Banks And S&Ls Launch New Program

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

Banks and savings and loan institutions ventured into a revolutionary new high-interest savings market today and area financial executives said they were busy not only answering questions but also in trying to research the program themselves.

Beginning today, banks and savings and loan associations began offering their own money-market, savings accounts that will pay individual customers elevated interest-comparable to money-market mutual funds.

While there is some variance on the initial interest rates among the financial institutions, all of the programs are attractive to consumers who have at least $2,500 to put in a savings account.

Reid Hooper, office executive at Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. here, said that as of this morning his bank is paying 10.85 percent on individual Cash Investment Accounts, with an effective annual yield of 11.45 percent. Hooper said Wachovia is guaranteeing 10.3 percent interest on the accounts through Dec. 20.

The spokesman said he was "delighted with the acceptance" received by the new program so far and he said the savings account opportunity "gives consumers a break they haven't had in many years."

Hooper said he hopes "sanity will prevail in these rates" and there will be no rate wars as a result of the deregulated situation. He said such wars could hurt the smaller banks but he predicted the situation will settle down following initial premium rate activity.

Dennis Alexander, city executive for Bank of North Carolina, said BNC had a lot of activity this morning and a lot of interest from existing customers regarding the new savings avenues.

Alexander said BNC was quoting an interest rate of 8.9 percent this morning and was offering a 2 percent premium over the basic rate for the first 30 days of the account. He said the bank is paying its rates for a week at the time on BNC Money Market Accounts.

CHILLY MORNING — It was already cold in Greenville this morning, but the sprinkler system time clock at North Carolina National Bank main office didn't know that. It came on as its regular schedule called for, promptly spraying water over the landscape. The result was frozen plants and ice hanging from trees. Larry Mallard, a spokesman for the bank, said the system is normally shut down for the winter, but had not been turned off yet. It now has been shut off, he stated. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Emergency Spending Bill Lined Up For Voting In House Today

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — House members are tackling an emergency spending bill that Democratic leaders have adorned with a $5.4 billion pre-Christmas package of public works jobs, housing aid, and assistance for the unemployed.

The House was voting today on the so-called continuing resolution which the lame-duck Congress must pass to keep money flowing to the federal government after Friday.

Besides considering the spending bill, the representatives are also expected to vote on an amendment that would, in effect, raise their current annual salary of $60,662.50 by more than $8,000.

The Senate, meanwhile, quashed a conservative-led filibuster Monday against a nickel-a-gallon hike in the federal gasoline tax to finance highway, bridge and mass transit repair jobs.

Nonetheless, Senate leaders concede that the measure, which has the support of President Reagan, still faces prolonged debate before there is a final vote.

After the 75-13 vote choking off the filibuster, Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., said he expects the tax hike to be approved, despite amendments from opponents who want to dilute or kill the legislation.

In addition, Democratic leaders have said they will try to substitute a $9.7 billion jobs measure that would be financed by limiting the benefits wealthy taxpayers would receive from the scheduled 10 percent personal income tax rate cut next July 1.

Other legislators have said they will try to prevent large increases in the price of natural gas expected during the current winter heating season.

"It would be a real donnybrook (on the amendments) but you won't call it a filibuster," Baker said.

The stopgap bill the House was voting on today is necessary because Congress has passed only three of the 13 regular annual appropriations bills that provide money for government operations and programs.

A stopgap measure already in place expires at midnight Friday, and without a new measure the government will technically be broke Saturday morning.

The House bill would expire March 15, 1983, meaning the incoming 98th Congress will have to work on the money bills this lame-duck session fails to pass.

Since the stopgap bill must be passed before adjournment, legislators are jumping on it as the last chance to gain enactment of pet projects.

In addition, Rep. Vic Fazio, D-Calif., was offering an amendment on the House floor that would raise the salary for members of Congress.

When the House Appropriations Committee drafted the bill last week, Fazio successfully offered an amendment to remove the cap that currently holds members' salaries to $60,662.50 annually.

The amendment he was offering today would cap members' salaries at $68,900.

Fazio said Monday that congressional auditors in the General Accounting Office estimated that without a cap, legislators' salaries would rise to $77,300 because they have not received cost of living increases since members of Congress froze their own salaries in 1977.

But the centerpiece of the stopgap bill, as far as Democratic leaders are concerned, is the jobs package. Reagan has said he will veto it if it reaches his desk.

Included in the package is $1 billion to create about 160,000 jobs repairing bridges, water systems and public buildings, and another $1 billion in grants to hard-pressed areas to create about 65,000 jobs building public facilities.

There also is a $50 million grant to the United Way of America to provide emergency food and shelter to needy people, and an array of other grants and public works provisions.

Republicans have called the package little more than a political stunt. Democrats counter that the nation's 10.8 percent unemployment rate demands action now.

Winterville To Employ Grant Administrator

WINTERVILLE — The Town Board of Aldermen voted Monday to employ Talbert Cox & Associates at a cost of $77,500 to administer the town's 1982 Community Development Block Grant Program.

The program includes rehabilitation of 51 houses, demolition of five houses, relocation of one house, construction of 3,030 feet of water line, eight fire hydrants, paving 2,780 feet of dirt streets and an unspecified amount of curb and gutter construction.

The town received the $750,000 Community Development Block Grant in October.

In other business at its monthly meeting, the board:

- Scheduled a public hearing on Jan. 10 to discuss amending an ordinance on employees benefits. The amendment would give new town employees a 30-day wait for hospitalization and retirement rather than the present six-month wait.
- Accepted the resignation of Carl Dean, town adviser, effective Dec. 2. Dean accepted the position of city manager in Clarksville, Va.
- Announced the hiring of police officer Allen Edwards. He will begin work Dec. 15.

- Set Christmas holiday hours for town employees. The town hall will be closed Monday only for Christmas and will be open Friday as usual. Town employees will be allowed one day off later. Monday will be the only day trash is not collected, noted Town Clerk Elwood Nobles.
- Voted to send letter to residents with fences and vicious dogs where electrical meter is not visible outside of fence telling them fences must be fixed so meters can be read outside of fence. The letter will also note, voted the board, that goats are reportedly being kept in town by several residents and that if any within the city limits they must be removed.

Ayden To Buy Cemetery Road For Improvements

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

AYDEN — The town will purchase the road to North Cemetery from Seaboard Coastline Railroad for $4,500, the Ayden Town Commissioners voted Monday night.

The road, long a trouble spot because of its poor condition, has plagued visitors to the cemetery for several years. Complaints about the mud and holes on the stretch were in limbo because of the road's ownership.

"This (road) is a problem we've dealt with for three, four years and was one we could do nothing about because we didn't own the street," said Commissioner Elliott Dixon. "Maybe now we can make some improvements."

According to Town Manager Don Russell, the $4,500 will come from $75,000 budgeted for street improvements.

The Town Board also voted to purchase liability insurance for the mayor, Board of Commissioners and employees at a cost of $1,770 per year. Total persons covered number 59, including police officers.

A refund to Ayden electrical customers of $77,232 was approved. The board voted to spread the refund out over two months, February and March, depending on cash flow in the electrical fund.

The refund will be included in the billing for December and January, the months electrical usage is highest according to Mark Sugg, town electrical director.

In other business:
•A public hearing was set for Jan. 10 at 7:30 p.m. to discuss paving and street improvements for 1983.

•Andrea Norris and Joey Pollack were re-appointed to the Ayden Recreation Commission for three year terms.

•The Town Board appointed Josephine Reeves, Jean Jolly, Glenn Taylor and Joyce Dixon to the Library Board of Trustees.

•Board members approved by a two-three vote a resolution endorsing the study of the Pitt County and Greenville City school systems proposed by the Pitt County Board of Education.

Not Seconded

For want of a second, a resolution declaring Ayden's share of funds collected by the Pitt County ABC Board as being "sinful" and unwanted has itself been rejected.

Town Commissioner J. Elliott Dixon, a physician, introduced the resolution at Monday night's board meeting.

Dixon, noting that a proposal has been discussed for a new ABC outlet in Ayden, said the town receives about $4,000 from the ABC Board annually for use in its general fund expenditures.

"These monies received are generated by the sale of alcoholic beverages whose consumption is tainted and therefore the monies are themselves tainted," Dixon's proposed resolution stated.

It continued, "The same monies are used to support all expenditures of the town of Ayden for all citizens and, whereas the use of these funds would be sinful, ..." they should be rejected by the town and the money deleted from any budget proposal.

Dixon failed to find any support on the board.

Return A True Bill

The grand jury has returned a true bill of indictment in the first degree murder case against Pitt County Sheriff's Deputy Billy Braswell.

The true bill against Braswell, who is charged with the Sept. 27 murder of his wife, Lillie, near Farmville, was returned Monday.

A date for Braswell's trial will be set at an arraignment scheduled for Jan. 3 in Pitt County Superior Court.

The Braswell case was sent to the grand jury after Judge H. Horton Rountree conducted a probable cause hearing in District Court here earlier this month. Following the hearing, Rountree ruled that bond for Braswell would stand at $100,000.

Braswell was released on bond and discharged Nov. 30 from Pitt County Memorial Hospital after receiving treatment for over two months for gunshot wounds to his chest. He was admitted to Pitt Memorial on Sept. 27 after officers found him wounded at his Farmville home. Earlier that day, Braswell's wife had been found shot to death near the intersection of Chinquapin Road and U.S. 264 Alternate east of Farmville.

A warrant charging Braswell with first degree murder was issued on Sept. 30.

"Some fencing and a large cage or two would really assist us in giving the best possible care until we can find homes for these animals." A Christmas Police Tip: Don't leave your child unattended in a car while shopping!

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Today's youth are toying with God's timetable and frankly I think it's a big mistake.

In the past, tradition dictated that at age 24, a child should be married and making monthly payments on everything in the house and a mother should have no more to think about than whether to eat the rum-dipped bon-bons with the light chocolate or the dark chocolate.

Why am I bringing this up now, you ask? Because I have just torn through this city like a crazy lady from a "Dukes of Hazzard" caravan trying to get my son on a plane.

It's not the first time we have tried to make a plane that left 20 minutes ago. He's late for his entire life.

When I was younger it didn't seem to matter that he showed up for dinner when we were having dessert, or that we were all in the car starting on our vacation and he was still looking for his shoes. We used to shake our heads and smile, "What's a mother for but to fret?"

Well, that was 10 years ago and the fretting has turned to frothing.

His rides to the airport have now become classics in bringing on hypertension.

The plane leaves at 7:05 p.m.

At 5:45, he comes home from handball and asks, "what's for dinner?"

At 6:00, he is drinking milk from a carton and watching "M*A*S*H." At 6:15, he asks where the suitcase is. When he finds it, he dumps all my summer shorts and T-shirts onto the bed where they will remain.

At 6:30, he sets the washer dial on Maxi and throws in three pairs of shorts and two pairs of socks.

At 6:35, he stands in front of the refrigerator with the door open as he talks on the phone with a friend whom he has not seen since the handball game an hour ago.

At 6:45, he begins a shower that will not end until the 40-gallon water heater is emptied.

At 7:00 p.m., he grabs the socks and underwear from the washer, puts them in a plastic bag, jams them in his suitcase and says, "Will you whip it up, Mom? I've got to get to the airport in time to buy a ticket."

I'd love to unloa... get him married!

The celebration of the Rev. and Mrs. John Daniel Vernelson's 50th wedding anniversary was held Sunday afternoon at the Parkers Chapel Free Will Baptist Church fellowship hall.

Hosts and hostesses included their children, Mr. and Mrs. J. Hilton Vernelson, Mr. and Mrs. Douglas James, Mr. and Mrs. John Vernelson, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Vernelson, Mr. and Mrs. Karl McLawhorn, Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Vernelson and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Taylor.

The honorees have 13 grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

A mauve colored dress was worn by Mrs. Vernelson. It was accented with a corsage of white pom poms tied with white ribbon and gold bells.

Guests were greeted by Mr. and Mrs. Paul W.

Harris. A picture of the couple was displayed. The Rev. and Mrs. Vernelson received guests with their children.

Gifts were received and displayed by Mrs. Wayne Vernelson, daughter-in-law of the couple and grandchildren.

Punch was poured by Mrs. John Vernelson. Cake was served by Mrs. Joe Vernelson and Mrs. Hilton Vernelson. All are daughters-in-law of the honorees.

An arrangement of yellow chrysanthemums with single burning tapers decorated the refreshment table which was covered with an off-white lace cloth. White poinsettias, magnolias, lighted tapers and brass lanterns were used throughout the reception area.

Others assisting were Mrs. Greg Smith and Mrs. Dan Wynne. Good-byes were said by Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Vernelson and grandchildren.

The couple was married by the Rev. Jack Tyson Dec. 16, 1932.

Warns Twin Trailers To Be Problem

By The Associated Press
A proposal being considered by Congress allowing trucks to pull two trailers instead of one on state roads could create some "significant problems" for North Carolina, a state official says.

Congress is now considering a measure as part of the 5-cents-a-gallon federal tax increase to allow the trucks to pull twin trailers with a length of 65 feet on interstate highways and roads built with federal funds.

William F. Caddell, the state's assistant highway administrator, said Monday that twin trailers could especially cause problems on small, secondary roads.

"The size of the vehicle could be an intimidating-type thing for the normal traffic, so we do have some concern," Caddell said in an interview.

North Carolina senators Jesse Helms and John East also have expressed reservations about the proposal, aides said.

"The senator would prefer the state to have the option to regulate their own commerce and highways," said Jerry Woodruff, East's press secretary.

Scott Wilson, a Helms aide, said the twin-trailer issue illustrates the senator's view that the bill is being pushed too quickly through Congress.

"Here we are on the verge of overriding a controversial law in North Carolina that was pounded out in the Legislature down there without even thinking about it," Wilson said.

The North Carolina General Assembly voted in 1979 to reject a proposal backed by the trucking industry to legalize twin trailers in the state.

Under the proposal now being considered by Congress, twin-trailer trucks would be allowed to pull two trailers, each up to 28 feet long. With five feet between the trailers and a 10- to 15-foot tractor, the overall length would range from 70 to 75 feet. North Carolina law presently sets a length limit of 60 feet on a tractor and single trailer.

The package also calls for a study of using triple-trailer trucks up to 105 feet long on sections of interstate highways designated as special truck routes.

Elbert Peters, executive vice president of the N.C. Motor Carriers Association, said the changes will not make the gas tax bill any easier for the state's truckers to accept.

Peters said the trucking industry does not oppose the fuel tax increase, but is opposed to the amount of increase in heavy user taxes included in the bill.

Peters said the tax bill passed by the House would increase the heavy user and excise tax and other levies on a 78,000-pound truck from $1,746 to $4,374 a year.

The benefits of running double-bottoms would not compensate for those increases, Peters said, especially since it would take most trucking companies five years to work double-bottoms into their operations.

Mailed Gifts OK For Inmates

Some gifts in limited quantities can now be mailed to inmates in North Carolina prisons, according to the state Department of Corrections.

Until Jan. 1, Christmas gift packages can be sent to inmates by mail that contain cigarettes, tobacco, cigars, shelled nuts, packaged candy and fresh fruit. Also, home prepared foods such as cookies and cakes can be sent, but only in relatively small amounts, due to spoilage and storage problems.

A small number of books, not of obscene material, can be sent to inmates. Magazines and newspapers must be mailed from publishers. A limited amount of writing paper, envelopes and stamps are also authorized as mail items during the holiday season.

Due to storage problems, the departments encourages mailers to send relatively small packages.

Reducing The Tariffs

Nobody is turning cartwheels, but there is cautious optimism about the report that Japan might cut the import tariff on U.S. cigarettes by 15 percent.

The economic newspaper Nihon Keizi Shimbun reported the government is ready to cut the cigarette tariff to a top rate of 20 percent, compared with the current rate of 35 percent.

It was reported that the cut could mean the American share of the Japanese cigarette market could increase from 1.4 percent to 10 percent. It was reported that the plans are to be worked out prior to Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone's visit to the United States in January. Sen. Jesse Helms, who is to meet with Nakasone, has said the Japanese have pledged to do something about tobacco tariffs.

Tobacco companies say the change would help, but they also need easing of restrictions on distribution, marketing and advertising in Japan.

In Japan there was concern that tobacco growers there would feel threatened by the increased competition.

If the Japanese do cut cigarette tariffs it will be helpful to the American tobacco industry. Too often, U.S. made cigarettes are frozen out of foreign markets. It should not be that way in a world where international trade is now a necessity. The American cigarette industry is asking no more than to fairly compete in foreign markets.

Chickens Have Limitations

Keeping chickens in the city limits has become restrictive.

The city council last week amended the animal control ordinance to stipulate up to four chickens, ducks, pigeons, doves or other fowl may be kept in the city.

Under severe restriction between five and 15 fowl may be kept on a single lot or tract within the city. In both cases the owner is responsible for noise, odor, attraction of flies, nuisance and health hazard aspects.

Chickens are a wonderful companion to man in that they furnish eggs, fryers, baked hen, and chicken pot pie, not to mention chicken sandwiches.

We can assume, however, that within the city, live chickens definitely have their limitations.

GETTING HARDER TO DENY!

By JAMES KILPATRICK

Someday, The Option

WASHINGTON — Let us suppose, to be supposing, that you are under the age of 35, that you have a job in private employment, and that you were offered an opportunity to opt out of the Social Security System. Under any one of several plans now fermenting in the Washington think tanks, it would be a deal you couldn't refuse.

I recently reported on one such plan, put forward by the National Taxpayers Legal Fund in a concise and cogent publication. The leading authority on "privatizing" the retirement functions of Social Security is Peter J. Ferrara, who has set forth his ideas in two books for the Cato Institute. The Heritage Foundation and the recently formed Family Security Foundation are pushing Ferrara's proposition. A. Haeworth Robertson, former chief actuary for Social Security, advanced his own version in a book last year.

Candor compels me to say that this is an idea whose time probably has not yet come. Both political parties seem wedded to patching the wounds of Social Security with legislative Band-Aids. It is highly unlikely that the presidential commission Social Security will even consider the private alternative. Let us have no illusions that Capitol Hill will be struck any time soon by lightning bolts of intelligence and foresight.

But eventually the time will come for the private option.

Our present system is on a collision course with arithmetical and demographic realities. One day the productive labor force will rebel against a entirely. These workers and their employers would continue to pay the equivalent of Social Security taxes, but these payments would not go to the U.S. Treasury. They would go into individual private retirement accounts administered by banks, insurance companies or savings and loan institutions.

In his most recent book, Ferrara projects the examples of an 18-year-old who never earns more than a minimum wage, a 22-year-old who earns average wages, and a 24-year-old who pays taxes on the maximum covered earnings. Applying a conservative real rate of return of 6 percent, this is what private retirement accounts would produce at age 65:

JAMES J. KILPATRICK

The worker on minimum wage would accumulate a fund of $28,000 — enough to purchase an annuity of $28,000 a year for the rest of his life. Social Security would pay him only $10,800 a year.

The average worker would accumulate a fund of $470,000. He could leave the principal intact for his children and draw interest income of $28,000 a year, or he could purchase an annuity that would pay him $46,000 a year for life plus $30,500 a year for his surviving spouse.

The maximum income worker would amass a retirement fund of $1,000,000 at age 65. His interest income alone would be $60,000 a year. Social Security, by contrast, would pay him only $23,326 while both he and his spouse were alive, with $15,500 a year for the survivor.

Contending For Dollars

By MAXWELL GLEN And CODY SHEARER
DETROIT — For the first time that we can recall, the holiday season has precipitated a rush by shoppers to save money, not spend it.

Vying aggressively for the Christmas dollar this year are two new contenders, banks and savings associations, which have been offering "ultra-high interest" (as high as 20 percent in some places) on short-term deposits to attract customers to newfangled accounts.

For the most part, this is a healthy shift. The advent of "money market bank accounts" this week (Dec. 14) and next month's arrival of high-interest-bearing "Super NOW" accounts is expected to bolster a recent turnaround in the sliding national savings rate. With the help of federal deregulation, financial institutions are, after several difficult years, about to give the independent money market funds a taste of their own medicine. The new accounts don't exactly constitute a bailout, but they may keep some institutions afloat.

Yet in our nationwide hustle for high returns, we may be encouraging banks to bear down harder on the bottom line, a habit that, without some tinkering, may not be in the best interest of our nation's future.

Time was, of course, when savers had a general idea of how their money was invested. As a general rule banks have favored commercial loans while savings associations have specialized in home mortgages.

When other markets became more profitable, however, some financial institutions began diversifying as state and federal laws allowed. Money once deposited locally was increasingly invested elsewhere. Deregulation has since made diversification the rule.

With today's new plan to remove limits on the interest that banks and thrifts can offer, nearly all financial institutions will feel forced to join the chase. But not all can win. Indeed, the new accounts have been created so suddenly by the federal Depository Deregulatory Committee that institutions are still figuring out ways to make them profitable.

Inevitably, the war for consumer dollars will only exacerbate tension between short-term, high-yield investment — stocks and treasury bills, for example — and long-term projects that need investors' dollars as well.

While private investors may deserve a share of America's shrinking capital base, so do housing, education, health care and clean air and water. The more that financial institutions direct dollars away from these needs, the more we may come to regret our shortsightedness.

As The Boston Globe reported last week, some Americans have already signaled their interest in preserving the balance between personal and social gain. The Washington-based Calvert Group Fund, one of five "socially responsive" money market mutual funds, opened seven weeks ago, and is earning a competitive 9.2 percent interest. It focuses investment on companies, big and small, which among other things preserve the natural environment, involve workers in decision-making, practice equal opportunity and foster concern for human needs. Said Calvert's Katherine Bardsley: "We aim to prove that you don't have to sacrifice yield to have a social objective."

Of course, not everyone sees an advantage in setting down criteria for investments other than the rate of return. Bankers, in their own interest, cannot. And, for some people investment, like a hobby, is more a factor of personal whim than personal responsibility.

Yet unless enough of us place adequate interest in projects that pay broader dividends, our future may not be worth the savings.

Who's In Prison?

By PAUL T. O'CONNOR
RALEIGH — At the center of the debate over alternatives to incarceration are two questions. First, proponents of alternative forms of incarceration ask if we're jailing people who don't need to be put away — and giving them sentences which are far too long. Secondly, are we discriminating in who we jail. "Social characteristics of the prison population raise serious questions about whether prison is reserved primarily for minorities, the young, the poor, the unskilled, and those with alcohol and drug abuse problems", the Citizens Commission on Alternatives to Incarceration wrote in its final report.

— a ratio far out of whack with North Carolina's nearly 4-to-1 white to black racial makeup. In Women's Prison, 39 percent of the inmates are white and 59 percent are black. Eleven percent of the prison population comes from families which live under the poverty line while 58 percent live just a bit better, at what is known as the subsistence level. Almost all the rest come from middle income

Not surprisingly, these people do not have very much education. For all inmates, the average educational level is six years.

Alcohol abuse is not as high as one might expect. The commission reports that 26 percent of the inmates say they don't drink, and 41 percent say they drink only occasionally. About one-third have, or had, a drinking problem of varying magnitude. More than half admit to using illegal drugs: 42 percent saying they do not use drugs, 33 percent saying they use them occasionally and the rest admitting drug overuse problems of varying degrees. More than half say they use marijuana only and 24 percent say they've used heroin or an opium derivative. Almost half say they were sober when they committed their crime. The rest admit to being either drunk or under the influence of drugs, or both.

Although the commission reports that there are a lot of poor, uneducated people in prison, it doesn't answer the question it naturally raises. Does the prison population reflect the socio-economic and racial breakdown of the state's lawbreakers? Or, are we just sending the poor, minorities and the young to prison while others get easier sentences?

PAUL T. O'CONNOR

families with only one percent coming from upper income brackets.

Nearly half the inmates — 43 percent — have no occupational skills and 26 percent are semi-skilled. Six percent have no gainful occupation, five percent work in homes, three percent are students and two percent professional. About 20 percent of these people worked as laborers when they were convicted and about 10 percent were unemployed.

The prisons are full of young people — 43 percent are 24 or younger; 70 percent are 30 or younger. Only seven percent are 46 or older.

Other Editors Say Wise Judgement

(The Raleigh Times)

Refusing to register for the draft is not the same as refusing to serve — but it's not all that different either. Each presents tough moral dilemmas for youths of high principle and for judges who must fix the legal consequences of those youths' decisions.

Last summer, when religious objector Enten Eller of Virginia became the first to be convicted for not registering, U.S. District Judge James Turk had ordered him to do 250 hours of volunteer work and to register within 90 days or face a possible six years in prison.

Eller, a minister's son in the peace-loving Church of the Brethren, did his community service but still refused to register.

Thereupon, Judge Turk could have followed through by throwing the book at the straight-A physics major. That would have been easy. It would have earned the judge praise from many patriots who have no sympathy with conscientious objectors and who lump them with cowards and deserters. It would, as prosecutors argued in pressing for that course, have been an "example" to other draft resisters.

But sending him to prison would also have made a martyr of Enten Eller who sought not martyrdom but only to live and serve in ways that would not violate his anti-war beliefs.

The country did not need that kind of polarizing, passion-arousing example — the kind Vietnam gave us too many of, the kind that brings out of the woodwork, on both sides, unstable types full of hysteria and bearing no resemblance to Eller or the judge.

We already have enough trouble identifying with others in brotherhood without new grounds for choosing up sides and getting on the evening news with pickets and protests and limp live bodies being carted off by cops.

Judge Turk instead chose to set another kind of example. He told Enten Eller to spend two years after he graduates next June doing volunteer service at the Salem, Va. veterans hospital or some other federal facility. Young Eller, for his part, welcomed the order calmly as a chance to help his country constructively, and downplayed any reading of it as a "victory".

Both were wise.

Today's Gifts, Future Debts?

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer
Today's gifts can turn into tomorrow's debts if you're not careful with your Christmas shopping.

"In general, people are very responsible in managing their credit, but the probability that you could get in trouble is higher at Christmas," said A. Charlene Sullivan, the associate director of the Credit Research Center at Purdue University in Lafayette, Ind.

Ms. Sullivan said most people carry around several credit cards. If you spend to the limit on all the cards, "you're going to be in big trouble after Christmas," she said.

Ms. Sullivan noted that more than a dozen states have recently raised the maximum allowable interest rate on credit card debts; a few states have eliminated usury ceilings completely. "With higher rates, financial institutions may make more credit available," she said.

Higher interest rates could leave consumers owing more than they expect. But the increased charges also could motivate people to pay more quickly.

Ms. Sullivan said about 40 percent of people who use charge cards do not incur any interest at all; they pay their bills, in full, each month and use the cards for convenience rather than credit.

She also said that fears about the economy and unemployment have led people to restrict their use of credit and said that the increase in outstanding consumer credit so far this year generally has been lower than the increase in consumer prices.

"More and more people who you wouldn't expect to be losing their jobs are worried," Ms. Sullivan said. "When your job looks uncertain, borrowing against future income can be pretty risky."

Figures from the Federal Reserve Board show that the annual rate of growth in outstanding consumer credit during the third quarter of 1982 was 2 percent, down from a 4 1/2-percent growth rate in the second quarter. Extensions of consumer credit during the July-to-

September period equaled 15.1 percent of disposable income, down from 16.3 percent in the previous three months.

How can you stay out of trouble?

"A good rule of thumb to keep from overextending yourself is to limit the total monthly payments required on credit obligations (not counting mortgage payments) to 15 percent of monthly after-tax income," Ms. Sullivan said.

Keep track of the number of credit cards you're using. The minimum payment required on each one may be small — $15 or 20 — but the total can add up quickly. Ms. Sullivan said "many card issuers recently have raised the size of the minimum monthly payment, making the decision to carry balances on several cards a significant burden on the household budget."

You may be heading for problems, Ms. Sullivan said, "when you find yourself borrowing from one source to pay another source." Ignoring bills from creditors who won't push you in order to pay those who will take action is no solution; you'll only wind up deeper in debt over the long term.

Another possible danger signal is a change in your spending habits. If you usually pay your bills on time and suddenly find yourself "revolving" — paying only part of the amount due, along with interest on the outstanding balance — you might be on the road to trouble, Ms. Sullivan said.

Be sure you understand the terms if you take advantage of special Christmas offers letting you buy now and make no payments until after the holidays or special deals which offer allegedly "interest-free" credit.

"The stores really don't lose money," Ms. Sullivan said. "Essentially, they sell at a price which covers the lost interest income."

Suppose, for example, a retailer gives you a choice: A 15-percent discount if you pay in cash or "free" credit for a year if you use your charge. The credit isn't really "free;" you're paying 15 percent more than you would if you used cash.

Local Attorney Sworn Into Highway Safety Body

Greenville attorney Kenneth E. Haigler was sworn in Pitt County Superior Court this morning as a member of the Governor's Committee on Highway Safety.

Haigler, who was sworn by Judge David Reid at 9:30 a.m., becomes a member of the 16-member committee effectively immediately.

"Highway safety is an area of special interest to me," he said. "I'm especially interested in saving lives and cutting down on the extent of personal injury caused by motor vehicle accidents through the use of safety restraints."

"I am pleased with the law that went into effect last July to require restraints for small children. I think everyone should be so restrained inside vehicles. Of the 350,000 persons involved in motor vehicle accidents in North Carolina last year, only seven percent were wearing safety restraints.

It's proven that rate and degree of injury goes way down when restraints are used."

Haigler said he is also believes in the RADD (Report All Drinking Drivers) program fostered by the committee he is joining. "People taking personal responsibility for the safety of themselves and other by wearing safety restraints and reporting drinking drivers can make a big difference in highway safety in North Carolina and everywhere," he said.

Haigler, a Rockingham native, is a partner in the Taft, Taft and Haigler law firm. An honor graduate of Duke University and of the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill School of Law, he and his wife, Paula Overcash Haigler, have lived here 18 months. She is associated with the Pre-Release and Aftercare Program of the N.C. Department of Corrections. He is a member of a number of attorneys' organizations and of the University City Kiwanis Club.

Big Cash Heist An Inside Job?

By LAWRENCE KILMAN
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The robbery of at least $5.3 million from an armored car company by two masked men who left $20 million and a scrawled taunt behind may have been an "inside job," police say.

The largest cash heist in U.S. history was aided by a flat roof on the Sentry Armored Car Courier Co. that opened like a can of beans, a lone guard, dogs that didn't bark and a security system that failed to sound the alarm, authorities said Monday.

"We are investigating the possibility it was an inside job," said Alice McGillion, a deputy police commissioner.

The loot stolen Sunday, including $1 million in weekend receipts from Yonkers Raceway, had been picked up by Sentry over the weekend from several clients.

New York police said company officials initially reported on Monday that $1 million had been taken, then revised the count to $5.3 million after "a very detailed count."

But FBI spokesman Edward Gerrity said Monday that the company told the agency it was an $8 million theft.

A police investigator who asked not to be identified said the entire amount taken in the holdup was insured.

Sentry officials could not be reached for comment Monday; a secretary said company officers were not available to talk to reporters.

After interviewing the guard and collecting evidence at the two-story brick warehouse, Bronx chief of detectives Francis M. Sullivan and other investigators pieced together this account of the robbery:

Two holdup men, wearing ski masks, used a screwdriver or similar tool to pry a two-foot hole through the flat roof of steel and tar paper. They lowered themselves with a rope, removed a panel from a false ceiling, then dropped to an office.

In the next room the only security guard in the building, Christos Potamitis, 25, was watching television. At 11:15 p.m., the two men burst into his office carrying a double-barreled shotgun and saying, "Don't move or we'll blow you away."

After disarming the guard, the robbers handcuffed him to a stairwell railing, then went downstairs to the money room, where about $25 million sat behind a heavy metal door in bags of $50 and $100 bills. The robbers snapped open two locks with a crowbar, then apparently used bolt cutters to cut through a floor-to-ceiling chain link fence and reach the money bags.

None of the bags was in a safe or vault. The robbers took 10 to 12 bags piled near the door, activated the electronic system that operated the garage door, then apparently loaded the money into a truck parked outside.

Before the gunmen left, they wrote on a dusty mirror, "Robbers was here."

Sullivan said it was unclear why the robbers passed up $20 million stacked in bags on handcars. Detectives said the thieves may have thought the other bags contained coins that were too heavy to carry, or may have feared discovery.

The guard was found when other employees came to work at 5 a.m. Monday. He could give only a poor description of the robbers, police said.

Investigators found an electronic bypass device on the roof, which they believed was used to neutralize the alarm system. The device is frequently used by safe crackers, Sullivan said.

Two watchdogs in the building also failed to bark, Sullivan said, and tests were being made to see if they had been drugged.

The holdup came four years after the largest robbery in U.S. history, where thieves took $5 million in cash and $800,000 in jewelry from a Lufthansa cargo area at Kennedy Airport. A cargo agent, the only man convicted in the heist, was sentenced to 15 years in prison.

The several versions of a private option plan differ in detail. In one approach, a part of the young worker's payments would go to his retirement account and another part to a fund for health, hospitalization and disability insurance. Under another version, bonds would be issued to help finance the existing Social Security system through a 30-year transition period.

The most appealing aspect of the approach is that it offers young workers something tangible, untouchable and bequeathable at retirement age. Their retirement accounts are personal, not impersonal. Their benefits are not dependent upon congressional whim. The private option offers a good deal for the next generation. Social Security can't do that.

Two Injured In Four Collisions

Two persons were reported injured and an estimated $11,900 property damage caused in four traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Monday. Officers said the drivers of both cars involved in a 3:30 p.m. mishap at the intersection of Greene Street and Mumford Road were injured. They were identified as Richard Edwin Lawler of 117 Woodside Road and Amy Celeste Formyduvall of 2318 Deal Place. Damage was estimated at $1,500 to the Lawler vehicle and $3,000 to the Formyduvall car. A car driven by Karla Marie Files of Route 10, Greenville, and an East Carolina University activity bus operated by Kimberly Dawn Smith of 205 N. Elm St. collided about 10:03 a.m. at the intersection of Charles and Greenville boulevards, causing an estimated $2,000 damage to the car and $1,800 damage to the bus. John Calvin Holloway of Nashville was charged with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of a 5:10 p.m. collision on Arlington Boulevard, 50 feet south of the Greenville Boulevard intersection. Police said the Holloway car collided with an auto driven by Deborah Lynne Travis of Route 2, Ayden, resulting in an estimated $900 damage to the Holloway car and $1,000 damage to the

Van Driver Attempted To Run Down The Jury

HUNTINGTON, W.Va. (AP) — A van driver "screamed around the corner" and tried to run down the jury in a murder trial, hours after a prosecution witness said she received a telephone death threat, authorities said. No jurors were harmed in the Monday night incident, but two police officers suffered minor injuries, witnesses said.

A dispatcher for Huntington police said officers were searching for the driver, who abandoned the van about 1 1/2 blocks away. Cabell County Circuit Judge Alfred Ferguson, presiding over the trial, called the incident "a deliberate act."

On trial is Wilbert Mayle, 32, of Columbus, Ohio, charged with slaying Huntington police officer Paul Harmon on Dec. 13, 1981. The jurors, who were transported from Fayette County for Mayle's trial, had been driven to the site where Harmon was shot to death with his own pistol exactly a year earlier.

Mike Johnson, a reporter for the Huntington Herald-Dispatch, said the jurors were viewing the scene about 11:42 p.m. when a blue van "screamed around the corner," drove up on the sidewalk and headed for the crowd. "They all spread out," Johnson said. "There was screaming. It missed a half dozen jurors by only two or three feet." He said several officers produced their guns but no shots were fired. Cabell County Deputy Fred Buchanan was struck on the hip by the van but did not require treatment, and Columbus police officer John Postlethwaite cut his hand when he fell to the ground to avoid vehicle, officials said. Ferguson said he was told the van, which was taken to a police department garage, had a temporary Ohio registration. After the incident, jurors were driven in sheriff's cars to Kenova, where they looked at the site where Stacy's car was found after Harmon's death. Defense attorney Jerry Weiner said he intended to ask for a mistrial because of the incident.

Earlier Monday, with the jury out of the courtroom, Kathy Pearson of Columbus said an anonymous caller told her she would be "blown off the witness stand" if she testified. "If I made it out of the courtroom, I'd be killed before I got out of West Virginia," she quoted the caller as saying. Ms. Pearson also said that firebombs were thrown at her house after she testified earlier this year at the trial of another Columbus man, Bobby Dean Stacy, who was convicted of first-degree murder in the slaying. Ms. Pearson testified Monday that Stacy was at her house about 6 p.m. last Dec. 13 when "he told me he had to meet Jackie and pick him up to go to the hills and take care of some business." She said Mayle's nickname is Jackie, and she said "the hills" referred to southern Ohio. Prosecutors say Harmon was shot to death after encountering two men who earlier that evening had robbed a Chesapeake, Ohio, fast-food restaurant, across the Ohio River from Huntington.

No Climb In Heists Of Financial Institutions

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Although bad economic conditions are blamed for increases in many crimes, the FBI says robberies of financial institutions in North Carolina haven't been affected one way or the other. "We don't think the recession is having any effect, on robberies of financial institutions, strange though that may sound," says Robert Pence, head of the FBI in North Carolina. "These robberies are being committed by criminal types who would do it regardless of what the economy is like."

Pence, in a news conference on Monday, says robberies of banks in North Carolina are down from a year ago, but Savings and Loan holdups have increased slightly in 1982. He said the trend was encouraging in light of the recession that has been blamed for an increase in some crimes. Eight-four financial institution robberies have been reported in North Carolina this year, compared with 99 in 1981, Pence said. Winston-Salem had the highest number of robberies, 16, followed by Raleigh with 10, Charlotte with seven and Greensboro with four.

Savings and loan robberies increased from 18 to 22, despite a N.C. Savings and Loan League program aimed at curbing the holdups. More than half of this year's holdups were in cities, Pence said. That's a switch from 1981, when the majority of robberies occurred in small towns and rural areas. Pence said 55 percent of the holdups had been solved, and the number is expected to increase as investigations continue. Most bank robberies occur between 10 and 11 a.m., while Savings and Loan holdups are more likely to take place in the early afternoon, Pence said. Successful robberies usually net the thief an average of $2,000. While 90 percent of the cases eventually are solved, chances for recovering the loot are small unless the robber is caught almost immediately, Pence said.

With the onset of the holiday season, financial institution tellers and clerks should be alert for suspicious-looking customers, he said. "This is a critical period," he said. "Tellers should watch for young men, shabbily dressed, who drive by the window several times or come in and ask for change for a five-dollar bill."

WARWICK, R.I. (AP) — A service station operator has been charged with demanding $25 before he would give a fire extinguisher to a motorist whose car was on fire. "If my car was on fire, I'd never bring it into a gas station, would you?" the attendant, Morris J. Marsh, asked a reporter in an interview later. The car was destroyed before the fire could be extinguished. Marsh, 54, was charged Monday with violating a 1977 law requiring attendants at self-service stations to control fires. "He created a danger to life and property too," said Lt. Richard M. Wheeler.

Punished For 'Ghetto Party'

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — Students who dressed as pimps, prostitutes and alcoholics for a fraternity and sorority "ghetto party," have averted suspension by attending a cultural awareness program. Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity and Alpha Chi Omega sorority at Willamette University sponsored the "Ghetto Function" on Oct. 16. It was criticized later in a student newspaper for racist overtones. The university considered suspending the two groups, but decided it would be more constructive to improve the students' understanding of minorities, said Tim Pierson, director of residence halls.

The Vision: N. C. To Be A Rival To Silicon Valley

By ELISSA McCRARY
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — If state officials have their way, North Carolina will rival California's Silicon Valley and Boston's research environment as a haven for high-technology industry within the next decade.

Construction began last May on the new $24 million N.C. Microelectronics Center in Research Triangle Park. Officials of the center say some specialized equipment will be installed and ready for use in the facility next August.

In the past six months, the Semiconductor Research Cooperative, the microelectronics industry's research arm, announced plans to locate in Research Triangle Park, General Electric Corp. has opened its own microelectronics center in the Research Triangle, the University of North Carolina at Charlotte has asked the Legislature to appropriate $4.5 million to build a microelectronics research facility and Dallas-based Texas Instruments bought property near Raleigh and outside Asheville.

Although Texas Instruments officials say the firm has no immediate plans to build on the property, North Carolina officials say the purchase means the company will build some type of facility in the state.

"Our mission is to support the center through education and basic research functions in order to create an environment in North Carolina conducive to attracting new high-technology industry to the state," says Holt Anderson, secretary-treasurer of the microelectronics center. "This industry will have a great economic impact on the state, particularly from the new industries spawned by microelectronics."

"The growth will be coming all over the state from related industries," he said. "It will have an inkblot effect on the state."

Industry experts predict that microelectronics will grow from 1980's $8 billion in sales to $40 billion by 1990.

The industry produces tiny computer "chips" capable of storing thousands of bits of information.

Gov. Jim Hunt set out two years ago to make microelectronics a key part of North Carolina's industrial growth. He has visited microelectronics companies and research facilities all over the country.

"The microelectronics center is the keystone of the state's efforts to build a solid foundation for microelectronics manufacturing and research," Hunt said. "The training, research and education programs the center supports will be the sparks that ignite a new period of growth and development for North Carolina and the electronics industry."

Last year, the General Assembly appropriated more than $24 million for the creation of the 80,000-square-foot microelectronics center — the largest financial commitment ever made by the state in support of the new technology.

Anderson said the center also is raising substantial sums from private industry, government agencies and foundations.

According to Hunt, the center was established to help the state's universities educate more students in fields related to microelectronics by providing complete research and training facilities.

Universities participating in the center are N.C. State University, N.C. A&T University, the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, UNC at Charlotte and Duke University.

State officials say North Carolina already has a strong base of existing technology compatible with the microelectronics industry. The state leads the Southeast in the manufacture of electrical products. Statistics show that the more than $2 billion a year in shipments by manufacturers of electrical and electronics products in North Carolina represents one fourth of the total production in all eight South Atlantic states.

"There are about 150 different companies that produce electronics products, and these companies are located in all three regions of the state," Anderson said. "Because these related companies are already spread across the state, it is safe to say that the growing microelectronics industry will mean thousands of jobs to residents of every part of the state."

According to industry statistics, a microelectronics firm will pay a technician with about two years of training $6 to $8 an hour, compared with about $5 an hour for an average textile worker.

Hunt has said the impact of the industry's growth will rival that of the industrial revolution.

Meanwhile, critics of the microelectronics industry say they fear North Carolina will be plagued with the same overcrowding and pollution problems as the Silicon Valley area around San Jose, Calif.

Anderson says that won't happen.

"This is a different situation, geographically and in every way," he said. "This is a distributive program that stretches from Raleigh to Charlotte and west. It's just not a valid comparison because geographically we're different, and we have the benefit of seeing what kinds of mistakes have been made in the past and avoiding them in the future here."

"What this is is a wonderful opportunity for North Carolina to attract high-paying industries," he said. "It will be a great opportunity economically for the state."

Soviet Missiles On Target In Testing

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. intelligence sources say the Soviet Union has successfully hit targets thousands of miles apart with long-range missiles in a major test of that country's most advanced submarine-launched nuclear weapon.

Two SSNX-20 missiles were fired from a Soviet submarine in the far north White Sea to the Kamchatka Peninsula while two other missiles reached the mid-Pacific, the sources said Monday.

The latest test firings of the 5,000-mile-range missiles came over the weekend, said the sources, who asked to remain anonymous.

The missiles that landed in the Pacific were said to have carried four warheads each, less than a full load. There was no firm word on the number of warheads on the missiles aimed at Kamchatka.

The SSNX-20 is believed designed to carry up to 12 nuclear warheads. U.S. specialists say the new weapon probably will be placed in the new Typhoon submarine, a giant 25,000-ton vessel equipped with 20 missile-firing tubes.

The SSNX-20 will have a longer range than the newest U.S. submarine-launched missile, the 4,500-mile range Trident. The Trident missiles, each of which carry eight nuclear warheads, were developed to arm the 18,700-ton Trident subs that will be able to fire 24 missiles each.

Some Trident missiles already have been deployed in older Poseidon submarines, replacing earlier-generation weapons the United States has had in combat readiness for years.

The SSNX-20 tests last weekend follows word that the Soviets recently test-launched a new land-based intercontinental ballistic missile.

Wreck, Death By Bowling Ball

WESTLAND, Mich. (AP) — Police have no idea what caused a bowling ball to smash through the windshield of a moving car, killing the driver and injuring his wife.

"We're really stumped," said detective Sgt. Dale Reynolds of the Westland police. "We're kind of going backward in our investigation, trying to find out where the ball came from."

Thomas Hart, 30, died Dec. 5, one day after the ball hit the hood of his car and smashed through his windshield as he was driving. His wife, Linda, 29, received minor injuries.

Hutton Cash Reserve Management. Any day the daily balance falls below $2,500, the interest rate reverts to 5 1/4% for that day. Bonus interest offer limited to individual depositors and a maximum deposit of $100,000.

We've been offering the "newest thing in banking" for two years now.

The new money market accounts are all two years behind North State.

North State's Funds ManagementSM 12.00%.

Ours is better.

Practically every financial institution in the country is introducing a new account this week. And practically every one of them will have a different name for the one they introduce — designed to try to convince you that theirs is somehow more advantageous.

But if you examine them closely, you'll find that they differ from North State's Funds ManagementSM in four basic respects.

- 1) They require a bigger initial deposit.
- 2) They require a minimum balance.
- 3) They don't pay as much interest.
- 4) They are all brand new.

Compare North State's initial deposit.

North State requires an initial deposit of $1000 in our Funds ManagementSM Account.

Compare that with other financials that require $2500 or so to start.

Just like theirs, our Funds ManagementSM is insured to $100,000. But at North State, you can enjoy the high interest of a money market account for a lot less.

If they have a minimum balance, it's higher than ours.

Funds ManagementSM will pay you money market interest on a nickle. Or a penny. We figure it's to your advantage to keep a high minimum balance. So, except for a 3-transaction maximum, we don't burden you with restrictions, requirements, fine print or other things like that.

Since we give you the best deal, we feel certain you'll keep a lot of money with us. But we don't require it.

You get the highest rates at North State.

North State will pay you a better rate than the other new accounts, too.

That's our policy.

Nobody's going to give you a better rate now or in the future.

Compare the Funds ManagementSM rate. If nothing else, our rates will convince you that Funds ManagementSM is better.

We've got two year's experience with money market accounts.

Everybody else is two years behind. We have our accounting procedure, all the mechanics for Funds ManagementSM already in place.

We've been competing successfully with money market funds for quite a while. And we believe that makes Funds ManagementSM better.

So examine the new accounts closely. We believe that if you do, you'll come to North State and open a Funds ManagementSM Account.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market ran up a broad gain today, responding to the latest cut in the Federal Reserve's discount rate.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed 14.41 to 1,036.69 by noontime. Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 5 to 1 among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

After the close on Monday, the Fed cut its discount rate — the charge it sets on loans to private financial institutions — from 9 to 8 1/2 percent.

Analysts interpreted it as an aggressive move by the central bank to stimulate a recovery from the recession.

Interest rates fell and bond prices jumped in the credit markets late Monday after the Fed's announcement. But they leveled off in early activity today.

Among actively traded blue-chip stocks, American Telephone & Telegraph rose 1 1/2 to 62 3/4; International Business Machines 1 1/2 to 95 1/2; and General Motors 1 1/2 to 59 1/2. GM reported higher early-December car sales.

The NYSE's composite index gained .74 to 81.41. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 2.90 to 338.20.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 44.98 million shares at noontime, against 29.55 million at the same point Monday.

Banks And S&Ls...

 said the bank is launching its new Money Rate Account with an interest payment of 15 percent. Ms. Sawyer, who cited a "pretty good turnout" in the first hours of operations today, said that interest reverts to the 5.25 rate paid on standard accounts if the savings balance falls below $2,500.

The local executive for North Carolina National Bank, Larry Mallard, said NCNB is paying 8.9 percent interest on individual deposits, plus a 2 percent incentive premium for 30 days, for an overall 10.9 percent on consumer deposits up to $100,000. Mallard said the rate will go back to the basic 8.9 percent after the first 30 days of the account. According to the spokesman, the base rate can change weekly, based on money market averages.

Mallard said the new program is an investment account with limited transactions and there will be no fees charged for the service as long as the $2,500 minimum is maintained. He said the bank had a number of accounts that were preauthorized fund transfers today to the new program.

North State Savings & Loan launched its high-interest savings account nearly a year ago, according to spokesman Buff Chalk. "Today it takes $1,000 to open the account and there is no minimum balance after it is open. They earn money market rates on every dime in there," he said.

North State currently is paying 12 percent interest, guaranteed for the next seven days. The institution adjusts its rate weekly, but can do so daily if it desires. Chalk said the account, known as the Funds Management Account, has paid up to 15.4 percent and as low as 9.5 percent during the past year.

North State also has had for the past year a Funds Checking Account — similar to those that other institutions will offer starting Jan. 5 — which allows unlimited checking for a flat fee per month, with interest paid on the balance at the same rate it pays on the Funds Management Account. It takes $1,000 to open the Funds Checking Account, with no minimum required after that.

Frank Lawrence, vice president and manager at First American Savings & Loan Association, said his firm was receiving a lot of telephone calls regarding the new accounts but he said it was a little early to tell this morning how the activity would go today.

Lawrence said First American was paying 11 percent interest today on new savings accounts with rates figured on a daily basis. He said an account will earn the regular passbook rate of 5.25 percent if the balance falls below $2,500.

Roscoe King at First Federal Savings & Loan Association said his firm is paying 11.25 percent today and interest on new First Insured Money Funds will be based on the rate for a particular day. King said there will be no service charges for accounts maintaining an average of $2,500.

King said First Federal was "real excited about having the opportunity to offer these accounts." He said today's activity "looks like old times."

Deborah Godley, a spokeswoman at Home Federal Savings & Loan, said the firm's Insured Access Account is offering a percentage rate of 10.708 today with an effective annual yield of 11.25 percent. She said the firm had received a lot of calls this morning and some customers had visited to inquire about the program.

Chris McCoy, vice president at Planters National Bank, said PNB's Insured Money Market Account had set a basic rate of 8.84 percent interest and was offering a premium of two percentage points for the first 30 days. Interest will be set on a daily basis, the spokesman said.

He said, "This is an opportunity we haven't had for a number of years to compete effectively with the brokerage house and insurance companies and local agencies." McCoy added, "It's looking very positive."

Bill Glidewell, senior vice president at First State Bank, said his firm was paying 8.5 percent interest today on its Insured Money Market Accounts. Glidewell said activity at First State was quiet this morning.

Beth Smith, a spokesman at Planters National Bank here, quoted a 9 percent rate, guaranteed for one week, on Money Market Investment Accounts there. She said the interest rates will change each Tuesday.

The new savings accounts were authorized by Congress to allow federally insured banks and savings and loans to compete with money-market mutual funds offered by securities brokers.

While financial institutions have some flexibility in administering the new accounts, an even less restricted high-interest account that was authorized earlier this month by federal regulators will be introduced on Jan. 5. The account will also require a $2,500 minimum balance, but unlimited checking privileges will be allowed.

Today's new savings programs allow customers six automatic transfers per month and only three of the six transfers can be by check.

Guilty Plea To Obscene Mail

RALEIGH — James G. Everette, 42, of Williamston, an award-winning state worker, pleaded guilty Monday in federal court in Raleigh on three counts of mailing obscene matter.

Everette was indicted in September on five counts of mailing film depicting children involved in sexual acts. Authorities said 10 to 50 children, ages 9 to 13, were involved.

Everette, then a rural manpower executive, won an award in 1981 as the outstanding employee in his category with the state Employment Security Commission.

Initially, he pleaded innocent to the charges. Two of the five counts were dismissed after he pleaded guilty to the three charges of mailing obscene matter. He faces a maximum of five years in prison and a $5,000 fine on each count.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — State water officials have ordered a review of design records for small dams after learning that a dam that collapsed in September had been cited 50 years ago for a design flaw that was never corrected.

The North Lake Dam on Bishop Creek in the High Sierras, 19 miles southwest of Bishop, caused an estimated $10 million in damage to mountain communities when it collapsed after heavy rains.

Confirm Death Was Due Fire

WILLIAMSTON — An autopsy has confirmed that Clifford Lee Eubanks, 49, died Sunday morning as the result of smoke inhalation.

The small camper in which Eubanks lived alone, located on U.S. 17 bypass near Holiday Inn, was sighted on fire by an employee of the motel at about 4 a.m. Sunday. The employee called both the fire department and the police station.

The fire was quickly extinguished, and the victim, fully clad, was found on the camper floor. He was not burned, and damage to the camper was minimum. Eubanks was declared dead on arrival at Martin General Hospital.

The camper was heated by a gas ring, and it has been determined that the fire started from the unprotected ring, authorities said.

The Meeting Place

Fumble Return Breaks Oilers' Backs

HOUSTON (AP) — Dallas Cowboys safety Michael Downs had only one worry about accepting an early Christmas gift from Houston Oiler rookie Gary Allen — he feared he might get caught from behind.

But Downs discovered Monday night that, at least on a football field, it is more blessed to receive than to give. Downs scooped up Allen's fourth-quarter fumble and raced 86 yards for a touchdown to break the Oilers' backs and ease the Cowboys to a 37-7 victory that clinched a National Football League record 17th consecutive winning season.

The victory gave them a 5-1 record, putting the Cowboys in a tie with Washington for first place in the National Football League's National Conference standings. Houston is 1-5 in the AFC.

"I kind of thought about not getting caught," Downs confessed after his game breaker. "It's kind of embarrassing for them to run you down from behind. They were inside the 10-yard line and just for us to have possession of the ball was a plus for us."

The Cowboys already were in control of the game, leading 20-7, but Downs' big play stopped an Oiler offensive at the Dallas 7 and put the visitors in solid command of the game.

"It bounced perfectly for me," Downs said. "And I was just able to pick it up and run with it."

"I've never scored a touchdown in all my years of playing football. So for me to score a touchdown now is probably the best thing that could have happened to me. I've been a defensive player for as long as I've been playing."

Downs' cohort in the dissecting of the Oilers was quarterback Danny White, who hit three touchdown passes, two to Butch Johnson, and missed only only six passes all night, completing 21 of 27 for 279 yards.

"I think we're in midseason form," White said. "I don't think there's any question about that. The last two weeks we've played very well in all phases of the football game and both games have really been won in the trenches."

"And to me that's a real key. When the offensive line is executing and we're getting protection for the passing game and running game, that's a sign to me that we're hitting on all cylinders."

White hit Butch Johnson

with touchdown shots of 22 and 18 yards and Rafael Septien hit the first of three field goals to give the Cowboys a 17-7 halftime Septien hit a 36-yarder in the third quarter before Downs' big play.

"It was one of those gimmick plays," explained Oiler quarterback Archie Manning, whose most outstanding statistic was being sacked six times for 39 yards in losses by the Cowboy front four. "We faked to (Earl) Campbell in the line and gave it to Gary. It was just one of those things."

Johnson's primary competition in catching his 18-yard TD pass in the end zone was teammate Tony Hill, who went up for the ball but lost the battle to Johnson.

"It was pure luck that I caught it," Johnson said. "But I had to take advantage of every opportunity. When you only get the ball two times in a game, it's hard to get two touchdowns."

"What he (Coach Tom Landry) tried to do was pacify me. It's just like a little kid... give him a toy and he'll be quiet a little while. So what the heck, I'll be quiet a little while."

The Oilers took the first-quarter lead on Manning's 54-yard touchdown pass to Mike Renfro, who got a step on cornerback Dennis Thurman and raced into the end zone.

Johnson's 22-yard TD reception and Septien's 22-yard field goal put Dallas ahead for good.

Septien added a 53-yard boot and White hit Timmy Newsome with a 46-yard TD pass in the fourth quarter to complete the rout.

Gatlin And Company Playing 'D'; Aiming At Coastal League Title

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

HOLLYWOOD — Keith Gatlin and the D.H. Conley Band of Four has missed hardly a note four games into their '82-83 tour because the Vikings have learned how to tighten up on the 'D'.

Gatlin and Company are undefeated after four games going into tonight's games against Farmville Central (2-2) and D.H. Conley coach Shelley Marsh attributes his team's success, in part, to a new willingness to play defense — man-to-man defense.

"This is the first team I've had confidence in to play man-to-man. The thing about this team is it's more determined," Marsh said. "This is the defense they want to play."

averaging 28.8 points and about 12 rebounds a game. He had a season-high eight assists against Washington.

Gatlin was all-conference, all-East and second-team all-state last season and was recruited by, among others, Georgetown, DePaul and N.C. State.

"He is the player on the Conley team," Marsh said, "but without Keith this team still would be able to have a winning season."

The Vikings are no one-man team. Three other starters return from last year's Coastal Conference championship team and the Vikings were further strengthened with the transfer of Mitchell Cox from North Pitt.

Back this year is swingman Otis Payton (6-2, 195 senior), guard Donald Wilson (5-6, 135 junior) and forward Leon Cox (6-0, 164 senior). Reggie Smith, a 6-4, 179-pound sophomore, starts at center.

Payton is a full-time starter and Wilson and Mitchell Cox share duty at guard opposite Gatlin. Leon Cox has also started this season.

Marsh said the transfer of Mitchell Cox to DHC has only served to make Gatlin — and the Vikings — better. Cox's prime job was to run the North Pitt offense, which he did well enough to help the Panthers win the districts and advance to the Eastern Regionals.

"Keith is averaging six points more than last year, and those six points are attributable to the presence of Mitchell Cox," Marsh said.

Where before Gatlin was called on to bring the ball up court, run the offense and score, Cox has come on to shoulder some of that burden.

"It's added a new dimension to Keith's game," Marsh said. "Mitchell is a ballhandler and he can control the ball and Keith can go inside more."

Other Viking players include guards Raymond Reddick (6-0, 165 junior), Randy Holloman (5-9 155 junior) and Arthell Ruffin (5-9, 180 senior) and forwards Alan Coward (6-2, 148 sophomore) and Raymond Dawson (6-0, 172 junior).

With their depth — and four starters back and the addition of Cox — the Vikes appear well set to defend their title against West Craven, which figures to be their chief challenger in the Coastal Conference.

"We're picked to finish second by a lot of people," he said. "Last year we were picked to finish third, but we surprised some people. Anything we do this year won't be a surprise."

Still, Marsh said: "I think it's gonna be between us and West Craven. I feel at this point we're not quite as good as we were last year. But, I feel by the end of the year we'll be better than last year."

Marsh said the transfer of Mitchell Cox to DHC has only served to make Gatlin — and the Vikings — better. Cox's prime job was to run the North Pitt offense, which he did well enough to help the Panthers win the districts and advance to the Eastern Regionals.

"Keith is averaging six points more than last year, and those six points are attributable to the presence of Mitchell Cox," Marsh said.

Where before Gatlin was called on to bring the ball up court, run the offense and score, Cox has come on to shoulder some of that burden.

"It's added a new dimension to Keith's game," Marsh said. "Mitchell is a ballhandler and he can control the ball and Keith can go inside more."

Other Viking players include guards Raymond Reddick (6-0, 165 junior), Randy Holloman (5-9 155 junior) and Arthell Ruffin (5-9, 180 senior) and forwards Alan Coward (6-2, 148 sophomore) and Raymond Dawson (6-0, 172 junior).

With their depth — and four starters back and the addition of Cox — the Vikes appear well set to defend their title against West Craven, which figures to be their chief challenger in the Coastal Conference.

"We're picked to finish second by a lot of people," he said. "Last year we were picked to finish third, but we surprised some people. Anything we do this year won't be a surprise."

Still, Marsh said: "I think it's gonna be between us and West Craven. I feel at this point we're not quite as good as we were last year. But, I feel by the end of the year we'll be better than last year."

Bannister Signs Pact With White Sox

CHICAGO (AP) — Although Chicago White Sox catcher Carlton Fisk denies it, club owners credit him with being the bait that caught "the big fish," 27-year-old left-hander Floyd Bannister, the most pursued pitcher in major league baseball's re-entry draft.

White Sox owners Jerry Reinsdorf and Eddie Einhorn announced Monday night that Bannister, the American League strikeout leader last season, had agreed to a five-year contract with the Sox. Although Reinsdorf and Einhorn declined comment on the terms of the pact, the Chicago Sun-Times reported that it was for $4.5 million. "We weren't the high bidder," said Reinsdorf at an airport news conference. "I think that this was the right deal for Floyd, and I don't think it was the finances that got him here," Reinsdorf said.

Tom Reich, and White Sox management. Fisk was the last Chicago representative to speak with Bannister before the agreement was reached, Einhorn said. Fisk, who said he knows Bannister only professionally, said the pitcher was most interested in the Sox' chances of being pennant contenders in 1983, the strength of their bullpen and pitching conditions at the home park. "Comiskey Park's a pitcher's ballpark," Fisk said he told Bannister. As for the chances of the Sox being in contention: "It was a matter of five outs, one way or other, all year long" in 1982, he said. The catcher also said he praised the Chicago bullpen and pointed out that the Sox had some 40 saves last season. Bannister pitched only seven games in the minors before being the first player in the nation picked in the June 1976 free-agent draft as the top choice of the Houston Astros. In his rookie season, 1977, he was 8-9 and finished the campaign with four straight wins. He was traded to the Mariners for shortstop Craig Reynolds in December 1978. He has a career mark of 6.5 strikeouts per game.

Georgia Tech Rolls To Win

By The Associated Press Georgia Tech won its third game in four outings this year in the only game involving Atlantic Coast Conference teams Monday night.

In games tonight, Duke's young club goes after its third victory of the campaign when it hosts Davidson, and Maryland entertains Towson State.

The Yellow Jackets defeated the University of the South 85-41 Monday. Freshman Mark Price led the way with 18 points as all Georgia Tech starters scored in double figures.

Danny Pearson added 17 points and Maurice Bradford, John Salley and George Thomas had 12 each.

Price scored 12 points in the first half as the Jackets raced to an 8-0 start and a 39-19 lead at intermission. They built the lead to 81-33 with five minutes left in the game before the Tigers outscored them 8-4 in the final minutes.

Rick Blackburn and Jim Folds each scored eight for the Tigers, 3-3.

Tech coach Bobby Cremins admitted afterward that Monday's game against the Division III club was intended as a confidence builder for his inexperienced club.

"I hope it wasn't boring for the fans," Cremins said, "and I hope we use this as a learning experience. In the second half I think we may have learned something."

He admits he scheduled two weak teams early, hoping to build his team's confidence. "If we had opened against the Alabamas and the Kentuckys, we'd probably be 0-4 right now," he said. Instead Tech is 3-1, with victories over Wolford and St. Francis.

"Obviously we're not prepared to play in the Atlantic Coast Conference right now," Cremins said. "The problem I have with this team is realizing how young it is."

"Right now, I'm concerned with getting them to play together as a team. Defensively, we're too loose, and offensively we're going to have to get more leadership out of Price and George Thomas. I need for our big guys to get better."

Conley Girls Seek Coastal Title

By RICK SCOPPE Reflector Sports Writer HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley coach Joy James admits it: 1982 could be the year of the Valkyries. It should be, what with four starters back — three of whom were all-conference.

But, James also admits feeling the pressure of being looked upon as the best the Coastal Conference offers this season.

"I feel the pressure. I feel like everybody is going to be out to get us," James said. "We should be the team to beat in the conference. I'm not saying we'll win it, but we should."

The Valkyries feel the same way, but are more convinced than even James that 1982 is their year.

"They want it so bad," James said. "They set their sights very high. They want to play in the districts. They say, 'Miss James you keep saying you want to win the conference. We're going to win the districts.'"

The Valkyries, who are 4-0 entering tonight's game against winless Farmville Central, have the nucleus to do just that, a nucleus of four players that led Conley to a share of the Coastal Conference title last year.

The Valkyries advanced to the second round of the districts last year before losing to eventual state champion SouthWest Edgecombe.

Leading the list of returnees are three all-conference players: center Karen Barrett (5-10, junior), guard Darlene Cannon (5-5, senior) and forward Mechio Kornegay (5-7, senior). Back also is senior guard Irish Barnhill (5-5, senior). Debbie Patrick (5-8, sophomore) starts at the other forward.

Top reserves include: guard Cheryl Thompson (5-4, senior) and center/forward Lisa Mills (5-11, sophomore).

Others on the team are: forwards Jackie Daniels (5-6, senior), Kim Chipman (5-7, junior) and Lori Kandrotas (5-6, senior) and guards Mary Mitchell (5-6, senior), Karen Credle (5-6, freshman) and Angela Smith (5-6, sophomore).

"Our quickness and experience, those are the two things we've got going for us," James said. "Those two things are going to help us win a lot of games this year."

The Valkyries use that quickness to spearhead their fast break.

"We still run the break well," James said. "Any time you can run the ball with the quickness we have it's going to help."

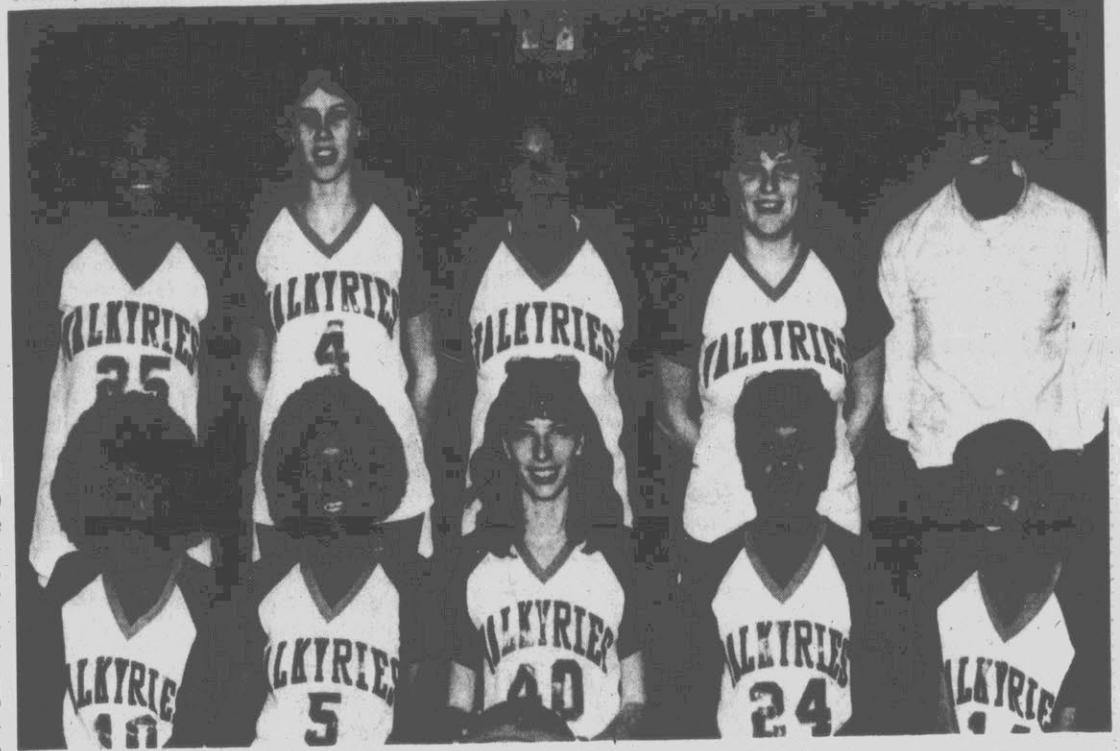

The Valkyries are also shooting better, having hit 50% from the field in the first three games this year.

"The girls seem to be taking better shots this year," James said. "Having four starters back who have already played together for two years helps. They pretty much know where they're all going to be."

Two areas James feels her teams needs work are rebounding and defense. "The one thing that really concerns me is our rebounding," James said. "That was one of our weaknesses last year."

As for defense, James said: "That's the one thing we really need to work on is defense. They're breaking down in communications. They're not communicating as much as I'd like."

Eagle Coach May Give It Up

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — After a long tough climb to Super Bowl XV, a tumble to the bottom of the National Football Conference has left Philadelphia Eagles Coach Dick Vermeil with thoughts of handing in his clipboard.

Vermeil, brooding over a 23-7 loss to the New York Giants Saturday and a 1-5 season record, said Monday that he has considered turning over the team to defensive co-ordinator Marion Campbell.

"There have been times when I've felt like just walking out and saying 'Marion, I'm letting these guys down, you take it.' I feel a tremendous obligation to these guys. But you just can't do that as a coach," he said.

Vermeil built a National Football League power at Philadelphia, reaching the playoffs in each of the past four years, but the Eagles have won just two of their last 12 regular-season and playoff games, with only a 24-21 victory over Cleveland to their credit this season.

Now, with three games left to play, Philadelphia is guaranteed its first losing season in the NFL since 1977, when they went 5-9 in Vermeil's second year as coach.

"I kind of believe that we will end up playing a real good football game one of these days. I just don't know what day it's going to be," Vermeil said.

Two more losses out of the three remaining games (against Houston, Dallas and the Giants again) will give the Eagles their worst season record since they went 2-11-1 in 1972, a year that concluded with the firing of the entire coaching staff.

Last week, after a 23-20 loss to the St. Louis Cardinals, Eagles owner Leonard Tose gave vent to his frustration in the locker room, telling his players they might as well vote down the NFL Players Association contract and go back on strike.

Vermeil said Monday that he thinks his players all know and understand Tose, and that the owner's outburst probably is not on their minds.

But Vermeil bristled at a suggestion that he start thinking about 1983, using the rest of this season to test younger players.

"I sure wouldn't want my players to start thinking that," he said. "We'd have a hard time winning one or two or three games that we have left to play. And a lot of you guys, if you were in the same situation and thought that way, you'd probably get fired."

"You look into 1983 for me," he said. "I don't have any thought about 1983."

The view from the bottom has included some guesses about what went wrong. Outside linebacker Reggie Wilkes said old leaders are missed, like retired linebacker Bill Bering and nose guard Charlie Johnson, traded to Minnesota during the preseason at his request.

Quarterback Ron Jaworski recently suggested that the long players' strike had a lot to do with the nosedive, but a glum Vermeil had another view of the eight-week layoff.

"Maybe the strike saved us a lot of losses," he mused.

These Two Didn't Need Shot Clock

By The Associated Press

With eight NCAA Division I basketball conferences featuring a shot clock this season, it's more prevalent than ever before.

But Alabama State and South Carolina State didn't need one, after scoring a total of 248 points between them Monday night.

"We broke loose and played the way we're capable of," said Alabama State Coach James Oliver after a wide-open 135-113 victory over South Carolina State. "We were due to break loose. After having a couple of tough games, we really put it together for our first game back home."

Alabama State, playing in Division I for the first time this year, came off a 99-76 loss to Georgetown last week when the Hoyas were ranked No. 3.

The Hornets face another tough opponent Wednesday night when they play No. 13 Arkansas.

Lewis Jackson led the Hornets with 43 points and Melvin Armstrong scored 32, while Michael Freeman had a school-record 17 assists as Alabama State improved its record to 5-1.

Alabama State led at the half 60-45 and the Bulldogs, despite shooting a sizzling 88.6 percent from the free throw line, were never able to close the margin. The Hornets led by as many as 25 points in the second half.

Jackson said Alabama State's game with Georgetown gave him confidence.

"I felt confident when I went out on the floor tonight," Jackson said. "I just had all the shots open tonight and took them. I felt like I had the hot hand, so I kept shooting."

Eighth-ranked Missouri, the only Top Twenty team in action Monday night, beat Eastern Illinois 76-61 as Steve Stipanovich scored 21 points. Stipanovich's three-point play gave Missouri a 14-2 lead seven minutes into the game, and the Tigers surged to a 41-24 lead at halftime.

Eastern Illinois outscored Missouri 18-11 early in the second half to close the gap to 54-42 with 11:48 left, but the Panthers were unable to get closer than 10 points the rest of the way. Tim Dykstra led the Panthers with 16 points.

"They're a great basketball team," said Eastern Illinois Coach Rick Samuels. "They seem to always take advantage of the smallest miscues. We felt like we had an outside glimmer of a chance to win, but we would have had to play our very best game."

In other action, Sam Vincent scored 22 points, including crucial free throws down the stretch, as Michigan State beat Cincinnati 70-69; Peter Williams, Pace Mannion and Chris Winans combined for 34 points as Utah handed Weber State its first loss of the season, 62-52; Wayman Tisdale scored 25 points to lead the Oklahoma Sooners to a 99-75 rout over Idaho State and Anthony Welch scored 28 points, including two free throws with 15 seconds to go, to lead Illinois to a 79-77 double-overtime victory over Vanderbilt.

Wade Plans To Be Busy On Wimbledon Week

LONDON (AP) — Virginia Wade plans to be back at Wimbledon next year, wearing three hats.

The 37-year-old British tennis star, a former Wimbledon champion, said she will:

- Play in the championships for the 22nd straight year.
- Do television commentary on the matches.
- Help to run the championships as a member of the management committee of the All-England Club.

"I don't think there will be any clash of interests," she said.

"I have always been known as a very discreet person, and there should be no problems."

Wade was elected to the management committee Monday and because the first woman to break into a traditional all-male preserve. Men have run this exclusive tennis and croquet club ever since it was founded in 1877.

"Until this was first mentioned a couple of months ago I would never have thought of it as even a remote possibility," Wade said. "It's absolutely unbelievable."

"But it's a terrific thing for the All-England Club, too. It shows that the club is progressive and wants to strengthen its contacts with the players."

Wade has made her home in New York since the explosion of professional tennis in the early 70s.

Now she is phasing out her playing career, plans to play in fewer tournaments and to spend more time in her London home.

"From next April I will be a full tax-paying resident of the United Kingdom again," she said.

April is the start of the British tax year. British citizens who spend less than five weeks a year in the country are exempt from British taxes.

"Since I am less busy on the circuit this year, and plan to live in Britain anyway, this is a good time to join the committee," Wade said.

"I would love to go on playing at Wimbledon. For one thing, I don't want to make a sudden change from player to official, as some have done. That's not how I want people to think of me."

Wade is one of only three British women players who have won the Wimbledon singles title since World War II.

Wade also has won the U.S., Australian and Italian Open titles and has twice captained the British women's team to victory over the United States in the Wightman Cup.

George Allen, then coach of the Washington Redskins, hired an expert to chart the angle of the sun in the Los Angeles Coliseum before Super Bowl VII against Miami.

GCA Juniors Top Whitfield

GRIMESLAND — Greenville Christian Academy junior high boys, led by Thomas Taylor's 20 points, defeated G.R. Whitfield, 41-39, Monday.

G.R. Whitfield's girls, sparked by Linda Hardy's 19 points, whipped GCA's, 28-7.

Sonya Dellano led GCA's girls with four points.

Whitfield's boys were led by Shelton Boyd with 15 and Ron Daniels with 10.

Bowl Victory Would Mean Lot To Hungry Brigham Young Team

SAN DIEGO (AP) — For bowl-hopping Ohio State, Friday's Holiday Bowl appearance — the Buckeyes' 11th in a row — is just another road show. For prestige-starved Brigham Young University, it's everything.

"It's the most significant game in the school's history," said BYU Coach LaVell Edwards, whose unranked Cougars are six-point underdogs to the Big 10 champions.

Despite seven consecutive Western Athletic Conference titles and the reputation as the nation's passingest team, BYU has come up short in the national polls.

Beating a football power of Ohio State's stature would be a major step for the Cougars and the WAC, long maligned as a weak sister to the major conferences.

"We're the new kids on the block and haven't had many opportunities to play teams of this caliber," Edwards said Monday during BYU's first full-scale workout of bowl week.

His coaching staff and players welcome the opportunity, he said.

"They're excited. The kids have grown up thinking Ohio State is something special."

"When you play the Ohio States, Oklahomas, Nebraskas and USCs, you're not only playing great teams, you're playing great programs," said Edwards.

For the first time in four years, the Cougars, 8-3, go into the game unranked, but a total of seven points separated the team from an unbeaten season.

One of the losses was a 17-14 setback to Georgia, currently No. 1 ranked, after BYU led 14-7 late in the game. A 44-yard Georgia field goal with 1:11 left offset BYU's 339-275 margin in total offense.

"That game gave us a lot of confidence," said Edwards, who has guided the Cougars to seasons of 11-1, 12-1, 11-2 and 8-3.

BYU, behind the passing magic of Jim McMahon, won the last two Holiday Bowls, defeating Southern Methodist 46-45 in a miracle finish and Washington State 38-36 last year.

Edwards says the Cougars can't count on catching Ohio State, 8-3 and ranked 17th, unprepared for the pass.

"A couple years ago, we had an advantage playing against teams that didn't throw the ball very much. Now the Big Ten throws it more than anybody."

The streaking Buckeyes have won six in a row, including a 24-14 triumph over Michigan in the regular-season finale.

Actress' Friend Heard Quarrel Before Murder

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Actress Dominique Dunne and a former boyfriend quarreled outside her house just before she was found strangled in a neighbor's driveway, a friend of the actress has testified.

David Packer testified he was inside Miss Dunne's home when he heard screams. He said he looked outside and saw John Sweeney with his knees up his back towards the street. I locked eyes with him and he said to call the police.

The testimony came Monday at a hearing for Sweeney, Miss Dunne's former boyfriend, who is accused in the fatal attack Oct. 30. Testimony was to resume today.

Miss Dunne, 22, who appeared in the Steven Spielberg movie thriller

"Poltergeist," never regained consciousness. She died Nov. 4 after five days on life-support systems.

Sweeney, 26, a former day chef at the fashionable Ma Maison restaurant, had moved out of the home he shared with Miss Dunne shortly before her death. The actress was killed during an argument over Sweeney's wish to move back in, Packer said.

Packer, a 20-year-old actor who said he shared agents with the victim, told Judge Pro Tem David Kidney that he went to Miss Dunne's West Hollywood home the night of the attack to discuss a film script.

He said the actress showed him boxes she had received that day from Sweeney containing pumpkins, a face carved in chocolate and three pink flowers.

"She told me she was going to tell him she could not live with him any further," Packer said.

Shortly after Packer arrived, Sweeney knocked on the door and told Miss Dunne "We have to talk about this," Packer said. Miss Dunne went outside, and several minutes later, Packer said he overheard the pair arguing.

"I heard Mr. Sweeney say, 'but this is my house also' in a voice loud enough so I could hear it," Packer said.

He said Miss Dunne's sobbing reply was unintelligible. Soon after, Packer said he heard a "banging" noise and then screams.

Deputy Medical Examiner Eva Heuser, who performed the autopsy, testified that the actress died of strangulation. She said there were bruises on her neck, skull and both collarbones.

Miss Dunne made her film debut in "Poltergeist" as Dana, oldest of the Freeling children whose home is terrorized by spirits.

Her television credits included roles in "Lou Grant," "Family," "Fame" and "Breaking Away."

She was the niece of author-screenwriter John Gregory Dunne and sister of Griffin Dunne, who starred in the film, "American Werewolf in London."

Kate Injured In Accident

OLD SAYBROOK, Conn. (AP) — Actress Katherine Hepburn was hospitalized overnight for treatment of a broken ankle after she lost control of her car on a snow-covered road and hit a utility pole.

Miss Hepburn, 73, was on state Route 154 near her summer home when the accident occurred Monday, police said.

"The road was snow-covered and it appears her attention was probably diverted from driving," said Old Saybrook Police Chief Edmund Mosca. "There didn't appear to be any skidding or anything of that nature."

No charges were filed as police continued their investigation.

Also injured in the accident was Miss Hepburn's secretary, Phyllis Wilbourn. Both were in good condition Monday night at Hartford Hospital, spokesman James Battaglio said.

Miss Hepburn's sister, Marion Hepburn Grant of West Hartford, said Miss Hepburn decided to stay overnight at the hospital to allow doctors time to X-ray her broken ankle and set it.

"She was very lucky," Mrs. Grant said. "I don't know why they didn't get more seriously hurt."

The four-time Academy Award winner, whose films include "Morning Glory," "On Golden Pond" and "The African Queen," had been en route to New York City in a rented car, Mrs. Grant said.

'Mail Order Bride' Movie Adds Twists Earning Early Attention

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Boy meets girl. Boy loses girl. Boy sues girl. Boy gets girl. CBS puts a legal wrinkle on a standard television vehicle tonight in the totally implausible, halfway diverting "I Was a Mail Order Bride."

Another significant twist is that the relationship between Valerie Bertinelli ("One Day at a Time") and Ted Wass ("Soap") is never what it appears to be — a charade reminiscent in style, but not substance, of Cary Grant's movies and, later, the pillow farces of Rock Hudson and Doris Day.

Kate Tosconi (Miss Bertinelli) is a magazine writer who plants a bogus marriage proposal in the newspaper personal section so she can do a story on the men who seek marriage by Federal Express. The story idea is not her's. Kate, you see, has journalistic integrity. She calls the idea "repulsive" and accepts the assignment only after extracting her editor's promise of meatier stories.

Robert Fitzgerald (Wass) is a recently divorced Los Angeles lawyer, enjoying the singles bar scene, who answers the ad on a high-stakes bet that he can't stay celibate for two weeks. His character is established in a racketball scene when he says: "Winning's everything, even if you have to give up your body to win a point."

The premise is weak but has enough fluffy charm to sustain early attention. It's never an intelligent farce, though, opting for pie-in-the-face philosophy rather than cleverness.

The snag to their respective games, inevitably, is that Kate and Robert fall in love but can't react because they're mired in their ruses.

Kate, whose private lifestyle leans toward quickie sex over emotional attachments, has found her ideal macho man, one with sensitivity and warmth. It seems the handsome Robert can also cook and sew.

For his part, Robert likes the looks of Kate. Miss Bertinelli, an actress who has shed her adolescence in our living rooms, fills the part of the sexually active, sophisticated woman of today.

The film is breezily entertaining when Kate and Robert are doing their approach-avoidance, role-reversal routines. She keeps trying to get him into his bedroom, but he panics in the clinches. Robert's bet with his friend and law partner, Joe (Ken Kimmins), is Robert's sports car against Joe's boat — a strong enough motivation for him to resist Kate's aggressiveness.

One major problem of the film is that this unconventional farce too quickly forgets the building relationship for the dissolving one. After Robert confesses his love and his charade, Kate gets all huffy — she was no innocent here, either — and returns to Chicago to write a magazine article ridiculing Robert. The film then bogs down in convoluted courtroom activity, in which Robert's libel suit against Kate is played out. "I'm suing you because you made a public mockery of my deepest feelings," he says.

It was almost as if scriptwriter Stephen Vito didn't know how to finish the film, so he chose a nonsensical legal proceeding and then a cliché-ridden train scene that would have worked only in a men's cologne ad. At least Cary Grant's movies — see "I Was a Male War Bride" — satisfied in the end.

Memorial In Abbey For Lewis Carroll

By GRAHAM HEATHCOTE
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — Lewis Carroll created a little girl named Alice who wandered a wonderland of make-believe in Victorian England — and into hearts everywhere. Now nearly 85 years after his death, Carroll will be honored in the Poet's Corner at Westminster Abbey.

A memorial stone to the man who wrote "Alice in Wonderland" and "Through the Looking-Glass" will be unveiled following services in the abbey Friday, the 150th anniversary year of the writer's birth. He died Jan. 14, 1898.

Abbey authorities and sponsors of the memorial strongly rejected assertions by some modern writers that Carroll was sexually attracted to little girls. Noted poet John Betjeman was among sponsors who convinced the abbey that Carroll is worthy of respect and will enjoy lasting fame.

"We completely disregard that gossip," Lindsay Fulcher, a London librarian and secretary of the Lewis Carroll Society, told The Associated Press in a recent interview.

"I see all that as a sensationalist, post-Freudian view of the man. Anyone who knows anything about the Victorian social structure and Victorian attitudes, knows that children were the symbols of purity, especially in the rigorous high society of Oxford," Ms. Fulcher said.

Carroll, whose real name was Charles Lutwidge

Dodgson, was the son of a clergyman. He never married, and for nearly 30 years taught mathematics at Christ Church, the Oxford University college. Alice Liddell, who inspired the Alice of the stories, was the daughter of the college dean.

Carroll was an early photographer of children, as well as a mathematician, storyteller and poet. His preference for photographing little girls, some barely clothed, led to speculation about his sexual preferences.

When Carroll began composing the adventures of his imaginary Alice for Alice Liddell on July 4, 1862, they were with her two sisters and a clergyman friend in a rowboat. Carroll was 30 and Alice Liddell was 7.

"Mrs. Liddell gave famous parties and rubbed shoulders with royalty. I cannot believe there was any hanky-panky between her daughters and a man in the employment of the university and very much under the dean's eye and thumb," said Ms. Fulcher.

"And there is nothing in the letters of Carroll to his family and friends to suggest anything like it," Ms. Fulcher said. "He was a born bachelor who delighted in the company of children and, in a way, was a child himself."

She said Carroll deserves the Abbey memorial because after William Shakespeare, Carroll is "the most translated writer of English fiction — 20 editions of 'Alice' in the Soviet Union alone. I have it in Norwegian, Gregg shorthand and Esperanto."

Yesterday's Cryptiquip — NEW PHOTOGRAPHER'S VIEWS WERE NEGATIVE.
Today's Cryptiquip clue: X equals O.

The Cryptiquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

A Holiday Tradition

Millions of people world-wide are trimming Christmas trees this week, although no one knows exactly how the tradition began. According to one legend, the Scandinavians once worshipped trees, and when they converted to Christianity, they kept the tree as part of their Christian festivals. The ancient Romans exchanged green tree branches for good luck at the beginning of the new year. The Germans were probably the first to decorate trees at Christmas. And Martin Luther may have been the first to use lights on a Christmas tree. Supposedly, he decorated a tree with candles to represent the starry skies over Bethlehem on the night of Christ's birth.

DO YOU KNOW — Who wrote the poem "A Visit from St. Nicholas," better known as "The Night Before Christmas"?

Doubt Tax Will Reduce Smoking

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The increase in the federal cigarette tax probably won't have much immediate impact on consumption, but could gradually lessen smoking as teenagers become discouraged by high prices and kick the habit, a magazine article says.

"Researchers generally agree that lifelong smoking patterns are usually established in the teens and early 20s," said the article, in the November issue of N.C. Insight.

The article notes that since smoking patterns are established during the late teens and early 20s, long-term consumption of cigarettes could be reduced as those teen-agers continue to abstain from cigarettes as they get old.

It also said teenage males are the only people likely to smoke less because of the 8-cent-per-pack tax increase.

The magazine is published by the North Carolina Center for Public Policy Research Inc., a non-profit, non-partisan organization established to study state government policies and practices. The story was written by Bill Finger, the publication's editor.

"A cigarette tax increase will indeed cause some decline in consumption," the article said. "But the amount of consumption decline can only be measured in the abstract, using ... figures which vary significantly among economists."

Since 1951, the federal excise tax has remained at 8 cents per pack, which during the same period state taxes rose from an average of 2.8 cents per pack to 13.4 cents per pack.

Because the federal tax remained unchanged for so long, there's no way to measure its effect on consumption, the article said. "But analysts generally agree that sharp increases in state taxes have caused some decline in consumption," it added.

Turning to the question of whether farmers will be hurt by the tax increase, the article said any answer would have to take into account other factors presently causing trouble for growers.

There is a wealth of talent Down Under—both in playing bridge and in writing about the game. An intriguing book of single dummy problems has recently arrived on these shores. "Problems in Play," by Denis Priest (Queensland University Press, 167 pp., paperback, $8.95. Available from Bridge World Magazine, 39 West 94th Street, New York, N.Y. 10025, $8.50 plus $7.75 postage and handling). It is a collection of 100 problems of varying difficulty. They are all interesting and have instructional value. If, at $0.99, the book is a trifle expensive, it is a small price to pay to improve your game.

By and large, the problems are posed without any bidding, but the auction shown is possible. After a weak two heart opening bid by South, North's two no trump asks for a feature. When South shows a club value, North can see nine probable tricks, with a possible tenth from a diamond ruff. To study the problem as it would appear in the book, cover the East and West hands with your thumbs and plan the play.

West leads the king of diamonds, then shifts to a trump, ducked by East. If you win and lead a diamond, you expose yourself to defeat. As the cards lie, East wins and plays the ace of hearts and another, and you don't have a tenth trick.

You have a second possibility available, but you must combine the lines. You might be able to set up a long spade in dummy, so at trick three you cash the ace of spades and ruff a spade in hand. Now lead a diamond.

If the defenders win and eliminate your diamond ruff, you win the third trump in dummy and ruff another spade. Cross to the queen of clubs and ruff a spade, setting up dummy's fifth spade. You still have the ace of clubs on the table to get there and take a diamond discard on the thirteenth spade.

High Interest Checking Part Of Banking Changes

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer
It's a checking account. It's a high-interest account. It's SuperNOW!

The SuperNOW account is coming to banks and thrift institutions beginning Jan. 5. It is similar to existing NOW accounts, but will earn more money and require a higher minimum balance—at least $2,500.

The SuperNOW is part of the move toward deregulation of the banking industry. Like the money-market savings accounts being introduced by banks and savings and loans today, it is designed to compete with money-market funds.

The new accounts offer consumers the chance to earn high interest without tying up their money for a long time. And they are insured by the federal government.

In exchange, you may have to pay more when you want to borrow. And you will have to shop more carefully to sort out the claims of competing financial institutions.

Here is how the SuperNOW will work:

You will have to make a minimum deposit of $2,500. Each account will be insured for up to $100,000.

There is no limit on the amount of interest an institution can pay, but the rate will fluctuate according to market conditions. The rate cannot be guaranteed for more than one month.

You can write an unlimited number of checks, but if your balance drops below $2,500 the interest rate will drop to a maximum of 5 1/2 percent—the same as the rate on NOW accounts. (The letters stand for negotiated order of withdrawal.)

Individual institutions will set their own fees and conditions. Some may require deposits higher than $2,500; others may restrict the size of checks or impose monthly service or per-check charges.

Banks and S&Ls are still working out the details of the SuperNOWs—which were approved by regulators barely a week ago. "We really don't know all the answers," said Richard C. Kane, a senior vice president at Citibank in New York.

The SuperNOW accounts are similar to the money-market accounts—except that they offer unlimited checking—but they will pay lower interest. The initial rate for the money-market accounts is expected to be about 10 percent; the rate for SuperNOWs probably will be about one percentage point less than the money-market rate as of Jan. 5.

That's partly because the banks and S&Ls will be required to maintain a reserve for the SuperNOW accounts of 3 percent to 12 percent depending on the amount of SuperNOW deposits they have. That means they must set aside—in reserve—3 percent to 12 percent of SuperNOW deposits; they cannot earn interest on that money. There is no reserve requirement for money-market accounts. This makes them cheaper for the institutions.

Another reason SuperNOWs will pay less, according to William L. Kundert, vice president of the personal banking department at Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust Co. in Chicago, is that "a checking account is just a much more expensive account to run than a savings account."

Kundert said the new accounts will not replace existing passbook savings or checking accounts. If you don't regularly keep $2,500 on deposit, the accounts are not for you. "The customer is going to have to be looking at what kind of balances he or she expects to be keeping and, on the basis of that, making a decision... If a person thinks he or she is likely to go below $2,500, it might make sense to remain with a regular NOW account or even a regular checking account."

Kundert added: "I think that a person will continue to have a transaction account, be it a regular checking account, a NOW account or a SuperNOW, depending on balances. He or she also will have some sort of liquid savings instrument, either a passbook savings or the money-market account, again depending on balances. And many people will continue to have some sort of money in certificates of deposit where the rate is guaranteed for the life of the instrument."

The $2,500 minimum for the new accounts is more than twice as high as the minimum for NOW accounts or for many money-market mutual funds.

A survey by the American Bankers Association showed that the average minimum balance required by banks which offered NOW accounts was $1,185 as of 1981.

Reg Green of the Investment Company Institute, said the typical minimum required for money-market funds is $1,000, but some funds require no minimum at all. He also said that although the funds are not insured, "nobody's ever lost a penny."

Green predicted that much of the money which will be deposited in both money-market accounts and SuperNOWs at banks and S&Ls will come from existing accounts—not from the money-market funds. "We think the prime candidates (for the new accounts) are the people who stayed with the banks," he said.

Has No Apology For Shoplifting

PARAMUS, N.J. (AP)—A police chief whose officers briefly detained the wife of a Soviet diplomat on suspicion of shoplifting says it will be a "hot day in Siberia" before he apologizes.

And although foreign diplomats and their families are immune from prosecution for many crimes in the United States, a U.S. official says he does not believe international law was violated in the incident Saturday.

Robert Moller, counselor to the U.S. mission to the United Nations, said Monday it does not appear that police in this northern New Jersey community could have released the woman, Yelena Tarasova, any sooner.

"It's incumbent that they verify diplomatic immunity," Moller said. "I'm sure 15 minutes is not an extraordinary amount of time. Our concern is to be sure the law and international treaties are being upheld. It looks like there were no problems."

Mrs. Tarasova, 32, was stopped by a security guard outside a discount clothing store, the Burlington Coat Factory Warehouse. Police Chief Joseph Delaney said his officers were summoned by security guards and Mrs. Tarasova was taken to department headquarters.

The security guards said when they confronted Mrs. Tarasova outside the store, she was trying to conceal a pair of children's tights. They said she threw the tights at them when she was stopped.

Mrs. Tarasova was released as soon as a telephone call confirmed that her husband, Guennady Tarasova, is a counselor with the Soviet mission to the United Nations in New York City, where they live, Delaney said.

Tarasova asked for an official apology Saturday, but Delaney refused. He refused again Monday when he met with Nikita Matkovsky, the third secretary in the Soviet mission to the United Nations.

Matkovsky, reached Monday at the Soviet U.N. mission, said he would not comment on his meeting with Delaney.

"We shook hands when he came in, but we didn't shake hands when he left," Delaney said of the 25-minute meeting. "I said it would be a hot day in Siberia before we officially apologize."

"I told him we extended every courtesy and charges were not filed, and if it was a U.S. citizen, they would have been fingerprinted, photographed and bail would have been set for a court appearance."

GoldenK Holds Holiday Dinner

President Noah G. Raynor presented five-year perfect attendance awards to Henry C. Oglesby and Warren Bezanon.

The Club President Award was presented by presidential adviser Claude J. Goodman to past President Samuel C. Winchester Sr. in recognition of his outstanding service to Golden K.

The committee on arrangement consisted of Robert P. McGinty, chairman, Ralph E. Birchard, Elmo G. Dupree, Edgar L. Harrington, Sr. Linda F. Stokes and Siman J. Waters.
