the development of our country's future. The reader ambitious for personal, business or political success or simply curious about the outlook for the rest of this decade will find this an important book.

"The Global 2000 Report to the President: Entering the Twenty-First Century" was commissioned by President Carter in 1977 and completed in 1980. The Council on Environmental Quality and the Department of State prepared the report.

The bulk of the Global 2000 book is a technical report consisting of projections regarding population, gross national product, climate, technology, food and agriculture, fisheries, forestry, water, energy, fuel minerals, non-fuel minerals and environment throughout the world in the year 2000.

These projections are based on the assumptions that current national policies will continue. If so, the year 2000 will see a strain on the earth's capacity to support its population. The authors of "The Global 2000 Report" assert that improving the chances for a decent life in the future will require the coordination and continuous review of governmental policies and practices. To date, however, the Reagan administration has apparently disregarded the findings and conclusions of this unique and massive study.

Please call Sheppard Library at 752-4177 if you are interested in either of these books. If the book you want is in the library when you call, it can be held for you. If the book you want is checked out when you phone, you can be notified when it is available.

Works By Local Artists In New SECCA Shows

WINSTON-SALEM — Works by two Greenville sculptors, Bob Edmiston and Norman Keller, are being shown in a December-January exhibition at the Southeastern Center for Contemporary Art in Winston-Salem.

On Saturday, Edmiston will have a one-man exhibition of mixed media sculpture in the Open Air Gallery and the SCulpture Court. Edmiston's show will remain on view through Jan. 23.

In SECCA's Sculpture Garden, Keller currently has a solo show of mixed media sculpture, which will be on view through Jan. 9.

Both artists are faculty members of the school of art, East Carolina University.

SECCA is located at 750 Marguerite Drive, it is open to the public, and no admission is charged. SECCA hours are 10 to 5 Tuesdays through Saturdays, and from 2 to 5 on Sundays. The center will be closed Dec. 24-26 for the Christmas holidays.

A Review

Beautifying With Native Materials

Landscaping With Native Plants. By Cordelia Penn. Drawings by Dorothy S. Wilbur. Winston-Salem, John F. Blair, Publishers. Paper, oblong format. 226 pages, $14.95.

"Landscaping With Native Plants" is primarily intended for those who have a green thumb or would like to have one. Written in a manner that inspires observation of the splendid and diversified aspects of nature, the author at the same time reveals the practical and artistically pleasing methods of landscaping with native plants of all sizes, flowering and non-flowering.

Needed to know subjects like preparing the land and designing landscaping plans that are true to the land's natural environment are outlined, while modern methods of professional landscaping are also taken into consideration.

Ms. Penn shares with the amateur the joy of becoming acquainted with flowers and plants indigenous to their surroundings. (The book focuses on Piedmont and Western North Carolina — however, except for a few localized plants, most of the plants covered in this volume are found extensively in their wild state in the eastern and coastal plain areas of the state). She simplifies identification by providing a checklist of of those that are adaptable to various soils and climates.

In the chapter on the care and maintenance of plants, Ms. Penn offers, among many other guidelines, tips on methods of pruning, correcting leaf mold, mulching, fertilizers and top dressings.

Colorful photographs of various plants, along with the excellent illustrations by Dorothy S. Wilbur, enhance the beauty of the book.

Inclusion of typical plot plans, information on how and when to get plants also add immeasurably to the value of the book.

The author, a landscape consultant in Greensboro, reflects her obvious love for flowers and plants in the poem by William Blake she quotes in the book.

"To see a world in a grain of sand
And heaven in a wildflower
Hold infinity in the palm of your hand
And enternity in an hour."

Readers interested in ways of acquiring and using local plants for an attractively landscaped home and yard are encouraged to consider this book.

Craft Show Reception On Tuesday

The annual Greenville Museum of Art (GMA) Invitational Crafts Exhibit will be on display Tuesday through Dec. 22 in the museum's South Galleries.

An opening reception for the artists will be held from 7 to 9 p.m. Tuesday, with the public invited to attend.

The emphasis this year has been placed on exhibiting contemporary crafts which represent quality art/craft works by Pitt-Greenville artists/craftspeople.

Fifteen artists have been invited to exhibit - representing three categories of artists — community, ECU faculty, and ECU graduate students.

Community artists invited to show are Charlotte Purrington, Ann Riggs, John Guyette, Gail Ritzer and Ann Cable.

ECU faculty artists represented are Chuck Chamberlain, John Satterfield, Sara Edmiston, Terry Smith and Roxanne Reep.

Represented from the ECU School of Art graduate division are Linda Darty, Paul Hamilton, Anna Daughtry, Betsy Markowski, and Arlene Morgan.

The exhibit will include works in ceramics, jewelry, metal, wood and fiber.

A small illustrated catalogue has been published in conjunction with the show.

Tryon Palace Sets Christmas Schedule

NEW BERN — Authentic 18th century decorations will be used in Tryon Palace for the 1982 Christmas season. This year marks the fourth holiday celebration at the palace and five nearby houses.

Other buildings in the palace complex to be decorated, in addition to Tryon Palace, are the Stevenson House, the Jones House and the Daves House — all to be decorated in the early 19th century style. The John Wright Stanly House will feature decorations appropriate to its wealthy late 18th century owner; and the first floor of the 1850 Commission House is to be decorated for a Victorian type Christmas.

It is at the Commission House that visitors will be treated to ginger cookies and cider.

A special daylight Christmas tour ticket covers admission to decorated rooms in the palace and houses plus refreshments. These tickets are priced at $4 for adults and $1 for students grades 1-12.

Daylight Christmas tours begin Dec. 11 and continue daily through Dec. 23. Hours are 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. except on Sundays, when hours are 1:30 to 4 p.m.

Candlelight tours are being offered four evenings — Dec. 11, 12, 14 nd 16 from 5 to 8 p.m. at the same prices of the daylight hour tours.

For more information or for group reservations, call 638-5109, or write to: Tryon Palace, Box 1007, New Bern, N.C., 28560.

Winter Closure

WINNABOW — Due to the lack of visitors during the winter months, the gardens at Orton Plantation at Winnabow, between Wilmington and Southport, will be closed during December, January and February.

The gardens will reopen on March 1 when camellias, pansies and many early spring flowering plants and shrubs will be in blossom.

Wins N.C. Poetry Award

RALEIGH — Archie R. Ammons, native of Whiteville now living and working in New Jersey, is the recipient of North Carolina's Zoe Kincaid Brockman Memorial Award for his 16th volume of poems, "A Coast of Trees."

A graduate of Wake Forest University, Ammons was principal of Hatteras Elementary School on the Outer Banks and later was vice-president of Friederich and Dimmock, Inc., a biological glass firm in New Jersey, before joining the faculty of Cornell University in 1964. He is currently Godwin Smith Professor of Poetry at Cornell.

Ammons is the recipient of several impressive honors, including a National Book Award for "Collected Poems," 1973; the Bollingen Prize for his book-length "Sphere: The Forms of a Motion," 1975; an award from the American Academy of Arts and Letters, a MacArthur Prize Fellow Award, and the National Book Critics Circle Award for "A Coast of Trees."

Fayetteville Pottery Show

FAYETTEVILLE — Twelve Cumberland County artists currently have a show of their work at the Arsenal House Gallery, 822 Arsenal Avenue in Fayetteville. The exhibit is sponsored by the Arts Council of Fayetteville/Cumberland County.

Festival Schedule

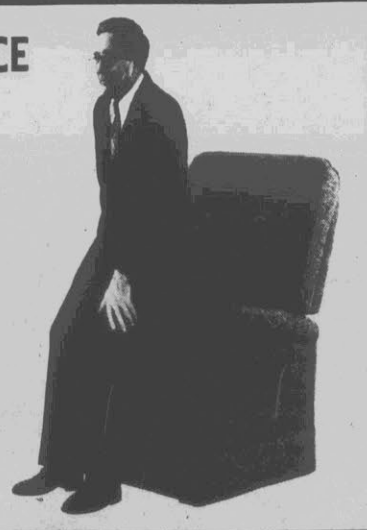

BUFFALO, N.Y. — Complete schedules for the I Love New York Winter Festival in western New York state, which opened Nov. 27 and ends April 3, 1983, can be obtained by writing to: Winter Festival, Box 651, Buffalo, N.Y., 14240.

Pre-Christmas Musical Stars Former TV Star Clifton Davis

A pre-Christmas musical show featuring black entertainers will take place beginning at 7 p.m. Monday in Wright Auditorium on the East Carolina University campus. The show will star former television star Clifton Davis and will also feature The East Carolina University Gospel Choir and The Voices of Israel of Rocky Mount. Andre Willis of Wilson is the producer of the show.

Also making a special guest appearance on the show will the The Muffets, three zany people puppets from Los Angeles who will bring entertainment to please the children in the audience.

Tickets are priced at $2 per person, and can be purchased at the door prior to performance time. Tickets can also be purchased from 9 to 3 Monday at the Central Ticket Office on campus.

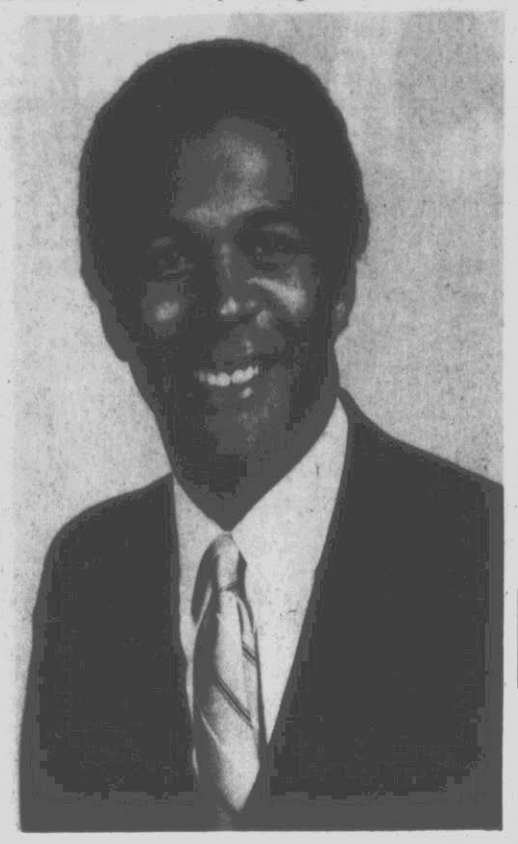

Davis, now pursing a degree in theology at Oakwood College in Huntsville, Alabama, is working towards a career in the ministry.

Before leaving the entertainment world to pursue ministry studies, Davis was an actor in the ABC television series, "That's My Mama." His television credits also include roles in films such as "Little Ladies of the Night," co-starring with David Soul and Louis Gossett; "Scott Joplin," with Billy Dee Williams and Art Carney;" "Super-Dome," "The Night the City Screamed," and "Don't Look Back, the Story of Satchel Paige," among others.

As a stage actor, for his performance in the Broadway production of "Two Gentlemen of Verona," Davis was nominated for a Tony award as best actor in a musical. He has additionally appeared in Off-Broadway productions of "Hello Dolly" with Pearl Bailey; "Jimmy Shine," with Dustin Hoffman, "The Engagement Baby," with Barry Nelson;" and in the Pulitzer Prize-winning play, "No Place to Be Somebody."

Another facet of Davis' career has been as a song writer. He has composed well known songs such as "Looking Through the Windows," and "Never Can Say Goodbye," which was nominated for a Grammy Award.

For several years, Davis has been active in civic work, donating many hours of time and effort to the American Heart Association, the United Negro College Fund, The March of Dimes, and other charity groups.

CLIFTON DAVIS . . . former star of televison and Broadway, will star in the second annual Pre-Christmas show featuring black entertainers. The show opens at 7 p.m. Monday in Wright Auditorium on the ECU campus. Also being featured are The ECU Gospel Choir and The Voices of Israel from Rocky Mount. Tickets are priced at $2.

Children's Party On Saturday

Three dancers — Donna Whitley, specialist in Arabian folk dancing; Elizabeth Pope, a ballerina from New Bern, and Tom Bell, dance student at East Carolina University — are being featured in the third annual Children's Christmas Event being held in Gray Gallery on the ECU campus from 2 to 4 p.m. today. The three will dance numbers with special appeal to children.

The yearly celebration is a joint cooperative venture of the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council, ECU Gray Gallery and the Pitt County schools, and is designed especially for children in the 5- to 10-year-old age group. It is free, and sponsors encourage parents to bring young children to join in the threefold program of dance, music and crafts.

Musical entertainment will be provided by Chris Deane, North Carolina Arts Council visiting artist at Pitt Community College. Deane will play Christmas music on percussion instruments.

In the craft segment, children will be furnished material to make ornaments for pine Christmas trees, and will also join in decorating the trees. After the party, the trees will be donated to area organizations.

The Children's Christmas party is designed to introduce children to the magic of Christmas through the arts.

FEATURED DANCER . . . Tom Bell, a dance student at East Carolina University, is one of three dancers — along with Elizabeth Pope and Donna Whitley, to perform at Gray Gallery on campus today in the annual Children's Christmas event. The program is from 2 to 4 this afternoon, and is designed for children ages 5-10. (Reflector Photo by Jerry Raynor)

Super Sleuth Almanac Guest

WASHINGTON — On Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, Jay J. Armes will be interviewed by Dick Jones, host of Almanac, WITN-TV's news and public service program.

Armes, a native of El Paso, Texas, has been labeled a "Super Sleuth" by Newsweek Magazine. A private investigator, Armes will talk about how he solved the kidnapping of Marlon Brando's son and about his rise to the top of his profession despite the loss of both hands in a childhood accident.

He has appeared on the Tonight Show, the Merv Griffin Show and the Mike Douglas Show, and is considered one of the top men in his field.

Almanac is hosted by Dick Jones and Jim Mallory and is seen Monday through Friday mornings at 6 a.m. on TV-7.

Sir Francis Drake set sail in 1577 on his voyage around the world. The British navigator commanded marauding expeditions against Spanish treasure ships and continued onward through the Straits of Magellan.

WOOW Classics

An early celebration of the Christmas season in music, spanning three centuries of jubilation, is the program hostess Karen Hause will give listeners of the Sunday evening WOOW Classics program tonight. From 8 p.m. until midnight, Mrs. Hause will play records of favorites as well as seldom-heard Christmas music over WOOW radio, 1340 on the dail. The program can also be heard on Channel 9 cable television. Selections are:

•Gabrielli's "Jubilate Deo" and "Magnificat," the Roger Wagner Chorale.

•Corelli's "Christmas Carol," the Vienna Chamber Orchestra conducted by Anton Heiller.

•Berloiz's "L'Enfance du Christ," the Little Orchestra and Choral Arts Society conducted by Thomas Scherman.

•A quartet of four Christmas works performed by the Alfred Deller Consort — Pezel's "Pastorale;" Wechmann's "Annunciation;" a "Pastorale" by Vivaldi; and Buxtehude's "In Dulci Jublio."

•Bach's "Magnificat," with soloists and choruses of Radio Stuttgart, the Pro-Musica Orchestra conducted by Rolf Reinhardt.

•Praetorious' "Alf der gutige Gott," the Westphalian Choral Ensemble and Instruments, Wilhelm Ehmann, conducting.

•A selection of Renaissance Christmas music by 16th century composers including "Noel!;" "Advent;" and "Tale of Mary," the Boston Camerata, Joel Cohen, directing.

•"A Christmas Cantata" by Daniel Pinkham, the Roger Wagner Chorale.

•de la Victoria's "Oh Magnum Mysterium," performed by the Dessoff Choirs.

BACK IN THE SADDLE AGAIN — That all time favorite of the American West is geared up to ride again. At 3 p.m. today, the masked man with the silver bullets, Klinton Spilsbury, the new Lone Ranger, will ride his horse Silver back into public view in "The Legend of the Lone Ranger" over the Cinemax channel of Home Box Office televison.

Antonia Dalapas In ECU Recital Today

TO SING TODAY . . . Antonia Dalapas, soprano, and a member of the voice faculty of the ECU School of Music, will perform in recital at 8:15 p.m. today in the A.J. Fletcher Recital Hall on the ECU campus. There is no admission charged and the public is invited to attend. Miss Dalapas is shown here with her accompaninist for the recital, pianist Virginia Linn, also a member of the ECU School of Music faculty. (ECU News Bureau Photo by Marianne Baines).

Soprano Antonia Dalapas, a member of the voice faculty of the school of music, East Carolina University, will perform in recital at 8:15 p.m. tonight in the Recital Hall of the A.J. Fletcher Music Center.

She will be accompanied by pianist Virginia Linn, also of the school of music faculty. The recital will be open to the public with no admission charged.

Miss Dalapas will open her program with two groups of songs. The first will be a set of three Spanish songs of the 17th and 18th centuries, arranged by the 20th century composer Nin. The second group will be four Schubert lieder: "Suleika," "Lied der Mignon," "Sei mir gegrusst," and "Seligkeit."

Other works to be performed include the aria "L'altra notee in fondo al mare" from Boito's "Mefistofele;" several Debussy songs that range from love songs to reverence of the sea in "La mer est plus belle;" several English songs set to the poetry of British and American poets, and three Greek folk songs.

Miss Dalapas has performed extensively in several areas of the United States, including Oregon, New York, Washington, D.C., and the New England area. Her performing career includes opera, oratorio and appearances as soloist with symphony orchestras and as recitalist in artists series and fine arts festivals.

Miss Dalapas has earned the ECU Excellence in Teaching Award. She is also a recipient of an ECU grant which enabled her to take part last summer in the workshop "Sounds and Sciences of Voice" in Cazenovia, N.Y.

Compositions By Students To Be Performed Dec. 8

Compositions by eight student composers in the school of music, East Carolina University, plus one composition by a guest composer will be featured in a composer's concert at 8:15 p.m. Wednesday in the A.J. Fletcher Recital Hall.

Robert Stine directs the East Carolina New Music Ensemble in this concert.

There is no admission charged for the performance, which will be open to the public.

All compositions being performed were written in 1982. Student composers, the titles of their works and student musicians performing each piece are:

•Carlton Clark — "Scherzo," with the composer playing the piece.

•Renee Colon — "O Freunde," to be performed by Sydney Reed, flute; Glenn Webb, clarinet; Angela Hinton, violin; and Carlton Clark, cello.

•Richard Crane — "Lamento," with Mary Ann Thomas, flute; Richard Crane, trumpet; and Patty Foltz, pianist. Ms. Foltz is an area free-lance pianist.

•Anglea Hinton — "Illuminations," Peggy DePasquale, alto, Donna Collins, flute, and percussionists Bill Congdon, Carla Richards and Brent Montgomery.

•Kris Elliot " "Permutations for Alto Saxophone and Computer-generated Tape," featuring Rusty Raines, alto saxophone.

•Jim Roberts — "Fantasia for Solo Cello," featuring cellist Robert Webber, N.C. artist-in-residence at Carteret Technical College.

•David Winstead — Untitled composition for computer-generated tape.

The guest composer represented on Wednesday's program is Marshall Griffith of the Cleveland Institute of Music. His composition, "Fibers," will be performed by pianists Cykinthia Creel and Betsy Larder.

'Custer' Auditions Set

ECU News Bureau

Auditions for the East Carolina Playhouse production of Robert Ingham's dramatic play "Custer" will be held Monday and Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. each evening in room 206 of the Messick Theater Arts Center on the ECU campus.

Auditions are open to students, faculty, staff and members of the local community.

There are principal roles for three men and one woman. Also needed is an ensemble of men and women for secondary roles and a singing chorus. Director Edgar Loessin is especialy interested in folk singers who play guitar, banjo or harmonica.

Scripts are available in the ECU Joyner Library reserve room. Persons wanting more information may to call 757-6390.

The production of "Custer", which will mark its premiere in North Carolina, is scheduled for Feb. 17-22 in McGinnis Theater. It is a memory play with characters recounting their versions of the events of the fateful day of Custer's last stand.

Wind Ensemble To Present Christmas Music Monday

Santa will pay a visit and musicians of the East Carolina University Wind Ensemble will provide the music in a Potpourri of Christmas Music concert being presented on Monday.

The concert will begin at 7:30 p.m. in the A.J. Fletcher Recital Hall on campus, with Herbert L. Carter conducting.

Musical selections with seasonal appeal both to children and adults have been chosen for the program.

The concert will be open to the public with no admission charged.

The program will open with Harold Walters' "Christmas Greetings March," to be followed by Liedzen's arrangement of Bach's "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring" and Andrew Kazdin's "The Twelve Days of Christmas."

Other selections to be performed are Morton Gould's "Jingle Bells," and the Leidzen arrangement of Yon's "Gesu Bambino," featuring student soprano Janet Noyes.

Also, Robert Lowden's "Great Songs of Christmas," Alfred Reed's "What Child is This?," and three Leroy Anderson compositions — "Bugler's Holiday," "A Christmas Festival" and "Sleigh Ride."

The Brass Band will be featured in the performance of several works on the program, and the trumpet section will be featured in two of Anderson's pieces.

Texaco Opera Fare

WASHINGTON — Two one-act operas and a ballet is the musical fare being broadcast over WITN Radio, Washington, in the Saturday afternoon programs of opera live from the Metropolitan Opera House, New York programs sponsored by Texaco.

Today's broadcast, which begins at 1:30 p.m., is an afternoon of French Music Theater. The program opens with Erik Satie's music for "Parade," a ballet on a theme by Jean Cocteau, performed by Gary Chryst and the Metropolitan Opera Ballet.

The ballet will be followed by Francis Poulenc's one-act opera, "Les Mamelles de Tiersias," with Catherine Malfitano as Therese, Brent Ellis as the theater manager, and David Holloway as the husband.

The final of the three works is Maurice Ravel's oen-act opera "L'Enfant et les Sortileges," with Hilda Harris singing the role of the child.

Blotto Rock Group Faces Success

By LAURIE ASSEO

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — Business may be blotto across the United States these days, but five guys with assumed names are proving that "Blotto" can be a successful business.

Sergeant makes the posters. Bowtie handles the business end. Cheese supervises the trucks and equipment. Lee Harvey oversees record sales. Broadway sticks to singing.

Record sales are going well for Blotto, a rock group that is shooting for the big time by releasing songs on its own label — Blotto Records, naturally.

"You don't really need full-page ads in Billboard magazine to have a hit," said Broadway Blotto. "You need a good song and an audience that likes it."

Blotto scored with its first song, "I Wanna Be a Lifeguard," which became a minor 1980 hit.

The song, which espoused the joys of "sand between my toes, white stuff on my nose," sold 25,000 copies, the most successful independently released record in the United States that year.

The group followed with another four-song disc including such gems as "My Baby's the Star of a Drivers Ed. Movie" and an ode to sexy advertising, "Gimme the Girl," which told advertisers, "you keep the merchandise."

Blotto has just released its third record, and the members say they're hooked on running their own affairs. "Nobody cares as much about us as we do," Broadway said.

The group isn't getting rich, but as Bowtie says, "It's a miracle that we have five guys and a three-man road crew making a living."

Blotto's first two records were made in small Albany-area studios known mostly as the home of "vanity" records. But they talked an import merchandising company into listing the records in its catalog, and drew orders from a number of record stores.

The group splurged on its third record — the first full-length album — by spending $15,000 to get a clearer sound quality in a White Plains recording studio.

This time Blotto sought a better distribution setup through Peter Pan Records — the outfit that still puts out those multi-colored kiddie records many people learned fairy tales from.

Things have not always been so rosy for Blotto. The group went the usual route of trying to get a major record deal, and learned a few lessons along the way.

For instance, a recording contract is not necessarily a ticket to success. Some groups are given large advances on their future earnings, and if the record does not sell, the group suddenly finds itself in debt.

Other groups are signed but then find the company isn't interested in pushing their songs.

Record executives claimed Blotto was just a novelty that would die out soon, and eventually the guys decided to go it alone.

"What did it was when (one executive) asked us what we did for a living," said Lee Harvey.

Group members admit they would like eventually to join a major label or at least get a label to handle the distribution. Without the cash advances, Blotto must keep playing weekend gigs so members can afford to record during the week.

Joyce Edwards Harris and Stephen R. Burch, Trustee, dated April 19, 1982, recorded in Book U50, page 787, Pitt County Public Registry, default having been made in the payment of the indebtedness secured thereby, I will, as Trustee, on the 13th day of December, 1982, at 12:00 o'clock noon, at the courthouse door in Greenville, North Carolina, sell at public auction to the highest bidder for cash, the following described land, to-wit:

That certain lot or parcel of land lying and being in Grimesland Township, Pitt County, North Carolina, and BEGINNING at a PK nail set in the centerline of N. C. Secondary Road 1768 also known as Bryan Street, said point being located North 58 degrees 30 minutes West 196.74 feet from the point of intersection of the centerlines of N. C. Secondary Road 1768 (Bryan Street) and Mt. Calvert Street; thence from said BEGINNING POINT running South 31 degrees 30 minutes West 180.00 feet through an iron pipe set in the southern right of way line of N. C. Secondary Road 1768 (Bryan Street) to an iron pipe set, cornering; thence running North 58 degrees 30 minutes West 100.00 feet to an iron pipe set, cornering; thence running North 31 degrees 30 minutes East 180.00 feet through an iron pipe set in the southern right of way line of N. C. Secondary Road 1768 (Bryan Street) to a PK nail set in the centerline of N. C. Secondary Road 1768 (Bryan Street), said point being South 58 degrees 30 minutes East 15.00 feet from a PK nail set in the centerline of N.C. Secondary Road 1768 at the centerline intersection of a 30 inch culvert, cornering; thence running along and with the centerline of N. C. Secondary Road 1768 (Bryan Street) 100.00 feet to the POINT OF BEGINNING as set forth on a map entitled "Survey for Brenda J. Harris," Grimesland Township, Pitt County, North Carolina, dated April 27, 1982, by Olsen Associates, Inc., Engineers and Surveyors, Greenville, North Carolina, to which map reference is made for further description.

This property is being sold subject to advalorem taxes.

A ten percent cash deposit will be required of the successful bidder on the day of sale to guarantee compliance with the bid.

East 303 feet, South 61 deg. 20 min. East 410 feet to an iron stake at the corner of Tract "C"; thence with the line of Tract "C" as follows: South 55 deg. 00 min. West 1,855 feet to an iron stake near edge of the field, South 3 deg. 00 min. East 2,580 feet to an iron stake in a branch, South 31 deg. 15 min. West 845 feet to an iron stake in the south edge of the road, Clifton Edwards' line; thence with the south edge of the road, Clifton Edwards' line, North 58 deg. 25 min. West 385 feet to an iron stake at the beginning, and containing 67.1 acres and being Tract "D" as shown on lat of survey made by M. M. Dresbach, R.S., in July, 1942, which plat is duly recorded in Map Book No. 3, at page 207 in the office of the Register of Deeds of Pitt County, and being a part of that certain tract of land conveyed to J. B. Rouse and wife, Nannie Rouse, by L. C. Skinner and wife, Daisey M. Skinner, by deed dated January 14, 1939, and recorded in Book V-22, page 176 in the office of the Register of Deeds of Pitt County, to which plat and deed reference is hereby made, and being the same tract of land conveyed to Ira Smith and wife by W. Lenwood Stancill by deed recorded in Book H-24, at page 323, Pitt County Registry, and being the identical property conveyed by Doris Hardee Boyd and husband, Jasper D. Boyd, to Thelma E. Carowan (now Thelma E. Hardee) by deed dated October 30, 1958, of record in Book O-30, page 164, Pitt County Registry.

Subject to and together with easement for road over a strip of land 20 feet wide along the southern boundary of Lots A, B, C, D and E of the J. B. Rouse Subdivision.

There is excluded from the above-described property the right-of-way of S.R. 1562 which borders the south side of said tract and that certain lot or parcel of land conveyed to Harold E. Jones by deed of record in the Pitt County Registry in Book I-40, at page 413, reference to such deed being directed for a more complete and accurate description of the property so excluded.

The highest bidder at the sale shall be required to make a cash deposit of ten percent (10%) of the successful bid pending confirmation or rejection thereof.

Sales

Few sales positions carry greater prestige and earnings potential.

As a Membership Sales Representative of The Chamber of Commerce of the United States, your "prospect list" includes every owner and manager of every business in the United States not already a member—right down to the one-man (or one-woman) owner of the smallest business you can imagine on Main Street, USA!

Because from its Washington headquarters, literally across the street from the White House, the Chamber actively pursues the vital interests of the owners and managers of all businesses, large and small.

As a Membership Sales Representative, you can walk into any business and enjoy immediate recognition, present your "product" (which has NO competition), and explain your membership pricing structure which makes it possible to "close" on the first interview— no matter how large or small the business may be!

Simply by following the Chamber's well proven sales procedures (which you will learn during a three week training period on salary), you ought to be earning close to $25,000 in draw and commissions your first year, and $35,000 or higher in years three to five.

Territories will include eastern North Carolina and vicinity.

To learn more, and arrange an interview, forward your resume in confidence to Mr. Arthur Wise.

Details On The Annual Norfolk Literary Contest

NORFOLK — Details have been received on the annual literary contest sponsored by the Irene Leach Memorial of Norfolk. This year, as in past years, the competition is in four categories, with cash prizes totaling $1,350.

The four competition categories are:

• Short Story, The Anna Cogswell Wood contest — 1,000 to 3,000 words, $300 first place, $200 second place, $100 third place.

• Non-fiction, the Fanny Rogers Curd contest — $200 first place, $100 second place.

• Free verse, the Helen Evans Ferguson contest — $100 first place, $75 second place, and $50 third place.

• Traditional, blank, sonnet, other conventional forms of verse, the Sallie Shepherd contest — $100 first place, $75 second place, $50 third place.

Rules applicable to the competition are:

• Closing date, Jan. 31, 1983 (final postmark date).

• Open to residents of North Carolina and Virginia, students and members of the Armed Forces living in these two states.

• Only one entry per person in each of the four categories. For poems, the category is to be noted in the top right corner of the manuscript.

• All entries must be typed on 8½ x 11" paper.

• Two copies of poems are to be submitted to: Miss Beverley Dabney, 6148 Rolfe Ave., Norfolk, Va., 23508. One is to be unsigned. The second copy is to include name, address and phone number. No poem is to exceed one page in length. (Poems are not to be returned, so the sender is to keep a copy).

• Only one copy of short story and non-fiction entries are to be submitted. Title is to be typed at the top of page one, with pages stapled at upper left corner. Include on a separate page — title, category, name, address, and phone number. Entries will be returned if accompanied by a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Send to: Mrs. Fred Martin, 1544 Cloncurry Road, Norfolk, Va., 23505.

• All work must be unpublished and not currently offered in another contest. Winning entries are covered by a temporary copyright, with all rights reverting to the author after March 31.

Winning entries will be notified in March, with winning poems and names of prose winners to be published in a brochure.

Copies of rules are not available to individuals, so persons interested in the competitoin are urged to save this article for use in preparation and submission of manuscripts.

Seeking Poems For 1983 N.C. Portfolio

GREENSBORO — Poetry Center Southeast is accepting submissions for publications in "Portfolio 1983," an art-literary publication sponsored by the Center and the North Carolina Arts Council.

The purpose is to select the best 25 poems from those submitted by North Carolina writers. The award-winning poems will be selected by professionals and will be published in braodsheet style in a handsome portfolio. Winning poets will read their works at various readings across the state.

Deadline for receipt of entries is Dec. 15. Publication of the portfolio is due in April, 1983.

Applicable rules are:

• North Carolina residency required.

• Entries must be anonymous. SEnd a 3 x 5 card with name, address, zip and phone number and title of the poem(s) entered.

• Each poet can submit one to three poesm, not to exceed 100 lines total. Must be typed in English and must be previously unpublished material. Translations not eligible.

Remit $1 per poem (or $3 for a longer poem) plus a stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Portfolio 1983 Award, Poetry Center Southeast, Library-Guilford College Campus, Guilford College Road, Greensboro, N.C., 27282.

Peter Makuck To Autograph Book Of Poems

Poet Peter Makuck, whose collection of poems, "Where We Live" has just been published by BOA Ediitions Ltd. of New York, will be available to discuss his book and to authograph copies at two scheduled autographing sessions.

The first session will be at Walden's Book Store in Carolina East Mall, beginning at 3 p.m. on Friday.

The second session will be at Small's Book Store in Washington on Saturday, from 11 to 3 p.m.

Makuck's poems are available in two formats — in paper, priced at $5 and in hard cover, priced at $10.

Writers Club Meets Tuesday

The first and only meeting for the month of December of the Greenville Writers Club will be held at 8 p.m. Tuesday, Dec. 7 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Floyd Bullock, Sr., 100 Downing Road, Candlewick Estates.

Candlewick Estates is located three miles from Greenville on the Stantonsburg Road. Persons attending will meet at 7:30 at Krispy Kreme on Tenth Street to form car pools.

COASTAL TRANQUILITY — With all the tourists gone for a little while, a lone duck had a serene stretch of Myrtle Beach all to himself as ocean water ripples slowly over clean sand and an afternoon sun creates a pattern of gold through a gray sky. (AP Laserphoto)

Local Groups In Dec. 12 Christmas Concert

Women's Ensemble

The Women's Ensemble, one of three groups to be performing in the December 12 concert of Christmas music in Wright Auditorium, was formed earlier this year. The purpose of the group is to provide the Greenville Choral Society with an alternate repertoire possibility, as well as to offer the community a smaller representative choral group to perform at civic and other area meetings.

Selected through auditions, the women in the group include professional women, music teachers, and housewives.

For their portion of the Christmas concert, The Women's Ensemble will perform music of various periods and styles, including two Renaissance selections arranged by John Rutter, and three selections from the Persichetti composition, "Winter Cantata," with accompaniment by Diane Bridger.

A special feature of the Women's Ensemble program will be the performance of a Christmas folk song, "I Wonder as I Wander," arranged by a local musician, Jan Kittrell.

Sopranos Jackie Marin and Susan Coiner will be featured soloists. Carolyn Ipock directs the ensemble.

Choral Society

The Greenville Choral Society will open the December 12 Christmas concert with the performance of three selections — Giovanni Gabrieli's "Hodie Christus Natus est" for double choir; the de la Vittoria "O Magnum Mysterium" and Praetorius' "Lo, How a Rose 'Ere Blooming."

Following the segments of the joint Christmas concert featuring The Greenville Chamber Players and The Women's Ensemble, the full membership of the Greenville Choral Society will then perform in the final portion of the concert with five well-known favorite Christmas compositions.

The five works to be sung in this part of the concert are "Bring a Torch, Jennette Jsabella," "He is Born," "I Saw Three Ships," "The Holly and the Ivy," and "We Wish You A Merry Christmas."

Rhonda Fleming is director of the Greenville Choral Society. Under her direction, the Society has performed works such as the Vivaldi "Gloria;" Pinkham's "Christmas Cantata;" Kodaly's "Missa Brevis;" the Handel "Coronation Anthems;" Britten's "Rejoice in the Lamb;" Bach's "Magnificat;" Faure's "Requiem;" and Randall Thompson's "Peacable Kingdom."

Most recently the Choral Society participated with the ECU choruses and orchestra in the November performance in Wright Hall of Beethoven's "Ninth Symphony."

Dr. Fleming has been director of the Greenville Choral Society since September 1980. A native of Illinois, she received the undergraduate degree in music education from the University of Illinois, the masters degree from the University of Southern California, and the doctorate in music education from Florida State University.

The Society was founded in September, 1969, with Dr. Paul Aliapoulious as the first director. The first concert for the 120-member society was presented in Wright Auditorium in December 1969, when portions of Handel's "Messiah" was performed.

Details On Concert Tickets

Tickets for the joint December 12 Christmas concert are priced at $2. They may be purchased at the door or in advance from the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council office located in the Home Federal Savings and Loan Building, 543 Evans Street.

The concert will begin at 3 p.m. in Wright Auditorium on the East Carolina University campus.

Greenville Chamber Players

The Greenville Chamber Players, a group of 18 young string players, will provide the non-choral portion of the program of Christmas music in the seasonal concert being held in Wright Auditorium Sunday afternoon, December 12. The young musicians will be conducted by the group's director, Candace Dixon, in one selection, with Rhonda Fleming as guest conductor for the second selection.

The two compositions to be performed by The Greenville Chamber Players will be Corelli's "Christmas Concerto," and Vivaldi's "Concerto Repieno."

The players will be augmented in this concert by nine adult guest musicians: Anita Cahoon, David Bjorkman, the Baths — Charles, JoAnn, Patricia and Pamela, Jan Kittrell, Robert Webber, and Katherine Jenkins.

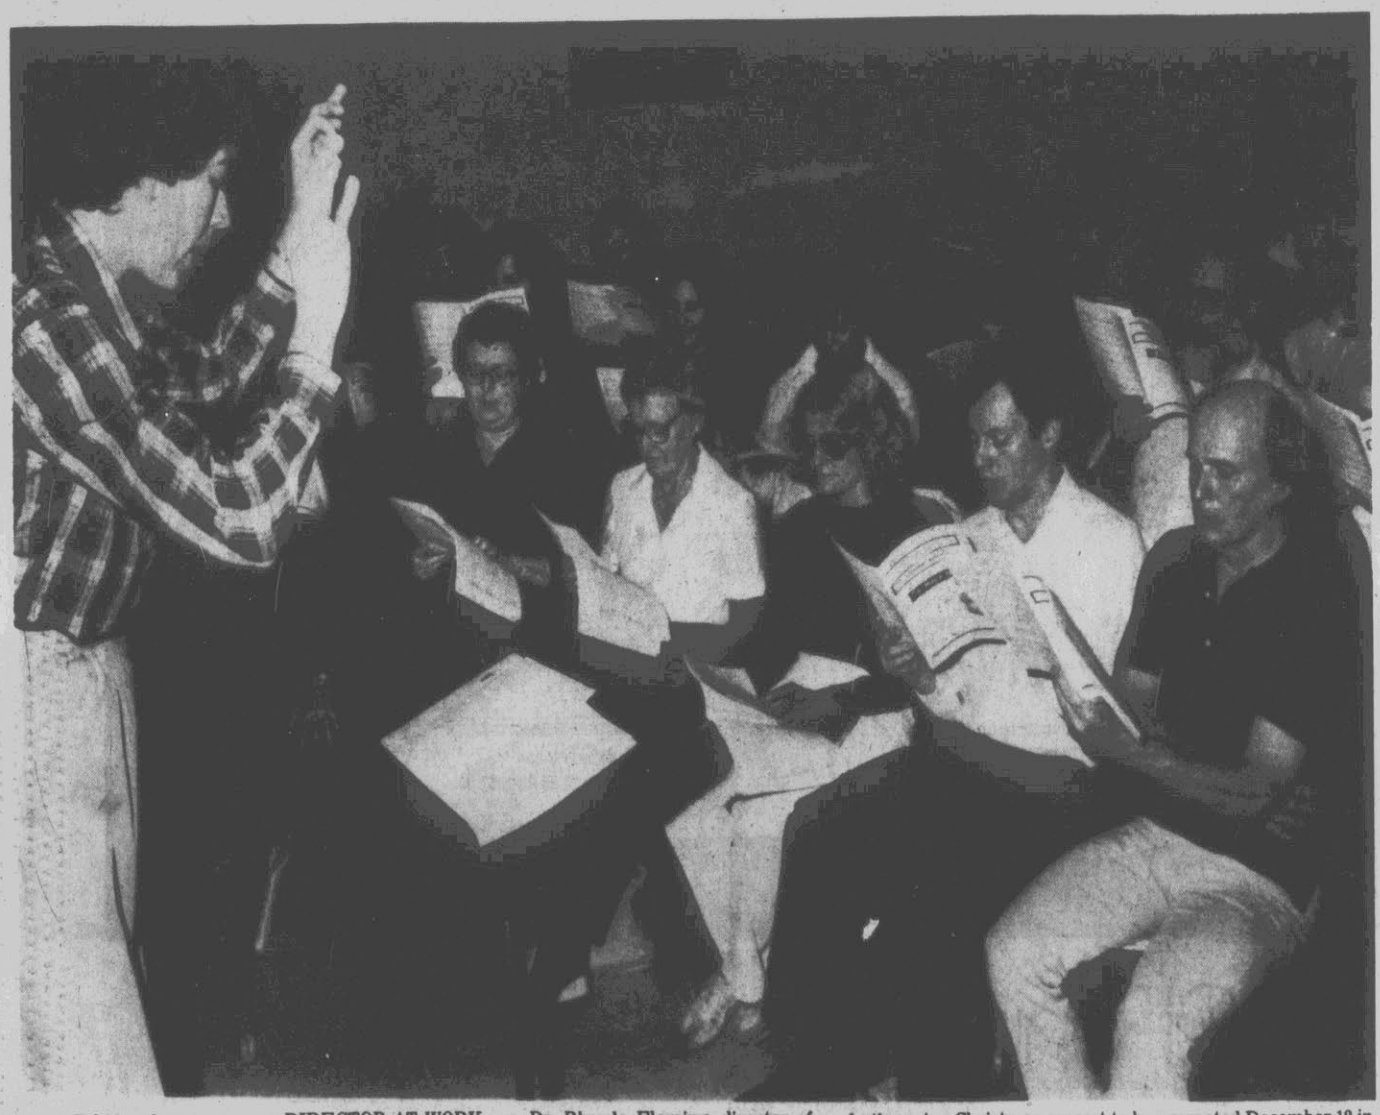

Three Chamber Players soloists will be featured in the Corelli work — violinists Amy Moore and Andrea Bath, and cellist Jennifer Lucht.

Current members of the group, which was first organized in January 1981 are: violinists — Carol Moore, Amy Moore, Elizabeth Ellen, Josh Hickman, John Paul Haggard, Robert Haggard, Sarah Burden, Vickie Petrie, Andrea Bath, Danielle Nieman, Samantha Stiengold, Sheila Pearson, and Cindy Wallace; violists Danny Radeka and Mary Paul Castellow; cellists Jennifer Lucht and Stewart Coltar; and bass player Tim Shank.

Members of The Greenville Chamber Players are drawn from students in Greenville Middle School, Aycock Junior High, and Rose High Schools.

The primary purposes of the group are to make the Greenville community aware of the standard of excellence existing in the Greenville city schools string program, and to heighten awareness of the enduring beauty of the rich musical heritage available in the repertoire of chamber music.

Since forming nearly two years ago, The Greenville Chamber Players have performed in a number of public concerts, including appearnces in six churches within the Greenville area.

Directing The Singers

DIRECTOR AT WORK . . . Dr. Rhonda Fleming, director of the Greenville Choral Society, is shown putting a segment of the Society's full membership through rehearsals for the forthcoming Christmas concert to be presented December 12 in Wright Auditorium.

ECU Geographer Explores Legend Of Dinasaurs

By WILLIAM A. SHIRES
ECU News Bureau

Boulders perch like gargoyles at the edge of high, steep cliffs and strange, prehistoric footprints are imbedded in stone atop a remote and mysterious mountain deep in South America.

These are clues which may explain the old legend of a mountain so remote and so biologically isolated that living dinasaurs exist on its flat, mesa-like top, according to geographer Edward P. Leahy of East Carolina University.

Leahy, a Latin American specialist and Amazon explorer, led a small expedition last summer to climb cloud-veiled Mount Roraima, which rises 9,300 feet above the high plains of Venezuela's Gran Sabana. At the top they found odd-shaped boulders, black lichens and dim footprints embedded in ancient sandstone, but no creatures other than insects and birds.

Leahy believes that the boulders and prints in sandstone may help explain the legend that nearly a century ago inspired Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's famous science-fiction novel, "The Lost World". Viewed from below, the boulders at the edge of 900-foot cliffs may give the appearance of beasts.

The prints, which may or may not be those of dinasaurs, "were laid down 150 million years ago," Leahy says. It may have coincided with a geologic period before the mountain was thrust up on the Gran Sabana.

At a public lecture and slide show entitled "A Visit to the Lost World," Leahy reported his findings and described the trip as a "most satisfying" experience despite hardship.

The party included Dr. James Bowman of Greenville and Henry J. Lischer Jr., of Dallas, Texas. They trekked for six days through the back country of the Gran Sabana, fording rivers and sharing scarce rations with two Indian guides.

They found hundreds of stone-hard ant hills and encountered swarms of biting, stinging insects which raised blood blisters. They waded streams full of slippery stones and were beset by frequent sunset rainstorms. Tha land was quiet and empty.

"Except for one small snake and some lizards, birds and insects, we had seen nothing," Leahy reported. "The country seemed dead empty." On the return trip the guides captured scarlet and black grasshoppers.

Reaching the mountain, they ascended ridges through dripping cloud-forests, bathed in mist, and they donned rain gear to walk under cascading waterfalls.

In some places, it was like "the anteroom to hell," Leahy said.

But they were rewarded by "breathtaking views" from the mountain's heights.

Leahy discovered that the dark color of the mountain top is caused by black lichens which cover a base of light sandstone. In the sandstone, the strange prints were visible.

In an article prepared for Explorer's Journal, Leahy writes that a "serious commitment" to study of Mount Roraima and the Gran Sabana "will require more time." He says the sparsely populated, 20,000-squiare-mile area has been largely neglected by geographers.

"I know a great deal more about the region than I did a year ago. Useful results should come of the summer's work. And I hope to return to the Gran Sabana to do further studies in more depth," he said.

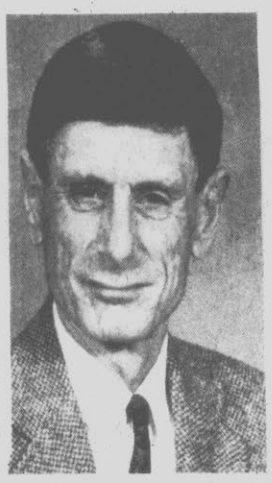

The Leahy party received a modest grant from the Explorer's Club of New York, but financed most of the cost privately. Leahy has traveled and writen extensively about the Amazon, its Indians and geography.

Indochinese Refugees Filter Across Borders

By MORT ROSENBLUM
AP Special Correspondent

TAPHRAYA, Thailand (AP) — Trang Ich, who has no legs, crawled two months across Cambodia from Vietnam on wood-block crutches. He arrived, tubercular and skeletal, knowing three words of English: "I go America."

But he probably won't.

Crutch people like Ich, a 42-year-old former Saigon policemam, dramatize what amounts to a new Indochina refugee crisis, U.S. and international relief officials say.

After resettling 800,000 of the million or so Indochinese who have fled since 1975, Western welcome mats have worn thin. Asian neighbors have closed their doors. Hundreds of thousands are trapped in dangerous limbo, and more want to come.

"Numbers are down only because of Vietnamese policing, piracy and hostile reception," said one U.S. official, asking anonymity. "To say the problem is over is like taking satisfaction in the Berlin Wall."

In hospitals on the Thai-Cambodian border, such as the Italian unit here, mutilated refugees describe how they felt desperate enough to flee, despite the hardships and danger.

"So many others want to come but they are afraid," said Nguyen Ba Ruyet, a 37-year-old English teacher, who stepped on a landmine at the end of his second harrowing flight. He was caught in Vietnam the first time and said he nearly starved during his seven months in jail.

"If they go in groups, Communists capture them or shoot at them, and if they go alone, they face many risks," he said, tapping a white leg cast marked, "C'est la vie."

At nearby Nong Chan, Vu Duy Tan, a 26-year-old polio victim, told nurses how his father — a former lieutenant colonel — fitted a motor to his wheelchair and sent him off. He said he eluded police in Cambodia by pretending to be mute.

The handicapped, if dramatic in their plight, are a small part of a multi-faceted problem.

"Overall, the picture is bleak as hell," said John de Salis, representative in Bangkok, Thailand, of the International Committee of the Red Cross. "Refugees can't go forward, they can't go back, and where they are is dicey."

Thailand shelters 160,000 registered refugees, many of them awaiting resettlement elsewhere. The Thais stopped accepting refugees in 1980, and 250,000 Cambodians camp unofficially along the border, fed by U.N. rations.

Most are exposed to Vietnamese artillery from Cambodia, and incoming rounds killed at least a dozen refugees and wounded scores more so far this year.

Thailand is pressing Western nations to take in more Cambodians, also known as Khmers, as soon as possible because it is concerned that it may be faced with a huge "residual caseload" in permanent camps.

For Vietnamese, the policy is different.

About 2,500 Vietnamese who came by land are detained under harsh conditions on the border as a deterrent to others who might seek refuge here. An additional 5,000 boat people are held in a separate camp.

Thai authorities insist that if any Vietnamese are resettled, all must be taken at once as part of its policy of "humane deterrence."

U.S. officials have tried unsuccessfully to resettle five Amerasian children of U.S. servicemen and others with valid residence visas.

Under the Thai policy, only two Vietnamese have been released: a 3-year-old boy who survived alone, on a piece of driftwood, when pirates rammed a refugee boat and drowned 140; and a 12-year-old girl, kidnapped and raped for two weeks by pirates, and then arrested for illegal entry when she escaped ashore.

But even counting Cambodians and Laotians, the "offtake" — the number resettled — for August fell below 2,000, a record low for a figure that regularly ran to five digits.

One major reason is strict enforcement of the U.S. Refugee Act of 1980 which stipulates a case-by-case scrutiny. Refugees must convince immigration officers they have a "well-founded fear of persecution" and are not merely seeking a better life in the United States.

Answer to yesterday's puzzle.

CRYPTOQUIP 12-4

ILYHOE AHVBTH BME DHMAALFA, DOY IOYT MOYVSVDLWT BME M WTSVF

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — UNMARRIED CIRCUS FIRE-EATER DOESN'T SEARCH FOR MATCH.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: A equals G.

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

South Africa's 'Soviet Experiment' Nearly Over

By JAMES F. SMITH
Associated Press Writer

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A "colossal social experiment" here is nearly complete after 32 years. The country has been carved into more than 1,600 racial neighborhoods, with whole ethnic communities uprooted and resettled according to the color of their skins.

Economic forces, however, seem to conspire against strict compliance with the Group Areas Act. In recent years, thousands of Asians and "coloreds" (people of mixed race) have quietly moved back into "white" areas in violation of the law because of severe housing shortages in their own "group areas."

"Going into Mayfair wasn't an act of politics, even though I have a deep hatred for this system. I was compelled to act criminally," said Cassim Saloojee, a leader of the Johannesburg Indian community who lives in the run-down white neighborhood of Mayfair.

Under the Group Areas Act, Saloojee should be living in the Indian township of Lenasia, 20 miles from the city, and not in the city and suburbs proclaimed for "whites only."

The Act was adopted in 1950 on the premise that racial tension would be eliminated by keeping the races apart.

The act is directed mainly at whites, coloreds and Asians. The black majority is kept apart, in addition, by another set of laws, known together as influx control. Those laws restrict black citizenship rights to 10 tribal homelands and limit those living outside the homelands largely to their own townships outside white cities.

Since the act was set up, more than 78,000 colored families and 37,000 Indian families — more than 600,000 people in all — have been forced to move from areas proclaimed white. Just 2,259 white families have had to move out of areas proclaimed Indian or colored.

According to the South African Institute for Race Relations, only 132 white families, 7,589 colored families and 4,572 Indian families still must be resettled to complete the Group Areas mosaic. The act covers ownership of property as well as occupation, and has forced Indian businesses to relocate outside white downtown areas in ethnic "bazaars."

Group areas legislation underpins apartheid, the system of institutionalized race-separation entrenched after Afrikaans-speaking whites took over the government 34 years ago. Leaders of the Afrikaners, who number nearly 3 million of the 5-million white minority, say race separation is essential to preserve white society amid a nonwhite majority made up of 2.5 million coloreds, nearly 1 million Indians and 21 million blacks.

The race relations institute, along with other critics of government policy, views the Group Areas Act as a bulwark of white supremacy. The institute said after a 1981 symposium: "We know of no greater current cause of human suffering in our land than relocation."

In a 1961 case upholding the act, the country's highest court declared: "The Group Areas Act represents a colossal social experiment." It said the shifting of huge numbers of people "would inevitably cause disruption and, within the foreseeable future, substantial inequalities."

John Dugard, head of the Center for Applied Legal Studies at the University of the Witwatersrand, said the law is non-discriminatory in theory, based on "separate but equal treatment."

"In practice, the Group Areas Act has been implemented in a grossly discriminatory manner to the advantage of the white group," Dugard wrote in a study of the South African legal system.

"How else can one explain that District Six in the heart of Cape Town, an area occupied by coloreds since 1834, with an estimated population of 61,000 coloreds and 800 whites, was proclaimed white and the coloreds removed to a bleak area some 10 miles from the center of Cape Town?" Dugard wrote.

The governing National Party is now calling for limited reforms giving coloreds and Indians some political rights, including separate colored and Indian chambers of Parliament.

Saloojee said Indians and coloreds would never take part in a political system that sanctioned the Group Areas Act.

"The farce of the constitutional changes is that we are still going to have to live in our ghettos," he said.

Life As It's Lived

By GAIL MICHAELS

Meg is now a full-fledged Brownie scout. She was duly inducted during a ceremony in which I had the honor of pinning her Brownie pin upside-down on her uniform. "In order to wear it right side up," the leader explained to her eager troop, "you must each do a good deed."

By the time we got home Meg, suitably impressed by the enormity of this assignment, already had a few grandiose schemes in mind. "I could go to the animal shelter and adopt a homeless puppy," was her first suggestion.

"Forget it," I said.

Obviously stricken by my callousness, she proceeded to her next suggestion. "I could give all my toys to orphans."

"Well, that's an admirable idea, but then what would you play with?"

"You and Daddy and Santa Claus could give me new ones."

I vetoed this scheme also.

"I could give blood to the Red Cross."

"The Red Cross wouldn't take your blood, honey. You're too young."

She was getting desperate. "Could I help you across the street?"

"I don't think that would count."

"It counts in Boy Scouts," she argued. "Daddy said that helping old ladies across the street was a Boy Scout's favorite good deed."

"I'm grateful for your solicitude, but I think I can manage by myself for the next few years."

"Then what can I do?" wailed Meg.

"Well, I think an old saying really fits this situation, and that saying is 'charity begins at home.'"

"What does that mean?"

"It means that sometimes helping at home teaches us how to help in other places."

"But I already offered to help you," she sighed.

"I was thinking about what you could do to help me inside the house," I said, glancing around the disaster area we call our den. "Every toy in our vast collection had been dragged out to grace the carpet. Even the books were in tipsy piles where they had fallen after they had ceased to fulfill their function of anchoring a sleeping bag "tent" between the sofa and the coffee table. The orphan alternative began to look more attractive.

Meg glanced around the room, too, but I don't think she saw what I saw, or if she did, it had an entirely different effect on her. Clutter seems to soothe Meg. Meg recycles garbage like I recycle washcloths.

"Oh, I think I understand," she finally said. "I could dust everything with Windex for you. I could bring in wood for the fire. I could load the dishwasher for you," she continued warming to her subject. "I could cook a meal for you! I could sew a dress for you! I could...I could..."

"You could pick up this mess for starters."

Her face fell at this uninspiring suggestion. "I picked up my part already."

"What do you mean by 'my part'?"

"Zachary pulled all the cars out."

"And the books?"

"I didn't see those."

"And the Barbie doll clothes? And the toilet tissue tubes?" (I was referring to one of her favorite collectibles.)

"I need them. I might play with them again."

I stood my ground. "Now, Meg, you asked me what you could do. I really do think that one of the best good deeds would be to keep this den picked up for at least a week."

"Zachary's stuff, too?"

"Zachary's stuff, too."

"Well," she said slowly, "I'm just a little girl, but I suppose I can do it if I try."

She's a lot more optimistic than I.

Curator Speaks As He Believes

By NANCY SHULINS
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — At Princeton 30 years ago, a sophomore sat nervously amid seniors and graduate students at a seminar on The History of Sculpture.

The professor passed around a small spoon-shaped object. "It captures the Industrial Revolution," said the first student. "Sweeping dynamics of movement in space," said the second. "A symbol of the earth," said the third.

The sophomore was last. "I don't think it's a work of art," young Thomas Hoving said, to stunned silence. "I think it's something to be used. Also, it's so industrial-looking. I think it may be a medical instrument."

The "sculpture" was an obstetrical speculum.

"That was the turning point in my career," Hoving says, his eyebrows waggling devilishly behind his reading glasses.

Hoving became curator of The Cloisters, New York's commissioner of parks, executive director of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, and most recently, editor-in-chief of The Connoisseur magazine. He also is under contract through Hoving Associates, the corporation he owns with wife Nancy, to do 15 pieces this year for ABC-TV's news magazine, "20-20."

But the man who brought "happenings" to New York's parks and King Tut to its masses, the man who demystified the art museum and infuriated its trustees, isn't kidding about the turning point bit.

"... that incident taught me to say what you mean — even if you use incorrect language. Get it out. Be judgmental."

Hoving has been just that. His judgments are seldom benign:

—On the officials and trustees he worked with during his 10 years as director of the Met: "Theyhwmzehnat, lazy people and I shoved them through a small aperture. The museum had to change."

—On academia: "Most terrors in history were perpetrated by academics. The studious, the mean, the quiet person, he's the one you've got to watch out for."

—On professional art acquisitors: "They're just like people in any other business, only dumber. After all, it's not their money."

His critical eye — "I've got a hell of an eye" — wanders back to himself. "It's a good thing I was in the arts," he says.

"If I'd have been a businessman, I'd have been too conservative. If I'd stayed with the Marines, I would have been court-martialed. And if I'd gone into politics, I could have been dangerous."

With passions that range from medieval sculpture to Monty Python, fingering fine art to puncturing sacred balloons, he is an elegant art scholar one minute, a Dennis the Menace in pinstripes the next.

Over a career that has spanned 30 years, three prep schools, one Ivy League university, two museums and a magazine, it has proven a strange combination. There are those who might even say dangerous.

Peck's Bad Boy, he calls himself proudly. It is no idle boast. His list of misdeeds stretches to adolescence, when he discovered cheap ale and torched a sand-moving machine on Martha's Vineyard. As a preppie he was bounced out of Exeter for slugging a Latin teacher.

He did little to distinguish himself at Princeton until, as a sophomore within a point of flunking out, he discovered art history.

He graduated summa cum laude with an art history degree. He was going to make a career of the Marines when the Korean truce was signed. "There is nothing more discouraging for a second lieutenant than finding out his only chance for promotion has been dashed by a truce."

ASK OMAR

Q.—We had a strange sequence the other night that provoked much discussion. The auction proceeded as follows:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	3 NT	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	?

I decided that my partner had a sub-minimum opening bid with a long, broken club suit. Since I had only a doubleton club, I elected to pass. We made all 13 tricks, admittedly with the help of a finesse. But we should certainly have bid at least a small slam. May we have your comments?—R. Lunquist, Milwaukee, Wis.

(This question has been awarded the weekly prize.)

A.—There are a number of auctions that sound weak but which are actually forcing—some are probes for the right game, others for slam. Your auction was one of them.

Let's consider your case. For a moment, after you had rebid three no trump, your side was in game. It is not logical to think that partner has a hand which would not yield nine tricks in no trump, but which would produce exactly 10 tricks at a club contract. Bidding is not that exact! If partner's hand was so unbalanced that he was prepared to play only in clubs, he could simply have converted to five clubs. Instead, he has chosen a slower approach. Why?

Partner must have a good hand with a glaring weakness, probably a doubleton. Because of that he cannot ask for aces. Instead, four clubs asks partner to initiate a cue-bidding sequence to check on controls. Here's a hand that North might have for the above auction:

♠xx ♡AJ9 ◇x ♣AKQxxxx

Despite the fact that North has only 14 points in high cards, slam is a distinct probability. However, if North launches into Blackwood and finds his partner with only one ace, he might be forced into six clubs and find that the defense can cash two tricks in spades. Or he might initiate a sign-off in five no trump only to find that a slam is unbeatable.

Here's another example. This time North's bid sounds like a sign-off when logically it simply offers a choice of games:

South	North
1 ◇	1 ♠
2 NT	3 ♠

I know a lot of people, even some very fine players, who would consider that North is showing a weak hand with a dislike for no trump. I don't believe that anyone is good enough to know that his hand will make exactly nine tricks in spades, not ten, nor eight or nine at no trump. It is more logical to play that the bid offers a choice of three no trump or four spades as the final contract. It could even be the first move in a slam-going auction where North wants to set the trump suit before initiating a cue-bidding sequence.

Somebody Stole 296 Tickets

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — City police square off against Sacramento County sheriff's deputies at the annual Pig Bowl football game in January — but there's already been some illegal motion. Someone swiped 296 tickets to the game.

Police Sgt. Bob Burns says the tickets, worth $1,046, apparently were stolen from the shop where 28,000 of them were printed.

"It probably occurred some time during business hours ... There is no evidence that anyone broke in and committed a nighttime burglary," Burns said.

The charity game, Sacramento's largest athletic event, is scheduled for Jan. 29.

SHADES of YESTERYEAR

Until recently, energy comfort and convenience came cheaply. But our forefathers knew a trick or two about keeping cozy . . . and we can profit from their ideas today.

Remember the old feather quilt? Down quilts, long underwear, and flannel sheets have come back in style today, and are just as good at keeping you toasty while your thermostat is set back for energy and money savings. You can update the quilt with an electric blanket if you like. Even with your thermostat set at 60 degrees Fahrenheit, the blanket will save twenty times more energy than it uses.

Heat escapes quickly through window glass, so use your drapes, shutters, and shades to help you insulate against heat loss in winter and heat gain in summer. The tighter your window coverings, the more effective they will be. Remember to open wide the coverings on sunny winter days to take full advantage of the sun's heat.

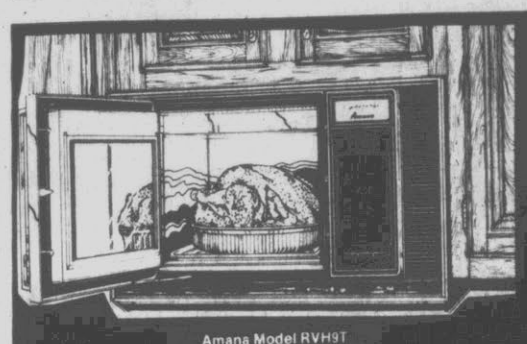

To determine effective ways of saving energy in your own home, contact the Greenville Utilities Energy Services Department at 752-7166, and ask about a FREE Energy Audit for your home.

TV SHOWTIME
For Week Of December 5 - December 11, 1982

Dazzling Stars Under The Big Top

Pick up a package of popcorn, seat yourself setside and prepare the family for the treat of a lifetime, because the circus is coming to town. Not just an ordinary circus, but "THE Circus of The Stars." This year's spectacular, the seventh edition of the show, is to feature 36 stars doing unbelievable things on swings, with animals and, in general, putting on a potpourri of dexterity, courage and beauty.

And the show comes to you from Caesars Palace via CBS-TV, in a two-hour prime-time extravaganza, Sunday, Dec. 5.

This year there is a ringmaster who is a natural for the circus, no other than the irrepressible Mickey Rooney. His co-ringmasters include Scott Baio, one of the stars of "Joanie Loves Chachi"; Morgan Fairchild, the femme fatale of "Flamingo Road"; Vincent Price, who needs no introduction to viewers of horror pics; Martha Raye, a remarkable superstar; Debbie Reynolds, the multi-talented star of stage, screen and TV; and Isabel Sanford, costar of "The Jeffersons."

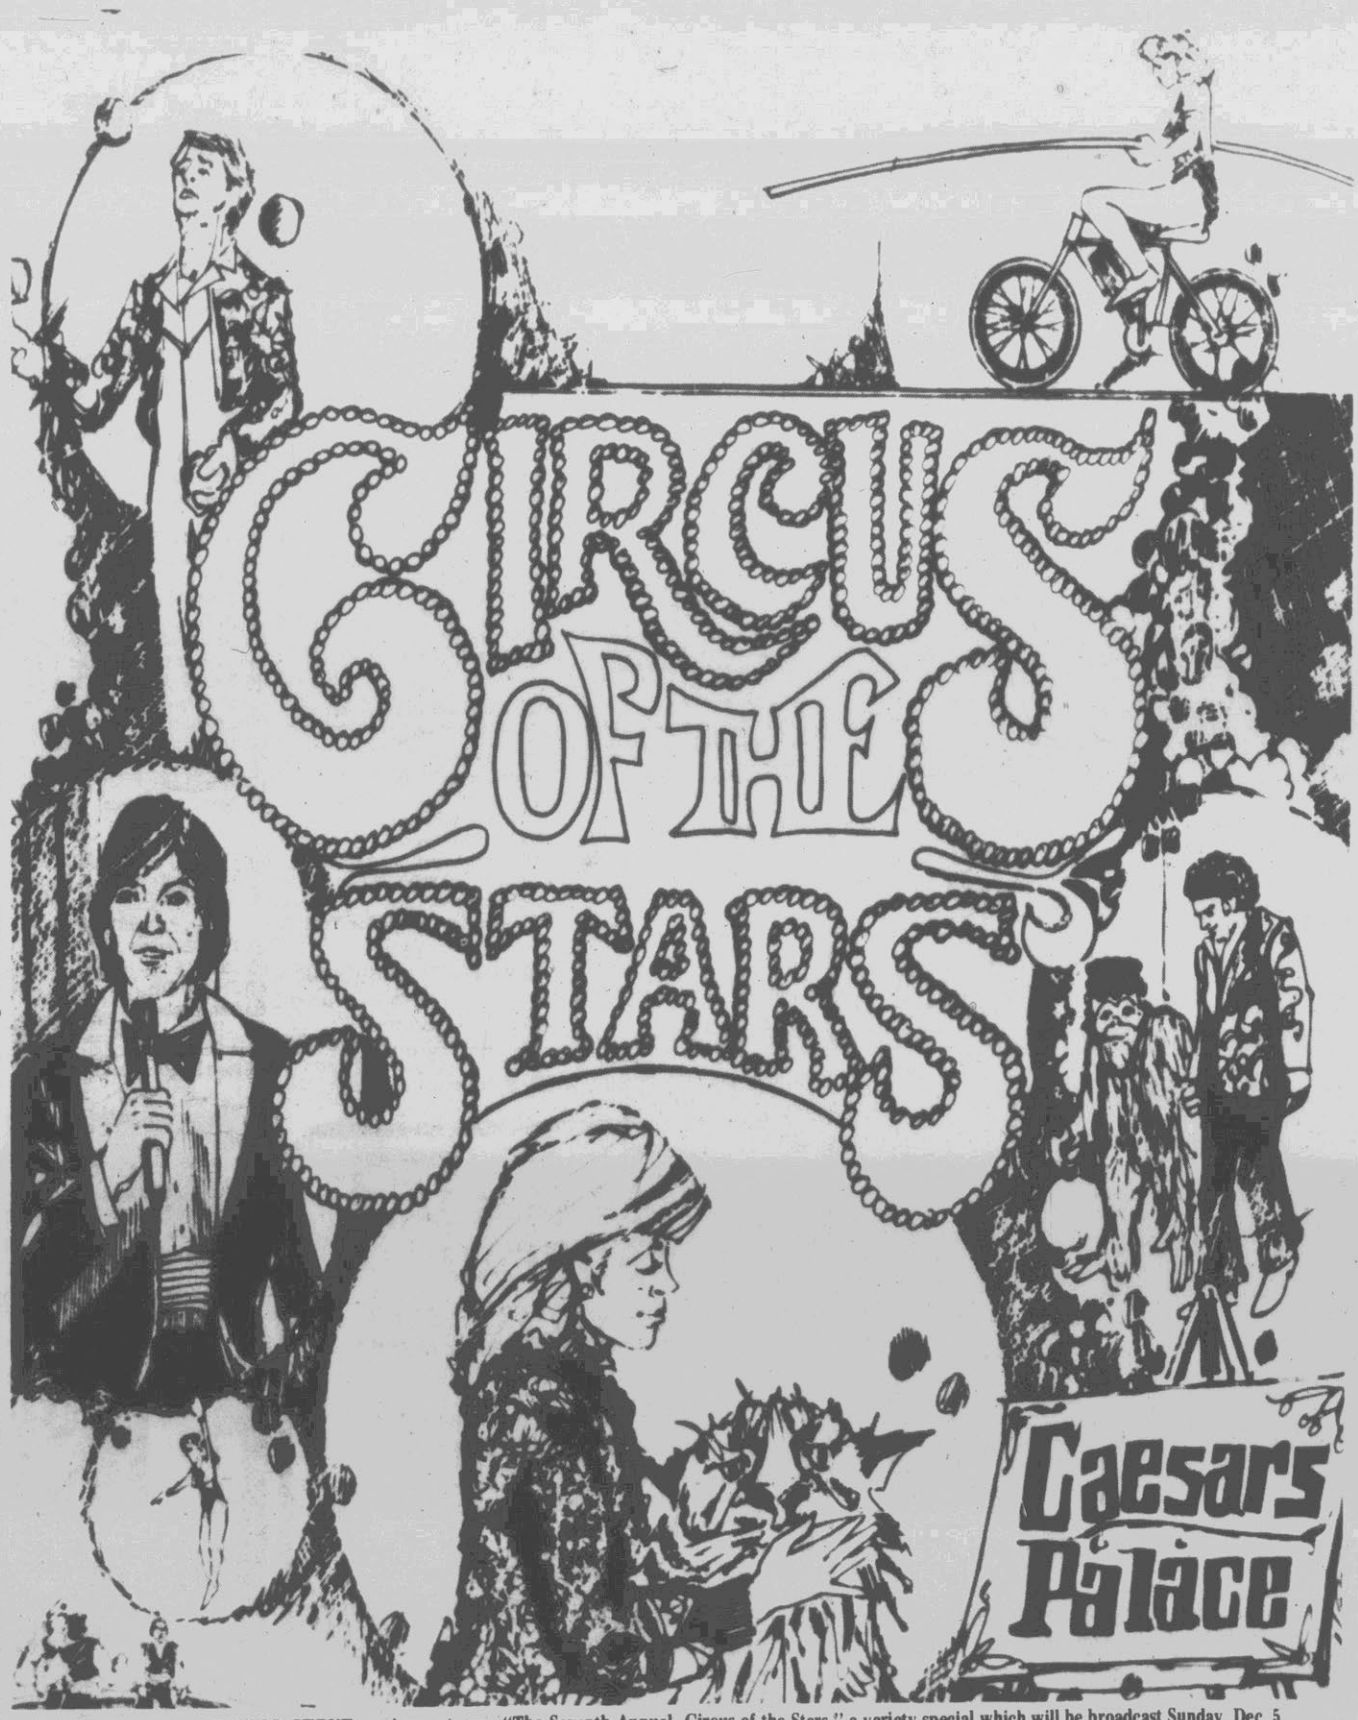

You will see many noteworthy performances, beginning with Linda Blair, an intrepid amateur working with the "Big Cats" alone in a cage.

Eddie Mekka, airborne on last season's "Circus of The Stars" when he was shot from a cannon, this year takes to the deep to rival Houdini in an underwater escape caper involving chains and a cage — not exactly a routine for "Laverne & Shirley."

For beauty there is a sensational flying trapeze act which features Lesley Aletter, the daughter of Lee Meriwether; Judy Landers of "Madame's Place"; Todd Bridges, one of the stars of "Diff'rent Strokes"; and Jamie Lyn Bauer of "The Young and the Restless."

Brooke Shields, who doesn't have to do anything but just stand there to mesmerize you, nevertheless does an aesthetically beautiful "cradle" act hanging from a swing high above the tent floor.

Young Adam Rich will raise the hackles on the back of your neck as he puts several tons of elephants through their paces.

MICKEY ROONEY WILL SERVE as ringmaster on "The Seventh Annual Circus of the Stars," a variety special which will be broadcast Sunday, Dec. 5 (9-11 p.m.) on CBS.

This Guy's An A-One Jerk

Steve Martin is wild, crazy and rich in love...but only the wild and crazy part lasts as he goes from a sharecropper's shack to riches to rags again in "The Jerk," an offbeat comedy to be rebroadcast as The ABC Sunday Night Movie, Dec. 5 (9-11 p.m.).

Navin Johnson (Martin) is the kind of young man who spends his life asking one cosmic question: "What do you think I am...some kind of a jerk?"

The answer, unfortunately, is always yes.

Navin is not a bad person. He is not even necessarily a dope, chump, a boob or a schlemiel. The poor jerk is just...that. A Jerk with a capital J.

Life is not easy for him. When he learns that he is not the natural-born son of the poor black family that has raised him, he sets off to make his independent way in the world. The first ride he thumbs down takes him about 20 yards down the road, and he thinks that's a great start. His first grown-up job pays $1.10 an hour, and he thinks that's good money. His first girlfriend is a leather-clad motorcyclist who crashes through brick walls, and he thinks that's tender and romantic.

Then Navin invents an eyeglass frame that won't slip down your nose, and he becomes an instant millionaire. Unfortunately, the glasses also makes you cross-eyed, so the resulting lawsuits make him a pauper again. When he gets rich, he marries a terrific girl (portrayed by Bernadette Peters). When he gets poor again, he walks out on her, because it turns out that she liked him better when he was poor the first time.

No question about it. The guy is a Jerk. But even a Jerk is entitled to a happy ending.

Steve Martin

Once it's lost, chances are you won't find it.

An ordinary clasp can accidently unfasten in the most unexpected places. If that happens, you're likely to lose a cherished treasure.
Speidel's new Sure-On® closure is designed to prevent just that. But contrary to what you might expect, you'll find it much easier to put on and take off.
Speidel has a complete selection of chains in 14K plumb gold, 14K gold overlay and sterling silver, each with the added security and convenience of a matching Sure-On® closure.
Look for the name Speidel on every piece. It's your assurance of fine craftsmanship combined with American ingenuity.

Love Survives Holocaust

A middle-aged New York widower travels with his 23-year-old daughter to the World Gathering of Holocaust Survivors in Israel and has an emotional reunion with the woman he had loved as a teenager, in "Remembrance of Love," airing on NBC's Monday Night at the Movies, Dec. 6 (9-11 p.m.).

In the story, Joseph Rabin (Eric Douglas) is separated from Leah (Chana Eden) when the two are teens in a Polish ghetto during World War II. With his plans to marry thwarted, Rabin manages to survive the war, never learning what became of Leah.

Nearly 40 years later, Rabin (now played by Kirk Douglas, Eric's father) and his daughter (Pam Dawber), travel to participate in a reunion of survivors from around the world. When he arrives in Jerusalem, Rabin attempts to learn once and for all what happened to Leah. He almost gives up when his initial efforts prove fruitless, but the two unexpectedly meet and are overwhelmed by the chance encounter that changes both their lives.

During this time, Marcy — who had come to Israel primarily as an observer to write about her experiences — meets a tough, young Israeli security officer (Yoram Gall) and gradually finds herself falling in love.

As the formal events of the occasion begin, all of the principals are deeply moved by the gathering, which, despite the painful memories, provides the setting for tearful reunions and a united resolve to become a stronger people in the future.

"I didn't want to make another movie this year," said the elder Douglas, explaining how "Remembrance" came to be his choice for his first TV starring movie. "I'd been to Australia (for 'The Man From Snowy River'), and to Texas (for 'Eddie Macon's Run') and to China on a U.S. government-sponsored visit.

"After all that in one year, I just wanted to stay home and rest awhile. But when I read the script of 'Remembrance,' I knew I had to do it. It's a beautiful love story — something I had never done before — and so I said yes."

During a break in shooting in the Middle East, Douglas visited front-line Israeli tank units and, later, visited with U.S. Marines in Beirut.

Top Of The Charts

The biggest-selling record album currently in London is "Birds, Beasts and Flowers," made secretly before her death by Princess Grace of Monaco in England's Wye Valley. Presumably with proceeds to go to charity, the late princess recites poetry from "The Owl and the Pussycat" to "The Proud Horse."

More of Jayne

Jayne Kennedy, aside from being signed as the first femme to host "The Greatest Sports Legends" series, has been signed to a six-figure deal as spokesperson for Coca-Cola, in the print medium as well as on radio and TV.

Name Change

Michael Corbett, who plays on "Search for Tomorrow," was surprised that a female fan changed her family name in his honor. When the actor was on another daytime drama, the woman named her first child Michael Corbett, though she had a different surname from her deceased husband.

Later, the second child was named Michele Corbett, and recently the third was dubbed Corbett Michael. Said bewildered Corbett: "It's very, very flattering."

Michele Will Tell

DEAR MICHELE: I would like some information about Isabel Sanford of "The Jeffersons." Where can I write to her and Nell Carter of "Gimme A Break." PAUL DAVIS, CATAWBA, N.C.

TO PAUL IN CATAWBA: Isabel was born on August 29 in New York City. She began acting in elementary-school plays and continued through high school. Upon graduation from high school, she joined the American Negro Theater. Following several off-Broadway assignments, Isabel decided "to become a movie star" and journeyed to Hollywood. Several guest-starring roles in various series eventually led to our favorite role — that of Louise Jefferson. Miss Sanford is a widow and has three grown children, Pamela, Eric and Sanford. Fans may write to her in c/o "The Jeffersons," CBS-TV, 51 W. 52 Street, N.Y., N.Y., 10019; and Nell Carter in c/o "Gimme A Break," NBC-TV, 30 Rockefeller Plaza, N.Y., N.Y., 10020.

DEAR MICHELE: Could you please give me some information on the actor who portrays Brian McFadden on "Seven Brides for Seven Brothers"? Where can I write to him? ANN JASPER, WALSTONBURG, N.C.

TO ANN IN WALSTONBURG: Drake Hogestyn appears as Brian on the new series. Born in Fort Wayne, Indiana, on September 29, his name in Dutch means "hard stone." From as far back as he can remember, he wanted to be a professional baseball player. Upon graduation from the University of South Florida, with a B.A. degree in microbiology, and a minor in theater arts, Drake was drafted by the New York Yankees organization, for which he played two years and reached the AA level. However, repeated injuries forced an early end to his baseball career. Drake is single and lives in Malibu. His love of baseball continues and in his free time he plays, watches and talks baseball, swims and runs at the beach to keep fit. Write to him in c/o the series, CBS-TV, 51 W. 52 Street, N.Y., N.Y., 10019.

(FOR ANSWERS TO YOUR QUESTIONS ABOUT TV SHOWS AND PERSONALITIES, WRITE TO 'MICHELE,' c/o The Greenville Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 30, Hopewell, Va. 23860.)

'The Hardest Role I Have Ever Done'

"This is the first time I have ever played a real-life person. It's usually fiction, and you just use your imagination. Now there is an added responsibility, knowing there is a specific way this person was and is."

So says the willowy Sondra Locke of her starring role as Rosemary Clooney in "Rosie: The Rosemary Clooney Story," airing on The CBS Wednesday Night Movies, Dec. 8 (9-11 p.m.). Tony Orlando stars as Jose Ferrer and Penelope Milford as Miss Clooney's younger sister, Betty Clooney.

"I was so flattered to learn Rosemary wanted me to portray her," said Miss Locke. "I want her to be happy with my performance, and I felt the constant pressure of trying to live the reality of her life."

The versatile actress first starred in "The Heart Is a Lonely Hunter," which earned her an Academy Award nomination. She followed that with roles in "Willard" and "A Reflection of Fear," and, in recent years, has appeared in a series of films with Clint Eastwood, including "Every Which Way but Loose" and its sequel, "Any Which Way You Can," "Bronco Billy" and "The Outlaw Josey Wales."

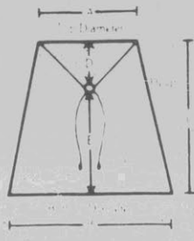

Said Miss Locke: "Normally in films you jump around and shoot a piece here and a piece there. This particular movie, however, covers a period of so many years (in it, she ages from 17 to 40), which adds an extra complication because you are trying to tell so much in such a short time. It's like being in a whirlwind, and it is so easy to lose the concept of where you are. Only when I see the film will it all come together."

Even though Miss Locke does sing ("Any Which Way You Can" features a soundtrack album with her performing several songs), Miss Clooney's voice will be heard throughout the film.

Merry Christmas

DENNIS WEAVER STARS as a man whose eldest daughter returns from the grave to wreak havoc on the family, in "Don't Go To Sleep," airing Friday, Dec. 10 (9-11 p.m.) on ABC.

Daughter Shatters Serenity

A family is pulled to the edge of insanity when the eldest daughter returns from the grave — and tries to take them back with her, one at a time, in "Don't Go to Sleep," airing as The ABC Friday Night Movie, Dec. 10 (9-11 p.m.).

Dennis Weaver, Valerie Harper and Ruth Gordon star in the suspense-filled story of the Hogan family — Phillip, Laura, Kevin, Mary and Grandma — all of whom harbor guilt feelings over the tragic death of Jennifer, the Hogans' eldest daughter.

Following the automobile accident which claimed Jennifer's life, Phillip, Laura, the children and Grandma move to a new house in the country. As they settle into their peaceful surroundings and Phillip is about to start a new job, the family's mood and outlook begin to brighten.

The newfound serenity, however, is promptly shattered when Mary begins to awaken in the middle of the night, terror-stricken and insisting that she can see and talk with her dead sister.

Dennis Weaver stars as Phillip, Valerie Harper as Laura, Ruth Gordon as Grandma, Robin Ignico as Mary, Oliver Robbins as Kevin, Kristin Cumming as Jennifer and Robert Webber as Dr. Cole.

"Don't Go to Sleep" is an Aaron Spelling Production. Richard Lang produced and directed the screenplay by Ned Wynn. Supervising producer is E. Duke Vincent. Executive producers are Aaron Spelling and Douglas S. Cramer.

Martin Short Joins NBC's 'SCTV' Cast

Toronto Second City veteran Martin Short, now a cast member on NBC's "SCTV Network" (Fridays, 12:30-2 a.m.), says that in the three-year interim period during which the focus of his career shifted away from Canada, he never thought of himself as having "gone to Hollywood," so to speak.

"I always viewed Los Angeles as going to boarding school, and would come back to Toronto for Christmas and Easter and summer breaks when I could," Short said.

Short left the Second City stage revue in Toronto because, he says, "The reality of being an actor in Canada is that if you're ambitious you look to the south."

Landing a role in the former ABC series "The Association," Short says he found that the big difference was "I was asked to be an actor." The reference is to the fact that, generally, as a regular in a primetime series — albeit a comedy series with an ensemble — "you don't write the lines and you don't do the rewrites."

Honored Interest

Actor Mark Goddard, who plays Lt. Paul Reed on "The Doctors," has a new sporting interest off the set. The animal lover recently bought a race horse named Be Honored. The steed has done fairly well in some races around New England, so Mark plans to bring his prize to the Meadowlands near New York, where he hopes he'll have some "hot tips" for his fellow cast members.

Perfect Casting

It was strictly Bruce Weitz's interpretation of the character which won him his role on "Hill Street Blues." During the audition he jumped upon Grant Tinker's desk, made strange faces and fell off — obviously a perfect Detective Belker.

QUARTERBACK RICHARD TODD will be at the helm of the New York Jets when they meet the Detroit Lions on "ABC's NFL Monday Night Football," Dec. 6 (9-midnight).

Jets Versus Lions On ABC

Monday evenings are looking familiar again to sports fans since ABC has settled into its fall and winter habit of presenting "NFL Monday Night Football." This week's contest, airing on Dec. 6 (9 p.m.-midnight), pits the New York Jets against the Detroit Lions.

The Jets responded well in their first game after the eight-week strike, swamping the Baltimore Colts 37-0 (the most one-sided victory in 10 years for New York), while running back Freeman McNeil racked up over 100 yards for the third time in three games (making him the only player in Jets history to accomplish that feat), and quarterback Richard Todd passed for two touchdowns.

The Lions were reintroduced to the gridiron with a little less celebration — falling unexpectedly to the Chicago Bears 20-17.

The Jets head coach, Walt Michaels, has repeatedly expressed confidence in Todd's passing ability and the 29-year-old from Alabama has given Michaels every reason to continue.

"Quarterbacks start to come into their own in their sixth, seventh, eighth and ninth years," said Michaels. "Richard is now at that point (7th season). He displayed important leadership qualities last year playing hurt (Todd played with a cracked rib) in the middle of the playoff drive and showed he could bring the team from behind. His leadership was certainly recognized by his teammates who selected him as their MVP."

Todd agrees that his seven years in the NFL have given him solid footing as a quarterback and a team leader. "I think I've come a long way just through experience and through hard knocks," he said. "I think I became more of a leader through example. I've never been a rah-rah type guy who leads people in cheers. I think I was more consistent last season, and this year I'll try to be more consistent."

Among Todd's favorite receivers are wide receivers Wesley Walker and Johnny "Lam" Jones. "Wesley is one of the most dangerous deep threats in the league," said Michaels. "He opens up our running game and the double coverage he draws helps the other receivers get open, too." Walker shook off the cobwebs from the strike by snagging four catches for 84 yards in the Jets' drubbing of the Colts.

Jones also returned in strong form against the Colts, catching 3 passes for 42 yards, including a 23-yarder for a touchdown. Of Jones, who is now in his third season with New York, Michaels said: "He will continue to improve as he gains confidence and gets more playing time."

Sonic Hotline

As the 1982-83 NBA season gets underway, the Seattle SuperSonics are hot. Their early season success has prompted The Seattle Post-Intelligencer newspaper to sponsor a 24-hour "Hotline" to keep the press and the fans informed. The daily taped message features actualities, news releases, practice and travel schedules, and promotional information.

TV Chatter

By Polly Vonetes

Loyal fans of the "Love, Sidney" series strongly objected to GLADYS KNIGHT'S version of the theme song. They wanted and they got back the original trio of cast members - TONY RANDALL, SWOOSIE KURTZ and KALEENA KIFF — singing the theme. Just proves that the networks are eager to please the fans and will listen if you object often and loud enough.

Milwaukee pitcher DON SUTTON has been signed to join JOE DON BAKER in his big-screen movie, "The Babe Ruth Story." Don's role will be that of TOM ZACHARY, the Washington Senators' pitcher who served Babe the pitch for his record-breaking 60th home run.

JOHNNY MATHIS and DENEICE WILLIAMS have just recorded the theme song from the series "Family Ties," which is titled "Without Us."

OLIVIA NEWTON-JOHN is about to become a best-selling author. She has signed a publishing deal to write an exercise book titled "Let's Get Physical."

JOHN DENVER made it very clear to inquiring reporters at Heathrow Airport in London that there would be no reconciliation for him and wife, ANNIE. After two attempts at a reconciliation failed, John says, "I'm afraid we don't even like each other anymore!" Another singer to hit a sour note in his marriage is BILLY JOEL and wife, ELIZABETH — they have made a date to meet in Divorce Court.

ROBERT WAGNER and his three daughters will be starting the new year in a new home in Beverly Hills following the holidays in another home he recently bought in Gstaad, Switzerland.

ANA ALICIA of "Falcon Crest" was inadvertantly involved in the "Son of Sam" case in New York. Now she can calmly relate how, while working on the soap "Ryan's Hope" in New York, she was picked as the next possible victim and for months was protected by detectives ... That's "show biz."

The Basics

These two sweaters form the basis of most sweater thoughts... the Vee-Neck Lambswool pullover and the Shetland Cru-neck. Cox Moore of England knits these garments in their specialized unique manner that results in a pleasing combination of both style and comfort. And a quality product is their watchword...quality in yarn and quality in knitting. The colors will make you want to buy two or three.

WHY AMERICANS LOVE TO LIE

SUZANNE MITCHELL

vice president and director, Dallas Cowboys Cheerleaders

What happens to a woman once she leaves the squad? —R.M., Wilmington, N.C.

In the past, some have left for the bright lights of show biz, but they soon find that when the name and uniform no longer surround them, the lights dim. However, one member of the 1977-78 squad, Tina Gayle Hernandez, has a regular role on TV's CHiPS.

LAINIE KAZAN,

featured in the film My Favorite Year

You've been on many talk shows lately. Do you enjoy spilling your private life on TV? —G.R., Lorain, Ohio

I used to loathe talking about myself, now I just dislike it. Before I appeared on Broadway I was concerned about my image. But when I failed and everyone in show business knew it, I felt I had nothing to lose. What the heck, I went right ahead and spoke. It has given me freedom of sorts. There's nothing anyone else can say about me. It's all been said.

FROM THE "ASK" EDITOR

MASS APPEAL: Rumor has it Tatum O'Neal has been looking into Catholic instruction, ever so quietly, which causes friends to believe that her romance with Anthony Shriver, son of Eunice and Sargent, is really serious. . . . Richard Starkey Sr., father of ex-beatle Ringo Starr, is still a window cleaner in Crewe, England. In case you wondered, the Beatles never sent each other birthday cards ("None of us is sentimental," explained George Harrison). And did you know that, when they were starting out, the group entered only one talent contest, and lost — to a woman making music on a set of spoons. . . . FROM FRANCE WITH LOVE: In Nice, where the new James Bond film, Never Say Never Again, is being filmed, the local press complain that Sean Connery is surrounded by more security than is afforded any head of state . . . . Jihan Sadat, widow of Egypt's assassinated Anwar Sadat, is preparing for her Ph.D. She's not wasting any time either: She gets up at 5:30 A.M., and studies for Tatum O'Neal: Beneath that calm surface, is this little darling going through "catechismic" change?

10 hours straight. . . . That dastardly fellow we love to hate, Larry Hagman, sees himself as a 70-year-old J.R. ("Dallas is an investment for retirement," he says), perhaps in a wheelchair — and still very mean. . . .

PERSONAL PERFORMANCE: The cast of Broadway's Annie has performed often before both the Carter and Reagan White Houses. Here is a comparison of the two Administrations from Annie creator-director Martin Charnin: "When the Carters called, they'd request Annie first, and add, 'make sure Daddy Warbucks comes too.' Now the Reagans ask first for Warbucks and Annie is the one who 'comes too.'". . . If ever a nasty remark is tossed in Brooke Shields's direction, she says she handles it quite nicely, thank you: "I don't fight fire with fire. I stay nice, because I know who I am."

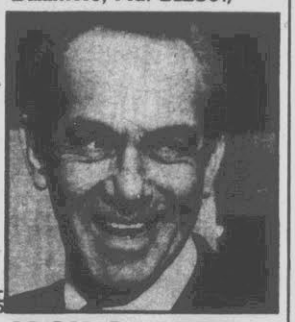

KENNETH JERNIGAN

president, National Federation of the Blind

Over the next 20 years, what new technology will become available to assist the blind? —V.O., Las Vegas, Nev.

Talking clocks, calculators, computer terminals and machines that translate the printed page to spoken words are a few. The real problem of blindness, however, is not lack of eyesight, but lack of opportunity due to misconceptions by the public and the blind themselves. Fortunately, the public and the blind alike are realizing that with training the blind can compete equally with others.

JACK CARTER

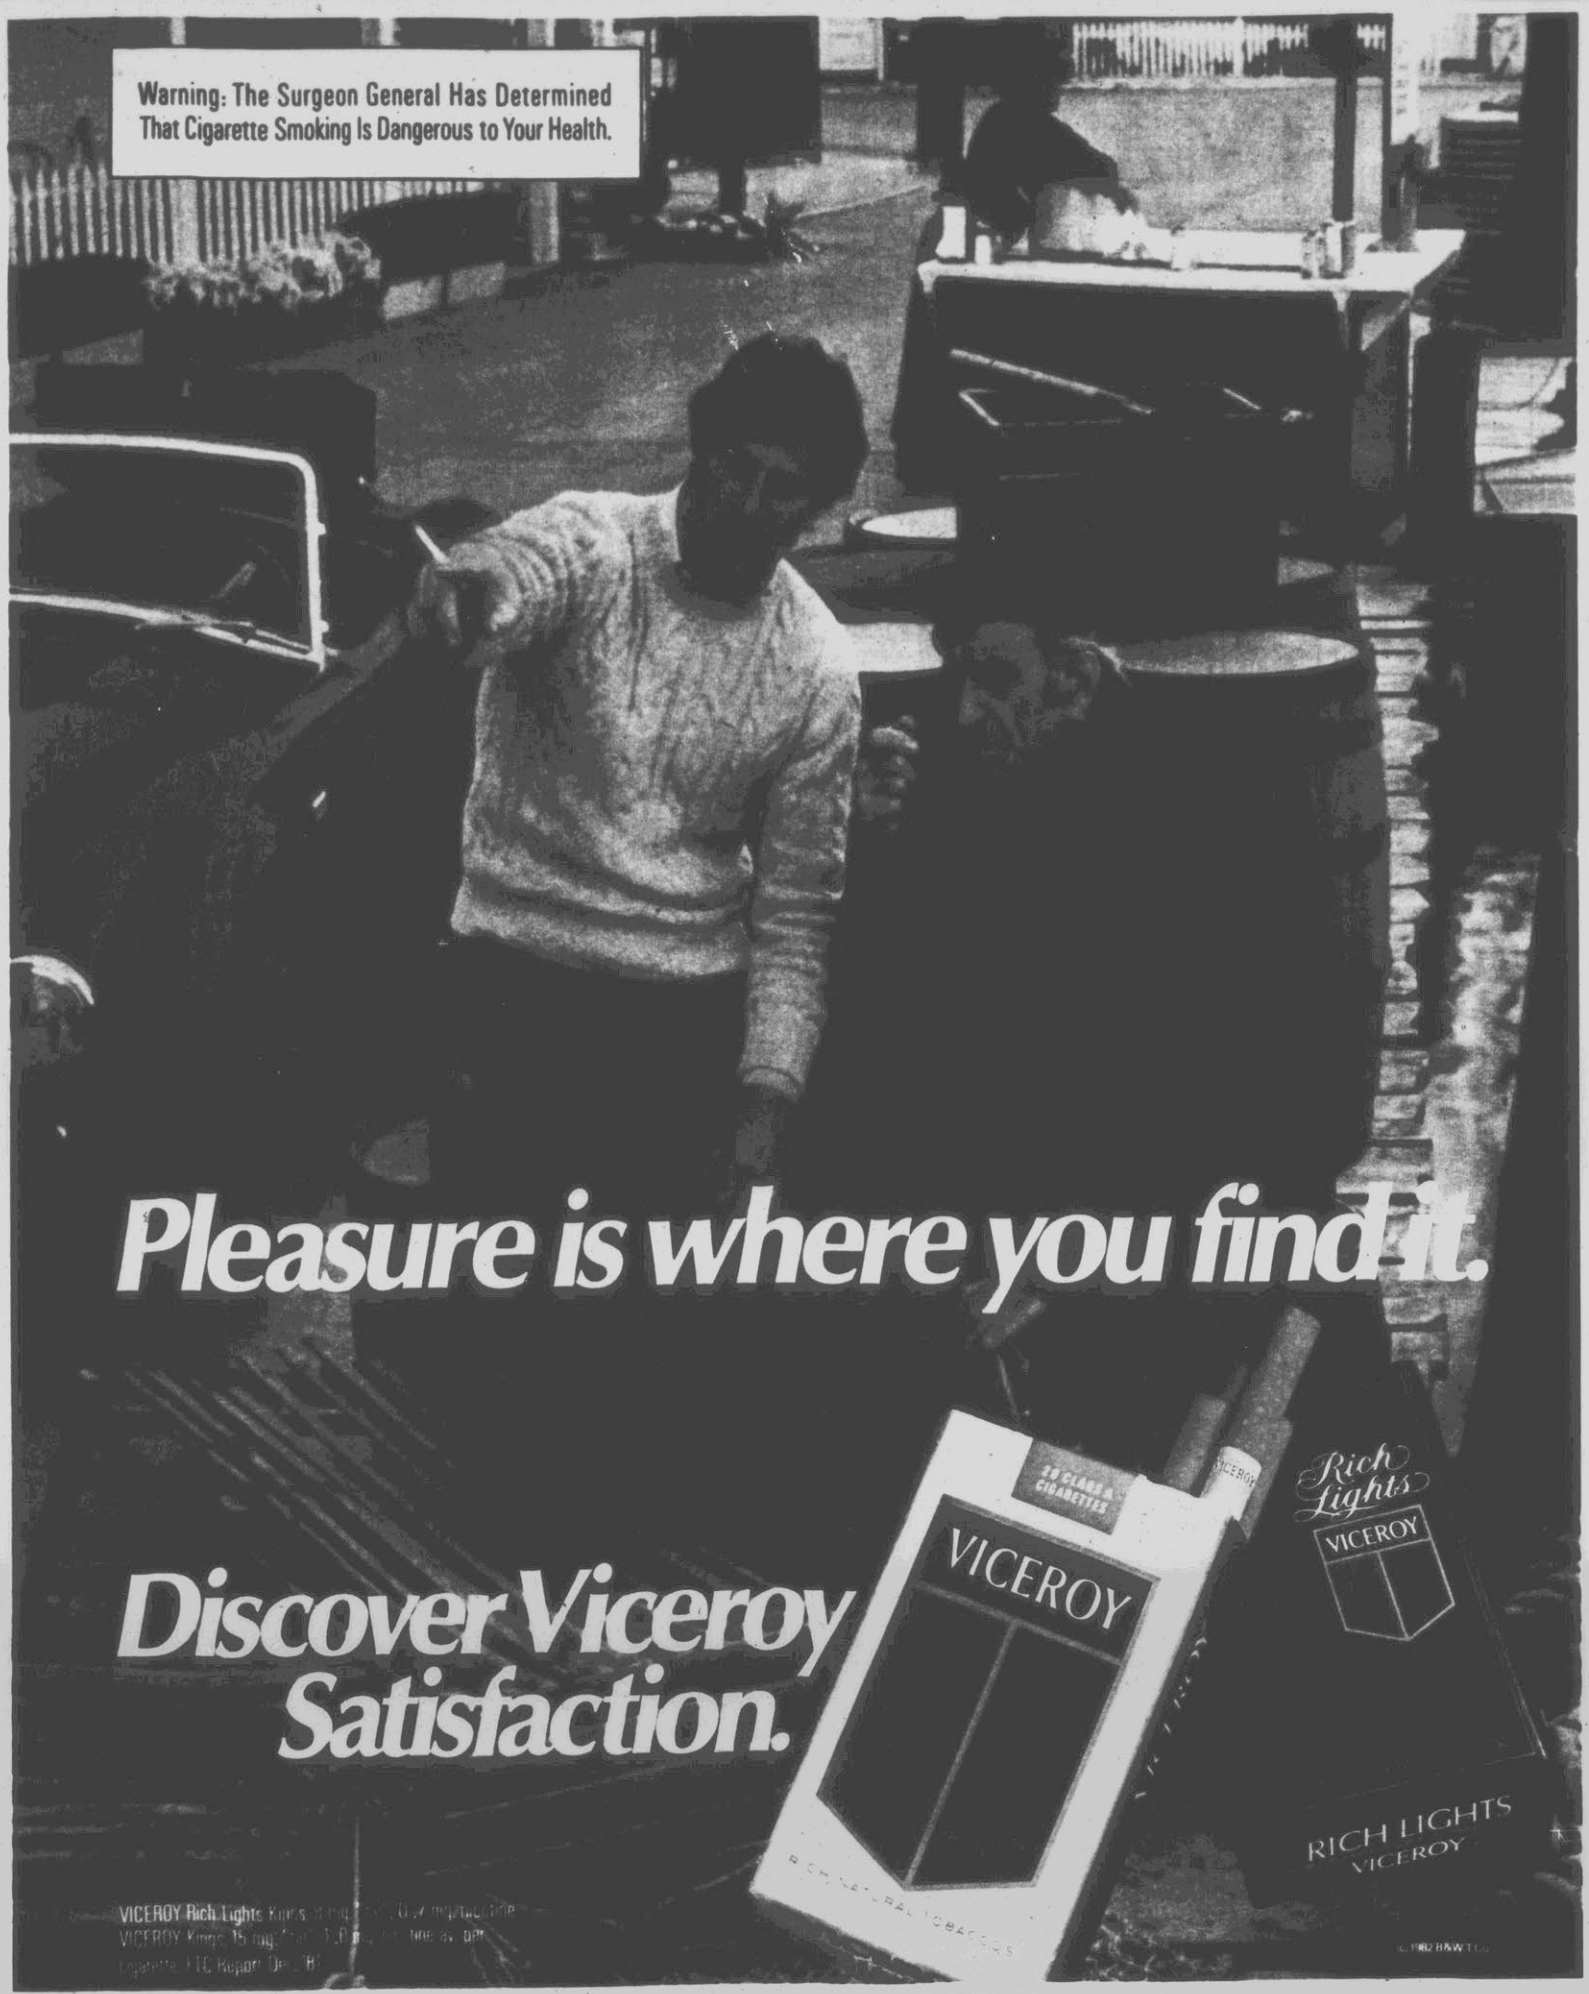

comedian

How has comedy changed since you entered the business? —C.A., Terre Haute, Ind.

Because of the new performers that have come into show business, many more subjects are acceptable now. Almost anything is fair game — war, disease, drugs. But the old-time performers don't deal with such dumb topics. The business, as we knew it, has disappeared.

WHY AMERICANS LOVE TO LIE

Even little lies can be harmful. They're almost always detectable. And that's the truth.

By Sam Keen, Ph.D.

Remember when you told your first lie? And why?

I was 4 years old and heading for high adventure on my tricycle when Mother said, "Don't go any further than the sidewalk in front of the Longs' house."

"I won't," I promised.

But when I came to the corner, Marco Polo beckoned me into the forbidden beyond and I pushed on, finding my own path, tasting the thrill of autonomy. When I returned home, Mother asked where I'd been, and I lied.

Why do individuals lie? Is lying always morally wrong? Or can it be a creative and good thing to do at times? What are the circumstances that are necessary to allow us to tell the truth to one another?

Popular wisdom makes a distinction between white and black lies. We all righteously condemn the outright, sinister, self-serving liar. We agree that it is morally wrong to cheat a friend, to con widows and orphans. Black lies are the stuff of which villains are made. Little white lies, on the other hand, help keep everyone happy. We also tend to make a distinction between our own lies and everyone else's. They lie because they are dishonest, sneaky, immoral, evil, weak or bad. We lie because we are tactful, clever, strategic and don't want to hurt other people's feelings.

It may be true that the truth isn't always such a good thing. Surely, telling a hostess that her meal was terrible or a child that his drawing isn't very well done serves no beneficial purpose. And certainly "telling all" is sometimes just a selfish way to purge ourselves of guilt or anxiety — at the expense of others.

But I think it's essential to realize that white lies are rarely as harmless as they seem, and that the untruths we offer in order to spare feelings can end up hurting others in the long run — because of their possible repercussions, because of the wall they erect between two people in a relationship, because the "deceived" often sense the truth anyway.

Before we can overcome lying, we need to look at why we deceive each other. I suggest that truth-telling is governed by a certain psychological axiom: We can only tell the whole truth in situations of equality.

We first learn to lie when we are small and in an unequal relationship with parents and authorities who have power over us. In our search for autonomy — in being true to ourselves — we inevitably come in conflict with laws, rules and commandments. Many times after I rode my bike beyond the Longs' house, I found it necessary to lie to The Giants — parents, teachers, authorities — in order to preserve the integrity of my own quest. Each of us has a sanctuary within which lives a secret self that we share only with those who cherish us. Lies are always told in a situation where there is a power discrepancy between two persons and where trust is lacking.

The summer when I was 16, and bursting with sap and longing, I was invited one June night to a beach party by the local Queen of the Nile — Jane, by name. I asked Dad's permission and was told that I might go so long as I was back by 11:30 P.M. Haunted by the promise of moonlight, Budweiser and Jane's budding breasts, I pleaded for a later curfew. Dad refused. I retreated and began to weave an intricate web of Our family would have been healthier had we dared to speak our individual truths, risked more conflict, not been afraid of hurting each other.

white lies. At dinner I announced that I had been invited to spend Saturday night and Sunday in a lighthouse. Dad raised no objection. When I returned on Sunday afternoon (from the beach party and sleeping in the woods), Dad asked, "How was the lighthouse?"

"Good," I replied.

And that was all that was ever said. I am certain to this day that Dad knew where I was. Remembering his own youth, he softened his stance as the moral watchdog and pretended to believe my fantastic story.

At the time, my white lies seemed perfectly justified. I gave lip service to Dad's authority, didn't hurt his feelings by defying him and kept the peace. In addition I learned some of the sweet lessons of Eros (but that is another story). Altogether a good lie. Or was it? In recent years I have come to see that our family would have been healthier if we had all openly defied the loving but tyrannical authority of Dad and Mother. Our love would have grown had we dared to speak our individual truths, risked more overt conflict, not been so afraid of hurting one another's feelings. The part of ourselves that we hid from one another by our polite lies — our wildness, our sexuality, our anger, our "badness" — went underground and re-emerged years later as rebellious emotions when we were grown and had families of our own. Today I think that we would have had fewer divorces had we learned to speak the simple truth about our needs and feelings in our original home. In defense of my parents, I must add that they loved us well, but they were, in good Calvinistic fashion, more devoted to the big Truth than to the small, inconvenient truths of feelings and desires.

Within the last decade, psychologists have come to understand that all intimate relationships and families are an intricate system of communication in which the truth is known and told either overtly or covertly, consciously or unconsciously. We are finding out that intimates in fact cannot lie to each other, although they can pretend to lie and deny what they know. Clearly Dad knew I was at the beach party. But consciously or unconsciously he denied what he knew, and I chose to lie because sexuality was not a comfortable issue within our family.

With increasing accuracy psychologists can detect lies and measure their effects by reading body language. If, for instance, we make a videotape of a conversation between a couple where the man is having an affair that his wife "does not know about," we can slow down the film and see the guilty gestures and responses. We can see the shift in the eyes when the husband says, "I was working late at the office," and the tensing in the neck muscles as the wife replies, "You seem to be working more evenings lately." If we hook both up to a lie detector we will find that the heart and pulse rate of each increases and that their hands get clammy when they lie. Later in the evening the lies might be confessed as "impotence" or "frigidity." The body knows the truth and feels stress when it is not confessed. Lying to those we love creates residual tensions in the body which eventually lead to fatigue, depression and disease. The flesh, longing for warmth and ease, has a hidden love for the truth.

We also know from the studies of philosopher and biologist Gregory Bateson that schizophrenia is sometimes caused by a "double bind," a lie that a child is compelled to believe. A mother who acts hatefully but constantly says, "I love you," creates a psychological disease within her child. A father who never has time for his children, but insists that they love and respect him, creates a situation where they must lie in order to survive.

The rule for developing healthy and vital intimate relationships and families seems to be: Make a habit of telling the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth. But first we must develop a climate of trust in which the truth can easily be told.

We are still left with a sizable problem. The world is not composed only of intimate relationships. For the greater part of each day we are forced to relate to persons and corporations who do not care for us as individuals and do not have loving intentions toward us. Do the same dynamics of truth-telling hold for public and private relationships? To what extent can or should we expect to tell the truth to the telephone company or the I.R.S.? Are there different rules for private and public ethics?

The policy of public lying in America became official in May 1960. While piloting a high-altitude U-2 over Russia, Francis Gary Powers was shot down and captured. When the Russians charged that we were spying, President Eisenhower, righteously denied it. Not us. We are the guys in the white hats! Later, when the evidence became overwhelming, Ike — Honest Ike, Kansas gothic, leader of the Crusade in Europe — confessed to the world that he had lied and that, furthermore it was necessary in the defense of freedom and truth to lie, spy and use dirty tricks.

In fact, Americans have probably been no more or less righteous or truthful than other peoples. Our history is filled with broken covenants, discrimination against our minorities, the taking of land from Indians and Mexicans. But through it all we have held to the myth of our honesty: We were George Washington, who might make a mistake, but could not tell a lie; Honest Abe, who walked five miles to return a nickle. We were brought up to believe that honesty was the best policy, a man was as good as his word and the Devil was the father of lies. Other nations might resort to propaganda and suppression of the truth, but we had a Bill of Rights, a free press and a God-given mission to defend The Truth. It was this myth that died in the last two decades.

When Nixon (Ike's Vice) became President, we escalated the slide down the slippery slopes of mendacity and public corruption. In rapid succession we learned that the C.I.A. had overthrown the democratically elected Government of Chile, helped train secret police for the Shah of Iran and tried to assassinate Castro. And the F.B.I. could find nothing better to do than hound and persecute that dangerous criminal, the earlobe pull the cheek rub the mouth cover the nose touch

HOW TO SPOT A LIAR

In ancient China, a suspected wrongdoer was forced by authorities to chew rice powder while being interrogated. If the powder was dry when the accused spit it out afterward, he was found guilty — on the grounds that the stress of lying had blocked his salivary glands and caused a dry mouth.

Actually, there may be a grain of truth in this theory. Studies today indicate that no matter how cool a person may try to act when he lies, his body reveals the tension he's experiencing in very subtle ways. That's the premise behind polygraph machines (lie detectors). They measure changes in blood pressure, breathing and skin conductivity (which reflects perspiration) caused by stress.

But is there any way to spot a liar just by looking at him? One theory holds that people give themselves away when they lie with split-second changes in facial expression—such as a twitch of the eye or a flare of the nostril. These expressions, known as micromomentaries, were studied a few years ago with the aid of visual tapes by Dr. Roger Bennett, now chairman of the journalism department at Southwest Texas State University. He tentatively proved that these expressions — cheek twitches, frowns, tiny smiles, flaring nostrils, blinks, among others — occur at the precise moment you think of telling a lie.

Although the cause of micromomentaries is not known, Bennett suspects that they have to do with the inner turmoil an individual experiences about lying. As you decide to tell a lie, the subconscious directs a micromomentary onto the face but then the conscious erases it a split second later. Though these expressions are very subtle, you can spot them if you look closely.

According to Desmond Morris, author of Manwatching and other books on human behavior, hand-to-face contact — such as the mouth cover, the chin stroke, the earlobe pull, the nose touch, the cheek rub, the eyebrow scratch and the hair groom, — can also be a clue to lying. Morris theorizes that the part of the brain uncomfortable with the lie is trying to "cover up" the deception.

There is, however, one big problem with reading any of these nonverbal clues and it's the same drawback cited by critics of lie detector machines: Though certain body changes do indicate stress, the stress is not necessarily caused by lying. For instance, a person suspected of committing a crime may be tense not because he did it but simply because he is being accused.

WHY WE LIE

Martin Luther King Jr. Then Vietnam came along and things really got bad. Meanwhile on the home front, the news was filled with revelations that some of our biggest corporations bribed and used industrial espionage when necessary. And then, of course, there was Watergate.

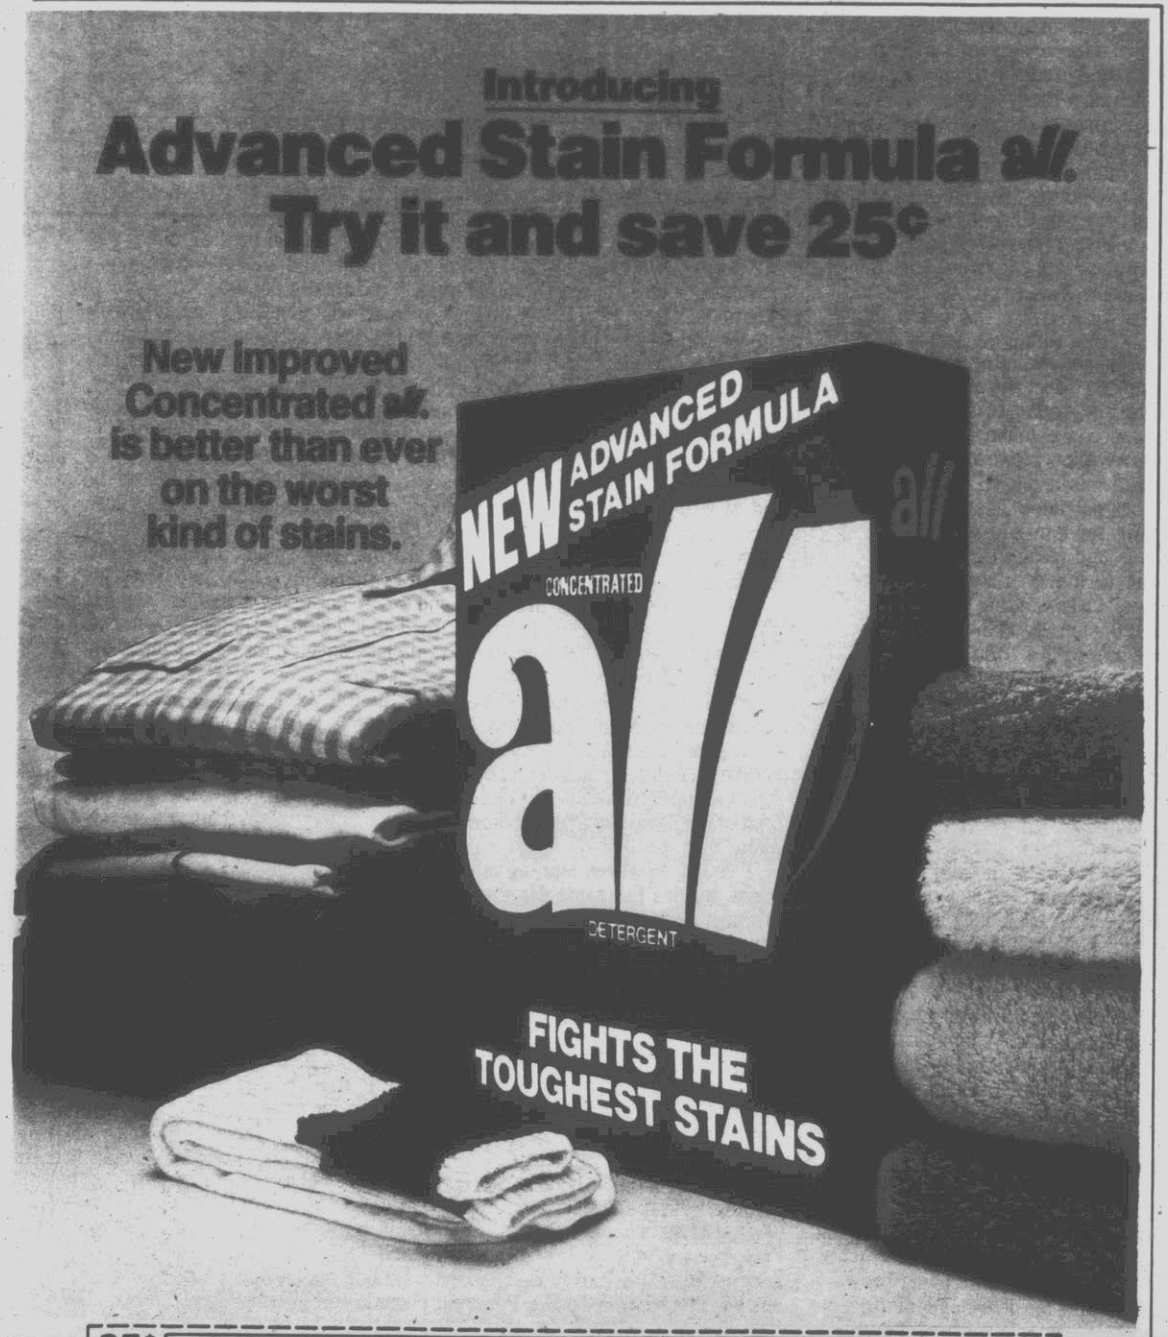

By the year of our bicentennial, the effects of our policy of public lying were measurable. In 1976 the Harris poll showed that 69 percent of Americans believed that "over the last 10 years the country's leaders have consistently lied to the people." Three years later 77 percent of us believed "manufacturers don't care about me." Confidence in our public institutions fell. And if "they" lied to and cheated us, why should we not do the same to them? Tit for tat. Cheating on income tax became as American as apple pie. The I.R.S. pulled its hair and estimated that unreported income from the underground economy cost the Government between $80 billion and $100 billion per year. Corporations reported that pilfering and on-the-job stealing were at an all-time high. Job applicants falsified their credentials. Students cheated. Americans agreed that those who flout the rules are rewarded, while those who observe the rules typically end up empty-handed.

All of this brings us back to the axiom I offered earlier. We can only tell Lies and minor pilfering say to the authorities: You don't care about us, our hope, our welfare, our truth. We are faceless and anonymous to you.

the whole truth in situations of equality. If I consider another person inferior to me, I will not consider that I owe that person the truth. When I reduce another to a slave, a servant, an employee, a customer, an enemy, a number, I judge it permissible to lie to serve my own ends. Likewise if someone in authority considers me an "it," a functionary, a vote, a faceless entity, I feel no obligation to tell that person the truth. Absolute truth-telling (possibly an unreachable ideal) could only exist in a society made up of relationships between persons of equal power and dignity — a true democracy.

If we bear this understanding of the psychodynamics of truth-telling in mind, our public lying appears to be more a symptom than a cause of a disease. Our lies contain a message. They tell us, first, that individuals in our society feel themselves to be in an unequal conflict with authorities, corporations and institutions. We feel vulnerable, powerless and ignored. When, for instance, tax evasion becomes widespread among formerly law-abiding citizens, it is time to stop looking at it as a sign of moral degeneracy and start recognizing that it is one very effective way in which disenfranchised people vote. Withholding taxes has always been a way in which citizens who had no other form of power expressed their disapproval. Our lies and Give the Kodak disc camera and watch it light up the holidays. Every one and a third seconds.

The remarkable film disc that helps to make disc photography decision-free.

The Kodak disc camera knows when to flash. And it can flash again in just one and a third seconds.

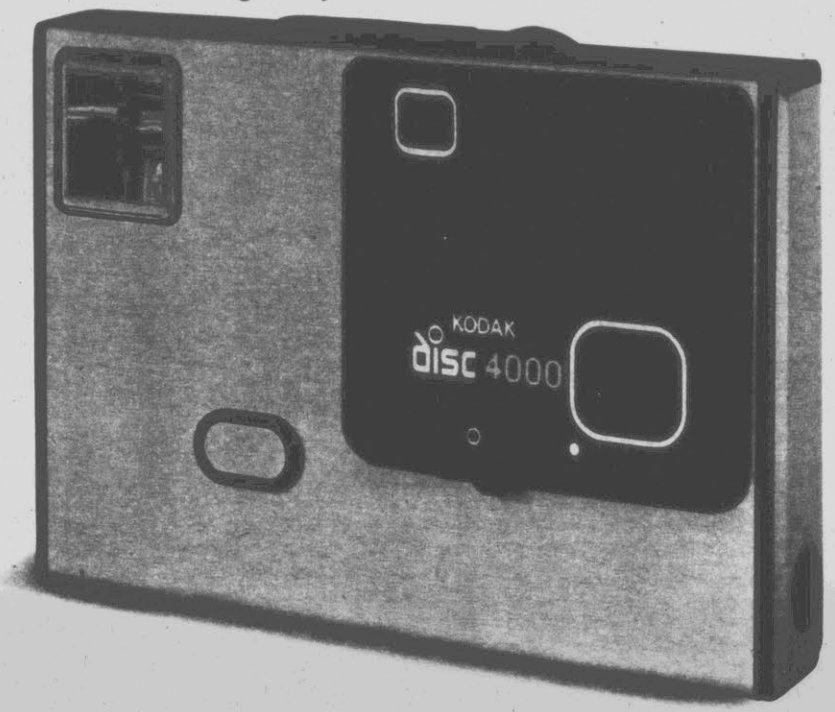

In bright light, it takes pictures even faster. Every half second.

How did Kodak build all this into a camera small enough to fit in the palm of your hand?

With a brand-new invention. The film disc. A disc so thin, there's room in the camera for a whole cluster of electronics. Each disc gives you 15 beautiful, full-size color pictures. And the lens? All glass. And a fast f/2.8.

Give the Kodak disc camera this holiday season.

It'll help someone you love capture memories faster and easier than ever before.

WHY WE LIE

minor pilfering say to the authorities: You don't care about us, our hope, our welfare, our truth. We are faceless and anonymous to you, so we will not be truthful to you.

It is unfair to expect individuals to bear the burden of a moral renewal that can only be accomplished by a radical change in our corporate structures. Corporations and bureaucracies are not merely a collection of individuals. They are entities with a will to survive and maximize their own power. To date we have ignored the extent to which corporate bodies rather than individual citizens are responsible for creating the moral climate of a nation. If our institutions seek only their own profit, power and self-preservation they end up not only destroying themselves but impoverishing the body-politic. For instance, the American automobile industry is sick unto death because neither the manufacturers nor the unions had the courage to ask the moral question: "What kind of automobiles should we be making and driving in a world with declining resources." It lost the trust of the public when it continued to make gas-guzzling cars that needed to be repaired shortly after they left the showroom floor in a time that was calling for conservation of resources, voluntary simplicity, quality and economy.

American society faces an era in which we will prosper only if the leaders of our major corporations and Government realize that their first task is the re-creation of trust. Business and Government must change their ways in order to deserve a good reputation. For the next generation the bottom line is not profit but the creation of a public ethic. We need manufacturers and union leaders who will insist upon producing goods that are appropriate, durable and excellent; politicians who will abandon rhetoric; educators who will teach us to resist the techniques of persuasion and propaganda.

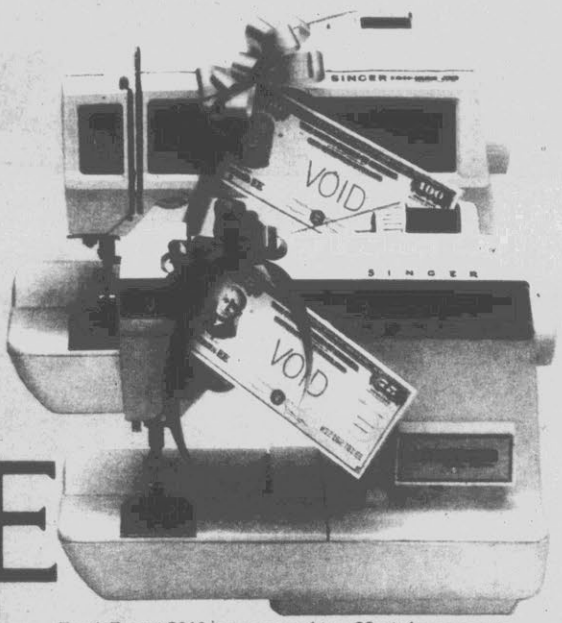

Unless we recover the habit of public honesty, we will be unable to create a moral climate within which individuals feel sufficiently important, powerful and equal enough to tell their own private truths. FW

LIES WE LOVE TO TELL

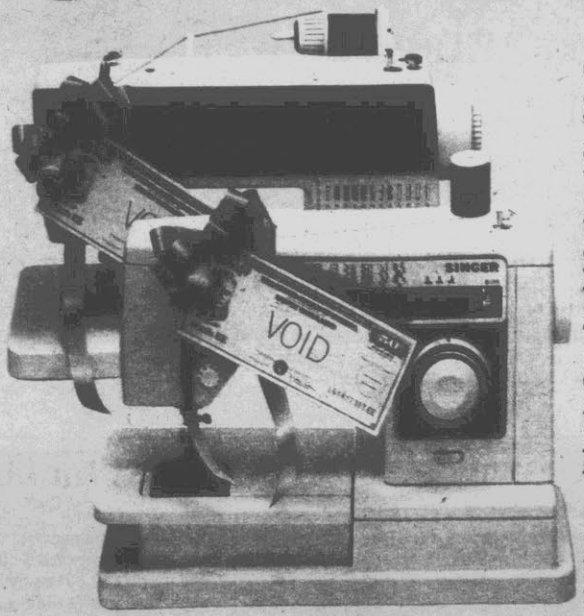

Even the best among us will admit to telling an occasional white lie. But in truth, we may be telling far more lies than we realize. Studies by Dr. Jerald Jellison, associate professor of psychology at the University of Southern California, have indicated that many people tell up to a whopping 50 lies a day.

WHY WE LIE

psychology at Western Washington University has also found in research on lying that Americans tend to be very active deceivers. "Almost everybody lies more than they think," he reports. "It's even been said that if we had to live one day without telling a lie, it would be extraordinarily difficult."

Why are we telling so many lies? Jellison says that, in general, we lie to protect ourselves and to conceal petty self interest. "We want to create impressions in others that we're all good, that we have the highest motives when actually we have very personal goals."

Interestingly, even some animals appear to be capable of "lying." According to Dr. Emil Menzel, professor of psychology at the State University of New York at Stony Brook, animals in the wild have been observed deceiving one another when looking for food. An animal who comes upon a supply of food will sometimes lead another animal in the wrong direction. Also, researchers who train chimpanzees to speak with symbols and gestures have found that the chimps like to occasionally tease them by giving the wrong answers to questions.

In the case of humans, we may prevaricate a lot but we're not always very original. In his studies, Dr. Jellison found the following to be the most often told lies.

"I was only following orders. I was only doing what I was told."

"I was only kidding. Can't you take a joke?"

"I was only trying to help."

"I'm sorry."

"I don't know what my serve will be like; that old football injury is acting up."

"Not tonight, I have a headache."

"Better late than never."

"I had to work late."

"I didn't want to hurt your feelings."

"I'll get right on it."

"I'll do it tomorrow."

"We must have lunch sometime."

"I don't expect anything in return."

"Of course, I care about you, it's just that. . . ."

"I never lie."

1. ALMOND CHOCOLATE TORTE

Elegant party dessert or holiday gift. Rich chocolate flavor!

- 2½ cups Blue Diamond® Blanched Whole Almonds, toasted
- 9 ounces semi-sweet chocolate
- ¼ cup butter
- 6 eggs, beaten
- ¾ cup sugar
- 2 tablespoons flour
- ¼ cup brandy (or 2 teaspoons brandy extract)
- Chocolate Glaze (recipe follows)

Preheat oven to 350°F. In food processor or blender, finely grind 1 cup of the almonds; reserve remaining whole almonds for garnish. Generously butter a 9-inch cake pan; sprinkle sides and bottom with 2 tablespoons of the ground almonds; set aside. Melt chocolate and butter in top of double boiler over simmering water. In large bowl, beat eggs with sugar. Beat in chocolate mixture. Beat in flour, remaining ground almonds and brandy. Pour into prepared pan. Bake about 25 minutes, or until toothpick inserted in center comes out almost clean. Cool 10 minutes. Invert torte onto wire rack; remove pan. Cool completely. Meanwhile, prepare Chocolate Glaze. Pour glaze over torte, spreading over top and sides with spatula. Transfer torte to serving plate. Allow glaze to set. Arrange whole almonds, points towards center, in circle around outer edge. Working towards center, repeat circles, overlapping almonds slightly. Makes 10 to 12 servings.

Chocolate Glaze

- 6 tablespoons water
- 3 tablespoons sugar
- 3 ounces semi-sweet chocolate
- 1 tablespoon brandy (or 1 teaspoon brandy extract)

In small saucepan, simmer water and sugar together until sugar dissolves. Add chocolate and brandy. Simmer a few minutes until chocolate melts and glaze coats back of spoon.

2. ALMOND BUTTER CRUNCH WHEELS

Easy enough for teenagers to make. Gift wrap the whole disk, or break into pieces and put in a jar.

- 1 cup Blue Diamond® Blanched Slivered Almonds
- ½ cup butter
- ½ cup sugar
- 1 tablespoon light corn syrup

Line bottom and sides of an 8 or 9-inch cake pan with aluminum foil (not plastic wrap or wax paper). Butter foil heavily. Set aside. Combine almonds, butter, sugar and corn syrup in 10-inch skillet. Bring to a boil over medium heat, stirring constantly. Boil, stirring constantly, until mixture turns golden brown, about 5 to 6 minutes. Working quickly, spread candy in prepared pan. Cool about 15 minutes, or until firm. Remove candy from pan by lifting edges of foil. Peel off foil. Cool thoroughly. Candy may be presented as a disk or broken into pieces. Makes about ¾ pound.

3. ALMOND BANANA NUT BREAD

Make several for friends and family. . . gift wrap in cellophane.

- 2 cups ripe banana purée (about 3 large bananas)
- ½ cup vegetable oil
- ½ cup granulated sugar
- ½ cup light brown sugar, firmly packed
- 3 eggs
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
- 2 cups flour
- 1 teaspoon baking soda
- ½ teaspoon baking powder
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 1¼ cups Blue Diamond® Chopped Natural Almonds, toasted

Preheat oven to 350°F. Grease and flour two 7¾ x 3⅝ x 2¼-inch loaf pans. Set aside. Beat first 6 ingredients together. Combine next 4 ingredients and stir into banana mixture. Reserving 2 tablespoons of almonds for top, stir remaining almonds into batter.

Divide batter evenly between the loaf pans, sprinkle each loaf with 1 tablespoon almonds. Bake about 50 minutes, or until toothpick inserted in center comes out clean. (If browning too quickly, cover tops loosely with foil.) Cool in pans 10 minutes; turn out on wire rack and cool thoroughly. Makes 2 loaves.

ROACH PRUFE, #1 in University Tests

In a report released by the UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA and published by the ENTOMOLOGICAL SOCIETY OF AMERICA, eight commercial and test products that included a broad spectrum of insecticides were tested against a product called "ROACH PRUFE." The tests were conducted in heavily infested apartments and showed at the end of the 8 week test period that with a single application of ROACH PRUFE in each apartment, the roach population was reduced by an average 99.5%. By comparison, with the worst results were two widely recognized insecticides currently used in aerosols and applied by exterminators. They showed a 0% (no) reduction at the end of the 8 week tests.

Commenting in a letter, the University researchers stated: "Our experience under field conditions has shown that when properly applied, the ROACH PRUFE formula provides a degree of cockroach control that is usually superior to all other registered commercial or consumer products."

Disease Carriers

Odorless, Easy To Apply

Alan Brite, holder of 15 U.S. and foreign patents has just been awarded the first of 3 U.S. patents pending on ROACH PRUFE. Brite says: "Because roaches simply do not recognize ROACH PRUFE as an insecticide, they do not try to avoid it by scattering to other parts of your residence as they do with other insecticides. Plus the electrostatically charged powder sticks to their bodies. They then carry the powder back into the walls spreading it among the other roaches. The result is you kill not only the roaches you see, but also those hiding and multiplying in the walls."

ROACH PRUFE is odorless, non-evaporating, non-staining and non-flammable. The powder is simply applied with a teaspoon under kitchen appliances and in other hidden areas. It can be used in homes, schools, hospitals, restaurants, plus new construction.

If ROACH PRUFE is not available at your local hardware store, the manufacturer will be glad to send it to you. To obtain a one pound container, just send a check or money order for $8.90, which includes postage. Add tax if you live in California. One pound covers up to a 9 room residence. You'll need an extra pound for a basement or garage. Send to Copper Brite, Inc., Dept. 12 at 5147 W. Jefferson Blvd., Los Angeles, Ca. 90016. Copies of the University test are available by sending a self-addressed stamped envelope to Copper Brite, Inc., Dept. A.

INTERVIEW

A TALK WITH LANA TURNER

Philippe Ledru/Sygma

She was the stuff dreams are made of. Discovered at 15 in a Hollywood soda shoppe, sultry Lana Turner went on to star in more than 50 movies, including the sizzling original version of The Postman Always Rings Twice and Peyton Place, for which she won an Academy Award nomination. Offscreen, her life was anything but dreamy. She was married seven times and suffered through several unhappy love affairs, including a relationship with alleged mobster Johnny Stompanato, who was stabbed to death by Turner's frightened daughter, Cheryl. Spells of depression and alcoholism persisted. "In 1980 I was on a serious downhill slide," Turner, now 61, confides in her newly published, best-selling memoir, Lana: The Lady, the Legend, the Truth. But she's gotten her act together, appearing frequently on CBS' Falcon Crest, and today, as she told FAMILY WEEKLY's Mary Ellin Barrett, "I've found a peace of mind of my own."

Q: You write in your book, "I've always been portrayed as a sexy woman, and that's wrong." Does this mean you've never really defined yourself as sexy offscreen?

Turner: Let me put it to you the only way I know how. From 16 on, every place I looked, every magazine I picked up, every description, "sex symbol," "sex symbol," "sex symbol," until it became psychologically a real turn-off to me because I don't think of myself truly as a sex symbol. Now, I am a sensuous woman, and a sensual woman, yes, but there's a broad difference there. Sexy is all exterior and that's because of the bosom and the roles I played, and so on and so forth. That's all they could think about. But it drove me up the wall. I couldn't hand out pamphlets saying, "honest to God, fellows, I'm not." But I'm sure that I just disappointed some gentlemen because I didn't turn out to be as sexy as they thought I was going to be. The sex never meant that much to me.

Q: Is it true that you were wearing a sweater when you were discovered?

Turner: No, a little blouse and skirt.

Q: Why did you cry the first time you saw yourself on screen?

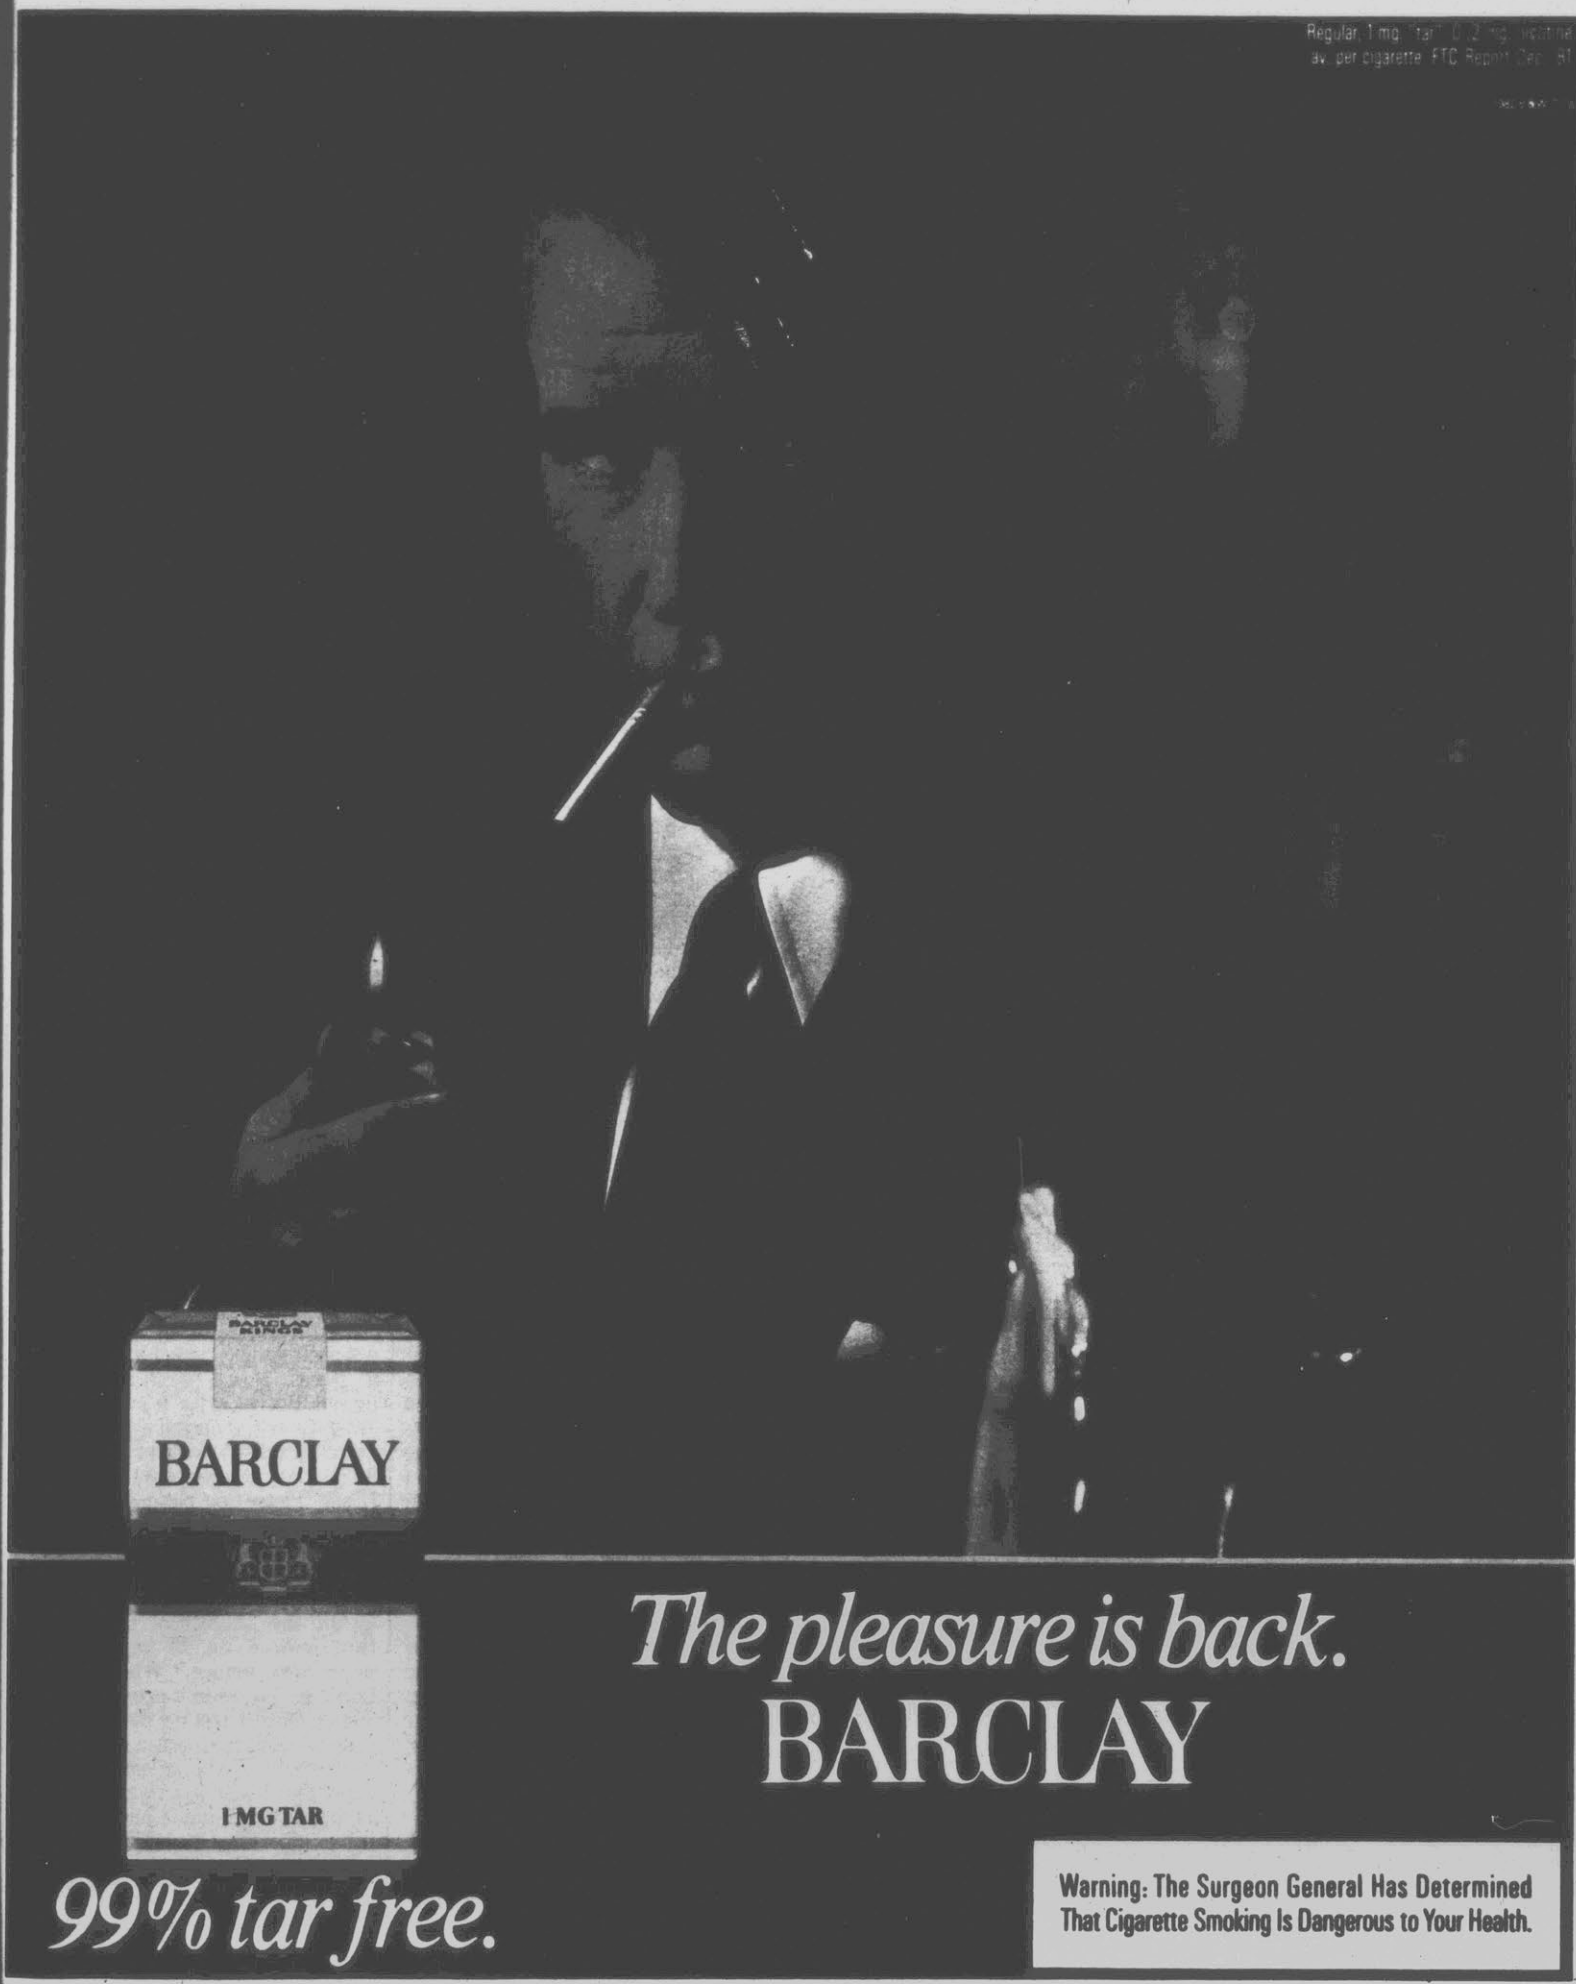

Turner: Out of absolute embarrassment. I just died of embarrassment because I had never seen myself walk before. At 16, I knew I had a body but so did my girlfriends. I was never aware of it until I saw that creature walking and the bosoms were moving a bit. Well, it was my natural walk. I mean, that's the way I walked. And I haven't changed my walk since. But all of a sudden — the wolf whistles. And actually, I wasn't even that large. I wore a 34B then and it's a 34B now.

Q: As a young actress, you posed for publicity shots with Ronald Reagan. Is he a better President than he was an actor?

Turner: Now how could I answer that? You see, I happen to like Ronald — Mr. President — very, very much. I've seen him throughout the years at parties and I adore Nancy. But I never dated him.

Q: Why were you always attracted to the wrong man?

Turner: I can only say that I was gullible and vulnerable and I took people at face value. I didn't search into them — this is a very handsome facade but what's behind it? Today I do that and that's why I'm not emotionally involved

"Portable Garage" Car & Boat Tarp Only $7.98

If You Act Within Next 30 Days

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov., 1982 —International Mail Marketing will send any consumer who sees this notice a giant "Portable Garage" Car & Boat Tarpaulin for just $7.98 if your response is received within 30 days. This is a huge, 24' x 12' tarp constructed of heavy-gauge polyvinyl and polyethelene with eight reinforced tybek grommets to insure tie-down protection from rain, sleet, snow, dust, dirt, or salt spray. "Portable Garage" is large enough to cover any car, even the biggest limousine or station wagon. It is also useful to protect boats and small trucks, barbecues, garden tractors, lawn and patio furniture or a woodpile from rough winter weather.

Each tarp comes backed by an unconditional, iron-clad guarantee of satisfaction—it must meet or exceed your every expectation or return it at any time within 30 days for prompt refund of purchase price. You may order two tarps for only $15; three for only $22; four at just $28; and five for only $33! These are commercial-grade industrial-strength tarpaulins suitable for even the most rugged use. However, because of the special low price, we must restrict requests to private consumers only; no industrial user or dealer requests will be accepted. There is a further limit of five (5) tarps per request at this low price.

To request your tarp, please send your name and address, plus appropriate payment for each tarp requested and $2.00 per order for postage and handling, no matter how many tarps you are ordering to: International Mail Marketing, Dept. GX-2250 , 390 Pike Road, Huntingdon Valley, PA 19006 within the next thirty days. Credit card orders will also be accepted; simply note name of card, account number, and expiration date of card on the same paper as your name and address when ordering.

LANA TURNER

Movie Still Archives

In the 40's, Turner posed as a sex symbol but never really felt like one.

with any gentleman, and I certainly have no plans to be because I love my new independence and I like the woman that I am today, and it seems, in retrospect, of course, that I always thought that a man would have the answers to my happiness. When two people are courting each one puts his best foot forward. My God, you never know a person until you live with him. But in those days, if you fell in love, you married. You just did it. You might sleep together but one of you had to go home to your own house. It was terribly, terribly difficult in those days. It's not like today where you can live with a man and find out just what it's like under the same roof. Now they can do that. I think it's a lot healthier.

Q: You write that a couple of your husbands cheated on you. Did you ever cheat on them?
Turner: No. That is one thing about me. One man at a time. I loved, adored and worshipped them. I never... the thought of flirting with anyone else never entered my mind. So then I'd get a double whammy, so to speak, when I found out that they were cheating on me when I had been so true to them. That used to hurt like hell.

Q: Now that you're not involved with a man, do you feel lonely?
Turner: I'm never lonely. I can enjoy my own company. I used to feel I had to lean on men but when the crises came I was always the stronger one and they would crumble. I would lose respect for them and love went right with it.

Q: Would you ever marry again?
Turner: No, ma'am. I am not planning it. I'm not searching for it. You see, I was always searching for love. I was searching for the man. But let's say that I met someone, that I really felt attracted and felt that I could open up my heart again. I would definitely try living with him without any paperwork because I've been through those fires seven times and that was too much.

Q: Why do men make such fools of themselves over blond women?
Turner: All the attention goes to the blonde whereas the brunette is probably so much lovelier and more intelligent but it takes her a longer time to get attention. Many men end up marrying the brunettes after the glitz of the blondes.

Q: What was the biggest mistake you ever made?
Turner: Well there would be two: getting involved with Stompanato, which was innocent on my part at the beginning. And once I was trapped I couldn't get away. As long as I live I can never get rid of it. But at least I told the truth about it and not the vicious lies that were going on for years, that I walked in on my daughter and he in bed—now really—or that she walked in on us in bed. I mean, such untruths... and the last and definite one was marrying my seventh husband, the hypnotist. That was one of my more, well, just plain dumb things to do. And I know I'm teased about it and I say I wish I could prove that he hypnotized me. But I have no proof.

Q: Do you think of yourself as a strong person?
Turner: I do now. I know who I am, where I am going. I have a wacky sense of humor and it is what has saved me. Without it I'd be in a booby hatch.

Q: Can you crystallize your philosophy of life into a sentence or two?
Turner: Trying to keep calm, even when everything around me is falling to pieces. Now I don't say formal prayers. But before I go to sleep, I'll say, "Well, God, how do you figure it went today?" just like I would to a friend, or if I'm a little worried about something I'll say, "Please God, please give me the courage and the energy to get through these next few hours and to keep my cool and not let anything jar me."

Q: On the subject of reincarnation, you write, "I believe I've been here before." Who do you think you were in a previous life?
Turner: Once I was an Egyptian and then an American Indian, because I relate to those two groups deeply. I know that I was of a royal family in Egypt, but not Cleopatra, and I was of a higher tribe. What the hell I'll be next I haven't a clue. But I'll be back. FW

FOOD

THE ONLY FRUITCAKE RECIPE YOU'LL EVER WANT

By Marilyn Hansen

Old-Time Molasses Fruitcake is not only one of the most popular recipes FAMILY WEEKLY has ever published but also, even if you've never baked a fruitcake before, so easy to make.

OLD-TIME MOLASSES FRUITCAKE

- 3 cups (one 15-oz. pkg.) dark raisins or 3 cups chopped dates or pitted prunes
- 3 cups (15-oz. pkg.) golden raisins or 3 cups dried apricots, chopped
- 3 pkgs. (16-oz. size) mixed candied fruit
- ¼ cup brandy, rum or apple juice
- 3 cups butter, margarine or shortening
- 2½ cups sugar
- 12 eggs
- 1 tablespoon vanilla extract
- 1 bottle (12 oz.) dark molasses
- 1 tablespoon grated orange rind
- 1 grated lemon rind
- 1 pkg. (2 lbs.) all-purpose flour or 7 cups unsifted all-purpose flour
- 2 teaspoons baking soda
- 2 teaspoons salt
- 2 tablespoons ground cinnamon
- 2 tablespoons ground nutmeg
- 1 tablespoon ground cloves
- 2 cans (8-oz. size) or 4 cups walnuts, coarsely chopped
- ½ to 1 cup brandy or apple juice
- ½ cup light corn syrup
- 2 tablespoons water
- Candied cherry halves, citron and walnut halves for garnish

1. In a large bowl, combine dark raisins, golden raisins, apricots and mixed candied fruit. Toss with brandy. Cover with plastic film and allow to soak overnight at room temperature.

2. Next day, preheat oven to 300°. Tear off four 13 × 18-inch sheets of heavy-duty foil and line four 9 × 5 × 3-inch loaf pans. Carefully press foil into corners and smooth out folds; allow some of foil to hang over edges of pans. Do not grease.

3. In a large bowl with electric mixer at medium-high speed, beat butter until light and fluffy. Gradually beat in sugar. Clean side of bowl and beaters.

4. Beat in eggs, one at a time; add vanilla extract. Gradually beat in molasses until well blended. Stir in orange and lemon rinds. Turn into large stock pot to mix.

5. Sift together flour, baking soda, salt and spices. Add to creamed mixture and beat until well blended and smooth.

6. Stir in brandy-soaked fruits and walnuts. Spoon batter into foil-lined pans and spread evenly into corners.

7. Bake 2 hours, or until cake tester inserted in center of each cake comes out clean.

8. Remove from oven and cool 10 minutes. Using foil overhang, lift loaves from pans; place on wire racks and cool completely. Remove foil.

9. Cut 4 lengths of cheesecloth to wrap around each cake. Soak cheesecloths in ½ cup brandy and wrap each cake. Overwrap completely and securely with foil and plastic wrap. Store in tightly covered container in cool atmosphere, or freeze.

10. If stored more than 2 weeks, unwrap and resoak cheesecloth and wrap again. Repeat every 2 weeks. Store fruitcakes up to 4 to 6 weeks. The fruitcakes may be served immediately after making, but the soaking and storing process gives them a mellow, rich flavor.

11. After storing time is up, make glaze: Combine corn syrup and water in small saucepan, heat to boiling, then cool.

12. Unwrap fruitcakes, brush off surface crumbs, then brush with glaze. Decorate with candied cherry halves, bits of citron and walnut halves. Brush with glaze again and allow to set 15 minutes. Cut into thin slices to serve.

13. To present fruitcakes as gifts: Wrap each decorated, glazed fruitcake in plastic wrap. Tie with ribbon and make your own personalized label. Place in appropriately sized, tissue-lined box. Wrap entire box with gift paper and tie with ribbon, finishing off with a sprig of holly or Christmas evergreens.

Makes 4 (3-lb.) fruitcakes

PEOPLE QUIZ

CAN EXERCISE MAKE YOU WISE?

By John E. Gibson

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. Exercise enhances your mental faculties, getting your mind in good shape, as well as your body.

2. By the simple act of smiling, you can easily make people think you're smarter than you are.

3. Meditation relaxes the mind so much that mental tasks are performed less efficiently.

4. Left-handed people tend to lack originality and creative intelligence.

ANSWERS

1. True. In studies at Crozer-Chester Medical Center of the Jefferson Medical College at Thomas Jefferson University (Pa.), students were given tests designed to evaluate their ability to perform mental tasks requiring both logical and creative thinking. Tests were conducted under two conditions: with the subject seated in a comfortable lounge chair, and pedaling a stationary exercise bicycle at a mild level of exertion. The investigators concluded from the results that such levels of physical activity "exert dramatic effects" on the mechanics of thinking, thus increasing the scores on mental tests measuring perception, cognition and the complex functions of both logical and creative thinking. These findings suggest that the executive who paces the floor or goes for a walk while pondering important decisions is doing more than procrastinating. He's giving his mental abilities a boost.

2. True. Just give them a big smile. When you're smiling, others perceive you as being more on the ball than you might suspect. In psychological studies on the effects of a smile on perception, conducted at the Chinese University of Hong Kong's School of Education, more than 100 men and women undergraduates were shown random selections of photographs of people from all walks of life. Photos were of males and females, both smiling and unsmiling. After viewing each picture, the subjects were asked to fill out a questionnaire giving their impression of each person pictured. The results showed that a smiling person was perceived to be appreciably more intelligent than an unsmiling person.

3. False. Long-term research by a team of University of California behavior scientists on meditation and its effect on mental prowess and clarity of thought has demonstrated that the opposite is true. The investigators found that the practice of meditation actually results in an increased flow of blood to the brain — while other studies confirm that an increase in mental ability tends to go hand in hand with meditation.

4. False. Investigators at the University of Virginia made a study of the differences in creativity between left-handed and right-handed people. A standard creativity test was used to measure creativity on 192 men and women. The subjects consisted of 96 left-handed and 96 right-handed individuals. An analysis of the results indicated that those who were left-handed demonstrated greater creativity than the right-handed individuals on all four scales of a standard creativity test. Each scale measured originality of thought processes, flexibility, fluency and elaboration. It was further noted that of those who were left-handed, females scored higher than males, and the college-educated scored higher than those with no college. The point was made that, by having to live in a world for the right-handed, the left-handed are challenged to adapt to their environment and that this may foster creative behavior. FW

ADVICE ON CONSENT

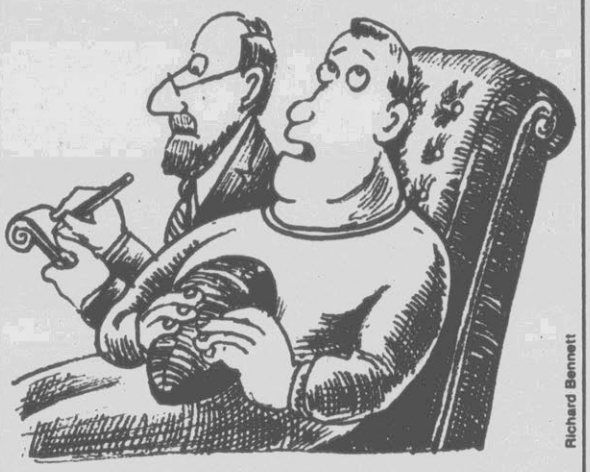

Patients facing surgery have enough to worry about without having to put up with an array of consent forms that require a graduate school education to understand. According to a research study of Pittsburgh hospitals by Carnegie-Mellon University, 21 years of schooling are needed to fathom surgical consent forms. Meanwhile, studies have shown that the majority of Americans read at or below the 11th-grade level.

The hospital consent forms, which are required not just for surgery but for many other procedures such as blood transfusions, anesthesia and X-rays, are not only unintelligible but also uninformative, claims Carol Janik of the Carnegie-Mellon research team. They give little detail about the specific risks or complications that could result from the medical procedure.

Such forms also may leave no space for the attending doctor's signature, important in the event of future legal action.

Janik and her colleagues want hospital consent forms revised so that they are simple enough to be understood at a 9th-grade level of comprehension, explain the risks involved, provide space for the doctor's signature and utilize a larger, easier-to-read typeface.

YOU CAN'T SLIDE INTO HOME AGAIN

We all know the psychic pangs people suffer when forced to give up a favorite habit. And giving up organized competitive sports can bring on such withdrawal pains, according to Dr. Steven J. Danish, professor of human development at Penn State. This is true for the college football hero who doesn't sign on as a pro, or the Little Leaguer who can't make the jump to the next level.

Either way, the reaction is common: a feeling of melancholy, which can lead to falling grades, family problems, weight gain or TV addiction.

A psychologist and coach, Danish has helped more than 200 athletes improve their sports performance and get past the ex-athlete blues. In his course, "Inner Sports," he teaches students how to retire, painlessly, from competitive sports.

"If one's self-esteem is heavily involved in being an athlete," says Danish, "it's important to learn how to function outside the sport when you have to give it up."

Through class discussions, Danish helps students understand what emotional needs their sport fulfills and then encourages them to find another activity that will meet those same needs — preferably not sports related or not on such a competitive level.

Why not coaching? "That often boomerangs," says Danish. "The retired athlete tends to get frustrated when he can't get the performance from his team that he's used to giving himself."

BABY MIMICS

Babies just a day-and-a-half old can not only recognize an adult's facial expression, but new research shows they can even imitate it.

This surprising finding is the result of a recent study by psychologist Dr. Tiffany Field at the University of Miami Medical School. The study suggests that babies are born with the ability to discriminate and to imitate a variety of facial movements. It contradicts a common view that a baby doesn't acquire imitative skills until he or she is at least 5 or 6 months old.

Field's experiment, utilizing split-screen videotaping, monitored 74 36-hour-old infants as they looked at adults who made happy, sad or surprised expressions.

An earlier study revealed that 12- to 21-day-olds could imitate facial movements. This current study and a similar one at the University of Washington add weight to the belief that humans have an innate ability to process visual information and match it with the appropriate muscular response.

Field and her group are carrying their research one step further. They are now using ultrasound to study babies' expressions while still in the womb.

A FISH STORY

Behind a panorama of shimmering glass, 16 feet below the surface of a crystal-clear spring, mermaids twist and turn in graceful arabesques, as fish nibble at the bread in their hands and small turtles swim by unconcerned.

You're not on Fantasy Island. The site is the Spring of Live Mermaids in Weeki Wachee, Fla. And you too can become a mermaid.

What does it take to gain such underwater employment? Mermaid applicants must look the part—be attractive, graceful and able to swim, reports Genie Young, head of mermaid recruitment for the spring. Oh, it also helps if you have no fear of alligators and other odd creatures of the deep who occasionally swim down the Weeki Wachee River into the natural spring. "When such visits occur during a performance," Young reports, "the crowd goes wild with delight and our mermaids get out of the water — fast."

Once selected for duty, these sea nymphs go through rigorous training. They spend six to eight weeks learning the routines and how to use air hoses. The pay is a closely guarded secret.

Do males ever apply for the aquatic job? "Sure they do," says Young, "but it's usually just a gag. We're not quite ready for mermen."

NOW TRY THE "MAGICAL" ORIENTAL HERB, GENUINE GINSENG

GINSENG ROOT, the most potent part of this very expensive Oriental herb that takes up to 7 years to grow, has been revered in Oriental cultures for ages and is in worldwide demand today. Truly it is a NATURAL food supplement. Research and thousands of years of use in folk medicine may together reveal even more promising roles for this "Queen of Herbs" with its special plant nutrients. The word GINSENG literally means "man-root" in the Orient (the root looks like an oddly human-shaped parsnip). And, Oriental emphasis on maintenance of natural balance seems practical to nutrition-conscious people today.

Now, you can get a bottle of 50 potent Ginseng tablets FREE—from Nutrition Headquarters, if you order any of the items in this ad. Just check the box in the order blank and we will include without charge a bottle of 50 Ginseng tablets with your order.

CAN YOU TRUST YOUR EYES? There are at least six differences in drawing details between top and bottom panels. How quickly can you find them? Check answers with these below.

Differences: 1. Cushion is tied. 2. Wreath is missing. 3. Arm is shorter. 4. Cap is smaller. 5. Box is missing. 6. Table is missing.

● TRAVEL LOG! Santa gets around by reindeer and sleigh, of course, but what means of locomotion is associated with each of the following: 1. Cinderella. 2. Jonah. 3. Icarus. 4. Lady Godiva. 5. Batman. 6. Captain Video?

Spaceship.
1 Pumpkin coach 2 Whale 3 Waxed wings 4 Horse 5 Batmobile 6

● Hear This! Place an ear at one end of a fireplace log and scratch the other end with a pin. Does the sound come through? Give it a try.

● Heir Lines! Gramps wants to give each grandchild $3, but lacks $8 to do so. If he gives each one $2, he'll have $3 left. How many grandchildren has he?

There are eleven.

● Riddle-Me-This! Who has a white beard, red suit and walks at an angle? Slanta Claus. What did St. Nick buy at the gift shop? Nick-knacks. What does a cheapskate buy at a gift shop? Nickel-knacks.

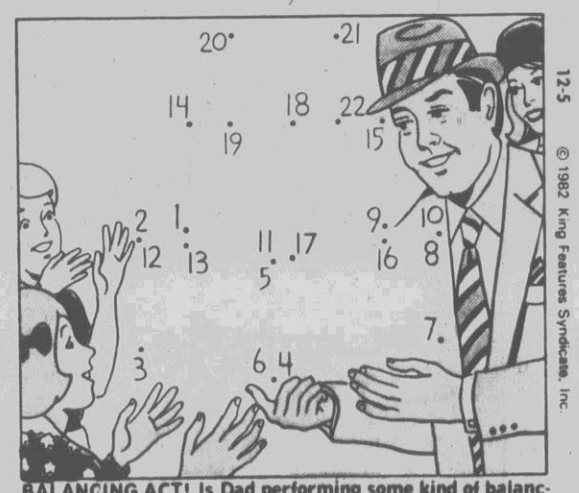

TREE TRIMS TEST WITS!

Help! Santa's elf above would like to trim this Christmas tree, but is puzzled by the task. Ornaments bearing the numbers 1 to 9, inclusive, are to be arranged on the tree's branches in a triangular conformation, with each of the figure's sides totalling 17.

Three of the ornaments are already in place. Can you help position the rest?

Remember, each side is to total 17. Corner positions figure in two sides, natch.

Clockwise from top: 1, 6, 7, 3, 4, 8, 2, 9, 5.

BALANCING ACT! Is Dad performing some kind of balancing act above? To find out, add lines from 1 to 2, 3, etc.

Prince® Valiant IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR

CREATED BY HAL FOSTER

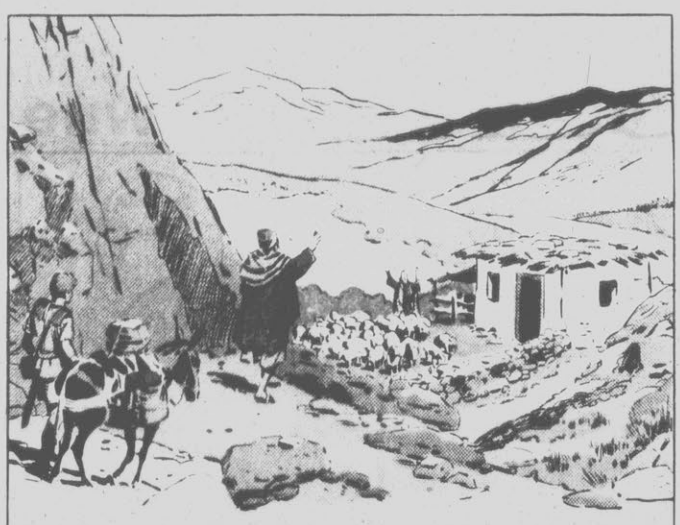

Our Story: THANATOPS DEPARTS THE FIRST VILLAGE, UNMOVED BY THE GRIEVING PARENTS WHOSE INFANT SONS LIE SLAIN. "I WILL DO THIS IN THE NEXT TOWN AND THE NEXT UNTIL A CERTAIN CHILD IS GIVEN UP TO ME." BUT THANATOPS DOES NOT REPEAT HIS BUTCHERY AT ONCE. HE LIES LOW WITH HIS MEN, ALLOWING PANIC TO SPREAD.

"AFTER A VILLAGE OR TWO," JUSTINIAN HAD PREDICTED, "THE ISRAELITES WILL FLUSH THE QUARRY THEMSELVES." SOON, IN FIELD AND MARKET.....

.... NERVOUS GOSSIPS RELATE THE LATEST RUMORS. "THE BABE THEY SEEK WAS BROUGHT HERE FROM THE CAPITAL," SAYS ONE. "THE MOTHER WAS CHILDLESS," ANOTHER ADDS. "IT HAPPENED LAST SPRING," CLAIMS A THIRD. NEIGHBOR LOOKS SUSPICIOUSLY AT NEIGHBOR.

THANATOPS ENTERS A SECOND VILLAGE JUST AS ARN AND EZEKIEL, BETWEEN TOWNS IN THE REMOTE HIGHLANDS, LEARN THE FATE OF THE FIRST. THE NEWS COMES FROM A SHEPHERD WITH WHOM THEY PASS THE NIGHT. RABBI EZEKIEL DOES NOT BETRAY ARN'S SECRET. HE MOURNS THE INNOCENT DEAD.

"HOW MUCH BLOOD IS MY BROTHER WORTH?" THAT QUESTION KEEPS PRINCE ARN AWAKE. THE MOON IS HIGH WHEN HE BECOMES AWARE OF A THRONG PASSING BY. THERE IS BANGING ON THE DOOR. "COME WITH US," A STRANGER CRIES. "WE KNOW WHO HAS THE BOY. NOW THE KILLING WILL STOP." THE EAGER MOB SETS OFF FOR A FARM IN THE NEXT VALLEY.

ARN IS AFTER THEM AT ONCE, MINGLING AMONG THE CROWD, BIDING HIS TIME. HE HAS NO PLAN. HE KNOWS ONLY THAT HE IS CLOSE.
