Sewage Treatment Plant May Be Started In 1983

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Construction of a new sewage treatment plant for Greenville could get under way next year — 12 to 24 months sooner than expected — with 87½ percent of the estimated $10.4 million price tag being paid for from federal and state money, Greenville Utilities commissioners were told Tuesday night.

The Greenville project could be moved to "fifth place in the fiscal year 1983 (Oct. 1, 1982, to Sept. 30, 1983) funding priorities," GUC Director Charles Horne told commission members. But he said the final position of Greenville on the municipal construction grant priority list will depend on a state Department of Environmental Management public hearing next week in Raleigh, and final approval of the funding schedule by DEM in mid-January.

Although planning for the new waste-water treatment plant began in 1973, changes in regulations and federal red tape delayed the completion and final approval of preliminary plans until mid-1981.

At that time, Greenville's priority rating was so low, and the threat of a drastic reduction or complete elimination of federal aid so great, that Utilities Commission members voted to use local money and move ahead with the detailed design of the proposed facility. The commission also created a capital reserve fund to save money to help offset construction costs.

Detailed plans for the new plant were completed earlier this year, at a cost of $505,000 in local money, but local officials still believed that it would be 1984 or 1985 before any federal funds would be available for construction.

Horne said Tuesday night he is optimistic that Greenville's fifth place position on the priority list will be maintained. If it is, Horne said, final DEM approval of the design could come so the project would be "ready to go to contract by the summer."

close watch on the progress of funding of North Carolina facilities.

The committee has jurisdiction over federal expenditures on military bases.

"There's certainly no guarantee, but it does mean people in North Carolina affected by the bases will have a direct line to the armed services committee rather than having to go through a member of Congress not on the committee," Woodruff said. "It should improve the prospects of their requests' being heeded."

In a news release, East said his appointment "is especially significant for North Carolina because of the many military installations in the state, and because no other member of Congress from North Carolina currently serves on the armed services committee of either house."

East also said he would support President Reagan's effort to counter Soviet military prowess.

"I am very concerned about America's defense posture, given the massive Soviet military buildup of the last decade, and I'm looking forward to working to improve our position," he said.

Woodruff said in a telephone interview that East favors MX missile production.

"Of course, he's very hopeful about talks with the Soviets bringing about arms reduction. But he thinks we need the MX independent of the arms reduction talks," Woodruff said. "He doesn't favor it solely as a bargaining chip."

East was named to the armed services panel by the Republican Conference Committee on Committees. He has not yet received subcommittee assignments.

In exchange for the new assignment, East relinquished his seats on the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee and the Energy and Natural Resources Committee. He will retain his position on the Judiciary Committee and his chairmanship of the Separation of Powers Subcommittee.

Horne also told commission members that the "federal allocation has been made ... approved," and will pay 75 percent of the cost of construction. An additional 12½ percent of the cost will come from state funds.

Horne emphasized that if construction does begin in 1983, none of the $4 million in bonds approved by local voters in 1979 for the sewer plant project will have to be sold. He said the $2 million now in the reserve fund should be more than adequate to pay the local share of the costs.

The new plant, capable of handling 10.5 million gallons a day, will be located on a tract of land north of the Tar River and east of the Eastern Bypass bridge.

Horne said this morning that "I have to believe" the key to the city's improved position on the priority list is the fact that the regulations on discharge limits were raised in November, "which makes us in violation (with the old plant) without a special exemption. That moved us up sharply in priority points."

That point, coupled with the fact that "plans are finished and funds are available and we're ready to move ahead, moved us ahead of some cities. I have to believe they are the basic reasons for it," Horne said.

"An exciting thing about the whole thing," Horne said, "is not that there will be a new 10.5-million gallon plant, but that land is available to expand to 20 million gallons a day ... for long term growth ... 20 or 40 years in the future. We won't be locked in like we are at the present plant."

Losses, But Not In Lives

BROOK VALLEY HOME DAMAGED BY FIRE — Members of the Eastern Pines Fire Department prepare to enter the home of Dolores Ridditt, 103 Dundee Lane, shortly after noon Tuesday. According to Fire Chief Lyman Hardee, the fire started in the den of the brick home. Hardee said no one was home when the blaze began. Damage to the den was extensive. Heavy smoke and heat damage was reported in the rest of the home. The origin of the fire was not immediately known. Damage was estimated to be about $30,000. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

East Is Named To Choice Committee

North Carolina military bases should benefit from U.S. Sen. John East's appointment to the Senate Armed Services Committee, a post East has sought since his election in 1980, an aide says.

East announced the appointment in a news release Tuesday. He was unavailable for further comment, but aide Jerry Woodruff said East will be able to keep a close watch on the progress of funding of North Carolina facilities.

The committee has jurisdiction over federal expenditures on military bases.

"There's certainly no guarantee, but it does mean people in North Carolina affected by the bases will have a direct line to the armed services committee rather than having to go through a member of Congress not on the committee," Woodruff said. Dedicating New C-Of-C Home Here On Thursday

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

After 10 months and $233,000 of restoration, the historic Fleming House in Greenville will be dedicated Thursday as the new home of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce.

The dedication marks the end of a six-year search for a suitable headquarters for the organization, said chamber President Ed Walker.

"Originally the chamber purchased a lot on Red Banks Road with the idea of building there but the building would have cost $500,000," said Walker. "We said 'hey, we can't do that.'"

"Then the city bought the entire block that the house was on and we found there was more money available for the preservation of historic buildings. We looked at the Fleming House, studied it and decided it was feasible and the city was willing to give us a 25-year lease in 1981," he said.

"There was also quite a bit of concern that the chamber be located in the downtown business district," said Walker, "and the Fleming House is here."

After that, two committees of chamber members, the building fund committee and the restoration committee, got the project going.

The building fund committee solicited pledges for renovation work and sought sponsors for special rooms and staff offices. The renovation committee oversaw the actual work itself, making certain the authenticity of the modified Victorian style structure was preserved.

Restoration began in February 1982 and was completed in November.

Sponsors for all but three rooms of the house have been found, said Walker, which leaves the chamber around $30,000 short of paying for the $233,000 project.

"When we find these sponsors the chamber will be debt-free for the restoration," he said. "We actually lack about $22,000 paying for it," he said, "but the interest on the balance will bring it to about $30,000."

A committee is working to raise these monies now, he said. The major restoration projects, said Walker, was replacing the 80-year-old slate roof, a chore which cost in excess of $38,000, and replacing the weatherboarding on the house, which cost $19,000.

"During the whole project we never moved more than one wall," said Walker. "We had to move one downstairs to bring the house up to the city code for bathrooms, but all the others are as they were originally."

The house is in the process of being designated a National Historic Site, he said, and that's why close attention was paid to authenticity.

The house, built in 1902, was the home of Sen. and Mrs. James Fleming for many years. Fleming had an architect from Tennessee design the house in 1900 and construction took from 1901 until the summer of 1902.

According to Walker, the house has added significance to the chamber because the first mention of a chamber of commerce in the area is connected with Fleming.

"He (Fleming) called all business leaders together to try to get the money to get ECU here," said Walker, "and that's the first time a chamber in the area was mentioned."

Larkin Little Elected Home Federal President

Larkin Little, executive vice president of Home Federal Savings & Loan Association, was elected president and chief executive officer at the association's 77th annual shareholders meeting here Tuesday.

Little, who is also a member of Home Federal's board of directors, succeeds David J. Whichard II as president.

In his report to shareholders, Little said that savers of Home Federal earned a record $7,245,000 in interest during the year. He said the deregulation of the financial industry by the government continued at a rapid pace during 1982. Little said that as interest rates began to decline in late summer and prospects for economic recovery began to look brighter, the Depository Institution Deregulation Committee "worked overtime to create new accounts that would be competitive with other nonregulated investments."

He said Home Federal "welcomes 1983 with renewed optimism as the economic conditions, which continued to test the savings and loan institutions over the past year, begin to stabilize and improve."

Little reported that, "High mortgage rates, the direct result of high savings costs, severely dampened the local housing market last year. Even so, our mortgage portfolio now totals $53,700,000." He said the firm's assets as of Sept. 30 totaled $66,719,036.

"Lower interest rates and new powers granted savings and loans will put Home Federal in a stronger position to serve our depositors and borrowers as we move into 1983," said Little.

In addition to Little, officers of the association are: Kenneth K. Dews, chairman of the board; Howard L. Hodges Jr., vice president; Faye G. Adams, vice president and secretary, and Carolyn B. Rollins, vice president and treasurer. Also elected were Jerry A. Carson, Carlyle Hall and C. Hal Knox, assistant vice presidents, and Donna C.

ART SUPPLIES ASKED

Gary Jones, who teaches art to inmates at two correctional centers, in Creswell and Williamston, and also to senior citizens at the Villa Nursing Home in Williamston, has an urgent need for supplies — particularly oils, canvasses, and brushes. Any other art supplies are also badly needed. Jones teaches in these three places under the auspices of Beaufort and Martin community colleges. One of his students at Creswell, Rick Woolard, recently won Best in Show prize at the show of inmate art held at Carolina East Mall in Greenville. Anyone who can donate supplies or other assistance is to call Jones at 792-7007 in Williamston, or Jerry Raynor, 752-6166 in Greenville, to arrange for pickup of donations.

TOOTS SIGHTED?

Some time ago Hotline ran an appeal for the safe return of a beagle-basset hound named Toots. Toots was lost in downtown Greenville and her owners, the Whit Brown family, advertised extensively for her; then Hotline became a last resort. Around Thanksgiving Toots was sighted near the fire tower on State Road 1708 between Bell's Fork and the Old Tar Road (Evans Street Extension), not far from her home, and was all but positively identified by someone who knew her well. However, when her owners arrived, she wasn't there. Anyone having seen Toots, who looks more like a basset hound than a beagle, is asked to call the Browns, 756-8655 or 756-4003.

Marlene Sorosky Enjoys Helping Holiday Cooks

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor
Cooks who like to entertain at special times, but need help with menus and recipes, may find "Marlene Sorosky's Year-Round Holiday Cookbook" a lifesaver. Marlene's offerings cater to cross-country tastes — some are epicurean, some typically American.

Including Christmas and Hanukkah and New Year's, of course, Marlene's book covers the holidays and special occasions. There's a Valentine's Day Dinner and a St. Patrick's Day party, an Easter gala buffet and a Passover Seder. Mother's Day and Father's Day are treated; so are wedding anniversaries — with a dinner menu for 16 that may be halved or doubled.

She also gives menus and recipes for a graduation party, baby shower brunch, sweet sixteen luncheon and wedding reception. And, of course, patriotic parties get their due: there's a Fourth of July barbecue, a Labor Day picnic and an Election Returns lap party. Thanksgiving isn't neglected, neither are treats for Halloween.

Marlene has studied with some of the best culinary teachers in the United States and abroad and has wide experience in conducting cooking classes herself. I particularly like the way she melds the old and the new. For example, she transforms such a classic dessert as Linzer Torte into Linzer Cookies. As to the new — I vote for her Currant-Studded Pate. I found her chicken liver mixture, with its imaginative addition of currants soaked in white wine, both delicious and interesting — and so did my tasters.

A tree decorating ceremony using Buddy Poppies was held. Funds from the project will be used for veteran relief. Estelle Steiner reported that $311 was raised for the Cancer Aid and Research Fund. Dorothy Armistead reported on the Lite-A-Bike program.

Participants in the Voice Democracy Contest will be honored at a dinner meeting of the American Legion Post this month.

Margaret Brown, Mattie Askew, Lil Joyner, Mrs. Armistead and Madeline Vincent were meeting hostesses.

Marinate currants in white wine for 4 hours or overnight. Drain, reserving the juices. Melt 4 tablespoons butter in a large skillet. Sauté mushrooms, green onions, salt and garlic until soft, about 3 minutes. Add livers and sauté over moderately high heat, turning until livers are browned outside but pink within. Stir in the reserved wine and Tabasco sauce. Cover and simmer slowly for 5 minutes. Cool.

Transfer mixture to a food processor fitted with the metal blade or to a blender. Process until smooth. Add remaining stick of butter and blend until smooth. Remove to a bowl and stir in currants. Spoon into a 3-cup crock or pate mold. Cover and refrigerate for at least 4 hours. May be refrigerated for 2 days or frozen for 1 month. Before serving, bring to room temperature. Serve with bread rounds or crackers.
Makes 3 cups; serves about 12.

Dear Abby

Invitation May Miss This Ms.

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: To educate the uninformed, please print this:
Many women retain their maiden name after they marry. In addressing invitations and cards to a married couple when this is the case, the envelope should read: Mr. Peter Smith and Ms. Joan Jones
Street address and apartment number
City, state and zip code

Notice that the husband's and the wife's name are on the same line. Of course, if Joan uses her maiden name only for her professional life, social invitations to the couple should be addressed to Mr. and Mrs. Peter Smith.

When a couple is not married but lives together, write each name on a separate line in alphabetical order.

My husband and I are part of a growing group of liberated couples who do not choose to use the same last name. We run across many people who just do not know, and a few who refuse to accept the fact, that separate names are correct, proper and socially acceptable.

Abby, your column is responsible for the education of many — how about a lesson in the "new" and "proper" way to address invitations, cards, letters, etc. Just sign me...

I AM A PERSON AND MY FIRST NAME ISN'T MRS.

DEAR ABBY: Recently I had my club of girls over for lunch. There are five of us — all in our 50s. Two girls are heavy smokers. After they left, I noticed a tiny cigarette burn in my best tablecloth!

How can I tactfully suggest to these smokers that they should be more careful?

NO TOWN, PLEASE

DEAR NO TOWN: Actions speak louder than words. Next time you have the girls over, put heavy-duty placemats where you want the smokers to sit. Explain that "someone's" cigarette burned a small hole in your favorite tablecloth, so you are trying to prevent a similar accident from happening again.

DEAR ABBY: My recently retired husband has me worried. John (not his real name) is a good provider, kind, loving and doesn't hit the sauce. His passion is golf.

I don't mind his golfing every day, but I know that it doesn't take all day to play 18 holes of golf.

In the back of my mind I am wondering if maybe there isn't another woman. Please tell me if you think it would

Defeat Means Chaos

Tomorrow will be an important day for area tobacco farmers. They will be voting on the continuing of marketing quotas for the next three years.

Stacy J. Evans, county executive director for the Pitt ASCS, said that if the marketing quotas are approved growers will be eligible for price support loans on 1983, 1984 and 1985 crops.

If the referendum should fail there will be no quotas, no price supports and there would be unlimited tobacco production. It is clear that the stakes are high for allotment holders and tobacco producers. The tobacco program faced serious changes in Congress this year, one of the most important being an assessment on tobacco sold to finance the price support program. Thus the program on which farmers will be voting is far different from the ones of past years.

Nevertheless it is essential that the acreage-poundage marketing quotas be approved. If the issue should lose we can be certain that the most immediate result will be chaos for area farm economy and the tobacco industry in general. Almost certainly there would be considerable overplanting of tobacco next year and with the surplus of tobacco already on hand the result is predictable.

We urge all who are eligible to visit their polling place tomorrow and vote in the tobacco referendum.

Bill Of Rights Is Precious

Perhaps nothing is taken for granted in our nation more than the Bill of Rights, the first 10 amendments to the Constitution.

Yet nothing has affected the lives of Americans more than these amendments.

They guarantee us the freedom to worship as we choose, freedom of speech and freedom of the press.

They guarantee the sanctity of our homes by prohibiting the takeover of homes by the military and banning unreasonable search and seizure. The right to speedy and public trial by impartial jury is guaranteed. Excessive bail, excessive fine and cruel and unusual punishment are banned.

The wording of the Bill of Rights is simple and clear and it was added to the original constitution to protect our individual rights. It has resulted in the building of a free society where we all enjoy freedoms which are envied by much of the world.

Tonight there will be a public program at 7:30 in ECU's Willis Building at which speakers will pay their tributes to these unique privileges that our founding fathers laid out for us. On this Bill of Rights day we should all be thankful for the foresight of those who provided for us this most precious thing — freedom.

PAUL T. O'CONNOR

Dr. Sara Morrow, secretary of the Department of Human Resources and Community Development, has proposed closing the under-used Dix Hospital and transferring its patients to open beds in the state's three other mental hospitals at Goldsboro, Butner and Morganton. A hospital system that once held 10,000 patients now has less than 3,000.

Why is the hospital population down so much? Have we cured mental illness? No, there still is no cure for mental illness but there are drugs which treat the symptoms of mental illness, says Dr. Gene Douglas, director of the state Division of Mental Health. You can't cure the common cold, he says, but medicines exist to treat a runny nose and a bad cough. The same is true for mental illness. You can't cure it, but you can treat the depression, paranoia, hyperactivity and other symptoms mental illnesses create.

Douglas ascribes the success in treating mental illness to a 1956 medical symptoms of mental illnesses. As long as the patient continues to take his medicine, he'll most likely be able to control his problem. Douglas estimates that 100,000 North Carolinians are taking psychotropic drugs and are thereby controlling symptoms of mental illness.

Since that medical breakthrough, the state's mental hospital population has dropped steadily from an all-time high of 10,267 to about 7,500 in 1970 and to 2,826 in July of this year.

The development of psychotropic drugs has been paralleled by the development of 41 local and regional mental health centers that serve outpatients in all 100 counties. "Deinstitutionalization" means that people who are in hospitals today can be released to the care of a local facility, or, people in the community with mental problems can be spared the necessity of ever entering a mental hospital.

As local centers expand services, there'll be less need for large hospitals. Within 10 years the state will need only two hospitals. By the end of the century, only one — for rare disorders, research and training. It will probably serve only 500 patients, Douglas predicts.

Dix has been chosen for closing primarily because it serves the region of the state which has progressed the furthest in the development of local community mental health centers. Several of these centers, Douglas says, offer a complete range of services to local patients and rarely send anyone to Dix.

Dix has an annual budget of $32 million — $26 million of which comes from the state. Douglas says that if the hospital is closed, $12 million would have to be moved to other hospital budgets. DHR is asking that $6 million go into the improvement of community programs. That means the state would save (Please Turn To Page 5)

Bonzo In White House

It has been one of the best-kept secrets of the administration. When the Reagans first moved into the White House they brought "Bonzo," the President's favorite chimpanzee with them. Bonzo keeps to himself playing in the attic or down in the basement, and swinging on trees on the south side of the white House lawn at night when no one is around.

When the Reagans are alone in their upstairs living quarters, Bonzo might sit in the President's lap while they reminisce about their days on the old Warner Brothers lot.

Bonzo has never caused the President any embarrassment until recently.

What happened was that the Reagans had decided not to take Bonzo to California for their Thanksgiving holidays because he had a cold.

Bonzo was very angry about this and as soon as everyone in the White House was gone, he managed to get out of the attic where he was locked up, and started exploring the west Wing, a place he had never been before. The West Wing is where the Oval Office is and where all the President's top administration officials work.

The Chimp walked into an empty office and saw a computer standing in the corner. Bonzo hit a couple of keys and the words MORE BUDGET CUTS came up on the screen. This delighted him and he started to hit some more keys. The words UNEMPLOYED came up on the screen and Bonzo clapped his hands and hit the keys again. The words TAX UNEMPLOYMENT BENEFITS appeared and then Bonzo hit a communications key and the message was dumped into a computer that prints out white House Press releases. The printer immediately being given serious consideration. Ed Meese, one of the President's top aides, had a tough decision to make. He could either defend the tax that afternoon or wake up the President. He opted for defending the tax rather than interrupt the President's nap.

In the meantime Bonzo was back at the White House having a great time. He got the hang of working the computer and pretty soon he was feeding it stuff like BUDGET CUT IDEAS FOR CHRISTMAS, TAX ALL MEDICAL BENEFITS AS INCOME, RECOMMEND USER TAX ON WHEELCHAIRS, PUT SURCHARGE ON SALVATION ARMY, DO AWAY WITH TAX SHELTERS FOR UNMARRIED MOTHERS, and ADD 10 PERCENT EXCESS PROFITS TAX FOR BLOOD BANKS.

ART BUCHWALD

An AP man picked up the press release and sent it out on the wires and that night on all the news shows it was announced as the lead story of the day.

When the news got to the West Coast White House headquarters in Santa Barbara, everyone was confused as to what had happened. There had been some talk about taxing unemployment benefits, yet it was just one of many options the OMB was going to show the President. But since the word had been officially released, the staff assumed that someone had given the green light to send it out.

Larry Speakes, the White House press secretary, didn't want to look ignorant, as he confirmed to reporters that the unemployment tax was being given serious consideration.

Ed Meese, one of the President's top aides, had a tough decision to make. He could either defend the tax that afternoon or wake up the President. He opted for defending the tax rather than interrupt the President's nap.

In the meantime Bonzo was back at the White House having a great time. He got the hang of working the computer and pretty soon he was feeding it stuff like BUDGET CUT IDEAS FOR CHRISTMAS, TAX ALL MEDICAL BENEFITS AS INCOME, RECOMMEND USER TAX ON WHEELCHAIRS, PUT SURCHARGE ON SALVATION ARMY, DO AWAY WITH TAX SHELTERS FOR UNMARRIED MOTHERS, and ADD 10 PERCENT EXCESS PROFITS TAX FOR BLOOD BANKS.

After a while Bonzo got bored, and started jumping around. He saw a Telex machine which said HOTLINE TO THE KREMLIN and started hitting the keys. The screen lit up with HAPPY THANKSGIVING TO AMERICAN CAPITALISTS. THIS IS A TEST. Bonzo responded, ANDROPOV IS THE BIGGEST TURKEY IN THE SOVIET UNION. THIS IS NOT A TEST.

Fortunately, at that moment a Secret Service man walked into the west Wing office and grabbed Bonzo away from the hot line and gave him a banana. The agent then called the western White House and told them that he caught Bonzo working the hot line.

Nancy Likes James Baker

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Evidence that James Baker may well survive as White House chief of staff is word privately passed by Nancy Reagan praising him as a total Reagan loyalist — a status previously reserved in her pantheon for counselor Edwin Meese and deputy chief of staff Michael Deaver.

Until recently, Baker was regarded by the first lady and other Reagan insiders as an outsider, not quite to be trusted and more interested in his own welfare than the president's. Just as pressure on Baker intensifies, Nancy has changed her mind — and is making no secret of it.

A footnote: Definitely not in Nancy's pantheon is Lyn Nofziger, whose unauthorized call for a meeting of Reagan political operatives to plan the 1984 re-election campaign was denounced by Baker. When the Nofziger group met at lunch Dec. 7 without White House blessing, it agreed the most dangerous political problem Reagan faces is neither the nuclear issue nor the economy but the hostility of women.

Secretary of Transportation Drew Lewis enhanced his reputation as the Cabinet's most effective operator but won few friends in the House Republican leadership when he ramrodded the five-cent-a-gallon gasoline tax through the House.

House Republican Whip Trent Lott protested to Lewis about the bill's taxation on the trucking industry, added by the Democrats to the nickel gas tax. Lott urged him to demand of Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill that the taxes be trimmed down.

Lewis would not budge from his deal with O'Neill, lest the gas tax he had pushed relentlessly for two years be endangered. As party whip, Lott grinded his teeth and supported it. But on final passage, about half the Republicans — and half the GOP leadership — voted against the bill.

Weekend In NY

A secret meeting of some 20 conservative House Republicans convened in a Manhattan hotel this weekend at the call of Rep. Jack Kemp to devise Republican strategy with particular emphasis on monetary policy to bring down interest rates.

Kemp originally envisioned the brainstorming session as an attempt to educate fellow congressmen on his monetary bill, co-sponsored by Kemp and House Republican Whip Trent Lott. But Rep. Newt Gingrich of Georgia, a Kemp ally, argued he had had enough "education" and wanted to make strategy. As a result, the meeting will do both.

As proof that the meeting is not a Kemp-for-President rally, the congressman's operatives note that Lewis Lehrman was on the meeting's agenda briefing the congressmen about monetary policy. Lehrman, 1982 Republican nominee for governor of New York, is widely considered to have presidential ambitions of his own.

Moscow VS. MX
A senior State Department official, furious at Soviet defense minister Dmitri Ustinov's attack on the MX missile two days before the House vote, privately admitted the bitter tirade from Moscow had one advantage: It would assure House approval of the new weapon.

Instead, the Ustinov threat of new Soviet missiles to counteract the big MX (a weapon whose size is more than matched by hundreds of existing Soviet missiles) had no discernible effect on the House. The MX went down under a deluge of votes.

A footnote: The State Department official was not alone in his hope that Ustinov's blackmail would influence congressmen to vote for the MX. Standing at the door to the House chamber during the voting, pro-defense representative Charles Wilson of Texas whispered to his colleagues as they entered the chamber: "A vote against the MX is a vote for Moscow."

GRATITUDE IS A CULTIVATED VIRTUE

Do you ever worry over the fact that people do not appreciate you? Do you ever recall the ingratitude of those around you — perhaps your own children — and wonder why it is that having received so much they could care so little?

Let us bear in mind that gratitude is a cultivated virtue. People in their natural state are not grateful. It takes the careful tutelage of home life, the good offices of religion, and the loving encouragement of friends to teach people the virtue and art of gratitude. Don't forget that you yourself are probably lacking in gratitude, and that this shortcoming is noticed by others.

People who are engaged in big and significant activities usually waste little time worrying about their not being appreciated. And don't forget that great people are not so much people who do great things as ordinary people who do ordinary things in a great way. — Elisha Douglass

Limits On Health Care Costs

By JOHN CUNIFF

AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — Don't just catch up with the Joneses, the automobile ad said, "pass them." The ad seemed to be from another decade, because many Americans now seem happy to just keep pace with the other guy.

Consumers in the 1980s have learned to understand limitations, and anyone with a pencil in his or her hand can immediately draw up a list of them.

Big, heavier, more luxurious cars became unaffordable, especially after OPEC raised oil prices, so cars shrank. New houses, which had been growing in square footage and rooms in the 1970s, have followed the exact same course.

The eating of lean red meat, attendance at Ivy League colleges, the power of the bureaucracy, the spending ability of the federal government, wage and profit increases, fringe benefits, Social Security — all reached limits.

With all this happening, there is little question that the American dream might also have reached its limits, temporarily however, because U.S. history shows that while imagination can be depressed for a while it cannot be killed.

But quickly advancing on Americans is a limitation they may not be prepared to accept, individually or collectively. It is the limitation on health care that seems to be ordained by the inability to keep health care costs down.

If there is any area in which people are inclined to say damn the costs, spend whatever is needed, this may be it. Life itself is involved. How do you tell a family that mother can be saved but that it isn't worth the cost?

"We're at a crossroads in this country," says Dr. William R. Fifer, University of Minnesota professor of medicine and public health. "What we're able to do medically exceeds what we're able to afford."

Others in medicine, including a former head of the American Hospital Association, have said essentially the same thing before. In fact, discussion of the subject is frequent in medical and hospital circles.

The answer to high costs was relatively easy when it involved outer space and the knowledge that technology and curiosity could carry the nation much further into that realm. With great disappointment, the nation said no.

It has never been able to give a sustained "no" to health care spending.

In 1960, U.S. health expenditures — personal health care, medical research, new medical facilities, insurance, and government-sponsored public health activities — totaled $26.9 billion, or 5.3 percent of gross national product.

By 1970 the health care percentage of gross national product had risen to 7.5 percent. By 1980 it was up to 9.5 percent, based on expenditures of $249 billion. And last year, spending amounted to $286.6 billion, or 9.8 percent of GNP.

The Health Insurance Association of America, which provided these figures, points out that last year about $1,200 was spent on health care for each man, woman and child, compared with roughly $150 in 1960.

Some of the dollar increase was, of course, a consequence of inflation. But by no means all, as the percentages of GNP indicate. This year, for example, an insurance company survey found that hospital daily service charges leaped 13.48 percent over 1981, at least double the overall inflation rate.

That study, which summarized data provided to Equitable Life Assurance by more than 2,500 hospitals during the third quarter of the year, found the average daily charge in a private room was $167.50, and in intensive care, $408.50.

The latter, in which the latest technology is utilized, provides an example of how high costs can go. To $664.50 a day on average in the District of Columbia, for example. And to $982.50 a day at a Stanford, Calif. hospital.

"We have discovered there is a finite amount of money available for health care, which places us in the dilemma of deciding how best to use this money," says Fifer.

"How," he asks, "does a nation ration something like health care?"

To the editor:

Recently I read of a study on productivity made for the Wall Street Journal on automobile companies. It was noted that Toyota Motor Car Company produces better than 70 vehicles per year per employee compared with slightly more than 10 per year per employee for General Motors.

Presently there is a bill, HR 5133, on the floor of the U.S. House of Representatives which, if enacted into law, would protect inefficiency by limiting competition. In other words, if it is sold here it must be made here. This has absolutely no regard for the consumer who must pay the higher price for inefficiency.

On December 8 a group of dealers from North Carolina called on the N.C. members of the House and our two senators. The fact that almost all our elected men in Washington took the position that our industry can and will get stronger through competition made me proud to be from North Carolina.

Charles Rose is undecided. Walter Jones is clearly out of step. With one third of our country's agricultural products exported and subject to similar protective retaliation, one would think that these two gentlemen would have more regard for our farmers, if not our consumers.

How about it, consumers? Do you want to protect inefficiency and pay the higher price? If you want to get value and quality for your hard-earned dollar, call or write your Congressman today!

Two-Week-Old Used In Scene

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A state panel has overturned a decision that would have barred movie producers from using a 2-week-old infant in a swimming pool scene.

The Oregon Wage and Hour Commission voted 2-1 Tuesday to allow Pacific International Enterprises Inc., to dip the baby up to its abdomen in the movie stunt. The decision came after Volney F. Morin Jr., a lawyer for the filmmaker, threatened to take future movie business to other states if the request was rejected.

Paul R. Tiffany, State Wage and Hour Division administrator, said he vetoed using the baby in the scene because the request had been made by telephone and pressure was exerted for a quick approval.

the other $8 million — although Douglas says DHR hopes that money will be added to the mental health budget in future years to help further expand local programs.

Politically, the closing of Dix will not be an easy decision to make. There are 1300 state employees involved and the Wake County legislative delegation appears ready to flex its considerable muscle in their defense. But for once, the state has a political controversy rooted not in a calamity — not in deteriorating roads or polluted roadsides — but in a success story.

Someone asked the agent to check the budget computer when he reported what was on it, the pieces all started to fall into place concerning the unemployment tax announcement on Thanksgiving Day. The next morning the President had to assure everyone there would be no such tax and also had to send an apology to Andropov.

But when someone on his staff suggested they move Bonzo out of the White House and send him to the Old Actor's Home Hollywood, President Reagan wouldn't hear of it. "He's the best friend I ever had," the President said. "And just because he was in show business doesn't mean he can't come up with some good ideas."

Contempt Threat Facing EPA Chief

By WILLIAM KRONHOLM
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The House, poised to cite Environmental Protection Agency chief Anne M. Gorsuch for contempt of Congress, is embarking on a historic legal confrontation with the Reagan administration.

The House Public Works Committee was filing its formal report on its 28-11 vote last week to cite Mrs. Gorsuch because of her refusal, on President Reagan's orders, to surrender subpoenaed documents on EPA's enforcement of the $1.6 billion "superfund" toxic waste law.

Once the report is filed, the issue can take precedence over any other floor action. House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill said Tuesday he expected Rep. James Howard, D-N.J., the committee's chairman, to press for a floor vote sometime today.

"He does intend to proceed with it, and probably tomorrow," Nancy Blades, a Howard aide, said Tuesday night.

While Mrs. Gorsuch is the focus of the contempt citation, the dispute between institutions — the executive and legislative branches, equal under the Constitution, each jealous of its prerogatives and unwilling to surrender authority to the other.

Mrs. Gorsuch has claimed executive privilege to withhold documents that she said are too sensitive to risk premature disclosure. She said they include such explosive documents as analyses of weaknesses in government prosecution cases that would jeopardize lawsuits yet to be filed.

The congressional committees say the claim is a questionable expansion of executive privilege because the documents do not involve foreign relations, national security or Oval Office discussions, the basis of past privilege claims.

"We cannot sit idly by when the administration asserts sweeping and unjustified claims of executive privilege," said Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., whose House Energy and Commerce subcommittee voted 9-4 on Tuesday to cite Mrs. Gorsuch in a second contempt resolution over the same documents.

Disputes over Congress' right to police the executive branch happen are common. The last was a contempt citation approved by the House Energy and Commerce Committee against Interior Secretary James G. Watt earlier this year.

But in Watt's case, as with disputes in the Carter and Ford administrations, a last-minute compromise resolved the issue.

A solution appeared remote in the current dispute. Mrs. Gorsuch told reporters Tuesday that: "I really don't see a compromise."

She has said previously that she expected the House to hold her in contempt in a partisan vote. And she took a slap at Howard's quick action on the citation — three and a half weeks from subpoena to contempt vote — as a "macho rush to judgment."

A contempt vote sends the issue to a federal grand jury, where Mrs. Gorsuch could be indicted for contempt of Congress, a misdemeanor. If convicted, she would be subject to a fine of up to $1,000 and a jail term of up to a year.

But in debate on the motion last week, Rep. Gene Snyder, R-Ky., said Mrs. Gorsuch realistically faced jail for no more than "a couple of hours." The conviction would then serve as the basis for appeals, probably going ultimately to the Supreme Court, which would define the constitutional rights of the two branches of government.

The House has not used its contempt power in more than four years. The last time the House approved a contempt citation was Sept. 15, 1978, when it voted 319-2 to cite Korean businessman Hancho C. Kim for refusing to answer questions in the so-called Koreagate scandal.

Instances of House contempt citations against executive branch officials are even rarer. Depending on how broadly the definition of such officials is drawn, the most recent example would be the House's 334-11 vote in 1973 to cite G. Gordon Liddy, a member of the White House "plumbers" group in the Watergate scandal.

Visitor Saved Two Children

WILSON, N.C. (AP) — Four people died in a house fire here Tuesday, but two small children survived through the efforts of a Nash County man who spotted the fire, kicked in the door and helped rescue them, fire officials say.

Junius Pope was warming up his car during a visit in the neighborhood when he spotted the fire.

"He went out to crank the car to warm it up and just happened to turn around and see the fire through the window across the street," Wilson Fire Capt. E.V. Stone said. "Seeing it as soon as he did, he probably saved the two children's lives."

Pope ran to a relative's house, which was three doors down from the fire, Stone said.

"They (Pope and the relatives) ran back up there, and when they got there ... they opened the screen door and pushed the front door in and there were two small children, ages 1 and 2, sitting right near the door. So they grabbed them and got out," Stone said.

Killed were JoAnn Johnson, 21; her son, Antonio, 3; her nephew, Tyron Johnson, 2; and Donnell Sauls, 4, the child of Mrs. Johnson's cousin, the Wilson Fire Department said.

The two children who were saved were not seriously injured. They were Kiki Sauls, 2, and Tyra Sauls, 1, the children of JoAnn Johnson's sister, Ernestine Sauls, who lived in the destroyed house, a family member said.

Pope ran to a relative's house, which was three doors down from the fire, Stone said.

One of the people who helped break in the door was JoAnn Johnson's mother, Doris Sauls, said Alice Locus, a cousin.

Mrs. Sauls told the family that someone came to wake her up, Ms. Locus said.

"She went over there, and she could hear them (the children) at the front door crying, so they kicked the door in and he got them," Mrs. Locus said.

Childhood Christmas In Norway Recalled By Guest

By LARONA MURRAY
Pam Sending-Larsen likes to reminisce about childhood Christmases in her native Norway. Ms. Sending-Larsen, of Oslo, is a guest this week of Madeline Vincent of Greenville.

Born in 1905, one of five children, she remembers when holiday festivities extended to 14 days.

"At five o'clock on Yuletide eve," she recalls, "the doors leading to the room that housed the tree would be opened and presents would be given."

According to Ms. Sending-Larsen, before Christianity was introduced in Norway, as far back as about 1,000 B.C. the main god Thor and the lesser god Odim were the principal gods worshipped.

In the early era of Christianity, when the people of Norway chose a day for the celebration of Christ's birth, they, in harmony with the Romans, adopted as Christ's birthday the festival of Saturnalia — Dec. 24, the birthday of the conquered sun.

"And with the choice came our own legends of huge trolls and the nisse, the bearer of gifts, thus helping lead the way to the Saint Nicholas or Santa Claus figure as we know them today," she said.

One period in Ms. Sending-Larsen's lifetime has left her with memories of Christmases not so pleasant as early or recent ones.

"Five years of occupation by German troops during the late 1930s and early 1940s left us with very few pleasant memories of Christmases at that time," she remembers.

"We were neutral, yet we were under oppression by the Germans. There were days that we were fearful of venturing out into the street."

The Germans, stalling Norwegian communication with the outside world, wouldn't allow them to own a radio. Ms. Sending-Larsen, a widely known furniture designer, explained that she "designed a chair with broad arm pieces. It was made to conceal a radio at a moment's notice."

Food was scarce in those days. Pam remembers storing up butter made of whale fat, whole wheat flour and artificial sweetener to make cakes from the old Norwegian Christmas recipes. "Due to food rationing, we were allowed one egg a day per person," she said, "so we sacrificed some of our eggs to make the cakes."

Clothing also was hard to come by. There was no importation of cotton or other goods. "We had to wear wool. It was rough and scratchy."

Adverse conditions in Norway reached a climax in 1940, when many Norwegians, along with King Haakon VII, fled to England, taking what valuables they could with them.

Madeline Vincent met Pam Sending-Larsen when she and another Greenville resident, Carrie Oakley, went on a tour in Europe in 1972. "Carrie and Madeline couldn't evaluate our money," Ms. Sending-Larsen laughed, "so I became their benefactor and we've been good friends ever since."

Mrs. Vincent, a former teacher, is an avid world traveler who likes to collect dolls. From four trips abroad she has acquired dolls from Russia, Thailand, Greece, Spain, North Africa, Hong Kong, New Zealand "and of course, from Norway."

Ms. Sending-Larsen loves the warm sunshine of the Southwestern United States and is in the process of settling down in Sun City, Ariz. She is going there later this week. "Norway is beautiful," Pam notes, "but it's so cold. The winters and nights are so long."

According to Mrs. Vincent, her guest has such an aversion to the cold, she refuses to drink tea or colas with ice, preferring them at room temperature.

At the age of 77, Pam Sending-Larsen still likes to swim. "It's a good body toner. In Norway, I swam many times in water at about 10 degrees Fahrenheit."

When she was younger she skied and skated a lot. "In fact, what else can you do in so much snow?" she asked.

U.S. Attorney Says Letter By Lewis Is A Virtual Confession

By JAMES LITKE
Associated Press Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — James W. Lewis wrote an extortion letter that amounted to a confession to the seven Tylenol poisoning deaths, and while he was a fugitive he threatened to kill President Reagan, a federal prosecutor has charged.

U.S. Attorney Dan K. Webb made the allegations during a bond hearing for Lewis' wife, who surrendered here Tuesday.

Webb cited a "death threat" mailed to the White House among other factors as he asked U.S. Magistrate James T. Balog to set bond at $5 million for Leann Lewis.

Mrs. Lewis, 33, is charged with fraudulent use of a Social Security number while trying to find work in Chicago. She was taken into custody after arriving at O'Hare International Airport.

Lewis, arrested Monday at a mid-Manhattan library after eluding a nationwide manhunt for nearly two months, has been charged with authoring a $1 million extortion demand to Johnson & Johnson, makers of Tylenol, in which he threatened a second wave of poisonings.

Webb told the magistrate that in the extortion letter Lewis "confesses" to poisoning seven people in the Chicago area who died between Sept. 29 and Oct. 1 after taking cyanide-tainted capsules of Extra-Strength Tylenol.

But whether the letter "contains false information we simply do not know at this time," he told reporters afterward. The precise contents of the letter have never been revealed.

Webb said the letter that threatened Reagan, written while the Lewises were fugitives, "alluded to Tylenol and went on to threaten the life of the president and others."

Lewis' threat apparently was motivated by a disagreement with unspecified Reagan administration policies, Webb said.

Balog set bond for Mrs. Lewis at $5 million and scheduled a hearing for Dec. 22.

Lewis, 36, remained in custody in New York City today, awaiting a hearing set for Dec. 23.

Two FBI agents and two Illinois state investigators flew to New York from Chicago, but Lewis' lawyer, Frank Lopez, said he would not allow authorities to question Lewis about the seven cyanide deaths.

Lewis, while a fugitive, wrote letters to the Chicago Tribune denying he was involved in the deaths.

Lewis was arrested after a library supervisor connected a man he'd seen at the library for several days with a wanted poster in his office.

Authorities had been watching a number of places in midtown Manhattan, including newsstands at Times Square and Grand Central Station, because of Lewis' penchant for writing to newspapers. He was checking a list of newspapers when arrested.

Webb charged that Mrs. Lewis was "intensely involved" in both the extortion demand and the death threat sent to the president because both envelopes were marked with a postage meter belonging to her former employer, "to which only she would have had access."

Webb also indicated that Kansas City authorities had developed new information about a 1978 homicide in which Lewis was charged, but never tried, in part because some evidence was improperly seized. He said authorities there also wanted to question Mrs. Lewis in connection with the death.

Michael Monico, Mrs.

Lewis' attorney, objected to the inclusion in the court record of those allegations, saying, "the fact that her husband may be implicated in those events does not mean this woman should bear the penalty because she is married to that man."

Monico also said Mrs. Lewis, who remained impassive throughout the hearing, would cooperate with investigators from the task force investigating the cyanide deaths.

Authorities said Lewis will be taken to Chicago to determine whether he was involved in the Tylenol killings, and Webb said both Lewis and his wife would be prosecuted in Chicago.

U.S. Magistrate Ruth V. Washington granted the government request to set bail for Lewis at $5 million after Lewis refused to give his name at an arraignment Monday.

Puzzled By Big Quebec Blackout

MONTREAL (AP) — Utility officials said they do not know why built-in safeguards failed to prevent a massive power outage that left millions of people in Quebec province without electricity in freezing temperatures.

The power failure, which began Tuesday afternoon following an explosion at a transformer near Quebec City, also stopped hydroelectric power to eastern Canada and the United States. It was Canada's most widespread power outage since 1975.

But New York power officials had a 12-minute warning of the cut by the Hydro-Quebec utility and had no trouble making up the shortfall from other stations, officials said.

Though 95 percent of the 2.4 million Hydro-Quebec customers had power restored within eight hours, some isolated areas were without electricity early today, a utility spokesman said.

With an investigation into the explosion under way, Hydro-Quebec technicians tried to determine why its backup and fail-safe systems failed to prevent the network from shutting down.

"We don't know," said Jacques Guevrement, Hydro-Quebec's director of systems operations. "If we had only one fault on the system it should have been stable but it seems that the first fault caused a second fault and the system could not cope with all the variations."

The transformer blast was believed set off by a short circuit, sending flames shooting several feet into the air and starting a fire that took 90 minutes to control.

When the power and heat went off, temperatures ranged from 32 F in the Montreal area to 22 F below zero and snow in the northern parts of the province.

Most Quebec residents were lurching or returning to work when the failure occurred. In major Quebec cities, offices closed and employees were sent home. Montreal firefighters helped people stranded in elevators. Horrendous traffic snarls developed because the Montreal subway shut down, and people returned home as best they could.

FBI Claims 'Solid Leads' In Huge Cash Robbery

By LAWRENCE KILMAN
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The FBI says it has "solid leads" in the robbery of at least $9.8 million from an armored car firm by two masked men who left behind millions more along with "unanswered questions" about the company's security. The heist was the largest robbery in U.S. history. Police initially had estimated the take at $1 million, based on estimates from officials of Sentry-Armored Car-Courier, then raised it to $5.3 million, $8 million and then $9.8 million by late Tuesday. The final count was expected to be complete today, said police spokesman Ed Leschack. Sentry officials tallying the loss have refused to talk to reporters. The robbers apparently had an easy time stealing the money from the two-story brick warehouse in the Bronx, and investigators said Tuesday they were focusing on whether the men had inside information.

A joint FBI-New York police bank robbery task force has questioned employees of the company and plans to review the roster of past employees, said a police source who did not wish to be named. "Our indication is that someone really had to know what was in there in order to get past the cameras, the alarm systems and guard," said Richard Seaberg, vice president of Poe Associates, a Tampa, Fla., insurance agency that underwrote a multimillion-dollar policy for Sentry.

"Someone had to have some knowledge of the premises," Seaberg said. "I don't see how they couldn't. There was more than just an alarm system to beat." Seaberg said his firm has conducted two inspections of Sentry since underwriting a $10 million insurance policy in January. Since everything checked out, Seaberg said, "There are a lot of unanswered questions that have to be asked."

The robbers, who entered the building Sunday night through a hole punched in the tarpaper and sheet metal roof, used an electronic burglary tool to defuse the alarm and a crowbar to pry open the door of the money room, police said. They overpowered the lone guard, handcuffed him to a railing, broke into the money room and used bolt cutters to reach the cash by cutting through a floor-to-ceiling chain-link fence.

For unexplained reasons, they left behind money bags estimated to contain as much as $20 million after scrawling "robbers was here" on a dusty mirror. "If it's true the money wasn't inside a vault, someone is going to have to answer why," Seaberg said. Sentry has offered a $25,000 reward for information in the case.

The largest U.S. theft previously on record came on Dec. 11, 1978, when robbers took $5 million in cash and $800,000 in jewels from the Lufthansa cargo area at Kennedy Airport in New York.

"People stood under umbrellas, under awnings, and sat in cars to watch the Greenville Jaycee Christmas parade this past Saturday. Parade turnout was good, despite the cold rain," Jaycee parade chairman Jim Allgood said.

He said the parade lasted about one hour and that more than 80 units and 600 persons took part. First place in the novice float division went to the D.H. Conley High School Literary Club. First place in the band competition went to Conley High School with North Pitt High School taking second place.

An Artificial Heart Reported

MOSCOW (AP) — Radio Moscow reported what it called the first artificial heart implant in the Soviet Union, on a 3-month-old calf.

The broadcast Tuesday did not say whether the device worked nor did it provide other details, other than to say it was implanted by Prof. Vladimir Gigauri at the Scientific Research Center of Surgery in Moscow.

The Soviet-run news media has reported the Dec. 2 implantation of an artificial heart in Dr. Barney Clark at Salt Lake City.

Gibraltar's Doors Open

GIBRALTAR (AP) — Spain's iron gate sealing off British-ruled Gibraltar for 13 years stood open today in what the new Spanish Socialist government called a "humanitarian" gesture in its efforts to reclaim the famed rock.

Spanish customs chief Carlos Pozas formally opened the big green gate at midnight (6 p.m. EST) Tuesday. It was first ordered closed by the late dictator Francisco Franco in 1969 to pressure Britain into negotiating the return of the colony to Spain. For 269 years Britain has ruled Gibraltar, a 2 1/4-mile-long limestone rock jutting into the Mediterranean Sea.

The government of Socialist Premier Felipe Gonzalez, which like previous administrations wants Spanish sovereignty over Gibraltar, said the gate would remain open 24 hours a day. The government described the move as a "humanitarian" gesture.

A jubilant Spanish crowd estimated by Spanish National Police to number at least 5,000 turned out to watch, accompanied by a Spanish student band and scores of cameramen and reporters.

The first person to cross into Spain was Carmen Ward, 42, a Spanish-speaking Gibraltar holding a British passport. She told reporters she was thrilled and was going to visit her family in Spain.

Spain is restricting border crossing to passport-carrying Spanish residents entering and leaving Gibraltar, and Gibraltar residents entering and leaving Spain with United Kingdom passports over-stamped to show they are Gibraltarians. With the exception this morning of journalists, no other nationalities are allowed to cross the border.

Leftists Hold His Daughter

By ALFONSO ANZUETO Associated Press Writer
GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — Security squads stopped cars and searched houses early today for clues to the whereabouts of the daughter of Honduran President Roberto Suazo Cordova after she was kidnapped by leftist guerrillas.

The government announced Tuesday night that an unidentified guerrilla group seized Xiomara Suazo Estrada, a 33-year-old pharmacist who lives in Guatemala City, and demanded publication of a "political manifesto" in return for her life.

Interior Minister Ricardo Mendez Ruiz said the guerrillas had warned in a communique that her life "will be in danger" if the manifesto is not published in Central American and Mexican newspapers by Friday.

Guatemalan officials said security agents began searching the capital after the announcement looking for signs of Miss Suazo Estrada, who was believed abducted by armed men as she was leaving a clinic here.

In a separate statement sent to the news media, the guerrillas set a deadline of 8:30 p.m. (9:30 p.m. EST) Friday.

Speaking over national radio and television, Mendez Ruiz described the kidnapers as "communists" and "extremists without a country" and said the Honduran president's daughter was "a Guatemalan citizen" not connected in any way with Honduran politics.

"Once again innocent persons are victims," he said. "It is not the government that is carrying out these kidnappings. It is one more case of lack of respect for human rights."

He was apparently referring to charges by human rights groups that conservative Central American governments terrorize people with kidnappings and killings to prevent them from associating with leftist insurgent movements.

Miss Suazo Estrada has lived in Guatemala for 20 years with her mother, also a Guatemalan citizen formerly married to the Honduran president, Mendez Ruiz said. He did not further identify the mother.

In Tegucigalpa, capital of Honduras, a government spokesman said Miss Suazo Estrada had received kidnap threats during a three-day visit there two months ago.

The spokesman, who asked not to be identified, said she is Suazo Cordova's daughter by his first marriage. He said she rarely visits her father.

Since Saturday, Suazo Cordova has been in Houston, undergoing treatment for laryngitis. Friends said he has been informed of the kidnapping and planned to return to Tegucigalpa before Thursday.

Art Museum's Curator Treasures Comics Of Past

By WILLIAM C. MANN
Associated Press Writer
COPENHAGEN, Denmark
(AP) — "Shazam," said crippled newsboy Billy Batson, and suddenly he was Captain Marvel.

A diversion for generations of children of all ages? Of course, says art museum curator Tove Lund Larsen. But she insists the bright colors and strong lines of the C.C. Beck comic book superhero also was art.

Mrs. Larsen became something of an expert on the comics and the cartoonist's art during hundreds of hours of reading and research for an exhibit she calls "Heroes, Heroes! Give Me Heroes!"

"The idea behind it is to show that comics can be art, too," says Mrs. Larsen, curator at the art museum in Hans Christian Andersen's home town, Odense, Denmark.

What her study shows is the development of a form from the comparatively simple lines of cartoonist Joe Shuster's 1938 Superman and Bob Kane's 1939 Batman, to the intricacies of Frank Frazetta's Vampirella in 1969 and Stan Lee's Spiderman of the 1970s.

Along the way, themes and pictures became more explicit, graphic and violent — even pornographic. Nevertheless, says R.

Dahlmann Olsen, curator of Nikolaj, the Copenhagen museum now displaying the exhibit, cartoonists have become better and better. The Belgians call it the seventh art.

"It's a special sort of art, with very great appeal to many people," he said. "I have seen many very good artists involved in this work, and it's really hard work."

"We want to get people from different levels interested in art. We have to get younger people, with differing interests, and this exhibit is doing it."

Its first weekend at Nikolaj attracted almost 2,000 people, Olsen said, and he expects 15,000 or so to view it during its one-month run. That would make it among Nikolaj's most successful exhibits.

Mrs. Larsen said she chose the comic-book superhero as the focal point of her exhibit.

"All the real superheroes have a mythology," she said. "The creation of the heroes, their fantastic deeds, their moral habits and behavior ... have an absolutely mythological character."

She said she did not set out to analyze the comics, but "in a very simple way to show as many heroes and hero types as possible. The exhibition is set up as a visual entity."

It traces the history of the comic strip from "Hogan's Alley," which appeared in American newspapers in the 1890s, to Marvel Comics' Fantastic Four of the 1970s; from the 1930s innocence of Felix the Cat to the 1970s raunchiness of Fritz the Cat.

A section dedicated to cartoons on record covers features Porky Pig stuttering "That's all, folks." There's also Richard Corben's album cover drawing for the rock group, Meatloaf, and the famous street scene by Robert Crumb for Big Brother and the Holding Co.

Larger-than-life paintings of Flash Gordon, Wonder Woman, Superman, Captain Marvel, Popeye and 17 other classic characters look down over the exhibition.

History buffs can start by browsing through Egyptian hieroglyphics. They're not exactly cartoons, but they're pictures in a series, and they tell stories.

Still, it's the modern cartoonist who's the star of the show.

The section on the history of comics includes originals of early strips from the United States, where the art began, and the genesis of the form in Denmark, where comics first appeared around 1938.

Danes are among the most avid readers of comics in the world. Henning Kure, an official of Denmark's largest comics publishing house, said Donald Duck — Anders And in Denmark — has a weekly press run of 125,000 and that the weekly total of all comic books approaches one-half million.

Mrs. Larsen's historical tour goes through the Nazi-fighting superhero era of World War II; the Korean War period with American soldiers depicted as supermen, the North Koreans as dolls; and the superheroes of the 1960s and 1970s, with generous helpings of the underground sex comics of the same period.

Wife And 6 Children Dead

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — A man was hospitalized for shock after he discovered the bodies of his wife and six small children who had suffocated in a mobile home fire, authorities say.

Fire Marshal Neil Coburn said Yick Yim Ng, known as Frank, found the family about 2:40 a.m. Tuesday when he returned home from work. He took five of the children outside the trailer thinking he could save them "before he lost his composure," Coburn said.

An extension cord connected to an electric heater apparently started the fire, filling the mobile home with smoke, authorities said. The deaths were caused by smoke inhalation or carbon monoxide poisoning, officials said.

Trying Chief For Perjury

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Perjury charges against former Carolina Beach police chief Rusty Lewis were to go to a Raleigh federal court jury Wednesday, prosecutors said.

Fourteen witnesses testified Tuesday in U.S. District Court that Lewis had often associated with Howard Jenks, had sexual relations with prostitutes who worked for Jenks, and often discussed his association with Jenks and the prostitutes.

Lewis is charged with lying to a federal grand jury investigating corruption in the Carolina Beach Police Department. He allegedly told the grand jury he "did not recall" when asked, "You never stated to anybody that you ever had sexual relations (with prostitutes)?"

He also allegedly lied when asked if he had ever been told not to associate with Jenks.

If convicted, he could be sentenced to 10 years in prison and fined $20,000.

Lewis testified Tuesday that he had not lied to the grand jury and that the prosecution's witnesses are lying.

Moving To Kill Breeder Reactor

By MATT YANCEY
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A deficit-conscious Congress is moving to halt the Clinch River Breeder Reactor, a multibillion-dollar project that supporters say opens the door to unlimited energy but critics call a pork-barrel boondoggle.

The House voted 217-196 Tuesday to cut off construction money for the controversial reactor after appropriating $1.3 billion for it over the past decade.

The $3.6 billion project at Oak Ridge, Tenn., was intended to show the commercial potential of a plutonium-powered nuclear reactor that would produce — or "breed" — more new fuel than it uses in generating electricity and thus create an inexhaustible source of energy for the future.

But opponents succeeded in convincing a majority of the House for the first time in 10 years that the project is not needed. Bills providing money for the project passed 15 previous times.

Senate Republican Leader Howard Baker, a staunch supporter of the project in his home state, has promised Senate opponents a chance to vote against it before Congress adjourns this weekend. An effort to strip Clinch River of funds failed on a 49-48 vote in that chamber in September.

Though Clinch River has enjoyed congressional support until now, the government did not begin clearing a 90-acre site for it until three months ago.

Construction was thwarted for four years by former President Carter, who ordered licensing suspended because the project's plutonium fuel can be converted into atomic weapons.

President Reagan last year ordered a resumption of licensing activities. A Nuclear Regulatory Commission board now reviewing the project is expected to rule early next year on whether actual construction could begin.

The House vote Tuesday came on an amendment to a stopgap resolution needed by Friday to keep the government operating until March 15. Its sponsor, Rep. Lawrence Coughlin, R-Pa., said the amendment deletes all money for the Clinch River except for $44 million needed to start shutting the project down.

But both houses would still have to vote next year to remove the authority for the project before it is ended.

"The truth is we've cut everything out of this budget but the pork," Coughlin said. "And here it is. Can we not get rid of at least a little bit of it?"

"We're looking at a whopping $180 billion deficit" in the federal budget, said Rep. Claudine Schneider, R-R.I. She helped forge an alliance of fiscal conservatives and environmentalists to oppose the project.

"Frankly, the economics were on our side," Ms. Schneider said. "We're in a pinch and the assumptions on which this project was initially based are no longer valid."

Supporters, however, said Clinch River is a long way from being dead.

"The government has hamstrung itself from accomplishing anything, positive or negative, except to delay," said Gordon Chipman, deputy assistant energy secretary for breeder reactor programs.

When first proposed by former President Nixon,

Clinch River was intended to be the first step in developing a new generation of nuclear plants to replace current reactors when uranium reserves are depleted.

"The issue is whether the United States is going to have a viable nuclear option for generating electricity in the future," Democrat Rep. Marilyn Bouquard, whose Tennessee district is the site for the project, said Tuesday. "We are sacrificing the only technology now able to meet the electrical demands of the nation."

But a virtual halt in new nuclear plant construction, a slowdown in energy growth brought about by a worldwide recession and the discovery of new uranium reserves have curbed demand for the fuel.

The Congressional Office of Technology Assessment now estimates that breeders will not be economically attractive until midway in the 21st Century. France and West Germany both have cut back their breeder programs, though, along with the Soviet Union, they still remain far ahead of the United States.

Meanwhile, the cost of Clinch River soared from $700 million in 1972 to $3.6 billion, according to the Department of Energy's latest projections.

The General Accounting Office, an agency of Congress, said earlier this year that the project's cost to taxpayers would actually be $8.5 billion if included in the calculations was the interest that could be earned by investing the money in U.S. Treasury notes.

CAGLIARI, Sardinia (AP) — An appellate court has upheld the manslaughter conviction of two Jehovah's Witnesses who refused to allow blood transfusions for their 2½-year-old daughter because their sect does not permit such treatment.

However, the court reduced the sentences of Giuseppe Oneda, 27, and his wife, Consiglia, from 14 years to 10 because they acted out of "moral and social motives." Representatives of the Jehovah's Witnesses said they would appeal to a higher court.

Israeli Weapons Sales Spark Fresh Controversy

By DANIEL GREBLER
Associated Press Writer
TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Critics of Prime Minister Menachem Begin's government are demanding that Israel stop selling arms to regimes with poor human rights records.

But defenders of the policy say the sales, estimated at more than $1 billion annually, are essential to the survival of Israel's arms industry, and a key element in establishing diplomatic ties with developing countries.

They also contend that Israel need have no qualms about doing what most Western countries have been doing for decades — arming tyrannical regimes.

Defense Minister Ariel Sharon returned this week from Honduras, where a senior Honduran official said Sharon agreed to sell Honduras military leaders "numerous armaments." The Honduran government on Tuesday denied Sharon made any agreement to sell it arms.

"What do we have with Honduras?" wrote former Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin in the daily Yedioth Ahronoth. "Israel's military interference in Central America only complicates and damages her position, image, and her interests with the few friends she still has. That's all we need."

As Rabin's article appeared, Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir was off to Buenos Aires for talks with leaders of Argentina's ruling military junta.

Although Shamir denied he would discuss arms sales, Israel is known to have sold Argentina millions of dollars worth of aircraft, patrol boats and air-to-air and ship-to-ship missiles.

A week earlier, Shamir was in Zaire, cementing the diplomatic ties that were renewed last May, and reports from the African country spoke of an $8 million arms deal. Again, critics protested that Israel was getting too friendly with a regime regarded as dictatorial.

Supporters of the policy retorted that the opposition Labor Party, which has bitterly castigated the Honduras connection, was in office when Israel was selling arms to Nicaraguan dictator Anastasio Somoza.

The director-general of the Foreign Ministry, David Kimche, denied that recent Israeli diplomatic gains in Third World countries resulted from arms sales.

"It would be wrong to claim that Israel is now re-entering Africa and Latin America through military activity alone," he was quoted as telling Parliament's Foreign Affairs and Security Committee. "However, it is the military subject which attracts all the media attention."

Kimche was quoted as observing that many countries are interested in military assistance and was quoted as saying "Israel has its own interests and needs."

Opponents argue that Israel should stick to helping developing countries with advice on agriculture and their training from Israeli advisers.

Indeed, many of the arms-supplying relationships were forged under Labor governments. Rabin, who so bitterly castigated the Honduras connection, was in office when Israel was selling arms to Nicaraguan dictator Anastasio Somoza.

The director-general of the Foreign Ministry, David Kimche, denied that recent Israeli diplomatic gains in Third World countries resulted from arms sales.

"It would be wrong to claim that Israel is now re-entering Africa and Latin America through military activity alone," he was quoted as telling Parliament's Foreign Affairs and Security Committee. "However, it is the military subject which attracts all the media attention."

Kimche was quoted as observing that many countries are interested in military assistance and was quoted as saying "Israel has its own interests and needs."

Opponents argue that Israel should stick to helping developing countries with advice on agriculture and health. Labor's Yossi Sarid, an outspoken liberal, claims Israel has "forsaken the green route of agriculture for the red and bloody route of arms."

The steady shift of the Third World toward the Arab cause has pushed Israel into closer ties with countries like South Africa, the Philippines and the Latin American dictators.

The volume of trade is secret and the weapons often move clandestinely through middlemen. Israel's arms industry, founded in the hope of one day making the Jewish state militarily independent, depends heavily on exports.

Israel receives much of its front-line weaponry from the United States. But Israel's Merkava tank, regarded by some experts as one of the world's best, was developed with know-how gained during earlier cooperation with British engineers on the Centurion tank.

The Israelis built the Kfir fighter after their secret agents obtained plans of an advanced French Mirage warplane.

Israel also exports swift patrol boats, armor-piercing shells, and sophisticated anti-guerrilla electronics systems.

While no details on weapons exports are released locally, foreign reports say Israel is the world's seventh largest arms dealer, with annual sales of more than $1 billion. Both South Africa and Argentina are said to rank among its top customers.

The arms trade "is not a nice business to be in," says Yigal Hurwitz, a former finance minister under Begin. But Israel is so desperate for hard currency that it should sell "to whichever country wants to buy, on condition that the weapons are not turned against us."

Shulamit Aloni, another Labor liberal, says the Nazi Holocaust should have taught Jews not to abet dictatorships. But Ronnie Milo, a senior member of Begin's Likud faction, says that while he would not help arm a regime engaged in genocide, he believes that passing judgment "is very complicated and very dangerous."

Aloni says Israel is losing the friendship of liberal Western groups with its arms policies. But Milo dismisses these friends as "bleeding hearts" and "hypocrites."

$22,000 Is Lost, Found

RANCHO CORDOVA, Calif. (AP) — A diner at a doughnut shop got his dough back thanks to a waitress too honest to pocket his mislaid $22,000.

The woman, who asked to be identified only as Bonnie, said she found a bag full of $100 bills shortly after coming to work Sunday at Allen's Do-nut House, which doubles as a Greyhound bus stop for this community near Mather Air Force Base.

"I hollered," she said Monday. "I didn't know there was that much money in this town."

Bonnie said she wouldn't have been able to live with herself if she had kept the cash.

An hour after the find, a man called from the downtown Sacramento bus depot asking about the bag. He described the contents to her satisfaction and hopped a bus back to the doughnut shop.

Bonnie said the traveler was "ordinary," maybe 30 years old.

He said he had won the money gambling in Reno, Nev., and was returning to San Francisco when he stopped for a snack, she said.

"He told me he didn't remember bringing the bag in with him. He thought he left it on the bus," she said.

The man gave her a $600 reward, which Bonnie split with the bakers on duty that morning.

Cab Robberies Was Organized

NEW YORK (AP) — A pair of gunmen escaped with $1,500 in cash after entering a Brooklyn cab company, robbing the dispatcher and ordering cabs in from the field so they could rob the drivers, police said.

After robbing the cabbies and locking them in the trunks of their cabs, the gunmen handcuffed the dispatcher and another employee to a bathroom pipe, said Detective Robert Kohler.

The men robbed four of the 15 cars on duty early Tuesday before apparently deciding they had stayed long enough, Kohler said. There were no injuries.

Carol Singing In A County Jail

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — The Christmas spirit hasn't been barred from the Leon County Jail, where inmates have started a holiday caroling program.

"Some people believe that no good could ever come from a place like this," says the Rev. Bob Key, jail chaplain. But Monday night, a group of 12 men gathered in a special cellblock dubbed the "Christian Bullpen" and gave a lively rendition of their best carol, "O, Come All Ye Faithful."

Response was reported mixed at the jail. Some inmates listened quietly while others fixed their attention on a television game show.

The public is invited to the jail to hear the inmates sing each weeknight until Dec. 22, officials said.

Shot In Finger By His Cat

GREENWOOD, Ind. (AP) — A 22-year-old man was treated and released at St. Francis Hospital in this Indianapolis suburb after being shot in the finger by his cat, police said.

The incident occurred about 9 a.m. Saturday while Dale Davis was sitting in his living room, officers said. A .38-caliber pistol and the cat were on a coffee table while Davis sat nearby. Suddenly the cat jumped, the gun went off and Davis was hit, police said.

No charge was filed, according to police who ruled the shooting accidental.

Police Report Two Wrecks

An estimated $2,450 damage resulted from two traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Tuesday.

Officers said heaviest damage resulted from a 12:23 p.m. wreck at the intersection of Fifth and Jarvis streets involving cars driven by Lisa Cheryl Carlisle of Raleigh and Ricky Allen Smith of Route 1, Oak City.

Police, who charged Ms. Carlisle with failing to yield the right of way, set damage at $1,000 to the Carlisle car and $350 to the Smith auto.

Cars driven by Kattie Buck Clark of Route 8, Greenville, and Geraldine Godley Harris of 8E Tripp St. collided about 8:51 p.m. on Memorial Drive, 20 feet north of the Dickinson Avenue intersection, causing an estimated $600 damage to the Clark car and $500 damage to the Harris auto.

Poet's Ghost Story Incomplete; They'll Have To Read Her Book

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

Nancy Roberts wouldn't tell the students at North Pitt about the two times she's seen a ghost.

The first time, she said, she and her husband Bruce were looking for a place to eat lunch and came upon what they thought was an inn. It was an old house with a fountain in the yard made from a casket, she said, and a spout in the shape of a woman's hand. A closer look revealed it actually was a hand, encased in plaster of Paris.

That's all she told the group. She didn't say what happened inside the house.

"You'll have to read the book to find out what I saw," she said. "But in addition to feeling there was a spirit inside that fountain, I saw something inside that house."

Ms. Roberts, author of numerous ghost books including "Ghosts of the Carolinas" and "America's Most Haunted Places," visited Pitt County schools today and Tuesday, talking about her 20 years of chasing specter stories with her husband, photographer Bruce Roberts.

At North Pitt, she told how it all got started.

"I was doing newspaper work and working out of Charlotte when I was told by a man I considered very educated and reliable that he'd seen a ghost in a house in Fayetteville," said the folklorist.

"While at a party he'd seen a lady in a black dress coming down the stairs and she'd disappeared right before his eyes. I was intrigued. It sounded like a story I wanted to write about so my husband got his camera equipment together and off we went to Fayetteville."

The Roberts didn't see the ghost, but by talking to many people who had, they unraveled the tale of how the apparition came to haunt the stairway. That was her first ghost story.

"After that I collected stories from all over North Carolina for about a year," said Ms. Roberts. "Carl Sandburg, who was living in Flat Rock, North Carolina, saw them and suggested the stories should be collected and published as a book."

After convincing a publisher of the same thing, the Roberts published "The Blue Ghost," followed by "Ghosts of the Carolinas" and six other collections.

"All the stories are based on truth," said Ms. Roberts. "We talk to people who have seen ghosts but not the ghosts themselves. We don't just wait for them (ghosts) to parade in front of the camera."

"I've been writing ghost stories for 20 years and I've only seen a ghost twice," she said.

The most important thing in getting a good ghost story, she told students, is being determined.

"You don't stop when you hit a dead end," she said. "You're persistent. You keep asking and asking and hunting and sooner or later the story will appear."

N.C. AUTHOR AT NORTH PITT ... Lost A Dispute Over Boundary

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Pender County lost a boundary dispute with New Hanover County Tuesday when a three-member commission accepted New Hanover's version of where U.S. 421 crosses the county line.

The commission, appointed by a Superior Court judge to solve the problem, deliberated more than three hours Tuesday. The dispute involved how much of an industrial site lies in each county.

Takeda Chemical Industries Ltd. of Japan plans to build a manufacturing facility on a site straddling both the highway and the county line.

Set Big Outlay On Renovating

MOUNT AIRY, N.C. (AP) — Renfro Hosiery Mills plans to spend $3 million on renovations and new equipment in anticipation of an economic recovery next year, company officials say.

The project, expected to be completed by early 1984, will save about 50 jobs and create 25 new ones, said Robert Merritt, president of the sock manufacturing company.

Renfro employs about 1,100 workers in Surry County.

FOCUS

A Natural Marvel

Depending on the weather, a partial eclipse of the sun should be visible today in Europe, northern Africa, and western Asia. During a solar eclipse, the moon passes between the earth and the sun, blotting out all or part of the sun's light. Long ago, an eclipse was viewed as a sign that the gods were displeased. But even in Biblical times, the Chaldeans understood the cycles of the heavens, and the Greek philosopher Thales used geometry to predict eclipses in about 600 B.C. A partial or total solar eclipse is a marvelous sight. But if you haven't seen one yet, don't worry. Scientists say that our sun should last for another 5,000,000,000 years, so you'll probably have another chance.

DO YOU KNOW — What is the special name for the sun's outermost atmosphere?

'Bama's 'Bear' To Retire At End Of Year

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — Paul W. "Bear" Bryant, the winningest coach in college football history, announced his retirement today and Ray Perkins, coach of the National Football League's New York Giants, was named as his successor.

Bryant, 69, said he would remain as athletic director of the Crimson Tide. Perkins, an All-American receiver at Alabama in the mid-1960s, will stay as coach of the Giants through the end of the season and take over at Alabama for the 1983 season.

The announcements came in simultaneous news conferences here and in East Rutherford, N.J.

Bryant, with a 322-85-17 record as a college coach, said his retirement would take effect after Alabama's Liberty Bowl game against Illinois Dec. 29. This year's Crimson Tide team is 7-4, the team's poorest mark since 1970.

"I'm following — repeat, following — the greatest coach in college football," Perkins said. "It's a great honor to go there."

Bryant has been coach at Alabama for 25 years, compiling a record of 231-46-9. In the final regular-season game of the 1981 season, he registered his 315 career victory, breaking the old mark held by Amos Alonzo Stagg.

Perkins, 41, was a star wide receiver at Alabama under Bryant in 1964-66, gaining All-America honors as a senior. The Mount Olive, Miss., native went into coaching after playing five years with the Baltimore Colts of the NFL.

He is in his fourth year as coach of the Giants, with a 23-33 record including 3-3 this season. Last year, the Giants made the NFL playoffs for the first time since 1963.

In Tuscaloosa, Bryant told a packed room of reporters that there comes a time when every coach has to "hang 'em up."

In East Rutherford, Perkins said: "I will finish the season as head coach. I look forward to finishing the season. On the other hand, I leave with mixed emotions. It gives me great pleasure to return to my alma mater. It's certainly something I want to do very, very much."

"It's simply something that's a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity for me. If it was anyplace else, any other college team could not lure me from the New York Giants. Nothing could have, I don't believe, kept me from making this decision."

Perkins said he was called by Alabama officials last Thursday and interviewed for the job last Sunday. He was offered the job Monday and made up his mind to take it that day, he added.

Alabama's mandatory retirement age for state employees is 70, so Bryant could not promise potential recruits that he would be their coach for their entire college careers.

Southeastern Conference rivals of the Crimson Tide have stressed this to recruits in recent years, and it has made recruiting increasingly difficult for the Bear.

Bryant has been a head coach in college for 38 seasons — one at Maryland (1945), eight at Kentucky, four at Texas A&M and the last 25 at Alabama, where he played in the mid-1930s and later was an assistant coach under Frank Thomas from 1936-39.

Bryant, whose record at Alabama is 231-46-9, has often said he would never do anything to hurt the program and wanted to leave it in such good shape that his successor would have even more success than he did. Apparently, he feels the time is ripe before decay sets in.

The promise of October — a 5-0 start, a No. 2 ranking in The AP poll and the dream of a sixth national championship — has turned into the doldrums of December. Alabama finished the regular season with three consecutive losses for the first time in Bryant's reign and the Crimson Tide's 7-4 record was its poorest since a 6-5-1 mark in 1970. Alabama has not been in the Top Twenty for the last four weeks; in the previous 11 years, the Crimson Tide only missed the ratings for one week early in the 1976 campaign.

All indications pointed to the stern-visaged Perkins, a noted disciplinarian just like the "old man," as Bryant's successor.

Perkins, in his fourth year as coach of the Giants, reportedly was asked to consider it last week when Bryant was in New York for the National Football Foundation's annual banquet. The AP learned that Alabama had formed a small search committee to pursue an eventual successor, but did not really consider Perkins because it felt he was making more money with the Giants than the school could offer.

However, Perkins got word to Bryant that he wanted the job.

Perkins, a native of Mount Olive, Miss., went into coaching after playing at Alabama from 1964-66 as a star receiver. He played five years with the Baltimore Colts in the NFL and then went into coaching, serving as an assistant at Mississippi State University and later with the NFL's New England Patriots and San Diego Chargers before the Giants gave him his first head coaching job in 1979. Last year, the Giants made the playoffs for the first time in 18 years.

While the Giants' star was on the rise, Alabama's seemed to be fading. The Crimson Tide was held without a first down in the first half and thoroughly embarrassed by LSU in a 20-10 pasting Nov. 6. Afterward, Bryant said it was "very obvious now, for three or four weeks, that our team has been very poorly prepared. In any event, I'm going to alert the (university) president, and anybody that wants to know, in a heck of a hurry that we need to make some changes, and we need to start at the top."

Conley Holds Off Farmville

By RICK SCOPPE

Reflector Sports Editor
HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley teased Farmville Central nearly the entire second half and it nearly cost the Vikings their unblemished record.

D.H. Conley went to its 1-4 delay — or tease — midway through the third period and saw the Jaguars cut an 11-point lead to two, but DHC hit six free throws in the last 2½ minutes to eek out a 47-44 victory.

In the girls' game, D.H. Conley whipped Farmville, 58-30.

The Vikings led, 29-18, at the half only to have the Jaguars score five points in a row which not only cut the lead to six with four minutes to go but changed DHC's strategy.

D.H. Conley coach Shelley Marsh called for his 1-4. Two turnovers followed and the DHC lead shriveled to 33-29 before guard Keith Gatlin swished a jumper and two free throws to give DHC a 37-29 lead after three periods.

The Vikings stayed with their 1-4 the final period, despite six turnovers that allowed Farmville to cut DHC's lead to two (twice) and one with 1:30 left to go on a jumper by Terrance Pettaway from the left corner.

Two free throws by Mitchell Cox upped DHC's lead to 45-42, but the Jaguars cut the gap again to one on a follow by Tony Hargrove with 10 seconds to go. Donald Wilson sealed the win for DHC with two free throws with one second left.

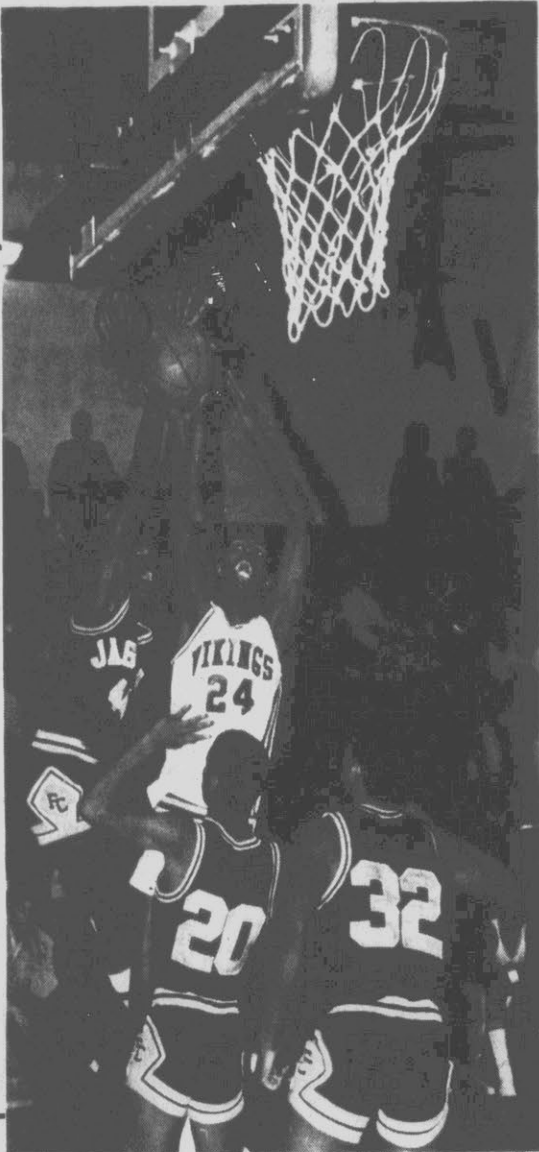

"We just never could get the ball with a chance to win it. I thought we would win if we did," said Farmville Central coach Mike Terrell, whose team falls to 2-3.

"I'm very proud of the way we played in the second half," Terrell said. "We played good aggressive defense."

Marsh agreed. "Farmville did a good job against our 1-4," Marsh said. "But, our ballhandling was atrocious. They weren't double-teaming us. They just took the ball from us man-to-man and went down and got a layup."

Asked why he went to the 1-4, Marsh said: "We wanted to get Farmville out of (its) offense. They were playing so well on offense we were hoping to get them standing around a little bit."

"It didn't work very good, as you could see."

What it did, however, was slow the pace and force Farmville to gamble: try to steal the ball and risk a foul or sit back and wait for DHC to make a mistake. Terrell chose

Rose Rallies By North Pitt

By WOODY PEELE

BETHEL — North Pitt, up by nine points with just over a minute left in the first half, lost its poise in the early minutes of the third period and Rose High School's young Rampants won their first game of the season last night, 44-41.

Rose built up as much as a seven point lead late in the game before North Pitt came back to trim it to the final three point margin.

Earlier in the evening, North Pitt's girls avenged an earlier loss to the Rampettes, 47-33, taking advantage of the foul line to do most of the damage.

"We had some people decide to take the game themselves," North Pitt coach Cobby Deans said after emerging from the dressing room following the game. He obviously was disappointed in the play of his team from the trailing minutes of the second quarter on.

North Pitt built up an early eight-point lead, 10-2, before Rose pulled back within three at 10-7. Still the Panthers managed to hold on and take a 14-10 lead into the second quarter.

Ever so slowly, North Pitt inched further out over the Rampants, finally reaching a nine point lead at 25-16 with 1:55 left in the half. Greg Hines scored on a drive for the margin, and was fouled on the play — giving him the chance to stretch it to ten.

He missed, however, and Rose came back with three free throws, two of them by Jeff Hopkins, to cut the lead to 25-19 at intermission.

In the second half, the Rampants tried a different tact. "We changed our defense. We came out of the zone and went to man-to-man,"

Coach Jim Brewington said. "We shot a little better and we moved the ball better."

Actually, that was exactly what Deans wanted — to get the Rampants out of their 3-2 zone. "That gave us some trouble and we wanted to get them in a man and into some foul trouble, but we had too many people trying to go one-on-one instead of playing the offense. That took us out of our offense. We just had some people who wanted to control the whole offense."

Tony Clemons and Hopkins hit their first two shots the Rampants took in the half, cutting the lead to two. Then, after Dennis Bradley made the second of two free throw tries, Rose pulled within one as Allen Dickens hit from the baseline.

Mac Walston pushed Rose into the lead for the first time from underneath, 27-26, but Hines hit two straight baskets to push the Panthers back into a 30-27 lead. It was their last.

Carlton Wilson tapped in a shot with 2:20 left then scored WINDSOR — Bertie Senior High School romped to a 61-35 victory over Williamston last night, evening its Northeastern Conference record at 1-1.

Bertie, now 3-1 overall, rushed out to a 12-5 lead after one period and were never headed by the Tigers. Williamston, now 2-4 overall and 1-2 in the league, fell further behind in the second period, as Bertie built up a 30-11 halftime bulge.

The pullaway slowed in the second half, but Bertie continued to build on it. By the end of the third period, the Falcons were out to a 45-24 lead, and they outscored Williamston, 16-11, in the final quarter.

Terps, Blue Devils Win

By The Associated Press

Two of the Atlantic Coast Conference's rising stars — Bill Jackman of Duke and Adrian Branch of Maryland — led their teams to victories over small college opponents Tuesday night.

In games involving ACC teams tonight, Clemson hosts Campbell while Georgia Tech entertains Alabama A&M.

Branch scored 25 points to lead the Maryland to a 66-56 victory over Towson State.

The sophomore forward scored 14 points in the first half, when Maryland built up a 38-28 advantage. Branch made seven of nine field goal attempts and scored eight straight points at one stretch. He also had three assists before intermission.

Maryland guard Jeff Adkins added 12 points.

The Terrapins raised their record to 4-2, with their fourth victory outside of the ACC. East Coast Conference member Towson State, which got a team-high 17 points from Donald Jones, fell to 2-5.

Maryland coach Lefty Driesell says the Terrapins are still struggling, with the exception of Branch.

"We have problems everywhere except Adrian Branch," Driesell said. "Adrian played well tonight. The rest of them, so-so."

Duke had to rely on a baseline jumper by Jackman with 20 seconds left to defeat Southern Conference foe Davidson 63-60.

Jackman, a 6-foot-8 forward who is another of the Blue Devils highly touted freshman tandem, scored six straight points in the final 4 1/2 minutes, twice pulling his team into the lead after it fell one point down.

Duke was paced by center Mark Alarie's 17 points, followed by Jackman's 12 points. Johnny Dawkins had 11 points and Jay Bilas added 10 as the Blue Devils upped their record to 3-4.

Davidson, 3-3, was led by Cliff Tribus with 16.

Blue Devil coach Mike Krzyzewski said afterward that the contest was a struggle. "I thought we played pretty good defense and I thought we played hard, but I didn't think we passed the ball well and I didn't think we caught the ball well and I don't know why."

Phils Get Morgan

GIANTS GET KRUKOW IN 5-PLAYER SWAP

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Philadelphia Phillies President Bill Giles says he and his top aides decided after last season's runner-up finish in the National League East that the team needed to add left-handed hitting and strengthen its bullpen.

The Phillies did just that Tuesday by acquiring left-handed-hitting second baseman Joe Morgan and southpaw reliever Al Holland in a five-player deal that sent right-handed starter Mike Krukow and two minor leaguers to the San Francisco Giants.

The trade came after Philadelphia was left with a hole at second base last week when it swapped gold glove Manny Trillo to Cleveland for left-handed-hitting outfielder Von Hayes.

The addition to Krukow, the Phillies gave up pitcher Mark Davis and outfielder Charles Penigar. Davis played last year for Oklahoma City in the AAA American Association, and Penigar with the Class A Spartanburg club in the Carolina League.

"Our head major league talent evaluator, Hugh Alexander, says Holland is one of the top four relievers in the National League," Giles said at a news conference Tuesday.

He said that with Morgan and Hayes the Phillies have added 20 to 30 home runs and 40 to 50 stolen bases. And he said that without a top-flight reliever such as Holland, the team couldn't win in the National League East.

But how will Morgan, 39, playing alongside, first baseman, Pete Rose, 42, affect the Phillies' usually tight defense?

"Trillo is the best defensive second baseman in the game," Giles admitted. "But Morgan has a better career fielding average, is a more intelligent player. Also, Morgan is a great leader, a gamer, a great competitor."

Morgan really is a stopgap until Juan Samuel, whom the Phillies believe will be a superstar, is ready to step up from the minors.

Giles said Morgan, who had reached a salary impasse with the Giants, was given a two-year contract, the first year guaranteed. It was believed Morgan got close to the $600,000 per season he was seeking from San Francisco.

Giles said the deal was made at baseball's winter meetings in Hawaii last week, but could not be announced until contract problems were settled with Morgan.

In San Francisco, Giants General Manager Tom Haller said it was difficult to part with a player such as Morgan, "but it was increasingly evident that the Giants weren't going to be able to sign him."

Morgan, an 18-year veteran, explained over a telephone hookup that his contract problems with the Giants was based on too many "ifs" and he wanted his money guaranteed.

Morgan hit .289 for the Giants' last year, smacked 14 home runs and drove in 61 runs in 120 games. He also stole 24 bases.

Holland, 30, compiled a 7-3 record with a 3.33 earned run average and five saves. He has a four-year career lifetime record of 19-11, a 2.60 ERA and 19 saves.

Krukow, 30, who came to the Phillies last year, posted a 13-11 record with a 3.12 ERA. Davis, 22, has been plagued with shoulder problems, and was 5-12 with a 6.12 ERA last season.

A-G Outlasts North Lenoir

WHEAT SWAMP — Ayden-Grifton struggled through two overtimes before finally pulling out a 64-60 victory over North Lenoir last night in a non-conference basketball game.

North Lenoir's girls used a steady offense to gain a 56-48 win in their game.

The Hawks pushed out into an 18-13 lead in the first period of the boys' game, but Ayden-Grifton came back with an 18-12 margin in the second quarter, taking a 31-30 lead at intermission. North Lenoir inched back in front, 46-45, at the conclusion of the third period.

Ayden-Grifton edged back into the lead late in regulation, but Larry Johnson scored with nine seconds left to knot it at 56-all, and force the first overtime.

Tyrone Gay then pulled Ayden-Grifton back into a 60-60 tie after North Lenoir had twice taken the lead in the overtime. Both teams then missed out on opportunities to win in the time remaining.

In the second overtime, Jeff Dixon made two free throws to put the Chargers ahead for good, 62-60. After a North Lenoir miss, Thomas Anderson hit a layup to run the lead to 64-60, and that sewed it up for the Chargers.

Anderson led Ayden-Grifton with 19 points, while Gay had 16 and Calvin Peterson hit 13.

North Lenoir, now 2-4, was led by Maurice Thorbes with 19, while James Fisher had 13 and Johnson had 12.

North Lenoir's girls, now 5-1, fell behind in the first quarter of the girls' game, 12-10, but stormed back with a 14-7 advantage in the second period for a 24-19 lead at the half.

The Lady Hawks inched that out to 40-31 during the third period and allowed Ayden-Grifton a 17-16 margin in the final frame.

Helen Wooten led North Lenoir with 26 points, while Veronica Chapman had 12 and Stephanie Hemby had 10. Cora Faison led Ayden-Grifton with 19.

Ayden-Grifton's boys are now 2-3, while the girls are 1-4. The Chargers return to action on Friday, traveling to Havelock.

Columbia Defeats Bear Grass, 66-60

BEAR GRASS — Columbia High School broke away from Bear Grass after a tight first half and gained a 66-60 basketball victory last night in their Tobacco Belt Conference meeting.

Bear Grass' girls remained unbeaten in their matchup, winning 36-20.

Columbia moved out into a 14-10 lead in the first period of the boys' game, but Bear Grass turned in a reverse score in the second frame to leave it knotted at 24-24 at intermission.

In the third period, however, Columbia caught fire and outscored the Bears, 17-11, to move out into a 41-35 lead. Both teams scored 25 points in the final dash to the wire, giving Columbia the win.

Brian Rowson led Columbia with 35 points, while Thomas Bailey had 16 and Harold Hill hit 11. The Bears were led by Lawrence Watson with 23, while Timmy Williams had 17.

The Lady Bears held Columbia scoreless in the first period while rolling in 14 of their own points and were never in trouble. Both teams scored six points in the second frame, giving the Bears a 20-6 lead at the half.

Columbia inched back to 24-11 in the third period, but was outlited, 12-9, in the final quarter.

Angie Michelle led the Bears with 21 points, while Pam Basnight had 13 for Columbia. The Lady Bears are now 5-0, 3-0 in the league. The boys are 2-3, 1-3 in league play.

Bear Grass travels to Matamuskeet on Thursday.

on a jumper with 1:54 remaining to put Rose ahead for good, 31-30. Walston made one of two free throws, and Clemons and Walston each hit basket's, the last with five seconds left to run Rose out to a 36-30 lead as the period ended.

There, in the final quarter, Rose missed on an early field goal attempt — then didn't try again from the field.

North Pitt got two baskets from Bradley early to trim to back to 36-34, but could come no closer as Rose put the ball on ice and forced the Panthers to foul.

Walston hit two from the line then Hopkins added another. Clemons made two more for a 41-34 lead with 3:13 left.

Baskets by Hines and Bradley and two free throws by Greg Briley cut it back to one, 41-40 with 31 seconds left, but Clemons then made three of four free throws in the final 25 seconds to sew it up for the Rampants. Bradley made one of two tries after time expired as he was fouled at the horn to cut it to the final margin.

"We needed this one," Brewington said of his team, now 1-3 on the year. "We're young, and we needed a win to help us along."

"We settled down and played like we can. Then, we ate up some time when we had to, and made them come out and foul us."

Neither team shot well. Rose made good on 15 of 40 shots (37.5 percent), while the Panthers hit 18 of 44 (40.9%). Rose canned 14 of 27 free throws, while North Pitt made just five of ten.

Rose also enjoyed a rebounding edge, 39-30, and had three fewer turnovers, 19-16.

Walston led the Rose scoring with ten points, while Bradley had 14 and Hines had 12 for North Pitt, which falls to 3-2.

North Pitt, trailing by one point, 27-26, at the start of the final quarter, exploded for 21 points in that frame — 11 of them at the foul line — to roll up its 47-33 win in the girls' game.

After Rose scored the initial basket in a very cold first period, North Pitt came back to score five points and gain a 5-3 lead by the time the horn sounded.

Rose tied it up early in the second quarter, but Delores Pittman put North Pitt back ahead, and they held until Rose tied it twice at 11-11 and 13-13. Linda Harrell, however, scored on a drive with three seconds left for a 15-13 Pant-HER halftime lead.

During the early minutes of the third period, North Pitt worked up a six-point lead, 21-15 before Rose rallied behind the scoring of Alma Atkinson and Frances Barnhill to finally take the lead, 27-26 with 34 seconds left to play.

Harrell, however, put North Pitt back ahead with a three point play just under a minute into the final period, 29-27. And while Rose was missing its first seven shots for a 33-27 lead, the Pant-HERS added four more points for a 33-27 lead. After Barnhill broke the ice, three free throws, two of them by Sherri Bradley, upped the lead to 36-29.

Both teams shot miserably from the floor, North Pitt hitting on just 27.5 percent and Rose making just 22.4 percent. The Pant-HERS enjoyed a horribly lopsided rebounding edge, 74-38, while committing twice as many turnovers, 28 to 14.

"Our first half wasn't pretty at all," North Pitt coach Randy Avery said. "But we made some foul shots at the end and that was a big part in our game. We had a streak of luck there when things seemed to go right for us."

Rose coach Dennis Gibson was very disappointed in his team's play, and blamed the absence of starting center Doris Richardson, out sick, for much of it.

Rose Rallies Past Panthers...

Officials also called four technicals in the game, two on each team.

Harrell led the North Pitt scoring with 18 points, while Pittman added 14. Atkinson and Barnhill each had nine for Rose.

the former course.

It worked initially — eight turnovers in the last 10 minutes proved that, but it also cost the Jaguars as DHC hit eight of eight foul shots in the last 8:03 to win.

DHC canned 11 of 11 free throws for the night. Farmville was eight of 14 from the line. Both teams hit nearly 50% from the floor. Farmville was 18 of 37 for 48.6% and DHC was 18 of 38 for 47.4%.

Farmville was led in scoring by Pettway with a game-high 19. Edwards added 10 for the Jaguars.

Gatlin led DHC with 18 points and eight rebounds. DHC outscored Farmville, 23-14. Farmville was led on the boards by Edwards with five.

The game began with both teams pushing the ball up court looking for the fast break. Gatlin scored DHC's first six points, but the Vikings were only able to manage a 6-4 lead.

Center Reggie Smith hit two foul shots and a pair of buckets inside as Conley opened up a 14-11 lead at the end of the first period. Smith scored six of his eight points in the first period.

A pair of free throws by Andrew Edwards tied it at 16-16 and Terrance Pettway hit a jumper from the left to give the Jaguars an 18-16 lead — their first and only lead of the game — with 3:59 left.

Farmville did not score again in the half. DHC, meanwhile, scored 11 straight points — four by Otis Payton underneath and a three-point play by Mitchell Cox — to give the Vikings a 25-18 lead.

Guard Donald Wilson hit two jumpers — one at the buzzer — to complete the run and give the Vikings a 29-18 lead.

Farmville cut the DHC lead to 31-25 midway through the third period and cut it to 33-29 on a bucket by Edwards. Gatlin, however, swished a jumper in the lane and hit two foul shots to give DHC a 37-29 lead after three periods.

The Jaguars cut the lead to two (twice) and one (twice) but could never go on top as the Vikings held on for the win.

"I thought those two bad spots — at the end of the second quarter when they went up, (29-18), at the half and that bad spell late in the third quarter — that hurt us," Terrell said.

The Lady Jaguars were led by Stephanie Newton with 10 points.

The Valkyries, now 5-0, jumped out to a 6-0 lead early and lead, 13-8, at the end of the first period. Kornegay canned a pair of buckets early in the second period as DHC outscored Farmville, 10-2, to take a 23-10 lead. DHC led, 29-16, at the half.

Conley, without all-conference center Karen Barrett, who is out with an ankle injury, upped his lead to 22 (40-22) after three periods and coasted home with the win.

Despite the win, DHC coach Joy James was not particularly happy with the play of her Valkyries.

"I think we had one of those nights when you can't do anything right. We all had fumble fingers," she said.

James praised Kornegay, who scored 22 points, and Barnhill, who added 18. "I thought Mechio did a good job," James said, "and I thought Irish did a good job on the break."

The Lady Jaguars were led by Stephanie Newton with 10 points.

During the early minutes of the third period, North Pitt worked up a six-point lead, 21-15 before Rose rallied behind the scoring of Alma Atkinson and Frances Barnhill to finally take the lead, 27-26 with 34 seconds left to play.

Harrell, however, put North Pitt back ahead with a three point play just under a minute into the final period, 29-27. And while Rose was missing its first seven shots for a 33-27 lead, the Pant-HERS added four more points for a 33-27 lead. After Barnhill broke the ice, three free throws, two of them by Sherri Bradley, upped the lead to 36-29.

Both teams shot miserably from the floor, North Pitt hitting on just 27.5 percent and Rose making just 22.4 percent. The Pant-HERS enjoyed a horribly lopsided rebounding edge, 74-38, while committing twice as many turnovers, 28 to 14.

"Our first half wasn't pretty at all," North Pitt coach Randy Avery said. "But we made some foul shots at the end and that was a big part in our game. We had a streak of luck there when things seemed to go right for us."

Rose coach Dennis Gibson was very disappointed in his team's play, and blamed the absence of starting center Doris Richardson, out sick, for much of it.

"We got murdered on the boards, and I knew that we would without Richardson. Sheila Carmon and Frances Barnhill also didn't have their usual nights."

Officials also called four technicals in the game, two on each team.

Harrell led the North Pitt scoring with 18 points, while Pittman added 14. Atkinson and Barnhill each had nine for Rose.

Blitz Sign Ex-Pirates
CHICAGO — Two former athletes from East Carolina University have been signed by the Chicago Blitz of the new United States Football League.

Larry Austin and Noah Clark have both signed contracts with the Chicago entry into the new league.

Austin was a track athlete at East Carolina, while Clark, a native of Robertsonville, played defensive tackle on the ECU football team.

Cooper Verdict On State Job Said Near

RALEIGH (AP) — University of Tulsa football coach and athletic director John Cooper is expected to announce today whether he will accept the head coaching job at North Carolina State, say reports by two Raleigh newspapers.

The News and Observer and The Raleigh Times both quoted sources at N.C. State as saying Cooper had been offered the job and that an announcement on his decision was expected today.

The Tulsa Tribune also has reported the offer was made to Cooper during the weekend. The six-year Tulsa coach had motel reservations in Raleigh for Tuesday night, the Tribune said.

Cooper guided Tulsa to a 10-1 mark this season and has a 42-24 record at Tulsa.

North Carolina State Athletic Director Willis Casey has previously indicated the university wanted to name a new coach by today.

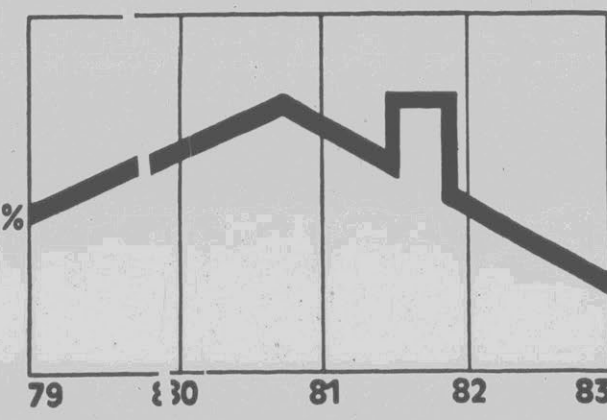

The Tulsa Hurricane of the Missouri Valley Conference was snubbed by bowl committees at the end of the season, causing speculation that Cooper might be encouraged to take a coaching job at another school.

Jags Down Goldsboro
GOLDSBORO — Farmville Central's wrestlers won four of the eight matches they actually wrestled, but forfeits in five weights allowed Goldsboro to take a 49-18 win over the Jaguars last night.

Injuries and lack of interest by the heavier weight athletes at the school have cut the program to the bone — and it may have trouble surviving.

The Jaguars are now 1-4 and play host to Cary on Thursday at 7 p.m.

Campanelli Hopes Identity Not To Hard To Handle

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Lou Campanelli, head coach of the James Madison Dukes, is a man who has come to find an identity — and he's hoping that it won't prove too difficult a problem to handle.

Campanelli, who twice guided unsung James Madison into the NCAA tournament — pulling off two major upsets — spoke yesterday at the Greenville Sports Club.

"A couple of years ago, I needed an ID to get a check cashed in Harrisonburg (Va., home of JMU). Now, one of the restaurants has a sandwich named after me. Last year, after we nearly beat North Carolina in the regionals, we had 5,000 people waiting at the airport to cheer us home. But two years from now, if we do the same thing, it might be a lynch mob."

Campanelli is the only basketball coach in the 11-year cage history of James Madison, which went co-ed at that time and decided to put in a fine athletic program with it.

During the course of those ten previous seasons, Campanelli has brought the program along from the Division III ranks to become one of the better known "little names" in college basketball's Division I ranks. Two years ago, the Dukes upset Georgetown in the NCAA's first round, and last year they beat Ohio State before bowing to eventual champion UNC in a close, hard-fought game in Charlotte.

"I consider myself fortunate," Campanelli said. "Ten years ago, I had the chance to start a program from scratch. I believed in the school's president and athletic director (both still at JMU) when they said it could be done. I asked them if they wanted a program that would be successful immediately, or if they wanted one that would stand the test of time."

Obviously, Campanelli said, they chose the latter.

"I've had a lot of fun the last ten years, and it's probably a better job that most people think. I have a great president who cares about me. When we're down, he doesn't give me a kick, but a pat.

"I'm afraid if I take another job, it won't be as much fun, and I would be pressured to take shortcuts and to compromise my principles to keep with the Joneses of that conference. And if I can't do it the right way, I ain't goin'."

Campanelli said he felt he has paid his dues, starting his career as coach of parochial school that didn't even have a gym. "But I had to learn from the ground floor up and I think it's made me a better coach," he said.

"It prepared me for James Madison, and the last two years, we've been the Rocky of college basketball. We haven't had the pressure on us, but we might start to get some of that this year. But to get to the NCAA in nine years from scratch is something."

Campanelli said that while he hasn't been able to recruit the "super-stars" he has been able to get overachievers. "They know that we care for them. We work 'em hard, but when they know that you care for them, they'll go that extra mile."

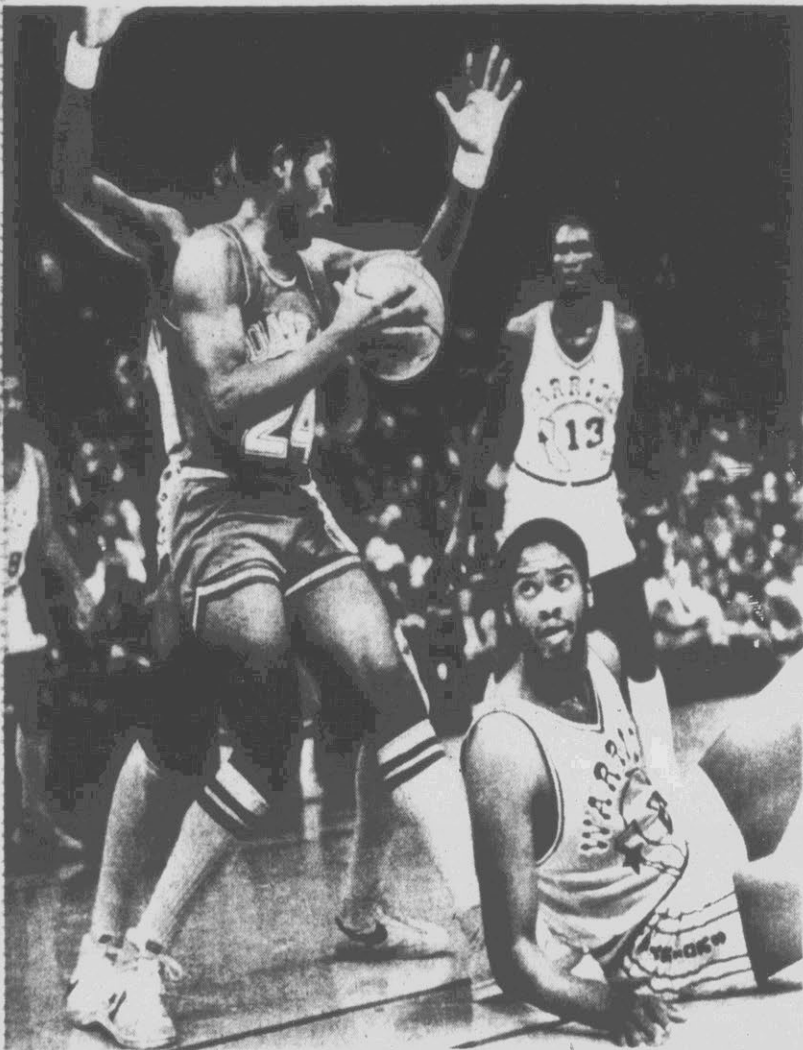

"Last summer, I sent them a clipping about five blind people who climbed Mt. McKinley, the highest mountain in the United States. I told them that if blind people could do that, just think what we could do with two eyes, two legs, two arms and a heart."

Campanelli said it would be great if coaches were hired and fired, not because of how many wins and losses they had, but by how many of their players graduated. "In my ten years, every player has graduated with his class. This is what college athletics is all about. If you're going to be a dog in class, you'll be a dog on the court, and you're going to lose us a ball game somewhere."

The coach added that he likes to see discipline on the court and that he's sorry to see the shot clock being pushed in the game. "I think the fans will eventually tire of it. It's getting closer to the NBA game, and I don't think that's the kind of ball the fans really want to see. But the nation panicked after seeing the Virginia-North Carolina game last year (on national TV)."

The Sports Club's next meeting, on January 11, will feature ECU women's basketball coach Cathy Andruzzi.

Portland Center Checks Jabbar

By The Associated Press

Even though Wayne Cooper can't block Kareem Abdul-Jabbar's shots, that doesn't mean that the Portland center is powerless to stop the Los Angeles Lakers star.

Cooper held Abdul-Jabbar to two points in the final quarter as Portland defeated Los Angeles 107-103 in a National Basketball Association game Tuesday night.

The 6-foot-10 Cooper, who had 17 points and six rebounds compared to 14 points and four rebounds for Abdul-Jabbar, said the key to containing the 7-2 Lakers center is keeping him away from his favorite shooting spots.

"I don't think he ever got into the flow of the game early, and that hurt him later on," Cooper said of Abdul-Jabbar. "I tried to push him as far away from his spot as I could. He could stand still and I still couldn't block his shot."

Cooper had three blocked shots in the game, one of them with six seconds to go against Bob McAdoo to salvage the victory, Portland's fourth in a row since Cooper became a starter.

"We have not been out-rebounded since we made that change," Portland Coach Jack Ramsay said. "He can shoot, he can rebound and he can block shots."

Cooper was traded by Dallas to Portland for guard Kelvin Ransey in the off-season.

The Los Angeles-Portland game, was tied 12 times and there were 11 lead changes, but the Lakers seemed to have a comfortable edge, 95-88, with 6½ minutes to play.

But the Trail Blazers fought back to tie the score at 101-101 before Jim Paxson, who scored 24 points, sank two free throws for a 105-103 edge with 18 seconds to go.

Suns 114, Sonics 109

Alvan Adams scored 26 points and Dennis Johnson 25 as Phoenix beat Seattle in overtime for only its second victory in the last eight games.

The Suns led by as many as 15 points in the first half and still had an 85-76 advantage with 8½ minutes to go, but the Sonics came back to take a 93-89 lead behind Fred Brown's 10 points.

After Maurice Lucas scored Phoenix's last six points to tie the game 97-97 at the end of regulation, Larry Nance tipped in a missed shot with 2:50 to go in overtime to give the Suns the lead for good.

Spurs 102, Rockets 93

George Gervin scored 29 points as San Antonio handed Houston its fifth straight loss and held the Rockets to 95 points or less for the eighth consecutive game.

Pistons 104, Knicks 99

Terry Tyler scored 12 of his 26 points in the fourth quarter and Isiah Thomas contributed four points and a key steal in the final seconds to lead Detroit over New York.

The 6-foot-1 Thomas, who scored 19 points, tied the score for the sixth time in the fourth quarter, 97-97, on a tip-in of a missed shot while surrounded by three Knicks. Then after Bill Laimbeer's two free throws gave the Pistons a 99-97 edge, Thomas stole an in-bounds pass, was fouled and hit two more free throws for a four-point lead.

Bullets 108, Bulls 102
Greg Ballard scored 22 points and reserve guard Kevin Grevey added 21 to pace Washington over Chicago.

Warriors 122, Mavericks 113
Purvis Short scored 15 of his 33 points in the fourth period to lead Golden State over Dallas.

Broken Artificial Heart Valve Just One Of Risks

By DONNA ANDERSON
Associated Press Writer
SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A broken valve in the artificial heart implanted in Barney Clark could have been worse and shows the risks of pioneering medical technology, his doctors say.

The left ventricle of Clark's heart was replaced Tuesday after the 61-year-old retired dentist experienced a sudden drop in blood pressure. He was reported in critical condition early today, but resting comfortably.

"This kind of failure — this is a serious valve failure — could have been more serious. And, in theory, sometime in the future, it could result in his (Clark's) demise," said Dr. Chase Peterson, University of Utah vice president for health sciences.

"As I have said in the past, if Dr. Clark didn't come down with a major complication apart from the heart, he would die of a failure of the heart — sooner or later," Peterson said Tuesday.

Dr. Robert Jarvik, inventor of the Jarvik-7 artificial heart, said it was fortunate the defective valve allowed time to examine the problem and correct it.

"It is a goal of engineering to create systems that have this kind of failure ... to give you time to correct the failure," Jarvik said.

The problem was caused by a break in the housing of the Jarvik-7 heart's mitral valve, which attaches to Clark's own left atrium. A malfunction of the mitral valve is the most serious that could occur in any of the heart's four valves, Jarvik said.

"This is somewhat of a random failure. We still feel the risk is justified with this kind of valve," he said.

Asked if he had any doubts about the device being ready for use in a human, Jarvik replied: "No. We're going to have to live with things like this."

The possibility that repairs would be needed after the implant was anticipated in the consent form Clark signed Nov. 29 before the heart was implanted Dec. 2.

"I further understand that due to the positioning and nature of the artificial heart ... that in addition to the surgery necessary for the original installation, additional chest surgeries may be required in the event the device needs to be replaced or repaired," the form said.

It also said that in each such case, it would be up to the patient to consent to the new surgery.

Peterson said any decision to perform more surgery would be up to Clark, his wife, Una Loy Clark, and Dr. William DeVries, the implant surgeon. They consulted Tuesday before deciding to go ahead with the repair operation.

Jarvik said that when Clark's blood pressure plunged, he immediately suspected a problem with a valve.

Blood normally pumping from the left atrium into the left ventricle was backing up into the atrium, and the heart was pumping only three liters per minute instead of the normal quantity of nearly seven liters, Jarvik said.

Clark's own diseased heart was pumping only one liter per minute before the new heart was installed.

Jarvik said he did not know specifically why the valve broke.

"There were certain things related to the way the drive system drives the compressed air to the heart

Revised Evaluation Of Teachers Gets Approval

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Proposals calling for major revisions in the way public school teachers are evaluated and giving county commissioners the power to levy additional sales taxes have received final approval from a legislative study committee.

The Select Committee on Education also recommended on Tuesday that no more than 75 percent of North Carolina's general tax revenues should be spent annually on education.

The sales tax proposal sparked a long discussion and sharply divided committee members, who agreed that county governments need more money but disagreed on the funding method.

Reporters Refused To Keep Briefing Secrets

WASHINGTON (AP) — After 13 reporters refused to sign an unprecedented secrecy agreement, Pentagon officials relented and provided them with an off-the-record briefing on Soviet military developments.

Pentagon spokesman Henry Catto said the briefing was offered Tuesday to inform senior defense correspondents on the growing Soviet threat, as far as national security would permit.

Catto said the strict secrecy sought by the Defense Department was necessary to protect intelligence sources. The briefing dealt with Soviet advances in strategic nuclear weapons and conventional forces.

The session was arranged following complaints by reporters that Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and the defense establishment were not providing military affairs reporters with information enabling them to judge the validity of Reagan administration claims of Soviet military advances.

When the reporters arrived at a meeting room before the briefing, they were asked to sign a one-page statement titled "Department of Defense Secrecy Agreement."

Catto and other officials said that intelligence authorities were insistent on obtaining such a formal agreement from reporters before divulging highly sensitive information to them.

But after reporters unanimously refused to sign any such paper, defense officials reconsidered and agreed to go ahead with the briefing on the understanding that the material would be off the record and usable only as background matter when reporters write future stories.

The committee also voted to recommend that the state assume total responsibility for school construction while local governments shoulder more of the cost of salaries and program operations.

State law now requires that the state pay for operation of the public schools while counties pay for construction, but the committee noted a "gradual blurring" of the responsibilities.

The committee approved the revision in the way public school teachers are evaluated and paid, saying that the current teacher salary schedule "fails to assist in retaining capable teachers, encourages mediocrity, is structured to retain marginal teachers, contains few incentives and generally does not support personal goal-setting and evaluation."

The committee recommended five levels of competence and responsibility for educators spanning a 30-year career. Each level would involve four to eight years of employment.

Differentiation of the teachers' level of responsibility and pay would be based on performance measured by standardized evaluations.

In approving the cap on education spending, the committee said it would give the Legislature "a benchmark for measurement" and "a rational way" to hold down education costs, the committee report said.

The state spent 79.3 percent, or $2.25 billion, of its total General Fund tax revenues of $2.8 billion on education from kindergarten to the university level in 1980-81.

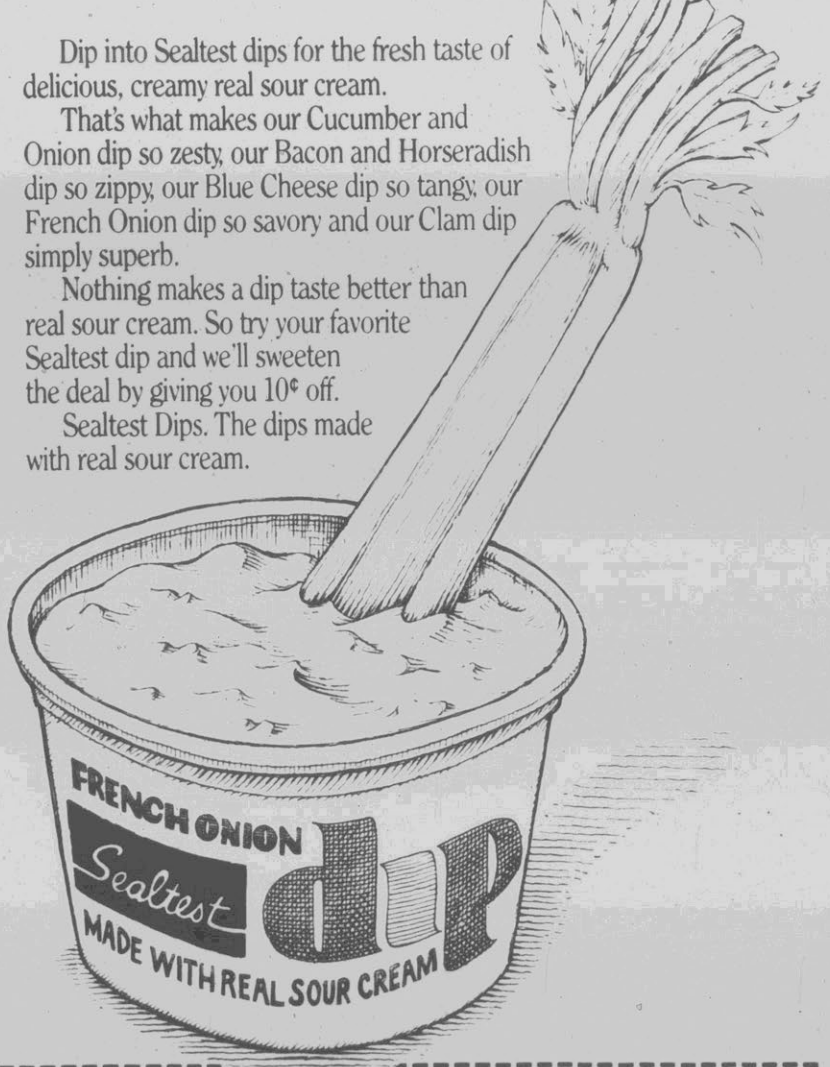

But 1980-81 was "an abnormal year in terms of not just education spending, but spending in general," said legislative fiscal analyst David Crotts.

Legislators Said Split On New Drinking Age Law

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Many state legislators favor raising the legal drinking age from 18 but they are split over whether to increase it to 19 or 21, shows an Associated Press survey.

Most of the respondents to a questionnaire mailed to 1983 General Assembly members last month said they favor a higher drinking age and other proposals by the Governor's Task Force on Drunken Driving.

The proposals give bar owners civil liability for illegally selling alcohol to under-age or intoxicated people, create a single impaired driving offense to replace the existing driving under the influence law and immediately revoke a driver's license for 10 days for driving with a blood alcohol content of .10 percent or more.

Gov. Jim Hunt has proposed raising the age for buying beer and wine but has not suggested a new age limit. Currently, the age for buying beer and wine is 18 and the age for buying liquor is 21.

Hunt also has endorsed the driving while impaired law and 10-day revocation but has made no commitments on the proposal involving bar owners.

The Governor's Crime Commission agrees with the task force's proposals except it wants to raise the drinking age to 21 over a three-year period.

This week the Presidential Commission on Drunk Driving urged states to make 21 the age limit for buying any alcoholic beverage and said legislatures should consider the matter on a near-emergency basis.

Of the 170 legislators surveyed by The Associated Press, 103 or 60 percent responded to the questionnaire. Thirty-three of the 50 Senate members and 70 of 120 House members responded. Answers did not vary greatly between House and Senate.

Because some surveys were unsigned, differences between Democrats and Republicans could not be determined accurately.

When asked: "Do you favor raising the minimum age for buying beer and wine," 73 respondents said yes, 12 said no and 18 were undecided or gave no response.

Of those who favored raising the drinking age, 26 liked a 19-year-old limit, 13 favored a 20-year-old limit, 28 wanted a 21-year-old limit and 24 were undecided.

There was a less support for the task force's other proposals.

The so-called dram shop statute would make bar tenders liable if they serve an under-age or drunken customer and that customer later has an accident because he was drunk. Existing laws make it illegal to serve alcohol to those under age 18 or those already intoxicated. Some judges have interpreted that to mean bar owners already are liable if such customers have accidents.

When asked whether they favored a dram shop statute, 59 of the survey respondents said yes, 21 said no and 23 were undecided or gave no answer.

Some said they were concerned whether bar keepers could determine who was too intoxicated to keep drinking. Another task force proposal would create a single impaired driving offense to replace existing laws against driving under the influence, driving with a blood alcohol content of .10 percent or more and careless and reckless driving after drinking.

The new law would require judges to weigh certain aggravating and mitigating factors before sentencing drivers. Punishments would range from a fine up to $100 and 24 hours in jail or 24 hours community service or a 30-day loss of driving privileges or a combination.

The maximum punishment would be 14 days to two years in jail and a fine of up to $2,000.

The law is aimed at making the punishment more closely fit the crime.

When asked whether they favored a single impaired driving offense, 52 of the respondents said yes, 12 said no and 39 were undecided or declined to answer.

Revocation of a driver's license is the most effective deterrent to drunken driving, the task force concluded. Under one of its proposals, a magistrate could confiscate a license after finding probable cause that the arrest was proper, the Breathalyzer test was performed correctly and the driver had .10 percent or more alcohol in his blood.

When asked whether they favored 10-day revocation of a driver's license, 61 of the legislators said yes, 16 said no and 26 others were undecided or did not answer.

Some of those who opposed the proposal said they might change their minds if the law called for revocation of a driver's license when the driver had a higher level of alcohol, for example .15 percent, in his blood.

Others said the Breathalyzer was too easily manipulated and a magistrate should never be given authority to revoke a driver's license.

Hospitalized In Ammonia Leak

ROCKY MOUNT, N.C. (AP) — An ammonia leak at the Fast Food Merchandizers Plant sent about 22 people to the hospital Wednesday, company officials said.

The leak was discovered at about 10:30 a.m. when a pressure relief valve on an ammonia supply pump malfunctioned, said plant manager Ron Boorman. He said the cause of the problem was not known.

All but one or two workers were taken to Nash General Hospital in Rocky Mount, while the others were sent to a Wilson hospital, Boorman said. Some employees suffered shortness of breath and nausea, he said.

One woman was admitted for observation, said Nash General spokesman Bill Stancil. He said 19 others were treated and released.

The membership of Timothy Christian Church was honored at a birthday party Sunday night. "This is Your Life Wilma Smith" was given.

Coy Buck of Ayden and Barry Gaskins of Greenville were program participants.

Representing each month of the year, the 12 decorated tables were judged by Clyde Barber, Ed Davis and Linda Dixon.

Titan Missiles Are Being Retired By Air Force

By ARTHUR H. ROTSTEIN
Associated Press Writer
TUBAC, Ariz. (AP) — For 20 years, a towering nuclear sentry lived here, buried in a hill under a 740-ton door. Now the hole is empty, an underground nest without a bird, as the Air Force dismantles its obsolete Titan 2 missiles.

Titan Site 1-6, about a mile west of Interstate 19, is the second of 18 sites in southeast Arizona to be deactivated as the Air Force retires the last of the nation's early generation, liquid-fueled nuclear missiles. Seventeen Titans in Arkansas and another 17 in Kansas will be taken out of service later.

The Titans were once the centerpiece of the nation's strategic missile force, but they have been superseded by more modern, solid-fuel multiple warhead Minuteman, of which the Air Force has 1,000 deployed in underground silos.

The Pentagon says it is retiring the 52 aging, leaky, liquid-fuel missiles because they pose safety threats and because they are becoming too costly to maintain.

The Titan system has been plagued by accidents involving spills of its volatile propellant, including fatal accidents near Damascus, Ark., and Rock, Kan.

The latest Titan site to be mothballed, about 45 miles south of Tucson, was opened to the news media Tuesday by Air Force officials for a rare glimpse at its innards.
The missile — 103 feet tall, 10 feet wide and weighing 330,000 pounds — was plucked from the ground about a month ago, after its toxic liquid propellants and nuclear warhead were removed.

The site itself will remain operational and fully manned for about two more weeks.
From above ground, the only indication that a missile once nestled 160 feet below the fenced compound are communications antennas, a wind recorder, sensors, and an 80-foot-square door of concrete and steel covering the silo. Weighing 740 tons — 1.4 million pounds — it is designed to withstand all but a direct nuclear hit.

The door can roll open on its railroad-car wheels in 17 to 21 seconds to reveal the gaping 55-foot-wide hole.
The operation is manned by a four-member missile combat crew working 24-hour shifts. Crew members occupy a control center complex about 30 feet underground, 120 feet from the silo housing the missile.

The crew uses identification codes to get into the compound. Crewmen walk down a stairwell with a "Watch for Rattlesnakes" sign. With another code, they enter an entrapment area between two doors where TV cameras allow them to be scrutinized by those below.

Next is a set of two 3½-ton blast doors, which allow access to two more identical doors. One opens to a short passage packed with wiring and other equipment that leads to the control center. The other leads to a 100-foot passageway to the silo.

The entire system is built on springs to cushion the facility against earthquakes and allow it to withstand a nuclear blast.
Inside the launch duct, temperatures were kept at about 60 degrees for the missile. Everything remains operational. Metallic shielding lines the walls to absorb sound; sprinkler systems are intact.

Capt. Harvey Longshore and his crew manned the launch control facilities inside the control center Tuesday.
If a missile was still present, and "upon a lawful command from the president" that passed verification, Longshore would have fed a safe-locked code into a computer, telling it which of three pre-programmed targets the missile would attack.

Without the proper code, it would be impossible to release a butterfly valve in the missile to let fuel and oxidizer reach the engine.
"That's the fail-safe mechanism," said Longshore.

Even then, only when two officers place two keys in two separate control panels and turn them simultaneously could a launch occur.
"One minute from the time the keys are turned, the sortie's gone," Longshore said. The target always is a mystery.

"One is selected and that's it," said Longshore. "I don't know what they are... I don't have the need to know."

SEEK AMNESTY
BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Twenty-one leftist guerrillas, 15 men and six women, surrendered to Bishop Jose Luis Serna of Florencia and applied for amnesty, the bishop has announced.

AN EMPTY SILO — The launching duct of a Titan II missile near Tubac, Ariz., sits empty after removal recently of the 103-foot weapon. However, the system remains operational and manned as it moves toward a caretaker status. (AP Laserphoto)

Charged In Bid-Rigging

BOONE, N.C. (AP) — An Asheville electrical contractor and one of its executives have been indicted on charges of rigging bids for a renovation project at Appalachian State University in 1978.

The Watauga County grand jury Monday indicted M.B. Haynes Electric Corp. and officer N.E. Cannady on two counts each: false pretense for allegedly claiming that the bids were competitive and made without collusion, and conspiracy in restraint of trade.

The indictment charge that Haynes corporately and Cannady individually conspired with and paid Watson Electrical Construction Co. of Wilson $30,000 to inflate the bids for the electrical contract for renovations at the Carol Grontes Belk Library at ASU. Haynes won the bid for the contract, which was let on May 2, 1978.

H.A. Cole, director of the state Justice Department's anti-trust branch, said the indictment grew out of last year's indictment of Watson Electric in connection with bid rigging on a project at East Carolina University's medical school in December 1978.

As part of a negotiated plea in that case, Watson officials agreed to tell investigators about other bid-rigging cases. That is why Watson is named but not indicted, Cole said.

Commission's Plan Requires Trained N. C. Law Enforcers

By The Associated Press
The first in a series of public hearings on a plan requiring mandatory pre-service training for all law enforcement officers is scheduled to begin in Greensboro today.

Wade Barber Jr. district attorney for Orange and Chatham counties, says such training is needed because about two-thirds of North Carolina's new law enforcement officers are sworn in without any training.

"There's a strong sense that there is a need for pre-service training," said Barber, chairman of the Criminal Justice Education and Training Standards Commission, which certifies all the state's 17,292 sworn officers.

Barber says a CJETSC committee has proposed a mandatory pre-service training plan for all officers.

Of the 1,371 new officers hired in 1981, about two-thirds were "sworn in, given a badge and issued a weapon without any training at all," said Barber in a telephone interview from his Pittsboro home.

Currently, law enforcement applicants must meet only minimal requirements. A person must be at least 20 years old, a high school graduate and a U.S. citizen. He also must not have committed a felony or more than three misdemeanors.

Larger cities, such as Charlotte, Winston-Salem, Raleigh and Durham, have their own accredited academies and require more hours of training than the minimum 240-hour course the commission requires for new officers.

The Raleigh Police Department has a 704-hour training standard, while Charlotte and Fayetteville police require more than 500 hours.

But many medium-sized and small communities are lucky to meet the commission's minimum standards, which have been in effect since 1973, Barber said. Officers are supposed to complete 240 hours of classes in a 12-month probationary period after they're sworn in.

But some officers who don't finish may ask for a six-month extension, Barber said, and many don't even begin their training until they have been on the job for six to 12 months.

Under the commission proposal, all state law enforcement officers would be required to take a 40-hour, one-week course before they are sworn in. The 40 hours would be subtracted from the 240-hour requirement, with the remaining hours to be completed in one year.

The courses are conducted at the city police academies, community and technical colleges and at other state training centers.

Other public hearings on the proposal will be in January, February and March in Charlotte, Raleigh, Asheville and Greenville.

CONVICTED — Hitman Charles V. Harrelson gets into a U.S. marshal's car in San Antonio. He was found guilty of conspiracy and obstruction of justice in the murder of a judge in May of 1979. (AP Laserphoto)

The Jury Wept In Returning Guilty Verdicts

By MACK SISK
Associated Press Writer
SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The government won convictions against three people in the only assassination of a federal judge this century, but the man accused of paying a hit man $250,000 for the killing still must be tried.

After deliberating 18 hours over four days, an emotional jury panel Tuesday found that convicted contract killer Charles V. Harrelson shot U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr. in the back on May 29, 1979.

Prosecutors contended Harrelson killed the judge for a $250,000 fee from imprisoned narcotics trafficker Jamiel "Jimmy" Chagra. Now the government must try Chagra, 39, accused of having Wood killed because he feared the judge — known as "Maximum John" for his stiff narcotics sentences — would sentence him to life imprisonment in a 1979 narcotics case. He subsequently was convicted.

All nine of the women jurors and one of the men wept as the verdicts were read, although the defendants showed little emotion. Defense lawyers said they would appeal.

Harrelson, 44, who served a 15-year sentence for another hired killing and allegedly boasted, "I've never killed a person who was undeserving of it," was convicted of conspiracy to murder, murder, and conspiracy to obstruct justice.

Chagra's wife, Elizabeth, 28, was convicted of conspiracy to murder and to obstruct justice, and Harrelson's wife, Jo Ann Starr, 41, was found guilty of conspiracy to obstruct justice.

Chief U.S. District Judge William S. Sessions on Tuesday set sentencing for the three defendants for March 8, also after Jimmy Chagra's trial. All three defendants remained in custody.

The next step in what the FBI termed the most exhaustive investigation since the 1963 assassination of President John F. Kennedy will be the Dec. 21 formal sentencing of Chagra's 36-year-old brother, Joseph, an El Paso attorney.

Joseph Chagra appeared as the star witness in the lengthy trial and testified he advised his brother to have Wood shot.

Joseph Chagra pleaded guilty to murder conspiracy in September in exchange for a 10-year prison term and immunity from state and federal prosecution.

Jimmy Chagra will be tried Jan. 10 and could have two life sentences added to the 30 years without parole he already is serving on narcotics charges.

The key witness in that trial is expected to be Jerry Ray James, Jimmy Chagra's former cellmate at the Leavenworth Federal Penitentiary in Kansas.

Bexar County District Attorney-elect Sam Millsap, who has threatened to retry Wood's killers in state court so he could seek the death penalty, said Tuesday he would make that decision after Jimmy Chagra's trial. Millsap takes office Jan. 1.

Harrelson, already serving 40 years in state narcotics and weapons charges, will receive a mandatory life sentence on the murder conviction. He could receive another life sentence, plus five years on the other two federal convictions.

Mrs. Harrelson, already sentenced to three years in federal prison for using a fictitious name to buy the alleged murder weapon, could receive a maximum five-year sentence on Tuesday's conviction. She also faces five perjury charges in connection with her grand jury testimony, punishable by up to five years on each count.

Mrs. Chagra could be sentenced to up to life imprisonment for murder conspiracy, plus five years for conspiracy to obstruct justice. She also faces an income tax evasion charge.

The trial began with jury selection on Sept. 28 and featured 40 days of testimony from 104 government and 26 defense witnesses, more than 500 pages of documents, and hours of tape recordings.

After the verdict, The El Paso Times Inc. and The Associated Press challenged a federal court rule that bars interviews with jurors in the Wood trial. The rule prohibits interviews with jurors during the trial or with respect to how jurors reached their verdict.

European Peace Activists March Near U.S. Bases

By EDITH M. LEDERER
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — West European peace activists who turned out in hundreds of thousands in 1981 are marching again, this time in smaller groups outside U.S. bases where 572 nuclear missiles are to be deployed starting next year.

In the new grassroots approach, anti-nuclear campaigners have engaged in mass acts of civil disobedience reminiscent of the U.S. civil rights protests of the 1960s — lying down outside gates of military bases in human blockades and forcing police to drag them away.

"You can't go on having large demonstrations forever," said Lukas Beckmann, a leading member of the pro-environment and anti-nuclear Greens Party in West Germany. "One must get out and do something at the basis (grass roots)."

In Italy, 5,000 pacifists are walking a 950-mile "peace march," and expect to arrive before Christmas outside the Sicilian town of Comiso where 112 U.S.-built cruise missiles are to be stationed.

In Britain, several dozen women have been maintaining a "peace camp" for the past 15 months outside the U.S. Air Force base at Greenham Common, where the first 96 cruise missiles are scheduled to be deployed. Last weekend, 20,000 women formed what they called a "chain of peace" around the base. Police later hauled away hundreds who formed a human carpet outside the gates.

In West Germany, demonstrators blocked entrances to about 50 military bases Sunday. They protests marked the third anniversary of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's decision to station the cruise and Pershing 2 missiles in Europe starting next year to counter a perceived Soviet threat.

At the U.S. Forces European Command headquarters in Vaihingen, about 10 miles northwest of Stuttgart, police carried away about 100 demonstrators who held up traffic. Those seized included two members of Parliament from the opposition Social Democratic Party.

During the past month, peace protesters have demonstrated in Sweden, Norway and Denmark, where the debate over deploying U.S. missiles has been a major foreign policy issue.

NATO decided to deploy medium-range missiles in Europe to counter sophisticated Soviet SS-20s, targeted on all of Western Europe. Last week, U.S. officials said the Soviets have 333 such missiles, each with a triple warhead.

Earlier this month, the Soviet Union indicated it would reduce its medium-range missile force by more than half if the United States halts deployment of the cruise and Pershing 2 missiles in Europe.

U.S. officials say the offer is unacceptable because it would still leave the Soviets with a substantial advantage in medium-range weapons. But European peace campaigners and some opposition political leaders welcomed the offer.

The West German government's insistence on secrecy about missile sites, the Soviet offer and the new disclosure that the United States plans to shift its command headquarters from West Germany to Britain in wartime will be major issues in West Germany elections expected in March.

The Netherlands and Belgium are to take 48 cruise missiles each, but both have said final deployment will hinge on the success of U.S.-Soviet arms control talks in Geneva which resume Jan. 27.

Here is a brief rundown on anti-nuclear movements in Europe:

BRITAIN — The Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament, which claims a growing membership of 250,000, has supported the Greenham Common peace camp and called for a nationwide crusade to block the stationing of cruise missiles in Britain.

WEST GERMANY — The peace movement, which attracted more than 300,000 demonstrators at the NATO summit in Bonn last June 10, switched to the new tactic of blockading bases. The latest revelation about moving the U.S. command headquarters in war has increased West Germans' fears that they would die in a military confrontation — and provided new fuel for anti-nuclear campaigners.

Chancellor Helmut Kohl said he will campaign in the March elections to get a mandate for stationing 108 Pershings and 96 cruises in West Germany. He also has called for a dialogue with young West Germans, who appear increasingly pacifist.

ITALY — Anti-nuclear militants in Sicily say they have presented the government with a petition against the missiles signed by 1 million people. For the first time, two leading Roman Catholic bishops have condemned the plan to base cruise missiles in Sicily. Bishop Dante Bernini, president of the Italian Bishops Conference and Bishop Luigi Bettazzi of Ivrea, president of Pax Cristi, an international peace movement, also expressed solidarity with American bishops condemning nuclear warfare.

NETHERLANDS — Mient Jan Faber, head of the Interchurch Peace Movement, the nation's major peace organization, said the movement has begun a lobbying campaign in which members of Parliament are invited to grassroots meetings to see "how strong the mood is not to deploy."

DENMARK — The peace movement experienced an explosive growth in 1981, largely due to the Pan-Nordic Women for Peace group, which organized a massive petition drive and a Copenhagen-to-Paris march. Earlier this month, Parliament suspended payments of Denmark's $8.8 million share of the bill for installing the cruise and Pershing-2 missiles. Former Prime Minister Anker Joergensen said the move was a signal that Denmark wants "concrete moves" toward disarmament.

SWEDEN — New Social Democratic Prime Minister Olof Palme, whose campaign slogan was "employment and peace," has called for a nuclear-free corridor in central Europe.

NORWAY — The most recent anti-nuclear peace march in Oslo last month drew a record crowd of 11,000 people. But Kaare Willoch's Conservative minority government is firmly behind NATO, as were nearly 70 percent of Norwegians in the most recent poll.

FRANCE — The Communist-led peace movement in France meant there was no possibility that "under the colors of 'pacifism' a movement could create a policy of disarmament in the face of the fantastic arsenal in Eastern Europe."

spokesman, Michel Vauzelle, said Monday that the absence of a powerful grassroots peace movement in France meant there was no possibility that "under the colors of 'pacifism' a movement could create a policy of disarmament in the face of the fantastic arsenal in Eastern Europe."

Sentenced For Fraud Of Blind

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A 23-year-old Greensboro man has been sentenced to one year in prison after being convicted of fraud for handing a blind clerk a $1 bill and telling her he gave her a $20 bill.

U.S. District Judge Hiram Ward sentenced Hugh Stanley Quick Tuesday after a jury took almost four hours to reach its decision.

Quick was charged with giving Linda Walston a $1 bill in the snack bar in the basement of the federal building May 5, telling her he wanted change for a $20 bill.

Ms. Walston counted out the change for him, then turned to an off-duty federal police officer in the snack bar and asked him if the bill was a $20, she testified. The officer told her she had a $1 bill and questioned Quick.

Quick testified on his own behalf that he did not realize Ms. Walston was blind.

We've been offering the "newest thing in banking" for two years now.

The new money market accounts are all two years behind North State.

North State's Funds ManagementSM 12.00%^{*}

Ours is better.

Practically every financial institution in the country is introducing a new account this week. And practically every one of them will have a different name for the one they introduce — designed to try to convince you that theirs is somehow more advantageous.

But if you examine them closely, you'll find that they differ from North State's Funds ManagementSM in four basic respects.

- 1) They require a bigger initial deposit.
- 2) They require a minimum balance.
- 3) They don't pay as much interest.
- 4) They are all brand new.

Compare North State's initial deposit.

North State requires an initial deposit of $1000 in our Funds ManagementSM Account.

Compare that with other financials that require $2500 or so to start.

Just like theirs, our Funds ManagementSM is insured to $100,000. But at North State, you can enjoy the high interest of a money market account for a lot less.

If they have a minimum balance, it's higher than ours.

Funds ManagementSM will pay you money market interest on a nickle. Or a penny. We figure it's to your advantage to keep a high minimum balance. So, except for a 3-transaction maximum, we don't burden you with restrictions, requirements, fine print or other things like that.

Since we give you the best deal, we feel certain you'll keep a lot of money with us. But we don't require it.

You get the highest rates at North State.

North State will pay you a better rate than the other new accounts, too.

That's our policy.

Nobody's going to give you a better rate now or in the future.

Compare the Funds ManagementSM rate. If nothing else, our rates will convince you that Funds ManagementSM is better.

We've got two year's experience with money market accounts.

Everybody else is two years behind. We have our accounting procedure, all the mechanics for Funds ManagementSM already in place.

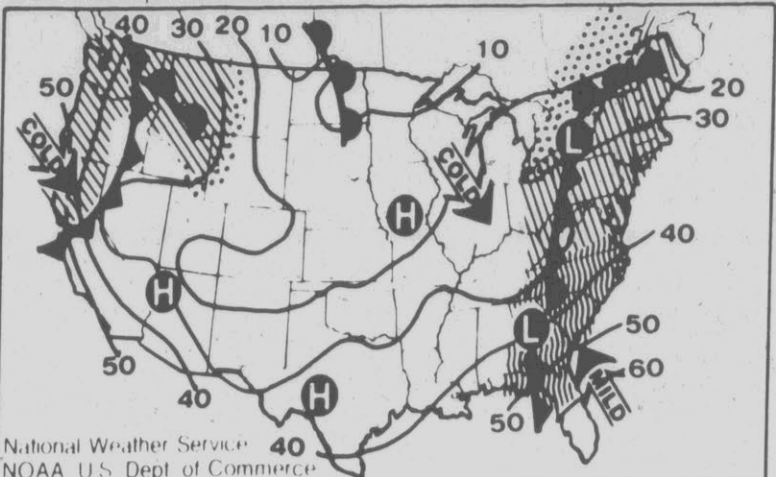

We've been competing successfully with money market funds for quite a while. And we believe that makes Funds ManagementSM better.

So examine the new accounts closely. We believe that if you do, you'll come to North State and open a Funds ManagementSM Account.

* This is the net 7-day annualized yield for the preceding reporting week. Reporting weeks are from Tuesday to Monday. The yield will fluctuate each week as money market rates and expenses vary so it is not necessarily representative of future rates. Snow is expected for the Great Lakes and rain

By The Associated Press
Another rainy period is on tap in North Carolina through Thursday and into Friday.

The recreational weather outlook for North Carolina calls for a good chance of rain for the state the rest of the week.

By tonight rain will have spread over to the coast with minimums mostly in the 40s west and 50s east. Rainfall should be more concentrated over the eastern and central portion of the state Thursday with scattered showers westward and a few snow flurries over the high elevations of the state.

Rain mixed with freezing rain spread into the mountains this morning. Temperatures today pushed into the 40s over western areas ranging to near 60 along the Outer Banks.

A slow moving cold front moved into the Mississippi Valley area this morning and should work itself over into the Carolinas and Atlantic Seaboard by Thursday.

This weather feature will be the trigger for rain during that time. In fact, some of the mountain areas could have some heavy rains at times tonight. This situation is being monitored closely, for the ground is saturated and any prolong period of heavy rain could cause some concern over the mountains by tonight.

Temperatures continued to warm Tuesday as compared with Monday's cold conditions. By mid and late afternoon low and mid 50s were evident over the coastal plain and eastward while the piedmont peaked into the mid and upper 40s.

Mountain communities were varied in the 40s and

Jamscam Jury Expected To Begin Its Deliberating Today

By ELISSA MCCRARY
Associated Press Writer
CONCORD, N.C. (AP) — The jury in the Jamscam trial of Johnny Lee Fletcher was expected to begin deliberations in the case today after hearing more than a week of testimony from 30 prosecution and defense witnesses.

Superior Court Judge Donald L. Smith of Raleigh said he would instruct the jury on the charges in the case when the trial resumed at 9 a.m. today.

The stage was set for the seven-woman, five-man panel to begin deliberating when defense attorneys rested their case Tuesday morning. Attorneys took up most of Tuesday afternoon with final arguments.

Fletcher, 41, of Concord, a former state Jaycees president, is charged with misapplying $21,480.50 in Jaycees charity funds in 1977 and 1978. He faces up to 50 years in prison if he is convicted.

Prosecutors contend that Fletcher used money earmarked for Jaycees charitable causes to pay for phony Jaycees chapters in order to win national awards.

Defense attorneys say Fletcher didn't know anything was done wrong during his year as president until a meeting of past Jaycees presidents in 1980.

Fletcher originally was charged in four two-count indictments, including four counts of conspiracy to misapply funds and four counts of misapplication of funds. But Smith dismissed three of the charges at the request of defense lawyer Wesley Grant, saying there was insufficient evidence presented to link Fletcher to the charges.

In closing statements Tuesday, Grant told the jury that the state had failed to prove its case against Fletcher.

"Whatever you believe, you can't believe that John Fletcher masterminded some kind of terrible situation," Grant said. "It just isn't so."

"John's signature wasn't on any of the checks, there was no personal gain except satisfaction for a job well done," Grant said. "Consider the fact that he was just a volunteer."

Prosecutor Lester Chalmers said Fletcher told SBI agent Claude Green about his role in the scandal in 1980, and said Fletcher didn't deny discussing the transfer of funds from the Jaycees charity account to cover operating expenses.

"Mr. Fletcher has already confessed to Mr. Claude Green about his complicity in the case," Chalmers said.

"The only thing the defendant ain't done in this case...is plead guilty. He's confessed to Mr. Green and he's confessed to you."

In testimony earlier Tuesday, Fletcher said in his own defense that he didn't know that 61 of 156 new Jaycees chapters created while he was state president were fictitious. He also said he didn't know funds from his $11,000 travel allowance were used to pay membership dues for the bogus chapters.

"I left the financial problems to state headquarters," he said. "There were three paid staff members there to take care of them."

Williamsburg Illumination On Thursday

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. — Some 15,000 visitors and townsfolk are expected to witness the annual celebration launching Historic Williamsburg's traditional observance of Christmas seasons past in the Grand Illumination on Thursday.

At 5:30 p.m. Thursday, blazing artillery and glowing cressnets will be combined with cannons, mortars and the roar of muskets to usher in the celebration. Also, homes, shops and public building will be lit by some 2,000 candles.

Thursday evening is also opening night for "The Sham Doctor," the newest production of the company of Colonial Performers. The comedy was first performed in Williamsburg by the touring Hallam Company 230 years ago, in 1752. The opening night performance will be at 8:30 p.m. in the Williamsburg Lodge Auditorium.

Tickets for the play, the exhibition buildings, and more information on the Grand Illumination program may be obtained at the information center or by calling 804-229-1000, extensions 2191 and 2196.

EXTENDED WEATHER OUTLOOK FOR N.C.

Companies Join In Well Project

GULF, N.C. (AP) — Eleven brick companies from Sanford, Raleigh and Durham have joined to dig North Carolina's first successful natural gas well near this Lee County town.

"There's a whole lot of it in there from one standpoint," said Sanford geologist Russell Patterson. "From the standpoint of Texas or Oklahoma, it's a dry well."

"There's enough gas there to heat a dozen houses," said Richard Beutel, a Raleigh consultant leading the drilling effort.

But until a transport line is connected to the 1,000-foot well, it will remain in the ground, officials said. For now, the companies can't afford to get the gas out.

Co-Ops Facing Increased Cost

RED SPRINGS, N.C. (AP) — Eighteen rural electric cooperatives will have to pay an average of 9 percent more for wholesale electricity from Carolina Power and Light Co. beginning Jan. 1.

The rate increase amounts to $11.2 million a year for the 18 co-ops, said Jim Autry, spokesman for the Lumbee River Electric Membership Corp. The Lumbee River co-op will pay about 8.5 percent more, he said.

"This CP&L wholesale rate increase is part of an agreement worked out between CP&L and the 18 cooperatives back in October," Autry said. "The agreement brought a big reduction in a rate hike that CP&L was seeking. It would have raised rates by about 20 percent."

A newspaper log should burn about as long as a wood log. Roll your newspaper log as tight as possible. The tighter it is rolled the better it will burn.

STEP ONE

STEP TWO

After you have squeezed it tightly, bind it with a coat hanger or metal wire. Soaking the rolled newspaper in water and letting it dry completely will "season" the newspaper and make it burn more efficiently.

STEP THREE

Finally, stack about six dried newspaper logs in a crisscross to provide more ventilation to the fire and light it. Enjoy.

TV Log Irresistably Real Emotions In CBS Movie Offering Tonight

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The story vehicle of a mentally depressed mother returning to her family after six years of hospitalization seems artificial, but the emotions are irresistibly real in tonight's CBS movie, "Memories Don't Die."

Lindsay Wagner plays Joanne Tilford, an intruder in her own house who is summoned home to care for her children after her husband, Howdy (Gerald McRaney of "Simon & Simon") suffers a heart attack. Joanne hasn't seen her kids for six years; Shawn is now 9, Kathy a teen-ager. Joanne's return sets up conflicts between mother and daughter, and between mother and surrogate mother. It also opens the characters to guilt and fear, love and caring, while providing viewers an involving TV experience.

It's hard not to be touched by a mother, wrestling with anxieties and her reawakening maternal instincts, attempting to rekindle her children's trust and affection. The audience sympathy is further evoked by a wonderfully warm and sensitive portrait by Miss Wagner, the former "Bionic Woman."

After one suicide attempt, drugs, electric shock treatments and therapy, Joanne's doctor thinks she's capable of being a full-time mother and wife again. Joanne's not so sure. "How can I be ready to go home if I feel this scared?"

She's nervous about her own competency. But, except for flashbacks to her suicide attempt, Joanne remains remarkably composed and together, in fact too much so, giving the movie its most unbelievable element.

As it turns out, her fitness is less a problem than other issues:

Will she be accepted by her children? Does she want to be a mother and wife again? Does she want to accept responsibilities after having the hospital take care of her needs for so long?

When she leaves Chicago for California, she admits: "I feel like I'm leaving home."

Joanne receives a rude welcome. Her husband's sister and brother-in-law, who want custody of the children if Howdy should die, are patronizing and insensitive. But the worst treatment comes at home.

Daughter Kathy (Melissa Michaelsen) is hostile. Her feelings of abandonment are complicated by her extreme protectiveness and possessiveness toward her father, still recuperating in the hospital. Kathy objects when her mother returns to her old bed, and not the guest room.

Another obstacle to family togetherness is the icy housekeeper, Louise, played by Barbara Babcock of "Hill Street Blues." There's immediate competition and an intense disagreement over child-raising. Joanne, as the outsider, doesn't know her place yet, but she gets no sympathy from Louise.

"Trust me to know what's best and please don't interfere," Louise says.

CBS An Easy Winner In Week's Niensens Race

LOS ANGELES (AP) — CBS, taking seven of the Top 10, easily won the weekly Nielsen television ratings for the past week.

CBS finished the week ended Dec. 12 three rating points in front of second-place ABC. The week before CBS was 3.5 points ahead of ABC. NBC was in third place.

The CBS rating was 18.3. Second-place ABC had 15.3 and NBC had 14.7. The networks say this means in an average prime-time minute 18.3 percent of the nation's homes with television were tuned to CBS.

The No. 1 show of the week in the A.C. Nielsen Co. ratings was the CBS magazine show "60 Minutes." The first six shows were all from CBS. "Dallas" was second, "M-A-S-H" was third, "Magnum, P.I." was fourth, and "The Jeffersons" and "One Day at a Time" tied for fifth.

Seventh place went to the NBC Monday Night Movie, "Remembrance of Love." Kirk Douglas played a Nazi camp survivor who has a brief reunion in Israel with his sweetheart from before the Holocaust.

ABC's "Dynasty," the prime-time soap opera rival to "Dallas," was in eighth place. ABC's "Three's Company" was ninth, and CBS' "Falcon Crest" was tenth.

Some network shows dropped in the ratings this past week because of special non-network programming.

ABC's "T.J. Hooker," went from 41st last week to 70th place. The police show starring William Shatner apparently was affected by the telecast of the Georgetown-Virginia basketball game by the Turner Broadcasting System. More than 15 percent of the affiliate stations dropped the network show for the ball game.

CBS' "Bring 'Em Back Alive," which also had a more than 15 percent loss of affiliate stations, went from 46th place last week to 69th place in the current listing. The series and several others were affected by such special telecasts as sporting events and the week-long Billy Graham Crusade.

Here are the Top 10: "60 Minutes," a rating of 28.5 or 23.7 million households, CBS; "Dallas," 26.2 or 21.8 million, CBS; "M-A-S-H," 23.8 or 19.8 million, CBS; "Magnum, P.I.," 23.4 or 19.4 million, CBS; "The Jeffersons" and "One Day at a Time," tied, 21.5 or 17.9 million, both CBS; NBC Monday Night Movie, "Remembrance of Love," 21.3 or 17.7 million, NBC; "Dynasty," 21.2 or 17.6 million, ABC; "Three's Company," 21.0 or 17.4 million, ABC; "Falcon Crest," 20.8 or 17.3 million, CBS.

Here are the next 10: "Simon & Simon," CBS; "Archie Bunker's Place," CBS; "Trapper John, M.D.," CBS; "Hart to Hart," ABC; "9-to-5," ABC; "Gloria," CBS, and "Real People, NBC, tied; "Hill Street Blues," NBC; "Little House: A New Beginning," NBC; "Newhart," CBS.

Here are the five lowest-rated shows: ABC Friday Night Movie, "Don't Go to Sleep," ABC; "Bring 'Em Back Alive," CBS; "T.J. Hooker," ABC; "The Devil Connection," NBC; and last, ABC News Closeup, ABC.

Stand-In Santa Is Kept Busy

NORTH POLE, Alaska (AP) — The post office of this tiny town just outside Fairbanks gets thousands of letters in the pre-Christmas season, and the phone of one resident rings almost constantly.

The recipient of all the calls probably comes closer than anyone to being Santa Claus. His name is Con Miller and many people throughout the great Alaska interior are sure he really is old St. Nicholas.

"It all started in 1949," says Miller, 69. "I'd just arrived in Alaska, and bought an inventory of retail goods from someone in Fairbanks. I'd load the goods in my old station wagon, and sell from village to village."

But nobody much was buying, and Miller figured it was because he wasn't making an impression. "About that time I was rummaging through my inventory and came across a complete Santa Claus outfit," he recalls.

"So from then on, whenever I'd pull into one of those villages, I'd be wearing my Santa suit. The kids would get really excited, and as I'd approach, they'd call out, 'Santa Claus is coming!'"

He knew the name had stuck when three years later he was building a trading post in Fairbanks, a carload of kids passed by, and one shouted, "Hey, Santa! Are you building a new house?"

The U.S. Postal Service aided in spreading this case of mis-identity in 1954, when it opened a post office at the North Pole when the settlement was 1 year old.

"I'd guess that postal clerks, seeing kids' letters to Santa at the North Pole, passed 'em onto our post office," Miller says. "And people there naturally turned them over to me, me being Santa Claus — around these parts, anyway."

"It wasn't long before I was getting thousands of letters to Santa Claus. They usually start pouring in around Thanksgiving.

"But what really amazes me," he adds, "are the phone calls. Last year we got, I'd guess, about 350,000 calls between Thanksgiving and Christmas Eve. Almost all the calls are from young children, and I bet their parents get quite a jolt when the phone bill comes in."

When the telephone rings at his place of business, a huge store stocked almost entirely with Alaska souvenirs and Christmas-related items — where he also lives — he answers "Santa Claus House."

The majority of the callers, and the letter writers too, are concerned with what they would like to see in their yule stockings and under their Christmas trees. But many just want to be able to say they actually spoke to Santa Claus. Many of the letters have no return addresses and quite a few lack stamps, but the post office delivers them to Miller anyway.

Dear Charlie:

Well, the North Americans almost made a clean sweep of the titles at the World Olympiad. After taking the Mixed, Women's and Open Pairs, a U.S. squad lost by a whisker to my French friends in the final of the Rosenblum team event. In addition, the Canadian team won the Swiss team event.

Despite the magnificent performance by your players, the talk of Biarritz was the strong performance of the four-man Spanish team—to be exact, three men and a woman. They had a considerable lead at the halfway stage of their match against the winning French squad and only faltered in the home stretch.

I was most impressed by the defense of the Spaniards on this deal from an early round match against an American group. It is all very well to have enough tricks to set a contract—you have to cash them if you want to enjoy a happy result.

At both tables the final contract was four hearts. The Spanish West led a trump, and the declarer realized that he would need a spade discard from one hand or the other if he was to make his contract. The fact that the hands were near mirror patterns meant that only the king of diamonds offered any hope.

Declarer overtook the ten of trumps in hand with the ace and led a diamond. West rose with the ace and East contributed the ten. Since East could hardly want a diamond continuation, West interpreted the ten as a suit preference signal, showing values in spades. So he shifted to a low spade and the defenders quickly reeled in the setting tricks.

Looking at all four hands, the defense is simple. But to give you an idea of how difficult it can be in practice, the Americans did not find the spade shift and the Spanish declarer made four hearts.

As ever,
Omar

SHOPLIFTING makes you a criminal!

And criminals do get caught! Now the stores are wise to shoplifters and have the manpower and sophisticated equipment to prove it. Closed circuit cameras, undercover people, specially treated tagging systems...are all used to successfully catch shoplifters. And the stores are taking legal actions. Shoplifters face even stiffer fines...even jail when they're caught...plus the humiliation of getting arrested, and a criminal record that could affect future schooling, jobs, credit rating, and the respect and trust of family and friends. Shoplifting...like any other crime...just doesn't pay!

Malaysian Capitals A Big Mess

By KENNETH L. WHITING Associated Press Writer KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) - Years of haphazard growth have made a municipal mess of one of Asia's smaller capitals.

The litany of Kuala Lumpur's urban woes includes air pollution, traffic congestion, water shortages, electric power cuts, flooding and inadequate sewerage. A quarter of the city's population of 1 million live as squatters in makeshift houses.

Now a master plan promises - on paper anyway - to halt the officially acknowledged decline in the quality of life.

"The problems experienced by Kuala Lumpur are not dissimilar to those faced by other cities in developing countries," said the DSP or Draft Structural Plan that was recently released.

The 94-square-mile federal capital was separated from the state of Selangor in 1971. Kuala Lumpur, which means "muddy river mouth," grew from a tin mining camp in the Klang River basin some 130 years ago.

Frantic construction of high rise office buildings is changing the face of the once sleepy backwater where in colonial times only the turrets and onion domes of mosques and arabesque buildings were taller than the coconut palms.

More than 20 buildings of 20 stories or higher are under construction in the city Malaysians call "K.L."

"Physical development within the city and beyond has apparently been undertaken with scant regard to ecology and environment," according to the DSP.

The 228-page plan for comprehensive development has occupied 15 experts since 1978. It sets a broad policy framework for the next 20 years and projects a population of at least 1.8 million by the year 2000.

Other Third World capitals have blueprints for the future but few are well-heeled enough to carry out their sometimes grandiose plans.

Malaysia is more fortunate. It is the world's largest producer of tin, natural rubber, palm oil, pepper and tropical hardwoods, and has a growing crude oil output.

The economy is being squeezed by recession but there is no widespread unemployment.

Officials say 300 million ringgit ($129 million) is allocated to build 30,000 housing units for low income residents in Kuala Lumpur.

An estimated 3.83 billion ringgit ($1.64 billion) will be needed to revamp the city's transportation system.

The DSP calls for the diversion of 40 to 60 percent of passenger movement to public transport to avoid the massive congestion that is likely if private travel goes unchecked.

K.L. has no subways or streetcars, and commuting by train is limited. During rush hours more than 250,000 cars and trucks clog 450 miles of roads.

West Europe's Youths: A Jobhunting Generation

By JEFF BRADLEY
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — Whether college graduates or teen-age dropouts, young people leaving school in Europe today share a common fear: will they ever find a job?

World recession has pushed the continent's unemployment to post-World War II peaks, and those under 25 are among the most vulnerable.

Budget cuts have brought the age of the newly qualified but jobless doctor. From Italy's Fiat to Britain's ICI, industries are hiring fewer trainees. And some countries, including France, are looking at possible reductions in handouts to the unemployed.

There are now 4 million young Europeans without jobs. Some fear that only the scrapheap lies ahead as traditional industries, such as steel and textiles, contract.

"The situation is absolutely hopeless," said Gert-Jan Goedkoop, a Dutch doctor who graduated last year but can't find work.

"When I entered university seven years ago, every doctor was certain of a job. Now medical care is being hit by severe budget cuts and there are some 800 jobless doctors walking around," he said.

The Common Market Commission wants the 10 West European nations in the trading partnership to guarantee every youngster who graduates or leaves school either a job or professional training.

The problem is "a ticking bomb" threatening society, said the Institute of Social Research in Denmark, where the 15.3 percent youth jobless rate compares with 2.5 percent 10 years ago.

Born in an era when British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan was telling their parents they'd "never had it so good," Europe's young jobhunters belong to a TV-entertained, good-life generation — which makes the search for a fulfilling job all the harder to take.

"I thought I could survive for a year without feeling anxious, but it hasn't worked out like that," said 23-year-old Flavia Hawkesley, who graduated with a degree in music from England's Sussex University in 1981 but hasn't found a job.

Italy and Luxembourg have the highest under-25 jobless rate, comprising 49.7 percent of the unemployed. Britain, France, the Netherlands and Belgium also are above 40 percent.

British unemployment is at its worst since the 1930s, and half of those leaving school this year moved straight onto the dole, joining a dispirited colony of 1.3 million young people.

In Britain, the numbers would be even higher if it were not for the state-subsidized Youth Opportunities Program and other projects keeping about 440,000 young people off unemployment registers.

Among those on $40 a week state benefits is Stephen Boyd, 18, who lives with his widowed mother in Northern Ireland, where 22,000 of the unemployed are aged 19 or

To Compensate Losses On Tris

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House has approved legislation that would provide a way to compensate firms who lost money when the government banned use of the anti-inflammatory chemical Tris on children's sleepwear.

The legislation, which passed the Senate earlier this year in similar form, would allow textile and garment manufacturers to turn to the U.S. Court of Claims for assessment of their losses.

Boyd completed a business studies course at Belfast College of Technology two months ago and would like to enter the civil service. But there are no openings.

"The only vacancies seem to be for hairdressers, or jobs where they offer you two pounds ($3.50) more than your dole money for a week's work," he said.

Outside the labor office in Frankfurt, West Germany, Jacques Weber, 24, talked about the job he lost as a housepainter five months ago.

"I got kicked out of my parents' house because of it, and right now I'm living in my car," he said.

Even prosperous

Switzerland is feeling the pinch. Unemployment is just 0.5 percent. But there are 2,448 people under 25 out of work, according to the government, compared with 915 last year and just 13 a decade ago.

Roman Mueller, 21, completed a three-year Swiss apprenticeship as an offset printer but was laid off because of a lack of orders. He said he spends his time "sleeping in, helping with chores at home and with my hobby, photography."

Italy's giant car manufacturer, Fiat, halted new hiring in 1980. "If there is any turnover at all, we only take on very highly qualified and specialized people," said spokesman Camillo Frei.

Most countries have recognized youth unemployment as a critical issue.

Spain's new government has promised to create 800,000 new jobs in the next four years.

"I expect the Socialists now ruling Spain will do their best to resolve the situation," said Antonio Perez, 26, an unemployed Madrid attorney among more than 100,000 graduate lawyers, architects, engineers and other professionals out of work.

Spain is one of the few countries offering no state benefits to those seeking their first job, although West German youths in the same predicament and living at home also lose out.

France's deficit-ridden benefits program is on the verge of collapse, and a new government plan would halt payments to those who have worked less than six months in the past two years.

But Socialist President Francois Mitterrand's administration has cut the work week from 40 to 39 hours to create a reported 70,000 new jobs and increased civil service recruitment.

city of Apeldoorn which is run by 28 previously jobless people under 25.

Youth unemployment is rising fast in West Germany, now 0.5 percent above the national average of 8.4 percent, although traditional apprenticeships still take about 60 percent of all those who leave school.

Friedrich Krupp GMBH raised its intake of trainees this year by 5.8 percent "for social reasons," and Hoechst, a chemical firm, budgets about $8,000 for each of its 1,948 apprentices.

Bolster Power In Mail Fraud

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House has passed a bill designed to strengthen the Postal Service's power to protect the public from mail fraud.

The legislation gives the Postal Service new subpoena and investigative powers, enabling it to move more quickly than it can now against suspected mail racketeers.

Present law permits the postal service to shut down a mail order scheme only after lengthy hearings before an administrative law judge.

Opening Doors To Information

By GRAHAM HEATHCOTE
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — Running a library these days isn't just being wise about books, but also knowing how to press buttons to tap other kinds of information stored in computers.

Paul Channon, Britain's Minister for the Arts, opened a new Information Technology Center in London recently to show how to do it.

He said businessmen, as well as librarians and students, will benefit.

"We have unbelievable stores of information in Britain," Channon said. "The new technology will give proper access to these stores and should help our exports. Small organizations have got to learn how to use the information available. If they don't, they will fall behind their competitors."

The center, unique in Britain, is close to Oxford Circus and housed in the Central London Polytechnic, a college of higher education. Visitors will be shown how to operate a variety of microcomputers that can be used at home or workplace to connect with information stores.

Channon came into the picture because the center is jointly funded by the state-run British Library, inheritor of the books in the British Museum and several other state libraries, and the government's Department of Industry.

Graham Cline, an information scientist for a food manufacturing research group, who was demonstrating equipment at the center, said card indexes and filing clerks — "expensive and they make mistakes" — are becoming redundant. Information recorded on discs can be called up on microcomputer screens, edited and updated, then put back in.

"The main beauty of the system is that you can search for what you want very rapidly," he said.

Increasingly, specialized libraries are putting their information into computers so that anyone can use it for a fee. The House of Commons library in London has done it and so has the U.S. National Library of Medicine at Bethesda, Md.

ROUGH GOING — Jackie Turbyfill found the going rough as he rode his bike through the field in front of his house after a winter storm dumped five inches of snow on the northwestern

North Carolina community of Elk Park. Temperatures in the single digits made driving a car hazardous on the icy roads, much less a vehicle such as a bicycle. (AP Laserphoto)

CB Radio Craze Virtually Dead After Five Years

By NORMAN BLACK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — It took 16 years for most Americans to discover Citizens Band radio. And just five years to forget it.

The decline in popularity has been so swift that the Federal Communications Commission may stop licensing CB users. Officials believe the craze is over and there's no reason to continue.

The FCC won't act until next year but the fact it is even proposing the step emphasizes how things have changed.

Consider:
— At the height of its popularity, about one of every seven vehicles had a CB radio and the FCC received a million license applications a month. At times, the agency's processing backlog extended more than six months.

— The first lady at the time, Betty Ford, made news by getting a license and adopting "First Mama" as her handle. Elvis Presley became "The Music Man," Burt Reynolds, the "Bandit," Billy Carter, "First Brother."

— In 1974, when the boom started, CB radio was 16 years old and had slightly more than 1 million licensees. By 1978, there were more than 14 million. Many had more than one radio. Now only 5 million CBers have licenses.

But there was another element to the boom besides numbers. CB radio came to represent a lifestyle.
"There was a subculture to the thing, definitely, with songs and movies and a proletarian overtone," says John Sodolski, vice president of the Electronic Industries Association which represents radio manufacturers.

"I remember listening to an interview with psychologists at Vanderbilt University discussing what was happening to society, because people were talking to each other without really identifying themselves," recalls James C. McKinney, chief of the FCC's private radio bureau.

"That was the thing, the anonymity," McKinney says. "It was social and outgoing but it was also closed and private. It was weird. People could get their jollies doing things and saying things they normally wouldn't."

It was January 1976 that the FCC recorded its peak of 1 million license applications in one month. Within two years the boom was over and the decline set in. By October, the latest month for which figures are available, the FCC was processing only 30,000 applications — for both new and renewed licenses.

"That's the all-time low for at least the last 15 years," according to McKinney.

Explanations for the decline are varied.
Richard M. Smith, chief of the FCC's field operations bureau, cites the fad element: "A desire to participate in whatever is 'in.' When the novelty wore off, so did consumer interest."

Jerald H. Reese, executive director of REACT International Inc., an organization of CBers who report highway emergencies and assist in disasters, blames the marketplace.

He says that when the FCC increased the number of CB channels from 23 to 40 in 1976, retailers were caught with millions of the older units. Price reductions for those radios kept prices down for 40-channel sets, "reducing profits and drying up money for the advertising and promotion that is needed to sustain any industry."

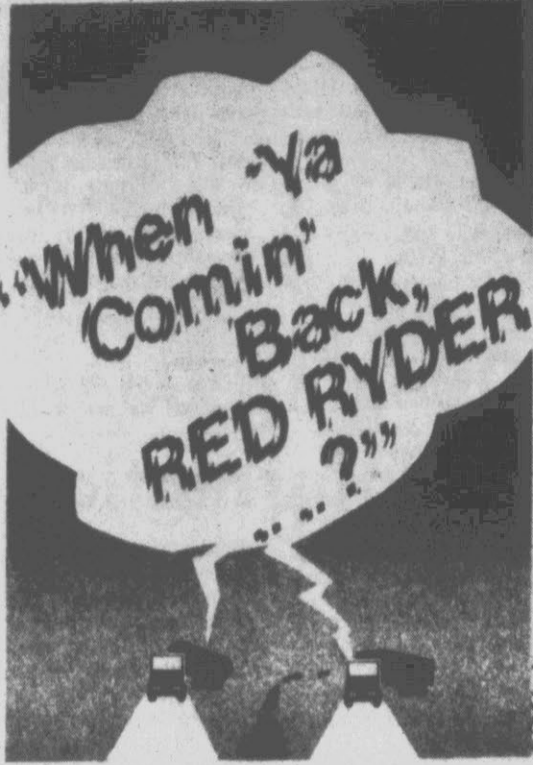

Reese and Sodolski also contend that more CBers meant more congestion. Sodolski also blamed a period of peak sun spot activity, which created additional interference. The noise just turned many operators off, they said.

McKinney and Smith have yet another explanation.
"There were two things that caused the boom," says McKinney. "The 1974 oil crisis and the reduction in the speed limit to 55 miles per hour."

"When the truckers began staging strikes and road blockades to protest the fuel shortage, America was exposed to this thing called CB that the truckers were using to organize and keep an eye out for Smokey (police)," adds Smith. "It was free publicity. But now, we've come full circle."

The decline in CB's popularity, however, does not mean it will disappear, says Sodolski.

Milk Measured By The Pounds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Everybody knows that milk is sold in stores in gallon, half-gallon or quart containers. You simply don't buy milk by the pound, like meat or potatoes.

So it may be confusing to non-farm people when government and dairy industry experts refer to the number of "pounds" of milk consumed or produced by the nation's cow herd.

The Agriculture Department is trying to end the confusion by explaining the measurements and how much milk goes into dairy products such as cheese, butter and ice cream.

A common denomination in the dairy industry is a hundredweight — 100 pounds — of milk. That is equal to slightly more than 11.6 gallons or 46.4 quarts or 92.8 pints.

Richard Webber of the USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service suggests that "a lot of families frequently have the equivalent of 100 pounds of milk in their refrigerators."

"For example, let's suppose that there's a family gathering and the chief cook has assembled three pounds of butter, a gallon of ice cream, a gallon of milk and three pounds of different cheeses," Webber said. "That alone represents more than 113 pounds of milk."

The report explained Webber's calculations this way:

—It takes 21.2 pounds of whole milk to make one pound of butter.

—A gallon of ice cream, which weighs 4.5 pounds, is made from 12 pounds of milk — 15 pounds if butter and concentrated milk are in the recipe.

—Each pound of cheese requires about 10 pounds of milk.

"The dairy industry, in transactions between farmers and buyers of milk, always deals with milk in terms of pounds rather than liquid measures because it is easier to weigh milk than to meter it," Webber said.

"Also, a large part of the nation's milk goes into manufactured dairy products that cannot be easily extracts attract coyotes strongly, and these volatile chemicals are being tested on a colony of coyotes at the university's Hopland Field Station. The goal is to isolate an attractant that is both more species-selective than present commercial lures and more effective when used with traps or other control methods.

Will Observe First Flight Anniversary

KILL DEVIL HILLS — Scott Crossfield, the first man to fly the X-15 rocket plane at two and three times the speed of sound, is one of two speakers Friday at the Wright Brothers Memorial for the anniversary of the birth of manned flight 79 years ago.

The other speaker will be Thomas H. Davis of Winston-Salem, chairman of Piedmont Aviation.

Ceremonies will begin at 9:30 a.m., a short distance from the granite boulder marking the spot where Orville Wright, on Dec. 17, 1903, became the first man to experience powered flight. The 12-second flight covered 120 feet across the sands of the Outer Banks. The event was a triumph for brothers Wilbur and Orville Wright, who had experimented in flight for two years at Kill Devil Hills before the Dec. 17 success.

The annual ceremony is sponsored by The First Flight Society of Kitty Hawk in cooperation with the National Park Service and several aviation organizations.

First Flight Society president Marc Basnight of Manteo will extend a welcome following opening remarks by state Sen. Melvin Daniels, D-Pasquotank County, and Capt. Fred Merritt, U.S. Coast Guard (Ret). Others having a part in the opening ceremonies will be Tom Hartman, superintendent of the Cape Hatteras National Seashore, and Kill Devil Hills Mayor Ben Hill.

Davis will speak briefly prior to a commemorative fly-over by military jets. The ceremony will conclude with the traditional laying of wreaths at the monument marking the site of the first flight.

Music will be provided by bands from Northeastern High School, Elizabeth City, and Manteo High School.

A luncheon will follow the ceremony at the Seafare Restaurant in Nags Head.

Persons interested in more information and luncheon reservations may call Claire Bullington at 441-7251.

Seek Allures For Coyotes

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Coyotes are a problem for ranchers in many Western states because they prey on livestock, particularly sheep. Coyote control methods have been highly controversial, and lures often are not sufficiently selective or effective for widespread use.

A cooperative project between the University of California, Davis, and the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Western Regional Research Center in Berkeley, Calif., is seeking naturally occurring chemical attractants that could be used to make coyote control methods more effective.

Their research on extracts of sheep liver was reported recently at a national meeting of the American Chemical Society in Kansas City.

A group of USDA chemists led by Roy Teranishi has found that certain sheep liver

Pay Reduced By Stock Prices

NEW YORK (AP) — The base pay of top executives in medium-size companies rose an average of 9.7 percent in 1981, keeping pace with inflation.

However, overall compensation fell, hurt by lower stock prices, according to a survey of 215 companies conducted by a management research firm.

The typical chief executive officer received $27,000 in capital accumulation last year, compared with $89,000 the previous year.

Executives in oil companies, where such stock deals are a major part of compensation, fared the worst, while those in manufacturing, where they are not, did better.

Unique Role For Students

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Students in the University of Rochester's special London Semester Program have an unusual opportunity: getting academic credit for serving three months as research and administrative assistants to Members of Parliament.

Their assignments range from handling correspondence with constituents and governmental departments to coordinating constituents' visits to Parliament.

Lone Star Layoffs Cutting Deep Into East Texas

By LAURA RICHARDSON
Associated Press Writer
LONE STAR, Texas (AP) — The great smoke stacks of Lone Star Steel's blast furnace and coke ovens stand silent and empty. Where once 4,500 union men worked, 500 are employed. There is no holiday joy.

"I'll tell you how it is. I just feel like a little child," said a man who lost his job when the plant shut down Aug. 21. "I want to crawl into mama's arms, or some loving woman's arms, and just cry, because I'm afraid I'm going to lose it all."

"I can't tell my wife that. I have to say I'm not worried," he said. "If she knew how scared I am, it would just kill her. That would be it."

sides of little punts, gray shapes on glassy water. A great white heron stands in the shallows with one leg drawn up, and a flock of wild ducks floats motionless.

Tidy stacks of rusting pipe, part of the inventory that is choking the country, cover the Lone Star storage lots. Lone Star catered to the oil industry, and now the party's over. Drilling is down by almost half, and there is no need for pipe. Company spokesman Mayo Lanagan said he didn't know when people might go back to work. Maybe next year.

This part of East Texas was never money-rich. The economy was hard-scrabble farming and bootleg whiskey before the U.S. government built the huge Lone Star plant during World War II. When the plant was turned over to private industry, people got used to high wages and a country version of the good life.

Strikes and layoffs have hit people before. But never this hard.

"I saw folks lose everything they had in the 1957 strike. That lasted a year, and my next-door neighbors just plain had to start over," said Jimmie Beth Foster, whose husband was laid off in August after 27 years at Lone Star. "But it was different then. You could go somewhere else and find work. Now, I don't know where people are going to go."

"Someone said, all these kids can go home to mama and daddy, but I can't go home because we ARE mama and daddy."

Unemployment in Morris County is 30.1 percent; it's more than 20 percent in neighboring counties. People are scraping by on $147 a week from the state, benefits that expire in mid-February.

Everybody who depended on steel or steelworkers hurts. There have been related layoffs at the trucking companies and the Texas & Northern Railroad, pay cuts at the little grocery stores and at the semiweekly newspaper, The Steel Country Bee.

Holiday business is terrible. Only whiskey has shown an increase in sales.

"Our sales generally are off, yes," said Charlie Barker, manager of Anjo Liquor. "Except in whiskey, the smaller sizes. Those are up over what they'd normally be this time of year. A lot of people are drinking to get drunk, we all know that, and it's cheaper to do it with whiskey than beer."

"It hasn't really soaked in yet," said Johnny Scott, president of Daingerfield's Chamber of Commerce and vice president of the National Bank of Daingerfield. "Morale's pretty high. Now, next month, when Santa Claus is supposed to come, I think you'll see some difference."

"Christmas? What Christmas?" snorted Tim Bazar, a millwright laid off after five years at the plant. "We bought the kids some stuff last January, and that's all they're getting. As for what I'm going to tell them, you better ask me the day after Christmas, because I don't know right now."

At Lone Star, Bazar made $12 in less than an hour. Now, he said, he's picking up $12 to $20 a day working cattle at livestock auction barns.

"I'm not worried about my family starving," said Tom Van Hoose, 44, a machinist. "I can fish, I can shoot and they eat game real well. We had a pretty good garden last year, and the freezer's full. It's the other stuff — the telephone, the house payments, the truck payment, the utilities. I don't know %0e going to make it."

Van Hoose said he and his wife bought a new house four months before he was laid off. They bought a new $10,000 pickup truck and a used tractor. They invested $5,000 in a lakefront lot.

"Based on what I was making then, we could afford it. Now, I just don't know," he said. "Our savings, what little we had, went the first month, and we haven't paid on anything this month."

He said he could not find a buyer for the lake property and expected the developer to foreclose. The bank and credit union carrying his notes on the house and vehicles have reduced the size of his payments, but he still owes $701 a month. His wife has taken a baby-sitting job, and he cuts firewood, working out in the woods from sunup to sundown for $40 a day.

"The banks are working with us every way they can, but of course they're working on borrowed money, too," Van Hoose said.

"Yes, we're restructuring the loans, and extending some of them," Scott confirmed. "We'd prefer to get partial payments of course. We surely don't want to foreclose. What would we do with 2,000 houses and 4,000 cars?"

Best Wishes

Travelers To Pay More For Hotel Telephone Call

By NORMAN BLACK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Thirty-eight years after it began the practice, the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. is about to stop paying long-distance commissions to hotels. The result, at least in the short run, is likely to be higher phone charges for travelers.

When the commissions stop Jan. 1, the nation's innkeepers will be out roughly $70 million in annual revenue that they've received on the basis of long-distance phone calls placed from their rooms.

The hotel and motel industry has known the 15-percent commissions would erid for a year now, because AT&T originally wanted to stop the practice in 1981.

As a result, Stan Rosenzweig, a telephone consultant to the Hotel and Motel Association of America, estimates roughly half of the nation's 52,000 lodging establishments have already tacked surcharges on their guests' phone bills or announced plans to do so.

When the commission money actually stops flowing next month, Rosenzweig says more establishments will follow suit, while others may elect to recover the lost money through higher room charges.

"You must understand that hotel and motel owners have never made money on their telephone service," says Rosenzweig, the president of the Inntech Management Corp. in Mount Vernon, N.Y., who has spent the last 15 months helping the hotel industry prepare for the cutoff.

"They have to spend too much money on administrative costs and checking credit and collecting payments," he said.

Without the commissions, "hotels in the short term will charge more than they have in the past," he continued. "But over the long run, most will likely be charging less."

The reason for that latter prediction, Rosenzweig says, is that hotel operators will install automated call-identification equipment.

With the proper equipment, a long-distance call can be dialed directly from a room and billed by the hotel without any involvement by an AT&T operator. Without the involvement of an operator, the hotel is not charged AT&T's operator-assisted rates for the call.

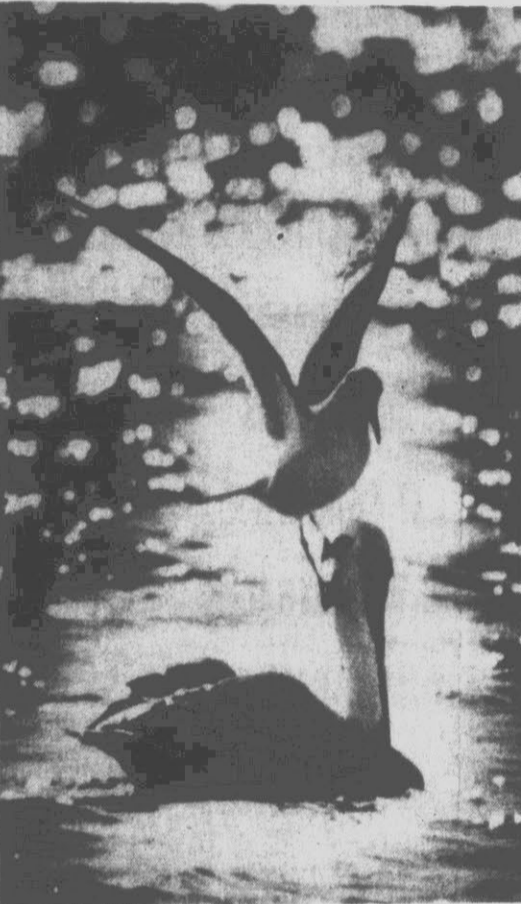

The problem starting Jan. 1, will be that fewer than 2,000 of the call-identification systems will have been installed, Rosenzweig said.

Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

Many Causes for Neck Discomfort

Sometimes when I turn my neck I hear a sharp, clicking sound. Only once in a while, especially when I am fatigued, I get a shooting pain in the neck. I had an automobile accident when I was 20. I am now 46. Could the accident possibly be responsible for this? — Mr. L.G., Ga.

Dear Mr. G.:
There is always the possibility that an injury may be responsible for your complaint. Yet there is a greater possibility that slight osteoarthritic deposits in the cervical spine of the neck may be the cause.

In an effort to track down the cause of your discomfort, X-rays of your neck and the base of the skull are most helpful.

Occasionally the cartilages that comprise the voice box in the front of the neck become calcified. Then the cartilages may override each other and be responsible for the clicking sound you hear.

Some people "cradle" a telephone between the shoulder and the neck while using their hands for other purposes and this is often responsible for episodes of pain.

I recall once quoting an eye doctor who told me that many of his patients who used bifocal glasses have a tendency to keep their heads in a distorted position. Apparently strain and tensions of the muscles of the neck may be ascribed to this. As you note, there are many strange causes of discomfort of the neck. Muscle spasms and neurological disorders, injury, arthritis, and wear and tear on the ligaments in the neck may all cause discomfort.

It takes a great deal of astute diagnostic study to pinpoint the cause of pain in the neck with or without the clicking sounds you mention.

After exacting clinical studies, X-rays are essential. Doctors probe carefully into a patient's history in an effort to relate the onset of these symptoms to an old injury that might well have been forgotten.

A great many people who have been involved in automobile accidents complain of the "whiplash" syndrome. Far too many of these victims of accidents are subtly accused of feigning a symptom to collect insurance sums.

This is distinctly unfair. For the whiplash injury is a very real and definite result of an automobile accident and one that can cause a great deal of distress long after the accident has occurred.

Before any form of treatment for neck pain can be instituted, it is obvious that an exact diagnosis must be established. Sometimes a protective collar is suggested. Overextension of the muscles of the neck must be avoided. Heavy lifting and too strenuous exercise must also be avoided.

Heat in various forms is excellent to relieve pain and to reduce muscular spasms. A great many excellent analgesics or pain-relieving drugs are now used without fear of addiction or dependency.

Only in special instances is it necessary to use traction to relieve the pain and spasm in the neck.

A great many people delay by many months seeking health. Invariably they give the same story — that they thought it would get better if left alone. Such a delay does one a great injustice. For by neglect anatomical changes occur and other complications make treatment exceedingly difficult.

A Deregulated Banking Industry Sees Big Changes

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer
The nation's bankers want YOU!

They want your money. They're willing — and now they're able — to pay high interest to get it.

What is happening in the banking business is similar to what has happened in the airline industry. It's called deregulation.

Deregulation of the airline industry was intended to increase competition. It has brought fare wars and new airlines. It has also brought less service and higher fares in areas where it is less profitable for the carriers to operate.

Deregulation of the banking business also is intended to increase competition. It has brought higher interest and new accounts. And it has also brought higher costs for borrowers and for people who don't have a lot of money to deposit.

William L. Kundert, vice president of the personal banking department of Continental Illinois Bank and Trust Co. in Chicago says deregulation "is bringing about a fundamental change in what a consumer can get at a bank."

The change has occurred largely as a result of the Depository Institutions Deregulation Act of 1980, providing a gradual end to limitations on the interest banks and savings and loan institutions can pay and the types of accounts they can offer.

The banking industry fought for deregulation, arguing that other financial institutions like brokerage houses had an unfair advantage because they operated under fewer regulations. Those other institutions were offering services like checking which traditionally had been the province of banks and savings and loan associations; they were paying higher interest and luring depositors from the banks and S&Ls.

Money-market mutual funds, which pool depositors' money and put it in high-interest investments, drew billions of dollars of consumer money — even though the accounts were not insured. By the first week in December, investments in 274 money-market funds measured by the Investment Company Institute hit a record high of $231.5 billion. That's equal to about 15 percent of the total assets of the nation's commercial banks and to more than 33 percent of the assets of savings and loan associations.

Now, the banks and S&Ls are getting some new weapons. The Depository Institutions Deregulation Committee, which oversees the deregulation law, has virtually eliminated interest ceilings on accounts of over $2,500, approving money-market accounts beginning today and SuperNOW high-interest checking accounts starting Jan. 5. And the new accounts will be insured by the government.

Bankers are enthusiastic. The U.S. League of Savings Institutions has estimated that $100 billion will be deposited in money-market accounts alone at savings and loans in the coming years; the league estimates that up to 30 percent of the total will be "new money," not previously on deposit in S&Ls.

While the new accounts will make it easier for depositors to earn more interest, however, they also could make it more expensive for borrowers. When banks have to pay more for funds, they charge more.

"It's possible," said Kundert, when asked about higher loan rates. He said that more and more of the money deposited at banks and S&Ls in recent years already has been put in investments — like certificates of deposit — that earn market-interest rates. At Continental, he said, "about 60 percent of our deposits are in one kind of market-rate instrument or another."

The old regulations also helped banks even while they hurt them; the limits on interest rates meant that banks often were paying less than they were charging. "We are no longer going to have that kind of protection," said Kundert. "We're going to have to be sharper in our pricing."

For many banks and S&Ls, being sharper in pricing has meant charging fees for services that used to be free. A growing number of institutions set minimum balances even for passbook savings accounts; no interest is paid if the balance drops below the minimum. Regular checking accounts carry monthly service fees averaging about $5 if you don't keep a fairly substantial balance and per-check charges range from 10 cents to 25 cents. Charges for things like overdrafts are up to $15 at some institutions.

Kundert predicted that money-market and SuperNOW accounts will mean the end of some other new accounts that have been introduced in recent months and years.

"Because of the regulatory restrictions we just had an incredible number of products," said Kundert. "I think we're going to see some of those products being phased out."

"In one sense it's becoming more confusing because of the rapid rate of change, (but) I think on the whole product lines ... really are becoming somewhat more rational and easier for the consumer to understand."

Free School For Jobless

CINCINNATI (AP) — Mount St. Joseph College, trying to open "new vistas" for the unemployed, says it will begin offering free courses to people who have lost their jobs in the past year.

The offer, taking effect in January, is for unemployed people who live within 75 miles of the college.

"As a public service institution, the college of Mount St. Joseph has an obligation to contribute to the quality of life in our community," said college president Sister Jean Patrice Harrington.

Applicants must be at least 18 years old and have a high school diploma, she said. They must have held a full-time job for at least three years and have lost it within the past year.

"At this time of high unemployment in our area, we hope that the free tuition program can open new vistas of learning and career opportunity for the many adults in our area who are unemployed," Sister Harrington said Monday.

Cincinnati has an unemployment rate of 13.8 percent, compared with the 10.4 percent unemployment rate nationwide.

The offer covers tuition, general fees and registration, ranging in value from $285 to $369, Sister Harrington said. Participants may take up to three credit hours free and choose from about 400 courses.

The Roman Catholic college has 900 full-time undergraduate students and 1,000 part-time students.

STUDYING ABROAD
PEKING (AP) — China plans to send 15,000 students abroad, most of them to study natural science and technology, as part of its current five-year plan, the Xinhua News Agency reports.

Campus-Corporate Ties Have Become Partnership

By LEE MITGANG
AP Education Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — You won't find them in the gossip columns, but here are some of America's hottest new couples:

Washington University and Monsanto Corp. Harvard Medical School and DuPont. Carnegie Mellon University and Westinghouse. Cornell University and Exxon.

In the past year, business and higher education have wooed and won each other as never before — as partners in research probing into lucrative, occasionally controversial new fields such as industrial robots and genetic engineering.

Scores of universities have entered into research contracts with big business, in partnerships that both sides believe will help America regain pre-eminence in world markets such as automobiles and electronics.

Industry support of campus research, less than $100 million in 1975, is over $200 million this year, and is predicted to climb to $600 million a year during the 1980s, says Edward E. David, Jr., president of the Exxon Research and Engineering Co.

But the growing ties between campus and corporation have also raised ethical and legal questions — serious enough to have caught the attention of Congress.

Hoping to stave off federal regulation, several hundred industry and campus officials will confer Wednesday and Thursday in Philadelphia under the banner, "Partners in the Research Enterprise."

"We want to establish broad guidelines for campus research before Congress gets in and sets ground rules arbitrarily," says Dr. William H. Danforth, chancellor of Washington University in St. Louis, and one of 16 university and industry leaders hosting the gathering.

Industry-funded research centers are springing up at Princeton University, Carnegie-Mellon, Stanford University and elsewhere. For business, it means a valuable source of brainpower. For cash-strapped universities, it means millions of dollars, new facilities, and a way to keep top faculty in the thick of developments in their fields.

One typical deal: Washington University signed a $23.5 million contract with Monsanto in June for medical research. The university would hold any patents and receive royalties from its discoveries, but Monsanto would have exclusive license to market and produce any products.

A panel of Monsanto and university scientists would decide what research projects to fund. Researchers could publish their findings, but only after Monsanto reviewed them.

The economic stakes are high for both business and campus. The more successful campus research complexes have supercharged the economies of whole regions: the microelectronics center at Stanford, for example, was the wellspring for "Silicon Valley," the area south of San Francisco which has become the computer capital of America.

One of Congress's leading skeptics about industry-campus ties, Rep. Albert Gore, D-Tenn., is scheduled to address the Philadelphia conference.

Gore, chairman of the House Science Investigations subcommittee, held hearings last summer on industry-funded campus research. Jim Jensen, a member of the committee staff, said in an interview that one concern was the possibility that some campus research agreements may violate patent law.

Another issue, he said, was raised by a 1981 agreement in which a German drug firm, Hoechst AG, gave $50 million to Massachusetts General Hospital, which has ties to Harvard University, to do genetic research. "Biomedical research at Mass General and elsewhere has been largely funded by the federal government. The question is, why should a foreign firm skim the cream of this investment?" Jensen said.

Congressional worries aside, there is lingering uneasiness over the growing ties between campus and corporation that goes to the heart of what each is all about.

University of Chicago President Hanna Gray has expressed deep misgivings about business ties for her school: "One ought to bend over backward not to allow things to happen, which, however well protected and well intentioned they may appear to be, nonetheless could lead away from some of the essential things universities have to guarantee."

Outside groups, particularly legal aid and environmental organizations, have occasionally protested industry-campus research ties — especially when that research involves fields like genetics or farm pesticides which could affect working conditions or the environment.

Although Cornell University President Frank Rhodes said the Philadelphia meeting was designed to be "very much in the open," no such outside groups were invited to speak.

"That's part of the problem. Very important elements of society are excluded from these meetings," said Albert Saldamando, executive director of California Rural Legal Assistance, a San Francisco-based group which has questioned the close ties between the University of California system and agribusiness.

Last March, the public was excluded from a three-day meeting of about 50 university and business leaders at the luxurious Pajaro Dunes resort in Watsonville, Calif., at which the problem of conflict of interest was discussed.

Zoos Bulging With Animals

By DICK ULMER
Omaha World-Herald
OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Lions and tigers and bears, oh my! Lions and tigers and bears!

Zoo directors around the world soon might want to adopt the worried chant of Dorothy in "The Wizard of Oz." Zoos have become so successful at breeding and feeding exotic animals that keepers say they're running out of room for all of them.

The Detroit Zoo recently announced plans to reduce its animal population by 20 percent because of overcrowding. A New York zoo director proposed slaughtering some excess animals, then feeding the carcasses to tigers and lions.

Lee Simmons, director of Omaha's Henry Doorly Zoo, says he houses an overabundance of at least three kinds of animals and would like to dispose of four or five of each:

- 21 scimitar-horned oryxes, of the antelope family.
- 21 Lady Gray's waterbucks, also antelope-type creatures.
- 17 ring-tailed lemurs, monkeys.

Simmons says many of the extra animals could be sold or traded to other zoos, ranches or private owners. "The animals that potentially will cause the most grief are the large carnivores — the bears and the cats."

Lions and tigers and bears require big quarters, have voracious appetites and live a long time, Simmons says. They can't be turned out in a farmer's pasture to eat grass like some of the hoofed stock.

"Right now, it's getting difficult to give a tiger away, much less sell one," he says. In a few years, zoo directors must take a cue from Midwest beef ranchers and "cull their herds," eliminating some of the "senile old bulls" that carry bad genes to make room for younger breeding stock, Simmons says.

Exotic animals are prospering in zoos for several reasons, including medical care. "We have made heroic efforts to save some animals," Simmons says. "In some cases we should quietly have let nature take its course."

Another factor is breeding. Simmons says zookeepers have learned to encourage animals to mate by using tricks to simulate their natural environment. Fake rainstorms put some tropical birds in the mood for love.

Simmons says he probably will list his surplus animals in a newsletter that goes to many of the world's zoos and game preserves.

Sales or swaps can often be worked out. For example, last year the zoo sent six oryxes to an Ohio game preserve, setting a price of $3,500 a pair.

Simmons says the Omaha zoo got some small animals and a trade credit in return. The credit will be used to acquire birds for the zoo's new aviary, he says.

Fertilizer Trade Continue Low

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tight economic conditions continue to affect the nation's fertilizer trade, with production running nearly a fourth below year-ago levels, according to industry reports.

Edwin M. Wheeler, president of The Fertilizer Institute, said total fertilizer production in October was down 23 percent from a year earlier. For the first four months of the marketing year which began July 1, output was down 22 percent.

Among the three groups of materials — nitrogen, phosphate and potash — only phosphate showed an increase in domestic movement or "disappearance" during the July-October period, Wheeler said.

Phosphate increased 4 percent from a year earlier, while nitrogen products dropped 26 percent and potash, 18 percent, he said.

Concern On Effects Of Predicting

By ROBERT LOCKE
AP Science Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — As scientists get better at predicting volcanic eruptions, they're finding themselves drawn into decidedly unscientific public debate over the commotion their warnings can cause.

"The status of predicting eruptions has reached a stage in which it's both very exciting scientifically, but also a source of great responsibility for the scientist in terms of communicating his work to the general public," said seismologist Steve Malone of the University of Washington.

Malone, who helped predict activity at Mount St. Helens in Washington, said technical statements, especially when filtered through the media, often appear either unduly alarmist or dangerously understated.

"Walking that fine line in the middle is becoming something of an art," he said in introducing a volcanic hazards discussion at an American Geophysical Union Conference here Saturday.

Many volcanologists got a rough-and-tumble introduction into media relations when swarms of reporters swept into Vancouver, Wash., after Mount St. Helens' catastrophic eruption in May 1980. Those relations were not always smooth.

"The more difficult things are when science begins to interface with society — that always complicates the problem," said Robert Decker of the U.S. Geological Survey's Hawaiian Volcano Observatory.

But he and other volcanologists urged their colleagues to make the effort, despite occasional distortions.

"Openness is certainly not the easiest solution, but I think we can say from our experience at Mount St. Helens that it does pay off ... because then we are dealing with an educated public," said Chris Newhall of the USGS Cascades Volcano Observatory at Vancouver.

"Even though there are moments when we hate it, I think it's important to have that openness," he said.

The basic quandary seems to be one that for years has faced geologists just learning the art of predicting earthquakes: their work has great potential impact, both good and bad, on the public. But predictions have no value if they are not made promptly and publicly.

The problem emerged last May, when the USGS issued an official "notice of potential volcanic hazard" for the region around the resort town of Mammoth Lakes in California's High Sierra.

Local officials and business leaders bitterly criticized both the volcanologists and the media, saying they exaggerated the risk and scared visitors away from a region that depends heavily on tourism.

Public meetings in August seemed to resolve the problem, and now the frequency of tremors that may indicate volcanic activity seems to be tapering off.

Decker said one possible physical solution could present scientists with "a whole Pandora's box of judicial problems."

Rearranging terrain could divert lava flows into less critical areas, he said, but, "Once you start interfering with acts of God, they are no longer acts of God and you're going to be sued by everybody in sight."

U.S. Indignant Over Killings

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States has expressed indignation over the killings of at least 15 prominent citizens of the South American nation of Surinam while they were in government custody.

Alan Romberg, the State Department's deputy spokesman, says there are unconfirmed reports that as many as 30 opponents of Surinam's military regime were shot recently.

He noted that Secretary of State George P. Shultz has "expressed his horror" over the slayings.

Has A Passion For Croakers

CHICAGO (AP) — Joel Reznick loves frogs. A gold frog pendant dangles from his neck. His car has "RIBET" license plates. Frogs squat all over his suburban home.

None of the 600 pet amphibians is alive, however.

"I've got friends who send me all kinds of frogs — marble ones, plastic ones, wooden ones, metal ones. I just love them," said Reznick, a collector from Mount Prospect, Ill., who was at the National Collectibles Exposition here Sunday.

The exposition displayed everything from Sleeping Beauty bedroom slippers and a Betty Boop watch to a complete set of official programs for the 1948 Chicago Cubs' baseball season.

Reznick said his passion for croakers started 13 years ago when an aunt gave him a paisley frog bank.

Human Cadavers Dissected In High School Class

AGOURA, Calif. (AP) — Human cadavers are "the ultimate in study aids" in an Agoura High School anatomy class where human corpses are dissected along with the remains of cats and frogs.

Tom Carmichael, now a college freshman, said his biology courses at the University of California-Los Angeles are a breeze because he was able to study the cadavers in high school.

"It helped so immensely that I'm just coasting through my biology courses," Carmichael said recently.

Many medical students don't get to work on cadavers until their second year of training.

Tough prerequisites help ensure that only serious students enroll in his physiology and anatomy class, Jerry Lasnik said. He puts a group of juniors and seniors through about six weeks of lectures, reading and lab work before he introduces the cadaver.

Nobody is forced to work on the cadaver to pass the course, and students who take the class out of morbid curiosity "will flunk out before they get a peek," Lasnik said. But students not taking the class are just as curious.

"They're always asking us about it," said Tom Offerman, one of Lasnik's students. "But as soon as they find out it's studying, they don't want to take it. I always scare them away with the amount of homework I have."

Lasnik covers the faces of the cadavers when he first presents them to the class, making them seem less human.

Removing the cover later in the course also helped students get over their apprehension, said Carmichael.

"Edgar Allen Poe said the eyes are the window to the soul. Once we could see the eyes of this corpse, this cadaver, I could see there was no spark, no life," Carmichael said. "I could equate it with working on the cats, frogs or whatever."

Carmichael said he wasn't uneasy about dissecting the corpses until helping Lasnik remove the brain.

"I realized that what I was holding in my hands was the sum total of emotions, experiences, suffering that this person had gone through," he said. "I was thinking that this four pounds of matter is essentially what this man was."

"It was the ultimate in study aids," said Carmichael. Lasnik has equipped his classroom with items donated by the community. But locating a cadaver was something else.

"Everyone told me, 'For a high school? Forget it!'" Lasnik said. But finally he got a cadaver after contacting John Sykes, a curator at the University of California-San Diego medical school.

"As long as the class is conducted properly — if the purpose is to learn the structure of the human body — then I'm all for it," Sykes said. Calling Lasnik a "true professional," Sykes said he had no doubt about the Agoura program and agreed to supply cadavers, which cost about $125 each.

The first time he uses the cadaver, Lasnik generally wheels it out unexpectedly in the middle of a lab session.

"OK, gang, take a few minutes off. We're going to bring out the cadaver," Lasnik told students recently when the time came for a presentation.

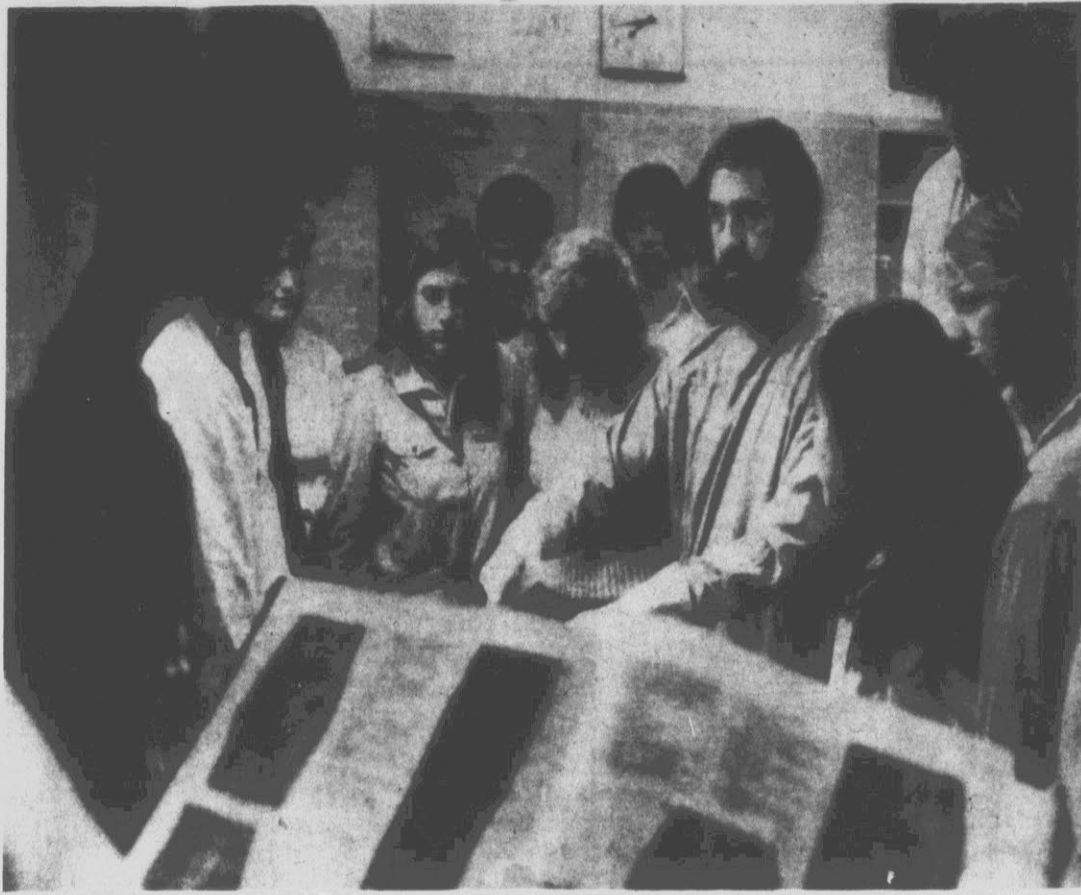

There was silence as they gathered about the black plastic body bag wheeled into the classroom on a cot that Lasnik scrounged from a mortuary.

While Lasnik unzipped the body bag and exposed the corpse, he told the students a little about it including age and cause of death.

Expressions on the students' faces ranged from blank stares to distaste. Lasnik fielded a few questions before wheeling the body out of the classroom.

Then the students slowly returned to work on the dead cats they had been dissecting.

"It's created a tremendous enthusiasm among the kids," said Robert Ross, principal at Agoura High School, which is about 30 miles northwest of Los Angeles. "The achievement levels are higher than before."

REALISTIC APPROACH — Agoura, Calif. High School instructor Jerry Lasnik speaks to his students during a lab experiment involving a cadaver. Lasnik believes in using a realistic approach in teaching anatomy and physiology. (AP Laserphoto)

Accelerating Abuse Probes

WASHINGTON (AP) — With rising joblessness placing financial stress on the unemployment insurance compensation trust fund, the Labor Department is accelerating investigations of abuse of the $20 billion-a-year program.

In a report to Congress, the department says the program has been subjected to minimal auditing in the past; but the report said that in the last six months of fiscal 1982, monitoring of payments made under the program was stepped up.

Several states have had to borrow money from the federal government to assure continuing payment of benefits to the jobless under the basic 26-week jobless benefit program, which is administered and financed by the states.

Export Of U.S. Table Wine

WASHINGTON (AP) — The value of U.S. exports of table wines is up sharply this year, says the Agriculture Department.

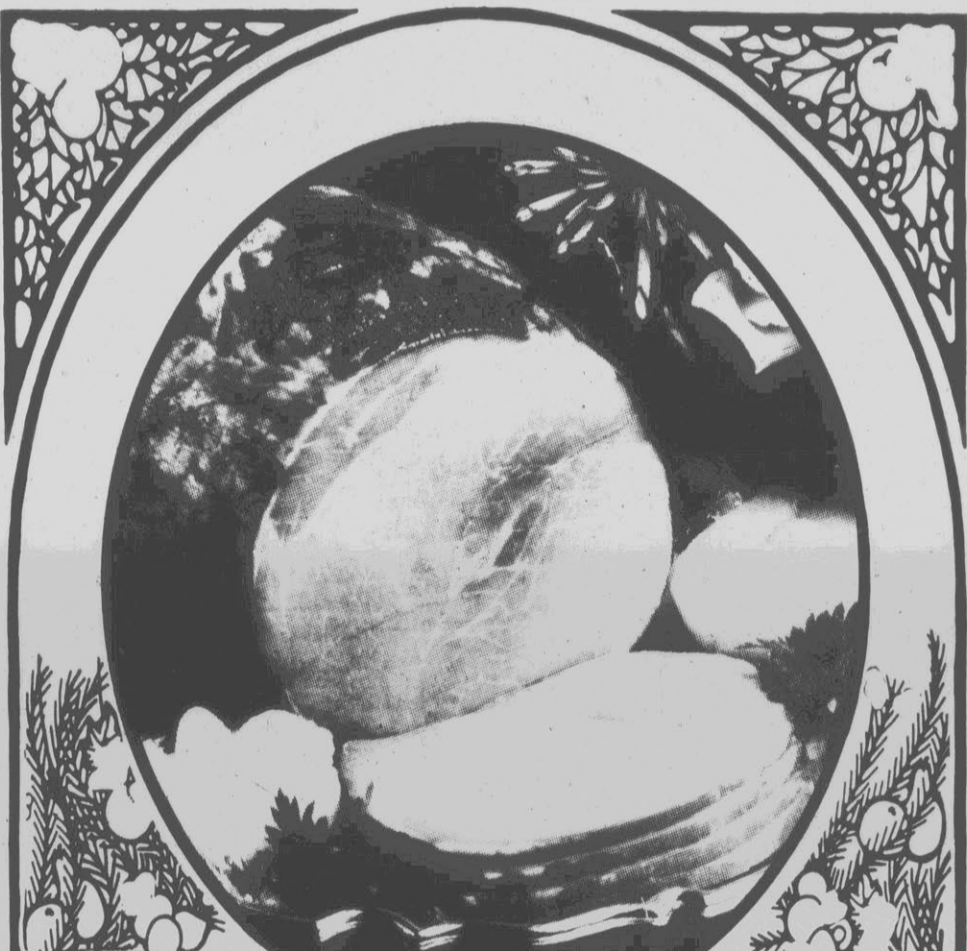

In the first nine months, wine shipments were valued at $24.5 million, up one-third from the same period in calendar 1981, says the USDA's Foreign Agricultural Service.

Table wines were defined as "still wines containing not over 14 percent alcohol." Shipments of table wine to the European Community nearly doubled from the previous year to $9.1 million, the report said. Two-thirds of the shipments went to the United Kingdom.

However, exports of other kinds of wine declined to only $5.2 million during January-September from $13.1 million a year earlier, the report said.

U.S. Hopes Jungle Role An Example

By TRACY WILKINSON
PUERTO OCUPA, Peru
(UPI) — Puerto Ocupa is only 190 miles from Peru's capital, but cannot be reached by road, has no electricity and its 600 Ameusha Indian inhabitants live on oranges and the roots of the yucca plant.

It is also part of a development project that U.S. officials hope will serve as the model for settling Peru's vast, mountainous jungle.

Peruvian President Fernando Belaunde Terry calls it his nation's "hope for the future."

The U.S. government is spending $22 million in the 195,000-hectare Palcazu Valley in central Peru to develop crops, pasture and even a wildlife sanctuary.

The Peruvian government is providing matching funds for Palcazu and six other projects in the same central jungle zone.

Officials from the U.S. Agency for International Development plan to introduce farming techniques to prevent erosion, a principal cause of jungle flooding that claims dozens of Peruvian lives annually.

"We are putting a lot of hope on this project," Belaunde said during a recent visit to Puerto Ocupa, south of the Palcazu Valley, as 300 barefoot children ran to greet him with flowers.

Thatched-roof huts and a church-school run by a dozen nuns spread out from the shores of the Perene River, scattered among orange, banana and mango trees.

The Peruvian government is building a north-south highway through the central jungle designed as the backbone of development in the area.

But critics of past jungle development projects say the government has displaced Indian tribes, misjudged how land should be used and ruined ecological balances.

"We've seen a track record that leaves us very worried," says Carlos Mora of the Amazonic Investigation and Promotion Center, a scientific and social study group.

Mora said the government regularly over-estimated a jungle's economic potential, allowing "spontaneous and uncontrolled" colonization and deforestation.

He says these mistakes were made early in the Palcazu development plan, but he hopes goals will be revised with newer studies.

AID officials say they hope the Palcazu project will show how to avoid past errors.

"Without this project, the area would turn into a disaster," AID Administrator Peter McPherson said during a recent trip to Peru.

AID says the Ameusha Indians in the valley will be given land titles and all development will be carefully mapped out and controlled.

Bill Sugrue, head of AID's regional development office in Peru, said the project is risky but, if it works, it "will be a model for development for the entire high jungle area."

He said AID convinced the Peruvian government that the area should be developed slowly, maintaining the ecological balance.

Half the Palcazu land will be left untouched to protect against erosion, about 15 percent will be turned into pasture for livestock, and only 8 percent will actually support crops.

Advise Higher Drinking Age

WASHINGTON (AP) — State laws should be changed to raise the legal drinking age to 21 to combat drunken driving and highway deaths, a presidential commission has recommended.

President Reagan, presented a copy of the commission's interim report, has promised to give it careful consideration.

A reduction in the drinking age to 18 in several states in the 1970s was accompanied by an increase in the number of alcohol-related traffic deaths. Since 1976, 14 states have raised their drinking age again.

Home Loan Delinquents Said Rising

By ROBERT FURLOW
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A record number of American homeowners — about 167,000 individuals and families — were facing foreclosure proceedings as the recession continued in the third quarter of this year, a lenders group says.

On the other hand, the group also reported on Sunday that the percentage of people who were late on their mortgage payments declined in the quarter.

Mark J. Riedy, executive vice president of the Mortgage Bankers Association of America, called the drop in payment delinquencies "welcome news in view of the continued worsening employment situation across the country."

He said delinquency rates usually rise when the unemployment rate rises as it did in the third quarter. The jobs rate, estimated at 9.5 percent in June, rose to 9.8 percent in July, held steady in August, then increased to 10.1 percent in September, according to government figures.

"My feeling is that there has been a shake-out of people who are going to be delinquent," Riedy said in the MBA report. "In other words, the most vulnerable borrowers have been recorded in the past as delinquencies and are now somewhere in the foreclosure process."

He noted new foreclosure proceedings were begun on 0.22 percent of home loans in the third quarter, up from 0.2 percent in the second.

"If unemployment continues to rise, or if unemployment benefit programs are exhausted, we may yet see delinquencies rise again early in 1983," he said.

Loans with payments 30 days or more past due declined to 5.48 percent in the third quarter from 5.56 percent in the second, the report said.

It said loans in the foreclosure process rose from 0.58 percent in the second quarter to 0.62 percent in the third. That translates into about 167,400 of the 27 million home loans outstanding nationwide.

The fact that such proceedings have begun does not necessarily mean actual foreclosure will occur, with a lender taking position of a home.

"Lower interest rates have helped and will help homeowners in distress by taking the pressure off those who are forced to sell," Riedy said.

The report said its figures were based on a survey of more than 8 million home loans on residential properties with one to four units. The loans were being serviced by mortgage bankers, commercial banks, savings banks, savings and loan associations and life insurance companies, it said.

Computer Using Valley Girl Talk

MONMOUTH, Ore. (AP) — Gash me with a ginsu, pitch me with a fork — a college computer has learned Valley Girl talk.

Diana Miller, a student at Western Oregon State College, spiced up a math instruction program for her daughter with the latest slang from California's San Fernando Valley.

The mother wrote the program on the college computer and her 5th-grade daughter uses it on a microcomputer at her grade school.

When the girl provides the right answer, the computer responds variously:

"You are truly Ex."
"Max. You amaze me."
"Jumplin' jelly beans, you did it."

When she muffs a problem, the computer replies:
"Gash me with a ginsu."
"Keep dreamin'."
"Pitch me with a fork."
A ginsu is a type of knife.

THE FINAL TOLL
CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — The final toll is 55 dead and 15 injured in the collapse of a five-story house in a southern suburb of Cairo on Dec. 3, police officials say.
