Nearing A Vote On Filibuster

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate is nearing a vote on a filibuster that has stalled action on two important measures — the gas tax bill and the emergency spending resolution needed to keep money flowing to the federal government after midnight Friday.

After two successive post-midnight sessions, Senate Republican leaders scheduled a vote today on shutting off a filibuster. The chamber also plans to take up amendments to the nickel-a-gallon gasoline tax hike, which is aimed at raising $5.5 billion to finance highway and bridge and mass transit repair jobs.

Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., predicted today that even after the vote to choke off the filibuster, there will be "several hours of proceedings" before a final vote, involving action on what a Senate aide said were at least 100 amendments.

Final action on the measure would break a logjam in the Senate and allow consideration of the stopgap spending bill.

But even if Congress meets the Friday midnight deadline, President Reagan may veto the so-called continuing resolution. Reagan opposes jobs plans contained in the House-passed version of the measure, and in the Senate Appropriations Committee version.

The proposed boost in the gasoline tax, which has tied up Senate activity all week, also creates public works jobs, but Reagan has endorsed it.

In drafting the stopgap measure Wednesday, the Senate Appropriations Committee approved a $1.2 billion jobs plan, compared to a $5.4 billion Democratic package in the House-passed measure. In addition, the panel rejected a $9.100 Christmas pay raise for members of Congress that the House endorsed.

The committee's action also knocked out a 27 percent pay increase that would have gone into effect Friday if Congress had taken no action. The panel did this by reinstating the cap on congressional salaries at the existing $60,662.50 a year.

By doing nothing, Congress could have let the existing cap on salaries expire Friday and thus triggered automatic increases of as much as 27 percent for members of Congress and senior executive-branch officials.

The pay raise provision — already approved by the House — would boost salaries for members of the House and Senate from an annual $60,662.50 to $69,800. There would be raises for other top-level government officials, including the vice president, Cabinet officers and top-level civil servants, as well.

But Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, said an informal head count showed the pay proposal was doomed in the full Senate. He proposed instead a compromise under which House members would receive the $9,100 pay raise but senators would receive none — meaning different salaries for House and Senate members.

Stevens and he and other legislators said it was likely that House-Senate negotiators would go along with his proposal in their final version of the bill.

Although the Senate bill scaled down the House-passed jobs package, Sen. Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., the Appropriations Committee chairman, conceded, "The president does not support this."

No Announcement, But Lech Walesa Detained

BY JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer
Garlanded with pine boughs and twinkling with Christmas lights, the newly restored Fleming House was unveiled to Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce members this morning in a dedication ceremony. Despite the rain, approximately 200 members attended the ceremonial opening of the chamber's new home at 302 S. Greene St. Special guests for the dedication service included James and Ellen Fleming, Louise Fleming and Jean Winstead, all descendants of Sen. James Fleming, builder of the Victorian-style home. The house was built in 1901 and restoration took place from February until November this year. Speakers for the dedication ceremony included Bob Griffin, immediate past chairman of the Board of the chamber; Tommy Edwards, past chairman of the board and chairman of the Restoration Committee; Charles Gaskins, chairman of the Pitt County Commissioners, and Ed Walker, president of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce.

Greenville Mayor Percy Cox, speaking from the porch of the Fleming Home, said, "This building does not only benefit Greenville but also Pitt County and all of eastern North Carolina."

State Rep. Ed Warren commended all those involved in the restoration, saying, "This is an example of volunteerism at its best. It is true example of what we can do in the community."

Rep. Sam Bundy said the three elements needed for this restoration project were foresight, courage and money. He said that the new site of the chamber is an honor to Sen. Fleming, who worked for the establishment of East Carolina Teacher's College and a chamber of commerce in Greenville.

In a dedication speech, Larkin Little, the chamber's current board chairman, thanked the corporations who contributed funds for the restoration of the rooms of the house. A watercolor depicting the Fleming Home by Greenville artist Bob Pittman was presented to each donor.

A ribbon stretching across the front porch was cut by Little, Cox, Gaskins, Bundy and Warren, officially opening the Fleming House as the new home of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce.

The house will be open until 7 p.m. tonight for viewing by the general public.

GDANSK, Poland (AP) — Men in street clothes detained Lech Walesa today, driving him from his home in a black sedan hours before the labor leader was to deliver his first public address in more than a year of martial law.

Reporters at the scene assumed the four men in the car with Walesa were security agents, but it was not known where he was taken. Several hours later, the government had made no official announcement that the former head of the outlawed Solidarity labor union was detained.

Walesa was led from his apartment and driven away in a black Mercedes escorted by another Mercedes. Both cars, which bore Warsaw license plates, appeared to be government vehicles.

An Associated Press reporter and photographer tried to follow the cars in their own vehicle, but were overtaken by a police car, stopped and questioned for 2½ hours. At least six other Western correspondents and more than a dozen of their Polish assistants and photographers were detained and questioned after they approached Walesa's apartment about a half-hour later.

Walesa, who was released in mid-November from 11 months' martial law imprisonment, had said he would speak today during a memorial service for Poles slain in anti-government demonstrations in 1970 and 1981.

Walesa refused to appear before a Gdansk prosecutor Wednesday. At the time, sources had predicted he might be detained for 24 hours.

Gdansk, a traditional hotbed of labor unrest, appeared calm and there were no reports of demonstrations immediately after Walesa was detained.

The government had reinforced its Gdansk security forces on Wednesday in a show of force reminiscent of the first days of martial law — imposed Dec. 13, 1981, after 16 months of Solidarity-inspired strikes.

Thousands of uniformed police patrolled the city today.

SUBSCRIPTION SCAM

Anyone who remembers being approached within the last six months by telephone about extending a subscription to Sports Illustrated Magazine is encouraged to check his or her credit card records and see whether there's billing for it.

The supposed extension is part of a fraudulent credit card bill scam, N.C. Attorney General Rufus Edmisten says. Time Inc., publisher of the nationally distributed magazine, denies any affiliation with the firms that were soliciting subscription extensions by telephone in "a complex, well-organized scheme of double, even triple, billings" on Visa and MasterCard accounts.

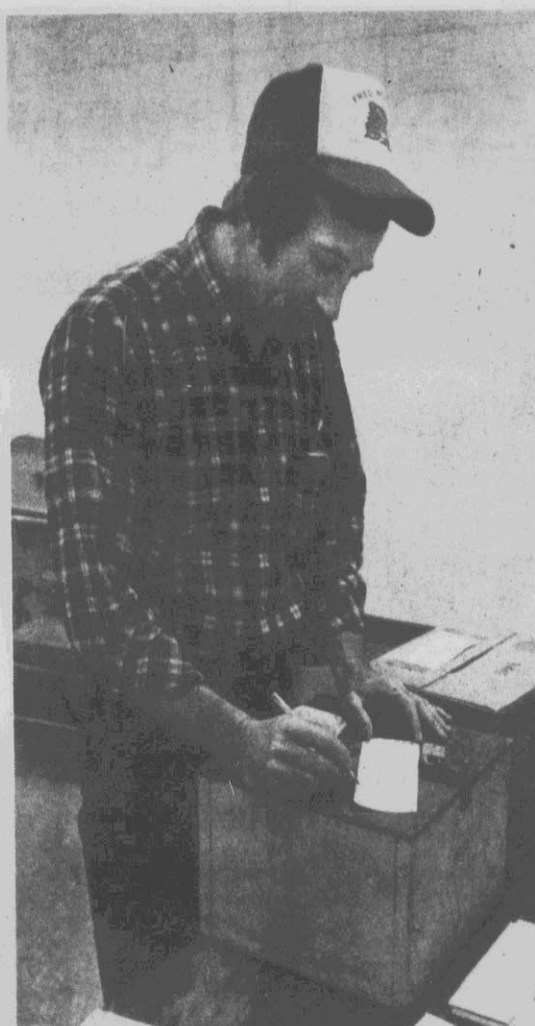

Telephone solicitors used a subscription list for Sports Illustrated, targeted those subscriptions with six or more months remaining, and offered three-year extensions plus a free subscription to another magazine.

The false charging scheme surfaced recently when cardholders reported double or triple billings on one or more monthly credit card statements. While duplicated billings were corrected by the card issuers, neither the banks nor their customers had any way of knowing that all subscription offers by these companies were bogus.

"When people began complaining to us, it soon became evident there was a pattern of fraudulent billing," Edmisten said about an investigation which disclosed that the multiple charges for subscriptions were made by various parties in several states who falsely implied that they represented Sports Illustrated.

On Nov. 10 a Tennessee court issued a permanent injunction and settlement judgment against J&B Associates, S&W Associates and 21st Century Advertising — all of Memphis. Included

Gunman Robs Bank in Grifton

GRIFTON — A gunman walked into the First Citizens Bank and Trust Co. office here late Wednesday afternoon, ordered a bag filled with cash, and walked out with between $5,000 and $10,000, investigators said.

The 4:30 p.m. holdup was conducted by a man armed with a "long barreled weapon," either a rifle or shotgun, Pitt County Sheriff Ralph Tyson said.

The sheriff said the robber ordered several employees to lie on the floor after announcing he was holding up the bank. He then had cash from three teller stations placed in a bag, and walked out.

The robber was last seen headed north, away from the West Queen Street bank.

Tyson described the robber as a black man between 25 and 35 years old, and weighing between 160 and 180 pounds.

Cooperating in the investigation of the holdup are the Grifton Police Department, the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the State Bureau of Investigation and the Sheriff's Department.

Author Wants To Inspire

By DOLORES BARCLAY
Associated Press Writer
WESTPORT, Conn. (AP) — The air was peppered with calorie laden aromas. The woodiness of grilled eggplant collided with the husky fragrance of roasted oysters and drifted away in a smoky swirl filled with the essences of charcoaled leeks, scallions and mushrooms.

Martha Stewart was entertaining. This particular spread was to celebrate publication of her new book, "Entertaining," which details recipes and hints for cocktail parties, wedding feasts and holiday feasts.

Mrs. Stewart entertains a lot. And as head of her own catering firm, she cooks a lot. With passion.

"I do everything with passion," she said in the sitting room of her renovated 19th century house. "I am an artist, and whatever way I can do art, I do. My book is a record. Food is so ephemeral. You make it, it's gorgeous and you eat it."

"What I really want to do is really inspire people," she said. "I don't care if they follow my recipes to a tee—I just want to give them ideas."

She swept from the room to busy herself in another kitchen on the same floor, her cowboy boots clunking over creaking plank floors.

Copper pots dangled over a work counter where Mrs. Stewart's mother, Martha Kostyra, steamed cabbage pigoris. Baskets of every size wove a wicker ceiling over a low kitchen table where a glass bowl of fresh spinach glistened with salad dressing.

An iron wood-burning stove stood cold with assorted tin molds clustered on its flat top, but flames flickered in the brick fireplace nearby and Mrs. Stewart stoked a smaller blaze in the beehive oven in the brick wall, where she was to cook tiny pizzas.

"Martha's biggest claim to fame as a cook when she was young was when she brought the entire football team home for breakfast," her mother said. "There was burned bacon and the pans were really a mess."

The 41-year-old Mrs. Stewart worked her way through high school in Nutley, N.J., and later Barnard College as a model. She majored in art and art history, then became a stockbroker when she graduated.

"And that I did with a passion too," she said, beaming. "Seven years ago, I retired here to restore the house and I fell into the food business...."

"Julia Child was the greatest influence on my cooking," Mrs. Stewart said. "That was my cooking school and my inspiration."

Out back, in her new studio, about 40 guests were milling around counters laden with desserts in the new two-story building, un-mindful of Ruth Leserman, a friend and restaurant consultant from San Francisco who was cooking risotto with saffron and six kinds of wild mushrooms.

The guests, who came from as far away as Paris and California to help Mrs. Stewart launch her book, fairly attacked the pear tarts and the dark chocolate two-tiered old-fashioned devil's food cake.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I overheard an interesting conversation between two airline stewardesses the other day.

"So, how did you find out he was married?" asked the first one.

"Look," she said, "when a guy uses a phone booth to change clothes instead of going home, you've got to figure he's either Superman or he's married."

"And?"

"He was no Superman," she said dryly. With the entire world planning a divorce, getting over one, living with someone or having a trial separation, I figured it must take a real pro to figure out who's a matched set and who is open stock.

I couldn't help butting in. "Don't tell me you can't tell when a guy is married. There are a lot of ways."

"Name one," they said.

"Okay, when you go out to a romantic dinner by candlelight and he clears the plates and starts to take out the garbage, he's married."

"Not necessarily," said one. "Sometimes old habits are hard to break."

"All right, if he drives a car with 120,000 miles on it and a coloring book replacing a broken window and a car seat in the back, no doubt about it, he's married."

"Sometimes," said the other stewardess, "that's all he got from the divorce."

"What if he brings his lunch to work and carries his coffee in a Donny Osmond thermos? If that isn't married, I don't know what is."

"Have you seen what you get with a one-room furnished apartment lately?"

"I wasn't ready to give up. How about a ring finger, that's tan except for a white band around it?"

"Some stop wearing their rings after the divorce."

"Wouldn't you get just a little suspicious if you saw him on the society page with a woman clinging to his arm with the same last name?"

The stewardess shrugged as she poured a cup of coffee. "Could be his sister-in-law."

"Look," I said. "Suppose you met this terrific guy on the plane and you made arrangements to meet him for a drink that evening and you asked him to bring a friend for your roommate... and he brought his wife."

They both looked at me. "Now THAT'S Married!"

Dear Abby

If Santa Doesn't Exist, World's In Trouble

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Many years ago when your column appeared in the now defunct New York Mirror, a 6-year-old girl named Virginia wrote to you, saying that her friends told her there was no Santa Claus.

Your oft-quoted response was beautiful. Will you please run it again?

E.G.J., DOVER, DEL.

DEAR E.G.J.: To set the record straight, the child was 8, not 6, and the column did not appear in the now defunct New York Mirror — it appeared in the now defunct New York Sun. The letter was not addressed to me, it was addressed to the editor. And the beautiful response was written by Francis P. Church in 1897!

It is a famous, well-loved classic, but has never appeared in my column. And here it is:

"Dear Editor:
"I am 8 years old.
"Some of my little friends say there is no Santa Claus.
"Papa says, 'If you see it in The Sun, it's so.'
"Please tell me the truth. Is there a Santa Claus?
— Virginia O'Hanlon, 115 West 95th Street"

"Dear Virginia: Your little friends are wrong. They have been affected by the skepticism of a skeptical age. They do not believe except what they see. They think that nothing can be which is not comprehensible by their little minds. All minds, Virginia, whether they be men's or children's, are little.

"In this great universe of our man is a mere insect, an ant, in his intellect, as compared with the boundless world about him, as measured by the intelligence capable of grasping the whole of truth and knowledge.

"Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus. He exists as certainly as love and generosity and devotion exist, and you know that they abound and give to your life its highest beauty and joy. Alas! How dreary would be the world if there were no Santa Claus! It would be as dreary as if there were no Virginias.

"There would be no childlike faith then, no poetry, no romance to make tolerable this existence. We should have no enjoyment, except in sense and sight. The eternal light with which childhood fills the world would be extinguished.

"Not believe in fairies! You might as well not believe in fairies! You might get your papa to hire men to watch in all the chimneys on Christmas Eve to catch Santa Claus, but even if they did not see Santa Claus coming down, what would that prove? Nobody sees Santa Claus, but that is no sign that there is no Santa Claus.

"The most real things in the world are those that neither children nor men can see. Did you ever see fairies dancing on the lawn? Of course not, but that's no proof that they are not there. Nobody can conceive or imagine all the wonders there are unseen and unseeable in the world.

"You tear apart the baby's rattle and see what makes the noise inside, but there is a veil covering the unseen world which not the strongest man, nor even the united strength of all the strongest men that ever lived, could tear apart.

"Only faith, fancy, poetry, love, romance, can push aside that curtain and view and picture the supernal beauty and glory beyond. Is it all real? Ah, Virginia, in all this world there is nothing else real and abiding.

"No Santa Claus! Thank God he lives, and he lives forever. A thousand years from now, Virginia, nay, 10 times 10,000 years from now, he will continue to make glad the heart of childhood."

DEAR ABBY: I'm nearly 30 and want to get married. I met Junior in 1972, got engaged in 1973 and set a wedding date, but five weeks before the wedding Junior canceled out. He said he wasn't ready.

We went together for six more years and it was one excuse after another. We work for the same company but at different locations. Junior travels for the company. One day he came to see me and a front tooth was missing! (He said he walked into a door.)

Later, company records passed through my hands and I discovered his tooth had been knocked out by a girl named Gloria who works in his office. (They were playing ball.) I went to see her to find out what my competition looked like. She was a pretty, young widow.

I told her I was engaged to Junior, and she said so was she. She had a ring, but it wasn't as big as mine. They had been engaged for three years!

Gloria broke her engagement to Junior, and so did I. Now he's been camping on my doorstep saying that he loves me and wants to marry me. He's begging me to set another date. He even cried. He's the only man I've ever loved. What should I do?

A FOOL IN LOVE

DEAR FOOL: If you want a husband who can't be trusted out of your sight, marry Junior.

Preserving The Past

The historic Fleming House, at Third and Greene streets, was formally opened today with an open house which showed off the unique project to the community.

It is something of which to be proud.

The restoration work took 10 months and cost $233,000. Needless to say this is not just a matter of repainting an old house and moving offices into it. The 80-year-old former dwelling of Sen. and Mrs. James Fleming was completely restored with siding removed to install insulation and replacement of the expensive slate roof. Inside the various rooms of the house have been extensively redecorated and adapted to office use, while maintaining as much of the original trimming as possible.

Use of the house is particularly significant since the chamber was begun when Fleming called together area business leaders to discuss obtaining the funds for the establishment of what has become East Carolina University. Chamber President Ed Walker, a leader of the project, says this is the first mention found of a chamber here. The house is also expected to be designated a National Historic Site.

The renovation is within $30,000 of being paid for thanks to contributions by local businesses and individuals. Tommy Edwards was chairman of the restoration committee.

Greenville, Pitt County, ECU and the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce have all undergone extensive changes since 1902. Our past is important, however, and the chamber with solid community support, has done something significant in preserving an important part of our past.

SOCIAL SECURITY

No Progress By Panel

By MARGARET SCHERF
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Unless President Reagan and House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill come up with a suggestion on how to save the Social Security system, the commission studying the problem may cancel its last scheduled meeting Friday.

"If I conclude no progress is possible, it would be best we not meet further," the commission chairman, Alan Greenspan, told the National Press Club Wednesday. "What's required is to go to the next step of decision-making."

That step, he said, will have to be taken by top aides to the president and speaker. So far, Reagan and the Massachusetts Democrat have shown no inclination to budge in one another's direction.

However, White House officials said Reagan's aides had been meeting privately with commission members and among themselves to try to decide what the administration should tell the deadlocked National Commission on Social Security Reform.

Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., a member of the commission, told a reporter he believed little could be accomplished by a meeting Friday.

And Robert Ball, another member generally regarded as a point man for O'Neill on the commission, said he thought there was a 50-50 chance the meeting would be canceled.

Although the commission had scheduled its last meeting Friday, it has until Dec. 31 to come up with a report on how to save the retirement system from bankruptcy. That report is eagerly awaited by Congress because unless financing legislation is enacted, it is estimated benefit funds could run out by next July.

Greenspan said the commission has "gone as far as we can, we have yet to decide precisely what we will publish" as a report. But there definitely will be a report, he said.

Reagan has asserted he is "not scared to touch the issue" but that he wants to make no proposals until the commission issues its report. And O'Neill has said he has no desire to join Reagan in any agreement at this time, although he would be "glad to go over" to the White House if asked.

Greenspan said that even if the commission cancels its Friday meeting, "we really have made progress. ... A number of ideas on both sides have dropped by the wayside to seek a more central, unified point of view."

He added: "Nobody is talking about cutting short-term benefits. Nobody is talking about solutions outside payroll tax acceleration and COLA (cost-of-living adjustment) changes."

The disagreement is over which should be emphasized. Republicans generally want to lower cost-of-living raises and Democrats want to move up already-scheduled tax increases. Each side is waiting for word from its leader — Reagan or O'Neill — on what to insist on and where to give ground.

Dropped ideas include making the system more voluntary or directly infusing general revenues into it, Greenspan said.

He also pointed to agreement on the size of the problem — up to $200 billion by 1990 and a long-term deficit of 1.8 percent of taxable payroll — and to a general consensus on bringing new federal workers into the system.

"I don't think progress will be wiped out if we don't go the final step" in spelling out exactly how to make up the shortfall, he said. That has to be done by Congress, Greenspan pointed out, adding that "my view is they will eventually get together."

Rules For A Non-Shopper

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent
RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP) — In these cost-conscious times is it possible to keep Christmas spending under control and build up an immunity to low sales resistance?

We get lots of questions like that here at Hardscrabble House, where in the holiday season the bonhomie flows like bourbon and sometimes is.

The answer is what we specialists in consumer caution call a qualified yes. The qualification being just how determined the shopper really is to keep the old wallet in as tightly zipped a configuration as the traditional generosity of the season will allow.

Firstly, unaccompanied, having life's helpmate along only doubles and sometimes cubes the chances of falling victim to a gifted sales pitch or an attractive counter display. If he or she insists on coming along, there are certain precautions which if reasonably observed can result in reduced holiday deficit spending.

Begin by sallying forth when the stores are closed. Window shopping may make the heart grow fonder for material goods flecked with tinsel and artificial snow but it also inflames the metatarsals and quickly wears down the keeper of the family gift list. When the time comes to do the inevitable purchasing, always pick the busiest store hours, particular just before closing. The combination of lines at the cash register and short-tempered shop assistants can kill many a sale right in the end zone. Overheated department stores, crowded with aggressive overwrought purchasers, may often result in your partner's coming to the delightfully solvent conclusion that "maybe we'd get by just sending them a card ... or one of my fruitcakes ... or just calling them long distance during the holidays."

To assist you when the crunch comes, and your helpmate seems to be at the lowest ebb of sales resistance, here are a few market-tested buzz words designed to make the salespeople buzz off:

- Stripes (or checks, tweeds, solid colors, etc.) tend to make you look old (fat, thin, washed out), dear.
- Too bad it doesn't go with our decor.
- The Simpsons have one just like it, and I always thought it a trifle bourgeois.
- That's your size, all right, but somehow it's not the real you.
- Great, but let's wait until the after-Christmas sales when the price is bound to be almost half.
- I've seen them advertised on television $20 cheaper. There's an 800 number you call.
- Isn't our house noisy enough and how often will the children play with it?
- There was a guy with a pushcart in front of our building selling the same brand name for a third as much.
- You're just not a hat (fur, bracelet, cufflink, earring) person.
- It will dominate our room.
- I'd liked the other one better; too bad they didn't have your size.
- Quite a lot of money to pay for a book (album, magazine) that's probably available on loan right now at the library.
- They may call it Valley Girls; I call it the pits.
- The catch is you have to assemble it yourself.
- Aren't our electric bills high enough now?
- O.K., if you can't live without it, but there goes our summer vacation (new dish washer, tennis lessons, braces for Amy, winter cruise, etc.).
- Buy them that and we'll never see any homework done around the place.
- You know Josh isn't old enough yet for a dog (violin, surf board, 10-speed bike, home bar tender's kit, karate lessons, home computer).
- Take off a dozen more

U.S. 264 Project Progressing

While nothing is absolutely certain in the world of highway construction, N.C. Secretary of Transportation W.R. "Bill" Roberson feels the U.S. 264 improvements from Wilson to Washington will be done.

That is, of course, dependent upon the Legislature next year finding additional funds to keep the state's entire highway construction program moving. The federal 5 cents per gallon tax will help, although that will not speed up the U.S. 264 construction schedule.

Right of way acquisition is now moving along and the first phase of the projects should be put out for bids in this fiscal year.

It is good news that the project is progressing. We cannot emphasize enough how important the project is economically to Pitt and other counties along its way.

Medication Vital

By PAUL T. O'CONNOR
RALEIGH — Last August, Raleigh police were called to the home of a mental patient who was creating a disturbance. One officer entered the man's home, was attacked by the patient and killed him with his service revolver. The next day it was revealed that the patient had not been taking the psychotropic drugs prescribed to him for the symptoms of his mental illness.

Across the country and in North Carolina, mental hospitals are housing fewer and fewer patients. Instead, patients are being treated with psychotropic drugs and released into the community. Doctors prescribe medicine for these patients to take on an outpatient basis and most take the drugs. It allows them to live near-normal lives with their families.

But there are cases like that in Raleigh in which the patient doesn't take his medicine. Many of them end up in the headlines. Patients who are fine when taking their drugs become raging lunatics without them. Many times they commit dreadful crimes.

The drugs have allowed the state to reduce its population of mental hospital patients by 75 percent in the last 25 years. The proposed closing of Dorothea Dix Hospital in Raleigh is directly tied to decreased demand due to these drugs and the "deinstitutionalized" care which they allow. But the public is concerned that mental patients who are on the streets can become dangerous when they stop taking their medication.

Why do patients stop taking the drugs? Dr. Gene Douglas, director of the state Division of Mental Health, says there are several reasons. Some tire of the drugs' unpleasant side effects — dry mouth, blurred vision, muscle stiffness and tremors. Some patients incorrectly assume that they're all better and don't need the medicine anymore. Some don't care if they get better and some are so paranoid they think the doctors are trying to hurt them with the drugs.

The N.C. Mental Health Study Commission thinks the legislature should tighten up the laws concerning mental patients who've been released for deinstitutionalized care. As the law reads now, a patient can't be admitted to a hospital unless he's considered dangerous. Once in the hospital, he can be treated with the drugs but then must be released once they do their job. Since the drugs don't cure mental illness, but only help alleviate the symptoms, his problems will return if he stops taking his medication.

The courts can't force him to take his drugs — even if relatively certain he'll become dangerous without them. All they can do is send him back to the hospital after he's dangerous again. If he's

To the editor:

Speaking on behalf of the 450 members of the audience in Wright Auditorium last Sunday afternoon, I would like to voice my sincere congratulations to the Greenville Choral Society and the Greenville Chamber Players for a truly enjoyable musical afternoon. My only regret is that more hearty souls did not brave the cold to witness this memorable Christmas concert.

Sunday's choral treat ranged from the magnificently rendered "Hodie Christus Natus est" by Gabrieli to such traditional carols as "He Is Born" and "The Holly and the Ivy." Under Dr. Fleming's direction, this amateur singing group achieved a musical excellence that only a few professional choruses ever attain. Each member of the Greenville Choral Society should be rightly proud to belong to such an organization.

An additional musical treat was afforded by the Greenville Chamber Players. Both of their numbers were impressively rendered. This group of young musicians featured Amy Moore, Andrea Bath and Jennifer Lucht in their Corelli concerto number; and these three young soloists were both charming and professional. It is hoped that this young group of musicians will continue to favor us with more such appearances.

Another Christmas surprise was the performance by the Women's Ensemble — a "note-worthy" spinoff of chorus members. Their selections were also seasonal and artfully performed.

A Christmas Concert will always be remembered as a choral masterpiece — a fitting Christmas dessert to the masterful Beethoven Ninth just a few weeks ago. Sunday's concert was superbly staged and directed by Dr. Rhonda Fleming — ably assisted by Ms. Candice Dixon, conductor of the Chamber players, and Ms. Carolyn Ippock, director of the skillful Ensemble Singers.

Again, our congratulations — and thanks — for a truly enjoyable musical memory. We are all looking forward to other such concerts in the future.

Strength For Today

TRUE UNITY

We hear a great deal today about the necessity for church unity. This is all to the good if it means a greater spirit of unity among Christians. But it is something by no means as commendable if it means merely bigger and more complicated ecclesiastical machinery.

Jesus prayed that those who believed in him would be one, even as he and the Father are one. The unity we must aim for throughout the Christian world is the unity of men for whom there is indeed one Lord, one faith, one baptism. The ecclesiastical differences between us fade into insignificance when we confront the fact that we and other varieties of Christians follow the same Lord.

Let us have church unity. Let every movement be supported which will heal divisions in the body of Christ and bring his followers closer together. But let us remember that real unity is spiritual unity.

It must all start there, no matter what it may result in later. — Elisha Douglass

A Simple Answer For Problems

By JACK A. SEAMONDS
Associated Press Writer
BOWLING GREEN, Ohio (AP) — A.R. Chowdhury has a simple answer for solving the problems of American business — fire most managers.

Chowdhury, a professor of manufacturing technology at Bowling Green State University, says most industries are guided by people ignorant of science and technology, abrasive or apathetic toward blue-collar workers, obsessed with short-term profits and slow to invest in modernization.

"It's insane to believe you can create jobs, increase productivity and compete in the world markets under such conditions," says Chowdhury, chairman of Bowling Green's business technology program.

His harshest criticism is directed at the holders of master's degrees in business administration who have flooded into corporate leadership over the last decade.

"MBAs are ruining business in this country," he says. "They think only in terms of grabbing a profit today and not what business is going to be like tomorrow."

"Most managers and corporate leaders, the decision makers, are technologically illiterate. They don't understand science and engineering and don't try to. As long as they have that 2 percent profit or 3 percent profit coming in, they're happy."

"Meanwhile, problems continue to build up. And they are problems that are going to cripple this country from competing with others in the future."

Chowdhury, who formed his opinions after taking students on field trips to about 50 factories across Ohio, says he is convinced American business can regain its strength, but it will require changes in management attitudes.

"There is a feeling among white-collar workers that blue-collar workers are beneath them, that they are ignorant, uninformed, not motivated," he says. "But here are people with 20 years of experience and more who could help management solve problems — but they are generally ignored. How can you promote quality and productivity when people are not motivated?"

ment, he says, blue-collar workers go to work and collect a paycheck but have little interest in their jobs.

Most corporate chief executives are lawyers, accountants, managers or economists, Chowdhury says. "They are good at what they do, but these disciplines have been overemphasized. One reason that business is overregulated today is that there are so many lawyers in this country."

Though America remains a world power and an international competitor in most markets, the nation's position in world trade will continue to slip, he says.

"We're drowning in resources, natural resources, human resources, economic resources that are not being used effectively," Chowdhury says. "When you look at what other countries are doing with what little they have — Japan, Korea, Taiwan, Brazil, Argentina — we are lagging behind."

Chowdhury also scorns campaigns to encourage consumers to "Buy American," calling them farces.

"Buy American? Why should they if America can't produce a quality product?"

he asks. "People say to me that I'm not patriotic. That's ignoring the issue, unless you merely want to manipulate the consumer."

Ways to revitalize industry are fairly simple, Chowdhury says.

"Involve people. Get the blue-collar worker interested in his job, involved in the decision making, and productivity will be improved," Chowdhury says. "When people are led intelligently and with sincere consideration, you don't need layers of bureaucracy to solve problems that shouldn't come up in the first place."

Second, industry must modernize, retrain workers to employ new skills to boost productivity. "We must do more, with less," Chowdhury says.

Third, there must be regulation of business at the federal and state levels to encourage the new investment necessary to stimulate growth.

"Many regulatory activities seem designed more to perpetuate the agencies more than protect the worker or the environment," Chowdhury says. "The small businessman can't compete."

not yet dangerous, he's a ticking time bomb so long as he refuses to take his medicine. The commission wants to give the courts the authority to order an outpatient to take his medication. Under the proposal, the patient could be brought before a district court judge after his family or his physician became concerned that he wasn't taking the drugs. The judge could then order him to take those drugs. It is hoped that the aura of the courtroom will impress on these people their need to take the medicine. If it doesn't work, the judge would have the ultimate power to cite the patient for contempt of court. Lynn Gunn, staff assistant for the commission, says about 500 outpatients will be affected annually. The idea isn't to throw them into jail, she hopes that happens with few people; but to scare them into taking the medicine. These people are not criminals, she says. Like most of us, they respect the courts and will be very impressed with the power of the judge.

Anthony Freeman, 18, and Steven Booker and Carl Baker, both 19, were arrested June 19 for possession of a small amount of marijuana and were being taken from an island in Lake Mexia when the boat they were in capsized. Three officers made it safely to shore. The officers were acquitted of state charges of negligent homicide, and U.S. Attorney Edward Prado said Wednesday he was studying records in the case to determine if there were civil rights violations.

House OKs Auto Content Bill

By ROBERT L. SHAFFER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislation to restrict auto imports swept through the House on a tide of protectionist sentiment, but faces a tougher reception in the Senate.

The so-called domestic content bill, which would require that imported cars contain a substantial amount of U.S. parts and be assembled by U.S. workers, was approved by the House 215-188 Wednesday night. The United Auto Workers promoted the measure as a job-creating mechanism.

A companion bill will be taken up by the Senate Commerce Committee today.

But chances are slim the Senate will approve it this year because of opposition from Republicans and because of an overload of legislation.

Rep. Richard Ottinger, D-N.Y., author of the House bill, said even if the measure does not become law, it will have a propaganda impact. "I think this will send a real message to those who are restricting trade, both in Japan and the European market," he said.

The bill was passed by the House over the objections of the Reagan administration, grain farmers and export industries. Those groups claimed the measure would touch off an international trade war that could eventually cost the United States more jobs than it would produce.

"If we start a trade war, we will all live to regret it," said Rep. Dan Glickman, D-Kan.

Before the final vote, the House adopted, 195-194, an amendment saying that nothing in the bill could violate existing treaties. UAW spokesman Don Stillman said afterwards, "Thirty-one countries have local-content requirements. It's our position that nothing in this bill violates any treaties."

In a related issue, the Senate Wednesday defeated a "Buy America" provision that would have required the use of U.S.-produced steel and cement in bridge and highway repairs financed by a proposed nickel-a-gallon increase in the federal gasoline tax. Earlier, the amendment passed the House.

Sen. John Chafee, R-R.I., strongly opposed the steel measure. "This is a little bon bon for the wealthiest workers in the United States," he said. "In their greed to get this through for a special group of workers, they are going to trample on the jobs of other workers," he said.

In the House, the auto content bill got strong support from congressmen representing areas of high unemployment. Those lawmakers complained that the Japanese have used non-tariff barriers effectively to block U.S. imports while enjoying America's open markets.

The UAW says the legislation would create more than 800,000 jobs by forcing foreign automakers to establish plants in this country. Union president Douglas Fraser called the House vote a "major step toward forcing the Japanese to create jobs here in America where they enjoy huge markets."

House opponents tried unsuccessfully to put through an amendment renaming it "The Smoot-Hawley Trade Barrier Bill of 1982."

The Smoot-Hawley Tariff of 1930 was blamed for setting off trade wars between the United States and Europe and has even been cited by historians as a contributing cause of World War II.

The Ottinger bill would require foreign car makers to use increasing ratios of American labor and parts over a three-year span, depending on the volume of their U.S. sales.

In the third year, Toyota, the largest Japanese importer with annual U.S. sales of 700,000 cars and light trucks, would be allowed to produce only about 30 percent of those vehicles outside the United States.

BONUS SHOOTING — New York City police lead Barbara Austin, 38, from a Manhattan office building after the woman was arrested and charged with murder when she allegedly fired two shots into the back of a partner in a law firm. The woman was apparently dissatisfied with the size of her Christmas bonus. Miss Austin operated a word processor at the firm and did not work directly for the victim. (AP Laserphoto)

Private War On Imports

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Businessman Clyde Andrew is waging a one-man war on foreign merchandise by urging people in this country to only buy products that are "Made in U.S.A."

Andrew, chairman of Carolina Fabric Label Corp., refuses to buy any product made overseas unless he can't find a domestic item of comparable quality. He's even returned goods to stores after discovering they're not American-made and ordered his son to get rid of a foreign car.

And he has taken out a newspaper advertisement that reads, "Please Santa Claus, Don't bring me anything this Christmas unless it was Made in U.S.A."

The ad in the form of a "letter" is signed: "the unemployed millions."

The ad, occupying about one-eighth of a page, was scheduled to appear in today's editions of The Greensboro Daily News and The Greensboro Record.

Andrew acknowledges an ulterior motive in his buy-American activism. But the fabric label executive insists his biggest incentive is old-fashioned patriotism.

The American textile industry he chairs has been hurt by imports, and that has meant problems for Andrew's company. Carolina Fabric makes the labels found on the back of T-shirts and other apparel manufactured by over 700 companies, nearly all of which are in the United States and Puerto Rico.

RAMPANT INFLATION
TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israeli prices rose 6.5 percent in November, bringing the inflation rate for the past 11 months to 119 percent, within reach of its record 133 percent inflation of 1980.

Scientists Lose Radio Contact With Planet

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Viking 1, phone home. That's the radio message scientists at Jet Propulsion Laboratory are trying to send to Earth's last robot outpost on another planet. It hasn't been heard from since last month. Frank Bristow, spokesman for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration facility, said the problem seems to be a misaligned antenna on the Viking 1 lander, which has been operating on Mars since 1976. "We know the spacecraft is all right," Bristow said, adding that NASA scientists are "fairly confident" the problem can be fixed. Bristow said engineers hope to realign the antenna by sending a boosted radio signal that will be strong enough to bounce off the ship's surface and onto the skewed antenna. The signal would contain enough new instructions for Viking's on-board computer to put the antenna on track. One such attempt has failed, but another will be made Monday and "we're fairly confident because we'll be looking at it from a better angle," Bristow said. Even if that doesn't work, he said, the relative movements of Mars and Earth should get the antenna aimed earthward long enough to straighten out the problem. Bristow said the antenna apparently was misaligned because of an "inadvertent command" sent up when laboratory technicians were ordering Viking to recharge its batteries a few weeks ago. The problem was discovered when the lander stopped its weekly transmission of Martian weather reports and terrain photographs. "Then we went to work to find out what was wrong and we figured out that the antenna wasn't looking at us," Bristow said. The Viking 1 lander is the only part still operating from two combination orbiter-lander spacecraft that arrived at Mars more than six years ago. Viking 1 reached the planet in June 1976 and dropped its lander to the surface a month later. Viking 2 showed up soon after and also dropped off a lander.

The robot laboratories searched in vain for life on the dusty planet and returned vast amounts of information that is still being analyzed. Viking 1 has long outlived its minimum lifetime design of 90 days, and scientists hope it will continue taking weather reports and occasional pictures at least until 1990.

Flood Of Study Reports Pouring In To Legislative Research Body

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Proposals requiring all insured motorists to pay for losses suffered by the N.C. Reinsurance Facility and forcing stores to keep sexually explicit material out of the sight of children went to a legislative panel Wednesday.

Nineteen legislative study committees turned over mounds of paperwork and reports to the Legislative Research Commission as it prepares for the start of the 1983 General Assembly in January.

Other recommendations sent to the commission included raising the beer and wine tax for money to rehabilitate alcoholics and measures that would ensure that divorced women receive child support payments from their ex-husbands.

The study committees were set up by the 1981-82 General Assembly to study areas where bills may be introduced next session. Some of them completed their work months ago.

The commission voted Wednesday to receive the reports and pass summaries of them along to legislators, who will have the option of introducing the recommended bills.

The proposal on spreading the costs of poor risk drivers to all insured motorists came from the Insurance Study Committee, which recommended that losses of the North Carolina Reinsurance Facility not be limited to just those who have had traffic tickets or accidents.

If approved by the 1983 General Assembly, the proposal would result in the repeal a bill passed last session that was aimed at making drivers with bad records pay for the facility, which insures drivers who are considered to be a bad risk.

But the study committee said drivers with tickets or accident records were being punished too much.

The Committee on Women's Needs made several recommendations aimed at making sure divorced mothers receive child support payments and would permit garnishment of up to 40 percent of a father's wages for willfully failing to provide child support.

The Committee on Taxation of Alcoholic Beverages recommended increasing the excise tax on unfortified wine from 21 cents to 26 cents per liter and the tax on fortified wine, such as sherry or vermouth, from 24 cents to 34 cents per liter.

The higher tax would generate $1.3 million for 1983-84 and $2.1 million the next year. All the additional receipts would be distributed to counties on a per capita basis for alcoholism rehabilitation.

The Committee on Obscenity Laws' proposal would force convenience stores to keep sexually explicit material out of sight of children and would make sure it is considered a felony to engage in child pornography.

The Committee on Revenue Laws proposed an $11.5 million package of tax reforms in a number of areas. Almost all of the money would pay for conforming state tax laws with federal laws on corporate deductions for depreciation.

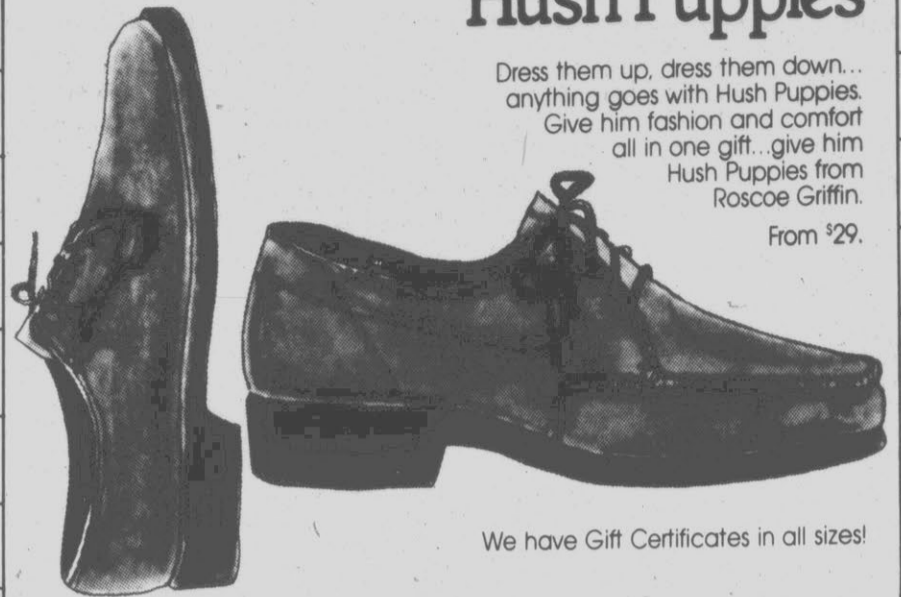

House Speaker Liston Ramsey said the state Revenue Department changed its administrative procedures to conform to the law but state attorneys believe that change is unconstitutional and a law must be passed if the practice is to be continued.

Corona Again Convicted In Migrants' Slayings

By JOHN RICE
Associated Press Writer
HAYWARD, Calif. (AP) — Attorneys for Juan Corona, sentenced to prison for his second conviction in the slayings of 25 migrant farm workers, say they will keep seeking a third trial or try to bargain for his release to Mexico.

With Corona's mother and other relatives watching, Judge Richard Patton on Wednesday sentenced him to 25 years to life in prison for killing the drifters whose mutilated bodies were uncovered in peach orchards north of Yuba City in 1971.

Patton said it was the maximum penalty he could legally impose following a seven-month retrial that included more than 1,300 exhibits and 175 witnesses.

The sentencing capped a decade-long, $4.7 million legal struggle. Corona has been in prison so long that he already is eligible for parole, but Sutter County District Attorney Carl Adams said the chance of his release are "very, very poor."

"It's my view that anyone convicted of 25 murders ... should not be released at any time and you should be kept in custody for the rest of your natural life," Patton told the 48-year-old former contractor, who afterward thanked the judge for his courtesy.

Corona, a Mexican national, has suffered several heart attacks in prison and an inmate knife attack left him blind in his left eye.

Defense attorneys Terence Hallinan and Michael Mendelson said they will continue to fight for a third trial, claiming misconduct by a "lawless jury," unless Corona can be released on parole and deported to Mexico.

"Leave him to remain in Mexico, where he wishes to stay, and the taxpayers of California can wash their hands of this case," Hallinan told reporters after Patton rejected the motion for another trial.

But Adams said the likelihood of such a deal is "absolutely zero."

"That's a stupid suggestion," he added. "There's no way we're going to let him go."

Corona's 1973 conviction was overturned in 1978 when the state Court of Appeal ruled that he was inadequately defended. His trial attorney had called no witnesses.

Before the second trial, Sutter County officials rejected Hallinan's offer to have Corona plead no contest to two counts of murder if he could be deported.

Defense attorneys charged that the retrial jury consistently violated the law by ignoring Patton's instructions and failing to report possible bias among its members.

Report Soviet Has Jets On Siezed Isle

TOKYO (AP) — The Soviet Union has deployed 10 MiG-21 fighter-bombers on a northern Pacific island claimed by Japan but occupied by Soviet forces since the end of World War II, a Japanese newspaper reported today.

The Yomiuri Shimbun said the move last week was apparently aimed at counteracting U.S. plans to station F-16 fighter-bombers in northern Japan.

The newspaper, quoting Defense Agency sources, said the MiG-21s replaced 20 older MiG-17s, deployed on the contested island of Etorofu until late 1981.

The paper said facilities at the Burevestnik airfield on Etorofu have been expanded since the departure of the

One juror and two alternates accused their colleagues of reading news accounts of the trial, eavesdropping on forbidden testimony, dozing during the trial and discussing evidence before deliberations began.

But 10 other jurors filed affidavits denying most of the claims.

Patton said there had been some violations of his instructions, but they had not prejudiced the jury. He recommended that one of the accusers, alternate juror Alison Warriner, be prosecuted on misdemeanor contempt charges.

The judge, who presided over both trials, said, "The evidence of definite guilt on retrial was even more conclusive."

He also questioned defense tactics in the second trial, wondering aloud if it was worse to present no witnesses, as in the first trial, "or is it more damaging to make an opening statement, as was done in this trial, and then fail to present substantial proof in any significant areas?"

He said the defense hurt its case by calling witnesses Arie Jones — who lied about his military career — and Cal Cooper — who lied that he had been a top boxer.

"If ever I heard perjury committed in a courtroom, Jones committed it," Patton said.

Thirteen Rescuers Complete Life Support Course

Thirteen members of the Greenville Fire-Rescue Department graduated from an Intermediate Emergency Medical Technician Advanced Life Support course here today. Successful completion of this course by 19 members of the department will enable the use of advanced life support skills, including starting of intravenous fluids, insertion of airways and application of anti-shock trousers by department members. Beginning Jan. 3 at least one person on every rescue call by the Greenville Fire-Rescue Department will be certified by the state of North Carolina to perform these life support duties when any or all are deemed necessary to the well-being of any patient.

The 13 graduates honored today are Kenneth Adams, Hyman Denby, Shepard Hill, Linwood Hines, Herman Mills, Ronald Moore, King Nelson, Charles Owens, Walter Salisbury, Charles Walker, Leonard Waters, Jonathan West and Earl Wilson.

Dr. E. Jackson Allison Jr., chairman of the department of emergency medicine of the East Carolina University, medical director of the Pitt County Memorial Hospital Emergency Department, and medical adviser of the Greenville Fire-Rescue Department, presented the graduate certificates and spoke about the significance of the occasion.

Also being honored are

Tony Smart, Mike Branch, Adam Corbett, John Fisher, Skip Eure and Gary Roberson, all of whom have previously successfully completed the course.

The course consists of 140 hours of classroom instruction, learning laboratory participation, and hospital clinical experience, including a basis EMT recertification course. The graduates began the course in August and completed it Oct. 27.

The Medical School EMS program takes responsibility for developing a proposal to the state EMS office for a rescue group to obtain this educational experience. This is done largely through research of the need — study of how many times during a given period patients brought into the hospital by that squad conceivably could have benefited from the skills taught in the course. They then teach the course and administer the state testing of the skills.

The course is taught by medical school faculty, emergency physicians, psychologists, nurses and physicians assistants.

A second Greenville Fire-Rescue class will begin in February, Dennis Blessing, assistant coordinator of the medical school EMS program, said. The medical school EMS program previously has trained 17 other similar groups from Pitt, Beaufort, Onslow, Wayne, Wilson, Nash and Chowan counties. Members of the Winterville and Grifton rescue squads are among those trained.

were provisions for resolving claims against the firms for false billings and other misrepresentations.

Edmisten said, "The attorney general of Tennessee has agreed to consider North Carolina claims and we need to start forwarding these right away. That's why we're urging people to look at their credit card statements for the last six months (back to June) and report to us any discrepancies involving magazine sales."

Billings in this scam usually were in the amount of $113.88 or were two or more charges that add up to this amount. Additionally, multiple charges may have appeared from different firms in different states at 10-day intervals.

The deadline for submitting claims to Edmisten's office to be filed with those of Tennesseans is Feb 15, 1983 — the earlier, the better chance for reimbursement through an already-established $35,000 settlement fund, he said.

File claims with as much documentation as possible with Consumer Protection, Attorney General's Office, Box 629, Raleigh, N.C. 27602. To inquire, call 733-7741.

Edmisten said his office also would like to know about any other suspicious charges on credit card billings as "there may be connected or other similar scams that need investigating."

Double Transplant Patient Succumbs

HOUSTON (AP) — A man who received a heart and lung transplant, then survived 21 days while being treated with an anti-rejection drug, has died of "intractable lung infections," hospital officials said.

The 41-year-old, who was not identified, died at 8:35 p.m. Wednesday, said Elaine Moore, a spokeswoman at St. Luke's Episcopal Hospital.

The man, who never left the hospital after the surgery, had been suffering from a severe lung ailment and secondary heart disease when the transplant of a heart and two lungs was performed Nov. 23.

The donor organs came from a 19-year-old Pasadena, Texas, man who died in a traffic accident, officials said.

It was the second such operation performed by heart surgeon Dr. Denton Cooley. In 1968, he performed the operation on a 2-month-old girl who died within hours of surgery.

The latest recipient had been treated with cyclosporine, which researchers say helps promote healing and fight rejection of transplanted tissue without weakening the body's immune system.

Cyclosporine is also being used to treat 45-year-old Mary Gohke of Mesa, Ariz., who on March 9 became the first recipient of a heart-lung transplant in more than 10 years.

Doctors at Stanford University School of Medicine in California credit her survival to cyclosporine.

Stanford has performed 10 heart-lung transplants since March, and seven of those patients are described as doing well. The other three died within a month of their operations.

Cites Welcome For Dictators

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former President Jimmy Carter's chief human rights official says President Reagan should crack down on abuses by Asian dictators.

Patricia M. Derian, former assistant secretary of state for human rights, told a congressional committee Wednesday said a U.S. failure to enforce its human rights policy abroad is making the administration look hypocritical.

Ms. Derian noted that the leaders of South Korea, the Philippines, Pakistan and Indonesia had all received red-carpet welcomes in this country.

Circulate Grain Elevator Ideas

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is circulating to management and labor representatives the draft of a proposed regulation designed to improve grain elevator safety.

Doug Clark, a spokesman for the Occupational Safety and Health Administration, said Wednesday that the agency will likely propose for the first time a grain elevator safety standard sometime early next year.

Many Oppose A Split Session

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Many state lawmakers say they don't want a split legislative session in 1983, and they disagree about the best solution to highway funding problems, indicates an Associated Press survey.

The majority of respondents to a questionnaire mailed to 1983 General Assembly members last month said they also favor continuing the Coastal Area Management Act.

The uncertain economy has prompted discussion of splitting the legislative session so lawmakers could arrive and get oriented in January, go home and return in the spring to vote on the budget when the future financial picture is clearer.

In the past, the Legislature has met from January until June or July.

Of the 170 legislators surveyed by The Associated Press, 103 or 60 percent responded to the questionnaire. Thirty-three of 50 senators and 70 of 120 representatives responded. There was no significant difference in answers between House and Senate members.

Because some of the questionnaires were unsigned, it could not be determined how many Democrats or Republicans responded.

When asked whether they favored a split legislative session, 55 said no, 30 said yes and 18 others were undecided or gave no answer. Several suggested placing a limit on the length of legislative sessions.

The Legislative Committee on Agency Review has suggested limiting the session to 60 legislative days or 90 calendar days.

Legislators also were asked whether they would favor another gasoline tax increase or an alcohol tax increase to pay for highways.

If the state doesn't find about $60 million, it will lose federal funding for highways in July.

Gov. Jim Hunt proposed a $180 million highway tax package to the 1981 Legislature, which approved about $120 million worth of the proposal. The plan increased the gasoline tax by 3 cents per gallon.

The portion of the plan that was not approved would have raised the tax on beer and liquor.

Hunt has said that the alcohol tax remains on the table for consideration and he will have no new recommendations.

When asked whether they favored a gasoline tax increase or higher alcohol tax to pay for highways, 37 said yes, 35 said no and 31 were undecided or gave no answer.

On another topic, a clear majority of the respondents, 72, said they favor continuing the Coastal Area Management Act. Twelve said they do not favor continuing the act and 19 were undecided or gave no answer.

A legislative study committee has rejected proposals to weaken the act, a land-use plan that covers 20 eastern counties. The panel also has suggested considering a land-use plan for the rest of the state.

On other matters, legislators said they do not favor restoring the insurance commissioner's powers to block implementation of rate hikes. Currently, companies may implement rate hikes over the commissioner's objections if they set aside money to cover refunds for possible overcharges.

Forty-three said they did not favor such legislation, 30 said they did and 30 others were undecided or did not respond.

The majority were undecided whether a commission should be established to regulate insurance rates as the state Utilities Commission regulates those rates.

Forty-one respondents were undecided or gave no answer, 32 favored such legislation and 30 opposed such a move.

The majority also were undecided whether a state housing commission should be established — a move being considered by a legislative study committee.

Forty-four were undecided or did not respond, 31 said they opposed such a commission and 28 favored establishing the panel.

When asked what other issues may spark heated debate in 1983, legislators mentioned alternatives to prisons, annexation and child support laws.

Kiss A Pig For Charity

MIAMI (AP) — Her black-and-gold gown and cool composure kept drawing admirers, even though the men in her life knew she'd be more at home in a muddy sty.

But in the name of charity, Sunset High School teachers puckered up to kiss Petunia, a 10-week-old pig, as part of a popularity contest, with students paying money to see their favorite teachers kiss a porker.

"She kinda looks like this girl I dated in high school," woodworking teacher Pete Moroney said Wednesday. He closed his eyes for his piggy smooch.

English teacher John Kendall also took the plunge with Petunia, who remained unmoved by his ardor.

The week-long fund-raiser will pay for meals for the poor at Camillus House, a free-food line operated by Brothers of the Good Shepherd.

Students put money in any of 36 jars for the teacher or school administrator they would like to see kiss a pig. Some $90 accumulated in Kendall's jar. In all, $800 was collected.

The third lucky winner, physics teacher Priscilla King, said, "After 19 years of teaching, this has been a dream come true."

Trapped In A Burning House

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — A man accused of trapping his ex-girlfriend's three children in a house and setting it afire was being held in $175,000 cash bond on arson, assault and attempted murder charges.

Police said that before setting the blaze Dec. 8, Linwood Flack, 32, left a note on the wall of the home of Cheryl Harris, saying, "There will be no fire escape in hell."

Detective Tom Crossno said Flack "intentionally set the fire knowing the children were in there and that the back door was boarded up." The children managed to escape through a broken window.

Flack pleaded innocent to the charges at a hearing Tuesday.

Five Killed In Collision

FREDERICKSBURG, Va. (AP) — A tractor-trailer driver faces five counts of manslaughter as the result of a collision on Interstate 95 near here that killed five people, including a Rhode Island woman and her three children.

The truck driven by Gerald A. Jones, 22, smashed into the rear of a pickup truck early Wednesday, pushed it 300 feet and crushed it against a roadside tree, killing all five occupants, said Virginia State Trooper R. D. Figgers.

Figgers identified the dead as Katherine G. Dias, 31, her children, Carolyn, 12, and twins Warren and Donna, 10, and the owner of the pickup truck, Norman C. Robeau, 35, all of Woonsocket, R.I.

Figgers said Ms. Dias and her children were moving to Orlando, Fla., where she and her family had planned to live with a sister, and that the pickup truck was loaded with Dias family possessions.

Figgers said Ms. Dias was driving when the tractor-trailer, loaded with general merchandise, hit the pickup at 5:35 a.m. about 10 miles south of here.

Jones, from the Bronx, New York City, escaped unhurt and was charged with five counts of manslaughter and one of reckless driving, Figgers said. Jones was being held in lieu of $50,000 bond in the Rappahannock Security Center.

A preliminary hearing for Jones was set for Dec. 17 in Spotsylvania County General District Court.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) (NCDA) — The North Carolina f.o.b. dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 41.25 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pound birds. Too few sales to report prices. The market is steady and the live supply is moderate for a seasonally moderate demand. Average weights desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Thursday was 1,029,000, compared to 1,645,000 last Thursday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down 31.64 points Tuesday and Wednesday, recovered 3.04 to 995.68 by noontime today.

But losers held a 9-5 advantage over gainers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues. AT&T shares, down 1 1/2 Wednesday, slipped another 1/8 to 60 1/2 in active trading today.

Problems Seen By Panamanian

By PETER EISNER
Associated Press Writer
PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — President Ricardo de la Esparilla warns that serious problems threaten the Panama Canal treaties with the United States, providing a possible focus for anti-American sentiment in his economically troubled country.

The 47-year-old president still believes the 1978 canal treaties were "a great step forward for Panama," but says U.S. congressional action already has violated "the spirit of the accords."

"This could turn into a serious problem if it's not resolved... a problem for the future," de la Esparilla said in an interview with The Associated Press.

De la Esparilla, who had been vice president, took office July 30 when the powerful national guard forced President Aristides Royo to resign. Since then, few people have questioned that Gen. Ruben Dario Paredes, the national guard commander, holds the real power in Panama.

The president, who refers to the guard as a "partner in power," said the canal problem remains a major point of contention with the United States.

But he said Panamanian disagreement with Reagan administration policy also extends to the problems of Central America, where Panama, along with Costa Rica, has remained relatively free of civil strife.

Probe N.C. Friends Set Up Fund For Lewis's Legal Aid

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Federal officials are preparing a grand jury investigation of an international drug smuggling ring with North Carolina connections.

The North Carolina probe comes in the wake of grand jury investigations in West Virginia that led to 45 indictments, including indictments against two Wilkes County men. Bobby M. Parks agreed to testify before the grand jury as part of a plea bargain, and Cletus "Dobe" Powell of North Wilkesboro, identified by the West Virginia grand juries as the leader of the ring, has been a fugitive since May.

West Virginia authorities will turn over information, including secret testimony, to federal authorities in North Carolina.

"It is a major investigation," said Charles Brewer, U.S. Attorney for the Western District of North Carolina. "We are in the preliminaries now, but I have talked to people in West Virginia and the Justice Department in Washington and there will be an investigation of those charges here."

William Kolibash, U.S. Attorney for the Northern District of West Virginia, said the grand jury investigation there is winding down.

"Any further we could go with this really takes us outside of our jurisdiction," Kolibash said. "I don't know if Wilkes County is the hub of a wheel or just part of the line to West Virginia. That investigation will be undertaken in North Carolina."

The grand jury indictments include charges that in 1976 Powell began importing marijuana from South America to North Carolina, and passed the drugs to a network in West Virginia.

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — A defense fund has been established for Tyleneol extortion suspect James Lewis and his wife by friends who say they "are nothing like the Bonnie and Clyde characters pictured in so many reports."

"We feel there are very powerful institutions involved in this story that have their own objectives ... If the contest gets too unequal, we think the defense will get very costly," Ted Otteson said today of his reasons for helping set up the fund.

"Another reason is that it is an opportunity to remind everybody of the presumption of innocence ... that someone is presumed innocent until proven guilty," he said.

He remembered James and Leann Lewis as the people who prepared his taxes in Kansas City for 10 years and who worked with his neighborhood association — the Brush Creek Trolley Barn Neighborhood Association. They moved to Chicago last December.

"They kept the books for us, filed reports for us. They were involved in neighborhood cleanups. They were politically active," Otteson said.

Otteson, a part-time lecturer in English at the University of Missouri-Kansas City and Longview Community College, said he hoped to see Lewis to tell him of the defense fund.

Lewis, who was arrested Monday in New York City, is being held in lieu of $5 million bail pending extradition to Chicago. He faces charges of writing a $1 million extortion demand to Johnson & Johnson threatening more poisonings after seven Tyleneol poisonings deaths in the Chicago area in September.

Johnson & Johnson is the parent company of the firm that manufactures Tyleneol.

Mrs. Lewis, who surrendered in Chicago after her husband's arrest, is being held in lieu of $5 million bail on a charge of fraudulent use of a Social Security number.

Otteson said it had been agreed that the names of fund supporters would be confidential. He said it had been agreed not to reveal the size of the fund, describing it as "more than a small amount."

"I think to get them a defense to hold its own, it will take a lot of money, $50,000 or $100,000. We have no idea," Otteson said.

Lewis was indicted last month by a federal grand jury here on six counts charging mail fraud and on a charge of making a false application to the Internal Revenue Service.

ECU Faces Bayou Classic Host Team

East Carolina's Pirates hit the road again this weekend, seeking to do what they've never done before — win an inseason basketball tournament.

As long as East Carolina has been an NCAA member, the Pirates have not captured an invitational tournament championship. Since the 1964-65 season, when ECU was a probationary member of the Southern Conference, the Pirates have appeared in 15 tournaments. Their record is 10-21 (actually 11-20 after one loss was reversed by a forfeit for an ineligible player use).

They've reached the finals of only four of those tournaments, losing each of them. Not since the 1978-79 season, when the Pirates lost to Connecticut in the finals of the U-Conn Classic have the Pirates reached the finals. In fact, the Pirates have just two wins in their last 14 tournament games.

But on the eve of the Bayou Classic at Southwestern Louisiana, East Carolina coach Charlie Harrison isn't the least bit disturbed.

"I don't give a — about the past," Harrison said. "All I'm concerned about is today, tomorrow and the next day."

The Pirates will get a tough test in the first round, facing the hosting Ragin' Cajuns in the 9:30 p.m. (EST) game. New Mexico State and Grambling State collide in the first game, set for 7:30 p.m.

The winners meet for the title on Saturday night while the losers play in the earlier consolation game.

Harrison has compared Southwest, which brings a 4-0 record into the tournament — one that they've never lost in — to ECU's last foe, 15th ranked N.C. State.

"Being an independent they don't get as much attention as some clubs, but they were ranked in the top twenty at the end of last season and played in the NCAA tournament," the coach said. "Four of their starters are back from that team."

While Southwestern hasn't the front line height of N.C. State, Harrison said that size doesn't really concern him. "It's how big or how strong they play."

Southwestern is expected to start 6-9 Dan Gay at center, with 6-8 Graylin Warner and 6-7 Dion Brown at the two forwards. Johnny Collins (5-10) and Roy McGrew (6-3) will be the starting guards.

"They have an experienced team," Harrison said. "They are geared to the inside play on offense, and they run a lot of changing defenses. We expect to see three different defenses from them at least."

The front line has been the big producer so far for the Cajuns, who had beaten Florida International, 105-54, New Orleans, 70-68, Louisiana Tech, 46-45, and Cal State-Santa Barbara, 97-84. That last win came only last night as a warmup for the tournament.

"I don't feel that that's a handicap," Harrison said. "In fact, I wish we were playing." The Pirates haven't taken to the court since last Wednesday when they lost to State, 57-49.

Brown is the leading scorer for the Cajuns, hitting 26.3 points a game prior to last night. Warner is scoring at a 14.7 rate, while Gay has a 9.3 average. McGrew has a 7.3 mark, while Collins is at 8.3.

The Cajuns are also strong on the boards, led by Gay's 8.3 average. Brown has a 7.3 average while Warner is snatching off 5.3 rebounds.

"They are awfully quick and talented,"

Harrison said.

The Pirates, led by freshman Johnny Edwards, bring in a 2-2 record to the game. Edwards is scoring 19.8 points a game and pulling 8.3 rebounds. Three other Pirates are in double figures, Barry Wright at 14.5, Bruce Peartree at 13.8 and Charles Green at 11.3. The fifth starter, Tony Robinson is scoring 6.5 points a game.

The Pirates are hopeful of having two injured players back for the tournament. Thom Brown, who played only one minute against State because of a practice-sustained knee injury, is now back at full strength.

Curt Vanderhorst, the third guard, averaging 5.3 points, missed the State game with an ankle injury, and it was uncertain whether he would be able to go. "If he's not at full speed, we probably won't take him with us," Harrison said.

As far as the tournament is concerned, Harrison is making nothing special of it. "We're taking it just like another game. Being in a tournament doesn't necessarily intrigue me. But it does give the kids a chance for a nice trip."

As far as the other two teams in the field are concerned, Harrison is leary of New Mexico State. That team has won four of six games, most recently downing New Mexico, 101-86, and New Mexico Highlands, 133-85.

No information has been made available to ECU personnel about Grambling. "We'll see them on Friday night," the coach said.

Following the tournament, the Pirates are off until December 28 when they host New Hampshire in Minges in a 7:30 p.m. game. They then open ECAC-South play at George Mason on December 30.

Eppley Sparkles As Clemson Rolls

By The Associated Press
It didn't take Clemson's Mike Eppley long to convert from the starting quarterback for the Tiger football team to point guard on the basketball team.

Eppley hit on all five of his field goal attempts and dished out eight assists as Clemson downed Campbell 76-59 in a non-conference college basketball game Wednesday night.

In the only other game involving an Atlantic Coast Conference team, Georgia Tech blew a 21-point second half lead but rallied to defeat Alabama A&M 90-85.

Yellow Jacket coach Bobby Cremins' team was cruising along with a 62-41 lead with 15:11 to play when the Bulldogs rallied, behind four consecutive 3-point goals from Terry Howard, to take a 77-76 lead with 6:27 to go.

But Georgia Tech regained its composure and won the game, lifting its record to 4-1.

In the only game featuring an ACC team today, top-ranked Virginia takes on Houston in the Sun Belt Classic in Tokyo.

The Tigers, 5-3, took control early in their game with Campbell and were never really threatened as center Raymond Jones contributed 14 points and 10 rebounds and forward Fred Gilliam added 12 points and nine rebounds against the outmanned Camels.

Center Mike Vandy led Campbell, 2-3, with 15 points, while Ken Griffin had 12, and Harvey Smith and Larry Kennedy added 11 each.

Clemson jumped out to an early lead, but Campbell came back to tie it at 10-10 before the Tigers rattled in eight unanswered points for an 18-10 lead with 11:47 remaining in the first half.

The Tiger advantage reached 13 points twice and stood at 39-27 at intermission.

With Eppley engineering the fast-paced offensive attack and Gilliam providing outside fire power, the Tigers gradually pulled away during the rest of the game despite excellent defensive play by Campbell.

Clemson coach Bill Foster said Wednesday's game turned out to be a little tougher than expected.

"Campbell played much better tonight than they did when we scouted them, but that's to be expected," he said.

"They were shooting 39 percent coming in, but their center (Vandy) was hitting them from long range, and if we'd been playing with a 3-point basket we would have been in trouble."

Meanwhile, Campbell coach Danny Roberts found much to criticize about his team's effort.

"We had to stop their break, which we didn't do," he said. "We got beat under the boards. Clemson got a lot of easy shots, and we didn't have anyone to match up with them inside."

At Atlanta, Georgia Tech's Cremins praised his team for fighting back after blowing the 21-point lead.

"We could have gone down the tubes tonight," Cremins said.

A&M fought back using Howard's 3-pointers, but Tech freshman Mark Price sank five 3-point baskets of his own. Price scored 24 points to lead Tech and John Salley, another freshman, contributed 20 points and Danny Pearson had 18.

Pearson put Tech ahead to stay 83-81 on a layup with 3:08 to go, and the Jackets hit seven of eight free throw attempts in the final two minutes to lift their record to 4-1.

Goodbye Hard To Say To Bear

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — Like readers lingering over the final pages of a frayed but beloved book, fans, players and gridiron enemies were reluctant to say goodbye to the Paul "Bear" Bryant era.

As the rest of college football grappled with the news that its most successful coach was quitting, University of Alabama students tried to console themselves.

"It's like losing a best friend," said Robert Bruce, a sophomore from Memphis, Tenn., where Bryant will coach his final game. "I'm worried about whether it will hurt recruiting, because everybody has wanted to play for Bear."

And like a novel with a sad ending, Bryant's departure left some of his fans with mixed feelings.

It "leaves a bad taste in my mouth" that Bryant chose to quit after a mediocre year, said Bill Oakley, a May graduate who is working at the school. "I hope he's not basing it on this season, because he's had a great career."

Whatever Bryant's reasons, his decision to quit leaves a vacuum on the Alabama campus, and a bigger one in the hearts of the players he led so well.

"Right now, I'm dumb-founded," said Jesse Bendross, a junior wide receiver. "I'm just waiting, but I don't know what I'm waiting on. I thought I'd be here four years before he retired."

"It's stunning," added quarterback Paul Fields. "Everybody is pretty much wordless."

Auburn coach Pat Dye, a former Bryant assistant who leads the Crimson Tide's bitter cross-state rival, had a few words for Bryant.

"It's kind of sad that he's getting out," said Dye, who is in Orlando, Fla., for a Tangerine Bowl battle with Boston College this weekend.

"He certainly doesn't have anything to prove," Dye added. "He's proven everything there is to prove in coaching."

The Auburn coach grew visibly upset over questions about what effect Bryant's retirement would have on the Tigers.

"When I came to Auburn, I didn't come on the basis of Coach Bryant would be at Alabama or retire," Dye said. "I'm not going to let that coaching change affect the way we do things at Auburn."

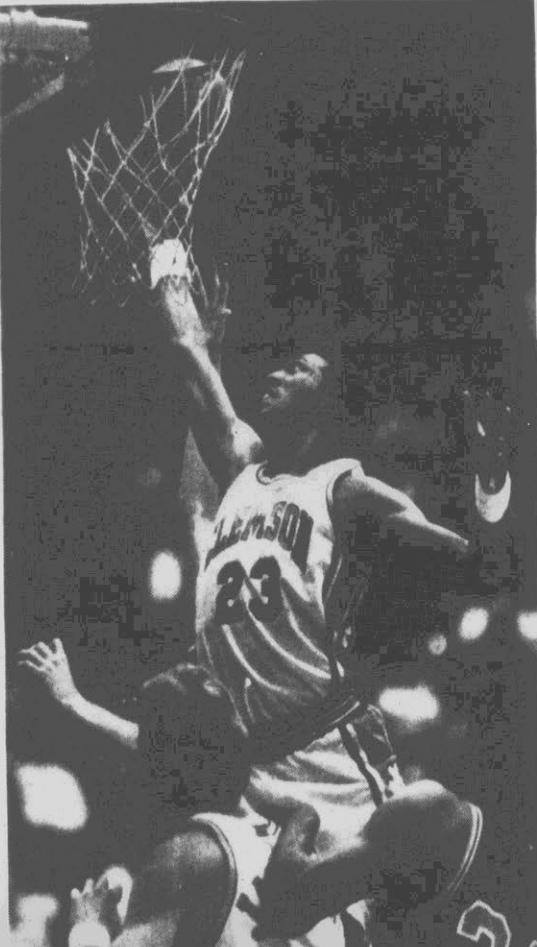

As the tribute to Bryant rolled in — "there will never be a replica of him," said university President Joab Thomas — so too did questions about the future for a Crimson Tide minus Bryant.

New York Giants Coach Ray Perkins, Bryant's successor, "cleaned house when he went with the Giants, and I think that's going to have to be done here," Oakley said. "Not so much in coaches and players but in the style of play."

Despite the general dismay at Bryant's resignation, there were glints of a characteristic optimism in the hearts of Alabama players and fans.

"I feel his decision was made on our part," Bendross said, noting the Tide's 7-4 record this year — shoddy by Bryant's standards. "He felt he had to do something to make us winners again."

Oakley added: "You watch Alabama come back and go undefeated next year."

Conley Rallies By White Oak

JACKSONVILLE — D.H. Conley's wrestlers spotted White Oak High School a 21-14 lead after seven weight classes, then stormed back in the remaining six to take a 46-23 victory last night.

Conley won four of the remaining six by pins, and got another six points through a forfeit. Only in the final match did White Oak score again, managing a draw.

Conley is now 5-1 on the year and plays host to New Bern on Friday at 7 p.m. New Bern was 13-1 last season, losing only to Conley, and Coach Milt Sherman feels that the Bears will be out for revenge in the match.

- Summary:
- 98 — M. Parker (WO) won by forfeit.
  - 105 — Todd Cochran (C) won by forfeit.
  - 112 — S. Arnold (WO) d. Chad Clark, 12-1.
  - 119 — Reginald Moore (C) won by forfeit.
  - 126 — S. Willis (WO) d. Joel Maye, 9-7.
  - 132 — Shawn Hardy (C) drew with J. Powers, 4-4.

American Upsets Georgetown

By The Associated Press
Georgetown Coach John Thompson says the Hoyas' upset loss to American University can't be blamed on a letdown.

"I think that all the credit should go to American University," Thompson said after fifth-ranked Georgetown's 62-61 defeat Wednesday night. "All the problems we had as a team were caused by American."

The Hoyas, playing their first game since an emotion-charged 68-63 loss last Saturday to top-ranked Virginia, rallied from a 17-point deficit to nearly pull out the victory against their intransigent rival.

But American senior Gordon Austin, despite a high injury that forced him to sleep Tuesday night with his leg tied down, scored seven of his eight points down the stretch to keep the Eagles in front.

"We have had a reputation as a loser, losing in the first round of the NIT two years in a row," Austin said. "Maybe now we won't have to play second-fiddle to Georgetown and George Washington in the city."

In other college games involving ranked teams, No. 9 St. John's tripped Fordham 74-66, 12th-ranked Louisville bombed South Alabama 94-77 and No. 13 Arkansas blasted Alabama State 108-65.

"We were like a punch-drunk fighter on the ropes waiting for the bell," American Coach Ed Tapscott said of the final, frantic moments of the American-Georgetown game. "I just kept trying to do something to get Georgetown off my back."

"We got passive in the second half and went to a stall with about eight minutes to go. That's a pretty tough way to try and beat a team like Georgetown," Austin said.

Georgetown, 6-2, trailed 49-32 with 9:44 to play, but an 18-2 burst by the Hoyas cut the deficit to 51-50 with 5:02 left. Then Austin went to work.

He drove past 7-foot center Patrick Ewing to put American ahead 53-50. After a Ewing foul shot, Austin made two foul shots for a 55-51 Eagle advantage.

Driving to the basket again, Austin drew a foul on Ewing, who fouled out of the game with the 3:10 to go. Austin made both free throws to make it 57-51.

The Hoyas rallied once again, but it fell short as first Andre Adams and then Juan Jones each made the front end of a 1-and-1 free throw opportunity to seal the victory for American, now 4-1.

Mark Nickens scored 17 points to lead the Eagles, scoring attack. David Wingate had 24 for Georgetown.

David Russell scored 21 points as St. John's, now unbeaten after eight games, was never threatened after taking a 36-23 lead at halftime. The victory was the 16th in a row over Fordham for St. John's Coach Lou Carnesecca.

Charles Jones and Scooter McCray controlled the boards as Louisville manhandled South Alabama. Jones had 15 points and 15 rebounds and McCray 15 points and 10 rebounds for the Cardinals, who outscored South Alabama 18-2 over a 4:16 span in the first half to turn a 15-15 tie into a 33-17 advantage.

Lancaster Gordon added 18 points for Louisville.

Darrell Walker scored a career-high 35 points as Arkansas shook off a nine-day layoff to rip Alabama State. Walker hit 15 of 26 field goals and five of 11 free throws in registering the second-highest total for the Razorbacks since Sidney Moncrief scored 39 against Southern Mississippi in 1979.

Joe Kleine added 16 points for Arkansas on 7-for-7 shooting.

"Darrell Walker had a sensational night," Coach Eddie Sutton said. "He could have broken the 39 points had he not been careless underneath a couple of times and had he hit free throws. He not only scored, but had some great passes and rebounded well. It was the best performance he's had at Arkansas."

In other games, it was Niagara 71, Ohio U 69 in overtime; Georgia Tech 90, Alabama A&M 85; Mississippi 48, Mercer 40; Cincinnati 88, Indiana 83; DePaul 69, Northern Illinois 45; Georgia 75, Texas 54; Washington 76, West Washington 59; and Drake 102, Mankato State 62.

Foster, After Surgery, May Return In Month

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — South Carolina basketball coach could see limited coaching duty after a month if his recovery from quadruple coronary bypass surgery goes smoothly, says a university spokesman.

Foster, 52, suffered a heart attack Saturday during his team's 59-53 upset victory over Purdue. He underwent quadruple bypass surgery Wednesday morning, and a hospital spokesperson said early this morning he was in stable condition and "resting comfortably."

A member of the firm of surgeons who performed the bypass says Foster had multiple blood vessel disease. "He is a young and vigorous person, this is for his long-term well-being," said Dr. John Sutton.

The surgery at Providence Hospital took about four hours, according to USC Sports Information Director Tom Price, who said Foster was doing "as well as could be expected."

Doctors said Foster's moderate heart attack was caused by a clot they dissolved about midnight Saturday with the injection of enzymes into the blood. The clot reportedly caused 95 percent blockage of the artery. The need for further procedures was not discussed publicly at the time.

On Saturday, Foster complained of not feeling well before and during the game. Assistant coach Steve Steinwedel said Foster told him early in the second half that he wasn't feeling well. With about two minutes to go in the game, Foster said he would need to see a doctor as soon as the game was over.

Despite Having Only One Back From Last Year, 'Skins Rolling

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
ROBERSONVILLE — Despite the fact that only one legitimate starter and letterman returns to the Roanoke High School lineup, the Redskins are off to a 5-0 start and are 3-0 against Northeastern Conference foes.

Coach Claude Atkinson returns only 6-4 senior forward Ricky Highsmith off last year's 20-4 team that won the Northeastern Conference regular season and tournament championships before losing to Northampton in the first round of the district tournament. And that took an overtime to accomplish.

Joining him in this year's starting lineup are Donnie Wallace, a 6-3½ senior center; Greg Everett, a 6-2 senior forward; Spencer Bryant, a 5-7 senior guard, and Buck Duggins, a 6-0 sophomore guard.

Strictly speaking, Wallace could be called a returning starter, since he did open last year's season in a starting role. But an injury kept him sidelined most of the season — so much so that he didn't even earn a letter.

Making up the rest of the team are: Ricky Hines, 5-7 junior guard; Garrett Baker, 6-1 junior forward; Vinnie Boyd, 6-2 junior forward; Willie Congleton, 6-1 senior forward; Herman Bryant, 5-10 senior guard; Lyndale Daniels, 5-9 senior guard; and Marshall Highsmith, 6-1 junior forward.

Atkinson calls Hines his number one backcourt replacement and Baker his first choice in the forecourt.

"We don't have a lot of experience, and we're not big," the coach said. "But we've gotten the breaks so far. A lot of things are going in our direction. And we're playing fairly well defensive-wise."

Atkinson said that the Roanoke shooting has been sporadic. "In a couple of our games, we've shot in the 50 percent range, and in two others, we've only hit in the high 30's. We haven't been consistent. We've made some shots that we shouldn't have made, and we've missed on some that we shouldn't have missed."

"But I think our shooting will definitely come around with more experience."

Rebounding so far has been "a plus for us," Atkinson said. "We've outrebounded everyone we've played." Everett and Highsmith are averaging about eight rebounds a game each.

Atkinson feels that the Redskin defense has been good, both in zone and man-to-man coverage. "We'll be using more man as the season goes along. I feel we'll be a fairly good man-to-man team."

In the Northeastern Conference, Atkinson looks for Bertie to be a tough team, while Plymouth has gotten off to a big start. Plymouth, however, fell to the Redskins on Tuesday night, 59-55. "Washington is always going to be in there too," Atkinson said.

Still, he looks for his team to be up there with the leaders. "I just hope we can finish somewhere in the top four and go back to the districts," Atkinson said.

With the start the Redskins have gotten off to, their chances of getting back would have to appear pretty good at this point.

Experience Gives Lady Redskins Hope For Title

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
ROBERSONVILLE — With an experienced starting five, first year girls' basketball coach Robbie Calfee of Roanoke High School is looking for some good things. And except for the first two games of the season, he's liked what he's seen.

Roanoke's girls have gotten away to a 3-2 start, winning three in a row after losing the first two to non-conference foes. All three victories have come over Northeastern Conference opponents — the last over previously unbeaten Plymouth High School.

Three starters return from last year's 19-5 team that finished second in the regular season then won the conference tournament before losing in the first round of the district playoffs.

Back are Sheila Howell, a 5-4 senior guard; Mary Bland, a 5-7 senior forward and Dezella Jones, a 5-8 senior forward. Joining them are two letter winners, Cheryl Randolph, a 5-11 sophomore center, and Ginya Smith, a 5-3 junior guard. Together these five make up the current starting unit for the Lady Redskins.

There are six other players on the team. They include Gloria Duggins, 5-3 freshman guard; Ursella Bell, 5-1 sophomore guard; Theresa Brown, 5-7 junior forward; Patricia Alexander, 5-4 sophomore forward/guard; Marty Knox, a 5-3 sophomore guard; and Anissia Stanley, a 5-9 freshman forward.

"We've got good experience with our five starters," Calfee said. "They've all got good floor savvy. Brown has fairly good experience off the bench, and she's probably our number one reserve."

"Duggins is our top reserve in the backcourt. Although she's just a freshman, she's talented with the ball but has a lot of learning to do," Calfee said. "She averaged 25 points a game in junior high, and she's coming along well. She just has to adjust to learning to play with teammates who can do it too. She's been used to carrying the load herself."

The coach said that these seven players have been playing about equal time and carrying most of the playing time.

Shooting has been up and down for the Lady 'Skins. There have been good and bad nights — the worst in the opener against Ayden-Grifton when Roanoke fell behind by 14-0 as nothing would drop. "We were getting good shots, they just wouldn't fall for us."

"Everybody we've played has had big inside people and that's caused us some problem too," he said. "We've been a little intimidated. But we've got to learn not to worry about getting a shot blocked since generally we'll get fouled on the play."

Calfee rates the team's speed and quickness as one of its best assets. "We press from the word 'go,'" he said. "That won the game for us against Edenton the other night. Our fullcourt zone press has been effective for us."

Except for the Ayden-Grifton game, Calfee feels that the team's defense has been good. Rebounding has shown an improvement since the season got underway. "We're still learning how to block out and position ourselves."

As far as the Northeastern is concerned, Calfee notes that Tarboro was the pre-season pick in the conference. "They have a big girl who is pretty good. Plymouth is going to be strong too, so I'd have to say that it would be between Tarboro, Plymouth and us. Edenton has a pretty good team too and could come in there."

But with wins already over Edenton and Plymouth, Roanoke is off to a good start. But it won't be until after Christmas that they get a chance to test Tarboro.

COACHES' CORNER

By CHARLIE HARRISON
East Carolina Men's Basketball Coach

As the month of December approaches its end, the basketball season at ECU has just begun; yet, it continues as it began — on the road. It seems that we're always (as Willie Nelson's band troop) on the road again, but I'm not that excited to be on the road again. It's difficult to play away from home, but playing teams of the caliber of Duke, N.C. State, Samford and soon Southwestern Louisiana, George Mason and Virginia Tech makes the difficult life on the road even more difficult for our young Pirate basketball team.

Seven of our first nine games are played in front of unfriendly faces in unfriendly arenas. A quick indoctrination for a young team to say the least, but everyone must grow older — and our players have started to become of age basketball-wise. They had to!

Inexperience and youth usually take its toll on a basketball team — especially on the road. It's hard to gain confidence when playing in front of hostile crowds. Our team has played in front of three sell-out and very vocal crowds and "on the road again" we face two more post-season tournament participants from 1982 NCAA who have most of their team returning. Again, the Pirates expect and accept that their arenas will be filled with crowds pulling for the home-town team.

We begin our conference play with George Mason — "on the road again." They, too, are a very good team as they beat UNC-Charlotte very easily at UNC-C. Our league play continues with a home game against James Madison — a three year participant of the NCAA tournament play. The road is long! Still, I can see light at the end of the tunnel. At times, I have been completely overwhelmed by the competitive performance, execution and entertaining play of the ECU Pirate basketball team. We have no Ralph Sampson but to date we have shown pride and improvement. We have entertained the thousands who have watched us — even in defeat. I hope you'll show your support for these young men's efforts and improvements. Try it — you will like it. Even "Mike-y" would like it.

I wish you a joyous Holiday Season and if Santa is reading may he bring us a trick or two from his big bag to help us with a few W's and also — if I'm not being greedy — bring some of you fans into Minges on December 28th and January 8th to cheer for the Pirates (along with "Mike-y.")

Sheridan Says He Won't Leave

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP) — Football coach Dick Sheridan says he's decided against leaving Furman, where he's coached the last decade.

Sheridan, who has a 39-16-1 record at the Southern Conference School and four conference crowns in the last five years, has been mentioned as a candidate for head coaching jobs at several colleges in recent weeks.

"After talking in the past few days with my family, staff, supporters, athletic director and president, my

Ralph Out, Cavs Win

TOKYO (AP) — Top-ranked Virginia, playing without All-American center Ralph Sampson, came away with a 72-63 victory today over 14th-ranked Houston in the Suntry Ball College Basketball Classic.

Othell Wilson scored 14 of his 18 points in the first half to spark the Cavaliers to a 41-31 lead at the intermission.

The 7-foot 4-inch Sampson was sidelined with a stomach ailment.

Virginia upped its record to 7-0, while the Cougars fell to 3-2.

commitment to remain at Furman has been reinforced," he said in a Wednesday afternoon news release. "We will continue to do our best to give Furman a football program it can be proud of."

Sheridan was mentioned as a candidate for the head coaching jobs at South Carolina, North Carolina State, Army, Duke and Tulane, according to Monty Dutton, assistant sports information director at the school.

"There has been a lot of speculation in the last several weeks concerning various head coaching positions and myself," said Sheridan. "I want to re-emphasize that I have not applied for, nor sought, any of these positions."

"I have responded to the invitation of several schools to visit their campuses and discuss with their representatives the vacant football coaching positions. As I have stated many times, I am happy at Furman and have no desire to leave here."

Sheridan has been head coach at Furman for five years after serving as a Furman assistant coach for five years before that. He has won the conference title outright or shared the title every year since he took over the program, except 1979.

Bear's Boys Are All Over

By The Associated Press
In 1968, Jackie Sherrill and hundreds of other aspiring coaches were circulating at a meeting of the American Football Coaches Association looking for a difficult-to-land job as an assistant at a major college.

"I wasn't doing too well and I was just standing there," Sherrill recalled Wednesday. "Then somebody came up to me and said 'Coach Bryant is looking for you. He wants to help you get a job.' Can you imagine how it made me feel to know that someone like him wanted to help me?"

Paul "Bear" Bryant announced his retirement Wednesday, but his legacy will live on for decades in Bear's Boys, the long list of college and professional coaches who have either played for him or coached with him at Maryland, Kentucky, Texas A&M and, of course, at Alabama.

One of those, of course, is Ray Perkins, who is leaving the New York Giants of the National Football League to succeed Bryant at Alabama.

Another is Sherrill, who left a potential national champion at the University of Pittsburgh last season to take the job at Texas A&M for the biggest salary in college coaching history — a six-year deal at an estimated $287,000 a year in salary and fringe benefits.

There is Bum Phillips of the New Orleans Saints, Dan Ford of defending national champion Clemson, Charlie Pell of Florida. And on and on, all grown men who still call Bryant "Coach," with a capital C, who still feel apprehensive about talking to him.

"I'm 41 and I still feel the same awe for Coach as I did when I was 18," says Pell.

Howard Schnellenberger of the University of Miami probably spoke for all of them Wednesday when he said:

"Paul Bryant had more effect on the game of football than any man ever to coach or play the game... the American football scene will not be the same without him."

What many of Bear's boys talk about are his many faces.

On the one hand, there the Bryant whom his disciples persist in calling "a man's man;" he of the tough, physical, craggy exterior that led Bum Phillips of the New Orleans Saints to call him "the John Wayne of coaches."

"He kicked me in the pants when I needed it," recalls Ken Stabler, once Bryant's quarterback, now Phillips'. It was good for me. It was a lesson learned."

On the other hand, there was the Bryant whom Sherrill calls "lovable and compassionate." Like Sherrill, who played for Bryant from 1963-1965, the coaches say that were it not for Bryant they would certainly be in another line of work.

There is Larry Laceywell of Arkansas State, who comes from Bryant's hometown of Fordyce, Ark., and who has known Bryant for most of his 45 years. Laceywell remembers how Bryant quietly paid his room and board during the two years he served as a graduate assistant coach at Alabama. And yet Laceywell still says:

"I've always been a little scared of him."

There is Al Kincaid of Wyoming who grew up in Tuscaloosa, literally in the anteroom of Bryant's kingdom. When he couldn't fit him into the Alabama program, Bryant helped Kincaid win a scholarship to Virginia Tech, then brought him back as a graduate assistant, the position from which many of the disciples sprang.

"We were playing Penn State in the Sugar Bowl,"

Kincaid recalls. "I was low man on the totem pole and I needed a job the next year. He gave me the scouting report on Penn State to talk about. I'm convinced he gave it to me so I'd get some publicity, get some exposure and have a better shot at a job."

And there is, finally, the Bryant who was one of the first southern coaches to recruit blacks.

"I think people felt that as long as he was doing it, it was fine," says the nation's foremost black coach, Eddie Robinson of Grambling, who by 1985 could surpass Bryant's 322 victories.

But that was just another facet of his personality. "I think what I remember most about Coach Bryant was his flexibility," says Steve Sloan, the new head coach at Duke and the middle man between Joe Namath and Stabler in Bryant's triumvirate of great '60s quarterbacks.

To which Sherrill adds: "He could just adjust to the mood of his players. Any kind of players."

Seaver Set To Return To The New York Mets

NEW YORK (AP) — He epitomized the youth and sense of destiny that characterized those Amazing New York Mets of 1969 and the "You Gotta Believe" team of 1973.

And, in 1977, he epitomized the frustration and sense of betrayal felt by Mets fans as the team plunged from splendor to squalor.

Today, with his return to New York after 5½ years in Cincinnati, Tom Seaver may again herald a transition period for the New York Mets. At least, that's what his faithful following of fans hopes.

The Mets scheduled a news conference for today to make the announcement. The trade, made subject to approval at last week's Winter Meetings, sends young right-hander Charlie Puleo and two minor leaguers to Cincinnati for Seaver.

Seaver, a three-time Cy

Young winner, began his career with the Mets in 1967, when he won 16 games and lost 13 with a team that lost 101 games. Two years later, Seaver was at the forefront of one of team sport's most "Amazing" stories. He won 25, lost 7; the Mets won 100, lost 62. Seaver won his first Cy Young Award, and the Mets won their only World Series.

In 1973, as the Mets won the National League pennant and reliever Phog McGraw coined the phrase "You Gotta Believe," Seaver again was named Cy Young winner with a record of 19-10. Seaver won his third Cy Young in 1975 with a 22-9 mark.

But, after compiling a 14-11 mark in 1976 as the Mets continued their slide into oblivion, New York made The Trade. It has been characterized as the worst deal the Mets ever have made. They sent Seaver to the Cincinnati Reds on June 15, 1977 for pitcher Pat Zachry, infielder Doug Flynn and outfielders Steve Henderson and Dan Norman. Only Zachry, who was 6-9 with a 4.05 ERA last year, remains with the club.

Seaver compiled a 21-6 record in the season during which he was traded, and he went on to post records of 16-14, 16-6, 10-8 and 14-2 with the Reds until his horrendous 5-13 campaign of 1982, during which he complained of arm trouble for the first time in his career.

New York General Manager Frank Cashen and Reds President Dick Wagner announced that they had agreed in principle to the trade during baseball's winter meetings last week in Honolulu. It remained only for the Mets to OK Seaver's medical report and to make a contract with the 38-year-old pitcher before the deal was consummated.

Garvey Is Near Choice

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The race to sign coveted free-agent slugger Steve Garvey has reportedly boiled down to two teams — the San Diego Padres and the Chicago Cubs.

Garvey and his agent, Jerry Kapstein, met separately Wednesday with representatives of the Cubs, Padres and San Francisco Giants. But the Giants have dropped out of the bidding, according to the San Diego Union.

Garvey, who has been non-committal for two weeks while studying contract offers, has presented a counterproposal to the Cubs and Padres, and both teams are studying the plan.

According to newspaper reports, the 33-year-old former Los Angeles Dodgers first baseman is asking for a five-year package worth $8 million.

Gary Carter of the Montreal Expos and Dave Winfield of the New York Yankees are reportedly the highest-paid players in baseball with contracts that pay them some $2 million a year.

The Cubs are thought to have offered Garvey a five-year contract worth $6.75 million, while the Padres are believed to have tendered a $6-million contract, which also includes some "creative" incentives.

Garvey, Kapstein and his attorney, Bob Teaff, met with Dallas Green, the Cubs general manager, and Cubs President Andrew McKenna Wednesday morning in La Jolla.

McKenna flew back to Chicago after the session, while Green remained in the San Diego area.

TANK McNAMARA

"We want our lawyers to check it (Garvey's counterproposal) over," Green told the Chicago Tribune. "That's why Mr. McKenna went home, to check out their proposal. I told Kapstein I'd get back to them tomorrow (today)."

Ballard Smith, president of the Padres, met with Garvey, Kapstein and Teaff for about three hours Wednesday night.

"It was of a nature that we'll need time to study it," Smith said after receiving Garvey's counterproposal. "I'm disappointed that we couldn't make a deal; we'll talk to them again tomorrow (today)."

Garvey went through the free agent re-entry draft last month and was selected by nine teams. The 12-year National League veteran became a free agent after failing to come to terms with the Dodgers. He reportedly rejected a Los Angeles offer of $5 million over four years.

Over the last nine seasons, the right-hander has averaged 21 home runs a year and has a lifetime batting average of .301.

He was named the National League's Most Valuable Player in 1974 and has played in 1,107 consecutive games, 10 short of Billy Williams' NL record.

Fletcher Sentenced To Prison In Jamscam Trial

By ELISSA McCRARY
Associated Press Writer
CONCORD, N.C. (AP) —
Former state Jaycees president Johnny Lee Fletcher was sentenced to three to five years in prison Wednesday after a Superior Court jury found him guilty of helping divert charity funds from jelly sales to pay for fake Jaycees chapters. Presiding Judge Donald L. Smith also fined Fletcher $5,000 and court costs. "I could not believe you took the stand and characterized your year (as president) as successful," Smith told Fletcher before sentencing him. "Your year was an absolute fraud.

"I still don't know why the organization itself hasn't been indicted," Smith said. Fletcher could have been sentenced to a maximum of 10 years in prison. Testimony in the eight-day trial showed that 61 of 156 new Jaycees chapters created during Fletcher's presidency in 1977 and 1978 were bogus. Fletcher testified Tuesday that he didn't know money donated for charitable causes was being used to pay membership dues in the fake chapters. Immediately following sentencing, defense attorney Wesley Grant said he would appeal the case.

The seven-woman, five-man jury deliberated four hours before returning the verdict at 3:05 p.m. Wednesday. The panel found Fletcher guilty of one charge of being an accessory to misapplication of $10,000 in charity funds in January 1978.

As Smith read the verdict, Fletcher and his wife and two teen-age sons, who were sitting behind him in court, stared straight ahead. But as Smith pronounced the sentence, Fletcher's wife, Judy, and his sons, Chris and Rich, began sobbing. "I wish you would look at your wife and family and see what you've done to them," Smith told Fletcher.

Fletcher will remain free on $20,000 bond pending the appeal. Fletcher, 41, was charged with misapplying $21,400 in charitable funds. He could have been sentenced to up to 50 years in prison.

He originally was charged in four two-count indictments with conspiracy to misapply and misapplication of funds totaling $26,480.50. However, Smith dismissed three of the charges earlier in the trial.

The trial was scheduled to be heard last week in a specially called session of Cabarrus County Superior Court. But the case was continued into this week when all the testimony couldn't be heard in one week.

Two other former Jaycees officials, Robert Rushton of Gray, Ga., and Thomas Alsop of Concord, were to be tried along with Fletcher. Smith said their trials would be scheduled later.

Two former Jaycees presidents, Maurice H. Wilson and J. Harold Herring, who have already pleaded guilty in the case and testified for the state in Fletcher's trial, will be sentenced after Rushton's and Alsop's trials, Smith said.

During Fletcher's trial, prosecutor Lester Chalmers alleged that Fletcher created fictitious chapters to win national awards. Fletcher won a free trip to the Jaycees' world conference in 1978 for setting a national record for new chapters.

Defense attorneys contended that Fletcher didn't know anything was done wrong during his year as president until a meeting of former Jaycees presidents in 1980.

In the trial, Wilson testified that he and Fletcher conspired to take $10,000 in proceeds from Jaycees jelly sales and use the money to pay membership fees in fake chapters. He said he discussed taking the money with Fletcher in July 1977 and that they used the funds to pay for fake chapters in January 1978.

The scandal surfaced in the spring of 1980. A probe by the State Bureau of Investigation showed that nearly $250,000 in Jaycees charity funds had been misapplied.

Most of the money was raised through the sale of grape jelly to benefit the N.C. Burn Center in Chapel Hill, and the case was dubbed "Jamscam."

'Trapped' Into OK For A Pay Raise

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two North Carolina congressmen say they were trapped by procedural maneuvers into voting for a 15 percent pay raise for themselves.

Both U.S. Reps. Charles G. Rose III, D-N.C., and Charles O. Whitley, D-N.C., said their votes do not mean they support the pay raise, which passed 303-109.

The crucial vote on the raise, they said, was a 208-208 tie in which both of them tried to stop the $9,138 raise. That tie was broken by Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill, D-Mass., who voted to preserve the $9,138 hike.

The pay increase was part of an appropriations bill to permit federal agencies to continue operating after their funding expires at midnight Friday. The original bill included a 27 percent raise and the only alternative to that was an amendment by Rep. Vic Fazio, D-Calif., for a 15 percent increase.

Rose and Whitley said they voted for the 15 percent increase because to do otherwise would have amounted to supporting the 27 percent hike. House and Senate members, who have given themselves one 5.5 percent pay hike since 1977, now receive annual salaries of $60,662.

Fazio's amendment was followed by a second vote on a proposal from Rep. Bob Traxler, D-Mich., which would have retained the present salary.

Rose and Whitley joined 95 other House members who voted for the 15 percent hike and then voted unsuccessfully to reimpose the previous pay cap.

"There was no other alternative," Whitley said of his first vote. "I voted for the lower cap instead of leaving the higher one in place."

Whitley, who has been elected to his fourth term, has repeatedly stated during his campaigns that he would not vote for a pay raise to take effect during a term for which he has already been elected.

"There's no way with 10.8 percent unemployment that we can justify giving congress a salary increase," said Michael Mills, an aide to Rose.

Greenville Motel Is Sold

The Olde London Inn on Memorial Drive has been sold by the John Yancey Corp. to Elbert Pittman and his wife Hilda. Records at the Register of Deeds' office indicate the motel, built in 1970, was sold for $1.3 million.

Pittman, a Goldsboro native, worked for the John Yancey Corp. for about 13 years before he purchased the local motel in November.

He began his motel career here in 1970 as assistant manager of the Olde London Inn. Three months later he moved to Newport News as manager of a Yancey motel there, and for about 10 years has been a regional manager for the John Yancey Corp.

"We want to be part of Greenville," Pittman said.

He said 70 of the motel's 132 rooms are now closed for renovation — new carpet, new wallpaper, new furniture. The facility, which has had a number of permanent residents in the past, will be operated "strictly as a motel" when the $300,000 renovation program is completed, Pittman said.

Council Hires Director

The North Carolina Council on Alcoholism has employed James Earl Ayers as executive director.

Ayers has been employed by the Walter B. Jones Alcohol Rehabilitation Center, Greenville, for the past four years. A graduate of East Carolina University with a degree in social work and concentration in alcohol and drug abuse, he and his wife, Claudia Kepler Ayers, live in Conetoe with their children.

The Council on Alcoholism is the only state volunteer organization focusing its efforts on prevention, education, treatment and rehabilitation in the alcoholism field.

Christmas Expressions

The YPHA of Holy Trinity United Holy Church on Douglas Avenue will present a program of Christmas expressions entitled "Glad Tidings" Saturday at 7 p.m.

The program will feature Christmas poems, readings, prayers and musical selections as the Christmas story is told. YPHA President Wanda Kay Jones will narrate the program.

Annual Tour Scheduled Sunday

The third annual East Main Street Old House Christmas Tour is scheduled for Sunday from 1-5 p.m. in Washington, according to Stuart Everett, chairman of the tour.

The tour will begin at the Diamond House, 245 E. Second St., and end with the Woolard House, 705 E. Main St., where refreshments will be served. All the houses included in the tour were built at the turn of the century.

An addition to this year's tour is an interpretive liturgical ballet, under the direction of Christina Williams, to be performed at St. Peter's Episcopal Church at 3 p.m.

Tickets cost $2 and are on sale at Washington stores and will also be available Sunday at the first house of the tour.

Cleaning Firm Entered

A break-in at Stadium Cleaners at 205 E. 10th St. was reported at 7:01 a.m. today, Police Chief Glenn Cannon said.

Cannon said thieves entered the building through a window and took an undetermined amount of clothes. An investigation of the incident was under way.

Christmas Blues Is Concepts Topic

The Christmas blues, a state of mind that takes most of the joy out of the holiday season, is the topic for "ECU Concepts" Sunday at 8 a.m. on WOOW Radio.

Dr. James Mathis, chairman of psychiatry at the ECU School of Medicine, will discuss why some people feel depressed over Christmas. He will also suggest ways to cope with the problem.

"ECU Concepts" is a 15-minute weekly program produced by ECU. James Rees of the department of drama and speech is host.

Girl Scout Director Named

Judy Hunter was appointed executive director of the Coastal Carolina Girl Scout Council effective Wednesday.

A native of Kentucky, she joined the Coastal Carolina staff at the Goldsboro Service Center in August 1978 as director of field services. She previously worked with the Kentuckiana Girl Scout Council for seven years in several capacities.

Tough Law For Drunk Drivers

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio's new drunken driving law provides a mandatory three-day jail sentence for first offenders and suspension of a driver's license for up to three years.

The law, effective March 16, also says a 0.1 percent blood-alcohol level is "conclusive proof" of drunkenness, while the current law says that level only provides a presumption of intoxication.

The new measure also authorizes a police officer to confiscate the license of any drunken driver.

$2 Million In Bag Discovered 'Gone'

MIAMI (AP) — A locked canvas bag containing $2 million in cash and checked as luggage was discovered missing from an Eastern Airlines flight bound from New York to Peru, officials said.

The money was being shipped by Republic National Bank of New York to Lima and was accompanied by a bank courier, said FBI special agent Joseph Corless.

A second bag containing $2.5 million arrived safely in Santiago, Chile, aboard the same flight, investigators said Wednesday.

Federal agents are investigating whether the money was stolen or whether the bag was lost at Miami International Airport and mistakenly loaded onto another flight.

"If it was lost, we haven't found it yet," said Eastern spokesman James Ashlock.

The courier, whom investigators would not identify, rode in a passenger seat but checked the canvas bags as luggage. In Miami, he got off the plane to check the money in the baggage compartment.

The courier told investigators that although cargo workers wouldn't allow him into the actual loading area, they displayed the pouch for him from a distance during the Miami stopover.

Ashlock said the flight was an L-1011 that arrived in Miami shortly after midnight Monday and took off again for Lima and Santiago.

"We carry these money shipments all the time," said Ashlock.

A Republican National Bank spokesman told WTVJ-TV here that shipping large amounts of money by plane is routine and the money was insured.

The plane returned to Miami on Wednesday afternoon and FBI agents photographed the cargo hold. They would not comment on what, if anything, they found.

SURVIVED ORDEAL
MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet airliner made a forced landing on a mountain in Far Eastern Siberia on Dec. 5, but those aboard survived the landing and five days marooned in a blizzard, Pravda reported Wednesday.

Researchers said in a report published today that the transfer of genes from rats into mice resulted in animals up to twice their normal size. The genetic engineering development could be applied to farm animals, they said.

The research done by scientists from four institutions shows that cross-species genetic manipulation can have a major effect on subsequent generations, they say.

In a report published in Nature, a British science journal, researchers say the resulting big mice are visual examples of the impact of planning genetic change.

Similar genetic alterations have been accomplished in past research with bacteria, flies and mammals, but the results have been subtle. This work mostly involved passing on the ability to make enzymes or other chemicals that are noticeable only through laboratory measurements.

"We wanted to make changes that you could see, changes that were obvious," said Dr. Ralph L. Brinster of the University of Pennsylvania School of Veterinary Medicine, where the work was done.

Dr. Richard D. Palmiter of the University of Washington in Seattle, another collaborator, said the researchers "essentially created a genetic disease comparable to gigantism in humans."

Palmiter said the new mice model may be useful in studying gigantism, the rare human disease that results in abnormal growth. "Another important goal is to see if you can make it work in species other than mice," he continued.

Although it would be more difficult, said the researchers, it may be possible to apply this technique to increase the size of food animals as a supplement to traditional breeding methods.

"The implicit possibility is to use this technology to stimulate rapid growth of commercially valuable animals," said the report. "Benefit would presumably accrue from a shorter production time and possibly from increased efficiency of food utilization as well as immediate milk production."

The researchers took the gene that produces growth hormone in the pituitary gland of rats and combined it with part of a mouse gene. Growth hormone is a major factor controlling the growth and size of mammals.

This gene combination made of deoxyribonucleic acid (DNA), the basic substance of heredity, then was injected into fertilized mouse eggs and the eggs were put into female mice to continue their development.

From the 170 eggs inserted into foster mothers, 21 mice developed and seven of these produced abnormal amounts of growth hormone in their livers. These mice showed different levels of the hormone, indicating varying amounts of the transferred genes had been incorporated into the animals' normal DNA.

"Growth hormone levels in some of the transgenic mice were up to 800-fold higher than in normal mice, resulting in animals nearly twice the weight of their unaffected littermates," said the study. And one of the mice transmitted the combined gene to 10 of 19 of its offspring, suggesting that the new gene was stably integrated into the animals' hereditary material, said the report.

Other researchers on the project are Dr. Robert Hammer and Myrna Trumbauer of the University of Pennsylvania, Dr. Michael G. Rosenfeld of the University of California at San Diego and Drs. Neal C. Birnberg and Ronald M. Evans of the Salk Institute for Biological Studies in San Diego.

The work was sponsored by the National Institutes of Health, the National Science Foundation and the Howard Hughes Medical Institute in Seattle.

Billed As Finale For Rock Group

RICHFIELD, Ohio (AP) — For what could be the last time, an American audience listened to Roger Daltrey open a concert with the rock anthem "My Generation."

Some 18,500 fans crowded into the Coliseum on Wednesday night to see what was billed as the final U.S. concert in the British rock group's 17-year history.

Peter Dinklage, guitarist and chief songwriter, said this week that the group might record another album or two before disbanding.

"I expected it to be a lot tougher," Dinklage said in a radio interview. "I expected more flak (about the decision to stop touring) from the fans and the media. ... In actual fact, we've been treated very sympathetically."

Watch the cards your opponents play. The story they tell can often salvage a seemingly doomed contract.

North-South bid normally to four spades. Of passing interest was North's decision to raise to four spades rather than rebid no trump. South had shown an unbalanced hand with his spade rebid, so there was no reason for North to prefer no trump with all his values in one suit only.

West led the king of clubs, on which East started an echo with the jack. After cashing the ace of clubs as well, West shifted to the jack of hearts. Declarer noted with interest that East followed to this trick with the queen. It might seem that declarer's chances for game were not overly sanguine — the only hope for a 3-3 heart distribution had all but vanished because of the way the play had developed. It seemed that declarer would have to lose two heart tricks in addition to the two club tricks already banked by the defenders.

Declarer won the king of hearts and started to draw trumps. His prospects brightened when West showed out on the second trump. If the defenders had carded honestly, and there was no reason to suppose otherwise, the contract was now a sure bet. South cashed the ace of diamonds and one more high trump, then led the ace of hearts in case East had been unblocking with a doubleton queen.

Had East ruffed the ace of hearts, he would have been forced to return a diamond, thereby allowing South to discard his two heart losers on dummy's high diamonds. So East sluffed a diamond, but he was merely postponing the inevitable. Declarer exited with his low trump, and now there was no way for East to escape his fate. Declarer sacrificed a trump trick he did not have to lose, and gained in exchange two diamond tricks that he apparently had no way to cash.

No Ad-Libbing By Marty Ingels As Voice Of 'Pac-Man' Tonight

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The next time some critic starts harping that network television executives live in never-never land, remember this story from Marty Ingels, the voice of "Pac-Man," ABC's Saturday morning cartoon show.

"We were taping one day, and I ad-libbed the phrase 'pacapacawooow,'" Ingels said. "It was really an innocuous thing, but the director stopped everything and asked me to repeat it. I said, 'Pacapacawooow,' and before I knew it, the director and some other people were huddling in the corner."

"Then they were calling New York to check out 'pacapacawooow.'" The executives there did some more heavy thinking before they threw it out. They told me: 'No more ad-libbing, Ingels.'"

Tonight, when Pac-Man comes to prime time in ABC's "Christmas Comes to Pacland," the popular video game character won't say anything unscripted. Nor will he sound like he does in the arcades. The Federal Communications Commission forbids commercial sounds on TV programs.

When the talent-hunters at Hanna-Barbera were casting the voices behind Pacland's dots and dashes, they couldn't find Pac-Man. Ingels, a comedian who now heads an international celebrity brokerage agency, was looking for work for his client, actor Robert Culp.

"I was calling Universal Pictures, and I misdialed by two numbers and got Hanna-Barbera," Ingels said. "I asked for casting and got Gordon Hunt. He said there was an opening for Pac-Man. I thought he was talking about a luggage company. But I said Culp would be perfect for it anyway. Hunt said no, that I was the one with the crazy voice."

Ingels, who was in the sit-com, "I'm Dickens-He's Fenster," in the early 1960s, comes by his gravelly voice naturally.

"It's always been peculiar," he said. "When I was a kid, doctors were always looking for growths on my throat." They didn't find anything, and Ingels found that his distinctiveness had some fringe benefits.

"It turned women on, fascinated babies, and infuriated animals," he said. "When I get a cold, though, I sound like Orson Welles."

Ingels, who suffered a nervous breakdown after the cancellation of "I'm Dickens-He's Fenster," enjoyed returning to the limelight.

"I love to be well known," he said. "I have all the money I want. It's love that I need."

The comic's alter-ego is a combination of Popeye (power pellets make him chomping strong), Captain Marvel, William Bendix, Fred Flintstone and himself.

"ABC wanted light, uncomplicated, total escape," he said. The network also wanted animated competition against "The Smurfs" on NBC. "Pac-Man" has overtaken "The Smurfs" in the 30 minutes the shows are head to head, but NBC remains the top-rated network on Saturday morning.

Ingels said ABC won't identify him as Pac-Man in the credits, for fear that he'll get too big and become indispensable to the program. If he had more power over the character and the show, Ingels would make changes.

"My fight is with the writers," he said. "I want to build the family relationships, rather than have Pac-Man always fighting ghosts. The Christmas special has more emotional moments than the Saturday show."

The mentality of Saturday morning programming mitigates against anything real, creative or serious. "Pac-Man can't even kiss his wife," Ingels said.

But, if he wanted to, he could hit her with a 2-by-4, and nobody would get hurt. It seems the unreal hard knocks on Saturday mornings never have any physical consequence or emotional impact.

"It's Tom and Jerry violence," said Ingels. "There's no death, and the ghosts always come back. What do you expect, 'Sesame Street'?"

Feels No Need, Yet, To Remarry

NEW YORK (AP) — Mary Tyler Moore, divorced from Grant Tinker after 19 years, says she feels no need to remarry "but I never say 'never.'"

Miss Moore said the marriage broke up because "relationships evolve and go through changes. Nothing is forever."

The comedian and dramatic actress, in an interview published Wednesday in the January issue of McCall's magazine, said she doesn't want "the foreverness of marriage."

"And all that paperwork when it turns out not to be forever ... why go through it?" she added.

Miss Moore, whose name has been linked with multimillionaire Sir Gordon White and New York public relations executive Ed Menken, conceded that she would like a man in her life.

"I have wants and desires, certainly ... but not somebody who was my tall, strong leader. I would like him to be strong, but strong enough to let go."

Miss Moore said she has made major changes in her life since the divorce.

One was the move from a Hollywood mansion to a small apartment on New York's Upper West Side, where she said she has kept a few old things — "Something's left of my former life" — but has done a complete redecorating job.

Bob Hope Plans Lebanon Trip

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Comedian Bob Hope won't be home for Christmas if he gets his way. Instead, he'll be entertaining U.S. troops in Lebanon if doctors can treat his recurrent eye problems, his publicist says.

Hope, who has an eye inflammation, checked into New York Hospital late Wednesday for two days of examinations.

Cary Grant To Narrate Show

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Cary Grant will narrate a half-hour religious television program featuring his late friend Princess Grace of Monaco, who acted as hostess.

"The Nativity," completed about three months before the princess's death, will be broadcast during the Christmas season on 160 stations, producer Frank O'Connor said.

In his voice-over tribute, Grant says: "The film you're about to see was completed just before the late Princess Grace of Monaco died. Indeed, it was the last film she was to make, and as such becomes a fitting memorial."

Princess Grace died Sept. 14 in a car crash on the French Riviera.

Wrecks Cause Heavy Damage

An estimated $5,650 damage resulted from three traffic collisions investigated Wednesday by Greenville police.

Officers said heaviest damage resulted from a 5:32 p.m. collision on Greenville Boulevard, 1500 feet east of the Hooker Road, involving cars driven by Dorothy Evans Hudson of Route 2, Winterville, and Clarence Ray Holland of Route 2, Winterville.

Police, who charged Holland with failing to reduce his speed enough to avoid an accident, set damage at $1,800 to the Hudson car and $450 to the Holland vehicle.

An estimated $2,000 damage resulted to a truck driven by Michael Wynn Bissett of Route 8, Greenville, when the vehicle struck the curb on Fifth Street, 45 feet east of the Latham Street intersection about 7:55 a.m. and overturned.

No charges were made in connection with the incident. Cars driven by Nina Ellen Bland of 418 W. Fifth St. and William Samuel Colt of 1801 Fairview Way collided about 3:25 p.m. at the intersection of IThird and Pitt streets, resulting in an estimated $500 damage to the Bland car and $900 damage to the Colt vehicle.

Could Impound Town Property

CLARKTON, N.C. (AP) - The town of Clarkton may have its police cruisers, garbage trucks, back hoe or pickup truck impounded by the federal government if it does not come up with $16,528 in legal fees it owes.

The legal fees were ordered following two trials in U.S. District Court earlier this year in which Clarkton was found guilty of violating the U.S. Fair Housing Act by refusing to accept 50 units of low-income housing.

Following the trial, Judge Albert Bryan Jr. ordered Clarkton to accept the public housing and pay legal fees to attorney Jim Walls of Lower Cape Fear Legal Services.

In a writ of judgment delivered Nov. 18, the town was ordered to pay the money. Two writs of execution demanding payment of legal fees were filed against the town Monday with the U.S. Clerk of Court's office in Wilmington.

The writs of execution demand payment or forfeiture of property.

Clarkton owns two police cruisers, two garbage trucks, a back hoe, two fire trucks, a road grader, a flat bed and a pick up truck, according to Town Clerk Myrtle Tate. Aside from rolling stock, the town owns the town hall and a water and sewage treatment plant along with assorted tracts of land.

If the vehicles, which the town clerk says are "pretty old and beatup," don't satisfy the bill, the town could find the U.S. government auctioning off the town hall to cover the difference.

And Clarkton Mayor Dwight Fort said the town doesn't have the money in its $219,000 budget to pay the fees.

"I don't know what I'll do when they come demanding money, this is the first I've heard about it," Fort said Wednesday. "I suppose they could take our cruisers and trucks because we just don't have it."

"We'll have to cross that bridge when we come to it," he said.

Eddy Sigmon, chief deputy of the U.S. Marshal's office in Raleigh, says he's a little uncertain of how to proceed with serving the papers.

"I have never had to impound from a town before," Sigmon said. "If someone doesn't pay, we can pretty much grab anything that belongs to them."

Sigmon said it is unlikely any papers will be served until after Christmas.

Teamsters' Boss Convicted, Urged To Step Down

By SHARON COHEN
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Teamsters President Roy L. Williams, convicted with four others of trying to bribe Sen. Howard Cannon, should "step down immediately," says a dissident leader of the nation's largest union.

Williams, 67, and his co-defendants, whose conversations were taped by the FBI, were found guilty Wednesday of conspiring to bribe the Nevada Democrat with a lucrative Las Vegas land deal in return for his help to defeat a trucking deregulation bill in Congress.

Cannon was not charged and testified for the defense, while the bill eventually passed with his support. But the prosecutor in the case said the verdict came because of a "lack of credibility" by Williams and the senator.

Williams, who becomes the third Teamsters president convicted of a federal crime in the past 25 years, and who called the charges a "damn lie," said he will appeal. Under federal law, he can keep his job until appeals are exhausted.

Attorneys for the other defendants, including a reputed organized crime figure, also vowed to appeal the convictions, which carry maximum sentences of up to 55 years in prison and $29,000 in fines.

U.S. District Judge Prentice H. Marshall set sentencing for Feb. 10.

The defendants were each convicted of one count of conspiracy and interstate travel to further bribery, and nine counts of wire fraud.

Gary Shapiro, prosecutor for a Justice Department strike force set up in the Chicago area, said he believed the government had convinced jurors of a conspiracy, "but if we didn't, their (Cannon's and Williams') lack of credibility was decisive."

"I think the jury concluded if they were lying, the only reason they could be lying was because of their guilt," Shapiro said.

Under federal law, a union official convicted of a crime may hold office until appeals are exhausted.

However, Ken Paff, national organizer in Detroit of an 8,000-member dissident faction, Teamsters for a Democratic Union, said the verdict shows "Williams is not worthy of the position of president of our union. We believe Williams should step down immediately..."

Officials at Teamsters international headquarters in Washington all declined to comment on the convictions. Cannon, who last month said publicly about the case contributed to his failure to win re-election, also declined to comment.

Jackie Presser, a Teamsters vice president based in Cleveland, said he was "dismayed" with the verdict. "I'm hopeful that the appeals process will vindicate them," he said.

Cannon and Williams were the only defense witnesses in the eight-week trial. Both said they couldn't remember many events surrounding Cannon's bidding for the Las Vegas land.

Chief prosecutor Douglas Roller had said Williams displayed an "incredible lack of recollection."

Prosecutors charged the five conspired to bribe Cannon with exclusive rights to buy the land at a reduced price in return for his help in scuttling trucking deregulation. Cannon and his neighbors were allegedly interested in buying the land to prevent adjacent high-rise development, although another group eventually purchased the property.

Defense attorneys argued the defendants only assured Cannon he would get a fair chance to bid for the land.

Both Cannon and Williams denied any bribe had been offered or accepted when they and Allen Dorfman, 59, a millionaire insurance executive and former consultant to the Teamsters Central States Pension Fund, met in 1979.

Roller said Wednesday that about 50 conversations wiretapped by the FBI, the heart of the government's case, were very damaging.

The other defendants were Thomas O'Malley, 46, a pension fund trustee; Andrew Massa, 65, a former trustee; and Joseph "Joey the Clown" Lombardo, 53, a reputed Chicago crime syndicate figure.

After the verdicts, Marshall raised Dorfman's bond to $5 million and Lombardo's to $2.5 million and gave them until 4 p.m. Friday to come up with the money. The other defendants remain free on recognizance bonds.

The verdict came moments after the jury began its fifth day of deliberations. The panel, sequestered two weeks ago after some members received crank calls, deliberated for 26 hours over four days.

Today's Hard Times Chronicled By The Pop Music

By YARDENA ARAR
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — They still sing of love and sex, but some pop lyricists are now setting the grimmer facts of contemporary life — unemployment, poverty and loss of hope in the American dream — to music. Rock has caught up with the recession.

"Well, we're living here in Allentown, and they're closing all the factories down" go the opening lines to a song from Billy Joel's new album, "The Nylon Curtain," and he isn't the only one singing the hard times blues these days.

Recession rock runs the gamut from New Wave to rhythm and blues. Most of the songs differ from protest songs of the 1960s. They don't blame government or demand action to cure the problems, but rather are statements of disillusionment, of something gone awry.

Joel's song, "Allentown," is one of the more striking, with a factory-whistle prelude and a jaunty, uptempo arrangement that contrast with lyrics which talk of unemployment lines and frustrated expectations.

Joel said he'd been toying with the melody and the idea of a song about Allentown for 10 years.

"I didn't know what the subject matter was going to be about until the last year or so, reading about the problems of the steel industry," he said. "The great American blue-collar promise that the postwar kids were raised on isn't there...I really don't know anyone who is untouched by what's happening economically."

Joel said that despite the troubled tone of most of the song, he doesn't take an entirely pessimistic view of the country's future. The last line of the song repeats "We're living here in Allentown" — in other words, Joel says, "we're going to stick it out. This is our heritage, this is our tradition, we're going to make it."

Richard "Dimples" Fields, who last year caused a ruckus in rhythm and blues circles with "She's Got Papers on Me," a song about an errant husband and his scolding wife, is back with "People Treat You Funky When You Ain't Got No Money," a litany of complaints about being poor.

In contrast to some other songwriters, Fields doesn't hesitate to blame government for his problems: "Reaganomics, Reaganomics, mean ghetto-nomics," he sings, "...What happened to the chicken in every pot?"

There's also no optimism in "Bread and Butter" by the Waitresses, a popular New Wave band.

The voice speaking in "Bread and Butter" is clearly that of a young, hip suburbanite: "How do you like your new house? How do you like your new job? You say you never got them? No kidding, me neither."

Waitresses guitarist-songwriter Chris Butler says he was inspired by the band's frequent trips to Detroit, where on each successive visit more and more auto plants were closed. The song took on its middle-class tone because he was writing for lead singer Patty Donahue, whose character in the group's other songs is highly articulate — and usually able to cope with her problems.

"There's no resolution on this one," Butler said. "The character is upset. The character feels cheated. The character feels that things that have been promised have not been delivered. And lots of people feel that way."

The latest Bruce Springsteen LP, "Nebraska," delivers a disturbing portrait of America through sparsely arranged vignettes about people from the heartland. Economic woes are touched on, but the hard times in "Nebraska" are spiritual as well as material.

"Johnny 99," for example, begins like "Allentown" — "Well they closed down the auto plant in Mahwah late that month" — but then focuses on an unemployed man who gets drunk and commits an armed robbery.

Johnny 99 tells a judge of "debts no honest man could pay," but refuses to pin his actions to money alone: "If you can take a man's life for the thoughts that's in his head... let 'em shave off my hair and put me on that execution line."

Blue-collar malaise is also the theme of "Factory," a song about a worker who has a job, "a barbecue, pink Mustang, fenders chrome," but senses something is missing: "At nine o'clock I sit there in my chair and I don't know why I lose my hair."

Stan Ridgway, songwriter for Wall of Voodoo, the Los Angeles-based band which recorded "Factory," denies his songs are pessimistic. For Ridgway, disillusionment is the flip side of the American tradition of hope, which he strongly believes in.

"The real enemy is giving up," Ridgway said.

Is there a market for recession rock?

Joel, whose "Nylon Curtain" album was in the Top 10 and whose "Allentown" was about halfway up Billboard magazine's Hot 100, says there's a tradition for songs about hard times.

"The biggest song out of the Depression was, 'Buddy Can You Spare a Dime,'" he points out. "I guess people will always be singing the blues."

SINGING THE BLUES — Rock singer Bruce Springsteen's latest album is among those that have begun to reflect the grimmer facts of contemporary life: unemployment, poverty and what some view as the demise of the American Dream. (AP Laserphoto)

Moved Less During 1980

By RANDOLPHE SCHMID
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of Americans changing residences in 1980 declined 19 percent from the previous year, a trend that most probably stemmed from the high cost of moving and mortgage money, officials say.

A joint study by the Census Bureau and the Department of Housing and Urban Development showed that 18 percent of all households changed residence during 1980. That accounted for 14,263,000 moves.

The number of moves dropped 19 percent from 1979, when there were 14,993,000 household moves. The 1980 figure was down 20 percent compared to 1978, the study said.

"I suspect the biggest reason is that it's so expensive to move," said Connie Casey of HUD, who cited the high costs both of houses and of mortgage money.

She noted that the most common reason for moving is to obtain a better residence, and home prices have been rising steadily.

For example, the study found the median value of properties purchased by homeowners who moved in 1980 was $60,400, compared to a median value of $54,400 for homes bought by 1979 movers. By comparison, the median value for all owned homes was $51,300 in 1980 and $47,200 in 1979. Median indicates half were worth more and half less.

Residents of the Western states were most likely to move with 23 percent of all households in that area relocating in 1980. By comparison 19 percent moved in the South, 16 percent in the North Central states and 13 percent in the Northeast.

Brandt Struggles To Reverse Decline

By ALISON SMALE
Associated Press Writer
BONN, West Germany (AP) — At age 69, when many of his countrymen are settled comfortably into retirement a rejuvenated former Chancellor Willy Brandt is courting youthful West German radicals in hopes of rebuilding the declining influence of his Social Democratic Party.

Perpetually tanned and his weight trimmed down, Brandt is championing peace and environmental causes favored by youthful voters otherwise shunned by his fellow party members, including former Chancellor Helmut Schmidt.

Working from his headquarters in Bonn, where he lives with 35-year-old Brigitte Seebacher since separating from his wife Rut in 1979, Brandt has made overtures to the Greens Party, a small but vocal group that opposes the use of nuclear energy and would like to turn Europe into a nuclear-free zone.

Brandt's efforts are partly spurred by a drastic decline in support for the Social Democrats, whose standing dropped to 30 percent in one poll last summer compared with 42.9 percent in the last national elections in 1980.

By contrast, the Greens won election in three state parliaments this year and have consistently attracted the young leftist vote that used to go to Brandt's party.

"I want to get the people and the themes I can. I do not prejudice in any way," Brandt said in a recent magazine interview when asked about his efforts to attract young radicals to his socialist party.

"There is absolutely no reason why Social Democrats shouldn't listen to what is happening in the peace and environmental movements," he said.

So far, Brandt's overtures toward the Greens have yielded little. The Greens' firebrand spokeswoman, Petra Kelly, reacted to a letter from Brandt with demands that West Germany leave NATO and work for a nuclear-free Europe untied to power blocs.

In Hamburg, where the Greens' strong showing in June elections denied any major party a majority to form a local government, Brandt's Social Democrats tried and failed to negotiate a loose alliance that would keep them in power with Greens support.

But the radicals stuck to a campaign platform that included the demand that the city give up nuclear power as an energy source. Nuclear power supplies about 20 percent of Hamburg's needs.

Undeterred by the failure of the talks with the Greens, Brandt said the negotiations were "a constructive enterprise that finds great recognition" among young people.

Brandt's tactics have put him at odds with some of his Social Democratic colleagues, including Schmidt, who fell from national power in October when he lost a parliamentary vote of confidence.

Schmidt had been chancellor since 1974, when Brandt resigned after a leading aide was unmasked as an East German spy.

While Schmidt ran the country, Brandt, as party chairman, played guru and visionary, shaping ideas for the future as he had shaped and then realized the Ostpolitik — his policy of reconciliation with the Soviet bloc.

The differing roles between Brandt and Schmidt reflects their differing backgrounds. Schmidt, who turns 64 Dec. 23, spent World War II like most other Germans his age, fighting in Adolf Hitler's Wehrmacht.

Brandt fled Germany soon after the Nazis came to power in 1933 and spent the next 12 years in the underground resistance.

It was perhaps the overthrow of Nazism that encouraged Brandt to believe in realizing the impossible. His zest for that led him to dare Ostpolitik, and that same desire now fuels his drive to create a new power structure he said will be "a new majority of the left."

Those who know him say he believes that what's needed is a loose alliance of his Social Democrats with the Greens Party and a host of other autonomous peace and environmental groups that reject West German capitalism, middle-of-the-road consensus and pro-Americanism — factors on which postwar West Germany was built.

Many party colleagues are reluctant. Holger Boerner, Social Democrat premier of the West German state of Hesse, caused an uproar when he denounced the Greens last summer as new Nazis buoyed by the same other-worldly romanticism that swayed Hitler.

Schmidt, too, is quoted in a diary recently published by his spokesman, Klaus Boelling, as fearing the "dangerous" romanticism of the Greens.

In the final months of his chancellorship, Schmidt struck a much more conciliatory public tone toward peace campaigners and youthful rebels.

But perhaps his instinctive opinion emerged last April at a national party congress when he almost lost a key vote on party support for the new U.S. missiles by losing his temper and denouncing peace movement campaigners as a threat to peace.

It is a measure of young people's influence that Schmidt then made a rare public apology. But he remains isolated from the party left wing on defense issues, and cited differences with party leftists as well as health reasons for not leading the party into new national elections next March.

His replacement is Hans-Jochen Vogel, a Schmidt and Brandt protege who as former mayor of West Berlin has dealt with that city's rebel squatters.

Unlike Schmidt, Vogel talks of Social Democrats having "certain things in common" with the peace movement. As one party worker commented, "If Schmidt had said that, everybody would have cheered and he might have had fewer problems" in his last months as Chancellor.

Successor To The Rubik's Cube Exists

By KAY BARTLETT
AP Newsfeatures Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Adam Alexander would like the world to come to his tub, not his door. There, like the Greek philosopher Diogenes did centuries earlier, he would deliver criticism of his fellow man.

Instead, Adam Alexander is hop-skipping across the country on the talk show circuit huckstering his invention — Alexander's Star — in places like Indianapolis, Detroit and Grand Rapids.

The Star is a 12-starred solid puzzle — a dodecahedron, if you will — that is being brought to you this year by those same people who brought you Rubik's Cube. It is, says Alexander, an extension of the Cube and like the best-selling Cube, a book will be along shortly explaining how to solve it.

Alexander is a 36-year-old mathematician whose first gray hair appeared at age 9 and whose shoulder-length hair is now completely white. A few dark hairs speckle his beard and he accentuates the whole effect by dressing only in gray. Always.

A native New Yorker, Alexander grew up in the world of private schools, skipping the sixth grade, hanging out at the Stage Deli where "I learned not to get excited by famous people," and since 1952 watching every famous skyscraper go up.

Like Diogenes, he would like to set up his tub — say at a busy Manhattan intersection — and have people stop by for criticism.

"I would have people come by to be criticized by me," he says.

The Pros And Cons Of Parole System Are Argued

By LIDIA WASOWICZ
The American parole system is on probation, its continued existence at stake.

Legislation pending before Congress would abolish the system, which originated in this country more than a century ago.

A UPI survey shows growing momentum among those who claim the system — plagued with contradictions, inefficiencies and inconsistencies — has caused more trouble than it has solved and should be terminated.

On the other side, supporters point to low revocation rates and parolee success stories in what a correctional official called "a valid and necessary release valve for our bulging institutions."

Recent figures from the federal Bureau of Justice Statistics showed there were nearly half as many convicts on parole — 223,800 — as in federal and state prisons and jails — 509,308.

A bill that has passed the U.S. Senate and awaits House action would put an end to parole on the federal level. Parole boards would no longer decide whether to conditionally release inmates prior to completion of their terms. The sentencing judge would set the minimum release date and guidelines.

The Minnesota legislature has abolished its parole board. The prisoner knows his release date — provided he behaves himself — at the time of sentencing.

Since 1976, California, Indiana, Maine, Illinois and Arizona have passed determinate sentencing laws, which specify the term for each crime rather than prescribing an "indeterminate" range of punishments and leaving the actual release at the discretion of the parole board.

Most other states have switched to determinate sentencing for at least some offenses.

"The trend has set in, although we will oppose it to our dying day," says Anthony Trivisono, director of the American Correctional Association in College Park, Md. "Strong forces are trying to remove discretion from the system because some claim the correctional folks can't use that discretion properly."

"The theory of rehabilitation is gone," says attorney Ed Koren of the Prison Law Project in Washington. "There's no money for it. Prisons are now simply places for punishment. People want to know somebody's getting 10 years rather than a vague 5-15. That attitude is behind the move to get rid of parole."

Dan O'Brien, assistant to the commissioner of corrections in Minnesota, which abolished its parole board two years ago, praised the new system, under which the commissioner of corrections establishes sentencing guidelines, taking into account the severity of the crime and the defendant's criminal history.

"There was some concern that knowing when he'd get out anyway would prevent an inmate from participating in prison programs, but that hasn't happened," O'Brien said. "The intent was to send serious criminals to jail and to get away from the disparity in sentencing across the state. That we have done."

Paul Young, of New York's parole division — the largest in the nation with 600 officers handling 22,000 parolees and with the lowest recidivism rate, 3.4 percent — said "equal time for equal crime" was "bad justice."

"A wino on the bowery picks up a broomstick, hits his friend and takes his bottle. That's robbery first degree. A kid goes into a park, threatens another kid and takes his bicycle. That's robbery first degree. A hardened criminal takes a gun and robs a bank. That's robbery first degree."

"Do you think they should all go to prison together?"

"In determinant sentencing," Young said, "everybody gets the same sentence. You have over-incarceration for minor offenses and a legalized jail break for the more hardened criminals. They have nothing to lose."

Earl Coleman, assistant to the parole board in Indiana, which changed to determinant sentencing in 1977, said, "The problem with such an arbitrary formula is an inmate whom the parole board deems to be a bad risk can be released so long as he behaves himself in prison, without regard to what the board might think his behavior in society would be."

Officials in California, which made the switch the same year and now holds parole hearings only for convicts serving life terms, said the system was working well.

Newly elected Gov. George Deukmejian, former Attorney General who who campaigned on a tough law-and-order platform, said his only real concern was "to get harsher penalties for parole violators."

Negative GAO report
Parole opponents, critical of the system's disparate treatment of criminals, received impetus from a 277-page General Accounting Office study completed in July for the Senate Subcommittee on Government Affairs.

The congressional investigative agency found the federal parole system "riddled with inconsistency, contradiction and inefficiency," said Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., who asked for the study.

"The report lends more support to legislation (passed by the Senate and now before the House) which would abolish the parole system and establish new procedures giving the sentencing judge principal responsibility for setting guidelines governing the convict's early release."

The GAO cited cases of prisoners not eligible for parole being paroled anyway and guidelines being so vague for hearing examiners that they disagreed in 53 percent of the cases.

NORTH CAROLINA Farm Tips

From Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., N.A.

By Dr. J. W. Pou

Last summer scientists started a fight in the middle of Bobby Stephenson's soybean field in Johnston County.

The fight is between a disease-causing fungus called alternaria cassiae and a pesky weed for soybean growers called sicklepod, according to Tom Byrd, agricultural communication specialist at N.C. State University.

So far, the fungus is winning and the scientists are delighted. If the fungus continues to score big, it may become the first biological weed control weapon for soybean growers.

Weeds are a relatively new target in biological pest control. Most research in the past has focused on parasites and predators that attack insects.

However, farmers use many herbicides as well as insecticides, which is now prompting scientists to look for natural means for controlling weeds too.

Research on biological weed control in North Carolina is being led by three scientists (with the Agricultural Research Service of North Carolina State University: Drs. Gerald Van Dyke and Blanche Haning, plant pathologists, and Dr. Douglas Worsham, weed scientist. They are cooperating with scientists from six other southern states and California in their search for diseases that will kill weeds.

"We are looking for plant pathogens (disease-causing organisms) that attack specific weeds but do not infect economic crops," explained Dr. Van Dyke.

Such is the case with the fungus, alternaria cassiae, tested last summer in Johnston County. It was discovered at the U.S. Department of Agriculture's research station near Stoneville, Mississippi. After several years of laboratory tests, Abbott Laboratories agreed to produce enough of the fungal spores to provide each cooperating state with 200 grams for field testing.

North Carolina scientists selected a sicklepod "hot spot" on the Stephenson farm west of Smithfield for these tests. The spores were mixed with water and a surfactant and were then sprayed over the top of young soybeans infested with sicklepod. Within two days most sicklepod plants were dead or dying. The soybeans showed no sign of the disease.

One goal of the research is to work out the timing and dosage that will be the most effective. Another goal is to see how long the disease lasts. The hope is that the disease will stay around to infect new sicklepod seedlings as they emerge.

Both pre-emergence sprays and post-emergence applications are being tried. Adjoining plots are treated with a herbicide named Attac for comparison.

Dr. Haning says she hopes larger quantities of the fungal spores can be made available in future years. "This would give us an opportunity to test the disease on large commercial plots applied with commercial equipment," she said.

Haning and Van Dyke say it's too early to compare the cost of biological weed control agents with the cost of chemical weed control. At present, they see weed diseases as more of a supplement to chemicals than as a replacement for them.

"The big advantage of using a disease organism is that it may allow us to reduce the use of chemicals while obtaining longer term weed control," Van Dyke said. "One disadvantage is that we probably would have to use a different disease organism to control each weed."

"Another disadvantage is that some people are afraid that the diseases may get out of control. There is no reason to feel that they would," he added, "since most weed pathogens are very host specific."

The Gift Of Sight Not For Everyone

By BOB DVORCHAK
Associated Press Writer
PITTSBURGH (AP) — Sam Atwood was born blind, with congenitally clouded corneas and glaucoma. But he can see today because of a relatively new and extremely delicate surgery for transplanting corneas in infants.

Sam, who was 6 years old on Halloween, had the cornea in his left eye replaced at Pittsburgh's Eye & Ear Hospital when he was 8 weeks old and his right eye corrected at 5 months.

He's had a number of followup operations to correct complications and his 20-200 vision with glasses still makes him legally blind. But he sees well enough to read enlarged type and go to school.

"In retrospect, it is a miracle. If you have a child who can't see and then he can see, I would call it a miracle," says his mother, Joy Atwood, a kindergarten teacher from East Waterboro, Maine.

Sam was operated on by Dr. Stuart Brown, a pioneer in transplanting infant corneas and chairman of the department of ophthalmology at Eye & Ear Hospital and the University of Pittsburgh School of Medicine.

The first successful transplant of defective corneas in infants occurred 12 years ago, and only a handful of doctors perform them. Brown has operated on 25 infants in 12 years.

"None of these children will be able to see as well as people born with normal eyes. None will be able to pass a driver's test, but they'll see. They won't be in blind school," Brown says.

Corneas in adults have been transplanted since 1905, and the operation has become fairly routine. The success rate in adults is between 90 and 95 percent, Brown says.

But infants pose special problems, and about two-thirds of the transplants are successful.

"It's very different from cornea transplants in adults," says Brown.

For one thing, infant tissue is flaccid and when the defective cornea is removed, the internal structure of a baby's eye bulges forward. Doctors use corneas from adult donors to give the baby's eye some rigidity.

A cornea acts like a window to the eye. It is a transparent coating of the eyeball that allows light to penetrate into the interior of the eye, which translates light into sight.

Doctors use a device that resembles a cookie cutter to remove a defective cornea, and then transplant donor tissue in its place during an operation that takes between 30 minutes and an hour.

The procedure does not correct all blindness and can give sight only to babies born with clouded or opaque corneas, which Brown says is a rare condition.

"It isn't an instant miracle. It hasn't been easy. Sam's vision has tempered everything we do," Mrs. Atwood says.

"But it wasn't a difficult decision to make at all. There were no alternatives, other than to have his vision be nil. It's the difference between having no sight and having sight."

Study Categorizes The Degrees Field Choices

WASHINGTON (AP) — Business and management are the most popular fields with white, Hispanic and Asian college students, but blacks and American Indians more often major in education, a new study says.

The report issued by the National Center for Education Statistics also showed that foreign students who study in the United States are most likely to pick engineering as a major.

The study analyzed degrees granted in 1978-79 according to field of study and the race or ethnic status of the recipient.

Business and management were the top choice of white students with 18.8 percent of their degrees being issued in that area. Education was No.

2, at 13.6 percent and social sciences followed at 11.5 percent.

Among Hispanics, business accounted for 15.9 percent of the degrees granted; second was education, 14.8 percent; and third was social sciences, 14.6 percent.

While Asians also picked business first, 20.4 percent, their second choice was engineering, 12.1 percent, and their third was social sciences, 10.4 percent. Education wasn't among their top five selections.

Blacks, on the other hand, gave education a narrow margin over business studies, 19.1 percent to 19.0 percent, followed by social sciences at 15 percent.

American Indians gave education a bigger lead, picking it over business 18.9 percent to 14.8 percent. Social sciences accounted for 14.6 percent of their degrees.

Engineering was the choice among 26.7 percent of foreign students, business 19.6 percent, and social sciences 9.7 percent.

Overall, the study showed that whites collected 87.3 percent of the 919,540 bachelor's degrees issued. At the same time, whites made up 79.6 percent of the population.

Whites also won 83 percent of the master's degrees issued and 80 percent of the doctorates.

Blacks, who constitute 11.5 percent of Americans, received 6.6 percent of the bachelor's degrees issued, 6.5 percent of the masters and 3.9 percent of the doctoral degrees.

Timber Town Hangs On Despite Closing Of Mill

By C.W. MIRANKER
Associated Press Writer

MCCLOUD, Calif. (AP) — Before the turn of the century, when Douglas firs and sugar pines grew a dozen feet around, the area's first lumber company settled at the foot of Mt. Shasta with a band of fallers, sawyers and railroaders.

They called the company Mother McCloud.

It gave them jobs. It built them homes, stocked the stores, looked after their health, saw to their children's schooling, and provided jobs for them and their children's children, too.

Then in the mid-'60s, the maternal, company-town system ended. The lumber company, after a change of ownership and a merger, severed itself from the community, first selling residents their houses, then the businesses and finally the railroad.

Then, at Thanksgiving three years ago, the mill closed, a victim of small, uneconomical trees and antiquated equipment. More than 300 people — nearly the whole work force — lost their jobs.

By Christmas, the timber industry began reeling from deteriorating sales and high interest rates. It still is. Up and down the Cascade range, mills have cut back or closed down.

Scores turned to unemployment benefits, food stamps, welfare, relying more than ever on fish, game, home-preserved foods and any part-time job that turned up. Dozens moved.

But most in the town of 1,800 held on, stubbornly attached to the community and captivated by the beauty of the snow-capped mountain.

"McCloud is going to grow," says Bob Wieder, owner of McCloud Building Supply. "Where else on this planet are you going to find clean air, a wild river and a 14,000-foot mountain out your back window?"

A recession on the heels of the mill's demise made job hunting especially bleak for McCloud workers. Nearly a quarter of the county's work force of 18,000 was unemployed last summer.

Determined to stay in McCloud, Joni and Dennis Dalton relied on a succession of part-time jobs to meet house payments and expenses.

Mrs. Dalton, 31, was an assembly line worker and her 33-year-old husband was a faller when the mill closed. He still works in the woods part time, but she has bounced from job to job.

"This is my home. I don't want to leave. It's a good place to raise our kids," she said.

The McCloud River Railroad also is "here to stay," says president William J. Herndon.

The railroad has become an enterprising agency of change in town, aggressively soliciting new business.

A Colorado company attracted by the railroad has begun stripmining for diatomite outside McCloud. Now mining 160 of 5,000 acres to which it holds mineral rights, American Resources Equity Corp. of Englewood, Colo., hopes to complete a processing plant by 1984 that could employ 50 to 100 people initially.

"We have a long way to go and we are by no means past the crisis stage. But we are going to make it," Herndon says.

Britons Prepared To Stay On Thatcher Medicine

By MAUREEN JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — On the election trail in 1979, Margaret Thatcher waved two shopping baskets, one full and one half-empty, to demonstrate to voters how much less their money bought after five years of the Labor Party's socialist government.

Since then, the Conservative Party leader who became Britain's first woman prime minister has pursued her good housekeeping style of economics with a doggedness that has cut inflation to 6.8 percent, its lowest in 10 years.

Her critics charge that the price of Thatcherism, Britain's Reaganomics, has been lengthening welfare lines and causing a slump in industrial output in an economy hit by world recession and squeezed further by her tight money policies.

Opinion polls, however, show that voters would put Mrs. Thatcher back for another five-year term if general elections were held now — despite record post-1980 unemployment of 3.3 million or 13.8 percent. It was 1.3 million when she took office.

Her electoral support confounds the traditional unpopularity of British administrations past mid-term, and reflects both hope and hopelessness.

Many voters apparently believe that Thatcherism, however painful, is gradually turning the economy around after generations of profligacy, and want her to have a second term to finish the job.

But many others appear to accept her oft-repeated line: "There is no alternative."

"So it hurts. But I think you've got to swallow the medicine. I'll vote Tory (Conservative) again," says Ineke Nesbitt, 42-year-old secretary in Birmingham, whose husband has been laid off two years in an area where unemployment has tripled to 18 percent since the last election.

Mrs. Thatcher claims to see a "healthy new realism across the country," but her opponents claim to perceive a growing sense of despair.

Whatever the arguments, the Conservatives, with an average 44 percent of the vote in polls in the last three months, are 13 points ahead of their nearest rivals, the Labor Party which lost power in 1979.

More significantly, an analysis by Market Opinion and Research International shows 39 percent Tory support among skilled workers, up 1 percent, and 33 percent among unskilled, up 3 percent — key groups with floating voters who decide elections.

"You have sought to persuade the country there is no alternative to the desperate, dismal policies which you pursue," Labor leader Michael Foot has told Mrs. Thatcher.

She retorts: "There is no future in returning to when the government's reputation at home, and Britain's reputation abroad was that of a spendthrift and supplicant."

This sort of dialogue between Thatcherites clinging to the basic prescription and opposition parties promising higher state spending, is getting shriller with an election perhaps a year away.

The "monetarist" experiment itself shows mixed results.

It is 3½ years since she caught the public imagination by offering lower taxes, freer rein for private enterprise, labor union curbs, lower inflation and state spending.

On the credit side: — Inflation is sharply down, halved within the past year and slashed from a 21.9-percent peak a year after Mrs. Thatcher took office. It is expected to hit 5 percent early next year.

The British rate is still above the United States' 4.8 percent, West Germany's 5 percent and Japan's 3 percent, but below the 7.4 percent average for major industrial nations.

Says Michael Hughes, economist with London stockbrokers de Zoete and Bevan: "The big thing is she has made progress in relation to other countries. Britain is now way down the inflation league instead of near the top and that must make our goods more competitive — some day."

— On the labor front, Mrs. Thatcher heads into what is probably her last pre-election winter without a major strike in sight.

Eight months of sporadic strikes by 750,000 workers in the state National Health Service appear near to collapse.

A pay strike was rejected in October by the nation's 180,000 coalminers, and steel, rail and waterworkers have settled contracts or shown little stomach for a confrontation.

Strikes, often called the British disease, are down but not out. Nearly 7 million working days were lost through strikes in the first nine months of this year, mainly because of the health workers. Last year it was down to 3.26 million days, compared with an average 9.8 million over the past decade.

— Interest rates, which along with North Sea oil kept the pound sterling up to the chagrin of exporters until early this year, are down to 9 percent from a 16-percent peak last year.

That's good news for industrialists and housebuyers, but bad for investors. With suspicions Mrs. Thatcher plans a pre-election ease on spending curbs, low interest rates sent the pound tumbling to a six-year low of 1.60.

— Money supply growth, emerging from a forest of differing measurements, is now said to be within the latest 8 to 12 percent target. Mrs. Thatcher failed to meet targets in 1979-81.

On the debit side: — Unemployment is getting worse and the Conservatives no longer promise an upturn in the near future.

— 5,500 companies went bust in the first six months of this year, 22 percent more than in 1981.

— Manufacturing output has dropped 17.5 percent to a 15-year low since 1979, reflecting a lack of British competitiveness.

— Imports absorb much of the spending power generated by lower mortgage rates and inflation. A recent Treasury statement said in the last five years world trade rose 18 percent, but British exports of manufactured goods were unchanged and imports were up 40 percent.

The Treasury predicts a slight fall in manufacturing output until next spring, and only a modest rise in gross domestic product next year of 1 to 1½ percent.

— Wage increases, averaging about 9 percent this year, are rising faster than prices. Mrs. Thatcher's 3 to 4 percent guideline has not been followed.

Publicly, she remains committed to cutting the budget deficit but she's trimming the pre-election edges by urging local city halls to spend more.

The deficit is down from 15.87 billion pounds ($25.4 billion) in 1980-81 to "well within" the 9.5 billion pounds ($15.2 billion) predicted for the year ending next March.

But state spending continues to rise as a percentage of national income — 40.7 percent compared with 38.2 percent in 1979.

Mrs. Thatcher brushes aside critics who "say I preach merely the homilies of housekeeping or the parables of the parlor."

"I do not repent," she said. "Those parables would have saved many a financier from failure and many a country from crisis."

IT'S ALIVE — This small two-headed turtle, discovered by Augusta (Ga.) city employee Mark McGhee while working on a road project in downtown Augusta, is in apparent good health and even eats with both heads. The, as yet, unnamed pet has been in the McGhee house for two months. (AP Laserphoto)

Try To Develop Basque Tongue

BAYONNE, France (AP) — Once a month, the 24 sages of the Euskalzaindia gather to tackle the problems of an outdated language and a largely neglected culture that straddles two countries with two different attitudes toward it.

The Euskalzaindia — or Basque Academy — functions much like the famed Academie Francaise, as arbiter of the language and creator of new terms necessary to keep up with modern times.

But in addition to efforts to develop the Basque tongue, called Euskadi, the academy also is the major force behind efforts to preserve and develop other aspects of the Basque culture.

"We have a lot of work," says Jean Haritschelhar, professor of Basque language and literature at Bordeaux University, and one of the seven French members of the academy.

"Basque has never been the language of a state, or an official language for public documents, or in the mass media, or in teaching," the professor says, referring to the situation on the French side of the border.

In Spain, Basque is an official language with the same status as Spanish.

The Basques are the oldest surviving ethnic group in Europe. It is estimated that about 800,000 people actually speak Basque, but knowledge of the language in general is on the decline.

In 1969, a few families in Bayonne and one teacher who wanted their children to have a Basque education unavailable in public schools founded an organization called Seaska and opened a kindergarten with three children.

Today, about 600 French children study in kindergarten, primary and secondary Basque schools, called Ikastolak, and the number grows each year.

Seaska, with 57 full-time teachers, now operates 22 kindergartens, seven primary schools and one high school, all privately funded through tuition, donations and special activities.

Seaska and 22 other organizations have presented the French government with a proposition calling for a special law to give the Basque language and culture official status.

A Deadly Season

On this day in 1835, America's first major urban fire destroyed 600 buildings in New York City, resulting in a loss of more than $20 million. Fire can be a deadly force, and more home and business fires occur during the winter months than at any other time of the year. Space heaters, candles, and fireplaces are the major culprits during this season. In the United States, fire strikes more than 1,500 homes each day and takes more than 12,000 lives every year. About one-fourth of the victims are children. Each year, more than 2.5 million fires strike America's homes, businesses, and wildlife. This holiday season don't let your home become another fire statistic.

Fluff Swabs for Ear Safety

I was warned against cleaning my ears with a cotton swab. How else can I do it? — Miss S.L.K., La. Dear Miss K.:

The cotton tip applicator is the gentlest of all instruments popularly used to clean the ears and remove wax. Obviously, it is a lot better than the silly use of paper clips, bobby pins, safety pins and long fingernails.

Yet even cotton-tipped applicators which seem to be so gentle can sometimes be injurious if they are carelessly handled. The cotton is so tightly bound that often it can injure the wall of the ear canal. For this reason it is advisable that the cotton on these applicators be carefully fluffed at the tip and thus be made softer before use.

Fortunately the ear canal has its own anatomical defense against injury. Its curved structure prevents the eardrum itself from being injured. The canal, lined by a very thin layer of skin, can easily be hurt.

Wax serves a very important function. It lubricates the outer ear and protects the canal from invasion by dust, insects and other particles.

Many people go through life without having any wax removed from the ear. Others, with narrow canals, seem to accumulate wax that then becomes hardened and puts pressure on both the canal and the eardrum. Those with this tendency should have the wax removed by doctors periodically.

There are now a number of drugs which can be purchased over the counter and without a doctor's prescription. Their function is to dissolve the wax. They accomplish their purpose but care must be taken. Some of these substances can be very irritating to the lining of the ear canal and the eardrum itself.

Gentle irrigation with a soft-tipped ear bulb can often remove the wax without injury. A simple salt solution or well-diluted peroxide can be used. Be sure, however, that the water is tepid for cold water used for irrigation may bring on an attack of short-lived dizziness.

***
Twice I have had the painful complication of a dry socket after a tooth was removed. Is this coincidence or am I prone to this painful condition? — Miss R.G., Maine. Dear Miss G.:

It is probably just a coincidence that you have had two such unpleasant complications after the extraction of a tooth. Normally a blood clot covers the site of the extraction and protects the underlying bone as the healing process begins.

A dry socket is considered to be an infection of the bone from which the tooth was removed. Antibiotics and pain killers are used to control the dry socket. The chances are that this will never happen again. There are no familial tendencies that make you a greater candidate for this unpleasant occurrence.

It should also be noted that it is not the technique of surgical removal that is responsible for this distressing complication.

Diary Of A Death Describes Fate Of Carl McCunn

FAIRBANKS, Alaska (AP) — Tales of death and despair in the frozen north are not new in Alaskan folklore, but no poet wrote of Carl McCunn's fatal adventure. He wrote it himself.

When the state trooper cut open the tent and found Carl McCunn's wasted body on Feb. 2, he also found a diary the starved man had kept until he ended his torment with a rifle bullet.

"They say it doesn't hurt," McCunn wrote, and pulled the trigger.

He died at age 35 in a wilderness camp near a nameless lake in a nameless valley 225 miles northeast of Fairbanks. He had gone there to photograph the natural beauty and mysteries of the tundra. But he had not been specific about plans to be flown out, and so he was stranded. He died because of a mixup.

His diary, 100 pages of looseleaf paper, began in tidy, block letters recording the wonders of an emerging summer. It ended, eight and a half months later, in the scrawl of an abandoned soul crippled by frostbite, fighting with ravens and wolves for scraps of food.

The diary wound up in the coroner's office in Fairbanks, where, at an inquest, the saga of Carl McCunn unfolded.

On the last page, he wrote: "Am burning the last of my emergency Coleman light and just fed the fire the last of my split wood. When the ashes cool, I'll be cooling along with them."

McCunn had been flown into the valley about 75 miles northeast of Fort Yukon in March, 1981, as winter was ending. He knew the area. In 1976, he had spent five months alone in the desolate Brooks Range.

This time, with about 500 rolls of film, photo equipment, firearms and 1,400 pounds of provisions, he planned to stay through mid-August. Beans and rice were his staples.

Eventually, he ate tree bark to stay alive.

His father, Donovan McCunn of San Antonio, Texas, described his son. He was 6-foot-2, 240 pounds, with curly, reddish blond hair and an outgoing personality. He was born in Germany to an Army family.

After high school, he tarried in college for a semester before a four-year hitch in the Navy. Then he worked on a ferry between Washington State and Alaska and did odd jobs after making his home in Alaska in about 1970.

At the coroner's inquest, testimony from friends — and McCunn's own diary — suggested he had failed to make specific arrangements to be picked up. The coroner's jury ruled his death a suicide.

Early diary entries detail fascination with the "wail" of loons, and contain descriptions of swans and other waterfowl. He wrote of the return of the creatures to their summer grounds.

By early August, with his supplies dwindling, his concern grew with the change of the season. The temperature dropped and autumn painted the valley in yellows, browns, reds. It rained constantly.

"I think I should have used more foresight about arranging my departure. I'll soon find out. Am down to beans now ... just over a gallon. That may not last two weeks. Finished off the rice yesterday."

By mid-August — his diary entries were not dated — he spent much of his time searching for food. He tells of using a net weighted with links of chain to catch fish in a creek by the lake.

Still no plane. His anxiety grew.

"Come on, please ... don't leave me hangin' and frettin' like this. I didn't come out here for that."

Meanwhile, concerned friends asked the Alaska State Troopers to check on McCunn.

Trooper David Hamilton flew over McCunn's camp. Later, he testified he saw McCunn waving a red bag. He said he circled and McCunn "waved in a casual manner and watched us fly by."

"On the third pass he turned and walked back toward the tent, slowly, casually," Hamilton said. "No wave, no nothing."

"We surmised there was no immediate danger or need for emergency aid."

In his diary, McCunn tells of first being elated about sighting the plane. Later he realized he had given the wrong signal to the pilot.

He first waved his orange sleeping bag cover, then saw the plane had wheels and quit waving.

"I recall raising my right hand, shoulder high and shaking my fist on the plane's second pass. It was a little cheer — like when your team scored a touchdown or something."

CHAPTER MEETING

The Pitt County Food Service Association held its chapter meeting recently at Wellcome Middle School with Don Reeves of the Mental Health Center as the guest speaker. Reeves spoke to the group about handling stress on the job and at home.

"Turns out that's the signal (or very similar) for 'ALL OK ... DO NOT WAIT!' They probably blew me off as a weirdo ... Man, I can't believe it!"

By October, he was competing with wolves and foxes for the rabbits he snared. The foxes and the wolves occasionally beat him to his catches.

His father said that McCunn, on a previous wilderness excursion, had been late, and he had notified police who started checking with McCunn's friends. "He told me not to do that again," the senior McCunn said.

In November, Carl McCunn ran out of food. All he had left were a few specks.

"I feel very down, but not quite out. Damned close, however."

Around Thanksgiving, McCunn was beginning to have dizzy spells.

"I feel miserable. Have had the chills upon awakening for the past three days ... I can't take much more of this ... Can't stop thinking about using the bullet either."

He used the last of his fuel, and fed the fire a final time.

"I (chickened) out once already, but I don't wanna go through the chills again. They say it doesn't hurt."

"Dear God in Heaven, please forgive me my weakness and my sins. Please look over my family."

He added a separate note asking that his personal items be returned to his father. And he instructed the one who found the note to keep his rifle and shotgun. That was his will.

He signed his name and attached his Alaska driver's license.

"The I.D. is me, match."

With those words, the diary, and the life of Carl McCunn, ended.
