

Bitterness Over The Extended Session

By MIKE SHANAHAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the U.S. Senate where each day begins with a prayer, there was little Christmas spirit in the third week of December 1982.

The closer the Congress came to the end of a fractious lame-duck session which has accomplished little, the more tempers frayed. Fatigue and exhaustion took a heavy toll.

The only mention of Christmas on or off the Senate floor came in complaints of disrupted family holiday plans.

Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., who has three children, said the irregular and demanding Senate schedule in general and the lame-duck session in particular are hard on the personal lives of all 100 senators.

"It is taking an enormous toll on families," he said in an interview. "Pretty soon the Senate will be made up of rich bachelors."

As a result of the bitterness engendered by stalling tactics used in the lame-duck session, Leahy said such action by the extreme Right and Left will not be tolerated when the 98th Congress convenes in January.

Leahy and others said when the new Congress convenes in January, they will seek rule changes which will limit the power of a minority to use the Senate rules to indefinitely delay or block legislation supported by the majority.

"That is one good thing that might come out of this," Leahy said. "We are not going to kowtow to extremists."

Similarly, Sen. Paul Tsongas, D-Mass., predicted "a revolt of the middle" in the next session of Congress.

"This trial by ordeal ought to be proof enough that the Senate rules are inadequate to the 20th century," said Sen. Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo.

Most calls for reform focus on rules which allow a minority to conduct filibusters on legislation even after the 60 votes have been found to limit debate to 100 hours or less.

Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker has said the rights of any minority must be protected, but only to the point of letting the opinion be heard.

Republican Alan Simpson of Wyoming said early Sunday morning that "a minority within a minority within a minority" was misusing the rules of the Senate.

Mainly because of the opposition of a small group of conservative senators to a nickel-a-gallon gas tax, a Friday deadline passed leaving the federal government without authority to operate.

There were a number of bitter confrontations on the Senate floor, but the sharpest came when conservative Sen. John East of North Carolina blocked passage of the stopgap spending bill for more than six hours late Saturday night.

To the surprise of Senate leaders of both parties, freshman East used an unusual parliamentary tactic, holding hostage the spending bill because of his opposition to the gasoline tax.

"First they tax our beer, then they tax cigarettes, now they are going to increase the tax on gasoline," East said. "All that's left are our women."

The debate became so personal that Assistant Republican Leader Ted Stevens directed the reading of a section of Senate rules that prohibits one senator from impugning the motives of another.

Earlier, Stevens asked senators should direct their comments to the presiding officer rather than to each other because, he said, "it reduces acrimony in the chamber."

One after another, senators took the floor to plead with East to permit final action on the appropriations measure.

Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Colo., became so incensed that he jabbed his finger at East, and thundered, "You alone will be responsible for shutting down the government at 7 a.m. Monday morning (when federal workers return from the weekend.)"

And retiring Republican Sam Hayakawa of California, told East he was unfairly blocking the votes of the majority on the gas tax.

If so many senators want such a bad piece of legislation, Hayakawa asked East, "Why do you associate with idiots and clods like us?"

During the onslaught, East sat alone isolated from Republican colleagues most of whom were critical of his tactics.

Later, his filibuster broken, East said, he gave up because, "I knew though the spirit was willing, the flesh was weak."

MX Is Again Dealt Blow

By TIM AHERN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House-Senate conference committee has dealt a blow to President Reagan's defense build-up by refusing to approve production of the MX missile, the new nuclear weapon Reagan says is "absolutely essential."

The panel left $2.5 billion for MX research and development in the stopgap funding bill it approved Sunday night, but said most of that money can't be spent until both houses of Congress approve a basing plan.

White House spokesman Peter Roussel said the decision to eliminate $988 million for production of the first five missiles "might complicate" Reagan's decision on whether to sign or veto the bill after approval by Congress.

Reagan wants to build 100 MX weapons, which he re-named the "Peacekeeper," and deploy them in 100 "super-hardened" silos in a "dense pack" formation near Cheyenne, Wyo.

The MX proposal includes a compromise that permits construction of substantial numbers of the missiles for research and development.

Those weapons could later be used for deployment if Congress approves a basing mode, said Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska.

The proposal approved on a voice vote directs Reagan to send Congress a basing plan after next March 1 and requires approval by both houses within 45 days after that. It bans flight testing, which the Pentagon had wanted to begin next month.

The compromise "is not what the administration wants, but it's as good as they could have gotten" in view of the 245-176 House vote two weeks ago against MX production, said Stevens as he agreed to the proposal offered by Rep. Joseph Ad-dabbo, D-N.Y.

Reagan called that vote "a grave mistake" and accused the House of "sleepwalking into the future."

Unless it was reversed, Reagan said, the House decision "will seriously set back our efforts to protect the nation's security."

After the House defeat, Reagan urged Senate approval of missile production, saying, "I believe it is absolutely essential to a strong, secure defense that we vote now on funds for that missile."

But the missile faced strong Senate opposition, too, and Reagan agreed to a compromise proposed by senior Republican senators to retain the production money, but bar it from being spent until Congress approves a basing mode. That compromise won 56-42 Senate approval last week.

Agreement Will Put Extension Of Army ROTC On ECU Campus

ECU News Bureau
East Carolina University and N.C. State University have approved a cross-enrollment agreement for the establishment of a U.S. Army Reserve Officers Training Corps (ROTC) extension center to be located at ECU.

In the agreement, signed by the chancellors of the two schools Friday, ECU will provide classrooms and other facilities for the Army ROTC curriculum. The program will be administered through its Department of Military Sciences at NCSU. "ECU will be an extension center of this program until such time that the size of the participating student enrollment should warrant the transfer of ECU to an independent host institution status," Col. F.W. Wanner, a professor and chairman of military science at NCSU, explained.

N.C. State's ROTC program began in 1965. ECU currently administers an Air Force ROTC program through its Department of Aerospace Studies. Under the new program which begins with the fall semester of 1983, ECU will offer freshmen through junior level classes in ROTC military science related topics. The program will be expanded in 1984-85 to cover the full four years.

All military texts and equipment are provided without cost to the student. Advanced cadets receive a tax-free monthly stipend of $100. Students enrolled in the ROTC are also eligible for three and two-year scholarships that provide a monthly stipend and pays the cost of tuition, fees and textbooks.

The Department of Military Science will be under the ECU School of Technology. The initial office will be located in room 324 of Erwin Hall and beginning Feb. 2, 1983, the office will be staffed each Wednesday to answer questions about the ROTC program. The phone number is 757-6967.

November Saw Spending Rise

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans' personal income rose a modest 0.4 percent in November, but consumer spending jumped 1.2 percent over October's rate, the government reported today.

The income gain was relatively small — probably little, if any, more than could be accounted for by inflation. But the spending increase seemed likely to be read as an encouraging sign by officials and economists who see consumer spending as the best bet for pulling the nation out of the long recession.

In general, Americans' debt burdens are relatively light, and consumers could increase spending even further if their confidence in recovery rises, many analysts say.

In November, the Commerce Department report said, personal income rose to an annual rate of $2.62 trillion while consumers' spending rose to a rate of $2.03 trillion.

Sen. East Staged Lonely Six-Hour Filibuster

By The Associated Press

Freshman Sen. John East, R-N.C., held up passage of the federal stopgap spending bill for six hours with a filibuster in opposition to a provision that would raise the federal gasoline tax by a nickel a gallon.

While his tired colleagues seethed, the bald, wheelchair-bound East ignored attempts to dissuade him from his course. Through the early morning hours Sunday, Senate GOP Leader Howard Baker and a string of other senators took turns "holding watch" as East said he wanted to stop the Senate from acting "at this late hour, in a hasty mood (to) impose upon the American people a gas tax."

That tax increase is designed to finance a $5.5 billion-a-year highway and mass transit repair program.

Baker told East there was "no practical way from keeping us from getting to the highway bill (gas tax). ... At some point this will conclude."

Shortly before 3 a.m. Sunday, East gave up after a lengthy parliamentary squabble.

"At some point along the line, you have to acknowledge that the spirit is willing but the flesh is weak," East said.

Considered "a philosopher among the Senate's 'New Right' freshmen, East is fond of quoting Plato, St. Thomas Aquinas and Edmund Burke. He is best known as a staunch opponent of abortion and school busing to achieve racial balance.

East, born May 5, 1931 in Springfield, Illinois, is a 1953 graduate of Earlham College, where he was Phi Beta Kappa. He graduated from the University of Illinois law school in 1959. He has an M.A. and Ph. D. in political science from the University of Florida, which he earned in 1964. He was a political science professor at East Carolina University in Greenville, N.C. before winning the 1980 Senate seat.

East lost the 1st Congressional District race to Walter B. Jones in 1966. He contested North Carolina Secretary of State Thad Eure and lost that race two years later. He served as a delegate to the 1976 Republican convention and won the Senate seat four years later, defeating Robert Morgan.

He has been confined to a wheelchair since age 24, when as a Marine, he contracted polio while swimming in the officers' pool at Camp Lejeune.

An electronic lift was installed to allow him to get onto the Senate floor, but he needs the help of Senate staff to get his wheelchair off of the subway that runs from his office in the Dirksen Senate Office Building to the Capitol.

Alerted To A Shutdown

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than half a million federal employees were ordered to work today while the possibility lingered that they would be sent home early.

Their jobs depended on passage of an emergency spending bill which had been worked out by a Senate-House conference committee Sunday night, almost two full days after the government officially ran out of operating money.

Avoiding a partial shutdown was considered so urgent that the committee began hammering out a compromise, even before the Senate officially approved its version of the catch-all spending bill.

But by the time negotiators approved the compromise late Sunday night, the Senate and House had already recessed for the day, meaning the measure could not be approved by both chambers and sent to President Reagan until at least this afternoon.

Congressional leaders predicted both chambers would approve the bill, which they had stripped of a jobs-creating provision because of the threat of a presidential veto.

White House spokesman Peter Roussel said late Sunday night that Reagan would "wait and see what the bill looks like" when it reaches his desk before deciding whether to sign it.

Although Reagan was likely to be pleased on the jobs issue, negotiators also removed the spending bill of $988 million Reagan wanted for production of the MX missile and they banned spending of $2.5 billion for MX research and development until Congress approves a deployment system for the nuclear weapon.

A memo from the Office of Management and Budget to agency heads last week advised all employees to report to work regardless of weekend congressional developments.

"A judgment will be made Monday morning as to whether there's a reasonable prospect of a (spending) resolution being passed and signed during the course of the day," said Edwin Dale, an aide to budget director David Stockman.

If it looks like the measure will be enacted, the memo said, non-essential workers will stay in their offices and perform "shutdown activities." If not, those workers will be sent home, likely at midday, officials said. They would stay off the job until a measure is approved.

Federal law prevents workers from volunteering their services to the government.

The departments of Commerce, Defense, Education, Energy, Health and Human Services, Interior, Justice, Labor, State and Treasury and a number of other agencies, were affected.

A CHRISTMAS STORY

To me this is a beautiful Christmas story. I went to the Rivergate Shopping Center recently and left my pocketbook on top of my car, losing it as I drove off. Some beautiful people found it and went to great lengths to locate me and bring it back to me. They would accept no reward, but I'd like for everyone to know what kind and honest people they are. They are Mr. and Clinton B. Cox. They live here in Greenville. Mrs. C.B.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

My husband has been trying to teach our children to speak "Thermostat" for years.

They say the younger you start to teach them a foreign language, the faster they learn. This has not been the case. "Flush" did not come easy for them. Neither did "Lights."

"Thermostat" is one of the last of the foreign languages to be taught to children. It comes just after "Hang up that Phone" and "Shut the Door." (Note to parents: Please do not proceed to "Thermostat" until they are speaking Shut the Door fluently.)

There are several methods of teaching "Thermostat." Some parents use the Berlitz concept. They put recordings beneath the pillows of children that instruct, "A thermostat controls the furnace. When the door is open, the bad cold air wants to come in and the furnace tries very hard to heat the outdoors. God never meant for a furnace to heat America or He would never have invented snow."

One of the first phrases child learns about "Thermostat" is "My room is cold." "My room is cold" voluntarily triggers his motor activity. He will proceed to the thermostat and with nimble precision move the thermostat dial to 82 degrees. (By sheer coincidence, the boiling point of his father.)

This is followed by "My room is hot." However, a strange phenomenon occurs. Instead of turning the thermostat back, your child will open a window. He needs work in the language.

Our children were slow. We spent a year and a half on "How do you spell relief? S-W-E-A-T-E-R!" We spent another two years on "Daddy is not a rich man and we can no longer afford three children."

It wasn't until last week when we took them on a field trip to the meter that they seemed to comprehend what we were talking about. We showed them how the little dials twirled around on the meter and how we were charged for each little twirl. They watched our lips closely as we formed the word "Bankruptcy."

One of them said, "Wait a minute. Are you telling us that the colder it gets outside, the harder the furnace has to work to keep it warm inside?" We nodded happily. "And every time it clicks on it costs money?" We jumped up and down excitedly.

"Why didn't you say so?" My husband smiled. "Do you think we can progress to 'Thank you'?" "I hate to push 'em before they're ready," I said.

Readers Write More On Tipping

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I have to say a few words to that waitress who wants to help us "dumbbells" figure 15 percent of the check.

Do you tip the man who helps you try on 20 pairs of shoes? Do you tip the bus driver? Or the pilot? How about the mailman? Or the garbage man? Or the milkman? And let's not forget the nurse who gives you a bath, makes your bed and empties your bedpans.

I'm a schoolteacher. Nobody ever tipped me. I am not complaining, but I'm tired of people who take a job waiting on tables and then gripe because they don't make more on tips. If they don't earn a decent salary, they should find another line of work.

FED UP IN DENVER

DEAR ABBY: Most people who depend on tips for a living (waiters, waitresses, doormen, hairdressers, manicurists, drivers, etc.) appreciate cash tips because they can be pocketed easily and not declared as taxable income.

I suppose some people are 100 percent honest about cash tips, but I never knew one who didn't cheat a little now and then. Me included.

ONLY HUMAN IN HOUSTON

DEAR ABBY: You told "Poorhouse" that some people tip only what they can afford. This reminded me of my father's advice as I embarked on adulthood: "A tip is part of the cost of the meal. If you can't afford the tip, you can't afford to eat out."

"Never leave less than 15 percent. If you have only a dollar in your pocket, don't order more than 85 cents' worth of food."

SHARON IN DALLAS

DEAR SHARON: Did your father own a restaurant?

DEAR ABBY: My father is a surgeon. Suppose he sent the following bill:

|----------------|----------|
| Surgery | $ 3,200 |
| 15 percent tip | $ 480 |
| Amount due: | $ 3,680 |

What would you think?

DOC'S SON, HILLSBORO, KAN.

DEAR SON: Your father would be cutting his own throat.

DEAR ABBY: "One Foot in the Poorhouse" has the other foot in her mouth. Please tell us where she works. I'd like to go there and "stiff" her.

EX-WAITRESS, PALM SPRINGS, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: Regarding the 19-year-old Texas "boy" who "tested his manhood" by getting two girls pregnant, let me tell you about another 19-year-old boy's test of "manhood":

He has been my special friend for almost two years. Six months ago, he asked me to marry him. He talked to my father, explaining that because of our ages (I'm 18), finances and college ahead of us, it will be some time before we can marry. We are normal teen-agers with the same desires as other kids and very much in love.

Many miles separate us, and we see each other only once every six weeks, but we have stayed with our commitment to keep our relationship pure and holy.

His test of "manhood"? When he is tempted to go beyond a kiss, he has me place my hand beside his on his Bible, and he asks God to give him the strength to be the man he needs to be.

Abby, our love is strong, but our faith in the Lord is stronger, and we have resolved that when we take our sacred marriage vows, we will do so with a clear conscience.

WALKING WITH GOD IN BAY, ARK.

DEAR WALKING: God bless you both. And he will.

Dr. Frederick C. Mish, editorial director of Merriam-Webster Inc., says the names of some phobias were probably coined for the sake of the words themselves and may not be at all common in medical parlance. Dextrophobia, for instance, is the fear of objects on the right side of the body. And there is cherephobia, the fear of happiness.

THE WEDDING PARTY

The traditional wedding party consists of bride, groom, father of the bride, and attendants.

The general rule of thumb is to have one usher for every 50 guests. There may be more ushers than bridesmaids at a wedding, but etiquette says there should never be more bridesmaids than ushers.

In the U.S., traditional ages for flower girls and ringbearers are four to seven. Junior ushers and bridesmaids are those under age four.

It is not obligatory for the bride to invite the groom's sisters to be in the wedding party unless they are also friends. However, if they are the appropriate age it is a nice gesture.

The bride's father is her traditional escort down the aisle. If she has no father, her older brother, uncle or godfather are first choices. No matter who escorts her, however, in the absence of a father, it is the mother, and not the escort, who should respond to the question "Who gives this woman..."

Views On Dental Health

Kenneth T. Perkins, D.D.S. P.A.

PROBING THE POCKETS

Stephen K., a 46-year-old accountant, noticed that his gums bled when he brushed his teeth or bit into an apple. He visited his dentist who commenced examining him by inserting a little "perio" probe between his teeth and gums to find the extent of the "pockets". After an X-ray examination showing the amount of tooth-supporting bone loss, he was given the bad news. He had advanced periodontal disease and would lose at least three teeth which were beyond help and have to undergo extensive care to hopefully save the other 29.

Of the 125 million adults who still have their teeth (20 million have already lost theirs), about 100 million have periodontal disease. And in 32 million, it is in an advanced stage, meaning that they too will become toothless unless they undergo extensive treatment.

There is no need for periodontal tooth loss. Learn to clean your teeth properly and they should last a lifetime like they are supposed to.

DINNER FOR FOUR
Pork Loin & Potatoes
Hot Broccoli Vinaigrette
Red Wine Pears & Coffee
RED WINE PEARS
Inspired by a famous French chef's recipe.

- 1/2 cup sugar
- 1 cup dry red wine
- 1/4 cup 35-proof domestic creme de cassis (black currant liqueur)
- Juice of 1/2 medium lemon (about 2 tablespoons)
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 2 peppercorns
- 1 clove
- 4 medium Bosc pears (about 2 pounds)

In a straight-side, non-corrosive medium saucepan heat sugar, wine, cassis, lemon juice, vanilla, peppercorns and clove, stirring until sugar is dissolved. Pare pears but leave stems intact. Cut a small slice from the blossom end of each pear but leave uncored; stand upright in wine mixture; bring to a boil. Cover and simmer, turning pears on their sides and basting 2 or 3 times, until pears are tender when pierced with a fork — 20 to 30 minutes. Arrange pears upright in a serving bowl; pour wine mixture over them; cool, basting often. Chill. Makes 4 servings.

Sewage Plant Is Near

Greenville Utilities officials now believe that construction on a $10.4 million sewage treatment plant could begin next year, which is 12 to 14 months sooner than previously projected.

Perhaps more importantly, the officials now see the probability of an 87½ percent grant from state and federal funds for financing the project. That could mean the $2 million in local funds currently on hand could be enough to finance the project without resorting to the $4 million in bonds which city residents voted. Bonds that are not issued do not have to be paid back and thus all Greenville Utilities customers should benefit from the savings of principal and interest.

Early construction of the plant looked bleak a few weeks back because Greenville was far down the priority list of municipalities in line for the state and federal funds.

Now it appears that Greenville will move to fifth on the list, virtually assuring that the grant will be forthcoming.

Since the site was purchased and the plans prepared for the facility there is nothing to hold up construction once the funds are assured.

All this is highly important to the area. The old plant is obsolete and there is not enough area there to modernize and expand it. The new plant will be built on a site north of the Tar River and the site will accommodate expansion up to 20 million gallons a day which, according to current projections, would carry us 20 to 40 years into the future.

The new plant is essential for current needs and residential, business and industrial growth. It appears we may have it sooner and at far less cost to GUC customers than anyone dared dream.

Failed Society's Result

What do you do in a crumbling communist society when a leader arises from the people to challenge the mismanagement?

You arrest him, of course, and once he is released if he seeks to speak out again, you harass him and hang the threat of further detention over him.

Lech Walesa, the leader of the outlawed Solidarity trade union in Poland, is the perfect example. He has been arrested and released and when he attempted to speak last week he was detained again. Communism as a form of government has failed. It takes from the people to build immense war machines which can be used against the people. It returns little in the way of a better life to the people which it rules. A communist government simply consumes those who created it, and it certainly cannot tolerate any criticism lest it fall.

That is the sum of the travails of Lech Walesa.

THIS AFTERNOON

No Clear Course

By PAUL T. O'CONNOR
RALEIGH — Several weeks ago, it appeared that Gov. Jim Hunt's administration would endorse a one-year extension of the deadline for getting all children out of North Carolina jails. In a recent interview, Hunt said he'd decided to support the extension. But now the study committee which originally proposed the extension has retracted that recommendation and no one, including Hunt, appears to have a clear course charted on the issue.

tention Study Committee — the group which originally suggested to Windley that he seek the extension — to retract its recommendation. As if this thing isn't confusing enough already, the committee then refused to endorse any action whatsoever, according to Bob Atkinson, one of Windley's chief underlings.

PAUL T. O'CONNOR

The committee's retraction took everybody by surprise. Hunt didn't know about it. When questioned at a recent press conference, he said he hadn't been told that they'd changed their minds. Yes, he said, he might have to rethink his stand on the extension now. Windley didn't know about it either. He said he'd have to check with Atkinson before commenting. Windley's boss,

Sara Morrow, human resources secretary, was out of town and couldn't be reached. But her press aide said it was new to him, too. Atkinson said the committee's initial recommendation had only been a tentative one. It had been agreed, he said, that a final recommendation would come only after release of the GACCY report. "The committee met for four hours and decided that it was impossible to reach a consensus one way or the other," he said. "My opinion...is that the best the committee can do is help to identify the issues."

Sentiment on the study committee, he said, ranged beyond the question of whether or not to grant the extension. Also included were arguments to recommend repeal of the law altogether, thus giving the state until the federal deadline on January 1, 1987. Sentiment for repeal comes from remote rural areas where the jail is the only secure facility for holding children.

A Cloud Over Standbys

I was in the stand-by line the other day at Chicago's O'Hare Airport hoping to get on an airplane going to Washington. I asked the ticket attendant what my chances were of getting on the flight. She said, "There are six people before you."

Usually during the holiday season I have a lot of good will toward my fellow men and women. But when you're on stand-by trying to get home, you lose your moral compass.

I started hoping that at least seven people who had confirmed reservations would miss the plane. In one fantasy I saw the back of a truck break open and thousands of oil drums bouncing all over the highway leading to the airport, causing the biggest traffic jam in years and preventing the confirmed Washington passengers from getting to O'Hare on time.

As each traveler arrived at the gate to check in, resentment welled up in me. I tried to spot the other six passengers who were before me. Probably people who really had no business going to Washington in the first place. I saw one elderly lady loaded down with Christmas gifts in a shopping bag, holding a stand-by ticket. You would think her family would come to her, instead of making her take the arduous trip on the plane.

Another man standing by looked to me like a lobbyist who was probably on his way to the nation's capital to persuade some congressman to allow his company to dump hazardous wastes in Lake Michigan.

I watched a couple embracing as if they didn't want to say goodbye. I asked the ticket attendant about the woman, I cared about the woman, I thought to myself, he'd just call his wife and say his boss wanted him to stay over in Chicago another night.

A man stopped me and asked if he was at the right gate for Washington. "I don't think so," I told him. "I believe it's at the other end of the airport."

Unfortunately he wouldn't take my word for it, and he got on the plane.

Then I saw a young man. I went up to him and said, "I'm a veteran of World War II and I haven't seen my family since Pearl Harbor. You wouldn't be willing to give me your boarding pass would you?"

He just laughed at me, which shows you what young people think of veterans who served in one of our better wars.

The time was getting close for the plane to leave. The stand-by people were grouped anxiously around the counter. The attendant begged us to please be seated and she would call our names. But none of us were taking any chances.

I saw three people racing down the corridor loaded with carry-on baggage. I hated myself for thinking it, but I was hoping one of them would trip and have to be taken off for first aid. No such luck. They all made it.

Finally everyone who had a confirmed reservation was checked in and the attendant started calling out the stand-by names. "Morris Glesby." He breathed a sigh of relief. Dr. Richard A. McConaughy." We all shook his hand. "Paul Bernstein." He seemed embarrassed as he said goodbye to us. "Ira Harris." He pretended he didn't know us. "Diane Walker." She was crying as she waved to us. Two to go. "Robert Brustein." He gave me his business card in case I ever got to Boston.

I saw the attendant pick up my stand-by receipt. Suddenly a woman appeared out of nowhere and slapped her ticket on the counter. "I'm Rose Styron," she said breathlessly, "and I have a confirmed reservation."

"It's too late," I yelled at her. "You should have been

Worries In Campus Life

By MAXWELL GLEN and CODY SHEARER
WASHINGTON — Christmas 1981 was not America's merriest, but for young Ronald Reagan, it was particularly dour. The ever-popular college senior came home that year to Dixon, Ill., and learned that his dad, a traveling salesman, had been fired.

Within six months, as the president has often told the story, the Reagans would be living in a single room, cooking on a hotplate and accepting meals from neighbors. Reagan had to find work, if only for his family's sake. After graduation, as Reagan biographer Lou Cannon points out, Reagan let slide his relationship with Margaret "Mugs" Cleaver and applied for work at every radio station within an hour of Dixon. Like it or not, the rest is history.

Such depression-era recollections might lead some Americans to think that today's college seniors have it relatively easy this Christmas. But as students come home this week with the usual bag of dirty laundry, many bear an unshakable pall. They, too, as Cannon wrote of Reagan, "have dreams but no prospects."

Indeed, interviews with college officials suggest that panic over jobs is an epidemic with truly physical manifestations. An unusually high number of undergraduates, campus clinics report, are suffering from ulcers, cold sores, sleeplessness and other stress-related maladies. Meanwhile, campus psychologists note that student anxieties have shifted from personal matters to job concerns, prompting some shrinks to double as career counselors.

"We're treating all kinds of students we've never seen before," said one doctor at the University of Maryland. "Many of these students are from middle-class backgrounds and normally don't feel insecure."

Generally, depending on their academic performance, seniors are coping with the job crunch in two ways. The top students are trying to adjust to the prospect of a not-so-perfect job. For most people, this can be done easily. Others, however, don't stoop with grace. For example, one recent Harvard graduate with expertise in foreign policy matters couldn't understand why the campaign manager of a Democratic presidential hopeful "giggled" when talk turned to salary. "I only asked for something like $25,000," our friend said glumly.

Many less-stellar classmates, meanwhile, to extend the undergraduate career, rather than bother with job hunting. More schooling now, many figure, will hurt less in the long run — a logic that could bear fruit. Analysts predict an 11 percent drop in jobs for baccalaureate degree holders next June, with an 18 percent drop in the demand for engineers.

Most worrisome are underclassmen who've been traumatized by their elders' trials and obsessed with choosing the right major. "It used to be that students waited until the last half of their senior year before deciding what to do about life after school," recalled Thomas Gates, director of counseling at the University of Virginia. "But now students are coming in right after orientation week."

It doesn't take a lot of smarts to infer that many students lack good models when shaping their careers. Many clearly expect that a high-paying job with Merrill Lynch is a natural first step. For those who've spent their lives surrounded by well-paid parents and competitive peers, other, intermediate roles may be too hard to imagine.

"The problem is that too many students are planning their lives in the fast lane," said Victor Lindquist, placement director at Northwestern University. "Everyone wants to be an instant celebrity."

Lindquist tells students what they probably already

OF LIFE'S ESSENCE

Here are a few of George Washington's rules of war:

1. Never attack a position in front which you can gain by turning.
2. The first qualification of a soldier is fortitude under fatigue and privation; courage is only the second.
3. A general of ordinary talent, occupying a bad position and surprised by a superior force, seeks safety in retreat. But a great captain supplies all his deficiencies by his courage, and marches boldly to meet the attack.

These are not only good rules of war, but are also of great value when it comes to meeting the onslaught of moral temptation. No matter how we try to plan it, life is a struggle. We may call it an adventure, an effort to use one's capacities to the full. Some may call it bondage, yet always we come back to this: there is struggle in it. In fact, struggle is the very essence of life. — Elisha Douglass

Broiler Sales Up, Slim Profit

By THERESA HUMPHREY
Associated Press Writer
DOVER, Del. (AP) —

Americans are eating more chicken, and in many cases are choosing it over pork and beef. But the broiler industry's profits still are slim.

A recent report on eating habits issued by the Center for Science in the Public Interest, a consumer group, showed that between 1976 and 1981, annual poultry consumption per person jumped by 10.6 pounds, or more than 20 percent, to 62.8 pounds. Consumption of beef fell by 19 pounds, or more than 19 percent, to 78.8 pounds.

By 1990, chicken should be the No. 1 meat, predicted Bill P. Roenigk, economic research director for the council.

But, even though the demand for poultry is greater, so is the supply — an imbalance that has held down the price of chicken and the profits of the industry.

"To some extent, the industry has overreacted and has produced more broilers than is needed," Roenigk said. "Profits are really slim. I think a lot of that is due to the sluggish economy. But that aside, we think the long term is still a healthy outlook."

In 1981, retail prices for broilers were 74 cents per pound, compared to $1.52 for pork and $2.39 for beef, according to the National Broiler Council in Washington. This year poultry and beef prices are about the same while pork prices are higher.

The industry's traditional profit margin has been just under 2 cents a pound. In 1979, when profits began to slide, the U.S. Department of Agriculture said the broiler industry lost 1.1 cents on each pound produced. In 1980 it was 1.5 cents and in 1981 5 cents.

Roenigk said this year "it looks like it's going to be about 3.5 cents per pound." He said 12 billion pounds will be produced in 1982 for a loss of more than $420 million.

Some of the larger producers, such as Perdue Farms Inc., based in Salisbury, Md., and Holly Farms of Wilkesboro, N.C., have responded by advertising heavily. But Roenigk said the industry as a whole does not foot its own horn.

"Doctors and other health officials are doing the job for us. People write to us asking for recipes using chicken because their doctors told them to eat more."

Many doctors consider chicken healthier than red meat because it has less fat and cholesterol.

As the attention grows, so does the variety of chicken products.

Fast-food restaurants have added chicken sandwiches as an alternative to the hamburger. Instead of just whole birds or packages of parts, grocery stores offer chicken patties, chicken lunchmeat and chicken hotdogs, which Roenigk says now have about 15 percent of the hotdog market.

And as chicken has become more popular, the growers have learned to produce it more efficiently.

"The birds are growing faster," said Bill Stephens, spokesman for the Delmarva Poultry Industry Inc., a non-profit organization based in Georgetown, Del. "Going back 40 years, it took 12 weeks to grow chickens. Now it takes seven."

In 1963, the average bird was about 3½ pounds after 9½ weeks and had eaten about 2.4 pounds of feed for each pound of meat, Stephens said. In 1982, the birds are weighing about 4¼ pounds in about seven weeks on 1.9 pounds of feed per pound of meat.

Frank Perdue, who considers himself the "chicken king" of the industry, said his company does its own genetic research trying to produce a better chicken.

Perdue, which has four processing plants, produces 800 million pounds of poultry a year, about 260 million chickens.

The broiler industry extends from the Delmarva Peninsula, which encompasses Delaware and the Eastern shores of Maryland and Virginia, through the Carolinas, to Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Arkansas, Louisiana and eastern Texas.

Delmarva is responsible for 12 percent of the production — 433 million chickens, or 1.3 billion pounds, last year.

Arkansas has the largest share at 16 percent. Broilers are also produced on the West Coast and in Maine. The industry is more than just the large companies. They own the chickens, but about 90 percent of the birds are grown by farmers under contract. The latest figures available, from 1978, showed 20,000 growers involved nationwide, Roenigk said.

One reason the broiler market is soft, said Roenigk, is that exports have fallen from 6 percent of production in 1981 to 3 percent this year. "And the extra 3 percent is ending up here at home and has had a dramatic impact on the price we receive."

Legislators Say They Face Crisis Of Credibility

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — One of the most important problems facing the 1983 General Assembly is its lack of credibility with voters, some legislators said in response to a recent Associated Press survey.

Lawmakers must polish an image tarnished by criminal convictions of four veteran legislators and allegations against two more while sagging tax revenues and mounting budget requests threaten a financial crisis.

"The major issue is credibility of the General Assembly and the legislative process in dealing with critical issues that confront us," said Rep. Parks Helms, D-Mecklenburg. "We have to adopt a way to improve our image, effectiveness and efficiency."

Helms made the comments in response to a questionnaire mailed to all 170 legislators last month. He noted that the credibility problem is not limited to North Carolina.

Another representative, who asked that he not be identified, called for "restoring political faith in the system." He said the Legislature will have to show that it's not "at the mercy of fate" but has the leadership to pull the state through its financial troubles.

Teachers and state employees don't understand why legislators can't find money for salaries that have been frozen for a year, Helms said.

The salaries were frozen when tax revenues, now running about 5.4 percent higher than last year at this time, fell short of budget projections of 8.9 percent growth.

"We do have substantial resources, it's just a matter of priorities," Helms said. "There's always a question of allocating resources one way or another and setting priorities."

If one of those priorities means raising taxes, Helms said the Legislature should have enough courage to do that. He said he knew of no lawmakers who lost seats because they supported an increase in the gasoline tax in the 1981 session.

"You must generate respect in people so you can make those hard, difficult decisions," Helms said. "We have got to convince North Carolinians that this Legislature can handle problems and deal with them."

Faith in the legislature also has been eroded by the criminal convictions of several former lawmakers, he and others said.

Former Rep. Ron Taylor, D-Bladen, was sentenced to five years in prison and fined $10,000 after pleading guilty to accepting a bribe.

Former Rep. Roger Bone, D-Nash, pleaded guilty to defrauding two banks of as much as $526,000 and was sentenced to a three-year suspended sentence.

Former Sen. Harold Baker, R-Wilkes, is appealing a conviction for possession of a stolen vehicle.

Former Sen. Charles Vickery, D-Orange, pleaded guilty to misdemeanor charges of issuing worthless checks.

The names of Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green and Sen. R.C. Soles, D-Columbus, also have surfaced during the undercover Color investigation into corruption in Columbus and Bladen counties.

Both have denied any wrongdoing and no charges have been filed against them.

"It reflects on all of us," Helms said. "It reflects on the institution itself."

here 15 minutes ago." "I couldn't help it. A truckload of oil barrels busted loose on the highway and I was caught in a traffic jam."

The attendant looked at me and said, "I'm sorry. I'll have to honor her ticket. She has the last seat."

Mrs. Styron took her boarding pass and said to me, "It wasn't my fault. Merry Christmas."

"Bah, humbug," I replied.

as she disappeared behind the gate.

"What do I do now?" I asked the attendant.

"You can go to the bar. They have an eggnog happy hour from four to seven for all stand-by passengers who didn't make their planes."

The GACC report argues that by rewriting the state laws on detaining children, the state can significantly reduce the number of children who must be held in the first place. Not only will the state be able to do without jails for children, they say, but also they'll be able to go without building any new juvenile detention centers. Overall, the state would be better off holding fewer children in secure detention facilities and developing more nonsecure alternatives such as temporary shelters and emergency foster care, they say.

It's pretty late in the game for Hunt's advisers to be so split on an issue — especially one that faces a deadline and must, therefore, be considered this session. Expect the decision to be made by the time he presents his crime message to the General Assembly in late January.

dread most: to consider apprenticeships and messenger jobs in areas of interest and expertise. While these jobs won't entirely pay the rent, they remain the best way to get a foot in the door, as they did in Ronald Reagan's earlier days.

Unfortunately, life beyond the internship doesn't beckon as sweetly as it did 50 years ago. College degrees have replaced the high school diploma as testament to compulsory education; women have joined men in the workplace, upsetting the old order; job openings fall increasingly in areas of technical expertise and training. The mere thought of entering the mercantile maelstrom has thrown young Americans into mental anguish. We wonder how it will affect them in the future.

OPEC Formally Agrees To A Production Ceiling

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — OPEC oil ministers formally agreed today to a daily production ceiling of 18.5 million barrels through 1983 and to freeze their base price at $34 a barrel indefinitely, OPEC president Yahaya Dikko announced today. But the ministers put off until later a decision on how to divide sales among each of the 13 countries in the oil cartel — an issue that has threatened OPEC unity.

Dikko, Nigeria's oil minister, announced the new production ceiling and the price freeze at a press conference at the end of the second day of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries' year-end meeting. He said the issue of production quotas for individual members will "require further consultations by member governments."

The new production ceiling amounts to 1 million barrels a day less than estimated current production.

Before the agreement was reported, sources close to the talks said Iran and other countries were seeking higher production quotas for themselves at the expense of Saudi Arabia.

The sources said Saudi Arabia was being asked to hold its production at about 1 million barrels a day below its current voluntary ceiling of 7 million.

In a series of closed-door talks Sunday, the ministers pleaded their cases. The cartel has been racked by disputes over how to share oil sales and avert a price collapse.

A system for limiting each members' output is considered by analysts to be essential to OPEC's unity, because a world oil glut has pushed the group to the brink of a price-cutting war.

But Dikko insisted there will be no price war. "We will all exercise our sense of responsibility," he said.

OPEC's official price of $34 a barrel is about $4 higher than equivalent oil sold outside the cartel.

Before agreement was reported, Humberto Calderon Berti, Venezuelan oil minister, said "We have to keep the price at $34."

Iran and Saudi Arabia, who hold the keys to an OPEC agreement, had given little indication Sunday that they were ready to compromise on the production-sharing issue.

Saudi Arabia is by far the biggest producer in OPEC, but Iran is trying to expand its role in the 13-member organization. Iran made a new, though mainly symbolic, step in that direction by proposing that a member of its delegation be named secretary-general of OPEC. Marc Nan Nguema of Gabon, who currently holds the job, is scheduled to step down next year.

A more serious problem for OPEC is Iran's insistence that it be given a bigger share of sales at Saudi Arabia's expense.

Saudi Arabian state radio on Sunday accused some OPEC members of "premeditated internal sabotage" and said the country would take suitable measures to protect the interests of the majority in OPEC. The radio did not say what those measures would be, nor did it name the countries it called the transgressors.

Saudi Oil Minister Ahmed Zaki Yamani told reporters today his country was not willing to be included in an OPEC production-sharing plan, but insisted Saudi Arabia had tried to accommodate the needs of other OPEC members. The Saudis never committed themselves to the production quota plan worked out last March, but have maintained a self-imposed ceiling in what they call the interest of cartel unity.

Yamani said Sunday that his country was pumping about 5 million barrels a day, well below the Saudis' voluntary limit of 7 million barrels. Iran says it is producing 3 million barrels, compared with the 1.2 million-barrel ceiling it was assigned in March.

OPEC's overall output is estimated at 19.5 million barrels daily, well above the total 17.5 million set in March.

Indonesia and other countries have said at this meeting that the Saudis should participate in the production quotas.

The board will welcome three new members at Tuesday's meeting.

Farming Seen Family Affair

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The majority of farm women, even when they have children and regular household chores, also help with the harvest, tend livestock and do other jobs, says an Agriculture Department report.

"Farming is usually a family affair, shared to varying degrees by husbands and wives," the report said.

Its findings were based on a 1980-81 study sponsored by USDA and conducted by the National Opinion Research Center. The survey involved about 2,500 farm women and 570 men.

"The researchers also noted that farm statistics, farm policies and programs, and efforts to inform farmers sometimes fail to recognize the extent to which women are actively engaged in the business of agriculture," the report said.

Some of the survey's findings about the involvement of women in major farm tasks:

—One-third to one-half of the women were involved in field work and harvesting, making major farm purchases, marketing farm products, and supervising hired or family labor.

—On livestock farms, about two-thirds contributed to animal care, including herding livestock and milking dairy cows.

—Younger wives were more likely to tackle heavier jobs, reducing the need for hired labor until children could take over.

—In general, older wives "had a smaller physical work load but not a smaller voice" in running the farm.

—Overall, 55 percent of the women considered themselves to be partners with their husbands. Nine out of 10 said they were satisfied with their level of responsibility in making farm decisions.

—However, few women listed farming as their occupation on income tax forms. Most of those without off-farm jobs identified themselves as housewives.

The report was in a new issue of Farmline, which is published by USDA's Economic Research Service.

"Although 60 percent of the women had grown up on a farm or ranch, many confessed reservations about farming as a way to earn a living," the report said.

"But in general the women, like their husbands, were quite satisfied with farming as a way of life. Half the women belonged to one or more agricultural organizations."

The survey also probed attitudes of farm women and their husbands on issues, including federal policies and the role of USDA in their lives.

"Dollars-and-cents issues emerged as the dominant concern when subjects were asked to identify the most important thing USDA could do to help farm and ranch people," the report said.

Specifically, 25 percent of the women and 16 percent of the men said USDA should take actions to increase farm prices.

But not all of the responses were consistent, and many of those surveyed said "the greatest need was to reduce government interference in the agricultural economy."

Congress And Pentagon Probe B-1 Bomber Funds Allegations

CHICAGO (AP) — Congress and the Pentagon are looking into allegations that Rockwell International Corp. diverted funds from the space shuttle program to develop the B-1 bomber, the Chicago Tribune has reported.

The inquiry will try to determine whether the alleged practice contributed to nearly $5 billion in cost overruns on the space shuttle and unrealistically low cost estimates for the B-1, according to sources quoted in Sunday's editions of the newspaper.

Rockwell agreed in November to pay $1.5 million to settle a Justice Department civil suit charging the company with overbilling taxpayers as the prime contractor for the space shuttle.

The settlement ended a three-year investigation of Rockwell by the FBI, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and Defense Department auditors.

The Justice Department complaint accused Rockwell of shifting expenses from a "fixed price" Air Force contract to the "cost-plus" space shuttle contract.

Lt. Col. William T. Cooper, the Pentagon's public affairs officer for the B-1, said Sunday he knew nothing about a new investigation of Rockwell or the allegations.

The Tribune reported that hundreds of timecards showed that after President Jimmy Carter ordered the B-1 program scrapped in 1977, Rockwell executives kept engineers working on the bomber while billing their salaries to the space shuttle.

Former Rockwell employee Ray Sena supplied the records, the newspaper said. Sena was fired in 1979 after he provided timecards, travel vouchers and evidence to the FBI showing irregularities in other programs, including billing costs for military satellites to the shuttle, it said.

A Pentagon investigative report lists the names of several mid-level Rockwell supervisors, saying they gave depositions acknowledging they helped charge the shuttle account for work done on the Havstar Global Positioning System, a navigational satellite.

Sena told the Tribune that after the settlement last month, he was given the timecards from the B-1 project by someone whom he declined to identify.

The new material "shows that they did the same thing with B-1 as they did with GPS," said Sena. "Once Carter shut off B-1 money they went ahead and built the plane but charged it off to the shuttle."

The Tribune said Rockwell spokesmen declined to discuss the allegations.

Israeli Panel Orders Further Sharon Testimony

JERUSALEM (AP) — The judicial panel probing the Beirut massacre announced today it was recalling Defense Minister Ariel Sharon at the request of at least one of the eight other witnesses who have been warned that the panel's findings may be damaging to them.

Commission spokesman Bezalel Gordon said he did not know which witnesses had requested Sharon's recall, or if more than one had made the request.

Sharon has told the commission he had nothing to add to his previous testimony. In his first appearance Oct. 25, he said he approved the entry of Lebanese Christian militiamen into the west Beirut Palestinian refugee camps of Sabra and Chatilla, believing they would pursue guerrillas and not harm civilians.

Gordon also announced a complicated second stage of judicial proceedings that raised the prospect of top Israeli officials cross-examining one another on the witness stand in an effort to prove they were not to blame for the bloodbath Sept. 16-18.

The three-man commission, set up by the government amid a storm of public protest over the massacre, has heard Sharon, Prime Minister Menachem Begin, Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir and the top military echelon.

On Nov. 24 it warned Sharon, Begin, Shamir and six other senior military and civilian officials that they might be ruled negligent for letting the Christians into the camps, or for not acting promptly to stop the killings.

The commission advised them to prepare defenses.

Gordon said that Begin, Sharon, Shamir and one general replied they had no further evidence to give. The other five asked to testify anew, give written evidence, or to cross-examine other witnesses.

He said that on Sunday the commission would take testimony from Mordechai Gur, a former chief of staff, who had asked to appear before the panel.

Then it would hear witnesses who were not under warning but whose reappearance was demanded by four of the officials who had been cautioned, he said. These witnesses were not identified, but Gordon said they were being called in by the Chief of staff, Lt. Gen.

Raphael Eytan, military intelligence chief Maj. Gen. Yehoshua Saguy; Sharon aide Avi Dudai, and the head of the Mossad intelligence service, whose identity is secret.

In the final stage, the commission planned to take evidence from Sharon, Dudai, the Mossad chief; Saguy, Eitan and Maj. Gen. Amir Drory, commander of Israeli forces in Lebanon, Gordon said.

No date was set for Sharon's second appearance, but Gordon said the commission would hold daily sessions through next week.

He said the latest schedule was worked out in a meeting between the investigators and representatives of the nine witnesses who are under warning.

Begin and Shamir were not asked to testify again, but could be recalled at a later stage, he said.

Some of the nine have asked to cross-examine certain witnesses, and will be able to do so in the next stage, Gordon said.

He said the International Red Cross refused an invitation to send witnesses, promising instead to send written material. He said refusals to testify also came from Thomas Friedman, the New York Times correspondent in Beirut, and some foreign medical personnel who treated massacre survivors in Sabra Camp. Three medical workers had testified previously.

The commission has the power to subpoena witnesses and penalize them for perjury. Its conclusions are only recommendations and it cannot issue charges or hold trials.

Some Spending Compromises

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than three dozen members of the House and Senate worked for about 12 hours haggling over a compromise spending bill to keep money flowing to government agencies and departments.

With the lame-duck 97th Congress approaching adjournment, this is likely to be the last major piece of legislation to be passed for the year.

Here are some of the elements of the compromise spending bill that House and Senate negotiators agreed to Sunday night:

- The bill would expire on Sept. 30, 1983, the end of the current fiscal year. That was the date preferred by the Senate. The House version included a March 15 expiration date.
- All money for public works jobs and other aid for the unemployed — $5.4 billion in the House bill and $1.2 billion in the Senate measure — was dropped after President Reagan threatened to veto the measure if these provisions were included.
- Money was put into the bill for recession relief, including $100 million for energy assistance for the poor and $25 million in job training for workers who are displaced from their jobs by new technology or economic problems.
- The $988 million that Reagan wanted for production of the first five MX missiles was dropped. The $2.5 billion Reagan wanted for research and development was included, but there is a stipulation that most of the money can't be spent until both houses of Congress approve a basing plan.

- The salaries of House members would increase 15 percent, or about $9,100, but senators would remain at the current level of $60,662.50 annually. In exchange, senators could earn unlimited honoraria, while House members would be limited to 30 percent of their salary. Senior civil servants and other government officials whose pay has been frozen for several years also would receive raises.
- A House-passed provision prohibiting use of federal health employee benefits for abortions was dropped.
- There would be $181 million for the Clinch River Breeder Reactor, a nuclear facility in Tennessee. The money could not be used to construct any buildings at the site, and efforts would be made to attract private capital.
- The Federal Trade Commission would retain its present ability to regulate state-licensed professionals such as doctors, dentists and lawyers. The Senate bill called for restricting such regulation activities. The outcome was a defeat for the American Medical Association, which lobbied hard for the restrictions.
- Money was included for the Garrison Diversion Unit in North Dakota and the O'Neill dam in Nebraska. The House had voted against money for the water projects.
- A Copyright Royalty Tribunal decision raising cable television copyright fees by 600 percent would be stayed until March 15. Cable television entrepreneur Ted Turner lobbied personally for the stay to allow a federal appeals court to rule on the fee increase.

Claim U.S. Food For Haitians Is Smuggled To Miami And Sold

MIAMI (AP) — Food provided by U.S. taxpayers to feed hungry and malnourished people in Haiti instead is turning up in area grocery stores catering to Haitian refugees, a newspaper reports.

The Miami Herald said the bags of food clearly are marked "not for sale or exchange."

In a report Sunday, the result of a four-month investigation of U.S. and United Nations aid sent to Haiti, the newspaper also said that much of the food intended for impoverished Haitians routinely is sold on black markets in the Caribbean island nation.

The newspaper offered conflicting views of the extent of the abuse.

"We've had troubles, that's no secret," said Fred Thomas, the ranking U.N. representative in Haiti. "We have serious deficiencies in the control of food."

One million Haitians received $23 million in U.S. food this year, according to government records. Most were schoolchildren, malnourished infants and poor rural workers. For some, a daily ration of wheat, cornmeal and milk from aid programs provided their only nutritious meal.

The U.S. General Accounting Office recently said that 10 percent of all food sent to Haiti is diverted from legal channels. Tony Jackson, food aid specialist with Oxfam, a private development agency, said such losses are between 30 and 50 percent.

Harlan Hobgood, the U.S. Agency for International Development director in Haiti, was much more conservative in his estimate.

"Our auditors can't find much leakage," he said. "What is lost doesn't amount to more than five percent. That's less than what is lost to shoplifting in a Safeway (grocery) store."

Hobgood could not explain how some of the food made its way back to this country.

The Herald said a reporter bought two 50-pound sacks of bulgar wheat that had been intended for free distribution to Haitians in their homeland. The price in a Miami grocery store was $50. The newspaper also found food from federal aid programs in four other Miami grocery stores, sometimes selling at high prices.

"I can't understand how ... it's getting there," Hobgood said. "It would be cheaper for them to buy Pillsbury flour."

One grocer said Haitians in Miami are willing to pay higher prices for the food they grew accustomed to eating in their homeland.

In the past, bags of grain sent to Haiti routinely were stolen from docks, customs warehouses and slow-moving trucks, the newspaper said, although some organizations, such as CARE, have gone to great lengths to stop the thefts.

CARE officials now ship food in sealed containers whenever possible, have a CARE representative present when the containers are opened, no longer store food in Haitian government facilities and insist that anyone who receives the food return the empty bag.

"No system is 100 percent," said Larry Holzman, CARE director in Haiti, "but with these controls we have every reason to believe that the food is being consumed by the people it was meant for."

Study Spanish Outpost On Isle

ST. CATHERINES ISLAND, Ga. (AP) — Scientists, working on this island off the Georgia coast, have found the remains of a 400-year-old mission, the northernmost Spanish colony in the New World between 1587 and 1683.

"It is unheard of to have an archaeological site untouched ... we can study the whole business of colonization here because this is one of the best preserved samples of that," said David Hurst Thomas, chairman of the Anthropology Department at the American Museum of Natural History in New York.

The mission site, an outpost of the Spanish settlement in St. Augustine, Fla., was overgrown with vegetation and had not been changed by subsequent settlements or by being discovered.

Archaeologists found the ruins of a church, a residence and a well, Thomas said. Artifacts include Spanish pottery, shroud clasps, a silver-plated tin saddle ornament and a religious medallion decorated with the Madonna figure and Latin lettering.

A significant part of the find was the discovery of the remains of some 75 Gule Indians beneath the church, where the settlement's cemetery was located.

The finding, a boon to archaeologists studying the Indian and European settlement of the East Coast, included artifacts that show the mixture of Indian culture with the evangelical efforts of the Jesuits and Franciscans who started the mission, Thomas said.

Insert Cans To Get Cash

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — This vending machine works backward, but it's supposed to.

The patented Cash for Cans machine is a new addition to the national recycling effort. Customers deposit their empty aluminum cans and collect money for them.

The machines work this way: feed the machine one can at a time, wait for the device to crush the can and collect whatever it was programmed to release. Depositors get coins or scrip to be exchanged for money.

About 100 machines, which look like standard vending units, were tested in San Diego last summer, and an improved model is replacing them this fall.

Vendo Co. of Fresno, maker of vending machines and computer cabinets, is manufacturing them under contract to Environmental Products Corp. of McLean, Va.

Their prime market will be the nine states that will have beverage container recycling laws by July. The machines will read can codes and refund deposits only on cans bought in the state.

In states without the so-called bottle bill, a vendor could get the market rate, about a penny per can, for refunds.

Six other businesses make aluminum recycling machines, but the Virginia company claims it is the first to produce a machine that accepts cans one by one.

Company representative Bob Fischer explained that the machine solves a major recycling problem by creating a convenient and economical aid to recycling.

The machine gets store employees out of the refund business and frees storage space, Fischer said. Distributors would also save space in trucks by picking up precrushed cans.

FBI Radios Are Monitored By Criminals, Spies

By MICHAEL J. SNIFFEN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Criminals and spies are eavesdropping on FBI radio communications throughout the nation, and the practice is not only legal, but also cheap.

In the past five years, there has been an explosion of eavesdropping on FBI radios all over the nation by organized crime figures, drug traffickers, career criminals, and even the news media and curious citizens.

As a result, fugitives have escaped, citizens have been injured, FBI agents have been threatened, investigations have been thwarted and the lives of agents and citizens have been endangered.

Calling the situation intolerable, the Justice Department asked Congress this month for $12 million to purchase radio systems that encode their transmissions. The department said that the very high frequency FM radio systems that all 59 FBI field offices use to communicate with agents in the street "can now be monitored by anyone in the country willing to pay $300 for an FM radio scanner," and without violating the law.

FBI Director William H. Webster has given the purchase of this equipment top priority in the bureau's multimillion-dollar program to acquire modern technology.

"It's dead serious," said Assistant FBI Director William A. Bayse, head of technical services, in an interview last week. "We're talking about a determined penetration of bureau on all fronts, including identification of personnel and vehicles and listening to the radio transmissions."

A grim joke has emerged from the problem. The FBI's Washington field office radio uses the call sign "KGB-770," because as one agent said, "We know the Soviet KGB is listening to every word."

Examples of serious problems in recent years include:

—In 1979, in a Northeastern city, the victim of an organized crime extortion cooperated with the FBI and arranged to pay the criminals. Agents relayed the payoff location to other agents by radio.

On arriving, the victim was searched and beaten by the criminals. Agents rushed in to save him from serious harm; they found radio scanners set to the FBI frequency.

—In a Midwestern office, agents relayed the address of a fugitive's hideout to radio cars. A malicious citizen listened in, found the telephone number for that address in a city directory, and warned the suspect that the FBI was on the way. Agents arrived minutes after the suspect fled and took another two weeks to apprehend him.

—On July 11, 1979, Colombian nationals engaged in South Florida narcotics wars opened fire with machine guns on a liquor store in a crowded suburban Miami shopping center. Two rival drug traffickers were killed, and two bystanders were wounded. The men have never been caught. Inside their abandoned van, agents found armor-shielded walls, automatic weapons and radio scanners tuned to police and FBI frequencies.

—In a California case still under investigation, a motorcycle gang gained enough information by monitoring FBI transmissions to identify an agent investigating them. They telephoned threats on the agent and his family.

Bureau officials will not divulge examples of monitoring by Soviet or other foreign intelligence agencies, but Bayse said, "You can assume the Soviets are going to use any kind of techniques they can to find out information about any of the intelligence agencies of the United States of which we are one."

The FBI has used radio channels in the very high frequency FM band for more than 20 years. Their transmissions cannot be picked up on normal FM radios, but cheap scanners are sold that can be set to any VHF channel or can automatically scan the VHF band of channels for any transmission.

"Our frequencies have been made public," Bayse said. FBI frequencies are available "in little, off-beat commercial documents" that sell for $5 at electronics stores, he said.

Leo Buss, chairman of the government's Interdepartmental Radio Advisory Committee, which assigns government radio channels, said those frequencies, including some used by law enforcement, were given out to citizens who asked for them, until a little over two months ago when they were classified.

Bayse said agents now use coded language on the radio, even changing the codes daily in sensitive operations, but "in a fast-breaking situation, you don't have time to convert to codes," Bayse said.

Last year, the bureau awarded a $13 million contract to Motorola to begin producing radios that almost instantaneously turn voice transmissions into a coded, digital stream that sounds like a continuous hiss on any radio not equipped with a secret electronic "key" to decode and restore the signal back to speech, Bayse said.

Los Angeles will get the first full system. "We've got to have it in time for the 1984 Olympics" there, Bayse said, recalling the 1972 games in Munich, West Germany, when Arab terrorists killed 17 people including 11 Israeli athletes after breaking into the Olympic village.

As part of its request for $130 million to establish special drug task forces throughout the nation, the Reagan administration has asked for another $12 million this year to put full, coded radio systems in its New York, Chicago, Miami, Washington, Boston, San Francisco and Detroit offices, which all are either the site of a drug task force or major organized crime activity.

Has Gift Suggestions For Undecided Givers

By BILL JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer
NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Can't decide on a Christmas present for that person who has everything? How about a rhinoceros beetle or a butterfly?

Arturo Crucet will be glad to fill your order. But a word of warning — butterflies, or beetles, aren't free.

"I have them from about $15 up to several thousand dollars each," says Crucet, a former high school biology teacher who turned a childhood hobby into a profitable business.

"Ninety-five percent of my stuff is under $25, the bread-and-butter items," the bearded Crucet says. "There aren't too many people who will pay $200, or even $100, for a butterfly."

But Crucet is able to ship collections of exotic insects throughout the world because he has enough customers who are willing to pay that price.

"I had one Japanese gentleman who had bought one of my beetle collections and he wrote asking me to make a similar one for him to give as a gift," Crucet says. "He just told me to make it up and let him know how much it cost and he'd send me a money order to have it shipped air express."

Although Crucet didn't say what the collection cost, he did say that large specimens of scarab beetles from Africa or rhinoceros beetles from South America could cost as high as $1,000 each.

"A bird wing butterfly from New Guinea would sell for several thousand dollars, if you could get one," he says. "It all depends on how rare the specimen is."

Buyers get a guaranteed specimen of the insect mounted on a cloth mat in a hand-made wooden frame, whether they spend $15 or $1,500. Each specimen is chemically treated to prevent deterioration, and Crucet writes the biological data on the back.

"I make the frames myself, from cutting the glass to staining the wood," Crucet says.

Although his initial contact with potential buyers often comes through arts and crafts fairs, much of his business comes from word-of-mouth advertising.

He has just finished four displays of native Oklahoma moths and butterflies for Donna Nigh, the state's first lady. She saw his work on display at the National Governor's Association meeting in northeastern Oklahoma earlier this year.

Crucet says his hobby began when he was growing up in the Panama Canal Zone, where his father worked for the government. "We lived in a little town in the jungle for a while, and I used to catch butterflies and moths," he says.

"Sometimes my father would take me to the canal at night and the fence would just be a tapestry of insects attracted by the lights."

His family bought land in Panama and he raises some of his insects there. Others are raised in Norman and still others are bought from people throughout the world.

Crucet says he used to get rare scarab beetles from someone in Angola.

His business got started when he gave some of his collections to friends.

"One day a friend told me about an arts and crafts show and said I should go," Crucet says. "I thought it was ridiculous, but finally packed up about 25 or 30 samples. They were all sold in about three hours, and I decided I was on to something."

Hold Tar Heel In Strangling

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — A man has been arrested for investigation of homicide after he walked into a Palm Springs police station and allegedly told officers that he had strangled his wife, a Riverside County sheriff's dispatcher said Sunday.

William Jeffries, 40, of Oakridge, N.C., was arrested Thursday night after his sister, who accompanied him, led Riverside County Sheriff's deputies to a home on Vista del Rio in Rancho Mirage, said Cquavator Gatson, reading from a press release. She added that the sister's name was not available.

At the home, deputies found the body of Rebecca Jeffries, 27, of Rancho Mirage, she said.

Two Ferries Collide In Big North Sea Storm

By MARK S. SMITH
Associated Press Writer
HARWICH, England (AP) — Two loaded ferries collided in a raging night storm off this English port, killing at least five people and sinking one of the vessels in the icy North Sea, police and rescuers said early today.

They said another person was presumed dead from the Sunday night smashup, which flung some people into the frigid, gale-whipped water. Helicopters, tugs and other vessels pulled 64 people to safety following the collision between the 4,263-ton European Gateway and 3,514-ton Speedlink Vanguard.

Some survivors said they were unable to find lifejackets on the European Gateway or crew members to guide them to liferafts.

Flares fired by rescuers over the heaving water lit up Harwich and the surrounding countryside throughout the search in what one rescuer called "a bloody awful night."

Chief Superintendent Mike Humberston of Essex County police said all the casualties came from the European Gateway. The ferry capsized and sank in shallow water about 30 minutes after the collision two miles offshore. Harwich is about 75 miles northeast of London.

A spokesman for the European Gateway's owners, the shipping firm Townsend Thoreson, said the vessel had left nearby Felixstowe 15 minutes before to sail to the Dutch city Rotterdam with 34 truck drivers and 36 crew aboard.

The Townsend Thoreson spokesman said the company would investigate complaints about lifejackets and lifeboats. He said, however, that the ferry had a passenger certificate requiring lifejackets and lifeboat space for every person aboard.

Police said there were no casualties aboard the other ferry. Colin Crowford, shipping and port manager for Sealink UK Ltd., said the Speedlink Vanguard was carrying a crew of 28 and no passengers.

Sealink U.K. Ltd. is owned by state-run British Rail which runs the nation's railroad network. Sealink in turn owns Northern Coasters Ltd. which owns the Speedlink Vanguard.

No tourists were believed to have been aboard either vessel.

"At this moment we do not know what caused the collision," the Townsend Thoreson spokesman said. "It is the first accident we have had in more than 20 years of operating."

He said the collision occurred at 10:48 p.m. (5:48 p.m. EST), ripping a 200-foot gash in the European Gateway's side. The bows of the other ferry were reported badly damaged.

Sea water flooded into the engine room of the European Gateway, snuffing out the ferry's generators and causing the vessel to list sharply.

The European Gateway managed to radio a distress call and the captain gave the order to abandon ship. The spokesman for the vessel's owner said some crewmen were able to launch a few liferafts but that others could not be launched because of the list.

Bulgarians Charged In Plot To Murder Pope

By VICTOR L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Writer
ROME (AP) — Italy's top law enforcement official formally confirmed today that three Bulgarians have been implicated in the shooting of the pope and revealed that two others are under investigation for alleged espionage.

Justice Minister Clelio Darida also called the Bulgarian capital a "principal contact point" for arms and drug traffickers in Italy.

Darida was the first of four Cabinet ministers reporting to Parliament on evidence in possession of the government regarding a so-called Bulgarian connection to terrorism in Italy.

He told the Chamber of Deputies that Ilario Sciacallo, who is heading the investigation into the attempted assassination of Pope John Paul II, has filed warrants against two Bulgarians — one arrested in Rome and a second who has returned to Bulgaria — while a third sought in the case is protected by diplomatic immunity.

Sergei Ivanov Antonov, the Rome station chief of the Bulgarian national airline, was arrested in Rome on charges of complicity in the May 13, 1981 shooting of the pope. A warrant has been issued for Maj. Zhelyo Vasilev, a former Bulgarian embassy employee, while another Bulgarian, Todor Aivazov, also an embassy employee, was named as a suspect although no warrant was issued because of his diplomatic immunity.

Darida disclosed that two other Bulgarians are under investigation in connection with the alleged espionage activities of an Italian labor union official, Luigi Scricciolo, who was arrested last February.

The justice minister charged that Scricciolo had contacts both with Bulgarian agents and the Red Brigades terrorists who kidnapped U.S. Brig. Gen. James L. Dozier last December. He also charged that Scricciolo had attempted to obtain NATO military secrets and information on the position of the United States and the Western Alliance regarding events in Poland.

Darida did not elaborate, but Scricciolo as head of the Socialist-led UIL union's international section visited Poland four times and helped arrange Solidarity union leader Lech Walesa's visit to Rome in January 1981.

Darida identified the two Bulgarians being investigated for espionage as Ivan Dartechev and Simeon Guernev and said they were both employees of the Bulgarian Embassy in Rome.

The justice minister said Italy is seeking the extradition of three Turks charged with furnishing Turkish gunmen Mehmet Ali Agca assistance in the shooting of the pope in St. Peter's Square on May 13, 1981. Agca is serving a life sentence in an Italian prison for the shooting.

One of the Turks, Musar Cedar Celebi, was arrested in West Germany in November. A second, Oral Celik, is at large. The third, Bekir Celenk, was picked up in Sofia, Bulgaria, on Dec. 9.

Celenk, wanted in his native Bulgaria on charges of drug smuggling and arms running, denied at a news conference in Sofia last Friday that he had anything to do with the attack. The two Bulgarians accused of involvement, Todor Aivazov and Maj. Zhelyo Vasilev, issued similar denials.

Reporting on the investigation by a judge in Trento, northern Italy, on an arms and drug smuggling ring reportedly operating in Italy, Turkey and Bulgaria, Darida said "Sofia represents one of the principal contact points of suppliers of drugs and arms."

He charged that at the beginning of 1981, drug traffickers met in a Sofia hotel to carve up the Italian trade from Turkish suppliers.

But he said Bulgaria has repeatedly refused requests made by Italian authorities to collaborate.

Darida said they have no evidence of involvement by Bulgarian secret agents in the drug trafficking. He also said it was "rather strange" that such vast trafficking could escape the notice of Bulgarian officials, whom he said were so "attentive to the activities of foreigners present in their country."

Fear Loss Due To Diesel Spill

KEY LARGO, Fla. (AP) — Officials have not determined the extent of damage to a wildlife breeding ground where 3,000 gallons of diesel oil spilled when a fuel truck collided with a car.

Jack Kassewitz Jr., head of the National Wildlife Rescue Team, said migratory birds did not appear in immediate danger, but the ingestion of even small amounts of diesel fuel is "100 percent lethal" to birds and marine life.

The driver of the car, John Blakely, was killed after he apparently fell asleep at the wheel Saturday and his car collided with the truck, whose driver was not hurt, state police said.

Iraqi Missiles Killed Hundreds

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — An Iraqi missile attack on the Iranian city of Dezful killed 62 people and wounded 287, Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency claimed today.

It said 120 houses were destroyed when the long-range Iraqi missiles hit the city of 100,000 people on Sunday. The agency, in dispatches monitored in Nicosia, said a second barrage of missiles hit the city 15 minutes after the first struck, landing among volunteers who had rushed to the site of the attack to rescue wounded.

Iraq's state-run news media made no mention of the missile attack, which could not be confirmed independently because both nations bar foreign observers from covering the war zone on a regular basis.

The daily Iraqi war communique broadcast by Baghdad radio Sunday night claimed only that the Iraqis had shelled the Iraqi port of Basra at the head of the Persian Gulf, and the town of Khanaqin at the northern end of the 350-mile-long battlefield.

Dezful, an important road junction, is 60 miles east of the border with Iraq in Iran's oil-producing Khuzistan province, the main center of operations in the 26-month-old war between the neighboring nations.

The city has been the target of frequent Iraqi artillery shelling, missile attacks and air raids since the outbreak of the war in September 1980 over disputed territory along the Shatt-al-Arab waterway.

But the frequency of the Iraqi attacks diminished in the past couple of months, following a successful Iranian counter-offensive that pushed most invading Iraqi forces back across the border.

In one sector due west of Dezful the Iraqis have managed to cross the border, penetrating about six miles inside Iraqi territory, where they reportedly remain entrenched.

The Iranian report that Dezful was hit by long-range Iraqi missiles would indicate these were fired from more than 60 miles away.

The reported attack was the second major Iraqi action against Iran over the weekend. On Saturday the Iraqis claimed their navy sank four Iranian naval and commercial vessels at Khor Mousa, at the northern end of the Persian Gulf.

Sales Rising

By The Associated Press

The countdown to Christmas is under way and retailers say shoppers are beginning to buy — enough to boost sales above last year's levels in many places.

"Sales are strong in every area," said Chris Bridenbaugh, spokeswoman for Nordstrom department stores, a 36-store chain with outlets in Alaska, Washington, Oregon, California, Utah and Montana.

Several retailers said the last week before the holiday would be critical.

J. Janvier Wetzel, executive vice president for marketing of The Broadway stores in Southern California, said: "The first two weeks (of December) were somewhat disappointing. It is apparent that consumers are still hesitant in their shopping and this means it will take a very strong finish to have a 'good' month."

Suzy Lewis, senior manager of public relations for the stores, said popular items included E.T. merchandise, "anything that's argyle" and electronics such as personal computers and video game cartridges.

Electronic items also were popular at the Sears, Roebuck and Co. in Egg Harbor Township, N.J., as were microwave ovens. "People are concerned about what they buy and, quite honestly, they want the items on sale," said John Arthur, merchandise manager. "We have cut our prices on quite a few items."

Spokesmen at many stores said practical items were the best sellers.

"People are staying more with the basics," said Arnie Manchester, district manager of Mervyn's stores in Los Angeles and Ventura counties in California. Manchester said he was looking for "good quality at good prices" and were passing up "anything that seems to get out into the fringe areas."

The search for bargains has helped the St. Vincent de Paul Society Store in Seattle, which sells donated merchandise. Sales are up about 15 percent from last year, according to general manager Ray Quick.

"I think people are more aware of thrift stores and are buying at lower-cost stores instead of jumping into expensive ones," Quick said.

Five Artificial Joints Helpful

CHICAGO (AP) — Russie Berndt doesn't mind when people call her a "bionic woman" because her five artificial joints allow her to move around by herself for the first time in years, and she thinks that's "marvelous."

Rheumatoid arthritis during the previous 23 of Mrs. Berndt's 34 years had left her unable to hold anything in her hand, climb stairs or step onto a street curb. She said she was afraid to go out of the house.

But in the last 18 months, her life has been transformed with an artificial hip, an artificial wrist, an artificial elbow and two artificial finger joints.

By the time doctors have completed overhauling her body, Mrs. Berndt figures she will have nine more new artificial joints to replace those in her knees, other elbow and hip, two shoulders and at least three more fingers.

"Everybody kids me about being a bionic woman," said Mrs. Berndt. "They want to know which piece of me is real. I think (the joints) are marvelous. It is truly amazing the difference they have made in relieving pain and letting me get around."

"The first artificial joint was scary, but after I saw the results of that one I was ready to go for another," she said. "I've got a lot of joints to be replaced and they'll be done slowly but surely."

Mrs. Berndt is gaining her freedom through surgical procedures and technology arising from the first successful silicone rubber finger joint, developed and implanted early in the 1960s.

Since then, millions of Americans have been fitted with artificial joints, said Dr. Jules Shapiro, assistant professor of orthopedic surgery at Rush Medical School.

Artificial shoulder joints are promising but still experimental because although they can relieve pain, they do not improve function significantly, said Shapiro, who installed the world's first artificial shoulder joint in Oslo, Norway, in 1969.

The body's adaptability to certain metals and plastics is at the heart of the developments. Researchers have found that the human immune system draws a blank when presented with cobalt-chromium alloy and polyurethane plastic.

Some Weathered Bid-Rigging Storm

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Despite legal action designed to make North Carolina contractors more competitive, large companies still dominate the industry while small ones fell by the wayside, state officials say.

Two years ago, dozens of companies were fined and debarred from bidding on state contracts after admitting rigging construction bids. But now officials are having second thoughts about the use of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act.

"There's sort of an inequity," said Gene Smith, North Carolina senior deputy attorney general. "The large have been able to maneuver around the federal debarments. It did work to the detriment of the small companies."

"The federal debarments got rid of the little guy," said Billy Rose, state highway administrator. "I can't say that was the sole factor, but that was a major factor."

North Carolina has brought civil actions against 65 suspected bid-rigging companies, while the federal government has charged 32 companies and 36 individuals with crimes.

Bid rigging, a conspiracy in which members agree not to compete for a contract by withholding bids or by submitting bids higher than the preselected winner, is punishable by imprisonment, fine or exclusion from bidding.

The state fined 21 companies $5,000 to $2 million and barred 43 companies from bidding on state road work for three to 17 months.

Federal authorities have prosecuted at least 28 companies in North Carolina. At least 24 have been fined, and 34 executives have been imprisoned. In addition, the Federal Highway Administration has barred 29 companies from bidding on federal road paving projects for five months to three years.

Five of the state's principal bidding companies that pleaded guilty in federal court have not suffered from the penalties, state and federal asphalt paving contracts indicate.

They are the Dickerson Group, the divisions of Ashland-Warren (under a new name), Barnhill-Cumberland, Rea and S.T. Wooten.

Jon Reynolds, president of L.A. Reynolds, one of the smaller companies, said federal investigators first approached larger companies. He said those companies turned in their smaller competitors while creating subsidiaries to protect them in the lean times ahead.

"Both my company and I deserve to be punished," said Reynolds, who spent 3½ months in federal prison for rigging bids. "But we didn't deserve to be put out of business while others actually strengthened their positions through legal maneuvers and economic advantages."

Hugh O'Reilly, assistant chief counsel for the Federal Highway Administration, said the law was never intended to put anyone out of business. But while large companies opened subsidiaries to bid for them while they were debarred, small firms were crippled by the legal action.

"The big man, through the feds, has done to the little guy what they couldn't do themselves," said McDuffie Johnson of Johnson Brothers Utility & Paving.

House Speaker Opposed Change For Legislature

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A proposal to hold General Assembly sessions to 60 days, cut the number of committees and let standing committees work between sessions has been criticized by House Speaker Liston Ramsey.

The Agency Review Committee reported that all of North Carolina's neighboring states have limits on sessions, and that most legislatures in the Southeast have fewer than a third as many standing committees. The N.C. House has 59 standing committees, and the Senate has 38.

But Ramsey said that was no reason to change state policies.

"I'm not very impressed at all," said Ramsey, who serves as full-time speaker at part-time pay. He said other legislatures use more subcommittees to compensate for fewer standing committees.

Letting even a reduced number of committees meet in the interim would result in more, not fewer trips to Raleigh by lawmakers, Ramsey added. He said lawmakers from outlying areas would not be able to sit in on committees considering laws important to their districts. The overall effect, he said, would be to concentrate power and reduce participation of some legislators.

Senate President Pro Tem Craig Lawing, D-Mecklenburg, said he agreed with the panel's proposal to shorten sessions. But he said the best way to do that would be to shorten the budget process.

Usually, the Legislature convenes regular sessions in mid-January of odd-numbered years and adjourns in June or July. The lawmakers have tended to wait until as close as possible to the start of the next fiscal year, July 1, to complete their budget work and set the revenue projections for the upcoming two-year budget period.

"It's foolish to wait until the late spring or summer to get down to serious business," Lawing said. He added that he hoped the 1983 session would organize early and try to complete the budget work by late March or April.

Officer Discharged

BETHEL — A Bethel policeman, Henry Williams, was permanently discharged from the Bethel police force on Friday on the grounds of two recent infractions.

Police Chief Jerry Ratley said the discharge "is based on two recent infractions where Williams was discovered sleeping while on duty." The decision to permanently discharge Williams, Ratley said, "was made jointly by myself and members of the Bethel Town Commissioners."

In October, Williams was suspended for one week without pay for infractions of duty, and was reinstated to the force with pay after the one week suspension period.

Williams requested a grievance hearing on the October suspension. The hearing was held earlier this month. Town commissioners and Mayor Frank Hemingway at that time upheld the previous ruling of non-payment for the week's suspension.

The two infractions which are the basis of the Friday decision to discharge Williams occurred after the date of the grievance hearing, according to Ratley.

As of this morning, there has been no indication on whether or not policeman Williams will take action to appeal his discharge from the Bethel police force.

Bombing Of Nuke Plant Alarms Environmentalists

By ROBERT WELLER
Associated Press Writer
CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — Environmentalists say the black nationalist sabotage attack on South Africa's first nuclear power plant shows the inadequacy of security at the still-unfinished facility.

The outlawed African National Congress said its guerrillas set off four bombs over the weekend at the Koeberg plant 17 miles north of Capetown.

No injuries were reported in the bombing of the non-operational reactor, and South African officials insisted there was no danger of a radiation leak.

A spokesman for ANC, the main black nationalist group fighting to end white-minority rule in South Africa, said the attack was in reprisal for a South African commando raid against its members in neighboring Lesotho. South Africa said 30 ANC activists were among the 42 people killed in cross-border raid.

An ANC statement issued from its headquarters in Dar es Salaam, Tanzania, said the bombing was "a successful, well planned, precision sabotage operation with limpet mines." It said heavy damage was caused to the reactor plant.

The attack was the ANC's most spectacular sabotage claim since June 1980, when its guerrillas caused about $4 million worth of damage to an energy plant south of Johannesburg that derived oil from coal.

In Cape Town, an official of the Electricity Supply

Commission said the explosions caused "equipment damage, not structural damage." Regional manager George Hellstrom told The Associated Press there was no damage to Koeberg's two reactors and "work will be continuing."

Commission spokesman Andre van Heerden said the damage was "limited to isolated areas," including cables, and was not extensive enough to make a good news photograph.

Hellstrom said nuclear fuel was on the site but that it was not in either reactor and "it only becomes radioactive after it's been in the reactor."

Physiology Professor Arnold Abramowitz, head of Koeberg Alert, a citizens' watchdog group, called for a top-level inquiry and questioned whether the electricity commission can "mount the kind of security operation that this potentially catastrophic source of power requires."

A Koeberg Alert statement said security at Koeberg was grossly inadequate and that "having a nuclear reactor as a target in a society characterized by violence" poses a threat to the public.

Legislator Roger Hulley, an environmental spokesman for the opposition Progressive Federal Party, said it was intolerable that the guerrilla attack could occur "at a nuclear installation so close to Cape Town. There is no margin for error in the matter of nuclear safety," he said.

Dr. Reg Coogan, Cape Town's health officer, said the incident showed a need for a regional emergency plan "rehearsed and seen to work before nuclear fission takes place at the plant."

Koeberg, planned at an estimated cost of $495 million, was expected to begin full operations within six to 12 months, and to meet most of the power requirements of 2 million people in the western part of the Cape Province.

Hellstrom, the electricity commission's regional manager, said he did not know whether bomb damage would delay the start-up of the first reactor, scheduled in two months.

Critics of the plant have said a nuclear accident could threaten as many as 1.25 million people who live within a 30-mile radius of Cape Town. Cape Town authorities have complained that the electricity commission was not including them in safety planning.

"Because of all the criticism worldwide of nuclear reactors, everyone is trying to make Koeberg hypersafe. We shall never be completely satisfied but you have to compromise between security and holding up work," Hellstrom said.

The explosions were the fourth known security breach at Koeberg this year.

In May, three men got through a triple fence and dog patrols, but were caught while allegedly preparing to rob a safe.

A fire in a switchboard in June caused several hundred thousand dollars damage.

The ANC claimed responsibility for the blaze, but the electricity commission attributed it to a labor dispute.

In August, two men broke through the security net and got within yards of the reactor before being caught. No further details was available on their case.

Supreme Soviet Meet To Open

MOSCOW (AP) — The Supreme Soviet will convene Tuesday to mark the 60th anniversary of the founding of the Soviet Union, but the national Parliament will not elect a president to succeed the late Leonid I. Brezhnev, a top Soviet official said today.

"The session will be commemorative and no such business will be decided," Vadim V. Zagladin, first deputy chief of the Communist Party International Department, told reporters.

He made the announcement in response to a question during a briefing in which he outlined events that will take place Tuesday and Wednesday to mark the founding of the Soviet Communist state. The actual anniversary is not until Dec. 30.

There had been speculation the Parliament would choose a successor to the presidency, a largely ceremonial post that Brezhnev held in addition to his all-powerful job as first secretary of the Communist Party.

The top party post went to former KGB secret police boss Yuri V. Andropov on Nov. 12, two days after Brezhnev died of a heart attack. There has been speculation that Andropov, who has been consolidating his grip on the Kremlin hierarchy, would also get the presidency.

Zagladin said Andropov will address the joint meeting of the Supreme Soviet, the Central Committee of the party, and the Parliament of the Russian Federation, one of the 15 republics making up the nation.

The meeting will be opened by Konstantin U. Chernenko, Zagladin said. Chernenko has apparently taken the No. 2 spot in the power lineup in the ruling 12-member Politburo of the Central Committee. He was thought to have been Andropov's chief rival to succeed Brezhnev.

Zagladin also was asked if there would be an amnesty for political prisoners.

"Of course not. Since we do not have political prisoners, there is no one to grant amnesty to," he said.

A host of East bloc leaders were arriving in Moscow to attend the gala Kremlin festivities.

Hungarian Communist Party leader Janos Kadar flew in on Sunday and meet today with Andropov. The official Tass news agency said they discussed bilateral relations, but gave no details.

Tass said President Nicolae Ceausescu of Romania, President Todor Zhivkov of Bulgaria and East German President Erich Honecker arrived today. Polish leader Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski was due in later in the day.

Peking announced it would not be sending a representative to Moscow, despite the recent warming trend in China-Soviet relations. No reason for the decision was given, but observers in the Chinese capital speculated that Chinese leaders did not want to attend because such a move may be interpreted as too positive a signal to the Soviets.

Manager Dies In Motel Fire

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — The manager of the Motel Six died in an early-morning fire at the motel in the northern end of the city, officials said.

Auley White, who lived in an apartment at the motel, was pronounced dead at Forsyth Memorial Hospital, said nursing coordinator Bobbie Reichert. There were no other injuries, firefighters said.

Firefighters evacuated guests at the establishment after receiving a call at about 5:30 a.m., said fire chief Steven Baldwin, who said he didn't know how many people were staying there.

The fire was contained in White's apartment, Baldwin said.

AVALANCHES
GRAZ, Austria (AP) — Weekend avalanches near ski resorts killed two people and injured six others, reports from the area said.

Heating Aid By Utilities

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Two state utilities plan to add their money and time to the $29 million in energy assistance money that will be distributed among an estimated 160,000 federal aid applicants in North Carolina this winter.

Duke Power Co. announced Friday it would donate up to $100,000 to charitable groups that raise and distribute heating assistance to North Carolina and South Carolina.

Duke also has begun a $9 million three-year weatherization program to help low-income customers and will donate insulation materials to renters, homeowners and recruit volunteers, said Beryl Moore, community assistance specialist.

Carolina Power & Light Co. is conducting weatherization programs to help low-income residents fight rising bills. Starting in January, apartment maintenance workers in Raleigh will install $80 kits including plastic window covers, weatherstripping, door sweeps and caulking.

Barry Tutor, CP&L representative, suggested turning thermostats down to 68 degrees to save up to 20 percent on power bills, lowering the temperature to 58 degrees at night.

CP&L will collect data from the insulated apartments to determine how much money energy insulation can save. The information will be reported to the N.C. Utilities Commission and will be included in a nationwide study by the Edison Electric Institute.

Hostage Children Held And Abused For 8 Months

A HANDFUL — Katie Fitzpatrick had more Christmas packages than she could carry on a trip to the post office. Fortunately, her 3½-month-old son Danny seemed quite content to give the parcels his place in the stroller in favor of going along for the ride in a baby pack closer to Mom. (AP Laserphoto)

By FRAN D'EMILIO
Associated Press Writer
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — An 11-year-old boy escaped from a van where he had been imprisoned and sexually molested for eight months, then led police back to free a 3-year-old girl, a fellow prisoner who had been kidnapped in February, police said.

"I'm in shock, I think," said Elizabeth Burke, as she met reporters early this morning after identifying her daughter, Tara, who was the object of a nationwide search after she was kidnapped Feb. 7.

"She has the same smile,"

Mrs. Burke said. "And the same laugh," added her father, Steven, a blind piano tuner from West Pittsburg.

The bruised and shivering boy, whose name was withheld, wriggled through the roof of the van Saturday morning and made his way to the home of a friend.

"He looked pale and thin," said Pauline Tivy, the friend's grandmother. "He shed quite a few tears talking about the sex acts." She said he "wouldn't stop talking about the rubber hose" used to beat him.

Mrs. Tivy called police and the boy led them to the 1969 van, which was parked in the China Basin section of San Francisco. When police knocked on the door of the vehicle, Luis R. "Tree Frog" Johnson emerged and was arrested, authorities said. Inside, police said, they found Alex Cabarga and Tara.

Johnson, 38, and Cabarga, were being held in San Francisco City Jail today for investigation of a variety of charges, including oral copulation, child molesting and unnatural sex acts, said police Sgt. John Madden.

Sheriff's deputies said bail was set at about $65,000 for Johnson and $50,000 for Cabarga.

The boy, who had vanished in April, was barefoot and wore a plaid shirt and pants cut into shorts when he found his friend.

"His legs were all bruised, blue and black," Mrs. Tivy said.

The men "would tell him he didn't deserve to eat" and taught the girl to hit him with the hose, she said. The boy told police that the girl had been kept undressed to keep her from escaping and had been forced to perform sex acts in exchange for food.

Both children were treated at San Francisco General Hospital and then placed in protective custody until the girl's parents were located. Police Sgt. Michael Pera said Sunday night he did not know why the boy had not yet been reunited with his family.

Police said Johnson lured the boy into the van by offering him $200 a month to babysit the girl.

The boy told police he was paid for one month but was beaten and molested after that as the van roved through factory districts.

Tara was kidnapped 10 months ago from her parents' car in the parking lot of a Concord shopping center, about 25 miles northeast of where the child was found. Her 10-year-old brother was left behind in the car.

After her case was featured on national television news programs, the Concord Police Department received a flood of calls from people who thought they might have seen her.

Mrs. Burke said she never gave up hope, but admitted, "We had moments of wondering."

She said her daughter "seems very healthy, shy," and seemed to recognize her parents.

Mrs. Burke said her plans are to "take her home, love her."

Fear More Than 3,000 Dead In Yemen Shocks

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — An infant still clinging to the breast of her dead mother was found alive in the ruins of the North Yemen earthquake that killed more than 3,000 people.

Rescue workers were amazed to find the surviving infant girl in the wreckage of Dawran, one of the villages reduced to rubble in the Dec. 13 quake, the Bahrain-based Gulf News Agency reported Sunday.

"The baby could not have been more than six months old, and it was a heart-rending sight for the rescuers to see her sucking her dead mother's breast," the report said. It said the mother had died last Tuesday at the latest. The report gave no other details.

Other survivors included many children hurt in aftershocks occurring as late as Sunday morning, authorities said.

Rescue workers were struggling to reach isolated areas, while hundreds of thousands remained homeless.

North Yemen Premier Abdul-Karim al-Iriani said his nation needs at least 50,000 more tents and huge amounts of financial aid, especially with the threat of famine resulting from the almost total destruction of the country's agricultural crop.

He said the government had set up 8,500 tents — far short of the number needed to accommodate the homeless.

Al-Iriani was quoted by the United Arab Emirates newspaper Al-Khaleej as having told foreign diplomats Saturday that the confirmed death toll was already more than 3,000 and may rise by another 1,000.

Information Minister Hassan Al-Lozi said Sunday night the official death toll, according to body count, had risen to 1,562. He provided no new estimates for the number of injured, who previously had been estimated at 1,538.

North Yemen officials said 21 villages were "wiped out" and 274 were badly damaged.

North Yemen lies at the southwest corner of the Arabian Peninsula. The 75,000-square-mile country of mountains and high plateaus has a population of 8 million, many of them living in tall, narrow houses of sun-baked bricks.

Durham Couple Dies Of Fumes

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — A retired Duke University administrator and his wife, possibly victims of carbon monoxide poisoning, were found dead in their Durham home, police said.

The bodies of Everett B. Weatherspoon, 76, and his 75-year-old wife Nell C. Weatherspoon, were found Sunday afternoon in a second-floor bedroom. They apparently died late Saturday or early Sunday, said Durham County Medical Examiner R.M. Anthony.

Anthony said carbon monoxide poisoning was likely, but that tests would not be completed until Monday. Foul play is not suspected, he said.

Officers found a car running in the Weatherspoons' basement garage. Fumes from the car apparently got into the house through the heating system, said Durham Public Safety Officer Frank H. Harris, adding that the car appeared to have been running a long time.

United Way Campaigns End

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Although donations are still being made, North Carolina's United Way campaigns may not reach their $38.8 million goal, says N.C. director Dwyer Sump.

The state's 76 United Way campaigns closed Friday with collections totaling $36,380,000, 94 percent of the goal, documents showed. But three campaigns won't begin drives until early next year.

"What we've done is close the public campaign," Sump said. "We're not actively seeking donations. But some people still will send money in."

"It will go up to 97 percent or 98 percent at best." Of the campaigns that have made reports, 37 exceeded their goals but five fell short by anywhere from 3.1 percent to 18.7 percent.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP)
 (NCDA) — The North Carolina f.o.b. dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 41.25 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2½ to 3 pound birds. 99 percent of the loads offered have been confirmed, with a final weighted average of 41.37 cents f.o.b. dock or equivalent. The market is steady and the live supply is moderate for a seasonally light to moderate demand. Weights are desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Monday was 1,517,000, compared to 1,737,000 last Monday.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed today in a tentative start for the second-to-last trading week of 1982.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 5.79 to 1,017.29 by noon.

But losers held an 8-7 edge on gainers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said there was little in the news to give the market a strong push in either direction.

Members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries agreed to a production ceiling of 18.5 million barrels a day, in an effort to counter recent downward pressure on oil prices. But it remained to be seen whether the agreement would hold in practice.

The government reported this morning that Americans' personal income rose 0.4 percent in November from a month earlier.

General American Oil of Texas was delayed in opening. Mesa Petroleum made a cash offer of $40 a share for about 51 percent of General American's stock, and said it planned to seek to buy the entire company. Mesa slipped ¼ to 13½.

Pepsico led the active list, unchanged at 35¼. A 282,000-share block traded at 35.

The NYSE's composite index rose .13 to 79.33. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off .47 at 328.48.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 27.84 million shares at noontime, against 32.74 million at the same point Friday.

NEW YORK (AP) — The state Department of Administration has received a legislative panel's approval for a plan to consolidate most state computers under a central authority, but department directors are balking at the idea.

Dispute On Computers

This is nothing more than a power grab by (Department of Administration Secretary) Jane Patterson, said Labor Commissioner John Brooks who says, along with Auditor Ed Renfrow and Treasurer Harlan Boyles, that the State Computer Center has a poor performance.

Brooks said a central computer system would be an expensive failure and a 15-year step backward in technology.

However, Rep. Ben Tison, D-Mecklenburg, said the state is paying $25 million a year for computers because Council of State members are not controlling costs. And Laeron Roberts, who would direct the system if it is approved by the Legislature, said the present nine computer systems create needless duplication, inefficiency and waste.

Lech Walesa's Cousin Describes His Seizure

PASSAIC, N.J. (AP) — The atmosphere in Lech Walesa's home was "very charged, very anxious" when soldiers burst in the door last week and took the Polish labor leader away for nine hours, according to an American cousin who was visiting Walesa at the time.

Walter Brolewicz, Walesa's first cousin, said he was at Walesa's home in Gdansk on Thursday when six soldiers seized the labor leader. Walesa was returned nine hours later — too late to attend a Gdansk memorial service to workers killed in anti-government riots in 1970 and 1981.

"The atmosphere was very charged, very anxious," Brolewicz said Sunday. Walesa's wife, Danuta, "was displaying a very antagonistic attitude toward the militiamen because she did not want her husband taken away again," he said.

Walesa was released in November after being detained by the government for 11 months.

Brolewicz, 56, of Passaic, and his brother Henry, 54, of Old Bridge, spent two weeks in Poland settling the affairs of Walesa's late parents, who lived their last years in the United States. The brothers spent four days at Walesa's home and returned to the United States on Saturday.

Brolewicz said the soldiers came to Walesa's house at 10:30 a.m. Thursday and returned him at 7:30 p.m. For much of that time, the former leader of the outlawed union was driven around the city.

"He said all he could do was feel sorry for them (Polish government officials) because they're all playing a game," Brolewicz said.

Walesa also said that Solidarity is "here to stay."

"There's no contest here. He says we have to win," Brolewicz said.

Brolewicz said the soldiers rang the doorbell, but when the door was opened, "they simply shoved themselves in and came directly to Lech and asked him to put his clothes on and come with them."

He said when Walesa asked why, "They said, well, we have a date with the minister of finance.

Brolewicz said Walesa was taken to an office, where he refused to answer questions about Solidarity's finances.

"Once they saw he wouldn't discuss it, they drove him around until they saw no events in town he could participate in, and then they brought him home," said Brolewicz.

He said Walesa was hungry when he returned home because he had refused to eat food offered by the authorities.

"He walked in the door with a very sore rear," Brolewicz said. "He'd been sitting in a car with the men around him and driving all around Gdansk for several hours, and he got so sore he couldn't sit down."

Brolewicz said Walesa plans to visit the United States this summer.

"He wants to receive some awards and see this country and see the people who have been supporting them," Brolewicz said. "It all depends on the authorities and whatever crisis might develop before then."

Fewer Full-Scale IRS Audits Are Anticipated

By JIM LUTHER
 Associated Press Writer
 WASHINGTON (AP) —

More Americans next year will have to explain certain deductions on their tax returns, but fewer will go through full-scale audits.

"We will have more contacts with taxpayers but they will be a lot less intrusive than audits," said IRS Commissioner Roscoe L. Egger Jr. "More people will hear from us but in a less troublesome way."

Egger said in an interview that the agency is studying ways to have computers better identify items on a tax return that need correction. Once the computer spots something questionable, the return goes to an IRS "classifier," who checks it. If the return doesn't pass that test, the taxpayer will receive written notice to correct the item.

The process is a refinement of the system under which about 2 million tax returns are selected for a full audit each year. However, an audit can require a taxpayer to pull together records and, in a face-to-face session with an IRS examiner, justify every item on a tax return.

IRS used the simpler procedure to some extent this year. Egger cited numerous cases in which IRS denied claims for charitable contributions to religious organizations that turned out to be nothing more than mail-order churches that the agency determined weren't qualified to receive tax-deductible donations.

Egger is bothered by IRS involvement in matters that have nothing to do with collecting taxes, such as helping to find young men for the Selective Service and seizing tax refunds due men who fall behind in child-support payments.

"There is a risk that the tax system would suffer if we were to revisit history ... and people were to believe again that there is no such thing as confidentiality of information they supply to government" on their tax returns, Egger said. He apparently referred to abuse of tax returns during the Nixon administration. Because most people believe their returns are confidential, they are more willing to be open and truthful, he added. If taxpayers get the idea their returns are open to anybody that wants to look, tax collections will suffer, he said.

The commissioner called on Congress to decide once and for all whether employee fringe benefits — such as meals and parking — should be taxed. Congress has blocked IRS from considering such items as taxable before 1984.

"They didn't repeal the law that taxes fringes as income," he said. "We are just prohibited from writing the rules. So what we've got are revenue agents making the rules as they go ... without uniformity."

The commissioner said IRS plans a nationwide advertising campaign to notify taxpayers that a toll-free "hot line" telephone will be available again in 1983 to answer questions about filing tax returns.

Over Egger's protests, the Reagan administration notified Congress earlier this year that it was sharply restricting the hot line to save about $50 million a year. The toll-free lines would remain but IRS personnel would answer only clerical questions, such as why a refund was delayed. Questions about deductions and income would not be answered.

But Congress ordered the full service continued. IRS last year fielded 36 million telephoned questions. Ironically, because of the planned publicity to notify taxpayers that the service still exists, the agency expects more calls than ever in 1983.

Egger, who became chief of the 90,000-employee IRS when President Reagan took office, denied that the income tax system has become so complex that it threatens to fall of its own weight.

"We have an unbelievably complicated tax law," he conceded, but "it isn't so complex that the people can't handle it." Egger said a growing rebellion against government and authority is more responsible for tax cheating than is the complexity of the law.

Salaries May Be Differing

 Associated Press Writer
 WASHINGTON (AP) —

For the first time since 1795, Congress is close to approving differing salaries for members of the House and Senate.

A House-Senate conference committee agreed Sunday to a 15 percent, $9,100 increase for members of the House, and retention of the present congressional pay of $60,662.50 for senators.

The 100 senators, meanwhile, could make an unlimited income from speeches and other outside work. Outside income for the 435 members of the House would be limited to 30 percent of their salary.

The compromise would mark the 14th pay increase voted by Congress since 1789.

In 1795, each senator received $7 a day for each day the Congress was in session. House members were paid $6 daily.

That disparity lasted only a short time, and since then pay raises have been equal for both houses.

The conferees meeting Sunday also accepted pay raises of up to 15 percent for more than 34,000 civilian and military officials, many of whom have had their salaries frozen since 1979.

Most of those affected are top civil servants now earning $57,500.

Also increased were the salaries of the vice president and the House speaker, $79,125 to $91,000; and Cabinet secretaries $69,630 to $80,100.

There was little discussion on the pay raise issue as conferees worked their way through an omnibus government spending bill to which the increase was attached.

Rep. Jamie Whitten, D-Miss., chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, said because senators get more paid speech invitations, they earn more.

The House voted for the straight pay increase last week after a debate in which Rep. Vic Fazio, D-Calif. said members of Congress have fallen way behind other professions because of inflation.

Since 1970, House members and senators have had two increases, one of 29 percent in 1977 and one of 5.5 percent in 1979.

The pay raise fight in Congress was set off by an automatic 27 percent increase which technically went into effect on Friday.

The raise had accumulated over the last five years because each year the increase was due to take effect, it was frozen by House and Senate members wary of the political sensitivity of the pay question.

Passage of the compromise clears dissolves the 27 percent automatic increase.

Moseley's Boot Lifts Redskins By Giants

By The Associated Press

Mark Moseley of Washington sure can kick, and so can Pittsburgh Coach Chuck Noll — about his offense.

While Moseley was breaking the National Football League record for consecutive successful field goals on Sunday with his 21st — and getting the 42-yarder in the snow to beat the New York Giants 15-14 in the process — Noll was watching quarterback Terry Bradshaw and the Steelers' offense fall apart again.

Bradshaw, benched a week ago when he managed to complete only two of 13 passes in the snow during a 13-0 loss in Buffalo, played the entire game in Cleveland, with little improvement. This time he completed 12 of 39 attempts and was intercepted four times, twice by Hanford Dixon in the final 65 seconds, as the Browns won 10-9.

In Sunday's other afternoon games it was Dallas 21, New Orleans 7; Philadelphia 35, Houston 14; Minnesota 34, Detroit 31; St. Louis 10, Chicago 7; Tampa Bay 24, Buffalo 23; Kansas City 37, Denver 16; New England 16, Seattle 0, and Green Bay 20, Baltimore 20 in an overtime tie.

On Sunday night, it was Atlanta 17, San Francisco 7. In two Saturday games it was Miami 20, the New York Jets 19, and the Los Angeles Raiders 37, the Los Angeles Rams 31.

For Moseley, one of the few straight-ahead players in a game dominated by sidwinding soccer-style kickers, it was simply a matter of doing what comes naturally — putting the ball through the uprights as he had done 20 previous times to tie the record set by Garo Yepremian.

"I was just trying to concentrate on what I had to do," Moseley said. "A kick has got to be natural... I hit it as well as I ever hit a ball."

"Moseley was fantastic," said Washington Coach Joe Gibbs. "It's almost like we have a patent on winning; just keep it close and let him kick the field goals."

"Last night I had a dream that this is how it would happen," said Redskins quarterback Joe Theismann, who holds the ball when Moseley kicks it.

Browns 10, Steelers 9

Despite Bradshaw's poor performance, Noll refused to lay the blame for the Steelers' recent failures solely at his quarterback's feet.

"Terry Bradshaw has the highest credentials I know of," said the Steelers' coach. "He's been to four Super Bowls and three weeks ago he was leading the league in passing. Today I think the problem was — with the bad footing — that he just wasn't getting set early enough with the ball."

"We missed some passes, too. Today was pretty much like last week. For whatever reason, there was no execution whatsoever. Our defensive guys did everything they could do to win the game, but offensively we just had no execution. You could go right down the line and the problem starts with the quarterback and goes right to the whole offense."

Bradshaw, too, said he was dismayed by his recent string of poor performances. "There's no reason for it," he said. "I don't have the answers... We're just not moving the ball with any consistency at all. I don't know who's been good or bad for us."

Paul McDonald, getting his first NFL start in place of Cleveland quarterback Brian Sipe, passed 22 yards to Ozzie Newsome to set up Johnny Davis' 1-yard TD run in the third period that wiped out the Steelers' 7-3 lead built on Bradshaw's 6-yard scoring pass to John Stallworth.

"I wouldn't be human if I didn't have butterflies," said McDonald. "Sure, you're apprehensive, but you just go out and try to play your own game. You don't try to win the game on your own." McDonald completed 19 of 40 passes.

Cowboys 21, Saints 7

The Cowboys joined Washington in clinching a National Conference playoff berth.

They said their own intensity vanished after New Orleans quarterback Ken Stabler went out with a wrist injury. "We would have been more keyed up if Stabler had been in there," said Dallas Coach Tom Landry. "I know one thing; We hadn't ever seen a power backfield in our league in a long time. George Rogers can pick up a lot of yardage on you." Rogers got 166 yards, a personal and team record, and scored New Orleans' lone touchdown.

Tony Dorsett ran for TDs of 1 and 2 yards and Danny White passed 3 yards to Doug Cosbie for Dallas' scores.

Eagles 35, Oilers 14

Wilbert Montgomery ran for three touchdowns — 3, 2, and an Eagles-record 90 yards — and Philadelphia came up with four interceptions and seven sacks in the rout of the Oilers. With Philadelphia and Houston each at 1-5 entering the game, there were 26,773 no-shows.

Vikings 34, Lions 31

Tommy Kramer threw three TD passes in Minnesota's victory over Detroit, but it was nose tackle Charlie Johnson, formerly of the Eagles, who scored the winning TD, scooping up a Gary Danielson fumble and racing 44 yards with 2:08 to go.

Sick Sampson Still Problem For UVa Foes

By The Associated Press

Even at "75 percent" of his strength, Ralph Sampson is still a tall problem for Virginia's opponents.

Despite suffering the after-effects of an intestinal infection that knocked him out of last Thursday night's game with Houston, the Cavaliers' center came back Sunday to do a job on Utah in the Sunbury basketball tournament in Tokyo.

He had 17 rebounds, 14 points and five blocked shots as the nation's top-ranked team defeated the Utes 80-57 in the tourney finale. The Cavs had earlier beaten the 14th-ranked Cougars 72-63 without their big man.

Even when the 7-foot-4 center wasn't scoring early in the game, his soaring rebounds and blocked shots brought shouts of "sugoi!" (great) and "shinjirareni!" (unbelievable) from the 5,000 Japanese fans who packed into the Aoyama University gym. Sampson, admittedly weak after the performance, pointed out he was "winded" in the first half and played to "75 percent of my full strength."

Virginia Coach Terry Holland agreed that his leading player was not in top form.

"Ralph didn't have his full strength in the first half because of his illness," Holland said. "Utah gave us trouble with their continued man-to-man play. We only regained the court in the second half of the first period. Ralph was a little bit weak but he regained his game in the second period."

Utah's tough man-to-man defense kept Virginia's offense pretty much in check until the Cavaliers' guards, Othell Wilson and Rickey Stokes, took control midway through the first half. Troubled by double coverage in the early going, Sampson finally broke into the scoring column with a slam dunk with four minutes remaining in the half to give Virginia a 36-23 lead, and the Cavaliers were on their way. "I don't think anybody is going to tell us we played badly today," said Utah Coach Jerry Pimm. "I was impressed by Ralph Sampson, but the other Virginia guys were really good. Each one of them knew their roles, their fundamentals. They beat us in every aspect of the game. They have a good program with a good coach, and I think they'll put up a good fight in their tough Atlantic Coast Conference."

'Tom Terrific' Back In N.Y. Seaver Hoping To Regain Form With Mets

By WILL GRIMSLEY AP Special Correspondent

Tom Seaver is back where he belongs — in a New York Mets uniform with a big "41" on the back — ready to enlarge on more vital numbers insuring him a niche in baseball's Hall of Fame.

"Numbers" — statistics — are baseball's life blood, and Seaver is bidding to become one of the all-time pitching leaders, and he's already up there in victories (264), strikeouts (over 3,000) and shutouts (50-plus).

He is 38 years old, coming off his worst season in 16 years in the majors with some alarmists darkly whispering his 5-13 record is proof that his onetime fireballing right arm suddenly has gone dead.

Ridiculous. Only the year before — the strike-punctured season of 1981 — he had the best record in the majors with a 14-2 mark and 2.55 earned run average that helped the Cincinnati Reds post the top winning percentage in the split campaign.

Historically deterioration in baseball — whether it be hitting, pitching or speed — is not a precipitous thing. Barren injury or some physical freak, talent erodes gradually over a period of time.

Who of us can say whether, when spring blossoms, we will see the Seaver of 1981 or the Seaver of 1982?

Tom Terrific, as Mets fans adoringly refer to him, has clinically studied what happened in that 12-month gap and believes he has come up with the answer.

"I got a severe case of the flu in spring training," he says. I was stuck in bed a week. I didn't pitch for six weeks. I tried to come back too quickly. I didn't have any stamina.

"I developed some bad pitching habits. Our pitching coach, Bill Fischer, and I began to use film to study the mechanics of my pitching motion to see what I was doing wrong.

"We worked 50 minutes at a stretch on mechanics. I tried to slow everything down and found I was slowing my arm down.

"It was a nightmare. But I think I have overcome the problem. I have no qualms about my ability to pitch again.

"I am confident I can win 15 or more games for the Mets next year."

If it is a gamble for the aging Seaver, it is a double gamble for the struggling Mets and their reasonably new ownership. But the Mets see in Seaver more than a 15-game winner. They see a role model who can not only stabilize the young pitching staff but can stimulate interest among the fans who haven't forgotten the championship years of 1969 and 1973.

In retrieving Seaver in a deal that sent three young Mets to the Reds, the Mets boosted Seaver's existing contract from $450,000 to $700,000 with three more option years and incentive clauses which General Manager Frank Cashen said could put the veteran right-hander in the $1 million-a-year bracket during the life of the contract.

At that, Seaver is underpaid. For years, while compiling records that put him in the class with Walter Johnson, Christy Mathewson and Grover Cleveland Alexander, he made one-third the salary of lesser practitioners capitalizing on free agency.

"No, it's never bugged me," Seaver said. "I have never been one to make a big issue over money. And I certainly don't begrudge other guys getting what they can."

In negotiating with the Mets, he insisted that his contract not be guaranteed beyond next year.

"If I can't pitch, why should they have to pay me?" he said. "If I can't pitch well enough to pick up a paycheck, I don't want to be paid."

He is unbelievably honest, refreshingly frank, lacking in pretensions — a man of ethics and class.

There remains a lot of little boy in him. He is a strong family man. He seems to have his priorities well organized. Poised and personable, he could be a corporate vice-president as well as a TV talk show host.

We can't see him settling, as some predict, for the mad game of managerial misadventure.

Carter To Take NCSU Job?

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina State may be close to signing Holy Cross football coach Rick Carter as the Wolfpack's new head coach, if Carter will take the post, a Raleigh newspaper reported today.

The News and Observer quoted unidentified athletic officials as saying an announcement on Carter might be made Monday or Tuesday. But a source at Holy Cross told the newspaper Carter might balk at taking the job because he is only in the second season of a five-year pact with the Worcester, Mass., school.

Ron Perry, Holy Cross athletic director, said he knew Carter would go to a Division

I-A program at some time.

"We don't want to lose Rick," Perry added. "He has a great staff and is a very well organized person. He will be successful wherever he goes."

Carter, 39, directed this year's Holy Cross team to an 8-3 record, giving him an overall coaching record of 116-47-5 at four schools.

In five seasons at his alma mater, Earlham College in Indiana, Carter won five Hoosier championships. Later, he brought Dayton out of the doldrums and to the 1980 NCAA Division III national championship. That year, he was voted national Division III coach of the year.

Carter, who visited with the Wolfpack search committee this weekend, is the latest in a string of coach prospects since N.C. State coach Monte Kiffin resigned under pressure Dec. 1. Kiffin was 16-17 in his three years, including a 6-5 mark this season.

Boise State coach Jim Criner withdrew his name from consideration Friday, shortly after Tulsa coach John Cooper announced he had decided to stay with the Hurricanes as head football coach and athletic director.

Dick Sheridan, head coach for Southern Conference champion Furman, was also apparently on N.C. State's list, but announced last week that he intended to stay at the Greenville, S.C., school.

Tennessee-Chattanooga football coach Bill Oliver was rumored to be another potential Wolfpack coach.

Foster To Be Discharged Soon COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — South Carolina basketball coach Bill Foster will likely be discharged from Providence Hospital on Wednesday, a week after he underwent coronary bypass surgery, according to the university.

Foster's wife, Shirley, said in a USC news release that the coach was transferred from the hospital's progressive care unit to a private room during the weekend. "He plans to go Christmas shopping Friday," she said.

Pistons Rally By Celtics

By The Associated Press

Usually the Boston Celtics are the team that takes control of a game in the fourth quarter.

Usually, but not Sunday night.

The Celtics were ahead 108-100 in the fourth quarter and seemingly headed for their 21st victory in 26 games, but the Detroit Pistons outscored Boston 31-6 the rest of the way to capture a 131-114 National Basketball Association victory.

Isiah Thomas scored 12 of his season-high 32 points in the final period and also finished with 16 assists to lead the Pistons. Center Bill Laimbeer contributed 21 points and 16 rebounds for Detroit.

"From the time we were up 108-100, we played very poorly," Boston Coach Bill Fitch said. "It was just horrible. When they got the smell of blood, they just went out and took the game over. Isiah is a great player. When they got out of synch, he took over. We usually have somebody do that for us."

"Thomas improves with every game. He's much, much more mature than last year," Pistons Coach Scotty Robertson said. "He still doesn't make all the right plays, but he makes more right ones than wrong ones."

"It's a lot of fun playing the Celtics, win or lose," Thomas said. "I love the way they move the ball. They play the kind of basketball I enjoy. You have to credit my teammates for what I did tonight. I had a lot of easy shots."

Thomas broke a 112-112 tie with three minutes remaining, and the Pistons poured it on the rest of the way.

Detroit, which has split four games with the Celtics in the last 20 days, charged to a 72-69 halftime lead, but fell behind while being outscored 29-19 in the third quarter. Detroit won the fourth quarter 40-16.

Larry Bird led Boston with 20 points, while Robert Parish, making his first appearance in a week because of a twisted ankle, scored 18.

Because Boston had Parish, who scored 14 points in the second quarter, Robertson was especially thrilled with the victory.

"It was a great win on the road for us, especially since we did it despite the cavalry. When they brought in Parish, it was like the cowboy coming over the hill," Robertson said. "I was so impressed I wanted to get up and cheer him myself."

Robertson added that his players "had a lot of heart. They battled back. I told Isiah in the third period I wanted the ball in his hands and to make things happen. He really did. Our kids are finally finding out they can win without Tripucka and Benson. They wouldn't be denied in the fourth period."

Detroit regulars Kelly Tripucka and Kent Benson have missed most of the season with injuries.

Bucks 113, Spurs 98

Sidney Moncrief scored 27 points for Milwaukee despite a bruised knee and he and Paul Pressey held San Antonio scoring ace George Gervin to five field goals in 21 attempts.

"Nobody really stops Gervin," Bucks Coach Don Nelson said. "But our game plan was successful. It's nice to have good defenders on him, but we need a good team concept defense with a player like that. We got it tonight."

Moncrief, who was 11 of 16 from the field, had nine points in the first quarter to lead the Bucks to a 34-21 lead, then had 16 more in the third period for an 87-72 advantage.

Artis Gilmore and Mike Mitchell scored 22 points apiece for the Spurs.

Lakers 110, Mavericks 108

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, after being sidelined two games with a sinus infection, had 33 points and 17 rebounds, his best output of the season, leading Los Angeles over Dallas.

The Mavericks led by 15 points in the third period and still were ahead 101-96 with 3:35 to go. The Lakers took the lead at 107-106, lost it again and regained the advantage 109-108 on a goaltending call against Bill Garnett after a shot by Jamaal Wilkes.

Earvin "Magic" Johnson, who along with Wilkes scored 20 points, hit a free throw with 13 seconds remaining for the final margin. Dallas, which got 20 points from Mark Aguirre, missed its last three shots.

Professors Call For Clemson To Fire Violators

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — A group of Clemson University professors says the school's recent NCAA probation for football recruiting violations has tainted the public image of all facets of the university.

The Clemson chapter of the American Association of University Professors announced Friday the group had passed a resolution calling on the school administration to fire staff members responsible for the recruiting violations.

The resolution said that Clemson's reputation cannot be speedily rehabilitated as long as individuals who committed the violations keep their jobs.

"We're not naming any names because we don't know any more details than the public," said John Fairey, an associate professor of botany and president of the professors group.

Fairey said the professors believe they would have been fired if they did anything comparable to the football recruiting violations, such as paying students to come to class or submitting phony research.

The resolution, which was approved earlier this month, calls for "more judicious and effective steps to remedy a situation which has proved so detrimental to the institution."

"This has a definite negative impact in the public's mind about academics here," Fairey said.

"When various honorary agencies look at the whole university, it will be suspect because of any kind of scandal," he added.

Clemson's football program was placed on two years probation last month by the National Collegiate Athletic Association and three years probation by the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Garvey Said Close To Signing

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The slow-paced negotiations between free agent Steve Garvey and three National League teams are about to enter the "closing stages," according to his agent.

"I am sure after my discussions with the three clubs on Monday (today) Steve and I will have the most complete picture of where each club stands," Garvey's agent, Jerry Kapstein, said Sunday night.

"I fully expect we will be in the closing stages of the negotiations tomorrow (today)," he added.

Kapstein is reportedly seeking a five-year, $8-million contract for Garvey.

But the two teams thought to have the best chance of signing Garvey — the Chicago Cubs and the San Diego Padres — are balking at the salary demands. The San Francisco Giants also are reported in the bidding competition.

"We made a very substantial offer and that's as far as we can go," Padres President Ballard Smith said Sunday.

Smith, who reportedly increased the Padres' offer $500,000 to $6.5 million over five years, expressed disappointment when talks broke off Saturday night with no resolution.

"I thought we were going to reach agreement," Smith said. "We're close enough that we should be able to. I don't know what the problem is."

Meanwhile, Cubs executives spoke with Kapstein on the telephone Sunday. The Chicago club has reportedly offered Garvey a five-year, $6.75 million package.

"I'm sure his purpose (Kapstein's) was to see if we would budge," Cubs Chairman of the Board Andrew McKenna told the Chicago Sun Times. "We're firm. Maybe he thinks he can wait us out, but it's not going to work out that way."

Garvey, who turns 34 on Wednesday, became a free agent after he rejected a four-year, $5-million package with the Los Angeles Dodgers.

The 12-year National League veteran has a lifetime batting average of .301 and has averaged 21 home runs a year and 98 runs batted in over the last nine seasons.

"My feeling is we'd like to have Steve Garvey," Smith said. "I feel as strongly as ever that he would make tremendous contribution to the ballclub and to the community. But there is a limit to the type of contract we can enter into, and quite frankly, we have gone far beyond what I originally thought that limit was. We did it in an attempt to meet their needs, but at some point you reach your outer limit and I guess that's where we are.

"He's an exceptional ball player and an exceptional person, and for that reason we have gone a long way, but we can't go any further.

"We need to start moving again," said Smith. "That's probably what we'll start doing next week.

"We have geared all our plans with the thought that we would sign him," Smith said. "But you get to point where you have to consider the possibility that you're not going to sign him. So, we're going to have to start making contingency plans."

play. Danielson passed for three TDs, two in the closing minute.

Cardinals 10, Bears 7

Neil O'Donoghue of St. Louis didn't have a streak going — he was wide to the right on a 48-yard field goal attempt with a couple of minutes to play — but the 48-yarder he did hit with 25 seconds remaining was just as decisive as Moseley's kick.

"I played that one the same as the other one," he said. "But I started this one further out to the right. I hit the first one good, but it tailed off too fast. I gave myself a little more room for adjustment the second time around."

The victory kept the Cards unbeaten on the road. They're winless at home.

Bucs 24, Bills 23

Doug Williams' two touchdown passes and Cedric Brown's key fumble recovery carried Tampa Bay past the Bills. Lee Roy Selmon forced the last-minute fumble by Roosevelt Leaks, who had scored two TDs for Buffalo, and Brown pounced on it at the Tampa Bay 18-yard line.

Chiefs 37, Broncos 16

Denver quarterback Craig Morton made a brief speech in his official retirement, but the Chiefs' quarterback, Bill Kenney, ruined the day for the Broncos with two second-half touchdown passes. And safety Gary Barbaro returned an interception of a Steve DeBerg pass 43 yards for another Kansas City score.

Patriots 16, Seahawks 0

New England, which shut out Miami in the snow a week ago, blanked the Seahawks indoors this time. The Pats picked off four of Jim Zorn's passes and recovered two Theotis Brown fumbles to blunt Seattle drives. Steve Grogan passed 5 yards to Mark van Eeghen for the game's lone TD and John Smith kicked three field goals.

Packers 20, Colts 20

Baltimore Coach Frank Kush was far from happy after the Colts avoided a seventh loss. None of that "moral victory" business for him. "As far as I'm concerned, it is still not a win," he said. "We still haven't won one yet."

The Colts got a 1-yard TD run by Randy McMillan with 1:22 left in the fourth quarter to tie Green Bay, then each team missed a field goal attempt in the extra period.

Falcons 17, 49ers 7

William Andrews accounted for 176 yards rushing and receiving, and Atlanta shut down San Francisco quarterback Joe Montana as the defending Super Bowl champions fell to 2-5 and nearly out of the playoff picture.

Montana, who had thrown for more than 300 yards a league record five straight times, was held to 177. The 49ers' only touchdown came on a 7-yard pass from Montana to Dwight Clark to give them a 7-3 lead in the second period.

Andrews rushed for 108 yards and caught passes for 68 more to set up 1-yard scoring runs by Steve Bartkowski and Gerald Riggs as the Falcons all but clinched a playoff berth by improving their record to 5-2.

NCAA Out To Up Academic Standards

RALEIGH (AP) — With at least a dozen proposals affecting academic requirements going before the NCAA convention next month, North Carolina education officials are confident that academic standards will be raised.

"The emphasis this time will definitely be more on academic proposals," said John W. "Jack" Sawyer, a Wake Forest professor and member of the NCAA's governing body.

"What you have is momentum building," said Tom Yeager, assistant director of legislative services for the NCAA. "There are a lot of groups interested."

"From what I have learned in the last seven months, it's clear there is a massive problem to be dealt with," said William C. Friday, president of the University of North Carolina system.

One proposal would require all intercollegiate athletes to have a 'C' average in high school in a core curriculum of 11 courses, starting in 1986. The NCAA now requires only that such athletes have a 'D' average in high school.

Prospective college athletes also would have to have a combined score of at least 700 on the verbal and mathematics sections of the Scholastic Aptitude Test.

Prospects for enacting more stringent rules in the San Diego convention may have been enhanced by recent NCAA investigations into collegiate athletic programs, including those at N.C. State and Clemson.

The 38-member committee of the American Council on Education, which includes the presidents of schools with major athletic programs, is looking at the impact of television on intercollegiate athletics and coaches' status.

The committee's first recommendations on academic reforms have been submitted to the NCAAA for consideration at the convention.

CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago Bulls officials say they have confidence in guard Quintin Dailey, the 21-year-old rookie who is returning to the team after a 12-day leave for psychiatric treatment.

"Quintin Dailey is a very key player for us," Coach Paul Westhead said Saturday after the Bulls' 131-127 victory over the Indiana Pacers. "He's gotten some valuable points for us and he gives our other guards some needed rest."

"I think he'll step right back in and respond very well as he always has," Westhead said. "I'll take care of the coaching phase and let the other professionals do their job. I'm just happy to see this thing come to an end."

Dailey is to remain under the care of a psychiatrist, said Bulls General Manager Rod Thorn.

"The doctor emphasized the Quintin should be treated like any other player," he said. "Quintin was very upbeat with I saw him today. He'd like to get back and play."

Since joining the Bulls, Dailey has been the target of criticism and protests stemming from charges he sexually attacked a University of San Francisco nursing student in December 1981. Dailey pleaded guilty to an assault charge, but maintained he was a victim of mistaken identity.

Dailey failed to show up for a Dec. 7 game against the New York Knicks and was put on leave of absence the next day.

His lawyer, Bob Woolf, said at the time that Dailey was "in extreme depression" and "told me he had seriously considered ending his life."

Thorn said Dailey and his doctor have talked at length about the fans' reaction to him.

"That was part of what triggered this whole thing in the first place," Thorn said. "The doctor feels now that Quintin will be able to handle it. If he's on the road somewhere and he's having trouble he can call the doctor."

Westhead seemed particularly happy with the expected return of Dailey, who has been averaging 15.6 points a game.

"I've talked to him a couple of times in the interim, so I don't anticipate any long-winded conversations on his part or my part," Westhead said.

The Bulls ended a three-game losing streak in overcoming Indiana and face Atlanta on Tuesday.

Dailey Returns; Bulls Confident

Ice Hockey, Football Rated 'X'

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — Giving sports ratings similar to those assigned motion pictures might help get rid of violence on the nation's athletic fields, a psychologist says.

Bill Beausay, executive director of the Academy for the Psychology of Sports, isn't sure America is ready for his system, where sports would be given "X," "R" or "G" ratings. Children 13 years and younger would be barred from participating in X-rated sports.

"I do hope that we can learn more about violence and the factors that are operating in competitive sports," Beausay said in a recent interview at his private psychology research institute here. "However, I think that the practical application is going to be in the area of kids."

In studying the effects of violence in sports on both players and spectators, Beausay developed a Sports Violence Index, or SVI.

He applied his formula to 85 major sports around the world, but concentrated most of his research on 22 sports popular in the United States. His study included both eyewitness research and reviews of films and tapes, and his rating system works much the same way as a football coach grading game films.

Motorcycle racing comes out with the highest SVI at 68, followed by auto racing at 66; hockey, 64; football, 56; boxing, 54, and horse racing, 52.

Sports with an SVI of 50 or above are X-rated under Beausay's formula. Sports with an SVI of 50 to 20 are R-rated and should be played only by participants in acceptable physical condition, according to Beausay. Basketball, baseball, skiing and bowling fall into the R category. Golf, with a 20 SVI, is borderline.

People of any age or physical condition may participate in sports with an SVI of 20 or less, making billiards, at 16, fairly harmless.

"I think particularly in the area that I have labeled as X-rated sports that children should not be allowed to take part in them at an early age," Beausay said. "In fact, I hope this will lead to barring children under a certain age from any kind of organized sport. If you eliminate the organization, you eliminate the adults."

"I think the level of violence will disappear if we can eliminate the compulsive aspect of sports for young people. Maybe not disappear, but it will be greatly reduced. That's where I'm at."

Sports violence has been a topic of heated debate for years. But in recent weeks the discussion has intensified, first after boxer Duk-Koo Kim was killed in a professional bout and then when New York Jets linebacker Stan Blinka was suspended for slamming a forearm to the head of Green Bay wide receiver John Jefferson.

Basketball and hockey also have been tarnished by violence in recent seasons, and Beausay thinks his index can help explain why.

"We're way out on a limb on that," he said. "But we did it for a couple of reasons. One is to make it dramatic. That's really something, to think of an X-rated sport.

"We took an arbitrary figure, 15, and we asked: Should a child age 13 years and below be exposed to this sport?"

Beausay, 51, has been studying the psychological aspects of sports since 1961 when former Detroit Lions defensive end Bill Glass sought his help in getting "up" for a football game. Since then, Beausay has done extensive work with athletes ranging from football players to race-car drivers.

He has a bachelor's degree in psychology from Ohio State, a theology degree from Dallas Theological Seminary, an master's in psychology from Bowling Green and a Ph.D. in education and counseling from Bowling Green.

Nine NFL teams, several major university football programs and the National Basketball Association have used him to help in personnel selection and training, he said.

Beausay designed the Sports Violence Index to isolate and rate seven areas which he believes directly or indirectly contribute to violence in sports. They are:

- Number of contestants.
- Type and quality of body contact.
- Type and intensity of noise generated.
- Essential effort necessary for success.
- Type of action flow.
- Amount of inherent physical danger.
- Emotional atmosphere of the sport contest.

Grading within the various areas relies heavily on what Beausay sees while watching the event live or reproduced, and on his knowledge of the sports involved.

Hockey generally would be considered more violent than golf. But, by applying his SVI, Beausay believes it is just as easy to show that hockey is more violent than football.

Hockey has fewer contestants, but the SVI rates its body contact similar to football. The intensity of noise generated at hockey games is greater in the SVI because hockey is played in relatively small arenas, while football is played outdoors. Even indoor football is played in far bigger structures than hockey rinks.

It can be argued that hockey and football involve equal amounts of raw physical effort and skill. But, according to Beausay's calculations, the time-action flow of hockey is almost constant, while football stops after every play. His studies also found hockey with more inherent physical danger.

No. 3 Memphis State defeated Kansas 55-42; fourth-ranked UCLA beat seventh-ranked Iowa 75-66; co-No. 5 Indiana edged Kansas State 49-46; No. 9 St. John's coasted past Princeton 58-46 and No. 10 Alabama stopped Louisiana Tech 88-73.

Also, No. 11 Tennessee outscored Miami of Ohio 69-62; 12th-ranked Louisville edged Oklahoma State 67-66; No. 13 Arkansas beat Northeast Louisiana 89-76; No. 16 Syracuse routed Niagara 105-82; No. 17 North Carolina swamped Pan American 106-50, 19th-ranked Villanova crushed Temple 82-55 and No. 20 West Virginia beat 66-65 Virginia Commonwealth in overtime.

Derrick Hord and Dirk Minniefield each scored 17 points to lead Kentucky over Tulane for the championship of the University of Kentucky Invitational tournament.

"They shot the lights out," said Tulane Coach Ned Fowler. "The key was perimeter shooting and we couldn't buy a basket."

The Wildcats shot 60.3 percent for the game to only 37.7

for Tulane.

"Our shot selection was good," said Kentucky Coach Joe B. Hall.

He credited a zone defense for Tulane's cold shooting and said the Wildcats "tried to be more aggressive to get our adrenaline going."

Andre Turner's 17 points led Memphis State over Kansas after the Tigers blew a 17-point lead. Memphis State built a 41-24 advantage at halftime, then withstood a late rally by the Jayhawks.

"It's hard to play here," Memphis State Coach Dana Kirk said of the Jayhawks' field house at Lawrence. "Their crowd is a great sixth man for them. We wanted to make them take the 18-foot shot, but they were hitting them."

Kenny Fields and Darren Daye scored 21 and 20 points, respectively, and Michael Holton contributed six key points in the final 17 seconds to boost UCLA over Iowa.

'Spare Time' Terrorists Rated Most Dangerous

By NICK STAUDINGER
Associated Press Writer
BONN, West Germany (AP) — They're known as "spare-time" terrorists, but authorities here now rate the Revolutionary Cells as the most dangerous left-wing guerrilla group in West Germany.
So far the group has proven less deadly than the Baader-Meinhof gang, which terrorized western Europe for 10 years and was blamed in 30 political killings and a series of kidnappings, bank robberies and bombings.

However, security forces are having difficulty cracking the Cells because it is thought to operate in small gangs of two to five people. Only five members of the group have been identified, and none has been caught.

What worries West German authorities about the Cells is the volume of their activities, often bomb or arson attacks on U.S. military installations or American military housing areas.
There have been 60 attacks on Americans, mostly GIs, or their property this year in West Germany. On Wednesday, a bomb went off in a car near the PX military shopping area in Darmstadt, and an American soldier received minor burns and head and leg injuries from the blast. Another soldier was injured Tuesday in one of two other car blasts.
No one has claimed responsibility for the latest attacks. However, federal prosecutor Kert Rebmann said last week that 30 of 285 terrorist incidents so this year have been attributed to the Revolutionary Cells, while sympathizers of the Baader-Meinhof gang were believed responsible for 16 others.

Bombing incidents have become "a normal thing," said Horst Herold, an authority on criminology and former chief of the Wiesbaden-based Federal Criminal Office.
The emergence of the Revolutionary Cells as the nation's most feared terrorist group follows the arrests last month of three people believed to be ringleaders in Baader-Meinhof gang, the parent group of the Revolutionary Cells. Authorities say the arrests broke the gang's command structure.
Unlike Baader-Meinhof gang members, who spent most of their time in hiding, the report said the Cells are made up of "spare-time terrorists" who lead otherwise normal lives.
One of the Cells' most publicized — and only known fatal — attack was the May 11, 1981, shooting death of Hesse state Economics Minister Heinz-Herbert Karry.

The Cells said in a letter afterward that Karry's death had been an error. There was no further explanation and no one was ever charged in the case.
The five Cells members from whom arrest warrant have been issued have not been publicly identified.
The Baader-Meinhof group is still considered dangerous, and arrest warrants are out for 15 gang members.
Lawmen dealt the Baader-Meinhof group a crippling blow in November when they arrested alleged ringleaders Christian Klar, Adelheid Schulz and Brigitte Monhaupt after staking out arms caches near Frankfurt and Hamburg.
The Baader-Meinhof gang was born of student unrest in the late 1960s. The founders were student activists Andreas Baader and journalist Ulrike Meinhof.

The group first made headlines in 1968 when Baader, his girlfriend Gudrun Ensslin and two others set a Frankfurt department store on fire in a "protest against capitalism."
In 1972, Baader was caught and sentenced to three years in prison, but escaped two years later when friends overpowered prison guards taking him on an outing to a library. He went underground, joining Miss Meinhof.
"The Red Army Faction, encouraged by the actions of the student movement ... considers it necessary to propagate armed struggle ... to preserve results of the 1967-68 movement." It's a matter of continuing the fight," Miss Meinhof wrote in 1971, explaining the group's anti-capitalist, anti-American stance.
Baader and his friends financed their operations by robbing banks and robbing away in high-powered Porsche and Alfa Romeo cars.
The gang's first major political strike came May 11, 1972, when five bombs went off at the U.S. Army's V Corps headquarters in Frankfurt.
A U.S. Army lieutenant colonel was killed and Frankfurt's tallest pre-World War II building was heavily damaged. Two weeks later a car bomb at the Heidelberg headquarters of the U.S. Army killed three American servicemen.
Both Baader and Miss Meinhof were eventually captured, and both died in what the government says were prison suicides. Despite their deaths, the group continued its activity.
The last major attack for which the gang was held responsible occurred Sept. 15, 1981, when a terrorist fired a rocket at an armored car carrying Gen. Frederick Kroesen.

The car was destroyed but Kroesen, the commander of U.S. Army in Europe, escaped injury.

China Sending No Delegates To Fete

PEKING (AP) — China will not send a delegation to Moscow this week to celebrate the 60th anniversary of the founding of the Soviet state, the Chinese Foreign Ministry said today.
In answer to a reporter's question, a spokesman said no government delegation would be attending the festivities, which are attended by delegates of most communist countries.
In October the world's two largest communist-run nations began consultations in Peking on improving their relations, strained by years of ideological differences and a border dispute. The date of the second round has not been set but it is expected to be held in Moscow in February.
China and the Soviet Union staged an elaborate friendship celebration in Peking to commemorate the Russian Revolution that led to the founding of the Soviet State. But China still blames what it calls Soviet expansionism as the major threat to world peace.

Foreign diplomatic observers said that Chinese leaders declined to attend the Moscow celebrations this week because such a move might be interpreted as too positive a signal to the Soviets.
Chinese leaders have said they want to reduce tensions with their Soviet rival but they do not expect a major or rapid improvement in relations.
China is demanding the Soviet Union withdraw troops from the border, withdraw from Afghanistan and stop supporting Vietnam's occupation of Cambodia.
Action in any one area could get the normalization process going, the Chinese say, but foreign diplomatic observers think it unlikely the Soviet Union would make substantial strategic concessions for good neighborly relations with China.

Candy-Cane Maker Is Looking To Next Year

By SCOTT SHEPARD
Associated Press Writer
ALBANY, Ga. (AP) — While most people are getting ready for Christmas 1982, Bob McCormack Jr. and his family are gearing up for Christmas '83.
The McCormacks have to gear up ahead of time to keep pace with demand at their family business, Bobs Candies Inc., which claims to be the world's largest maker of candy canes.
Twenty-two million pounds of Bobs candy canes have been shipped to stores in all 50 states for this year's holiday season. Now the factory is churning out canes for next year.

"Unlike most businesses, we really have only one season, Christmas," said McCormack, the company's president and namesake of its founder. "But the factory stays at full production all year long."
Because candy canes are a simple blend of sugar, corn syrup, peppermint oil and food coloring, with less than 1 percent moisture, they store easily, McCormack explained.
The warehouse is filled from November to September, when the company begins shipping for Christmas, he said, noting, "From September until Thanksgiving is our busiest time of year."
Bobs Candies, which also makes other kinds of candies, does not disclose its sales figures.
But to back its claim to the title of the largest manufacturer of candy canes, the company says its average daily production is 69,207 pounds, or 1.5 million candy canes, and its total yearly production is 16.3 million pounds, or 354 million candy canes.

Since the company began making candy canes in 1919, Bobs Candies has sold more than 6 billion of the red- and white-striped treats, McCormack says.
But it wasn't until the mid-1940s that the company gained an advantage on its competitors through the inventiveness of McCormack's uncle, a Roman Catholic priest. When he wasn't tending to his priestly duties in Arkansas and later in Alabama, the Rev. Gregory Keller tinkered with machinery.
One of his first inventions was a machine Bobs Candies used in the 1940s to produce peanut butter and cracker sandwiches.
Then, seeing the laborious candy cane-making process and its uneven results, Keller invented a machine that stretched, twisted, cut and bent candy canes automatically and turned out uniformly striped ones every time.
The machine, which Keller patented, revolutionized the process and established Bobs as the industry leader.
"It's a fun business, but it's also a business that still requires a skill," McCormack said, referring to the delicate process of stripping the canes and preventing sugar from burning under high heat.

McCormack said the candy business is not recession-proof, but Bobs Candies is holding its own amid the current economic uncertainties.
"This is a level year for us," he said. "I think if people are going to cut back on buying candy, they'll cut back on chocolates. Hard candy is relatively inexpensive."
And besides, he added, "What is Christmas without candy canes?"

Human Rights Abuses Raise Concern In Honduras

By SOLL SUSSMAN
Associated Press Writer
TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP)—As incidents of political violence and terrorism become more frequent here, concern grows about human rights abuses and a new climate of fear.

"It can be said that there is a regime of force, there is a police state," said Dr. Ramon Custodio, president of the two-year-old Committee for the Defense of Human Rights.

He dates the first cases of alleged disappearances and torture to December 1980. The committee lists 21 men and two women missing for this year, up from 10 men in 1981.

Custodio claimed that he knows of at least 30 cases of people tortured while in the custody of government security forces but who were too frightened to give depositions.

The committee lists four people killed in mysterious circumstances this year.

In a typical case, the body of Felix Martinez Medina, president of the national university's labor union, was found with 13 stab wounds Aug. 28, 11 days after he was taken by two armed civilians near his home in the capital.

Custodio concedes that the situation bears no comparison to the widespread abuse of human rights in neighboring El Salvador and Guatemala but says, "El Salvador is El Salvador. In a democracy, there is no reason for even one person to disappear."

The committee has about 100 volunteer members whose political affiliations are not asked.

Residents speak wistfully about the formerly unbroken tranquility of Honduras, despite its being surrounded by the political turmoil of Central America. It is the least developed country in the region, but the disparity between rich and poor has never been as visible here as in its neighbors.

The government says its increased security measures are needed in response to the actions of an incipient leftist guerrilla movement, which it claims is spurred from outside the country and which it holds responsible for at least 30 bombings in the past three years.

In the most visible action yet, the Cinchonero Popular Liberation Movement took over the Chamber of Commerce building in San Pedro Sula, the country's second-largest city, with more than 100 hostages and held it for more than a week.

The siege ended peacefully Sept. 25 when the guerrillas were flown out of the country without the government's acceding to their demands for the release of political prisoners. The government denies that there are political prisoners in Honduras.

"We are living in a condition that is no longer normal," Gen. Gustavo Alvarez Martinez, chief of the armed forces, told reporters recently. "Our country is threatened."

He denied, however, that fear is increasing here or that searches of cars and houses are performed outside of legal bounds. The general said that any policeman who violates those bounds would be punished.

The police in Honduras are part of the armed forces.

Alvarez claimed that human rights organizations have been infiltrated by people he characterized as partial to the left who slant information to "exploit people's good will."

Honduras returned to civilian government this year with the election and inauguration of President Roberto Suazo Cordova after more than a decade of military rule, but Alvarez still is considered the most influential man in the country.

The state-run television broadcast a special program on human rights in November, starting on the note that an international campaign is under way to disperse Honduras.

In October the country's Roman Catholic bishops cautioned the government against a "general feeling of fear" because of violence from the left and right.

"Violence, terrorism, disappearances, mysterious encounters, assaults, robberies, kidnappings all have caused individual and collective insecurity and appear to be increasing in these past two years," they said in a formal statement.

"It is certain that this violence in great part is a consequence of that in neighboring countries, but without a doubt some of it also has support and causes in our country."

Honduran officials maintain that Salvadoran leftist guerrillas and the leftist Sandinista government of neighboring Nicaragua are behind much of the anti-government activity here. There does not appear to be much public support for any of the four homegrown leftist groups known to operate in Honduras.

Nicaragua, in turn, charges that sectors of the Honduran armed forces cooperate with U.S.-supported Nicaraguan exiles fighting against the Sandinista government from bases in Honduras.

The year 1983 will be a challenging one for all soybean growers in North Carolina.

Coming off a fair year for yields but a disastrous one for prices, growers will need to examine closely each management dollar input for next year's crop. The terms often used in football, "lean and mean," will no doubt describe many who have survived 1982 and look to 1983.

What can soybean growers do to cut costs yet maintain optimum yields? These are some points that should apply every year to soybean management but are even more important when planning for 1983.

Get Soil Tested

Why do we have to keep harping on this practice — perhaps the soundest of all in producing a good crop of soybeans? Money can be saved by doing a good job of soil sampling each field and using the results to determine the crop's fertilizer and lime needs. This is the best way available, yet many fields go unsampled every year.

The optimum pH range for soybeans is 6.0 to 6.5 for most soils. No lime is needed if your soil pH is in this range. Many fields in North Carolina every year indicate no need for phosphorus, for example, but show that potassium is required. In cases like this, consider applying potassium as potash. Save money in 1983 by adding only what the crop needs as shown by the soil sample results.

Rotate Where Possible

Year in and year out, soybean growers who rotate their crop with corn or grain sorghum or other non-leguminous crops report less trouble from diseases, nematodes and weeds. Crop rotation is still a sound basic crop production practice. It has been proven in some tests that not only are certain pest problems reduced, but that yields can be increased when compared to the monoculture of soybeans behind soybeans.

Leave Out Marginal Fields

More than ever, marginal fields that have no more than a 20-25 bushel yield potential should be left out or followed in 1983. Spend the dollars you would invest on better management for your more productive fields. I remain convinced that many North Carolina growers could increase yields and profits per acre by farming one-fourth to one-third less acres.

Opines School Can't Compete

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Two women, convinced their children have been skipping school to play video games, want the city to prohibit businesses from letting children play the games during school hours.

Mae Norris and Patty Martin of Pittsburgh said their children were caught playing Donkey Kong and Pac-Man during school hours. That prompted them to circulate petitions in the Homewood-Brushston area supporting enactment of an ordinance.

"The problem has gotten worse. The more games they bring out, the more children will play with them," said Ms. Norris, whose 7-year-old son, Darnell, plays the games "any chance he gets."

She said he learned that the boy was arriving late at Belmar Elementary School because he was stopping to play the games after leaving home.

"You'd be surprised. Some of these children are very good at these games," said Ms. Martin. "All it takes is a quarter and they can be going for hours."

The women said their efforts haven't drawn unanimous favor among city residents. Some have refused to sign the petition because they claim their children know better than to skip school.

But the petition drive has the support of District Justice Dennis Schatzman.

"I think that these ladies are doing what has to be done," he said. "I think that they (video games) add to the number of truancy cases, and it seems like they are popping up like wildfire around here."

Some store owners say they've already posted signs stating that youths cannot play the games during school hours. Others say it is the responsibility of parents to make sure their children are in class.

William Green, assistant superintendent of pupil services for the Pittsburgh School District, is reluctant to "blame video games alone for what he called the nationwide problem of truancy."

"I'm not sure how much of an influence video games are having on the problem. They do give the children something to do, a place to go.

Poster Child Is Told He Never Had Fatal Disease

By MARTIN STEINBERG
Associated Press Writer
BALTIMORE (AP) — When Rodney Brown, the 1976 national cystic fibrosis poster child, learned he never had the incurable disease, his reaction was pure delight: "I got to see the president for free!"

For 10 years, Rodney and his parents lived with the belief that he was afflicted with the often fatal respiratory illness. But tests eventually proved Rodney, now 13 and a 7th-grade pupil, suffers only from an asthma-like condition, his parents said Sunday.

Rodney was 15 months old and living in Indiana when doctors first diagnosed that his pneumonic condition stemmed from cystic fibrosis, said Rodney's mother, Cheryl.

After that, Rodney's daily routine included handfuls of antibiotics and long hours at physical and inhalation therapy to aid his troubled breathing. Rodney also was given X-rays about once every six months, Mrs. Brown said.

The wavy-haired boy became Indiana's cystic fibrosis poster child in 1975 and the national poster child the following year, meeting with then-President Ford.

But after the family moved in January 1980 to Gamber, a small community about 20 miles west of Baltimore, they found out about the inaccurate diagnosis, Mrs. Brown, 35, said.

"I think it just kind of goes to point out the need for continued research not only to improve the testing but to find a cure for the disease," said Rodney's father, Harold L. Brown, 36. "While many tests are good, there's always room for error."

The first test showing Rodney did not have cystic fibrosis was conducted by Dr. Beryl Rosentein at Johns Hopkins Hospital soon after the Browns' move, she said. During the next five months, Rodney was tested at Children's Hospital in Washington, D.C., and at the National Institutes of Health in Bethesda.

But Rodney wasn't told about the inaccurate diagnosis until after the third test.

"We wanted to be positive beyond a shadow of a doubt first," said Harold Brown, an X-ray machine repairman.

When told he didn't have the disease at a conference in Rosenstein's office, Rodney was "delighted," said Mrs. Brown.

Recalled the boy's father: "When we first told Rodney, his reaction was: 'I got to see the president for free!'"

The Browns never publicized the mistake, but it came to light when an Indianapolis Star reporter who once wrote about Rodney recently asked a local Cystic Fibrosis Foundation chapter how he was doing.

Foundation officials told him about the faulty diagnosis, Mrs. Brown said.

One of those who conducted the test confirming Rodney didn't have cystic fibrosis was Dr. Van S. Hubbard, a specialist in pediatric metabolic disorders for the National Institutes of Health.

"He's doing very well," Hubbard said. "He still has an asthma-like condition, but he's certainly not cystic. He doesn't even meet all the criteria to be classified as an asthmatic ... He never had CF."

Wilkes County Probe Seeing Elected Officials Targeted

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A drug investigation in which 45 people have already been indicted may extend to elected officials in Wilkes County, a federal official says.

U.S. Attorney Charles Brewer said he is assembling a task force to investigate new allegations for a federal grand jury in Asheville.

"The charges involve significant charges of drug traffic in the Western District of North Carolina, centered primarily, if not exclusively, on Wilkes County," he said. "The investigation involves allegations of public corruption, major drug deals. And elected officials, but I won't say anything more than that."

Agents of the Internal Revenue Service's Criminal Investigations Division, the FBI, the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration and the U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms gathered evidence for two federal grand juries in Parkersburg, W. Va.

The juries indicted 45 people in connection with the shipments of $8 million worth of marijuana and other drugs from South America and Central to Wilkes County and northern West Virginia.

Among those who testified were Wilkes County Sheriff

Kyle M. Gentry and Surry County Sheriff's Deputy James Miller. Miller has testified that deputies in Gentry's department warned drug dealers of upcoming raids but refused to comment further. Gentry could not be reached for comment.

Indictments allege that the key conspirators were Cletus "Dobe" Powell, 68, of North Wilkesboro; Robert T. Foster, 60, Powell's nephew and a former Wilkes County resident who lived in Rock Forge, W. Va.; and Marvin Leifreid of Morgantown, W. Va.

Powell, charged in the May 14 indictment with being "all or part of the first tier of the organization of drug traffic," is still at large. Foster pleaded guilty last month to two tax violations and one drug conspiracy count and was sentenced to 15 years in prison. Leifreid is scheduled to be tried in the drug case on Jan. 24.

The indictments charge that beginning in the summer of 1976, the three conspired to bring frequent shipments of marijuana into the United States.

Larry Mincks, the IRS agent who coordinated the investigation in West Virginia, said most of the drugs were brought in by boat and plane.

The indictments charge that in 1978, Foster paid Powell at least $125,000 and made six to eight trips to North Wilkesboro, returning to West Virginia with "automobile loads of marijuana." Foster is charged with paying Powell another $300,000 over the next year.

Explanation Of Menacing Dolls

BABY DARLING — "This 'Baby Darling' doll imported from Hong Kong says 'Kill Mommie' when the pacifier is removed from its mouth. Several dolls have been purchased at auction houses and jockey lots in Oconee and Anderson Counties and the Spartanburg (S.C.) area. (AP Laserphoto)

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Talking dolls that seem to be saying "kill mommy" at the pull of a string actually have a more endearing message, a Gastonia distributor said.

Frank Berkley said "Baby Darling" dolls are saying "Kim loves mommy," but a battery-saver switch slows and deepens the voice until its menacing message is heard.

"It's a matter of psychology," said Berkley, who said he was among 500 distributors of the doll worldwide. "They (buyers) get it in their heads that (the doll) is saying that and that's what they hear."

Berkley said people in Gastonia who had bought the dolls with the wierd voice had been offered refunds, but that no dolls had been returned. He said the dolls are manufactured in Hong Kong.

A number of the dolls have been reported in upstate South Carolina and at least six were found in Gastonia.

Bobby and Ajeleen Payne of Rural Hall say they bought one of the dolls for their 7-year-old granddaughter at an auction in King.

"It was a pretty little doll and I thought I got a good buy," said Payne, who paid $10 for the doll.

The doll came wrapped in a pink-and-white box fastened with blue ribbon and didn't appear to have been tampered with, Payne said.

But when he pulled the pacifier from the doll's mouth, it cried "like it's being beaten" for a few seconds before delivering its maternal death threat, Mrs. Payne said.

"It was like a 'Twilight Zone' show ...," said Susan Young, Payne's daughter.

"I can't believe this," Payne said. "It's such a beautiful little doll. Pretty as can be. There must be some real sick people in this world."

Mrs. Young said her daughter, Misti, who was to receive the doll as a gift, was scared by its message and told her mother she didn't want it.

Payne said at least a dozen of the dolls were sold at the auction in Stokes County, in western North Carolina on the Virginia border.

Saturday Saw Four Collisions In City

An estimated $16,300 damage resulted from a series of four traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Saturday.

Officers said heaviest damage resulted from a 7:19 p.m. collision at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Arlington Boulevard, involving cars driven by Barbara Stevens Johnson of 2602 Cherokee Drive, and Alton Earl Harrell of Route 1, Bethel.

Police, who said Ms. Johnson was injured in the collision, estimated damage at $8,000 to the Johnson car and $1,000 to the Harrell car.

Harrell was charged with failing to stop for a red light.

A car driven by Bobby Rudolph Lee of 301 Cadillac St., collided with a parked car owned by James Jones of 1107 Clark St., about 5:57 p.m. on Clark Street, 75 feet south of the 11th Street intersection.

Lee was charged by officers with driving under influence. Damage was estimated at $2,000 to the Lee car and $1,300 to the Jones auto.

Eddie Junior Hooker of Ayden, and two passengers in his car were injured in a 9:27 p.m. collision at the intersection of Arlington Boulevard and Evans Street.

Investigators said the Hooker car collided with a vehicle driven by Luther B. Lee of Route 2, Greenville, causing an estimated $1,000 damage to the Hooker car and $1,200 damage to the Lee vehicle.

Hooker was charged with failing to stop for a stop light.

Cars driven by Thomas Whitley Thomas of 1318 North Memorial Drive, and Jeffrey Russell Burtner of 7F Courtney Square, collided about 10:57 p.m. on Airport Road, 75 feet west of the Greene Street intersection, causing an estimated $200 damage to the Thomas car and $1,000 damage to the Burtner vehicle.

Thomas was charged with driving under the influence following investigation of the wreck.

Seek 2 Slayers Of Devil-Worshipers

TRION, Ga. (AP) — Authorities said they were seeking two suspects in the deaths of a pair of "devil worshipers" whose bullet-riddled bodies were found in a remote, castle-like home containing hex signs and human skulls.

Murder warrants were issued Saturday for Tony Wells West, 29, and Kenneth Avery Lowrance, alias Kenneth Avery Brock, 17, according to Chattooga County sheriff's investigator Tony Gilleland.

The warrants charge the pair with murder in the deaths of Charles L. Scudder, 56, and Joseph Odom, 37. The bodies, each shot in the head several times with a .22-caliber weapon, were found Thursday in their ransacked house.

Evidence found in the house linked the suspects to the murders, and witnesses placed the two men in the victims' stolen Jeep, Gilleland said.

The Jeep turned up Thursday in Tallulah, La., about 19 miles from where authorities found the body of a man who had been handcuffed and shot three times in the head with a .22-caliber weapon. Gilleland said.

The body was in a wooded area along Interstate 20 in Mississippi, said Sheriff Gary McConnell.

Authorities in the two states are conducting ballistics tests on bullets used in the three killings to determine if they are connected.

Investigators believe the motive for the slayings of Scudder and Odom was robbery, Gilleland said.

"The gentlemen ... were devil worshipers," McConnell said. "We are a very small town, and we had known about that. That's just freedom of religion."

He said investigators found "at least two human skulls, hex signs and a large library (which indicated) devil worshiping, as well as bizarre sexual equipment" in the house.

Administration Supports FHA, More Home Loans

By ROBERT FURLOW
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, long critical of federal insurance for home loans, is changing its tune now that it looks as if such loans might help end the nation's recession.

Make room for more, President Reagan is asking Congress, less than a year after sending exactly the opposite message.

Federally backed loan programs have been popular for years. Buyers like them because they carry relatively low interest rates and often require only small down payments. Lenders like them because of the federal guarantee of repayment.

But Reagan officials have opposed wide use of them on philosophical grounds.

Private insurance firms already cover a big majority of home loans, but the administration says they should handle almost all the business.

Now, it seems a record surge of applications for loans insured by the Federal Housing Administration is making a real contribution toward bringing the housing industry back from several years of near-depression.

Falling interest rates, led by FHA, have encouraged buyers to buy and builders to build. And that could lead the entire economy to recovery from the long recession, some analysts and officials say.

Early this year, the administration tried to persuade Congress to limit the amount in FHA loans the government would insure to $35 billion in 1983. Congress voted a $39.8 billion ceiling instead. But the higher amount now appears inadequate in light of FHA applications that soared past an annual rate of 1 million last month.

No one wants to jeopardize recovery at this point — least of all the president.

So Reagan asked Congress on Friday to raise the ceiling to $45.9 billion for the year that began Oct. 1. Congress is expected to agree.

Housing and Urban Development Secretary Samuel R. Pierce Jr., whose department runs FHA, called Reagan's action "a clear signal to the economy that the administration is committed to strengthening the housing industry and increasing homeownership opportunities for Americans."

That was a far cry from Budget Director David Stockman's statement last year that FHA was among federal credit programs "that serve middle and upper income families and ... need to be curtailed."

Stockman told Congress the administration would "carefully review the need for FHA mortgage insurance."

Many people in the housing industry still believe some administration officials would like to do away with FHA, at least as a major program.

Pierce himself implied as much at a recent news conference.

He said he hoped the recent flood of FHA applications would put to rest the idea the program was not important. But he added, "There are still some critics out there, as we know, so we might have that battle again."

The critics are not the people who make the loans.

Mark J. Riedy, executive vice president of the Mortgage Bankers Association of America, conceded Friday that administration officials "don't talk publicly about phasing out FHA."

Riedy, whose group's members handle a majority of FHA loans, said he was pleased with the move to raise the limit. But he asked why there should be any limit at all.

"When you put restraints on the program, you run the risk of strangling the housing recovery which is concentrated in the FHA and Veterans Administration markets," he said.

The administration's budget documents for the current fiscal year said the proposed $35 billion limit "reflects projections of future housing activity" — projections now apparently outdated.

The recommended figure also reflected "the recognition that private mortgage insurers will be able to adequately serve a larger share of the housing market" — an idea now discarded.

Pierce's Friday statement, distributed by aides, said HUD officials have changed their estimate for total FHA applications this year to 800,000 from 625,000.

Recent months' increases have accompanied declines in interest rates for the economy as a whole, and for FHA-backed home loans in particular. The ceiling rate for FHA loans is currently 12 percent compared with rates of 13 percent to 14 percent for other home loans.

Government figures have shown home sales and construction rising quickly in the past few months. And those increases tend to spur sales of many other items, such as carpeting, furniture, appliances and landscaping.

That kind of spending can mean economic recovery — and the administration has noticed.

A Stolen Ornament Provides 'Lesson'

ESSEX, Conn. (AP) — A 6-year-old boy who stole an ornament from a Christmas display has learned that Santa Claus not only is generous, he's also willing to forgive errors in judgment.

During a recent visit to Santa's Land in Putney, Vt., Thad Gritzmacher saw an ornament that he wanted hanging on a Christmas tree. The ornament was a little red book telling the story of Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer.

The boy's mother, LaDonna Gritzmacher, noticed that when they got home to Essex, Thad had the ornament in his pocket.

Upset, she made her son return the ornament with a letter of apology to Santa.

But the ornament came back in the return mail. At first, Mrs. Gritzmacher was angry because she thought someone was trying to undermine the lesson she had taught her son.

But accompanying the ornament was a letter that said, in part: "As you get older, you will make a lot of decisions. When you took the book, you made the wrong decision. But it took lots of courage to make the right decision to send it back. I am enclosing the book as a gift for you. Keep it always, and when you see it on your tree each year, remember to always make the right decision."

The letter was signed: "Your friend, Santa."

"It brought tears to my eyes," it was such a beautiful message," Thad's mother said.

Twelve Die In Weekend Accidents

By The Associated Press
Twelve people died on North Carolina highways this weekend, including five killed in four head-on collisions, the state Highway Patrol reported today.

The deaths raised the traffic fatality toll to 1,256 for the year, compared to 1,442 deaths at the same time last year.

James Richard Baldwin, 40, and Billy James Kee, 68, both of Monroe, died late Saturday when Baldwin's car crossed the center line on N.C. 84 in Union County.

Also on Saturday, 82-year-old Ida Brauer Hecht of Norlina was killed when the car she was driving crossed the center line of U.S. 1 in Warren County and struck oncoming vehicle.

Early Sunday, Paul William Krier, 19, of Raleigh, died when he drove his car across the center line, hitting another car head-on. On Friday, Harvey Donald Karsevar, 44, of Raleigh, died when the car he was driving was struck head-on by another vehicle about 10:30 p.m. in Raleigh.

Michael Cody Johnson, 30, of Union Grove, was killed about 2 a.m. Sunday in Iredell County when the car he was driving ran off a rural road and struck some trees.

Ruth Mary Patro, 45, of Hillsborough, died when the car in which she was riding left an Orange County road Saturday night and overturned several times.

Tony Van Stroud, 17, of Kernersville, died Saturday afternoon when he was thrown from a car that overturned several times in Davidson County after missing a curve.

William Henry Smith, 56, of Magnolia, was killed when he drove his car off a road in Duplin County Saturday and was pinned under the vehicle.

Ernest Wilson Teeter, 56, of Charlotte, was struck and killed by a car as he directed traffic on Interstate 85 in Charlotte Friday night. Also dead was Joseph Lee Shumaker, 40, of Newell, the driver of the car that hit Teeter.

Charles Edward Sisk, 16, of Morganton, died Sunday when the car in which he was riding ran off a city street and struck a utility pole.

Sobriety Check Nabs But Two

BEL AIR, Md. (AP) — State police set up three "sobriety checkpoints" over the weekend in a crackdown on drunken driving and arrested two motorists out of about 1,500 checked, troopers say.

The roadblocks were set up Friday at three locations in Harford County, and the driver of every approaching car was examined for evidence of alcohol or drug abuse. The roadblocks were dismantled early Sunday.

State police say the program is aimed at deterring, not arresting, drunken drivers. The American Civil Liberties Union has threatened to sue the state, saying the checkpoints violate Fourth Amendment guarantees against unreasonable search.

Georgia-Based International Drug Ring Charged

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — U.S. Rep. Ronald "Bo" Ginn has denied any knowledge of an alleged scheme to attempt to bribe him as part of a huge drug operation.

The allegation of an attempted bribe is among 27 counts in an indictment returned by a federal grand jury last week.

The grand jury charged a Wilkes County man with masterminding an international drug smuggling ring that paid out large sums of cash in an effort to bribe law enforcement officers and obtain influence in state government.

Returned Tuesday and unsealed Saturday in U.S. District Court, the indictment charged 25 people in six states with being members of the ring, which the indictment said smuggled 43 tons of marijuana into Georgia during the past four years.

Larry Douglas "Red" Evans, 48, of Danburg, was identified in the indictment as the "organizer, supervisor and manager" of the drug smuggling ring, which federal authorities said brought drug-loaded planes to remote landing strips in eastern Georgia and western South Carolina.

The 27-count indictment also claims that between January 1981 and July 1982, Evans paid large sums of cash to bribe law enforcement officers and to guarantee his influence in state government if U.S. Rep. Ronald "Bo" Ginn, D-Millen, had been elected governor. Ginn, who was defeated by Gov.-elect Joe Frank Harris in the August Democratic gubernatorial primary, issued this statement through his administrative assistant when asked about the indictment:

"I have no knowledge of any effort by criminal elements to attempt to influence the gubernatorial election. I would of course condemn any such attempt. I take pride in the fact that a central focus of my own campaign was a specific commitment to declare war on the criminals involved with illegal drugs."

The indictment said Evans gave $10,000 intended for the Ginn campaign to Raymond G. Hammond, a former Georgia State Patrol sergeant whom the grand jury named as an unindicted co-conspirator.

Hammond, according to the indictment, was to deliver the $10,000 to James Murphy, a former U.S. marshal, who was to pass the money to Ginn's campaign as a secret contribution. The indictment said at least $5,000 of the money was given to Murphy by Hammond.

Ginn's gubernatorial campaign never received any of that money, Will Eddington, a member of Ginn's Washington staff, said Sunday. He said the campaign listed all its contributions on disclosure reports filed with the secretary of state's office.

The indictment also alleged that members of the drug smuggling ring gave a car to Willie Glaze, chief investigator for the Lincoln County Sheriff's Department, in exchange for information on law enforcement activities. The indictment said, however, that Glaze was acting with the knowledge of the FBI in his work with the drug ring.

Evans and 11 others named in the indictment appeared before a U.S. magistrate Saturday in Augusta. Bond for Evans was set at $4 million after FBI Agent Gerald L. Jones testified that Evans had threatened the life of Hammond, who acted as a government informant in the case.

In addition to Evans, others named in the indictment included:

—Keith Wayne Summers, 26, of Lincolnton, Ga. Jones testified Saturday that Summers coordinated distribution of drugs for the operation. U.S. Magistrate

John W. Dunsmore set bond at $4 million for Summers, whom he described as the "second lieutenant" of the organization.

—Bobby Rundolph Evans, 43, of Martinez, Ga. The half-brother of Larry Evans, Evans is a Georgia Department of Revenue agent who was described by Jones as the man responsible for finding new members for the drug ring. Bond was set at $50,000 for Evans, who was suspended from his state job Saturday.

—Boyd James Tallewt, 36, of Washington, Ga. Jones said organized crime figures bought as much as a ton of marijuana a week from Tallewt at various times during the past four years. His bond was set at $2 million.

—Paige Robert Prater, 42, of Lincolnton, Ga. Jones testified that Prater allowed his 800-acre farm in Lincoln County to be used for landing strips for drug-laden planes. His bond was set at $750,000.

—Paul D. Wyatt, 42, of Aiken, S.C. His bond was set at $175,000 during a special hearing Saturday night in his hospital room at University Hospital in Augusta, where he is being treated for a neurological disorder.

—Robert James Appling, 37, of Athens, Ga. Jones said Appling, already facing drug-smuggling charges in Florida, was involved with Evans' organization on at least four smuggling ventures. His bond was set at $250,000.

The others named in the indictment were John D. Cummings of Scottsdale, Ariz.; Clyde Alvin Williford, 43, of Salem, Ga.; Kenneth Eugene Summers, 27, of Danburg, the brother of Keith Wayne Summers;

Tommy Derald "Dick" Mills, 39, of Elberton, Ga.; David Herndon Dawkins, 31, of Lincoln County, Ga.; Walter Burdette, who is in the custody of state prison officials;

Clyde Alvin Williford Jr., 22, of Salem, Ga.; James Bernard Powell, 42, of Matthews, Ga.; Neil Graham Hansen, 45, described by authorities as a former CIA pilot who currently is a fugitive; Janos Papp, 43, of Melvindale, Mich.; Brockton Lyon Bailey, 51, of Oak Ridge, N.C.; Dorsey Talmadge Investor of Elberton, Ga.;

William Valrie Lae, 45, of Scottsdale, Ariz.; James W. Greenlee, 31, of Miami; James Addison, 46, of St. Cloud, Fla.; Michael John Herman of Fort Lauderdale, Fla.; Wilbur Evans, 42, of Abbeville, S.C.; and Ronnie Braswell, 34 of Atlanta.

Buyers Seek Quality In Their Christmas Gifts

By The Associated Press Despite high unemployment and tight budgets, Christmas shoppers in North Carolina appear willing to spend a little more to get high-quality goods, merchants say.

"People seem to be buying better, higher quality goods," said Archie McLemore, manager of Pain's Department Store in Asheville. "We sell a lot of off-price goods, but try to provide good value, which is what people seem to be looking for. We've done more advertising and promoting this year than in the past, and our business has been good."

The same value-conscious attitude was reported by toy stores and clothing retailers.

"We noticed an early trend of consumers being very cautious," said Terry Lee, district supervisor for K&K Toy Stores in southeastern North Carolina. "We're not getting as many phone calls for television-advertised toys this year."

"Parents seem to be saying 'We're going to buy what we can afford, and not just buy something because it's advertised,'" he added. "People seem to be looking for standards. The Barbie line is hot, and seems to get hotter every year. And anything we put a 'special' sticker on sells."

Ray Killian, senior vice president for Belks Stores, said shoppers are spending their Christmas money on items with obvious value.

"The shoppers don't seem to be looking for cheaper items so much as items with lasting value and good fashion," Killian said. "They are buying items that will last a couple of years. They are willing to spend money on identifiable value."

Killian said Belks Stores in urban areas seem to be doing better than those in rural areas, and many merchants agreed that small businesses were harder hit by the economy. "The smaller markets are struggling more," Killian said. "There are usually a limited number of employers in a small market, and any reduction of employment there has a pretty serious effect on the whole community. Larger markets are more resilient."

J. Bernard Stein, chairman of the board for Capitol Department Stores in Fayetteville, said his stores were feeling the impact of a lagging national economy.

"In our three stores, we're running behind last year," Stein said. "We're selling both luxury and practical items, but there is just not the traffic we had last year. Where there are less people, there are less sales. I think the overall economy and unemployment has a lot to do with it."

Liquor Industry's Protests Prevailed

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Police have agreed to tone down a hard-hitting billboard campaign associating drunken driving with murder after complaints by the liquor industry.

The ad shows a handgun aimed toward the viewer and under it, the words "Murder One." To its right is a bottle of liquor against a steering wheel with the message, "Murder Too." A headline reads, "Either way, you go to jail, L.A.P.D."

"The liquor industry representatives saw it and said, 'Oh no, don't do this to us,'" said police spokesman Cmdr. William Booth. "It hits a little too hard for their purpose."

The department had requested free space for the warning from Gannett Outdoor Co., Inc., but because "I haven't been able to figure out whether people are cutting back, or whether cartridges (electronic games) have hurt us," said Sally Williamson, who owns four Toy Circus stores in Charlotte, Shelby and Rock Hill, S.C. "We ran out of a lot of basic things we didn't expect to — GI Joe, Strawberry Shortcake dolls. Shoppers are being more frugal, that's for sure."

Mary Jones, marketing director for Crabtree Valley Mall in Raleigh, said frivolous gifts were falling behind practical purchases.

"We're seeing more families shopping together this year — a mother, father and three or four kids," she said. "When the shopping spree becomes a family outing, then you know they're shopping for necessities."

the billboard company didn't want to offend its liquor industry clients, the ad was withdrawn.

Gannett spokesman Fred Guido said the police department could still get donated space if the message is changed in time.

Duncan Cameron, spokesman for the Distilled Spirits Council in Washington D.C., said the initial design would not have accomplished its purpose.

"When you come on too heavy, people tend to screen out the message," Cameron said.

Producer Insures Better Show

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — For a show that deals in war, degradation and death, "M-A-S-H" always manages to promote life. Executive producer Burt Metcalfe, who made a great show even greater, makes sure of that.

He's been putting his sensitive signature on the show since taking charge in 1977, after producers Larry Gelbart and Gene Reynolds had left for other projects.

"I'm an unabashed sentimental, so my shows tend to be more poignant, with a special kind of compassion and humanity," Metcalfe said.

"M-A-S-H" has been described as anti-war, but it goes deeper than that.

"We're not really an anti-military show," said Jamie Farr, who plays Cpl. Max Klinger, the soldier who wore women's hats and dresses to try to earn a psychiatric discharge.

"We're anti-stupidity, anti-authority, particularly when it's senseless. The doctors are placed in a situation where they're in opposition to everything going on around them. They're there to save lives."

This is the last season of "M-A-S-H." Tonight is one of seven remaining original episodes, leading to the climactic two-hour movie Feb. 28, when the Korean War finally ends after 11 television seasons.

There were no doves at CBS clamoring to end the war; "M-A-S-H" is currently the season's third-rated program. But the network couldn't stop Alan Alda and Co. from defecting to other projects or convince Metcalfe there were enough significant stories to maintain the show's high quality.

The program's standards also worked against continuing "M-A-S-H." "We're very scrupulous in our history," Metcalfe said. "There were some wonderful stories we had to pass up because they happened after the war. We wanted to do a brainwashing show, but that didn't come up until 1954. The same thing with the Marilyn Monroe visit.

"Drugs weren't that big, then, either, except for guys getting hooked on morphine. There was no cocaine, marijuana or heroin."

Metcalfe nixed other story ideas because the era was wrong. "We were pitched shows about abortion, rape and breast cancer 100 times," he said. "But those are 1980s' causes of the week."

Metcalfe has been with "M-A-S-H" since the beginning, 1973, when he was associate producer. Reynolds was producer and Gelbart was executive story consultant. In 1976, Gelbart left because he thought the story well had run dry. Reynolds left the next year to start "Lou Grant."

Gelbart worked on Sid Caesar's "Show of Shows" in the 1950s and co-wrote the screenplay for the new Dustin Hoffman movie,

"Tootsie," and in the early days, "M-A-S-H" reflected his broad funny bone.

"It was no point trying to copy Larry," said Metcalfe. "We had to expand the characters and get into interpersonal relationships, some of which weren't connected with the war. You have to go with your best pitch."

During the Metcalfe reign, Maj. Margaret Houlihan (Loretta Swit) loosened up and became a person, the pompous Frank Burns (Larry Linville) left the show and Klinger got out of drag and became the company clerk.

"I was insecure. The dress was my meal ticket," Farr said. "But I did want to show I was an actor. I didn't argue against it."

Klinger's growth was one way "M-A-S-H" became a better show, thanks to Metcalfe. Except for reruns, television will soon be without "M-A-S-H," but, fortunately, it won't be without Metcalfe, who has a contract with 20th Century-Fox to produce TV movies.

"I admire the two-hour movie. It's what TV does best," said Metcalfe. "Basically, 'Ordinary People' and 'Kramer vs. Kramer' were TV-type movies — small, human-interest stories.

"I'm an admirer of Frank Capra, who did stories that had warmth and poignancy. I hope to do sentimental stories that express a certain optimism about America, where we can say, 'Gee, we're not so bad off after all.'"

Actress Fulfills Long Ambition

NEW YORK (AP) — Jessica Lange, the former model who debuted on screen opposite the big ape in the 1976 remake of "King Kong," says she's fulfilling a long ambition in her film portrayal of 1930s actress Frances Farmer.

Miss Lange says she was working as a barmaid in 1974 when she read the tragedy-scattered autobiography of Miss Farmer, the subject of the new movie "Frances."

"Somehow I knew I'd play her one day — and that was before I'd ever made a film," Miss Lange says in the Dec. 27 issue of People magazine.

Miss Lange, 33, said she was so tired after filming "Frances," she almost refused a role opposite Dustin Hoffman in another current movie, "Tootsie."

Ballerina Plans Staying Beside Mick Jagger

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ballerina Natalia Makarova will not dance for several months after being struck by a falling weight on stage, says Laura Longley, spokeswoman for the Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts.

Miss Makarova, 42, a native of the Soviet Union, was in satisfactory condition Sunday at George Washington Hospital with a broken right shoulder blade and a head cut.

LONDON (AP) — Rolling Stone leader Mick Jagger flew to Barbados with model Jerry Hall, both insisting that press speculation about a rupture in their romance was nonsense.

"That was nothing — just a press story," Miss Hall said Sunday of the stories that she had left the rock singer in favor of a casino magnate. Jagger and Miss Hall were reunited in Paris last month.

She was born in Memphis to Cash and his first wife of 13 years, Vivian. "He wasn't around much," Miss Cash said.

She won acclaim for the young entertainer. Her sound is easily recognizable, just like her father's deep throaty voice.

Miss Cash has embarked on the most important tour of her career, backed by the Cherry Bombs, one of the hottest group of studio musicians ever to hit the road. They make so much money in studio sessions — many are triple-scale — that they rarely tour. "They're my friends," she explained.

Miss Cash, married to singer Rodney Crowell, said she has learned many things about the music industry and life in general from her famous dad.

"I don't like going to the post office looking like crap and having someone come up and recognize me," she said. "It's not one of my favorite things. It makes me feel like I've got something on the back of my skirt all the time."

Miss Cash is among the new breed of young country singers. With its newfound popularity, country music has taken a nose-dive from its once proud roots to churn out unexciting, bland, middle-of-the-road songs that appeal to a large audience.

Some songs are hard to tell apart. Miss Cash and a select few like Ricky Skaggs are bucking the trend and coming to the rescue of country by expanding its horizons.

"Country's becoming a bigger umbrella," she said. "It can have a lot of people under it, a lot of different styles. Ricky and I are totally different, but we're expanding the horizons in different ways. He's the new traditionalism. I don't know what the hell I am — some kind of fusion."

won acclaim for the young entertainer. Her sound is easily recognizable, just like her father's deep throaty voice.

Miss Cash has embarked on the most important tour of her career, backed by the Cherry Bombs, one of the hottest group of studio musicians ever to hit the road. They make so much money in studio sessions — many are triple-scale — that they rarely tour. "They're my friends," she explained.

T-shirt, black pants and sneakers.

The daughter of Johnny Cash, country music's "Man in Black," Rosanne, 27, has spent three years establishing her own identity. It wasn't easy. For a while, she had to defend her chosen profession.

"Doctors' children become doctors," she said. "It shouldn't be all that strange that Johnny Cash's child likes to sing."

Now she has emerged from her father's black coattails as a star in her own right — and she shows a decided preference for black that accentuates her dark complexion, black curly hair and deep-set brown eyes.

Soon, they may be calling her country music's "Lady in Black."

"Black is very slimming," she said while her band tuned up in a Nashville studio. "I look better in black."

Since going her own way, Rosanne has had three No. 1 songs, "Seven Year Ache," "Blue Moon With a Heartache" and "My Baby Thinks He's a Train." She wrote two of the songs herself.

Her new album, "Somewhere in the Stars," has proved to the critics that she is not just a copycat but a true talent.

"I don't like going to the post office looking like crap and having someone come up and recognize me," she said. "It's not one of my favorite things. It makes me feel like I've got something on the back of my skirt all the time."

Miss Cash is among the new breed of young country singers. With its newfound popularity, country music has taken a nose-dive from its once proud roots to churn out unexciting, bland, middle-of-the-road songs that appeal to a large audience.

Some songs are hard to tell apart. Miss Cash and a select few like Ricky Skaggs are bucking the trend and coming to the rescue of country by expanding its horizons.

"Country's becoming a bigger umbrella," she said. "It can have a lot of people under it, a lot of different styles. Ricky and I are totally different, but we're expanding the horizons in different ways. He's the new traditionalism. I don't know what the hell I am — some kind of fusion."

Both her songs and her deep, wet, sassy voice have

Answer to Saturday's puzzle. 50 Vintage car

CRYPTOQUIP 12-20

XJKUQ IEKCOFI OHTXFE NZIP T MZQ FQJ CKVI MHJN PZV JNU PJEU.

Saturday's Cryptoquip — THE BANK ROBBER BREAKS IN ANOTHER ASSISTANT.
Today's Cryptoquip clue: J equals O.
The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AKJ ♠AJ987 ♠6 ♣K1092
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 1 ♠ Pass
What do you bid now?
A.—There is a temptation among many bridge players to support partner immediately, because of the quality of their cards in his suit. Resist it! Your hand is so strong for a single raise and inadequate for a jump, which normally requires four trumps. The solution is a temporizing bid of two clubs—naturally, you intend supporting spades at your next turn, if you have one.
Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠QJ108763 ♠Q92 ♠J76
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South
1 ♠ Dble ?
What action do you take?
A.—You have a hand with excellent offensive potential but with little or no defense. This is the perfect opportunity to attempt to stop the opponents from getting together. Jump to three spades—exactly the same bid you would have made as an opening bid but, in view of East's interference, it guarantees a reasonable suit.
Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J5 ♠95 ♠AQ10952 ♠973
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
Pass 1 NT Dble ?
What action do you take?
A.—If you timidly removed two diamonds, you simply don't grasp the playing potential of your hand. However, a redouble would be too optimistic—the opponents will surely run and partner will expect you to hold more in defensive values than you do. The choice lies between a pass, in the hope that you can pick up a doubled overtrick or two, and a jump to three diamonds to advise partner of your long, strong suit—that might enable him to bid three no trump and so gets our vote.
Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A ♠AK875 ♠954 ♠10952
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South
1 ♠ 1 ♠ Pass 4 ♠ Pass

Real Real Estate Deals

With modern inflated real estate prices, it's hard to believe that 179 years ago today President Thomas Jefferson picked up the entire Louisiana Territory from France for a mere $15 million — that's about $20 a square mile. In the old days you could still find a good real estate investment. In 1867, Secretary of State William Seward closed a big deal and bought Alaska and all its oil from the Russians for only $7.2 million. And, of course, the Dutch settlers bought Manhattan from the Indians for $24. That investment has paid off quite well. Today you can rent a small, unpretentious place on Central Park West for about $3500 a month — no beads or trinkets accepted.

DO YOU KNOW — What French leader sold the Louisiana Territory to the U.S.?
