U.S. 264 Project Is 'On Schedule'

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

RALEIGH — State Transportation Secretary W.R. "Bill" Roberson says he is confident that the four-laning of U.S. 264 will take place — and on schedule.

"The only way it could be sidetracked," Roberson said, is "if the state doesn't provide matching funds (for federal highway aid money) next July 1." Such an occurrence, he said in an interview, would mean that "everything in the state would be held up, and I don't believe the General Assembly will let the federal money not be used."

Roberson also said, "We can't move this project up any faster. It just takes so much time ... It just takes forever to do a job of this magnitude — seven years from start to finish. I don't think there's anything that can be done to speed it up any."

He said even the additional 5 cents per gallon federal gasoline tax now before Congress can't help speed up the project.

"It will help our overall program. There's no doubt about it. It will help move up our construction program," Roberson said, "from 10 years to 5½ or 6 years, and add more projects to our long-term construction program.

"We took $1.2 billion out of our active program last year, and will be able to put most of those projects back in our active program — contingent on the state providing the matching funds. But it can't move this project (U.S. 264) up any faster."

Suggesting that the four-laning of U.S. 264 is a top priority of Gov. Jim Hunt, Roberson said the project is now "right on schedule."

The acquiring of right of way for the new road is well under way, Roberson said. "We're buying right of way ... It takes one to 1½ years just to buy the right of way."

A four-lane highway connecting the east with Raleigh and the western half of the state has been sought for years by eastern North Carolina residents. In 1979, the Board of Transportation adopted a DOT staff report

Rain And Chill Greet Paraders

By ANGELA LINGERFELT
Reflector Staff Writer

Santa Claus and his reindeer sloshed through Greenville Saturday in the annual Jaycees Christmas parade, but a steady rain and cooling temperatures cut into the audience and sent some of the parade participants scampering.

Those who did show viewed the parade bundled up or hovering under umbrellas or, for the lucky ones, from the warmth of their cars.

Some bands had second thoughts of marching in the rain and canceled. Others moved over to school activity buses for a ride down the processional route.

According to the weather forecasters, Saturday's weather — .46 inches of rainfall and a high in the 40s, as recorded by Greenville Utilities — wasn't all that bad in comparison with what lies ahead.

The National Weather Service called for more rain Sunday, with a high just reaching into the 30s, accompanied by rather windy conditions. Sunday night, the sky is to clear, but it will be colder — well into the low 20s.

And there is a slight chance of snow sometime Sunday, the forecasters say, if all conditions jell.

But most of that snow, if any, was expected in the mountains and along the northern part of the state.

A traveler's advisory was issued for the northern moutains, with two to four inches of snow expected before the snowfall tapers off during the day Sunday.

The weather service said the sudden shift in weather was associated with a cold front moving eastward from Tennessee.

Carolina Sales Halts Business

Carolina Sales Corp., which filed for reorganization last August, closed Friday after fighting a months-long battle to retain distributorships for its heavy appliance and heating-air conditioning divisions.

J.T. Little Jr., president of the 54-year-old Greenville firm, said Saturday night the company would wind down its operation during the next two weeks. Court-supervised liquidation could follow unless someone "comes forth with an offer to acqwire the business and its properties," Little said.

Carolina Sales, which was established by Little's father, operated in North Carolina, South Carolina and Virginia.

Little said its operational problems began earlier this year when Kelvinator Corp. dropped its wholesale distribution program in favor of direct sales. "This was the reason why we had filed for reorganization under Chapter 11. We felt there was no other chance to survive under those circumstances," Little said.

"Another thing that compounded the problem was that the Trane Company just announced cancellation of all their distributors of air-conditioning products with their change to factory-direct sales.

"These problems, coupled with a serious cash flow problem brought on by a reduced loan arrangement with our financing source, were more than we could overcome by ourselves."

Little said his company "had put together a good plan for future operations that would have been smaller but profitable" but was unable to implement it fully because of Trane's announcement and the lack of cash flow.

"There was a possibility of another line in sight to replace the Trane air conditioning, but without sufficient money on hand to operate

Police Say He Lied About Shooting

Officer Futrell Resigns

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Charles Michael Futrell has resigned from the Greenville Police Department after admitting to fellow officers and agents of the State Bureau of Investigation that he lied about being abducted and shot in the leg by four men here Nov. 4.

Futrell was given a lie detector test Friday morning. Following the test, he told SBI agents and police department investigators that he had shot himself while publicly indicating he was attacked by gang-like hoodlums.

FUTRELL

In a prepared statement, Police Chief Glenn Cannon said Saturday, "Futrell admitted ... he intentionally shot himself in the leg. Futrell further disclosed that he planned this action ahead of time and that the four men he alleged had attacked him do not exist."

Futrell, 25, had told investigators that he was walking near the intersection of Fourth and Evans streets shortly before 9 p.m. Nov. 4 when four men called him to a car at the intersection, pointed a shotgun at him and told him to get in.

Futrell said he was then driven to the Town Commons, where he was forced to walk toward the Tar River and was then shot in the lower right leg after being told by the men that they had to shoot a police officer with his own gun, but would not kill him."

The officer, who gave investigators a detailed description of his alleged assailants that included a description of coats that bore an emblem of a pig with a knife sticking into it, remained hospitalized for eight days following the shooting and still walks with a limp.

Cannon said Futrell gave investigators no reason for his actions.

The chief indicated that no criminal charges will be brought

End Of The Wait On Greenville Boulevard

Slowdown!

By MELVIN LANG
Reflector Staff Writer

A four-way stop sign, a flagman running along in front of a train and warning gates that just sit there. Add it up and you, as a motorist, are in backed-up traffic at one of Greenville's railroad crossings.

That's irritating, but at least it may be safer. Seldom does Greenville have a problem with trains exceeding the in-city speed limit of 35 mph.

But those traffic snarls are occurring more and more often as railroad business picks up. Norfolk-Southern Railway routinely runs trains through Greenville now with 130 or more cars. Seaboard Coast Line, with one train coming in at night from Chocowinity and two daily from Kinston or Ayden, has seen its service expand, too.

And when those 130-car trains have to begin slowing on the outskirts of the city to be able to stop at that four-way stop sign near the downtown area, that means somebody waits at every street-level crossing a little bit longer as the train crawls along.

Hudson Sumerell, Greenville agent for Seaboard, said the train crews use that four-way stop where the SCL and Norfolk-Southern tracks cross — just off 14th Street near the city garage — much the same way motorists do at a highway stop sign.

The trains have to slow sufficiently, Sumerell said, "for someone to look to see if one (another train) is coming."

That stop sign is apparently by choice of the railroads, as being the most practical, but the flagman on foot running ahead of the engine at unmarked crossings is required by the city of Greenville.

The warning gates, especially on Arlington Boulevard, have been the prime source of public complaints recently.

Sumerell said such complaints could be expected "anytime they put in gates ... which the people ask for. When they go down, sometimes the train may pull on off several feet but not enough to deactivate that light and the gates. That's what irritates people more than anything, no train and they see that gate still there.

"It bothers me myself sitting their waiting for it," the agent said.

Although agreeing with Sumerell that recent complaints have centered on the crossing gates, City Manager Gail Meeks observed that

Minister Claims Record On Nails

PORTH, Wales (AP) — The Rev. Ken Owen eased off his bed of nails Saturday, 130 hours and 15 minutes after lying down on it, and claimed to have broken his own record for resting on a spiked bed.

"I'm off home to soak in a nice hot bath," the 45-year-old minister, judo black belt and karate expert told reporters. "Hopefully, I will not sink."

Owen, nicknamed the Welsh Fakir, set the previous acknowledged endurance record of 102 hours, 23½ minutes in October 1980, according to the Guinness Book of Records.

WRECK INVOLVES FIVE VEHICLES — Five vehicles, including a Winterville police car, were involved in two different accidents at the same location Saturday. According to Highway Patrol Trooper Doug Britton, the first accident occurred at 4:55 p.m. when a car driven by James Crisp of Kinston collided with a car driven by Jessie Mitchell Johnson of Route 1, Ayden. Crisp was headed north on N.C. 11 and the Johnson car was traveling west on rural paved road 1708. Crisp was reported slightly injured as was a passenger identified as Ethel Crisp. Johnson also received slight injuries. A Winterville police car driven by Patrolman Rick Hickman, who responded to the accident call to provide initial assistance, was struck in the rear by a truck driven by Winterville Fire Chief Carlton Branch. According to Winterville Police Chief Keith Knox, the police cruiser was a total loss. During the collision the police car struck the already damaged Mitchell car and knocked it into a car driven by Thomas Edwards of Route 2, Winterville. Johnson, according to Britton, was charged with failure to yield the right-of-way in the first collison, while charges, according to investigating Trooper D.R. Taylor, were pending for the second accident. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Lonely Hunt For UFOs Becomes A Fatal Vigil

By MARTHA MALAN
Associated Press Writer

GRAND MARAIS, Minn. (AP) — From Oct. 5 to Nov. 15, Gerald Flach and LaVerne Landis sat in the bucket seats of his 1979 Chevrolet Monza and waited, deep in the northern Minnesota wilderness, for visitors from outer space.

The autumn leaves, already faded past their prime, fell from the trees. Crisp days gave way to blowing snow and temperatures that sometimes dropped to 10 degrees below zero.

The visitors never came.

The couple might have waited longer — Flach later said his companion insisted "spirits" had reassured her a UFO would arrive — but after weeks without food and days without water, Mrs. Landis, 50, perished of starvation, dehydration and hypothermia.

Flach stumbled and crawled the quarter mile to the main road and was found by a passing construction contractor.

"She was in contact with them (the spirits) just about every night," Flach told Deputy Frank Redfield of the Cook County sheriff's office after his rescue. "They kept telling us they would be picking us up. It never happened. Every time it never happened."

What drove them to abandon their families and roam through the Northern Plains for six months, searching for unidentified flying objects, then maintain a six-week vigil without food, heat or adequate clothing?

What part in the expedition to Loon Lake was played by a spiritual group called Search and Prove, to which Flach and Mrs. Landis belonged?

Flach, who may hold the answers, has been hospitalized for psychiatric treatment and reporters' telephone messages asking for an interview have gone unanswered.

Part of their story is now known from interviews with sheriff's deputies who talked to Flach, people who saw Flach and Mrs. Landis at the remote lake and with sources close to the family who asked not to be identified.

Friends and relatives described Mrs. Landis, a registered nurse who worked at St. Joseph's Hospital in St. Paul, Minn., as always seeking to learn more about people. She once commented that much was known about the body, "but we know so little about the mind," according to a friend.

People said she was extremely stable, a person who, "if you were down, would always say look at the bright side." They also said she had a longstanding interest in psychic phenomena that approached obsession after her husband died in 1975.

Taiwan Urges Kennedy Visit

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — Sen. Edward Kennedy was invited to visit Taiwan to gain "better understanding" of its human rights policies Saturday after he called on the Nationalist government to release political prisoners and halt alleged persecution.

Han Lih-wu, chairman of Taiwan's government-financed Chinese Association for Human Rights, told The Associated Press that Kennedy's remarks at a news conference Friday were "a biased version resulting from his unfamiliarity with Taiwan."

Han said he would like to invite the Massachusetts Democrat, who has never visited Taiwan, to come to this country so that he "can better understand the truth" about what Taiwan has done to improve its human rights policy.

recommending the construction of a U.S. 264 freeway, on a new location, between Wilson and Greenville, and detailed planning and design for the project began.

Highway funding problems last year caused the Board of Transportation to downgrade the proposed highway from a freeway with access limited to interchanges, to a limited access road with at-grade crossings. The shortage of money also delayed the scheduled start of right-of-way acquisition for several months.

However, Roberson said, "The first section out of Wilson is supposed to be let to bid in fiscal year 1983 ... the latter part of the current year, as scheduled." The first construction in Pitt County, Roberson noted, should be in fiscal year 1984.

Other DOT officials said that 85 of the 290 parcels of land that need to be acquired for the relocation of the roadway have been purchased — 52 in Wilson County and 33 in Pitt and GreenesCounties.

Of the 205 parcels left to be acquired, 69 are in Wilson County and 136 are in Pitt.

The new 33.4 miles of U.S. 264, without the interchanges — a deletion designed to save money — is estimated to cost $76.35 million, and completion of the project between Wilson and Greenville is expected in fiscal 1991.

The four-laning of the remaining 10.4 miles of two-lane U.S. 264 between Greenville and Washington is expected to be done in fiscal 1984. The cost of that project is estimated at $14.81 million.

British Judge Draws Rebukes

CAMBRIDGE, England (AP) — A women's rights group has demanded the dismissal of a British judge who said rape victims sometimes say "no" to their attackers when they really mean: "Stop it, I like it."

"He is not fit to sit as a judge," Judith Kertesz of the local chapter of Women Against Rape said Friday after Judge David Wild made the remark during a rape trial in Cambridge Crown Court. The 35-year-old defendant was acquitted.

the primary complaint noted by city officials has been that trains block street intersections too long.

She and Police Chief Glenn Cannon, who handles such complaints from the public, said the railroads have reacted favorably and have attempted to correct any problem that can be amended.

"Unfortunately in Greenville the railroad runs right through the center of the city. When they are switching, it takes time," Cannon said. "I think they (the railroads) are working with us, but it just takes time."

Cannon agreed that the trains do cause problems for motorists, but added: "The general public is going to have to live with them."

Sumerell said the railroads "are doing everything that we can" about the delays to motorists. He said that, when streets are "really blocked, we hear from it. But when you've got good business, this is going to happen. And you've got to remembers these tracks were put here years ago and folks have moved in around it."

"And we thank the Lord we are doing good business," he concluded.

Spraying Planned For Gypsy Moth

REDDING, Calif. (AP) — Five counties around San Francisco Bay will be sprayed in spring with an insecticide to counter the arrival of a new pest — the gypsy moth, long a scourge of the East.

Republican State Sen. Jim Nielsen of Woodland told county supervisors Friday that state farm officials will announce the spraying Monday. Don Henry, a state entomologist, confirmed it.

Gypsy moth caterpillars begin to hatch in March.

The ground spraying with the chemical Sevin is to take place in some of the same places were residents last year unsuccessfully opposed the spraying of Mediterranean fruit fly larvae with the insecticide malathion.

by the department against Futrell. "On the basis of Futrell's admissions, and on the basis of our independent investigation, we consider this case to be closed," Cannon said.

While few of Futrell's fellow officers would openly question his account of the alleged abduction and shooting, most privately doubted his story and felt Futrell was not telling the truth.

Sources close to the investigation said the case might have been closed much sooner if Futrell had not been taking medication for pain. They said investigators were reluctant to question Futrell, and would not allow him to take a polygraph test because of the medication.

Futrell, married and the father of two young children, joined the department in February.

Before coming to Greenville, he served with the New Bern Police Department from December 1978 to March 1981, and as a Bridgeton policeman from May to November 1981.

Futrell's father, Charles F. Futrell of Goldsboro, is a Highway Patrol sergeant with 26 years service, while his brother, Tommy Futrell, has been a police officer in Clayton for about a year.

T'was The Month Before Christmas

T'was the month before Christmas
And all through the house,
Safety was not forgotten,
I must proudly announce.

The lights were hung on the tree with great care, and all wires and sockets were covered—not bare.

Outdoor lights weren't labelled "for indoors,"
Nor strung while connected,
And electrical tape sealed each cord connection,
Which I carefully inspected.

Then with all the Yule lights unplugged,
And my gifts neatly wrapped,
I settled down for a long winter's nap.

So, after heeding these safety measures,
What to your wondering eyes should appear?
A safe and happy holiday,
Now and each year.

Seasons Greetings from the people who bring you light all year-round.

Thousands Flee Chemical Blast

TAFT, La. (AP) — About 20,000 residents in a five-mile radius were ordered to leave their homes Saturday after a tank of chemicals exploded into flames at a Union Carbide Corp. plant, threatening to release poisonous gas into the air, authorities said.

No injuries were reported.

A 40-foot underground tank holding 20,000 gallons of the chemical acrolein exploded at about 12:30 a.m. Police ordered the evacuation of all residents within five miles of the sprawling plant which sits in a heavily industrialized corridor along the Mississippi River about 20 miles northwest of New Orleans.

Traffic along the river was closed along a 10-mile stretch.

Union Carbide spokesman Bill Deigan said two 65,000 gallon tanks burned throughout the day, and there was the threat that four nearby tanks could catch fire and release a poison gas created by the superheated liquid chemical.

The gas can be fatal if inhaled, he said.

The fire burned itself out shortly after dark, but evacuees were not allowed to return home, a spokeswoman for the St. Charles Parish sheriff's office said.

"The situation is not yet safe," said spokeswoman Glenda Clement. "No one at this point is going to be allowed back to his home except in cases of dire emergency."

Mrs. Clement said Union Carbide officials planned to inspect the tank site Saturday night.

Asked when the evacuation would end, she said, "Anything we might say would be purely speculation, and we don't want to do that."

Acrolein is a chemical used to make animal food supplements and products which kill algae, plant officials said. The yellowish or colorless liquid, which has a choking odor, is also an irritant and is used in tear gas.

The evacuation order affected about 20,000 people, and most obeyed, said Jules Hymel, assistant parish Civil Defense director.

"That's a pretty conservative estimate, based on the populations of the towns involved," he said.

Authorities ordered the evacuation of Taft and the nearby towns of Hahnville and Killona on the west side of the river, and the towns of Norco, Montz, Good Hope, Sellers and New Sarpy on the east bank.

Evacuees worried that they might be away from their homes several days. Following the Sept. 28 derailment of 43 Illinois Central Gulf Railroad cars at the town of Livingston, about 2,700 people were forced from their homes for two weeks while chemical fires raged among the scattered cars.

"We haven't told them anything because we don't know ourselves," Hymel said.

"Anything we might say would be purely speculation, and we don't want to do that," said Glenda Clement, a spokeswoman for the sheriff's office.

Kinchen said the cause of the blast was unknown.

"We don't have any idea what caused it," he said. "We won't know until we can get someone in the immediate area to do some investigating."

But Hymel said the explosion apparently was caused when water got into the tank and reacted with the chemical.

It was a rainy night, but Hymel said he wasn't sure if rainwater got into the tank.

One of the shelters was set up at Hahnville High School, where vice-principal Veronica Green said about 500 people spent the day.

She said the Red Cross supplied breakfast and lunch, and was bringing in cots and blankets in preparation for the night.

One evacuee, Ferdinand Robertson Sr. of Hahnville, said he heard the blast from his home about six miles from the plant.

Reagan Makes Plea For MX

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan urged the Senate on Saturday to vote for production funds for the MX missile and worry later about the "basing mode" for the nuclear weapons — how and where they will be based.

Sounding conciliatory as he faces a crucial Senate vote this week, the president used his weekly radio broadcast to lobby for a "clear, positive" outcome and to accuse the House of cutting MX production funds last week "without really considering the facts."

"The basing mode is not an issue," Reagan said in the five-minute broadcast from his mountaintop retreat at Camp David, Md.

"There's plenty of time to decide on that," he said. "What we need now is a clear, positive vote on the missile itself, to go forward on production of the missile."

In a Democratic Party response broadcast later, Sen. Ernest F. Hollings of South Carolina, accused the president of pushing for an "unconscionable" increase in military spending while cutting funds for social programs.

"You may prefer to buy MX missiles with red ink rather than school lunches with red ink — but the ink is just as red," Hollings said.

The president is mounting an all-out campaign to convince the Senate to vote his way.

On Friday, during an Oval Office news conference, Reagan accused House opponents of the MX of "unfairly" building their arguments around the basing mode instead of discussing the need for the missile itself.

By a surprisingly large 69-vote margin, the House deleted money from a defense spending bill Tuesday to build the first five MX missiles. Reagan hopes to convince the House to reverse its vote after the Senate acts.

The controversial dense-pack plan Reagan favors calls for missiles to be deployed in silos spaced closely together in Wyoming. It was initially opposed by most of the members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and is the target of widespread skepticism in Congress.

Recognizing this, Reagan said he was willing to review the basing mode with Congress next year.

But in the meantime, the president insisted production of the MX — which he has named the Peacekeeper — is necessary to modernize the U.S. land-based nuclear forces and to induce the Soviets to negotiate nuclear arms reductions.

"Without the Peacekeeper, we weaken our ability to deter war and we may lose a valuable opportunity to achieve a treaty to reduce nuclear weapons on both sides," Reagan said.

"With it, we make progress on both paths to peace. On both counts, there's no doubt that we need it."

Reagan complained that the House had not given the administration an adequate chance to present the facts before it voted.

"It's hard to make a good decision before you've heard the facts and in my opinion, the House of Representatives voted without really considering the facts," he said.

The president said the most pressing problem in the United States "is that the Soviet Union, because of its massive build-up of nuclear weapons, could destroy virtually all of our land-based missiles in a single nuclear attack.

"If we do nothing to correct that situation, we will have weakened the chances for peace," he said. "This is why we need the new MX peacekeeper missile, to help restore our strategic deterrent and literally, to keep the peace."

Reagan said that if the Congress cancels the missile "we remove a major incentive for the Soviets to stay at the table and agree to reductions."

Husband To Take Lie Detector Test

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — The head of the police team investigating the poisoning of a woman who took cyanide-laced Anacin said Saturday that the woman's friends and drug store workers would be questioned and her husband will take a lie detector test.

Lt. Bud Bye said the police probe began like a "mass of brushfires," but after several days, "we're beginning to nail down the sequence of events."

Bye said the police were treating the case as an attempted murder.

Susan Bowen, 30, was hospitalized Nov. 26 with an apparent stroke. It was not until Thursday, two weeks later, that cyanide was found in six of the 20 capsules from a bottle of Maximum Strength Anacin-3 pain reliever. Her blood and urine samples, taken earlier, were rechecked Friday and cyanide was found in her system.

Mrs. Bowen remained at Good Samaritan Hospital on Saturday. Officials said she was ready for release, but will need speech and occupational therapy because she has trouble speaking and swallowing.

The state has tested 3,000 Anacin capsules from the Longs Drug store where the Bowen's bottle was bought a few days before Thanksgiving and as of Saturday no others with cyanide were found.

No other suspicious poisoning deaths have been reported.

Sunday Opinion

East Carolina's Influence Is Statewide

As always, with the stepping down of Ashley Futrell as chairman of the East Carolina University Board of Trustees, a new leader comes to the fore.

Vice Chairman Ralph Kinsey Jr. was elevated to chairman of the trustees. He is assuming major responsibilities in charting the future of the university.

Kinsey is an alumnus of East Carolina University and, in becoming chairman, he is an example of how extensively the university's influence is now being felt throughout North Carolina.

Kinsey is currently a resident of Charlotte where he is a practicing attorney. Back in the 1960s, however, he was one of the thousands of students on the local campus. He received an A.B. degree in business administration and went on to receive a law degree from UNC-Chapel Hill in 1967.

He was first appointed to the ECU board in 1973 and his current term runs until June 30, 1983. He will also be eligible for appointment to another term.

Even though he lives hundreds of miles from the campus where he did undergraduate studies, Ralph Kinsey obviously has the dedication to give the time necessary to serve as chairman. The same is true of other board members, past and present.

If we speak of East Carolina University as being influential in the east, it should not be forgotten the institution serves all of North Carolina. As the years past, ECU is providing benefits through its graduates and its services to all sections of the state.

Bomb Standoff Handled Well

A man who threatened to blow up the Washington Monument to gain publicity for his anti-nuclear cause met death Thursday when police opened fire as he attempted to move the truck which he had said contained 1,000 pounds of explosives.

As it turned out the van contained no explosives and there was no accomplice. Thus the man had held the Washington Monument captive and tied up a good deal of the law enforcement personnel of the area for an entire day.

As occurs after such events, questions arise on whether the affair could have been handled differently and should there have been less news coverage of it.

Not much could have been changed. The police, if they had known there ware no explosives on the truck, could have simply walked in and arrested the man. It was determined, however, that he knew something about explosives and thus he had to be treated as if he were in control of 1,000 pounds of dynamite. Continuing that assumption the police were correct in opening fire on the truck as it was moved. Failing to act would have meant the possibility of a bomb traveling the streets of Washington.

As for media coverage, it was a major story and we cannot imagine the television cameras leaving the scene while the action was proceeding. True it may give someone else the idea of trying the same thing, but historically twisted minds have never seemed to run out of ideas for creating havoc.

Maxwell Glen and Cody Shearer — Rule

WASHINGTON — Mahmoud Darwish, 40, a Palestinian poet now living in Paris, received an invitation to read from his work at a Nov. 28 New York City benefit for UNICEF. Despite his three-week visit to America last year, however, he was unable to obtain a three-day visa because of "28."

Angel Rama, 56, a renowned Latin American literature specialist who has lived and taught in the U.S. for large parts of the last 13 years, won a tenured professorship from the University of Maryland in 1980. But when he sought permanent residency here at the university's insistence, Uruguayan-born Rama found "28" in his way.

South African Dennis Brutue, 58, is a tenured professor at Northwestern University who, after a decade of annually renewing his visitor's visa, also sought permanent residency recently. But the State Department denied his request. This time, too, "28" was the reason.

A problem of lost papers or no sponsors? Hardly. Subsection 28 is an obscure provision of U.S. immigration law which permits the State Department to withhold entry or permanent residency from any alien alleged to hold beliefs considered contrary to the American political system. Arbitrary in practice and anti-democratic in purpose, it's not an issue in landmark immigration law reforms facing the House this week. But it deserves to be.

Passed during the heyday of Wisconsin's Sen. Joseph McCarthy as part of the 1952 McCarran-Walter Act, Subsection 28 has enabled anonymous bureaucrats to classify thousands of left-wing writers, artists and others as "pro-communist" or "subversive" on the basis of weak allegations or associations. It has also allowed the U.S. to punish the enemies of friends such as South Africa, against whose apartheid policies, for example, Dennis Brutus has been widely active.

State Department and Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) officials, perhaps sensing that ideological exclusion contradicts the Helsinki accords, declare that virtually everyone classifed as "subversive" under Subsection 28 is eventually able to enter the U.S. In fact, of approximately 140,000 requests to have the provision waived over the last five years, only 136 have been denied, according to an INS official.

Yet these seemingly benign statistics belie the extent to which U.S. authorities successfully employ the rule for political ends. Simple delay tactics can often prevent an appointed visit without delaying a visa per se. Darwish, who might have received clearance after a 21-day review by the INS, is one exemplary victim of this practice; more than 300 disarmament activiste from Europe and Japan, who intended to participate in last June's major anti-nuclear rally in New York, are others.

Meanwhile, when seeking permanent residency in this country, "subversives" have no waiver option. Nor do they have access to relevant information about their cases in government files. This predicament ia in line with a 1972 Supreme Court decision upholding the ideological exclusion rule as constitutional. Foreigners, the court said then, have no constitutional rights whatsoever, even when they might need government-held data to challenge a "subversive" classification in court.

Perhaps the court also feared, however, the consequences of uncovering thousands of immigration files in which the U.S. case for subversion was arbitrary and capricious.

This probability has prompted reform efforts in the past and underpins an attack on Subsection 28 planned by Rep. Ted Weiss, Democrat of New York. Weiss, aides say, would like 28's repeal considered as part or in the context of the Simpson-Mazzoli immigration bill, which faces a possible House vote in the next few days. For their part, the bill's sponsors want any reform of 28 excluded from the upcoming debate, fearing that its controversy would exacerbate the already complex, tedioue nature of the bill.

Alvin Taylor — Sunday Morning Notes

So you think your electric utilities bill soars in December because of all the lighted Christmas decorations you put up?

Don't worry about it. Malcolm Green, assistant director of Greenville Utilities, says the lighted Christmas decorations don't even cause a blink in overall electric sales.

"You aren't talking about much," Green says. "The television would probably draw as much (on any given night) as all the Christmas lights put together."

In fact he mused that if the Christmas lights are used for 15 days and we missed watching 15 pro football games because of the strike ... "actually the pro players paid for the Christmas lights this year."

The newer little neon lights would hardly draw any measurable current. Cooking an elaborate Christmas meal would offset any savings of not having any Christmas lights.

Greenville Utilities in recent years has emphasized energy conservation and the local utilities doesn't take any position on whether or not to cut down on the use of Christmas lights. But, Green says, "We don't see that use of Christmas lights has any impact on overall usage."

It goes without saying that if your electric bill is higher in December and January it has little to do with the use of decorations generally. It is probably due to longer nights with people staying in more and colder weather requiring more electricity.

An interesting change made by the GUC this year was the installation of photo cells on the Christmas decorations in the downtown area. In the past a utilities employee has turned the lights on at dusk and turned them off around 10 p.m.

Since that trip isn't made anymore the lights burn from dusk until dawn. Nevertheless it was calculated the energy and cost savings realized by not making the twice daily patrol represented an overall savings.

Anyway it's Christmas. Heck, go on and decorate.

Paul T. O'Connor — Challengers Beat The Incumbents

RALEIGH — The final score is in on this year's county commissioner races, and the challengers beat the incumbents.

Of the 284 seats up for election, 148 will be filled next year by new commissioners. About a third of that turnover came from the 52 commissioners who decided not to run for re-election. The June 29 primary found another 58 failing to win renomination and, in November, another 38 commissioners were defeated, according to a tally by the N.C. Association of County Commissioners. Of the seats open, then, 52 percent were filled by newcomers. Another eight still remain to be filled.

Of the state's 494 county commissioner seats, 431 are held by Democrats and 63 by Republicans — a net gain for Democrats of 33 seats and a loss of 31 seats for Republicans. (The total number of commissioners increased by two this year.) Republicans saw their 29-seat gain of 1980 wiped out. Democrats now control the boards in 89 counties, Republicans in 11 — a net of nine boards for the Democrats. In control of boards, Democrats got back to where they were after the 1976 election. A brighter note for Republicans: the GOP ousted incumbent Democratic sheriffs in Swain, Graham and Catawba counties.

The election brought a significant increase in the number of blacks serving as county commissioners. In 1974 only 13 blacks held seats on their county boards. That number increased gradually with each election until there were 21 black commissioners in 1980. Now there are 35 — a 67 percent increase in just one election. There are also four black sheriffs — an increase of three.

Women also increased their representation on county commissions. In 1974, there were only 17 female commissioners. That rose to 30 by 1980 and this year jumped to 42 — nearly a 40 percent increase. The number of Indian commissioners has gone back up to four from a 1980 level of three.

This year's turnover rate is 11 points higher than the 1980 turnover rate of 41 percent — a year in which turnover was lower than normal. Not counting 1980, the number of newcomers each year since 1974 has averaged 150. In 1980 there were only 101 newcomers, an oddity considering that there was so much political turmoil on the federal and legislative levels.

Rowland Evans and Robert Novak — Federal Reserve Chairman Wins A Round

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration's decision to use tax money to bail out international bankers can be traced to a rare Oct. 28 visit by Paul volcker, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, to a meeting of senior officials at the White House.

Normally guarded in revealing his opinions, central banker Volcker was a passionate advocate. To preserve the world financial structure, he told the meeting in the West Wing, the U.S. must radically increase its contribution to the International Monetary Fund to prevent Third World countries from defaulting on reckless loans from the big banks. "Volcker left no doubt that the sky was falling," one administration official told us.

Volcker's visit terminated rearguard action by budget director David Stockman to forestall the bailout. Even before President Reagan gave his perfunctory approval, it was clear the administration would provide what the Fed chairman wanted. That tells much about the Reagan administration but more about Paul Volcker.

Early in 1981, the State Department's effort to fulfill Jimmy Carter's promises of more U.S. financing were forestalled by an alliance of Stockman's Office of Management and Budget and the Treasury. But those forces were depleted when growth-oriented supply-siders, who consider the IMF's high-tax austerity programs a formula for world depression, left the Treasury.

By last summer's IMF meeting in Toronto, Treasury Under Secretary Beryl Sprinkel had become a special pleader for boosting the IMF quota. He complained to administration colleagues how embarrasaing it was to be confronted at international conferences by finance ministry counterparts from other Western countries, angry at U.S. reluctance. Stockman, insisting that bankers should suffer the consequences of their follies, held out.

Enter Chairman Volcker.

Volcker's White House audience was the same group of officials, chaired by chief of staff James Baker, that has been making most domestic policy decisions the past year. When Volcker left, it was clear the U.S. would increaae its IMF contribution by $7.5 billion.

James J. Kilpatrick — Just A Slight Shift Off Track For Kennedy

WASHINGTON — Now that everyone else has weighed in with comments on the great Kennedy withdrawal, let me bring up the rear. Have we seen the last of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy in the 1984 presidential sweepstakes? Don't you believe it for a minute. The senator from Massachusetts is just temporarily off the track.

This is not to impute insincerity to the gentleman. In his renunciation speech the other day, Mr. Kennedy said he was stepping aside largely in deference to the wishes of his children. He did not want to expose them to the bruises of a campaign in which all the ugly code words would be signaled once again. Very well. Let us accept the proposition that this is how he feels right now.

But it is politically a long, long time between the winter of 1982 and the summer of 1984. We have seen the senator's bows before. He is likely to make as many farewells as the divine Sarah Bernhardt, who kept returning to the stage with a handicap greater than code words; the old girl was still going after she lost a leg.

History, to coin a phrase, has a way of repeating itself. Let us turn the clock back 30 years, to the Democratic campaign of 1952. That was to have been the year of Estes Kefauver, the senator from Tennessee. Lord knows the senator worked for the nomination. I digress long enough to remark upon campaign hats. Al Smith was born to the derby, Thomas Dewey to the nomburg, Ronald Reagan to the Stetson. Mr. Kefauver somehow imagined in 1952 that a coonskin cap would add a touch of panache, and it was all wrong. The senator wore spectacles, he had a long sad face, and in that cap he looked like a horse in a mislaid toupee.

Where was I? Kefauver won 11 of the 13 Democratic primaries that year. He claimed almost 65 percent of the primary votes. Meanwhile, the governor of Illinois, Adlai Stevenson, was modestly keeping himself above it all. Stevenson ran dead last in New Hampshire; in his home state he won less than a fifth of thc vote; in Pennsylvania he ran even behind Republican Bob Taft. And who do you suppose won the convention's nomination that year?

The Stevenson story in 1952 echoed the story of Wendell Willkie for the Republicans in 1940. There were 14 Republican primaries that year. Willkie was merely "available." He stayed on the sidelines, remote from the fray. He won precisely 0.7 percent of the primary votes. But when the Republicans got to Philadelphia that summer, the galleries were yelling, "We want WILL-kie," and it was all over for Dewey and Taft.

It requires little imagination to revive the scenario for 1984. Senator Kennedy may be viscerally hated in some quarters, but he is passionately loved by many Democrats who are active in politics — the kind of Democrats who turn up at national conventions. He is the best torchlight orator in the country. I mean, this fellow can ignite a hall. "We want TED-dy, we want TED-dy." You can hear them now

No one else approaches Mr. Kennedy's claim on the affections of blacks, Hispanics, women and union members. Who else do the Democrats have? Walter Mondale scarcely could be described as lovable. Alan Cranston has all the sex appeal of a cinderblock wall. John Glenn, the ablest of the lot, makes few hearts go pitty-pat. Reubin Askew, Gary Hart, Mo Udall? The spirits do not soar.

If we assume an encouraging economic recovery by the spring of 1984, and if we further assume Mr. Reagan's continued good health, there is no question in my mind: The president will run again. Matched against John Glenn, who projects the stable image of Prudential's piece of the rock, Mr. Reagan might have a tough time of it. Running against Mr. Kennedy, the president would find himself in the political equivalent of a barroom brawl. I think Mr. Reagan would whup his ass, to borrow an inelegant phrase from Jimmy Carter, but it would be a fight to remember.

There used to be a boxing announcer, the spiritual predecessor of Howard Cosell, who had a splendidly orotund way of describing a preliminary match. It was the "semi-penultimate bout of the evening." That's Mr. Kennedy's statement. It's his semi-penultimate last hurrah.

Reagan Believes He Still Has A Chance With The MX

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan feels he has lost a battle but not the war in the House defeat of funding for the MX missile.

Having noted that the vote took place on Dec. 7, the 41st anniversary of the attack on Pearl Harbor, Reagan has described the 245-176 vote as "sleepwalking into the future." But he believes with an all-out effort he can salvage the program in the Senate.

No one is betting on that. Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., is leading the fight against the MX, saying that for all of the deliberation, the "dense pack" basing mode for the MX does not meet "even its basic objective of survivability."

"Careful, pragmatic and thoughtful decision-making is required if we are to maintain a strong defense posture," he said. "Our economy has no room for a Pentagon wish list."

Reagan suffered his most serious setback to date on defense spending. After the vote, he charged the House had made a "grave mistake" and called on the Senate "to reverse this grievous error."

"In the meantime," Reagan said, "I plan to do everything I can to take this case to the country."

In a now familiar blitz style, Reagan lobbied heavily up to the last minute for victory on a bill that provided $988 million to start production of the MX. But both he and his aides knew it was an uphill battle.

Reagan hoped that the congressmen on the fence would do as they have done most of the time: bow to an appeal from the commander in chief, who points out that he is privy to more secret information than they are about the eneny.

In the past few days, the administration also warned that the Soviets had tested a new light missile. But the arguments that without MX the nation would be without an adequate deterrent did not sell.

Reagan also insisted failure to pass the package would give the Soviets more reason to stall at the nuclear arms negotiating table in Geneva.

"I had hoped that most of the members in the House had awakened to the threat facing the United States," Reagan said. "That hope was apparently unfounded."

White House aides attribute the defeat to a misunderstanding about the dense pack basing mode, which would place 100 missiles in closely spaced silos near Cheyenne, Wyo.

But more telling apparently was the money involved and the growing apprehension that Reagan will heavily slash into the budgets of social programs while leaving intact the proposed trillion dollar defense spending over the next five years.

The issue of funds for more weapons vs. proposed cuts in health, education and welfare is very much in the minds of the lawmakers who survived the Nov. 2 elections.

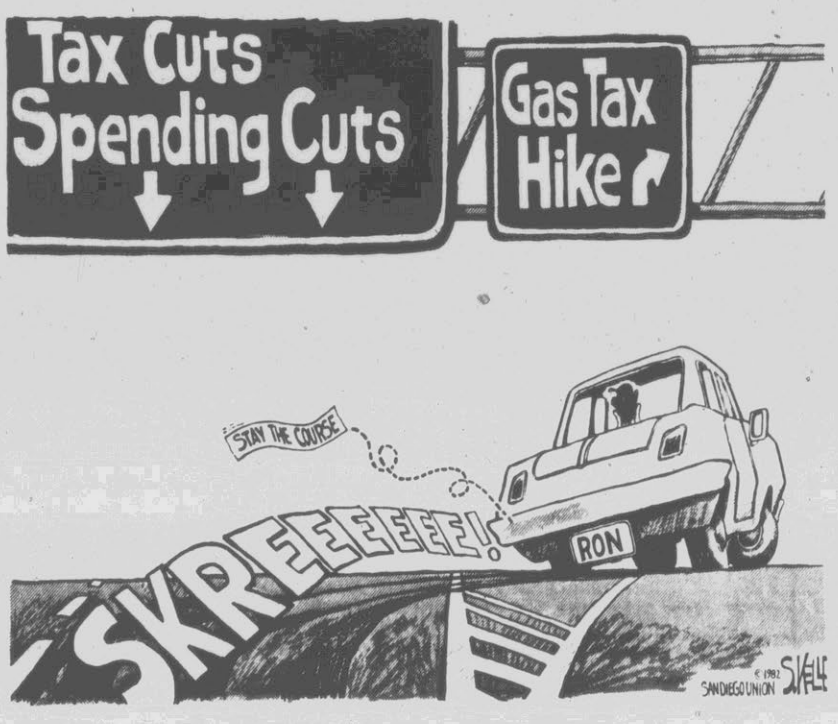

Furthermore, the latest 10.8 percent unemployment figures, or 12 million out of work in the Christmas holiday season is having its impact on where the money should be spent.

To some extent the nuclear freeze program, led by the U.S. Catholic Bishops, may also have had an impact on congressional action and the growing mood in the nation.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes had said the House vote "is not the last inning in the ball game." But Reagan aides admit chances of reiving MX funding in the Senate are not promising.

With the new Congress next year, the Democrats will have 26 more seats in the House. Up to now, Congress has given Reagan a blank check on defense spending. But a new skepticism is arising, and forecasts of a $200 billion deficit do not help.

Some observers believe it will be back to the drawing board for the Reagan administration to determine what is saleable in a recession.

Students Give Reagan High Marks

A report card on President Reagan, resulting from a poll of high achieving students, shows nearly 55 percent think he is doing a good or excellent job in the White House.

But 27.6 percent said his performance is below average and 12.3 percent called it poor. The rest did not respond to the question that asked them to "rate the job President Reagan is doing."

The 13th annual survey of high achievers was conducted by "Who's Who Among American High School Students" (Educational Communications Inc.). The publication has chronicled the attitudes and opinions of the nation's outstanding high school students annually since 1970.

Among other things, the students spoke out on nuclear weapons. Sixty-eight percent think the present number of nuclear weapons can lead to war; 52 percent said production of nuclear arms should be frozen at present levels.

Nevertheless, 76 percent said the economy should be the federal government's top priority. They said issues include unemployment, an unbalanced budget and inflation.

The students also were asked to rate the job Reagan is doing in these categories: domestic policy, foreign policy, social programs, politics.

How they graded the president:

— Domestic Policy. Excellent, 5.3 percent; good, 53.9 percent; below average, 24.7 percent; poor, 7.9 percent; no answer, 8.2 percent.

— Foreign Policy. Excellent, 8.7 percent; good, 47.3 percent; below average, 28.0 percent; poor, 21.4 percent; no answer, 6 percent.

— Social Programs. Excellent, 6.7 percent; good, 31.5 percent; below average, 34.4 percent; poor, 21.4 percent, no answer, 6 percent.

— Politics. Excellent, 12.1 percent; good, 54 percent; below average, 20.3 percent; poor, 6.6 percent; no answer, 7 percent.

The survey, conducted during the summer, involved 50,000 of the 363,000 student leaders featured in the 1981-82 issue of "Who's Who of American High School Students." Of the 50,000 sent questionnaires, 23,000 responded.

Many of the student leaders were identified and nominated for inclusion in the high school "Who's Who" by prineipals, guidance counselors or youth organizations. They are high achievers in academics, extra-curricular activities, comunity service or athletics.

Others were selected by the publishing company on the basis of scholarship or award contests and activities.

The survey also elicited responses from the teen-agers on other topics.

Federal government:

— 66 percent favor plans to cut federal spending.

— 91 percent believe a balanced budget is important to building a strong American economy.

— 54 percent don't know exactly what the president's policies for "New Federalism" are.

— 52 percent would limit cost of living increases for government workers from two to one each year.

— 60 percent think illegal aliens are taking jobs away from Americans. Fifty-six percent said illegal aliens should be rounded up and deported to their country of origin.

Security Precautions For A Visitor

WASHINGTON (AP) — In Bogota, Colombia, where rocket attacks launched by guerrilla groups are not unheard of, security for President Reagan during a 5-hour, 25-minute visit was extraordinary.

In fact, as run by the Colombians, it was so taut that it caused Reagan's own security detail some problems.

On any foreign visit, the U.S. Secret Service, responsible for protecting the president, must share its work with the host's security forces. This often involves a diplomatic waltz that would do the State Department proud.

But Robert DeProspero, the chief of the White House Secret Service detail, had to do more than a waltz to stay at Reagan's side as the president strode into the Casa de Narino, the presidential palace in Bogota.

A Colombian security agent tried to block DeProspero from accompanying Reagan and the Secret Service man had to spin quickly and do an end-run past him to keep up with the president. Despite his best efforts, he and Reagan were briefly separated.

Several agents were barred from the second floor of the Casa de Narino, where Reagan met with Colombian President Belisario Betancur. They managed to gain access to the area near the meeting only after removing their small Secret Service identification badges and displaying Colombian officials' badges they managed to obtain.

Dr. Daniel Ruge, Reagan's personal physician who always travels with the president, was also barred for some time from reaching the second floor.

Once inside the palace, the White House staff members had to be careful about what they said. U.S. officials had not been permitted to examine the meeting rooms for eavesdropping qquipment, so they assumed that the palace rooms were bugged.

Indeed, in one hallway deep inside the palace, a closed-circuit television camera could be seen peering down the corridor.

Aboard the chartered widebody jetliner carrying reporters, photographers, technicians and some White House staff members to Bogota ahead of Reagan, there was a warning about personal safety in the Colombian capital.

Before the airplane landed, assistant White House press secretary Mark Weinberg made an announcement over the public address system telling the passengers to take care.

They were warned not to stray from the group, and were told that if they were separated from their colleagues, it might be impossible to break into the security cordon surrounding the temporary press room in the dining room of the Senate building across a plaza from the Casa de Narino.

"If you have any valuables, leave them aboard the press charter, especially visible jewelry," Weinberg warned, calling attention to the city's reputation as a haven for pickpockets and youngsters given to snatching watches and other pieces of jewelry from tourists' wrists and fingers.

George Gallup

Poll

PRINCETON, N.J. — With Sen. Edward Kennedy out of the race for president in 1984, former vice President Mondale emerges as the top choice of the nation's Democratic voters to be their party's nominee.

In the most recent test, in which a national sample of Democratic voters was asked to select from a list of 15 possible nominees, Kennedy came out on top by a wide margin. He won 43 percent of the first-choice votes of Democrats, followed by 13 percent for Mondale, 8 percent for former President Jimmy Carter. Sen. John Glenn of Ohio received 7 percent of the vote and Gov. Jerry Brown of California, 4 percent. Each of the others on the list received less than 2 percent of the vote.

Here is the question:

"Which one of these persons (respondents were handed a card with the names and titles of 15 possible nominees) would you like to see nominated as the Democratic Party's candidate for president in 1984? And who would be your second choice? And who would be your third choice?

The results:

Top Choices Of Democratic Voters For 1984 (with Kennedy in)

Kennedy	43%
Mondale	13%
Carter	8%
Glenn	8%
Brown	4%
All others	5%
No opinion	19%
TOTAL	100%

When the vote for Kennedy is distributed to the other candidates on the list, on the basis of second choices, this new lineup emerges:

Top Choices Of Democratic Voters For 1984 (with Kennedy out)

Mondale	24%
Carter	17%
Glenn	14%
Brown	9%
All others	11%
No opinion	25%
TOTAL	100%

For results based on the sample of Democrats one can say with 95 percent confidence that the error attributable to sampling and other random effects could be five percentage points in either direction.

Relatives' Executions Had An Effect

Charles Willis "Yank" Stewart was in jail in Wilmington when his father and brother were electrocuted in 1925 for murdering two prohibition officers.

A few days before, Stewart had asked that he be taken to Raleigh for a last-minute visit with C.W. Stewart, his father, and Elmer Stewart, his older brother. Although the New Hanover County sheriff denied this request, he did give the 19-year-old youth permission to attend their funeral, which he did with an armed guard standing beside him.

Young Stewart went on to become one of the state's most notorious criminals. Before he was paroled in 1971, Stewart had spent more than half his life behind bars for such offences as highway robbery, armed robbery and storebreaking.

He escaped from prison at least seven times, and newspaper reporters began to describe him as an "escape artist" and as "a second Houdini" after he and another convict escaped from Central Prison in 1959 and after he masterminded the escape of 20 inmates from "escape-proof" Ivy Bluff prison two months later.

The Brunswick County jury which convicted his father and brother of murdering Leon George, a Wilmington prohibition officer, and Sam Lily, a deputy U.S. marshal, recommended mercy. Although several of the jurors said later they thought this recommendation would bring a life sentence, Judge Henry A. Grady sentenced them to the electric chair.

"I think that trial and that sentence had a lot to do with what Yank has done," his sister Gertrude told a reporter in an interview in 1962. "It's because the public can be so nasty. Yank's first real trouble came after the trial and just before my father died ...," when Stewart was convicted on four misdemeanor charges and given a jail sentence.

The elder Stewart, who had moved his family first from West Virginia to Virginia and finally to Wilmington, worked there first as a millhand and later as a carpenter. Before ill health forced him to give up carpentering, he built a house for his family, a trim, white four-room home in the Brunswick County farming community of Phoenix, 17 miles from Wilmington.

Gertrude said that, about 1923, the father began making liquor. ".. .I'll never understand why as long as I live," she added. "My father hated whisky worse than anyone I ever saw in my life. He never drank it. He never allowed it in his home. I just can't understand why he got himself involved with it."

But Stewart's other brother, Anthony, provided an explanation: "There was good money to be made from bootlegging when they started. Prohibition was on then and you could get $10 for all you could make. Sugar was selling for only four-and-a-half cents a pound, so about all the money you took in was clear profit... It was good money. My brother Elmer had two right new cars — a four-cylinder Dodge and a Model T Ford.

"They all — Yank was in it, too; he was about 17 then, I guess — operated a 400-gallon rig stuck off in the swamp not too many miles from the house."

Then, on July 29, 1924, the bodies of officers George and Lily were found at their car on a lonely road 15 miles northwest of Wilmington. George's body had been riddled with 25 bullets and Lily had been hit with 20 bullets. Near the dead officers lay George's pet Airedale with six bullets in his carcass.

A 100-man posse was organized to press the search for the killers. Within 24 hours Elmer Stewart, who had often complained of being "hounded" by George, was under arrest. The father surendered voluntarily after learning he was wanted.

At the trial, the most damaging testimony came from Amos Wallace, a farmer who had once shared a cell with C.W. Stewart on a bootlegging charge. He said the elder Stewart came to his house the night of the crime and told him he had slain the two officers.

The two men were executed after the state Supreme Court found no error in their trial and after Gov. Angus W. McLean, acting on a confession the Stewarts made three days before the electrocution date, declined clemency.

The rare father-son execution attracted a record eight reporters who filled their stories with lurid details.

"The father was allowed to precede his son to the death chamber with a faint flicker of hope in his heart that during the interval in which his own life was being snuffed some last word would come to the prison commuting the sentence of his son," said one account.

"Old man Stewart was red-eyed and haggard, as though he had not slept well and had been crying. His mustache had been shorn as well as his iron gray hair and he looked like a sick old man rather than a cold-blooded desperado. 'Men, be Christians,' the doomed man advised ...

Consumer Confidence May Be Rising

NEW YORK (AP) — The popular view is that the consumer is still timid and searching for his lost confidence. But an examination of the evidence suggests instead that at least some consumers might be pushing their weight around.

If you don't think so, ask the car dealer and the homeseller whose customers offer lowball figures instead of accepting the list price. Ask the airlines whose customers shop around for and obtain big discounts.

Ask the savings banks, some of which remain in bad shape because their customers transferred funds to higher-paying mutual funds. Ask the department stores, which are at their wit's end trying to please fussy buyers.

And most important of all, ask your next-door neighbor, the couple who keep saving their money because they're convinced that prices will be coming down, the very opposite of the "buy now" attitude that held sway in the 1970s.

As you continue your questioning you will eventually come to economists, those people who for the past year have been pointing out that the consumer has reduced his bills and raised his savings and so will soon begin to spend.

Ask them why the spending pickup hasn't begun. They will tell you, of course, that the consumer is worried about unemployment and concerned about the future of the economy. True, very true, but probably not the full story.

Today, any consumer reluctance to part with a nickel is interpreted as cautiousness, timidity, insecurity, a view that could rest on the mistaken view that any American able to make a telephone call ought to be placing an order.

But rather than being listless and frightened, it seems that many potential buyers have chosen not to buy, and with just as much enthusiasm and vigor as they once chose to buy up a storm.

An illustration:

...During the 1970s, when prices were rising, many people advanced their buying schedules in order to avoid future high prices. Their behavior was described as robust, enthusiastic and confident.

...During the 1980s, when some — albeit not many — prices are falling, some people are delaying purchases so as to obtain future lower prices. Their behavior is called timid, cautious, and indicative of a lack of confidence.

In truth, the consumer is busily rebuilding his finances.

In spite of the highest jobless rate in four decades, the savings rate rose to 6.9 percent in the third quarter from 6.7 percent in the second and 6.6 percent in the first three months of the year.

Throughout the year the total of personal income has risen steadily if slowly, as has the level of disposable or after-tax income. And in October, Americans paid off more than they borrowed for the first time in 10 months.

In the context that exists, however, such behavior is seldom viewed as wise. More often it is seen as weak, as in the statement by a bank economist that debt figures "are a little weaker than I would have expected."

No doubt about it, there's a lot of weakness out there in the economy. But there's reason to doubt that some behavior called weak is really so. Some of that behavior is by design. Some of it probably represents strength.

That isn't a Milquetoast who walks up to the car dealer and informs him: "Knock $500 off list and I'll consider buying; otherwise, buddy, it's no deal."

Family Tries To Stimulate Heart Patient

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Artificial heart recipient Barney Clark remained semiconscious Saturday and his wife said he may feel he is not doing "quite as good a job as he wanted to" for medical researchers.

Clark's family has been trying to help him regain consciousness by hugging him and talking to him.

"We're encouraging them to give him input. This is touching, holding, talking, developing conversations," Dr. Chase Peterson said. "All of this is important."

Clark, 61, has been semiconscious and in critical condition since suffering seizures Tuesday morning, five days after he became the first person to receive a permanent artificial heart.

Peterson, vice president for health sciences at the University of Utah Medical Center, repeated that doctors have no evidence of blood clots or bleeding that could have damaged Clark's brain.

However, Peterson said doctors won't be satisfied that brain damage hasn't occurred until they can carry on a conversation with him.

Those with Clark "feel he understands a lot more than he chooses to respond to," Peterson said. "But he does respond to anything he thinks is important."

Peterson said Clark's wife, Una Loy, told him her husband "entered this with a sense of really wanting to do this well, doing it well for research and doing it for the world, in a sense. She wondered this morning if the complication he's had hasn't made him feel that he's not doing quite as good a job as he wanted to."

Peterson said Clark could remain in his present state for a week.

Clark's doctors say they believe the seizures were caused by a chemical imbalance that was being treated primarily with a high-nutrient diet.

Clark drifts in and out of sleep, his body functions taken care of for him, and that "deprivation itself is numbing," Peterson said.

Mrs. Clark, their daughter, Karen, and her husband, Tim Schaffer, were at Clark's bedside in the intensive care unit Saturday, he said.

The retired Seattle dentist opens his eyes and looks at people when they speak to him, moves his limbs on his own and when asked to and shows no signs of paralysis that could indicate brain damage, Peterson said.

A respirator tube keeps Clark from speaking, but he seems to be mouthing words behind the tube, Peterson said.

"There's no evidence that he's lost his ability to speak," he said.

A Christmas Police Tip: When shopping, lock all Christmas packages in the trunk of your car.

READY FOR THE BAD WEATHER — Don Karnes, his son Jeremy, 3, and a friend Jeffrey Smith, 3, use an umbrella and plastic to keep dry during the annual Jaycees Christmas parade in downtown Greenville Saturday. Student Fumes While Car Burns

JOHNSTON, R.I. (UPI) — A college student watched helplessly as his car went up in flames because he didn't have the $25 a gas station operator demanded for the loan of a fire extinguisher.

"He has no humanitarianism. It stinks, as far as I'm concerned," said fire Lt. John Malone of gas station operator Morris J. Marsh, 54.

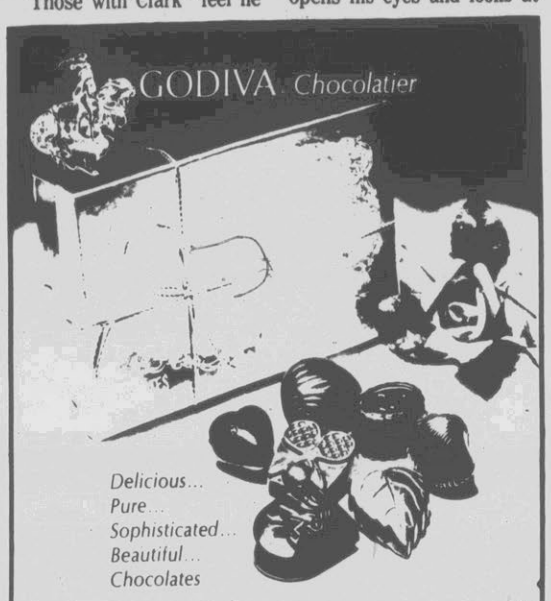

Michael Broadmeadow, of Cumberland, said he asked Marsh for the Shell station's fire extinguisher when his car began spewing smoke Friday while he was driving to the Community College of Rhode Island in Warwick.

Marsh refused to hand over the extinguisher because the young man didn't have the $25 to cover the cost of refilling it.

Broadmeadow said Marsh also refused to call the Fire Department, and he had to make the call while his uninsured, $3,000 car went up in flames.

Broadmeadow finally called his mother for help. She arrived and paid Marsh the $25, but by then the 1979-model car was destroyed.

Navy Plans Prosecution Of Reluctant Recruiter

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — A Navy recruiter who refused to carry out some assignments because he objected to the Navy's "hard sell" approach to recruiting will face a court martial he asked for himself on Tuesday.

Petty Officer Gary Ropp, who requested the court martial on advice from his attorney, is charged with five violations of the military code.

"I don't believe in misleading people or pushing them into a decision that may negatively affect their lives," says Ropp, 30, who has been seeking a transfer since July.

"Recruiters are severely tempted to present only one side of the story about the Navy, especially is they're having trouble meeting their quota," he added.

The Oakland recruiting station, where Ropp is assigned, was second in the nation last year in the number of Navy recruits signed up.

Student Paper's Holiday Parody Brings Protests

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — Advertisers were outraged when the Univeristy of Maryland newspaper's Christmas supplement put on its cover the picture of a corpse — with a hat and beard added — under the headline "Is Santa Dead?"

Even more upsetting to them was the supplement's title — "The Fascist Pig-Dog Commercialist Holiday Ripoff Guide" — and advertisments with a sexual twist spoofing their own ads.

The university's president said Saturday that the campus newspaper, the Diamondback, is a self-supporting, independent corporation and that the school is powerless to do anything about the parody.

Meanwhile, the paper's publishing board and business department are hoping that merchants will accept a reprinted, more conventional supplement without the lampoonery this week.

John Patterson, a student who edited the supplement, said he didn't expect such a reaction but that the advertisers should not have been surprised at the spoof.

"They're advertising in a college newspaper, and if they thought it was going to be eggnog recipes, they've got to be crazy," he said. "It was supposed to be funny. That's what parody is all about."

Inside the supplement published last Thursday were sexually explicit headlines, along with articles on how to drink and drive and what to do with a Brooks Shields doll — one suggestion was to nail the doll's head to a door.

A holiday story about 13 orphans being strangled by a chain gang also appeared under the headline: "Death Row Christmas Follies."

"The advertising office would have preferred something that conveys the essence of the Christmas season, like 'Buy Stuff Now," Patterson and co-editor David Mills said in an introduction. "We, on the other hand, felt compelled by conscience to come up with a title more progressive in its attitude toward Christmas advertising supplements."

What upset Dennis Fincham, manager of the newly opened Making Waves hot-tub spa, was a parodied advertisment for "Making Love, College Park's latest sex emporium" spoofing his own ad in the same publication.

"I know that students are supposed to be unconventional, but that doesn't mean that have to be totally devoid of taste," Fincham said, pointing to a headline composed of barnyard epithets. "I don't want to be associated with anything like this."

Richard Sablowsky, owner of the spa, said Making Waves is "not a sexually oriented business." Noting University of Maryland students make up "less than 50 percent" of his business, he added he may quit advertising in the newspaper. He said he has been told by other businessmen that they may do the same.

University President John S. Toll said the newspaper was put under the control of an independent corporation in 1971 "to preserve freedom of the press" and receives no funding from the school.

"We hope that the high standards and good journalism are maintained all of the time, but it is not something we can control," he said.

The publishing board, which produces the newspaper and five other campus publications with advertising revenues, met Thursday night and concluded there was little that it could do but hope that advertisers would be satisfied with a free reprint.

"They're going to get their ads next week and no one is going to read it," Patterson said. "It's just going to be a boring little supplement with ads in it."

Diplomat Attacks Superpowers

OSLO, Norway (AP) — Nobel Peace Prize winner Alva Myrdal bitterly attacked the United States and the Soviet Union Saturday, saying they have created a "cult of violence" that threatens global war and breeds urban crime.

In an impassioned address, the 80-year-old veteran disarmament campaigner also called for an international peace conference in 1983.

"There is no doubt that what the superpowers are now planning, and in which they are investing billions, is precisely the preparation for waging war," Mrs. Myrdal said in her Nobel lecture.

"The age in which we live can only be described as one of barbarism," she said. "Our civilization is in the process not only of being militarized, but also being brutalized.

"Many countries persecute their own citizens and intern them in prisons or concentration camps. Oppression is becoming more and more a part of the system, and Lech Walesa's sufferings may stand as a symbol for the way in which human rights are being trampled down in one country after another."

Walesa, the Polish labor leader, was interned for 11 months following the Dec. 13, 1981 imposition of martial law and suspension of Solidarity, the only union free of Communist control in the Soviet bloc.

Mrs. Myrdal, a Swede, and former Mexican Foreign Minister Alfonso Garcia Robles, who shared the 1982 Nobel Peace Prize, each spoke for about 30 minutes to an audience of some 200 in the Aula Festival Hall in downtown Oslo.

They received a gold medal, a Nobel diploma and the equivalent of $78,500 each Friday night for their campaigns for disarmament and world peace. The awards were announced earlier this fall.

In his Nobel lecture, Garcia Robles, 71, devoted himself to summarizing the history and content of the so-called 1967 Treaty of Tlatelolco, which he is credited with fathering and which establishes a nuclear-free zone in Latin America.

"The nuclear weapons free zone ... has become an example, an inspiration, for states who want to promote a world totally free of nuclear weapons," he said.

After Garcia Robles spokes, Nobel Institute Director Jakob Sverdrup escorted Mrs. Myrdal to the rostrum, supporting her by one arm. The ailing laureate leaned on the speaker's stand as she delivered her passionate address.

"War and the preparation for war have acquired legitimacy," Mrs. Myrdal declared, "and because of the tremendous proliferation of arms through production and export, so they are now available more or less to all and sundry, right down to handguns and stilettos.

"The cult of violence has so far permeated relations between people that we are compelled to witness as well an increase in everyday violence," she said. "These are the examples we give to our young people. The crimes of violence committed on the streets are to a large extent a result of the spread of arms."

Dental Tips

By Dr. Robert Capps, Dr. Danny Qualliotine and Dr. Gary Michels

TONGUE BRUSHING

Q. Is it true that brushing the tongue is beneficial..

A. Very definitely. The tongue, generally a neglected part of your mouth, is a very real source of tooth and gum problems.

Examine your tongue in the mirror, and you see it looks somewhat like a road map with little gulleys - fissures and grooves that catch and hold tiny food particles and bacteria. These have a great deal to do with the formation of plaque on the teeth, and the growth of bacteria and toxins that cause tooth decay and gum irritation.

By brushing the tongue with a soft toothbrush before going to bed at night, you help to remove these trouble-making elements. By brushing your tongue in the morning, you give your mouth a fresher, cleaner start for the day.

Union Leaders OK Pact

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — Union leaders from Chrysler Corp. plants in the United States and Canada voted overwhelmingly Saturday to recommend ratification of contracts that would raise production workers' annual wages more than $2,000.

"I'm very, very confident the agreement will be ratified ... by a comfortable margin," said United Auto Workers President Douglas Fraser.

Ten thousand Canadian autoworkers went on strike Nov. 5 after Chrysler refused their demand for an immediate pay raise. About 43,200 U.S. autoworkers had rejected a similar tentative contract, but voted to remain on the job and resume negotiations.

Fraser said all but three members of the 140-member U.S. Chrysler Council voted to recommend that autoworkers ratify their contract. Hours earlier, Canadian UAW leaders voted unanimously to recommend that striking Canadian workers ratify their pact.

Work on the new tentative contracts was completed Friday after economic agreements were reached a day earlier.

The pacts offer Canadian and U.S. workers their first pay raises and cost-of-living allowances since the workers gave up both in 1979 contracts to help the company stave off bankruptcy.

U.S. workers will get 75 cents more per hour immediately, with cost of living boosts in 1983 estimated to add another 64 cents an hour.

That will increase worker wages by $1.39 an hour, or $2,270 by the time the U.S. pact expires Jan. 14, 1984.

The Canadian pact expires on the same date. However, Canadians, who are living with a 10 percent inflation rate versus about 5 percent in the United States, will get an immediate pay raise of about $1.15 in Canadian currency.

That will boost Canadian autoworkers' average wage to $10.21 per hour in Canadian currency, equivalent to about $8.27 in U.S. money.

Canadian workers also will receive 64 cents in cost-of-living payments over the next year.

Two ratification votes in Canada were held Saturday with the largest locals to vote Sunday. UAW officials said results would be released Sunday and they expected the strikers back at work Monday.

"We couldn't be more pleased," said Joan McLellan, who has worked at Chrysler's Ajax, Ontario, trim plant for 21 years. She voted yes.

"We wouldn't have got what we got if we didn't strike," she said.

Steve Czypyha, an office worker at the Ajax plant for 11 years, said: "I think it's a very good contract. It's a little more than I expected."

U.S. workers, including 42,200 on indefinite layoff, will be able to vote Friday and office and clerical workers may vote Thursday.

According to summaries released Saturday by the UAW, the U.S. pay raise includes an immediate 3 percent boost — averaging 28 cents per hour — plus an immediate cost-of-living increase of 47 cents an hour.

With the added 64 cents in quarterly cost-of-living increments due in 1983, Chrysler workers will remain behind their counterparts at General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co., but the current difference of about $2.60 an hour will be whittled by about half.

U.S. workers also retain their December Sunday bonus day — pay for a day not worked — and gain a stronger employee stock ownership plan.

Fraser said Canadians gave up the December bonus day and stock ownership to get a larger immediate wage boost.

Chrysler gains language allowing frequently absent autoworkers to be penalized.

The company guaranteed a no-layoff clause to 80 percent of the workers at two U.S. plants. The plans lasts the life of the contract.

Chrysler lost $3.27 billion from 1979 through 1981. The company earned $266.6 million in the first nine months of 1982.

Walesa Calls For Amnesty For Union Activists

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Lech Walesa said Saturday he will work with the government to solve Poland's problems but only if the Communist martial-law regime returns to the accords that established Solidarity, grants amnesty to former union activists and gives them back their jobs.

Walesa's position was outlined to Poland's martial law chief, Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, in a letter which said "none of us has to ask for agreement on our knees." Walesa gave a copy of the letter to ABC-News, which in turn distributed it to Western correspondents in Warsaw.

Walesa's decision to release the letter came after Warsaw sources, believed to be government officials, leaked portions of it to selected Western journalists.

Walesa, who pledged to maintain public silence for a month after he was released from internment Nov. 13, said he sent the official PAP news agency a statement asserting that versions of his letter circulated previously were all "fakes," according to ABC.

The 39-year-old labor leader said that "the deep and prolonged crisis (facing Poland) can be overcome primarily by the effort of the whole society."

"It is also indispensable to get foreign aid which is withheld at the moment for political reasons," Walesa said, alluding to Western trade and credit sanctions imposed after the declaration of martial law last Dec. 13, the suspension of Solidarity and the internment of himself and hundreds of others.

"The awakening of social efforts and strengthening the position of Poland in the world is possible only through the rebuilding of mutual trust between society and government," he said.

"This goal can be achieved only if the August 1980 agreements are taken as a basis," he said, referring to a settlement between the government and striking workers which led to the creation of Solidarity, the only independent union in the Soviet bloc until it was suspended with the declaration of martial law. The union was outlawed Oct. 8.

"Since the introduction of martial law, the government and you personally have stated repeatedly that there will be no return to the pre-August 1980 state of affairs," Walesa said.

"Meeting the expectations of the nation is the only way to awaken hope and contribute to social stability," he said.

"This will require: general amnesty for those tried during martial law for union activity and protest actions. I assume of course that this will be done in accordance with the decrees that were explained to me when I was released (and that) internees will automatically be released with the lifting of martial law."

Government spokesmen have said that all iinternees will be released when martial law is suspended, expected by the end of the year. Other government spokesmen have said that about 300 union activists and supporters are still being detained under martial law decrees.

There has been no official public guarantee of amnesty, however.

"Secondly," Walesa said, "that those dismissed from work during martial law for union activity or just for mere membership in the union will be reinstated in their jobs. This issue has a very wide social impact and arouses many painful feelings."

There are no official figures for the number of people dismissed from work for their trade union activities, but they are thought to number in the tens of thousands. Solidarity had about 10 million members at the time its dissolution, out of a national population of 36 million.

"Thirdly," walesa said," Society must reach "a breakthrough on the trade union impasse by a return to the principle of plurality."

In place of Solidarity, which had nationwide "inter-factory" structure, the government has created labor organizations based in local enterprises. PAP reported Friday that 1,138 of these unions had been registered, and that about 1,400 other applications had been received.

Critics charge that these new unions are tighlty controlled by the government and the Communist Party is called, and violate the August 1980 agremeent for free unions.

"Without the acceptance of the government's position by the working class, we will not get far," Walesa said.

"These steps would open the road to a true social agreement."

"I am ready to take part in work leading to this aim. None of us is doing the other a favor and none of us has to ask for agreement on our knees, because agreement is a necessity if you care about the good of the country. Each of us who has the good will of the country in mind has to be open for ageement," he said.

Palace Denies Diana Spoiled

LONDON (AP) — Buckingham Palace dismissed as "rubbish" Saturday a gossip columnist's claim that Princess Diana had become a spoiled and bossy "little monster" who was making Prince Charles miserable.

The accusations by Nigel Dempster, gossip columnist of the Daily Mail, were broadcast on Britain's commercial TV network during a London Weekend Television talk show in which Dempster appeared as a guest.

Dempster's remarks were a tape-recorded version of an interview he gave earlier this month in New York to ABC-TV's "Good Morning America." The recorded interview was played Friday night during the show "Bennett Bites Back" hosted by Lennie Bennett, with comments interspersed by Dempster.

The gossip columnist said of Prince Charles's 21-year-old wife: "Diana is very much ruling the roost. She has banished all Charles's friends.

"There is a 13-year age gap (Charles is 34) and now Charles is only able to see her friends who are all in their early 20s.

"Suddenly getting this enormous power, having people curtsy and bow and do everything she wants, she has become a fiend. She has become a little monster...

"Charles is desperately unhappy. He knows first of all he can never divorce her. Charles is very unhappy because Fleet Street (London's newspaper row) forced him into this marriage."

Dempster alleged: "Shy Di has become a very willful and spoiled girl. She knows she is the Princess of Wales. She knows she can do what she wants."

Before her marriage to Charles at London's St. Paul's Cathedral on July 29 last year, Diana's modest attempts to dodge crowds of pursuing cameramen and reporters when it was learned they were dating earned her the nickname "Shy Di" in British tabloids. The couple's love match was described as a fairy-tale romance.

A Buckingham Palace spokesman, asked to comment on Dempster's remarks, said: "Rubbish."

The Daily Express, which like the Daily Mail takes a close interest in the royal family, commented that Dempster's remarks "went beyond even the usual brand of royal trivia marketed in the European scandal sheets."

The Sun, a third Fleet Street tabloid with a keen interest in the royals, called Dempster's remarks "astonishing."

Both the Daily Express and the Sun noted that in a "Good Morning America" interview last April, while talking about his book on Charles's aunt Princess Margaret, Dempster made comments about other members of the royal family.

Average Workers' Income Rises In '81

By FRANK T. CSONGOS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The average American worker covered by unemployment insurance earned $15,691 in 1981, an increase of 9.2 percent over the previous year, the Labor Department reported Saturday.

The department's Bureau of Labor Statistics said Alaska had the highest average pay at $25,350, or more than $4,600 higher than second-ranked District of Columbia at $20,718. It said Michigan ranked third with $18,143, followed by Wyoming and New York at $17,238 and $17,132 respectively.

The report said at the other end of the pay scale, five states — Vermont, Arkansas, Mississippi, Maine and South Dakota — had wages between $12,000 and $13,000.

The department said the annual pay information was compiled from reports submitted by employers participating in state and federal unemployment insurance programs. The data covered the 50 states, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

The average government worker earned $15,879 a year, compared with $15,652 for the private sector, according to the study. It said workers in the mining industry, which includes oil and gas extraction, had the highest pay levels at $25,723, followed by transportation and public utility workers who averaged $21,365 last year.

The report said retail trade workers earned the lowest average pay of $9,131.

"In addition to having the highest annual pay in 1981, the mining industry also led all other industries in pay growth between 1980 and 1981 with an 11.7 percent increase," the report said. "The service industry, which includes such establishments as hospital and accounting firms, had the next highest growth in pay at 10.2 percent. Retail trade showed the slowest growth in pay with a 6.8 percent increase."

Question: What are some "basics" I need to know when buying a small business or personal computer?

Answer: A computer system includes hardware; CPU (Central Processing Unit), CRT (Cathode Ray Tube), keyboard, disk drive, other attached peripherals and software. The internal memory (RAM) refers to the amount of internal storage. For example, 64K means over 64,000 characters can be stored. Permanent external storage could include floppy disk, hard disk, or cassette tape. External memory stores data for retrieval later. A keyboard can have a separate numeric pad, upper and lower case options, programmable keys. It is used to enter data. The CRT can be a television set, a monitor, or video display attached to the CPU. It is used to display data. The CPU is the workhorse of the computer. It processes information and performs commands.

You should be aware that connecting cables, modems, printers, additional disk drives, diskettes, paper, surge protector costs needs to be considered when estimating final price.

The software (or programs) you intend on using may not work on every computer. Determine your software needs before buying your hardware. Your budget and your present-as well as future-needs will help you determine what you select. If you need more assistance on evaluating computers, call us.

Salvation Army Reports Higher Holiday Giving

Maj. Ronald Davis said Saturday Christmas Fund collections by the Salvation Army are up in Greenville this year and appear to be headed for a record peak.

Davis, the organization's commanding officer in Greenville, said collections are running about 25 percent above those during the 1981 holiday and that requests for assistance are slightly higher.

A survey reported Saturday by the Salvation Army in Charlotte indicated that collections and requests for assistance are similarly higher throughout North Carolina and South Carolina.

A telephone survey of 19 of the 50 Salvation Army centers in the two states showed that requests for assistance in North Carolina increased 25 percent over last year, said Ruth Jackson, a Salvation Army spokeswoman in the Charlotte office. She said contributions to the Christmas Relief Program were up 33 percent in that state.

In South Carolina, requests for aid had risen 34 percent while contributions rose only 13 percent, Ms. Jackson said.

Public support for the Christmas program comes from a mail appeal as well as "kettle" solicitation on street corners and in shopping malls, she said. The Salvation Army also accepts food baskets, toys, dolls, Christmas dinners and visits to shut-ins and those in institutions.

The Salvation Army and the General Services Administration in Washington, D.C., have also announced a cooperative program to provide added assistance to the disadvantaged.

Food and new clothes will be collected by the program Dec. 6-10 at the White House and Dec. 13-17 at all federal buildings.

If any funds remain after Christmas expenses they will be used to provide winter fuel assistance to the needy, Ms. Jackson said.

Marty Robbins Buried

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Fans and some of the greatest stars in country music remembered singer Marty Robbins on Saturday as a man whose music "touched the very soul of America."

Robbins, 57, died Wednesday night of heart failure.

His body lay in front of an 8-foot guitar made of daisies as more than 200 mourners packed the Woodlawn Funeral Home chapel.

Among the stars attending Robbins' funeral were Johnny Cash and his wife, June Carter; Charley Pride; Larry Gatlin and the Gatlin Brothers; Roy Acuff; Bill Monroe; Roy Drusky; Bill Carlisle; Ricky Skaggs; Charlie Louvin; Porter Wagoner; Teddy Wilburn; Little Jimmy Dickens; Justin Tubb; Billie Jo Spears; Jeanne Pruett; Ferlin Husky; Tommy Overstreet; Doug Green and Del Wood.

Pallbearers included singer Eddy Arnold and members of Robbins' band.

The Rev. W.C. Lankford of the Oak Hill Assembly of God, who presented the eulogy, noted that in 1970 the veteran Grand Ole Opry star was one of the first people in the country to have a heart bypass operation.

"Marty has mended thousands of broken hearts each year through songs which touched the very soul of America," Lankford said.

Flower arrangements included red roses which spelled "El Paso," the name of Robbins' 1959 Grammy-winning song, against a background of white roses.

Another arrangement was flowers forming a white sport coat with a pink carnation in honor of Robbins' 1957 hit "A White Sport Coat (and a Pink Carnation.)"

Brenda Lee, whose own singing career has spanned 25 years, sang "One Day at a Time" during the service.

Some of Robbins' softer music, including his recent hit "Some Memories Just Won't Die," was played in the chapel before the 30-minute service began.

The flower-laden casket was closed for the service, although it was open during visitation when hundreds of people paid their respects. After the public service, only Robbins' family and closest friends accompanied the body to the cemetery.

A dozen or so people remained outside the funeral home in a gentle rain and took pictures as the mourners left the chapel.

Robbins, a native of Glendale, Ariz., wrote some 500 songs and had 18 No. 1 hits during his 30-year singing career. He had performed regularly since 1953 on the Grand Ole Opry, the live country music show.

In October, he was inducted into the Country Music Hall of Fame.

Private Plane Crash Kills 4

SAVANNAH, Ga. (AP) — Four people were killed early Saturday when a twin-engine Cessna 421 aircraft crashed on its approach about two miles west of the Savannah Municipal Airport, authorities reported.

Federal Aviation Administration spokesman Jack Barker in Atlanta and Chatham County police officer Greg Long confirmed that four people aboard the aircraft were killed in the 12:30 a.m. crash.

Authorities did not immediately release the names of the victims.

Folklorist To Be In Pitt

Nancy Roberts, nationally recognized folklorist, storyteller and author, will visit several Pitt County schools Tuesday and Wednesday.

NANCY ROBERTS

Ms. Roberts is the author of 18 books and is especialy known for her ghost tales. She has interviewed people and documented supernatural experiences all over the United States.

She will share her writing experiences with Pitt County students, show a portion of her ghost story filmstrips and answer questions. Books by her are available for purchase and will be personally inscribed.

Ms. Roberts' visit is being hosted by North Pitt High School Media Center under the direction of Gladys Avery, media coordinator. Books written by Ms. Roberts are available from librarians at North Pitt, Bethel Elementary, Wellcome Middle and Chicod Elementary schools.

Lovefeast Set In Farmville Tonight

A community Moravian Christmas Lovefeast will be held at the Farmville United Methodist Church Sunday at 7 p.m.

The Rev. R. Dennis Ricks Jr., pastor of the church, said the lovefeast is not a communion service but will be an activity denoting commitment, oneness and sharing. Special music will be provided by the Farmville United Methodist Church Adult Choir and the Farmville Community Band.

Ricks said sponsors hope the lovefeast will become an advent tradition for the Farmville area.

South Greenville PTA Meets

The South Greenville School PTA will meet Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the school's auditorium. Following the regular business meeting, a program of traditional Christmas music will be presented by the String Section, Chorus and Band.

Bundy To Speak At Party

Rep. Sam Bundy of Farmville will speak during the Belk-Tyler Christmas party in Elizabeth City Sunday at 7 p.m.

Friday evening he spoke during a National Guard Christmas party in Greenville; Wednesday, during a ladies' night banquet of the Coastal Plains Certified Public Accountants in Goldsboro; Tuesday, during a ladies' night banquet of the Raleigh Contractors Association in Raleigh, and Monday during the annual banquet of the Hertford Chamber of Commerce. He attended a meeting of the Legislative Commission on Agency Review in Raleigh on Tuesday.

Joyner Attends Meeting

Pitt County Fire Marshal Bobby Joyner recently participated in a National Volunteer Fire Council executive committee meeting at the National Fire Academy in Emmitsburg, Md. The council represents about 1.5 million volunteer firefighters nationwide.

Retirees To Install Officers

Greenville Chapter 2016 of the American Association of Retired Persons will mark its 10th anniversary Monday with installation of new officers. The meeting will be held at Abrams Riverside Restaurant at noon.

Officers to be installed, are: Polly Dail, president; Bob Knapp, vice president; Cotten Smith, secretary, and Mary Robinette, treasurer. Directors are Williamson George, Henry Lofquist, George McArthur, Repsy Baker and William Reading.

League Publishes Library Guide

The Pitt County Library League has published a brochure, "Your Guide to Libraries in Greenville, N.C." Designed for the general public, it describes resources and services of Library League members — Sheppard Memorial Library, Pitt Community College Learning Resources Center, Joyner Library and the Music Library at East Carolina University, and the Health Sciences Library in the Brody Medical Complex.

For each library, questions on who can use the library, what's in the library, location and hours and other factors are listed.

Copies of the guide are available at Sheppard and its East and Carver branches, at PCC, at Joyner and the ECU Music Library on campus, and at the Sciences Library in the Brody Medical Sciences Complex.

Counties To Seek More State Funds

FRANKLIN, N.C. (AP) — County governments are in for bad times unless the General Assembly approves more operating funds, the newly elected president of the North Carolina Association of County Commissioners says.

"Some small counties are in bad shape," said Macon County Commissioner Milles A. Gregory, who will take control of the association in August. "We have got to try to get the Legislature to fund more current expenses of school systems."

Gregory said Friday that education in the state system is not equal because larger, richer counties can afford better education for their students. He also predicted that schools would be the first to suffer if the economy worsens.

"It's highly possible that counties will have to start cutting services," Gregory said. "Education may be first with the human services next."

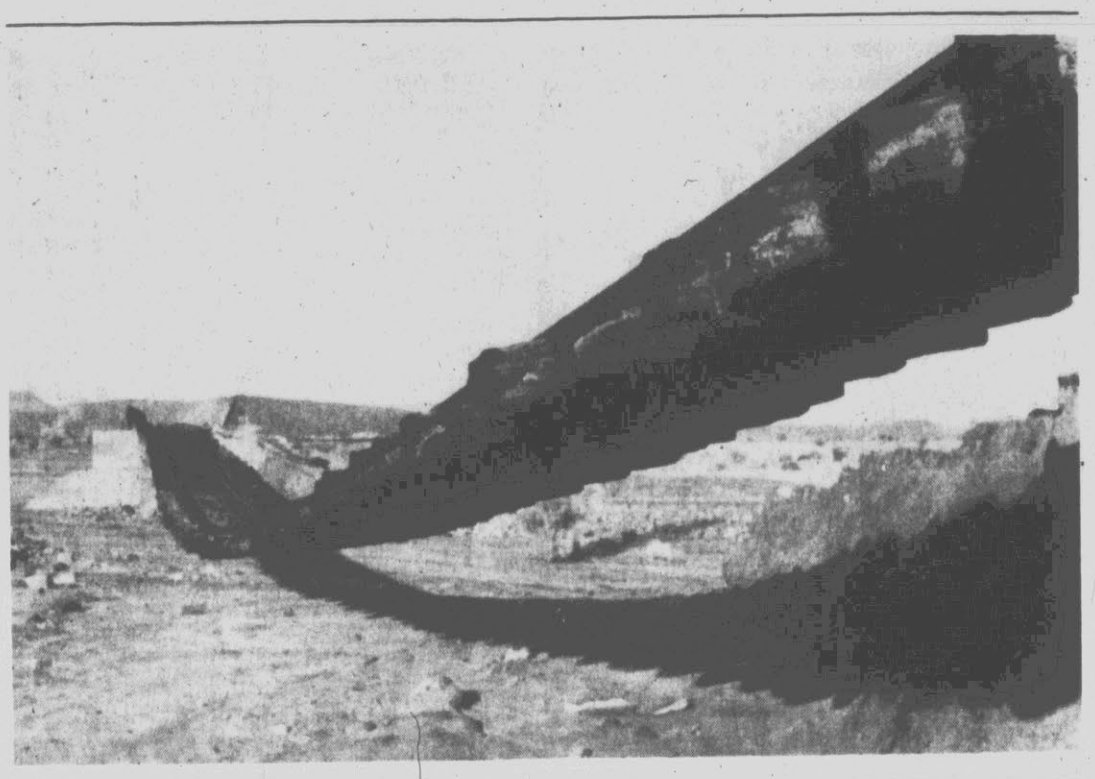

He said the association will seek authority for an additional 1 cent optional sales tax for local governments when the legislature convenes in the 1983 session. The association will also seek county commissioner representation on the Advisory Budget Commission with one member appointed by the president of the association, Gregory said.

The commission is a 12-member panel that advises the governor on a proposed state budget to be submitted to the General Assembly. Currently, four members are appointed by the governor, four by the lieutenant governor and four by the speaker of the House.

The association will also seek legislation requiring the state to fund its traditional share of the Medicaid program, Gregory said.

In education, the group favors legislation to provide that legal title to all real property used for school purposes remain with the county, he added. In addition, the association wants an amendment to the School Budget and Fiscal Control Act to let county commissioners give funds to education boards on a line-item basis and requiring county commissioner approval for all fund transfers.

Gregory said the association also wants the state to pick up a greater share of jail costs for housing misdemeanor inmates in county jails.

Wake Forest Leader Resigns

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Dr. James Ralph Scales announced Friday that he would resign as president of Wake Forest University at the end of next year to take a new position as the school's Worrell professor of Anglo-American Studies.

Scales, 63, will teach at Wake Forest and at the university's Worrell House in London. He said he decided to take the position because he needed the challenge of new studies and wanted to do more writing. He recently completed a book on Oklahoma politics.

The Earle, by Colonial

Simplicity represented by The Earle. Quality — the fabric of our clocks. As one, they lend an air of stately gentleness to the Cherry solids and veneers, accented by striking Ash burl overlays on the hood and dial frame. Colonial precision triple chime movements are operated by a brass rimmed R/A pendulum. Surrounded by glass on three sides, The Earle reflects the excellence that makes each Colonial clock a collectors item.

Quest For Awards Led To Jaycees' Jamscam

By ELISSA McCRARY
Associated Press Writer

CONCORD, N.C. (AP) — Former Jaycees officials say fierce competition for recognition and awards prompted them to create phony Jaycees chapters and use charity funds, along with their own money, to pay for them.

"Awards was what it was all about, period," said a former Jaycees official waiting last week to testify in the Jamscam case, who asked not to be identified. "You had to win awards or everybody thought you weren't doing anything. And to win awards, you had to get your membership up."

"Fictitious chapters were a way of life for the Jaycees as far as membership was concerned," said Joe Wood of Spencer, a former Jaycees district director.

During the week-long trial, more than a dozen former Jaycees have testified that they were rewarded for forming fictitious chapters. One former official said he received 100 awards during one year for setting up 48 new chapters, 31 of which he said were bogus. Another said he established eight new chapters in one year — four of them phony — and got a $500 bank loan to pay membership dues for one of them.

Johnny Lee Fletcher, 41, of Concord, is being tried on charges of misapplying $26,480.50 in Jaycees charity funds during his year as state president. He faces up to 80 years in prison if convicted.

The trials of two other former Jaycees officials charged in the case are expected to be scheduled early next year. Testimony in the Fletcher trial is scheduled to resume Monday in Cabarrus County Superior Court.

The scandal surfaced in the spring of 1980. A probe by the State Bureau of Investigation showed that nearly $250,000 in funds intended for charity was used to cover Jaycees operating expenses.

Most of the money was raised through the sale of grape jelly for the N.C. Burn Center in Chapel Hill, and the case was dubbed "Jamscam."

Prosecutor Lester Chalmers has alleged that Fletcher and the other former Jaycees created "paper" chapters to win awards for membership growth. Fletcher won a free trip to the Jaycees World Congress in Johannesburg, South Africa, for breaking a national record for new chapters in 1979.

Witnesses for the state last week supported Chalmers' contention with their testimony.

Charles Roger Allen of Wilson, a former Jaycees regional director, said he received more than 100 state and national awards in 1978 and 1979 for establishing 48 new chapters. He said 31 were nonexistent chapters. He said he and Fletcher agreed to split the cost of membership and charter fees for one of the chapters in order to win a national award for Allen's Rocky Mount chapter.

Allen also described his chapter's community projects, such as riding a bicycle 125 miles to collect money for musclar dystropy and sponsorship of the Red Cross bloodmobile, but he said the only awards he got were for membership growth.

"You didn't get any award for riding a bicycle, did you," Chalmers asked him, "or for conducting the special Olympics or for running the bloodmobile, did you?"

"No sir, I would say the majority of the awards I received were based on add ons and extensions (new chapters)," Allen said.

Larry Craig Strickland of Raleigh said when he was president of the Pine Level Jaycees in 1978-1979, four of eight new chapters he turned in to state Jaycees headquarters were fictitious. He said at one time, he had to borrow $500 to pay dues for one of the chapters.

"I did it to win an award," Strickland said. He said as a result of the phony chapters, he got a plaque naming Pine Level "Chapter of the Month."

J. Harold Herring, a former Jaycees state president who has pleaded guilty in the case, testified that competition for recognition was so keen, members rushed to second motions in Jaycees meetings so their names would be in the records.

"Competitively, there would always be a mad rush to second a motion," Herring said. "You got your name in the minutes and created some good will between you and the state president. He would see your name and maybe recognize it the next time."

East And Helms See Gasoline Tax As Being 'Turkey'

By The Associated Press

North Carolina's Republican Sens. Jesse Helms and John East have placed themselves at odds with the Reagan administration and with the leadership of both parties by opposing a proposed federal tax increase on gasoline.

Helms was among conservative Republicans who launched a filibuster against the proposed 5-cents-per-gallon increase while East, who did not participate, would not rule out taking part next week.

Both senators voted to delay Senate consideration of the tax bill until January, but the motion lost, 79-10. The filibuster forced Senate Republican leaders to delay a vote on the proposal until at least next week.

Nine of the state's 11 House members voted against the measure earlier this week.

Only Rep. William M. Hendon, an Asheville Republican who is a lame duck, and Rep. Walter B. Jones, a Farmville Democrat, voted for the tax.

The trucking industry is spearheading the lobbying against the increase. North Carolina is the nation's seventh largest trucking state, with 950,000 registered trucks in 1980.

"This may be the first time in history a lame duck is trying to give birth to a turkey," Helms told the Senate, referring to the post-election, lame duck session of Congress.

State officials have said that the tax boost would increase the amount of federal aid North Carolina receives from $150 million this year to $265 million next year.

But East says North Carolina, like other agricultural states, would not receive its proportional share. East said the state would receive only 66 cents for every dollar from the additional revenues, because 1 cent of the increase goes to mass transit.

East also says the gasoline tax increase would harm North Carolina's economy because the state's trucking, tourist and farming sectors rely heavily on gasoline.

"It is a regressive tax," he said. "It hits working people the hardest."

Cutoff Urged In Chinese Imports

By The Associated Press

The People's Republic of China's increasing stranglehold on the U.S. textile industry must be broken, even if it means ordering a cutoff of all Chinese textile imports, Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., says.

"We've got to do something," he said Friday. "The Red Chinese are eating us alive. They're using slave labor to produce their goods."

Helms and Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., have joined forces to try to persuade President Reagan to cut off imports if a new trade agreement is not reached by the end of December.

However, the senators say they have heard reports that the administration may extend the deadline on negotiating a new agreement.

The U.S. textile industry, centered in North Carolina and South Carolina, is facing a trade deficit of more than $7 billion in 1982, Hollings said.

"Each week, two additional American mills close their doors, yet the Chinese imports keep coming, with the People's Republic of China fast on its way to becoming our largest importer," he said.

Through September, Chinese textile imports to the U.S. were running 25.3 percent above the same period in 1981, according to the American Textile Manufacturers Institute. During 1981, the institute reported, China's exports of textiles to the U.S. grew 73 percent over 1980.

Hollings, in a letter to the White House, said the Chinese "have been dragging their feet for months and refusing to talk seriously in the hope that time or the State Department's free traders would bail them out."

He said extending the talks was a "dangerous" idea, "taking the pressure off the People's Republic of China to arrive at an expeditious agreement and further jeopardizing beleaguered American textile-apparel-fiber jobs."

Helms said he agrees with Hollings' assessment and has sent a letter to Reagan urging the cutoff of all Chinese textile imports.

Host Convicted In Trick Shot

CRAWFORDVILLE, Fla. (AP) — A party host who tried to shoot a beer can off the head of a friend has been convicted of manslaughter in the friend's death.

Otis McMullen, 30, a fisherman, shot cans off guests' heads twice from 15 feet during a party in July. Later in the day, Mark Ehrbar wanted to see McMullen do it again from 30 feet, police said.

Ehrbar, hit in the forehead with a .22-caliber pistol slug, died at a hospital.

Hospital Rates Low In Carolinas

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Hospital rooms in North Carolina and South Carolina cost less than the national average, with only one state having lower average semiprivate-room rates, a new study shows.

Mississippi had the lowest room rates with the average semiprivate room costing $96 a day, according to the study by the Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States. North Carolina rooms cost an average of $113.50, followed by South Carolina and Tennessee at $118.50.

California and Alaska were the most expensive, costing $240 and $233.50.

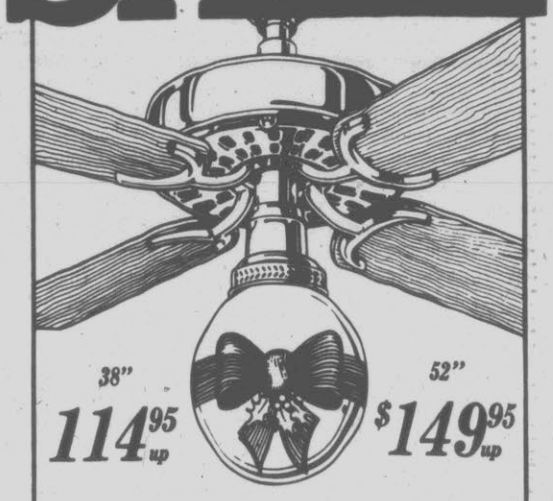

Equitable based its 1982 survey on responses from 2,518 hospitals in 1,685 cities nationwide. The study was restricted to general hospitals, excluding orthopedic, geriatric, psychiatric, maternity and nursery care.

Average private rooms costs somewhat more, averaging $130 in North Carolina and $126.50 in South Carolina, while Mississippi and Arkansas were lower at $99 and $124.

Nationally, the average charge for a private room was $167.50, with semiprivate rooms costing an average of $171.50 and intensive care running $408.50.

Rates in North Carolina ranged from $240 for a private room in Durham to $83 in Roanoke Rapids.

Tar Heels Slide By Broncos

GREENSBORO (AP) — Michael Jordan scored 22 points to lead No. 17 North Carolina to a 79-56 college basketball victory over Santa Clara Saturday night.

Brad Dougherty hit three straight field goals to give North Carolina an 18-12 lead with 6:13 left in the first half, and the Tar Heels steadily extended their lead to 75-49 on Curtis Hunter's layup with 2:48 left.

Jordan hit 11 of 19 field goal attempts to lead North Carolina to a 28-of-55 shooting performance, 50.9 percent. Santa Clara hit on 20 of 60 attempts, 33.3 percent.

Dougherty, a freshman, chipped in 17 points and classmate Curtis Hunter added 11 for the Tar Heels, now 3-2.

Reserve center Nick Vanos paced the Broncos with 14 points while the starting center, Dan Larson, chipped in 12.

Sam Perkins, who fouled out with 4:11 left, scored 9 points and grabbed 10 rebounds as both teams finished with 37 boards. North Carolina committed 12 turnovers while the Broncos, now 4-3, were guilty of 20 errors.

THE DAILY REFLECTOR
SUNDAY MORNING
DECEMBER 12, 1982

"We're happy to have had a game where we could breathe easy," Tar Heel coach Dean Smith said. "Of course, we had the home crowd. But Santa Clara has eight people back who started last year. They are always a well-coached team."

"I thought we played a great first half and knew that we would have to come out strong in the second half," Broncos coach Carroll Williams said. "However, we were not very aggressive in the opening minutes of the second half and allowed them to balloon their lead."

"In the second half, we finally took shots we like to have," Smith said. "We moved around and got our break going. Jordan, of course, does so many things for us.

"I thought Brad Dougherty played more relaxed tonight," Smith added. "Peterson will continue to start because he is ahead of them defensively. Our defense has been great — Tulane, LSU. Santa Clara. And, it's getting better."

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Ralph Sampson outdueled Pat Ewing in their celebrated showdown Saturday night as top-ranked Virginia hung on for a 68-63 college basketball victory over third-ranked Georgetown.

Sampson, a 7-foot-4 senior, led undefeated Virginia to its sixth straight victory this season by tossing in 23 points and playing his usual fine all-around game.

Ewing, a 7-foot sophomore, paced Georgetown with 16 points. It was the first loss in seven starts for the Hoyas.

Virginia blew a 14-point lead early in the second half and had to withstand a late rally by the Hoyas, made up of mostly freshmen and sophomores.

The Cavaliers' winning margin came on free throws. Jim Miller hit two with 42 seconds remaining to give the Cavaliers a 65-61 lead. With 18 seconds left, Georgetown's Michael Jackson cut the margin to two with a jump shot. Two free throws by Othelll Wilson with 12 seconds left and one by Rick Carlisle with one second left closed out the scoring.

But the reason the 19,035 fans turned out at the Capital Centre was to see the Sampson-Ewing confrontation.

There were enough head-to-head battles between the two giants to satisfy the crowd, though Sampson took several rests during the game because he reportedly was suffering from the flu.

Georgetown never led in the game and was down 33-23 at halftime. The Cavaliers raced to a 41-27 lead with 16:48 left to play.

Then, after calling a time out, the Hoyas managed to reduce the margin to two points with 7:20 left, aided by the shooting of Anthony Jones.

But Georgetown scored the next six points, with 6-5 freshman David Wingate contributing four of them to tie the score at 59-59 with 3:50 remaining.

Shortly afterward, Craig Robinson of Virginia hit two free throws, but Georgetown came right back to tie it 61-all on Jones' jumper. That was to be Georgetown's last score until Michael Jackson tallied with 18 seconds left.

Virginia broke the tie on Wilson's two free throws with 3:13 remaining.

Wilson was the only other Virginia player in double figures with 10 points, six of them from the free throw line. Wingate scored 12 points for Georgetown and Jones added 11.

Neither team could seem to get untracked in the first half and more than six minutes had gone by before Sampson excited the house by stuffing in a dunk shot for a 6-4 lead.

Sampson scored nine points in the first half, when he also grabbed nine rebounds.

Denkler's 33 Leads ECU Past ASU, 90-52

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Midway through the first half, a sluggish East Carolina Lady Pirate basketball team shook off Appalachian State University and rolled to a 90-52 victory.

For Appalachian State, it was the sixth straight loss of the season. East Carolina was putting together its fourth win in six starts. The Lady Pirates are unbeaten in three Minges starts.

Mary Denkler tossed through a career-high-tying 33 points in the game, while four other Lady Pirates also hit in double figures. Loraine Foster added 16, while Delphine Mabry made good on 14, Sylvia Bragg had 11 off the bench and Caren Truske hit 10.

Denkler also pulled 12 rebounds, leading both clubs. ECU held a 47-40 edge in that department.

The slower ASU team did manage to keep pressure on the Lady Pirates for about 10 minutes, leading much of that time. The Pirates led only twice during the first nine minutes, at 5-4 and again at 13-12.

In the meantime, ASU's 5-11 sophomore center Meana Cusimano kept pouring in the points — she finished the first half with 16 — and that helped ASU lead the rest of the time by as much as three points, the last time at 16-13 with 12:56 left to play.

But Denkler hit with 11:02 left to put ECU back up, 17-16, and the Lady Pirates never trailed again. Over the next few minutes, they steadily pulled away on about a 2-1 margin, building up as much as a 17-point lead before the half ended with ECU up, 48-28.

Denkler had 13 points during that first half, while Foster pushed through 14 to lead the Pirates back.

In the second half, however, it was simply a case of how much the margin would be. ECU hit the first three baskets of the half to run the lead out to 51-28 before Carolyn Cameron finally broke the ice for ASU. ECU added two more baskets before the Lady Apps finally scored again, upping the lead to 55-30.

The lead reached 30 at 69-39 with 9:27 left on a jumper by Bragg, and was up to as much as 37 with 5:07 left to play on another Bragg jumper at 81-44.

Two free throws by Truske with 19 seconds left set the final 38-point spread.

East Carolina shot well from the floor, hitting 57.7 percent, while ASU made only 33.8 percent.

However, the Lady Pirates made good on just 50 percent of their free throws, with ASU hitting only 37.5 percent.

And free throw shooting at one point brought an announcement — make that two — from ECU Coach Cathy Andruzzi.

Andruzzi at one point asked the PA announcer to ask the crowd to be silent while opponents were shooting free throws. When the crowd responded with "shhh's" on the next try, she took mike in hand herself to upbraid them for their actions.

"The students were rude," she told the press later. "They shouldn't be making noise while the other team is trying to make foul shots. It shows a lack of class. The student body is supposed to support us, but not in that way."

Andruzzi said that overall she was unhappy with the play of the Pirates. "We did come through in the second half, but we didn't play well at all in the first half."

She said that she felt that the Lady Pirate defense was capable of stopping ASU and holding them to fewer points —

N. C. State Slips Past Michigan State, 45-41

RALEIGH (AP) — Cozell McQueen's steal with 17 seconds left and Thurl Bailey's two free throws with a second remaining lifted No. 18 North Carolina State past Michigan State 45-41 in college basketball Saturday night.

Coach Jim Valvano's Wolfpack led throughout in raising its record to 4-0 and dropping the Spartans to 4-1.

Dereck Whittenburg led N.C. State with 12 points, while Sidney Lowe added 11 and Bailey 10.

Sam Vincent hit 8 of 12 field goal attempts for 16 points to lead Michigan State while junior Ben Tower contributed 13. The Wolfpack used four men to defense Vincent, with the most effective being reserve forward Harold Thompson.

North Carolina State connected on 19 of 45 field goal attempts while the Spartans converted 17 of 37 tries.

The Spartans held a slight rebounding edge, 24-20, but that advantage was offset by their 13 turnovers. N.C. State got called for seven errors.

Villanova Beaten

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Senior forward Paul Little scored a career-high 23 points and sophomore guard Anthony Arnolie made eight crucial free throws as Pennsylvania upset 10th-ranked Villanova 84-80 in college basketball.

Penn, 3-1, retained the lead over its Big Five rival throughout the second half. The Quakers led 73-67 with 3:45 left in the game, but two foul shots by Stewart Granger with 1:09 remaining brought the score to 75-74.

Arnolie then converted on two straight one-and-one opportunities. Ed Pinckney scored for Villanova, but Arnolie again made two free throws with 25 seconds to go.

Dwayne McClain made a layup for the Wildcats, but Arnolie connected on two more foul shots with 17 seconds remaining.

USC's Foster Collapses After Win Over Purdue

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — South Carolina basketball coach Bill Foster collapsed in a lockerroom Saturday night after his team rallied to a 59-53 upset victory over previously undefeated Purdue University.

Tom Price, USC sports information director, said Foster's life did not appear to be in danger.

"Indications are he's had a mild heart attack," said Price. "The prognosis is he'll be here two to three weeks.

"That's all we know right now."

Jim Petress, assistant business manager for the USC athletic department, said Foster collapsed "while we were in the coaches' room."

Foster was taken from Carolina Coliseum by ambulance to Baptist Medical Center.

Emergency medical technicians who took the 52-year-old coach to the hospital said Foster was suffering chest pains.

"It looks bad," said a State Law Enforcement Division agent who accompanied Foster's stretcher out to an ambulance.

But Petress said Foster was listed in stable condition at the hospital.

"They are still doing a lot of tests to do a complete diagnosis," he said. "He is going to be admitted."

Foster was conscious when taken to the emergency room and commented that the ice pack on his chest felt good.

Vanderbilt Whips Duke, 74-65

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Vanderbilt guard Phil Cox established a new school record for consecutive free throws Saturday night as the Commodores handed Coach C. M. Newton his 400th carrer victory by downing Duke 74-65 at Memorial Gym.

Cox hit all nine of his free throw chances to run his string to 35 in a row for the year. Over the past two seasons, the sophomore has canned 39 straight charity tosses and stands four short of the Southeastern Conference record of 43.

The victory gives the Commodores a 5-1 record, while the Atlantic Coast Conference Blue Devils fall to 2-4.

The teams were tied six times in the opening half, the last at 30-30 with 4 minutes remaining, before the Commodores went on an 11-4 scoring spree.

Two inside baskets and a free throw by freshman forward Michael DuPont keyed the surge which allowed the Commodores to take a 41-34 halftime lead.

Duke cut the deficit to 5 in the opening minute of the second period but then could only score once from the field in the next 8:14.

During the Blue Devils' dry spell, Vanderbilt built a 56-43 edge with Cox contributing 7 points during a 13-5 Commodore run.

Cox and freshman forward James Williams each finished with 15 points to pace the Commodores.

Freshman guard Johnny Dawkins topped Duke with 18 points while forward Mark Alarie added 12 and guard Chip Engelland had 10.

Conley Loses For 1st Time In 32 Matches

Sanderson Nips Vikings, 31-30

HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley saw its record-win streak of 32 come to an end Saturday afternoon as Sanderson slipped past the previously unbeaten Vikings, 31-30, in a quad-wrestling meet.

Conley won its 32nd straight match — a school record — with a 51-11 win over Cape Hatteras before losing to Sanderson. The Vikings whipped Athens Drive of Raleigh, 55-15, in their final match of the day.

In other matches, Sanderson defeated Cape Hatteras, 45-18, and Athens Drive, 40-26. Athens Drive downed Cape Hatteras, 59-11.

Conley, now 4-1, lost its first match since January 1980. Sanderson, which finished third in the state a year ago, captured the match when it won in the heavyweight class.

Conley travels to White Oak Wednesday for its first Coastal Conference match of the season. The Vikings are the defending conference champs.

S. Carolina Wins Shrine

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Kenneth McKie's 5-yard touchdown run in the fourth quarter enabled South Carolina's prep all-stars to edge the North Carolina stars 14-10 in the 46th annual Shrine Bowl football game Saturday.

McKie's touchdown in the rain was set up by a 30-yard punt return by Fredrick Logan of Spartanburg, moving the ball to the N.C. 28. Three plays later, McKie, of North Augusta, scored off tackle with 7:54 remaining and Derrick Young's conversion completed the scoring.

South Carolina needed all it could get to offset the record performances of North Carolina's Mark Maye-to-James Brim passing combination. Maye, of Charlotte Independence, completed 29 of 51 passes for 311 yards to set three Shrine records while Brim, of Mount Airy, set two marks by catching 13 passes for 169 yards.

Because stadium turf had been painted green earlier in the week, it could not be covered when Friday's rain began and hampered both team's rushing plans. North Carolina managed 21 net yards in 20 attempts.

Maye aerials led to North Carolina's touchdown, a 3-yard strike to Asheville Erwin's William Humes in the second quarter. North Duplin's Charlie Showers booted the PAT to make it 7-0 at halftime.

South Carolina tied it at 7 in the third period when holder Keith Harris of Greenville Mann turned a fake field goal into a 12-yard touchdown pass to Lake View's Lawrence Bronson.

Maye was intercepted three times, with one theft by defensive back James Rycroft of Spartanburg Dorman going for an apparent fourth-period touchdown, but the play was nullified by a penalty.

North Carolina's final drive was thwarted at the South Carolina 28 when Medrick Rainbow of Conway intercepted and returned 4 yards.

"I was throwing short, and I tried to hold back a little," said Maye, voted the game's top offensive player. South Carolina end Danny Cox of Greer was chosen outstanding defender.

Midway through the fourth period, two of Maye's passes were dropped in the end zone and the Tar Heels had to settle for a 25-yard field goal by North Duplin's Charlie Showers, putting his team ahead 10-7 at the 11:07 mark.

Logan then set up McKie's touchdown to boost South Carolina's lead in the series to 23-19-4.

Deacons Defeat Apps By 67-46

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Wake Forest forward John Toms scored 15 second-half points as the Demon Deacons broke open a close game and ran away from Appalachian State 67-46 in non-conference college basketball Saturday.

Toms, who finished with 19 points, scored 11 of Wake Forest's first 12 points in the second half as the Demon Deacons improved to 4-0. Danny Young, who gave Wake Forest the lead in the opening seconds of the half, finished with 13.

Davie Lawrence scored 16 points and junior center Dale Roberts came off the bench to score 15 for Appalachian State, which fell to 2-3. The Mountaineers held a 29-28 halftime lead, but Toms hit all seven of his second-half shots as Wake Forest stepped up the tempo and led by as many as 23 before coasting to the final margin.

Wake Forest coach Carl Tacy credited Toms and a more patient second-half offense for the victory.

"I was pleased with the play of John Toms," he said. "He has been a spark to our offense.

"Our offensse produces some good shots when we work the ball, but we have been too impatient," he added. "We told our players at halftime to be a little more patient."

Mountaineer coach Kevin Cantwell said his team let down after playing hard the first half.

"In all the years I've been in Boone I've never seen a team die like these guys died," he said.

BLACKSBURG, Va. (AP) — Freshmen Bobby Beecher and Dell Curry combined for 33 points and Virginia Tech's unbeaten Hokies put five players in double figures Saturday in coasting to an 86-66 basketball victory over Richmond's Spiders.

It was the 300th victory for Tech Coach Charlie Moir in a 16-year college career.

The Hokies, 5-0, went ahead for good at 14-13 on a layup by sophomore Perry Young with 10:36 left in the half, built the margin to 40-32 at intermission and were in front by 80-55 before reserves took over in the last five minutes.

Beecher finished with 17 points and Curry with 16 as the Hokies shot 55.4 percent, hitting 31 of 56 field goal tries. Young added 13 points, freshman Keith Colbert had 12 and senior Reggie Steppe 11.

Syracuse Upsets No. 9 Houston

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Erich Santifer fed off to Leo Rautins for Syracuse's last basket and intercepted a pass with 33 seconds left to insure the Orangemen's 92-87 college basketball victory over ninth-ranked Houston Saturday.

Rautins' basket with 1:34 left gave Syracuse an 88-85 lead, and he increased the advantage to 90-85 with a pair of free throws with 24 seconds remaining.

Houston's Clyde Drexler, who led all scorers with 28 points, sank two free throws in the waning seconds, but Syracuse guard Gene Waldron countered with two more for the Orange with eight seconds left.

The victory on national television raised Syracuse's record to 6-0 — it's best start since a 14-game streak in 1979-80 — and dropped the Cougars to 5-1.

Forward Tony Bruin paced the Orangemen with 26 points, while Santifer had 22, Rautins 15 and reserve center Sean Kerins 13.

Houston's Michael Young scored 11 of his 18 points in the second half and substitute guard David Rose had 12 points, all after intermission. The Cougars played most of the game without 7-foot center Akeem Abdul Olajuwon, who had a sore ankle and also picked up three quick fouls.

The lead changed hands seven times in the first half before Kerins tipped in a Bruin miss and was fouled by Larry Micheaux. The three-point play allowed Syracuse to take a 32-30 lead with 7:28 left in the half, and the Orange built a margin of 42-36 in the next five minutes.

A basket by Drexler and two free throws by Reid Gettys, who had 10 points in the first half, left Syracuse with a 42-40 half time edge.

Purdue.....53

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Harold Martin scored four straight baskets in a second-half rally to lift South Carolina to a 59-53 upset victory over 15th-ranked and previously undefeated Purdue Saturday night.

Bill Foster, head basketball coach at South Carolina, was taken from Carolina Coliseum by ambulance following the game after collapsing in the dressing room.

There was no report on Foster's condition late Saturday night but emergency medical technicians taking the 52-year-old coach to a Columbia hospital said the coach was suffering chest pains.

Martin finished the evening with 15 points, tying forward Brad Jergenson for high point honors for South Carolina. Junior center Russell Cross had 20 for the Boilermakers.

Purdue took a seven-point lead in the first half as Cross hit four early field goals. A pair of baskets by Jimmy Foster gave South Carolina the lead at 26-24 and the Gamecocks led at halftime 29-28.

After Purdue had take a 41-39 lead in the second half, Martin reeled off four straight baskets and answered another by Jim Bullock to put South Carolina ahead for good 49-43.

Indiana.....78
Wyoming.....65

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Indiana's Randy Wittman scored 30 points Saturday night and was named Most Valuable Player as the sixth-ranked Hoosiers beat Wyoming 78-65 in the championship game of the annual Indiana Classic basketball tournament.

Indiana, winning its own tournament for the ninth time in as many years, was never headed. The Hoosiers, raising their record to 6-0 for the season, jumped ahead 8-0 and built the margin to 44-28 at halftime.

Indiana's biggest lead was at 58-40 after a basket by Ted Kitchel seven minutes into the second period.

In the third-place game, North Carolina-Wilmington beat Eastern Michigan 68-64.

Iowa.....66
Southern Cal.....55

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — Mark Gannon scored 10 points and grabbed 14 rebounds to lead No. 7 Iowa to a 66-55 victory over Southern California in an emotionally charged college basketball game Saturday.

Teammates Michael Payne and Greg Stokes scored 16 points each in a contest that saw Payne and Southern Cal's Gerry Wright ejected in the final seconds.

The victory pushed Iowa to 6-0. The Trojans dropped to 3-3.

The Hawkeyes grabbed an early lead and pushed it to a 30-21 halftime edge. The Trojans, who shot just 29 percent in the first half, warmed up after intermission and pulled to within five points at 32-27 with 17 minutes to play.

Consecutive field goals by Stokes helped the Iowa surge to a 40-29 lead at 14:29 and Southern California never came closer than seven points afterward.

Iowa led 64-55 with 59 seconds to play when Wright elbowed Hawkeye point guard Steve Carfino, whose brother once played for Southern Cal and who was heavily recruited by the Trojans. Payne then tossed the ball at Wright and both players were ejected.

Carfino hit two free throws to account for the final margin.

St. John's.....88
Niagara.....53

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (AP) — Senior forward David Russell collected game highs of 20 pints and nine rebounds to lead 12th-ranked St. John's to an 88-53 victory over winless Niagara in college basketball Saturday night.

The unbeaten Redmen, who registered their seventh win, received scoring help from Chris Mullin with 17 points, Bill Wennington with 13 points and Billy Goodwin with 10.

Russell scored 10 points and grabbed six rebounds in the first half as St. John's broke open a close game with an eight-point tear en route to a 41-27 halftime lead.

Tennessee.....76
New Orleans.....74

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A steal by Tennessee's Willie Burton and three points by senior Dale Ellis in the final 1:30 gave the No. 14 Volunteers a 76-74 non-conference college basketball victory over New Orleans Saturday night.

Ellis, who finished with 30 points, tied the game at 74-74 on a 18-footer with 1:31 remaining. He then hit one of two free throws with 1:15 left.

The Vols got the ball back with 48 seconds remaining when Burton, a 6-foot-7 junior, stole the ball from Oscar Taylor, who was charged with his third foul.

Burton then hit one of two shots to end scoring with 34 seconds before Wade Blundell missed his corner basket with four seconds left.

Junior Michael Brooks finished with 25 points for the Southeastern Conference Vols, now 4-0.

New Orleans forward Mark Petteway finished with 19 points, while 6-8 center John Harris and 6-1 guard Claude Butler added 15 each for the Privateers, 2-2.

Memphis St.....80
Tenn. St.....62

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Phillip Haynes scored 17 points and Keith Lee added 16, leading fourth-ranked Memphis State to a 80-62 win over East Tennessee State Saturday night in a non-conference basketball game.

Lee, the Tigers' 6-foot-10 sophomore forward, also had a game-high 11 rebounds. Haynes, a 6-3 junior guard, scored 12 of his points in the second half.

Sonny Vinson, a 6-7 senior forward, led the Buccaneers with 15 points and nine rebounds.

The victory pushed Memphis State to 6-0. East Tennessee dropped to 2-2.

Memphis State broke the game open during the last seven minutes of the first half. The Tigers, leading by 23-20, outscored the visitors 12-2 to take a 35-22 halftime lead.

The Tigers maintained a comfortable lead for the entire second half.

Memphis State, who outrebounded the visitors 38-34, had a much better shooting night, hitting 33-56 for a 58.9 percent average. East Tennessee made 39.4 percent of its shots.

Kentucky.....76
Illinois.....57

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Dicky Beal scored 14 points and triggered an 11-0 run at the end of the first half to break open a close game as No.2 Kentucky routed Illinois 76-57 in a nationally televised college basketball game Saturday.

Beal, a reserve guard who led all scorers, hit the first two baskets as Kentucky scored the last 11 points of the first half.

The Wildcats were clinging to a 23-22 lead before Beal sparked the rally that gave Kentucky a 34-22 halftime lead. Beal also had two free throws in that stretch.

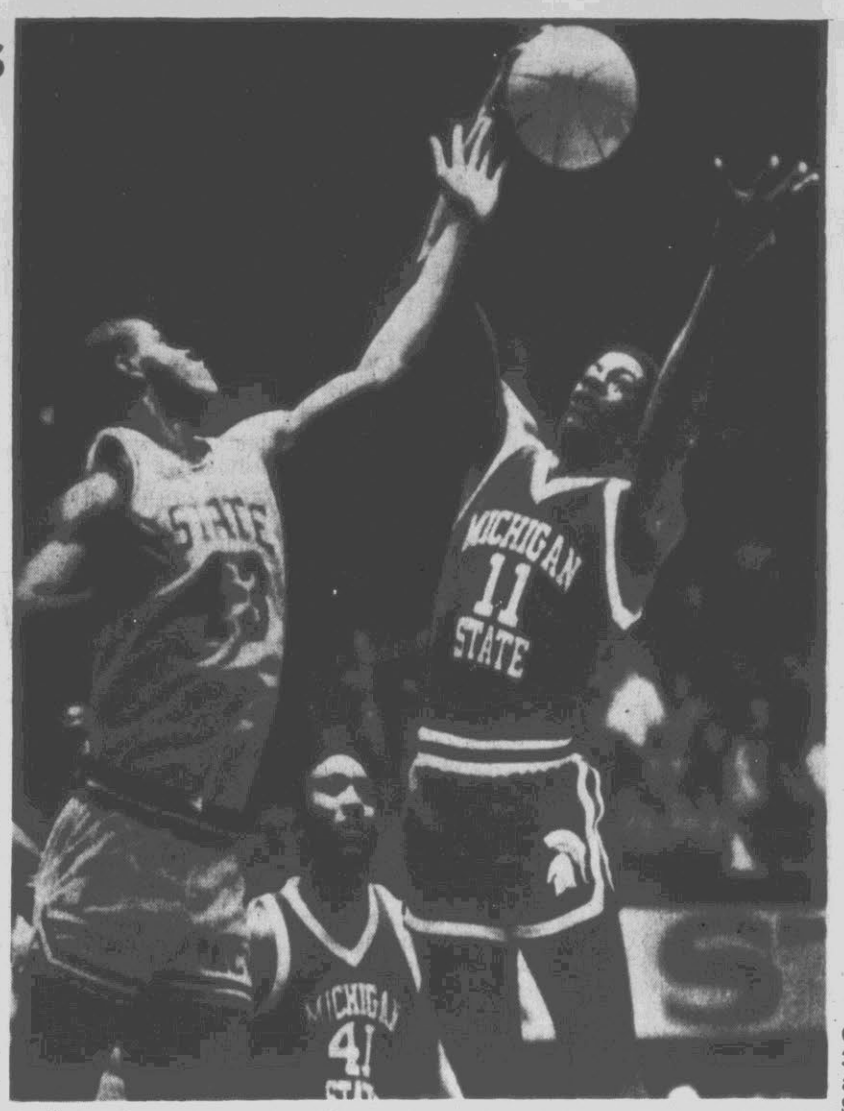

Kentucky quickly stretched the lead to 38-22 as Charles Hurt and Jim Master scored field goals to open the second half.

The Wildcats, 5-0, never seriously threatened thereafter.

The Illini, 5-2, moved within 62-49 with 3:24 to go when Jay Daniels and Bruce Douglas combined to score six straight points.

Kentucky answered with a basket by Melvin Turpin and three-point play by Beal to make it 67-49 with 2:10 remaining.

Hurt added 13 points for Kentucky, while Master and Turpin had 12 apiece.

NFLPA Signs Pact

WASHINGTON (AP) — After more than 10 months of negotiations which included a 57-day strike, the National Football League and its players' union signed a five-year, $1.6 billion contract Saturday night.

The agreement was signed in Washington at 8 p.m. by Gene Upshaw, president of the NFL Players Association, Ed Garvey, executive director of the union, Jack Donlan, chief negotiator for the owners and Chuck Sullivan, owner of the New England Patriots and chairman of the owners' executive committee.

The 1,500 players had ratified the agreement in tentative form on Wednesday by a 3-1 margin.

The parties had come within a phone call of reaching agreement late Friday, but NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle requested further discussions on several issues, including the status of players who were released during the strike and then would be re-signed after the agreement was signed.

Shortly before 10 p.m. Friday, Garvey had telephoned Pittsburgh Steeler president Dan Rooney, a member of the owners' executive committee who played a key role in settling the strike. Garvey told Rooney that he had initialed all portions of the agrement and that he was wiring Rozelle that "you have an agreement if you want it."

The agreement followed a 12-hour day of wrangling Friday over final positions as phone calls and cables were exchanged among Garvey, Rozelle, Rozelle's labor consultant, Bill Curtin, Rooney, Sullivan and Pittsburgh attorney Paul Martha, who served as an unofficial mediator in the final stages of the dispute.

Among the last issues to be settled were final disposition of pending unfair labor complaints before the National Labor Relations Board and a lawsuit, filed in federal court here, challenging the validity of the standard player contract.

The status of that issue after the signing could not immediately determined.

Sullivan said in a statement the signing indicated "the beginning of a new era of labor relations in the league.

"Both players and owners have learned from this disastrous strike that we have to work more closely together in the future to assure there will never again be a strike in the NFL."

Negotiators had announced a tentative agreement on Nov. 16 in New York. The players returned to work the next day ending an eight-week strike that cost both sides an estimated $280 million in lost wages and revenues.

Before the players returned, eight weekends of the 16-week regular season had been wiped out.

Panthers Down Tigers

BETHEL — Greg Hines and Charles Harris combined for 30 points to spark North Pitt to a 51-45 win over Williamston Saturday night in a nonconference basketball game.

In the girls' game, North Pitt downed Williamston, 25-18.

Hines scored a game-high 18 points and Harris added 12 to help the Panthers erase a three-point halftime deficit.

North Pitt, now 3-1, inched out to a 11-7 lead in the first period, but the Tigers came back to outscore the Panthers, 19-13, in the second period for a 26-23 lead at the half.

North Pitt cut the deficit to two (37-35) after three periods and outscored the Tigers, 15 to 8, in the final period to win by six.

David Little lead Williamston, now 2-3, with 11 points.

North Pitt continued to have its problems at the free throw line, hitting just 11 of 25. The Panthers hit only two of 17 from the line in a 42-36 loss to Roanoke Tuesday night.

In the girls' game, Williamston did not score in the first or third periods but still led at the half, 12-10. North Pitt led, 6-0, after the first but a 12-4 spurt by Williamston gave it a two-point lead at the half.

North Pitt regained the lead in the third period by outscoring Williamston, 7-0, for a 17-12 lead. The Pant-HERS also took the final period, 8-6.

North Pitt (3-1) was led in scoring by Sudi Sharpe with nine points. The Lady Tigers, now 1-4, did not have anyone with more than four points.

Chargers Outscore Forty-Niners, 41-37

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Dan Fouts won a wild passing duel with Joe Montana by throwing for five touchdowns and a career-high 450 yards as the San Diego Chargers edged the San Francisco 49ers 41-37 Saturday.

Montana broke one of Fouts' National Football League records with a fifth straight 300-yard passing game, totaling 356. But Fouts' 3-yard touchdown pass to running back Chuck Muncie with 3:22 remaining settled the record-producing quarterback matchup.

The teams combined for an NFL-record 65 completions, including 33 by Fouts and 31 by Montana. There were just two passes intercepted, both by the Chargers.

Montana fired his third touchdown pass of the game, 7 yards to Dwight Clark, with 6:41 left to send the 49ers into a 37-34 lead. The Chargers came back to score on a 72-yard drive, and the 49ers' final hopes for victory were killed when linebacker Woodrow Lowe intercepted a fourth-down pass by Montana in San Francisco territory.

Fouts, in the third 400-yard passing day of his career, hit Wes Chandler on three touchdown passes and tossed one to Eric Sievers. Rolf Benirschke kicked two field goals in the victory which gave San Diego a 4-2 record.

The 49ers, who fell to 2-4, were unable to sack Fouts in the game.

Montana ran for a touchdown as well as throwing touchdown passes to Jeff Moore, Fred Solomon and Clark. He completed his first 15 passing attempts, setting a club record.

Clark finished with 12 receptions, another club record. Chandler gained 125 yards on seven catches.

Fouts' previous single-game high for passing yardage was 444 against the New York Giants in 1980. He passed for 433 yards in a 1981 playoff game against Miami.

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Rookie Floyd Eddings' pass receptions set up Scott Brunner's second-quarter touchdown tosses to Butch Woolfolk and Ernest Gray that propelled the New York Giants to a 23-7 victory over Philadelphia Saturday.

The loss virtually killed the Eagles' chances of reaching the National Football League playoffs.

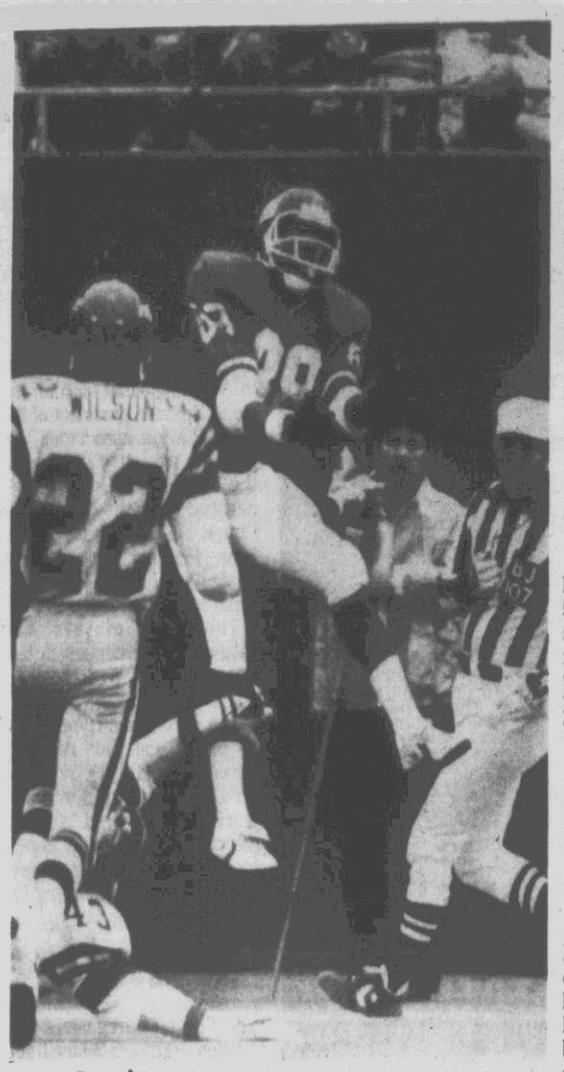

Eddings, a free agent out of the University of California, caught five passes for 148 yards. He hauled in a 41-yarder at the Philadelphia 6-yard line to open the second quarter, three plays before Brunner found Woolfolk on a 5-yard strike.

On New York's next possession, on the first play after Leon Bright returned a punt 29 yards to the Eagles' 39, Brunner found Eddings for 24 yards. Two plays later, Brunner hit Gray in the end zone for a 16-yard TD pass.

The Giants defense sacked Philadelphia quarterback Ron Jaworksi eight times for 61 yards and New York cornerback Terry Jackson intercepted two passes.

The Eagles, two years removed from the their only Super Bowl appearance, dropped to 1-5 with their fourth consecutive loss since the end of the players' strike. With only three games left, they will finish with their first losing season since going 5-9 in 1977, Dick Vermeil's second year as their head coach. The Giants have won three in a row and are 3-3.

Brunner's scoring passes wiped out Philadelphia's 7-3 lead built on Jaworski's 23-yard touchdown pass to Harold Carmichael with 1:50 remaining in the first quarter.

Terps, Tigers Victorious

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — Jeff Adkins and Ben Coleman eached scored 17 points to lead Maryland to an easy 85-64 victory over Duquesne Saturday night in a nonconference college basketball game.

Adkins made 6 of 7 shots from the floor in the first half when the Terrapins built up a 19-point lead. The Dukes led, 4-2, but Maryland went on a 16-6 streak to take command of the game.

The Terrapins' 46-27 halftime advantage became 54-31 three minutes into the second half, and Duquesne never got closer than 19 points the rest of the way. The largest Maryland lead was 76-50.

Duquesne, which fell to 2-2, was led by Emmett Seller, who scored 11 points. Maryland placed four players in double figures in raising its record to 3-2.

Adrian Branch, the Terps' leading scorer on the season, contributed 12 points. Branch had been slated to undergo knee surgery the day before, but decided to forego the operation. The sophomore did not appear to be slowed by the injury, and was not removed from the game until five minutes before its conclusion.

Clemson.....95
Presbyterian.....69

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — Senior forward Fred Gilliam poured in 19 points to lead the Clemson Tigers to a 95-69 non-conference win over Presbyterian Saturday night.

Raymond Jones added 18 points for the Tigers, now 4-3 on the year. Steve Smith hit 19 points for Presbyterian, which fell to 6-3.

Clemson fell behind 9-4 early in the game because of Smith's hot shooting. The junior point guard had three three-point baskets in his total.

But the Tigers, led by Gilliam and freshman Warren Wallace, outscored Presbyterian 14-3 to take the lead for good, 18-12. Wallace finished with a career high 17 points.

The Clemson lead reached 12 late in the half, then ballooned to as much as 28 in the second half.

Point guard Mike Eppley, who joined the basketball team Dec. 1 after starting at quarterback on the football team, contributed six points, five assists and a steal in 21 minutes of play. Eppley along with running mate Mark Campbell, was highly effective in controlling the tempo of the game.

Three-point goals: Presbyterian: S. Smith 3-8, Coon 0-1, Behrens 0-1, Nunnery 0-1, Howell 0-1; Clemson: Schaffer 0-1, Gilliam 2-3, Wallace 1-1, Campbell 0-2, Jenkins 0-1, Bynum 1-3, McCants 0-1, Eppley 0-1.

Lady Bucs Fail To Place

FAIRFAX, Va. — East Carolina's women's track team failed to place anyone in the top 12 at the George Mason Invitational Saturday.

The Lady Pirates' top place was turned in by Davena Cherry, who finished 13th in the 55-meters with a time of 7.3. The top 12 went on to the finals.

ECU coach Pat McGuigan said "the biggest surprise of the meet" was Renee Felder, who ran a 5:03.2 1,500 meters.

Poor Second-Half Spells Doom For Knights, 43-41

WILSON — Alamance held Greenville Christian to 11 second-half points to earse a 10-point halftime deficit and come away with a 43-41 win Friday night in the consolation game of the Wilson Christian Invitational.

GCA, now 2-2, led, 30-20, at the half but scored just two points — to 19 for Alamance — in the third quarter to fall behind, 39-32. GCA cut the deficit to two in the final period but Alamance held on for the win.

"I don't know what happened," GCA coach Dale Thatcher said.

Alamance was led by Steve Smith with 14 points. Chris Harris had a game-high 15 points for GCA and Brian House added 10.

GCA raced to a 14-7 lead at the end of the first quarter and pushed its lead to 10 at intermission before the Knights' offensive punch deserted them in the second half.

GCA plays host to Bethel Christian Friday.

Pittsburgh Invades Buffalo

By The Associated Press

It's been two years since the Pittsburgh Steelers visited Buffalo. It's also been two years since the Pittsburgh Steelers were a playoff team. There's a definite connection there.

In 1980, the Steelers visited the Bills and were beaten 28-13, one of the reasons they failed for the first time in nine years to advance to the playoffs. Last year they dipped to 8-8, the first time since 1971 they failed to finish with a winning record.

This year, they have rebounded, riding Terry Bradshaw's strong right arm — he's the league's leading passer with a league-high 12 touchdown passes — to a 4-1 record and a share of first place in the American Conference. In their only loss, Bradshaw was knocked out of commission by Seattle. Pittsburgh ripped Kansas City 35-14 last Sunday with Bradshaw throwing for three scores.

The Bills coughed the ball up five times last Sunday in a 33-21 loss to Green Bay that dropped their record to 3-2. "They have the ability to run the football. They move the ball well, and they move it in big chunks," said Steelers Coach Chuck Noll. "They will also throw the football and have dangerous wide receivers."

Sunday's other games are New Orleans at Atlanta, Tampa Bay at the New York Jets, the Los Angeles Raiders at Kansas City, Cleveland at Cincinnati, Detroit at Green Bay, Baltimore at Minnesota, Miami at New England, Washington at St. Louis, Chicago at Seattle and Denver at the Los Angeles Rams. On Monday night it's Dallas at Houston.

In Saturday's games, the New York Giants defeated the Philadelphia Eagles 23-7 and San Diego beat San Francisco 41-37.

Both the Falcons and Saints take 3-2 records into their meeting. "When you are playing a nine-game schedule, each week is crucial," said Atlanta Coach Leeman Bennett. "The Saints are obviously one of the teams we are competing against for a playoff spot. They are playing great football and it will take the same kind of effort and execution we had against Denver (in a 34-27 victory) if we are to win."

In 1981 the Falcons swept New Orleans, 27-0 and 41-10, when the ground game accounted for virtually all the Saints' offense. "Last year," Bennett said, "it was good enough to stop George Rogers. This year, New Orleans can go through the air as well."

Tampa Bay is coming off a 13-10 victory over the Saints. The Bucs now face the Jets, who rank No. 1 in the league in both total offense and total defense.

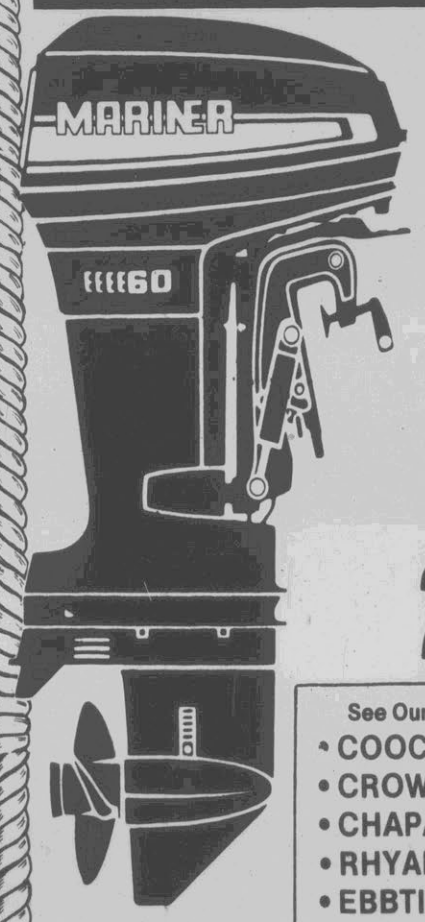

"New York puts a lot of pressure on the quarterback with their pass rush and the rest of their defense does a pretty good job, too," said John McKay, Tampa Bay's coach. "But in Doug Williams we probably have the best quarterback in the league against the rush with his height, strength, athletic ability and quick release. If he gets any kind of time from the front line — and we've been doing a good job of that lately — he'll get the pass off."

The Jets will be playing without linebacker Stan Blinka, sitting out a one-game suspension levied by Commissioner Pete Rozelle as a result of the flagrant foul Blinka committed two weeks ago in the Jets' 15-13 victory over Green Bay. Blinka leveled Packers' wide receiver John Jefferson with a forearm to the face in that game. Blinka is only the second player in NFL history to be suspended for rough play, the other one being Mel Morgan, a Cincinnati defensive back, in 1977.

The Packers have the National Conference's leading passer, Lynn Dickey, going against the fading Detroit Lions, who counter with the NFC rushing leader, Billy Sims.

Chaney Back In ECU Fold

Darlene Chaney, 6-2 sophomore center from Richmond, Va., has rejoined the East Carolina University women's basketball team but did not play in last night's game against Appalachian State, won by ECU, 90-52.

Chaney, according to Coach Cathy Andruzzi, made an appearance before the team on Tuesday and apoligized for the actions which led to her leaving the team over a week ago prior to the N.C. State game. She returned to practice on Wednesday. No announcement was made of her return, but she was dressed and on the bench at the Saturday night game.

"I hope that she has learned from this and will contribute to the team from here on out," Andruzzi said following the game. "People have to realize we expect a lot out of our players and if they don't fulfill their obligations they can't play. What they do is unimportant, but we treat them all the same. We don't treat (all-America candidate) Mary Denkler any different than the others, so why should anyone else get special treatment."

Andruzzi said that Chaney would have to earn her way back onto the court to get playing time.

Greenville Swimmers Win Meet

The Greenville Swim Team defeated Goldsboro and two other area teams in a quad-meet here Saturday.

Greenville outscored Goldsboro, 662 to 597, to win the meet. Kinston was third with 118 points and Tarboro was a distant fourth with 27.

Greenville had two triple winners: Jeff Carstarphan and Kara Bozik. There were also three double winners. They were Park Williams, Delores Williams and Kelly Barnhill.

Camels Win, 64-53

BUIES CREEK (AP) — Mike Vandy scored 23 points and tied a school record with 18 rebounds in leading Campbell to a 64-53 college basketball victory over Pembroke State Saturday.

Vandy, a 6-7 junior center from Riverton, N.J., hit on 8 of 17 field goal attempts and 7 of 9 free throws while tying the rebound mark set by Ron Curtis in 1979 against Samford.

Campbell led 34-30 at halftime, but broke it open in the second half by hitting on 16 of 26 field goal attempts, 61 percent.

Campbell, 2-2, also received 13 points from Larry Cannady and 10 from guard Harvey Smith.

Pembroke State, which fell to 5-4, was led by Darryl Martin with 17 points while Mike Emanuel chipped in 16.

and of scoring more on its end of the court. "Cusimano had 16 points (in the first half) inside and we can't have that. If we had done a better job on defense in the first half, we'd have created more offense for ourselves. That's the way we have to be.

"ASU did a nice job out there, but we had better quickness at the guards and should have attacked them more in the first half.

"In the second half," Andruzzi continued, "we forced more turnovers and it was more like our game."

The coach was also pleased with the play of her four freshmen, Mabry, Bragg, Rita Simmons and Lisa Squirewell. "Several times we had three or all four of them out there at one time. They did a nice job. They're learning well and should be more help to us after Christmas."

She praised the individual play of Denkler, Mabry, Foster and noted that Bragg played a fine game off the bench.

"I expect the best out of our team, and I won't settle for less than that," she added.

Appalachian's offense was led by Cusimano with 19 points — just three in the second half after she picked up four fouls by halftime and saw only limited playing time in the second before fouling out just before the end.

No other Mountaineer scored in double figures. Cusimano also led the ASU rebounding with eight, while Susan Cameron and Theresa Smith each had seven. Squirewell had seven for ECU to go with Denkler's 12.

The Lady Pirates are idle — as far as games are concerned — until December 30, when they open a month-long road trip with a stop at Notre Dame. In between, the Lady Pirates will continue their drills through this week, then take a week off. They return to campus on December 26 and leave for South Bend, Ind., on December 28.

Wisconsin Defeats Kansas State, 14-3

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Junior quarterback Randy Wright threw for two touchdowns, one good for 87 yards, to lead Wisconsin to its first-ever postseason victory as the Badgers beat Kansas State 14-3 in the seventh annual Independence Bowl Saturday night.

Wright hit on 10 of 24 pass attempts for 183 yards, mustering the only real offense of the night. Neither team could get a rushing game going.

The Badgers' first score came on a 16-yard Wright pass to Mike Jones in the second quarter and, in the third quarter, with Wisconsin at its own 13-yard line, Wright tossed a short pass to wide receiver Tim Stracka, who raced all the way to the end zone.

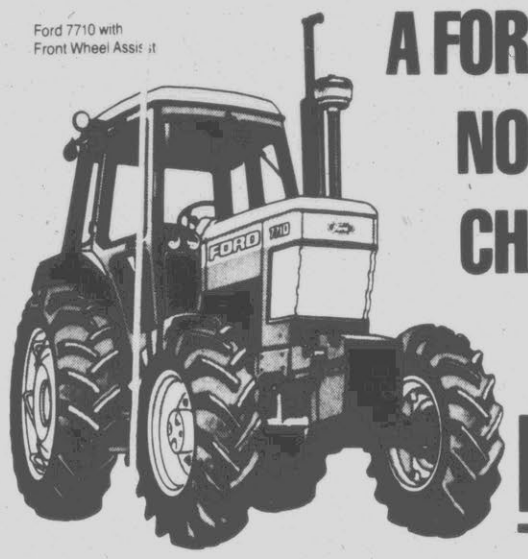

The 87-yard completion was the longest TD pass in the young bowl's history.

Wisconsin started slow and couldn't muster a first down until the second quarter.

The Wildcats scored first, taking advantage of a Wisconsin fumble at the Badger 18. Steve Willis kicked a 29-yard field goal.

The score awakened Wisconsin, which then went 79 yards in eight plays for its first touchdown.

Ford 7710 with Front Wheel Assist

A FORD FIRST... NO FINANCE CHARGES IN 1983... NONE!

Buy NOW and save TWO ways!

The first year is on Ford!
Ford is making it even more affordable for eligible buyers to own a new Ford Tractor NOW! It's simple and SUBSTANTIAL! Buy a new Ford Series 10 World Tractor or TW Series Tractor before the end of this year and get waiver of retail finance charges for ALL OF 1983!!

YOU COULD SAVE UP TO $2,300.00 ON A TYPICAL TRACTOR FINANCING $20,000.00

A big tax break for buying NOW!
1982 allows the FULL value of the Accelerated Cost Recovery System (ACRS depreciation) and Investment Tax Credit (ITC). In 1982, you can claim up to 10% ITC without reduction of the depreciable basis. Not so in 1983! For acquisitions made after December 31, 1982, the tax basis of the equipment must be reduced by 50% of the ITC claimed.

Here's a comparison: $20,000 Ford Tractor

Buy in 1982	Buy LATER
ITC $2,000	ITC $2,000
Depreciation basis— $20,000 depreciated under ACRS over 5 years	Depreciation basis— $19,000 depreciated under ACRS over 5 years

Take advantage of lower 1983 tax rates NOW!
Individual tax brackets are also lower in 1983 compared to 1982, so it could be advantageous for the individual to capitalize and commence ACRS in 1982, instead of 1983, when the tax rates will be less.

The countdown to 1983 is underway
The waiting game can cost prospective tractor buyers money ... lots of it! The "buy signal" is on NOW! To The Editor:

Last night (Wednesday), I watched ECU go against a very strong and talented NC State Basketball team. Coach Harrison's men played hard with enthusiasm and spirit. The final score did not adequately reflect the essence of the game.

The roar of the partisan crowd was almost deafening at times. It has been said that ECU students are only interested in partying and having a good time. I don't know about that, but they can't be much different that the NC State students. The support that they (State) give their athletics is tremendous. I look forward to the day when ECU students support athletics as do Carolina, State and Duke.

We have teams to be proud of — they need full support on and off campus.

Blocked Shot
Rose High School's Jeff Hopkins (52) goes up high to block a shot by D.H. Conley's Kevin Gatlin (24) during Friday night's action at Rose. Conley rallied behind the play of Gatlin in the second half to pull off a 75-65 victory over the Rampants. It was the second Conley win over Rose this year. (Reflector Photo by Katie Zernhelt)

Gatlin Leads DHC Past Rose, 75-65

Keith Gatlin, Maryland-bound super star of the Conley Vikings, popped through ten fourth quarter points to spark his team to a 75-65 come-from-behind win over Rose High School Friday night.

The contest, which saw Conley trail most of the first three periods, kept the near-capacity crowd in the Rose gymnasium hopping all evening long.

Earlier, Conley's girls captured their second win over Rose, 49-44, withstanding a furious Rose rally.

Gatlin, who finished the night with 28 points, 18 of them in the second half, seemed frustrated by the Rose defense in the first half of the contest.

"They played a great defense on him," Conley coach Shelley Marsh said. "They kept a man on him all the time and when he got the ball they forced him into double coverage. But in the second half, he began to get loose one-on-one and he was able to do his thing."

Unofficially, Gatlin popped through nine of 14 shots, pulled 11 rebounds and dished out three assists. He would have had more of the latter had teammates made shots they tried.

Both teams shots well, Conley hitting on 55.6 percent and Rose on 48.2. Conley made five more free throws on five more attempts.

The big difference, however, was on the boards, where the Vikings enjoyed a 38-24 advantage. That allowed them more chances and they made good on more.

"Rebounding was definitely the difference," Marsh said. "But we also got some key baskets from Reggie Smith there when we were taking over. Our pressure defense helped us get back some too late in the first half. I was glad to get back to within four after being down by nine."

Rose Coach Jim Brewington said it appeared that his Rampants sort of ran out of gas in the second half. "We played one half and we didn't play the other," he said.

One problem was that the Rampants had Allen Dickens on the bench much of the evening in foul trouble. "We need him in there for scoring and rebounding," Brewington said. "Mac Walston had an outstanding game, but without Dickens, it was not a compete game for us.

"We had a good plan offensively and defensively, and we worked it well in the first half, but in the second half, it looked like we got tired. But I can't take anything away from Conley. And Gatlin is a great player."

It took Conley nearly half of the first quarter to get on the scoreboard, and by then, Rose had run out to a 7-0 lead, getting three points from Dickens and baskets from Albert Brown and Walston.

Conley broke the ice with a free throw by Leon Cox with 4:43 left, and he got the first Viking field goal with 4:03 showing to cut it to 9-3.

Over the remaining three and a half minutes, Conley was able to inch back to a 15-11 deficit as Gatlin had only two first quarter points.

After closing to within two, 19-17, Conley watch Rose score seven straight points to run out to a 26-17 lead — the biggest spread for the Rampants. Jeff Hopkins started the run with a free throw and Walston added two more. Donnell Lee popped in two more from the stripe and Walston hit off a fast break with 5:24 left.

But Mitchell Cox stopped the string, and Conley began to inch back once more. Led by eight points from Gatlin over the next three minutes, Conley finally took the lead, 30-29 on a follow snot by Gatlin with 1:45 left.

Lee, however, put Rose back up and Walston added a three-point play for a 34-30 lead. Each team scored once more before the half ended with Rose up, 36-32.

After Rose got the first score of the third period, Conley scored four straight baskets to move ahead, 40-38 with 5:19 left in the frame. Rose regained the lead, however, and the two teams swapped it back and forth until Rose moved back out 48-46 on a jumper from the lane by Lee with 1:27 left. Rose held on for a 52-50 lead at the end of the period.

Gatlin then scored on a three-point play just seven seconds into the final period, putting Conley up, 53-52. Donald Wilson added a jumper from the baseline and Conley led, 55-52. Rose twice cut it back to one before Gatlin got another three-pointer for a 60-56 lead, and both Smith and Gatlin hit again for an eight point lead, 64-56.

A three-pointer by Leon Cox minutes later ran it to 69-58, the largest Conley lead with just 49 seconds left in the game.

In addition to Gatlin's 28, Leon Cox had 12 and Mitchell Cox, 10 for Conley. Walston paced Rose with 24 while Lee had 14 and Tony Clemons had 12.

"I don't think this was Keith's best game," Marsh said. "That was probably the Washington game. But he did take charge in the second half and that's what we expect from him."

Conley, playing without center Karen Barrett, found it had trouble with Rose, a team the Valkyries beat a week ago, 63-37.

"Karen sprained an ankle against Ayden-Grifton and we decided to hold her out," Coach Joy James said. "This was an important game for us, but I'd rather have her for the conference games later on than take a chance now."

Rose, taking advantage of that — plus a large number of Conley turnovers — took the lead early on, then overcame a 4-2 Conley lead to hold a 10-6 margin before finally leading 10-8 at the end of the quarter.

Conley regained the lead early in the second period, 12-10, then extended it out to five, 17-12 before Rose came back to within one on two jumper by Frances Barnhill. Conley eased back out, however, 20-16, before the half ended.

Conley scored three straight baskets in the early minutes of the second half, two of them by Mechio Kornegay to take a 26-16 lead. Minutes later, Irish Barnhill scored on the fast break for a 31-20 lead. Then, just before the quarter ended, Kornegay scored again to make it 37-24, a 13-point edge.

Kornegay scored early in the fourth period to make it 39-24, the biggest lead for the Valkyries, before Rose began to turn the game around.

The Rampettes pushed through four straight baskets, two by Alma Atkinson, before Conley scored again. Rose then matched them until Barnhill and Atkinson both hit to cut the lead to 46-42 with 25 seconds left. Rose cut it to three before two free throws by Barnhill closed the door.

Rose enjoyed a 43-30 rebounding edge in the game, and James attributed that to Barrett's absence. "We had to play several girls in different positions than they are used to," she said. "I thought they did a good job, but Rose played a much better game this time too. Their guards are very good. If they had someone who could dominate the inside, they'd really be good."

Rose coach Dennis Gibson was pleased with the game, despite the loss. And he pointed to one big factor in the game — free throws.

Conley made nine of 17 shots from the line — while the Rampettes never went to the line. "History was made tonight. That's the first time I've ever been involved in a game where we didn't shoot a free throw — and in our own gym at that."

James echoed Gibson's amazement, saying she had never played a game in which her opponent never got a free throw.

"That was the biggest difference in the game," Gibson said. "I just hope we get the chance to play them again."

The two could meet again in the Conley Holiday Tournament.

Kornegay led Conley's scoring wtiih 18 points, while Darlene Cannon had 13 and Barnhill had 11. Rose was led by Barnhill with 18 and Atkinson with 10.

Rose's boys are now 0-3, while the girls are 1-2. The Conley boys and girls are both 4-0.

Moore Named Citadel Coach

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — The Citadel named Gardner-Webb College football coach Tom Moore Friday to head its football program.

Moore was reportedly the top choice of Maj. Gen. James A. Grimsley, the president of The Citadel.

Moore played football for current Citadel athletic director Eddie Teague when Teague was coach at the Southern Conference school in the mid-1960s. He was interviewed by a five-man search committee Wednesday.

Grimsley said Friday there were 31 candidates who applied for the job and nine who came to the campus for interviews.

"Tom Moore was the unanimous selection of the Board of Visitors," said Grimsley.

Teague said Moore's background made the difference.

"He's a proven coach who's taken a team from a very poor beginning to a winner with a national ranking and runner-up in his conference," Teague said. "The key is he had the number one total offense player in the NAIA (quarterback Chip Stuart)."

Teague said Citadel officials want a winner, but a high priority is having an "aggressive and interesting" football program.

"The fact that he's a former cadet is a plus, but it wasn't a requirement," Teague said. "It means he can relate very well. Coaches at The Citadel have to be able to coach within the system, within the restirictions of a demanding military and academic environment."

Teague said Moore came to the Gardner-Webb program when it was losing and had limited resources — and he built an exciting winner. The new coach immediately hinted he'd be trying to build an exciting Citadel team.

"All good coaches say football games are won with good defense, but you also need to score more points than the other team," he said. "I believe in putting the ball up in the air."

Moore replaced Art Baker, who was fired Nov. 23 after a 5-6 season, his first losing record since 1978. Baker was criticized this year for the erratic performance of his offense.

Baker had been with the team five years after coaching at Furman for five seasons. His career record at The Citadel was 30-24-1, but the team placed fifth of eight teams in the Southern Conference this year.

The 37-year-old Moore just completed his fourth season at Gardner-Webb in Boiling Springs, N.C. His team's record in 1982 was 7-3 with a 17th ranking in the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics. In his previous three seasons at Gardner-Webb, Moore's teams had records of 2-9, 3-7 and 5-5.

This season, his team was a runner-up in the SAC-8 conference and had the top passing and total offense marks in the NAIA.

Roanoke Wins Fourth Straight

ROBERSONVILLE — Roanoke High School swept two Northeastern Conference basketball games from Edenton Holmes High School Friday night.

The Redskins won their game, 48-39, while the Roanoke girls added a 44-42 victory.

The win was the fourth straight without a loss for the Redskins. Roanoke's girls are now 2-2.

Details of the games were not available.

Baron Of Beddingfield Shoots Down Limping Jags

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

FARMVILLE — The Baron of Beddingfield shot down an already limping Farmville Central squad Friday night.

Baron Burks scored 16 points and grabbed 13 rebounds and Wilson Beddingfield took advantage of a depleted Farmville team to come away with a 43-40 victory Friday night.

In the girls' game, Beddingfield downed Farmville Central, 65-61.

Farmville, which edged Beddingfield, 45-42, earlier in the year, was without starting guard Bobby Carraway, who was sick. Not long into the game, starting forward Andrew Edwards picked up his third foul and played only sparingly the rest of the way.

Even without two starters, the Jaguars might have won except for a pass that slipped through Tony Hargrove's hands and the technical called after a Jaguar on the bench slammed the ball down in disgust.

With 29 seconds left and the Jaguars behind, 39-38, Edwards took an inbounds pass underneath the bucket and passed to a wide-open Hargrove, who was within 10 feet of the bucket and would have had an easy shot.

However, Hargrove missed the pass and the ball ended up on the Jaguar bench, where a player slammed the ball to the court. A two-shot technical was called and Burks made one of the two to up the lead to 40-38.

"That was the turning point," Farmville coach Mike Terrell said.

The Jaguars' chances — already slim — became nill moments later when Edwards blocked a Burks shot but was whistled for his fifth foul. It appeared Edwards had a clean block, but the official said he hit him on the wrist.

"I thought that block was good," Terrell said.

Burks made both free throws to up the lead to 42-38 and the Bruins were soon celebrating their second win in four outings this season. The Jaguars fall to 2-2.

Terrance Pettway led the Jaguars with a game-high 19 points. Pettway was the lone Jaguar in double figures.

Earnest Tucker had 10 points for Wilson.

The Bruins, led by Burks, outrebounded Farmville, 32-21. Hargrove topped the Jaguars with six rebounds.

Neither team shot well. The Bruins hit only 32.0% (16 of 50) from the floor, the Jaguars just 39.5% (15 of 38).

Terrell said the Bruin defense — a 2-3 matchup zone — was the reason for the Jaguars' poor shooting.

"Beddingfield played great defense," Terrell said. "They kept us a little off-key with that matchup zone. We had a little trouble adjusting."

The Jaguars had their problems figuring out the Bruin zone, but Beddingfield was equally troubled by the Farmville 1-3-1 zone. "We didn't play that bad a defense, either," Terrell said.

Farmville's defense and the Bruins' own impatience led to eight first-period turnovers by Beddingfield. Pettway, meanwhile, hit three buckets to help give the Jaguars a 10-7 lead after the first eight minutes.

It was a costly first period, however. Edwards picked up his third foul with 31 seconds left and did not play in the second period. Andrews was called for his fourth foul with 5:23 to go in the third period and went to the bench. He played most of the fourth quarter before fouling out with 19 seconds to go in the game.

"When Andrew is not playing a whole lot it hurts so much. That hurt a great deal," Terrell said. "If he's not playing we have to struggle."

Farmville extended its lead to 16-9 midway through the second quarter on two free throws and a jumper by Reggie Willoughby and a jumper by Pettway. But, a pair of buckets by Tucker led a 10-4 surge by the Bruins that cut the deficit to 20-19 at the half.

Beddingfield tied it in the third period at 25-25 on a drive across the lane by Burks and then took a 30-29 lead at the end of the quarter on a free throw and a power move inside by Burks.

Farmville regained the lead once in the final quarter — at 33-31 on a jumper by Pettway — and tied it later at 36-36. But, the Bruins went on top for good (39-38) with 47 seconds left on a jumper by Marcus Parker and held on for the win.

In the girls' game, Farmville Central blew a 19-point lead as the Lady Bruins rallied to defeat the Lady Jaguars for the second time this season. The defeat was the third straight without a win for Farmville.

Farmville led, 10-6, after the first quarter. The Lady Jaguars then scored 12 straight points to up their lead to 28-9 with 3:23 left in the first half. The Lady Bruins, however, outscored Farmville, 14-6, in the final three minutes to trail at the half, 34-23.

Beddingfield, now 2-2, cut the deficit to three early in the third quarter on four buckets by Stephanie Woods. The period ended with Farmville clinging to a 46-42 lead.

Four free throws by Rhonda Harris upped the Farmville lead to 60-53 with 2:18 left, but Beddingfield fought back while the Lady Jaguars scored just one more point.

Woods, who scored a game-high 17 points, hit a jumper and a free throw to cut the lead to 61-58. She then followed a missed free throw to cut the deficit to 61-60 with 28 seconds left.

The Lady Bruins took the lead moments later when Tracy Hooker took a tap from a jump ball and put the ball in for a 62-61 lead with 12 seconds left and send Beddingfield, which hit three of four foul shots in the last 10 seconds, on to the win.

Asked about the lost 19-point lead, Farmville Central coach Hilda Worthington said: "They're young and inexperienced. I'll tell you what happened — five of our girls fouled out."

Of those five, four were starters. Without them, Worthington was forced to go to a thin and inexperienced bench — the Lady Jaguars are without a senior, and have only one junior.

Beddingfield hit 21 of 50 free throws. Farmville canned 11 of 21.

The Lady Jaguars were led in scoring by Cynthia Hart with 16. Hart fouled out with 7:31 to go in the fourth period. Debra Joyner had 15 points and Harris 13 for Farmville. Stephanie Newton had 10 points for the Lady Jaguars.

Joining Woods in double figures for Beddingfield were Jackie Thompson with 15 and Hooker with 11.

"I was pleased with our play in the first half. But, when you have five foul out and only have freshman left it's tough," said Worthington, whose team was on the low end of a 65-36 score in the first meeting this year between the two teams.

Farmville travels to D.H. Conley Tuesday.

Beddingfield Wrestlers Pound Farmville, 42-19

STANTONSBURG — Beddingfield High School rolled to a 42-19 victory over Farmville Central High School Friday night in a wrestling match.

Farmville winners included Jerry Foreman at 132; Joel Shackleford at 119, Kent Speight at 112 and Calvin Tyson at 126. Speight won by a pin, while Shackleford had a superior decision. Foreman had a majority decision and Tyson, by forfeit.

The Jaguars travel to Goldsboro on Tuesday.

Bethel Council Honors Two N. Pitt Coaches

BETHEL — The Bethel Town Council formally congratulated North Pitt head football coach B.T. Chappell and head volleyball coach Lynn Rogerson recently at a town council meeting.

Chappell coached the Panthers to a 6-2-2 record — the best in the history of the school — and a share of the Eastern Carolina Conference regular-season title.

Chappell, whose Panthers were 2-8 two years ago, was named Coach of the Year in the ECC.

Rogerson led the Pant-HERs volleyball team to 9-7 record and second place in the ECC. Rogerson was named Coach of the Year in the ECC.

The Council said in a formal resolution that it congratulated "the team and coaches on an outstanding year in football and does further congratulate Coach B.T. Chappell for his untiring efforts, endless assurances, sympathetic understanding and outstanding leadership."

As for Rogerson, the Council said: "Coach Lynn Rogerson did perform her duties with all deligence, professional pride and effectiveness."

Tigers Upend Ahoskie

WILLIAMSTON — Williamston High School evened its early-season overall and conference record with a 76-59 victory over previously unbeaten Northeastern Conference foe Ahoskie Friday night.

Williamston's girls also won, 40-33, claiming their first victory of the season.

Williamston edged ahead, 11-10, after one quarter of play in the boys' game. The Tigers then blew Ahoskie away, 21-7, in the second quarter, running out to a 32-17 halftime lead.

Williamston added to its lead in the third period, 16-13, taking a 48-30 lead into the final quarter. In that, Ahoskie managed to nip one off point, outscoring the Tigers, 29-28.

Williamston was led by David Little with 22, while Craig Brown had 12 and James Ward had 10. Ahoskie was paced by Gino Lassiter with 14 points while Weyling White and Danny Whitaker each had 10.

The girls game also saw a tight first period as Williamston inched ahead, 14-13, at the horn. And again, Williamston used the second period to pull away, outhitting Ahoskie, 13-4. That gave the Lady Tigers a 27-17 halftime lead.

Ahoskie rallied, however, in the third period to cut the margin back to 37-29. In the final quarter, Williamston pulled away again, 10-4, to win going away.

Timberly Rodgers led Williamston with 13 points while Anita Harrell had 14 to pace Ahoskie.

The Williamston boys, prior to a Saturday night date at North Pitt, were 2-2 overall and 1-1 in the conference. The girls were 1-3, 1-1. Ahoskie is now 2-1, 1-1, while the girls are 0-3, 0-2.

JV Game: Ahoskie 39, Williamston 35.

Rampants Nip Kinston

KINSTON — Marvin Fleming won by decision in the heavyweight class to lift Greenville Rose to a narrow 36-32 victory over Kinston Friday evening in a high school wrestling match.

The match did not count in the Big East Conference standings. The two teams meet later in the year and that match will count in the league standings.

Rose, now 2-1, trailed 29-12 going into the 155-pound match but rallied to win the next three matches — all by pins, plus a point for a misconduct penalty — to take a 31-29 lead.

Kinston's Bobby Jones decisioned Rose's John Nelson, 5-4, to send the Vikings back on top, 32-31 going into the heavyweight match.

Fleming recorded a superior decision — worth five points — over Deangelo Brown, 16-1, to give the Rampants the win.

Rose travels to Northern Nash Monday.

Summary:

98 — Jo Cobb (K) p. Lindsay Grimes, 3:36.
105 — Robert Moore (K) won by forfeit.
112 — Paul Michaelson (R) p. Jerral Burney, 1:37.
119 — Francois Middleton (K) p. Mark Brewington, 1:24.
126 — Darrell Morris (K) d. Sherry Frank, 12-11.
132 — David Washburn (K) d. Hardy Jones, 21-17.
138 — Amos Edwards (R) won by forfeit.
145 — Tom Vermillion (K) d. Ken Daniels, 14-0.
155 — John Maye (R) p. Lynwood Harris, 3:17.
167 — Frank Corey (R) p. Morey Barbee, 1:21.
185 — Greg Davis (R) p. Jim Banner, 1:45.
195 — Bobby Jones (K) d. John Nelson, 5-4.
HWT — Marvin Fleming (R) d. Deangelo Brown, 16-1.

Note: Rose got one extra point at 185 for misconduct.

Bear Grass Downs Jamesville, 41-36

BEAR GRASS — Bear Grass High School swept a pair of Tobacco Belt Conference games from Jamesville Friday night. The Bear Grass boys took a 41-36 win while the girls were walking away with a 48-17 decision.

Bear Grass jumped off to a big lead in the first period in the boys' game, building a 17-9 lead in the frame. The Bears slowed in the second quarter, but still added to their lead, taking a 26-15 margin into the dressing rooms.

Jamesville rallied in the third period, 14-4, and trailed by only one point, 30-29, at the start of the final quarter. But the Bears held them off, 11-7, to pull off the victory.

Lawrence Watson led Bear Grass with 12 points, while Rex Bell had 12 and Kenneth Moore had 11 for Jamesville.

In the girls' contest, Bear Grass held only a 4-2 lead after one period. During the second quarter, they outhit the Bullets, 8-5, and held only a 12-7 margin at intermission.

But in the second half, the Bears exploded away. They outhit the Lady Bullets, 18-8, in the third quarter, running their lead to 30-15. They finished off Jamesville, 18-2, in the final quarter.

Angie Mizelle led Bear Grass with 14 points while Aria Williams hit 13. Jamesville was led by Kim Floyd with 11.

The Bears are now 2-2 overall, and 1-1 in Tobacco Belt play. The Bear Grass girls are 4-0, 2-0. Jamesville's teams drop to 0-4 overall and 0-2 in the league.

Bear Grass entertains Columbia, while Jamesville travels to Aurora on Tuesday.

JV Game: Bear Grass 43, Jamesville 29.

Kerwin Edges GCA In Tourney Opener

WILSON — Kerwin Christian School, the defending champion of the Wilson Christian Tournament, took advantage of some timidness on the part of Greenville Christian Academy Friday night and gained a 45-37 victory in this year's tourney first round.

Greenville, without the services of starting forward Dan Andrews, out with a sprained ankle, suffered on the boards without his services. "We played good defense," coach Dale Thatcher said, "but we lacked the board strength without him in there. We were a little nervous about them too after having lost to them last year."

Kerwin, of Kernersville, inched out into a 7-5 lead after one period. They came back wtih a 12-9 margin in the second frame to run the lead out to 19-12 at intermission.

The Knights rallied in the third period, 12-10, cutting the lead back to 29-24, but Kerwin outscored Greenville, 16-11, in the final period to take the victory.

Kerwin was led by John Southern with 12 points. Jerry Butts had 17 to pace Greenville.

Kerwin was to face hosting Wilson in the championship game on Saturday, while GCA took on Alamance Christian of Graham.

Dokes New WBA Champion

Mixing It Up

Heavyweight challenger Michael Dokes (left) is on the attack in the first round against WBA champ Mike Weaver. Dokes TKO'd Weaver in the first round to take the title from Weaver. (AP Laserphoto)

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Michael Dokes basked in the glory of the World Boxing Association heavyweight championship Saturday, but referee Joey Curtis continued to be the focal point of Dokes' controversial 63-second victory over Mike Weaver.

Cries of "fix" resounded through the Caesar's Palace Sports Pavilion Friday night after Curtis stopped the fight shortly after Weaver got up from a knockdown.

Asked if he thought the fight was a fix, Weaver said, "definitely."

"If he would have retaliated, I would have let the fight go on," said Curtis, "but he didn't do anything.

"If I had to do it again, I would do it the same way."

Dokes said Saturday that he can only remember Weaver throwing one punch after he got up from the knockdown which was caused by a left-right-left to the head. Immediately after the fight, Curtis said, "I wasn't going to have another Duk Koo Kim. You're not going to see any deaths, not in my fights."

Kim was fatally injured after being stopped in the 14th round by Ray "Boom Boom" Mancini, the WBA lightweight champion, in a fight at Caesar's Palace Nov. 13.

That fight brought some cries for the abolishment of boxing.

Curtis was the referee when Wilfredo Gomez knocked down Derrik Holmes eight times in scoring a fifth-round knockout in defense of the World Boxing Council super bantamweight title here Aug.22, 1980.

"I was criticized by Jose Sulaiman (WBC President) for letting the fight go on because Holmes had a broken jaw," said Curtis. "What am I supposed to be, an X-ray technician? Five of those times he went down, it was not because of punches, but because he wanted out. I kept telling him, 'You've got to fight.' I finally stopped the fight after the corner threw in the towel."

Curtis also recalled he worked a welterweight fight between Pablo Baez, and another fighter whose name he could not remember.

He said Baez, whom he described as a "rough, tough fighter with good power," lost the first seven rounds. Then, in the eighth round, Curtis said, Baez landed five punches to the head which badly hurt his opponent and he stopped the fight.

"Everybody criticized me, even my own commission — 'what the hell did you do?'" said Curtis. He said after the beaten fighter returned to his hotel, he was rushed to the hospital for treatment of a concussion and that he (Curtis) was then told by the commissioner that he had done a good job.

Weaver's manager, Don Manual, said after the fight that he would ask the WBA to call the fight no-contest and have Weaver and Dokes meet again within 30 days.

But since it ended on a referee's judgment, it is doubtful the result will be overturned.

Dokes said that the referee did the right thing and that the only thing he was thinking about was the title.

Promoter Don King appeared with Dokes at a Saturday press conference, and, as usual, had much to say.

"Of course, the first thing reporters ask is 'Do you think Don King had anything to do with it?'" he said in referring to the charges that the fight might not be on the level.

"Do you think the knockdown was on the up-and-up?" said Dokes.

Continuing his answer to charges of fix, King said, "I'm too smart to even get involved with the officials."

Dokes' victory ties King to both halves of the heavyweight championship. He also promotes Larry Holmes, the WBC champion, who is generally considered the No.1 heavyweight in the world.

Holmes earlier had said he would not fight Dokes in a unification title fight becaues King promotes both men.

At Saturday's news conference, Holmes, who was here as a Home Box Office television commentator, said, "Michael Dokes and I are going to fight for the next five years. I'm going to be the WBC champion and he's the WBA champion, and we're gonna reign around the world."

Havelock Nips Chargers

LITTLEFIELD — Ayden-Grifton came close — but got no cigar — Saturday night as Havelock High School pulled off a 60-57 victory over the Chargers in a non-conference basketball meeting.

In the girls' game, Havelock got another victory, 50-43.

Havelock jumped out to the lead in the first period, building up an 18-10 margin by the end of the quarter. Ayden-Grifton, however, took command in the second quarter, outscoring the Rams, 18-12, to trail by only 30-28 at the end of the half.

In the third period, Ayden-Grifton again outscored Havelock, 15-13, evening the score at 43-43 as the final frame got underway. But in that, Ayden-Grifton was never able to pull ahead, as the Rams outhit them, 17-14, to claim the win.

"We were within reach most of the period," Ayden-Grifton Coach Bob Murphrey said. "But we just never could pull it off. Havelock has a fine team and their guards play very well. (Rod) Caldwell is an outstanding player."

Caldwell led the Rams with 24 points, while Matt Miller added 14. Ayden-Grifton was led by Thomas Anderson with 26, while Tyrone Gay pitched in with 10.

Havelock and Ayden-Grifton played it point-for-point in the first period of the girls' game, which ended at 10-10. The Lady Rams, however, took the lead in the second half, and inched out to a 20-16 lead before the half.

Havelock again outscored the Lady Chargers, 15-8, in the third period, carrying its lead out to 35-24. Ayden-Grifton tried to rally, 19-15, but fell short.

Jenny Bell led Havelock with 16, while Susan Childers added 14. Angela Griffin had 17 and Linda Brown added 15 for Ayden-Grifton.

The Chargers are now 1-3 for both boys and girls. Havelock's boys are 3-1 while the girls are 2-2.

Ayden-Grifton travels to North Lenoir on Tuesday.

World Record & Bag Limit

Clifton Moss of Winterville (right) displays a 41 pound, 8 ounce king mackeral he caught off Morehead City in August. Moss was notified this month that the catch has been certified by the International Game Fish Association as a new men's world record on 16-pound test line. Moss was onboard the private boat "Dixie" when he made the catch, in company with Drew Smith of Greenville. Above, Ted Johnston of Greenville shows off his limit after a duck hunting trip. Ric Cox also of Greenville, participated in the hunt.

OUTDOORS With Joe Albea

STEEL SHOT ZONES for Waterfowl hunting apply again this year. Wildlife officials are puzzled by recent rumors that steel shot zones will not be in effect this year for waterfowl hunters.

"Steel shot zones are in effect again this year," said Vernon Bevill, executive director of the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission. "We don't know how the rumor got started, but it seems to be rather widespread in the eastern part of the state.

"The steel shot zones and regulations are Federal requirements, and there has been no change since they were set for this year."

Steel shot zone and regulations are designed to reduce the build-up of lead shot in heavily hunted areas since lead is ingested by waterfowl and can kill birds which accidentally eat it.

The steel shot regulations state that, in the following areas, no person shall take waterfowl while possessing 12-guage shells loaded with any shot other than steel shot.

The zones where this steel shot requirement applies include all waters (including sounds, lakes, ponds, marshes, swamps, rivers and streams) of Currituck, Dare and Pamlico counties, and within a 150-yard zone of land adjacent to the margins of such waters in these three counties. Drainage ditches and temporary sheet water more than 150 yards from the waters described above are excluded from the steel shot requirement.

In three other areas, no person shall take waterfowl while possessing shells of any guage loaded with shot other than steel shot. These areas include the Lake Mattamuskeet National Wildlife Refuge, Swanquarter National Wildlife Refuge and Cedar Island National Wildlife Refuge.

SPECIAL KNIVES offer future for wildlife.

If you'd like a knife for collecting or whittling and want to help wildlife in the bargain look no more. The Parker Cutlery Company of Chattanooga, Tenn., is producing a series of 19 pocket knives commemorating the "Year of the Eagle," and part of the proceeds from the sale of these knives will be donated to the North Carolina Wildlife Endowment Fund.

"Jim Parker, the owner of Parker Cutlery Company, has always shown a strong interest in wildlife conservation," said Gene Abernathy, chief of the Division of Enforcement for the NCWRC and a former director of the National Knife Collector's Association.

"He is interested in the Wildlife Endowment Fund, which will help fund wildlife conservation programs for future generations. We greatly appreciate his interest in this program, and the generous aid that he is providing," he added.

The knives come in many sizes, ranging from small pocket knives to large, folding skinning knives. Each knife has an eagle etched on the blade — the trademark of the Parker Cutlery Company — along with this inscription: "Year of the Eagle, 1782-1982."

This slogan was the theme of National Wildlife Week this year and commemorates the 200th anniversary of the bald eagle as our national symbol. The handles of the knivesare made of "second cut" staghorn. This material is usually found on only the best knives and features a beautiful pattern.

For more information on these knives, contact Parker Cutlery Company, P.O. Box 21550, Chattanooga, Tenn. 21550.

RAPTO CENTER director to speak.

Dr. Richard D. Brown, executive director of the Carolina Rapto Rehabilitation and Research Center, will speak at the monthly meeting of the Sierra Club. The meeting is set for Monday, Dec. 13, at 8 p.m. at the First Presbyterian Church on Elm Street.

REPORTING TURKEY POACHERS — Reporting a turkey poacher could make you $300 richer. In fact, the Southern Piedmont Chapter of the N.C. Wild Turkey Federation and the N.C. Bowhunters Association are offering $300 rewards for information leading to the arrest and conviction of any person who has illegally killed a wild turkey. The reward is part of an effort by concerned sportsmen to aid in expansion and restoration of wild turkey populations in the state.

"Illegal killing of wild turkeys is a serious problem," said Terry Sharpe, a wildlife biologist from Hamlet with the NCWRC. "In some areas, this poaching may prevent expansion of the turkey population. We urge all concerned citizens to report these violations."

Anyone wishing to report turkey poaching — or any other wildlife violation — should contact a local wildlife enforcement officer, or call the Wildlife Commission's 24-hour, toll-free Wildlife Watch hotline at 1-800-662-7137. All calls will be kept confidential.

Baseball Meetings

Slow Week For Trades; Long Week Of Talk

HONOLULU (AP) — Major league baseball reached a new low in futility at the week-long winter meetings.

Only eight trades involving 22 players were completed during the days of talk, talk, talk.

The previous low since a count was kept starting a decade ago was 11 transactions for 30 players at Toronto in 1979.

On the final day, Friday, there were two deals of minor nature. Complex player contracts were blamed by many clubs for the lack of action.

It seems the tail is wagging the dog.

A typical example was the attempt by the Los Angeles Dodgers to send four players to the Texas Rangers for catcher Jim Sundberg.

Dodgers' General Manager Al Campanis and his Texas counterpart, Joe Klein, shook hands on the deal.

But it fell through because Sundberg wanted his eight-year contract condensed to four, and insisted on retaining a no-trade clause.

"That's unacceptable to us," said Campanis, who was ready to send the Rangers pitchers Burt Hooton, Dave Stewart, Orel Hershiser and outfielder Mark Bradley.

Hooton also was believed to have asked for a buy-out of his right to approve a trade.

The only action Friday was trades between the Houston Astros and New York Mets, the Boston Red Sox and Chicago Cubs and a free agent signing by Houston.

The Astros obtained right-hand pitcher Mike Scott and sent outfielder-infielder Danny Heep to the Mets.

The Red Sox swapped pitcher Chuck Rainey to the Cubs for pitcher Doug Bird.

Houston also signed free agent outfielder Omar Moreno to a five year, $3.25 million contract.

And the Cubs said they had reached agreement in principle on the contract of outfielder Wayne Nordhagen, who had gone through the re-entry draft without being claimed.

The San Francisco Giants, seeking to avoid arbitration, a trade or free agency for pitcher Greg Minton, signed the reliever to a five-year deal through 1987.

Another action on the final day involved the Mets and Cincinnati Reds disclosing they had reached agreement on a deal that would send pitcher Tom Seaver back to the Mets, with whom he won three Cy Young Awards.

Even that was held up, because Seaver had to agree to the Mets' contract offer.

"It will take years and numbers," Seaver said in a telephone conversation.

Seaver won 189 and lost 110 in 10½ seasons for the Mets. He was traded to Cincinnati in June 1977.

The Giants also disclosed they were in the Steve Garvey sweepstakes. Vice President Tom Haller said he, and probably club President Bob Lurie, would meet Tuesday in Los Angeles with Garvey and his agent.

San Diego and the Chicago Cubs were believed to be the only two teams still in contention for Garvey, with their offers in the $7 million area, both believed far in excess of the Giants.

It was a snail's pace meeting to the end.

The 10 p.m. EST trade deadlinewas extended to 10:45 to allow the Chicago Cubs to complete a trade with the Chicago White Sox.

Outfielder-infielder Tye Waller went to the cross-town White Sox for right-hand pitcher Reggie Patterson. Both were assigned to minor league clubs.

There was only one deal Monday, the five-player swap that sent Red Sox third baseman Carney Lansford to Oakland for power-hitting outfielder Tony Armas.

Free Throws Lead Hawks Past Rams

WHEAT SWAMP — North Lenoir used the foul line to great advantage to gain a 57-48 non-conference basketball victory over winless Greene Central Friday night.

In the girls' contest, North Lenoir handed Greene Central its first loss of the year, 42-23.

North Lenoir inched ahead during the first quarter, gaining a 15-12 lead at the horn. In the second quarter, it remained close as both teams scored 15 points. That made it 30-27 for the Hawks at the half.

In the third period, Greene Central all but erased that with an 11-9 advantage. The Hawks then led, 39-38, going into the final period. Over the next six and a half minutes, the Hawks were able to up their lead to four, and after that, Greene Central put forced to foul to try and get the ball and the Hawks made good use of the foul line to pull away for the win.

Greene Central made just 10 of 15 at the line, while North Lenoir canned 27 of 36 tries at the stripe.

James Fisher led North Lenoir with 14 points, while Maurice Thorbes added 12. Greene Central was led by Tracy McLawhorn with 10.

North Lenoir's girls eased out into an 8-6 lead after one quarter, then outscored Greene Central, 8-2, in the second. That left the Lady Hawks up, 16-8, at intermission.

In the third period, North Lenoir tacked another point to its lead, moving out to a 27-18 lead. They then finished off the Lady Rams, 15-5, in the final quarter.

Stephanie Hemby led North Lenoir with 10 points and was the lone player in double figures for the game.

Greene Central's boys are now 0-3 on the year, while the girls are 2-1. North Lenoir is now 2-3, while the girls are 4-1.

Greene Central travels to West Craven on Tuesday.

JV Game: North Lenoir 66, Greene Central 57.

Duke's New Coach

Sloan Out For ACC Title

DURHAM (AP) — Steve Sloan, who took over as Duke University's head football coach this week, says his top priority at the school will be to capture an Atlantic Coast Conference title.

"As soon as this meeting is over we will begin working towards winning the championship in the Atlantic Coast Conference in football," Sloan said at a press conference Friday.

"That will be our objective. Coach (Red) Wilson and his staff have done a good job here. They have a good nucleus of players. They have brought the program along to a point where I think we can be successful, with the proper recruiting plan."

Sloan, 38, resigned from the University of Mississippi Wednesday to sign a five-year contract with Duke, after Wilson was fired following a season-ending victory over North Carolina.

He left little doubt about what his intentions are at Duke.

"I think the biggest factor here is to have a recruiting plan that is effective, well designed, and one that is workable within the eastern part of the United States — from the Mississippi river east," Sloan said. "If there is someone west of the Mississippi that we feel like we have a chance to recruit then we are going to try and do that. We just want to be precise in what our recruiting plan is. We feel we have a great university to recruit from and recruit to.

"Duke football is a lot more important than me or any other coach that has ever been here," he said. "We are interested in getting all the people behind the program, working in the same direction and building a championship football team."

Sloan said the Blue Devils' offense will remain as explosive as ever, but the defense may have a different look.

"Our philosophy as far as the football goes is that we will try to have a wide open offense like Duke has employed the last several years," Sloan said at a news conference. "Certainly, offensively we will try to do similar type things that Duke has done here and been quite successful.

"Defensively, we will play an alignment that suits our personnel and also fits the philosophy of our defensive coordinator whoever that is, since we have yet to hire a defensive coordinator at this point and time," he said.

Sloan has a 55-55-3 record 10 years as a head coach, including three bowl appearances. At Mississippi, his five-year mark is 20-34-1.

Ex-Giant Killed In Crash

HACKENSACK, N.J. (AP) — Ex-New York Giants wide receiver Rich Houston was killed early Saturday in a head-on collision that left another person dead, police and team officials said.

Police said the driver of the second car, who was injured, had been charged with drunk driving.

Houston, 37, of Hackensack, who played with the Giants from 1969 until 1973 and briefly played with the World Football League, died in a collision at 2:50 a.m. Saturday on a road here.

Duke Trustees Approve Policy Controlling $$ For Athletics

DURHAM (AP) — An athletics policy containing a formula controlling the amount of funds that are committed to intercollegiate sports has been approved by Duke Univeristy trustees.

"Competing demands for funds for other purposes require that clear constraints be placed on intercollegiate athletics," the policy reads in part.

The increase in funds for intercollegiate sports for the next three years will be limited to the percentage increase in the previous year's current budget for Duke, excluding the medical center.

In addition to that increase, more funds may be poured into women's sports that are elevated to intercollegiate status.

Without donors for specific projects, financial constraints will limit construction of new club and intramural facilities, the policy says.

Excellence is the goal of both academic and athletic programs at Duke, it says.

As applied to intercollegiate sports, the policy partially defines excellence as "a competitive performance in each team sport that frequently will produce winning seasons and the opportunity realistically to compete for team or individual championships." Also, it means athletes are "students first, that they be admitted according to that criteria."

Duke may be participating in fewer sports "at a higher level of performance," the policy says, adding that reaching for excellence means many participating athletes will not be grant-in-aid recipients.

Criteria to determine which sports should be added or deleted are set forth as: that the nationally or regionally recognized sports meet needs interests and abilities of male and female Duke students, reflect "due regard for the athletic tradition of Duke University as well as future promises," that Duke is able to provide proper facilities and funding, and that Duke can geographically schedule games or matches conveniently and competitively.

Air Force RB Critical

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — Derek Foster, starting halfback for the Air Force Academy, remained in critical condition Saturday, one day after he suffered major head injuries in a car accident.

Foster was alone Friday morning when the car he was driving hit an icy patch of road and struck a tree on the Air Force Academy grounds. After treatment at the academy, he was transferred to the intensive-care unit of Penrose Hospital.

A nursing supervisor said Saturday there had been no change in his condition.

The accident came three weeks to the day before he was scheduled to play for Air Force in the Hall of Fame Bowl against Vanderbilt.

The 20-year-old junior moved into a starting position halfway through this season. Foster finished the regular season with 404 yards on 62 carries. He has seven touchdowns, and his 42 points tie him for third on the team.

Interest Futures Decline Sharply

By KEITH E. LEIGHTY
Associated Press Writer

Interest rate futures prices declined sharply in light trading Friday.

Prices were slightly lower in early trading and drifted lower in a dull session dominated by the government report on retail sales, said David Duval, an interest rate analyst in New York with E.F. Hutton.

The Commerce Department reported that retail sales increased 2.3 percent, well above the 1.3 to 1.5 percent increase expected by market analysts, Duval said.

Increased retail sales could portend increased demand for credit and higher interest rates, according to market analysts.

Treasury bonds at the Chicago Board of Trade settled 27 ticks to 36 ticks lower with the contract for delivery in Decem-ber at 75-14. A tick is 1-32nd of a percentage point and represents a price move of $31.25 on a contract with a face value of $100,000.

Pork belly futures prices advanced sharply but live hogs and cattle drifted lower on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

Trading was moderate to heavy in pork bellies and live hogs but light in cattle. Cattle traders were reluctant to bid up prices because of apprehension of lower prices for dressed beef next week on wholesale markets and a report from the Agriculture Department on the amount of cattle on feed, also to be released next week, said Robert Kuhn, a livestock analyst in Chicago with Merrill Lynch Commodities.

Kuhn said market analysts expect the report to show an increase of from 10 to 17 percent over a year ago.

The declining cattle prices also affected live hogs, Kuhn said, because pork competes with beef for a share of the consumer's meat dollar.

Pork bellies, however, were sharply higher amid buying by commercial firms, which process the bellies into bacon, Kuhn said.

"The users feel they better start buying some if they're going to have some," Kuhn said, noting that the slaughter this week was 18 percent less than a year ago.

He said cash prices also were higher Friday, adding to the support for futures prices.

Live cattle were .10 cent to .45 cent lower with the contract for delivery in December at 58.25 cents a pound; feeder cattle were unchanged to .40 cent lower with January at 64.50 cents a pound; live hogs were .47 cent lower to .27 cent higher with December at 57.82 cents a pound; and frozen pork bellies were .20 cent to 1.65 cents a pound.

Grain and soybean futures prices were lower in light trading on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Wheat prices led the decline, with pressure coming from continued poor exports, said Scott Millimet, a grain analyst with Cargill Investor Services, Inc.

Millimet said sales of subsidized wheat by the European Economic Community and a report that Argentina has stepped up sales of wheat to China and Russia have eroded the price of U.S. wheat.

Corn prices also declined despite President Reagan's backing of a program to reduce crop production by paying farmers with grain instead of cash for reducing production.

Millimet said participation in the program might be poor.

"Cash flow is a problem for the farmer right now," he said. "The last thing he needs is more grain."

Wheat settled 6 cents to 7½ cents lower with the contract for delivery in December at $3.16 a bushel; corn was 1 cent to 1¼ cents lower with December at $2.34 a bushel; oats were 1¾ cents to 3½ cents lower with December at $1.59½ a bushel; and soybeans were ½ cent to 6½ cents lower with January at $5.69¼ a bushel.

Precious metals prices were lower in light, sluggish trading at the Commodity Exchange in New York.

Michael Wolloch, a metals analyst in White Plains, N.Y., with ACLI International, said trade typically becomes slow prior to the holidays.

In addition, the economic meeting in Europe involving U.S. Secretary of State George Schultz and European economic ministers is leading to caution in the metals markets, Wolloch said.

Gold settled $7.50 to $8.70 lower with the contract for delivery in February, the most active, at $441.50 a troy ounce; silver settled 23 cents to 25.9 cents lower with February at $10.438 a troy ounce.

RECEIVED TRIP

Avon Products Inc. announced that Joyce Streeter of Greenville was a winner of the "President's Sales Challenge," the company's largest sales competition of the year.

Avon, which said the award is an all-expense paid five-day trip to Hawaii, said Ms. Streeter has the option of choosing a cash award instead of the trip.

The company said the independent sales dealer is one of the top 700 Avon representatives to win out of 450,000 nationwide.

PURCHASE AGREEMENT

Peoples Bank & Trust Co. said it has agreed in principle to purchase from North Carolina National Bank six branch offices in Wilmington presently owned by the Bank of North Carolina and two in Jacksonville owned by NCNB.

The U.S. Comptroller of the Currency, in approving the merger of Bank of North Carolina into NCNB, required that the eight offices be sold as soon as possible to a bank that does not currently have a significant presence in those markets.

The merger of NCNB and BNC, approved on Nov. 23, should be completed Dec. 23.

Open House will be held at the Eastern Carolina Surgical Center today from 2 to 4 p.m. The public will be given an opportunity for a close-up view of the new facilities for outpatient surgery.

Open House Being Held At Surgical Center Today

Open House is being held at the new Eastern Carolina Surgical Center located at 102 Bethesda Drive here today from 2 to 4 p.m. to offer the public an opportunity to tour the new facility.

"This center's existence in eastern North Carolina represents medical cost containment at its best," Dr. William S. Bost said. "It's the way surgery is going in the 80s and we're glad to be making it available to residents of this region in the finest of facilities. We have state-of-the-art operating room equipment that's as good as that of any hospital, with all that's needed to cope with any emergency. Yet, for the most part, our patients are here for diagnostic and minor general surgery and are not expected to have severe post-operative pain. They can recuperate far better at home than in a hospital."

Dr. Bost, an otolaryngologist, is one of 20 Greenville area physicians who have applied for, built and are now using the ambulatory surgery facility to provide surgical care for patients from throughout eastern North Carolina.

"We've been operating since Nov. 8 and our patients are so pleased with how quickly and easily they can come in, have surgery and go home. The insurance companies like it, too. Many of them are paying 100 percent for the outpatient surgery we do here when they will pay only 80 percent for hospital surgery."

Joyce Dixon is executive director of the center, which has six operating rooms. She manages a staff of 18 persons, including nurses, operating room technicians, a central supply coordinator, maintenance personnel and office personnel.

The center opens each weekday morning at 6 a.m. and surgery is scheduled until 5:30 p.m. Only outpatient surgery is done. There are no facilities for anyone to spend the night. In the rare event that a patient would need to stay over, he or she would be entered in Pitt County Memorial Hospital, less than a mile away where all of the physicians on the surgical center staff have privileges.

All the physicians in the Greenville area are eligible to apply for privileges at the surgical center and many have. Credentialing is virtually the same as at the hospital. There are more than 400 surgical procedures approved as ambulatory surgery.

"Advances in technology and improved anethesia have greatly increased the number of operations that can be done on an outpatient basis because so many have been simplified," Dr. Bost said. "We can make small incisions and simple procedures now out of situations that once would have called for major surgery. And patients and their families are much more sophisticated than they used to be, more aware of their ability to follow directions, keep in touch and care for their own.

"Here patients can have a lot more privacy than they do in the hospital and can go home immediately after they come out of the recovery room. They're well briefed on what to do at home and our nurses call them the next day to see how they're doing.

"Surgery has become much more a component of extending and improving health than of treating the sick. Sick folks go to the hospital and stay there a while. Healthy people with medical conditions that need correcting walk in here, have surgery and are called for by their families or friends. It's a much more comfortable and therefore more health-augmenting atmosphere."

CRRR Center At UNC-Charlotte Deals With Preservation Of Birds Of Prey

From the beginning of time, mankind has been inspired and fascinated by majestic birds of prey. Collectively known as raptors, they include the accipiters, butoes, eagles, falcons, hawks, harriers, kites, ospreys, owls and vultures. These large and graceful birds have been symbolic of power and freedom in many cultures throughout the ages.

Although fully protected by federal and state laws, raptors are still shot by unknowledgeable, uncaring individuals. While attempting to catch rodents attracted to road rights-of-way, some raptors are hit be vehicles. Others suffer from destruction of nests and nesting habitats.

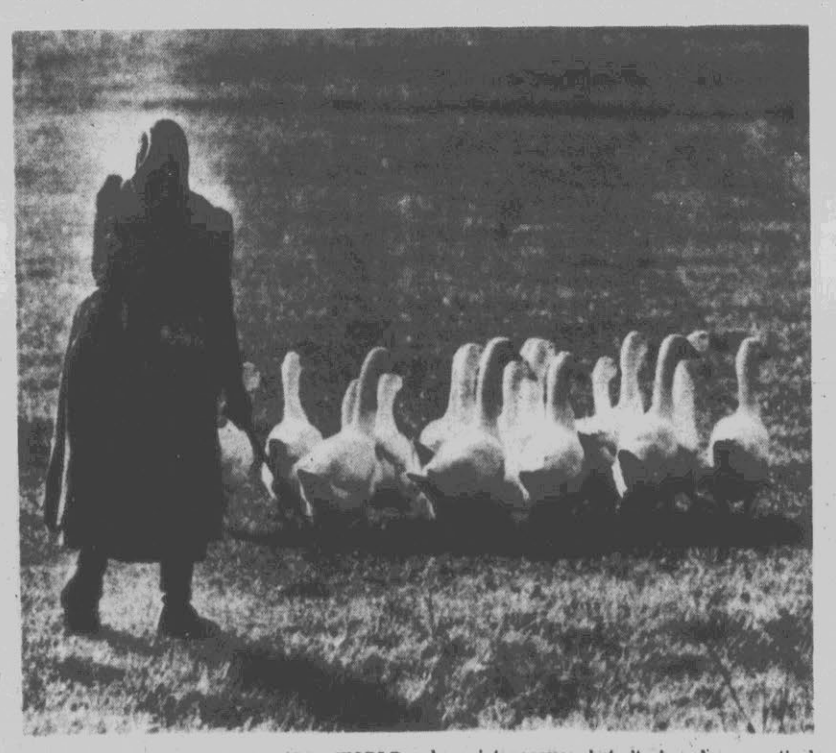

Often, orphaned young are found. Our continued disruption of the environment has caused the near extinction of many valuable species of raptors.

The Carolina Raptor Rehabilitation and Research Center is a non-profit, tax-exempt affiliate of the department of biology located on the campus of the University of North Carolina at Charlotte. Besides being located near the largest city in the Carolinas, CRRRC is centrally located in the Carolinas in a beautiful, rural Piedmont setting.

CRRC is dedicated to the rehabilitation, research and conservation of raptors and the education of public attitudes towards raptors. Injured and orphanned birds of prey are received by the center, given medical attention, restored to health, banded and released back to the wild.

Also, CRRRC is actively involved in research on the behavior, ecology and conservation of wild, free-ranging birds of prey. Raptors rehabilitating at the center also present an excellent research opportunity. While incresing our knowledge of raptor biology, research also strengthens our efforts to conserve birds of kprey for years to come.

Persons interested in the CRRRC program or wanting more information on ratpors may contact: Dr. Richard D. Brown, Executive Director, CRRRC, c/o Dept. of Biology, UNC-Charlotte, Charlotte, N.C., 28223, (telephone 704-597-4063).

MAIN HOUSE...of the 1790 Beau Fort Plantation planation located at Bermuda, La. (UPI is pictured behind Sadie Lawton, a guide at the Telephoto)

Valuable Louisiana Plantation Splits Staid Historical Society

By PAT REMICK

BERMUDA, La. (UPI) — Tempers are running high over who should run the 1790 Beau Fort Plantation.

The local historic society even has filed a lawsuit against its own treasurer to gain control of the charming 265-acre plantation 10 miles south of Natchitoches in northwest Louisiana.

Elisabeth Williams Cloutier, a wealthy widow who died in December, 1980, willed the $400,000 plantation to the Association for the Preservation of Historic Natchitoches.

"But instead of being a beautiful gift, this situation has developed," said niece Ann Brittain, who also is treasurer of the historical group.

The "situation" is the lawsuit filed last December by the association against Mrs. Brittain and other family members, seeking to remove the strings Mrs. Cloutier attached to her bequest.

"We have been trying to clear title on it, to get a clarification of the will," said Dr. Ora B. Watson, association president.

Although association members are reluctant to discuss the matter publicly, they contend the conditions are hampering them from doing certain things — such as a full-scale promotion of the home as a tourist attraction and the renting out of the "stranger's room" to overnight guests for badly needed income.

The money is needed for the $1,500 in monthly maintenance costs and to pay off the $10,000 mortgage.

The association receives $3 for each visitor and $10,000 annually in rent from Mrs. Cloutier's favorite nephew. One of her conditions stipulated that he could rent most of the property surrounding the plantation for eight years for about half price.

Another condition was naming Mrs. Brittain as one of the plantation's curators. The association wants to choose its own.

"She just wanted to make sure it was maintained," Mrs. Brittain said. "We want what she wanted."

Mrs. Brittain said she believes her aunt wanted family members involved because she was not too confident that the historical society could do Beau Fort justice.

Another stipulation calls for the plantation to revert to Mrs. Brittain and another aunt if it is not maintained as Mrs. Cloutier left it.

Some association members privately charge that the family wants to get the property back.

"I'm treasurer of the historic association," Mrs. Brittain said. "It was at my suggestion that she give it to them as a museum. You can imagine what a horrible thing this has been."

Mrs. Brittain said both she and her elderly aunt are comfortably off and have no desire to own Beau Fort.

"We don't need that," Mrs. Brittain said. "That's what hurt so badly. We've done so much for the community and this really hurts."

The plantation, named at the suggestion of historian and novelist Francois Mignon because it is at the site of one of the area's first forts, originally was built by unskilled slave labor. Mrs. Cloutier and her husband had it renovated in 1948 and it was placed on the National Register of Historic Places in 1976.

The main house, with its Creole-style architecture, has walls made of cypress timbers and an adobe-like mixture of mud, deer hair and spanish moss. The 1½-story cottage-type structure features an 84-foot front gallery and has an unusual interior design where no single wall goes all the way through from front to back or side to side.

Mrs. Brittain says the lawsuit, naming her and four others, has caused a rift in the historical group.

She claims more than 100 members have resigned because of it. Dr. Watson says no one has resigned.

"I don't want my friends to have to be involved," Mrs. Brittain said. "But we lost about 100 members last year and there have been three resignations off the board."

She said she intends to remain on the board and will continue to attend meetings.

"It's not easy. In fact, it has been most difficult," she said. "But I'm not going to let them run me off."

Dr. Watson said the community supports the lawsuit and said two $50-a-couple benefits held to raise money for Beau Fort have been well attended. Mrs. Brittain disagrees.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I suppose you're wondering what kind of people move into a new house two weeks before Christmas.

There are only two kinds: the ones who can't cough up the rent by the 15th and the people who say, "What the heck, what does it matter when we move just so long as the family's together?"

I belong to the latter group. I am stupid. No one is with you when you move. Not the family, not relatives, not God, and certainly not the utilities companies. No wonder President Reagan wants four more years. They're not unpacked yet.

As we speak, I am surrounded by 137 boxes marked "MISCELLANEOUS." I am alone. No one cares that you have to stand on your head to read "RIGHT SIDE UP" on 30 of them. No one seems to notice there are andirons in the kitchen sink. Not one person has brought up the fact that we have not seen Daddy since he climbed on the roof to unhook the TV antennae at the old house.

This is it! I am aware that this is the seventh time I have said, "This is absolutely the last time I move anywhere," but I really mean it this time. I am ready to live out the rest of my life in this house. And I'm going to reform. I will never own anything heavier than 20 pounds that does not come with wheels. When I hold a book in my hand I will ask myself two questions: "Did I read it? Did I write it?" If the answer is no, it gets pitched.

God is giving me a second chance. I know that now. He is giving me virgin drawers and shelves for a purpose. In return I will make Him a promise. I will never save a magazine because of a single tuna recipe on page 93.

I will never hang onto another rubber band, garbage bag tie, empty coffee can, mayonnaise jar (with lid) or plastic whipped cream container.

And if He will give me a sign as to where the coffeepot is, I will never save another plastic bag as long as I live.

It'll all work out. It always does. I'll find the tree and the lights and the tinsel. Somehow, the boxes of ornaments will appear like magic and we'll get caught up in the spirit of things like we always do. My son will put that ridiculous pie plate he made in the first grade on one of the branches and we'll get some firewood and build a fire and someone will play the piano and we'll sing Christmas carols.

It'll happen . . . next June if we're lucky!

A Phoenix In Natchez As The Eola Hotel Reopens

By JOHN DeMERS

NATCHEZ, Miss. (UPI) — The once-famed Eola Hotel, which fell on hard times after hosting movie stars, first ladies and five-star generals, is opening again like the magnolia it uses as its symbol.

The grand hotel closed in 1974, a victim of urban blight and changing public taste. But a group of investors, rallying around a Dallas oilman and his son, pumped $8 million into turning an abandoned shell into a peach-and-green palace on the bluffs above the Mississippi River.

"The best hotels are places where you feel more elegant than you can in your everyday life, but also feel at home," said Forrest Germany, who with his father bought the Eola in 1978 for $145,000. "The best hotels are like elegant homes, but now I think too many of them are like meat markets."

The old seven-story hotel was placed on the National Register of Historic Places in 1978, but it was not until this spring that the Eola opened its first redone rooms to guests.

From the start, saving the Eola was a battle — against tight money, civic resignation and the numberless hotels and motels that drove the landmark to extinction.

The Eola was built in 1927 in a Southern town famous for its real and imagined elegance. Natchez is the site of homes and plantations that recall the highest attainments of Southern civility.

Guests at the Eola included First Lady Eleanor Roosevelt, movie stars Elizabeth Taylor, Tom Mix and Montgomery Clift, and Gen. Douglas MacArthur. Yet such names were no more current than the Confederacy by the early 1970s.

There was no money to carry out the renovations necessary to attract a new generation of traveler. And the new generation seemed satisfied with the motels springing up on the fringes of fading downtown.

"A lot of nice hotels failed," said Germany, whose grandfather bought mineral rights around Natchez and whose father kept a room at the Eola for 30 years. "Finally the market caught up with them."

The Germanys' plans to breathe new life into the Eola almost never got started. Tight money and high interest rates threatened the project until tax benefits came through from a national archives group.

Under tax incentive guidelines, the old street facade was maintained, but the hotel's main entrance was redone to face a brick courtyard filled with flowers and a fountain.

The lobby was restored with the original registration desk, archway, staff-run elevators, marble trim, columns and chandeliers. A glass-enclosed garden restaurant looks out on the courtyard.

The 132 rooms were furnished with Georgian-style reproductions, more often than not with ceiling fans, and the roof was turned into an elegant complex of suites — complete with balconies overlooking the Mississippi.

"The hardest lesson I've had to learn is you can't do everything overnight," Germany said. "You have to do one thing at a time. It's better to be limited and first class than do all sorts of things and be mediocre."

HOTEL TO OPEN...Forrest Germany and his father, a Dallas oilman, bought the once-famed Eola Hotel, which fell on hard times and was closed in 1974, stands in the courtyard with glass-enclosed garden restaurant behind him. (UPI Telephoto)

Oceans Display Hidden Turmoil

NEW YORK (AP) — The water of the oceans often appears to be passive and uncharging, but this is far from true, according to Rand McNally's "Great Geographical Atlas."

In reality, the oceans are a turmoil of giant sluggish rivers — far larger than any of the land rivers — and of powerful circulating surface currents that are driven by the prevailing winds.

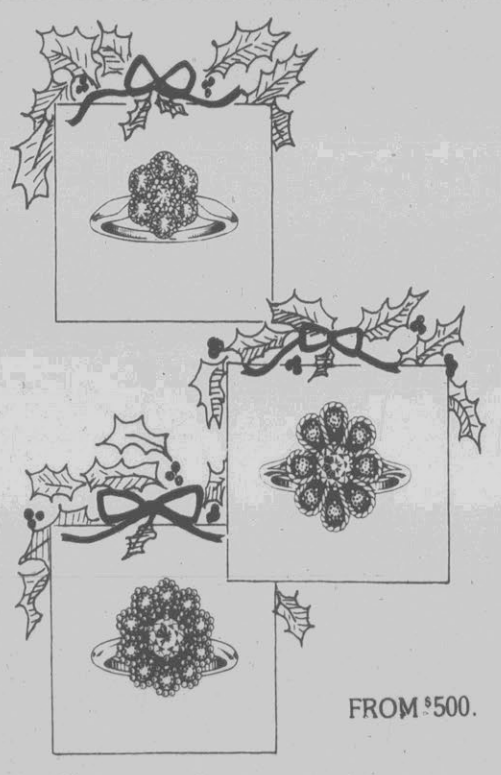

There is turmoil beneath the surface of the seas in terms of animal life as well, the atlas reports. It ranges in size from the minute — ocean waters team with microscopic organisms — to the mammoth. Whales, of course, are by far the largest animals on the planet.

Full House Holds One Too Many

By Abigail Van Buren

1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Here's the situation: My husband, Joe, and I have four bedrooms and five children. My parents are coming to spend the Christmas holidays with us. (We live in Arizona and they live in New Jersey.) Joe's parents are separated and are not on very good terms.

Joe's mother, who is a darling, is coming for Christmas. Joe's father, who is a creep, called last night (knowing full well his estranged wife was coming for Christmas) and I heard Joe tell him on the phone, "Sure you can come for Christmas, Dad — we'll make room somehow." I was furious!

The next day I called my father-in-law. He was out, so I left the following message on his answering machine: "Hi, Dad! I know Joe said it would be OK for you to come for Christmas, but I don't think it would work out with all the company we are expecting. You are more than welcome to come another time. I know you'll understand. Please keep this just between us, huh, Dad?"

Well, Abby, as soon as Dad got the message he called Joe, who talked him into coming anyway! I am furious!

(1) Was I wrong to call and leave that message? (2) Was my father-in-law wrong to have told Joe I called and asked him to stay home after I asked him specifically not to tell him? (3) What do I do now?

IN THE SOUP

DEAR IN: (1) Yes. (2) Yes, but what did you expect? (3) You've done enough. Just keep your mouth shut, and try to make the best of it. (P.S. Merry Christmas!)

DEAR ABBY: Why doesn't some smart builder build an apartment exclusively for non-smokers? Since smokers use more air-conditioning, and it costs more to clean up a smoker's apartment, not to mention the higher risk when it comes to fire, a non-smoker's apartment would be more profitable.

I'll bet many retired people would be willing to give up their homes if such apartments were available. I know I would.

NORMA IN TUCSON

DEAR NORMA: There's a motel in Dallas exclusively for non-smokers (The Non-Smokers Inn, 9229 Carpenter Freeway, Dallas, Texas 75247), so why not an apartment building for non-smokers in Tucson — or in any other city? Readers? (P.S. Please, no letters from builders saying, "I'll see you inhale first.")

* * *

DEAR ABBY: My sister and her husband recently lost their cat to cancer. They loved her like a "daughter" and were distraught over her death. (It broke my heart to see my "cat-niece" in the hospital with an IV.)

My question: Do I send flowers, a card or what? Please give me the protocol for feline funerals.

SINCERE IN SAN DIEGO

DEAR SINCERE: Express your sympathy by any means you feel appropriate — flowers, a card, a note or just a verbal "I'm sorry" — but do express it.

Animal lovers who regard their pets as "children" need consolation and support to resolve their grief and adjust to their loss.

Problems? You'll feel better if you get them off your chest. Write to Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Holiday Tradition Kept Under Wraps

PEKIN, Ill. (AP) — In 1954, Marilyn Hayes bought some green-and-gold gift wrap to use on a Christmas package for her parents.

Twenty-nine Christmases later, the Pekin woman is convinced she got a bargain.

Each year since the first gift was wrapped, Mrs. Hayes and her mother, Mildred Cunninham, who also lives in Pekin, have exchanged a Christmas gift wrapped in the original green-and-gold paper, manufactured by Hallmark Cards.

"It's worn like iron," said Mrs. Hayes, who noted that frugality hasn't been the reason she and her mother have used the same sheet of paper time and again.

"My mother thought the paper was in good shape when we cleaned up the post-Christmas mess in 1954," said Mrs. Hayes, "so she saved it and used it to wrap a gift for me the following year. I decided it would be funny to wrap her gift in the paper the third Christmas, and soon the joke became a family tradition."

The paper is still in good condition, Mrs. Hayes said, and will be used once more this Christmas.

The closest it has been to destruction was a couple of years ago, said Mrs. Hayes, when an unsuspecting aunt assisted with cleaning up the remains of one Christmas gift exchange and almost threw away the "family treasure." It was quickly recovered, however, and the annual exchange continued.

Luxury Train Nears Birthday

NEW YORK (AP) — The centennial year of the luxury train — the Venice Simplon Orient-Express — will be marked Oct. 4, 1983.

To usher in the anniversary, the American Cancer Society is hosting "an adventure in splendor" aboard the historic train for a number of Americans and others.

On New Year's Eve, after dinner in Paris, some 150 guests will board the completely-restored cars of the Compagnie Internationale des Wagons-Lits for eight days of celebration en route to Venice, Italy.

Senate Seat Not Worth A Million Dollars

By JON FLEMING

SKOWHEGAN, Maine (UPI) — Former Sen. Margaret Chase Smith is astounded by politicians spending millions of dollars to win election to the office she secured four times on a shoestring budget.

"I don't know why a candidate running for office would think that being a member of the United States Senate was worth a million dollars ... I had to work awful hard when I was in the Senate," she says.

Mrs. Smith, 84, the only woman ever elected to both houses of Congress, admits her only political campaign defeat 10 years ago might have turned out differently had she been willing to spend more money.

The maverick Republican devoted $13,000 to her 1972 campaign, while her opponent, Democrat Rep. William D. Hathaway, invested nearly $200,000.

"The trouble was I didn't have money for television, so I was not in view of the public like most people were and people wondered where I was," said Mrs. Smith, who accepted no contributions from individuals or political action committees.

"I did not spend money because I couldn't change my policy," she said.

The woman whose dedication to principle earned her national stature during her 32 years in Congress now spends much of her time organizing the newly opened Northwood Institute Margaret Chase Smith Library, which adjoins her home on the edge of the Kennebec River in central Maine.

On an autumn morning visit, Mrs. Smith was tapping away on a typewriter in her office, giving prompt attention to her mail — a habit she developed in the Senate that became one of her trademarks.

The mail has been heavy since the library was dedicated last August.

"It's strange that, having been out of public office for 10 years, my mail continues from all over the country," she said.

Wide-eyed and spry, she popped up from her chair to greet her visitor.

"So, you're here to interview me for my eulogy, my obituary," she joked.

Settling into a hand-carved rocking chair in her antique-filled living room, Mrs. Smith said most of her energy over the past several years has been devoted to overseeing the library. It houses speeches, papers and correspondence she collected since first going to Washington half a century ago in 1940 when her congressman-husband, Clyde H. Smith, died in office.

The library was built by the Northwood Institute, a private, free enterprise oriented business college with campuses in Michigan, Indiana, Texas and Florida.

It may be unique in that no other political figure below the rank of president has had a separate library to house such papers, according to Richard Baker, historian for the U.S. Senate.

"I felt that the records should be here in Skowhegan, where I started and where I did a great deal of my work and my thinking," said Mrs. Smith who wore an ordinary blue dress and a white carnation (in place of her hallmark red rose).

Mrs. Smith's usual stoic composure lapsed as she spoke of the library.

"Many people are remembered after they day. I'm so grateful to think that I'm seeing what's going on while I'm still around," she said.

"This is something I've dreamed about for many years. To think that little me, a little girl from Skowhegan, would finally come up and have this done," she said, her blue eyes clouding with emotion.

Mrs. Smith talked about the late Air Force Maj. Gen. William C. Lewis, a long time aide and confidant who died earlier this year.

"Bill Lewis was with me many, many years, he was invaluable," she said. "And for him to be taken the way he was, so suddenly, without any kind of a warning, and for me to find him as I did was enough to upset anyone."

Mrs. Smith said she lost much more than a good friend.

"I felt more and more dependent on him as time went on," she said. "I'm finding now that I have to do for myself what he did, and this is not an easy matter because I used him as a memory bank," she said.

Mrs. Smith said Lewis will be sorely missed as she writes her memoirs.

"I had wanted to write my autobiography," she said. "I do a lot of scribbling and note taking, but I don't know when I'll actually get to writing about it."

Since leaving office, Mrs. Smith's political activities have been virtually limited to voting on election day. However she keeps informed of current events by watching television and, she said, reading, although she admitted her eyesight is failing.

Mrs. Smith has been a critic of extremism throughout her political career — most notably in 1950 when she delivered here "Declaration of Conscience" speech repudiating the smear tactics used by the late Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy in his anti-communist campaigns.

Surveying today's political scene, Mrs. Smith said the election of Ronald Reagan as president did not signal a move to the far right but rather a course correction back the middle of the political road.

"I think we've gone too far to the left," Mrs. Smith said. "This is why I was supporting Reagan so strongly because I felt that he would do something to turn that trend."

Mrs. Smith said Reagan thus far has done a good job, deserving more credit for lowering the inflation rate and is not to be blamed for high unemployment and record budget deficits.

"The people who supported him are not supporting him today to the extent that he needs it in times like these," she said.

"It's the old story that I used for many, many years. You can't cut the budget on the other fellow's project, and this is what the story is with Reagan," she said.

What troubles Mrs. Smith as much as the nation's economic problems are politicians who use their office for personal gain rather than to serve the public.

"There are too many people who run for office for one purpose, and that is the publicity they can get so they can go out and make large fees for lecturing," she said.

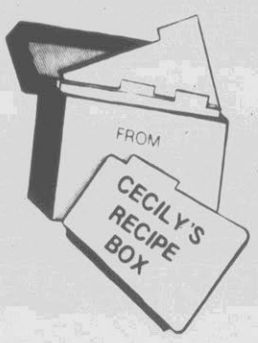

Mrs. Smith lectured and taught at colleges for several years after leaving public office. But, she noted, she mostly visited small colleges in the South and the Midwest that couldn't afford to hire well-known speakers.

That is one problem Mrs. Smith hopes to change by making her speeches and records available to the public. She is not modest about her record and believes others can learn from it.

"I'm very proud of my overall record, I think I have a record that few can challenge," she said, noting her record of 2,941 consecutive Senate roll call votes (ended only by 1968 surgery on her left hip; her right hip was replaced in 1970).

"I stayed on the job, I tended to my job, and did it as I thought it should be done."

ORANGE CHIP COOKIES

We've revised our own variation of an old-time cookie.

- 1/4-pound stick butter, at room temperature or cut into 4 pats
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 3-ounce package cream cheese
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 1 large egg yolk
- 1 cup sifted or fork-stirred all-purpose flour
- Grated rind of 1 medium orange
- 1 cup (6 ounces) semi-sweet chocolate
- 1/2 cup walnuts, coarsely broken

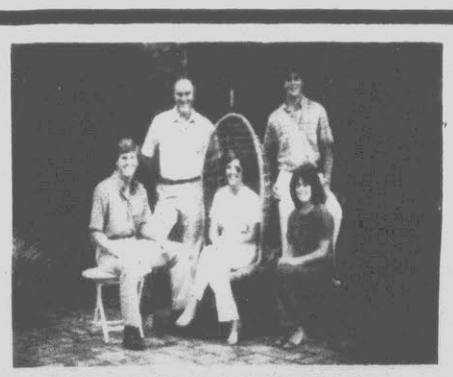

In a medium bowl cream butter, sugar, cream cheese and vanilla; beat in egg yolk until blended. Gradually stir in flour until smooth. Stir in orange rind, chocolate and walnuts. Drop by level tablespoonfuls, about an inch apart, onto buttered cookie sheets. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until bottoms of cookies are golden brown (tops will be white) — 10 minutes. With a wide metal spatula remove to a wire rack to cool completely. Store in a tightly covered container. Makes about 3 dozen.

The first pension plan established in U.S. industry was introduced in 1875 by the American Express Co. The plan was financed entirely by the employers.

Two Centuries Of Intimate Apparel Highlight Show

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Senior Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — Women's fashions were at their most liberated during the flapper era when there was a minimum of underclothing and everything was supple and lightly constructed.

The most constricting period in modern times probably was in the 1850s when tight fit and 17-inch waistlines were the rule, corsets were enforced with stays and laces, and women wore up to eight starchy petticoats for grand occasions.

"The 1850s was the time when women's intimate apparel was the most fettered," said Laura Sinderbrand, director, the Edward C. Blum Design Laboratory of the Fashion Institute of Technology.

Miss Sinderbrand supervised the collection of authentic corsetry and what have you from 1780 in the institute's current exhibition called "The Undercover Story."

The exhibit includes more than 600 items from hooped skirts to flasies, from Queen Victoria's plain, white nightgowns to the black stage corset and fringed G-string of Gypsy Rose Lee.

The result is a thorough documentation of how women themselves and fashion generally always have "contrived to shape the female body," as Miss Sinderbrand said. "It's never been left alone.

"The one thing that has remained unchanged through the centuries is the desire for the small waistline."

She walked over to a Victorian era costume, circa 1880, "when the bustle was at its most extreme. It was said that you were considered well-dressed only if one could balance a teacup on the back (where the bustle above the hips started)."

The petticoated look reigned just prior to the Civil War, the antebellum period, when women got into four and five petticoats for daytime and seven and eight for parties and balls. Crinoline was the mainstay underpinning of these skirts which came to the floor.

Fashion has gone through more evolution and revolution than almost any other segment of our culture.

There was a revolution after World War I when bobbed hair, the head-hugging cloche hat, the dropped waist and knee-high skirts came in. This was the flapper era, when curves were out and legs were in. Some of the more daring fashionables hiked hemlines inches above the kneecaps.

Miss Sinderbrand put the flapper period between 1925 and 1936-37.

The hemline for daytime and evening has been seesawing ever since.

"I think the liberation for women's fashions actually came with the appearance of man-made fibers which changed the shape of just about everything," said the costumer. "The most dramatic innovation was with the invention of nylon in 1939."

In case you don't remember, nylon first began appearing as women's hosiery. Then it disappeared from civilian goods for the duration of World War II and went to military needs.

Wartime restrictions on fabrics in general kept some stability in style until around 1947 when a Frenchman named Christian Dior sprang his "New Look" on the world. It was an abrupt departure from the wartime line with its squared shoulders, narrow, short skirts and flat-hipped severe jackets.

The new shape had rounded shoulders, a shapely bustline, a clearly defined waistline, slightly padded hips and full, billowing skirts that reached well below the calves and often were accompanied by wide, flounced petticoats.

At first, the New Look was embattled. But fashion is change, and the rest is history. Soon American women were stacked into layers of petticoats and skinny waists (they hoped).

Miss Sinderbrand said nylon made possible a return of undergarments and lingerie of opulent design and the lavish use of fabric and trim. It made possible more laces, permanent pleating and layered, tinted sheers, not to mention the revolution in laundry with the advent of wash and wear, or drip-dry.

"I think there will always be a need for foundations, in one form or another," said Miss Sinderbrand, "especially for those amply endowed.

"But I don't think any one shape will be dictated. Not anyway for the active woman, busy with her work, with sports. I don't think the women's liberation movement has been a factor; this would have happened anyway with our change in lifestyle."

Miss Sinderbrand, who studied at the Fashion Institute, has been its design laboratory director for three years.

Previously she taught clothing design at the fashion training school.

The "undercover" exhibition, free to the public, will play at F.I.T. through mid-May 1983, then move on to Tokyo and Kyoto, Japan.

On The Young Side

By Lisa Wang

Gregg Davis, senior, has successfully passed the district level in the John Motley Morehead Scholarship Competition to study at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill after interviews were held in Williamston Dec. 2.

Now among six other finalists from District 1, Gregg will appear before the Morehead Foundation's Central Committee at Chapel Hill for a personal interview.

The Central Committee will then recommend to the trustees for final approval about 70 candidates whom it deems best qualified for a Morehead award. All finalists will receive merit tuition awards from the foundation. Morehead award winners will receive an all-expense paid undergraduate education at UNC-CH valued at about $15,200 plus funding for summer internships.

After practice sessions were conducted and semifinalists were allowed to respond to a variet of questions, eight students were chosen to comprise the 1982-83 Quiz Bowl Team. Members are Derek Dickens, junior, Elizabeth Ellen, junior, Josie Keller, senior, Teresa McLawhorn, senior, Angie Michel, senior, Traci Pennington, senior, Suzanne Wille, senior, and Steve Worley, junior.

The team will enter the first level of competition at the county level Feb. 5 at Sheppard Memorial East Branch Library. The regional and state competitions are presently scheduled for March 5 and March 26.

This year, if the team becomes either first or second place winners in the state contest, it will quality to compete in Hi IQ, a separate competition which now mainly exists in the Charlotte and Greensboro areas and is trying to extend statewide. Hi IQ is played like the G.E. College Bowl in which there is a toss-up question and the team that answers the toss-up correctly has the opportunity to answer other questions to gain points. The top two winners in the Hi IQ Competition will be awarded $2,000 and $1,000 scholarships by NCNB.

RETIREE FLYS HIGH

HEMET, Calif. (AP) — When Charlie Harley retired from R.J. Reynolds Tobacco two years ago, he took up sailplaning, or gliding. At the desert soaring center here, he is towed in a sailplane to 4,500 feet and released.

He then has only a short time to locate a strong lift or thermal area to keep airborne. Otherwise, he must plan his landing before losing altitude. The thrill is in not knowing how far, how high, or how long the flight will be, says Harley.

Winter Looks Hard

EDITOR'S NOTE — Canadians are bracing for a long, hard winter. The economy is in deep trouble, unemployment high, and the nation's usual ebullience and self-confidence seem at a low point. For Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau, it means a further spell of unrelieved trouble.

By CHARLES CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer

TORONTO (AP) — Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau is warning of a long, hard winter ahead for Canadians, whose economy and spirit already have been damaged by four tough seasons in a row.

"I am reaching out to you. Our country is in trouble," Trudeau said in an unusual series of three recent talks broadcast nationwide as his countrymen prepared for the first heavy snowfalls.

"A difficult winter lies ahead," the prime minister said. "I wish I could tell you otherwise, but reality is there for all of us to see."

Reality crowds in on all sides. The unemployient rate reported in November was 12.7 percent, a post-Depression record, while inflation remained above 10 percent. Such key industries as mining, forestry, oil, autos and steel are especially hard hit.

In Toronto, the Salvation Army appealed for bunks and mattresses from the Defense Ministry so it could stop turning homeless people away from its crowded shelters. Police reported finding 150 transients asleep in an underground parking lot one recent evening.

The Foster Parents Plan, through which donors contribute $23 per month to support a child in an impoverished country, reported that 1,000 Canadian participants had dropped out. The loss was blamed on tight family budgets.

Canada had prospered almost without interruption for 20 years, missing the worst of occasional U.S. recessions. Now, as Trudeau suggested, hard times seem to have damaged the

In the industrial city of Hamilton, Ontario, the local newspaper found the national mood expressed in a song by unemployed bricklayer Mike Woods, 26, and printed the words on its front page:

"Well I remember growing up in my teens. And I sewed a Canadian flag on my jeans. I was proud to be from the Great White North.

"Years go by and things have changed. It seems now my country needs to be rearranged. And I'd like to know where we're headed for."

In his televised talks, Prime Minister Trudeau urged Canadians to work together, saying, "This must be the winter when we act as a nation to achieve what we want as a nation."

Unfortunately for the prime minister, much of the commentary on his speeches referred to the widespread view that Trudeau has long since squandered the moral authority he might have used to rally the nation.

"Anybody else delivering Pierre Trudeau's television message might have been believed," wrote Peter C. Newman, one of Canada's best-known journqlists, in the newsmagazine Maclean's.

"In these television programs, Trudeau is attempting to regain the trust of Canadians, and so to regain effective political leadership," said Richard Gwyn, a columnist and Trudeau biographer. "Almost certainly, this goal is beyond him."

The U.S. Supreme Court ruled in 1949 that employers are required to bargain on pensions, giving impetus to the drive by trade unions for negotiated pension plans.

Refugee Hopes To Return To College Despite Low Wage

By RICHARD S. USIAK

BUFFALO, N.Y. (UPI) — The Americanization of Darius Jankowski has begun.

Last December he was arrested in Poland for distributing anti-government leaflets. When he was released in March he was advised to leave the country. He and his family — wife Grazyna and their five-month-old son — arrived in this country in October.

Jankowski, 20, talked freely as he sipped coffee in the kitchen of his modest but spacious apartment on Buffalo's East Side.

"The people in Poland express their anger against the government every month," he said in good English. "To stop it, the government arrests people in advance. The people know they really can't do anything, yet they expose themselves to bad treatment."

He adds sadly, "I don't believe there is a possibility to change things in Poland."

"Lech Walesa is free now, but the government keeps an eye on him very closely," he said. "It was the government's whim to let him out (of prison). It doesn't mean conditions in the country are better.

Jankowski is one of more than 100 Polish refugess who have settled in the Buffalo area this year under a program sponsored by the American Council for Nationalities Service. A spokesman folr the organization says 20,000 more Poles are still waiting to enter this country.

Jankowski was born in Dabrowa Gornicza in south central Poland and later moved to nearby Myslowice in the same area. He was a student in Katowice when he was thrown into jaile for putting anti-government posters and leaflets on buildings. His arrest came about 15 minutes after martial law was declared in his homeland.

While imprisoned in Jastrzebie-Szeroka, the authorities permitted him to marry Grazyna, 20, a fellow student he had known since secondary shool. He was released from jail in March and authorities strongly suggested he leave the country.

"Officially, nobody told me to leave," he said, "but there were some strong suggestions."

The Jankowskis and five-month-old Michael left Poland Oct. 16, leaving behind their grandparents, parents, brothers, and sisters. After an 11-day processing period in Frankfurt, West Germany, they came to Buffalo, where Grazyna has relatives, to start a new life.

The refugees are looked after by various groups. In Jankowski's case, the International Institute of Buffalo has taken a special interest.

"We help them any way we can," said Brownie Trzyzewski, a caseworker for the institute. They help the refugees get settled, help them with the English language and in some cases find them work.

Jankowski recently began working as a $3.35 per hour stock clerk in a supermarket on Buffalo's predominantly Polish East Side.

"The kind of jobs these people take," Trzyzewski said, "are either ones they have a special skill at or the ones nobody else wants, like minimum wage jobs."

Jankowski appreciates the chance to work, noting that his new co-workers "show a lot of patience and have really been helpful."

"Sure," Jankowski said when asked if he liked his new life in America. But Grazyna sat with a puzzled look on her face, saying she is "not extremely satisfied with everything."

"We were students in Poland," she said quietly, a nervous smile creasing her pretty face. "Now we come here and he gets the minimum wage and we have to survive."

Jankowski said he did not have his wife's high expectations of life in America, but he would like to return to college someday.

"I didn't have any illusions," he admitted. "I even doubted whether we'd have a place to live in."

Jankowski thinks of the family he left behind.

"We don't know when we'll be able to meet again," he said.

Still, when he had to make a choice, Jankowski chose America.

Old Well-Drilling Plan To Be Used

TOKYO (AP) — A volunteer group here is hoping that a 200-year-old Japanese well-digging method will succeed where modern technology has often failed in providing potable water for peoples of undeveloped rural regions of Asia.

The group of Japanese college students, social workers and filmmakers plans to first transfer the traditional art of "Kazusabori" well digging to Mindanao Island in the southern Philippines, where the lack of disease-free drinking water has debilitated local societies.

A technical team is expected to visit the island next year to drill at least three wells in remote villages.

Seito Morooka, who made a documentary film on the art of Kazusabori, near extinction in Japan since the end of World War II, told the Associated Press there is a great potential demand for the Japanese technology on Mindanao, where a majority of local residents are poor farmers. "Kazusabori is a low-cost, people-oriented technology," he said.

"It (the project) is people-to-people cooperation aimed at not only supplying water but also training personnel for construction, operation and maintenance at the village level," Morooka said.

The digging method, which relies largely on human and natural resources, dates back to the 18th century in the Kazusa region just east of Tokyo. "It is simple but very effective," said 61-year-old Seiji Kondo, one of few remaining Kazusabori experts.

Religious Fervor Effective Weapon For Afghans

By RICHARD BILL
Associated Press Writer

LEJA, Afghanistan (AP) — Hour after hour they march, up and down steep ravines, agile as mountain goats. Some of the men are in their sixties, yet as sprightly as youths half their age.

They walk single file, bandoleers across their chests, rifles slung over shoulders. There isn't much talking — that will come later.

The guerrilla commander is inspecting the battlefield. Swirls of dust pinpoint progress as the group of five winds through the rugged countryside.

At each stop tea is served. Everybody drinks at least three cups, scooping handfuls of sugar in their mouths as they consume the hot liquid.

The sugar is their main source of energy.

Their inspiration springs from within.

They are mujahideen, holy warriors fighting a holy war — jihad. The enemy is the army of the Marxist government in Kabul and the Soviet forces sent to keep it in power.

Commander Sameer Gul is briefed on enemy positions, troop strengths and military tactics. A mortar attack is planned later in the day on an Afghan army outpost, one of a dozen ringing the town of Khost.

An elderly guerrilla complains of a toothache. There is no medicine in the camp so his tooth will go on hurting. Either that, or he'll ask someone to yank it out.

Otherwise, everything is fine. If more weapons were available the war would soon be over. But that is understood. Gul tells his men to put their request to Allah at the end of evening prayers.

The walk back to base camp takes four hours. It is 20 miles away, but the only route is a dry riverbed that meanders through the hills.

The way is littered with the hulks of Soviet-made armored personnel carriers. The hillside is scorched black. Bullet casings and bomb fragments are also testimony to a recent attack.

Nearby, the group loiters around the wreckage of an MI-24 helicopter gunship. The salvageable metal had been removed to a guerrilla-run arms depot near the Pakistan border, 30 miles east.

Only burned out transistors and twisted plastic parts remained.

"There was a big attack in this valley three weeks ago," said Gul, who has 500 mujahideen under his command. "The bombing was very heavy, but as you can see we are still here. This is our valley."

He said the gunship was shot down by Soviet-made Dashaka machine guns, captured by the guerrillas and mounted on surrounding hilltops. He said three Soviet technicians, two Afghan army personnel and a woman died in the crash.

He pointed to six unmarked graves.

"That's where we buried them," he said. "The authorities offered a lot of money for the return of the bodies. We don't want money — only more weapons."

At the base camp, tea is ready as the men slump down on the mud floors of their tents, which bear the letters UNHCR (United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees) on their flaps.

Drums that once held U.S.-made soybean oil now hold water, a precious commodity since there are few streams in the area.

Supper will soon be served, but first the group assembles outside for prayers. They pray five times a day, reciting from the holy Koran before seeking Allah's blessings.

Prayers are preceded by the ritual washing of face, hands and feet. They then bow in the direction of Mecca, often for 40 minutes on end.

Today, supper is a treat. For the first time in a month they are eating meat and fresh fruit. Their fare usually consists of flat bread, and a thin greasy gruel with potatoes thrown in.

The bowls of bananas and grapes were brought in especially from across the border to honor their guest. The men are ravenous, dunking their bread in the stew — finishing every scrap.

Afterward, the day's events are gone over and then the men turn to the subject of uniting the score of insurgent groups in Afghanistan.

Haqqani Jalaluddin, overall commander for Paktia Province, peers into the tent and joins the group, laying his rifle at his side.

"We have very hard work ahead of us," said Jalaluddin, 43, speaking in Pushtu, the local language. "We are all fighting under one banner. We have our God and our Koran and one enemy. There is no victory in division."

The men, however, worry about reports of feuding over Islamic ideology among the different groups. They are also out of touch. The men rarely see their families — twice a year if they're lucky and then only for a few days.

"Our wives tell us we must return and continue the jihad," said one of the group, the pride on his face evident. The jihad is a great binding force for the male population in Afghanistan.

Those that don't heed the call to arms work in the fields as farmers. Jihad is the glory of Islam — there is nothing else.

The men own only what they wear on their backs and the weapons they carry. None earns a salary. Food is provided by the Pakistan-based guerrilla groups. Otherwise, their needs are minimal.

Their only goal is to rid their landlocked homeland of Soviet troops and restore Afghanistan to an Islamic way of life.

"This is what jihad is all about," explained the interpreter. "God is everything. He reaches into every part of our daily life. He is on our side because the Russians have no faith — they are godless."

After supper silence falls over the group as one of the men grapples with the static on his radio until he tunes into the British Broadcasting Corp. The broadcast tells of a mujahideen victory in another province.

The men are ecstatic. Their war is being reported and they're not forgotten. It makes it all worthwhile.

"They should only use news about Afghanistan," said the man with the radio. "It is important. It is the only way we know what is going on in our country. We are not interested in other countries — only our jihad."

It's time for sleep. The kerosene lamps are extinguished and the men draw their blankets tightly around them. It is cold.

The stillness of the night is punctuated by the sounds of gunfire. Each time an Afghan militia force is spotted the hilltop sentries blast away.

As dawn approaches recitations from the Koran echo from surrounding valleys. The men assemble outside for prayers.

Tea is served and a new day has begun. Tomorrow will be the same, and the next day and the next.

Shuttle, Soviets Lead '82 In Space

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The coming of age of America's space shuttle and an endurance record by Soviet cosmonauts highlighted a milestone year for space exploration in 1982, the 25th anniversary of Sputnik.

In 1983, the U.S. shuttle fleet will increase to three, with five or six flights planned. The Soviets are expected to continue Salyut 7 space station operations and to send on a test flight the largest rocket ever built.

Columbia, the first U.S. shuttle, completed its test program with third and fourth trial flights in April and July. In November, it became operational by putting its first commercial cargo — two communications satellites — in orbit.

By successfully completing that November mission, Columbia demonstrated convincingly that the sometimes maligned, $11 billion shuttle program was finally in business.

Commercial customers are standing in line to place their communications and other satellites aboard the space shuttle. The National Aeronautics and Space Admimistration has booked 70 flights into 1987 and is working on a cargo manifest that is expected to fill an additional 230 missions into 1992.

Four commercial flights and one or two military flights are planned in 1983, with the launch rate increasing to 12 in 1984 and 16 in 1985.

While Columbia was aloft on its cargo delivery mission in November, two Soviet cosmonauts aboard the Salyut 7 space station broke the manned space endurance mark of 185 days that had been held by two countrymen.

Soviet officials have indicated the time may be fast approaching when a Soviet citizens will always be orbiting Earth.

While U.S. officials are debating the American commitment to space, the Soviets are moving aggressively on several space fronts. Their stated goals:

—To place large, permanent, manned space stations in Earth orbit, with the target date for the first in 1985. It will take the most powerful rocket ever developed to deliver the core of the station. The rocket is to be test-launched for the first time in 1983, according to government sources in Moscow.

—To explore the planets extensively with automated probes and to send cosmonauts to Mars early in the 21st century.

The United States has made no firm commitment to either a permanent station or to manned planetary flights. Studies are being made on the feasibility of both.

Both superpowers are continuing to develop strong military space programs.

The Soviets now possess the only operational space weapon, a killer satellite capable of destroying orbiting payloads. The Air Force is set to test-launch America's first anti-satellite weapon early in 1983.

Both nations also are pushing ahead with research into such exotic space weapons as laser guns and charged particle beams that could knock out satellites or ballistic missiles in flight.

September 1982 brought two budding commercial space ventures — one a successful launch, the other a failure on the first try.

A European effort suffered a major setback, and the launch schedule was delayed several months, when the Ariane rocket built by the 10-nation European Space Agency failed on liftoff in its first launch. The Europeans hope Ariane will compete with the space shuttle for commercial payloads.

Space Services Inc. of America, meanwhile, launched the first successful privately funded rocket on a 10-minute up-and down flight from Matagorda Island off the Texas coast. Space Services hopes to attract money to start its own launch services, but many investors lost interest when a rocket developed by the company failed in 1981. The firm then bought a tried-and-true rocket stage from NASA and, as expected, it flew perfectly.

The shuttle Columbia came home from its first pay-for-hire mission and went into the space version of drydock to make it ready for a flight next September, when it is to haul six crewmen and a European-built scientific laboratory named Spacelab.

Columbia is giving way, temporarily, to the second ship in NASA's shuttle fleet, the Challenger, which is to make its maiden flight in late January, carrying into orbit a satellite to serve as a relay station between the ground and as many as 100 orbiting satellites, including shuttles.

On April 20, America's first woman space traveler, Sally Ride, will be part of a four-person Challenger crew which is to deliver two communication satellites and a West German scientific payload.

Challenger's third flight, set for July 4, will haul up a communications and weather satellite for India. The four-man crew will include the first black space flyer, Guion Bluford Jr.

Columbia's Spacelab mission is to start Sept. 30, with Challenger set to fly the first of many Defense Department military flights in December. The Pentagon also is considering slipping an additional Challenger military mission into the schedule in October.

Late in 1983, the third shuttle ship, Discovery, is to be delivered to Cape Canaveral, Fla., to be readied for its flight debut in early 1984. Four shuttles are funded, with NASA hoping for White House and congressional approval of a fifth vehicle in 1983.

Militia Maintains Castle-Like Home

CLEVELAND (AP) — As whole blocks of the city are cleared for new, metal-and-glass skyscrapers, the Cleveland Grays, a 145-year-old urban militia, maitains its antique stone and brick fortress with an uncommon pride.

"This is a historian's dream," said George Vourlojianis, a history buff who has made the Grays and their home his avocation.

The Cleveland Grays Armory, built in 1893 in an area next to what is now known as Playhouse Square, is listed on the National Register of Historic Places.

The Grays were founded on George Washington's 105th birthday, Feb. 22, 1837. The name came from the color chosen for their uniforms.

The Grays were the National Guard of their day, made up of civic leaders who regarded service in the militia as a duty of the elite to the masses, Vourlojianis said.

The Grays is now a fraternal, non-profit organization, made up of 230 men who feel some kinship with their counterparts of the past. Wearing their old gray uniforms, members march in about a half dozen parades a year.

Each Feb. 22, they honor their founding by marching from Public Square along the city's major street, Euclid Avenue.

On the eve of each of Washington's birthdays, they have a party in the building that can't help but catch the eye of passersby.

Little Made Public In Missile Talks

By W. JOSEPH CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — From his upholstered swivel chair at the center of a long, veneer conference table at a penthouse office overlooking Lake Geneva, U.S. Ambassador Edward L. Rowny, a congenial but tough-minded retired lieutenant general, commands a stunning panorama.

On clear days, the general can steal a moment from what President Reagan called "one of the most important tasks of our age," squint through his thick eyeglasses, and ponder the sweep of nature — the jagged Alpine summits arrayed like a gleaming curtain on the horizon, and the lesser slopes of the Jura Mountains arching gently away from the north shore of Lake Geneva.

It can only be guessed how distracting the general finds the features, or how ironic and inconsistent. For the serenity out across Lake Geneva poses a curious, compelling contrast to Rowny's work — that of talking about the most awesome, most lethal weapons assembled and stockpiled by mankind.

Rowny is the chief U.S. negotiator at START, the Strategic Arms Reduction Talks with the Soviet Union. Twice a week — once at the penthouse office with the arresting view, and once near the marble-faced buildings that once housed the failed League of Nations — the bargaining teams renew their arcane and tedious task of negotiating reductions in the nuclear warheads the United States and the Soviet Union have poised at each other's cities and military installations.

It is, Rowny has said, "the foremost arms control challenge."

Despite obvious worldwide implications, START shows little of itself. Though it qualifies as the single most crucial negotiation in Geneva, one of the world's principal meeting places, nowhere is there any sign of its importance.

Like the parallel U.S.-Soviet talks on reducing intermediate-range nuclear forces, START has been conducted amid earnest secrecy since Rowny and his Soviet counterpart Viktor Pavlovich Karpov began the process June 29.

Rowny, a determined jogger and sometimes harmonica player, seldom goes beyond describing the talks as serious and businesslike — "you know," he said, "the same old cliche."

A shroud of secrecy, he said, is requisite for success; details of the talks must be confined to the conference rooms, safely away from the temptations of publicity.

"There is so much at stake, and so much to lose, that I can't afford (being quoted under) a Geneva dateline of any kind," Rowny said in early December, rejecting requests for an interview.

Nevertheless, no hint of significant progress has emerged from the curtain of confidentiality. The negotiators are no doubt still in the early stages of what may prove to be an extended and tedious process.

A senior U.S. State Department official said in October that there remains "a long way to go" before agreements are reached.

Karpov, Rowny's counterpart, is said to have joked that he was prepared for a 10-year assignment in Switzerland. (Like Rowny, Karpov, 54, participated in the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks, the 1970s forerunner of START. The two men know each other rather well.)

Rowny, who turns 66 in April, has invoked a video game metaphor to temper expectations of an early breakthrough. The Soviets "are very deliberate," a people given to playing chess, he said when the talks began. "We in the West like to play Pac Man," he said. "We like to put quarters in and see instant results on electronic machines. It's not going to be that way; it's going to be more deliberate, a little slower."

The delegations have since late June completed two rounds of bargaining, each of which lasted six to eight weeks. The second round ended in early December; the talks were recessed until Feb. 2, to allow consultations back home.

Rowny's team has presented in detail a plan proposing mutual reductions in arsenals of strategic, or intercontinental, weapons: specifically, cutting the number of deployed ballistic warheads from approximate prevailing levels of 7,500 to 5,000. No more than half the warheads would be deployed on land-based missiles, which the United States considers the "most destabilizing" systems — but in which the Soviets have deployed about 70 percent of their strategic forces. The most formidable Soviet missile is the intercontinental-range SS-18, which carries 10 warheads.

The Soviets also have the SS-20 missile, reported to be highly accurate, but it differs from the SS-18 in that it is an intermediate-range weapon.

Although Rowny has said he believes "the Soviets recognize we have a good proposal," Karpov, in a statement read at Geneva airport just before the second round began in October, characterized the U.S. offer as "one-sided," asserting that it "cannot serve as a basis for agreement."

But Karpov did not reject it out-of-hand. He spoke instead of hoping that the Americans would "make the necessary adjustments ... which would open up the road towards a mutually acceptable agreement."

Karpov, in turn, has reportedly proposed a ceiling of 1,800 missiles and bombers in each country's intercontinental nuclear arsenal. The United States has about 2,100 such weapons; the Soviets, about 2,700.

The Soviet plan reportedly carries conditions unacceptable to the United States, such as tying reductions in intercontinental weapons to a U.S. pledge to scrap plans to deploy in Western Europe a new generation of 572 intermediate-range nuclear arms. Those forces are the subject of the parallel U.S.-Soviet talks in Geneva, which are in their second year and have produced scant progress.

Nonetheless, Reagan said in a nationwide speech Nov. 22 that the Soviets' "opening position is a serious one; and even though it doesn't meet our objective of deep reductions, there's no question we're heading in the right direction."

Reagan in the same speech said he had instructed U.S. negotiators here to take up a series of "confidence-building" proposals intended to reduce dangers of accidental nuclear war.

The Soviets, officials in Washington said, have expressed interest in discussing the proposals, which include advance notice of test launchings of intercontinental and intermediate-range missiles, exchanges of basic data about nuclear forces, and possible improvements in the "hot-line" between Washington and Moscow.

London's Old Tower Bridge Is Open Again

By STACEY COWLES
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — Tower Bridge, the sturdy landmark over the Thames, has reopened for the first time in 72 years in a celebration of Victorian durability and eccentricity.

"It's London's Eiffel Tower," said John Fielding, tourist manager for the famous drawbridge built in 1894.

"There's nothing quite like it in the world. Certainly there are bigger and more splendid bridges, but this is unique, the most instantly recognizable," he said.

The public has not been allowed to climb the twin five-story, fairy-castle towers of the bridge, or to cross the pedestrian walkway suspended between them 140 feet above the River Thames, since the towers were closed in 1910.

"Pedestrians soon found it was too much effort to climb up those stairs when the drawbridge was open, especially since the bridge mechanism can open and close in under six minutes," said Fielding, explaining that long-ago decision.

"The walkways became a haven for derelicts, so they were closed to the public and only reopened with the renovation completed last June 30."

Now the walkways and the floor below in both towers are thronged by tourists who come for the view, and to see exhibits about the bridge's history, including its still operational original lifting mechanism.

Fielding said 2,000 to 3,000 people a day are visiting the reopened towers. A visit costs 1.60 pounds ($2.70) for adults and 80 pence ($1.30) for children.

The bridge had a mixed reception when it first opened on June 30, 1894. The London Times called it "one of the structural triumphs of this age of steel," but a trade journal, The Builder, dismissed the ornately carved and turreted German High Gothic towers as "elaborate and costly make-believe."

Tower Bridge, structurally unaltered since the days when its users trotted over by horse-and-carriage, remains a vital part of the capital's traffic system, carrying more than 20,000 Londoners to work every day.

However, river traffic has fallen considerably since commercial ships are now too big to use the up-river London docks. An average of three ships a week pass under the gateway to the Thames, compared with more than 100 in the 1920s, Fielding said.

Until 1976, the old hydraulic engines, provided with pressurized water by steam-powered compressors, tilted the bridge's twin 1,200-pound bascules, the counterbalanced road sections hinged to the towers 40 feet above the water.

Then economic necessity dictated the replacement of steam by electric power and the installation of new hydraulic engines next to the old machinery, which still works, said Fielding.

School Asks New Doctors To Stay Home

By HOYT HARWELL
Associated Press Writer

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — Many gifted high school students from the Alabama countryside never even think of going to a four-year college, much less into medicine.

A program begun this fall is seeking to change that but it will be years before the results can be measured fully.

A major aim of the programs is to encourage the students, if they become doctors, to return home to practice medicine. And it will be even longer, as much as 15 years, before that can happen.

Studies show that "almost half of all physicians who practice in small towns are themselves from small towns," said Harry Knopke. "That is why the program in Alabama is aimed at students from rural areas."

Knopke and Robert Northrup of the University of Alabama's College of Community Health Services are directors of the program in this state.

It began in October, along with similar programs at two New York high schools, under grants from the Josiah Macy Jr. Foundation.

City College of New York is conducting the urban-oriented program there and its goal is to increase the number of miniority doctors who eventually practice in New York.

The president of the foundation, James G. Hirsch, said previous efforts have been at the college level.

"But the real problem seems to be that talent is lost early in the education system," he said. "We are not giving high school students the opportunities they need and this is a national concern."

In Alabama, the program will help youngsters in academic and social development so they can qualify for admission to college and then complete a pre-health program.

The first group of 110 students selected are ninth graders from Hillcrest and Northside High schools in Tuscaloosa County; Eutaw and Paramount schools in Greene County, and both campuses of Greensboro High in Hale County.

Knopke said the schools' teachers will receive help from the university so they can better teach science, mathematics and language. At the same time, the students are brought to the university several weekends a year to learn about health care and, more importantly, to become familiar with a college campus.

"We're trying to raise the expectations of students, parents and teachers," Knopke said. "There are a number of exceptionally bright students who would never get to college because they are groomed for technical schools."

The Macy Foundation's program officer, Maxine Bleich, said the New York program includes 100 students at A. Phillip Randolph High and another 100 at Clara Barton High.

She said the foundation has been working for 15 years to get more minorities into medicine but recently decided "to enter earlier in the students' lives."

The New York and Alabama programs, she said, "are parallel and we thought it would be a terrific opportunity to try these things in a rural setting as well as an urban setting."

'Chronicles Of Pitt County' Has Significant Public Value

Chronicles of Pitt County. Elizabeth Copeland, Executive Editor. Distributed by The Pitt County Historical Society, Inc., Greenville. Large format, 888 pages, $45.

From Penny Hill to Pactolus, from Marlboro to Elmira, "Chronicles of Pitt County" presents a most informative, invaluble and entertaining picture of this county named for William Pitt, the Earl of Chatham. Thanks to the cooperation of scores of residents, much of the history of Pitt County, its people and places, is now available in one well-organized volume.

A project of the Pitt County Historical Society, efforts to publish "Chronicles" were led by a committee of the Society who invited community support for the volume in a series of public meetings and media releases. County response toward this invitation exceeded all expectations as citizens volunteered countless articles, pictures, and news clippings to make up "Chronicles." The results are extremely impressive. "Chronicles of Pitt County" is an 888 page volume complete with 1,100 family stories indexed with over 42,000 names, 1,000 photographs, and dozens of articles about churches, events, and communities in Pitt County. Applause for the text's organization must go to Executive Editor Elizabeth H. Copeland, for readers of all ages will easily find articles of particular interest to them.

"Chronicles" is divided into three major sections: Local history/Pitt's communities, Pitt County Churches, and Family Histories, the last section comprising most of the volume. Perhaps the greatest strength of "Chronicles" is the fact that it thankfully has an index, an indispensable tool for lay readers as well as genealogists. Hundreds of hours were volunteered by indexer Marguerite Wiggins in this effort which includes both a list of all names and places referred to in the historical section as well as a catalogue of names and addresses of people who contributed articles.

The local history section of "Chronicles" is an enticing look at county history, at the development of crossroads and communities, at early educational efforts, and at various county events and institutions. Edited by Donna Congleton, Joe Congleton, and LaRue Evans, this section makes fascinating reading. Among the varied topics are the growth of the tobacco industry, tales of early schools such as the one at Renston, and the stories of the Greenville debut of Cyclone Mack, the most powerful evangelist of the 1920's. "The Daily Reflector," in covering Mack's sermons, noted that he heaped "cynical rebuke" on the sinful ways of Pitt Countians.

Other gems highlight this section — architectural buffs will enjoy pictures of early area homes submitted by Connor Eagles and Keats Sparrow. Of particular note is a picture of "Cottendale" taken before this fine Cotten family residence burned in 1961. Notably this section of "Chronicles" also reflects the significant contributions that Blacks have made in the educational, religious, and political development of Pitt County. Beatrice Maye's concise articles entitled "Tar River Institute" and "Robinson Union School" are but two examples that depict these contributions.

The history of any Southern county is reflected in its churches; "Chronicles of Pitt County" reflects vividly the dedication and sacrifices that congregations have made in seeing their churches through wars, economic downturns, and other difficult times. Dozens of Pitt County churches are described including urban churches such as Memorial Baptist and St. Paul's Episcopal as well as rural landmarks such as Reedy Branch and Red Banks. As in the remainder of "Chronicles," early photographs and descriptions are often highlights.

As noted earlier, the final, lengthy section of this volume is a recounting of the histories of numerous Pitt County families. A look at the index finds listings such as Abbott, Andrews, Bland, Blount, Cox, Crisp — a rich look at the people of the county carefully edited and cross-referenced by Barbara Howlett and Elizabeth Copeland. Included with the families' articles are pictures of homeplaces, cemeteries, and family gatherings. Births, deaths, marriages, and divorces are catalogued here; much of this material would surely have been soon lost had it not been collected in this volume. Only a very few families chose not to submit articles for publication.

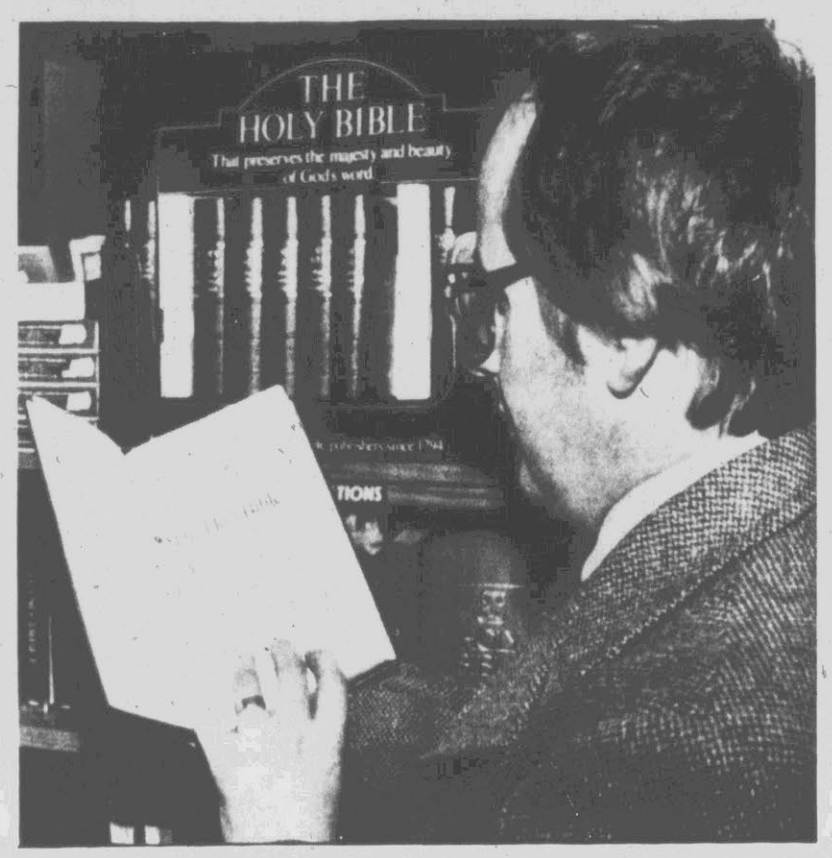

"Chronicles of Pitt County" ranks as a most significant achievement of the Pitt County Historical Society, for various unbiased sources have praised the volume for tis comprehensive nature, its readability, and its organization. Pitt County residents should certainly be lauded for their generous offerings of material to the editors.

While reportedly no home library can be without a Bible and a good dictionary, a respectable Pitt County library must now include "Chronicles of Pitt County." Although this volume's $45 prices may seem excessive at first glance, a quick look at the wealth of material it contains should convince would-be readers thatbbChroniclesggisbot habargainand a wise investment.

Hot Cat Is Really A Mild Man

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The lean, keen tabby, jumping around, introducing characters and songs, keeping the pace brisk — the veritable master of ceremonies of Act One of "Cats" — is, under that gray, elastic skin, really mild-mannered, dancer-actor Harry Groener.

Groener has been on Broadway before, in the short-lived "Oh, Brother!" and "Is There Life After High School?" and, for eight months, as Ado Annie's long-suffering feller, Will Parker, in a revivalof "Oklahoma!"

"Cats" was his first hit Broadway opening. The Winter Garden Theater box office opened Aug. 23 and had sold nearly $8 million worth of tickets, two-thirds of that before the opening Oct 7. Backstage stairwells were lined with flowers on opening night. There were cases of champagne, tons of telegrams and gifts galore.

While talking with a reporter between matinee and evening shows, Groener leaves on his cat face and puts on shirt and jeans and one treasured gift — a gold pendant with Cats written on it. He can't wear it during the show because it would interfere with his wiring for sound.

Another opening-night gift was a Cats carrybag with a Cats sweatshirt inside. There was cat food and litter boxes with fans inside to air them out.

The two cats — Rum Tum Tugger and Alonzo, known as Terrence V. Mann and Hector Jaime Mercado in the human world — who share a tiny dressing room with Groener don't have cats at home and gave him all their cat equipment. Groener and his wife, partly inspired by the show, have acquired a kitten, Blissit.

Groener met his wife, actress Dawn Didawick, when both were in "The Matchmaker" at the Actors Theater of Louisville in 1976. She's performing there this season again but came to the jighopmning night.

In "Cats," Groener's name is Munkustrap. The audience doesn't identify him with that name because he doesn't have a solo with his name on it as do some of the others. But he's listed as Munkustrap in the program.

"I'm second in command to Old Deuteronomy, the leader and protector of the pack. I fight when need be. And I will take over when Old Deuteronomy leaves us forever."

Though Broadway has seen him only in musicals, Groener has played Shakespeare in Seattle and modern drama in Los Angeles

Honeybees: Unseen Migrant Workers ...

By WALTER PUTNAM
Associated Press Writer

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — They are America's unseen migrant workers, huddled in masses aboard trucks to be transported through the night across state lines.

Upon arrival in states like Florida, where they spend the winter in the citrus groves improving the yield, the migrants toil untold hours without pay, and often without gratitude from those who enjoy the sweet fruits of their labor.

These migrants are honeybees. They are moved by the hundreds of thousands each year to spend the cold months here and in the sunny climes of Arizona and Texas.

After a few months of pollinating flowers as they go about their business of gathering nectar and pollen for their hives, the bees return to the North.

Many dwell in the Dakotas, where they repeat their performance in the summertime amidst fields of clover and sunflowers. Others go to the North Carolina mountains to partake of nectar that is transformed into a rich, dark sourwood honey that strikes the palate like a mellifluous note of chamber music does the ear.

"Florida is one of the favorite wintering sites for bees," said Frank Robinson, a University of Florida entomologist and secretary of the American Beekeepers Federation. "We probably have between 20,000 and 30,000 colonies that come into the state each year."

Robinson said bees begin clustering in their hives when the temperature drops below 50 degrees instead of foraging in the fields. It would cost an expensive 60 to 75 pounds of honey to feed a single colony of bees during the winter in the Dakotas, he said.

"It's been a common practice for many years (for beekeepers) to kill off the colonies. Then they would buy a package of bees from the South and start all over," Robinson said.

In more recent years, he said, it has proved cheaper to transport the bees to save on the $25 package of starter bees for perhaps 2,000 colonies kept by an average honey producer.

This is done by killing off many of the colonies with cyanide, Robinson said. The remaining hives are carried South where they are split and allowed to replenish through bountiful yields of flowers such as citrus blossoms.

"In a good citrus bloom a good colony can produce 100 or 125 pounds (of honey)," Robinson said.

"It allows us to get two crops (of honey) off the same crop of bees." said Vern Sisson of Powers Apiaries in Babson Park, Fla.

Sisson said Powers is the largest honey producer in the world, averaging 4 million pounds a year, and it brings about 8,000 colonies to Florida each winter.

The company, he said, also has four locations in North Dakota, one in Arizona and one in Hawaii.

In the Aloha State, Sisson said, "They move them up and down the mountain and up and down the coasts. They must move them around five times a year to go with the flow."

Bee migration is not without peril. Sometimes in the mosquito-plagued Sunshine State, over-zealous sprayers poison bees as well as pests.

And each year, Robinson said, there is an accident or two, an overturned truck that leaves traffic police befuddled over what to do with thousands of swarming insects. Sometimes the bees are saved, but often they are poisoned so the wreckage can be cleared.

Other than citrus, bees in Florida dine on red maple, willow or golden rod in late autumn. In the spring, saw palmetto is a favorite food. That produces about 25 percent of the surplus honey in Florida, compared to 60 percent for citrus, Robinson said.

Track Group Plans Push In Georgia

BY DAVID PACE
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — Advocates of horse racing and pari-mutuel betting in Georgia, hoping the state's lawmakers will vote their pocketbooks rather than their emotions, are planning a major push in 1983 to place the issue before the state's voters.

Jack Smith, executive director of the Georgia Horse Foundation, said horse racing advocates already have found several legislators willing to sponsor a bill to authorize a statewide referendum on the issue, with the revenue from a new pari-mutuel tax going to fund education.

"The mood and atmosphere is so much better than it's ever been that we feel it's the right time to give it a first-class push," said Smith, whose organization was formed in 1978 as an umbrella group for the various horse interests around the state.

"It's the most sensitive thing that's happened here in years, comparable to bringing liquor in," he said in an interview. "We've got to show the economic benefits and that people are for it. If we do that, I think it will pass."

In recent weeks, several powerful Georgia political leaders have let it be known that they would not oppose such a move, although no state politician has stepped forward to spearhead a drive for horse racing and pari-mutuel betting.

Lt. Gov. Zell Miller told a questioner last month during the annual pre-legislative forum that he would not oppose legalization of pari-mutuel betting on horses, provided it was approved in a statewide referendum and then in a referendum of the voters in the county where the horse track would be located.

And following Miller's comments, Atlanta Mayor Andrew Young told a group of newspaper editors in the city that he would give "very strong support" to a move to legalize pari-mutuel betting, provided the revenues were earmarked to education.

"If folk are going to sin, they might as well sin for the good of the children as sin for nothing," said Young, an ordained minister. "We've got to find a way to finance education statewide."

Miller said in a recent interview that he knows of no legislator who is planning to introduce a horse racing bill during the 1983 session. And he said he doesn't know if the economic crunch has hit state government hard enough yet for the idea of pari-mutuel betting to gain widespread support.

But Smith is planning a number of moves in the coming weeks that he hopes will set the stage for serious consideration of the issue in the 1983 session.

The horse foundation is planning a statewide public opinion survey after the first of the year which Smith hopes will show strong public support for the idea of providing additional money for schools through pari-mutuel betting on horses.

In addition, Smith said the foundation has paid for a study by the University of Georgia College of Business Administration on the impact pari-mutuel betting on horses would have in Georgia.

While the study won't be released until after Jan. 1, Smith and John Legler, the Georgia professor of banking and finance who conducted the study, provided a glimpse of the findings.

They said a horse track in the Atlanta area, operating for 180 racing days a year, would create 6,000 jobs and generate some $25 million a year in new tax revenue, for both the state and local governments.

Another major impact would be on the state's agribusiness. Smith said the study estimates that more than 200 horse farms would develop in Georgia within several years of the legalization of pari-mutuel betting.

In addition, Smith said the study found that the total increase in gross state product from such a racetrack, as the money flowed into other areas such as hotels and restaurants, would be about $250 million the first year.

"Our contention is that there is no other business standing ready to come into Georgia of this magnitude," Smith said. "We probably have six or seven different groups we have identified who are ready to build a first class racetrack in or around Atlanta."

Smith and other horse racing advocates contend that Atlanta is one of the last of the "great untapped racing markets in America." The three horse tracks closest to the city all are roughly 350 miles away, in New Orleans, Lexington, Ky., and Tampa, Fla.

And with Atlanta's population, popularity as a convention center and easy accessibility from other areas, the city is a natural for a horse track, Smith said.

"I don't think it's farfetched at all to say that Georgia could be one of the biggest horse states in the nation within five years," he said.

Smith said he expects organized opposition from religious groups, both when the issue comes up in the Legislature and when — if it passes there — it goes before the people in a referendum.

But, he said, "We'll take our chances on a referendum if our opponents will."

Grants Available For Youth Groups

Members of Greeville youth groups or organizations planning to innovate youth projects have funds available for assistance from the N.C. State Youth Council.

The council awards grants three times per year to local youth organizations proposing worthy projects. The average grant is $400.

Applications are reviewed and grants are awarded during the council's quarterly meetings. The next meeting is Jan. 28-30 in High Point.

For information and a grant application form contact the Youth Involvement Office, Elks Building, 121 W. Jones St., Raleigh, N.C. 27611, or telephone 733-5966. The deadline is Jan. 11.

The State Youth Council is a component of the N.C. Department of Administration's Youth Involvement Office and works to ccordinate youth councils across the state.

Hoarder Is Selling His Slot Machines

By KEVIN NOBLET
Associated Press Writer

METAIRIE, La. (AP) — Sam Woods Jr. remembers the nights he drove nervously down Louisiana highways, his illegal booty tucked away in the trunk of his car.

It wasn't drugs or stolen goods — just a squat, old machine named maybe "Jewel Bell Bonus," "Bluebird of Happiness" or "Cherry Burst."

Woods is, or rather was, a collector of antique slot machines.

He's now selling them all — more than 100 of the multicolored, steel and hardwood devices that enticed nickels and pennies by the millions in their time.

"I know what a bootlegger must feel," he said, "how he must feel hauling his load of moonshine down country roads.

"It was illegal to even possess a slot machine. The state police had the right to come in and smash it or confiscate it. Usually, they'd smash it right there on the spot."

A middle-age, respected businessman, Woods said he didn't really like being a scofflaw. So he pushed for legislation to legalize possession of antique slot machines in Louisiana. It finally passed in 1981.

Maybe that was the problem.

"It's not a thrill any more," he said to explain the price tags now tied to each machine.

There was excitement, however, in finally taking the slot machines out of hiding.

The day they became legal, he began building display cases in one of the eight stores where he sells lamps, ceiling fans, clocks and home decorating items.

The machines were taken out of the old plastic plastic garbage bags he stored them in. "It was like Christmas," he recalled.

He won't say exactly where he kept them hidden during his 16-odd years as a collector. It must have been a good place, since not one fell under a policeman's sledgehammer.

For the past year, they've been on display as a sort of slot machine museum, attracting hundreds of people who just came to gaze at them.

The represent more than just his own travels across the south in search of old machines, some just a jumble of parts in a box, that could be restored.

"It evokes the past, the days when cowhands came in to shove their last nickel in the slot and take a chance," Woods said. "I'm not a gambler, and I don't like breaking the law, but I'm proud of having saved them for posterity."

Selling off the collection won't mean a total loss, by any means. Some of the price tags ask for several thousand dollars.

It's part of Woods' decision to shed all his business wares. He said he is closing down his stores and moving to a 40-acre ranch near Folsom. He plans to dabble in horses, maybe in a little real estate.

"People ask me if it's hard to give up all these things, to watch people walking out the door with the stuff I collected for years," he said. "It isn't.

"It's going to make a lot of people happy. Everyone wants a slot machine."

Pledge

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — The nation's traditional "Pledge of Allegiance" to the flag was written by Francis Bellamy 90 years ago.

An 1876 graduate of the University of Rochester, Bellamy wrote the pledge in 1892 for the national observance of the 400th anniversary of the discovery of America by Christopher Columbus.

Bellamy was an editor of Youth's Companion magazine, which promoted the observance in the public schools. His authorship of the "Pledge" later became a matter of controversy but was affirmed in 1939 by a committee of the U.S. Flag Association and in 1957 by the Library of Congress Legislative Reference Service.

Attention: Senior Citizens

Medicare was never intended to cover all your medical costs. That's why Bankers Life and Casualty developed P.I.C... "Planned Insurance Coverage"...to help with the share of expenses Medicare expects you to pay.

Bankers' P.I.C. gives you a choice of plans. For example; one P.I.C. option will pay 100% of the usual and customary expenses that run higher than the Medicare Part "B" limit. That means you'll be fully covered for the usual charges for such things as: the services of your doctor, outpatient hospital charges and medical supplies.

P.I.C.'s flexible options let you choose your priorities. Don't spend money on a Medicare Supplement that doesn't fit your personal needs. Let us tailor a P.I.C. plan just for you.

IOCS

IOCS is a nationally recognized leader in software development and systems integration/engineering. Our professionals accept challenging opportunities, competitive salaries, full benefits and a winning environment when they join IOCS.

JOIN US AT CHERRY POINT or SEYMOUR JOHNSON

Our expansion into this area has created new opportunities for people who can communicate well and have familiarity with a military environment. Knowledge of automated systems is very helpful.

We will be establishing a field test center where we will be collecting research data and monitoring equipment performance. These assignments could be close to a year in duration and will be located at Cherry Point or Seymour Johnson

Supervisor

This position of Field Test Supervisor will require a college degree (or equivalent) with experience in a field test or research environment, preferably with the military. The successful candidate will supervise our data collection effort, monitor equipment performance, maintain daily activity logs and direct data collection personnel.

Data Collectors

These positions require a high school diploma with some college study or technical training. Experience with automated systems is desirable. Collectors will be trained in data collection methods, and will assist in the field test evaluation.

These positions are immediately available. Interviews will be conducted locally.

For further information call Frank Tierney, collect, at 617-890-2299; or send your resume or a letter of interest, today. We will respond to all inquiries.

TVA Defends Use Of Weed Control Plan

By JOHN NOLAN
Associated Press Writer

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — The Tennessee Valley Authority, a federal official and a water company say a California environmentalists' group is off base by warning that TVA is dangerously fouling lakes with herbicides in a weed control program.

The San Francisco chapter of Friends of the Earth says TVA is creating a health hazard for people who drink water from TVA lakes in Tennessee and Alabama by using the herbicides 2,4-D and endothall in those lakes. The environmental group, in its publication called "Not Man Apart," warns that travelers to Chattanooga should take their own drinking water supplies.

Friends of the Earth also says TVA cannot be certain that the weed killers have not been harmful because, the group says, no studies have been done to determine whether the chemicals pose a permanent health risk by accumulating in the tissues of people who drink the treated water.

But officials of the Environmental Protection Agency and TVA say the environmentalists' fears are groundless and that the herbicides are approved tools for weed control.

TVA says its control program of using the herbicides and lowering lakes during the winter — to let the weeds die out of water — is necessary to keep the plants from choking the lakes and possibly eliminating some recreational uses.

Roy Clark, chief of EPA's pesticides and toxic substances division in Atlanta, said that both 2,4-D and endothall are registered with the EPA for use in reservoirs. He said studies performed with animals show the herbicides do not tend to remain in tissues.

"Feeding studies with animals shows that it's excreted," Clark said. "It does not bio-accumulate."

EPA has limits on the allowable concentration of 2,4-D and endothall in drinking water. If the herbicides are used according to manufacturers' directions, the water's herbicide content should remain within EPA's standards, Clark said.

TVA, a federal agency, used about 20,000 gallons of 2,4-D and 15,000 gallons of endothall during the past year in Tennessee Valley reservoirs, mostly Guntersville in northeast Alabama and Chickamauga at Chattanooga.

About 60 percent of the herbicide applications were done in Guntersville Lake and 20 percent in Chickamauga Lake, said Terry Goldsby, a TVA botanist who conducts research into the agency's procedures for controlling aquatic weeds. Less frequent treatments were done in the Melton Hill, Fort Loudoun, Watts Bar, Nickajack, Wilson, Wheeler and Kentucky lakes, he said.

Those lakes supply drinking water for communities including Chattanooga, Soddy-Daisy, Dayton and South Pittsburg in Tennessee and Guntersville and Scottsboro in northern Alabama.

The greatest amounts of the herbicides are used in Guntersville and Chickamauga lakes because they have some areas less than 10 feet deep which prevent TVA from lowering those lakes as much as others during the winter to kill the weeds, Goldsby said.

He said TVA takes water samples from those reservoirs during the weed growing season to ensure that the herbicides are not dangerously tainting the reservoirs. Samples taken during the 1982 growing season at 11 water treatment plants on the Guntersville, Nickajack and Chickamauga reservoirs did not show any detectable amounts of 2,4-D or endothall, Goldsby said.

The lowest detectable concentration of 2,4-D is 10 parts per billion of water, while the smallest detectable amount of endothall is 1 part per billion of water, he said.

"These are organic compounds. They bio-degrade," he said.

TVA never applies the herbicides within a half mile of any drinking water intake in the Tennessee Valley, to allow the water to dilute any of the herbicide that might reach the intakes, Goldsby said. TVA would stop using the herbicides if its officials were convinced the chemicals posed any health hazard, he said.

Leon Bates, a biologist who heads TVA's aquatic weeds control program, said TVA has not done any follow-up testing to determine whether drinking the herbicide-treated water creates health problems. But, he said, both the EPA and American Medical Association have concluded there is no evidence that either 2,4-D or endothall adversely affect human health.

EPA says 2,4-D is one of the most widely used herbicides, used to control broadleaf weeds in home lawns, cereal and grain crops, commercial areas, rights of way and forests.

TVA is battling infestation of its reservoirs by both Eurasian water milfoil and hydrilla, a weed that has choked many Florida waterways and was found last August in Guntersville Lake. Both weeds grow prolifically and can throttle waterways, to the detriment of recreational uses.

Mail-Order Car Firm Is Thriving In Forest City

By JULIE KNIGHT
Forest City Daily Courier

FOREST CITY, N.C. (AP) — This little town known nationwide as "Little Detroit" has become the home of a unique spinoff — a mail-order car business.

The building and lot of R&H Motors is typical of Main Street in Forest City. The owners are lifelong residents and the business is family operated.

Bob and Kay Harris specialize in special interest automobiles. The majority of customers are out-of-towners who can't drive by frequently to look at the current selections.

Some never do drop by. Instead, they read their mail to find out what's available — in body styles, colors and prices. If they find a listing they think matches the car they wanrt, they either make a special trip to check it out or have it delivered sight unseen.

Some customers fly down to look at a car, and, if they don't like it, they fly back, returning again when they think they've found the car they want.

The couple has sold Mercedes to individuals as far away as Texas and Colorado, and even sold one car to a man in Germany, where the cars are built.

In addition to selling cars, Harris also has a fulltime job as branch manager for Iowa Mutual Insurance Co.

Mrs. Harris, who previously sold real estate, now devotes fulltime to the car business.

They keep an inventory of between 10 and 15 Mercedes, with prices ranging from $8,500 to $23,500.

"We will accumulate cars as fast as our money will let us," Harris said.

The couple has eight reliable sources for cars, but still has problems meeting demand.

Harris said the craftsmanship and quality makes the Mercedes in demand.

"You seldom ever find a Mercedes in a junk yard. No matter what happens to them, people find a way to fix them," he said.

He said his own personal experience of traveling as much as 1,000 miles to find a pre-owned Mercedes led him to believe that having five or more of them in one place would attract attention, and it has.

"You don't sell a Mercedes, they sell themselves," he said

ECU Scholarship Fund Will Honor Dr. Miriam Moore

ECU News Bureau

A scholarship fund in honor of Dr. Miriam B. Moore, who is retiring after 21 years of service at East Carolina University, has been established by the faculty, staff and students of the ECU School of Home Economics.

Dr. Moore retired in 1980 after 19 years as professor, chairperson and dean in the school of home economics. She joined the East Carolina faculty in 1962 and became the first dean of the school when it was established in 1968.

Dean Eugenia M. Zallen said the scholarship fund would recognize Dr. Moore's service. "We will welcome contributions from alumni and friends to endow the Miriam B. Moore Scholarship Fund," Dr. Zallen said.

When the fund has reached $5,000, a scholarship in Dr. Moore's name will be awarded to a home economics student, Dr. Zallen said.

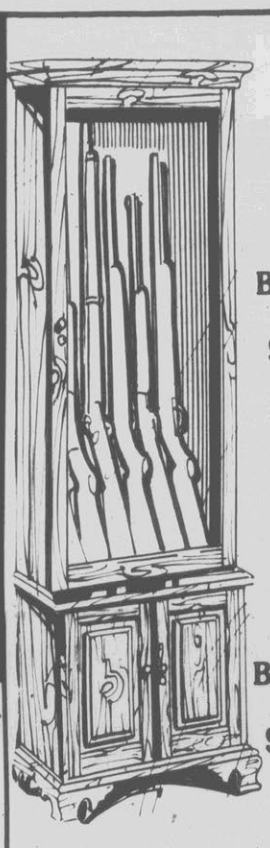

Dr. Moore was honored at a Dec. 7 meeting of Phi Upsilon Omicron honor society at which Chancellor John M. Howell spoke. The home economics faculty plans to recognize her at a luncheon honoring graduates on Dec. 11.

A native of Hart County, Ga., Dr. Moore received her Ph.D. in 1961 from Ohio State University and received her M.Ed. and B.S. degrees from the University of Georgia. She taught in Braxton, Hahira and Statesboro, Ga., and was associate professor and department chairman at Berry College, Mount Berry, Ga., from 1957-1962.

Ancient Port Joins U.S. List Of Places To Go

By JAMES R. PEIPERT
Associated Press Writer

MOMBASA, Kenya (A) — Visits of U.S. aircraft carriers are becoming as regular as the monsoons in this seductive Indian Ocean port, a haven for seamen long before Vasco Da Gama called here in 1498 on his way to India.

Some of the city's economic and social cycles have even begun to revolve around the American carrier calls, as they did in past centuries when the northeast monsoon from October to April brought dhows in the thousands from Arabia and India.

For Pius Gmuer, a Swiss who has owned the Castle Hotel in downtown Mombasa for 27 years, the arrival of the U.S. fleet means a jump in beer sales from about 4,000 bottles a day to 12,000.

When Ramesh Shah, proprietor of the Cosmo Boutique, hears through the local grapevine that the U.S. Navy is on the way, he orders 1,000 T-shirts printed with the name of the aircraft carrier and another 1,000 listing all the support ships in the battle group.

He discounts his whole stock of T-shirts, novelty tea towels and wood carvings, but does a volume business about five times above normal. Any T-shirts left over once the ships leave, Shah gives away with the purchase of a radio at his two electronics shops.

A 22-year-old prostitute named Anna, from the shores of Lake Victoria in Western Kenya, arranges time off from her job running a sewing machine in a Mombasa textile factory. Hundreds of other part-time streetwalkers come from as far away as Somalia and Uganda.

The U.S. Navy visits also mean boom times for the scores of curio stalls along Moi and Nyerere avenues, the fleets of rickety blue-and-white taxis and such nighspots as the New Florida Casino, the Bora Bora and the Sunshine Day and Night Club.

All have suffered from a fall-off in the tourist trade due to the world economic recession and an Aug. 1 coup attempt against Kenya's civilian government by junior ranks in the air force.

Four American aircraft carriers — the Constellation, Midway, John F. Kennedy and Enterprise — and dozens of support ships have called in Mombasa so far this year to give their crews shore leave during Indian Ocean patrols.

The U.S Navy has access to Mombasa under a 1980 defense agreement with the Kenyan government which was part of an American buildup in the Indian Ocean to guard the supertanker routes to the Persian Gulf.

This year more than 30,000 American sailors have sampled the pleasures of this east African harbor, the most recent being 8,700 who came to Mombasa the week of Thanksgiving from the Enterprise and six accompanying ships.

That group prompted some grumbling among the prostitutes because it included 300 women sailors from the destroyer tender USS Samuel Gompers. Some Gompers crewwomen could be seen around town walking hand in hand with male shipmates.

The U.S. Embassy in Nairobi, the Kenyan capital, estimates that each American sailor spends $300 during shore leave here, which would mean $9 million for the local economy in 1982.

But Provincial Commissioner Luka D. Galgalo, the top government official for the Coast Province, said in an interview the Embassy estimate is "very conservative."

"It's damn good business," remarked Gmuer, as several hundred noisy sailors downed half-liter bottles of Tusker and White Cap beer on the Castle Hotel's sidewalk terrace and negotiated with the ubiquitous, flashy prostitutes for an hour or two of companionship.

"There are only two navies that we hoteliers look forward to — the Americans and the Australians," said Gmuer, who has seen the fleets of many nations come and go over the years.

Gmuer prefers the Americans, he said, because they come in such large numbers and spend so freely, and the Australians because when it comes to quaffing beer "they're like a barrel without a bottom."

The hotelier — and also shopkeepers, local residents and officials interviewed during the Enterprise visit — praised the U.S. sailors for generally good behavior.

"I have two boxers here," Gmuer said of shaved-head, safari-suited bouncers keeping a watchful eye on the Castle terrace. "But with the Americans I never have to use them. In my opinion, the sailors do a lot less harm than low-class Europeans on package tours."

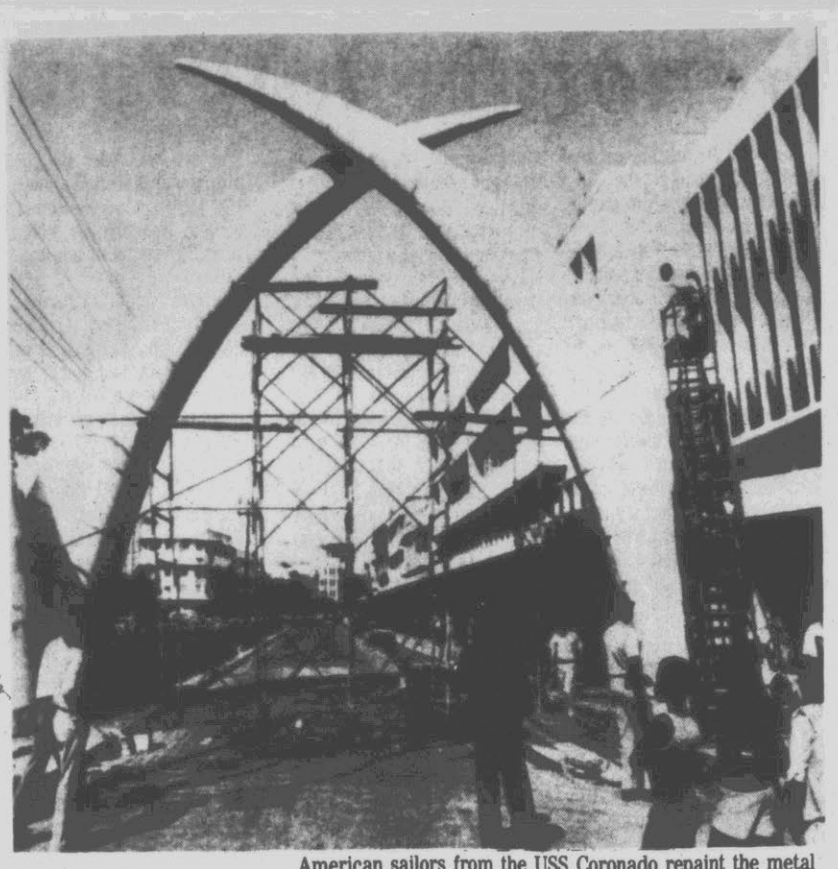

"The Navy chaps are well-dressed, well-behaved — and they're not indecent," added Galgalo, obliquely referring to European tourists who stroll around scantily dressed in Kenya's coastal towns.

Some of the Americans do, however, dress a bit garishly by the standards of this conservative city of about half a million, where local Moslem women usually wear an enveloping black veil called a buibui.

The sailors shed their uniforms before coming ashore here, and standard dress seemed to be jeans and T-shirts, baseball caps and a few straw cowboy hats. The shirts touted U.S. baseball and football teams, beers brewed from Manila to Guadalajara and saloons scattered from New Hampshire to Florida.

One negative aspect of the fleet visits is the sudden proliferation of con men, drug dealers and prostitutes, most of whom come down from Nairobi and other upcountry towns especially to hustle the sailors, Mombasa residents said.

But the Rev. Harry Hopkins, a Scottish Episcopal priest and former Royal Navy chaplain who runs the Mombasa seamen's mission, noted that Kenya is a poor country and "the girls on the streets are usually supporting brothers and sisters through school."

City Gateway

American sailors from the USS Coronado repaint the metal tusks which form the gateway to the city of Mombasa, Kenya. The crewmen painted the tusks as a community service projects. Visits of U.S. ships are becoming a regular feature of the city. (AP Laserphoto)

Institute Tries To Generate Interest In Self-Help

By ANDREA PEYSER
Associated Press Writer

RENSSELAERVILLE, N.Y. (AP) — On any given day, this town in the northern Catskill mountains might see corporate executives discussing new strategies, famous scientists hashing out theories, or resident "thinkers" devising schemes to revitalize a dying community — or build a new one from scratch.

The cloistered setting of the Institute on Man and Science seems far removed from world problems. That may be why for nearly 20 years leaders from U Thant to Jimmy Carter, and groups from the United Nations to General Electric, have sought it out.

But what has come out of the Institute may be just as interesting as who has come in. One decaying Pennsylvania mine town owes its life to programs developed here. And theories of self-help, put into practice, may improve the quality of life in the Oklahoma Indian nation and a decaying Cleveland neighborhood.

"We have our foot in two worlds," says Institute President Martin Sullivan. "We are involved in the development of alternate ideas — and we also test that out by going out and getting our feet muddy."

Chartered by the State University of New York in 1963, the Institute began as a sort of non-profit "think tank" geared toward finding ways for modern technology and science to improve everyday life.

Now approaching its 20th year, the Institute has moved away from its passive function. With varying degrees of success, the world-saving ideas hammered out by social theorists are being put to the test.

The forerunner of the Institute actually began 60 years ago down the road from the Institute's present campus, among the 18th century houses in the hamlet of Rensselaerville.

In the 1920s, such controversial celebrities as birth control advocate Margaret Sanger and socialist Norman Thomas would meet in the town hall for summer "country forums." Politicians, scientists and artists from around the world were invited by Laura Huyck, whose family fortune came from the felt factory once powered by the Rensselaerville Falls.

The informal sessions sparked the imagination of the next generation. One hundred acres of the Huyck property was deeded to the Institute at its inception.

In its first decade, the Institute gained a reputation from its relationship with the United Nations.

"The U.N. Conference on the Environment in Stockholm in the early '70s was planned here in Rensselaerville," Sullivan says. "The Institute became well known for its continuinw pqrt urship with the United Nations to look at global issues."

By the late '60s, the Institute's sights shifted from a world view to closer to home. The goal was to take global ideas and test them out on a small scale.

Sullivan credits former Institute President Harold Williams, who stepped down from the post last year, as the driving force behind the Institute's change of direction.

At Williams' direction, the Institute in 1973 bought Stump Creek, a community in Jefferson County, Pa.

Armed with private contributions and a small amount of federal money, the Institute's attempt was not to rebuild the community, but to encourage the people to rebuild it themselves.

Stump Creek was left high and dry when its mine closed, and the Institute found a disillusioned population of 145, most of whom planned to abandon the place.

The Institute bought the 95 homes from the real estate company that had acquired them when the mine folded, and its aim was to help enable the residents to keep the community alive — "to get the capital to buy their own homes," Sullivan says. Today the town's still there, with resident-owners, new sewer and water lines, and the population about the same.

The Institute failed, however, to generate a self-sustaining economy in Stump Creek; most people there are retirees or work elsewhere.

It was more successful with a similar project in Corbett, N.Y., another disheveled community that had lost much of its economic base.

Large Collection Of Indian Lore Began As Hobby

PAT REMICK

CORSICANA, Texas (UPI) — One of the Southwest's largest collections of Indian arrowheads began as a weekend hobby by a man who hoped to find evidence that Indians had roamed through all of Texas' 254 counties.

But even in his 30 years of searching on weekends and vacations before he was disabled by a stroke in 1962, Robert S. Reading was only able to visit 186 counties.

"He did get an awful good start," said Bob Reading of Dallas, his son. "He found evidence in every county he looked into."

Reading also researched more than 60 different Indian tribes and wrote two books, "Arrows Over Texas" and "Indian Civilization." At the time of his death in 1971, he was considered an Indian expert.

Today, his collection of more than 44,000 artifacts is displayed along the walls of the Robert S. Reading Arrowhead Room at the Navarro College library. The room is kept locked to protect the collection, but is opened at special request or for lectures and meetings.

"It is insured for a quarter million dollars, but we never have attempted to have it valued," said college spokeswoman Linda Timmerman. "We wouldn't know how you would ever put a value on it."

The younger Reading agrees.

"I wouldn't be surprised if it's not one of the largest in the country," he said. "At least it's the largest that's displayed as well as these."

The room features 502 glass panels of arrowheads, beads, spear points, dart points, scrapers, drills, knives and ornaments made of various types of stone and petrified wood. The panels cover one entire 30-by-8 foot wall and about 17 feet of another wall.

Mounted with picture wire on colorful felt pieces put together in Indian art patterns, each artifact is numbered and each panel has a description of the discovery of the items such as "Limestone County, northeast side of Navasota River southeast side of road, between Coolidge and Prairie Hill, Texas."

"To make the relic collection valid or valuable, you've got to identify the location where they were found," Reading said. "The collection covers relics from southern New Mexico, some from Colorado and practically all areas of Texas."

The relics are from the hundreds of Indian tribes that roamed the area. Although some date as far back as 6,000 B.C., most are from about 2,000 years ago to the 1800s.

Included in the collection are some shell beads which could have originated only on the Pacific Coast and probably were traded by various tribes until they reached the Southwest, Reading said.

The Reading family was living in El Paso, where the elder Reading worked for Lone Star Gas, when they made their first arrowhead-hunting trip with friends in January 1932.

That started a hobby that would last the remainder of his life although he became discouraged early because he could not find anything and his wife did. Then he found a spot with 42 artifacts and he was hooked.

With each trip, he became more adept at finding the likely spots. The family would travel with an ice pick, whiskbroom, shovel and hairbrush to search for and clean the artifacts.

"He had the idea that hunting-type Indians would inhabit a certain area until all the game was killed out, and then move on," the younger Reading said. "When they selected a place to camp, they naturally wanted to be above water.

"So any place you could find where there is high ground next to a creek and sandy-type soil, it's a good bet it probably was used as as a location for a camp. That's how you looked for things."

When the elder Reading was transferred to Corsicana, he feared his hobby was at an end.

"He never expected to find anything down in this part of the country," the son said. "It turned out he found even more."

After his retirement from Lone Star Gas, Reading began a career in city government and served as mayor from 1959-1965.

Reading also acquired several pieces of Indian pottery during his artifact searches, and donated them to the University of Texas at El Paso.

Busy Performer Chick Corea Wants Time To Compose Music

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Keyboards player-composer Chick Corea, of jazz, jazz-Latin, fusion and classical music, is very, very busy performing. He has a lot of records coming out, though he plans to spend less time recording in the future. And he's trying to find time to compose.

He says, "My biggest thing now is how to schedule things sanely enough that each project gets done with a lot of care and love."

Corea is well known for Return to Forever, the jazz-rock group he founded in 1972, taking himself, Airto Moreira and Stanley Clarke out of Stan Getz's group and adding Flora Purim and Joe Farrell.

He's famous and respected enough to be invited, with Dizzy Gillespie and Getz, to the "In Performance at the White House" jazz concert to be televised on PBS Dec. 22.

Stanley Clarke, al Di Meola and Lenny White, who were with Corea in Return to Forever 1973 to 1975 — there was one last version after them — reunited for "Compadres" on Corea's new Warner Brothers "Touchstone" album. They had such a good time that they're looking for a time to tour together in 1983.

"I'm basically a small group musician," Corea says. "It's the kind of ensemble I like, where I get to work very closely with a small number of other musicians. It has flexibility, especially when you add the element of improvising to it. I like to improvise and I like lengthy works that really sustain themselves. Economically, it works well, too.

"I accept offers for solo concerts sometimes, but I get a little bit lonely going around by myself too much.

"'Touchstone' pretty much uses the band I tour with plus flamenco guitarist Paco de Lucia. It has two pieces I wrote for the two of us and other stuff I've adapted for his flamenco playing and my improvisation with my group." The group, plus de Lucia, toured thishnall.

In October, a double album, "Trio Music," with drummer Roy Haynes and bassist Miroslav Vitous, came out on ECM Records. One record is "The Music of Thelonious Monk." Corea says, "We recorded it before he died, in my studio in Los Angeles, after a two-year concert stint. It is definitely a tribute but it wasn't a tribute to a dead man."

He says, "Roy Haynes is one of the last living connections to Charlie Parker and that era. He was in his band and played with John Coltrane and Lester Young. It is my opinion that Roy and Max Roach and Philly Joe Jones actually created the modern style of jazz drumming."

The other record is titled "Trio Improvisations." Corea says, "We went in and recorded everything we did on the concerts and didn't use any of it. We recorded new things and made that the record. That's the way the trio works best. The less the music is prepared sometimes, the better it comes off. It's the opposite with classical music." The trio is touring again the last weeks of 1982⅞ Sorea has been composing classical music lately. He says, "I've been interested in classical and chamber music always, but I never considered involving myself personally until the past couple of years. Privately, at home, I've been educating myself in the piano repertory. I decided to begin to write music for small groups."

The New World Festival, held in Miami last summer, commissioned Corea to compose a piece for the Chamber Music Society of Lincoln Center. The society calls it "Septette for Winds." He says, "It's for French horn, flute, piano and string quartet.

"It was very exciting for me. I bought a new white jacket. I don't usually get dressed up in performance. This was a different environment.

"I finished writing the piece three or four days before the rehearsals. We got it copied just in time. I realized I couldn't actually play the piano part. I needed seven or eight hours' practice. I'm not trained to look at it and reel it off. The other instrumentalists were way ahead of me in rehearsal. I was embarrassed, actually. The performance went off very nicely."

In January, Corea will appear with the Chamber Music Society in Lincoln Center. The septet will be played plus a trio that he wrote for himself, violinist Ida Kavafian and cellist Fred Sherry.

He says, "I wrote a sextet for string quartet, piano, and Gary Burton on vibes. We toured last August, all over the United States. It was great fun. We played summer places, where most of the other groups included were jazz and folk. The sextet couldn't strictly speaking be called jazz; it is really chamber music. There were only small parts of improvisation for Gary and myself.

"I didn't make any announcement about what kind of music it was, so people didn't start with fixed ideas. I was surprised that they were able to listen to the music and seemed to like it. After we played it so many times, we got that music good and popping, which creates a nice effect."

The sextet was recorded in Corea's studio and will be released by ECM Records. In January, Elektra Musician Records will bring out "Again and Again," a concert Corea and his group played in Johannesburg. There is talk of recording the septet.

Corea hasn't given his classical compositions fancy names. He says, "I like music when it is devoid of pictorial and story content. It is very pure and has more of the possibility of transporting you and your imagination outside of the world, which is very refreshing."

Corea says, "Now I've kind of put the whole recording scene on the back burner. I regret I and the rest of the music world have allowed the recording industry to become so important in our lives. I much prefer to take that energy and put it into live performance. I consider it more important — as a point of philosophy."

Last June, Corea gave some solo concerts in Germany and, for four days in Munich, took part in a "piano summit" with seven other players, most of them classical. After that, Corea and Gary Burton went to Russia and gave four concerts, one in Leningrad, three in Moscow.

Now, Corea is looking for a choreographer for whom he would write a piece of music for dance. And, he says, "I'm going to finally write my piano concerto. I need to find six weeks when I can sit home and write it. I've got the concept of what I want to do. It's a matter of sitting down with score paper and solidifying it.

"Then I'm going to practice my piano and perform it."

DON'T SQUEEZE, PLEASE

ARDSLEY, N.Y. (AP) — Beekeeping is becoming so popular that the hives and bees can even be ordered through mail order catalogs.

Bees are bought by the pound, with an average purchase of three pounds or 10,000 bees to start a hive. Italian honey bees are the preferred variety because they are good honey producers.

One hobbyist beekeeper here, among the nation's 60,000 beekeepers, says that contrary to what many perceive, "I usually wear shorts and a T-shirt in the summer, but always protect my head with a hat and veil. Beekeeping is really very safe, I have only been stung five times in the past year. Each time it was when I had done something wrong and squeezed a bee."

MECHANICAL GENIUS

NEW YORK (AP) — Electronic typewriters are more "intelligent" than electric ones.

Electronic models are built with tiny computers inside, enabling them to memorize characters and pages, and automatically correct, center and align numbers at the decimal point. Some higher-priced models even have copy-editing capabilities.

Son Of Italian Immigrant Is Building His Own Art Museum

By MARLA DONATO

CHICAGO (UPI) — The art establishment was incredulous when Daniel Terra, son of an immigrant Italian lithographer, paid a staggering $3.25 million for "The Gallery of the Louvre," a controversial 1832 painting by Samuel F.B. Morse, inventor of the telegraph.

But Terra is building his own art gallery for it and the rest of his collection of American art, and has pledged $85 million towards the estimated $110 million cost.

He says there's no museum dedicated to American works within 400 miles of Chicago, and so he's building one.

The $3.25 million Terra shelled out earlier this year for "The Gallery of the Louvre" is by far the highest known price ever paid for an American work of art.

Terra and his late wife Adeline started their art collection shortly after their marriage 45 years ago.

"She was the one who really kindled my interest in art in the first place," Terra said. "And we started collecting paintings right from the onset: 18th and 19th century English paintings which at that time were very inexpensive."

Their interest, fortune and collection grew together. In the mid-50s the Terras began selling off their European masters and Impressionists and buying American Impressionists because Adeline found them more dynamic.

It also was Adeline who suggested the trip to Syracuse, N.Y., to view Morse's painting at the University of New York at Syracuse. Terra had told her he had seen and been impressed by the painting years earlier in an encylopedia while researching Morse in a physics class.

When the painting was dusted off in a storage room, Adeline took one look and declared, "That's the icon of America."

Terra opened a museum in Evanston, Ill., on Chicago's suburban north shore two years ago with a a $3 million foundation. He plans to expand by building another downtown on Michigan Avenue. The two will house his collection of some 150 works of American art.

He estimates the entire project will cost $110 million, including a $35 million endowment. Of the total, the Terra family plans to provide $85 million and hopes to raise the remaining $25 million from the public for the actual building costs.

Terra, 71, who built the giant Lawter Chemical Corp. from a borrowed $2,000, is a close friend of Ronald Reagan. The President created the purely advisory post of Ambassador at Large for Cultural Affairs for Terra when he was no longer needed as national finance chairman of Reagan's 1980 Presidential campaign. Terra raised $21 million for Reagan's campaign and was the second largest contributor to Richard Nixon's Presidential campaign — $250,000.

Art experts are mostly agreed on the importance of the painting.

"It's not a genius work," says Carolyn Klein, curator for prominent Chicago art collector Charles Benton.

"Don't get me wrong, it's an excellent painting. But its real importance lies in its historical significance. It was painted at an early time in U.S. history when people weren't as involved in art."

"This picture is important for its icon quality," says Richard Love, owner of the R. H. Love gallery, which specializes in 19th and 20th century American works. "It's an European scene, but what's really going on here is an attempt by the artist to say to the Europeans, 'Hey, guys, America is art conscious too'."

The six-foot-by-nine work was conceived in 1830 by Morse and his close friend James Fenimore Cooper. It depicts the famous square gallery or Salon Carre in the Louvre. Lining the walls of the gallery are 38 of the world's greatest masterpieces. Morse captured in remarkable detail the works of such European artists as Da Vinci, Rubens, Raphael, Titian and Rembrandt.

The figures in the painting include Morse himself, prominently placed almost in the painting's exact center as he assists a young American female art student who is copying the Old Masters. Among others in the painting is novelist Cooper, in the left corner with his wife and daughter.

Morse and Cooper intended to launch the work on a nationwide tour to develop their countrymen's appreciation of the visual arts and demonstrate to the Europeans that frontier America was not filled with a bunch of cultureless yokels. The painting was expected to take the country by a storm. It didn't. No one wanted to pay to see it.

The painting passed through several hands until it was given to Syracuse University in 1884. A dispirited Morse took up scientific research and went on to produce the telegraph and Morse code.

The excitement the painting was supposed to generate didn't come until 150 years later when Syracuse University decided it needed new books for the library, pulled the painting out of storage and hung a $3.25 million price tag on it. Terra got first crack at it and bought.

Members of the art community say the extraordinary price will not affect the art market, pointing out that the painting is one of a kind. Whether the painting is actually worth the amount remains a point of debate.

Love, for one, said he would not have spent that amount for the work, but in the same breath called Terra's purchase a smart move.

"He did something that no one else would do," Love said. "He bought a $3.25 million painting and then got the media to write about it. He deserves to be congratulated."

Terra's notoriety has caused its share of jealousy in the Chicago art community. Some people appear angry because Terra did not will his collection to an established museum. They snidely predict his museum will not succeed.

But Terra said the museum will be well provided for and his son James, 28, is committed to carry the idea out.

Marshall Field V of the Chicago newspaper family, vice chairman of the board of trustees for the Art Institute of Chicago, rates Terra's collection in the nation's top 20. Field said museum officials talked with Terra about putting his collection in the Art Institute, but failed to make a deal.

Terra said he considered joining several art museums, but opted for his own because while there are only 26 museums of American Art in the country, there wasn't one within 400 miles of Chicago.

"We didn't want to leave our paintings to any general museum," he said. "We wanted the focus to be strictly American, because the focus on American art has been neglected much too long."

FIGHTING FIRE

GAITHERSBURG, Md. (AP) — Research technicians at the National Bureau of Standards fight fire with fire in an effort to create safer high-rise buildings.

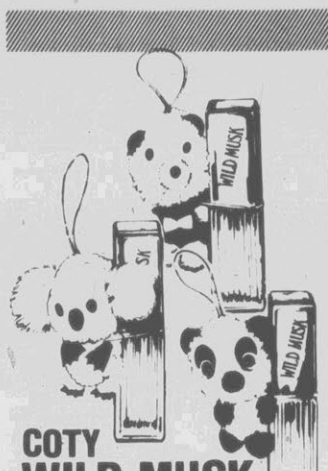

To evaluate a computer program predicting the structural performance of steel in fire, a two-story framework was built and exposed to test fires. The structure was considered representative of the mid-height framing and floor system in a 20-story, steel office building.

Data was accumulated during each test, using 150 sensors to continuously record temperatures and any movement of the steel.

Results of the tests, completed last spring compare favorably thus far with the computer predictions, says the American Iron and Steel Institute. Approval of the computer model by building code officials will simplify specifications for fire protection.

Everest Photographs Exhibited

WINSTON-SALEM — "Everest: As It Has Never Been Seen," an exhibit of photographs by two mountain climbers who were the first to go completely around Mount Everest, will open in New York at The Asia Society's Burke Room Dec. 23 and will be on view through Jan. 23.

Some 40 color photographs by Ned Gillette and Jan Reynolds illustrate the world around Everest — the harsh beauty of remote high country, the rugged adventure of climbing in the Himalayas, the resurgence of Buddhism and portraits of the people of Nepal and Tibet.

During 1981 and 1982, Gillette and Reynolds became the first to completely circle the mountain in a four-month, 300-mile journey that involved climbing, trekking and skiing through almost uncharted terrain at altitudes of 17,000 feet and higher.

They were the first Americans to climb Nepal's 23,442-foot Mount Pomuri, the first to climb it in winter and the first to ski in Tibet.

Their adventure is called the Camel Expedition: Mount Everest Grand Circle, and was sponsored by Camel cigarettes, which is also underwriting the exhbition.

The Asia Society, located at 725 Park Ave. and 70th Street in New York City, is a non-profit organization that promotes American understanding of Asian cultures.

Jim Rivers Play To Be Read At GMA

"Cathy and the Hungarians," a play by Greenville poet Jim Rivers, will be read at noon Wednesday at the Greenville Museum of Art, 802 S. Evans St.

Rivers, the author of several volumes of poetry and the recipient of numerous awards and fellowships for his literary work, had a reading of his poetry at the museum this past summer.

The event is free, and patrons may bring along bag lunches. Refreshments will be provided by the museum.

ECU Graduate Show

GRADUATE STUDENT SHOW — Four graduate students of the school of art, East Carolina University, are currently exhibiting examples of their art show at Gray Gallery, Jenkins Fine Arts Center, on the ECU campus. The four are: John Brantley and Peggy Anne Singleterry, painters; Bruce Hall, illustrator, and Herb Parker, a sculptor who is also showing drawings. Pictured here are examples of the work of the four in the Gray Gallery show. At top is a mixed media work by Singleterry entitled "Kitty Arcade." The art pieces at left are, (at top), a watercolor-acrylic drawing, "A Dream of Betsy," by Bruce Hall; (at center), a black and white graphite drawing by sculptor Parker entitled "Human Form;" and at bottom is a portion of a painting by John Bradley, "Detail of the Tongue." The exhibition is open to the public. Gallery hours are 10-4 daily, and 2-5 on Sundays. (Reflector Photo by Jerry Raynor)

Book News

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By Hansy Jones

Even if the bustle of holiday preparations limits the opportunities for quiet celebration, surely the season should not pass without a few moments spent savoring the joys of favorite Christmas stories. The juvenile collection at Sheppard Memorial Library offers a wealth of Christmas reading — old and new — suitable to all ages and tastes.

Among the best collections of holiday reading is "The Fireside Book of Christmas Stories," edited by Edward Wagenknecht. This popular anthology includes a panoramic selection of best-loved Christmas stories.

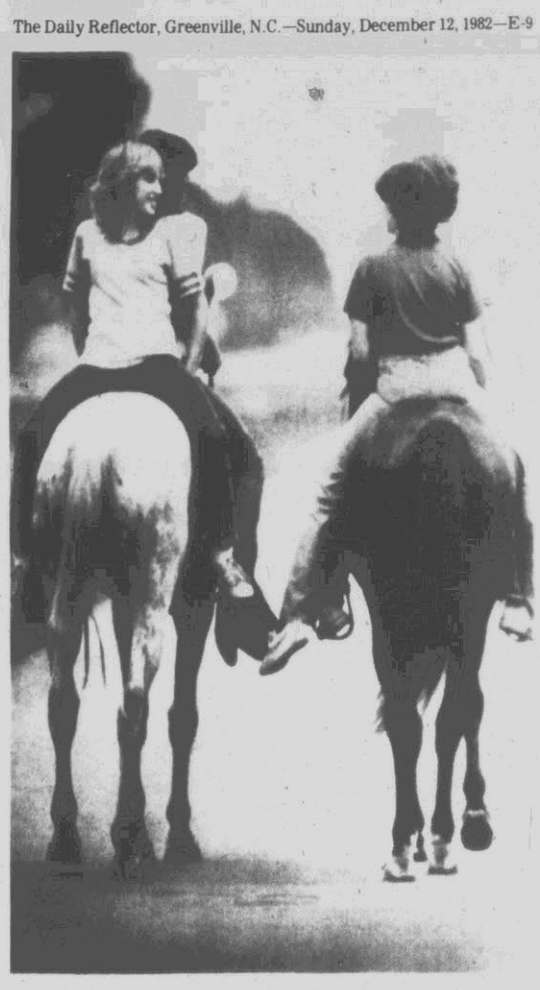

Bursting with the familiar nostalgia of tales of Christmas Past, it includes selections representative of all aspects of our celebration — the birth of Jesus, the Santa Claus legend, the traditional English-style Christmas, and the American "Home for Christmas" motif. All are present in such familiar titles as "The Other Wiseman," "The First Christmas Tree," "How Come Christmas," "A Christmas Carol," "The Bird's Christmas Carol," and "The Christmas Guest." The editor has done what he proposed in the introduction. He put together as many of the best Christmas stories as he could manage to crowd between a single pair of covers.

For stories with more contemporary settings, Phyllis Fenner's "Keeping Christmas" and Katherine Paterson's "Angels and Other Strangers" offer tales of the joyous season in more modern circumstances.

Barbara Robinson's "The Best Christmas Pageant Ever" is a contemporary one volume short story that is sure to bring tears to the eyes and laughter to the hearts of every reader. First published in 1972, this hilariously moving and memorable story of an unlikely group of players who manage to give new meaning and depth to the acting out of the traditional Christmas story has become something of a modern classic. (A perfect read-aloud story for family, church or school groups.)

For picture book lovers, the pleasure is unceasing. Readers of all ages will want to look again and again at Caldecott Medal-winner Ezra Jack Keat's glorious illustrations for the poignant Christmas story-song of "The Little Drummer Boy." In another illustrated version of a traditional Christmas carol, Hillary Knight tells about a loveable young bear who celebrates Christmas with a gleeful generosity. With fiddling foxes, dancing pigs, and lots of partridges in pear trees, this is a sparkling fresh and funny "Twelve Days of Christmas."

And, of course, no child or adult should be denied the joy of several readings of Clement Moore's "A Visit From St. Nicholas (or The Night Before Christmas)."

A Capitol Christmas

RALEIGH — The schedule of events to take place in Raleigh in "A Capitol Christmas" has been announced. In preparation for the celebrations, members of the Raleigh Garden Club on Friday and Saturday installed Christmas decorations in various locations in the state Capitol building and area.

Highlights of activities at the building and at other points in Raleigh during the holiday season are:

•Today, 1-5 p.m., the capitol is open to the public.

•Tuesday, 5-6 p.m., Gov. and Mrs. Hunt officially open the Christmas season with lighting of the outside Christmas trees at the Capitol. Music by the Broughton High School Brass Choir and the "JJ Singers," all on the south grounds.

•Tuesday, 6-7 p.m., "Christmas Celebration on the Mall" begins with ringing of church bells around Capitol Square, followed by choirs from over 30 Raleigh churches and music by the Carolina Tuba Ensemble at locations around Capitol Square and down Fayetteville Street Mall; and music by the brass section of the N.C. Symphony in front of the Radisson Hotel Plaza. Concerts will also be given by the Raleigh Woman's Club Chorus at the Rotunda from 6 to 6:30 p.m. and by the Cathedral Elementary Eighth Grade Handbell Choir at the Rotunda from 7:30 to 8 p.m.

•Tuesday through Thursday, 7:30-9:30 p.m. The Capitol, including offices of the governor and secretary of state, will be open to the public for viewing decorations. Guides will be on duty. Music to be provided at 7:30 p.m.

Various concert events are scheduled daily at the Rotunda beginning Wednesday and continuing through Dec. 22.

Grants Listed By N.C. Arts Council

RALEIGH — Nearly half a million dollars — $491,452 — in grants supporting arts activities across North Carolina have been awarded by the N.C. Arts Council. The grants have been awarded in six categories as follows:

Craftsmen Concerned About Pride In Work

By MILES SCHUMAN

ROME, Italy (UPI) — "People are no longer proud of what they make," says Romolo Ruggierini.

Which is why he, Giuseppe Cornacchia and Franco Coletti — and thousands of artisans whose crafts have been passed down from generation to generation for centuries — are very worried about the future.

The three men — engraver, shoemaker and furniture maker — work in tiny shops near each other near Rome's Trevi fountain. They are as different as their crafts, yet they are as similar as their aging, time-worked hands.

The modern world is slowly crushing them. Technology, industrialization and a change in attitudes have caused the three men to fear there will be no one to carry on the crafts they have practiced to perfection.

"The problem is that people don't look upon their work as an art any more because the machine has taken over," Ruggierini said. "It has ruined everything."

Ruggierini, 58, is an engraver. Since he was 14 he has made seals for popes and bishops and crests for Italy's noble families.

"My art has been passed down through the centuries, from the time the workshop was founded in 1793 to today," he said, sitting before a steel anvil and a shiny piece of metal.

"My master, to whom I was apprenticed as a boy, was taught by his master, and so on back to the founder. I feel very bound to the past.

"I do everything by hand. Sometimes I'll spend a month or more working on one engraving. I work 12 hours a day. You have to work for years and years to learn."

On the wall of his workshop hangs a parchment testimonial from Pope Pius VII recognizing the founder of Ruggierini's shop as the official Vatican engraver in 1793. When the son of his master died recently, Ruggierini said he felt compelled to carry on alone.

"I just could not let it all die," he said. "After all the knowledge passed down to me, I have a responsiblilty to my predecessors."

But Ruggierini has found there are few today who are as dedicated to his craft.

"Each day I lose more hope," he said. "I have no one to take over. Young people say it is too hard to learn. They just don't want to sacrifice anything.

Around the corner from Ruggierini's shop, on a narrow cobblestone street, shoemaker Giuseppe Cornacchia ponders the same fate for his craft.

Sitting on a bench covered with tools and unfinished shoes, Cornacchia said he learned his craft from his father, and his father from his grandfather. Since he was 13, Cornacchia, now 48, has worked 10 hours a day making shoes.

Neither of his two sons wants to become shoemakers.

"My sons don't want to work here," Cornacchia said. "They go to college and think they can do anything but help me here. They say it's too much of a sacrifice.

"It took me 10 years to learn how to make shoes, and that takes a little bit of brains. You also need passion for what you do. I make everything by hand, but that doesn't make any difference to people any more."

Franco Coletti, 58, makes furniture in a one-room workshop down the narrow winding street from Cornacchia. Coletti also began learning his craft, which has been in the family for more than a century, when he was 13.

Now he says his craft is disappearing because society's tastes have changed. "People want uniform things, objects that look the same and have nothing special to distinguish them," he said.

"When you don't see beautiful things, you don't know they exist and your tastes become mediocre. The big factories cater to mediocrity."

Colleti's sons have decided not to pursue their fathers' trade. Coletti says it hurts him, but he is not angry.

"It's like many young people today," he said. "They want everything the easy way. This is hard work and you earn very little as an apprentice. You have to get dirty. It's much easier to work in an office.

"The artisan is the last of the real individuals, in a sense. Of course the people who work for organizations can make their feelings known. But the result is generalized."

All three men spoke of their disappearing crafts without self pity. All seemed to share is a defiance of the modern world. Coletti seemed to speak for all three men when he said:

"I'm here in my workshop all day long, and I know the satisfaction that comes from working with my hands. It's the rest of society I feel sorry for. They're the ones who will lose out in the end."

AIDED BY ADA

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — A new programming language for military computers adopted by the U.S. Department of Defense owes its name to the daughter of Lord Byron, the British poet.

Ada, Countess of Lovelace, was an exceptional mathematician in the early 1800s. She was the driving force behind Charles Babbage, the Englishman who is credited with having invented the first computer, according to United Technologies, which manufactures such equipment.

Now, the programming called "Ada" is scheduled to replace the many computer languages used in military systems.

Summer Theater '83 Program Announced

ECU News Bureau

After several months of negotiations, the East Carolina Summer Theater has secured the rights to produce four large-scale Broadway musicals for its July 1983 summer season.

Now that the season is official, season tickets are available in time for holiday gift-giving, Summer Theater General Manager Scott Parker has announced.

The ECU Summer Theater is one of the first Southeastern companies granted permission to produce "They're Playing Our Song," after its successful run in New York. Other shows slated for production are:

•"Pippin" (July 4-9) — a romp of the loves, wars and politics of the Holy Roman Empire of Charlemagne and his rowdy band of characters;

•"A Little Night Music" (July 11-16) — a Tony Award winner for "best musical" set in turn-of-the-century Sweden, featuring the ballads "Send in the Clowns" and "The Glamorous Life."

•"No No Nanette" (July 18-23) — a big musical in the grand tradition with tap dancing which takes the audience through the never-never land of the Roaring Twenties.

•"They're Playing Our Song" (July 25-30) — a musical comedy by Neil Simon and Marvin Hamlish.

Last July the East Carolina Summer Theater returned to McGinnis Theater in ECU's newly renovated and expanded John D. Messick Theater Arts Center to produce four musicals in the lavish Broadway style.

"These large musicals have become our trademark over the years," remarked producer-director Edgar Loessin. "Last year we played to 96 percent of capacity, so I guess that means our audiences want us to continue producing their favorite shows. It's very good to be back."

Season tickets may be purchased at the box office in the Messick Theater Arts Center, telephone 757-6390, located at the corner of Fifth and Eastern streets. The box office is open each weekday frm 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Youth Orchestra Concert Today

The Eastern Youth Orchestra will present its Winter Concert at 8 p.m. today in the A.J. Fletcher Recital Hall on the East Carolina University campus. The concert will be open to the public with no admission charged.

For their program today, the young musicians will perform three works — "French Baroque Suite," based on music by Lully and arranged by Murphy; "Suite of English Folk Songs" by Ralph Vaughn-Williams, arranged by Jacob; and "Overture in D Major" by Schubert. The Schubert work has been arranged by North Carolinian Thor Johnson, former conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony.

The orchestra is conducted by Robert Hause, conductor of the East Carolina Symphony Orchestra.

The EYO was organized in 1980 by the Eastern Carolina Orchestra and Chamber Music Association, with the purpose "to encourage orchestral and chamber music performance in the coastal plains area of North Carolina." The Youth Orchestra provides an outlet for young instrumentalists in Greenville, Pitt County and the local region.

Members of the orchestra are selected by audition each year. This year's group includes 33 young people selected from the Greenville and Pitt County schools, and private schools in the area.

Peter Makuck's Poetry Strong In Images, Memories, Moods

Where We Live - Poems by Peter Makuck. Forward by Louis Simpson. Brockport, New York. BOA Editions, Ltd., 1982. 80 pages. Paper, $5, clothbound $10.

POET PETER MACUCK ... has taught at East Carolina University since 1976. A native of New London, Conn., Makuck received his Ph.D. degree from Kent State University and in 1974-75 was a Fulbright Lecturer on modern American poetry at the Universite de Savoie, France. A collection of his short stories, "Breaking and Entering," was published in 1981.

(Available in local bookstores — 36 special bound editions, signed by Makuck and Simpson, are available — 10 copies with a poem in holograph at $45; and 26 copies without holograph poem at $35.)

In his prefaee to the poems of Peter Makuck, Pulitzer Prize-winning poet Louis Simpson writes "On the basis of memory Peter Makuck has built us his world. The poetry is in the building, the use of language, intimate, exact, colorful. Each poem has its own reality, its own unexpected and moving truth."

The words "intimate, exact" are central to the structure of these poems. Makuck eschews the metaphysical aura to give the reader strong, immediately recognizable images that convey a time, a place and reassuring truths embedded in his poems.

Makuck is that rare poet among contemporary verse makers who is willing to take the risks of the personal approach. In many of the poems, he is the companionable narrator who tells us "I lived all day/on the pond," ... "I found a place, a kind of overlook/With a stone cross," ... or "By myself, I've never been less alone."

It is as if he invited us to come sit, to listen to him tell in a quiet, comforting way about places where he has lived, people he has known in these places, impressions and memories that have remained with him through the years. Admirable as may be his gift of story telling, Makuck is not merely an entertaining spinner of rememberances.

His poems, pared to strong, economical lines of essential language, are carefully structured. Seemingly simple, these poems are nonetheless rich in layers of feeling, of moods and emotions more compelling in being suggested rather than graphically projected.

"Where We Live" is an apt title for the poems, a clear indicator of the underlying thread of all 73 poems in the volume. We travel, geographically and through the chronological passage of time with Mackuck — from childhood and young manhood in Part I; into the early years of maturity and marriage, and time lived in France in Part II; and on into the present years of fatherhood, of living and teaching in Pitt County.

And no matter what place or period of life his poems report on, there is ever the poet's awareness, a necessity even, to reflect back, to cull images and ghosts of images from childhood to fashion poems rewarding in gained knowledge and understanding. Makuck's poems mirror what we sometimes forget, that for each individual the inescapable bonds of the past tie us firmly to the present. It's good to be reminded of this fundamental truth.

Places where Makuck lived and his travels are finely drawn word landscapes — old family barns falling into disuse, a village that seems smaller as boy grows into man, the loneliness of night rides over hills, ancient stone walls surrounding a French vineyard, rural homesteads in America's South.

In reviewing any enjoyable volume of poems, there's always the wish to share with readers favorite passages. For me, there's an abundance of such passages in this first collection of Makuck's poems. A few are:

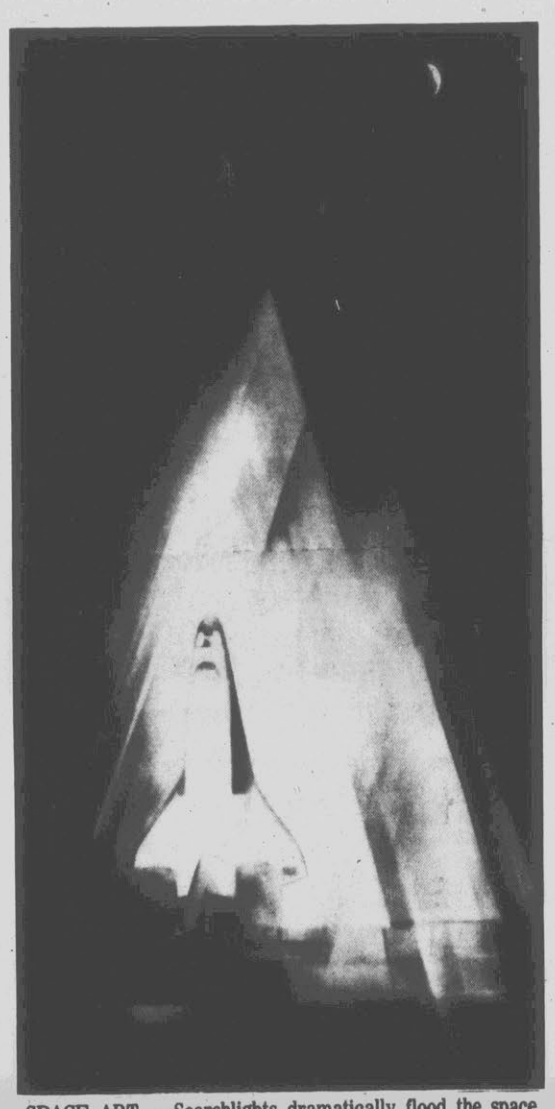

• "How shall I frame it?
Through blurred daisies and stems?
There must be a way
To capture, to hold the color
Of heat in these fields,
But within me it is black and white
And cold
And snowing past parlor windows ..." (From "Dziadek," in Part I).

"On the wall
The cement covering had cracked,
In places fallen
The skulls of smooth white stones —
Une vingtaine
I counted for something to do ... " (From "Depayse (I)," in Part II).

"Between corncrib and outhouse,
A washline droops and drags its motley
Flags in the dust. A Nash bakes
In its blistering paint. A hog roots ... (From "Pitt County, North Carolina," in Part III.

These brief excerpts can serve as a brief introduction to the marvelous catalog of images and modds Makuck has packed into these poems. While it's true that images alone do not make fine poetry, it is true that images coupled with the root joys of living and experiencing life are important ingredients in fashioning good poetry, as Peter Makuck has amply demonstrated in this volume.

A Festival Of Fine Leftovers

Snowbird Gravy and Dishpan Pie — Mountain People Recall. By Patsy Moore Ginns, illustrated by J.L. Osborne, Jr. Chapel Hill. University of North Carolina Press. 209 pages, hardcover, $12.95

If you're sick of cotton-candy novels and luncheon meat biographies, try a slice of Patsy Ginns' "Snowbird Gravy and Dishpan Pie." It's a well-balanced feast of leftovers.

"Snowbird Gravy and Dishpan Pie," Ms. Ginns' second book, records verbatim the "rememberances and recollections" of 30-some western North Carolinians. Their recollections touch on everything from birth to death to ghost and haints, and give the reader a sharp-focused picture of life in the North Carolina mountains between 1880 and 1940.

"And we lived, I'd say, very poor," contributor George Perkins says. "Hard-up. I come up the hard way. If they come up any harder than we did, well, you don't see 'em around much. They didn't make it."

Ms. Ginns arranges her narratives under 10 topics. She offers a taste of everything from practical advice on evading panthers and cooking ground hogs, to admitted half-truths and bald-faced lies. But the book's main course is its langauge. Its language is the rhythm and focus and thread of a culture quickly dying.

The language can be as inward-turning as the personal relationships it describes. Nannie Smith, for example, explains why she married her husband: "When I was born, my mother was 46. And my husband was born April the 24th and me, August the 24th. They lived over the hill from me. And his mother was younger. So she come to where I was born. I was born at my home, of course. So she come and took me with my husband, Clarence, and divided food for him that night and kept me. But we didn't even know each other for years. Just knowed he was Clarence and me, Nannie. And so, later then, we was married."

The language can be as straightforward as trying to stay alive and as direct as a physical need: "You'd lay down tired and sleep good. Good food to eat. Good water to drink. Had a camp where we eat, slept, you know, in there. Pure water to drink." (Burnie Higgins).

But no matter what the subject, the language is invariably alive and moving.

"These are our grandparents, neighbors and friends," Ms. Ginns writes. "Their voices are our second nature. Their words fall into 'found poetry' the way raindrops drum out their melodies on a tin roof."

You need patience to read "Snowbird Gravy and Dishpan Pie." Partly because Ms. Ginns, in her excitement over "found poetry" shifts form prose forms to poetry format back to prose, often within a single narrative.

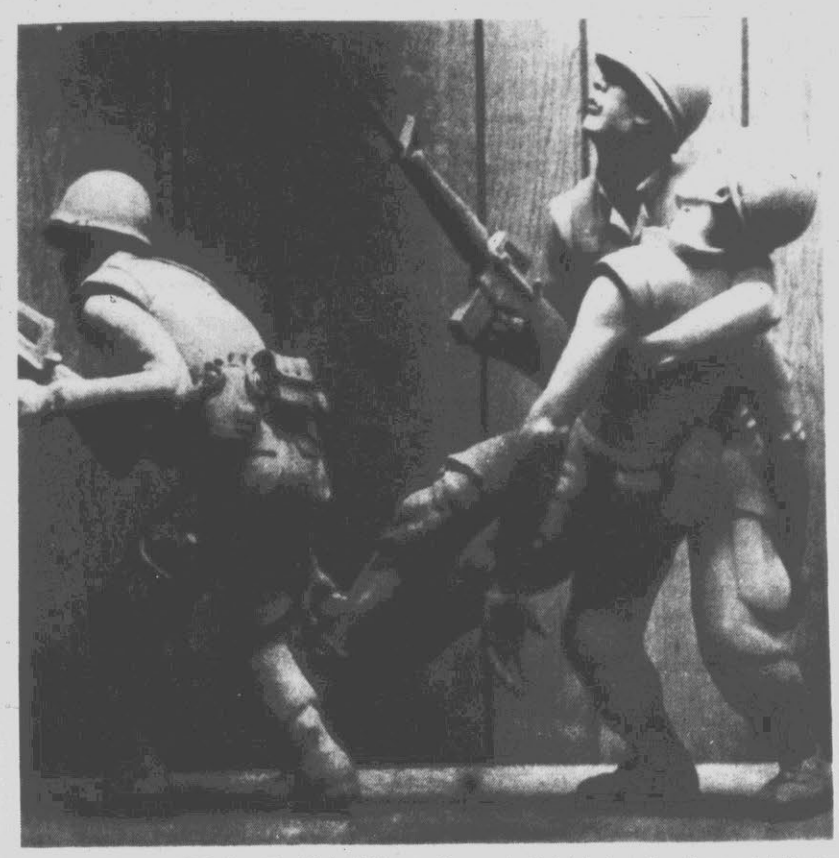

And it takes patience mostly because Ms. Ginns's contributors don't talk the way we've been taught to listen.

They use words that may or may not be "real." Their verbs become nouns and their nouns become verbs. They start at the end of the story to make you want the beginning, or they tell the beginning and six different middles to make you want the end.

But if you have a taste for something so old it's become new, this is it: a well-balanced feast of leftovers.

Caribbean Resort Islands Hard Hit By Tourist Recession

By DIGBY A. SOLOMON

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (UPI) — Caribbean resort islands, caught between the United States recession and a strong dollar that made Europe a tourist bargain, are praying for a good winter season to get them through the year.

With a few exceptions — the French West Indies, the Dominican Republic and Jamaica — most resort islands were stuck with half-empty hotel rooms during most of the year, and only a modest occupancy rate during the usually strong winter season.

"For the past year I think it's safe enough to say that all around the clock it was pretty horrible," said John Bell, executive director of the Caribbean Hotel association. "Winter was just a lot less horrible."

Most industry officials blame sagging tourism on the U.S. recession which kep many people at home, and on weak European currencies that made it cheaper for economy-minded American vacationers to spend a week in Paris than in a $50-a-day "bargain rate" Caribbean hotel.

Most Caribbean tourists are fom the U.S.A., and when the United States suffers a recession, vacation expenses are the first to be affected, says Jean Saurel, Haiti's tourism minister.

Among the hardest hit islands:

— Officials in Haiti, one of the poorest nations in the Western hemisphere, say their tourism collapsed with a combination of the recession, bad publicity from the boat people who washed up on Floridas shores, an aborted refugee invasion and Haiti's economic woes. Hoteliers also blame themselves for not spending enough to promote tourism.

— In the U.S. Virgin Islands the recession and tourist concern about crime left many hotels rooms empty and forced some shops to close and others to reduce their hours. But tourism director Leona Bryant said crime is down and cruise ship bookings are up sharply for the winter season, which she said "seems to be shaping up better than last year."

— Though Puerto Rico's hotels had comparatively high occupancy rates during the slack 1982 winter season, occupancy was off by more than 10 percent. Profits were low because high labor costs eat up 42 percent of income, 50 percent as much again as in neighboring islands. A study conducted for the tourism department warned that something must be done about deteriorating hotels and facilities in San Juan's tourism area. Tourists also complain about surly service and the island's high crime rate.

— Barbados, a consistently successful resort, is feeling the impact of a 5 percent drop in tourism because the island's economy revolves around it. Americans decided to go to Europe last year and the Europeans who normally came in the summer couldn't afford to come because of weak currencies.

Despite the bad news, some island nations have registered gains in tourism and expect the improvement to continue this season.

The dark horse of the Caribbean is the Dominican Republic, which has provided generous incentives to the tourism industry.

Tourism Secretary Rafael Subervi Bonilla boasts that the island "is the safest country in the entire Caribbean" for tourists. Its more than 4,000 hotel rooms come in all price ranges, from modest economy hotels to a new Club Med and the plush Jack Tarr resort.

Airlines have expanded service to Puerto Plata and the capital of Santo Domingo on the south coast, helping boost tourism income from $167.9 million in 1980 to $223.2 million in 1981.

Jamaica has showed a major revival, showing a 65 percent occupancy rate with 283,000 tourists who spent $156 million during the first four months of 1982. Thats an increase of 72,000 visitors, or nearly 30 percent, over the same period in 1981. At that time Jamaica was just getting over the political killings and convulsions caused by a bitter electoral dispute that put moderate Prime Minister Edward Seaga into power.

The new government leased government-owned hotels to private enterprise and eliminated eyesores in the north coast resort town of Montego Bay. It also improved security, to prevent attacks on tourists.

While the strong dollar lured many tourists to Europe, it also encouraged others to the French West Indies, which overnight changed from one of the region's most expensive vacation sites to a bargain.

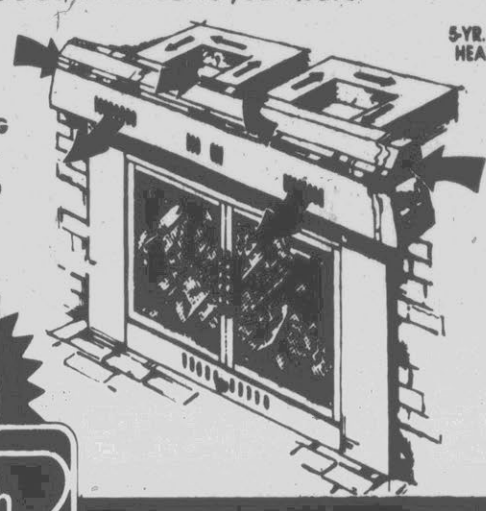

Since hotels in Guadeloupe, St. Barthelemy and Martinique peg their prices to the franc, two successve devaluations suddenly made those islands up to 70 percent cheaper. Luxury hotel rooms could be had for as little as $80 a day in peak season in fashionable St. Barthelemy, while others paid more than $150 a day for inferior accommodation in Puerto Rico 200 miles east.

Many Caribbean hotels report heavy bookings for the 1982-83 winter season. But hoteliers dont predict any dramatic improvement until the U. S. economy recuperates. The Caribbean usually lags three to six months behind the american economy.

"I don't think we're ever going to come back out ... until the U.S. economy turns around," Bell predicted.

New Role For Kirk

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Kirk Douglas says he came to television to find a role he hadn't played in more than 60 motion pictures.

"The major attraction to me was that I'd never played a very romantic love story before," he says.

Douglas stars in NBC's "Remembrance of Love," a story of an emotional reunion in Israel between a man and a woman who had been teen-age lovers until they were separated by World War II and the Holocaust. "I wasn't interested in doing a film about the Holocaust," says Douglas. That's been done before. This is in fact a double love story because my daughter falls in love with an Israeli."

The movie, which NBC will telecast Dec. 6, is one of Douglas' few ventures inuo telewision.

"I was in the miniseries 'The Moneychangers' in 1976 and I liked it very much," he says. "So I was looking for something. Television has been doing some good things and there are many things you can do on television you can't do on the big screen. Some actors denigrate it; I don't. By the nature of being an actor you want to reach as many people as you can and television has an enormous audience. I didn't want to be left out."

"Remembrance of Love," filmed on location in Israel, also stars Pam Dawber as his daughter and Israeli actress Chana Eden as the woman he was separated from 40 years ago. They discover each other during a journey to Israel for the World Gathering of the Survivors of the Holocaust. Douglas' son Eric plays him as a youth, and Robert Clary, who actually attended the gathering, plays himself.

Life As It's Lived

By GAIL MICHAELS

According to one child-rearing theory currently in vogue, preparing a child ahead of time for a personal crisis like an operation relieves his anxiety and helps him to accept what's in store for him. Doctors and nurses alike have testified to the beneficial results of giving little Johnny a tour of the operating and recovery rooms and an accurate description of surgical procedures.

All I can hope is that none of these professionals encounters little Zachary. Or if they do, I hope that the hospital admitting him is insured against all acts of God and very small but violent people.

It's not that Zachary likes to be taken by surprise. On the contrary, he wants every minute detail mapped out for him. But he rarely seeks the truth in order to reconcile gimself more readily to his fate; he is usually more intent on developing a plan of escape.

Even when he does decide to reconcile himself, preparing him for the future has its drawbacks. He wants a 100 percent guarantee that everything will go exactly as planned, and I can't provide that. The last time I put my massive foot in my mouth and pretended that I could, Phillip and I were going out for the evening, and I promised Zachary that a friend of ours whom he adores would sit for him.

Zachary immediately asked his stock question designed to determine the extent of his abandonment. "Will Mr. Gobble stay for breakfast?"

After I had assured him that we would release Mr. Gaul at a more reasonable hour, Zachary couldn't babble enough about his plans for Mr. Gobble.

But Mr. Gobble didn't show. His wife came in his stead. And Zachary, inconsolable, attached himself like a huge limpet to my leg.

At times like this it is always a temptation to tell Zachary that he's going to the doctor. I might be able to lose him for several days. During my conscientious phase, when I was still giving Zachary advance warning, I would find him hours after the aonnouncement in a fetal position behind the vacuum cleaner in the hall closet, under the sink in the bathroom vanity or behind one of the beds. As far as he is concerned, our dapper, mild-manned pediatrician belongs in the ranks of the most vicious child-abusers.

Experience with my miniperson has taught me that the only way to deal with panic in his case is through evasion. Any time he asks where we are going now (and he always asks), I tell him that we're running errands. I just don't bother to mention that the doctor's office happens to be on the list.

Thus I am spared the journey from the house to the carseat with a writhing, slithering mass of resistence. I am spared the tearful questions on the way like, "Am I gonna cry?" I am not spared the look of betrayal as I drag him into the office, but then I was never spared that anyway.

I am not spared the wail, "I wanna go home!" but at least it doesn't start until there's a place to go home from. Nothing else has changed. While the doctor examines Zahary's ears, the wail still escalates to the shriek, "I want my mommy!" as if the woman who is holding his arms while the nurse holds his legs no longer merits that status.

He still fights the stethoscope as if it were a deadly asp. The doctor still tries to win his confidence by patting him on the head at the end of the struggle and saying, "No matter, you're a good kid."

And Zachary, seething with negativism, still shouts, "No!"

And I? I haven't changed either. I am still more inclined to agree with Zachary.

There was a significant reduction last year in deaths from injuries in and about the home, says the American Council of Life Insurance. The number of such accidental deaths was 21,500, a decrease of 1,500 between 1980 and 1981.

Greenfield's Children Poetry Is Set To Music

Honey I Love (record). Eloise Greenfield and Friends, With Byron Morris. Honey Productions, P.O. Box 29077, Washington, D.C. 20019. $6.98.

"Let's talk about love," says poet and writer Eloise Greenfield at the beginning of her recently produced record, "Honey I Love." She is a native of the village of Parmele in Martin County.

POET ELOISE GREENFIELD

"Oh, we don't want to talk about that!" cry six children Greenfield has chosen to record the poem of her book also entitled "Honey I Love."

"Come on," coaxes Greenfield in smooth-as-honey Southern tones. "What do you love? Who do you love?"

"Well, I love to laugh," admits one child.

"Let me tell you something funny," adds another; and suddenly the children are on their way to an unforgettable performance of Greenfield's poetry. It is not, however, an ordinary poetry reading. Greenfield has elicited the talents of jazz musician-composer Byron Morris to produce musical accompaniment for the children's voices.

Morris' "Sqeaky Piano Rag" accentuates "Fun," Greenfield's poen about the day the school piano took a "long, greasy drink" from a "skinny, silver can." "Sunshower," a trumpet solo, complements "By Myself," a child's imaginings of becoming a "squeaky noise," "a room full of toys," "a leaf turning red," "a loaf of brown bread."

The most memorable moments of the record occur, however, with Greenfield's vibrant singing of the poem "Love Don't Mean" and Morris' original composition "Eyewitness News Bluze" providing a background for Greenfield reading the title poem, "Honey I Love."

What else do children love? Floating, and posing in "Mama's shiny purple coat," recite the children ages 6 to 12 of Greenfield's group. Watching raindrops "crawl backward" on the train window. Listening to music that "spins" you "down in the bass where the beat comes from." And making discoveries: "Bought me some candy," says T.J. "Ain't got it no more." But "Made me a poem" and "still got it."

Love also means Aunt Roberta, "wrapped up in quiet and old sweaters," friends like Lessie, who runs so fast "she opens her mouth and tastes the wind," and abolitionist leader Harriet Tubman, who "ran for her freedom 19 times to save Black sisters and brothers."

Having produced 17 books both for children and adolescents (fiction, poetry, biography and autobiography), Greenfield stands today in the vanguard of those African American writers who convey for children that much about human experience can be learned from the black experience. She has been awarded both the Jane Addams Children's Book Award for her biography of Paul Robeson and the Coretta Scott King Award for her picture book fantasy "African Dream," 1977.

"Honey I Love," in book form with illustrations by Leo and Diane Dillon, won the enthusiastic praise of the New York Times Book Review in 1978. Since that time, the poems have been widely anthologized in children's textbooks; and now the record has won many accolades.

Commenting on the record, Ms. Greenfield says: "I wanted children to be moved by the words and the music, and I have been extremely happy with the comments and letters we've received so far about children memorizing the poems and acting them out, creating movement to accompany the music, and even dreaming about the record."

CAROLINA TELEPHONE AND TELEGRAPH COMPANY

DOCKET NO. P-7, SUB 670

BEFORE THE NORTH CAROLINA UTILITIES COMMISSION

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Company, Tarboro, North Carolina, has made application to the North Carolina Utilities Commission for authority to adjust its rates and charges for telephone service to its North Carolina subscribers. Carolina proposes in its application to increase its gross annual revenues approximately $37.8 million. The proposed changes in rates, charges and regulations would affect virtually all local services provided by the Applicant.

LOCAL EXCHANGE SERVICE (Including Extended Area Service)

The present and proposed line rates for residence and business 1-party service are shown below along with the amounts of the requested increases. The rates for 2-and 4-party service are not shown but their range of proposed increases varies from $1.00 to $2.55 per month. An additional rate would apply for each telephone set provided by Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Company. Only the line rate would apply if the customer chooses to furnish his own telephone set.

OTHER CHARGES

The application also includes changes in rates for PBX trunks, key trunks and other services such as:

- Service Connection (Installation)
- Special Equipment and Service Arrangements
- Coin Telephone Service
- Foreign Central Office Service
- Key, Private Branch Exchange and Centrex Systems
- Station Line and Tie Line Mileage Services
- Miscellaneous Service Arrangements
- Interface Equipment
- Local Private Line Service
- Data Service

In addition, the Company proposes to increase the charge for a local coin telephone call from 20¢ to 25¢.

FURTHER DETAILS

The details of the proposed adjustments can be obtained at the business offices of Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Company or at the office of the Chief Clerk of the Commission, Dobbs Building, 430 North Salisbury Street, Raleigh, North Carolina, where a copy of the proposed application is available for review by any interested person. The Commission will consider additional or alternative rate design proposals which were not included in the original application and may order increases or decreases in specific rates which differ from those proposed by the Company. Upon request the Commission will place copies of all trial documents in centrally located public libraries. The material may be copied without prohibition at the library.

HEARING SCHEDULE

The Commission has suspended the proposed rate adjustments, has set the application for investigation and hearing and has required Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Company to comply with all provisions of law and Commission Rules in support of its application to show that the proposed increases are just and reasonable.

Hearings on the matter have been scheduled for the following dates and locations:

a. Tuesday, January 25, 1983, at 7:00 P.M. — Knob Creek Recreation Center, 200 Ward Street, Elizabeth City, North Carolina.

b. Wednesday, January 26, 1983, at 11:00 A.M. — Auditorium, Administration Building, 201 St. Andrews Street, Tarboro, North Carolina.

c. Wednesday, January 26, 1983, at 7:30 P.M. — Courtroom, City Hall, Corner of Pollock and Craven Streets, New Bern, North Carolina.

d. Friday, January 28, 1983, at 10:00 A.M. — Council Room, City Hall, Corner of Green and Bow Streets, Fayetteville, North Carolina.

e. Tuesday, February 1, 1983, at 10:00 A.M. — Commission Hearing Room 217, Dobbs Building, 430 North Salisbury Street, Raleigh, North Carolina.

The hearings at Elizabeth City, Tarboro, New Bern, and Fayetteville, are for the purpose of receiving the testimony of public witnesses. The hearings will resume in Raleigh on February 1, 1983, with any further testimony of public witnesses and testimony and cross-examination of the Applicant, the Public Staff and intervenors.

COMMENTS, APPEARANCES, INTERVENTION

The Commission requires that Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Company inform its customers of the following procedures by which comments regarding the rate application can be made part of the record of the case upon which the Commission must base its decision. Persons desiring to intervene in the matter as formal parties of record should file a motion under North Carolina Utilities Commission Rules R1-6 and R1-19. Persons desiring to present testimony for the record should appear at the public hearing. Persons desiring to send written statements to the Commission should submit their statements prior to the hearing and should include any information which those persons wish to be considered by the Commission in its investigation of the matter.

The contents of letters and petitions will be received in the official file as statements of position. Specific facts, however, will be considered on the basis of testimony presented at the public hearing. Interventions or statements should be addressed to the Chief Clerk, North Carolina Utilities Commission, P. O. Box 991, Raleigh, North Carolina 27602.

The Public Staff of the Utilities Commission through the Executive Director is required by statute to represent the using and consuming public in proceedings before the Commission. Statements to the Executive Director should be addressed to:

Dr. Robert Fischbach
PUBLIC STAFF
Post Office Box 991

Furniture Demand Depicts Shifting Trend Toward Office In Home

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Rooms, like furniture styles, have a way of going in and out of fashion.

Years ago, breakfast nooks and guest rooms were common in the better middle-class homes. Nowadays, these rooms are not in as much demand. But the family room with its convertible sofa and extension game table may fulfill the same functions.

Yet another room we are beginning to hear more about is the home office. Statistics indicate that desks for use in the home represent one of the fastest growing segments of furniture demand.

Add to this the explosive growth in home computers, whose sales are increasing at a rate of about 40 percent each year, and it is clear many Americans are going to need a room in which to put all these things.

Furthermore, studies show Americans are doing an increasing amount of paperwork at home and this trend is expected to continue and even accelerate in coming years.

According to a recent survey commissioned by a desk manufacturer, there are 70 million home desks in use today. About two-thirds of American households own at least one desk and three out of 10 families own more than one desk. Most of these are working desks — not merely there for decorative purposes. In fact, the use of a desk as mainly a decorative object is limited to one in about 17 households.

With these facts all pointing to an increase in demand for home office furniture, it's not surprising that at the recent national furniture market in North Carolina a number of manufacturers initiated or added substantially to the desks, file cabinets, office chairs and related products they offer. Among them were some of the nation's largest furniture companies, such as Ethan Allen, Armstrong, the National Mt. Airy division of Basset Furniture, Broyhill and Lane Co.

Some retailers at the market said desk sales were one bright spot in a generally lackluster year for furniture sales. As a result, many were shopping for more desks to sell. A national trend appears to be the addition of desk galleries and even entire home office departments in furniture stores. Although desks selling for $400 or less are most popular with consumers, retailers said higher priced desks — up to $1,000 or more — also were enjoying increased sales.

One company that has phased out its dining room and upholstered furniture production in order to concentrate on making desks is DMI Furniture Inc., which now offers more than 50 different desks for the home. DMI commissioned a study of the home desk market recently. Based on interviews with about 7,700 households, the company has concluded that about 1.8 million new desks will be purchased for home use over the next year, mainly by middle-income families of four or more. The company learned that white-collar, college-educated families are the most likely owners and buyers of new desks.

Among the most popular features in a home desk, according to Eugene Lubbehusen, director of marketing for DMI, are locking drawers, pencil trays, electric outlets so that typewriters, calculators and computers can be plugged in, and heavy-duty file drawers.

As a rule, consumers shopping for home office desks pay more attention to decorative details and prefer wood desks in traditional styling to more utilitarian metal office desks.

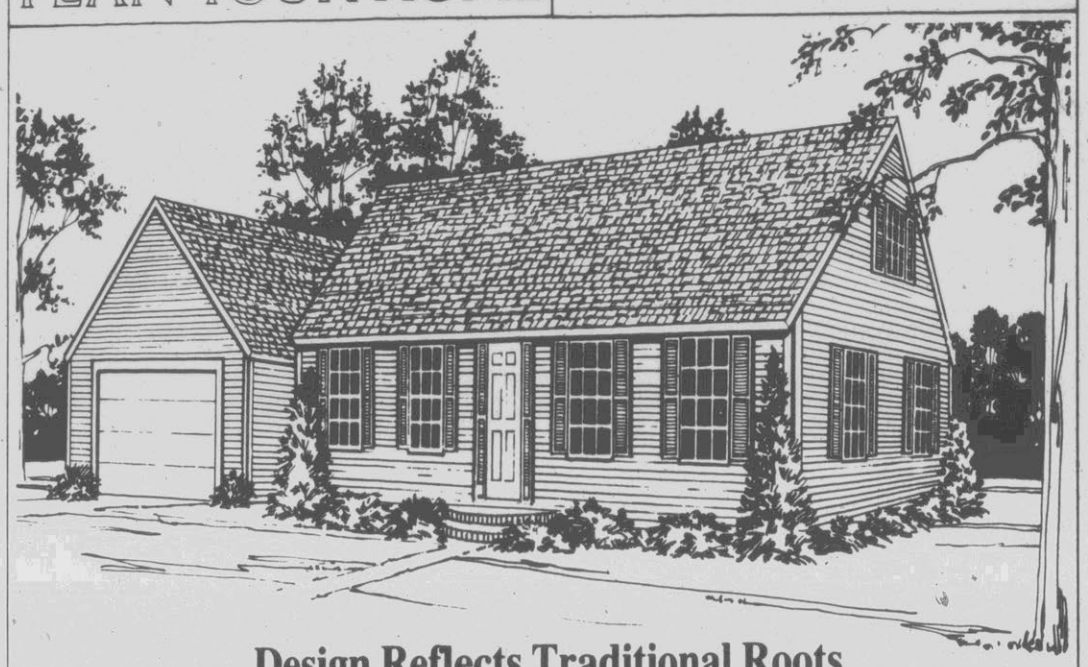

One category that can be expected to increase is furniture for home office machines. At the furniture market, several manufacturers were showing tables to accommodate computers, word processors and printers. Most of these were bulky objects, hastily thought-out and less efficient than the furniture already being offered by firms specializing in office furniture.

However, the new items represent only the first attempts of home furniture manufacturers to come up with solutions. It seems clear future markets will produce more and better responses to the need.

For consumers who are thinking about setting up a home office, Ethan Allen Co. came up with some points to consider: a home office should reflect the mood of the home but still provide for efficiency. It seems likely most home offices will be located in rooms also used for other purposes. So, it's wise to think through the storage problem carefully so that supplies and office equipment can be stored out of sight when not in use. Closets fitted with shelves, wall systems and banks of file cabinets are some of the possibilities for accomplishing this goal.

Keep accessories to a minimum in a room that will function as a home office. Make sure utilitarian needs are met first.

PLAN YOUR HOME — The Placid

Design Reflects Traditional Roots

By Jerry Bishop

Authentic detailing borrowed from Colonial America accounts for the exterior appeal of the Placid, an engaging three bedroom Cape Cod plan. To meet the needs of today's homeowner, however, the floor plan calls for an efficient traffic pattern, convenient utility room off the kitchen, and sizable family room with fireplace.

Peaked roof, paneled door, and shuttered small-paned windows trim the traditional facade, and a small porch stretches the area between home and attached garage. Guests enter the structure via a brick-edged semicircular porch and are ushered into a foyer flanked by formal living areas.

At right of the foyer, the 17-ft. living room sits quiet and undisturbed by cross-traffic. Three windows carry the Colonial theme inside and promise ample natural light. For formal dining or family meals, the dining room is well-placed off the foyer and next to the kitchen.

Extending from the foyer, a central hallway leads to the family room. Another example of the up-to-date interior detailing, the hallway is skirted by closets and a handy half bath.

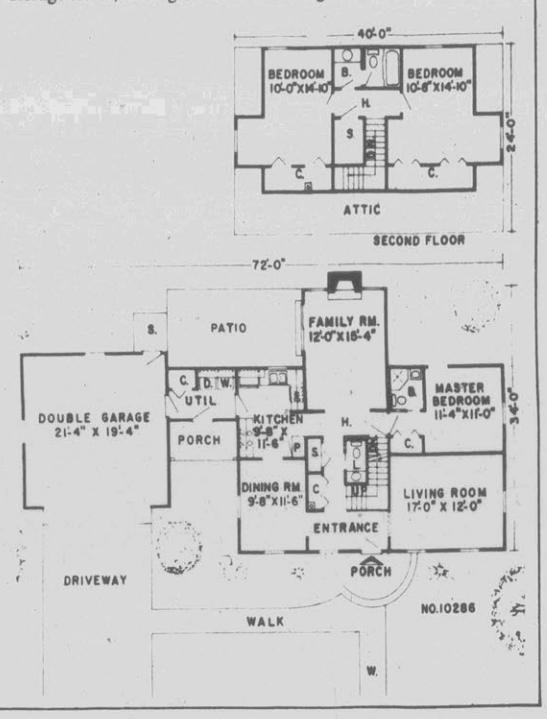

The family room, set to the rear of the first floor, is favored with wood-burning fireplace and sliding glass doors to the patio. Overlooking the patio is the kitchen, complete with pantry, and reasonably close to the family room for family snacks and dining.

The utility room, set between kitchen and garage, offers built-in storage space and room for laundry equipment and promises to be a step-saver. In addition, it will serve a double function as a mud room.

Another characteristic of the Cape Cod home, the first floor master bedroom shows a self-contained bath and closet space, and is thoughtfully placed next to the living room for natural zoning.

Two generously proportioned bedrooms and a compartmented bath fill the upper level of the Placid. Besides the second level storage closet, the large basement and double garage suggest additional storage space. In just over 1800 square feet of living area, the Placid achieves a blend of modern efficiency and traditional charm.

The bandsaw found in the home workshop can perform general woodcutting operations, but its principal role is to cut wood into the curved shapes required for making furniture, toys, ornamental pieces and the like. It is also used for the shaping of plastics, light metals and similar materials.

What distinguishes a bandsaw from other stationary power tools is that the saw itself is a continuous band of steel looped around two wheels. Depending on the kind of blade used, a bandsaw can slice through materials of varying thicknesses. When purchasing one, it should be remembered that its size, which can be 10 inches or 40 inches or almost anything between, is determined by the distance between the blade and the frame. If that distance is 16 inches, the bandsaw is called a 16-inch machine, which will cut through the center of a 32-inch piece of wood or other stock. Like so many other stationary power tools, a bandsaw comes in floor or bench models. One should not be bought until you are certain it will fit in the area where it is to be used.

When a bandsaw is cutting across the grain of wood, it is at its best. When cutting with the grain, the blade moves more slowly and it may be a bit difficult to keep it on the marked cutting line. One way to avoid trouble is to make the start of a circle or arc across the grain and to finish it the same way. Also, if you must run the blade out — which happens when the pattern extends to the edge of the work — make the runout on the cross-grain rather than with the grain. Resuming across the grain allows a more accurate pickup of the cut.

Power-tool experts say there are two common mistakes made by the beginner when using a bandsaw. One is to make the wrong feed or starting point. The other is what is called wrong-side marking, which results in not being able to make cuts due to the bandsaw post being in the way. The remedy for both these problems, which usually occur when making corner cuts in wood, is to backsaw your way out and start over.

Although primarily a curve-cutting machine, the bandsaw does excellent straight-line cutting with the aid of a fence or miter gauge. The instruction booklet that comes with your machine advises how these gadgets can help you get precise straight cuts. Tilting the bandsaw table enables you to make straight cuts at almost any angle desired. Also, by tilting the bandsaw table equipped with a standard saw fence, you can cut square 90-degree-angle wood blocks into two 45-degree bevels. The need for such beveled stock is common in the preparation of glue blocks.

If you do various kinds of cutting operations, you will need various kinds of blades. The variety is almost endless. Make your selection with great care. Have your dealer help you choose those you almost certainly will need.

Here's the Answer

Q. — We have a brick wall along part of our driveway. The bricks are a kind of grayish color. I don't know whether they were stained or painted years ago or whether that is their natural color. Several of the bricks have developed green stains on them. I know that muriatic acid is used to remove white stains from masonry. Can it also be used to get off the green stains?

A. — While muriatic acid or products containing it will aid in the removal of white stains from brick, this is not the solution for green stains. When applied to such stains, they either have little effect or they merely change the stains from green to some other color, usually brown. Your best solution is to apply soap and water to the green stains and rub vigorously with a wire brush. You may have to repeat the procedure several times. An alternative is to buy and use some type of cleansing agent that does not contain acid. Read the label carefully to make that determination.

Q. — We have kitchen chairs with vinyl seats or what may be some other kind of plastic that resembles vinyl. The seats have become very soiled and I do not want to clean them until I am sure I won't damage them. What do you recommend?

A. — Wash them with soap and water, rubbing vigorously. A double cleaning will usually suffice, but if the dirt has become so imbedded that all of it cannot be removed, go to an upholstery store and buy a liquid made specifically for cleaning vinyl. Sometimes this cleaner can be bought at a hardware store, home center, variety store or even a supermarket.

Q. — We have to replace the sheet floor covering in our kitchen, but my wife and I cannot agree on whether to get a light or dark color. She says a light color is easier to keep clean, I say a dark color conceals abrasions better. Please help us settle this.

A. — You are wrong about a dark color concealing abrasions better. A light color does this. But a textured surface in a light color does even better in hiding blemishes. However, a textured surface accumulates dirt and grime in the indentations, so it's six of one and half a dozen of the other. Why don't you settle your dispute by giving the choice to the one who regularly cleans the kitchen floor?

Q. — I recently bought some kind of plastic paint and used it quite successfully. However, I spilled some of it over the side of the can and now that I have to use it again, I can't read the label to find out what the thinner is. Can you tell me?

A. — No. You must use the thinner recommended by the manufacturer. What's wrong with going back to the store where you bought the paint and looking at the label of an identical can?

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES GOREN
AND OMAR SHARIF

DEAR MR. GOREN

Q.—In your books you say that a reverse bid is not forcing. However, most of my partners argue that it should be forcing for one round. I am not averse to this, but I would like to know exactly how responder should treat his hand after partner has reversed. We have considerable disagreement about this and last night we ended in a partscore when a small slam was an odds-on contract.—R. Wallace, Columbia, S.C.

(This question has been awarded the weekly prize.)

A.—I must confess that the wording in those books was a trifle careless. A reverse bid is not forcing to game; however, it is certainly forcing to at least three, of opener's first suit.

Mathematically, that is only logical. For his reverse, opener has a hand worth at least 18 points. Responder has shown a minimum of 6 with his first bid, so even if both players are at the bottom of their bids, they are in the game zone. Therefore, the partnership should be safe at the three-level in opener's announced long suit.

After a reverse by opener, responder has certain priorities. If he is dead minimum for his initial response, he must tell opener that he has no game aspirations. There are two methods of doing so. Some play that a return to opener's first-bid suit is the signoff; others use a bid of two no trump as denoting a minimum response. I slightly prefer the latter, but I think that the majority of players use the former. As long as you agree on a method with your partner, it matters little which you use.

Quite often, if your first response was in a major, partner's reverse might be based on a fit for your suit, possibly a very good fit. Therefore, if you have a five-card major, you should rebid it, even with a strong hand. Since you are still below the level of three of opener's original suit, a simple rebid maintains the forcing situation.

With support for either of opener's suits, fix the trump suit as soon as possible, depending on your methods. If you decide to adopt two no trump as your signoff, a return to opener's first suit is forcing, and might be made with a good hand. If you play that bid as a denial, you have to jump in opener's first suit if you have the values for game.

Responder's raise of opener's second suit creates a game force. But if opener raises responder's suit, it is simply invitational. If opener has the values for game, he must either jump to game himself or else bid the fourth suit to create a new force.

In brief, responder's obligations are:

1) Sign off with a dead minimum;

2) Rebid a five-card major;

3) Support one of partner's suits, if possible, and

4) Make any bid except a signoff to force to game.

Responder's rebids after a reverse by opener is a complex subject which can only be skimmed in this brief column. But, if you bear in mind the principles outlined above, you should be able to avoid languishing in a partscore when slam is in the offing.

No money market fund, bank or savings and loan can beat The Wachovia Cash Investment Account.℠

Money market rates. F.D.I.C. insurance. Immediate access. And some special advantages you can get only at Wachovia.

The Wachovia Cash Investment Account earns like a money market fund, works like a savings account. And your money is F.D.I.C. insured.

The earning power of money market rates. You can open your account with as little as $2,500. Every dollar you put in earns current money market rates, every single day, as long as you maintain an average balance of $2,500. Wachovia charges no fees to open your account, and no maintenance or management fees.

The security of F.D.I.C. insurance. The Wachovia Cash Investment Account gives you something money market funds can't provide: F.D.I.C. insurance up to $100,000 per depositor. And your money is backed by the financial strength of Wachovia, a bank with an unbroken record of soundness and stability for over 100 years.

Add or take out any amount, anytime. Your money is not tied up in any way. You have immediate access to it anytime you need it, just as with a regular savings account. There are no restrictions on how much you can deposit or withdraw, at any of the 198 Wachovia offices or 110 Teller II® locations across the State. You can also write up to three checks a month on your account.

A Personal Banker℠ assigned to you. No money market fund or other North Carolina bank offers you a Personal Banker to help with all your banking, from making investment decisions to arranging credit. Your Personal Banker has full information on the Cash Investment Account and the current rates.

Add up the advantages. When you put together all the advantages of the Wachovia Cash Investment Account, you'll find you can't beat it, anywhere.

Call toll-free 1-800-642-0926. You can open your account at any Wachovia office. Or call the toll-free number above for more information, Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m.

New Members Patrol On 'CHiPs'

One of the most widely held cliches going back to the days of Mary Pickford is that Hollywood is a dog-eat-dog town, with palm trees.

Another cherished belief is that Tinsel Town never monkeys with a hit and that's why Hollywood is Repeatsville — always doing the same thing.

Well, the palm trees have been thinned by smog — those that are left are dusty with the exception of the pampered few in Beverly Hills, and the perpetrators of these shibboleths don't know Erik Estrada and the producers of the MGM Television long-running hit series, "CHiPs."

Now in its sixth season on NBC-TV, "CHiPs" has cheerfully and loudly added three new regulars to the show's format and is filming a bunch of new and different stories, both fun and serious ones. Welcoming everyone with open arms is the handsome King of the Hill himself, Erik Estrada.

The newcomers and Estrada are probably the freshest-faced, most laid back, best-looking group of actors to appear in Hollywood since the Golden Era when, as Gloria Swanson said in "Sunset Boulevard," stars "had faces."

The age of the Uglies is obviously over and nowhere is this more in evidence than in executive producer Cy Chermack's and supervising producer Paul Mason's grand plans for the future of the show.

The newcomers: Former college football star-New York fashion model Tom Reilly, cast as Officer Bobby Nelson, tall and blond, who, like Estrada, looks like he's been molded into the tight-fitting breeches and handmade boots of the California Highway Patrol. Reilly plays a brash and adventurous rookie.

The first woman to join the motorcycle patrol in the series' long history is Tina Gayle as officer Kathy Linahan. A former Dallas cheerleader and high-fashion model, Tina has a deep, sexy Texas drawl, brown eyes that speak to you and a figure that doesn't quit in equally custom-tailored CHP uniforms.

The third newcomer is two-time World Champion Speedway Motorcycle Racer, Bruce Penhall. The blond and handsome speedstar will have a recurring role as Bruce Nelson, Bobby Nelson's half-brother and fellow rookie.

THE REVISED CAST OF "CHiPs" features (standing, l to r) Clarence Gilyard Jr., Paul Linke, Tina Gayle, Robert Pine, Erik Estrada and (seated) Tom Reilly. "CHiPs" airs Sundays (8-9 p.m.) on NBC.

FRANK SINATRA STARS as a streetwise New York City police detective and Brenda Vaccaro portrays the wife of a slaying victim he questions, in "The First Deadly Sin," to air on NBC's Sunday Night at the Movies, Dec. 12 (9-11 p.m.).

Murder Interrupts Retirement

Two Academy Award winners — Frank Sinatra ("From Here to Eternity" - 1953) and Faye Dunaway ("Network" - 1977) star in "The First Deadly Sin," a drama about a veteran New York City police detective who must confront professional and personal crises just as he prepares to file for retirement. The film, which was originally released theatrically in 1980, will have its network television premiere on NBC's Sunday Night at the Movies, Dec. 12 (9-11 p.m.).

Sinatra plays Detective Sergeant Edward X. Delaney, a street-wise veteran nearing retirement. A series of slayings by a psychotic plunges Delaney into the case, even though some of the deaths occurred outside of his area of jurisdiction.

Soon his commanding officer, Captain Broughton (Anthony Zerbe) — who had expected Delaney to spend his last days in the department sitting idly behind a desk — orders the determined officer to cease his investigation, particularly when it intrudes into other neighborhoods in the city.

During this time, Delaney is also troubled by the condition of his wife, Barbara (Miss Dunaway), who comes down with a mysterious ailment following surgery.

After another senseless murder, Delaney finally gets a substantive clue from the coroner's report. Pursuing the lead, he is eventually able to determine that a tool is being used as the murder weapon. With the aid of a retired museum curator (Martin Gabel), he obtains a list of people known to have bought the tool from a store that specializes in that type of equipment.

"The First Deadly Sin" also stars James Whitmore as Dr. Sanford Ferguson, David Dukes as Daniel Blank, and George Coe as Dr. Bernardi. Sinatra served as the executive producer with Elliott Kastner.

Silver Anniversary

The 25th Grammy Awards have been set for Feb. 23 at the Shrine Auditorium. Ceremonies, to be carried live on CBS, will be expanded to three hours this year and will include a silver anniversary-themed look at the award winners from the past.

Special Is A Capital Event

John Schneider And Barbara Mandrell

Diahann Carroll, Barbara Mandrell, John Schneider, Dinah Shore and Ben Vereen will appear before dignitaries from the White House, members of Congress and some of Washington's best-known families on NBC's "Christmas in Washington," a musical celebration inspired by the finest traditions of Christmas in the nation's capital. The special will air on Monday, Dec. 13 (10-11 p.m.). The President and Mrs. Ronald Reagan will participate in the program in a specially produced segment from the White House.

In announcing the special, Brandon Tartikoff, President, NBC Entertainment, said: "This event is created to be the first nationally televised celebration of the Christmas season — a joyous occasion from the nation's capital to be shared with our audiences coast-to-coast."

Also appearing on the telecast will be the United States Naval Academy Choir and the Shiloh Baptist Church Choir.

The President and Mrs. Ronald Reagan are patrons of the gala, which will be a benefit for the Children's Hospital, National Medical Center, in Washington, D.C. White House dignitaries and other distinguished members of the government are being invited to attend the event, which will be held on December 12 at the National Building Museum, formerly known as the Pension Building, an historic site that includes a 16-story atrium.

Executive producer George Stevens described the event as "the first of what will become an annual celebration of the Christmas season from Washington, D.C. — a time to bring Americans together during the holiday season."

Stevens has been widely credited with the conception and production of such major television specials as the Emmy Award-winning American Film Institute Life Achievement Award programs and the highly acclaimed Kennedy Center Honors. In 1979, Stevens wrote and produced "America Entertains Vice Chairman Deng," one of the most widely seen broadcasts in television history, which was carried via satellite from the Kennedy Center Opera House overseas for viewing by an estimated 300,000,000 Chinese.

He'll Be Honored

Young actor Steven Ford, who plays on "The Young and the Restless," was recently notified that he has received a nomination as "Daytime Star of the Year" in the annual "Golden Apple Awards," presented by the Hollywood Women's Press Club. Presentations will be made on Sunday, Dec. 12, at the Bonaventure Hotel in downtown Los Angeles.

Michele Will Tell

DEAR MICHELE: What's the address of the Pittsburgh Steelers? TODD BROOM, LEXINGTON, N.C.

TO TODD IN LEXINGTON: Now that the strike is over and everything seems to be status quo, you may write the Pittsburgh Steelers at 300 Stadium Circle, Pittsburgh, Pa., 19148.

DEAR MICHELE: Who does the voice of KITT on the series "Knight Rider"? MICHELLE NEAL, LUMBERTON, N.C.

TO MICHELLE IN LUMBERTON: The voice of K.I.T.T. (Knight Industries Two Thousand) is provided by veteran actor William Daniels. Daniels currently stars as Dr. Mark Craig in NBC-TV's new series, "St. Elsewhere."

DEAR MICHELE: There sure is a great resemblance in Joel Crothers of "The Edge of Night" and Tom Selleck of "Magnum, P.I." Could you please tell me if they are kin? SHERRY WHITE, LEXINGTON, N.C.

TO SHERRY IN LEXINGTON: Although there is a definite resemblance, these two very handsome actors are in no way related to one another.

DEAR MICHELE: I would like to know a little about the man who stars as Michael Knight on "Knight Rider." I would also like his address. MILDRED SCOTT, LUMBERTON, N.C.

TO MILDRED IN LUMBERTON: After starring as Snapper Foster on "The Young and the Restless" for over six years, actor David Hasselhoff decided it was time to change the direction of his career. The 6-4, 180-pound Hasselhoff began his career at the age of 7, when he appeared as Peter Pan in a school play. Years later he was discovered by a noted agent and casting director and landed parts in "Police Story" and "Love Boat," and in the TV movie "Griffin and Phoenix." David is single and resides in Los Angeles and not too long ago completed a singing engagement on a cruise ship bound for Acapulco — a la "Love Boat." Fans may write to him in c/o "Knight Rider," NBC-TV, 30 Rockefeller Plaza, N.Y., N.Y., 10020.

DEAR MICHELE: What's Scott Baio's address? AUDRA, HICKORY, N.C.

TO AUDRA IN HICKORY: Fans of Scott may write to him in c/o his hit series "Joanie Loves Chachi," ABC-TV, 1330 Avenue of the Americas, N.Y., N.Y., 10019.

(FOR ANSWERS TO YOUR QUESTIONS ABOUT TV SHOWS AND PERSONALITIES, WRITE TO 'MICHELE,' c/o The Greenville Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 30, Hopewell, Va. 23860.)

Birneys Run In The Marathon

"Why is this day so special? And who are these people screaming at strangers, beseeching them passionately to run, run, run. Run harder? What is it that makes 14,308 runners endure agony they may never know again? Why does cold New York become so very warm?"

Those are the words writer Brian Brown of the New York Times used to describe the New York City Marathon. The writer captured the flavor of the event, that of the wind, the streets of New York's many neighborhoods and the indomitable spirit of the many thousands of faces who were staring at perhaps one of the biggest challenges of their lives — the 26 miles of The Race.

Two of those faces belonged to actors David Birney of NBC's "St Elsewhere" (Tuesdays, 10-11 p.m.), and his wife, Meredith Baxter Birney, of NBC's "Family Ties" (Wednesdays, 9:30-10 p.m.). David clocked in at 3 hrs. 43 minutes, Meredith at 4 hrs. 8 minutes.

As Dr. Ben Samuels on "St. Elsewhere," Birney is normally in pursuit of romance, but in real life, he slowed down from running long enough to offer some of his thoughts about what for him was the ultimate pursuit: The Race.

"I was really looking forward to it, because I've missed New York and its many neighborhoods," he said. "Especially Brooklyn. Its many areas have always moved me. But I knew I couldn't run for three hours being moved, so I had to get away from those thoughts. The marathon is sort of a parade in reverse; it's a parade of thousands of onlookers that you watch as you run by.

Taking A Leave

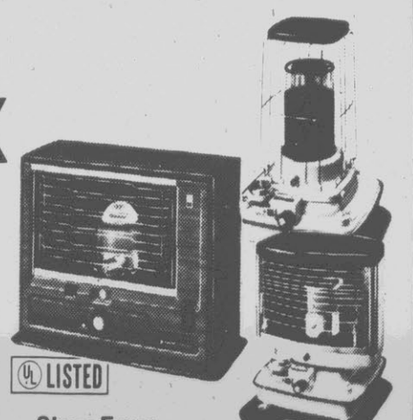

"It's going to be a great opportunity to reinvent the anchor role." That's the way NBC anchorwoman Jessica Savitch sees her latest assignment as anchor of public television's new weekly documentary series, "Frontline."

Savitch is taking a leave of absence to assume the anchor position with "Frontline," which, at $5,000,000, is the largest budget documentary series in public tv's history.

"Frontline", she says, will expose the process of documentary-making.

Barton Sees Beyond 'Matthew'

If Peter Barton were really telepathic, like the title character he plays in "The Powers of Matthew Star" (Fridays, 8-9 p.m. on NBC) each week, he wouldn't have twice forgotten an appointment with the same reporter; he would have known that the reporter was waiting for his call.

But though Barton believes in telepathy ("How many times do you think of your mother and then the phone rings?" he says), he doesn't possess it himself to any obvious degree; and besides, the real reason he forgot his appointment was because he was home in Valley Stream, N.Y., and when he's back among the family he leaves the business of Hollywood behind him.

"It's one of the only places where I can really forget about doing this," says the 26-year-old Barton, who was charmingly candid and apologetic about his memory lapse. "When I'm in L.A., it's on my mind a lot — thinking about getting that next job, doing publicity.

"But when I'm home, I feel like I did when I was younger. I go out and shoot baskets or do really simple things, like walk around the block with my mother and my dog. I'm not involved with business there."

Barton moved to Hollywood three years ago, after a potential career as a pharmacist turned into a successful career as a model in New York, which then turned into a co-starring role in the series "Shirley," starring Shirley Jones. The series only lasted four months, but Barton stayed on, taking acting classes and trying to adjust to a new home with very few friends to help him.

"I came to L.A. and knew nobody," he says. "I was searching for friends and I got hurt a lot. With no relatives, the transition was not at all easy."

Barton, who sounds refreshingly unjaded despite a difficult few years in Hollywood, says he draws on the emotional support of his relatives a lot, now, even if they are separated by many miles. And, says the family-oriented Barton, he's grateful for their help — their supportiveness is "really a nice feeling."

Relationships are important to Barton, who says that eventually he hopes acting will only be a hobby, something he does to support what he imagines will be the focus of his life: "meeting the right person and start doing what we're here to do — have a family."

All-Star Cast Set

Valerie Perrine, Kim Novak and Bridget Hanley have been set for "Malibu," a special four-hour ABC movie presentation scheduled to air in early 1983.

The actors join the previously announced all-star cast of James Coburn, Ann Jillian, George Hamilton, Chad Everett, Richard Mulligan, Steve Forrest, Susan Dey and William Atherton.

TV WORD-LINK!

Kuddly Kitty Kizzy

When Leslie Uggams took the role of Kizzy in the 1977 production of "Roots," little did she know that the name was to take on a special meaning in her life.

"I fell in love with the name...it's so cuddly," said Uggams. "I got a new cat for our family and decided to name her Kizzy."

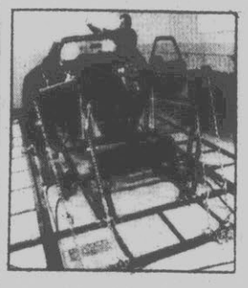

Basic Training

Larry Manetti — Rick of "Magnum, P.I." grew up in Chicago and one of his first jobs was that of a restaurant host, similar to his role on the series.

Hector Is Signed

Hector Elizondo has been signed by David L. Wolper to portray Captain Louis Renault in the new one-hour dramatic series "Casablanca."

Double Triumph

David Drechsler, an offensive guard for the North Carolina Tar Heels, has been named to the All-America team selected by the Football Writers Association of America. He also became the first two-time All-America at Carolina in 33 years.

Retaining Price

The Los Angeles Dodgers will retain their same ticket prices for the 1983 season, maintaining the Dodgers' pricing position as one of the lowest in major league baseball. The average price is $5.16. In 25 years ticket prices have only been increased three times.

Texas Teams Lock Horns

As the Dallas Cowboys roll along, trying to make it into the playoffs for the tenth time in 13 years, they have been putting their top draft picks to the acid test on the field. These rookies and the rest of the squad can be seen in action on "ABC's NFL Monday Night Football," Dec. 13 (9 p.m.-midnight), when the Cowboys travel to the Astrodome to play the Houston Oilers.

Hoping to have uncovered a diamond in the rough, the Cowboys made a little-known speedster from Kentucky State (enrollment 2,300) their top selection in the 1982 draft. Rod Hill, the first defensive back chosen in the draft, brings a wealth of athletic ability to the Cowboys.

"He'll need some time to develop because he comes from a small school and didn't play against the top competition, but he has the qualities that in the long run could make him a great player," said head coach Tom Landry. "He's big enough, intelligent, a good athlete and he can fly. He was by far the most impressive looking guy in the draft."

The 25th player selected overall and the first Kentucky State player even taken in the first round, Hill was a nationally ranked kick return specialist at Kentucky State. His career punt return average was a school-record 23.6 yards.

The Cowboys wasted little time in springing another surprise on draft day when they chose Yale linebacker Jeff Rohrer in the second round. Rohrer, who seemed unknown to everybody but the Cowboys, was the highest NFL draft choice from Yale since 1969 when the Cowboys made halfback Calvin Hill a first-round selection.

The mystery behind Rohrer lay in his running speed, which was measured by NFL scouts his senior year at a less-than-spectacular 4.9 seconds for 40 yards. But following a post-season recommendation by the Yale coaching staff, the Cowboys timed Rohrer repeatedly at an impressive 4.6 or less.

The other ingredients of a top pro linebacker already were there. Exceptionally aggressive and intelligent, Rohrer was selected to the Coaches All-Ivy League and the Coaches All-New England first teams after leading Yale in tackles.

"We think Jeff's an excellent football player," said Cowboys Player Personnel Director Gil Brandt. "He's got potential. He's everything you want in a linebacker — smart, strong, a competitor and he's got speed. There's no question in our mind about his speed."

TV Chatter

By Polly Vonetes

If there is any doubt in your mind as to the star status of "Dynasty's" LINDA EVANS you can now dispel that doubt. Beautiful Linda will be hosting her very own Pro-Celebrity Tennis Invitational. Participating in the tournament to benefit cystic fibrosis will be JONATHAN WINTERS, LLOYD BRIDGES, DICK VAN PATTEN, RANDI OAKES, and GREG HARRISON — to mention a few.

JESSICA SAVITCH'S book "Anchorwoman" is definitely on the best seller list. Just out three weeks it has gone into its sixth printing. Meanwhile, Pocket Books will be working overtime to reissue two million copies of Herman Wouk's "Winds of War" — during ABC's 18-hour mini-series version of the best seller. (ABC's investment in "Winds" represents $40 million)

Director STEVEN SPIELBERG should be able to provide a happy home for his biggest hit "E.T." With an investment of at least $20 million in personal real estate — Steve is building two homes, three guest houses — a theatre and a condo in New York among other things.

Chosen by the navy to film an anti-drug film clip for the service — TOM SELLECK has been flying high — and I do mean high in the company of the navy's famed Blue Angels who flew to Hawaii for the event.

Though the wedding has been postponed — (After two marriages Linda is afraid of another failure) the romance goes on — GEORGE SAN PIETRO flew LINDA EVANS to Venice and Paris where they celebrated her fortieth birthday. George is very devoted to Linda and is extremely proud of her accomplishments — as far as he is concerned whatever Linda wants Linda gets!

Traction. Computer-design tread runs quietly on dry roads, channels water away for good wet traction, digs into snow for good starting and stopping and stays flexible in the cold for good grip on ice.

Fuel efficiency. Low rolling-resistance helps save gas.

Long wear. Two steel belts resist impact and tread squirm for strength and great tire mileage.

Responsive handling. Radial design helps keep tread flat on the road for great cornering response.

RAINCHECK POLICY

We endeavor to keep in stock every item displayed in this catalog. However, there may be times when manufacturers or suppliers are unable to fulfill their commitment to us on orders that we have placed in good faith because of a shortage of raw materials or other reasons. If we are temporarily out of a catalog item, we will issue a raincheck. When the item is received, you will be notified, and you can purchase it at the same low price. This does not apply to discontinued items, gold items and diamond items due to the instability of current gold and diamond prices.

All photographic, clerical and printing errors subject to our correction.

We cannot guarantee delivery on rainchecks during the month of December. However, if a customer does not want this item before Christmas, we will accept rainchecks and make every possible effort to have this merchandise as soon as possible. Please, no rainchecks on toys because of delivery problems.

Do you have a special trick for staying slim? — R.T., Canton, Ohio

I have a routine, not a trick. My mother makes sure I eat breakfast every day — she still can't forget how for years I wouldn't touch it. And I don't go on binges. I enjoy a good meal, but I just don't stuff myself until I'm sick. I even like pastry occasionally. I never touch anything out of a can; I stick to eating fresh food. I also feast on sun baths and vitamins — and stay away from sugar, substituting honey instead.

How many newspapers does the President read each day? — P.L., Jamaica, N.Y.

President Reagan, who refers to newspapers as the "nerve centers of information," is an avid reader of at least four papers. To keep abreast of other events, the White House News Summary Office prepares a composite of news items every day, which gives him a good wrap-up of what the press is reporting. A special edition of this summary, containing cartoons as they appear throughout the week, provides an assessment of the views and concerns of Americans nationwide.

Christopher Reeve insists he won't be railroaded into a life as the Man of Steel.

FROM THE "ASK" EDITOR

HOLY KRYPTON: Christopher Reeve, now the corrupt clergyman in Monsignor, fears that if he makes another Superman movie (he's currently filming No. 3) he might actually begin to believe he can leap over buildings ("especially after a night at the local pub"). That's why he says if there is a Superman IV, he'll pass. "I won't make a career of being a bloody bore in tights and a cape."...

Genevieve Bujold, Reeve's co-star in Monsignor, didn't have to do much research to get into her role as the naughty nun-to-be. She was educated in a convent, and says she's well versed in the liturgy....Says a friend of actress Koo Stark, who's gotten more attention for her on-again, off-again romance with Prince Andrew than she ever did for her acting: "Since the day Koo met the Prince she has become a saint."...F.Y.I.: After seven seasons as Barney Miller, Hal Linden swore he wouldn't get locked into another TV series for a while. He was so adamant that sources report he turned down a $2 million deal to star in TV's new St. Elsewhere. Hal's content doing films (like his upcoming TV movie with Anne Meara, The Other Woman) and performing in his one-man show, in which, among other things, he gets to play his trusty clarinet....THAT'S SHOW BIZ: When author Rona Jaffe's bestselling book Mazes and Monsters was filmed in Canada (the TV movie will be aired this month), Rona's parents, unfamiliar with the workings of the movie business, visited the set. They watched a scene in which actor Tom (Bosom Buddies) Hanks does nothing but sleep. Afterward, still entranced, Mrs. Jaffe walked over to Hanks, lying there with eyes still closed, and offered, "Good acting. Good scene."... Korean comic Johnny Yune reflects: "In my country, women walk five feet ahead of you. In America, they walk all over you. And where I come from, we pay a lot for that."

Do you miss the "good old days" of radio? — R.S., Camden, N.J.

I have a deep hunger for those times. Commercial television has become too much of a children's plaything, an electronic theater of occasional innuendo, frequent smut and adolescent humor. We should re-examine the last days of radio before television. Take the best of radio and set it to pictures. It's not too late to unleash the imagination again.

How can I raise my SAT scores? — N.M., Bangor, Me.

Learn as much as possible about the test beforehand, and know where to guess and when. Systematic preparation is critical, so study ahead, either on your own or in a study class. Anyone determined to make a difference can, with a positive frame of mind. Many have raised their scores by as much as 100 points.

WHERE HAVE YOU GONE, EARL THE PEARL? A FRUSTRATED FAN'S NOTES

BY DAVID HALBERSTAM

For 10 years professional basketball was my favorite sport. That means I am a fan, indeed a once-devoted fan, of a sport in decline. Moses Malone may have signed for $13.2 million over six years, but it makes the game, regrettably, no more viable or, for that matter, pleasurable. I am a believer in the open market, always have been; Moses should get all he can. But when the players themselves are more solvent than the teams, then something is desperately out of sync.

There are, claim the National Basketball Association's negotiators at bargaining time, no more than seven teams making money. Who can argue with them or with their wonderfully creative accountants? But what fan who cares about pro basketball does not sense its erosion? I know that I have been in some kind of psychic dissent from the game for the last few years. It used to be that as a season approached, I became palpably excited. I loved the New York Knicks in those days, and I worried whether the team was getting old; I was nervous on the day of the draft. I remember in 1973 when the Knicks drafted Mel Davis in the first round. I called friends around town to find out what I could about Mel Davis. Could he eventually replace Dave DeBusschere? (Could anyone, I was later to lament, replace Dave DeBusschere?) Sadly, Mel Davis, he of the powerful body and glistening muscles, called "Killer" by his teammates, could never find the grace and the suppleness to balance his sheer power. Soon he was gone and I was bitterly disappointed.

Nor was my passion reserved just for the Knicks. In 1974 I was a guest lecturer at the U.C.L.A. School of Law. Visiting Regents Lecturer, was my title, I believe, a singular honor, and perhaps the high-water mark for me as an egghead. On the final night of my tour there was to be a party in my honor with all sorts of Los Angeles and Hollywood celebrities scheduled to attend, from Pat Brown to Tom Hayden. It also happened to be the sixth game of the N.B.A. championships in a series which featured the Kareem Abdul-Jabbar Bucks against the Dave Cowens Celtics.

The party was supposed to start roughly an hour after the game started. Thus, with a little luck, I might see the entire game and yet be only a little late. I am normally obsessively punctual but this time the game was too good. With the game almost over, I was already 20 minutes late. But it was a marvelous game and it went into overtime. I was now 30 minutes late. The game got better. There was to be a second overtime. My young escort officer was visibly nervous. We were now seriously late. His fingers kept drumming on the table. Could we go? he asked. Every now and then a man has to make a hard decision. We stayed. No Regents Lecturer had behaved like this before. We were an hour late. Lost on the way, I explained to our host, a U.C.L.A. professor. He looked at me oddly. The party was an immense success. No one else was late. No one had been sequestered in a side room watching the game. I have been suspicious of California and its culture ever since. Californians are people, I decided, of dubious passion. It would never have happened in New York.

Watching Julius Erving or Gus Williams or Larry Bird or David Thompson or George Gervin on a given night is still exhilarating.

Those days are long gone. Now I pay relatively little attention to the pro-basketball draft. I think the game is seriously diluted and imbalanced. The players are as good as ever, perhaps better. I think as a group they are the best athletes in the world — that is, more of them possess a combination of power and grace than athletes from any other sport. On occasion the individual performances are still dazzling. Watching Julius Erving or Gus Williams or Larry Bird or David Thompson or George Gervin play on a given night is still exhilarating. In my mind I still see Earl Monroe — Earl the Pearl — spinning, weaving, shooting. But the game's pull is now more in the artistry of the individual than, as in the past, the match-ups and the teams, the importance of which has been diminished by the league's too-rapid expansion and by the bloated schedule.

Not surprisingly, the league pushes network TV to hype the individuals. Stardom must be sold. "Watch The Bird against The Magic Man." What I loved most about the game in that glorious time of the 60's and early 70's, the rivalries of well-defined teams, is gone. In those wonderful years, the N.B.A. had the best of both worlds; it had fine teams, and it had individual match-ups, an artistry of the individual. The Knicks against the Bullets meant that DeBusschere and Gus Johnson would bang heads, alternating nights of excellence, neither able to obliterate the other, each finally raising the other to a higher level. It also meant Walt Frazier against Monroe, Willis Reed against Wes Unseld, and Bill Bradley against Jack Marin. It was team against team, and yet there were even smaller worlds of competition within the larger universe.

Nor was this rivalry the exception, for there were others: the Celtics against the Sixers, the Knicks against the Celtics, and finally the survivor of all this against the Lakers. Most of the teams in those early years seemed like good ones and there were few genuinely weak teams. Glutted as I was then with professional football, I wrote a decade ago that I thought that professional basketball was on the rise and would be the sport of the 70's.

I was wrong. I penned that prediction on the eve of spiralling expansion that dramatically changed the game and the nature of the season. Because the expansion took place so quickly, the league has virtually doubled in the past 15 years. There are too many teams and, even more importantly, too many weak teams. In any given year, perhaps eight of the 23 N.B.A. teams are consistent, four are mediocre, and there are a number of perennial dogs. There are at least five or six franchises that simply should be closed down. There are too many games and, even when the players put out, there are too many games between weak teams that have no meaning for the fan. There are in fact two seasons now: the regular season, played at one pitch, and the real season, the playoffs, played at a wonderful, feverish pitch.

As the rivalries and match-ups diminished, so did the ratings, and television which had so much to do with encouraging the excessive expansion, now began to pull back from what it had wrought. Soon the sport was harder and harder to find on TV during the season, and even the championship games were not put on live. Clearly, professional basketball, magnificent athletes and all, was a second-class sport. Now cable coverage has greatly increased and CBS will put on the championship games, but network TV seems unwilling to cover the preliminary part of a season, the early part when the good teams define themselves, and the early playoff games (often the best games of the season) when the best teams finally emerge.

Whether the season covered in its early days by cable and its later days by a major network can be considered successful is dubious, for a season is a cumulative thing. Excitement has to build gradually; it cannot be force-fed to viewers at the end, which is what is happening now. The owners profess to be pleased with the new television contract but it is a scam. It is the same money that CBS paid for the last four years (though probably greatly diminished by inflation). And, except for games used to fill in during the football strike, it calls for CBS to show only four regular season games (some will be late on Friday night), compared to 17 last year. What CBS did in television terminology is called warehousing: It buys something not so much to have it, but so that someone else (at least no other major network) cannot have it. This is at once good and bad — good for the owners because it gives them a great deal more money than they thought they were going to get, and bad because it means that the network has abdicated covering a national sport. CBS in effect bought it not to use it.

Don Hunstein

Soon. . . even the championship games were not put on live TV. Clearly, professional basketball was a second-class sport.

And so I mourn the sport, in part because the athletes are the best in the world. No matter my melancholy, when I watch someone like Gus Williams play I am momentarily brought back. The best athletes, wrote Shaun O'Connell, a University of Massachusetts English professor, play at the speed of thought. But pro basketball is a sport no longer harmonious with itself. Money has become a substitute for original purpose, and the athletes are often numbed by too many games and too much

Observations

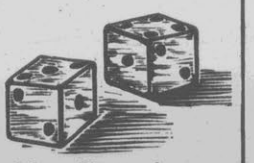

Risky business. Lawn mowers... vacuum cleaners ... bathtubs... stairs... all part of everyday life and all hazardous to your health. The Consumer Product Safety Commission says these household necessities caused almost a million accidents last year, yet most people accept the potential risks because of the proven benefits. While X-rays may cause cancer, they're much more likely to detect this frightening killer. Even those roasted peanuts that help get you through the big game are risky: Each one contains almost 200 chemicals. But it would be nuts to stop eating this nutritious, high-protein food because it, like many other foods, contains chemicals in amounts too small to harm humans. Risk, in other words, is part of life.

Fool's goal. Nothing's safe all the time, yet there are still calls for a "risk-free society." Don't risk it, for eliminating chance can ruin more than appetite. As scientist and former Washington State Governor Dixy Lee Ray put it: "Zero defects in products plus zero pollution plus zero risk on the job is equivalent to maximum growth of government plus zero economic growth." And when it comes to the economy, what America doesn't need is a Chicken Little that lays goose eggs.

"Guess what, sweetheart? I just tripped on the vacuum cleaner."

Cold feat. What America does need are more companies willing to take business risks, especially on energy, where the risks are high. For instance, oil companies gave the federal government $816.5 million for the rights to risk $179 million more drilling wells beneath the North Atlantic waters 100 miles off New England's Georges Bank. So far, the results have been "dry." The $2.1 billion Mobil and other companies agreed to pay the government to search for oil and gas near Alaska's North Slope at an auction last October is another example of the big risks oil companies take all the time. And that's just for starters. To drill this forbidding area will require millions more for special cold-resistant pipe, drilling islands of gravel that can withstand invasions of ice packs that loom like mountain ridges... and millions more to protect the fragile Arctic environment.

We're gamblers. The oil industry takes other big risks all over the U.S.A. every day: The top 25 U.S. oil companies spent nearly $4 million an hour in 1981 alone to find and produce more domestic oil and natural gas to keep you warm in winter (and cool in summer) and enable you to drive to the folks' house for the holidays. The good news is that oil companies have found more oil and gas within U.S. boundaries, stabilizing the country's oil and gas reserve inventories after a 10-year decline. Taking risks: It's the best way to keep America rolling... and growing.

It's a fact: The Department of Energy reports that reserves from "new field discoveries" in 1981 increased 78 percent for crude oil over 1980 figures, and 47 percent for natural gas.

travel. What is missing most nights on the court is not physical effort but, surprisingly enough, mental concentration. Arenas blend into arenas, games into games. The league should probably be folded and reconstituted — no more than 16 teams, no more than 60 regular season games (versus 82 now) and, with a little luck, no more than six teams to make the playoffs, rather than the current 12. Perhaps, too, some of the salaries can be related to performance; as a team wins more games, the salaries rise accordingly, something San Antonio has tried recently.

In the meantime comes the rise of college basketball. A number of factors have contributed. The first was the instituting, in 1972, of freshman eligibility, which gave a player four years at a given school and gave college teams identities that they had lacked in the past. The second factor is the shorter schedule, roughly one-third as long as the pros, which permits the higher intensity of action. The third is the absence of the guaranteed contract so commonplace in the N.B.A. (coupled with the sense among the college players that if they play hard and impress in college a big contract awaits them in the future). This gives college coaches far more leverage over their players than professional coaches.

The result is a sport that is now in bloom, and gets higher television ratings (in no small part, I suspect, because it is also perceived as being "less black" than the professional game). In the past it was never a particular favorite of mine. I am not keen on cheerleaders, no matter how high they are held aloft by handsome, blond young men, nor am I high on students wandering around the arena dressed as bears, tigers or unicorns. The level of athletics was rarely as high as that of the pros and I had never been enthusiastic about short, scrappy white guards who dribbled well and dove for loose balls. Worst of all there was the slow-down offense. The game lacked the advantage of a 24-second clock, and the team that had the ball could, in the second half, go into a stall offense (known among the cognoscenti as "letting the air out of the ball"). But this deprived the sport of the very thing that made the modern game so exciting: the speed and acrobatics of the new black players. The four-corner offense, popularized by Dean Smith of North Carolina, has always struck me as just about as interesting as pro bowling.

On occasion, I would pick up on a team — John Wooden's U.C.L.A. teams were good and fast and the players looked for each other, though I never much liked Wooden's pieties. Kentucky, another powerhouse, was clearly a school that was first and foremost a basketball factory, and then, and only then, a school. If there was any team I rooted for it was Marquette because its players were so funky, never overcoached, and they looked like they were still having fun. In addition, in the mid-70's, I began to root for the great Indiana teams because I had rarely in any sport seen a combination of such discipline and intelligence on the court, and because coach Bobby Knight insisted that his players graduate and that they become full-fledged citizens of society.

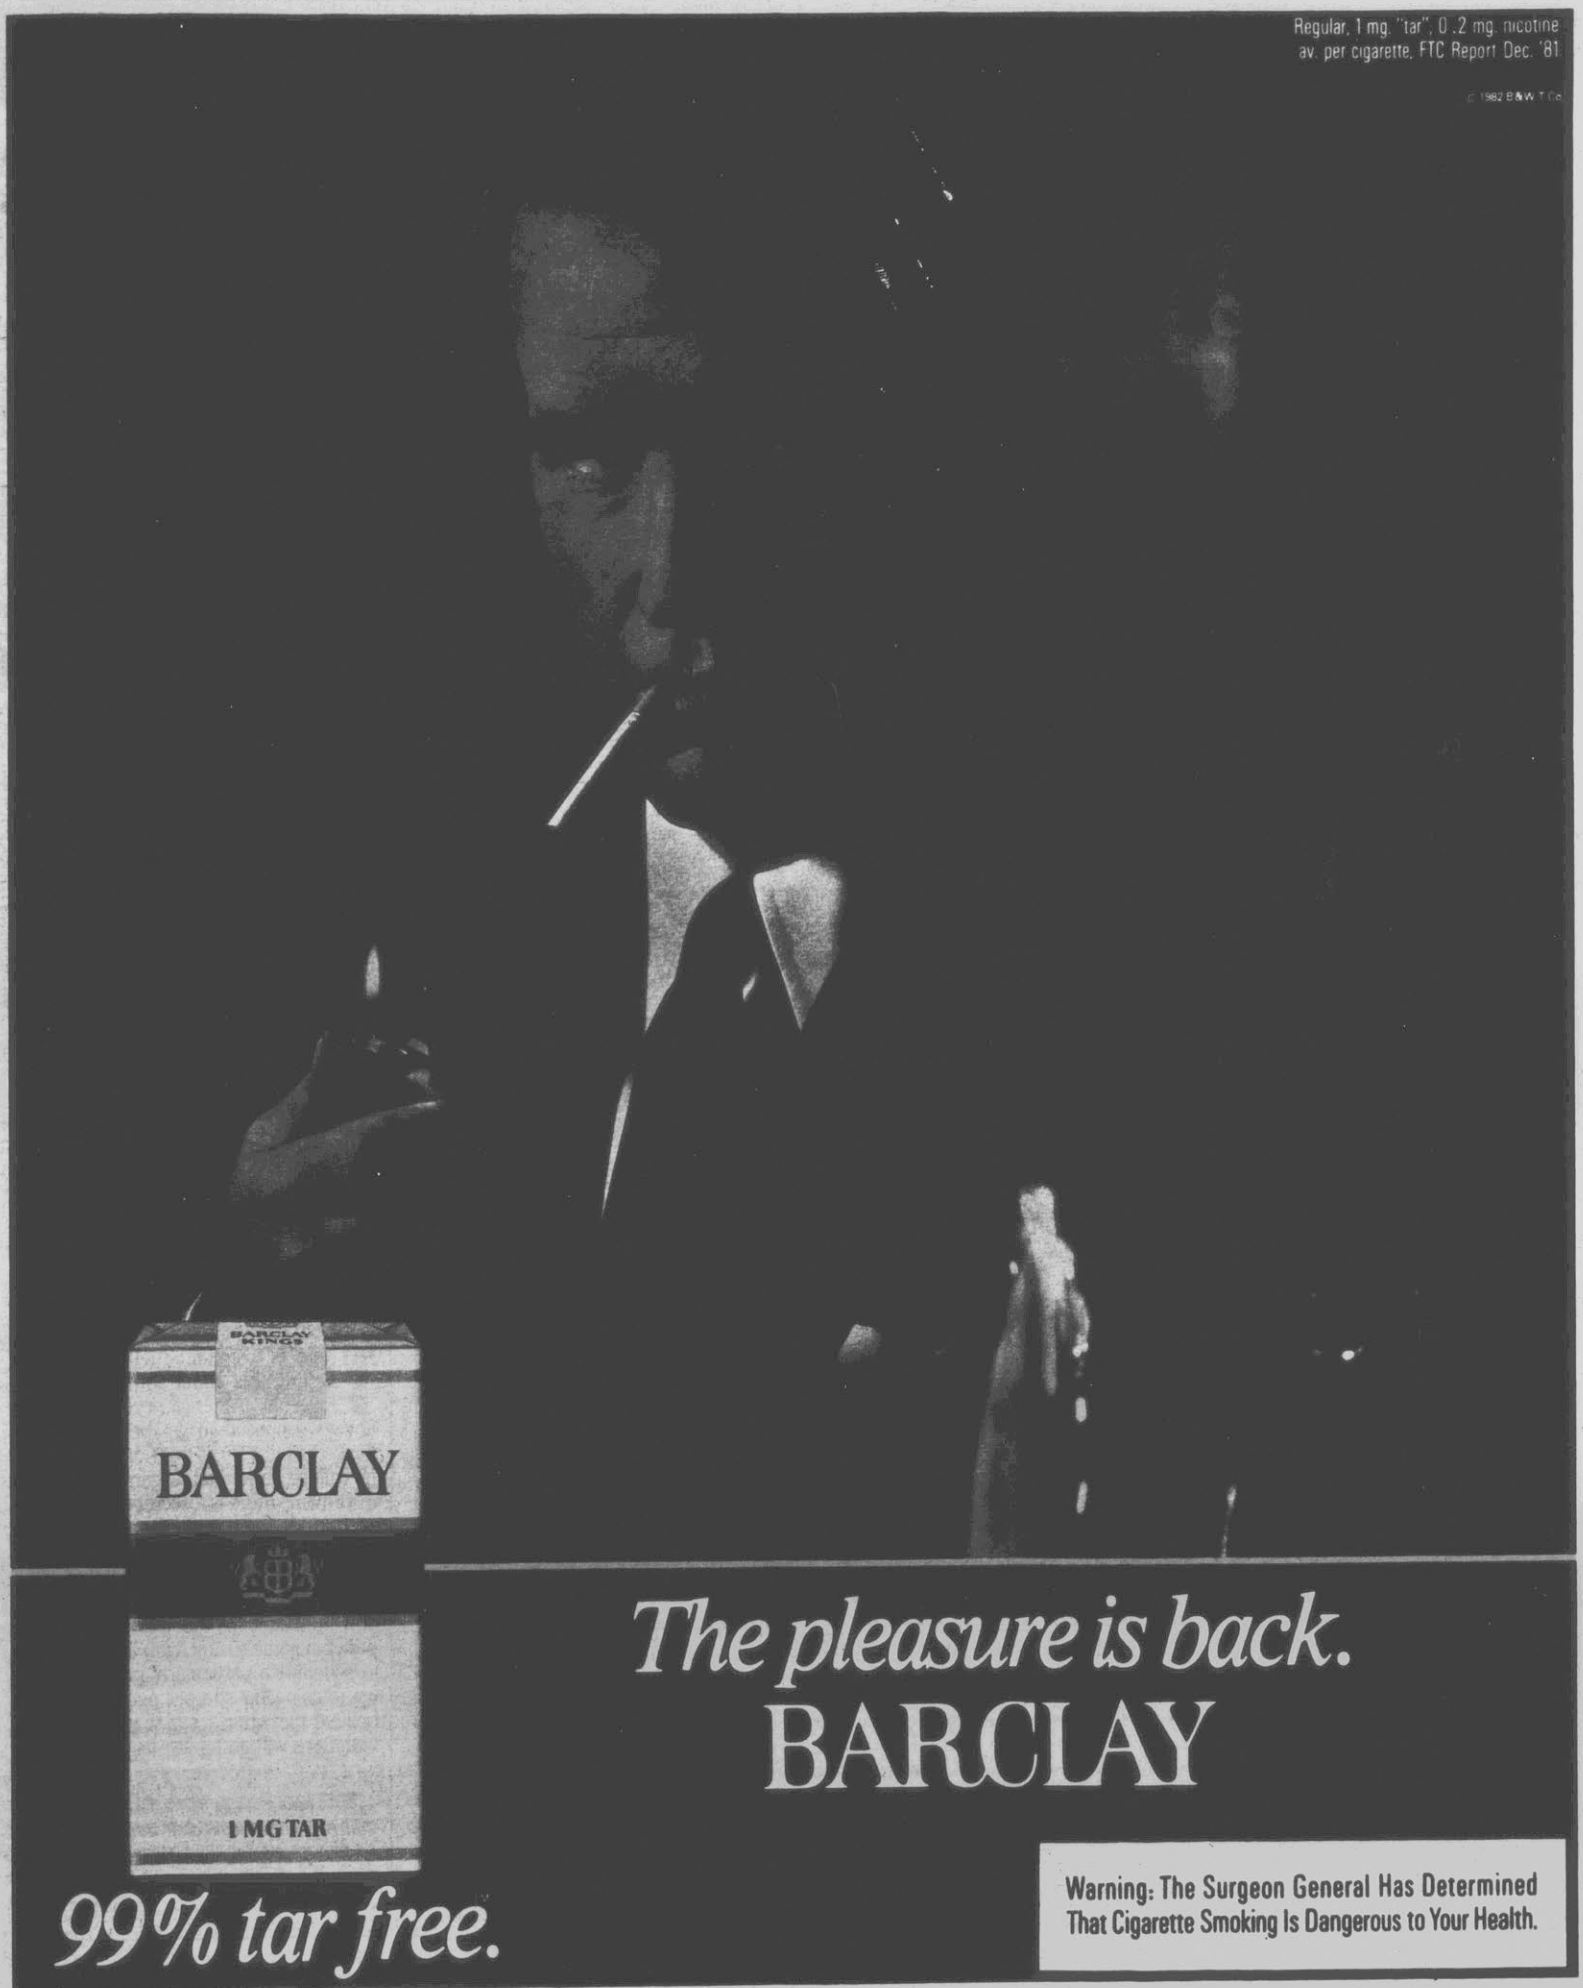

Suddenly college basketball is on a roll. The Final Four, after much promo, is an event; it gets ratings two to three times those of the N.B.A. playoffs, and the games leading up to the championship form a season of their own, less cumbersome than the professional season. They can be readily orchestrated by a deft network. One can watch a team on the rise, and the players soon have instantaneous national identities.

The athletes themselves are getting better, and last year the final was as good as any game I've seen. Certainly the ballet was there: Georgetown's Patrick Ewing at 18 was doing things with his body that no man that young and that big should be able to do. He had, it seemed, survived with considerable grace the cruelty of the racial taunts that had greeted him in arena after arena earlier in the season. James Worthy of North Carolina also played brilliantly and showed that night he was an athlete in the best sense of the word, that is, there was a mental toughness to go with his considerable physical skills. For that was a night in which Georgetown was going to beat North Carolina. Make no mistake about that. Georgetown had superior athletic strength and, against a far more experienced and sophisticated team, it had not become flustered as many had expected. Until that night James Worthy had never played against anyone as awesome as Patrick Ewing and yet he had not folded, and in the end he had carried his team. It was an absolutely wonderful game.

Beyond that it had a human connection — the moment when Georgetown coach John Thompson had, seemingly instinctively, put his arm around Fred Brown, the player who had just thrown the game away. It was a rare moment of sweetness and grace in sport, something that it almost always should be and almost never is anymore. It was worth any number of televised interviews with coaches who claim that sport is character building.

Working against the college game is the fact that it still lacks a time clock (although eight conferences are experimenting with different versions of one this year). Thus any coach can, in effect, "let the air out of the ball" any time he wants. A good game can go dead at any moment. The other thing is that college ball is not as straight a world as CBS and NBC, its two main purveyors, would have you believe. It is in truth one of the uglier flesh markets in America. With the decline of pro basketball, two networks as well as cable have entered the competition to put on college games. Ted Turner reportedly spent a record $500,000 to secure the television rights to this weekend's Virginia-Georgetown game, the kind of dream match-up invented by TV, pitting the college game's two greatest big men — Ralph Sampson and Ewing.

When the financial stakes increase, this means the intensity of the recruiting, already an ugly business, is going to escalate. Even more than college football, basketball is a beacon light for sharks and hustlers, be they coaches, athletic directors or college presidents. A football program depends on tradition, takes a long time to develop and demands a large number of players. But a basketball team requires only a few players; and one transcending player can turn a program around. Thus the instant outlaw colleges, anxious to make a national reputation and divvy up some television money, are drawn to basketball, all the more because the flesh is black, often less sophisticated and thus, they suspect, more vulnerable. So be warned, you may be watching a game that is on occasion quite beautiful, indeed artistic, but the underpinnings are on occasion quite crummy.

There is a certain melancholia in writing this about something you love. In America everything is always supposed to get better. In pro basketball this turns out not to be true. In college basketball, a game which is improving, there is a secret price — the recruiting — and a sense on the part of all involved that the less the fan knows about the invisible exploitation of young men, the better for the college and the better for the sport. The price paid per game to any team allowing TV to schedule a particularly good match-up is going up sharply every year — believe me when I say that recruiting violations will go up just as quickly. PETS

HELP FOR FAT CATS (AND DOGS)

By Anne Mayer

Babe, a beagle, is a roly-poly puppy that gets too many feedings per day because its owners think roly-poly puppies are cute. Sam, a golden retriever, looks more like a grizzly bear because every time its owner eats a snack, Sam gets one, too. And Sophie, a Siamese that loves table scraps, gives the impression it is going to give birth — any minute.

According to veterinarians and canine and feline nutritionists, obesity in pets has become a national problem. "Owners are killing their pets with kindness," says Dr. Joseph E. Haddad, a veterinarian in Bedford Hills, N.Y. Haddad believes owners may be shortening their pets' life spans because the stress of carrying extra weight on their bodies may lead to arthritis, joint ailments and cardiac disease.

How do our pets become overweight? Too much dog or cat food, table scraps, snacks and lack of exercise are the culprits. "Normally, dogs and cats will eat to satisfy their caloric requirement — until they are full — but if they are being fed something that is very palatable, they can overeat, just like people," says Dr. Francis Kallfelz, Mark L. Morris professor of clinical nutrition at the New York State College of Veterinary Medicine at Cornell University.

"If the animal is 15 percent above what it normally should weigh, according to breed standard (you can get the right figure from your vet), or it is fat to look at and feel, it is regarded as being obese," Dr. Haddad explains. Another way to tell is by feeling the ribs and the back part of the animal. "If the pet is in good, lean condition, you should be able to feel the ribs, and the hindquarters should feel firm. If the ribs feel too padded, or if you can't feel them at all, your pet is overweight," says Robert Mohrman, director of pet nutrition and care research for Ralston Purina Company in St. Louis.

In some instances a pet can be overweight because of hormonal problems, so Dr. Kallfelz recommends having your pet checked by a veterinarian first before starting a weight-reducing program. If your pet is obese from "over-indulging," Dr. Haddad recommends gradually reducing the pet's intake of food. "One can start by cutting out table scraps and snacks," he says.

And of course, the owner should not forget daily exercise. Dr. Haddad suggests playing with cats by using a ball or string or putting them outside to exercise. "Some cats will retrieve," he says. For an overweight dog he recommends letting it run around in a fenced-in yard or taking long walks, about two miles. "The walk is good for the owner, too." FW

FAMILIES

WHEN MOTHERHOOD BEGINS AFTER 30

By Anne Flaherty

Traditionally, the majority of mothers have given birth to their third, fourth or final child by age 30. But improved birth control and the decision by many women to pursue careers have contributed to a reversal of this trend. According to data from the National Center for Health Statistics in Washington, D.C., between 1975 and 1979 (the most recent statistics available), there was a 37 percent increase in the number of American women between the ages of 30 and 35 giving birth to their first child.

What are the possible medical complications when a woman delays starting a family? "If a woman elects to wait until age 30 or older to have a child, the chances of her becoming pregnant will be less. Fertility decreases after age 30," says Dr. Alvin Eden, a California pediatrician. "The older woman may also experience more difficulty in giving birth and getting back into shape afterward, since the birth canal and stomach muscles are less flexible than at age 20."

There are also increased risks for babies born to mothers over 30. Down's Syndrome, a chromosome mutation causing mental retardation, is more prevalent among children of older mothers. At age 20 a woman has only one chance in 1,923 of giving birth to an infant with Down's Syndrome; at age 30 the likelihood is one in 885. By age 40 there is one chance in 100.

For the normally healthy woman, though, having a baby between 30 and 35 is not generally dangerous. There are some precautions that should be taken, however. Doctors can now detect Down's Syndrome and more than 100 other birth defects with a test called amniocentesis. It is performed around the 14th or 15th week of pregnancy (cost is about $500). A long, thin needle is inserted into the abdomen and a sample of amniotic fluid is drawn and then studied for chromosomal abnormalities. Doctors believe that for women over age 35 this procedure is worth the slight risk involved.

There are also precautions that should be taken in regard to life style. Dr. Sarah Short, professor of nutrition at Syracuse University, advises that women of all ages who even suspect they are pregnant should watch everything they eat or drink. Pregnant women need a well-balanced diet, including fresh fruits and vegetables, whole-grain cereals, dairy products and high-quality protein. They may be advised to take vitamin and iron supplements, and to drink increased amounts of water. It is also recommended that they cut back on artificial food additives.

If a pregnant woman over 30 is exposed to a lot of stress at work, she should make sure she has plenty of rest periods.

The adverse affects on the unborn child of numerous products, including alcohol, drugs and caffeine, have received widespread publicity. Dr. Short says, "Although it may seem conservative, I think the expectant mother should, among other things, cut down on coffee and other caffeinated beverages, and curtail alcohol consumption. The risks are too great to take chances." Many obstetricians also urge that their patients stop using over-the-counter medications without consulting with them first.

In addition, it's advisable for pregnant women to reduce their exposure to stresss, which has been linked to miscarriage. Women having their first child after 30 are likely to be working women and may thus face hectic schedules. Doctors advise frequent rest periods. FW

INTERVIEW

A TALK WITH

JIMMY CARTER

Arthur Grace/Sygma

Two years ago, Jimmy Carter lost the Presidency, largely because of his inability to free the Americans held hostage in Iran. After leaving the White House, Carter returned to his home in Plains, Ga., from whence he so suddenly sprang as a self-proclaimed political "outsider" in 1976. He has kept busy, teaching part-time at Emory University in Atlanta, working in his woodshop and writing his memoir, Keeping Faith, now a best seller. Recently, in his Atlanta office, the former President talked frankly about himself as an officeholder and a gentleman with FAMILY WEEKLY's Mary Ellin Barrett.

Q: In Keeping Faith, you write that one of your strongest impressions of the Presidency was "the loneliness in which the most difficult decisions had to be made." What was your loneliest moment?

Carter: I think it was the night that the hostage rescue attempt failed when I had to go back to the White House and prepare late that evening to tell the American people the following morning what had occurred. That was a difficult time. Another very lonely time was when I was at Camp David with Begin and Sadat and I got word unexpectedly that Sadat had already ordered a helicopter to leave before the negotiations were complete. At those times it boils down just to you by yourself, and advisors and counselors don't help much. But, in those lonely moments, when I could share a decision or an experience with anyone it was with Rosalynn.

Q: Do you feel lonely now?

Carter: No. I really have a full and gratifying and enjoyable life. Almost everything about being a former President has been better than I had anticipated. The only problem that I have is some of the radical changes that have taken place in the policies that I established as President. This has concerned me very much. With that exception, everything has been better. I've got a very challenging future as a part-time professor and establishing a center at Emory within which I'll continue to work with absolute political freedom on the issues that were important to me while I was President: Middle East peace, the economy, education, human rights, environmental quality, control of nuclear weapons. In addition, our life at home in Plains has been very pleasant. The tourists have a different attitude. While I was in office, the tourists were quite frantic in trying to reach me. Now they approach me very calmly. They are very careful not to intrude on my privacy but they just want to touch my hand and say, "We have confidence in you. We appreciate what you did. We've come here because we care about you." So it's been a very pleasant experience.

Q: What was your happiest moment as President?

Carter: When I discovered that the hostages would be freed. That was one of the happiest moments of my life.

Q: You campaigned for the Presidency as an "outsider," and many people thought that this was one of the reasons why you won the election. What now do you miss the most about Washington and the Presidency?

Carter: I don't miss anything about Washington. Our life there was enjoyable but I don't have Potomac fever. I can't explain the psychological element of it but I haven't missed Washington one day. I have to say that I do miss Camp David. Camp David is not only beautiful and a place of retreat but it's also a place that's conducive to clear thinking and the easing of tension. You could do the same amount of work at Camp David and it didn't seem like work. And my family and I could share experiences more easily there.

Q: In your 1975 autobiography you wrote that you knew you wanted to marry Rosalynn after your first date. What made you so sure?

Carter: I don't know. Before I had that date with Rosalynn I never had told any girl I loved her.

Q: Your mother told a reporter once that she had taught you everything you knew, even about the birds and the bees. Do you remember the day she taught you the facts of life?

Carter: You know, I believe that mothers and fathers overestimate the importance of their teaching about the birds and the bees. In most cases, by the time a parent gets up the nerve to talk to a child about those things, the child has already learned them from other sources. That was true in my case. I don't think children are nearly so innocent as parents tend to believe.

Q: You once said, "I doubt that anyone has ever seen me livid." What was the closest you ever came to losing your temper?

Carter: I think probably the angriest I ever got was at the Ayatollah Khomeini when he professed to be a deeply religious person and to follow the teachings of the Koran and at the same time was deliberately persecuting and punishing people who were absolutely innocent. To me that's almost unforgivable. That's probably the angriest I've ever been in my life.

Q: If your daughter Amy were to run for President some day against one of the Kennedy children, what advice would you give her?

Carter: (Laughing) Amy is a very strong person and my guess is that her instincts would be as good as mine. It would please me if she ran for public office. I would hope that she would be qualified to hold public office. But I would advise her that the Kennedys are a formidable political force and their family is very cohesive and they can be very effective in a political campaign. I think I would certainly tell Amy not to underestimate them as political opponents.

Q: What three adjectives best describe you?
Carter: I'm idealistic...I'm ambitious...And I'd say the third one would be persistent. I don't ever give up.

Q: Do you think you have a sense of humor?
Carter: Oh yes, I think so...I don't do impressions. I'm not a performer. But I think my sense of humor is at least adequate enough not to have a situation degenerate into tragedy or hand wringing or despair.

Q: Some people have said you have a tendency to be remote and that this might have caused you problems. Do you think that's true?
Carter: I think so. Both Rosalynn and I are naturally shy people.

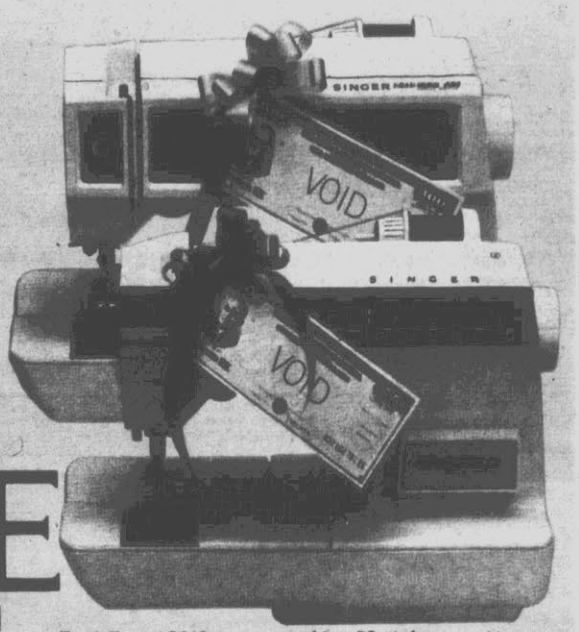

Q: You've been called "as tough as woodpecker lips." Do you think of yourself as a tough guy?
Carter: I think that I'm tough enough to prevail if I have a fair fighting chance in a contest. I'm tough enough not to back down under difficult circumstances. I'm tough enough not to withdraw from a goal just because it seems to be remote. I'm tough enough not to fear defeat if it's inevitable provided I do the best I can to reach that goal. But at the same time I have a soft heart. I'm emotional easily. Tears come to my eyes.

Q: What are your greatest strengths?
Carter: You're asking some very embarrassing questions but I've tried to answer them fairly. I think the greatest strength I have is an inner peace and inner confidence.

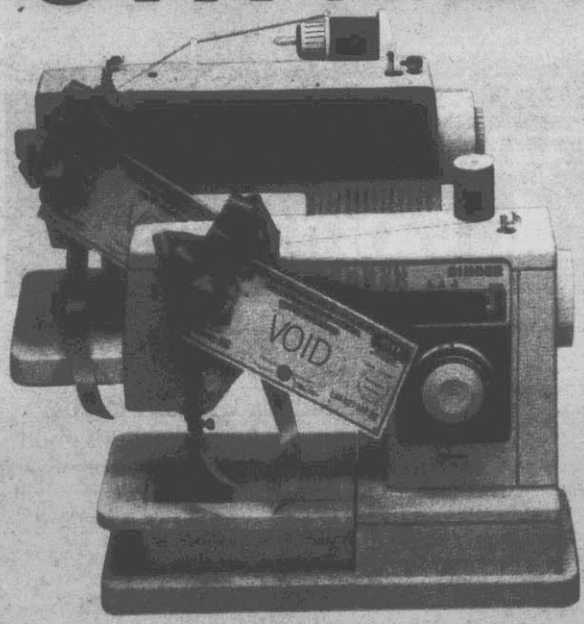

Q: What are your weaknesses?
Carter: I don't think I have the ability to deal with other people as harmoniously as I should. A politician ought to be able to attract other politicians to his side and to form a sense of camaraderie or compatibility. And I don't have the ability as well as I should, particularly in someone who's been the holder of the highest office in the land. I've never formed any close political alliances, for instance, within Congress that would compare to what Lyndon Johnson had or even John Kennedy. And I don't attribute it to anyone's fault except my own. I think that's a problem for me and it's a defect in my personality and in my attitude. When I was President I never formed a sense of closeness or mutual understanding with the Washington press. And here again, I see the same defect on my part.

Q: Do you feel bitter toward the American people?
Carter: No, not at all. The frustrations that the American people felt in November of 1980, when I was defeated for reelection, are the same ones that I felt. Here we were, a powerful nation, the most powerful on earth, apparently impotent in bringing home 52 American hostages whose freedom we sought. I felt as aggravated as any voter who decided that he or she needed to change Presidents. I was just as aggravated with the inflation rate as the American people were so I don't feel bitter toward them at all. I think the American people were justified in making their own judgment. I think it was a rational approach. I wish they hadn't done it. I would like to have been reelected but I certainly can understand their motives. PW

QUICK AND EASY MAKE-AHEAD DISHES YOU'LL LOVE

The friendly hum of a blender, the whir of an eggbeater and the chopping sound of cutlery greeted me when I toured the Betty Crocker Kitchens and Nutrition Center in Minneapolis, a spot so popular that more than 70,000 visitors visit each year.

The staff greets guests with an old-fashioned down-home welcome — in my case, a steaming cup of coffee and a slice of delicious Easy Upside-Down Cake from their newest book, Betty Crocker's Working Woman's Cookbook. Then I went on a tour of the seven beautifully appointed, regionally decorated kitchens.

The soaring increase in working women in America prompted the latest cookbook published this year — which has sold over 60,000 copies in the first month of publication.

It's the 26th cookbook in a series, which started with Betty Crocker's Picture Cookbook in 1950 (it has sold 20 million copies to date), and has become one of the biggest success stories in American publishing.

For the Working Woman's Cookbook, the 70-member staff carefully researched the kinds of dishes that would best fit the busy working woman's lifestyle.

Recipes were then developed for "quick and easy" and "do ahead" main dishes, salads, vegetables, soups and sandwiches, as well as appetizers, desserts and beverages.

Here are several recipes from Betty Crocker's Working Woman's Cookbook, published by Random House Inc., New York, copyright © 1982 by General Mills Inc., Minneapolis, Minn., reprinted by permission of Random House Inc.

CREME BRULEE

3 egg yolks
2 tablespoons granulated sugar
1½ cups whipping cream

Have ready at serving time:

2 cups blueberries, raspberries or sliced strawberries
3 nectarines or peaches, thinly sliced
⅓ cup packed brown sugar

1. Beat egg yolks until thick and lemon colored, about 5 minutes. Gradually beat in granulated sugar.

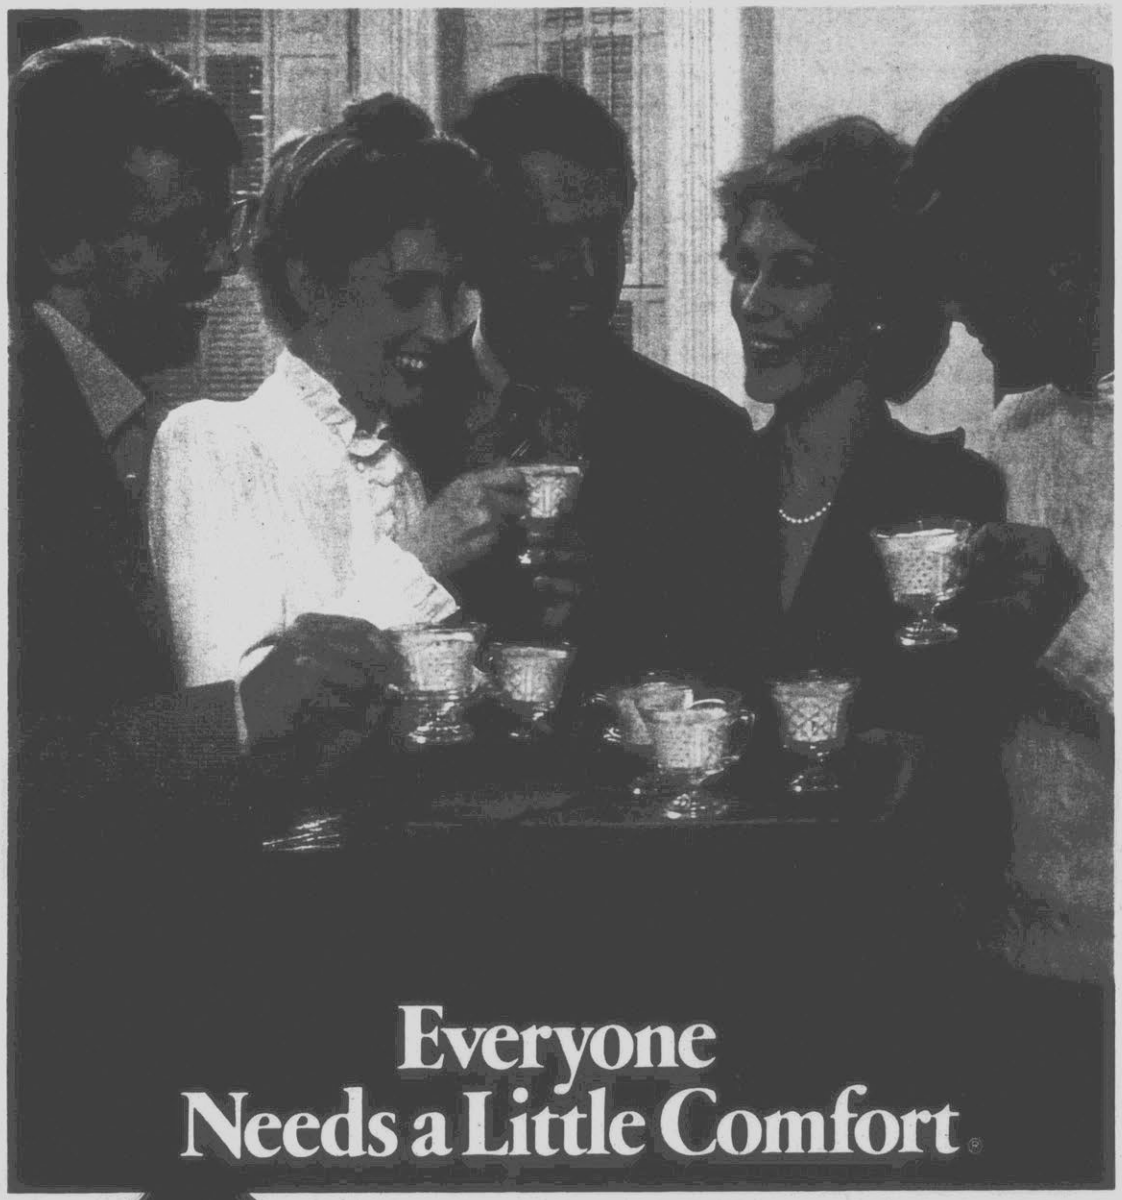

2. Heat whipping cream in 1½-quart saucepan over medium heat just until hot.

3. Stir at least half of the hot cream gradually into egg yolks. Blend into hot cream in saucepan. Cook, stirring constantly, until mixture thickens, about 5 minutes (do not boil).

4. Pour into 9-inch pie plate. Refrigerate at least 2 hours but no longer than 24 hours.

TO SERVE: About 10 minutes before serving, set oven control to broil and/or 550°. Mix blueberries and nectarines; divide among 6 dessert dishes. Sprinkle brown sugar over Crème Brûlée. Broil with top about 5 inches from heat until sugar melts and forms a glaze, about 3 minutes. Spoon over fruit. Makes 6 servings

PEOPLE QUIZ

ARE MEN AND WOMEN DECIDEDLY DIFFERENT?

By John E. Gibson

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. Women are frequently guided by inner promptings whereas men often act in response to external circumstances.
2. Women are the less creative sex.
3. A man's sexual fantasies are more explicit than a woman's.
4. Women tend to interrupt men more often than men interrupt women.
5. On trivial matters, men tend to make decisions more quickly than women do.
6. How pleasant your natural body scent is depends on whether you are a man or woman.

ANSWERS

1. True. Psychological studies of more than 200 men and women subjects, at Mankato State University (Minn.) investigated how personality and external circumstances influence behavior. The researchers found that how a woman acts and talks is likely to be influenced by the way she feels, while a man's behavior tends to be largely influenced not by his inner feelings but by the circumstances in which he finds himself. The study suggests that a woman tends to trust her instincts and feelings, while a man responds more to external cues.

2. False. Psychological tests measuring creative ability were administered to male and female students at the University of Michigan. The results reported conclusively that women are as creative as men. On every gauge of creativity in this study, women scored equal to or slightly higher than the males tested. It was found, however, that "men and women differ in the utilization of their creative capacity, possibly due to the influence of sex-role stereotypes."

In describing their sexual fantasies men tend to let their imaginations run wild, with little restraint, while women's sexual imagery is more subtle.

3. True. In a University of Manitoba study of how erotic fantasies differ between the sexes, investigators found that men's sexual fantasies were fully developed in every detail, leaving nothing to the imagination. Women's sexual fantasies differed markedly from the men's in that erotic activities were implied to a far greater extent. The researchers also found that where men tend to let their imaginations run wild, with little or no restraint, women's sexual imagery is more subtle.

Despite the fact that natural scent is often masked, it still plays an important part in communication between human beings.

4. False. In studies at Florida State University, analyzing responses to interruptions by males and females in conversation, "Males were found to interrupt females 3 times as often as females interrupted males." These findings have been documented elsewhere.

5. True. This is the case where relatively trivial matters are concerned. University of Virginia investigators made a study of how long it took a random selection of men and women subjects to perform such acts as studying a menu, writing a personal letter, stopping for a snack, picking out a birthday card, or selecting a location to hang a picture. The investigations showed that women took appreciably longer to do these things than men did. Women dawdled notably more than men in selecting a card, making a menu choice and conversing socially on the telephone.

6. True. A team of investigators at Germany's Max-Planck Institute made a study of the importance of human odor in nonverbal communication. It showed that the natural scent emanating from women is more often described as pleasant by both sexes than the scent emanating from men. Every person has a natural scent, which is sometimes so subtle that we may not be aware of it except on a subconscious level. And studies at the University of California show that despite the fact that natural scent is often masked by perfume, soap or deodorant it still plays an important part in human communication. FW

MAKE-AHEAD DISHES

EASY TACO DINNER

1 lb. ground beef
1 large onion, chopped (about 1 cup)
1 envelope (about 1¼ oz.) taco seasoning mix
1 cup water
1 package (12 oz.) tortilla chips
½ head lettuce, shredded
2 medium tomatoes, chopped
1 can (2¼ oz.) sliced ripe olives, drained
1 cup shredded Cheddar or Monterey Jack cheese (about 4 oz.)
⅔ cup dairy sour cream

1. Cook and stir ground beef and onion in 10-inch skillet until beef is light brown; drain.
2. Stir in seasoning mix and water. Heat to boiling; reduce heat. Simmer uncovered, stirring occasionally, 10 minutes.
3. Spoon beef mixture onto chips. Top with remaining ingredients.

Makes 6 servings

FRENCH-STYLE CHICKEN SOUP

2½- to 3-lb. broiler-fryer chicken, cut up
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
2 large onions, thinly sliced and separated into rings
2 cloves garlic, finely chopped
1 can (16 oz.) whole tomatoes
1 can (10¾ oz.) condensed chicken broth
1 cup water
1 cup dry white wine or apple juice
1 tablespoon sugar
1 teaspoon dried thyme leaves
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper

Have ready at serving time:

1 medium green pepper, cut into ¼-inch strips
8 slices French bread, toasted
Snipped parsley

1. Remove skin from chicken pieces. Heat oil in 4-quart Dutch oven. Cook chicken in oil until brown on all sides; remove chicken from pan.
2. Cook and stir onions and garlic in same pan until onion is tender.
3. Return chicken to pan; add tomatoes (with liquid), broth, water, wine, sugar, thyme, salt and pepper; break up tomatoes with fork. Heat to boiling; reduce heat. Cover and simmer until chicken is done, about 1 hour.
4. To serve immediately, skim excess fat from chicken mixture. Add green pepper. Heat to boiling; reduce heat. Cover and simmer, about 10 minutes. Place a slice of French bread in each serving bowl. Spoon chicken and broth over bread. Sprinkle with parsley.
5. For make-ahead meal: Cover and refrigerate no longer than 48 hours.
6. TO SERVE: About 30 minutes before serving, remove excess fat from French-Style Chicken Soup. Heat to boiling; reduce heat. Cover and simmer until chicken is hot. Add green pepper. Heat to boiling; reduce heat. Cover and simmer about 10 minutes. Place a slice of French bread in each serving bowl. Spoon chicken and broth over bread. Sprinkle with parsley.

Makes 8 servings—about 1½ cups each

HOT SPICED WINE

2 cups pineapple juice
1 cup water
1 cup packed brown sugar
Peel of 2 oranges, cut into ¼-inch strips
½ cup orange juice
6 whole cloves
4-inch cinnamon stick
3 whole allspice
½ teaspoon salt
1 bottle (⅘ qt.) dry red wine

1. Heat pineapple juice, water, brown sugar, orange peel, orange juice, cloves, cinnamon stick, allspice and salt to boiling in 4-quart Dutch oven, stirring occasionally; reduce heat. Simmer uncovered 15 minutes.
2. Remove spices and orange peel; stir in wine. Heat just until hot (do not boil).
3. Serve in mugs or heat-proof glasses garnished with orange slice and cinnamon stick if desired. Makes 10 (¾-cup) servings

Note: Hot Spiced Wine can be covered and refrigerated no longer than 1 week. Just before serving, heat just until hot (do not boil).

BRIE WITH ALMONDS

1 whole round Brie cheese (4½ oz.)
2 tablespoons margarine or butter
¼ cup toasted sliced almonds
1 tablespoon brandy, if desired
Assorted crackers

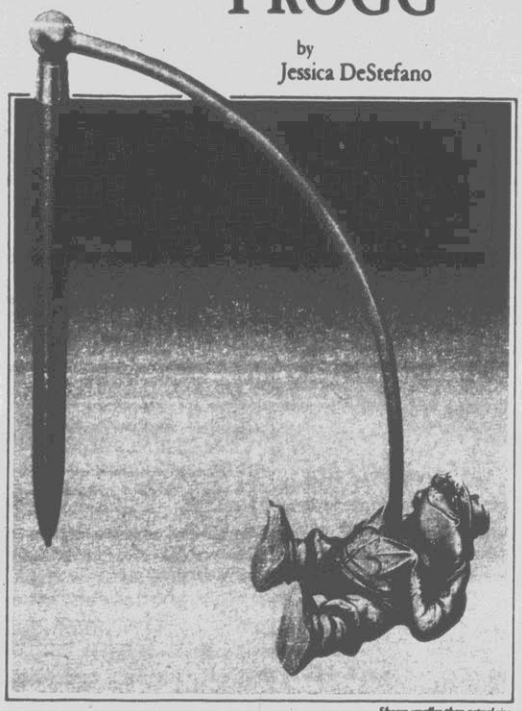

1. Set oven control at broil and/or 550°. Broil cheese with top 3 to 4 inches from heat until soft and warm, about 2½ minutes.
2. Heat margarine until melted; stir in almonds and brandy. Pour over cheese.
3. Garnish with snipped parsley if desired. Serve with crackers.

■ Microwave Directions: Microwave cheese uncovered on medium (50 percent) just until soft and warm, 2 to 3 minutes. Microwave margarine uncovered on high (100 percent) until melted, about 1 minute. Stir in almonds and brandy; pour over cheese. Garnish with snipped parsley if desired. Serve with crackers.

"FISHIN' FROGG"

by Jessica DeStefano

Shown smaller than actual size of 2½" head to toe.

Fishing for Compliments ...

...won't be necessary when you give this irresistible "Fishin'Frogg" to that special man or woman on your holiday shopping list. Perched on a desk or by the telephone, this whimsical creature is sure to coax a smile, even on the most hectic day.

But don't be fooled — the lazy "Frogg" is actually a hard-working desk fixture: he "fishes" for your pen, so you won't have to. The secret is a lifetime magnet, which keeps a pen dangling within handy reach at the end of Frogg's fishing pole.

The pen is a handsome Bradley ballpoint in black matte finish. It uses standard ink refills, for convenient replacement and years of service.

A UNIQUE AND DELIGHTFUL WORK FROM A PROMINENT ARTIST

"Fishin' Frogg" comes to you from the studios of Jessica DeStefano ... created by the artist exclusively for The Historic Providence Mint. Ms. DeStefano is the recipient of many international awards for her sculptures, and has had rave reviews for many one-woman shows.

Crafted in solid fine pewter and beautifully hand-finished, "Frogg" truly comes to life, thanks to the artist's eye for amusing detail. From his floppy straw hat and overalls and his webbed feet propped on a well-fed tummy, to his engaging grin, he is the very picture of self-satisfied relaxation — certain to capture hearts wherever he casts his line. And when the week seems just too long, "Frogg" is a humorous reminder of the leisurely weekend, making him an ideal gift for the desk of that busy someone.

"Fishin' Frogg" is available only through The Historic Providence Mint, and is destined to become a collector's favorite.

WHAT IN THE WORLD

By Rosalyn Abrevaya

MONEY CAN BUY ME LOVE

So you want to marry a millionaire. Well, get in line and take a number. But we'll let you in on a little secret. In her book The Only Guide You'll Ever Need to Marry Money, author Diane Ackerman reveals the best places to look.

Make friends with one of the successful divorce lawyers in your town, she says. They'll know of soon-to-be-available wealthy clients. Hospital waiting rooms and gift shops are areas rife with potential candidates who might be highly susceptible to your kindness and sympathy. Visit auctions prior to sales day to scout for potential buyers. If a browser is with a member of the auction house staff, he or she is probably worth bundles. Go hunting for an expensive house, before or after work, when the owner (whom you've checked out beforehand with the real estate agent) will be home. Find travel and trade association events by checking the local newspapers. Don't go to the meetings, but hang out in the coffee shops and restaurants where the convention crowd gathers.

And, always carry a big umbrella when rain threatens, Ackerman advises. You never know when someone in an expensive suede coat will need rescuing.

You can wait until after the honeymoon to send us our 10 percent finder's fee.

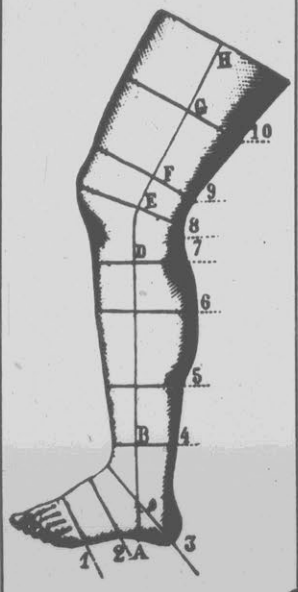

SAVING LIMBS

Ten years ago, a person with a severely damaged leg faced the prospect of probable amputation. But it's now possible for victims of motorcycle, auto and industrial accidents, for instance, to have their legs and other injured body parts restored by plastic surgery.

The technique, called a flap transplant, consists of first removing a section of muscle and skin from the victim's back. Then, explains Emory University surgeon Dr. Foad Nahai, blood vessels in the muscle are microsurgically sewn onto existing vessels in the leg. The new skin is shaped over the injured part of the limb so that "it looks like a leg," says Dr. Nahai, "as well as working like one."

After staying off the leg for about three weeks the patient can again walk normally.

Nahai says he has successfully operated on about 150 to 200 patients since 1976 and currently is performing one or two of these operations a week.

YOU ARE WHAT YOU EAT

Can a better diet decrease antisocial behavior? One group thinks so. The Los Angeles County Task Force on Nutrition and Behavior is currently monitoring a ban on soda pop, chocolate, potato chips, table salt and sugar at 17 juvenile detention centers in Los Angeles County.

Chairman of the task force, Barbara Boone, told us that a three-day hearing on the causes of violent crime held last year revealed some impressive testimony linking diet and behavior. Cited were U.S. and foreign studies demonstrating that improved nutrition programs in detention centers had resulted in improved behavior within the institutions and reduced repeat offenses.

Since September 1981 Boone's group has been overseeing the switch from standard institutional fare to whole-grain breads, vegetables and fruit and also planning a nutrition education program.

It's too early to assess results, but Boone says county officials are enthusiastic about the program's possibilities. The sheriff's department is even setting up a nutrition program for adult jails.

NURSES AND ABORTION

Some 5 percent of U.S. nurses who assist in abortion operations say the procedure conflicts with their moral beliefs and that they have been denied promotions or discriminated against because of it, reports a recent Brigham Young University study.

Although the study, prepared by Cole Durham and Mary Anne Q. Wood of the University law school and B.Y.U. sociologist Spencer J. Condie, found that most nurses have no problem dealing with abortion, a small percentage — perhaps totaling 50,000 in the workforce — do, and most are unaware of the legal remedies available to them.

For instance, there are Federal and state laws to protect them from employment discrimination and, more recently, state conscience laws, enacted in 44 states, that apply specifically to medical personnel. Among its provisions, this type of law offers protection in a variety of situations involving pressure to participate in abortions.

Some nurses who have experienced problems on the job include one who wanted to work in a sophisticated intensive care unit for newborns and said she was required to participate in abortions to get the training offered at the facility. Another signed a one-year contract agreeing to help in performing abortions, then found six months later she simply couldn't take part in the operations anymore.

● SAFETY NOTE! This short poem of unknown origin is a good one to keep in mind when traveling during the holidays — or any time: "Angels who guard us when we drive, tend to retire at _____." Fill blank. P.S.: Keep it down.

The missing term is fifty five

● Buying Spree! Aye spends more than Bee. Cee spends less than Dee. Dee spends more than Bee, but less than Aye. Who spends most?

Aye spends most

● Sum Books! These classic book titles, when added, total 2001. One is by Booth Tarkington, and one is by George Orwell. What books?

"Seventeen," by Tarkington, and "1984," by Orwell

● Tongue Twisters! Say aloud, and repeat rapidly: Gordon gave Grandma a green glass gas globe. Beth bought Brad a black and blue bathbrush. "Lester," said Esther, "let's pester Silvester."

Our Story: TORCHES FLUTTER AND SHADOWS DANCE AS THE MOB DESCENDS UPON A LONELY FARMHOUSE. ARN IS AMONG THEM. THEY HAVE FOUND THE CHILD JUSTINIAN SEEKS -- ALETA'S CHILD, ARN'S BROTHER. NOW THEY NEED ONLY HAND HIM OVER AND THEIR OWN CHILDREN WILL BE SAFE. WHAT IS ONE LIFE AGAINST HUNDREDS?

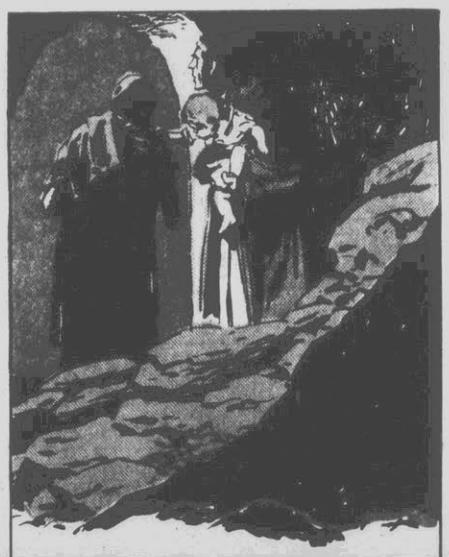

A DOOR SQUEALS IN THE DISTANCE, THEN SLAMS SHUT IN THE WIND. "THERE THEY GO," SOMEONE CRIES.

MOTHER AND FATHER FLEE WITH THEIR ADOPTED SON. THE MOB SPREADS OUT IN PURSUIT. BUT ARN REMAINS CALM. IN THIS WEATHER HE SUSPECTS THE FAMILY IS HIDING, NOT FLEEING. HE EXAMINES THE EARTH, THE BRUSH, THE PATCHES OF SNOW.

SOON HE PICKS UP THE TRAIL. AS DAWN YAWNS OVER THE MOUNTAINS, ARN SPIES THE WELL-HIDDEN ENTRANCE TO A SHALLOW CAVE. HE SEES NO ONE, BUT IN THE BITTER COLD MAKES OUT THE VAPOR OF ESCAPING BREATH.

NOT ONLY BREATH ESCAPES. SUDDENLY AN INFANT'S WAIL DISTURBS THE CHILL RUSTLE OF A WINTER MORN.

IT ECHOES OFF THE HILLSIDES AND FILLS THE VALLEY. AND SOON ARN HAS COMPANIONS AT THE MOUNTAIN OF THE CAVE. "THEY WILL NOT GET AWAY NOW," SAYS ONE. THE CROWD PRESSES FORWARD TO FIND PRINCE ARN BLOCKING THE WAY.
