White House Seeks Compromise On MX

By TIM AHERN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has all but formally abandoned the "dense pack" basing plan for the MX missile as he fights to win congressional approval to build the first of the new nuclear weapons.

White House and Pentagon officials met with Senate Republican officials to try to come up with a compromise and head off a vote against buying the missile when the Senate takes up the defense spending bill today.

In advance of the vote, Reagan set aside time to lobby senators on the phone and his spokesman, Larry Speakes, predicting a close vote, said, "certainly it's do-able, within reach."

The spokesman refused, however, to discuss any compromises that might be under review.

Speakes also said the dense-pack option "is what our studies reveal is the preferred system. ... The president prefers the dense-pack method."

The House last week voted down, 245-176, Reagan's proposal to spend $988 million to buy five of the giant weapons Reagan has named the "Peacekeeper."

But the House left nearly $2.5 billion in the measure to study the missile that is central to Reagan's plan to modernize America's nuclear forces.

House members made clear they didn't like dense pack, which would bunch the missiles in a 20-mile-square area near Cheyenne, Wyo., on the theory that incoming Soviet missiles would knock each other out.

Dense pack also has numerous Senate critics, who say they have the votes to defeat the procurement money. But Reagan, seeking a compromise, last Friday urged production approval and said he was willing to look at other basing plans.

"Next year as we have more time, I'd welcome a vigorous debate on the best way to base the missile," the President during a brief Oval Office news conference. "If the Congress wants to debate and discuss and see if there are possible other options that could conceivably be improvements over this, we're willing for that."

"There's plenty of time to decide" on a basing plan, Reagan said in his weekly radio broadcast Saturday. "What we need now is a clear, positive vote, on the missile itself, to go forward on production of the missile."

The president says the missile is needed to make the Soviets bargain for arms control. If Congress refuses to buy the weapon, "we move a major incentive for the Soviets to stay at the (bargaining) table and agree to (weapons) reductions."

Reagan's case for dense pack was damaged last week when Gen. John W. Vessey Jr., chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, revealed that three of the five chiefs opposed the plan because of technical disagreements.

Although Reagan later said the chiefs agreed to support whatever plan he picked, congressional officials late last week said Vessey's statement had all but buried dense pack. It is extremely unusual for Congress to approve a military expenditure opposed by the Joint Chiefs, said the sources, who declined to be named.

Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., after talks with Reagan, said he supports a proposed compromise under which the production money would be voted but could not be spent until Congress approves a basing plan.

Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., a leader of the anti-MX forces, forecast approval of a plan similar to the one espoused by Jackson. "We're not looking for a confrontation," he said.

If the Senate does approve buying the weapon, the defense bill would have to be sent back to the House for another vote.

Reagan and the Pentagon say the $30 billion MX, or "missile experimental," is necessary because the current U.S. land-based force of 1,000 Minuteman and 51 Titan missiles is vulnerable to a Soviet first strike.

"I believe it is absolutely essential to a strong, secure defense, that we vote now on funds for that missile," the president said.

Key Referendum Dec. 16

The Pitt County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service will conduct a tobacco referendum Dec. 16 to determine whether marketing quotas will remain in effect for the next three crops of flue-cured tobacco.

Acres-pounds marketing quotas have been established by the Agriculture Department for the next three years and Thursday's vote by farmers can ratify the marketing quotas.

According to Stacy J. Evans, county executive director for Pitt County ASCS, if flue-cured tobacco growers approve the marketing quotas, they will be eligible for price support loans on their 1983, 1984 and 1985 crops.

If farmers do not approve the quotas, there will be unlimited production and no price support.

The voting will take place at the following polling places designated by the county ASC committee:

Ayden, Ayden Community Building; Beaver Dam, Bell Arthur Fire House; Belvoir, Belvoir General Merchandise; Bethel, Police Department; Carolina, Stokes Community Building; Chicod, Simpson Rural Fire Department, Grimesland Town Hall, Black Jack Fire House, Thomas Bess Store.

Falkland, Community Building; Farmville, Fire Station; Fountain, Town Hall; Greenville, Stator House Fire Department, Farmers Tobacco Warehouse, Red Oak Fire Station, Eastern Pines Fire Department.

Pactolus, Fire House; Swift Creek, Gritton Fertilizer, Stokes & Lane; Winterville, Town Hall.

The polls will be open from 7 a.m.-7 p.m. Those eligible to vote must vote in the community in which their farm is located.

Bulgaria Now Charges CIA Help In Planning Papal Assassination

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Bulgaria charged today that the Central Intelligence Agency helped finance and plan Turkish terrorist Mehmet Ali Agca's attempt to assassinate Pope John Paul II.

It was Bulgaria's strongest public reply to Italian charges that three Bulgarian nationals were involved in a plot to murder the pope, and Western press speculation that Bulgarian secret police were behind the shooting in St. Peter's Square on May 13, 1981.

On Sunday, the Rome Daily American claimed Bulgarian agents also approached Red Brigades terrorists with a plan to assassinate Polish labor leader Lech Walesa.

Italian officials have arrested Sergei Ivanov Antonov, station chief in Rome of the Bulgarian national airline, and charged him with complicity in the attack. Arrest warrants have been issued for two other Bulgarians in the case.

Agca is serving a life sentencing in Italy.

"He is a citizen of Turkey — a NATO member country," wrote Bulgarian commentator Dimiter Shishmanov in an article for the weekly Pogle, which was carried by the official news agency BTA.

"How much certain well known circles would like the assassin to turn out a citizen of a socialist state," he said.

Shishmanov said Agca had planned the attack before he escaped from prison in Turkey, as evidenced by a letter he wrote to Turkish newspapers two days after the escape.

"How is such an escape possible without the backing of an organization? The idea that the Bulgarian secret service was behind the jailbreak is nonsense," Shishmanov said.

"Agca was in seven Western European NATO member countries, where a large network of CIA agents are working in all right extremist and neo-fascist organizations," he charged. "These are the circles the terrorist Agca moved in, from which he received money and instructions in the course of many a month before doing the terrorist act in the square in Rome."

HOME BURNED

The Godfrey Reed family of Simpson lost their mobile home and everything in it, including already purchased Christmas gifts, to fire Thursday.

The Simpson Fire Department has asked Hotline to appeal for donations of household goods, clothing and cash for the family, which is composed of Reed, his wife and two daughters.

Reed, who is employed by Sam Pollard Plumbing Company here, wears 42 waist, 29 length pants, 17½ shirt, and 10½ shoe; Mrs. Reed, 22 dress, 33 pants, and 8½ shoe; their 17 year-old daughter 12-14 dress, 12 pants and 8 shoe; and their 8-year-old daughter size 8 dress, 10 pants and 5 shoe.

Anyone willing to share with this family is asked to bring gifts to the Simpson Fire Department. Inquire next door at Nelson Convenient Mart if door is locked, Fire Chief Hyman Boyd suggested.

Those having inquiries may call Margaret Andrews, 758-7233.

See Revolution In Savings, Checking Accounts

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

A savings and checking revolution begins this week for anyone who has at least $2,500.

New accounts will provide high interest — about double what you're getting now — and low risk. And you will have easy access to your money.

Starting Tuesday, banks and savings and loan institutions will offer money-market savings accounts which will pay interest comparable to money-market mutual funds.

Beginning Jan. 5, they'll be offering high-interest SuperNOW checking accounts.

Unlike the money-market funds, both new bank accounts will be insured by the federal government for up to $100,000 each.

Federal officials have set certain regulations for the money-market and SuperNOW accounts, and individual institutions can, within limits, add their own rules. Some institutions, for example, may charge monthly service fees, while others may not. Some may compound interest daily; others may choose to do it less often.

Here is how the new savings accounts will work: You must deposit at least $2,500; individual institutions can set higher minimums if they want. At least one New York City bank requires an initial deposit of $5,000.

There is no ceiling on interest; each institution is free to set its own rate. The rates are expected to be about the same as those paid by money-market funds and usually will be tied to what are called "market interest rates" — the rates paid on things like government securities. James Kendall of the U.S. League of Savings Institutions said he expected initial rates of about 10 percent. The current interest on conventional passbook savings accounts is a maximum of 5¼ percent at commercial banks and 5½ percent at savings institutions.

Some banks and S&Ls offered premiums to customers who signed up for money-market accounts in advance and advertised initial rates of up to 11 percent to lure depositors.

The interest rate will fluctuate — depending on market conditions. Government regulations prohibit financial institutions from guaranteeing the money-market account rate for more than one month. Some banks and S&Ls will change the rate weekly; a few will change it every day. Each institution will set its own rate; some will tie the rate to a specific financial index, but others won't. The rate theoretically could be the same for several months if market conditions are stable, but there are no guarantees.

You can take your money out and close the account at any time, subject to restrictions imposed by the individual institution.

High Tech Industry Seen As Best Hope For State

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — High-technology industry remains the state's best hope of long-range economic growth, according to the North Carolina Employment Security Commission.

While textile jobs in North Carolina have dropped dramatically, there has been plenty of growth in the durable goods and high-technology manufacturing sectors, the commission's Labor Market Information Division reports.

In October, textile employment in North Carolina fell to 221,000, down more than 17,000 from last year. Nationwide textile employment in November fell to a record low 221,000, down from 804,000 the year before and from the 1.1 million employed in the peak year of 1973.

One reason for the shift toward high-technology, officials say, is the movement of durable goods industries such as machinery and equipment makers from the North to the South.

An example of a Northern industry that has moved South is Clark Equipment Co. of Buchanan, Mich., a producer of axles, transmissions, material handling equipment and construction machinery.

Clark announced in October that it was closing some of its Michigan operations and transferring most of them to Clark's three North Carolina plants. The move will mean more jobs for North Carolina and fewer for Michigan, already hard hit by the slump in the auto and steel industries.

Growth of durable goods and high-technology manufacturing in the state has prompted Gov. Jim Hunt and other state officials to press for funding of technical training through apprenticeship programs and the community college system and for more math and science teachers.

"We recognize there's a shortage of math and science teachers and we've asked for funds, but we haven't been able to get what we want because of the economic situation and other areas of higher priority," said George Kahdy, assistant superintendent of the N.C. Department of Public Instruction. "Now, this has become a priority."

Meanwhile, North Carolina will continue to be dominated by blue-collar jobs. Division officials estimate that by 1985, about 43 percent of the labor force will be blue-collar workers, down from 45 percent in 1978.

Acting To End Martial Law

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The government today asked Parliament to suspend most remaining martial law restrictions imposed under the sweeping military crackdown exactly one year ago.

The move came one day after martial law chief Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski promised to ease most restrictions by year's end.

Today's proposal, virtually guaranteed passage by the rubber-stamp Sejm or Parliament, would lift most controls on Jan. 1.

The Polish head of state, Henryk Jablonski, told the Sejm that restrictions to protect Polish security and the socialist economy would remain in place but that after Jan. 1, the government would grant partial amnesty to Poles who played minor roles in the nation's 16-month social and economic crisis.

Weekend Weather Fails Deter Holiday Shopping

The weekend's cold weather didn't deter Christmas shopping in Greenville, according to spokesmen for the city's shopping centers. If anything, they indicated, there was a noticeable increase in the number of shoppers on hand Saturday over the previous unseasonably warm Saturday.

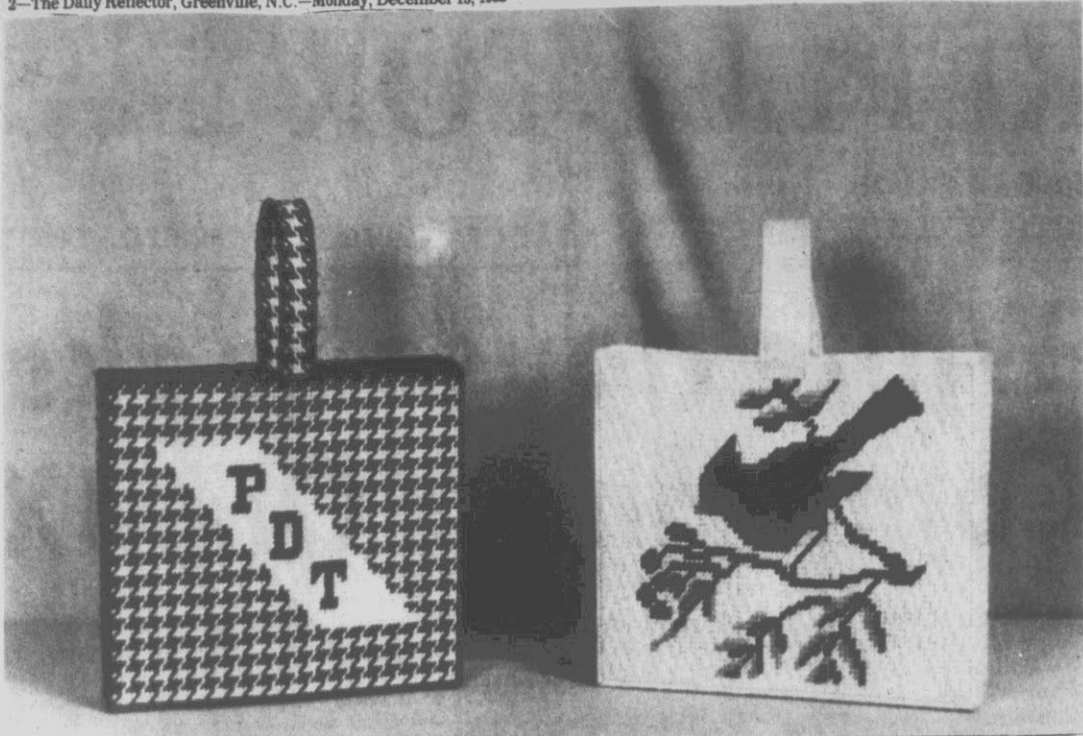

Saturday's day-long moist, misty weather, with a low temperature of 43 and a high temperature of 48 degrees recorded for the day, did however, put a damper on the annual Christmas parade. Several scheduled participating groups dropped out, and there were fewer spectators than in recent years.

Sunday's even colder weather — 23 degrees at 8 a.m. with a high of 45 during the day, for a while threatened to become nasty weather. Ice mixed with rain began to fall about 8:30 a.m., and again early in the afternoon. The amount of ice contained in the day's 1.4 inches of rainfall never created any hazardous driving problems in the city.

"Yesterday's weather was a reminder to us to make sure everything is in readiness for snow or ice and bad driving conditions," said Mayo Allen, director of Greenville's Public Works Department. "We have rechecked all our equipment, and everything is in readiness if we do get some solid winter weather."

Today's temperature at 8 a.m. under a sunny sky was again a chilling 23 degrees, but is expected to go higher than Sunday's high of 45.

TOTE BAGS...to needlepoint — a red cardinal in a cherry tree or a houndstooth check with monogram.

Pat's Pointers

Pamper yourself with a needlepoint tote or two — easily stitched and assembled on 7-mesh plastic canvas. The brilliant red cardinal in a cherry tree will make you think spring even while the wintry winds are blowing. The houndstooth check with monogram is the perfect complement to any of your tailored outfits.

To obtain directions for making both Tote Bags, send your request for Leaflet No. NP-1212 with $1 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler "The Daily Reflector", P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29582.

Or you may order a kit by sending a check or money order for $15 for Kit KNC-1212

(Cardinal Design) or $12 for KNH-1212 (Houndstooth Design). If ordering Kit KNC-1212, please specify your choice of brown, royal blue, gray, black, red, green or burnt orange. Each kit price includes instructions, plastic canvas, yarn, needle, lining and shipping charges.

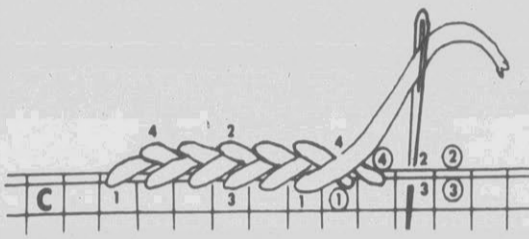

Dear Pat: At a bazaar this fall I saw some plastic canvas needlepoint projects finished with a braided-type edging that I like much better than the over-and-under overcasting stitch that I have been using. Can you tell us how this is done? — Martha S., Lakeland, Fla.

It's my guess, Martha, that the pieces you saw were finished with the binding stitch that is more often used on traditional canvas than on the plastic variety. I think it is a much prettier finish, though, and one very much worth your while to learn.

One of the clearest sets of illustrations and directions that I have ever found for this stitch is in the book, "Bargello Borders" by Jean Riley and Nancy Hall. With their permission, I am reproducing them here. This is one of my favorite books — simply loaded with great needlepoint ideas. If not available in your favorite needlecraft store, it can be ordered by mail from Needlemania Inc., P.O. Box 123, Franklin, Mich. 48025 for $9.95 plus $1 postage and handling charge.

The authors' approach to teaching this stitch is to have you first practice it as a decorative surface stitch rather than as an edging until you are comfortable with the stitch progression. In this type of practice, you will work on Rows A and C only.

Following the larger of the two illustrations, begin by bringing your needle up in the hole marked with a large 1 in Row C. Carry the yarn forward to the large 2 and take it down. Bring it up at the large 3 and down at the large 4. Repeat these steps, using the smaller numerals this time; repeat again using the circled numbers.

Practice until you feel confident. Now you are ready to use the same stitch as an edging or joining stitch, following the smaller illustration. With traditional canvas, fold your canvas so that Row B and two canvas threads are on top of the fold. Notice that when Row B is your fold line, Row A is at the back of your work and Row C is at the front with the holes of these two rows perfectly aligned over one another so that your needle is passing through Rows A and C simultaneously.

There are no folds made on plastic canvas. When using this stitch as an edging the single top edge replaces the "fold line," and when joining two sections the two are held with right sides facing out and stitches are worked through both thicknesses.

To follow the smaller illustration, first secure your yarn in the back of nearby stitches and work in the same type of stitch progression as before, this time working over the fold or the edge of the canvas. In this version, the top row on the wrong side corresponds to Row A, the edge corresponds to Row B and the top row on the right side corresponds to Row C.

This probably looks and sounds quite complicated, but with a little practice it is relatively easy to do — and well worth the effort!

It's Thought That Counts

DEAR ABBY: I am disgusted with people who moan that everything is so expensive these days they can't afford to give Christmas gifts this year.

In the last four years I haven't been able to buy gifts either, but I didn't give up. I made my own.

Last year I made 24 pairs of mittens and 11 pairs of slippers out of my odds and ends of yarn. This year I made homemade jellies and jams when berries were in season. So, please tell those people who say they can't afford to give gifts to get their talents together. A gift doesn't have to be expensive. It's the thought that counts! GIVING ANYWAY IN IOWA

DEAR GIVING: Not everyone can knit, crochet or even make jellies and jams. You're right, however, when you say it's the thought that counts. So what's wrong with a note or a card that says simply, "Thinking of you — with love," or "Best wishes" or whatever is appropriate.

DEAR READERS: In my column for Nov. 5, a well-to-do widow wrote: "On my demise, I would like to use my estate to better humanity. What are your recommendations?"

My reply in part: "In my opinion, the most rewarding gift is helping people to help themselves. (Give a man a fish and he can eat for a day. Teach him to fish and he can eat for a lifetime.) Support scholarship programs and make education available for students who are eager to learn and qualify scholastically but lack the funds."

On the very same day, Ann Landers, in response to a reader, wrote: "Your letter brings to mind an old Chinese saying, 'If you give a man a fish, he will have food for one day. If you teach him how to fish, he will eat for the rest of his life.'"

Of said coincidence, San Francisco Chronicle columnist Herb Caen chronicled: "Caenfcusius say: 'Do not wish to carp, but something fishy here.'"

Nothing fishy. Mental telepathy is not unheard of in the case of identical twins.

DEAR ABBY: This is the season when everybody wants to be home for the holidays. I hope you print this for all the airline agents everywhere.

I work in the reservations department of a major airline. I'm the one who answers the phone after you've listened to the recording. I'm the one who listens while you tell me how long you've been waiting. I'm the one who tries to locate your reservations when you don't know the flight number, the date or time of day you want to leave.

I'm the one who waits while you go look for a pencil and paper. I'm the one who curse when the flight is full.

I'm the one who searches for your reservation and finds out you have four others confirmed at different times.

I'm the one who never gets thanked if I find that economy seat, locate the hand baggage you've left behind, page the passenger at the airport, or straighten out any number of problems that occur during this busy travel season.

I'm the one you never wish a Merry Christmas. OVERWORKED IN PHOENIX

DID YOU KNOW...

by Dean's Photography ETIQUETTE Q & A

People seem to have more questions about the "right thing to do" for weddings than at any other time. Some common ones:

Q. Who pays for the reception?

A. Usually the bride's family. If the groom's family also contributes to the expense, their names should also appear on the wedding invitation.

Q. How is the total number of invitations divided among the bride's and groom's families?

A. They should be evenly divided, but if the groom's family is from far away and cannot use their share it is polite for them to indicate this to the bride as early as possible.

Q. How should checks given as wedding gifts be made out?

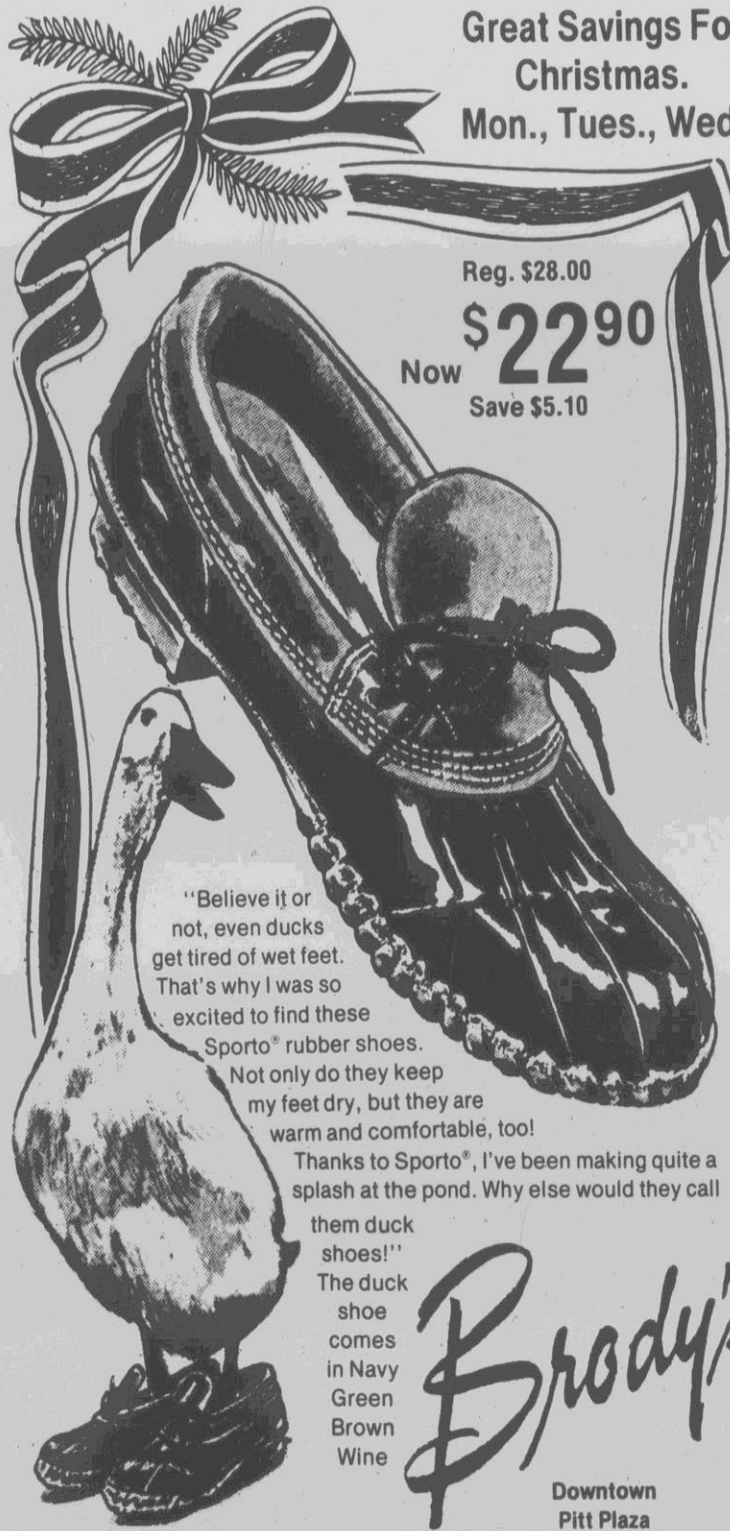

A. If given before the wedding, they should be made out to either the bride or the groom, or to both (using the bride's maiden name.) If given at the wedding, a check should be made out to both, either as Mr. and Mrs. or using both first names and the marriage name.

Q. May duplicate wedding gifts be exchanged?

A. Yes. And it is only necessary to inform the donor if they are close enough to notice the difference.

British Designer Revives Chinese Fashion Allure

By ANN R. SCOTT HONG KONG (UPI) — Any woman lucky enough to own a Jenny Lewis creation is guaranteed the center of attention, for her designs are dazzling works of art.

The British designer is reviving classical Chinese styles — splashing fine oriental embroidery across exotic shades of silk.

Her two Hong Kong shops attract fashion conscious women from Paris to Hollywood and even from the Middle East.

Harvey Nichols of London and Neiman Marcus in the United States also carry Lewis garments.

Inspired by the elegant costumes of Ching Dynasty noblemen, Lewis designs flowing evening wear to suit today's lifestyles.

"Comfort is very important," she said in an interview. "Modern women lead very modern lives and if they are going to buy a work of art it must be easy to wear and should last many years."

"Once I have an idea I'll work until I achieve it, its my fun and passion."

picture embroidery from southern China beautifies sleevebands and trimming on robes.

The satin floss stitch, once the treasured work of court concubines, is used on cheongsams.

The Peking knot — banned during the Ming Dynasty because women went blind producing it — appears on Lewis' most ornate dresses. The results are breathtaking — and so are the prices.

Most Lewis garments cost between $200 and $900. The antique robes sell for thousands.

"Shanghai," a rose silk cheongsam priced at $600, has floss stitch butterflies embroidered in shades of pewter gray.

The designer also uses beads and sequins, either alone or with embroidery. Her $900 "Zelda" dress is fully sequined in a rich, shimmering black, lined with Ming green peonies.

Lewis names all her creations after women or Chinese cities. One recent design, "Sue-Ling," is a full-length, black crepe-de-chine evening gown worked with pale rose tea chest bugle beading and sequin chrysanthemums. Price, $540.

In addition to her own work, Lewis has a large collection of antique robes for sale. Her "Lady's Ching Dynasty robe," at $4,600, is impressive in its bulk and its lavish use of silk. The full, coral body is finely stitched with Mandarins and fancy birds in shades of emerald green and sapphire blue. The wide yellow sleevebands, which reflect the Chinese aversion to displaying the hands in public, are embroidered with peacocks strutting along a tranquil Chinese riverbank.

Dainty, embroidered silk slippers, bejeweled belts and handbags on silken ropes — all in traditional Chinese designs — round out the "East Meets West" collection. Accessories cost $15 to $80.

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a five by seven picture. During the second week with a wallet size picture and write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement. Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to "The Daily Reflector" one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

CARDS EXHIBITED WASHINGTON (AP) — Official Christmas cards from every president since Dwight D. Eisenhower have been placed on exhibit in the National Museum of American History.

The collection, donated by Hallmark Cards, also includes other greetings associated with recent First Families.

The 21 cards on view at the museum include eight official greetings from the two Eisenhower administrations, two cards from John F. Kennedy's years in the White House, one card from President Lyndon B. Johnson, five cards from President Richard M. Nixon, three cards from the administration of President Gerald R. Ford, the 1977 greeting of President Carter, and President Reagan's Christmas card of 1981.

Hostess, Too, Should Enjoy Christmas Feast

Everyone, including your in-laws, is awaiting the Christmas feast you have prepared. You want everything to be perfect, but trying to turn out a dozen delicious dishes has worn you to a frazzle.

If this is the way you think you will feel Christmas day, "remember, you are supposed to be having a good time, too," says Dr. Nadine Tope, extension specialist-in-charge of foods and nutrition at North Carolina State University.

Keep the menu simple. "This will give you more time to spend with your guests and usually gives you foods that are lower in cost and calories," Dr. Tope points out.

And if something does go wrong, relax. "The world won't come to an end if your pumpkin pie crust is burned," says the extension specialist.

Here are some ways to remedy common problems:

The turkey is still frozen. Is it completely frozen? The quickest way to thaw the bird is in cold — not hot — water. Make sure it is in a water tight wrapping and then place it in cold water. Change the water every half hour. A 12-pound turkey will be ready to cook in six hours; a 20 pound bird will take eight hours.

Do you have access to a microwave oven? Defrost the turkey in it. If you don't own a microwave, maybe you can use a neighbor's or a relative's oven.

If you are using a commercially stuffed and frozen turkey, check the label. Chances are it is supposed to be placed in the oven frozen.

The commercially stuffed and frozen turkey has been defrosted.

Sorry, but it isn't safe to eat. Salmonella bacteria is often associated with poultry and poultry products, and an estimated 2½ million cases occur each year.

A number of local restaurants will be serving the traditional Christmas meal. Take the family out, and serve coffee and dessert at home.

The turkey isn't done, but everything else is.

Slice the bird and finish cooking it in the microwave.

The turkey is dry. Make a little extra gravy.

The turkey meat shreds as it is sliced.

Did you let it sit for five to ten minutes before carving? If you didn't, carve the minimum amount now. When it comes time for seconds, the meat will be ready.

Is the knife sharp? If not, get another one.

The green beans are too salty.

Peel a large Irish potato, and put it in with the beans. The potato will absorb some of the saltiness. Some people drain off the liquid, add more and try to cook the salt out, but this washes nutrients down the drain.

The congealed salad falls apart as you take it from the mold.

If the damage is minor, a garnish may cover it. If this isn't possible, slice it up and serve it on a bed of greens with garnish.

The cake cracks and breaks into pieces as you remove it from the pan.

A layer of frosting will hide many flaws. Or serve it sliced with ice cream and topping.

The gravy is lumpy.

Mash it through a colander or strain it. One way to avoid lumpy gravy is to take your time. If the grease is too hot, it may not be possible to smooth the flour out.

The creamed potatoes are lumpy, no matter how long they are beaten.

Did you use baking potatoes? Some variety of potatoes are better suited for whipping. Red-skinned potatoes cream well, as do most cooking potatoes. Baking potatoes have a texture which cannot be creamed.

The biscuits are burned.

Throw them-out and begin again. A package of refrigerated biscuits or biscuit mix will come in handy.

Check your oven rack. Make sure it wasn't too close to the heating element to make room for the bird, or your second batch of biscuits will be burned, too.

Your rolled cookies will not roll out.

Form them into balls and cook them that way. Derate with icing, if desired.

The crust of the pumpkin pie is burned.

Break off the edges and pipe whipped topping in it's place.

Federal Grant Will Help

The State of North Carolina was faced with the possibility of paying a large bill for the heavy damage to the William B. Umstead Bridge at Croatan Sound.

Not only was the cost of major repairs to be reckoned with but there was the cost of establishing a temporary ferry service across the sound to accommodate travelers to and from the mainland.

Repairs which are now underway are expected to cost $387,000. The cost of the ferry service, engineering work and other expenses sent the estimates for the total project to $1.03 million.

The extensive expense came at a time when highway funds are shrinking to the point where there are fears there will not be any money remaining for new highway construction.

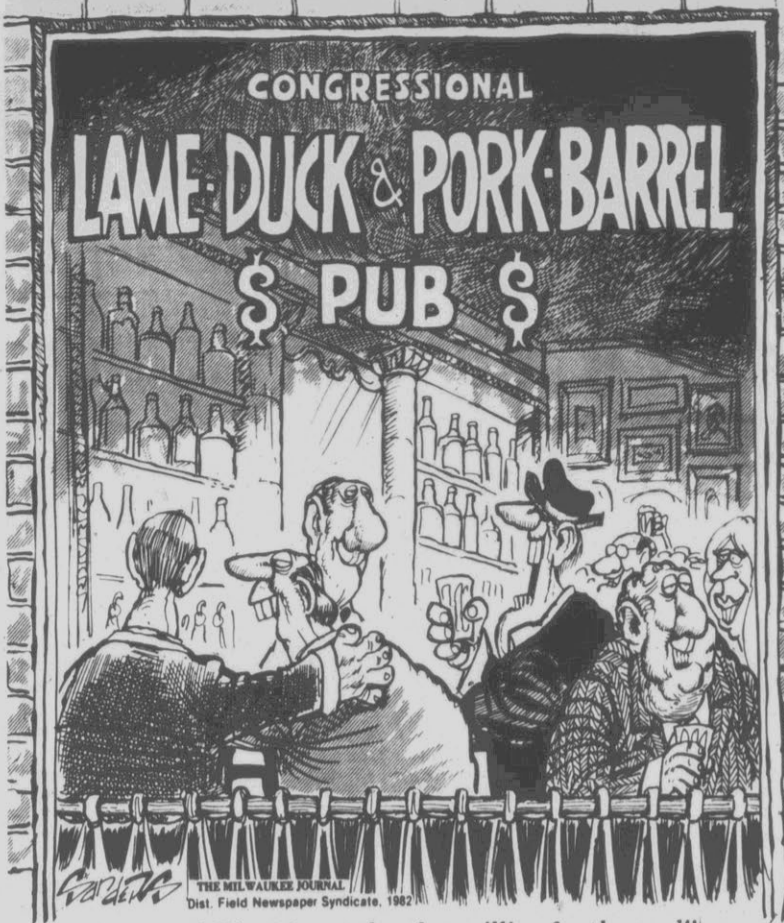

At the same time it was clear that the Department of Transportation had to proceed without any delay in setting up the ferry service and getting the needed repairs underway. So the financial obligation had to be assumed.

Fortunately last week some relief came. Sen. Jesse Helms announced that the U.S. Department of Agriculture had approved a $1 million grant to finance the repairs.

Gov. Hunt had declared a state of emergency following the bridge damage and the state requested the federal funds.

"We're delighted," a spokesman in the governor's office said.

So are we. The bridge work will be done and it will not be a drain on the state's dwindling highway funds.

"Barkeep! Gimme another few million for the road!"

Foundations Threatened

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — President Reagan's defeat on the MX missile, trouble enough in itself, threatens the foundation of his foreign policy with the prospect of future defections by pro-defense congressmen that would undermine rearmament.

The most stunning defector on the MX was Rep. Charles Bennett of Florida, a defense stalwart and second-ranking Democrat on the House Armed Services Committee. He said the MX costs too much and voted against it last Tuesday. That might set the pattern for Senate defections, including conservative Republican senator William Armstrong of Colorado.

Thus, the president would be unable to counter his setback in the House with a comeback in the Senate. That would advertise to Soviet leader Yuri Andropov that the antinuclear movement is weakening the U.S. just as it has weakened Western Europe.

The threat to Reagan's foreign policy goes beyond the denial of production funds for the MX. The House has cut money for production of the new Pershing missiles to be deployed in Western Europe late next year. The Senate Republican whip, Sen. Ted Stevens, is sponsoring a 23,000 man cutback in the U.S. troop ceiling for NATO.

These moves, whether motivated by budget or political considerations, climaxed when the House killed MX money by 69 votes — a margin that shocked the White House. It did not, however, shock such pro-defense lawmakers as Wisconsin senator Bob Kasten. "We all ran on a strong defense plank," Kasten told us, "but anyone can see that backing for strong defense is crumbling and unraveling right before our eyes."

Sen. Armstrong is under heavy pressure from Colorado's nuclear-freeze movement to vote against the MX. He has a perfect pro-defense voting record for his first four years in the Senate. But Armstrong is up for reelection in 1984, and an intimate described that as "requiring a change or two" in the senator's approach to the MX.

The white House and Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger have been receiving harsher Capitol cloakroom criticism than at any previous time. Under attack are their lamentable MX record the past two years and their ignorance about anti-MX strength in the House. But more important to the president and his national security advisers than the criticism at home is how Reagan looks abroad.

Defeat of the MX plays into the hands of the antinuclear movement in Europe. Peace activists are armed with the argument that if the Americans will not plant the MX in U.S. soil, the Europeans should not have to plant Pershing missiles in NATO soil.

"The House vote sent a powerful message to Europe," former national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski told us. Europe's reflexive reaction was demonstrated last year when Weinberger briefly toyed with putting the MX missile at sea; European political leaders immediately sought a similar basing solution for the Pershings.

Even worse is the probable reaction in the Kremlin to the MX debacle, which demonstrated lack of presidential mastery over national defense. voting only hours after a Soviet anti-MX warning trumpeted by Defense Minister Dmitri Ustinov, the House temporarily disarmed the president in superpower diplomacy.

Sculpture to Honor Viet Vets

A model of a Vietnam memorial sculpture has been approved by the N.C. Historical Commission.

The model shows two soldiers moving an injured comrade from the battlefield with one looking skyward for a rescue helicopter as another guards their movements.

The work would be done by sculptor Abbe Godwin with the $150,000 it would cost to be raised by public subscription. The sculpture would be placed on a site to be chosen in Raleigh.

The work is designed as a memorial to the 206,000 North Carolina Vietnam era veterans. There were 1,500 North Carolinians killed in the conflict and some 17,000 were wounded.

For Americans fighting in Vietnam it was not a glorious era. For many there was downright hostility when they returned home. They did their duty, however, and did it well under the circumstances.

The planned memorial sculpture seems little enough to do to honor North Carolinians who found themselves caught up in this winless war.

Imagination, Too

By PAUL T. O'CONNOR
RALEIGH — It would be nice if we had more money for education but we can still do a better job of teaching with the money we have, a Minnesota educator told a group of N.C. State University educators recently. Education's first need is not money, he says. It's imagination.

catalogued the materials they'd need. Then they telephoned businesses in search of donations. They found people willing to donate everything — railroad ties, old tires, several truckloads of sand — except $9 worth of spikes.

skills to conduct those projects.

Each project had four elements. First, there had to be a real need — like the need for a new schoolyard. Secondly, collaboration between teacher and student was required. Third, step-by-step evaluation — finish a phase of the project and then have (Please Turn To Page 5)

PAUL T. O'CONNOR (Nathan sprung for those.) The children then built the new park and are now playing in it.

The project required that the children write letters, use the phone book and talk on the telephone, and use arithmetic. Other classes, at different levels, conducted a hotline service to help consumers with problems, repainted an entire graffiti-covered school with murals, and made a movie about their school. All taught the students how to research and plan a project. They then used their school-taught

Other Editors Say Proficiency Law?

(Morganton News-Herald)

Already this deer season in North Carolina, nine people have been killed in apparent hunting accidents. Others have been wounded by gunshot but have survived.

Most of us know personally of people who have either been killed or wounded by hunters. Many of us may have read columnist Jack Starrett's recent account about his having been shot three times in one year — by the same hunter. Fortunately Mr. Starrett was able to live to amuse us with the tale some years later.

Others haven't been so lucky. Just three years ago, on Thanksgiving Eve, 1979, two deer hunters were killed in our neighboring forests; killed by a third member of their hunting party.

We mustn't allow this kind of high "accident" statistic to go on. Everyone who carries a gun afield also carries with him a responsibility to see to it that he conforms both with the laws of the state, but also of mankind, in not allowing his zealotry to grow into carelessness. Far too many people are not ready for that kind of responsibility.

We agree with our fellow editorial writer in the Elkin Tribune who has this to say about sport hunting: "Before anyone takes to field with a gun or other lethal weapon, he should be trained and competent in the rules of safety, knowledge of his weapon and habits of his quarry. He should be properly equipped to handle emergencies and attired with clear markings to signal other hunters that he is not an animal moving through the undergrowth."

Other states require every hunter to pass a gun safety course and demonstrate his proficiency with a firearm to obtain a hunting license. North Carolina doesn't do this, but it should.

No one gets shot accidentally unless someone has broken a safety rule. It would be in the best interest of not only hunters, but others who go Christmas tree-hunting, hiking, or other outdoor sporting activities, for those who would practice sport hunting as a traditional and enjoyable pastime to also know what they are about once they move off the concrete and into the forests and woodlands.

Next, The Humorpedist

Two friends of mine, Dr. Laurence Peter, author of "The Peter Principle," and Bill Dana, a TV comedy writer and inventor of the Jose Jimenez character, have authored a book titled "The Laughter Prescription" (Ballantine Books $5.95).

The idea, as publicized originally by Norman Cousins, is that laughter is very important to curing illness. It can affect the cardiovascular system, release tension, change attitudes and stimulate endorphins in the brain which are natural painkillers.

If Dr. Peter's scientific facts are true (and for the first time physicians are taking laughter seriously), we may soon have a new medical specialty call "Humorpedics." "Intern, what's wrong with the patient?"

"He's lost his sense of humor. We're hoping to get a transplant from a comedian in Las Vegas who dropped $750,000 in a casino and has left his body to us when the people there try to collect." "It may not get here in time. Give him two Laurel and Hardy reels, and 10 cc's of Groucho Marx." "It doesn't seem to affect him. We put him on two hours of Henny Youngman and he didn't even smile." "Give me my Richard Nixon rubber mask. Mr. Rosenbaum, look up here. 'My Fellow Americans. I am not a crook' Ha, ha, ha." "He's not responding, sir."

ART BUCHWALD

"Let's resort to the old chair trick. Intern, you start sitting down in the chair, and I'll pull it out from under you."

"Do I have to, sir? The last time you used that medical technique I was in a back brace for a month."

"Son, if you're going into 'Humorpedics' you don't think of yourself. Your only concern is to make the patient laugh."

"Yes, sir."

"Mr. Rosenbaum, watch this. Young Doctor Kronkite is going to sit down ... Ooops, sorry about that, Kronkite. What's the trouble, nurse?"

"Rosenbaum isn't laughing, doctor, but Kronkite is writhing in pain."

"Send him down to Emergency and inject him with two chapters of Benchley. Miss Harlequin, do you have any banana cream pies in the medicine cabinet?"

"Oh no, Doctor! I just had my hair done."

"That's an order, nurse. Wait until you see this, Mr. Rosenbaum. It will kill you. I didn't mean that literally, of course. We're trying to make you feel better."

"Here's the pie, sir."

"Are you ready, nurse? 'Splat' Ha, ha, ha, ha, ha. Wasn't that something, Rosenbaum? You didn't think so? Wash yourself up, nurse, and send in Dr. Shecky. I think I'm going to have to have a consultation."

What's the problem, Slapsie?"

"I did the whole treatment, Shecky, from Laurel and Hardy to the banana pie in the nurse's face, and he doesn't respond. I've run out of ideas."

"Let's see the chart. Did you try reading him David Stockman's budget?"

"I'm afraid to use it. It could either make him laugh or put him into a coma."

"Has anyone tried tickling him?"

"You know that's unethical, Shecky. If we touch the patient we could be slapped with a million dollar malpractice suit."

"I have an idea. We used this treatment at Doctors Hospital when I interned there. I'll be right back."

"Where are you going?"

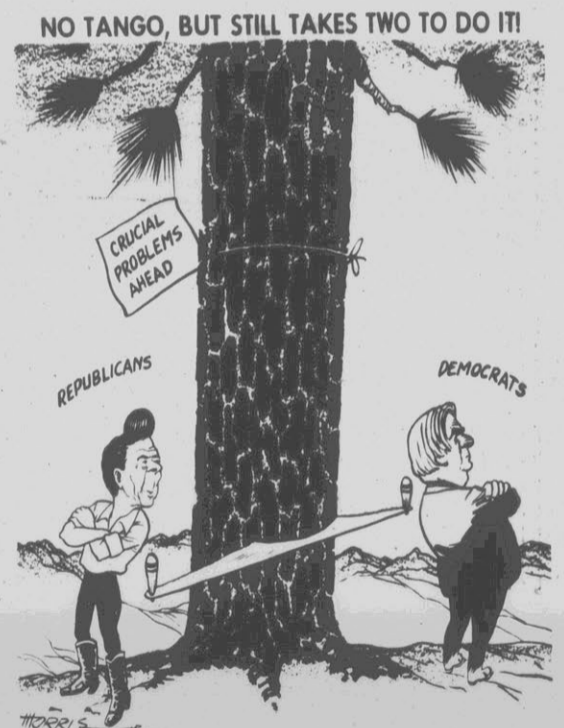

"To the accounting office."

"Don't worry, Mr. Rosenbaum. Dr. Shecky is the greatest humorpedist in the country. He once implanted a laugh track in Ed McMahon's chest. Here he comes."

"Mr. Rosenbaum, take a look at this."

"He's laughing, Shecky! He can't stop laughing! What did you give him?"

"I show him his hospital bill for the week. It never fails to break a patient up."

Is Stock Market That High?

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — Now that the stock market has soared to what we thought were record high levels, some people are saying it's a lot of bull.

The market, according to them, remains buried deep in used silage when you measure the popular averages in non-inflated dollars. Once again, they say, that old inflation devil has deceived us. We've been counting phony money.

Nothing new in that. Uncle Sam once employed the same devil to publicize the seemingly huge amounts a person could accumulate by purchasing savings bonds. The savings figures did indeed grow with the years, but the buying power didn't.

More recently, competitors for your Individual Retirement Account have been telling you how you can retire a millionaire, never bothering to inform you that it is possible only if you count in highly inflated dollars.

Now, it appears, the Dow Jones industrial average, which seemed to have reached an all-time high of 1065 during the first week of November, really has a very long way to go before it really gets into heavenly pastures.

A few brokerage houses have pointed this out, mainly for the bullish purpose of convincing customers there are still lots of gains ahead. And Media General, the publisher, has long maintained a constant dollar stock average.

But generally speaking, most Americans think the stock market recently charged to a record high. And their thinking may be fallacious.

Wright Investors' Service, a statistically oriented analyst of corporate and investment information, points out that the Dow average would have to be priced at 2125 in 1982 dollars to be equivalent to the 1052 reached in 1973.

That's a long way to go, and still it would not be the true all-time high. Back in 1966, when the dollar really was worth something, as they say, the DJ average reached 995. In 1982 dollars that would equal a reading of 2750.

It's recent high of 1065, says John Wright, president of the Bridgeport, Conn. firm, "puts the Dow at an anemic 525 in 1973 dollars, and 385 in 1966 dollars, levels that can scarcely be considered overvaluation."

Comparisons of price-earnings ratios also suggest that the market isn't overpriced, despite its big gains.

As Wright observes, the Standard & Poor's 500-stock index is now priced at 10 times earnings over the past 12 months and 9.3 times earnings projected for the next 12 months. Both ratios are far below average, said Wright. By his calculations, the 50-year average price-earnings ratio is 12, and the average ratio during six stock market peaks of the 1960s and 1970s was 19.

In his view, a meaningful comparison can be made with the 1975 stock market when, with a full year of advances ahead of it, the S&P was priced at 9.9 times the previous 12 months earnings and 9.6 times the next 12.

But, in spite of all the bullish arithmetic being tossed around, there is indeed a comparison suggesting the market is overvalued. Bonds, that is, still offer a better current return, with high-grade issues averaging 12.5 percent.

All that will be corrected, it seems, when corporate profits rise again. And that is straight from the bull's mouth.

Strength For Today

"I AM THE WAY"

A man going through a jungle in Africa discovered to his consternation that he had lost his way. At last he came upon a native who said he could show him how to get out of the jungle. The native took his broad knife and began cutting a pathway. But the man, still alarmed, cried out to the native, "Are you sure this is the right way?" The native called back over his shoulder, "There is no way. I am the way. Follow me."

Although Jesus was a great teacher, his command was not "Follow my teachings", but "Follow me." He did not say he would show us the way of life. He said, "I am the way, the truth, and the life."

We are saved not by Christ's teaching but by his divine sacrifice in our behalf. We are sustained not primarily by his words but by his presence.

Christianity is an attempt to make men aware of the reality and potency of the Unseen Presence. — Elisha Douglass

Tax Break

WASHINGTON (AP) — At least 100 members of Congress don't have permanent homes in the areas they represent, but quite a few still take advantage of a tax break for maintaining two dwellings, U.S. News & World Report magazine says.

Forty-four members neither own nor rent dwellings in their home districts according to a survey in the magazine published Sunday. The survey showed at least 51 others rent out the homes in their districts, and a handful jointly own homes with relatives or rent from parents.

It is legal for lawmakers to abandon their home state residences. The Constitution requires only that they be "inhabitants" of their states when elected.

Many of the congressmen take advantage of a 1952 law that says all members, for tax purposes, live in their home states and can claim $3,000 a year in deductions, regardless of where they live, the magazine said.

To Promote Herpes Drug

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Burroughs Wellcome Co. may spend up to $10 million in an advertising effort aimed at boosting disappointing sales of its treatment for herpes.

Dr. David T. Durack, a Duke University researcher who helped the Research Triangle Park firm develop a drug called acyclovir, said the product has a huge potential market.

"If you had to search for a dream disease for a drug manufacturer, it's herpes," he said of the sexually-transmitted disease. "Herpes is usually non-fatal. It's recurrent. There's a high level of psychological anxiety associated with it. There's a high level of public knowledge about the disease."

Burroughs Wellcome was the first company to have acyclovir licensed by the Food and Drug Administration. Tests show that the drug may reduce pain, shorten healing time and reduce the time herpes remains infectious, officials said.

To help alert herpes sufferers to the prescription medication, Burroughs Wellcome has introduced an educational film featuring advice columnist Ann Landers and "Herpes Alert" brochures. In addition, free "Sex and the Herpes Virus" kits, tell doctors how to discuss herpes with patients and tell patients how to discuss it with spouses and sex partners.

the class discuss what they did right and what they did wrong. Finally, there had to be a finished product, something they could look at.

Such participation programs teach children "reading, riting and rithmetic", but they add responsibility, too. And they show youngsters what it's like to achieve something. "If you show a 7-year-old that he can redesign his schoolyard, maybe when he's older he'll be ready for something bigger."

Advancement in school shouldn't come on the basis of classroom units completed, Nathan says. Rather, children should advance as they demonstrate that they have achieved an educational goal. Those goals should be laid out plain and simple so there'll be no misunderstanding. In this regard, he says, states have taken the first step by requiring passage of competency tests for high school graduates.

He'd go beyond paper and pencil tests, however, and make each student demonstrate that he can maintain personal health and hygiene, balance a checkbook, make a telephone call, and research a family history.

Education can be more interesting for children and more demanding of them, Nathan says, without requiring more tax money.

Cold Moves In As Skies Clear

By The Associated Press

A high pressure system today swept away the winter storm that dumped up to 5 inches of snow on North Carolina this weekend, bringing clearing skies and the coldest temperatures of the season, the National Weather Service reported.

Along the coast, where high winds and rough seas caused trouble for fishermen, a small craft warning remained in effect early this morning.

In the mountain region, Maggie Valley, Rosman and West Jefferson all reported lows of 8 degrees; Canton and Marshall reported 9 degrees; and Asheville Airport dipped to a record low of 16 degrees.

Ski operators greeted Sunday's dusting of snow with joy.

"It's like seeing Santa Claus come down the chimney," said Grady Moretz, president of the North Carolina Ski Areas Association and operator of the Appalachian Ski Mountain near Blowing Rock. "It looked like we were never going to be looked down upon with snow."

Moretz said 4 inches of snow fell Saturday night and Sunday morning to cap 8 inches of artificial snow his workers produced.

Meanwhile, drivers were subjected to travelers advisories in several counties. The state Highway Patrol did not report any major accidents stemming from the conditions.

Sections as far east as the Piedmont reported 2-4 inches of snow and more than 2 inches of rain fell at Wilmington and New Bern.

Three state ferry runs — from Hatteras Island to Ocracoke to Swan Quarter and from Ocracoke to Cedar Island — were cancelled Sunday morning because of winds gusting to 40 mph, according to a ferry spokesman. The emergency ferry for Manns Harbor to Manteo also was halted because the conditions on Croatan Sound were dangerous.

Dare County deputies reported tidal washover between Buxton and Avon, and washover was expected later today in the Rodanthe and Nags Head areas as seas continue to build.

Temperatures dropped into the teens and low 20s over inland sections of the state overnight while readings near the coast were in the mid to upper 20s. On the Outer Banks, the mercury hovered in the mid 30s with winds gusting to around 35 mph.

Can See After Soviet Eye Treatments

By WILLIAM E. SCHULZ
Associated Press Writer
DALTON, Ga. (AP) — A year ago, Todd Cantrell was in danger of walking into trees he couldn't see, but now the 13-year-old is something of a sandlot slugger after undergoing controversial eye treatments in Moscow.

Todd, who suffers from the debilitating eye disease retinitis pigmentosa, was treated in December 1981 in the Soviet Union. A return trip is planned for next month.

In the controversial Russian treatment, a solution containing ribonucleic acid — a protein that helps determine heredity — is injected into the eyes.

U.S. doctors say the injections have no value, but since Todd's highly-publicized Moscow trip, at least a half-dozen other Americans have gone there for treatment.

"The opinion of American ophthalmology is there is no evidence the therapy is beneficial at this point," said Dr. Robert Marmer, an ophthalmologist who recently examined Todd. "Nothing has been documented that we can determine."

His examination showed Todd's vision has not improved — but neither has it degenerated in the past year. Todd is seeing better, Marmer said, because he is making better use of what little vision he has.

"All of these various recent events have, I think, encouraged him to utilize whatever function he does have, that I don't think he was using to its maximum before," Marmer said.

Yet Todd feels the injections have enlarged his world. Even with his impaired vision, Todd now plays baseball.

"He batted one clear across the highway," his mother, Betty Cantrell, declared proudly. "That's meant a great deal to Todd. Before, he couldn't do these things."

"When me and Daddy get out here in front of the apartment, I like to pitch," Todd said during a recent interview. "Before, I couldn't pitch at all. Now I can just get out there and throw the ball and it goes straight to him."

Todd also said, "I can play kickball. A friend of mine, he told me I was their No. 1 pitcher in kickball. Before, I just couldn't see the ball coming up to kick. (Now) I can see it."

For Kyle Cantrell, Todd's father, the improvement means the two can do things together — like other fathers and sons.

"It really made me feel good that we could go out and play together like a fella with a child who didn't have this problem," Cantrell said.

"Before we went over (to Moscow), I was afraid whenever he went outside he would walk into something and get hurt... I was scared to death whenever he was outside," Cantrell said.

The public attention resulting from the Moscow trip has been fun for Todd — and apparently beneficial. Among other things, he got to meet some members of the Atlanta Braves and throw out the first ball when the National League club hosted a baseball game.

But Marmer said it is too early to tell if the treatment will help in the long run.

He said it "is encouraging that there has been no regression" in Todd's vision, although the disease sometimes goes into remission.

"Right now, we can't attribute it to the treatment... Over a five-year period, if it still remains unchanged, I'd say that would be significant," Marmer said.

Mrs. Cantrell said the family has received an official invitation to return to Moscow's Helmholtz In-

Former Jaycees Tell Of Fictitious Chapter Scam

By ELISSA McCRARY
Associated Press Writer
CONCORD, N.C. (AP) — More than a dozen former Jaycees testified in the Jamsam trial last week, revealing a vast network of fictitious chapters created from misapplied charity funds.

Testimony was scheduled to resume today in Cabarrus County Superior Court in the trial of former Jaycees President Johnny Lee Fletcher, who is accused of misusing more than $26,000 in charity funds during his one-year reign. The 41-year-old Concord man could face 80 years in prison if convicted.

Larry Craig Strickland of Raleigh testified that when he was president of the Pine Level Jaycees in 1978-1979, four of eight new chapters he turned in to state Jaycees headquarters were fictitious. He said at one time, he had to borrow $500 to pay dues for one of the chapters.

"I did it to win an award," Strickland said. He said as a result of the phony chapters, he got a plaque naming Pine Level "Chapter of the Month."

"Awards was what it was all about, period," said a former Jaycees official waiting to testify, who asked not to be identified. "You had to win awards or everybody thought you weren't doing anything. And to win awards, you had to get your membership up."

In the first week of the trial, another former official said he received 100 awards in one year for setting up 48 new chapters, 31 of which were bogus. Another said he established eight new chapters in one year — four of them phony — and got a $500 bank loan to pay membership dues for one of them.

The scandal surfaced in the spring of 1980. A probe by the State Bureau of Investigation showed that nearly $250,000 in funds intended for charity was used to cover Jaycees operating expenses.

Most of the money was raised through the sale of grape jelly for the N.C. Burn Center in Chapel Hill, and the case was dubbed "Jamsam."

Prosecutor Lester Chalmers has alleged that Fletcher and the other former Jaycees created "paper" chapters to win awards for membership growth. Fletcher won a free trip to the Jaycees World Congress in Johannesburg, South Africa, for breaking a national record for new chapters in 1979.

Attorneys for Fletcher maintain he did not know anything was amiss until the scandal was revealed.

The trials of two other former Jaycees officials charged in the case are expected to be scheduled early next year.

Social Security Bd. Says Reagan Must Act Soon

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of the Social Security reform commission say President Reagan must act soon if he wants to use the panel as "a whipping boy" to push an unpopular but necessary rescue plan for the system through Congress.

Without an agreement backed by the White House for a blueprint, Congress is unlikely to find its own timely solution to the problem of mounting Social Security deficits, they suggested.

The panel's chairman and a top Republican senator also agree that any plan must include a mix of higher payroll taxes and lower cost-of-living increases to keep the old age fund from drying up in the 1980s.

Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., the chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said Sunday he doubts the panel will reach an agreement at its final meeting next Friday "unless the president decides to take a look at Social Security and become actively involved."

Dole, interviewed on CBS-TV's "Face The Nation," said he has been unable to get Reagan on the telephone to confer with him on legislative business.

Alan Greenspan, chairman of the 15-member reform commission, said there already is tentative agreement on the panel that the way to solve the $150 billion to $200 billion shortfall confronting Social Security over the next seven years is through a mix of higher payroll taxes and lower benefit hikes.

Greenspan appeared on both ABC News' "This Week With David Brinkley" and Cable News Network's "Newsmaker Sunday."

"If both the speaker and the president could agree on the outlines of a specific solution, that would pretty much carry the day," Greenspan said on Cable News.

Dole said, "It seems to me we're going to have to have a mix of taxes and benefit reforms without cutting the level of present benefits, if we're going to satisfy Democrats and Republicans on the commission and in the Congress."

Dole said the White House should realize that the political "center of gravity" has shifted closer to Capitol Hill since the Republican losses in last month's elections.

Greenspan said on ABC, "Clearly, were the president and the speaker to agree, not necessarily publicly, but (if they) even acquiesce in the nature of some general agreement, I think that we probably could get unanimous or virtually unanimous commission recommendations..."

Dole said Reagan, O'Neill and others ought to press for a specific rescue plan so they can use the commission "as a whipping boy" in pushing unpopular reform legislation through the House and Senate.

"I might be willing to accelerate the taxes already in place and maybe change the mix of taxes in the next several years if in fact we could have a six-month delay" in next July's cost-of-living increase, Dole said.

Dole suggested that a package relying on benefit reforms for 60 percent of its savings and tax hikes for 40 percent might be acceptable.

Sen. William Armstrong, R-Colo., another commission member who also appeared on the Brinkley show, said he could support any solution except raising the payroll tax or using general revenues for Social Security.

"We ought to slow down the rate of increase (in benefits) and if we do that, we can solve the problem..." said Armstrong. "We're anticipating over $300 billion in cost-of-living adjustments in Social Security between now and the end of the decade, and that's nearly twice as much as the total amount of the shortfall."

Dole said he understood that Greenspan was engaged in talks with White House Chief of Staff James Baker III and other Reagan aides, as well as with O'Neill.

But Greenspan, asked if talks were underway, replied, "Not at the moment," but he said that in the past two weeks the creators of the commission — Reagan and congressional leaders — have shown "a significantly increased interest" in having the panel strike a compromise.

Dallas Farmers Cultivate Tax Loophole In Land Around City

DALLAS (AP) — Some urban "farmers" are harvesting sizable profits because of a property tax loophole that crops up when they graze cattle or bale hay on open land around Dallas.

Because of the loophole, cows graze within view of skyscrapers at some of Dallas County's busiest intersections.

By putting their extra property to agricultural use, landowners ranging from real estate giants to a local church are trimming millions of dollars from their property tax bills, the Dallas Times Herald reported Sunday.

Many of these qualified "farmers" never set foot on the land, but lease it out for farming while managing other businesses.

Under state property tax laws designed to protect family farmers, land that qualifies as open agricultural space is taxed on the value of the food or fiber it can produce, not on its market value.

"They plant hay on it or run a few cows on it and it qualifies," said Dallas County Tax Collector John Childs. "The law is very loose on it. I think the intent was to protect family farmers. It just didn't work out that way." Records show that in Dallas County, property that would sell for more than $600 million can be taxed only at its $7.5 million production value.

With 98 percent of the value of the qualified land removed from its tax rolls, Dallas County will lose $1 million in tax revenue this year. The city of Dallas and other taxing districts in the state will lose untold millions.

Last week, the Dallas County Appraisal Review Board rejected an appeal by the city and reaffirmed its decision that 55 acres located at one of North Dallas' busiest intersections qualifies as open agricultural land.

Developer Ray Nasher leases the land — in the shadow of a skyscraper and across a highway from a shopping mall — to a farmer who bales hay on it once a year.

Because of his hay crop, Nasher's city property tax bill will drop from $87,000 to $56 this year. When the land is developed, he will have to pay five years of back taxes on it plus 7 percent interest. Until then, he can invest the money elsewhere.

"The fact that Mr. Nasher is a man of means is of no consequence," said Alvin Badger, the developer's attorney. "It's just like every homestead exemption in the state of Texas. If you have a homestead, you qualify."

Big-time developers like Nasher aren't the only people qualifying for the tax break. Included among Dallas County's "farmers" are hundreds of individuals and small companies ranging from the Dallas Gun Club and a Grand Prairie car dealer to a floor company and a church.

The Christian Tabernacle Church acquired 15 acres in Cedar Hill two years ago and lets a neighbor graze his cattle on the property, reducing the land's taxable value from $86,000 to less than $100.

"I don't want to beat the law, but I do want to take advantage of what we're legally entitled to," said Pastor Warren Green.

State Rep. Wayne Peveto, D-Beaumont, sponsor of the tax law, said it was intended to help family farmers, especially those on the fringes of growing cities where land values were rising.

But officials with the Dallas County Appraisal District will try convincing the Legislature next year to tighten the measure, a spokeswoman said.

"We're certainly going to petition our legislators to make the law clearer," said Lee Hailey, assistant to the appraisal district's director.

Orphan Bridges Haunting U. S. County Engineers

By RICK HAMPSON and JERRY SCHWARTZ
Associated Press Writers

PERTH AMBOY, N.J. (AP) — They reach over railroad tracks, but the railroads that built them have abandoned them. They support local and state roads, but local and state agencies want no part of them.

Thousands of such orphan bridges, crumbling relics of the Steam Age, carry cars, trucks and buses over tracks throughout the nation, and there is not a county engineer who has not seen them in his nightmares.

"Nobody's maintaining them, nobody wants them and nobody has the money for them," said John Reiser, the Middlesex, N.J., County Engineer. "In 25 years in government, I've never seen such a shutdown in funding. A bridge has no constituency and the public just does not appreciate the danger."

In Illinois, officials have asked the state Commerce Commission to force railroads to repair 60 particularly bad bridges.

What's wrong with them? "Beams, embankments, you name it," said Roland Eckert, chief counsel for the Illinois Transportation Department. "If a bridge can have a problem, these bridges have it."

Although such orphaned bridges are found wherever the railroads ran, no one knows how many are rusting and rotting and cracking around the United States. But the industrial Northeast, with the oldest bridges, the poorest railroads and the most obscure maintenance provisions, suffers the most.

Reiser is foster father to some of these bridges. The Washington Street bridge in Perth Amboy is a particularly bad case, with retaining walls that list 15 to 20 degrees and makeshift wooden supports that allow it to support nothing heavier than a Buick.

When Reiser's crews set about reinforcing one end of the bridge, "We couldn't figure out what made it stand up," he said.

Trying to determine the spans' legal guardians can be equally puzzling.

Private railroads built the bridges and usually agreed to maintain them, except for the actual road deck. But the rail industry declined after World War II and the bridges were ignored.

The public agencies that now run the trains generally deny responsibility for the bridges. Conrail trains run under 3,374 bridges around the nation; Amtrak trains run under more than 600 in just the Northeast corridor between Boston and Washington. Both say the legislation that gave them the bankrupt railroad lines assigned them no responsibility for overhead bridges.

In Mount Vernon, N.Y., for example, three major bridges over a railroad cut are so weak they have been closed to trucks and buses. City officials trying to get them fixed must seek aid from the Penn Central bankruptcy trustees, who hold title to the tracks, and Conrail, which operates the commuter line until Jan. 1, 1983 — when the Metropolitan Transit Authority takes over.

The problem, said Harry Stanton of the N.Y. State Department of Transportation, is that "we don't have healthy railroads." Faced with prohibitive repair bills, a railroad simply abandons a line and its bridges, he explained.

An enormous maintenance job has thus shifted from the private to the public sector. And with government budgets so tight, there is the possibility that any one of these bridges could collapse from neglect as the town, the county, the state, the public authority and the federal agency each tries to dodge responsibility.

Eugene Schneider, director of the New Jersey County and Municipal Study Commission, said the some county officials "are even afraid to acknowledge them because they're afraid they'll be held liable if something goes wrong." The attitude, he said, seems to be "we don't want to know..."

There is a lot to ignore. New Jersey has more than 600 orphan bridges that need about $400 million in repairs, according to the state's county engineers. Jersey City alone needs $6 million to reopen six closed bridges.

A year ago state engineers prepared a list of 98 such bridges in need of emergency repairs. Fewer than 10 have been repaired so far.

In New York City, about 200 of the city's 622 railroad bridges are in what George Zaimes, an engineer with the State Department of Transportation, described as "bad shape."

In Connecticut, a 1978 report concluded that 96 bridges carrying roads over tracks needed $140 million in repairs. Four years later, only 13 have been, are being or are about to be rehabilitated. Many of the rest have been closed to trucks or closed entirely.

Last week Pennsylvania Gov. Dick Thornburgh signed into law a $188 million program to fix or replace 208 of the state's worst orphan bridges. That still leaves 800 bridges, many running over abandoned rail lines.

No orphan bridge has collapsed yet, because someone usually steps in with a stopgap solution at the last minute, while also disclaiming responsibility.

"It's a helluva problem and it's getting worse," said John Larkin of the New Jersey Department of Transportation. "All we can do now is recommend closure when a bridge gets bad enough."

But bridges carry buses to schools, trucks to factories, shoppers to stores. Close them and people scream.

"The railroad is everywhere. ... We can't get over it and we can't get under it," complained Thomas Melhorn, general manager of Western Kraft Paper Co. in Warren County, N.J.

Melhorn said his company would spend an extra $59,000 a year on trucking because the county cut off the factory's primary route when it closed a bridge with a rotting deck.

The only other route forces truckers to drive down the center of the road to clear a low overpass. If nothing is done, Melhorn said, "We'd have to consider relocating the plant."

Deputy Commissioner Arthur Unger of Mount Vernon's Department of Public Works admitted he was worried.

"These bridges were designed for horse-drawn vehicles," he said. "What if you get someone with an IQ of your shoe size driving a concrete truck and he doesn't want to drive a couple of miles out of his way and he's driven over the bridge before and nothing happened?"

Jobs Bills Said Not Enough For Repairing Cracked Foundations

NEW YORK (AP) — The jobs bills being debated in Congress might get some potholes filled and some bridges painted, but none seems likely to provide enough money or skills to rebuild the nation's cracking foundation.

Although politicians are intrigued by the idea of hiring the unemployed to preserve and protect the nation's bridges, roads and tunnels, critics warn that quick, easy tasks to occupy needy workers might not save needy structures.

Roger Vaughan of the Council of State Planning Agencies in Washington warned against "a fatal confusion of two separate problems — creating jobs and repairing infrastructure. We've got to get past the pork barrel."

Filling potholes cannot save a deteriorated roadbed, nor painting redeem a bridge already weakened by rust, he added.

In addition, there is a category of structure in the public domain that is unlikely to be helped by any repair money provided by President Reagan's gas tax bill or other jobs-creating proposals.

The so-called "orphan bridges," for example — those built decades ago by the railroads to span tracks but since abandoned to whatever public agencies care for the streets and roads atop the bridges — are crumbling precisely because no one can determine who is responsible for their maintenance.

Pat Choate, co-author of an infrastructure study "America in Ruins," agreed a permanent policy was needed.

"There is a danger that this little flurry will obstruct the view that we need a long-term federal capital budget," he said.

But he disagreed with Vaughan over the value of applying a jobs plan to the deteriorating infrastructure. Choate noted that many of the unemployed were skilled or semiskilled construction workers, and that hiring them could meet a real need.

"States and localities have stopped much of their work altogether" and have projects "backed up in the pipeline. We're not talking about boondoggle jobs," Choate said.

Whatever a jobs bill's impact on unemployment, it is clear the cost of rebuilding America's public structures — which may top $1 trillion — far outstrips even the most ambitious congressional proposals.

"The only solution to infrastructure is to spend probably twice what we're spending now," said Vaughan, who figured that about $70 billion was spent in 1981.

Hold A Host Of Price Controls

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is considering more than 150 bills designed to control the price of natural gas, which is rising in price at a record pace despite an abundance of supply.

The bills call for everything from a two-year price freeze to government-mandated renegotiation of contracts between suppliers and pipelines.

The opening salvos in an expected bitter congressional battle were scheduled this week with hearings before the Senate Energy Committee today and a House Energy subcommittee on Wednesday.

Sen. Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., and other supporters of a price freeze hope to force a vote on the issue in the waning lame-duck session, but chances of anything passing are remote because of heavy opposition and limited time.

LARGE THEFT HONG KONG (AP) — Three men robbed a jewelry shop in a hotel shopping arcade of an estimated $2.3 million worth of jewels Sunday, police said. It could be the biggest robbery in the history of the British colony.

Farm Scene

Because of reduced peanut acreage in 1982 and perhaps excessive rainfall, peanut farmers are able to market most of their crop at quota support price levels. Because additional peanuts are as much in demand as quota peanuts, some growers and shellers are looking forward to 1983. There is some talk of planting more acreage next year in order to sell additional peanuts, assuming there will again be a strong demand for them.

Hopefully, most growers will not choose to plant "hedgerow to hedgerow" to take advantage of high additional prices without contracting them first at a profit. Perhaps a better idea would be to strive for higher yields on fewer acres but tailor the production practices a little closer this coming year.

By planning during the off-season, certain corners may be cut. For instance, it is better to lime peanut land than it is to fertilize. Research has shown that peanuts do not respond to direct fertilization. So it is important to soil test ahead of time, lime with dolomitic limestone during the fall prior to planting and evaluate whether or not fertilizer is actually necessary.

Lime does indeed provide necessary calcium and magnesium as well as a more suitable habitat for root-nodulating bacteria. On-farm tests in 1982 found that limed plots gave a yield increase of 1,000 pounds per acre over unlimed plots in the same field. The fields chosen were not extremely acid (pH initially 5.5, which increased by harvest to 6.0 in limed plots.) According to Dr. Gene Sullivan, extension peanut specialist, for every dollar invested in lime, $10 was returned in these tests.

If it is known what weeds to expect in peanuts, then proper strategies for weed management may be arranged in advance of the season. Also, diseases, especially soil-borne diseases, can limit the success of some fields. Where southern stem rot or black root rot have been a problem in the past, plans need to be formulated to utilize peanut varieties that have some level of resistance to disease. NC 2 is slightly resistant to southern stem rot and NC 8C is somewhat resistant to black root rot.

Most growers know how to control weeds in a normal year but if difficult weeds like sicklepod and prickly sida (ironweed) are present or if there is a very wet year again, some good growers will be plagued with some tough weed situations.

It is wise to cut costs where possible but to leave off leafspot sprays is false economy. A better idea would be to either spray on a two-week schedule or to spray when environmental conditions are more favorable for disease development.

Along the same lines, control of southern corn root worm also yields a substantial return on investment. Both leafspot control and southern corn root worm control can increase yield and quality.

Peanut farmers should be in peanut production to make a profit. It would be in the best interest of the farmer to consider all factors of his peanut production system, evaluate the cost versus the benefit of each operation or crop input and emphasize those inputs that generate positive results. Knowing what to leave out of next year's program is as important as knowing what not to leave out.

Young Criminals Repay Their Victims In Moore County Plan

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — Farming and woodcutting done by Moore County juvenile offenders have paid thousands of dollars in restitution to crime victims this year, although few recipients know the source of the money.

The self-supporting program has helped 34 youths raise money to pay back victims in its first year of operation, said Gary Crutchfield, county youth coordinator and director of the project.

The Z. Smith Reynolds Foundation has donated $30,000 to the program so it may be spread to other areas of the state, Crutchfield said. He also hopes to expand the project, which now serves boys ages 10 to 15, to include offenders up to age 21.

Nearly all the young men might otherwise have been sent to training schools at a yearly state cost of $15,000 each, he added.

"Once a child is sent to training school, there's no way for a victim to receive restitution," Crutchfield said. "The victim remains a victim."

Most victims receiving restitution have no idea the money came from juveniles actually working for it, Crutchfield said. He simply turns in the money to the court clerk who writes the checks for restitution.

A year ago, Moore County courts sent 17 youthful offenders to training schools, 16 of them because they had not paid back their court-ordered restitution.

"Ninety-five percent of the time it's because they don't have a job. They don't have the means to pay," Crutchfield said.

Under the restitution program, juveniles spend Saturdays and school holidays working, either on the woodcutting operation during the fall and winter or the farming operation in the spring and summer.

The average offender owes about $200, primarily for larceny or breaking and entering offenses.

They are paid $3.35 an hour for the work. But $2.85 of each hourly wage is set aside for the victims of each criminal offense. The remaining 50 cents per hour is saved in a contingency fund that also goes to the victim if the offender doesn't meet his obligation.

If he pays off the entire amount, the youth gets the contingency fund.

Moore County District Court Judge Michael Beal said he has sent most juvenile offenders in his court under the program.

"I think one of our biggest problems in criminal law is restitution for the victims. This gives us an alternative when there are no jobs available," Beal said.

The program's woodcutting operation raised $7,000 in its first year, has garnered another $2,000 in just the last seven weeks, and phone calls are still coming in from buyers wanting wood.

In its first summer, the youths' farming operation grew seven acres of corn, tomatoes, cabbage, cucumbers, watermelon, cantaloupe, lima beans and okra on land donated by Whispering Pines Police Chief Sam Prim. But the farming operation has yet to be profitable.

Both sites are supervised by volunteers and by college interns from Sandhills Community College.

The youths who have gone through the restitution program have had a 10 percent recidivism rate, while those who go through training schools have a 24 percent chance of committing crime again, Crutchfield said.

All but one of the 34 youths have paid back what they owed. The one exception moved out of Moore County and could not complete the program.

If expanded to older age groups with another hoped-for $35,000 from the Governor's Crime Commission, Crutchfield expects to take in another 90 to 100 participants this year who need to pay back $30,000 to $35,000 in restitution for their crimes.

Find Body Of March Victim

CHICAGO (AP) — A 35-year-old woman who disappeared in March may have been shot to death after she was hit on the head, then put in the trunk of her car, investigators say.

The body of Diane G. Masters, vice president of the suburban Moraine Community College board, was positively identified Sunday after being found in the trunk of her 1978 Cadillac when it was pulled from a suburban canal the day before.

Dr. Robert Stein, Cook County medical examiner, said Mrs. Masters, last seen alive March 19, had been shot twice in the side of the head with a small-caliber weapon.

Series Of 9 Collisions In Greenville Saturday

An estimated $7,325 damage resulted from a series of nine traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Saturday.

Officers said heaviest damage resulted from an 8:20 a.m. collision at the intersection of Fourth and Cotanche Streets. They said a car driven by Alfred Quinn Bostic of Route 6, Greenville, collided with a fire hydrant after swerving to avoid a collision with a car he thought was pulling into his traffic lane.

Damage to the Bostic car was set at $1,500, while damage to the hydrant was placed at $25.

Cars driven by Evelyn Ward Parker of Stokes, and David Snyderwine Jr. of Route 2, Prattburg, N.Y., collided about 1:45 p.m. on Greenville Boulevard, two-tenths of a mile east of the Kirkland Drive intersection, causing $500 damage to the Parker car and $400 damage to the Snyderwine vehicle.

Police said Sandra Stancill Stokes of Route 4, Greenville, was charged with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of a 12:41 p.m. mishap on Greenville Boulevard, 300 feet west of the Kirkland Drive intersection.

Officers, who identified the driver of the second car involved as Linda Newton Moescal of Winterville, estimated damage at $350 to the Stokes car and $550 to the Moescal vehicle.

Investigators said cars driven by Carol Lynn Shacklett of 110A Eric Court, and Malanie Carol Irvin of 205 Riverbluff Road, collided about 3:28 p.m. Saturday on Arlington Boulevard, 500 feet west of the Greenville Boulevard intersection, causing an estimated $300 damage to the Shacklett car and $500 damage to the Irvin vehicle.

Officers charged Ms. Irvin with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of the mishap.

A truck driven by Kenneth Rogers Bland of Route 1, Greenville, police said, collided with a wall at the intersection of Fifth Street and Bancroft Avenue about 4:30 p.m. when the breaks failed, causing an estimated $800 damage to the vehicle.

Officers charged Ms. Irvin with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of a

A 5:34 p.m. mishap on Greenville Boulevard, 125 feet east of the Arlington Boulevard intersection involved five vehicles, officers said.

Drivers of the cars involved, police said, included: Pamela Kay Allison of Grifton; Jeffrey Brenton Shane of 313 Circle Drive; Charles Lynwood Walters of 204 Westhaven Road; William Garland Latham of Route 1, Oak City; and Timothy Wayne Brock of 1205 South Wright Road.

Damage from the mishap, which investigators said was caused by another car which did not collide with any of the other vehicles and left the scene, was set at $100 to the Shane car, $125 to the Walters car, $275 to the Latham vehicle and $300 to the Brock auto. No damage resulted to the Allison car.

Cars driven by Vergenell Person of Winterville, and Robert Marshall Gurley of Rocky Mount, collided about 11:08 a.m. on Memorial Drive, one-tenth of a mile south of the Pine Street intersection, causing an estimated $100 damage to the Person car and $450 damage to the Gurley auto.

A 1 p.m. mishap at the intersection of Cotanche Street and Reade Circle involved cars driven by Geraldine Smith McGlohon of Rocky Mount, and Keith James Smith of Route 1, Battleboro.

Officers said the Smith car collided with the McGlohon car when it stopped suddenly to avoid colliding with a third vehicle which failed to stop for a red traffic light.

Investigators, who charged Smith with following too close, and charged the driver of the third car with failing to stop for a red light, estimated damage at $300 to the McGlohon car and $250 to the Smith vehicle.

Linda Sue Turner of Winterville, was charged with failing to stop for a stop sign following investigation of a 12:26 p.m. collision at the intersection of Ninth and Cotanche Streets.

Officer said the Turner car collided with an auto driven by Richard Eugene McDaniel of 203A Riverbluff Road, causing an estimated $300 damage to the McDaniel car and $200 damage to the Turner vehicle.

Sea Grants Provide Savings

If you're building a house at the beach, you may want to consider constructing it with standards better than the minimum. It may cost you a little more money initially, but that's money you'll soon save in flood insurance payments, says Spencer Rogers, UNC Sea Grant coastal engineering specialist.

"In many cases ... the insurance savings can be used to rapidly pay back any increases in initial construction costs for the higher standards," says Rogers. For example, by building with longer pilings and using higher floor elevations, the cost of flood insurance can be lowered.

Since the mid-1970's, most coastal communities have established minimum construction standards for new buildings in order to reduce future flood insurance damages. Once the requirements were met, the federal flood insurance program offered policies to cover water damage — damage not covered by most homeowners' or commercial insurance policies.

The areas of North Carolina most likely to experience flood damage are known as V-zones or velocity zones. In these areas, usually close to the shoreline, the flooding is often accompanied by wave heights of 3 feet or higher. In the past, wave action has caused more structural damage than still-water flooding, Rogers says.

Recently, flood insurance rates in these V-zones have increased for construction begun after Oct. 1, 1981. In some cases, rates for new buildings have increased by a factor of ten while rates for older structures haven't changed much, Rogers says.

But if new buildings are constructed with standards better than the minimum, insurance rates may be lower. The problem is that few people know about these new regulations, says Rogers. And that lack of knowledge may cost them. "If you're going ahead with building a new house and don't realize it, you can miss an insurance savings of five hundred to a thousand dollars," says Rogers. "You can still build at the minimum standards, but your insurance will be more expensive."

Insurance rates may be determined by factors such as location of the building, length of pilings and the location of the first floor. Even a utility room below the first floor can substantially raise insurance rates because it's likely to be damaged in flooding, Rogers says.

In order to qualify for lower flood insurance rates, the building must be certified by a registered engineer or architect before and after construction. Forms are available through insurance agents, building inspectors or the Federal Emergency Management Agency. The rating forms are based on construction methods described in the "Coastal Design and Construction Manual." Copies are available at no charge from: Natural Hazards Division, Federal Emergency Management Agency, Washington, D. C. 20472, or by calling 1-800/638-6620.

Four Collisions In City Listed Sunday

An estimated $4,700 damage resulted from four traffic collisions investigated Sunday by Greenville police.

Officers said cars driven by Stephen Cannon Nowell of Elizabeth City, and David John Steffensen of 200 York Road, collided about 3:25 p.m. on Tenth Street, 100 feet west of the Brownlea Drive intersection, causing an estimated $600 damage to the Nowell car and $900 damage to the Steffensen vehicle.

Nowell was charged by investigators with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of the mishap.

Sidney Darrell Mitchell of Route 7, Statesville, was charged with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of a 5:04 p.m. collision on Tenth Street, 60 feet west of the Verdant Street intersection.

Police, who identified the driver of the second car involved as Dorothy Williams Hill of Grimesland, estimated damage at $300 to the Mitchell car and $1,200 to the Hill vehicle.

Investigators said an estimated $1,200 damage resulted to a car driven by Karen Beth Mathews of 101B Courtland Road, when the vehicle ran off Evans Street, 200 feet north of the Deck Street intersection and into a ditch, about 1:03 a.m.

A 12:30 p.m. mishap at the intersection of Tenth and Cotanche Streets involved a truck driven by Melvin Earl Roberson of Route 1, Vanceboro, and a car operated by Charles Kenneth Barnett of Hubert, officers said.

Damage from the collision was set at $100 to the truck and $400 to the car.

Bomb Threat Tainted Rally

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — An anonymous caller threatened to bomb a political rally Saturday night and told officials to "Get the governor and his people out," police said.

Sgt. G.W. Black said the first call came to the Marriott Hotel at 8 p.m., followed by another 25 minutes later. Hunt was whisked from the fund-raiser while a search failed to uncover a bomb in elevator shafts, bathrooms, under tables or in fire extinguisher panels.

About 2,000 Democrats, including eight congressmen and Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., remained unaware of the threat, said Joseph A. Pell, special assistant to Hunt. He said officials did not think the threats were serious enough to evacuate the hotel.

"It was just one of those things," Pell said. "Everything went smoothly. But you never know whether it's for real or a crank."

The Greensboro Daily News on Sunday quoted sources close to Hunt as saying that the governor was angry that he had to leave the party, which cost $250 per couple and was designed to raise money for Democratic candidates in 1984.

The sources said Hunt was taken to the nearby Sheraton Hotel, where he watched part of the Virginia-Georgetown basketball game.

The fund-raiser was sponsored by the North Carolina Campaign Fund, a federal political action committee set up by key Hunt supporters to wage a direct-mail, fund-raising appeal for the 1984 elections.

Those present included representatives from 95 of the state's 100 counties and eight of the nine Democratic congressmen and congressmen-elect from North Carolina.

Hunt, who is expected to challenge Republican U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms in 1984, said during his speech that he and his wife have often discussed retiring to their Rock Ridge farm in Wilson County.

Trawler Wrecks In New Zealand

WELLINGTON, New Zealand (AP) — A Taiwanese fishing trawler smashed into jagged rocks and sank in heavy seas near Wellington, but rescue boats and a helicopter scooped all 16 crewmen to safety, authorities reported today.

The 250-ton trawler Yung Pen went down during a heavy gale Sunday after it veered into the treacherous rocks five miles from the New Zealand capital. The crewmen, all Taiwanese, were rescued about 50 miles from shore.

Local residents and a policeman said they went out in small boats to rescue the crewmen, who were flailing around as huge waves crashed over the rapidly sinking ship. A police chopper also was called in.

"It was awful," said Barbara Kelly, a local resident who witnessed the rescue. "It was particularly dangerous for two men who jumped in the water. It was a miracle a huge wave lifted the boat before it crashed into them."

Registration Is Scheduled

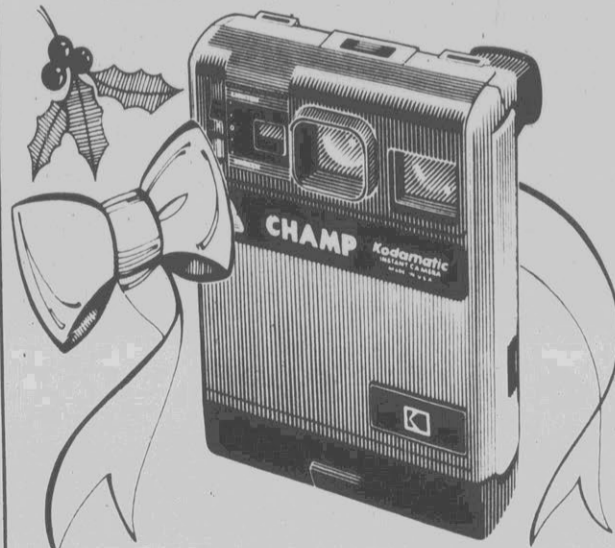

Registration will be held for the following adult high school classes this week:

Monday, Pitt Community College, trailer 14 at 7 p.m.; Tuesday, Stokes Activity Center at 7 p.m.

The adult high school class is designed to prepare the adult for taking the high school equivalency test (GED). Program content covers reading and writing skills, mathematics, social studies and science.

The class is free. For further information call PCC at 756-3130, extension 266.

Views On Dental Health

Kenneth T. Perkins, D.D.S., P.A.

ARE PRIMARY TEETH IMPORTANT?

Want to make your dentist cringe? Tell him not to waste his time on your child's severely decayed tooth because, "It's only a baby tooth and he's going to lose it anyway!"

Don't kid yourself! Primary teeth (a much better phrase than "baby teeth") play a very important role in the development of a child's future dental health. Obviously, they are necessary for chewing. Even more important, primary teeth create the proper spaces for permanent teeth. A primary tooth that is prematurely lost can no longer do this job. The teeth nearby will crowd into the empty space, and when the follow-on permanent tooth tries to enter there may be no room. As a result, it may become impacted (lean sideways inside the gum). It may come out in the wrong place (for example, through the front of the gum). Or, it may crowd its way in and destroy the delicate balance of the mouth.

Losing primary teeth prematurely is one of the commonest reasons for orthodontic treatment later on. Prompt treatment with a space-maintaining appliance is generally called for to reserve the room for the next tenant.

Prepared as a public service to promote better dental health. From the office of: Kenneth T. Perkins, D.D.S., P.A. Evans St., Phone: 752-5126.

Soviet Defector Disappointed By Life In America

JOHN RICE
Associated Press Writer
PINOLE, Calif. (AP) — Alexander Sakharov says he lives to write but could not write where he lived. There was no place in the Soviet Union for his non-Marxist views, he says.

So on March 17, 1981, while working as an information officer with the Soviet mission to the United Nations in New York City, Alexander Artem Sakharov defected, taking his young daughter and pregnant wife to the U.S. mission.

For Sakharov, it was the start of a 20-month nightmare. The 34-year-old defector today is unemployed, and on welfare. Baffled and suspicious because of his failure to find work, he says he would welcome a job, sweeping streets.

Intense and often agitated as he leaned across a card table in a starkly furnished apartment in this little town 30 miles northeast of San Francisco, Sakharov spoke of his reasons for defecting.

It was a story of what can happen to the non-celebrity defector.

Sakharov, who is no relation to dissident physicist Andrei Sakharov, said he had hoped his four-year tour of duty with the Soviet U.N. delegation would give him time to finish his English-language novel.

"My life is my writing," he said, "and I would gladly sacrifice my life for the sake of my writing, because without it, my life is worthless."

But Sakharov said he became upset by "corruption, extortion, blackmail and a most unhealthy climate" at the Soviet mission. He says officials took furniture money meant for the entire delegation, leaving others with shoddy goods that included castoffs scavenged from New York dumps.

Sakharov said he received no support when he reported the matter to Moscow. "Perhaps it was a little bit early in terms of my literary plans, but still I could not stand the situation any longer," he said.

A computer-trained linguist who worked as an analyst for elite Soviet institutions, Sakharov had been told by American scholars he might find a job as a college lecturer or translator in the West if he defected.

The FBI questioned him for several days, Sakharov said. On March 24, 1981, he was granted asylum and was taken to Washington for questioning by the State Department and the CIA.

The FBI was helpful, Sakharov said. But the CIA questioners "were asking me idiotic questions, absolutely idiotic," he added.

Sakharov said some CIA interrogators even threatened to send him back to the Soviet Union if he would not work for the spy agency as a translator or analyst. And he suspects the agency has scuttled his job opportunities to try to force him to comply.

When asked about Sakharov's allegations, State Department spokesman Joe Reap and CIA spokesman Dale Peterson refused to discuss the case. Repeated efforts to get government comment failed.

Sakharov said he had hoped to stay and work in New York. Instead, he said, government officials told him in May 1981 that he was moving.

"They said I'll have to leave very urgently, I'm going to the West Coast, where I have been given a position at UC Berkeley, that all arrangements have been made, that people are waiting for me, that the house is rented for me and that I'm getting a job," he said.

But when he and his wife, who was 8½ months pregnant, arrived in San Francisco, he said, "There was no job. There was no medical assistance. There was nothing."

He turned to the Tolstoy Foundation, which helps resettled refugees. He said he was put up in a shabby hotel and told he would have to pay for his wife's care.

"They sent him out to San Francisco, where he didn't know a soul, to an agency which didn't even have his file," said Alan Dundes, an anthropology professor at the University of California at Berkeley who had met Sakharov in Moscow and wound up helping him off-and-on for a year.

Linda Metaxas, local director of the Tolstoy Foundation, said she couldn't discuss Sakharov's case but noted that few refugees have jobs waiting for them.

Unfamiliar with the value of American currency, Sakharov took a $100-a-night room at the El Cortez Hotel and soon ran out of money. His wife gave birth to a second daughter.

Desperate, he took a taxi to Berkeley to find Dundes, who helped him rent a house and look for work and lent him money.

Sakharov said jobs seemed likely at Berkeley, at UCLA and at institutes in Monterey and La Jolla when "suddenly everything went wrong."

Dundes, however, said Sakharov "doesn't understand that when somebody says, 'We'll look into it' ... that's not a real job." But even real jobs seemed to evaporate around him.

A San Francisco translation job was lost when the client demanded someone less "political." A Pakistani group asked him to translate the Koran, then ran out of money, he said, when Sakharov's U.S. travel documents were delayed.

Dundes said Sakharov had failed to follow-up on some job prospects, splurged on taxis and expensive food for his children and seemed "very idealistic and unrealistic about American life." He said immigrants like Sakharov "come from a society where things are provided for them."

"I'm not happy about living at the expense of American taxpayers," Sakharov said. "I have come to this country not to gain a better material position than in the Soviet Union. The most important thing for me is the ability to say what I want."

Boats Rescued In Heavy Wind

CAPE HATTERAS, N.C. (AP) — Heavy winds and turbulent surf disrupted attempts by the U.S. Coast Guard to rescue two disabled trawler and a drifting sailboat Sunday.

Three Coast Guard officers overturned in an inflatable rescue craft during an attempt to evacuate the crew of the Lois Joyce, a commercial fishing vessel that ran aground on a sandbar near Oregon Inlet. The crewmembers and officers were rescued by a helicopter and no injuries were reported, said Stan Pringle, duty officer at the Coast Guard Station at Cape Hatteras.

"Right after I had called the Coast Guard, the bad weather hit," the boat's pilot, Walter Tate, said in a telephone interview from Wanchese. "The winds picked up some and the water became rough."

The Coast Guard cutter Point Brown towed the smaller rescue boat to safety. But seas remained too treacherous to allow recovery of the Lois Joyce, Pringle said.

"We'll have to wait until the weather breaks," he said in a telephone interview. "We may even have to get some commercial assistance. We may not do anything before tomorrow."

Unable to help the Lois Joyce, the Point Brown was dispatched to help the Captain Malc when the 81-foot trawler's engine malfunctioned.

The trawler was to be towed through Ocracoke Inlet Sunday night because conditions in Oregon Inlet were too rough, said Dave Evans, commanding officer for the Coast Guard at Cape Hatteras. The trawler's five-member crew was unharmed, he said.

The 46-foot sailboat, the Liberta, was carrying five people when it developed engine trouble near Frying Pan Shoals.

Cars Slow For Display

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (AP) — Traffic slows to a crawl on Buchanan Street these days when the Fosters turn on their lights.

Alice and Bill Foster have a yuletide yard display that uses 14,500 lights and 250 holiday figures.

Last year, about 150,000 people came to see it and Mrs. Foster expects about 2,000 this year to troop through the house, where seven mechanical displays circle seven separate Christmas trees.

It started in 1968, when their three children entered a newspaper contest for the best holiday display. By 1977 the Fosters had to hire two off-duty policemen to direct traffic.

The entire South Broward High School marching band and chorus dropped by last year to do some carols and have a snack. Buses from nursing homes and creeping cars make the street almost impassable.

Foster has spent $2,000 to boost the power at his home to 460 amps for the display, which takes hundreds of helpers several days to assemble. It increases their monthly electric bill to about $265.

Poultry

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) (NCDA) — The North Carolina f.o.b. dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 40.50 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pound birds. 91 percent of the loads offered have been confirmed, with a final weighted average of 41.14 cents f.o.b. dock or equivalent. The market is steady and the live supply is light to moderate for a moderate demand. Weights mostly desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Monday was 1,737,000, compared to 1,788,000 last Monday.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market turned upward today, recouping some of last week's losses. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off 12.60 last week, rose 1.94 to 1,020.70 by noon. Advances held a narrow lead over declines among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues. The government reported Friday afternoon that retail sales rose 2.3 percent in November, for their biggest increase in six months. Some investors evidently took that as a positive portent for business through the remainder of the holiday selling season. But others evaluated the numbers more cautiously, noting that much of the gain came from promotional auto sales. Video-game stocks, under pressure in recent sessions, steadied today. Warner Communications, down 19% last week, rose 1 to 35 1/4, and Mattel, down 11% last week, recovered 1 1/4 to 18. Chrysler rose 1/2 to 14 1/4 in active trading after striking employees of the company in Canada approved a new contract. The NYSE's composite index gained .07 to 92.49. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .55 at 334.92. Volume on the Big Board totaled 29.55 million shares at noontime, against 39.62 million at the same point Friday.

Catalog For 'Paranoids'

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Paranoids need not fear this Christmas season: a firm has designed a catalog of gifts just for them. Sharper Image, a San Francisco-based mail-order firm, designed the compendium of fear-resolving gifts using "the magic of high technology," says spokesman Joe Garrett. The potpourri of offerings include devices that detect police speed traps, a radiation-sensitive Geiger counter, an escape mask for fires, a video camera that transforms a television into a roving surveillance system and a $1,200 briefcase that zaps a would-be thief with 2,000 volts of electricity. Among the other worry-free gifts available through Sharper Image are burglar alarms, a paper shredder for secret documents, a bullet-proof jacket, and various items in the weapons category. How about a $399 commando crossbow, which sports a telescope viewer and shoots deadly spears at a high speed? It's "a big favorite," Garrett said. Among several knives in the catalog are the "vest pocket sword," and "a blade of survival." Garrett said Sharper Image started six years ago with a $700 investment and expects to gross $60 million this year, up from last year's $35 million. One of the more popular items is the $149 radiation detector. The company has sold 400 of them, Garrett said in an interview published Friday in the Van Nuys-based Daily News. The catalog also carries tiny cordless telephones and cameras hidden in cigarette lighters.

Saving, Checking... Gasohol Slated Get Tax Break

You can make withdrawals in several ways. There is no limit on the number or size of withdrawals you can make in person. You can make up to six other withdrawals each month — by check, by telephone or by the kind of preauthorized agreement you sign for an automatic bill-paying service. No more than three withdrawals may be by check.

There is no limit on the number of deposits you can make. Nor is there a limit on the size of deposits. Unless the institution has its own rules to the contrary, you can switch money from existing accounts into a money-market account by telephone.

If your balance falls below $2,500, the interest rate will drop. Some banks will pay no interest at all. The maximum interest allowed by the government on money-market account balances of less than $2,500 is 5 1/4 percent.

Because of the fluctuating interest rates, money-market accounts will mean some uncertainty for the consumer. You won't know what the interest rate will be for longer than one month.

Based on current market conditions, however, the money-market account will give savers the chance to earn substantially more than the current maximum on passbook accounts which is the 5 1/2 percent paid by savings and loans.

Here are some examples:
Suppose you have exactly $2,500. At 5 1/2 percent, compounded daily, you earn $141.34 in interest in one year.
Take the same $2,500. A 10 percent rate, compounded daily, would give you $262.89 in interest in one year.

Assume the interest rate fluctuates — as it probably will. Interest rates have been dropping. So suppose you earn 10 percent for three months, 9 percent for three months, 8 percent for three months and 7 percent for three months. The interest on your $2,500, with daily compounding, is $221.77 — still $80.43 more than you would earn at the old 5 1/2 percent rate.

Savers who are looking for guaranteed interest rates will have to stick to passbook accounts or to time certificates of deposit. But certificate buyers also are getting a break. Effective Jan. 5, the minimum deposit for the popular six-month and three-month certificates will drop to $2,500. The previous minimums were $10,000 and $7,500 respectively. Six-month certificates now earn a maximum of 8.853 percent at S&Ls and 8.603 at commercial banks; the ceiling for three-month certificates is 7.956 percent.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The tiny gasohol industry would get a giant boost under a provision of the gas tax bill now before the Senate.

That's because when the Senate Finance Committee finished work on the tax portions of the $5.5 billion-a-year tax and highway construction measure last week, it exempted gasohol from the nickel-a-gallon hike in the gasoline tax.

The tax break will be worth at least $640 million by 1985, according to Treasury Department estimates.

The move is seen largely a concession to Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., the committee chairman. Dole's state is a large producer of grain, from which the alcohol in gasohol is distilled.

"Without question it would be very significant," said Frederick Potter, an industry analyst with Information Resources, Inc.

"The industry is still a new one, but if you get that (tax exemption) in there, it could clearly capture 10 percent of the market in three or four years."

Gasohol, introduced commercially several years ago as a way to stretch petroleum supplies and lessen dependence on foreign oil, is a blend of 10 percent alcohol and 90 percent unleaded gasoline. Its price usually is somewhere between the cost of unleaded regular gas and unleaded premium. Sales for 1982 are expected to be about 2.2 billion gallons, or 2.5 percent of the market.

If the full exemption is enacted, gasohol would enjoy a nine-cent-per-gallon subsidy, a margin analysts say would give it a clear price advantage over straight gasoline. The Senate was scheduled to continue considering the bill, stalled by filibuster over other issues, on Monday.

Still, it's uncertain that the full exemption will survive. A version of the bill already passed by the House retains an existing exemption from the current four-cent gas tax, but applies the new five-cent tax to gasohol as well as gasoline. Any differences between the two versions would be worked out in a House-Senate conference.

Rep. Dan Glickman, D-Kan., a gasohol supporter, said he had sounded out the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee on the possibility of increasing the industry's tax break, "but there was no interest at all. We thought we were doing well to hold onto the current four cents."

Thirty-four states now offer their own tax incentives for gasohol ranging up to about five cents per gallon. If the federal exemption were increased, most states probably would drop those exemptions, Potter said.

"But even at that the federal exemption would be helpful, because now it's a crazy patchwork out there that makes marketing and industry development very difficult," he said.

Desegregation Cost Required Indiana

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today refused to free Indiana from paying millions of dollars to cover the costs of racially desegregating Indianapolis public schools.

The justices, without comment, left intact rulings that imposed the financial brunt of desegregation on the state.

Schools in the Indianapolis area now are operating under a massive desegregation plan that requires the busing of thousands of inner-city black students to schools in predominantly white suburbs.

State officials complain that U.S. District Judge S. Hugh Dillin last year ordered the state to foot the bill for the desegregation plan, even though the city's school board and suburban school districts were found equally responsible for past bias against black students.

Dillin's payment order took effect last year after the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals and the Supreme Court refused to grant the Mark Henderson cleared a path for the game's only score, but you won't find his name listed in the New England Patriots' program.

The 24-year-old Henderson became an unusual hero for the Patriots Sunday when he drove a tractor onto the field with less than five minutes remaining and cleared snow from a small area during a New England timeout.

John Smith then kicked a 33-yard field goal from the cleared spot, lifting the Patriots a 3-0 upset victory over the Miami Dolphins.

"I saw arms waving me out," said Henderson, a member of the Schaefer Stadium maintenance crew.

Henderson, of North Attleboro, Mass., told reporters he couldn't stick around for post-game interviews because he was due back at Norfolk State Prison. He said he's serving a 15-year sentence for burglary, but is on a pre-release program that lets him out for school and work assignments.

New England Coach Ron Meyer later admitted he waved Henderson onto the field to clear off the snow, but insisted he would have done the same in a similar situation for the Dolphins.

Miami Coach Don Shula, who watched in dismay as the path was cleared for Smith, was distressed with the situation.

"The officials shouldn't have let it happen," said Shula. "The official nearest me said he didn't see the guy come out before it was too late. Certainly the officials shouldn't have let it happen but we have no recourse so let's forget it. I don't plan a protest."

About the game itself, Shula pointed out: "We didn't deserve to win. Interceptions, dropped balls — you don't win games like that. The weather is no excuse. We have to be able to win in New England or anywhere."

Smith missed on an 18-yard field goal attempt in the second period, but made amends with his kick against the wind at 10:20 of the fourth period. The Dolphins then drove from their 34 to a first down at the New England 20 with 1:17 remaining. But on the third play, linebacker Don Blackmon intercepted a pass by David Woodley at the 10 with just 30 seconds left to kill the comeback.

NFL action Sunday also featured victories by the Washington Redskins, Los Angeles Raiders, New York Jets and Cincinnati Bengals that virtually sewed up playoff berths for them with 5-1 records.

The Redskins beat the St. Louis Cardinals 12-7; the Raiders whipped the Kansas City Chiefs 21-16; the Jets stopped the Tampa Bay Buccaners 32-17 and the Bengals defeated the Cleveland Browns 23-10. Only three regular-season games are left in this strike-shortened year, and 16 teams will be in the playoffs.

Redskins 12, Cardinals 7
Mark Moseley kicked field goals of 32, 30, 20 and 24 yards to lift Washington over St. Louis. Moseley's kicks, set up by Joe Theismann's passing, brought the 34-year-old kicker within two of the NFL's record: He now has a string of 18 in a row, two fewer than kicked by Garo Yepremian, for the Miami Dolphins and New Orleans Saints.

Moseley missed from the Cardinals' 27 on his first try of the day in the opening period but got a second chance because St. Louis was offside on the play. He capitalized on the opportunity, putting Washington up 3-0 with his boot from the St. Louis 22.

"We wanted this game badly," said Washington Coach Joe Gibbs. "St. Louis had some bad things happen to them. I think that may have been the difference."

Raiders 21, Chiefs 16
Jim Plunkett threw a 35-yard touchdown pass to Calvin Muhammad with 25 seconds left, capping a furious fourth quarter that lifted Los Angeles over Kansas City.

The Raiders moved 80 yards in seven plays after the Chiefs had soared 85 yards in seven plays to take a 16-14 lead on Billy Jackson's 1-yard touchdown plunge with 1:55 left.

"Calvin made a great catch," said Raiders Coach Tom Flores. "We were just trying to get closer to put us in better position for a field goal, but Jim (Plunkett) thought he could get it to him and, again, Calvin made a great catch."

Jets 32, Bucs 17
Freeman McNeil rushed for two touchdowns and Richard Todd passed for another to lead the Jets over the Bucs. The victory was New York's fifth straight since an opening-day loss to Miami.

McNeil's first touchdown came on the Jets' first possession of the game, when he followed a Marvin Powell block on a 4-yard run with 8:40 left in the first quarter. McNeil's second TD came on a 5-yard run 53 seconds later that gave New York a 14-0 lead.

The Jets iced the game with 13 seconds left in the third quarter when Todd lobbed a 1-yard pass to Mickey Shuler.

Bengals 23, Browns 10
Pete Johnson and Ken Anderson ran for second-quarter touchdowns and Jim Breech booted three second-half field goals as Cincinnati defeated Cleveland.

Browns safety Clinton Burrell returned an interception 14 yards for a third-quarter touchdown as Cleveland puled to within 14-10. But Breech kicked field goals of 44, 21 and 36 yards to seal Cincinnati's victory.

"I watched San Diego and San Francisco (score 78 points between them Saturday), and I was just thinking to myself that it looks like defense is dead," Bengals Coach Forrester Gregg said. "Today, it has been revitalized. This was a defensive game."

Broncos 27, Rams 24
Steve DeBerg equaled an NFL record for consecutive pass completions in rallying Denver from a 21-0 deficit over the Rams. DeBerg completed his last 17 passes to tie the standard set by Bert Jones, then of the Baltimore Colts, in 1974. Overall, DeBerg hit on 23 of his 31 throws for 307 yards and two touchdowns.

"I knew I had a string going, but I didn't know I had any record," said DeBerg. "I almost called an audible in that last series of plays. I am more interested in winning a decision than in setting any records. I had a bad start but we didn't give up."

DeBerg was only 6-of-14 at one stage of the game.

Bills 13, Steelers 0
Buffalo slammed the door on Terry Bradshaw and Joe Cribbs rushed for 143 yards as the Bills whipped Pittsburgh.

The Steelers didn't get into Buffalo territory until 16:29 remained in the game, and that was the result of a shanked 26-yard punt by Greg Catter to the Buffalo 43. By then, Bradshaw had been taken out of the game after completing only two of 13 passes for 3 yards. He was intercepted twice and sacked four times.

Lions 30, Packers 10
Billy Sims rushed for 109 yards and a touchdown and Detroit's defense smothered Green Bay with nine sacks and five pass interceptions as the Lions rolled over the Packers.

Alvin Hall returned the second half kickoff 96 yards for a touchdown and Eddie Murray kicked three field goals, while tackle Doug English led the defensive charge with four sacks for 24 yards in losses to help the Lions break a

SCOREBOARD

Despite Injury, Bucks' Center Scores 22

Lanier Still Holding Class

By The Associated Press
Bob Lanier is still capable of teaching younger players a lesson, even when he's wearing tape from calf to thigh.

"He is up to his same old tricks out there," Indiana rookie forward Clark Kellogg said after Lanier, despite a knee injury that may require surgery to remove bone chips, scored 22 points to help the Milwaukee Bucks beat the Pacers 120-108 in a National Basketball Association game Sunday night.

Carter, who scored eight of his 14 points in the fourth quarter, to close the gap to 101-99. But Junior Bridgeman and Brian Winters hit consecutive jump shots to give the Bucks some breathing room. Lanier's three-point play with 1:43 remaining led the victory.

Lanier, 34, missed three recent games because of the injury and was ineffective, shooting only 6-of-23 from the field, in two other contests after returning to the lineup last Wednesday.

"I feel pain every time I wake up in the morning," said Lanier, who also pulled down eight rebounds in 29 minutes. "But I play aggressively all the time whenever I play."

Meanwhile, Dave Cowens, another 34-year-old sore-kneed member of the Bucks, returned to action for the first time since Nov. 14 and was 0-for-7 from the field in 12 minutes, although he had six rebounds.

Sidney Moncrief scored 22 points and Phil Ford and Bridgeman added 15 each for the Bucks. George Johnson scored 18 points for the Pacers.

Celtics 126, Nuggets 112
Boston trailed by as many as 17 points in the third period before rallying behind Larry Bird's 36 points and 19 rebounds.

The Trail Blazers, who entered the final period trailing 76-70, took the lead for good at 93-92 on a layup by Paxson with 2:17.

Indiana center Herb Williams, who led the Pacers with 22 points, said Lanier may not be as quick as he once was, but is still a crafty veteran.

"He didn't do anything to surprise me," said Williams, who is 10 years younger than Lanier. "He is out there pushing and shoving. He has been in this league so long that he gets all the calls. He is so important to the Bucks because he takes up a lot of room."

Kellogg scored 11 of his 21 points in the fourth quarter to help the Pacers rally to within two points after trailing by 17 in the third quarter.

An 18-6 spurt by the Bucks helped them take a 62-50 halftime lead.

They were aided by their perfect 17-for-17 showing from the free-throw line in the first half. Milwaukee hit 23 of its 25 free throws in the game.

Marques Johnson scored 10 of his game-high 26 points in the third quarter, helping the Bucks take a 91-74 lead. He added a game-high 10 rebounds for the Bucks, who led 92-81 going into the final period.

The Pacers rallied behind Kellogg and guard Butch spurt by the Celtics iced the victory. "The whole team was missing in the first half," said Bird, referring to Boston's 64-53 deficit at intermission. "We just couldn't put the ball in the hole."

Dan Issel scored 25 points to lead the Nuggets.

Blazers 99, Suns 94
Jim Paxson scored nine of his 20 points in the final four minutes to spur a fourth-quarter rally that saw Portland outscore Phoenix 29-18.

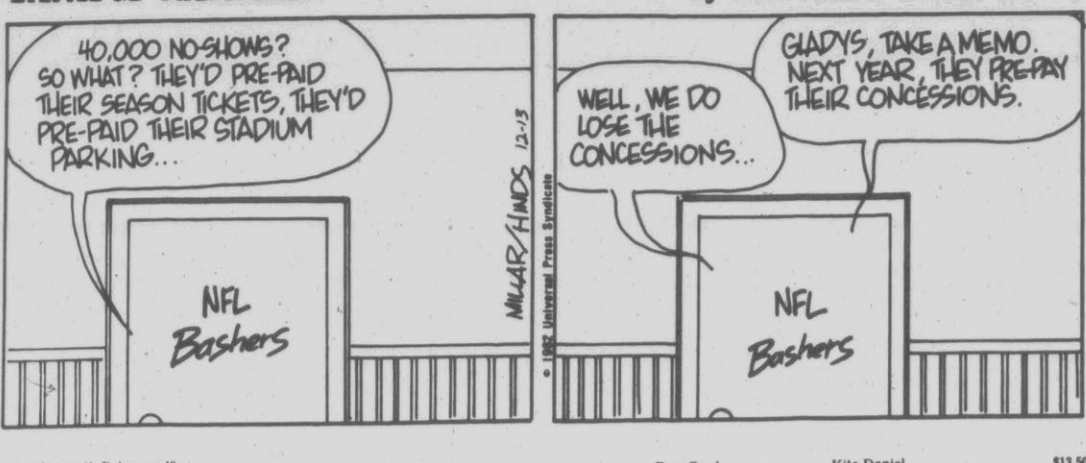

The Trail Blazers, who entered the final period trailing 76-70, took the lead for good at 93-92 on a layup by Paxson with 2:17.

The Suns, who got 22 points from Walter Davis, built a nine-point lead in the third quarter with a 19-7 spurt over Phoenix 29-18.

The Nuggets led 89-72 late in the third quarter, but the Celtics got the final 13 points of the period to trail only 89-85. Then Boston took the lead 100-99 on a Bird jump shot with 7:09 remaining, and a 14-6

Foster Stable

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — South Carolina basketball Coach Bill Foster remained in stable condition Sunday after suffering what doctors called a "moderate heart attack" after his team's upset victory over Purdue Saturday night.

"He spent a good night. His pulse and blood pressure and EKG are steady. He is very comfortable with no physical complaints whatsoever," said Foster's wife Shirley.

"I talked with three doctors this morning and everyone is pleased with his progress," she added.

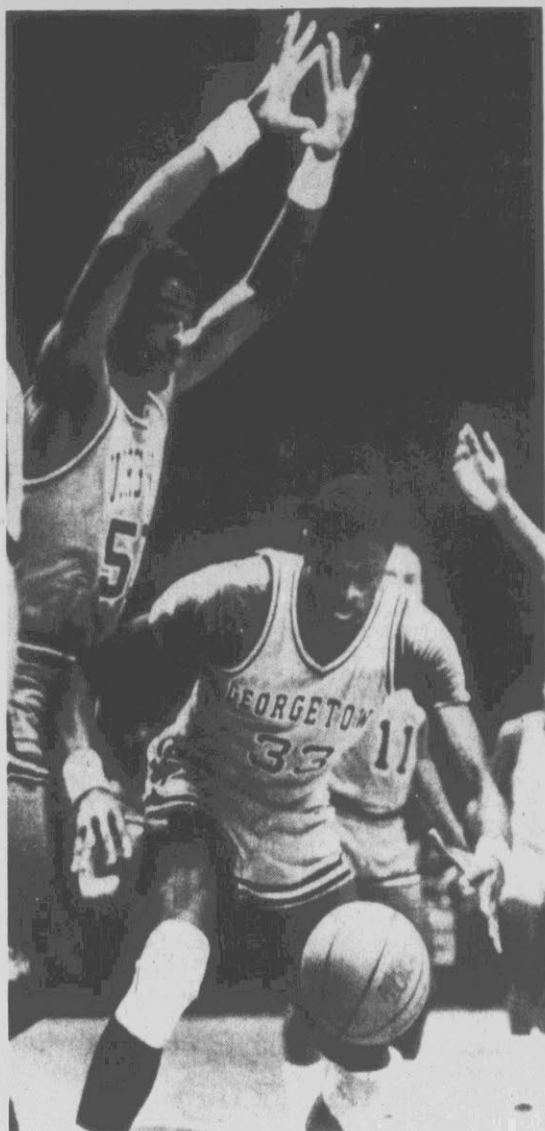

University Sports Information Director Tom Price said there had been no change in the doctors' prognosis that Foster could be in the hospital two or three weeks.

Foster first started hinting that something was wrong late in his team's 59-53 upset of the No. 20 Boilermakers.

"With eight minutes to go in the game he told one of his assistants he didn't feel well," said sports information staffer Rob Matwick. "He said after the game he needed to see a doctor."

Jim Petress, assistant business manager for the school athletic department, said Foster collapsed "while we were in the coaches' room."

Shortly after the game, the 52-year-old coach was moved on a stretcher into a waiting ambulance. He was taken to Baptist Medical Center and then Providence Hospital.

Georgetown's Pat Ewing has the ball slip from his hands as he tries to get past Virginia's Ralph Sampson Saturday night in their college basketball game. (AP Laserphoto)

Ewing Vs. Sampson: A Classic

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — They had battled each other for the better part of 40 grueling minutes, two giants brought together in a dream game that was college basketball's combination Super Bowl and World Series, tied into one neat package.

When it was over, Virginia's 7-foot-4 Ralph Sampson and Georgetown's 7-foot Patrick Ewing had produced a night to be remembered, a classic confrontation between the college game's two best big men in which both of them had flourished.

And the best part is that this may have only been an appetizer. The main course could come next March in Albuquerque, N.M., in the NCAA tournament.

"I hope we can do it again in the Final Four," said Sampson after Virginia's pulsating 68-63 victory Saturday night left the Cavaliers, the nation's No. 1 team, still undefeated at 6-0. Georgetown, No. 3, lost for the first time after six victories.

Georgetown Coach John Thompson thought the experience and tension produced by the long-anticipated matchup could help his young team, which is dominated by freshmen and sophomores.

"I wanted excitement like this in December," said Thompson, "so we'll be used to it in March."

And there was plenty of excitement to savor for the capacity crowd of 19,035 at the Capital Centre. The Sampson-Ewing duel was nothing short of brilliant. Sampson, weakened by the flu and a sore knee, still finished with 23 points, 16 rebounds and seven blocked shots. Ewing had 16 points, eight rebounds and five blocks.

"He is a great player," Sampson said of Ewing. "There are no words to describe him."

"I think," said Ewing, "he is the best center I ever played against."

It was a match to remember. The night started on a high with the two giants exchanging spirited hand-slaps at center court, a silent display of the mutual respect they hold for one another. Then they exchanged slam dunks and blocked shots, battling fiercely inside.

In the first half, Georgetown's young guards had trouble getting the ball inside to Ewing through Sampson's defense. Virginia pulled out to a 33-23 halftime lead but the young Hoyas weren't done.

The Cavaliers' lead ballooned to 14 points at 41-27 before Georgetown's recovery began. Suddenly, the Hoyas, led by junior Gene Smith, became ball-snipers, stingy defenders who did not allow a basket for almost six minutes.

The last Virginia basket was a dunk by Sampson, who caught Ewing napping on an in-bounds pass. Within moments, Ewing got the basket back with an awesome jam over Sampson at the other end.

That exchange left Virginia with a 57-53 lead and 5:41 to play. On their next trip down the court, the Cavaliers got the ball inside to Sampson. Three times, the giant went up against Ewing. Twice, his shots were blocked. The third one resulted in a foul as the crowd roared. Sampson, his emotion spilling over ever so slightly, gestured as if the play should have been called goaltending and then exchanged angry words with players on the Georgetown bench before stepping to the foul line and sinking both shots.

Two baskets by Georgetown freshman David Wingate sandwiched around a pair of free throws by Bill Martin tied the score at 59 with 3:48 to play. It was tied at 61 with 3:13 left but then Othell Wilson coolly dropped in four free throws, Jim Miller canned two and Rick Carlisle one as Virginia put the game away at the foul line.

For his part, Sampson thought he could have played better. The flu and the knee had limited his effectiveness, he said.

Coach Terry Holland, however, was satisfied.

"I thought the game, as much as it could, lived up to its advance billing," he said.

And the best part is, it may have been only a preview. Stay tuned for the main event 3½ months away.

In addition to Georgetown, three other Top 20 teams lost Saturday.

Ninth-ranked Houston lost on the road to unbeaten Syracuse 92-87 as Tony Bruin scored 26 points and Leo Rautins and Erich Santifer made key plays at the end.

Rautins' basket with 1:34 left gave Syracuse an 88-85 lead and he increased the advantage to 90-85 with a pair of free throws with 24 seconds remaining. Santifer fed off to Rautins for Syracuse's last basket and intercepted a pass with 33 seconds left, insuring the win.

First Encounter Goes To Sampson, Virginia

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — The scene was fitting: At one end of the floor were four basketball players from the University of Virginia and four from Georgetown University. At the other end, as if half the court belonged to them alone, were Ralph Sampson and Patrick Ewing.

In a sense it did. Virginia's Sampson vs. Ewing of Georgetown, the first encounter between the two big men likely to dominate basketball for the next decade and possibly beyond, was what the 19,035 fans at the Capital Centre had come to see.

What they will remember of that Saturday night is a 46-second span of the second half. Virginia led 55-51 and had the ball out-of-bounds at its end of the court. Ewing, fronting Sampson near the goal, was watching the sidelines when Sampson quickly slipped back, took the lob pass and dunked to put the Cavaliers ahead 57-51 with 5:59 to play.

Ewing scowled and shook his head, angry that he had been caught looking the wrong way. It would be Virginia's last field goal of the game. At Georgetown's end of the court, Ewing got even. He took a pass down low, turned and delivered a ferocious dunk, right over Sampson. Virginia 57, Georgetown 53, 5:41 left.

Sampson, who had dunked over Ewing earlier, said it was the first time anyone had dunked over him since Gene Banks of Duke did it three seasons ago. Sampson was a freshman then.

As a senior, he knew when not to challenge Ewing, the awesome sophomore.

"It was a great dunk," he said of Ewing's slam. "He had position inside and I had to try to block it or get out of the way. I sort of figured it would be smarter to get out of the way."

Then came the highlight of the night, the entire game-long battle encapsulated in a few seconds.

It started when Virginia's Rick Carlisle missed a shot.

Sampson rebounded and went back up; Ewing blocked. Again Sampson rebounded and went back up; again Ewing blocked, briefly pinning the ball against the glass. Again Sampson rebounded and went back up; again Ewing blocked, but this time he was whistled for a foul.

Sampson thrust his fist into the air, argued that the call should have been goaltending and wagged his finger at hecklers on the Georgetown bench.

"Personally, I thought it was goaltending," said Sampson, who played with the flu and had lost so much fluid he needed an intravenous replenishment after the game. "I was getting weaker and weaker and I had tried to dunk, but I didn't have the strength left. So I just tried to put it in the basket. Then their bench came out on the floor and was saying a lot of things."

Sampson sank the two free throws, putting Virginia ahead 59-53 with 5:13 to play.

Virginia hit nine more free throws and won the game, 68-63, running its record to 6-0 and probably preserving its No. 1 ranking. Georgetown lost for the first time in seven games.

Sampson won the duel of centers.

Four inches taller than Ewing at 7-foot-4, the two-time college Player of the Year scored 23 points, grabbed 16 rebounds and blocked seven shots. Ewing had 16 points, eight rebounds and five blocks.

But the quicker Ewing had his moments.

Indiana Downs Duke In 8 OTs For Soccer Title

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — For Indiana, the NCAA Division I soccer title was a long time coming.

The Hoosiers' frustrations ended Saturday night, however, when Gregg Thompson sent a free kick past Duke goalkeeper Pat Johnston to give Coach Jerry Yeagley's team a 2-1 victory and end a marathon battle that lasted eight overtimes.

It was the first national title for Indiana, which fell to San Francisco in NCAA title games in 1976, 1978 and 1980.

"I don't know where the energy for that shot even came from," said an exhausted Thompson. "I didn't know if I even had the energy to kick the ball, but I figured it was my last college game, so I would make the most of it."

The eight overtimes extended the game to 159 minutes and 16 seconds, longest in NCAA playoff history. The previous record had been in 1959, when West Chester defeated Bridgeport in 153 minutes.

"We couldn't do it the normal way, but it sure was worth the wait," said Yeagley.

Many of the 5,312 fans had drifted out of Lockhart Stadium, leaving it eerily quiet until the winning goal.

The play that set up Thompson's deciding shot was a foul against him by Duke's Joe Ulrich, who earlier in the week edged Thompson for college player of the year honors.

"That was kind of ironic," Thompson said.

He had opened the scoring in the 14th minute by chipping the ball 20 yards over goalkeeper Pat Johnston of Duke.

Second-ranked Indiana held the lead until the 83rd minute, when Sean McCoy took a long pass from David McDaniel and sent a 25-yard shot just under the bar to tie the game.

The teams then settled down for a long wait.

Duke appeared to have a chance to win just minutes before Thompson's second goal. Duke forward Tom Kane fired a shot that Hoosier defender Dan King touched with his hand and the penalty area.

The infraction could have resulted in a penalty kick for Duke, but referee Al Kleinitis waived the play on.

Duke finished the season at 20-1-2.

Indiana was unbeaten over its last 21 games, but finished the year with 21-3-1 record.

Dokes Champion — At Least For Now

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Michael Dokes is, at least for now, the new World Boxing Association heavyweight champion. But former champion Mike Weaver may yet get his desired rematch if a WBA official's recommendation for another bout is upheld.

Nick Kerasiotif, the WBA supervisor for the brief bout, said he will recommend a rematch of the controversial fight to WBA President Gilberto Mendoza at their scheduled meeting today.

Referee Joey Curtis stopped Friday night's fight at 1:03 of the first round as Dokes swarmed over Weaver following a knockdown.

The abrupt ending brought cries of "fix" from both the sellout crowd of 4,500, which also chorused an obscene chant, and Weaver's entourage. The loser's manager, Don Manuel, asked the bout be declared no contest and that another one be scheduled.

"I think the best thing possible is to have another fight between the two parties," Kerasiotif said Saturday. "I think they will see the advantage of a rematch."

Kerasiotif said he will meet with Mendoza in Gary, Ind., where the WBA executive is awaiting Wednesday night's junior heavyweight title fight between Young Joe Louis and Ossie Ocasio. He said he expects a decision by the WBA within two to four weeks.

"I wasn't going to have another Duk Koo Kim," Curtis said, referring to the South Korean fighter who died after being knocked out by WBA lightweight champion Ray "Boom Boom" Mancini Nov. 7.

Gatlin...

(Continued from page 13) second team of high school stars and then listed 23 more players, among them Gatlin. A picture of Gatlin and a brief story was included in the yearbook. N.C. State assistant coach Ray Martin said of Gatlin: "Keith thinks pass before shooting. Gatlin is a winner and falls in the same mode as our Sidney Lowe."

13 at Caesars Palace. "You're not going to see anybody killed — not in my fight," he added.

His decision to end the fight when he did came in a climate of growing concern about boxing's future following not only Kim's death but a WBA title fight in which Aaron Pryor pounded Alexis Arguello with more than 20 unanswered punches before the bout was ended and Larry Holmes' on-sided punch-filled title defense over Randy "Tex" Cobb in a World Boxing Council heavyweight championship fight.

The Nevada Athletic Commission and the WBC both announced moves last week aimed at increasing the safety factor in fights, with the WBC limiting championship fights to 12 rounds rather than 15 starting in 1983. Both groups would give referees the power to require a standing eight count when he deems a fighter to be in trouble.

Curtis was forced to flee the arena after the Dokes-Weaver fight as the crowd shouted obscenities and threw cups of beer at him.

Dokes was never announced as the winner and the new WBA heavyweight champion because officials feared the crowd might riot. It took some 30 minutes to clear the ring so the fighters could leave.

Weaver and Manuel claimed that the fight was somehow fixed. They said the WBA, promoter Don King and others conspired to take Weaver's crown.

"He knocked me down, but so what. I've been knocked down many times," said Weaver. "I wasn't hurt in the slightest way. This was a conspiracy."

But Dokes said the referee did the right thing in stopping the bout.

"Was the knockdown fixed?" he asked. "I was hitting him with some very devastating shots that were very dangerous."

King appeared at a Saturday press conference along with Dokes to deny he had anything to do with the outcome of the fight.

But Dokes said the referee did the right thing in stopping the bout.

N. C. Gubernatorial Hopefuls Getting More Eager

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — It's getting harder and harder for potential gubernatorial candidates in the 1984 race to convince observers that they aren't running yet.

Democratic Attorney General Rufus Edmisten has told his staff "to be moving in a positive way to raise money ... and be shaping up the county organizations," said administrative deputy Charles Smith.

"If the filing deadline were today I think he would file," Smith said, quickly adding that no announcement would be made until next year.

Insurance Commissioner John Ingram, another Democrat, has captured the lime-light recently with a series of news conferences on insurance matters.

"People are asking him to run," said spokesman Oscar Smith. "I think he's going to (run)."

Commerce Secretary D.M. "Lauch" Faircloth has been speaking around the state and there is talk that he openly is acknowledging his candidacy.

"It looks real encouraging," said Faircloth, a Democrat, adding that he won't make up his mind until May or June, when the General Assembly adjourns.

U.S. Rep. Charlie Rose, a Democrat, also is speaking to groups as often as possible and said chances are 50-50 that he will run for governor. However, some observers believe Rose is backing away from the contest and may choose instead to run against Sen. John East, R-N.C., in 1986.

Rose denied that rumor and said he is trying to be cautious about announcing because he has responsibilities in Washington.

Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green, also considered a strong candidate, was in Oklahoma for a meeting of lieutenant governors Friday and could not be reached for comment.

Charlotte Mayor Eddie Knox capitalized on the holidays with a $50-per-person fundraiser that attracted about 3,000 Democrats and Republicans.

"Well, I'd like to tell you that I'm running," Knox said at the gathering. "I said I'd like to tell you."

Knox, who opened a headquarters in June, admits that he lacks name recognition and will have to count on such large gatherings to prove he's a serious candidate who can attract supporters statewide.

Former state legislator Tom Gilmore has drawn public attention with his campaign earlier this year against a constitutional amendment to double legislators' terms from two to four years.

Now Gilmore has formed a Committee on Constitutional Integrity, a "Gilmore in '84 Committee" and is circulating petitions to solicit volunteers and interest in his candidacy. Last week, he also opened a headquarters.

Some of the Democrats say they are disappointed the campaign is starting so soon but acknowledge there is pressure to act quickly.

"The pack is getting awfully large," Rose said. "I think it will settle down before it becomes a real race."

Not wanting to be left out, three possible Republican contenders for governor met and spoke to the Greater Guilford GOP Forum last week. The forum is a group of Republican leaders and businessmen from the county.

The speakers were I. Beverly Lake, unsuccessful candidate for governor in 1980, state Sen. Cass Ballenger of Catawba County and state Rep. Howard Coble of Guilford County.

Unlike the Democrats, the Republicans are trying to get more names in the pot so they can have a primary to build name recognition and generate interest in the party.

Ballenger said he and Lake and Coble are close friends and agreed that a primary was needed.

Ballenger already has printed leaflets and says only two things could stop him from running — health problems or the candidacy of Republican congressman Jim Martin or Jim Broyhill.

Lake said he's about half decided to run for governor. "It is important that people who have never taken that step (to run) prove to everybody they're serious candidates," he said. "I don't have to do that."

Forum members referred to Coble, meanwhile, as the Ted Kennedy of the state's Republican Party because he has considered running and backed out so many times.

Coble said he's more interested in the race this year because, "1984 can be a year when we elect a Republican governor in North Carolina. The party could offer a stabilizing effect that is badly needed after what has transpired during the past eight years."

Rose agreed that the crowded Democratic field could work to the advantage of the Republicans.

"It could do what it did when Jim Holsouser was elected governor," Rose said. "I think they're licking their chops right now hoping that that opportunity will present itself."

Linda Joe Stewart, 20, of Germantown died Saturday when the car she was driving left the road near Walnut Cove and she was thrown from the vehicle.

Willie Edward Buie Jr., 29, of Raeford died Saturday when the car he was driving at high speed ran off U.S. 401-A less than a mile north of Raeford, hit a bridge abutment and fell into a creek.

The deaths brought the toll for the year to 1,217, compared with 1,413 at the same time last year.

Offer Public Program For Bill Of Rights Day

Dr. GENE D. LANIER

ECU News Bureau
A public program at East Carolina University's Willis Building will highlight the local celebration of Bill of Rights Day at 7:30 p.m. on Dec. 15.

Included in the celebration will be three presentations: "Human Rights on the International Scene," by Dr. John M. Howell, ECU chancellor and political scientist; "Separation of Church and State," by Gene Puckett, editor of the Baptist Biblical Recorder and "Intellectual Freedom," by Dr. Gene Lanier, professor of library science at ECU and recent recipient of several awards for his leadership in promoting first amendment freedoms.

According to William C. Byrd, chairman of the board of the Greenville-Pitt County unit of the N.C. Civil Liberties Union, Gov. Hunt has issued a proclamation citing North Carolina's role in withholding ratification of the U.S. Constitution until a Bill of Rights was added.

"While the Bill of Rights is the foundation of many of our freedoms, some citizens have forgotten them and need to be re-acquainted. That's what our celebration is intended to do — refresh our memories and alert us to modern dangers which could erode these freedoms," Byrd said.

"We hope people from all over eastern North Carolina will visit with us in Greenville and let us meet them and share our concerns."

Several organizations at ECU and in the surrounding area are cooperating in the Bill of Rights Day observance, Byrd noted.

Some people think an IRA won't help until retirement. Nonsense. A BB&T IRA helps every April 15.

An IRA, you see, is more than a fast-growing retirement fund. It's a tax shelter.

Now, the tax-wise have been taking advantage of tax shelters for years, contributing money to charity, for example, so they can take big deductions and pay smaller income taxes.

Well, we think it's about time working people got a piece of the action. And they can with BB&T's Individual Retirement Account, a tax shelter that's yours when you make a contribution to the charity closest to your heart: you and your family.

YOU CAN DEDUCT AS MUCH AS $2,000 A YEAR FROM YOUR GROSS INCOME.

You're allowed to invest as much as $2,000 a year in your IRA ($2,250 if you're married and only one of you is a wage earner, $4,000 if you both are). And every penny is deductible. Which means big tax savings. If you're in the 25% tax bracket, for example, and you and your working spouse put $4,000 into an IRA, your refund check from Uncle Sam will be $1,000 fatter than it would be otherwise.

YOU DON'T EVEN PAY TAX ON THE INTEREST YOU EARN UNTIL YOU RETIRE.

Which is nice, because at BB&T, you'll be earning at a rate that's tied to money market rates, with a guaranteed minimum of 8%. What's more, we don't compound that interest annually or quarterly as some banks

COMPARISON OF INTEREST COMPOUNDING METHODS

Years	Amount Deposited @ $2,000/Year	Daily Compounding*	Annual Compounding*	Net Gain With Daily Compounding

do. We compound daily, which can make a difference of thousands of dollars in interest over the years.

And all your interest is tax-deferred. You pay no tax on it until you begin withdrawing funds between 59½ and 70½ years of age, when you'll probably be in a lower tax bracket and, therefore, required to pay less.

YOU CAN BUILD UP ENOUGH IN YOUR IRA OVER THE YEARS TO RETIRE RICH.

If you start an IRA in your early thirties, a $2,000-a-year investment, with all the interest it earns, will turn into a really tidy sum by the time you're sixty-five. And even if you were born too soon to start that early or can't afford an investment that large, you'll still pile up a sizeable fund.

Call or visit any BB&T office and get your IRA started before another day goes by. After all, how can you pass up a retirement plan that gives you big bucks in the September of your life and a bigger refund check every April?

Ventroliquist Shari Is Not Just For Kids Anymore

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Shari Lewis, the ventroliquist who created Lamb Chop and Hush Puppy, has grown up, even if some members of her audience still play in the sandbox. Miss Lewis isn't just for kids anymore. Today she's an entertainer who does something besides talk to floppy animals. She has an adult night-club act and tours the country conducting symphony orchestras. This week, she's in Washington with the National Symphony Orchestra.

Next week, she has three dates with the Pittsburgh Symphony.
"My box office is unbelievable," Miss Lewis said. "My 30-year-olds are bringing their kids to the concerts. I love looking out and seeing 2- and 3-year-olds seated among the adults. It's bound to make the kids smarter. They hear laughter and say, 'Whoops, I better listen. There's something going on.'"

During her performances, Miss Lewis dances with a 5-foot-8 replica of Fred Astaire, her kangaroo character plays Brahms on the violin and Lamb Chop plays Chopin.

Miss Lewis has been conducting major orchestras for five years. "I was brought up to conduct. I had a mother who said practice, practice, practice."
Her mother was a pianist and musical coordinator for the New York Board of Education. At age 4, Miss Lewis took lessons in piano, guitar and accordion and studied dance at the American School of Ballet.

"I violate the tradition that classical music has to be stiff and aloof. I look for melodies that are wonderful," she said.

It shouldn't be surprising that there's more to Shari

Viewers aren't always comfortable when performers step away from their TV roles. "There's space between my image and who I really am. But I don't deal with that difference," Miss Lewis said. "I do what I do, as funny as I can do it."

In the 1950s, Miss Lewis was working with big wooden dummies on the "Captain Kangaroo" children's show. "They asked me if I had something more delicate," she said. "So I took a small puppet and began improvising." She also appeared on Arthur Godfrey's "Talent Scouts" before doing "The Shari Lewis Show" on NBC.

Her TV background lies in children's programs, and she has just completed her 23rd children's book ("One Minute Bedtime Stories"), but Miss Lewis isn't interested in doing kiddie television today. She has written an adult sitcom pilot, and 20th Century-Fox has an option on it.

Miss Lewis clearly is not a fan of children's television on the networks.

"It's not fit for the family pet," she said. "There's nothing worthwhile for children between 6 and 12. Saturday morning TV is a vacuum. The shows are about nothing. They're not theatrically valid."

"You have to spend money to get good theater," she added. "But when the networks put on kid shows, they spend pea-soup money. On the other hand, Jim Henson (executive producer of "The Muppet Show") is brilliant. He has plenty of writers, and he produces shows the way they're supposed to be produced."

WELCOME BACK, GROUCHO — Gabe Kaplan, right, star of television's "Welcome Back, Kotter," stands with Robert Hegyes on the stage of the Westwood Playhouse in Los Angeles, where Kaplan has been starring in the key role for a limited engagement of "Groucho." Hope Can't Visit Beirut

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Middle East has lost a comedian but gained an actress for the Christmas season.

Bob Hope will not be able to entertain U.S. Marines in Beirut, but Elizabeth Taylor will visit children in Israel and Lebanon.

Hope, 79, who has been entertaining U.S. troops abroad at Christmas since World War II, was invited to Lebanon this year by the Marines, in Beirut on a peacekeeping mission.

Hope is now working on a Christmas television special in Los Angeles. After that, he plans to consult with doctors in New York, his publicist, Ward Grant, said Sunday.

The problem is an inflammation in Hope's right eye caused by a small vein sending blood over the retina, which "makes everything hazy," Hope has said.

"Once the television special is completed and he sees his doctor, he will take some well-deserved rest," Grant said.

Hope has undergone surgery for the problem four times in the last 24 years, publicist Ken Kantor said last month.

Meanwhile, Miss Taylor announced Saturday that she will be in the Middle East around Christmas as part of a 10-day peace mission to visit children in orphanages and hospitals. The trip was organized by Israel Today.

Gedda Marked 25th Met Anniversary On Sunday

By MARY CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — A concert of taste and refinement marked tenor Nicolai Gedda's 25th anniversary at the Metropolitan Opera on Sunday afternoon.

Gedda, who made his Met debut as Faust in Gounod's "Faust," shared the concert singing with mezzo-soprano Frederica von Stade.

After the intermission, Gedda accepted an engraved silver bowl from Frank E. Taplin, president of the Metropolitan Opera Association. Taplin said that from Nov. 1, 1957, the night of Gedda's Met debut, to today, "we've had a most moving account of his artistry. He has given us 354 performances, in 28 roles, at the Met and on tour."

Taplin said Gedda will be back next season to sing in "La Traviata" and the season after to sing in "Eugene Onegin."

Gedda replied, "I have been singing in the greatest theater in the world, the Metropolitan Opera. I'm very proud of that."

The audience at the Met had to wait until the third encore to hear a duet. This was a true joint concert. With Met artistic director James Levine doing a superb job of accompanying at the piano, the two artists took turns singing groups of songs.

Miss Von Stade was an excellent choice to pair with Gedda. Both have fine voices and both sing with taste. When they perform in opera or concert, they project the character they're singing or the text of the song. Personally, instead of flamboyance, they project refinement and elegance.

This probably is more suitable in an intimate-sized hall. But the Met was nearly sold out and it was Gedda's anniversary at the Met, so it was logical to have it there.

Miss Von Stade began with songs by John Dowland, Handel and Liszt. Gedda began with Bizet. After the intermission she sang Poulenc and he sang Glinka and Tchaikovsky. It was a delight to hear emotion from their voices without their hands moving around in illustration. Gedda kept his hands at waist level. Miss Von Stade, wearing a floor-length red brocade suit with black blouse, kept hers at her sides.

He sang an encore by Lalo. She sang one by Meyerbeer. They also shared a long scene from Massenet's opera, "Werther."

Gedda was born in Stockholm. Miss Von Stade, who is from New Jersey, returned to the Met this season after five years spent largely at the Paris Opera. She will sing Hansel at the Met on Christmas afternoon.

Taplin read the inscription on the silver bowl: "In recognition of your dedication and devotion to the highest standards of your art and the esteem in which you are held by your colleagues in this house."

Life Is Golden For Selleck And Collins

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Life is golden these days for Tom Selleck and Joan Collins, but may be somewhat sour for Pia Zadora.

Selleck, star of the TV series "Magnum P.I." and Miss Collins, one of the scheming women of "Dynasty," won 1982 Golden Apple awards Sunday as stars of the year. The Hollywood Women's Press Club bestowed the prizes for the 42nd year.

Kimberly Coy, spokeswoman for the organization founded in 1928 by the late gossip columnist Louella Parsons, said the group's 150 members selected winners in nine categories. The winners received 5-inch golden apples mounted on plaques.

Miss Zadora, star of the movie "Butterfly" and the upcoming "The Lonely Lady," beat out six other contenders to win the Sour Apple award for the "celebrity who most believes in his or her own publicity."

Other honorees included Lorenzo Lamas of CBS' "Falcon Crest" and Debbie Allen of NBC's "Fame" as top new male and female stars; TV talk show host Phil Donahue as top daytime star; Quincy Jones as top music star; Lena Horne as top Broadway star, and "E.T." director Steven Spielberg as top showman.

Actress Bette Davis gave Henry Winkler the Louella O. Parsons award "for projecting the best image of Hollywood through his personal and professional life," Ms. Coy said.

Boys Get A Big Surprise

HAMILTON, Ontario (AP) — Kevin Stolman had a little surprise for the rest of the all-boy chorus in the musical "Oliver."

Kevin is really Karen and she had been passing herself off as a boy for two months of rehearsals.

Karen, 10, maintained the ruse among the 14 boys until Friday, when her father, Dr. Lewis Stolman, finally told director Peter Mandia.

"My immediate reaction was I think that's great," Mandia said. "It takes a remarkable actress to have fooled us all for the last two months."

Karen will remain a member of the cast, playing a pickpocket in the musical adaptation of Charles Dickens' novel "Oliver Twist."

Stolman said he and his wife didn't discourage their daughter from trying out since she felt she could do the job as well as a boy.

Her hair was already short but her pierced ears had to be camouflaged with makeup. There were also a few close calls during costume-fitting sessions and awkward moments waiting to use the washroom, but everyone agreed Karen had fooled them.

Arthur Clarke Is Calling It Quits

NEW YORK (AP) — Science-fiction writer Arthur C. Clarke is calling it quits now that he's finished his latest space odyssey.

Clarke, 64, recently completed the best-seller, "2010: Odyssey Two," and he says it is "positively my last book."

"I want to enjoy myself while I am still young enough to enjoy myself," he said in an interview published in this week's People magazine.

Clarke, who has written about 60 science fiction books and co-authored the screenplay for "2001: A Space Odyssey," with film director Stanley Kubrick, conceived "2010" as a magazine article 10 years ago. He says he held off writing the story until last year "because I needed the data from the Voyager flight to write the book."

The Voyager mission gathered data from Jupiter and Saturn.

Last year he mailed a 10-page outline of the piece, which continues the space adventure of "2001," from his home in Colombo, Sri Lanka, to his New York agent, who parlayed it into a book contract with a guarantee of $1 million to the author, according to People.

Brolin Returning In A TV Movie

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — James Brolin, whose acting career began in television's "Marcus Welby, M.D." series, returns to the tube to star in "Cowboy," a two-hour CBS-TV movie.

The contemporary Western story will be filmed entirely on locations in Texas near the communities of Waxahachie, Italy and Maypearl.

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

© 1982 Tribune Company Syndicate, Inc.

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠83 ♥K1063 ♦K92 ♣J982

The bidding has proceeded:

North East South West

1 ♠ Pass 1 NT Pass

3 ♣ Pass ?

What action do you take?

A.—Partner's bid is not forcing, and you do not have much more than a minimum no trump response in terms of point count. However, your kings are slightly undervalued and you do have some useful fillers. We would venture three no trump, and we would not be upset if partner chose to correct to four spades.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠9874 ♥Q63 ♦KJ842 ♣7

The bidding has proceeded:

North East South West

1 ♠ Pass 1 ♦ Pass

1 ♥ Pass ?

What action do you take?

A.—First of all, partner's bid of a new suit at the one-level is not forcing. Secondly, your hand is worth only one bid, and you have made it. Pass, and be happy that you have managed to improve the contract without getting out of your depth.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠K93 ♥K873 ♦AK62 ♣J8

Partner opens the bidding with one club. What do you respond?

A.—With 14 points in high cards and stoppers in the unbid suits, your hand qualifies for a jump to two no trump. However, that would crowd the auction and you could easily miss a 4-4 heart fit—with your prime values a suit contract might be desirable. We would respond one diamond to see if partner can introduce hearts. Should he fail to do so, you can always jump in no trump at your next turn.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠A1065 ♥AQ9843 ♦62 ♣5

The bidding has proceeded:

North East South West

1 ♠ Pass 1 ♥ Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—First, partner's bid does not show any great strength—with a good hand, he would have started with a redouble. He probably has nothing but a long diamond suit. However, we don't need much more than that for a shot at game. Our choice would be between a jump to four diamonds and a leap to game. Since partner may reject an invitation with a suitable hand, we would take our chances with five diamonds.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠AJ1063 ♥7 ♦AK92 ♣KQ10

The bidding has proceeded:

South West North East

1 ♠ Dble 2 ♦ Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—First, partner's bid does not show any great strength—with a good hand, he would have started with a redouble. He probably has nothing but a long diamond suit. However, we don't need much more than that for a shot at game. Our choice would be between a jump to four diamonds and a leap to game. Since partner may reject an invitation with a suitable hand, we would take our chances with five diamonds.

Q.6—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠KJ10986 ♥95 ♦74 ♣AK2

The bidding has proceeded:

East South West North

1 ♠ Pass Pass Pass

What is your opening lead?

A.—You want to prevent declarer from scoring tricks with his low trumps by means of ruffing. The way to do that is to draw trumps. Start by leading the king, in case partner of dummy has the singleton queen. Don't worry about declarer having both missing honors—if he has them, he will score both no matter what you do.

The Victim of History

Today marks the first anniversary of martial law in Poland, an event that demonstrated the extent of Soviet control over that Eastern European nation. Russia has dominated Poland for more than 200 years. Between 1772 and 1795, Russia, Austria, and Prussia seized and divided Poland among themselves. Later, Russia tried to stamp out Polish culture by making Russian the region's official language. Poland gained independence in 1918, but in 1939 Nazi Germany and the Soviet Union secretly agreed to invade and partition Poland again. The Nazis broke their agreement and seized all of Poland in 1941, but the Soviets won it back in 1944. Poland has been under Soviet control ever since.

DO YOU KNOW — What is the capital of Poland?
FRIDAY'S ANSWER — The B'nai B'rith uses the Menorah as its symbol.
